Milsington (mil-sing-tin, mul-sin-toon) n. farm along the Borthwick valley, on the right before Deanburnhaugh. It was formerly part of Hassendean Parish before becoming part of the new Parish of Roberton in 1689/90. At that time, along with Girnwood, it was valued at about £1300. The lands belonged to John de Langlands in the 14th century; his widow Marion Comyn had a charter for these lands, along with the mill and the lands of Outerside in 1363. The Langlands exchanged the lands for Heap with Sir Walter Scott in 1451 (in a charter dated at Wilton Kirk). In this charter they are described as lying between the lands of Borthwick on the east, Chisholme on the south, 'Dualyrig' and Hoscote on the west and Bellendean on the north. Walter was to pay annually a red rose or six pennies Scots at the feast of St. John the Baptist. In 1453 there was a confirming charter of 'excambion' of James of Langlands 'frank-tenement of the town of Milsaintoun' for Sir Walter Scott's frank-tenement of Wester Hepe. The sasine was signed at the 'chief messuage' of Milsington on the last day of December in 1453. In 1492 the lands were described as being then waste, but normally valued at 10 merks (and still worth £10 Scots in 1553/4). John Cockburn was recorded there in 1502. There were 15 'communicants' recorded there in 1650, namely James Purdom, Margaret Nichol, Robert Purdom, Helen Nichol, Thomas Brown, Bessie Inglis, Walter Scott, Adam Robson, Margaret Greenshields, Helen Rae, John Rae, Patrick Thomson, Thomas Robson, William Robson and Margaret Turnbull. From about 1670 the Milsington Scotts resided there, descended from Thomas, second son of Walter 'the Hawke' who accompanied the 'Brave Buccleuch' on the rescue of Kinmont Willie. Another branch of Scotts took over the farm in 1831 and that Milsington line was continued in the Scotts of Girnwood and of Newton. It was listed among properties of the Duke of Buccleuch in 1678. The farm was in Wilton Parish until Roberton was formed in 1689/90. William Scott paid the Hearth Tax for 3 hearths in 1694, with John Goodfellow as shepherd at that time. It was surveyed in 1718 along with other Buccleuch properties, when it covered 1259 acres and was bounded by Borthwickbrae, the Borthwick Water, Hoscote, Henwoodie common and Bellendean. James Leithead was recorded there in 1717–25, John Dickson in 1720, John Wight in 1725, James Elliot in 1756, Andrew Goodfellow in 1764 and William Scott in 1797. In the 1788 county valuation the lands here, along with Girnwood, were valued at £1305 13s 4d. William Miller was a ploughman there in 1812. From 1831 Milsington was tenanted by Charles Scott, cousin of Sir Walter the writer. In 1841 there were about 20 people living around the farm estate, as well as those in the principal farmhouse. The main road through the Borthwick used to pass directly in front of the farmhouse. A side road leaves from near here to join the Teviot valley at Branxholme Bridgend. A massive Roman bronze leg of a man on horseback was found there in 1820, possibly part of the loot from some southern town, and now in the Scottish National Museum; collected with it was a brass base (with an inscribed 'L') of what may have been a statue of Victory, perhaps also found at Milsington. There is a local tradition of buried treasure at Pot Syke, which may be where these items were found (first recorded as 'Milsallistona' in 1363, it was 'Mylsintoun' in 1451, 'Milsaintoun' in 1453, 'Mylsintoune' in 1492, 'melsintoun' in 1502, 'Milsyntoun' in 1553/4, 'Mylnesingtoun' in 1574 and 1640, 'Milsingtowne' in 1652, 'Melsington' in 1684, 'Milsingtoune' in 1718, 'Milsingtown' in 1764 and 1771 and 'Milsintoun' in 1717; there are many other spelling variants, including 'Milsingtoune', etc.; it is 'Milsingtowne' on a 1650 parish map, 'Milsongtoun' on Gordon's c.1650 map, but incorrectly too close to Hawick, while Blaeu's 1654 map shows it as 'N. Milsintoun' and 'O. Milsintoun', Jenner & Hollar's c.1644 map and Visscher's 1689 map of Scotland have it as 'Milsintoun' and Adair's c.1688 manuscript appears to show 'Wilsingtoun'; the name probably derives from 'Maelsuithan's farm', where 'Mæaelsuithan' or 'Myslan' is a personal name introduced by the Norwegians from Ireland).

Milsingtonhaugh (mil-sin-toon-hawch) n. former farmstead near Milsington. It is recorded in 1790 as 'Milsington Haug', when John Anderson paid the cart tax there and in 1797, when Robert Oliver was farmer there. Walter Scott was living there in at least 1793–95. John Goodfellow was there in 1812.

Milsington Hill (mil-sing-tin-hil, mul-sin-toon-hil) n. hill just to the west of Milsington farm in the Borthwick valley. It has two peaks, both reaching to 263 m. The western one contains the remains of an earthwork, about 85 m across; it consists of a bank and ditch, best preserved at the south corner (it is 'Milsanton-hill' in Scott of Satchells' history).

Milsington Moss (mil-sin-tin-mos) n. name for a boggy area near Milsington. The horn of an aurochs (Bos primigenius) found here was donated to the Museum in 1859 by M¡rs. Scott of Slitrig Crescent.

Milsingtonshankfit (mil-sin-tin-shawngk-fi') n. former cottage in the Borthwick valley, situated at the beginning of the road to Milsington farmhouse (it is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Milsingtonshiel (mil-sin-toon-sheel) n. former farmstead near Milsington. It may be the same place sometimes called 'Whaupshaw'. James Hinton was there in at least 1716–22, James Scott in 1717–23, Walter Henderson in 1726, Walter Scott in 1741 and Thomas Rae in 1762–71. Farm worker John Pringle and family were there in 1841 (it is 'Milsingtonnsheils' in 1716, 'Milsintounsheils' in 1721, 'Milsingtown Shiel' in 1741 and 'Milsingtownshiel' in 1771).

Milestane Path (mīl-, mil-stān-pawth) n. hill between Ashybank and Honeyburn on the A698, and also the name for a field and wood there. This was presumably once part of the original route between Hawick and Denholm, before the lower route was built for coaches. The oak wood was partly removed when the course of the main road was changed in the late 20th century, but was replanted.

Milton (mil-tin) n. village in Dumfries & Galloway (actually one of several with this name) off the A74 south of Moffat, built on the site of a large Roman fort established around the year 80. There is a possible military road from there to the fort near Aikwood Tower.

Minerva (mi-ner-vu) n. newspaper column of the 1980s, pen-name of Betty Boyd, collected in 'The way we were, skectches of a Hawick childhood'.

mines (mīnz) pron. mine – 'thaes mines, no yours' (also sometimes written 'meins' or 'mein's').

ming (ming) v., n. smell, stink (also meng; this seems to be a relatively recent Scots word).

ming (ming) v., poet. to mingle, mix up – '... an' ming my drynk wi' greetin' ' [HSR] (see also mingit).

mingin (ming-in) adj. stinking, having a bad smell – 'they socks o yours er mingin'.

mingit (ming-ee', -i') pp., poet. mingled, mixed up – 'But wer minget amang the heæthin, an' leærnet thair warks' [HSR], 'They gae him vinigar til drink, mynget wi' ga' ... ' [HSR].

ministration (mi-ni-strā-shin) n., arch. administration, execution of duties, management – '... and for callin ghe residing heritors, the minister and elders to accompt for their ministration in case they make use or uplift anie of the mortified money' [PR1714].

minnie (mi-nee) n., poet. affectionate term for a mother – 'There's naething left in the fair Dodhead, But a greeting wife and bairnies three, And sax poor ca's stand in the sta', A' routing loud for their minnie' [T], '... To struggle through the leafy screen, My minnie's flower-pots raise between Them an' the chair, where now I sit' [JoHa], '... But then the breed, by dad or minnie, How of'en crost – gude kens! – I dinna!' [JoHa], 'O that thou wer als my brither that suuket the breists o' my minnie!' [HSR], v., arch. to mother – '... a little ewe lamb, which had lost its mother and was being minnied by the shepherd' [WNK].

mint (mint) pp., poet. set out, aimed, ventured – 'When guarded by this fourfold fence, Auld Nick can never fang us; Nor Bonapart' e'er drive us hence, Nor villains mint to wrang us' [JR], 'Butte Lucky Scrae's half worried steed, He never mint the road, Till a reid hette pyke the master gatte, And gave his loone a prodde' [JTe], 'Was there nought ye could lift? your mind it aye mint, For your heart and your saul were on filching' [JTe].

Minti (min'-i, min-ti) n. Minto, a village, former estate and parish about 6 miles north-east of Hawick and 1½ miles north of Denholm. The barony was split between Walter 'de Burdun' (or Boredon) and Philip 'de la Ley' in about 1296, but probably these families forfeited their Scottish lands in the early 1300s for being loyal to the English King. Robert Barbour held lands there in the early 14th century. William Gledstains of Minto was recorded in the 1340s. In 1383 it was included in a lists of lands from which rentals were paid to the Ward of Roxburgh Castle; and English document of about that time includes 'two parts of the barony of Myntehowe and advowson of the church, which were John Turnebole's'. The village was burned in a raid about 1490. It was burned again by the Earl of Hertford's men in 1545, including 'Mynto Crag, Mynto town, Mynto place, Weast Mynto, the Crag End'. Some of the old village can still be made out, but the present one was laid out by William Playfair for the 2nd Earl of Minto in the early 19th century. The move was arranged so that the village could not be directly seen from Minto House. It contains the William Playfair 1830/1 gothic-style church, renovated in 1934, as well as the Thomas Clapperton War Memorial. Nearby is the demolished Minto House, with grounds containing the remains of an old Norman Church with an ancient burial ground, as well as an 18-hole golf course. The estate was owned by the Turnbulls from at least 1329, although the barony was granted to the Stewarts of Jedworth in 1390, and then disputed in the next century. James Langlands appears to have held half the rights to the markets there in 1476. In 1501 William Turnbull had a sasine for ⅔ of the lands, with Alexander Stewart having a sasine for the other ⅓. The half baronies were held by the Turnbulls and Stewarts until the early 17th century. John Turnbull of Minto was a significant leader of the Turnbulls in the late 16th century. In 1643 the lands owned by Turnbull of Minto were valued at £2006 13s 4d and consisted of 'Minto, town, mains, mill, kaims, with teinds and pertinents'; there was also £102 of land owned by Turnbull of Tofts and the lands of Craigend and Deanfoot, owned by Gilbert Eliott and valued at £660. In 1678 the estate of the Laird of Minto was valued at £2008 13s 4d. Craigend and Deanfoot were sold to Gilbert Elliot of Craigend in about 1640 and later combined with part of Minto, which continued to pass to Eliotts until sold by Gilbert Eliott in 1687. The rest of the lands passed to the Scotts of Harwood in 1673, then Walter Riddell from Edinburgh in 1676, briefly Thomas Rutherford and eventually the Scotts of Harden in 1691, with Gideon Scott of Highchester having a confirming charter for the Barony in 1695. At this time the village became a Burgh of Barony, and the existing Common is also mentioned. Markets were to be held on Wednesdays and fairs on 14th June and 14th November. The lands were sold to the Elliots in 1703. In 1707 the whole Barony was valued at £2768 13s 4d. A 'Plan of Part of the Policy of Minto' was drawn up in 1766, showing the layout of the gardens and naming several enclosures. A 'Plan of the Barony of Minto' shows the whole estate in 1780. In the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls the residents listed were Robert Brown, John Dickson, William Turnbull (smith), James Oliver and (another) William Turnbull. In 1811 the 'Barony (being the whole of the old Parish) of Minto' was valued at about £2800; the full Parish at that time was valued at £5163. The W.R.I. was founded in 1923 by Lady Minto and 47 local ladies. An ancient bronze axe was found nearby about 1888 and is now in the National Museum of Scotland. A spindle whorl from here is in Hawick Museum. Note that there are now several Mintos elsewhere in the world, all ultimately deriving from this small area (but many via the Earls of Minto). The village also gave rise to a surname, with the first recorded example being 'Willelmo filio Henrici de Mimtow' in 1302 – 'In lines of crystal shine the wandering rills Down the green slopes of Minto's sun-bright hills' [JL] (the name probably derives from the Old Welsh for a hill, plus 'how' for a hollow, or Old English 'hoh', also meaning hill; it is recorded from very early times, with the 'd' changing to a 't' by 1150 when it is 'Munetov' and 1166 when it is 'Munethov', it is thereafter 'Minthov', etc., with the middle 'h' disappearing by the end of the 14th century; it was formerly often written 'Mynto'; it is transcribed 'Minuth' in about 1230 and 'meinichoch' in the mid-13th century, is 'Mynetowe' in 1296, 'Mimtow' and 'Mymtow' in 1302, 'Myintow' in 1326, 'Myntowe' in 1335/6, 'Mintowe' in 1347, 'Myntow' in 1359, 'Myntehowe' in 1380, 'Mentou' and 'Mentow' in 1382, 'Myntou' and 'Myntow' in 1390, 'Mintow' in c.1400, 'Myntow' in 1461, 'Myntto' in 1491/2, 'mynto' in 1493, 'Myneto' in 1501 and 'Mynto' in 1508, 1511, 1516, 1528, 1535, 1548, 1553/4 and 1576; 'Minto Craig', 'Minto To[un]', Minto Tour', 'Minto K:' and 'M. Keams' are sshown on Pont's c.1590 manuscript map, while 'Minto tour', 'Minto Kirk' and 'Craig' are shown on Gordon's c.1650 map and 'Mintotour', 'Mintocraig' and 'Minto K.' are marked on Blaeu's 1654 map).

Minti (min'-i, min-ti) n. (Minto) Andrew 'Dand' (16th C.) listed as one of the tenants of Gavin Elliot in Skelfhill and neighbouring farms in a bond of security signed in Hawick in 1569. His name is recorded as 'Dande Mynto'. He may have been an ancestor of later local Mintos. Andrew (17th/18th C.) merchant in Selkirk. In 1720 he was charged with assault and also with throwing stones at a dog. In 1723 he was recorded in 2 legal cases involving debt and another for an assault. He may be the son of Walter who was charged with assault, threatening to kill someone and breach of the peace (along with his father) in Selkirk in 1719. Andrew (b.1734) 2nd son of George and Agnes Forrest. He was a resident of Southdean Parish, perhaps a mason like his father and brother Archibald. He firstly married Janet Oliver in 1758 and secondly married (in an irregular marriage of some sort) Betty 'Boal' (probably Bowie) in 1776. His children included: George (b.1759); John (b.1779); Nelly (b.1781); Nanny (b.1783); Andrew (b.1785); William (b.1788); Betty (b.1790); and Archibald (b.1794), who was baptised in Hobkirk. All except the last were baptised in Southdean Parish. Andrew (b.1785) born in Southdean Parish, son of Andrew and Betty 'Boal'. He was a farmer at Greenhouse in Lilliesleaf Parish. In 1861 he was 'Fundholder & Retired Farmer', living in Lilliesleaf village. In 1817 he married Janet Dalgleish, and she died in 1852. Their children included: Alexander (b.1818); Andrew (b.1820), born in Hawick, who was a cattle dealer; Elizabeth (b.c.1823); and John (b.c.1826). Andrew (1817–1903) son of William, he was born in Hobkirk Parish. He worked for a while as a servant at Weens. In 1861 he was a ploughman, living at Cleughhead Cottages. He was part of the original congregation of Wolfelee Free Kirk in 1849. His wife was Catherine and their children included Janet, Jean, Ann and Margaret. One of his daughters married Mr. Kennedy of the Tower Hotel in Hawick. Archibald (b.1732) son of George and Agnes Forrest, he was baptised in Minto Parish and was a mason in Abbotrule. In 1766 he married Margaret (or Mary) Turnbull. Their children included: Margaret (b.1767); Agnes (b.1769); Nelly (b.1774); George (1776–1860); and Robert (b.1781). In 1767 he was living at Midguard and in 1774 was at Abbotrule. Rev. Archibald Herbert (b.1905) born at Lilliesleaf United Free Manse, where his father George was minister. He was educated in Clydebank and at Glasgow University, where he graduated M.A. in 1925. He then attended Glasgow United Free College and Hartford Theological Seminary in the U.S.A. He was student assistant at Cambuslang Trinity 1926–27 and Glasgow Renfield Street 1927–28, was licensed in 1928, became minister-in-charge at Franklin Community Church in Boise, Idaho in 1929 and was ordained as minister at Glasgow Greyfriars in 1931. He moved to Dalry St. Margaret's in 1934 and then Queens's Park High in 1947. In 1936 he married Grace Marion Slimmon and they had children George Sutherland, Keneth Maclean and Elizabeth Rosemary. David (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1527 as owner of a tenement in Selkirk. This was near the tenement of Thomas, who was surely related. In 1535 he purchased a tenement from William Ker; Thomas was one of the witnesses and probably a relative. He may be the David who resigned a tenement in 1541 to his younger son John and another tenement in favour of his 2nd son James in 1545. He may be the David 'elder' who was involved in a transaction with David, smith, in 1541. He is probably the deceased David whose son John inherited his property in Selkirk in 1542/3. David (15th/16th C.) smith recorded in Selkirk in 1541. He was son and heir of the deceased James. David (17th C.) resident at Doecleuch according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. David (17th/18th C.) carrier in Hawick. He is probably the 'Dauied Mintoe' recorded in the Hawick Town Book of 1731; he was paid 'for 3 lod of claye for the well, 5s. 6d. Scots'. He was recorded as a carrier when he witnessed baptisms for Walter Scott in Crumhaugh in 1708, for wright John Pringle in 1709, for wright John Pringle in 1716, and for 'Tenent in Hawick' David Wilson in 1721. He married Janet Glendinning and their children included: Margaret (b.1691), who probably married William Riddell in 1714; John (b.1700); Walter (b.1701); Beatrix (b.1703); David (b.1706); Robert (b.1708); and David (again, b.1713). The witnesses in 1700 were Bailie Walter Graham and weaver James Wight, in 1703 were gardener James Falsyde and merchant Thomas Waugh, in 1706 were 'vintner' Francis Elliot and weaver Robert Wight, and in 1713 were Bailie (of the Regality) Walter Elliot and ex-Bailie Robert Ruescastle. David (17th/18th C.) recorded in a bond in Selkirk in 1721 with Walter. He is also recorded in Selkirk in 1726, when he was paid for building bridges, renovating the mill dam and other contruction work. In 1727 he was paid for working on the school in Selkirk, in 1730 for further wright work, in 1745 for mason work, in 1749 for work on bridges, in 1752 for work on the school and well, in 1753 for work on the Town House and for further work in 1761. David (18th C.) responsible for dealing with (i.e. moving on) crippled beggars for the Hawick Kirk Session in the early-to-mid 1700s. He could be the David, married to Janet Glendinning, whose son Walter was born in 1701. David (18th C.) tenant in Fairnilee Bridgend. In 1763 he represented some residents of Midlem in a case in Selkirk. Perhaps the same David is recorded in a receipt in Selkirk in 1758. David (18th/19th C.) dyker recorded in a document in Selkirk in 1814. William is also mentioned and so presumably related. Francis (17th/18th C.) thatcher in Selkirk, recorded in 1708. Perhaps the same Francis was a wright recorded in Selkirk (along with John) in 1727 and recorded in a receipt in 1732. Francis (18th C.) wright in Selkirk. He was paid in 1762 for supplying timber for the Corn Mill in Selkirk and had a complaint against him in 1774. Gavin (b.1841) born in Wilton Parish, son of William and Rebecca Pow. He was a blacksmith in Ashkirk, later moving to the Carlisle area. In 1861 he was at Blacklee, Hobkirk, working with blacksmith William Pow. In 1866 he married Elizabeth Telfer in Ashkirk Parish. Their children included Margaret (b.1867), William (b.1869), James Simpson (b.1872), Andrew (b.1874), Rebecca (b.c.1880), Elizabeth (b.c.1885) and Charlotte (b.c.1885). George (17th C.) listed on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls for Hassendean Parish. He paid tax for a kiln, as well as a hearth, suggesting he was a tradesman of some sort. Although unclear, he may have been at Burnfoot in Wilton. He could be the George who married Isobel Lorraine in Ashkirk in 1688, and who had a son Thomas (b.1689) baptised in Ashkirk; the witnesses to the baptism were William Minto and Andrew Fletcher. It seems likely he was an ancestor of the George recorded in 1731. George (18th C.) mason in Hassendean, probably a descendant of the earlier George who lived in Hassendean. He was a direct ancestor of the later minister at Lilliesleaf of the same name and also of more than half of the Mintos living in Roxburghshire in the 19th century. In Minto Parish in 1731 he married Agnes (b.1712), daughter of Archibald Forrest of Huntlaw. Their children included: Archibald (b.1732), who was baptised in Minto Parish and was also a mason; Andrew (b.1734), baptised in Ancrum Parish; John (b.1737), who married Margaret Scott in 1764 and may have moved away from the Borders; and twins George and William (b.1740), who may have died in infancy. Their 4 younger children were baptised in Ancrum Parish. George (18th C.) tenant farmer at Langside. In 1752 he married Barbara, daughter of Mark Chisholme and Barbara Bennet. He later lived at Ruletownhead, which had been owned by his in-laws. His children, baptised in Southdean Parish, included: Markie (b.1755), named after her grandfather, who married William Bell of Menslaws; and William (b.1756), who was an officer in the Royal Marines. George (18th C.) married Isabel Sharp in Bedrule Parish in 1782. He is probably different from the George who had children in Southdean Parish (although this is unclear). William (b.1794) and Margaret (b.1796), baptised in Bedrule Parish, were probably his children. George (b.1759) son of Andrew and Janet Oliver. He is probably the George who got married in Southdean Parish in 1787 (perhaps to Mary Moscrop). Probably the same George had the following children baptised in Southdean Parish: Betty (b.1788); Janet (b.1790); and Isabella (b.1792). He may also be the George whose children William (b.1794) and Margaret (b.1796) were baptised in Bedrule Parish. George (1776–1860) son of mason Archibald. He is said to have farmed Abbotrule Glebe. He may be the George, part of whose farm in Southdean Parish was owned by Charles Kerr of Abbotrule, according to the Land Tax Rolls of 1811. He was great-grandfather of Rev. George of Lilliesleaf. In 1803 he married Helen Murray and their children included: Margaret (b.1803); Archibald (b.1806); Agnes (b.1807); James (b.1811); Ellison (b.c.1811); Robert (b.c.1818); Thomas (b.c.1820); and George (b.c.1827). Archibald (b.1806), baptised in Southdean Parish, was probably his son. George (b.c.1780) resident of Limekilnedge according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Hobkirk Parish. He could be the George whose children, baptised in Hobkirk, included Margaret (b.1803), Archibald (b.1805), Agnes (b.1807) and James (b.1811). George (19th C.) resident of Southdean Parish. He married Margaret Armstrong and their children included William (b.1853). Rev. George (1864–1947) from Greenock, he was ordained as minister of Lilliesleaf United Free Kirk in 1897 and remained until 1908. He then moved to Clydebank Bank Street and in 1923 became Chaplain to Glasgow Ruchill and Knightswood Hospitals, from which he resigned in 1944. He came from a long line of local Mintos, going back at least to his great-great-great grandfather George, who was a mason in Hassendean. 2 months after arriving in Lilliesleaf he married Eliza, daughter of Ewen Sutherland from Dunoon. Their children were: Marjorie (b.1898); George Walker (b.1899); Ewen Sutherland (b.1902); Archibald Herbert (b.1905), minister at Glasgow, Queen's Park High; Robert Macfee (b.1908); and Kenneth Ross (b.1910). Helen (b.1793) dealer in small wares on Orrock Place. She was recorded there in 1841 and 1851, when she was a 'Calanderer' (i.e. presser of fabrics). Her daughter Betsy Grieve assisted her. By 1861 she was 'Keeper of a Mangle' on Factory Close. Henry (13th/14th C.) recorded as 'Henrici de Mimtow' in 1302. His son William was then a witness to the granting of the half-barony of Minto to Philip de la Ley by Walter Boredon. He may be the earliest known person with the Minto designation. Henry (15th C.) had a sasine for a half merk land in Selkirk in 1454. James (16th C.) recorded as witness to transactions in Selkirk in 1535 and 1539. Probably the same James was son to the deceased Thomas when he purchased 1 4 of Ladylands in Selkirk in 1536. James (16th C.) 2nd son of David. In 1543 C.) baker in Selkirk, recorded in 1620. James (17th C.) resident of Minto Parish who appears in the Hearth Tax records of 1694. Perhaps the same James witnessed a baptism in Ashkirk Parish in 1691 for Andrew Lockie. James (18th/19th C.) servant in Chesterhill in Hobkirk Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book in 1799. John (15th C.) resident of Minto. In 1493 Walter and Adam Turnbull in Hornshole were able to 'compone' for several crimes, including the theft of 16 sheep from him. He was probably related to William who was also 'in mynto' at the same time. John (d.bef. 1502) recorded at the 1502 Justice-aire in Jedburgh. Richard Davidson in Primside was convicted of communing with his son John, who was 'at the horn' for his murder. His name is recorded as 'Johannis Mynto'; it is not stated where he was from, but he could be the same as the resident of Minto. John (16th C.) recorded as 'John Mynto, younger' when he witnessed a transaction in Selkirk in 1543. He may be the same as John 'elder' who is recorded in Selkirk in 1579, 1579/80 and 1581. He is probably the Burgess John who made a financial bond in Selkirk in 1580. John 'younger' is also recorded in 1579, 1580 and 1581, and probably his son, while Janet may have been his daughter. John (17th C.) recorded in 1672 when his 'arable lands and crofts' in Selkirk are mentioned. John (17th C.) resident at Easter Essenside on the Hearth Tax roll in 1694. He witnessed a baptism in 1690 for William Scott and others in 1694 for James Scott and Janet Scott, for William Scott and Margaret Scott and for Andrew Raither. He is probably the John, married to Isobel Sword, whose daughter Margaret was baptised in Ashkirk in 1687. John (17th/18th C.) wright recorded in Selkirk in 1727, along with Francis. They were probably both related to Thomas. Probably the same John was recorded in a receipt in 1731 and was paid for repair work in Selkirk in about 1745 and for making up tables of weights in 1762 and 1767. He signed an admission to the Hammermen's Incorporation in 1758. John (18th C.) recorded as master of the English School in Selkirk in at least 1752–72. Perhaps his widow may have been the 'Bell Minto' who wrote to the Burgh of Selkirk in 1784. John (b.c.1780) mason at Kilnknowe in Hobkirk Parish according to the ballot for the Militia in 1801. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. In 1822 he married Helen Richardson, who was from Hawick. John (18th/19th C.) mason in Hawick. The death of his infant son is recorded in 1823. John (b.c.1816) farmworker in Castleton. In 1841 he was an agricultural labourer at about 29 South Hermitage Street, but by 1851 was shepherd at Broadlie Burnfoot. He married Elizabeth (or 'Betty') Little and their children included Jean (b.c.1835), Elspeth ('Eppy', b.c.1837), William (b.c.1839), Margaret (b.c.1843) and Helen (b.c.1851). John Dalgleish (1826–1908) son of Andrew and Jane (or Janet) Dalgleish. In the 1850s he was one of 2 executors (along with Dr. Adam Elliot of Goldielands) for arranging the 'Coutard Fund', bequeathed by John and William Dalgleish to help the poor of Hobkirk Parish. He may be the John who married Mary Armstrong and had a son Robert Armstrong baptised in Hobkirk in 1852. Mrs. ?? (19th C.) of the East End Toll Bar, an early member of Allars Kirk. Robert (17th C.) resident of Minto Craigend who appears in the Hearth Tax records of 1694. Robert (18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. In 1738 he witnessed a baptism for fellow shoemaker William Riddell. Robert 'My Lord Minto' (d.1776) Hawick resident whose death is recorded with an unusual nickname. He could be the Robert who married Betty (or Agnes) Paterson and had children Janet (b.1736) and Margaret (b.1739). Altneratively he could be the Robert who married Margaret Scott in 1742 and whose children included Agnes (b.1743). Robert (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Baldy and their daughter Martha was baptised in 1743. Robert (b.1781) baptised in Southdean Parish, younger son of Archibald and Margaret Turnbull. He married Isabella Bicket and they had 3 children baptised in Bowden Parish: Janet (b.1805); Archibald (b.1806); and William Bicket (b.1812). He is probably the labourer at 'Ruleburn' on the 1801 Militia ballot in Southdean Parish. Robert (19th C.) son of the farmer of Abbotrule Glebe. He became a ship's steward, voyaging across the Atlantic, but he returned to help on the farm. He married Mary Telfer (daughter of the tenant of Roundabouts), and they lived at Kelso, Whitlee Toll, Dykeraw and Wolfelee Glen. He was a handyman on Wolfelee estate before being appointed gamekeeper and moving into the new lodge there (where he was living in 1861). After retiring he moved to Mackside old Toll Bar. He lived to the age of about 80, as did his wife. Their children were George (b.1852/3), Euphemia (b.1855/6), Ellen or Helen (b.1858/9), Mary and Jessie (who married Robert Tinlin). Roger (12th C.) witness to a charter of Ranulph de Soulis about 1150. He is recorded as 'of Munetov', along with Simon his brother. In 1166 he was 'Roger de Munethov' when he was witness to a grant by King William to Robert de Brus. Thomas (15th C.) tenant of Minto Common. In 1494/5 James Davidson in Raperlaw was charged with several crimes, including stealing a black ox from him. Thomas (15th/16th C.) Burgess of Selkirk. In 1527 he is recorded resigning his tenement of land to his wife Elizabeth Notman, as well as reginging an annual rent of the tenement of David (who was surely a relative). The nearby tenement of David was also mentioned in 1527. In the same year he witnessed a document in Selkirk. He was owner of a rig of land in Selkirk in 1530/1. He is still recorded as owner of a tenement in 1531 and 1534. In 1532 he was 'elder' when he witnessed a sasine in Selkirk and also resigned a tenement to Thomas 'younger' (presumably his son). In 1535 he was one of the 'landmaires' chosen to 'rid the boundis' of Selkirk Common. In 1536 he resigned his tenement in Selkirk to his heir John; David was a witness, and hence probably related. His son and heir John is recorded in about 1541 assigning a yard in Selkirk. Thomas (d.bef. 1539) resident of Selkirk, perhaps son of the earlier Thomas. He is recorded in 1539 when a transaction involving tenants in Ashkirk and Falside was done in his house. Later in 1539 he was deceased when his wife Marion Minto and son James rented part of Ladyland to John Brydon. In 1543 his wife was recorded as Marion Burnet, with his son and heir being John and James another son. Thomas (16th C.) recorded representing someone in a court case in Selkirk in 1561. He is probably the Thomas 'elder' who was a Burgess of Selkirk in 1581 when he had an agreement involving his wife 'Bigie' Murray and son Thomas. He is probably also the Thomas who rig in Selkirk is mentioned in 1581. Thomas (16th C.) probably son of Thomas. He was recorded as 'younger' when he was a witness in Selkirk in 1580 and 1580/1. In 1581 he was warned to appear to receive redemption money at Selkirk Kirk. Also in 1581 he was involved in an agreement with his father Thomas, involving a loan and the transfer of land in Selkirk and another agreement over the purchase of a horse. He is probably the Burgess of Selkirk who witnessed another transaction in 1581. Thomas (17th/18th C.) wright in Selkirk. He is recorded in 1727 when he was paid for mending the Selkirk Tollbooth. Also in 1727, along with William Scott, he received money for 'work at the milns, bridges, mealmarket and house' in Selkirk. Wrights Francis and John are also mentioned in 1727 and surely related. In 1729 he provided a bell for the top of Selkirk Schoolhouse. He was involved in a case for recovering a debt in 1737. In 1741 and 1742 he carried out other 'builder work' and 'smithy work' for the Burgh of Selkirk. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Minto Parish. He married Isobel Beattie in 1725 and his children included Janet (b.1726), William (b.1730), Agnes (b.1732), John (b.1734) and Thomas (b.1738). Thomas (19th C.) coach driver who was an early member of Allars Kirk. He is described as a 'chaise driver' in 1829, when one of his children died. Walter (16th C.) recorded as mechant Burgess of Edinburgh in 1577. Walter (17th C.) resident of Minto Parish who appears in the Hearth Tax records of 1694. He may be related to James, who is also listed. Walter (17th C.) listed at Highchesters on the Hearth Tax records of 1694. He paid tax for 3 hearths, suggesting he was either a significant tenant or a tradesman of some sort. Walter (17th/18th C.) recorded in Selkirk in 1719 when he and his son Andrew were charged with assault. Perhaps the same Walter was recorded in a bond in Selkirk in 1721 with David. William (13th/14th C.) son of 'Henrici de Mimtow'. In 1302 he was a witness to the granting of half of the Barony of Minto to Philip de la Ley by Walter Boredon. William of Minto (15th C.) notary in 1431 for the 'instrument' transferring the lands of Heap between the Langlands' and the Scotts. He is recorded as 'Willelmus de Myntow presbyter Glasguensis diocesis'. William (15th C.) resident of Minto. In 1493 Walter and Adam Turnbull in Hornshole were able to 'compone' for several crimes, including the theft of a cow from him. He was probably related to John who was also 'in mynto' at the same time. William (18th C.) resident of Minto Parish. He married Agnes Scott in 1726 and his son William was baptised in 1727. Lt.-Col. William (1756–1827) born at Ruletownhead, son of George and Barbara Chisholme, he was christened in Southdean Parish. He served in the Royal Marine Artillery. Joining as a Lieutenant in 1779, he became Captain in 1796 and Major in 1801. He was wounded 3 separate times, once in 1783 while fighting the French frigate Sybille on board the British Magicienne, and another time in 1801 when in a battalion attached to the Army at Aboukir in Egypt. He later served in the Royal Marines Artillery and retired in 1826. In 1812 he married Grace Little, but they had no children. William (b.1788) born in Southdean Parish, son of Andrew and Betty 'Boal'. He was a mason living at Forkins in the 1841 to 1861 censuses. In 1815 he married Janet Oliver (from Castleton) and their children included: George (b.1819); Betty (b.1822); Jessy (b.1824); John (b.1827); Helen (b.1829); Archibald (b.1831); Robert (b.1833); Margaret (b.1835); Peter (b.1837); Agnes (b.1840); and James (b.1840). Andrew (b.1817), who worked at Weens and was ploughman at Cleughhead Cottages, was probably also his son. William (b.c.1801) born in Southdean Parish, he was a labourer living at Doorpool in 1841, Birneyknowe in 1851 and Cleughhead Cottages in 1861. He was surely related to the mason of the same name, who was his near neighbour, as well as Andrew, who also lived at Cleughhead. His wife was Mary and their children included Margaret, Agnes, Archibald, James, Robert Robina and Janet. He was already widowed by 1861. He may be the William, son of Agnes (or Nanny), baptised in Southdean Parish in 1802. Another labourer of the same name, son of mason George, died in Lanton in 1865. William (b.1812) born in Castleton, son of William and Margaret Elliot. In 1841 and 1851 he was a labourer living at Borthaugh Cottages. In 1861 he was 'General Servant Ploughman', living at Highchester Cottage in Roberton Parish. He married Rebecca Pow and their children included: William (b.1835); Andrew (b.1838); Gavin (b.1841); Mary (b.1843); William Bruce (b.c.1845); George (b.1847); Margaret (b.1850); and James O. (b.1853). William (b.c.1815) born in Southdean Parish, he was a farm labourer. In 1851 he was visiting William Scott, farm servant at Silverbuthall. William (b.1834/5) from Langholm, he was blacksmith at Hewsbridge in Castleton Parish in 1861. He was recorded as resident at Steele Road in 1868. His wife was Jessie. William (19th C.) elder of Newcastleton U.P. Kirk in the latter part of the 19th century. William (19th/20th C.) proprietor of a cab business on Oliver Crescent around 1900. He married Ellen, daughter of James Grieve, tailor at Bonchester Bridge (formerly written 'Mintoe', 'Myntow' and other variants).

Minti Bank (min'-i-bangk) n. former name for lands in Minto Parish that were part of Deanfoot. It probably corresponds to the place labelled 'Deanfoot Bank' on modern maps (it is 'Mintobank' in 1780).

Minti Brae (min'-i-brā) n. name sometimes used for the road north of Denholm leading to Minto, particularly the part across the river. There was a saw mill here in the 19th century.

Minti Burn (min'-i-burn) n. name sometimes used for the Grinding Burn. In 1768 there was a 'Plan of Minto Burn', showing small pieces of land exchanged between Minto estate (owned by Sir Gilbert Elliot) and Hassendean Bank (owned by the Duke of Roxburghe) to rationalise the boundary.

Minti Cleuchheid (min'-i-klooch-heed) n. Minto Cleuchhead, farmstead recorded in the late 17th and early 18th centuries when it was farmed by the Turnbulls. Stepeh Turnbull was there in 1692. The house there was a home of the Earl of Minto's family in the 20th century and is still a family residence. The 'Minto Stone' was moved there in 2013/4 (also written 'Cleughhead' etc.).

Minti Cragfit (min'-i-krawg-fi') n. Minto Cragfoot, former name for an area at the foot of the Crags. A story is told (in the 1820 Edinburgh Magazine and repeated in 1914 in 'Highways and Byways in the Border') of a mother from here having her infant swapped for a changeling by the fairies. The minister of Bedrule (Rev. Borland) was called and administered a brew of boiled foxgloves (i.e. digitalis!) to the infant, and locked it in a barn for the night, after which it apparently returned to be 'as healthy and cheerful as it formerly was'.

Minti Crags (min'-i-krawgz) n. Minto Crags, a prominent rocky outcrop overlooking the Teviot valley, just north-east of Minto village. The crags can be seen in a sketch of 1790, before the plantations of the 1st Earl of Minto covered them. They reach 224 m (729 ft) and have Fatlips Castle perched on the steep side, and Barnhills Bed below. Additionally there is some evidence for a fort in the region to the north and north-west of Fatlips; the ramparts were probably built to take advantage of the natural rock outcroppings, and have been partly obliterated by quarrying and planting – 'On Minto-crags the moonbeams glint, Where Barnhill hew'd his bed of flint' [SWS], 'Waved in the sunshine and the breeze, Giving to all a loftier tone Than aught that soul or sight now sees From Minto Craigs to Teviot Stone' [HSR], '... athort the fer seide o Teiot's flooery vale, Mintih Craigs (haappeet an rowed in their leafy maud) brent raise ther skerrs' [ECS] (also sometimes 'Craigs').

Minti Craig see min'-i-krāg n. former fortified house at Minto, to the east of the main house. 'Mynto Crag' was burned by the Earl of Hertford's men in 1545. In 1550 it is listed as the limit of the half of the Middle Marches to which Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme was appointed Warden. The farm there was known by the same name and owned by the Turnbulls in the 17th century. It may be the same as the place called 'Minti Craigend' and was formerly part of the farm of Minto Mill (it is 'Minto Craig' on Pont's c.1590 manuscript map, is labelled 'Craig' and 'Minto Craig' on Gordon's c.1650 maps and is 'Mintocraig' on Blaeu's 1654 map; it is 'Mynto Crage' in 1550 and 'the Cragie of Mynto' in 1656)

Minti Craigend see min'-i-krāg-end n. former name for a farmstead near Minto Crags, and also called simply Craigend. Note that the lands called 'Minti Craig' were probably adjacent, but distinct. Gilbert and William Johnstone, Simon Leitch, Margaret Ord and Thomas Young were there in 1502. Thomas Porteous leased the lands in 1686. Patrick Bowie, Thomas Brown, William Cunningham, John Haliburton, Robert Minto, Walter Renwick, John Stavert, Thomas Wilkie and Robert Young were there in 1694

Minti Craigs see Minti Crags

Minti East Ludge (min'-i-eest-luj) n. former lodge house for Minto estate, situated to the south of Minto Crags (it is marked on the 1858 Ordnance Survey map).

Minti Gairdens (min'-i-gār-dinz) n. road in Denholm off the Canongate, with private housing built in the 1970s.

Minti Glen (min'-i-glen) n. narrow valley around a stream passing from Minto to the Teviot, and also the name of a farm there. The glen was once laid out with walks, as part of the Minto estate and contained many planted trees, including some of the first larches to be imported into Scotland. The small lake near its head was artificially created in 1735 as part of the landscaping for Minto House.

Minti Golf Club (min'-i-gōlf-klub) n. golf club that runs a course near Minto village, established in 1928. It is the closest course other than the Vertish and is 5,393 yards, par 69.

Minti Green (min-ti-green) n. area to the northeast of Minto village (marked on a 1766 map of Minto estate).

Minti Hills (min'-i-hilz) n. Minto Hills, better known as the the Mintis, which are easily seen from points around Hawick. The southern peak reaches a height of 276 m (905 ft), with a triangulation pillar on top, while the northern hill is 253 m (837 ft) and topped by a cairn. 'Mynto hill' (singular) is listed among the main hills of the county in 1649. This was also the name of a farm, which is recorded in 1779 being valued at £365 2d. In the Land Tax Rolls of about 1811 it was owned by Lord Minto and liferented by the late Lord Westhall – 'While the Minto Hills in their verdure seen Seem reflecting the light frae their mantle green' [TC], 'Now, the 'ern-horse' rins roond ahint the Mintih Hills . . . ' [ECS] (the word 'Minto' probably derives from the Old Welsh for hill, 'mynydd' together with the Old English for hill, 'hoh', and hence 'Minto Hills' means the same thing thrice!; they are drawn as 2 hills on Pont's manuscript map of c.1590, but labelled 'Grindoun hills').

Minti Hoose (min'-i-hoos) n. Minto House, former seat of the Elliots of Minto for 2 centuries. Existing from the 16th century, it was listed among the 'principal Houses on Tiot' in 1649. The house was charged for having 8 hearths in 1694, and 46 windows in 1748. It was substantially remodelled 1738–43 to a V-plan by William Adam, and essentially completed in 1809–14 by Archibald Elliot (from Ancrum). The 'Lands round Minto House' were valued at £72 17s 6d in 1788 and in 1811 (with the garden and nursery, and several other pieces of land listed separately). The house was altered again in 1837 by William Playfair and terraced gardens were landscaped by Sir Robert Lorimer in the period 1894–1906. In the early 19th century the village was moved so that it could not be seen from the windows of the mansion; the exact choice of location for the house has been considered puzzling, and may have been related to this. It was 4 storeys in height and the top floor contained a sort of museum, showing artefacts related to the family. A watercolour sketch of the house exists from 1792. After being abandoned by the Elliot family, the house was used in the War effort, then rented to serve as the location of a private girl's school, Craigmount School from 1952 until 1962. The school then purchased the house, but went into liquidation in 1966 and the house became derelict. In 1972 Viscount Melgund (later Earl of Minto) outbid another purchaser and immediately applied for permission to demolish this listed building, which was finally given by the County Council. It was partially demolished in 1973, becoming a roofless shell, and there followed lengthy debate about its fate. There was a plan in 1991 to dismantle the remaining walls and ship them to Japan, stone by stone, although costs proved prohibitive. Demolition re-started in 1992, including burning of internal timbers, despite being relisted category 'A', and there is now little left. This episode is sometimes referred to as the 'Minto Debacle', and influenced subsequent policies on preserving historical buildinds in Scotland. The grounds contain the remains of a Norman church and burial enclosure, as well as the golf course. There were other buildings associated with the mansion and school, including a residential building, stable (later gymnasium), cottage (used for laundry) and dairy ('Minto Tour' is marked on Pont's c.1590 manuscript map, 'Minto tour' on Gordon's c.1650 map and 'Mintotour' on Blaeu's 1654 map).

Minti Kames (min'-i-kāmz) n. Minto Kames, farm just north of the Minto Hills, adjacent to the old railway line. It is probably the 'Place of Camys' referred to in 1502, when Peter Turnbull and other Turnbull outlaws were accuxed of stealing oxen, cows, horses and mares from John Grahamslaw there. It may also be the 'camys' where in the same year 2 Croziers were convicted of stealing sheep from James Dalgleish. It is probably the 'Camys' owned in 1510 by James Grahamslaw and by a Ker, wife of James Davidson.

John Young 'in the Cames' in Minto Parish was hanged for murder in 1580. 'Dand' Davidson in 'Kames' is recorded in 1580/1 and 1595. David (perhaps an error for 'Dand') Davidson 'of the Kaims' was recorded in 1601 when he was maimed in Jedburgh in a fight than was part of the feud between the Turnbulls of the Minto area and the Kers. 'Kaimes and Minto hills' were owned by Scott of Harden and farmed by William Mather in the late 17th century. William Douglas was 'late tenant' in 1743. In 1779 the lands were part of the Minto estate, valued at £219 2d and liferented by Sir John Dalrymple. The farm was owned by Lord Minto according to the 1811 Land Tax Roll. John Thorburn was farmer there in 1797 when he had 12 horses. Residents there in 1799 included William Jeffrey, Thomas Turnbull, William Oliver and Walter Stot. David Lindsay was a labourer there in 1801. John Turnbull was farmer in 1841 and David Brockie in 1861. Crop marks visible from the air in a field to the northwest may be old boundaries and rig lines. There is a bridge to the farm, over the former railway line, another over the line near Kames North Loch, and one more for a track to the south. To the northwest of Kames South Loch is a field with signs of an ancient enclosure. In about 1840 some labourers there found 3 bronze axeheads or 'palstaves', which were sold to Joseph Scott of the Sandbed and donated to Kelso Museum (it is 'Kamys' in 1576, 'the Cames' in 1595, 'the Kamis' in 1601 and 'Kaims' in 1811; probably the same place is marked 'Keems' and 'Kenmer' on Blaeu's 1654 maps, and although not exactly in the right location this appears to be a transcription error from Blaeu's 1590s manuscript that shows 'M. Keams.'; it is written 'Kaines' on the 1718 Buccleuch survey; see also Kames Moss).

Minti Kirk (min'-i-kirk) n. Minto Parish Church, the present one replacing a much earlier building, dating back to at least 1275. This is when the Rectory is listed on Bagimont's Roll, with a value of 4 s. 4 d. The remains of this Norman Church, on the grounds of the Minto estate, contain a burial enclosure with some ancient stones and a set of iron neck-rings set in the doorway. There are many gravestones from the 17th and 18th centuries, and part of a child's stone coffin, probably from the 13th or 14th century. 'Serlo' was parson there when he witnessed a grant by daughter of the Baron of Minto in about the period 1230. William Woodburn may have been a Parson there who signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296. The church was mentioned in ratifications of other churches being connected to Melrose Abbey in 1315. There is a curious charter of Edward III in 1374, which states that the church was then in the diocese of Lincoln. The patronage was held by the Stewarts of Minto from about 1390 until the 16th century. The old church was demolished in 1831, and it is said that at that time a collection of about 400 small silver coins (from the 13th and 14th century) were discovered. The current Gothic-style church was constructed 1830–31 by William Playfair, and built on the road through the village. When built, there was a private gallery for the family of the Earl of Minto. It has a square tower, contains an organ presented by the Countess of Minto in 1880 and was renovated in 1934. The standard of the Blues and Royals Household Cavalry Regiment was laid there in 2004 in memory of Alexander Tweedie, the first Borderer to be killed in the Iraq conflict. Nearby is the Thomas Clapperton War Memorial. An early Manse was taxed for 18 windows in 1748 and marked on a 1766 plan of Minto estate, along with the glebe lands and 'Minister's yard'. The newer Manse was built at the same time as the House, in a Tuscan villa style, and later called Melgund Glen; this was sold in 1941 and a new Manse built in 1950. When the new church was built the old churchyard was converted into a garden on the Minto estate, much admired in the 19th century. The church was linked with Ancrum 1968–76 and then with Denholm and Bedrule in 1976. In 2003 it was linked, along with Denholm and Bedrule, into a wider area called Ruberslaw, which was then extended to include Hobkirk and Southdean. The oldest surviving communion token is a large lead oblong shape, bearing the letters 'M.K.' and probably from the 17th century. In 1838 the minister describes 2 artefacts founds nearby, which may date to the period of monastic connection: a large silver hoop, inscribed 'IHESUS NA' (possibly Jesus of Nazareth) and cross shapes; and an ancient copper seal inscribed 'S ADEN PASTOREL', along with a primitive lamb. A roll of the ministry is: Serlo, Parson c.1230; William Woodburn, 1296; David de Boredon, 1302; John Blackadder, Rector in 1463; Patrick Mason, Rector in 1483; George Panter, Rector from 1512; Walter Stewart, Rector at least 1542–44; John Turnbull, Clerk 1559; David Turnbull, 1569; William McGowen, Parson 1574–76 (and perhaps to 1585); Edward Dickson, Reader 1576–78; Robert Hamilton, Reader 1579; Patrick Bishop 1589–c.90; John Mather 1601–02; James Johnstone 1607–08; Adam Scott 1608–12; Samuel Cockburn 1609–c.24; William Wishart, assistant 1613–18; William Maxwell 1625–51; James Ainslie 1652–62; Francis Scott 1664–78; James Kirkwood 1679–81; William Wishart 1682–90; James Ainslie 1690–1702; Walter Ainslie 1698–1700; John Ritchie 1703–44; George Kay, assistant 1741–43; George Bruce 1745–66; Thomas Somerville 1767–73; William Burn 1774–1826; David Aitken 1827–64; J.P. Macmorland 1865–93; Alexander Galloway 1878–1926; George O. Mackenzie 1927–35; John Pollock 1936–56; Ian B. MacCalman 1956–67; Peter B. Gunn 1968–76; James F. Falconer 1976–77; John T. Stuart 1978–84; Moira Herkes 1985–88; Thomas Preston 1989–92; William N. Longmuir 1992–2003 ('Minto K:' is marked on Pont's c.1590 manuscript map, 'Minto K.' and 'Minto Kirk' are marked on Gordon's c.1650 maps and 'Minto K.' is on Blaeu's 1654 map).

Minti Manse (min'-i-mawns) n. former manse for the Parish of Minto. The Manse was taxed for having 5 hearths in 1694 and 18 windows in 1748. A new site for the Manse was selected in 1772 and the building erected in 1773 for the incoming minister, Rev. William Burn. Lady Minto referred to it as a 'long, low, ugly building, which it was necessary to conceal as much as possible', and hence it was surrounded by trees. A new Manse was built 1827–9 in a Tuscan villa style, at the same time as other improvements were made to the estate; this was later known as Melgund Glen. The older building was pulled down 1830/1.

Minti Mill (min'-i-mil) n. former farm near Minto, site of the local corn mill. William Brown was tenant there in 1684. John Riddell was tenant there in 1710. This was an earlier name for lands that were included in 1779 along with Craigend in the part of Minto liferented to Sir John Stewart of Allanshaws. It is possible that this was essentially the same location as the earlier farm of Minto Mill. The 1811 Land Tax Rolls lists 'Mill Banks', 'Mill Haugh' and related lands lying near to Craigend.

Minti Muir Parks (min'-i-mewr-pawrks) n. former name for a set of lands in Minto Parish. In 1779 they were liferented to Sir John Dalrymple when valued at £127 15s 1d. They were listed separately from Minto Muir and described as 'four inclosures' bounded by the farm of Minto Hills, the road from Hassendean to Troneyhill, the road from Lilliesleaf to Jedburgh, the lands of Crowsmoss and Walrigpark, the road from Hawick to St. Boswell's, the farm of Newlands and the lands of Hassendean. In 1811 the lands were owned by Lord Minto.

Minti North Ludge (min'-i-north-luj) n. former lodge house for Minto estate, situated at a turn in the road, between Hillend and Standhill. The adjacent plantation is called the North Lodge Strip. One roofed building, an unroofed building and an enclosure are marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map.

Minti Pairish (min'-i-pā-reesh) n. small parish of Minto, consisting of the villages of Minto and Hassendean and adjacent areas, being bordered by Lilliesleaf, Ancrum, Bedrule, Cavers and Wilton Parishes and part of Selkirkshire. It once coincided with the boundaries of the Barony of Minto, but later included a large part of the suppressed parish of Hassendean. The topography is dominated by the Minto Hills and Minto Crags. It was a Rectory within the Diocese of Glasgow, taxed at 50s 4d in 1275 and £15 11s 1d (along with Kirkmahoe) in 1376. In 1643 the lands were valued at £2768 13s 4d and there were only 5 owners: John Turnbull, William Turnbull and Elizabeth Elliot for Minto; Turnbull of Tofts; and Gilbert Elliot for Craigend and Deanfoot. In 1649 the land and crops of the Parish were valued at about £2400. In 1663 the land tax on more than £2100 was paid by the Laird of Minto (probably still John Turnbull) and £660 by Gilbert Elliot. The value was the same in 1688, when the entire Parish was owned by 2 Gilbert Elliots, one being the Laird of Minto and the other the Laird of Craigend. There were 35 men listed there between the ages of 19 and 30 in 1799. In the mid-19th century the parish had a reputation for having no paupers, no toll-bars and no public houses. In 1838 the minister wrote that education was eroding the local language and that 'it is not improbable, that, ere long, the ancient dialect of the district, which has several interesting peculiarities, may become, in a great measure, extinct.' The existing parish registers begin in 1703, and are fairly complete for births. However, no register of deaths was kept until more recent times, and marriages were only recorded through the reading of the banns, with some significant gaps. Additionally, there are no existing heritors' or kirk session records. The population in 1755 was 395.

Minti Place (min'-i-plis) n. Minto Place, a street in the Wellogate on the opposite side of the street from Glebe View. It was built in 1875 by Hawick Working Men's Building and Investment Company and named after Gilbert John Elliot-

Murray-Kynynmound, 4th Earl of Minto. The upper houses were originally named Glebe Terrace until 1882.

Minti pump (min'-i-pump) n. water pump at the main road junction in Minto village. It dates from about 1860 and was restored in 2020.

the Minti Road (th-min'-rōd) n. street in Denholm leading out of the village towards Minto, being part of the B6405.

the Mintis (thu-min'-iz, min-tiz) n. the Minto Hills, twin hills near Minto, a distinctive feature of the landscape north-east of Hawick. The hills are formed of igneous rocks, like many of the higher peaks in the area; it is belived that they are the eroded remains of a paired volcanic vent. The southern hill has a triangulation marker and reaches 276 m, the other reaches 253 m and is topped by a cairn. The summit of the southern hill has the faint remains of a former fort, about 120 m by 75 m in size, with an entrance on the west side. The cairn on the summit of the north hill is about 10 m in diameter, flat-topped, and has some large kerb-stones around it. Around the lower slopes of the hills are extensive remains of rig, terraces and other signs of earlier cultivation – 'The scenes round Denholm, they are rich indeed; With Minto hills and crags what can compare? And Ruberslaw, whose high majestic head Towers upward, like the lark, till lost in air' [TCh] (see also Minti Hills).

Minti Schuil (min'-i-skil) n. schoolhouse in Minto, serving the surrounding area. It was probably established in the early 17th century. The first mention of a Schoolmaster there is John Davidson in 1616. Walter Elliot may have been Schoolmaster there in the 1720s and early 1730s. The school had 50 cases of the measles, resulting in a larger building being erected in 1792, the new one being 470 square feet (and a plan exists), with 6 windows. In about the 1830s William Grant gave the school a strong reputation, with several students boarding there from outside the Parish. The teacher normally served as Clerk to the Heritors and Session Clerk for the Parish. In the early 19th century there was also a small school teaching younger children and instructing girls in sewing. The Borders Archive has School Board documents for 1873–1916, registers for 1915–63 and log books for 1874–1963. A roll of Schoolmaster includes: John Davidson in 1616; James Learmonth, at least 1624–1625; Walter Turnbull, at least 1718–26; Zaccheus Laurie, at least 1726–1738; David Watson, at least 1747–84; George Scott, at least 1787–1826; William Grant, 1830s; John Wylie, 1840s; and John R. Hamilton, 1850s and 1860s.

the Minti Stakes (th-min'-i-stāks) n. former Friday Common Riding race, started at least as early as the 1880s.

the Minti Stane (th-min'-i-stān) n. inscribed stone on the Minto estate, coming from near the town of Malang in East Java, also called the Sangguran Stone. The stone is about 2 metres tall and weighs more than 3 tons. It was carved in the year 982, and carries a long inscription to the Javanese King Sri Maharaja Rakai Pangkaja Dyah Wawa Sri Wijayalokanamottungga. The text (not all of which was legible) describes a granting of rights for establishing the village of Sangguran, including taxation rules, with the obverse containing a long curse against anyone who broke these rules. It was collected in 1812 by Colin Mackenzie and his team for Sir Stamford Raffles and transported 'with the consent, and by the assistance of the Native Regent from Malang'; Mackenzie had previously worked with Dr. John Leyden and it was he who discovered the buried site of Borobudur (the largest Buddhist temple in the world). In 1813 the stone was given as a gift to the parting Governer-General of India, Gilbert Elliot, Lord Minto, who had it sent to his home in Scotland. Although Lord Minto died in England on his return, the stone continued the planned journey and was displayed in a glass case in Minto House. However, when the house was requisitioned as a military hospital in WWII, the stone was moved to garden, where it was exposed to the elements. In 2013/4 the present Earl of Minto had the stone moved to Cleughhead.

Minti Toon (min'-i-toon) n. former name for an area in Minto Parish, presumably around the old home farm of the Baron. It is listed among the lands of 'Minto Townhead' that were liferented by Rev. Robert Elliot from 1779.

Minti Toonheid (min'-i-toon-heed) n. farm at the northern end of Minto village. In the early 19th century it was farmed by the Turnbulls, with William Turnbull there in the 1860s. Robert Watson was farmer in the early 20th century. In 1779 Rev. William Elliot (brother of the Laird of Minto) was granted liferent of these lands. They are described as consisting of South Croft, North Croft,Quicksands Park, Notman's Shot, Langlands, Templecrofts, Howden, Whitfield, West South Croft, Minto Town and the green of Minto, 'which pieces of ground were some time ago known by the name of Minto Townhead'. The lands were valued at £461 1s 10d.

The boundaries of the lands were the Minto-to-Hawick road, Minto Glebe, the march 'which runs through Howden syke', the foot of Minto Hill, Hillends Park, Towledge Park, Cow Park and the lawn around Minto House ('Minto To...' is marked on Pont's c.1590 manuscript map, separarely from 'Minto Tour', with some indication of houses there).

Mitchel (mi-chul) n. Hugh (18th/19th C.) wood merchant of Fisherrow (Musselburgh), who was made an Honorary Burgess in 1813. He was probably the 'Hugh Mitchell, Burntisland' who subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. James (17th C.) resident of Ewes Parish. He married Jean Beattie and their children included: Janet (b.1756); Thomas (b.1758); Jean (b.1760); and James (b.1763). The witnesses in 1758 were Andrew Lamb and John Elliot. John (18th/19th C.) gardener at Liddel Bank in 1797, when he was working for William Oliver. John (18th/19th C.) 'hynd' at Ruecastle in Bedrule Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book in 1799. Robert 'Bob' (b.1780/1) Hawick's first milkman, operating from Southfield, formerly ostler of the Tower Hotel. On one famous occasion, in a snowstorm in 1831, he brought back the Carlisle mail on foot after abandoning his horse at Teviothead. Robert (18th/19th C.) married Jean Kennedy in Bedrule Parish in 1796. Thomas (16th C.) one of the men who in 1530 swore that William Scott of Harden did not owe more than a merk to the deceased Stephen Lauder. William (17th/18th C.) baxter in Hawick. In 1721 he witnessed a baptism for merchant Andrew Turnbull. He could be the William who married Marion Laidlaw in Hawick in 1718. William (18th C.) resident of Denholm in 1780. Probably the same William was recorded as miller at Denholm Mill in 1785. His children, baptised in Cavers Parish, included William (b.1780) and James (b.1785) (also Mitchell).

Mitchell (mi-chul) n. Alexander (b.1828/9) born in Selkirk, he was a butcher on Silver Street. He is listed on Slater's 1852 directory. In 1851 he was at about 4 Silver Street and in 1861 he was on the Round Close. Probably the same Alexander was President of the Common Riding (Race) Committee in 1856, when the Cornet elected by the Council refused to accept the offer. He married Margaret Laidlaw. Their children included: Isabella (b.c.1851); Violet (b.c.1853); William (b.1856); Agnes (b.1859); Margaret Anderson (b.1860); Alexander (b.1862); and Janet Laidlaw (b.1864). Andrew (19th C.) tailor on the Howegate, listed in Slater's 1852 directory. Charles (19th C.) listed as miller at New Mill on Slitrig in Slater's 1852 directory. George (d.1957) Director of Pringle's of Scotland from 1937. Henry (b.1825/6) son of tailor James, he himself was a tailor at 8 Howegate. He was at 8 Howegate in 1861 until at least 1881. He married Anne Millington and their children included Anne, Margaret, James, Thomas, Henry (b.1856), Robert (b.1858), Mary (b.1860), David (b.1864), Agnes (b.1863), George (b.1867), Agnes (again, b.1870) and George (again, b.1872). Henry (d.1960) joined Craig's Aerated Waters in the 1920, becoming manager. In 1948 he put in an offer for the firm, but was outbid by the Scottish Co-operative Wholesale Society. However, he remained as manager until his death. His son, also Henry, then carried on as manager. Henry (20th C.) son of Henry. Like his father he worked for what had been Craig's Aerated Waters at 22 Buccleuch Street. He took over as manager in 1960, but production of sodas ceased soon after. James (c.1785–1850) tailor on the High Street, listed in Pigot's 1825/6 and 1837 directories. He was listed as a member of Allars Kirk in 1829. He married Ann Murray (b.1788) in Wilton in 1805. In 1841 he was living on the High Street (about No. 12) with his wife and 3 children. He must have been deceased by 1851, when his wife was living with his son. His children were: Jean (b.1808); Thomas (b.1809); Ann (b.c.1820); Henry (b.1825/6), a tailor on the Howegate; and James (b.1830), who emigrated to Canada. His unnamed child died in Hawick in 1811. He could be the James, son of William, born in Cavers Parish in 1785. James (18th/19th C.) listed in Pigot's 1825/6 directory as running an eating house on the Howegate. James (b.1814/5) from Hutton in Dumfriesshire, he was a farmer at Crosscleuch in Yarrow Parish. He married Mary (1818–96), daughter of Tibbie Shiel. His wife was the last surviving child of Tibbie, and died in Hawick. Their children included Isobella, Margaret and Christina. He was dead by 1861, when Mary was a widow, recorded as farmer at Crosscleuch. James (1830–1914) born in Hawick, son of High Street tailor James. He was employed as a weaver, and still living with his brother and mother on the Howegate in 1851. He emigrated to Canada in 1854, arriving in Galt, then moving to Guelph before moving to Manitoba, settling in Arrow River in 1882. He homesteaded, also serving as ferryman across the Assiniboine River. He invented a new kind of lifeboat, patented in 1898 and exhibited in Europe in 1909 (when he also returned for a visit to Hawick). He married Janet Bell Waugh (1836–1920), who came from Moffat and they had several children. John (c.1815–81) real name of the man who inspired 'Heather Jock' in the song 'Kinly Stick'. He was a native of Hexham, who came to Hawick at age 16; it is said that he walked all the way in order to find work. He was well known in Town for the next 50 years. He was a wrestler and runner in his youth. He worked in the hosiery industry, but mainly made a living at poaching, as well as by gathering cresses, labouring, etc. He was also in the Grenadier Guards for a while, but deserted. In 1841 he was a stockingmaker, living at 4 Silver Street, then around Punch Bowl Close in 1851. He is listed as a railway labourer on Dickson Street in 1861 and was living at 9 Kirk Wynd in 1871. It seems that he became a wanderer, collecting moss and sleeping rough (hence his nickname). Adie Ingles suggests that he may have spent some time in Australia, and returned whistling the tune of 'Click Go the Shears', but there is no evidence to support this. He is probably the Hawick stockingmaker, born in Corbridge, who is recorded in Jedburgh Jail in (at least) 1843, 1851, 1852, 1855, 1856, 1864, and 1865 (twice), and the Hexham man in Hawick Jail in 1851. In 1874 he was rescued from the Teviot 'having been inbibing of his favourite beverage rather freely'. In 1841 he married Elizabeth Lamb in Hawick. Their children included Benjamin (b.1853/4), John (b.1846/7) and James (b.1849/50); she also had children Adam (b.1833/4) and Janet (b.1839/40) from a previous marriage. He died of tetanus in Jethart Jail – 'Crane-like he watched the purling streams, And for a crust would gather bones; Of statute laws he's broken more Than ere he broke of hard whin stones' [TCh]. Peter (17th/18th C.) mason in Hawick. He witnessed baptisms in 1710 for carrier David Wilson and for younger carrier William Aitken, and in 1716 for mason John Napier. In 1705 in Edinburgh he married Agnes Guild, servant to merchant and Burgess of Edinburgh, David Weems; his name is recorded there as 'Patrick'. Their children included: Anna (b.1706); James (b.1708); John (b.1708); and Jean (b.1712). The witnesses in 1706 were masons John Napier and John Turnbull, in 1708 were merchant Walter Weens and mason John Napier and in 1712 were masons John Turnbull and Nichol Turnbull. Rev. Robert (1826–93) from Auchterarder, he probably attended Edinburgh University. He came to Hawick as a guest preacher at the Evangelical Union (later Congregational) Church towards the end of 1849, a few weeks later accepted the 'call' to the church, and was inducted early in 1850. He preached 3 sermons every Sunday, as well as in the open air on street corners and around the countryside. He also carried out a vigorous correspondence about evangelism in the Hawick Advertiser. He turned down one call to another church, but left suddenly in 1864 to become assistant to Dr. Morrison at Dundas Street Church, Glasgow. He was later minister at Queen's Park, Manchester, St. John's Wood Terrace, Middlesex, Chorton-cum-Hardy, Lancashire, Elgin Brook, Hertfordshire and Nelson Street, Greenock. Robert (1848–1928) born in Kinross, Perthshire, he spent his early years in Gala, ran away from home at age 14 and was a glazier's apprentice in Edinburgh. He began a glaziers business in Hawick in about 1873, and certainly by 1875; this would become the longest established glazing business in Scotland. He was a Councillor for North High Street Ward from 1884, was a Magistrate for 9 years, Provost 1896–1902, and returned to the Council 1919–23. He was also appointed Honorary Sheriff-Substitute of Roxburghshire. His Provostship saw the erection of the Public Library, re-laying of the pavements and the letting of the Haugh as a show-ground at the Common Riding. He was an early advocate for electric lighting, Chairman of the Hawick School Board and a Common Riding supporter. Liberal in politics, he was a Mason and an Orrock Church elder. His business on Oliver Crescent can be seen in a photograph from the early 1900s. The glazing business was continued by his son Alexander. He is buried in Wilton Cemetery. Thomas (18th/19th C.) servant at Riddell in Lilliesleaf Parish. He is recorded in 1798 on the list of men balloted to serve in the Militia and later that year he was sworn in (formerly 'Mitchil' etc.; see also Mitchel).

Mitchellhill (mi-chul-hil) n. Adam (18th C.) married Bessy Rae in Minto in 1743. Alexander (18th C.) resident of Hawick who married Nancy Harkness. Their son Thomas was baptised in 1747. He may be the Alexander recorded as owner of 2 work horses, along with George, in Hawick on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He is probably the deceased Alexander whose son George died in 1822, aged 76. Alexander 'Sandy' (b.1771) son of George and Margaret Noble. He was a local character of the early 1800s, described as 'the smuggler', possibly the local labourer who died in 1850. He is probably the man of this name recorded as a carrier on the 1799 ballot for the Militia in Hawick and still on the ballot in 1801. A story is told about him and his father (also said to be Alexander Mitchell, rather than Mitchellhill), resting in a hay-loft near the Carter Bar Toll. They hid their smuggled gin when they saw the excisemen coming, but then in the dark fought with each other, his father biting his leg, saying 'A've left the marks o' ma teeth on yin o' their legs at ony rate!' and him replying 'It was me ye bate, faither! Was aw no guid game no te squeel?'

He is said to have travelled over all of Dumfriesshire as a smuggler and in his later life would tell about his exploits. One story was about how he was being chased when he happened to come across a hearse and hid his kegs inside, switching clothes with the driver to ellude the excisemen. He is recorded on the Fore Raw in 1841, along with wife Agnes. He married Agnes Scott and their children included George (b.1807) and Mary (d.1808). Andrew (1818–78) son of Thomas and Janet Thompson, he was born in Castleton Parish. He was an innkeeper in Newcastleton. In 1851 he was innkeeper at about 45 North Hermitage Street. In 1861 he is recorded as 'Proprietor of Houses' at about 8 North Hermitage Street. He was on the Town Committee of Management. In 1857 he married Agnes, daughter of farmer William Kyle. Their children included: William (1859–1938), a mason; Thomas (b.1857); and Janet (1865–77). George (18th/19th C.) carter in Hawick. He and his son Sandy were also known for their involvement in smugggling. A story is told of how he evaded the exciseman in Lochmaben by running into a blacksmith's shop, grabbing a hammer and breaking open the cask, which the locals rushed to drink from. On another occasion he was crossing Eskdale Moor on horseback, leading another horse laden with kegs of liquor, which he had to abandon when he was chased for five miles before losing his pursuers. He paid the cart tax roll in Hawick in 1791. He was listed in Hawick along with Alexander as owners of 2 work horses on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He may be the George who married Margaret Noble (who died in 1808) and whose children included: Alexander (b.1771); James (b.1773); and Mary (b.1777). He is probably the George, son of the deceased Alexander, who died in 1822, aged 76. Henry (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1690 he witnessed a baptism for Andrew Scott. He married Isobel Robson and their children included John (b.1689). He may have witnessed a baptism in 1691 for Robert. Henry (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Craikshiel in 1726 when his daughter Janet was baptised. Henry (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Woodburn in 1757. His children included: Margaret (b.1748); John (b.1750); Janet (b.1752); Janet (b.1754); Helen (b.1757); and William (b.1760). Henry (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He was at West Burnfoot in 1744. He married Margaret Thomson and their children included: Isabel (b.1744); William (b.1746); Thomas (b.1749); Henry (b.1750); Catherine (b.1753); and Helen (b.1755). J. (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton who subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. He was probably closely related to Robert, who also subscribed. James (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1776 he married Margaret Scott, who was from Jedburgh Parish. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick. 2 unnamed children of his died in 1810. James (b.1809) son of Thomas and Janet Thomson. He was innkeeper of the Black Bull on North Hermitage Street in Newcastleton in 1851, living with his sister Jane and Brother Andrew. He was also listed there in 1852. Jane (b.1815) daughter of Thomas and Janet Thomson and brother of James. She married William Nichol, but was already a widow by 1851. She had children Mary Anne, Thomas and Betty. She was living with her innkeeper brother on North Hermitage Street in Newcastleton in 1951, but by 1861 was innkeeper herself. Her inn was at about 45 North Hermitage Street, and called the Black Bull. Jenny (18th/19th C.) recorded in the story of the disputed Common Riding of 1809. A bucketful of material from her byre was used to pelt Captain Campbell and others of the 'royalist' party as they rode up the Loan. She was presumably the wife of a man with fields up the Loan. John (16th C.) notary in 1528 to an agreement between James Murray of Falahill and Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch, signed at Selkirk. Other witnesses included the Vicars of Selkirk and Hawick. Probably the same 'sir John' witnessed a document in 1530 for Robert Turnbull of Philiphaugh and was recorded as a chaplain when he witnessed a document related to an action against Patrick Murray of Falahill. He was recorded as 'sir' in 1532 when he held a tenement in Selkirk and in 1535 when he witnessed a document for Walter Scott of Roberton. He also witnessed an agreement in 1536 between Richard Bothwell, Parson of Ashkirk, and Simon Shortreed, Vicar of Ashkirk. In 1539 he was notary for an instrument among Scotts, relating to the illegitimacy of Thomas, son to Adam Scott. In 1540 he witnessed an agreement between Katherine Scott of Colifort and John Cranston of that Ilk. John (18th C.) resident at Penchrise. He probably married Janet Blaikie in Cavers Parish in 1734. His son John was baptised in 1734. Nanny (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick, who lived in one of the former houses at the top of the Vennel (later Morrison Place). She had a reputation for being a witch. A story is told of how a young girl of about 12 (daughter of Charles Miller, Church Officer at the Green Kirk) annoyed her, causing her to utter a mild curse, so that she got the blame when the girl was seized with fits. Rev. John Young insisted in bringing her along to pray at the girl's bedside, and the girl later recovered. She apparently got angry when she next saw the minister, Kennedy speculating that 'she still wished to be feared by her neighbours, and was therefore anxious that her credit as a witch should be kept up'. She could be the Agnes, daughter of William and Helen Laidlaw who was baptised in Hawick in 1729. Robert (17th C.) resident in Ashkirk Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. He married Margaret Allan and their children included Thomas (b.1691) and Robert (b.1696). The witnesses in 1691 were hard to read (perhaps Thomas and Henry Mitchellhill). Robert (d.bef. 1766) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Girnwood in 1757 and Eilrig in 1764. His widow was recorded at Chisholme in 1766 when his last child was born posthumously. His children included Isobel (b.1755), William (b.1757), Robert (b.1759), Thomas (b.1761), James (b.1764) and John (b.1766). Robert (1782/3–1858) from Selkirk, he was a farmer and carter in Newcastleton. He was probably the Mitchellhill listed as 'R., Castleton' who subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. He was listed as a carter in Newcastleton among heads of households in 1835–41. In 1841 and 1851 he was on Douglas Square. He emigrated to Galt, Ontario, where he died. He married Margaret Murray, who died in 1882, aged 94. Their children included: Thomas (1810/1–24); Robert (1818/9–42); Jane (b.1823/4); July; and Margaret (1830/1–43). Robert (b.1787/8) from Jedburgh, he was an agricultural labourer in Denholm in 1841. By 1851 he was listed as a pensioner at 'Guide Post' cottages at Spittal-on-Rule. His wife was Margaret and their children included: Mary (b.1831/2); Isabel (b.1834/5); Robert (b.c.1836); William (b.1837/8); and Agnes (b.1840/1). Thomas (d.bef. 1841) proprietor of the Black Bull in Newcastleton in Pigot's 1825/6 and 1837 directories. He was also listed as an innkeeper in Newcastleton among heads of households in 1835. He married Janet Thomson and their children included: James (b.1809); Mary (b.1811); William (b.c.1812), a farm labourer; Jane (b.1815), who married William Nichol and later ran the inn; and Andrew (b.c.1820), who was running the inn in 1841. William (17th/18th C.) recorded as servitor to William Ogilvie in Branxholme. In 1719 he was recorded as 'workman in Branxholmtoun' and was 'in Branxholtoun' in 1725. He married 'Marion' Laidlaw in Hawick in 1718; she was recorded as 'servitrix to James Griebe in Todshawhaugh. Their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1720, with witnesses Robert Scott (tenant in Branxholme Town) and William Thomson (in Newmill). His wife is recorded as 'Helen' in the baptismal records for their children: Robert (b.1719); Thomas (b.1725); Jean (b.1727); Agnes (b.1729); and William (b.1739). The witnesses in 1719 were William Cunningham and 'servant' Walter Scott and in 1725 were James and Walter Crow. William (18th/19th C.) working man from the Newmill area, who set up a Sunday School there along with James Ruickbie. He could be related to the earlier William from Branxholme Town. He is probably the William who witnessed a baptism in 1774 for James Easton from Branxholme and in 1773 and 1776 for Thomas Rutherford from Branxholme. He may be the William who married Helen Murray and whose children included Agnes (b.1775), Helen (b.1777) and Margaret Helen (b.1781). The witnesses in 1777 were the whole congregation. William (1859–1938) son of Andrew and Agnes Kyle, he was born in Castleton. He worked as a mason. He married Isabella Bell and their son William (1898–1918) died of wounds in France (also written 'Mitchaelhill' and 'Mitchelhill'; sometimes formerly recorded as just 'Mitchill').

Mitchell's Ford (mi-chulz-fōrd) n. former ford across the Teviot, situated a little south of a line joining Midshiels with Eastcote (marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Mitchell's Gless (mi-chulz-gles) n. Mitchell Glass, glazier's based in Hawick. It was founded by Robert Mitchell in about 1873 and became the oldest established glaziers in Scotland. The firm was continued by Robert's son Alexander, and then by the Fisher family.

Mitchell's Hole see Mitchell's Slack

Mitchell's Slack (mi-chulz-slawk) n. former name of a hollow near Southfield, said to have been a place where Covenanters held secret sermons in the 17th century. It is also known as 'Mitchell's Hole' or 'Howe'. The name is said to have been given to commemorate Covenanter James Mitchell, with the suggestion that he preached here; however, there is no evidence that he ever visited Hawick. He tried to assassinate Archbishop Sharp in 1668, and was executed in 1678.

Mitchels see Midshiels

Mitchel's (mi-chulz) n. former carrier's business. In the early 19th century they travelled twice a week, both ways, between Hawick and Carlisle.

Mitchelson (mi-chul-sin) n. Andrew (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 as 'Andrew Michelsone', when David Scott, called 'Lady', in Stirches had a remission for a raid on lands at Blackhall (or Blackhaugh) tenanted by him and John 'Spedane'. It is unclear whether this was in Rulewater or Ewesdale or elsewhere. George 'Geordie' (16th/17th C.) John (16th/17th C.) probably resident of Liddesdale. In 1603 he was 'Geordie Miitchelstoun' when there was a complaint that he and others had raided 'Sewingdene' in 1601, stealing livestock and goods and injuring several people; 'Cubbie's Archie', servant of Simon Elliot of Binks, was the leader of the group, which also contained Armstrongs. George (17th C.) tenant at Sorbietrees in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Rev. James (d.1625) brother of John of Middleton, he graduated from Edinburgh University in 1605 and became minister at Hassendean in 1611. He was translated to Bathans (Yester) in 1613 and was a member of the Assembly in 1618. He married Eupham Borthwick (who died in 1627) and their children were John, Margaret, William and James. James (17th C.) joint tenant with David Goldie of the farms of Ettleton and Millholm in Liddesdale in 1632. John (15th/16th C.) recorded as resident of Oakwood in 1502 when Alexander Scott had remission for stealing a horse from him. Thomas (17th C.) listed on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls as resident of the lands of Castleton. Thomas (d.bef. 1696) probably farmer in the lower Borthwick valley. In 1696 his widow, a Riddell whose first name is not given, was renting half of the farm of Wiltonburn from the Duchess of Buccleuch. Her cautioner was Robert Scott (also farmer at Wiltonburn), suggesting a close relationship. Note that in 1694 1/3 of Wiltonburn was being rented by Bessie Scott, widow of James Riddell, who seems likely to have been related to his wife. William (17th C.) resident at Roan in Castleton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694 (also spelled 'Michelsone', 'Mitchelsone' and 'Mitchelsoune').

Mithag (mi-thag) n. Alan of Hartwoodburn (16th C.) recorded in 1539/40 when he had a commission from the Dean of Jedburgh regarding a slander brought against him about stealing and eating some sheep. The list of friends who would support him included Thomas Elliot, Mark Ker in Kippielaw, William Scott in Hartwoodmyres, Walter Scott in Headshaw, Thomas Lauder, John Chisholme, David Todrig, Ninian Brydon and David Mithag. There were several other men with this same surname in Selkirk at that time (the pronunciation is unclear).

the Moat see the Mote

Moat Crescent (mō'-kre-sin') n. street named after the nearby Mote (or Moat), with houses built in 1927.

Moat Croft (mō'-kroft) n. old name for fields extending from Westport to Haggishaa, today including land from Drumlanrig Home to the south side of Rosebank Road.

the Moat Stakes (thu-mō'-stāks) n. race run as part of the Cornet's Races on Common Riding Friday from at least 1894.

Moat Park (mō'-pawrk) n. public park around the Mote (or Moat), also known as Moat Croft Public Park. Most of the land was gifted by the Duke of Buccleuch in 1911, with a ceremony on Coronation Day, and the rest purchased in 1913 by the Council. George Wood, nurseryman of Wilton Lodge Gardens, won the contract to lay out the gardens in 1914, to plans by Edinburgh City gardener John McHattie. Renovations to the Loan in the periodi 1957–77 made it easier to see the park.

mockit (mo-kee', -ki') pp., poet. mocked – '. . . an' they bowet the knee afore him, an' mocket him, sayin', Hail, King o' the Jews!' [HSR].

mockrife (mok-rīf, -rif, reef) adj., arch. scoffing, scornful – '. . . nar sits in the settle o' the mockriffe' [HSR], 'Let cleverality, mockreef folk that are unco smert . . . ' [ECS] (there are spelling variants).

Modrell (mod-rel) n. Mungo (17th C.) recorded among the poor of Hassendean Parish in 1694, when he was at Hassendeanbank. His surname could be a transcription error for some more familiar name.

Moffat (mo-fi') n. town about 40 miles to the west of Hawick, in the south-eastern part of Dumfries & Galloway. Receiving Burgh of Barony status only in 1648, it developed as a market town on the main west-coast routes to Glasgow and Edinburgh. Centrepiece of the town is the magnificent Moffat Ram statue. The nearby sulphurous spring was popular for its purported health benefits in the 18th and 19th centuries. Population 2,342 (1991) – ' 'Tween Moffat hills and lofty Cheviot' [JH].

Moffat (mo-fi') n. Adam (17th C.) piper who was rebuked by Ashkirk Session in 1638 for 'pyping at bridals'. He was ordered to appear at the Kirk door wrapped in sheets, with bare feet and legs, and 'efter the pepil wes in, to go to the place of repentance, and so to continue Sabbathlie induring their wills'. Arthur (b.1803/4) from Tundergarth, he was farmer at Leahaugh Cottage in Castleton Parish. In 1861 he is recorded there as farmer of 6 acres. His wife was Janet and their children included Jane, Walter, Janet, Margaret, James and Helen Agnes. David (16th C.) recorded in Synton in 1581 when he was witness to an agreement between Margaret, widow of William Scott of Burnfoot and her son William. George (18th C.) listed as footman at Synton in 1792, when he was working for Charles Riddell. George (18th/19th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. In 1789 he married Isabella Murray. Hugh (b.c.1780) listed on the 1801 Militia ballot as 'Valet to John C. Scott of Sinton In the Regt. of Edinbr. Roy. Lt. Vol.' This means that he was already a volunteer with the Royal Edinburgh Volunteer Light Dragoons and hence excepted from the Militia selection. James (15th/16th C.) recorded at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1502 when the Coroner, William Cranston, was fined for failing to arrest him.

His name is given as 'Jacobo moffet' in Holydean or Nisbet. James (17th C.) leased part of the farm of Todshawhill from the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1693. James (18th C.) married Agnes Hood in Wilton Parish in 1746. James (1720/1–1779) son of James, from whom he took over as tenant of Howpasley farm. In 1744 he moved to Garwald in Dumfriesshire, rented from the Duke of Buccleuch. He also farmed at Meikleholm for a while. He married Margaret Borthwick (1732/3–1806). His children included: John (1772–1823), who took over as farmer at Garwald; William (1773–1847), who farmed at Mosspeeble and Craik; and Margaret (1762/3–1855), who married Rev. Dr. William Brown of Eskdalemuir, and died in Hawick. James (18th/19th C.) cavalry trumpeter who rode up the Slitrig valley and into Liddesdale to rouse the volunteers there during the False Alarm of 1804. He could be friend of Caleb Ruthrford who was said to have been an army trumpeter who settled in Hawick and became a professional fiddler at weddings etc. He was probably the James who married Jane Johnson, with children baptised in Hawick including: William (b.1799); William (again, b.1800); and Jane (b.1802). He may be the James whose son George died in Hawick in 1802 and who himself died in 1834. James (1811–76) elder son of William. He and his brother James helped their father farm at Craik, as well as Garwald over in Dumfriesshire. John (1677/8–1728) tenant at Howpasley. He was said to be descended from Thomas, who received a grant of lands in Meggat in the 14th century. He was recorded at Howpasley in the baptismal records of most of his children in Roberton Parish. He married Helen Borthwick (1677/8–1754). He was succeeded at Howpasley by his son James (1721–79, baptised in Roberton) and had 7 other children, including Janet, Mary and Euphemia (1708/9–97). Other children baptised in Roberton who were probably his include Margaret (b.1716), Elspeth (b.1718), Margaret (again, b.1721) and Bettie (b.1722). He was buried at Watcarrick Churchyard. John (18th C.) married Margaret Rutherford in Kirkton Parish in 1763. John (1813–82) son of William. He helped his father and brother James farm at Craik and Garwald. In 1869 he was made a Life Member of the Archæological Society. He was still tenant farmer at Craik in the 1870s. He married Anne Laidlaw (d.1915) and their children included: William (1864–1932); James (d.1941), who married Janet Robina Brydon; and Anne (d.1853). John (1859) born at Old Hopsrig, Westerkirk, in 1887 he married Elizabeth McInnes. Their children included: John (b.1883), born in Canonbie; Mary (b.1889), born in Hawick; Peter (1890–1968), born at Branxholme Park; Janet (b.1892), born at Branxholme Park; and Margaret (b.1894), born in Hawick. His wife may be the Elizabeth McIness who wrote the poem 'A Legend of Hawick'. Ken (1968/9–) attended Newcastleton and Hawick High Schools, he is owner of the Johnny Armstrong Gallery and Borderlands Museum at Teviothead. In 2023 he produced the short film 'The Highway to Hermitage', following the possible route of Mary, Queen of Scots in 1566. Nicholas (d.1270) Archdeacon of Teviotdale in the period 1245–70, referred to as being 'de Moffat'. He witnessed a charter for Soutra Hospital in 1255. He was bishop-elect of Glasgow twice, the first time (1259) travelling to Rome, but failing to be consecrated (probably because of political infighting among his travelling companions) and the second time (1268–70) because he died before consecration. He was buried at Tyninghame, East Lothian. Robert (c.1380–c.1438) Bachelor of Canon Law who was nephew of Matthew Glendinning, Bishop of Glasgow. He was connected with Adam and hence also to Thomas and another Robert, who were all associated with the Moffat area. In 1403 he was also described being 'of noble birth' when there was a request for him to he given a canonry of Glasgow, although he already held the perpetual vicarage of Peebles. In 1405 there was a request for him for the Prebend of Ancrum, although he already held Peebles. In 1409 Archibald, Earl of Douglas, requested for 'his clerk' the Church of Bothwell, to be held along with the Vicarage of Peebles. He appears to have been a student in Avignon and perhaps elsewhere until 1410/1 when appointed papal chaplain. He held the Provostry of Bothwell in about 1410, but was involved in litigation for this position. He was a clerk associated with the Earl of Douglas in the 1410s. He attended a chapter meeting in Glasgow in 1425. He founded the chaplaincy of St. Cuthbert in 1435/6 . His death was falsely report in 1431, but he was still alive in 1537. Robert (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Janet Tait, who was from Yarrow Parish. Their children included John (b.1654) and Janet (b.1656). The witnesses in 1656 were 'John ...' and 'Robert ...'. Robert of Hermiston (18th C.) recorded as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1761. It is unclear where he came from, or how long he owned these local lands. Thomas (b.c.1780) resident of Hawick according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia. Perhaps the same Thomas was butler at Borthwickbrae in 1812, according to the Militia ballot in Roberton Parish. William (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Craikhope in 1723, 1726, 1728 and 1736. He is probably the William who married Margaret Shortreed in Robertion in 1722. His children included: Helen (b.1723); Helen (again, b.1726); Margaret (b.1728); Mary (b.1730); John (b.1736); and William (b.1741). William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Deanfoot in 1777 when his son William was baptised. William (1773–1847) son of James, tenant farmer at Garwald in Dumfriesshire, and formerly at Howpasley. He became tenant at Mosspeeble in 1800 and then Craik in 1817. He was joint tenant there with his sons John and James from 1833. In addition he ran the farm at Garwald after the death of his older brother John in 1823. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He married Jane Grieve. His sons James (1811–76) and John (1813–82) continued to farm after him. He also had 1 other son and 6 daughters. William (1864–1932) born at Craik farm, he took over Garwald when he reached the age of 21. He became known as a sheep judge, as well as a pursuer of country sports. In 1911 he bought the farm of Georgefield and Glendinning, and later purchased the farm of Garwald, which the family had long tenanted. He married Alison Gray and their children included: John (b.1892), who sold Georgefield and Glendinning in 1947; Mary; Anne; and Alexander Gray (b.1905), who sold Garwald in 1950 (also formerly 'Moffet').

Moffat Well (mo-fi'-wel) n. sulphurous spring near Moffat, once believed to have healing powers. There are notices in Hawick's 18th century parish records of disbursements to help sick people travel there. It was discovered in 1633 and access improved in 1758. It was a draw for visitors until the 1920s.

moggans (mo-ginz) n., pl., arch. the legs (noted by J. Jamieson).

Moinnet (moi-net) n. James (15th C.) witness to the charter of 1494 in which James of Kirkurd granted the lands of Galalaw to his son David. It is unclear whether his surname has a modern equivalent.

moistify (moi-sti-fI) v., poet. to moisten – 'Where ye will get a whisky soss To moistify your middle' [JR].

mole-catcher (mōl-kaw-chur) n., arch. someone earning their living from catching moles. From mediæval times until the mid-20th century this was a common occupation in rural areas. There were at least a couple employed in Denholm alone around 1900.

mole-heid (mōl-heed) n., arch. a mole-head, dolt, stupid person – 'Dogsrabbit it, what's keepit ye, ye lazy molehead?' [WNK], 'Hae dune, ye molehead, Wilton Kirk's comin' over Teiot Brig' [RM].

Moll (mol) n. horse owned by William Nixon, and rode by him when he was Cornet in 1813. It was also known as 'Molly'. In later years it was often seen with Nixon's groom, Wullie Bulloch, who doted over it. The pair were painted together by Adam Brown.

Molle (mol, mow) n. former parish, forming what is now the southernmost part of Morebattle, which was united with Morebattle in the 17th century. It was owned by Eschina de Londonis (or de Molle) in the mid-12th century, and part of it was gifted to Kelso Abbey around 1190. Some of the lands there were also held by the Lovel family. The lands were also briefly owned by Adam of Rule, through his wife Johanna. They later passed to the Kers. Liulf, son of Uchtred, Lord of Mow, was a witness to the charter of about 1120 founding Selkirk Abbey. The Molle family married into the families of Avenel, Maleverer, de Lincoln, de Vesci, Scott and others, and tracing their lineage is difficult. The names Mow Hope, Mow Kirk (granted before 1152 to Kelso Abbey by Uchtred son of Liulf) and Mow Stell are lost, but it survives in Mowhaugh on the Bowmont Water. Members of the eponymous family crop up in local documents, e.g. 'William Mow in Mowmaynis' was part of inquest for lands in Rulewater in 1610 (also spelled 'Mow' and variants; the name probably comes f/om the Old Welsh 'mael' for 'bare hill', and is first recorded in the mid-12th century).

Molle (mol) n. Anselm (12th C.) formerly of Whitton, he gained part of the lands at Molle, granted in a charter during the reign of William I (probably 1170–90), which was witnessed by Roger, son of 'John de Hawic', as well as Robert of Wilton and Adam of Ashkirk; this was one of the first mentions of anyone who came from Hawick. His son Richard was also a witness. In about 1193 he granted lands of Molle (or Mow) to Kelso Abbey and later had a dispute with Kelso Abbey over teinds at Molle. His relationship with Eschina is unclear (it may be that they held different parts of the lands of Molle and were unrelated). His name may also have been written

'Ansold'. His wife was Agnes. His daughter Isolda married Alexander and had a part of Molle in the early 1200s, while his main heiress was Matilda, who married Richard de Lincoln. He was ancestor of the family of Mow of that Ilk. Eschina also 'Eschyne' (12th/13th C.) daughter of Thomas de Londonis (who held the office of Doorward under William the Lion, and his ancestors took the name of Dorward) and Eschelyn (daughter of Uchtred de Molle), she was also known as 'Eschina de Londonis'. In some accounts her father is given as Uchtred, son of Liulf. She was born in Roxburghshire and held lands at Huntlaw and Molle on the Bowmont Water. She may have first married Robert 'de Croc'. She married Walter Fitz Alan, 1st High Steward of Scotland, who held 'Mow' about 1160, as well as lands at Hassendean and at Renfrew; he died in 1177. She had a charter of Molle in 1186. Around 1190 she gifted part of Molle to Kelso Abbey. She lastly married Henry 'de Mow', the 2 settling a dispute with Kelso Abbey about 1200 and still later is described as a widow. Alan, her son with Walter, succeeded to most of his father's lands, as well as the office of Steward of Scotland. With Henry she had 4 daughters: Margaret (buried at Paisley Abbey, where she had given land); Eschina; Avicia (or Alicia), who probably married Richard Scott, ancestor of the Scotts of Buccleuch; and Ceclia, who married Simon Mauleverer and had a charter of Molle in about 1250. Isolda (13th C.) daughter of Anselm and younger sister of Matilda. She married Alexander (son of William, son of Edgar) and they had a daughter, Christina, who married Almer Scott of Mow, who may have been related to Richard Scott of Mow. Uchtred (12th C.) son of Liulf. He granted the Church of Molle (present day Morebattle) to Kelso Abbey in the mid-1100s. He perambulated the boundaries himself, along with Aldred, the Dean of Teviotdale. He may have been the father of Eschina (earlier written 'de Molle', 'Maule' and variants).

molligrumphs (mo-lee-grumfs) n., arch. a fit of bad temper, snit fit – 'She's taen the molligrumphs' [GW] (also mulligrumphs).

mollop (mo-lop) v., arch. to toss the head disdainfully, indulge in antics.

mollops (mo-lops) n., pl., arch. antics, capers – 'Set ee up wui eer feiky mollups an eer friggeen an falderals! Some folk heh sic a tredd wui theresels, – primpin!' [ECS] (cf. mollets).

Monaghan (mo-nu-hin) n. Fr. James (1814/5–52) born in County Monaghan, Ireland, he served as Hawick's first Catholic clergyman since before the Reformation, being the priest at S.S. Mary & David's 1846–47. He held morning services every other Sunday, as well as lectures in the evening. He also preached in alternate weeks at a temporary chapel in St. Boswells, as well as ministering to Catholics in in Jedburgh and Kelso. This being a strain on his health, he was transferred to Dumfries and then Edinburgh, where he died suddenly.

Monanday (mu-nin-dā, mō-nin-dā) n., arch. Monday – 'As Aw was gaun up Hawick Loan Yeh Monanday at morn . . . ' [JSB] (cf. the more modern Mondi; derived from the Anglo-Saxon).

Moncrieff (mon-kreef) n. David (1771–1834) youngest son of Annan minister William and Ann Hardie. His brother William Hardie was minister at Annan after their father. While he was a youth, he swam across the Solway, to and from Bowness, and was known for walking long distances. He became a draper, having a business in Blackburn, from which he retired to live in Hawick with his sister, Marion Moncrieff. He was proprietor of properties in Moncrieff's Close from 1812, and made an Honorary Burgess in 1818 for benevolence to the poor. His property is marked on Wood's 1824 map at about No. 63 High Street. It is unclear what the family's original connection was to Hawick, but it could possibly be through his mother Ann Hardie (who died in 1821, aged 86). W.N. Kennedy wrote about him in 1862. It is said that he was a great benefactor of the poor and unfortunate, and gave many contributions anonymously. He also befriended and helped Tom Jenkins, offering money so he could win the bidding on a Greek dictionary in an auction in Hawick, helping him with financial support while studying in Edinburgh and later writing him a letter of reference. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. After settling in Hawick he made an annual visit to Arran, where he would attend the Masonic lodge. His brother married Jean Laidlaw, who died at Falnash, and was probably daughter of Robert Laidlaw, farmer there; their daughter (his niece) Mary married Rev. Robert Shaw of Ewes (and earlier preacher at Teviotdale). He was described as having a 'face at once round and ruddy, cheerful and benevolent', being 'stout in person, clad always in black attire, with breeches and silk stockings to match, carried a gold-headed cane, adorned with an eyelet hole, through which a string and tassel were pendant'. He appears to have married

Helen Webster, and they had a daughter, Margaret. His curling stone, inscribed with his name, is in the Museum, donated by William Young in 1868. John (d.1697), W.S. acted as agent to the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1696, for the rentals around Branxholme. Margaret (b.1800) daughter of David, grand-daughter of Rev. William of Annan, and niece of Marion. She presented a cloth for the communion table at Hawick Free Kirk. She lived with her aunt at 63 High Street. Marion (1768–1862) daughter of Rev. William of Annan, and brother of David. She lived at 63 High Street. She was known as a charitable contributor to many causes in Hawick. One story is told of how she was asked to donate to some particular scheme, the organisation of which had taken 4 years, during which time she saved a pound note in her bible, so that she would be sure to have it on hand when the minister called. She was listed as 'Miss Moncrieff' among the local gentry in Pigot's 1837 directory. She presented a communion token mold to the new Hawick Free Kirk in the early 1840s. Her niece Margaret is also recorded presenting a cloth for the communion table. She is probably the 'Miss Marion' involved in a bond with Robert Kerr Elliot of Harwood in 1845. In later age she and her niece were referred to as the 'Misses Moncrieff' (e.g. in Slater's 1852 directory, when they are listed among the local gentry). She also lived for a while with her grand-nieces Anne Janet and Marion Shaw. She died in Hawick at the age of 94 and was buried in the same grave in Annan where her father had been buried 78 years before – 'There's Bailie Nixon, merchant, The Miss Moncrieffs and a', And if ye gang some farther east, Ye'll come to Willie Ha' ' [DJG].

Moncrieff's Close (mon-kreefs-klōs) n. name in use for Tannage Close in the early 19th century, from a family who used to live at the top on the east side, at No. 63 High Street (to confuse matters, the 1858 Ordnance Survey map marks only the top of the street as Moncrieff's Close, with the bottom labelled as Tannage Close).

the Mondi (thu-mun-di) n. sometimes used to refer to the Monday of Common Riding Week. This day has the first of the morning Chases, with the horses leaving the Backdamgate at 6.30 a.m.

moneth (mu-nith) n., arch. month – 'The thwenty day of the moneth of Maij, in the zer of God a thowsande fyf hundreth ... ' [SB1500], '... upon the Fryday befor, being the 24th day of the said moneth, conforme to ancient custome had elected and voted ... ' [BR1706], '... for ane supernumerarie mariage of the said John Hardie upon Isobell Atkine holden upon the first day of the said moneth of Februar' [PR1706], '... to go to Jedburgh Thursday next ye 23 of the moneth to solicit ye Brethren ... ' [PR1722].

Money (mu-nee) n. Rev. Walter Strang (b.1913) born at Cathcart, Glasgow, son of James M., he was educated in Glasgow. He graduated M.A. from Glasgow University in 1937 and B.D. in 1941, was licensed by the Presbytery of Glasgow in 1940, served as assistant at Glasgow Stamperland 1940–43 and was inducted as minister at Larbert West in 1943. He became minister of Wilton South Church in 1951. In 1958 he moved to Saltcoats Landsborough. In 1943 he married Elizabeth Lennon McColl Young (b.1914) and their children were Robert Strang (b.1945) and Elizabeth Helen Strang (b.1948).

monie (mo-, mō-nee) adj., pron. many – 'there's ower monie o ee', 'how monie times hev A got ti tell ee?', 'And because her fact'ries mony ... ' [??], 'Say, am I doom'd to live my lane, Amang sae mony braw things? [JR], 'And spent the night in rite and spell, And mony a nameless thing' [JTe], 'An' mony a, mony a bottle's taen The tippler's drouth to sloken' [JoHa], '... monimental (mo-nee-men'-al) adj., arch. monumental, drunk – 'He was fair monimental' [GW] (see monumental).

Monipennie (mu-nee-pe-nee) n. John (16th/17th C.) Scottish chronicler and compiler. His 'Certeine matters concerning the realme of Scotland, composed together' (c.1594, 1603) contained 'The names of the principall clannes, and surnames of the borderers not landed' (although both 'landed' and 'not landed' are included). This represents a valuable listing of the important men in each family at the end of the 16th century, and includes Olivers, Armstrongs, Elliots, Nixons, Croziers, Scotts, etc. He also lists 'The names of the barons, lairds, and chiefe gentlemen in euerie sherifdome'. Although first published about 1594, the list appears to have been compiled somewhat earlier.

the Monkey (thu-mung-kee) n. nickname in use in the 19th century. It was used for the proprietor of the Ewe and Lamb, and perhaps for others before him.

the Monkeyman's (thu-mung-kee-munz) n. former popular name for the hill where Weensgate Drive and Marmion Road are now located, once used by Hawick's youth for sledding in the winter.

the Monkeys (thu-mung-keez) n. popular name for the Ewe and Lamb bar in Orrock Place. This apparently arose from a former proprietor, Mr. Carruthers, father of the 1933 Cornet's Lass, who was nicknamed 'Monkey Carruthers' (perhaps because of his gait), and hence regulars spoke about 'gaun ti the Monkey's'.

Monkland (mungk-lind) n. former name for the Monk's Croft.

the Monk's Croft (thu-mungks-kroft) n. former farm adjacent to the farmhouse at Hassendeanbank. The rents belonged to Melrose Abbey, as part of the agreement going back to the 12th century. In the time of William the Lion it was restricted to the pasturage of 200 ewes, 16 oxen and 4 cows. It was listed in 1582 among lands for which Robert Elliot of Horsleyhill demanded the charters of his father from the widow of Sir Walter Ker of Cessford It was referred to as 'a half merk land in Clarelaw called Mounkland' in about 1620 when Walter Scott had a charter from the Commendator of Melrose. The land became part of Minto Parish when Hassendean was suppressed in 1690. The lands were referred to as 'Monks meadow' in the 1692 rental lists of the Duchess of Buccleuch in Hassendean, when they were 'evicted by the minister for his glebe'. William Elliot and John Elliot were there in 1694. It was farmed by the Dicksons of Hassendeanburn in the 18th century. The name presumably derives from an association with the monks of Melrose Abbey and the former tower nearby (also written 'Monkscroft'; it was 'Munkscroaft' in 1694; it is presumably the farm adjacent to Knowetownhead, labelled 'Mountcroft' on Stobie's 1770 map).

Monk's Flats (mungks-flawts) n. former name for lands in Hassendean Parish, recorded as 'Monekesflattes' in a charter around the late 1220s. It is likely to be the same as the Monk's Croft.

Monk's Meadow (mungks-me-dō) n. another name for Monk's Croft, mentioned in 1692.

the Monk's Toor (thu-mungks-toor, -tow-ur) n. the Monk's Tower, former name for the tower at Hassendean, so called beacuse of the local connection with Melrose Abbey. It was set up as a 'hospital' for pilgrims journeying to Melrose Abbey, perhaps as early as the reign of William I. The land was granted by Melrose Abbey to Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme and his wife Janet Beaton, as confirmed by royal charter in 1574. It is referred to at that time as 'the tower called Hassindenetour or Monkstour'. A branch of Scotts lived there for at least the next several decades. In 1580 a transaction involving Robert Scott of Alton was witnessed there; it was then referred to as 'the monk tour'. Scott of Satchells lists 'John Scot of Monks-tower, brother to old William Scott of Altoun' as one of the supporters of Buccleuch around the late 16th century. The 1634 service of heirs for Scott of Buccleuch lists the fortalice called 'Hassenden-tour alias Monkis-tour' aong their possessions and it is so recorded in the service of heirs for Mary of Buccleuch in 1653 and for Anne in 1661. The 'touer and fortalice called Hassendane tower, alias Monkstower' is recorded in 1693 in the ratification of the charter to James Scott, Earl of Dalkeith, as heir to his mother. Its site is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map, by the road to the south of Hassendean farm. Stones from the ruined tower were used in the construction of Hassendean farmhouse in the 19th century.

Monk's Pond (mungks-pond) n. name for area between Bedrule and Ruecastle. Presumably there was once a pond there, perhaps with a connection to Jedburgh Abbey.

the Monk's Well (thu-mungks-wel) n. spring located near the old Wheel Kirk.

Monmouth (mon-mmooth, -mowth) n. familiar name for the Duke of Monmouth and Buccleuch, James Scott nee Crofts.

Monograptus riccartonensis (mo-nō-grap-tus-ri-kar-tin-en-sis) n. species of graptolite fossil, identified by Charles Lapworth in 1876 in rocks from the 'Riccarton Beds' at Elliotsfield. It is named for the locality of Riccarton.

monster (mon-stur) n., arch. an abnormally large child – 'An overgrown or unnaturally large child is so called in Hawick. The word carries with it the impression of stupidity as well as hugeness' [ECS].

Montagu-Douglas-Scott (mon-ta-gew-dug-lis-sko') n. George William (1866–1947) 3rd son of William Henry, 6th Duke of Buccleuch and younger brother of John Charles, the 7th Duke. He was Captain in the 10th Hussars and fought in the Boer War. He was given the honour of running up the Union Jack on the roof of the Presidency at Bloemfontein. He was Deputy Lieutenant of Roxburghshire and J.P. in Roxburghshire. In WWI he was Lieut.-Col. in the Border Horse Yeomanry. He received the O.B.E. in 1919. In 1903 he married Elizabeth Emily Manners, daughter of the Duke of Rutland. Their children were: Phylis Anne, Jeanetta Ruth; Marjorie Katherine; Lt.-Col. John Henry; and Lt.-Col. Claud Everard Walter. Henry John (1832–1905) 2nd son of Walter Francis, 5th Duke of Buccleuch. He was usually referred to as 'Lord Henry', and was created 1st Baron Montagu of Beaulieu. He was M.P. for Selkirkshire 1861–68 and for South Hampshire 1868–84. He was also Captain of the Midlothian Yeomanry and served as a Justice of the Peace in Roxburghshire. He was also Patron of the Liddesdale Curling Club. In 1865 he married Cecily Susan, 2nd daughter of John Stuart-Wortley-Mackenzie, 2nd Lord Wharncliffe. Their children were: John Walter Edward (b.1866), who married Cecil Victoria Constance Kerr, daughter of 9th Marquess of Lothian, and secondly Alice Pearl Crake; Robert Henry (b.1867), who married Alice Fisher; Rachel Cecily (b.1868), who married Henry William, Lord Forster; and James Francis (b.1873), who died young. John Douglas (1809–60) Lord Scott, son of Charles, 4th Duke and younger brother of Walter the 5th Duke of Buccleuch. He inherited the estate of Dunchurch near Rugby. He entered the Grenadier Guards in 1827, becoming Lieutenant and Captain in 1831 and retiring in 1833. He was also a member of the Jedforest Club. A Tory in politics, he was said to be dashing in appearance and having a great command of language. He stood as a candidate in the 1832 post-Reform Act election in Roxburghshire, but was defeated by Capt. George Elliot. After voting himself in Hawick in 1832, he claimed he was attacked by a mob, who tried to pull him from his horse and was struck on the cheek by a rock; those on the other side of the story claimed that the incident started when his servant struck at the people around him on leaving the Tower Inn. He was also in Hawick for the 1835 election, when there were near riots around the Tower Knowe; in this election he defeated Capt. Elliot of Minto by 76 votes (and there was much accusation of 'faggot' voters at the time). He remained M.P. until 1837, but thereafter was never induced to stand again. He was also known as a keen sportsman, yachtsman, angler and hunter. His prowess as a hunter and success in breeding racing horses are described in H.H. Dixon's 'Field and Fern or Scottish Flocks and Herds (South)' (1865). In 1836 he married Alicia Anne, elder daughter of John Spottiswood; she composed the tune for 'Annie Laurie' as well as other songs, and died in 1900. He had no children. He is buried at Dunchurch, Warwickshire, where his wife designed a sun-dial in his memory. Verses were written about him standing in the 1832 election – '. . . And shall we then give the dear freedom we've won To vapourising bullies like booby Lord John?' John Charles (1864–1935) 2nd son of William, the 6th Duke, He trained for the Navy, passing his entrance examination at the age of 12, and served for several years at sea, reaching the rank of Lieutenant at the age of 19. However, his naval career was cut short by the accidental death of his elder brother Walter Henry in 1886, when he became Earl of Dalkeith. After marriage he settled at Eildon Hall, while being heir to the Dukedom. He became the 7th Duke of Buccleuch on the death of his father in 1914. He was a keen country sportsman, particularly of fox hunting. He was Conservative M.P. for Roxburghshire 1895–1906 while Earl of Dalkeith, beating the Liberal candidate Mark Napier. He was Deputy Lieutenant of Roxburgh 1915–35 and also served as a J.P. for Selkirkshire and Roxburghshire. He was also Captain General of the Royal Company of Archers and Honorary Colonel in the Royal Artillery (Territorial Army). He was Lord Clerk Register for Scotland 1926–35. He joined the Jedforest Club in 1889. He was also Honorary President of the Hawick & Wilton Cricket Club and of Hawick R.F.C. He was made an Honorary Burgess in 1904 when the Library was opened, and was present at the unveiling of the Horse Monument in 1914. He also gave the Playing Fields to the Town in 1933. In 1893 he married Margaret Alice Bridgeman, 2nd daughter of Viscount Newport. Their children were: Margaret Ida, who married Adm. Sir Geoffrey Alan brooke Hawkins; Walter John, who succeeded; Lt.-Col. William Walter, who married Rachel Douglas-Home, daughter of the 13th Earl of Home; Sybil Anne, who married Charles Bathurst Hele Phipps; Alice Christabel, who married Henry William Frederick Albert Windsor, 1st Duke of Gloucester (and son of George V) and lived to be 102; Mary Theresa, who married David George Brownlow Cecil, Marquis of Exeter; Angela Christine Rose, who married Vice-Adm. Sir Peter Dawnay; and George Francis John, who married Mary Wina Mannin Bishop. He died at Bowhill and was buried at Dalkeith. Richard Walter John (1954–) 10th Duke of Buccleuch, succeeding on the death of his father in 2007. He long managed the Buccleuch estates as the Earl of Dalkeith. He was also Regimental Trustee of the K.O.S.B., and has been involved in several television and arts bodies. He married Lady Elizabeth Kerr (daughter of the Marquess of Lothian) in 1981; she died in 2023. Their children are: Lady Loiusa; Walter; Lord Charles; and Lady Amabel. Lady Sybil Anne (1899–1990) 4th eldest child of John Charles, 7th Duke of Buccleuch. At the age of 14 she was given the honour of unveiling the Horse Memorial in Hawick. In 1919 she married Charles Bathurst Hele Phipps and they had 4 children. Walter Francis (1806–1884) 5th Duke of Buccleuch and 7th Duke of Queensberry, son of Charles Montagu-Scott. He was born at Dalkeith House and succeeded when he was 13. He was the Honorable Walter Francis Montagu until the death of his elder brother, then had the title of Lord Whitchester until his father became Duke after which he was the Earl of Dalkeith. He was a Commissioner of Selkirkshire (as the Earl of Dalkeith) in 1819. He succeeded to the Buccleuch titles on the death of his father in 1819. His guardian was his uncle, Lord Montagu, and he was sent to Eton to be educated, but had to leave due to ill-health. He later attended St. John's College, Cambridge. He was made an Honorary Burgess when passing through Hawick for the first time in 1821. In 1822 he was host to George IV at Dalkeith House for a fortnight (and repeated this for Queen Victoria in 1842). Celebrations for his coming of age (in 1827) were somewhat tempered by the recent death of his grandmother, Duchess Elizabeth. He subscribed to 3 copies of Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. In 1827 there was a great celebration in Hawick, with an ox roasted at the Tower Knowe, distributed to all comers, along with 500 loaves and a hogshead of ale, with the Town illuminated along with fireworks and a beacon at Crumhaugh Hill. He was made Lord Lieutenant of Midlothian in 1828 and Roxburghshire in 1841. In 1829 he took his seat in the House of Lords as the Earl of Doncaster. and was a staunch Conservative in politics. However, in later years he changed his position and became a supporter of the repeal of the Corn Laws. He had Granton Harbour built in 1835. In 1838 he became Captain-General of the Royal Company of Archers. In 1839 there was a banquet held at Branxholme to celebrate his return from a long trip to Europe. A pavilion in the style of a baronial hall was erected on the Castle green (by Smith of Darnick), able to seat about 1,000 people; the chairman of the event was James Grieve of Branxholme Braes and above the chair was a buck's head with the word 'Bellenden' in gold lettering. Sometimes referred to as 'the Good Duke Walter', among his gifts to the town were Hawick Old Parish Church, the repair of St. Mary's, St. Cuthbert's Episcopal Church, parsonage and school, Buccleuch School, schoolhouse and grounds, St. Mary's School, the sites for the Corn Exchange, Cottage Hospital and the Industrial (Drumlanrig) School, and facilities for the Allan and Dod water works. He performed the turning on ceremonies for both the Allan and Dod supplies. He also remitted customs that were traditionally levied by the Baron, cancelled a debt owed to him by the Road Trust, feued land to the Hawick Working Men's Building Society, and gave fields to the Bowling and Cricket Clubs at minimal rent. He served as a Commissioner of Supply and Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. He became a Privy Councillor in 1842 and Lord Privy Seal in 1842–46 in Sir Robert Peel's administration, and was also President of the Council, as well as being 'Gold Stick' in 2 coronations. He regularly attended the House of Lords, but seldom spoke. He was Colonel of the Edinburgh Militia, the 'Duke's Canaries'. He was also President of the Highland Agricultural Society, the Society of Antiquaries, the Architectural Society of Scotland and the British Association as well as Chancellor of Glasgow University, Vice-President of the Royal Institution for the Encouragement of the Fine Arts and leading member of the Board of Trustees for Manufactures. He was heavily involved in agricultural improvements, and headed the subscription list for enlarging Edinburgh university. He received honorary degrees from Glasgow, Edinburgh and Cambridge Universities. As a member of the Bannatyne Club he funded the publication of the 'Chartulary of Melrose' in 1837. In the 1850s he wrote to the tenants of his farms, urging them to preserve any monuments of antiquity. A dinner was held in his honour in Edinburgh in 1878 on the occasion of his jubilee as landlord, with an illuminated address being signed by 700 tenants. His statue stands in front of St. Giles Kirk in Edinburgh, with a decorated pedestal showing scenes from the history of his family. The Buccleuch Memorial was erected in his honour, Duke Street was named after him, and a portrait of him by Knighton Warren (commissioned by the Council) hangs in the Town Hall. In 1829 he married Lady Charlotte Anne Thynne, youngest daughter of Thomas, 2nd Marquis of Bath, who was Mistress of the Robes to Queen Victoria; she died in 1895, aged 84. Their children were: William Henry Walter (b.1831), who succeeded as 6th Duke; Henry John (b.1832); Walter Charles (b.1834), Captain of the 15th Hussars, who married Anna Maria, daughter of Sir William Edmund Cradock Hartopp; Francis Robert (b.1837), who died aged 2; Charles Thomas (b.1839), Admiral in the Royal Navy; Victoria Alexandrina (b.1844), who married the Marquess of Lothian and secondly married Bertram Talbot; Margaret Elizabeth (b.1846), who married Donald Cameron of Lochiel; and Mary Charlotte (b.1851), who married Walter Rodolph Trefusis. He died at Bowhill after being Duke for an unprecedented 65 years, and was buried at Dalkeith.

Walter Francis John 'Johnnie' (1923–2007) 9th Duke of Buccleuch, son of Walter John, he attended Eton and served in the Navy during WWII. He then studied agriculture and forestry at Oxford and became Director of the Buccleuch Estates in 1949. He served as a Roxburghshire County Councillor 1958–60. He was Conservative M.P. for Edinburgh North, 1960–73, as Earl of Dalkeith. He was also Captain in the Royal Company of Archers, Lord Lieutenant of Roxburgh, Ettrick & Lauderdale, President of the Royal Highland and Agricultural Society for Scotland and served on committees for many benevolent organisations, including advocating for those with diabilities. In 1971 he injured his spine in a hunting accident, and was then confined to a wheelchair. In 1973 he succeeded to the Buccleuch titles on the death of his father. He was then in the House of Lords until the removal of hereditary peers in 1999. He was made a Knight of the Thistle in 1978, and changed his surname back to simply 'Scott'. He married Jane McNeill of Colonsay in 1953 (she had been a famous model) and they had 4 children: Richard, who succeeded; Lord William, who married Hafize Berrin Torolsan; Lady Charlotte-Anne, who married Count Bernard de Castellane; and Lord Damian, who married Elizabeth Powis. He was the biggest landowner in the U.K. (about 400 square miles), and owned many great art treasures (including da Vinci's 'Madonna and the Yarnwinder', stolen from Drumlanrig Castle in 2003). He died at Bowhill and his funeral was held at Melrose Abbey. Walter Henry (1861–1886) eldest son of William Henry, 6th Duke of Buccleuch. He had the tile Lord Eskdale. He died from a gun accident when stalking deer near Achnacarry, and so the Dukedom was eventually inherited by his younger brother John Charles. Walter John (1894–1973) son of John Charles, he became the 8th Duke of Buccleuch in 1935. He was educated at Eton and Christ Church College, Oxford. He was a soldier, politician, farmer and banker, as well as Lord Steward of Her Majesty's Household and Chancellor of the Order of the Thistle. He was Commanding Officer of the 4th Battalion K.O.S.B. 1923–30. He was M.P. for Roxburgh and Selkirk Counties 1929–35 (while Lord Dalkeith) and was made an Honorary Burgess of Hawick in 1933. He was also Lord Lieutenant of Roxburghshire 1932–73 and Captain General of the Royal Company of Archers, as well as being a J.P. for Roxburghshire and Dumfriesshire and Deputy-Lieutenant of Selkirkshire. He served as Aide-de-Camp to the Governor-General of Canada. He received honorary degrees from Edinburgh and St. Andrews Universities. In 1921 he married Vreda Esther Mary, daughter of Maj. William Frank Lascelles. Their children were: Elizabeth Diana, who married Hugh Algernon Percy, 10th Duke of Northumberland; Walter Francis John, who succeeded; and Caroline Margaret, who married Sir Ian Hedworth John Little Gilmour, Baron of Craigmillar. William Henry Walter (1831–1914) son of Walter, he had been Earl of Dalkeith, and became the 6th Duke of Buccleuch and 8th of Queensberry in 1884. He was educated at Eton and Christ Church College, Oxford. He was M.P. for Mid-Lothian 1853–68 and 1874–80 and stood unsuccessfully against Gladstone in the 1880 election. He was also Lord Lieutenant for Dumfriesshire from 1858 and Lieut.-Gen. of the Royal Company of Archers. He served as a Commissioner of Supply and Justic of the Peace in Roxburghshire. In 1885 he was made an Honorary Burgess when the foundation stone of the new Town Hall was laid and the Cottage Hospital opened (both by his wife); he then became first President of the Cottage Hospital Board of Management. He was President of the Hawick Fine Art Association and the Upper Teviotdale Fisheries Association and Patron of the Archæological Society and the West Teviotdale Agricultural Society. He presented a prize bat for the best batsman of the Hawick and Wilton Cricket Club in the late 1800s. In 1901 he was made a Privy Councillor. He also opened the Museum in Wilton Lodge in 1910 and was presented with a golden key in commemoration of his recent golden wedding. In 1859 he married Louisa Jane Hamilton, 3rd daughter of James, Duke of Abercorn; she was Mistress of the Robes to Queen Victoria and Queen Alexandra. Their children were: Walter Henry, Lord Eskdale, who died in a shooting accident aged 25; John Charles (b.1864), who succeeded; George William (b.1866), Captain in the 10th Hussars, who married Elizabeth Emily Manners, youngest daughter of the Duke of Rutland; Henry Francis (b.1868), Major in the Royal Scots, who died unmarried; Herbert Andrew (b.1872), Captain in the Irish Guards, who planted the British flag at Pretoria, and married Marie Josephine, daughter of James Edwards; Francis George (b.1879), Aide-de-Camp to the Viceroy of India and married Eileen Nina Sibell Elliot-Murray-Kynynmound, daughter of the 4th Earl of Minto; Katherine Mary (b.1875), married Major Thomas Brand, eldest son of Viscount Hampden; and Constance Anne (b.1877), who married Douglas Halyburton, son of the 1st Earl Cairns. Lord William Walter (1896–1958) son of John Charles, the 7th Duke of Buccleuch and brother of Walter John, the 8th Duke. He was educated at Eton and Sandhurst. He was Captain in the 10th Hussars, received the Military Cross in 1919 and was Aide-de-Camp to the Geovernor-General of Canada 1925–26. He was also admitted to the Royal Company of Archers. He was Conservative M.P. for Roxburghshire & Selkirkshire 1935–1950, losing to Liberal A.J.F. MacDonald. In the 1930s he was connected with Sir Oswald Moseley's 'January Club' and British Union of Fascists. He is also referred to as Lt. Col. Scott. He married Lady Rachel Douglas-Home, daughter of the 13th Earl of Home and they had 5 children: Margaret Elizabeth; Frances Henrietta; Rosemary Alice; Jean Louise; and Walter William. He lived at Eildon Hall, St. Boswells. (the name is also sometimes un-hyphenated and occasionally spelled 'Montague').

Montagu-Scott (mon-ta-gew-sko') n. Charles William Henry (1772–1819) eldest surviving son of Henry Scott of Buccleuch and Lady Elizabeth Monatagu. He was called the Earl of Dalkeith during his father's lifetime. Educated at Eton, he was an English M.P. for Marlborough, Ludgershall, St. Michaels and Marlborough (again) in the years 1793–1807. He was called to the House of Lords as Baron Tynedale in 1807 and became the 4th Duke of Buccleuch and 6th of Queensberry in 1812. He was Lord Lieutenant of Selkirkshire 1794–1819 and Dumfriesshire 1810–19, as well as Colonel Commandant of the Dumfries Militia. He joined the Jedforest Club in 1813. He was also President of the Pitt Club of Scotland, Governor of the Royal Bank and President of the Highland Society. He provided assistance to both Sir Walter Scott and the Ettrick Shepherd (to whom he gave free tenancy of the farm of Altrieve), and had the 'Lay of the Last Minstrel' dedicated to him. He was on the subscription list for Jamieson's Scots dictionary in 1808. He was present at the 'Carterhaugh Baa' in 1815. He repaired Drumlanrig Castle and generally improved the Queensberry estates. However, Robert Wilson describes how he was reluctant to grant feus for woollen mill development on his property around Hawick. It is said that he led a relatively quiet and religious life, managing his estates rather than spending time in London. In 1795 he married Harriet Katherine Townshend, 4th daughter of Thomas, Viscount Sydney; she died in 1814. He was succeeded by his eldest son Walter Francis (1806–84), when the surname Montagu-Douglas-Scott began to be used. His other children were: Anne Elizabeth (1796–1844), who died unmarried, aged 47; George Henry (1798–1808), Lord Scott, who died of measles while a schoolboy at Eton; Charlotte Albinia (1799–1828), who married James Thomas, 4th Earl of Courtown, and died in Rome; Isabella Mary (1800–29), who married Peregrine Francis Cost; Katherine Frances (1803–14), who died aged 10; John Douglas (1809–60), who was M.P. for Roxburghshire; Margaret Harriet (1811–46), who married Charles Viscount Marsham, who was later Earl of Romney; and Harriet Janet Sarah (1814–70), who married Rev. Edward Moore, Honorary Canon of Canterbury Cathedral. In ill-health for at least 6 years, he died in Lisbon, where he had gone for his health, and is buried at Warkton. Henry James see Henry James Scott (the surnames are confusing during this generation).

Montbenger (mont-beng-gur) n. lands in the upper Yarrow valley, near where the B709 meets the A708. These were Crown lands in the latter part of the 15th century, held by the Crichtons of Cranston Riddell in the early 16th century. It was owned by the Scotts of Buccleuch in the 16th and 17th centuries. William Elliot of Horsleyhill claimed he was owed 'mails' for his steading at the Easter part there in 1575/6. There were Scotts there in the 17th century (also written 'Mountbenger'; it is 'Mountbergeris' in 1456, 'Montbrengear' in 1468, 'Monbrenearis' in 1471, 'Montberberis Estir et Westir' in 1502, 'Montbergar Wester' and 'Montbergar Eister' in 1541, 'Montberngeare, Estir and Westir' in 1542, 'Ester and Wester Montbenger' in 1550, Montbernger Eistir' in 1575/6, 'Eister et Wester Montberringeris' in 1634 and 'Easter and Wester Montbengeris' in 1663; 'Monbollenger' is marked on Gordon's c.1650 map).

Monteath (mon-teeth) n. Miss (19th/20th C.) of St. Boswells. She rode on Common Riding Friday in 1914, perhaps the first woman to do this.

Monteath Mausoleum (mon-teeth-maw-zō-lee-um) n. mausoleum just west of Lilliard's Edge, built in a domed Byzantine style with decorations reminiscent of India. It is the tomb of Gen. Sir Thomas Monteath Douglas (of Stonebyres, Lanarkshire), who had a distinguished military career in the early 19th century, spending much of his time in India. It was designed by the Edinburgh architects Peddie & Kinnear and erected in 1864 by Harkness, stonemasons of Hawick, under the supervision of Sir Thomas himself (with the lions carved by Alex Pirnie). The general took up residence there in 1868.

Monteviot Hoose (mon-teev-yi'-hoos) n. stately home about 2 miles south of Jedburgh. The lands there were held by the Earl of Lothian in 1678. The mansion was created from a farmhouse around 1740, with much later alteration. The lands were described in 1788 as 'Spittal, now called Mount Teviot'. The house was lived in by Adm. John Elliot, then the Kerrs, and is now the seat of the Marquess of Lothian. The landscaping of the estate is on a grand scale compared with the modest size of the house – 'Here stands Mountiviot, opening to the eye A second paradise for rural sweets . . . ' [JR] (the name first appears as 'Teviotmount' in 1665, although the area was formerly known as 'Ancrum Spittal').

Montgomery (mont-gu-mu-ree) n. Agnes Brown (1866–1946) daughter of Hawick shoemaker George. In 1887 she was probably the 'Miss Montgomery' who was Lass to Cornet Tom Scott. In that capacity she was the first person to carry the bussed Flag in the Council Chambers, rather than take it to be displayed in a pub; however, it seems that the Provost's sister, Jessie Watson actually bussed the Flag that year. In 1891 she married John Muir Hugh in Edinburgh and they had children Elizabeth Ballantyne (b.1892), Thomas Hugh (b.1894) and Jean Muir (b.1895). David (19th C.) married Mary Douglas in Denholm in 1821. George (18th C.) witnessed a baptism in Hawick for surgeon Walter Scott in 1731. George (19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Douglas and their children included William (b.1833). George (d.1835) cooper of the Kirk Wynd, recorded in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. Perhaps the same George was a cooper in Denholm on the 1801 ballot for the Militia. George (b.1824/5–1904) shoemaker in Hawick. In 1861 he was a boarder with Walter 'Goold' Ballantyne at 7 Back Row, and was employing 3 men. He may have first married Margaret Elliot in 1844. He married Elizabeth ('Betsy', 1832–94) Ballantyne in 1854; she was sister of 'Goold' Ballantyne. His children included: George (b.1844/5), presumably from his first marriage; Elizabeth (b.1856/7), born in the U.S.A.; John (b.1858); and Walter (b.1860); James (1864–1921), who married Margaret Dawson; and Agnes Brown (1866–1946). He died at 66 High Street and is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. He may be the George who donated a coin of David II to the Museum in 1861, found at Bemersyde, in 1863 2 coins of Mary Queen of Scots, in 1867 2 Scotch coins and in 1871 a French copper coin. George (19th C.) resident of Hawick who married Sarah Elder. Their children included: Isabella Elder (b.1881). James (1721–1803) born in Peeblesshire, he was appointed Sheriff there at age 27, then served as M.P. for Dumfriesshire and for Peeblesshire before becoming Solicitor General and then Lord Advocate. He was often called upon as a legal arbitrator, and in that role he was asked for his opinion on Hawick's rights to the Common in 1765, driven by the Town's intention to put the land to better use. His opinion at that time was that the Common belonged jointly to the successors to the particates named in the Charter of 1537 and 'neither the Duke of Buccleuch as superior, nor the Burgesses who have neither houses nor lands, are entitled to any share in the division'. After the Council decided to let parts of the Common adjacent to the neighbouring lands, he was again asked his opinion in 1766. This time his opinion had changed somewhat and he suggested that the Duke's tenants may have a right of pasturage on the Common, and he recommended formal arbitration to resolve the issue. He appears to have given no weight at all to the annual marking of the boundaries of the Common by the Burgesses of Hawick. He was in fact later the issuer of the decision to give 30% of the Common Moor to Buccleuch and other neighbouring landowners; this despite the fact that he was a close friend of the Duke of Buccleuch (e.g. working in Parliament to pass the Bank of Ayr bill, which directly affected both the Buccleuch and Queensberry estates), and hence could hardly be considered to be impartial. In 1777 he was appointed Chief Baron of the Exchequer. In 1778 the Magistrates of Hawick presented him with a carpet, stating that he 'did not know that any carpets of such size, without a seam, had been made in this country'. He purchased Stanhope in Peeblesshire and was said to be enthusiastic about agricultural improvement. He retired in 1801 as Baronet of Stobo. James (18th C.) recorded at Hummelknowshaugh in 1780. He married Isabel Douglas and their children included George (b.1780). James (b.c.1805) recorded as a horsekeeper on the Fore Row in 1841. His wife was Sarah, and their children included Mary, James, Agnes and Elizabeth. James (19th/20th C.) local cricketer, having the highest batting average for the Hawick and Wilton club in the 13 years from 1886 until 1898. He also scored 43 in a match for Roxburgh County against an M.C.C. visiting side in 1895. Janet (18th/19th C.) grocer on the Howegate, listed in Pigot's 1837 directory. John (b.1814/5) shoemaker who lived at 'Kirkgate' (i.e. St. Mary's Place) according to the 1851 census. He is probably the John listed as a shopkeeper on Needle Street in Slater's 1852 directory. He firstly married Agnes Smith in Wilton in 1837, but she died in 1840. His second wife was Isabel and their children included Agnes, Elizabeth, Janet and Ann H. His wife may have been Isabel Cairns, recorded as a school mistress in 1841. Robert (16th C.) minister at Stirling, he was appointed as titular Archbishop of Glasgow in 1581, even although he had opposed Episcopalianism. However, these were troubled times, his appointment was disputed, there were violent clashes at Glasgow Cathedral and he was deprived in 1585. He was later minister in Ayrshire. Robert (18th C.) married Janet Douglas in Denholm in 1787. Walter B. (19th/20th C.) lived at Briar Lea on Wilton Hill. His wife was Janet. Their sons George and James Richardson were killed in WWI, while 2 other sons survived. William Augustus (1872–1948) born in Hawick, he studied piano, organ and music theory, graduating with a B. Mus. from Durham in 1897. He was organist and choirmaster in Gainsborough Parish in England and emigrated to Canada in 1913. There he was organist and choirmaster in Sherbrooke, Calgary and Halifax. He published more than 100 musical compositions, including works for voice, organ, piano and violin (also spelled 'Montgomerie' and 'Montgomerry').

month (munth) n. month, note that the singular form is often used for the plural – 'hes eet been is lang as threi month?', 'there's nowt spoken aboot in Hawick for 6 month afore the Common Ridin an 6 month efter'.

Montrose (mon-trōz) n. popular name for James Graham, Marquess of Montrose.

monumental (mo-new-men-tul) adj. drunk – 'When oo funnd um aside the Horse, they were baith monumental', adv. usually only applied to the noun 'drunk' – 'Hei was monumental drunk' (also monimental).

moo see mou

mooch (mooch) v. to beg, borrow, rummage – 'hei was aye moochin aboot'.

moocher (moo-chur) n. someone who is trying to get something for nothing, a scrounger.

moodge (mooj) v., arch. to budge, stir, shift – 'Ti moodge (alang) = to move along slily and furtively' [ECS].

Moodie (moo-dee) n. George (b.1823/4) son of Robert. He was a millwright on Sunnyside in Denholm. He also served as the Registrar and Inspector of Poor for Cavers Parish. In the 1860s he and his father Robert are recorded together as millwrights. He is probably the 'Mr Moodie, engineer' who in 1873 donated to the Museum a 'ten cent. note, franc of Napoleon I., copper coin, and piece of the first telegraph cable between Dover and Calais'. He married Elizabeth Turnbull, and their children included: Jane; Robert; and Elizabeth O. James (18th/19th C.) millwright in Lilliesleaf, as recorded in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. He could be the James whose children baptised in Lilliesleaf included: Robert (b.1789); Thomas (b.1790), also a millwright; and James (b.1800). He may also be the James who married Janet Inglis and had children: Jean (b.1806); Mary (b.1808); John (b.1811); Janet (b.1813); and Christian (b.1815). John (16th C.) probably name for a tenant or similar associates of James Douglas of Cavers recorded in 1541. His name appears to be 'Johnne mudy'. Robert (18th C.) resident of Rigg (i.e. Caerlenrig) in 1731 when his son William was baptised in Cavers Parish. Robert (d.1783) wright in Lilliesleaf. James Hunter served his apprenticeship with him and later fell off the steeple in Jedburgh. Robert (b.1789) from Lilliesleaf Parish, son of James, he was millwright in Denholm. He is probably the millwright of that name who gave a valuation for machinery in Selkirk in 1836. He is recorded in Denholm in 1837 and in 1841 was probably on Leyden Road. He married Elizabeth Oliver, and their children (baptised in Cavers Parish) included: James (b.1820); Elizabeth (b.1821); George (b.1823); Jane (or 'Jenny', b.1826); Alison (b.1828); Margaret (b.1831); Mary (b.1833); Robert (b.1836); Mary (again, b.1838); and Andrew (b.1841). He was still alive in 1861, and recorded around Leyden Road. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. He married Elizabeth Lister and their children included: James (b.1817); Agnes (b.1820); and George (b.1822). He could be the same man as the millwright, if he married twice. Thomas (b.1790) son of James, he was a millwright on Main Street in Lilliesleaf, recorded in Pigot's 1837 directory. In Slater's 1852 directory he was listed as a millwright and wright in Lilliesleaf. In 1831 he married Agnes Burn (or Burns) and their children included: William (b.1827/8), illegitimate child with Isabella Fall; Jessie (b.1832); Jane (b.1834); Agnes (b.1835); George (b.1837); Thomas (b.1839/40); Helen (b.1842/3); Robert (b.1845); John (b.1847); and Jemima (b.1852). He died before 1861, when his widow was recorded as head of the household (also spelled 'Muddie' and 'Mudie').

Moodlaw (mood-law) n. small Loch and steading at the head of the streams that feed the Rankle Burn, lying just over the border into Dumfries and Galloway. The boundary of Hawick Parish once extended almost this far. Robert Turnbull was recorded there in 1494/5. It is mistranscribed as 'Muddhave Loch' when given as the source of the Rankle Burn in a description of Selkirkshire in 1649. In the 19th century the lake was divided among the parishes of Roberton, Eskdalemuir and Ettrick, with the counties of Roxburghshire, Selkirkshire and Dumfriesshire meeting in the middle.

mool (mool) n., poet. soil, dust – 'The mool is heavy on the heart that loved us true an' free . . . ' [JoHa], '. . . whan I gae doun intil the pitt? Sall the mool prayse thee?' [HSR], '. . . an' his enimies sall lick the mool' [HSR] (see also muil, moud and mools).

moor (moor, mūr) n. unenclosed high ground, a variant of muir and mair (occurring as a suffix in many place names, e.g. Alemoor, Ancrum Moor, Craik Moor, Greatmoor, Hawick Moor and and Whitehaughmoor).

Moor see Moore

the Moor (thu-moor) n. another name for the Mair.

Moore (moor) n. Adam (b.1811) son of James and Betty Nichol. He was a road contractor in Castleton Parish. He was recorded as a labourer at Whiteknowe in 1835–7, Upperraw in 1838, Pinglehole in 1840 and Riccarton in 1841. He was a road contractor at Riccarton Cottages in 1861. He married Janet Elliot and their children included James (b.1833), Mary (b.1834), James (again, b.1837), Elizabeth (b.1839), Elizabeth (again, b.1843), Janet (b.1846), Matthew (b.1849), John (b.1851), William (b.1853), an unnamed child (b.1855), Adam (b.1856) and Ann (b.1859). His wife lived the last few years of her life with her son James at Bonchester Bridge, and was buried in Castleton in 1907. Alexander (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, living at Easter Burnfoot in 1723 and Appletreehall in 1724 and 1727. In 1721 he witnessed a baptism for Robert Riddell in East Burnfoot and in . 1727 a baptism for William Scott in Newton. He married Marion Miller in Wilton Parish, and the 'bell and mortcloth' were hired for her funeral in 1738. Their children included: Margaret (b.1718); Adam (b.1721); John (b.1723); Alexander (b.1724); and Elspeth (b.1727). The witnesses in 1724 were Walter and John Scott and in 1727 were James and John Dryden. Alexander (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, living at Borthaugh in 1748. He married Mary Brown in 1738 and their children included: George (b.1739); James (b.1745); George (again, b.1748); and Adam (b.1750). Helen (17th C.) wife of William Rodger. In 1690 she was prosecuted along with Margaret Nichol, servant to Walter Scott of West Port, for stealing meal from Scott. Both women were ordained 'to be keip in prisson to ly in stockes during the baylyea's will and pleasour ... and to stand at ye crosse upon the publicke marcatt-day wt ane pocke of meale each of them about their necks for ane hour's time'. James (18th/19th C.) servant, labourer and hind at Dinlabyre. He was listed among male heads of households 1835–41. He emigrated to America in 1841. James (b.1837) son of Adam and Janet Elliot, he was born at the Knowe in Castleton Parish. He moved to Rulewater, to take over from his son James as carrier in that district. He then succeeded Thomas Smail as carter at Wolfelee. In 1863 he married Jane, daughter of Robert Thomson and sister of Andrew, who was shepherd at Wigg. Their children included: Margaret (b.1863); Janet (b.1865); Adam (b.1867), hind at Bonchester; Robina Thomson (b.1869); Mary Ann (b.1871); Jane (b.1873); James, who was carter in Rulewater for about 5 years; Andrew Thomson (b.1881); and Matthew, who worked with his father. John (17th C.) servant to Walter Scott of Westport. In 1679 Janet Henderson was cited by the Council for publicly accusing him of 'stealing of ane pair of plaiding hose off some thorns'. John (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He married Esther Turnbull in Roberton in 1784 and their children included: James (b.1785); Nelly (b.1785); and John (b.1788). He could be the man whose Bible was donated to the Museum by William Rodger in 1871, with the inscription 'John Moor Aught this book; May he have the grace Thereon to look. Howcleuch, 1758'. Rev. John (19th/20th C.) from Alloa, he was minister at Hawick Baptist Church 1919–22. He arrived just after the manse was built. He was involved in open air sermons and the 'no-licence' movement. He was afterwards minister at Bridgeton and then Buckie. Michael (1965–) born in Northern Ireland, son of a Chaplain in the Army. The family moved to the Borders in 1981 when Rev. William H. became minister of Ancrum, Jedburgh Old Parish and Edgerston. He attended Edinburgh University and worked as a researcher for Archy Kirkwood. He then worked as a chartered accountant before taking over as Liberal M.P. for Tweeddale, Ettrick & Lauderdale from David Steel in 1997. After boundary changes he was elected M.P. for the new Berwickshire, Roxburgh & Selkirk seat in 2005. Re-elected in 2010 he became Secretary of State for Scotland (also written 'Moor', 'More' and 'Mour'; the name may have formerly been the same as Muir).

Moorfield see Muirfield

Moormaw (moor-maw) n. former farm in Hassendean Parish, later called 'Lees', with 'West Lees' still existing. Charters for the Easter and Wester parts was granted by John Scott of Burnhead to John Scott, Vicar of Hawick in 1535 and 1539. And in 1544 East Moormaw was sold by John Scott, Vicar of Hawick back to John Scott of Burnhead. However, in 1606 William Scott in Catslack was served heir to these lands of his great-grand-uncle, John Scott, Vicar of Hawick; at that point Easter Moormaw was a '40 shilling land'. It is recorded being occupied by a branch of the Scott family in 1666. It is probably the place where Walter Scott of Catslack paid the land tax on £52 in 1663 and John Scott of Catslack in 1678. It seems possible it is the 'milnmaue' in Hassendean Parish, where Andrew Donald and Thomas Sanderson were located at the time of the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. It was owned by Scott of Lees in the 1720, when the tenant was William Easton. It is the 'Mowmaw, or Millmae, commonly called Lees' owned by William Scott of Burnhead and valued at £52 according to the Land Tax Rolls of 1811 (also written 'Muremaw'; it is 'Murmawe' in 1544, transcribed 'Eister Mirmawok' in 1607 and is 'Mirmaw' in 1765; see also Milma).

moor-powt (moor-pow') n., poet. a young grouse, used as a term of endearment – 'Come, my pretty moor-powt, favour me with a single glance of your bonny face' [JTe].

Moorsom (moor-sum) n. Jermyn (d.1951) married Pamela Irene Milborne-Swinnerton-Pilkington and lived at Hyndlee. His brother, Raisley Stuart (1892–1981) was involved with the Bloomsbury set between the Wars.

Moravia see Murray

Moray see Murray

Morebattle (mōr-baw'-ul) n. village in the eastern Borders, on the Kale Water. There are several ancient encampments near here, as well as the reconstructed 16th century Corbet Tower. A fire in the Manse there destroyed the pre-1708 records of the entire Synod of Merse and Teviotdale (the origin is probably Old English for 'building by the lake', since a lake near there was only drained in the 19th century; the name first appears in about 1120 as 'Mereboda').

Morlaw (mor-law, -lō) n. Duncan (15th C.) witness to Hawick's earliest known sasine in 1453. His name is written 'Morlay'. It is reasonable to think that he was an ancestor of the later Morlaws in Hawick. Isobel (17th C.) recorded in Hawick in 1641. She was ordered to pay money that she owed Helen Deans as her fee for a period in the previous year, 'but assoilzied fra her hois and schone'. Presumably Deans was a servant of hers. Janet (17th C.) resident of Dean Mill recorded in a 1650 list of communicants (recorded as 'Jannet Morling'). She may have been one of the last descendants of John to have the family name. James (16th C.) recorded as witness to a Hawick sasine of 1558, where his name is recorded as 'Morlaw'. It is easy to imagine that he was son of John from the 1537 Charter. John (16th C.) recorded in the Selkirk Protocol Books of 1530/1 when he purchased rigs from William and Adam Ker in Shaws. In 1532 he purchased from William Walker a croft and a tenement in Hawick. He was recorded as being 'John Morlawe of Todschawe', suggesting that he owned the lands of Todshaw in the Borthwick valley. His tenement was at the Tower Knowe, described as being 'on the north side of the king's street between the tenement of Alexander Paslaw on the east, the Slytryk water on the west and north and the said king's street on the south', while the croft 'lies on the east side of the Slytryk water with the Teviot water on the north and the tenement of James Blair on the west'. The croft is surely what became known as Morlaw's Croft (and so the 'east' in the Selkirk record must be an error for 'west'). Perhaps the same John is recorded in 1532/3 when he purchased rigs in Selkirk from John Scott. He purchased further land in Selkirk from the Kers of Shaws in 1534 and also complained that they owed him 2 bolls of flour. In 1535 he bought a tenement in Selkirk from Alan 'Mithag'. He is also mentioned in the 1537 charter as being the holder of 3 particates on the north side of the main street in Hawick, with his surname written 'Morlo'. He was still recorded as owner of a tenement in 'Peilgait' in Selkirk in 1543. Thomas (16th C.) owner of a tenement on the main street in Selkirk in 1528. In 1530 he gained a rig of land near Selkirk and in 1531 another tenement, according to the Protocol Books. In 1538 he purchased a small piece of land in East Haining. In 1539 he was one of the tenants who Thomas Scott warned to remove themselves from his lands of Haining. However, in 1540 he had sasine for an eighth part of East Haining. In 1542/3 he purchased a tenement in Selkirk and further lands in 1544 (also spelled 'Morlaw', 'Morlawe', 'Morlo', 'Morolawe', etc.; this may be the same surname as the modern 'Morland'/'Moreland' or Morley).

Morlaw's Croft (mor-laz-kroft) n. area of around 2 acres lying to the west of what became Orrock Place. The name was in use in the 18th century, but by the 19th century became referred to as 'the Back o the Yairds'. An item in the Selkirk Protocol Books for 1532 records how the croft was sold to John 'Morlawe' of Todshaw by William Walker, nephew and heir of John Walker. It is described as being 'on the east [which must be an error for 'west'] side of the Slytryk water with the Teviot water on the north and the tenement of James Blair on the west'. In 1740 it is the '2 acres of land then inclosed, with a garden or yard, commonly called Marilaws croft, with the houses built thereon . . . lying within the town and burgh of Hawick, upon the west side of the water of Slitrig', when it was assigned to James Gardner, son of John Gardner, gardener in Hawick, by the superior, George Langlands of that Ilk. In 1756 James Gardner sold the property to Adam Scott, mason in Hawick.

Morley (mor-lee) n. Henry (b.1829/30) from England, he was a frameworker in Hawick. In 1861 he was living at the back house of 28 High Street, with his wife Janet and children Janet C., Sarah L. and Isabella C. John (b.1799/1800) from Ireland, he was a frameworker in Hawick. In 1861 he was living at 11 Teviot Crescent with his wife Elizabeth, son William and daughter-in-law Janet Bushby. Thomas (b.1824/5) frameworker in Hawick, where he was born. In 1851 he was living at 'Tabernacle, Kirkwynd' with his wife Hannah, daughter Sarah, and 2 lodgers. William (b.1822/3) from England, he was a framesmith in Hawick. In 1851 he was a lodger with Thomas Noble's family on the High Street. In 1861 he was living at 1 O'Connell Street with his wife Elizabeth and son James. William (b.1824/5) from England, he was a frameworker in Hawick. In 1861 he was living at 6 Slitrig Bank with his wife Sarah and children Joseph, William S., Thomas, John and James.

Morlo see Morlaw

Mormons (mor-minz) n., pl. members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, founded in the U.S.A. in the 1820s. Among their activities are sending young men (and now occasionally women) on two year missions, isolated from friends and family, to try to make converts. There was apparently a mormon from Salt Lake City living off Denholm Main Street in the years around 1900. Missionaries have been showing up in Hawick since ??.

morn (mōrn) n. tomorrow is generally referred to as the morn – 'let's gaun oot the morn night', 'It's duist an off-pit o teime hevin ti gaun there the morn' [ECS].

mornin (mōr-neen, -nin) n. morning – 'how er ee this mornin?', 'she's still in mournin this mornin', 'A'll cry in as A gaun bye the morn's morneen' [ECS] (also spelled 'morneen' and most commonly pronounced with een; the time after this but before noon is often called the forenin).

Morpeth (mor-peth) n. town in Northumberland on the Wansbeck River, an important market centre, with a bridge built by Thomas Telford, and an interesting old clock tower. Morpeth Castle was once the seat of the Lords Dacre, Wardens of the Marches. It was also the site of a Covenanter's siege of 1644. It has celbrated the Morpeth Gathering in April since 1968, with the 'Border Cavalcade' commemorating Lord Greystoke's return from Otterburn in 1388. Population 14,400.

Morren (mo-rin) n. John (1863–1950) born in Auchindoir in Aberdeenshire, in 1902 he moved from Aberdeen City Police to be Superintendent of the Hawick Burgh force. He lived at Glenview on Orhcrad Terrace. He remained as Chief Constable until 1909, taking over as Chief Constable of the Berwickshire, Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire Constabularies. He retired in 1933 and moved back to Aberdeen. He was awarded the King George V Coronation (Scottish Police) Medal, as well as the O.B.E. He can be seen in a photographic portrait in full uniform, with remarkable moustache.

Morris Clyde (mo-ris-klīd) n. pen-name for the writer of the poem 'The Hawick Gathering Cry', published in 1897.

Morrishaa (mo-ris-haw) n. Morrishall, former farmstead in Wilton Parish, between Wilton Dean and Whitehaugh, near Brieryhill, lying beside the modern Whitehaugh Road. John Murray was gardener there in 1750. Thomas Sinton was there in 1771. John Morton and family were there in at least 1835–1851. It was probably deserted in the 1850s and derelict soon after. It was also known as 'Murrayshall' (it was 'Morrowshall' in 1771; it is marked on Stobie's 1770 map).

Morrison (mo-ree-sin) n. Alexander (17th/18th C.) son of Robert, baker in Edinburgh, his mother being a Home. In 1693 he was served heir portioner, along with James Dickson and John Shoreswood, in the Barony of Home, inherited from Jean, daughter of John Home. This included superiority over lands in Hassendean, and explicitly Appletreehall, as well as the lands of Redfordgreen, Drycleuchlea, Huntly and Hartwoodburn. James (15th/16th C.) recorded as a fugitive in 1502, this being for the murder of John and James Jackson. William Douglas of Cavers dealt with his escheated goods. Rev. James (1732–1824) born in Perth and Kinross, he was licensed by the Associate Presbytery of Earlston in 1756 and in the same year ordained as minister at Norham (just across the Border). He was Clerk of the Anti-Burgher Synod and Presbytery for more than 50 years. He is one of the people claimed to have started the first Sunday School, this being in 1756 or 1757. It is recorded that in 1766 he was in Hawick to perform a baptism for Robert Brown and Agnes Scott, members of the Anti-Burgher congregation, who did not yet have a local minister of their own. It thus appears that he may have been a temporary preacher at the Green Kirk, before John Young arrived. He is buried at Norham. James (1816–93) evangelical preacher who was one of the founders of the Evangelical Union, after being ousted from the Synod of the United Secession Church in 1841. His first visit to the Borders was to preach in Hawick and Denholm in a December of the mid-1840s. On one Sunday he preached at the old Cameronian Chapel in Denholm, then in the open air at the Tower Knowe to a crowd of 700–800, and finally in the Subscription Rooms (with the seats removed) to perhaps 1,000. This was part of the impetus for forming Hawick Congregational Kirk in 1848. He returned in early 1849 to formally induct Alexander Duff as the first E.U. minister in Hawick and later to open the new church. James (b.1829/30) from Lanark, he was head gardener at Wauchope in the 1860s. His wife was Helen and their children included John, Anne H. and Elizabeth. John (b.1822/3) head gardener at Weens in the 1860s. From Lanark, he was probably younger brother of James, gardener at Wauchope. His wife was Mary and they had a daughter Mary J.D. Robert (18th C.) merchant in Hawick. He was described as late Bailie in 1735 in the deposition where the widow of Robert Scott of Falnash sold her property on the Howegate to Patrick Hardie. William (16th C.) tailor who was owed money according to the last testament of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1574. It is unclear if he was from the Hawick area or Edinburgh. William (19th C.) earthenware and glass dealer on Needle Street, listed in Slater's 1852 directory. He could be the William listed in the 1851 census as a boot closer from Edinburgh, living as a lodger on the Round Close. William, J.P. (1839–92) born in Craig Madderty, Perthshire, he became a detective with the Leith Constabulary, then came to Hawick around 1865. He acted as Superintendent of Police and Procurator-Fiscal for the Burgh for 11 years, as well as being Firemaster and managing the Hawick Advertiser from 1876–90. In 1873 he donated a Turkish coin to the Museum. His company was printer, publisher, book-seller and stationer at 3 High Street. He was on the Town Council for at least a dozen years, serving as a Bailie for most of that time, and being a candidate for Provost. For several years he provided the refreshments for the riders at Myrselawgreen on the Friday of the Common Riding. He was the first Bailie to carry the Flag at the Chase in 1887 when that practice was revived (and the Provost of the day could not ride). However, in 1890 he galloped round the course with the Flag, to the cheers of the crowd, but the derision of the Common Riding organisers, since it was against all tradition. He was also Chairman of the Parochial Board, as well as being involved with the School Board, the Gas Company board, the Hawick Bowling Club, the Masons and the Common Riding. He was a Liberal in politics and was a candidate for Provost in 1890. He left Hawick suddenly in 1890 and died accidentally near Seattle (U.S.A.) a year and a half later. His wife was Margaret Gregg, who wrote some poetry under the pseudonym 'M.G.M.' He lived at Morrison Cottage, which gave its name to Morrison Place. Mrs. William nee Gregg (1834–98) wife of Bailie Morrison, whom she married in Leith in 1862. They had 6 children in Hawick. She wrote poetry in the local papers and in 'Modern Scottish Poets' using the initials M.G.M. She died at 3 Morrison Place. William (1863–1911) only child of Bailie William to reach adulthood. He grew up in Hawick, became a printer with his father, emigrated to Australia in 1883 and became the New South Wales Government Printer.

Morrison Cottage (mo-ree-sin-ko'-eej) n. house built by William Morrison on what became known as Morrison Place, and still exists there.

Morrison Place (mo-ree-sin-plis) n. originally part of the 'Green Wynd' it was named in 1883 after Morrison Cottage, built by William Morrison there. The street was popularly known in the 19th century as Hospital Brae. It is likely that it runs along part of what was known as the 'Common Vennel at Myreslawgreen' at the time of the 1537 Charter.

Morrison's (mo-ree-sinz) n. W. Morrison & Co., printers, publishers, stationers, booksellers and bookbinders at 3 High Street in the latter part of the 19th century. It was run by William Morrison, joined by his son, also William. The company's 'Business Directory' came out in at least the year 1890.

Morrison's (mo-ree-sinz) n. supermarket on the site of the former Auction Mart, including a cafe and petrol station. The building has a weather vane featuring a cow.

mort (mor') n., arch. the skin of a sheep that has died a natural death – 'Mort-woo, Wool of such skins' [JoJ] (also 'murt').

mort-cloth (mor'-kloth) n., arch. a black velvet pall placed over coffins on their way to the cemetery. The Hawick Parish one was hired out by the kirk session, the money used to help the poor of the Parish. This was in fact the major source of revenue for the Kirk Session. Deaths were often recorded in the ledgers as 'mort-cloth' hires. The Hawick Parish 'mort-cloth' was used from at least 1712, and in 1720 a new one was provided by William Elliot of London (who was born at Southfield); this being of Genoan velvet and much finer than the Dutch velvet it replaced. The new cloth was kept by one of the elders (Bailie Ruecastle in 1721). There are also records of a 2nd (presumably the older velvet one, sometimes called 'the little cloth', although this may have been intended for children) and even a 3rd cloth (possibly just of cheap black material) being rented for lesser fees; in the mid-18th century there were the 'best', 'second' and 'littell' 'cloaths'. Other mort-cloths owned by incorporated trades were in use until 1721, with a 'memorial' against the use of private mort-cloths issued in 1726. The use of the cloth was widely debated in the mid-19th century, it fell into disfavour by the 1860s and is said to have been last used for Tibbie Leithead in 1870. The fee was 18 shillings Scots for those in the town and 20 shillings for the country part of the parish; however, wealthier parishioners often paid more, and poorer parishioners would use one of the cheaper options. There were such cloths in use in other parishes, e.g. in Wilton in the 18th century there are records of rentals for the 'new mortcloth', second mortcloth' and 'little mortcloth' – 'Wm Dickson gave in account of ye profites of ye 2 mortcloths . . . ' [PR1724], 'Received for the bell & mortcloth at the funeral of a stranger who dead at Bundrau . . . 14s' [Wil1729], 'This day a man in the Hungreyhill was buried having the Mortcloath payed' [Ash], '. . . who had assisted Leyden on the other occasion, enveloped in the 'mort cloth', or pall, which was then kept in the church' [HAST1875], 'O, have ye heard the news of late, That things have come to sic a state, The fouk o' Hawick are talking great Against our bonnie mortcloth, Some say it is a gross abuse, Some say they'll it nae langer use, And some they will not pay the dues O' hiring out our mortcloth' [TP] (also spelled as one word 'mortcloth').

mortify (mor-ti-fI) v., arch. to bequeath in perpetuity, particularly when given to a public body – 'I hereby mortifie and dispone to the said Paroch of Hawick all and haill the Soume of Nine thousand Merks Scots money to ly as ane mortified fund' [PR1711], '. . . who are to bestow the money mortified by the late Mr Alexander Orrok, our minister here . . . ' [PR1714] (Scots law term).

mortification (mor-ti-f-kā-shin) n., arch. property or money bequeathed to charity – '. . . the said mortificatione shall be furthecomeing and payable to Mr James Innes, present Schoolmaster of Hawick' [RAO], 'And by the said mortification her Grace is patron of both for presenting the schoolmaster when vacant . . . ' [PR1714].

mortifier (mor-ti-fI-ur) n., arch. one who mortifies, person who bequeaths something to a public pody – 'They in the highlands gote the best part thereof according to the desire of the mortifier' [PR715].

Mortimer (mor'-i-mur, -ee-) n. Rev. Cyrus Maxwell (b.1897) son of Alfred M., he was educated at the Royal High School and the Edinburgh University, where he graduated M.A. in 1922. He served in WWI as a Lieutenant in the R.F.A., R.F.C. and R.A.F., and was awarded the Air Force Cross. He was licensed by the Presbytery of Edinburgh in 1922, became assistant at St. Leonard's, Edinburgh and Dunblane and in 1924 was ordained as minister at Dundee Balgay. He moved to Roberton in 1930 and remained until 1954, when he moved to Broxburn St. Nicholas. He started the first troop of Boy Scouts in Roberton Parish. He married Dorothy Eileen, daughter of Edward Elliot (b.1897) and their children were Aileen Marion (b.1921) and Dorothy Anne Elliot (b.1928).

Morton (mor'-in) n. Adam (15th C.) bequeathed 6 sheep in the 1491/2 will of Sir David Scott of Branxholme. He is listed as 'Ade Mortoun'. Adam (17th C.) resident of Briery Yards according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. In 1709 he appears to have been servant to William Scott, tenant in Wilton. He was probably the Adam, married to Anna Henderson, whose children, baptised in Wilton Parish, included Helen (b.1695), Anna (b.1702), Isabel (b.1704), Helen (b.1707) and Jean (b.1709) He is probably the Adam who in 1698 witnessed a baptism for William Scott in Lees and Isabella Morton (perhaps his sister). Andrew (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He witnessed a baptism for John Scott, tenant in Falnash, in 1706. George 'Geordie' (16th/17th C.) recorded as 'in Harrett' (presumably Harwood) in the 1622 Commissioners' Court in 1622 when he was cleared, along with Walter Turnbull (tenant of Skelfhill) of stealing 2 sheep from 'Laird Swarley' (an Englishman). Rev. James (1783–1865) said to be a cousin of Dr. John Leyden, he was Prebendary of Lincoln and Vicar of Holbeach in Lincolnshire. He compiled 'The Poetical Remains of the late Dr. John Leyden' (1819) and 'Monastic Annals of Teviotdale' (1832). He became acquainted with William Norman Kennedy after a visit to Hawick, in which he was given a tour of local archaeological sites, along with Robert White of Newcastle. He prepared a supplement to John Jamieson's Scottish dictionary, with W.N. Kennedy providing some assistance. John (15th C.) listed in 1463/4 among the men who were rewarded by the King for assisting in the capture of John Douglas of Balveny, probably part of the force led by Scott of Buccleuch. He is recorded as 'Johannes de Mortoun'. The other men were Scotts, Turnbulls, a Gledstains, a Langlands, a Dalgleish etc., and so he is probably local. John (15th/16th C.) recorded in 'le craik' (presumably Craik) in 1502 at the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh. He was fined for non-appearance, and acted as his own surety. John (d.c.1683) at Appletreehall in 1683 when his will is recorded. His surname is written 'Mortoune'. John (19th C.) married Agnes Hume in Wilton Parish in 1830. John (b.c.1840) agricultural labourer in Wilton Parish. He was listed at Murrayshall, among heads of households, 1835–41. His wife was Agnes and their children included Jeannie, Isabella, Katherine, Agnes, Betty and Mary. Robert (b.1778/9) from Dalkeith, he was a farmer and gardener living at Damhead in 1841. In 1851 he was at Upper Damside. He is listed as a gardener in Slater's 1852 directory. His wife was Catherine and their children included William, Catherine and John. Rev. Thomas 'Tom' (1919–2013) born in Kilmarnock, he studied Arts at Glasgow University and trained for the ministry there 1936–43. He was student assistant at Glasgow Newlands South 1942–43 and licensed by the Presbytery of Irvine and Kilmarnock in 1943. He served with the Church of Scotland Huts and Canteens in Orkney 1943–44 and was 'locum tenens' at Kilmarnock West High 1944–45. He was ordained as minister of West Port Kirk in 1945 and remained until 1951. He then moved to St. Nicholas' Church in Cardonald, and in 1947 was translated to Stonelaw, Rutherglen, where he was minister until he retired in 1986. In 1978–79 he was Moderator of the Glasgow Presbytery. In 1951 he married Janette ('Netta') Nichol Wilson (b.1913). Walter (17th C.) admitted as a Burgess of Hawick along with 3 others in 1700. They were admitted 'gratis wtout payment of any burgess money, in respect they went out as militia hyred men for the said toune'. William (16th C.) holder of a particate of land on the north side of the public street according to Hawick's 1537 Charter (also spelled 'Morten', 'Mortin', 'Morton', 'Mortoun' and 'Mortoune'; in earlier times this is easily confused with Mertin).

mort-safe (mor'-sāf) n., arch. a device for preventing a coffin from being stolen, often an iron cage that could be locked over a grave. They were prevalent in the late 18th and early 19th centuries. Records in Cavers Parish in 1826 show that 2 such devices were purchased and quite explicit rules laid out for their use, with William Thomson and Robert Dryden in charge. A padlock from the device used at Cavers up until about 1830 is in the Museum.

Moscrop (mos-krop, -krip) n. Adam (16th C.) 2 men with the same name, one 'Mr.' and one 'Sir' were chaplains and notaries to an instrument following an inquest over disputed land in Jedburgh in 1533. They could easily have been descended from the earlier Patrick and/or James. One of them was probably the Adam who was notary for a sasine of lands in Feu-Rule in 1560 and for a document for Lady Catherine Kerr of Ferniehirst in 1564. 'Master Adam Mostrope curate in Jed' was invoved in the marriage of John Rutherford of Hunthill and Christian Pringle in 1529. Adam (16th C.) recorded in Riddell in 1580 when his servant Robert witnessed an agreement between James Riddell in Maxton and John Riddell in Newton Mill. Clement (16th/17th C.) listed as 'in Southfield' in 1611 when he was part of the assize at the Justice Court on Jedburgh. It is unclear if this was the local Southfield or perhaps the one near Kelso. James (15th C.) one of the witnesses to the 1490 sasine in which Robert Scott purchased land in Hawick from Robert Cessford. His wife may be the 'uxori Jacobi Moscrop' who received 40 shillings in the will of Sir David Scott of Branxholme in 1491/2. James (16th/17th C.) one of several local men accused in a 1612 document of charging more than the allowed interest rate on loans. He is described as 'in Flexis' (presumably Flex) and was one of the men who appeared to answer the charges. Perhaps the same James is witness to a sasine of 1610 involving the Scotts and the Turnbulls and land on the Kirk Wynd. John (17th C.) Burgess of Jedburgh. Along with Alexander Kirkton (Provost of Jedburgh) he was joint owner of Nether Bonchester until selling it to Walter Scott in 1653. He was referred to as 'younger', suggesting his father was also John. Patrick (15th C.) notary for Hawick's earliest known sasine in 1453, where he is described as 'bachelor in decrees, priest, Glasgow diocese'. He was also the notary for the 1452 sasine in which William Douglas of Drumlanrig was regranted the Barony of Hawick; he is there 'Patricius Moscrop, presbyter Glasguensis diocesis, bacallarius in decretis'. He was notary for the sasine carried out at Milsington in 1453. He was also notary for a legal instrument (relating to lands in Eckford) which was witnessed in the house of John Walche (presumably Waugh) in Hawick in 1454. He was notary for a document relating to the lands of Whitchesters, signed at St. Mary's Kirk in 1455, and the associated notorial instrument made at Branxholme the following year. He could be the Patrick who had a sasine for 'Glennysland' in Roxburghshire in 1461. Probably the same man was witness in 1478 to a document granting rights in Selkirk to David Scott, younger of Branxholme. Robert (15th/16th C.) resident of Jedburgh recorded in 1502 when he had remission for the murder of Gilbert Black, with Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst as his surety. His surname was written 'mostrope'. Robert (16th C.) recorded in 1580 as servant to Adam in Riddell when he witnessed an agreement between James Riddell in Maxton and John Riddell in Newton Mill. Robert (17th C.) resident of 'Dodburne in Kirkton Parioch' according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. William 'Will' (16th C.) one of the men indicted in 1552 for involvement in the murder of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme and Buccleuch. He is recorded as 'Ville Moscrope in Jedburgh'. William (17th C.) resident of Cavers Parish, his children were baptised in Hawick Parish. He probably lived in the country area towards Teviothead. He married Marion Rae and their children included: Margaret (b.1670); Isobel (b.1672); Janet (b.1676); and an unnamed son (b.1686). The witnesses in 1676 were Schoolmaster John Purdom and James Elliot. William (17th/18th C.) married Agnes Turnbull in Bedrule in 1700. William (17th/18th C.) married Cecily Best in Bedrule in 1708. William (18th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish. His children included Thomas (b.1762), Mary (b.1767), and Isabel and Janet (b.1769) (also formerly 'Moscrip' and 'Moscrope').

Moses (mō-zeez) n. nickname in use in the late 18th or early 19th centuries.

moss (mos) n. marshy land, bog, morass, moorland, usually high up and sometimes applied to an area used for cutting peats and turfs – 'He's guided them o'er moss and muir, O'er hill and houp, and mony ae down' [T], 'How swift they flew! no eye could view Their track on heath or hill; Yet swift across both moor and moss, St. Clair did follow still' [JL], 'The skulls o' elk-deer, bisons, tups, Fund i' the mosses, Worm-eaten dudds, auld cheens, an' raips, Fossils o' fishes' [JoHa], '. . . Of the snort of the nags as they toil at the steep; Of the suck of the hoofs when the moss rides deep' [WHO], rough grass that grows on moorland, especially Eriophorum vaginatum, the hare-tail cotton grass, and related species – 'The plant, called the moss, rises before any other in the spring, affords excellent nourishment, and is carefully sought after by the flocks' [RAB] (the word occurs locally in place names, such as Adderstonelee Moss, Barnes Moss, Berry Moss, Bitchlaw Moss, Blackgain Moss, Blind Moss, Boghall Moss, Broadlee Moss, Buckstane Moss, Burnside Moss, Cartshaw Moss, Caver's Moss, Craw's Moss, Crookedhaugh Moss, Dinley Moss, Dunhog Moss, Ewen's Moss, Fluther Moss, Gillfit Moss, Greenside Moss, Hallmoss, Harden Moss, Haremoss, Hawick Moss, Hilliesland Moss, Kames Moss, Kippielaw Moss, Lineart Moss, Lionfield Moss, Long Moss, Mabonlaw Moss, Mackside Moss, Malcolm's Moss, Mossbrae, Mossburnford, Mosshills Loch, Mosshouses, Moss Knowe, Mosspark Rig, Mosspatrick, Mosspaul, Mosspeeble, Mossy Knowe, Picmaw Moss, Redmoss, Riddellshiel Moss, Roberton Moss, Rotten Moss, Ruins Moss, Slatehillmoss, Staneyford Moss, St. Leonard's Moss, Swarf Moss, Synton Moss, Tandlaw Moss, Tarras Moss, Tocher Lodge Moss, Weaver's Moss, Whitchesters Moss, Whithope Moss, Winnington Moss, Woolaw Moss and Wulliestruther Moss; see also mosses).

the Moss (thu-mos) n. popular name for the area of wetlands to the south of Lilliesleaf village, also known as Lilliesleaf Moss.

Moss (mos) n. George (18th C.) married Jean Kennedy in Minto Parish in 1789. John (17th/18th C.) maltman in Hawick. He witnessed baptisms in Hawick in 1722 for carrier Thomas Porteous, in 1725 for carrier Thomas Porteous (again), in 1743 for James Oliver, tenant in Earlside, and in 1746 for merchant Andrew Ekron. In 1724 he married Bessie Richardson, who was also from the Town of Hawick. Their children included Helen (b.1725) and Janet (b.1738). The 1725 baptism was witnessed by Robert Ruecastle and Henry Orrock.

mossbluiter (mos-bli'-ur) n., arch. the bittern, Botaurus stellaris, the common snipe, Capella gallinago – '... cultivating wastes, where the whaup and mossbluiter are heard, or where the wild fowls of heaven are destined to reside' [RW] (also bog-bluter and sometimes heather-bleat, from the noise made by the snipe's tail feathers during courtship, or the booming call of the male bittern).

Mossbrae (mos-brā) n. placename in Roberton Parish. Robert Scott was recorded there in 1717, John Turnbull in 1718 and James Donaldson in 1725–28. It is unclear where exactly this might be.

Mossburnford (mos-burn-fōrd) n. hamlet about 3 miles south of Jedburgh. Mossburnford House dates from the early 19th century, but is on the site of a much earlier house. This was once home of a branch of the Rutherfords and was visited by Burns in 1787.

mosscheeper (mos-chee-pur) n., arch. the meadow pipit, Anthus pratensis (also muircheeper and titlin).

moss-corn (mos-kōrn) n., arch. the silverweed, Potentilla anserina, especially its edible roots – '... the roots of which, like small parsnips, are sometimes eaten under the name of mosscorns' [JAHM].

moss-crops (mos-krops) n., arch. the cottongrass, Eriphorum vaginatum – 'There were plots of Eriophorum or 'Moss-crops' ...' [BNC1889].

moss-cropper (mos-kro-pur) n., arch. a gatherer of wild grasses, epithet applied to a botanist – 'It was our duty to rejoin the main company, who had left the 'moss-croppers' to themselves' [BNC1868].

moss-dub (mos-dub) n., poet. a pool in marshy land – 'Gude keep ye aye frae warlocks, witches, Black moss-dubs, and dirty ditches ...' [JoHa].

mosser (mo-sur) n., arch. a mosstrooper, someone engaged in cutting peats.

mosses (mo-seez) n., pl., arch. areas of moorland, particularly those from which peats are cut – '... and that they must not spread peets or set any bings within the said mosses for the space of fifteen days ...' [BR1743], '... generally got his peats and turf for the use of his ffamily from the mosses and muir in the Common' [C&L1767].

moss-haggs (mos-hawgz) n., pl. boggy moorland, particularly pits where peats have previously been cut – 'The breadth of the Border, parched and dried, Went sore from the swords of the sun, The wild flowers drooped and the moorfowl died In the moss hags one by one' [WHO], '... a few acres of broken ground, termed in pastoral phrase 'moss-hags', lending a darker feature, and heightening the effect by contrast' [RJS] (also spelled 'moss-hags'; cf. hagg).

Mosshills Loch (mos-hilz-loch) n. small body of water in the Target Hills, lying between the Braid Road and Ormiston, also known as the Target Pond (it is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Mosshills Road (mos-hilz-rōd) n. former name for part of the road above the Wellogate, probably the narrow road towards Ormiston that goes past Mosshills Loch. The name is used in Robert Murray's 'Hawick Songs and Song Writers', when it is suggested that Sir Walter Scott may have conducted the Wordsworths here in 1803.

Mosshooses (mos-hoos-eez) n. Mosshouses, former cottages on the farm of Mackside that were lived in during the 18th and early 19th centuries, but were already gone by the beginning of the 20th.

Moss Knowe (mos-now) n. hill to the southeast of Shielswood Loch, being a shallow hill reaching a height of 299 m.

Mossman (mos-mun) n. Adam (1785–1833) born in Hawick, son of James and Janet Renwick. He was a jeweller in Edinburgh. He married Isabel Carson, who died in 1864, aged 73. Their children included: James (b.1801/2–40); Adam (1810/1–78); Jeanie (1812/3–75); Samuel (1815/6–90); Isabella (b.1820/1); and Robert (1821/2–54). Adam (19th C.) jeweller in Edinburgh, son of Adam, who was from Hawick. In 1875 he donated to the Museum '21 coins, chiefly silver', including Roman, old British and foreign coins. He married Margaret Cockburn and their children, born in Edinburgh, were Adam (b.1835), Robert (b.1837), James (b.1841) and Alexander (b.1843). Alan (16th C.) Burgess of Edinburgh, recorded in a charter of 1531/2 receiving the lands of Borthaugh and its mill from Roger Langlands. His acquisition of the land was involved in an agreement with Lawson of Highriggs, perhaps settling a debt of John Scott of Borthaugh. Later that year, however, he sold Borthaugh, Commonside and Dryden to Walter Scott of Branxholme and his wife Janet Kerr. James (17th C.) resident of Cavers Parish at a famstead called 'the Mount'. In about 1678 he was fined 1000 merks for attending conventicles, this being a larger sum than the other 6 or 7 people who were fined at the same time, this presumably because he was considered as a ringleader. The accusations against him included that he 'hath conversed and conducted the said Mr John Welsh and others up and down the country in arms, and hath furnished them with horses to that purpose'. It was suggested that he was imprisoned on the Bass Rock, to face later transportation. However, he was among the men who escaped from their ship in London. What happened to him afterwards is not known. James (18th C.) early hosiery manufacturer in Hawick. There is a record of 1791 (from the Board of Trustees for Manufactures) of him receiving £10 towards purchasing a frame for making ribbed stockings, and a few years later he received money for a twisting mill. In 1790 and 1792 he witnessed baptisms for skinner James Renwick. He is probably the stockingmaker whose unnamed child is recorded dying in 1805 and whose unnamed child and grandchild are recorded dying in 1808. He is probably the merchant James whose son James died in Hawick in 1816. He may be the James who married Janet Renwick in 1783, and whose children (baptised in Hawick) included Elizabeth (b.1784) and Adam (b.1785). The witnesses in 1784 were flesher Gideon Renwick and shoemaker William Renwick (who were surely related to his wife). James (18th/19th C.) fishing tackle maker of the Howegate, recorded in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. Margaret (18th C.) cook at Branxholme in 1785, when she was working for Adam Ogilvie. Samuel (1815/6–90) son of Adam. He was editor of the North China Herald in Shanghai. In 1875 he donated to the Museum: 'Chinese newspaper, printed on blue satin for the use of the Emperor; two copies of the Pekin Gazette, on rice paper; Chinese swen-pan, or arithmetic calculation; two Chinese images, carved in wood and guilded; seven Chinese coins of the Tai-tsang dynasty; shell panes, from the Imperial Palace of Yuenming-yuen (destroyed by theAllied forces in 1860); chips from 'Cleopatra's Needle', Egypt; chips from the Standing Stones of Stennis, Orkney; specimens of asbestos, chromate of iron, and serpentine, from the Isle of Unst, Shetland; and a large and valuable collection of rocks and minerals from the Shetland Isles, Orkney Islands, and the Highlands'.

Mosspark Rig (mos-pawrk-rig) n. area of moorland on the west side of the Hermitage Water near Leahaugh. There is an ancient enclosure near the river there, and another close to the confluence with the Thief Sike.

Mosspatrick (mos-paw-trik) n. former name for an area roughly between the heads of the Allan Water and the Braidlie Burn off Hermitage. This may correspond to the 'Queen's Mire' on modern maps (it is recorded in Douglas of Cavers papers in the 15th century and is 'M^{c}Patrick' in 1516; 'Mospatrick hopswyire' and 'Moss patrick hoopesyne' are marked on maps in Blaeu's 1654 atlas and 'Mosspatrickhope swire' on Stobie's 1770 map).

Mosspatrickhope (mos-paw-trik-hōp) n. former house at Mosspatrick, once a home of the Elliots. It is probably the 'Mal Patrikhope' which was granted by William Douglas, Earl of Angus top Archibald Douglas of Cavers in 1428, along with Braidlie and 'Le Schewis', and granted to a William Douglas of Cavers in 1470, with sasine given in 1472. It is transcribed as 'Makpatrikhope' in the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale, when it was valued at 10 merks and had William Elliot as tenant. Later in the 16th century it was tenanted by another William Elliot. It was owned by the Scotts of Buccleuch by 1632 (it is 'Mal Patrikhope' in 1428, 'Mawpatrichop' in 1470, 'Mawpatrikhope' in 1472, 'Mospatrikhoip' in 1581 and 1587/8 and ranscribed 'Makpatrikhope' in 1632; 'Moss patrick hoopeswyne' and 'Mospatrick hopswyire' appear on separate sheets of Blaeu's 1654 map).

Mosspaul (mos-pawl) n. hotel on the A7 near the highest (853 ft) point of the road, on the watershed on the way to Langholm, and very close to the boundary of the Scottish Borders with Dumfries and Galloway. A shelter has existed here for hundreds of years; it has been suggested that this was perhaps established by the monks of Melrose Abbey, and although there is no evidence for this suggestion, they did own the neighbouring lands of Penangushope and others (in Ringwoodfield to the north). Lawrence Elliot was there in 1494/5. It was listed among the lands in Ewesdale held by Alexander, Lord Home in 1509/10. In 1525 the lands were among those in Ewesdale resigned by Simon Armstrong to his superior George, Lord Home; this was carried out at Kelso Abbey (suggesting this Abbey held control over Ewesdale Parish). This transfer of the superiority back to the Homes was confirmed in 1535 when the King revoked the preceding charter. It is probably the 'Mossfauld' listed in 1663 among the lands owned by the Scotts of Buccleuch in the Lordship of Ewesdale. The inn is first definitively recorded in 1767 (by Dr. Carlyle of Inveresk), but could be much older. It became an important stopping point for mail coaches and carters when the road was improved in the mid-18th century. In the early days it is said to have been occasionally used by debtors trying to nip over the county border to escape either the Roxburghshire or Dumfriesshire authorities. John Scott is recorded living there in 1779 and 1782 and was explicitly listed as innkeeper there in 1788. John Oliver was a servant there in 1799 and Thomas Dryden in 1801. James Ruickbie wrote a poem after seeing the improvements made to the buildings in the early years of the 19th century. Robert Govenlock was landlord for 45 years until 1861. The hotel was much improved, with a large stabling area to the west, consisting of as many as 42 stalls, where the coaches horses were exchanged. It was a very busy place for several decades. However, with the building of the Hawick-Carlisle railway the hotel fell into disuse, its licence lapsing in 1865, and the building becoming derelict in the latter part of the 19th century. There were tall poles lining the road at intervals, which were used to guide the coaches through snow drifts; some were still in place in the early 20th century. An article from 1873 describes that the oldest loca, inhabitant stated that the name came from 'a great lady calle Miss Paul, the proprietress of a wide domain, who lived once upon a time'. The inn was resuscitated in 1900 through a private company of local gentlemen, largely to cater for cycling enthusiasts, the land being feued on good terms for use as a wayside hostelry. The more modern building was smaller than its predecessor. A bowling green was also added for a while on the western side and a 6-hole golf course was also opened. It is also the location of the Mosspaul ride out of 24 miles over rough moorland. This first took place in 1901, and is traditionally 2 weeks before Common Riding weekend. The Mosstroopers' Club erected a memorial cairn there in 2000 – 'The lasses o' Lin'op are braw, An' them o' Mosspaul they are bonnie . . . ' [JoHa] '. . . The sure march of time now of life has bereft thee, Thy glory's departed now silent Mosspaul' [WMc], 'Oo get yon spaicial feelin as the Saxhorn Band leads the Mosstroopers safe in frae Mosspaul' [IWL] (the name is probably derived from the boggy ground, with the roots being the old Celtic 'megestu' for 'open land' and 'pol' suggesting 'boggy hollow' or 'upland stream'; the 2nd syllable has also been suggested to indicate that a pole here once marked the county boundary, but that seems less likely; there is an even more fanciful suggestion that it relates to a chapel to St. Paul that may have been on the site, but there is no evidence for this, and it may be a confusion with the chapel to St. Paul which was a few miles further south at Ewes Doors; the name perhaps first appears in 1494/5 as 'mos paul'; it is 'Mospall' in 1506, 'Mospaul' in 1509/10, 'Mospall' in 1525, 'Mospaule' in 1535 and 'Mispaul' in 1782).

Mosspaul Bothy (mos-pawl-bo-thee) n. house at Mosspaul, behind the hotel. It was rebuilt fairly recently, on the site of a former building, which local tradition says was itself on the site of the ancient wayside hostel dedicated to St. Paul (for which there is no evidence of course).

Mosspaul Burn (mos-pawl-burn) n. stream that flows to the west to join the Black Burn and Lang Grain near Moosspaul. The upper part rises on Carlin Tooth and flows through Penangus Hope, forming part of the boundary between Roxburghshire and Dumfriesshire. Note that the Black Burn is also called the Mosspaul Burn as it runs to the south to join the Ewes Water.

the Mosspaul Club (thu-mos-pawl-klub) n. former organization composed of the Directors of the committee that raised funds for the rebuilding of Mosspaul Hotel, plus some of their friends. It was in some loose sense a continuation of the earlier Wisp Club. It was formed in 1900 and held an annual outing and dinner at the hotel. Dr. McLeod was the first President. The dinners were interrupted by WWI, and although it met again after the war, it petered out a few years later.

Mosspaulgreen (mos-pawl-green) n. area near Mosspaul. John Lawson was living there in 1755. It was one end of the 'Mosspaulgreen to Haremoss' Turnpike road, improved about 1770, being the Roxburghshire part of what became the A7 (it is 'Mosspalgreen' in 1755).

Mosspaul Hotel (mos-pawl-hō-tel) n. name sometimes used for the hotel at Mosspaul, formerly called the 'Mosspaul Inn'. The newer building opened in 1900, with a celebratory luncheon. An illustration 'An Unrecorded Vision' by Tom Scott was created especially for the ocasion.

Mosspaul Inn (mos-pawl-in) n. inn based at Mosspaul, once a popular stopping-off place between Carlisle and Edinburgh. It was first definitively recorded in 1767 (by Dr. Carlyle of Inveresk), but could be much older. When the road was improved in mid-18th century, this John Scott was innkeep there in at least the 1770s and 1780s and Robert Govenlock in the first half of the 19th century. In the early 1800s the inn was much improved, with a large stabling area added. After the Waverley Line was opened to Carlisle the road route was much less used and the inn fell into disrepair. In about 1900 a group of local men asked the Duke of Buccleuch for permission to rebuild the inn, partly intended for cyclists. Therefter it was usually known as the Mosspaul Hotel.

Mosspeeble (mos-pee-bul) n. farm on the A7 between Mosspaul and Langholm, just south of Unthank. Like other parts of Ewesdale, the superiority was held by the Homes in the early 16th century. Adam Scott was a farmer there in 1585 and Nichol Scott was recorded there in 1590. Margaret Armstrong was there when her will was recorded in 1657. The lands were listed in 1663 among those owned by the Scotts of Buccleuch in the Lordship of Ewesdale. It was surveyed along with other Scott of Buccleuch properties in 1718, when it was combined with 'Byercleughwater', consisting of 1592 acres, bounded by Tarras, lands of the Laird of Arkleton and Unthank. Robert Aitchison was there in at least the period 1785–97. In 1800 it was leased by William Moffat. Alexander Borthwick was farmer in 1841 and Capt. Stewart in the 1860s. There are remains of an ancient settlement south-east of the farmhouse (it appears on Gordon's c.1650 maps as 'Mospeel' and 'Mospepill' and Blaeu's 1654 map as 'Mosspeels'; it is 'Mospeule' in 1506, 'Mospeble' in 1509/10, 'Mospebill' in 1525, 'Mospeble' in 1535, 'Mospebil' in 1585, 'Mespeble' in 1590 and 'Mossepeople' in 1663; the name is probably of Cumbric origin, meaning 'field of the tents').

Mosspeeble Cottage (mos-pee-bul-ko'-eej) n. former cottage near Mosspeeble farm in the Ewes valley. John Murray and 3 others were living there in 1841.

Moss Toor (mos-toor) n. placename near Hawick, recorded in 1582. Robert Weens 'in Mostoure' witnessed an agreement in Hawick for Alan Deans and Alexander Weens.

Moss Toor (mos-toor, -tow-ur) n. ruined 15th century tower near Eckford, which could only be approached through the march from a causeway on the north side. It was destroyed in 1523, rebuilt and burned by Sir Ralph Evers men in 1544. It could be the place belonging to the Lord of Buccleuch, described as 'a proper tower of hys, called the Mose Howse', which was burned by the English in 1570. 'Mostower' is recorded in 1649 as one of the 'principal Houses on Tiot'. There is a farm of that name in the same location today.

mosstroop (mos-troop) v., arch. to freeboot, rieve – 'Whitslade is slumbering undisturbed and down in Harden Glen The tall trees murmur in their dreams of Wat's mosstrooping men' [WHO].

mosstrooper (mos-troo-pur) n. one of a band of raiders operating on the boggy moorland of the Borders around the 17th century, a marauder – 'By moor and moss and river, To the swish of swathéd grass And burnside reeds aquiver, The dead mosstroopers pass' [RSC].

Mosstrooper (mos-troo-pur) n. member of the Ancient Order of Mosstroopers. Membership consists of those who have ridden to Mosspaul and back on the annual ride-out.

the Mosstroopers' Club (thu-mos-troo-purs-klub) n. club formed of members of the Ancient Order of Mosstroopers. It existed from probably 1901, when there was a ride-out to the newly opened Mosspaul Hotel, with the riders being entertained there by the directors. There was originally a 'secret' initiation ceremony, with new members smearing the sign of 'the Hawick cross' on their foreheads. It was 'reconstituted' following the suggestion of J.E.D. Murray at a meeting in 1920. One of the main aims was to encourage mounted supporters to follow the Cornet. The first club President was T.G. Winning in 1920 and since then there has been a new President each year. The Club motto is 'Aye Defend', their song is 'The Mosstrooper's Song', and the Club badge was designed by J.E.D. Murray, with his own favourite horse's head making the main part of the design. Badges were presented to some women in the period 1920–31, with this ceasing after a female rider broke her leg. The Club's tie was designed in 1951, and is moss green with red and yellow stripes. A junior tie was designed in 1995. Perhaps the main event in the Clubs' calendar is the Smoker for the Cornet, held on the evening of the Mosspaul Rideout. The Club also holds an annual ball (since 1920), Burns night (since 1949), organises race meetings, gymkhanas and other events, and regularly contributes to causes that preserve the town's traditions. The first gymkhana was held at Mansfield Haugh in 1951. A CD was released under the Club's auspices in 2013. A book 'The Time it has Rolled' was published in 2020, decribing 100 years of the Club.

The Mosstrooper's Song (thu-mos-troopurs-sawng) n. song composed by Adam Colledge, with words by J.E.D. Murray, written in 1928 and published in 1931, with the subtitle 'Four Hunder Horsemen'. It was officially adopted as the anthem of the Mosstroopers' Club in 1937. The tune bears a similarity to Costa's 'March of the Israelites'. It has remained popular despite having a different chorus for each verse. Adam Ingles changed the accompaniment for the 1957 song book, which probably added to its popularity. It was slightly altered again by Ian Seeley for the 2001 song anthology.

Mossy Knowe (mo-see-now) n. steading on the south side of the Teviot, where the Northhouse Burn joins. William Murray was joiner there in the early 19th century. Widow Mary Murray and her family were there in 1841. This area is also know as 'Change Hoose'. The name may derive from the enclosure about 500 yards further up the River. This is a low earthen bank, much eroded, covering an area about 300 ft by 200 ft with a gap in the north-east (it is Moozieknowe' in 1841).

the Mote (thu-mō') n. Norman built earthwork, once topped by a defensive wooden tower, 312 feet (95 m) round at its base (about 30 m diameter) and 25–30 feet (about 8 m) high. It is situated in Mote Park, roughly behind 23 Loan. In the 19th century it was conjectured to be associated with Druids, sun-worship and human sacrifice, and was also believed to be a burial mound containing artefacts or perhaps human remains. In 1866 permission was saought from the Duke of Buccleuch to dig a tunnel into it. It was also traditionally said to have been a place of justice (as first stated by Robert Wilson). An archæological investigation by Dr. Alexander O. Curle in 1912 revealed an ancient ditch and several artefacts (now in the Museum) of Norman date, clearing up any doubt about its origin; this included pottery shards, a bone needle and a coin of Henry II. It was probably a fairly standard 'motte and bailey' construction (as should always have been clear, given the name), with the bailey to the north-east, enclosed in a wooden pallisade. This was the seat of the Lovels and possibly Douglases until they moved to where Drumlanrig's Tower is now. It is likely that the location had legal significance long after the wooden structure on the top was gone. In 1484 the sasine for the Barony of Hawick was granted 'at the principal messuage of the barony of Hawick, called the Mote', and the same phrase was repeated in 1514; this suggests that the site (whether or not there was still a building there) was at that point recognised as the Baron's legal headquarters. Lands in that area were once held by a branch of the Scotts, with William 'in the Mott' being one of the 24 'pensioners' of Buccleuch mentioned by Scott of Satchells. The Mote is now in the centre of a park and has a staircase (38 steps) and seat on top. Each Common Riding the Cornet and other Principals sing 'Teribus' on the top of the Mote to greet the Saturday dawn (although in 1896 this visit was shifted to 1.30 a.m.); this tradition is shown in a photograph from 1911. It may be that the Mote once formed a more important part of the Common Riding events, since in about 1710 Rev. Robert Cunningham wrote in his poem that this 'artful Mount' was where the natives 'acted all their games of May'. R.E. Scott wrote a short article on 'The Mote Hill, Hawick' for the Berwickshire Naturalists in 1968 – 'It first be torn not by the plough The ancient bonny green Moat-Knowe; For sair I fear it, too, maun fall, Though reared by hands Druidical' [AD], ''Is it natural or artificial?' asked a stranger at a little boy. 'It's neither of the two; it's just the moat'' [RJT], 'We've a Moat, which down the ages, Witnessed many a deed of fame' [TC], '... Where, into Silvert Teviot, Slitrig glides Beneath the shadow of the auld green Moat' [TK], 'While the Moat with grass o'er-growing, Dear Auld Hawick, o'ershadows thee' [TK], 'And the Moat's there, and the Haugh's there, And the auld soul-stirring sangs' [WL], 'The green auld Mote stands sentinel The echo o' St. Mary's bell Still rings oot owre hill and dell In Hawick ma Border hame' [IWL] (often locally spelled 'Moat', leading to some confusion about its origin, with people incorrectly envisioning a water-filled ditch, rather than a defensive mound; note also that hills where open air courts were held were often called 'moot-hills', and this may also be relevant to the origin, or simply another source of confusion; it is 'le Mott de Hawik' in 1511, 'le Mott in Hawyk' in 1511/2 and 'the Mote' in 1793 and 1821; other surviving examples of mottes include those at Riddell, the Haining and Phenzhopehaugh).

moter (mō'-ur) n., arch. someone who picks small small flecks from cloth – 'In our mills here you see at work masters, managers, foremen, wool-sorters, moaters, dyers, pattern and tweed designers . . . ' [RJT].

motey breid (mō-tee-breed) n., poet. a curranty loaf – 'Motey bread right plenty' [JoHo].

Mother Riley's (mu-thur-rī-leez) n. former popular name of the Bourtree Place fish and chip shop, named for the older Mrs. Shiel, after the popular films of the 1930s and 40s – 'Headin Weensland way, in Bourtree Place an auld freend speaks sae kindly, Great haggis puddins, chips and fish served up by 'Mother Riley' ' [??].

mottie (mo'-ee, mo-tee) n., arch. a peg acting as the target in quoits.

mou (mow, moo) n., arch., poet. mouth – '. . . And boomed against the milkye waye, Afore it closed its mou' ' [JTe], '. . . Were't no the greed o' that glib, growlin' mou', The State's unsatisfied, rapacious maw' [JoHa], 'The rubies gang to mak her witchin mou . . . ' [WL], 'Ne'er judge you a lass by the shape o' her mou' ' [DJ] (also spelled 'moo', 'mow' and 'mou' '; cf. Muckle Mou'd Meg; the common Teviotdale pronunciation is mow, even when written 'mou').

moud (mowd) n., poet. soil, earth of a graveyard – 'I'll fight wi' the bodie an' cangle, Till I get him laid i' the mou'd' [JoHa] (cf. mools and muil).

Mouly Sike (mow-lee-sīk) n. small stream off the north side of the Black Burn in Liddesdale.

Mount (mown') n. former farmstead where Perryshiel Sike meets the Whitrope Burn, just south of Whitropefoot. It may be the farm of that same name in Cavers Parish where James Mossman farmed before he was prosecuted in 1678 for being a Covenanter. This is probably where Gilbert Elliot 'at Mount' (son of William of Penchrise) lived around 1700. William Barton was shepherd there around 1840. In 1851 road labourer Andrew Elliot and family were there, in 1861 William Beattie's family and in 1868 John Kyle (marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

mountain dew (mown'-in-joo) n., arch. homourous name for whisky, often referring to the illicitly distilled sort – '. . . might partake of potluck with him, taste his maut and mountain dew . . . ' [RW], '. . . They're penurious and few, If they tried my Mountain Dew They would tipple on the sly, says John George Luff' [JCG].

mountain wine (mown'-in-wīn) n., arch. phrase used in the 18th and early 19th centuries for a white (or Malaga) table wine.

Mountbenger (mown'-beng-gur) n. farm in the Yarrow valley, near the Gordon Arms, where the Mountbenger Burn meets the Yarrow Water. Mountbenger Law, to the north, reaches a height of 543 m. It was formerly Crown land, leased to the Crichtons in the late 15th century. John Chisholme was there in 1579 and John Hislop in 1581 ('Estir Munbergeris' and 'Westir Munbergeris' are recorded in 1489, 'Montberger' in 1492, 'Munbarneger' in 1579, transcribed as 'Momberger' in 1649 and 'Montbernger' in c.1680; it appears as 'Mont Bernger' on Gordon's c.1650 map, while 'West Muntbernger' and 'East Muntbernger' are on the 1718 Buccleuch survey).

Mount Common (mown'-ko-min) n. lands in the Ettrick valley, by the Tima Water. Mountcommon Hill reaches a height of 462 m. The lands were owned by the Crown from about 1456. The lands were let at 'half ferme' to David Scott (probably of Buccleuch) in 1459. They were described as a land of 2 steadings in 1488, namely Deephope and Gamescleuch. They were let to Alexander Scott and David Scott in 1469. It remained Crown property until at least 1502. In 1541 it was 'Montcolmone, alias Deiphope', when occupied by William Scott, paying £10 yearly. It was once part of the parish of Rankilburn. It has long been part of the Buccleuch estates. and was listed among the farms of the Duke of Buccleuch being let by public roup in Hawick in 1755 (it is 'Moncomane' in 1456, 'Montcolman' in 1459 and 1469, 'Montcowmane' in 1488, 'Montcowman' in 1492, 'Montcommone' in 1502 and 'Mountcommon' in 1755; 'Mon Comon Hill' is marked on Blaeu's 1654 map).

mounteback (mown'-ee-bawk, mun'-ee-bawk) n., arch. charlatan, trickster – 'Aw wonder at yon mountebacks disna think shame at ganging into Mr. Nixon's seat' [RM] (many spellings exist; see also muntybank).

mounter (mown'-ur) n., arch. term used in the 19th century for a person who trims garments.

Mount Hawick (mownt-ha-wik) n. hill in Western Australia, south-west of the town of Halls Creek. It was named on April 27th 1894 by David W. Carnegie (1871–1900, youngest son of the Earl of Southesk), as described in his book 'Spinifex and Sand, A Narrative of Five Years'

Pioneering and Exploration in Western Australia' (1898). Carnegie's journey across Western Australia is described as one of the last great explorations of the Australian wilderness. He named it after his prospecting partner Lord Percy Douglas (who was also Lord Douglas of Hawick). Carnegie died in Nigeria as a result of being shot with a poisoned arrow. Mount Hawick is approximately at Latitude 18°54′ South, Longitude 127°1′ East (there is also a separate 'Hawick Hill' in Western Australia).

the Mountin Sang (thu-mown'-in-sawng) n. name sometimes used for the 'Auld Sang', particularly as sung at the Tower Knowe when the Cornet and supporters mount their horses for the marching of the Common on the Friday. The singing is led by the official 'Sang Singer'. Until 1921 it was sung from a window of a room at the Tower, while from 1922 it has been performed on the steps outside.

mouster (mow-stur) n., arch. moisture – 'For daye an' nicht thy han' was hivie apon me: my moustir is turnet intil the drouth o' simmer' [HSR].

Mouswald (mows-wawld) n. Gilbert (c.1356–c.1415) priest of Glasgow Diocese. He was connected with Mouswald Parish in Dumfriesshire. He had permission to travel to study at Oxford 1378 and in 1379/80. In 1381 there was a request for a canonry of Glasgow for him, when he already held the Rectorship of 'Ohobton' (perhaps Hoddom). In 1385 he was 'Gibert de Mussald, bachelor of canon law, vicar of Dumfres' when he requested an additional benefice, due to Dumfries being destroyed by the English. When Alexander Wardlaw died in about 1388 he gained the Prebend of Eddleston, but lost it following litigation. In 1394 there are requests for a canonry of Dunkeld or of Glasgow for him. In 1395/6 he was described as familiar and official of Bishop Matthew Glendinning. He was Archdeacon of Teviotdale from 1404 when he exchanged for another benefice with John de Merton. He appears to have still held it in 1408, but this is somewhat confusing, since William Macmorrin also held the position in that year and James Watson (or Walter) was decreed as Archdeacon in 1408, vacated by the death of William Macmorrin and held unlawfully by him. In about 1406 he served as the official who excommunicated Patrick, Abbot of Kelso, but John Forester investigated whether he had exceeded his authority. He last acted as a witness in Glasgow in 1414. He gifted a missal to Glasgow Cathedral in about 1400, as recorded in 1432/3.

move (moov) v., arch. to make war – 'Requested Osbridge and Ella, two great Princes of England, To move War against their Enemies in Scotland' [CWS].

movit (moo-vee', -vi') pp., arch. moved, instituted a legal action – '...anent the slauchteris and vtheris caussis movit be the sonis of vmquhile Adame Scot of Alanehaucht aganis me, the said Walter ...' [SB1585], '...he sall nevir thole the richteous til be muvet' [HSR], '...the warld sal alsua be sete siccer that it canna be muvet ...' [HSR].

mow (mow) n., arch. the mouth, v. to mouth, to grimace (more common in Teviotdale than the pronunciation of 'moo'; cf. mou).

Mow see Molle

Mowat (mow-i') n. John (17th C.) listed as resident at Todshaw in Wilton Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. His surname is recorded as 'Mouatt'. Rev. John (1894–1989) born at Craigard House, Lybster, son of John and Janet Thomson. He was educated locally and graduated M.A. from Edinburgh University in 1914. He served in H.M. Forces in France 1917–19. He was licensed by the Presbytery of Caithness in 1920 and was assistant at Edinburgh New North 1920–22. He was ordained as minister of St. Andrew's Kirk in 1922. He moved to Kilmarnock Princes street in 1930, Aberdeen South in 1937 and Callander St. Bride's in 1953. In 1924 he married Janet Craig (b.1897), daughter of Andrew Rugg and they had a daughter Mora Jean (b.1929). Robert (d.c.1686) tenant in Ashieburn in 1686 when his will is recorded. His surname is written 'Mowit'.

Mowbray (mō-bree) n. Arthur (18th C.) factor to James Douglas of Cavers in at least the period 1775–79. Francis (d.1603) son of John of Barnbougle, near Queensferry. His sisters had been attendants of Mary, Queen of Scots, and he probably retained Catholic sympathies. He was involved in (at least rumours of) several possible rebellions in Scotland. He was said to have been in the retinue of Walter Scott of Buccleuch at about the time of the rescue of Kinmont Willie in 1596. He was imprisoned in Edinburgh Castle in 1602, accused of treason. He used a rope made from bedding to try to escape, but fell onto the rocks and died. However, his body was still hanged, drawn and quartered. Whether he actually took part in the events on the Border in 1596 is not known. Galfrid (14th C.) appointed Sheriff of Roxburgh by Edward III in 1334.

mow-bund (mow-bund) adj., arch. mouth-bound, unable to get used to a new phrase – 'The grieve said he was mow-bund to his maister's new name Sir William' [GW].

mow-cue (mow-kyoo) n., arch. a twisted halter used for curbing a young colt (noted by J. Jamieson).

mowd (mowd) n., arch. a house moth (also spelled 'moud').

the Mowd (thu-mowd) n. nickname for someone in the late 18th or early 19th centuries (also spelled 'Moud').

mowdie (mow-dee) n., arch. a mole – 'The moudies powtelit out o' the yirth, And kyssed the synger's feete' [JTe], a house moth (used diminutively or affectionately; also spelled 'moudie').

the Mowdie (thu-mow-dee) n. nickname in use in the early 19th century, perhaps the same as the Mowd or Wattie Mowdie.

Mowdie Maxwell (mow-dee-mawks-wel) n. fictional character in 'The Gutterbludes', described as 'Alex Maxwell Esq. o' the Kirkstyle'.

mowdie-wart (mow-dee-war') n., arch. a mole – '. . . we used to find when we war callants at Crailing Ha', a'nk we said the moudiwarts turned them up' [JAHM] (also written 'moudiwart').

mowe (mow) v., arch. to mow (also spelled 'mow', but note the pronunciation).

the muckle leet (thu-mu-kul-lee') n. phrase used in the 18th and early 19th centuries for the list of acquaintances named by the friends listed by the Cornet. This formed the longer list of people formally invited to the Common Riding festivities – 'There was the Cornet's leets, enumerating his own circle of acquaintances, and there was the 'muckle leet', prepared by the Cornet in consultation with his immediate associates' [WSR].

Muckle Michael (mu-kul-mI-kul) n. nickname for Michael Anderson of Denholm.

Muckle Mou'd Meg (mu-kul-mood-, -mowd-meg) n. actually Agnes Murray, daughter of the Laird of Elibank, apparently hard to marry off because of her appearance, she eventually married Sir William Scott of Harden in a choice between her and the gallows. Details of the real marriage are preserved in 2 separate contracts, separated by a few months in 1611. The romanticised story is told in the ballad, one version of which is Hogg's 'The Fray at Elibank'. Wullie Landles also wrote a long poem based on the story – 'In loan or steedin' whene'er they saw her, Muckle Mou'd Meg was the name they'd caa her' [WL], 'What Am A ti dae, mun, what Am A ti dae? Ave either got ti mairry Meg or face the hingin tree. Was ever man gien sic a choice, doon through a history? What Am A ti dae, mun, what Am a ti dae?' [IWL].

muckle ti mean (mu-kul-ti-meen) adj., arch. much to be pitied, to be greatly sympathised with – 'Folk are muckle ti mean that beide on aether seide o the Mairches atween twae prood an towty countries 'at canna grei an are aye cuissen-oot' [ECS], 'Even my douce auld neebor The Moat Looks muckle to mean and lane' [DH], 'The poor o' the parish are muckle to mean In a but or a ben they dwell by their lane' [RF] (noted by E.C. Smith).

the Muckle Wat (thu-mu-kul-waw') n. nickname for a chimney sweep in the 19th century. W.N. Kennedy quoted some lines of poetry from his son, without explicitly naming the individuals involved – 'My blessings on you, Muckle Watt! For sooping lums to keep me fat, Aw ken aw'm mean, an' lean, an' lazy, The mair's the neid aw hae to praise ye, Ye aye hae served me in ma neid An' turned the blackest soot to breid! Were ye to dee, 't'wad suin be sein Aw'd sell baith soot, and soot machine'.

muckle wheel (mu-kul-wheel) n., arch. simple design for a spinning wheel popular in the 18th century. In the earliest form there was a large, wooden fly-wheel, which was propelled by a shove of the hand, with the operator walking backwards to draw out the yarn, the length of which was then wound on a spindle and the process repeated. Later a drive belt linked the small spindle to the large wheel, which was still typically driven by hand until foot treadles came in much later. This was the first machine to be widely used in the beginnings of the knitwear industry in Hawick, and was common in homes into the 19th century. It was effectively replaced by the 'spinning jenny' – 'The muckle wheel on which our grandmothers or great-grandmothers spun consisted of a large fly-wheel, which turned the spindle . . . ' [DMW], '. . . a small trade in yarns spun by women on the 'muckle' wheel . . . ' [WSR] (also known as the 'meikle wheel'; cf. little wheel).

Mudie (mu-dee) n. James C. (19th C.) teacher of the Academy based at the Subscription Rooms in the mid-19th century. He was later joined by James Brand, but apparently a clash of personalities led Brand to leave and start his own school. The school was known as 'Hawick High School' and was in competition with the public 'Buccleuch School' across the street. It ran until around 1874. He eventually wound up the school and left Hawick, possibly because of the competition from 'Brand's Schuil'. He also served as Session Clerk for Hawick Free Kirk 1866–74. In about 1874 he was recorded owning part of the former lands of Patrick Cunningham in Hawick (see also Moodie).

Mudie's monkeys (mu-deez-mung-keez) n., pl. former nickname for pupils at the Subscription Rooms Academy, taught by Mr. Mudie, and used as a taunt by pupils from the Grammar School ('Dodds's whulps').

muffatei (mu-faw-tī) n., arch. a muffetee, small muff, usually worn over the wrists.

mug (mug) v. to handle messily, touch with dirty fingers, bungle – 'deh mug they photis', n., arch. a bungle, instance of messy handling.

mugger (mu-gur) n., arch. an itinerant tinker – 'Originally muggers were a bohemian class of the tinker (tinkler in Hawick) kind, but the word has come to denote 'people of disreputable habits and appearance'. An inference is that the old name of mugger was derived from the nature of the wares sold by these people, viz., earthenware, crockery, 'mugs', etc.' [ECS], '. . . A' stannin', droolin', at your place, Like hauf-sterved muggers: Sma' credit to the human race, Ye hungry buggers!' [DH].

muggit (mu-gee', -gi') adj., arch. exhausted – 'A'm fair muggit oot' [GW].

muggit (mu-gee', -gi') adj., arch. soiled or spoiled through ill-use – 'Muggeet is allied closely to maiggeet, though not necessarily inferring actual handling or fingering, whereas the latter term does. On the other hand, the rough 'fondling' which a kitten often receives at the hands of a child is more often spoken of as a muggeen than as a maigeen, probably more from the effect than from the deed' [ECS] (see mug and cf. maigit).

muify (mi-fee) adj., poet. steamy, humid, warm and moist – 'Oot in the muify stable She socht a place to lie' [WL] (cf. muth).

muil (mil, mūl) n., arch. mould, earth, especially on a grave (cf. muils and mools).

muil (mil) n., arch. a mule.

muil in wi (mil-in-wi) v., arch. to seek intimate acquaintance with, especially by insinuation – 'Ti muill in wui = to insinuate or wheedle one's friendship or companionship upon another' [ECS].

muiller (mi-lur) v., arch. to crumble, moulder away, cause to crumble – 'Ti muiller bread' [GW], 'Frost muillers the clods' [GW] (noted by E.C. Smith).

muillery (mi-lu-ree) adj., arch. crumbly.

muillin (mi-lin) n., arch. a crumb – '. . . yet the dogs eet o' the mulins whilk fa' frae their maisters' table' [HSR], 'There was a gey little hote o muilleens left for Lazarus!' [ECS], 'A herbour for auld muillins O' lang-forgotten pieces . . . ' [DH] (also spelled 'muilleen' and 'mulin').

muils (milz) n., pl., arch. earth of a graveyard – 'Let this beide as a merk o the respeck o the wreiter . . . ti yin that may the muils lie licht on; the auld yeh-teime keeper o Jethart Aibbey!' [ECS] (cf. muil and mools).

muin (mūn, min, moon) n., arch. the Moon – 'A duil mirk nicht an' nae muin' [JAHM], 'In a far Scots moor 'neath the siller mune, A plover's cry in the cluds abune . . . ' [JYH], 'Wi' awe-struck face, the startled mune Stood still an' glowered' [WP], 'Through the hert o' the hills, By the licht o' the stars and the mune' [WL], 'The mune she shines sae bricht, Till a' the yirth is marlt wi' The grymins o' her licht' [DH], '. . . wi a last gledge at St. Mary's clock keekin owre the ruifs like a sma local moon' [DH], a month – 'He wad sit a muin' [GW] (also spelled 'mune' and pronounced with a variety of vowel sounds).

muir (mūr, mewr, moor, mār) n. moor, moorland, unenclosed upland – 'The said day the baylyeas and towne Counsell did appoynt and ordaine the meiths and marches of the Common muire, moss and pasturage to be ridden . . . ' [BR1712], 'Find the rate or value put upon the Long-moss, Todshaw-moss, Threep-head-moss, and the 20 acres of muir and spread ground, shall be charged to the parties having the servitude of casting peat and turf in these mosses and muir' [DCW1765], '. . . Yer haunts nae mair she will molest, On muir or mead' [JH], 'I met a man ootbye the muir; He watcht a rabbit in a snare' [DH] (note that the word is now most often pronounced mār, while the older pronunciation was mūr or a deep vowel combining i and ā; it is not always clear which pronunciation is meant when it is written 'muir').

the Muir (thu-mūr, mewr, moor, mār) n. Hawick Moor (see also the Mair).

the Muir (thu-mūr, mewr) n. former name for lands in Liddesdale, recorded as 'The Mure' in the 1541 rental roll. The precise location is uncertain, but they are listed between Brighouse and Heuchhouse, with a value of 5 shillings and 4 pence.

Muir (mewr) n. Sir Adam of Rowallan (14th C.) son of William. He married Janet Muir, from the Pokellie side of the family. His children included: Adam, who succeeded; Sir Reginald, who was Chamberlain of Scotland; and Elizabeth, who married King Robert II. Sir Adam of Rowallan (d.1399) son of Sir Adam. He married Janet, daughter of John Danielson of that Ilk. He was succeeded by Archibald and probably also had daughters Jean and Elizabeth. Alexander (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Margaret Thomson and their children included Bessie (b.1678), Agnes (b.1680) and an unnamed child (b.1687). The witnesses in 1680 were Walter Paisley and Dand Gray (based on which, he probably lived at Weensland). He could be the Alexander who received money from the Wilton poor box in 1705. Sir Archibald of Rowallan (d.1298) son of Sir Gilchrist. He probably held lands in upper Teviotdale, like his father. He married Margaret, daughter of Sir John Montgomery. He was succeeded by his son William and also had daughters Jean and Margaret. He died in battle near Berwick. Archibald of Rowallan (d.1426) son of Sir Adam. He probably held the lands of Commonside, Dryden and Harwood, like generations of his family before. He married Euphame, daughter of Kennedy of Dunmuir. His eldest son John died before him and he was succeeded by his grandson John, who died at Flodden. Chuck growing up in Hawick, he played rugby with the P.S.A. and Y.M. He was full-back for Hawick R.F.C. in the 1960s and moved to Langholm in 1971. He was also a referee from about 1982, overseeing his first international match in 1997. Sir Gilchrist (d.c.1280) possibly son of Sir Adam. He was said to have gained the family seat of Rowallan Castle through marrying Isabel, daughter and heir of Walter Comyn. However, another version (in the 17th century family history by Sir William Muir) states that he was dispossessed by Comyn until Alexander III raised a sufficient force to eject the Comyns and re-establish him at Rowallan. He fought at the Battle of Largs. He was succeeded by Sir Archibald of Rowallan. He was also said by his 17th century descendant to have acquired lands in Roxburghshire through his marriage to Isabel Comyn, specifically 'Cuminside, draden and harwoods'; these are surely the lands of Commonside, Dryden and Harwood in upper Teviotdale. Support for the connection with the Comyns comes from part of the family shield of the Muirs of Rowallan being that of the Comyns. His family were still associated with the lands of Commonside, Dryden and Over Harwood until the early 16th century. Gordon (1959–) son of Bob and Jean, he attended the High School and then trained as a graphic designer in London and New Mexico. He worked for a while as a woodblock artist in Tokyo and in 1984 was a founding partner of Border Image. Along with his old school friend Doug Veitch, he brought the Zimbabwean band the Bhundu Boys to Britain in 1986. He then managed them on a year long tour, which was pivotal in the World Music movement of the time. As a sculptor he has several pieces in public spaces, e.g. 'Alex the Goose and Friend' and 'Leap of Faith' in Belfast, a set of pieces in Coatbridge, a bronze plaque 'Bridges of Pages' on the Forth Road Bridge and a memorial to the men who died building the Forth Rial Bridge. In 2020 he and Paul Hogarth re-designed the landscaping around the Hornshole Monument. James (17th C.) resident of Woll in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll. His surname is written as 'Muere'. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at Hornshole in 1731. He married Jean Lamb in 1720 and their children included: John (b.1721); William (b.1723); Isabel (b.1726); Janet (b.1728); James (b.1731); and Walter (b.1733). The witnesses in 1731 were James Dryden and John Scott. James (b.c.1770s) servant at Roan according to the ballots for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1799 and 1801. Jean (1933–) school-teacher and long-time Cavers resident, originally from Banffshire. She married Acting Father Bob, and has long been involved with the Archæological Society. She is author of 'Cavers: a keek in the window' (2000), for which she also provided sketches. She also wrote 'Airchie Oliver's a Hunder and a Half' and co-wrote 'Airchie Oliver's Birthday Cairds' with Jim Coltman. In 2015, she, along with her husband and son Gordon, wrote an article about the leaders of the Scottish Renaissance, MacDiarmid and Johnstone being friends of the family. John of Rowallan (d.1513) grandson of Robert and son of John and Elizabeth Stewart. In 1508 he was directed by the Privy Council to grant 'warrandice' to George Scott of Whames (grandson of Stephen Scott of Muirhouse) in the lands of Dryden, Commonside and Over Harwood. In 1510/1 George Scott wrote a letter of acquittance, stating that he (John) had paid him (George) the £40 and 14 merks owed for these lands. He may thus be the last Muir of Rowallan to have been associated with lands in upper Teviotdale. He married Margaret, 3rd daughter of Archibald Boyd of Bonshaw; they had 4 sons (including Mungo, who succeeded) and 4 daughters. He was killed at Flodden. His great-great-great-grandson was a poet and politician, who wrote a family history. John (d.1579) Rector of Ashkirk from about the time of the Reformation. He is recorded as holding the parsonage of Ashkirk Parish until his demission in 1570, when it was presented to John Hamilton; he is there recorded as 'John Murie'. He was deprived in 1573 for failing to subscribe to articles of religion. He is presumably the same 'Sir John Muir' who died in 1579 when the vicarage of Ashkirk was given to Thomas Cranstoun. John (17th C.) recorded as being in Weensland in 1687 when his daughter Helen was baptised in Hawick Parish. His wife was Isobel Blyth and the witnesses were James Gray and James Miller. He could be the resident of the west-side of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. It is possible he is the John 'mure' who witnessed (along with Walter Paisley) the baptism in Roberton Parish of a 'bastard child' of Adam Scott of Burnfoot in 1686. John (17th C.) carrier listed among those who subscribed to the fund for the new Kirk bell in Hawick in 1693/4. He could be the same as the John who was in Weensland. John (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Greenbank in 1785, 1786 and 1788, with his surname recorded as 'Moor'. He married Esther Turnbull in 1784 and their children included: Nelly (b.1785); James (b.1786); and John (b.1788). He may be the 70-year old recorded at Deanburnhaugh in the 1841 census, living with Janet (probably his daughter), and Walter Nichol (who later married Janet). John (18th/19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf, recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Robert of Rowallan (d.1504) from near Kilmaurs in Ayrshire, he was nicknamed 'the Rud'. He held the lands of Dryden, Commonside and Over Harwood in 1462 as security for a loan to Stephen Scott of Muirhouse. He paid 200 merks for these lands, the document being signed in Edinburgh (presumably where he lived). His name is written 'Robertus Mure de Rowallane'. In 1477 he gave a discharge to Robert Scott of 'Dogehauch' for the balance of the loan. It seems unlikely he ever lived in upper Teviotdale, but his family had been associated with these lands from the 13th century. He married Margaret Newton, daughter of the Laird of Mitchellhill. They had 4 sons (including John, who succeeded) and a daughter. In 1508 his grandson John was directed by the Privy Council to grant 'warrandice' to George Scott in the same lands. Rev. Robert (1832/3–1882) from Ayr, he became minister at Holm of Balfron and then minister of Allars Church from 1864. He is said to have been of saintly character and with a very liberal outlook. He suffered from ill-health for several years and died in office, leaving a 9 month vacancy at Allars. He wrote 'The Perpetuity of Christian Friendship' in Logan's 'Words of Comfort' and contributed articles to 'Forward'. He married Susan, daughter of Dundee Merchant William Duncan. They had 4 daughters and 1 son: one daughter wrote short stories; one was a classical scholar; Anne Davidson, who became a well-known watercolour artist; and Sir Robert. Sir Robert, F.R.S. (1864–1959) son of Rev. Robert, he was born at Balfron, Stirlingshire, but his father became minister at Hawick shortly after he was born. He spent 16 years growing up in Hawick. He was educated at Hawick Grammar School and Teviot Grove Academy and then Edinburgh University. He chose to follow a career in pathology, first working in Edinburgh, then being offered the Chair of Pathology at St. Andrews and then he was Professor of Pathology at the University of Glasgow 1899–1936. He served on the Medical Research Council and many other bodies related with cancer and disease. During WWI he had a position overseeing hospitals in Scotland. He became a Fellow of the Royal Society in 1911, had a royal medal in 1929, was knighted in 1934 and received the Lister Medal in 1936. He was also a member of the Royal Society of Edinburgh. He returned to Hawick in 1926 as the Callants' Club guest. He was said to have a shy and aloof character, but delighted in deflating pompous colleagues. He never married, but in later life live with 2 of his sisters in Edinburgh. At the age of almost 90 he flew to Australia to visit his eldest sister. He died in Edinburgh. His 'Manual of Bacteriology' (1897) went through several editions, and his 'Textbook of Pathology' (1924) was extremely successful. Robert 'Bob' (1930–) local vet, who was Acting Father in 1975. He was the first Acting Father to accompany the 'Big Threi' to the Coble on the Saturday. He served as President of the Callants' Club. In 2020 he featured in a video for the song 'The Grey', written by his son Gordon. He is married to Jean and father of Gordon, John and Janet. William of Rowallan (13th/14th C.) son of Sir Archibald. He probably owned the lands in upper Teviotdale that were first held by his grandfather. He married a daughter of William Lindsay of Craigie and was succeeded by Sir Adam (formerly written 'Mure' and sometimes 'Moor').

muir-band (mewr-bawnd) n., arch. a hard layer of sand and clay below the topsoil, impervious to water, and believed to hinder the full exploitation of the land – '. . . there exits, not much below the surface, a stiff, dense and sterile clay, which denies all passage to moisture, as well as to the roots of plants . . . commonly denominated 'muir-band' . . . ' [RJE] (also muir-bund).

muir-burn (mewr-burn) n., arch. a controlled burning of moorland to encourage new growth – '. . . How grand the scene yon russet down displays, While far the withering heaths with moorburn blaze!' [JL].

the Muir Burn (thu-mūr-, mār-burn) n. stream that joins the Liddel at the very southernmost point of Castleton Parish. It forms part of the boundary between Roxburghshire and Dumfriesshire. The area has many signs of ancient use, including rig and furrow field markings, enclosures, a former lime quarry and workings, and several burnt mounds. Additionally there is the site of a chapel, on the east bank of the stream, but over the Dumfriesshire line. The chapel remains measure about 12.5 m by 5 m, with a doorway on the south side. The hill there is still known as Chapel Knowe. This is probably the 'landis of Mureburne' listed among the Dumfriesshire possessions of the Scotts of Buccleuch possessed in the 1663 marriage contract of Anne, Countess of Buccleuch (it is 'Mire burn' in 1718, 'Mare Burn' on Stobie's 1770 map and 'The Mareburn' in 1821).

muir-cheeper (mewr-chee-pur) n., arch. the meadow pipit, Anthus pratensis (also moss-cheeper and titlin).

muircock (mewr-, mār-kok) n. a male red grouse – 'Where the muircock cries its burley Owre the heather plaided braes' [WL]'.

Muir Ferm (mewr-ferm) n. former name for Pilmuir farm.

Muirferm (mewr-ferm) n. former name for a farmstead in Wilton Parish. It is recorded as 'Moorfarm' on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, with James Grieve the farmer there. It is unclear where this was, but presumably distinct from Muirfield.

Muirfield (mewr-feeld) n. area between Groundistone and Hassendean. The lands and farm were formerly part of Hassendean Common, which was divided in the late 18th century. William Douglas was recorded there in 1772 and John Oliver in 1791. George Bell was farmer there in 1797. A plan of the lands was drawn up for the Earl of Minto in 1813. Andrew Little was shepherd there in 1835. Labourer Adam Brydon was there in 1841. A drove road used to pass over here, between Hassendean Common and Groundistone. To the north-east are signs of rig and furrow cultivation. To the north of the farm is a triangulation station at a height of 262 m (also called 'Moorfield', so marked on Stobie's 1770 map).

Muirfield (mewr-feeld) n. former name for lands in Abbotrule. It is recorded in the 1678 valuation roll as 'Muirfield acres (Abbotrule)' when Charles Kerr held the teinds.

muirfowl (mewr-fowl) n., arch. the red grouse, Lagopus scoticus – 'The muirfowl a' they kenn'd her weel, The maukin oft she gar'd them squeal' [JH].

Muirheid (mewr-heed) n. (Muirhead) Andrew see Andrew de Durisdeer. George (15th/16th C.) son and heir of Robert of Windyhill in Dumfriesshire. He appears to have had a dispute with Douglas of Cavers over the £10 lands of Denholm Mains. He was recorded in 1490 as 'Master George Murehede' when he granted a charter of lands within Denholm and Cavers. He gave sasine of these lands to William Douglas of Cavers in 1491/2. He was said to be a 'familiar servitor' of the King and was probably related to Master Richard 'Murehead' who was Lord Clerk Register and Secretary. He married Anabelle Grierson , with whom he is recorded in a charter for Windyhills in 1506/7. Robert (15th C.) recorded in 1479 when James Alemoor of that Ilk and John Turnbull 'in the Fithe' were ordered to pay rentals to him for his lands in Cavers Parish. Additionally William Douglas of Cavers did not appear when called to pay the £25 owed for the mails of these same lands. In 1490 his son and heir George had a charter from James IV for lands in 'the dominical lands of Denhame, and ten-pound land lying in the town and territory of Caveris.' He is recorded as being of 'Windihillis', which is probably the village of Windyhills near Closeburn, Dumfriesshire. Witnesses to the document were Bishop Robert Muirhead of Glasgow and Dean Richard Muirhead of Glasgow, who were presumably relatives. Rev. Robert (1706/7–84) minister of Southdean Parish from 1756 until his death. He married Elizabeth Ainslie in 1779, and she died in 1800. Robert 'Bob' (1933–2018) local football manager. He was born in Steeland, Fife, left school to become a carpenter, but then joined the Merchant Navy. He did his National Service with the Black Watch and then joined the Territorial Army. Stationed at Stobs Camp, he met Rosaline (or 'Rosie') Whillans in Hawick and the couple were married in 1955. He helped organised dances in the Town in the 50s and 60s. He worked at Wilson & Glenny's, and was then a railway fireman, before moving to Pringle's and then Slumberdown. As a lover of football, he was a life-long Rangers fan, and got involved with team management in Hawick. He managed Hawick United for 8 years, a period which included the team winning the grand slam of 5 trophies. He then managed Hawick Royal Albert, leading them to win the East of Scotland Cup. He enjoyed travelling in Europe and hiking in Scotland. He was a founder member of the Hawick Bodybuilding Club, was part of the committee that created the Youth Centre and was a life member of the Burns Club. The family lived on Wilton Path and Overhall Road; he and his wife lived to celebrate their 60th wedding anniversary. His daughter Lesley was born in 1955 and his grandson Greg McLeod was Cornet in 2003.

Muirhoose (mewr-hoos) n. Muirhouse, former name for lands in the barony of Crichton and county of Roxburghshire. The lands were owned by a branch of the Scotts in the 15th century. The name is lost, and the precise location is uncertain (but somewhere near Pathhead). Stephen Scott had a charter of Muirhouse in 1450 and a sasine in 1463; he appears to be the same man who was also 'of Wilton' as well as other lands, and was a son of Robert Scott of Rankleburn. Muirhouse was inherited by Stephen's son Robert, who had a sasine in 1464, then there was a dispute over inheritance by Robert's son George (also of Borthaugh), with a counter-claim by Patrick, Earl of Bothwell. George Scott must have won this case, since his son John had a confirmation in these lands in 1526/7 (note that there are many other places of the same name, including one near Lilliardsedge, another near Dyfesdale in Dumfriesshire and at least 6 others in Midlothian; it is 'Murhaus' in 1464 and 'Mvrhous' in 1505).

Muirhooselaw (mewr-hoos-law) n. Muirhouselaw, place name south of Maxton, being essentially the same place as Ancrum Moor and Lilliard's Edge, and hence sometimes referred to as the site of the Battle of Ancrum Moor in 1545. A trial of 1502 describes how 4 Henrisons were taken from their farm there by rievers and ransomed to the English. It is recorded being leased from Thomas Hamilton to John Haliburton in the 17th century. Haliburton of Muirhouselaw gave evidence at the trial of George Turnbull of Belses in 1603. Many of the buildings of the estate are in a picturesque pink-red sandstone. There is a triangulation pillar above the farmhouse, at a height of 178 m (the name 'Muirhoose', now lost, deriving from the Old English 'mor hus', meaning 'house on the moor', first appears about 1200, while this name first appears in 1529 as 'Murrieslaw', is 'Moreislaw' in 1603, 'Murouslaw' in 1621 and transcribed 'Morislaw' in c.1680; it is 'Murrislaw' on Blaeu's c.1654 map).

Muirknowe (moor-, mewr-, mūr-now) n. former name for lands in the Barony of Riddell. According to the services of heirs in 1636 and 1669 they corresponded to part of the lands of West Lilliesleaf (it is 'Murieknow' in 1636 and 'Muirieknow' in 1669).

muirlan (mewr-lin) n., poet. moorland – 'When Hawick bonnie brig ye cross, An' up the muirlan' striddle, Ye canna lang be at a loss, Ca' in to Rummie Riddell' [JR], 'The sun o' the simmer's on meadow an' muirlan', An' sweet blaws the breeze thro' the haw-blossom'd dean' [JoHa].

muirland (moor-, mewr-, mūr-lind) n. moorland – 'The breeze, to her, cam fragrance-fraught, Frae muirland and frae lea' [JTe], 'Thy name is a fame from the Solway to Cheviot, O'er all the wide Border, by muirland and lea' [JTe], '... Bi the burns o' the muirland where lanely whaups cry' [DH], 'When the snell wind is nirlin sair, Blawin' in owre the muirland bare ...' [WL], adj. relating to moorland – 'Its true eneugh, us muirland fouk, Get aye the first o' blasts when blawin'' [JoHa], ''Here, haud my plaid, man, an' my stick', Cries oot some muirland waggie' [JoHa], 'Gin ye will leave your muirland hame, An' kin o' low degree, To wed wi' ane o' noble name, – Wi' rank an' wealth to gie!' [JT], 'I like to drink the muirland wells, For that was aye the hame for me' [DA], '... Ma mother's muirland hame' [JEDM].

Muirlaw (mewr-, mūr-law) n. former name for lands in the Barony of Cavers. It is listed as 'Murelaw' in a 1511 charter of the Douglases of Cavers, along with 'Drileth, Elrechill, and Dennummains'. It was still in the Barony of Cavers when inherited by Sir William Douglas in 1687 and by his brother Archibald in 1698. The precise location is unknown, but presumably near Denholm (it is 'Murlaw' in 1687 and 'Muirlaw' in 1698).

muir-man (mūr-, moor-man) n., poet. an inhabitant of the moors, outdoor worker, particularly on the Border – 'It fell about the Lammas time, When the muir-men won their hay' [T], 'Muirmen were mawin' hay far doun The hill-side, lowne an' braid ...' [ECB].

Muir Park (mewr-pawrk) n. former name for lands in Minto Parish, valued at £29 4s in 1779. It was listed separately from Minto Muir Park, and was mong lands disponed to Sir John Dalrymple in liferent. In 1811 it was owned by Lord Minto.

Muir Plantin (mewr-plan-tin) n. plantation to the east of the A7 between Newton and Groundistone Heights, lying to the south of Muirfield.

Muirshaugh (mewrz-hawch) n. former lands in the Barony of Hawick. The exact location is unknown. They are listed along with Kirkton and others as part of the lands for which Anna Duchess of Buccleuch was superior in 1686 (it is 'Mureshaugh' in 1686).

Muirside (mewr-sīd) n. former name for a farm in Wilton Parish. It may be the same as Muirfield. James Nichol was there in 1791.

Munro (mun-rō) n. Adam (b.1834) son of William, he continued the rope-making business of his father. In 1861 he was still living with his parents and siblings at 1 Bourtree Place. He married Christina Govenlock and their children inclided: Mary (b.1871); and William Alexander (b.1873), who was a chemist. Daniel (b.1831/2) from Ireland, he was appointed Superintendent of the Roxburghshire Constabulary by the new Town Council in 1861. In the 1861 census he was living on Jedburgh High Street with his wife Elizabeth and children Janet, Archibald, Helen and Daniel. He was given an increased police force to improve law and order on the streets of Hawick. In 1865 he gave evidence at the trial of the men charged with robbing the Museum. He was dismissed in 1867 and charged with breach of trust and embezzlement. Eliza (b.1829/30) daughter of Congrgational minister and rope-maker William. She was mistress of the Infants' School on Buccleuch Street in 1852. John (17th C.) listed among the subscribers for the new Kirk bell in 1693/4. He is probably the John, married to Isobel Henderson, whose children born in Hawick included: Helen (b.1680); William (b.1683); and Agnes (b.1687). Robert (1868–1955) born in Alness, he was educated at Aberdeen Grammar School and Edinburgh University. Admitted to the Scottish Bar in 1893, he became King's Counsel in 1910. He was Liberal M.P. for Wick 1910–18 and Liberal M.P. for Roxburgh and Selkirk after 1918–22, the first such M.P. after the Border Burghs constituency was dissolved. He was Privy Counsellor from 1913 and Lord Advocate 1913–16, before becoming Secretary of State for Scotland 1916–22. He later became Lord Alness, Chief Justice Clerk. He was created Baron Alness on his retirement from the bench in 1933. He was later Lord-in-Waiting to King George VI and awarded the Grand Cross of the Order of the British Empire. He opened the War Memorial in the Park at a special ceremony in 1920. Rev. William (1798/9–1883) rope-maker from Berwick who became Congregational Church minister for around 40 years. In Pigot's 1825/6 directory he was a rope and twine maker and flax dresser on the High Street. He witnessed a baptism for weaver Charles Scott in 1826. He appears to have first become minister of the newly (re-)formed congregation in 1836, which faltered for several years, with a 2nd splinter Church also forming in 1842. In Pigot's 1837 directory he was a rope-make at the East Port and in the 1841 census he was at 'Eastend' and still a rope-maker. By 1851 he was at 1 Bourtree Place and minister of the 'Cong. Union Chapel'. In Slater's 1852 directory he was still listed as a roper-maker, and separately as minister of the Independent Chapel on Melgund Place. In 1847 he invited John Rutherford of Kelso to preach at a series of prayer meetings in Hawick, which took place in the Spring of 1848, ultimately lasted for 7 weeks, and led to the founding of the Evangelical Union Kirk in Hawick (the present Congregational Kirk). However, some dispute led to him to withdraw his support from this 'mission', hence the forming of the E.U. Kirk, separate from his own. He was Chairman of the Parochial Board for 20 years and active in public service. He was also first Vice-President of the Hawick Total Abstinence Society. In 1866 he donated to the Museum 'part of the bourtree which formed one of the ancient boundaries of Hawick and in 1867 he donated 4 copper coins. He was noted for courageously visiting the sick and dying during the 1849 cholera epidemic, as a result of which he was given a public funeral when he died. He was succeeded as minister in 1873 by Rev. W.L. Walker, by which time the congregation must have been dwindling. He is probably the William Munro who is recorded in about 1874 as owner of the 'particate lands' that had earlier been owned by Robert Herkness. He married Alison, daughter of Yeddie Smail. Their children included: Alexander (b.1826); Eliza (b.1830), who was an infant teacher; Adam (b.1834), who continued the rope-making business; Agnes (b.c.1837); Alison (b.c.1839); Margaret ('Maggie', b.c.1842); William Alexander (b.c.1844); Charles (b.c.1847); Mary (b.c.1850); and an unnamed son who died in 1840. He may also have had a son John who, along with 2 other Hawick men, was in a tweed manufacturing partnership in Cork (but there may be confusion over the name). A portrait of him exists. He is buried in Wellogate Cemetery (with ropemaker symbols). William Alexander (b.c.1844) son of Rev. William, he grew up on Bourtree Place. He was a clerk at Thomas Purdom & Sons. He was connected with Allars Kirk for its last 5 decades, being Session Clerk. He was described as being 'notable for his fine appearance'. In 1861 he donated war dress from

New Zealand to the Museum (also written 'Monroe').

Murray (mu-ri) n. Adam (15th/16th C.) resident of Muselee. In 1502 John Scott 'in Walls' had remission for stealing a horse from him. Adam (17th C.) witness to a baptism for William Scott and Helen Elliot in Hawick in 1639. Adam (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Agnes Gledstains and their children included: Rachel (b.1672); and James (b.1689), who was baptised in Kelso. Adam (17th C.) tenant in Templehall on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Adam (17th C.) tenant in Mains in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. He may have been son of James, recorded in Mains in 1682. Adam (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Margaret Hutton and their children included: William (b.1762); Adam (b.1766); and John (b.1779). Adam (18th/19th C.) resident of Mervinslaw in Southdean Parish according to the 1799 ballot list for the Militia. His occupation appears to be 'Waxdresser' or perhaps 'Flaxdresser' (but is hard to read). Adam (b.c.1780) driver in Newcastleton according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish. Perhaps the same Adam married Helen (or 'Nelly') Oliver and their children, baptised in Castleton Parish, included: David (b.1806); George (b.1808); Janet (b.1810); and William (b.1812). Adam (b.1827/8) from Newcastleton, he was a baker at 41 High Street. His wife was Ann and their children included Thomas, Christina, Margaret and James. He could be the Adam who in 1865 donated 2 coins to the Museum. Adam (1835–1922) born in Hawick, son of William and Agnes Stevenson. He was a member of the Hawick Dramatic Club. He emigrated to Ontario, living in Waterloo Township and Galt, where he worked as a spinner and tobacconist. He firstly married Lillias, daughter of Francis Napier Scott and secondly married Mary Frances Dobbin. He had 10 children in Canada and was buried in Bridgeport Free Cemetery, Kitchener, Ontario. Agnes (17th C.) listed at Todshawhaugh among 'The poor in Hauick Parioch' on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Agnes (b.1806/7) grocer on the Loan. She was listed in Slater's 1852 directory. In 1841 she was living with her husband William, a woollen spinner and their children. In 1851 she was a widow, living at about 11 Loan with her children Thomas, Adam, William, Agnes and Robert. It is not known what her maiden name was. Agnes (b.1822/3) straw hat maker in Newcastleton, listed in Pigot's 1837 directory. In 1841 she was living with her sisters Jane (also a straw hat maker) and Margaret (draper and spirit dealer) and brother William (surgeon) at about 1 South Hermitage Street. In 1851 she was a milliner, living with her sisters Margaret and Jane. Agnes (1829–1916) daughter of Andrew of Spittal Tower. She married railway guard James Lambert and later kept a washhouse at 29 Wellogate Place. Her daughter Helen kept up the wash-house. Alexander (15th C.) recorded in 1428/9 when he gave a sasine at the command of Archibald, Earl of Douglas, of the Barony of Hawick to William Douglas of Drumlanrig. He may have been an officer or bailie for the Baron or Earl, or possibly he held the rights of the Barony while the heir to Drumlanrig was a minor. He is probably the 'Sandris of murray' on an assize for lands in Bemersyde in 1425. He is also probably the 'Alexandrum de Murrase' who was on the inquest for the lands of Eilrig in 1426. Probably the same 'Alexandro de Murray' witnessed the 1431 document transferring Heap from the Langlands' to the Scotts; in his attestation to the same transfer he is 'Alysander off Murray off Cranstoun'. In 1432 he witnessed a charter for lands in Sprouston being granted to Thomas Cranston of that Ilk and another for William Cranston being granted Nether Crailing in 1434. In 1443 he is 'Alexander 'de Moravia' of Cranston when witness to a charter for William Cranston of Crailing. Alexander (d.bef. 1485) Rector of Hawick. He was 2nd son of John of Philiphaugh, brother of Patrick of Falahill and uncle of John, 'the Outlaw Murray'. As a cleric, he was sometimes referred to as 'Master'. He was mentioned regularly in the Exchequer Rolls from at least 1460, being King's Receiver and then Clerk of the Chancery from 1465. He was Clerk and Director of the Chancery of Scotland in 1477. He was also one of the Auditors of the Exchequer and a Canon of Moray from at least 1464. His name appears between 1476 and 1482 as Rector of Hawick. In 1476/7 he was listed as Rector of Hawick and Directory of the Chancery when he has a charter for lands in Berwick. In 1479 he brought an action against David Scott of Buccleuch for the sum of 44 pounds of tax belonging to the church, but collected by Scott; there is no record of how this was resolved. Also in 1479 he was assigned the 'grassum' for part of the lands of 'Warmwod' in

Ettrick Ward. He was listed as 'rectore de Hawik' when he witnessed a charter for James Hunter, Rector of Cranston. In 1482 he was also recorded as Rector of 'Petty and Brachly' when witness to an Inverness-shire document (along with the Rector of Ettrick Forest and others). About 1484 he appears to have himself been 'rector of The Forest' (i.e. Yarrow Kirk), and was still Director of the Chancery. His brother William is mentioned in 1485, by which time he was deceased. In 1536/7 it is written that John Scott took over as Vicar of Hawick following the death of Alexander Murray; however, this must either be an error or a later man of the same name. Alexander of Orchard (16th C.) recorded in 1575/6 making a complainant regarding 'mails' for Elibank. It is unclear how he was related to other Murrays, but he was surely connected with the Murrays of Blackbarony. Alexander (d.1682) son and heir of Sir Robert of Priestfield. In 1672 he was served heir to his father's lands in Hawick. This was explicitly the annual rent of 600 merks for the 20 husbandlands of lands in the east of the Town of Hawick and 8 husbandlands of land in the west of Hawick. It is unclear where these lands were, why they were owned by Murrays, and what happened to them. He married Janet, daughter of James Rocheid of Inverleith. He was succeeded by his son Sir Alexander of Melgum (1682–1713), who married Grizel, daughter of Patrick Kynynmound of that Ilk. Alexander (b.c.1790) from Brownmuir in Selkirkshire, he was a cattle dealer in Lilliesleaf. He lived with his brothers William (a teacher) and Walter (an agricultural labourer) on the Loan in 1841 and on the south side of Main Street in 1851 and 1861. His wife was Janet and their children included Thomas, Jessie, Margaret and John W. He was still alive in 1861, although a widower. Alexander (b.c.1830) probably son of Charles, he was living with his parents at Southfieldgate in 1841. He was a groom living in the household of cattle dealer James Scott on Slitrig Crescent in 1851. In 1854 he married Joan Broadwood, who was cook in the same household in 1851; she was daughter of William Broadwood and Mary Shiel, born in Selkirk. They probably emigrated to Canada soon afterwards, living in Maryborough Township, Ontario with his wife's siblings Andrew and Isabella. Alexander Davidson (1840–1907) son of Thomas, clothier in Denholm and Hawick, with his mother being Mary Scott, daughter of Charles Scott, Hawick linen manufacturer. He was younger brother of Sir J.A.H. He was an apprentice at the Hawick Advertiser and was local correspondent for the Southern Reporter. He was a prominent member of the Hawick Mutual Improvement Society. He left Hawick in 1862 to become editor of the Peeblesshire Advertiser. He later was editor of the Fife Journal and Dumfries Courier, before becoming editor of the Newcastle Daily Journal, a position he held for 37 years. He read four papers to the Archæological Society in the early 1860s and he joined the members on their excursion to Hexham in 1876. He married Elizabeth Stuart Honeyman of Cupar, and she died in 1926, aged 81. They had 7 children. He published a story 'Charnwood; or, lost, found and faithful!' in 1876, set in the Borders in the mid-19th century, and a novel 'The Barringtons' in 1908. He is probably the 'Mr Alexander Murray, Edinburgh' who donated to the Museum, sometime before 1865, 15 foreign and British coins and 29 Roman coins. Andrew of Blackbarony (16th C.) son of John, who was Burgess of Edinburgh, and died at Flodden. He was a great-grandson of John of Philiphaugh. There was a 'retour of service' for him to inherit his father's lands in 1513/4, with a special dispensation because of his age. In 1541 he claimed the tenancy of the Crown lands of the wester side of 'Warmwod', 'alias Quhitehauch Braa' (in Ettrick), then occupied by Walter Scott in Synton; he also claimed Priesthope in Ettrick and Glenypet in Yarrow. He was one of the 4 'curators' of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch. In 1564/5 he was listed (on the Buccleuch side) on the bond between the Scotts and the Kers, and his support was also mentioned in the 1568/9 bond. He firstly married Elizabeth, daughter and heiress of William Lockhart, and had a daughter Marion, who married James Pringle of Whytbank. He secondly married Grizel Beaton, widow of Sir William Scott of Kirkurd, and was thus Sir Walter's step-father. Their children were: Sir John of Blackbarony; Andrew; Sir Gideon of Elibank; William of Dunerne and Newton; Elizabeth, who married James Bothwick of Newbyres and Sir Thomas Hamilton of Priestfield; and Agnes, who married her cousin Patrick Murray of Falahill, but was mentioned in a potential marriage contract in 1568/9, part of the resolution of the feud between the Kers and the Scotts. He is probably the Andrew of Blackbarony whose will was registered in Edinburgh in 1573. Andrew (17th C.) possibly the father of Andrew of Spittal Tower. He is said to have come from the Braemar area, and refusing to join the force under his superior, the Earl of Mar, he was forced to flee south, where he joined a troop of horsemen under Douglas of Cavers. Whether this was during the rebellion of 1715 or earlier is unclear. James A.H. says that his principles had the consequence of 'his house burned down, his property destroyed, and his cattle and flocks carried off and slaughtered, he himself barely escaped with his life', and was given a farm on the Cavers estate; he added that 'the writer is proud to add that his descendants still continue faithful to the Puritan principles and political liberalism for which their ancestors siffered'. Andrew (17th C.) married 'Heilling' Hogg in Ashkirk Parish in 1641. Andrew (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1648 he witnessed a baptism for Walter Douglas. He married Margaret Scoon and their children included Adam (b.1643), Helen (b.1646) and Isobel (b.1654). His wife's name was recorded as Janet in 1646. Andrew (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Jane Anderson and their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1671. The witnesses were John Elliot and William Gray. Andrew (17th C.) tenant in Kirndean in Castleton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. Andrew 'The Hazel Dog o the Toor' (1715–77) second son of John and brother of John (and ancestor of Sir James A.H.). He carried on running the farm tenanted by his father, Spittal Tower. He is recorded as gardener at Tower in 1753 when one of his children was baptised. He married Elizabeth (or 'Betty') Spottiswood, who came from an old Melrose family (her sister Isobel married James Hood of Dryburgh, ancestor of the Hoods of Lilliesleaf). Their children, baptised in Cavers Parish, were: Elizabeth (b.1747), who emigrated to Canada; Isabel (b.1751); Andrew (b.1753); William (b.1754); Jane (b.1756); John (b.1758); Helen; James (b.1764); Agnes (b.1767); and Mary (1770/1–1845). Andrew (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Betty Inglis and their children included: Thomas (b.1775); and Andrew (b.1777). He may be the spinner whose child died in Hawick in 1809. Andrew (1753–94) eldest son of Andrew and Elizabeth Spottiswood. He was a tenant farmer, with farms leased from the Dicksons of Hassendeanburn, first Westerhouses and then Newton. He was also tenant at Spittal Tower, like his father. In 1791 he was recorded at 'Spittalhall' when one of his children was baptised in Wilton Parish. In 1789 he married Isabella Henderson of Bonchester and she died in 1841/2 (although she was still living with her son William in Hawick in 1841). There is a story about him finding a box of gold when ploughing the fields at Westerhouses. He is supposed to have said to his wife 'I am just going to shave and take it down to the Burn', and then he delivered it to Mr. Dickson, who rewarded him with a year's free rent. His children were: Andrew (1781–1848), who emigrated to Australia; Jean, who died young; James (b.c.1785), who married Christine Winthrope of Hawick and was Sir J.A.H.'s grandfather; William (b.1789), stockingmaker and merchant of Hawick; Elizabeth (or 'Betsy'), who married whipmaker Michael Ogilvy; Jane (b.1791), who married William Clerk; and John (b.1793), who died young. Several of his children were christened in Wilton Parish. Andrew (b.c.1780) servant at Myredykes according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish. He may have been younger brother of John, who was there in 1799. Andrew (1781–1848) eldest child of Andrew of Spittal Tower. He was an agricultural labourer in Oxnam Parish. It is possible he is the Andrew recorded at Gatehousecote on the 1801 Militia ballot in Hobkirk Parish. He married Isabella Cranston (whose sister was the grandmother of Cogsmill teacher Andrew Oliver); she died in 1832, aged 48 and is buried at Oxnam. After his wife's death he emigrated with his family to Australia. Their children included: Robert (1811–92), who married Jane Blair and was buried at 'Haning' near Bendemeer, New South Wales; Margaret Ann (1813–39), who died on the voyage to Australia; Andrew (1815–46), who became ship's master and was lost at sea; Isabella (1817–98); William (1819–76), who died at sea; Elizabeth (1821–77); and Jane (b.1824). He died near Melbourne. Andrew (b.c.1783) farmer at Old Castleton in 1821 when he subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border'. He was also listed there in 1841. His wife was Janet and their children included George and John. Andrew (18th/19th C.) servant at Eilrig. His name was added to the Militia ballot in Roberton Parish n 1806. Andrew (1819/20–1907) born in Kirkton Parish, he moved to Hobkirk Parish with his father, who was a hind at Ruletownhead. In 1851 he was an agricultural labourer at Hallrule Mill and in 1861 was a ploughman at Kirknowe. In 1857 he married Betsy, the eldest daughter of the miller at Hallrule, James Laidlaw; she died in 1906. Both he and his wife died at Forkins and are buried at Hobkirk. Their children were: Isabella (b.1857), who died aged 5; and William (b.1858). Andrew (b.1821/2) son of William and brother of William and John. In the 1840s he opened a school in a room at the top of Baker Street. He later left for college, and the school was continued by his brother John, moving to the old East Bank Kirk. He returned later to assist his brother William in running the much larger school, which moved to 8 Kirkgate (i.e. St. Mary's Place). They were living at 7 Kirkgate in 1861, presumably next to the school. This eventually became St. Mary's and ultimately Trinity. Andrew (1823–82) son of weaver and merchant William. He was a frameworker in Hawick. In 1851 he was living on Nichol's Close and in 1851 at 3 Back Row. He married Isabella Brown and their children included Jane, Helen, William and John. Anne (1694–1737) daughter of Bennet, Laird of Chesters, she married her cousin John Murray, who was the Duke of Buccleuch's tenant at Unthank, and died in 1728. In 1734 she moved to Hawick, where she died. Her son James (b.1713) emigrated to North Carolina in 1735, and is an ancestor of Franklin D. Roosevelt. Sir Archibald of Blackbarony (d.bef. 1634) son of Sir John. He was knighted by James VI when he was young, and was made a Baronet of Nova Scotia in 1628. He married Margaret Maule, a descendant of the house of Panmure. Their children were: Sir Alexander, 2nd Baronet; Walter of Halmire; Robert, ancestor of the Murrays of Murray's Hall; Margaret, who married Sir John Hope; Bethia, who married Sir William Forbes of Craigievor and secondly Sir Alexander Forbes of Tolquhone; Helen, who married Sir John Carstairs; and Elizabeth, who married William Scott of Mangerton. Archibald (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1719 he was herd at Hislop. He married Bessie Black and their daughter Bessie was baptised in 1719, with witnesses 'Mr' Thomas Hume in Commonside, Robert Scott, tenant in Falnash and Archibald Scott in Hislop. Archibald (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living in Denholm in 1733 when he married Betty Little. Archibald (b.1744) was probably his son. Archibald (18th/19th C.) tailor in Denholm, listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when he owned 2 horses. He was probably related to James (grandfather of Sir James A.H.), a tailor in Hawick, who learned his trade in Denholm. Archibald (19th C.) married Agnes Park in Hawick in 1844. Cameron 'Cammie' (1975–) son of Ernie, from Jedburgh and June, he was born in Hawick and brought up in Prestonpans and Haddington. After leaving school he joined Hawick R.F.C., being part of their 1996 cup-winning side. He later played professionally for the Borders and Edinburgh before returning to Hawick in 2001/2 and finishing his playing career with Melrose. He was first capped for Scotland in 1998, eventually gaining 24 caps. He works as a P.E. teacher at Berwickshire High School. He married Diane and they have sons Glen and Jack. Capt. of Dod (18th C.) recorded as a landowner in Cavers Parish in the 1740s, with land valued at £130. He was also listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1761. It is unclear what his forename was or how he was related to other Murrays. Charles (18th C.) workman in Hawick Parish. He married Isabel Dryden and their children included: Isobel (b.1770); Robert (b.1772); Charles (b.1776); and Daniel (b.1778). The witnesses in 1776 were the whole congregation. Charles (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Betty Armstrong and their children included: Nelly (b.1787); Mary (b.1789); John (b.1791); Charles (b.1792); Thomas (b.1794); Jean (b.1796); David (b.1798); Nanny (b.1800); Janet (b.1802); Elspie (b.1804); Walter (b.1806); and Adam (b.1808). Charles (b.c.1805) weaver living at Southfieldgate in 1841. He was a widowed stockingmaker at Orchard in 1851. His wife was Mary and their children included: Charles; Alexander; Betsy; Mary; and Ann. Charles (b.1809/10) from Kirkton Parish, he was an agricultural labourer in Hobkirk Parish. He was living at Wolfelee in 1841 and Wolfhopelee in 1851. In 1861 he was a hedger at Blacklee Cottages. He married Janet Oliver in Southdean in 1835. Their children, mostly baptised in Southdean, included: Jane (or Jean, b.1836); Violet (b.1839); Elliot (b.1841), baptised in Hobkirk; Helen (b.1843); William (b.1845); and Janet (b.1850). Charles Oliver (1842–1923) son of Thomas and Mary Scott, he was born in Denholm. Brother of Sir James, he was known as an engraver. He worked as a clerk in a woollen factory in Hawick until the age of 21. He then attended the Edinburgh School of Design, working by day as a lithographer. He was Gold and Silver Medalist at the Royal Scottish Academy School. He settled in London in 1868, being on the staff of 'Punch and Judy'. In London he became an engraver and was a founder member of the Royal Society of Painter Etchers. He first exhibited his plates in the Royal Academy Exhibition in 1878. He also worked on some local projects, including the reproduction of Tom Scott's 'Return to Hawick', and some original etchings of Hawick, for example images of the old Town Hall and St. Mary's Kirk. There is also a well-known picture of Sir Walter Scott's Tomb at Dryburgh Abbey. He married Elizabeth Wilson, daughter of Archibald Campbell from Glasgow and they had 7 children. He died in Croydon. Christina nee Winthrope (18th/19th C.) daughter of Hawick writer (i.e. lawyer) Thomas. She married a Mr. Stewart and became widowed. A story is told of how she met her new husband James Murray. Apparently she dreamt she was walking in her father's garden at the Wheathole and there met a man she did not recognise, but then saw him in East Bank Kirk (built on the site of the garden), later was introduced to him and eventually they were married. The marriage was in 1806. Her name is also recorded as 'Christian'. David (b.1704) son of David, he was born in Ewes Parish. He lived at Whisgills farm in Castleton Parish. He married Elizabeth Murray (b.1716). Their children included: Elizabeth; Agnes (b.1740); David (b.1743); John (b.1746); William Easton (b.1749); Jean (b.1751), who married Andrew Kyle; and Thomas (b.1754). David (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Isabel Nixon and their children included: John (b.1781); Adam (b.1781); and Elizabeth (b.1783). David (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. His unnamed child was baptised in 1786. David (c.1770–1841) son of James and Anne Dalrymple. He was a joiner at Teindside and perhaps also in the Borthwick valley. In 1799 he was listed at Teindside on the ballot for the Militia. His wife Mary Anderson died in 1819, aged 43. In 1820 he secondly married Mary Wilson, daughter of a Hawick blacksmith. The Murray family living at Mossyknowe in 1841 are probably his widow Mary and children James (a journeyman joiner), Henry, David and John. David (1791/2–1815) son of Thomas, tenant at Whisgills. He was described as 'six feet six inches high; and to a majestic and well-proportioned person, he joined the mildest dispositions of mind'. He died aged 23. David (19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Scott and their daughter Jane Weir was baptised in 1838. David (b.1793/4) from Oxnam Parish, he was a woollen handloom weaver in Hawick. In 1841 and 1851 he was living at about 1 Millport with his family and mother-in-law Jean Renwick and in 1851. In 1861 he was at '27 High St, 2nd Back House. He married Rosina Renwick and their children, baptised in Hawick Free Kirk, included: John (b.1837); Jean (b.1838); Alison (b.1840); James (b.1842); Catherine Miller (b.1844); Elizabeth (b.1845); Alexander (b.1848/9); Robert (b.1851); Helen (b.1853/4); and Rosina (b.1855/6). David (b.c.1800) stocking weaver in Hawick. In 1841 he was living at about 42 or 44 High Street. His children included David, William, Andrew and James. David (b.c.1800) from Ireland, he was a framework knitter in Hawick. In 1841 he was living at about 42 or 44 High Street and in 1851 was living at about the Crown Close on the High Street, with his family as well as his brother-in-law and sister-in-law Robert and Martha Hardie. He married Helen Hardie and their children included David, William, Andrew, James, George and Isabella. David (b.1819/20) probably son of David. He was a woollen framework knitter living at 4 Teviot Crescent in 1851 and at Wilton Dean in 1861. His wife was Margaret and their children included David, Andrew, Walter, Adam and Thomas. David (1832/3–83) son of James, he was tenant at Whisgills, like his father. He married Elizabeth Robson, who died in 1896, aged 54. Their children included Jessie Temple (1877/8–1938) and probably James who also farmed at Whisgills. They are buried at Ettleton. David (1870/1–1911) youngest son of William, teacher at St. Mary's School. He trained as a doctor at Edinburgh University and became assistant to Dr. James Brydon in the Sandbed. He later married Dr. Barydon's daughter Mary. He then worked in Dumbarton and Edinburgh, but returned to Hawick as partner to Dr. Brydon about 1901. He carried on for a few years after Brydon's death in 1905, later taking on Dr. Samuel Davidson as a new partner, but dying himself not long after, aged only 40. He left 2 daughters. E. Judith local art teacher. In 2009, along with Lesley Fraser, she produced the booklet 'Hawick Common Riding, An Illustrated Guide', as well as the children's version 'The Kidz Guide', distributed to senior primary pupils. 'My First Common Riding Book', aimed at nursery and primary school children followed. Ebenezer (19th C.) resident of Edinburgh. He loaned several items for the Museum's temporary exhibition in 1866, including arms. It seems likely that he had a local connection. Elizabeth 'Bessie' (17th C.) resident of North Synton in 1694 when she was listed on the Hearth Tax roll among 'ye poor'. Elliot (18th/19th C.) married Violet Elliot in 1805 in Southdean, and she died at Bonchester. Their children included Charlotte (who married Adam Bell from Camptown), Charles (who worked at Wolfelee), Walter (farm servant, who died at Old Jethart) and John (servant at Wauchope and hedger for Minto estate). Elliot (b.c.1840) from Hobkirk Parish.

He took over as blacksmith at Chesters from his uncle John Waugh in the early 1870s. He remained as blacksmith for more than 30 years, so that between him, his uncle and his uncle's father (Robert), they had been blacksmiths at Chesters for about 95 years. Francis (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen Scoon and their children included: Janet (b.1670); Margaret (b.1674); and Marie (b.1675). The witnesses in 1674 were John Murray and John Scoon (who may have been fathers or brothers of the couple). He could be the Francis born in 1643 to Alaexander and 'Manie' Scott. Frank James (d.1943) younger brother of J.E.D. He was a plumber, like his father. He married Mary Dickie, and had 2 children, John Archibald Campbell (who worked in hosiery) and Mary Margaret. Gavin P. (19th/20th C.) 4th man to serve as Secretary for the Congregational Kirk. George (17th C.) weaver at Whitehaugh in Wilton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. Perhaps the same George, from Wilton, married Jane Wright and had a son James baptised in Hawick in 1683. The witnesses were John Henderson and James Halliday. George (18th/19th C.) farmer at Castleton, recorded along with John on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. John's name came first and so was presumably his elder brother or father. George (b.1803/4) from Castleton Parish, he was shepherd at Ruletownnead in 1861. He probably took over as shepherd there from his father, and was likely brother of Andrew. His wife was Jane and she had a son John Hume from a previous marriage. They had a daughter Jane. George (b.c.1810) grocer on the Howegate, probably at No. 16. He later worked as a mason's labourer. He married Helen Tully and their children included Agnes, George, Janet and David. George (b.1806/7) from Castleton Parish, he was a shoemaker journeyman in Hawick. He was living at about 43 High Street in 1841 and on the Kirk Wynd in 1851. His wife was Sarah and their children included Helen and Ann. George (19th C.) shepherd of Allanhaughmill. From about 1848 he was one of the first Trustees of Hawick Congregational (then Evangelical) Kirk. He could be the agricultural labourer listed at Haysike in 1841, with wife Margaret and children John, Thomas and Helen. George Oliver (b.1857) younger son of local historian Robert. In 1863 he presented to the Museum an amulet found in the Glebe allotments. He provided a horn mull (or perhaps the snuff) for the Snuffing in 1889. He became a doctor in Tunnel City, Wisconsin. He married Sarah Johnstone and their children were Robert Oliver and Agnes Ariska. George Malcolm 'Malcolm', C.B.E. (1937/8–) educated at Hawick High School, he qualified as a Fellow of the Faculty of Actuaries in 1961. He was a Director of the Scottish Life Assurance Company and President of the Faculty of Actuaries 1994–96. He was awarded a C.B.E. in 1995. He has been President of the Callants' Club and Hawick R.F.C., as well as honorary secretary of Edinburgh Borderers R.F.C. and involved with the Scottish Sports Council, the General Teaching Council of Scotland and Craiglockhart College. Sir Gideon of Elibank (d.1621) 3rd son of Andrew of Blackbarony and brother of Sir John of Blackbarony. His mother was Grizel Beaton, widow of Sir William Scott of Kirkurd, and thus he was half-brother to Sir Walter Scott, 10th Laird of Buccleuch. Sir Walter owed him 'males' for the lands of Glenpyet in his last testament of 1574. In 1592 he was 'of Glenpoyte' when he served as surety for William Scott of Hartwoodmyres and Walter Scott of Stirches. In 1594 he was 'Jedion Murray of Glenpint' among the 180 or so followers of Sir James Johnstone who had a 'respite' for their role at Dryfe Sands the year before. He may have been educated for the church and was 'chantour' of Aberdeen. In 1590 along with John of Blackbarony, Patrick of Falahill and other Murrays he was put under caution not to harm Robert Scott of Haining and James Scott, 'callit Mekle Jame Eister'. He is probably the 'Mr. Gedioun Murray' who witnessed a document in Edinburgh for Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1591. In about 1591 he killed a man called Aitchison. In 1592, along with Walter Scott of Goldielands, he was given a commission to 'demolish the houses and fortalices of Harden and Dryhoip', because of Walter Scott of Harden's involvement in the Falkland Raid. He is probably the 'Jedion Murray of Glenpint' listed among the supporters of Sir James Johnstone at Dryfe Sands in 1593 and about the same time he was 'of Glenpoyte' when he was surety for William Scott of Hartwoodmyres and Walter Scott of Stirkshaws. In 1594 he was 'Mr. Gedeon Murray of Glenpoytte' when he witnessed a document for the Duke of Lennox and also witnessed a bond of 'manrent' for the Beatties to Sir Walter Scott, signed in Hawick in 1595. In 1595 the King confirmed a charter granting him 'Elebank, or Eleburne, in the forest and Lordship of Ettrick'. In 1596/7 Sir Walter of Buccleuch granted him the lands of Crichton, this being signed in Hawick.

He was Provost of Crichton, this patronage later going to the Earl of Buccleuch. In 1597 he was a contract with Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme regarding profits on lands in Peeblesshire. In 1598 he was procurator for Sir Walter scott of Branxholme in a claim that Sir Walter should be responsible for Walter Scott of Harden. In 1598 he acted as commissioner to Sir Walter Scott in a contract with the Homes of Wedderburn regarding the lands of Whitsome, and witnessed a charter at Branxholme in 1599. In 1598/9 he resigned the lands of Easter and Wester Deloraine and Carterhaugh to Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme. In 1599 he witnessed the bonds (signed at Branxholme) between Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch and the Armstrongs and Elliots of Liddesdale. In 1602 he and his brother John were responsible for removing Scott of Hundleshope and others from lands belonging to Stewart of Traquair, and he was also surety for Robert Scott of Thirlestane. Also in 1602 he signed a bond among Border Lairds for keeping the peace. Additionally he was surety for Robert Scott of Thirlestane in 1602. He was still witnessing documents for Scott of Buccleuch in 1603. In 1604 he and other Murrays had a caution not to harm the Stewarts of Traquair and elsewhere. He was knighted in 1605 and appointed as one of the 5 Scottish Commissioners given responsibility to ruthlessly carry out the pacification of the Borders. In 1606 he added lands of Langshaw (in Elwand Water) and Whytbank (in Selkirkshire) to his estates. In 1607 he was mentioned in a Melrose document relating to the lands of Langshaw (where he is 'Jedeane' and is referred to in relation to Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch as 'beand full sister and brother bairnes'). In 1608 he was appointed to ensure that the Presbytery of Jedburgh elected 'a constant moderator', against the wishes of the ministers. In 1608 (although the date may be suspect) he received the teinds of Hawick Kirk in a 'tack' by Rev. William Fowler, with the constent of Lord Scott of Buccleuch. This was to last for his lifetime and then 19 more years. In 1610 he became a Privy Councillor and Comptroller and was named to the Commission for keeping peace in Selkirkshire. He served on the Judiciary Court in Jedburgh in 1611. He represented Selkirkshire in Parliament in 1612. In 1613 he was appointed Treasurer Depute and created Lord Elibank. In 1614 he was made a Burgess of both Edinburgh and Glasgow (gratis). He was Depute-Treasurer for the Justices who prosecuted the Earl of Orkney in 1615. He made preparations for the Royal visit to Scotland in 1617. He was appointed as a Commissioner for the Middle Shires in 1618. He appears to have been a willing instrument of the King in imposing Episcopacy on the Scottish people. In 1621 he was accused of abusing his office by Sir James Stewart of Orkney, and it is suggested that he may have poisoned himself over the disgrace. He married Margaret, daughter of Dionis Pentland. He was succeeded by his son Sir Patrick, 1st Lord Elibank of Ettrick Forest, while Walter was another son. A marriage contract of 1611 exists between his daughter Agnes ('Muckle Mou'd Meg') and William Scott of Harden – 'The Laird o' Elibank, ee to ee Wi' Wat o' Harden could never see'[WL]. Gideon (1772/3–1839) resident of Coltersclueh Toll. He married Margaret Oliver (1778/9–1843). They are buried at Teviothead. Gideon (b.c.1795) handloom weaver in Newcastleton. In 1841 he was at about 10 Whitchester Street. His wife was Margaret and their children included James, Jane, Adam and Andrew. Gordon F. (20th C.) Town Hall Legal Assistant 1958–60 and Depute Town Clerk 1960–62. Graeme (d.2000) well known reciter, brother of Philip. Harold James Ruthven (1868–1955) son of Sir James A.H. He was known as an educationalist, inspector of schools, chess historian and champion of left-handedness. He wrote an article 'The Family of Sir James Murray' in the 1928 Archæological Society Transactions and a biographical sketch of his father's life in the 1934 Transactions. He also provided family-related notes to James Haining for his monumental inscriptions. Helen (17th C.) resident of Synton Mill. In 1643, along with Margaret Thomson, she was punished by the Ashkirk Session for losing their tempers; they were forced to stand in linen sheets 'at the kirke dure in tyme the people is ingathering, next to ye pillar, and to pay ilk ane of them, 12s, otherways umquhile they do not, they are to be put in the jouggs all the time frae the people convenes till they go home again'. Helen (b.c.1780) grocer in Newcastleton, listed in 1837. In 1841 she was at about 2 Langholm Street. Henry (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He was married to Ann Bell and they had several children baptised at Netherraw and Upper Raw. Their children included Adam (b.1795), Robert (b.1797), Betty (b.1799), James (b.1802), Margaret (b.1806) and George (b.1806). James of Bowhill (d.1513) recorded in about 1529 in the Selkirk Protocol Books. He was said to have 'died under the banner of our deceased supreme lord king James IV' in about

1529, when his only daughter and heir Isabel gave the south part of Bowhill to her uncle, Michael Scott of Aikwood, and Michael's son William. Also in 1529 his daughter granted her lands of the west side of Kershope to Michael Scott. This suggests that he had married a sister of Michael Scott of Aikwood. He was probably related to the deceased Thomas of Bowhill recorded in 1539. James (15th/16th C.) Rector of Wilton. He witnessed a sasine at Galashiels in 1503 where John Murray of Falahill assigned the Lordship of Ettrick Forest to Queen Margaret. Although it is feasible that a different Wilton is meant, the witnesses included Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch and other Borderers. He may have been related to either John of Falahill or the notary, John, who was a Clerk of St. Andrews Diocese. James of Falahill (d.c.1529) elder son of John 'the Outlaw'. His sisters Elizabeth, Isabel and Janet married Sir James Douglas of Cavers, Robert Scott of Howpasley and Sir Robert Stewart of Minto, respectively. He held several lands in Selkirkshire and also Peeblesshire. In 1519/20 he resigned 'Eldinghop' (in Yarrow) to Walter Scott of Branxholme. He was on an inquest in Jedburgh in 1523. In 1524/5 he was one of those who promised to help keep order with the newly appointed Warden and Lieutenant of the Borders, the Earl of Angus. He is probably the James recorded in 1526 as Sheriff of Selkirkshire. In 1527 he had an agreement with Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme to end their feud; he agreed to forgive the Scotts and their allies for all former killings and spoliation in return for 500 merks Scots, and he also agreed to end his dispute over the lands of Kirkurd. In 1528 he agreed to deliver up all charters etc. relating to Kirkurd and give up any claim to the lands. Also in 1528 he assigned his lands of Lewenshope to his wife. He married Margaret Home and/or a daughter of Sir John Cranston and was succeeded by his son Patrick in 1530. James (16th C.) tenant in Sundhope in the Yarrow Valley. He was recorded in 1539/40 as 'layman of the diocese of Glasgow when he was decreed to be within the 4th grade of consanguinity with Marion, daughter of Adam Dalgleish of Deuchar. James (16th C.) tenant of Swinstead in Kirkton Parish. In 1581 he was 'in Swynsteids' along with Hector Jardine when they (along with several Elliots) witnessed the sasine for Gavin Gledstains inheriting Stobs from his deceased brother George Gledstains. Sir James (17th C.) son of John of Falahill and Philiphaugh. He was knighted by Charles I. In 1628–33 he represented Selkirkshire in Parliament. He married Anne, daughter of Sir Thomas Craig of Riccarton. He died before his father, and his son Sir John succeeded to Philiphaugh. His daughter Janet married James Scott of Gala. James (17th C.) married Isobel Shortreed in Ashkirk Parish in 1638. James (d.1658) 2nd Earl of Annandale, son of John, 1st Earl. In 1641 he was served heir to his father's 5-pound Chapel lands of Caerlenrig, and also a huge number of other lands. He moved to England and lived quietly there during the Civil War. He married Jean Carnegie, Viscountess of Stormont. He died without issue. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Bessie Armstrong and their son William was baptised in 1648. James (17th C.) recorded in 1656 when his daughter Agnes with Isobel Nixon was baptised in Hawick. This was labelled 'for: in Cavers', making it clear that the couple were unmarried and that at least one of them was from Cavers Parish. The witnesses were Thomas Johnston and William Nixon (probably related to Isobel). James (17th C.) recorded as Schoolmaster in Selkirk in 1668. James (d.c.1682) recorded as tenant 'in Mains of Liddesdaill' in 1682, when his will is listed at Peebles Commissariot. He was surely related to Adam who was at Mains in 1694. James (17th C.) herd at Borthwickshiels in 1683. His daughter Bessie was baptised in Roberton Parish in that year, with witnesses Thomas Elliot and William Elliot (perhaps the tenant in Borthwickshiels and his son, who became Laird of Borthwickbrae). It is possible that he is the James, married to Helen Robson, whose son James was baptised in Roberton in 1686. Sir James of Philiphaugh (1655–1708) eldest son of Sir John and Anne Douglas of Cavers. He was served heir to his father in 1677. He was Senator of the College of Justice. He served as M.P. for Selkirkshire in 1678, 1681–82 and 1702–03. He was then Lord Clerk Register. In 1680 he was involved in a dispute with Selkirk over the boundaries of its Common and had a discharge with the Burgh (probably over annual rent) in 1681. In 1684 he was arrested and tried for helping Covenanters. In the 1690s he was part of a commission appointed to manage the estates of James, 2nd Marquess of Douglas. He acted as a Commissioner for assessing the rents of the local farms of the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1694. He contributed £500 to the Darien Scheme in 1695. He became a Burgess and Guild Brother of Edinburgh in 1708, but died shortly afterwards. He married Anne Hepburn of Blackcastle and secondly married Margaret, daughter of Sir Alexander Don of Newton. His children were: John, who succeeded; James, who died unmarried; Alexander, also died unmarried; Rachel, died unmarried; Anne, married Pringle of Haining; Elizabeth; Jane; and Margaret. He died at Inch. James (17th C.) resident of Shielswood in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll. He may be the James who witnessed a baptism in 1689 in Ashkirk Parish for William Coltart and others in 1690 for Walter Wilson and for Thomas Smith. He may be the James who married Helen Nivison and whose son Robert was baptised in 1690, with witnesses Thomas Nivison and Water Coltart. James (17th C.) herd at Broadhaugh on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. James (17th C.) listed as resident at Outerside on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. James (17th C.) listed at Newbigging among 'The poor in Hauick Parioch' on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. James (17th/18th C.) married Janet Smith in Bedrule Parish in 1698. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He married Janet Laidlaw and their daughter Helen was baptised in 1702. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He married Mary Nichol in Roberton in 1702. James (b.1703), John (b.1704), William (b.1706), William (again, b.1707) and Janet (b.1707) may have been his children. James (17th/18th C.) herd in Whitfield in about 1708. This was recounted by Robert Cowan, who was at that time a young farm servant of his, when there was a dispute over turf cut on Whitfield 'headroom' for tenants of Langlands. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was recorded as a gardener in Clarilaw in 1711 when his son Robert was baptised. James (b.1710) and John (b.1713) may also have been his children. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Denholm. His daughter Isabel was baptised in 1709. Isabel (b.1701) and Archibald (b.1704), baptised in Cavers, may also have been his children. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He married Margaret Hislop in 1709. His surname is recorded as 'Morrew'. James (17th/18th C.) resident at Merrylaw. In 1724 his daughter Bessie was baptised in Cavers Parish. Other children, baptised in Cavers, who were probably his, include Bessie (b.1713), Ann (b.1715) and Ann (again, b.1719). James (17th/18th C.) weaver in Wilton Parish. He was at Burnhead in 1709 and at Newton in 1711. His children included: Jean (b.1709); and William (b.1711). He could be the James who married Elspeth (or Janet) Turnbull in Wilton in 1707. He could also be the James, who married Marion Turnbull in Bedrule in 1703, and whose son Andrew was baptised in Wilton in 1716, or the James, married to Agnes Brown, whose son James was baptised in 1716. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Craikshiel in 1718 and Craik in 1720. He probably married Bessie Dickson or Marion 'Dixon' (it is unclear whether these are different women) in Roberton in 1717 and their children included: Bessie (b.1718); and an an unnamed son (b.1720). James (18th C.) married Mary or Marion Rutherford in 1726, the marriage recorded in both Bedrule and Hobkirk Parishes. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Janet 'Blacker' in 1728. James (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living at Dykes in 1730 and 1738. His children included Isabel (b.1730) and Adam (b.1738). He may be the James who married Mary (or Marion) Rutherford in 1726, the marriage being recorded in Bedrule and Hobkirk parishes. He could also be the James whose children baptised in Bedrule Parish included James (b.1727), Isabel (b.1736) and Archibald (b.1738). James (1713–81) born at Unthank in the Ewes valley, son of James and Ann Bennet. His father died in 1728 and in 1732 the lease of Unthank and Fiddleton were taken by Robert Elliot of Fenwick and Walter Scott (his cousin, farmer at Commonside and uncle of Sir Walter Scott the writer). He then became a merchant's apprentice in London, and emigrated to North Carolina (it is said in 1735, although this is impossibly early, since his wife was only born in 1724), while his mother moved to Hawick in 1734 (where she died). He married his cousin Barbara, daughter of Andrew Bennet of Chesters; probably the same Barbara's 'bride money' was paid in Ancrum Parish in 1744. Their children were Elizabeth Dorothy, Archibald, John, Jean and two children who died in infancy. Elizabeth married Edward Hutchinson Robbins, their daughter Annie Jean Robbins married Joseph Lyman, whose daughter Catherine Robbins Lyman married Warenn Delano and had a daughter Sara (or Sallie) Delano, who mas the mother of U.S. President Franklin Delano Roosevelt. James himself was exiled after the American Revolution, being loyal to King George, and dying in Halifax, Nova Scotia. Some of his correspondence (including a brief account of a visit to Hawick) was published in 'Letters of James Murray, Loyalist' (1901). James (18th C.) Ann Riddell in Roberton Parish in 1744. James (18th C.) married Margaret Nichol in Wilton Parish in 1744. James (18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His children included Janet (b.1746), John (b.1748) and James (b.1751). James (1716/7–92) resident of Teindside. He married Anne Dalrymple, who died at Teindside in 1809, aged 80. Their children included: William, James, Nelly, Elizabeth (or 'Betty', 1758) and Anne (b.1766), who probably all died young; David (1768/9–1841), joiner; and John, who also died at Teindside at the age of 70. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at Burnfoot in 1747 and 1751. He married Helen 'Hoom' (i.e. Hume) in 1745 and their children included: Margaret (b.1746); John (b.1747); Janet (b.1749); William (b.1751); and Helen (b.1760), baptised in Hawick. The witnesses in 1747 were Walter Scott and James Dryden and in 1751 were Robert and John Scott. James (18th C.) resident at Borthwickbrae in 1743 and 1753. His children, baptised in Roberton Parish, probably included Helen (b.1743), Robert (b.1745), Thomas (b.1747), Bessie (b.1749), Ann (b.1751), Walter (b.1753) and James (b.1755). He is probably the wright in Mains (presumably Borthwick Mains) who died in 1775 and is buried in Roberton Cemetery, along with his wife Anne 'Rickeltoun' (d.1797). James (b.1741) 2nd son of John, farmer at Spittal-on-Rule. He trained for the ministry and became minister at the Presbyterian Church in Harbottle. James (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. His children included William (b.1761) and John (b.1768). James (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His children included: an unnamed child (b.1764); Archibald (b.1766); William (b.1768); James (b.1773); and William (b.1778). It is possible that James and William were the tailor and labourer recorded in Denholm on the 1801 Militia ballot. James (18th C.) resident of Ewes Parish. In 1783 he was at 'Drummondshall'. He married Mararet Scott and their children included: Elizabeth (b.1783); Janet (b.1787); Margaret (b.1795); and William (b.1797). The witnesses in 1783 were John and James Carruthers. James 'Jamie' (b.c.1755) probably from Ettrick, although possibly the James, son of James, born in Roberton Parish in 1755. His story of encountering a ghost at the Bishop's Stone (on Woll Rig) in about 1775 was recounted to someone in 1831 who wrote about it in the Border Counties' Magazine in 1880 (reprinted in 1904). He married Jean Rae In Yarrow in 1810; she had worked as a servant at Headshaw. Their children included: Jean (b.1811); and William (b.1815). James (1756/7–1827) joiner at Borthwickbrae, probably the son of James born in 1755. He is recorded as owner of a horse at Borthwickbrae Burnfoot in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He is buried in Roberton Cemetery. His children included: William (1802/3–27). He may be the same as the James who lived at Borthwick Mains. James (18th C.) married Isabel Ingles in Cavers Parish in 1787. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was living at Borthwick Mains in 1788 and 1792 and Borthwick Burnfoot in 1798. He married Ann Turnbull in 1787, the marriage recorded in both Hawick and Roberton Parishes. Their children included: Betty (b.1788); James (b.1790); Walter (b.1792); and an unnamed son (b.1798). Capt. James of Philiphaugh (1769–1852) 3rd son of John, he succeeded after the death of his brother John. He was a Commander in the Indian Navy. After serving in the military he returned home and had a new house built at Harehead Wood. In 1809 he married Mary Dale, daughter of Henry Hughes. They had 3 sons and a daughter, and he was succeeded by the eldest son, Sir John. His daughter died at Beechwood in about 1901 and was the last in the line of Murrays of Philiphaugh. James (b.1777/8) labourer in Newcastleton. In 1851 he was at about 10 South Liddell Street, living with his wife Elizabeth, children William (b.c.1800) and Isabel (b.1824/5) and grand-daughter Margaret Crozier (b.1847/8). He was a widower in the same place in 1861. He may be the shepherd recorded in Newcastleton on the ballot for the Militia in 1801. James (18th C.) servant at Boghall in Castleton Parish. In 1797 he was listed among men on the ballot to serve in the Militia. In 1799 he was among those 'In the Ballot Box 1797 not drawn still residing in the parish of Castletoun'; he was at Boghall, but with Brox in brackets, suggesting he had previously been there. James (b.c.1775) born in Yarrow Parish, perhaps son of John. He may be the weaver in Hawick, listed among the men balloted to serve in the Militia in 1797; however, in 1799 he was listed among those whose names had not been drawn, but were no longer living in the area. He worked as a soldier, being listed as Private and then Corporal in the Dumfriesshire Militia. He married Mary Scott in Canongate, Edinburgh in 1803; his wife was daughter of miller Robert Scott (perhaps miller at Roughheugh) and born in Wilton Parish. His children (born and baptised in Musselburgh, Dalkeith and Wilton, but all registered in Wilton) were: John (b.1806); Robert (b.1808); and James (b.1810). There was also an earlier son, whose name is unknown. The baptism of James in 1810 was witnessed by John Thomline and George Wallace. He may have later had children: Christina (b.1824/5); Thomas (b.1812/3); Andrew (b.1826/7); Mary (b.1827/8); and Helen (b.1829/30). The family were living at 'Nixon's Mill' (probably Lynnwood Cottages) in 1841, where he was a wool spinner. They were in Dumfries in 1851, where he as working as 'Under Carder Master Wool'. James (18th/19th C.) married Sarah Scoon in Wilton Parish in 1805. James (b.c.1770s) tailor in Denholm according to the ballot lists for the Militia in 1799 and 1801. William was listed after him in 1801 and may have been related; it is possible they are the sons of James baptised in Cavers 1773 and 1778. James (18th/19th C.) resident of London who subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He presumably had a local connection. James (18th/19th C.) mason in Newcastleton, listed among heads of households in 1835. James (c.1785–1843) from the Spittal family, he was 3rd child of Andrew who farmed Westerhouses and Newton. He was paternal grandfather of 'Dictionary' James. He seems likely to be the tailor in Denholm listed on the ballot for the Militia in 1799; however, if so he would have to have been born no later than 1780. In 1806 he married (with a curious story of her seeing him in a dream before she knew him) Christina, daughter of Thomas Wintrope, who was a writer in Hawick; the marriage was recorded in both Wilton Parish and East Bank Kirk. He became a tailor, learning his trade in Denholm and later having a shop at 67 High Street (which became the Co-op grocers). He was listed as a High Street tailor in Pigot's 1837 directory. He was long an elder of the East Bank Secession Church, having been one of the original subscribers, receiving money in exchange for bonds (which through some irregularity were all later taken by his grandson Andrew, leaving the rest of his grand-children with nothing). His children, baptised in East Bank Kirk, were: Isabella (b.1807), who married Hawick shoemaker William Somerville; Andrew (b.1809), tailor in Morebattle, who married Minnie Buglass; Thomas (b.1811), father of Sir James A.H.; Elizabeth (b.1813), who died young; Stewart (b.c.1815), a roper with Munro's, who married Isabella Anderson; James (b.1817), a tailor in Hawick who married Isabella Maben; and Elizabeth (or 'Betty', b.1819), who married stockingmaker Andrew Hood. In 1841 he was listed as a tailor on the High Street, living along with 'Cathrine' (probably his wife Christina, otherwise a sister), and children James and Betty, as well as another James (probably a grandson, perhaps a young 'Dictionary' Murray). James (b.c.1780s) joiner at Borthwickbrae Burnfoot according to the 1812 ballot for the Militia in Roberton Parish. He may be the son of James baptised in Roberton in 1790. Perhaps the same James married Helen Renwick and had a son James baptised in Roberton in 1816. James (1789–1853) youngest child of John and Mary Cleuch and grandson of John, farmer at Spittal-on-Rule. He was father of Gen. Sir John Murray. He was educated at Denholm, Minto and Jedburgh schools and Edinburgh University. He studied to be a minister, but due to a speech defect he had to give up his amibition (which apparently was not an impediment to becoming a teacher!). He ran a private school in Hawick for several years before being appointed Schoolmaster of Hawick Grammar School in 1821 (perhaps as assistant from 1818). He was appointed as Session Clerk in 1821, and as such was the last to carry on the practice of reading the scriptures in church between the morning and evening services. However, he kept only sporadic records in the Session books. He was the first teacher at the new United Schools, when the Parish and Grammar Schools merged in 1824/5. His favourite saying when punishing pupils was 'I'll trim ye!' He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He gave up as session clerk in 1850, but was headmaster right up until his death in the first few days of 1853. In 1840 he complained to the heritors that he was owed money from the Orrock bequest, since he had assumed the role of Master of both the Parish and Grammar Schools. In a directory of 1852 he is listed as Parochial Schoolmaster on Teviot Square. In 1825 he married Margaret (1790–1851), eldest daughter of Thomas Irvine, farmer at Wauknell, Eskdale; her brother was Maj.-Gen. Sir Archibald Irvine. They had at least 4 children: John Irvine (b.1826), who became a General; Elizabeth Little (b.1828), who married Col. Ryall, but died of cholera and had no surviving children; Thomas Irvine (b.1830), who died in infancy; and Thomas Irvine (again, b.1835), who probably also died young. He is buried in St. Mary's churchyard. James (18th/19th C.) married Mary Armstrong in Cavers Parish in 1817. James (1796/7–1871) son of Thomas and Janet Ingles, he was tenant farmer at Whisgills in Castleton Parish. He subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. He was at Whisgills in 1841, was farmer of 450 acres there in 1851, with 2 labourers and in 1861 he was recorded as farmer of 700 acres, employing 3 men. He married Elizabeth (or 'Betty') Scott, who died in 1874, aged 78. Their children included: Elizabeth (or 'Betty', 1817–24); Thomas (1827–58), tenant in Burnmouth; Elizabeth (b.1828); John (b.1830); Agnes (1833–80); David (1833–83), also tenant at Whisgills; Janet (b.1834); Mary (b.1837), who married Adam Scott; Jane (b.1839), who married John Irving; and Mary, who married Adam Scott. They are mostly buried in Ettleton Cemetery. James (18th/19th C.) married Agnes Stevenson in Hobkirk in 1822. James (18th/19th C.) married Janet Scott in Cavers in 1829. James (b.1806/7) born in Castleton Parish, he was a handloom weaver in Hawick. In 1851 he was living on the Round Close. His wife was Elizabeth and their children included Walter, Agne, Gideon, John, James, William, Catherone, Jane and Margaret. James (19th C.) married Jean McFarlane in 1837, the marriage recorded in Lilliesleaf and St. Boswells Parishes. James (19th C.) married Eliza Thomson in Hawick Parish in 1837. James (b.1810) son of James and Mary Scott. His father was a soldier, and he was born and baptised in Wilton. He worked as a handloom weaver. In 1841 he was living on Punchbowl Close, was at 5 Teviot Crescent in 1851 and was on Mather's Close in 1861. He married Isabella Howison and their children included: David (b.1833); Robert (b.1835); William (b.1836/7); Isabella (b.1839/40), who must have died young; James (b.1846/7); Jane (or Ann, b.1848/9); Isabella (again, b.1850/1) and Helen (b.1853/4). James (b.1810/1) born in Wilton, he was a shoemaker in Hawick. He was on the Kirk Wynd in 1841 and at 25 Loan in 1851 and 1861. His wife was Catherine and their children were John, Robert, Helen, Walter, Andrew and Mary. He may be the James, son of John and Mary Scott, baptised in Wilton in 1810. James (1812–75) from Coldstream, he was a blacksmith with premises on Brougham Place. The location was afterwards used by Gould the framesmith. He married Christian, who died in 1896, aged 82. Their children included several who did not reach adulthood, plus Isabella and another daughter who married William Taylor of Ashybank. James (19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Janet Beattie and their children included Betty (b.1833) and Helen (b.1835). James (19th C.) married Helen Nichol in Roberton Parish in 1838. James (19th C.) recorded as 41st listed member of the Archæological Society in 1856. He lived at Langlands Bank. James (b.1817) son of James, he was uncle of Sir James A.H. He was a tailor in Hawick. He married Isabella Maben in Hawick Parish in 1842. James (19th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Isabella Whitson and their son James was baptised in Hawick Free Kirk in 1842. James (19th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Catherine Brown and their children, the last 4 baptised in Hawick Free Kirk, included: James (b.1832); John (b.1834); John (again, b.1835); Catherine (b.1844); James (again, b.1846); Andrew (b.1849); and Mary (b.1852). James (b.1825/6) from Canonbie, he was a ploughman at Whithaugh Cottages in Castleton Parish in 1861. His wife wa Ann and their children included Andrew, Agnes, Mary, Elizabeth and Janet. James (19th C.) founder of J. Murray & Sons, plumbers and slaters of Hawick. He was an elder in Allars Kirk. James (b.1835/6) from Newcastleton, he was a finisher of tweeds living at 12 Back Row in Hawick in 1861. He maried Agnes White and their children included James. James (19th C.) married Elizabeth (or 'Eliza') Rodger in Hawick Parish in 1852. Their daughter Helen was baptised in Hawick Free Kirk in 1853. James (19th C.) married Catherine Huggan in Hawick Parish in 1852. Sir James Augustus Henry 'Dictionary Murray' (1837–1915) born in Denholm, in the Crown Inn on Main Street. He was eldest son of Thomas Murray (clothier in Denholm and later Hawick, from the Spittal Tower family) and Mary Scott (also of Hawick, daughter of Charles Scott, linen manufacturer, and from the Boonraw family), and was a distant relative of the Hawick Schoolmaster who was also James Murray. His middle names were added only after he went to Hawick and discovered that some people had more than one Christian name. He developed an early interest in botany, geology and astronomy, as well as languages. He was educated at Cavers, Denholm and Minto schools, attending school only between the ages of 6 and 14½. He was said to know his letters by the age of 18 months and to have knowledge of Greek by the age of 7. In 1849 he spent 6 months as a cowherd on a nearby farm to avoid the cholera outbreak. By the time he left school he had already studied Latin, French, German, Italian and classical Greek. He took various temporary jobs (e.g. learning about book binding) and became a Junior Assistant Master at the United Schools of Hawick in 1854 at age 17. 3 years later he was made headmaster of a new private school in Hawick, the Subscription Academy. He was apparently keen on taking his pupils on excursions to study local botany, geology, etc. He was a founder member of the Archæological Society in 1856 (when he was still only 19 years old), being the 7th listed member and its first Secretary, writing the first minute-book himself, and giving a lecture at the 2nd meeting. He contributed many articles (51 in all) on a huge range of topics and was also the last surviving founder member of the Society. In the early years of the Society, he talked at a large fraction of the meetings, covering botany, geology, archæological artefacts, local history, the druids, the discovery of America, meteorology, the etymology of the name 'Hawick', a visit to Orkney, the Battle of Catraeth, 'Two Days' Ramble up the Slitrig and down the Liddell', the history and antiquities of Cavers, the Covenenaters in Teviotdale, the history of Hermitage, historical preparation of flax, etc. He also wrote descriptions of several of the Society's earliest field trips. He made a 5-foot long map of the geology of Scotland and another (or perhaps the same one) 'Scotland under the Romans', which he talked about at one of the first meetings of 1856. He also donated 'a large collection of geological specimens' and a 'fine cabinet of insects' to the Museum in 1856. He wrote a series of articles in the Hawick Advertiser in the 1850s (completed in the Archæological Society Transactions), describing the botany of the area; his methodical listing of each plant family is an early indication of his predilection for systematisation, presaging his dictionary work. In 1858 he read a poem to the Society, 'Address to a Skeleton Discovered in Stone Cist in this Vicinity'. Also in 1858 he gave a lecture on 'Contributions of Philology to the Early History of Western Europe', and another on 'Origin and History of the Scottish Language', these being his first forays into what was to become his life's work. He also presented the Museum with a cabinet of insects he had collected. In Hawick he was also involved with politics as well as the Total Abstinence Society. In 1857 he attended a course on elocution by Alexander Melville Bell, inventor of a phonetic system and father of the more famous Alexander Graham Bell; he later described discussing sounds of the Teviotdale dialect with Bell. He had many talents, for example his sketch of Leyden's birthplace was used as the frontispiece for the 1858 collection of Leyden's works. In 1861 he wrote about the hill-fort on Kirkton Hill and made a drawing of 'the remains of the camp or oppidum' there. In 1861 he also published the booklet 'A Week Among the Antiquities of Orkney'. In 1862 he gave a (rather fictionalised account) of the stories in the book of Reginald of Durham relating to 'Saint Cuthbert's Chapel by the Slitrith'. In 1863 he made stencil copies of the stones describing Walter Scott of Goldielands that were uncovered in St. Mary's Kirk. He also personally investigate the Catrail, with in 1863 'three days spent examining on foot and on horseback the south end of the line', concluding that it did not extend beyond Robert's Linn. In September 1864 he gave a farewell address to the Archæological Society and was treated to a farwell supper, with about 50 people present. In 1865 he sent up from London a collection of fossils for the Museum. He was a member of the Congregational Kirk in Denholm, consistent with his family's conenctions with non-establishment churches and in 1864 he presented a paper on Teviotdale in Covenanting times. In 1862 he married Maggie Isabella Sarah Scott (1834–65) in Belfast; she was an infant teacher and daughter of a Hawick clerk and had taught in Manchester and then Belfast. The couple lived in Hawick, bu in 1864 they moved to London for his wife's health, where nevertheless she died in 1865 (of consumption, aged 31), and their infant daughter Anne Marie Gretchen the year before (buried in the Wellogate Cemetery). There he worked for the Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China in Threadneedle Street. He obtained a reader's ticket for the British Museum and resumed his interest in languages, soon meeting several philologists who lived in the London area. In 1867 he married Ada Agnes Ruthven (1845–1936), with Alexander Graham Bell as the best man. In 1869 he presented a paper to the Archæological Society on 'The Origins and Early History of the Scottish Dialects, with special reference to the Dialect of Teviotdale' (essentially a summary of what would become his great book on local dialects). In 1870 he was appointed Schoolmaster at Mill Hill School, north-west of London and lived in a nearby house called 'Sunnyside'; he regarded his time there as the happiest of his life (apart from when he was in Hawick of course). In 1871, on a return visit, he gave a talk to the Archæological Society on David Lyndesay of the Mount and on another visit in 1873 'read a short paper on the present extent of the Gaelic speaking territory'. He completed 'The Dialect of the Southern Counties of Scotland' (1873), the first systematic study of any dialect; it also contains a translation of the Book of Ruth into Lowland Scots. In addition he gave papers at meetings of the Philological Society around this time. Contributing more seriously to philological study, he produced editions of 'The Minor Poems of Sir David Lindesay' (1871), 'The Complaynt of Scotland' (1872) with an extensive introduction and glossary and 'Romance and prophecies of Thomas of Erceldoune' (1875), again with notes. He obtained a B.A. from London University in 1873 and an honorary LL.D. from Edinburgh University in 1874, stopping off in Hawick to give an extra talk to the Archæological Society on 'The Complaynt'. He also visited in 1875 to give a talk on 'The Ballads and Prophecies of Thomas the Rymour of Ersyldoune'. He became President of the Philological Society in 1878 and around 1879 he took over as editor of the 'New English Dictionary on Historical Principles' (to become the Oxford English Dictionary). An undertaking of gargantuan proportions, he died before it was completed, although the work was finished under his organisation and inspiration. Much of the work was carried out in a glorified shed in his garden, referred to as the 'Scriptorium'. In 1885, after the second volume was published he gave up his teaching job permanently and moved with his family to Oxford to work full time on the dictionary in a new Scriptorium in the garden of 78 Banbury Road, renamed Sunnyhill. Apart from the occasional family holiday he worked tirelessly on the dictionary. He was made an Honorary Burgess of Hawick in 1906, when he was also at the presentation of the Provost's Chain event, on the 50th anniversay of the Archæological Society. He had 10 surviving children, all of whom were given Anglo-Saxon first names and middle names given after relatives, including: Harold James Ruthven, who wrote an influential history of chess, as well as providing an article on him for the Archæological Transactions; and Sir Oswyn, who became Secretary to the Admiralty. He received a knighthood in 1908, as well as honorary degrees from 9 universities. He died of heart failure following a year of illness, in which he completed the volume 'Trink to Turndown' on schedule. He is buried at Wolvercote Cemetery near Oxford. A plaque marking his birthplace is in Denholm, and another in Hawick, where he lived on Bourtree Place. The definitive biography is 'Caught in the Web of Words' (1977) by his grand-daughter K.M. Elisabeth Murray, and he is also the 'Professor' (although he never held that title) in Simon Winchester's 'The Professor and the Madman' (1998, British title 'The Surgeon of Crowthorne'). His contribution to the systematization of language is immense. All major dictionary projects that came later have followed the principles he laid out. Words from the Hawick area are well represented in his original volumes (but unlike modern dictionaries, he left out all words considered obscene in his day). James (b.1860) son of Robert and Elizabeth Hunter, he was born in Hawick. He moved to Edinburgh, where he worked as a baker, and later the family lived in Kelso. He married Jane McMichan. James (1874/5–1965) farmer in Whisgills, descended from the earlier Murrays of Whisgills farm. His wife Mary Janet Elliot died in 1908, aged 32. His 2nd wife Margaret Brown died in 1956, aged 76. They are buried in Ettleton Cemetery. Dr. James (1875/6–1920) doctor in Allendale, he died in Newcastleton. His wife Elizabeth Jane Murray came from Whisgills, and died in 1963; she secondly married William B. Paterson of Rutherglen. They are buried at Ettleton. Janet (b.1820/1) grocer on Wilton Place, listed in Slater's 1852 directory. She was wife of John, tailor at the Sandbed. In 1851 she was a widow at Wilton Place, with her children John, Elizabeth and William. In 1861 she was at Dovemount with John and William. Her maiden name may have been Wilson. Joan (14th C.) daughter of Sir Maurice, Earl of Strathearn, who was also Baron of Hawick. Through her father she inherited the Barony of Hawick, which then passed to her husband, Sir Thomas of Bothwell. There is some confusion here over multiple Joannas, but it seems likely that it was not her, but her daughter, who married Archibald, 3rd Earl of Douglas. It seems that she was promised to Douglas, but may have died in the plague that ravaged Britain in 1362 (and probably also killed her husband a year or so earlier). Douglas seems to have instead married the daughter, also Joan. Joan or 'Joanna' (d.aft. 1401) probably daughter of Sir Thomas Murray of Bothwell. However, she is often confused with her mother, Joan, who was daughter of Sir Maurice, Earl of Strathearn (and in fact the evidence that there were 2 separate women is not clear). She appears to have been the heiress of the Bothwell titles (including the Barony of Hawick), and after the death of her mother she married Archibald Douglas, 'the Grim', 3rd Earl of Douglas; however, she would have been quite young when this happened. The Hawick Barony then passed to the Douglases. John (14th C.) son of Roger, who was granted the lands of Fala. In 1358 he was already deceased when David II confirmed his grant of the lands of Cranston-Riddell from John of Cranston. These lands had been held by Isabel Riddell and were to be held by his son William. John (15th C.) witness in 1431 to the transfer of the lands of Heap between the Langlands' and the Scotts. All of the other men who wrote special testaments were local lairds, including Alexander Murray, who must have been a near relation. He was recorded as 'Jhone off Murray' and could have been John of Falahill. John of Falahill and Philiphaugh (d.1477) descendant of Roger de Moravia. He had a charter of the lands of Philiphaugh in 1461. This included the lands of Harehead, Hangingshaw and Lewishope. In 1462 he was appointed Herd-keeper to Queen Mary of Gueldres. He was also Keeper of Newark Castle in the 1460s. In 1463 he was on the panel of retour for Archibald Douglas, 5th Earl of Angus, as heir to his father. He had the lease of Lewenshope and Hangingshaw from 1471 and in 1480 the lease was passed to his son Patrick. In 1475 he was keeper of the King's property at Bowhill. His sons included: Patrick of Falahill, the eldest, who succeeded; William in Sundhope; and another, whose son John was Burgess in Edinburgh and progenitor of the Murrays of Blackbarony. John (d.c.1485) brother of Ninian. Along with his brother he leased the Crown lands of Kershope on the Ettrick in 1485. In the following year the lease passed to his widow Elizabeth Sinclair, and son Thomas. He was stated to have been killed when his property was devastated by traitors and rebels. John (d.bef. 1494) resident of the Kershope area. In 1494/5 Steven Turnbull, brother of the Laird of Whithope, had remission for his slaughter. Turnbull was also cited for other crimes, including bringing in 'traitors of Leven' for the pillaging and burning of Kershope and the theft of 80 cows from the tenants there. John of Falahill (d.1510) eldest son of Patrick of Philiphaugh and Falahill. He was nephew of Alexander who was Rector of Hawick and was probably the closest historical person to 'the Outlaw Murray' of the ballad. In 1488 he was joint tenant with his father in the Crown lands of Lewenshop and Hangingshaw, and later with his son John. In 1489/90 he had a charter for lands in Peeblesshire. He was Ranger of Yarrow Ward until 1489, when he had the lease of Tinnis for his fee. In 1491 he was 'procurator' for Alexander Lord Home in an instrument granting Home tenancy in the lands of Harden. He is probably the John who acted as surety for several people at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1493. He is probably the John 'de hangitshaw' whose brother Thomas served as a surety at the Justice-aire in Selkirk in 1494/5 and who himself served as surety for John Scott in Tushielaw. Also in 1494/5 it is recorded that he had livestock stolen from Newark by Robert Scott of Deloraine. He is also recorded being 'de hangitschaw' in the accounts for the Selkirk Justice-aire of 1494/5, when he was pledge for John Wilson in Hartwoodmyre. He was owner of Westerhouses in Hassendean Parish, receiving the lands 'under reversion' (i.e. on non-payment of a loan) from Alexander, Lord Home. In 1497 he had a charter for Cranston-Riddell. In 1499 he had a 'tack' of lands with David Hoppringle of 'the Tynnes'. Also in 1499 he was assigned the lands of 'Levinishop' and Hangingshaw in Yarrow, along with his son John (which may be an error). About the same time he gave his permission for Walter Scott to take the lease of Haining. In 1500 Walter Scott of Branxholme was recorded as assignee of him and Ninian (probably a brother or other close relative), when goods of Philip Turnbull of Whithope were recovered as part of 19 score merks that he owed them; this was for the damage done to their lands of Kershope. He was Depute Sheriff of Selkirkshire in 1501. In 1501/2 he was witness to another bond of reversion for the lands of Harden, also involving Alexander, Lord Home. In 1502–09 he had the lease of the Crown lands of Hangingshaw, Lewenshope and Harehead. In 1502 his farms at Fastheugh and Hangingshaw were raided by Philip Turnbull in Whithope and David Turnbull in Carlinpool. Also in 1502 he was surety for a man from Fairnilee who had remission for murder. In 1502/3 at Galashiels he infefted Queen Margaret in the lands of Ettrick Forest and Newark Tower. He served as surety at the Justice-aire in Selkirk in 1505. In 1506/7 he was one of the men to whom Walter Scott of Howpasley, tutor to the Laird of Buccleuch, had to give in his accounts. In 1507/8 he had a letter of obligation with Robert Scott of Whitchesters, involving a loan, with the tower in Hawick 'between the bridges' as security. He was appointed as High Sheriff of Selkirkshire, which the King had to humiliatingly give him according to the ballad. He was Sheriff of Selkirkshire in 1508 in a charter for lands in Selkirk and in 1509 in the document where Adam Hepburn inherited the lands of Alemoor. In 1508 he had a charter for Falahill and Whitlawsland, in 1509 had a charter for the lands of Peel Hill and also in 1509 had a reversion with George Douglas, Master of Angus, for the lands of Selkirk. In 1510/1 he and his wife had a charter for the lands of Cranston-Riddell. He married Janet Forester and later Margaret, daughter of Patrick Hepburn. His children were: James, who succeeded; William, ancestor of the Romanno, Stanhope and Clooney branches; John, who was recorded in the Exchequer Rolls in 1507/8; Patrick, who had a charter for Broadmeadows in 1510; Elizabeth, who married Sir James Douglas, 5th Laird of Cavers; Isabel, who married Robert Scott of Howpasley; and Janet, who married Sir Robert Stewart of Minto. Tradition attributes his death to Scott of Buccleuch or perhaps Scott of Haining at a little mount below Newark Castle. However, he was actually killed by Andrew Ker of Gateshaw and Thomas, brother of Philip Scott of Headshaw, according to cases at Jedburgh Justice-aire in 1510. John (15th/16th C.) son of John of Falahill. In 1507/8 he leased the Crown lands of Hangingshaw, Lewenshope and Harehead. He was recorded as son and heir of John of Falahill in 1509 and still leasing Crown lands in 1513. He may have been the Sheriff in Selkirkshire recorded at the Justice-aire at Selkirk in 1510. At that court he was among men found guilty of burning some of the wood in Ettrick Forest. He is probably the John of Falahill who had a charter for the lands of Bold and Philiphaugh in 1512. He may have died at Flodden. John of Blackbarony (d.1513) Burgess of Edinburgh, he was grandson of John of Philiphaugh, his father's name being unknown. He is John of 'blac barony' when he acted as surety at the Justice-aire held in Peebles in 1498. He was recorded in the Exchequer Rolls of the early years of the 16th century as Chamberlain of Ballincrief and 'custumar' of Haddington. In 1502/3 he was superior of the lands of Blackbarony in a land transaction recorded in Edinburgh. In 1505/6 he was an assignee of the executors of William in Sundhope, his uncle. He is probably the John junior who was allowed the 'fermes' of Winterburgh in 1506 and Carterhaugh in 1507. In 1507 he had a charter of the Barony of Blackbarony or Hatton. He is probably the 'Master John Murray of Blakbarony' who in 1510/1 was granted the lands of Briery Yards, in the Barony of Hassendean, which had been forfeited by Cuthbert Cunningham, Earl of Glencairn. In 1511 he had a charter for lands in Edinburgh and Haddington and in 1512 and 1513 other charters for lands in Selkirkshire and elsewhere. In 1503/4 he married Isobel, daughter of Richard Happar. They had 2 daughters, and a son, Andrew of Blackbarony. He died at Flodden. He had wills registered in Edinburgh in 1515 and 1516. John 'Jock' (16th C.) tenant of Gavin of Elliot of Falnash in 1569. Elliot acted as cautioner for his tenants at a meeting in Hawick, assuring that they would obey the laws of the Lord Regent. Sir John of Blackbarony (16th/17th C.) son of Andrew. He was knighted by James VI at Stirling upon announcing to the King the birth of his eldest son, Henry, Prince of Wales. In 1575/6 he was a complainant regarding 'mails' for 'Glenpoit and Preischoip' (this being Glenpyet in the Yarrow valley). In 1580 he was named in a transaction in Selkirk. In 1581/2 he acted as cautioner for Robert of Aikwood. In 1586 he is recorded as one of the 'curators' of the young Walter Scott of Buccleuch. In 1587 he served as a cautioner for Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch after he was released from prison in Edinburgh Castle. He served as cautioner for Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1590. He may be the John who witnessed a bond of 'manrent' in Hawick in 1595, between the Beatties and Sir Walter of Branxholme (Gideon Murray, his brother, was also a witness). In 1607 he was in dispute with the Burgh of Selkrik. In 1610 he was appointed keeper of the rolls for the Justices of the Peace in Peeblesshire. He may be the Murray of Blackbarony who, along with his son Frederick, was made a Burgess of Glasgow in 1619. He married Margaret, daughter of Sir Alexander Hamilton. Their children were: Andrew, who died before his father; Sir Archibald, who succeeded; Sir John of Raveling; Col. Walter of Pilmore; Alexander; Patrick; William; Margaret, who married Sir Robert Halket of Pitfirrane; Agnes, who married Sir John Riddell of that Ilk; Elizabeth, who married Sir Robert Ker, 1st Earl of Ancrum; Grizel, who married Sir William Douglas of Casbogle; Christian, who married Sir William Veitch of Dawyck; Isabel, who married Patrick Scott of Thirlestane; and possibly another daughter who married William Scott of Mangerton. Sir John of Falahill and Philiphaugh (d.c.1640) son of Patrick of Falahill, he was the first of the family designated 'of Philiphaugh'. He had a charter of 1584, as heir to his father and also held lands at Hangingshaw and Traquair. He was probably the 'Johnne Murray, sone to the Shereff of Selkirk' who was among Borderers cited for non-appearance in 1578/9. He was probably the

'younger in Philophaucht' recorded in Selkirk in 1581. He is probably the John in Philiphaugh who witnessed a transaction in Selkirk in 1582. He was served heir to his father in 1601 in the lands of Philiphaugh, as well as the office of Sheriff of Selkirkshire. He represented Selkirkshire (or 'the Forest') in the Parliament of 1612. In 1614, on behalf of his wife, he paid money to the Donaldsons of Broadmeadows. In 1618 he was listed as one of the curators of the young Andrew Scott of Aikwood. Also in 1618 he was appointed as a Commissioner for the Middle Shires. In 1620 he had a precept of sasine for Broadmeadows. He was recorded in documents in the Walter Mason Collection in 1610 and c.1620. In 1622 and 1623 he was on the Commission for keeping peace on the Border. In 1623 a man was found guilty of stealing an ox from his servitor, John Murray, from the lands of 'Low, otherwise called the Catclughe'. He had a charter of 1624 involving lands in the Barony of Buccleuch. In 1624 he and his heir James gave sasine of Broadmeadows to Andrew, son of William Scott in Fauldshop. He married Janet, daughter of Sir William Scott of Ardross (or perhaps Sir William of Harden) and secondly married Helen (or Isabel), daughter of Sir James Pringle of Galashiels. His children included: Sir James of Balincrief, his eldest son, who married Anne, daughter of Sir Thomas Craig of Riccarton and whose son succeeded to Philiphaugh; Gideon, aide-de-camp to Charles I, who died in service; Joan, a daughter who married James Kerr of Chatto; Anne, who married John Shaw; Grezel; John of Ashiestiel; William, who died fighting for the King; David, who also died the same way; Helen, who married Scott of Broadmeadows; Elizabeth, who married Rev. Robert Knox of Kelso, as his 2nd wife; and Isabel. He was succeeded by his grandson, Sir John. Sir John (d.1640) 1st Earl of Annandale, son of Sir Charles of Cockpool and Margaret Somerville. His siblings included: Sir James of Cockpool, who married Janet, daughter of Sir William Douglas of Drumlanrig, but died without an heir; Sir Richard, whom he eventually succeeded; Jean, who married John Maxwell of Kirkhouse; and another sister, who married Robert Elliot of Redheugh. In 1616 and 1624 he sent a letter to Walter Scott, Lord of Buccleuch, expressing his support and essentially apologising for raids against Buccleuch and into England. He was a great favourite of Charles I and acquired a huge estate. Among his lands and rights were the 5-pound land of the Chapel lands of Caerlenrig, which his son James inherited in 1641. He was created Earl of Annandale in 1624/5 and acquired vast estates. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Shaw. He was succeeded as 2nd Earl by his son James, who died without issue and the title became extinct. Sir John of Ravelrig (17th C.) 3rd son of Sir John of Blackbarony. He was granted lands in Belses by William, Earl of Lothian in 1634. He was one of the overseers of the tutors of the children of Walter, Earl of Buccleuch, who died in 1633. John (17th C.) tenant in Woll when he signed the 'Confessions of Faith' in Hawick in 1638. It is unclear how he was related to other Murrays. He may be the John who married Janet Hogg in Ashkirk in 1636. John (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Margaret Redford and their children included: Francis (b.1690); Adam (b.1692); Elizabeth (b.1694); Jean (b.1696); and Anna (b.1699). The witnesses in 1690 were Francis (perhaps his father or brother) and William Dunlop. He may be related to the earlier tenant in Woll. Sir John of Philiphaugh (d.1676) son of Sir James, he succeeded his grandfather Sir John. He was heritable Sheriff of Selkirkshire. In 1646 he was recorded as a judge for trying people in Selkirkshire and Roxburghshire. In 1643, 1646 and 1649 he was on the Committee of War for Selkirkshire and was Convenor in 1644. He joined with Graham's force in 1646 and claimed for damages he sustained against Montrose in 1649. In 1648 he was one of the prominent men named on a Commission to suppress the thieves on the Border. He is probably the 'John morray of . . . ' who witnessed a baptism in Ashkirk in 1656 for Thomas Scott of Whitslade. He was M.P. for Selkirkshire from 1661. He also became a Burgess and Guild Brother of Edinburgh (gratis) in 1661 (with another apparent entry in 1669). He married Anne, daughter of Sir Archibald Douglas of Cavers and secondly married Margaret, widow of John Trotter of Charterhall and daughter of Sir John Scott of Scotstarvet. His children were: Sir James, who succeeded; John of Bowhill; Col. William; Archibald, Thomas and Lewis, who died young; Anne, who married Alexander Pringle of Whytbank and later Robert Rutherford of Bowland; Janet; Rachel; Elizabeth; and Jean, who died young. In 1688 his wife was served heir to their daughter Jean. John (17th C.) married Marian Lillico in Bedrule in 1694. John (17th C.) resident at Wester Heap according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. John (17th C.) resident at Easter Highchesters according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. John of

Bowhill (c.1667–1714) younger son of Sir John of Philiphaugh and brother of Sir James. He was an advocate who became a Senator in the College of Justice. He served as representative to Parliament for Selkirk 1689–1702 and for Selkirkshire 1703–07. In 1702 he became a Burgess and Guild Brother in Edinburgh, in right of his father-in-law, Sir John Scott of Ancrum. In 1704 he was a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire and for Selkirkshire. He was a great supporter of the Union, and was briefly part of the first Parliament of Great Britain until he became Lord Bowhill in 1707. He owned the estate of Bowhill (temporarily out of the hands of the Scotts) and built the house there in 1708. He married Margaret, daughter of Sir John Scott of Ancrum and their children included John (farmer at Unthank). He was succeeded in the lands of Bowhill by his nephew Lieut.-Col. James. There was an elegy written on his death. John (1669/70–1749) gardener at Spittal Tower, who was a direct ancestor of 'Dictionary' Murray. He came from Hobkirk Parish, renting the garden haugh and enclosure at Spittal Tower in about 1712. His father may have been Andrew, but that is uncertain. He is recorded as gardener at 'Tower' in 1715. In 1701 he married Isobel Turnbull (from Bedrule), who died in 1746, aged 67. They had 7 children (several baptised in Cavers Parish): John (1709–72), the eldest son, with several later generations having the same name; Margaret, eldest daughter, married James Veitch, and her grand-daughter married Castleton Schoolmaster William Scott; Jean, who died in infancy; Agnes (b.1713); Andrew (b.1715); James (b.1720), who also died in infancy; and Mary (b.1724). They are buried in Bedrule churchyard. John (1677–1728) born at Unthank, son of John (from the Philiphaugh family) and Margaret Scott of Ancrum. He leased the farms of Unthank and Fiddleton from the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1722. His son James resigned the lands to Robert Elliot of Fenwick and Walter Scott (farmer at Commonside) in 1733. He married his cousin Ann, daughter of Archibald Bennet of Chesters (near Ancrum) in 1712 and their children were: James (b.1713); Archibald (b.1715); Barbara (b.1717); Anna (or Anna, b.1719); John (b.1721, who became a doctor in Norwich); Andrew (b.1723); William (b.1724); Elizabeth (b.1726); and Andrew (b.1728). John (17th/18th C.) tailor in Howcleuch. In 1712 in Hawick Parish, he married Marion Paterson, who was 'servitrix to Walter Grieve' in Branxholme Park. Their son William was baptised in Hawick in 1719. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Hoscote in 1712 when his daughter Bessie was baptised in Roberton Parish and in 1719 when his son John was baptised. He may also be the John resident at Outerside in 1715 when his son James was baptised and in 1717 when his son William was baptised. Other John (17th/18th C.) resident of Chisholme Mill in 1720 when his son Robert was baptised in Roberton Parish. Helen (b.1723) may also be his child. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Whithope in 1718 when his daughter Mary was baptised and in 1721 when his twins Walter and Helen were baptised in Roberton. John of Philiphaugh (d.1753) son of Sir James. He was heritable Sheriff of Selkirk. In 1715 he was made a Burgess of Glasgow (gratis). He was M.P. for the Lanark (or Linlithgow) Burghs, which included Selkirk, 1725–34 and for Selkirkshire from 1734 until his death. In 1737 he was involved in a bond with a tenant in Philiphaugh. In 1752 he had a charter for the lands of Whitfield, Mervinslaw and Todshaw in the Parish of Wilton. In 1711 he married Eleanora, daughter of Lord Basil Hamilton; she died in 1783 and is buried in Holyroodhouse Chapel. Their children were: Basil, who died young; John, who was also M.P. for the Linlithgow Burghs; Charles, who died unmarried; James, who succeeded his brother; Janet, who married Mr. Dennis of Jamaica; Eleanora, who was rescued as a child from the burning of Haningshaw, married Sir James Nasmyth of Posso and was painted by Raeburn; Mary, who married John Macqueen of Jamaica and possibly also Sir Alexander Don, 4th Baronet of Newton; and Margaret, who married Capt. Baugh and and is buried in Holyroodhouse Chapel. John (1709–72) eldest son of John and brother of Andrew. He was the grandfather of the Hawick Rector James Murray, and great-grandfather of Gen. Sir John Murray. He became tenant farmer at Spittal-on-Rule in 1730. He shared the tenancy with the Veitches and the Bunyans, his part including the orchard (hence he was referred to as 'Gardener in Toure'). He was recorded as gardener at Spittal or at Tower when his children were baptised in Cavers Parish. He married Jean Henderson in 1734 at Newton in Bedrule, and she died in 1786, aged 72. Their children (baptised in Cavers Parish) were: John (b.1735), who was also tenant at Spittal and married Mary Cleuch; James (b.1741), who became Presbyterian minister at Harbottle; Isabel (b.1744), married Mr.

Thomson, farmer at Netherraw; Archibald; Andrew (b.1747), whose grandson was editor of the Kelso Mail; Jean (or Jenny, b.1755), lived at Harbottle, then at Hawick; Betty, married James Veitch; Margaret (b.1757); and William (b.1759), who had sons Veitch and John. The baptism of Andrew appears to have been recorded twice in 1747. He is buried in Bedrule kirkyard along with most of his family. John (18th C.) gardener in Wilton Parish. He was listed among the potential executors for William Scott of Whitehaugh in 1750, his designation being 'in Murrays Haie', which seems likely to be Morrishaa. John (18th C.) resident of Ewesdale. He married Betty Park and their children included: James (b.1753), born in Langholm; and Margaret (b.1759), baptised in Ewes, who probably married Adam Jardine. John of Philiphaugh (1726–1800) 2nd son of John of Philiphaugh, succeeding because his elder brother died as a youth. He owned the lands of Todshaw in 1757 when its head lands were divided from those of Mabonlaw. He was also involved in a dispute with Henry, Duke of Buccleuch over teinds for Todshaw in the period 1745–70. He was M.P. for Linlithgow Burghs 1754–61; this was a set of 4 Royal Burghs, Linlithgow, Lanark, Selkirk and Peebles. The election of 1754 was infamous locally for the extravagant level of bribery, particularly through free drink offered to the Selkirk Councillors to encourage them to support either him or the Tory candidate, Sir Lawrence Dundas (of Linlithgow). It was said that the excesses caused him so much expense that he had to sell his lands of Hangingshaw. He was recorded as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire in 1761. In 1764 he subscribed to Sir Robert Douglas' 'Peerage of Scotland'. He was one of the landowners involved in the court case over the division of Wilton Common in 1765. It was said that he was elected Commissioner for Selkirk in 1768, but did not win the contest to represent the Burghs in Parliament. He was listed on the roll of electors for Roxburghshire in 1780. He paid the land tax for his lands of Philiphaugh in 1785. He was also listed among the voters of Selkirkshire in 1788. He was keen on hunting and other field sports and was said to have once rode from London to Hangingshaw in 48 hours; a story is also told of his huntsman drowning in the Yarrow and having his body turn up in Holland (identified by his coat and hunting horn), which was the origin for the poem 'Huntsman of Traquair' by Henry Scott Riddell. He suffered financial losses and was said to have spent extravagantly, resulting in him having to sell a large part of the estate of Philiphaugh to John Johnstone of Alva (brother of William Johnstone Pulteney). He moved to America to try to recover some debts and secure a position there. He married N.N. Thomson (from whom he inherited a considerable legacy) and was succeeded by his sons John and then James. He died in Jamaica. John (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Sophie (or ('Suffie') Anderson and their children included: Isabel (b.1762); and Jean (b.1770). John (1735–1809) eldest son of John, farmer and gardener at Spittal-on-Rule. On his gravestone he is referred to as 'Gardiner at Spittal'. He farmed at Spittal in partnership with his mother until her death in 1786 and may have ceased farming there altogether when the holdings were merged in 1807. In 1782 he married Mary Cleuch, who died in Denholm in 1816, aged 65. Their children were: John, whose family emigrated to Australia; Mary (b.1785), who married brewer Alexander Russell and secondly hosier Thomas Scott; Jane (or 'Jean', b.1787), the youngest daughter; and James (b.1789), Schoolmaster in Hawick. He died at Denholm-Townfoot and is buried in Bedrule kirkyard. If he was 65 when he died, he was born in 1743/4. John (1745/6–1826) farmer at Whisgills in Castleton Parish. He is recorded there in the Horse Tax Rolls of 1788–91. He is probably son of David and was succeeded as farmer by his brother Thomas. He appears not to have had any children and is buried along with his brother's family at Ettleton. John (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Isabel Reid and their son John was baptised in 1782. John (18th C.) listed as house servant and groom at Stirches in 1785 and 1786, when he was working for Gilbert Chisholme. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was fined in 1785 for his 'irregular marriage'. Perhaps he is the John whose daughter Betty was baptised in 1787. John of Philiphaugh (d.1830) eldest son of John of Philiphaugh. He was listed in 1805 and 1819 as a Commissioner for Selkirkshire. He died unmarried and was succeeded by his brother James. John (18th/19th C.) farmer at Huntlyhill (in Bedrule Parish), recorded as owner of 3 horses on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. John (18th/19th C.) farmer at Castleton, recorded along with George on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. John (18th/19th C.) recorded as labourer at East Middles in Lilliesleaf Parish in the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. John (b.c.1770s) servant at Whisgills according to the ballots for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1799 and 1801. John (b.c.1770s) servant at Myredykes according to the ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1799. He may have been brother of Andrew, who was listed there in 1801. Perhaps the same John was a servant at Liddel Bank on the 1801 ballot. John (18th/19th C.) drover from 'Benpeth' (probably Bentpath) whose death is recorded in Hawick in 1824. John (18th/19th C.) linen and woollen draper in Newcastleton, listed in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. He is probably the Castleton merchant of the same name who subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. John (1777/8–1851) born in Castleton Parish, probably son of Robert and Marion Crozier. He was a smith in Newcastleton according to the ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1799; he was also a blacksmith on the Militia ballot in 1801. He was a feuar of Newcastleton, as well as being a farmer and blacksmith, probably on North Hermitage Street. He was a farmer at about 37 North Hermitage Street in 1841 and 1851. He married Anne Jardine (1802/3–57), who came from Gretna and was significantly younger than him. Their children included: Robert (b.1828), who was a carter, and emigrated to Ontario; twins Walter and Marion (b.1830); John (b.1831/2), a blacksmith, who also emigrated to Ontario; James (1836–1908); Jeanie (b.1837); and Matthew (b.1841). He and his wife are buried at Ettleton cemetery. John (1780–1845) son of John and Mary Cleuch. He farmed at Denholm Townfoot and later at Camptown, where he died. He married Isabella Veitch. Their children were: John; Thomas; Robert; George; William; Agnes; Veitch; James; Walter; and Hugh. The children all emigrated to Australia, where they settled on the Murray River. He is buried in Bedrule kirkyard. It is possible he is the John 'Junr.' who was listed as a servant at Spittal on the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Cavers Parish. John (b.c.1780) mealdealer in Newcastleton. He was living on North Hermitage Street in 1841 and 1851 (when he was 'Formerly Mealdealer'). He married Margaret (or 'Peggy') Murray and their children included: David (b.1811); Betty (b.1813); George (b.1815); Matthew (b.1817); Isabel (b.1819/20); Thomas (b.1824); and Marion (b.1827). John (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Janet Grieve and their children included: William (b.1807); James (b.1811); and Mary (b.1813). John (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Betty Smith and their son William was baptised in 1812. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Helen Nichol and their children included: William (b.1813); Mary (b.1816); Elizabeth (b.1818); Jane and Margaret (b.1820); Agnes (b.1822); and Janet (b.1825). John (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Janet Nichol and their children included: Charles (b.1814); David (b.1815); and Thomas (b.1817). John (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Mary Elliot and their son Thomas was baptised in 1818. John (1806–90) born in Wilton Parish, son of James and Mary Scott. He trained as a clothier and tailor. He was recorded on the High Street in Pigot's 1837 directory. On the 1841 census he was listed at about No. 1 Sandbed, with wife Janet and children John, Elizabeth and a new-born (William). In Hawick he married Janet (b.1818), daughter of William Williamson and Elspeth Turnbull. Family history states that in about 1851 he emigrated to Canada with his wife and sons James, John Scott and Robert. His wife was said to have died on the voyage, and he settled down as a farmer, purchasing land in Euphrasia Township, Ontario, in 1855. However, the census records show that by 1851 his widow was a grocer on Wilton Place. In 1861 she was at Dovemount (probably about No. 2 Princes Street) and the census says 'surname Willison deleted'. It is possible there were 2 different Johns being confounded here, but more likely is that some of the information is incorrect, and that his wife returned to Hawick after they emigrated. John (b.1807/8) born in Castleton Parish, son of Thomas and Janet Ingles. He became farmer at Wolfelee. In 1851 he was farmer of 145 arable acres and 3000 acres of pasture, employing 5 people. In 1838 he married Helen (or Ellen), daughter of Thomas Stavert; she died in 1852, aged 59. Their children included: Thomas (1845–61); John (d.1855); Archibald Stavert (b.1849), who emigrated to Australia; and Helen Stavert (b.1852), who died in infancy. The family are buried at Ettleton. John (1814/5–92) son of William (teacher in the Canonbie area) and Helen Bell. He himself became a teacher in Langholm. He came to Hawick in the late 1840s to run the school at the head of Baker Street, which had been started by his brother Andrew. The school grew, and moved to the old East Bank Kirk. He is listed as teacher at a school in the East End in 1852. He was assisted by his younger brother William, who eventually ran the school that would become St. Mary's and ultimately Trinity. He himself left to become Schoolmaster at Longnewton and eventually at Caverton Mill, near Kelso. He married Jane Richardson, who died in 1915, aged 84. Their children included Graham, who was a tobacconist at 17 High Street, and Nellie, a milliner who retired to Denholm. John (1815/6–88) born in Hobkirk Parish, he was 3rd son of Elliot. He worked as a servant at Wauchope for 19 years, then worked as a hedger at Minto and spent his last 15 years of employment as farm steward at Dimpleknowe. In 1849 he was among the original congregation of Wolfelee Free Kirk. In 1861 he was Land Steward, living at Wauchope Cottages. He is probably the 'farm-steward' who donated an 'ancient bronze pot' to the Museum in 1865. He married Helen, daughter of Robert Waugh, Chesters blacksmith in 1839. They had 4 sons and 2 daughters, including: Robert, carpenter at Blacklee who married Margaret Jackson; John; William, who worked as a successful wool broker in Melbourne, then went to Japan; Violet; and a daughter, possibly Elizabeth, who married Hawick grocer Mr. Brydon. He died at St. Boswells. John (1815/6–83) father of J.E.D., he was a slater and plumber in Hawick. He had a brother, James. He is probably the John who was the 15th listed member of the Archæological Society in 1856, in 1860 donated a 'spar from Loch Katrine' to the Museum and in 1863 donated geological specimens. His wife was Margaret Dodd (daughter of the chief drummer with the Drums and Fifes), who died in 1902, aged 78. In 1841 he was living with Margaret on O'Connell Street. The family later lived at 2 Union Street. Their children were: Isabella A., who married teacher James Brand; Robert (b.1856), who was a commercial traveller in London; James Edward Dodd (b.1858); Alison (b.1861), who married Rev. John Gordon; and Frank James (b.1863); along with Isabella, Margaret and Alison Scott, who all died young. He is buried in Wellogate Cemetery. John of Philiphaugh (1817–82) eldest son of James. He was Deputy Lieutenant and J.P. in Selkirkshire. In 1866 he loaned several items to the Museum for their temporary exhibition: 'the original marraige contract of Scott of Harden and 'Muckle-mouthed Meg'; arms, cannon ball, a number of coins, &c., dug up on the field of Philiphaugh, and two bottles of wine found buried in the neighbourhood of the battle'. In 1840 he married Rose Mary, heiress of William Andrew Nesbitt, and according sometimes has the surname 'Nesbitt-Murray'. Their children were: John Forbes Pringle Nesbitt, who succeeded; James (b.1845), who maried Mary Russell; and Jesse Rose Mary, who married Sir William Lewis Salisbury Trelawny. He secondly married Charlotte, daughter of Rev. Richard Burgess. Gen. Sir John Irvine, K.C.B., V.C. (1826–1902) son of James, the Hawick Schoolmaster, and Margaret Irvine from Eskdale. He was 3rd cousin of Sir James A.H. He was born in Hawick and must have grown up in the town. He joined the East India Company at the age of 16 and was sent out to Calcutta in 1842. He was appointed to the 71st Native Infantry later in 1842, and rose through the ranks of the Bengal army, eventually becoming commander of the Indian army. He received a medal during the Punjab Campaign of 1848/9, was mentioned in dispatches and wouded at the Battle of Alighur in 1857, commanded a brigade of horsemen at Kutchla Ghaut in 1858 and then on the Nepal frontier, receiving another medal. In 1865/6 he was on the Bhootan Expedition, for which he received another medal. He became Lieut.-Col. in 1866, Col. in 1868, Maj.-Gen. in 1882, Lieut.-Gen. in 1887 and Gen. in 1891. He received the K.C.B. on the Queen's Golden Jubilee in 1897. He retired to Kensington. In 1854 he married Wilhelmina Stanley (d.1912), daughter of Col. Duncan Archibald Malcolm; he was son of Thomas Malcolm, who was brother of the 4 knights of Burnfoot. They had 6 children: Lieut. Archibald Ross, who served in Afghanistan, but died of cholera at the age of 24; Duncan, who died in childhood; Minnie, who married Maj. Wright; Caroline, who married T.W. Rawlings; Mary Stewart, who worked with the Salvation Army, being sent out to South Africa in the Boer War and France and Belgium in WWI, being awarded an O.B.E.; and Agnes Meade, who married Capt. Woolscombe of the K.O.S.B. John (b.1829/30) farmer at Upper Burnmouth in Castleton Parish. In 1861 he was farming 400 acres and employing 3 men. He lived with his sister Agnes. He could be the John who was on the Town Committee of Management in Newcastleton in the 1860s. He subscribed to David Anderson's book of verse in 1868. John Scott (1835–1904) son of John and Janet Williamson. He was born in Hawick, and in about 1851 he sailed to Canada with his father and maternal grandfather, William Williamson. They settled in Euphrasia Township, Grey County, Ontario, where he farmed. He married Jane Quinton and they had 8 children. John, J.P. (1835/6–1911) from the Annan area, he became a draper in Hawick (at 31 High Street) and later actuary for Hawick Savings Bank. He also served as a Town Councillor and was Burgh Treasurer in the 1880s. He was Treasurer of the Working Men's Building & Investment Society and possibly the same John Murray was an early commitee member of Hawick R.F.C. His sister Janet married Hawick teacher William Murray (probably her second cousin). He married Elspeth ferguson, who died in 1929, aged 86. Their children included John (who died in Vancouver), Peter Wilson (of the bullion department in a London bank) and Elizabeth (who married Abraham P. Hindle). John Edward Dodd 'Jed' (1858–1936) son of slater and plumber John. He was writer of the words for many Hawick songs, particularly 'The Mosstroopers' Song', 'Clinty's Song', 'The Wail of Flodden', 'Meda's Song' and the 'Invocation'. He also wrote poems such as 'Hornshole' (published when he was 14), 'Oor Gutterblude', 'The Reeky Howe' (also known as 'Naething New', composed for the 1889 Dinner) and 'Lest We Forget'. In addition there were several comedic plays, and musical plays written with Adam Grant, including 'Turning Back the Clock', 'The Caddie's Ghost' (1894), 'The Tramp' (1896), 'The Witch o' the Wisp Hill' (1901), 'Kirsty o' Cocklaw Castle' (1904) and 'The Gutterbludes' (1905); only for the last 2 do scripts survive. Additionally he wrote many of the words for the 'Quater-Centenary Pageant', acting as Pageant Master. Born at 57 High Street, he apprenticed with John Wield, druggist, but had his health damaged by chemicals. He then left Hawick to pursue work in the chemist's, grocery and insurance trades, returning to Hawick in 1886 when he started his photographic business. His studio was first where the Post Office was later built (at the corner of Bridge Street and Croft Road), moving to 43 Bridge Street in 1902 (designed by J.P. Alison, who lived next door). This became one of Hawick's foremost photography businesses, closing in 1972. An ardent supporter of the Common Riding, his return to Hawick coincided with the rejuvenation of the ceremonial aspects, and he quickly became involved. J.E.D. was Cornet in 1890 (when he recited a specially-composed poem) and Acting Father no less than 4 times (the last time at the age of 67). He helped inaugurate the annual Cornet's dinner in 1895, ordered the Curds and Cream for almost half a century and acted as marshal for many years. He was a founder member of the Callants' Club in 1903. During WWI he personally rode the marches each Common Riding day, against the wishes of the Council and the Callants' Club. In 1920 he suggested the founding of the Mosstroopers' Club, and his horse was the model for the badge. In addition he was involved with the local Amateur Operatic Society (doing their stage make-up until the year of his death). He was a keen Mason, succeeding James Thomson as Bard of Masonic Lodge 424; in 1894 he photographed the Provincial Grand Office-bearers at Jedburgh Abbey. He became an honorary life member of the golf club after the success of 'the Caddie's Ghost' at their 1894 fund-raiser. He was also a great walker and lover of the outdoors, publishing a book entitled 'Over the Rolling Stones by One of Them'. He additionally wrote an introductory article for James Edgar's 'Hawick Songs and Recitations' (1892). He was also known as painter, particularly of animals. He married Margaret 'Daisy' Young (daughter of a Sandbed baker), who had been his Lass, and they had one child, Melgund. The Museum mounted an exhibition devoted to his life in the late 1990s. A portrait of his favourite horse 'Oakwood Daisy' is in the Museum, along with an inkwell made from the foot of another, called 'Ben'. There is also a painting of his, 'Mrs. Reid, with Betsy the Cow, Pilmuir'. He is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery in an unmarked grave, although a plaque was unveiled there in 1990. The J.E.D. Murray Memorial Challenge Trophy was first presented at the 1938 Common-Riding Race meeting. A plaque was unveiled at 57 High Street in 2006 and the Mosstroopers' Club held a celebration in 2008 to mark the 150th anniversary of his birth. His son Malcolm was among the visitors who visited Gallipoli in 2015. John (1898–1992) born in Selkirk. In 1915 he walked to Galshiels to volunteer for the K.O.S.B., even alhough he was only 16. He was sent to Gallipoli in August of that year, surviving the Dardanelles campaign. He was at the Somme in 1916 in was captured at Lys, spending 14 months in a German prisoner-of-war camp. After the war he worked as a designer in Dumfries and then came to Hawick, where he worked at Blenkie's for 45 years, becoming head designer. He married Alice Little in 1936 and they lived at 12 Loan. He regularly lay a wreath to commemorate the 12th of July and was the last surviving member of the Gallipoli Comrades' Association. Katherine Maud Elisabeth (1909–98) grand-daughter of James A.H. In 1977 she published a biography of her grandfather entitled 'Caught in the web of words: James A.H. Murray and the Oxford English dictionary'. Keith 'Eeker' (1962–) originally football mad, he was part of the Hawick team that won the British Youth Club five-a-side Championship in 1977. However, he excelled further as a rugby player, turning out for the Wanderers and the Trades before joining Hawick R.F.C. at age 17. He was part of the Greens team that won 5 Scottish League Championships and was club captain in 1988/9. As a policeman, he also played for the British Police several times. He additionally represented the South of Scotland, including in the Hong Kong Sevens in 1983, and was capped 3 times for Scotland in 1985. After multiple concussions he retired from rugby at the age of 26, returning to play football with the Waverley. He worked as a police constable and then for Scottish Ambulance Service. He married Judith and they have a son Gary. Kevin police office from Hawick. He became a Superintendent of the Lothian and Borders force and had responsibility for security at the 2014 Commonwealth Games. Malcolm, C.B.E. (1938–) born in Hawick and raised at 12 Loan, son of John, who was the last surviving connection between Hawick and the Gallipoli campaign. He turned down the chance to study science at Edinburgh University, instead joining the Scottish Life Assurance Company. By the time he retired in 1999 he was Chief Executive and Director. He served as President of the Insurance Society of Edinburgh and the Faculty of Actuaries. Always a keen sports enthusiast, he played for Hawick Trades and Edinburgh Borderers, was Hawick R.F.C. President in 2002–04 and has been Chairman of the Bill McLaren Foundation. He has also been a longtime member of Hawick Golf Club. He was Chief Guest of the Common Riding in 2011 and has served as Callants' Club President. Margaret (1629/30–1707) wife of William Craw. After her husband died in 1671 she took over his share of the tenancy of Branxholmetown farm. This she did until at least 1677, with her son James later taking over. She is buried in Borthwick Waas Cemetery. Margaret (b.1820/1) draper, grocer and post-mistress in Newcastleton in the 1850s and 60s. She lived on South Hermitage Street with her twin sister Jane (who was a hat-maker), and another sister Agnes (also a milliner). Her bisiness was listed as 'Margaret Murray & Co.' in Slater's 1852 directory. She was probably related to the earlier draper, John. Mary (18th/19th C.) resident at Newcastleton, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Matthew (d.1840) son of John and Ann Jardine, he was born in Castleton. He worked as a farm servant, general labourer and stone quarrier. In 1866 he married Jane (b.1837) daughter of William Kyle and Robina Cavers. Their children were: John (b.1867); William (b.1868); Anna Jane (b.1870); and Thomas (b.1872). Sir Maurice 'de Moravia' (1276–1346) Earl of Strathearn. Born in Drumsargard, Cambuslang, Lanarkshire, he was probably eldest son of Sir John of Drumsargard and an unknown mother. His step-mother (or perhaps mother) was Mary, daughter of Malise, 7th Earl of Strathearn. In 1320 he witnessed the charter granting Sir James Douglas the Lorsdhip of Jedburgh. He may have fought at Halidon Hill in 1333, and is recorded as Sheriff of Lanark in 1334. He was granted the Barony of Sprouston in an undated charter of David II. At about the same time he was also granted the ward of Walter Comyn of Rowallan in the Barony of Hawick (although it is unclear what exactly this means, Comyn held part of the lands of Branxholme since at least the time of Bannockburn). He was granted Branxholme by David II after it was forfeited by John Baliol; this may have been around 1333, when he would still have been quite young. There is a suggestion that he was granted Branxholme (and perhaps Hawick) as early as 1329 (although this is unclear). He supported Andrew Murray (guardian for David II) in his rejection of English peace terms in the late 1330s and became a favourite of David II when he returned from France in 1341. He had custody of Stirling Castle in 1342. In that same year he had a grant from David II of the Barony of Hawick and Branxholme (possibly a regranting), as well as Sprouston and Strathaven in Lanarkshire. This was probably to try to curb the power of Robert the Steward in Clydesdale and William Douglas of Liddesdale (both out of favour with the Crown). He was granted the Earldom of Strathearn in 1343; this had been forfeited by his relative (perhaps uncle) Malise of Strathearn. In 1344 he was one of the cautioners for the followers of Alexander Ramsay, who had been murdered by William Douglas. He witnessed many royal charters in the early 1340s. He was created a Justiciar, and would undoubtedly have become more powerful still had he not been killed at the Battle of Neville's Cross. Robert the Steward would later claim the Earldom of Strathearn for himself. In 1339 he married Joan (or Joanna) of Menteith, daughter of Wallace's betrayer. She was widow of Malise Murray (his own step-grandfather) and of John Campbell, Earl of Atholl. After his death his widow married William, Earl of Sutherland. He may have had an illegitimate son Maurice and also appears to have had a son William. His daughter Joan (or Joanna, who might instead have been his granddaughter, or his wife's daughter with the Earl of Sutherland) married Sir Thomas Murray of Bothwell, and later she (or more likely her daughter of the same name) married Archibald Douglas 'the Grim', passing on the Hawick Barony to the Douglases. Ninian (15th/16th C.) possessor of the lands of Kershope in Ettrick. He and his brother John leased the lands in the mid-1480s, but they were attacked and their property destroyed, with John being killed in about 1485. He and his son John were given the lease of these Crown lands in 1490. In 1494/5 Lawrence Rutherford in Oakwood had remission for stealing sheep from him at Kershope. He was still leasing half of Kershope in 1502. In 1500 Walter Scott of Branxholme was recorded as assignee of him and John of Falahill in recovering money that Philip Turnbull of Whithope owed them for the damage done to their lands. He is probably the Ninian who, along with John (as well as James Ker) had their farms of Fastheuch and Hangingshaw raided sometime before 1502. Also in 1502, Robert Jackson in Wolfcleuchhead had remission for bringing in 'traitors of Leven' to steal from his farm and peel at Kershope. Probably the same Ninian was on the 1509 panel for Adam Hepburn inheriting the lands of Alemoor. Thomas is listed after him, and possibly a relative. Norman N. (d.2017) plumber who was Cornet in 1959. Sir Oswyn (1873–1936) born at Mill Hill, London, he was a son of Sir James A.H. He went into the Civil Service and became Secretary to the Admiralty 1917–36. His wife Lady Mildred wrote a biography of him. Patrick of Falahill (d.c.1492) son of John. He acquired land near Philiphaugh in about 1477. He had a sasine for the lands of 'Pringillisland' and 'Litsterland' in Selkirkshire in 1477. From 1477 he was granted the lease of Lewenshope and Hangingshaw, which had been in the hands of his father. In 1479 he gave his seal to an obligation involving the Kers of Cessford. In 1484 and again in 1488 he and his son John had the lease of Lewenshope and Hangingshaw. Around 1485–90 he was also tenant of Bowhill along with his brother Peter. His children included: John, 'the Outlaw Murray'; Thomas, mentioned as brother of John in 1494/5; and Margaret. Patrick of Falahill (d.1580) son of James of Falahill and grandson of 'the Outlaw Murray'. He held the office of hereditary Sheriff of Selkirkshire. He also held the lands of Philiphaugh, according to a charter of 1528. In 1530 he was served heir to his father James in the customs and duties of Selkirk, as well as the Sheriffship. However, there was a dispute in that year, with John Scott, Vicar of Hawick, producing royal letters breaking the privilege office of Sheriff that he held; Alexander Tait of Pirn was procurator for a counter-claim that the letters did not discharge him from being Sheriff. In 1531 he owed teind sheaves for his lands of Hangingshaw. In 1533/4 in Selkirk he had a bond between William Stewart of Traquair. In 1534 he required William Douglas of Bonjedward to appear at his court. In 1535 he declared that his forebears and tenants had always kept their herds on Selkirk Common. In 1536 the Bailies of Selkirk complained that he had come to the common 'with a multitude of men in violent oppression with swords, staffs and cudgels' and taken away cattle belonging to one of the Bailies; he declared that he had only come to the common with his servants to peaceably pasture his own cattle. In 1536/7 he complained about others encroaching on his 'friend' Thomas, who had farmed at Easter Bowhill for 40 years. He was 'of Hangitschaw' in 1541 when recorded as owner of the lands of Lewenshope and Hangingshaw in Yarrow, as well as 'Hairheid' in Ettrick. In about 1544 there was a 'summons of reduction' against him by the Provost and Bailies of Selkirk (probably regarding Selkirk Common). In 1547/8 he was listed among the supporters of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme in a bond along with the Kerrs. In 1564/5 he was one of the witnessed to the bond between the Kers and the Scotts. In 1569 he was among the lairds who signed a bond to keep peace on the Border. In 1576 there was an agreement with the Burgh of Selkirk restoring him to his lands. He married Margaret, daughter of John, Lord Fleming, secondly married a daughter of Lord Borthwick and thirdly married Elizabeth Ormiston, who was a widow. His eldest son was James, who married Margaret, daughter of William Stewart of Traquair, and whose son Patrick succeeded. His son Malcolm is recorded in 1573 and 2 sons Malcolm and James in 1590. He also had a daughter, Catherine, who married James Somerville of Cambusnethan. Conflicting with the usual genealogy, in 1579 his son and heir Patrick is recorded in a transaction in Selkirk. Patrick of Falahill (d.1601) grandson of Patrick of Falahill. He is probably the Patrick 'of Fawlayhill' who in 1580 witnessed was named in a transaction in Selkirk and witnessed several others. In 1581 he had an arrangement with Robert Scott of Haining over the 'feu maill' of Haining. He may be the Patrick 'ooy and heir' to the deceased Patrick of Falahill who in 1581/2 granted a sasine to Adam Scott of Bonnington. In about 1588 he was appointed as one of the Parliamentary Commissioners for Selkirk and Peebles. In 1590 there was some dispute between him and the Bailies and Burgesses of Selkirk, with a band signed that they would not harm him or his dependants. Additionally he served as caution for Robert Scott of Aikwood not to harm William Douglas, Earl of Angus or his dependants; his 'father-brothers' Malcolm and James were witnesses. He is listed on the 1590 'Roll of the Clans'. He is probably the 'schireff of Forrest' whose brother John was taken prisoner by the English in 1598. In 1599 there was a complaint that he was not performing his duties as Sheriff of Selkirkshire, specifically failing to apprehend a number of men. He married Agnes, daughter of Sir Andrew Murray of Blackbarony, and secondly married Marian, daughter of Sir Lewis Bellendon. His children were: Sir John, who succeeded; Patrick, who held lands in Annandale, and was with Robert Scott, younger of Haining, when he attacked Selkirk Mill in 1608; James, a merchant in Edinburgh; Isabel, who married John Abernethy, Bishop of Caithness; Margaret, who married Ralph Kerr of Primside and Greenhead; Elizabeth, who married Robert Scott of Haining; and Jean, who married John Scott of Tushielaw. Sir Patrick of Lainshaw (16th/17th C.) represented Selkirkshire in Parliament in 1617. His Lairdship was later called Langshaw. It is possible he was the same man as Sir Patrick of Elibank. Sir Patrick of Elibank (d.1649) son of Sir Gideon. He was served as heir to his father in 1621. He was Keeper of Caerlaverock Castle. He was involved in a feud with James Cranston in about 1610. In 1621 he succeeded to his father's lands of Langshaw in Melrose Parish. He was also infefted in lands by the Commendator of Melrose in about 1621. In 1622 he was involved in a 'wadset' with Walter, Earl of Buccleuch, over the lands of Blackgrain in the Lordship of Ettrick. He married no less than 5 times. He was M.P. for Haddington Constabulary 1628–33 and 1640–41. He was created a Baronet of Nova Scotia and then elevated to the peerage as Lord Elibank. He was succeeded in 1650 by his son Patrick, 2nd Lord Elibank. Sir Patrick of Deuchar (1625/6–89) son of James, who was 3rd son of Patrick of Falahill, with his mother being Berthia Maule, of the Panmure family. His brothers were Sir James of Skirling and Sir Robert of Priestfield. He was M.P. for Selkirkshire in 1665, 1667 and 1669–74. He was appointed as a Justice of the Peace for Selkirkshire in 1663 and as a Commissioner of Supply for Selkirkshire in 1685. He may be the Sir Patrick, 'ane of his Majesty's general recivers' who was made a Burgess and Guild Brother of Edinburgh in 1670. He is probably the Patrick who had a dispute with the Burgh of Selkirk over Common land in 1665. He paid the land tax in Selkirkshire in 1678 and is recorded representing Henry Hislop in a discharge in 1684 with the Bailie of Selkirk. He may have married Euphan, daughter of James Baird. Patrick of Cherrytrees (18th C.) eldest son of James of Cherrytrees. He was admitted as an Advocate in 1751 and was Sheriff of Roxburghshire from 1769. He served as Sheriff-Depute of Roxburghshire in 1780 and was on the roll of electors for the county. He was probably succeeded by George of Cherrytrees, who owned the lands in Yetholm Parish in 1788. Richard (b.1818/9) farmer and innkeeper in Newcastleton. In 1861 he was on Douglas Square, farming 40 acres. In the 1860s he was listed as proprietor of the Crown Inn on Douglas Square (perhaps at the same location). His wife was Jane and their children included Mary, Robert and Jane. Sir Robert of Priestfield (d.1672) 2nd son of James of Skirling and grandson of Patrick of Falahill. He was brother of Sir Patrick of Deuchar and Sir James of Skirling. He was Lord Provost of Edinburgh and represented Edinburgh in Parliament. He acquired the lands of Cameron, Priestfield and Melgum in Forfarshire. He also held 2 tenements in Hawick, which were inherited by his son Alexander in 1672; it is not clear where these pieces of land were located. He firstly married Helen, daughter of Alexander Hay of Kenneth, and secondly married Jean, daughter of John Dickson of Hartree. His children included: James, who died young; Alexander, who succeeded him; John (b.1656); Robert; William (1662–1703); and James (again, b.1669). Robert (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1648 he is recorded collecting money 'in a brazen laidel' for the poor suffering as a result of the Plague. He may be the Robert whose children Bessie (b.1646) and Jeane (b.1647) were baptised in Ashkirk. He may also be the Robert 'Marra' who married Bessie Allan in Ashkirk Parish in 1654. Robert (17th C.) resident at Todshawhaugh according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Robert (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. His son Robert was baptised in 1703. Robert (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish recorded at Borthwickbrae in 1718 and 1721. He may be the Robert who married Bessie Learmonth in Roberton in 1714. His children probably included: James (b.1715); William (b.1718); Robert (b.1721); and Margaret (b.1723). Robert (18th C.) servant to Sir Gilbert Elliot of Minto. In 1732 he became a Burgess of Edinburgh in right of the father of his wife (Margaret), tailor John Cooper. Robert (18th C.) married Janet Helen Kyle in Minto Parish in 1744. Robert (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was recorded at Ormiston in 1755. He married Elspeth (or Euphan) Grieve and their children included John (b.1752) and Walter (b.1755). William (b.1756) and August (b.1765), also baptised in Cavers, were probably his children. Robert (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Elizabeth (or 'Betty') Little and their children included: Betty (b.1763); and David (b.1766). Robert (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Mary Young and their son John was baptised in 1789. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish, perhaps related to the earlier Robert in Ormiston. He was recorded at Sunnyside in 1795. Probably the same Robert was farmer at Ormiston Mains, listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as owner of 3 horses. His children included Mary (b.1795) and Walter (b.1798). He may be the Robert who married Betty Pott and whose children, baptised in Cavers Parish, included Robert (b.1805) and Adam (b.1806); the same couple also had a son Richardson (b.1812), who was baptised in Hawick. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton, who lived at Pathead and then Toftsholm. He was probably the smith in Newcastleton, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as owner of 2 horses. He was one of the first feuars to commence building in Newcastleton; it is said by some that he built the first house and received the nickname 'Provost' because of this. He probably first married Margaret Nichol in 1771; she died at Millholm in 1774, aged 31, and is buried at Ettleton. His 2nd wife was Marion Crozier. Their children were: John (b.c.1777), who was a blacksmith; Marion (b.1781), who married mason John Nichol; Robert (1784–1859), who married Nellie Scott; Margaret (1788–1882), who married Robert Mitchellhill, and emigrated to Galt, Ontario; and Jane (b.1790), who probably died young. His first wife may have been Margaret Nichol, who died at Millholm in 1774, aged 31, and is buried at Ettleton. Robert (b.c.1770s) labourer at Hummelknowes according to the 1799 ballot for the Militia in Cavers Parish. He may be the Robert whose children baptised in Cavers included Mary (b.1795) and Walter (b.1798). Robert (b.1780s) father of plumber John (who was father of J.E.D.) and James. He married Alison Erskine Scott. Robert (b.c.1780s) labourer at Todshawhaugh. His name appears on the Militia ballot list for Roberton Parish in 1812; he is absent from the rectified list, suggesting he had moved or become too old. He could be the Robert, son of William and Beatrix Scott, baptised in Roberton in 1792. He could be the Robert, married to Margaret Tait, whose children, baptised in Roberton, included Euphemia (b.1814) and Jane Scott (b.1816). Robert (1784–1859) nail-maker in Newcastleton, listed in Pigot's 1837 directory and Slater's 1852 directory. In 1841 he was at about 47 North Hermitage Street. He was probably son of Robert and Marion Crozier. He married Helen (or 'Nellie') Scott, who died in 1874, aged 83. Their children included: Betty (b.1812); Robert (1813–56); Marion (b.1816); Archibald (1817–44); John (b.1821); James (b.1823); William (b.1824); Thomas (1828–47); and Jean (1831/2–51). They are mostly buried in Ettleton Cemetery. Robert (18th/19th C.) married Margaret Matthison in Cavers in 1812. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Roberton. He married Margaret Tait and their children included Euphemia (b.1814) and Jane Scott (b.1816). Robert (18th/19th C.) baker in Newcastleton. He subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. He is also listed in Pigot's 1825/6 and 1837 directories. He does not appear in the 1841 census. Robert (19th C.) married Betty Chisholme in Wilton in 1828. Robert (b.c.1810) foreman at Weensland Mills. He was living there in 1841, along with Jessie, probably his wife. Robert (19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Agnes Beavers and their children included Robert (b.1833) and Margaret (b.1834). Robert (19th C.) married Janet Dickson in 1834, the marriage being recorded in both Hawick and Cavers Parishes. Robert (19th C.) married Janet Tweedie in Hawick in 1834. Robert (b.1821/2) shepherd at Old Castleton in 1851 and 1861. He is still recorded there in 1868. His wife was Rachel, and their children included Janet, Marion and Jane. Robert 'Robbie' (1831–1901) born in Hawick, son of weaver William and

Helen Biggar, and cousin of Sir James A.H.'s father. He worked in the hosiery trade with William Watson & Sons, then at Currie's on Millbank. He was a founder member and President of the Archæological Society in 1856 (with only his distant cousin Sir James outliving him), major contributor to the Transactions and served as Museum Curator (after his return from Canada). In 1861 he presented two talks on 'Border Divines' and later talks were on topics such as the Carterhaugh Baa, James Hogg (of 'Teribus'), the stocking trade, James Thomson (of 'The Seasons'), the 1809 Common Riding, Rev. Dr. Charters, James Ruickbie, the False Alarm and lighting of the beacons, the 1767 flood, William Knox, Langholm Common Riding, John Leyden, Border superstitions, Bonnie Prince Charlie, Thomas Pringle, the Volunteers, antiquities of Hawick, Dryburgh, Border smugglers, riding fairs, Hawick political movements, Henry Scott Riddell and Nannie Cumming. He also donated many items to the Museum, including 2 stone hammers in 1866, books in 1868, old Edinburgh and London newspapers in 1871 and an 'ancient Scottish copper coin' in 1876. From 1858 he was the Hawick correspondent for the Border Advertiser and also wrote for the Teviotdale Record and the Border Beacon. He was also President of the Temperance Burns Club in Hawick. He was a Councillor in 1868/9, where he was known as a supporter of the allotments, the Working Men's Building Society and the Co-operative Society. He became manager at Wood Brothers hosiery factory in Innerleithen around 1870, leaving Hawick for Innerleithen in 1876 (when he was made an Honorary Member of the Archæological Society. In that town he took part in promoting public lectures and the temperance movement and when he left he was entertained at a dinner when he was given an illuminated address. He then took over Peter Laidlaw's business at Wilton Grove for a few years in the late 1870s, taking a partner in 1879; however the partnership lasted only 3 years. He was a Liberal in politics and a member of the East Bank Kirk. He emigrated to Canada in 1882, living mainly in Galt, where he was engaged in the hosiery business there. While in Canada, he kept up with news from Scotland, contributed to local newspapers and would enthusiastically meet any Borderers he could (including Lord Minto at one point). He returned to Hawick in 1895 and was one of the people present at the excavation of the cairn at Belvedere on the Cavers estate in 1895. Thereafter he devoted his time to literary pursuits, contributing to the local and Border newspapers, as well as the Newcastle Chronicle, 'Journal' and 'People's Friend'. When contributing to the local press he sometimes wrote under the pen-name Romanus' and at other times as 'B.O.B.', giving us 'The Reckoning' for example (despite, or perhaps because of, being a strong advocate for total abstinence!). He wrote several books of local interest, including 'The Gypsies of the Borders' (1875), 'Hawick Songs and Song Writers' (1881, 1889, 1897) and 'Hawick Characters' (1901), both of which ran to several editions (they were originally published in serial form in the local press, with 'Hawick Characters' collecting many articles originally written by others). His 'History of Hawick, from Earliest Times to 1832' (1901) is a treasure-trove of anectodal information; it was followed by 'History of Hawick, from 1832' issued by the publisher in 1902 from notes that he left. In later life he was generally regarded as the most knowledgeable local historian, possessing 'an enormous store of MS. and printed materials relating to old Hawick, he was never at a loss to put his finger on information in relation to any subject'. He was said to be the greatest expert on the False Alarm of 1804, but sadly did not live to see the centenary celebrations. He lived at Allars Crescent in the latter part of his life. In 1853 he married Agnes, daughter of George 'Pie' Oliver, who died in 1901, aged 72; when they maried he was living in Brougham Place. Their children included: William (b.1855), a merchant in Aberdeen; and George Oliver (b.1857), a doctor in Wisconsin. He died after a brief illness, one of the first of his life. A memorial stone was erected in the Wellogate Cemetery by his friends and members of the Archæological Society, containing the motto 'Leal to the Border'. A portrait of him was painted by Frank Wood in 1897, and is now in the Museum. Robert (19th C.) married Mary Ferguson in Hawick in 1842. Robert (19th C.) married Rachel Hislop in Catleton in 1846. Their children included Jane (b.1851i) and Marion (b.1853). Robert (19th C.) married Marion Greig in Wilton Parish in 1847. Robert (19th C.) married Sarah Dagg in Castleton Parish in 1850. Their children included Sibella (b.1850) and James (b.1853). Robert (19th C.) married Mary Telfer in Castleton Parish in 1850. Their son John was baptised in 1851. Robert (19th C.) married Agnes Turnbull in Hobkirk Parish in 1850. Robert (19th C.) son of John. He was a carpenter at Blacklee in Hobkirk Parish. In 1868 he married Margaret Jackson, from Crookholm, Canonbie. Their children were John (chemist and druggist), James (also a carpenter, died age 27) and Margaret (who married Thomas Smith). Robert (19th C.) married Euphemia Bowie in Hawick in 1853. Robert (b.1835) son of John and Isabella Howison. He was a frameworker in Hawick, living at 50 High Street in 1861. He married Elizabeth Hunter, who was from Earlston. His children included James (b.1860), who became a baker in Edinburgh. Robert (b.1856) elder brother of J.E.D. He was a commercial traveller in London and had eight children. Robert (19th/20th C.) resident of Trow Knowes. In 1906 he contributed to the fund for the renovation of Kirkton Kirk. Roger (d.1330) son of Archibald, he is one of the earliest known ancestors of the local Murrays. He was recorded as being 'de Moravia'. In 1321 he was granted the lands of Fala by James, Lord Douglas. The Murrays of Falahill, Philiphaugh and Blackbarony are all descended from him. Roger (15th/16th C.) leased half the lands of Sundhope in the Yarrow valley in the period 1487–99. The other half went to William, who was his brother. The pair appear to have had their farm raided several times, e.g. by Robert Turnbull in Castlehill (near Branxholme), who was charged with stealing 15 scrore sheep from Sundhope. He leased half of Windydoors in 1502 as well as half of Sundhope with Thomas (who was surely another relative). Possibly the same Roger was 'in old age, deprived of strength' whose land had been 'despoiled by thieves' who in 1532/3 sold his Selkirk tenement and rigs to his younger son James. Sarah (1744–1811) of Kensington, who wrote a travel guide 'A companion, and useful guide to the beauties of Scotland ...' published in 1799. She visited Hawick in 1785, her short account including the following: 'Some young lads passing through the churchyard at Hawick whilst I was in it, with dogs and some strange looking things on their backs, I inquired what they were going to do with them, but their language to me was as Arabic. On my shaking my head as a token of not understanding them, they began screaming in the highest note of their voices, taking me, I suppose, for a deaf woman: and at last we separated, laughing at our inability of understanding each other'. Sir Thomas of Bothwell (d.1361) son of Sir Andrew. The identity of his mother seems to be unknown. He succeeded to his father's estates after the death of his elder brother John. In 1351 he was a hostage in England, in place of David II. He returned to Scotland in 1352 and was knighted by the following year. He was involved in negotiations for the release of David, and was involved with the Treaty of Berwick in 1357. He appears to have returned as a prisoner to England in 1358, and although he may have returned to Scotland again, he was back a prisoner in London in 1359. He married Joan (or Joanna) Moray, daughter of Sir Maurice of Strathearn, who had been Baron of Hawick. He was granted the Barony (along with that of Sprouston) in a 1358 charter of David II. However, this may have been a re-granting, since it seems likely he gained the Barony through marriage to the daughter of the previous Baron. He was described in 1358 as 'panitario nostro Scocie' (i.e. pantler of Scotland). He probably died of the plague in London. Although it is often stated that his widow later married Archibald, Earl of Douglas, it seems more likely that Douglas married his daughter (and heiress), who was also called Joan. Through her the Barony of Hawick passed to the Douglases. Thomas (16th C.) recorded 'in Newhall' in 1531/2 when he was part of an inquest to rule on a land arrangement in Selkirk. He was probably tenant at Newhall on the Ale Water. He is probably the Thomas, son of William of Newhall recorded in 1498. Thomas of Bowhill (d.bef. 1539) recorded in 1536/7 when Patrick of Philiphaugh complained on his behalf about others farming at Easter Bowhill. It was stated that he had occupied those lands for 40 years. He is also recorded in 1539 in the Selkirk Protocol Books when his widow Christian Murray sold her part of North Bowhill to Robert Ker, Burgess of Edinburgh. His son and heir had a dispute over the lands of South Bowhill. He was probably related to James of Bowhill, who died at Flodden and whose daughter Isobel gave the southern half of Bowhill to Michael Scott of Aikwood (probably her uncle) around 1529. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Ewes Parish. In 1761 he married Margaret Riddell, who was from Hawick. Their children included: Thomas (b.1762); Walter (b.1762); Gideon (b.1765); John (b.1765); George (b.1767); and Margaret (b.1771). Thomas (1754–1834) son of David and Elizabeth. He was farmer at Whisgills in Castleton Parish, perhaps taking over from his brother John. He was recorded on the 1792–97 Horse Tax Rolls. He was also taxed for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797. He was still farmer there in the 1830s. He married Janet Inglis, who was from Millholm, with her maternal grandparents being Brydons from Ettrick; she died in 1852, aged 84. They had many children, including 7 daughters who grew to adulthood and all married: Jean (b.1783), married Rev. John Law of the Newcastleton Burgher Kirk; Agnes (b.1784), who married Walter Armstrong, 'the auld merchant' in Newcastleton; Elizabeth (b.1788), who died young; David (1791/2–1815), who was very tall; Elizabeth (again, 1794–1845), who married Peter Oliver; James (b.1792), who also farmed at Whisgills; Mary (b.1804), who married Robert Elliot in Hermitage; Thomas (b.1796); Julie (b.c.1799); John (b.1803), who died young; and John (again, b.1806), who also died young. One of his daughters agreed to marriage after dreaming about her dress being snagged by her husband-to-be as he was angling. Margaret (1799/1800–61), who married shepherd John Scott, may also have been his daughter. The family are buried in Ettleton Cemetery (and the dates on the headstone do not all match the birth years from the parish records). Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of Borthwickbrae. He subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. Thomas (b.1794/5) labourer in Roberton Parish. In 1841 and 1851 he was at Roberton Glebefoot, described in 1851 as a 'Road Contractor'. His wife was Margaret and their children included Beatrix, Jessie, Walter, William, Robert and Thomas. He was probably the son of William baptised in Roberton in 1794. Thomas (d.1842) labourer at Upperraw and Whiteknowe. He was listed as male head of his family in 1835–41. Thomas, LL.D. (1792–1872) of Edinburgh, was made an Honorary Burgess in 1836 after delivering a series of lectures in the town on 'the Science of Political Economy'. He wrote several books on varied subjects. Thomas (1811–73) father of Sir James A.H. Born in Denholm and baptised at East Bank Kirk, he had a clothiers business in Hawick. His father was James (descended from the Murrays of Spittal Tower), and his mother Christina Winthrope (whose father was a 'writer' in Hawick). He became a journeyman tailor, travelling the north of England and witnessing the opening of the Liverpool and Manchester Railway in 1829. He eventually returned in 1835 and settled in Denholm, since Hawick had too many tailors at the time. However, he moved into Hawick in 1858, his house and business being at 6 Bourtree Place. He was recorded as a master tailor in Denholm in 1841 and 1851 and was on Bourtree Place in 1861, along with his wife and 4 children. He was an Elder in Denholm Congregational Church, involved in the Total Abstinence Society and for a while was a member of the old Hawick Town Council. In 1835 he married Mary (1803–88), 6th child of Hawick linen manufacturer Charles Scott. They had 5 children, all born in Denholm: James (1837–1915), lexicographer extraordinaire; Charles, who died young; Alexander Davidson (b.1840), newspaper editor; Charles Oliver (b.1840), engraver; and Margaret Scott (b.1844), who married Alfred Marshall, and later lived with her mother at 10 Wellogate Place. Thomas (19th C.) married Mary Moffat in Hawick in 1848. Thomas (1827–58) son of James, who farmed at Whisgills. He was tenant farmer at Burnmouth. Thomas (19th C.) resident of the High Street. In 1877 he donated to the Museum a collection of birds' eggs. Thomas (19th C.) resident of Kirndean in Castleton Parish in 1868. Walter (17th C.) resident of Dryden in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll among 'ye poor'. Probably the same Walter is recorded in 1691 having a daughter Margaret baptised, with no mother's name given. The witnesses were John and Andrew Riddell. Walter (17th C.) resident at Stobicote according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Walter (1693/4–1719) buried at Borthwick Waas. His gravestone is adjacent to that of James and others associated with Teindside. Walter (18th C.) farmer who was replaced by Abraham Armstrong as tenant of the Duke of Buccleuch in about 1796. This was probably at Shankend farm. Walter (18th/19th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was recorded at Borthwick Mains in 1792 and 1795 and at Greenbank in 1798. He married Margaret Laidlaw in 1791 and their children included: James (b.1793); Margaret (b.1795); and Thomas (b.1798). Walter (b.c.1795) stockingmaker, giving his name, for a time, to Murray Place, although he only owned property in the area from 1814 for less than two years. He inherited 66 High Street (and the area behind 66 and 68, which became Murray Place) from a relative William Turnbull, tailor, in 1814, and sold it to Robert Leyden in 1816. His wife was Elizabeth and their children included Margaret. Walter (b.c.1800) mason on the Kirk Wynd in 1841. His wife was Euphemia, and they also has a daughter called Euphemia. Walter (19th C.) married Hannah Hardie in Southdean in 1836. Walter (19th C.) Church Officer of Hawick Free Kirk 1874–87. William (15th C.) leased half the lands of Sundhope in the Yarrow valley from the Crown in the period 1487–99. His son John was also mentioned in 1492. His brother Roger leased the other half of Sundhope. In 1494/5 he had 30 oxen and cows, a horse and goods stolen by David Turnbull, son of the Laird of Whithope. There were still Murrays at Sundhope in the late-17th century. William of Newhall (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1498 at the Justice-aire in Peebles. He had remission for bringing in John Douglas, a 'traitor from England' about 30 years earlier, with John, Earl of Morton as his surety. He was also fined for the non-appearance of his sone Alexander, John, Thomas and William. William of Romanno (d.c.1560) son of William of Shillinglaw. He was listed among the Borders men who followed the Homes in an attack on the Earl of Arran, for which they had remission in 1526. His brother Alexander was also listed. He married Joneta, heiress of John Romanno of that Ilk. His children included: William, who succeeded; John; James; Christian, who married William Cockburn of Henderland; and Marion, who married Thomas Dudingstoun of Southouse. William (16th C.) recorded in Sundhope in 1581 when he witnessed a transaction in Selkirk. William (d.c.1633) acted as Chamberlain to the Scotts of Buccleuch for part of the rents in Branxholme and Wilton in the period 1631–33. In the period 1633–37 his wife Isobel Wilson performed the duty in his place. William (17th C.) servitor to Francis, Earl of Buccleuch, recorded in 1646 when he witnessed a document relating to lands in Edinburgh. He may be the same as William of 'Langhermeistoun' who was made a Burgess and Guild Brother of Glasgow (gratis) in 1643, along with Earl Francis and several other Scotts. William (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Pott and their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1643. William (17th C.) recorded as 'in Templehall' when he witnessed a sasine relating to Harwood lands in 1664. Col. William of Bowhill (17th/18th C.) younger son of John of Bowhill, with his mother being Anne, daughter of Sir Archibald Douglas of Cavers. He purchased the lands of Bowhill in 1690 and his older brother John later became Lord Bowhill. He married Agnes (b.1677) daughter of Hawick Town Clerk Walter Gledstains. In 1722 he witnessed a baptism in Hawick for the later Town Clerk Walter Gledstains, his brother-in-law. William (17th/18th C.) wright in Hawick. In 1716 he witnessed a baptism for weaver Robert Wight. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at Burnhead in 1724. He married Janet Scott and their children included: John (b.1717); Jean (b.1720); Robert (b.1722); and Walter (b.1724). The witnesses in 1724 were John and Walter Scott (who may have been related to his wife). It is possible that William (b.1705), George (b.1707), James (b.1710), Helen (b.1712) and William (b.1714) were also his children. William (18th C.) resident of the Dykes in Cavers Parish in 1724 and 1731. His children, baptised in Cavers, included William (b.1724), Margaret (b.1728) and Elizabeth (b.1731). It is probable that Walter (b.1726), whose baptism is recorded in both Cavers and Bedrule, was also his child. William (18th C.) married Janet Dalgleish in Roberton Parish in 1743. Their children probably included Agne (b.1744), James (b.1746) and Andrew (b.1751), William (b.1740s) younger son of John, farmer at Spittal-on-Rule. He had 2 sons: Veitch, who was a builder, working on Ancrum Bridge; and John. William (18th C.) married Henrietta Tait in Hawick Parish in 1754. She may be the daughter of shoemaker Willaim Tait baptised in Hawick in 1730. William (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Helen Elliot and their son William was baptised in 1764. William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His children included William (b.1764) and Henrietta (b.1769). William (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Fowler and their children included Margaret (b.1771), Katherine (b.1774), James (b.1776), John (b.1779) and John (again, b.1781). William (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. His children included Helen (b.1781) and Betty (b.1782). William (18th C.) married Elizabeth (or 'Betty') Douglas in Kirkton Parish in 1767. He could also be the William whose marriage is recorded in Castleton Parish in 1766, although with no wife's name given. Their children, baptised in Castleton, included William and Elizabeth (b.1768). William (18th C.) married Elizabeth Richardson in Bedrule Parish in 1781. His children may have included Isabel (b.1792), Peggy (b.1794) and Violet (b.1802). It is posible that Robert (b.1788) and Helen (b.1790), baptised in Hobkirk Parish, could also have been his children. William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His son James was baptised in 1786. William (18th C.) married Betty Nichol in Hawick Parish in 1793. William 'Wullie on the Wundi Sole' (d.bef. 1805) resident of Hawick. He married Margaret Todd in Hawick in 1794. His nickname 'Willie on the windowsole' is recorded when his child died in 1787 and when his wife died in 1805. It seems likely that what is meant is the modern 'window-sill', but it is still unclear why he might have had this nickname. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He is recorded at Scaurnook in 1786, 1788 and 1794. He may be the William who married Beatrix Scott in Roberton in 1786. His children, baptised in Roberton, included: James (b.1786); Walter (b.1788); Beatrix (b.1790); Robert (b.1792); and twins Thomas and William (b.1794). William (1771/2–1833) Schoolmaster in Canonbie, who died in Langholm. He married Helen Byers, who died in 1866, aged 70. Their sons Andrew, John (b.1815/6, later teacher at Caverton Mill, near Kelso) and William (b.1828/9) were teachers in Hawick. Their other children were Fanny (who died aged 95), Thomas (who also married a Helen Byers), James (b.1831/2) and Janet (b.1833/4). William (b.c.1780) labourer in Denholm accoring to the 1801 ballot for the Militia. He was listed right after tailor James, who may therefore have been related; he and James could be the sons of James baptised in Cavers in 1778 and 1773, respectively. William (18th/19th C.) married Margaret (or 'Peggy') Oliver in Cavers Parish in 1800. Their children Charles (b.1806) and George (b.1809) were baptised in East Bank Kirk, while Thomas (b.1801), Anne (b.1803) and Charles (b.1807) were baptised in Kirkton Parish. William (b.1787/8) from Brownmuir in Selkirkshire, he was teacher at a school in Lilliesleaf. He ran his own school (separate from the Parochial School), which was probably on the Loan in the village. His was probably the 'adventure school' described in the New Statistical Account (1840) as teaching 'English reading, writing, and arithmetic, the latter only tolerably well, the former two in the most vulgar manner'. It went on to say that the 'teacher has no education superior to a common labourer, and refuses to apply for further education'; if not strictly accurate, this suggests strong disagreement with the minister, who probably wrote the account. He was recorded as teacher at Lilliesleaf in Pigot's 1837 directory and Slater's 1852 directory. In 1841 and 1851 he was living with his brothers Alexander and Walter. In 1861 he was on Main Street with his brother Alexander and his family. William (1789–1872) 3rd son of Andrew of Spittal Tower. He was a stockingmaker in Hawick and later a merchant. In 1841 he was living on Miller's Close off the High Street, in 1851 was on Brougham Place and in 1861 he was a grocer and china merchant at 75 High Street. He was Church Officer at the East Bank Kirk for 32 years. He is probably the William who was appointed to collect the customs that were due from Hawick merchants to the Duke of Buccleuch. In 1822 he married Helen (or 'Nelly') Biggar in 1822, the marriage recorded in both East Bank Kirk and Wilton Parish; she was daughter of Robert Biggar, and died in 1871, aged 77. Their children were: Andrew (1823–82), baptised in East Bank Kirk, who married Isabella Brown; Jane (b.1825), who married John Marchbank; Elizabeth (b.1827), who married Andrew Smith of Dalkeith; Agnes (b.1829); Robert (1831–1901), local historian and writer; Isabella (b.1833), who married James Lambert and kept a wash-house; Helen (b.1835), who married Andrew Lambert; and William (b.1838), who married Margaret Anderson and later Mary Ann Hope. William (b.1792/3) from Traquair, he was a farmer at Haughhead in Ashkirk Parish. In 1851 he was farmer there of 8 acres and in 1861 he was at 'Nook Haugh' farming 10 acres. He was still recorded there in 1868. His wife was Philia Oliver and their children included Mary and Philia. His sister-in-law Janet Oliver (from Ashkirk) was living with the family in 1861. William (1794–1875) son of William and Beatrix Scott, he was born in Roberton Parish. In 1841 he was at Scaurnook with his mother. In 1851 and 1861 he was a retired shepherd living with his daughter and son-in-law at Scaurnook. His first wife (according to the gravestone) may have been Helen Grieve, who died in 1822, aged 20. He had sons William (d.1819), who died in infancy, and James (d.1841), who died in an accident at the age of 5. His daughter Helen married carrier John Elliot. He died at Scaurend and was buried in Roberton Cemetery. William (18th/19th C.) married Esther Scott in Bedrule Parish in 1818. William (18th/19th C.) resident of the Hawick area who married Janet Scott. Their son Andrew (b.1819) was baptised in East Bank Kirk. William (b.1800/1) son of James, who was a labourer in Newcastleton. In 1851 he was living with his parents at about 10 South Liddell Street and described as 'Formerly Surgeon'. William (19th C.) married Margaret Turnbull in Lilliesleaf Parish in 1823. Their son John was baptised in Minto in 1824. William (b.1802/3) from Castleton, he was a joiner in Teviothead. In 1841 he was at 'Moozieknowe' in Cavers Parish, at Mossy Knowe in 1851, as a master joiner, employing 2 men, and still there in 1861. He married Elizabeth (or 'Betty) Young. Their children included: John (b.1829); Elizabeth (or 'Betty', b.1831); Thomas (1835–68), who died in an accident in Manchester; Douglas (b.1839); and James (b.1843). He is buried at Teviothead. William (c.1805–bef. 1851) woollen spinner in Hawick. He was living on the Loan in 1841 and his widow was there in 1851. He married Agnes Stevenson in Kirkton in 1822 and their children included George (b.1827), Thomas (b.c.1829), Adam (b.c.1835), William (b.c.1837), Agnes (b.c.1839) and Robert (b.1841). William (b.1812/3) shepherd at Blackcleugh in Teviothead Parish. He is recorded there in 1851 with his wife Janet and children Thomas, Andrew, George, William, Margaret, Walter and Elizabeth. In 1861 he was shepherd at Sundhope in Castleton Parish and had an additional daughter, Mary. Dr. William (1813/4–65) surgeon in Newcastleton, brother of Margaret, Jane and Agnes. He was listed as a surgeon on Pigot's 1837 directory and Slater's 1852 directory. In 1851 he was 'MRCS Edin. Genl. Practr. (Surgeon)' visiting Dinlabyre. In 1861 he was at about 48 South Hermitage Street, and listed as a surgeon, but blind. He collected antiquities from the district, having the last hand-cuffs used in the village, as well as the supposed key from Mangerton Tower and a brass mortar-gun from Hermitage. He presented Liddesdale fossils and other items to the Museum in 1856, an extensive geological collection and coins in 1857, further coins in 1860 and a 'craggan from the Isle of Lewis' in 1863. He was made the Archæological Society's first honorary member in 1857. He was listed as a surgeon in Newcastleton in the 1850s when he was on the Borders Union Railway Committee for Liddesdale; when it was decided that the Liddesdale route would be taken for the railway, he rode his gig to the head of the Liddel with flags flying, to announce the good news to the district. In 1843 he married Agnes, daughter of Thomas Scott, a Newcastleton innkeeper. Their children included John (b.1844), Helen (b.1846), Isabel (b.1848), Elizabeth Janet (b.1851) and Mary Agnes Thom (b.1854). Isabel and Mary emigrated to Elmira, Illinois. He is buried at Etleton Cemetery. William (b.1814/15) tailor on the High Street. He was listed in Pigot's 1837 directory. In 1841 he was living at about 6 High Street with his wife Margaret and daughter, also Margaret. In 1851 he was a widower in a lodging house on Walter's Wynd. He married Margaret Scott in Hawick Parish in 1834 and their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1835. William (19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Helen Scott and their son William was baptised in 1835. William (19th C.) married Janet Chisholme in Hawick Parish in 1835. Their children included: Thomas (b.1837); Andrew (b.1838); George (b.1840); William (b.1842); Margaret (b.1844); Walter (b.1847); Elizabeth (b.1849); and Mary (b.1852), baptised in Cavers. William (19th C.) married Elizabeth Martin in Hawick Parish in 1836. William (19th C.) resident of Hawick. In 1841 he was a woollen stocking dresser living on O'Connell Street and in 1851 was on Wilton Place. He married Isabel Scott in Hawick Parish in 1839. Their children, baptised in Wilton, included Walter (b.1840), Anne (b.1842), William (b.1843), Andrew (b.1845) and James (b.1854); Walter's baptism was also recorded in Hawick Parish. William (19th C.) married Mary Gotterson in Hawick Parish in 1841. William (19th C.) ploughman at Kirkton. Sometime before 1875 he turned up a circular stone with a square hole in the middle, which was probably a grindstone of some sort. William (b.1806/7) stockingmaker in Wilton Parish. In 1851 he was living at No. 4 Front Row, Wilton Dean and in 1861 also at Wilton Dean. He married Agnes Armstrong in Hawick Parish in 1842. Their children, baptised in Wilton, included David (b.1843). William (19th C.) married Anne Scott in 1843, the marriage recorded in both Hawick and Castleton Parishes. William (19th C.) married Margaret Grieve in 1843, the marriage recorded in both Wilton and Roberton Parishes. William (b.1821/2) woollen framework knitter in Hawick. He was living at about 69 High Street in 1851. He married Mary Hislop in 1844, the marriage recorded in both Hawick and Wilton Parishes. Their children, baptised in Hawick Free Kirk, included: David (b.1844); Jane (b.1846); and Margaret Scott (b.1849). William (19th C.) married Joan Little in Hawick Parish in 1845. William (b.1822/3) from Langholm, he was a woollen handloom weaver in Hawick. In 1851 he was living on Backdamgate and in 1861 at Weensland. He married Mary Pow in 1847, the marriage recorded in both Hawick and Wilton Parishes. Their children included Richard (b.1847/8), William (b.1849/50) and John (b.1854/5). William (19th C.) married Mary Kelley in Hawick Parish in 1852. William (19th C.) married Margaret Lockie in 1854, the marriage recorded in both Wilton and Melrose Parishes. William (1828/9–1906) Hawick teacher for over 50 years. Son of William, teacher in Canonbie, he was born at Broomieknowe near there. He came to Hawick in 1850, to help run the school started by his brother Andrew at the top of Baker Street, and continued by his other brother John. The school had moved to the old East Bank Kirk, then to the foot of the close at 9 High Street and then to 8 Kirkgate (i.e. St. Mary's Place). He was living at 7 Kirkgate in 1861. He was hired as a teacher at St. Mary's School in 1864 and became the first Headmaster at Trinity in 1876. He was also on the Town Council for 5 years and served as Session Clerk for St. Mary's. When he retired in 1903 he built Carradoyne in Fenwick Park, where he died. He married Janet Murray, eldest sister of J.P. John (and probably his second cousin). Their children included: William, who worked at the Commercial Bank in Hawick, moved to England and retired to Langholm; John, an architect in Liverpool; David (who was assistant to Dr. James Brydon in the Sandbed; and Elizabeth Carruthers, who married Rev. Stewart Burns. William (b.1837/8) from Newcastleton, he was a tin smith. In 1861 he was living on Drumlanrig Place. He married Jane Dodd Hobkirk in Hawick in 1858 and their children included Margaret (b.1859/60). William (1838/9–1916) youngest son of William and brother of poet and historian Robert. He married Margaret, daughter of Alexander Anderson and she died in 1877, aged 33. Their children were William (printer in Costa Rica), Isabella (who married August Louis Roye from Detroit), Andrew (a chemist in Costa Rica who married twice) and 3 children who died young. He later remarried to Mary Ann Hope. He was said to be a striking personality (in contrast to his brother Robert), with a tall stature and a long flowing beard in later years. In 1908 he was elected librarian of the St. Andrew's Society of Detroit. Soon after he returned to Hawick and became an active member of the Archæological Society, being joint secretary in 1910 and 1911 and writing some articles. William (b.1855) eldest son of local historian Robert. He became a merchant in Aberdeen. He married Georgina Scott and later Catherine Hosie. His children were Margaret, Agnes Oliver, Jane Stewart, Helen Georgina, Janet Brown and Robert. William (19th/20th C.) gardener at Borthwickshiels. His grandmother was a sister of Walter Scott ('Wat o the Knowe'). He was a Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. William (d.1915) son of William and Margaret Anderson, he was descended from the Spittal Tower Murrays and was nephew of local historian Robert. He became a printer in Costa Rica and married Agnes MacNair. His younger brother Andrew was a chemist in Costa Rica and married his sister-in-law Margaret MacNair (in earliest times interchangeable with 'Moray', and became 'Moravia', 'Moravie', etc. when written in Latin; other spellings include 'Murra' and 'Murraye' and 'Murry').

Murray Bros (mu-ri-bru-thurz) n. D. & R. Murray, knitwear warehouse and retail business. It was established in 1960, based in Tower Mill, expanding with shops in Haddington, Kelso and Penrith. It later moved to the former Orrock Church. In 2004 the business switched to trading solely in china and giftware and closed in 2007, following the retirement of Ronnie Murray.

Murray Place (mu-ri-plis) n. lost street name, being the area behind 66 and 68 High Street, named after Walter Murray, stockingmaker who was there for only about 2 years from 1814. The new houses there were built in the early 1860s and for a few years referred to as Albert Place, but Murray Place by the 1868/9 Valuation roll. The name was dropped altogether in 1968 as it became simply the lower part of O'Connell Street.

Murray Place (mu-ri-plis) n. street in Denholm, between Douglas Drive and the Ashloaning, where 10 new houses were built in the 1950s. It is a dead-end for cars, but pedestrians can walk through the small play park at the end.

the Murrays (thu-mu-riz) n. Scottish family, probably all originating from an ancient line connected with the area of Moray or Moravia in the north-east of Scotland. The most important Lairdship locally was that of the Murrays of Falahill and Philiphaugh, descended from Archibald, who signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296. In the 16th century these Murrays were involved in many feuds, as well as in the struggles against the English. There were long Murrays in Rulewater and in Hawick there were several important families (most of which are directly related), which gave us lexicographer Sir James A.H. Murray, local historian Robert Murray, songwriter J.E.D. Murray and others.

Murray-Stavert (mu-ri-stā-vur') n. Archibald Stavert (19th/20th C.) lived at Saughtree and later Stanegarthside. He served as a Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire.

Murray's Temperance Hotel (mu-riz-tem-pu-rins-hō-tel) n. teetotal establishment at 15 High Street in the late 19th century, run by Robert Murray.

murt (mur') n., arch. the skin of a sheep that has died naturally – 'Ane murt lamb skin [is stated to be hardly worth two shillings Scots]' [BR1700], 'Murt, A lamb-skin before castration-time, Teviotd.' [JoJ] (also 'mort').

murther (mu-thur) n., arch., poet. murder – '. . . but when he heard ane crying murther he straight way went up to make riddance and to allay tumult' [PR1716], v. to murder – He vanquished the Picts, and Conquer'd their Crown, In revenge of his Fathers death, which basely they murther'd' [CWS], 'Thaye sley the widaw an' the fremet, an' nurther the faetherliss' [HSR] (older version of the word murder).

Muselee (mewz-, -māz-, mūz-lee) n. farm across the Borthwick river from Deanburnhaugh, below Broadlee. It was in Hawick Parish until 1689/90 when Roberton was formed. The Muselee Burn joins the Borthwick here, and the 276 m Muselee Hill is above. A narrow lane between 2 dykes to the left of the house is part of an old drove road, with cattle passing from the west through here and over to Teviothead and on to English markets. Alexander Scott 'in Mouslaw', recorded in 1501, could have been tenant here. Adam Murray is recorded there in 1502. 'Archibald Ellott in Muselit, undir the Laird of Cheisholme' is recorded in 1586/7 and he was 'of Mouslie' in 1598/9. The lands were owned by a branch of the Riddells from at least 1618 and passed to the niece of Charles Riddell of Muselee in 1849 when he died unmarried. In 1627 it was valued along with Woodburn as paying '120 lb., vicarage 20 lb'. Archibald Elliot of Muselie, 'a common a notorious thief and fugitive' was tried in 1628. There were 4 'communicants' recorded there in 1650, namely Thomas Laidlaw, Malie Wilson, Robert Laidlaw and James Laidlaw. John Riddell paid the land tax on £100 in Hawick Parish in 1663 and 1678 (probably for Muselee, which was in Hawick Parish at that time). George Heatley was there in at least 1732–34 and Andrew Main in 1741. The lands were valued at £491 1s 2d in the 1740s. By 1788 (and still continued in 1811) the owner was Charles Riddell and the value was unchanged. John Scott was living there in 1792 and Thomas Grieve is recorded as farmer there in 1797. About the same time John Laidlaw was shepherd there. William Aitkin was farmer there in 1841. Robert Brown was farmer in the 1860s Capt. George Hutton Riddell was the owner in about 1874. (also formerly spelled 'Mooslie', 'Muislie', 'Muselie', 'Muslie', 'Musla' and variants; it is 'muselee' in 1502, 'Muselit' in 1586/7, 'Mouslie' in 1598/9, 'Mouslie' in 1616, 'Mewslie' in 1628, 'Museley' in 1653, 'Muislie' in 1663, 'Muslie' in 1682, 'Moosilie' in 1690, 'Muislie' in 1678 and 1695, 'Musely' in 1719, 'Mewslie' in 1761, 'Muisly' in 1732, 'Musely' in the 1740s, 'Mooselee' in 1797 and 'Muslie' in 1841; it is marked on a 1650 parish map as 'Mooselie', on Blaeu's 1654 map as 'Meussly' and is absent from Stobie's 1770 map and Ainslie's 1821 map; the name may be from Old English 'mos-leah' meaning 'fodder lea').

Muselee Burn (mewz-lee-burn) n. stream that runs into the Borthwick Water roughly from the south-east, joining near Muselee. It forms part of the probable boundary line of the Catrail, with a section of the linear earthwork ending near the stream, about 300 m north of Broadlee Loch. It then runs in a south-easterly direction to connect with the headwaters of the Teindside Burn.

Muselee Hill (mewz-lee-hil) n. hill to the south-east of Muselee farm in the Borthwick valley, reaching a height of 276 m. A linear earthwork runs for about 500 m from Muselee Burn to the east, across the southern slopes of this hill, ending in the headwaters of the Wood Burn. It is presumably an old agricultural boundary.

Muselee Drive (mewz-lee-drīv) n. short street in Lilliesleaf, running to the north at the west side of the village, usually written 'Muselie Drive'.

Muselee Sike (mewz-lee-sīk) n. small stream on the south side of the Borthwick valley, between Muselee and Woodburn. It is distinct from Muselee Burn, which lies to the west.

the Museum (thu-mew-zee-um) n. Hawick's museum is located in Wilton Lodge, it houses a permanent display of knitwear and hosiery history, as well as other local artefacts, paintings, natural history and achæology. Many more items of local interest are in storage than can be displayed at one time. In 1857 the Archæological Society rented a room from clothier Andrew Waugh to house its growing collection and the following year they moved to a larger room about Robert Milligan's. The Society's Museum first opened to the public in premises at the east end of the High Street in 1858. It can be seen upstairs in the property of Milligan's (site of the Liberal Club) in an 1858 photo. A steady stream of artefacts were donated to the Society over its first few decades, and were on public display initially only for a few hours on Saturday evenings. In 1865 thieves stole the coin collection and other valuable items, and although most of this was recovered, it led to a dramatic increase in donations. There was a catalogue published for the 1866 exhibition that followed. The collection moved to the old Grammar School building and then the Buccleuch Memorial, where at least one photograph exists showing the collection packed into the available space. In 1906 it was offered to the Town Council, under the condition that Wilton Lodge be converted into use as a Museum. This followed in 1910, when it was opened by the Duke of Buccleuch (who was given an ornate golden key to mark the occasion, and was the first person to sign the visitor's book). J.P. Alison drew up the original plans for converting the house into a museum. Extensive renovations were carried out in 1959 to showcase the local exhibits, and in 1975 the Scott Gallery extension was added. In 1984 the Museum became the headquarters for the Roxburgh District Museums Service. In early 2007 a new lift was added and other renovations carried out. In 2017 the trust 'Live Borders' took over the running of the Museum.

Musgrave (muz-grāv) n. James (18th/19th C.) weaver at 'Bellshaws' (probably Belses) in Castleton Parish. In 1797 he was listed among men on the ballot to serve in the Militia and in 1799 was at 'Bellshaws', previously 'Bellshiels', among those whose names had not been drawn, but were no longer living in the area. Sir John (c.1450–c.1515) Englishman who was important on the Marches around 1500. In 1502 Adam Turnbull 'in Hornishole, now in Chalmerlane-Newtoune' had a remission for several crimes, including 'the treasonable inbringing' of him to the 'Burning of Selkirk and Hereschip, and Stouthreif of goods therein'. He was probably son of Sir Thomas and younger brother of Sir Richard. He was knighted after the Battle of Stoke Field. He was Sheriff of Cumberland from 1489 and Constable of Bewcastle (along with his son Thomas) from 1493. He married Joan, daughter of John Crackenthorpe and secondly Margaret (or Dorothy), sister of John Dudley. He may also be the same Sir John whose wife was an inspiration for some of William Dunbar's poetry. Sir John of Bewcstle (16th C.) son of Sir William and an unknown mistress. He was also known as 'Jack a Musgrave' and was leader of English raiding parties, serving as Captain of Bewcastle. In 1541 he complained that his houses had been burned by Liddesdale men. In 1542 he and 40 men 'brent a towne in Tevedall caulyd Rowlle', which was presumably on the Rule Water, perhaps Town-o-Rule. He took part in the battle of Solway Moss at the end of 1542. He led a force that intercepted a raiding party of Liddesdale men near Hexham in 1542/3. However, he was accused of ransoming Scottish prisoners. He married Jane Chamber and Agnes Thirlwall and his children included Adam, Ingram, Thomas, Richard and Lancelot. Thomas (16th/17th C.) son of Sir Simon, who was Captain of the English garrison at Bewcastle. He was younger brother of Christopher. In 1583 he sent a letter to Queen Elizabeth's Chancellor in which he lists the chief Elliots and Armstrongs of Liddesdale. He acted as Captain of Bewcastle once his father was too old. In 1596 he attempted a retaliatory raid on the Armstrongs of Hollows, but was ambushed on the way home by John Armstrong of Langholm, Will Armstrong of Kinmont and others. They delivered him to Scott of Branxholme and an English letter said that the plan was to take him to Hawick; eventually he was returned after paying ransom. These events could have been inspiration for part of the ballad 'Jamie Telfer o' the Fair Dodheid'. In 1602 he fought a duel with Lancelot Carleton, after he had been accused of offering to give up Bewcastle to the King of Scotland. He married Ursula, daughter of Sir Richard Carnaby, and secondly married a Scottish woman. There were complaints from English Commissioners in 1606 that 'he matched one of his base daughters with that bloodie and theevish clanne of the Armstrongs of Whithaughe in Liddesdale' and that the sons of Sandy's Ringan were known to frequent his house.

Mushet (mu-shi') n. Walter (15th/16th C.) recorded as being 'of Holpaslat' in 1499 when he was on the inquest for Richard Rutherford of that Ilk being served heir to his grandfather. Several of the other witnesses were local men, and so it is possible that this was 'Howpasley'. Rev. William (d.1678) minister of Slains from 1635, he was translated to Hassendean Parish in 1664, presumably becoming the first Episcoplain minister. However, this was during the time of dispute about dissolving the parish, parts of the fabric having already been removed to Roberton. There was a disagreement with the Presbytery over the allocation of a glebe for him, resolved in his favour in 1668. He remained at Hassendean until his death. Several letters from him to Sir Gideon Scott of Highchester are in the National Archives. He married Christian, daughter of William Hay, minister of Crimond. He had a large family and no personal estate, so his son William (apparently lame in his right hand) was given a bursary by the Presbytery in 1670 and a younger son also given it in 1674. This younger son, or another altogether was Gilbert, who became minister of Cumbernauld. He additionally had at least one daughter, Margaret. There was also a Henry Mushet, minister at Bowden about 20 years earlier who may

musicer (mew-zi-kur) n., arch. a musician.

muslin kail (muz-lin-kāl) n., arch. soup made without any of the richer ingredients – 'Musleen kail = kail boiled without meat (and possible without carrots). Gen. Scottish muslin kail = broth made simply of water, barley and greens' [ECS].

musni (mus-ni) contr. mustn't – 'Hei mustni hev been in the fettle for writin' [IWL] (cf. the older mauni and the interrogative version mussen; also written 'mustni').

musni've (mus-ni-uv, -niv) contr. mustn't've, must not have.

Musselburgh (mu-sul-bu-ru) n. town in the Lothians, about 6 miles east of Edinburgh. Created a burgh of barony in the early 14th century, it was originally called Eskmouth and nicknamed 'the Honest Toun', supposedly after the Regent, Lord Randolph, took shelter there and no one gave away his place of concealment to the English. It is well known to Hawick folk for having a Common Riding, held in late July. The principals are the Honest Lad and Lass, and are elected by open vote of the 'Honest Toun's Association'. The festival really began in 1936, building on the ancient riding of the marches ceremony and partly inspired by Hawick Common Riding. The main song is 'Come all ye Honest Lads and Lasses'. Population (1991) 20,630 – 'For Musselburgh was a Burgh, When Edinburgh was nane, And Musselburgh will be a Burgh, When Edinburgh's gane'.

mussen (mu-sin) contr. must not (not common; used interrogatively; cf. musni).

Musshit see Mushet

mustart (mus-tar') n., poet. mustard – 'The kingdoom o' heæven is like til ane grain o' mustart-seed, whilk ane man tuik an' sawet in his field' [HSR], 'Gif ye hae faith as ane grain o' mustart-seed, ye sall say untill this mountain' [HSR].

mustni see musni

mutch (much) n., arch. a linen or muslin cap, often starched, once worn by older women – 'But even she is outdone by the next on the list, who was found to be owner of twenty-eight mutches!' [HAST1871], 'And couthie, kindly, auld grand dames Had on their brawest mutches . . . ' [TCh], '. . . after the two women had torn each other's mutch . . . ' [JTu] (from Mediæval Dutch).

Mutch (much) n. James Whillans (19th/20th C.) boot and shoemaker, who was a tenant on the Weens estate from 1884. He was born at Ancrum House Lodge, his father being gardener to Sir William Scott, and his mother Christina Whillans. His wife ran a small grocer's shop. In 1877 he married Agnes Jessie (b.1857), 3rd daughter of Andrew Davidson, from Burnfoot near Hawick. They had a son James (b.1885). James W. (b.1885) son of James Whillans and Agnes Jessie Davidson. He was born at Weens Cottages and educated at Hobkirk School. He served his apprenticeship with Pesco's and was there for his entire working life, becoming Director 1900–58.

mutchin (mu-chin) n., arch. liquid measure equivalent to a quarter Scots pint – 'The treater ordered in half-a-mutchin, which disappeared before either he or the half of the company had got a tasting' [WNK] (a variant of mutchkin).

mutchkin (much-kin) n., arch. Scots unit of liquid measure equal to 4 gills or 2 chopins or quarter of a Scots pint, equivalent to about ¾ imperial pints or 0.9 U.S. pints or 0.42 litres – '. . . Mary Sanderson, her half-pecke ane mutchkin short' [BR1676], 'Sent to the steiple head a mutchkin of brandie . . . 0 0 7' [BR1747], 'They quickly for a mutchkin cry, As they've nae time for stopping' [JoHa], 'I'll e'en take a seat, and a mutchkin I'll be – Hurrah for the maister! quo Donald M'Gee' [JoHa], '. . . Till gills intae half mutchkins turned, Half mutchkins intae bottles . . . ' [VW], 'A mutchkin gless and some bits o' delf Ye'd grue to set on the kitchen shelf' [WL] (also mutchin; from Dutch via Middle English).

muth (muth) adj., arch. close, humid (said of the weather) – 'But it was the reverse from chilly. What Geordie termed a 'muth nicht' ' [BM1905].

Mutter-Howie (mu-tur-how-ee) n. Mutter, Howie & Co., coal business of the late 19th and early 20th centuries, based in Edinburgh. The local representative ran a haulage business out of the Station, carrying virtually anything around Hawick using Clydesdale horses and a wagon. Their yard was off what would become Mansfield Gardens. The word was also used to refer to horses of a sort fit for pulling coal wagons – '. . . The Mutter-Howie horses There's lots o' other names' [AY], '. . . Then the Mutter Howie man Takes eet tae the station' [AY], 'And ca'd them for a dirty clairt Frae Muter Howey's Horse and cairt . . . ' [DH].

the Mutual Assurance Company (thu-mew-choo-ul-aw-shoo-rins-kum-pi-nee) n. the South of Scotland Mutual Insurance Co. Ltd., also known as the South of Scotland Woollen Manufacturers Mutual Insurance Co. Ltd., was set up by local manufacturers in the early 20th century. Peter Scott was an early Director. The Museum has ledgers and other papers from the period 1938–1952.

Mutual Improvement Association (mew-choo-ul-im-proov-min'-aw-sō-see-ā-shin) n. former society in rural areas where members exchanged information on learned subjects. The first such society was formed in Aberdeenshire in 1846 and the movement became widespread during the second half of the 19th century, but eventually came to an end in 1962. There was a Hawick branch from at least 1858, with activity peaking probably in the 1870s – 'It might be a surprise, but doubtless, also, a satisfaction, to the members of the Mutual Improvement Society . . . ' [RJR] (also 'Mutual Instruction Society').

muzz (muz) v., arch. to bemuse, dumbfound, stupify – 'The sun . . . thraetent an efter-heat . . . fit tae muzz folk' [ECS].

muzzle-thrush (mu-zul-thrush) n., arch. the mistle-thrush, Turdus viscivorus.

My Borderland (mI-bōr-dur-lawnd) n. song with words by David Johnston and music by Albert V. Budge, probably written in 1951 and published the following year. The song has a wide range, and is suitbale for the female voice. Its first public performance was by Ina Wintrope.

Mycelaw Green (mIs-la-green) n. older name for Myreslaw Green – '. . . And ride to Mycelaw Green sae crousely' [AB].

my gock (mI-gok) interj., arch. exclamation of surprise (also by gock).

mype (mīp) v., arch. to speak a great deal, to be very diligent – 'A mypin' bodie' [JoJ].

myre (mīr) n. a marsh, bog (note the pronunciation).

Myredykes (mīr-dīks) n. former farm in Castleton Parish on the road to Kielder, at the head of the Liddel. It is 'Myredykis' among lands in upper Liddesdale that belonged to Jedburgh Abbey, as listed in the early 17th century. It was owned by the Scotts of Buccleuch by 1623. A description of Roxburghshire in 1649 states that the source of the Liddel is 'Meirburn', which is presumably the same place. It was surveyed for the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1718, when it covered 306 acres and was bounded by Peel, the Border, Hudshouse and Thorlieshope; the farmhouse appears to be shown on the east bank of the Peel Burn rather than the west. It was listed among the farms of the Duke of Buccleuch being let by public roup in Hawick in 1755. John Murray was a servant there in 1799 and Andrew Murray and Robert Boyd in 1801. William Elliot farmed there in the late 18th century. Thomas Elliot, Archibald Scott and their families lived there in 1851 and Thomas Murray's family in 1861. In the late 19th century John Elliot in Flatt carried on the lease after the death of his uncle John Scott-Elliot. The property is now under forest. There was once a railway bridge over the road there. A sword found here, said to be from the Highlanders, was presented to the Museum in 1858. A flanged axe-head found there is in the National Museum of Antiquities (also written 'Meerdykes' and 'Muirdykes', it is 'Meirdykis' in 1623, 'Myerdykes' in 1718 and 'Myerdikes' in 1755).

Myre-quarter (mIr-kwar-tur) n. former name for lands in Belses. In 1580/1 they were wadset by 'Dand' Davidson to Walter Turnbull of Bewlie for an annual rent of 5 bolls of grain; they were at that time a '5 poundland'. They were included among lands served to Sir Thomas Ker of Cavers Carre in 1678, after the death of his son Andrew. In 1874 it was part of the estate of Belses owned by Sir George Douglas of Springwood Park (it is 'Myre quarter' in 1580/1 and 'Myre Quarter' in 1678).

Myres (mīrz) n. former name for lands in Lillieleaf. In 1528 John Scott 'in Myrris or Vest Manes in Lillescleff' received payment for 3 pieces of land, summing to £40. In 1531 John Scott 'of Myrris' assigned to his cousin Walter Scott, tutor of Haining, these lands, which he rented from the Archbishop of Glasgow. This was confirmed in 1530/1, where John's lands were described as 'that fourth part of the lands of Myris with pertinents lying on the west of the place of Myris', Walter to pay John £14. In 1595/6 Walter Riddell of that Ilk held the lands of 'West-Maynis alias Dunstane or Myris', suggesting this was the same place as West Mains and Dunstane.

Myreslaw Court (mīrz-lu-kōr') n. sheltered housing complex built at Myreslaw Green in 1973, adjacent to St. Margaret's Home. It is on the site of the former 'Green Kirk' (later used concerts, church events and as a warehouse) and also the house where the Cornet traditionally stopped for a stirrup cup on the way down from the Mair. It was the first purpose-built sheltered housing unit in Scotland, and used as a model by other local authorities (also written as one word).

Myreslawgreen see Myreslaw Green

Myreslaw Green (mīrz-lu-green, mīs-lu-green) n. part of the town Common in the West End. In 1740 it was used to pasture animals employed on building the Teviot Brig, and the Council ordered that no turf should be cut from there. It was first feued in part in 1766, for the Anti-Burgher meeting house and manse, and not immedately affected by the Division of 1777. Originally a pasture with only one building (the Green Kirk built in 1767), it was developed over the subsequent few decades. The area once included what is now Drumlanrig Place to Myreslawgreen and formed the western boundary of the Burgh. The 'common vennel at Myreslawgreen' referred to in the 1537 charter probably ran from Morrison Place to Coble Pool Lane (now on the High School grounds). When this area is reached by the riders coming back from the Moor on the Friday of the Common Riding, they are served refreshments, or 'a guid cauld calker', a tradition possibly began by 'Rodgie o the Green'. This was continued for about 70 years in the 20th century by the Misses McCallum. 'Myreslaw Green' appeared as a street name from at least 1824, and is now mainly used to the single street, which was originally part of Green Wynd. But it is also used more generally to mean that broad area of the West End surrounding the former green, including many streets named after leading Liberal reformers of Victorian times. The street used to contain the West-end branch of the Co-op, as well as Slattery's and Harry Scott's grocer's shops (the word itself is a mixture of Old English and Norse meaning 'green swamp' or 'marshy grassland'; there are many earlier spellings; it is marked 'Myres Law Green' on Wood's 1824 map).

Myreslaw Hoose (mīrz-lu-hoos) n. name used for the residence of William Morrison in the latter part of the 19th century, later becoming part of Morrison Place.

mysel (mI-sel) pron. myself – 'But here I may throw off the mask, An' at mysel', A few important questions ask 'Bout heav'n an' hell' [JR], 'And will be till I dee mysel', And meet wi' her again' [WE], '... I fain could fa in love wi her mysel' [WL] (cf. the more common masel).

Mysie Maxwell (mI-see-mawks-wel) n. fictional character in 'The Gutterbludes', described as 'Reputed daughter of 'Mowdie' and bosom friend of Nannie' [Kaishie].

Mysie Sike (mI-see-sīk) n. small stream in Liddesdale, to the east of Hillhouse and Blinkbonny farms, running northwards to join Tweeden Burn.

My Teviot Valley (mI-teev-yi'-vaw-lee) n. song by Ian Landles, written in 2004. It was first peformed on top of the Mote by Landles when leading a walking tour. Ian Seeley added piano accompaniment in 2005.

my trowlies (mI-trow-leez) interj., arch. truly, indeed – 'My trulys! but we've got a yerkin' – Wi' dead anes, hills are white as sarkin' ' [JoHa], 'And I shall state ere I begin, That if ye 'bout it hump and hae, My trulies lass ye soon will fin' A wilfu' man maun ha'e his way' [HSR] (also written 'my trulys').

'n (n) contr. can – 'Aw 'n gaun insteed', 'ee 'n dae eet yersel' (an enclitic, pronounced without the c consonant and essentially no vowel sound either; this may be peculiarly local; it is unclear why this contraction is used at some times and not others).

na (na, naw, nu) interj., adv. nay, no – 'Ye man ans'er either ay or na' [JAHM], 'Na! deed no, Peggy, I canna gie ony thing the day' [RW], 'Sic a thocht! Na' never fear ye ... ' [RH], 'Na, says hei, na nocht aboot him that Aw mind o' ' [JEDM], 'Na! No! No! A wunna! A wull not! ... (= No! No! No! I won't! I will not! ...)' [ECS], not – 'I care na' for the gems they boast, Though true may be their tale' [JoHa], 'We envy na' the rich, wha spend their nichts at balls sae gay' [JJ], ' 'I hope ye mae na rue yer rede', is a Border maxim ... Napier (nā-pur, -pee-ur) n. Andrew (18th C.) mason of Hawick Parish. In 1747 he witnessed a baptism in Hawick for George Richardson. He married Margaret Graham and they had a son John baptised in Hawick in 1739. His other children included: John (b.1744); and Jean (b.1745). He may be the son of John baptised in Hawick in 1710. He could be the Andrew whose sister Janet died in Hawick in 1778. Basil (1877–1900) eldest son of Mark and grandson of Lord Napier. He was Lieutenant with the 34th Battalion, Imperial Yeomanry. He died during the South African War and is listed on the Hawick Boer War Memorial. Francis (1705–73) 6th Lord Napier of Merchiston and 3rd Baronet of Thirlestane. He was only son of Sir William Scott of Thirlestane and Elizabeth Brisbane, Mistress of Napier. He changed his name from Scott to Napier when he inherited his mother's titles. In 1724 he was made a Burgess and Guild Brother of Glasgow (gratis). He married Henrietta, daughter of Charles Hope, Earl of Hopetoun and secondly Henrietta Maria, daughter of George Johnston of Dublin. His children were: William, who succeeded; Charles of Merchiston Hall; Lieut.-Col. Francis of the Marines; John, who died unmarried; Mark; George; James, who died young; Patrick, Naval Captain; James John; Stewart; Henrietta, who married William, 12th Lord Ross; Hester, who married Alexander Johnson of Carnsalloch; and Mary, who also died young. Francis (1758–1823) of Thirlestane, 8th Baron Napier, 8th Lord Merchiston, often referred to as 'Lord Francis Napier'. He was only son of William and grandson of Francis Scott. His family were descendants of the Scotts of Thirlestane (in Ettrick), who were in turn cadets of the Scotts of Buccleuch. He was an army officer who surrendered to Gen. Gates at Saratoga in 1777. Returning to Britain he continued in the Army, laid the foundation stone for Edinburgh University's 'Old College' in 1789, was confirmed to the House of Lords in 1790, became Lord-Lieutenant of Selkirkshire and was also Lord High Commissioner of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland. In 1784 he married Maria Margaret, eldest daughter of Lieut.-Gen. Sir John Clavering. Thirlestane House (in the Ettrick valley) being too small, around 1790 he moved his home to Langlands, renaming the house Wilton Lodge. He paid tax on 5 female servants at Wilton Lodge in 1789 and 1790 and 3 in 1791, as well as 5 male servants in 1790, 3 in 1791–94 and 4 in 1797. He was taxed for owning a carriage at Wilton Lodge in the period 1789–95 and horses in the period 1789–94.

He subscribed to John Learmont's book of poetry in 1791. He had some local involvement in politics, being the head of the group promoting war against France in those years, and chairing an influential anti-reform meeting in Hawick in 1792. In 1793 he headed the pro-war side of a public meeting held in Hawick to discuss the possibility of war with France. In 1797 he was recorded as owner of 2 work horses and 3 carriage or saddle horses at Wilton Lodge on the Horse Tax Rolls; he also paid tax on 3 non-working dogs in the same year. In about 1800 he was among the local men who contributed money (£50) to support the war against France. He was noted locally for his dress style. He still owned Thirlestane and other lands in Ettrick and Yarrow Parishes in 1802. He sold Wilton Lodge again in 1805; however, in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls he is still listed as owner of the 'Half Barony of Wilton, called Langlands', excluding most of Rougheugh, Silverbuthall, Howlands and Dovemount, but including Calaburn. There is a record of his 'Roup Money at Hawick' in 1805 in the Walter Mason Collection as well as several surviving letters from him in the period 1815–23. He was involved with setting up the Pastoral Society of Selkirkshire. He had 9 children, 6 of whom were born at Wilton Lodge. His children included: Maria Margaret (b.1785), who married Rev. Orfeur William Kilvington of Hatfield; William John (b.1786), who succeeded; Charlotte (b.1788), who died in infancy; Anne (b.1789), born at Wilton Lodge, who married Sir Thomas Gibson-Carmichael; Sophia (1791–1829), who was born at Wilton Lodge and died unmarried; Francis (b.1793), who must have died young; Charles (b.1794), whose descendants took the surname Napier-Clavering; Rev. Henry Alfred (b.1796); and Caroline (b.1798), who married Nevile Reid. The witnesses in 1791 were Adam Ogilvie of Hartwoodmyres, Thomas Elliot Ogilvie of Chesters, Gilbert Chsholme of Stirches and Dr. James Wilson, surgeon in Hawick. In 1794 he paid Wilton Kirk for a private baptism – 'That valuable Captain Napier Benevolence plainly displays; And all for the good of our country, Did institute Thirlston Fair' [BY], 'There is Lord Napier o' the Lodge, And Gawin in the Hall, And Mr. Charters o' Wilton Manse, Preaches lectures to us all' [DJG]. Francis (1819–98) of Thirlestane, son of William John, 9th Lord Napier, he was 10th Lord Napier and Baronet of Nova Scotia. He worked in the diplomatic service, being Ambassador at St. Petersbug and Berlin. He served as Governor of Madras and Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the United State of America. He was created Baron of Ettrick in 1872. In 1845 he married Anne Jane Charlotte Manners Lockwood and was succeeded by their son William. He also had sons John (who was a major in the army) and Mark Francis (who was M.P. for Roxburghshire). There is a memorial to him in Ettrick Church. John (17th/18th C.) mason in Hawick. His name is written 'Neper' in 1705 and 1706 when he witnessed baptisms (sometimes for fellow masons). He is recorded as a merchant in 1706 when he was one of the Burgesses directed to pay the glovers for providing Common-Riding coats for the Burgh Officers, piper and drummer. In 1708 he witnessed a baptism for fellow mason Peter Mitchell and also for 'younger' carrier William Aitken. He is 'Naper' when he witnessed baptisms for William Aitken and for weaver James Beattie younger in 1710, for shoemaker Robert Elliot in 1712 and for weaver Andrew Jardine in 1713. He also witnessed baptisms in Hawick in 1716 for cooper John Turnbull and for Henry Paterson. He was recorded as 'merchant' in his child's baptismal record of 1718. He married Mary Graham in Hawick in 1705 and their children included Anna (b.1706), Walter (b.1707), Janet (b.1708), Andrew (b.1710), Isobell (b.1712), Agnes (b.1713), Margaret (b.1716), Agnes (again, b.1718), Katherine (b.1720), James (b.1723) and John (b.1729). The witnesses in 1710 were writer John Watson and wright John Pringle, in 1712 were flesher Thomas Briggs and mason John Turnbull, in 1716 were Andrew Turnbull and mason Peter Mitchell, in 1718 were gardener Walter Turnbull and Beadle John Scott and in 1720 were masons John Turnbull and Andrew Turnbull. Mark Francis (1852–1919) 3rd son of Sir Francis, 10th Lord Baron Napier of Merchiston and 1st Baron of Ettrick (and Viceroy of India), and great-grandson of the Lord Napier who stayed at Wilton Lodge. He stood unsuccessfully against Unionist Arthur Ralph Douglas Elliot in the 1886 Roxburghshire election, but defeated him to become Liberal M.P. in 1892. He was defeated in the 1895 election by the Conservative Earl of Dalkeith. In 1878 he married Emily Jones. Their children were: Basil, killed in action in South Africa; Claude Inverness; and Philip Henry. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. His children included: Marion (b.1694); and John (b.1696). The witnesses in 1696 were William and John Cavers. William (1730–75) 7th Baron Napier, eldest son of Francis. He was a Liet.-Col. in the Army and Deputy-Adjutant General of the forces in Scotland. He married Mainie, daughter of Charles, 8th Lord Cathcart and was succeeded by his only son Francis, who lived for a while at Wilton Lodge. William John (1786–1834) eldest son of Francis, he was 9th Baron Napier. Although born in Ireland, he spent some of his youth at Wilton Lodge, where several of his siblings were born. He served in the Royal Navy and was present at the Battle of Trafalgar. Back in Scotland, he undertook extensive planting at Thirlestane, was a member of Selkirkshire Farmers' Club and published 'A Practical Treatise on Store Farming'. He was superintendent of British interests in China for the East India Company. Before embarking on the journey out east, he took his eldest son on a trip back to Wilton Lodge, to remember the scenes of his youth. He was the first British representative to suggest the forcible seizure of Hong Kong. He died in Macao, only a few months after arriving in China. In 1816 he married Elizabeth, daughter of Scottish adventurer Andrew Cochrane-Johnstone. He was succeeded by his eldest son, Francis. A memorial to him is now in the Hong Kong Museum of History (also formerly spelled 'Naper', 'Neper' and 'Naprie').

Neidpath Castle (need-pawth-kaw-sul) n. massive castle just west of Peebles, above the Tweed, dating from the 14th century, enlarged in 1654, and now open to the public. It was home of the Hays, Earls of Tweeddale, and to 'the Old Q' (William Douglas, 4th Duke of Queensberry) in the 18th century.

Neil (neel) n. Adam (b.c.1780) son of Alexander, who was miller at Ashkirk Mill. He was recorded at Ashkirk Mill on the 1801 ballot for the Militia. He was a farmer at Synton Mill in 1841 and a miller at Synton Mill in 1851, employing 7 people and farming over 100 acres. In 1841 and 1851 he was unmarried and living with his sister Margaret; Esther and 3 children were living in the adjacent house in 1841 and also surely related. He was probably brother of Anne (or Agnes), who married John Oliver and whose daughter Janet Oliver married Francis Naper Scott. Alexander (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Marion Deans and their son Alan was baptised in 1676. Alexander (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Scott and their son James was baptised in 1773. Alexander (18th C.) listed as owner of a 'House and Yard' in Minto Parish in 1779. It was owned by Lord Minto in 1811 and valued at £1 16s 7d. Alexander (18th/19th C.) farmer at Ashkirk Mill, recorded as owner of 2 horses on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He is probably the Alexander who married Isabel Scott in Ashkirk in 1776. His son Adam (b.c.1780) was miller at Synton Mill, and he also had a daughter Margaret (b.c.1780). He may also have been father of Ann (or Agnes) who in 1800 married John Oliver, who was a labourer at Ashkirk Mill. Alexander (b.1809/10) from Midlothian, he was a grocer and spirit dealer at about 28 High Street in 1851. He was also listed in Slater's 1852 directory. His wife Annabella was from Bamburgh. James (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish who witnessed baptisms in 1691 for Francis Miller and for Robert Paterson. James (17th/18th C.) elder in Castleton Kirk, recorded in 1698. James (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1778 he married Janet Scott and their children included: James (b.1779); and Alexander (b.1791). The witnesses in 1779 were the 'Associate Congregation'. James (18th/19th C.) proprietor of a lodging house on the Mill Port. She was unmarried, but had a daughter, Margaret. John (17th C.) worker at a mill in Ashkirk. In about 1640 he and his master Robert Redford were accused of 'keeping the mill going in tyme of preaching'. Redford denied knowing about the mill running on the Sabbath, 'but that it was his man, John Neill'. He appeared before the Session and said that 'it was Marion Dickson, his mistress, that causit him put on ye mill'. His wife Marion 'confest that she causit John Neill, her man, to grind out the corn in the hopper' and both were ordered to confess their faults in the Kirk and to pay into the poor fund. John (17th C.) married Marion Henderson in Ashkirk Parish in 1646. His children, with no mother's name given, may have included Margaret (b.1645) and William (b.1647). John (18th/19th C.) tailor at Doveshaugh in Hobkirk Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book in 1799. Perhaps the same John was tailor at 'Hedgers Hall' in Minto Parish on the 1801 Militia ballot. He may be the John who married Margaret Wilson and whose children, baptised in Minto, included Alexander (b.1807), Helen (b.1809), William (b.1812), John (b.1814), Robert (b.1817), Jeannie Kerr (b.1819), Thomas (b.1821), Ann (b.1823) and James (b.1827). Margaret 'Peggy' (b.1805/6) from Berwickshire or perhaps Stichill, she married James, who was listed as an army persioner in 1841. They ran a lodging-house on Mill Port. In 1841 she was living with her husband, along with children Helen and James and 22 lodgers. In 1851 she was a widow, living with her sons James and Robert and 12 lodgers. In 1861 she was a 'Licensed Lodging Ho. Keeper' at '3rd Ho. Mill Port', living with her son Robert and 30 lodgers. In 1844 local doctor Walter Graham gave evidence about the poor laws, listing this lodging house as an example of how disease spread unchecked in the Town, stating that 'In Neil's lodging-house, opposite the Tower inn, there is a case of fever, and two of measles, at the present time'. She is recorded in the poem 'Hawick Immortals' – 'Here's Soapy Ballantyne and Wull Slush, Here's Todd Lowrie and Peggy Neill; Davie A'-things and auld Kush-Mush, And Jenny A'-things is here as weel' [HI]. Robert (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. His children included Bessie (b.1631), Margaret (b.1636), Thomas (b.1638), Robert (b.1640) and James (b.1647). He may be the Robert who married Isobel Riddell in 1634. Robert (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Margaret Easton in 1701 and their children included Marion (b.1705) and Margaret (b.1709). Robert (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He was at Highchesters in 1710. He married Janet Turnbull in 1709 and their children included: Margaret (b.1710); James (b.1713); Robert (18th/19th C.) hedger in Minto according to the Lieutenancy Book in 1799. William (17th C.) tenant at Kirkhouses in Ashkirk Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694 (also sometimes 'Neel', 'Neill' and 'Niel').

Neillings (nee-lingz) n. John (b.1811/2) from Athelstaneford in East Lothian, he was a shoemaker in Hawick. In 1851 he was living on 'Bower Tree Place'. His wife was Margaret and their children included: Francis (b.1841/2), probably the Francis of Edinburgh who donated 12 copper coins to the Museum in 1872; and Agnes (b.1845/6), who had a child to an unnamed father in Hawick in 1865.

Neilson (neel-sin) n. Margaret 'Peggy' (18th C.) kitchen maid at Burnhead in 1785, when she was working for William Scott. Robert (18th C.) gardener at Borthwickbrae in 1778, when he was working for John Elliot (also 'Nielson').

[JT], '... A neive-fu saut to tang its gow' [WL], 'His wee bit grubby nieves were clenched, Twa baw-bees did they hold' [WFC] (also spelled 'nieve' and 'neeve'; cf. neffi).

neivefi (neev-fi) n., arch. a fistful, clenched handful – 'The most common was termed a 'neive-fu' ' – as much meal as could be grasped by one hand' [V&M], 'A stane frae auld Glengarry hoose, A neivefu' yirth frae some grit sloose ... ' [JoHa], 'Ther sall be ane neiffu' o' coorn in the yird ... ' [HSR], 'A licorice stick, a neivefu' monkey nits, A bag o' locust – tidbits rare' [WL] (also written 'neivefu' ' and 'neiffu' '; note that the following word 'of' is often omitted).

Nellie (ne-lee) n. pet form of the name Nancy.

Nellie Herkness (ne-lee-hrrk-nis, -herk-nis) n. the niece in John Ballantyne's song 'Pawkie Paiterson'. She was the daughter of Nellie, who was sister of Robert 'Pawkie' Paterson – 'And as for Nellie Harkness, She ryses in the morn' [JSB].

nell-kneid (nel-nīd) pp., adj., arch. knock-kneed (noted by E.C. Smith; cf. nuil-kneid).

Nell o the Bar (nel-ō-thu-bawr) n. nickname of Nellie Oliver.

Nelson (nel-sin) n. Robert (d.1912) shoemaker in Hawick. He had a shop at the top of O'Connell Street. He married Margaret Johnston. Their children included son John and daughters Isabella ('Tibbie') and Marion Bell ('May'), who both emigrated to Australia. William (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Scott and their son William was baptised in 1782. William (b.1782) carpet-maker in Hawick according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia.

Nelson's Plantin (nel-sinz-plawn-tin) n. plantation that runs along the south-west side of the Minto Hills.

nemine contradicente (ne-mi-nee-kon-tra-di-sen-tee) adv., arch. unanimously, without dissent – 'The said day the hail persons, ... concerned in ... the webster's loft, have unanimouslie, with mutual consent and assent one of another, nemine contradicente ... ' [BR1710], 'The said day the Baillies and Councill convened did nemine contradicente ordain and appoint the Bellhouse upon the kirk steeple to be taken down and rebuilt ... ' [BR1723] (common in formal records of the 17th and 18th centuries).

nemit (ne-mi') pp., arch. named, supplied a name – '... the quhilk precept had na officiar nemmit in to it nor indorsing as the copy of that ilk purports' [SPB1533] (also namit).

nerr see ner

nerrest-hand (ne-rist-hawnd) adj., arch. nearest to, closest to – 'Tam was nerrest hand 'im' [GW], '... till there was nochts left o the nerrest-hand loch bit paddihs, fishes stankin for braith, an glet' [ECS].

nerr nicker (ner-ni-kur) n., arch. a narrow escape, close shave (noted by E.C. Smith).

nervish (ner-vish, -veesh) adj., arch. nervous, excitable – '... I'll hae anither drink, now did the red devil come sae close? Ugh, I'm gettin' nervish. Maxwell, hae a drink' [JEDM] (cf. nairvous).

Ness (nes) n. Rev. David (1863–1935) born in East Wemyss, he graduated M.A. from St. Andrews University in 1885 and was licensed to preach by Kirkcaldy Presbytery in 1889. He was licentiate at Saughtree Kirk 1889–92 and then assisted at Thornwood, Bothwell. He was ordained as assistant and successor at Whiteinch in 1894 and moved to Savoch in 1928.

Nessie (ne-see) n. aquatic monster supposed to live in Loch Ness, although there has never been convincing evidence. However, its cousin Wullie really does live in Wulliestruther.

the Nest (thu-nest) n. former name for Gledsnest adjacent to Colterscleuch.

neth (neth) prep., poet. beneath, below – '. . . But oot yont neth the mune's licht At the coortin' thrang . . . ' [WL].

nether (ne-thur) adj. under, lower, particularly lower-situated of 2 houses or farms (now particularly in place names, e.g. Nethrraw, Nether Bonchester, Netherhall, Nether Kirk and Nether Tofts).

Nether Ancrum (ne-thur-awng-krum) n. former name for what is now the village of Ancrum, with 'Over Ancrum' being across the river. The lands were held by 'David Ancrum' and a set of feuars in 1643 and valued at £944. It was later owned by Ogilvie of Chesters. In 1788 it was split between 8 separate owners, as well as 'Fewars of Nether Ancrum'. There is a suggestion that there was a priory of 'red friars' (i.e. Trinitarians) here, but there is no evidence for this (it is 'Nether Ankcrum' in 1548/9; it is marked 'N: Ancrum' on Pont's c.1590 manuscript map, 'Nether Ancrum' on Gordon's c.1650 maps and 'N. Ancrumm' on Blaeu's 1654 map).

Nether Bonchester (ne-thur-bon-ches-tur) n. former farm, just below where the modern Bonchester farm is located, over the bridge at the base of Bonchester Hill. John Turnbull (called 'Case') was tenant there in 1494/5. In 1569 it was among the lands purchased from Jedburgh Abbey by Adam French, and is listed 'with the woddis of the samin'. In 1587 it was again 'with woods', along with Over Bonchester, among the lands of the Lordship of Jedburgh. Mark Turnbull was there in 1590/1 and still tenant in 1606. In 1617 Mark's widow Margaret Rutherford stated that his family 'held the rowme of Nethir Bonchester past memory of man, as kindlie tennentis and possessouris to the Abbotis of Jedburgh'. It was purchased by Walter Scott in 1632 from Alexander Kirkton (Provost of Jedburgh) and John Moscrop (Burgess of Jedburgh). It was then owned by a branch of the Scotts until sold by his great-grandson in the mid-1700s. It was valued at £180 Scots in 1643, 1663 and 1678 (although there seem to be errors in some records). Thomas Scott, brother of Walter, became the 2nd Scott Laird in 1653. Thomas was succeeded by his son Walter Scott in 1680, and he was recorded as Laird there on the 1694 Hearth Tax records. In 1707 it was owned by William Scott and valued at £180. In 1733 Walter Scott was succeeded by his son, also Walter. He was in turn succeeded by his son Thomas who sold the farm to William Oliver of Weens and Dinlabyre in 1779. The lands were valued at £180 in the 1740s. Wright John Rule was there in 1788. In 1788 it was still valued at £180. The farm was sold along with Weens to Robert Nutter Campbell in 1793, and in 1796 he sold them to Adm. Thomas Pringle. Francis Renwick was tenant there in 1797. By 1811 the farm (or part of it) was owned by Thomas Cleghorn and valued at £31 4s 8d. The farm had a nursery garden that once supplied trees to other properties in the area. The old house was in a hollow below the present farmhouse's garden. It was a simple 2-storey building, taken down in the 1780s and part of it still standing around the 1830s. The doors and parts of the flooring were re-used on a cottage at Bridge-end (marked on Stobie's 1770 map; it is 'Nethir Bonechestir' in 1494/5, 'nethir Bunchester' in 1569, 'Neddir Bonechest' in 1581, 'Neddir Bonchester' in 1590/1, 'Nether Binchester' in 1603, 'Neither bondchester' in 1678, 'netherboonchaster' in 1694, 'Nether Boonchester' in 1761, 'Nether-Boonster' in 1765, 'Netherboonchester' in 1788 and 'Nether Boonster' in 1797).

Nether Burnmooth (ne-thur-burn-mooth) n. Nether Burnmouth, lands in the south part of Castleton Parish, distinct from Upper Burnmouth. Adam Armstrong was there farmer in 1797. In 1799 Archibald Armstrong was there, while John Beattie, John Douglas and Alexander Smith were wrights there (it is marked on Stobie's 1770 map).

Netherby (ne-thur-bee) n. village just over the Border into Cumbria, off the A7. Held by the Grahams in rieving days, Netherby Hall was built around an older tower in the mid-18th century – 'So boldly he enter'd the Netherby Hall, Among bride's-men, and kinsmen, and brothers and all' [SWS].

Nethercroft (ne-thur-kroft) n. another name for Northcroft, recorded in the 19th century. There may have been some confusion with Netherhall.

Nether Croft (ne-thur-kroft) n. former name for lands in the upper Teviot valley somewhere near Dryden, Teindside, etc. The name is recorded as 'Neather Croft' in 1686 among the lands of the Duchess of Buccleuch then occupied by Robert Grieve in Commonside.

Nether Dykeraw (ne-thur-dīk-raw) n. former farmstead near Dykeraw in Southdean Parish. James, Michael, John, Adam and Robert Oliver were tenants there in 1541, paying 25s yearly. David Oliver was there in 1694. James Hargrave was shepherd there in 1797 (it is 'Nethir Dykraw' in 1541 and 'nether dykra' in 1694).

Nether Ewes (ne-thur-yooz) n. former name for the lower part of Ewesdale, served by the Nether Kirk.

Netherfields (ne-thur-feeldz) n. former name for part of the lands of Foulshiels in Liddesdale. The farm was tenanted for the Scotts of Buccleuch by John Scott in Newark, but there was a dispute with the local Elliots. A gang of about 100, including the Elliots of Redheugh, Hartsgarth, etc., searched for the farm workers there, but not finding them there, took away '12 dargs of hay woone for winter fodder'.

Nether Foulwud (ne-thur-fowl-wud) n. Nether Foulwood, former name for lands in Liddesdale, situated near where Foulwood Sike meets the Liddel Water, between Mangerton and D'mainholm. Over Foulwood was further up the stream. It is recorded as 'Foulwod inferior' on the rental roll of c.1376 and valued at 10 shillings. In a rental roll of 1541 'Nethir Foulwod' was leased to Simon Armstrong (probably of Tinnisburn) and still valued at 10 shillings. It became the modern farm of Gillside.

Nether Galalaw (ne-thue-ga-lu-law) n. former name for lands near Galalaw. It is unclear if this was part of the main farm, or a name for an adjacent farm. In 1534 Gavin Elliot sold the 40-shilling lands there to William Scott, the sealing of the letter of reversion being done at Hassendean Kirk and recorded in the Selkirk Protocol Books (it is 'Neder Gallelaw' in 1534).

Netherhaa (ne-thur-haw, -hal) n. Netherhall, former farmstead at the western end of Wilton Park, below 'Overhaa' (or 'Everhaa'), and on the eastern side of where the Wilton Burn meets the Teviot. This was once the back entrance to Langlands estate, and presumably owned by the Laird of Langlands. However, there is now no sign of a house there and it seems likely it was demolished when the Town took over Wilton Park. Thomas Irvine was there in 1726–29, John Blaikie in 1737 and John Scott in at least 1744–47. It is possible this is the 'Nethercroft, acquired from Langlands' recorded on the Land Tax Rolls of 1811, with Mrs. Shortreed as owner. A small mill lade is shown off the Wilton Burn, running past the farm, on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map. William Henderson was 'Overseer of Parks' there in 1851 (it is unclear whether the name is as old as 'Overhaa' or whether it was named later; it is marked on Stobie's 1770 map and still on the Ordnance Survey map of 1904).

Netherhaa Burn (ne-thur-haw-burn) n. another name for the Wilton Burn at the south end of the Park.

Nether Harden (ne-thur-hawr-din) n. former name for lands near Harden, and once part of the barony of Chamberlain Newton, which were resigned by Simon Scott of Fenwick to William Scott of Harden in 1540. The land seems to have been finally conveyed in 1556.

Nether Harden (ne-thur-hawr-din) n. former farm in Liddesdale, part of Harden. It is shown on the 1718 survey of Buccleuch properties, covering 420 acres, bounded by Potterlamport, lands owned by the Laird of Whithaugh and the farms of Cocklaik and Dykeraw. The farmhouse was shown on the south side of the Harden Burn, where there is nothing on modern maps.

Nether Harwud (nethur-har-wud) n. former name for lands at Harwood on Teviot. Probably these same lands were recorded in an English financial document of 1335/6, when forfeited to the King by William of Keith. It is listed among the lands held 'in tenancy' by the Baron of Hawick in 1511, 1572, 1594 and 1615, along with 'Over Harwood' (it is 'Netherhardwode' in 1335/6, 'Nether Harewod' in 1511, 'Nethir Harwod' in 1572, 'Nethair Harwoid' in 1594 and 'Nathir Harwood' in 1615).

Nether Hawthornside (ne-thur-haw-thōrn-sīd) n. former farm near Hawthornside, called 'Denesyde' in earlier times. It is described as being on the left-hand side going up Hawthornside Brae (which would confusingly place it on the other side of Hawthornside than the Dean Burn). It once contained some of the best land now incorporated into Hawthornside, and the Lairds were Turnbulls for several generations.

the Nether Kirk (thu-ne-thur-kirk) n. former common name for the church in the Ewes valley next to the A7 between Arkleton and Sorbie, in an area once called 'Kirktoun'. It is distinguished from the 'Ower Kirk o Ewes', which is a few miles further up the valley near Unthank, and served the lower part of the valley, referred to as 'Nether Ewes'. The original church was dedicated to St. Cuthbert and attached to Melrose Abbey. It was probably the 'Ecclesia Sancti Cuthberti' valued at 26 shillings 8 pence in Bagimond's Roll of 1275. There are many records relating to incumbents of the church from the end of the 13th century. 'Robert fiz Rauf persone del Eglise de Seint Cuthbert de Ewytesdale' signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296. This is probably the church of 'St. Cuthbert de Ewsdalmui' which was granted to Thomas [surname destroyed] following the death of William 'Fresellis', sometime in the early 1400s. The right of patronage passed from Robert Graham to George Douglas, Earl of Angus, in 1456. Roger Kirkpatrick was Rector there in 1556. The patronage of the Kirk was long held by the Maxwells. The poisition of the church, as well as the minister's house and glebe, were shown on the 1718 survey of properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch. It was a relatively rudimentary structure, with a thatched roof; an entry in the session records describes how a young couple had to pay penance in the Kirk and also had to gather heather for the roof. A new church was built on the site of the old in 1866/7. The graveyard contains many old tombstones of the local families of Aitchison, Armstrong, Beattie, Borthwick, Jackson, Little, Rutherford and Scott. The family gravestone of the Malcolms of Burnfoot records the names of 3 of the 4 Knights of Eskdale, and the western side contains the burial place of the Scott-Elliots (it is marked 'Nether Kirk' on Gordon's c.1650 map).

Nether Larriston (ne-thur-law-ree-stin) n. former tower-house at Larriston, situated near the modern farmhouse. It is unclear exactly where it was located. It is marked as 'Nether Laristone' on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Labourer Robert Oliver was living there in 1797 (it is 'Nather Lareistounis' in about 1624).

Nether Mains of Hassendean see Hassendean Mains

Nether Newhaa (ne-thur-new-haw) n. Nether Newhall, an older name for Burnfoot, once part of the Barony of Chamberlain Newton. The name was used in the late 15th century for the Lairdship held by a branch of the Scotts, later called Scott of Burnfoot. In 1484 the lands were granted to James Scott of Kirkurd by David Lindsay of the Byres, Baron of Chamberlain Newton and Newhall; it was held of the superior for the token fee of a silver penny at the Feast of Pentecost. In 1494 James Scott granted 'le Nethir Manes de Newhall' to his son David, along with Galalaw; this was explicitly the west part, above the common road, valued at 3 merks. 'Over et Nather Newhalls' are still referred to when the lands were inherited in 1585 and similarly in 1667. The lands were sold by Adam of Burnfoot and Gavin Plummer to the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1712, when they are described as 'Nether Newhall, otherwise called Burnfoot, with the milne, milne lands, multures, sucken, knaveship and sequels thereof within the paroch of Hassandean, Barony of Chamberlain Newton and Sheriffdom of Roxburgh'. Over Newhall was probably the same as Burnhead (it is 'Nethir Newhall' in 1494, 'Nethir Newhall' in 1532, 'Nether Newhallis' in 1609 and 'Nether Newhales' in 1667).

Netherraw (ne-thu-raw) n. farm and hamlet between Minto and Lilliesleaf. A sketch of the pieces of land associated with the farm was drawn up in 1796, when it was owned by Sir Gilbert Elliot of Minto and written 'Netherow'; this was when land was exchanged with Greenhouse. William Thomson was farmer there in 1797 when it is 'Netherrow'. In 1799 and 1801 the same man was recorded as tenant at 'Repperlaw Netherrow'. His son James, as well as Andrew Clerk, were there in 1799. James Henderson was there in the 1860s. William Cranston was farmer there in the early 20th century.

Netherraw (ne-thu-raw) n. farm on the Hermitage Water, by the B6399, near the junction with the road from Steele Road. The house must have been there from at least the 16th century, and was distinguished from 'Over' or 'Upper Raw'. This could be 'the Raws' where George Simpson is recorded as a subordinate of Robert Elliot of Redheugh in the late 16th century. It is probably the place transcribed as 'Neirland' in 1632, when possessed by Francis Beattie. William Scott was tenant in 1694 and Adam Armstrong was also recorded there. George 'Hotson' was tenant in the early 1700s. It was surveyed for the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1718, when it extended to 141 acres, bounded by Toftholm, the Hermitage Water, lands of the Laird of Hoscote and Over Raw. The farmhouse at that time was roughly in the same location as the modern building and the farm is described as 'indifferent good land much damnified with the water'. David Jackson was farmer there in 1797 and John Hardie and Adam Telfer were shoemakers there in 1799 and Alexander Davidson in 1801. Walter Scott in 1835, Matthew Elliot in 1851 and Walter Scott in 1861. It was a home of the Elliots until the last farmer, Matthew Elliot died in 1877, when the old buildings were demolished. Some of the land was planted, becoming the Nether Raw Plantation, and the rest was attached to Hartsgarth farm. The current house is modern ('Rha' is marked near there on Gordon's c.1650 map and 'Raa' on Visscher's 1689 map, while Blaeu's 1654 map shows both 'N. Ra' and 'O. Raa' and Stobie's 1770 map has 'Upperra' and 'Netherraw'; it is 'Netherraw' in 1663 and 'Netherrow' in 1797).

Netherraw Cottages (ne-thu-raw-ko'-ee-jeez) n. houses by the side of the road between Netherraw and Longhaugh. There was a blacksmith's marked here on the 1862 Ordnance Survey map.

Nether Riccarton see Riccarton

Nether Soothfield (ne-thur-sooth-feeld) n. previously the lower farm at Southfield, now the site of the main farm. It lay just outside the old boundaries of the Common. The land was long owned by the Duke of Buccleuch and was contained within the Lordship of Whitchesters. It was surveyed in 1718 along with other properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch, consisting of 145 acres, bounded by Hawick Common, Hawickshiel, Stobicote and Over Southfield. It was mentioned in a Hawick Parish evaluation in 1627, and then said to be 'of that same nature' as 'Upper Southfield'. Robert Scott was recorded there in 1628 and John Elliot of Brugh was recorded as tenant in at least the period 1690–1704. Gilbert Elliot was there in at least 1700–04. Walter and James Scott were tenants in at least 1709–18. Walter and 2 James Scotts were there in 1713. John Elliot was cooper there in 1726. George Telfer was herd there in 1740 (it was 'Neathersouthfeild' in 1628, 'Nether Southfeild' in 1690 and 'nether southfeild' in 1694).

Nether Tofts (ne-thur-tofts) n. farm near Kirkton, north-east of Upper Tofts. It was once part of the Cavers estate. Its lands are on the lower slopes of Ruberslaw. Adam Turnbull was there in 1682 and John Douglas in 1694, along with Andrew Blyth. The lands were inherited by William, son of Thomas Turnbull of Tofts in 1695. James Turnbull, Robert Scott and John Douglas were there in the early 1700s. Francis Scott of Gorrenberry was also there in the early 1700s. John Leyden (father of the poet and linguist) was there in the late 1770s and 80s. William Scott was there in 1787. Walter Blyth was farmer there in at least 1794–97, John Turnbull was there in 1797, Andrew Scott and William Welsh were servants there in 1799 and John Gray was a servant there in 1801. Robert Bulman was farmer in the 1860s. It was referred to as 'Low Tofts' in 1868 when G. Bulman was farmer there. Andrew Inglis, James Currie, Robert Glendinning and Robert Wood were there in the early 1900s. In 1872 Robert Murray recounts a story of a Jedburgh man passing here who heard fairies wailing 'O there's a bairn born, but there's nae sark to put on't', so he took off his shirt, which quieted the wailing, and he was rich for the rest of his life. Robert Glendinning collected several artefacts that were ploughed up there, including flake scrapers and flakes, 3 spincles whorls, 4 stone axe-heads and a bronze axe-head, some of which are in the Royal Museum of Scotland (it is 'Nethertafts' in 1694; it is marked as 'N: Tofts' on Pont's c.1590 manuscript map, 'Nether Tofts' on Gordon's c.1650 map and 'N. Tofts' on Blaeu's 1654 map).

Nether Wheel (ne-thur-wheel) n. former lands near the Wheel Kirk in upper Liddesdale. It is listed as 'Nether Wheill', along with 'Kirk Wheilland' and other lands in Liddesdale owned by the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1663 (see the Wheel Kirk).

Nether Whisgills (ne-thur-whis-gilz) n. former name for part of the lands of Whisgills. William Oliver was there in 1694. The farm was surveyed for the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1718, when it consisted of 528 acres. It was bounded by the Muir Burn, Upper Millstead, Reidmoss, Over Whisgills, Tinnis, Bankhead, Shipshielden and Gillfoot.

Nether Whitlaw (ne-thur-whi'law) n. farm to the south of Lindean village, a couple of miles north-west of Selkirk, adjacent to Over Whitlaw. It should not be confused with the farm of Whitlaw just south of Hawick. It was owned by the Kers of Faldonside in the late 16th and early 17th centuries. There were Porteouses there in the 19th century.

Nether Woollee (ne-thur-woo-lee) n. former name for part of the lands of 'Woollee' (or Wolfelee) in use from the 15th to 18th centuries (it is 'Nether Wolle' in 1479 and 1515, 'Nether Woulee' in 1522, 'Nether Woulie' in 1525 and 'Natherwolley' in 1627).

Netherwud (ne-thur-wud) n. Netherwood, large house on Sunnyhill, on the private drive that is a continuation of Roadhead. It was built in the 19th century for the Laings, being home to Thomas and his family. J.P. Alison was responsible for alterations in the early years of the 20th century. It may have been used as a boys' home at the end of WWII and is now split into flats.

the Nether Wulton Youth (thu-ne-thur-wul'-in-yooth) n. nickname for John Kyle who was a great runner in his younger days.

nettles (ne'-ulz) n., pl. ubiquitous stinging plant, Urticaceæ dioica. Its sting is supposedly cured through application of docken leaves. The presence of nettles often indicates disturbance of the ground by humans – J.A.H. Murray wrote in 1861 that 'often in the midst of the heathery moor a clear space and a few green knolls overgrown with nettles, are the only momento of a once smiling homestead'.

nettle-yirnest (ne'-ul-yir-nist) adj., arch. dead earnest – '. . . thae thochts . . . gar iz bang up bleithe again an buckle tui in nettle-yirrnist!' [ECS] (from 'in ettle earnest'; cf. ettle-earnest; 'nettle-earnest' is used in Hogg's 'Brownie of Bodsbeck').

neuk see nuik

the Neuk (thu-nook) n. small row of cottages on Eastgate in Denholm.

the Neuk (thu-nook) n. former farm on the Bonjedward estate. Andrew Caverhill was tenant there in 1800.

nevel (ne-vul) n., arch. a blow with the fist, v., arch. to punch, beat with the fist.

nevellit (ne-vu-lee', -li') pp., poet. punched, beat, bufetted – – 'An' the husbanmen tuik his servents an' nevellet ane, an' killet anither, an' stanet anither' [HSR], 'Than did they spit in his face, an' nevellet him' [HSR].

Neville (ne-vul) n. Sir John (c.1341–88) 3rd Lord of Raby, son of Ralph. He was probably joint Warden of the English West and East Marches 1380–88, along with the Percys. He married Maud Percy and was succeeded by Henry, who became the 1st Earl of Westmorland. He died before his father, although his son Ralph became 2nd Earl of Westmorland. Sir John (1387–1420) son of Ralph, 1st Earl of Westmorland, and half-brother of Richard, 1st Earl of Salisbury. He was Warden of the English West Marches for a few years until his death. Ralph (c.1291–1367) 2nd Baron Neville de Raby, son of Ralph. He was Joint Warden General of the English Marches (along with Henry, 2nd Baron Percy) from 1334. He was probably the 'Sir Randulph' who was in possession of the Castle and manor of Hermitage shortly after the Battle of Durham in 1346, resigning them to Edward III about 1352. In 1354 he, along with Henry Percy, was appointed as a commissioner to deal with Elizabeth, widow of Sir William Douglas, former Keeper of Hermitage. He married Alice, daughter of Sir Hugh de Audley and was succeeded by his son Sir John. He also had a son who was Archibishop of York and daughters who married into the Clifford, Dacre, Percy and Scrope families. His youngest daughter Margaret married Henry Percy and was mother of 'Hotspur'. Ralph (c.1364–1425) 1st Earl of Westmorland, son of John and Maud Percy. He was probably Warden of the English West Marches along with Thomas de Clifford from about 1388. He married his cousin Margaret, daughter of Sir Hugh Stafford (with whom he had 9 children) and then Joan Beaufort, daughter of the 1st Duke of Lancaster (with whom he had another 14 children. He is the inspiration for the character 'Westmorland' in Shakespeare's 'Henry V', and it has even been claimed that his great-great-grandson wrote Shakespeare's plays. Richard (1400–60) 5th Earl of Salisbury, eldest son of Ralph, Earl of Westmorland. About 1420 he became Warden of the English West March (succeeding his eldest half-brother John). He remained Warden until 1424, when he was involved in negotiations for the release of James I. About 1433 he was again Warden of the West Marches, also took over the East Marches and Captaincy of Berwick in 1434, but resigned in the next year. His family had regular conflicts with the Percy's and supported Richard, Duke of York (his brother-in-law). He married Alice Montacute, heiress of the Earl of Salisbury. He was succeeded by his son Richard, 'the Kingmaker'. He was captured after the Battle of Wakefield and beheaded. Richard 'the Kingmaker' (1428–71) Earl of Warwick and Salisbury, eldest son of Richard, the 5th Earl. He was a great Yorkist supporter in the Wars of the Roses. He was Warden of the English East Marches from about 1453, perhaps along with his father initially (since he must only have been 15!). In 1464 his forces burned Jedburgh. He helped Edward IV to gain the English Crown, but later switched his allegience to put Henry VI back on the throne. He was killed by Edward IV's forces at the Battle of Barnet.

Neville's Cross (ne-vulz-kros) n. battle of 1346, in which the Scottish army under King David II were routed at Durham by a smaller English army under York, Percy and Neville. On their way south the Scottish army captured Liddel Tower (also called Liddel Strength). Durham was attacked as a diversionary tactic to help the French. St. Cuthbert's is supposed to have appeared before the Scottish King as a warning, and a relic of the saint is said to have helped the English victory. David II was captured while fleeing and the Scots division under Sir William Douglas (probably containing local men) suffered particularly disasterously. Sir Michael Scott of Rankilburn and Maurice Murray (then Baron of Hawick) were killed there, while Robert Chisholme of Chisholme and Sir William Douglas (Knight of Liddesdale), as well as the King and about 50 other Barons, were taken prisoner. Afterwards the English army took possession of the Border territory and Hermitage and Roxburgh Castles surrendered, with several locals swearing (temporary) fealty to the English King. The name of the battle derives from the stone cross erected by Lord Neville in commemoration (destroyed in 1589). It is also known as the Battle of Durham.

nevoy (ne-voi) n., arch. a nephew – 'Upon the 28th of December, 1705, Thomas Porteous, my nevoy of the age of betwixt and and twentie-two yeirs . . . ' [GB] (also nevy).

nevy (ne-vee) n., arch. a nephew – 'The uncle turned red, and the nevy turned blue, Then they looked at each other, these good men and true' [JCG] (also nevoy).

Nevysintonsteed (ne-vee-sin'-in-steed) n. former name for lands in Liddesdale, recorded in 1541 as 'Nevtsintounsteid'. It is unclear where these lands were or what the name meant (although the 'nevy' part may refer to a nephew).

new (new) adv. newly, recently, just – 'The bairns new oot o the skuil for leave . . . [ECS] (more common than in standard English; see also i the new).

New (new) n. Edith Bessie (1877–1951) suffragette, born in Swindon, who trained as a teacher. She joined the Women's Social and Political Union in 1906 and was one of 75 women arrested in 1907 for attempting to see the Prime Minister. She was one of the first 2 women to chain themselves to railings (outside 10 Downing Street) as a protest. After release from prison, she gave up her teaching job to become a full-time organiser. She was imprisoned again in 1908 for breaking windows in Downing Street, and afterwards became main organiser of the north-eastern branch of the W.S.P.U. One of her activities was to campaign at the Hawick by-election in 1909. She was imprisoned again later in 1909, went on hunger strike and was released. She returned to teaching, but remained an active campaigner for the rights of women. She died in Cornwall.

Newall (new-al) n. Broughton (b.1818/9) born in Hawick, he was a frame-worker. In 1851 he lived around the Crown Close and in 1861 on Factory Close. He married Mary Whillans (sister of 'Kinly Stick') and their children included Mary, Agnes, Margaret, Robert, Richard, Jane and James. He is probably the 'Auld Broughton' mentioned in the poem 'Hawick Immortals'. Richard (1850–1918) son of Broughton and Mary Whillans. The family lived at Orrock Place when he was young. He was 'boatswain Newall, who was up aloft' in William Easton's song 'The Anvil Crew'. Ironically he drowned in the Teviot, where he must have cavorted as a youth. Robert (b.1788/9) from St. Michael's in Dumfriesshire, he was a grocer and spirit dealer on the Howegate, listed in Pigot's 1837 directory. He was at about 12 Howegate in 1841. His public house is mentioned as existing during the cholera outbreak of 1832. By 1851 he was a frame-worker living at the Village. His wife was Agnes and their children included: Robert; Thomas, who married Margaret Kersel; and Margaret, who married William Gemmell. Thomas (b.1813/4) from Dumfries, son of Robert. He was a frameworker in Hawick. In 1861 he was living at 23 Loan. In 1852 he married Margaret Kersel (also written 'Newell').

New Appletreehaa (new-aw-, -ā-pul-tree-haw, -hawl) n. New Appletreehall, name used for an area near to Appletreehall in the late 18th century. It is recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when the residents there who owned work horses were John Reid, James Scott and James Crawford.

Newark Castle (new-urk-kaw-sul) n. ruin west of Selkirk, on a mound above the Yarrow, now within the estate of Bowhill. It was formerly called 'Cathmurlie' and had adjacent lands called 'Auld Wark'. The existing tower was built in 1423 by Archibald, Earl of Douglas and was used as a residence of the Earls until about 1446. It passed to the crown as the royal hunting seat of Ettrick Forest in 1455. John Murray was custodian in the late 15th century and Margaret Tudor had sasine of the castle and lands in 1503. Scott of Buccleuch was appointed Captain and Keeper in 1542. Several nearby farms were given by the Crown to the keeper of the castle. It was taken in a siege by Lord Grey (with the support of the Kers) in 1547, with 4 of Sir Walter Scotts servants and a woman being slain. Sir Walter Scott was appointed Captain and Keeper of the Castle in 1565/6. Over 100 of the Philiphaugh prisoners were slaughtered in its courtyard in 1645, with the nearby place of burial called 'Slain Men's Lea'. Cromwell's troops occupied it in 1650 after the Battle of Dunbar. It was one of the places where dragoons were posted in about 1676, so that they could scour the local countryside for people attending illegal field conventicles. For a while it was the home of Anne, Countess of Buccleuch, and is in Scott's 'Lay of the Last Minstrel'. But it was unroofed during the minority of Henry, 3rd Duke of Buccleuch, and preserved from decay during the time of Walter, the 5th Duke – 'He pass'd where Newark's stately tower Looks out from Yarrow's birchen bower' [SWS], '... And sudden he saw at his shoulder stand The walls of Newark, grey towered and grand' [WHO] (it is 'Neuwerk' in 1446/7 and 'the Castell of Newwerk' in 1547/8; it is marked 'New wark' and 'New-wark' on Gordon's c.1650 maps and 'Cast. of Newoork' on Blaeu's 1654 map).

Newbattle (new-baw'-ul) n. Roger (13th C.) recorded in a charter of Walter of Riddell as owner of neighbouring lands in Lilliesleaf.

Newbattle Viaduct (new-baw'-ul-vI-a-dukt) n. longest viaduct on the Waverley Line, over the River South Esk, near the town of Newbattle, having 22 arches and being almost one third of a mile long (also known as 'Lothianbridge').

New Belses (new-bel-seez) n. farm to the northeast of Old Belses, in Ancrum Parish. An 1826 map shows the names and area of all the fields at that time, namely Loan Park, Mid Park, Haugh Park, New Onstead Park, Northlee Park, North Kips, South Kips, South Meadow, North Meadow, Bog Park, Bank Park, Hillhead Park, Huntill Park, Moss Park and Langrig. At that time it belonged to Sir Alexander Keith of Dunnotar.

Newbie (new-bee) n. James (15th/16th C.) local clerk and priest. He held the benefice of Cavers Parish from about 1500. He was vicar there in 1501/2 when he was notary for a document relating to the lands of Feu-Rule. He is probably the same priest of Glasgow Diocese who was notary for the 1512 sasine transferring Harden from Walter Scott to his brother William. He also notarised the 1514 sasine of the Barony of Hawick, where he is recorded as 'Jacobus Newbe, presbiter Glasguensis diocesis'. In 1523 he was notary for a sasine relating to the lands of the Trows. Either the same or a different 'Jacobo Newby' was witness to a sasine for Douglas of Cavers in 1550, granting Colifort to William Scott. He may also be the 'James Nwby, messinger', who was implicated in the murder of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1552 along with James Douglas of Cavers and several Kers; according to the indictment when the group were crossing the Rule he said to the people there 'Hard ze ony tythennis of the Lard of Bukclucht; he is put in vard, and will never cumme furth'. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish who married Isobel Scott. Their son Samuel was baptised in 1635. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish who married Agnes Turnbull. Their children included Thomas (b.1654) and James (b.1655). James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Gillespie, with their children including Robert (b.1671), and the witnesses being Mr. John Purdom and James Thorbrand. Perhaps the same James was married to a 'Birnie', with son John baptised in Hawick in 1677. James (17th/18th C.) Sheriff-Officer in Hawick. He gave evidence in 1681 at the trial of Covenanters, relating to the attack on Drumlanrig's Tower. In 1682 he gave evidence at the trial of Alexander Home, portioner of Home, one of the Covenanter leaders who besieged Drumlanrig's Tower. In 1684 he was 'officer' when Thomas Beattie was fined for coming to his house at night, assaulting his wife and demanding drink. On the same day in 1684 he made a claim of 'lawborrowes' against Walter, Thomas, James and William Hardie, who the previous night had come to his house and 'violently provoke him by mightie opprobryous, scandalous, and malitious words to ane breach of the law'; what he did to provoke all these men is not recorded. In 1687, Isobel Turnbull, widow of Robert Lauder, came into his house 'and throwing doune her child in his bed when he and oyr friens was att dinner togidderi efter yt the common was ridden', she then threatened to throw a mug at him; Turnbull was fined, along with his wife, Molly Ruecastle, for 'ane bluid committ upon Isobell Trumble'. He was also listed as 'officer to the sheriff' among contributers to the new Kirk bell in 1693/4. He was probably the James recorded in the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694 among those 'Payed but not listed in Hauick Toun'; he was probably from the west side. Presumably the same James was described as 'portioner of Hawick' in an Edinburgh marriage record of 1719, when his daughter Helen married Alexander Thomson, merchant in Edinburgh. He may be the James who was born in Hawick in 1655, with parents James and Agnes Turnbull. He may be the James who married Margaret Gillespie, with their children including Robert (b.1671), and the witnesses being Mr. John Purdom and James Thorbrand. His children with 'Malie' Ruecastle included: Marion (b.1681), probably the same Marion who married David Young in Hawick in 1704 and John Cavers in 1714; Isobel (b.1682), who probably married Walter 'Lithen' in Hawick in 1707; William (b.1685); and an unnamed child (b.1687). He could be the James who witnessed a baptism for Thomas Lunn in Hawick Parish in 1675, another for James Baptie in 1678 and one more for John Scott in Barn Knowe in 1680. Samuel (17th C.) ordered by the Council in 1658 to pay 4 merks for 'both-meall' (i.e. booth rent) until Whitsunday. In 1660 he was involved in an altercation with Bailie Robert Deans and others over a game of 'kyles'; he apparently said that if he was not playing then noone would play and threw stones at the game, whereupon the Bailie called the Burgh Officers and 'irreverent speache' was used. In 1668 he was accused of an 'alledget blooding of Adame Scott'. He was on the list of Hawick men named in the 1673 trial following the so-called riot at St. Jude's Fair. Probably the same Samuel was fined in 1676 for assaulting masons Andrew Turnbull and Andrew Wilson and 'for casting downe the mason work at his own hand without ane complaint first made to the bailies thereof'; presumably he did not approve of the building work that they were doing for him! He is probably the Samuel born in 1635 to James and Isobell Scott. He could also be the Samuel who married Bessie Wilson and had a son Samuel in 1676. Thomas (d.1602) Reader at Hassendean Kirk 1576–80. He was presented to the vicarage of the Parish on the demitting of Thomas Weston in October 1576 and is recorded demitting this in 1595. Hence it appears he held part of the benefice of the Parish for at least 15 years after he was Reader there. Another record states that John Madder (or Mather) was presented to Hassendean on his death in 1602, so he may have held some of the benefice even longer. In 1580 he witnessed a transaction for Robert Scott of Alton, done at the Monk's Tower. In 1582, along with Sir Thomas Ker (of Roxburgh Parish), Archibald Simson (of Lilliesleaf), John Scott (of Southdean), James Scott (of Ashkirk) and John McClellan (of Kirkandrews) were deprived for 'abusing the sacrements'. Then they were excommunicated in 1588 for continuing with the offence (which is unspecified, but may suggest that the men had been Catholic priests before the Reformation) and in 1590 ordered never to abuse the sacrements under pain of death. They were made to stand for 2 hours at the Market Cross of Edinburgh with a paper on their foreheads proclaiming their crime. Samuel (17th C.) merchant in Hawick. In 1669 he was found guilty of assaulting merchant William Elliot, cutting him 'with ane sword in ye head' and for 'strycking and wounding of him in his face with ane brydle'. He may be the Samuel who was born in Hawick in 1635, son of James and Isobell Scott. He is probably the Samuel who was married to Bessie Wilson, with son Samuel born in 1676. Thomas (17th C.) recorded in 1684 when he witnessed the financial document relating to the building of the 'Steeple Loft' in St. Mary's. He is described there as 'servant', although it is unclear what this means (also formerly written 'Neubie', 'Newby', 'Newbe' and 'Nwby').

Newbiggin (new-bi-gin) n. Newbigging, former farmstead and hamlet that lay between Whitchesters and Southfield, bordering on the Common. It was later the shepherd's cottage for Whitchesters. The location can still be clearly made out, directly to the south of Whitchesters farm and east of the hill-fort. It was mentioned among the farms burned by the English in 1533. It was long a tenanted farm belonging to the Duke of Buccleuch, being contained within the Lordship of Whitchesters. James Scott was tenant there in 1627. The farm was surveyed in 1718 along with other Buccleuch properties, and at that time consisted of 111 acres, bounded by Whitchesters, Hawick Common, Over Southfield and Raesknowe. In at least the period 1690–98 the farm was leased to Robert Scott, James Davidson and Margaret Davidson. The householders listed in 1694 were Robert Scott, James Davidson and John Hogg (weaver), with Margaret Davidson and James Murray also listed there among 'the poor'. James Davidson was tenant in at least 1702–18. Weaver William Hood was living there in 1704. Walter Scott was joint tenant there in at least 1708–36. John Wilson was tailor there in 1708. Robert Scott was tenant in about 1710 and Andrew Davidson was also there. In 1711 John Wilson was tailor there and Robert Davidson was also living there. James Davidson was there in 1720. Walter Scott was there in about the 1750s and 1760s. Walter Scott and John Rutherford farmed here in 1797, William Heatley was there in at least 1799–1801 and William Scott was labourer there in 1841. It is said that residents of the farm were formerly weavers and in about 1800 it is said that it was a 'hamlet of 21 hearthstones'. Walter Stevenson, 'Wat the Heckler', lived there at about this time. Its buildings were already shown as ruined on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map. There is a spring near the old farmstead and the remains of a fort on the hill to the west. The fort must once have been quite extensive, measuring perhaps 90 m by 135 m, but has been partly obliterated due to ploughing, except on the steeper south and south-east sides. Its defences consist of 3 banks of piled rubble and there may be signs of 2 scooped huts on the knoll, which has been heavily quarried. There are also Newbiggings in Oxnam Parish and near Lauder, and several others elsewhere in Scotland (it must have been a 'new biggin' at some point; it is 'Newbiggyns' in 1533 and 'Neubigging', 'neubiging' in 1694 and 'Newbeggeng' in 1718; it appears as 'Newbrug' on Blaeu's 1654 map, with a large tower indicated, and is 'New Beggen' on the 1718 Buccleuch survey).

Newbiggin (new-bi-gin) n. Newbigging, a farm that lay between Horsleyhill and Knowtownhead, once part of the Middle Mains of Hassendean. In the 1550s there was a dispute over these lands between the children of Gavin Elliot of Horsleyhill by his first wife and those by his second wife. It was listed in 1582 among lands for which Robert Elliot of Horsleyhill demanded the charters of his father from the widow of Sir Walter Ker of Cessford. It may be the Newbigging listed as part of the Stobs estate purchased by Gilbert Eliott from his half sisters in about 1608. Like much of the area, it became part of Minto Parish when Hassendean was suppressed in 1690. The disused quarry of that name is still marked on Ordnance Survey maps (the farm is marked on Stobie's 1770 map and may have been incorrectly transcribed 'Howbigging' in 1690).

Newbiggin (new-bi-gin) n. house at No. 9 Lockhart Place, which is a grade C listed building.

Newbiggin (new-bi-gin) n. (Newbigging) Helen (17th C.) resident of Midlem. In about 1684 she was on a list of Covenanter fugitives. Sir William (1782–1852) surgeon in Edinburgh, based at 18 St. Andrew's Square. He gave evidence at the trial of Burke and Hare and became President of the Royal College of Surgeons. In 1825 he subscribed to 2 copies of Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick', and so it is possible he had some connection with the town. William 'Willie', took over as landlord of the Mosspaul Inn in 1962.

Newbiggin Burn (new-bi-gin-burn) n. stream rising near the old Newbigging farm and flowing roughly south-west to join the Allan Water (marked 'Newbigging Hope' and 'North Burn' on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

the New Brig (thu-new-brig) n. original name for the North Bridge, built in 1832. It was usually referred to as the 'Station Brig' after the railway was completed in 1849.

Newburgh (new-bu-ru) n. farm in the upper Ettrick valley, once home of the Scotts of Newburgh. 'Newburghmill' was listed among the farms of the Duke of Buccleuch being let by public roup in Hawick in 1755 – 'Gae warn the lads of Thirlstone, Gemscleugh, and Newburgh fair, With Tushielaw, and Midgehope, in armour to appear' [WSB] (it is marked on Gordon's c.1650 map).

new-calfit (new-kaw-fee') adj., arch. having just calved – '. . . nyne new calfit ky, with thair followaris, price of the pece ourheid, five pundis' [SB1574].

Newcastle (new-kaw-sul) n. city in the north-east of England, approximately 62 miles south-east of Hawick, reached via the Carter Bar and A68. The city was the site of the interchange between Douglas and Percy that led to the Battle of Otterburn in 1388. It was also captured in 1640 by Montrose's Covenanter army, which included the Teviotdale Regiment under the Earl of Lothian. It was occupied for about a year, during which time there is a record in the Hawick Town Book of James Scott, former Bailie gathering contributions for the soldiers there. It was occupied again 1644–47, when Buccleuch was involved in the siege. Several Newcastle merchants (probably coal merchants) were made Honorary Burgesses of Hawick in the 18th century. The city was once connected to Hawick by rail via the Riccarton-Hexham line. The old road towards Newcastle was, until the 1830s, up the Cross Wynd and over the hills, via Ormiston, Birneyknowe and Blackcleugh; part of this can still be traced through the open country. Until the early 1800s the road through Rulewater went from Hawthornside to Forkins, via Highend, and then up Blacklee Brae to join the modern road towards Chesters – 'To Newcastell when that they came, The Douglas cry'd on hyght: 'Harry Percy, an thou bidest within, Come to the field, and fight'' [T] (note the accent on the first syllable).

Newcastleton (new-kaw-sul'-in) n. village 20 miles south-west of Hawick in the southern corner of Roxburghshire. It was effectively a replacement for the older settlement of Castleton, which lies further up the Liddel. The site was formerly the farms of Copshaw and the flat land was said to have been used for 'Horse coursing', with crowds from both sides of the Border coming to watch the races. This planned village was founded in 1793 by the 3rd Duke of Buccleuch, and laid out according to the design of Mr. Keir of Whitehaugh. The lay-out is a series of criss-crossed streets around 3 main squares. Its main purpose was as a handloom weaving centre, close to the Border and on the Liddel Water. The first settler was said to be from the Hermitage area and lived in a turf hut while the village was being built. Many early residents were weavers, other tradesmen and retired shepherds. Clog-making was also prominent, and the wearing of clogs in the village was common for much longer than elsewhere. Leases of holdings were originally for 99 years, with each householder responsible for erecting their own house. Each feuar also had 2 acres of land attached (later extended to 4 acres per 2-storey house and 2 acres for cottages), as well as a garden of $\frac{1}{8}$ acre, and the right to graze a cow on the hill. The management was by 3 elected bailies, one retiring each year. The 99 year leases led to much dispute in 1892 and subsequent improvements to the village. Most householders chose to convert their holdings into feus for purchase and feu-duty. The church (later St. John's) was built in 1782 (before the new village), with additions in 1891, but only became the parish church in the 1950s. There was a separate Free Kirk, built in 1853 on Langholm Street, a Secession (later United Presbyterian) Kirk built 1801–04 at the Townfoot (now the Heritage Centre) and an Evangelical Union Kirk built in 1850 on South Hermitage Street (and now a private dwelling). There was a subscription library already by 1839. There has always been a school here, but secondary school pupils have been bussed to Hawick since 1962 (and before that some of them took the train). A memorial statue of a K.O.S.B. soldier was erected after WWI. The village has the Liddesdale Heritage Centre, a local history museum. There was a weekly market starting in about 1837 and 2 annual fairs for the selling of sheep. The village formerly hosted 3 hiring days, when servants were hired in the area, and much activity took place, these being in April, May and November. The Holm Show is the annual fair in August, popularised in the song 'Copshawholm Fair', and has been running since 1893, while the Newcastelton Traditional Music Festival in July has been running since 1970. The Horse Tax Rolls of 1797 list the owners of horses in the village as James Oliver, James Aitchison, John Beattie, Robert Thomson, James Elliot, Thomas Mathieson, Thomas Dodgson, William Kyle, William Little, John Smith, Andrew Rutherford, Mary Murray, George Dalgleish, Robert Murray, William Beattie, George Scott, John Leyden, Charles Grieve, William Winlaw, James Fell and Thomas Hall. The official name of the village was originally just 'Castleton', but the modern name appeared by the early 1800s. The village is also known as 'Copshaw', 'Copshawholm' or 'the Holm'. William Hall wrote 'Newcastleton: A Border Village' (1905). Population (1991) 813 – 'Newcastleton was the last o' the battles And the curtain began tae descend . . . ' [AY] (it is 'New Castleton' in 1797, with the first recorded appearance as one word being in the Kelso Mail of 1808).

Newcastleton Burgher Kirk (new-kaw-sul'-in-bur-gur-kirk) n. church established in Castleton Parish in the 1750s, originally called the Liddesdale Burgher Kirk or Copshawholm Kirk. Its origin lay in the secession movement of the time, which locally came to a head with the unpopular appointment of Simon Haliburton as Castleton Parish Minister. Their first meeting was under the 'venerable oak' near Snaberlee. The Edinburgh Anti-Burgher Presbytery was petitioned in 1751 and provided an occasional preacher, then the Edinburgh Burgher Presbytery was approached in 1753. Early preachers included John Brown (later at Haddington) and Archibald Hall (later Torphichen). A building was constructed on the banks of the Liddel at Geilbraehead about then. It was made of rubble with a thatched roof and earth floor. James Wylie was called, but declined, William Ronaldson also ended up elsewhere, and the apparently rebellious James Mitchell was also found wanting. So the first minister was James Fletcher, and not until 1762. Although a remarkable man, he was not a successful minister and the congregation was in decline by the 1790s. However, the name was changed to the Associate Kirk of Newcastleton in 1804, with a new building erected in the village there 1801–4. This was the first church built in the new village and usually referred to as the 'Toonfit Kirk', since the site was a former garden at the foot of the village. A Manse was also built at this time. A harmonium was donated to the church in the mid-1800s by Mrs. Tod, daughter of Rev. John Law. After the Secession churches merged it became known as Newcatleton United Presbyterian Kirk. However, further dissent led to the formation of the Free Church in Newcastleton, as well as the Congregational Church.

It was renovated along with the Manse in 1875. With the merge of the secession churches with the Church of Scotland in 1929 the church became locally known as 'the South Church' (to distinguish it from 'the Park Church' and 'Castleton Church'). From 1934 the charge was combined with that of the Park Church, and then it became known as simply 'Newcastleton Kirk'. A roll of the ministry is: James Fletcher 1762–1801; William Smart, 'probationer' 1802; Walter Dunlop 1804–10; John Law 1812–28; John Black 1829–79; James Snadden 1880–1929; George Lithgow Wilson 1930–40; Campbell Taylor 1941–42; Wilfred Scott Goodere 1943–46.

Newcastleton Congregational Kirk (new-kaw-sul'-in-kong-gree-gā-shu-naul-kirk) n. church established in Castleton Parish in 1849 by people seceding from the United Presbyterian congregation. In 1850 they erected a building on South Hermitage Street in Newcastleton. It is sometimes referred to as 'Newcastleton South' or the 'Sooth Kirk'. By 1870 they had joined the Evangelical Union and in 1929 merged with with the South Church (formerly the U.P. congregation), thereafter using the South Church building and manse. The National Archives have records for the period 1854–1934. A partial roll of the ministry is: William Davidson Black 1850–51; Supply ministers 1851–66; Robert Steel 1866–75; A. Turnbull 1876–77; Supplies again 1877–82; Peter Andrew 1882–83; George Davies 1883–86; William Paterson 1888–90; John Whitson 1890–91; R. Hunter Craig 1891–95; Supplies 1895–99; James W. Gillies 1899–1905; George A.E. Walker 1908–12; Charles Derry 1916–23; James Anderson 1923–26; Alexander R. Sparke 1939–42; John H. Carlin from 1942; William Kitching 1953–58; Idris J. Vaughan 1965–71; ....

Newcastleton Free Kirk (new-kaw-sul'-in-free-kirk) n. Free Church in Newcastleton, founded in 1850. Unlike other Free Churches, this was started following a dispute in the United Prebyterian Church, not the Church of Scotland. It started to meet in the ballroom of the Crown Inn. The first building was constructed in 1853 on Langholm Street (from plans made by Rev. J.B. Johnstone of Wolfelee). It burned down in 1891, but was rebuilt 2 years later. It was also sometimes called Newcastleton North United Free Church. The Free Church Manse was at 13 Douglas Square, built in 1857. It was taken over by the Church of Scotland in 1909. After the merge of the United Presbyterian Church in 1929 it became locally known as 'the Park Church', to distinguish it from 'the South Church' and 'Castleton Church'. After Rev. Lowe retired as minister in 1934, the charge was merged with that of the South Church. In 1949 the building was turned into a village hall, with an extension built in 1956; it was named after Rev. Alexander Lowe, the last full-time minister of the church. The National Archives have records for the period 1850–1946. A roll of the ministry is: David Mackay 1856–60; Neil Shaw Ure, M.A. 1861–75; John A. Smith 1876–98; Alexander Lowe 1898–1934.

Newcastleton Golf Course (new-kaw-sul'-in-gōlf-kōrs) n. golf course outside Newcastleton, on Holm Hill. It is known for its views over the Liddesdale valley, as well as for its small greens. The club was founded in 1894. There are the remains of a settlelement on a terrace south of Charlies Sike, in an area of rough ground.

Newcastleton Kirk (new-kaw-sul'-in-kirk) n. Parish Church of Castleton on Montagu Street (see Castleton Kirk).

Newcastleton Schuil (new-kaw-sul'-in-skil) n. school in the village of Newcastleton, on Montagu Street. Since 1962 senior pupils have been bussed to Hawick High School. The old schoolhouse adjoins the Parish Church, and has had a lintel inserted into the north gable, which bears the date 1621. Ebenezer Wells was Schoolmaster there in the early 1800s, Alexander Fisher in at least the period 1825–52, John Brown from 1854–1900 and Andrew Hobkirk in the 1940s. School log books for 1875–1921 are in the Borders Archive.

Newcastleton Station (new-kaw-sul'-in-stā-shin) n. former station on the Waverley Line in Newcastleton. It was situation on Langholm Street and included a signal box, footbridge, level-crossing and station-master's house. All that survives is this last building, which has been converted into a private house.

the New Cut (thu-new-ku') n. popular local name for the cutting made to improve the main road (which became the A7) at Newmill in the early 19th century – 'What a fearful road that must have been before the new cut was made' [NE].

New Eer (new-eer) n., arch. New Year – '... Weel – at least till the New Eer!' [RM], 'Dauvit's been oot o' woark threh the New Eer; hei was putten away threh the mill' [ECS], a gift given at the New Year, often in the form of an alcoholic drink, adj. relating to the New Year – 'Whiles risin' in a freshet o' New 'Eer snaw ...' [DH] (often with the definite article; see also Hogmanany and New Year).

Newell see Newall

Newell Chemicals (new-ul-ke-mee-kulz) n. chemical factory supplying dyes and other products to the textile industry. It was based in a former hosiery factory at 7 Allars Bank, and also referred to as Newtrell Works.

new-fangelt (new-fawng-ul') adj. new-fangled, novel – 'is that yin o they new-fangelt hurdiegurdies?', 'Whan bagpipes new-fangl'd lugs had tir'd, They'd sneer, then he, like ane inspir'd . . . ' [CPM], 'New fangled deevils never heed them, Folk never prize things till they need them' [WNK], 'He couldna fash new-fangled things Wi' all their fall-di-doo' [WFC] (note the lack of a hard g; also spelled 'new-fangled' as in English).

Newfield (new-feeld) n. name for an area to the south-east of Hummelknowes, containing Newfield Hill (which reaches a height of 237 m) and Newfield Plantation. There was formerly a farmstead there, which is marked on Stobie's 1770 map. Samuel Irvine was there in 1763 and still recorded as farmer there in 1797. Walter Irvine is recorded there in 1815.

Newhaa (new-haw) n. Newhall, farm on the north bank of the Ale Water, just east of Cavers Carre. This could be where Thomas Murray was in 1530/1. John Scott was farmer there in the 1860s (it is marked on Pont's c.1590 manuscript map, Gordon's c.1650 map and on Blaeu's 1654 map).

Newhaa (new-haw) n. Newhall, former farmstead in Hobkirk Parish, between Harwood and Lurgiescleugh. This could be the Newhall in the parish of 'Boldoun' (perhaps Soudon) that in 1669 was inherited by William, son of Rev. James Douglas, minister of Hobkirk (marked on Stobie's 1770 map).

Newhaa (new-haw) n. former name for an area in the Barony of Chamberlain Newton, split into 'Over' and 'Nether' lands, corresponding to the later Burnhead and Burnfoot ('le newhalburnhed' is recorded in 1502).

New Harwood (new-haw-ri', -har-wud) n. former farm near Harwood in Hobkirk Parish. It is recorded as 'New Harrot' in 1788 when Thomas Hope was there and 'Newharrot' on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, with John Ferguson as tenant and owner of 4 horses. It was also 'Newharrot' in 1821 when William Crozier was there.

New Heidshaw (new-heed-shaw) n. farm just outside Ashkirk village, on the Woll Rig road, and on the opposite side of the Headshaw Burn from Headshaw itself. James Turnbull was tenant there in 1709. George Kyle was farmer there in 1797. It is marked clearly on an 1829 map of Headshaw farm (it is 'newheadshaw' in 1709; it is marked on Ainslie's 1773 map).

the new hew (thu-new-hew) n., arch. the appearance of newness, fresh look – '. . . composed of ee plus oo – a combination twice noted in our expression 'the new hew' (= the appearance of newness)' [ECS], 'The new hew's off that waxclaith aareddies; it's aa raateet wui thae taackets on eer shuin' [ECS] (note the pronunciation with the diphthongal ee-oo).

Newhoose (new-hoos) n. Newhouse, former lands in Lilliesleaf Parish, once home of a branch of the Riddell family. Thomas Knox, George Knox and James Hill were there in 1694. Walter Riddell 'of Neuhous' is also recorded separately, paying tax on 4 hearths, as well as having a gardener there. The lands were valued at £579 8s 4d in the 1740s. Alexander Chatto of Mainhouse paid the land tax there in 1811, when it was valued at £486. It was sold by Chatto and his son John to Mark Sprot of Riddell. There is still a farm there (it is 'Neuhous' in 1694).

Newhoose (new-hoos) n. Newhouse, former farm on the north side of the Ettrick valley, just to the west of Ettrickbridge. This may be where Mary Scott, Lady Bonnington, was in 1617 when she complained that a group of supporters of Walter Scott of Harden undermined the walls of the house, causing it to fall. The hill 'Newhouse Kip' is marked on the modern Ordnance Survey map (labelled as 'Newhous' on Gordon's c.1650 map and 'Newhouss' on Blaeu's 1654 map).

Newhooses (new-hoo-seez, -how-seez) n. Newhouses, farm just east of Newton ('the Nitton'). The modern farmhouse probably occupies the site of new houses built there in the 17th century, probably to replace Alton. The Taylor family were long farmers there. Residents in 1801 included Thomas and Ninian Huton, as well as John Gray. William Potts and his family lived there in 1841 and George Thomson farmed 156 acres there in 1851. There is an ancient earthwork about 200 m to the north-west of the farm. It lies on a ridge and consists of a bank and ditch enclosing an area about 30 m by 40 m, best preserved on the south-west and with a road through the middle (the name first appears in the 1690s).

Newland (new-lind) n. former lands in Liddesdale, recorded in the 1541 rental roll, with a value of 18 pence, and vacant at that time. The precise location if unknown, but judging by where it appears in the list, it must have been close to Copshaw (confusingly it is also listed near the end of the document, with no value). It is also possible that it is the same as Newlands on the Hermitage Water.

Newlands (new-lindz) n. farm and surrounding area on the road between Hassendean and Lilliesleaf, adjacent to Huntlaw. It was inherited by Ralph 'de Neulandis' from his deceased father William in 1440. It was formerly in Hassendean parish, but moved to Minto in 1690. Walter Davidson was tenant there in 1632 when he had a feu-contract with Thomas, Lord Binning. David Scott in Newlands is recorded in 1643 as owner of lands in Belses. It was farmed by Davidsons in most of the 17th century. David Davidson of Newlands paid tax on £200 of land in 1663. The Marquess of Douglas paid the land tax on £80 there in 1678. Andrew Lamb was a tenant there in 1684 when he was listed among local men declared as fugitives for attending conventicles. William Halliwell was there in 1694. On a map of 1780, it was shown at the western edge of Minto estate, but by 1788 it was owned by Sir Gilbert Elliot of Minto. Thomas Laidlaw was farmer there in 1797 and James Aitken in 1801. William Nichol was farmer in the mid-19th century. It was valued at £80 in the Land Tax Rolls of 1811. A drove road used to pass near here. It may also have been referred to as 'Howlands'.

Newlands (new-lindz) n. farm on the eastern side of the Hermitage valley, roughly opposite Netherraw. In the 1718 survey of properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch it was combined with Shaws (to the north), the farms together covering 245 acres, bounded by Roughley, Cleuchhead, Toftholm, Nether Raw and Millburnholm and including some land on the west side of the river; the farmhouse at that time is shown much further away from the river than the modern one and there are woods also shown, including young alders, between the farmhouses. John Lawson was a servant there in 1801. George F. Armstrong was gamekeeper there in 1851 and Hugh Johnstone in the 1860s. Adam Sanderson was gamekeeper in 1867. It was turned into a shooting lodge in the early 20th century. Newlands Plantation is just to the east.

Newlands (new-lindz) n. James (16th C.) servant of James Stewart of Wells. In 1592 his master complained that while ploughing at Wells, he was attacked by John, brother of Walter Turnbull of Bedrule, who 'boisted [threatened] and minassed [menaced] him and shoirit him for his lyffe, and cheissit him fra the said pleuch', later threatening to burn his crops and oxen and thereby was too scared to tend the fields. Robert (16th C.) recorded in 1539 as a subtenant of Margaret Falside and Walter Scott in their lands in either Ashkirk or Falside. Robert 'younger' (presumably his son) was also listed. Thomas (15th C.) on the 1482 panel for Elizabeth Cunningham inheriting the lands of Appletreehall and the eastern part of Hassendean.

Newlands Burn (new-lindz-burn) n. stream that rises near Hassendean Common, running past Huntlaw and Newlands farms to join the Huntlaw Burn.

New Licht (new-licht) adj., arch. relating to the more liberal faction within the Scottish Presbyterian Church, particularly among the Secessionists, those from the Burgher and Anti-Burgher sides combining into the United Secession Church in 1820 – 'They thocht to gie the Deil a fricht Wi' hauding up the torch 'New Licht' . . . ' [DA].

New Mains (new-mānz) n. former name for a farm in Cavers Parish. William Douglas was there in 1716.

New Manse Field (new-mans-feeld) n. former name for a field near the top of the Loan, on the north side. It was presumably associated with the Manse for Hawick Kirk. In 1863, W.N. Kennedy described 'the witches camp, between the head of the New Manse Field and Drumlanrig Place.

Newmill (new-mil) n. village about 4 miles south-west of Hawick on the A7. Sometimes called Newmill-on-Teviot to distinguish it from the 'New Mill' in the Slitrig valley. It was formerly a farm attached to the corn mill. The farm was surveyed in 1718 along with other properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch, when it comprised 6 acres, with the mill lade clearly shown. In 1694 those listed there with hearths in their homes were Robert Thomson (with 2 kilns), John Dryden (blacksmith) and Alexander Riddell (miller). John Dryden was smith there in at least 1694–1702. Robert Thomson was tenant there in at least 1702–23. William Thomson, both 'older' and 'younger', were recorded there in the 1710s. James Dryden was smith there in at least 1718–25. Thomas Elliot was there in 1771. James Scott was there in 1791, Thomas Borthwick is recorded as the farmer in 1797, and residents in 1799 included John Grieve, William Hogg and Thomas Hume. Wrights Thomas Hume, William Hume and William Hogg were there in 1801. The village grew up around the mill on the river, which was still in active use in 1825/6 (according to Pigot's directory), when the miller was Alexander Borthwick. It was converted into a sawmill in the later 19th century. For a while it the village had its own school, which was established in 1804, also used as a community hall and contains a WWI memorial plaque. The village also had its own library from at least the 1830s. In the 1840s the village consisted of a row of thatched houses (the end one being the school), together with the blacksmiths and a few other houses on the other side of the road. The 1841 census lists 13 households. A new building was constructed for the school later, converted into Newmill Country Inn. The Home Mission met regularly in the village from about the 1890s until 1926. The remains of Allanhaugh Tower can be reached via a footbridge and there are also older earthworks near the Teviot further upriver, although largely obliterated by cultivation. A significant cutting was made in the early 19th century to improve the main road, this being referred to as 'the New Cut' (the name presumably comes from this being the replacement corn mill, probably for Allanhaugh Mill; it is 'neumilne' in 1694, 'newmiln' in 1700, 'Newmilne' in 1702, 1712 and 1716 and 'Newmiln' in 1797).

New Mill (new-mil) n. farm a few miles south of Hawick on the Slitrig, once the site of a corn-mill on the river. It is sometimes called 'Newmill on Slitrig' to distinguish it from Newmill on Teviot. There is a ford here, which was once used as part of a drove road. William Turnbull was miller in 1666. Lancelot Aitchison was tenant in 1694. Hugh Elliot was smith there in 1672. William Whillans was there in 1729. Robert Thomson was there in the 1780s. Robert Thomson and Thomas Borthwick were there in 1797, John Scott and Robert Thomson in 1799, and wright Thomas Telfer in 1801. James Reid was miller in 1841. The weir for the mill was damaged in the 1846 flood. Charles Mitchell was farmer in 1852, Thomas Turnbull in the 1850s and 60s, John Richardson in the late 19th century, Robert Turnbull around 1900, followed by his son Walter Turnbull. The Curds and Cream (meaning the Common Riding Friday 'Hut') was there in 1856. Cottages to the south are sometimes referred to as 'Newmill Cottages' or 'Railway Cottages' (sometimes 'Newmill' or 'Newmills'; it is 'Newmylne of Slitrig' in 1666, 'Neumilne' in 1694 and 'Newmiln' in 1797).

Newmill Burn (new-mil-burn) n. stream that flows from Branxholme Wester Loch to reach the Teviot near Newmill, with Vales Burn joining the Teviot just upriver.

Newmill Damfit see Damfit

Newmill Haa (new-mil-haw) n. village hall in Newmill-on-Teviot.

Newmill on Slitrig (new-mil-on-sli'-reeg) n. name sometimes used for New Mill to distinguish it from Newmill on Teviot.

Newmill Schuil (new-mil-skil) n. former small school in Newmill. It was established by the heritors of Hawick Parish in 1804, following payments for people to teach small numbers of scholars there in previous years. There were 40 pupils there in 1837. By 1841 the salary became the joint responsibility of Hawick and Cavers Parishes. David Laidlaw was Schoolmaster from 1837 until at least 1851. Robert McMorran was Schoolmaster in 1861.

the New Road (thu-new-rōd) n. despite not being new for almost 200 hundred years, the name is still in use! It was built in 1815 and fully opened in 1816 as the new turnpike road from the Sandbed to Goldielands and on to Carlisle or the Borthwick, alongside the Teviot. It replaced the old road that went via the Loan, the Lumback and Martinshouse. The toll bar (Wester Toll) was situated outside the present High School. To provide access from the Sandbed, some houses between the Howegate and Orrock Place were demolished. The first part, along which houses were built, was named Buccleuch Street in 1815, while the remaining part within the town boundaries was named Buccleuch Road in 1905 – 'How micht I come to the auld toon Sall I the New Road spurn, And glint the taps o' the lang lums Frae the brow o' Howdenburn?' [WL].

the New Statistical Account (thu-new-sta-tis-tee-kul-a-kownt) n. the 'New Statistical Account of Scotland', published 1834–45 as a follow-up to the original (sometimes called 'Old') 'Statistical Account of Scotland' (1791–92). It was a description of each parish in the nation, largely written by the local ministers, but also drawing upon the knowledge of schoolmasters and doctors. Roxburghshire is covered in the 3rd volume, with the entries mostly written in 1834–7 and published in 1841. It represents a valuable snapshot at that period, as well as providing many anecdotal pieces of information that are not otherwise recorded.

Newstead (new-steed, -sted) n. former farmstead in Wilton Parish, just to the east of Newton.

An old quarry and a well are marked just to the north on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map. William Taylor was farmer there in 1841 and William Pringle in 1851.

Newstead (new-steed, -sted) n. village about a mile east of Melrose, which is the site of a large Roman fort, also called Trimontium, and houses the Trimontium Museum. An iron meteorite was found here in 1827 (sometimes 'Newsteads'; the origin of the name is probably just Old English for 'the new place' and is first recorded about 1540).

Newstead (new-steed, -sted) n. cottage to the south of the road through Old Castleton, near Byreholm.

Newton (new'-, ni'-in) n. farm on the A7 on the Heights just to the north of Hawick, usually known as the Nitton. This is essentially the same place known as 'Chamberlain Newton' from early times. The 'Chamberlain' probably comes from Walter Berkeley, an owner in the late 12th century who was Chamberlain of Scotland to William the Lion. The 'new' part of the name thus comes from even earlier than this! The grant of the lands to Berkeley by William the Lion was some time in the period 1173–82. The lands later passed to the Grundy family, who probably gave their name to Groundistone. Robert Grundy 'de Neuton' swore fealty to Edward I in 1296. There were Scotts of Newton recorded in the 16th to 18th centuries. Cottars living there in 1694 were Hector Shiel, John Taylor and Janet Brown. William Lamb was living there in 1688. Thomas Nichol was recorded there in 1721, Robert Scott in 1722, William Scott in at least 1727–39, John Cook in 1731, John Scott in 1733, Walter of Newton in 1738 and William Hood in 1741. The estate of Walter Scott of Newton was valued at £238 in the 1740s. Robert Smith was farmer there in the 1760s. George Haliburton is recorded as farmer there in 1797 and James Reid was a labourer there at the same time. The owner recorded in 1811 was William Irvine, when it was valued at £238. John Oliver was a retired farmer there in 1841 and Janet Irvine farmed 383 acres there in 1851. Walter Scott was farmer in the 1860s (the name probably derives from Old English 'niwa tun', meaning 'the new farm'; it was 'Neutun' in the 1170s, and was also sometimes 'Neutoun', 'Newtoun' or 'Newtone'; see also Chamberlain Newton).

Newton (new'-, ni'-in) n. former farm in the Slitrig valley just to the west of Stobs. Newton Cottage is still marked on the Ordnance Surveys map. Newton Hill to the south-west has some settlements on it. In 1622 the lands of Over and Nether Swinstead were among those sold by Robert Elliot of Redheugh to Gilbert Eliott of Stobs; they were described as 'commonly called the lands of Hilend Barnes and Newtoun', suggesting that Newton was once part of Swinstead. James Best, John Hislop and Adam Hislop were there in 1694. William Scott and John Beattie and George Pott were there in the early 1700s. For a few years until 1779 it was farmed (along with Whitehillbrae) by James Sibbald, who later became a publisher in Edinburgh. In 1779 it was valued (along with Whitehillbrae) at £455 7s 4d, being an extensive farm on the Eliott of Stobs estate. John Riddell was farmer there in at least 1786–89 and George Riddell was also there in 1787. William Cochrane was there in 1791–94. Francis Aitkin is recorded as farmer there in 1797, James Aitkin in 1799 and Andrew Kerr in 1801. Along with Whitehillbrae it was still valued at about £450 in 1813 (marked 'Newtoun' on Blaeu's 1654 map, it is 'Neutoun' in 1694).

Newton (new'-in) n. hamlet and farm on the right bank of the Teviot, on the A698 about midway between Denholm and Cleikum Inn, part of the Parish of Bedrule. The lands were granted by William, Earl of Douglas, to Thomas 'Restinoth' in the mid-14th century. It was referred to as the 'ten pound' land in the 16th century when owned by Grahamslaw of Newton. Adam Grahamslaw had sasine for the lands in 1504. Adam Grahamslaw of Newton had a charter for the lands in 1531 and John Grahamslaw sold them to Robert Kerr of Ancrum and Woodhead (who married his daughter Helen) in 1586. The 'procuratory of resignation' of 1531 records the names of the 16 tenants on the lands at that time. It was listed among the farms burned by the Earl of Hertford's men in 1545. There was a feud between the Grahamslaws of Little Newton and Turnbulls in Rulewater in the early years of the 17th century. This resulted in the 1601 death of 6 Grahamslaw brothers, probably all sons of John Grahmslaw of Newton. The farm at that time belonged to Robert Kerr and his wife Helen Grahamslaw, sister of the murdered men. The Kerrs of Newton held the lands through the 17th century. When inherited by William Kerr of Newton in 1639 the mill was described as recently built and the lands were valued at 12 pounds, 6 shillings and 40 pence. The Laird of Newton's lands, including the mill, were valued at £853 6s 8d in 1643, 1663 and 1678. It was listed among the 'principal Houses on Tiot' in 1649. The farms of the Laird of Newton featured prominently in the Hearth Tax list for Bedrule Parish at the end of the 17th century. The neighbouring farm of Stirkrigg was incorporated into it, around the end of the 18th century. Adam Chisholme of Newton is recorded in 1690. There was a small school here from at least the end of the 17th century to the middle of the 18th; Margaret Lillico taught in at least 1691–1701 and Helen 'Blaik' in 1732. John Borthwick was tenant there until about 1698. Residents in 1726 included Anna Miller (and her son), Bessie Clerk and Agnes Cessford. Mrs. Helen Chisholme is recorded paying the tax for 17 windows there in 1748 and Dr. Andrew Wilson was taxed for 16 windows in 1753. The farm was bought by Thomas Elliot Ogilvie in about the mid-1780s and sold by William Ogilvie of Chesters to Thomas Scott of Peel in 1833. Peter Brown was tenant there in the late 18th century. George Hislop and John Chisholme were servants there in 1797. Blacksmith Thomas Dodds and ploughman Robert Rutherford were there in at least 1799–1801. Other residents in 1799 included John Adamson and servant John Laidlaw. Servant John Rutherford and servant William Forsyth were there in 1801. There were no signs of the former peel house by the end of the 18th century, although 'beautiful avenues of venerable trees' remained. The farm once had a corn or threshing mill, which at the end of the 18th century was 'scarcely discernible' because of floods. There was later a saw mill there, powered through a mill pond to the south. The mansion house was demolished sometime before 1845 and a new house built. The Robson-Scott family lived here from the mid-19th century and it was inherited from them by a cousin, Robert Lang. The farm was sold in 1982, with the 1100 acres being broken up. The former tower house here is marked by a stony mound in a field between the main part of Newton farm and the A698. A 'perforated stone macehead' found here is in Hawick Museum, as well as 2 other worked stones, one hemispherical and one conical, and also a 13th century bronze skillet, which was ploughed up in 1964. The Laird of these lands (probably Kerr) is referred to in a version of the ballad 'Raid of the Redeswire' – 'Gude Ederstane was not to lack, Wi' Kirktoun, Newtoun, noblemen' (the name derives simply from the Old English for 'new farm'; it is 'Newtoun' in 1531, 'Nutone' in 1548/9, 'Newtoun de Baddralle' in 1586, 'Nuttoun' in 1642 and 'Newtoun' in 1643; it is 'Neutoun' on Pont's c.1590 manuscript map, 'Newtoun' on Gordon's c.1650 map and 'Neutoun' on Blaeu's 1654 map).

Newton (new'-in) n. Alexander (15th C.) recorded as 'Alexandrum de Newtoune' in 1426 when he was on the inquest for inheritance of the lands of Eilrig, along with many other local men. In 1429/30 he was on the 'retour' panel for the lands of Caverton. Probably the same man was among the witnesses for the transfer of Heap from the Langlands' to the Scotts, carried out at St. Mary's in Hawick in 1431. He may have married a daughter of Henry Wardlaw of Wilton, who was also sister of Bishop Henry Wardlaw; if so, he had sons Alexander and George, who are recorded as nephews of the Bishop. Alexander (b.1398/9) probably son of Alexander and a daughter of Henry Wardlaw, 2nd Baron of Wilton. In 1418 he was recorded as nephew of Bishop Henry Wardlaw; he was aged 19 and there was a request for a benefice for him, 'even if it be lay patronage'. He graduated B.A. from St. Andrews in 1418 and was a Licentiate there in 1420. He served as university Rector at St. Andrews in 1427. Alexander (15th/16th C.) Vicar of Hawick, listed as first witness to the sasine giving the Barony of Hawick to James Douglas of Drumlanrig in 1514. He was recorded there as 'Alexandro Newton vicario de Hawik', immediately followed by 'Roberto Luderdaill cappellano'. So he was clearly the 'Vicar' (presumably meaning he held the vicarge teinds), with 'Luderdaill' being an additional Chaplain of some sort. He was probably replaced by William Cunningham, recorded as Parson in 1519/20. Archibald of that Ilk (15th C.) Sheriff-Depute of Selkirkshire. His grandmother may have been from the family of Wardlaw of Wilton. He was on a 'retour' panel in 1446/7 for Ker of Altonburn. He was also a member of the 1456 panel that acquitted Andrew Ker of Altonburn of helping the English burn lands around Jedburgh. He was mentioned in the Exchequer Rolls of 1455 in relation to the Barony of Cessford. In 1463 he was 'Archibald of Newtoun of Dalcobe' when he retoured Archibald Douglas, 5th Earl of Angus, as heir to his father. He was also a member of the panel that decided on the disputed lands of Kirkton Mains and the Flex in 1464/5; he is recorded there as 'Archbald Neuton of that ilke'. Fenwick (19th C.) draper from Falstone in Northumberland, in business with his brother Robert. He sold his wares from a travelling cart, being a frequent visitor to Liddesdale before the era of the motor car. He can be seen as an old man with his horse and cart in a photograph from 1890. George (14th/15th) recorded in the early 1400s as nephew of Henry Wardlaw, Bishop of St.

Andrews, and brother of Alexander. He mother was thus presumably a Wardlaw of Wilton. In 1427 he witnessed a document for Henry Wardlaw of Spott. He served as Dean of Arts at the young St. Andrews University in 1437 and was also Rector of Nevay. George (d.c.1500) probably tenant at Synton. He was killed along with George Cavers during a raid on Synton, when 180 cows, 20 horses and other goods were stolen by David Scott, called 'Lady', tenant in Stirches. Scott had a remission for these crimes in 1502. James (15th C.) Rector of Bedrule, recorded in 1468 in a document for the Homes of that Ilk. He is also recorded as Rector of 'Bothrule' (i.e. Bedrule) in 1479 in connection with an altar to St. Kentigern (or St. Mungo) dedicated in Jedburgh Kirk (i.e. the Abbey) to which he allowed '10 merks' from annual rent of 2 tenements in Jedburgh. Presumably the same man was witness to a document in 1478 outlining rights of David Scott of Branxholme within Selkirk; he is referred to there as 'dean of Tevadale'. Probably the same man is also recorded as Dean of Teviotdale in 1488/9 in a document where the priest of Hassendean renounces fees to the Abbot of Melrose. He was still Rector of Bedrule and 'commissario Thevidalie' in 1492/3 when he witnessed the confirmation of Rutherford and Wells to James Rutherford. James of Dalcove (15th/16th C.) probably son of Archibald, who he succeeded in 1481. He is referred to as 'of Dalcow' in 1487 when he sold the lands of Boonraw to Robert, son of Walter Scott of Headshaw. In 1494 he was on the panel for the inheritance of Synton by Alexander Erskine; he was listed as 'Jacobum Newtoun de Dawcofe'. In 1503 he presented John Wilson as suitor for his lands of Cessford Mains at the Justice-aire. In 1504/5 probably the same James 'of Dalcoif' had a letter of 'procuratory' to his superior, Patrick Earl of Bothwell, to sell the lands of Boonraw from David Hoppringle, Walter Scott of Howpasley, George Hepburn and William Middlemas to Robert Scott of Stirches. In 1505 he was mentioned as former owner of Boonraw in a charter to Robert Scott of Stirches. He was probably succeeded by another James of Dalcove. The family also owned lands at Newton in Lauderdale. James (15th/16th C.) apparently tenant of Synton when Adam Turnbull of Hornshole was accused of stealing 200 cows and 80 horses there in 1502. He also acted as surety for Turnbull in his remission for several crimes. He could have been the same man as James of Dalcove. Janet (15th/16th C.) wife of Adam Ker in 'St. Helen's Shaw'. In 1537 she had the tenants of James Ker of Mersington and others removed from her lands of Dalcove, Newton and Cessford Mains. She is also recorded in 1539/40 as 'lady of Dalcoif' (i.e. Dalcove). Along with her (presumably second) husband Adam Ker, she had to give up the non-entries of lands in Town Yetholm to Gilbert Ker of Primside and his mother Marion Pringle. As heiress of Dalcove (in Berwickshire) she inherited the lands in 1539 and resigned them to her son Thomas Ker in 1543. Nichol (19th C.) married Elizabeth Rutherford in 1840, the marriage recorded in both Hawick and Wilton Parishes. Thomas (15th C.) recorded in 1494/5 as 'frater vicarius de Selkirk', i.e. brother of the Vicar of Selkirk. He was fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire. Thomas (b.c.1780s) coachman at Borthwickbrae. His name appears on the Militia ballot list for Roberton Parish in 1812. He is absent from the rectified list, suggesting he had moved or become too old (formerly spelled 'Newtoun', 'Newtoune', etc.).

Newton Don (new'-in-don) n. mansion near Nenthorn, north-west of Kelso, built 1817–20 by Robert Smirke in neo-classical style for Sir Alexander Don, 6th Baronet. The original landscaping and furnishings were quite elaborate. The estate was much diminished to pay off Sir Alexander's debts and the rest sold in 1847 to Charles Balfour. The estate was connected with the Norman family of Morvile, then Newtons, Hepburns, Kers and others, before being acquired by Alexander Don in the mid-17th century, the name then changing to Newton Don.

Newtongrange (new'-in-grānj) n. coal-mining town on the A7 towards Edinburgh, and former station on the Waverley Line.

Newtonhaugh (new'-in-hawch) n. former name for lands in Bedrule Parish, presumably a flat piece of land between Newton and the Teviot. It is recorded in 1666 that Thomas Rutherford was served heir to these lands, which had belonged to his father, John of Knowesouth.

Newton Hill (new'-in-hil) n. small hill between Stobs and Barnes Loch, being the north-eastern spur of White Knowe. There are the remains of two ancient settlements there. The western one measured about 100 m by 50 m and contains signs of at least 11 hut circles. However, it has been disturbed when the ground was used for military training. The eastern site is about 60 m by 40 m and is a fortified settlelement, with some interior hut circles, and is still quite well preserved. There are also 2 linear earthworks crossing near the summit, from south-east to north-west. Alexander Michie first described these, suggesting a boundary connection with Gibby's Cleuch; it is unclear how old they are, or whether they represent separate phases of construction over an extended period.

Newton Hill (new'-in-hil) n. small hill near the farm of Newton in Bedrule Parish. It was also the name for a piece of land that was part of Newton in Bedrule Parish, according to the Land Tax Rolls of 1811.

Newton Mains (new-tin-mānz) n. former farmstead adjacent to Newton farm in Wilton Parish. William Elliot and his family lived there in 1841, while the Lintons were there in 1851 (also written 'Newtonmains').

Newton Mill (new-tin-mil) n. former mill in Bedrule Parish, associated with the lands of Newton. This was once a corn mill, which at the end of the 18th century was 'scarcely discernible' because of floods. It was later the location for a saw mill, powered through a mill pond to the south. The mill was among the lands held by the Laird of Newton in 1643, valued at £133 6s 8d and was owned by Thomas Ogilvie of Chesters in 1788.

Newton Moor (new-tin-moor) n. former name for the moor near Newton in Bedrule Parish. In about 1795 it is recorded that the minister of Bedrule had the right to cast 2 'darg of turf annually' here.

Newton Muir (new-tin-mewr) n. former farmstead in Wilton Parish, probably on Groundistone Heights. Agricultural labourer Thomas Hume and family were there in 1841, and it was abandoned in the 1850s.

Newton Pond (new-tin-pond) n. pond to the south of Newton farm in Bedrule Parish. It was formerly used to drive a threshing mill on the farm. Another pond to the southwest is labelled 'Newton Pond' on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map, and is now 'Monks Pond' on maps. There was once a tradition that it was originally built as a fish pond by the monks of Jedburgh Abbey. The 1837 article in the New Statistical Account suggests it was fed by the Lady's Well, but this seems to be confounding the pond with the Ladies' Well much further down the Ruecastle Burn, near Knowesouth.

Newton Toor (new'-in-toor) n. former tower near Ruecastle in Bedrule parish, burned by Hertford's men in 1545. This is presumably an early version of the house at Newton.

Newton Wud (new'-in-wud) n. name for wood near Newton in Bedrule Parish, recorded in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls.

Newtoon (new-toon) n. another name for Newtown St. Boswells.

Newtown Mill (new-town-mil) n. name for Newmill in the 16th century (also 'Newtonne Milne' and other variants; this may be the 'Newtoun' marked on de Wit's c.1680 map of Scotland, although that geography is confused and the one above Stobs may also be meant).

Newtown St. Boswells (new-town-sin'-bozulz) n. town situated on the Bowden Burn, and dating from at least 1654 (so not so new!). It really developed as a railway town on the Waverley Line and as a market centre close to St. Boswells' Green. The modern Roxburghshire County Council offices were built here in 1966–68. From 1975–1996 this was the administrative centre for the Borders Regional Council, and is now the centre for the Scottish Borders Council. Population (1991) 1,108.

New Whitfield (new-whi'-feeld) n. name given to the modern farm of Whitfield in Wilton Parish. It is marked 'New Whitefield' on the 1764 map of Wilton Common, with 'Old Whitefield' further to the west.

New Woll (new-wol) n. farm south-west of the original Woll. It is marked on Ainslie's 1773 map, and so has been 'new' for a while now. The house is now part of the golf course, and is rentable as self-catering accommodation. Francis Scott was tenant there in 1731, William Fowler was there in 1788 and John Sprot was there at the end of the 18th century. In 1799 Alexander Harper was farmer there, while William Glendinning, John McKain and John Wilson were labourers. In 1801 the residents included Alexander, Francis and John Harper, as well as James Glendinning. George Thorburn was there in 1803. The Brown family purchased the estate in 2001 (it is 'New Wooll' in 1731, 'Newwool' in 1788 and 'New Wool' in 1799).

the New Yairds (thu-new-yārdz) n. name used in Denholm for the plots of lands feued around the Green after being augmented in 1836. These comprised the original 8¾ acres of the 'auld yairds', plus the new approximately 6 acres, split among 60 people. Some feues were subdivided, and 2 were appropriated for the school and schoolmaster's house and to the road to Hassendean.

New Year (new-yeer) n. a sum of money given to children at the New Year, or a drink offered to a visitor at the beginning of the year – '... But this time aw'll shake ee quite rigid Aw wad like ma New Year tae be tei' [AY] (cf. the older the New Eer and also cf. common ridin).

neyr (nār) adj., arch. near, espcially applied to kinship – 'The said Arche Armstrang is my neyr cowsein, and my wyfis brother sone' [SB1587] (cf. ner).

nez (nez) n., poet. the nose – 'But aye he helde his face asyde; And aye his nez did squeeze ...' [JTe] (used jocularly).

Ng (ing) n. Irene from Singapore, in 2015 she moved to Hassendeanburn with her husband Gordon Berry. She worked as a journalist and was a member of the Singapore Parliament. She wrote 'The Singapore Lion'. Her Japanese garden at Hassendeanburn was featured on the BBC programme 'Gardeners' World'.

-ni (ni, nu, na) adv. not, generally as part of a contraction, such as 'canni', 'hevni', 'wunni' (this is -nae in much of the rest of Scotland, and sometimes spelled that way locally, even when the ni pronunciation is usually meant; H.S. Riddell uses '-na').

nibbie (ni-bee) n., arch. a walking stick or shepherd's crook, usually made from a natural branch – 'Gin I get haud o' my nibbie, I'se reesle your riggin for ye' [JoJ], 'Ane wi' his nibbie cleeks a lass, An' makes her o'erlins tum'le' [JoHa], 'Two or three shepherds had to leave their places and use their nibbies unmercifully ...' [RJR], '... an' the auld brute struck the puir naturel wi' his nibbie, and sic a crack' [JEDM], 'A've ma bigcoat an ma nibbie an a guid perr o tacketty shuin, so it mae rain at, for ochts A care!' [ECS], '... marching in front of the Saxhorn Band, waving his 'nibbie' like a pipe-major' [JTu], '... and I'd nothing to do but grab a nibbie or loup on a bike and see them for myself' [DH].

nibbie-stick (ni-bee-stik) n., arch. a walking stick, particularly one with a hooked head, a shepherd's crook – 'I'll rax me doun my nibbie stick ...' [WL], 'Now, a nibbie-stick's no' juist another name for a walkin'-stick ...' [DH], 'A kind o ice hockey yaisin nibbie sticks was also played' [IWL].

nibble (ni-bul) v., arch. to fidget, fiddle with the fingers, n., arch. a bargain, stroke of luck – '... an A gien um a thripny-bit. Sic a nibble for um!' [ECS], 'Look sic a nibble A've gotten!' [ECS].

nibody (nib-dee, ni-bo-dee) n. nobody – 'nibody kens where they er ony mair' (note that the 'o' tends not to be pronounced; cf. naebody).

nichbour (nich-bur) n., arch. neighbour, fellow townsman – '... either in his nichbour's corn, meadow, or haynit gers, sal pay for ilk hors or meir 40 shillings ...' [BR1640], '... with power to his said nichbour that aught the ground whereupon it standis, to cast downe the said dyck, and tak it away' [BR1640].

nichbourheid (nich-bur-heed) n., arch. neighbourhood – 'Item, that ilk nichbour big his heid room dyck yeirlie, for uphawlding of nichbourheid with uthers ...' [BR1640].

Nichol (ni-kul, ni-kol) n. Adam (15th/16th C.) listed at the 1493 Justice-aire in Jedburgh when William Douglas of Cavers was fined for his non-appearance. He was most likely the 'Ade nichol in dennum' who was cited again at the Justice-aire in 1494/5. He may have been closely related to James in Denholm, who was also recorded in 1493 and 1494/5. Probably the same Adam was one of the bailies appointed by James Douglas of Cavers in 1512 in order to give sasine of the lands of Denholm to William Cranston; his name appears to be given as 'Ade Nicholo'. Adam (d.1626) resident of Cavers Parish. A headstone in the old kirkyard commemorates the death of him and his wife Margaret Smith on the same day. Adam (17th/18th C.) resident of Denholm on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. Perhaps the same resident of Denholm married Janet Turnbull in 1708. Their children included probably half of these: John (b.1708); Margaret (b.1708); Margaret (b.1710); James (b.1711); Bessie (b.1712); Jane (b.1714); Adam (b.1714); Andrew (b.1716); John (b.1716); William (b.1717); Adam (b.1719); Jane (b.1719); John (b.1721); Isabel (b.1724). Adam (18th C.) prehaps son of the earlier Adam. He was resident in Denholm in 1741 and 1742. His children, baptised in Cavers Parish, included: John (b.1741); and Robert (b.1742). Adam (18th/19th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Borthwickbrae Parkhead in 1793. He married Jane Scoon in Roberton in 1792 and their children included James (b.1793) and Beatrix (b.1796). Probably the same Adam was recorded as owner of a horse at Greenbank in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls.

Adam (b.1769/70) farmer at Tandlaw in Wilton Parish. He was already a widower by 1841. In 1851 he was farming 200 acres, with the farm being run by his son John. Adam (b.1800/1) born in Newcastleton, he lived in Roberton Parish. He was recorded as an agricultural labourer at Deanburnhaugh in 1841 and a shepherd at Milsington Shankfoot in 1851 and 1861. He married Betty Graham (from Cumberland) and their children included: Helen; Walter; Thomas; Andrew; Jane; James; and Robert. Adam (1818/19–70) mason in Newcastleton, son of John. His wife was Jessie Rutherford, who died in 1891, aged 71. They are buried at Ettleton. Adam (b.1825/6–78) son of Robert and Isabella Glendinning, he was born in Castleton Parish. He lived at Dryden with his parents and was shepherd at Pinglehole in 1861. He married Esther, daughter of William Hardie and Violet Douglas. Their children included: Violet (1859–1931), who married farmer William Steele; Isabella (1861–78); Christian (1864–89); Margaret (1865–1930), who married Michael Anderson Grieve; Elizabeth (1868–1937), who worked as a nurse; and Robert (1869–1937), draper who moved to Fulham. Agnes (17th C.) tenant at Binks in 1694 according to the Hearth Tax rolls. Alexander (18th C.) resident at Threephead in 1775 when his son Walter was baptised in Roberton Parish. Alexander (18th/19th C.) cooper who was listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls for Hawick. He married Mary Robson, and she died in 1787. Their children included: James (b.1777); Margaret (b.1773), baptised in Wilton; James (again, b.1785); and Jane (b.1785). He may also be the Alexander who married Margaret Gledstains in 1788. His son Walter died in 1801. He is probably also the cooper at Crumhaugh Hill whose wife died in 1824. Alexander Grieve (19th/20th C.) resident of Teviothead. In 1885 he married Agnes Purdom Scott, daughter of Robert Scott and Mary Purdom. Andrew (17th C.) tenant at Synton Mill, at the same time as Thomas. They are mentioned in a session record in Ashkirk in 1635, when there was a claim that Isabel Scott in Synton Mill had stolen money in a purse belonging to him, but he denied that this happened. Andrew (17th C.) tenant in Denholm. In 1684 he was charged at a court in Jedburgh with not attending his parish church for a year and fined a year's rental, corresponding to £78 Scots. Andrew (18th C.) farmer in Minto Parish. In 1780 he was listed as holding part of Minto Hills farm 'in tack', the other part being held by Thomas Thomson. Andrew (18th C.) tenant in Blackhall. In 1758 he was among parishioners in Hobkirk Parish who were asked to provide broom for thatching the roof of the kirk. Andrew (18th/19th C.) cooper at Crumhaughhill. On a list of local volunteers in 1803 he was listed as being above age but willing to serve. Andrew (b.c.1770s) servant at Hudshouse according to the ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1799. Andrew (19th C.) farmer at Trow Knowes. He had a house built at Myreslawgreen in about 1879. Charles (b.1818/9) from Perth, he was a plasterer in Wilton. In Slater's 1852 directory he was listed on Wilton Path. In 1851 he is recorded as a master plasterer on Ladylaw Place, employing 8 men. His wife was Isabella and their children included Isabella and Christian. Christian (17th/18th C.) mentioned in the Parish Records in the 1720s when she received poor relief. Specifically she 'let it run up 6 weeks for to buy some serks'. Christopher (19th/20th C.) grocery assistant in Hawick who was known for his efforts at poetry, much of it privately published in pamphlet form. He has been described as Hawick's answer to William McGonagal. An example of his verse is: 'We started off for Edinburgh By the twenty-past-ten train: When we got into the city It was pouring down with rain'. Elizabeth 'Betty' (d.1787) housekeeper for merchant William Oliver (i.e. 'Auld Cash'). She died in Hawick. Elizabeth (18th C.) cook at Branxholme in 1785, when she was working for Adam Ogilvie. Francis (18th C.) resident of Abbotrule Parish in 1724 when he married Margaret Wilson in Roberton Parish. Isobel (b.1726), baptised in Hobkirk Parish, may have been their daughter. Francis (18th C.) resident of Harwood Mill. His son John was baptised in Hobkirk Parish in 1738. He could be the Francis who married Margaret Rae in 1732 and whose other children included Thomas (b.1740). He may be the same man as the Francis who earlier married Margaret Wilson. Francis (b.c.1775) servant at Bellshiels according to the ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1799. He was either the Francis who was a servant at Flatt or the Francis who was a servant at Heughhead on the 1801 Militia ballot. He was also listed as a labourer at Tweedenbank among male heads of households in 1835–41 and as an agricultural labourer at Tweedenbank on the 1841 census. He is probably the Francis who married Elizabeth Telfer and had children including: Thomas (b.1800); Adam (b.1803); James (b.1805); Agnes

(b.1807); Helen (b.1809), who married John Armstrong; and Betty (b.1812). Francis (d.1868) carter in Liddesdale, probably son of John and Mary Ogilvie. He sold his goods in a roup to pay passage for him and his family to emigrate to Canada in 1833. They sailed to New York on the Annawan, then on to Westminsiter Township (now London, Ontario). He married Janet Nichol (1793–1866) and their children included Elizabeth (1821–23), John (1823–1910), Thomas (b.c.1825), Francis (1827–1907), Mary (1830–64), Jane (b.c.1832), Adam (1834–1920) and William (b.c.1837). He is buried in the family cemetery at Dingman Creek, Ontario. George (16th C.) recorded in the Exchequer Rolls of 1540 as the King's shepherd in Bellendean. He was paid £3 6s 8d for 5 bolls of grain. George (16th C.) recorded in the will of Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1574, when he was tenant farmer at Bellendean. He could be related to Simon and William who farmed at Buccleuch. George (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1648 his daughter Helen was baptised, who was conceived in fornication with Agnes 'Junck'. The witnesses were Thomas and James. Perhaps the same George married Helen Hislop and had children William (b.1650) and Jean (b.1652). George (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen Hislop. Their children included William (b.1650) and Jean (b.1652). The witnesses in 1652 were John Clerk and Adam Hislop (probably a relative of his wife). George (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Bessie Elliot and their children included James (b.1671), Bessie (b.1673) and William (b.1681). George (17th C.) resident at Sundhope in Castleton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. George (17th C.) resident at Hawick Shiel in 1694, according to the Hearth Tax rolls. He is probably the George, married to Bessie Elliot, whose children born in Hawick Parish included: James (b.1671); Bessie (b.1673); and William (b.1681). George (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Margaret Scott and their son John was baptised in 1754. Perhaps the same George also married Isabel and had a daughter Janet (b.1761). George (18th C.) married Isabel Hardie in Hawick in 1778. George (1765/6–1841) tenant farmer at Philhope, probably son of John, tenant in Craik. In 1841 he was recorded there with his wife, 4 children, a labourer and 2 female servants. In 1820 (late in life) in Roberton he married Ann Burnet, who died in 1879, aged 79. Their children included: John (1820–70), who died at Philhope; Isabella (b.1822); James (b.1823); and William (1826–1902), also died at Philhope. He is buried in Borthwick Waas and may have been son of John (1717/8–92), who is in the adjacent burial plot. George (18th/19th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. He was living at Over Tofts in 1800. He married Nanny Douglas and their children included: Margaret (b.1798), baptised in Crailing; and Agnes (b.1800), baptised in Kirkton. Perhaps the same George had children Christian (b.1793) and James (b.1796), baptised in Cavers Parish. George (18th/19th C.) shepherd in Waterside in Southdean Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. He was listed as a servant at Waterside on the 1801 Militia ballot. George (19th C.) married Margaret Scott in Wilton Parish in 1848. Their son Robert was baptised in Hawick Free Kirk in 1849. George 'Geordie' (1820/1–74) agricultural labourer in Southdean Parish, originally from Jedburgh. In 1851 he was at Wolflee and in 1861 was a 'Post Messenger' living at Wolfehopelee. He carried the post from Bonchester to Chesters, but gave up in 1873 due to ill-health. He married Mary McQueen, who was from Glenshiel, Their children included Sarah (b.1846/7), James (b.1848/9), Archibald (b.1851), Christina (b.1853), Isabella (b.1855/6) and Donald (b.1860). He died at the Causeyfoot. Helen (17th/18th C.) resident of Greenholm in Castleton Parish. In 1699 she was reported to the Session for blasphemy, specifically saying 'the Lord had broken His promise' for giving them such a bad harvest; she had to 'stand in sackcloth one day publicly upon the place of repentance'. Ian 'Moose', Cornet in 1984, he has also been 1514 Club President. His son Ross was Cornet in 2012. J. (18th/19th C.) hosier in Castleton. He subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. James (15th C.) listed at the 1493 Justice-aire in Jedburgh when William Douglas of Cavers was fined for his non-appearance. He was recorded being 'in dēnū', which probably meant Denholm. He may have been related to Adam, who was also listed in 1493. He was also cited at the Justice-aire in 1494/5. He may have been closely related to Adam in Denholm, who was also recorded in 1493 and 1494/5. James (16th/17th C.) resident of Hislop. In 1618 Walter Scott of Buccleuch complained that he had cut down 40 alder trees from his lands of Gorrenberry. He may be related to Patrick, who was at Lairhope at the same time. He was absolved of the crime, after denying it on oath. James (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Helen Anderson and their children included: Janet (b.1651); and James (b.1656). William (b.1653), son of James and Helen 'Paterson' was probably a child of the same couple. The witnesses in 1651 were William Anderson and Simon Nichol (who were probably related to him and his wife) and in 1656 were Walter and Robert Nichol. James (17th C.) leased the farm of Todshawhill in 1671. He may be the witness (along with Robert) for a baptism for James Richardson at Howcleuch in 1683. Perhaps the same James was resident of Broadhaugh on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His children included Walter (b.1703), Isabel (b.1715) and Thomas (b.1717), James (17th/18th C.) living at Easter Essenside in 1710 when his son James was baptised in Roberton Parish. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Turn in Kirkton Parish. His son Adam was baptised in 1720. James (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Chapelhill in 1732. His unnamed child was baptised in 1732. Other children included William (b.1730), Agnes (b.1734) and James (b.1735). He may be the James who married Margaret in 1729. James (1715/6–76) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Mary Scott, who died in 1776, aged 45. Their children included Elizabeth Mary (d.1776), Robert (d.1782) and Archibald (d.1779). He and his wife died at Shaws and are buried in Castleton. James (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Margaret Beattie and their children included James (b.1766). James 'Pistols' (d.1778) married Margaret Scott, who died in Hawick in 1778. Their children, baptised in Wilton Parish, included: Jane (b.1736); Mary (b.1740); and Thomas (b.1743). He died in 1778, a few months before his wife, with his nickname given in the Parish record. They could be the couple who were fined 30s by the Hawick Kirk Session for going to Maxton to get married. James (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Martha Hislop (or 'Hazelhop') and their daughter Janet was baptised in 1762. The witnesses were Robert Laidlaw in Falnash and James 'Collur'. James (18th C.) recorded at Outerside in 1762 when his son John was baptised and at Outerside in 1765 when his son George was baptised. He is probably different from the James recorded at Chapelhill in 1765. He may also have been father of Margaret (b.1758), who was baptised in Roberton. James (18th C.) recorded at Chapelhill in 1764 and 1765 when his son John and daughter Jean were baptised in Roberton Parish. He could be the James recorded at Highchesters in 1772 when his daughter Jean was baptised in Roberton Parish. He could be the James (d.1792) commemorated at Borthwick Waas. James (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His daughter Mary was baptised in 1761. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. In 1770 he is recorded living at Branxholme Woodfoot. He married Helen Turnbull in 1760. Their children, baptised in Wilton, included: Mary (b.1761); James (b.1763); and Helen (b.1770). The witnesses in 1770 were Thomas Scott and Andrew Turner. Perhaps the same James was listed at Muirside in Wilton Parish in 1791 when he paid the Cart Tax. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Wilton and Hawick Parishes. He married Christian Hart and their children included: Betty (b.1767), baptised in Wilton; and James (b.1772) and Janet (b.1775), baptised in Hawick. The wintesses in 1772 were James Murray and James Hart. James (18th/19th C.) married Euphan Grieve in Hawick Parish in 1786. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Elizabeth Renwick in 1787. James (b.c.1780) servant at Skelfhill according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Cavers Parish. James (b.c.1780s) ploughman at Woodburn recorded on the ballot for the Militia in Roberton Parish in 1812. He may have been related to John, who was at Woodburn Mill a little earlier. James (1791–1875) born in Lilliesleaf, son of John. He was an agricultural labourer in Roberton Parish. In 1841 and 1851 he was living with his family at Borthwickshiels Lodge, and in 1861 they were living at 4 Orrock Place. He married Elizabeth (1794–1881), daughter of John Cavers and Elizabeth Hislop; she died at Craik. Their children were: Elizabeth (b.1813); Janet (b.1815); Margaret (b.1817); Jane (1820–63), who married William Renwick and died in Hawick; Christian (b.1822); Joan (b.1824); John (b.1827); Barbara Pott (b.1829); Walter (b.1831); Williamina (or 'Mina', b.1833), who married George Nichol; and Jemima (b.1836). He died at 'Wheathaugh' and was buried at Borthwick Waas. His wife was probably the 'Mrs Nichol' who kept the outer door key for the Museum (on Orrock Place) in the 1860s. James (18th/19th C.) baker of Hawick, recorded as owner of a horse in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He also paid the dog tax in 1797. James (d.bef. 1841) resident of Castleton Parish. His widow and son Adam were living at about 14 North Hermitage Street in 184.

He married Janet Wells and their children included: Jean (b.1808); Thomas (b.1810); John (b.1812); James (b.1813); David (b.1816); Francis (b.1818); Helen (b.1820); Adam (b.1822); and Sarah (b.1826). James (1787/8–1866) carter in Newcastleton. In 1851 and 1861 he was at about 26 Langholm Street. He ran a cart to Langholm twice a week in the 1850s. His wife was Elizabeth (or 'Betty') Burnet from Hawick, who died in 1861, aged 73. Their children included: John (1809/10–16); William (1812–43), who married Janet Mitchellhill; James (1814–83), who married Jane Murray; Minnie (b.1816); John (b.1819); Thomas (b.1822); Janet (b.1825); Mary (b.1827); and Alexander (b.1830). He could be the labourer in Newcastleton recorded as head of household in 1835. James (b.c.1790) farmer on the Loan. He is recorded on the 1841 census at about No. 53, living with no family and 2 servants. James (b.c.1795) shoemaker in Newcastleton recorded in Pigot's 1837 directory. He was living at about 12 South Hermitage Street in 1841. James (19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. His widow and children were living at about 7 South Liddell Street in 1841 and were on the Round Close in Hawick in 1851. He married Susanna Elder and their children included: Walter (b.1827); Lillias (b.1828); James (b.1830); Andrew (b.1833); Robert (b.1835); and Peter (b.1836/7). James (b.1815/6) postman in Newcastleton in the 1860s. He took over from Jean Elliot, 'Lucie Lass'. He lived on South Hermitage Street. He made deliveries along the Liddel and Hermitage Waters on alternate days, going at least as far as Saughtree and Dinlees (with children attending the smaller schools being used to carry letters further afield). He was recorded as a labourer in 1851, living at about 3 Langholm Street. In 1861 he was 'Post Messenger' on South Hermitage Street. He married Jane (or 'Jean') Murray in 1843 and their children included Mina (b.1843) and Mary Ann (b.1845). James (d.1860s) farmer in Hawick. He married firstly Jean Michie (d.1838) and secondly Margaret Scott (d.1870). He died at the age of 75 and was buried in St. Mary's kirkyard. James (19th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He married Margaret Murray and their daughter Jemima was baptised in 1850. James 'Jamie' (d.1903) devoted supporter of the Saxhorn Band for almost 40 years. Although he had no musical ability himself he carried the music chest, which he described as playing the 'Tin Box'. He worked for over 30 years in Elliot's stocking-shop – 'Eppy Sootie and Wullie Pairk, Geordie the Buck and Higgins Phill, Jamie Nichol the Hawick band clairk, The Duddy Laird and Shallow Bill' [HI]. Janetus (19th C.) carter in Castleton. In 1832 he acknowlegded that he was father of Betty Paisley's child. His forename seems unusual. John (16th/17th C.) described as 'Johne Nicoll in Craikhoip' in 1622 and 1623 when he was cautioner for Will Ellot in Huntlaw. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Murray and their son Simon was baptised in 1650. Thomas (b.1642), with no mother's name given, may also have been his child. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Malie Grieve and their children included: Margaret (b.1671); and an unnamed child (b.1676). John (17th C.) resident of Denholm on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. Either he is listed twice or there were 2 men with the same name at that time. John (17th C.) resident of Spittal-on-Rule on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. John (17th C.) listed as cottar at Whitfield in Wilton Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He must surely related to Robert, who was also listed there. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His children included Rachel (b.1701) and Mary (b.1703). John (17th/18th C.) resident in Alemoor in 1712 when his son Walter was baptised in Roberton Parish. Other children who could be his include James (b.1705), Janet (b.1705), Thomas (b.1714) and Bessie (b.1714); however, there are probably 2 families here. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1709 he was servant to Robert Thomson in Newmill and was also recorded in Newmill in 1710. He married Margaret Scott in Hawick in 1708 and their children included: Robert (b.1709); and James (b.1710). The witnesses in 1709 were Walter Nixon, tenant in Hawick Shiel and merchant Walter Oliver, and in 1710 were Robert Thomson (tenant in Newmill) and John Dryden. It is possible he is the same John who was later at Allanhaugh Mill. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He was living at Lairhope in 1705 and was herd there in 1711. He married Esther Armstrong in Hawick in 1704 and their children included Janet (b.1705) and James (b.1711). The witnesses in 1711 were 'the two James Grieves tenants in Commonside' (and hence the child may have been named after them). John (17th/18th C.) resident in Branxholme Town in 1717 when his son Walter was baptised in Roberton Parish. It is unclear why the baptism did not happen in Hawick, but 3 other baptisms of people from Branxholme Town happened on the same day. He may be the John who maried Bessie Wilson in Hawick in 1708 and whose children, baptised in Hawick, included John (b.1711) and Bessie (b.1723). John (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Parkhill in 1717 and 1727. His children included Janet (b.1717) and Andrew (b.1727). Perhaps the same John was at Mabonlaw in 1723. He may be the John in Eilrig who in 1716 in Hawick Parish married Blench, daughter of James Scott, herd in Falnash. John (17th/18th C.) resident in Commonbrae in 1720. He married Janet Nichol and their children, baptised in Hawick, included: Margaret (b.1720); Janet (b.1724). The witnesses were John Chisholme, preacher at Caerlenrig and Robert Scott, tenant in Falnash. John (17th/18th C.) tenant in Allanhaugh Mill. He was recorded in 1718 as both 'workman in Allanhaugh miln' and 'servant in Newbigging', when one of his children was baptised in Hawick. He may be the John whose children baptised in Hawick Parish included William (b.1716) and Walter (b.1718). The witnesses in 1718 were James Davidson and Walter Scott, both tenants in Newbigging. His son William was created a Burgess of Hawick in 1737, suggesting that this may be when he reached the age of majority (consistent with birth in 1716). Perhaps the same John was recorded as 'workman in Crumhaugh' in 1722; he married Janet Rae and their children included Agnes (b.1720) and Janet (b.1722). The witnesses in 1722 were students John and Robert Cunningham. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Denholm. His daughter Janet was baptised in Cavers in 1722. Several other children, baptised in Cavers around the same time, may be his, e.g. John (b.1721), Janet (b.1722), Adam (b.1725), John (b.1727) and Helen (b.1728). John (18th C.) resident at Priesthaugh in 1726 and 1728. His children, baptised in Cavers Parish, include: Janet (b.1726); and Margaret (b.1728). Perhaps the same John was in Brugh in 1733 when his son William was baptised in Cavers Parish. John (18th C.) servant in Hawick. Along with ex-Bailie Walter Graham he witnessed a baptism for carrier George Richardson in Hawick in 1741. He may have been a servant of Bailie Graham. John (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Eilrig in 1735 when his son John was baptised. John (1717/8–92) tenant in Craik. He married Elizabeth Scott, who died in 1815, aged 88. Their children included: William (1759/60–1807), 2nd son; John (1762–87), 3rd son; twins Betty and Margaret (b.1764); George (b.1766), probably the farmer at Philhope; and Margaret (again, b.1768). He could be the John whose daughter Margaret died in Hawick in 1781. His daughter Elizabeth may have married Adam Scott (from Ettrick) in 1795. He may be the James who hired the Hawick mortcloth in 1760. John (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His daughter Isabel was baptised in 1741. John (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His son James was baptised in 1761. John (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish who married Margaret Inglis. Their children included: Margaret (b.1761); and John (b.1764). Mary (b.1763), with no mother's name given, may also be his child. John (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He married Mary Dickson in 1761 and their son John was born in 1762. He may be the same man as the father of George (b.1764), who lived at Broadlee. He was clearly separate from the contemporary John who lived at Craik. John (18th C.) barber and candlemaker in Hawick. In 1756 he married Mary Turnbull and she died in Hawick in 1787. Their children included: Robert (b.1757); and Michael (b.1760). The 1757 baptism was witnessed by Bailie Robert Howison and tobacconist William (who was surely a relation). John (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish who married Elspeth Little. Their children included: Mary (b.1769); Elspeth (b.1772); and Janet (b.1774); and John (b.1783). Perhaps the same John, married to 'Elizabeth Riddle' had children Margaret (b.1779) and Elizabeth (b.1781). John (18th C.) baker in Hawick. It is said that when coming back to Hawick from Kelso with a neighbour, they decided to have a race to reach the toll-bar at Spittal-on-Rule. His horse could not take the bend and leaped over the parapet of the Rule Water bridge there. However, since the river was in flood they both escaped injury and he was rescued by the miller, to continue on his journey later the same day. An inscription 'J.N. and his Horse's leap' was carved on the bridge. John (18th C.) married Grizel Graham in Castleton Parish in 1765. Their children included: Catherine (b.1766); and Janet (b.1769). John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1768 his child John with Elizabeth Noble was baptised, the couple being labelled as 'Fornicators' and the witnesses being shoemaker Robert Elliot and smith Robert Young. However, the same couple's proclamation of marriage was recorded in 1767. John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Mary Nichol and their children included Jane (b.1770) and Walter (b.1775). John (1746/7–1819) weaver in Newcastleton. He married Mary Ogilvie, who died in 1795, aged 45. Their children included: Alexander, who died aged 12; John Little, who died in infancy; John (1790/1–1817); and Walter (1798/9–1818). The family are buried in Ettleton Cemetery. Francis (d.1868), who emigrated to Canada, may also have been his son. John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Jane Ormiston and their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1779. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Betty Jackson and their children included: Janet (b.1784); David (b.1788); William (b.1790); Robert (b.1792); James (b.1795); John (b.1797); Helen (b.1799); Isabel (b.1802); and Betty (b.1806). John (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Elizabeth Thomson and their children included: James (b.1793); Robert (b.1795); Archibald (b.1797); Mary (b.1800); John (b.1802); Andrew (b.1804); and Walter (b.1806). John (1762–1839) son of John, he was baptised in Roberton Parish. He was shepherd at Broadmeadows. In 1792 he was living at Meadshaw. In Roberton Parish in 1790 he married Janet Brydon, who was from Ettrick Parish; she died in 1798, aged 30. Their children included: Isobel (b.1791); and John (b.1792). He died at Todshawhill and is buried at Borthwick Waas, along with his wife and mother Mary Dixon (1731/2–1807). He is probably the John, son of John, baptised in Roberton Parish in 1762. John (1764/5–1842) tenant at 'Carretrigg' (i.e. Carewoodrig). He married Jane Jardine, who died at Eweshopelee in 1851, aged 70. Their children included: Walter (1804/5–30); and Elizabeth (1812/3–28). They are buried at Ettleton. He was probably son of John and Margaret Ingles, who are buried alongside his family. John (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Janet Anderson and their children included: Margaret (b.1790); Jean (b.1792); William (b.1794); and Janet (b.1797). John (18th/19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. His children included: James (1791–1875), farm worker in Roberton Parish; an unnamed daughter (b.1792); and Christian (b.1794). He is probably the John (1761/2–1828), tenant in Whinfield, who is buried at Borthwick Waas (adjacent to James, who was hence likely to be his son). He could be the John son of Walter and Betty Stoddart baptised in Hawick in 1761. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as farmer at Woodburn Mill, when he owned 2 horses. He was living at Woodburn in 1800. He married Janet Cessford and their children included: John (b.1796); Betty (b.1798); William (b.1800); George (b.1802); and Janet (b.1805). John (b.c.1765) from England, he was a boot and shoe maker in Newcastleton. He was listed in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. In 1841 he was living with labourer Walter (probably his son) in the village. He may be the John who subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. John (18th/19th C.) recorded as 'Junior' mason at Whinfield in 1797 on a list of men on the ballot to serve in the Militia. He may have been son of John, who was farmer at Whinfield. John (1775/6–1867) from Kirkandrews, he was a mason in Newcastleton. He is probably the mason in Newcastleton listed in 1797 among men balloted to serve in the Militia. In 1799 he was in Blackburnfoot among those 'in the Ballot Box 1797 not drawn still residing in the parish of Castletoun' and he was still listed at Blackburnfoot on the 1801 Militia ballot. He is recorded by Pigot in 1825/6 and 1837 as a Newcastleton mason, as well as in Slater's 1852 directory. He and William Crozier were the masons who worked on the Holm Bridge. In at least 1841–61 he was on North Hermitage Street. He married Marion Murray, who died in 1868, aged 87. Their children included: Mary (b.1804); Nancy (b.1808); Robert (b.1810); Jean (b.1812); John (1814–78), who married Mary Dodd; James; Adam (1818–70) mason in Newcastleton; Thomas; and Margaret. He is buried at Ettleton along with some of his family. John (18th/19th C.) carter in Castleton Parish. He was listed as 'John, jun. carter, Castleton' when he subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821; this suggests that his father was also John. He may be closely related to James, who was also a carter in Newcastleton at about the same time. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Margaret Armstrong and their children included: Mary (b.1804); Alexander (b.1808); Jean (b.1810); and Nattey (b.1811). John (b.1792/3) born in Roberton Parish, he was shepherd at Billhope in Castleton Parish in 1841. In 1851 he was shepherd at Blackhall in Ewesdale and he was listed as a cadger and carrier at Raesknowe in 1861. He married Margaret Hobkirk, who was born in Ashkirk Parish. His children included: John (1818–83), baptised in Roberton; and Thomas (1826/7–46). His 2 sons are buried in Borthwick Waas. John (1801/2–89) feuar in Newcastleton Townfoot. In 1861 he was living at about 34 South Hermitage

Street. He was probably the John who was on the Border Union Railway Committee for Newcastleton in the 1850s, and recorded as Newcastleton Town Clerk in the 1860s. He married Mary Elliot, who died in 1879, aged 71. Their children included: Janet (b.1829); Helen (b.1831); Jane (b.1833); Margaret (b.1835); Mary (b.1839); Elizabeth D. (b.1842); John (1845–1904), who died at Leeds; Agnes (b.1847); and Wilhelmina ('Mina', 1850/1–1926), who married a Tait and is buried at Ponteland. He and his wife kept a family register for the period 1802–54. John Pringle (1804–59) born at Huntly Hill, near Brechin, eldest of 7 children of John, farmer from Northumberland, and Jane Forbes from Aberdeenshire. He studied Mathematics and Physics at King's College, Aberdeen, trained as a minister at St. Mary's College (St. Andrews), but then turned to education. His first teaching job was at Duns. He came to Hawick in the early 1820s to teach in a school for practical education. He was master of the English (i.e. Parish) School from 1821 until the end of 1823. Here he was apparently inspired to follow an interest in astronomy by millwright Gideon Scott, and they watched a transit of Mercury in a garden at Allars Bank (probably in 1832, so he must have returned to Hawick specially for the event). After he left Hawick he become editor of the 'Fife Herald', Headmaster of Cupar Academy and Rector of Montrose Academy, before becoming Regius Professor of Astronomy at Glasgow University in 1836. He was listed in Cupar in 1825 when he subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick'. He regularly gave lectures on astronomy, chemistry and geology. In 1831 he married Jane Tullis (1809–50), daughter of a Cupar printer. Their eldest child John, became a Professor and writer and their youngest, Agnes, married William Jack, Professor of Mathematics at Glasgow. In 1853 he secondly married the prominent anti-slavery campaigner and reformer Elizabeth Pease, against the objections of her friends and Quaker family. He was a lifelong radical in politics, arguing for universal education. He was asked to stand as a Liberal candidate for Glasgow, and the Hungarian patriot Louis Kosuth stayed with him when he toured Britain. Although he published only 2 scientific papers (both on the Moon), he lectured extensively and published many popular books. He wrote the influential 'Views of the architecture of the heavens: in a series of letters to a lady' (1839) and 'Cyclopædia of the Physical Sciences' (1857), among other works. He was an inspiring teacher and gave popular public lectures, even travelling to the U.S.A., where he apparently influenced Edgar Allen Poe. He also returned to Hawick after decades to give a popular lecture on Astronomy and was effusive in his praise for his former friend and inspiration, Gideon Scott. He popularised the 'nebular hypothesis' for the formation of the Solar System in books such as 'Phenomena and order of the solar system' (1838), and was the first to suggest a photographic study of sunspots. He is buried in the Grange cemetery, Edinburgh. There is a commemorative window to him at Bute Hall in Glasgow. John (b.1805/6) born in Roberton Parish, son of Adam, he was farmer at Tandlaw. In 1841 and 1851 he was helping his father at Tandlaw. In 1861 he was tenant at Tandlaw, farming 200 acres and employing 5 people. He was unmarried, but living with a housekeeper and 2 servants. Perhaps the same John was farmer at Coldhouse, listed among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1835. John (b.1814/5) mason in Newcastleton, son of John. In 1861 he was living on North Hermitage Street. His wife was Mary and their children included James, Margaret, John and Marion. He may be the John who married Mary Dodd in 1854. John (b.1815/6) born in Ewesdale, he was shepherd at Ewesleeshope. His wife was Mary and their children included John. In 1851 he was also living with his mother Jane. John (1818–83) baptised in Roberton Parish, son of John who was shepherd at Billhope. In 1841 he was living with his parents at Billhope. In 1851 he was shepherd at Priesthaughshiel (and recorded being born in Ashkirk Parish). In 1861 he was shepherd at Braidhaugh south of Hawick. In 1841 he married Mary Stavert (the marriage being recorded in Hawick and Castleton Parishes), who died in Hawick in 1888, aged 67. Their children included Christina, Margaret, Marion, Thomas, Janet, Isabella, Thomas (again, b.1856), Eliza (b.1858) and Mina (b.1862). He and his wife are buried in Borthwick Waas. John (19th C.) resident of Hawick who married Mary Oliver. Their son William Oliver was baptised in 1849. John (b.1819/20) born in Roberton Parish, son of George. In 1861 he was farmer at Philhope, farming about 1900 acres and employing 4 people. He was unmarried at that time, living with his mother Ann and 3 servants. John (b.c.1820) carter and farmer in Newcastleton. In 1851 and 1861 he was living on Montague Street. In 1850 he married Helen (or Ellen) Ogilvie from Hawick. Their children included Mark, James, John and Margaret. John (19th C.) married Janet Elliot, their daughter Margaret being baptised in Castleton Parish in 1847. John (19th C.) married Janet Oliver in Castleton Parish in 1841. John (19th C.) Sergeant in the Hawick Police. In 1865 he gave evidence at the court case for the robbery of the Museum. John (1827–81) born in Hawick, son of William. He started as a journeyman warehouseman, becoming a master skinner and tanner. He ran what was probably the town's most successful tanning and wool merchants, succeeding to the business of Andrew Ewen in Slitrig Crescent. In 1851 he was living with his mother at 56 High Street; he may have been partner in what is listed in Slater's 1852 directory as 'Nichael & Scott', tanners and skinners of Punch Bowl Close. In 1861 he was at 1 Slitrig crescent and listed as a skinner employing 12 people. He was also a farmer. In 1867 he became a Life Member of the Archæological Society. He entered the Council in 1867 for Slitrig Ward and was elected a Magistrate in 1869, then became Provost 1871–74. During his Provostship Commercial Road was developed and there was the stockingmaker's strike of 1872/3. He was presented with some inscribed silver plate on his retirement, and returned to the Council in 1878/9. He was a keen Common Riding supporter, chairing the Race Committee, and being a Steward at the Races. He was also Chairman of the first School Board of Hawick, as well as being a local curler and bowler. He married Janet W. Scott (one of the 'Whack' Scotts), who died in 1855, aged 24. He later married Annie, daughter of butcher George Davies. Their children were William Scott (who became Provost), John, Margaret Scott (who married solicitor James Barrie), and 2 children who died in infancy. A portrait of him hangs in the Town Hall and he is buried in Wellogate Cemetery. John Scott (19th/20th C.) son of Provost John and brother to Provost William Scott. He worked in the hosiery business in Leicester, joined London Scottish as a private, rose to commissioned rank and was awarded the Military Cross for leading his men in a bayonet charge at Mons. He probably married Florence Crane from Leicester. Leslie (20th C.) resident of Singdean. In 1949 he was fined after his bicycle collided with a motorbike! He lived to the age of 92. Margaret (17th C.) servant to Walter Scott of West Port. In 1690 she was prosecuted for enabling Helen Moore to steal meal from her master. Both women were ordained 'to be keip in prisson to ly in stockes during the baylyea's will and pleasour ... and to stand at ye crosse upon the publicke marcatt-day wt ane pocke of meale each of them about their necks for ane hour's time'. Margaret (b.1794/5) draper in Newcastleton, recorded in Pigot's 1837 directory and Slater's 1852 directory. In 1851 and 1861 she was on Stopford Street, already a widow. She had sons John and William. Mark (19th C.) third official Common Riding singer of Hogg's 'Teribus'. Patrick (16th C.) recorded in Philhope in 1579 when he witnessed the transfer of Rough-hope and Philhope from John Turnbull to Martin Elliot. Patrick (16th/17th C.) resident of Lairhope. In 1618 Walter Scott of Buccleuch complained that he had cut down '2 grite geist [joist] treis' from his lands of Gorrenberry. He may be related to James, who was at Hislop at the same time. He was ordered by the Privy Council to pay the Laird of Buccleuch £10. Patrick (17th C.) recorded in a deed of 1634 as Schoolmaster at Lilliesleaf. He is the first teacher on record there. It is possible that the same Patrick was witness in 1651 in Ashkirk Parish. Patrick (17th C.) resident at Roan in Castleton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. Robert (15th C.) resident of Hartwood. In 1494/5 Walter Rutherford in Phaup was allowed to compone for several crimes, including stealing sheep from him and John Fletcher. Robert (d.1699) resident of the Teviothead area whose gravestone is there. His wife Bessie died in 1701. The names of James Nichol and Marian Scott, also engraved on the same stone, are probably his parents (assuming that they survived him). Robert (17th C.) listed as resident at Whitfield in Wilton Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. John, who was also listed as a cottar there, was surely a relative. Robert (17th/18th C.) married Blanch Borthwick in 1703, both being from Hawick Parish. Robert (17th/18th C.) recorded at Outerside in 1712 when his son Thomas was baptised in Roberton Parish. James (b.1714) may also have been his child. Robert (17th/18th C.) workman in Weensland, probably originally from Wilton. It seems possible that he was son of William in Boonraw. In 1718 in Wilton he married Janet Paterson; she may be the Janet (b.1787), daughter of Francis Paterson. Their children included: William (b.1719), baptised in Wilton; and Francis (b.1722), John (b.1724) and Isabel (b.1726), baptised in Hawick. The witnesses in 1722 were Richard Scott of Boghall and Robert Scott, tenant in Newton, and in 1726 were Henry Orrock and Dand Gray. Robert (17th/18th C.) Schoolmaster in Kirkton Parish in at least the period 1716–24. Probably the same Robert was recorded as teacher at a private school at Hallrule in 1726. Perhaps the same man was recorded as Schoolmaster in Abbotrule Parish in 1751. He could be the Robert recorded being married in Kirkton Parish in 1731, with no bride's name given. Robert (17th/18th C.) tenant in Bowanhill in Cavers Parish. He was 'in Bowenhill' in 1714 when he married Anne Douglas, nurse to Rev. Robert Cunningham of Hawick. He was still at Bowanhill in 1726 when one of his children was baptised. He was described as tenant in Bowanhill in 1720 when he married Isobel, daughter to the deceased Robert Thomson; this appears to have been his second marriage. Their children likely included Robert (b.1724), James (b.1726) and James (again, b.1732). Robert (18th C.) married Agnes Longmuir in Roberton in 1733. Robert (18th/19th C.) married Janet Graham in Roberton in 1798. Robert (18th/19th C.) farmer at Philhope according to the 1789–97 Horse Tax Rolls. He was owner of 1 farm horse and 1 saddle horse at Philhope in 1797. He also paid tax for having 3 non-working dogs in 1797. He may have been father of the Robert who was a labourer at Philhope in 1812. Robert (1774/5–1852) born in Yarrow, he was an agricultural labourer at Deanburnhaugh. He married Catherine (or 'Ketty') Wilson (1781/2–1853). Their children included: Jane (b.1806); and Robert (b.1809). He and his wife were recorded at Deanburnhaugh in 1841 and 1851 (by which time he was a 'Pauper'. They are buried at Borthwick Waas. Robert (b.c.1770s) servant at Woll Rig according to the 1799 ballot for the Militia in Ashkirk Parish. Robert (b.c.1770s) servant at Orchard according to the 1799 and 1801 ballot for the Militia in Cavers Parish. Robert (b.c.1780s) labourer at Philhope according to the ballot for the Militia in Roberton Parish in 1812. He could have been related to the Robert who was farmer at Philhope in the 1790s. Robert (18th/19th C.) married Mary Hall and had a son Robert (b.1807) baptised in East Bank Kirk. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Ovenshank in Castleton Parish. He subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. Robert (b.c.1790) stocking maker in Denholm recorded on Pigot's 1837 directory. In 1841 he was living around the Canongate. He married Agnes Turnbull in Cavers in 1815 and their children included: Betsy (b.1816); Andrew (b.1818); Catherine (b.1822); William (b.1824); Jean (b.1826/7); Nanny (b.1828/9); Robert (b.1831/2); Helen (b.1833/4); and Mary (b.1836/7). Robert (1793/4–1854) from Castleton Parish, he was a shepherd at Dryden. He is recorded at Dryden in 1841 and 1851. He married Isabella Glendinning (1788/9–1852). Their children included: Adam; Janet; and George (b.1832), baptised in East Bank Kirk. His family are buried at Teviothead. Robert (19th C.) married Janet Lunn in Roberton in 1830. Robert (b.c.1810) carter in Newcastleton. The family were at about 30 North Hermitage Street in 1851 and 1861. His wife was Betty and their children included: Jane; Mary; Jessie; Helen; John; Betty; Agnes; Walter; Margaret; and Rubina. He is probably the Robert who married Elizabeth Scott in Castleton in 1842. Robert (19th C.) married Helen Haldane in Lilliesleaf in 1846. Robert 'Bobby the Drummer' (1832/3–1920) son of Elliot, he was a weaver in Newcastleton, like his father. In early life he also worked as a drover, and knew the old roads well, from the Highlands to the Midlands. His nickname came from playing drums in the village band. In 1861 the family were living at about 23 South Hermitage Street. He was the last person in Newcastleton to work the hand-loom, which he had in the back of his house at 12 South Hermitage Street; he wove his last plaid in 1913. Robert (b.1831/2) hosier in Denholm in the 1860s. In 1861 he was listed at about Sunnyside as a 'wool frame knitter'. His wife was Christian and their children included Agnes and Betsy. Robert (1858–1911) housepainter in Hawick, son of William and Betsy Clerk. He married Margaret Wilson in Hawick in 1876; she was daughter of George Wilson and Helen Scott. Robert J. 'Bert' (??–??) founder of R.J. Nichol coach business in 1932. His children were: Bert, who continued the family business; Jessie; and Effie, who died young after an accident. Robert 'Bert' (1921–2008) son of Bert, he was born in Lothian Street. He was known as a swimmer in his youth and had a life-long love of rugby, particularly the Linden (which he captained); he also played a few games for Hawick R.F.C. He volunteered for the R.A.F. in WWII, returning to run his father's business until 1990, driving coaches to rural areas around Hawick, as well as trips further afield. For decades the firm brought schoolchildren from outlying villages to Hawick High School. He married Jean Douglas. In 1955 tragedy struck, when 2 of their children, Robert and Sheena drowned in the Cauld. He also had children Douglas and Dorothy. Ronald Andrew 'Ronnie' (1960–2015) rugby player and leader of the Drums and Fifes. Son of Bill and Lydia and brother of Phil, Ian and Lindsay, he was educated at Wilton and Hawick High School and worked as a plasterer and builder. A keen rugby player at school, he went on to play prop forward over 200 times for the Linden and was a regular for the Greens in the 1980s and 1990s, playing 180 games. He also represented the South of Scotland and was capped for the Scotland 'B' team in 1985. A great supporter of the Common Riding, he was a member of the Drums and Fifes for 39 years, including being leader for 20 years. He also served as Chairman of the Common Riding Committee 2007–10, as well as President of the Callants' Club and 1514 Club. He married Lynn Frost in 1981 and they had a son, also Ronnie. Known affectionately as 'Big Ronnie', the nickname applied to the size of his heart as much as to the stature of the man himself. A tree and ornamental tree-guard were unveiled in his memory on the Kirk Wynd in 2016. Simon (16th C.) tenant of the lands of Buccleuch in 1574, recorded in the last testament of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme. William was also listed as tenant there, and they were probably both related to George, who was tenant at Bellendean. Simon 'Syme' (16th/17th C.) tenant of 'Fairnyleis' recorded in 1623. Michael Birnie in the same place was found guilty of stealing 30 sheep from there, belonging to him and his son William, along with Walter Scott of Todrig and his son Walter Scott. It is unclear if these lands were Fernielees in Rulewater, or somewhere else. Simon (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. His son Patrick was baptised in 1653. Probably the same Simon is recorded in 1651 when he witnessed baptisms in Ashkirk for William Glen and for James (perhaps a relative). Simon (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Chapelhill in 1721 and Highchesters in 1725. His children, baptised in Robert, included: Francis (b.1721); and Francis (again, b.1725). Thomas (17th C.) tenant in Synton Mill. He was mentioned in a session record in Ashkirk in 1635, when Isobel Scott (also in Synton Mill) complained about Margaret Tullie calling her a witch and a thief, and there was a claim that Scott had stolen money from a purse belonging to Andrew (who was surely related to him). Perhaps the same Thomas witnessed a baptism in 1660 for James Scott (with the other witness being John Scott of Langhope). He could be the Thomas who married Bessie Allan in Ashkirk in 1650. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Malie Telfer and their children included William (b.1680). The witnesses in 1680 were John Scott in Ormiston and John Aitken. Thomas (17th C.) tenant in Peelbraehope according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Thomas (17th C.) listed as resident at Outerside on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at Newton in 1721. He married Janet Nichol in 1704 and their children included: Helen (b.1717); Mary (b.1719); and John and Robert (b.1721). He could be the Thomas whose daughter Margaret was baptised in 1710. Other children of his were probably William (b.1704), Janet (b.1707), Esther (b.1711), Isobel (b.1713) and Jean (b.1715). Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was living at Buccleuch Shiels in 1720, Howcleuch in 1722, Deanburnhaugh in 1725 and Bellendean in 1728. His children included: John (b.1720); Francis (b.1722); Jean (b.1725); and Robert (b.1728). Thomas (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Mabonlaw in 1766. He married Betty Sinton in 1765, the marriage recorded in both Roberton and Wilton Parishes. Their children included Alison (b.1766). Thomas (18th C.) married Nelly Ballantyne in Castleton in 1771. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He was at about 16 Douglas Square in 1851 and on North Hermitage Street in 1861. He could be the same as the baker recorded on Douglas Square in the 1860s. He married Julia Mitchellhill, who died in 1888, aged 63. Their children included: Margaret; Robert; Mary (1855/6–97); William; and Thomas (1863/4–98), who died at Portobello. In later life he lived at Brieryhill Cottage, where he died. He is buried in Ettleton Cemetery. Thomas (b.1820/1) carter on North Hermitage Street in 1851. He married Jane Kyle and their children included Helen (b.1848) and Mary. Walter (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Bessie Hislop and their son James was baptised in 1654. The witnesses were George Dickson and James (who was probably related). Walter (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1656 he (along with Robert) witnessed a baptism for James (who was surely related). He may be the Walter who married Malie Nichol and whose children included Bessie (b.1650) and Walter (b.1653). He might also be the Walter who married Helen 'Bleck' and had children Jean (b.1661) and Francis (b.1662). The witnesses in 1661 were George Walker and James Vogan. Walter (17th C.) resident at Northhouse according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Walter (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. His children included Marion (b.1705) and Blanch (b.1706). Walter (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Howcleuch in 1718 and 1721. Probably the same Walter was at Eilrig in 1732 when his daughter Margaret was baptised. Children, baptised in Roberton, who may be his include William (b.1715), Walter (b.1718), Margaret (b.1719), Agnes (b.1721) and Walter (b.1723). Walter (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. His children included Janet (b.1744), Mary (b.1746), John (b.1748) and Robert (b.1750). Walter (18th C.) resident in Earlside in 1726 when his son Thomas was baptised in Cavers. Walter (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Bessie Scott and their son Robert was baptised in 1729. Walter (18th C.) resident in Ormiston in 1730 and Deanbrae in 1733. His children included: Magdalen (b.1730) and Margaret (b.1733). Other children (baptised in Cavers) who may have been his included Thomas (b.1726), Mary (b.1735), Walter (b.1738), William (b.1740), John (b.1743), Adam (b.1745) and Alexander (b.1747). Walter (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Helen Dodds and their son William was baptised in 1750. Walter (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Bessie Stoddart and their son John was baptised in 1761. Walter (18th C.) resident in Todrig Mill in 1763 when his son Robert was baptised in Roberton Parish. Walter (18th/19th C.) wright in Hawick. He married Betty Wilson, who died in 1819. Their children included: Margaret (b.1770); Walter (b.1772); Jane (b.1772); Jane (again, b.1775); Margaret (again, b.1776); Betty (b.1777); an unnamed son (b.1779); Joan (b.1780); Mary (b.1783); and John (b.1783). He may have been witness to a baptism in 1783 for Francis Cairns. Walter (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Jean Elliot and their son Elliot was baptised in 1797. Walter (18th/19th C.) dyer in Hawick in 1797 on the list of men balloted to serve in the Militia. In 1799 he was among those 'In the Ballot Box 1797 not drawn still residing in Hawick parish'. He may be the spinner of this name who was on the ballot in 1801. Walter (b.c.1770s) tanner in Hawick according to the 1799 ballot list for the Militia. He was still on the ballot in 1801. He could be either the Walter born in 1772 to Walter and Betty Wilson or the Walter born in 1775 to John and Mary Nichol. Walter (b.c.1770s) saddler in Hawick according to the 1799 ballot list for the Militia. Dr. Walter (1785–1858) son of William, he was born in Castleton Parish. His father was one of the first feuars to build in Newcastleton. He was the first mathematics teacher at Edinburgh High School. He is described by Thomas Carlyle, and in a letter from his sister Jane Carlyle. Walter (b.c.1805) resident of Newcastleton. His wife was Margaret and their children included Betty, Christian, Thomasina, Walter and Margaret. Walter (b.c.1805) resident of Newcastleton. His wife was Isabella and their children included Robert, John, Isabella, Betty and Mary. Shoemaker John (b.c.1765), living with him in 1841, may have been his father. Walter (1816/7–84) shepherd in Roberton Parish, born in Castleton. In 1871 he was shepherd at Broadlee. In 1840 he married Janet, daughter of John Muir (or Moore), who died at Branxholme Braes in 1888, aged 83. Their children included: Janet (1841/2–52), who died at Tushielaw; Robert (b.1843); John (1844/5–52), who also died at Tushielaw; and Walter (1847–1878), who died at Broadlee. The witnesses in 1735 were William Scott and Thomas Irvine and in 1737 were Thomas Scott and George Graham. William (18th C.) shepherd at Teindside in 1740. He married Janet Scott and their children included Helen (b.1740). He is probably the William who married Janet Scott in Wilton Parish in 1730. William (b.1742) may also have been his child. The witnesses in 1740 were Walter Scott at Commonside and Thomas Elliot at Harwood. William (18th C.) son of John, tenant in Allanhaugh Mill. He was admitted as a Burgess of Hawick in 1737. He could be the William born in Hawick Parish in 1716. William (18th C.) workman in Hawick Parish. He married Janet Turnbull and their daughter Janet was baptised in 1742. The witnesses were carrier James Wilson and shoemaker Thomas Scott. William (18th C.) merchant who purchased 23 High Street from Robert Scott in 1753, and is probably responsible for the 'All Was Others . . . ' plaque. He could be the William, tobacconist, who was Cornet in 1748. He is probably the tobacconist William who witnessed a baptism for John in 1757. He could be the William who married Janet Blaikie in Wilton Parish in 1756 and had children (baptised in Hawick), including: William (b.1758); James (b.1761); and Janet (b.1764). The witnesses in 1761 were Hector Blaikie (surely related to his wife) and John Knox and in 1764 were 'Mr John Laurie student' and Alexander Bunyan, officer (suggesting either that he was strongly involved with the Kirk, or that he could not find other witnesses). He could be the William who hired the Hawick Parish mortcloth in 1760. William (18th C.) recorded at Highchesters in 1763 when his daughter Ann was baptised in Roberton Parish. William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish, recorded at Langside in 1769. His children included Jean (b.1769), Nelly (b.1778), James (b.1784), Thomas (b.1784) and Margaret (b.1786). William (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Philhopeshiel in 1780 when his daughter Mary was baptised. William (18th C.) recorded as a carrier in Hawick in 1767 when he witnessed a baptism for shoemaker Thomas Waugh. He could be the same as one of the other Williams. William (18th C.) married Helen Rutherford in 1765, the marriage recorded in both Hawick and Hobkirk Parishes. William (d.c.1795) part of a Hawick family popularly known as 'Ernpistols'. He was presumably related to James, who died in 1778 and had the same nickname. It was said that he was originally a baker (or perhaps a tailor), who became bankrupt at the end of the 18th century and moved to London as a journeryman. It is said that when delivering bread there, a wealthy lady was struck by him, started up conversation, and offered to pay for a commission for him in the Navy. He is also said to have returned to Hawick on one occasion, when people marvelled at how he looked in uniform, and to have died later at the Nile. He is supposed to have been uncle of William Nichol, who was 'Willie Brewed a Peck o' Maut' in the song by Burns. It is possible he was the 'Pistols' whose daughter Manie died in Hawick in 1800. He could be the 'William Nichol Tailor – or iron pistols' whose death is recorded in Hawick in 1804. William 'Sweet William' (d.1798) Hawick man whose death is recorded in the Parish register. Note that a separate William, husband of Isabel Brown, was recorded dying in the same month. William (18th C.) married Betty Hardie in 1780, the marriage recorded in both Hawick and Cavers Parishes. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isobel Brown in 1781 and she died in 1798. William (18th/19th C.) recorded as farmer at 'Gibsnose' (in Wilton) on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Probably the same William is listed at Pathhead when he paid the cart tax in 1790 and 1791. He is probably the William, recorded at 'Roadside' in 1791, who married Janet Elliot and had children Janet (b.1787) and William (b.1791). William (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He was one of the first feuars to build in Newcastleton. He married Mary Murray. Their children included: Jean (b.1782); Margaret (b.1784); Walter (b.1785), who became mathematics teacher at the Edinburgh High School; and Helen (b.1789). William (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1794 he married Betty 'Weems', also from Hawick. Their son John was baptised in 1795. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1796 he married Mina Laidlaw, also from Hawick. William (b.1770s) baker in Hawick. He is recorded in 1797 on the list of men on the ballot to serve in the Militia. In 1799 he was among those 'In the Ballot Box 1797 not drawn still residing in Hawick parish'. He may be the same as one of the other Williams. William (18th/19th C.) father of Provost John. He lived at 56 High Street. His premises are marked on Wood's 1824 map. His wife Mary was listed as 'Proprietor of houses' in 1851. His other children included Elizabeth (who married printer James Dalgleish) and Wilhelmina (who married Bailie John Briggs). William (18th/19th C.) stocking manufacturer in Denholm recorded in Pigot's 1837 directory. He was probably related to Robert, who was also listed as a stocking maker. William (1788/9–1838) weaver in Newcastleton. He married Margaret Nichol, who died in 1872, aged 78. Their children included: John (1832/3–1915), who married Margaret Beattie. They are buried in Ettleton Cemetery. William (b.1790/1) farm overseer at Thorlieshope in 1841 and 1851. His wife was Janet and their children included James and Mary. William (b.1791/2) from Wilton Parish, he was farmer at Newlands in Minto Parish. He was recorded there in 1841, 1851 and 1861, farming 200 acres. His wife was Beatrice and their children included William, Janet, Jane, Beatrix, Christian, Adam, James, John, Francis, Robert and George. William (1795/6–1870) farmer in Newcastleton. In 1851 he was a cattle dealer on Langholm Street and was still there in 1861, farming 12 acres. His first wife was Margaret Elliot, who died at Middlemoss in 1823, aged 26 (probably daughter of Thomas Elliot of Redheugh). He secondly married Agnes Nichol, who died in Newcastleton in 1893, aged 85. Their children included: Helen (1828/9–34); John (1829/30–61); William (b.c.1833); Jane (b.c.1837); Helen (again, 1841/2–1922); Esther; James (1844/5–1923); Ann (1846/7–49); Agnes (1848/9–60); and Robert (1854/6–1923). William (b.1802/3) from Eskdalemuir, he was shepherd at Skelfhillhope for most of his life. He was recorded there in 1841, 1851 and 1861 and was still there when Rev. Robert Young wrote about the Teviothead area in 1875. It was said that the local school was for a while held in the loft of his own small cottage. He married Jane Elliot (from Tundergarth) in Langholm in 1827. Their children were: John (b.1827/8); Michael (b.1830); James (b.1832); Mary (b.1834); William (b.1836); Betty (b.1839); Matthew (b.1841); Archibald (b.1842); Gideon (b.1844); Walter (b.1844); Jane (b.1847); Adam (b.1849); and Anne (b.1850). William (1812–43) son of carter James. He married Jean Mitchellhill in Castleton in 1839 and they had a daughter Mary. In 1841 he was living with his brother-in-law Andrew Mitchellhill on North Hermitage Street. William (b.1833/4) farmer in Newcastleton. In 1861 he was living on Langholm Street and recorded as farmer of 11 acres. His wife was Isabella and their children included Thomas and Agnes. William (b.1833/4) from Dunottar, Kincardine, he was recorded in 1861 as gamekeeper at Newlands Cottage in Castleton Parish. William (1837/8–1906) blacksmith in Newcastleton. He married Elizabeth ('Bessie') Davidson Nichol in 1873 and she died in 1898, aged 56. He secondly married Elizabeth Jane Scott, who died in 1955, aged 87. Their children included William (1874–8). They are buried at Ettleton. William Scott (1876–1932) oldest son of Provost John, he had early business training with Laing & Barrie, solicitors, then he worked in the offices of the Edinburgh Town Clerk. He also farmed at Acreknowe and Winnington Rig and later Girnwood in the Borthwick valley (which he inherited from his aunt Hannah Davies). He was secretary of the West Teviotdale Agricultural Society, involved in other agricultural activities and a Liberal in politics. He is probably the 'Mr. W.S. Nichol, Wilton Burn, Hawick' said in 1908 to possess the only known copy of the 1824 edition of James Hogg's 'Flodden Field'. He was councillor for Wilton Ward from 1923, and Provost 1928–31. He fought the changes brought about by the Local Governement Bill of 1929, but then became Vice-Convener of Roxburghshire County Council. He was also a keen Common Riding supporter, being Chairman of the General and Ceremonial Committees. In 1923 he married Marie Morris of London. He resigned from public life for health reasons, and died in an Edinburgh nursing home, his ashes being buried at Girnwood (formerly spelled 'Nicall', 'Niccol', 'Niccoll', 'Nichole', 'Nicol', 'Nicole', 'Nicoll', 'Nicholl', 'Nickel', 'Nickell', 'Nickoll', 'Nycholl', etc.).

Nichol's (ni-kulz, ni-kolz) n. former skinner and tanner, John Nichol. He succeeded to the business of Andrew Ewen in Slitrig Crescent. In 1871 he was employing 15 men.

Nichol's (ni-kulz, ni-kolz) n. former bus company, based in Hawick, run by Bert Nichol and his son (also Bert) from 1932–89. Their bus depot was in Noble Street. They operated a regular country service around the Hawick area, as well as bussing pupils every school-day to Hawick from Newcastleton, Teviothead, Roberton and Bonchester. The company also ran tours and trips to Blackpool, Morecambe, Scarborough, Great Yarmouth and Bailleiul. At its height in the early 1980s the business had 9 coaches and 7 full-time drivers. The company ceased operating in 1990.

Nichol's Bank (ni-kolz-bawngk) n. bank between the Liddel Water and the old railway line, just to the north of the remains of Liddel Castle.

Nichol's Close (ni-kolz-klōs) n. name of a close from the mid-19th century, location probably at 56 or 58 High Street.

Nichol's Croft (ni-kolz-kroft) n. former name for the area previously called Matthew Henderson's Croft and now called the Village. The name is referred to in a Hawick sasine of 1610. It was used through the 18th century, and still survived into the 19th. It is unknown who the 'Nichol' was who gave their name to the land.

Nicholson (ni-kul-sin) n. George (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Elizabeth Johnston and their children included Thomas (b.1794), Margaret (b.1796) and John (b.1799). The witnesses in 1799 were Schoolmaster James Kirk and Walter 'Freedom'. He may be the weaver recorded on the ballot list for the Militia in 1799; he was a weaver at Whisky Houses in 1801, along with John and James, who may have been his brothers. George (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isabel Scott and their son George was baptised in 1804. The witnesses were Mrs. Arkle and Robert Tinlin. His wife is probably the Isobel Scott who witnessed a couple of baptisms recorded just previously to that of her own child. The next recorded baptism was for a child of James Sanderson and Isabel Scott in 1811, which may have been a second marriage of his wife. It is possible he is the same George who earlier married Elizabeth Johnston. James (b.c.1780) weaver at Whisky Houses in 1801, according to the 1801 ballot list for the Militia. George and John were also listed and may have been his brothers. John (b.c.1780) weaver at Whisky Houses in 1801, according to the 1801 ballot list for the Militia. George and James were also listed and may have been his brothers. Robert (b.1817/8) frameworker in Hawick, originally from Dumfries. He married Margaret Haig and their children, baptised in Hawick Free Kirk, included: Christian Scott (b.1846); Agnes (b.1848); James (b.1849); Thomas Haig (b.1851); and Agnes (b.1853).

nicknames (nik-nāmz) n., pl. familiar names, sometimes shortened forms, and often descriptive in some way. At early times the only name would be what we would recognise today as a nickname, and many of these would give rise to later Christian names and surnames. However, later nicknames became almost a necessity, since so many people had the same surnames and Christian names. In 1839 the Hawick minister remarked on the particular local habit of 'distinguishing individuals by other than the names that properly belong to them', pointing out how the same names run in families, how the common usage of such nicknames sometimes meant that the real name might be unknown to their neighbours, and also pointing out that the names were even used in the register of deaths. William Norman Kennedy described the local propensity for nicknames in 1863: 'some of these names exhibit internal evidence of a personal peculiarity or defect, some arose from indulgence in a particular vice or the manifestation of a rare virtue, some from a social trait or a habitual phraseology . . . some were named after birds of evil omen, as well as forest animals of fierce and implacable nature. Some had an appellation descriptive of bodily agility or inferring a mental qualification . . . some being humorous, some sensual, and others indecent. On the other hand, many of these nicknames were titular, and took their rise from the place of abode of the party named'. There are nicknames recorded very early in the area around Hawick, including: 'Daft John' in 1491/2; 'Casy', 'Gaberlunzie', 'Gyde' and 'Tassy' in 1493; 'Blinnd John', 'Case', 'Corvus', 'Crackspear', 'King', 'Siders', 'Slitrig', 'Smith' and 'Young Rider' in 1494/5; 'Crackspear', 'the King' and 'Young Rider' in 1500; 'Bellit Robin', 'Blue John', 'Ginkin', 'the Lady', 'Nae Guid Priest', 'Park', 'Priest', 'Taburner', 'Vallance' and 'Waitschod' in 1502; 'Bellit Andrew', 'Casy', 'Gy' and 'Lang John' in 1503; 'the Prince' in 1510; 'Blackhead', 'Braid Christopher', 'Geordie Go Wi Him', 'Laird', 'Lang Roger', 'the Lawyer', 'Little Roger', 'Merchant', 'Nelly's Jock', 'Reid Andro', 'the Sheriff' and 'White Sark' in 1541; 'Helen's Hob' and 'Hob's John' in 1561; 'Elder Will' in 1561/2; 'Wait Aboot Um' and 'the Clerk' in 1562; 'Airchie Keen', 'Airchie's Will', 'Blue Tom', 'Clement's Hob', 'the Floor', 'Isonel's Robin', 'Mirk Hob' and 'Vicar's Rob' in 1567; 'Airchie Fyre the Braes', 'Airchie's Hob', 'Airchie's Will', 'Airchie the Piat', 'Cock's Clem', 'the Cowdais', 'David Carlin', 'Elder Will the Tod', 'the Feid', 'Gavin's Jock', 'Gret Legs', 'Grey Will', 'Hob Mirk', 'Hob the Lady', 'John the Braid' 'the Laird's Jock', 'Mark's Andro', 'Martin's Gib', 'Meggat's Ade', 'Mungo's Arthur', 'Ninian's Geordie', 'Part's Dand', 'the Porter of Ewes Doors', 'Reid

There are several early Cornets with cognomens, including the first recorded name, 'Laird' in 1703. Other examples from the 18th and 19th centuries include: 'White John' in 1701; 'Black John' and 'Pope' in 1704; 'Doctor' and 'Wester James' in 1705; 'Muckle Robin' in about 1705; 'Skail the Mercat' and 'Heidhoose' in 1706; 'Duke Aitken' and 'Black Walter' in 1707; 'Young Whitegates' in 1720; 'the Crocodile', 'Little Auld Nanny' and 'My Lord Minto' in 1776; 'Black Andrew', 'Blinnd Jean', 'the Chief' and 'Pistols' in 1778; 'Meldrum' and 'Rough Jock' in 1787; 'Helen and the Cuddy' in 1800; 'Wullie on the Wundi Sole' and 'Kill Drys' in 1805; 'Garlic Jock' in 1806; 'Craft' and 'Peggy Cheap' in 1811; and 'Forfar' and 'Pawkie' in 1815. Such names were once much more common than today, and a huge number of 19th century examples are collected in the poem 'Hawick Immortals'. It is important to realise that nicknames were typically employed with no offence meant or taken, and that they would most often be used to refer to a person in conversation, rather than to their face. Nicknames appear to be more common for males, but many local females examples are known. Many such names are handed down in families, often through the oldest son. Some of the names still in use today go back for several generations, and some may be even older.

nickstick (nik-stik) n., arch. a tally, specifically 'ti loss yin's nickstick' is to lose count or miscalculate something, especially the time of a birth – 'Nickstick bodie, one who proceeds exactly according to rule; as if he has had one to dine with him, he will not ask again without having a return in kind, Teviotdale' [JoJ].

Nisbet (niz-bi') n. small town off the A698 about 3 miles north-east of Jedburgh, and also a former station on the Jedburgh Railway of the Kelso Branch of the North British Railway. Here the Scots beat the English in a battle of 1355. Hertford's men razed 'Neyther Nesebett' and 'Over Nesbet' in 1545. There is little sign of the former parish church. Samuel Rutherford, Professor of Divinity was born here in 1600 (also written 'Nesbit' and other variants; the origin of the name is probably from Middle English 'nesebit', meaning 'the nose bit', after the local topgraphy; it first occurs about 1150 as 'Nesbet'; 'Nether Nisbet' and 'Ovir Nisbet' are marked on Gordon's c.1650 map; note that Nisbet House is near Duns).

Nisbet (niz-bi') n. Henry (b.1833) son of William and Margaret Young. He was listed as a tailor when he joined the Royal Artillery in 1852. He became a Chelsea Pensioner in 1873. James (1785–1854) religious publisher of London, who was father-in-law of Rev. W.A. Wallace. He was a native of Kelso, and one of the principal subscribers to the erection of Kelso North Church. His publishing company, James Nisbet & Co. published most of the books of R.M. Ballantyne, who was related to the Ballantynes of Kelso. He gave 2 flagons, 8 communion cups, 4 plates and a baptismal basin to the new Free Kirk in Hawick. The cups were in continual use until 1924 and the basin was later set in a carved font. John of Nisbetfield (17th/18th C.) lawyer, who was married to Agnes Riddell, and thus assumed the lands of Bewlie. He and John Riddell of Muselee were assigned a new loft in Lilliesleaf Kirk in 1707. He and his wife gave Bewlie (or perhaps half of it) to Walter Scott of Whitfield in 1713, since he had married their only daughter Agnes. Half of Bewlie was leased by him to Thomas Riddell in 1716. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Cogsmill in Kirkton Parish. His children included Ann (b.1721), Robert (b.1723), Janet (b.1726) and James (b.1729). Thomas (17th/18th C.) herd in Headshaw. He married Agnes Dalgleish and their children, baptised in Ashkirk Parish, included George (b.1715). W. (19th/20th C.) manufacturer of fermented ginger beer at 6 O'Connell Street. Walter (b.1824) son of William and Margaret, he was born in Hawick. He joined the 96th Regiment of Foot and was dismissed in 1865, thereafter being registered as a Chelsea Pensioner. Walter (19th C.) picture framer at Myreslawgreen. In 1854 he married Margaret (or 'Maggie'), daughter of George Dickson and Annie Affleck. Their children included: Robert, who worked at the Hawick Labour Exchange; and Margaret Young, who married Leonard Kersley, Hawick draper. Walter (1906/7–2010) born in Hawick, he served in the K.O.S.B. during WWII and then became a banker. He moved to Lanark in 1970, reorganising that town's banks, and becoming a councillor after retirement. He was also involved in developing New Lanark. William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Berryfell in 1733 when he married Beatrix Scott. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1791 he married Elizabeth Sharp, who was also from Hawick Parish. William (b.c.1795) resident of Hawick Parish, orginally from Crailing. In 1841, 1851 and 1861 he was a woollen frame-work knitter living at 4 Teviot Crescent. He married Margaret Young and their children included: Elizabeth (b.1817); Helen (b.1819); Christian (or Catherine, b.1821); William (b.1823); Robert (b.1824); Walter (b.1827); Beatrix (b.1829); Richard (b.1831); Henry (b.1833); James (b.1835); and Margaret (b.1837). He is probably the William who was one of the 6 elders of Hawick Parish who left in 1843 to form Hawick Free Kirk. He could be the same William who was one of the men in the vanguard of the Hawick band at the Carthaugh Baa in 1815, and whose recollections formed part of Robert Murray's 1863 article on James Hogg. William (1819–75) farmer from Sprouston, who moved to Hawick to become a butcher. He was one of the first Trustees of the Congregational (then Evangelical Union) Kirk, from 1848. In Slater's 1852 directory he was a flesher on Teviot Square. In 1851 he was already at 1 Buccleuch Street, listed as a master butcher, employing 2 men. 1 Buccleuch Street was at that time was 2 separate shops. He moved to 2 Howegate in 1864. He married Agnes Story (whose sister was mother of Walter Easton of the 'Jedburgh Gazette'), who died in 1883, aged 57. They had 3 sons, including William (b.1850, who succeeded to the butcher's business) and Robert. They also had 4 daughters, including Isabella Douglas (b.1848, who was the first wife of J.J. Vernon) and Margaret T. He is buried in Wellogate Cemetery. His wife died in Edinburgh in 1883. William (1850–1916) son of William, he followed his father into the butcher's business at 2 Howegate. He married Elizabeth, eldest child of farmer Walter Henderson. Their children were: Margaret Henderson, a teacher at St. Mary's Infant School; and William, a hosiery traveller in London (formerly written 'Nizbet').

Nitshiel Sike (ni'-shel-sīk) n. stream on the north side of the Borthwick valley, running past the cottage at Outerside in a roughly eastern direction. Outerside Rig is the hill between this stream and the Hoscote Burn. About half-way between Outerside and the Borthwick it has been suggested that a possible bridge mound could be related to the Roman road suggested to pass up the Borthwick valley.

the Nitton (thu-ni'-in) n. Newton, a farm at the Heights, just north of Hawick. It may have belonged to 'Robert Grundi de Neuton' in the late 13th century and was later referred to as 'Chamberlain Newton'. The original name came from it being granted to Walter de Berkeley, Chamberlain to William the Lion in the late 12th century. The lands were part of Hassendean Parish until that was suppressed in 1690. It was still listed as 'Newton, or Chamberlain Newton' in 1788 and 1811. There have been Scotts at the farm for many generations. William Graham was living there in 1799 and James Anderson in 1801 (sometimes spelled 'Ni'ton' and other variants; the name first occurs as 'Chambirlayne neutone' in 1259, as 'Neuton' in the late 13th century, and commonly as 'Chamberlain Newton' until the 17th century).

Nitton Muir (ni'-in-mewr) n. former farmstead near Newton, precise location uncertain, but presumably near the main road by the summit. The Hume family were living there in 1841. It was abandoned around the 1850s – 'She, wearied, wan the Nutton Muir, When, lo! she spied afore her, A great white ghaist was stan'in' there, Joost ready to devour her' [JoHa].

Niven (ni-vin) n. George (b.1792/3) from Liberton, he was a tanner in Hawick. He was living at about 2 Backdamgate in 1841, but in 1851 was with his nephew Walter Scott in Langholm. He was probably the first person in Hawick to receive a full baptism according to the new evangelical principles of what would become the Baptist Kirk. The baptism was performed by Rev. James Blair in the mill lade off Slitrig Crescent in 1844. His wife was Margaret and their children included Robert and William. James (18th/19th C.) recorded as tenant in Lilliesleaf in the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. Sally Cornet's Groom since 1983 (with a gap), performing these important duties for 35 Cornets. Thomas (18th/19th C.) carter in Byreholm in Castleton Parish. He was listed among heads of households in 1835 (also formerly 'Nevin').

Nivet (ni-vi') n. Henry (19th C.) married Helen Dryden in 1852. Their children (baptised in Hawick Parish) included: Helen (b.1855); Elizabeth (b.1869); and George (b.1871). He could be the ostler from Hawick who was living in Selkirk in 1851. Henry 'Harry', M.B.E. (??–) born in Hawick, he worked in the knitwear industry, then at the Henderson Tech., becoming Principal in 1975 and was awarded the M.B.E. in 1979. He was also involved with the Archæological Society, Harriers, Camera Club and other local societies. Samuel (b.1828/9) tailor in Hawick. In 1861 he was living at 30 High Street with his wife Janet and children Samuel and George. Also in 1861 he donated to the Museum and old coin found in a garden on the Cross Wynd (also sometimes written 'Evitt').

Nivison (ni-vee-sin) n. Alexander (18th C.) recorded in 1765 when he witnessed a baptism for Adam Leyden in Hawick. Rev. Alexander (1786–1861) 3rd son of Abraham, minister of Middlebie, he was educated at Edinburgh University and licensed by the Presbytery of Dalkeith in 1811. He became for a time a teacher of oriental languages, and had the opportunity to become a Chaplain in Calcutta, but preferred to stay at home, and so switched positions with James Brown. Thus he was presented to Roberton Parish in mid-1825 and ordained there in 1826. He was recorded at the Manse on the 1841 census, when his brothers Richard and William (both also ministers) were staying with him. He demitted in 1844, when he decided to give up being a minister, and he died in Edinburgh. He married Christina Thomson (d.1849) of Montrose and their children were: Elizabeth Broun (1826–1911), who married Dr. James Ogilvie, missionary in Calcutta, although another account suggests she married the same Rev. James Brown; Alexander (1828–61), who died in Melbourne; Abraham (1830–97) of Edinburgh; David Thomson (1834–67), who died in Calcutta; Christina (1835–51); and Euphemia Duncan (1838–1925), married William Stuart Sutherland of Edinburgh. He wrote a description of the Parish for the 'New Statistical Account' in 1834. John (18th C.) resident at Chapelhill in 1743 and 1752 when his children were baptised in Roberton Parish. His name appears to be written 'Nievieson' in 1743. His children included: Thomas (b.1743); Bessie (b.1746); and John (b.1752). He may be the John who was at Shielswood in 1765 when he was among the men selected to perambulate Wilton Common. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1690 he witnessed a baptism for Helen (who was surely related to him) and James Murray. Probably the same Thomas was herd in Langhope in 1697 when he married Bessie Murray, who was also from Ashkirk Parish. Their children included Janet (b.1702), John (b.1709) and William (b.1715). William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Earlside in 1727. His children included Agnes (b.1719) and John (b.1727) (also written 'Neavison', 'Nevison' and 'Nievison').

[PR1714], 'If ye tak it tae hert then ye'll nivver gang wrang' [WAP], 'This is nae place for a Border man to gaun aboot. Niver a brae to pech up ower Niver a view' [DH], 'It niver happened dinnae fear ye, Petition signed by ilka Teri' [MB], also used ironically – 'ee're never ready at last, ir ee?', 'never! A deh believe eet', used emphatically, not at all – ''Never sic a thing in oor heeds', he replied' [BCM1880] (note pronunciation; also spelled 'niver' and 'never' as in English).

nixin (niks-in) n., arch. a game in which gingerbread cakes are arranged on pieces of wood and the player pays to throw a stick, keeping any cakes that he knocks down (noted by J. Jamieson).

Nixon (nik-sin) n. Adam (16th C.) probably name of 'Eddy of Larestonburne', who is listed along with John in 1590. The and other Nixons were named in a complaint them by the tenant of Birdoswald about a raid made on his livestock in 1588. Agnes (18th C.) recorded in a disposition given in 1767 as being one of the cottars of Hawick Shiel who were responsible for making 'bakes' on the Common, in violation of the orders of the Hawick Town Council. Alexander (15th/16th C.) listed as being 'in the Brighous' in 1516 when a number of Nixons and other men of Liddesdale received remisison for their crimes. He may have been related to Henry in Larriston, William in Flicht and William in Steel. Alexander (16th C.) recorded as one of the tenants of Brighouse, along with 2 Williams, on the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale. He could be the same man as Alexander 'of Stelle' who is recorded (right after William, younger of Brighouse) on a 1544 list of Scotsmen who gave their support to the English King. Alexander (16th C.) recorded at Larriston in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was listed right after Quentin 'of Lawrellstane', and was probably also related to George, Jeffrey, John and Hector, who were also listed in the same place. Alexander (16th/17th C.) recorded as 'Ekkie Nixsoun in Dyk' in 1611, among Liddesdale men who failed to appear at court in Jedburgh. Andrew 'Dand' (16th C.) mentioned in an English letter of 1542 as 'Dond Nyxson, Scottes man afore sent to Edynbourgh' from whom news came of events in Scotland. It is unclear how he was related to other Nixons. Andrew 'Dand' (16th C.) recorded in 1581 as 'Dand Niksoun of Kewly'. He is listed along with many Armstrongs and Elliots of Liddesdale who complained to the Privy Council about crimes committed by the Scotts and their allies. His lands were probably those of Killoley, near Dinlabyre, and he was likely related to Hob, who was recorded being from there in 1590. Andrew 'Dandy' (16th C.) recorded as 'Dande Nixson' at Brighouse, right after Ringan in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was probably related to William, William, younger and George, who were also listed at Brighouse in 1544. Andrew (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Betty Potts and their daughter Betty was baptised in 1753. Archibald (15th C.) recorded in the proceedings for the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh in 1494/5. Hector Lauder, brother of the Laird of Todrig, has remission for several crimes, including bringing in him and Robert (suggesting they were closely related) to take part in raids, perhaps on Whitlawhouse. Archibald 'Airchie' (16th C.) recorded at the Steele in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He may be related to other Nixons at the Steele in 1544, Barth, Archie, Thomas and Alexander. He may be the 'Arschie Nixson' who, along with Ninian Armstrong, had a bond in 1548 to enter 2 Fosters as prisoners at Ferniehirst. Archibald 'Airchie' of the Steele (16th C.) signed the bond of assurance with the English Wardens in 1584, his name appearing along with Harry of the Steele and Edward of Dinlabyre. His name is recorded as 'Arche Nixson of the Steill'. Archibald 'Cowfowl' (16th C.) recorded as 'Arche Nixon Cowfowle' in 1590 when, along with Elliots of the Steele and others, he was accused of stealing cattle and horses from England. He was also named in a second accusation of 1590 along with Will Elliot of Heuchhouse, Clement Nixon 'Clash' and others. Also in 1590 he was listed along with several Elliots and Shiels, who in 1590 were accused of attacking the farm of Dotland a couple of years earlier. Additionally he was named in 1590 along with Clement 'the Clash', as well as Elliots, Shiels and others who were accused by the tenants of Woodhall of stealing from them. He could be the 'Arche Nickson' recorded in 1590, accused of being on a raid of Elliots, Nixons and others who raided into England in 1588. He was recorded in 1595 when the Lord of Gilsland complained about raids into England; he is listed there as 'Arch Nyckson alias Cowfowle', but it is unclear what his nickname might have meant. John of Larristonburn and Clement 'the Clash' are also listed and hence perhaps related. It is possible that he is the same man as Airchie of the Steele. Archibald (17th C.) resident at Little Park in Castleton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. Bartholomew (16th C.) listed as one of the tenants of the lands of 'Cleirlandis, Robsteid, Thomscotsteid, Cranswat, Gusbank, Hurklebuss' in the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale. He may be the same Bartholomew who was tenant of 'Stellis within the Dyk', listed first, along with Thomas and Jeffrey. He may also be the same Bartholomew who was tenant of 'Litlesteill' in the 1541 rental roll. He was 'Barte Nixson of Stelle' in 1544 when listed among Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII, and was probably related to the other Nixons listed there, namely Archie, Thomas and Alexander. 'Wille Nixon Barte son', also listed in 1544 may have been his son. Charles (18th/19th C.) son of Hawick manufacturer John. He was a solicitor in Nottingham and then Leeds. In 1849 he served as one of the executors for the estate of his brother John. Clement 'Clem' (16th C.) recorded as 'Clemme Niksoun in the Esscheis' in the register of the Privy Council in 1581. He was a servant and dependant of Robert Elliot of Redheugh, and had been taken prisoner by Lance Armstrong of Whithaugh, because Elliot had refused to make him answerable to the Warden for various crimes. In 1581/2 he was 'Clemme Niksoun, callit of the Hye Asches' when accused of leading a band who stole 6 cows from a farm at Huntly; his son John was also listed, and he is said to have sold one cow to a merchant from Jedburgh called Milligan, who confessed, and they were declared rebels. In 1587/8 he is 'Clemme of Hie Asshis' when his son John is recorded being held in ward (by the Laird of Anstruther) as part of an attempt to quell unrest on the Border; however, he 'eshaipit and eschewit' and his pledge was charged to appear before the Privy Council. It is unclear where 'the Ashes' was. Perhaps the same 'Clemy' was recorded among Nixons and Elliots complained about by the English Warden regarding a raid in 1588. Clement 'the Clash' (16th/17th C.) servant of William Elliot of Larriston. In 1590 he was named along with Archibald 'Cowfowle', as well as Elliots, Shiels and others, of stealing from the tenants of Woodhall; his nickname is recorded there as 'Cleshe'. He was further accused in 1590 among Elliots and others said to have stolen from the 'Hewrde' family, maiming and taking prisoner Christopher 'of the Whithall'; he is there 'Clemye Nixon the Clashe'. Also in 1590 he was 'Clemy Nixon 'the Clashe' ' on a list of Elliots, Croziers, Nixons and others accused of rieving from William Robson of 'Allerweshe'. In 1595 he was among Nixons and Elliots complained about by the Lord of Gilsland for a raid on 'Haslegyll'; he is there recorded as 'Clemett Nyxson alias the Clashe'. John, 'Gleed Larriston' was also listed as a servant of the Laird of Larriston, and so they may have been related. In 1595 he was also complained about for two other raids, along with Archie 'alias Cowfowle', John of Larristonburn, Jenkin and others. There is a further record of a complaint by the English against 'Clemmy the clashe' in 1597. His nickname may have referred to being a gossip. Clement 'Clem the Croon' (16th C.) listed among Border chiefs by Monipennie in his compilation published about 1594 (but compiled earlier). His name is given as 'Cleme Nikson, called the Crune' and in 1578 and 1580 as 'Clemme of the Crune'. His son Quentin is recorded in the 1570s and 1580s being a pledge held in ward to suppress lawnessness on the Border. Edward (16th C.) listed along with George as tenant of 'the Dyke' in Liddesdale in 1541. Both he and George are also recorded on a list of Nixons, Olivers, Croziers and others, who gave their support to the English Crown in 1544. Edward of Dinlabyre (17th C.) listed in 1579/80 among men accused of raiding into England. He is recorded as 'Eduarde Niksoun, Laird of Dunlybyir', with his caution being John Carmichael, younger of that Ilk. In 1584 he signed the bond of assurance with the English Wardens, his name appearing along with Harry and Airchie of the Steele. Fergus (16th C.) recorded at the Dykes in 1544 on a list of

Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. His name is given as 'Fargathe Nixson' (and 'Fergus' seems the most likely forename). 'Fargaises Willie of Kirkleheade' is named among men accused of rieving in 1592 (with no surname listed); given the rareness of the name, this could be his son. Probably the same 'Fergus Nykson' was listed along with 'Hob' and others in 1541, when accused of raiding Gilsland and killing Englishman Dandy Wigholm. Gavin (16th/17th C.) listed among men declared as fugitives for not appearing at a court in Hawick in 1605. He was also cited for not appearing at another court in Peebles later in 1605. He was 'in Burnefute', which was probably the place in Eskdale. Gavin (17th C.) tenant in Graystanehaugh in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Geoffrey (16th C.) recorded among many men from Liddesdale who did not appear at the Justice-aire in 1494/5. His name was listed as 'gofredi nykson', and John was right before him. George (16th C.) recorded first on a list of Nixon tenants of Killoley on the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale. The others were John, Clement and Andrew, who may have been related. He could be the same man as 'Georg Nixson of Larlestane' listed first among Nixson in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. George (16th C.) listed along with Edward as tenant of 'the Dyke' in Liddesdale in 1541. He may be the same as the tenant of the lands of Killoley. Both he and Edward are also recorded in 1544, swearing allegiance to Henry VIII. George (16th C.) recorded at Brighouse in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was probably related to William, William, younger and Ringan and Dandy, who were also listed at Brighouse in 1544. George 'Geordie' (16th C.) recorded among Nixons and Elliots who were complained about by the English Warden in 1590 regarding a raid in 1588. His son Henry was also listed. He could be the 'Geordie Nixon of the Larestoune burne' listed along with 'Hob' of Killoley, Hob's brother Jenkin, John (servant to Martin Elliot), as well as Croziers and Shiels accused in 1590 of stealing from the tenants of 'Lynbrigges'. Given this list, it seems unlikely he is the same man as 'Ill-drooned Geordie', father of Hob and Jenkin. George 'Ill-drooned Geordie' (16th C.) recorded at Killoley in 1588 when there was a complaint by Englishmen about a raid made on his livestock. His son 'Jenkin' is also listed; and since Jenkin was brother of 'Hob', then he was also father of Robert of Killoley. He is probably descended from the George associated with Killoley in the 1540s. He is recorded in 1590 among a group of Elliots and others accused of taking livestock and goods from Over Warden in England. Probably the same man was in 1590/1 'George Nikson, son of Will of Calleley' among men that the Earls of Bothwell and Murray were to enter before the Privy Council; this means that his father was Will. He is the 'yll drowned Georde' and 'halfe drowned Geord' recorded in 1595 along with Jenkin and other Nixons, Elliots and others when there were complaints made about raids into England. He may be the George who signed a bond written by Sir John Forster to try to end family feuds on the Border in 1595/6. It is unclear what his nickname meant. Hector (16th C.) listed as 'Ector' of 'Lawrellstane' (probably Larriston) in 1544 when his son John swore allegiance to the English King. Several other men were also listed at Larriston, and so probably related, including George, Quentin and Jeffrey. Henry (15th/16th C.) recorded as 'Henry Nicsoun in Larishop' in a document of 1500 listing men who gave pledges to Patrick, Earl of Bothwell. This may have been Lairhope near Teviothead. Golfrid and Edward are also listed there, so they may be his brothers or sons. Perhaps the same Henry, son of John, is also recorded among a large list of men of Liddesdale who did not appear at the Justice-aire in 1494/5. Henry 'Crackspear' (15th/16th C.) recorded among many men from Liddesdale who did not appear at the Justice-aire in 1494/5. There he is listed as 'henrici nykson craksper'. He is also listed among a large number of men from Liddesdale and elsewhere who pledged good behaviour to Patrick, Earl of Bothwell in 1500; he is recorded as 'Henry Nicsoun, Crakspere', separate from Henry 'in Larishop'. He may be the same 'Henry Niksone' and 'Nixsone' listed in 1510 in the Register of the Privy Seal among men associated with Robert Elliot of Redheugh, required to come before the King to promise to keep order, and then obtaining a respite for their crimes. William 'Nixson' is also listed there. Henry (15th/16th C.) named in a respite of 1515/6 along with Robert Elliot of Redheugh, William Elliot of Larriston, James Forester in Greenhaugh, Adam Crozier and others. He is also recorded as 'in Larestanys' in 1516 when he had a respite from the Privy Council for all of his crimes; also listed were several other men, including William 'in Flycht' and William 'in Stele', another Henry and Alexander 'in the Brighous'. The respite applied to all other Nixons, except Robert and William,

'brether sister sound to Johne Elwald'. It is likely that most of these men were closely related. He could be the same as one of the othe contemporary Henrys. Henry (16th C.) listed in the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale, along with William, as tenant of 'Kylsfurd' (i.e. Kilford). This William could be 'Grey Will of the Kyll Fuird' who is recorded in 1563, suggesting that he might be William's father. Another Henry (or the same one) is listed as tenant of Stripshielden, along with David. Henry 'Harry' of Howden (16th C.) recorded in the 1581 Register of the Privy Seal. His name appears with several Armstrongs and Elliots of Liddesdale who were accusing the Scotts of various crimes. He could be the same as one of the other contemporary Henrys. He is probably related to the earlier William of Howden. Henry (16th C.) recorded in 1584 as 'Herrie Nixson' who was 'of the Steill', along with Airchie. The pair signed an assurance with the English Wardens, along with Edward of Dinlabyre, to whom they were presumably related. Henry 'George's Harry' (16th C.) listed as one of 3 Nixons among the Border chiefs compiled by Monipennie sometime before 1594. He is recorded as 'Georgis Harie Nikson'. Probably the same 'Henrie Nickson sonne to Geordy' was recorded among Nixons and Elliots complained about by the English Warden in 1590 regarding a raid in 1588; he is there 'Henrie Nickson sonne to Geordy'. He may be the Henry who signed a bond written by Sir John Forster to try to end family feuds on the Border in 1595/6. Henry (16th C.) recorded in 1597 when there was a complaint against him, along with Robert Elliot of Thorlieshope, Hob Armstrong and Alexander Armstrong, for a raid on 'Ellinghamerigge' in England. He was referred to as being 'of Killforde', but Scott of Buccleuch argued 'that there is not such a persoune' (although there was a man of that name at Kilford 5 decades earlier). He may have got off for giving the wrong name or address! Jeffrey (16th C.) tenant of 'Stellis', along with Bartholomew and Thomas, on the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale. He is listed in 1544 as 'Jeffaray', brother of Thomas 'of Stell', on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. Jeffrey (16th C.) recorded at 'Lawrellstedde' (probably Larriston) in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was probably related to George, Alexander, Quentin, John and Hector, who were also listed at Larriston. Jenkin (16th C.) recorded in 1544 on a list of Nixons, Olivers, Croziers and others, who gave assurances to the English King. He was recorded as 'Jenkyne Nixson of Stanesheld' (i.e. Staneshiel) and was probably related to John, who was also listed in the same place. He may be the English fugitive Jenkin recorded being reset by 'Reid' Simon Armstrong. Jenkin (16th C.) son of George of Killoley and brother of Robert. He is mentioned in a complaint in 1590 about a raid into England made by Nixons and Elliots in 1588. Probably the same 'Ginkyne' was accused in 1590 (along with Elliots and Shiels) of stealing from Roland Walker. In 1590 he was listed along with his brother 'Hob' of Killoley along with other Nixons, Croziers and Shiels, accused of stealing from the Wilkinsons of 'Lynbrigges'. He is recorded being 'of Kelleley' and was presumably related to the earlier Nixons from there. The other Nixons named in 1590 were his brother Hob and Geordie of Larriston Burn. He is probably the Jenkin recorded in 1590 on a list of Elliots, Croziers, Nixons and others accused of rieving from William Robson of 'Allerweshe'. Probably the same 'Jenken Nyckson son to George' was listed in 1595 among Nixsons, Elliots and others complained about for raids into England. In one raid he is listed along with George 'yll drowned Georde', who may have been related and in another he and John are both 'of Lareston'. John (15th C.) recorded in 1494/5 among Liddesdale men who failed to appear at the Justice-aire in 1494/5. Perhaps the same John's son Henry was also listed. John (16th C.) son of Matthew, 'callid 'no good clarke' '. He was listed in 1541 among Scotsmen accused of burning the corn of William Carnaby at Halton. He may be the same as one of the other Johns. John (16th C.) tenant of 'Hesseldale' according to the 1541 rental roll of Liddedale. Perhaps the same John was joint tenant of Heuchhousehill in 1541. John (16th C.) recorded at Killoley in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He is listed as 'John Nyxson of Kellel', and was probably related to William, who is also recorded at the same place. He is probably the John recorded at Killoley in a rental roll of 1541. John (16th C.) recorded at Flicht in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was probably related to Matthew and 'Perswill', who were also there in 1544. John (16th C.) resident at 'Stanesheldes' (i.e. Staneshiel) recorded in 1544 on a list of Nixons, Olivers, Croziers and others, who gave assurances to the English King. He was probably related to Jenkin, who was also listed in the same place. John (16th C.) recorded in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was listed as being 'of Coulegayte', which could have been Claygate. John (16th C.) listed in a 1544 bond of support for the English King, signed by Nixons, Olivers, Croziers and others. His name is given as 'John Nixson of Lawrellstanes, Ector sone', and hence presumably Hector was his father. John (16th C.) listed among those implicated in the ambush of Scotts and Gledstains at Whithaugh in 1580. His name is given as 'Johnne Niksoun, callit Halyden', although the meaning of the nickname is unclear. He must have been a supporter of Lancie Armstrong of Whithaugh John (16th C.) son of Clem 'callit of the Hye Asches'. In 1581/2 the pair were among men accused of stealing cattle from a farm at Huntly; he was declared a rebel after not appearing to answer the charge. In 1587/8 he was recorded being warded with the Laird of Anstruther; however, he escaped and his pledge was ordered to appear before the Privy Council. He is recorded as 'laird of the Highe eshes' and also 'of the Higheshies' in 1595, listed along with his brother (who is unnamed) among men of Liddesdale and upper Teviotdale accused of raids into England. He is probably the John 'of Eshes' who was demanded by the English Commissioners as one of the hostages to be taken as a pledge for other Liddesdale men in 1597. He was further 'of the Eshes' in 1597 among men for whom the English Warden demanded pledges. John (16th C.) recorded in 1586/7 being 'in Dodburne' among Borderers accused of crimes who had failed to appear in court and were given one more chance to find sureties. John (16th C.) recorded being of Kilford in 1590 when there was a complaint that he and some Elliots had stolen in 'playne dayelight, thir hirdes' and 24 head of cattle from people on the English side in 1588. He may be the John recorded in 1590 among Elliots of the Steele, the Park, Binks, and others, accused of a raid into England. John of Larriston Burn (16th C.) recorded as 'John Nyckson of Lareston burne' as a raider into England in 1589/90. He is listed in 1590/1 being 'of Layrestenburne' among men that the Earls of Bothwell and Murray were to enter before the Privy Council. He is recorded being 'of Laiest burne' in Monipennie's list of Border chiefs published around 1594 (but probably compiled several years earlier). He and 'Eddy of Larestonburne' are also recorded in 1590 when there was a complaint against them by the tenant of Birdoswald about a raid made on his livestock in 1588. He was 'of Lareston' in 1590 among a group of Elliots and others accused of taking livestock and goods from Over Warden in England. In 1595 he was 'alias Larestoneburn, guyde and purpose maker' and 'of Lareston bre' when complained about by the Lord of Gilsland regarding 2 raids into England. He could be the John 'in Larestoun' who was convicted and executed in Jedburgh in 1611. John 'Gleed Larriston' (16th/17th C.) servant of William Elliot of Larriston. His nickname is recorded as 'gleed Lareston'. In 1595 he was among Nixons and Elliots complained about by the Lord of Gilsland for a raid on 'Haslegyll'. Clement 'the Clash' was also a servant of the Laird of Larriston, and so they may have been related; the pair were each accused of raids on England in 1597. He may also be the John accused of 2 further raids in 1595, one with 'yll drowned Georde' and another with Jenkin of Larriston. He may have been the same as one of the nearly contemporary Johns associated with Larriston. His nickname presumably referred to a squint. John (16th/17th C.) tenant in Riccarton. In 1611 John Moscrop, Burgess of Jedburgh, acted as cautioner for him in Jedburgh Court. John (16th/17th C.) tenant at Burnmouth. In 1624 Adie and Will Usher were convicted of stealing his sheep. John (16th/17th C.) recorded as tenant in Lawshill in 1623. Rowie Foster stole sheep from 'Callshiels' owned by him and Gavin Elliot 'callit of ye Schawis'. John (17th C.) tenant at Larriston Rig in Castleton Parish on the Hearth Tax records of 1694. Bailie John (c.1757–1812) Bailie and manufacturer. He came to Hawick in 1774, being an apprentice with William Irvine, linen draper. In 1779 he was recorded as Irvine's apprentice when the pair witnessed a baptism in Cavers Parish. He was one of the first large-scale hosiery employers, taking over from John Hardie around 1780 and being the first manufacturer to make hosiery on his own account (rather than for customers). The original partnership was with William Irvine, George Noble and Thomas Sanson, but Sanson left the same year, and a few years later he was the sole partner. He paid the Shop Tax in Hawick in 1785. In 1786 it is recorded that he was running 8 frames, and started manufacturing ribbed stockings, and in 1795 he already had 12 frames. The firm spun the yarn as well as knitting the hosiery. His premises were on the High Street, where the Victoria Hotel was later built (No. 52); he lived on the top flat, with the spinning jennies and warehouse below. Around 1793, along with Bailie Simpson, he presented the bible that used to sit at the end of the Magistrates' row in St. Mary's Kirk (and moved to the Old Parish). He is probably the merchant of that name who subscribed to Caw's 'Poetical Museum' (1784). He was recorded as a manufacturer in Hawick on the 1790–91 and 1794 Horse Tax Rolls. He paid the dog tax in 1797. In 1799 his apprentice Francis Elliot is listed on the ballot for the Militia. Around 1800 he was one of the locals contributing (£1 1s) for the war against France. He was involved in the years 1799–1803 with a court case against merchant Walter Lunn, who was declared bankrupt. He started the early construction phase of what became Lynnwood Mills around 1803 or 1804, and there carding and spinning were carried out. In 1811 he was an Ensign in the 1st Regiment Roxburghshire Militia. In Hawick in 1782 he married Mary, daughter of William Grieve, tenant of Southfield. Their children included: John (b.1783); Mary (1784–88); William (1785–1871), who succeeded to the hosiery firm; Joseph (1790–1842); Charles, solicitor in Nottingham and Leeds; and an unnamed daughter. The witnesses in 1783 and 1784 were Bailie John Elliot and Robert Grieve (perhaps his wife's brother). He is probably the John whose eldest daughter Agnes married Robert Jardine in Hawick in 1811. John (1783–1848) eldest son of manufacturer John. He also became a manufacturer in Hawick, being a partner in the firm of Nixon & McKie. He was 'Junr. Merchant' in 1801 when listed on the ballot for the Militia in Hawick; this suggests he could not have been born after 1782. He was listed in London when he subscribed for 2 copies of Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He died in Nottingham and his inventory from 1849 is preserved, with his estate valued at £2300, his brother Charles and William Elliot acting as executors. Joseph (1790–1842) younger son of manufacturer John. He was a partner with his brother William. In 1822 he got together with his brother William, along with manufacturers William and Walter Wilson, Town Clerk John Oliver and John Elliot, to share a 'gig', before any long-distance transportation was available other than the mail coach. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. In 1841 he was living on Walter's Wynd with John (probably his son) and a female servant. When he died his brother was left as sole partner in the family firm. Rev. J.W. (19th/20th C.) Rector of Wetheral, Carlisle, who was appointed to help out with St. Cuthbert's in Hawick during the vacancy in 1910–11. Martin (16th C.) possessor of 'Hieflycht' (i.e. High Flicht) in 1541. He was probably related to other local Nixons. Matthew 'Nae Guid Clerk' (16th C.) mentioned in 1541 when his son John was listed among Scotsmen accused of burning the corn of William Carnaby at Halton. His name is given as 'Matho, callid 'no good clarke' ', but it is unclear exactly what this meant (however, compare 'Nae Guid Priest', which was a nickname for an earlier Oliver). He may be the same as one of the other Matthews. Matthew (16th C.) tenant of Hightrees Cleuch according to the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale. He may have been related to John, who leased the neighbouring lands of 'Hesseldale'. He is probably the 'Mathewe Nixson of Hetherclewes' listed in 1544, among Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. Matthew (16th C.) recorded at Flicht in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was probably related to John and 'Perswill' who were was also there in 1544. 'Pate Nixson Mathewe son', also listed in 1544 may have been his son, as well as William, Pate's brother. Mrs. ?? (19th C.) local lady who left a bequest called 'Mrs. Nixon's Bounty Fund', to be distributed to poor women in Hawick and Wilton. It was administered by the ministers of Hawick and St. George's and the Provost of Hawick, and still had a value of £2300 in 1939. She was presumably wife of one of the local manufacturers. Ninian 'Ringan' (16th C.) recorded as 'Renyon Nyxson of Brigehows' in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was probably related to William, William, younger, George and Dandy, who were also listed at Brighouse in 1544. Probably the same Ninian witnessed a bond in 1548 when some Elliots had a bond to enter Robert Crozier as a prisoner. Patrick 'Pate' (16th C.) recorded in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was listed as 'Pate Nixson Mathewe son' and could have been son of Matthew of Hightreescleuch. His brother William is also listed in 1544. Patrick 'Pate' (16th C.) son of Quentin, he is recorded at Larriston in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. His name was given as 'Patte Nixson of the same, Qwinten sone'. He was probably related to George, Alexander, Jeffrey, John and Hector, who were also listed in the same place. Patrick (17th/18th C.) gardener in Hawick who witnessed a baptism in 1702. Percival (16th C.) recorded in 1544 as 'Perswill Nixson, Fleght' on a list of Nixons, Olivers, Croziers and others who gave their support to the English Crown. He was probably related to John and Matthew, who were also listed at Flight in 1544. Quentin (16th C.) recorded at Larriston in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. His name was given as 'Qwinten Nixson of Lawrellstane'. He was probably related to George, Alexander, Jeffrey, John and Hector, who were also listed in the same place. His son Pate is also listed. Quentin (16th C.) son of 'Clemmie the Crwne' or 'Clemme the Crune'. He was held by George Buchanan of the Ilk, on a pledge of good behaviour to the King and released by 1578, but promised to meet again with other pledges in order to suppress lawlessness on the Border. In 1580 he was held in ward by the Earl of Lennox in Dumbarton Castle and later that year stated to be warded in Edinburgh Castle. In 1580/1 he was sentenced to imprisonment for theft, along with several Armstrongs and Elliots of Liddesdale. Christie son of Quentin was recorded in 1585 in a long list of men of Dumfriesshire receiving remission for past crimes. Quentin 'the Doo' (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1618 as servant to William Elliot of Hartsgarth. He was listed among a group of Elliots and others who John Scott in Newark complained attacked his farm at Foulshiels in Liddesdale, beating up one of his workers there. Not appearing, the accused were denounced as rebels. Robert (15th C.) recorded in the proceedings for the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh in 1494/5. Hector Lauder, brother of the Laird of Todrig, has remission for several crimes, including bringing in him and Archibald (suggesting they were closely related) to take part in raids. Robert (15th/16th C.) listed along with William as 'brother, sister souns to Johne Elwald' in 1516. They are given as exceptions to the Nixons who had remission for their crimes, suggesting that what ever they were accused of was more serious. It is unclear which John Elliot was their uncle. Robert 'Hob' (16th C.) recorded in 1541 along with Fergus and others accused of raiding Gilsland and killing Englishman Dandy Wigholm. It is unclear where he came from. Robert 'Hob' of Killoley (16th C.) brother of Jenkin and probably son of George, 'Ill-drooned Geordie'. He was named in 1590 among several Nixons, Croziers, Shiels and others, accused of stealing from the Wilkinsons of 'Lynbrigges'. He is recorded being 'of Kelleley' and was presumably related to the earlier Nixons from there. The other Nixons named in 1590 were his brother Jenkin and Geordie of Larriston Burn (who was therefore presumably distinct from his father). Robert 'Scabbit Hob' (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1623 when he was accused of stealing sheep from 'Rosie' and her tenants of Mangerton. He was acquitted of the first cited theft, but found guilty of the second and ordered to be hanged. Robert (17th/18th C.) resident of Dodburn. He married Janet Riddell and their children included Janet (b.1705) and Gideon (b.1723). The witnesses in 1705 were William Henderson in the Flex and Walter Grieve in Branxholme Park. He is probably the Robert who witnessed a baptism for James Scott in Stobicote in 1720. Roland 'Rowie' (16th/17th C.) tenant in Brighousecleuchhead in 1622 when he promised to appear before the Justice Court to answer charges against him. Thomas (16th C.) tenant of 'Stellis' in Liddesdale in 1541, along with Bartholomew and Jeffrey, who were presumably related. He is also listed in 1544, along with his brother Jeffrey, plus 'Barte' and 'Arche', among Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. Thomas (16th C.) recorded at the Dyke in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. 'Fargathe Nixson' was also listed there, and so presumably a close relative. Walter (17th/18th C.) Elder of Hawick Kirk who lived at Hawick Shiel. He is probably the Walter who witnessed a baptism for John Irvine in Hawick Shiel in 1706. He was listed as tenant in Hawick Shiel when he witnessed baptisms for William Gledstains, for James Borthwick and for Robert Tudhope (servant to Falnash) in 1708 and for Walter Scott in Hawick Shiel, for John Nichol in Newmill in 1709, for John Turnbull (herd in Whitchesters) in 1710 and for William Hislop, his servant in Hawick Shiel. In 1716 he (and Simon Miller, also at Hawick Shiel) witnessed a baptism for James Borthwick, shepherd at Hawick Shiel, and in the same year he witnessed a baptism for William Hislop at Hawick Shiel. In 1717 he was appointed to collect monies from 'Hawickshiels, the two Southfields, Allan Haugh milne, Newbigging, and Raes-knowes', suggesting he may have lived in this area. He was still an elder the following year. He witnessed baptisms in 1718 (along with Walter Scott, both recorded as tenants in Hawick Shiel) for Matthew Charlton, in 1720 for William Hill (weaver at the Flex), in 1721 for 2 men called John Scott in Hawickshiel, as well as William Hislop, in 1723 and 1725 for Robert Scott in Hawick Shiel and also in 1725 for John Scott in Allanhaugh Mill, for blacksmith James Gledstains and for workman Thomas Stoddart. He may be the Walter who married Janet Riddell and whose son William was baptised in Hawick in 1708. William (14th C.) owner of lands in 'Ermildon' (i.e. somewhere around Arnton Fell) in Liddesdale, according to a c.1376 rental roll. The list includes 'Locus Willelmi Nycson', valued at 21 shillings. Perhaps the same William was listed in 1398 among the 'borowis' for establishing the Earl of Douglas' bounds on the West March. William (15th C.) recorded among many men from Liddesdale who did not appear at the Justiceaire in 1494/5. William (15th/16th C.) recorded as 'in Flycht' in 1516 when he received remission for his crimes from the Privy Council, along with several other Nixons and others. It seems likely he was related to Henry in Larriston, William in the Steel and Alexander in the Brighouse. William (15th/16th C.) listed as 'in the Stele' in 1516 among Nixons and other Liddesdale men who received remission for their crimes from the Privy Council. William (15th/16th C.) recorded along with Robert as 'brother, sister souns to Johne Elwald' in 1516 when several Nixons, except for them, were given respite for their crimes. It is unclear which John Elliot was their uncle. William (16th C.) name of 2 separate men who, along with Alexander, were tenants of Brighouse in the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale. He is also 'William Nixson of Brighows' in 1544 when he was on a list of Scotsmen who gave their support to the English Crown; William, younger (presumably his son) was also listed, as well as George, Ringan and Dandy. William (16th C.) recorded at Howden in Liddesdale in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. William (16th C.) listed at Dinlabyre in 1544 among Nixons, Olivers, Croziers and others who gave their support to the English Crown. William (16th C.) listed at Killoley in 1544, on a list of Scotsmen swearing allegiance to Henry VIII. He is recorded as 'William Nixson of Kellele'. He was probably related to John, listed at the same place in 1544 and Hob recorded there in 1590. In 1590/1 his son George was 'son of Will of Calleley' among men that the Earls of Bothwell and Murray were to enter before the Privy Council. William (16th C.) son of William of Brighouse. He was recorded as 'William Nixson younger of Brighows' in 1544 along a list of Nixons, Croziers, Olivers and others who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. His father William was also listed there. William 'Willie' (16th C.) recorded in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was listed as 'Wille Nixson Barte son' and could have been son of Bartholomew of the Steele. William (16th C.) listed in 1544 on a list of Nixons, Olivers, Croziers and others who swore allegiance to the English Crown. He was listed as brother of 'Pate', who was son of Mathewe, possibly of Hightreescleuch. William 'Clement's Will' (16th C.) presumably son of Clement, he was known as a thief. In 1557 a bond was signed between Thomas Turnbull of Hartshaugh, George Rutherford of Grange, Adam Turnbull of Woollee and Adam Turnbull of Billerwell to capture him and present him at the 'airn yetts' of Ferniehirst. There is another bond of 1557 (where he is 'Clemattis Will') among several Armstrongs to present him at Ferniehirst. And a third bond by Hector Armstrong and others (including Archibald of the Steel) to present him to John Kerr of Ferniehirst in 1556 on the back of which is a bond by Hector Lorraine of Harwood to present 'Will Nyksone, called Gymmerhom', who could be the same man. William 'Grey Will' (16th C.) recorded as 'Grey Will of the Kyll Fuird'. In 1563 Gavin Elliot of Ramsiegill and others from Liddesdale entered into a bond with Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst to bring him in. He could be the William who was listed after Henry as being tenant of Kilford in 1541. Either he or a different William is also listed as tenant of Howden. He could be the same 'Gray Wil' listed among Border chiefs (along with Johnne of the Park) in Monipennie's c.1594 compilation. William (16th C.) listed as 'alias Kneates, of Highessches' in 1597 among 5 Scotsmen delivered to the English Deputy Warden by Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch at Copshawholm. It is unclear where 'Highessches' might have been. William (17th/18th C.) farmer at Branxholme Town in 1691, when there were 5 tenants recorded there. He was recorded as tenant in Castlehill in 1692. He could be the William, married to Janet Scott, whose son William was baptised in Hawick Parish in 1678, along with an unnamed son in 1673. The witnesses in 1678 were John Ker and William Nichol. He may be the William who witnessed a baptism for William Martin in the Flex in 1700 and probably the William recorded in Stobicote in 1707 who witnessed a baptism (along with Robert Thomas in Newmill) for Walter Wilson in Castlehill. William (18th/19th C.) farmer at Lymiecleuch, listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. William (18th/19th C.) clerk with manufacturer John; however, it is unclear if he was related. In 1799 he was selected by ballot to serve on the Roxburghshire Militia. William (1785–1871) hosiery manufacturer, son of John and Mary Grieve, brother of John and Joseph. Born in Hawick, he moved to Nottingham, from where he was made an Honorary Burgess of Hawick in 1806, after sending a new silk Cornet's

Sash (it is possible that up until then the Cornets simply wore their best clothes, with no formal uniform). Returning to Hawick he worked in Nixon's and was himself elected as Cornet in 1813. He used to ride a white horse known popularly as 'Nixon's mare'. He also acted as paymaster or commissary for the prisoners of war who were in Hawick 1812–14, having 120 prisoners under his charge. The main manufacturing premises were at 52 High Street (marked on Wood's 1824 map), before Lynnwood Mill was built. The firm was still listed as 'John Nixon & Sons' in Pigot's 1837 directory, even although his father had died in 1812; it manufactured woollens as well as hosiery. In 1822 he had the idea to share a 'gig' with other local gentlemen, before any long-distance transportation was available other than the mail coach; his partners were his brother Joseph, manufacturers William and Walter Wilson, Town Clerk John Oliver and John Elliot; they sold it to Rev. Cochrane about 6 years later. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He is probably the William who served as a Steward at the Common-Riding Races in 1834. He laid the foundation stone for the Free Church, was one of its first Trustees as well as serving as a deacon. He later built Lynnwood House (where he is recorded in 1841) and was generally active in public life. In 1851 he is recorded as master wool-spinner, emplying 115 people. He became a life member of the Hawick Archæological Society in 1862 and donated several foreign coins to the Museum in 1867. In the 1860s he served as Vice-President of the local division of the Evangelical Alliance. He was also a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire. He married Jane, daughter of John Elliot of Binks in 1814, and she died in 1877; the couple had no children. The marriage certificate of 1849 shows his wife's name to be Jane Elliot Graham (so it is unclear if this was a 2nd wife). His wife donated 'a large and beautiful collection of shells, zoophytes, and marine curiosities of every description', stuffed animals of various sorts and geological specimens to the Museum in 1859, along with several items 'formerly belonging to the late Miss Elliot of Bennet Street, St James, London', and an engraving in 1863; she was made an honorary member of the Archæological Society for 1860. He was in partnership for a while with Joseph, his brother. Later he was the sole proprietor of the firm of Nixon's and restricted himself to the preparation of yarn, with hosiery passing to the form of Nixon & McKie. A portrait of him exists. He donated 2 Adam Brown portraits to the Museum. He was involved in the 'Lang Stand Oot' and later with the development of a carrier on a broad frame, which led to a lowering of prices and wages. Hence, through the 1820s he was unpopular among the local stocking-makers, his effigy being carried through the town at one point, with an accompanying song – 'O, but ye're a loon, Willie! O, but ye're a loon! Ye brought the Shirra in a chaise To pull our wages doon' [T] (formerly written 'Nexsone', 'Nickson', 'Nicksone', 'Nicon', 'Niksoun', 'Niksoune', 'Nixson', 'Nixsoun', 'Nixyne', 'Nyckson', 'Nykson', 'Nyksone', 'Nyksoun', 'Nyxson', etc.).

Nixon's (nik-sinz) n. Messrs. John Nixon & Sons, stocking-makers, with their main mill at Lynnwood, built in the early 1800s. The weir built to divert water into the mill lade at Lynnwood was usually referred to as 'Nixon's Cauld'. John Nixon started as a hosiery manufacturer in 1780, spinning as well as knitting. The firm introduced more advanced hosiery machinery to Hawick in 1805. John Nixon died in 1812 and the firm was then run by his sons William and Joseph. Improvements to production in the early 1820s led to a lowering of wages for workers, which was an important part of the 'Lang Stand Oot' strike of 1822/3. William and Joseph Nixon were the partners in 1829, when they were given a grant from the Board of Trustees for Manufactures for spinning machinery. In 1837 the firm was listed on the High Street, still as 'John Nixon & Sons'; this was probably where the Victoria Hotel was later located. In 1842 Joseph Nixon died and his brother William was left as sole partner. He then went into partnership with William McKie, and the company was called Nixon & McKie; it was listed as such on Walter's Wynd in Slater's 1852 directory. The Lynnwood factory was sold to Thomas Laidlaw in 1864. They also built the factory on Walter's Wynd that was bought by Pringle's in 1869 and renamed Rodono.

Nixon's Brig (nik-sinz-brig) n. former name for a small, wooden footbridge near Nixon's Mill at Lynnwood. It was washed away in the flood of 1846, part of it ending up lodged between the Tower Hotel and waulk mills and another part washed up on the Tower Knowe.

Nixon's Haugh (nik-sinz-hawch) n. name used in the 19th century for the flat piece of ground by the Slitrig at Lynnwood.

Nixon's Mare (nik-sinz-mār) n. white mare called Molly, which was owned by William Nixon, manufacturer, who was Cornet in 1813. The horse was loaned to a few subsequent Cornets, and is seen in a portrait by Adam Brown.

nixt (nikst) adj., adv. next – 'The said day the Baylyeas and Counsell appoynted the Commone to ryd upon Fryday nixt, the first day of June' [BR1705], '... thereof they appointed thair meeting to be on Thursday nixt, the 3 day of May' [PR1711], '... should be put out of ye toun and not to reside therein till Whitsunday nixt' [PR1715], prep., arch. next to – '... and along the south side of the allocations which lye next Whitehaugh's property' [DCW1765] (note the pronunciation, even when spelled 'next'; a colloquial difference with standard English is that, e.g. if this is Saturday, then 'nixt Mondi' is 9 days away, while 'this Mondi' is in 2 days; cf. the less common neext and older neist).

no (no) adv. not – 'he's no is smert is hei thinks hei is', 'it's no fair', 'no a bit o'd', 'no bad, considerin', 'they'll no be lang in comin', '... The crimson current no congeal'd Wi frozen age' [JR], '... Yet we'll no mind – The tide may turn, we'll no' despair' [JoHa], 'No that I'm thinkin' love's a' that's needit ...' [JTe], 'Because ye think that yer a gentleman and I think that yer no' [RM], 'Aw'm no' in the tid for sermons ...' [RM], '... thus, that's ane, an' that's no ane; that's twae, an' that's no twae; that's three, an' that's no three – alternately asserting and contradicting, until the requisite number of threads were reeled on to form the cut' [DWW], 'It's no' in steeds, it's no' in speeds, It's something in the heart abiding' [RH], '... sic a bleezer as it was, wui no a whuff o wund' [ECS], 'A axt um if this was the Haaick Motor, an whuther it was gaun back ti Haaick that nicht or no' [ECS], 'A job is valued for the time it takes, now. No' the work that's put intill't' [DH], '... Waxcloth, no carpet, on the flair, Doon oor close and up oor stair' [IWL].

no bad (nō-bawd) adj. quite good, excellent – 'yon taiblet's no bad, issen eet?', '... which is no bad, but a long way tae catch up on Andra Ballantyne' [CT].

Noble (nō-bul) n. Alexander (14th C.) owner of lands in 'Ermildon' (i.e. somewhere around Arton Fell) in Liddesdale according to a c.1376 rental roll. 'Locus Ellie Nobill' is listed there with a value of 6 shillings. Andrew (b.c.1810) hostler, recorded at about 21 High Street in 1841. By 1851 he was widowed and a frame-worker, living on Walter's Wynd and in 1861 he was a railway labourer at 77 High Street. His wife was Margaret and their children included Betty, Mary, John, Helen and Joan. Arthur (1864–95) son of Robert Noble, who gave his name to Arthur Street. George (18th C.) merchant in Hawick. He subscribed to Caw's 'Poetical Museum' (1784). He may be the George, son of William and Margaret Pringle, born in Hawick in 1740. In 1780 he went into a stockingmaking partnership with John Nixon, William Irvine and Thomas Sanson. However, he left the partnership after only a few years. He married Jane Scott and their children included William (b.1771), Agnes (b.1775) and Walter (b.1777). His wife 'Jean' died in Hawick in 1778. George (1781–1816) poet, born at the small cottage of Kerfield, near the Dunion. He was an illegitimate child, raised mainly by his grandparents. He worked as a farm labourer. He was largely self-taught, becoming fond of mathematics, philosophy and astronomy. He became an acquaintance of James Veitch of Inchbonny and he wrote a verse about the path through the constellations of the great comet of 1811. Lord Buchan became his patron, giving him the use of a house at Dryburgh. His verses to the memory of Wallace are inscribed on an urn near the statue at Dryburgh. He also wrote an ode to the poet James Thomson However, his health declined, and although a position as clerk was found for him at a colliery near Newcastle in 1815, he died a few months later. Henry 'Harry' (d.1528) from somewhere in Scotland. Along with his countryman Roger Armstrong and 2 Englishmen (William Charlton of Shitlington and Archibald Dodd), he made a foray into Northumberland, robbing some houses and taking the Parson of Muggleswick prisoner. The party failed to get away with their booty because the Tyne was in flood and they were hunted down. He was hung from Haydon Bridge. Henry (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living at Priesthaughshiel in 1781 when his daughter Janet was baptised. James (17th C.) listed at Whithope among 'The poor in Hauick Parioch' on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He may be the James, married to Janet Murray, whose children, baptised in Hawick Parish included Walter (b.1682) and probably Helen (b.1684). James (17th C.) resident of Roberton Parish, when it still contained Hassendean. He was recorded in Parkhill in 1687 when his son James was baptised, with witnesses John Noble (surely a close relative) and Robert Learmonth. He may be the James who married Jean Thomson in Roberton Parish in 1687. James (17th C.) recorded as resident at Borthwickshiels in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. It is listed under the farms of the Earl of Tarras in Hassendean Parish. James (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. In 1728 he was in Roberton itself and in 1735 at Borthwickbrae. He married Isobel Ker in Roberton in 1727. Their children included: Agnes (b.1728); Walter (b.1730); twins Isobel and Janet (b.1733); and Mary (b.1735). He was living at Chisholme in 1733. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, living at Calaburn in 1744. He married Isabel Ker and their son James was baptised in 1744, with witnesses William and Robert Scott. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, living at Mervinslaw in 1751. He married Marion Young and their son Adam was baptised in 1751, with witnesses Robert Scott and Walter Irvine. James (18th C.) married Betty Douglas in Hawick Parish in 1769. Rev. James (1836–1883) born in Perthshire, son of Rev. James and Margaret Crow. He was educated at Edinburgh University, licensed to preach by Perth Presbytery in 1859 and became assistant at St. Stephen's in Edinburgh in 1861. However, later that year he was translated to be minister of Castleton Parish. He served as Chaplain to the Liddesdale Curling Club. In 1879 he attended the celebration for his colleague Rev. John Black of the Associate Kirk in Newcastleton. He died unmarried. James (1851/2–81) son of Andrew, contractor in Coldsteam. He drowned in Pate's Plum while playing for the East-enders side in the Hawick Baa. He is buried in the family plot in Lennel. John (16th C.) tenant of Gavin of Elliot of Falnash in 1569. Elliot acted as cautioner for his tenants at a meeting in Hawick, assuring that they would obey the laws of the Lord Regent. John (16th C.) servant of Robert Elliot. In 1590 he was named along with 'Gib Ellott son to Robin' and John Shiel (another servant of Robert), as well as Elliots and Croziers, when they were accused of stealing horses from Middleton Hall. He was futher listed in 1590, along with Nixons, Croziers and Shiels, accused of stealing from the tenants of 'Lynbrigges'; he is there 'Martin Ellott's man', but it seems that the same person is meant. He may be the John who signed a bond written by Sir John Forster to try to end family feuds on the Border in 1595/6. John (16th C.) tenant in Henderson's Knowe. He was recorded in 1590 in a case where Walter Scott of Buccleuch and Walter Scott of Goldielands were ordered to enter certain of their tenants to answer some English complaints. John (17th C.) resident at Horsleyhill on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He is probably the John who witnessed baptisms in Roberton Parish for William Collin in Horsleyhill in 1682, for Thomas Scott in Hassendean in 1683, for Thomas Robson in 1684, for William Scott, for George Hood, for William Collin, for Robert Scott and for James Noble in 1687 and for John Renwick in Horsleyhill in 1688. John (17th/18th C.) resident in Woodburn when his children were baptised in Roberton Parish. This included Mary (b.1712) and John (b.1717). He is probably the John who married Isobel Scott in Wilton in 1702 and additionally had children Janet (b.1703), William (b.1707) and Janet (b.1710) in Roberton, as well as John (b.1702) and Helen (b.1715), baptised in Wilton. John (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at Boghall in 1742. He married Bessie Scott and their children included: Margaret (b.1730); Agnes (b.1736); and John (b.1742). The witnesses in 1742 were Walter and James Scott. He is probably the John who witnessed a baptism in 1733 for Robert Darling, resident of Boghall. John (18th C.) married Rebecca Gibson in Wilton Parish in 1767. Robert 'Hobbie' (16th C.) Borderer who is mentioned in the ballad 'Jock o the Side', as well as in the epononymous ballad. The character in the ballads is perhaps based on 'Hobbe Noble', who was living 'hrd by the howse of Bewcastell' according to a 1583 letter of Thomas Musgrave. He could be the Robert Noble who died on his farm at Parkhead in 1620 (and hence was not hanged at Carlisle). Robert (17th C.) tailor in Effledge. In 1684 he was listed among men declared as fugitives for attending field conventicles. Robert (1839–1919) of Wellfield and later Heronhill and Borthwickbrae, he was from Biggar, coming to Hawick as a warehouseman and traveller for Dicksons & Laings. He became a junior partner in Richardson, Noble & Co. (established 1871), which built Glebe Mills in 1877. He founded Robert Noble & Co. in 1880 after Robert Richardson died. He was active in public life through being a J.P., President of the South of Scotland Chamber of Commerce and being associated with the School Board, the Cottage Hospital, the Gas Company, the Teviotdale Dairy and the Constitutional Club. He bought Borthwickbrae from William Eliott Lockhart about 1884. About 1895 he gave land around Borthwick Waas Cemetery for a shrubbery, and kept it up at his expense (along with the Grieve sisters). He married Isabella Armstrong (1841–1900) in 1860, and their children included: Jane Wilson (1860–79); Elizabeth Florence (1862–1941), who married James Scott; and Arthur (1864–95). The family are buried in Wilton Cemetery. The Trinity area adjacent to Glebe Mills was developed largely through his efforts, and Noble Place is named after him. He also left money for the Hawick Technical College. Robert (19th/20th C.) from Hawick, he attended St. Andrews Kirk. He was a home missionary in Glasgow (at Finneston) and London (Clapham Road). Simon (17th C.) shoemaker in Ashkirk Parish. In 1640 he was accused of 'shoonmending' on the Sabbath. Walter (17th C.) among the men declared as fugitives in 1684 for refusing to conform to Episcopalianism. He was tenant in Effledge and listed as 'Taylor in Efladge' in one account. However, it is possible this was confusion with Robert, tailor in Effledge. Walter (17th C.) listed as resident at Harden in Wilton Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Walter (17th/18th C.) living at Castleside in 1710 when his daughter Christian was baptised in Roberton Parish. He is probably the Walter who married Isobel Cuthbertson and whose son Robert was baptised in Ashkirk in 1706. William (17th C.) servant to Walter Earl of Buccleuch. He was listed in the deceased Earl's inventory in 1633, when he was owed for his annual fee. It is unclear if he was a servant at Branxholme or in Edinburgh or elsewhere. William (18th C.) workman in Hawick. He married Margaret Pringle and their children included: Janet (b.1738); George (b.1740); and James (b.1743). The witnesses in 1743 were cooper John Aitken and 'Officer' Thomas Sword. William (18th C.) resident of Denholm in 1772. His children included John (b.1772). William (18th C.) gardener at Burnhead in 1793, when he was working for William Scott. He could be the William who witnessed a baptism for John Lorraine in 1754 (formerly 'Nobill', 'Nouble', 'Nowble' and variants).

Noble Place (nō-bul-plis) n. street in the Trinity area near the Glebe Mills, built around 1885 and named after Robert Noble. It was essentially built to provide convenient accommodation for workers at Glebe Mills.

Noble's (nō-bulz) n. knitwear firm of Robert Noble & Co., founded in 1872 as Richardson, Noble & Co. Robert Noble moved to Glebe Mill in 1877. The company dwindled after WWII, but survived until 1962, when it merged with other companies (Walter Thorburn of Peebles and George Roberts of Selkirk), with Glebe Mills being taken over by Pringle's. However, even the new merged company only lasted a few years. Papers relating to the firm exist, covering the period 1879–1959.

nocket (no-ki') n., arch. a packed lunch, snack – '. . . and asked him to sit down, and take a nocket in the shape of bread and cheese and a dram' [WNK] (also nacket).

nocklate (nok-lā') v., arch. to innoculate (also nuckle-late).

Noctes Hawickianæ (nok-teez-hIk-ee-an-ā) n. book published at the end of 1859, containing charicatures and sketches describing the adventures of a theatrical troupe who spent 9 days performing in the Subscription Rooms in Hawick a few weeks earlier. The sub-title was 'Ye Drama on ye Borders. Being ye feates and adventures of a dramatic companie, what they did, and how they did it, with ye folks they met, and how they met them, and exhibiting ye effects in modern Athens of a very distant explosion, and who were affected thereby, illustrated in upwards of one hundred humorous sketches, embracing portraits of ye Dramatis Personaæ, from photographs by Treufitt Brothers, and veritable likenesses of other parties from Nature'. The pseudonymous authors were Charles K. Tynte and Austin Burns. The illustrations were actually by Keeley Halswelle (with the assistance of Burns Bryson). The book is now rather rare. It contains a couple of sketches of Hawick streets in 1856, as well as a view including Goldielands Tower and caricatures of a few Hawick residents of the time. W.E. Wilson gave a lecture on the book in 1917.

nogly (nog-lee) adj., poet. knobbly, knob-like – 'And he has kyssed her paunchy cheeke, And syne her nogly chinne' [JTe], 'To the left, crowning a steep and 'nogglie' hill, we see the profile of a deeply-entrenched and ell-mounded encampment' [JAHM] (also written 'nogglie').

No Kiddin (no-ki-din) n. popular music band based in Hawick in the late 1970s. They consisted of Kenneth Stoddart (keyboards and synthesiser), Stevie Turnbull (lead/rhythm guitar), Paul Desport (lead singer), Jim Inglis (bass guitar) and Derek Lunn (drums).

nolt (nōlt, nōl') n., pl., arch. cattle – 'Item, whatsoever person or personnes that has thair hors, meiris, or nolt of any sort, out of ane house in Hawick ...' [BR1640], '...the great inconvenience that follows by Burgesses who live not in the town, their putting horse, nolt and sheep to the Common ...' [BR1720], '...had no right, title, interest, clame of right, property, or possession to the said Commonty, nor privilege of pastureing yrupon with horse, nolt, or other cattle ...' [BR1734], 'The tenants of Brieryhole exerced their privilege in the common, by sending out their horse, nolt, and sheep, to pasture there' [DCW1765], '...at riding the Common tearly the riders were in use to hound and drive out of the Common all the horse, nolt, and sheep belonging to the tenants on the confines of the Common ...' [C&L1767], a bullock, single head of cattle – 'A cow £22; a nolt £7' [BR1638] (cf. nowt).

nolt beast (nōl-beest) n., pl., arch. cattle – 'Their nolt beasts, in the forenoons of summer, some days lay on the common, at the east end of the Threep-head-moss' [DCW1765] (see also nolt).

Nolt-lair (nōl'-lār) n. former lands in Liddesdale, adjacent to Yethouse. It is written as 'Noltlares' in 1632, among lands possessed by Hab Henderson, and including Hightrees, Burnmouth, Dawstonburn and Prickinghaugh. It is probably the 'Noltlawis' recorded in 1611 when Hob, son to Jamie Henderson there, was listed for non-appearance in court at Jedburgh. In the 1718 survey of Scott of Buccleuch properties, it was 'Noutlaires' and combined with Yethouse to cover 70 acres.

Nolt-lair (nōl'-lār) n. lands that were part of Lilliesleaf Common. Along with Stotfield, it was described in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls that it was feued by John Scott in Bewlie Mains.

Noltlair Rig (nōl'-lār-rig) n. former name for lands on Wilton Common, lying to the west of Inner and Outer Grayhill. It is recorded as 'Noltlair-rigg' in the 1765 description of the common – '...wood that was lying on the south side of the Woolaw-knows as they passed; was lifted and carried to the Nolt-lair-rigg, on the north of the knows' [DCW1765].

nominat (no-mi-na', -ni') v., arch. to nominate, name – '...and nominat James Scott, called of Westport, to be Corronett for that yeare' [BR1705], '...conform to ye Deed of Mortification, to nominat and condescend upon fit and qualified persons for examination of Mr Robert Chisholm ...' [PR1718], pp. nominated, named – '...nominate and appointed with consent of both pairties, to see the meiths and marches impartially sett down ...' [BR1688], '...the elders after nominate were ordered to collect ye money for propagating Christian knowledge in ye Highlands and Northern Islands' [PR1717], 'And recommend it to those whom they shall nominat for that effect, to take advice in the first place of the Honourable Laird of Cavers' [PR1724] (also spelled 'nominate').

non-entry (non-en-tree) n., arch. failure to enter possession of a property, amount due for payment on this occurrence, failure to appear in court – '...Robert Scott of Allanehauch, his airis and assignais ane or ma, the nonentres, mailies, fermes and dewteis of all and haill the landis and lordschip of Quhitchester ...' [SB1569].

noo (noo) adv., arch., poet. now – 'But when oor ribs they nearly cut the skin through, 'Tis time to cry – 'Come, doctor! let alane noo'' [JoHa], 'Aw saw wi' a glede o' the tail o' ma ee that she was conquered noo, but aw never let on' [WNK], 'Noo, aw was nae wey feard ...' [BCM1880], 'Keep up yer credit, Ye're somebody noo' [GWe], 'Noo a' is richt, the day is bricht' [RH], 'The simmers fled, she's waitin still, Nae wooer nou comes near' [WL], 'When the Fair day comes roun' In the times we ken noo ...' [WL], 'And noo ilka day she ca's in while I wark . . . ' [DJ] (not particularly Hawick, where the word is 'now' or in some contexts nih; also spelled 'nou').

noo-a-days (noo-u-dāz) adv., arch. nowadays – '. . . an' yow that has schule lair an' awquant wi' sae muckle new licht o' things they hae fund oot noo-a-days aboot the sterns an' sae an' sae' [BCM1880] (not particularly local).

Nook Haugh (nook-hawch) n. farm in Ashkirk Parish. It was listed in the 1841 and 1861 censuses and was probably the same as Haughheid.

nookit (noo-kee', -ki') adj., arch. cornered – 'Four nookit clover was held as a preservative against this kind of enchantment' [DMW].

noolt see nuil'd

noomer (noo-mur) n., v., arch. number (also nummer).

noost (noost) n., arch. the action of a horse's teeth in grinding its food, v. to chew food, particularly said of a horse (noted by J. Jamieson).

noozle (noo-zul) v., arch. to press, squeeze (noted by J. Jamieson; also nuizle).

nor (nor) conj., arch. nor (used in various forms where modern English would have 'or' or other words) – 'I, myn aieris nor assignais, nor nane vthir in myn nor thair namis, sal nor may in ony time ask, raise nor clame ony mair of the said nyne hundreth merkis . . . ' [SB1470], than (usually after comparisons) – '. . . and gif it be mair nor £20, and within £40, thirteen shillings and four pennies . . . ' [BR1640], '. . . that no personne sall bruick the office of bailliarie longer nor the space of twa years together . . . It's a wonnerfu' invention!' [DMW], '. . . howe mukle bettir is thy loefe nor wyne!' [HSR], 'Thou art fairer nor the childer o' men . . . ' [HSR], 'Nae mair nor newspapers!' [DH].

Norbank see Northbank

Norham Castle (no-rum-kaw-sul) n. castle just over the Tweed in Northumberland, near the village of Norham. It began as a timber construction in 1121 by Bishop Flambard, and was developed as a stone keep in the late 12th century. However, it was involved in many national incidents, and was a garrison of the March Warden, although it was too strong to be affected by Border raids. The smaller 'Ragman Roll' was signed there in 1291 and the Scots suffered a defeat nearby in 1348. It was ruined soon after the Reformation – '. . . And at Norham Castle he cried 'I stand A Neville at last in Northumberland!' ' [WHO].

no right (nō-rī') adj. not entirely sane, mentally unsound, unbalanced, unhinged – 'she's oot o Dingleton, but she's no right yit' (a euphemism, sometimes extended to 'no right in the heid').

norlan (nor-lin) adj., arch. northland, originating in the North – 'But the norlan' wind comes laden Wi' bitin' frost an snaw! Oh weary, weary Winter, I wish ye were awa'!' [JT], 'An' that's as true as I'm a Scot, A redshank, Norland haggis eater' [JoHa], 'Oh cease they mane, thou norlan' wind, And o' thy wailin' let me be' [TDa], n., poet. someone from the north – 'Auld Lizzie the Nor'lan', in Lill'slea did dwell, In ma auld Granny's days – as she used to tell' [BM1901].

Norman (nor-min) n. James (20th C.) owner of the Station Hotel 1933–51. He sold Langbaulk to the Henderson brothers. His daughter Jean married James Aitkin Henderson, who became Provost.

Normand (nor-mund) n. John (13th/14th C.) first man listed on the inquisition of 1303/4 into the inheritance of William Charteris' half barony of Wilton. Most of the men are clearly local, and the inquest was held at Roxburgh. His name is written 'Normaund'. He also swore fealty to Edward I in 1296 as 'Normaunt', with a seal showing a lion rampant on a 6-leafed flower and the legend 'S'IOH'. . . BVRGES' DE BERW'I', although he was from Roxburghshire.

Noroway (no-ro-wā) n., arch. Norway – 'A wild fanciful popular tale of enchantment, termed 'The Black Bull of Noroway' ' [JL].

Norris (no-ris) n. William (18th C.) resident of Denholm in 1780 and 1781. His children, baptised in Cavers Parish, included: Jean (b.1780); and Margaret (b.1781).

Northbank (nor-, north-bawngk) n. former farmstead and ruined 16th century peel tower in Southdean Parish. It is located between Steele Knowe and White Hill, to the east of the hamlets of Chesters and Southdean. The tower is about 5 m by 4 m and is ruined down to a single storey. Adjacent to the tower is an enclosure 23 m square, and there are signs of 2 other turf-walled buildings to the south-west; these are probably the remains of an earlier steading. The previous name for the farm may have been 'the Banks'. There are modern sheep-shelters there. The surrounding area has old rig lines, covering at least 22 hectares, enclosed by boundary banks and ditches. The more recent farmstead is about 500 m west of the ruined peel tower. It was valued at 22 shillings in 1538 and 1539. 'Belle', Thomas and 'Bennete' Laidlaw were tenants there in 1541, paying 22s yearly. The tenant of the farm there in 1669 was 'Lancellot Laidlie'. Robert Laidlaw and George Oliver, each with one hearth, are recorded there in 1694, as well as 'Culbert whilands'. Thomas Telfer was shepherd there in at least 1797–99 and Robert Douglas in 1801 (it is already 'Northbank' in 1538, and is 'Norbank' in 1669 and 'Norbanck' in 1694; it is marked 'Norbanck' on Blaeu's 1654 map, but it not marked on Roy's or Stobie's 18th century maps).

North Berryfell (north-be-ree-fel) n. farmstead on the east side of the Slitrig and more than a kilometre from Berryfell farm (which is sometimes called 'South Berryfell' to distinguish it). William Oliver was there in 1841. James Brunton was farmer in the 1860s, A. Jackson in 1868 and then Drydens until at least the early 1900s. The farmer there in 1872, Mr. Dryden, uncovered an ancient cairn, where pieces of pottery were found, as well as the top stone of a quern nearby; this cairn was 'three or four hundred yards to the west of the farm house'. The farmhouse is now a ruin.

North Bridge Street (north-brij-stree') n. road leading to North Bridge, connecting the High Street (or Oliver Place) with Dovemount Place. Before the road was developed the general area had been in use as nurseries by Dickson's. The name appeared around 1832, which must have been about the time that the road was constructed. Before this the only structure was an old house near the south end (where the Baptist Kirk would later be built) with a roof that went almost down to the level of Bourtree Place because of the slope of the land. The first house was built on the street in 1845. The southern end is just the opposite side of the street from Oliver Place. The middle section used to contain the houses and surgeries of many of the town's doctors. No. 16 and 39 were designed by J.P. Alison in 1895, as well as a hotel on the street at about the same time. The northern end was built largely in 1899–1900, with Nos. 41–49 designed by J.P. Alison. The Art Nouveau inspired Nos. 43 (J.E.D. Murray's studio) and 45 (Alison's own house and office) are particularly noteworthy, with the painted signs 'Studio' and 'House' still visible. Nos. 2, 4, 6 and 41 are grade C listed buildings, while 43, 45, 47 and 49 are grade B (also sometimes referred to as 'Bridge Street'; named because it is the road to the North Bridge).

North Bridge Street Mill (north-brij-stree'-mil) n. former woollen mill situated to the south of the Teviot near North Bridge Stree. It is recorded in 1872, but it is unclear precisely where it was.

North Brig (north-brig) n. North Bridge, being the bridge over the Teviot at the end of North Bridge Street, built in 1832 by John & Thomas Smith of Darnick. It was originally called the New Bridge, to distinguish it from the Teviot Bridge in the west part of the town, and was funded by the Turnpike Trustees, since it allowed for a much easier route to the North. In 1882 it needed to be widened, the corrugated iron parapets being removed and the pavement width added to each arch. This work was carried out by Scott & Thomson's. Originally it had 4 arches, with 2 allowing carts to pass at the riverside. These were filled in when the river banks were later built up to street level. Stone steps also once led up from the water-side to Bridge Street near the present Library (shown on the 1858 Ordnance Survey map), and another set by the railway, while a steep brae led from near the Buccleuch Memorial to the haugh where Duke Street was later built. In 2000 the bridge was closed to road traffic when the Waverley Bridge was opened to carry the main south-bound A7. It is a grade C listed building (called 'the New Brig' until the railway arrived in 1849, then more often referred to as 'the Station Brig').

North British Railway (north-bri'-eesh-rāl-wi) n. company that built the railway line south from Edinburgh, reaching Hawick in 1849, and then succeeded, amid bitter political rivalry, to extend the line to Carlisle, completing what would be known as the Waverley Line in 1862.

North Burn (north-burn) n. stream flowing into the Allan Water from the north-east. It rises on Chester Knowe near the former farmstead of Newbigging and flows roughly south-west. It is also sometimes known as Newbiggin Burn.

Northcote Street (north-ko'-stree') n. street between Dovecote Street and Laidlaw Terrace, built around 1884 and named after Sir Stafford Henry Northcote (1818–87), who was Chancellor of the Exchequer and Foreign Secretary (the fact that it is north of Dovecote Street can't be a coincidence though!). The former joinery sheds of Archie Aimers on the south side were replaced in the 1980s by a small grassy area for the use of parents and small children.

Northcroft (north-kroft) n. former name for a farm lying between Stirches House and the Heap Hills. William Rutherford was recorded there in at least 1748–51. William Chisholme of Stirches owned the lands for a while in the early 18th century. In 1725 George Langlands of that Ilk granted the lands to William Dickson, with his son James holding the lands in fee, and William having the liferent. James Dickson still held the lands in 1765, when it was valued at £20. In 1788 it was still valued at £20 and owned by Mrs. Shortreed, and she was listed as owner in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls. James Black was farmer there in 1841 and the owner by about 1874 was John James Scott Chisholme. It was sometimes referred to as 'Nethercroft' (marked on Stobie's 1770 map and on the 1897 Ordnance Survey map; it 'North Croft' in 1748 and 1765).

Northcroft (north-kroft) n. former farmstead in the upper Teviot valley, above Commonside on Blaeu's 1654 map. It may be the place of that name referred to in a 1581 complaint when Elliots there were molested by Scotts and others. It was part of the lands associated with Commonside that were already occupied by Gilbert Elliot (brother of Robert of Redheugh) in 1591 when leased to him by Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme. It was leased to Gilbert Elliot (now of Kirkton) again in 1603, when it was described as a 20-shilling land (it is 'Norcroft' in 1603.

North Croft Park (north-kroft-pawrk) n. former name for lands in Minto Parish. 'Part of the North Croft' northeast of Minto village on a map of 1766. It is listed in 1779 when included among lands whose liferent had been granted to Rev. Robert Elliot. They are still listed in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls, along with 'Quarter of Whitefield House', valued at £52 2s 9d.

the North Crofts (thu-north-krofts) n. former name for an area of Denholm, corresponding to roughly the part later developed as Riverside Drive. It is said that in about 1860 Mr. Laidlaw was digging there when he came upon several stone cists containing human skeletons (also sometimes 'North Croft').

North Greenholm (north-green-hōm) n. former farmstead to the north of the main farm of Greenholm in Liddesdale. It is marked on the 1859 Ordnance Survey map, just east of Leahaugh Cottage.

North Hermitage Street (north-her-mi'-eej-stree') n. part of the main B6357 through Newcastleton, lying to the north of Douglas Square. The British Legion Hall is at No. 3.

Northhoose (north-hoos) n. Northhouse, farm off the A7 between Newmill and Teviothead, near where the main road crosses the Teviot. The nearby side road goes up the Northhouse Burn to Old Northhouse (which is also referred to as just Northhouse). This was once part of the lands of Ringwoodfield. It was formerly home of a local branch of the Scotts and became part of the Buccleuch estates. There was a former chapel near here. John Scott was tenant there in 1498 and had 20 cows stolen by John Dalgleish and others in about 1510. In 1524, when Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme was regranted the office of Bailie of the lands of Melrose Abbey, he was given this farm and that of Thirlestane for his fee. In 1540 the King's shepherd William Henderson is recorded being paid for oats there. Archibald Elliot of Falnash was recorded being there in 1547. In 1553/4 the lands were still held in fee (along with Thirlestane) for the office of bailiery; they were together valued at £20 Scots at that time. William Scott of Bowden rented lands there from Melrose Abbey in about 1557 for £5. The lands are listed among those inherited by Sir Walter Scott in 1574. Scott of Satchells lists Walter of Northhouse as the first of the 24 'pensioners of Buccleuch', and says he was the first Scott of Northhouse. Robert Scott was tenant there in 1607. 'Will' Scott of Northhouse was declared a rebel in 1608 after failing to answer to charges that he had raided Stobs, stealing the writs and charters for ransom. Another tenant, Archibald Scott is recorded in 1619. It was still listed as part of Ringwoodfield in the Lordship of Melrose in 1634, 1653, 1661 and 1663. 5 people were listed there in the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694, with 7 hearths being recorded. Archibald Gledstains was tenant there in at least 1696–98 (he was recorded as 'Mr', suggesting he may have been the teacher or similar). Thomas Scott was living there in 1702. It was included in the survey of Buccleuch properties in 1718, when it covered 1678 acres and was bounded by the River Teviot, Braidhaugh, Doecleuch, Skelfhill, Phaup and Southdeanrig. William Coltart was there in 1726. Thomas Elliot was renting the farm in the period 1745–48 and Robert Miller in 1747. Walter Irvine lived there around the 1760s. In at least the period 1791–99 the tenant was Thomas Scott. James Linton was a weaver there in 1799 and Adam Anderson a mason in 1801. John Fenwick farmed there in the 1860s. In the early 20th century there were Amoses there. There was once a suggestion to divert the Hawick-Carlisle railway from there to Wilton Lodge. A 'ring amulet of stone' found there was donated to the Museum in 1859. An ancient bronze axe-head (or celt) found there was donated to the Museum in 1861, described by J.A.H. Murray, but subsequently disappeared (see also Auld Northhoose; the origin of the name is surely literal, and is also sometimes 'Northhouses'; it appears from about 1500 as 'Northous', is 'Northhous' in 1498, 'northous' in 1502, 'Norththous' in 1524, 'Northous' in 1540, 'Northows' in 1547, 'Norththous' in 1553/4, 'Northous' in 1557, 1564, 1619 and 1663 and 'Northhous' in 1660 and 1661; it is already 'Northhouse' on Blaeu's 1654 map).

Northhoose Burn (north-hoos-burn) n. stream that joins the Teviot from the south, near Northhouse. It forms part of the probable boundary line of the Catrail.

Northhoose Chaipel (north-hoos-chā-pul) n. former chapel at Old Northhouse. Its location is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map, although there are now no physical signs of it. It is said that there were burials in the attached graveyard until 1792, and several stones have been subsequently unearthed in the area. The graveyard is marked in 1863 on both sides of the stream, which is called the Chapel Burn. In Rev. Robert Young's 1875 article, he states that the remains of the churchyard were still visible and that Old John Michie said that he remembered the last funeral there. The chapel may have served the upper Teviotdale area before the chapel was built at Caerlenrig; it may have been the chapel for the Barony of Ringwoodfield.

Northhoose Cottages (north-hoos-ko'-ee'jeez) n., pl. cottages at Northhouse, where the side road to the Allan Water (south from the A7) crosses the Northhouse Burn. A building that is no longer there is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map.

Northhoosehaugh (north-hoos-hawch) n. former name for the flat ground by the Northhouse Burn, probably at 'Auld Northhoose', where the small church was built. In about 1690 there was a perambulation of the outlying parts of Hawick, Cavers and Hassendean and a suggestion that a new church should be built here; this of course never happened. There was once a farmstead here, near where the Catrail crossed the burn. James Miller was there in 1772. John Sinton, Robert Lunn and Robert Nichol were farm servants living there in 1801.

North Liddle Street (north-li-dul-stree') n. street in Newcastleton, running alongside the west bank of the Liddel (or Liddle) Water.

North Ludge see Minti North Ludge

Northope Burn (nor-thup-burn) n. stream that rises north of Craik Cross Hill, in a set of sikes called March Sike, Corse Grain, Rashie Grain and Laird's Cleuch Sike, and becomes one of the streams feeding the head of the Borthwick Water.

Northope Haugh (nor-thup-hawch) n. farmstead in flat ground by the Northope Burn, just to the west of Howpasley, in the upper Borthwick valley. About 250 m to the east are the remains of a large enclosure, with 2 smaller enclosures within it. And about 60 m to the south-west are another 2 small circular enclosures. The age of these features is not known. This was probably the farm of 'Noirhop' listed along with Craikhope in the 1627 valuation of Hawick Parish; together they were estimated at '100 lb., vicarage 16 lb'. It was also listed along with Craikhope on a draft map of the Borthwick in 1650, having 8 'communicants' between them.

North Port (north-pōr') n. former entrance to the town at the top of Walter's Wynd, between 47 and 49 High Street. This was the start of the road towards the North from the old town. A plaque was placed at 51 High Street by the Callants' Club in 1964.

North Stewart Place (north-stew-ur'-plis) n. original name for the street joining East and West Stewart Places, which were all named after Rev. James Stewart and part of the area popularly known as Stewartfield. It is now part of East Stewart Place.

North Synton (north-sin'-in) n. farm to the east of Ashkirk, but on the north side of the Ale valley, distinct from the other Synton (or Sinton) farms on the south side. It may have been part of the same estate as South Synton in early times, but was separate from at least as early as 1407. In that year Archibald, Earl of Douglas, granted the lands to Barnaby Veitch of Dawyck. Alexander Veitch was recorded as owner in 1502. In 1566 it was granted to John Fleming after being forfeited by James Veitch. David Thomson was farmer there in 1581/2. The lands were restored to John Veitch in 1583/4. In 1601 it was described as having a 'tower and fortalice' and being an annexed part of the Barony of Dawyck. It was held by the Veitch family until 1641, when largely sold to Francis Scott of South Synton, except for Clerklands. In 1643 it was owned by Francis Scott of Synton, with the west side valued at £208 and the east side valued at £338. It was fully annexed to South Synton again in 1675. The 'laird of North sintoun' (who appears to have been Rev. Robert Cunningham) paid the land tax there on £600 in 1678; at the same time Francis Scott of Synton was the owner of Essenside, valued at £365. The value was the same in 1707, £600. Francis Cunningham of North Synton is recorded in 1690 and his sister Maria was served as heir to his 50-shilling land there in 1691. Dr. Gideon Elliot (son of the tenant in Borthwickshiels and descended from the Elliots of Horsleyhill) became Laird through marriage to Margaret Cunningham in 1691. The main house was taxed for having 7 hearths in 1694, and there were 9 people further assessed on the estate for having a hearth (William and George Easton, George Scott, George Tait, James and John Veitch, Thomas Cochran and William Nichol), as well as 8 poor people (Bessie Murray, Isobel Turnbull, Isobel Dryden, Jean Foster, Jean Elliot, John Fraiter, Janet Veitch and Margaret Dunlop). Thomas Aitchison was a cottar there in 1698, when William Telfer was also living there. Robert Scott was a cottar there in 1719. Robert Hunter was tenant in 1737. Charles Scott lived there in the 1790s. James and John King were farmers there in 1797. James King was farmer there in at least 1799–1801, Andrew Mather was a servant in 1799 and Walter Cavers in 1801. It was listed being owned by John Pringle of Clifton in 1788 (and still recorded this way in 1811), when valued along with Birkwood at £600. In the 1830s the lands were owned by Robert Pringle of Clifton. Andrew Riddel was farmer there in the 1860s, followed by John Riddell. The farmhouse was remodelled in the late 17th century, but contains parts of a 16th century building (the oblong part oriented east-west). The north-west extension and porch are modern. The house is 3 storeys on the south, but 2 on the north. The oldest part may have been built for James Veitch, who succeeded to the lands in 1536. The vaulted basement is still well preserved. There is also a 'bun-shaped quern' beside the east gable and a carved sandstone block built into the south gable. It is said that an upper chamber, the 'Minister's Garret' was used as a hiding place by an ousted preacher during the Killing Times. About 200 m north-west of the farmhouse are the remains of a hill-fort, visible in aerial photographs, but largely obliterated by ploughing. About 450 m to the north-west are signs of rig-and-furrow cultivation. About 600 m to the north is an old enclosure, with nearby rig lines. And just south of the road, a little to the east of the farm, are signs of another settlement (its approximate location is marked as 'N: Sintoun' on Pont's c.1590 manuscript map, 'Sintoun' on Gordon's c.1650 map and 'North Sintoun' on Blaeu's 1654 map; it is 'Northswentoun' in 1475, 'Northsyntoun' in 1497, 'Northsintone' in 1525, 'Norcht Synton' in 1531, 'North Syntoune' in 1609 and 1691 and 'Northsintone' in 1704).

North Toll Bar (north-tōl-bawr) n. another name for Dovemount Toll.

North Toon-o-Rule (north-toon-ō-rool) n. North Town-o'-Rule, name for a cottage at the north side of Town-o-Rule farm, the same as the cottage known locally as Drythropple and renamed Heathfield for a while. This is where the poet John Halliday was living in 1851, as well as carrier John Gray and his family.

the North Tyne (thu-north-tīn) n. river that rises near Kielder Water, being one of the major river valleys of the English Middle March and joining the South Tyne near Hexham – 'Then seeking the south that held his shrine, Heard the low hills echo 'To Tyne! To Tyne!' ' [WHO].

Northumbria (nor-thum-bree-a) n. ancient Kingdom of north-eastern England, also including parts of southern Scotland for centuries, and now the general name given to the English north-east. The kingdom was established around the year 600, including Bernicia (roughly from the Forth to the Tees) and Deira (roughly the Tees to the Humber). The name derived from being north of the Humber. Hawick would have been part of the Kingdom of Northumbria until the Battle of Carham in 1018.

Northumbrian (nor-thum-bree-in) adj. relating to present-day Northumberland or ancient Northumbria, n. the language spoken in Northumbria. This was originally one of Brythonic or 'p-Celtic' languages, most closely related to Old Welsh. In periods after about the 6th or 7th century the word is used to describe the early form of Anglian spoken throughout the Kingdom of Northumbria and that developed into Scots and in particular the Hawick dialect. Essentially the same form of p-Celtic is sometimes called 'Cumbric'.

Northville (north-vil) n. private house at 25 North Bridge Street, which later became the Kings Hotel. The property behind it on Union Street was once the site of Teviot Grove Academy.

The house was for a few years the home of the Blenkhorns.

North Witterside Road (north-wi'-ur-sīd-rōd) n. name sometimes used for Commercial Road in the mid-19th century.

Norville (nor-vil) n. John (17th/18th C.) wigmaker in Hawick, originally from Greyfriars Parish in Edinburgh. In 1714 he produced a testimonial to Hawick Session from his previous parish attesting that he had made 'his publick repentance for his scandal' and could baptise his child. Also in 1714 he was witness in Hawick to a baptism for Robert Miles. In 1720 he witnessed a baptism for shoemaker Walter Scott. He married Christian Scott, who was sister of John Scott of Lees. Their children, baptised in Hawick, included: John (b.1714); Robert (b.1716); John (again, b.1719); and Martha (1725–87). The witnesses in 1716 were innkeeper William Shiel and servant William Brown and in 1725 were Robert Scott of Burnhead and Adam Scott in Lees. Given the witnesses in 1725, his wife was probably related to the Scotts of Burnhead. There was a discharge of hiis widow to William Scott of Burnhead in 1763 (also written 'Norval', 'Norvel', 'Norvell' and 'Norvil').

Norwud (nor-wud) n. Norwood, house on Sunnyhill, built for mill owner Peter Scott in 1904. It was designed by J.P. Alison in an Arts & Crafts style, with multiple gables and a castellated tower. It has an entrance porch and a first-floor balcony at the rear. Fashion parades from Pesco's used to take place on the lawns of the terraced garden. The Scott family stayed there until 1964, and latterly it has been the home of the Paterson-Browns. It is a grade B listed building. The name is also used more generally for the area around Norwood itself. The 'Norwood Trophy' was gifted by Peter Scott and competed for among local bowling clubs.

the Norwud Trophy (thu-nor-wud-trō-fee) n. local bowling trophy, donated by manufacturer Peter Scott and named after his residence. It was presented after the earlier Beechwood Trophy was won outright by the Buccleuch Bowling Club in 1912.

nosey wundi (nō-zee-wun-di) n. an 'inquisitive glass', an angled mirror mounted outside a window to allow a view along the street without leaning out. Also referred to as 'keekin' or 'peepin' glasses. They were introduced by John Guthrie around 1898, when he made one for his house at 61 High Street, after seeing similar devices on buildings in narrow streets on the continent. They soon began to appear all over Hawick, and even spread to some neighbouring towns. Although they existed to a lesser extent elsewhere, they were peculiarly popular locally. Since the height of their popularity they have disappeared one by one. A census of 1989 revealed a total of 51 in Hawick, distributed amongst the Loan, Buccleuch Street, the Sandbed, Silver Street, the Howegate, Kirkstyle, the High Street, Oliver Place, Bourtree Place, Bourtree Terrace, Bridge Street, Croft Road, Laidlaw Terrace, Dovemount Place and Princes Street.

' [BR1734] (also 'notar publict' and variants).

notary public (nō-tu-ree-pu-bleek) n., arch. someone with authority to draw up legal documents. In the middle ages this was usually an official of the church; in local charters they are often 'presbyters' of the Diocese of Glasgow. Post-Reformation notaries were public officials, often including the Town Clerk.

the Note (thu-nō') n. short form used to refer to the pass or toll-house at the Note o the Gate.

the Noted Beattie (thu-nō'-eed-bee'-ee) n. Hawick character of the late 18th and early 19th centuries, William Beattie.

the Note o the Gate (thu-nō'-ō-thu-gā') n. road through a hill pass on the way to England from Hawick, leading from the Rule valley to Liddesdale. The road branches south off the A6088, about a mile beyond Bonchester. The name also refers to the pass itself, which is at a height of 376 m (1233 ft) in the middle of what is now Wauchope Forest. There was once a toll house near the pass. It was regularly used as a meeting spot for farmers buying and selling bales of wool. Archibald Scott was toll-keeper in 1851 and William Beattie was the publican there, for at least 1878 until 1883. The walls were still there in 1891, but eventually the stone was broken down for road material (also sometimes 'Knot'; it is marked 'Knott in the Gait' on the 1718 Buccleuch survey and 'Not O' the Gate' in about 1795; the meaning of the first part of the name is obscure).

Notes from a Low Orbit (nōts-from-a-lō-or-bit) n. film by Mark Lyken. It is a 90-minute documentary about life in Hawick, the result of an artist residency in 2021, which received its premiere at the Alchemy Film Festival in 2022. Several local organisations collaborated in the filming and many local residents are featured in the various snapshots of community activities. There was also an accompanying, published in 2022.

nurseries (nur-su-reez) n. Hawick was once famous for its plant nurseries, which supplied a range plants to a wide area. A record of 1675 mentions the 'plant market' in Hawick. The first large-scale nursery was established at Hassendean by the Dicksons in 1728 and moved to Hawick in 1766 (as well as having premises near Dumfries, Edinburgh and Perth), supplying trees and shrubs to roughly half of the plantations in Scotland. The nurseries were at the east end of town, including land stretching from Oliver Crescent to Dovecote Street and also around Union Street and later extending to near where the Buccleuch Hotel is now. Dickson's also had nursery land around Dickson Street and Wellfield, which became Dovemount Nurseries in the latter part of the 19th century. The firm of Dickson & Turnbull also used the Wester Nurseries, where the Playing Fields are now, including land later occupied by the cricket field, Parish Church and bowling greens. Many of these areas are marked on Wood's 1824 map. Forbes Nurseries (also known as the Buccleuch Nurseries) operated near Stonefield from 1879–1968 and were extremely well known in their day, being once a large employer in the town. When they closed it ended a long chapter of Hawick being prominent as a nursery centre, with perhaps the Walled Gardens and success in 'Britain in Bloom' being the remaining vestiges.

the Nursery Hoose (th-nur-su-ree-hoos) n. former cottage at Bonchester Bridge. It lay on the east side of the Rule Water, opposite the farm of Langraw. It was also known as Bonchester Haughhead. The name came from the 2 acres of land there, which Thomas Scott of Nether Bonchester set aside for growing young trees. George Adamson lived there around 1800. The farm there was tenanted by the Turnbulls in the 19th century. Sometime in the latter part of the 19th century the cottage was pulled down to build an addition to the blacksmith's house near the Bridge (it is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

nut (nu') adv. no – 'no, nut', 'nut, ee canni', 'nut, A deh fancy that', 'what pairt o 'nut' did ee no understand?'.

Nut Bank (nu'-bawngk) n. former name for a small piece of land in Minto Parish. This is probably the place transcribed from the Selkirk Protocol Books as 'Nukland' in 1531, which the Turnbulls of Minto assigned to Ralph Davidson. It was 'Nutbank' in 1779 and in 1780 when said to belong to Robert Irvine (although also said to be included in the lands of Deanfoot liferented to Robert Trotter), with a rent of 10s. It is 'Nut Bank' in the Land Tax Rolls of 1811, with a value of £1 16s 6d.

Nutt (nu') n. former farmstead in the hills above Harwood-on-Teviot. It is marked on Blaeu's 1654 map, and is possibly confused with 'the Holt' or 'Hott Hill'.

Nuttal (nu'-ul) n. Daniel 'Danny' plumber in Hawick. He was Cornet in 1939. He was Right-Hand Man in 1946 and Lef-Hand Man in 1947. David son of Joe, he was Managing Director with William Lockie's. He has been Chairman of the Hawick Partnership and organiser of the Reivers Festival. He was Cornet in 1986. James 'Jim' (b.c.1820) from England, he was a woollen fuller in Hawick. He was said to be among those who came to Hawick following John Wilson going to the Rochdale area to learn about weaving flannel. In 1851 he was living on Wilton Place and in 1861 was at the '1st House, Weensland'. His wife was Helen and their children included Robert, James, Elizabeth, Daniel and George. Joe (d.1996) doing National Service with the K.O.S.B. he worked for Peter Scott's until 1961, later becoming Managing Director of William Lockie & Co. A keen Common Riding supporter, he was Cornet in 1958. He married Janice Mitchell and they had 2 sons (including David) and 2 daughters (also spelled 'Nuttall').

Nutter Campbell (nu'-ur-kawm-bul) n. Robert of Kailzie (d.1845) he was sometimes referred to as just 'Capt. Campbell'. In 1793 he bought the local estate of Weens (including Nether Bonchester) from William Oliver of Dinlabyre, but in 1796 sold it to Adm. Thomas Pringle (who passed it in 1804 to Thomas Cleghorn). His purchase also included feu-duties acquired from Kerr of Abbotrule. He married Margaret, daughter of Sir James Montgomery of Stanhope. A portrait of him and his wife was painted by Sir Henry Raeburn.

nynt (nīnt) adj., arch. ninth – 'At Branxhelm, the nynt day of the monetht off Februar . . . ' [SB1519], 'Agane he gaed out about the saxt an' nint hoor, an' did likewaise' [HSR], 'An' about the nint hoor Jesus criet wi' ane loud voyce . . . ' [HSR] (also written 'nint').

Oakhill (ōk-hil) n. Victorian villa-style house off the Braid Road.

oak leaves (ōk-leevz) n., pl. symbolic adornment worn at certain times during the Common Riding, fancifully imagined to harken back to Druidic times. After the Cornet's Breakfast on the Friday morning sprigs of oak leaves are given to the guests and worn for the remainder of the day. The Drums and Fifes wear them prominently in their hats. Before the mid-19th century, the Cornet and his guests used to march to the Haugh after the dinner to dance the Reel, each bearing an oak twig on his hat and breast. The wearing of 'chaplets of oak . . . by the young men' was reported to be an old custom by James Wilson in 1850. The practice of wearing oak leaves discontinued after 1855, but was revived in 1886, and has been a part of the Common Riding ever since. The origin is mysterious, and there are many theories, from pagan symbolism to a relationship with trees near Hornshole – 'What means that youthful band so gay, With oaken boughs in trim array, With frequent shout, and loud hurray, Drum, fife, and fiddle?' [WiS], '. . . An' wear an oak leaf in ma coat, An' join in the sang' [IJ], 'Ne'er picked a callant that was prooder Tae weer oaken leaf on shooder' [MB].

the Oak Trei (thu-ōk-trī) n. well-known former landmark on the New Road, near the entrance to the Volunteer car par. Although it marked no boundary, nor had specific historical significance, it was a familiar sight for generations, and a popular turning point for walks along the New Road, particularly before the Park was acquired. It was said to have been the last of a long line of trees that ran over the hill in a southerly direction, perhaps starting near the Howegate. The tree was cut down in 1984 following storm damage, and a replacement planted in the adjoining sports ground – '. . . Till the auld Oak Tree rocks to our glee, for I really believe – don't you? – It would like to be the Cornet' [JYH].

the Oak Trei (thu-ōk-trī) n. the Oak Tree, a public house on the north side of Buccleuch Street, also referred to as 'the Oak' (e.g. on the 1859 Ordnance Survey map). This building was later the entrance to Elliot's skinnery.

[BR], '...he would cause delate him to the circuit ensuing, if he walked not more submissively and obtempering of ye laws both of God and man' [PR1716], '...at least while he obtemper the act above specified allowing him three days to remove ...' [BR1738] (Scots law term).

occasion (ō-kā-shin) n. a circumstance, opportunity, pretext, cause, inducement – '...compeared Mr Lithgo, officer of ye excyse, and confessed that he was occasion of ane meeting in Thomas Hugan's house' [PR1716].

the Occasion (thu-ō-kā-shin) n. former popular name for the celebration of Holy Communion in local churches, an important event in the community calendar. In Hawick it took place about the harvest season until the beginning of the 19th century, when complaints by farmers had it moved to the last Sunday in June. The Wednesday before Communion was Sacramental Fast Day, when all work was suspended and there were 2 services. There was also a service on the Saturday, being the day of preparation, and often 2 more services on the following Monday. The Communion itself was on the Sunday and typically lasted from 8 a.m. until about 6 p.m., with a short break for rest and refreshments, and 4 or 5 different ministers officiating. The length of the services declined through the 19th century.

och (och) interj. expression of surprise, digust, regret or resignation, sometimes preceded by 'tut' – 'och, A've hed enough o this', 'tut, och yowe an yer stipeet ideas', 'och it's juist a wee scratch', also used as a general preface to any remark – 'och, A suppose si', '...och saufe me for thy mercie's sak' [HSR], 'Och howe grit is thy guidniss ...' [HSR], 'Och, d'ye think I'm an Irishman, D'ye think I'm an Irishman' [JEDM], 'Och, Robert, lad ...juist days syne I was gi'en A pickle Smith's fifteen-eer Glenlivet ...' [DH].

Ochiltree (o-chil-tree) n. James (15th C.) recorded as 'Jacobo Wchtiltre' when he was witness to the 1452 sasine for William Douglas of Drumlanrig being regranted the Barony of Hawick. This was signed in Hawick by a number of local men, the list also including Robert, who must have been related. Michael (d.c.1446) probably from Ochiltree in Ayrshire, his birth was illegitimate, but he was said to be 'of royal stock' and son of a priest and an unmarried woman. He attended Paris University and became a Canon of Dunblane then Vicar of Strogeith by 1418. He was involved in a dispute over the Deanery of Dunblane, and was appointed to other benefices also. In about 1428 he became Rector of Lilliesleaf, but gave this up in 1429 when he became Bishop of Dunblane. He was also Chief Almoner of King James in 1427 when he requested to the Pope that he be allowed to keep Lilliesleaf for life, in addition to holding the Prebend of Inchmagranoch. He was an ambassador to England in 1430. He performed the ceremony of anointment for the young James II in 1437. He was a close friend of Robert III and then James I, for whom he served as Almoner-General. In 1442 he was granted extensive lands in Strathearn. His surname is recorded as 'de Ochtre', 'de Oochtre' and 'de Outhere'. Robert (15th C.) witness to the 1452 sasine for the Barony of Hawick, where he is 'Roberto Wchtiltre' and his name appears among a list of 4 Burgesses of Hawick. He must have been closely related to James who is also listed.

ochon (och-ōn) interj., poet. emphatic version of 'och' – 'Ochon! e'er Scotlan' nurs'd the chiel, That e'er should spae her lost to freedom' [JoHa], 'I was happy an' healthy, an' stoot, yauld, an' bang; Ochon for the weary beginning o't' [JoHa].

ocht (ocht) pp., arch. ought, should – 'Moo indeed, ye drucken auld thief that ocht tae be ashamed o' yersel' [JEDM] (also oucht).

ochts (ochts) pron., arch. anything, aught – 'Neext A speerd if A cood geet ochts ti eat, – if there was a mael o meat ti be bocht' [ECS], 'Game for ochts, A snuived steevely on aboot therty yards ahint um' [ECS], 'Hei mae be deed for ochts A ken' [ECS].

O'Connell Street (ō-ko-nul-stree') n. built around 1837 and named after Irish statesman and reformer Donald O'Connell (1775–1847). A pended house known as 'the Rambler's' was demolished to make the gap in the south side of the High Street. The street has always had a kink in the middle. In the mid-20th century, No. 7 was J. Pollock, grocers, while Mrs. Mather's was at the corner with Murray Place. In 1968 Murray Place was incorporated into the street. The upper part of the south side was demolished after WWII, with further buildings being replaced by a garden and car park in 1972. It is home to a medical centre, previously the Congregational Church, and a fitness centre, which was previously the local British Legion branch. The Drums and Fifes march up here and over to Brougham Place on 'the Nicht Afore the Morn'.

the October Tryst (thu-ok-tō-bur-trīst, -trist) n. former cattle and horse market, happening on the third Tuesday in October from 1780. It was well known as a market for Highland kyloes and held around the foot of the Vertish Hill or Thorterdykes. By the latter part of the 19th century it had become only a horse market.

of't (oft) contr. of it – 'The leader of the train got oft, A crackit croon to claw' [JT] (also spelled 'oft').

Ogill (ō-gul) n. John (15th/16th C.) recorded as 'Johannem Ogil' when he witnessed the 1508 sasine for Adam Hepburn inheriting his father's Lordship of Liddesdale. 'Joh. Ogill' witnessed charters for Adam Hepburne of Craigs in Edinburgh in 1501 and 1506 and could be the same man or related.

Ogilvie (ō-gul-vee, -bee) n. Adam (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He witnessed baptisms in 1656 for Archibald Stewart and in 1661 for Patrick Redford, for John Tudhope, for James E. . . (along with John Tudhope) and for William Stewart. Adam (17th C.) tenant in Branxholme. His wife Jean Chisholme's will is recorded in 1684. The fact that he was at Branxholme suggests a connection between this family and the Scotts of Buccleuch a generation earlier than when there were Ogilvie Chamberlains. He may have been brother of William and perhaps Gideon. He was also surely related to Andrew and James, who were tenants in Branxholme farms in the 1690s. He witnessed a baptism for James Baptie in 1678 and another for Patrick Scoon in 1685. Adam of Hartwoodmyres (17th/18th C.) only son of William and Elizabeth Turnbull. He was Chamberlain to the Duchess of Buccleuch. In 1708 he was 'younger' when he was listed as one of the Commissioners of Supply for Selkirkshire. He was probably the 'younger of Hartwoodmyres' who was one of the original members of the 'Honest Country Club' in 1711. He is probably the Laird of Hartwoodmyres who owned the lands of Braidlies (near Brieryyards) and Cawfaulds in the early 18th century. In 1708 he married

Jean Erskine of Dryburgh, and she died at an advanced age in 1761. Their children, mostly baptised in Selkirk, included: Margaret (b.1709), who married William Elliot of Wolfelee in 1732; Elizabeth (b.1711); William of Hartwoodmyres (b.1712); James (b.1714), who may have died young; Jean (b.1716); Katherine (b.1718), born in Hawick Parish, who married Walter Grieve, tenant at Branxholme Park; and Isabel (b.1720). He may be the unnamed son of William and Elizabeth Turnbull born in Hawick Parish in 1684. His wife is probably the 'Mrs Ogilvie' of Hartwoodmyres, who in 1757 witnessed a baptism for Katherine Ogilvie (her daughter) and Walter Grieve. Adam of Hartwoodmyres (1745/6–1809) son of William and Elizabeth Elliot. He may also have been referred to as 'of Chesters'. He was an advocate and was made an Honorary Burgess of Hawick in 1775. He helped form the Hawick Farmers' Club in 1776. He served as an executor for Henry Elliot of Peel, who died in 1780. He paid the land tax on about £460 for Hartwoodmyres in 1785. He served as Chamberlain to the Duke of Buccleuch, taking over from William (his father) in 1787. He was living at Branxholme in 1785–88 when he paid a tax for 2 female servants, increasing to 3 in 1789 and 1790 and 2 again in 1791. He also paid tax on 2 male servants at Branxholme from at least 1785, and 1 in 1788–94. He was recorded at Branxholme on the Carriage Tax Rolls for 1794/5 and 1797/8, as well as farmer there in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls and for having 4 carriage or saddle horses. He served as a Deputy-Lieutenant for Roxburghshire in 1797 and 1798. He was listed among the voters of Roxburghshire in 1788, where his vote is described as 'partle a liferent vote from Cornelius Elliot, W.S., his brother-in-law'; if this is true then there has been confusion over the identity of his wife. He was also recorded as a voter in Selkirkshire in 1788. In 1791 he witnessed the baptism of one of Lord Napier's children at Wilton Lodge. He subscribed to John Learmont's book of poetry in 1791. He paid the Horse Tax at Branxholme in 1785–97, when he had up to 4 horses. In about 1800 he contributed £15 15s to the local subscription for the war against France. In around 1802 he paid about £460 in land tax on Hartwoodmyres. He was listed as a Commissioner for Selkirkshire in 1805. He was a trustee for the estate of William Oliver 'Auld Cash'. In 1806 he consulted with the Council over the appointment of Hawick's next schoolmaster. He married Anne Renata, daughter of Gavin Elliot of Midlem Mill in 1787; they had a large family, including Margaret Adam (b.1809), who was baptised in Hawick Parish. He may be the Adam whose sons William and Henry were baptised in Hawick in 1790 and 1791, respectively. In 1808 he was on the subscription list for Jamieson's Scots dictionary. He appears to have served as Chamberlain until around 1808, after which his trustees are referred to, suggesting he died around then. He died at Branxholme. Adam (18th/19th C.) resident of Greens in Liddesdale. He subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821, along with 'L., mason' (probably 'Little'), to whom he was surely related. Alexander (17th/18th C.) resident of Branxholme. He may have been son of James (who was also a resident of Branxholme). In 1705 he witnessed a baptism for William Oliver, 'servitor' in Todshawhaugh. He married Isobel Halliday in Hawick in 1707. Their daughter Isobel was baptised in 1708, with witnesses William Elliot in the Sandbed and Henry Orrock. Alexander (17th/18th C.) resident of Selkirk Parish, recorded in a legal document in 1721. Alexander (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Esther Douglas and their children included: Isobel (b.1735); and William (b.1737). He may be the Alexander of Teindside whose lands were valued at £426 13s 4d in the 1740s. Alexander (1715/6–71) resident of the Greens in Castleton Parish. His wife was Elizabeth Little, who died in 1793, aged 56. Their children included William (1768/9–1818), who died at Greens. They are buried in Ettleton Cemetery. Andrew of Newlands (17th/18th C.) recorded as a householder at Branxholme on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He is probably the same Andrew whose servant Andrew Lamb was listed among Covenanter fugitives in 1684. In 1696 and 1697 he leased a third of the farm of Branxholme Mains. James, who also leased a third, must have been a close relative, and he was surely also related to Adam, recorded in Branxholme in 1684. How these Ogilvies were related to the later Chamberlains at Branxholme is unclear; however, it is possible he is son of James, who was also a householder in Branxholme (and died in 1706). Probably the same Andrew witnessed baptisms in 1704 for William Scott in Branxholme, in 1707 for Robert Scott, carrier in Branxholmtown, in 1708 for James Scott 'Laird' and in 1713 for Thomas Anderson in Branxholme Town. In 1714 his servant Bessie Riddell got married. He was also recorded in 1719 in a declaration regarding the commonty between Wauchope and Templehall. In 1719 he was in Branxholme when his servant William Hume got married to Helen Govenlock (servant to William, also at Branxholme). He was father of William, and the pair witnessed a baptism for John Cavers (herd in Branxholme) in 1711. He also witnessed some of the births of the children of William Ogilvie in Hawick, presumably his son. He may be the Andrew who in Hawick in 1728 and 1730 witnessed baptisms for James Henderson in Branxholme. In 1714 he married Elizabeth, sister of Rev. John Ritchie of Minto; the marriage was performed at Minto by Rev. John Gilchrist of Bedrule, and was recorded in the Hawick Parish records. It is unclear if his lands of Newlands were those in Lilliesleaf or Castleton. Alexander (18th/19th C.) fifer with the Hawick Military Association. He was discharged in 1800 for disobeying orders. Drummer Thomas was also discharged and seems likely to have been his brother. George quit at the same time, and may have been another brother. Andrew (18th C.) recorded in 1754 when the Town Council paid for cords to bind him, as well as paying for him to be watched. He was presumably imprisoned for some crime. Rev. Andrew (1731–1805) son of William and Martha Laing, who were from Hawick. He was the 14th child, his father being tenant at Broadhaugh. He was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of Langholm in 1758 and ordained by the Dissenting Church of Newcastle at the Groatmarket Meeting-house. He became minister at Linton in 1781. He married Agnes Lomax from Newcastle in 1767 and she died in 1808. Their children were: Eleanor; Jane; Margaret; William; Joseph; and John. He wrote about the Parish of Linton for Sinclair's Statistical Account. David of Brieryyards (1726–c.83) probably son of William. He paid the window tax for Brieryyards in 1748. His daughter Martha married Thomas Turnbull in 1757 and he witnessed baptisms for the couple in 1758 and 1759. He was involved in a court case against Capt. John Douglas of Cavers. He was probably the Ogilvie of 'Briirieyards' listed among the Commissioners for Roxburghshire in 1761. He was listed among others who claimed rights to peat and turf on Wilton Common in 1764; at that time he was 'of Brieryyards' and also owned the farm of Broadlee in Ashkirk Parish. He was added to the voters' roll for Roxburghshire in 1780. Brieryyards passed to the Turnbulls (through his daughter) in 1783, suggesting that he was deceased by then. George (d.1807) listed as 'Messenger' in Hawick on the 1794 and 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. His death is recorded in the Scots Magazine, where he is also 'messenger', presumably meaning he was some kind of agent, possibly a 'messenger-at-arms', a lawyer appointed to execute summonses. He is probably the George who witnessed a baptism in Hawick in 1794 for James Scott and Isabel Hogg. He was probably the George who was married to Margaret Learmonth and who had several children born in Hawick: Janet (b.1780); Thomas (b.1781); John (b.1783); Alexander (b.1785); Michael (b.1788); Mary (b.1790); Margaret (b.1792); and George (b.1794). He could be the George who is recorded quitting the Hawick Miltary Association (volunteers) in 1800; drummer Thomas and fifer Alexander were discharged for refusing to oby orders and these may have been his sons. Gideon (17th C.) one of the earliest known members of this Roxburghshire family. In 1656 he married Susannah Scott of Harden (probably daughter of Sir William Scott). Their son William was the first Laird of Hartwoodmyres. Henry (18th/19th C.) recorded in Pigot's 1825/6 directory as proprietor of Hartwoodyres. He was a Commissioner of Selkirkshire in 1819. James (d.1706) indweller in Branxholme. In 1694 he was recorded as a householder at Branxholme on the Hearth Tax rolls. In 1696 and 1697 he leased a third of the farm of Branxholme Mains. Andrew, who also leased a third, must have been a close relative (perhaps his son) and he was surely also related to Adam, recorded in Branxholme in 1684. He is probably the James who (along with Francis Scott in Branxholme) witnessed a baptism for Walter Chisholme in 1684. He is probably the James who witnessed a baptism for a Grieve in 1698. In 1700 James Scott in Stobicote was fined for 'forestalling of the public market' by buying a lamb from his servant and then selling it to a butcher. In 1702 he witnessed baptisms for John Scott (also in Branxholme), for Gilbert Elliot in Nether Southfield and for James Laidlaw (in Branxholme Town). He was recorded as tenant in Branxholme (along with John Scott) when he witnessed a baptism for Walter Scott, herd in Branxholme Town. In 1704 he was 'tenent in Branocholm' when he witnessed a baptism for Walter Wilson. He received the lands of Hoscote 'in liferent' in 1705 from William Scott of Harden. He married Jane Elliot and their son was William, possibly the William born in Hawick around 1670. He witnessed a couple of baptisms in 1701, including one for Bailie Walter Elliot. His daughter Jane died in 1701 (when he gave money to the Parish). Other children were Adam, Andrew (probably the resident of Branxholme) and Alexander. He is probably the James who rented quarter of the farm of Borthaugh in at least the period 1690–98. James (18th C.) saddler in Hawick. He subscribed to Caw's 'Poetical Museum' (1784). John (b.1794/5) born in Cavers Parish, he was farmer at Cooms in Ewes Parish. He was there in 1841, 1851 and 1861. He married Jane Common and their children included Janet, Margaret, William, John, Adam, Robert and Sibella. John (b.1800/1) born in Hawick, he was a frameworker on the Loan. In 1841 and 1851 he was at about 23 Loan, and in 1861 he was living on Drumlanrig Place. His wife was Isabella and their children included Jane, George and Isabella. He also had step-children John, William and James Turnbull. In 1867 he donated to the Museum a 'Schilling courant'. Rev. John Henry (1888–1955) born at Kimberley, South Africa, son of John and Sarah Grant. He was educated at Selbourne College in London and was in business until 1913. In WWI he served in the Canadian Army in France. He graduated M.A. from Edinburgh University in 1922 and also attended New College. He was a student assistant at New College Settlement 1919–22 and Edinburgh High 1922–25. He was licensed by the Presbytery of Edinburgh in 1926 and was then ordained at Lilliesleaf and Ashkirk Kirk (the former Lilliesleaf Burgher Kirk). These were the last years for this church, before its congregation merged with that of the other church in the village. He resigned in 1928 to become a Chaplain to the R.A.F. He was in Nairobi in 1935, moving to Gibraltar in 1939 and Hong Kong in 1945. In 1934 he married Elizabeth (d.1942), daughter of Alexander Mitchell of New Luce. Little (1793/4–1862) stone mason at the Greens in Castleton Parish. He married Jane Little, who died in 1879, aged 81. Their children included: Margaret (1819/20–40); Agnes (b.1823); Jane or Janet (1825/6–46); Elizabeth (1826/7–47); Mary (b.c.1827); William (1828–1900); Helen (b.1831); Jane (again, b.1833); Mary (again, b.1837); Rabina (b.1839); Margaret (again, 1843–81); and Joan Black (1845–1913). He subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821, and was probably son of Adam from there, who also subscribed. Matthew (18th/19th C.) married Betty Murray. Their son Andrew was baptised in the East Bank Kirk in 1813. Michael (18th/19th C.) local whip-maker. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Andrew Murray. His sons were John and Andrew, who died in infancy. He could be the spinner Michael whose child died in Hawick in 1815. Mr. ?? of Teindside (18th C.). Recorded as 'Mr Ogilbie of Tiendside' in 1729 when he rented the Hawick 'litter' for a funeral. He may have been William or one of the other local Ogilvies. Robert (17th C.) witness in 1632 for the reversion document for Harwood by Edward Lorraine. Robert (18th C.) overseer for the early spinning company set up in Hawick by a group of local gentlemen. He was in this position for only a couple of years from about 1741. He could be the Robert who in 1720 married Jean, daughter of Robert Ruecastle. He may be the Robert who hired the Hawick mortcloth in 1760. Robert (18th/19th C.) farmer at Broadhaugh (and other farms), recorded on the Horse Tax Rolls of 1785–94. He was also owner of 5 farm horses on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He was additionally taxed for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797. Thomas (17th/18th C.) 2nd son of William of Hartwood. In 1705 he acted as factor for the young Margaret, daughter of the deceased John Scott of Synton. He may have been son of the 1st Laird of Hartwoodmyres and younger brother of Adam. Thomas Elliot 'Tom' of Chesters (1751–1831) 2nd son of William of Hartwoodmyres and Elizabeth Elliot, he was born in Ashkirk Parish. He joined the Madras civil service at the age of 19, becoming paymaster at Vellore, which was under siege in the early 1780s. He retired in 1786 and bought Crailing, then sold it the next year so he could purchase Chesters from the Bennet family. There he had a mansion designed by local architect William Elliot, the construction being completed in 1790. While it was being built he lived at Gala House. In 1788 he owned Chesters and associated lands (valued at £965 2s 3d), Lanton Mill and associated lands (valued at £93 9s 5d), as well as the farm of Newton (valued at £853 6s 8d) on the opposite side of the Teviot from Chesters, plus associated teinds. In 1788 he was mentioned as about to be added to the list of voters in Roxburghshire. He was at Chesters in 1791 when he subscribed to John Learmont's book of poetry. In 1791 he also witnessed the baptism of one of Lord Napier's children at Wilton Lodge. He was taxed for owning a carriage in the 1780s and 90s and had 5 female and 4 male servants at Gala House in 1788 and 2 female servants in 1789. By 1790 he was at Chesters, and he had 7 or 8 servants there until at least 1797. He also paid tax for having 4 horses at Chesters in the period 1790–97. He was additionally taxed for having 4 non-working dogs in 1797.

He served as a Deputy-Lieutenant for Roxburghshire in at least the period 1797–1801. He paid the land tax at Chesters and Lanton in 1811, as well as for lands around Newton in Bedrule Parish valued at about £850. He was listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805 and 1819, both times along with his son William. He joined the Roxburghshire Gentlemen and Yeomanry Cavalry and served as Deputy Lieutenant for Roxburghshire. He is listed as proprietor of Chesters on Pigot's 1825/6 directory. He was a friend of the writer Sir Walter Scott. In 1782 he married Hannah (1753–1833), 2nd daughter of Robert Dashwood and widow of Dr. Pasley. Their children were: Elizabeth (b.1783); William (b.1785), Chamberlain to Buccleuch; Adam (1792–1872), who married Letitia Keys Spence; George, who died young; Margaret (b.1795); and Jane, who married Donald Horne of Stirkoke. He may be the Thomas 'Esq' for whom a child's baptism appears to be recorded in Hawick in 1786, but crossed out. One of his daughters was probably the inspiration for the tune 'Miss Ogilvie of Chesters Waltz', published around 1810. Thomas (b.c.1780) listed as 'Stocking-maker Constable' on the 1801 list for the Militia ballot in Hawick. He thus appears to have had 2 jobs. Perhaps the same Thomas was a drummer with the Hawick Military Association. He was discharged in 1800 for disobeying orders. Fifer Alexander Thomas was also discharged and seems likely to have been his brother. George quit at the same time, and may have been another brother. Thomas Elliot of Chesters (1821–1896) eldest son of William and Alexina Falconer. He worked in the East Indian Civil Service in his 20s. In 1858 he was living at Branxholme when he donated several Egyptian items to the Museum, including a 'mummy crocodile and wrapper from the Catacombs of Thebes'. He served as a Commissioner of Supply and Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. He married Hope, only daughter of Henry Reeve. His widow took possession of the estate after his death. William (17th C.) married to Elspeth Turnbull. Their unnamed child was baptised in Hawick in 1684. William of Hartwoodmyres (d.1716) son of Gideon and Susannah Scott of Harden. He was progenitor of the Chesters branch of the family. He could be the William who had discharges with the treasurer of Selkirk in 1683 and 1684. He is probably the William who leased the farm of Todshawhill from the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1691 and who was listed there on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls, paying tax on 2 hearths. He was in Todshawhill in 1695 when he contributed £100 to the Darien Scheme. He was again listed as tenant of Todshawhill in 1696. He purchased Hartwoodmyres in 1694 and in 1705 bought Brieryyards from the Scotts. In 1695 he was a Commissioner of Supply for Selkirkshire. He is probably the Laird of Hartwoodmyres who witnessed a baptism for John Chisholme of Stirches in 1708. He also witnessed a baptism in 1709 for Francis Scott of Newton. He married Elizabeth Turnbull of Tofts and had one son, Adam. William (17th/18th C.) resident in Craik, where he is recorded in at least the period 1713–27. In 1713 he witnessed a baptism for Walter Scott of Merrylaw. His children, baptised in Roberton Parish, probably included: Andrew (b.1714); Edwart (b.1716); William (b.1716); Alexander (b.1717); Robert (b.1720); Adam (b.1721); an unnamed child (b.1724); another unnamed child (b.1726); and William (again, b.1727). Some of these children may be from a different family. William (c.1670–1755) possibly son of James and Jane Elliot. He was tenant farmer at Broadhaugh in 1715 and Branxholme in 1720. In 1715 in Hawick Parish he married Martha Laing (c.1680–1735); she was daughter of Bailie William Laing. His wife's name was recorded as 'Anna' Laing in 1720. Most of their children were baptised in Hawick, and included: James (b.1716); William (b.1718), probably father of the farmer at Broadhaugh and Whitrope; Jean (b.1720); Walter (b.1721); Janet (b.c.1722), who married John Potts in Castleton; Adam (b.1724); Edward (b.c.1725) died young; David (b.1726) of Brieryyards; Robert (b.c.1727); Alexander (b.c.1728); Martha (1728/9–1825), who married Thomas Turnbull in Hawick and died aged 96; Betsy (c.1730–52); Andrew (b.1731), minister at Linton; and Margaret (b.1735). The witnesses in 1718 were William Laing, 'lait Bailie of Hawick' (probably his father-in-law) and John Watson, Clerk (to the Regality) and in 1720 were Bailie William Laing and Andrew of Newlands. It is possible he is the same man as William of Hoscote. William of Hoscote (18th C.) probably son of Andrew. He was tenant in Branxholme from at least 1710, when he witnessed a baptism for Walter Crow in Branxholme Town. He and Andrew witnessed a baptism for John Cavers, herd in Branxholme, in 1711 and for Thomas Anderson in Branxholme Town in 1713. In 1718 he is recorded in a baptism being 'of Dolieridge [perhaps Deloraine], tenent in Branxholm'. In 1718

he was in Branxholme when his servant William Mitchellhill was married. In 1719 he was in Branxholme when his servants Helen Govenlock married William Hume (servant to Andrew, also at Branxholme) and Margaret Grieve married Walter Bowie. He was one of the Commissioners appointed to oversee the construction of the Teviot Bridge in Hawick. He is probably the William 'in Branxholm of Hahope' (this being indecipherable, and possible Hoscote is meant) recorded renting from the Duke of Buccleuch in Cavers Parish in 1723; he also rented Meadshaw that same year. In 1731 he obtained the tenancy of Whitchesters from Robert Scott of Falnash. In 1735 he leased Branxholme Park and part of Branxholme Mains from the Scotts of Buccleuch. He also rented Branxholm Park and other properties in 1737. He was one of 4 men to propose building a stillhouse and brewery in 1738, for which Robert Elliot of Fenwick was leased land by the Duke of Buccleuch the following year; this may have become Hawick's first distillery and brewery on Slitrig Crescent. He witnessed baptisms in 1738 for a daughter of Town Clerk James Weir and for merchant Andrew Riddell. There is a document of 1739 regarding a dispute between him and Walter Scott of Harden over the lands of Hoscote. His daughter Jean was baptised in Roberton Parish in 1728; Martha (b.1730), baptised in Roberton, may also be his daughter. He may be the same man as the William recorded at Craik in at least 1714–17 or possibly the same William as the tenant in Broadhaugh and Branxholme. William of Hartwoodmyres (b.1712) son of Adam and Jean Erskine. In 1742 he was one of the witnesses to the baptism of Walter Scott, last of Crumhaugh, son of Walter of Crumhaugh, residing at Midshiels; at that time he was 'of Bririyards' and so must have lived there for a time. He was Bailie to the Regality of Jedforest and attached baronies, i.e. appointed as factor to the Duke of Douglas for properties in the Southdean area, as well as elsewhere. He is probably the William recorded in Selkirk in receipts 'for supply' in 1742 and 'for burgh cess' in 1745 and in a discharge of 1744. In 1745 he was visited by members of Prince Charlie's army on their way to England, and forced to pay a 'tax'. He was Chamberlain to the Duke of Buccleuch from at least 1756 until about 1786, when he was replaced by Adam (probably his son). He acted as Chamberlain for Melrose, Ettrick Forest, Hassendean and Burnfoot. In 1757 he witnessed a baptism for his brother-in-law Walter Grieve, tenant in Branxholme Park. He was recorded as a Commissioner for Selkirkshire in 1761. He was a factor for the Duke of Buccleuch during the proceedings for the division of Wilton Common in 1765. He appears to have resided at Branxholme from about 1767, the first Chamberlain to do so. In 1777 he had correspondence with William Scott of Woll over shares of the Moss (preserved in the Walter Mason Collection). In 1778 and 1779 he paid tax for having a male servant at Branxholme. In 1745 he married Elizabeth, daughter of William Elliot (who bought Wolfelee). Their children were: Adam (d.1809), also Chamberlain, who died at Branxholme; Thomas Elliot (b.1751); William, who served with the Royal Navy and died in Antigua; and probably Jane (1758–1802), who married Maj. Gen. William Balfour. There are portraits of him and his wife. He (or another William) may also have married a daughter of John Laing of Westerkirk. William (d.1777) younger son of William, Chamberlain at Branxholme. He entered the Royal Navy in 1775 and died of fever in Antigua. William (1768/9–1818) probably son of Alexander and Elizabeth Little. He was farmer at Greens in Castleton Parish. He is recorded there on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as owner of 2 horses. His children included: Elizabeth (Betty, 1796/7–1870), who married Peter Hope; and probably Little (1793/4–1862), stonemason. William 'Willie' (1785–1876), J.P., Laird of Chesters, eldest son of Thomas Elliot and Hannah Dashwood. He was born in India, educated at Edinburgh High School, and then trained as an advocate (although he never practised). He became 2nd Lieutenant in the western troop of Roxburghshire Yeomanry in 1803 (although he missed the 'False Alarm', being in Edinburgh at college). He was still 'junior of Chesters' when listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805 and 1819. Before he succeeded to Chesters he lived at Ettrickbank, where it said that Burke and Hare would stop by in 1818 with fresh fish on their wagon (which would later convey a corpse back to Edinburgh). He succeeded to Chesters in 1831 and sold the farm of Newton to Thomas Scott of Peel in 1833. He was Captain in the local (Dumfries) Militia from 1811 and Major 1820–25; Bet Young wrote 'And gallant captain Ogilvie, a loyal heart indeed, Is so attach'd to Briton - wears the yellow and the red'. He was Chamberlain to the Duke of Buccleuch at least 1836–76 (replacing Major Riddell of Muselee), dealing with business around Hawick, as well as Teviothead, Jedburgh, Selkirk, Eckford and St. Boswells. He thus continued the tradition of his uncle and grandfather. He was the Chamberlain who was living at Branxholme around 1840 when the castle was renovated. A letter from him protesting about the content of Rev. J.A. Wallace's sermon in Hawick in 1841 is in the National Archives, as well as further letters relating to the siting of the Free Kirk. He was recorded at Branxholme in the 1841 census, along with a dozen servants. He was still there in 1851, back at Chesters House by 1861, but recorded there as Chamberlain in 1868. He was also Deputy-Lieutenant (from 1827), Commissioner of Supply, Justice of the Peace, Tax Commissioner and member of the Police Board for Roxburghshire. He is said to have been a persuasive canvasser (on the Conservative side) during the elections after the passing of the Reform Bill. He was an original member of the Jedforest Club and was the first President of the Angling Club set up in Hawick in 1858 (but which later folded). In 1861 he donated a 'curious iron instrument' to the Museum, found in a vault at Branxholme, and in 1867 the skull of a hippopotamus (via a missionary in Natal). He was listed as owner of Chesters and other lands in the Land Tax Rolls of about 1874. In 1818 he married Alexina, daughter of Alexander Falconer of Woodcot, East Lothian, and she died in 1884 at an advanced age. They had a large family, mostly baptised in Selkirk, including: Thomas Elliot (b.1821), who succeeded; William Falconer (b.1823), of the Bengal Army; Alexander (b.1824); George (b.1827); Francis Dashwood ('Frank', b.1828); and Alexina Margaret (b.1830). He died at Chesters at the age of 91 and is buried at Ashkirk. William (d.1830) said to be brother of Andrew, minister of Linton, and related to the Chesters family. He was probably actually nephew of Rev. Andrew and hence grandson of William, tenant at Broadhaugh. He is probably the William who farmed at Broadhaugh himself. 'Mr Wm. Ogilvie, Broadhaugh' is listed among the subscribers to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Scott and their children included Helen (b.1821). William (18th/19th C.) possibly son of Robert, who was farmer at Broadhaugh in 1797. He farmed at Whitrope as well as Broadhaugh. He subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. In 1825 he married Janet Byers, who died in 1888, aged 84. Their son William Robert (b.1827) was baptised in Cavers Parish. William Robert (b.1827) son of William and Janet Byres. He farmed at Broadhaugh and Whitrope. He was listed at Broadhaugh in 1866. On the 1851 census he employed 20 labourers, and they had 2 household servants. William Henry 'Will' (1869–1963) poet, who wrote many popular Border poems, including 'The Road to Roberton', 'The Raiders', 'Ho! For the Blades of Harden' and 'The Barefoot Maid'. He was born at Holefield farm near Kelso, where his father George was a reasonably well-off tenant farmer, 3 past generations of his family having served as Chamberlains to the Duke of Buccleuch. He was the eldest boy in a family of 8 and was educated at Kelso Grammar School by a governess, at Prep School in Yorkshire, and at Fettes College. He spent 1889–1901 in Australia working as a drover and breaker of wild horses, and there his poems of the outback life are well-known. He worked at Belalie Station in Queensland and Maroupe Station in South Australia and became a friend of Harry 'Breaker' Morant. He briefly lived in America (with an appointment to the Department of Agricultural Literature in State College, Iowa), and returned to Britain in 1905. He later became a journalist in Edinburgh and was Chair of Agricultural Journalism at Iowa University for 2 years. He returned to the Borders and married Madge Scott-Anderson of Ettrickshaws in 1908. They raised their son and daughter at Bowden and then moved to Kirklea in Ashkirk, where he spent the rest of his life. He visited Hawick often, for example as Callants' Club guest in 1910. He was also a Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. He wrote for various newspapers and magazines as well as publishing 16 books of verse and 4 volumes of prose, and was appointed official Bard to the Buccleuch Hunt. 'My Life in the Open' (1908) is an early autobiography, while 'Whaup O' the Rede' (1909) is an epic poem of over 100 pages, and 'The Land We Love' (1910) is a collection. Many of his local poems collected in 'The Border Poems of Will H. Ogilvie' (1959, 1993). His ashes were scattered on the 'Hill Road to Roberton'. Scocha set his poem 'The Land We Love' to music in 2004, and used it as the title for their second album. A cairn was erected in his honour in 1993 on the road between Ashkirk and Roberton, with a memorial plaque (sculpted by Bill Landles) and a replica at Bourke in Australia. After being vandalised, a replacement plaque will be placed at Harden. 2019 marked his 150th anniversary, with an exhibition in the Museum, publication of a reproduction version of 'Whaup o' the Rede', the unveiling of the new cairn and a memorial service in Ashkirk Kirk – 'Your cairn looks down on Ale Water's vale and the bonny Linns to Hawk's Nest, Whitslade and Blawearie where the hill road rins' [GM] (formerly written 'Ogilvy', 'Oglvie', etc. and sometimes 'Ogilbie' or 'Ogilby').

the Ogilvie Cairn (thu-ō-gul-vee-kārn) n. memorial cairn erected on the 'Hill Road to Roberton' in 1993, with the top sculpted by Bill Landles, depicting an opened book. In 2009 an adjacent stone seat was erected in memory of the founder members of the Will H. Ogilvie committee. The bronze was stolen in 2016.

O Grade (ō-grād) n. Ordinary Grade, the basic level of the Scottish Certificate of Education in one of a number of subjects, generally taken in the 4th year of High School, and effectively replaced in 1986 with the Standard Grade. Also used to denote a pass in a particular subject – 'hei hed O Grade wudwork an techy drawin'.

oith (oith) n., arch. an oath – '. . . the foresaid witnesses depones upon their conscience and the oith that they have made' [Ash1635].

Old see Auld

Old (ōld) n. Rev. Thomas (1682/3–1737) graduating from Edinburgh University in 1705, he became Chaplain to Archibald Douglas of Cavers. He was licensed to preach by Selkirk Presbytery in 1715 and was ordained at Legerwood in 1717. He married Margaret, daughter of John Fullarton of Auchenhay and their only child was Jane, who married Alexander Fall.

Old Mill Town (old-mil-town) n. also sometimes known as 'Auld Mill Toon', a song about Hawick, written by David Finnie in 2001. It appeared on the 2002 CD of his band '3D'. It has been sung by Finnie and Debbie Lyons at Common Riding functions regularly since. Originally scored for guitar, it was arranged for piano by Ian Seeley. Although clearly about our Town, the word 'Hawick' does not appear in the lyrics. The words appear in the 2009 re-edition of the song book.

the Old Statistical Account (thu-ōld-sta-tis-tee-kul-a-kownt) n. published as 'The Statistical Account of Scotland' in 1791–92, it became known as the 'Old' or (sometimes 'First') 'Statistical Account' after the appearance of the 'New Statistical Account' in 1834–45. The work was the result of questionnaires sent by Sir John Sinclair of Ulbster to over 900 parish ministers, with 160 questions covering geography, population, agriculture, industry and other topics. The individual parish reports, written by the local ministers, offer an invaluable (although clearly biased) picture of Scotland before the changes wrought by the Industrial Revolution. A 'Third Statistical Account' was started in the 1950s, with Roxburghshire being the last volume, published in 1992.

Oldsteson (ōld-ste-sin) n. former farmstead, probably in the upper Jed valley near Roughlee. The tenants there in 1669 were Cuthbert, William and James Robson and David Hall.

Olifer see Oliver

Oliphant (o-lee-fun') n. Adam (d.1746) he was ordained as minister of Glenbuchat in Aberdeenshire in 1718. In 1721 he was one of the preachers who filled in at St. Mary's Kirk when the incumbent was ill; his name was recorded there as 'Olifer'. In 1721 he married Margaret, daughter of Bailie Martin of Hawick and she died in 1755. Their children included James (merchant in Edinburgh), Samuel, John, Ann and Margaret. Lawrence (c.1434–98), eldest son of Sir John of Aberdalgie, he was 1st Lord Oliphant. He was mentioned in several document of the Swintons in the 1470s. He was one of the Justiciars at the Circuit Court in Jedburgh in 1493. Margaret Oliphant Wilson (1828–97) Scottish novelist who usually wrote as 'Mrs. Oliphant'. Born near Musselburgh, daughter of Francis W. Wilson and Margaret Oliphant. She married her cousin Frank Wilson Oliphant. Her husband died of consumption and she had to support her 3 surviving children through her writing. She wrote mainly historical fiction, including 'Lilliesleaf: Being a Concluding Series of Passages in the Life of Mrs. Margaret Maitland' (1855), which used the name of the local village, but had no other connection with it.

Olipher see Oliver

Olive Bank (o-leev-bawngk) n. villa type house on Wilton Hill Terrace (roughly at the top of the road leading up from Wilton Hill) once the home of cabinet-maker John Hunter. It was built in about 1879.

Oliver (o-lee-vur, -fur) n. Abraham (17th/18th C.) recorded at Smailcleughfoot on the 1696

Hearth Tax Rolls. He may thus have been related to the famous 'Ringan'. Adam 'Ade' (15th C.) tenant at Nether Dykeraw in 1541, along with James, Michael, John and Robert. Adam 'Ade' (16th C.) listed as tenant at 'Rowntrehil' in 1541 along with Marion and John, paying 11 shillings. Several other Olivers (John, Robert and Robert 'the schireff') were tenants in the other parts of the farm and may be related. Adam (16th C.) listed at Hyndhaughhead among Scotsmen who pledged loyalty to the English Crown in 1544. His name comes after 'Dande', in the same place, and so he was probably the son or younger brother. Adam 'Adie' (16th/17th C.) son of 'Dand the Lover'. The pair were listed among Scotts and other local men who were accused in 1590 of a raid into England 3 years earlier. His name is recorded as 'Eddie', which was often an English transcription fof 'Adie'. Probably the same man was listed as 'Ady Olipher called the Luther' when he was declared a fugitive in 1605. Adam (17th C.) recorded in a rental roll of 1669 along with Robert Laidlaw. It is unclear where they were tenants, but perhaps Northbank or Slack. Adam (17th/18th C.) married Margaret Martin in Hawick in 1721. Adam (d.1808) gardener in the 'East end of the Town'. He died in Hawick. Adam (1774/5–1848) farmer at Chapel in Lilliesleaf. He married Mary Hall, who was from Bowden and died in 1856, aged 65. Their children included: Adam (b.1803); Andrew (c.1810–92); Anne (d.1899), who married Thomas Turnbull; Mary (b.c.1820); and Thomas (b.c.1822). His children were mostly born in Jedburgh Parish. His wife was a widow at Chapel (recorded aged 77) on the 1851 census for Lilliesleaf. He and his wife are buried in the graveyard at Jedburgh Abbey. Adam (1803–77) eldest son of Adam, farmer at Chapel in Lilliesleaf Parish. In 1841 he was a gardener in Jedburgh. He married Elizabeth Cumming. Their children Adam, Thomas and William emigrated to Australia. Adam (19th C.) married Betty Michie in 1837, as recorded in both Cavers and Kirkton Parishes. Adam (1825/6–86) born in Langholm Parish, son of Robert and Elizabeth Little. He was a joiner on North Hermitage Street in Newcastelton. He was probably the Adam who was an elder of Newcastleton U.P. Kirk in the latter part of the 19th century. He married Marion Murray, who died in 1895, aged 68. Their children included: Robert (1847–49); David, who died in infancy; Margaret (1851/2–67); Helen (1853/4–90); John; Elizabeth; and Ann. Adam (b.1869) from Eccles Tofts, Berwickshire, son of William. He worked as coachman for several people in Berwickshire and around Kelso, before moving to Weens around 1900. He married Helen Hunter and had 3 sons. Adam (19th/20th C.) resident of Deanbrae. In 1906 he contributed to the fund for the renovation of Kirkton Kirk. Agnes (17th C.) resident of Spittal-on-Rule on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. Agnes (17th C.) blacksmith at Chesters according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. She was probably related to other Olivers listed there, namely 2 Johns and 2 Thomases. Agnes (b.1780/1) born in Ettrick Parish, she was a widow who lived at 12 Buccleuch Street. It is unclear who her husband was, but clearly a prominent local man, since she is listed as 'Ind.' and 'House Proprietess' in the censuses. She was already a widow on the 1841 census and lived until at least 90, since she was still on Buccleuch Street in 1871. In Slater's 1852 directory she is listed among the local gentry. In about 1874 she was recorded owning part of the former lands of Patrick Cunningham in Hawick. Alexander 'Sandy' (15th C.) recorded in 1502. George Douglas, Master of Angus, was fined for failure to prove the arrest of his son Thomas, called 'Waitschod'. Alexander (16th C.) tenant in part of Westerhouses in 1541. The tenants in the larger part of the farm were Nicholas and Margaret. Alexander (16th C.) recorded at Westerhouses among men complained about by the English Warden for a raid into England in 1587. He is probably a descendant of the earlier Alexander in Westerhouses. Alexander (b.c.1770s) weaver in Denholm according to the ballot lists for the Militia in Cavers Parish in 1799 and 1801. He may be the Alexander who married Agnes Ferguson and whose children, baptised in Cavers, included Ralph (b.1812) and Betty (b.1816). Alexander (b.c.1780) labourer at Brighouse according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish. Alexander (18th/19th C.) listed as secretary of the Conservative Reading Room in Pigot's 1837 directory. Alexander (b.1804) born in Ashkirk Parish, son of John and Anne Niel. He was a miller in the Hawick area. He was at Hallrule in 1841 and Synton Mill in 1851. By 1861 he was toll-keeper at Ashkirk Toll Bar, and was then a widower. He married Jane Scott (from Selkirk) in Hobkirk Parish in 1831 and their children included: Agnes (b.c.1832); John (b.c.1834); Robert (b.c.1836); James (b.1838); Adam (b.1839); William (b.1843); Alexander

(b.1845), who probably died in infancy; and Walter (b.1848). Alexander (19th C.) married Jane Ballantyne in Hawick in 1847. Rev. Alexander (b.1827) born at Jedhead, Southdean Parish, son of Thomas and Jane Baptie. He was educated at Mowhaugh School in Bowmont valley, at Yarrow School and at Edinburgh and Glasgow Universities, where he won multiple prizes. In 1854 he became assistant minister of the East U.P. Kirk in Galashiels, moving to Regent Place Church, Glasgow in 1865. He was associated with the Temperance movemnt and the Liberation Society and published many articles and books. He received a D.D. from Edinburgh University in 1888 and was Moderator of the U.P. Synod in 1894. He may be the Alexander who married Anne Hardie in Southdean Parish in 1852. Andrew (16th C.) tenant at Kilnsyke according to a 1541 rental roll of Jedforest. Andrew (16th C.) tenant at Whiteside in 1541, along with Patrick, Gilbert and John. Perhaps the same 'Dand' in Whiteside was pledge for his son and brothers in 1571. He was also one of the leaders of the Olivers for whom the Turnbull and Rutherford chiefs served as pledges in the same year. He was surely related to David, who was recorded as tenant in Whiteside in 1571/2, along with his unnamed brother. His name appears again in 1572/3, along with Olivers and others from Southdean, with Sir Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule and Richard Rutherford of Edgerston as cautioners. Andrew 'Dand' (16th C.) recorded in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He is named as 'Dande Ollyver of Hyndrawghthede', which was presumably Hyndhaughhead. Andrew 'Dandy' (16th C.) listed at Falside among Scotsmen who pledged loyalty to the English Crown in 1544. His name is listed right after Ringan in the same place, and hence they are surely related. Andrew 'Dand', 'the Lover' (16th C.) listed among men complained about in 1590 by the English Warden for a raid into England in 1587. The others mentioned were local Scotts, as well as a Laidlaw, a Sharp, a Rutherford and a Hall. His son 'Eddie' (which probable means 'Adie', i.e. Adam) was also on the list in 1590. It is unclear how they were related to other Olivers. Andrew 'Lang Andro' (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1611 along with Hob of 'Heidfauldis' when they refused to pay tithes to the Minister of Jedburgh. Andrew 'Dan' (16th/17th C.) tenant in Clarilee in 1610 when Adam Robson was found guilty of stealing a cow from him. Andrew (16th/17th C.) called 'of Thorterwood' in Jedforest. He was deceased in 1657 when his grandson inherited his lands in Jedburgh. Andrew 'Dand' (17th C.) lived with his son Thomas at West Falside in Southdean Parish about 1640. Andrew (17th C.) tenant in Sneepdykes according to a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. Andrew (17th C.) grandson of Andrew 'called of Thorterwode'. He inherited his grandfather's lands in Jedburgh in 1657, ratified by the Earl of Lothian in 1677. Andrew (17th C.) cordiner in Darnick near Melrose. He is recorded in the proceedings of the Melrose Regality Court in 1660. Given the shoemaking trade, there is a possible connection with the Olivers in Hawick. Andrew (17th C.) tenant of Bairnkine. In 1684 his son Andrew was among those listed as fugitives for being a Covenanter. Andrew (either him or his son), along with Richard and Robert, also in Bairnkine (and perhaps also his sons) were listed among those who refused to take the Oath of Allegiance in 1684. He was recorded at 'barnkin' in 1690 when listed among people owing money to the deceased Mark Turnbull and Bessie Kerr. He was also listed at Bairnkine on the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. Andrew (17th C.) resident at Slacks in Southdean Parish according to the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694, when he possessed 3 hearths. Andrew 'Dand' (17th C.) resident at Roughlee according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. Andrew (17th C.) 'cottar' at Hallrule who was listed among the poor in Hobkirk Parish in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Andrew 'Dand' (17th C.) recorded along with Steven as a tenant at Falside on the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls, when they paid tax on 2 hearths. There was a separate Steven also listed, as well as John, plus Thomas and his sons; presumably some of these Oliverse were closely related. Andrew (17th/18th C.) resident at Swinnie. His wife Janet Learmonth (1691/2–1736) was recorded on a tombstone in Abbotrule Kirkyard, along with Isabel (d.1756), possibly his daughter. Andrew 'Dand' (18th C.) tenant at Falside in Southdean Parish around 1740, along with Thomas and William. He may be the same Andrew who was tenant at Alton and Adderstoneshiel with William (possibly his brother) in the 1760s. He may be the 'Dand' who had the following children christened in Southdean parish: Janet in 1739; unnamed in 1741; and Agnes in 1744. He may be related to the earlier Dand who was recorded at Falside. Andrew (18th C.) tenant in 'Rigg' in Cavers Parish when he paid the window tax in 1748. He was probably at Caerlenrig. However, it is unclear how he was related to other Olivers. He may be the Andrew whose son

Andrew was baptised in Cavers in 1747. Andrew (18th C.) tenant at Unthank in Hobkirk Parish. He farmed there after about 1757, when Unthank was sold by Thomas Scott to William Elliot of Wolfelee. Andrew (18th C.) listed at 'Fodderleebirks' in the subscription list for Caw's 'Poetical Museum' (1784). He may be the same as one of the contemporary Andrews. Andrew (b.c.1765) farmer at Westerhouses in Southdean Parish. His wife was Elizabeth. He was an Elder in the Relief Kirk in Jedburgh. He and his wife travelled there for services in a 'noddy'. His children included Elizabeth and Janet. He may be the Andrew recorded at Doorpool in the 1794 Horse Tax Rolls. Andrew (b.c.1770) cooper at Kirk Style in Hobkirk Parish. His wife was Ann. Andrew (d.1811) from Jedburgh, he was the keeper of the Carter Bar Toll. His death is recorded in Hawick. Andrew (18th C.) mason in Newcastleton. In 1797 he was listed among men on the ballot to serve in the Militia. In 1799 he was among those 'In the Ballot Box 1797 not drawn still residing in the parish of Castletoun' and in 1801 he was a mason at Thorlieshope. He may be the Andrew who married Peggy Gray and whose children, baptised in Castleton Parish, included John (b.1808) and Margaret (b.1812). Andrew (18th/19th C.) licensed grocer at 4 High Street. He married Elizabeth (b.1774), 6th child of Walter Purdom. Their children included: Agnes (b.1806); and Andrew (b.1808), a tobacconist at 42 High Street. He may be the 'Oliver' whose premises are shown at about No. 42 on Wood's 1824 map. Andrew (b.c.1780) shoemaker in Hawick according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia. He was probably related to other shoemaking Olivers. Andrew (b.c.1780) servant at West Mains according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Cavers Parish. Andrew (b.c.1780) son of 'Mr Oliver' tenant in Kirkton, according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia. His father was probably either James or Thomas, who were recorded at Kirkton in 1797. Andrew (18th/19th C.) eldest son of William of Langraw. As a boy he was taught by James Sanson (archetype for 'Dominie Sampson'). He was a successful wool stapler and cloth manufacturer in Huddersfield. He inherited Langraw in 1812, having to pay off some debts. It is said that when the Hare Cairn was dismantled he sent the carved cist slab to Abbotsford. He was listed as Andrew of Langraw in Pigot's 1837 directory. In 1803 he married Jean (or Jane), daughter of Thomas Scott, who farmed at Woollee; she was a first cousin of the writer Sir Walter Scott. He was succeeded by his son William. Andrew 'Rolly' (1793–1857) auctioneer and lawyer, father of James, and founder of Andrew Oliver & Son when he came to Hawick in 1817. He was son of James and Isabel Elliot, born at Marlefield Hope, Eckford. He had a brother William, who was a grain-works managed in Berwick and another brother George, who was a baker in London. He was an apprentice solicitor in Kelso, then worked in Annan, before moving to Hawick. He characteristically always wore a tall, white, felt hat, with a broad, black band. He started the auction mart system in 1847, probably the first of its kind in Britain. He became a member of the Hawick Curling Club in 1819 and was Clerk of the club for many years. He was described as a 'writer' when he subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821 and Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He is recorded in Pigot's 1825/6 directory as a writer and 'messenger' on the High Street. His premises at that time were probably one of the 3 places on the High Street marked 'Oliver' on Wood's 1824 map. There are several letters to him from the 1820s preserved in the Walter Mason Collection. He was probably the Andrew rcorded as Clerk to the Course at the Common-Riding races in 1834. In Pigot's 1837 directory he was listed as an auctioneer on the Sandbed, as well as a 'Messenger at Arms' and writer. In 1852 he was listed at Bridge House as a messenger at arms and 'Andrew Oliver & Son' are listed as writers. He was at the Sandbed in 1841 (probably already in Bridge House) and listed as a writer and auctioneer. By 1851 he was explicitly at Bridge House. In 1852 his company is listed as coal agents at the Station for the Marquis of Lothian's coal fields, as well as insurance agents for Sun. In Coldstream he married Catherine Brown, who died in 1867, aged 72. Their children included: Jane (b.1815); and James (b.1817), also a local lawyer, accountant and auctioneer. He is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. Andrew (18th/19th C.) married Margaret Wallace in Southdean Parish in 1807. Andrew (18th/19th C.) married Janet Stevenson in Hobkirk in 1816. Andrew (b.1806/7) from Kirkton, he was a mason at 'Parkhouses' (i.e. Burnhead Cottages) in Wilton Parish. He is listed among heads of households at Howdenburn in Wilton Parish in 1835 and at 'Pityhouses' in 1840. His wife was Isabella Glendinning and their children included Isabella, James, Margaret, William and Andrew. Andrew (b.1808) son of Andrew and Elizabeth Purdom. He was a tobacconist at 42 High Street. In 1841 he was living there with his mother and sister Margaret. His sister was his housekeeper in 1851, when he was employing 5 people. Andrew (b.1807/8) born in Jedburgh Parish, he was son of Adam and Mary Hall. Like his father he was farmer at Chapel in Lilliesleaf Parish. In 1861 he was farming 150 acres and employing 5 people. He and his brother Thomas were the 'Messrs Oliver' recorded at Chapel in 1868. They were unmarried and lived with their sister Mary. Andrew (19th C.) Schoolmaster at Cogsmill and Denholm. His grandmother was a Cranston, sister of Andrew Murray's wife. He was at Cogsmill around the 1880s. Andrew Rutherford (1855–1918) eldest son of James. He became partner in Andrew Oliver & Son, Auctioneers and Live Stock Salesmen in 1888. He was a respected figure in local agricultural circles, being Honorary Secretary of the West Teviotdale Agricultural Society and of the Teviotdale Farmers' Club for many years. He was also a supporter of the Common Riding and patron of racing, hunting and other sports. He lived at Thornwood, died there and is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. A memorial clock to him overlooked the principal ring in the Auction Mart. He became a director of Blenkhorn, Richardson & Co. in 1909. Oliver Park was named after him. Andrew (1856–1938) 2nd son of Robert and Violet Rodger, he was born at Dinlabyre in Castleton Parish. He became an apprentice blacksmith in Greenlaw, spent some time in Ireland and then was blacksmith at Allanton, Berwickshire for almost 50 years. Andrew (1885/6–1937) died at Falside and is buried in Southdean cemetery. Anne (b.1811/12) from Langholm, she was son of John, tailor in Newcastleton. In 1861 she was recorded as 'feuar' at about 15 Hermitage Street, living alone. She may be the Anne who was juvenile librarian in the Parish in the 1860s. Archibald (16th C.) recorded as tenant of half of the lands of 'Greithil' in Jedforest in 1541. Archibald of Bush (d.1843) 2nd son of William of Dinlabyre. He is probably the Archibald, son of William, who became a surgeon-apothecary's apprentice in Edinburgh in 1799. He joined the 4th Bengal Native Infantry. By 1815 he was made Captain, then became deputy paymaster at Benares and retired at the rank of Major. He possessed Bush (also called 'Overton Bush') near to Edgerston. He became a member of the Jedforest Club in 1826. He married Anne, daughter of Col. John Anderson. They had no children and Bush eventually went to his nephew William, son of his brother John. There are portraits of him and his wife by Sir John Watson Gordon. Archibald (b.c.1790) son of James, he was born in Bedrule Parish and was tenant farmer at Denholm Mill. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He was tenant of Denholm Mill according to Pigot's 1825/6 and 1837 directories. In 1841 he was living at Denholm Mill, but was deceased by 1851. He married Ann Laing in Cavers Parish in 1819 and she died in 1857. Their children included: James (b.1820); Agnes (b.1821); Elizabeth (b.1823); Helen (b.1825); Ann (b.1827); Alison (b.1829); Margaret ('Maggie', b.1831); Joanne (b.1833); and John Laing (b.1836). Several of his daughters worked in Hawick as milliners and dressmakers. He was surely related to John, who was also at Denholm Mill in 1825. Archibald (18th/19th C.) nailer at Teviothaugh, who was charged with poaching in 1815, but acquitted. He was probably related to John, also a nailer at the same place. Arthur (1927/8–2006) worked at Craik Forest, then as a hand-knitter at Deanbrae Mill. He was a keen walker and angler, as well as Common-Riding supporter. A stalwart of the Teviotdale Harriers, he joined in 1947, served as President, and in 200 received a trophy for 50 years as a running member. He was well known throughout the Town for his generous spirit. He married Lillian and had children John, Andrew, Margaret and Susan. Barton (b.1835) son of Castleton shepherd George. He may also have been called 'Angus Barton', after the local minister. In 1861 he was an agricultural labourer at Bairnkine in Southdean Parish and he later farmed at the Dodlins. He married Jessie Murray and their children included Catherine (b.1860), George (b.1862), William (b.1864), James (b.1866), Adam (b.1869), Betsy (b.1871, who married John Mable), Margaret (b.1873), Jessie (b.1876), Jane (b.1879) and David (b.1880). Charles (16th C.) tenant at Slacks in 1541, paying 11 shillings yearly. Thomas and John were tenants in the other part of Slacks. His name is recorded as 'Carolo Olivere'. Charles son of Robert, he followed his father by working at Lyle & Scott's, eventually becoming Managing Director. He arranged a partnership with Christian Dior in 1954. He was a Captain during WWI, being awarded the Military Cross. He married Maisie, daughter of baker Thomas Brydon. He lived at Bucklands. Christian (17th C.) listed 'in Lustruther' among people declared to be rebels for refusing to take the Oath of Allegiance in 1684. It is unclear if this was a man or a woman. David (d.c.1170) recorded as 'Olifard', he was King David I's godson. He was probably of Norman descent, and had brothers who remained in England. If related to other Olivers (and not the Oliphants), then he is probably the first known ancestor of that family. He served with King Stephen's army at Winchester in 1141, against his godfather. But when King David escaped he helped him return to Scotland, for which he was granted lands at Smailholm and Crailing, as well as the Barony of Bothwell. Around 1150 he witnessed the grant of the Church of Molle to Kelso Abbey. He granted the tithe of Crailing Mill to the monks of Jedburgh Abbey about 1162, and he also made grants to Dryburgh and Soutra. In 1165 he was Justiciar of Lothian (perhaps the first on record), meaning he exerted authority from the Tweed to the Firth of Forth. He may have married a daughter of Berengar Engaine, who previously held Crailing. He had 5 sons, David (who succeeded), William, Walter, Philip and Fulco (or 'Fulk', Parson of Smailholm). David (d.c.1190s) succeeded his father David 'Olifard' (although these generations are confused). He had at least 2 sons: Walter, who married a daughter of the Earl of Strathearn and succeeded his father; and David, who married Johannah, heiress of Calder. Thus both sons moved further North, where the name was softened to 'Oliphant'. David (13th C.) son of Walter, from whom he inherited lands in Roxburghshire at Crailing and Smailholm. He is recorded along with Walter in a charter of Soutra Hospital in 1273. He married Devorguille (whose surname is not given), but died without an heir. Their Border lands went to his sister, who had married Walter of Moray. His wife could be the 'Dervorgulla Olyfart' who was involved in a lawsuit with Dervorgulla de Baliol in 1289. David (d.c.1502) resident of Strynds. He was probably son of Gilbert, and appears to be a different man that David 'Nae Guid Priest', who also lived in the same place at the same time. He is recorded in 1502 along with Robert 'in stryndis' producing a remission for stealing a total of 101 sheep from William Ker at 'Dernewik-mure', with Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst as his surety. He was also allowed to pay a fine for his part in stealing sheep from 'Jedworthe, Rowcastell, Langtoune, and Bethroull'; this was along with Robert and John (brother of Ingram). Also that year he was allowed to pay a fine for a further theft (of a long, detailed list of items) from Martin Wood in Whitfield, this being along with 'Long John' and 'Little John', again with Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst as his surety. Additionally in 1502, along with John son of Gilbert 'in kilclewis', he was allowed to compone for stealing 19 sheep and a cow from Maton and six sheep from Muirhouselaw; Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst was his surety. Probably the same David, brother of John son of Gilbert, in Strange, was also recorded in 1502 when they were allowed to compone for stealing a horse and a pot from Ednam. After failing to 'fynde sufficient souerties' he was sentenced to hanging in 1502, along with Robert, Martin and Matthew, all from Strynds (they may have been his uncle and cousins). All 4 were subsequently captured, and assuming the execution took place, this marks the demise of this once powerful rieving branch of the Olivers. David 'Nae Guid Priest' (15th/16th C.) resident of Strynds, which was near Westerhouses in the Rule valley, later called Strange. In 1502 he had remission for being involved in a series of raids, with Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst serving as surety, this included: stealing 12 oxen and cows from Sir David Home at Lammermuir; associating with rebels Thomas and Andrew Grahamslaw; stealing a horse from John Douglas in Jedburgh; stealing 3 horses from a farm at Nisbet; and stealing 20 sheep from George Douglas in Trows. He is recorded there as 'Dauid oliver in le stryndis, vocatis david na gud preist', but it is unclear how he got this odd nickname. He was recorded further in 1502 as 'na gude clerk' when he and John 'in le stryndis' were allowed to compone for crimes commited against Gilbert Lamb at Jedburgh, including seriously wounding him; Andrew Kerr was surety. Additionally in 1502 along with Ingram and John in Strange, he had remission for stealing oxen from Ancrum, as well as sheep, a cow and other items from Maxton. In 1505 Robert Oliver, 'Rob with the Dog' was given remission for previously intercommuning with him and John 'Cadger'; his nickname is there recorded as 'Na-gude-Preist'. David of 'Hyndhewche' (16th C.) recorded in 1557 as the 'taker' of John Kerr of Ferniehirst. He was presumably an officer of the Warden, and based at Hyndhaugh in Southdean Parish. Probably the same man is listed as tenant of 'Hynhanchheid', i.e. Hindhaughhead in Monipennie's list of the Border Clans published in about 1594 (but probably from earlier). In 1583 William Fenwick of Wallington (near Otterburn) complained that he and 200 others raided his farm, taking cattle, horses and 16 prisoners; this appears to have been a raid into England to recover cattle and other goods stolen from them earlier.

David (16th C.) recorded in 1571/2 as tenant in Whiteside, when John Rutherford of Hunthill was surety for him and his brother. Although his brother's name is not given, this may be 'Dand', who was also recorded in Whiteside at about the same time. David (17th C.) recorded as one of the tenants in Falside in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. David (17th C.) recorded as tenant in Southdean in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. He was probably related to James and Thomas, who were also listed as tenants there. David (17th C.) resident of Nether Dykeraw according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. David (17th/18th C.) one of the Olivers of Falside in Southdean Parish, who left there in 1747. He may be the same man as the David recorded at Falside in 1669, or alternatively was a descendant of his. He was tenant farmer at Abbotrule Townfoot. He may have been father of some of Thomas, Dand and William, who were tenants at Falside around 1740. David (b.1829–bef. 1909) labourer in Newcastleton, son of George and Elspeth Murray. He worked as a railway surfaceman. He was at 37 South Hermitage Street in 1861. In 1853 he married Margaret Pott (b.1833) in Hobkirk Parish; she was daughter of Robert Pott and Mary Armstrong. Their children, baptised in Castleton Parish, included: Mary (b.1853); George (b.1855); Robert (b.1857); James (b.1860); Andrew (b.1862); John (b.1864); James (b.1867); and Margaret (b.1873). David Councillor in Newcastleton, representing the village on the County Council in the mid-20th century. He lived on South Hermitage Street. He acted as first Chairman of the village hall committee. David (1937/8–) born in Eastbourne, he lived for a few years in Selkirk, coming to Hawick at the age of 10. He attended Drumlanrig and the High School, was an apprentice painter for the Store, did National Service in the Royal Scots Greys and later worked for Pringle's. In 1967 he set up his own painting and decorating business, eventually retiring in 2001. In 1960 he married Betty, who was from Falkirk. The couple have been active in the Salvation Army and he was also President of the local Rotary Club. They couple's chldren are Kay, Gail and David; they celebrated their diamond wedding anniversary in 2020. Derek (1961/2–) son of Lawrie and Marlene and brother of Greig and Lyndsay. He was Acting Father to Jamie Turnbull in 2005. He served as 1514 Club President for 3 years 2020–22, as a result of the Covid pandemic. He moved to Highchesters near Roberton in 2006 and became involved with the Roberton Show and Foreman Hall. He has been on the Linden R.F.C. committee and active in coaching mini-rugby. He married Clare and they have sons Robbie and Thomas. Douglas (1871–1961) of Hassendeanbank, son of James Oliver and Jane Rutherford. He attended Mill Hill School (where James Murray had taught) and served in the Army during WWI. He entered the family Auctioneering business in 1887 and was sole proprietor by 1918. He was also Secretary of the Curling Club. He was Chairman of the Hawick Heritable Investment Bank and Chairman of the managers of the Cottage Hospital. He served in the Boer War. In 1904 he married Sybil Brown from Galashiels and their children were: Florence Murray (b.c.1905); Muriel Rutherford (b.c.1907); Elsie Margery (b.c.1910); and James Kenneth Murray ('Ken', 1914–99). The family lived at Hassendeanbank, probably from about the time of their marriage. Ebenezer (b.1718) son of James, the Cavers Schoolmaster, he was born in Cavers Parish. He was the 3rd generation of his family to be Schoolmaster in Cavers and he also served as Session Clerk. In 1759 his Schoolmaster's salary was 180–200 merks. In the 1750s he also received £3 10s as Session Clerk, increasing to £5 by 1767. In 1773 he is recorded augmenting his income through a market garden at East Cavers. He was married to Janet Brown, and their children included: John (b.1750); and James (b.1753). In 1762 he had a child born called James. It is possible that his son John was the Schoolmaster in Castleton whose son Ebenezer was born in 1778. Ebenezer (b.c.1770s) clockmaker in Denholm. He was recorded as a labourer from Denholm in 1797 on the ballot to serve in the Militia. In 1799 he was listed among those 'In the Ballot Box 1797 not Drawn Still residing in Cavers Parish'. He was recorded as 'Watch mender' in Denholm on the 1801 ballot for the Militia. He was also recorded as watch and clockmaker in Denholm on Pigot's 1825/6 directory. He is probably the Ebenezar married to Betty Scott, whose children (born in Cavers Parish) included: John (b.1802), probably a weaver in Hawick with an eldest son also called Ebenezer; James (b.1804); Betty (b.1807); Margaret (b.1809); Thomas (b.1811); and Ebenezer (b.1814). He was surely descended from the earlier schoolmaster. Ebenezar (19th C.) Secretary of the Denholm Horticultural Society in the 1860s. Edward (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 being 'in Jedforest', although no more specific disgnation is given. At the Justice-aire in Jedburgh, the Coroner (William Cranston) was fined for failing to arrest him. Edward (16th C.) tenant at 'Stryndis' (i.e. Strange) in a rental roll of 1541. His name is listed as 'Eduardo Olivere'. He was probably related to earlier Olivers of Strange. Edward (16th C.) recorded as being 'of Lymkylwodd' in 1544, in a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to England. His lands were somewhere in Jedforest, like the other Olivers listed. Elizabeth 'Bessie' (17th C.) listed along with Robert in Bank, on a list of people who refused to take the Oath of Allegiance in 1684 and were declared rebels. Robert was probably her husband. She was among a relatively small number of women who were prosecuted for being Covenanters. Elliot (1854–1913) eldest son of lawyer James. He became a partner in the family firm Geo & Jas. Oliver. However, he retired early because of problems with his eyesight. He died in Christchurch, Hampshire. Francis (1749–1829) tenant farmer of Heap. He was one of the founders of the Relief Church in Hawick. He died in Hawick. Francis (18th/19th C.) flesher in Newcastleton. He was listed as male head of his family in 1835 and 1836 and as a carter in 1837. Perhaps the same Francis was a servant at Millburnholm on the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish. Frederick Scott (1864–1934) born in Edinburgh, son of merchant John Scott Oliver. He became a prominent politician, particularly as a Unionist. In 1915 he purchased the estate of Edgerston from William Edward Oliver (who was not a relation). He married his cousin Katharine Augusta McLaren. Gavin (16th C.) tenant farmer at 'West Houses' (possibly Wester Houses in the Rule valley). He is recorded in a bond of 1562 along with William, tenant at Lustruther, who may have been a relative. The 2 of them had to enter Robert Robson, called 'Foul Mouth' to John Kerr of Ferniehirst. Geoffrey (15th C.) father of Matthew. His son was recorded at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1493 when he was fined for non-appearance, along with other Olivers. George (16th C.) recorded as 'Gorge Ollyver of Whitside' in a list of Scotsmen who swore allegience to Henry VIII in 1544. 'Jake' and 'Patte' Oliver were also listed as being at Whiteside, and hence probably related. George (16th C.) tenant in 'Clarely' listed along with 2 other Oliver chiefs in Monipennie's list published around 1594 (but probably from earlier). This was the farm of Clarilee, lying roughly between Hyndhaughhead and Roughlee. George (16th C.) recorded in Chesters in 1571, when he was one of the 3 main leaders of the Olivers for whom Sir Thomas Turnbull, John Turnbull of Minto, Richard Rutherford of Edgerston and John Rutherford, younger of Hunthill, served as pledges. He was listed again in 1572/3 along with other Olivers, as well as William Kirkton of Stewartfield, with Sir Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule and Richard Rutherford of Edgerston as their cautioners; this appears to have been in relation to Kerr of Ferniehirst being declared a fugitive and all his former supporters swearing allegiance to the Crown. George (17th C.) recorded in 1669 as tenant in 'Slacks', along with William, who was surely a close relative. John was also listed as tenant there. He witnessed the baptism of a daughter of John Ker of Shaw at Southdean Kirk in 1681. George (17th C.) recorded as one of the tenants in 'Townheid' (near Chesters) in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. George (d.c.1685) tenant in Swinnie when his will was recorded in 1685. He was surely related to Thomas, who was at Swinnie at the same time. George (17th C.) brother of Thomas of Ashtrees. In 1691 he wounded Robert Rutherford, Minister of Ancrum, following an attempt to disrupt the service there. This was presumably still fall-out from the days of persecution of the Covenanters. George (17th C.) resident of Northbank according to the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. George (17th C.) resident of Strange in Southdean Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. He was surely related to John who was also listed there in 1694, as well as James recorded there in 1689. George (17th C.) recorded at Woodhouse on the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. George (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His children, with no mother's name given, included Bessie (b.1696), Jean (b.1701) and Margaret (b.1703). George (17th/18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. In 1699, along with shoemaker Robert (presumably a relative, perhaps his brother), he witnessed a baptism for cooper John Turnbull. He was shoemaker in 1712 when he witnessed a baptism for cook James Wright. He married Jean 'Betie' (i.e. Beattie). Their children included: Janet (b.1701); Isobel (b.1701); Margaret (b.1703); Grizel (b.1705); and Agnes (b.1708). The witnesses in 1703 included Robert and in 1705 were carrier John 'Atkin' and Henry Orrock. Bessie (b.1696) may also have been his daughter. It is unclear how he was related to the later shoemaker George. He could be the George who witnessed baptisms for the other George in 1726, 1728 and 1731. He is probably the George 'Senior Shoemaker' who witnessed a baptism for tailor Thomas Kay in 1739. George (18th C.) Hawick shoemaker, said to be from the Dykeraw Olivers, he may have been son of Robert and Agnes Atkins (or Aitkin). He may be the George who witnessed a baptism for shoemaker Robert (and Bessie Blackhall) in Hawick in 1730. He is described as 'senior' in 1740, so he probably had a son George at that time. In 1721 he married Margaret, eldest daughter of John Aitkin. Their children included: Robert (b.1722); John (b.1724); Agnes (or Annie, b.1726), who married George Douglas, from the Timpendean branch; George (b.1728); James (b.1729); Margaret (b.1731); William (b.1733); Isobel (b.1736); Walter (b.1738); and Bessy (b.1745). The witnesses in 1726 were George and Robert Oliver, in 1728 were George and Walter (presumably near relatives), in 1729 were smith John Scott and Patrick Forman, in 1731 were George (again) and John Telfer (perhaps the Beadle), and in 1745 were weaver Andrew Jardine and mason Adam Turnbull. In 1725, along with cooper John Aitkin (perhaps his father-in-law), he witnessed a birth for miller John Henderson. He is probably the shoemaker George who witnessed baptisms for shoemaker Robert in 1757 and 1765, suggesting that this Robert (of Burnflat) was his son. He may also be the George who witnessed a baptism for shoemaker John in 1757. He may be the George recorded in 1788 as owner of Burnflat (although that may indicate that he had purchased the land earlier, and may well have been deceased by then). George (d.bef. 1804) 'My Lord' listed in Birselton in 1804 when his son Robert's death was recorded in Hawick. He was surely related to the other Olivers who were called 'Lord', as well as the Olivers who owned land at Birselton, such as James, Cornet in 1784. George (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Jean Scott and their children included: Elizabeth (b.1760); Jean (b.1761); James (b.1765); Walter (b.1767); John (b.1769); and Margaret (b.1772), who may have married John Elliot from Teviothead. George (c.1770–1837) son of William and Jean Nichol, he was born at Blinkbonny. He worked as a shepherd in Castleton Parish, including at 'Wheathaugh' (probably Whitehaugh) farm, which was run by his brother. He emigrated to the U.S.A. (with his whole family, except for the eldest son George) and died at Mishawaka, Indiana only a couple of years later. He married Elizabeth Irving and their children included: George (b.1803); John (b.1807); Andrew (b.1809); Jane Grey (b.1810); Dorothy Irwin (b.1815); Robert (b.1817); William Irving (b.1821); and James (b.1825), who became famous for improving the plough. George (b.c.1770s) servant at Saughtree according to the ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1799. He was a shepherd at Saughtree on the 1801 list. George (b.c.1770s) servant at Redheugh according to the ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1799. George (18th/19th C.) recorded on the 1794 and 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as farmer at Dykeraw. He owned 3 farm horses and 1 saddle horse at that time. He also paid the dog tax at Dykeraw in the same year. George (18th/19th C.) tenant in Chesters in Southdean Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. He was probably related to Gilbert and Thomas who lived at Chesters at the same time. On the 1801 ballot for the Militia he is recorded as 'Husbandman' at Chesters. George (b.c.1770s) wright in Denholm according to the ballot list for the Militia in Cavers Parish in 1799. He was drawn in place of James Boswell Scott (substitute for David Scott in Merrylaw), who died in 1799. However, in 1800 he paid a penalty of £12 12s to avoid serving. George (b.c.1770s) son of Thomas, farmer at Birneyknowe, according to the ballot list for the Militia in Cavers Parish in 1799. George (18th/19th C.) flesher in Newcastleton. He is listed among heads of households in 1835 and 1836. He was surely related to Francis, also a butcher in Newcastleton. George (b.c.1795) mason in Hawick. He is listed among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1835–41. In 1835 he was at Dovemount, at Stellhouse in 1840 (the address changed to 'Toll Bar Hawick') and at the Toll Bar in 1841. He was living at the Western Toll Bar on the 1841 census, with wife Mina and children William, Isabel, Margaret and James. George 'Pie Oliver' or 'Pies' (c.1800–47) baker on the Howegate, at about No. 19. He may have been son of William 'Little Cash'. His wife made pies at 19 Howegate, which presumably gave the nickname for the family. He married Janet or 'Nannie' Brown (from Selkirk), who died in 1884, aged 87. Their children included: William (b.1822); Thomas (b.1824); Catherine; Agnes (c.1828–1901), who married Robert Murray; Janet; George; and Robert. The three brothers who were stockingmakers, George, 'Jock the Hoist' and William, may have been his sons. He may have been related to James, who was an earlier baker in Hawick. His wife was working as a washer-woman on the Back Row in 1851. It is also unclear whether he could be the George 'of Burnflat' who was recorded as a heritor in 1854 (after his death); he seems likely to be the

George recorded as owner of Burnflat on the 1811 Land Tax Rolls. George (1803–72) eldest surviving son of Town Clerk John. He was Cornet in 1824. He trained as a lawyer, and in 1831 went into partnership with his father as a 'writer' and bank agent. In 1837 he is listed along with his father as agent for the Commercial Bank. In 1841 he was living on Buccleuch Street and was there in 1851, recorded as 'Procurator in Sheriff Court of Roxburgh Shire'. The firm was thus 'John and George Oliver', but became 'Geo. & Jas. Oliver' on the death of John in 1849, when his younger brother became a partner. He was local agent for the Duke of Buccleuch, as well as being political agent for the Conservative Party in Hawick and Liddesdale. He was mentioned as one of the local 'fictitious voters' in an investigation of 1837 (along with John and Robert Anderson they bought property in Selkirkshire, apparently in order to gain the ability to vote there). He had a prominent role in the Hawick to Carlisle railway extension. He was probably the George 'of Burnflat' who was recorded as a heritor in 1854; he seems likely to be the George recorded as owner of Burnflat on the 1811 Land Tax Rolls (his son John inheriting these lands from him). He became tenant at Borthaugh in 1860. He served as a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire. He was also one of the Orrock Trustees and served as Chairman of the Parochial Board for Kirkton Parish. He became a Life Member of the Archæological Society in 1859. He married Margaret, daughter of John Lindsay of Almeriecloss (Forfarshire) at Arbroath in 1843. Their children were: Margaret Spink (b.1844); Jane (b.1846); Mary (b.1848), who married Surg.-Gen. Peter Stephenson Turnbull, descendant of the Bedrule Turnbulls; John (b.1850), also a Hawick lawyer; Jane (again, b.1852); Christian (b.1854), who married David Turnbull of Fenwick and Brieryyards; George Lindsay (b.1857), farmer, who spent time in New Zealand; and James Lindsay (b.1860), who also spent time in New Zealand with his brother. His wife donated a pair of Chinese shoes to the Museum in 1859. A portrait of him exists. His wife's portrait, by Atkinson Horsburgh, is in the Museum, painted in 1883. George (b.1803) son of Liddesdale shepherd George and Elizabeth Irving. His brother James was the manufacturer of 'Oliver's Chilled Plough' in South Bend, Indiana. He was the only one of his brothers not to emigrate to America. He was shepherd at Gatehousecote and elsewhere. He married Elspeth Murray. Their children included: William (b.1827), who became Steward at Gatehousecote; David (b.1829), who lived at the family home in Newcastleton; Elizabeth (b.1831), who married Adam Crozier; James Binnie (b.1834), who probably died young; and Barton (b.1835), who farmed at 'the Dodlins' near Hawick. George (19th C.) resident of Hawick and Wilton Parishes. He married Mina Telfer and their children included: and William (b.1829), James (b.1830); Isabella (b.1833), Margaret (b.1835), Beatrix (b.1836), Walter James (b.1838); James Walter (b.1840), baptised in Wilton; and Beatrix (b.1842), baptised in Hawick. George (c.1820–1900) son of John and Agnes Rutherford. He was born in Scotland, probably near Hawick. He moved to the Galt, Ontario area with his father and family. He married Elizabeth Turnbull (d.1868) and their children included John, James, Andrew, William, Thomas, Elizaebth, George, Agnes, Agnes (again) and Robert. Most of his family moved to Carberry, Manitoba, being among the first settlers there. George (19th/20th C.) farmer at Trow Knowes. He was an Elder of Kirkton Kirk. In 1906 he contributed to the fund for the renovation of Kirkton Kirk. George Lindsay (b.1857) son of Hawick lawyer George. He went to New Zealand and bought property there with his brother James. However, he returned to farm at Whitehaugh (near Newcastleton) and later lived in Hawick. He may be the 'Mr George Oliver, Borthaugh' who in 1876 donated to the Museum 'geological specimen from Overhall Quarry'. George Currie Stenhouse (1900–73) born in Glasgow, from a Borders branch of the Olivers. His family moved to Hawick and in the 1920s he decided to emigrate to Canada. He worked as a herd in New Liskeard, Ontario, but travelled extensively while looking for work. On a return trip to Hawick he met Anne Murray (1895–1977) and she followed him back to Canada where they were married in 1931. The couple returned to Hawick in 1936. Gilbert (15th C.) father of Robert, James and William. His sons were separately fined at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1493, for non-appearance to answer for unspecified crimes. He could be the same Gilbert who (along with John 'benkis') had 2 cows stolen by Philip Waugh in Jedburgh, with Waugh having remission in 1494/5. Perhaps the same Gilbert is mentioned in 1502 when his son John in 'stryndis' had remission for stealing a horse and a sword from Smailholm. He may also be the Gilbert recorded in 1502, along with James Rutherford and a man called 'Wobstar', when

Thomas Rutherford in the Grange had remission for resetting them and their stolen livestock. Gilbert (16th C.) tenant at Whiteside in Jedforest in 1541, along with Patrick, Andrew and John. Gilbert (16th C.) tenant at Hindhaughhead in 1541 along with his mother Margaret. They paid 25 shillings yearly. Gilbert (16th C.) tenant at Over Dykeraw in 1541. He was probably related to other nearby Olivers, e.g. the tenants at Nether Dykeraw. Gilbert 'Gib' (16th C.) recorded in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He is named as 'Gybe Ollyver of the Dykis'. His lands may have been the Dykes in Bedrule, or perhaps more likely is Dykeraw in Southdean (given the family connection and forename). Gilbert (17th/18th C.) farmer at Dykeraw, recorded in a list of tenants in Jedforest in 1669. He was probably son of Robert, also listed there. He married a Douglas and their son was James, baptised in Southdean Parish in 1694. He was ancestor of George and James of the Hawick legal firm. Gilbert (18th C.) recorded as 'farmer in Hawick' who was deceased in 1754 when his daughter Ann married Andrew Ford in Edinburgh (or this may have been the Ann, daughter of Gilbert and Janet Turnbull, born in Hawick in 1738). He may have been born in Jedburgh Parish in 1712. Gilbert (18th C.) workman and carrier in Hawick Parish. In 1768 he witnessed a baptism in Hawick for Walter Stevenson and Janet Oliver (probably his daughter). He is also probably the carrier Gilbert who witnessed a baptism for Francis Aitkin and Anne Oliver (likely his daughter) in Hawick in 1766. He married Janet Turnbull and their children included: Anne (b.1738); Janet (b.1741); Helen (b.1744); and Robert (b.1746). The 1741 baptism was witnessed by merchant John Ruecastle and 'Officer' John Telfer and the 1746 one by Bailie Robert Scott and merchant William Oliver. Gilbert (18th/19th C.) resident at Chesters (Southdean) according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He is listed right after Thomas, who may be a relation. Greig (1964–) son of Lawrie and Marlene, he was a rugby player and coach. He was educated at Wilton and Hawick High Schools. He played scrum-half for the P.S.A. and Trades and started with Hawick R.F.C. at the age of 18, eventually playing 336 times for them. He was part of the championship side of the 1983/4 to 1986/7 seasons and also represented the South of Scotland. He was capped 3 times for Scotland in the period 1987–91 (being often on the replacements' bench for 6 seasons), scoring a try in his first match for Scotland. He also played for the Barbarians. He retired in 1996 because of a knee injury. Moving to coaching, he led Hawick to a Scottish club treble in 2002. He then worked with The Borders and in Edinburgh as development manager, moving in 2007 to Garryowen and then Munster, before becoming assistant coach of the under-20 Ireland team. He married Fiona and they have children Jack and Clara. Helen nee Elliot (18th C.) only child of William Elliot of Myredykes. In 1797 she married ironmonger James Oliver in Hawick. Her first children were born in Hawick, and then the family moved to Borthwickbrae Burnfoot, where her husband became tenant farmer. A story is recounted of how when she was married she brought a collie dog from Myredykes, and every sheep clipping season the animal would disappear from Hawick for a few days, since it had set off to help round up the sheep. In 1851 she was recorded as an 'Annuitant' living at Alemoor Cottage with her unmarried daughters Rachel, Eliza and Isabella, as well as 2 servants. Helen (b.1825) from Cavers Parish, son of Archibald. She was the eldest of 4 sisters who were living at about 61 High Street in 1851 and working as milliners and dressmakers. She was listed with her sister Ann in Slater's 1852 directory. Henry (d.bef. 1596) tenant in 'Hyndmureheid' (probably Hyndhaughhead). He was killed by Thomas Kerr of Crailing and his servants Andrew Hogg and George Gardner, who were denounced as rebels in 1596. There was a complaint in 1599 that James Douglas, Sheriff of Cavers had allowed them to remain at their dwelling place. He is further recorded in 1601 as the deceased 'Henrie Olypher', who had been killed by Thomas Ker and his servant George 'Gladner'; this pair were later killed by a group of Turnbulls and others in Jedburgh. Henry (b.1806) agricultural labourer and shepherd in Southdean Parish, son of William, who was hind to the Laird of Langraw. In 1841 he was at Abbotrule farm and was farm steward at West Fodderlee in 1851 and 1861. In 1840 in Southdean he married Isabella Renwick from Morebattle; she died at Burnflat in 1895, aged 87. Their children were: Isabella (b.1841), who married Thomas Welsh; Robert (b.1843), a marine engineer who was lost at sea; Helen (b.1846); and Helen (again, b.1851). Ingram (15th C.) recorded as 'chairleis' in 1493 when he was fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. His residence could be associated with Charlie's Hill or Charlie's Knowe in Southdean Parish. He may be the same Ingram against whom premeditated crimes were committed in Jedburgh by William Kirkton in Kirkton, according to the 1494/5 Justice-aire. He could be the Ingram for whom George Douglas Master of Angus was fined for failing to arrest (along with Thomas 'Waitschod' and James) in 1502. Ingram (15th/16th C.) son of Robert in Strange and brother of John. In 1494/5 he was listed among 8 Olivers and a Shiel when they had remission for communing with the English. He could be the same man as Ingram in 'chairleis'. In 1502 George Douglas, Master of Angus was fined for his non-appearance at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. Also in 1502, along with his brother John, and David 'Nae Guid Preist', he had remission for stealing oxen from Ancrum, as well as sheep, a cow and other items from Maxton; he was there recorded being 'in le stryndis' and his surety was Mark Ker of Dolphington. Additionally in 1502 his brother John was allowed to compone for stealing 2 oxen from Jedburgh with him, as well as other thefts (without him). Ingram (16th C.) farmer at Harwoodtown. 'Ingrem Olferis barne and zaird' (i.e. 'barn and yard') are listed in the 1562 Baronial dispute over lands in Feu-Rule, being assigned to Agnes Herries as superior. Presumably the same 'Ingra' was listed as 'man and servand' of Thomas Turnbull of Harwoodtown (brother of David Turnbull of Wauchope) in 1567, when his master was ordered to present him to answer charges related to raids into England. Isabel (b.c.1800) grocer on the High Street in Pigot's 1837 directory. In 1841 she was at about 30 High Street, living with woolsorter Walter Wilson, who may have been a relative. Isobel (17th C.) listed at Dykeraw among the poor of Southdean Parish in the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls James (15th C.) assigned the lease of the Crown lands of Garlawcleuch in the Yarrow valley in 1489 along with his son John. It is unclear how he might have been related to other Olivers. James (15th C.) son of Gilbert. He is recorded in 1493 when he was fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. His brother Robert was also fined at the same time, as well as Matthew son of Geoffrey, Robert brother of Matthew and Martin brother of Robert. William, son of Gilbert, was also fined, and probably his brother too. He was also recorded in 1494/5 among 8 Olivers and a Shiel (connected with Strange) who had remission for communing with the English; he was there stated to be brother of Robert, who was son of Gilbert, and also brother of William. He could be the James for whom George Douglas Master of Angus was fined for failing to arrest (along with Thomas 'Waitschod' and Ingram) in 1502. James (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 as 'burgess' (presumably of Jedburgh, or else a nickname) at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. Along with Robert in Lustruther, Robert (nephew of David) and Robert Waugh in Mervinslaw, he had a remission for a raid on 'Kelshop', which resulted in the slaughter of Robert Brig and Adam 'Barnisfader'; his surety was Ralph Ker of Primside Loch. It seems likely he was related to the Olivers of Strynds. James (15th/6th C.) son of Gilbert in 'stryndis'. In 1502 he and his brother John had remission for a series of crimes: stealing an ox from Ancrum; stealing 2 cows from Jedburgh; and treason. His surety was Robert Douglas, uncle of the Laird of Bonjedward. Also in 1502, along with brothers Matthew and Martin, he was allowed to compone for stealing 200 sheep from the tenants of Jedburgh, Ruecastle, Lanton and Bedrule; his surety was again Robert Douglas. James 'the Prince' (15th/16th C.) resident of Swinnie recorded in 1502 when George Douglas, Master of Angus was his surety. He failed to appear at the Justice Aire in Jedburgh and was to be fined at the next court. The same man was charged at the 1510 Court of the Justiciary in Jedburgh. His crimes included theft of sheep from various people. James (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1510 when he was presented at the Justice Aire in Jedburgh in relation to the lands of Edgerstone. He may be the same as one of the other Johns. James (16th C.) recorded as tenant in Mervinslaw in a rental roll of 1541, along with William, Margaret and William alias 'Merchant'. His steading was valued at 25s. James (16th C.) tenant at Waterside in 1541, along with Marion Young and Robert Young. It seems likely that they were related somehow. They paid 22 shillings yearly. James (16th C.) tenant at Nether Dykeraw in 1541, along with Michael, John, Adam and Robert. His name was given first, suggesting that he was the senior family member. James (16th C.) admitted as 'perpetual vicar' of Castleton in 1559. It is unclear how long he remained. James (d.1573) recorded as 'somtyme seruandis to Blak Ormistoune' when he was convicted and hanged along with William Donald. Their crimes included stealing livestock and burning the corn of Sir Andrew Kerr. It is unclear if he had direct local connections. James (17th C.) monk at Jedburgh Abbey in the period 1542–81. He held the title of Prior of Canonbie in the 1570s, but probably continued to reside in Jedburgh. He is recorded in 1573 as 'Dene James

Oliver Pryour of Cannaby' in a case before the Privy Council regarding some lands in Canonbie. It is unclear where he came from. James (17th C.) Schoolmaster in Cavers Parish. He is said to have accompanied the 'Guid Leddy Cavers' to conventicles on Ruberslaw and at Hagburn. His son James took over as Schoolmaster at Cavers. He is also said to have kept a personal narrative of his experiences attending secret Covenanter sermons and escaping from the dragoons, stories that were passed down in his family for several generations. His son James was Schoolmaster after him. James (17th C.) recorded as tenant of 'Souden' i.e. Southdean in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. James (17th C.) recorded as tenant of Hyndhaughhead in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. James (17th C.) tenant in Ashtrees. He is recorded in 1684 when his son Thomas was listed as a Covenanter fugitive. He himself refused to take the oath and was banished to Jamaica. He is also said to have 'paid to Meldrum 100 merks, also to Graden 30 rex dollars, also at a Circuit Court in Jedburgh 14 rex dollars, at another time £4 sterling; and the notwithstanding all other losses troopers were quartered on him.' James (17th C.) recorded as 'of Stryndis' (i.e. Strange) in 1689 when he complained that the Parish Minister had not read out the Articles of Estate or prayed for William and Mary. He was probably related to George and James who were recorded at Strange in 1694. James (17th C.) cottar at Ruletownfoot according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. James (17th C.) resident of Over Dykeraw according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. James (17th/18th C.) Schoolmaster in Cavers Parish, son of James, who had been Schoolmaster before him. It was said that he was a very strict and pious man. He would spend an hour each evening in the old church, reading scriptures by candle-light. It is said that a visiting Englishman saw him in the church one night, reading by candlelight in his red nightcap and thought he had seen the Devil. He gave his sons names from the Bible: Ebenezer, who succeeded as Schoolmaster; Samuel (b.1702), who became Schoolmaster in Hobkirk Parish; and Nathaniel. Douglas of Cavers ordered that he be buried in the church, 'for a man who had haunted it so much when alive deserved to sleep his last slumber under its roof'. He was presumably Session Clerk for Cavers, as well as Schoolmaster, and responsible for the entries in the Parish register. He probably taught his son to write, since essentially the same hand can be seen in the baptismal records from at least the 1690s until the 1760s. James 'Jafra the Piper' (17th/18th C.) formerly resident of Kirkton Parish, he was in Hawick in the early 1700s. His nickname was also given as 'Jafray'. In 1717 he was summoned to Hawick Kirk Session for abusing William Riddell on the street, and asked to supply testimonials from his former parish. Later that year he was called to task again for 'a relapse in drunkenness and rambling in ye streets occasioning the school boyes to follow after him through the toun'. And later that year, after not presenting the requested testimonials was given a final ultimatum, after which he would be handed to the Magistrates. It seems that they did not continue in 'extruding him out of ye toun' at this time. He was probably the same James, 'toun officer' who was rebuked in 1718 for playing (presumably the pipes) in front of William Whaton, who rode through the town 'in a military posture' for some kind of bet; he stated he was 'urged and pressed by the schollars to play before William'. In 1719 he was again rebuked 'for his indecent carriage in his drunkenness', specifically for 'rambling in his drunkenness and troubling the minister in his chamber', again being given a last chance to reform his behaviour. He married Agnes Telfer in England (presumably a quick wedding) in 1720. This 'irregular marriage on the English side' may have been the last straw, since the Session then went over the records of his past mis-deeds and sent a 'memorial' to the Magistrates adding that 'if they concurred not with ye Session the minister would make address to another judge to extrude him and to divest him of his service through the toun'. He appears to have been Hawick's Town Piper for at least 1717–20 and was replaced by Robert Fowler about 1721. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living at Ashybank in 1709, 1716 and 1718. His children included Elizabeth (b.1709), Thomas (b.1716) and Agnes (b.1718). The later tenant in Ashybank, with the same name, was perhaps related. James (b.1694) son of Gilbert, and probably grandson of Robert, farmer at Dykeraw. He was born in Southdean Parish and was a carrier, later becoming tenant farmer at Earlside. He married Bessie Douglas in 1722 and their children were: James (b.c.1723), who died in infancy; and Isabella (b.c.1725), who married James Learmonth in Bedrule. In 1729 he secondly married Margaret, daughter of James Douglas of the Trows, who owned (or had the tenancy of perhaps) the farm of Earlside. He was by then in Hawick Parish, where he was recorded as 'workman'; in 1743 and 1746 he was listed as a carrier in Hawick, and he presumably took over the farm at Earlside shortly afterwards. He may be the carrier James who in Hawick in 1757 witnessed baptisms for wheelwright James Aitkin and Mary Oliver (probably a relative), as well as for gardener Alexander Donald. He is probably the James, senior, who witnessed baptisms in 1767, as well as in 1771 for merchant John (his son) and in 1772 for merchant James (also his son). He may be the James who witnessed a baptism for wheelwright James Aitkin and Mary (perhaps his daughter) in 1772. He may be the 'James Oliver, sen. merchant' in Hawick who subscribed to Caw's 'Poetical Museum' (1784), along with his son James. With Margaret Douglas he had 5 sons and 4 daughters, all baptised in Hawick Parish, including: Betsy (b.1730); James (b.1732), ironmonger in Hawick; Mary (b.1734); Agnes (b.1738); Christian (1738–1804); John (b.1740), merchant in Hawick; Robert (b.1743), who probably became a surgeon in North Berwick; and Gideon (b.1746). The witnesses in 1743 were shoemaker Robert (who may therefore have been a relative) and maltman John Moss and in 1746 were ex-Bailie Robert Howison and carrier John Scott. James (18th C.). Married to Agnes Telfer, their son Robert was born in Hawick in 1724. James (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was tenant in Ashybank in 1755. He married Isabel Walker and their children included Elspeth (b.1751), Betty (b.1753) and Isabel (b.1755). Other children, baptised in Cavers Parish, who may be his, included John (b.1745), Helen (b.1746), James (b.1747) and John (b.1757). He may be a descendant of the earlier James at Ashybank. Bailie James (1732–1820) 2nd son of James of Earlside and Margaret Douglas. It is said that when Prince Charlie's army passed through Hawick in 1745 his father sent him into the country with his horse for safety. He was Cornet in 1764. He had an ironmonger's business near 'the Cross' in Hawick and became tenant of the Duke of Buccleuch's farm at Crumhaugh Hill. In 1767 and 1777 he was witness for baptisms for merchant John (his brother). He is probably the merchant who in 1779 (although the date is uncertain) witnessed a baptism for shoemaker Robert (perhaps a relative) and Helen Scott. He is recorded as a merchant in 1781 and is probably the James who paid the Shop Tax in Hawick in 1785. He was Bailie several times in the period 1790–1810. It is possible he was the Bailie Oliver who, along with James Dickson, was one of the first men in Hawick to travel with pack-horses to sell their woven products in Kendal, Boroughbridge, Newcastle, Stirling and elsewhere. He could be the James who in about 1800 contributed £1 1s to the local subscription to help fund the forces to stop the French invasion. He married Christian, daughter of Robert Elliot of Caerlenrig. They had 5 sons and 3 daughters, including: James (b.1766); Robert (b.c.1769); John (b.1770), who became a lawyer and Town Clerk; William (b.1772); Christian (b.c.1773), who may have married John Sibbald in Edinburgh in 1792; Thomas (b.1775), probably the son of the Bailie listed on the ballot for the Militia in 1797; Margaret (b.1777); and Mary (b.1781), who probably married Bailie Thomas Turnbull. For the 1766 baptism he was recorded as a merchant and the witnesses were John and Francis Elliot (his wife's brothers). In 1772 the witnesses were Francis Elliot (again) and James senior (probably his father), in 1775 were John Elliot and John Oliver, in 1777 were the whole congregation and in 1781 were John Elliot (junior, perhaps his brother) and wheelwright James Aitkin. He could be the James whose child was buried in Hawick in 1772. He is buried at St. Mary's. Note that there is some confusion in that another James was born to his parents in 1740, which is assumed to be an error for John. James (18th C.) tenant at Ashybank, probably son of the previous James who was there. He was recorded at Ashybank in 1778 when his son James was baptised in Cavers Parish. He was also recorded at Haughhead when several of his children's baptisms were later recorded together, specifically Isabel (or 'Tibby', b.1784), Jean (b.1786) and John (b.1789) were probably also his children. James (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was living at Rough-hope in 1785 when his son William was baptised. He is probably the James who married Isabel Scott and had other children, mostly baptised in Roberton Parish, namely: Isabel (b.1783); Nelly (b.1790); John (b.1792); and James (b.1799), baptised in Ashkirk. James (18th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish. His children included: John (b.1780); James (b.1784); Peggy (b.1786); Archibald (b.1789); George (b.1792); and Robert (b.1795). His death (in his 89th year) is recorded in the Edinburgh Magazine. James (18th C.) tanner who was Cornet in 1782. The Council banned the carrying of pistols at the Common Riding that year, but he would have none of it, and they were not finally dispensed with until 1784. He lived at 23 High Street, the 'All Was Others' house, which is shown beloning to 'Oliver' on Wood's 1824 map. James (b.1766) son of ironmonger James, and descended from the Dykeraw family. He farmed at Borthwickbrae Burnfoot. He is probably the James who subscribed to Caw's 'Poetical Museum' (1784), along with James 'sen. merchant', who was most likely his father. It is possible he was the merchant called James who was listed in Hawick in the 1791–97 Horse Tax Rolls. In 1797 in Hawick he married Helen (b.1777), only child of William Elliot of Myredykes in Castleton Parish. Their children included: Rachel (b.1799); James (b.1801), who continued to farm Borthwickbrae Burnfoot; Christian (b.1803); Helen (b.1804); Margaret (b.1806); Mary (b.1809); Elizabeth (b.1815); Mary (b.1817); William Elliot (b.1819), who spent some time in Australia; and Isabel (b.1821). Other children may have been Jane and Mina. The first few children were born in Hawick Parish and the rest in Roberton. James (1754/5–1839) merchant in Newcastleton. He was recorded at Newcastleton on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when he owned 2 horses. He married Jane Armstrong, who died in 1814, aged 53. Their children included: Peter (1789/90–1845), also a merchant; Adam (1798/9–1816); and 2 who died in infancy. They are buried in Ettleton Cemetery. James (18th/19th C.) recorded as farmer at Kirkton, on the Horse Tax Rolls of 1797. Thomas is listed before him and so possibly related. He also paid the dog tax at Kirkton in 1797. James (18th/19th C.) farmer at Hermiston in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls for Lilliesleaf Parish, when he owned 8 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Minto, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. James (1765–1840s) baker in Hawick, son of Robert and Isabel 'Kenmur'. He was Cornet in 1784. It was said that he continued to carry pistols at the Common Riding, although it had been decreed to discontinue the practice the previous year. However, when his brother-in-law William Wilson was Cornet in 1786, the pistols were finally abandoned. He is probably the baker James who (along with Robert of Burnflat, his father) witnessed a baptism in 1789 for James Farquhar and Margaret (perhaps his sister). He is probably the baker (and Bailie) called Oliver who was one of the first members of the Curling Club in 1803. He helped compile a 'New Valuation of Houses and Gardens in the Town of Hawick' in 1814. He was listed in the 1808 will of William ('Auld Cash') as his second cousin. He was probably the James appointed Chief Magistrate of Hawick in 1818. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825, when he is listed as being 'of Burnflat'. In 1789 he married Ann, daughter of Walter Wilson, but they had no family, and she died in 1809. Probably the same baker James married Elizabeth Purdom. Their children included: Elizabeth (b.1818); Isobel (b.1820), who became Mrs. McIntosh; Robert William (1822–49), also a baker; Agnes (b.1823), who married blacksmith James Bowie; and William James (b.1824), also a baker. The family were living at about 43 High Street in 1841, and his wife was a widow there in 1851 (and listed as 'landed proprietrix'). In 1809 he was recorded being 'in Birselton'. He is probably the James who was also referred to as being 'of Burnflat'; this is how he is listed among the major landowners of Hawick Parish in 1839. According to James Wilson he described Burnflat as 'ane nourice fee' (i.e. the wages given to a wet-nurse, although it is unclear what that meant). James (18th/19th C.) tenant in Upper Dykeraw in Southdean Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. John was also tenant there and presumably related. James (18th/19th C.) gardener at Knowesouth in Bedrule Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book in 1799. James (18th/19th C.) nailer in Minto. His son Thomas was recorded in the Lieutenancy Book in 1799. John, recorded as a nailer on the 1801 Militia ballot, may have been another son. James (18th/19th C.) from Westshiels in Southdean Parish. He married Jane Bruce, who was from Jedburgh. Their son William was baptised in Byrness in 1812. James (18th/19th C.) Treasurer of the Burgh of Hawick recorded in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. He was still Treasurer in 1834. He may be the same James who was a member of the Curling Club in 1812. He may also be the James who is recorded on Wood's 1824 map as owner of property at the east end of Langlands Road and also along the east side of Roadhead. He is probably the same as one of the others Jameses, perhaps the baker and Bailie. James (1801–80) son of James, he also became tenant at Borthwickbrae Burnfoot. He was listed on the 1834 electoral roll as a joint proprietor. He was one of the Tory supporters who received 'Tully's Mill' at the 1837 election. He apparently withstood the mob longer than anyone else, getting loose 3 times before finally being thrown into the Slitrig (4 men were later found guilty of rioting). The court proceedings describe how the mob 'did throw stones and mud at him, and did surround, and violently drag or force him towards the side of the Slitrig river', where they 'did push or force him into the river, which was then in a swollen state, and of considerable depth, and did kick him on the chin and other parts of his person'. However, he later wrote to Bailie Wilson, thanking him for the loan of some clothes, and stating that he 'felt only a little stiff, and that he was a few slight bruises'. He was at Borthwickbrae Burnfoot in 1841 and in 1851 was listed as tenant there, farming about 1200 acres and employing 4 labourers. He farmed at Howpasley from 1858, was farming 3800 acres there, and employed 9 people; he was still recorded there in 1868. In 1842 he married Dorothea (or Dorothy, d.1891), daughter of William Moffat, farmer at Garwald, Eskdalemuir. His children included: James (b.1844); William Moffat (1846–1910), the eldest surviving son; Jane (1848–1918); Helen Elliot (b.1850); John (b.1852); and Thomas (b.1854). His younger sons went abroad. James (b.1804/5) stockingmaker in Denholm, probably on Eastgate. In the 1860s he was listed as a stocking-maker in Denholm, suggesting he had his own business. His wife was 'Barbary' and their children included George and Barbara. There is an obelisk to their memory at Borthwick Waas. James (1814–1900) 4th surviving son of Hawick lawyer and Town Clerk John. He trained as a lawyer himself and was partner in the firm of George & James Oliver with his older brother. In 1841 he was living on Buccleuch Street with his father and siblings, and was described as a clerk. He could be the James who was 'sub-distributor' in the stamp office on Buccleuch Street in Pigot's 1837 directory. He was living at Teviot Lodge in 1861. In the mid-1800s he was recorded as owner of parts of Roughheugh that had previously belonged to John and William Thomline, Adam and George Easton and James Hart. He had Mayfield House built on land that he inherited from his father. He was a Town Councillor, serving as Chairman of Wilton Parochial Board, Wilton Landward School Board and Wilton Heritors' Committee. In 1852 he married Thomasina Pott (1830–80), sister of Gideon Pott of Knowesouth and daughter of George and Jane Elliot. Their children were: Elliot (b.1854), who was a partner with Geo. & Jas. Oliver for a while, but retired and left the district; Jane Pott (b.1858), who married John Elliot of Binks; Christian Watson (b.1860), buried at Ainzahatta, Spain; James John (b.1864), partner in the legal firm; Elizabeth Murray (b.1866), also buried at Ainzahatta; as well as George (b.1860), Mary Georgina (b.1866) and Thomas (b.1868), who all died young. He retired about 1893 and is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. Papers from roughly 1895–1919 are in the Borders Archive. James Rutherford (1817–1905) Auctioneer and Livestock Salesman of Bridge House and later Thornwood, only son of Andrew. He trained as a lawyer, and then joined his father's auctioneering business. He was a leading figure in the town in Victorian times, being a Town Councillor, Magistrate, J.P. (from 1888), Chairman of Hawick Heritable Investment Bank, Governor of Hawick Savings Bank (1890–94), Secretary and Treasurer of the West Teviotdale Agricultural Society (1842–1905), founder member, Honorary Secretary and Treasurer of the Teviotdale Farmers' Club (1859–1905), President of the Border Burghs' Conservative Association (1878–92), President of the Archæological Society (1883–88). He was also a member of the Curling Club from 1844, being Secretary for several years, and the first Secretary of the Hawick Bowling Club. He was also Senior Magistrate 1857–58, resigning during the dispute over the railway line. He offered a site on Bridge Street for the new Evangelical Union (later Congregational) Church, but the congregation declined the offer at the time. He is said to have formed the Teviotdale Farmers' Club after being black-balled from joining the other one (presumably the Agricultural society, formed earlier by Douglas of Cavers). He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1852. He became a life member of the Hawick Archæological Society in 1862. He is probably the James who donated a gold 'spade guinea of George III' to the Museum in 1865, as well as a 'Chronological Tree of British History' in 1900. In 1862 he coordinated raising funds to pay off the Duke of Buccleuch for the customs that had historically been due from Hawick merchants; he contributed £25 himself. He had the splendid Thornwood House built and is believed to have been owner of the first car in Hawick (a photograph shows him with a chauffeur and another man-servant in the grounds of Thornwood). Oliver Crescent and Oliver Place are named after him; his monogram 'JRO' is above 2 of the dormer windows at No. 3 Oliver Place, and the carved head above the entrance may be his likeness. In about 1874 he is listed as owner of the parts of Weensland and the 'particate' lands of Hawick that had previously been held by James Dickson, as well as part of Roughheugh (earlier owned by James Knox). In Hawick in 1849 he married Jane Rutherford (1828–55), daughter of builder Robert, and she died of typhus fever (after having 3 children). He secondly married his first wife's niece, also Jane Rutherford ('Mrs. Oliver', the local historian), and they had 7 further children. His family included: Jane (1850–1910), who married Robert Inch; Andrew (b.1853), who died in infancy; Andrew Rutherford (b.1855), auctioneer; Alice Mary (b.1861), eldest daughter by his 2nd wife, who married Dr. John R. Hamilton; James (b.1863), also died in infancy; Catherine Brown (1864–1930), who married manufacturer Robert Innes and secondly married teacher H.H. Llewellyn; Evaleen (1866–1934), who married Spencer Waterfall from Sheffield; Blanche Ada (b.1868), who married Dr. Drummond from Liverpool; William (1869–1919), a solicitor; and Douglas (b.1871). At least one portrait of him exists. He is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. James (b.1819/20) farmer at Denholm Mill, son of Archibald. He is recorded there in 1851, and was miller on a directory of 1852. He married Mary Hall and their children included Archibald. James (1823–1908) born in Newcastleton, son of shepherd George and Elizabeth Irving. In 1835 he emigrated to New York with 2 other brothers, to join their brother John (who had gone in 1830), while the last brother, George, stayed in Liddesdale. They moved to a farm in Lagrange County, Indiana, where his father died in 1837 (the 'sick year'). The family moved to Mishawaka and he attended school, but had to leave to support his mother and siblings. He first worked as a ditch-digger, then a cooper, before starting in a grist mill then an iron company. He eventually went into business for himself, making ploughs. He hit upon a novel manufacturing process and patented a 'chilled steel plough' (where the cooling method made the cutting surface superior). The Oliver Chilled Plow Works became one of the largest in the U.S.A., and was a standard tool of pioneer farmers. At its height the company employed 2000 people and the factory covered 27 acres of covered space, making 200,000 ploughs a year. He was a great benefactor of the town of South Bend, building a hotel (called the Oliver Hotel) and an opera house. The town presented him with a gold cup inscribed with the word 'Copshawholm', which his son used as the name for his new house there in 1900. He married Susan Doty in 1844, and she died in 1902. They had 2 children, Joseph (who carried on the business) and Josephine (who married the secretary of the company). When he died his fortune was nearly £15,000,000, making him one of the richest ever Borderers at that time. James (b.1824) son of James, who was a baker in Hawick. He worked as a journeyman baker. He was recorded in Hawick in 1855, but may then have moved to Langholm. He married Mary Murray, who was from Langholm. Their children included: Alexander (c.1854–1934), born in Langholm, who emigrated to Tasmania and taught for 40 years at the Penguin State School; Agnes (b.1855), who was born in Hawick and married George King; Jack; Ralpha; and Frank. James Walter (b.1840) born in Wilton Parish, son of George and Wilhelmina (or 'Mina') Telfer. The family emigrated to Canada in 1844 and he eventually became a surgeon in Niagara Falls. James (b.1844) son of James and Dorothy Moffat, he was born in Roberton Parish. He married Martha Pollard and their children included: Dorothy Moffat, who married William Baxter and another man named Gilbert; William James, who married Nora Estelle Brown; and Jana E., who married William Johnston. Members of the family lived later in Western Australia. Rev. James (1845–1918) born in Teviothead, son of John and Helen Sibbald. He was educated at Newmill and then at Hawick Grammar School. He graduated from Edinburgh University in 1863 and spent 2 years as an assistant teacher to Anthony Dodds at Buccleuch School (being succeeded by J.A.H. Murray). He was assistant minister at Selkirk and Bedrule and then at Nelston before being ordained as minister at Tweedmouth in 1870 and moving to St. James', Portobello in 1880. He was President of the Edinburgh Border Counties Association and represented them at the 1906 Jubilee celebration for the Hawick Archæological Society. He was said to be a great orator. He married Elizabeth Young of Howford. James (d.bef. 1917) from Newcastleton, he was an apprentice draper in Hawick. He was said to have had a lifelong interest in Hawick and in dramatics. James Lindsay (1860–93) youngest son of Hawick lawyer George. He is probably the 'Mr James Oliver, Borthaugh' who in 1875 donated to the Museum '3 Chinese and 1 American coins' and also 'an ancient Roman coin'. He bought some property in New Zealand with his brother George Lindsay. However, he suffered from ill-health and returned to Scotland. He married Agnes Ellen ('Nellie'), daughter of Peter Pennycook of New Hall. He took over running the farm at Greenriver (i.e. Hobsburn) for his ill mother-in-law's brother Henry Elliot. He hunted regularly with the Jedforest Hunt, although he eventually lost the use of one arm. He had one son, Harry. He died at Greenriver and is buried in Hobkirk kirkyard. His wife and mother-in-law moved to Scarborough after his death. James John (b.1864) younger son of lawyer James, he worked in the family firm of Geo. & Jas. Oliver. In 1914, on the death of his cousin John Oliver of Lynnwood, he became senior partner in the firm. He also lived at Mayfield after his father died. He was a keen member of the Teviotdale Cycling Club and the Hawick Golf Club (where he was Captain for 2 years and Treasurer for 10 years). He was a founder member of the Border Club, and the last surviving original member. He was also Chairman of the Hawick Constitutional Club. He served as a Lay Elector, Church Warden and Treasurer (for over 50 years) for St. Cuthbert's Kirk. During WWI he was a Special Constable and became Sheriff-Substitute of Roxburghshire in 1930. He retired at the age of 82, owing to failing eyesight. In 1894 he married Robina Pennycook Scott and their children were Edith Agnes Scott ('Nancy', who married Harry Usher of Courthill), Thomasina (who married Victor Henry Wells-Cole), James Scott (also W.S.) and Tommy Scott. He is buried at St. Cuthbert's. James Scott, W.S. (20th C.) son of James John, he was also a partner in Geo. & Jas. Oliver. He is probably the James S. whose diary describes his time as an A.R.P. Warden during WWII. James Kenneth Murray, O.B.E., 'Ken' (1914–99) auctioneer and successful horse-trainer who lived at Hassendeanbank. He was the son of Douglas and great-grandson of Andrew. As an amateur jockey he won many races, including the Scottish Grand National of 1950 on 'Sanvina'. As a trainer he had nearly 1,000 winners, including 5 Scottish Grand National winners, and in 3 separate seasons he had 56 winners. He is also the only trainer to have had a horse come second 3 times in the Grand National, 'Wynburgh'; the horse was retired at Hassendeanbank, along with its donkey friend. He was founding Chairman of the National Trainers Federation and was largely responsible for the rennaisance of the Doncaster Bloodstock Horse Sales. He was also sometimes known as the 'Benign Bishop' after one of his horses (or perhaps the other way around). He was appointed O.B.E. in 1997, for services to farming and the local community. He gave a speech at the Friday Hut in 1992. He married Joan Innes and they had children Susan (who married William Forster) and Douglas Stuart. He secondly married Rhona Wilkinson. A biography 'The Benign Bishop' (1994) was written by Dan Buglass. Jane see Helen Christina Easson Rees. Janet (16th C.) recorded as tenant in Southdean Mill in a rental roll of 1541, along with Patrick and Marion. Janet (16th C.) tenant in Lustruther in 1541, along with Robert. Together they were tenants of lands valued at 8s 4d. Her name is given first, suggesting she was mother or older sister of Robert. Several other Olivers were tenants of 3 other parts of Lustruther. Janet (17th C.) recorded as 'in Wool' on a list of people who refused to take the Oath of Allegiance in 1684 and were declared rebels. It is unclear whether 'Wool' was Woll, or Wells or somewhere else around Jedforest. Jean 'Jeannie Ma Lord' (d.1819) said to be a descendant of 'Hab o' Hawick' and cousin of 'Clinty'. Although her married name was Riddell or Turnbull, it is said that she retained her maiden name through strength of character. She was known as 'Jane' as well as 'Jean'. She was well educated and her kitchen on Silver Street was a meeting place for the local literati. She wrote an account of the flood of 1767. In the 1837 election a Tory-supporter named Robert Paterson took refuge under the bed of her house (or former house) and was dragged out by the mob. She was known as a strong-willed eccentric, and her nickname came from her word being law among her circle of acquaintances. Stories are also told about how she was 'fond of Dress and used to give considerable orders to the Drapers of the town'. She had a son called 'Daft Robbie', Dr. Oliver of the Navy. Despire the story that her maiden name was Oliver, her death record records her as 'Jeany Scott spouse to deceased Robert Oliver – Jeany my Lord'; hence she may have been the Jean Scott who married Shoemaker Robert Oliver in 1756. Her nickname may therefore be related to the 'Lord' nickname that some of the Olivers had, e.g. George, recorded as 'My Lord, Birselton' in 1804. Jeremiah (b.1735) son of Thomas and Janet Middlemas. He was born in Southdean Parish, but lived most of his life in Crailing. He married Margaret Leadhouse and their children were: Stephen (1782–58), tailor; Robert (b.1784); Robert (again, b.1785); Andrew (b.1787); Richard (b.1788); and Agnes (b.1795). Some of his descendants emigrated to New Zealand. John (13th C.) merchant in Berwick, recorded in 1260. He was recorded as grieve in Berwick when he witnessed 2 charters for Coldstream Priory in about 1255. His name is recorded as 'Johanne Oliuer'. He is one of the earliest known Olivers in the Borders. John (14th C.) recorded in the Exchequer Rolls in 1330. It is unclear where he came from in Scotland. John (14th/15th C.) priest of Ross Diocese. In 1391 he was 'John Oliverii', son of a priest, who petitioned for the perpetual vicarage of 'Newtyl' in St. Andrews Diocese. John (15th C.) recorded as master of works for a bridge in Dumfries in 1460 and again in 1465. It is unclear how he was related to other Olivers. John (15th C.) recorded in 1479/80 as a naturalised Scotsman, now in London. John (15th/16th C.) son of Robert in Strange and brother of Ingram. In 1494/5 he was listed among 8 Olivers and a Shiel when they had remission for communing with the English. He was also described in 1502 as brother of Ingram when he was allowed to pay a fine, along with Robert and David, 'in Stryndis', for being involved with several raids around Jedburgh, Ruecastle, Lanton and Bedrule. He and Robert (perhaps the same Robert who was his father) specifically stole 6 oxen and cows from Philip Ormiston at Maxton; Mark Ker of Dolphinston was surety for him. Additionally in 1502, along with his brother Ingram and David 'Nae Guid Preist', he had remission for stealing oxen from Ancrum, as well as sheep, a cow and other items from Maxton; Mark Ker of Dolphinston served as his surety. He was probably 'Long John Oliver' ('longus' in Latin), who, along with 'Little John Oliuer' and David in Strynds was also allowed to pay a fine for stealing a list (long and detailed) of goods from Martin Wood in Whitfield in 1502, with Mark Ker of Dolphinston as his surety. Furthermore, in 1502 he was also charged with: stealing 2 oxen from Adam Moscrop in Jedburgh, along with his brother Ingram; stealing a horse and 4 oxen from Thomas Pringle in Smailholm; stealing a horse from John Cranston in Crailing; stealing 2 horses and some sheep from George Davidson in Raperlaw; and stealing a horse and goods from Bongate in Jedburgh. Once again Mark Ker was his surety. Finally in 1502, along with another John and John's brother David, all from Strange, he was allowed to compone for stealing a horse from Ednam. Also in 1502 he Martin and Matthew componed for stealing 2 cows and more than 100 sheep from the Laird of Bedrule at Bedrule and Fulton; again Mark Ker was his surety. John (15th/16th C.) son of Gilbert in 'stryndis'. In 1502 he and his brother James had remission for a series of crimes: stealing an ox from Ancrum; stealing 2 cows from Jedburgh; and treason. His surety was Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst. Also in 1502 he is recorded as son of Gilbert in 'stryndis' when he had remission for stealing a horse and a sword from Smailholm; his surety was again Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst. Additionally, along with his brother David and another John, all from Strange, he was allowed to compone in 1502 for stealing a horse from Ednam. Furthermore, in 1502, he was recorded as son of Gilbert 'in kilclewis' when he was allowed to compone, along with David for stealing 19 sheep and a cow from Maxton and six sheep from Muirhouselaw; Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst was his surety. He was also recorded in 1502 as son of Gilbert when, along with Martin in Strange, he was allowed to compone for stealing a cow from Bedrule; Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst was again the surety. He was also recorded as son of Gilbert in 1502 when he was allowed to compone, along with his brother David, for stealing a horse and a pot from Ednam. He was recorded further in 1502 being 'in le stryndis' when, along with David, he was allowed to compone for crimes commited against Gilbert Lamb at Jedburgh, including seriously wounding him; Andrew Kerr was surety. He is probably the same man as 'Little John' ('parva' in Latin) who had remission in 1502, along with 'Long John' and David, for stealing goods from Martin Wood in Whitfield; Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst was his surety, suggesting he was the same John. John 'Cadger' (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1505 when 'Rob with the Dog' had remission for intercommuning with him and David 'Nae Guid Priest'. He is there said to be 'called Cageare'. John (16th C.) tenant at 'Rontrehil' (probably Rowantreehill) in 1541 along with Robert, paying 11 shillings. Several other Olivers (John, Margaret, Adam and Robert 'the schireff') were tenants in the other parts of the farm and may be related. John (16th C.) listed as tenant at 'Rowntrehil' along with Marion and Adam, paying 22 shillings yearly. This is separate from the John who was in 'Rontrehil' with Robert. John 'Blackheid' (16th C.) tenant in Lustruther in 1541, listed separately from another John and several other Olivers. He was tenant of part of Lustruther valued at 8s 4d. John (16th C.) tenant in Lustruther in 1541, along with Katherine and Marion, who were probably his daughters or sisters. Together they were tenants of lands valued at 25s, while several other Olivers were tenants of 3 smaller parts of Lustruther. John (16th C.) tenant at Whiteside in 1541 in Jedforest, along with Patrick, Gilbert and Andrew. Probably the same man was recorded as 'Jake Ollyver of Whitside' in a list of Scotsmen who swore allegience to Henry VIII in 1544. George and 'Patte' Oliver were also listed as being at Whiteside, and hence probably related. John (16th C.) tenant in Harelawcleuch in 1541 along with Richard Oliver and Patrick Laidlaw. John (16th C.) tenant in Falside in 1541. His part of the lands was valued at 25s. Other tenants there included Ninian, Walter, 'Little ' Roger, 'Lang' Roger and Robert, called 'Laird'. John 'Jock' (16th C.) recorded as 'Joke Ollyver of Lustrodder younger' in 1544, when he was among Olivers and others who gave assurance to the English Crown. William, Hob and Ringan were also listed at Lustruther and so were probably related. John (16th C.) tenant at Slacks in 1541, along with Thomas, who was probably his father or brother. They paid 22 shillings yearly, with Charles renting the other part of Slacks. He was also recorded as being 'of Slakis' in a list of Scotsmen who swore allegience to Henry VIII in 1544. John (16th C.) tenant at Nether Dykeraw in 1541, along with James, Michael, Adam and Robert. John 'Jock' (16th C.) listed among Scotsmen who pledged loyalty to the English Crown in 1544. He is recorded as 'Joke Ollyver of Cresters', which is probably a transcription error for Chesters. John 'Jock' (16th C.) recorded at 'Fowden' (probably 'Sowden', i.e. Southdean) in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. John (16th C.) recorded being from Bedrule when he was cited to appear before the Privy Council in 1566. He is probably the priest from Bedrule listed among several Borders clerics ordered to appear before the Lords of Secret Council in 1569; he was there recorded as 'Maister Johnne Oliver in Bedroule'. He was presumably a pre-Reformation priest who was cited for not giving up the old ways. John (16th/17th C.) recorded as 'John Oliphe in Tempilhall' when he witnessed a sasine for the lands of Templehall and Brewlands in Rulewater in 1604. He was also one of the people who were directed by a court action to leave Templehall and Brewlands in 1605, this being brought by George Turnbull, acting as 'tutor' to Jean and Beatrix Turnbull. John (16th/17th C.) recorded as tenant in Lethem along with Simon Robson in 1623. 2 men were acquitted of stealing sheep from them. John (17th C.) tenant in the farm of Bank according to a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. He is probably the John in Bank whose wife's will, Grizel Hall, was recorded in 1685. John (17th C.) recorded as smith near Chesters (Southdean) in a list of tenants of Jedforest in 1669. He is probably related to the Thomas who was recorded as smith at Chesters at 1694 and could be one of the 2 men called John who were also listed as residents at Chesters in 1694. John (17th C.) recorded as tenant of 'Rodes' in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. It is unclear where this was exactly, but it is listed right after Whiteside. John (17th C.) recorded as tenant in Highlee in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. John (17th C.) tenant in 'Slacks', listed on the 1669 rental roll of Jedburgh Forest. George and William were also tenants at the same time. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Margaret Fowler and their children included: Agnes (b.1678); and Bessie (b.1680). The witnesses in 1680 were Adam and William Brown. John (d.1679) from Hobkirk Parish. He is recorded as one of the men banished to America in 1679 for being a Covenanter, and dying at Moul Head of Deerness, in Orkney, when their ship wrecked and they were ordered shut up beneath the hatches. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick who married 'Jenet Bo' (presumably Janet Boa). Their son William was born in Hawick in 1674. John (17th C.) tenant in Falside. In 1679 he served as surety for his brother Thomas, 'servitor of the Marquis of Douglas', who was a Covenanter supporter. Perhaps the same John was recorded as tenant on the 1694 Horse Tax Rolls along with Steven. John (17th C.) listed 'in Wadiespindles' among people declared rebels in 1684 for refusing to take the Oath of Allegiance. John (d.c.1685) tenant in Blackleemouth when his will was recorded in 1685. John (17th C.) resident at Greena in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. John (17th C.) weaver in Hawick, on the 1693/4 subscribers' list for the new Kirk bell. He was listed in 1694 among those on the west-side of Hawick who paid the Hearth Tax. He is probably the weaver who witnessed a baptism for Andrew Jardine, younger, in 1708. John (17th C.) appears to be recorded as 'Stand the Lan' (or perhaps 'Lau') in the Hearth Tax records for the area of Jedburgh in 1694. It is unclear if this was a nickname or a location of some sort. John (17th C.) recorded as tenant in Strange in 1689, when he headed a list of Southdean parishioners who complained that their minister had failed to pray for William and Mary. resident of Strange in Southdean Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. He was surely related to George who was also recorded there. John (17th C.) resident of 'hoa cleughfit' according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. This entry comes just before Waterside, and so was presumably in the Jedforest area. John of Dinlabyre (17th/18th C.) 1st Oliver Laird, he was descended from the Olivers of Lustruther. He may be the tenant recorded at Lustruther and Hyndlee in 1694, when he paid tax on 6 hearths (so he was an important farmer in the area at that time). He probably purchased the Dinlabyre estate from the Elliots in about 1698. He is described as 'elder' of Dinlabyre in 1719 when he purchased the lands of Larriston from Robert Elliot. His eldest son was William, who succeeded to Dinlabyre, and married Mary, daughter of William Chisholme of that Ilk. His 2nd daughter Mary married John, son of William Chisholme of that Ilk (and therefore he had a son-in-law and a brother-in-law who were brother and sister!). It is unclear how he was related to the Olivers of Southdean and neighbouring areas. John (17th/18th C.) merchant in Hawick. In 1710 he witnessed a baptism for weaver Michael Briggs. He may be the same as one of the other Johns. John (d.1739) last of the Olivers of Ashtrees. The lands passed to his only child Helen, and her husband, John Scott. John (1684/5–1750) tenant farmer at Stonedge. He married Helen 'Andrum', who died in 1762, aged 71 (or possibly 76). Along with their daughter Euphen, they were recorded on a memorial stone at old Abbotrule Kirk. John of Dinlabyre (d.bef. 1775) only son of William and Mary Chisholme. He may have been Sheriff of Roxburghshire, as well as Procurator-Fiscal. He also owned the lands of Over and Nether Larriston and others in Liddesdale. In 1748, along with his father, he gifted sacramental cups to Castleton Kirk. He is probably the 'Jo. Olipher' who paid the window tax in Castleton Parish for both Haggiehaugh and Dinlabyre House. In 1734 he married Violet, eldest daughter of Thomas Douglas, who was brother of Archibald Douglas of Cavers. He was succeeded by his eldest son William (b.1738); he may have had other sons, but their names are not known. His daughter Jean married Samuel Mitchelson, W.S., in 1753. His wife may be the 'Lady Dinlabyre' recorded in a hire of the Hawick Parish mortcloth in 1758. John (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish who married Barbara Scott. Their son Thomas was baptised in 1727. John (b.1703/4) shepherd in Shielswood. His father was herd at Groundistone in the early 1700s and then at Whitfield, and he worked there himself in about 1711. He spent 17 years as shepherd for the tenants of Mervinslaw and Wiltonburn and then was shepherd at Shielswood for 34 years. He was one of the men selected to perambulate the boundaries of Wilton Common in 1764, by which time he was living at Whithope. He gave extensive evidence regarding the use of parts of the Common by various tenants for the previous half century. John (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Helen Easton in 1722 and their children included: Andrew (b.1723); Robert (b.1726); and John (b.1728). John (18th C.) referred to as 'senior' in an account of the 1767 flood. He and shoemaker Thomas Waugh 'got to the top of the kiln', but then needed people to throw ropes to save them. He may be one of the 3 shoemakers of that name who had children in the 1760s, perhaps the one who lived at 'Bridge end'; however, he could be a John from an earlier generation. Rev. John (1707–1755) youngest son of Thomas, tenant in Southdean Mill. He was licensed by Jedburgh Presbytery in 1733, and became assistant minister at Southdean in 1736. In 1743 he took over as minister of Southdean on the death of his predecessor John Inglis. He paid the window tax at 'the mance' in Southdean Parish in 1748. His wife, Isobel Hall (daughter of Edward of Whitelee in Redesdale) died in London in 1774. Their children were Elizabeth, Thomas, Janet and Edward. John (18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. He married Susan Hope and their children included: George (b.1756); Margaret (b.1757); Susan (b.1760); and William (b.1761). The witnesses in 1757 were smith Robert Telfer and George (who was probably a relative), in 1761 were Bailie James Scott and gardener Thomas Miller. It is unclear how he was related to other shoemaking Olivers, however the other shoemaker John was witness to a baptism for him in 1760, along with blacksmith Robert Telfer. Given the names, he may have been the son of shoemaker George, born in 1724, with the other John being his cousin. He is probably the shoemaker John who witnessed baptisms (along with merchant Andrew Scott) for merchant William Veitch in 1757, 1759 and 1765 and for merchant Andrew Scott (along with William Veitch) in 1758 and 1762. John (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living at Cavers Knowes in 1745 when his daughter Isabel was baptised. John (18th C.) shoemaker of Hawick. He may be the son of Robert and Bessie Blackhall who was born in Hawick in 1734. He married Isabel Scott in 1756. Their children included: Agnes; Robert (b.1762), tailor in Hawick, possibly 'Clinty'; Elizabeth 'Betty' (1764–1838), who died in Peebles; Agnes (again, b.1766); Alison (b.1768); Andrew (b.1770); and William (b.1775). His son William was named as a second cousin in the 1808 will of William, 'Auld Cash'; William's brother was stated to be tailor Robert, who may have been 'Clinty'. In fact he was probably a full cousin of 'Auld Cash'. In 1760 he was witness to a baptism for another shoemaker of the same name, who may have been his cousin. Either he or one of the other shoemakers called John was witness for shoemaker James Brown in 1766. He is probably the shoemaker at 'Bridge end' whose death is recorded in Hawick in 1787. He may also be the John 'senior' who narrowly escaped from his house during the flood of 1767. He may be the shoemaker John who was selected in 1755 to accompany the 'burleymen' and 'spademen' to mark the boundaries of the Common. John (b.1735) son of Walter and Margaret Turnbull, he was born in Hawick and was a shoemaker. He married Helen Currer in Hawick in 1763; she was living in Hawick Parish, but born in Bedrule Parish, daughter of James. Their children included: Helen (b.1764); Margaret (b.1766); Jane (b.1768), who married James, son of George and Agnes Douglas (who were related to the Timpendean Douglases); and Agnes (b.1772). The witnesses in 1766 were James Currer (probably his father-in-law) and Robert Oliver (presumably a relative, but there were several contemporary men of this name) and in 1772 were James Elliot of Ormiston and surgeon Robert Erskine. James Haining suggests that he secondly married Agnes Ekron, but that is probably confusion with a different John (b.1740). John (b.1740) son of James, farmer at Earlside and Margaret Douglas, who came from the Trows family. He was a merchant in Hawick. He is probably the merchant who witnessed a baptism for Alexander Lockie in 1772. In 1766 he married Agnes (1748–80), daughter of merchant James Ekron and Isobel Richardson. Their children included: Isabel (b.1767), who died young; Elizabeth ('Betty', 1771–1844), who married linen merchant Charles Scott, and not George Hall from Duns, as some Hall of Philadelphia family histories have suggested; James (b.1773); James (again, b.1775); Agnes (d.1775), who also died young; Isabel (again, b.1777); and William (b.1779), died in infancy. James Oliver Senior and 'J. Oliver Jnr.' (probably his father and brother) were witnesses to the baptism of his first child, and seem likely to have been his father and brother. James Oliver 'Senior' (probably his father) and merchant James Ekron (his father-in-law) were witnesses in 1771, William Scott, merchant, and James Aitkin were witnesses in 1773, while J. Oliver, merchant and T. Aitkin were witnesses in 1777. His wife Agnes' had a book of the catechism that survived as a family heirloom. John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isabel Moss (also from Hawick) in 1761. Their children included Helen (b.1762). John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Christian Scott and their daughter Ann was baptised in 1777. John (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was recorded as a wright at Cauldmill in 1777, 1779, 1782 and 1788. His children included William (b.1777), Stephen (b.1779), John (b.1782) and Helen (b.1788). Several other children baptised around the same time could be his, e.g. Margery (b.1784) and Thomas (b.1786). Perhaps the same John was in Cauldmill in 1796 when his twins Isabel and Elizabeth were baptised in Cavers. John (18th C.) Schoolmaster in Castleton Parish. He was recorded at the Schoolhouse in 1778. He married Margaret Armstrong and their children included: Janet (b.1775); Agnes (b.1776); Ebenezer (b.1778); Archibald (b.1778); Elizabeth (b.1781); Thomas (b.1782); Elizabeth (again, b.1784); James (b.1786); and John (b.1787). It seems possible he is John (b.1750), son of Cavers Schoolmaster Ebenezer. John 'Rough Jock' (18th C.) recorded in 1787 when his child died in Hawick Parish. His name is recorded as both 'Rough Jock' and 'Rough Joke'. He could be the same as one of the other Johns. John (b.c.1765) recorded as 'independent' at Newton in Wilton Parish in 1841. He was probably a retired farmer there. He lived there with Helen, who was probably his wife. John (18th/19th C.) said to have been son of William and Isabella Stewart. He lived in Hawick Parish when his first 2 children were baptised and in Wilton Parish when some other children were baptised (e.g. at Braidlies in 1787 and Muirfield in 1791), and was later at Essenside. He married Margaret Douglas in Castleton Parish in 1770. Their children included: Helen (b.1775); John (b.1777); Francis (b.1779); Isabel (b.1782); William (b.1785); Robert (b.1787), who emigrated to Pictou County, Nova Scotia; Henry (b.1791), who emigrated with his brother Robert; and Margaret (b.1789). John (18th C.) married Isabel Scoon in Minto Parish in 1790. Their son James was baptised in Wilton in 1791. John (18th/19th C.) tenant in Upper Dykeraw in Southdean Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. James was also tenant there and presumably related. He was 'Husbandman' at Dykeraw on the 1801 Militia ballot. John (18th/19th C.) tenant in Westerhouses in Southdean Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. William was also tenant there and presumably related. John (18th/19th

C.) tenant at Langburn (distinct then from Langburnshiels) in 1801, when his servant William Foster was on the Militia ballot in Hobkirk Parish. John (18th/19th C.) wright at Chesters in Southdean Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. John (b.c.1770s) servant at Mosspaul according to the ballot list for the Militia in Cavers Parish in 1799. Perhaps the same John was a servant at Northhouse Haugh on the 1801 Militia ballot. John (b.c.1780) mason at Cauldmill according to the ballot for the Militia in Cavers Parish in 1801. Perhaps the same mason was listed at Stobs Castle in 1821 when he subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border'. John (18th/19th C.) tenant at Denholm Mill. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He may have been father of Archibald, who was also at Denholm Mill in 1825. John (1770–1849) 2nd son of James, ironmonger and Cornet, he was grandfather of J.J. Oliver of Mayfield. He became a lawyer and set up in partnership with John Elliot about 1791. He is recorded in documents in Selkirk, perserved in the Walter Mason Collection, in 1801, 1802, 1807, 1810, 1813, 1814 and 1815. Oliver & Elliot were appointed agents for the Commercial Bank in 1820 (or shortly afterwards), and were listed in Pigot's 1825/6 directory on Buccleuch Street. His house at 5 Buccleuch Street is marked on Wood's 1824 map. He is probably also the 'John Oliver Esq.' who is shown on Wood's map as owner of land around where Mayfield Park was built. He served as Hawick's Town Clerk 1810–41, being originally appointed jointly with James Inglis (he was recorded as already Town Clerk in 1808 when his son James died). He was recorded as a freeholder in the Michaelmas Head-Court of Jedburgh in 1811. He arranged for the first Burgh Seal in 1817 (and in fact paid for the small version of the seal himself), which led to the design for the Town's Coat of Arms. He was also one of the founding members of the Hawick Curling Club. In 1822 he got together with manufactirers William and Walter Wilson, brothers Joseph and William Nixon, Town Clerk John Oliver and John Elliot, to share a 'gig', before any long-distance transportation was available other than the mail coach. In 1825 he subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick'. He was one of the reform-minded men who met regularly in the upstairs room of Robert Wilson. In 1827 Oliver & Elliot were involved with a case in Selkirk regarding 'Dowager Lady's Elliot's 4 wheel carriage'. He was Town Clerk in 1834 when the Burgh brought a case before the Court of Session, claiming exclusive privilege of the Town Clerk (as opposed to the superior) for taking infeftments within the Burgh of Hawick. For a while he was in partnership with his sons (at least William and Thomas) as woollen manufacturers; together with William Wilson & Sons they purchased Weensland Corn Mill in about 1836 and had Weensland Mill built there. In Pigot's 1837 directory he is listed as agent of the Commercial Bank and also for North British Insurance, along with his son George; he is also listed as a writer on Buccleuch Street, with 'John & George' being listed separately as writers and 'justice of peace clerks'. He was living on Buccleuch Street (at about No. 11) in 1841, with his children William, James, Thomas and Mary. On his retiral he was presented with a silver punch bowl by the Burgh. He married Jean (or Jane), daughter of George Fairley, merchant of Greenlaw. Their children were: James (1802–08), who died young; George (b.1803), also a lawyer; John (b.1805), farmer at Caerlenrig and Whitropefoot; Jane (b.1807), who married William Aitcheson of Linhope; Christian (b.1809), who married Liverpool merchant William Watson; Margaret (b.1810), who married Dr. Harrison of the East India Company; Mary (b.1812); William (b.1813), farmer at Hallrule and Barnes; James (b.1814) also a lawyer, who had Mayfield House built; and Thomas Fairley (b.1816), farmer at West Fortune, Haddington. He is buried at St. Mary's. A portrait of him exists. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He was recorded at Ashkirk Mill in 1797 among men balloted to serve in the Militia; in 1799 he was 'In the Ballot Box 1797 not drawn still residing in Askirk parish' and he was a labourer at Ashkirk Mill in 1801. He married Anne Niel (surely related to the miller Alexander Neil, perhaps his daughter) in Ashkirk Parish in 1800 (with his wife's name given as 'Agnes' when they married). Their children included: Isabel (b.1801), who married John White of Midshiels; Janet (b.1802), who married Francis Napier Scott; Alexander (b.1804), miller and later keeper of Ashkirk Tollbar; Jane (b.1806); and James (b.1809). His widow could be the 80 year old pauper of the same name (born in Minto Parish) living with Barbara Scott in Denholm in 1851 (and who had a son Alexander in Minto in 1800). However, it seems more likely that she died in childbirth in 1809, with him quickly remarrying to 'Allace' (or Alison) Turnbull in Kirkton in 1809; this couple had a son Andrew (b.1811). John (18th/19th

C.) farmer at Whitfield in 1797, according to the Horse Tax Rolls. He owned 5 horses at that time. John (b.1770s) servant at Courthill in Wilton Parish. He is recorded in 1797 on the list of men balloted to serve in the Militia; his name appears again in 1798, but by 1799 someone had substituted for him, although it is unclear who this was. John (b.c.1780) shepherd at Singdean according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish. John (b.c.1780) nailer in Minto according to the ballot for the Militia in 1801. He may have been son of nailer James, whose son Thomas was on the 1799 Militia ballot. He is probably the John, nailer at Teviothaugh, who was charged with poaching in 1815, but acquitted. John (c.1786–1847) from the Hawick area. He emigrated to Canada, perhaps around 1818. He married Agnes Rutherford (1794–1868), this probably being the marriage recorded in Southdean and Oxnam Parishes in 1814. Their children were: Janet (c.1817–47); George (c.1820–1900), who died in Carberry, Manitoba; Thomas (b.c.1823); Elizabeth (b.c.1827); Andrew (c.1827–50), who died in New Orleans; and Janes (b.c.1830). He and his wife died in Galt, Ontario. He is probably the John mentioned in a letter in 1824 when Archibald Elliot, writing to his brother Thomas Elliot in America, stating that 'his child that he left is dead and that his sister Margaret in Craikhope is very anxious to hear from him'. John (b.c.1780s) labourer at Wester Alemoor, according to the 1812 ballot for the Militia in Roberton Parish. John (18th/19th C.) married Agnes Rutherford in Southdean Parish in 1814. John (18th/19th C.) married Margaret Rutherford in Southdean Parish in 1823. John (18th/19th C.) Hawick man known locally as a musician, probably on the fiddle (noted as such by W.N. Kennedy in 1863, with no additional information given). John (1781–1857) born in Bedrule Parish, son of James. He was miller of Hawick Mill. He is recorded in Pigot's 1825/6 and 1837 directories and was farmer and miller on the Crescent in the 1841 census. He was also recorded as a nail-maker at Hawick Mill in the 1837 directory and a nail-maker on the Crescent in Slater's 1852 directory. In 1851 he was at Hawick Mill House and recorded as farmer of 50 acres and nail-maker, employing 6 men. He was living with his sister-in-law Margaret Scott and nephew Robert Renwick. He was still listed as miller at Hawick Mill in Slater's 1852 directory. John (b.c.1785) shoemaker at 4 Cross Wynd, recorded in Pigot's 1825/6 and 1837 directories. In 1841 he was recorded on the Cross Wynd with his wife Margaret. It is unclear how he might have been related to other shoemaking Olivers. Probably the same shoemaker was listed on the ballot for the Militia in 1801. John (1789/90–bef. 1861) tailor in Newcastleton, listed in Pigot's 1825/6 and 1837 directories and Slater's 1852 directory. In 1851 he was at about 15 North Hermitage Street. His daughter Anne was still living there in 1861. He could be the John who was recorded as subscription librarian in Newcastleton in 1852. John (b.c.1790) miller at Haughhead in Hawick Parish. He is listed there in 1841, along with his wife Alison; this could be Alison Turnbull, who married a John in Kirkton Parish in 1809. John (c.1800–bef. 51) framework knitter. He came from the same family as Mary, who married Walter Grieve. He was recorded on the Loan (around No. 6) in 1841. He married Margaret Purves, who was from Bedrule. Their children were: Margaret (b.c.1826); John (b.1828), who moved to Vancouver; Robert (1831–1906), who emigrated to South Australia; Helen (b.1834); Martha (b.1836); Isabella or Elizabeth (b.1838); and Janet (b.1840). By 1851 his wife was a widow at No. 6 Loan, and she was still there in 1861, working as a 'Mangle Keeper'. John (b.1805) 2nd surviving son of Hawick Town Clerk John. He farmed at Caerlenrig and Whitropefoot. He was named in 1837 along with his brother George, and Robert Anderson (also a lawyer in Hawick) among Tories who had jointly purchased land in Selkirkshire for the purposes of voting there. He was recorded at Caerlenrig in 1861, farming 80 arables acres and 600 acres of pasture and employing 5 people. He was recorded as farmer at 'Rigg' in 1868. In 1871 he donated to the Museum an 'assignat, dated second year of the French Republic, for £125'. He married Helen Sibbald and they had 4 sons and 2 daughters, John (b.1843), James (b.1845), George (b.1847), Jane (b.1849), Agnes (b.1852) and Thomas (b.1855). John (1809/10–70) cattle dealer in Lilliesleaf. He married Jane Young, who died at Dryden in 1893, aged 74. They are buried in Lilliesleaf Kirkyard. John (b.1843) son of farmer John and grandson of the Hawick Town Clerk of the same name who founded the family law firm. He resided at Lynnwood House. He became the senior partner in Geo. & Jas. Oliver. He married Euphemia, daughter of John Johnstone of Crailing Hall. Their daughters were Helen Sibbald, Mary Beatrice Simson and Elizabeth Rutherford. He was a prominent agriculturalist, being tenant of Whiterope and President of the Teviotdale Famers' Club. He was also

Vice-President of the Sacred Harmonic Society in the 1880s. John (b.1850) eldest son of lawyer George. He succeeded his father as partner in the firm of 'writers and bank agents', 'Geo. & Jas. Oliver'. He also became tenant in Borthaugh after his father's death. He became a life member of the Archæological Society in 1873. In about 1874 he was recorded as owner of Burnflat, which had previously belonged to George. He represented Wilton Parish on the County Council for 9 years. He was an enthusiastic promoter of the Border Club. He is probably the John of Borthaugh who composed 'March Militaire: The Border Mounted Volunteers'. He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1880. He married Edith Mary, daughter of Thomas Cobb of Kent (a family that can trace its ancestry back to the time of Edward II). Their children were: Mary Lindsay, a musician, who moved to Moline, Illinois; George Lindsay, a Captain in the West India Regiment; John Lindsay, who served in the Boer War and moved to Salisbury, Rhodesia; Thomas Lindsay, an engineer with the Chicago and Rock Island Railway Company, who died of typhoid in Moline in 1905; James Lindsay, who followed his brother to the U.S.A. as an engineer; Faulconer Lindsay, who became a farmer in New Zealand; Gordon Lindsay, who also went to Chicago to work for the railway; and Edith Margaret Lindsay. The entire family had the middle name 'Lindsay', in memory of his mother and to distinguish this branch of the family. John (19th/20th C.) eldest son of hosiery manager Robert. He trained as an architect, working for Alex Inglis. In WWI he was with the R.A.M.C. and received the Military Medal. He was later an architect in South Africa. John A.L. partner in the firm of Geo. & Jas. Oliver, the 5th generation of Hawick lawyers. He started practising in about 1977. Katherine (16th C.) tenant in Lustruther in 1541, along with John and Marion. Together they were tenants of lands valued at 25s, while several other Olivers were tenants of 3 smaller parts of Lustruther. Ken see James Kenneth Murray. Leo (13th C.) recorded as 'Lionus Oliver de Thorndon' in the 1279 assize roll of Northumberland. He was also listed in Coquetdale as a fugitive. His lands were in England, but, nevertheless, he is an early example of this surname. Richard, son of Thomas, is also listed in 1279 and possibly related. Lyle (16th C.) tenant in Roughlee in 1544, when he was among Olivers who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He is listed as 'Lyonell Ollyver of Rowghleis'. Lyle (17th C.) tenant in Rouchhirst according to a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. He is listed along with Thomas 'minor', who may have been related. Margaret (16th C.) recorded as tenant in Mervinslaw in a rental roll of 1541, along with her son William. Their steading was valued at 12s 6d. Other tenants at Mervinslaw included James and William alias 'Merchant'. Margaret (16th C.) tenant at Hindhaughhead in 1541 along with her son Gilbert. They paid 25 shillings yearly. Margaret (16th C.) joint tenant in Wylie's Hill in 1541, along with Margaret Wylie, paying 25s yearly. Another part of the farm was tenanted by (presumably a different) Margaret, paying 12s 6d yearly. Margaret (16th C.) joint tenant in the larger part of Westerhouses in 1541, along with Nicholas. Alexander was tenant of $\frac{1}{3}$ of the farm. Margaret (17th C.) recorded in 1658 when she was fined by the Magistrates for calling Isabell Scott 'witchesgait, and saying that she devoored her awine child'. Margaret (17th C.) recorded being 'in Slack' in 1684 on a list of people who refused to take the Oath of Allegiance and were declared rebels. She was among a relatively small number of women who were prosecuted for being Covenanters. Margaret (d.1737) resident of Wilton Parish. She was 'in Trowmiln' when her funeral was recorded in 1736. It is possible she was Margaret Douglas of the Trows, 2nd wife of James. Margaret (18th C.) servant at Borthwickbrae in 1791, when she was working for John Elliot. Margaret (18th/19th C.) recorded along with Mary in Pigot's 1837 directory as milliners and dressmakers on the High Street. Margaret (b.1778/9) grocer at Chesters in 1841 and 1851. She was born in Crailing Parish and was widow, probably of one of the local Olivers. Marion (16th C.) recorded as tenant in Southdean Mill in a rental roll of 1541 along with Patrick and Janet. Her name is listed as 'Mariote Olivere' (which is probably 'Marion', but could also be 'Mary'). Marion (16th C.) listed as tenant at 'Rowntrehil' in 1541 along with John and Adam, paying 11 shillings. Several other Olivers (John, Robert and Robert 'the schireff') were tenants in the other parts of the farm and may be related. Marion (16th C.) tenant in Lustruther in 1541, along with her son William ('the Lawyer'). Other tenants were 2 Johns (one called 'Blackhead'), Janet Katherine and another Marion. Marion (16th C.) tenant in Lustruther in 1541, along with John and Katherine. Together they were tenants of lands valued at 25s, while several other Olivers were tenants of 3 smaller parts of Lustruther. She is separate from the mother of 'the Lawyer'. Martin (15th C.) brother of Robert. He is recorded in 1493 when he was fined at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh for non-appearance. Other Olivers who were fined at the same time were Robert and James son of Gilbert, Matthew son of Geoffrey and Robert brother of Matthew. It is unclear how he might have been related to these other Olivers, or who his brother Robert was. However, probably the same Martin was recorded in 1494/5 as brother of Matthew (although it is possible that what is meant is brother of Robert in Strange), when a group of 8 Olivers and a Shiel had remission for communing with the English. In 1502, along with his brother Matthew and James son of Gilbert, he was allowed to compone for stealing 200 sheep from the tenants of Jedburgh, Ruecastle, Lanton and Bedrule; his surety was Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst. Probably the same Martin in Strange was allowed to compone in 1502, along with John son of Gilbert, for stealing a cow from Bedrule; Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst was again the surety. Further in 1502 he was allowed to compone, along with Matthew (both in Strange) for stealing 4 lambs and an ox from George Russell in Fulton. Also in 1502 he Matthew and John componed for stealing 2 cows and more than 100 sheep from the Laird of Bedrule at Bedrule and Fulton; Andrew Kerr was again his surety. He is probably the Martin who was one of the 4 Olivers in Strynds who were sentenced to execution in 1502 for their 'diverse reiffis, hereschippis, slauchtaris, and stouthis'; the others were Robert, David and Matthew. Martin (16th C.) recorded among Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII in 1544. His name was given as 'Matyn Ollyver of Fawside', with Ringan and Dandy Oliver also listed there. Martin (17th C.) resident of Slacks in Southdean Parish according to the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. His name appears to be written 'Marin'. Matthew (15th C.) son of Geoffrey. He is recorded in 1493 when he was fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. His brother Robert was also fined at the same time, as well as James and Robert sons of Gilbert, and Martin brother of Robert. Probably the same Matthew is also recorded in 1493 when his brother Robert's charges of common theft and delivery of stolen goods were suspended. Probably the same Matthew was recorded as brother of Martin (although the text is ambiguous) in 1494/5 among 8 Olivers and a Shiel who had remission for communing with the English. In 1502, along with his brother Martin and James son of Gilbert, he was allowed to compone for stealing 200 sheep from the tenants of Jedburgh, Ruecastle, Lanton and Bedrule; his surety was Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst. He is likely the same Matthew in 'le stryndis' who was allowed to compone in 1502 for bringing in 11 Nixons to steal a black horse from Corbet (in the company of Robert Oliver), 2 horses from Dolphinston and 10 sheep from the Laird of Bedrule; his surety was Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst. Further in 1502 he was allowed to compone, along with Martin (both in Strange) for stealing 4 lambs and an ox from George Russell in Fulton. Also in 1502 he Martin and John componed for stealing 2 cows and more than 100 sheep from the Laird of Bedrule at Bedrule and Fulton; Andrew Kerr was again his surety. He is likely to be the Matthew recorded in 1502 who was sentence to hanging in Jedburgh, along with Robert, David and Martin, all residing at Strynds (near Abbotrule); the judgement was on account of failure to find sureties. A note in the records of the Justice-aire adds that the men were delivered to the Sheriff, so presumably the sentence was carried out. Matthew (16th C.) miller at Langnewton Mill. In 1590 he was among a list of men who complained about an attack by Robert and James, brothers of Andrew Ker of Newhall, and their accomplices. Michael (16th C.) tenant at Nether Dykeraw in 1541, along with James, John, Adam and Robert. Michael (b.1820s) farmer at the Flex in 1841. His wife was Helen and they had a daughter Helen. He could be the same as the policeman at Teviothead. Michael (b.1816/7) born at Whitlaw, he was Constable in Teviothead Parish. He lived at Teindside Slope in 1851, but by 1861 he had moved to Melrose. He married Mina Knox in Hawick in 1846 and they had children Williamina and William. Michael 'the Toff', full back for Hawick Royal Albert. His nickname came from how he conducted himself on the pitch. He first played for the Legion and was signed by the Albert at the age of 18, remaining for 12 seasons. He was part of the team that won the East of Scotland League Championship in 1973/4. He later played for Kelso United and Hawick Waverley. Mrs. James Rutherford (1839–1914), born Jane Rutherford, she was the second wife of James and step-mother of Andrew R. The couple had 7 children together. She had a strong interest in local history, writing 'Upper Teviotdale and the Scotts of Buccleuch' (1887) and 'Border Sketches' (1904), as well as articles for the Transactions, such as 'Hawick and the

Borders 300 Years Ago'. She was usually referred to as simply 'Mrs. Oliver of Thornwood'. She also had short stories published in Chambers Journal. She was involved in Conservative politics, being an active member of the Primrose League. She ceremoniously laid the foundation stone for the new Post Office with a silver trowel in 1892; her husband owned all of the neighbouring land, and she was involved in establishing the Post Office there. She gave a speech at the unveiling of the Horneshole Monument in 1901 and was Guest at the Common Riding of 1902. In 1903 she unveiled the plaque on the Sclaterford Bridge. Her portrait is in the Museum, by an unknown artist. Murray (19th C.) elder of Newcastleton U.P. Kirk in the latter part of the 19th century. Nellie 'Nell o the Bar' (19th C.) wife of Kit Paterson (descendant of 'Pawkie'). The 'bar' presumably refers to the Loan Toll-bar, near where they lived. Nichol 'Ower-the-cleuch' (16th C.) recorded in 1586/7 as 'Nichol Olipheir, callit Ouer the Cleuch', among Borderers accused of crimes who had failed to appear in court and were given one more chance to find sureties. It is unclear what his nickname meant. Nicholas (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502. He was the representative of John Rutherford of Hundalee to 'give suit' for Rutherford's lands of Grubet at the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh. Nicholas (16th C.) joint tenant in the larger part of Westerhouses in 1541, along with Margaret. Alexander was tenant of ⅓ of the farm. Ninian (16th C.) tenant in Falside in 1541, with his part of the lands valued at 25s. Tenants of the other parts included John, Walter, 'Little ' Roger, 'Lang' Roger and Robert, called 'Laird'. Ninian 'Ringan' (16th C.) recorded as 'Ranyon Ollyver' in the same place as William of 'Myrleslawe' in 1544, when he was among a list of Scotsmen swearing allegiance to the English King. They may have been based at Mervinslaw. Ninian 'Ringan' (16th C.) listed at Falside among Scotsmen who pledged loyalty to the English Crown in 1544. His name is listed as 'Ranyon Ollyver of Fawsid'. 'Dandy Ollyver of the same' is also listed and hence surely related. Ninian 'Ringan' (16th C.) recorded at Lustruther among Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII in 1544. Other men at the same place were William, Hob and Jock, younger. Ninian (17th C.) resident of Woodhouse according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. Ninian 'Ringan' (d.1736) farmer at Smailcleughfoot in Jedwater, near to Ferniehirst Mill. His name is also sometimes written 'Ringam'. He was famed as one the most important of the local Olivers in his day, holding a position of trust by the Baron of Ferniehirst and being known for his great strength. Many stories of his feats were current in Jedforest into the 19th century. One tale involves the liberation for 2 friends from Newcastle Jail. It was also said that he was a Covenanter, who fought at Drumclog, Killiecrankie and Bothwell Bridge, then supposedly slew a Highlander champion in single combat, went into hiding and joined the Cameronians at Dunkeld. After the Revolution he is said to have returned to his farm and attended the Cameronian Chapel at Denholm. Another tale involves him shooting the dogs of some hunters who rode through his corn (this being amplified in James Telfer's poem 'Auld Ringan'); they were said to have reported him to the King, leading to his arrest by royal warrant. A different version says that the young Marquess of Lothian trampled his corn deliberately while hunting with his dogs, this being in retaliation for Ringan not letting him enter the charter room at Ferniehirst when his father was away; Ringan shot the Marquess' dogs, leading the Marquess to appeal to the Sheriff for his arrest, which came only after a siege of his house at Smailcleughfoot, with his servant girl being shot and he himself having his jaw broken by a supporter of the Marquess named Allan. He then ended up in prison in Edinburgh Tolbooth for 8 years and continued to live there after his release, being buried in Greyfriars Kirkyard. He is alternatively said to have died in jail in Edinburgh. His story is described by Sir Walter Scott, in Lang's 'Stories of the Border Marches', in the ballad by James Telfer (published in 1824 and revised for the 1862 edition, including details in a letter written by the local inventor James Veitch, who was a descendant of his sister, and a fictionalised version of the slaying of the Highland chief), in Tancred's 'Rulewater' in 1907 and in 'The Covenanters of Teviotdale' in 1908. The extent to which any of the details are true is completely unclear, although Abraham Oliver is recorded as resident at Smailcleughfoot in the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls, and could have been a close relative. He married Mary, daughter of Henry Hall, the famous Covenanter. It was said that his son Robert later came across the man called Allan who had attacked his father and 'gave him such a dressing ... as payment for breaking his father's chaftblade' – 'Auld Ringan sat i' the Smailcleugh Tower, Even at his ain hearth-stane; And his mind did roam on youthful deeds, Of days that now were gane' [JTe], 'Auld Ringan was an Oliver stout, Of the stout Jedforest clan; Of him his kinsmen were well proud, – He was their foremost man' [JTe]. His 'Andrea Ferrara' sword was kept by the inventor James Veitch, whose great-grandmother was his sister; it was later owned by the Veitches of Inchbonny. Ninian 'Ringan' (d.1736) tailor in Falside. In 1698 his twin sons Stephen and Andrew were baptised in Southdean Parish, Patrick (16th C.) recorded in 1538 being made 'chamberlain' responsible by the Crown for collecting the rentals in Jedforest. He was 'Sir' (or 'domino'), probably meaning that he was a priest rather than a knight. He was allowed rents from 40 shillings worth of land. It is unclear how he was related to other Olivers. Patrick (16th C.) tenant at 'Rouchchesteris' in Jedforest according to a rental roll of 1541. It is unclear where this farm was, but probably near Strange and Southdean Mill, where he may have been related to other Olivers. Patrick (16th C.) tenant in Southdean Mill in 1541, along with Janet and Marion. Patrick 'Pate' (16th C.) tenant at Whiteside in Jedforest in 1541, along with Gilbert, Andrew and John. His name was listed first and so he may have been the senior family member. He is also recorded as 'Patte Ollyver of Whitside' in a list of Scotsmen who swore allegience to Henry VIII in 1544. 'Jake' and 'Gorge' Oliver were also listed as being at Whiteside in 1544, and hence probably related. Patrick 'Pate' (16th C.) first man listed among the Olivers who swore allegiance to Henry VIII in 1544. He was listed as 'Patte Ollyver of the Bushe', his lands probably being Bush near Bonchester. Patrick (17th C.) resident at Hassendean recorded in 1684 among the men declared as rebels for refusing to conform to Episcopalianism. He may be the Partick who married Bessie Scott and whose children, baptised in Roberton Parish, included Isobel (b.1681), with witnesses William Scott and John Armstrong. Patrick (17th C.) recorded as one of the tenants in Falside in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. 2 men with this same name were listed along with other Olivers, and a Common and a Laidlaw. Patrick (1720/1–79) died at Bridgehouse in Castleton Parish. His wife Margaret Beattie died in 1793, aged 60. He is probably an ancestor of James and Peter, who were merchants in Newcastleton. He and his wife are buried at Ettleton. Patrick (18th C.) resident of Southdean Parish. His children included Thomas (b.1758), Robert (b.1761) and Margaret (b.1763). Patrick (18th/19th C.) recorded on the 1794 and 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as farmer at Westshiels in Southdean Parish. He had 4 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. He also paid the dog tax in the same year. He may also have been known as Peter. His children included: Patrick (b.1783); and James (b.1785). Other children may have been Mary (b.c.1779), Margaret (b.1785), Andrew (b.1786), Thomas (b.1786) and Isabel (b.1788). Peter (16th C.) described as 'somtymes receipt with' (i.e. reset with) George Ker of Primside Mill when he was accused by the English Warden of stealing sheep from him in 1589. Peter (18th C.) resident of Southdean Parish. He lived for a while at Hyndlee and was shepherd to 'Brockalaw' (i.e. on nearby Brockie Law). A story is told by his son Robert, recounted in 'The local historian's table book' (1844) of how he encountered one of the fairy folk, said to be the last seen in the district. Peter (1783–1861) son of Patrick, tenant at Westshiels in Southdean Parish. He may be the 'Patrick' recorded as tenant at Westshiels on the 1801 Militia ballot in Southdean Parish. He married Mary Fowler and their children John (1826–1917) and Robert (b.1827) were born in Edinburgh. He died at Cannonmills, Edinburgh. Peter (1789/90–1845) son of James and Jane Armstrong, he was born at Burnmouth in Castleton Parish. He was a merchant in Newcastleton, but was declared bankrupt in 1817, with Walter Armstrong of Burnmouth appointed as trustee. He is 'P. Oliver', merchant in Castleton, in the subscriber list for William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821 (ordering 2 copies). He married Elizabeth Murray, who died in 1864, aged 75; she was probably daughter of Thomas Murray and Janet Inglis. Their children included: James (1812/3–31); Jeanie (1813/4–35); David (1817–18); Janet (1819–28); Thomas (1820/1–41); David (again, b.1823); John (1825/6–33); Alexander (1830–31); Janet (again, 1833–34); and James (b.1837). Most of their children died young, in either Edinburgh or at Whisgills. Philip (16th C.) recorded among a list of the occupiers of Newton in Bedrule in 1531. Richard (13th C.) listed in the 1279 assize roll for Northumberland. He appears there as 'Ricardo filio Thomae Oliver', and so his father was Thomas. He seems to have been connected with the lands of St. Paul, probably in Coquetdale. He may be related to the Leo who also appears in the same roll. Probably the same 'Ricardum Oliver' is listed on a panel deciding on the lands held by the Earl of Dunbar in Northumberland in 1290. Richard (16th C.) tenant in Harelawcleuch in 1541 along with John Oliver and

Patrick Laidlaw. Richard (17th C.) listed as resident of Bairnkine along with Andrew and Robert in 1684 when they were declared fugitives for refusing to take the Oath of Allegiance. They were surely all related. If he managed to escape persecution then he may be the Richard who was given the rank of Lieutenant in the Roxburghshire Fencibles after the Revolution. Richard (17th C.) cottar at Fodderlee in Abbotrule Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Robert (13th C.) listed in a 1288 receipt for the fee of Alexander, son of the Earl of Dunbar, made at Berwick. He was recorded as 'Robertus Oliuer' Burgess of Berwick in 1291 as part of the Ragman Rolls. Also in 1291/2 he had 2 letters of safe-conduct, and was there described as a merchant of Berwick. In a court case in 1293 (whe a man stole money from Newcastle) he is referred to as Constable of Berwick Castle. Robert (14th C.) recorded as 'Olyver' in 1387 when he witnessed a document for Sir Thomas Strother in Newcastle. He is one of the earliest known Olivers who may have a local connection. Robert (15th/16th C.) tenant in 'le stryndis' (i.e. Strange) recorded at the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh. His name headed a list of 8 Olivers and a Shiel who had remission in 1494/5 for the crime of communing with the English. The others listed were his sons Ingram and John, as well as Matthew, Martin ('his brother', although it is unclear if this means Martin's brother or his), Robert son of Gilbert (who was therefore clearly a different man), James and William ('his brothers', probably meaning Robert's brothers, i.e. other sons of Gilbert) and Gilbert Shiel in Bedrule. It is possible he is the same Robert as the son of Geoffrey. He was also recorded as 'in Stryndis' in 1502 when, along with David, he had a remission for stealing 101 sheep from William Ker at 'Dernewik-mure'; Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst served as surety. Also that same year he was allowed to 'compound' (i.e. pay a fine) for several other crimes, including stealing 200 sheep from the tenants of Jedburgh, Ruecastle, Lanton and Bedrule, stealing 7 oxen and cows from Philip Ormiston in Maxton, killing John Moffat, stealing 33 cows, 200 sheep, 4 horses and goods from 'Robert Barnisfader' at 'Kelshop', killing Robert Brig, and for 'Treason of old and new'. Some of these crimes were carried out along with John (brother of Ingram) and David. He is probably the Robert who was allowed to compone in 1502 for stealing sheep from Jedburgh and cows from Selkirk; Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst served as his surety. Additionally he is probably the Robert who was mentioned as a colluder with Matthew in bringing in a gang of Nixons who stole a horse from Andrew Ker in Corbet. He is probably the Robert who was sentenced to be hanged later in 1502 (along with David, Martin and Matthew) for failure to 'fynde sufficient souerties for satisfactioune of parteis'. These 4 were either brothers or a mixture of 2 generations (more likely if this was the same David). Robert (15th C.) son of Gilbert. He is recorded in 1493 when he was fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. His brother James was also fined at the same time, as well as Matthew son of Geoffrey, Robert brother of Matthew and Martin brother of Robert; William, son of Gilbert, was also fined, and was probably his brother too. In 1494/5 he was listed (again as son of Gilbert) among 8 Olivers (including Robert in 'Stryndis') and a Shiel who had remission for the crime of communing with the English. Robert (15th C.) brother of Matthew. He is recorded in 1493 when he was fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. Matthew son of Geoffrey (who may be the same Matthew who was his brother) was also fined at the same time, as well as James and Robert sons of Gilbert, and Martin brother of Robert. The same Robert, brother of Matthew, was also recorded in 1493 when his charges of common theft and delivery of stolen goods (after the date of his previous remission) were suspended. Robert (d.bef. 1502) murdered by a large group of Turnbulls and others. The perpetrators were all fined in 1502 for failure to appear to answer to the charge. The 23 named men were (in the order they appear in the records) George Turnbull in Weens, John Turnbull in Gatehousecote, Andrew Turnbull in Gatehousecote, William Turnbull in Gatehousecote, Lawrence son of William Turnbull in Bonchester, David and Andrew Shiel, Hugh Shiel, Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule, Andrew Turnbull in Bedrule, William Turnbull brother of the Laird of Bedrule, John Turnbull 'Blew John', Andrew Turnbull, Alan Davidson 'Taburner', John Turnbull in Ruecastle, John Turnbull in Jedburgh, John Turnbull in Wells, Adam Turnbull in Wells, Ninian Turnbull, David Turnbull in Bonchester, Patrick Turnbull, Philip Turnbull and William Turnbull in Bonchester. There is no information given about the circumstances of his death, e.g. why so many people could be held responsible for his murder (and it seems that many of them must have been pardoned later). It is possible that 3 men named Bowden from Jedburgh, who failed to appear later in the 1502 court to answer for the cruel slaughter of Robert, could also be other murderers of his. It seems likely he was closely related to the Olivers of Strynds. Robert (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 as 'brother's son of David' (although which brother is unclear), along with Robert in Lustruther, James 'Burgess' and Robert Waugh. They had remission for stealing cattle and goods from 'kelshop' and for killing Robert Brig and Adam Bairnsfather; Ralph Ker of Primside Loch was surety. It is unclear if he was the same as one of the other Roberts. Robert (15th/16th C.) tenant in Lustruther. He was listed in 1502 along with Robert 'brother's son of David', James Oliver 'burgess' and Robert Waugh in Mervinslaw, when they had a remission for their crimes. This included stealing 200 sheep, 29 cows, 4 horses and other goods from John and Adam 'Barnisfader' at 'Kelshop', as well as killing Robert Brig and Adam 'Barnisfader'; his surety was Ralph Ker of Primside Loch. Robert (15th/16th C.) recorded in Swinnie in 1502. George Douglas, Master of Angus, was fined for failing to enter him at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. Robert 'Rob wi the Dog' (15th/16th C.) recorded receiving remission in 1505 for intercommuning with rebels David 'Na-gude Preist' and John 'Cageare'. His nickname was given as 'Rob with ye dog'. He may be the same as one of the other contemporary Roberts. Robert (16th C.) tenant at 'Rontrehil' (probably Rowantreehill) in 1541 along with John Oliver. Another Robert, nicknamed 'the Sheriff', was tenant in another part of the same lands. Robert 'the Sheriff' (16th C.) tenant at 'Rontrehil' in Jedforest in 1541, paying 11 shillings. His is recorded as 'alias the schireff'. Other Olivers (Richard, John, another John, Marion and Adam) rented the other parts of the farm of Rowantreehill. Robert (16th C.) tenant in Lustruther in 1541, along with Janet. Together they were tenants of lands valued at 8s 4d. Several other Olivers were tenants of 3 other parts of Lustruther. Robert (16th C.) tenant in Lustruther in 1541, along with William ('the Lawyer') along with Marion (his mother). Their part of the lands were valued at 8s 6d. Other tenants there were 3 Johns (one called 'Blackhead'), Katherine and another Marion. Robert 'Laird' (16th C.) tenant in Falside in 1541. His lands were valued at 12s 6d. Other tenants there included Ninian, Walter, 'Little' Roger, Robert, Alexander, John and 'Lang' Roger. His name is given as 'Roberto Oliver, alias Larde'. He may have been an ancestor of the Olivers in Hawick called 'Lord' in later generations. Robert (16th C.) tenant at Nether Dykeraw in 1541, along with James, Michael, John and Adam. Robert (16th C.) tenant in part of Wylie's Hill in Jedforest in 1541. The other tenants were 2 Margaret Olivers and Margaret Wylie. Robert 'Hob' (16th C.) recorded as 'Hobe Ollyver of Lustrodder' in 1544, when he was among Olivers and others who gave assurance to the English Crown. William, Jock, younger and Ringan, were also listed at Lustruther, and so were probably related. They were probably all descended from the earlier Robert in Lustruther. Robert 'Hob' (16th C.) recorded among Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII in 1544. He was listed as 'Hobr Ollyver of Eshetres'. Robert (16th C.) recorded in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was listed as being at the same place as 'William Ollyver of Myrenslawe', which was probably Mervinslaw. Robert 'Hab o Hawick' (15th/16th C.) supposed ancestor of Hawick's Olivers, who lived at 'the Garrison'. First mentioned in print in Wilson's 1825 'History of Hawick', his story was dramatised in 1829 by Sir David Erskine as 'James V; or, the Warlike Days of Hab o' Hawick'. Apparently 'Hab' refused to walk from his house at the corner of the Howegate and Silver Street to Drumlanrig Tower when invited by the visiting King, stating 'Tell your master that here sits Hab o' Hawick at his ain fireside, and a fig for King James and a' his kin!'. This led to him being summoned to Edinburgh so the King could reciprocate at Holyrood. He was stated to be an old veteran at the time of the incident, which happened shortly before the death of James V. It is also said that he would visit 'Auld Hawick' (Hardie's Hill) every Sunday. How much of this story is true is uncertain, but there seems no reason to doubt that he existed and had some interaction with the King. Robert 'Hob' (16th C.) recorded in a Warden Court of 1559, involving representatives from the Scottish and English sides. He produced a 'bill of y^{e} Rotrohill' (presumably a list of items that had been stolen from him) for livestock and goods with Englishman William Hall. Robert 'Rany's Hob' (16th C.) recorded in 1586/7 among Borderers accused of crimes who had failed to appear in court and were given one more chance to find sureties. He was listed as 'Hob Olipheir, callit Raneis Hob'; it is possibly his father was Ringan. Robert 'Hob' (16th/17th C.) recorded in a court case of 1605 as a tenant in Wauchope in Rulewater. Robert

'Hob' (16th/17th C.) listed as 'called of Blanche' in 1605 when he was declared as a fugitive at a court in Jedburgh. Robert (16th/17th C.) tenant in Longnewton Mill. Along with George, stabler in Edinburgh, they complained to the Privy Council in 1612 that John Scott in Edinburgh had wounded them. Robert 'Lord Olifer' (17th C.) cordiner who was another of the Silver Street Olivers. He was probably son of the deceased cordiner Walter who was witness to a dispute in church in 1666. In 1651/2 he was fined £5 by the Bailies for refusing to act as guide for leading Cromwell's troopers to Langholm. He may be the same Robert ('shoemaker, elder') who contributed to the town bell in 1693/4. He and his son Robert were probably the 2 men of that name listed on the west-side of Hawick on the 1694 Hearth Tax records. His children probably included: Margaret (1667/8–1719), who married Bailie Robert Hardie; Robert, shoemaker who married Agnes Aitkin in about 1696; and William (b.1676), who married Christian Hart. Robert (17th C.) tenant farmer at Dykeraw and ancestor of the Hawick lawyers. He may have been born in Hawick Parish in 1643 (son of Walter and Agnes Paisley), but there are several contemporary men of the same name. He was recorded on a list of rents for the Jedforest area in 1669. Gilbert, also listed at Dykeraw, was probably his son. In 1670 he married Isabel Hair (b.1646 in Melrose) in Jedburgh. Their son Robert was also farmer at Dykeraw. Robert (17th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Helen Elliot and their children included: Walter (b.1672); and Bessie (b.1675). Robert (d.c.1685) tenant in Mervinslaw when his will was recorded in 1685. Robert (17th C.) tenant in Bank. In 1684 he and Bessie (probably his wife, but perhaps his sister) refused to take the Oath of Allegiance and were declared rebels. Robert (17th C.) listed as resident of Bairnkine along with Andrew and Richard in 1684 when they were declared fugitives for refusing to take the Oath of Allegiance. They were surely all related. Robert (17th C.) resident of Slacks in Southdean Parish according to the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. Robert (17th C.) recorded as resident at Stonedge on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Robert (17th C.) resident at Swinnie according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Robert (17th C.) recorded at Bank on the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. Robert 'Lord Oliver' (17th/18th C.) probably son of shoemaker Robert. In 1693 he was one of the men asked to decide on who won a bet between 2 Hawick butchers about whether or not a particular lamb came from Burnfoot. He is listed as 'cordiner' on the 1693/4 list of contributors to the town bell. He and his father are probably the 2 Roberts, residents of the west-side of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. He may be the shoemaker Robert, who (along with shoemaker George, presumably a relative) witnessed a baptism in 1699 for cooper John Turnbull. He is probably the 'Robert Olifer called Lord' whose son John was baptised in 1704 and whose daughter Isobel was baptised in 1708. He may also be the Robert who, along with his wife, purchased a tenement in Hawick in 1713. He is probably the shoemaker Robert who witnessed a baptism in 1718 for fellow shoemaker Walter Scott. He married Agnes Atkins (or Aitkin) about 1696. Their children included: William (b.1701); John (b.1704); and Isobel (b.1708). Other probable children of his were: Robert (b.c.1699), who was also a shoemaker and married Bessie Blackhall; and George, also a shoemaker. A baptismal witness in 1701 was carrier William Aitken, who was probably related to his wife and a witness in 1704 was carrier John Aitkin (presumably also related to his wife); the other 1704 witness was gardener John Gardner. The 1706 witnesses were Bailie George Martin and gardener John Gardner and in 1708 were Bailies George Martin and Robert Hardie. In 1723 there is mention in the Town Book of the Burgess money for 'William Olifer, brother to Lord Olifer', and this may have referred to his sons Robert and William. Robert (17th/18th C.) from Jedburgh Parish. In 1713 he married Agnes Bennet (probably from the Bennets of Chesters) in Ancrum Parish. Robert (c.1699–1764) shoemaker in Hawick, probably son of Robert and Agnes Atkins. It seems likely that he was the 'Lord Olifer' who in 1723 gave in the Burgess money for his brother William; if so then he was also nicknamed 'Lord' and his brother was merchant William, father of 'Auld Cash'. He may be the Robert who (along with George) witnessed a baptism in 1726 for another George. He is probably the Hawick shoemaker who had bonds with the Bailies, officers and Burgesses of Selkirk in 1729, 1731, 1739 and 1744, with his son William giving a discharge in 1768. He may also be the Robert who had a discharge with the Burgh of Selkirk in 1759. He was involved with the 1740 bond for the construction of the Teviot Bridge. He was feued the western part of Howlands by George Langlands in 1742. He is probably the Hawick shoemaker Robert who had another discharge from the Burgh of Selkirk in 1743 (at the same time as John Blackhall, probably his father-in-law) and further discharges in 1759 and on 2 bonds with Selkirk in 1761. He is probably also the Robert recorded as 'factor to children of deceased William Olifer late merchant in Hawick' recorded in discharges in Selkirk in 1744, 1745, 1749 and 1752; this seems likely to have been his brother William. He is probably the shoemaker of that name who (along with William, junior, merchant, probably his brother) witnessed a baptism for baker John Kedie in 1743. He is probably the shoemaker Robert who in 1746 witnessed baptisms in Hawick for merchant Andrew Ekron and for labourer William Graham. He married Bessie (or 'Betty') Blackhall in Hawick in 1728; she was daughter of John Blackhall (shoemaker in Selkirk) and Catherine Currer, born in Selkirk in 1703 and died in Hawick in 1776. Assuming he is the same man who married Bessie Blackhall, their children included: Robert (b.1728), who carried on the family shoe-making business; John (b.1730); Catherine (b.1732), who married Walter Wilson, 'Haunless Wat'; John (again, b.1734), shoemaker; William (b.1738); Agnes (b.1740), who married Bailie Walter Purdom; Thomas (b.1742); and twins George and Bessie (b.1744). The witnesses in 1728 were Mr. Anderson (Grammar School Rector) and Bailie John Scott, in 1730 were John Blackhall (his father-in-law) and George Oliver (surely a relative), in 1742 were merchant James Douglas and gardener Robert Turnbull and in 1744 were John Blackhall again and George again. He was related to merchant William, 'Auld Cash', perhaps his uncle, and therefore brother of William, father of 'Auld Cash'. In 1743 he witnessed a baptism for James Oliver, tenant in Earlside and another for William 'junior merchant' (probably his brother). He is probably the Robert 'Senior' who (along with merchant William) witnessed a baptism for Walter Wilson and Catherine Oliver (his daughter). Robert (18th C.) recorded being paid in 1751, along with Robert Easton and their workmen, for work on the new Teviot Brig. This was explicitly for 'helping the far pillar of the bridgem and 12 drains'. He was presumably a mason or similar tradesman. Robert (1732/3–89) son of Thomas, tenant farmer at Chesters. He was farmer at Langburnshiels. He was one of the founding group of seceders, who met in Hawick in 1763, leading to the establishment of the Green Kirk. He was recorded at Langburnshiels on the Horse Tax Rolls in 1786–90, being succeeded by his son Thomas. In 1763 in Hobkirk Parish he married Margaret (1737/8–1823), daughter of Andrew Curror (or perhaps 'Currie'). Their children included: Isabella (1774/5–81); Agnes (1777/8–83); and Thomas, tenant in Lilliesleaf. Robert of Burnflat (18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. He was owner of the lands of Burnflat in 1767 when the Duke of Buccleuch brought the first case proposing division of the Common. He was also listed as one of the neighbouring land-owners who gained from the Division of Hawick Common in 1777. He received a little over 10 Scots acres of what had previously been the Town's land. He also appears to have held the land near Myreslawgreen called Birselton. He is probably the Robert of Burnflat who (along with baker James, his son) witnessed a baptism for James Farquhar and Margaret (perhaps his daughter). He married Isabel Kenmure and their children included: William (b.1757); Robert (b.1759); Peter (b.1762); Agnes (b.1763); James (b.1765), baker in Hawick, who was also 'of Burnflat'; and Isabel (b.1767). The witnesses in 1757 were shoemaker George and tobacconist Francis Scott, in 1759 were baxter Walter Ruecastle and weaver George Turnbull and in 1765 were George Oliver and George Deans, junior. His son James was listed as a 'second cousin' in the 1808 will of William, 'Auld Cash'; he may have himself been a full cousin of 'Auld Cash'. It is unclear who his parents were, but one possibility is George and Margaret Aitkin; shoemaker George was a witness to the 1757 baptism (along with tobacconist Francis Scott), supporting this idea. Robert (1728–1803) shoemaker of the Cross Wynd, son of Robert and Bessie Blackhall. He is easily confused with at least one other contemporary shoemaker of the same name. They were probably the 2 Roberts who subscribed to the fund for the Slitrig Brig in 1776. His father Robert had purchased the western part of Howlands from George Langlands, and in 1764 he was infeft in these lands. He was 'of Wester Howlands' when listed among the landowners involved in the court case over the division of Wilton Common in 1765 (even although he was deceased by then). He married Jean (or Jane) Scott in 1756. Their children included: Robert (b.1757); William (b.1760); Agnes (b.1764); and Elizabeth (b.1766). The 1757 baptism was witnessed by shoemakers Robert Oliver (presumably his father) and William Scott (perhaps his father-in-law). William Scott also witnessed the 1766 baptism, along with John Oliver (perhaps his brother). His wife may have later been known as 'Jeanie My Lord'. His son William may be the surgeon in Middleton, Teesdale, England who died in 1816, aged 56. He is probably the Robert who witnessed a baptism for shoemaker John in 1766. Robert (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. In 1770 he is recorded at Brieryyards. He married Isabel 'Brokie' or 'Brackie' in 1760 and their children included: John (b.1762); Isabel (b.1764); Barbara (b.1766); Thomas (b.1768); Isabel (again, b.1770); Samuel (b.1772); Agnes (b.1774); and Margaret (b.1779). The witnesses in 1770 were Robert Easton and Walter Oliver. Dr. Robert (1743–1823) son of James and Margaret Douglas. He was a surgeon in North Berwick. He married a Miss Russell and they had a family of 3 daughters (Margaret, Mary and Isabella) and 1 son (who was in the Navy and received a grant of land in Canada). Robert (18th/19th C.) shoemaker in Hawick, probably related to other shoemaking Olivers. He was probably one of the 2 Roberts who subscribed to the fund for the Slitrig Brig in 1776. In 1776 he married Helen Scott in Hawick (the parish record stating 'Almost forgot that Robert Oliver and Helen Scott both of this Parish ...'). Their children included: Margaret (b.1779, probably); Mary (b.1782); John (b.1783); William (b.1785), hind at Langraw, who emigrated to the U.S.; Helen (b.1785); Janet (b.1786); and Jane (b.1787). The witnesses in 1779 were tanner John Elliot and merchant James (probably a relative), and in 1786 were ex-Bailie John Elliot and shoemaker Thomas Wallace. Robert (18th/19th C.) another of the shoe-making family. In 1788 (and still listed in 1811) he is recorded owning part of Roughheugh (acquired from Langlands of that Ilk), valued at £16 11s 8d, as well as part of the 'particate lands' in Hawick; his Hawick lands were later divided between Alex Graham of Berwick, the heirs of William Elliot and the West U.P. Congregation. He could be the Robert 'junior, shoemaker' who witnessed a baptism in 1790 for James Rae and (along with James Rae) witnessed a baptism in 1791 for bookbinder Walter Elder. He could be the Robert who is marked on Wood's 1824 map as owner of land off Damside, and also to the north of Roadhead. His daughter Jean married James Edgar. Robert (18th/19th C.) farmer at Knowesouth, recorded as owner of 2 horses on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Robert (18th/19th C.) farmer at Bridgehouse in Castleton Parish, listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as owner of 2 horses. He was also taxed for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797. Robert (18th/19th C.) recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as farmer at Milsingtonhaugh. Robert (18th C.) labourer at Nether Larriston. In 1797 he was listed among men on the ballot to serve in the Militia and in 1799 was among those whose names had not been drawn, but were no longer living in the area. A man of the same name appears as a clogger at Larriston on the 1801 ballot; it is unclear whether this is the same man. Robert 'Clinty' or 'Robbie Clinty' (1772–1847) tailor and town councillor. He got his nickname from the old family house, Clinthead, which stood on a rock at the Auld Brig. He was a descendant of 'Hab o Hawick', several generations of Olivers having lived in that area. He was listed as a tailor in Hawick on the ballot for the Militia in 1801 (although not on previous lists, suggesting he may have been born later in the 1770s). He was apprenticed to William Sanderson, tailor, later became the quartermaster of the tailors on the Council and was elected a Town Councillor in 1804. He was known to be emphatic in expressing his opinions. He is listed as a tailor on Silver Street in Pigot's 1825/6 directory, but must have retired before the 1837 directory. In his old age he moved from Clinthead. He is listed living on the Kirk Wynd (in the same house as the Hardie family) in the 1841 census. He was immortalised in the words of the song by J.E.D. Murray. He may be the tailor Robert, who is mentioned as a second cousin in the 1808 will of William 'Auld Cash'; if so he was son of shoemaker John. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of London who subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He must have had a local connection. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Southdean. In 'The local historian's table book' (1844) he is said to have lived at 'Southdean in Jedburgh, and died about a dozen years ago'. He recounted a story of his father Peter encountering a fairy at Hyndlee. Dr. Robert 'Daft Robbie' (d.1828) of the Navy, son of Robert and 'Jeannie My Lord'. He may have been the Robert born in 1757. He was said to have been educated in Edinburgh. He was 'sun-struck' in India and returned to Hawick to lead a retired life. It is said that he spent much of his time among the rocks of the Slitrig below their Silver Street home, playing with the children there – 'The pebble stanes – Daft Robbie's joy Was aye to aid them in sick ploy, And by the hand, stay feet sae sma', Amang the rocks when like to fa' ' [AD]. Robert (b.1787–1871) son of John and Margaret Douglas. He lived for a while with his father at Essenside, where his son John was baptised. He married Elizabeth, daughter of James Hardie and Elizabeth Hunter. Their children included: Isabel (b.1812), who must have died young; John (b.1813); Isabel (b.1814), who settled in California and married a man from Vermont; Margaret (b.1816); George Hardy (b.1818); James Douglas (b.1820), who also went to California, but returned to Westville; Agnes (b.1822); Helen (b.1824), who married John Archibald Hamilton in California; William (1826–61), who went out to Cailfornia, was one of the first men to drive cattle through the Sierra Nevada and was killed by Indians at Shelter Cove; and Mary (b.1830). In 1813 he, his wife and infant child emigrated to Canada, along with his brother Henry. They settled in Pictou County, Nova Scotia. Robert (b.c.1790) farmer at Heap, recorded in 1841. He was born in Kirkton Parish. In 1851 he was a shepherd living on Wilton Place. His wife was Betty. Robert (18th/19th C.) married H. Turnbull in East Bank Kirk in 1816. Robert (19th C.) married Catherine Rutherford and had children baptised in Hawick Free Kirk, including John (b.1743), James (b.1744) and Thomas (b.1846). Robert (19th C.) married Janet Davidson and had children baptised in Hawick Free Kirk, including Agnes (b.1844) and Thomas (b.1847). Robert William (b.1822) son of James and Elizabeth Purdom, he became a baker on the High Street. He was one of the first Trustees of the Congregational (then Evangelical Union) Kirk, from 1848. He was listed as a High Street baker in Slater's 1852 directory and in 1851 was at 6 High Street. His wife was Margaret and their children included Eliza, William and Margaret. Robert (b.1822/3) mason in Denholm. He may be the young apprentice who was recorded at the quarry at Bedrule in 1841. In 1851 he was probably living on Canongate and in 1861 probably on Sunnyside. He married Mary Mack and their children included: Mary (b.1847); Betsy (b.1849); Janet (b.1851); Robert (b.1854); John (b.1857); Margaret (b.1859); James (b.1862); and George (b.1865). Robert (1826/7–61) born at Bridgehouse, son of John, he was a shepherd in Castleton, Kirkton Parishes and Ashkirk Parishes. In 1851 he was an agricultural labourer at Dinlabyre, living with his parents and described as a widower. In 1861 he was a shepherd at Whitehillbrae. In 1856 in Castleton Parish, he secondly married Violet Rodger, who was born at Delorainburn. Their children included; John Rodger (b.1855), born at Boghall; Andrew (b.1856), born at Dinlabyre, who was blacksmith at Allanton; Jane (b.1858), born at 'Howkshall', Teviothead; Margaret (b.1860), born at Whitehillbrae; Robert Elliot (b.1864), born in Ashkirk; Violet (b.1866), born in Ashkirk; and Ann (b.1870). Robert (1827/8–1902) son of John and Ann Aitken. He worked with Lyle & Scott for about 38 years, being secretary and becoming a Director. He married Lizzie, daughter of James Davidson, and she died in 1942. Their children were John (architect in South Africa), Capt. Charles, James, George, William and Robert. He lived at Wellogate Villa and is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. Robert McLean (b.1829/30) married Jane Wallace in Hawick in 1850. They had children baptised in Hawick Free Kirk, including Margaret Robina (b.1851) and Janet Davidson (b.1852). Other children included Helen Wallace (b.c.1856), William (b.1858), Walter (1860–68), Agnes (b.1863) and Mary Jane Wallace (1864–1901). In 1851 he was a wool-sorter living on the Howegate with his in-laws. He moved to the Bradford area before 1861, when he is recorded living in Northowram. In 1867 he donated to the Museum a 'valuable collection of fossils' from Yorkshire. Robert (1831–1906) son of John and Margaret. He grew up in Hawick, where he worked as a skinner in 1851. He married Jane Hobkirk in Hawick in 1853 and the following year they sailed for Australia with their infant daughter Margaret. They settled in Wasleys in South Australia and had many other children. His grandson Harry Gordon Oliver was an engineer in charge of several projects on the River Murray. Robert (1857/8–1910) grocer in Newcastleton. He married Elizabeth Jane Gordon, who died in 1935, aged 72. Their children included: Emily (1896/7–1910); and James (1893/4–1914). They are buried at Ettleton. He was probably son of David and born in Hobkirk Parish. Robert Don (1895–1980) son of Col. William James of Lochside, his ancestors came from Hownam. He served in the Royal Navy, retiring as Vice-Admiral. Afterwards he was appointed Deputy Lieutenant for Roxburghshire. Roger 'Little Roger' (16th C.) tenant in Falside in Southdean Parish in 1541. His part of the lands was valued at 8s 4d. Other tenants there included Robert (alias 'Laird'), Ninian, John, Walter and another Roger (called 'Lang Roger'). Roger 'Lang Roger' (16th C.) tenant in Falside in 1541, listed separately from 'Little Roger'. His lands were valued at 25s. Roland of Stansfield (14th C.) cleric of the Diocese of York. He served as notary in 1331 for a document for the Prior of Coldingham, with his name recorded as 'Raulandus Oliveri de Stanisfield'. He may be connected with 'Oliver de Stansfield' whose tombstone from 1340 still exists. Samuel 'Sam' (b.1702) son of James, who was Schoolmaster in Cavers, he was baptised in Cavers Parish. He became Schoolmaster of Hobkirk Parish in 1726. He also served as Clerk for the Parish. In 1745 he was at Forkins smiddy watching the passage of the Jacobite army when they pressed him into service as their guide up the Rule valley and through Liddesdale. It is said that at their main camp he ran into the Laird of Gorrenberry who escorted him past the Prince and they doffed their hats at each other; this tale was told in the Rule valley long afterwards. He resigned as Schoolmaster in 1750. In 1729 he married Betsy, daughter of John Scott of Weens. Samuel (18th C.) born in Wilton Parish. He was a resident of Minto Parish in 1774 when he married Isabel Miller. His children included: Helen (b.1780), baptised in Wilton Parish; and Samuel (b.1789), who was a mason in Yarrow in 1841 and in Selkirk in 1851. He could also be the Samuel whose children baptised in Hobkirk Parish included James (b.1775) and John (b.1778). He could be the Samuel, son of James, born in Hobkirk Parish in 1749 and may have been related to the Hobkirk Schoolmaster. Samuel (b.c.1770s) gardener at Knowsouth in Bedrule Parish according to the ballot list for the Militia in 1799. Probably the same Samuel married Isobel Moscrop in 1805 and had children including: Agnes (b.1807); Robert (b.1807); and Isobel (b.1812). Samuel (b.1789) son of Samuel. He was a mason in Selkirkshire. In 1841 he was at Curcarwood in Yarrow and in 1851 was in Selkirk. He married Isabel Miller in Ettrick in 1814 (she seems to have had the same name as his mother). He is probably the Samuel recorded in a letter about work done at Ettrick Church in 1825. His children included: Samuel (b.1816), who was a mason like his father, married Margaret Rutherford in Melrose, emigrated to the U.S.A. and had 2 sons who fought in the American Civil War; William (b.1818); James (b.1820); Helen (b.1822); John (b.1824); Isabel (b.1826); Janet (b.1828); Robert (b.1830); and David (b.1833). Samuel (18th/19th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. In 1829 he married Betty, daughter of John Scott. Samuel (18th/19th C.) younger son of William of Dinlabyre. He spent most of his life as a farmer, at Whitehill and elsewhere. He was described as 'a clever, witty, well-read man, who could converse on most subjects'. He joined the Jedforest Club in 1830. He may be the Samuel who was at Mertoun near Dryburgh in 1841. Simon 'Sym' (16th C.) recorded in 1566 when the Lords of Secret Council made John Rutherford of Hunthill act as surety for him. He probably held lands in Jedforest. Steven (17th C.) recorded in 1676 when his daughter was among a number of local people fined for using weights that were lighter than the standards. Specifically her 'quarter of ane pound wanted twa drop, and her twa unce wanted ane drop'. His daughter must have been a trader at the market in Hawick, but it is unclear where they were from. Steven (17th C.) recorded as tenant in Falside in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. There were several other Olivers there, David, Thomas and 2 Patricks, to whom he may have been related, with his name appearing first. Probably he was the same as one of the 2 Stevens who were listed as tenants at Falside on the 1694 Horse Tax Rolls, one of them along with Dand; there was also a John and Thomas and his sons recorded there at the same time. Steven (b.c.1780) servant at Trow Mill according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Cavers Parish. Thomas (14th C.) Rector of 'Gamelighey' in Ely Diocese. In 1364 he requested a benefice from Peterborough Abbey, for which he would give up the Rectorship. He is an early example of this surname in England. Thomas (15th C.) witness in 1436 to a sasine for the lands of Wolfelee and Wolfehopelee. He is recorded as 'Thome Olyver de Swyne', which is probably Swinnie. Thomas 'Watschod' (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502. George Douglas, Master of Angus, was fined for failure to prove his arrest (as well as that of Ingram and James). He was 'sandis sone' (presumably 'Sandy's son') and called 'waitschod'; his nickname may refer to 'watschod', a kind of cloth, which was often blue. Thomas (16th C.) stated to have been killed around 1540 at Abbotrule, along with 'Will Kowman'. This was the result of a raid led by James Routledge of Todhills in Cumbria, which was complained about by the Laird of Ferniehirst and his tenants. Thomas (16th C.) tenant at Slacks in 1541, along with John, who was probably his brother or son. They paid 22 shillings yearly, with Charles renting the other part of Slacks. Thomas (16th C.) recorded being of Lustruther in 1583/4 when William Fenwick of Wallington (near Otterburn) complained that he and around 200 others raided his farm, taking cattle, horses and 16 prisoners. This appears to have been a raid into England to recover cattle and other goods stolen from them earlier. It is clear that he was one of the main Oliver leaders at that time. Thomas (17th C.) recorded as 'Thomas Olipher' resident of Harwood when he was one of the witnesses to a Rulewater sasine of 1631. Thomas (17th C.) described as 'Thomas Olipher, cordiner' when he was fined in 1642 for using irreverent language to the Bailies. Probably a different Thomas, 'traveller' was in 1642 sentenced to 8 days in the stocks for drawing his sword at one of the Bailies. But he was possibly the Thomas who was recorded in 1642 being ordered to pay James Scott for the oats his livestock had eaten. He may also be the same Thomas who promised not to carry a 'whinger' in 1639 and the Thomas fined in 1649 for keeping his cattle on the 'infield' and for cattle eating his neighbour's corn and hay. This may be the Thomas, married to Margaret Chisholme, who had these children in Hawick: Walter (b.1641); Margaret (b.1642); Sara (b.1645); John (b.1649); Beatrix (b.1652); and Helen (b.1655). The witnesses to the 1641 baptism were Andrew Liddersdale and William Liddell. He could have been son of Walter (who is mentioned in 1666, and brother of Robert. Thomas (17th C.) described as 'traveller' in 1642 when he was accused of drawing his sword at one of the Bailies and refusing to go to the Town prison. He was fined and sentenced to 8 days in the stocks. It seems likely he was a different man from Thomas, 'cordiner', who was also recorded in the Town Book in 1642. He was also 'traveller' in 1652 when he was found to be not liable for the claim made against him by merchant John Scott, for tobacco pipes, 'hott waters', powder, sugar and other goods that he 'brak, drownet, and lossit' on the way from Edinburgh to Hawick. Perhaps the same Thomas was accused in 1659 of taking the minister's horse and striking the minister's servant, Agnes Richardson, with the bridle. Thomas (17th C.) tenant in the farm of Hill (probably near Rouchhirst) according to a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. Thomas (17th C.) tenant at Mervinslaw, recorded in a rental roll of 1669. There were several other tenants there at the same time. Thomas (17th C.) recorded as tenant of Whiteside in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. William was also there and so presumably closely related. Perhaps the same Thomas was listed on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls as tenant in Whiteside. Thomas (17th C.) recorded as one of the tenants in Falside in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. He was listed as 'handie', presumably meaning that he was a tradesman of some sort. There were several other Olivers there at the same time. He may be the Thomas, 'servitor of the Marquis of Douglas' who was a Covenanter supporter, with his brother John, tenant in Falside, standing as surety for him in 1679, that he would return to prison if so ordered. He could be the Thomas 'in Jedforest' who is on a list of men refusing to take the Oath of Allegiance in 1684. He could be the Thomas who was recorded at Falside with his sons in 1694, when he paid tax on 2 hearths. Thomas (17th C.) recorded as tenant in Braehead in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. Thomas (17th C.) listed as a tenant in 'Pouhach' in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest (i.e., Southdean Parish). Thomas (17th C.) recorded as one of the tenants in Dykeraw in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. Both Thomases 'elder' and 'younger' are listed there, as well as several other Olivers. Thomas (17th C.) recorded as one of the tenants in Southdean in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. James and David were also listed there, and so probably close relatives. He could be the Thomas 'called Burne, in Fuddon' (assuming this is an error for 'Suddon') whose will is recorded in 1687. Thomas (17th C.) recorded as tenant in 'Dyk' in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Jedforest who was imprisoned in 1679 for being a Covenanter. He may have been taken prisoner after the Battle of Bothwell Brig. He gave a bond that he would not rise up in arms again and was released. It is possible that he was the Thomas of Southdean who complained that the Parish Minister had not read out the Articles of Estate or prayed for William and Mary in 1689. It is also possible that this was the Thomas, tenant at Southdean Mill, whose son John became minister at Southdean. Thomas (17th C.) son of James in 'Ash-trees', i.e. the farm in the Jed valley. He was listed in 1684 among many people who were declared fugitives for refusing to conform to Episcopalianism. However, he appears to have escaped persecution, since Thomas of Ashtrees was given the rank of Ensign in the Roxburghshire Fencibles after the Revolution. His brother George is recorded in 1691. Thomas (d.c.1685) tenant in Swinnie when his will was recorded in 1685. He is surely related to George, who was at Swinnie at the same time. Perhaps the same Thomas was listed at Swinnie among the poor of Southdean Parish in the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. Thomas (17th C.) recorded in 1688 when he complained of being assaulted in Hawick High Street when 'bringing in heather for use of the said towne'. This was presumably for fuel. He could have been one of the contemporary Olivers of Southdean. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Southdean Parish who was listed on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. He may be the same as one of the earlier Thomases. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Wadeshill in Southdean Parish according to the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. Thomas (17th C.) name of 2 men who were resident at Swinnie according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. One was described as 'kill' (perhaps suggesting a kiln) and the other was 'knou'. Thomas (17th C.) blacksmith at Chesters according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. He is probably related to John who was smith there in 1669. Perhaps he is the related to Thomas the smith in Hawick. Thomas (17th C.) resident at Chesters according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. He is listed separately from the smith. Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. He married Janet Cessford in 1696, the marriage being recorded in Cavers. Thomas (1688/9–1754) tenant at Chesters. He is probably related to some of the Olivers who were recorded at Chesters on the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. He married Jane Gillrie (1691/2–1768) and their children included Robert (1732/3–89), tenant at Langburnshiels. His family were buried in Oxnam. Thomas (17th/18th C.) married Janet Cessford in Cavers Parish in 1696. He may be the Thomas whose son George was baptised in Cavers in 1703. Thomas (17th/18th C.) smith in Hawick. He witnessed a baptism for Hawick Town Herd William Palmer in 1707 and another for Gideon Amos in 1714. In 1712 he was 'smith att ye westport of Hawick'. He married Margaret Douglas and their children included: Isobel (b.1701); Margaret (b.1703); John (b.1709); and Janet (b.1712). The witnesses in 1712 were Bailie Robert Brown and carrier Andrew Clerk. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His daughter Margaret was baptised in 1724. Thomas (18th C.) tenant at Falside in Southdean Parish around 1740, along with 'Dand' and William. Thomas (b.c.1715) born in Southdean Parish. In 1732 he moved to Crailing. He married Janet Middlemas in Crailing in 1739. Their children included: Jeremiah (b.1735), born in Southdean; Isabel (b.1740), baptised in Nisbet; Robert (b.1743), also born in Nisbet. Thomas (18th C.) workman in Hawick. He married Margaret Weir and they had a daughter, Anne (b.1743). Helen (b.1740) may also have been his child. The witnesses in 1743 were weaver William Turnbull and cooper James Scott. Thomas (18th C.) tenant at 'Glestains' (i.e. Gledstains). In 1758 he was among parishioners in Hobkirk Parish who were asked to provide broom for thatching the roof of the kirk. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Mary Oliver and their daughter Helen was baptised in 1756. John (b.1757) and Robert (b.1758) may also have been their children. Thomas (18th C.) recorded at Weensmoor in 1774. He may be the Thomas whose daughter Helen was baptised in Hobkirk Parish in 1774. Other children may have been Barbara (b.1771), Nelly (b.1772) and Alison (b.1775). He may be the Thomas who married Barbara Beattie in Hobkirk in 1770. Thomas (18th C.) footman and gardener at Orchard in 1785, when he was working for William Dickson. Probably the same Thomas was coachman at Cavers in 1794. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1795 he married Margaret Stewart, who was also from Hawick. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident at Chesters (Southdean) according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Gilbert was listed after him and so possibly related. He could be the Thomas, who was a private in the Dumfries Militia based at Musselburgh, who in 1804 married Jean, daughter of John Whillans and Mary Swan. Their children included: Mary (b.1806); and William (b.1815). Thomas (b.1775) son of Bailie James, listed in the Lieutenancy Book for Roxburghshire. In 1799 he was a 'Shopkeeper Son of B Oliver' among those 'In the Ballot Box 1797 not drawn still residing in Hawick parish' and in the 1801 ballot for the Militia he was listed as a merchant. He could be the same as one of the other Thomases. Thomas (18th/19th C.) farmer at Turnpikeside in Southdean Parish, according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. It is possible he was the Southdean rhymer of this name who penned these lines on the death of Rev. William Scott – 'I saw him from the kirk descent, And in five hours his life did end'. Thomas (18th/19th C.) farmer at Birneyknowe, on the 1794–97 Horse Tax Rolls. He was recorded as owner of 7 farm horses and 1 saddle horse in 1797. His son George was listed on the ballot for the Militia in Cavers Parish in 1799. Thomas (18th/19th C.) recorded as tenant at Shankend on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when he owned 4 horses. Additionally he was taxed for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797. Thomas (18th/19th C.) farmer at Castleton, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Thomas (18th/19th C.) son of nailer James in Minto. He was listed in the Lieutenancy Book in 1799. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Christian Elliot and their children included: Isabel (b.1803), who married Archibald Elliot; Walter (b.1804); Margaret (b.1805); John (b.1808); and Mary Scott (b.1819). Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of Byreholm. He subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. He is listed as a carter at Byreholm among heads of households in 1836 and 1838. He could be the same Thomas as the farmer at Castleton. Thomas (18th/19th C.) recorded as farmer at Kirkton, on the Horse Tax Rolls of 1797. James is listed after him and so possibly related. He was also listed at Kirkton on the 1797 Dog Tax Rolls. Thomas (b.c.1780) shepherd at Dykeraw according to the 1799 ballot list for the Militia in Southdean Parish. Lieut. Thomas (18th/19th C.) of the Royal Navy, was made an Honorary Burgess in 1803. He is probably the 'Captain Thomas Oliver of the Royal Navy my second cousin' mentioned in the 1808 will of William, 'Auld Cash'. He could be the Royal Navy Lieut. of that name who distinguished himself at Havana in 1805 during the Napoleonic Wars. He was probably grandson of shoemaker Robert, and perhaps son of Thomas (b.1742) or one of his brothers. Thomas (18th/19th C.) tenant in Lilliesleaf, son of Robert, who was farmer at Langburnshiels. He was recorded in the Horse Tax Rolls of 1791–94 at Langburnshiels. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. Thomas (b.c.1780) servant at Mains according to the ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1801. Thomas (b.c.1780) shepherd at Tower in Cavers Parish according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia. He could be the Thomas who married Agnes Grieve in Cavers Parish in 1800. Thomas (18th/19th C.) married Jane Baptie in Southdean in 1811. Thomas (18th/19th C.) ironmonger on the High Street, recorded on Pigot's 1825/6 directory. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. Thomas (b.1812/3) gamekeeper at Larriston Rigg in 1841. His wife was Jenny and their children included Turnbull, Bella and Francis. He may be the same Thomas as the gamekeeper in Bedrule Parish. Thomas (19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Euphy Lawson in 1814 and their son Robert was baptised in 1828. Thomas S. (b.1812/3) gamekeeper at Woodend Cottage in Bedrule, and then stocking-maker in Denholm, probably on Sunnyside. He married Janet Turnbull in 1833 and they had children baptised in Cavers: Ebenezer (b.1834); Joseph Turnbull (b.1836); Isabella Minto (b.1838); Francis Armstrong (b.1840); William Campbell (b.1842); Francis Armstrong (again, b.1845); Thomas (b.1849); and Janet (b.1851). Thomas (b.1815/6) stockingmaker from Denholm. In 1861 he was boarding with his nephew, Thomas Douglas. In 1871 he donated to the Museum a copy of the 'Scots Magazine' from 1739. Thomas (b.1817/8) younger son of lawyer John. In the 1841 census he is listed as a woollen manufacturer, along with his brother William. He was probably part of the short-lived firm of John Oliver & Sons. He was later a farmer at West Fortune, Haddington. Thomas (b.1824/5) born in Hawick, he was a boot and shoe maker in Galashiels. His wife was Isabella and their children included Isabella and Janet. Thomas 'Tom' (b.c.1870) born in Hawick, he worked as a shepherd with his father, later entering William Watson's, where he learned about tweed manufacture and design. He became a teacher of power-loom weaving in Galashiels, Hawick and Selkirk. He received a D.Sc. from Edinburgh and was Principal and Professor of Textile Technology in the Scottish Woollen Technical College in Galashiels. Just before the War he toured Audtralia and New Zealand. He published at least 3 books on textiles: 'Weaving problems' (1909); 'Phase in the rise of Scotch tweed technique' (1911); and 'Wool technology and regional geography' (1931). He was also an enthusiastic lay preacher in the Brethren, publishing and contributing to 'Scripture Quarterly' during WWII. Walter (d.1242) son of David 'Olifard', or perhaps an earlier Walter. He is probably the 'Walt'o olifard' who witnessed a charter between Gervase Avenel and Melrose Abbey in 1214. He was Justiciar of Lothian under Alexander II from 1220 until his death. He granted the church of Smailholm to Coldingham Abbey. In 1221 he was witness to the dowry charter for Joan of England, who married Alexander, King of Scotland (lands that included Hassendean). He was Justiciar in 1230 when he witnessed a charter for Margaret, the King's sister and also in 1237 in a document from the English King. He was mentioned (as 'Walterum Olifard iusticiarium Laudonie') in a charter of lands to Soutra Hospital in about 1230. He also witnessed another charter relating to Inverness in the reign of King William. He married Christian, daughter of the Earl of Strathearn and inherited lands in Perthshire. He had a son David. The pair are mentioned in a charter of Soutra Hospital, granted by Walter Murray ('de Moravia') in 1273. He was succeeded by his grand-daughter Joanna, who married Walter of Moravia (or Murray). In this way the Barony of Bothwell came into possession of the Murrays, who would later also hold the Barony of Hawick. Walter (16th C.) tenant in Falside in Southdean Parish in 1541. His small piece of the farm was valued at 4s 2d. Other tenant there included with Robert (alias 'Laird'), Ninian, Roger (called 'Little Roger'), John and Roger (called 'Lang Roger'). Walter (d.bef. 1666) another of ths shoemaking family. His son Robert was involved in a church dispute in 1666. He may be the same Walter who married Agnes Paisley (or 'Paslay') and whose children (born in Hawick Parish) included: James (b.1640); Robert (b.1643); Janet (b.1645); John (b.1649); and Helen (b.1652). However, if he was father of Robert 'Lord Olifer', then his children must have been born earlier. The witnesses to the 1640 baptism were Robert Oliver and James Paisley (probably fathers or brothers of the parents). Walter (17th C.) merchant in Hawick. He is recorded in 1673 on the list of men named in the trial for the so-called riot at St. Jude's Fair. He could be the Walter in Hawick (married, aged 40) who gave evidence in 1681 at the trial of Covenanters. In 1685 he was fined for refusing to ride with a prisoner to Jedburgh when asked by the Bailie to do so, and also 'for his contumacious language given to the sd baylyea att yt time'. He was listed among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He is probably the Walter listed 'eist the water' among those paying the Hearth Tax in Hawick in 1694. He may be the Walter who gave evidence against Turnbull of Standhill in a trial of Covenanters in 1680. He is recorded as a merchant when he witnessed baptisms for tailor Alexander Hislop in 1700, for John Scott, smith in Hawick, in 1704, for shoemaker Robert Gardner in 1703, for merchant William Douglas in 1706, for John Nichol (servant in Newmill) in 1709, for skinner Robert Deans in 1710 and for cooper Alexander Weens in 1711. Walter (17th C.) resident of Hawick who married Janet Simpson. Their children included: James (b.1673); and William (b.1676). The witnesses in 1676 were John Deans and James Deans. He could be the same as the merchant of Hawick mentioned in the next couple of decades. He could be the Walter who witnessed baptisms for Robert Turnbull in 1683 and for Alexander Hislop in 1696. It is possible that his sons James and William were the 'students' who acted as witnessed for the baptism of an illegitimate child of Thomas Henderson and Margaret Douglas in Hawick in 1689. Walter (b.1706) born in Hawick, son of Robert and Agnes Aitkin. His brothers included shoemaker Robert and merchant William. He married Margaret Turnbull in 1730. Their children included: Robert (b.1731); Margaret (b.1733); John (b.1735), shoemaker, who married Helen Currer; and Helen (b.1738). Walter (18th C.) recorded in 1712 being asked to 'perlustrate the town to see who were drinking in ale houses after 8 at night'. Walter (b.c.1809) cooper in Newcastleton, listed among heads of households in 1835–41 and in Pigot's 1837 directory. In 1841 he was at about 27 Montague Street. His wife was Mary and their children included Walter, Janet, Jean and Betty. William (13th/14th C.) Scotsman, whose surname is recorded as 'Olyfart'. He was captured at Stirling and held in the Tower of London, but in 1308 ordered by the English King to be relerased, with Walter 'de Burghdon' (who held the half-barony of Minto) and Odard Heron being sureties for his good behaviour. He was probably the same man as Sir William 'Oliphant' who was Constable of Stirling Castle when it was surendered to the English in 1304. William (15th C.) son of Gilbert. At the 1493 Justice-aire he was fined for non-appearance. If his father was the same Gilbert, then he also had brothers James and Robert (also mentioned in 1493). He was also recorded in 1494/5 among 8 Olivers and a Shiel (connected with Strange) who had remission for communing with the English; he was there stated to be brother of Robert, who was son of Gilbert, and also brother of John. William 'Will' (16th C.) listed in 1540 among Scottish rebels who had fled to England and were being sought by the English Wardens. He is recorded as being called 'Fargus', and his son 'Jok' is also listed. William (16th C.) recorded as tenant in Mervinslaw in a rental roll of 1541, along his mother Margaret. Their steading was valued at 12s 6d. Other tenants at Mervinslaw included James and another William, nicknamed 'Merchant'. William 'Merchant' (16th C.) tenant in Mervinslaw in 1541, whose steading was valued at 12s 6d. Other tenants at Mervinslaw included William, Margaret and James. William (16th C.) tenant in Bank, recorded in a rental roll of Jedforest in 1541. He held half of the farm. William 'the Lawyer' (16th C.) tenant in Lustruther in 1541, along with his mother Marion, 2 Johns (one called 'Blackhead'), Janet, Katherine and another Marion. His name is written as 'Willelmo Olivere, alias the procurator'. Probably the same man was recorded as 'William Ollyver of Lustrodder' in 1544, when he was among Olivers and others who gave assurance to the English Crown. Hob, Jock, younger and Ringan were also listed at Lustruther and so were probably related. He may be the same as the William recorded as tenant there in 1562. And either he or perhaps his son was in Lustruther in 1571 when he was one of the 3 main leaders of the Olivers for whom Sir Thomas Turnbull, John Turnbull of Minto, Richard Rutherford of Edgerston and John Rutherford, younger of Hunthill, served as pledges. Additionally he gave his pledge at a court in Leith, for the Olivers in Dykeraw, Falside, Westerhouses, 'the Burne', Slacks, Mervinslaw and the Bank, as well as for other men of Southdean; his cautioners were William Douglas of Bonjedward and Richard Rutherford, Provost of Jedburgh. William (16th C.) recorded as 'William Ollyver of Myrleslawe' in 1544, when he was among a list of Scotsmen swearing allegiance to the English King. 'Ranyon Ollyver of the same' is also listed, and so presumably a brother or son. Their lands may have been Mervinslaw. William (16th C.) recorded on a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was listed as 'William Ollyver of Myrenslawe', which is probably 'Mervinslaw'. This could be a repeated entry for William of 'Myrleslawe'. 'Robert Ollyver of the same' is also listed. William 'Will' (16th C.) tenant farmer at Lustruther, who along with Gavin, tenant at West Houses (probably a Southdean relative) had a bond of 1562 to enter Robert Robson 'Foul Mouth' to John Kerr of Ferniehirst. He is also recorded in 1571 giving bonds for Olivers and others in Dykeraw, Westerhouses, Falside, the Burn and Slacks. He is probably the William whose farmed was transcribed 'Anstruder' in 1572/3, when he was listed along with other Olivers and William Kirkton of Stewartfield, with Sir Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule and Richard Rutherford of Edgerston as their cautioners; this appears to have been in relation to Kerr of Ferniehirst being declared a fugitive and all his former supporters swearing allegiance to the Crown. He is probably the William in Lustruther who Thomas Laidlaw in Haugh was accused of resetting in 1589. Probably the same 'Will in Lustruther' is recorded in Monipennie's List of Border Clans of about 1594. He was indicted for a raid in 1589. William (16th C.) recorded in 1583/4 being of Slacks when William Fenwick of Wallington (near Otterburn) complained that he and about 200 others raided his farm, taking cattle, horses and 16 prisoners. This appears to have been a raid into England to recover cattle and other goods stolen from them earlier. He was probably an important leader among the Olivers at that time. William of Bairnkine (d.1605) sentenced to execution in Jedburgh in 1605. Nothing else is known about him. William (16th/17th C.) tenant of the Earl of Angus in 'Lanyburne', which could be Langburnshiels. In 1618 he complained that William Sinton 'in Helialdrum Burne', Walter Sinton his brother, Thomas Brown 'in Thorishop' and others unlawfully apprehended him at the direction of Walter Scott of Goldielands. William (17th C.) tenant at Lustruther (in Southdean Parish) in 1669. William (17th C.) recorded as tenant of Whiteside in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. He is listed after Thomas, to whom he was surely related. William (17th C.) recorded as a tenant in Chesters in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. There were 2 men of the same name listed there. William (17th C.) recorded as tenants in Slacks along with George and John in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. Probably one of them is the William listed as tenant in 'Soudon' and 'Suden' (i.e. Southdean farm) in the 1694 Hearth Tax records. He may be the William 'in Shaks' (if this is an error for 'Slaks') whose will is recorded in 1688. William (17th C.) tenant in Nether Whisgills in Castleton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. William (b.1674) born in Hawick, son of John and 'Jenet Bo'. William (b.1676) son of Walter and 'Jenet Symson', he was born in Hawick. He could be the merchant recorded in the early years of the 18th century. William (17th/18th C.) merchant of Hawick, mentioned from 1702. His sister Margaret was married to Bailie Robert Hardie. In 1702 he married Christian Hart (both from Hawick Parish), with Hardie and his wife being rebuked for creating a disturbance; his father-in-law, John Hart was also rebuked by the session for their 'penny-bridal'. It is possible he is the William born in Hawick in 1676, son of Robert. It seems likely he was related to Walter, who was a merchant in Hawick at the same time. He witnessed baptisms for Anthony Haig in 1706, for Bailie Robert Hardie and Margaret Oliver (his sister) in 1709, for shoemaker Robert Allan in 1714, for tailor Robert Chisholme in 1718, for smith James Beattie in 1719, for carrier Thomas Porteous in 1720, and for weaver James Roger in 1725. He is probably the William Oliver who was among men ordered to walk around the Town in 1712 to see who were drinking in ale-houses after 8 o'clock. Probably the same merchant William was rebuked by the Session in 1716 for being involved in late night drunkenness and a fight with Thomas Huggan. He acknowledged that 'he was att the brawl and was sensible of his fault, and that he could not give an accompt who first began it'. He may have been grandfather of 'Auld Cash', and if so, then his son was also William; however, it seems more likely that shoemaker Robert was the grandfather of 'Auld Cash', and probably closely related to him, perhaps his brother. His children with Christian Hart included Janet (b.1705), with baptismal witnesses Bailie George Martin and gardener James Falsyde. It is unclear if he had any other surviving children. It is possible that he lived to an old age and that is why his nephew William was 'younger merchant' into the 1740s. William (17th/18th C.) tenant in Slaidhills. He was married to Elspeth Hislop. Their son Andrew was born in 1701, with Andrew Waugh in Slaidhills being one of the witnesses. William (17th/18th C.) 'servitor' in Todshawhill. In 1705 his daughter Janet was baptised with witnesses Robert Cook and Alexander Ogilvie in Branxholme. William of Dinlabryre (17th/18th C.) eldest son of John. He succeeded his father in the lands of 'Dunliebyre, Easterflight, Hiashes, and Burnfoot; also Over and Nether Larriston, Heartsgarth, and Langhaugh'. He may be the 'Laird of Dinliebyre' whose estate was valued at £2120 13s 4d in the 1740s. He and his son John donated silver communion cups to Castleton Kirk in 1748. In 1708 he married Mary, daughter of William Chisholme of that Ilk (while his sister Mary married his wife's brother John!). His children were: John, who succeeded; and Mary, who married John Scott of Synton. William (18th C.) tailor in Over Southfield. He is probably the tailor who witnessed a baptism in 1738 for John Scott, tenant in Hawick Shiel, and Bessie Goodfellow. In 1721 he married Margaret Cook, who was widow of John Goodfellow. Their children born in Hawick included: Bessie (b.1722); and Margaret (b.1724). The witnesses in 1722 were Walter and John Scott (perhaps the servant to the minister and the Kirk Beadle). William (b.1701) merchant in Hawick, son of shoemaker Robert and Agnes Atkins. It seems likely he was father of 'Auld Cash'. He was probably the William, whose brother 'Lord Olifer' gave in his Burgess money in 1723. In about 1740 he was given part of the responsibility for collecting subscriptions 'east the water' to help pay for the Teviot Bridge. He is probably the merchant who witnessed a baptism for Alexander Purdom in 1741 and the 'junior merchant' who witnessed other baptisms in 1741, 1742 and 1743, including for flesher George Deans and for Schoolmaster Walter Turnbull. He may be the William 'younger merchant' recorded in receipts in Selkirk in 1741 and 1742 (at the same time as shoemaker Robert, who was probably related to Selkirk shoemaker John Blackhall). He was also 'junior merchant' in 1743, when his son Walter was baptised, the sole witness being shoemaker Robert (probably his brother). He and shoemaker Robert also witnessed another baptism in 1743 for baker John Kedie. It seems likely that he is the 'William Olifer late merchant in Hawick' for whose children Hawick shoemaker Robert (probably his older brother) acted as factor in transactions in Selkirk in 1744, 1745, 1749 and 1752; this suggests that he he died in 1743 or 1744 and his brother Robert acted as guardian for his large family. Confusingly there is a merchant William who witnessed baptisms in 1744 for shoemaker George Gardner, in 1746 for skinner Walter Scott and for carrier Gilbert and in 1758 (along with Robert Senior, perhaps his brother) for Walter Wilson and Catherine Oliver (perhaps his niece) in 1758; either there was another merchant of the same name in Hawick or the records from Selkirk are being misinterpreted. He married Margaret Coltherd (or 'Coultart'), with their children being: Agnes (b.1731); Robert (b.1733); Margaret (b.1734); James (b.1739); John (b.1741); and Walter (b.1743). It seems likely that the William born in 1737, with mother Margaret 'Corser' was also his son; in that baptismal record (and another, when he was witness for Robert Miles) he is listed as 'Merchant Junior', perhaps the William senior being his uncle. The witnesses to the 1731 baptism were George (perhaps his brother or uncle) and Robert (probably his father). The idea that he was father of 'Auld Cash' is supported by the 1808 death record, where it is stated that the father of 'Auld Cash' was also William, and probably a merchant. It is possible that he was also called 'Auld Cash'. William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Cauldmill in 1747. He married Janet Wilson and their children included: John (b.1747); and James (b.1749). William (b.1732/3) workman, one of the 6 representative Burgesses appointed to perambulate and define the boundaries of the Burgh's land in 1767, during court proceedings for the division of the Common. In 1782 his daughter Isabel died, and he is listed as 'workman'; this could be the Isabel born to William and Barbara 'Binnie' in 1761. He may be the same William who married Barbara

Burnet (whose name is also written 'Birnie') and whose children included: Isabel (b.1761); William (b.1765); Robert (b.1767); Thomas (b.1770); John (b.1772); and Thomas (again, b.1778). The witnesses in 1761 were and William and Thomas Birnie (perhaps his father-in-law and brother-in-law), in 1767 were the whole congregation and in 1772 were Thomas Burnet and William Laidlaw. He is probably the workman whose daughter Isabel died in Hawick in 1782. William 'Auld Soorhope' (18th C.) one of the last people to be buried in the old churchyard at Southdean. It is said that his funeral was very well attended. William of Langraw (1731/2–1812) from the family who had farmed at Falside in Southdean Parish. He may be the son of William who was a tenant at Falside in the 1740s, along with 'Dand' and Thomas (possibly his uncles). He and Andrew farmed at Alton from 1762 and then Adderstoneshiel from 1765. He then had several short leases elsewhere, including Burngrange in Northumberland. In 1801 he purchased the farm of Langraw and settled down there, retaining several other leases. In 1803 he contributed to a local subscription for the defence of the country (from the French). He was listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805, and in 1819 (when he may have already been deceased) both he and his son Andrew were listed. He was a heritor of Hobkirk Parish. He is said to have been quite wealthy, but lost much of his fortune backing 'bills for needy and unscrupulous persons'. In 1811 he was recorded as owner of Langraw and part of Shiel's Lands and Kirknowe. In 1764 he married Margaret Stavert, said to be a descendant of the man who carried the Douglas banner at Otterburn; she died in 1820, aged 80. He was buried along with his wife in Southdean Kirkyard. He was succeeded by his eldest son, Andrew, while a younger son, William, rented Otterstonelee in North Tyne (unless this is confusion with Adderstonelee). He could have been father of some of these children baptised in Southdean Parish: William (b.1761); Andrew (b.1762); Andrew (again, b.1763); John (b.1764); Nelly (b.1766); Thomas (b.1768); and William (again, b.1770). William (18th C.) resident of Southdean Parish. In 1761 he married Janet Oliver, who was from Wilton. Children baptised in Southdean who could be his include: Andrew (b.1762); Andrew (b.1763); John (b.1764); Nelly (b.1766); and Thomas (b.1768). William 'Auld Cash' (c.1738–1808) one of the foremost merchants in Hawick, and Cornet in 1758. He may be the William born in Hawick in 1737 to William and Margaret Croser. He traded in many different things in the district around Hawick, and was said to be the third William in a family line of merchants (although his precise relationship to earlier Olivers is unclear). He also acted as a private banker throughout the Borders, hence his nickname. In 1782, 1785, 1787, 1788 and 1790 he witnessed the baptisms of the children of Dr. Robert Douglas and Margaret Aitchison (who was his niece). He subscribed to Caw's 'Poetical Museum' (1784) as well as John Learmont's book of poetry in 1791. He paid the Shop Tax in Hawick in 1785. He is probably the merchant William whose housekeeper Betty Nichol died in Hawick in 1787. He paid the Horse Tax in Hawick in 1785–94. In 1787–91 he paid tax for having a female servant and was probably the merchant recorded on the Dog Tax Rolls in 1797. From 1791 he acted as Hawick's first bank agent, for the Bank of Scotland. His main premises were at the Tower Knowe, where the Office Bar is now located, and his warehouses were in Silver Street, where his family had owned property for generations. He also owned buildings on the High Street and in Wilton Parish. Additionally he owned land at Dovemount, Silverbuthall and Galalaw. He was known to be generous in local affairs, e.g. in helping fund the addition to Old Wilton Church. It has also been suggested that Silver Street got its name because he stayed there. He also had a wine cellar under the road by Drumlanrig Bridge. He is probably the William 'senr.' who in about 1800 contributed (£10 10s) to the local scubscription to help with the war against France. He is probably the William of Galalaw listed as a Commissioner of Roxburghshire in 1819 (many years after his death). He remained unmarried all his life, and his will lists his nearest relatives as: his niece Margaret Aitchison and her children Robert (surgeon), John (also surgeon), Agnes and Mary Douglas; his nephews Robert (or the Royal Navy) and Andrew (saddler) Aitchison; and his second cousins Thomas Oliver (of the Navy), William Oliver (surgeon in Middleton), James Oliver (baker), William Oliver (location unknown), Robert Oliver (tailor, possibly 'Clinty') and Walter Wilson (wright). When he died, it is said that everyone was surprised to find that his estate did not appear to meet his debts, even although the sale of his property raised over £19,000 (with £5,000 coming from goods, furniture and stock, without including property); suspicion fell upon his young assistant 'Franky' Ballantyne, and there was even a poem published about how his ghost haunted Ballantyne, called 'The Twa Frien's or the Ghost of Coffer-Ha' '. In his will he is described being 'of Galalaw' (suggesting he was living there, rather than at Silverbuthall in his later years). His will was witnessed by his 'servants' James Miller and Walter Scott (who are probably the men of those names who were later grocers in Hawick). The trustees named in his will were Adam Ogilvie of Hartwoodmyres, James Grieve in Branxholme Park, James Grieve in Branxholme Braes and Thomas Usher. His home at Silverbuthall was sold to James Scott, retired teacher of Yarrow. His nieces Agnes and Catherine married Bailie Walter Purdom and 'Haunless Wat', respectively. His death is recorded in Hawick, where it was stated that his father was also William – 'Wi' banker Cash, a daintie carl, Wha was owre guid for sic a warl' ' [RDW]. William (18th C.) Cornet in 1768, listed as being at the Kirk Wynd. He may be the son of shoemaker Robert born in 1738. He may be the son of shoemaker Robert who gave a discharge in 1768 for his father's bonds with people in Selkirk (his father being deceased by then). William (18th C.) married Ann Sinton in 1761, the marriage recorded in both Hobkirk and Southdean Parishes. William of Dinlabyre (1738–1830) son of John, he became Sheriff of Roxburghshire. It is said that he needed to live closer to the court in Jedburgh, and hence swapped some of his Liddesdale lands for ones in Rulewater. He was recorded as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1761. In 1773 he sold Hartsgarth and Langhaugh to William Sharp. At the same time he bought the lands of Weens from William Sharp and built the new house there in 1775. He also bought Nether Bonchester from Thomas Scott in 1779. In 1777 he had a 'decreet arbitral' between Henry Elliot of Harwood and George Rutherford. He was listed among the voters of Roxburghshire in 1780 and Selkirkshire in 1788. He sold Over and Nether Larriston and Blackhope to Col. William Elliot in 1786; it was said that in fact his wife made the sale when he was absent and he 'expressed much surprise and no little displeasure at what had taken place'. Nevertheless he added the sale of Larriston Rig (or Haggiehaugh) to Elliot in 1790. He was apparently a good friend of the Hobkirk Schoolmaster William Armstrong. In 1788 he was listed among the voters in Roxburghshire (and a supporter of the interests of the Duke of Buccleuch). In the county valuation of 1788 he was recorded as owner of Weens and Nether Bonchester, valued at £380, as well as Dinlabyre, Greena and Blackhope (ialthough he had probably sold them by then) in Castleton Parish, valued at £1020. He subscribed to John Learmont's book of poetry in 1791. He paid tax in Hobkirk Parish for having 3 male servants in the period 1778–92 and 2 in 1793, as well as for 1 female servant in 1785–87, 4 in 1788 and 1 in 1789–91. He was taxed for having 3–5 carriage horses in Hobkirk Parish (being recorded as 'of Dinlabyre at Weens') in 1785–92. He is probably the William listed paying tax at Wolfelee in the Horse Tax Rolls of 1789–94. He was 'of Dinlabyre at Larriston' on the 1794 Horse Tax Rolls for Castleton Parish. In 1794 he was taxed for 2 male servants at 'Laurstoun' in Castleton Parish and in 1797 was at Liddel Bank with 3 servants, 4 work horses and 4 carriage horses. He was also taxed for having a carriage in the period 1785–95, being 'of Dinlabyre' until the year 1791/2, when he was 'of Weens', and then being at 'Lawston' in 1794/5 and Liddel Bank 1797/8. He was at Dawston in 1797 when taxed for having 2 non-working dogs. He made a report on the state of the roads in Castleton Parish for the Duke of Buccleuch in 1793. He was also said to have been responsible for most of the road improvements in Rulewater and Liddesdale in his time, including building Bonchester Bridge and laying out the new route to Newcastle via the that bridge. In 1793 he sold Weens (and Nether Bonchester) to Robert Nutter Campbell of Kailzie and bought Liddel Bank, where he lived for a while. He is listed there on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when he owned 10 horses. In his capacity as a Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire, he served on the Lieutenancy Committee, during meetings to discuss the ballot for the Militia in at least the period 1797–1801. He was listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805 (and also in 1819, when he may have already deceased). He was owner of Dinlabyre and Greena according to the Land Tax Rolls of 1811. He is probably the William who was recorded as a freeholder in the Michaelmas Head-Court of Jedburgh in 1811. He is also the William, 'esq. of Dinlabyre' listed in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. In his later years he was fond of writing doggerel verses, e.g. about his sheriff-substitute Robert Shortreed. He was said to have 'spent a good estate foolishly, and died a poor man'. He married Jane, daughter of John Rutherford of Edgerston and Ellenor Elliot of Minto. Their children included: William (b.1781), eldest, who inherited Edgerston and took the name

William Oliver Rutherford; Archibald, became a surgeon-apothecary's apprentice in Edinburgh in 1799, but later joined the East India Company; Samuel, farmer at Whitehill; John, married Margaret, daughter of Charles Kerr of Abbotrule, and succeeded to Overton Bush; Eleanor, eldest daughter, married Edinburgh surgeon James Russell; Violet, married David Richardson of the East India Company and drowned with her husband on the way to India; Elizabeth, married Dr. Henry Young; Jean, married Maj. Malcolm of the Royal Marines; and Agnes, who married Archibald Little of London (on the same day as her sister Jean). The deaths of is sons John and William are both recorded in 1782. William (18th C.) shepherd in Castleton Parish. His children were baptised at Blinkbonny and Castleton Mains. He married Jean Nichol. Their children included: George (b.1771), who probably died young; Jean (b.1774); and George (1781–1837), who emigrated to America, and whose son became a well-known plough manufacturer. William (18th C.) farmer in Over Cassock and then Howpasley. He is recorded in 1769 in correspondence with John Scott in 'Hopesrigg'. In 1772 he was at Howpasley when his son Robert was baptised in Roberton Parish. He was probably the William who married Janet Scott in 1771 and who also had a son William (b.1776). William (18th/19th C.) farmer at Westerhouses in Southdean Parish, recorded on the 1794 and 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He was owner of 5 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. He also paid the dog tax in the same year. Probably the same William was recorded as tenant in Westerhouses in the Lieutenancy Book for 1799; John was also listed as a tenant. William (18th/19th C.) servant at Woodhouse in Southdean Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. William (18th/19th C.) mole-catcher at Strange in Southdean Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. His name was crossed out from the list for the Militia ballot, suggesting that he was decided to be ineligible. He was probably related to earlier Olivers of Strange. William (d.1808) from Hawick, he was a baker in London. He returned to Hawick in his later years and lived at Kirkwyndfoot. He coincidentally died within a couple of months of 'Auld Cash', who was probably a distant cousin. It is possible he was the William born in Hawick in 1738, son of Robert and Bessie Blackhall. He is probably the baker William whose will was proved at the Prerogative Court of Canterbury in 1809, with his address given as 'Hawick, Northumberland' (probably in error). William (1760–1818) surgeon in Middleton. He is mentioned in the 1808 will of William, 'Auld Cash' as his second cousin. It seems likely that he was actually son of one of the full cousins of 'Auld Cash'. He could be the William born to Robert of Burnflat in 1757, but seems more likely to be the William son of shoemaker Robert born in 1760. He married Mary Hodgson in 1796 in Gainford, Durham and died in Middleton in 1816, aged 56. His children were Robert Hodgson, George (also a surgeon), William, Ralph and Jean. William (18th/19th C.) resident of 'Hobkirkmanse'. His son William is recorded in the Lieutenancy Book for Roxburghshire in 1797. William (b.c.1770) son of shoemaker John and brother of tailor Robert. He was mentioned in the 1808 will of William, 'Auld Cash', as a second cousin; however, although he was left a small share of the estate, it was stated that it was not known if he was alive or dead, or whether he had any issue. William (18th/19th C.) servant at Minto Kames according to the Lieutenancy Book in 1799. William 'Little Cash' (1772/3–1840) merchant in Hawick. He may also have been an innkeeper. It is unclear how he was related to 'Auld Cash' (who died unmarried), but could have been a nephew, or may not have been directly related at all (with the nickname given humourously perhaps). He was recorded as a merchant at his daughter's baptism in 1797. It is possible he was the William 'Junr. Mercht.' who paid the Horse Tax in Hawick in 1797. He was 'Junior Merchant' on the 1799 list for the Militia ballot in Hawick. In 1796 he married Catherine, daughter of draper George Turnbull and Betty Wilson; she died in 1809. Their children included: Betty or Bess (1797–1848), who died in Eyemouth; Robert (1798/9–1825); and probably George 'Pies' (b.c.1801), baker in Hawick. Witnesses in 1797 were Thomas and Andrew Oliver, who were probably relatives. He is buried in Wilton Old Churchyard, along with his wife Margaret (who died at the age of 72), a daughter who died in infancy, and his son Robert. He could be the William of Hawick who subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. He is described as 'little cash' in 1806 when the death of his daughter Margaret is recorded. William (b.1785) son of Robert and Helen Scott, he was born in Hawick Parish. He was hind at Langraw in Hobkirk Parish and some of his family emigrated to the U.S. In 1841 he was agricultural labourer at Scaur Nook and in 1851 was farm steward at Langraw Scaur (the same place). His wife was Helen and she was already dead by 1851. Their children included: Henry (b.1806), who married Isabella Renwick; and Mary (b.1814); Margaret (b.c.1819), who married James Smail, farm steward at Timpendean; Agnes (or Nancy, b.c.1822), who married Oliver Lough; Andrew (b.c.1825); and Violet (b.c.1830). He could be the William, married to Helen Mason, who had children William (b.1815), Thomas (b.1817) and Agnes (b.1820) baptised in Cavers Parish. Later in life his sons William and Andrew, and son-in-law Oliver Lough, convinced him to accompany them to America. William (18th/19th C.) shepherd in Southdean Parish. He married Margaret Turnbull. Their daughter Jean (1812/3–55) married butcher John Wallace. William (18th/19th C.) married Agnes Rutherford in Wilton Parish in 1813. William (18th/19th C.) mason at Bellshiels, probably in Castleton Parish. He subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. William 'Will o the Bents' (b.1800/1) son of 'Tammy Clarilee'. In 1841 he was recorded as a mason at Bents near Chesters and in 1851 was a 'Stone-Dyke-Builder' there. His wife was Mary and their children included: Isobel, who married Peter Smith of the Rule valley Smiths; Thomas (b.c.1833); Elizabeth (b.c.1835); James (b.c.1837); Helen (b.c.1840); and George (b.c.1842). He emigrated to Australia along with his daughter and son-in-law, perhaps around the early 1850s. He had 'Poems' published in 1824. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Mary Govenlock and their children included: John (b.1823); Beatrice (b.1824); William (b.1827); Walter (b.1828); Mary (b.1830); and Janet (b.1832). Since there is no trace of the family in the 1841 census, he is probably the William who emigrated to Galt, Ontario, buying a farm in Beverley in about 1834 (family history says that he came from Innerleithen, but perhaps that was incorrect or just a temporary stay). He may also have had a son Robert. William of Langraw (1804–78) eldest son of Andrew of Langraw in the Rule valley. His mother Jane Scott was a cousin of Sir Walter Scott. He was born in Huddersfield, but moved to Langraw as an infant, being educated in Jedburgh and Edinburgh University. After graduating, he worked in the office of the Hawick Town Clerk (John Oliver) for a while. It is said that he inherited a musical ear from his mother (Jean Scott, cousin of the writer Sir Walter) and to have a delicate consitution and retiring nature. He made a collection of Border tunes, working them out on a miniature violin as he travelled around the country (many coming from a shepherd called Hutton at Peel in Liddesdale). Some of this collection found its way into Wood's 'Songs of Scotland', and the materials were deposited in the Antiquarian Museum in Newcastle. In 1837 he travelled to America, returning over a year later. He became a great authority on local geology, history and folklore. Friend of Sir Walter Elliot, he acted as factor to Wolfelee from 1855, when Sir Walter succeeded to the estate. He was also a keen hunter with the rifle, and took an active part in parish affairs. He served as a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire. He passed on the local tradition that the cheviot sheep breed owed its origin to the 'Thirteen Drifty Days'. In 1861 he is recorded at Langraw as landed proprietor and farmer of 150 acres, employing 5 labourers. Also in 1861 he wrote to the Archæological Society with his view on the hstory of smoking in the district. He wrote 'Eight Months in Illinois' (1843), but was reticent to publish his poetic works, although the poems 'The Last Fairy', 'Angel Stairs', 'The Tushielaw Thorn' and 'The Capon Tree' were all published anonymously. Tancred reports his story of meeting a 'spunky' (i.e. 'will-o'-the-wisp') and also how he gave some information regarding the Sclaterford. He was involved with the Hawick Archæological Society, loaning some artefacts for display at their first meeting. Late in life he married Mary Jane Mills from Ponteland in Northumberland. When his health began to fail he sold Langraw and moved into Edinburgh with his family of 2 sons and 2 daughters (including William A. and Dora M.). He is buried in the Grange Cemetery there. William (b.c.1790) farmer at North Berryfell in 1841. His wife was Helen and their children included: Helen (b.c.1820); Mary (b.c.1823); Francis (b.c.1825); and George (b.c.1830). He could be the William who married Helen Kedie in Wilton Parish in 1814, whose daughter Francis was born in 1815. William (b.1803) hind to the Laird of Langraw. He lived in one of the cottages at Langraw Scaur. His children included: Henry (b.1806), who was Steward at West Fodderlee; William, who went to America; Andrew, also went to America; Agnes, who married Oliver Lough; Mary (b.1814); Violet, who married John Dalgleish from Swanshiel and went to Australia; Margaret, married James Smail, Steward at Timpendean. He emigrated to America along with his sons William and Andrew and his daughter Agnes and son-in-law Oliver Lough. William (b.1811/2) born in Yetholm Parish, he was a tailor in Denholm and was Treasurer of the Denholm Horticultural Society. He married Margaret Bell and their children included Jane, Janet, Thomas, William, Adam and Andrew. William (b.1812/3) from Jedburgh, he was shepherd at 'Harwoodsykefoot' in 1851. His wife was Mary (from Hawick Parish) and their children included James, Robert, Jane and Janet. His widow was still living in the same place in 1861. William (b.1814) son of Town Clerk John, brother of lawyers George and James. He was recorded on the 1841 census as a woollen manufacturer along with his brother Thomas. The pair are probably the William and Thomas recorded as proprietors of Dean Mill in Pigot's 1837 directory, manufacturing both woollens and hosiery. In about 1836 the firm of John Oliver & Sons, along with William Wilson & Sons, purchased Weensland Corn Mill, and erected the new Weensland Mill. He was tenant farmer at Hallrule and later at Barnes (where he is recorded in the 1860s). In 1847 John Halliday published 'Verses to William Oliver, Esq., Hallrule House' about his friendship. In 1857 his wife gave 6 silver coins and a Roman coin to the Museum collection and in 1858 he gave some other coins. In 1861 he was farmer of 750 acres at barnes, employing 5 people. He married Margaret Phillips. Their children were John and Henrietta. William (b.1816/7) joiner at Cauldmill. His wife was Janet, and their children included Barbara, William, Helen, Betsy and Agnes. In 1851 his mother Helen, from Ashkirk Parish, was living with him. William 'Blinnd Wull' (1818–71) noted local fiddler, born at Tandlaw, son of Adam and Agnes Anderson. He lost his sight to a game cock at the age of 5, and also lost his father early. He learned the violin from Johnnie Oliver, and played regularly at weddings and social functions. Tales were also told of his prowess as an angler and poacher and as a maker of nets. On one occasion he was caught poaching, but gave his captors the slip, escaping to Edinburgh, where he worked for a while. He also ran a dance class at the Fleece Inn ballroom. In 1841 he is recorded as an itinerant musician, residing at Damside with his mother Agnes and sisters May and Agnes, in 1851 he was a visitor on the Fore Row (with Mary Grieve, his sister) and in 1861 was 'Musician; Blind' at 11 Fore Raw. He firstly married Agnes Henderson in 1845 and shortly before his death secondly married Catherine Ballantyne. He died at 11 Fore Raw. He is sometimes regarded as the last of Hawick's blind celebrities. William Elliot (b.1819) born in Roberton Parish, son of James, farmer at Borthwickbrae Burnfoot. He emigrated to Australia, settling at Nanango Station (which covered 195 square miles) in Queensland in about 1842. In fact he probably named the area Nanango, after the aboriginal word for the nearby waterhole. Fellow Borderer John Borthwick settled at the adjacent Tarong, and together the district became known as South Burnett. He probably stayed in Australia for less than a decade, but returned to Scotland. In 1851 he was at Borthwickbrae Burnfoot living with his brother James, and listed as 'Lately from Australia'. He later lived on Mull. He married Christina C. Campbell and their children were Mary Salmons, Helen Elliot, Donald C., Jane B. and William. William (19th C.) listed as a High Street baker in Slater's 1852 directory. William 'Will' (b.1827) son of Castleton shepherd George, he was brother of David and Barton. He was farm steward at Gatehousecote and later at Hyndlee farm. He was listed as farm steward at Langraw Scaur in 1851 and Gatehousecote Cottages in 1861. He married Margaret Rutherford in 1853 in Hobkirk Parish and their children included: Margaret J. (b.c.1853); James (b.1855); Janet (1856–1923), who married James Crosbie and emigrated to New Zealand; Euphemia (b.1861) and George (b.1864). He died in Hawick, aged 88. William (b.1828/9) smith at Bedrule. He was married to Margaret and their children included Walter, Thomas and William. William Moffat (1846–91) eldest surviving son of James and Dorothea Moffat. He succeeded as tenant of Howpasley on the death of his father. He was one of the original members of the Border Rifles and having held the rank of sergeant for 10 years, was permitted to formally retain that rank when the troop disbanded. In 1872 he donated a Russian coin from 1787 to the Museum. He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1873. He was also President of the Teviotdale Farmers' Club in the 1880s. After retiring he moved to Langraw House. Later he and his sister (probably Jane, both unmarried) stayed at Whitriggs House. William (1869–1919) son of James and Jane Rutherford. He was a solicitor and lived at Woodburgh near Cauldmill. He died in a freak accident, falling out of the door of the express train from London, near Nuneaton. He married Jessie, daughter of Luke Greenwood, but the couple had no children (formerly spelled 'Olifer', e.g. the usual spelling given for the 1717 Cornet, and 'Olipher', as well as 'Olever', 'Olifer', 'Oliferd', 'Olipheir', 'Oliuer', 'Oliuere', 'Olivere', 'Ollifar', 'Ollipher', 'Olliver', 'Ollyver', 'Olyfard', 'Olyfer', 'Olypheir', 'Olypher', 'Olyver', etc.; 'Oliphant' may have broken away as a separate name in early times).

Oliver Castle (o-lee-vur-kaw-sul) n. former castle near Tweedsmuir in Peeblesshire, which gave its name to the surrounding barony. The name of the castle has no connection with the Oliver family of the Jedforest area, although it may be related to the name 'Olifurd' and has been suggested to come from a corruption of 'Holy ford'. The lands were owned by the Frasers since Norman times, passing to the Hays by marriage in the early 14th century. The Hays of Yester also came to be owners of the lands of Todrig in Ashkirk Parish and, somewhat confusingly, these lands were annexed to the Barony of Oliver Castle, probably in the early 16th century, with the Hays holding the superiority.

Oliver Crescent (o-lee-vur-kre-sin') n. street built on the most easterly portion of the lands originally granted by Douglas, built in 1875 and named after James Oliver. The area was at one time known as 'Lawrie's Denn'. St. John's Church was once here, converted to Arthur Armstrong's Department Store in 1962. The corner with Croft Road used to have John Millar's grocery shop. The composer Francis George Scott was born at No. 6. J.P. Alison designed the tenements at Nos. 20 and 22 in 1898.

Oliver Crescent Lane (o-lee-vur-kre-sin'-lān) n. alley off Oliver Crescent, being the backs of the houses on Oliver Place.

Oliver Park (o-lee-vur-pawrk) n. council housing scheme developed off Weensland Road in 1922, the first of its kind in the town. It was named after Andrew Rutherford Oliver of Thornwood.

Oliver Place (o-lee-vur-plis) n. opposite side of the street from Bridge Street and Bourtree Place and off Oliver Crescent, the first part being a continuation of the High Street. In fact 83 and 85 High Street may have originally have been built as 1 and 2 Oliver Place. It was built around 1875–8 and named after James Oliver, who funded the construction. This area marked the eastern limit of the town lands granted in the Charter. No. 3 has a particularly ornate design, with the carved stone head above the entrance perhaps being the likeness of James Oliver, and his monogram being on 2 of the dormers, which also feature animal forms. Nos. 3, 4, 12 and 13 are grade C listed.

Oliver-Rutherford (o-lee-vur-ru-thur-furd) n. Archibald John of Dinlabyre (b.1821) 2nd surviving son of William Oliver of Edgerston and Dinlabyre. He joined the 93rd Highlanders, transferred to the 70th Regiment and retired as a Major. He succeeded to his father's lands of Dinlabyre. He was a member of the Jedforest Club. He was succeeded by his son Archibald Rawlinson. Archibald Rawlinson (b.1866) succeeded his father to Dinlabyre. He was a mariner, who was retired by 1897. In that year he married Ellen Scott Elliot, daughter Walter Elliot, farmer at Hermitage. William see William Oliver Rutherford. William Alexander of Edgerston (1818–88) eldest surviving son of William Oliver of Dinlabyre and Agnes Chatto, he was born at Knowesouth. His father had inherited Edgerston from his grandmother and took the addition of Rutherford to his surname. He served for a few years in the local (Dumfries) Militia, reaching the rank of Major 1846–59. He was a keen hunter, starting his own pack of harriers in 1845, but giving up after an accident meant he could not mount a horse. He served as a Justice of the Peace in Roxburghshire. He did not succeed his father to Edgerston until 1879, when he was 61. In 1862 he married his cousin Margaret Jane, daughter of Edward Young (whose father married a sister of William Oliver Rutherford, Sheriff of Roxburghshire) and Elizabeth, who was daughter of J. Browne Roberts; Elizabeth's sisters Katherine Jane and Margaret Amelia married brothers Thomas Macmillan-Scott of Wauchope and Charles Scott of Langlee. His children were: William Edward (b.1863), who succeeded; Archibald Aymer (b.1867); and Neta Isabella. He secondly married Mary Anne, daughter of W.H. Brakespear from Oxfordshire. They had 2 children: Malcolm; and Agnes. William Edward of Edgerston (1863–1931) eldest son of William Alexander. He also served in the Militia for several years. He succeeded his father to Edgerston in 1888, but sold the estate in 1915 (to Frederick Scott Oliver, who was not related) and emigrated to Kenya. In 1891 he married Nancy, youngest daughter of Gideon Pott of Dod. At the same time Mr. Pott's eldest daughter was also married in the same church (to Isaac Bayley).

the Olivers (thu-o-lee-vurz) n. local family, for centuries concentrated in a triangle formed by Hawick, Jedburgh and the Carter Bar. Tradition asserts that they were once connected closely with the Frasers, or alternatively that they were descended from a West Country family or came from Spain (there is no evidence for the reality of any of these stories however). The early history is also confused by the existence of the surname Oliphant in Scotland. It is unclear exactly when the surname appeared in the Borders. There were Olivers in Berwick in the late 13th century. Robert Oliver was Provost of Jedburgh in 1424 and Thomas Oliver was recorded at Swinnie in 1436. In 1493 a number of Olivers were separately fined for non-appearance to answer crimes at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh; they may be among the ancestors of local modern-day Olivers. There follows many records of the family in the Jedforest and Southdean areas in the 16th century. A farm called 'the Strynds' (probably meaning 'the Springs', near Abbotrule) was the residence of a prominent branch of the family in the late 15th century. In 1502 they were accused of being part of many different raids around the Borders and 4 of them (probably from 2 generations) were sentenced to be hung at Jedburgh for failure to answer for their 'diverse reiffis, hereschippis, slauchtaris, and stouthis'. The clan sometimes fought on the English side, e.g. during Ancrum Moor, when they switched allegience to the Scots mid-battle; a letter of assurance to the English King in 1544 is valuable as a list of 24 of the most prominent Olivers at that time. Many of the clan were executed following the pacification of the Borders after the 1603 Union. Nevertheless, they continued to farm throughout the upper Rule valley and Southdean, 36 male tenants of that name being recorded in the Jedforest in 1669. In Hawick there were shoemakers of this name from early times, perhaps going back as far as 'Hab o Hawick' in the early 16th century. There have been at least 13 Cornets called Oliver – 'For the Olivers stout, of Jed-forest, Lang counted him their stay, But now, he bow'd upon his staff, And his auld thin locks were gray' [JTe].

o'm (ōm) contr. of him – 'Aich losh! ye blush, preserve's d'ye think shame o'm?' [JoHa], 'Wheesht, wumman – that's aboot a' she can get oot o'm . . . ' [DH].

Oman (ō-min) n. George (b.1838/9–94) born in Wick, he trained as a photographer in Edinburgh, and came to Hawick in 1867 following his marriage. In 1868 he started to work with photographer William Scott. Their business, Scott & Oman, took over William Beattie's photography business at 4 Mill Port (although Beattie had previously been at 11 Back Row). In 1871 he donated to the Museum 'part of oak table formerly in Harden, with letters R.K.I.T. 1619 carved on it'. From 1875 he also ran a tobaconist's shop at 3 High Street. However, he left Hawick soon afterwards and is listed on the 1881 and 1891 censuses as a photographer on Caledonian Crescent in Edinburgh. He married Mary Ann Rutherford, who had been a domestic servant in Rose Street, Edinburgh. Their children were: Agnes McMorran (b.c.1868), who died of burns, aged 2½; Isabella (b.c.1871), born in Hawick; Jemima (b.c.1873), also born in Hawick; Mary Ann (b.c.1875), also born in Hawick; Nathaniel (b.1877), who died in infancy; Margaret Miller (b.1879); Hannah Turner (b.1881); Georgina Francis (b.1884); Kate Andrewina Gibson (b.1887).

Omond (ōmund) n. Steven (16th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1640 he and 2 others, Robert Brown and William 'Frater', had to make public repentance for playing at 'nineholes' (i.e. nine men's morris) on Sunday. He is probably the 'Steivin Imond' or 'Eimond', married to Jean 'Morry', whose children, baptised in Ashkirk, included William (b.1652) and Andrew (b.1662).

on (ōn, on) prep. on – '. . . Oo canna gaun oan like this . . . [GW] (it seems that this only appeared about the middle of the 19th century, developing from 'we' to something like wū and hence to oo, and with the extended use for 'us' following later).

'oo (oo) n., arch. wool – '... He has tae grip a ploo, Or lamb a hirsel, feed some kye, Or help clip off the oo' [JRE], '... the desire by manufacturers to supply a wholesome article, and an a' oo' product' [WRW], '... I've a hank o' black oo, gin ye're knittin' eenow!' [WL], the word occurs in a famous example of the local dialect, which might be overheard in a conversation between a customer and a shopkeeper discussing a piece of woollen cloth – 'Cf. the often quoted example of this usage:– Oo?, Aye, oo, Aa oo?, Aye, aa oo, Aa yeh oo?, Aye, aa yeh oo' [ECS] (see also woo and wull).

oobit (oo-bi') n. a caterpillar, particularly the larva of the tiger moth, which appears woolly, with black and yellow rings, especially occurring in the phrase 'hairy oobit' – 'Oobit, a hairy worm, with alternate rings of black and dark yellow, Roxb. When it raises itself to the tops of the blades of grass, it is by the peasantry viewed as a prognostic of high winds' [JoJ], a puny or insignificant person (the word 'wabbit' may be related).

oo'd (ood) contr. we'd, we had – 'Yince an oo'd the wunter bye, oo'll no be sae ill-off' [ECS], 'At easter time oor eggs oo'd dye Oo heard the paper train gaun bye ...' [IWL].

Oor Ain Auld Toon (oor-ān-awld-toon) n. song written by Thomas Caldwell, with music by Adam Grant. It was first sung at the 1903 Colour Bussing by John Bell, and dedicated to all Hawick Callants in exile. Because of this, as well as the evocative words and rousing chorus, it is almost always sung at the Overseas Night.

oor ain yins (oor-ān-yinz) n. close members of one's family – ' 'Oor ain yins is sometimes used to distinguish one's immediate family or one's immediate household from those of one's kindred less nearly related' [ECS].

Oor Bonnie Border Toon (oor-bo-nee-bōr-dur-toon) n. song written by Robert Hunter with music by Francis George Scott. Scott was responding to a request of the Hawick News for a tune to fit the words that it published in 1897. However, it was not published until 1902, and first sung at the Colour Bussing of that year by James Sutherland. It was then not sung again at the Colour Bussing until after WWII, although it is now much more popular. Some people have noticed a resemblance of the tune to 'The Maple Leaf Forever', but any similarity is only passing. Certainly Scott's music is original, and indeed the accompaniment is fairly challenging for the pianist. For the 1957 song book Scott agreed to drop the original 4-bar interlude between the verses and a coda at the end (but would allow no other changes). The introduction is now played between each verse, although the Saxhorn Band version still includes the original interlude.

oo're (oor) contr. we're, we are – 'oo're off then', 'Oo're aa gaun ti Denum' [T], 'An' show oo're rale Hawick Callants tae the end o' oor days' [JEDM], 'Oo're gaan ti heh a pickl rain, A unk' [ECS], 'How typical o the great place oo're privileged ti come frae that oors is the only toon to hev sic a memorial' [IWL].

Oo're aa gaun ti Denum (oor-aw-gawn-ti-de-num) n. children's song, often sung while bouncing a child on the knees, with the knees being opened to let the child fall on the last word – 'Oo're aa gaun ti Denum, ti Denum, ti Denum, oo're aa gaun ti Denum, on Sandy Fussy's cairt' [T]. The tune is the same as 'Keel Row' (also known as 'The cat's got the measles'). Some children in Denholm used to sing 'Oo're aa gaun ti Denum schuil in Jimmy Welch's bus' (with the addition of 'The wheel came off, the axle broke, oh what an awfi joke!') so there may once have been several variants. The song is mentioned in 'Mang Howes an Knowes' and so was well known at least as long ago as 1914 – 'So ti the tuine o: 'Oo're aa gaun ti Denum!' oot A suitt towrt the Auld Jail, thonder' [ECS] (see also Sandy Fussy's Cairt).

oorit (oo-ree', -ri') pp., adj., arch. tired, wearied, miserabe – 'Aa yow yins that's ooreet ... an yirns ti sid doon in ov a hyimmly bit away threh aa the strowe an the catter-battereen – ee sood gang an stop at Ancrum!' [ECS].

Oor Lady Land (oor-lā-dee-lawnd) n. Our Lady Land, name of a piece of land in the former Hassendean Parish, referred to in a charter of about 1537. The Mains of 'Capitrig' was bounded by the Grinding Burn on the East and this place on the west. The land may have been associated with Hassendean Kirk or otherwise dedicated to the Virgin Mary. It may have been the same as the lands later called 'Over Hassendean'. This was sold to Francis, 2nd Duke of Buccleuch by Archibald Douglas of Cavers in 1738; the disposition of 1739 to John, Duke of Roxburghe refers to it as 'three acres of land called the Ladylands of Hassendeanbank'. This is the 'Hassendean Lady Lands, now belonging to the Dukes of Buccleuch and Roxburghe', which had once been part of the Barony of Cavers, according to the Land Tax Rolls of 1811.

oors (oors) pron. ours – 'The land here is oors forever, We'll defend it aye in their name' [??] '... Unite to mak' oors a better auld toon' [TC], '... oo hev ti take eet ti thaim, speakin their language so they sing aboot oors!' [IHS].

oorsel (oor-sel) pron. ourselves – 'in the end oo jist hed ti dae eet oorsel', '... We auld folks smile, for a' these pranks We did oorsel' ' [WFC] (occasional variant of oorsels).

oorsels (oor-selz) pron. ourselves – 'oo've juist got oorsels ti blame', 'Oo can land yonder in time for the Common Riding and disguise oorsels ... The cottage of that name was formerly on the Stonedge estate, near the bottom of Hawthornside Brae, close to Weens. James Deans lived there in about the 1840s and 50s, and it is where local historian Walter Deans was born. Robert Grierson, ploughman, lived there in 1861 (also called 'The Opens').

the Opera (thu-o-pe-ra) n. popular name for Hawick Amateur Operatic Society.

the Operatives (thu-o-pe-ra-tivz) n. one of a number of races at the Common Riding in the 19th century, perhaps the predecessors of the Tradesmen's Handicap. It is probably the same as the 'Trades' Purse' recorded being run on the Friday in 1834 (for a gold purse of 6 sovereigns in the morning and 4 sovereigns in the afternoon) and on the Saturday (for 10 sovereigns), as well as in 1835. In 1836 there were 'Operatives Trades' Purse' races run at the Moor on the Friday morning, at the Haugh on the Friday evening and on the Saturday. In 1840 there were 'Operative Trades' Purse' races at the Moor and then the Haugh on the Friday and also on Saturday. The 'Operatives' 3 Sovereigns' race was run in 1843, with the 'Operatives' Purse', 'Operatives' Trades Purse', 'Operatives' Plate' and 'Operatives' Sweepstakes' in the 1850s. In 1860 and 1861 there was the 'Operatives' Plate' on the Saturday and in 1864 there was the 'Operatives' Purse' on the Friday (this is 'operative' in the sense of 'workman'; see the Tradesmen's).

Orchard (u-or-churd) n. Orchard farm and mansion house, situated at the end of the Braid Road, just outside Hawick. The mansion is Georgian, dating from around 1800. It contains a sunken entrance and stepped entrance porch and the interior has much of the original plasterwork, although there were extensive alterations in the 19th century. The old stables bear an armorial panel with the symbols of the Scotts and the Douglases. Nearby 'Old Orchard' are restored early 19th century cottages. The earliest reference to the modern name of these lands is when 'John Scot in Orchart, elder and younger' witnessed a document for the nearby lands of Crook in 1529/30. In 1541 it was burned by the English along with Ormiston, with the cattle taken and 3 men killed. The land was also known as 'Gyislandis' in 1511 and 'Gayslands' in 1675, so it must have once belonged to someone called Guy, perhaps Guy of Denholm. The land was part of the 'Cocklaw' estate, held by the Gledstains of that Ilk through the 16th and 17th centuries. In the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls there were 8 householders listed there. John Smith and James Gledstains were living there in 1715, Adam Henderson in 1717, Robert Black and Walter Scott in 1720, William Black in 1723–33. Walter Scott (perhaps the same one) was herd there in 1728, Walter Taylor and James Cairns were there in 1733–44 and William Kinnaird and Walter Scott and James Laidlaw in 1737. It is said that in about 1734 it passed to a Mr. Dickson, but that seems to be an error. In fact it went to Archibald Crombie, Sheriff Depute of Roxburghshire, who was a relative of the Gledstains of some sort. In 1744 he sold it to Robert Howison, Bailie in Hawick, and on his death it passed to his grandson, William Dickson. Robert Cairns was there in 1749–57 and William Leithead in 1749. William Paterson was there in 1777, Robert Biggar in 1782, George Cairns in 1786, James Scott was labourer there in 1789, Andrew Pringle was there in 1796 and Thomas Blyth and Robert Nichol were servants there in 1799 and Robert Nichol in 1801. After William Dickson's death in 1788 it was probably inherited by his uncle, Robert Scott; he was recorded there in 1811, when it was valued at £310. Sometime after Scott died in 1813 it was purchased by the Douglases of Cavers. John Elliot of Borthwickbrae was living there in 1792. In 1797 the farmers there were Andrew Pringle, plus George and Walter Stavert, with the owner Robert Scott living at Orchard Cottage. Robert Glendinning was a servant at Orchard Cottage in 1799. In the 1860s it was owned by Douglas of Cavers, and occupied by manufacturer Walter Wilson. By the late 19th century it was possessed by William Scott, with the last connection with the Douglases of Cavers severed in about 1925 (also sometimes 'the Orchard'; once spelled and pronounced 'Worchart' and variants, and still 'Orchyard' in the mid-19th century; the name changed from 'Gyislandis', i.e. 'the lands belonging to Guy', possibly of Denum, to its present name in the 17th century; it is 'Orchart' on Pont's c.1590 manuscript map and on Blaeu's 1654 map, and 'Orchyard' on Stobie's 1770 map).

Orchard Road (or-churd-rōd) n. name sometimes used for the back road from the Miller's Knowes passing Orchard farm, a popular walking spot – '... There's peace alang the Orchard way, An' doon in Denholm's bower' [WFC].

Orchard Street (or-churd-stree') n. short street off Orchard Terrace, named in 1899, previously being part of Glebe Place (from 1888) and then of Glebe View (from 1892).

Orchard Terrace (or-churd-te-ris) n. street at the back of the Terraces, opened as a public road around 1895, although the first house (No. 2) was erected in 1882. There are many villa-type residences on the higher side. The name derives from its proximity to the road to Orchard.

orchart (or-chur', -churt) n. an orchard (also worchard).

ordinar (or-di-nur) adj., arch. ordinary – '... are altogether frustrated and disappointed of the ordinar free and gratuitous contributions of their Christian and charitable neighbours ...' [BT1699], '... was not proclaimed at the kirke of Hawick which is not only knowne to be his ordinar residence ...' [BR1712], '... an' then for the Law – his ordinar' hunting grund' [BCM1881], 'Yeh gowsty nicht (wui a wund fit ti blaw doors oot at wundihs) a turbleent woare as the ordnar dang doon the firrst Peinelheuch Moniment' [ECS], adv. ordinarily (often with 'for') – 'At length a doubt wi' some prevail'd, The ordinar' ready payment fail'd' [RDW], 'The auld folk for ordinar' gude to bed by ten, but on this nicht there was a coe like to calve ...' [BCM1880] (also written 'ordnar').

ordinary (or-di-nu-ree) adj., arch. custom, usual practice, particularly in the phrase 'for ordinary', meaning habitually, according to custom – '... the Magistrates and Inhabitants of Hawick rode the marches of the Common yearly for ordinary on the last Friday of May, old stile' [C&L1767].

Ord (ōrd) n. Alexander (15th C.) resident of Minto, whose surname is recorded as 'Urde'. In 1493 Walter and Adam Turnbull in Hornshole were able to 'compone' for several crimes, including the theft of 2 cows and 13 sheep from him. He was probably related to Maragret, who is recorded in Minto in 1502. John (18th/19th C.) plasterer in Hawick, listed on Teviot Crescent in Pigot's 1837 directory. Margaret (15th/16th C.) tenant at Minto Craigend, recorded in 1502, when David Scott (called 'Lady') in Stirkshaws had remission for leading a raid on the farms there. She had 2 cows stolen from her farm. Her surname is recorded as 'Urd'. Thomas (1783/4–1859) son of Selby, minister of Longformacus, he was known as 'Ord the Equestrian or 'Ord the Circusman'. His early history is obscure. Although destined for the ministry himself, he instead became a showman. He was a popular performer at local Common Ridings and fairs in the early-to-mid-1800s, putting on open-air performances in the Haugh, for example. His speciality was tricks involving horses, including jumping over up to 16 of them, and riding half a dozen at once. He used to ride standing on a bare-backed steed and impersonate characters, financed by the sale of lottery tickets for prizes. He also set up his own theatres, where a mixture of theatrical and equestrian entertainments were staged. He was said to have performed until about the age of 80 and is buried in Biggar old churchyard. An article about him appears in the Border Magazine in 1901.

Orderin the Curds an Cream (or-de-rin-thu-kurdz-an-kreem) n. another name for the Thursday night Chase, when the Cornet formally orders curds and cream from a neighbouring farm (now St. Leonard's) for the Friday morning of Common Riding week. This takes place on the Thursday preceding Common Riding week and is the first official ride of the ceremonies. It has happened since at least the 1840s, but only became officially part of the Common Riding ceremonies (i.e. under the ægis of the Ceremonial Committee) in 1888. Jed Murray performed the official ordering duties for almost 30 years, often with an original poem. The evening begins at 6 p.m. when the drums and fifes lead the Cornet and supporters around the Tower Knowe and up the Loan, finishing at the site of the Auld Brig. The riders proceed up to the Nipknowes, with the married men going first, headed by the Acting Father. This evening also has the first 'Hut', with the Cornet and Acting Father both giving speeches, and the Acting Father being presented with his badge. After the publican has agreed to supply the curds and cream the Hut winds up and there is the singing of all 14 verses of 'Teribus' at the farmhouse.

the Ordnance Airms (thu-ord-nins-ārmz) n. former hostelry at 12 (and perhaps also later 31) High Street. It was popularly known as 'the Cannon Inn' (presumably because of a picture on its sign). For a long time the landlord was James Kennedy, a local veteran of Waterloo (and so presumably he named it); this was in the first half of the 19th century. The Harrow Inn was adjacent, both buildings being demolished to make way for the Royal Bank about 1857.

the Ordnance Survey (thu-ord-nins-sur-vā) n. national mapping agency, which grew out of efforts to map Scotland in the 18th century. The first 25 inch maps of Hawick were published in 1863, with the survey being carried out in 1858. The 'name book' from this survey carries additional useful information about place names, including descriptions, spelling variations and the local authorities who were consulted.

oringer (o-rin-jur) n., arch. an orange, orange tree – 'Oringers and limons [costing £/16/0. the 2 dozen in February 1681, and the former in May £1/10/0. a dozen' [HAST1905].

Orm (ōrm) n. (12th C.) son of Eilaf. He was named after Orm, son of Ketel, husband of Gunnilda, his father's aunt. He was probably the man who gave his name to Ormiston at the confluence of the Kale and Teviot. In about 1145 he witnessed the charter of David I to Melrose Abbey. Sometime before 1152 he was witness to a charter concerning a gift of the church of Molle to Kelso Abbey. In the 1150s he witnessed a transaction between Robert Avenel and Melrose Abbey. In about 1155 he and his son John (of Hownam) witnessed a charter granting the church of Old Roxburgh to the Diocese of Glasgow. In about 1158 he witnessed a gift of Sawtry (in Huntingdonshire) to Warden Abbey by King Malcolm. In 1159/60 he witnessed a confirmation of the rights of Kelso Abbey by King Malcolm. Sometime before 1165 he granted land in 'the other Crailing' to Jedburgh Abbey. He also probably possessed the lands of Hownam, which were later owned by his son. He was succeeded by his son John, who was Sheriff of Roxburgh. His great-grandson William was the first to be styled 'of Ormiston'.

Ormesby (ormz-bee) n. Robert (13th/14th C.) presented as parson of Hawick by Edward I in 1297. This family were based in Lincolnshire and Norfolk. Note that William de Ormseby was appointed Justiciar of Scotland by Edward and was left as one of those to govern in his name in late 1296, with his seat of justice at Scone. Robert was presumably his son or younger brother. Perhaps the same Robert of Ormesby obtained an illuminated manuscript, famous for its ornate borders containing fantastic animals, 'the Ormesby Psalter', which he presented to Norwich Cathedral in the 1320s.

Ormiston (or-mee-stin) n. farm and former estate about 2 miles east of Hawick, in the Parish of Cavers. This was the site of Cocklaw Castle, where the 'Siege of Cocklaw' took place in 1403. However, the name occurs separately from 'Cocklaw' even as early as the 16th century, and so it is unclear if the names were precisely synonymous. In 1541 it was burned by the English along with Orchard, with the cattle taken and 3 men killed. John Scott in Ormiston is recorded in 1589 and Adam Scott in 1592. There were other Scotts there in the 17th century. It was owned by the Gledstains of that Ilk in 1643. In the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls there were 8 separate householders listed there, while 'Bailyea Scott ormston' paid tax on 2 hearths in Hawick. James Rutherford was tenant there in the early 18th century. John Leithead was there in 1702, Thomas Miller in 1709, James Scott, James Simpson and Adam Huntly in at least 1715–23, John Leithead in 1716, Thomas Scott in 1718, William Turnbull in 1720, James Stoddart in 1726–27, Thomas Reid in 1726–37, Robert Henderson and John Tait in 1727, Robert Elliot in 1727–29, William Laidlaw in 1727–37, Walter Hogg and John Main in 1728, Thomas Hobkirk in 1730, George Scott in 1733, Walter Reid in 1735–42, James Shiel in 1737–41 and James Douglas and Adam Hart in 1737. The ruins of the tower were obliterated by the present farmhouse, which was built around 1747 by carpet manufacturer Walter Elliot. William Lundie was a tailor there in 1753. James Rathie was there in 1781, James Hutton in 1784 and William Allan in 1788–90. The Elliots lived here in the 18th century, but Thomas Currer 'of Ormstone' inherited it through marriage to Helen Elliot. Currer was owner in 1788, when it was valued at £675 15s 4d. He is recorded as farmer there in 1797 and in the Land Tax Rolls of about 1811. William Allan lived there in 1788 and Andrew Smail was a servant there in 1797. The Wilson family owned it in the 19th century. Hawick's first Provost, George Wilson was born there, as well as Victoria Cross awardee John Daykins. James Black was miller there in 1841. William Gray and Andew Black were farmers in the 1860s. Charles Wilson is recorded in the house in 1868. 'Mrs. Margaret F. McDonald or Muir' was listed as owner in about 1874. Until about 1830 the main route from Hawick to the Newcastle area used to pass here on the way to Birneyknowe. In 1878 an old jug (now in the Museum) was found in a garden there, containing some 15th century silver coins. A 3-legged bronze cauldron, possibly 14th century, was also found there and is in the Museum (formerly spelled and pronounced 'Wormston' and variants; the origin is probably 'Orm's farm', from the Old Scandinavian personal name Ormr, but may have been transplanted from another place of the same name; the name first occurs as 'Ormistoun' in 1509/10, 'Ormistoune' in 1535, 'Ormestoun' in 1592, 'Ormston' in 1680, 'Ormestowne' in 1683, 'Ormstone' in 1694, 'Ormistown' in 1702, 1708, 1726 and 1737 and 'Ormstone' in 1761; it appears to be 'Ormstoun' on Pont's c.1590 manuscript map and is 'Ormestoun' on Blaeu's 1654 map; note there are several other places in Scotland of the same name, e.g. the place on Kale Water, in Berwickshire and in East Lothian).

Ormiston (or-mee-stin) n. farm and house in Eckford Parish, on the north bank of the Teviot, opposite where the Kale joins. The lands were probably those of 'Creling villae Orme filii Gilasp' mentioned in the c.1147 charter to Jedburgh Abbey. The lairdship was held by Orm's descendants, who took 'Ormiston' as their designation and held the lands, which became a barony, until the late 16th century when James, 'Black Ormiston', was executed. It then passed to the Kers of Cessford and then the Earls of Roxburghe. In 1654 it was sold by William, Earl of Roxburghe to John Scott of Langshaw, who sold it in 1658 to Kerr of Chatto. Some time before 1678 it was purchased from Kerr of Chatto by Elliot of Wells. In 1718 it was acquired by William Elliot of Wells and was still held by an Elliot in 1788. It then passed to William Mein and later the Marquess of Lothian. A tower and village here were burned by Hertford's men in 1545 (the origin is probably 'Orm's farm', from the Old Norse personal name 'Ormr' and the Old English 'tun'; the name first appears as 'Hormiston' in the early 13th century; it is 'Ormistoun' on Gordon's c.1650 map and Blaeu's 1654 map).

Ormiston (or-mee-stin) n. village in East Lothian. It was the site of the former castle that was the seat of the Ormistons of Cockburn. A 'sword, found in Ormiston old castle when pulled down, the blade is stamped 'Andrea Ferarra', the present rude handle has been put on after its discovery, and is made of black aok dug from the moss when being drained' was presented to the Museum in 1872.

Ormiston (or-mee-stin) n. Adam (b.1738) son of Robert and Helen Leyden. He was probably the Adam who witnessed a baptism for James Black at Packhouses in 1776. He was recorded at Drinkstone in a baptism of 1780. He was probably the Adam, farmer at Drinkstone, recorded in 1787–97 on the Horse Tax Rolls as owner of 4 horses, and on the Dog Tax Rolls in 1797. He is probably the Adam listed in 1788 as former owner of part of Weensland, valued at £41, and at that time belonging to William Dickson of Orchard. He is probably the 'Mr Ormiston' at Drinkstone whose servant James Black was recorded on the Militia ballot in 1801. In 1766 he firstly married Agnes Turnbull, but she died shortly afterwards. In 1767 he secondly married Esther Douglas. Their children were: Robert (b.1769), tenant farmer at Drinkstone; Isabel (b.1770); Helen (b.1770), twin of Isabel, who died young; Janet (b.1773), William (b.1774) and George (b.1776), who all died in infancy; William (again, 1778–1859), a farm servant, who died unmarried; and Adam (b.1780), who also died young. He appears to have thirdly married Nelly Scott in 1787 and fourthly Isabel Scott in 1796. With his 4th wife he had 5 further children, including George (b.1799) and Janet (1803–76). It is possible that his widow was the Isabella who was listed as 'Ind.' in the 1841 census, and living at Greensidehall Cottage, aged about 55. The 1780 baptism was carried out by Rev. Williamson (meaning that he was a member of the East Bank Kirk), with witnesses James Ekron and William Robertson. Adam (1820–65) 2nd son of Robert, farmer at Drinkstone, and Helen Hall. He worked as an agricultural labourer and then as a mason's labourer. In 1843 he married Elizabeth Storrie (1823–84) and they had sons: Robert (1846–1919), who married Isabella Clyde; and Thomas (b.1850/1). He secondly married Betsy Douglas and they had a daughter, Betsy (b.1859). He was living with his mother and other extended family members in 1851 and was at 3 Round Close in 1861. He is probably the labourer from Wilton who was in Jedburgh Jail in 1863. He ended his life by hanging himself. Adam (1827–96) eldest son of George and Anne Lockie and grandson of Adam, tenant in Drinkstone. In 1861 he was miller and farmer at Rutherford Mill in Maxton Parish. In 1853 he married Margaret Henderson (1828–1915). They had 5 daughters (including Betsy and Anne) and 3 sons, George, Adam and William. Adam (c.1832–1922) possibly son of Andrew. He emigrated to America and lived at Germantown in Pennsylvania. In 1868 he donated a 5 dollar confederate note to the Museum. He is buried at Ivy Hill Cemetery, Philadelphia. Sir Alan (d.c.1289) probably descendant (and perhaps son) of William. He witnessed many charters in about the 1270s and 80s. For example he witnessed a resignation of lands to Melrose Abbey by Richard of Rule for lands in Hownam, where he is 'Alano de Hormiston'. He held lands in Pencaitland in East Lothian, mentioned in the 1260s and 70s. His wife was Alice, who signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296. It is unclear who succeeded him, but there were several others of the same name at a similar time, e.g. Henry and John, who also swore fealty in 1296. It seems likely he was a direct ancestor of most of today's Ormistons. Andrew of that Ilk (d.1495) eldest son of George. He gained the Barony of Ormiston in 1464, as well as the lands of 'Symonstoun' and 'Grymslaw'. He was a member of the panel of 1464/5 ruling on the inheritance of the Barony of Cavers and Sheriffdom of Cavers, where he is 'Andrew Ormestoune of that ilk'. Also in 1464/5 he was on the panel to decide on the disputed lands of Kirkton Mains and the Flex. He was witness to a sasine of the Cranstons for Denholm Mains in 1465/6, where he is described as 'of Ormistoun'. He also witnessed several other charters in the 1460s to 1480s. In 1472 he resigned his lands of Ormiston so that they could be granted to his son Robert. In 1476 an action was brought against him and several others by John, Lord Somerville, relating to the lands of Blacklaw in Linton Parish, with the inquest including Ainslies, Kerrs, Douglases, Pringles, Mathers, Gorlays, Turnbulls and Dalgleishes. In 1481 his brother Nicholas had a charter for lands in the Barony of Broxfield. In 1483/4 he was mentioned in a law-suit involving Thomas Oliphant and William of Abernethy, 2nd Lord Saltoun. In 1485/6 he witnessed a charter for Robert Ramsay of Cockpen. In 1486 he is recorded as a crown tenant in 'Hairtherne' in Yarrow. In 1490 he had to pay Thomas Stewart of Minto for the rental of Sunlaws. In 1492 he is mentioned as a creditor in the will of Sir David Scott of Buccleuch. He is probably the Laird of Ormiston fined for non-presence at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1493. He was mentioned again in a decree relating to Sunlaws in 1494. He married Joneta de Cranston and had children: Robert, who succeeded; George, who served as a gunner, and was tutor to his nephew George; and Margaret, who married John Falow of that Ilk. Andrew (b.1731) eldest son of Robert, grandson of Andrew, blacksmith at Bonjedward, and direct descendant of James of that

Ilk, 'Black Ormiston'. He married Jean Turnbull in Kelso in 1760. Their children, all but the first born in Hobkirk Parish, included: John (b.1769), who lived in Hobkirk; and 3 Williams (b.1763, 1773, 1775). Andrew (18th/19th C.) tenant at Hobkirk Manse lands, listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as owner of 3 horses. He is probably the Andrew who married Marion Oliver in Hobkirk in 1768. His son William was listed in the Lieutenancy Book for Roxburghshire in 1797. Andrew (1747–1837) miller at Timbersidemill, he later moved to Sillerbuthall and Lockieshedge. He was one of the founders of the Relief (Allars) Kirk in Hawick. Andrew (b.c.1780) coachman at Synton according to the 1801 Militia ballot for Ashkirk Parish. Andrew (c.1794–1853) born in Cavers Parish, he was one of the last Hawick Town Herds. In 1841 he was at 'Hawick Muir House' and at 'Herd's House' in 1851; these may have been names for St. Leonard's. He married Sarah Wilson in Wilton Parish in 1816. Their children included Janet, Sarah, Agnes and Adam. Andrew (1820–96) youngest son of John and Elizabeth Oliver. In 1861 he was a labourer living at Bedrule Lodge. In 1848 he married Mary Hymers (perhaps Aimers). They had 2 daughters and 4 sons, including: John (d.1919), who died at Inveresk; Edward (d.1890), who moved to West Derby; Andrew; George (b.1860), who lived at Bedrule. Archibald (1746–1805) born in Wilton Parish, eldest son of John and Isobel Scott. He became a gardener and later moved to Melrose. He is probably the Archibald listed as owner of 'Howlands Inclosure' in 1788, and still recorded that way in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls (when he was already deceased), with the same lands later being owned by Mrs. Elizabeth Graham and Mrs. Agnes Bowie. In Hawick in 1774 he married Betty Scott, who was from Goldielands. Their children included: John (b.1776); Betty (b.1778); John (again, b.1781), Sergeant in the Royal Marines; Walter (b.c.1785); Betty (again, b.1787); Archibald (b.1793), emigrated to America. Archibald (b.1793) youngest son of Archibald and Betty Scott. He was born in Wilton Parish. He married Isabel Hart from Eckford Parish, and they had one child, Archibald, who was a shoemaker. He emigrated to America, and it is unclear what happened to him. Archibald (b.1813–94) born in Melrose Parish, only son of Archibald and Isabel Hart. He was a shoemaker in Lilliesleaf, listed in Pigot's directory in 1837 and Slater's 1852 directory. In 1851 he was on the south side of Main Street. He married Agnes (or Nancy) Turnbull in Lilliesleaf in 1836, and she died in 1882. Their children included: Agnes (b.1837); William (b.1838); John (b.1840), who married Mary Baptie; Isabella (b.1842); Robert (b.1846); Helen (b.1851); James Russell (b.1854); Archibald (b.1856); and Mary (b.1858). He died in Ancrum. Archibald (19th/20th C.) poet who published in the Border Magazine in 1897 and 1898. His 'Sweet Borderland' was dedicated to the Boston Border Club and was illustrated with a photograph of Ancrum Bridge, suggesting that he may be the same as the Archibald who died in 1894. Archibald (1861–1931) eldest son of John and Mary Baptie, he was born in Denholm. He became a violin teacher in Edinburgh. He married Annie Elizabeth Weir (b.1856) and they had a daughter Isabel Mary Weir (d.1900), who died aged 2. They are buried in Morningside Cemetery. David (b.1776) son of John and Betty Laidlaw, he was born in Wilton Parish. He was a draper on the Howegate, recorded in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. 'David & Son' was listed as a Howegate draper in 1837, as well as a manufacturer of hosiery and tailor; the same firm was still listed on the Howegate in 1852. In 1841 he was at about No. 21 Howegate. He married Joan (or 'Johanna') Halliburton, who died in 1854. Their children were: an unnamed child (d.1808); John (b.1809), draper in Hawick; Elizabeth (b.1816); Joan (b.1820); and another child who died in infancy. George of that Ilk (15th C.) son of James. In 1439 he was a witness to the retour of Douglas of Bonjedward and in 1437 he was on an inquest along with his father for the Kers of Altonburn. He purchased lands at Makerstoun in 1451 and was granted his father's Barony of Ormiston in 1452. His recorded sons were: Andrew, who succeeded; James; Nicholas; and Bartholomew. George (15th/16th C.) younger son of Andrew of that Ilk and brother of Robert. He appears to have been in charge of the estate of Ormiston in 1497 when there was a legal case about ejecting tenants from Ormiston Mill. He served as tutor to his brother's son George, who would succeed to Ormiston. He served as one of Patrick, Earl of Bothwell's bailies appointed for giving Walter Scott of Branxholme the lands of Grahamslaw in 1500. Both he and his nephew George appeared on the panel for deciding on the inherticance of the Barony of Cavers by James Douglas in 1509. He appears as a 'gunner' on H.M.S. Margaret in 1513 (the year of Flodden) and received payments as a gunner until 1544. In 1546

he was recorded receiving a pension. It is unclear if he had any family. George of that Ilk (d.c.1542) son of Robert and Elizabeth Rutherford. His uncle George served as his tutor. He inherited Ormiston and Samieston in 1509, presumably meaning that he reached majority then. He was a member of the panel for deciding on the inherticance of the Barony of Cavers by James Douglas in 1509. He obtained lands in Maxton Parish in 1510. In 1530 he was among Border Lairds who gave security for their behaviour. He and his son George were involved with the lands of Fairnington, through a deal with Partick Hepburn of Bolton in 1538. He was at the Battle of Solway Moss in 1542, where he was captured and died soon afterwards. He married Elizabeth Rutherford, who was related to his mother, also Elizabeth Rutherford. As a result his son and heir James had to go through a process of legitimisation in 1515. His children included: Sir James, 'the Black Laird', who succeeded; George, who served as a quartermaster in the Scottish Court; and Andrew (d.1574), who was a Colonel of the Scots army in Holland and was killed in a duel. George (17th C.) probably younger son of Walter and grandson of James 'the Black Laird'. He may have been referred as 'in Heidschaw'. He witnessed events in Jedburgh Parish in 1644 and 1648 and a baptism in Ashkirk in 1650. In 1637 in Ashkirk Parish he married 'Jonet Tennent'. They had 3 known children: a daughter (b.1639); Robert, tenant at Boonraw; and George, who married Isobel Brown. The family also lived in Roberton Parish. George (17th C.) son of John, tenant in Ormiston Mains (although it is unclear if this is the one near Hawick). He is listed in 1684 for being a Covenanter fugitive. George (17th C.) younger son of George and Janet Tennant. His brother Robert was tenant in Boonraw. He was recorded living at Boonraw in 1688. He married 'Issobell Broune' in 1686 and their children (baptised in Roberton Parish, but actually the old Hassendean Parish) included: Bessie (b.1686); and twins Margaret and Janet (b.1688). The witnesses in 1688 were Robert (probably his brother) and Robert Storie. He is probably the George who (along with Robert) witnessed baptisms for Robert Storie in Roberton Parish in 1684, for George Hill in 1687 and for Dand Gray and Isobel Ormiston (perhaps their sister) in 1688. George (1748–1815) born in Wilton Parish, son of Robert, tenant at Boonraw, with his mother being Bessie Scott. He became a miller in the parish of Stow. In 1774 in Hawick he married Agnes Fairbairn, but they had no children and she died in 1816. In 1779 in Stow he married Margaret Boyd and they had 4 sons and 6 daughters, including James (b.1794), who was a carter in Stow and then moved to Dalkeith. George (d.1815) baker in Hawick. He could be the local man who contributed £2 2s to the subscription to support the war with France around 1800. Probably the same George was recorded as owner of a horse on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls for Hawick. It is possible he was the same as George who was miller in Stow, if he moved back to Hawick and became a baker. George (b.1799) youngest son of Adam, who was tenant in Drinkstone, his mother being Isabel Scott. In 1826 he married Anne Lockie in Roberton Parish. Their children (all baptised in Wilton) were: Adam (1827–96), a miller and farmer; William (b.1828), who died young; Margaret (1830–92), who married Alexander Logan; and Robert (1832–74), farm manager. Both he and his wife were probably deceased by 1841, when the 3 surviving children were living at Groundistone, with mole-catcher Robert Taylor and his wife. George (1801–74) eldest son of John and Elizabeth Oliver. He was born in Bedrule Parish (although the census claims Southdean or Chesters), and lived for a while in the Parish. He became a farm steward. In 1851 he was a labourer living at Dykesmuir in Cavers and in 1861 he was steward at Hallburn farm in Morebattle Parish. In 1823 he married Jessie King. Their children included: John (b.1825); Margaret (1827–78), who married Andrew McDougal; Elizabeth (b.1829); Agnes (1831–92), who married Robert Robertson; James (b.1833); Janet or Jessie (1835–1908), who married Andrew Fox; Isabella (b.1837), died in infancy; William (b.1839), also died in infancy; George (b.1841), also died young; and Robert. Their children were baptised in the Jedburgh Free Kirk. He died in Melrose. George (1847–1910) son of hedger Robert. He was born near Bonchester and moved to Rothbury, Northumberland, where he was blacksmith at Elsdon. He married Isabella Jackson and their children included Robert and Elizabeth H. It was said that he could remember well the cutting of the first sod for the extension of the railway line from Hawick to Carlisle. George 'Dod' (20th C.) son of Walter and Mary Begbie. He was a butcher in Hawick. He was the first post-war Acting Father in 1946. He married Catherine Whetlace and had children Helen, Mary, Walter and Kay. Hugh (b.1773) 2nd son of Robert, farmer at Boonraw, and Jean Buckham. He was born in Wilton Parish. Like his 2 brothers, he emigrated to America, eventually settling in Canada. He married Sarah Carter in England. Hugh (1816–79) 4th son of James and Mary Walker. He was born at Drinkstone. At about 2 years old he went with his family to 'Scotch Settlement' in New York state. After working on the family farm near Ox Bow, he became a blacksmith. He fought in the Civil War, participating in several battles in 1864 and 1865. He married Mamie Barnes and they had 9 children. James of that Ilk (15th C.) probably succeeded Robert de Ormiston. He was likely to be descended from the first Orm. He may be the James who took part in the demolition of Jedburgh Castle in 1409. He was on an assize in 1425 for Bemersyde and an inquest for Caverton in 1429/30, when he was James 'of Ormystoun'. In 1432 he was witness to a confirming charter involving Andrew Rule, Lord of Primside and Andrew Ker of Altonburn. Along with his son George he was on a 'retour' panel for Ker of Altonburn in 1446/7. He was described as 'Bailie in that part' in a document of 1448 where Stephen Scott of Castlelaw gained the 'Burrellands' in Eckford Parish; this is the first noted instance of the name 'Ormiston of that Ilk'. In 1452 he resigned his lands to be created into the Barony of Ormiston and re-granted to his son George. James of that Ilk 'the Black Laird' (c.1522–73) son of George and grandson of Robert. He was referred to as 'Black Ormiston' on account of his dark complexion and to distinguish him from his contemporary, John Cockburn of Ormiston (in East Lothian). He held the Barony of Ormiston on Kale Water, as well as Govansland in Maxton. In 1547, after the Battle of Pinkie, he was among men who swore allegiance to the King of England, but renounced this in 1549. He is listed in 1549 among the associates of Walter Ker of Cessford that Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme complained had helped the English in raiding and burning his farms in the lower Borthwick valley. He was on an assize in 1550 for lands granted to William Rutherford of Langnewton. In 1551 he signed the 'Auld Band of Roxburgh'. In 1553/4 he was listed among the Rutherfords and others in an assurance not to harm the Kers; he signed with his hand led by the notary and the pledge for him was his brother Andrew. Also in 1553/4 he was on the panel for Sir Walter Scott inheriting his grandfather's lands of Branxholme and Buccleuch. In 1554 he was surety for Rutherfords not to molest Walter Ker of Cessford; this was the first mention of what became a feud between him and the Kers. Also in 1554 he was on the inquest for Walter Scott of Branxholme succeeding as heir to his grandfather. He is listed in 1557 as part of the group of 200 local Scotts and others who rode to the Kirk of the Lowes to try to kill Sir Peter Cranston, as part of some feud. In 1559 he acted as a Bailie to Lord Bothwell. In 1560 he was involved in communications between Scotland, England and France, on behalf of the Regent, Earl of Arran. Also in 1560 he and John Rutherford of the Knowe were warded for a disturbance during the court held at Jedburgh. In 1561 he was accused of resetting some English cattle. In 1561 he and Scott of Headshaw communicated a letter assurance between Scotts and Kers. Also in 1561 he was among Border Lairds who appeared before the Queen to give names of those guilty of theft; and he later incurred a penalty for failing to deliver thieves to the Privy Council. In 1562 he was ordered to vacate the Earl of Bothwell's lands at Ancrum. In 1564 he was listed among Border lairds who were ordered to support the warden, Ker of Cessford. In 1564/5 he is recorded among the supporters of Scott of Buccleuch in the contract between the Scotts and the Kerrs. The same contract also mentions a 'perticulare deidlie feid' with Sir Walter Ker of Cessford, for which James Langlands of that Ilk and Nicholas Rutherford of Hundalee acted as his special 'umpires'; this was over the lands of Nether Ancrum and the murder of a servant of Cessford's. Also in 1564 he was among 35 local men who were ordered to assist the Warden of the West Marches, who was Ker of Cessford. He and his uncle Robert of Old Melrose entered into an obligation with the Spottiswoods in 1565. Until 1567 he served as Bailie of the lands of Ancrum, Lilliesleaf and Ashkirk for the Earl of Bothwell. In 1567 he was one of the men (along with his uncle 'Hob' Ormiston) accused of treason for helping James Hepburn, Earl of Bothwell and was said to be involved in the murder of Darnley. He was knighted in 1567, around the time that Bothwell married Mary, Queen of Scots. However, later that year he was among supporters of Bothwell who were declared fugitives. He was ordered to vacate Ormiston and Nether Ancrum, as well as his wife's lands of Herdminstoun. He was said to be in a group of Liddesdale thieves who raided Alnwick and was present at the Battle of Langside. In 1568 he and his uncle Robert were said to be hiding with Elliot of Whithaugh in Liddesdale. In 1569 he gave refuge to the Earls of Northumberland and Westmoreland after they fled to Liddesdale following an unsuccessful rebellion in the north of England; he was said to have been met by Martin Elliot of Braidlie in Liddesdale and forced to stop shielding the English rebels. In 1571/2 he was listed as having been declared as a rebel, along with Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst and Thomas Ker of Cavers Carre. He seems to have been hiding out for the next 3 years and was finally captured by Sir John Carmichael at Halkwood, when the Earl of Morton was holding a Justice Court at Jedburgh. He was executed for treason in Edinburgh in 1573, and afterwards the Barony of Ormiston passed to the Kers of Cessford. He is recorded as 'Blak Ormestoune' in 1573 when 2 of his former servants were hanged for stealing livestock and burning Andrew Kerr's corn. His first wife may have been the eldest daughter of Walter Scott of Synton and Whitslade. His second wife was Margaret, widow of John Sinclair of 'Hirdmestoun' (or Herdmanston). His son and heir was Walter, who married 'Geizel' (probably Grizel) Rutherford and Janet Turnbull. He also had a son, Andrew, with his 1st wife, and had no further children with his 2nd wife. Some of his descendants were tenants at Boonraw. He is already dead by 1576 when Andrew Commendator of Jedburgh was tried for associating with him after he was denounced as a rebel. James (1684–1746) son of Robert and Margaret Hill, and brother of John. He was born in Roberton Parish and his family were tenants at Boonraw. He was tenant farmer in Easter Burnfoot, Stirches and Boonraw. He was tenant in Stirches for 7 years in about 1714–21. In 1721 he was living at Borthaugh and in 1724 at Boonraw. He is probably the James who in 1733 witnessed a baptism for Robert (probably his brother), also resident at Boonraw. He married Barbara (or 'Baby') Scott in Wilton in 1713; she was from Tandlaw. Their children were: Jean (b.1714), who died unmarried, aged 21; Robert (b.1716), who moved to Yorkshire; John (b.1717); James (b.1719), who married Jean Dunlop and stayed in Wilton; George (b.1721); John (again, b.1724), also moved to Yorkshire; Walter (b.1727); and Samuel (b.1731), also went to Yorkshire. The witnesses in 1721 were John Scott and William Graham, in 1724 were John Huntly and Gideon Turnbull and in 1727 were John (probably his brother) and Robert Scott. Along with Robert he witnessed a baptism for Robert Scott in Boonraw in 1729. James (1719–54) 3rd son of James and Barbara Scott. He was born in Wilton, where he lived and died. He may be the James who witnessed a baptism for George Scott in Stouslie in 1742. In 1742 he married Jean Dunlop, the marriage being recorded in Ashkirk and Wilton Parishes. Their children included: Jean (b.1743); Barbara (b.1746); Robert (b.1748); Barbara (again, b.1750); and Walter (b.1752). The witnesses in 1748 were Walter Scott and James Dryden. In 1732 he witnessed a baptism for James Scott in Netherhall. James (18th C.) married Janet Reid in Wilton Parish in 1799. ddyoungest child of Robert and Jean Buckham. He lived James (1775–1840) youngest child of Robert and Jean Buckham. He lived for a while at the Rink, later at Drinkstone and then at Galashiels. He married Mary Walker in 1800. The family moved to America in 1819, settling in Rossie, New York. He and his wife were among the first members of the Presbyterian Church at Ox Bow. Their children were: Mary (1802–47), who married William Markwick; Robert (1803–54), farmer in Wilna; James (1805–65), lived in Gouverneur; Adam (1807–88), pioneer in Wilna; William (1809–72), blacksmith and soldier in the Civil War, who died at Carthage; George (b.1814), who died in infancy; Hugh (1816–79), blacksmith; Jennett (1819–55), who married Thomas MacRobie; George (1821–96), died at Ox Bow; and Thomas (1823–90), who went to California. James (b.1778) elder son of Walter and Betty Irwin, he was born in Wilton Parish. He is recorded in 1797 as son of Walter on the list of men on the ballot to serve in the Militia and in 1799 was among those 'In the Ballot Box 1797 not drawn residing in Wilton parish'. He was also listed at Boonraw (along with William) on the 1801 Militia ballot. He farmed at Boonraw. In 1799 he married Janet Reid. Their children included: Walter (b.1800); Robert (b.1803), who was a mason in Bedrule and later a builder in Dalkeith; Janet (1805–76), who married John Fox; William (b.1807), who married Jessie Burton; and Betty (b.1810). He emigrated to the U.S.A. with his eldest son Walter and his daughters. Janet (b.1802/3) recorded in 1861 as a 'Land Proprietor' at Dykeneuk Cottage. She was unmarried. She could be the daughter of James and Janet Reid. John (15th C.) recorded as 'Johannem Ormstoune' in 1482 when he was on the panel for Elizabeth Cunningham inheriting the lands of Appletreehall and the eastern part of Hassendean. John (17th C.) tenant in Ormiston Mains (although it is unclear if this is the one near Hawick). He is recorded in 1684 when his son George was among those declared as fugitives for being a Covenanter. John (1682–1729) farmer at Boonraw, son of Robert and Margaret Hill. He is probably the John who witnessed a baptism for James in Boonraw (his brother) in 1727. In 1712 in Wilton Parish he married Margaret Aitkin, who died in 1726. Their children included: Robert (b.1715), also tenant in Boonraw; John (b.1717); John (again, b.1719), who lived at Wester Howlands and Damside; James (b.1722); (b.1724); Margaret (b.1726); and another daughter. John (1719–75) 3rd son of John, tenant in Boonraw and Margaret Aitkin. In 1841 he was 'brother-german to Robert Ormiston tenant in Boonraw' when he was feued the 'piece of ground at the foot of the Howlands' by George Langlands of that Ilk. This infeftment was confirmed in 1764. He was later described as being of Wester Howlands and Damside. He was 'of Howlands' when listed among the landowners involved in the court case over the division of Wilton Common in 1765. He first married 'Jean Edaem' and they had a son John (b.1742), who died in infancy. In 1745 he secondly married Isobel Scott, who was from Ewes. Their children included: Archibald (b.1746), a gardener, who moved to Melrose; John (b.1748), tailor in Hawick; Walter (b.1750); Jean (b.1754); Walter (b.1756); and Margaret (b.1761). The witnesses in 1742 were Walter Scott and Robert Wilson and in 1748 were Walter Scott and James Dryden. John (b.1748) 2nd surviving son of John and Isobel Scott. He was born in Wilton Parish and became a tailor in Hawick. In 1767 he married Betty Laidlaw, from Cavers Parish, the marriage being proclaimed in Hawick. Their children were: Catherine (b.1774); David (b.1776), who was a tailor and merchant; and Betty (b.1779). John (1754–89) born in Wilton Parish, 2nd son of Robert, tenant in Boonraw, and Bessie Scott. In 1777 in Edinburgh he married Helen Russell and they had a son, Robert. He worked as a wright in Stow and died in Hawick. John (18th C.) wright in Hawick. He subscribed to Caw's 'Poetical Museum' (1784). It is possible he was the same as the son of Robert, who was a wright in Stow or the wright in Cauldmill. John (b.1769) son of Andrew, he was born and lived in Hobkirk Parish. He had sons: Andrew (b.1797), who emigrated; and James (b.1798), who was a farmer in Surrey. John (b.c.1770) eldest son of George and Margaret Yule or Laing. He was descended from the Gattonside branch and hence from William of Westerhouses. He lived in Bedrule. In 1841 he was a labourer at Billerwell Lodge, and in 1851 his widow and one of his daughters (Isabel, stated to be 'Pauper (Imbecile)') were still there. He married Elizabeth Oliver, who died in Bedrule in 1860, aged 81. Their children included: George (1801–74); Isabel (1805–1870); Margaret (1811–85), who married John Brunton; Elizabeth (1812–91), who married Thomas Cranston; Robert (1815–99); and Andrew (1820–96), labourer in Bedrule. John (18th/19th C.) labourer in Upper Dykeraw in Southdean Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. John (18th/19th C.) possible name for a labourer at Hobkirkstile in Hobkirk Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book in 1799 (the name is hard to read). He could be the John, son of Andrew, who was baptised in Hobkirk in 1769. He may also be the John whose children Andrew (b.1797) and James (b.1798) were baptised in Hobkirk. He could be the John, aged about 70, who was lving (with several other Ormistons) at Billerwell Lodge in 1841. John (b.1781) eldest surviving son of gardener Archibald. He was born in Wilton Parish. He became a Sergeant in the Royal Marines, serving in the 75th Foot Regiment and being discharged at age 30. He was served heir to his father in 1813. John (b.1809) eldest son of tailor David and Joanna Haliburton. He was a draper in Hawick, taking over the business from his father at 21 Howegate. He is recorded there in 1851. His wife was Janet from Newington. John (19th C.) married Janet Kersel Goodfellow in Hawick in 1851. John (b.1836/7) born in Cavers Parish. He was Station Master at Belses. He is recorded there in 1861, with his aunt, Agnes Ormiston. John (b.1840) son of Archibald, shoemaker in Lilliesleaf. He married Mary Baptie in Cavers Parish. In 1861 he was listed as a shoemaker, living with his mother-in-law and family at Spittal-on-Rule. He later moved to Ancrum. They had children: Archibald (b.1861), music teacher in Edinburgh; Robert Baptie (b.1863); John (b.1865); Agnes (b.1870); Mary Thomasina (b.1872); and Thomas (b.1874). Robert of that Ilk (d.bef. 1505) elder son of Andrew and Janet Cranstoun. He succeeded to the estate according to a grant made by his father in 1471/2. He married Elizabeth Rutherford and had 3 sons: George, who succeeded; William of Westerhouses; and Robert of Old Melrose. His widow secondly married Alexander Haitlie of Muirdean. Robert of Old Melrose (d.c.1570) 3rd son of Robert of that Ilk and Elizabeth Rutherford. He served as a quartermaster for James V. He was described as 'of New Hall' in 1551 when he served as surety for his nephew James ('Black Ormiston') with Walter Scott of Sinton. He is said to have shown a 2-headed calf to the Queen Mother, Mary of Guise. In 1564 he resigned Old Melrose to his son John, reserving liferent for himself. He also held lands at Sauchtonhall and Blainslie. In 1567 he was convicted of complicity in the murder of Darnley, although it was unclear that he was really involved. He died soon afterwards and was succeeded by John. Robert (d.1719) tenant farmer at Boonraw, son of George and great-grandson of 'the Black Laird'. He married Marion (or Margaret) Hill in about 1681. Their children (baptised in Roberton Parish, when it contained Hassedean) included: John (b.1682), who was tenant in Boonraw after him; James (b.1684), who married Barbara Scott; and Helen (b.1687). Additionally their son Robert was baptised in Wilton in 1696. The witnesses in 1684 were Robert Storie and William Hill (who may have been his wife's father). The witnesses in 1696 were William and John Lamb. He is probably the Robert who (along with Robert Storie) witnessed a baptism for George (likely his brother) in 1688. Additionally, he is probably the Robert who (along with George) witnessed a baptism for Robert Storie in Roberton Parish in 1684, one for William Pott in 1687 and another for Dand Gray and Isobel Ormiston (perhaps their sister) in 1688. In 1696 he witnessed a baptism (along with Robert Storie) for William Nichol in Boonraw. In 1706 he paid for the use of the Wilton mortcloth (meaning that a family member died). Robert (1696–1740) 3rd son of Robert and Marion Hill. He was a farmer in Wilton Parish (although it is unclear where exactly), living at Boonraw in 1733. In 1732 he married Helen (or Ellen) Leyden and she died in 1743. Their children included: Helen (b.1733); John (b.1736), who died young; and Adam (b.1738). The witnesses in 1733 and 1738 were James (who was probably his brother) and John Lamb. He may be the Robert who (along with James) witnessed a baptism for Robert Scott in Boonraw in 1729. Robert (1714–76) son of John and Margaret Aitkin. He also farmed at Boonraw. In 1758 he witnessed a baptism for John Scott, resident of Boonraw and in 1764 (with Walter) for a different John Scott in Boonraw, as well as for William Lockie. In 1744 he married Bessie Scott, who died in 1757. Their children were: James (b.1746); George (b.1748), who lived in Edinburgh and died a bachelor, with his estate divided among his siblings; Elizabeth (b.1752), probably died young; John (b.1754); Anne (b.1756); and Elizabeth (b.1760). He appears (unless this is another Robert) to have secondly married Jean Buckham and had children: Janet (b.1765), who married Walter Scott and emigrated to America; Robert (b.1767), who emigrated to America; Elizabeth (b.1770), who married a Hobkirk and emigrated to Rossie, New York; Hugh (b.1773); and James (b.1775). The witnesses in 1746 were George and James Scott (perhaps related to his wife) and in 1770 were Archibald Elliot and Adam Ormiston (perhaps his brother). In 1770 he witnessed a baptism in Wilton for Robert Cowan and another for James Turnbull. He may be the Robert still recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as farmer at Boonraw; Walter was listed after him and so presumably his brother or son. Robert (b.1716) eldest son of James and Barbara Scott. He was born in Ashkirk Parish. He moved to Yorkshire, where he married and had a son, whose surname was written 'Ormston'. Robert (b.1767) son of Robert and Jean Buckham, he was born in Wilton Parish. He lived at Mount Hooly, near Abbotsford and had children baptised in Minto and Jedburgh parishes. In 1793 he married Isabella Bell from Ancrum. Their children included: Margaret (b.1794); Jean (b.1796); Robert (b.1807); Thomas (b.1814); and Hugh (b.1814). At the age of about 50 he moved with his family to America, settling in the 'Scotch Settlement' in St. Lawrence County, New York. Robert (1769–bef. 1841) eldest son of Adam and Esther Douglas. He was tenant farmer at Drinkstone, probably taking over from his father. In 1817 he was part of a law-suit brought by John Allan over a bill that his father had been caution for in 1802. In 1819 he married Helen Hall in Wilton Parish. They had 4 sons: William (b.1818), a warehouseman; Adam (1820–65); Robert (b.1821); and Thomas (b.1823). In 1841 his widow was living at Dovemount along with their 4 sons and in 1851 on Wilton Place with Adam and Thomas. Robert (1803–91) born in Wilton Parish, son of James and Janet Reid. He was a mason at Bedrule Manse Cottage in 1841. He had moved to Edinburgh by 1851 and later became a builder in Dalkeith. He married Janet Forsythe from Coldingham. and their children were: Ebenezer Forsyth (1828–1926); Margaret (1830–1911); James (b.1832); unnamed child (b.c.1834); Robert (1837–1909); George (1838–77); Elizabeth (1841–58); Jessie (1843–1916); John (1848–1916); and Andrew (1850–1911). His children were born in Coldingham, Wilton, Bedrule and Hobkirk. Robert (1815–99) 2nd son of John and Elizabeth Oliver. He was probably born in Southdean. He became a hedger in Hobkirk Parish. In 1851 and 1861 he was at Billerwell Lodge. His married Elspeth or Euphemia Wood (1823–90). Their children included: Ann (1843–1924), who married William Wylie; John (1845–1911), who died at Hawick; George (1847–1910), who moved to Rothbury, Northumberland and was blacksmith at Elsdon; James (1849–98); Elizabeth (b.1851), who married Andrew Weddell; William Andrew (b.1853), who died young; Janet Wood or Jessie (1855–1933); Thomas Shiel (1858–1931), who married Janet Weatherston and moved to Coldstream; Robert (1860–84), who married Betty H. Davidson and Isabella Dalgleish; and Helen Wood (1864–1934), who died in Hawick. Robert (b.1818/9) coal clerk at Under Damside in 1841. At that time he was living with his wife Margaret (who was from Lilliesleaf), daughter Ann J. and cousin David Scott (from Traquair). Robert (1832–74) 3rd son of George and Anne Lockie. He was born at Drinkstone, where his family were tenants. In 1861 he is listed as groom at graden in Linton Parish and was later a farm manager. In 1860 he married Margaret Wood (1834–1903) and they had 4 sons: George (1861–1938), who emigrated to Vancouver; William (1863–1904), who married Margaret Pringle; Adam (b.1865), who worked for the South African Post Office in Transvaal; and John (1866–1948), who married Marion Laing Frazer and worked for the Buccleuch Estates. Samuel (b.1731) youngest son of James and Barbara Scott, he was born in Wilton Parish. Along with his brothers Robert and John, he moved to Yorkshire. In 1755 at Great Ayton he married Elizabeth Hoof. They had 4 sons and 2 daughters. The family name became spelled Ormston. Walter (16th/17th C.) son of James 'the Black Laird', with his mother probably being a Scott. His father was his tutor in 1564 when he was sued by the former tenants in Ancrum Mill. In 1603 he and his wife had a charter of the Templelands of Grahamslaw. He was still alive in 1628 and living then at Grahamslaw in Eckfor Parish. He married Grizel, daughter of John Rutherford, 'Cock o Hunthill', and secondly married Janet Turnbull. His children included: William, who mortgaged the Templelands and had at least 4 sons; Andrew, who is recorded in Jedburgh in the mid-17th century, with 4 sons; George, who married Janet Tennant and was ancestor of the tenants at Boonraw; and Robert, who was apprenticed in Edinburgh in 1628. Walter (1752–1818) son of James and Jean Dunlop. He farmed in Wilton Parish. He was listed as farmer at Boonraw in 1797, along with Robert, and also Walter Scott. Also in 1797 he was recorded as tenant in Boonraw when his son James was listed in the Lieutenancy Book. He married Betty Irvine (or Irwin) in Wilton Parish in 1776. Their children included: James (b.1778); and William (b.1779), who emigrated to the U.S.A. Walter (b.1783/4) 4th son (and 2nd surviving) of Archibald, gardener in Wilton and then Melrose, his mother being Betty Scott from Goldielands. In about 1804 he founded the firm of Ormiston and Renwick, seedsmen in Melrose. In 1814 he married Agnes Brown, who died in 1846. They had 3 sons and a daughter, with the eldest son, Archibald (b.1815) carrying on the seed business. A grandson, Charles Walter, died in Melrose, bequeathing money to found the Ormiston Institute and a public park. William (13th C.) younger son of William of Hownam and Landles and brother of John of Landles. He was great-grandson of the first Orm, after whom Ormiston on Kale Water was named. In about 1240 he witnessed a gift of the Church of Dalmeny from Roger de Moubray to Jedburgh Abbey and another undated charter for the same Roger de Moubray. He served as a juror in 1245. He was probably under the command of Patrick, 5th Earl of Dunbar, and was listed under his name in the pledge made around 1244. He was probably succeeded by Alan. William (15th/16th C.) recorded being in Makerstoun in 1502. Along with Thomas McDougall, in the same place, he was absent from 2 indictments given at Jedburgh, although the crimes are not recorded. William (16th C.) 2nd son of Robert of that Ilk and Elizabeth Rutherford. He was the first of the Ormistons of Westhouses near Melrose, and the Gattonside branch of the family. He was brother of Robert of Old Melrose and uncle of James of that Ilk, 'Black Ormiston'. He appears in many records from 1539 and is sometimes referred to as 'William with the heid'. He was implicated in the machinations following the murder of Darnley and banishment of the Earl of Bothwell, but was ultimately pardoned. William Douglas of Bonjedward was security for him in 1569. He married Katherine Nesbit and their sons Robert and James had to be legitimised because of the parents were related. William (17th C.) recorded in the 1663 Land Tax Rolls in Lilliesleaf. He paid tax on £104 for his part of Cringles. William (1779–1864) son of Walter and Betty Irwin and great-grandson of Robert. His elder brother James farmed at Boonraw. He is recorded at Boonraw on the 1799 and 1801 ballots for the Militia. He married Jane Graham in 1801 and emigrated to America a year later, settling near Bovina, Delaware County, New York. He had 2 sons and 5 daughters. William (1778–1859) son of Adam and and Esther Douglas, he was baptised in Wilton in 1778. He is probablty the William recorded at Tandlaw on the ballot for the Militia in Wilton Parish in 1799. On the 1801 Militia ballot he was described as son of 'Mr Ormston' at Drinkstone. He worked as a farm servant and died unmarried. He is probably the William living at Dykeneuk in 1841 and 1851. William (b.c.1770s) recorded at Tandlaw on the ballot for the Militia in Wilton Parish in 1799. He could be the son of Adam and Esther Douglas baptised in Wilton in 1778. William (18th/19th C.) son of Andrew from Hobkirk. He is recorded in the Lieutenancy Book for Roxburghshire in 1797. William (b.1807) 3rd son of James and Janet Reid. He may have been born in Southdean Parish. He was listed among heads of households in Wilton Kirk in 1835, being then at Lawrie's Den, and gardener at Hawick in 1840. In the 1841 census he was at Harwood as an agricultural labourer. In 1851 he was listed as a gardener at West Nisbet farm in Crailing Parish. He married Jessie Burton. Their children included: John (b.1834); Walter (b.c.1836); Elizabeth (b.c.1838); Helen (b.c.1840); George Henry (b.1842); Isabella (b.1843); James (b.1845); Mary; and Jessie. His children were born in Wilton, Hawick, Hobkirk, Southdean, Ancrum and Crailing Parishes. William (1818–64) eldest son of Robert, farmer at Drinkstone, and Helen Hall. He worked as a warehouseman. He married Jane Watson (from Annan), and they appear to have had no children. They are listed and on Walter's Wynd in 1851 and Melgund Place in 1861 (formerly written 'Ormeston', 'Ormestoun', 'Ormistone', 'Ormistoun', 'Ormistoune', 'Ormstone', and variants).

Ormiston Loch (or-mee-stin-loch) n. former name for a body of water near Ormiston farm, possibly corresponding to the pond to the east of Kaimend farm. It was 'Ormstoun Loch' in a description of Roxburghshire in 1649 and in 1866 J.A.H. Murray described plants found near there.

Ormiston Lochend see Lochend

Ormiston Lodge (or-mee-stin-loj) n. small building located at the crossroads just to the south of Ormiston House. Nichol Todd was there in the early 1900s.

Ormiston Mains (or-mee-stin-mānz) n. former name for a farm to the east of Ormiston, on the old Hawick to Newcastle road, now called Sunnyside. John Ormiston was there in 1684. John Ferguson was there in at least 1779–88. The farmer there in 1797 was Robert Murray and William Veitch was a servant there in 1799 (it is marked on Stobie's 1770 map and is 'Ormstown-mains' in 1797).

Ormiston Parkheid (or-mee-stin-pawrk-heed) n. former farm a little to the north-west of the main Ormiston farm. Francis Aitkin was there in 1779. There were Turnbulls there in the 1850s and Walter Scott was farmer in 1861. It is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map, and still appears on modern maps.

orpie-leaf (or-pee-leef) n., arch. orpine, live-forever, a flowering plant of the genus Sedum, having fleshy leaves and often found growing on old walls (also wurpie).

orpit (or-pee', -pi') pp., poet. discontented, peevish – ''What ails the orpit doyterd stycke', The kerlyn loudly said' [JTe].

Orr (ōr, or) n. Dr. James (1844–1913) born in Glasgow, son of engineer Robert and Montgomery Hunter. He became an apprentice bookbinder before training for the ministry, earning an M.A. from Glasgow University in 1870 and a B.D. in 1872. He was a probationer in Irvine before becoming minister of East Bank Church in 1874. Known as a Liberal, he campaigned for reducing liquor licences. In 1879 he helped draft the United Presbyterian declaration statement against total endorsement of Calvanism. He obtained a Doctorate of Divinity (by examination) from Glasgow in 1885. He was particularly outspoken in opposition to the Common Riding in the 1880s and 1890s. He was Chairman of Hawick School Board. In 1891 he was then elected Chair of Church History in the United Presbyterian College, Edinburgh and later Chair of Systematic Theology and Apologetics in the United Free College, Glasgow. He lectured in America in 1895 and 1897. He was a joint convenor of the United Presbyterian union (with the Free Church) committee in 1896. In 1874 he married Hannah Fraser, daughter of James Gibb. He published many theological works, including 'The Christian View of God and the World' (1893), 'The Ritschlian Theology and Evangelical Faith' (1897), 'Neglected Factors in the Study of the Early Progress of Christianity' (1899), 'The Progress of Dogma' (1901), 'The Problem of the Old Testament' (1905) and 'Revelation and Inspiration' (1910). In his last years he was general editor of the 'International Standard Bible Encyclopædia' (1915). He was a regular contributor to the London Quarterly Review and other magazines, and helped edit several magazines of the United Church. He died in Glasgow and is buried in Cathcart cemetery there. James (19th C.) became postmaster in Hawick in 1879. He married Euphemia Hamilton. His adopted daughter Ethel married Robert Richardson. John (b.c.1795) agricultural labourer in Ashkirk Parish. In 1861 he was at Ashkirk Cottage with his wife Mary, grand-daughter Mary and sister-in-law Margaret Welch. Thomas (b.1827/8) from Airdrie, he was farmer at West Riddell. He was there in 1861, farming 230 acres and employing 2 people. He was still there in 1868. His wife was Mary.

Orrock (o-ruk, o-reek) n. Rev. Alexander (1652–1711) first minister of Hawick Parish after the Revolution of 1688, serving from 1691 until his death. He was the son of Alexander from Fife, and Elizabeth, sister of Sir John Wemyss of Bogie. He studied at St. Salvator's College and St. Andrews University, where he graduated in 1668. How and where he spent the next 19 years is unknown, but was not licensed by St. Andrews Presbytery until 1687 (presumably because of the religious turmoil of the times). He became known as a staunch opponent of Episcopacy, and along with his friend Alexander Hamilton of Kinkel, was imprisoned on more than one occasion. In 1688, while he was minister in Dundee, he was removed for some statements (perhaps misinterpreted) he had made about the King, and imprisoned for a while. He was called to St. Andrews after the Revolution, in 1690, but rejected by the Synod there and so came to Hawick the following year. He was a member of the Assembly in 1692. In 1694 he was also called to Peebles, but after much discussion this was overruled by the Assembly. He also declined calls to Kelso (in 1701/2) and Muthill. In 1705, along with 2 local colleagues (Robert Cunningham of Wilton and Robert Bell of Cavers), he protested Acts passed by certain Synods, but not being a member of the Assembly they were removed, causing a major scene, with a reconciliation only affected after the King's advisors intervened. He is said to have been both rigid in discipline and extensive in charity. An example of his strict discipline occurred when he made the Town Magistrates wait until they had asked pardon of the Kirk Session on their uncovered knees, for some preceived offence against decency. He called a meeting of the Parish heritors in 1710 to stent themselves to pay the salary of the schoolmaster, this being essentially the founding of the Grammar school. The 'Orrock Bequest' was signed by him shortly before his death in 1711. He left 9,000 merks for the school (paying the salary for the schoolmaster and to teach poor children for free), as well as 1600 merks for the needy poor, and his extensive library for the use of the parishioners. Some of the volumes from this library were deposited with the National Library of Scotland in 1980. From his funds, the Orrock Bursary was competed for by local schoolchildren every 3 years until well into the 20th century. As a result of this benevolence the area around the Grammar School was named after him. He died unmarried. A memorial tablet was erected outside the church after his death, with a marble copy in the vestibule of the Old Parish Church (which incorrectly says he was a minister for 22 years and gives the date of his death 8 days late); it bears the likeness of his head, which is a very rare example of statuary from this period of Hawick's history. The heritors of the Parish gave money for his tombstone to be replaced in 1766. He also gave 4 inscribed silver communion cups to the Church in the 1790s and a silver baptismal basin made from melting down his silver spoons after his death, all of which are inscribed 'Ecclesiæ Havicensi' and the relevant date. In addition, a commemorative tablet was placed at the High School in 1932 by the Callants' Club. His only published work is 'Address to the General Assembly, 1705, against the Tyrannical Imposition of the Synod of Merse and Teviotdale'. Hector Heatley (d.1862) 2nd son of Edinburgh surgeon-dentist James, he trained as an architect. He designed the Leyden Monument, which was built in Denholm in 1861. His only other known structures are railway stations at Lartington, Appleby East and Kirkby East. He married Janet Reid and they had 1 son and 1 daughter. He died at the age of 31, before being able to establish himself. Henry (17th/18th C.) tailor in Hawick, presumably a relative of Rev. Alexander, perhaps his nephew (since the minister he was said to have died unmarried). He was recorded in 1694 owing 8 pounds for his Burgess fee. He witnessed baptisms for Walter Wilson in 1695, for Walter Scott in Goldielands in and for Andrew Wilson in Branxholme in 1696, for William Swan and for John Aitkin in 1698, for smith James Scott, for weaver John Jolly, for Walter Wilson, younger in Castlehill, for tailor Alexander Hislop, for Walter Riddel in Allanhaugh Mill and for Walter Purdom in 1700, for James Laidlaw in Branholme Town in 1702 (along with tailor Alexander Hislop), for merchant Walter Weens in 1704, for shoemaker George Oliver, carrier Robert Scott (in Branxholme), tailor James Cowan in 1705, for gardener James Dunn in 1707, for Alexander Ogilvie in 1708, for tailor Walter Riddell in 1709, for herd John Turnbull and weaver Alexander Hislop in 1710, for Thomas Anderson in Branxholme Town and for carrier Walter Deans in 1713, for shoemaker Walter Scott in 1714, for gardener Walter Paterson in 1715, for William Hislop in 1716, tailor Thomas Wilkie in 1723, for Town Officer John Stewart, for maltman John Moss and for Thomas Wilkie in 1725, for several people in 1726, and for Alexander Purdom and flesher Robert Wilson in 1728. In 1728 he witnessed a baptism for George Scott and Janet Orrock, who was surely a relative (perhaps his sister); he was there recorded as 'Eld:', presumably meaning he was a Kirk Elder. He seems to have served as a kind of general-purpose witness for baptisms. He also witnessed baptisms for mason Andrew Turnbull, for William Gledstains and for John Telfer in 1732, and for carter Adam Scott in 1733. He was recorded as a tailor in 1702 and 1709. He was 'servitor to our late minister' recorded in the Kirk Session records of 1711. He was also Treasurer for Hawick Parish Session in the 1720s and 30s and was made an Elder of the Kirk in 1723. In 1727 he was recorded as one of the 'tacksmen' s of the weigh-house, which was on the ground floor of the Tolbooth. He married Helen Scott in Hawick in 1706 and their children included Henry (b.1707); and Janet (b.1709). The witnesses in 1709 were Bailies Walter Elliot and Robert Ruecastle. Janet nee Ogilvie (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick, mentioned in a court case of 1815, when Henry Stockwell (servant to a Hawick butcher) was found not guilty of assaulting her 'with intent to ravish'. Her name is given as 'Janet Ogilvie, or Orrock'. She was probably daughter of George Ogilvie and Margaret Learmond, born in Hawick in 1780. She married Adam and had a daughter Jean in Kelso in 1811 (also sometimes spelled 'Orrok').

the Orrock Bequest (thu-o-ruk-bee-kwest) n. deed signed by Alexander Orrock in April 1711 and registered in Edinburgh in June after his death. As part of his will he thus gave bonds for the benefit of the Schoolmaster, which essentially allowed for the continuing prosperity of the newly founded Grammar School. The 9,000 merks sum came initially from: Gideon Scott of Falnash (for Buccleuch), 5,000; Adam Elliot, younger of Arkleton and his brother William Elliot together, 2,000; Walter Scott of Woll and Sir William Scott of Harden together, 1,000; and Sir Walter Riddell of that Ilk, 1,000. Conditions of the Bequest included: that the principal was never to be touched; that there was an obligation to teach for free poor children who 'have a genius for learning'; and that the Scotts of Buccleuch were to formally have control over the appointment of the Schoolmaster. It was witnessed by Robert Scott, minister of Roberton and Robert Cunninghame, minister of Wilton. The Bequest was administered by appointed trustees for the next century and a half. They contributed to the rebuilding of St. Mary's Kirk in 1763. There was dispute over the heritors choosing to build the parish school on Orrock Place, without reimbursing the bequest. The money was invested in Government Stocks in 1806. The bequest was transferred to the School Board and turned into a bursary fund in 1886. It was then transferred to the County in 1908, but still used for Hawick High School bursaries. A separate part of the bequest was the use of Orrock's library of ancient theological books for each subsequent minister; this collection remained in a cupboard in the vestry until transferred to the National Library of Scotland in 1980.

Orrock Halls (o-ruk-halz) n. name adopted for Orrock Church after it closed in 1951. It became associated with St. Mary's Church. It was used for church events (including discos) long after the church itself closed. It was partly converted for business use by Murray Brothers in 1990, and has also housed a cafe at basement level. It is a grade C listed building.

Orrock Kirk (o-ruk-kirk, o-reek-kirk) n. church built in Orrock Place in 1874 as the new premises for the 'Green Kirk' First Secession Church congregation. It was built right down to the riverside, which is unusual in Hawick. The masons were the local firm of George Tait. The site had formerly held a public wash-house. A pipe organ was installed in 1928. The church united with St. Mary's in 1951. The building became renamed 'Orrock Halls' after the church closed, and continued to be used for church functions. The former manse was then sold to the Council, who used it to house teachers. From around 1990 the former church building has been used as a knitwear factory showroom and adjacent tea-room. More recently it housed Wellness Borders and Martinshouse Equestrian. It is a category C listed building. A roll of the ministry is: Thomas Cockburn 1874–1905; James Steedman 1906–25; Peter Revie 1926–31; Robert Kirkland 1932–39; Robert Arthur 1939–45; Hendry P. Williams 1945–50.

Orrock Kirk Mutual Improvement Society (o-ruk-kirk-mew-choo-ul-im-proov-min'-su-sI-i'-ee) n. former organisation associated with Orrock Church, operating around 1900.

Orrock Place (o-ruk-plis, o-reek-plis) n. street between the Sandbed and the Albert Bridge, known by that name since the end of the 17th century, after Rev. Alexander Orrock. It was the site of the old Grammar School, a carpet factory and later the Orrock Church. The street is essentially the western part of the Sandbed and was named around 1840. Originally the name was used for the western side, which was separated from the other side of the Sandbed by the central block of houses (later removed). The name 'Teviot Brig Road' was also used. This general area was a detached portion of Wilton Parish until moved by the Boundary Commission in 1890. A gap site was built up by the council in 1960 between the Ewe and Lamb and the old Grammar School. There was a public weighing machine there in the 19th century.

Orrock Place Kirk (o-ruk-plis-kirk) n. another name for Orrock Kirk.

Osbert (oz-bur') n. (d.1174) Prior of Jedburgh who became the first Abbot when it was rasied to an Abbey in 1147. He was Abbot when he witnessed the renewal of the grant of Ringwood to Melrose Abbey in the late 1160s and the confirmation afterwards.

Osborne (oz-bōrn) n. Rev. James (d.1711) educated at Glasgow University, he is sometimes said to have been an ousted minister of Cavers Parish who held secret sermons during the Covenanting days. However, he was actually a private chaplain to the Douglas family, working as tutor to the children of Sir William Douglas. He was said to have given conventicles locally in the 1670s. Douglas was summoned in 1676 to answer the charge of illegally having a chaplain without a licence from the Bishop, and both men were 'put to the horn as outlaws'. He survived until the Revolution and was ordained as minister at Kilmarnock in 1688. In 1697 he was appointed minister at Greyfriars in Aberdeen and also Professor of Divinity at Marischal College. It was said that he returned to Cavers several times to preach. His children included: William, also a minister; James; and Alexander.

Osburn (oz-burn) n. John (18th C.) baker in Hawick. In 1755 he married Isabel Turnbull. Their children included: John (b.1757); Elizabeth (b.1759); Christian (b.1760); Martha (b.1762); Elizabeth (again, b.1764); Joanna (b.1766); Martha (again, b.1771); and John (again, b.1772). The witnesses in 1757 were the whole conregation, in 1764 were Bailies Turnbull 'older and younger', in 1766 were Bailie Turnbull Senior and Bailie Turnbull Junior, in 1771 were Bailie Turnbull of [probably Fenwick] and another Bailie and in 1772 were Bailie Turnbull of Fenwick and James Turnbull. In 1762 and 1766 he himself witnessed baptisms for wright Walter Scott (this is presumably a variant of Osborne).

Osna (oz-na) n. poetic name for the Oxnam Witter – 'Sweet Osn'a stream, by thin-leav'd birch o'erhung, No more should roll her modest waves unsung' [JL].

Ossian (o-shee-in) n. legendary bard who lived in either Scotland or Ireland around the 3rd century, supposedly blind and the son of Fingal '... Who sing the strains That Ossian sung, Your courage ne'er was tame, You will fight for Scotland's glory, you will die to shield her fame' [JoHa], – 'Give me the hills where Ossian lies And Coila's Minstrel sang' [HSR].

oster (os-tur) n., arch. oyster – 'For osters and winiker brandi and spis [£] 0. 6. 0.' [BR1691].

ostler (ost-lur) n., arch. an innkeeper, keeper of a hostelry – '... that if any ostler sell aill to any person in time of preaching or examine, he shall pay 20s for the first fault, toties quoties' [Ash1640], '... summoned Isobel Cranston, the ostler, for selling aill after sunset ...' [Ash1642], '... holding out his hands as ostlers do when seeking to entice an an unhaltered horse with a gowpen fu' the Ostler Well (thu-ost-lur-wel) n. former name for a spring, probably in the north part of the farm of Mabonlaw. It was described in 1765 as lying close to the western boundary of Wilton common.

Oswald (oz-wald) n. (604–642) King of Bernicia from about 635, when he defeated Cadwalla, until he was killed at the battle of Maserfrith. He was son of Æthelfrith of Bernicia and Acha of Deira and would have been Hawick's King. He was the first Bernician ruler to accept Christianity and is also known as 'St. Oswald'. The Hawick area probably made the main conversion to Christianity during his reign. St. Cuthbert's Church contains a statue of the Saint holding the head of Oswald in his left hand. His head is supposed to have been buried along with St. Cuthbert at Lindisfarne for safety, and thereafter it became a symbol of the Saint.

Otterburn (o'-ur-burn) n. village in Redesdale, where the Otter Burn meets the River Rede, site of the 1388 Battle of Otterburn, the details of which were recorded in a 14th century Latin poem and later romanticised in a ballad. A group of Scots (specifically James Douglas, the Earl of Moray and the Earl of Buchan) met at Southdean Kirk to plan an unofficial invasion of England. They taunted Percy at Newcastle, taking his standard, but on the way back were surprised by the English force at Otterburn. They fought in the moonlight, the Scots winning, Douglas being mortally wounded. But because (it is said that) he hid his condition from his men it is said that 'a dead man won the field'. Hundreds, perhaps thousands, were killed on both sides. The Scots also captutred Henry Percy ('Hotspur') and Sir Ralph Percy. The Scots version is told in 'the Ballad of Otterburn' (sometimes called 'The Lammas tide') and the English version in 'Chevy Chase'. The ruins of Southdean Church were dedicated as a memorial to the Battle in 1910. The battle site itself is marked by a monument in a small wooded area off the main road. Some relics, said to be from the battle, were long preserved at Cavers House. Tradition says that the Douglas banner was carried by a Stavert – 'The deed was done at the Otterbourne About the breaking of the day; Earl Douglas was buried at the braken bush, And the Percy led captive away' [T], 'In vain! – his standard's sink! – his squadrons yield; – His bowmen fly: – a dead man gains the field' [JL].

Otterhole Sike (o'-ur-hōl-sīk) n. stream in the upper Borthwick valley, to the north-east of Craik village. It flows southwards to join the Dirthope Burn, which then flows into the Borthwick Water. On the west side are the remains of an ancient earthwork, about 64 m by 43 m, formed by an earthen bank with an outer ditch. It has been mutilated by forestry trenches.

otterhoond (o'-ur-hoond) n. otterhound, a large hound with a shaggy coat, bred for otter hunting in the early 19th century. The practice was justified to protect fishing, and involved men following the hounds on foot and horseback. The most famous local proponent of the sport was Hawick's Dr. John Grant, who lived at the top of Walter's Wynd. The Border Magazine of 1904 describes a particular hunt which he led in 1863, in which his dogs tracked an otter from Burnfoot down the Teviot as far as Spittal-on-Rule, where it was killed. The practice achieved its height of popularity in the early 20th century, and was declared illegal in the 1970s, when otters became protected.

Outerside (ow-, oo-tur-sīd) n. farmstead in the Borthwick valley, roughly opposite Philhope, and reached by a track on the right-hand side of the road after Hoscote. These may be the lands of 'Ughtredshaghe' which were granted by Margaret, mother of Henry Lovel, to Jedburgh Abbey at its foundation around 1140 (as confirmed in about 1170). It seems likely to be the place transcribed as 'Hendentheythe' or 'Heudouchheyth' in 1317, when part of the common attached to it and Girnwood, previously belonging to Adam of Hoddam, was granted to William Barbour. It was probably the 'Ochturhyud' (also transcribed as 'Ochtirheuyd') recorded as granted to Marion Comyn, widow of John de Langlands in 1363. The lands of 'Uchterseatmylne' are listed among those granted to Sir William Wardlaw of Wilton in about 1400; this suggests that there was once a mill there. These were probably the lands of 'Jacobo de Wchtersyde' who witnessed a sasine at Milsington in 1453. The lands were owned by Walter Scott of Synton in the early 16th century and Sir Walter of Howpasley in the later 16th century. A bond of 1569, signed in Hawick, lists all of the tenants there, namely 'Thomas Broun, Jokke Howatsone, Hobbe Broun, Dand Huntar, Alexander Armestrong, Will Pairman, Cristie Pairman, Hob Jaksoun, Watt Litill, Jok Hall, Watt Runseman, Jak Reid, Jokke Scot, Eling Dun, Will Greif, Thome Greif, Johe Gledstanis, George Stevinsone, Pait Stevinsone, Pait Reid, Johnne Glendonyng, Alexander Mylne, Will Turnbull'. Walter Scott of Synton redeemed 500 merks on these lands with William Elliot of Falnash in 1605. George Scott of Synton inherited the lands from his father Walter Scott of Synton in 1610. 'Rowie' Scott 'in Vttersyde' is recorded in 1616. Liferent was granted to Margaret Maxwell when she married William Elliot, younger of Falnash, in 1635. Margaret Haswell (perhaps the same Margaret), liferenter there, was one of the main landowners in Wilton Parish in 1643, her lands being valued at £360. There were 15 'communicants' recorded there in 1650, namely Robert Nichol, Janet Clerk, Francis Nichol, William Pott, margaret Nichol, Margaret 'Randie', Rebecca Hislop, John Renwick, Walter Scott, Bessie Hislop, William Scott, Margaret Hislop, Mungo Dalgleish and Isobel Armstrong. Gavin Elliot of Outersiderig paid land tax in Wilton Parish on lands valued at £360. Gideon Scott of Outerside witnessed a baptism in Hawick in 1687. In 1689 Gideon of Outerside gained other lands, and became known thereafter as Gideon of Falnash. 10 separate households were listed there in 1694. It was part of Wilton Parish before Roberton was formed in 1689/90. The lands were leased by James Scott of Shielswood in 1692. In 1701 the Laird's seats in Roberton Kirk are recorded being the 3 feet to the east of the little door. James Dalgleish was recorded there in 1710, William Armstrong and Robert Scott in 1711, Robert Nichol in 1712, Thomas Helm in 1713, John Murray in 1715–17, James Grieve in 1718, John Scott and James Scott in 1720 and Adam Dalgleish in 1725–27. Adam Pott (probably the same as Adam of Hoscote) was recorded as Laird there among Commissioners of Roxburghshire in 1761. James Nichol was there in 1762–65 and James Dalgleish in 1763–66. It belonged to George Stavert (incorrewctly transcribed 'Stewart' in one record) in the valuation of Roberton Parish of 1788, when it is listed as 'Outerside, or Outersiderig, formerly in Wilton', with a value of £360. John Henderson was living there in 1788 and James Thomson in 1793. In the 1811 Land Tax Rolls, 'Outerside, or Outerside-rig' had the same value and was owned by Adam Stavert of Hoscote. Farm labourer Alexander Armstrong and his family were there in 1841. John Brown was there in 1872 when he donated the 'upper stone of bowl-shaped quern' found when casting peats on the farm. By about 1874 it was listed as owned by Archibald Stavert. Outerside Rig is the hill above, reaching 264 m and containg a fort and cairn (formerly spelled 'Utterside' etc., it is probably 'Ughtredshaghe' or 'Ughtredesxaghe' in c.1140 and 1170, 'Ochturhyud' in 1363, 'Uchterseatmylne' in c.1400, 'Wchtersyde' in 1453, 'Vttersyde' in 1616, 'outersyde rige' in 1678, 'Uttersyde' in 1688, 'Outersyde' in 1692 and 1694, 'uterside' in 1710, 'utterside' in 1712, 'Outersiderige' in 1718, 'Outersyd' in 1733, 'Uterside' in the 1740s, 'Outterside' in 1761 and 'Utterside' in 1762 and 1788; it is marked on a 1650 parish map as 'Utersyde', on Blaeu's 1654 map as 'Outersyide'; based on the earliest spellings the origin seems likely to be 'Uchtred's haugh').

Outerside (oo-tur-sīd) n. James (15th C.) witness in 1453 to a sasine exchanging the lands of Milsington with those of Wester Heap, between the Langlands and Scott families. He is recorded as 'Jacobo de Wchtersyde', and it seems likely his lands were those of Outerside, just up the Borthwick from Milsington.

Outerside Rig (ow-tur-sīd-rig) n. elongated hill above Outerside, reaching a height of 264 m and containing a fort. The name was also formerly used for the farm at Outerside. The hill contains the remains of a hill-fort at the east of the ridge, possibly dating from the early Iron Age. Much obliterated by cultivation, it consists of inner and outer ramparts and a ditch. In the inside may be signs of a hut circle, while just outside is a possible enclosure (spelled 'Uttersydrigg' and variants in early documents; it is 'Outersidrige' in 1528/9, 'Outarsyderige' in 1610, 'Uttersiderigg' in 1643 and 'Outersiderige' in 1718).

Outersideshiel (ow-tur-sīd-sheel) n. former steading high above Outerside. On Ainslie's 1773 map it is marked on the south side of the Hoscote Burn near Girnwood Linn. David Scott was there in 1737. Thomas Glendinning was there in 1763–66, James Glendinning in 1775, Thomas Broad in 1781 and Thomas Glendinning in 1797 (it is 'Utterside shiel' in 1763 and 'Uttersideshiel' in 1775, 1780 and 1797).

the Outlaw Murray (thu-ow'-law-mu-ri, -oo'-) n. fanciful story about a leader of the Murrays in Ettrick Forest, popularised in the ballad of the same name, and having some basis in historical fact. Murray refused to pay homage to the King, but eventually gave in after being appointed Sheriff of Ettrick Forest. This probably referred to John Murray of Falahill (nephew of the Rector of Hawick), in the latter part of the 15th century.

outmost (ow'-mōst) n., arch. utmost, greatest limit – 'The whilke day Walter Purdom, late baylyea in Hawick, acted himselfe to follow out and pursew to the outmost the cramineall persut . . . ' [BR1686].

outred (ow'-red) v., arch. to clear a debt, settle obligations, discharge, disentangle, pp. disentangled, extricated – 'Aw canna conceive hoo they aw got tae bed Unless the confushion was somehow outredd' [BM1900].

ouwn (own) v., arch. to own, confess, admit – '. . . for A'll ouwn A was dry again . . . ' [ECS] (cf. own).

oux (owks) n., poet. an ox – 'Thus thaye changet thair glorie intil the lykeniss o' ane oux that eets gerse' [HSR] (the plural is owsen).

Ovens (o-vinz) n. James (17th C.) recorded as 'James Owen in Birk hill' in 1684 when, along with many others, he was declared a rebel for refusing to conform to Episcopalianism. He may be an ancestor of the Hawick blacksmith. James (b.1818) from Selkirk, son of Thomas and Isabella Murdock. He was a blacksmith in Hawick in the 1800s, with an appropriate name. He lived at the Round Close in 1841, the Backdamgate in 1851 and 3 Silver Street in 1861. In 1840 he married Helen Pow, a daughter of William, blacksmith at Borthaugh Woodfoot. Their children included: Mary (b.c.1841); Elizabeth (b.c.1844); Helen (b.c.1847); John (b.1855), also a blacksmith; William Pow (b.1858) and James (b.1861). He was an elder with the Relief Kirk. John (b.1855) son of James and Helen Pow. He was a blacksmith in Hawick, like his father. He was at 5 Howegate in 1881, 3 Buccleuch Street in 1891 and 11 Sandbed in 1901. He married Helen Wright, from Lockerbie, and they had a daughter Jane A. Thomas (17th C.) resident at Side in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Thomas (b.1813/4) from Prestonpans, he was a gardener and forester living at Woll (probably the stables) in 1851. His wife was Catherine and their children included Janet, James, Thomas, John, Robert, Andrew and another son.

Ovenshank (o-vin-shawngk) n. small farm in Liddesdale, just north of the Liddel, to the west of the site of Liddel Castle. It is probably the place recorded as 'Vnsthank' in the 1541 rental roll, listed between 'Coklaik' and 'Powis'; it was vacant at that time. Robert Nichol was there in 1821. James Wilson lived there in 1841, with his son Andrew there in 1861 and there were also 3 huts there housing railway workers on the 1861 census (it is marked on Stobie's c.1770 map; it has been suggested that the name has a similar origin to 'Unthank').

Over see Ower

Overchester (ō-vur-ches-tur) n. lands that were tenanted by Turnbulls in 1516 when several members of that family were identified as being there when they had remission for assisting Alexander, Lord Home. It appears that Mark Turnbull was the main tenant, along with his brother Archibald, and son Mark younger, as well as Richard, David, William, John, Andrew, Andrew's son Thomas, and Ninian. It is unclear where this place was, perhaps part of Chesters in Southdean.

overgave (ō-vur-gāv) pp., arch. gave up, relinquished – 'Compeared the haill Council, and voluntarily of their awin free will renuncit and overgave their quarterings of the soldiers to the town's use . . . ' [BR1644].

Overhaa (ō-vur-haw) n. Overhall, farm just behind Wilton Dean. The name dates back to at least the 16th century. In 1569 the superiority of the lands (along with Wilton Green and Wiltonburn) was inherited by Grizel Borthwick from her father Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch. In 1586 the lands are among those given in 'liferent' to Margaret Ker as part of the marriage contract with Walter Scott of Buccleuch. In 1601 they were inherited by Walter Cairncross from his uncle Walter, brother of Robert of Colmslie. The farm was among the Wilton Parish possessions of the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1653, 1661 and 1663. There were 10 'communicants' recorded there in 1650, namely Robert Scott, William Scott, Margaret Turnbull, Marion Martin, Margaret Langlands, Isobel Swan, Janet Scott, Walter Scott, Adam Scott and Marion Henderson. James and Adam Scott each leased half the farm in 1690 and 1692 and were recorded as householders there in around 1694. In at least the period 1694–98 the farm was leased half by Walter Scott, 'Chief', and half by Adam Scott. The farm was surveyed in 1718 along with other properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch; it extended to 120 acres and was bounded by Langlands, the River Teviot, Borthaugh and Brieryhill. The farmhouse is shown near the foot of the Wilton Burn on the western side. William Scott was a servant there in 1723. Adam Easton was there in 1723–25, Robert Ballantyne in 1724, James Scott in at least 1732–41, Robert Easton in 1739 and John Clerk in 1752. George Lorraine was tenant in 1764. The lands were valued at £23 in 1764, as part of the Buccleuch estates. Andrew and Thomas Easton were farmers there in 1797, with 2 work horses each. John Symington was a servant there in 1799. Joiner Adam Riddell lived there around 1840. Adam Easton was farmer in 1841 and in 1851, when the farm covered 62 acres. A doll's house, originating here in about 1880, is in the Museum. A hill there was used as a track for motor-cycle events in the first half of the 20th century (also referred to as 'Everhaa'; it is written 'Vuerhall' in 1569, 'Ovirhall' in 1586 and 'Over hahall' in 1690; it is marked on Gordon's c.1650 maps as 'Ovirhall' and Blaeu's 1654 map as 'O. Hall').

Overhaa Crescent (ō-vur-haw-kre-sin') n. cul-de-sac in Wilton Dean, built in 1971 and named after the nearby farm.

Overhaa Road (ō-vur-haw-rōd) n. main road west through Wilton Dean, named after the nearby farm. New housing was built there in 1970. The wooded hill above this road contains an oval earthwork, about 90 m by 50 m, consisting of a single rampart. Its situation does not appear very defensive, so it has not been classified as a fort. The interior and parts of the rampart have been destroyed by quarrying. There are also remains of a probable homestead on a shelf below the summit. This measures 33 m by 27 m, with no internal features and an entrance in the north-east.

overly (ō-vur-lee) adv., arch. by chance – 'I happened overly to say that I had seen him there' [JAHM].

Over Newhaa see Ower Newhaa

overplus (ō-vur-plus) n., adj., arch. surplus, excess – 'Substraction is to draw a small sume from a great. The overplus or quhat remains just underneath you set' [HAST1917].

the Overseas Night (thu-ō-vur-seez-nī') n. properly called the Civic Reception for Returned Teries, an evening of entertainment for exiled Teries, taking place in the Town Hall on the Wednesday of Common Riding week. It was inaugurated in 1936. It is an event reserved for distant visitors and their guests. The Cornet, Cornet's Lass, Acting Mother and Acting Father greet the visitors and the Honorary Provost gives a speech summarising the highlights of the year for the Town. There then follows a schedule of songs and recitations. The names of the 'Exiles' are read and each of them stand to be recognised. The Maids of Honour serve refreshments and the evening ends with 'Teribus' and 'Cornet's Up' (also sometimes called 'the Exile's Night').

Overton (ō-vur-tin) n. late 16th century ruined tower near Camptown, about 5 miles south of Jedburgh, burnt by Hertford's men in 1545. There were Elliots there in the 18th century. John Rutherford of Edgerston owned the lands in the late 18th century. The farm of 'Overton Bush' is recorded since at least the late 18th century and is still marked on the Ordnance Survey maps (the origin of the name is probably simply 'the upper farm' in Old English and first occurs in the late 16th century).

Ovid (ō-vid) n. Adam (11th/12th C.) priest associated with Glasgow and St. Andrews Dioceses. His name is recorded as 'Ada Onidius' and other variants, with his surname even being mistranscribed as 'Guidone'. His designation was presumably related to his fondness for the works of Ovid. He was brother of Laurence of Thornton, who was Archdeacon of St. Andrews, and his name occurs as a witness in St. Andrews documents from about 1203. He may have been witness to documents earlier than this under a different designation. He was 'Master' from at least 1203, although it is unclear where he studied. He witnessed 10 or so documents associated with the Bishops of St. Andrews in the period 1203–20. He was recorded holding the Vicarage of Hobkirk in 1220, when there was a revision to the rights and duties of the Vicar there. It has been suggested that he could be the same man as Adam of Perth or Walpole, or alternatively Adam Baggatte.

o'w (ow) contr. of us – 'the baith o'w', 'that'll be the end o'w' (note sometimes pronounced as the two syllable u-oo or o-oo, but other times shortened to ow).

owcht (owcht) pres. part., arch. owns – 'Whae's owcht this' [GW] (cf. awe, aucht and ocht).

Owen (ō-in) n. James (17th C.) resident of Birkhill in Southdean. He is listed in 1684 among many Covenanter fugitives.

ower (ow-ur) prep. over – 'juist gaun ower the brig an turn left', 'pass eet ower here', 'A'm gaun ower ti Selkirk', 'And they flew oure sea, and the flew oure land, Oure mountain, holt, and town . . . ' [JTe], 'The case is common a' the world owre . . . ' [WL], used to describe a journey to a nearby valley – 'ower ti Selkirk', also used where other prepositions would be used in English, by, on – 'A spoke ti um ower the phone', 'hei was hut ower the heid wi a plank', from, out of – '... against these who were publickly read over from ye pulpit' [PR1715], adv., adj. too, over, over much – 'it's ower cauld ti gaun oot', 'ee've got ower muckle on yer plate', 'hei's faaen ower', '... thou anaintest my heæd wi' oolie; my cupp rins ower' [HSR], 'Tell'd owre ti 'im (= repeat it to him)' [GW], 'Rowin' owre an' owre' [GW], 'He fell back owre (= over on his back' [GW], '... poring ower oor programmes wi oor specs liftit, guzzling ice-cream afore it's ower derk tae sei' [JuH], n., arch. an excess or extreme – 'A' owres is ill [= are evil]' [JAHM] (also spelled 'owre' and occasionally 'oure' and 'uwr').

ower-an-abin (ow-ur-in-a-bin) adv. over and above – 'A made a faisable mael oot o peisoop ... wui twae rake o curny-dumpleen owre-an-abuin' [ECS].

owerance (ow-ur-ins) n., arch. mastery, control – 'Thou mædist him til hae owerance ower the warks o' thy han's ...' [HSR], '... howe lang sall the wicket glorie in the owerance?' [HSR], 'Juidin [Gideon] hes landed eis-sel in a guid job; hei hes the owrance o the hyill wareroom' [ECS], 'It's a gey guid yin, hir (her) ti heh the owrance on the gie-in oot o the pokes at oor swaree' [ECS], '... Wad tak the owerance o' aa, And fin' nae tawse for their pains' [WL] (also written 'owrance').

Ower Ancrum (ow-ur-awng-krum) n. Over Ancrum, name of the former settlement on the north side of the Ale Water. It is distinguished from Nether Ancrum, on the south side, which became the modern village of Ancrum. The 'Over' part was burned around the time of the battle of Ancrum Moor, which took place nearby, and never really recovered. Gavin Turnbull was tenant there and died in about 1574 (it is 'Over Ankcrum' in 1548/9; it is 'O: Ancrum' on Pont's map of c.1590, 'Ovir Ancrum' on Gordon's c.1650 maps, 'O. Ancrumm' on Blaeu's 1654 map and is still recorded as 'Upper Ancrum' on Stobie's 1770 map).

Ower Bonchester (ow-ur-bon-ches-tur) n. Over Bonchester, former farm near Bonchester, also referred to as 'Upper Bonchester'. In 1569 it was one of a set of lands acquired by Adam French from the monks of Jedburgh Abbey and in 1587 still part of the Lordship of Jedburgh when Alexander Lord Home inherited the superiority. In 1588 it is listed as being 'with woods'. It is possible that it corresponds to the remains of the farmstead on the north-west side of Bonchester Hill, near the head of Rob's Cleuch, some of the stones from which are built into nearby dykes (it is 'over Bunchester' in 1569 and 'Over Bunchester' in 1588).

Ower Boonraw (ow-ur-boon-raw) n. Over Boonraw, former name for a farmstead near the main Boonraw. It may corresond to the location of West Boonraw, which lies a little uphill from East Boonraw. Robert Storie was there in 1688.

ower-by (ow-ur-bI) adv., prep., arch. over the way, across to, towards, along – 'Dauvit had dwalt i' the Mid Raw And plied wi' his cairrier cairt Jinglin' raig'lar ilk a week Owre-bye the Copshaw airt' [DH].

Ower Closs (ow-ur-klōs) n. part of the former farm of Closs. 'Overcloss alias Milburnholme' was listed among the farms of the Duke of Buccleuch being let by public roup in Hawick in 1755 (it is 'Ouercloss' in the 1718 Buccleuch survey).

owercome (ow-ur-kum) v., poet. to overcome, overwhelm – 'Turn awa thyne eyne frae me, for thaye hae owercum me' [HSR], '... whan my hairt is owercum leed me til the rok that is heicher nor I' [HSR].

owercome (ow-ur-kum) n., poet. a sudden attack, refrain of a song – '... And syne the sough o' sadness she can share: But in her hert's the owrecome o' a sang' [WL].

owercomin (ow-ur-ku-min) n., poet. a crossing, the refrain of a song, repetition – 'But whan ye praey, usena vain ower-comein's, as the heathin do' [HSR].

owercuissen (ow-ur-ki-sin) pp., adj., arch. overcast – '... een as the flaam o the waather-gleam skails afore'd the cluds threh an owrecuissen lift' [ECS].

Ower Dykeraw (ow-ur-dīk-raw) n. Over Dykeraw, former name for part of the farm of Dykeraw in Southdean Parish. Gilbert Oliver was tenant there in 1541, paying 25s yearly. James Oliver was tenant in 1694. In 1799 James and John Oliver were tenants and John Ormiston a labourer at 'Upper Dykeraw' (it is 'Ovir Dykraw in 1541 and 'over dykra' in 1694).

owerfleet (ow-ur-flee') v., arch., poet. overflow – 'Letna the waterflude owerfleete me, næther let the deep swallie me up ...' [HSR].

owerflet (ow-ur-flee') pp., poet. overflowed – '... but the se owerflet thair enimies' [HSR].

ower fornent (ow-ur-for-nen') prep., arch. over against, facing – 'Gang intill the clauchan ower-fornent yow, an' strauchtwaye ye sall fin' ane ass tiet, an' ane cowt wi' her' [HSR].

Ower Foulwud (ow-ur-fowl-wud) n. Over Foulwood, former lands in Liddesdale, located somewhere along Foulwood Sike, while Nether Foulwood was near where it meets the Liddel Water, south of Mangerton. It is recorded on a rental roll of c.1376 as 'Foulwod superior' and valued at 10 shillings. In a rental roll of 1541 'Ouerfoulwod' was leased to Alexander Armstrong (probably son of 'Ill Will') and still valued at 10 shillings.

owergane (ow-ur-gān) pp., arch. elapsed, passed, especially in the phrase 'there's nae time owergane' – '. . . it was nae teime owregane or oo war birlin owre the Trow Burn leike five ell o wund' [ECS], overrun – 'Belgium's owregane wi the Germans' [GW].

owergang (ow-ur-gang) v., arch. to overwhelm, overflow, oppress, exceed – 'O ne'er let pride sae far o'ergang, to set yer mind a-langing . . . ' [JoHa], '. . . Oh goodness! let it ne'er o'ergang, Ayont repenting' [RDW], '. . . I am cum intil deep waters, whare the fludes ower-gang me' [HSR].

owerhang (ow-ur-hawng) v., arch. to overhang – 'As springs that gutter doon the hills, Atween owerhangin' fern and heather, To join their life wi' other rills, And wimple on as yin thegither' [JEDM] (also owerhing).

Ower Hallrule (ow-ur-haw-rool) n. Over Hallrule, former name for part of the farm of Hallrule, also called Outer Hallrule, in distinction to Inner Hallrule. It may also have been another name for Toon-o-Rule. In 1779 'Over-Halrule' was valued at £832 12s 5d. On the 1811 Land Tax Rolls 'part of Town-o'-Rule, or Over or Outer Halrule' is described.

Ower Harwud (ow-ur-har-wud) n. Over Harwood, former name for lands at Harwood on Teviot. It is unclear if the name referred to the whole of the later estate of Harwood, or just part of it. It was among the lands exchanged in 1446 with Lanarkshire lands between Inglis of Manor and Scott of Buccleuch; one quarter of the lands were included in this swap, with the owner of the other 3 quarters being unknown. In 1462 it was given as part of security for a loan, along with Dryden and Commonside, by Stephen Scott of Muirhouse to Robert Muir of Rowallan. The loan was fully paid by Robert Scott of 'Dogehauch' in 1477. It is listed among the lands held 'in tenancy' by the Baron of Hawick in 1511, 1572, 1594 and 1615, along with 'Nether Harwood' (it is 'Ouerharwode' in 1446, 'Vuer Harwod' in 1462, 'Vuer Herwod' in 1508/9, 'Vuir Harewod' and 'Uvire-Harwod' in 1511, 'Ovir Harwod' and 'Ouir Harwod' in 1572, 'Owir Harwoid' in 1594 and just 'Over Harwood' in 1615).

Ower Hassendean (ow-ur-haw-sin-deen) n. Over Hassendean, former farm in Hassendean, also once called 'Hassendean Lady Lands'. It is among the farms burned by the Earl of Hertford's men in 1545. Robert Scott owned the lands in 1574. Adam Turnbull, 'Reid Adie' was tenant there in 1576, when there was a promise that he would abstain from theft. 6 acres of land here were inherited by Sir William Douglas of Cavers in 1687 and by his brother Archibald in 1698. In 1692 Adam Scott had a new feu agreement with the Duchess of Buccleuch for the lands there, east and west syde thereof with the milne and maynes of the same'. In 1738 it consisted of 6 acres when it was purchased by Francis, Duke of Buccleuch, from Archibald Douglas of Cavers (see also Oor Lady Land; it is 'Over-hessington' in 1545, 'Over Hassindane' in 1574, 'Ovir Hassindane' in 1576 and transcribed 'Overbassenden').

owerheid (ow-ur-heed) adv., arch. at an average rate per head, in total – '. . . nyne new calfit ky, with thair followaris, price of the pece ourheid, five pundis' [SB1574], 'Item twa hors price of the pece ourheid 10 merkis summa 20 merkis Item foure oxin price of the pece ourheid £8' [SPB1579], 'Item, the number of tuo hundreth nolt, younger and elder, pryce of the piece therof ourheid tuentie merkes, summa' [SB1633].

owerheid (ow-ur-heed) adj., arch. overhead – 'For aa that the sun, hoisin itsel i the lift owerheed . . . ' [ECS].

Ower Heuchhoose (ow-ur-hewch-hoos) n. Over Heuchhouse, former name for part of the lands of Heuchhouse in Liddesdale. It was one of the farms possessed by Gavin Elliot in 1632, when recorded as 'Overheuchehous'.

owerhing (ow-ur-hing) v., arch. to overhang – 'A rock hangs nodding o'er its chrystal spring, And flow'rs, Narcissus-like, its waves o'erhing' [CPM] (owerhang).

Ower Holm (ow-ur-hōm) n. name for former lands in Liddesdale, recorded in 1541 as 'Avirholme'. It was valued at 40 shillings and tenanted by Andrew and Lancelot Forester. From its position in the list it must have been in the

the Ower Kirk (thu-ow-ur-kirk) n. former church in the Ewes valley, near the farm of Unthank, and distinguished from the 'Nether Kirk of the Ewes' further down the valley. It was dedicated to St. Mark and originally attached to Melrose Abbey. It appears to have been older than the Nether Kirk, dating back to at least the reign of Alexander III. It is probably the 'St Martin [sic] in Ewysdale' referred to when Edward II appointed priests in southern Scotland in 1319; the presentation to the vacant church was to John 'de Pontebrugge'. Patronage was long held by the Earl of Home, although there were no priests recorded there in the 16th century. The rights of the church are still listed in 1663 among the possessions of the Scotts of Buccleuch. It was abandoned at the Reformation and merged with the Nether Kirk, although the graveyard continued in use long afterward. The church bell (made in 1654 by John Monteith of Edinburgh) has also continued to be used, hung from the cleft in a nearby tree. Foundations of the church can be seen in the old churchyard. The churchyard contains an 18th century burial enclosure for the Aitchisons, and several other gravestones of a similar epoch, including an ornately carved grave slab for William Hutton and Jean Scott. An early chapel also stood near Ewes Doors, and this may also have been referred to as the 'Ower Kirk o Ewes' (it is 'over kirk of Ewiss' in 1663; it is marked 'Ovirkirk' on Gordon's c.1650 map and 'O. Kirk of Euss' on Blaeu's 1654 map).

Ower Kirkhope (ow-ur-kir-kup) n. Over Kirkhope, site of older church in the Ettrick valley, abandoned in favour of the new site probably in the mid-15th century. An early Christian grave marker was found near the ruins of the chapel and is in the National Museum (it is 'Kirklyp' on Gordon's c.1650 map and Blaeu's 1654 map).

It was surveyed in 1718 along with other properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch, consisting of 157 acres, bounded by Hawick Common, Nether Southfield and Newbigging. It has had a long ruined farmhouse, and is marked 'site of' on J.P. Alison's map of the Common in 1777. This land was owned by the Duke of Buccleuch for a long time and was once part of the Barony of Whitchesters. Simon Scott was tenant there in 1581, and other residents there were 'Watt Scot' and 'Syme Scott'. In 1627 it is described paying 'in stok and teynd 15 bolls; estimat in stok to 8, in parsonage 2 bolls, vicarage 3 lbs'. It was leased jointly to father and son called Robert Scott, with the other half to John Goodfellow in at least the period 1690–96. John Goodfellow and Robert Scott were there in 1694, with William Dalgleish listed there among 'the poor'. Gilbert Elliot rented the farm in 1698. Robert Tudhope was shepherd there in 1709. John Goodfellow and his son William were tenants in about 1713, William Martin in 1720 and William Hislop and William Turnbull in 1725. William Oliver was tailor there in at least 1722–38. It is probably the 'Upper' Southfield where James Douglas is recorded as farmer in 1797 (it is 'Oversouthfeild' in 1581, 'Oversouthfeild' in 1690 and 'over southfeild' in 1694).

[BW1978], arch. a dependant, hireling, someone given lands or otherwise retained for their military service (different spellings exist).

Painsioners o Buccleuch (pān-shi-nurz-ō-bu-kloo) n. list of 'four-and-twenty gentlemen' who were kept at the call of Scott of Buccleuch, according to Sir Walter Scott of Satchells. roughly. Each of these men received 'rooms' (i.e. small estates) for their service, some in earlier times, although the list probably relates to roughly the period 1580–1620. Some details may be incorrect, and some of the men are not otherwise recorded, but since they would have been known by Satchells' father, then it is almost a first-hand account. The list is: Walter Scott of Northhouse; Robert Scott of Allanhaugh; David Scott of Stobicote; David Scott of Raesknow; Robert Scott of Glack; William Scott in Hawick, called 'William in the Mott'; John Scott of Monk's Tower; Robert Scott of Easter Groundistone; James Scott of Alton Croft; Thomas Scott in Wester Groundistone; John Scott in Drinkstone; William Scott in Lees, 'alias Wilma', called 'of Catslac-know'; Robert Scott in Clarilaw; William Scott of Todshawhaugh; Andrew Scott of Todshawhill; John Scott of Stouslie; Scott of Whames; Scott of Castlehill; Walter Scott of Chapelhill; Robert Scott of Howford; Robert Scott of Satchells; Robert Scott of Langhope; William Scott, 'called Cut-at-the-black'; and Walter Gledstains of Whitlaw (the only one not of the surname 'Scott').

paintit (pān-tee', -ti') pp. painted – 'What! Luck, here too! thou paintit twa-faced randy, Squirting thy humbug i' my vera lug?' [JoHa].

pair (pār, per) adj. poor, pitiable – 'puir wee lamb', 'Syne rich and puir maun seek the Muir' [RH], 'I may be auld, I may be puir ...' [DH], 'You puir wee thing! To think that high abune us a' You sit your lane ...' [WFC], 'Clubs an pubs for puir chiels That need the noise and bustle' [WL] (also written puir, q.v., although this is no longer the local pronunciation).

the pair (thu-pār, -per) n. poor people. The Parish was responsible for its own poor people, but attitudes varied about providing assistance for beggars from elsewhere. The destitute tended to be naturally cared for during times of plenty, but struggled through leaner periods. Charges for hiring the 'mort-cloth' were used to help the poor, as well as fines imposed on transgressors in the Parish. In addition, the general practice was for half of the church collection to go for poor relief in each Parish, with any additional amount required being collected from the heritors. An Act of the Justices of the Peace of Roxburghshire of 1725 required the poor to be listed, and those able to beg were issued with a special badge (which had to be returned when the needful period was deemed to be over). In the 18th century it was the custom in Hawick for the destitute to go begging on Saturdays. An 'account of the poor's account' is mentioned in the Town Treasurer's book for 1746. The first mention of 'the poor's stent' on the inhabitants of Hawick was in 1749 (perhaps amounting to 1/4 of the total, the rest presumably raised by the Kirk Session). A list of the poor was drawn up in 1771. In 1784 it was resolved not to levy the poor rate according to means, but just according rental values. This arrangement lasted for 60 years, with these burghal fees latterly corresponding to 1/3 of the assessment for the whole Parish. In 1789 the assessment was 11 pence for each pound of rental value, increasing to 1s. 6d. in 1798, 2s. 4d. in 1801 (a year of famine) and then 21 d. by 1814. Before about 1790 (perhaps around 1770) all the poor of Hawick Parish were buried in the same coffin, which had a false bottom. The need to support the poor led parishes to insist on incomers providing a certificate from their previous location; sometimes people's belongings would be sold off in order for them to be allowed to remain on the list. In the countryside, sick or injured beggars would be transported from farm to farm, often on a handcart; a story is told of an old lady being carried from Burnhead to Galalaw, but complained to the young farm-boy about the rough ground, at which he abandoned her 'to find her way herself, which she would easily do'. In the 1830s in Haawick there were about 150 people on the permanent roll and another 400 or so occasional paupers who were supported by the Parish. There were continual debates about whether the financial provisions were too little or too much. The Hawick Parochial Board was set up to administer support for the poor in 1845. The Combination Poorhouse (covering 11 parishes) was built off what would become Drumlanrig Square in 1856. Frank Hogg wrote an article,'Notes on Laws and Customs Relating to the Poor' in 1876 – '... But, oh! the rich can never ken The hardships o' the puir' [TCh].

pairadise (pā-ru-dīs) n., arch. paradise – '... bit that i thir days juist gae keeks inti a yirthly pairideise' [ECS].

the Pairhoose (thu-pār-hoos) n. the Combination Poorhouse, which became Drumlanrig Hospital. The old name was still used long after it had ceased to be a poor-house. Governors include: William Drysdale (1850s); John Smeaton (1860s); Adam Grierson (1870s and 80s); James Scott (late 19th C.); Richard Telford (until 1892); and James Fleming Boyd (early 20th C.).

pairish (pā-reesh) n. a parish. Parishes were originally developed as part of the feudal system, with nobles and knights who received grants of land in the 10th and 11th centuries setting up churches and tithing themselves and their tenants to support a minister. The boundaries were thus determined by the extent of these collective lands, explaining why they often had detached portions. The parish churches were deprived of much of their income during the age of the great monasteries. Parish boundaries were altered over the centuries, often in response to population changes, but they typically retain some vestige of their origins – 'Rob Tinlin whae was the toon's officer an the pairish beadle' [HEx1965], '... Hawick hed lost naething be allowin the pairish o' Wultin teh provide a Cornet for the first time!' [BW1974], 'Weel, the pairish yird's my kind Thegither, gey plain –' [DH] (cf. the older parishin).

Pairish (pā-reesh) n. James (18th C.) gardener at Knowe in Minto Parish, when he was working for Thomas Turnbull.

the Pairish (thu-pā-reesh) n., arch. euphemism for the Poorhouse – '... it meant Jethart Jail for themselves and 'the parish' for their dependents' [JTu].

the Pairish (thu-pā-reesh) n. popular name for Hawick Old Parish Church (when it wasn't 'old').

the Pairish Cooncil (thu-pā-reesh-koon-sul) n. former organisation dealing with health and social matters. It replaced the Parochial Board in 1894, and was in turn replaced by County Council responsibilities around 1929. Their meetings took place on the third floor of the Town Hall and they had offices at 12 Allars Crescent.

Pairish Halls (pā-reesh-halz) n. the Halls of the Old Parish Church, on the corner of Buccleuch Street and Buccleuch Place. Built in 1885, the land was previously used as a garden. It is a grade C listed building.

the Pairish Kirk (thu-pā-reesh-kirk) n. another name for the Auld Pairish Kirk or formerly for St. Mary's – 'The Parish Church of Hawick stands on a considerable eminence . . . but alas! the fabric, with the old spire attached to it, is more like a farmer's granary or barn, with a huge steam chimney stuck upon it, then a temple of devotion . . . ' [RW], '. . . Pairish Kirk is hooses now Folk irni the same somehow' [IWL].

pairk (pārk) n. a park, enclosed field – '. . . telld the coorse o bonnie Teviot, wumplin bye paster an pairk an bussy dean' [ECS], 'Yince upon a lang time ago, when wast end pairk was flatter . . . ' [MB] (see park and cf. perk).

the Pairk (thu-pārk) n. popular name for Wilton Lodge Park – '. . . but for sic a monument as th' committei hae decided on, aw'm thinkin' th' Pairk wad bei th' place for it' [BW].

Pairky-Aathing's (pār-kee-aw-thingz) n. shop, which was also known as 'J. Lynch', or 'Miss Lynch's', at 19 High Street, near the Round Close. It closed in 1989.

pairliment (pār-li-min') n. parliament.

pairls (pā-rulz) n., arch. paralysis, palsy (also paralsie and perils).

pairlt (pā-rul') adj., arch. affected by palsy, paralysed, having uncontrolled tremors – 'Ther chafts war ditherin an bevverin leike as thay war pairlt' [ECS] (also written 'pairl't'; cf. perlt).

pairly (pār-lee) adj. poorly, not well – 'she's been awfi pairly, ee ken', adv. in poverty, wretchedly, poet. feebly, softly – 'Young Branxholm turn'd him, and oft looked back, And aye he passed from tree to tree; Young Branxholm peeped, and puirly spake, O sic a death is no for me!' [JL].

Pairman (pār-mun) n. William 'Will' (16th C.) tenant of Sir Walter Scott of Howpasley in the lands of Outersideig in 1569. Sir Walter acted as cautioner for his tenants at a meeting in Hawick, assuring that they would obey the laws of the Lord Regent. He was surely related to Christie, who was also listed. Christopher 'Christie' (16th C.) tenant in Outersiderig, for whom Sir Walter Scott of Howpasley stood as cautioner in 1569. He was listed as 'Cristie' right after Will.

pairpul (pār-pul) n., arch. a thin wooden partition, especially to divide the back shop from the front or separating the two rooms of a cottage – '. . . his maxim with every opponent being, after the fashion of the archer, his namesake, to 'nail him to de pairpil' [JW], '. . . he examined the premises, and saw marks of blows on the window, the door, and pairple' [WNK] (also written 'pairple'; cf. perpall).

the Pair Roll (thu-pār-rōl) n. list of people in a parish who are eligible for poor relief. The first mention of 'the poor's stent' on the inhabitants of Hawick was in 1749. In 1772 the assessment for the poor amounted to £224 – 'The said Willaim Paterson . . . depones he . . . has been on the Poor Roll for several years past and gets a weekly supply of tuppence' [BR1767] (see also the pair).

Pair's Hooses (pārz-hoo-sees) n. Poor's Houses, former cottages in Ewesdale, near to the Kirk and to Brieryshaw. They seem to be the same houses listed as 'Kirkstyle' on the 1841 and 1861 censuses. They are listed on the 1851 census, with 5 households living there.

pairt (pār') n. a part – 'what pairt o 'nut' did ee no understand?', 'The rowmes that follows are for ye most pairt far distant fra the kirk, some 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 mylles, the most pairt has either no corne, or very litill . . . ' [PR1627], '. . . the possessors of the lands of Flex hath hitherto reaped the greatest pairt of the profitt of the said peice of ground' [BR1692], '. . . As pairtin frae oor ain ane 'neath the auld aik tree' [JoHa], 'Behald, thou desyrist trouth in the inwaird pairts . . . ' [HSR], '. . . sall gang intil the lower pairts o' the yirth' [HSR], 'In the fore pairt of June, when the heather's in bloom, They wad like to be back in their ain Border toon' [WR], 'In things o' domestic she aye takes her pairt' [WAP], '. . . Though townsfolk play their mony pairts An' sune grow auld' [WFC], '. . . And then oo hed races And even the Minister took pairt' [AY], '. . . In loyal herts oor lad o' pairts Will lang be honoured yet' [WL], a parting in hair – 'Nor can I thole their snack-bar wit, Their bowlers and their brilliantine: Owre slow am I to bear a pairt' [DH], v. to part – 'they were mairrit fower year ago, bit they've pairtit already', '. . . his employer told him – 'Robbie, I believe we'll hae to pairt', . . . 'An' where are ye gaun to maister?' ' [DMW], 'An' they crucifiet him, an' pairtet his garmints . . . ' [HSR], 'O Jeanie, wherefore did we pairt, Or why ha'e we grown auld?' [JT], 'Except when yer hint end pairteed company wi the cardboard an' ee ended up wi a green backside an' landeed in a cows pat at the fit o' the hill' [We] (see also pairtit).

pairtin (pār-tin) n., arch. a parting – '...she gaed to her first service at Headshaw, an' we had a sair pairtin', aw mind' [BCM1880].

pairtit (pār-tee', -ti') pp., adj. parted – 'fools an their money er sin pairtit', 'A pairteet threh the leesh, swank-leike fallih ...' [ECS] (see pairt).

pairtly (pār'-lee) adv. partly – 'His impish mischief pairtly done, Wi' gloomy grudge he maun relent ...' [WP].

pairtner (pār'-nur) n. a partner – 'where's the pairtner for this sock?', 'Aye it'd still be 'ee're man', bit nowadays they yaise the word 'pairtner' [DaS].

pairtnership (pār'-nur-ship) n. a partnership – 'hei feenished up wi a pairtnership in the firm', 'In pairtnership thae thretty years We've stuid by ane anither' [AO].

pairt-oot (pār'-oo') v., arch. to share out (noted by E.C. Smith).

pairt-taker (pār'-tā-kur) n., arch. a partaker, supporter, taker of sides – '...the said Walter Scot, knycht, and his freyndis, seruandis, and pairt takaris ...' [SB1527], '...accompanied by his mother Tibbie Donaldson, Turnbull was immediately surrounded by a company of 'pairt-takers' of one with whom he had formerly been at feud' [WaD].

pairty (pār'-ee) n. a party, social gathering – 'daein Mick Jagger was aye his pairty-piece', 'The Queen's gaun ti haud a pairty And the wife and yow's tae gaun' [AY], 'Cos it's his pairty ana. An no just his. The hale building's pairty. The hale toon's pairty. Aabody's pairty' [JuH], political group – '...she was a main cog in the Tory Pairty machine' [IWL], 'A've seen politicians come and gaun frae aw pairties ...' [IHS], a group of people on a trip – 'His enjoyment was tempered somewhat be the fact that Mrs. Fair and Miss Lookup were among the walkin pairty' [IWL], a person one one side of a dispute– '...sal pay for ilk hors or meir 40 shillings ...by the skaithe to the pairtie lesed' [BR1640], '...nominate and appointed with consent of both pairties, to see the meiths and marches impartially sett down ...' [BR1688].

Paisley (pāz-lee) n. Agnes (17th C.) recorded in the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694 among those 'Payed but not listed in Hauick Toun'. Alexander (16th C.) holder of a particate of land on the north side of the public street according to Hawick's 1537 Charter. He may have been related to William, who is also listed. He is mentioned in 1532 when the tenement to the east of his on the north side of the High Street was sold by William Walker to John Morlaw; this tenement bordered on the Slitrig, and hence was at the Tower Knowe. Andrew (b.c.1780) servant at Alton according to the ballot for the Militia in 1801 in Wilton Parish. Charles (1794–1838) wright of Hawick, listed at Roadhead in Pigot's 1837 directory. He was a Trustee of the Relief Kirk. He was probably the joiner in Wilton, who married Helen Michie in 1818; his widow Helen was living at Wilton Roadhead in 1841, along with children William, Jessie, Robert, Charles, John and James. Elizabeth 'Bessie' (17th/18th C.) wife of John Scott, 'Wyndheid'. In 1712, when she was a widow, she was rebuked by the Kirk Session for harassing her neighbours, and threatened with imprisonment if her behaviour continued. Francis (18th C.) wright in Hawick Parish. He witnessed a baptism for Andrew Scott and Ann 'Doeg' in 1758 and another for Robert Rutherford in 1767. In 1772 he and wright Robert (who was surely related) witnessed a baptism for George Balmer. He subscribed to the fund for the Slitrig Brig in 1776. He is probably the Francis whose wife Jean Purcel died in Hawick in 1787. He may also be the Francis who hired the Hawick Parish mortcloth in 1759. Francis (b.1790/1) joiner and cabinet-maker of the High Street, recorded on Pigot's 1825/6 and 1837 directories and Slater's 1852 directory. In 1841 he was at about 23 High Street, on the Crown Close in 1851 and at 16 High Street (probably the same address) in 1861. His wife was Margaret and their children included Isabella, John, Francis, Margaret, Thomas and Alexander. Francis (b.1838/9) son of cabinet-maker Francis, he was a shoemaker in 1861. Perhaps the same Francis was in Liverpool in 1876 when he donated to the Museum a 'collection of silver and copper coins, and copy of Leyden's Poems, published in 1811', as well as a 'Chinese brass coin' and 'two flying fish and sharks tooh'. Hector (17th C.) listed among the 'Deficients in Hauick Parich' in 1694. He appears to be at 'The Tour of Hauick'. He may be the Hector, married to Isobel Turnbull, who had an unnamed son baptised in Hawick in 1687. He is probably the Hector who witnessed a baptism for Robert Fowler in 1652. Helen (17th C.) probably the daughter of John and Helen Eilson born in Hawick in 1650. In 1687 she had a sasine for the lower part of a house in the west end of Hawick. Her husband was Robert Turnbull, who was a weaver. Helen nee Michie (b.c.1790) widow of a joiner in Wilton. She married Charles in Wilton in 1818. In 1841 she is listed as running the joiners business at Roadhead (i.e. Langlands Road). Her children included Joan (b.1821), William (b.1823), Janet or Jessie (b.1825), Robert (b.1826), Charles (b.1830), John (b.1832) and James (b.1833). James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish, married to Agnes Deans. Their children included William (b.1638). He may be the James who in 1640 witnessed a baptism for Agnes Paisley and Walter Oliver (suggesting then that Agnes was his sister) and another for Robert Gillespie and Marion Stoddart. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish, married to Janet Scott. Their children included: Alexander (b.1644); and John (b.1646). James (18th/19th C.) joiner and cabinet-maker on Damside, recorded in Pigot's 1837 directory. He was probably related to Francis, who was a joiner on the High Street at the same time. James (b.1827/8) spinner in Hawick. He was living in the Village in 1851, long with his wife and mother-in-law Agnes Dick. He married Ann Dick in 1850. Janet (b.c.1790) listed as a school-mistress on the 1841 census. She was living on the Round Close with Agnes, probably her daughter, a milliner. By 1851 she was listed as a woollen seamer, still on the Round Close. It is possible she was the Janet who in 1808, 1810 and 1812 witnessed baptisms for Andrew Turnbull and Margaret Hislop (probably in one of the secession churches). Jean (18th C.) recorded as teacher in Hawick in 1794. Her will was registered in 1814 and the Duke of Buccleuch gave £2 to her daughters Mary and Jean. John (16th C.) resident of Hawick. He was listed in 1579 among those owed money by James Liddersdale, Burgess of Selkirk. The item records that '£30 quhairof thair is alsmekill of barkit [i.e. tanned] ledder unwrocht as extendis to £15'. This suggests he was a tanner or leather associated with leather. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish, married to Janet Routledge. Their children included: Bessie (b.1642); John (b.1644); Robert (b.1646); Walter (b.1647); and Janet (b.1650). He is probably the John recorded in 1665 when Bessie Douglas was accused of insulting the Bailie and saying that his yard 'was not truelie marched'. Patrick (17th C.) listed at Mervinslaw among the poor of Southdean Parish in the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. Robert (17th C.) recorded in 1676 when he was imprisoned in the Hawick Tolbooth 'for abusing of the market and keeping of the honest men from selling of their shoes'. He was presumably a shoemaker and may be the same man as the cordiner who cotributed to the Hawick bell in 1693/4. Robert (17th/18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. He was recorded as a cordiner among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He is probably the Robert, resident of the westside of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. He is probably the Robert listed among people (presumably living near St. Mary's) who in 1706 were disturbed at night by a group who were involved in drunken revelry; they asked for him to bring out the cripple who lodged at his house, pretending to be 'fairie spiritts'. He married Grizel Johnston and their children included: Anna (b.1700); and Robert (b.1703). The witnesses in 1700 were weaver Robert Turnbull and 'officer' James Leyden (or Lethem). Robert (18th C.) wright of Hawick. In 1734 he was tasked with rebuilding the Bailies' seat in the balcony of St. Mary's after it had been removed on the orders of the Chamberlain of Buccleuch. Perhaps the same wright Robert along with wright James (who was surely related) witnessed a baptism for George Balmer. Thomas (18th C.) wright in Hawick. He subscribed to Caw's 'Poetical Museum' (1784). He may be the Thomas who witnessed a baptism for George Balmer in 1776. He is probably the Thomas of Hawick recorded in a bill of 1803 in the Walter Mason Collection. William Smith 'Wull the Cutler', served his apprenticeship with him, probably in the 1780s. Thomas (b.1842/3) son of Francis, he was a joiner in the Hawick area. In 1863 he presented some coins to the Museum. Walter (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His married Agnes Renwick and children included: Agnes (b.1670); John (b.1672); Margaret (b.1675); Walter (b.1679); and James (b.1682). He was probably miller at Weensland Mill who along with his son Walter witnessed a baptism in 1705. He may be the Walter who witnessed baptisms in 1680 (along with Dand Gray) for Alexander Muir, in 1685 for William Taylor and in 1704 for James Thomson in Weensland. He and his son are probably the 2 Walters in Weensland who witnessed a baptism for weaver Walter White in 1710. It seems likely he is also the Walter who (along with John Muir) witnessed the baptism in Roberton Parish of a 'bastard child' of Adam Scott of Burnfoot in 1686. He is probably the Walter who witnessed a baptism for James Gray in 1684 and who witnessed (along with James Gray) a baptism for William Scott in Weensland in 1696. Walter (d.1712) tenant in Weensland Mill, probably son of Walter. He was recorded as 'younger at Weensland milne' in 1704. He and his father Walter were the 'milners at Weensland milne' who witnessed a baptism for Walter Armstrong in Weensland in 1705. He and his father are probably the 2 Walters in Weensland who witnessed a baptism for weaver Walter White in 1710. He was 'milner' in 1712 when he witnessed a baptism for weaver Walter White. He married Jean Swan (who was also from Hawick Parish) in 1703 and their children included: Agnes (b.1704); Walter (b.1705); Jean (b.1707); Francis (b.1710); and Elizabeth (b.1712). The baptism of his last child was labelled 'posthum:', indicating that he was dead before then. The witnesses in 1704 were weavers William and John Swan and in 1712 were 'servitors' Walter Dalgleish and John Scott. Walter (b.c.1700) from Langholm, he lived in Castleton Parish. In 1722 he married Margaret Davison Dalgleish. Their children (born mainly in Langholm) included: Robert (b.1731); John (b.1733); Christian (b.1736); Christian (again, b.1737); Elizabeth Alexandra (b.1741), who married John Grieve; and Euphan (b.1744). Walter (18th C.) merchant in Hawick. In 1750 his widow, Janet Scott, settled their account with the heiress of the deceased William Scott of Whitehaugh. His daughter Jean was baptised in Hawick in 1735. He could be the Walter who witnessed a baptism in Hawick in 1729 for Thomas Huntly. Walter (18th/19th C.) weaver in Hawick. His wife Margaret Scott died in Hawick in 1795. Walter (1825/6–99) ironmonger on the High Street. In 1861 he was living at No. 21, employing 1 man and 2 boys. He had the house at 43 High Street rebuilt (formerly occupied by 'Robbie the Cow'). A 'stone pig' from his company is in the Museum, labelled 'W. Paisley & Son, Ironmongers, Hawick'. His wife was Elizabeth and their children included Jane Josephine and Mary Elizabeth (who married Robert Elliot, famer in Hermitage). He is probably the Walter who joined the Archæological Society in 1871. Wilhelmina (19th C.) listed as librarian of the Hawick Trades' Library in Slater's 1852 directory. William (16th C.) owner of quarter of a particate of land on the south side of the public street according to Hawick's 1537 Charter. He was one of the owners who was obliged to pay annual rents to James Blair. William (d.c.1689) cordiner and Burgess of Hawick. He was recorded as Procurator-Fiscal of the Regality Court (i.e. public prosecutor for the Burgh) in 1668 and 1669. He is probably the William who witnessed baptisms for William Thomson and Agnes Cook in 1680 and for Robert Turnbull in 1683. He is probably the William recorded in 1683 when flesher John Briggs was fined of insulting him and Michael Turnbull, 'calling of them two drunken elders'. He was probably the William mentioned in the Burgh Records in 1686 when 2 new marchers of the boundaries within the town were appointed. He was stated to have been a former marcher, along with John Hardie and William Purdom. He was probably the shoemaker of Hawick whose will is recorded in 1689. William (18th C.) paid the cart tax in Lilliesleaf Parish in 1791. William (b.c.1795) from Innerleithen. He was a dyer who lived on the Fore Raw in 1841 and 1851. He was listed as a member of Allars Kirk in 1829. He was the 25th listed member of the Archæological Society in 1856. In 1861 he donated to the Museum a 'fine polished stone Celt, found in gravel of bed of Teviot, near Victoria Bridge'. His wife was Isabella and their children included James, Joan, John, Helen and Charles. William (b.1822/3) son of Charles. He was listed as a joiner at Roadhead in Slater's 1852 directory. In 1851 he was living at Roadhead with his mother Helen and siblings Charles, John, James and Isabella. (also formerly written 'Paislaw', 'Pasla', 'Paslau', 'Paslaw', 'Paslay', 'Pasley', 'Payslay', 'Paysley', etc.).

Paiterson (pi'-, pā'-, paw'-ur-sin) n. (Paterson) Adam (16th C.) holder of 2½ particates of land on the north side of the public street according to Hawick's 1537 Charter. Adam (19th C.) listed as 17th member of the Archæological Society in 1856. Adam (19th C.) 'Foreman' in Hawick, who was 22nd on the list of members of the Archæological Society in 1856. On the 1857 list he was 'weaver', to distinguish him from the other Adam. Rev. Adam McCaul (19th/20th C.) licentiate at Saughtree Kirk from 1903. He retired to Edinburgh in 1910. Alexander (17th C.)

tenant farmer at Castlehill and 'Holme' in 1671, leasing from the Scotts of Buccleuch. Alexander (19th C.) resident of Hawick, where he was a 'manservant'. In 1830 he was accused of sheep-stealing at East or Little Cote farm, Cavers. Rev. Alexander (19th C.) from Glasgow, he graduated M.A. from the University there in 1869. He was nephew of Rev. Dr. Paterson of Kirkwall. He was ordained as minister of Lilliesleaf Burgher Kirk in 1875 and remained until 1896. His time saw a new church opened in 1891. He left for Edinburgh for family reasons, residing at Portobello. Andrew (17th C.) tenant in Fulton in Bedrule Parish. In 1623 he was accused of stealing an ox and a cow from a woman in Newton, Glendale (Northumberland). He was recorded as 'Andro Patersonne in Foultoune' and found not guilty by the court at Jedburgh. Andrew (17th/18th C.) married 'Jennet Leaden' in Ashkirk Parish in 1722. Andrew (18th C.) gardener at Minto in 1786, when he was working for Sir Gilbert Elliot. Archibald (17th C.) recorded as a communicant at Borthwickshiels in 1650. He was there along with Helen 'Haire' (probably Hair, his wife), as well as Margaret (listed right after him and his wife), William and Robert, who were probably also related. One possibility is that he was son of Robert and brother of William and Margaret. The family appear to have moved from the Borthwick Water to Hawick at about this time, since he had 2 children with Helen Hair, baptised in Hawick Parish: Margaret (b.1652); and Robert (b.1654). He also had another child with Helen Allan, Walter (b.1656), with the witnesses suggesting the mother was the same woman as Helen Hair. The witnesses in 1652 were Robert Scott and James Allan, in 1654 were Robert and William (surely close relatives and perhaps the men who were also recorded at Borthwickshiels in 1650) and in 1656 were Robert (again) and Adam Govenlock; William married Agnes Allan, and so it is possible that 2 brothers married 2 sisters. Archibald (17th/18th C.) road-maker in Hawick. He was probably related to Walter of Burnflat and other local Patersons, but was distinct from a contemporary Archibald who was tenant at the Flex. Based on the names of his children, it seems likely that he was a younger son of William and Agnes Allan. He was likely to be 'Paterson the casseylayer' from the Council Records in 1704. He is a 'cassar in Hawick' in 1707 in an agreement to 'lay the Cassa in Selkirk' in 1707. In 1708 he was paid in Selkirk 'for setting the town's part of the causey between Robert Scott of Scott's Bank and Elisabeth Eilott relict of deceased John Turnbull'. He is recorded as a 'Casier' in 1708 when he witnessed a baptism for James Hobkirk, who had the same job at Burnflat. In 1709 he was 'Casier' when he witnessed (along with John Gledstains of Whitlaw) a baptism for William Henderson in the Flex, suggesting that he lived in that area. He was 'casaer' in 1714 when he witnessed a baptism for Henry (tenant in Hawick) and in 1715 when he witnessed a baptism for gardener Walter. He was recorded being 'in Flexs' in 1714 and was 'Casier in whitla' in 1716. He could be the Archibald who (along with William Stoddart, also a cassayer at the Flex) witnessed a baptism for William Cathrae in 1728. He is recorded as a 'casier' when he married Helen Paterson, also from Hawick, in 1706; she may have been sister of the other Archibald, making the 2 men brothers-in-law. Their children included: William (b.1707); Francis (b.1710); Isobel (b.1712); Agnes (b.1714); John (b.1716); and Helen (b.1723). The witnesses in 1707 were Walter Paterson of Burnflat and James Hobkirk (also from Burnflat), in 1710 were the other Archibald along with Walter (but it is not clear which one), in 1712 were James Hobkirk (again) and Walter of Burnflat, in 1714 were Walter of Burnflat and another Walter, in 1716 were John Gledstains of Whitlaw and the other Archibald, and in 1723 were 'casaer' John (who was surely related) and Beadle John Scott. Archibald (17th/18th C.) tenant in the Flex, perhaps son of Francis. Note that he is distinct from Archibald (the cassayer), who also lived near the Flex and was having children with Helen Paterson (perhaps his sister, hence the 2 men may have been brothers-in-law) in the period 1707–23. In 1710 he witnessed a baptism for the other Archibald and another for Andrew Gray in Whitlaw, in 1712 he witnessed another baptism for Andrew Gray in Whitlaw (along with William Shiel, who was also at the Flex) and in 1716 (along with John Gledstains of Whitlaw) he witnessed a baptism for the other Archibald again. In 1722 he witnessed a baptism for John Davidson (perhaps related to his first wife) in the Flex. In 1728 he was recorded as tenant in Fenwick, but was back at Flex in 1729; assuming this was not an error, then he must have moved between farms. In 1714 he married Bessie Davidson and they were described as 'both in Flexs'; there is no evidence of any children from this first marriage. He was recorded as a 'widow, tenant in Flexs' in 1716 when he married Mary, daughter of James Rutherford, tenant in Ormiston. Their children included: Francis (b.1717); James (b.1719); John (b.1720); Isobell (b.1722); Robert (b.1725), who may have moved to Crailing Parish; and Mary (b.1728). Helen (b.1729), with the mother's name given as 'Isabel' Rutherford, was probably also his child. Based on the forenames, he may have been a son of Francis (also tenant in the Flex) and Isabel Renwick. The witnesses in 1717 were John Gledstains of Whitlaw and his brother William Gledstains, in 1719 were John Gledstains of Whitlaw and miller Robert Elliot, in 1720 were John Gledstains of Whitlaw and James Johnston in Whitlaw, in 1722 were Adam Brown 'headhouse' and Walter Scott (servant to the Minister), in 1725 were James Johnston and James Leithead, in 1728 were William Grieve and Walter Scott and 1729 were Adam Brown and John Telfer. Given the family forenames, it seems likely that he was ancestor of the 'Pawkie' Patersons. Archibald (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish who married Jean Shiel. Their son William was baptised in 1731. It is unclear how he was connected to other Patersons. Archibald (18th C.) married Betty Irvine in Wilton Parish in 1735. Their son Thomas was baptised in Hawick Parish in 1738. Archibald (d.bef. 1801) married Janet Scott in Hawick in 1767. His wife was also from Hawick Parish. He is probably the son of William and Isobel Sliman who was baptised in Hawick in 1743. His wife died in 1801, by which time he was already deceased; the death record appears to say 'Jenny Rattles', presumably her nickname. Archibald (d.1799) recorded in the death register in Hawick as 'Auld Archie Patterson Uncle to William Patterson'. He could be the son of gardener Walter who was baptised in Hawick in 1715; in this case his nephew William was probably a son of William and Isobel Sliman. He may also be the Archibald whose wife's mother was buried in Hawick in 1771. Archibald 'Pawkie' (d.1815) Hawick man who farmed at Silverbuthall and lived at West Port. He was father of Robert 'Pawkie Paiterson' (of the song), and was probably the son of James 'Ilka Thursdi' and Helen Ruecastle, who was baptised in 1744. In 1781 he was recorded as a merchant; however, it seems likely he was the 'cadger' of that name who was Cornet in 1771. He is probably the carrier from Hawick who in Selkirk in 1790 complained about non-payment of a bill by John Dunlop. He is probably the Hawick resident who paid the cart tax in Hawick in 1791 and who owned a horse according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. In 1775 he married Isabel Turnbull, who was from Abbotrule (the marriage being recorded in both parishes); she may have been daughter of miller Robert Turnbull and died in 1816. Their children included: Helen (1775–1855), who married Tom Harkness; Elizabeth (or 'Betty', b.1777); James (b.1780), also nicknamed 'Pawkie'; Robert (1781–1851), immortalised in the song; and Jane (c.1785–1839), who married M. Cabourne and secondly George Milligan. He was said to have had 2 daughters who were involved with French prisoners of war (so there may have been another in addition to Jane). Ex-Bailie Walter Ruecastle (his uncle) was witness to the 1775 and 1777 baptisms, while Walter Henderson in 1775 and merchant James Dickson were witnesses in 1777. In 1777 he was a witness (along with Walter Ruecastle) for a baptism for James Dickson. The witnesses in 1780 were ex-Bailie Walter Ruecastle and merchant George Turnbull (possibly his wife's brother), while in 1781 they were ex-Bailie Walter Ruecastle and William Turnbull (probably a relative of his wife). His death is recorded in Hawick as 'West Port Called Pauky'. Archibald Hamilton (1748–1813) born in Crailing Parish, he was likely to have been son of Robert and Isabel Armstrong. A family legend says that his people originally came from the Scottish Borders, which fits with his parents both being from Hawick. He moved to England sometime in the 1770s and in 1779 married Ann Parker from Burton in Lonsdale. A bond of £200 was put up by William Hill of Kendal for the marriage. At that time he was living at Park House near Hornby in Melling Parish. Their children included James (b.1781), Jenny (b.1782), Thomas (b.1785), Anne (b.1787), Agnes (b.1790), Archibald (b.1793), John (b.1796), Peggy (b.1798), Allan (b.1801) and William (b.1804). The forenames match closely with those of the Patersons from the Flex area. He died in Caton, Lancaster. Archibald (b.1783) stockingmaker of Kirkton Parish, son of Robert. He was recorded at Horselee in 1841 and Southfieldgate in 1851. He married Agnes Hall and their children included: Agnes (b.1833); George (b.1835); and James (b.c.1838). Agnes and George were baptised in Roberton Parish. Archibald (19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Betty Scott and their daughters Betty and Janet were baptised in 1825. Archibald (1800–1840) eldest son of James 'Pawkie'. He was a stockingmaker in Hawick. He married Agnes Donaldson in 1834; after his death she secondly married George Robson, and she died in 1887. Their children were: James (b.1835); George Renwick (b.1837); and William Oliver (b.1839). Christopher (1815/6–79) son of carrier James. He was a carter, like his father. In 1841 he was listed as a carrier at the West Port (corresponding to about 9 Loan), living adjacent to his parents. In 1851 he was at about 20 Howegate and in 1861 at 9 Loan again. He married Agnes Chalmers and secondly married Helen Oliver. His children included: Margaret (b.1839); James (b.1842); John (b.c.1847); Robert (b.c.1850); Betsy (b.c.1853); Archibald (b.c.1855); and Christopher (b.c.1858). He died at Weensland Cottages. David (b.c.1800) from Sanquhar, he was a flesher on the High Street, listed in Pigot's 1837 directory and Slater's 1852 directory. He was living at about No. 47 in 1841 and at No. 37 in 1851 and 1861. His wife was Mary and their children included John, David, Elizabeth and James. David 'Davie' (19th/20th C.) captain of the Hawick team that won the 1895–96 Scottish championship. He played at quarter (wing) and also represented Scotland. David 'Davie' (1953/4–) amateur boxing champion and long-time local Councillor. He won the Scottish Flyweight title in 1972. Edward (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton. He married Christian, daughter of John and Jane Douglas. Their children included: Jean (b.1821); and Joseph (b.1822), who died in infancy. He is probably the 'E. Paterson', merchant of Castleton, who subscribed to 2 copies of William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. Elizabeth (1785–1879) daughter of William of Baltimore, and possibly grand-daughter of Robert ('Old Mortality'), she married Jerome Bonaparte (1784–1860). By a strange coincidence, one of the last works of Sir Walter Scott (who immortalised 'Old Mortality') was a monumental biography of Jerome's brother Napoleon. However, despite this story, it seems more likely that his father was originally from Donegal, Ireland, and hence any connection with 'Old Mortality' seems unlikely. Francis (17th/18th C.) tenant in the Flex. He may have been a younger son of Archibald and Helen Allan, but there is no record of a baptism for him. In 1705 (along with William Henderson) he witnessed a baptism for Walter Martin, tenant in the Flex. In 1707 he witnessed a baptism for William Henderson, younger in the Flex, and in 1708 he witnessed baptisms for Thomas Boyd, gardener at the Flex (along with Francis Henderson, who was also in the Flex) and for William Henderson, 'younger in Flex'. Also in 1708 he was 'in flexs' when he (along with Walter of Burnflat and Archibald, 'Casier') witnessed a baptism for James Hobkirk, who was 'casier coater' for Walter of Burnflat. His wife was Isobell Renwick and their children included: Isobell (b.1685), probably the Isobell who married Adam Brown 'Young Headhouse' in 1719; Janet (b.1687); Margaret (b.1691); and Anna (b.1695). Walter in Burnflat witnessed one of the baptisms and was probably his father or brother. Archibald, also recorded as tenant in the Flex, may have been another child (based on the names of Archibald's children). Additionally, he may have been father of Helen, who married a different Archibald (the cassayer). Francis (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1758 he hired the Hawick mortcloth. It is unclear how he was related to other Patersons. George (18th C.) weaver in Hawick. In both 1762 and 1766 he witnessed baptisms for wright Walter Scott. He could be the George who married Isobel Tudhope and whose children included: Henry (b.1759); George (b.1761); Robert (b.1763); and John (b.1767). George (b.1794/5) from Fogo in Berwickshire, he was farmer at Greenbank. In the 1841 census his wife (recorded being born in Nova Scotia) and children were there, but he was visiting Borthwickbrae House at the time. He was at Greenbank in 1851 as farmer of 600 acres, employing 3 people. His children included: Eliza (b.c.1828); George (b.c.1830); and John (b.c.1840). George (1801–73) native of Stichill, near Kelso, son of John and Isabel Tait. He was a shoemaker to trade. He learned to play the fife in the Berwickshire Militia and played in the Drums and Fifes at 46 Common Ridings. He is recorded as a shoemaker journeyman at the Sandbed in 1841, a shoemaker on the Mid Row in 1851 and at 3 Back Row in 1861. He married Margaret Scott and they had children: Isabel (b.c.1830); John (b.c.1833); Jane (or Jeanie, b.1834); Margaret (b.1837); George (b.1839); Andrew (b.1841); Barbara (b.1841); Eliza (b.c.1848); and Thomas (b.c.1849). George (b.c.1815) baker of 53 (or perhaps 55) High Street, son of baker William. He was listed as a baker and confectioner of the High Street in Slater's 1852 directory. He married both Elizabeth and Isabella, daughters of grocer Thomas Liddell. His daughter Margaret Davidson carried on the baker's business until she married Andrew Graham (tweed traveller). Her cousin Thomas L. Brydon then took over, later succeeded by Thomas Scott. Helen (b.1775) daughter of Archibald and sister of Robert 'Pawkie'. She married labourer Tam Harkness. It is unclear if she was 'Nellie Harkness' or if that was her daughter. Henry (17th/18th C.) carrier in the Hawick area. He was recorded as servant to the Laird of Falnash in 1700. He was probably related to Walter, who was a gardener for Gideon Scott of Falnash. He was listed as a carrier in Hawick in 1700 when he witnessed a baptism for Walter Purdom, in 1702 when his son John was baptised, in 1707 when his daughter was baptised and he witnessed a baptism for fellow-carrier William Aitken, younger, in 1708 when he witnessed a baptism for weaver Robert Rodger, and in a 1709 baptism for his own child. In 1711 and 1713 he was recorded as a carrier when he witnessed baptisms for Walter of Burnflat, who was probably also a relative. In 1714 and 1716 he was recorded as 'tenent in Hawick'. In 1700 he married Bessie Scott and their children included: John (b.1702); John (again, b.1704); Agnes (b.1707); George (b.1709); Henry (b.1711); Mary (b.1716); George (again, b.1718); and Robert (b.1722). Walter (b.1714), with mother's name give as 'Helen Scott' was probably also their child. The witnesses in 1707 were carrier William Aitken, younger, and John Scott 'Souldier', younger, in 1709 were cooper John Turnbull and gardener William Scott, in 1711 were carrier William Aitken, younger, and cooper Walter Scott, in 1714 were Walter of Burnflat and Archibald 'Casaer', in 1716 were Bailie William Laing and mason John Napier, and in 1722 were Robert Scott of Burnhead and Walter Scott of Cockerheugh. He may have been related to William, whose father was gardener and shepherd for Scott of Falnash around the second decade of the 18th century. Henry (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was in Girnwood in 1742. He married Agnes 'Ballainy' in Roberton in 1740. His children included: Mary (b.1742); Jean (b.1745); Walter (b.1748); and Henry (b.1751). Henry (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Alison Oliver and their children included: Janet (b.1787); Alison (b.1788); George (b.1790); Adam (b.1792); Henry (b.1797); and Robert (b.1799). He could be the weaver in Hawick whose child's death is recorded in 1799. He seems likely to be the father of Bailie John (b.1802/3), in which case he was a 'country weaver', who owned a house at 72 High Street. Henry (18th/19th C.) married Margaret Hobkirk in Roberton Parish in 1799. Henry (b.c.1810) agricultural labourer at Pin in Castleton Parish. He was listed among male heads of households in 1835–41 and was also Precentor in Castleton Kirk from at least 1841. His wife was Mary and their children included Robert, Christian, Mary, John and Henry. Henry 'Harry o Burnheid' (d.1850s) a barnman to trade, he used to spend time sitting near a well at Burnhead, popularly named 'Harry's Well'. Known as an odd character who used to collect bits of cord and liked to read difficult passages from the Bible. A water-colour portrait of him by Adam Brown is in the Museum. It is possible he was the Henry who married Margaret Hobkirk (from Roberton) in 1799. Henry (1820/1–87) son of John, he was an auctioneer in Hawick. His premises were at 61 High Street. An attendee of the East Bank Kirk, he was apparently the only one to continue standing during prayers and sit during singing, long after the practice was reversed. He may be the Henry who was the 21st listed member of the Archæological Society in 1856, donated to the Museum an old book in 1858 and coins in 1861, was on the Society's Committee. He married Ann Armstrong, and their children were: John, ironmonger; Alexander, bookmaker; and Robert, also bookmaker. He is buried in the Wellogate. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Marion Runciman and their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1636. It is unclear how he was related to other Patersons. James (17th C.) merchant listed among those contributing to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. James (17th/18th C.) miller in Hawick. He was recorded as 'miller' in a baptismal record of 1689 and as 'under miller' in Hawick in 1694 when he still had to pay part of his Burgess money. He witnessed baptisms in 1701 for Adam Scott and Janet Paterson (probably his daughter or sister) and in 1702 for flesher John Tudhope. He was 'milner' in Hawick when he witnessed a baptism for miller Robert Deans. Probably the same James 'milner' witnessed a baptism for fellow miller Robert Deans in Hawick in 1705. In 1707 he witnessed a baptism for fellow miller Walter Riddell. He may be the James who witnessed a baptism for weaver James Beattie in 1707. In 1708 he and Walter Riddell were 'undermillers' when they witnessed a baptism for Andrew Scott wright at Millport and was 'undermiller in Hawick' in 1709 when he witnessed a baptism for Walter Riddell (also undermiller in Hawick). He may be the James, brother of Margaret, who in 1702 acted as witness to the baptism of his niece, born posthumously to Gideon Gardner. He married Margaret Wright and their children included: Isobel (b.1687); Margaret (b.1689); and

Isobel (again, b.1702). The witnesses in 1689 were Bailie James Scott and John Scott. James 'Duke' (17th/18th C.) recorded in 1719 when he witnessed a baptism for Robert Manuel in Hawick. He may be the same as one of the other Jameses. James (d.1782) resident of Hawick Parish. His death record is labelled 'ilka Thursday', which was presumably his nickname (suggesting he may have been a carrier, and hence related to the later carrier of the same name). It is possible he was the James, son of Archibald, born in Hawick in 1719. He may be the James, married to Helen Ruecastle (probably the same as Helen Paterson in some baptismal records), who was probably daughter of Bailie John Ruecastle. Their children included: Archibald (b.1744), probably 'Pawkie'; John (b.1747); Mary (b.1757); Christian (b.1759); William (b.1761), possibly the resident of Silverbuthall; and James (b.1766). The witnesses in 1744 were merchant John Ruecastle (probably his father-in-law) and William Scoon, servant to Rev. William Somerville; fellow carrier John Tudhope had a child baptised on the same day. He is probably also the James who witnessed a baptism for baker Walter Ruecastle in 1758. James (18th C.) resident of Ewes Parish. He married Isobel Ross (probably in 1756) and their children included: Marion (b.1759); Betty (b.1761); Henry (b.1767); and Janet (b.1769). James (d.1778) carpet weaver who died in Hawick. He may be the James who married Ann Scott in 1774, the marriage recorded in both Hawick and Southdean Parishes. Alternatively he may be the James who married Ann Coats, with children Andrew (b.1772) and Janet (b.1775) baptised in Hawick. James 'Pawkie' (1780–1858) son of Archibald and Isabella Turnbull. He was brother of Robert, the subject of the song. In his younger days he was an agricultural servant, being at Adderstonelee in 1799 (when he got married). In 1801 he was 'Workman' when listed (right before Robert, probably his brother) on the ballot for the Militia. Later he was a carrier and small-scale farmer in Hawick. He is listed as 'Pauky' in the 1808 and 1810 death records of his infant sons, both called William. In 1837 he was running a cart service to Dumfries, Annan and Langholm every Monday. He may also be the grocer on the Loan listed in Pigot's 1837 directory. In 1841 he was living at about 9 Loan with his wife and young joiner John Ingles (who was probably his grandson), with his son Christopher living at the same address. In 1851 he was listed on the Loan as farmer of 9 acres. In 1799 in Kirkton Parish he married Margaret (1777–1855), daughter of Archibald Tait and sister of carrier William Tait. Their children were: Archibald (1799–1840); Isabella (1800/1–52), who married John Ingles; Jean (1802/3–63), who married Thomas Sanderson in Melrose; William (d.1808) and William (again, d.1810), who died in infancy; James (b.1809/10); Robert (b.1811/2); and Christopher (b.1814/5). He died at 11 Loan. James (b.c.1780) hind at Pinnacle according to the ballot for the Militia in Ancrum Parish in 1801. James (b.c.1785) shepherd at Cawfaulds in Wilton Parish. He was listed among heads of households in 1840, with his address changed from Alton to 'Calf-folds'. He married Violet Thomson in 1832 and their children included Margaret and Elizabeth. He may be the widower living at Easter Lilliesleaf in 1851. James (b.c.1790) farmer at Terrona in the Ewes valley. His wife was Margaret and their children included Agnes, James, William, John and Alexander. He seems likely to have been related to the earlier James in Ewes. James (1805/6–54) son of William. He was a farm labourer who lived at Raesknowe. He married Mary Glendinning and their son William was baptised in Hawick Parish in 1836. He was at Raesknowe in 1851, with his son and his mother and was still there in 1851 when described as a widower. James (19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Mary Hall and their son John was baptised in 1842. James (b.1820/1) from Ewes, he was farmer at Chapelhill in the 1860s. In 1861 he was farming 950 acres and employing 7 people. He also had a governess and 5 domestic servants. His wife was Jessie and their children included Violet, George, John T., James, William and Margaret B. James (19th C.) cattle salesman in Hawick. He had a villa erected for him on Wilton Hill in about 1880. John (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1640 he was accused by the Kirk Session of setting up 'stouks' of corn on the Sabbath. He is probably the John whose children, baptised in Ashkirk, included Thomas (b.1633) and Mungo (b.1636). John (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Margaret Dunlop, with their daughter Janet baptised in 1650. Probably the same John was later married to Helen Morrison, with further children (baptised in Ashkirk): Thomas (b.1656); John (b.1660); and Frances (b.1662). The witnesses in 1656 were Walter and William Dunlop. His wife's name was recorded as 'Issbell' in 1660. John (d.c.1683) tenant in Parkhill when his will was recorded in 1683. It is unclear if this was the local Parkhill or another one in the counties of Peebles, Roxburgh and Selkirk. John (1632–1708) youngest son of John, Bishop of Ross, he studied in Aberdeen and St. Andrews and then taught at St. Leonard's College. He succeeded his father at Ellon in 1660, then became minister at the Tron Kirk and later the High Kirk, before becoming Bishop of Galloway in 1674, and then Bishop of Edinburgh in 1679. In 1687 he was appointed as Archbishop of Glasgow, as successor to Alexander Cairncross. He was thus the last Archbishop of Glasgow, with Bishops being continued later by the Episcopalian and Roman Catholic Churches. He was disliked by many for his hard line on religious intolerance. At the Revolution he sided with James II and was deprived when Episcopacy was abolished in 1691. Afterwards the spent several years in England, but returned to Edinburgh by 1702 and petitioned for allowances to be made for relief of poor clergymen (including apparently himself). He died in Edinburgh and was buried at Holyrood. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish who married Marion Craw, Their unnamed son was baptised in 1673. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. In 1709 he married Margaret Goodfellow in Kirkton Parish. John (17th/18th C.) recorded in 1723 as a 'casaer' when he witnessed a baptism in Hawick for Archibald, who was also a road-layer. He was surely a relative of Archibald, perhaps his brother. John (18th C.) tenant in Langhope in 1785 when his servant was involved in a legal case in Selkirk. John (18th/19th C.) recorded as 'Junior Sinton Northmains' in 1797 on the list of men of Ashkirk Parish balloted to serve in the Militia. His name appears again in 1798 and in early 1799 he paid £10 to avoid serving. His payment of the penalty was confirmed on the amended list of 1799. John (b.c.1800) shoemaker who lived on the Kirk Wynd in 1841. His wife was Isabel and their children included Walter and William. The death of his infant son is recorded in 1822. Bailie John (1802/3–1873) born where the Store was later located, son of a country weaver, he started in that trade himself, then became a warper with William Watson's. Based on the names of his children, his father was probably Henry and his mother Alison Oliver. He was apparently the first man in Hawick to warp tartans and shawls, and the first to send pieces of woven cloth to London in about 1830. He became a foreman with Watson's. In 1848 he was appointed as one of the trustees of the firm, following the death of William Lindsay Watson in 1849. He acted as manager until Watson's sons Robert F. and Thomas L. were old enough to take over in 1864; during this time the firm's workforce increased dramatially. He was also responsible for bringing an old bell from Gala to act as the factory bell at Dangerfield Mills. He was on the Town Council and was a Magistrate during the 1850s. Additionally in the 1850s he was on the Borders Union Railway Committee for Hawick District. In Slater's 1852 directory he is listed as manager of W. Watson & Sons. He had the honour of presenting the harp to Henry Scott Riddell on behalf of the Town in 1859 and also chaired the dinner in the Tower Hotel at the centenary Burns night. He was heavily involved in the restructuring of Hawick's Town Council in 1861. He was also an Elder in the East Bank Kirk for many years. He owned the building at 72 High Street, where he lived and was recorded there on the 1841, 1851 and 1861 censuses. Probably his father was the Paterson shown at about 72 High Street on Wood's 1824 map. He lived on the same part of High Street for all except the last few years of his life. In 1866 he went into manufacturing for himself, moving to Galashiels, based at Rosebank Mill. He married Mary Telfer, who died in 1861, aged 60. Their children included: Mary (b.1826); Henry (b.1827); Alison Hoy (b.1831), who married Andrew Turnbull; Robert Telfer (b.1833); John (b.1835); Agnes (b.1837); Adam (b.1838); and Jemima (b.1843). He died in Galashiels and his buried in the Heritors' Area of Wellogate Cemetery. A photograph of him exists. John (b.1820s) son of manufacturer John. He had an ironmonger's shop at 60 High Street (which was later Sharp the tobacconist), and lived at 57 High Street. In 1863 he donated to the Museum the cast of a bronze spear-head he made himself. He married Mary Telfer, who died in 1862. Their children were: Agnes, who died age 23; Robert, moved to Melbourne; John, shopkeeper; and Henry, auctioneer. He is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. John (19th/20th C.) son of auctioneer Henry. He had an ironomonger's shop at 21 High Street, taking over from a Mr. Buckham. He married Alison Waldie. It is possible that his family's premises were those labelled 'Paterson' at 25 (not 21) High Street on Wood's 1824 map. John (19th/20th C.) resident of Edinburgh. James Sinton, in his Hawick-related bibliography of 1908, thanks him for the use of 'some of the rarer volumes in his library, which contains one of the finest collections of Hawick-printed books extant'. He may be the same as one of the contemporary Johns. John (20th C.) actuary with the Hawick Savings Bank, he also acted as Treasurer for St. George's Kirk from 1935. Margaret (17th C.) resident at Blackleemouth according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Margaret 'Peggy' (20th C.) proprietor of a grocer's shop at 178 Weensland Road in the mid-1900s. Michael (16th/17th C.) said to have owned the lands at 'Haggishaa' in the distant past (as recounted by Robert Wilson). If real, he was presumably an ancestor of Robert 'Old Mortality'. He is said to have been a generous host and a great benefactor of St. Mary's Kirk. On one occasion he apparently entertained those associated with Hawick Kirk, serving a 3-foot diameter haggis, the pin of which was used as a spoke to mend Hawick Mill and the skin used for the Town drum. This is connected with the name 'Haggishaa', and there is probably no truth to the story other than the family connection with the land there. It is suggested that a version of the story was told to Robert Burns by his friend Gavin Turnbull (whose family was from Hawick), inspiring the lines 'Your pin wad help to mend a mill In time o' need'. Mungo (17th C.) married Manie Inglis in Ashkirk Parish in 1631. Mungo (17th C.) listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick 'eist the water' in 1694. Phylis retired in 2023 after 38 years as a teacher. She started at Trinity in 1984 and moved to Drumlanrig in 1991, where she served for a while as Principal Teacher. Her husband is Kenny Paterson. Raey (1944/5–) born in Hawick and educated in Denholm, he has been a lifelong farm-worker. He spent 25 years at Newton farm and then worked at Deanfoot farm. In 2020 he was noted for having brought in his 60th harvest and in 2022 received a long-service award from the Royal Highland and Agricultural Society. Robert (15th/16th C.) resident of 'langcluch' recorded in 1502. This may have been the farm of similar name on the Allan Water. Along with John Winthrope and James 'aronyk', he had 60 sheep stolen by Patrick Scott in Harwoodhill. His surname was written 'patonesone'. Robert (17th C.) married Margaret Robson in Ashkirk Parish in 1643. Robert (17th C.) witnessed a baptism in Ashkirk in 1651 for John Stewart. Robert (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He witnessed a baptism in 1656 for Archibald, who was surely a close relative. Also in 1656 he and William (probably another relative) witnessed a baptism for George Heatley and Janet Allan. He is probably the Robert who, along with the same William, witnessed a baptism in 1654 for Archibald and Helen 'Haire'. It seems likely that he, William and Archibald are the men recorded as 'communicants' at Borthwickshiels in 1650; one possibility is that he was father of Archibald and William, with his wife perhaps being the Malie Thomson recorded after him in 1650. Robert (d.1682/3) resident of Hawick Parish. He had a child Marion with Margaret Elliot in 1683, with witnesses William Purdom and William Elliot. The baptism is marked both 'for:' and 'posthumous', presumably meaning that the child was conceived illegitimately and that he was deceased before the baptism. One possibility is that he was the son of Archibald baptised in Hawick in 1654 and brother of Walter who later had children with Margaret Elliot (although whether the same woman is unknown). Robert (17th C.) tenant in Birkhill when the will of his wife Margaret Turnbull was recorded in 1685. It is unclear if this was the Birkhill in Hobkirk Parish on another one. Robert (17th C.) recorded as 'indweller in Falahill at Reaperlaw' in 1689 when he had a discharge with the treasurer of Selkirk. He presumably lived at Raperlaw. It is possible he is the Robert whose widow Isobel Wright had a discharge with the Burgh of Selkirk in 1792 (dealt with by Stephen Turnbull in Minto Cleuch). Robert (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Helen Clerk and their son William was baptised in 1691. The witnesses were James Neil and John Robson. Robert (17th C.) resident at Northhouse according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Robert 'Old Mortality' (1715/6–1801) born at Burnflat, son of Walter and Margaret Scott (also known as Helen). Note that there are other claims that he was born at Closeburn; however, his family were from Hawick and he was certainly christened and grew up there. The year of his birth is uncertain, although the record of his baptis record is clear (and there was also a brother of the same name born in 1713, who presumably died in infancy). The baptismal witnesses were Walter Scott (Beadle in Hawick, who may have been related to his mother) and gardener Walter (who may have been cousin or other relative of his father). He moved to Dumfriesshire at age 13, where he was apprenticed as a stone-mason, joining his brother Francis at Corncockle Quarry, near Templand. In 1743 or 1744 he married Elizabeth, daughter of Robert Gray, gardener to Sir John Jardine; she was cook-maid to the owner of the quarry, Sir Thomas Kirkpatrick. He then leased a quarry at Gatelawbrig from the Duke of Queensberry, and become a stone-mason and quarrier. His house was plundered by retreating Jacobites in 1745, and he was taken prisoner. Already a pronounced Cameronian, he became obsessed with placing tombstones over the graves of Covenanter martyrs, and was thus given his nickname. He often travelled for work and in 1758 he left his wife and children for the next 10 years, although when his son Walter went off to find him in 1759, he joined his father as a stone-cutter. Walter was the 2nd son, and his own eldest son, Nathaniel (hence grandson of 'Old Mortality'), was minister at Galashiels. His other children were John (who became a sailor and emigrated to America), Robert junior, Margaret and Janet. He returned to his family at Gatelawbrig in 1768, and they moved to Balmaclellan in Kirkcudbright. His wife worked there as a teacher to support the family, while he travelled the country on his pony, erecting and cleaning stones. She died in 1785 (aged 59), and a plaque in Balmaclellan marks where they lived. He met Walter Scott in 1793 in a graveyard in north-east Scotland. This meeting was fictionalised in the opening chapter of Scott's 'The Tale of Old Mortality' (1816), and helped inspire the novel. He died on the high road near Lockerbie, collapsing next to his pony at Bankend in Caerlaverock, and not recovering. The precise date of his death and place of his burial are uncertain. A memorial tombstone was erected by Scott's publisher in 1869 at Bankend of Caerlaverock Churchyard. There are 3 copies of a statue of him by John Currie (two of which also include his pony), which are in Balmaclellan, at Dumfries Observatory Museum and at Newton Stewart Museum. There is another statue of him in Laurel Hill Cemetery in Philadelphia. A plaque marked his birthplace in Hawick, erected in 1897, but the dilapidated cottage at 'Hagishaa' was demolished following a fire in 1991 (the plaques are now in storage). In 1865 a pair of spectacles belonging to him were donated to the Museum by Walter Scott of Haggishaa. Paterson Gardens was named after him in 2006. Robert (18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. He was at Town o' Rule in 1739. His children probably included Agnes (b.1739), Isobel (b.1744), James (b.1748), Mary (b.1753), Thomas (b.1756) and Robert (b.1760). Robert (18th C.) married Jean Turnbull in Ashkirk Parish in 1742. His forename is recorded as 'Roben'. Robert (b.1725) son of Archibald and Mary Rutherford. He was born in Hawick, but moved to Crailing Parish. He married Isabel Armstrong, who was probably from Jedburgh. Their children included: Jean (b.1743); Margaret (b.1744); Agnes (b.1746); Archibald Hamilton (b.1748), who probably moved to England; and Robert John (b.1752). Robert (18th C.) tailor in Hawick. In 1760 he witnessed a baptism for carrier Robert Miller. It is unclear how he was related to other Patersons. Robert (18th C.) cooper in Hawick Parish. In 1760 he witnessed a baptism for Walter Scott, with Walter Scott from Newbigging as the other witness. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isobel Fairnbairn in Hawick in 1775 and their children included: Walter (b.1776); Robert (b.1777); William (b.1779); George (b.1780); Archibald (b.1783); Robert (again, b.1788); and James (b.1791), who appears to have died in 1820 (the record inserted at the bottom of the 1791 Kirkton baptismal page). George and Archibald were baptised in Kirkton Parish and the rest in Hawick. Note that according to the baptismal records there were 7 sons and no daughters. Robert 'Pawkie' (1781–1858) local man, immortalised in the words of the humorous song by 'Soapy' Ballantyne. His father Archibald had farmed land at 'Sillerbithaa' (and was also 'Pawky'), with his mother being Isabel Turnbull. He lived at 9 Loan and his descendants farmed fields near there. He had 4 sisters: Nellie, who married Tam Harkness, and whose daughter Hannah married Charles Gray Laidlaw; Jane, who had a child to a prisoner called Cabourne, this daughter marrying toy merchant and grocer David S. Park, and secondly married George Milligan and was the mother of Provost Milligan; and another who married a French prisoner of war, who is traditionally said to have been a Bonaparte (although this is hardly credible), returning to France where he obtained a divorce and remarried. He is probably the 'Workman' in Hawick on the ballot (right after James, probably his brother) for the Militia in Hawick in 1801 Probably the same Robert, described as a 'farmer or carter, then and now or lately residing in the West Port', was one of the Tory supporters who was stripped almost naked and beaten up by the Radical mob near the Tower Knowe at the 1837 election. He was cut in the thigh, but escaped into the house of some Turnbulls on Silver Street, and was found hiding under the bed. It was said that his unpopularity arose from his having switched his political allegiance. On his way down to the inquiry in London, he is supposed to have said on the ship 'there's naethin but a fir deal atween us an eternity', and asked the Captain to sail close to the edge – 'He's been away this month an' mair, At Lon'on Town, a witness there, Wi' Tully, Paterson, and Kennedy, An scores of ithers that are ready . . . ' [RDW]. He was recorded on the 1841 and 1851 censuses at about 9 Loan and farmed 16 acres. He was unmarried in 1851, but in 1855 married Helen Leithead (b.c.1825) in Hawick and they had children John (b.1853) and Archibald (b.1855). In 1861 his widow and 2 sons were still living at 9 Loan. He was buried in Wilton Kirkyard. Robert (b.1781/2) born in Wilton Parish, he was a soldier and agricultural labourer. It is possible he was the Robert listed as a servant at Headshaw in Ashkirk Parish on the 1801 ballot for the Militia. In 1841 he was an Army Pensioner at Wauchope and in 1851 was listed as both Chelsea Pensioner and labourer. He married Mary Turnbull in Hobkirk Parish in 1821. His widow was still living at Wauchope Cottages in 1861. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was listed in 1835 as a gardener living at Roadside. Robert (19th C.) described being 'in Broadlee' in Castleton Parish in 1832 when he was charged with 'the sin of fornication' with Helen Thomson. Robert (b.1823/4) born in Wilton Parish, he was an agricultural labourer. He was living at Hassendeanbank in 1851. His wife was Helen and their children included Elizabeth, Christina, James and John. Robert Telfer 'Moose' (1866–1907) son of Henry and Ann Armstrong. He was a 'turf commission agent' (i.e. bookie) who moved to Leeds. His nickname came from a discoloured patch on his cheek. He was a member of St. Cuthbert's choir while in Hawick, and was a well known singer at Colour Bussings and other events. He was the first singer of the songs 'Up wi' the Banner', 'Hawick' and 'I Like Auld Hawick the Best'. He was the first singer of 'Up wi' the Banner' at the Colour Bussing of 1887, when it was sung to the tune of 'Hail to the Chief', and he also debuted the new tune at the 1888 Colour Bussing. He is buried in the Wellogate. Rev. Stuart Maxwell 'Max' (1937–2015) born in Mansfield, Nottinghamshire, he was educated at Kelham College and Lichfield Theological College and was ordained in 1960. He was with churches in Derbyshire before coming to Hawick as Priest-in-Charge of St. Cuthbert's in 1992. He was Rector from 1995. He also spent some time working for the Guardian and Observer newspapers. His wife was Margaret. He retired to Inverurie. Thomas (15th C.) listed as 'Thomas Patonsoun' among the Roxburghshire men given remission in 1488/9 for their support of the deceased James III. Most of the men appear to have been associated with Douglas of Cavers. Probably the same 'Thome Patonson' is listed among many Rutherfords and others who had their fines compunded in 1501 by Walter Ker of Cessford and Henry Haitlie of Mellerstain. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. His children included Isobel (b.1634), William (b.1639) and Thomas (b.1642). He may be the Thomas who married 'Issobell Duntone' in Ashkirk in 1631. Thomas (17th C.) married Bessie Veitch in Ashkirk Parish in 1645. Thomas (17th C.) married Isobel Nichol in Ashkirk Parish in 1652. Thomas (17th/18th C.) married Bessie Legerwood in Ashkirk Parish in 1706. Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Janet Kedie, possibly in 1720 (although the bride's name is not given) and their children included: Janet (b.1723); William (b.1726); and Agnes (b.1731). Thomas (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Helen Gibson in 1772 and their children included: Janet (b.1773); Mary (b.1775); and Margaret (b.1778). Thomas (b.c.1770s) resident of Synton North Mains according to the 1799 ballot for the Militia in Ashkirk Parish. Rev. Thomas Whyte (1863–1920) born in Carnwath, son of Adam and Jean White. He was ordained as minister of Roberton Free Kirk ('the Snoot Kirk') in 1889. In 1900 he moved to Midcalder, where he was successor to his brother-in-law, Robert L. Browning. In 1900 he married Jessie Gray He is buried at Midcalder. Thomas 'Tom' (19th/20th C.) printer who went into partnership with 'Piper' Scott in 1911. A keen rugby supporter, he wrote 'The History of Hawick Rugby Football Club: 1873–1956'. He was also known locally as a bowler. His sons Doug, Elliot and Wullie continued the family business until 1988. Walter of Burnflat (17th/18th C.) recorded in 1689 when his daughter was baptised in Hawick Parish. His wife was Margaret Elliot and the witnesses were Patricke Briggs and James Elliot (perhaps related to his wife). He was presumably either father of Walter (and hence grandfather of 'Old Mortality') or the father of 'Old Mortality' and he had an earlier marriage. He could be the Walter in Burnflat who witnessed a baptism for Francis in 1687. He may have been the son of Archibald born in Hawick in 1656 and perhaps brother of Robert. Note that Robert had a posthumous daughter with a Margaret Elliot in 1683; it is unclear if this was the same woman, but it is possible that Robert was his brother and he married his brother's former partner. Walter (17th/18th C.) gardener in Hawick Parish. It is unclear who his parents were, but perhaps he was son of William and Agnes Allan. He was gardener for Gideon Scott of Falnash for 18 years, living at Fenwick and also farming Fenwick, Alton Croft and part of Goldielands. In 1704 he was recorded as 'Gardner in fennick' and in 1707 as 'gardener in Fennick'. In 1714 he (and Walter of Burnflat) witnessed a baptism for roadlayer Archibald. In 1715 he was 'gardner to Mr Robert Cunningham our Minister'. In 1716 he witnessed the baptism of Robert 'Old Mortality', son of Walter of Burnflat (who may thus have been his cousin or other relative). In 1720 he witnessed a baptism for an Anderson who was a weaver in Burnflat. His children (perhaps from a first marriage) included William (b.1694/5), who married Isobel Sliman in 1727. He married Helen Marshall and their children included: Walter (b.1701), who married Isabell Glendinning in 1726; Gideon (b.1704), presumably named after his employer; John (b.1707); and Archibald (b.1715). The witnesses in 1704 were Gideon Scott of Falnash and Francis Gledstains of Whitlaw, in 1707 were Gideon Scott of Falnash (again) and Bailie James Deans and in 1715 were Archibald 'casaer in Flexs' and Henry Orrock. Note that he was having children in Hawick Parish at the same time as Walter of Burnflat (to whom he was probably related, perhaps as a cousin), making it easy to confuse them. Walter of Burnflat (17th/18th C.) father of Robert, 'Old Mortality'. He acquired Burnflat from his own father in 1688. He is recorded being 'of Burnflat' in baptismal records of 1700, 1706, 1707, 1708 and 1711. In 1707 he witnessed a baptism for 'Casier' Archibald, who was probably a relative; he is probably the Walter who witnessed another baptism for the same man in 1710 and in 1714 (along with another Walter). His lands in the Parish of Hawick were valued at £40 Scots in 1710. He was recorded as a heritor of Hawick Parish in 1711. In 1713 he made a request to the Bailies and Council that the boundary between his land at Burnflat and the Common be marked out; it is stated that there were 'seventeen march stones set along the march'. He married Margaret (also sometimes known as Helen) Scott and they had at least 8 children, with perhaps only Bessie, Francis and Robert surviving to adulthood. Their children included: Bessie (b.c.1698), who married John Ruecastle; Helen (b.1700); John (b.1703); Francis (b.1706); Walter (b.1708); John (again, b.1711); Robert 'Old Mortality' (b.1713); and Robert (again, b.1716). There is no baptismal record for Bessie, but in her 1719 marriage record her father is clearly Walter of Burnflat. He could be the Walter of Burnflat whose son Walter was baptised in 1695, with witnesses John and Thomas Waugh. The baptismal witnesses in 1700 were John Elliot in Nether Southfield and William Henderson in Flex, in 1706 were William Henderon in Flex and Bailie George Martin, in 1711 were carrier Henry (probably a relative) and merchant John Graham, in 1713 were John Scott ('souldier', possibly related to his wife) and Henry Paterson, and in 1716 were Walter Scott 'beddel in Hawick' (possibly related to his wife) and gardener Walter Paterson (perhaps a cousin or similar relative). He is probably the Walter 'of Burnflat' who witnessed a baptism in 1725 (for William Stoddart), along with 'Robert Paterson there' (who may have been a brother, since his son Robert would have been too young to be a witness). He may be the Walter who witnessed a baptism for the other Walter in Hawick in 1728. Either he or a son Walter is the former Laird of Burnflat mentioned in evidence given in 1767 regarding the former use of the Common; he held 'a quarter of land in Hawick' and kept more than 100 sheep, supported by pasturing them on the Common. Walter (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. His children included Marion (b.1703). Walter (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish, son of gardener Walter. In 1726 he married Isobel Glendinning and their children included Walter (b.1728). The witnesses in 1728 were Bailie Purdom and Walter (probably of Burnflat). He could be the Walter, son of Walter, baptised in Hawick in 1695. Walter (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Telford and their children included Margaret (b.1732) and William (b.1732). He could be the deceased Walter whose son William died in Hawick in 1782. Walter (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. His children included: Elizabeth (b.1735). Walter (18th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. His wife was Janet Brown and their unnamed son was baptised in 1747. Walter (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Howpasley in 1780. He married Nelly Laidlaw and their children included Janet (b.1780), with his wife acting as sponsor for the baptism in Roberton; this suggests that his wife was from Roberton, but he was not. Walter (18th C.) married Jane 'Bamer' in Ashkirk Parish in 1776. Walter (b.1770s) slater at Turn in Kirkton Parish. He is recorded in 1797 on the list of men on the ballot to serve in the Militia and in 1799 was among those whose names had not been drawn, but were no longer living in the area. Walter (b.1817/8) born in Kirkton Parish. In 1861 he was farmer of 10 acres at 'Hankimshaugh', which was another name for Hummelknowehaugh. He married Mary Amos and their children included Mary, William, Walter, Isabella, Ann and John. William (16th C.) recorded as being 'in Cruik' when he witnessed a Melrose Abbey charter relating to the lands of Crook in 1569. William (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet 'Faire' and their children included: Margaret (b.1636); Robert (b.1639); and Marion (b.1641). The witnesses in 1639 were James and David Scott. William (17th C.) recorded in 1644 when he was among Hawick men mentioned in relation to raising money and supplies for the Covenanting army. William (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Agnes Allan and their children included: Robert (b.1656); and Bessie (b.1673). In 1656 he and Robert (surely a close relative) witnessed a baptism for George Heatley and Janet Allan (who may have been his sister-in-law). Probably along with the same Robert he witnessed a baptism in 1654 for Archibald and Helen Heatley. It seems likely that he, William and Archibald are all recorded as 'communicants' at Borthwickshiels in 1650. William (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Marion Ruecastle and their daughter Bessie was baptised in 1671. He could be the same man as the miller in Hawick. He could also be the William whose daughter Janet married Adam Ruecastle. William (17th C.) referred to as 'in Hawick' in 1681 when he rented Hawick Mill from the Duchess of Buccleuch. He was Hawick's miller for at least 1682–87. He may be the William who in 1686 was involved in a dispute over a pack of wool stolen from outside his door, with him claiming that the same wool was found in Rachel Gledstains' house. He could be the William who was listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick 'eist the water' in 1694 and the merchant listed among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He could be the William recorded in 1692 when 'in a process of marching' it was decided by the Town Council that he 'may have the better and mair free passage with packs of wool, and leading out of his mucke' [BR1692]. He could be the William who witnessed a baptism for James Hamilton in Hawick in 1673 and another for John Scott in 1699. He may be the William, heritor in Hawick, who was listed in 1680 among local men convicted for being Covenanters (although not appearing in court), the accusations including attacking 'the Tower and Castle of Hawick'. William (17th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He married Janet 'Heutsone' and their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1687. William (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish. His daughter Elizabeth was baptised in 1693. William (17th C.) listed at Highchesters in the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. His daughter Janet was baptised in 1705. William (b.1694/5) son of Walter, he was a gardener and Burgess of Hawick. His father was gardener to Gideon Scott of Falnash for 18 years, living at Fenwick, and also acting as shepherd for the farms of Fenwick and half of Goldielands and Alton Croft. He gave evidence in the court case regarding the Common in 1767, having himself acted as cattle herd for Scott of Falnash's animals for 10 years; he was at that time described as married and on the Poor Roll of Hawick. In 1727 in Hawick he married Isobel, daughter of John Sliman. Their children included: Walter (b.1728); John (b.1739); and Archibald (b.1743). He could be the William who witnessed a baptism in Hawick for Robert Scott in 1763. The witnesses in 1728 were John Turnbull and shoemaker John Scott and in 1743 were saddler Francis Ruecastle and merchant John Cavers. William (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Chisholme in 1731 when his son William was baptised. William (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk. He married Helen Donaldson and their son Andrew was baptised in 1748. William (18th C.) said by James Wilson to have been nephew of Robert 'Old Mortality' and to have sold the family property of Burnflat in 1753. William (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen Hogg and their children included: William (b.1769); and Janet (b.1771). William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. In 1777 he was living at Orchard. His children included Adam (b.1767) and Agnes (b.1777). William (18th C.) resident of Southdean Parish. His daughter Margaret was baptised in 1781. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Silverbuthall. His son William died in 1829. He was probably related to Archibald, who farmed at Silverbuthall (possibly his brother, and hence the William, son of James, born in 1761). William (1769/70–1837) resident of Roberton Parish. He married Helen Armstrong in Hawick in 1798; she died in Hawick in 1856, aged 85. In 1841 and 1851 his widow was living with their son James at Raesknowe. His children included James (1805/6–54) and Margaret (1803/4–18). He died at Branxholme Braes and is buried in Borthwick Waas. William (1799/1800–1875), who is noticed on the reverse of the same gravestone, was probably also his son. William (b.c.1770s) wright at Sandyhaugh according to the 1799 ballot for the Militia in Ashkirk Parish. Probably the same William was listed as a joiner at Firknow on the 1801 Militia ballot for Ashkirk Parish. William (b.c.1780) baker in Hawick and Bailie in the 1820s and 30s. He was recorded as a baker on the 1801 ballot for the Militia. His shop was on the High Street, around No. 62, and he was also a tenant farmer of Winnington Rig. He was one of the 18 founders of the Relief (Allars) Kirk in Hawick, and one of the first elders. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He presided at the 1832 Reform Bill celebrations and made the often quoted statement 'It was huz and Mainchester that carried the Reform Bill' [T]. He was listed as a High Street baker on Pigot's 1837 directory and was there on the 1841 and 1851 censuses. He married Agnes Rutherford and their children included: Robert (b.1803); William (b.1804); Walter (b.1806); Helen (b.1808); Isabella (b.1811); Agnes (b.1813); George (b.1815), also a baker; Susan (b.1817); and John (b.1821). An unnamed child of his died in 1811. William (1799/1800–1875) labourer living at Newmill Damfoot. He was probably son of William and Helen Armstrong. He married Ann Elliot, who died in 1855, aged 56. Their children included: Elizabeth; John (b.1830); Adam; and Simon. He and his wife are buried in Borthwick Waas. William (b.1804/5) farm steward at Stouslie. In 1835 he was listed as a labourer at Leaheads, with the entry changed to be farm servant at Stouslie in 1840, and he was farm steward at Stouslie by 1841. He married Isabella Deans and their children included: Isabella (b.1827), baptised in Kirkton; Agnes (b.1830), baptised in Wilton, who married Daniel Fisher; and Margaret (b.1840), also baptised in Wilton. William (19th C.) member of Hawick Free Kirk. He married Elizabeth Howison and their son William was baptised in 1836. Rev. William (1846–1932) born in Glasgow, he was educated at Glasgow University and Glasgow Evangelical Union Hall. He became evangelical preacher at Hindpool Road, Barrow-in-Furness 1874–78. He was then at Adelphi Chapel, Hackney Road, Middlesex. In 1888 he moved to Newcastleton Congregational Church, where he remained for about 2 years. He was then at Forfar. Rev. William (1840–1906) from Torthorwald in Dumfriesshire, he was educated at the University of Edinburgh. He became licentiate at Saughtree Kirk 1866–70. He was the first person to minister to the congregation there. He is recorded residing at Ovenshank in 1868. He was minister at Ancrum and Longnewton 1870–1906. He married Susan Crow Noble and their children were William, Margaret Crow, Dr. Norman and James. William (b.1872) articled to Edinburgh architects McGibbon & Ross in 1893, he became J.P. Alison's assistant in Hawick in 1897. He later worked in London and Liverpool (formerly spelled 'Patersone', 'Patersonne', 'Patersoun', 'Patterson', 'Petersoun', etc., as well as sometimes 'Patonsone').

Paiterson-Broon (pi'-ur-sin-broon, paw'-ur-sin-brown) n. (Paterson-Brown) Dr. June, C.B.E., nee Garden (1932–2009) born and bred in Edinburgh, her father was Wing Cmdr. Thomas Garden. She studied medicine at Edinburgh University, graduating in 1955. In 1957 she married Peter and the couple moved to Hawick. She worked as a medical officer in the Hawick Family Planning and Well Woman Clinics and did much to promote family planning in the Borders, at a time when the topic was an extremely sensitive one. She was long involved with the Girl Guide movement, becoming Hawick District Commissioner, Roxburghshire County Commissioner, Scottish Chief Commissioner and finally Chief Commissioner for the U.K. and Commonwealth. In 1989 she was given the highest award in Guiding, the Silver Fish, in recognition of her 30 years of service. She also chaired or served on many committees involving children, youth and education. She was made Lord-Lieutenant of Roxburgh, Ettrick and Lauderdale in 1988, the first woman appointed to such a position in Scotland. She was named as the Tweeddale Press Group's 'Man of the Year' in the 1980s and in 1991 was awarded the C.B.E. Dr. Peter N. (1930/1–) from Edinburgh, his father was Consulting Surgeon at the Royal Infirmary. He was educated at Edinburgh University, graduating in 1955. He moved to Hawick in 1957 as a G.P., arriving in the midst of a flu epidemic. He continued in practice in Hawick until he retired in 1991. He became Medical Officer for the Roxburgh Branch of the Red Cross, Director of the Children's Hospice, Vice-President of R.E.A.C.T., and Honorary Medical Advisor of the Red Cross in Scotland. His first-aid booklet 'A Matter of Life or Death' (1975, 1980) sold hundreds of thousands of copies. He also wrote 'The Memoirs of a Country Doctor'.

Paiterson Gairdens (pi'-ur-sin-gār-dinz) n. Paterson Gardens, a street built at Burnflat near the Vertish Hill. The houses were erected in 2006 and named after 'Old Mortality' whose dilapidated birthplace was demolished to make room for the new buildings. Some stones from the old building were built into the pillars at the entrance to the new housing area and plaques describing the connection to Old Mortality were unveiled there in 2016.

Paiterson's Haa (pi'-ur-sinz-haw) n. Paterson's Hall, former farmstead in the Borthwick valley. It is marked on the south bank of the Borthwick Water, north of Eilrig.

pajamis (pa-jaw-miz) n., pl. pyjamas.

pake (pāk) n., arch. a disreputable person, especially a woman, usually with a qualifying adjective – 'A cow is called an 'auld pake'; a niggardly woman, a 'hard pake' ' [JoJ].

Palacehill (paw-lis-hil) n. farm in Ancrum Parish, between Woodhead and Sandystones, to the south of Palace Hill. This was the seat of a branch of the Scotts in the 18th century. The name may be related to a former 'palace' of the bishops of Glasgow (also written 'Palace Hill'; this is probably the place labelled 'Peace' on Pont's c.1590 manuscript map).

Palace Waas (paw-lis-wawz) n. popular name for an area in Ashkirk Glebe, about 250 yards south of Ashkirk Kirk, now within the golf course. This was the site of ruins, which were still visible in the late 18th century and may have been the ancient palace of the Bishops of Glasgow. Alexander Scott 'called of Paliss' is recorded in Selkirk documents in the period 1532–35; he was son of David Scott, Vicar of Ashkirk, who may have previously held these lands. Robert Scott 'of Paleis' was deceased in 1579 when his widow Isabel Donald's inventory was recorded. Walter Scott was there in 1580. An agreement was witnessed for the Scotts of Blindhaugh there in 1581. 'Johnne Scott of the Palice', servitor of George Scott of Synton is recorded in 1587, suggesting the place name (but presumably no longer the palace) still existed at that time. There is now no evidence of any structure in this location. A mediæval ewer was found here in about 1840 when the glebe lands were being ploughed (it is 'Paleis Wallis' in 1580 in the Walter Mason Collection).

the Palais (thu-paw-lā) n. popular name for the 'Palais de Danse', part of the Odeon theatre complex, off the arcade. It was a popular dance venue in the 1940s and 50s – 'Ee'd Stan Reid's and the Palais anaw ... ' [AY].

Palmer (paw-mur) n. John (17th/18th C.) servant at Branxholme. In 1719 in Hawick he married Helen Cavers. Their daughter Janet was baptised in Hawick in 1720. Walter (16th C.) listed among people that were owed money by William Scott, younger of Branxholme, when he died in 1552. He is recorded as 'Waltero Palmer in Hawik' and he was owed the large sum of 7 pounds and 6 pence. William (16th C.) listed in 1579 among people who were debtors to Isabel Donald, widow of Robert of Palace. He owed 2 bolls of oats and was probably from the Ashkirk area. William (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Catherine (or Janet) Douglas and their children included: Margaret (b.1649); and John (b.1651). William (17th C.) resident of the Hassendean area. He witnessed a baptism for George Scott in Easter Groundistone in 1688. He married Janet Aitchison in Roberton Parish in 1688. He is probably the William 'Balmer' whose wife had the same name and whose daughter Elizabeth was baptised in Ashkirk in 1689. In 1694 he was 'pamer' when his son William was baptised in Ashkirk, with witnesses Andrew Fletcher and Thomas Wallace. He had a further child, Janet (b.1697), also baptised in Ashkirk. William (17th/18th C.) recorded in 1707 as Town Herd when his daughter Bessie was baptised in Hawick. The witnesses were smith Thomas Oliver and weaver Mungo Swan.

Palmer-Douglas (paw-mur-dug-lis) n. Archibald (1880–1947) elder son of Mary and Edward. He was the heir of Cavers, but pre-deceased his mother. He unveiled the Deanbrae War Memorial in 1920. During his time the Cavers estate was reduced by about half, with farms at Denholm and Spittal being sold off. He lived at Lidgard. He served as a Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. In 1920 he married Mary Kuehn. His children were: James Malcolm (1922–2013), who succeeded; Angela Mary (b.1924); and John Aidan (b.1929). In 1947 his wife and children gifted 2 silver communion plates to Cavers Kirk in his meomory. Capt. Edward, J.P., D.L. (1836–1933) originally from Sussex, he was youngest son of Rev. George Palmer of Sullington in Sussex. He served with the Rifle Brigade. In 1879 he married Mary Malcolm who became heiress of Cavers and so he changed his surname. He devoted efforts to improving the Cavers estate, which had been neglected for several generations. This included partly rebuilding the mansion house. He joined the Jedforest Club in 1883, formed the Jedforest Hounds in 1884 and was involved with the Upper Teviotdale Fisheries Association. He served as Master of the Jedforest Hounds until 1885. He rode in the 1891 Common Riding. He also gave the small piece of ground for the Hornshole Monument. He served as J.P. for Roxburghshire, as well as being Deputy Lieutenant and a County Councillor. He had a son, Archibald (b.1880) who pre-deceased his mother and another son, Malcolm (b.1882). James Malcolm (1922–2013) son of Archibald and grandson of Mary and Edward, the first Palmer-Douglases. When he inherited the Cavers estate it consisted of about 5,000 acres. Not a good estate manager, the family moved into Midgard and removed the roof from Cavers House to save tax in the 1950s. The family then moved to the Eskdalemuir area. He sold off the last 90 acres of the Cavers estate in 1975. He then moved to Caithness, but later took up the cause to preserve Cavers Kirk. He had 3 wives, having children Helen and Nigel to his first wife, Dorothy Margaret Campbell. He also had children Stephen and Frances to his second wife, Dorothy Smith. He was buried in the family lair at Cavers Old Kirk. Mary Douglas nee Malcom (1858/9–1949) daughter of Mary Douglas and William Elphinstone Malcolm of Burnfoot in Eskdale. She succeeded as Laird of Cavers when her uncle James died without male issue in 1878. In 1879 she married Capt. Edward Palmer from Sussex and they adopted the double-barrelled name. The Cavers Lairdship was inherited by James Malcolm, who was son of her son Archibald. She had another son Malcolm, who died aged 19 in 1902. She had liferent of properties that had been owned by her father, after his death in 1907. Many documents relating to her financial and legal matters are in the archives of the National Library of Scotland. Stephen son of James, he still lives locally, and helped organise the first Hawick Chess Congress in 1992 (also written 'Palmer Douglas').

Paris (paw-ris) n. Lawrence (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Ann Tudhope in 1757. Perhaps the same Lawrence in 1775 had an account with the Burgh of Selkirk for lighting and cleaning lamps; there are men of the same name recorded in Selkirk having children with Jean Angus in the period 1778–81 and with Janet Riddell 1768–74. He is probably the 'Laurence', husband of 'Peggy Cheap', whose son of the same name died in Hawick in 1811.

parishin (paw-ri-shin) n., arch. a parish, body of parishioners – 'Ane tryell and valuatioune maid of the lands within the parochine of Hawik ...' [PR1627], '... ye have payid for burning of the witches our parochin thinkis our high sett and in respect ye have payid the same' [SPB1629], '... and then to come down before the parochine and ask for her forgiveness for that slander' [Ash1635], 'The whilk day being appointed for the admission of Mr Henry Ellot to the function of the ministrie, at the parochin kirke of Bedroule ...' [Bed1640], 'The upper end of the parishine of Hassendean' [BR1658], 'The particular valuatiounes of the particular rowmes of ye said parochine' [BR] (there are many spelling variants, e.g. 'parochin'; cf. the older paroche and the more recent pairish).

Paris press (paw-ris-pres) n. a machine in the knitwear industry used to steam-blast and vacuum-dry garments on an adjustable metal body, replacing the use of the 'boardin-hoose' – ' 'A work on the Paris press', 'How interesting, do you commute weekly?' '.

park (pawrk) n. a field, agricultural enclosure, 'inby' land on a hill farm, a hunting enclosure – 'If Simon wishes to use the wester part or hill for a sheep park he must enclose the same with a stone fence and the park thereafter not to be ploughed' [SPB1773], 'The parks are ribbed wi' meltin' snaw And the hills are derk wi' rain' [DH] (see also pairk and perk; the word is used in one of these older meanings in several local place names, e.g. Branxholme Park, Hermitage Park, Park, Cottage Park and specific fields).

Park (pawrk) n. local name occasionally used for Branxholme Park, e.g. in baptismal records of 1695, 1708 and 1712.

Park (pawrk) n. former tower on the east bank of the Hermitage Water, somewhere near Redheugh in Liddesdale, once a stronghold of the Elliots. The precise location is uncertain, but a recent claim (apparently through dowsing!) puts it just opposite Redheugh farm. It is probably the 'Parkis de Casteltoun' listed in the Liddesdale rental roll of c.1376, with a value of 4 merks. 'Sym Ellott of the Park' is recorded in 1586. It was later distinguished from the more important lands of 'Copshaw Park' through the designation 'Little Park'; it thus appears in the 1694 Hearth Tax records, with William Scott as tenant. The farm stead was combined with the farm of Powisholm on the 1718 survey of properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch; there it is shown as an enclosed piece of land and house near the Hermitage Water, a bit to the south-east of Redheugh (it is marked on Gordon's map c.1650, as 'Parck' on Blaeu's 1654 map and is 'Little Park' on Stobie's 1770 map; it must be related to a former hunting or agricultural enclosure; note that it is easily confused with the other 'Park' further south, close to the modern Newcastleton; see also Little Park).

Park (pawrk) n. former name for lands in Liddesdale, close to the modern Newcastleton, also known as 'Copshaw Park'. It is easily confused with lands of the same name, also called 'Castleton Park', which lay to the north, on the Hermitage Water. The original location has probably been obliterated by Newcastleton village, but on modern maps Park Hill, reaching a height of 258 m lies to the west of the village. In the rental roll of 1541 it is valued at 13 shillings and 4 pence and tenanted by Simon Elliot. 'Ryche Ellott of the Park' was recorded in 1548. 'Jock o the Park', also known as 'Little Jock Elliot', subject of a Border ballad, was said to be the man who wounded the Earl of Bothwell in 1566, causing Mary Queen of Scots to take her famous ride to Hermitage Castle. His tower may have stood where Newcastleton railway station was built. 'Rowie' or 'Robin' of the Park is recorded in 1578 and 1581. 'Sym Ellott of the Park', 'James Rowe in the Park' and 'Archibald Ellott of the Park' are further recorded in 1581. Airchie, 'Scot's Hob's Jock' and 'Rowie's John' of the Park are listed in 1584. 'Young Archie of the Park' occurs in 1599, James Scott possessed 'Parke callit Copshaholme' in 1632 and 'Rollie, called Park' is recorded in the 1660s. Walter Scott was tenant there in 1694, and John Scoon also had his blacksmith's there at that time. This is probably the Park where John Elliot was recorded as farmer in 1786–92 – 'Ma kinsmen are true, an' brawlie, At glint o' an enemie, Round Park's auld Turrets they rally, An' wha daur meddle wi' me?' [T] (also called 'the Park', it is 'Park' in 1541 and 'Parke' in 1583; it is recorded on Stobie's 1770 map; see also Copshaw and Copshaw Park).

Park (pawrk) n. former name for lands near the confluence of the Meikledale Burn with the Ewes Water about 5 miles south of Mosspaul, later called 'Park o Buss' or 'Buss' and now the farm of 'Bush'. David Armstrong had a charter for these lands in 1535 after they were resigned by Robert, Lord Maxwell. Along with Wrae it was described as a 20-merk land in 1550, when inherited by Robert, Lord Maxwell, by John, Lord Maxwell in 1604, by Robert, Lord Maxwell in 1619 and by John, Earl of Nithsdale in 1670 and William, Earl of Nithsdale in 1696. It is listed as 'the landis of Park alias Bliss' (probably a transcription error) and later 'Park alias Buse' among the Dumfriesshire possessions of the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1653, 1661 and 1663.

Park (pawrk, pārk) n. Andrew (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at 'Oulvcleugh head' in 1737 and Wolfcleuchhead in 1741. He is probably related to William, who was at Wolfcleuchhead later. He is probably the Andrew who married Janet Scott in Roberton in 1736. His children included: Helen (b.1737); James (b.1738); Janet (b.1740); Ann (b.1741); and John (b.1745). Andrew (b.1815) son of shepherd William, he was born in Invernes-shire, one of 13 children, and grew up in the Hawick area. In 1851 he was a 'Wool Carder', living at 'Upper Lynnwood' (probably Lynnwood Cottages). He was also said to have worked as a foreman in a large woollen mill, was a great reader, naturalist and inventor. In 1857 he presented to the Museum some buckles worn by Mungo Park on his first journey to Africa (suggesting he was a relative), as well as 'a specimen of that ingenious puzzle – a reel in a bottle'. The Archæological Society also purchased from him a stuffed golden eagle. He became a factory superintendent in Hawick before emigrating to Andes, Delaware County, New York in 1857 with his wife and eight of their children. In 1849 he married Sophia Milligan (1819–79) and they had 11 children, 9 born in Hawick: George (b.1839); William R. (b.1841); Jane (b.1843), who married Charles Mallock; Rev. Thomas (b.1845), minister at Allegheny City, Pennsylvania; Janet (b.1847), who married Charles Wheeler; David Henry (b.1850); Andrew (1852–1910); Isabella (b.1854), who married Dr. Stroud of Ontario; Sophia Ann (b.1856), who married J.R. Gordon; Ellen (b.1859), who married James Page; and Margaret Ann (b.1866), who married R. Darr. Angus (20th C.) from Singdean. He was a Sergeant in the Scots Guards and was held as a prisoner of war in 1944. Archibald 'Archie' (19th/20th C.) member of the Drums and Fifes. He was uncle to Andrew Ballantyne Anderson. David (18th C.) tenant farmer at East Buccleuch until about 1800. He could be the tenant in 'Dum Fedlain' who in 1793 was in dispute with William Pringle, formerly shepherd at 'Dum Fedlain at Howpasley' regarding the loss of 10 sheep. It is unclear what 'Dum Fedlain' may refer to. David Scott (b.1806/7) brother of Andrew and son of shepherd William and Janet Main from Inverness. He was born at Abertarff, near Inverness, but grew up in Hawick. The family were probably related to Mungo the explorer. He was a grocer and spirit dealer, as well as draper and toy merchant at 19 High Street. He was listed on the High Street in Pigot's 1837 directory. In Slater's 1852 directory he was listed as a grocer, flint glass dealer, toy dealer and draper on the High Street. He was one of the first deacons at Hawick Free Kirk from 1844. His wife Isabella was a daughter of a French prisoner of war called Cabourne, and a sister of 'Pawkie' Paterson; she died in 1866. His children included: Helen (b.1831), who married Walter Scott; William (1833–97), who was unmarried and a draper's assistant; Janet Georgina (1835–1905), who married Thomas Morton; John Scott Douglas (1837–1906) also a draper; Jane Maria Paterson Blake (1839–1904), who died in Hawick; Isabella (b.1842), probably died young; David Scott (1844–1924), who died in Devon; Agnes Isabella Jardine (b.1848), who married Draper John Forbes; and Robert Andrew Scott (1851–1903), who died in Sunderland. David Henry (1850–1910) born in Hawick, son of Andrew and Sophia Milligan (sister of Robert Milligan). The family emigrated to America in 1857, where he ran a farm implements business with his brother and then moved into real estate, finally becoming a prominent citizen in the community of Carroll in Iowa. He helped build the town there, and was instrumental in erecting the town's Masonic temple. He married Edith C. Vette and had 3 daughters. Dennis Park (20th C.) former President of Hawick Film Group. He made the short cine-films 'A Road-Side Scrap' and 'A Toothy Tale' in about 1975. George (b.1822/3) frame-worker in Hawick. He was living at '29 High St., 3d. Back Houe' in 1861. He married Mary Elliot in Hawick in 1849. Their children included Janet, George, Walter and Archibald. He could be the Goerge who in 1874 donated a copper coin to the Museum. Hercules (16th/17th C.) one of a number of men fined in 1609 for harassing and threatening Sir Robert Scott of Thirlestane. He is referred to as 'alias callit Will the Bastart', and some of his accomplices included Armstrongs of Kinmont. James (18th C.) married Margaret Tait in Hawick in 1770. James (b.1813/4) from Morebattle, he was a shoemaker in Denholm. His business was on Main Street. He married Margaret Turnbull, from Bowden Parish. Their children included Agnes, Thomas (b.1845), James (b.1850) and Mary (b.1852). James (19th C.) married Beatrix Welsh in 1839. The marriage was recorded in both Hawick and Wilton Parishes. James (19th C.) resident of New York who must have had a local connection. In 1865 he gifted to the Museum a 'pair of Japanese slippers'. James (20th C.) resident of Singdean. He served as Treasurer of the Hobkirk Parish Picnic. In 1932 he was presented with a silver salver on the occasion of his marriage. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Turnbull and their children included: Isobell (b.1682); Isobell (again, b.1684); and an unnamed child (b.1688). John (b.c.1770s) servant at Hermitage according to the ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1799. He was a shepherd at Hermitage on the 1801 ballot. John E. (18th/19th C.) grocer and spirit dealer on the High Street, recorded on Pigot's 1825/6 directory. He was Cornet in 1825. In that year there was some dispute over the Friday dinner, and there were efforts to select an opposition Cornet, but it came to nothing. Also in 1825 he was listed as a grocer on the subscription list for Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick'. John (19th C.) married Margaret Renelston in Hawick in 1841. Their children included: William (b.1842); John (b.1843); and Mary and Agnes (b.1845). All but the first child were baptised in Hawick Free Kirk. John (19th/20th C.) worker at Pesco's and rugby player with Hawick R.F.C. He played as a forward for the Greens in 1904/5 and was Club President 1935–38. Joseph (b.1808/9) born at Clintmains in Berwickshire, he was a shoemaker in Lilliesleaf. In 1851 he was on the south side of Main Street and employed 2 men. He was listed in Slater's 1852 directory. His wife was Elizabeth and their children included Thomas, Walter, Robert, James, Adam, David, Elizabeth and John. Joseph (19th C.) married Agnes Tudhope in Hawick in 1845. Joseph (19th C.) married Johnston Purves in Hawick in 1850. Thie son James Purves was baptised in 1852. In 1851 he was a frameworker living on the Loan, with his wife (from Jedburgh) employed as a 'Straw hat maker'. Margaret (18th/19th C.) local woman who wrote verses on the birth of an heir to Douglas of Cavers, which also gives a summary of the events around Hornshole and the Common Riding. This was published in Bet Young's collection of poetry in 1823, who was presumably a friend of hers; she was referred to as 'Mrs. Park', so presumably 'Park' was her married (rather than maiden) name. Mary (18th/19th C.) recorded along with Thomas Brydon as owner of 2 horses at Hoscoteshiel on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Mungo (1771–1806) famous African explorer, born at Foulshiels, near Selkirk, the 7th of 13 children of a tenant farmer, also Mungo. At one time he tried to set up as a medical practitioner in Hawick, but apparently found it more taxing than darkest Africa! He apprenticed to a surgeon in Selkirk, then went to Africa in 1795, returning after $2\,1/2$ years. He then married a daughter of his former employer, Dr. Anderson and set up in practice in Peebles. But the life of a country doctor was not for him and he set off for Africa again in 1805, when he drowned at Boussa on an ill-fated expedition to find the source of the Niger. There is a statue of him in Selkirk, and the ruins of his cottage still exist. An ornament from the grate out of the house where he was born is in the Museum (donated in 1900). Buckles worn by him on his first African journey were donated to the Museum in 1857, and in 1858 an African paddle brought back by him, along with letters donated by William Dickson. Additionally the 'medicine measure used by Mungo Park when practising as a doctor in Peebles' was donated to the Museum in 1877. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. In 1728 he was at Craikhope. His sons Andrew and Archibald were baptised in 1728. Thomas (18th/19th C.) farmer at Pinnacle recorded in the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. He was listed as tenant there on the 1801 Militia ballot. Thomas (19th C.) farmer at Little Cote, Cavers Parish. He was one of the Tory supporters victimised at the 'Tully's Mill' election riot of 1837. Thomas (19th C.) married Ann Dunlevy in Hawick in 1853. Thomas (b.1845) son of Andrew, he was born in Hawick, moved to America at age 13 and worked on a farm, before becoming a minister at Walton, New York. Walter (18th C.) married Janet Murray in Hawick in 1713. Walter (18th C.) married Janet Scott in Hawick in 1727. Walter (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Howcleuch in 1728, 'M...' in 1732 and Redfordgreen in 1734. His children included: William (b.1728); Agnes (b.1730); Margaret (b.1732); and Janet (b.1734). Walter (18th/19th C.) spinner in Hawick. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. William (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Howpasley in 1725, Craik in 1726 and Wolfcleuchhead in 1734 and 1737. His children included: an unnamed child (b.1725); Margaret (b.1726); Mary (b.1734); Elizabeth (b.1735); an unnamed child (b.1737); and Jean (b.1739). William (d.1809) resident of Wolfcleuchhead. He is probably related to Andrew, who was at Wolfcleuchhead earlier. He was recorded there in 1763, 1764, 1765 and 1767. He married Ann Harkness in Roberton in 1762 and their children included Isobel (b.1763), Helen (b.1764), Isobel (again, b.1766), William (b.1767), John (b.1769), Helen (b.1764), Janet (b.1771), John (b.1773), Mary (b.1775) and James (b.1779). In 1763 and 1767 he is recorded as 'younger', suggesting he was son of another William. His wife is probably the 'Isobel' Harkness whose death is recorded in Hawick in 1781. He could be the William who witnessed a baptism in Hawick for James Rae in 1790. His death is recorded in Hawick Parish, where he was 'from olfcleuch head'. William (c.1780–1844) shepherd, born in Inverness, he came to Hawick in the early 19th century. In 1798 he married Janet Main. Their children included: John (b.c.1801); James (b.c.1803); David Scott (b.c.1805), merchant in Hawick; Andrew (b.1806), who must have died young; Thomas (b.1808); Robert (b.1811); Andrew (b.1815), who married Sophia Milligan and emigrated to the U.S.; William (b.c.1820); Jane or Janet (b.c.1826); and several other daughters. Most of the family returned to the Highlands, but David and Andrew remained. William (b.1788) born at Crooks in Westerkirk Parish, son of William, who was killed in Grenada. He worked from an early age as a cow-herd, later becoming 'minister's man' to Rev. Dr. Brown of Eskdalemuir. He later rented the farm of Holmains in Dalton Parish, and spent more time contributing poetry to newspapers. He became editor of the Dumfries and Galloway Standard, but died shortly afterwards. He published 'The Vale of the Esk and Other Poems' (1833). William (b.c.1780) born in Hawick, he worked as an agricultural labourer and yarn spinner. In 1841 he was living on the Back Row and in 1851 on the Howegate. His wife was Agnes and their children included: John (b.c.1820); and Isabel (b.c.1821), who had children with a Richardson. William (19th C.) Hawick resident who married Elizabeth Stit. Their children included: William (b.1824); John (b.1835); and Francis (b.1837). William (19th C.) married Helen Leyden in Hawick in 1847. William (1833–97) son of toy merchant David S. He was a draper's assistant and hairdresser, who was one of the founding members of the Common-Riding Ceremonial Committee in 1887. He was also a Bailie, and acted as judge for the Cornet's Races. He was first appointed to the Race Committee in 1879 and later became its Chairman. He succeeded Anthony Dodds as Registrar for Hawick in the 1880s, with his office at 19 High Street. William (b.c.1837) son of James and Ann and brother of frame-worker Thomas. He is listed as 'Disibility: Imbcil' at 26 Loan in the 1861 census, and is probably the 'Wullie Pairk' mentioned in 'Hawick Immortals'. William (19th/20th C.) bank manager. He married Agnes, daughter of farmer James Henderson. William (1909–82) O.B.E., son of John, who was a director at Peter Scott's. He was educated at Hawick High School, before going to university and then joining the staff of the National Library of Scotland. He eventually became Keeper of Manuscripts there. He remained a keen Common Riding supporter, being a member of the Mosstroopers' Club as well as serving as President of the Callants' Club in 1956. In 1954 he wrote the book 'The First Fifty Years of the Hawick Callants' Club, A Short History'. He married May, 2nd daughter of Robert Wilson from Braemar Knitwear. He was once described as 'the amiably eccentric William Park, who for all his broad literary cultivation and scholarly insight was the least productive of curators'.

Park (pwrk) n. nickname for a former riever. He is recorded in 1502 as 'vocatis park', but his actual name is not given. He was among the men who Adam Scott of Tushielaw had remission for resetting for stealing sheep from farms in Peebleshire.

the Park (th̲u-pawrk) n. Wilton Lodge Park, consisting of 107 acres (43 hectares) around the banks of the Teviot at the southern end of Hawick. The house and estate were caslled Langlands until 1790. The grounds contain walks, the Museum, the Walled Gardens, sports fields, and recreational facilities. The land was purchased for £14,000 by the Town Council in 1889, and was fortunately left as a park, to be enjoyed by generations of Teries. A map of the estate was drawn up in 1890. Several structures in the Park, including the gate lodge and war memorials are grade C listed buildings. A bandstand was built in 1893, Langlands Bridge in 1894, the Boer War Memorial in 1903, the Laurie Bridge in 1924 and the Henderson Shelter in 1930. Trampolines were opened in 1970. A major regeneration project in 2015–18 (paid for by the Heritage Lottery Fund) saw a new bandstand erected, the Laurie and Henderson Shelters renovated, the Walled Gardens renewed, a new gallery in the Museum opened, an additional footbridge and new cafe constructed, the playground modernised, the fountain restored and the gates replaced – 'A love ti walk be Teviotside And sei its ripplin witters glide Doon throwe the Park at eventide In Hawick ma Border hame' [IWL].

the Park see Park

Park Brig (pawrk-brig) n. Park Bridge, also known as South Bridge, on the Riddell estate. It is a category B listed structure, constructed in the late 18th century.

Park Cottage (pawrk-ko'-eej) n. former name for a cottage in Wilton, probably on Langlands Road near the foot of Rosalee Brae. The Davidson family were there in 1841.

Parkdaill (pawrk-dāl) n. area of private housing between the main road and the Teviot, just south of Hawick, named in 1923 for its proximity to Wilton Lodge Park. It was once the site of one of the main fords across the Teviot, connecting to a lane (still preserved) which went up the hill to join the main road near Longbaulk. On a wooded knoll opposite Parkdaill is the site of a 14th century longhouse and byre which were excavated in 1965.

the Park Dyke (th̲u-pawrk-dīk) n. former name for a small stream or ditch forming part of the boundary of Templehall and Brewlands, described in a document of 1567 (written 'the parkdyik' in 1567 and 'the park dike' in 1604).

Parker (pawr-kur) n. Jane (19th C.) one of the 4 operators of the first power looms to arrive in Hawick, at Dicksons & Laings in 1830. It is possible she is the woman of the same name, working as a 'Woollen Warper' and living on the Back Raw in 1841; she was aged about 25 at that time, meaning she would have been very young when she first learned how to use the powerloom. Roger (19th C.) gamekeeper at Stobs Castle about 1875, when he 'winged' a buzzard on the estate. He was also gamekeeper on the Branxholme estate. He married Margaret Beatson in Hawick in 1863. Their children included: Margaret (b.1867), who married James Aitkin Henderson; Mary (b.1869); and Elizabeth (b.1872).

Parkheid (pawrk-heed) n. local name used for Synton Parkhead, as marked on Ainslie's 1773 map. Note that there are several other places of the same name.

Parkheid (pawrk-heed) n. area at the top of the Borthwickbrae estate, now marked by Parkhead Plantation. It was 'Borthbrae parkhead' in 1757 when Robert Hutton was living there. Andrew Davidson was there in 1763 and Walter Scott in 1767 (it is 'Park Heads' on Ainslie's 1773 map; see also Borthwickbrae Parkheid).

Parkheid (pawrk-heed) n. name used locally for Ormiston Parkhead.

Parkheid (pawrk-heed) n. former name for lands in the Barony of Winnington. It was among the lands of Winnington purchased by Gilbert Eliott of Stobs from Robert Elliot of Redheugh in 1622. The name was still recorded in the late 17th century.

Parkheid (pawrk-heed) n. former farmstead to the south of Todrig, marked on Ainslie's 1773 map.

Parkheid (pawrk-heed) n. cottage near Teviothead, located a little to the west of the Henry Scott Riddell monument. It is nicknamed 'Cuddy's Waas' (marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Parkheid Burn (pawrk-heed-burn) n. stream in Ashkirk Parish, running past Synton parkhead and meeting the Ale Water near Synton Mill.

Parkhill (pawrk-, perk-hil) n. farm between Chisholme and the Snoot. It is reached either via Chisholme House or by a grassy track leading up from near the Snoot Kirk. It was valued in 1627, paying '100 lb., vicarage 20 lb.', listed along with Chisholme and Lairhope. It was valued at £200 in 1643, when owned by Walter Chisholme. There were 16 'communicants' recorded there in 1650, namely James Chisholme, Margaret Scott, Walter Chisholme, Thomas Dodds, Marion Scott, Janet 'Birrone', Patrick Murray, Margaret Harper, Margaret Murray, Bessie Wilson 'Ed.', Bessie Wilson 'Younger', Robert Chisholme, Jean Chisholme, William Chisholme, Steven Rule and Janet Shiel. James Noble was living there in 1687. Along with much of neighbouring area it was transferred from Hawick Parish to Roberton in 1689/90. Around this time it was separately East and West Parkhill. The lands were held by the Chisholmes from at least the early 15th century until the 19th; presumably younger sons of the Laird of Chisholme were at one time given the lands, followed by their descendants. In 1649 Robert Chisholme in Chisholme Mill inherited the eastern lands from his father William, who is described as 'portioner of Parkhill'. John Hume and John Allan were recorded there in 1711, Walter Hume in 1713, John Nichol and Robert Cosser in 1717, Adam Hobkirk in 1721, Walter Turnbull in 1721–34, Robert Scott in 1723, John Watson in 1725, John Turnbull in 1725–28, John Gowans and John Nichol in 1727, Robert Govenlock in 1734–42 and James Laidlaw in 1736. John Miller was here in 1741, Walter Turnbull, John Turnbull and Walter Miller were living there in 1743. 'Chisholme Milne or Parkhill' was valued at £133 6s 8d in the 1740s. John Kidd and George White were there in 1753, William Scott in 1762, George White in 1763–67, William Scott in 1764–75 and William Riddell in 1766. Robert Elliot and Robert Scott were at 'Parkhill wester' in 1774. Walter Thomson was there in 1780–85, James Rodger in 1782–84, Thomas Elliot in 1784, James Miller in 1785, Robert Riddell in 1786 and Thomas Thomson and John Anderson in 1787. William Scott (who died about 1820) was also tenant there. The hill there reaches 233 m, with Wester Park Hill (actually to the south-east) reaching 303 m (it is on a parish map of 1650, and is marked 'Parckhill' on Blaeu's 1654 map and 'Parkhills' on Ainslie's 1773 map).

Park Hill (pawrk-hil) n. hill to the west of Newcastleton, reaching a height of 258 m, and connecting with Bedda Hill to the north. The area is rich in archæological evidence, with 4 groups of buildings within enclosures on the eastern side, an enclosure near the summit and boundary banks all around. However, some of this has been obliterated by the golf course landscaping.

Parkhillhaugh (pawrk-hil-hawf) n. flat land around the Borthwick north of Parkhill farm. William Gledstains was living there with his family in the 1820s. John Elliot and his family were living there in 1841 and 1851. The Snoot Kirk was built there in the 1840s.

the Parkhill Loft (thu-pawrk-hil-loft) n. former loft in the old St. Mary's Kirk, erected by Chisholme of Parkhill when that estate was within Hawick Parish, i.e. before 1689. It is possible that this became known by a different name after Roberton Parish was created. This gallery was replaced in the new church, built around 1763.

parrockit (paw-ro-kee', -ki') adj., pp., arch. enclosed, confined, especially said of a ewe placed with a lamb – '... parrackeet in ov a ceetie, mang reekin lums an chowkin smuists' [ECS].

parsonage (par-so-neej-tīnd) n., arch. a major tithe, originally payable to the parson (rather than local vicar), also referred to as the 'parsonage teind'. In the 14th and 15th centuries it would have been common for 'alien rectors' to take this major part of the 'benefice' as a special favour, while the actual eccleciastical and pastoral duties were carried out by someone receiving only the 'vicarage teind' – 'Item, the Flex, estimate to 100 merks in stok, parsonage 2 bolls, vicarage 5 lbs.' [PR1627].

Parson's Hole (pawr-sinz-hōl) n. area to the east of Ashkirk village, where the track to Synton Mains crosses the Tathyhole Sike. It is said that a minister was once thrown into a pit here by the congregation.

particate (par-ti-ki') n., arch. a parcel of land, specifically a lot in a burgh. The area was typically equal to $^1/_4$ acre or a Scots rood, corresponding to 13,690 square feet. However, in a town the lands were sometimes divided into lots that were around 20 feet across at the main street and extended back considerably; this was approximately the case in Hawick. According to the 1537 charter, there were about 130 particates, split among many owners. The holders of these lands in Hawick had to annually give 5 pennies to the Baron, in 2 installments at Whitsunday and Martinmas, for each particate. It was traditionally said that the owners had to perform this duty in person until the Baron grew tired of being bothered and so at some point relieved them of the need to make future payments. The Land Tax Rolls of 1663 list 'The Particats of Hawick' being valued at £97 16s 8d (and just £97 in 1678). It was stated (in a legal opinion regarding tenure in Hawick) that there were approximately 124 particates in 1667. The 'particate men' were explicitly excused from attending the Baron's Michaelmas Head Court in 1670 because of the bad state of the crops. In a 1710 land valuation of Hawick Parish it is recorded that apart from the major landowners, the Proprietors of Particiates in Hawick' had land valued at £97 and the valuation was still the same in the 1740s. At the time of the Division of the Common, there were approximately 170 proprietors of particates in the Town. Parts of the 'Particot Lands of Hawick' are still referred to in the 1788 county valuation and in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls – 'To Robert Scott of Howpasley, Six particates of land; to Robert Scott of Allanhaugh, three particates ...' [RW1537], 'Each tenant is named in the charter, with the number of particates which he was possessed of ...' [AJ] (the word corresponds to the Latin 'particata', related to 'pertica', meaning a measuring rod, a 'perch', or the area of land measured with it; the word appears to have been used more commonly in the Hawick area than elsewhere).

particate man (par-ti-ki'-mawn) n., arch. an owner of a particate – 'The said Pew was allocat to Robert Deanes, particat man of the lands of Hawick' [PR1715], 'If the particate men, mentioned in the Charter, had a right of property in the Common, and, as the suspenders allege, the whole property, it would have been most unjust to have authorised a lease of any part of it, without allowing them at least a share in the rents' [JW].

particuler (par-ti-ku-lur) adj. particular – 'Aw ken the wee bit acknowleegement was meant for mei in particuler caise ...' [BW1978] (note that the 3rd syllable has a u sound, rather than the English yoo).

Pasche (pawsh) n., arch. Easter, Passion. This was one of the 3 times a year that the head courts would meet around the 16th century, specifically the 2nd Tuesday after Easter (recorded in the Circuit Court of 1622).

Pasley see Paisley

pasneip (pas-neep) n., arch. parsnip – 'The spelling is, in most cases phonetic, and shows that the local pronunciation has been then, as now, distinctive, ... hearbs, turneep seed, persell seid, cress seid, pasneys seed, ...' [DMW] (spelling variants exist).

Pass (pas) n. William (18th C.) groom at Minto House in 1788, when he was working for Sir Gilbert Elliot. His surname may be a transcription error for something else.

Passchendaele (pa-shen-dāl) n. ridge near Ypres in Belgium, scene of an atrocious battle ordered by Douglas Haig in the Autumn of 1917. Perhaps as many as 250,000 Allied men were lost, including around 70 locals, who have no known graves. The 'Passchendaele Negatives' is a set of 3 silhouettes in steel set up near the War Memorial in 2019 – 'On the road to Passchendaele On the road to Passchendaele Where the brave will live forever On the road to Passchendaele' [AlB].

Passelow (pas-lō) n. Abbot (16th C.) commander of a group of soldiers, armed with 'hagbuts', which were quartered in Hawick in 1549, while Buccleuch had horsemen garrisoned at Peebles and Selkirk. This is mentioned in a letter of Sir Thomas Holcroft to Somerset (also spelled 'Passelew', 'Pashley', etc.; it is uncertain who this was, and what effect the garrisoned troops had on the Town).

passenger (paw-sin-jur) n., arch. a passerby, wayfarer – 'Robt. Hod, passenger, was fyned, onlawed, and ammerciatt in the somme of ane hundreth pound Scotts for his disorderly mairage with Margitt Armstrong . . . ' [BR1689].

pass fri (paws-fri) v., arch. to set aside, dispense with, renounce, give up – 'Upon which report the Session resolved to pass from their summonds and intended process against her' [PR1724], 'Walter Turnbull, English Schoolmaster in Hawick, was sworn and admitted heritable burgess of this Burgh in common form, and his composition past from, for his service in the place' [BR1737].

passin bell (paw-sin-bel) n., arch. tolling of church bells formerly carried out during the passing of a funeral procession to the grave. In Hawick this was done at St. Mary's, usually by the town bellman. Burgesses and some others had the right to request this service for a certain fee. In 1694 it was stipulated that only those who had contributed to the cost of the new bell were entitled to use it for funerals. In 1717 the cost was 2 shillings for non-Burgesses in Hawick and 6 shillings for those who lived outside the Burgh.

passit (paw-see', -si') pp., arch. passed – 'An' they that passet bye misca't him, geckin' their heæds' [HSR], 'For in thy wræth a' our dayes ar passet awa . . . ' [HSR].

the Pastoral Society of Selkirkshire (thu-pas-tu-rul-su-sI-i'-ee-ov-selkirk-shIr) n. agricultural organisation, founded in 1819 by Lord Napier to promote the improvement of livestock in the county. After 1906 it became the Yarrow and Ettrick Pastoral Society. A list of members survives from 1819.

pastur (paw-stur) n., arch. pasture – 'Thaye drap apon the pasters o' the wuldirniss . . . ' [HSR], 'Bonnie Teviot, wumplin bye paster an pairk' [ECS], 'Ther's a moppie gaen skiddlin owre that paster the now, duist' [ECS] (also written 'paster').

pat (paw', pawt) pp., arch. past tense of put, sometimes meaning made, sent, etc. – '. . . aganis the said Robert Ellot . . . , denuncit him rebell, and pat him to the horne' [SB1624], 'It was him who pat me mad' [HSR], '. . . he pat thame til ane perpetuall reproch' [HSR], '. . . hey juist paat up a moniment fer better an brawer be what the auld yin was' [ECS] (also written 'paat'; see also pit, the alternative last tense putt and the past participle putten).

pat (paw', pawt) n., poet. a pot – 'Afore your pats can feel the thoorns, he sall tak' thame awa . . . ' [HSR], 'Moab is my wasch-pat . . . ' [HSR], 'She ran up to the pat an' tried to coup it, While ever anon she raired an' she roupit' [BM1901].

Pate (pā', pāt) n., arch. short form for either Peter or Patrick – 'Robin an' Colin's come, an' Piper Pate, An' Bell an' a's in aunty's o'er the gate' [CPM].

patent (pā-tin') adj., arch. wide, unobstructed, particularly in the phrase 'the most patent door', meaning the main door where proclamations were read – 'The Beddall, with ane audible voice, called thrice att the most patent kirk door and desired yt anie who had aniething to object . . . ' [PR1715].

Pate's Plum (pāts-plum) n. another name for the Plum – '. . . The foaming, eddying waters downward come, And find a boisterous grave in Peter's Plum' [WNK], '. . . none of th young fellows who were floundering about in Pate's Plumb the other day, in eager contest for the Ba' . . . ' [MrsO], 'And so at last they landed her In the far-famed Pate's Plum, And the folk o' Hawick were made aware By the tuck o' Tufty's drum' [JCG] (it is unclear who 'Pate' might have been, or how old the name is).

Path Head School (path-hed-skool) n. former school in the town of MacGregor, on the Trans-Canada Highway, just west of Winnipeg, Manitoba. The school was named after the 'Pethheid' in Wilton, which was the birthplace of Robert Lamb, the farmer from Hawick who gave the land for the school. The school ran from 1892 until 1965 and a memorial cairn was erected on the site in 1987.

Pathheid see Pethheid

Pathheid (pawth-heed) n. former farmstead in Castleton Parish, a little to the north of the modern Newcastleton. It is marked on Stobie's 1770 map, just south of Blackburnfoot. Thomas Mathieson was there in the early 1800s.

Pathheid (pawth-heed) n. former farmstead in Ewesdale, near Sorbie. John Graham and family were there in 1841.

patience (pā-shins) n., pl. patience, treated as a plural – 'Hei has mony patience' [GW], 'Owre few patience' [GW].

Paton (pā'-in) n. Charles (1752/3–1818) teacher of a school in Callander, he was licensed to preach by Deer Presbytery in 1779. The following year he became preacher at Teviothead 'chapel-of-ease' and stayed until about 1785 (when James Sanson took over). He became minister at Ettrick in 1791 and remained there until he died (of a stroke). His native tongue was Gaalic, and it is said that he was never a very popular preacher, since he still had to translate his thoughts into English. Elizabeth (17th/18th C.) listed among a group of 'vagabond persons wanting testificatts', who were suspected of being thieves at Hawick fair in 1700 and were released from the Tolbooth after agreeing never to return to Teviotdale. Her surname was written 'Patone'. Maj. James of Crailing (b.1831) son of John, his mother being an Elliot. He was educated in Edinburgh and rode on the last journey of the coach 'Chevy Chase' back to the Borders. He joined the Kings Own regiment in 1850 and retired from the army in 1871, having been decorated for service in the Crimean War and India. Back home he was a Major in the Border Rifle volunteers and later commander. He was a member of the Jedforest Club. He succeeded his father to the Crailing estate in 1889. He was a J.P. for Roxburghshire, served on the county council and was also Deputy Lieutenant. In 1863 he married the eldest daughter of J.C. Lamb of Ryton and his eldest son was John. Maj. John William Joseph, M.B.E. (1924–2020) born in Hawick to Archibald and Isabella Graham, he was one of 7 children, growing up in Drumlanrig Square. The family moved to Glasgow when he was still a child and he lied about his age to join the army in 1940. He had a distinguished career in the military, extending over 30 years, starrting as one of the first members of the Royal Electrical and Mechanical Engineers. He took part in the D-Day landings and was on a ship bound for the far east when the war ended. Afterwards he worked briefly in Selkirk, but then re-enlisted, serving in several places overseas. He became a Sergeant-Major at the age of 26, was commissioned in 1963, became a Captain in 1964 and retired in 1975 with the rank of Major. After retiring he worked as a volunteer at Fyvie Castle in Aberdeenshire. In 2009 he received the M.B.E. for services to heritage in Scotland. Thomas (c.1776–1818) one of the founders of the Congregational Church in Scotland. From Penicuik, he served in the Army, being discharged in about 1802, and studied for the ministry under the patronage of Robert Haldane. He preached in Hawick in the summer of 1804, where there was not yet a permanent pastor. In about 1805 he became minister for the new Congregational Church in St. Andrews. Walter (b.1817/8) from Crailing, he was a baker at 23 High Street. He was listed in Slater's 1852 directory. His wife was Ann and they had a daughter Beatrix. He was probably deceased by 1861, when his wife and children were living with his wife's cousin Jane Grieve at the Crown Inn. Walter (19th C.) innkeeper at 78 High Street in 1875.

Patonhaugh (pā'-in-hawch) n. former farm in Southdean Parish, just over on the south side of the Jed Water to the south of Edgerston Rig (marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Patrick (pa'-reek) n. Alexander Bonthorn (1858/9–1937) manager at tweed manufacturers Robert Noble & Co. He married Margaret, daughter of commission agent James Hunter, and she died in 1933, aged 75. Their children were Alexander (minister), James (of New York), and Lieut. John Bonthorn (of the K.O.S.B., killed at Gallipoli). His wife was one of those from Hawick who travelled to visit Gallipoli in 1926. Alexander (1887/8–1941) eldest son of Alexander Bonthorn. He was educated at Durham University and spent almost 20 years as Chaplain to H.M. Forces in India. He was then Episcopalian minister at Newton Ferrers, Plymouth, where he died. Helen nee Young (c.1770–1848) eldest daughter of Rev. John Young, she was probably born in Hawick. She was said to have given assistance to her father's colleague John Jamieson, in preparing his Scottish dictionary. She married Rev. William Patrick, who was Anti-Burgher minister at Lockerbie. In 1815 she accompanied her husband to Nova Scotia, where he became minister at Pictou. She is buried along with her husband in Merigomish Cemetery, Nova Scotia.

Patrick Cunningham's Lands (pa'-reek-ku-ning-humz-lawndz) n. former name for lands within Hawick Parish. They were formerly held by the Parish Minister, but must have been given heritably, since they were later held by his descendants. The lands may have originally been given to Rev. Robert Cunningham by Scott of Buccleuch, and then passed to his son Patrick (1636–c.1706), who was a Burgess of Hawick, becoming minister at Kirkton; he was often referred to as 'Mr.', a designation which was also applied to the lands. Rev. Robert Cunningham (c.1668–1722) was probably a son of Patrick, and held the positions of minister in Wilton and then in Hawick. Another Patrick, recorded onwing some of the same lands in Hawick, may have been his son. It was stated in 1767 that part of the lands were then partly in the hands of Bailie Turnbull. They were still referred to as 'Mr. Patrick Cunningham's Lands in Hawick' in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls, when several parts were valued at more than £75, including one piece called 'Allers Garden' (which was presumably near Allars Bank). The lands may not have been contiguous pieces, and at least some of them lay within the East Mains of Hawick. Based on who owned some of the lands later, it included part of what was developed as Buccleuch Street.

Patrick of Albania (pa'-reek-ov-awl-bā-nee-a) n. Parson of Kirkton, recorded as witness to Hawick's first known sasine in 1453. 'Albania' may be Albany perhaps. A 'Patrick McNawany, parson of Kirktoun' was witness to a charter of Archibald Earl Douglas in 1438; it is possible this was the same man, although there are other Kirktons in Scotland.

the Patriotic Memorial (thu-pā'-ree-o'-eek-mu-mō-ree-ul) n. another name for the Boer War Memorial.

the Patriots (thu-pā'-ree-its) n. name used by a group of townspeople, led by Walter Freeman, who objected to the way that the Common was managed by the Council and Bailies, and in particular the agreement made to give away one third of the land. The supporters of Freeman were 205 in number, mostly Burgesses without property. They organised themselves to oppose all actions regarding the Common in the late 1770s, including letting a small part (to clear the Town's legal debts); they appointed their own Town Herd, to pasture all of the Common, including the part recently let. At an organisational meeting Freeman declared himself to be Chief Magistrate, whereupon he was imprisoned. The group also threatened the Bailies and Councillors, as well as the party who came to actually divide the Common in 1777. In 1778 they took the Council and Bailies to court, claiming they had failed to properly manage affairs on behalf of the Burgesses, leading to the Division of the Common. They particularly complained about how the Bailies were elected and about the actions of the present Bailies, who, they claimed, managed the business of the Town for their own ends. The Council led a counter action, and it was ultimately found in 1781 that they had the right to let the Common. The decision of the Court of Session also fixed the number of members of the Council at 31.

patten (paw'-in, pa-ten) n., arch. a wooden clog worn to raise the feet out of mud, particularly a wooden sole with an iron frame, which tied on to a shoe – 'The ladies had in wet weather to walk with pattens, there being neither cabs nor carriages . . . ' [RM]. The Museum has a pair from around 1800, which belonged to Mrs. Johnstone Reid of Wilton Lodge, perhaps the same pair that was donated in 1900.

patter (paw'-ur) n. words used in an attempt to impress, sell something etc., repartee, badinage – 'deh gie's yer patter', 'I was giving my patter in front of the lion's cage, and . . . ' [RB].

patter-merchant (paw'-ur-mer-chin') n. a person who speaks rapidly and at length in an attempt to impress others – 'that Baron Munchhausen's a right patter-merchant'.

Patterson see Paiterson

Pattison (pa-tee-sin) n. George Handayside (1806–85) son of William Pattison and Agnes Handayside, he was born at Wooler and educated in Edinburgh, where he trained as a lawyer. He was a Conservative in politics. In 1849 he argued in favour of continuing the Jethart Baa at the High Court in Edinburgh. In 1868 he took over from William Oliver Rutherford as Sheriff of Roxburghshire. He became a member of the Jedforest Club in 1869. Joseph (b.1779/80) from Carlisle, he was inn-keeper of the Cross Keys in Newcastleton (on South Hermitage Street), recorded in 1841 and 1852. His wife was Helen and they had a daughter Jane. Robert (b.1812/3) ploughman at Sorbietrees in the 1860s. His wife was Janet and their children included Helen, Scott, Andrew, Margaret and Robert. William (1729/30–1803) resident of Castleton. He married Margaret Little, who died in 1788, aged 51. Their children included: James (1758/9–1834), engineer, who died in Bolton; Mary (1779/80–98); William (1780/1–1868); and one who died in infancy. They are buried at Ettleton. William (1780/1–1868) resident of Castleton, son of William. He subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. He was listed as a labourer in Newcastleton among heads of households in 1835. His wife was Margaret Cowan, who died at Newcastleton in 1848, aged 65. Their son John died at Redheugh in 1903, aged 81. He died at Oxnam Row and is

pauchle (pawch-ul) v. to struggle on, shuffle, make one's way with difficulty – 'When winter brings his gruesome train, Ye pauchle on, an' ne'er complain' [JJ], 'Pauchlin' on i' the heat o' the day' [GW].

pawkie (paw-kee) adj., arch. having a down-to-earth humorous outlook, roguish, waggish, wily, sly, crafty, resourceful, shrewd, knowing – 'In vain – her blink an' smirkin' smile, Her pawkie joke, and sleekie wile' [JoHa], 'A' the warpings, an' wurblings, an' queer pawkie trade, That slides on the way o' a man wi' a maid' [JoHa], 'Many a pawky trick he played upon the men of the law by field and river' [RM], 'Syne wi' cootlin' and coaxin', sae pauky and slee . . . ' [JT], 'Willie was shy, and Willie was pawky, Willie was tall, and Willie was gawky' [WFC] (also spelled 'pawky' and 'pauky').

Pawkie Paiterson (paw-kee-pā-tur-sin, pi'-ur-sin) n. song with words generally attributed to John Ballantyne (although it has also been suggested that it was written by Dr. John Douglas). He basically adapted a traditional Northumberland song, 'Robin Spraggon's Old Grey Mare', into Hawick dialect and with local characters. The original words related to the district of Felton in Northumberland, and in 1888 were said to have been written more than a century before. The antiquity of the tune is unknown, but it has much in common with Border (or Northumbrian) pipe music; although the words of the song clearly derive from 'Robin Spraggon's Old Grey Mare', the tune bears little resemblance (and simialrly for its antecedent 'Hey! boys, up go we!' published in 1646). This makes the Hawick song quite unique compared with its Northumbrian inspiration. Additionally there was probably some influence in the words from Robert Burns' line 'That auld grey yaud a' Nidsdale rade'. It was recorded being sung at the first ceremonial Colour Bussing of 1887 (by William Wilson), but is certainly much older. The characters mentioned in the song place it around the 1830s or 1840s. The words were not formally written down until long after it had become a favourite, and so there are versions that differ in minor details. An early version appears in Frank Hogg's Transactions article in 1873 (said to be from Jamie Hardie's rendering of the song), somewhat different words for some verses appear in the Border Magazine in 1896 and another version is in the collection 'Vagabond Songs' (1904); these differences suggest that the song was often song extemporaneously. The tune is one of those played by the Drums and Fifes during the Common Riding and is one of the few Hawick songs in compound time. The song has been a staple of Colour Bussings since the end of the 19th century.

Pawkie Paiterson (paw-kee-pi'-ur-sin) n. general nickname for male members of local Paterson families. The name probably predates the song. There was certainly a real 'Pawkie Paiterson', Robert Paterson, who lived in the late 18th and early 19th centuries about whom the words of the song were written. His descendants lived near the foot of the Loan and farmed at the Loanhead. It is unclear whether Nellie Harkness was his sister or his niece. However, Hawick parish records show that Robert's father Archibald and his brother James, were both also called 'Pawkie'. It may be that earlier generations also had this same nickname. Another thing that is unclear

the Pawkie Well (thu-paw-kee-wel) n. spring that is said (by W.N. Kennedy) to have been connected with the naming of 'Pawkie Paterson'. This was during the uprising of 1745, when a man named Paterson was forced to escort some of Prince Charlie's followers towards Langholm, but stopped at this spring to help an injured officer, using the opportunity to slip the bridle off his horse, mount it and make his escape. On recounting this story to his friends, saying 'Wasn' that a pawky trick' he apparently got his nickname. The location is unclear, but somewhere near Northhouse perhaps (also 'Pawky Well').

pawn (pawn) n., arch. a pledge, sum deposited with the kirk session as a guarantee that a marriage would be forthcoming and without scandal – '...what was termed 'laying down the pawns', that is, the making of a small consignment in guarantee that the marriage would be solemnized' [JJV], '...the pawn ...remain in the clerk's hands for the space of three quarters of a year after the mariage' [PR1711], 'The pands consigned before Mr. Alexander Orok's death, which were not forfeited for immoralitie, were restoted' [PR1711]; in Hawick in the 18th century the fee was usually 14 shillings and the marriage was to take place within 40 days, with the money being held for ¾ year, v., arch to pledge a sum to guarantee marriage and propriety – 'His consignation money panded in Mr. Orrok's time ...twentie shilling Scots piece pawnded by Jo. p-Celtic (pee-kel-tik) n. ancient langauge spoken throughout Britain before Anglo-Saxon took over. It is distinguished from 'q-Celtic', which includes Scots Gaelic, which was never spoken in the Borders. There were probably 4 main dialects, Cornish, Welsh, Cumbric and Pictish, with Cumbric (also sometimes called Northumbrian) being the version spoken around Hawick and in the whole kingdom of Bernicia. Several local place names have probable p-Celtic roots, including names containing 'pen' or 'caer'. Many river names may also be from this era, if not even earlier. There is a possibility that the Hawick slogan 'Teribus' comes from a Cumbric phrase.

peacefi (pees-fi) adj. peaceful – 'A peacefu' an contented mind – The greatest gift that puir mankind ...' [WP].

the Peace Medal (thu-pees-me-dul) n. medallion presented by the Burgh to all Hawick school children in January 1920. It was bronze, with a peace sign on one side, the Burgh arms on the other and with a tri-colour ribbon attached.

1868. Their children, baptised in Cavers Parish, included: Margaret (b.1869); Jessie (b.1871); and Jane (b.1874). James (18th/19th C.) hatter in London. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He must have had a local connection of some sort. Probably the same hatter was a boarder living at 9 Cross Wynd in 1861, aged 56. James (19th C.) married Arabella Jane Thompson in Hawick. Their children included Martha (b.1866), baptised in Hobkirk; and John William (b.1868), baptised in Hawick. James T. local businessman who was Callants' Club President. It is partly thanks to him that the script for Jed Murray's 'The Gutterbludes' survived. John (16th C.) servant of the Laird of Cowdenknowes. He was one of the men indicted in 1552 for the murder of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch. He was said to have been on Edinburgh High Street with Robert Kirkton and Lance Ainslie, when they stabbed the wounded Scott several times and took his cloak and bonnets. His name is written 'Johanne Pekok'. John (b.1801/2) weaver from England. In 1841 he was living on Underdamside in Wilton, with his wife Nancy and children Thomas, Walter and William. In 1851 he was still on Underdamside with his 3 sons, as well as his niece Jane McLaughlan, mother-in-law Betty Thomline and brother-in-law William Thomline. He was still living at Underdamside in 1861, with his son Walter and 3 boarders. He is probably the 'Bill Peacock' listed among men who came to Hawick in about 1836, following John Wilson, who went to the Rochdale area to learn about weaving flannel. Joseph (18th/19th C.) painter in Hawick. He was listed as a painter on the 1799 list for the Militia ballot and still on the 1801 list. He was a member of Hawick Curling Club in 1812. He is listed as a painter on the Cross Wynd in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. He married Jane (or Jean) Miller in Hawick in 1798; she was also from Hawick, daughter of James Miller and Christian Wintrope, and died in 1815. Their children included: William (b.1799); Christian (b.1801); Joseph (b.1803); James (b.1805); Alexander (b.1806); Walter (b.1808); Margaret (b.1809); Thomas (b.1812); and Jane (b.1815). The baptisms were entered into the Hawick Parish records together, suggesting the family attended one of the secession churches. The witnesses in 1799, 1801, 1805, 1806 and 1808 were writer Thomas Miller (his wife's brother) and merchant James Elliot. The 1803 baptism was before the 'Congregation at Paisley'. Peter Labour politician, educated at Hawick High School. He was a Councillor in the Highlands from 1982, has been M.S.P. for Highlands and Islands since 1999 and is Deputy Minister for Finance and Public Services. Robert (19th/20th C.) partner in the Peacock & Kennedy garage business. Their children, born in Hawick, included: Agnes (b.1860). William (15th C.) tenant in Buccleuch, recorded at the Justice-aire held in Selkirk in 1494/5. He was allowed to 'compone' for the crime of stealing 60 sheep from Glensax, with his surety being Adam Scott in Annelshope. William (18th C.) groom at Riddell in 1794 and 1797, when he was working for Sir John Riddell. William (b.1836/7) from Wilton, son of John, he was a woollen weaver. In 1861 he was living at No. 53 Loan with his wife Betsey and son John. He married Elizabeth Scott and their children included: John (b.1859); Jane (b.1861); Agnes (b.1864); and Margaret (b.1866); Thomas (b.1868); Walter Thomline (b.1870); and Nelly Scott (b.1872). William Thomline (1903–2004) son of Robert, he was born in Wellogate Place and educated at St. Mary's Primary and the Buccleuch School. He joined the family garage business, Peacock & Kennedy and worked there until the age of 82 (apart from a period at Rosyth in WWII). A wireless enthusiast, he introduced a radio department to the firm. He collected examples of the Hawick tongue with Ian Landles. He was also a trustee of the T.S.B. He served as Archæological Society President, and was also a committee member for decades. He contributed articles on 'Early Stockingmakers and their Industry' and 'A Notable Hawick Character, Hi-i-obby', as well as giving talks on old Hawick and early motoring in the area. He was a member of the Callants' Club for over 40 years, and regularly produced the acrostic for the main dinner guest. He contributed poetry to local newspapers and was a founder member of the Hawick Toastmasters' Club. He loved fishing and bird-watching, and was a long-time member of the Old Parish Kirk. He moved into Deanfield at the age of 98 and enjoyed celebrating his centenary. William 'Bill' (??) local railway enthusiast who wrote 'Waverley route reflections' (1983) and edited 'Border country railways' (1983), 'Border railways remembered' (1984), 'Border railways portfolio' (1985) and 'Main line to Hawick' (1986).

Peden (pee-din) n. Rev. Alexander (1626–86) born in Ayrshire, he became an outlawed Covenanter, preaching in secret for 10 years before being captured, imprisoned on the Bass Rock for 4 years, then sentenced to banishment. In 1678 he was sentenced to be sold as a slave in the plantations of Virginia; when they arrived at Gravesend all the men (including several locals) were released when their intended jailor could not be found; there were several local men on the same ship. He made it back to Scotland, but still being a fugitive, he lived for a while in Ireland, before returning to Scotland in his final year. Many geographical features are named after him, e.g. 'Peden's View' near Langholm. There are 'Peden's Pulpits' all over the Scottish moorland, including on Ruberslaw. In addition Denholm Dean once had a 'Peden's Thorn' and a 'Peden's Vale', there was another thorn tree associated with Peden at Earlside (close to Cogsmill) and there is a 'Peden's Cleuch' south of Southdean and an old outhouse there was called 'Peden's Barn'. Additionally he is meant to have preached at 'Peden's Haugh' near Langside. On the slopes of Ruberslaw during a conventicle he is supposed to have said 'O Lord, lap the skirts of thy cloak ower puir auld Sandy', bringing down a mist that allowed escape from the dragoons – 'That Peden preached often here It has been heard of far and near, And some can yet point out the stone Which he did lay his bible on' [JaSt], 'Still on her hillsides round the guarded word Cower noble Peden's persecuted band: E'en yet, discerning eyes by Melrose see, Becowled, a faithful brother, sombre stand' [WL]. George (1913–64) son of Walter A. He was a butcher in Hawick. He was a regular singer of his father's song, 'The Lassie That Works In the Mill'. He was Acting Father to Chuck Whullans in 1948. George Mitchell (1944/5–) son of George and Ella. He was educated at Hawick High School and worked for Barrie Knitwear, later becoming Chairman of Bannatynes and Chairman of the Scottish Cashmere Association. He was Cornet in 1967, and celebrated his Jubilee year in 2017, along with his Acting Father and Mother, Chuck and Nan Whullans (probably the first time this has been achieved). His daughter Laura-Jayne was Cornet's Lass in 2009. John 'Jock' (1913–84) son of Walter A. His recorded rendition of his father's song 'The Lassie That Works In the Mill' saved it for posterity. Thomas (19th C.) President of the Hawick Co-operative Society in the 1870s. Thomas (19th C.) from Hawick, he was a missionary within Britain, being stationed in Cardiff. His son Michael was a member of the Hawick Home Mission. Walter Armstrong (1863–1954) born in Galashiels, but from a Hawick family, he worked as a butcher in Hawick. He was a keen horseman and cyclist. He was a member of Lodge St. James 424 and Buccleuch Bowling Club, as well as an elder of East Bank Church. He wrote 'The Lassie That Works In the Mill' and would sing it regularly. Exactly when it was written, and whether it was influenced by any other songs, remains unknown. He had sons George and Jock, both of whom also sang his song at local events.

Peden's Barn (pee-dinz-bawrn) n. former name for a barn in Southdean Parish. It is said that the Covenanter Alexander Peden came there in disguise, asking about work, and being set to threshing in the barn, only for the farmer to discover the same man preaching at a nearby conventicle on the Sunday.

Peden's Cleugh (pee-dinz-klooch) n. stream that runs roughly eastwards to join the Jed Water south of Dykeraw in Southdean Parish. The upper part is known as Battling Sike or Battlinburn. There is no known historical connection with Alexander Peden.

Peden's Haugh (pee-dinz-hawch) n. putative name for an area near Langside in the upper Slitrig valley, where Alexander Peden is said to have preached several times.

Peden's Pulpit (pee-dinz-pool-pi') n. natural rocky chasm near the summit of Ruberslaw, used for clandestine sevices of the Covenanters, possibly including Peden. It is said that you can still see where he laid his bible, and a large flat boulder there was used as the communion table. It is a narrow cleft in the rocks, on the south-west side of the summit. A carved hollow in a nearby rock, of unknown original purpose, is said to have been used by the Covenanters for baptisms – '... Plewed rigs an planteens ... an Peden's Poopit buin maist' [ECS], 'Look back on majestic Ruberslaw The ghost o' covenantin' men Lookin' doon frae Peden's Pulpit That's high above the fen' [AY].

Peden's Stane (pee-dinz-stān) n. large stone in an area of moorland between the Hermitage Water and Roan Fell, near the head of one of the streams that makes up Ralton Burn. It is on land belonging to Foulshiels farm. The rock is about 2½ feet high and inscribed with 'For Auld Lang Syne AD 1824' to commemorate a place where it is said that Alexander Peden preached.

Peden's Vale (pee-dinz-vāl) n. former name for a deep glen in Denholm Dean Burn, said to be flower-clad in summer. It is about 400 yards below the ruined cottage. It was used for secret Covenanters' sermons, and according to tradition (and J.A.H. Murray) Peden himself once hid there.

the Pedlar's Field (thu-ped-lurz-feeld) n. cornfield situated where Ladylaw Place was built in the 1840s (in the middle of the north side of what is now Princes Street). The entrance gate was called 'the Pether's Yett'.

Peebles (pee-bulz) n. town built in the Tweed valley on the Eddleston Water. It is one of Scotland's royal and ancient burghs, becoming a Royal Burgh in 1367. It was formerly the county town of Peeblesshire, and headquarters for Tweeddale District Council. There has been a bridge across the Tweed there since at least 1470. The town was destroyed by Hertford's men in 1545 and again in 1547. It once had a defensive wall around the old town, on the right bank of the Eddleston. It was a major centre for brewing and wool production, but now focuses on tourism. St. Mungo's Well there is supposed to be connected with a 6th century visit. Peebles Castle, built by David I, was long a royal residence, but a ruin by the end of the 17th century, and nothing of it now remains. However, the visible ruins of the Cross Kirk include part of a 13th century friary; this was the burial place of the chiefs of the Scotts until the end of the 15th century. Peebles Hotel Hydro, built 1878–81, and rebuilt 1905–07 after a fire, is a dominating feature. The Mercat Cross contains part of the 17th century original. The Town House dates from 1753, and Chambers' Institution, built mainly in 1859, has long served as a cultural centre. Peebles Beltane Week at the end of June (focussed on the Saturday closest to Midsummer) was begun in 1897, reinstating the Riding of the Marches and linking it with the ancient Beltane Fair. It includes a ceremony at Neidpath Castle (with ceremonial Wardens of the Cross Kirk and of Neidpath Castle) and the dancing of the Cornet's Reel in the High Street. The Cornet and Beltane Queen use accoutrements dating from the 1920s Population (1991) 7,056 (the origin of the name is probably Old Welsh for 'temporary huts').

Peebles (pee-bulz) n. James of that Ilk (15th C.) recorded as 'Jacobum de Paiblis' in 1437 when he was one of 2 'procurators' for Alexander of Weens when he resigned his lands of Weens (probably Weensland) into the hands of the Baron of Hawick. Thomas (14th C.) among Scotsmen given permission to travel to study in England in 1366. He may have been related to John, who was Archdeacon of St. Andrews and Chancellor of Scotland, and both may have had the Earl of Douglas as patron. By 1378 he was Rector of Bedrule Church when he was recommended for a Canonry of Glasgow. His surname was written as 'de Peblis' and Bedrule has been incorrectly transcribed as 'Bechorowl'. Another Thomas was Rector of Biggar in 1421.

Peedlum (peed-lum) n. nickname in use in Hawick in the late 19th century – 'Poodge and Peedlum gang doon the toon, Sly Tammy and Kittlin' Soup gang up; There's Paddy Barratt and Jamie Broon, And there's Dick Newall and Johnny Whup' [HI].

peel (peel) n. a keep, small fortified tower, particularly one constructed near the Scotland/England Border around the 16th century – 'Invidious rust corrodes the bloody steel; Dark and dismantled lies each ancient peel' [JL], 'The ruined Tower and Border peel, Beneath the moon's cold rays Seem once again astir with life As in the bygone days' [JCG], 'He gathered his band round Elliot's peel, At darkest hour of night, When those within were scarce prepared For hard and bloody fight' [BM1909] (from Old French; also written 'pele'; the word is used in several place names, e.g. Peel, Peelbrae, Peel Burn, Peel Fell and Peel Knowe).

peel (peel) v., poet. to skin, injure the skin – 'He'll fight the field though heads are peeled' [MG] (see also peelin their wands).

Peel (peel) n. popular name for Peel Hospital and the surrounding area. A farm since mediæval times, no sign of a former peel house survives. The house there is a Scottish baronial mansion built in 1909 for a Leith seed merchant, designed by John Kinross. The house was used as staff accommodation during the time the estate was a hospital. Essentially the same lands were called 'Hairtherne' in 1533 when first acquired by Walter Scott of Branxholme and it is 'Peill and Hatherne' in 1718 when surveyed along with other Buccleuch properties. It effectively merged with the neighbouring property of Ashiestiel when the hospital was developed, and the area is now a housing estate. There are several other places around the Borders with the same (or similar) names, including a former seat of the Elliots in upper Liddesdale – 'To the Piel and Hathern I will repair, To Analshope and Glengeber, To Whitup and to Black-grain, To Commonside, and Milsanton-hill . . . ' [CWS] (it is 'the Peill' in c.1680 and 'Peil' is marked on Gordon's c.1650 map).

Peel (peel) n. former tower on the Peel Burn in the upper Liddel valley, close to the Border, just to the west of Peel Fell. It was once a site of some importance, being next to the Wheel Causeway, formerly the only toad in the neighbourhood. It is now marked only as 'Peel House' on the Ordnance Survey maps, but also gave its name to the stream and nearby hill. Also referred to as Baxtonlees, the lands were owned by several branches of the Elliot family in the 17th and 18th centuries. 'Peil' was listed among the lands in upper Liddesdale that were once held by Jedburgh Abbey. In 1659 it was sold by Sir Gilbert Eliott of Stobs to William Elliot of Binks and Swinside. John Elliot was there according to the 1678 Land Tax Rolls. The tenant there in 1694 was Francis Beattie. In 1710 it was passed to John Elliot's only son John, but since he failed to survive his father it then passed 1/5 each to John's daughters Elizabeth, Christian, Jean and Margaret, and the last 1/5th to his 3 grandchildren! In the 1730s they all sold it to Henry Elliot, a cousin, son of Henry of Harwood. Henry Elliot paid tax on 10 windows there in 1748. His son Henry sold it again later in the 18th century. Thomas Scott bought it from Lord Douglas in 1807. It later passed to William Scott-Elliot and then his brother John Scott-Elliot. In the 19th century there was a shepherd there called Hutton (probably Robert), from whom William Oliver of Langraw collected many Border ballads. John Riddell was farmer there in 1868 (it was 'Peall' in 1694, 'Pill' on the 1718 Buccleuch survey and also 'Pill' in the 1748 Window Tax Roll).

peel-an-eat (peel-an-ee') n., arch. a potato boiled in its jacket – 'When supper comes, instead of better meat, He feeds on potatoes, peel and eat' [JR], adj. said of potatoes boiled in their jackets – '... That never mair wull I eat sae mony Hard 'taties, 'peel an' eat' [AO], also applied to a delicate or sickly person (noted by E.C. Smith).

Peel-an-Eat (peel-an-ee') n. nickname in use in the early 19th century.

Peelbrae (peel-brā) n. former farm, presumably lying below Peelbraehope and near to the 'Peel Brae', which is south-east of Priesthaugh, and on the slopes of 'Muckle Knowe'. The remains of a peel tower there explains the name. Before 1498 the lands were owned by the Elliots of Redheugh and referred to as 'Tillielee' or 'Tilloly'. They were probably owned (or leased) by Gavin Elliot of Horsleyhill in the mid-16th century. Robert Elliot of Redheugh served as cautioner for the residents of the lands there in 1574. There were Wigholms there in the early 17th century. It formed part of the extensive Buccleuch lands of Ringwoodfield in a 1660 document, where it is also said to be called 'Tillieleehope'. William Scott, John Dalgleish and John Telfer were listed there in 1694. The farm was joined to that of Priesthaugh in 1707 and was rented from the Buccleuch Estates by Robert Elliot of Midlem Mill in 1741. The farm was surveyed in 1718 and a plan exists. At that time it consisted of 175 acres and was bounded by Dodburn, Priesthaugh and Brough. William Elliot was recorded there in 1727 (it is 'Peilbra' and 'Peilbray' in 1574, 'Peilbrae' in 1612 and 1660, 'Pealbrea' in 1694 and 1727 and 'Peillbrae' in 1741; the element 'peil' could refer to a ditch, namely the Catrail).

Peel Brae (peel-brā) n. slope on the west side of Muckle Knowe, lying on the east side of the Priesthaugh Burn. The name is surely related to the former lands of Peelbrae, and perhaps to the pele-house, which is to the north-east. There is a cairn there.

Peelbraehope (peel-brā-hōp) n. former farmstead up in the hills east of Priesthaugh, in the headwaters of the Penchrise Burn. There is now nothing left of the house, but a cairn marks the spot, with a plaque commemorating its long inhabitation by the Elliots, and stating that it was once an important meeting point on the drove road from Teviotdale to Liddesdale. Thomas Nichol was tenant in 'Pealbraehophead' in 1694. There was a dispute between Sir Gilbert Eliott of Stobs and Ann, Duches of Buccleuch, resulting in the boundary with Penchrise being fixed in 1718. This is described in the survey of Buccleuch estates carried out in that year, when it consisted of 965 acres and was bounded by Priesthaugh and Dod on the west and lands owned by Eliott of Stobs to the south, east and north. Sir Gilbert leased the lands from the Buccleuch Estates in 1744. The Nichol family were there in the 19th century and J. Armstrong was recorded there in 1868. In the late 19th century it was home of a family of Elliots, with 22 children born to 2 mothers; about 200 descendants recently gathered in New Zealand. The farmstead was evacuated in 1943 when it became part of the firing range for Stobs Camp. The Tinlee Stone is just to the south and a section of the Catrail (the part nearest to Hawick) passes to the north – 'The soft breeze blawn owre Peelbraehope Seems murmurin 'Amen!' ' [WL] (also written 'Peelbrae Hope', it is 'Peilbraehope' in 1718).

Peel Burn (peel-burn) n. stream in Southdean Parish, running roughly east, past the ruins of Mervinslaw Tower, to meet the Jed Water. There is an area of rig lines to the south.

Peel Fell (peel-fel) n. hill on the Border, south-east of Singdean, reaching a height of 602 m, the highest peak for many miles around. In 1876 Bailie Alexander Michie donated to the Museum 'two arrow heads, spear head, three amulets, and ancient bead and antique knife' found there.

Peel Hospital (peel-hos-pi'-ul) n. hospital near Galashiels, serving the Borders for several decades, and being the main hospital for the Hawick area from after WWII to the 1980s. The estate was requisitioned from Lord Craigmyle in 1939 to provide a hospital for military casualties.

It was extended through the construction of several Nissen huts and became a civilian hospital after the War, with further extensions in 1949, 1957, 1963 and 1969. Always inadequate, and awkward to get to, eventually it closed in 1988 and a new hospital (the B.G.H.) was constructed at Huntlyburn.

peelie-wallie (pee-lee-waw-lee) adj. sickly, pale – 'hei looks gei peelie-wallie the day, div ee no hink?', lacking in strength, lacklustre – 'that was a peelie-wallie performance on the pitch the day' (also written 'peely-wally').

peelin their wands (pee-lin-ther-wawndz) adj., arch. beginning married life – 'The twaesome's peelin' their wands' [GW] (cf. peel; noted by E.C. Smith).

Peel Knowe (peel-now) n. hill on Hawthornside farm, indicating the existence of a former peel tower near there, once a seat of the Turnbulls. It is said that stones from the tower were used to construct the farmhouse at Hawthornside. There was also a shepherd's cottage on the hill there.

Peel-quarter (peel-kaw'-ur) n. former name for lands in the Barony of Belses. They are transcribed as 'Peile-quarter' in 1616 when inherited by Andrew Scott of Aikwood from his father Robert. It was still listed as a property of the Kers of Cavers Carre in 1678, when it is 'Peil Quarter' and in 1684 when it is 'Peill-quarter'.

Peel Wud (peel-wud) n. plantation on the opposite side of the Teviot from Newmill. It was probably named after Allanhaugh Tower.

Peffers (pe-furz) n. Alexander Turnbull 'Eck' (d.2008) one of the last local people to hold this surname. He ran the Mansfield Bar for over 50 years, and was said to be the oldest serving barman in Scotland. Andrew (d.1926) born in Jedburgh, he worked as a labourer and then as a woodsman. He lived at Ancrum and Timpendean and died at Netherhall. He married Catherine Elliot Cairns from Hawick, who died in 1916. Their children included: William (b.1868); James Cairns (b.1869); Francis (b.1872); George (b.1875). William (1868–1944) son of Andrew, he worked as a forester and later had a sawmill and timber business on Mansfield Road. He was also known locally as a poet, writing 'Magenta Robbie', 'The Gobbleswally' and other well-known poems, many of them collected in 'A Woodman's Trail, Poems of Hawick and Teviotdale' (1943). He married Margaret Waldie Douglas, who died in 1949. Their children were: Andrew; Jane Paton; Thomas Douglas; James; Catherine Ellen Cairns; William Douglas; and Frances Margaret.

peirs (peerz) n., pl. pears, once grown in the area, particularly in Jedburgh, probably a remnant of the orchards of the Abbey. The oldest varieties that were grown included the Longueville, the Bon Chretien, the Ludd, the Bergamot, the Pound Pear, the Red Honey, the White Warden, the Gray Warden and the Grey Good-wife. Other varieties grown were the Gray Auchan, the Red Auchan, the Worry Carl, the Buchanan, the Drummond, the Golden Knop, the Lamias and the Pitfirran. Jedburgh had 40 acres of orchards at one point, and the trade spread to neighbouring villages and towns. The peak in production and fame was probably around the early 19th century, but by the 20th century the trade collapsed.

peise (pīs) n., arch. the pea, pease – '. . . and no person, young or old, be found gathering or pulling of their neighbour's peise . . . pen (pen) n., arch. a hill, particularly a pointed conical one – 'He lorded it wide o'er the Pen o' Skelfhill' [HSR] (from the early Cumbric word, being the p-Celtic version of 'ben'; it occurs in place names, e.g. Penchrise Pen and Ettrick Pen, as well as sometimes Skelfhill Pen, the lost placename Penangushope and probably also in Penielheugh).

Penango see Pennango

Penangushope (pen-awng-gis-hōp) n. narrow valley through which the Mosspaul Burn flows, a surviving variant of the lost area name Pennango. The lands (along with Cauldcleuch) were granted by William, 1st Earl of Douglas, to the monks of Melrose Abbey about 1358, for masses to be said for Sir William Douglas of Lothian, and confirmed in 1381. It is listed among lands in the Barony of Cavers in an English document c.1380. Sir Alexander de Penangushope was witness to a charter of the lands of Lag, Dumfries in the period 1405–12. The lands of 'Penangushop' were included in some leased by Walter Scott of Branxholme from Melrose Abbey in 1500, lying within the extensive Lairdship of Ringwoodfield. Robert Elliot ('Young Robin') probably held the lands in the mid-16th century. Robert Elliot of Redheugh rented them from Melrose Abbey around 1557; at that time they were valued at £5. They are still recorded as part of Ringwoodfield in 1621, 1634, 1653, 1660 and 1661, although confusingly referred to as 'also called Skelshill (presumably 'Skelfhill' is meant)' in 1660. It was recorded being still part of the Lordship of Melrose in 1663. The name 'Pennango' seems to have fallen out of use at the end of the 17th century. An account of Roxburghshire in 1649 states that the Allan Water 'begins at the head upon Angus Hope', which is surely referring to the same area. The valley was also known as 'Glen Penango' according to the Ordnance Survey Name Book (it is 'penangushop' and 'penangushope' in about 1358, 'Penangoshope' in c.1380, 'Penangushoup' in 1557, 'Pennangushoip' in 1564, 'Penangushope' in 1574, 'Pennanginshope' in 1621, 'Pennangus' in 1634, 'Pennangwshop' in 1653, 'Pannangoishope' in 1663 and 'Pannangushop' in 1693; it is marked as 'Panangus hoap' on Blaeu's c.1654 map).

Penangushope (pen-awng-gis-hōp) n. Sir Alexander (14th/15th C.) witness to a charter of the lands of Lag, Dumfries in the period 1405–12. William (14th C.) collector of contributions of the constabulary of Edinburgh according to the Exchequer Rolls of 1360 and 1369. His name is written 'de Penangishop'. He may be related to the William 'de Penango' recorded in 1332 (this surname surely comes from the region in southern Roxburghshire; see also Pennango).

Penchrise (pen-krīs) n. farm south of Hawick, reached from there by a rough track. Traditionally the lands are said to have held an ancient chapel, although there is no evidence to support this (and it probably comes from a confusion over the name). The name is also used for the prominent hill 'Penchrise Pen', which is nearby. It was part of the lands resigned by Thomas de Baliol to William, Earl of Douglas in 1368. It is listed among lands in the Barony of Cavers in an English document c.1380. In 1464/5 Thomas Turnbull of Penchrise was witness to a local sasine. These were probably the lands tenanted by William Douglas 'in Pencress' who was appointed as a Sheriff of Roxburghshire in order to give sasine to Adam Hepburn for the Lordship of Liddesdale in 1508. It is listed among the lands within the Barony of Cavers in 1511. James Douglas of Cavers and his wife Elizabeth Murray had a charter for the lands in 1512, and there is another Douglas of Cavers deed in 1525. In 1574 it was among the lands that William Douglas of Cavers served as surety for, the inhabitants being guilty 'for the cryme of thift in tyme bigane'; this included 'Mirk Hob' Elliot. Robert Elliot, 'Mirk Hob' was also recorded as tenant in 1576. Peter Elliot was there in 1586/7. Robert Henderson was there in 1618. William Elliot was there in 1680. It was 'Penchryst' owned by the Eliotts of Stobs at the end of the 17th century. It was still in the Barony of Cavers when Sir William Douglas succeeded as Baron in 1687 and also when his brother Archibald succeeded in 1698. It was included in the lands of the Eliotts of Stobs according to the 1678 Land Tax Rolls. John Thomson was there in 1684 when his son John was on a list of Covenanter fugitives. It appears to have been among lands inherited by Sir William Eliott from his father in 1692. William Elliot was tenant there in 1694. The lands were acquired by Sir Gilbert Eliott of Stobs from Robert Elliot in the early 18th century and after a dispute with the Buccleuch estates the boundary with Peelbraehope was fixed in 1718. James Reid was there in 1709, John Elliot in 1714 and 1728–30, Robert Clerk in 1729 and John Mitchellhill in 1734. Gideon Scott was farmer there in at least 1785–97. John Armstrong, Henry Elliot and Thomas Grieve were servants there in 1799 and Thomas Douglas, William Amos and John Thomson in 1801. In 1841 Alexander Burnet, Henry Scott and their families were living there. A. Linton was recorded there in a directory of 1868. The area around the farm was used for military training between the world wars, with a rifle firing range just to the north-west of the farm buildings – '... But the auld gudewife of Penchrise Cam' in wi' a shouder o' mutton' [ES], 'Penchrise and Skelfhill Pens, whose towring forms Seem made to face and conquer winter's storms, Old landmarks they, mementos of an age Existant, yet unknown to history's page' [WNK] (a rare local survival of the old Brythonic or p-Celtic 'pen', the name may be 'pen crys', meaning 'the hill with the girdle', perhaps referring to the Iron Age fortifications, although this origin of 'chrise' is not at all certain; it appears on Blaeu's 1654 map as 'Pencress' and on Stobie's 1770 map as 'Pencrest'; it is 'penercrys' in 1368, 'Pencriz' in c.1380, 'Pencryse' in 1464/5, 'Pentrise' and 'Pencrise' in 1511, 'Pencrise' in 1512, 'Pencryse' in 1574, 'Pencryise' in 1576, 'Pencryste' in 1586/7, transcribed 'Pentryse' in 1618, 'Penchrist' in 1684, 'Penchryst' in 1687, transcribed 'Penchoyst' in 1692, 'Pencrise' in 1694, 'Panchrist' in 1695, 'Penchrist' in 1709, 'Pencryst' in 1718, 'Penchress' in 1729 and 'Pencrest' in 1839).

Penchrise Burn (pen-krīs-burn) n. stream rising near the Pike and running to the east of Penchrise Pen to join the Slitrig. There is an earth and stone banked enclosure and other banks on a sloping shelf above the Burn, on the eastern side, near Burnt Craig Wood; this could be related to military operations at Stobs Camp. To the west, on the eastern slopes of Penchrise Pen are the remains of a settlement. Further south, also on the west side of the stream are the remains of a homestead, about 25 m in diameter, with a probably hut platform inside, with an entrance on the west and probable old trackway leading to it. Graptolites have been found in the rocks here.

Penchrise Peel (pen-krīs-peel) n. small farm steading on the opposite side of the Slitrig from Shankend. In 1908 a Scots baronial type house was built there as a hunting lodge, to J.P. Alison's design. The wood around the farm is called Peel Wood.

Penchrise Pen (pen-krīs-pen) n. hill near Penchrise farm, reaching a height of 439 m (1,439 ft). It contains a triangulation pillar and former military observation post (which blew over in a storm in the 1970s), as well as the remains of several earthworks and the ramparts of a hillfort. Like several other major peaks in the area, the hill is formed from igneous rocks. The bare cone of rock at the summit is enclosed within 3 ramparts, with entrances to the north-west and north-eat. Within the roughly 105 m by 80 m enclosure are banks and possible hut circles. There is a roughly triangular annex immediately to the west, containing 3 hut circles and another enclosure to the north-east. On the eastern slopes is another earthwork, probably a settlement, measuring about 50 m by 40 m; it has been partly erased by cultivation, as well as quarrying and has a sheepfold partly on top. On the southern slopes of the hill lie the remains of a settlement, about 50 m by 45 m, as well as a small homestead. The Catrail also crosses to the south of the Pen. The conical shape of the hill makes it easily recognisable over a wide area of the Borders. The training grounds for Stobs Camp stretched all the way to here at one point, with WWI practice trenches being dug on the north-west slopes – 'Is yon the star, o'er Penchryst Pen, That rises slowly to her ken, And, spreading broad its wavering light, Shakes its loose tresses on the night?' [SWS], '... And o'er high hill, and hollow glen, Round Liddle-head, and Penchrise-pen' [AD], 'Like a breeze upon the High Street singing down from Penchrise Pen, They waft our weariest worries clean beyond the haunts of men' [JYH], 'I've felt on top o' Penchrise The warm sun beekin doun' [WL] (a curious double use of the ancient p-Celtic root 'pen'; it appears on Blaeu's 1654 map as 'Pen hill' and is 'Pencrest pen' on Stobie's 1770 map; the spelling varies, e.g. it is 'Pencrestpen' in 1839).

pend (pend) n. a vaulted or arched passageway, especially one leading from a street to a courtyard, an arched walkway – 'oo bade in a pend off the Howegate', 'oo've got a lot o pends bit nane o thum er actually caaed that officially' [IWL], 'A'm shair ilka corner and gairden and pend ...' [??], '... A toff cam in wi' bulging pack And dumped it in the pend' [WL], '... oo've quite a lot o pends in Hawick, really' [ME], an arched roof, the arch of a bridge – '... the bonnie Teviot, dooce an purposeleike ... gleidin neth the pends [ECS] (from Latin; see also pendit, pendit hoose and penned).

pendicle (pen-di-kul) n., arch. a subsidiary piece of land – '... land of Norcroft, with the pairtis, pendiclis, and pertinentis of the samyn ...' [SB1603], '... and whole other parts, pendicles, and pertinents of the same, lying within the shire of Roxburgh, in favours of the said Robert Langlands' [DCW1758] (a Scots law term).

pendit (pen-dee', -di') adj., arch. vaulted, arched – '... Aneath the pendit arches O' the auld Mid Raw' [JT] (see pend).

pendit hoose (pen-dee'-hoos) n., arch. a 2-storey house with a vaulted lower floor. In former times, perhaps peaking in the 16th century, 'pended buildings' were the common mode of defensive construction, with the upper floors being reached using a ladder via a hole in the ceiling of the arch below. This construction was partly for protection and partly so the animals could be housed on the bottom floor. The walls were originally several feet thick. Outside stairs projecting into the street were added to most of them in the 17th and 18th centuries. The back of 51 High Street is the last example of such a fortified house in Hawick, with No. 53 being the last one on the front of the street (rebuilt at the end of the 19th century). There were formerly a great number in Hawick, situated all along the High Street and Howegate, but most were replaced during the 18th and 19th centuries. W.N. Kennedy described the status in 1857, pointing out that the strongest such houses were distributed throughout the Town, presumably for defense and protection, with none built beside or opposite each other.

Pendreigh (pen-dree) n. Mr. (19th C.) poulterer in Hawick. In 1878 he surprisingly presented himself as an alternative Council candidate to Robert Fraser Watson for Wilton Ward. At the ward meeting he received the same number of votes as Councillor Watson, but was later encouraged to step aside; Watson was elected unopposed and became Provost a few years later. He may be the Robert C. who married Agnes Dryden and whose son William was baptised in Cavers Parish in 1869.

pen-fauld (pen-fawld) n., arch. the yard near a farmer's house used for holding his cattle (noted by J. Jamieson).

Penicuik (pe-nee-kook) n. town between Peebles and Edinburgh. It has a 'Hunter and Lass' celebration in late May, which began in 1936 and is modelled on the traditional Border Common Ridings. Population about 18,000.

Peniel Heugh (pī-nul-hew) n. hill north of Jedburgh, reaching a height of 237 m (791 ft), which hosts an ancient British fort. It is the location of the tower officially called the Waterloo Monument, it is a striking local landmark, being the tallest man-made feature in the Borders. It was built for the Marquess of Lothian to celebrate Wellington's victory. It is a circular tower, 48 m (150 ft) high, which can be reached via a side road near Monteviot House, although there is currently no public access to the interior. The first architect was William Burn, but the original construction collapsed in 1816 when it was about 3/4 completed (this is sometimes ascribed to a small earthquake). The new design was by Archibald Elliot (also responsible for Jethart Castle Jail) and was completed 1817–24. It was popularly known as 'Wellington's Pillar' around the time it was built. A wooden gallery at the top was added in 1867 to mark Queen Victoria's visit to the Borders. The trees planted around the hill were reputedly supposed to represent the armies at Waterloo, but there is unfortunately no truth to this. The hill was the location for one of the beacons in the network for warning of French invastion around 1800. There is also a triangulation pillar on the summit of the hill. There is a booklet written by Garret O'Brien. Hawick millwright Gideon Scott built an early windmill there in the early 1800s – 'Duist a hip-step-an-a-lowp, an A cam on o another kenspeckle landmerk – Peinelheuch' [ECS] (the origin of the name is possibly the Old Welsh 'pen' and Old English 'hyll hoh', meaning tautologically 'hill hill height'; the biblical 'Peniel', pronounced entirely differently, may have influenced the spelling that appears on Stobie's 1770 map; it is 'the hill callit Paynyelheucht or Downalddisknow' in 1581, which may suggest that the first element was never 'pen'; the name appears as 'Painchelhill' on Blaeu's 1654 map).

Penielheugh see Peniel Heugh

Penman (pen-mun) n. Dr. (19th C.) doctor in Hawick. He was surgeon to the Mechanics' Friendly Society. His practice was taken over by Dr. Lorraine in about 1889. George (1921–2000) writer for the Hawick News, contributing the 'Rambler' column as well as covering sport. He worked in Pesco's, finishing as Sales Director, played for Hawick both at rugby and cricket, was President of Hawick R.F.C. 1975–77, and was also Callants' Club President and Chairman of the Community Council. John (d.c.1688) tenant in Winnington Rig in 1688 when his will was recorded. There was a notary in the Jedburgh area noted in 1631 (who also had a son called John), who might possibly be the same man. Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His children included: Janet (b.1704); and Henry (b.1706). Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He was recorded as a workman in Whitchesters in 1708 and a carrier in 1712. He married Agnes Aitken and his children included: Isobel (b.1708); James (b.1710); and Thomas (b.1712). The witnesses in 1708 were James Gray in Whitlaw and Francis Henderson in Flex and in 1712 were Robert Thomson and John Dryden. Rev. William (c.1602–68) educated at Edinburgh, he became minister of Morebattle in 1634. He signed the National Covenant, probably in Hawick, in 1638. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Andrew Sturgeon of Torrorie.

Penmanshaa (pen-munz-haw) n. Penmanshall, former farmstead roughly between Harden and Borthwickshiels, lying on the Penmanshaa Burn. Michael Anderson lived at 'penmans-hall' in 1773 and 1775. William Black was there in 1793 (the origin of the name is unknown, but could relate to an early resident called Penman).

Penmanshaa Burn (pen-munz-haw-burn) n. stream rising north of Borthwickshiels and running into Harden Burn. The farm of Penmanshaa was located there in the 18th century.

Pennango (pen-awng-gō) n. former name for lands around Mosspaul, surviving as 'Penangushope' for the valley through which the Mosspaul Burn flows. The name is included in a description of the boundaries of Ringwood when it was granted to Melrose Abbey in the 1160s. The land was gifted to the monks of Melrose by William Earl of Douglas in the 14th century. The name also appears as an occasional surname, e.g. in 1552 'Sym Pennango' was paid by the Court to deliver letters to the Laird of Buccleuch, and in the 1577 Edinburgh Burgess roll 'Andro Penango' became a Burgess by right of being servant to the Lord Provost (also spelled 'Penango' etc. and cf. Penangushope; another example of the ancient p-Celtic root 'pen', this perhaps meaning 'marshy hill' or 'uninhabited hill'; the name is mentioned around 1200, and a small valley 'Penangushope' occurs in many 14th–17th century documents; it was stated as being pronounced by shepherds as 'Glinpineagle' or 'Glenpenanga' in notes for the Ordnance Survey in the 1850s; it has recently been fancifully connected with 'Agned', the site of a purported battle involving King Arthur, but there is no evidence for this).

Pennango (pen-awng-gō) n. David 'Davie' (16th C.) recorded in 1541 when he was accused of having led about 10 Scotsmen on a raid on 'Brome' in Gilsland, where the wife of Andrew Routledge was killed. Gyrie (d.bef. 1536) recorded in an account of events in Scotland in 1536. There was 'ane singular fechting betuix the Johnstounis on the ane pairt, twa Moffettis and Gyrie Panago on the vther pairt' in the presence of James V; this was perhaps a late case of judicial ordeal by battle. He was killed, along with a Moffat and a Johnstone. It is unclear if 'Gyrie' is short for something. Hugh (16th/17th C.) recorded in about 1600 in documents relating to a feud between the Earl of Cassilis and the Laird of Bargany. His name is recorded as 'Hew Pennandgow'. Hugh (17th C.) witnessed a bond by Lord Mauchline in 1655. His name is written 'Hughe Pennango'. In an inventory for John Muir of Park in Ayrshire (dated 1685, but probably referring to about 1652) he was 'Hugh Pennango in Broadlay'. Perhaps the same Hugh was recorded in a case involving the Duchess of Lauderdale in 1685; this was one of the last records of anyone with this surname. James (16th C.) recorded in 1532 when he had the gift of all the goods of James Symontoun in 'Lekclyok'. James (17th C.) son of Robert, who was tenant in Cockburnspath. In 1674 he became an apprentice, to saddler Robert Childers in Edinburgh. He may be one of the last of this surname on record. Robert (17th C.) recorded as 'fermourer' in Cockburnspath in 1674 when his son James became a saddler's apprentice in Edinburgh. He was presumably tenant of the mill at Cockburnspath. Simon (16th C.) servant of the Earl of Angus and vassal of the Barony of Douglas. He was servant to the Earl of Angus when he defended Tantallon Castle when it was besieged by James V in 1528. In 1531 he was a member of the royal household and in 1533 received the gift of the ward and marriage of John Carmichael. He was given livery from the King in 1535 and had a gift of the non-entries of part of the lands of 'Auchincors and Corsyncon' in Ayrshire in 1535/6. In 1537 he was in ward and his goods were poinded by royal officers, so he had clearly fallen out of favour. In 1538 he was sent from Edinburgh Castle to Tantallon, and in 1540 was back in Edinburgh Castle. He returned to favour with the King later in 1540 and was granted lands in the Barony of Douglas. He may also be the 'Symiune Pennango' who was recorded as Captain of Coldingham in 1543. William (14th C.) cleric from Glasgow Diocese. He was recorded in 1332 as licenciate in arts and illegitimate son of a married man. He was given dispensation to be ordained and to hold a benefice; however, it is unclear if that happened. His surname clearly came from the lands near Teviothead, although it is unknown who his parents were. William (16th C.) tenant in Easter Whitfield. He witnessed as precept by the Commendator of Coldingham in 1557. He may be the same William who was granted the lands of Middle Blantagart (in the Barony of Douglas) in 1539, and was surely related to Simon, who held these lands earlier (also written 'Penango'; this surname is surely related to the place in Roxburghshire and was prevalent in Ayrshire, although now extinct; see also Penangushope).

the Pennant (thu-pe-nin') n. another name for the Flag – 'Nor will their prowess be forgot While Pennant is on high, For Callants still are ready yet To serve it well – or die' [WFC].

penned (pend) pp., adj., poet. arched, vauled – 'It surely has been penn'd in night, For there's moon madness i' the clatter' [JoHa] (see also pend).

pennies each (pe-neez-eech) interj., arch. call of a hawker for items that cost one penny each – 'Where actually 'a penny each' was meant, vendors at Hawick Common-Riding games were to be heard calling: 'Programmes for the games, pennies each!' ' [ECS].

pennil (pe-nil) n., arch. a pennon – '. . . carried the same along the haill common, and through the haill town, deriding, mocking, Scoffing and laughing at the old pennil and bearers and carriers thereof' [BR1706], 'The new pennel, standard or colour . . . ' [BR1707] (also written 'pennel'; an alternative to pensil).

Pennington (pe-nin-tin) n. Jean nee Beattie (1936–2022) only surviving daughter of Rev. J. Donald Beattie, she was born in Wilton Manse. She was educated at an Edinburgh boarding school and became a teacher at Prestonpans and at George Watson's in Edinburgh. She was present with her father at the National Service in St. Giles Cathedral for the accession of Queen Elizabethi in 1953. In 1962 she married Peter and they had 2 children.

the Pennon (thu-pe-nin) n. a term used to refer to the Flag – 'We'll lift our spears of service, where'er our feet may roam, To the Vision of the Pennon on the dear old hills of home' [JYH], '. . . Took their cherished pennon from them, Put them to ignoble rout' [TK], 'The Cornets, God bless them, all Gentlemen, true, They still guard the Pennon and new life imbue' [WFC].

the Pennon Way (thu-pe-nīn-wā) n. public footpath stretching 270 miles from Kirk Yetholm in the Borders to Edale in the Peak District (or the other way round). Although called after the Pennines, it also traverses about half of the Cheviots. It is regarded as one of the most challenging long-distance walks in Britain. The closest part to Hawick is the stretch (on the wrong side of the Border) between Windy Gyle and Byrness.

penny-bridal (pe-nee-brī-dul) n., arch. a wedding ceremony in which the guests contribute a small amount of money towards the entertainment, with any surplus going to the bride and groom – 'John Hart being cited to compear before the session for making a pennybryddall at his daughter Christian's marriage . . . ' [BR1703].

Pennycook (pe-nee-kook) n. Alexander (b.c.1835) son of John and Jane, who were from Lanark. He was a stockingmaker in Hawick. In 1861 he was responsible for the murder of William Ainslie in Free Church Lane, with young William Moore also involved. Peter (b.c.1810) farmer at Highchesters Mill in 1841. He was living there with his siblings Barbara and Robert. He was probably from Dundee and in 1851 was living in Peebles with his sister Barbara, who had married Selkirk innkeeper Walter Brydon. Peter (b.1832) born at Rawflat. He farmed at Newhall in Bowden Parish. He is probably the Peter of Bewlie who served as a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire. In the 1860s he resided at Hallrule house. In 1864 he presented to the Archæological Society an 'antique stirrup, which belonged to Archibald 'Bell-the-Cat', Earl of Angus, from the collection of the late Earl of Buchan'. In about 1874 he is recorded being 'of Bewlie Hill' when he was owner of lands in Bewlie that had formerly been owned by William Riddell of Camieston. He also held lands in Bowden Parish, including Midlem Mill. In 1855 he married Robina, daughter of Henry Elliot, farmer at Greenriver (i.e. Hobsburn). They had one daughter, Agnes Ellen, who married James Lindsay, son of George Oliver, solicitor in Hawick. William, J.P. (19th/20th C.) one of the main people involved with the time capsule inserted into the Horse Monument in 1914 and uncovered in 2003. He was probably the same W.M. who was in the first pair to win the Pow Cup in 1905. He lived at 10 Beaconsfield Terrace.

the penny end (thu-pe-nee-end) n. popular name for primary 1 at some schools, or the part of the school where they were taught (such as Buccleuch School and Wilton School, where the first three years were separated).

Pennymuir (pe-nee-mewr) n. site of Roman marching camps on Dere Street, just a few miles from the Border, near the head of the Kale Water, about 15 miles east of Hawick. Dere Street can be followed from there to Whitton Edge (the origin of the name is probably Old Welsh 'pen y muir', meaning 'the hill of the wall'; the name occurs at least as early as 1637, and is often written 'Pennymoor').

penny-stane (pe-nee-stān) n., arch. a game, similar to quoits, played with a flat, round 'pennystone' – '[One profanes the Lord's day by] gameing at the bob and penny stane' [HAST1904] (recorded about 1695).

Pen Sike (pen-sīk) n. small stream that rises between Penchrise Pen and White Hill, running to the south to join the Penchrise Burn. At its head there in a linear earthwork crossing White Hill, which is probably an agricultural boundary. There are also the remains of a settlement in its headwaters, on the south-west slope of Penchrise Pen. It appears that it corresponds to the stream formerly known as Langcleuch.

Pen Sike (pen-sīk) n. small stream that rises just to the north of Skelfhill Pen and runs in an easterly direction to join the Skelfhill Burn.

pensil (pen-sil, -sul) n., arch. a small flag, pennon, banner, standard – 'Item, The grate pincell of black taffata, caried one a Lance poynt by Walter Scot of Gridlelands' [SB1634], especially used for the flag carried in the Hawick Common Riding in the 18th century, first recorded word for the Flag in the Burgh Records of 17th May 1703 – 'The said day the Common rydeing was ordained to be upon Fryday, the twenty eight of May, iiM, vijC. and thrie yeares, James Scott, called Laird, was voted to cary the pencell' [BR1703], 'The person elected cornet having declined to carry the pennil [sic], or colour, caused ane great disturbance, confusion, and mutiny amongst the otherwise civil inhabitants' [BR1706], '. . . the person or persons that was statut and ordained to carry the towne pencill or Colour the day befor being Fryday, the last of May . . . ' [BR1706], '. . . and George Deanes, merchand, was the first that caried the new pencell, standard or colour . . . ' [BR1707], 'See their pensil floating o'er them! See them drive the kye before them' [RSC]' (also written 'pencell' and variants; from Old French, diminutive of 'penon').

pensioner (pen-shi-nur) n., arch. a dependent, someone in the pay of someone else, especially a soldier – '. . . And more that that I do confess, the Pensioners of Buccleuch (thu-pen-shi-nurz-ov-bu-kloo) n. a list of 24 names which, according to Walter Scott of Satchells, were prominent supporters of the Lord of Buccleuch, each of whom was given land for their service. The era to which the list refers is the end of the 16th century or beginning of the 17th. Many names on the list are well known, but some are otherwise unrecorded, suggesting that they may be mis-remembered (or invented) by Satchells. The fact that two forenames are missing supports the idea that Satchells may have struggled to remember. On the other hand, some of the names that were unknown to Keith Scott in his 1923 Scott genealogy have subsequently turned up in other records, and so Satchell should not be entirely discounted as a source of information. The list is: Walter Scott of Northhouse; Robert Scott of Allanmouth; David Scott of Stobicote; David Scott of Raesknowe; Robert Scott of 'Clack'; William Scott 'in the Mott'; John Scott of 'Monkstower'; Robert Scott of Easter Groundistone; James Scott of Alton Croft; Thomas Scott in Wester Groundistone; John Scott in Drinkstone; William Scott, 'Milma', in Lees; Robert Scott in Clarilaw; William Scott of Todshawhaugh; Andrew Scott of Todshawhill; John Scott in Stouslie; [blank' Scott of Whames; [blank] Scott of Castlehill; Walter Scott of Chapelhill; Robert Scott of Howford; Robert Scott of Satchells; Robert Scott of Langhope; William Scott, 'cut at the black'; and Walter Gledstains of Whitlaw.

They kept four and twenty Pensioners, Think not I lie, or do me blame, For the Pensioners I can all name' [CWS].

Penstemon Alice Hindley (pen-sti-min-aw-lis-hind-lee) n. large-leaved, perennial variety of penstemon, introduced by Forbes' Nurseries in 1931, and one of the oldest hybrids in cultivation today. It is a popular plant and was given the Royal Horticultural Society Award of Garden Merit.

Pentecost (pen-tu-kost) n. festival celebrating the descent of the Holy Spirit after the Ascension, seven weeks after Easter. It was formerly used as one of the days for paying rents and legal fees, and was later referred to as Whitsunday.

the Pentecostal (thu-pen-tu-kos-tul) n. popular name for a Pentecostal congregation (whose members seek to be filled with the Holy Spirit, like the Apostles at Pentecost). They originally met in a Mission Hall on Beaconsfield Terrace before WWI, and in a wooden hut at the bottom of Laidlaw Terrace in the mid-20th century. It was also referred to as 'the Apostolic', and held big meetings for children during the War years. The site was where the Evergreen Hall was later built.

penter (pen-tur) n., poet. a painter – 'Ay, penter lad, thraw to the wund . . . ' [JBS] (not particularly Hawick pronunciation).

Penton (pen-tōn) n. station on the Waverley Line just south of the Border. The nearby 'Penton Linns' are a picturesque series of waterfalls on the Liddel Water (which marks the Border here), and is also an area of special geological interest. The bridge there was built in 1812, with one of the contractors drowning when removing the wooden supports from the arch – 'Go with me to Penton Grove, bonnie lassie O, Through its mazie walks we'll rove, bonnie lassie O, Where the Liddel waters rin, With their wild resounding din, As they flow out o'er the Linn, bonnie lassie O' [DA].

Penwen (pen-win) n. Robert (d.c.1460) cleric of Glasgow Diocese. In 1419 he claimed to be from a knightly family and related to the Earl of Douglas; it was probably through the Douglases that he was appointed to Southdean. He was a Bachelor of Decreets by 1408 and may have studied in Orleans. It is unclear if he graduated M.A., but was sometimes referred to as 'Master'. In 1411 he was notary for a charter for McDougall of Makerstoun. In 1417/8 he had dispensation to hold 2 benefices, and this was confirmed in 1419. He may have been granted the Church of Makerstoun from about 1411 and still held it until 1424. He was at the Roman court in 1419 and perhaps again in 1426. He had a promise to expect the Vicarage of Selkirk following the demission of John Elwald in 1419/20. He received the Rectory of 'Sowdon', i.e. Southdean Parish by 1424, having been given Holy Trinity in Berwick upon Tweed, but obtaining Southdean 'by collation' first. In 1426 he asked the Pope to confirm his gift of the perpetual chaplainry of Roxburgh and was also given permission to hold another incompatible benefice for the following 5 years. He probably had no real duties in Roxburgh, since the church there was then in ruins. He is recorded as Rector at Southdean in 1443 when he was assigned the canonry and prebend of 'Capyt alias Balderen' in Dunkeld. He also held the perpetual vicarage of Closeburn by 1443, as well as some tithes from Morton in Dumfriesshire. In 1443 he had the promise of a Canonry and Prebend of Caputh in Dunkeld. He was further recorded as Southdean Rector in 1444 when he witnessed a charter for the Kers of Altonburn and another at Jedburgh. He was probably the Robert 'Pennwen', Clerk of the Diocese of Glasgow, who, in 1447, was granted a canonry of Glasgow, which was the gift of Thomas 'Perawen' (presumably a close relative); however, this was blocked when he was found to to be the illegitimate son of a priest, a fact that was dismissed by the new Pope in 1461. This Robert at that time already held the perpetual vicarage of Calder. In 1455 he was master 'Roberto pendven' Rector of 'sowdon' as adjudicator for a dispute over teinds in Morebattle; 'Master Thomas Pendven', Rector of 'Kerkmachquho' (probably Kirkmahoe) was mentioned in the same document and hence possibly his brother (and 'John Pendwen', Vicar of Sprouston recorded in 1475 was surely another relative). He was Robert 'Rendven' when recorded as still Rector of 'Sowdon' in 1455, and probably died a few years later. Another Robert, 'younger', son of a priest and a spinster, was recorded at St. Andrews University in 1445/6 and 1448 and was probably his son, having the same benefices of Closeburn and Morton transferred to him in 1443 (also spelled 'Pendven', 'Penven' and variants).

peppercurns (pe-pur-kurnz) n., arch. a small device for grinding pepper – 'Peppercurns. A simple machine for grinding pepper, Teviotdale' [JoJ].

peppoch (pe-poch) n., arch. a collection of cherry stones – 'Peppoch, The store of cherry-stones from which the castles of peps are supplied; called also Feedow, Roxb.' [JoJ] (also 'paipoch').

Percehay see Percy

percise (per-sīs) adj., arch. precise – '... He'd look percise, and smile and play as suited best: But Death has laid him in the clay, – Well may he rest' [CPM] (perceeze).

Percy (per-see) n. Henry (1300–52) 2nd Baron Percy, son of Henry de Percy, the 1st Baron Percy of Alnwick. In 1327 he was created Lord Warden General of the English Marches. From 1334 he was joint Warden with Ralph, 4th Lord Neville. That year he was given lands by Edward III which had formerly belonged to Douglas. This included the town and castle of Jedburgh, Jedforest and Hassendean; this may have led to the rivalry between Percy and Douglas generations later. These lands were recovered by Sir William Douglas about 1338, but he was given a warrant in 1341/2 to be paid by the Exchequer for keeping Berwick and Jedburgh Castles, the towns of Jedburgh, Bonjedward and Hassendean, as well as Jedforest. The lands were retaken by the English in 1346 and his Jedburgh lands were confirmed to him in 1352. He married Idonia Clifford, daughter of Robert de Clifford, Earl of Surrey, who had been the previous Warden. He was succeeded by his son Henry, 3rd Lord of Alnwick. Henry (1320–68) 3rd Baron Percy, eldest son of Henry the 2nd Lord. He served as Lord Warden General of the English Marches from 1352. In 1354 he, along with Ralph Neville, was appointed as a commissioner to deal with Elizabeth, widow of Sir William Douglas, former Keeper of Hermitage. In 1356 he had the town and forest of Jedburgh conferred on him by Edward III, the grant included the town of Hassendean. He served as English Sheriff of Roxburghshire 1355–57. He married Mary Plantagenet, and was succeeded by his son Henry. Henry (1342–1408) 4th Baron Percy and 1st Earl of Northumberland, son of Henry, the 3rd Lord of Alnwick. Like his father and grandfather he served as Lord Warden General of the English Marches, from about 1366/7, serving until at least 1375. He fought in the Hundred Years War and was Warden of the Marches. Richard II granted him the constabulary of Jedburgh, towns of Bonjedward and Hassendean and Jedforest, as well as other lands, confirming an arrangement to his grandfather. The entire territory of Teviotdale was bestowed upon him in 1403. He had been a supporter of Henry of Lancaster (later Henry IV), but revolted against him in 1403. These machinations included the siege of Cocklaw Tower (Ormiston) along with his son 'Hotspur' and their men in May of that year. After Hotspur's death and his own capture at Shrewsbury he continued plotting against the English King, leading an attack from the North, which led to his death at Bramham Moor. He forfeited his lands, with Jedforest passing to John of Lancaster. He married Margaret, daughter of Ralph, Lord Neville of Raby. Sir Henry 'Hotspur' (1364–1403) son of Henry, 1st Earl of Northumberland. The Percys were a powerful family based at Alnwick, who laid claim to the throne of England in the early 15th century. He was English Warden of the West and East Marches along with his father, and then solely from 1384. His nickname is said to have been given to him by the Scots as a tribute to his readiness to attack. His pennon was taken by James, Earl of Douglas, near Newcastle in 1388 and he was captured by the Scots at the subsequent Battle of Otterburn, but later ransomed. He was probably the English Warden who was at Rulehaugh in about 1395 to witnesse the combat between Sir William Inglis and Thomas Struthers. In 1403 he besieged Cocklaw Tower, which has been identified with Ormiston. Henry IV refused to give help, and this was the excuse for the Percy's to launch their direct attack on the English throne, leading to the death of Hotspur at the Battle of Shrewsbury. He features in Shakespeare's 'Henry IV'. He married Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Edmund Mortimer, 3rd Earl of March. They had 2 children: Henry, who became Earl of Northumberland; and Elizabeth, who married John, Lord Clifford, and secondly Ralph Neville. – 'Sir Harry Percy came to the walls The Scottish host for to see, Sayd, 'An thou hast brent Northumberland, Full sore it rueth me' ' [T]. Henry (1421–61) 3rd Earl of Northumberland, son of the 2nd Earl, who was Constable of England and Warden of the East March. He was first cousin of Edward IV. He was made Lord Warden General of the Marches in 1439. He was killed leading the Lancastrian side at the Battle of Towton. He married Eleanor, daughter of Lord Poynings and was succeeded by his son Henry. Henry (1449–89) 4th Earl of Northumberland, son of the 3rd Earl. He was one of the few Percy's to take the Yorkist side in the Wars of the Roses. John Neville was given the Northumberland title for a while, and it was only restored in 1473. He was later suspected of treason in the death of Richard III. In 1470 he was made Warden of the English Middle and East Marches, this being renewed in 1485. He was killed by rioters protesting high taxation. He married Maud Herbert, daughter of the Earl of Pembroke and was succeeded by his son Henry. Henry Algernon (1478–1527) 5th Earl of Northumberland. He was Warden of the East Marches from 1503, but apparently preferred the life of the court to that of Border warfare. He was in France during Flodden, although his two brothers fought there. In 1522 he was made a member of the Council of the North, and served as Lord Warden General of the Marches 1523–25. He married Catherine Spencer and was succeeded by yet another Henry. Henry Algernon (1502–37) 6th Earl of Northumberland, son of Henry Algernon and Catherine Spencer. He was a suitor of Anne Boleyn in their youth, but sat on the jury that convicted her of adultery in 1536. He served as Warden of the English East and Middle Marches 1527–37. In 1533 he led a force through the Borders that burned Branxholme, as well as Whitchesters, 'Whitchesterholme', Whitlaw and Newbigging, among other places. He was apparently quite profligate and eventually had to sell much of the family estates. He was forced to marry an older woman, Mary Talbot, who left him no direct heirs. Henry (1532–85) 8th Earl of Northumberland, brother of the 7th Earl. He was also engaged for many years in Border warfare. After being imprisoned for the third time he was found shot in the Tower of London. Thomas Earl of Worcester (c.1344–1403) younger brother of Henry, 1st Earl of Northumberland. He fought with distinction in France. He was Warden of Roxburgh Castle in 1377. He was granted Jedburgh town, castle and forest by his brother, Earl of Northumberland in 1397; this included the lands of Hassendean and Bonjedward and followed an earlier grant by Edward III to Henry Percy. He assisted his nephew Henry 'Hotspur' in the rebellion against Henry IV and was beheaded after the Battle of Shrewsbury. Sir Thomas (c.1504–37) 2nd son of Henry, 5th Earl and brother of the 6th Earl. In 1536 he was made Warden of the English Middle March, possibly along with his father. He was executed for his role in the 'Pilgrimage of Grace' (a Catholic uprising in the North of England). He married Eleanor Harbottle and their son Thomas was the 7th Earl of Northumberland. Thomas (1528–72) 7th Earl of Northumberland, nephew of the 6th Earl, he was Lord of Alnwick Castle. In 1557 he was appointed Warden of the English East and Middle Marches, and engaged in Scottish expeditions for many years, resigning in 1560. He was involved in a Catholic uprising of Northern England in support of Mary Queen of Scots, and had to hide out in Liddesdale in 1569. He was said to have been betrayed by Hector Graham of Harlaw (a Border outlaw), captured by Martin Elliot's men (or alternatively by Eckie Armstrong) and handed over to the Earl of Moray, spending the night in Hawick on their way north. He was imprisoned in Lochleven Castle and controversially sold back to Elizabeth I, handed over to Hunsdon at Berwick and beheaded at York 3 days later. He married Anne, daughter of Henry Somerset, 2nd Earl of Worcester. She was said to have been robbed by Liddesdale men while passing through the area to visit her husband in Scotland; a ring found at 'Blakeburn' (at least 2 centuries ago) was suggested to have been hers. She later went into exile in Europe, but maintained contact with other English Catholic exiles. Walter (d.1289) described as 'Walter Pershay' in a charter of around 1283–85. This involved inspection of the earlier charter of 1260 in which Tarvit was granted by William Avenel (to whom John of Wilton was 'feudator') to Thomas Wallace. He was the son and heir of Joanna of Wilton, who was probably the heiress of Sir John de Wilton. He also had a brother, William, who was a witness to the same charter. According to Scottish accounts, he had a role in the murder of the young Earl Duncan of Fife, and was executed by Andrew of Moray of Petty. The Percy (or 'Percehay') family were from the area of Ryton in North Yorkshire, and after his death is only heard of in Yorkshire. However, in some family histories his parents are given as Robert de Percehay and Joan de Vesey. That this is the same name as the Baroness of Wilton recorded in the early years of the 14th century is surely not a coincidence; perhaps Joan de Wilton was the same woman as Joan de Vesey (if she married twice), or else there were 2 generations here. Walter (d.1346) perhaps son of the earlier Walter. He is 'Walteri de Pertehay' in about 1320 when Henry Wardlaw was granted the western half-barony of Wilton, which used to belong to him and William 'de Chartres' (although there may be some confusion with the other half-barony here). English records suggest that he married Agnes, was succeeded by William and died in 1346.

Percy's Gauntlets (per-seez-gawnt-litz) n. trophy long held at Cavers House, captured from Percy Hotspur a few days before the battle of Otterburn. These are small gloves, richly embroidered with pearls and silver, and bearing a lion device. Clearly too small for Percy himself, they must have been a lady's favour, presented to him before going to battle, and Percy's desire to recover them may have contributed to the severity of the battle. These relics were previously sometimes referred to as 'Percy's Pennon', under the mistaken belief that this was a banner, rather than gauntlets.

Pesco's (pes-kōz) n. Peter Scott's, founded in 1878, with their main factory on Buccleuch Street, originally the partnership Adamson & Scott, between Peter Scott and his uncle Peter Adamson. The company started in part of Peter Laidlaw's old factory at Wilton Grove, was based in the Tabernacle from 1881–93, and moved to Buccleuch Street in 1893, acquiring the former premises of the Commercial Bank. Scott split from Adamson in 1884, when the firm's title was changed to Peter Scott & Co. The now familiar factory on Buccleuch Street was built in stages and largely completed by 1913, with the classical-style block to the west added in 1923 (designed by J.P. Alison). Behind the front section there are several other buildings, including knitting sheds and a boiler house. The factory retains its octagonal chimney (the only one in the Borders with its original top cornice). There was also another mill on Wilton Path (adjacent to the entrance to the 'hunder steps', specialising in sports coats) and one on Commercial Road (specialising in hosiery, opened in 1916) in the early 20th century. They were the first firm to guarantee against shrinkage of underwear at the turn of the 20th century. The Hawick factory was devoted to production for the troops during WWI, and supplied the ill-fated Shackleton expedition of 1914. In 1914 it was described as the biggest firm of its kind in Scotland, employing 800 people. Later it moved from hosiery into knitwear and sportswear. The Commercial Road buildings were used as a billet in 1939 and in 1945 the canteen was opened in the main factory. The Wilton Path factory closed in 1954. A nursery for employees ran until 1958. 16–18 Howegate was sold in 1956. A factory was built in Kelso in 1961 and another at Chirnside in 1974 (sold in 1981). The Queen and Prince Philip visit during the company's centenary year in 1978. The 'Peter Scott' signature is the main company logo, along with the deer image. The official trademark was 'Pesco' from 1931 until relatively recently, and that has always been the popular name in Hawick. The firm went into arbitration in 2010, but was temporarily saved by English firm Gloverall. In 2016 the factory ceased production for good and part was demolished in 2020. The 'Pesco Quotation Book' (1916) was sold to raise money for the war effort, and after WWI 'A Souvenir of Peace' was published. The company has given several notable gifts to the town, including an early motor ambulance and fire-fighting equipment.

the Pesh (thu-pesh) n. headmaster at the High School – 'Mr. Low was the Pesh it that time' (derived from the nickname 'le Pêche' of Rector Watters, so-called because of his complexion; see also Rectors).

pest (pest) v., arch. to pester, trouble – '... this incantation, 'Wi' cramps and cleeks may he be pest, An' o' diseases be a nest' ' [EM1820].

the Pest (thu-pest) n., arch. pestilence, epidemic disease, particular the Plague (see the Black Daith).

pestellet (pest-u-let) n., poet. a small pistol – '... But we had pestellets anew, And shot amang them as we might' [CPM].

pet (pe') n. a huff, fit of pique, bout of petulence, particularly in the phrase 'ti take the pet' – 'hei taen the pet when hei wusni picked first', 'she's in the pet the day'.

peth (peth) n., arch. a path, a steep road – '... an' whatsaeevir passes throwe the peths o' the seis' [HSR], 'Haud up my gaeings in thy peths, that my fitsteps sklydena' [HSR] (the usual local meaning has no implication of being a narrow footpath, as in the English word).

the Peth (thu-peth) n. Wilton Path, the road leading up the hill, continuing on from Albert Road as part of the old road to Edinburgh. It was also known as 'Roughheugh Path' until the late 19th century. It was once very built-up, with a row of houses at the top known as the 'Pathheid', and a factory block next to the entrance to the 'hunder steps'. In the mid-20th century it contained a chip shop, the Store bakers, a wine shop and 'Foosty Broon's'. Houses, shops and a knitwear factory were demolished in 1972/73, leaving essentially no houses on the street itself. The Manse for St. George's Church is at the top on the left.

the Pether (thu-pe-thur) n. nickname for anyone who worked as a packman or pedlar, particularly in the 18th century, e.g. William Scott from Deanburnhaugh.

Pether Hill (pe-thur-hil) n. nickname for a Hawick character of the 19th century, presumably a pedlar called Hill – 'Wullie the Paidle, Gleid Rob, Knacketts, Balmer the Bugler, Bobby Trott, Pies Oliver, and Jamie Tackets, Don Pedro, Pether Hill, Waulk Scott' [HI].

the Pether's Yett (thu-pe-thurz-ye') n. former name for a gate which gave entry to 'the Pedlar's Field', a field in which corn grew in the summer, being the first of the open fields on the land north of what is now Princes Street, where Ladylaw Place was built in the 1840s (from 'the Peddlar's Gate').

Pethheid (peth-heed) n. Pathhead, a former name for the area at the top of Wilton Path.

Adam Scott was living there in 1739. Spinner Thomas Ferguson and stocking weaver William Scott were living there in 1799. The name was particularly used for the row of houses that stood on the north side of what became Princes Street (near where the Balmoral Bar is located), as marked on the 1858 Ordnance Survey map. This block of houses is already marked on the 1810 sketch of Wilton. In 1841 the name appears also to have been used to the houses to the west, on Langlands Road. Note that the place gave its name to 'Path Head School', near Winnipeg, Manitoba (also sometmes 'Pathheid').

Pettigrew (pe'-ee-groo) n. John, M.B.E. (b.1882) born in Wellington Street, he became Joint Managing Director of Peter Scott's. He was a member of the Angling Club and the Masons, and also wrote some works on the woollen trade. He married Esther Scott (b.1874), who was niece of Walter Scott, co-founder of Lyle & Scott's. Robert (15th C.) bequeathed a sheep in the 1491/2 will of Sir David Scott of Branxholme. He is listed as 'domino Roberto Petigrew', suggesting he was associated with a church. It is unclear if he was local, like most people in the will.

peuchle (pew-chul) v., arch. to work ineffectively – 'That peuchlin' body never wuns off the bit' [GW], to cough feebly, splutter wheezily (in [HNe1954]), n., arch. a short cough (also written 'peughle').

peuther (pew-thur) v., arch. to canvass for votes – '...that whosoever has a mind to set up for the Magistracy, and peuther for it, shall be put in the Bailies' Leet without any objection' [BR1756], '...it for ever should be a stated rule, that no man should thereafter pewther for the Magistracy' [BR1763] (also written 'pewther' and 'pouther'; see also powder).

pewl (pewl, pūl) v., arch. to work feebly, struggle faintly – '...To haul again the inept implements That mauled the body of exhausted earth For yet another puling puny harvest' [DH], 'Little I thought when we brought thee here A puling babe in its swaddling gear ...' [WHO], to stifle a cough, to drizzle – 'It's pewlin' an' rainin'' [GW], to fall feebly or softly in small lumps (said of snow) – 'Pewil, Pewl, Peughle on, Used to denote the falling of snow in small particles, without continuation, during a severe frost, Teviotd.' [JoJ], 'Snaws join the squal, wi' pu'lin', pirlin', An' drifts, as 'round knowe-en's a-whirlin'' [JoHa], 'It's pewlin' on' [GW], n., arch. a thin curl of smoke, wisp – 'A pewl o reek fuffelt abuin the gleed, an swurlt an yilleet away in a pirlin braith o wund' [ECS] (also written 'pule'; cf. peuchle).

pey see paye

peysle (pī-sul) n., arch. a small farmyard tool – 'Peysle, Peyzle, Any small tool used by a rustic, Roxb.' [JoJ] (see also pyssle).

Phantasy (fawn-tu-see) n. dog boarding kennels and associated property situated just after Hawthornside on the way to Bonchester.

Phaup (fawp) n. former steading on the Phaup Burn above Castleweary, east of the A7. The Read Roads pass near here and the Mosspaul rideout route usually comes near here also. It was included in a description of Cavers Barony in an English document c.1380, with 'Estre and Westree' listed, suggesting it was once split into 2 farms. It was listed along with Linhope and Frostylee as a 20-shilling land among the possessions of the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1653, 1661 and 1663; ;

these were united with lands in Wilton and others into 'the tenement of Blackgraine'. However, it appears to have been in the Barony of Cavers when that superiority was inherited by Sir William Douglas in 1687 and by his brother Archibald in 1698. In 1718 it was surveyed along with other Buccleuch proerpties, at that point covering 654 acres and bounded by Skelfhill, Linhope, Binks, Southdeanrig and Northhouse. John Renwick was living there in 1749. William Grieve was shepherd there in at least 1797–1801, with Thomas Grieve also living there in 1797. The place name has many spellings and can also be confused with an area of the same name near the head of the Ettrick. This could be the 'Fallhope' which was owned by the Glendinnings of that Ilk from at least 1325. One of these 2 places probably gave rise to the somewhat rare surname Phaup, with 'Adam de Fawhope' being recorded as a juror in 1304, 'Archibald Fawup' being Chaplain at Linlithgow in the early 16th century and several people of the name recorded in the Melrose area in the 17th century (spelled 'Phawhope', 'Fawhope' and other variants; the origin might be from the Old English 'fah hop', meaning 'variegated valley'; it occurs at least as early as 'Fawehope' in c.1380, is 'Fawhop' in 1604, 'Falhope' in 1653 and 1660, 'Fawhope' in 1661, 'Fahope' in 1663, 'Phallhope' in 1687 and 1698, 'Phaip' in 1694 and 'Faup' in 1749; it is 'Faehope' on the 1718 Buccleuch survey maps; there are other places of similar name elsewhere, e.g. at the head of the Kale).

Phaup (fawp) n. area near the head of the Ettrick Water, also written 'Phawhope'. Nether and Over Phaup are separate farmsteads about 4 km aprt, the latter being a 'bothy' on the Southern Upland Way. Earlier the lands were split into Easter and Wester 'Fawlishope'. These were the lands of Sir John Turnbull 'of Falshope', whose daughter married George Scott of Synton about the early 15th century. Sir Thomas Turnbull held lands here in the latter part of the 15th century. They were Crown lands, assigned to John, son of Thomas Turnbull in 1483–87, then George Home of Ayton in 1488 and his son John in 1490, and then with John's consent assigned to John Turnbull. In 1494/5 the farm is mentioned as a place that was pillaged for sheep and in turn the residents there were charged with rieving. In 1501 they were half let to Ralph Ker and the other half to the wife of Sir Thomas Turnbull and Ralph Ker still held half the lease in 1502. James Gray was resident there in 1502 when he had remission for stealing livestock. This is probably where William and George Scott are recorded in 1526. In 1541 half the lands were occupied by Andrew Ker of Greenhead and the other half by William Stewart. Will Scott of Midgehope paid rental for these lands to Melrose Abbey in 1557 and Robert Scott of Tushielaw in about 1620. John Wilson was in the Wester part in 1580. Alexander Stewart from there was in Edinburgh Tolbooth in 1617. It is said that the farm was without a tenant or any stock for 20 years after the terrible winter storm of 1674. Francis Scott 'of ffauhope' paid the land tax in Selkirkshire in 1678. 'Over and Nether Faups' are listed among houses in Selkirkshir in c.1680. James Scott 'of Phaupe' is recorded in records of Melrose in 1682. Will Laidlaw 'of Phawhope' gave the version of 'Auld Maitland' published in Sir Walter Scott's 'Minstrelsy'. The Ballantynes were Lairds in the late 18th and early 19th centuries. It is easily confused with the farm between Castleweary and Mosspaul of the same name, as well as Fauldshope further down the Ettrick near Aikwood (spelled 'Phawhope' and variants; 'Fauhopschele et Fauhopgranys' are recorded in 1456; it is 'Faulishop' in 1468, 'Fawlishope' in 1471, 'Faulishop' in 1478 and 1488, 'Fawlishoip' in 1487, 'Faulishope' in 1490, 'Fawlishop' in 1494, 'Faulishop' and 'Fawlishop' in 1501, 'fawlishope' in 1502, 'Fawlishope' in 1526, 'Faldishope' in 1541, 'Fawlishop' in 1589 and 'Fauhoip' in 1620; 'Faup' is on Blaeu's c.1654 map, while 'Ever Fawhope' and 'Nether Fawhope' apper on Ainslie's 1773 map).

Phaup (fawp) n. Adam (13th/14th C.) recorded as 'Adam de Fauhope' when he was on a jury in 1304 to decide on the privileges of Robert the Bruce (when he was still just Earl of Carrick). The jurors were all from Dumfriesshire and Roxburghshire and hence it seems likely his lands were one of the local places of that name. Andrew (17th C.) notary in Melrose. He is recorded in many documents relating to the Regality of Melrose in the 1650s and 60s. His name presumably derives from the lands in Roxburghshire or Selkirkshire. Andrew (17th C.) listed among the 'Cottars in Hassanden' on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. His name was written 'Faup'. Elizabeth 'Bessie' (17th C.) listed among the poor living at Hassendean on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Her name is written 'Faup'. She could be the 'Bessie Phaup', married to William Wright, whose daughter Bessie was baptised in Roberton Parish in 1685. Elizabeth (b.1815/6) from Gordon in Berwickshire, she was a toll-keeper in Hawick. In 1851 she was a widow, living at West-Toll Bar (on Buccleuch Road), with he children James, Isabel T. and William T., her nephew James Brown and her cousin Adam Bell. Thomas (15th/16th C.) resident of Bedrule. In 1502 Robert Shiel had remission for stealing 8 sheep from him. William (d.c.1688) tenant in 'Langtoun' (probably Lanton). His will is recorded in 1688 and that of his wife Margaret Mather in 1686 (also written 'Fawhope' and 'Phawp').

Phaup Burn (fawp-burn) n. stream that joins the Frostlie Burn, roughly from the east, near Castleweary. The farmstead of Phaup is along its banks (marked 'Faupp B.' on Blaeu's 1654 map).

Phawhope see Phaup

pheesant (fee-zin') n. a pheasant – '... There isna a walk mair pleesant Now oor on the Whitehaugh Road And in front o' ee a pheesant' [AY], 'The feel o mushrooms; broilin a gumpit troot; Pheesane ploys in black wuds, wi gameys near' [DH].

Phenzhopehaugh (fee-nup-hawf, -hawch) n. isolated farmstead situated about 2 km up the Rankle Burn from the farms of Buccleuch. This was probably the site of the original manor for the Barony of Rankilburn. Phenzhopehaugh Burn meets the Rankle Burn from the west there, and above to the south-west is Phenzhopehaugh Hill, which reaches 382 m. There is a motte on an area of level ground to the north of the confluence; it is about 40 m by 25 m and about 2.5 m high, surrounded by a ditch, which has a causeway across it on the south-west side. This may have been the first residence of the Scotts of Rankilburn (with Sir Richard Scott of Rankilburn, who swore fealty to Edward II in 1296, probably holding these lands), before they moved their headquarters to Buccleuch. About 60 m south of the motte is a large circular enclosure, probably much more recent in age (it is not marked on Blaeu's c.1654 map; the stream is 'Finhopelake' on Ainslie's 1773 map and incorrectly a lake is labelled 'Findhopelake' near there on Mitchell's 1851 map).

the Philadelphia Stakes (thu-fi-lu-del-fee-a-stāks) n. race run as part of the Cornet's Races on the Saturday of the Common Riding in the later 19th century. The prize-money was presumably raised by exiles from the Philadelphia area.

Philhope (fi-lup) n. farm along the Borthwick valley, and the name for the area around it, particularly the flat region by the river, which has long been a popular picnic spot. Although on the south side of the Borthwick, the farm was contained within Selkirkshire. In 1530 Christian Inglis, with the consent of her husband Thomas, sold part of the lands to William Brydon, Vicar of Auld Roxburgh for £16. John Hope and John Hall were recorded as the King's shepherd's here and in Broadlee, being paid for grain in the Exchequer Rolls of 1540. William Davidson and Patrick Nichole were recorded there (probably as tenants) in 1579. There were Elliots there from at least the 16th century, Martin Elliot of Braidlie gaining lands from John Turnbull in 1579 and having a charter of 1591, at which time it lay within the Barony of Hawick and was annexed to Selkirkshire. This was afterwards to go to his son Simon and was ratified by Act of Parliament in 1592. In the early 1600s Simon's only child Grizel inherited and married John, son of Robert Elliot of Falnash. The lands were listed (along with Eilrig) as a 'pendicle' of Broadlee among lands inherited by the Baron of Hawick in 1615. The lands were estimated to pay '200 merks, vicarage 20 lb.' in the 1627 valuation of Hawick Parish. In 1631 John Turnbull of Howden was served as heir to his father Mark's lands there. However, the main farm was in the hands of the Crown for 37 years, until granted to Robert Elliot of Falnash in 1628; Robert's son John would marry the heiress, Grizell Elliot. It remained with the Elliots through most of the 17th century. Adam Elliot of Philhope was made an Honorary Burgess of Selkirk in 1643. There were 12 'communicants' recorded there in 1650, namely Archibald Elliot, Maly Nichol, Helen Elliot, Maly Elliot, Elizabeth Hislop, Maly Scott, Janet 'Cheislye', Grisel Pearson, John Hamilton, William Glen, Robert Scott and William Baptie. It was owned by William Elliot of Philhope in 1678 when valued at £216. William and Robert Chisholme (of Stirches) purchased it in 1684. In 1694 tax was paid on 6 hearths for 'Phillipp & milne'. Thos also listed there were William Elliot (probably the Laird), John Renwick, Robert Chisholme, Robert Riddell and Adam 'Junct'. Robert Veitch was living there in at least 1715–17 and Walter Haliburton in 1721. William Pringle was living there in 1737, Thomas Graham in 1762 and John Cavers in 1774. The teinds were valued at £33 6s 8d in 1785 when owned by the Duke of Buccleuch, and the stock was valued at £400, with the land tax paid by William Chisholme of Chisholme. In the 1788 county valuation (and still in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls) it is listed among the possessions of William Chisholme of Chisholme, and valued along with Broadlee at £216. It became part of the Buccleuch estates around the early 19th century and in the latter part of the 19th century was purchased by Richardson-Dickson. The farmer recorded there on the 1789–97 Horse Tax Rolls was Robert Nichol. James Turnbull was tenant in at least 1799–1812. George Scott and Robert Nichol were also there in 1812. In 1811 William Chisholme paid the land tax on £400 there, while the teinds were valued at £60 in 1802 and held by the Duke of Buccleuch. George Nichol was farmer there in 1841. John Nichol was there in the 1860s. It was part of Hawick Parish until Roberton was formed in 1689/90, and in earlier times was part of Selkirkshire. An area roughly opposite Meadshaw was the site of a skirmish in December 1653, between (Scottish) Royalist forces and (English) Commonwealth forces. About 80–100 mean under Sir Arthur Forbes, and with Maj. Irvine as second-in-command, had captured Andrew Kerr of Sunlaws and Chatto. Coming down from the north, they stopped at Borthwickbrae, and intended to head over towards Eskdalemuir. An English force, part of Twisleton's Regiment under Capt. Hart, were in pursuit. The Scots were easy to follow in the snow and made a stand at Philhope, where 4 Royalists were slain and 16 taken prisoner, with only 1 Englishman slain and 17 wounded. The prisoner Kerr was freed, but wounded through the thigh by an English trooper. The English concentrated on rounding up the horses, allowing most of the Scots to escape, including Forbes. This was probably the last battle to take place near Hawick. There are remains of some enclosures near the farm, age uncertain (also formerly spelled 'Philip' and variants; it is 'Philhop' in 1530, 'Filop' in 1540, 'Phillop' in 1592, 'Phillip' in 1627 and 1631, 'Fillip' in 1643, 'Phillip' in 1646, 'Phillop' in 1649, 'Phillip' in 1651, 'Philip' in 1678, c.1680 and 1686, 'Philop' in 1715 and 1717 and 'Philip' in 1785, 1788 and 1797; it is 'Phillope' on a parish map of 1650, 'Phillippe' on Blaeu's 1654 map and 'Philop' on Stobie's 1770 map; the origin is possibly Old English 'ful hop', meaning 'the dirty valley').

Philhope Brig (fi-lup-brig) n. bridge across the Borthwick near Philhope farm, leading to the former farm of Outerside. This site has often in recent times been chosen for Common Riding Ride-outs. The haugh there has been a favourite place for Hawick folk to come for picnics. The area was popularized in the Scocha song 'Dusty Road frae Philhope Brig ti Hame', released in 2017 with an accompanying video.

Philhope Loch (fi-lup-loch) n. man-made loch in the headwaters of the Philhope Burn. On the Roughhope Burn (rather than the Philhope Burn), the name was attached to it much later. It was constructed in 1844 following a drought which brought Hawick's woollen mills to a standstill. The work was arranged by the 3 main manufacturers at the time, William Wilson & Sons, William Watson & Sons and Dicksons & Laings. Construction was completed by 1846 on the earthwork dam here (about 100 yards in length), as well as at the nearby Broadlee Loch (which was much smaller). It is said that the sluice gate used to be opened in order to raise to Borthwick and then the Teviot, to help with the water-powered mills in Hawick. There was a suggestion around 1880 of using the Loch as a water supply for Hawick, but the decision was taken to develop the Allan Water works instead. Eventually the reservoir ceased to be used for its original purpose, and for a while it was used for fishing. When the embankment began to leak in about 1970 it was drained and abandoned.

Philhope Mill (fi-lup-mil) n. former farmstead near Philhope, presumably by the side of the Borthwick. It was part of Hawick Parish until 1690. Walter Miller was there in 1709 (also written 'Philip Mill', it is 'Philop milne' in 1709; it is shown on Blaeu's 1654 map).

Philhopeshiel (fi-lup-sheel) n. former steading on the Philhopeshiel Burn, about half-way between Eilrig and Lairhope. John Laidlaw and William Pringle were there in 1726, John Welch in 1727, James Armstrong in 1732–35, Thomas Graham in 1743, John Jackson in 1763, Robert Scott in 1765, John Graham in 1774, William Nichol in 1781 and Adam Pringle and Andrew Geddes in 1789. It was still marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map, but has now disappeared, although there is still an adjacent sheepfold (it is 'Philopsheil' in 1726 and 1732, 'Philopsheils' in 1727 and 'Philipshiel' in 1774).

Philhopeshiel Burn (fi-lup-sheel-burn) n. stream that rises on the eastern slopes of Rashy Hill, and runs in a roughly northerly direction to join the Eildrig Burn and hence the Borthwick Water.

Philip see Philhope

Philip (fi-lip) n. Andrew (1782–1822) son of William and Mary Scott. He was a mason, like his father. He was listed as a mason on the 1801 ballot for the Militia. He owned property on Slitrig Crescent, around No. 5, marked on Wood's 1824 map. His surname was listed as 'Phillips' in 1821 when he subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border'. He is probably the Andrew 'Philips' who married Henrietta Nichol, and whose children, baptised in Hawick, included: Isabel (b.1810); Mary (b.1811); William (b.1812); George (b.1815); William (again, b.1816); and Margaret (b.1817). He died in Hawick. George (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Janet Walker and their children included: William (b.1746); Elizabeth (b.1748); Janet (b.1750); Jane (b.1753); John (b.1755); Isabel (b.1759); and Robert (b.1760). Perhaps the same George was previously married to Janet Lockie and had a son Patrick baptised in Ashkirk in 1744. John (15th/16th C.) resident of Bonjedward. He was recorded in 1502 when George Douglas, Master of Angus, failed to present him at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. Robert (18th C.) mason in Hawick. He was probably the son of George, baptised in Ashkirk in 1760. In 1784 he (along with William) witnessed a baptism for labourer William Scott and Betty (perhaps his sister). Walter (d.c.1799) mason, son of William. He was recorded in 1797 among Hawick men on the ballot to serve in the Militia. In 1799 he was listed among men on the list balloted in 1797 but absent, with the annotation 'Dead', and his name crossed out. William (d.bef. 1822) mason in Hawick. He was probably son of George and Janet Walker, born in Ashkirk. He subscribed to Caw's 'Poetical Museum' (1784). In 1784 he (along with mason Robert) witnessed a baptism for labourer William Scott and Betty (perhaps his sister). In 1786 he witnessed a baptism for Adam Smail and Jane (who was probably his sister). He married Mary Scott, who was probably daughter of 'Black Andrew'. They had children: Alice (b.1770); George (b.1772); Walter (b.1776), listed among Hawick men on the ballot to serve in the Militia in 1797; Janet (b.1779); Andrew (b.1781); Christian (b.1782); Andrew (again, b.1782), also a mason; William (b.1785); Peter (b.1792); and Peter (again, b.1793). The witnesses in 1772 were merchants Andrew and Walter Scott (probably related to his wife), in 1777 were merchant Andrew Scott and Andrew Turnbull and in 1792 were Dr. William Scott and plasterer William Sibbald. His unnamed child died in 1798 (also written 'Phillip' and 'Philips').

Philiphaugh (fi-lip-hawf, -hawch) n. riverside plain just west of Selkirk, now the location for the town's rugby and cricket fields. It was the site of the Battle of 1645 which ended the Earl of Montrose's attempts to secure political control of Scotland, thereby ensuring the defeat of Charles I's cause. Montrose's men were surprised under cover of fog by the superior Covenant forces under David Leslie, to which the locals were sympathetic at the time; troops from Teviotdale must surely have fought in Leslie's army. Montrose fled, but most of his troops and the 300 accompanying women and children were massacred by Covenanting zealots. At the site of Montrose's encampment there is a monument in memory of the Covenanters who fought in the battle. Lands there were granted to William Turnbull in 1313 and there were still Turnbulls on part of the land until the early 17th century. However, the Murrays held the western part from the 15th century. The mansion was listed among the principal houses of Selkirkshire in an account of 1649. It was valued at almost £4000 in 1678. A Jacobean mansion stood here, remodelled in the 1870s and demolished to make way for a 1964 house. The estate left the hands of the Murrays in 1889, when it was sold to William Strang Steel. An old flintlock found there was donated to the Museum in 1900. The Covenanters' Monument is a stone pyramid on the grounds. A song about the battle was recorded by Scocha in 2004 – 'On Philiphaugh the fray began, At Harehead wood it ended; The Scots out o'er the Graemes they ran; Sae merrily they bended' [T] (it is 'Fulhopehalche' in 1317, 'Philophauche' and 'Phillophauch' in 1504, 'Philophauche' in 1509 and 'Phillophauch' in 1558; it is 'Philipshauch' and 'Philips-Haugh' on Gordon's c.1650 maps and 'Philliphauch' on Blaeu's c.1654 map; the origin of the name is probably the same as for Philhope).

Philogar (fi-lō-gur) n. hill and former lands in the Hownam Parish. The lands were connected with the Douglases of Cavers in the 16th and 17th centuries.

Phipps (fips) n. Maj.-Gen. Jeremy (1942–2021), C.B., army officer, who was with the Special Air Service during the 1980 siege of the Iranian Embassy in London. He was given command of the Queen's Own Hussars, then the 11th Armoured Brigade in 1986, was Director of Special Forces in 1989 and served as Senior British Loan Services Officer in Oman from 1993 before retiring in 1997. After retirement he washead of security at the Jockey Club. He settled in Rulewater in 2010 and became a member of Hobkirk Community Council, acting as Chair for 2 years. He was particularly involved in commemoration of war memorial days in Hobkirk.

pianae see piani

piani (pee-an-i) n. a piano – '... wi Adam Grant and Adie Ingles playin a piani duet 'Auld Hawick My Dreams' in the backgrund' [IWL], '... n' casually, while swingin back on his pianae stuill remarked 'Aye son, A should dae, A wrote eet!' [IHS] (also spelled 'pianih' and 'pianae').

pibroch (pee-broch) n., poet. traditional theme and variations played on the bagpipes – 'When Boreas cauld, blew his pibroch fu' bauld, And snaw showers fu' thickly flew pirlin' ' [JoHa], 'The battle march borne from afar is a summons, The pibroch a plaint to the lost days awa' [WL].

pick (pik) v., arch. to peck, 'to pick at a thing' means to understand it – 'Ti pick up a thing is to apprehend it, to notice or understand it' [ECS], n., arch. a peck, e.g. from a bird, a fit of spleen, offence, grudge, disliking – 'She took a pick at 'im' [GW] (see also take a pick at).

pick (pik) n., poet. pitch, bitumen – 'Tho' dark the night as pick and tar, I'll lead ye o'er yon hills fu' hie; And bring ye a' in safety back, If you'll be true, and follow me. Fala, &c.' [CPM].

pick at (pik-aw') v., arch. to understand something, form a dislike of someone or something – 'Ti taik a pick at a person (or thing) = to form a dislike, to take resentment at' [ECS].

picker (pi-kur) n. occupation in the knitwear industry, someone who picks out 'bobbles' and foreign matter in garments (usually with tweezers), this being often carried out by older women. Formerly the word was used for someone whose job was to cut loose threads from the web.

the Pickin (thu-pi-kin) n. official selection of the new Cornet, taking place on the Wednesday night after the first Tuesday in May (since Town Council meetings always used to be on Tuesdays). The ceremony used to take place on the Tuesday night immediately after the Council meeting to elect the Cornet, but at some point was shifted to the following night. The Provost's Council, with recommendation of the two previous standard bearers, choose a young man to be the new Cornet. The Burgh Officer (the 2 modern halberdiers taking it in turns), accompanied by the Drums and Fifes, carries the official letter to the Cornet-Elect's house, setting off at 7 p.m. When the band walk north they play 'Dumbarton Drums' and when they turn to the south they play 'Rumblin Brig', then they play 'Teribus' as the letter is handed over. In the house are gathered the Cornet's family and friends. The new Cornet goes outside to greet the crowd and there is a strive. The Halberdier is then given the acknowledgement and rewarded with a new shilling. The Officer and band return to the Town Hall, where 'Teribus' is again played as the reply is handed in. There is meanwhile a procession on foot by the Cornet's party through the older parts of town, specifically visiting the site of the Toll farthest from the Cornet's house, and ending at the Town Hall, with a short singsong. After the Procession there is the congratulatory Smoker and the Lasses Association dinner (when the new Lass and Acting Mother are presented with their badges). Formerly the parade would have stopped at the houses of the Minister, the Senior Bailie and several inns. The new Cornet's Tie is only revealed in a shop window after the Pickin. The practice of the Drums and Fifes escorting the Burgh Officer on Picking Night stopped for many years, but was revived in 1887.

the Pick Inn (thu-pik-in) n. former hostelry at the Mid Row in the mid-19th century.

Pickin Night (pi-kin-nī') n. name used to refer to the night of the Pickin, being the first Wednesday after the first Tuesday in May.

Pick Maw Hill (pik-maw-hil) n. former name for a field in Lilliesleaf Parish, probably to the south of the village. It is described (in the 'New' Statistical Account of Scotland) in about 1834 as an area formerly frequented by gulls, whose eggs 'were then much sought after by the villagers'.

the Pickmaw Moss see the Picmaw Moss

the Picmaw Moss (thu-pik-maw-mos) n. boggy area near Kirkton Hill, formerly known as Buckstruther, and being essentially the same as the area now also called Adderstonelee Moss (also spelled 'Pickmaw').

the Picts (thu-pikts) n., pl. people of northern Scotland, of uncertain origin, who remained unconquered by the Romans. The chronicler Gildas says that in the 5th century they penetrated southwards as far as Hadrian's wall. If so, they may have had some influence on the Hawick area, and may have spoken a Brythonic ('p-Celtic') language, in common with early Teries. Howevere, there is no evidence to support connections that were once believed to exist with the Borthwick Mains stone, the Catrail and the Mote. In 685 the Bernician (including the Hawick area) King Egfrith was defeated at 'Nech tansmere' in Fife when attacking into Pictland. Exactly who the Picts were is unclear, but by about 900 they had disappeared as a separate people and become part of the 'Scots'. It was said by Boece that they made a liquor from heather flowers, the process being lost with them. Leyden tells of a version of this story popular in Teviotdale, with the last Pictish warrior refusing to divulge the secret – '. . . And frequent wake the wild inspired lay, On Teviot's hills, beneath the Pictish sway' [JL] (probably from the Latin for 'painted').

the Picts-work Ditch see the Pict's Work Dyke

the Pict's Work Dyke (thu-pikts-wurk-dīk) n. an older popular name for the Catrail. It is also specifically used to refer to a section of linear earthwork stretching between Linglie (near Selkirk) to Mosilee (near Galashiels), first mentioned as early as 1723, but probably not directly connected to the Catrail (also 'the Picts-work Ditch' and similar).

the picturs (thu-pik-turz) n. the pictures, cinema – 'oo aye went ti the picturs on Seturdi mornins', 'Skinny Malinky long legs, umbrella feet, Went to the picturs and couldni finnd a seat', 'Maist folk ken when the word 'picters' is mentioned that it refers tae the cinema' [BW1938].

Pidgeon (pi-jin) n. George (19th C.) resident of Hawick. At the Common Riding Games of 1860, he won the 150-yard foot race and was 2nd in the race round the course on the Friday and won 3 foot races on the Saturday. He married Jean Hill in Hawick in 1860 and theor children included James (b.1860), Robert (b.1861), Nancy Leishman (b.1862), Jemima (b.1867) and Jane (b.1872).

pie (pI) n. a pie, almost exclusively referring to a meat pie, often with minced mutton – 'Ee got pies and tei at the muckle tent And eer chin was fair rinnin wi' grease' [AY].

piece (pees) n. a sandwich, often plural, and usually referring to something eaten as part of a packed lunch – 'mind an bring pieces for yer denner', 'This appeared to gratify him greatly – even more than the 'buttered piece' which he always received on leaving' [HAST1866], 'Mother, gie's a peece, ir ee?' [ECS], 'How we used to set off in the morning with a 'piece' in our pocket' [BM1905], 'Ma, if ma tei's no ready, Goan gie is a jeely piece' [AY], 'Noo busy wi' a jelly piece, The schule forgot, he stole oot-bye . . . ' [WFC], 'A herbour for auld muillins O' lang-forgotten pieces . . . ' [DH].

piecer (pee-sur) n., arch. someone (often a child) formerly employed in the spinning industry to gather and reattach broken threads or specifically to join the 'cardings' by feeding them onto the 'creeping cloth' of the 'slubbing' frame. They usually joined the 'rovings' at the back of the 'billy frame', and the required repeated action would often make their fingers bleed. More recently the term meant someone who made their pay by piece work rather than by the hour – 'The cardings fell into a box placed at the end of the machine to receive them, from which a handful was lifted by the 'piecer', flung over his arm, and pieced with the hand on the creeping-cloth, which carried it forward to the slubber or spinner' [DNW], 'In our mills here you see at work masters, managers, foremen, wool-sorters, moaters, dyers, pattern and tweed designers, slubbers, piecers, croppers, hand and power-loom weavers . . . ' [RJT], '. . . unconscious of his identity, he remarked to the foreman: 'That's the kind of piecer to keep' ' [JHH], '. . . as her son Rob and I were piecers together' [JTu].

piecin machine (pee-sin-mu-sheen) n. a machine that replaced the work of 'piecers' and the 'slubbing billy', joining together the pieces coming off the carding machines. It was introduced in Hawick by Melrose's about 1844, and probably invented by James Melrose.

Piehill (pI-hil) n. former name for a farm, perhaps in Cavers Parish. John Douglas, tenant in Cavers, but called 'of Piehill' is recorded in a 'letter of reduction' of 1630, brought by William Bennet. Alexander Chisholme of Piehill is referred to in a 'respite' for the slaughter of Lord Maxwell in 1593 (but this could have been an error for 'Parkhill').

Pie Oliver (pI-o-lee-vur) n. nickname for members of a particular branch of the Oliver family. This could be the same as the 'Pies Oliver' recorded in the 'Hawick Immortals' poem – 'Wullie the Paidle, Gleid Rob, Knacketts, Balmer the Bugler, Bobby Trott, Pies Oliver, and Jamie Tackets, Don Pedro, Pether Hill, Waulk Scott' [HI].

piet see pyet

the Pietsnest (thu-pīts-, pI-its-nest) n. former shepherd's cottage on Hyndlee farm. William Turnbull lived there in the early-to-mid 19th century (referring to the magpie, 'piet' or pyet).

pig (pig) n., arch. an earthenware vessel, a hot water bottle – 'For aa A pat a warm pig i the bed, it was midnicht or A cam a-heat' [ECS], '. . . their honey run into 'pigs' bought for the purpose, and covered with leather' [AOC].

Pigot's (pi-gits) n. J. Pigot & Co., publishing company that produced useful directories in the early 19th century. The 1826/7 'New Commercial Directory of Scotland' (compiled about a year earlier) and 1837 'National Commercial Directory of Scotland' are particularly useful for tracking down people, businesses etc. in Hawick and neighbouring areas before the censuses began. These directories were continued by Slater's Royal National Commercial Directory, which came out with local content in 1852, 1860, 1878, 1882 and 1893.

pike (pīk) n., arch. a pick, spike, prong – '... Till a reid hette pyke the master gatte, And gave his loone a prodde' [JTe] (also written 'pyke').

pike (pīk) n., arch. a peaked stack of hay, erected temporarily in a field, a haystack, a sharp pointed hill v., arch. to make a haystack (from Mediæval English; essentially the same word is used locally in the names of some peaked hills).

the Pike (thu-pīk) n. hill about 10 km due south of Hawick, between Penchrise and the Maidens. It reaches 463 m. The Catrail crosses near the summit. Alexander Gordon refers to it as 'Carriage Hill' (the same name is used for a feature on the western side of Pike Fell in the Slitrig valley and for a hill on the south side of the Tima valley).

the Pike (thu-pīk) n. hill that is essentially the western side of Pike Fell in the Slitrig valley (note the confusion with the hill a couple of miles to the west).

Pike Fell (pīk-fel) n. hill on the eastern side of the upper Slitrig valley, near Shankend. It reaches a height of 400 m and has a triangulation pillar. Its south-eastern spur is called simply 'The Pike'.

Pike Fell (pīk-fel) n. hill on the border of Roxburghshire and Dumfrieshire, at the head of the Routing Burn, and hence effectively the start of the Hermitage valley. It reaches a height of 499 m.

Pikensteed (pī-kin-steed) n. possible name for former lands in Liddesdale, transcribed as 'Piknesteid' on the 1541 rental roll, when it was valued at 14 shillings, and with no tenant. The location is uncertain. It is possible that it is the same as 'Piperstede' recorded in c.1376.

piker (pī-kur) n., arch. a person who makes haystacks.

Pikethaw Hill (pīk-thaw-hil) n. high hill on the boundary between Roxburghshire and Dumfriesshire, just to the south of the pass at Ewes Doors. It reaches a height of 564 m and has a substantial cairn on its summit. It is essentially where the Lymiecleuch Burn rises. It has been suggested that a volcanic dyke stretches from here to Skelfhill Pen (also written 'Pikethowe', it appears as 'Pikethon' in a Transactions article of 1875).

pikit see pykit

the pillar (thu-pi-lur) n., arch. raised platform in a church on which penitents had to appear at prescribed times, equivalent in function to the repentance stool. In St. Mary's this was probably located along the same wall as the pulpit, surrounded by a rail and reached by a small ladder. The one in Wilton also required a ladder – '... they had to appear on a small raised platform, sometimes termed 'the pillar', and at other times 'the stool of repentance', which occupied a conspicuous place in the church' [JJV].

Pilmuir (pil-mur) n. farm near Wulliestruther and Hawick Moor, also known as the Muir Farm. It is part of the Common feued to the farmer, being set up as a 250 acre farm and leased to John Wilson in 1787, with rent going to the Common Good. Part of the farm was used for Common-Riding Races before 1854. George Hart was farm steward there in 1861 and James Stein recorded as farmer there in 1868. 'Mrs. Reid, with Betsy the Cow, Pilmuir' was painted by J.E.D. Murray in 1889. The riding of the marches at Pilmuir resumed as part of the Thursday morning events from 1900, with the entire Common being encircled in the ride. It was also the location of the partaking of Curds and Cream (and hence 'the Hut') at the Chases in the years 1882 and 1901–11. A piece of worked flint found there is in the Museum (the origin is possibly from Old Welsh for 'bog or pond' plus 'muir' or Old English 'peel' for a stockade, thus meaning an enclosed moor).

Pilmuir (pil-mur) n. former name for an area on Wilton Common, to the west of the modern Whithaughmoor farmhouse, recorded in the 1765 description of the common.

Pilmuir Rig (pil-mur-rig) n. hill above Pilmuir farm, also used as the name of the small farm to the south of the main farm of Pilmuir. This farm was first let to Thomas Scott in 1778, after the Division of the Common. The name is also applied to the surrounding part of Hawick Common. On maps it specifically applies to the high ground to the south-east of Pilmuir farm. The area was used for the morning race meetings of the Common Riding from 1822–53 – '... And round Pilmuir-rig we'll canter, Down the Bailie-hill we'll scamper' [AB], 'Pilmuir Rig and Everha', Scawmill and Stirches Mains; Drinkstone, Tandlaw and Boonraw Wi' a' their burns and lanes' [WL].

the Pilmuir Stakes (thu-pil-mur-stāks) n. race during the Common Riding, at one time for the Cornet's Father and his supporters. It was started at least as early as the 1880s.

Pilmuir Sike (pil-mur-sīk) n. former ditch near the Flex, lying on the boundary of the old Common. It is not clear exactly where it was, even based on the 1767 description of the Common, and the map drawn up by J.P. Alison. James Wilson describes it as lying 'at the head of Flex inclosures' (also written 'Syke').

Pilstown (pils-town) n. said to have been the commander of some English persecuting regiment that passed through Hawick in 1716; however, it is unclear who he was. The Council charged the Burgesses to help transport their baggage to Lauder, and townspeople were also meant to provide billets for the soldiers. Some citizens of Hawick refused to provide for the men or to help carry their baggage, being then fined or imprisoned – 'A party is fined for disobeying the bailies anent the quartering and billets given for the said Pilstown's Regiment last week' [JW], 'Or wi' the serfs o' Pilstown rin, For Hawick has had mae Habs than ane' [AD].

pin (pin) n., arch. amount of linen that will go through a mangle at one time – 'The mangle-wife chairged a penny for three pins' [GW], a quantity of thread – 'To find what 'rule' is wanted to beam any warp, multiply the porters on the yard by 40, and divide by the number of threads in the pin' [BCM1881] (also peen).

pin (pin) v., arch. to strike with a missile, pelt, beat, drub, to nab, collar, entrap, to fill, stop up, plug masonry with small stones – 'The Hobkirk school was 'pinned and harled in 1760 ...' [RGl].

pin (pin) n., poet. mood, frame of mind, particularly in the phrase 'a merry pin' – 'And he took her round the scraggye necke, Alle in a merry pinne ...' [JTe].

Pin (pin) n. former farmstead close to the Border in southern Castleton Parish, to the east of Kershopefoot. Labourer Henry Paterson was there in the 1830s. Robert Beattie was shepherd there in 1851 and William Tait was there in 1868 (also written 'Pinn'; it is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

pinch (pinch) n., poet. an iron bar with a pointed end, a crowbar – 'With vengeance keen, and heavy oath, To burst the door they try'd; And gavelock, pinch, and sledge hammer, With might and main they plied' [JTe].

pind (pind) v., arch. to impound – 'If in my yard again I find them, By Mahomet, I swear I'll pind them; Or catch them in a net or girn, Till I find out the boost or birn' [JR].

pine (pīn) n., arch. a disease of sheep or cows – 'The sheep for miles roond are a' deid i' the pine, The horses an' kye, too, are a' gaun to the divilry' [JoHa] (now known to be due to mineral deficiency).

the Pines (thu-pīnz) n. house in Ashkirk village. The original Hawick to Selkirk road used to go right past here.

pingle (ping-ul) v., arch. to toil, struggle, work in a trifling way or work industriously and with difficulty – '... many an industrious housewife was able, by hard 'pingling' to augment a husband's scanty wage' [JTu], 'Ti pingle = to labour with assiduity (cf. Wilson's 'Tales') ; to strive; work hard (cf. Ransay's). Often applied to the toiling of a seamstress, pinglin an sheww-in' [ECS], applied specifically to snow whirling about, as if struggling to reach the ground, to tingle – 'Far better had I em'd an' miss'd. I only hurt my pinglin' fist ...' [WP].

Pinglehole (ping-ul-hōl) n. former farm just south of Saughtree off the B6357 by the Liddel Water, now being just a couple of cottages. It was surveyed in 1718, along with other Scott of Buccleuch properties, when it extended to 339 acres, bounded by Saughtree, Burnmouth, Riccarton and 'Leys'. It also shared a small strip of common land with Saughtree and the farmhouse was in roughly the location of the modern cottages. William Elliot was there in 1694. Pinglehole Sike joins the Liddel Water near there. Robert Armstrong was shepherd there in 1797. There were Hislops and Grieves there in 1841 (shown on Pont's 1609 map as a tower-house, 'Pingillholls', on Blaeu's 1654 map as 'Pingilholls', on de Wit's c.1680 map as 'Pingilhols' and is 'Pingleholes' on the 1718 Buccleuch survey; it is probably the place marked 'Hole' on Stobie's 1770 map; it was 'Pinglehoills' in 1662, 'Pingellhols' in 1694 and appears to be 'Pringlehole' in 1797; the origin may be either 'enclosure in the hollow' or 'valley of toil').

Pinkerton (piŋ-kur-tin) n. John (19th C.) married Margaret Hardie in Hawick in 1841.

pinkie (piŋ-kee) n. little finger – 'A staved ma pinkie on that hannle', any small thing (from Dutch; also spelled 'pinky').

Pinkie (piŋ-kee) n. battle site by the Esk near Musselburgh, also called Pinkie Cleugh. Here in 1547 the Scots under Hamilton Earl of Arran, were defeated by the English under Edward Seymour, Duke of Somerset (who had been the Earl of Hertford). Somerset had come to seize the infant Mary, who was instead spirited away to France. The huge losses of the Scots led to this day being known as 'Black Sunday'. It was the last engagement of the two national armies. Many local men must have been involved, and the dead included George Home, Laird of Wolfelee. Walter Scott of Branxholme and Buccleuch led part of the Scots force, while the Kers switched sides and supported the English (it is written as 'Pynkyne Feild' in 1547/8).

Pinnacle (pi-nu-kul) n. farm on the south bank of the Ale Water, just east of Belses, in Ancrum Parish. It is part of a charter, along with Broomlands, given by Robert Scott of Howpasley to Hector Turnbull in 1550. Nichol Haliburton was there in 1581. In 1620 it is 'the fourt pairt of the landis and lordschip of Belscheis callit the Pendicle'. It was owned by the Kers of Cavers Carre in the 17th century. In 1643 these lands in Ancrum Parish are recorded as 'Morrishall, his lands in Belses called Pinnacle', valued at £766 13s 4d; however, it is unclear what 'Morrishall' refers to. It was owned by George Wauchope in 1678 and valued at £500. A small part seemed to have also been included among the lands of Walter Scott of Chamberlain Newton in 1678, valued at £42. It was part of the Lordship of Belses held by Henry Douglas of Friarshaw in the latter part of the 17th century. In 1788 part of it was listed among the properties of William Scott of Burnhead and valued at £42, while the main part was valued at £500 and owned by William Sibbald. John Park was there in 1797 and Samuel Redpath in 1798. The men recorded in the 1799 Lieutenancy Book were Thomas Park, Robert Marshall and Robert Brown an in 1801 were tenant Thomas Park and hind James Paterson. Roderick McKenzie was there in 1852 and William Thomas in 1868. There is a square-shaped dovecote there (it is 'Pennycle' in 1581, 'Pinnakill' in 1608, 'Pendicle' in 1621, 'Pinackle' and 'Peickhill' in 1678, 'Penickle' in 1684 and 'Penickhill' in 1788; this is 'Pendickle' on Pont's 1590s manuscript, 'Pendicle' on Gordon's c.1650 map and 'Pendickill' marked on Blaeu's 1654 map).

Pinnacle (pi-nu-kul) n. former name for lands near Clarilaw, to the north of Hawick. The 1811 Land Tax Rolls describe it as 'Pennick-hill or Pinnacle', partly owned (along with Wester Clarilaw) by the trustees of Thomas Turnbull of Knowe, with the other part owned by William Scott of Burnhead. It may be the same place as Pinnacle near Belses.

pinshers (pin-shurz) n., pl., arch. pinchers.

pipe (pīp) adj. relating to the bagpipes – 'that was guid pipe music', 'hei was in the pipe band'.

pipe-an-dottle (pīp-an-dō-tul) n., arch. a large ripe acorn still on its stalk – 'But for borrowed beauty oot o' a bottle – I wadna gie ye a pipey dottle!' [WL] (also written 'pipey dottle' etc.).

Pipe Hill (pīp-hil) n. hill above Pipewellheugh, the steep banking off Buccleuch Road on the way out of Hawick.

Pipeloch (pīp-loch) n. fanciful name for the source of the Pipewell spring – 'It minds me of those youthful days When we went hand in hand, To sport upon the Pipeloch braes, A blythesome little band' [VW], 'And a' my heart's thirst slocken in the Pipeloch clear and cool' [JYH].

piper (pī-pur) n. a person who plays the pipes, usually meaning the bagpipes, although possibly other instruments such as the Northumbrian pipes can be meant – '... for the payment of the coats gotten from them for the use of the two officers, pyper, and drummer, att the Common-ryding in 1705' [BR1706], 'Lament him, ilka piper chiel, Wha makes auld Scotia's bagpipe squeel' [JoHa] (see also pipers and Toon Piper).

Piper Burn (pī-pur-burn) n. small stream in Liddesdale, rising in Harden Moss and flowing roughly westwards to join the Liddel approximately opposite Powisholm farm. This is probably the 'Poperburn' where wright John Turnbull and labourer Andrew Turnbull were recorded living in 1801.

pipers (pī-purz) n., pl. people who play the pipes. In 1627, 2 'pypers', John Tait and John Laing, were among the 'idle and masterless' men listed by the Bailies of Hawick as being fit for military service. In 1632 the Lord of Buccleuch made a payment 'to three English pypers at Branxholm'. In 1672 the Bailies requested that the Baron of Regality only use the Town's own drummer and piper to 'set the fair'. William Turnbull was elected as Town Piper in 1674 'and directed at even and morn and other solemn occasions, to go through the town with the drum'. James Turnbull (d.1686) was piper to Abbotrule Parish. The 'town's officer, piper, and drummer' were each allowed money for new coats in 1702, suggesting that at this time the piper was a separate position. Thomas Beattie was a piper who was fined at Hawick fair in 1700. William Turnbull was recorded as a piper in Hawick in 1702 and 1706. In 1704 it is recorded that funds were needed for 'pypers shoes'. Coats for the piper (in addition to the Burgh Officers and drummer) are mentioned in at least 1703, 1706 and 1713. In 1721 'Poulter the pyper' was paid 10 shillings for the Common Riding. In 1747 (because of the debt over Teviot Brig) the Council ordained that the Town would not give an allowance to the piper, but 'what people shall give him out of their own pockets' (see also Toon Piper).

Pipersteed (pī-pur-steed) n. former lands in Liddesdale, recorded as 'Piperstede' in a rental roll of c.1376, and valued at 4 shillings. It was part of the area known as 'Ludne', which made up part of the western side of the Liddel valley, so it was probably situated somewhere to the north-west of the present-day Newcastleton (it is possibly the same as 'Piknesteid' recorded in 1541).

the pipes (thu-pīps) n. the bagpipes or Border pipes. In Hawick it seems that the traditional instrument was the bagpipes in the 18th century, with the Town Piper being hired until about the turn of the 19th century, when he was effectively replaced with fifers. However, it is uncertain if there were fifers earlier than this, and it is also unclear when the town started to have a piper – 'she yaised ti play jist the chanter, bit now she's moved on ti the pipes' (see also Toon Piper).

pipe-stapple (pīp-staw-pul) n., arch. a clay pipe stem, pipe shank – 'I'll go to such a place, though it should rain auld wives and pipe-stapples' [JoJ], 'We got dirty blethers at the Killin'-hoose and blew them up wi' pipe-stapples for fitbas' [HAST1958], hence any small thing (also pipe-stopple and 'pipe-stopplit' or 'peip-stopplet'; J. Jamieson notes that 'stapplick' was a synonym in Roxburghshire, see stapple).

pipe-stopple legs (pīp-sto-pul-legz) n., pl., arch. extremely thin legs on a person or animal.

the Pipe Well (thu-pīp-wel) n. spring at Pipewellheugh, fitted with an iron pipe and trough, which supplied water for travellers along the New Road.

Pipewellheugh (pī-pul-, pīp-wel-hew, hewch) n. steep wooded bank on the other side of the main road from Langlands Bridge, in the middle of which a stream supplied the Pipe Well. The name has also been used to describe the area around the well. Before the main highway was directed that way in 1815, it presumably just had a smaller-scale track. A dry-stone wall was built along the New Road there in the late 19th century, using stones from the Mid Row. The wall was entirely rebuilt in the mid-1990s. A strong garlic smell in the area is due to the abundance of Ramsons Allium ursinum, i.e. wild garlic. There were also lands in Jedburgh called by the same name in the 17th century. From a verse written around the time of the disputed 1809 Common Riding it seems clear that a senior member of the Town Council lived near here at that time – 'Trace the source of all your troubles Where the Pipe'lheugh fountain bubbles; There a groggy club are lolling, While the Sabbath bells are tolling' [JH]. 'It is exceedingly abundant in woods and shady banks such as Pipe-well-heugh' [JAHM].

pipit (pī-pee', -pi') pp., poet. piped – 'We hae pipet untill yow, an' ye haena dancet: we hae murnet untill yow, an' ye haena lamentet' [HSR].

Pipleheugh (pī-pul-hew, -hewch) n. shortened form of Pipewellheugh, also being a name used in the 19th century to refer to a piece of land west of Balcary, and somewhat distant from Pipewellheugh. More confusingly its name was later changed to Pipewellhaugh, and now corresponds roughly to Langheugh Road.

Pipleheughfit (pī-pul-hew-fi') n. name used for the foot of the Pipewellheaugh area. It is referred to in a boundary dispute of the 1780s, between Elliot of Langlands and Scott of Buccleuch.

the Pipleheugh Well (thu-pī-pul-hew-wel) n. iron trough on the south side of Buccleuch Road near Langlands Bridge. Once a source of drinking water for horses or cattle entering the town from the south. A series of land slips in the 1980s resulted in the demise of the spring which fed the trough. The supporting wall along the roadside was rebuilt in the 1990s.

Pippleheugh (pi-pul-hew) n. sometimes version of Pipewellheugh, referring to the well.

Pirie (pee-ree) n. Miss ran a seminary in Backdamgate for reading, writing and sewing, in the early 19th century, recorded in Pigot's 1825 directory. William (15th/16th C.) witness to a 1508 sasine for the Erskines lands at Synton. He may have been local like several of the other witnesses.

' [DH].

Pirnie (pir-nee) n. Alexander 'Alex' (1825–79) local stone-mason. He was born in Edinburgh, son of stone mason Alexander and Agnes. Apprentice to his father in Kikliston, he then moved back to Edinburgh, where he worked for the architects firm Peddie & Kinnear in Edinburgh, and for James Harkness, builders in Hawick in 1859. His workmanship can be seen at 4 Tower Knowe in the ornamental cornices on what was the Commercial Bank and at the former Royal Bank of Scotland at 12 High Street. He also carved the bust of Burns that is at the Burns Club, as well as a head of Garibaldi and the lions on the Monteath Mausoleum. By 1861 he is living in Wilton, where he appears to have stayed for the rest of his life. He died intestate, and was then described as a 'stone-hewer'. He married Isabella Dawson, and had at least 2 children, Janet and Alex. He is buried in Wellogate Cemetery.

From Glasgow, he apprenticed at Freeland School and was Assistant at Falkirk before coming to Hawick in 1870 as senior assistant, becoming Rector in 1880. The singing of the Common Riding song on the Thursday before the festival was started in his time. He was also Captain of the Golf Club. There is a photograph of him outside the school with a group of pupils. He married Eliza, daughter of Adam Laing, and grand-daughter of James Hogg, writer of 'Teribus'.

pitch an toss (pich-an-tos) n. a gambling game played by tossing coins and shouting 'heids' or 'tails'. It has long been a pastime of a sector of the local men, e.g. there was often a gamling ring in the Upper Haugh on summer evenings, Saturday afternoons and Common Riding mornings in the 19th century. A note at the end of 'Hawick Immortals' describes how the 'pitch' part was usually dispensed with, since the focus was on gambling, with one man tossing up 5 pennies and the others betting on the result.

pit doon (pi'-doon) v. to put down, kill – 'But the auld yin We hed to pit doon . . . the Piv (thu-piv) n. the Pavilion, also known as the Pavilion Picture and Variety Theatre, a spacious picture house on the High Street. It was built in 1913, with an Art Deco styled frontage, at 74 and 76 High Street, the land purchased from Francis Kyle and George Tait, respectively. It originally had theatrical performances as well as films, and could seat 1400 people. It was possibly the most glamourously decorated of Hawick's theatres, having pink satin curtains, with zig-zag coloured bands along the bottom and pink lighting. The last film shown was 'the Millionairess', and it was demolished in 1964 to make way for a shopping complex, now occupied by Boots. Some of the seats were rescued for use by the Hawick Film and Video Group – 'The Piv, the Kings, oor ain Wee Thea The shops aw open till eight . . . ' [AY].

the Plant Mercat (thu-plawn'-mer-ki') n. former market in Hawick where plants were sold. It is recorded in 1675, showing that Hawick was known for buying plants long before Dickson's nursery was established. A man from Kelso was fined for accusing a man from Eskdalemuir of stealing 3000 plants from him there, 'which he could not make out, and which were found to have been bought from other planters'. It was probably part of one of the regular markets held in Hawick.

plash (plawsh) n., poet. a splash – 'Wi' plash and spurt and peaceful purl' [JEDM], adv., arch. with a splash – 'When gloamin' comes doon wi' its shadows dark, ... the Playin Fields (thu-plā-in-feeldz) n. name sometimes given to the part of the Park on the south side of the river, off Buccleuch Road, used for playing various sports. Roughly the same area has also been known as Corseflat and the Gardener's Haughs. It was at one time a nursery, then known as Wester Nurseries, and then was allotments. A petition of 1859 asked the Duke of Buccleuch to keep this trip of land for recreational use. It was gifted to the town in 1931 by later Duke, after he had passed through Hawick during the Vertish Hill children's procession. It was hence also known as 'the Buccleuch Playing Fields', is about 5 acres, and effectively forms an addition to the Park. An all-weather sports ground was built there in 2005, adjacent to the Volunteer pitch, and also referred to as Volunteer Park.

the Playlaw (thu-plā-law) n. name for the area around the Mid Raw (now Drumlanrig Square), in use in the 16th–18th centuries – 'Bailie Graham and Thomas Bridges [were ordered to collect] westward from the bridge to the foot of the play la' [PR1717] (origin possibly a form of 'plea-law' indicating a judicial use in the past; also spelled 'Plalaw', 'Play-la' ' and other variants).

pledge (plej) n., arch. a person standing as security for another, a hostage – '... Philpe Twrnbull, as plegis and souerte for Stewyn Twrnbull, his brother ... ' [SB1500] (arbitrarily plural in older local documents).

the pledges (thu-ple-jeez) n., arch. a game popular with youths up until the latter part of the 18th century (as described by Robert Wilson). It involved 2 teams of roughly 12–20 a-side, and was played on open ground with a line drawn and with coats, hats etc. acting as the 'pledges', placed 20 or 30 yards from the line. The object of the game was to capture the 'pledges' of the opposing team without being caught. Captures occurred through either being touched in 'enemy territory' or dragged over the line. Such players then became 'prisoners' who could be freed by being touched by a member of their own team. The game often started with a mock taunt such as 'Set your foot on Scotch ground, ye English, if ye dare!'. The teams often formed themselves into 2 lines, with the stronger boys in front and the faster ones behind. Wilson's description sounds astonishingly like rugby, which would only be played in Hawick from 1872 – '... to enjoy on the Haugh ... a game at 'the pledges', which sport was greatly in vogue among youths in those days, though entirely unknown now' [AM].

pleesant (plee-zin', plee-zint) adj., arch. pleasant – '... the pleesent herp wi' the psaltrie' [HSR], '... for it is pleesint, an' prayse is bonnie' [HSR], '... thochts o sic bonnie bits ti pit bye an huirrd in eis posie o pleezant maimeries' [ECS], 'Stinty Knowe then the Cala Burn There isna a walk mair pleesant ... Plummer (plu-mur) n. Andrew (17th C.) recorded as Chamberlain to the Earl of Roxburghe in Selkirk records around 1660. Andrew of Middlestead (17th/18th C.) farmer in Selkirkshire. In 1678 he paid the land tax on part of Lindean in Selkirk Parish, as well as lands in Midlem (in Bowden Parish) and had a discharge for annual rents in Selkirk (with another in 1780). Also in 1678 he was on the Commission of Supply for Roxburghshire, in 1685 for Selkirkshire and in 1690 for Selkirkshire along with William, probably a son. Walter Scott of Satchells dedicated part of his 'Post'ral' to him in 1688. He had a patent of arms in 1698. In 1711 he was one of the founders of the 'Honest Country Club'. His son Gavin became a Burgess of Edinburgh, and his grandson Andrew became one of the first Professors of Medicine at Edinburgh University in 1726, while a later Andrew of Middlestead was another enthusiast of the Border ballad whose death allowed Sir Walter Scott to become Sheriff-depute of Selkirkshire. He was succeeded by his son William, who married Jane, daughter of William Ker of Sunderland Hall. Dr. Andrew of Sunderland Hall (1697–1756) son of Gavin, he was born in Edinburgh. He married his cousin Marjorie, who was daughter of William of Middlestead and Jean, daughter of William Ker of Sunderland Hall. He studied in Edinburgh and Leyden, graduating M.D. in 1722 and becoming one of the founders of the medical school at Edinburgh University. He was Professor of Chemistry 1726–55. He was known for his thesis called 'de Phthisi Pulmonalia Cattarrhe erta', as well as for 'Plummer's pills', a preparation of calomel, antimony sulphide and guaiacum, which was widely used to treat syphilis. He inherited Sunderland Hall through his mother. He was recorded in a discharge with the Town Treasurer of Selkirk in 1743 and others with the Burgh in 1746 and 1747. Andrew of Middlestead (1748–99) Sheriff of Selkirkshire, preceding Sir Walter Scott in this office. He was also known as an antiquarian. He owned Sunderland and Sunderlandhall as well as Middlestead. He paid the land tax in Selkirk Parish in 1785. In 1788 he is listed among the voters of Selkirkshire. He had 4 horses according to the 1785–97 Horse Tax Rolls. He married Jane, sister of Gavin Elliot of Midlem. Their children were: William, who succeeded; Gavin, a merchant in Edinburgh; and Margaret, who married Andrew Waugh and whose grand-daughter married Charles Scott of Woll. He appears to have also married Mary, daughter of Pringle of Torwoodlee, and she died in 1839. Gavin (17th/18th C.) son of Andrew of Middlestead. He was a merchant in Edinburgh, also serving as Treasurer to the Town Council there. Perhaps the same Gavin had a discharge with the Burgh of Selkirk in 1709. Along with Adam Scott of Burnfoot he sold the lands of Burnfoot to the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1712. He married Elizabeth Clerk. Their son Andrew was elected one of the first Professors of Medicine in Edinburgh in 1726. William of Middlestead and Sunderland Hall (17th/18th C.) son of Andrew. He married Jean, daughter of William Ker of Sunderland Hall. Their children included: William (b.1701); Gavin (b.1703); Marjorie (b.1707), who married Dr. Andrew Plummer, her cousin; Andrew (b.1708); and Gilbert (b.1709). He had a discharge with Selkirk over rent in 1744 (also written 'Plumber').

poachin (pō-chin) n. the act of taking fish or game illegally. This has a long history locally. 'Kinly Stick' (George Hunter) and 'Heather Jock' (John Mitchell) were well-known local poachers in the mid-19th century. A large gang of poachers operated in the Borthwick valley in the early 19th century, with a reputation for even roasting whole sheep on their days-long forays; the local lairds and authorities formed a 'posse' which rounded up 20 of these men in 1832. The appointment of a constable in Hawick in about 1832 led to a dominution of the practice. Views on the legality of taking salmon from local rivers have historically differed between various segments of the population. Skills with the 'cleek' and 'geg' have been carefully passed on for generations in some families.

pock (pok) n., arch., poet. a sack, poke, bag, wallet – '... to stand at ye crosse upon the publicke marcatt-day wt ane pocke of meale each of them about their necks' [BR1690], '... Pocohoparke (po-kō-hō-pawrk) n. former farmstead in Liddesdale, precise location uncertain. It is listed in 1632, as one of the possessions of Will Armstrong, along with Leahaugh and Whitehaugh (this is possibly a transcription error).

poddult (po-dul') adj., arch. chubby, particularly said of a child or poultry (also spelled 'poddled', poddlit', etc.; noted by J. Jamieson).

podler (pōd-lur) n., arch. the young of the coalfish, Gadus virens – 'Gumpin' podlers' [GW].

The Poetical Museum (thu-pō-e'-ee-kul-mew-zee-um) n. book published in Hawick in 1784 by George Caw, with full title 'The Poetical Museum, Containing Songs and Poems on almost every subject, Mostly from Periodical Publications'. It was the first significant publication from Hawick. It contains a miscellany of pieces, including the first appearance in print of some of the Border ballads ('Dick o the Cow', 'Jock o the Side' and 'Hobbie Noble'), as well as other ballads that had already appeared elsewhere ('Child Maurice', 'Adam o' Gordon', 'The Battle of Red-swire', 'Johnie Armstrang', 'Hardyknute' and 'The Wee Wee Man'). There is a piece of verse from Thomas Telford, and a few poems that appear to be genuinely of local production, such as 'The Braes of Branxholm' and 'Lines on the Death of Robert Scott, Esq., of Whitslade'. There are also many anonymous poems that may be by local writers. However, most of the selections are pastoral verse, such as by Ramsay, and other well known writers of the day included Fergusson, Smollet and Thomson. Several variants appear to have been published, including some substituting the poem 'Modern Chastity' for 'Acrostic by a young girl in Hawick'. The subscription list is also interesting, since out of 158 names listed (including 9 women), most are from Hawick and district, and so it gives insight into the supporters of literature and local traditions in the 1780s. A copy was presented to the Museum by the Town Council in 1860.

poind (poind, pind) v. to impound, seize, distrain, explicitly a term in Scots law relating to the seizure of a debtor's property for sale – 'Mr Patrick Cunningham is fined for reproachfull language against the bailies, in saying that in spite of them, and they were hanged, they should not poind him upon their decreet . . . ' [BR1676], '. . . onlawed in ane deforcement of yr. officer when he come to poynd for his fyne . . . ' [BR1693], '. . . ilke person absent wtout ane reasonable and lawfull excuse to be fyned in eight shillings money forsd, and instantly to be poynded yrfor' [BR1698]. 'He never saw, nor did he hear, that the tenants of Drinkston poinded any beasts for pasturing on the head room' [DCW1765], '. . . otherwise the cattle so found will be poinded for trespass toties quoties' [BR1777], 'Mr. Rutherford, Ancrum Craig, always poinded or demanded payment for damage done' [RJT] (also spelled 'poynd').

the Police Act (thu-po-lees-awkt) n. usually referring to the Police and Improvement Act of 1861, which revised Hawick's Town Council, did away with the Burgesses, and alterted the boundaries of Hawick to include Wilton. It is also sometimes known as the Burgh Improvement Act and was published in 1861 as 'A Bill for altering and amending the Constitution of the Burgh of Hawick'. This was a Special Act brought to Parliament, following the general Police of Towns (Scotland) Act of 1850 and an 1857 Act of Parliament ordering all remaining Burgh and County areas in Scotland to establish proper police forces, as well as elected councils responsible for paving, lighting, cleansing, etc. The Police force itself was set up following a separate Act of 1846. The bounds of the Town for the purposes of policing were stated in about 1850 to be within 1000 yards of the Cross (see also the polis).

the Police Court (thu-po-lees-kōr') n. former term for the Magistrate's court held in Hawick – 'It is the Police Court To which I say ye should resort. There go and mark each separate case, There go and watch the Bailie's face . . . ' [JCG] (also Bailie Court).

the Police Station (thu-po-lees-stā-shin) n. the station was originally situated in the old Town House, with the Burgh police force occupying a space below the Council Chambers. It later moved to the Cross Wynd, and was then into the new Town Hall building. This had 4 cells and an exercise yard. The separate station for the county police force was once on the Mill Path, built (or perhaps renovated) in the 1890s to designs by J.P. Alison. A new Station was built in 1964 at Wilton Hill as a large, unremarkable, flat-roofed block. The Roxburgh, Berwick and Selkirkshire force being amalgamated into the Lothian and Borders Police in 1976. The Police Station in Denholm was formerly located on the south side of Eastgate, and there was also once a station at 'the Coppers' outside Roberton (see also the polis).

policy (po-lee-see) n. an improvement or development of a town, park of an estate, ornamental ground – 'Bye the policies o Ancrum Hoose . . . ' [ECS], 'Sent for by Col. Vassall desiring me to find out if possible who did the damage to Polacy Dyke' [RGr].

the polis (thu-po-lees, pō-lees) n. police, referring to the police force, or one or more policemen or policewomen – 'if ee deh stop that racket A'll get the polis on ee', 'At the Polis Coort on Monday They will stand before the bar . . . ' [WE], 'The pollice to me. sir! D—n ye, sir, the suner the police gets a haud o' ane o' huz three, the better, sir' [WNK], 'The Polis brings his previous bell. He's now like any rock . . . ' [WP], '. . . They never cared a resh for bailies, polis, or kirk-bell' [DH]. A properly organised force took a long time to organise, with each Burgh left to make its own arrangements. In 1805 the Privy Council recommended that Roxburghshire should have a force of 39 men, but the county force was not established until much later. The Town Council resolved to improve the system of policing in 1806 (probably meaning that they employed a constable for the first time). In the early 19th century the Hawick Burgh force consisted only of the Sheriff Officer (or constable), plus the 2 Burgh Officers, and this for a population of about 7,000. A proper town force was established in 1846. A constable's baton from the 19th century is in the Museum. There were also rural police stations, the one in Newcastleton being at 15 Douglas Square (also spelled 'pollice'; see also the Police Station).

the Polis Hoose (thu-po-lees-hoos) n. house attached to the Town Hall, used as the residence of the local chief of police. When the new station was opened on Wilton Hill, the house (as well as the cells, etc.) ceased to be used by the police. John Auchinleck lived there for several years until 1964 and then Ian Inglis 1964–67. The last occupant of the house was Bill Allan in his capacity as Burgh Officer. In about 1990 the house became vacant and the space became part of the Council offices.

poll (pōl) v. to steal, especially to obtain apples or other fruits from a tree belonging to someone else – 'let's gaun polin for yer neebur's aipples', 'oo aye went polin up Rosalee Brae', 'Whae raigularly taen on the Bankie Rangers frae Langlands Bank at a' kinds o sportin contests frae cockerossie ti pollin aipples' [IWL] (also written 'pole'; presumably related to the word for hair-cut and related to 'pollard', and nothing to do with the use of a pole).

Pollach (po-lach) n. former lands in Liddesdale, on the opposite side of the river from Mangerton. In a c.1376 rental roll 'Pollok' is valued at 2 shillings. In 1541 it is recorded as 'Pollok', valued at 5 shillings and leased to Christopher Armstrong (possibly of Langholm). 'Pollok' was listed among Liddesdale lands possessed by Thomas Kerr of Ancrum in 1632. It is not marked on older maps, but Pollach Plantation appears on the modern Ordnance Survey map.

Pollock (po-lok) n. Rev. John (1892–1956) born in Carluke, son of James and Jane. He was educated at Wishaw and was a mission worker for 9 years. He attended Glasgow University and Glasgow College, was licensed by the Presbytery of Hamilton in 1923 and was ordained as United Free Church minister at Kirkconnel in 1923. He moved to Law (in Lanark) in 1925 and Larkhall Trinity in 1928. He became minister of Minto Parish in 1936 and remained until 1956. During his time the old Manse became uninhabitable and he rented Deansyde for many years. In 1923 he married Minnie Taylor (b.1894) and their children were Jean Cartmer and Mary. He published 'Historical Sketch of Larkhall Trinity Church' (1935). Robert F. (??–??) Hawick's first full-time Town Clerk, 1937–38, he was formerly Depute Town Clerk of Kilmarnock. After only a year he resigned and moved to Rutherglen.

the Ponderosa (thu-pon-de-rō-sa) n. popular name for a walking route up the Nipknowes, along the side of 'the Mair' and back along the shores of Wulliestruther Loch. The loop has been frequently walked by many Westenders, after being popularised by a group of men about the 1960s, who would meet nightly at Thorterdykes to start the loop. The walkers included Pat McDonald, Paddy Valentine, Frankie 'Dodo' Bell, Wull the Darse, Tio Anderson, Jackie Robertson, Jock Edgar, Curly Hogg, Pimpo Anderson, Jake Short, Mo Wear, Fake Graham, Jimmy Dickey and Jim Matthews. It was named after the ranch in the TV show 'Bonanza'. The name is also applied jocularly to the housing scheme at Marmion Road.

Pont (pont) n. Timothy (c.1560–c.1614) son of a Fife minister, the exact years of his birth and death are unknown. He was given church lands by his father, and was appointed minister of Dunnet in Caithness. However, his fame is as an early Scottish cartographer, his manuscript maps of the 1590s being used as the basis of the atlas of Scotland published by Joan Blaeu (of Amsterdam) in 1654. Only a fraction of the original maps survive, amounting to 77 maps on 38 separate sheets. His manuscript map, usually referred to as 'Pont 35(2)', shows Hawick, along with part of the Teviot, Ale and Rule valleys. This is drawn (upside-down) on the bottom of a sheet depicting Nithsdale and surrounding area.

pooch (pooch) n., arch. a pocket, particularly one containing money, a purse – 'A was vext A hedna socht a piece i ma pootch for ti mootle i the road' [ECS], 'Ye ken toom pooches sadly squeel – Guid weather's dead' [JoHa], 'An empty pooch, an' a bashed-in hat . . . Porteous (pōr-shis) n. Agnes (17th C.) cottar at Appletreehall according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Her forename is written 'Agneus'. Andrew (17th C.) recorded in 1643 being in Rule. His lands in Abbotrule Parish were valued at £10. Andrew (17th/18th C.) shoemaker listed among those contributing to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He was probably the Andrew listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick 'eist the water' in 1694. Perhaps the same Andrew was a witness to a case before the Bailies involding a fight between William Douglas and Robert Scott in 1685. He may also be the Andrew who in 1690 witnessed John Turnbull insulting Thomas Beattie. He was reported to the Session in 1725 when he required assistance 'in regard of his numerous years and want of sight'. It was said that his elder son George was in a good financial position to support him, while his other son was not. His wife was Helen Scott and their children included: Helen (b.1680), baptised in Roberton Parish; Thomas (b.1684); George (b.1688), who married Janet Harkness; and probably Marion (b.1693). His sons Thomas and George were probably the Hawick carriers of the early 18th century. Shoemaker Robert seems likely to have been another son. The witnesses in 1680 were George and William Scott (who were probably related to his wife), in 1684 and 1688 were Thomas Bridges and Michael Turnbull. He witnessed a baptism in 1689 for James Lethem. Andrew (17th/18th C.) carrier in Hawick. In 1706 he was one of the Burgesses directed to pay the glovers for providing Common-Riding coats for the Burgh Officers, piper and drummer. Andrew (18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick, probably related to the earlier shoemaker of the same name. In 1724 he married Helen Simpson, who was also from Hawick. Andrew (d.1794) flesher in Hawick. In 1745 he witnessed a baptism for tobacconist William Sadler. Probably the same man is recorded with surname 'Pertos' in 1751 when he paid the Hawick Town Council for renting the 'leach [probably 'low'] prison' (perhaps for the purposes of selling meat, but this is unclear). He died in Hawick Parish. Andrew (18th/19th C.) butcher in Hawick. In the 1811 Land Tax Rolls he was listed as owner of part of Weensland, which had been purchased from Robert Scott. David (16th/17th C.) listed in 1619 among a group of more than 100 men under John Ker of Langnewton who Sir Andrew Ker of Oxnam complained had broken up and stolen turfs cut for his use on Oxnam Moor. His was listed among Turnbulls of Rulewater and was probably also from there. Francis (c.1655–1693) had his death recorded in the bible of the Gledstains of Hilliesland. He was probably related to Walter Gledstains through marriage. Francis (17th C.) listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick 'eist the water' in 1694. George (d.c.1684) tenant in Abbotrule. His will is recorded in 1684. George (b.1688) youngest son of shoemaker Andrew and Helen Scott, he was a carrier in Hawick. He was probably brother of Thomas, who was a carrier in Hawick at the same time. In 1722 he witnessed a baptism for the deceased shoemaker Robert, who was probably his brother or other close relative. In 1716 he married Janet, daughter of William Harkness, tenant in Borthaugh. Their children included: Mary (b.1720); Andrew (b.1721); Ann (b.1727); Bessie (b.1725); and James (b.1732). The 1720 baptism was witnessed by the 2 merchants Robert Robson, the 1725 baptism by Andrew and William Ogilvie, the 1727 one by Bailie Martin and Francis Ruecastle and the 1732 one by merchant William Tudhope and Bailie Robert 'Hutson'. George (1836–91) born in Greenlaw, he was a hatter and manufacturer of Waverley Mills. He was a member of the Archæological Society from 1869. He had the house Viewforth built for him in 1878. He married Sarah Matilda Ward Dowdy (1844–1922) and their children included: William Roland (b.1868); George (b.1870); and Robert Williamson (b.1881). George Shields (1870–1961) son of a hatter and manufacturer. His hatter's and hosier's shop was at 57 High Street. He was an early prominent member of the Hawick Cycling Club. He married Annie Rachel Humphries. He died in Dunoon. Isobel (17th/18th C.) wife of William Taylor. She was recorded in the Hawick Session records of 1721 being rebuked for her drunken behaviour in the Kirk. James (d.c.1681) tenant in 'Mintohill' when his will was recorded in 1681. Perhaps the same James was owner of a piece of land in Lanton, according to the 1678 valuation roll. James (17th C.) tenant in Abbotrule according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. James (18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. In 1758 he married Margaret Brown (who is also referred to as being 'Or Scott', suggesting she was married earlier). Their children included: Margaret (b.1759); George (b.1760); and Janet (b.1762). The witnesses to the 1760 baptism were shoemaker George Gardner and Church Officer Alexander Bunyan. He may be the James recorded in 1800 (along with his brother John) when his aunt Agnes Scott died. John (15th/16th C.) listed among the Borderers (led by the Homes and Walter Scott of Branxholme) pardoned in 1526 for an attack on the Earl of Arran. His surname is recorded as 'Portuis'. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1656 his son Robert with Margaret Scott was baptised. The child was born illegitimately and the witnesses were Adam Scott and Walter Robson. John (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. He farmed on one of the farms of the Knowesouth estate. Perhaps the same John was recorded in Lanton in 1663. John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Elizabeth 'Shiftie' and their children included John (b.1731), with witnesses John Turnbull and John Scott. Lawrence (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 as 'laurencii portews'. He was among the men who Adam Scott of Tushielaw had remission for resetting for stealing sheep from farms in Peebleshire. Lawrence (18th C.) overseer of the Turnpike roads in Hawick. He was made an Honorary Burgess in 1767. Also in 1767 he made an inspection of the damage caused to the Hawick Manse grounds by the Great Flood. Margaret (d.c.1687) tenant in Ruecastle when her will was recorded in 1687. Patrick of Hawkshaw (d.bef. 1738) eldest son of John and Mary Ramsay, and descendant of the riever of the same name. In 1678 he became a Burgess of Peebles. He contributed £1100 to the Darien Scheme in 1695. He held a bond with Henry and William Elliot of Harwood in 1696, and raised an action against them for non-payment in the following year. In 1681 he married Mary, daughter of William Scott of Headshaw. She became an heiress on the death of her brother John, and so he gained lands of the Headshaw family in 1691 (making her husband confusingly 'of Headshaw' as well as Hawkshaw). He was involved in several 'wadsets' and in 1707 transferred all his remaining lands to his daughter Henrietta and her husband Michael Anderson of Tushielaw. He had another daughter Elizabeth, who married Alexander Williamson of Chapelhill. He died without a male heir. Robert (d.1722) shoemaker in Hawick. He witnessed a baptism for merchant Michael Scott in 1712. In 1715 he was fined 'for swearing by the name of God extrajudicially in ane lawful fenced court, when not required thereto'. He could be the Robert who married Anna Porteous in Hawick in 1705, with child Isobel (b.1706). Probably the same Robert secondly married Esther Turnbull in 1708, and had children: Anna (b.1709); Isobel (b.1711); Helen (b.1713); James (b.1716); Janet (b.1718), who married weaver Charles Scott; Esther (b.1720); and Robert (b.1722). In the 1722 baptismal record he is 'now deceased'. The witnesses in 1709 were Walter Gledstains of Hilliesland and merchant John Graham, in 1711 were Bailie Robert Ruecastle and baker William Hodge, in 1713 were weaver Robert Turnbull and Bailie Robert Hardie, in 1720 were William Cunningham (son of the minister) and Walter Scott (servant of the minister), and in 1722 were carrier George and Beadle Walter Scott. Robert Williamson (1881–1976) born in Wilton, son of manufacturer George. He was a missionary in China before WWII, along with his wife, Bessie Lucille Huntamer. She later wrote the book 'Uncle: The Story of Robert W. Porteous' about their time in China. He died in Olympia, Washington, U.S.A. Roland (17th C.) resident at Sorbietrees in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Samuel (b.c.1780) servant at Tower in Cavers Parish according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia. Thomas (17th C.) Edinburgh 'writer' who leased the lands of Minto Craigend in 1686. Thomas (1684/5–1706) nephew of Walter Gledstains, junior of Hilliesland. It is unclear what his relationship was, but probably his father married a daughter of Walter Gledstains senior, Town Clerk of Hawick. In late 1705 he married Janet, daughter of the deceased Rev. James Adamson of Bedrule. However, he 'took his sickness upon the next fryday' and died within a couple of weeks. His sister Christian died in Jedburgh in 1712 at the age of about 18. They could have been the children of Thomas baptised in Jedburgh in 1683 and 1695, respectively. Thomas (17th/18th C.) carrier in Hawick. He was recorded in 1718 being rebuked for having a horse race with John Turnbull on the Common Haugh on a Sunday. He could have been the Thomas, son of Andrew and Helen Scott, who was born in Hawick in 1684. He married Agnes Gibson in Hawick in 1714. Their children included: Andrew (b.1717); Robert (b.1720); George (b.1722); Thomas (b.1724); Agnes (b.1725). The witnesses in 1720 were merchants William Tudhope and William Oliver and in 1722 were Robert (who was surely related) and maltman John Moss. He may have been brother of carrier George, who lived in Hawick at the same time. William (16th C.) recorded as 'in Borthuikbra' in 1573 when he was presented for trial in Edinburgh by 'Wat Scott in Hartwoodmyres', son of William Scott of Tushielaw. He was probably tenant of Borthwickbrae. William (d.c.1682) tenant in 'Stennilodge, Abbotroul' when his will was recorded in 1682. He was presumably farmer at Stonedge (formerly spelled 'Partis', 'Porteus', 'Portice', 'Portous', 'Portows', 'Portuis', 'Portus', 'Portwise' and variants).

Porteous Croft (pōr-shis-kroft) n. former name for lands in Lilliesleaf Parish. In 1580 the 6 acres in the town of Lilliesleaf that were leased for £24 a year by John Donaldson from William Middlemas are referred to as 'Portus Croft Heid'. In 1643 the lands was rated at £78. In 1788 they were part of the lands owned by Edgar Hunter of Linthill. In 1811 they were was among lands owned by William Riddell of Camieston, later passing to William Currie of Linthill.

Porteous' Well (pōr-shi-seez-wel) n. former public water supply above the Mid Row, also known as 'Michie's Well'.

porter (pōr'-ur) n., arch. a part of the weave, consisting of 20 spaces through which the warp threads are passed, the number of these per unit length determining the density of the weave – 'In order to find the number of slips to warp any length of web, multiply the number of porters in width by the ells in length, and divide by 72' [BCM1881].

porter (pōr'-ur) n., arch. someone in charge of a gate, particularly applied in former times to the resident of Ewes Doors, perhaps a soubriquet for the keeper of a changehouse at the pass there, with Ninian the Porter recorded as tenant of Ewes Doors in 1567 – 'Item, to the porter of Ewisdyer for the rest of a price of ane horse, xij£ x s.' [SB1574].

Porter (pōr'-ur) n. Alexander (19th C.) Superintendent of Police and Chief Constable in Hawick from about 1863. He was later Chief Constable for the county, based in Jedburgh.

Porterfield (pōr'-ur-feeld) n. John (d.1604) briefly served as Archbishop of Glasgow during troubled times. Son of John, 1st Laird of Duchal, he was minister of Dumbarton, then Kilmarnock and Ardrossan. He was nominated somewhat mysteriously in 1571, after the position was forfeited by James Beaton. He was the first post-Reformation appointee, who was Archbishop in name only. However, a commission immediately investigated his appropriateness and it is unclear that he was ever consecrated. He later served as minister at several parishes, settling in Ayr in 1580.

Portheid (pōr'-heed) n. name for former lands on the Stobs estate. It is listed in 1657, between Winningtonhall and Horselee, although the location is unknown.

the Ports (thu-pōrts) n. gates to Hawick, which coul be closed to defend the Town. Hawick once consisted of basically a single street (the High Street, continued by Silver Street and the Howegate) and no bridge access across the Teviot. There were 4 roads leading out of town in different directions, with gates that would be locked at night. These were the North Port (on Walters Wynd, which led to the river ford), East Port (roughly opposite Baker Street), South Port (at the Cross Wynd), and West Port (at the foot of the Loan). Plaques to mark their former positions were placed by the Callants' Club in 1964. As well as these major ports, there were also at least 3 minor gates, located at the Mill Port, the Round Close and the Howegate/Silver Street junction. It is unclear when these ports were first constructed, but possibly shortly after Hawick became a Burgh in the 15th century. The ports were removed around 1762, following the Turnpike Road Act of 1750, which allowed for the improvement of roads using income from tolls.

Porty (pōr'-ee) n., arch. short form for Portobello, once a popular seaside resort for Hawick folk to visit by train, with its promenade pier, artificial wave pool and other attractions – 'Aw wis juist a lad at Wulton skuil Juist a wee bit fella When ma mother broke the news 'Oor gaun tae Portabella' ' [AY].

pose (pōz) n., poet. pile, collection, hoard, cache – '... For Tibbie's hidden pose, I doot, Is growing toom' [JoHa], '... And if he can show you a pose or a watch, Then of your civility show him a swatch – He'll never return for to seek them' [JTe].

poseetion (pō-zee-shin) n., v. position – '... an' was enlichtened on the poseetion as regairds the Common-Ridin' ' [BW1939], '... the famous G.L. McDonald hed held the poseetion in the year Wullie was born' [IWL].

posset pig (po-si'-pig) n., arch. a large earthenware vessel used for posset (a spiced drink made of hot milk curdled with ale or wine) – '... baskets and creels, posset pig, pair of raxes and ane speit ... ' [DMW1681].

post (pōst) n., arch. a courier, message carrier, person employed by a town (or other body) to carry letters and packages – 'Given to William Broun Post in Hawick two ... for a session book ... & 4 shill Scots, for Carriadge' [Wil1706].

postcaird (pōst-kārd) n. a postcard – 'A maircht eend ti the 'Gazette' Office, an bocht a wheen picter-postcairds' [ECS], 'A expeckeet a letter, bit aa hei wrait iz was a bare postcaird' [ECS], 'Whae reads a' the cotton-gress postcairds there, Sae fer frae the haunts o' men?' [DH].

Postie's Pool (pōs-teez-pool) n. popular name for a pool in the Ale Water to the west of Lilliesleaf village, near the sports field. The name is said to refer to a local postman who drowned here.

postmaister (pōs-mās-tur) n. postmaster, someone in charge of a post office. In 1747 Andrew Turnbull is recorded as 'Town Post', although it is unclear what responsibilities he had. Hawick's first postmaster seems to have been Walter Turnbull, 'the Little Maister', who was appointed by the Chamberlain to the Duke of Buccleuch, but he was found unsuitable. His replacement was John Elliot, a tanner, who gave his services freely in 1767. Then Elliot was reappointed against his will! He stated that he was often away from home as one excuse, but was told that he was the only suitable person and so the public would just have to wait if he was away. James Inglis (Schoolmaster and later Town Clerk) was postmaster in 1772, and at some later point the office was taken by Miss Inglis (probably James' sister), who must have been one of the country's first post-mistresses. Robert Armstrong took over in 1809 and held the position till his death in 1852. The position was then held by Francis Deans, George Deans, James Orr, H. Little and James M. Sampson, taking us up to the early 20th century – 'But ... whae's postmaister on Post Office Knowe, Sae fer frae the haunts o' men?' [DH].

the Post Office (thu-pōst-o-fees) n. Hawick General Post Office was for a century on North Bridge Street, at the corner of Croft Road. It was built in 1892 on ground that had been J.E.D. Murray's studio, and allotments before that. The architect was J.P. Alison, and the foundation stone was ceremoniously laid by Mrs. Oliver (her husband having owned the land). A 2-storey addition was also designed by Alison in 1904. It was much altered over the years, with the sorting office moving to St. George's Lane in 1972 and the Post Office vacating the premises entirely in 1993. The building later contained 'Stampers' bar and an Indian restaurant, and then the Con Club. The building still has 'Post Office' carved in stone above the corner entrance. Meanwhile the main Post Office moved to Safeway, which itself closed in 2004. The Sandbed branch was then left as the main one in the town, although this closed in 2024. Sub-offices continue in Dickson Street and Burnfoot. The earliest mention of local mail is from about 1760 when letters would come once a month from Jedburgh and be laid out in an open stall for collection. In 1766 the Council records show them paying a man explicitly to take a letter to Edinburgh. The origin of the organised mail service lies with Sir Gilbert Elliot of Minto, who (in 1767) started an experimental post thrice a week to and from Berwick and Edinburgh, with John Elliot the first part-time postmaster (note that Walter Scott of Harden had also pushed for twice weekly service from Edinburgh to Peebles, Selkirk and Hawick in the 1750s). A post office was established shortly afterwards through the efforts of the Duke of Buccleuch's Chamberlain Robert Scott. James Inglis was recorded as post-master in 1772 when he and Bailie Hardie were paid by the Council 'for post letters, &c'; postage from Edinburgh at that time appears to have been 2d. Before the establishment of a post office the letters were exposed at a stall on market days, or on the flat tombstones of the kirkyard after Sunday services. The route from London was to Edinburgh via Coldstream, and then via Dunbar and Berwick, and then by pony to Kelso and on to Hawick. there was a theft of mail bags near Kelso in 1800. Miss Inglis (Joanna) was postmistress until 1809, when Robert Armstrong took over. The first mail-coach (on the Carlisle-Hawick-Edinburgh route) started in 1807, so that not all mail had to come from Berwick and Kelso. The situation changed utterly with the coming of the penny post in 1840. The location marked on Wood's 1824 map was the corner of Silver Street and the Howegate. The Post Office moved from the foot of the Howegate to the High Street in about 1860 and then to North Bridge Street in 1892. By the late 19th century there were also receiving stations on Wilton Path and Dovemount. Several sub-post offices later existed throughout the town, including at 7 Sandbed, Dovemount Place, Wilton Dean Burnfoot, the top of Trinity Steps and at Safeway (closed 2004). Now only the Burnfoot and Sandbed branches survive. Alexander Michie gave a paper on 'Old Post Office Arrangements in Hawick' at the Archæological Society in 1859 – 'But they've ta'en oor Post Office away, That hez been there for mony a day, They didni care what Hawick folk felt, Doon the river oo've been sellt' [IWL].

Post Office Knowe (pōst-o-fees-now) n. hill on the Border between Roxburghshire and Dumfriesshire, just to the north of Craik Cross Hill. The name is mysterious – 'Whae named yon hilltop 'Post Office Knowe', Fer frae the haunts o' men, Ootbye Craik Cross abune Borthwick-heid? I'd fairly like tae ken' [DH].

the Postrel (thu-pos-trul) n. name sometimes given to the doggerel verse 'A True History of the Right Honourable name of Scot', written by Capt. Walter Scott of Satchells and first published in 1688.

post-seek (pōst-seek) a., arch. bedridden – 'Post-sick, Expl. 'bedrid', Roxb. Often used; but whether the meaning be the same with that of the phrase, Postit with sickness, is doubtful' [JoJ].

pot barley (po'-bawr-lee) n., arch. barley that has been milled to remove the husks, for use in soups etc. – '... sending him to Sandy Neil's for washing soda and pot barley' [JTu].

Potburn (po'-burn) n. former farm adjacent to the Southern Upland Way, between Ettrick Pen and Pot Law. It was purchaed by James Pott, W.S., in 1831. He was son of Gideon Pott of Dod. Walter Dalgleish from there published his 'Poems and Songs' in Hawick in 1891. It was once said to be the highest farmhouse above sea level in Southern Scotland (also written 'Pottburn').

potch (poch) v., arch. to trample soft ground into mud – '... when the Magistrates and other persons at the Common-Riding potched the ground he had plowed' [C&L1767].

pot-shakins (po'-shā-kinz) n. pot scrapings, the last to come out, last of a litter – 'The pot-shakins o a big West End faimily Jock came efter his threi brothers and six sisters' [IWL].

the Pot Sike (thu-po'-sīk) n. small stream in the upper part of the farm of Milsington. It flows roughly southwards to join the Dean Burn. There is a local tradition that there may be buried treasure there, and hence a suggestion that this may have been where the bronze Roman leg was found in 1820 (also written 'Pot Syke'; it is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Pott (po', pot) n. Adam (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Malie Dickson and their children included Bessie (b.1645). Adam (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Riddell and their children included John (b.1669). Probably the same Adam, with wife Janet Riddell, was father of Janet (b.1679). Adam (17th/18th C.) recorded in Kirkton Parish where he was married in 1714 (with no wife's name given). Probably the same Adam married Helen 'Kinarie' in Kirkton Parish in 1717. His children baptised there included Adam (b.1717). It seems that he was separate from his contemporary who farmed at Wolfelee and Shankend. Adam of Hoscote (1690/1–1770) probably eldest son of George. He was tenant farmer at Wolfelee around 1715, moving to Shankend, where he was recorded in 1725 and 1727. He purchased the lands of Hoscote from the Homes in about 1723, starting his family's association with that estate. He was recorded at Shankend in 1729. His lands of 'Uterside' (i.e. Outerside) were valued at £360 in the 1740s. He seems likely to be the Adam of 'Outterside' listed among the Commissioners for Roxburghshire in 1761 and was 'of Hoscatt' listed along with his son George among the Commissioners of Selkirkshire. He married Betty Elliot (1686/7–1752). His children included: George (1712–70), who succeeded; a daughter (1716/7–1774) who is only marked on the gravestone as 'Mrs. Elliot'; Elizabeth (d.1783), who married Thomas Stavert, tenant at Coliforthill; William (b.1725); Jean (or Janet, 1727–77), who married Walter Grieve, farmer at Airswood, and whose son John Grieve co-inherited Hoscote with George Stavert; William (again, 1729–75), baptised in Cavers; and Janet (1730/1–57). The marriages of his daughters Elizabeth and Jean were at the same time in 1744 in Roberton Parish. The family are buried at Borthwick Waas. Adam (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Isabel Learmonth in Roberton Parish in 1754 (and recorded as 'Helen Learmond' in Kirkton Parish). Their children included James (b.1765) and Adam (b.1768). He is probably also the father of John (b.1757), baptised in Roberton Parish. He may be the Adam who witnessed a baptism for John Pott and Margaret Shiel in Wilton in 1747. Alexander of Borthwickshiels (d.1796), probably related to the Potts of Todrig, he was a surgeon in the West Indies. In 1788 he and Robert (possibly his son) are recorded as owners of Borthwickshiels, valued at £600. They were also recorded in 1788 as owners of land valued at £156, which had earlier been owned by William Scott of Galalaw (and was presumably Galalaw itself). His connection with Galalaw suggests that he was related to George of Todrig (possibly his father), who had married Elizabeth Scott of Galalaw earlier in the 18th century. He is recorded on the Horse Tax Rolls for Roberton Parish in 1789–92. Although he died one year earlier, he is still recorded as owner of 2 farm horses and 2 carriage or saddle horses on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He also paid tax for having 3 non-working dogs at Borthwickshiels in 1797. He was still listed as owner of Borthwickshiels on the 1811 Land Tax Rolls (with George of Todrig listed as owner later in the 19th century). His will was proved at the Prerogatory Court of Canterbury in 1796, when he was recorded as a bachelor of Roberton, Selkirkshire. Alexander 'Sandy' (1793/4–1859) younger son of Gideon of Dod, born in Cavers Parish. He was farmer at Burnfoot in the Ewes valley. He was one of the founder members of the Wisp Club. He was at Burnfoot in 1841 and in 1851 was farmer of 2600 acres, employing 10 people. In 1823 he married Appalina Hogarth (who was born in 1796 in Channelkirk). Their children included: Mary; Elizabeth; Apalina Christina Hogarth, who married Robert Laidlaw Turnbull, one of the Turnbulls of Merrylaw; and probably Gideon (d.1913), who emigrated to Queensland. Andrew (17th C.) weaver living at 'Todscleughsyde' in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records Andrew (1759/60–1844) son of Robert and Margaret. He was a resident of Castleton Parish and is probably the shepherd at Tweedenhead recorded on the 1797 Dog Tax Rolls. He married Betty Armstrong (1758/9–1820) and they had a son Robert (1801–75). The family are buried in Castleton. Arthur David Ripley (1862–1901) eldest son of Gen. David of Todrig and Borthwickshiels. He served with the K.O.S.B., being appointed Lieutenant in 1886 and Captain in 1894. He volunteered for active service along with his battalion in 1900 and was Staff Officer to the Commandant of Schweizer Reneke. He died of an abscess of the liver and is buried at Kimberley, South Africa. A memorial stone was erected in Roberton Cemetery. Gen. David of Todrig (1812–81) son of George and Katherine Reid and younger brother of George. He served in India during a rebellion in 1833 and during the Sutlej campaign, where he commanded the 47th Bengal Native Infantry. He received commendation for his command in Pegu Burnah in 1854 and for commanding the 47th Regiment during the rebellion in China in 1858–59. He became a General in 1877 and was awarded the Companion of the Bath. He owned the lands of Whitslade and Borthwickshiels, among other local holdings. He married Mary Anne, daughter of Col. Ripley, and she died in 1870. Their children were: Capt. Arthur David Ripley, who died in the Boer War in 1901; Emily Louisa, who married Capt. Sydenham J. Lambert; Anne Sophia, who married Lieut. Reginald C. Hadrow; Lucy Ada; Eliza Davidson; and Constantine (d.1875). In 1876 he secondly married Anna Frances, daughter of A. Boyle from Dublin, and she died in 1878. They had a son, Henry Percy, as well as daughters He himself died at Borthwickshiels. Edward Helme (1880–1968) son of Col. William of Knowesouth, he achieved the rank of Lt. Col. He married Louise Medora Hermione Vanneck and had a daughter, Hermione. George (1650/1–1720) perhaps the oldest local Pott with known connections to the Todrig and Hoscote family. He has one of the earliest tombstones in Borthwick Waas, which appears to say that he was 'of Whilhill brae' (probably Whitehillbrae on the Dod Burn). He is said to have married an Elliot and had 14 children, probably including: Adam (1690/1–1770) of Hoscote; possibly John of Caerlenrig (1692/3–1772), but this could have been his nephew; Robert (c.1696–1771); George of Todrig (1699/1700–81); and James of Dod (1701/2–65). He was therefore the progenitor of the Potts of Caerlenrig, Dod, Hoscote and Todrig. He is surely the same man as the tenant in Whitehillbrae and Newton, whose children baptised in Kirkton Parish included: Mungo (b.1708); John (b.1708); Janet (b.1710); and Thomas (b.1712). The name of his wife is not recorded. George of Todrig (1699/1700–81) son of George who died in 1720. He is recorded in 1762 when Christian, widow of Charles Scott of Crumhaugh, was involved with him in a court case to recover money owed to her husband. He was listed along with his son George among the Commissioners for Selkirkshire in 1761. He married Elizabeth Scott of Galalaw about 1754 (although possibly the George and Elizabeth Scott who were married in Roberton Parish in 1738); she died in 1755, aged 42. He purchased the lands of Caerlenrig from Robert Elliot of Caerlenrig and secondly married Robert's daughter Margaret (however, this could be confusion with other Potts). Altogether he had 2 daughters and 6 sons. His eldest son George (1739/40–81) succeeded to Todrig, while his son John (by his first marriage) succeeded to Caerlenrig (but again this could be confusion with other family branches). It is also possible that Alexander of Borthwickshiels was another son. He is probably the George of Todrig recorded as liferenter of lands in Headshaw in about 1788 (although decesaed by then). George of Hoscote (1712–c.80) son of Adam of Hoscote. He inherited the Hoscote estate on the death of his father (perhaps in 1770). He was a witness to the will of Robert Grieve in Deanburnhaugh. He was 'younger of Hoscatt' among the Commissioners for Selkirkshire in 1761. He died unmarried, probably around 1780, and bequeathed the estate to his nephews George Stavert (son of his sister Elizabeth) and John Grieve (son of his sister Jean). In 1783 there was a sasine in favour of his sisters, the only surviving children of Adam: Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Stavert in Coliforthill; and Jean, wife of Walter Grieve in Airswood. George (18th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. His children included Adam (b.1743), Betty (b.1750) and George (b.1775). He is probably related to George of Whitehillbrae, who had children baptised in Kirkton 30 years earlier. George (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His children included: Isabel (b.1765); John (b.1766); Jane (b.1767); Mary (b.1768); and Betty (b.1770). He may be the same man as the George whose childern were baptised in Kirkton Parish at about the same time. George (18th C.) married Betty Stavert in Roberton Parish in 1766. George (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Agnes Tait in 1782. George of Todrig (1739/40–81) son of George and Elizabeth Scott of Galalaw. He was listed as 'younger of Todrige' among the Commissioners for Selkirkshire in 1761. He was still 'younger' in 1779 when Sir Gilbert Elliot of Minto gave him liferent of much of Headshaw; this was part of Elliot's plan to stack the Roxburghshire voters' roll with his supporters. He is recorded paying the land tax on Todrig in 1785 and 1802 (even although he may have been deceased by then). He was also recorded as owner of the lands in Firth in 1788. Note that he is easily confused with his contemporary George of 'Rig' (meaning Caerlenrig). In 1778 he married Barbara, daughter of Walter Turnbull of Firth and Dorothea Chisholme; she later married Thomas Knox, was mother of the poet William Knox and died in 1821, aged 68. Their children (baptised in Lilliesleaf Parish) were: George (b.1779), who probably died young; George (b.1780), who succeeded; and Barbara (b.1782), who married Charles Erskine of Shielfield. The family gravestone at Borthwick Waas states that he died in 1781, just a month or so after his father; he was certainly deceased in 1806 when his daughter Barbara got married. The Mary who married William Aitchison (who later owned Brieryhill) may also have been his daughter. He may have been the same as the heir of Borthwickshiels who was killed by a fall from his horse near Howdenburn. George of Caerlenrig (1722/3–1815) son of John of Caerlenrig and Mary Scott. He is probably the 'Pott of Ridge' (no forename given) listed among the Commissioners for Roxburghshire in 1761. He was George 'of Ridge' when listed along with John (probably his father) witnessing a baptism for Robert Laidlaw in Falnash in 1764. He owned the farm of Caerlenrig in 1788, valued at £366. He is recorded being 'of Ridge' on the 1785–86 Horse Tax Rolls for Cavers Parish, listed along with his son in 1787 and then alone again in 1788–92. He is 'George Pott Esqr. Rigg' on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He was also 'Esqr. Rig' in 1797 when he was taxed for having a dog. He may be the George 'of Clanduchrig' (perhaps intended to be Caerlenrig) listed in 1788 among the voters of Roxburghshire associated with Sir Francis Eliott of Stobs. He is probably the 'Mr' George who in 1800 witnessed a baptism for Thomas Glendinning, shepherd at Blackcleugh. He was listed as owner of Caerlenrig in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls. Note that he is easy to confuse with his contemporary George of Todrig. According to the family gravestone in Borthwick Waas Cemetery he married three times: firstly Isabella Currie (1753/4–72), who had the same name as his step-mother, and hence was a niece of his step-mother; secondly Jane Little (1736/7–1775); and thirdly Margaret Elliot (1737/8–1821). He was listed as 'in Colindrikrig' when his wife and another family member were buried in Hawick in 1772. He was succeeded in Caerlenrig by his son John (1765/6–1830) and also had a son Robert who died in childhood. He appears to have lived to the age of 92. George (18th/19th C.) married Agnes White in Hawick in 1796. They were described as both being of Hawick Parish. He could be the George 'twedycleuch' whose son's death was recorded in Hawick in 1800. George of Todrig and Borthwickshiels (1780–1862) son of George and Barbara Turnbull. He was Convenor of Selkirkshire, as well as Justice of the Peace and Deputy Lieutenant in that county. He also served as a Commissioner of Supply, Justice of the Peace and Tax Commissioner for Roxburghshire. He was an officer in the local (Dumfries) Militia, serving as Ensign from 1798, Lieutenant from 1799, Captain from 1802 and Major 1809–11. He was probably the George of Todrig (separately listed from George of 'Rig') among the Commissioners for Roxburghshire in 1805 and 1819. In 1811 he was listed as owner of land at Firth in Lilliesleaf Parish, as well as Brieryhill in Wilton Parish. He was listed as owner of Borthwickshiels in about 1874 (after he was deceased). A carved panel on a farm building at Todrig probably relates to him; it has the initials 'G P' at the top, a lozenge in the centre, and the inscription 'REBUILT 1833' at the bottom. He was listed with another George (probably of Caerlenrig) his father, even as Commissioners of both Roxbughshire and Selkirkshire in 1819. He was listed among the local gentry in Pigot's 1837 directory.

In 1851 he was 'Landed Proprietor' at Borthwickshiels. In 1807 he married Katherine, daughter of David Reid, commissioner of customs she died in 1833. Their children were: Jane Stephen (1808–88); Barbara (b.1810), who married James Erskine of Shielfield, probably her cousin; Eliza Davidson (1815–64); George (b.1811), Major in the Bengal Army; David (b.1812), General in the Bengal Army; and Stephen (b.1813), with the Bengal Engineers. His adult daughters Jane, Barbara and Eliza were living at Borthwickshiels House in 1841. He died at Borthwickshiels and is buried in Roberton Cemetery. George of Dod (1790–1862) born at Penchrise, son of Gideon and Elizabeth Pott. He was the 3rd Pott Laird of Dod. He was educated at Jedburgh, Yarrow and Edinburgh University (probably the George recorded in medicine there in 1809). He was Lieutenant in the Roxburghshire Militia from about 1811 and became a Captain of the Roxburgh yeomanry cavalry in 1817. He went through a protracted legal battle with Sir William Francis Eliott of Stobs (also junior captain in his regiment) over the deal their fathers had made over the lease of Penchrise. He eventually lost the case in the House of Lords. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. About 1828 he rented Crawhill farm (now Bucklands) and lived there until he bought Knowesouth (from William Oliver Rutherford) in 1838. He was listed as resident of Crawhill in Pigot's 1837 directory. He was 'Proprietor' at Knowesouth and in 1851 was 'Landed Proprietor, Justice of the Peace' at Knowesouth, farming 112 acres and employing 5 labourers. He also ran the farm of Ruecastle. About 1854 he sold the farm of Riskenhope (by St. Mary's Loch) to John Scott, W.S. From cousins at Skelfhill he obtained an old copper pot, 19 1/2 inches deep, said by tradition to be the cauldron in which Lord Soulis was boiled at the Nine Stane Rig! He gifted this relic to the Duke of Buccleuch. He joined the Jedforest Club in 1813. He often told the story about meeting an old man, James Bunyan, herding his cow, and on asking him who was the worst farmer in the county was told 'Weel, sir I think it is just yersel'. Along with Mr. Selby (factor to the Earl of Minto) he had the idea to build a bridge and roads to connect Hassendean station with Denholm (this being later implemented). In 1823 he married Jean (or Jane), daughter of William Elliot, architect; she died in Edinburgh in 1864, aged 64. Their children were: Jane (b.c.1825); Elizabeth (b.c.1826); Esther (b.1829); Thomasina (b.1830), who married lawyer James Oliver; Gideon (1823/4–1905), who farmed at Knowesouth; William (b.1833), officer in the 89th Regiment; Janet (d.1912); and Ann. He died at Knowesouth and the family are commemorated at Borthwick Waas. George, J.P. of Todrig and Borthwickshiels (1811–77) son of George and Katherine Reid, and brother of Gen. David. He served with the Bengal Army, reaching at least the rank of Major (and was listed as Colonel on his memorial stone). He was recorded as 'George Pott, Esq. of Borthwickshiels' among landowners in Roberton Parish in 1841. He gave the land for the new Kirk at Roberton in 1862. In 1840 he married Julia, youngest daughter of Rev. Robert-Sparke Hutchings and she died in 1872. Their children included: George (1843–46); Constantine; George (again, 1847–54); Katherine (1850–55); and Robert Constantine (1851–75), his only surviving son, who was a Lieutenant in the 76th Regiment. He is buried at Roberton, along with other members of his family. George (18th/9th C.) name of 2 men listed among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1835. One was at Wilton Lodge and the other at Crawhill. Neither of them are listed by 1840. George (19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. In 1852 he married Jane Bell. George (19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1855 he married Isabella Foster. George (19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isabella Murray and their children included George (b.1859), Jane (b.1866), William (b.1867), William (again, b.1868) and James (b.1870). George (1842–98) younger son of James of Potburn and Jane Brown, and brother of George. He was born in Edinburgh. He succeeded his brother to the lands of Potburn and for some years lived at Lintalee. He joined the Jedforest Club in 1870. He moved to 55 Albany Street Edinburgh, and died. He married and had a family, probably being succeeded by James Gideon. George (19th/20th C.) brother of James Gideon. He succeeded to Potburn, but lived in New Zealand. Gideon of Dod (1757–1812) son of James and Jean Scott. He was a successful tenant sheep-farmer at Penchrise, apparently being let the farm by Sir William Eliott of Stobs at a reduced rate because he had lent some money towards the building of Stobs Castle. He was brother of Isabella (who married Thomas Usher of Courthill). A document of 1784 shows him clearing the debts of William Elliot (son of Capt. Robert) before he succeeded to Harwood. He also bought the farm of Riskenhope (formerly part of Rodono) from Hay of Duns Castle. He was granted a 77 year lease of Penchrise and Langside in 1794 (this being challenged when the son of the granter brought a court case against his son George). He is probably the Pott of Penchrise who subscribed to John Learmont's book of poetry in 1791. He is recorded at Penchrise on the 1785–94 Horse Tax Rolls and in 1797, when he owned 4 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. He was additionally taxed for having 3 non-working dogs in 1797. He paid the land tax at Dod in 1811. In 1783 he married Elizabeth Pott of Todrig, and she died at 'Warebank' (probably Weirbank in Melrose) in 1840, aged 84. Their children (at least 4 of whom were baptised in Cavers Parish) included: James (1784–85), eldest son; Elizabeth ('Betty', 1785–1855), eldest daughter, who died at 'Warebank'; Jean (1787–88); George (b.1790), who farmed Penchrise; James (again, b.1792), who became a lawyer; Alexander, who farmed at Burnfoot on Ewes; another daughter; and Thomasina ('Tomy', 1797–1866), youngest daughter, who also died at Warebank. He is buried along with other family members at Borthwick Waas. Gideon of Dod and Knowesouth (1823/4–1905) eldest son of George and Jane Elliot, born at Penchrise. He was educated at Canonbie, the Grange School in Sunderland and Edinburgh University. He acquired parts of Ruecastle from Thomas Rutherford and William Oliver Rutherford of Edgerston. He joined the Jedforest Club in 1847. He served as a Commissioner of Supply and Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. He also acted as collector of county rates in 1848 and for several years afterwards (still being so recorded in 1866). He turned down an offer to be agent of the British Linen Company in Jedburgh. Along with Edward Heron Maxwell he implemented the building of a bridge and road (by public subscription) to connect Hassendean station with Denholm. He also arranged a collection to give a gift to the Duke of Buccleuch for appreciation of locally keeping fox hounds at his own expense (this being 2 candelabra). He entered the new volunteer cavalry as a private and later became a Lieutenant. He was an expert shot, winning the officers' challenge cup of the Border battalion outright after 3 victories in a row, and placing well in several national competitions. He was a successful sheep-farmer and took pupils at Knowesouth for agricultural training. He was recorded at Knowesouth in a directory of 1868 and paid the land tax there in 1874. He was said in 1903 to be in possession of the watch found by a Penchrise shepherd in 1815, which was perhaps dropped by Mary Queen of Scots. His sister Thomasina married James Oliver, lawyer of Mayfield House. He married Janet Hunter (also known as Janet Lean Hunter Hunter, 1826/7–1912), from Crawford, Lanarkshire, who died in Jedburgh. Their children included: Gideon (1862–1904), an engineer, who predeceased him, dying in Glasgow; Grace Murray (b.1863); William (b.1865), the only surviving son; and Agnes ('Nancy', b.1871). In 1891 his younger daughter Agnes married William Edward Oliver-Rutherford, and at the same time his elder daughter Grace Jane married Isaac Fenton Bayley (of Halls, Dunbar). Henry Percy (19th/20th C.) son of Gen. David of Todrig. He served in the military, being with the Royal Iniskilling Fusiliers and in 1904 became a Lieutenant with the 5th Light Infantry, advancing to Captain in 1908 and temporary Major in 1915. His daughter Ruth Barbara (1910–61) married Ernest Keatting and is buried in Roberton Cemetery. James (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 as owner of Caverton when he was fined for failing to appear at the Justice-aire. He later presented Nicholas Brown to give suit for his lands in Caverton. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish, living at Cauldmill in 1709. His children included Walter (b.1696), Marion (b.1705), Jane (b.1707) and Margaret (b.1709). James (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Margaret Scott and their son John was baptised in 1716. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was at Borthaugh in 1721. He married Isobel Scott and their children included: Andrew (b.1721), with witnesses George Bell and William Turnbull. Probably the same James, also at Borthaugh, married to 'Agnes' Scott was father of Agnes (b.1724). The witnesses in 1724 were 'G.B.' and William Turnbull. James (18th C.) farmer who, along with 2 brothers, rented much of Harwood from William Elliot about 1730. He may have been the son of William born in Cavers Parish in 1702 or could have been the same man as James of Dod. James (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Skelfhill in 1738 and 1748. His children probably included: Margaret (b.1738), Thomas (b.1741), Elizabeth (b.1744) and Mary (b.1748). It is possible he is the same as James of Dod. James of Dod (1701/2–65) farmer at Penchrise and Langside. He was one of 14 children and possibly youngest son of George (who died in 1720). He married Jean, daughter of Gideon Scott of Woll, and she died in 1767, aged 48. Their children included: Elizabeth; Isabell, who married Thomas Usher of Courthill; George (b.1744), their eldest son, who died aged 4; Elizabeth (1756/7–83), 3rd daughter; and Gideon (1757–1802), 2nd son, who succeeded to Dod and farmed at Penchrise. He may be the James who had unnamed sons baptised in Cavers Parish in 1744, 1750 and 1757. He died at Penchrise and was buried at Borthwick Waas. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, living at Borthaugh in 1751. He is probably related to the James who was at Borthaugh a generation earlier. In 1744 he married Bessie Palmer, the marriage proclaimed in Roberton and Wilton Parishes. Their children, baptised in Wilton Parish, included James (b.1746), William (b.1748) and Isabel (b.1751). Probably the same James was father of Ann (b.1755), who was baptised in Roberton (and may be the Ann who married shoemaker George Shiel). The witnesses in 1751 were Robert Smith and James Scott. James (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Agnes Scott in that parish in 1753 and their daughter Betty was baptised in Hawick in 1762. Perhaps the same James is recorded marrying another Agnes Scott in 1767 (that marriage also being recorded in Hawick). James (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Jane Scott and their children included Betty (b.1762). It is possible he is the same man as James of Dod. James (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Helen Nichol and their daughter Mary was baptised in 1761. James (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Helen Paterson and their children included: Janet (b.1761); Agnes (b.1761), who married Robert Young; and James (b.1764). James (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1767 he married Agnes Scott from Ashkirk Parish. James of Potburn (1792–1852) from the Penchrise family, son of Gideon and Elizabeth Pott, he was born in Cavers Parish. He trained as a lawyer, becoming W.S. in 1818. He was one of the trustees for the late Adam Stavert of Hoscote in 1828, along with one of the Georges. He bought the lands of Potburn, Selkirkshire in 1831. He may be the James recorded in a letter of 1836 preserved in the Walter Mason Collection. In 1838 he was listed as a writer in Edinburgh when he witnessed a document in Hawick (relating to the Dicksons) and a letter from the same year is preserved in the Walter Mason collection. He married Jane, 2nd daughter of Peter Brown of Rawflat in 1839. His children included James Gideon and George. His firm could be the 'Messrs. Pott & Macmillan' recorded in documents of 1814 in the Walter Mason Collection. James (b.1839/40) son of Martin. He married Agnes Lamb in 1860 and their children (baptised in Hawick or Wilton) included Mary (b.1860), Martin (b.1863), Walter (b.1865), Jane (b.1867), Martin (again, b.1867), Margaret (b.1869), and William (b.1874). In 1861 he was living with his father at Upper Hope Park. James Gideon of Potburn (1840–65) eldest son of James of Potburn and brother of George. He was born in Edinburgh. In 1859 he obtained a commission as Cornet in the 11th Hussars. He was described as a 'delicate, handsome-looking man', but of poor health. He had to retire from the army and died at the age of 25. His brother George succeeded to Potburn. James Gideon (d.1915) from the local family, probably son of George of Potburn. He died in Salonika on active service with the Lothian and Borders Light Horse. His brother George succeeded. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Malie Wilson and their children included William (b.1639). John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Marion Huggan and their children included Bessie (b.1646). John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Johnston and their children included William (b.1655). John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His son William was baptised in 1674. Perhaps the same John was father of Agnes (b.1692). John (17th C.) resident of Bowanhill on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. John (17th C.) resident of 'Dodburne in Kirkton Parioch' according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. His surname is written 'Poott'. Perhaps the same John in Winningtonrig had a child John baptised in 1708. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Janet Miller in 1712. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Janet Scott and his children included Margaret (b.1713) and Isobell (b.1716). John (18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His children included: Marion (b.1726); and James (b.1728). John (18th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. His children included George (b.1724), Robert (b.1725) and Margaret (b.1726). He may be the John who got married in Kirkton Parish in 1721 (wife's name not given). John (1692/3–1772) succeeded to the lands of Caerlenrig from his father George (however, it is also possible he was a nephew of George). He and George 'of Ridge' (probably his son) witnessed a baptism for Robert Laidlaw in Falnash in 1764. He was listed on the Horse Tax Rolls 'in Rigg' in 1789–91 (even although deceased by then). He married Mary Scott, who died in 1730, aged 34. He secondly married Isabella Currie, and she died in 1763, aged 50. His children included: Elizabeth ('Betty', 1721/2–43), his oldest daughter; and George (1722/3–1815), who succeeded to Caerlenrig. He could be the John whose children baptised in Cavers Parish included Marion (b.1758) and Margaret (b.1759). It is also possible that he is the same man as John from Kirkton Parish, whose son George was baptised in 1724. He is buried at Borthwick Waas along with several family members. John (18th C.) recorded as 'Workman', probably in the Teviothead area. He married Margaret (or Marion) Craw in 1730, both of them being from Cavers Parish. Their son James was baptised in Hawick Parish in 1738, with Walter Scott at Commonside one of the witnesses. He could be the John in Colterscleuch whose daughter Mary (b.1732) was baptised in Cavers Parish. John (b.1734), also baptised in Cavers, was probably his son. John (18th C.) tailor who lived in Wilton Parish. He was living at Langlands in 1741, 1744, 1747 and 1751. He married Margaret Shiel in 1739 and their children included: James (b.1740); Robert (b.1741); Janet (b.1744); Ann (b.1747); and Isabel (b.1751). The witnesses in 1741 were Andrew Stewart and James Scott, in 1744 were James Dryden and Walter Scott, in 1747 were Walter Scott and Adam Shiel (who was probably related to his wife) and in 1751 were Robert and Walter Scott. His wife's death is recorded in Hawick in 1787. John (18th C.) carrier in Hawick Parish. He married Margaret 'Batety' and their children included Helen (b.1743). The witnesses in 1743 were merchant John Ruecastle and shoemaker John Scott. He is probably also the carrier whose son John was baptised in Hawick in 1745, with witnesses shoemakers John and Thomas Scott. John (18th C.) married in Kirkton Parish in 1754, with no wife's name recorded. John (18th C.) Schoolmaster at Caerlenrig 1762–63. He may be the same as one of the other Johns. John (18th C.) married Janet Ogilvie in Castleton Parish in 1769. John (d.1774) mason from Hawick, who carried out much of the repair work after the 1767 flood, rebuilding the small arch of the Auld Brig and the wall of the Manse. In 1772 he and Adam Scott were contracted to build the bridge at Hornshole. However, after the framework collapsed, Scott gave up and left him and his men to carry on the work. The bridge was successfully completed in 1774, but when the planks were being removed he met with an accident, leading to an injury that he died of shortly afterwards. He was maternal grandfather of Alexander and Robert Michie, and hence probably father of Betty, who married Alexander Michie in Hawick Parish in 1797. His son John died in Hawick in 1778. John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Clerk in Hawick in 1760 and had children including John (b.1761), Betty (b.1766), Betty (again, b.1773) and William (b.1776). The witnesses in 1766 were merchants John Hardie and Adam Leyden and in 1776 were the whole congregation. Note that at about the same time John Clerk was married to Margaret Pott, and so the couples may have been related. John (18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His son John was baptised in 1754. John (18th C.) erected possibly the first stocking-shop in Hawick, in the back of the house adjoining Oliver Place (sold to the Olivers around 1875 and demolished). His father owned the property and the house at the front, bearing the date 1769, and his mother was a midwife in the Town. He was said to have been the first apprentice stockingmaker in Hawick, working with Bailie John Hardie from 1772. When he set up on his own, he started with linen and worsted stockings, using lambswool yarn from about 1785, with the yarn all spun by hand until 1799. He is probably the John whose wife Peggy Turnbull died in 1795, the couple being married (declared in Wilton and Hawick Parishes) in 1786. He is probably also the stockingmaker in Hawick who subscribed to Caw's 'Poetical Museum' (1784). John (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Mabel Nichol and their children included Robert (b.1792), Mabel (b.1794), James (b.1796), John (b.1798), Betty (b.1800) and Jean (b.1802). John (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Betty Robson. Their children included Helen (b.1794), Isobel (b.1796) and Elliot (b.1811). John of Rig (1765/6–1830) son of George and Isabella Currie, he held the lands of Caerlenrig. He is probably the '& Son of Rigg' recorded along with George on the 1787 Horse Tax Rolls. He is probably the 'Mr Pott, junior, Carlenrig' on the subscription list for John Learmont's book of poetry in 1791. He is recorded being from 'Rigg' in a letter to a Selkirk lawyer in 1791 regarding a lost almanac. He is probably the John 'Potts', 'Esq. Carlenrigg' who subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. He became a member of the Wisp

Club in about 1827. He married Christian Aitchison, who died at Mackside in 1842, aged 82. He is buried along with his father, grandfather and other family members in Borthwick Waas. There are documents relating to his family, covering the period 1743–1845, in the Borders Archive. Martin (18th C.) groom at Stirches in 1778, when he was working for Gilbert Chisholme. He was surely related to Robert, who was a stable-boy at the nearby Burnhead. He is probably the Martin who married Betty Gray and whose children, baptised in Wilton Parish, included Martin (b.1779). Martin (b.c.1770s) servant at Borthaugh according to the ballot for the Militia in Wilton Parish in 1799. Probably the same Martin was servant at Adderstoneshiel on the 1801 Militia ballot in Kirkton Parish. Perhaps the same Martin married Margaret Scott and their daughter Marion was baptised in Wilton in 1804. He is probably the son of Martin and Betty Gray born in Wilton in 1779. Martin (b.1803) son of Martin, he was born in Wilton Parish, where he worked as a wool spinner. He was living at Malt Steep when listed among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1840 and 1841. He was living at the Malt Steep in Wilton on the 1841 census and on Wilton Kirkstyle in 1851. In 1861 he was a widower at Upper Hope Park. He married Mary Little, who was from Langholm. Their children included: Mary (b.1828); William (b.1830); Martin (b.1832), who became power loom manager of the Cumledge Mill; Ann (b.1834), who married Alexander Baillie, and was grandmother of Isabella Baillie; Margaret (b.1837); James (b.1839); David; and Alexander. Martin (b.1832) son of Martin and Mary Little, he was born in Hawick. In 1858 he married Martha Oliver and moved to Duns, where he was power loom manager of the Cumledge Mill. They had 8 children: Margaret (b.1859), born in Wilton; Mary (b.1861), baptised in Hawick; Agnes Wilson (b.1874), baptised in Wilton; and 5 others. Martin (19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Margaret Simpson in 1864. Robert (d.c.1684) tenant in Langhaugh whose will is recorded in 1684. It is unclear which 'Langhaugh' this was, although probably in Roxburghshire. Robert (1705/6–81) tenant in Hudshouse. In 1758 he had his children Helen and Jean, with Helen Murray baptised in Hawick; the record is labelled as fornication. He died at Turn and is buried in Borthwick Waas (with no other family members listed). He is surely the Robert 'Potts' who is listed as joint possessor (with William Elliot) of the famr of Turn in 1779. Robert (18th C.) married Margaret Cavers in Kirkton Parish in 1755. Their children, baptised in Castleton Parish, included Andrew (b.1762), William (b.1765) and Walter (b.1765). John (b.1756), baptised in Castleton Parish, may also have been his son. It is possible he was the Robert who owned Demainholm (along with Matthew Little) according to the Land Tax Rolls of 1811. Robert (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Betty Scott, and their children included Jane (b.1760) and John (b.1761). Robert (18th C.) house and stable boy at Burnhead in 1778 and 1779, when he was working for William Scott. He could be the Robert who married Margaret 'Robison' in Hawick Parish in 1787. Capt. Robert of Galalaw (d.1803) recorded in Roberton Parish on the Land Tax Rolls for Selkirkshire in 1802. Probably the same Robert is recorded in 1788 along with Alexander, as joint owner of land valued at £156, which was presumably Galalaw, as well as Borthwickshiels, valued at £600. He was also recorded as owner of Galalaw on the county valuation and on the Land Tax Rolls of 1811 (although already deceased by then). It seems likely that he was son of Alexander of Borthwickshiels and grandson of George of Todrig. He died at Borthwickshiels. Robert (d.1816) recorded as 'old Tailor and Packman Midraw' when his death was registered in Hawick. He could be the pedlar Robert who was recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls for Hawick. Robert (19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He was recorded as a carter among male heads of households in the Parish in 1835–41. He was an agricultural labourer and carter on the 1841 and 1851 censuses, living on North Hermitage Street. He was listed as a farmer in 1861. He married Mary Armstrong (b.1811), who was from Canonbie. Their children included: Betty (b.1832); Margaret (b.1833), who married David Oliver; Andrew (b.1836); John (b.1838); Christopher (b.1840); Jane (b.1842); William (b.1845); Walter (b.1847), who moved to Glasgow; James (b.1849); Euphemia (b.1852); and Robert (b.1855). The couple were rebuked for 'antenuptial Fornication' in 1832. The 1841 record says 'to America and dead', but that must be an error. Col. Stephen (1813–85) son of George. He served with the Royal Bengal Engineers and retired in 1862 with the honorary rank of Major General. There is a pink granite memorial to him in Roberton Cemetery. Thomas (17th C.) tenant in Howpasley. Along with William Telfer (also in Howpasley) and several other men from the upper Borthwick, he was charged in 1685 with being a Covenanter. However, all the men took the 'Test' and promised not to frequenct conventicles. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His children included William (b.1699) and Margaret (b.1708). Thomas (1723–1829) son of William, he was farmer at Toftholm in Castleton Parish. He was recorded there on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when he owned 3 horses, and on the Dog Tax Rolls, when he owned 2 dogs. He married in 1763, but his wife's name is unrecorded. He was probably father of Mary, who married Adam Robson, and perhaps John who married Betty Robson. He probably also had a son Thomas who was 'Mr. T. jun.' in 1821. Thomas (b.c.1779) inn-keeper of the Buccleuch Arms in Newcastleton, recorded in Pigot's 1837 directory. He is listed as a carter among heads of households in Newcastleton in 1835–37 and then as an innkeeper. He was surely related to Robert, who was a carter at about the same time. Probably the same Thomas was recorded as 'Junr.' at Toftholm on the ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1799 and was a shepherd at Toftholm, with surname recorded as 'Potts' on the Militia ballot in 1801. In 1841 he was a publican at about 48 North Hermitage Street, with his wife Betty and children Helen and Betty. He married Elizabeth (or 'Betty') Hogg and their children included: Helen (b.1806); Anne (b.1808); Helen (again, b.1808); Thomas (b.1810); William (b.1812); Robert (b.1814); and Betty (b.1821). He could be the 'Mr. T. jun. Toftholm' listed in 1821 when he subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821; he was presumably son of the older Thomas. Thomas (19th C.) married Anne Scott in Cavers Parish in 1828. Walter (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Mary Young and their children included James (b.1799). William (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Nichol and their children included Helen (b.1655). William (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish, when it contained Hassendean. He married 'Issobell Heutsone' in 1685 and their children included John (b.1687). The witnesses were Robert Scott and Robert Ormiston (probably farmer at Boonraw). William (18th C.) resident of Todshawhill. His children included John (b.1702). William (18th C.) resident of Cavers and Hawick Parishes. He was living at Langside in 1702 and at Slaidhills in 1704. He married Janet Buckham in 1699 and their children included James (b.1702) and Anna (b.1704). The witnesses in 1704 were John Foster and William Scott. William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish who married Isabel Brydon in 1709. He was recorded being in Skelfhill in 1709. William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was herd at Lymiecleuch in 1727 and probably the same William was at Shankend in 1738. Possibly the same William was father of Thomas (b.1724), John (b.1727), George (b.1738), John (again, b.1740) and Margaret (b.1743). William (18th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. He married Janet Hislop in 1734. William (18th C.) tenant at Hoscote, recorded in a court case of 1754 with John Armstrong, tenant of Fingland, Dumfriesshire. William (b.c.1780) servant at Burnmouth according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish. William (19th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Isabella Mather and their children included: Janet (b.1825); Jane (b.1827); and an unnamed son (b.1829). William (19th C.) labourer who was living at Whinfield in 1842. He married Ann Henderson in Wilton Parish in 1842. His children included Agnes (b.1842), baptised by Rev. Andrew Ransay of Hawick, but recorded in Ashkirk Parish. William (19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen Currie in 1859 and their children included Margaret (b.1858) and Mary (b.1863). William (b.1834) 2nd son of George of Dod. He was an officer in the 89th Regiment. He married a daughter of Thomas Helme of Surrey. Col. William (20th C.) probably son of Gideon. He served with the 27th Inniskilling Fusiliers. He lived at Knowesouth. His son was Lt.-Col. Edward Helme (formerly sometimes 'Pot'; see also Potts, with which it was sometimes synonymous).

potted meat (po'-eed-mee', -ee'-) n. dish made from boiled meat and bones, which sets into a jelly when cooled – 'We aa killed pigs aboot that time an made the potted meat. An you got the potted meat potted heid' [TH] (also spelled 'pottit' etc.).

Potterlamport (po-tur-lam-pōr') n. name of a former tower, recorded on Sandison's c.1590 map, roughly near where the Hermitage Water joins the Liddel. It was recorded in a rental list in the charters of the Douglases of Morton in about 1376, being worth 34 shillings. It could be the 'Porter-landes' among lands in upper Liddesdale that belonged to Jedburgh Abbey, as listed in the early 17th century. It was listed in 1632 among the Liddesdale lands of Sandy Armstrong. Robert Scott was tenant there in 1694. In the 1718 Buccleuch survey it is shown as a farm of 550 acres, bounded by Nether Harden, lands of the Laird of Whithaugh and Hillhouse. It also shared a common of 37 acres with the farm of Hillhouse and another of 24 acres with the Laird of Whithaugh's tenant. It could potentially be the same place as Puddinburn, or else was merely a smaller house nearby. A small stream on the east side of the Liddel Water, between Castleton and Whithaugh is called Pouterlampert Sike and a farmstead is marked there on the 1862–3 Ordnance Survey map. A section of bike trail in the area has also been named 'Pouter Lampert' (it is 'Pouterlampert' in about 1376, 'Powterlapmpert' in 1583, 'Porterlampet' in 1632, 'Polterlampert' in 1694 and 'Porterlempet' and 'Porterlampit' in 1718; the origin could be Celtic 'polter' meaning an upland stream, 'lann' meaning open land and 'pert', meaning 'bush').

pottit meat see potted meat

Pott Loch (po'-loch) n. body of water marked on Blaeu's 1654 map to the south of Clearburn Loch, and perhaps confused with what is now called Kingside Loch. 'Pot Loch', which is little more than a pond, sits to the west of Shaws Upper Loch, between the Ale and Ettrick valleys. It is listed in 1649 among the lochs in Selkirkshire.

Potts (pots) n. Adam (19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Agnes Nichol and their children included Elliot (b.1872). Andrew (18th C.) resident of Lillieleaf. His daughter Agnes was baptised in 1732. Andrew Petrie (b.1822) born in Eckford Parish, son of William Hunter and grandson of Thomas. He was a stationer in Edinburgh. George (1793–1851) born in Oxnam Parish, son of Thomas and Andrea Petrie. He was a 'writer' (i.e. lawyer) when he subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. Several letters to him from the 1820s are preserved in the Walter Mason Collection. He is also recorded as a 'writer' on Buccleuch Street in Pigot's 1825/6 directory and also writer in Hawick in the 1828 Edinburgh Almanack. He lived on Buccleuch Street, and was also listed there on Pigot's 1837 directory. He served as solicitor with the Sheriff Court in Hawick, being sometimes described as Procutator Fiscal. He is listed as a joint proprietor on the 1833 electoral roll of Hawick, acquiring a house in Hawick from Robert Heckford of Kelso; Thomas (writer in Edinburgh) and Andrew Petrie (stationer in Edinburgh) are also mentioned, possibly his brother and brother-in-law. In Pigot's 1837 directory he is listed as agent for Scottish Union insurance. He was recorded as a writer in Hawick in 1838 (relating to the Dicksons), with James Pott, W.S. also a witness (even although he was presumably not related). In 1851 he is a solicitor of the Roxburghshire Sheriff Court, living on Buccleuch Street. In Slater's 1852 directory (published just after his death) the firm of Potts & Carmichael is listed as writers and notaries on Buccleuch Street; he must have briefly been in partnership with the much younger James Carmichael. He married Janet Anderson in 1837, and she died in 1898, aged 84. Their children included: George, who died in infancy; and Andrew (1838–95), who took over the farm of his uncle John Henderson at Lewenshope, in the Yarrow valley, and married Jessie Mitchell. There is an obelisk to his memory in Jedburgh Abbey cemetery. George Marsden (d.1940) driver who lived at 2 Under Village. He was a coal delivery driver for the Co-op and played rugby for the Linden. He served with the Royal Army Service Corps in WWII. He was killed during the evacuation from Dunkirk, leaving a wife and daughter. He is commemorated on the Dunkirk Mmorial and on the Hawick Roll of Honour. James (1737/8–1817) Sheriff Clerk for Roxburghshire. He is so recorded in 1780 and in 1799 was recorded as Clerk to the Lieutenancy of Roxburghshire. He may have been son of Thomas. He lived in Jedburgh. He paid tax on a male servant in Jedburgh from 1778 through the 1780s. In 1785–91 he was a writer in Jedburgh when he paid tax for having a female servant. He was writer in Jedburgh in 1785–89 and Sheriff Clerk from 1790 when he paid the Horse Tax. He may have been the James recorded in Kelso in 1786. In 1813 he paid the land tax in Jedburgh. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Betty Campbell and their daughter Isobel was baptised in 1817. John (19th C.) from England, he was a resident of Castleton Parish for a while. He married Elizabeth Murray and their daughter Esther was baptised in 1857. In 1861 he was a railway mason living at Wormscleuch. Joseph (19th C.) resident of Lawston in Castleton Parish. In 1832 he acknowledged that he fathered a child with Janet Ogilvie, from Greens. Thomas (18th C.) Sheriff Clerk of Roxburghshire. He is probably the Thomas who paid the window tax in Jedburgh in 1748. He was made an Honorary Burgess of Hawick in 1751. He signed a document of 1762 relating to the sale of 'Easter Crawhill, commonly called Easter Burnfoot'. He is probably the Thomas, writer living in Kelso, who taxed for having male and female servants and horses in the period 1785–94 (and Jedburgh in 1788). He is probably the Thomas, married to Agnes Hogarth, whose son James was born in Lilliesleaf Parish in 1795 (with the baptism in Makerstoun). He may also have had a daughter Mary who married Thomas Ainslie and brother of Hawick lawyer George. Thomas (18th/19th C.) member of Hawick Curling Club in 1812. He may be the Thomas, resident of Hawick, who subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He may also be the Thomas from Lurgiescleuch who subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. Thomas (19th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish. His children included Nancy (b.1824), Thomas (b.1829), Andrina Petrie (b.1831) and Isabel (b.1834). He was probably son of Thomas And Andrea Petrie. Thomas (19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Janet Scott in 1837; she was daughter of Robert Scott and Agnes Scott, born in Wilton in 1818. Their children include William (b.1838), Robert (b.1840), George (b.1843) and Agnes (b.1845). He was living at Newhouses in 1841 and his widow was there in 1851 and 1861. Thomas (d.1867) Deputy Clerk of Session in Edinburgh. On his death-bed he 'directed that an Indian chief's dress and belongings, of which he was possessed, should be presented to the Hawick Museum'; the belongings were extensive, consisting of more than 15 items. William (18th C.) labourer at 'Taylor Gate' in Castleton Parish. In 1797 he was listed among men balloted to serve in the Militia, with the annotation suggesting he paid to avoid service; his name appears again in 1798 and in early 1799 he paid £10 to avoid service. William Hunter (b.1784) born in Oxnam Parish, son of Thomas. He was probably brother of George, solicitor in Hawick. He lived in Ashkirk Parish, where several of his children were baptised. In 1841 he was a farm worker living at Newhouses in Wilton Parish, and in 1851 he was farmer of 100 acres at Cawfaulds, near Horsleyhill. He married Isabella Mather and their children included: Andrew Petrie (b.1822), baptised in Eckford; Thomas; Janet (b.1825); Jane (b.1827); an unnamed son (b.1829); James (b.c.1830); David (b.1833); and Walter (b.1836). William (b.1817/8) originally from Jedburgh, he was farmer at Groundistone. He was listed as steward at Groundistone among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1835. In 1851 he was farmer at Groundiston. His wife was Ann and their children included Agnes, William, John, Isabella, Janet and George. William (19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His wife was Isabella Hermiston and their children included Isabella (b.1863), Thomas (b.1865), George Hamilton (b.1866), William (b.1870) and John Webster (b.1872) (see also Pott, with which it was sometimes synonymous).

Pow (pow) n. David Scott (b.1846) blacksmith at Branxholme Woodfoot, son of blacksmith William and Elizabeth Scott. His children included William (b.1873), Annie, Elliot (who worked in a draper's shop), David, Scott and John. Elliot (19th/20th C.) from the Woodfoot Pows, he was a salesman at Aitken's, drapers on the High Street. In 1904 he married Janet Laidlaw Notman (d.1962). Their children were: Janet Elliot ('Nettie', b.1906); Robina Notman ('Beanie', b.1911); Susan ('Sis'); and David. His wife and daughters were all known as quilters, producing quilts sold at Congregational Church sales. He is buried in Wilton Cemetery, along with his wife and eldest daughter. Gavin (1806–1887) born at Branxholme Woodfoot, where his father William was blacksmith. He was blacksmith at Newcastleton and then at Teviothead for 33 years, being a well-known and central figure in the community. He married Mary Scott and secondly Elizabeth Dickson (daughter of a Castleton shepherd). His children were: William (b.1829), child of his first wife, who became blacksmith in the Rule valley; James (b.1832), who worked as a blacksmith in Hawick, but died of typhus at age 25; Mary (c.1834–54); Elizabeth (b.c.1835); Margaret (b.c.1837–58); Christina (1838–1910), who married William Elliot; John (b.1841), who married Agnes Tinlin; Robert (c.1842–62); Betsy (c.1844–1919), married John Davidson and emigrated to Canada; Euphemia (c.1846–60); and Jane Scott (b.c.1848), married Bailie T.H. Laidlaw. The Pow Cup was gifted in his memory by his son John in 1905. George (b.1832/3) son of shoemaker Thomas, he was a tailor in Hawick. In 1861 he was living at 10 O'Connell Street. His wife was Agnes and their children included Thomas, William and George. Probably the same George presented the Museum with a coin of Charles II in 1862 and an old Scottish coin in 1863. James (19th C.) married Elspeth Lillico in 1854, the marriage being recorded in both Hawick and Wilton. James 'Jimmy' (1930–2005) son of George and Jean, educated at Allan Water School and Hawick High School. He became a shepherd at Dodburn, Bowanhill, Effledge, Falnash, Bedrule, Swinnie and Denholm. He married Ena Pow and their sons were Alister and George. He was a keen horseman and known as a great stick dresser, often saying 'What that man kens aboot sticks, ee could write on the back o' a ha'penny stamp'. Janet Laidlaw nee Notman (1884–1962) daughter of James Notman and Susan Liddle. She was known in Hawick for her quilting skills. She married draper's salesman Elliot in 1904. The family lived at 4 Duke Street. She is said to have made over 30 quilts, often featuring the 'Hawick Hearts' design. They were sold at church sales in the 1920s and 30s. One is preserved in the Quilt Museum in York. She had 4 children: Janet Elliot ('Netta', b.1906); Robina Notman ('Beanie', 1911–2000), who married a Hammond and then Andrew Mather; Susan ('Sis'); and David. John (b.c.1839) born in Hobkirk, son of Gavin, he worked locally as a blacksmith and in 1862 at Hobkirk he married Agnes Tinline of Jedburgh. Soon afterwards he emigrated to New Zealand, along with his wife and son. He became a successful sheep farmer, taking over his father-in-law's farm 'Fernieherst'. In 1905 he presented the 'Pow Challenge Cup' to Hawick's bowlers, in memory of his father. Thomas (b.1803) born in Innerleithen, son of Andrew, he was a shoemaker in Hawick. He was living at around 42 High Street in 1841, on Tannage Close in 1851 and at 1 O'Connell Street in 1861. He was also listed on Pigot's 1837 directory. His wife was Janet and their children included James, George, Catherine, Andrew, Janet and Walter. Thomas (19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Agnes Black and their sons George and Thomas were baptised in Hawick Free Kirk in 1853. Thomas (19th/20th C.) son of William, he was blacksmith at Blacklee. He was involved with Rulewater Miniature Rifle Club from 1905. William (18th C.) recorded being 'in Hoscoat' in 1754 when he was involved in a court case with John Armstrong of Fingland. William (18th/19th C.) married Isabel Easton in Wilton in 1801. William (b.c.1780–1856) first of the local blacksmith family, residing at Branxholme Woodfoot from 1804. Son of Gavin and Rebecca, he came from Yarrow, where his brother Robert had made an early bicycle. He was a Trustee of the Relief Kirk. He was recorded at 'Borthaugh Smithy' in 1841, this being another name for Branxholme Woodfoot. He married Mary Crozier in 1803 in Yarrow and their children were all christened at Wilton, including: Christian (b.1804), who married James Tennant; Gavin (b.1806), who became Teviothead blacksmith; Euphan (b.1808), who married

John Davidson; Jean (b.1810), married Robert Jack; Rebecca (b.1812), married William Minto; William (b.1815), who carried on as Branxholme Woodfoot blacksmith; Helen (b.1819), married James Ovens, blacksmith in Hawick; and Mary (b.1822), who married William Murray. William (b.1815) son of William, he was master blacksmith at Woodfoot. In 1842 he married Elizabeth (b.1818), daughter of shepherd David Scott. Their children were: William (b.1844); David Scott (b.1846); Jane (or Jeanie, b.1849), who married watchmaker David Gaylor; and Mary (b.1857). Later members of the family continued as blacksmiths in the Borthwick valley, acting as surgeon, dentist, etc., and even running an occasional bus service to Hawick. In 1870 he donated to the Museum a 'pair of 'woo' clots', formerly used for carding wool by hand'. William (b.c.1828) son of Gavin by his first wife Mary Scott. After his mother's death he was raised by his grandmother at Branxholme Woodfoot. He served an appreticeship with his father at Teviothead, then worked for Alexander Smith (a vet at Appletreehall), before becoming blacksmith at Blacklee, Rulewater for over 40 years. He married Mary, daughter of James Cranston and grand-daughter of millwright Gideon Scott. Their children were James (vet, who emigrated to Canada), Mary (who married William Beverley, butler at Wolfelee and Governor of the Jedburgh Poor House), William (married and lived at Causewayfoot), Thomas (who became a blacksmith and married E. Winchester) and Robert (rural postman who married Anne Sinclair).

presser (pre-sur) n. a term in the hosiery trade for part of a machine which closes the barbs of the needles so that the loops of yarn can pass over them – '. . . and soon became a crack hand at 'meeting the presser' and 'running the thread' ' [HAST1863].

Presto's (pres-tōz) n. supermarket built on the site of the former Mactaggart's skinworks at the corner of Albert Road and Victoria Road in 1977. It was the first large supermarket to be opened in Hawick, was a part of the Allied Suppliers business and was converted to a Safeway in the late 1980s – 'Throwe time incomers came, Like Fazal Din and Gusto, And then ow're at the Haugh, There came a bit ca'd Presto' [IWL].

Preston (pres-tin) n. Andrew (17th C.) miller in Spittal Mill. In 1683 he was fined for the crime of not bringing sufficient meal to market in Hawick. Rev. David (1875–1956) born at Caldercruix in Lanarkshire, son of George and Janet Shanks. He graduated from Glasgow University and was licensed by Hamilton Presbytery in 1899. He became assistant minister at Greyfriars, Dumfries and then was ordained at Ewes in 1901. In 1918 he moved to Titwood and demitted in 1941. In 1903 he married Ella Margaret (b.1880), daughter of James McKillop from Stirlingshire. Their children included: Douglas George (b.1904); Jessie Eleanor Doris (b.1907); and Kathleen Angus (b.1910). He wrote a manuscript on the history of the Colonial Missions of the Church of Scotland. Dr. ?? (16th C.) listed as 'Doctour Prestoun', when he was the forst man listed as witnes to the final 'latterwill' of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1574. This was witnessed in Hawick, so he may have been a local man. George (18th/19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Violet Laidlaw and their children included Margaret (b.1795). John (15th C.) Parson in Hawick in 1481, 'John Prestoune of Hawyc . . . bachelor in decrees and perpetual vicar of Dunlop'. Nothing else seems to be known about him. John (b.1814/5) born in Ashkirk Parish, he was farmer at Wester Middles in Lilliesleaf Parish. In 1861 he was farming 198 acres and employing 5 labourers. He was a widower by then, living with his mother Ann and son Robert. Rev. Thomas (b.1948) born in Edinburgh, son of Thomas and Janet Harris Taylor. He was educated at Galashiels Academy in 1959–64, worked with the Inland Revenue 1964–65, the Ministry of Power 1965–68 and the D.H.S.S. 1968–70. He attended Edinburgh University in 1970–76, graduating B.D. and C.C.Ed. He was licensed by the Presbytery of Melrose and Peebles in 1976, was assistant minister at London Crown Court 1976–78 and ordained as minister of Port Glasgow Hamilton Bardrainney in 1978. In 1989 he moved to Denholm, Minto and Bedrule. He remained until 1992, when he moved to Old Kirk. Rev. William (17th C.) possible minister at Hassendean in 1638 when the National Convenant was signed in Hawick. The name was apparently hard to transcribe, and the minister at that time was Alexander Forrest, so this may be an error. William (18th C.) Schoolmaster at Southdean from at least 1770. He served until 1772. His children, baptised in Southdean Parish, included: George (b.1758); Cornelius (b.1760), probably named after the Laird of Wolfelee; Nelly (b.1762); Agnes (b.1766); Robert (b.1768); and Mary (b.1770).

pretensic (pree-ten-seek) adj., poet. pretentious – 'Aye, there ye'll find ane o' yer clan, A social, decent, honest man, Wha, void o' a' pretensic plan . . . ' [JoHa], 'Pretensic fowk gaed primpin' by, Snirkin' at sic a din . . . ' [DH].

Pretoria Day (pre-tō-ree-a-dā) n. commemoration of the taking of Pretoria from the Boers on 5th June 1900. That day coincided with the Tuesday of the Common Riding, and there was a huge parade in the evening in Hawick.

pretty (pri'=ee) adj., arch. crafty, able, worthy – 'The Keeper stood and then did look, And saw them pretty men, Immediately grants their Request, And to his House they came' [CWS] (this was the original meaning).

prey (prā) n., arch., poet. a quantity of cattle or other plunder taken by force – 'Then Kinment Willy and his Friends, they did to England run: Oxen and Kine they brought a Prey out of Northumberland' [CWS].

Price (prīs) n. William M. (19th/20th C.) resident of Minto. In 1906 he contributed to the fund for the renovation of Kirkton Kirk.

prices (prī-seez) n., pl., arch. the average price, in phrases such as 'tawe, three or mony prices' – 'A' things is twae prices or dooble dear in thae times' [GW], 'The kye brought mony prices at the fair' [JL] (see also monie prices).

pricker (pri-kur) n., arch., poet. a fast rider, one who spurs on a horse – 'Jock Ridley ance gaily rode doon To lift my ain horse frae the lea – A riever o' Tynedale renoun, A Ker-handed pricker was he' [T], 'The hunters scoured again the field, The red pricker did stay, And for to kill the poor auld man, His weapons did assay' [JTe].

prickie an jockie (pri-kee-in-jo-kee) n., arch. a children's game played with pins, described as 'similar to Odds or Evens, Teviotd. Prickie denotes the point, and Jockie the head of the pin' (noted by J. Jamieson).

Prickinghaugh (pri-kin-hawch) n. former fortified house in Liddesdale, on the opposite side of the Liddel from Larriston. It may have once been home of Martin Elliot of Braidlie, and is mentioned in a version of the ballad 'Jamie Telfer o' the Fair Dodheid'. Martin Elliot (probably grandson of Martin of Braidlie) was recorded there in 1590. An English letter of 1596 sttes that 'Martin Ellott has erected a strong tower hard by the March, within this twenty or some odd yeares, strongly vawted, att the head of Liddell, with open ventes for traynes of powder. William Elliot from there was recorded in 1618. In 1632 it was listed among the possessions of Hab Henderson. It was among the farms occupied by Walter Scott of Goldielands in the period 1634–47 A later name used for it was 'Breaken Tower'. It was said to have been demolished in 1792 to provide building material for a wall (marked on Gordon's c.1650 map, on Sandison's c.1590 map as 'Pickeringhaw', on Mercator's 1595 map as 'Packing haug' and on Coronelli's 1689 map as 'Prikinghaus'; it is 'Prickenhauch' in 1613, 'Prikenhauch' in 1618, 'Prickinhauche' in 1632 and 'Prinkinghauch' in 1655).

pridefi (prīd-fi) adj., arch. proud, prideful – '. . . That pridefu' priest o' oft pedantic prose' [JoHa], '. . . But dinna be pridefu', but gratefu' To ken ye've been keepit frae wrang' [FL], 'But maybe ye'll find ye'll be better wi' me Than some pridefu young hizzie, baith senseless and slee' [JJ], '. . . whan A'm seek-staaed o the . . . preidfih bluistereen that a body offen hes ti thole' [ECS] (also spelled 'pridefu' ').

priest (preest) n., arch. an urge to defecate without effect – 'A great priest, a strong but ineffectual inclination to go to stool, a tenesmus, Roxb.; in other counties a 'praiss' ' [JoJ].

Priestcroon (preest-croon) n. Priestcrown, former name for Greenbraehead. The origin of the name is obscure, although James Wilson has suggested a link with the chapel dedicated to St. Cuthbert in the Slitrig valley – '. . . While Greenbraeheads (in older time Priestcrown), To meek Crowbyres sends the signal down' [WNK] (e.g. on Stobie's 1770 map and the 1897 Ordnance Survey map).

Priesthaugh (prees-tuf) n. farm in the upper Allan valley, at the southernmost point of the loop in the road from Southfield through to Northhouse. There was once a school here, and a ford was long an alternative to the bridge across the Allan Water nearby. This was the location for the charter signed by James V giving Armstrong's lands to Maxwell after the hanging of Johnnie Armstrong at Caerlenrig (although it is possible this was another place of the same name, the proximity to Caerlenrig and the King's recorded itinerary makes this likely). The lands here were formerly part of the Lairdship of Ringwoodfield and in 1501 Robert Elliot of Redheugh inherited them from his grandfather, with Melrose Abbey holding the superiority. 'Gret Johnnie Ellot' was there in about 1510. Robert Elliot of Redheugh rented the lands from Melrose Abbey around 1557; at that time it was valued at £5. In 1569 it was part of the lands of Gavin Elliot in Skelfhill, with the tenant then being 'Jokke Ellot'. In 1574 the tenants 'Law's Jock' Elliot, Alexander 'Mill' Elliot and 'Law's Tom' Elliot were among men who Robert Elliot of Redheugh had been ordered by the Privy Council to remove from his lands. Simon Wilson is recorded there in 1623. It was recorded as still part of the Lordship of Melrose in 1634, 1653, 1661 and 1663. Thomas Lauder, as well as shepherds James Grieve and William Grieve were recorded there in 1694. John Wilson was shepherd there in 1716. Gideon Scott was there in at least 1753–57 and William Grieve in 1761. It is described in the 1718 survey carried out for the Duchess of Buccleuch, when it consisted of 1864 acres and was bounded by Peilbrae, Dod, Peelbraehope, Braidlie, Langside and Skelfhill. Robert Hall was living there in 1724 and John Scott and John Nichol in 1726–28. Robert Elliot of Midlem Mill leased it from the Buccleuch Estates in 1741. Gideon Scott was farmer there in the latter part of the 18th century. Walter Scott was farmer there in 1785–97 and there were Scotts there in 1821 and around 1860. There were also Hardies in the mid-19th century. About 15 acres of corn there was silted up in the flood of 1846. A spring that lay to the south was once supposed to have healing powers (according to a Presbytery record of 1614). There has been a suggestion that there was once a chapel here (marked in a field to the north of the farm on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map), but there is no evidence for this. Between the farmhouse and Priesthaugh Cottages is an earthwork, on the east side of the burn, measuring about 70 m by 45 m, but washed away on the western side. A cache of gold coins was found on the farm in the late 1700s, later in the possession of Mr. Elliot of Redheugh, and a few years before that a box containing about 120 silver coins was found on the farm. The stuffed 2-headed lamb in the Museum was from here. In nearby remote glens there are several plantations, called Scar Plantation, Pyat Sike Plantation, Brae Plantation, Garden Plantation, Heather Wood and Craw Wood. There have been Ride-outs to this farm – '... Until I turn'd at Priesthaugh Scrogg, And shot their horses in the bog' [SWS] (the origin is likely to be simply the Old English 'preost halh', meaning 'the priest's haugh', although there is no obvious connection with church lands; the name first appears in 1500 as 'Prysthauch', is 'Preistishauch'e in 1530, 'Priestishauch' in 1533, 'Preisthauch' in 1557, 1564, 1569, 1621, 1623, 1660, 1663 and 1693, 'Preistishauche' in 1634, 'Preisthaugh' in 1661 and 'Preisthaugh' in 1694; it is 'Preesthauch' on Blaeu's 1654 map as well as de Wit's c.1680 map of Scotland).

Priesthaugh (prees-tuf) n. Archibald 'Airchie' (16th C.) tenant of Gavin Elliot in Skelfhill who is listed in a bond of 1569 signed in Hawick. He is recorded as 'Arche Preisthauch', and 'Jok' is also listed. The tenant of Priesthaugh ('Jokke Ellot') is separately listed, but presumably the surname derived from that farm in earlier generations. John 'Jock' (16th C.) listed as a tenant of the lands of Gavin Elliot in Skelfhill in 1569, along with Archibald, who was surely a close relative. His name is given as 'Jok Preisthauch'.

Priesthaugh Burn (prees-tuf-burn) n. stream that meets the Skelfhill Burn near Priesthaugh farm, to form the Allan Water. The boggy region at the head of the burn is the Queen's Mire.

Priesthaugh Cottages (prees-tuf-ko'-ee-jeez) n. cottages just south of Priesthaugh farm.

Priesthaugh-hill (prees-tuf-hil) n. steading where the Cauld Cleuch meets the main part of the Priesthaugh Burn, far to the south of Priesthaugh farm. It appears to be in a different position from Priesthaughshiel, which is marked on Stobie's 1770 map further up the burn; however, this may just be an inaccuracy in the map. It is listed in the Ordnance Survey Name Book c.1858, with one of the authorities being William Armstrong, who was shepherd there at that time.

Priesthaugh Schuil (prees-tuf-skil) n. former school a little north of the farm of Priesthaugh, serving the children of the Allan Water and also known as Allan Water School. This was built in the mid-19th century, with a schoolhouse following later, the costs being borne by the Duke of Buccleuch. A log book covering the years 1877–1910 is in the Borders Archive, as well as admission registers for 1892–1946.

Priesthaughshiel (prees-tuf-sheel) n. former steading in the upper part of the Priesthaugh Burn, possibly the same as Priesthaugh-hill. Henry Noble was living there in 1781. Shepherd William Scott died here in the 'Gonial Blast' of 1794. Shepherd Adam Scott and his family were there in at least 1820–29. Andrew Rodger and his extensive family was there in 1841 (it is marked on Stobie's 1770 map).

Priesthaugh Swire (prees-tuf-swIr) n. flat land at the head of the Priesthaugh Burn, probably similar to the Queen's Mire – ''Ride by the gate at Priesthaughswire, And warn the Currors o' the Lee; As ye cum down the Hermitage Slack, Warn doughty Willie o' Gorrinberry'' [T], 'On Penchryst glows a bale of fire, And three are kindling on Priesthaughswire . . . ' [SWS].

Priesthaugh Well (prees-tuf-wel) n. spring near Priesthaugh farm. It probably lay to the south of the present farmhouse, but its exact position cnnot now be ascertained because the 2 springs on the western side of Gray Coat have been piped to provide water to Priesthaugh farm and Priesthaugh Cottages. It was said that this well possessed healing properties and a 1614 record of Jedburgh Presbytery said that people went there for relief 'by charm of priest and miracle'. The name is surely connected with the ridge to the south of Priesthaugh, which is called 'Holywell Rig'.

Priesthill (preest-hil) n. former farmstead in Castleton Parish, to the east of Newcastleton and further up the Whithaugh Burn from Whithaugh. It is marked on Stobie's 1770 map near the feature labelled 'Priesthill Know' on modern maps. James Riddell was there in 1777.

Priest Hill (preest-hil) n. hill in Liddesdale, north-east of Newcastleton, on the southern side of the valley. It reaches a height of 205 m and is topped with a triangulation pillar. On the north-east slopes is an ancient earthwork consisting of an enclosure about 240 ft by 170 ft, with a double bank and significant ditch. It is similar to the structure on nearby Kirk Hill.

Priesthill Knowe (preest-hil-burn) n. small hill in Liddesdale, just to the east of Little Whithaugh, to the east of Newcastleton.

Prieston (prees-tin) n. farm just north of Midlem in Bowden Parish, the land having once been the property of Kelso Abbey. Andrew Douglas was there in 1628. In 1678 the South part was owned by William Douglas and the North part by Robert Kerr. It later became property of the Scotts of Harden, sold in about 1912 (the origin of the name is the Old English 'preost tun', meaning 'priest's farm'; it first occurs as 'Prestowne' in 1567 and 'Prestoune' in 1586).

Priestrig (preest-rig) n. farmstead between Stouslie and Stintyknowe. Befote the division of Wilton Common, the land there formed the 'headroom' of Stouslie farm. After the Common was divided in 1765, it was set aside for the use of the minister of Wilton; the farmhouse was probably only built after this point (since there is nothing marked on maps in 1764 and 1770). John Scott was living there in 1790. A schoolmaster was recorded there in 1803 (probably being the same as the school elsewhere described being at Stouslie). A family called Bryson may have lived there in the early 1800s. The farmstead was also sometimes known as Wilton Common (e.g. in the 1861 census). Thomas Scott was farmer there in 1841, 1851 and 1861. The outlying parish school situated at Stouslie was also sometimes known as 'Priestrig Schuil' – 'There's Lockie o' the Stinty Knowes, There's Nicol o' Dick-neuk, And Bryson o' the Priestrig, And Hall into the Heap' [DJG] (sometimes spelled 'Priestrigg' or 'Priest Rigg'; the 'rig' presumably refers to a strip of ploughland).

Priestrig Moss (preest-rig-mos) n. boggy area at Priestrig. The 1765 report on the perambulation of Wilton Common states that 'the west side of the Priestrig-moss' lay along the boundary.

Priestrig-shot (preest-rig-sho') n. former name for a piece of land at Priestrig. It is stated to be on 'the south west march of Cowdhouse, at the Priestrig-shot' in the 1765 description of the boundaries of Wilton Common.

the Priest's Grave (thu-preests-grāv) n. popular name for an extremely old gravestone in Cavers Auld Kirkyard. It was peculiar for being arranged in a direction perpendicular to the others, had a flat top, and contained the date (believed to be spurious) 1517 in the bottom corner. It lay near the east gate, but it is unclear whether it still survives. Several stories were attached to it (as reccounted by Sir James Murray), e.g. a connection with the Knights Templar, or someone who wanted to be first out of the churchyard at the resurrection.

prig (prig) v., poet. to haggle, bargain – '. . . the landlord had the assurance to charge two-pence for my bed, and I could not prig him a halfpenny down' [JR], 'An' efter prigging doon its price, A bargain forthwith made; Bestrode its back, an' homeward bound Wi' conscious pride he rade' [FL]. prignickitie (prig-ni-ki-tee) adj., arch. fastidious (noted by J. Jamieson).

primp-ma-dye (primp-mu-dI) n., arch. a haughty and affected woman (in [HNe1954]).

Primrose (prim-rōz) n. Gilbert (c.1535–1616) prominent Scottish surgeon. He was Serjeant-Surgeon to King James VI and was Deacon of the Incorporation of Surgeons and Barbers of Edinburgh. His brass mortar (engraved 'GILBERT PRIMROS CHIRURGIEN 1569') was found in a field near Hawick and held by the Hawick Museum until presented to Lord Rosebury (a direct descendent) in about 1899. The original is in the National Museum of Scotland, with a replica at Surgeon's Hall. Rev. James Bartholomew (1889–1974) born in Edinburgh, of of Rev. James and Margaret Bartholomew. He was educated at Glasgow High School, Glasgow University (where he graduated M.A. in 1909) and Glasgow College. He was licensed by the United Free Presbytery of Glasgow in 1914 and was assistant at Aberdeen South 1914–15. He then served as a missionary in India, at Alibag, Jalna, Bombay Wilson College and Poona Theological College. He was a garrison chaplain in Poona 1941–46, then Librarian at New College Edinburgh from 1946. He was inducted as minister at Kirkton in 1951 and in 1955 moved to Roberton. He remained until his retirenemt in 1960. He was a member of the London and Edinburgh Bibliographical Societies. In 1918 he married Mary Campbell Mellis, youngest daughter of Rev. George Smith of Swatow, China. Their children were Robert Cairns (1921–42) and Margaret Mary (b.1925). He died in New Zealand.

Primrose Cottages (prim-rōz-ko'-ee-jeez) n. two isolated cottages, formerly for railway workers, to the west of the Waverley Line shortly after Stobs. The plantation just to the north is Primrose Wood.

Primside (prim-sīd) n. farm between Morebattle and Yetholm, in Morebattle Parish. There is an adjacent loch (also called Yetholm Loch) and hill of the same name. The lands are also known as 'Primsideloch'. They were owned by a branch of the Rule family until passed to the Kers around 1430, with the final charter of 1439 granting Andrew Ker of Altonburn the 4 parts resigned by the co-heiresses of the late Andrew Rule. Ralph Ker of 'Prymsydloche' was involved with an indenture for lands in the Barony of Synton in 1510. Gilbert Ker of Primside Loch purchased the Mains of Spittal-on-Rule from Sir William Douglas of Cavers in 1563. It was among farms burned by the English in 1542 (the origin is probably from the p-Celtic 'pren wynn', meaning 'white wood' and the Old English 'set' for house; it is first recorded as 'Prenwensete' around 1200; it is 'Promset' in 1391, 'Promside' in 1429/30, 'Prymside' in 1526, 'Primsidlouch' in 1552, 'Prumsydloucht' in 1532, 'Primsydlouch' in 1560 and 'Prymsydloch' in 1564/5).

Prince Charles (prins-chaw-rulz) n. (1948–) eldest son of Queen Elizabeth, he is Prince of Wales. He visited Hawick in 2019.

Prince Leopold (prins-lee-u-pōld) n. of the Belgians (1790–1865), full name His Royal Highness Leopold George Frederick, Prince of Saxe-Coburg. He visited Britain in 1815 and the following year married Charlotte, daughter of George IV, was created Duke of Kendal and made a General in the British Army. He became King of Belgium in 1831, and also was made an Honorary Burgess as he passed through Hawick in 1819, his carriage being pulled through town by several Teries, and Bet Young composing a commemorative poem – 'His Royal Highness landed here On the seventeenth of September; Our flags displayed, the bells did ring, As thousands will remember' [BY].

the Prince's Knowe (thu-prin-seez-now) n. former name for a rising piece of ground near Bonchester Hill, where Prince Charlie is said to have encamped when his force marched through the area.

Princess Anne (prin-ses-awn) n. (1950–) the Princess Royal, as President of the British Knitting and Clothing Export Council she has visited Hawick several times. She was at Glebe Mills in 1988. In 1993 she officially opened the major modernisations carried out at the High School.

Princess Christian (prin-ses-kris-tyin) n. (1846–1923) Helena, third daughter of Queen Victoria, who married Prince Christian of Schleswig Holstein Sonderburg Augustenburg in 1866. She came to Hawick to open the Hummelknowes Bridge in 1869.

Princess Christian's Brig (prin-ses-kris-tyinz-brig) n. name once used for the Hummelknowes Bridge over the Slitrig.

Princes Street (prin-ses-stree', -seez-) n. main street through Wilton. Originally it referred only to the row of houses on the south side of the eastern end, which was built in 1871. The street was significantly altered and renumbered in the early 1970s, with the incorporation of Wilton Place, Albion Place, Ladylaw Place and part of Wilton Crescent – 'Somebody telt Wullie there wuz a big Hogmanay pairty in the gairdins at Princes St.' [JCo] (named after members of the Royal family).

the Principals (thu-prin-si-pulz) n. the main participants during the Common Riding, usually referring to the Cornet and Right- and Left-Hand Men, with sometimes also the Acting Father included. The first known photograph of the Principals was taken in 1857. The stabling of their horses was first undertaken by the Council in 1929. More recently stables have been provided at the top of the Mill Path. Latterly the term has been used to include the main female principals.

Pringle (pring-ul) n. Adam (18th/19th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He married Mary Hislop and their unnamed son was baptised in Roberton in 1780. He was at Howpasley in 1781 when his daughter Margaret was baptised. Perhaps the same Adam secondly married Margaret Henderson in Roberton in 1789 and was recorded at Philhopeshiel in that year. This couple's children included William (b.1789), John (b.1792), Andrew (b.1793), Jeany (b.1795), Elizabeth (b.1797), Robert (b.1799), Margaret (b.1801) and Isabel (b.1805). He could be the Adam, son of William, baptised in Roberton in 1759. Adam (1799–1886) son of Robert and Janet Burnet. He was a shepherd at Howpasley and in the Ettrick valley. He was recorded at Old Howpasley in 1841 and 1851 and was at Over Dalgleish in 1861. In 1827 in Roberton he married Janet (1805–65), daughter of Adam Scott and Elizabeth Nichol. Their children included: Janet B. (b.1828/9); Elizabeth (b.1830, or 'Betty'), who married John Nicholson; Robert (b.1833); Adam Scott (b.1834); Margaret (b.1836); William (b.1838); Helen (b.1840); John (b.1843); Thomas (b.1844); and Gideon Scott (1846–1922), shepherd. He died at Over Dalgleish. Adam (1818–84) toll-keeper at the Townfoot Toll-bar in Newcastleton in 1861. In 1851 he was a shepherd at Shankfoot, and he also worked as a labourer. In 1844 he married Mary, daughter of Newcastleton joiner John Cavers. Adam (19th C.) married Jane Little in Wilton Parish in 1847. Alexander 'Sandy' (15th C.) son of Robert of Smailholm. He served as a squire of the Douglases, along with his brother George, e.g. the pair witnessed a charter for Archibald, Earl of Douglas in 1433/4 and in 1451 had a passport for safe conduct to accompany the Earl in England. Along with George he was on an assize for lands in Bemersyde in 1425. In 1456 he was on the panel made by George Douglas, Earl of Angus, which acquitted Andrew Ker of Altonburn, who had been accused of assisting the English. He may be the Alexander 'Pringill' who witnessed a document between Henry Wardlaw and the Kers of Cessford in 1468. Alexander of Torsonce (d.bef. 1530) early member of the family from the lands near Stow. In 1526 he was 'Alexander Hoppringill, in Torsonse' when he was cited for involvement in the 'Battle of Skirmish Field' and the death of Ker of Cessford. His sons John, James, George and Adam and his 'sister-son' James are also mentioned, along with George Chisholme of that Ilk and 8 others, who were probably all on the side of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch. It seems that he was not convicted of any wrongdoing. He could be the Alexander 'Hoppringill' who served as attorney for the Homes of Wedderburn in sasines of 1506 and 1510, and who was listed on an instrument for John of Swinton in 1520. Alexander of Trinlyknowe (16th/17th C.) married Bessie Scott. In 1620 he wadset his lands to Walter Scott of Todrig, who in turn sold them to Andrew Riddell of that Ilk in 1622. Witnesses included his brothers Thomas and Robert. He was succeeded by his son, Robert of Chapelhill. He was probably son of Thomas and great-grandson of Roger of Trinlyknowe, who fell at Flodden. Alexander of Whytbank (1632/3–89) only lawful son of James of Whytbank. He was served heir to his father in 1667. He and his wife were supporters of the Covenant. He was a Commissioner for raising money for Cromwell in Scotland in 1655 and became a J.P. for the counties of Edinburgh and Selkirk. In 1662 he was still 'younger' when he was fined £3,000 and given a pardon by the King. In 1683 he was listed among the heritors of the Regality of Melrose. He married Anna, daughter of James of Torwoodlee, and she died in 1680. He secondly married Anne, sister of James Murray of Philiphaugh; after his death she married Robert Rutherford of Bowland. He had no children, and succession went to John, grandson of his uncle George of Balmungo. Alexander of Whytbank (1701–73) only son of John. He was made a Burgess and Guild Brother of Edinburgh in 1739. In 1744 he was granted the teinds of lands in Stow (including Hoppringle) following the abolition of Episcopacy. However, he was forced to sell Yair. In 1759 he inherited lands in Hillslap from Janet Cairncross. In 1761 he was recorded as a Commissioner for Selkirkshire. In 1764 he subscribed to Sir Robert Douglas' 'Peerage of Scotland'. In 1739 he married Susanna, daughter of Sir John Rutherford of that Ilk and Edgerston. His children were: John, who succeeded; Alexander, who succeeded his brother; Patrick, surgeon with the East India Company; William, who was in the navy; Elizabeth, Eleanor, Susanna and Cairncross-Mary, who all died unmarried; Christian, who married Robert Pasley; Joanna, who married Alexander Hay; and Charlotte, who married Thomas Payne. Alexander of Whytbank and Yair (1747–1827) born at Yair, 2nd son of Alexander and Susanna Rutherford of Edgerston. He entered the service of the East India Company in 1766, but retired before 1790, having succeeded his brother John and making his fortune. He paid the land tax for Whytbank and other lands in 1785. He bought back the Yair estate from the Duke of Buccleuch and built a new mansion there. He was listed among the voters of Selkirkshire in 1788. He was taxed for owning a carriage and horses in the 1780s and 90s, for having dogs in 1797, and for having a female servant in 1788, 2 in 1789, 1 in 1790 and 3 in 1791, as well as a male servant in 1788, 2 in 1790, 3 in 1791–94 and 4 in 1797. He was Captain of the Selkirkshire Yeomanry Cavalry (volunteers) for several years until they were disbanded in 1802 and was also Vice-Lieutenant of Selkirkshire. He was apparently visiting the Lord Lieutenant of Selkirkshire (Lord Napier) at Wilton Lodge on the day of the False Alarm, the 2 riding off together to Selkirk after the butler coolly announced 'My lord, supper is on the table, and the beacon's blazing'. In the Land Tax Rolls of 1802 he was recorded paying tax at 'Whitebank, Bashawmill and Thornhole', as well as Yair and Mill. He was a Commissioner of Supply for Selkirkshire from at least 1802. He was recorded as a freeholder in the Michaelmas Head-Court of Jedburgh in 1811. In 1812 he became Chamberlain of Ettrick Forest. He was suspected of being involved in getting the Galashiels men to switch sides at the Carterhaugh Baa in 1815. He and his son Alexander were listed as Commissioners of Selkirkshire in 1819. He was recorded at Yair in 1825 in relation to a ballot for men to serve in the militia. He was listed as proprietor of Yair in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. He was recorded in letters of 1826 requesting records for the Selkirkshire Yeomanry. In 1789 he married Mary, daughter of Sir Alexander Dick of Prestonfield. Their children were: Alexander (b.1791), who succeeded and was a friend of Sir Walter Scott; John Alexander (b.1792), lawyer with the Bengal Civil Service, whose poetic contributions were printed privately as 'Remains of John Alexander Pringle, Esq.' (1841); William Alexander (b.1793), also with the Bengal Civil Service; Mary Agnes (b.1794), unmarried; Susanna (b.1795), who married R.S. Moncrieff, younger of Fossaway; Jane (b.1797), unmarried; Elizabeth (b.1798), who married C.M. Christie of Durie; and Charlotte (b.1799); Margaret Janet (b.1801), who married barrister William Elmsley; Robert Keith (b.1802), with the East India Company; and David (b.1806), also with the Bengal Civil Service, who later purchased Wilton Lodge. He and his sons were well known to Sir Walter Scott, and are referred to in the introduction to Canto II of 'Marmion'. Alexander 'Sandy' of Whytbank (1791–1857), J.P., eldest son of Alexander of Whytbank. He was present at the Carterhaugh Baa in 1815. He was Vice-Lieutanant for Selkirkshire and also Lord of the Treasury for Scotland. He was probably also Captain of the Selkirkshire Yeomanry, like his father before him (with letters related to this in the Walter Mason Collection). He was a Conservative in politics. He was M.P. for Selkirkshire 1830–32 and 1835–46, being defeated by Pringle of Clifton in 1832. He became a member of the Jedforest Club in 1835. He attended the 1839 banquet held at Branxholme to honour the Duke of Buccleuch. He was a friend of Sir Walter Scott, accompanying him and Scott of Gala to the field of Waterloo not long after the battle. Scott presented him with a copy of Satchells' 'True History . . . ' in 1830, stating 'I am very much obliged to you for the remarks on my ancestor, which I wish you would one day complete'. He married his cousin, Agnes Joanna, 2nd daughter of Sir William Dick of Prestonfield. He had one son, Alexander (b.1837), who succeeded to Whytbank and Yair. Rev. Alexander David (1828–1908) only son of David of Wilton Lodge. He was minister at Blakeney, Gloucestershire. He married Mary Louisa, daughter of Rev. Charles Mackenzie. Their children were: Charles David; Henry Arthur; John Archibald; Fanny Christina; Henrietta Louisa; Isabella Margaret; Amy Cecilia; and Katherine Helen. Alexander of Whytbank (1837–1898) only son of Alexander. In 1870 he married his cousin Mary-Arbuthnot, daughter of Robert Keith Pringle. He had no children, and the estates of Whytbank and Yair went to his widow's brother William, who sold Yair. Alexander 'Sandy' (1876–1962) Burns Club Treasurer for 37 years. He also held all other offices at the club and the Pringle Hall was named in his honour. Andrew 'Dand' of Galashiels and Smailholm (d.1585/6) son of John, he was 8th Laird of Smailholm. In 1566 he had a grant of the lands of Galashiels and Mossielee. He signed the General Band against thieves in 1571. He was served heir to his father John in the lands of Pilmuir and Blackchester in 1573. In 1574 he was on the retours for Walter Scott of Branxholme as heir to his great-uncle David Scott, as well as his great-grandfather Sir Walter Scott. In 1575 he was the first of the Hoppringles listed to appear to answer the feud with the Elliots. In 1581 he and his wife entered William Ker, minister of Lindean, in a tenement in Galashiels. In 1582 he was on a list of 37 Border Lairds summoned to appear before the Privy Council. And in 1583/4 he was 'Andro Hoppringle of Gallowscheillis' when summoned to appear before the Council with other Border Lairds. He married Mariota (or Marion), daughter of John, 5th Lord Borthwick. His children included: Sir James, who succeeded; Robert of Howlatstown; and Isabella, who married George Pringle of Blindlee. There is a life-size effigy of him over his tomb at Melrose Abbey. After his death his widow married Robert Pringle, tutor of Blindlee and thirdly married John Home. He was 'of Smalhame, goodman of Gallowscheills' when his will was registered in Edinburgh in 1586/7. Rev. Andrew (1616/7–89) graduating from Edinburgh University in 1635, he was 'on the exercise' (i.e. assistant) at Kirkcaldy in 1639, became Chaplain to the Earl of Angus, and may also have been an assistant in the Presbytery of Selkirk. He became minister at Kirkton in 1646. There was some dispute with the parishioners though, since the heritors had to be ordered to pay him his teinds soon afterwards. Then in 1649 he was presented to Castleton, being admitted there the following year. In 1662 he witnessed the testament of William Elliot of Harwood. He was one of the few conformist local ministers who were not ousted in the early 1660s, in other words he accepted Episcopacy. He was recorded in a bond in 1673. He married Janet Scott in 1648. Their children included Jean, who married John Buchanan of that Ilk, and Elizabeth, who married Colin Campbell of Carwhin. Andrew of Clifton (17th/18th C.) also described as 'in Haining'. He was the 2nd son of Mark of Clifton and succeeded his brother Mark in 1685. He was apprenticed to a merchant in Edinburgh in 1642. In 1685 he was involved in a court case involving his niece Janet, who had apparently been promised to a Lieutenant in the King's Guard, but instead had eloped with her 13-year-old cousin Andrew Pringle and married over the Border. He was also imprisoned in 1685 for the marriage of his son in England, but got off with a fine. In 1689 he was appointed a Commissioner for ordering the Militia and was a Commissioner of Supply 1689–1704. He invested in the Darien Scheme. In 1699 he purchased the remains of Linton from Henry Ker and his son Andrew. In 1701 he purchased from Andrew Riddell the lands of Haining, for his 2nd son, John. He was probably the Andrew of Clifton who was deceased in 1708 when his son andrew became a goldsmith's apprentice in Edinburgh in 1708. However, he also appears to have been one of the founder members of the 'Honest Country Club' in 1711, along with John of Haining, who was probably his son. He may be the Andrew who was Chamberlain for the Scotts of Buccleuch for the Ettrick Forest parishes 1715–17. In 1685 he married Violet, daughter of John Rutherford of Edgerston and sister of Thomas Rutherford of Wells. Their children included: Robert, who succeeded; John of Haining; Mark of Crichton, who was British Consul in Spain; Barbara, who married James Nasmyth of Dawyck; Jean, who married Thomas Douglas of Cavers; Margaret (d.1749), who died unmarried; and Christian (d.1753), who also died unmarried. Andrew Lord Alemoor (d.1776) eldest son of John of the Haining. He let his brother John succeed to the Haining. He became an advocate in 1740, 10 years later becoming Sheriff of Wigtonshire and then

Selkirkshire. He became Senator of the College of Justice, Solicitor-General for Scotland and Judge of the Court of Session. In 1756 he was made a Burgess and Guild Brother of Edinburgh, gratis, in right of his father and 'for good services'. He was recorded as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire in 1761. He was raised to the bench as Lord Alemoor, since he had acquired that property. His lands in Roxburghshire were valued at £466 18s 4d. In 1764 he subscribed to Sir Robert Douglas' 'Peerage of Scotland'. He was said by Dr. Somerville to be the most admired speaker at the Scottish Bar in the middle of the 18th century. He married his cousin Violante, daughter of Mark Pringle, Bitish Consul in Spain; however, she died in 1753, leaving no children. He died at his home of Hawkhill near Edinburgh. His lands went to his brother John of Haining. A marble bust of him is in the Court of Session in Edinburgh. Andrew (18th/19th C.) farmer at Orchard in Cavers Parish. He was recorded there in 1796 when one of his children was baptised. He was also recorded there as owner of 5 horses on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Additionally he was taxed for having a non-working dog in 1797. He may have married Alexander Gow. His children included: Anthony (b.1796); Margaret Ann (b.1798); James Hall (b.1801); Cicely (b.1803); and Isabella (b.1805). Andrew (b.c.1780s) ploughman at Easter Parkhill, recorded on the ballot for the Militia in Roberton Parish in 1812. Andrew (19th C.) resident of Bridge Street in 1867 when he donated 6 copper coins to the Museum. He may be the Andrew (b.c.1835) from Stow who was a wool spinner living at 24 High Street in 1861. Perhaps the same 'Andrew Pringle, Esq.' donated a 'Spanish copper coin of Isabella II, and copy of The Caledonian Musical Museum' to the Museum in 1870 and other books in 1871, as well as an 'Indian bag, made of seeds by children of India' in 1872. Angelique Lucille (1846–1920) born in Hawick, daughter of Thomas Kedie and Lucille Kennedy. At age 17 she went to India as a hostess to her uncle, who was governor of Calcutta. She also apparently crossed the Sahara desert by camel. She was a nurse at St. Thomas's, London, starting in 1868, moving to the Edinburgh Royal Infirmary in 1872 (where she became Matron) and returning to St. Thomas's in 1887 as Matron. However, she resigned in 1890, when she converted to Catholicism. Afterwards she travelled the world advising on nursing issue. She was the founder of the Training School for Nurses at the Royal Infirmary, and sometimes credited with establishing the modern method of hospital nursing. She was a personal friend and devotee of Florence Nightingale, who called her 'Pearl' and 'Little Sister'. Her letters are in the British Museum. There is a memorial brass tablet in the chapel of the Royal Infirmary. Ann (18th/19th C.) grocer and draper on the High Street, listed in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. She could be the same shopkeeper listed at West Port on the 1841 census, probably married to Robert and with daughter Margaret. Archibald of Whytbank (17th/18th C.) became a Burgess of Hawick in 1724, presumably this being Honorary. This may be an error for Alexander. David of Smailholm and Pilmuir (d.1480) son of Robert, he succeeded his brother Robert in the 1470s. However, he is recorded as being of Smailholm or of Pilmuir several times through the 1440s, 50s and 60s. Along with his brothers George and Alexander he accompanied William, Earl of Douglas to the Papal Jubiliee in Rome in 1450 and in 1451 had a passport for safe conduct to accompany the Earl in England. In 1457 he attached his seal to an indenture by George, Earl of Angus, appointing Andrew Ker of Cessford as Bailie of the Lordship of Jedforest, since Ker did not have a seal of his own. He served as Ranger of the Ward of Tweed in the 1460s. In 1463 he was on the panel of retour for Archibald Douglas, 5th Earl of Angus, as heir to his father. In 1464/5 he was one of the witnesses to the sasine granting Kirkton Mains and the Flex to William Douglas of Drumlanrig. In 1468 he had a charter for the lands of Pilmuir. In 1471 he was a witness at Borthwickshiels of the infeftment of Walter, son and heir of Andrew Ker of Cessford. In 1474 he was summoned to Edinburgh by the King, probably relating to keeping peace on the Border. In 1479 he gave his seal to an obligation involving the Kers of Cessford. He may be the David 'junior' who in 1478 had his fine remitted for killing deer at his wedding. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir William Dishington of Ardross. In their old house in Galashiels there was said to be this inscription – 'Elspeth Dishington Builded me. In syn lye not: The things thou canst not get, Desyre not'. His children included: James, who succeeded; Adam of St. John's Chapel; and Thomas of Wrangholm (recorded as a witness in about the 1490s). David of Tinnis (d.1512) natural son of James of Smailholm, and brother of David of Smailholm, being sometimes called 'senior' in distinction. He was tenant of the lands of Tinnis or Tynnes in the Yarrow valley. He was Ranger of the Ward and later made Receiver of the whole Forest. He was witness in 1484/5 to a sasine for lands at Mangerton to Walter Scott of Branxholme; James Pringle was also a witness, along with several other local men. He leased the lands of Torwoodlee and Toftness in 1486, along with his wife Mariota. He may be the David who is recorded along with William on a document relating to Ruecastle in 1491. He may be the same 'David Hoppringill in Tynnes' who was one of the 'Sheriffs of Roxburgh in that part' in a charter of 1494 for lands in Hassendean and the same 'in le Tynnes' who was one of 4 men who held lands in Boonraw, which passed to Robert Scott of Stirches in 1504/5. In 1494/5 he served as surety for men called Mark from Tinnis. He was also recorded in 1494/5 as Coroner for Tweeddale at the Justice-aire held in Selkirk; he was fined for not producing Archibald Ormiston. He was recorded several times around 1500 in the Exchequer Rolls in regard to lands in Yarrow and as ranger of the Ward of Tweed. In 1501 he was recorded entering William Tait in Edinburgh for a set of crimes. In 1502 he leased the lands of Galashiels, Blindlee and Mossielee. Also in 1502 he was fined at the Justice-aire for failing to enter Richard Davidson in Primside and additionally was surety for David in Ern Cleuch and Roger in Trinlyknow. He also served as surety at the Justice-aire in Selkirk in 1505. In 1508 'Dauid Hoppringill in Tenneis' was on the panel for Adam Hepburn inheriting the Lordship of Liddesdale, and is probably the same David who witnessed the associated sasine. He was re-assigned Tinnis in 1509. In 1509 he was on the panel for Adam Hepburn inheriting Alemoor, witnessed charters for Colville of Ochiltree and was mentioned in a charter for William, son of James of Smailholm. And in 1510 David 'of Tynnes' is recorded having 5 horses stolen from him by Thomas Dalgleish in Braidhaugh. He also had oxen stolen from him at 'Bochill' (possibly 'Bowhill'). In 1512 he gave his consent to a charter for lands in Ettrick Forest being granted to the Commendator of Kelso. He may have married Mariota Murray of Philiphaugh. David of Galashiels and Smailholm (d.c.1535) eldest son of James and brother of William of Torwoodlee. He was sometimes called 'junior', to distinguish him from David of Tinnis. In 1507–10 he leased the crown lands of Galashiels, Mossielee and Blindlee. In 1510 he had a charter for lands in Ettrick Forest as well as for rentals in Lauderdale. Also in 1510 he was among Pringles and others convicted of cutting down part of Ettrick Forest. He lost brothers, a son and a brother-in-law at Flodden. In 1519 he was among the large group of Borderers who rode against the Earl of Arran and in 1526 in the group that tried to free the boy King from the Douglases near Melrose (at Pringle's Bridge). He signed a bond in 1525 to support the Earl of Angus as Warden of the Marches. Also in 1525 he was on the panel of retour for Gordon of Stichill, along with James and George. He is recorded in documents in the 'Selkirk Protocol Books' in 1527, mentioning John as his heir. In 1532 he resigned his lands of Caverhill into the hands of their superior. He is probably the David who witnessed a document for Melrose Abbey in 1534. Through marriage he gained Woodhouse in Peeblesshire and Whytbank and Redhead in Selkirkshire. He was married twice, his first wife being Marion and his second Margaret, daughter of Sir Thomas Lundie. His children were: David, who died at Flodden; John, who succeeded; James of Woodhouse and Whytbank; William; Agnes; Christian, who married John Rutherford of Hunthill; Janet, who married George Brown of Coalston; and Margaret. In 1529 he appointed his wife, Margaret, and first-born son with her, James, as executors, with his moveable goods to go to his 4 daughters. In 1541 his widow Margaret Clunie and son James claimed tenancy of Reidhead farm in Tweeddale. David of Smailholm (d.1513) eldest son of David of Galashiels and Smailholm. His brothers included John of Galashiels and James of Whytbank. He was killed at Flodden. David (d.bef. 1623) eldest son of Sir James of Galashiels. He married Margaret, daughter of 'Auld Wat' Scott of Harden, while she was still a minor. He died shortly afterwards (and before his father), with his widow having a marriage contract with Sir William McDougall of Makerstoun in 1623. David (16th C.) listed in the 1574 last testament of Sir Walter of Branxholme. He was probably a factor or chamberlain or held some similar position. David of Torquhan (19th C.) owner of lands on Gala Water that had traditionally belonged to the Pringles. He was tenant farmer at Hyndlee for about 17 years in the later 1800s. One of his children was Col. Hall-Grant (b.1876). Maj. David of Carriber (1790–1876) eldest son of John of Carriber and Mary Walker. He was born at Cranston, Midlothian. He served with the 7th Regiment of Bengal Native Infantry and retired with the rank of Major in 1835. He was probably the Maj. Potts who was at Hawick in 1837 for the election (at which there was so much trouble from the crowd). He had one brother who died in India, and another who was Robert, farmer at Bairnkine, Southdean. He became a member of the Jedforest Club in 1830. He left Carriber to his nephew, John. David (1806–89) of Wilton Lodge, which he inherited through marrying James Anderson's daughter, Mary. He was son of Alexander of Whytbank and Mary Dick, and younger brother of Alexander of Yair. He was born at Yair, youngest of 11 children, and educated in Selkirk and then in England, at Durham Grammar School and Haileyburgh College. He trained as a lawyer and in 1824 started service with the East India Company, surviving the fire on his ship 'The Kent', on which about 100 people perished. He worked as a magistrate in several locations. Returning to Britain for 3 years in 1839, he stayed at Friarshaugh near Melrose. He was then judge at Purneah and left India for the last time in 1851 with a pension and the rank of Lieutenant Colonel in the Bengal Infantry. He settled in Hawick after marrying the heiress of Wilton Lodge estate. He was responsible for the extensive remodelling of Wilton Lodge in 1859, including the monagrammed letters 'DMP' (presumably for 'David and Mary Pringle') and biblical quotations; he was quite religious, being filled, it is said, with 'the love of country, the love of letters, the love of God'. In 1861 he gave a talk at the Archæological Society on the glacier of the Alps (which he had visited), illustrated by photographs and was a Life Member of the Society by 1863. He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1863. In 1866 he loaned to the Museum for its temporary exhibition: 'an immense number of costly articles, and nick-nacks of Chinese and Indian workmanship, including and Indian stick of office, presented by Dowish Rao Scindiah [Shrimant Daulat Rao Scindia] to the late Mr Anderson, of Wilton Lodge; a Sanscrit MS., 120 feet in length, exhibiting by illumination and penmanship the entire Hindoo mythology. This is certainly among the most extraordinar and perfectly executed MS. in existence. A copy of the four Gospels in Arabic and Latin. Mr Pringle shows, among other choice articles of European manufacture, an inkstand which belonged to Queen Charlotte'. He was recorded at Wilton Lodge in a directory of 1868 and in 1875 when he donated '2 Roman silver coins' to the Museum. A keen horseman, he can be seen on horseback at the stables of Wilton Lodge in a photo, probably in the 1880s. He became known locally as a philanthropist. He was Chairman or Governor of at least three Hawick savings banks, including Hawick Working Men's Building and Investment Co., Ltd. (1864–89), Hawick Savings Bank (1865–89) and Hawick Heritable Investment Bank, Ltd. (1876–89). He was also Chairman of Wilton Parochial Board and of Hawick Combination Poorhouse. He was a member of the Jedforest Club and served as a Commissioner of Supply and Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire, as well as being on the county Prison Board. He was a Vice-President of the local division of the Evangelical Alliance. After his death the Town purchased Wilton Lodge from his trustees, and the present house is much as it was when he lived there. In 1827 he married Frances, daughter of Alexander Tod of Alderston, and she died in 1856 at Pau. In 1858 he secondly married Mary, heiress of James Anderson of Wilton Lodge. His children were: Rev. Alexander David; Amy Elizabeth, who married Rev. H.C. Ripley; and Frances Jane, who married James Christie and secondly Theobold von Fischer. His boot jack is in the Museum and portraits of his family were donated to the Museum in 2023. David (b.1839) younger son of James Hall and Jane Hogarth. He farmed at Cleithaugh in Southdean Parish. His wife was Jane and their children included: Hall G.; Frances E. and Dorothy M. Douglas see John Douglas Francis (18th C.) Sheriff-Depute for Roxburghshire. He was a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire in 1685. George (d.c.1459) son of Robert of Pilmuir and Smailholm. In 1427 he was part of the inquest for William being served heir to his father Sir William Douglas of Drumlanrig in the Barony of Hawick; there he is 'Jeorgeum de Hoppryngile'. Along with his brother Alexander he was a squire for the Earl of Douglas. He is recorded as 'George Hoppryngile', attorney to Archibald, Earl of Douglas (or possibly Alexander Murray, since the transcription is ambiguous) in 1428/9. The document was the 'instrument of sasine' for the Barony of Hawick being served to William, son of Sir William Douglas of Drumlanrig. In 1429/30 he is probably the George 'Hoppryngile' who was on the 'retour' panel for the lands of Caverton. He witnessed (along with his brother Alexander) a charter for the Earl of Douglas in 1433/4. In 1437 he was one of 2 'procurators' for Alexander of Weens when he resigned his lands of Weens into the hands of the Baron of Hawick. He witnessed a document for Oswald Abernethy, made before the Earl of Douglas in 1446/7, relating to the lands of Teindside and Harwood. His name appears several times in connection with the Douglases through to the 1450s, e.g. in 1451 he had a passport for safe conduct to accompany the Earl in England. He was the first Master Ranger of the Ward of Tweed. He is probably the George of 'Hoppringill' who was on the panel in 1456 that acquitted Andrew Ker of Altonburn of the charge of helping the English to burn lands around Jedburgh. Either he or an earlier George was 'scutiferus' in a document for Melrose Abbey in 1415. George (15th C.) witness to the sasine for the Barony of Hawick given to James Douglas of Drumlanrig in 1484 at the Mote. His name is recorded as 'Georgio de Pryngyle'. It is unclear which branch of the family he belonged to. Possibly the same 'Georgio Pringyll' witnessed another document for the Douglases of Drumlanrig in 1501, relating to the lands of Lairs. George of Torwoodlee (1505–68) son of William, the first Laird, who was killed at Flodden. In 1526 he was among the large number of Borderers pardoned for their march (along with the Homes and Walter Scott of Branxholme) against the Earl of Arran. In 1530 it is recorded that he had captured Archibald Armstrong, probably in the raid led by James V, and was allowed to keep the horse of this 'commoun theif and revar'. In 1534 he brought a case against a woman in Selkirk for theft. In 1535 he was involved in a dispute with the Burgh of Selkirk and in 1540 had a dispute over sheep on his lands. In 1541 he was tenant of Caddonlee in Tweed, as well as claiming Torwoodlee. He is probably the 'George Hoppringle' who signed a bond of assurance with Somerset at Kelso in 1547, along with many other Border lairds. Also in 1547 he witnessed a document with other Pringles (in the Selkirk Protocol Books). In 1548 he was 'found surety' for the crime of helping 'our ancient enemies of England'. He was implicated in the murder of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch in Edinburgh in 1552, accused of providing 2 horses to aid the escape of the Laird of Cessford. He was himself murdered by Elliots and others, perhaps led by Martin Elliot of Braidlie. In 1564 he was 'Guidman of Torwodlie' when listed among Border lairds who were ordered to support the warden, Ker of Cessford. He is recorded in 1607 as 'George Hoppringill of Torwoidlie' at the trial for his murder. The action was brought by his grandsons George, James and David, against John Elliot of Copshaw; it is unclear why there was such a lengthy delay, but in 1570 a 'day of law' to decide the matter ended in a fight with many injuries and the Privy Council summoned representatives of the Pringles and Elliots in 1575 to settle the feud. The other men named, 'Martin's Hob' and 'the Laird's Jock', were presumably already dead by the time of the 1607 trial. The claim was that he was killed in a raid on Torwoodlee by about 300 men 'of the haill Clannis of the Airmestrangis, Ellotes, Batiesones, Grahames and remanent Clannis', who grabbed him out of his bed and took him to 'Skaldeneise' where they killed him, after ransacking his estate. He married Margaret Crichton of Cranston Riddell and had 10 children, including William (who succeeded) and Agnes (whose will was registered in Edinburgh in 1583/4). David, recorded as brother to the Laird of 'Torwoodly' when he became an apprentice in 1593, was probably another son. He is probably the George of Torwoodlee whose wills were recorded in the Commissariot of Edinburgh in 1575/6 and 1581. George of Torwoodlee (d.1637) 4th Laird, son of William. He signed a bond among Border Lairds in 1602. In 1607 he and his brothers James and David brought an action against John Elliot of Copshaw and others for the murder of his grandfather. He inherited a quarter of the lands of Clifton in 1610. He was appointed keeper of the rolls for the Justices of the Peace in Selkirkshire in 1610. He was an M.P. for Selkirkshire in 1617 and 1621 and became Sheriff of Selkirkshire in 1624. He is recorded in records of the Regality of Melrose in the 1620s. He married Margaret, daughter of James Pringle of Whytbank and secondly married Elizabeth Richardson of Smeaton. He was succeeded by his son James, who was also M.P. He is probably the George 'in Torwoodlie' who became a lister's apprentice in Edinburgh in 1607. His 3rd son, John, became a surgeon's apprentice with David 'Hoppringle' (perhaps a relative) in Edinburgh in 1615. George of Torwoodlee (d.1689) 6th Laird, son of James. In 1654 he had sasine of lands in Lilliesleaf. He was an active supporter of the Jacobite cause and resister of Episcopalianism. In 1662 he was fined and pardoned by the King. He was a friend of the Covenanting minister John Livingstone. He owned lands in Maxton Parish in 1678. He helped the Earl of Argyll escape from Scotland in 1681; the Earl was accompanied from Edinburgh to Torwoodlee by Rev. John Scott, minister of Hawick. He then lived in concealment and in 1684 fled to Holland to escape capture (along with Sir Patrick Home of Polwarth), whereupon his 16 year old son was imprisoned and threatened with torture unless he divulged who had given the warning to him. He was involved in a disatrous uprising in 1685, but again managed to flee. His estates were then confiscated, but they were restored at the Revolution. He was made M.P. for Selkirkshire in 1689, but died a few months later (probably before receiving full reward for his efforts in the previous decade). In 1654 he married Janet Brodie of Lethen and she died in 1690. His children were: James, who succeeded; Janet; Anna, who married Alexander Don of Rutherford; Sophia, who married her cousin James Pringle of Greenknowe; and Jean. George Turnbull (b.1810) youngest son of Robert and Ann Buckham. He was a gardener (and perhaps butler with a local family), but later became a licensed grocer at 12 Back Row (later Francis Henderson's). In the 1834 electoral roll he was listed along with his brothers Robert and James, as joint proprietors in a house. He was listed as a grocer on the Back Row in Slater's 1852 directory. He married Janet Wallace, from St. Boswells. Their children (baptised in Minto Parish) included: Robert (b.1836); Hannah Dickson (b.1837); Annabella Buckham (b.1839); Euphemia (b.1841); and George (b.1843). One of his daughters carried on his business, until she married Thomas Charters, after which the business was taken over by John Hendeson. George (b.1829/30) handloom weaver in Hawick. In 1851 he married Margaret, daughter of Andrew Ekron. George (1843/4–81) son of Hawick merchant George Turnbull. He was apprenticed to a Selkirk engineer and in 1866 left to work for an oil merchant's in Bradford. Later setting up business with a Mr. Cunningham, he settled in Manchester in 1874. However, he died after contracting diphtheria from one of his children, at the age of 37. He wrote some poetry and was a friend of J.C. Goodfellow, who wrote a verse on his death. His wife was Lydia Mary, who died in Middlesborough in 1930, aged 85. He was buried in the Wellogate. Gideon (1846–1922) son of Adam and Janet Scott, he was born in Roberton Parish. He was a shepherd. In 1827 he married Agnes, daughter of William Walker in Rowantree Toll Bar. Their children included William Walker (1871–1947). He lived in Galloway and died at Pinwherry, Ayrshire. James (d.1495) eldest son of David of Pilmuir and Smailholm. Like his father he acted as Ranger of the Ward of Tweed. He held this office from at least 1447, with the lease of 'Redehede' and Blindlee as his fee. He was on the panel in 1484 where James Douglas was served heir to his father in the Barony of Hawick. He was also the first listed witness to a sasine of 1484/5 relating to Walter Scott of Branxholme and the lands of Mangerton. In 1488 he had a 19 year lease from the King for the lands of Blindlee, Galashiels and Mosslee. In 1493 George Turnbull of Bedrule, David Waugh from Bedrule and weaver William White had remission for stealing cattle from his farm at Pilmuir. He is probably the James of Smailholm who acted as surety for Patrick Gledstains in Hummelknowes in 1494/5. David Waugh in Bedrule and Hawick had remission for stealing from his farm of Pilmuir in 1494/5. He married Elisabeth (also known as Isobel), daughter of Patrick Murray of Philiphaugh. His children were: David, who succeeded; William, 1st Laird of Torwoodlee, who died at Flodden; Alexander, 1st Laird of Trinlyknowe, who also died at Flodden; John, 1st Laird of Blindlee, also died at Flodden; Isabella, who married David Home of Wedderburn, who died at Flodden; and an illegitimate son, David of 'Tynnes' (or Tinnis). James of Tinnis (d.1546) son of Alexander of that Ilk. He was probably the James who was among the men pardoned in 1527 for their role in the Battle of Skirmish Field. He is probably also the James who witnessed an agreement between James Murray of Falahill and Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme in 1528. He may be the James who held a tenement in Selkirk according to a document in 1528. In 1529 King James V granted him (and his wife, Sibilla Carmichael) the lands of 'Tynnis' and in 1529/30 Gilbert Chisholme granted sasine to him and his wife. He witnessed a document for David of Galashiels and Smailholm in 1529 (and was there stated to be his brother). In 1530 he was recorded as a witness in Selkirk to proceedings taken against Patrick Murray, Sheriff of Selkirk. He was probably the James who in 1532 acted as an arbitrator for Isabel Murray in a dispute with her son Walter Scott in Headshaw. In 1535 his 'first born son' James gave notice of ejection of his father's tenants from Buckholm. In 1541 he was recorded holding the lands of 'Tynnes' in feu, as well as being tenant in 'Dricheuchschele' in Ettrick. He was captured at the Battle of Solway Moss in 1542, and not released for 3 years. He was mentioned in 1542 in reference to tenants in a dispute with Alexander of Craigleith. In 1546 he was part of the bond of peace signed between the Scotts, Turnbulls, Cranstons, Kers, etc. He married Sibella Carmichael. He was succeeded by his son James, and also had a daughter, Margaret. David 'second son of James Hoppringill' recorded in 1543 could also be his son. James of Woodhouse and Whytbank (d.1563) son of David and

Margaret. Lundie. He succeeded to Whytbank in 1510, and the family's Peeblesshire estates on the death of his father. He is said to have accompanied James V to Solway Moss in 1542 and was taken prisoner, but this may have been a different James (of Buckham). In 1547 he witnessed a document with other Pringles (in the Selkirk Protocol Books). He married Margaret Ker of Linton; she later married Sir David Home of Wedderburn, died in 1580 and was buried at Melrose Abbey. Their children were: Robert, who predeceased him; James, who succeeded to Whytbank; George, tenant of Netherton; Alexander; William; John; David, possibly the 'pothecar' who witnessed a discharge in 1580; Marion, who married George of Blindlee and secondly married William Home of Bassendean. His will was registered in Edinburgh in 1564. James of Torsonce and that Ilk (16th C.) probably son of Thomas. In 1581/2 he and his wife Elizabeth Edmondson had sasine for an annual rent in 'Bowschank'. He is probably the 'Hoppringill of Torsonce' listed among Lairds who appeared before the Privy Council in 1591 to promise to support the Warden of the Middle March. He is probably the James of that Ilk who served as surety for James of Smailholm in 1597. James of Whytbank (d.c.1625) son of James and Margaret Kerr. He was a strong Royalist supporter, as a result of which he lost his Peeblesshire estates. In 1571/2 he signed a bond to act against Borders thieves. In 1574 he was on the retours for Walter Scott of Branxholme as heir to his great-uncle David Scott, as well as his great-grandfather Sir Walter Scott. He could also be the 'James Hoppringill' listed in the 1574 last testament of Sir Walter, being owed 'for his fie'. In 1575 he was ordered to appear in reference to the feud between the Pringles and the Elliots. He was one of the Border Lairds summoned in 1583/4 to give assurances for keeping peace on the Border and in 1591 was one of the Lairds who had to promise to serve the Wardens and pursue the Earl of Bothwell. In 1599 he was cautioner for a bond for some Homes not to harm each other. In 1600 he sold the half Barony of Manor (formerly belonging to the Inglis family) to William Burnet. He was on the 1601 jury following the Kerr and Turnbull feud in Jedburgh. Both he and his son James signed another bond among Border Lairds in 1602, to keep the peace. He married Marion, daughter of Andrew Murray of Blackbarony; her will was registered in Edinburgh in 1592/3. He secondly married Juliane, daughter of Sir David Home of Wedderburn. His children included: James, who predeceased him (c.1616), but whose son James succeeded; Robert, who was probably the 'Robert Hoppringle, son to the gudeman of Quhytebank' who was imprisoned in Edinburgh Tolbooth for being part of the 'Royal High School Riot' of 1595; and Margaret, who married John Pringle of that Ilk. His son James succeeded to his lands of 'Reidheid' in 1607. James (d.c.1616) son of James of Whytbank. In 1596 he was cautioner for John Home of Cowdenknowes. He and his father signed a bond among Border Lairds in 1602. He predeceased his father and his son James succeeded to Whytbank. Sir James of Galashiels (d.1635) son of James, who was the only son of Andrew Hoppringle of Smailholm and Galashiels (although some accounts have only one James). During his minority his 'tutors' were Walter Riddell of that Ilk (and later his son Andrew), Robert Pringle of Langshaw and John Pringle of Buckholm. He was James of Smailholm in 1597 when James of that Ilk served as his surety. He was imprisoned following firing of pistols in a feud with George of Blindlee in 1598 and in that year Andrew Riddell of that Ilk and Alexander Horsburgh of that Ilk were cautioners for him not to carry hagbuts, while he was cautioner for Alexander Horsburgh not to harm a Burgess of Edinburgh. Galashiels was created as a free burgh of barony for him in 1599. In 1603 he was a surety for Thomas Ker of Cavers. He became a Commissioner for Peace in Selkirkshire in 1610. In 1617 he was among Border Lairds who renewed their bond for keeping the peace. He had a charter of 'Sellarhauche' from the Commendator of Melrose in about 1620. He was M.P. for Selkirkshire in 1621 and 1630 and became Sheriff-Principal in 1622. In 1628 he was given a commission to hold a trial for 2 women accused of witchcraft. He may have married a daughter of Ker of Linton (possibly Jean, daughter of George). His children were: David, who married Margaret, daughter of Walter Scott of Harden, and died before him; James, who married Jean, daughter of Sir John Scott of Scotstarvet; John, last of Smailholm, who died without issue; George, Sheriff-Depute of Selkirkshire, who also died before his father; Jean, who became heir and married Hugh Scott of Deuchar, son of 'Auld Wat', and who thereby became the first Scott of Gala; Isobel, who married Sir John Murray of Philiphaugh; and 2 other daughters who married ministers. It is said that he lived in an expensive manner and was forced to sell off some of his lands, leaving the rest encumbered by debt. James of Bowhill (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1623 when he had 2 sons who became apprentices in Edinburgh. James became a baxter's apprentice and John became a tailor's apprentice. James of Whytbank (1593/4–1667) son of James and Christian, daughter of William Lundin of that Ilk. He succeeded his grandfather in 1622, his father having already died. He was M.P. for Selkirkshire 1628–33 and was a Commissioner of Defence for the county in 1643 and Commissioner of War in 1648. He was appointed a Commissioner of Supply in 1661 and a Justice of the peace for Selkirkshire in 1663. He was known as a great loyalist and was fined by Parliament in 1646. He added Yair to the family estates and also became the malre representative of the Pringles of Galashiels and Smailholm (on the extinction of the male line of Pringle of Gala). He married Sophia Schoneir, who was a maid of honour to Anne of Denmark. His only son was Alexander, and he also had an illegitimate son, William. James of Torwoodlee (1596–1657) son of George. He was M.P. for Selkirkshire in 1641 and 1645 and was appointed Sheriff of Selkirkshire in 1646. In 1654 he was served heir to his father's lands of Corslie within Ettrick Forest and 'Cockslandis' in the village of Lilliesleaf. In 1620 he married Jean, daughter of Sir Richard Cockburn of Clerkington. In 1628 he secondly married Janet, daughter of Sir Lewis Craig of Riccarton. His son George was also an M.P. James (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when he was listed among the 'Cottars' on the Hearth Tax roll there. He could be the James who witnessed baptisms in 1689 for John Veitch and in 1691 for Robert Veitch and for James Scott. In 1694, along with William Brown, he witnessed a baptism for William Tait. James of Torwoodlee (1665–1735) son of George. He was imprisoned in 1684 and threatened with torture if he did not tell them who helped his father flee to Holland. In 1689 after the Revolution he was made an officer in the cavalry corps of Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire. His father died in 1689, in 1690 all of the family estates were restored to him and in 1694 he was served heir to his father. In 1690 he was made a Burgess and Guild Brother of Edinburgh in right of his father-in-law. He was M.P. for Selkirkshire 1693–1702. He contributed the large sum of £1300 to the Darien Scheme in 1695. In 1714 he was appointed Captain of a company of cavalry raised to organise defence against the forces of 'the Pretender'. In 1690 he married Isabel, eldest daughter of Sir John Hall of Dunglas, Provost of Edinburgh. His children were: George, who succeeded, but died unmarried; John, who died at sea; James of Bowland, who was a principal Clerk of Session, and whose son James succeeded his uncle; Katherine, who married Sir Robert Pringle of Stichill; Janet; Sophia, who married Adam Fairmont of Greenhill; Marion, who married John S. Ker of Littledean; Isabel; Margaret; and Ann. Sir James of Stichill (1726–1809) son of Sir Robert and Katherine Pringle. He was 'junior' when listed among the Commissioners for Roxburghshire in 1761. He was M.P. for Berwickshire 1761–79 and succeeded as Baronet in 1779. In 1780 he was added to the voters' roll for Roxburghshire. He was Commander of the Roxburghshire Yeomanry Cavalry. He was listed among the voters of both Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire in 1788, but it was said that 'it is likely he will be averse to vote, as he will not like the oath'. He was taxed for owning carriages and horses, and for having several male and female servants in the 1780s and 1790s. He served as a Deputy-Lieutenant for Roxburghshire in 1797. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Norman MacLeod of that Ilk. His children included: Mary, who married George Baillie of Jerviswood; Robert, who married his cousin and pre-deceased his father; Eliza, who married Archibald Todd of Drygrange; Sir John, who also married a cousin, and succeeded to Stichill; and Sir Norman, who succeeded his brother. James of Bowland and Torwoodlee (1758/9–1840) only son of James and grandson of James of Torwoodlee, who was M.P. for Selkirkshire. He was educated in Cambridge and Leyden, and studied for the bar, but never practised. He succeeded to his uncle's lands of Torwoodlee, sold his father's lands of Bowland and also acquired Buckholm and Williamlaw from other Pringles. He was listed as a voter in Roxburghshire in 1788; he was described at that time as being 'rich' and probably siding with Rutherford of Edgerston in the election. He owned Buckham, Williamlaw and Ladhopemuir. He was also listed as a voter in Selkirkshire and brother-in-law of the Sheriff of Selkirkshire, Andrew Plummer. He was a Commissioner of Supply for Selkirkshire from at least 1802 and was Captain of the Selkirkshire Yeomanry during the False Alarm of 1804. He was additionally listed along with his son (James junior) as Commissioners of Roxburghshire in 1819. He paid tax for having male and female servants in the period 1785–97, for owning a carriage in the period 1785–98 and for horses and dogs in 1797. He raised the Selkirkshire Corps of Border Yeomanry in 1797 and was their Captain at the time of the False Alarm in 1804. He was also present at the Carterhaugh Baa in 1815. He was Convener of Selkirkshire for more than 50 years and was proposed as Vice-Lieutenant of the county in 1827. He was active in promoting the early woollen manufacturers in Galashiels. In 1782 he married Elizabeth, daughter and coheiress of Charles Tod of Drygrange. Their children were: James, Vice-Admiral and successor; Charles, who died young; George, who married Ann Stewart; Alexander, who was lost in a wreck; and Frances, only daughter, who died in Edinburgh. James of Torwoodlee (1783–1859) son of James. He joined the Navy in 1797 and retired as a Rear-Admiral in 1846. He was listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805. He became Deputy Lieutenant of Roxburghshire in 1820 and served as a Commissioner of Supply and Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. He succeeded his father in 1840 and also succeeded to his brother's lands of Trinlyknowe. He was succeeded by his son Commander James Thomas. His other children were: Capt. Charles; George; Elizabeth Mason; Frances; Mary; and Jane. James (b.c.1780s) shepherd at Howpasley, according to the 1812 ballot for the Militia in Roberton Parish. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1822 he married Ann Murray, who was from Roberton. Their children included: Walter (b.1834); and John (b.1835). James (b.1796) son of Robert and Ann Buckham. He was cousin to the founder of Robert Pringle & Sons, and had a brother who was also Robert. He was a stockingmaker and warehouseman in Hawick. In 1841 the family were living at 'Greenwind foot', in 1851 at 12 O'Connell Street (probably the modern No. 4) and in 1861 at 7 O'Connell Street. He married Beatrix Scott, who was from Deanburnhaugh, daughter of old Peggy Anderson; she was said to be 'great for simples (herbs)'. Their children included: Margaret, who must have died young; Helen (b.1836); Elizabeth Miller (b.1838), who married mill furnisher George Scott; Robert (b.1839); Isabella (b.1841); Thomas (b.1843); John (b.1845); and Margaret (again, b.1848). James Hall (1801–74) born in Hawick Parish. He was tenant farmer at Hyndlee, recorded in the 1860s. He was also recorded as farmer at Cleithaugh in 1868. He married Jane Mary Hogarth (1803–50). Their children were: George Hogarth (1830–72), a surgeon in Sydney, Australia, who died at sea; Andrew; David, who farmed at Cleithaugh; Mary Miller; Margaret Preston; and Elizabeth Jane. James (1832–99) frameworker in Hawick. In 1861 he was a 'Marino Framework Knitter' living at 8 Howegate. He married Elizabeth Trotter (1838–1918) and their children included: Robert (b.1861); William (b.1863); James (b.1865); Mary Landles (b.1867); George (b.1869); Elizabeth (1875–1961); Frank (b.1877); and Thomas (b.1880). James Thomas of Torwoodlee (1832–1902) son of Vice-Adm. James. He retired from the Royal Navy with the rank of Commander. He was Deputy Lieutenant for Selkirkshire and J.P. for Selkirkshire and Roxburghshire. He also founded Torwoodlee Golf Club. He was a member of the Jedforest Club. In 1862 he married Annie-Parminter, only daughter of Col. James Lewis Black, who was wounded at Waterloo. He was succeeded by James-Lewis. James butcher at 56 High Street, continuing the business started by his great-grandfather in 1902. He has received multiple Scottish Craft Butcher awards and other prizes for his speciality sausages, black puddings and Scotch pies. Janet (b.c.1790) grocer and spirit dealer on the High Street. She was at about No. 39 on the 1841 census, living with her sons Thomas and Robert. She is probably Janet Kedie, who married John, proprietor of a public house on the Sandbed in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. Janet (b.c.1800) grocer on the High Street in Pigot's 1837 directory. She was located at about 7 High Street in 1841. She could be the Janet who was an unmarried seamstress at about 25 High Street in 1851. J.B. see John Balfour Jean (18th/19th C.) member of the local family, perhaps a daughter of the Robert recorded in the family bible. Before 1798 she owned the bottom part of 8 Fore Row (now 22 Drumlanrig Square). John of that Ilk and Torsonce (d.c.1555) son of Alexander of that Ilk. He may be the 'Jok a Pringill' accused by the English in 1543 of leading raids, along with the Laird of Mow. He is listed in 1549 among the associates of Walter Ker of Cessford who were accused of helping the English in raids upon the farms of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme, including Goldielands and elsewhere. His children included: Thomas, who succeeded; Michael; James 'in the Bow'; Archibald of Torquhan; Elizabeth, Prioress of Coldstream; and Margaret, who married Clement Mauchan of Pilton, Cramond. His will was registered in Edinburgh in 1565. John of Galashiels and Smailholm (d.c.1566) son of David. He succeeded his father about 1535, his older brother David having died at Flodden. He may be the

John 'in Reidheid' (essentially the same as Whytbank) who was one of the large number of Borderers listed along with Walter Scott of Branxholme for rising up against the Earl of Arran, for which they had remission in 1526; his brother Robert was also listed, along with 7 other Pringles. In 1541 he was recorded occupying the lands of 'Galloschelis'. The rentals from his farms in Lauder are listed in 1542 and he was involved in a dispute involving the teinds in Lauder in 1545. In 1547 he witnessed a document with other Pringles (in the Selkirk Protocol Books). He was among the men accused in 1549 of helping the Kers and English attack the farms of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme; the other Pringles on the list were John of Torsonce and Robert of Overcleuch. In 1550 he had an instrument regarding lands in Mellerstain. He was also recorded in another instrument of 1554. He is probably the 'Guidman of Galloschelis' listed in 1564 among Border lairds who were ordered to support the warden, Ker of Cessford. He married Margaret, daughter of Sir James Gordon of Stichell and Lochinvar; after his death she remarried to John Hoppringle of Wrangholm. His children were: Andrew, who succeeded; David of Bardarroch; James; Isabella, who married William Gordon of Crauchlaw; Margaret, who married Andrew Rutherford of Hundalee; and other daughters who married Andrew Haliburton of Muirhouselaw, a Borthwick and an Inglis. He could be the John 'in Smailhem' whose will was registered in Edinburgh in 1565. John of Galashiels and Smailholm (d.1650) 3rd son of Sir James. He was the last in the male line of the Pringles of Smailholm, being served heir to a portion of his father's lands in 1641 (with Gala passing to his brother-in-law Hugh Scott, and the Lauderdale lands having been sold). In 1643 he was recorded as owner of 'Smailholm-craigs'. In 1645 the lands of Smailholm were granted to Sir William Scott of Harden, these lands having been in Pringle hands since at least 1459. In 1645 he was probably the John 'sometime of Smailholme' who was part of an armed gang of about 100 men who attacked farms and harassed tenants in the Parish of Stow, belonging to Robert of Blindlee and John Haliburton, younger of Muirhouselaw. After his death the representative of that family became James Pringle of Whytbank. John (17th C.) eldest son of Robert of Stichill. He married Margaret, daughter of Walter, 1st Earl of Buccleuch. Their children included: Sir Robert, who successed his grandfather to Stichill; Walter of Graycrook; Katherine; Francis of Rowiston; John; James; William; and Elizabeth. It is possible he was father of Jean, who married Thomas Scott of Todrig. John (d.1679) from Castleton Parish. He was among the 200 men who died on 'the Crown of London' when it shipwrecked off Deerness in the Orkneys and the captain refused to unlock the hatches to let the prisoners save themselves. The ship was transporting Covenanters to America after their capture at Bothwell Bridge and subsequent imprisonment under harsh conditions. Sir John of Stichill (1662–1721) son of Sir Robert. He contributed £500 to the Darien Scheme in 1695. He was made a Burgess and Guild Brother of Edinburgh in 1698. In 1688 he married Magdelen, daughter of Sir Gilbert Eliott of Stobs. Their children included: Gilbert, who became merchant's apprentice in Edinburgh in 1710 and was also in the Dragoons; Walter, who was an advocate and Sheriff of Roxburghshire; Margaret, who married Sir James Hall of Dunglass; Katherine, who married William Hamilton of Bangour; Sir Robert, who succeeded; and Sir John, who succeeded his brother, and was President of the Royal Society. His wife died in 1739 and is buried at Stichill. John of Torsonce (d.1737) son of George of that Ilk and Torsonce. He was this grandson of James of Torsonce, who may have been brother to Jean Pringle, wife of Capt. Walter Scott of Satchells. In 1688 Scott of Satchells dedicated part of his 'Post'ral' to him; he was described there as 'the very Honourable, and right Worshipful generous Gentleman, John Hoppringil, Laird of Torsonce'. In 1698 he was appointed a Commissioner of Supply for the counties of Edinburgh and Berwick. In 1681 he married Grissell, eldest daughter of Hugh Scott of Gala. They had 8 children, but all died except Margaret, who married Gilbert Pringle, merchant in Edinburgh, and brother of Thomas and Robert of Stichill. He was the last in the male line of the Pringles of Torsonce. John of Whytbank (1678–1702) son of John, minister of Fogo, and grandson of George of Balmungo. In 1689 (while still a minor) he succeeded Alexander of Whytbank, who was his father's cousin; he was further served as heir in 1695. His brother George became a surgeon's apprentice in Edinburgh in 1695. He was appointed a Commissioner of Supply for Selkirkshire in 1698. In 1699 he married Margaret, eldest daughter of Sir Patrick Scott of Ancrum, and she died in 1770, aged 89, outliving him by 68 years. Their children were: Alexander, who succeeded; Margaret, who died young; and Joanna, who died unmarried. He died at Yair, aged just 24. John of Haining (1673/4–1754) 2nd son of Andrew of Clifton and Violet Rutherford. He became an advocate in 1698 and purchased the Haining in 1702. In 1704 he was a Commissioner of Supply for Selkirkshire, i.e. an M.P. in the last Scottish Parliament. He then served that county as M.P. until 1729. However, he was unpopular within Selkirk itself because of his support of the Duke of Douglas' rights within that burgh. He was made a Burgess and Guild Brother of Edinburgh (gratis) in 1708; there was another entry in 1712 and a third in 1735, when he was 'Senator of the College of Justice'. In 1711 he was one of the founding members of the 'Honest Country Club'. He was a Keeper of the Signet for Scotland in 1711. He became Lord of Session in 1729, taking the title Lord Haining. He is probably the Lord of Haining whose lands in Ashkirk Parish were valued at £600 in the 1740s. He married Ann, eldest daughter of Sir James Murray of Philiphaugh. He had 3 3 sons and 3 daughters: Andrew, who became Lord Alemoor; John, who inherited the Haining; Robert, who became a doctor; Anne, who married Robert Rutherford of Fairnilee; and Helen (d.1808) and Violet (d.1821), who died unmarried. John (17th/18th C.) wright who became a Hawick Burgess in 1704. He was described as 'in the Haugh of the Galawater' and was stated in the marriage record as being from Stow Parish. In 1710 he witnessed a baptism for mason John Napier. He was probably the same wright who was selected by the minister and heritors in 1713 to report to the Presbytery on the state of the Manse in Hawick. And also the John who was one of the men who valued Andrew Rodger's house for the Kirk Session in the early 1700s. He witnessed baptisms for Jasper Richardson in 1713, for weaver John Stevenson in 1719 and for shoemaker Adam Kersel in 1723. In 1716 he was 'wright in Hawick'. In 1721 his servant Robert Robison married Isobel Rae in Branxholmtown. Also in 1721 he was witness for baptisms for weaver Robert Wight and 'Tenent in Hawick' David Wilson. Either he or his son was paid in 1732 for fixing the hands of St. Mary's clock. In 1704 he married Janet Thomson, who was from Hawick Parish. Their children included: Margaret (b.1707), who married tobacconist James Scott; Janet (b.1709), who must have died young; John (1709), gardener; William (b.1711); Walter (b.1714); Janet (b.1716); George (b.1718); Janet (again, 1721); Mary, who married William Scott of Langholm; Betty, 2nd wife of baker John Kedie; and Jean. The witnesses in 1707 were Gideon Scott of Falnash and Bailie Walter Elliot, in 1709 were wright Walter Hardie and carrier David Minto, in 1711 were James Scott 'Doctor' and shoemaker John Scott, and in 1716 were merchant Francis Elliot and carrier David Minto. John (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. His children included: Janet (b.1732); and Jean (b.1730). In 1733 he was at Howcleuch. John (b.1709) son of wright John and Janet Thomson. He became a Burgess in 1733, when he was described as 'gardener in Borthwick, now in Hawick'. He was witness to a baptism in 1746, along with Thomas Kedie. He may be the gardener John whose daughter Betty was the 2nd wife of baker John Kedie. He may also be the John who in 1737 witnessed baptisms in Wilton Parish for Andrew Stewart and for Walter Grieve, both residents of Midshiels, and another baptism in Wilton in 1739 for Robert Gibson in Appletreehall. John (18th C.) resident of Ewes Parish. He married Isobel Scott and their children included: Francis (b.1751); Margaret (b.1754); Janet (b.1759); William (b.1761); Mary (b.1763); George (b.1766); and James (b.1768). The witnesses in 1759 were Thomas Scott and Adam Dryden. John (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. In 1762 he married Margaret Laidlaw from Hawick Parish. He may be the John whose son William was baptised in Hawick in 1765. John (18th C.) resident at Howpasley when his children were baptised in Roberton Parish in 1761 and 1763. Probably the same John was resident at Gair in 1775 when another child was baptised. He was probably father of John (b.1761), Mary (b.1763), Margaret (b.1769), Agnes (b.1775) and an unnamed daughter (b.1778). John of Crichton (d.1782) eldest son of Mark of Crichton. He was forced to part with his lands, this being suggested to be the inspiration for the line 'I've seen the smiling of Fortune beguiling' in his sister-in-law's song 'Flowers of the Forest'. In 1752 he married Anne, eldest daughter of Robert Rutherford of Fairnilee and was succeeded by Mark, who was of Fairnilee, Haining and Clifton. John of Haining and Clifton (d.1792) 2nd son of John of Haining. He was M.P. for Selkirkshire 1765–84. He was a merchant in Madeira and having made a fortune there, and Haining being in financial difficulties, he (instead of his brother Lord Alemoor) purchased the estate on the death of his father in 1754. He also succeeded to Clifton in 1780 on the death of his cousin Robert Pringle. He was listed among the Commissioners for both Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire in 1761. He was also listed among the voters of Selkirkshire in 1788. Sometime before 1779 he had feu-rights to lands in Bewlie and in the Barony of Harden from Walter Scott of Harden. He was listed on the roll of electors for Roxburghshire in 1780. He was taxed for having 2 or 3 male servants from 1778, increasing to 5 or 6 in 1787–92, and 3 or 4 female servants in 1785–91. He paid the land tax at Easter Alemoor in 1785. He was also taxed for owning a carriage and up to 6 horses in the period 1785–92. He was listed as owner of North Synton (including Birkwood) in 1788 (and still recorded this way in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls), valued at £600. He also owned Clifton and other lands in Morebattle Parish and most of the lands in Linton Parish. He died unmarried and was succeeded by his grand-nephew Mark. He also provided for his reputed natural son John, who was a lawyer with the East India Company. John of Whytbank (1744–90) eldest son of Alexander. He is said to have been a Lieutenant in the 36th Regiment of Foot and served on the staff of Gen. Murray in Canada, where he died. Actually he was a Lieutenant in the 84th Regiment, serving under Gen. Haldimand as Governor of Canada. He served through until the termination of the American War in 1783. He was succeeded by his brother Alexander around 1790. John (c.1770–c.1810) local fiddler and composer of music. James Wilson (writing in 1858) suggests that he was grandson and pupil of John Howison, while W.N. Kennedy (writing in 1863) says he was half-brother of Howison. He became a more accomplished violin player than his older relative, whose abilities were famed throughout the Border. He is probably the John 'Musician' in Hawick who was selected by ballot in 1797 and 1798 to serve on the local Militia, but was declared unfit to serve later in 1798; in 1799 he was listed being 'Musician in Edinburgh' among men balloted in 1797 who were absent from Hawick. He was selected by Lord Minto to lead his band when he was Governor General of India (which must have been in the period 1807–14), and died in Calcutta, probably unmarried. He also collected and published some local reels, strathspeys and jigs in the early 1800s, some of which he wrote himself. These are collected in 2 volumes, and include parts suitable for violin with piano accompaniment. Those published in 1801 are dedicated to 'Miss Elliot' (presumably of Minto) and the second volume (probably 1802) dedicated to Lady Scott of Ancrum and available from his lodgings at 16 Rose Street, Edinburgh. He probably lived in the capital as a dancing master. Tunes attributed to him include 'Lady Ann Hope', 'The Miller of Drone' and 'Miss Walker's Strathspey'. There are well over 100 tunes in these 2 volumes, including ones with locally relevant titles, such as 'Fertish Hill', 'Hawick Lasses, a Reel', 'Hawick, a Strathspey', 'Ruberslaw', 'Minto House', several named after members of the Minto Elliots or local Scotts, 'The Ettrick Shepherd', 'Betty Howison's Favourite', 'Teviot Banks', 'Wilton Lodge, a Strathspey' and the nursery air 'Dance to your Daddy, my bonny Babby'. John (d.1805) tailor in Hawick. He was son of Thomas, who was a carter. He could be the John, son of Thomas and Betty Douglas born in Hawick in 1773. He was listed on the ballot for the Militia in 1801. John of Carriber (d.1836) from Midlothian. About 1810 he arranged the tenancy of Bairnkine farm in Southdean parish. When he died the lease of the farm passed to his younger son Robert Baillie. He married Mary Walker, and their children were: Maj. David; Robert Baillie; another son, who died in India; Mary, who married Lieut. David Sheriff; Isabella, who married Dr. James Richmond, brother of the minister of Southdean; and 3 daughters who never married, Agnes, Janet and Ellen. John of Haining and Clifton (d.1831) succeeded his father Mark in 1812, when still a minor. He was served heir to the Baronies of Haining and Clifton in 1813 and in 1822 was heir to his remote cousins Andrew, Lord Alemoor and John of Haining. He was M.P. for the Selkirk Burghs in 1819–20. He had the mansion at the Haining renovated into an Italian style, and allowed the people of Selkirk to use the grounds of the estate. It was said that he was bashful of direct interactions, but gave generously to local causes, often anonymously. He died unmarried and was buried in Morebattle. He died after being thrown from his carriage after a fishing trip on Headshaw Loch with his brother Robert. John (b.1778) son of Walter and half-brother of Robert. He was the first member of the family known to be involved with the hosiery trade, being apprenticed to William Beck in 1794. He was recorded as a stocking-maker on the 1801 list for the Militia ballot in Hawick. He later became a merchant. He was recorded as a hosier in 1825 when he subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick'. He may be the same John recorded in Pigot's 1825/6 directory as proprietor of a public house in the Sandbed. He may also be the grocer and spirit dealer listed on the High Street in Pigot's 1837 directory. He may also be the meal dealer also listed on the High Street in 1837. He firstly married an Oliver and secondly Janet (d.1843), daughter of Thomas Kedie, baker. They had 6 children, including: Elizabeth (b.1820); Thomas Kedie (b.1822); Walter Oliver (b.1824); and Robert (b.1827). He is probably the John, married to Mary Oliver, whose son Walter Oliver was born in Hawick in 1813. He is also probably the hosier John whose twin's deaths are recorded in Hawick in 1816. John (b.c.1780) labourer in Lilliesleaf according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia. John (1795/6–1843) shepherd at Milsington. In 1841 he was living at Milsingtonshiel. He married Sarah Johnstone and their children (mostly baptised in Ettrick Parish) included William (b.c.1825); James (who died in 1841, aged 14); Francis (b.1829); Adam (b.1831); Margaret (b.1833); Jean (b.1835); John (b.1837); and Mary. His wife died at Broadlee in 1866, aged 74. The family are buried at Borthwick Waas. John Balfour (1815–85) Dumfries man who travelled around painting portraits, signing them 'J.B. Pringle'. He probably married Grace Ballantrae in Edinburgh in 1846. His wife was Grace Haswell when their son John Haswell (b.1848) and daughter Julia Mary (b.1853) were born in Hawick. He was the painter of 'Hawick from Wilton Lodge 1850', now in the Museum, painted from around the Violet Woods. He also painted a view of the Auld Brig from near the foot of the Mill Port in 1847, as well as a view of Hawick and Wilton from the Mote in about the same year. He later gained some fame as a painter of maritime portraits. John (b.1825/6) grocer at about 6 Doncaster Street in Newcastleton in the 1860s. He is listed as a shepherd there in 1861. His wife was Grace and their children included daughter Eliot and son Robert. John Douglas (1877–1939) born in Hawick, son of manufacturer Walter Pringle and Mary Douglas. He joined the family firm at an early age, becoming a partner in 1897 (along with his half-brother Robert). He retired from Pringle's in 1918 (or 1919)9, moving to the south of England for his health. He married Muriel Martin in 1907 and their children were Elizabeth Douglas (who married Dr. F.Y. Henderson of London and John Martin Douglas (who married Celia Carroll and became a successful journalist). John Martin Douglas (1912–99) son of John Douglas and Muriel Martin, he was born in Hawick. He graduated from Lincoln College, Oxford in 1934 and started a career in journalism. He was sub-editor of the Guardian, served in WWII with the K.O.S.B., was Director of Foreign Affairs at the Times (1948–52), then became editor of the Sydney Morning Herald (1952–57), Deputy Editor of the Observer (1957–62), Editor of the Canberra Times (1964–65) and editor of the Sydney Morning Herald again (1965–70). He wrote the controversial best-selling book 'Australian Accent' (1958), as well as 'Australian Painting Today' (1963) and 'On Second Thoughts' (1971). He married Celia Carroll in 1936 and she died in 1997. Margaret Graham 'Peggy' nee Irvine (1908–2008) born in Carlisle and raised near Langholm. She married master butcher Robert and they had 4 children: Gladys; Margaret; Jean; and Robert. Long connected with the Hawick Common Riding, she was Acting-Mother in 1947, and had a son and grandson who were Cornet. She lived to see her telegram from the Queen and had 27 great-grandchildren. Margaret Violet see Margaret Violet Douglas. Mark of Clifton (d.1644) said to have been a servitor of Robert, Earl of Roxburghe. He surely came from one of the local branches of Pringles, but it is not known which one. In 1619 he purchased part of Clifton, which had been previously held by the Pringles of Torwoodlee and in 1623 he had confirmed to him lands in Easter Clifton from the Pringles of Hownam. He married Janet, daughter of Rev. William Bennet of Ancrum. Through his wife he became connected with the families of Eliott of Stobs and Douglas of Cavers. Their children included: Robert, who succeeded; Andrew, who became a merchant's apprentice in Edinburgh and later succeeded his nephew; and Janet, who married Thomas Scott of Todrig. Mark of Clifton (d.1685) only son of Robert of Clifton. He succeeded his father in 1683, but died unmarried only a couple of years later. His tutors included his uncle Andrew and Walter Scott, younger of Todrig. He was succeeded by his uncle Andrew. Mark of Crichton (d.1761) youngest son of Andrew of Clifton and brother of Robert of Clifton and John of Haining. In 1707 he attended a dinner in Selkirk with other local landowners and got into a dispute (perhaps over the Union) with Walter, eldest son of William Scott of Raeburn. They fought a duel with swords and Scott was killed, the location being afterwards known as Raeburn's Meadow. He then fled abroad, becoming a merchant in Spain and later British Consul there. In 1737 he purchased Crichton, returned to Britain in 1758 and lived in London. He firstly married Miss Strachan of Thornton and secondly married Veronica Rennie. He was succeeded by his son John and had a daughter Violante, who married her cousin Andrew Pringle, Lord Alemoor. Mark of Fairnilee and Clifton (1753/4–1812) son of John of Crichton and Anne, eldest daughter of Robert Rutherford of Fairnilee. He was trained for the bar and became an Advocate in 1777, but did not practice long. He was appointed deputy Judge Advocate and Clerk of the Courts Martial of Scotland. He paid the Land Tax for Fairnilee and Rink in 1785. He succeeded to Fairnilee in 1786 on the death of his maternal grandfather and Haining and Clifton on the death of his granduncle John in 1792. He started building a new mansion at the Haining in 1794. He paid the carriage and horse taxes for Haining in the years 1794 and 1797, and the dog tax in 1797, as well as being taxed for 4–6 male servants in Selkirk Parish 1793–97. He served as M.P. for Selkirkshire 1786–1802. He was also listed among the voters of both Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire in 1788. He was appointed Chamberlain of Ettrick Forest for life. In 1802 he paid the land tax on Easter Alemoor, as well as Haining, Hartwoodburn and Howden. He was 'of Cliftone' when listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805 and 1819 (when already deceased). He was 'of Haining' when writing about the poor laws in Selkirk in 1806. In 1795 he married Anne Elizabeth, daughter of Robert Chalmers. His children included: John, who succeeded to Haining and was M.P. for the Selkirk Burghs; the last Pringle of Haining; Robert of Fairnilee, M.P. for Selkirkshire, who was the last Pringle of Haining; and Margaret Violet, who married Archibald Douglas of Adderstone. His will was proved at the Prerogative Court of Canterbury in 1812 and he died at Bath. Mistress (17th C.) resident of the west-side of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. She may be the widow of some local Pringle. Paul Henry (1922–84) born in Hawick of Presbyterian parents, he approached Father Gordon Gray just before WWII, and was accepted into the Roman Catholic church while a prisoner of war in Italy. He returned to Hawick after the War, worked on the railways and entered Nunraw as a monk in 1954. Roger (13th/14th C.) gifted half the lands of Whitsome in Berwickshire by King Robert in about 1320. His name is recorded as 'Rogeri Pyngille'. Robert of Hoppringle (13th C.) earliest known ancestor of this family. He is recorded as a witness to a Soutra charter in the reign of Alexander III, probably around 1270. His name was written 'de Hoppryngil'. Another man, 'Elys de Obrinkel' signed the Ragman Rolls of 1296 and could easily have been his son. Robert of Whitsun and Pilmuir (d.1424) one of the earliest local Pringles. He acted as armour-bearr for James, Earl of Douglas at Otterburn in 1388. He then served the next 2 Earls of Douglas and was killed at the Battle of Verneuil in France. In 1408 he had a charter of Pilmuir in Lauderdale. About the same time he was also probably granted the lands of Smailholm and had a tower built there at Sandyknowe. About 1413 he witnessed a charter for the Homes of Wedderburn and another for Archibald, Earl of Douglas in 1414. He is probably the 'Robt of hoppringyll' who witnessed an indenture for Melrose Abbey in 1418. He may be the Robert 'de Pringil' who witnessed charters during the regency of the Duke of Albany. His children included: Robert, who succeeded; George, Squire of Douglas; Alexander, also Squire of Douglas; and David, who succeeded his brother Robert. Robert of Smailholm and Pilmuir (d.bef. 1480) son of Robert. He is probably responsible for the bridge across the Teviot near Melrose (described by Sir Walter Scott in 'The Monastery') with the inscription 'I, Robert Pringill of Pilmore steed, Gave a hundred nobles of goud sae reid, To big my brigg upon the Tweed'. He appears to have succeeded his brother George as Master Ranger of the Ward of Tweed from about 1460, and was succeeded in that post by William Douglas de Cluny of Traquair in 1470. In 1459 he had a sasine for the lands of 'Wrangham' and Smailholm. He witnessed an instrument in 1474 (for the Homes of Wedderburn), but was succeeded by his brother David shortly afterwards. He married Elspeth, daughter of Sir William Dishington of Ardross; she was responsible for building Old Gala House in 1457. Robert (d.c.1588) described as 'tutor of Blindlie, and goodman of Galashiels' when his will was registered in Edinburgh in 1588. Robert (d.bef. 1598) recorded as already deceased 'in Boin-Jedburgh' in 1598/9 when his son John became a tailor's apprentice in Edinburgh. This was with William 'Hoppringle', who may have been a relative. Robert (16th/17th C.) Bailie to the Earl of Buccleuch. In 1622 Simon Armstrong, called of Tweeden, appeared at the Justiciary Court as caution for him. It is unclear what his crimes were or how he was related to other Pringles. Robert of Stichill (b.c.1581–1649) descendant of William of Whitton and son of George of Craigleith. He was 2nd son of George of Newhall and was progenitor of the Stichill branch and Laird of Bartingbush. He trained as a lawyer, becoming Writer to the Signet. He acquire Stichell in 1628. He was made a Burgess and Guild Brother of Edinburgh, gratis, in 1630. He was Commissioner of War for Roxburghshire and Berwickshire. He also served as Clerk to Gideon Murray of Elibank and Chamberlain to the Earl of Buccleuch (for the Debateable Land in the 1630s). A letter exists from him to Earl Walter Scott, describing the flight and capture of several Armstrongs. He was appointed one of the 2 Parliamentary Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1638, serving as effectively one of the Roxburghshire M.Ps. until 1641. In 1642 he was named to a commission to try a large number of Borderers who had been declared fugitives. He could have been the servitor to Sir Gideon Murray of Elibank who had a bond in 1619 with Thomas Turnbull 'in Rowllspittle'. He purchased Stichill in 1628, and also bought Dinlabyre, Larriston and Howden in Liddesdale in 1632, as well as Templehall in Berwickshire. He was recorded as possessor of the lands of Larriston, Howden and Stripshielden in the early 17th century. His lands in Castleton Parish (probably part of Dinlabyre) were valued at £60 in 1643 (but the same lands were owned by Scott of Buccleuch by 1678). He was also recorded as owner of lands in Stitchill Parsish in 1643. In 1643 he was on the Commission of Supply for Roxburghshire and in 1643, 1644 and 1646 and was on the Committee of War for Roxburghshire, still in 1649. He married Katherine Hamilton, who came from the Silverton family. Their children included: John, who married Margaret, illegitimate daughter of the 1st Earl of Buccleuch, but predeceased his father; Walter of Greenknowe; an unnamed daughter, who married a Ker of Graden; Anna, who married Sir James Home of Eccles; and Christina, who married Hugh Wallace of Craigie. He was succeeded by John's son Sir Robert. Robert of Clifton (d.1683) son of Mark. He was served heir to his father in 1644. He was on the Commission of War for Roxburghshire in 1648. He was originally designated as 'of Easter Clifton'. He increased his lands in Clifton in 1656, 1663 and 1679 and received a royal charter for the whole of Clifton in 1681. In 1662 he was on a commission to try 8 witches in Bowden Parish and was also on a commission appointed to apprehend thieves on the Border. He served as a J.P. in Roxburghshire from 1663. In 1674 he acquired part of Linton from Henry Ker. In 1676 he was on the commission regarding the division of Selkirk Common. In 1678 he paid £1642 on land tax in Linton Parish. He married Christian, daughter of Sir Walter Murray of Livingston and sister of Patrick, Lord Elibank. Their children included: Mark, who succeeded; Janet, who married her cousin Andrew Pringle; and Margaret (d.1683). In his testament he appointed tutors and advisors to his son, namely his brother Andrew, nephew Walter Scott, 'fear of Todrig', Sir William Bennet of Grubet, Thomas Scott of Todrig and Thomas' son William. Sir Robert of Stichill (17th C.) son of John, he succeeded his grandfather Robert in 1651. He is listed owing money to the deceased Countess of Buccleuch in 1661. He was appointed Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire in 1663 and as one of the 2 Parliamentary Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1678 and 1681, thus serving as M.P. for the county. He was also on the Commission of Supply for Roxburghshire in 1685 and 1690. In 1684 he was one of the men appointed as a commissioner in Selkirkshire for prosecuting Covenanters. He was created a Baronet of Nova Scotia in 1683. He married Margaret, daughter of Sir John Hope, Lord Craighall. They had 19 children, including: Sir John, 2nd Baronet; Sir Walter, Lord Newhall; Robert Pringle, Secretary-at-War; Thomas, W.S., Clerk of the Privy Council and Deputy-Keeper of the Signet, father of Lord Edgefield; and Archibald, who became an apprentice felter in Edinburgh in 1690. Robert (17th C.) resident of 'Crackuooll' in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll. He may be the Robert who witnessed baptisms in Ashkirk in 1691 for William Scott and Agnes Scott and for James Rutherord. Robert (17th/18th C.) recorded in Caverton in 1712 when he witnessed a baptism in Hawick for William Sanderson, tenant in Falnash. Probably the same Robert paid the hearth tax on 4 hearths at Caverton Mill in the 1690s. Robert of Clifton (d.1754) eldest son of Andrew of Clifton and brother of John of Haining. In 1723 he and his brother John had sasine of an annual rent of £1000 for lands in the Barony of Cavers. In 1739 he was made a Burgess and Guild Brother of Edinburgh. His Clifton estate in Linton Parish was valued at more than £3000 in the 1740s. He firstly married his cousin, Janet Pringle, and their children were: Robert, his only son and heir; Elizabeth, who married Robert, 4th son of William Elliot of Harwood; Margaret (d.1771), who died unmarried in Jedburgh; and Barbara (d.1780), who died unmarried in Edinburgh. At about the age of 50 he secondly married Margaret, eldest daughter of George Rutherford of Fairnington; this was apparently done to the surprise of his children. He also had a son John who became a merchant's apprentice in Edinburgh in 1710. Robert (18th C.) Hawick resident. He married Margaret Baldy and their children included Betty (b.1737). Robert (18th C.) possibly half-brother of Thomas. He is also recorded in the ancient Hawick family bible. He may be the Robert who married Janet Porteous, and whose children born in Hawick included Thomas (b.1743), Helen (b.1746) and Ann (b.1756). He could be the dyer in Hawick who witnessed a baptism for gardener Alexander Bunyan in 1743, along with his servant (showing that he was a man of means) George Campbell. Robert (18th C.) wright in Hawick. He witnessed baptisms in 1742 for mason David Laing, and in 1745 for carrier Walter Scott (with Scott reciprocating on the same day). He married Margaret Wilson and their children included John (b.1745) and John (again, b.1747). The witnesses in 1747 were shoemaker Thomas Scott and Beadle John Telfer. Robert of Clifton (d.1778) only son of Robert of Clifton to whom he was served as heir in 1755. In 1760 he made an entail of his lands to his heirs, failing which the sons of his uncle Lord Hianing, then the heirs of Mark of Crichton and his eldest sister, Mrs. Elliot of Harwood. In 1764 he subscribed to Sir Robert Douglas' 'Peerage of Scotland'. He died unmarried and was succeeded by his cousin John Pringle, 2nd son of Lord Haining. Robert (d.1793) served as Captain of the Royal Engineers and Lieutenant Colonel in the Army. In 1788 he was listed under 'Votes of John Pringle of Clifton' among the voters of Roxburghshire (suggesting that he was given freehold of some land in order to vote in the county). He supervised the construction of new defences around St. John's, Newfoundland in the 1770s and instigated the Newfoundland Volunteers in about 1778 and the Newfoundland Regiment in 1780. He returned to Europe in 1783 and was chief engineer at Gibraltar 1785–88. He was promoted to Lieutenant Colonel in 1792 and died in Grenada. He married Miss Balneavis. His will is in the National Archives. Robert (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen Thomson and their children included John (b.1778). In 1778 he is described as a Superintendent of Excise and the witnesses were Robert Pringle (perhaps his father) and writer William Wilson. He could be the 'Mr. Pringle' who was Schoolmaster at the east-end of the Kirkyard and also master of excise in Hawick. His son John could have been the musician of that name from Hawick. It is possible that his wife was the same Helen Thomson who married John 'Howieson' in Hawick in 1759. Robert (1750/1–1820) possibly son of Robert (recorded in the family bible). He was a nursery gardener in Hawick, probably with Dickson's. He mat be the Robert recorded in Allars in 1799 when carrier Robert Stewart was his servant. He married Ann Buckham (1771–1820) and their children were: William (b.1794), framesmith; James (b.1796), stockingmaker; Jean (or Jane, b.1799), married Francis Bell; Robert (b.1801), framework knitter, who married Elizabeth Foyer; and George Turnbull (b.1810), gardener and then licensed grocer at 12 Back Row. In the 1834 electoral roll his sons George T., Robert and James were listed as joint proprietors of the house he had left them. This is marked 'Ro. Pringle' on Wood's 1824 map. Robert (1765–1835) son of William and Jean Robson. He was a shepherd at Bellendean in 1788 and was recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as shepherd at Wolfcleuchhead. In Roberton in 1788 he married Janet (b.1765–1804), daughter of Thomas Burnet; she died at Wolfcleuchhead. Their children included: William (b.1788); Margaret (b.1790); James (b.1793); John (b.1795); Jane (b.1797); Adam (1799–1886), who was a shepherd at Over Dalgleish; and an unnamed son (b.1801). He died at Milsington. Robert (b.1775) son of carrier Thomas, he is recorded in Hawick in 1797 on the list of men balloted to serve in the Militia. The annotation 'Subst.' seems to suggested that he did not serve; his name appears again in 1798, but with Robert Waugh, labourer in Hawick, serving as his substitute. In 1799 he was listed among men balloted in 1797 for whom substitutes had been found. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Helen Lunn and their children included John (b.1803), Elizabeth (b.1805) and James (b.1807). Robert (d.bef. 1809) resident of Hawick. He was already deceased in 1809 when the death of his son Thomas is recorded. His nickname appears to be 'old Washman', but it is unclear what this meant. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Buckham and their children included: Thomas (b.1803); and James (b.1805). He could be the John whose stockingmaker son James is recorded dying in 1824. Robert of Clifton and Haining (d.1842) younger son of Mark. He served in the 7th Hussars. He succeeded his brother John to the Clifton and Haining titles in 1831 after John died in a carriage accident when returning from Headshaw Loch. He resided at the Haining (in Selkirk), where he died 11 years later, and was the last Pringle of Clifton. His lands included North Synton in Ashkirk Parish. He was also listed among the landowners in Roberton Parish in 1841. In 1826 he was recorded complaining about a poacher. He was a Liberal in politics and reputedly well-liked in the local community. He defeated Alexander Pringle of Whytbank in the Selkirkshire election of 1832, by 9 votes. He served as M.P. for Selkirkshire 1832–34 and was defeated again by Pringle of Whytbank in the 1835 election. He died unmarried and was the last male Pringle of Haining. His distant cousin Robert Kerr Elliot of Harwood succeeded to the Clifton estates, while Haining passed to his sister Margaret Violet, who had married Archibald Douglas of Adderstone and Midshiels. Robert (1795–1859) founder of the manufacturing firm, born in Hawick, son of Walter. He joined Dicksons & Laings in 1810 as an apprentice stocking-maker. He entered into a partnership with John Waldie and Peter Wilson in 1815, which later separated, his part eventually becoming Pringle's of Scotland. The firm was based at the Whisky House Mill on Slitrig Crescent 1815–19. In 1819 he carried on the business on his own in new premises on the Cross Wynd, where the company remained for about 50 years. It was listed as a manufacturer of hosiery there in Pigot's 1837 directory and Slater's 1852 directory. In 1827 he introduced the 'broad frame' and he developed areputation for high-quality yarns. It was known as Robert Pringle & Son for many years, later becoming Pringle of Scotland and being run by the family until his grandson Robert retired in 1940. He was said to be a man of strong individuality and great energy in developing his business. He was on the old Town Council, as well as being a Police Commissioner and on the Parochial Board. He was a member of Hawick Kirk Session and was a Liberal in politics. He renamed the firm 'Robert Pringle & Son Hosiery Manufacturfers' in 1846. He was living at 61 High Street in 1841 and had moved to Bridge Street by 1851, when he is listed as employer of 82 men and 8 women. In 1823 he married Charlotte Paterson, and she died in 1873, aged 69. They had 11 children including Walter (1826–1895), who carried on the business. Their other children were: Charlotte (b.1824), who became Mrs. Dykes; Walter (b.1826); Ann (b.1827), who married Peter Williamson; William (b.1829), who became a grocer; Catherine Elizabeth 'Kate' (b.1831), who married Mr. Hoy; Beatrice (b.1833), who became Mrs. Peters; Margaret ('Etta', b.1834), who married Dr. Robert Munro; Robert (b.1836), who became a doctor; Jessie (b.1839); Henry Turnbull (b.1840); and Esther Scott (b.1844). A portrait exists of him with his wife. He died at 18 Buccleuch Street and is buried in Wellogate Cemetery. Robert (b.1801) son of Robert and Ann Buckham. He was a frameworker in Hawick. In 1841 he was living on the Back Row and by 1861 was listed at No. 13. He married Elizabeth Foyer and their children included: Anne, who married a Gad and then a Kerr; Elizabeth; James; Robert; and George. Robert Bailie (1806–78) son of John and Mary Walker, he was born at Cranston, Midlothian. He was farmer at Bairnkine in Southdean Parish. His brother was Maj. David of Carriber. In 1838 he married Margaret, youngest daughter of Peter Brown of Rawflat; she died in 1886. Their children included: Margaret; John, farmer at Nisbet, who succeeded to his uncle's lands at Carriber; Robert Brown; David; Mary; and Elizabeth. He is buried in Southdean kirkyard. Robert (b.1827) son of merchant John and Janet Kedie. In 1851 he was a confectioner living with his aunt Elizabeth Douglas and uncle John Kedie on the Howegate. Robert (1837–1903) son of manufacturer Robert, he became a doctor. He is buried in Wellogate Cemetery. Robert (19th/20th C.) cashier with William Watson & Sons. He received money from the will of Robert Fraser Watson in 1904. Robert (1862–1953) grandson of manufacturer Robert and son of Walter. In 1878 he became an apprentice in the firm his grandfather had founded. He had the villa Woodnorton (originally Craigmore) built for him in Sunnyhill. By 1885 he was a partner, and after the death of his father in 1895 took over sole control of the firm. He refocussed the family knitwear business on retail, as well as wholesale, and ran it until he retired in 1940. In 1887 he married Edith Villiers Price (1866–1944), daughter of Joseph, a successful railway engineer (although also said to have been a soap and candlemaker from Clapham Common), and younger sister of Mrs. Patrick Anderson Laing of Balcary. Their children were: Francis Mary Edith, who married James Chrystal Muir, son of a Glasgow minister; Walter Gerald, who died in WWI. In memory of his only son he incorporated the firm as Robert Pringle & Son Ltd. in 1922. In his old age he moved to live with his grand-daughter Geraldine Simpson at Fetteresso Castle near Stonehaven. Robert butcher in Hawick, son of Robert, who was Acting Father in 1947. He was Cornet in 1965, with his Lass being Catherine Peden (later Johnson). He married

Anna Dickey (whose brother Norman was Cornet in 1961) and their son Robert was Cornet in 1994. He was Acting Father in 1989 and Jubilee Cornet in 2015. Robert 'Robbie' son of Robert, he was Cornet in 1994 (with his father being Cornet in 1965). He married his Lass, Lorna Szoneberg. His Picking Night unusually took place at Cavers. Thomas (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 when he had a horse and 4 cows stolen from him at Smailholm by the Olivers of Strange. It is unclear how he might have been related to other Pringles associated with Smailholm. Thomas of Torsonce and that Ilk (d.1566) son of John of Hoppringle. In 1564/5 he was named (along with David Spottiswood of that Ilk) as one of the cautioners of Sir Walter Ker of Cessford in his feud with James Ormiston of that Ilk. He was succeeded by James. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Gatehousecote according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Thomas (17th/18th C.) recorded as factor to the Crumhaugh estate in 1716. Thomas (17th/18th C.) recorded in 1716 when his servant John Henderson had a child baptised in Kirkton Parish. It is unclear who he was or where he lived. He could be the Thomas in Cavers who witnessed a baptism for 'Wester' James Grieve in Commonside in 1705. Thomas (b.1720s) perhaps the earliest known Pringle of the knitwear family, he was grandfather of Robert and father of Walter, merchant in Hawick. It is unclear who his own parents were. He lived in the Sandbed area and was possibly a merchant. He was the owner of the family bible that was washed away in the great flood of 1767, but recovered near Kelso. He is believed to have died in a snowstorm. He may have had a half-brother Robert. He may be the Thomas who witnessed a baptism for gardener John Turnbull in 1766. His son Walter was born in 1748. Adm. Thomas (d.1804) of the Royal Navy. Son of Walter, who was a prosperous West Indian plantation owner, and grandson of Thomas, W.S. of the Stichill branch. He served during the American War of Independence, as well as in the Napoleonic Wars. He purchased the lands of Weens in 1796 from Robert Nutter Campbell and they were sold by his trustees (to Thomas Cleghorn) after his death. He was listed there on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, as owner of 2 farm horses and 1 saddle hoprse. He also paid the dog tax in 1797 and was listed on the Carriage Tax Rolls at Weens in 1797/8. He also paid tax there in 1797 for having 4 male servants, when he was 'Colonel Pringle'. Thomas (18th/19th C.) carter in Hawick. His son John, a tailor, died in 1805. He may be the Thomas who married Betty Douglas in 1767, and whose children included: Robert (b.1770); James (b.1771); John (b.1773); Robert (again, b.1775), listed on the ballot for the Militia in 1797; Walter (b.1777); Janet (b.1779); and Thomas (b.1781). The witnesses in 1779 were the whole congregation. He is probably the 'Newcastle carrier' who was already deceased when his son Robert died in 1809. He may be the Thomas who is recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls for Hawick as owner of 3 work horses. Thomas (b.c.1790) dyer in Hawick. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. In 1841 he was listed as a 'Dyer J. Wool' on Dovemount. His wife was Beatrix and their children included Beatrix, William, Thomas, Peter and Janet. Thomas (1789–1834) poet and abolitionist, known as 'the father of South African poetry'. Son of Teviotdale farmer William, he was born in Linton Parish about 4 miles south of Kelso, with his mother being Beatrice Scott from Langholm. He was crippled in infancy and suffered from lameness all his life and he also lost his mother at the age of 6. He was educated at Edinburgh University, where his great friend was Robert Story, son of the Schoolmaster at Yetholm. He published his first poetry collection in 1817, with poems such as 'The Scenes of Teviotdale' popular locally. He was also the first editor of the 'Edinburgh Monthly Magazine', which would become Blackwood's Magazine. However, his work was lampooned by some other writers. He also edited 'The Liberal Star' and 'Constable's Monthly Magazine' and worked at Register House. He befriended Sir Walter Scott, who helped him secure free passage in a resettlement programme to South Africa. In 1820 he emigrated to Grahamstown, moving to Cape Town, where he founded a school and a newspaper, but was forced to leave in 1826 because of his fight against slavery and his promotion of free speech. He wrote a decription of the state of slavery in the Cape and published it in Britain in the New Monthly Magazine. Back in Britain he became Secretary of the Anti-Slavery Society, working for the Committee for his last 7 years. He encouraged former slave Mary Prince to write her autobiography, and also was advocate and protector of several other people of African origin. He also assisted in arrangements for the celebration of the emancipation of slaves from the British Colonies in 1834, a few months before his death. He was the only person other than the Ettrick Shepherd to contribute a poem in the mock style of others (in his case Sir Walter Scott) to 'The Poetic Mirror or The Living Bards of Briton'. His sister Jessie married Hawick man William Ainslie, and he visited family in Hawick several times, after one occasion writing the poem 'The Emigrant's Farewell'. The Museum has (or at least had) an original letter of his (donated by Miss Ainslie in 1867) and Robert Murray read a paper about him to the Archæological Society in the 1860s. He published 'African Sketches' and books of verse, such as 'Ephemerides'. He died from tuberculosis at the age of 45. He was buried in Burnhill Fields, but in 1970 his remains were reinterred in South Africa. Thomas Kedie (1822–74) son of merchant John and Janet Kedie. In 1841 he was a 'Shop Man' helping in his mother's grocer's shop at about 39 High Street. He was listed as a grocer on Market Place in Slater's 1852 directory. In 1844 he married Lucille Kennedy (c.1823–74), sister of W.N. Kennedy and half-sister of bookseller J.D. Kennedy. Their children were: Angelique Lucille (b.1846), who became a nurse; Janet Kedie (b.1848); Elizabeth Hamer (b.1850); John Douglas (b.1852); James Robert (b.1854); Douglas; Jessie, who married James Lindsay; Maggie; and Robert. He may be the Thomas of Edinburgh who donated mineral specimens to the Museum in 1858, a coin in 1860 and more coins in 1863. Thomas (19th C.) resident of Edinburgh. In 1862 he donated a collection of Roman copper coins to the Hawick Museum. He must have had a local connection. Perhaps the same man was a commercial traveller who in 1866 donated a biography and portrait of Lord Heathfield. Walter (17th/18th C.) proprietor of the Roughheugh Waulk Mill in the early 1700s. In 1713 the Bailies heard a case of assault brought against his servitor John Kerr. He is referred to in the Hawick Session records of 1723 as 'Walker, Roughheugh', when he was employer of William Hood, and paid his fine for adultery. In the evidence regarding the use of Wilton Common in 1765, it was said that 'Walter Pringle waulker in Rough-heugh, ... did cast peats in that moss 50 years ago'. Given the name, occupation and location, it is not inconceivable that he was an ancestor of the manufacturing Pringles. He is probably the Walter, who married Helen 'Ourd', and whose children baptised in Wilton Parish included: Elspeth (b.1714); William (b.1715); Margaret (b.1717); Robert (b.1719); and Henry (b.1720). Walter (b.1748) son of Thomas and father of manufacturer Robert. He was a merchant in the Sandbed. He subscribed to Caw's 'Poetical Museum' (1784). He is probably the tailor who was one of the witnesses to a baptism for Thomas Miller in 1781. He is probably the Walter who witnessed baptisms for merchant John Renwick in 1797 and 1799. In 1773 he married Betty Heiton (or Hutton), who came from an old Darnick family. Their wedding proclamation is recorded in Melrose, with Andrew Riddell as cautioner. They had 7 children, including: Betty (b.1775); Robert (b.1776), who must have died young; John (b.1778), a merchant; Robert (1780–82); James (b.1783); Thomas (b.1785); and Walter (b.1787). In 1793 he secondly married Anny Scott (related to the Brieryyards Scotts) and had at least 5 more children: Beatrice (b.1794), who died in infancy; Robert (1795–1859), who founded Pringle of Scotland; Jennie or Janet (1797–1858); Andrew (b.1799); and James. Walter (1826–1895) eldest son of Robert. He began as an apprentice in his father's Cross Wynd factory in 1842, and when he was finished in 1846, the firm was renamed 'Robert Pringle & Son'. He eventually ran the family hosiery business, further developing it after the death of his father, the founder. In the 1850s he developed the 'intarsia' of producing Argyle-style sock patterns. In 1868 he moved the main premises to Walter's Wynd. He was a Town Councillor for many years and also served as a Magistrate. In politics he was a staunch Liberal. In the 1850s he was on the Railway Committee for Hawick District. He gifted communion silverware to the Parish Church. In 1860 he married Mary Sutton and she died in 1870, aged 35. They had 3 children: John Clement, who died in infancy; Robert, who succeeded to the family business; and Mary Charlotte (b.1864), who married William Charles Johnston. He later married Mary, daughter of Dr. John Douglas, and she died in 1915, aged 72. The children by his second marriage were: Jane Aitchison, who married T.J. Finlay; Catherine Ann ('Cathy'), who married George Crosfield Glenny; and John Douglas, who married Marie Anne Martin, and became a partner in the family firm. He lived at Langlands in Sunnyhill, which he had built for him, starting a trend for other manufacturers to build villas nearby. In about 1874 he was recorded owning part of the 'particate lands' of Hawick, which had earlier been owned by William Scott 'at Flex'. He is said to not have been of very strong constitution. Along with several other members of the family, he is buried in Wilton Old Cemetery. Walter Gerald (1893–1917) only son of Robert Pringle, the last member of the family to be groomed to run the famous knitwear company. He was home-schooled by a tutor and started his apprenticeship in 1910, being expected to eventually take over the firm when, but war broke out. In his youth he was a member of the Boy Scouts. Before WWI he was Captain of the Hawick Motor Cycling Club (riding with Jimmie Guthrie, his cousin Joe Laing and others). He enlisted into the Lothian and Border Horse in 1915 and served as a motorcyle dispatch rider. After returning to Britain to obtain his commission, he became 2nd Lieutenant in the K.O.S.B. and was killed at Passchendale. There is a brass plaque on a marble background to his memory in Wilton Church, with a representation of him by sculptor Newbury Abbot Trent. William (15th C.) probably son of David. He was Constable of Cessford Castle and appointed the 1st Range of the Ward of Tweed. He could have been the 'Wil Pringil' who was on the 1464/5 panel for ruling on the dispute over the lands of Kirkton Mains and the Flex. He was Constable of Cessford Castle when he witnessed a sasine for Cessford in 1467. He is probably the William who witnessed a document between Henry Wardlaw and the Kers of Cessford in 1468 and another for Sir Alexander Home of that Ilk in 1468. It seems likely he is the William mentioned in an action brought by John, Lord Somerville in 1476. He is probably the William who was a bailie appointed by Alexander, Lord Home, to infeft Andrew Ker in the lands of Crailing and Hownam in 1484. He may be the William who was recorded along with David on a document relating to Ruecastle in 1491. Also in 1491 he was 'Wil. Hoppringle de Cesfurd' when he had a charter for lands in Peeblesshire. He was probably succeeded by his son Andrew. William (d.1513) younger son of James of Smailholm. His mother was Isabella Muray of Falahill. He had a tack for Caddonlee in 1488 and another along with his son George for Torwoodlee in 1509. In 1509 he also held one quarter of Clifton. He was a witness to the sasine of Queen Margaret of England for lands in Ettrick Forest in 1503. He had sons: George, who succeeded; and David, whose son George was a tutor of Torwoodlee in 1581. He was killed at Flodden. William 'Will' (16th C.) one of the men indicted in 1552 for involvement in the murder of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme and Buccleuch. It is unclear where he was from, although he is listed along with men from the Jedburgh area and Berwickshire. His name is recorded as 'Ville Hoppringill'. William of Torwoodlee (d.1581) son of George. In 1571 he subscribed to the General Band to rise against Kerr of Ferniehirst and the thieves of Liddesdale and Eskdale. In 1575 he was directed to appear in reference to the feud between the Pringles and the Elliots. He married Agnes (or Alison), daughter of James Heriot of Trabrown in 1571 and was succeeded by his son George. His will was registered in Edinburgh in 1578/9. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. In 1720 he married Mary Hutchison, the marriage being proclaimed in Roberton, but taking place at Eskdalemuir. He is probably the William who was at Howpasley in 1721 and 1723, Philhopeshiel in 1726 and Philhope in 1732 and 1737. His children included: Jean (b.1721); Helen (b.1723); Margaret (b.1726); an unnamed child (b.1728); William (b.1730); an unnamed son (b.1732); John (b.1734); and Janet (b.1737). William (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Howpasley in 1761, 1765 and 1767. He may have been brother to John, who was also living at Howpasley. He is probably the William who married Jean Robson in Roberton in 1758. His children probably included Adam (b.1759), William (b.1761), Robert (b.1765) and John (b.1767). He could be the William 'in Shaws formerly herd of Dum Fedlain in Howpasley' who was accused by David Park in 1793 of 'losing ten sheep without explanation'; it is unclear what 'Dum Fedlain' may refer to. William (d.1811) tenant farmer at Hislop. He had 2 sons by his first marriage, Adam and Robert. His second wife was Elizabeth Wilson, this perhaps being the marriage with 'B. Wilson' (probably Betty) taking place in Roberton in 1789. After his death, there was a court case involving a pre-nuptial contract, the argument hinging on whether it was legal for her to have had her hand led to sign something when she could neither write her name nor read the contents. William (18th/19th C.) tenant farmer at Bedrule and Fulton. He was listed as tenant at Bedrule in the 1797 Lieutenancy Book for Roxburghshire. He is recorded at Bedrule in 1797, when he owned 8 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. He was additionally taxed for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797. He was tenant in Bedrule Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book in 1799. He was presumably the 'Mr Pringle' whose 2 servants and 'Barnman' were listed on the 1801 Militia ballot. He opened a quarry on his farm at Bedrule, and started a limeworks, from which he also supplied some neighbouring farms. He was tenant at Bedrule and Fulton until 1826, being succeeded by Mr. Haliburton and then shortly afterwards by Robert Brodie. He could be the William, married to Hannah, whose son Robert was baptised in 1801 in Byrness. William (b.1790/1) born in Roberton Parish, he was an agricultural labourer at Phaup in Cavers Parish in 1841. In 1851 and 1861 he was listed as shepherd at Phaup. His wife was Jean (from Dumfriesshire) and their children included Janet, Adam, David, Andrew, James and Margaret. William (b.1791/2) shepherd at Woolhope in Castelton Parish. He is recorded there in 1841 and 1851. By 1861 he was shepherd at 'Stinchelburnfoot'. He married Janet Crozier and their children included Isabella, William, James and Adam. William (b.c.1793) frame-smith of the Back Row, listed there in 1841. His son was Alexander. He is listed along with labourer Robert as a joint-tenant in the 1837 electoral roll. Another household on the Back Row in 1841, consisting of Robert, William (also a frame-smith) and James, could be his father, son and grandson. William (b.1805/6) originally from Lilliesleaf, he was farmer at Newstead in Wilton Parish. In 1861 he was farmer of 20 acres, employing 1 girl. In 1836 he married Janet, daughter of Thomas Cranston and Agnes Smail. Their children included Jessie. William (b.c.1810) mason at Billingburn near Chesters in the 1841 census. In 1851 he was still living in his father's house on Bridge Stree. His wife was Mary and their children included Robert, George, Margaret and Jane. William (b.1829) son of Robert and Charlotte Paterson. He set up a grocery business in Hawick. William Elliot (b.1833) son of William and Janet Crozier, he was born in Castleton Parish. His father was shepherd at Woolhope. He was a shepherd, being listed at Toftsholm in 1861. He married Christina Douglas Elliot (daughter of James Elliot and Helen Douglas), and she is listed as 'Christopher' on one census transcript. Their children were: William (b.1858), who moved to the Durham area; James Elliot (b.1859), also moved to Durham; Walter Douglas Elliot (b.1864), who died young; and Helen Douglas (b.1869), who married Thomas Hall and lived in Northumberland (formerly spelled 'Pringil', 'Pringile', 'Pringill', 'Pringyl', 'Pringyle', 'Pringyll', 'Pryngil', 'Pryngill' and variants, and synonymously as 'Hoppringle', 'Hoppringill', etc. in earlier centuries).

the Pringle Bible (thu-pring-ul-bī-bul) n. old family bible of the local Pringle family. It was apparently found on the banks of the Tweed near Kelso following the Hawick flood of 1767! The book was later returned to the family. It bears the inscription: 'Who ought this book if ye would knowe I will show you by letters 2, the first is T, a letter bright, the 2 is P in all men's sight, and if you chance should to read amiss look underneath and there it is – Thomas Pringle'.

the Pringle Hall (thu-pring-ul-hal) n. extension added to the Burns Club in 1963, named after Alexander Pringle, club treasurer for 37 years.

Pringle-Pattison (pring-ul-paw'-ee-sin) n. Andrew Seth (1856–1931) son of Smith Kinmont Seth and Margaret Little. He was educated at Edinburgh University and in Germany. In 1880 he was appointed assistant to the Professor of Logic and Metaphysics in Edinburgh and became Balfour Professor of Philosophy himself in 1883. He moved to Cardiff before returning to Scotland in 1887 to be Professor of Logic, Rhetoric and Metaphysics at St. Andrews University, then was Professor of Logic and Metaphysics at Edinburgh University 1891–1919. In 1898 he changed his surname in order to inherit the titles of Pringle of Haining from Margaret Violet Pringle, wife of Archibald Douglas of Adderstone, to whom he was distantly related. He married Eva, daughter of Albrecht Stropp; they had 2 daughters and 3 sons. He died at the Haining and is buried in Morningside Cemetery.

Pringle's (pring-ulz) n. Pringle of Scotland, founded as a hosiery firm by Robert Pringle in 1815, in partnership with John Waldie and Peter Wilson, at the Whisky House Mill on Slitrig Crescent. Pringle went on his own from 1819, moving to the Cross Wynd (opposite Allars Kirk) and manufacturing underwear from 1827, with the introduction of the 'broad frame'. The name was changed to 'Robert Pringle & Son', when Walter completed his apprenticeship in 1846. The 'Intarsia' method of producing Argyle-patterned socks was introduced in the 1850s. The firm purchased John Nixon & Sons mill on Walter's Wynd in 1868 (or 1869), renaming it 'Rodono'. Robert Pringle (grandson of the founder) was made a partner in 1885. The company then started to focus on retail as well as wholesale. The firm first made spun silk underwear (and in colour) in 1892, and introduced seamless gore for ladies underwear in 1895. There were alterations to the Walter's Wynd premises designed by J.P. Alison in 1895/6. About 1905 it became one of the first firms to introduce knitted outerwear. Douglas Pringle joined his brother Robert as a partner in 1897, and J. Boyd Sime became another partner in 1906. The knitted coat department was started in 1910. Herbert Benyon Johnstone joined in 1919. In 1922 it became incorporated as a private company, Robert Pringle & Son Ltd. Pure silk stockings ('Prinseta') were started in 1927. Sime resigned in 1929, with John Turnbull becoming Managing Director. 'Rodono splashproof' silk stockings and 'Slimfit' underwear were being made from 1931. Arthur Oddy and Wullie Mactaggart became joint Directors in 1932 and became Managing Directors following Turnbull's resignation a year later. In 1933 cashmere was added, and designer Otto Weisz joined in 1934, becoming a Director in 1937. He was responsible for the name 'twinset' and for making the style the company's own from the mid-1940s. A.G. Chaston was also made a Director in 1934 and George Mitchell in 1937. The lion rampant first appeared on garment labels in 1934. In 1940 the ladies' blouse department started in Hawick, 'Pringle Johnston Imports' was formed to handle the U.S. market, and Robert Pringle retired that same year. The firm manufactured utility outerwear for the forces in WWII, and stopped making underwear in 1965. A 5 year lease was taken on Weensland Mill in 1946 and the Kelso factory opened, with the Berwick factory following 2 years later. The blouse department closed in 1950, but the Burnfoot factory opened and Rodono Mill was extended 3 times in the 1950s. Automatic rob transfer was introduced in 1955, with intarsia and men's outerwear starting about the same time. It received the Royal Warrant from the Queen Mother in 1948, was appointed to the Queen in 1956 and received the Queen's Award to Industry for Export Achievement in 1965 (further awards followed in 1970, 1979 and 1983). The name was changed to 'Pringle of Scotland Ltd.' in 1958 and became a public company in 1960. The underwear department finally closed in 1961. The company purchased Glebe Mills in 1962 and started making men's knitwear there a year later. They sponsored a professional golf tournament in 1964 and signed a deal with golfer Nick Faldo in 1981 (ending in 2001), with the Faldo Collection of leisurewear launche in 1989. The company was acquired by Dawson International in 1967 for £5.8 million. There were further extensions to Rodono and Glebe Mills in 1968 and new factories were opened in Earlston, Cumbernauld and Livingston. In 1970 Alan Smith of Dawson succeeded Wullie Mactaggart as Chairman. Rodono was closed in 1976 and demolished in 1980/1, but a new factory was opened in Arbroath in 1985. Princess Anne visited Glebe Mills in 1988 and a Gold Award for Outstanding Export Achievement was awarded in 1993. However, the stores were converted into franchises in 1995, and the workforce was substantially reduced 1997–98. It was and purchased by the Fang Brothers in 2000, with Kim Winser as the new C.E.O., and the Diffusion line being introduced. Princess Anne opened a flagship shop on Bond Street in 2002. Women's fashions were shown in London in 2002 and mens's fashions in Milan in 2003. Teries meanwhile complained that the company had lost its focus. Glebe Mills continued to operate until 2008 and the company retain an office and shop on Victoria Road. Records relating to the firm, covering the period 1922–76 are listed on the National Register of Archives and a book 'Pringle of Scotland and the Hawick Knitwear Story' (2006) was written by Hugh Barty-King – 'Hei's a Pringle-ite since hei left schill an plenty o support hei'll get frae the mill' [GM].

prisoners o war (pri-zi-nurz-ō-wawr) n., pl. prisoners of various wars have been a common sight in and around Hawick. During the Napoleonic wars, 1812–14, about 120 French, German and Polish officers were sent to Hawick and allowed to move about freely with certain restrictions; hence many of the 'French' prisoners were in fact German. The privates were largely kept in Penicuik, and there were also officers in Selkirk and Jedburgh. It was said that the influx of prisoners made the Town considerably richer (financially and culturally) in this period. William Nixon acted as paymaster or commissary for them and their headquarters was at Slitrig Bank, but they were boarded in private houses throughout Hawick. There was also a base across the river on Slitrig Crescent, in what was once the Red Cross building. Several officers stayed in the old house at 44 High Street, as seen in a painting of the time. 15 of them became members of Lodge 111. They were allowed to walk within 1 mile of the Tower Knowe in any direction, and met every morning at the Spetch for roll call. To make ends meet, many of them taught classes, painted or made trinkets to sell, or gave musical entertainments. Some of them (including M. Prefort) painted local landscapes, which still exist, and some created other items that are now in the Museum, such as a carved ivory guillotine, a carved snuff-box and a homemade pair of men's body stays (and a painting 'of Hawick in China ink', donated by Miss Wilson in 1873). In late 1813 Francois Senebien wrote (in French) to the Duke of Buccleuch, asking for help in being freed on compassionate and health grounds. In any case, all of these prisoners were released in June 1814 after the allied troops took Paris, with the men boarding ship at Leith. It is said that the presence of all the well-dressed French officers changed the sense of fashion in the Town. There is a farewell letter of thanks to James Elliot of Goldielands, from Lieut. G. de Tallard, thanking the Elliot family for their hospitality. James' son, Prof. Elliot, claimed that the local population of thrushes was denuded by them being caught and eaten by the prisoners. One of 'Pawkie' Paterson's sisters married a prisoner (traditionally said to be a Bonaparte!), while another sister (Jane) had a child to one, named Cabourne. Additionally, Ann Ekron lived with an ensign called Adam (or perhaps Auguste) Bellom, having a daughter Adelina, while Lieut. Frederick Diener had a son Frederick William Diener with Hawick woman Willhelmina Paisley. In 1816 the deaths of 'Nelly Jardine and Frenchmans Bastard Child' are recorded in Hawick. A century later there were as many as 6,000 German prisoners of war based at Stobs in WWI, living in 200 wooden huts below Winnington Rig farm. They were mainly civilian detainees in the first few months of the War, and it became purely a military camp at the end. Prisoners included the crews of the battleships 'Gneisenau', 'Leipzig', 'Torpedo' and 'Blúcher'. Conditions in the camp seem to have been among the best in Britain. Prisoners worked on local farms and built a sewage works for the Camp. The last prisoners were released in early 1919. The Museum has a model ship and a ship in a bottle from this period, and also copies of the newspaper produced by the Germans, 'Stobsiade'. 45 prisoners were buried in the Camp cemetery, with their remains transferred to Cannock Chase Cemetery in 1962. During WWII there were a small number of Polish and German prisoners located at Stobs. There were about 30 prisoners there towards the end of the War, staying until January 1947, although with minimum security in the last months. German and Italian prisoners were also located in Nissen huts where the Police Station and Katharine Elliot Centre were later built.

the Probus Club (thu-prō-bis-klub) n. local club for retired professional businessmen, which meets every second Thursday morning for a talk and refreshments. Local clubs are connected with the international Probus organisation (founded 1966), but run autonomously, while being supported by the local Rotary club. The Hawick Club was formed in 1976.

the Procession (thu-pro-se-shin) n. any of the parades associated with the Common Riding, particularly the parade of bands, officials and horses along the High Street on the Friday morning. At the end of the 19th century the route was from the Tower to the Sandbed, then up Wilton Path, Princes Street, Bridge Street, Union Street, then a pause while the Cornet and followers went to the Bogliebarns, after which it proceeded along the High Street and up the Howegate and Loan to the Chase. The Procession is preceded by the walk from the Town Hall after the Cornet has picked up the Flag, with the other Principals, Provost, Bailies and guests walking in procession to the Tower for the singing of the Auld Sang. The Procession includes cars (carriages in former times) containing Councillors and Committee Members, plus the Cornet and mounted supporters and the bands. The modern event starts at 8.45 a.m., with the Halberdiers leading the Provost's motorcade, with the Lasses' car in the rear. Then comes the Drums and Fifes leading the Cornet and Principals (who emerge from the Tower pend), with the mounted supporters falling in behind, in the order of ex-Cornets, then ex-Acting Fathers, then visiting principals, then the rest. The route goes via the Sandbed, up Wilton Path, along Princes Street to Dovemount, then back along Bridge Street. At the Horse the Saxhorn Band join, and lead the Procession up the Loan.

the Proclamation (thu-pro-kla-mā-shin) n. the official announcement made on the Thursday by the Burgh Officer charging the Burgesses to ride the marches. Once this would have been made at the Mercat Cross, and later from the 'Oyes door' in the old Town House, but now it is done from the Town Hall Balcony immediately after the Colour Bussing. The Saxhorn Band provide the fanfare for the Big Fower and the Halberdier appearing outside the Town Hall, this being the first time the townsfolk have seen the bussed Flag. The text of the announcement is: 'These are to give advertisements to all burgesses within the Burgh and Town of Hawick, and burgesses outwith the same, that the Provost, Bailies and Council are to ride the marches of the Commonty of Hawick upon Friday the ... day of June instant as hath ever been usual. Therefore warning all the said burgesses to attend that day in their best apparel to the end aforesaid'. The text is essentially unchanged since being recorded in 1733. Afterwards the Cornet waves the Flag and it is left on display. The Lasses and Maids of Honour then usually appear from the balconies and the bands and halberdiers lead the Cornet and his followers in the Cornet's Walk. A second Proclamation is made at the Mill Path on the Friday afternoon, stating that the marches have been duly ridden: 'For as much as the Provost, Bailies and Council of the burgh of Hawick, with the burgesses of the said burgh, have this day ridden the marches of the Commonty of Hawick, as has been in use yearly since time immemorial, without interruption or molestation of any sort; therefore, if any nobleman, gentleman, or others, having lands lying contiguous or adjacent to the said Commonty, shall find themselves leized or prejudiced in any sort by this day's marching, they are hereby required to state their objections thereto to the Provost, Bailies and Council of the said burgh within forty days from this date otherwise they shall be held to have acquiesced in the said marching'. The Proclamations were properly incorporated into the Common Riding ceremonies in 1900. In the early 2000s they were replaced with versions using the Hawick vernacular. Before the Division of the Common a proclamation was made at the Mercat Cross on Common Riding Friday, stating which parts of the Common were to be used for cutting turf etc. in the coming year.

procreat (prō-kree-a') pp., arch. procreated, begot – 'What if a man has sons three, Procreat and born from one belly, Can one of them be a Gentleman, And another be a Pesants son' [CWS].

Proctor (prok-tur) n. Rev. James (1826–60) probably born at Dalkeith. He started as an apprentice tailor, then switched to carpentry. He also became a strong advocate for Teetotallism, joining the British League of Junior Abstainers. He attended Edinburgh University and became a missionary under Rev. William Reid of Edinburgh. His health prevented him from completing the arduous course with the United Presbyterians, so he entered the Congregational Church. He was inducted to Hawick Evangelical Union (later Congregational) Kirk in 1857, but resigned the following year due to ill-health (and perhaps partly because of disputes among the congregation about remaining out of the Congregational Union, with which he had been involved). He became minister at Hamilton Congregational Church, but again his health cut this appointment short. He married Janet Chisholm and they had 1 child, but she died giving birth to a second. He wrote 'A Crack about the Drink; or, a Poetical Dialogue between a Total Abstainer and a Moderate Drinker' (1949). He also wrote poetry and hymns.
