Sinton and was then designated ‘of North Sinton’. In 1705 he secondly married Jean, daughter of James Loch of Drylaw. In 1695 and 1704 he was listed on the Commission of Supply for Roxburghshire. His children all died young. His portrait hangs in Surgeons’ Hall in Edinburgh. Gideon of Harwood-on-Teviot (d.1735), 3rd or 4th son of Simon of Swinside and grandson of William of the Binks. He was recorded as a Hawick Parish heritor in 1718 and became an elder in 1723. In 1724 he purchased Teindside from his brother Robert. He was probably the uncle of Rev. Simon Haliburton, minister of Castleton and Ashkirk. He married Mary Haliburton in 1715 and she died in 1735. Their children (all baptised in Hawick) included: Jean (b.1719); Barbara (b.1720); Simon (b.1722); Christian (b.1723), who married Rev. Isaac Davidson, minister at Sorbie, Wigtonshire; Elizabeth (b.1726), who married Andrew Oliver; and Mary (b.1728). Only Christian and Elizabeth survived their mother. The 1728 baptism was witnessed by Robert Scott of ‘F...’ (perhaps Falnash) and ‘Mr. Shiel in Todja...’. Gideon (b.c.1793) agricultural labourer in Castleton Parish. In 1835 and 1841 he was at Bellsheils. He married Agnes Anderson (b.1795) and their children were: Jean (b.1819); Betty (b.1821); Gideon (b.1824); Helen (b.1827); Mary (b.1830); Agnes (b.1832); Anne (b.1835); and Janet (b.1840). He could be the Gideon, son of John and Betty Crozier, born in Castleton in 1791. Gideon (1833–1913) son of John and Jane Goodfellow. In 1861 he was a dyker living at Muselie. In Robertson Parish in 1853 he married Margaret Wilson. Their children included: Agnes E.; Jane (b.1856); John (b.1859); Thomas (b.1861); James (b.1864); Archibald Hoy (b.1866); William (b.1868); Francis (b.1870); and Thomas (b.1873). Gilbert (15th C.) recorded as ‘Gilbert Elwald’ in 1453 when he witnessed a ‘letter of reversion’ between Andrew Ker of Altonburn and Sir Robert Colville of Oxnam for the lands of Feu-rule. It is unclear how he is related to other Elliots, but he may have a connection to John who witnessed a Rulewater sasine in 1436. Perhaps the same Gilbert is mentioned in 1493 when his son Robert produced a remission at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh for the crime of stealing a grey horse from William Scott of Tushielaw. Gilbert (15th C.) son of Nicholas, listed among a large number of Liddesdale men who failed to appear at the Justice-aire in 1494/5. Gilbert ‘Gib’ of the Shaws (16th C.) recorded in 1578 when he was held by Pater Hay of Megginch, with a pledge to the King for good behaviour. In 1580 he was held in ward in Falkland Castle when his keeper was ordered to present him to the Privy Council. It is unclear how he was related to other Elliots. He is probably the ‘Gib of the Schaws’ listed in 1580 when his procurator explained to the Privy Council that he had ‘departit hame to his awin cuntrie and sensyne wes slayne’. In 1583 he is ‘Gybbe Ellot of the Shauaes’ in a letter from English wardens; he is listed among the close kin of Robert of Redheugh, and surely related to Adam of the Shaws, who is also listed. Gilbert (16th C.) recorded among merchants of Edinburgh in a case before the Privy Council in 1565/6. His surname is given as ‘Elwand’. Gilbert ‘Gib’ (16th C.) nephew of Martin of Braidlie. In 1569 he was recorded as ‘Martin’s Gib the Cousin’ when he was among a number of pledges to support Martin of Braidlie with the Regent Moray. He was recorded being ‘left with my Lord Regents Grace to the returning of Martine Ellot’. He was also recorded in 1580 among Elliots who raided the farms of Harwood (on Teviot), Slaidhills, Whitlelaw and Hoscote; he was declared a rebel after not appearing. In 1584 he was ‘Gyb the cousin’, who defended the tower at Larriston, which was taken by an English raiding force under Sir John Forster; he was said to have been trained as a soldier in the wars in Flanders and France. He is ‘Martin’s Gib being Martins cosen’, recorded in 1590, along with ‘Martin’s Airchie’ and Martin’s brother Gib and others, when accused of stealing cattle and horses from England. Also in 1590 he and William, younger of the Steele, were accused of stealing cattle 2 years earlier. Additionally he was ‘Martins Gib being Martins cossen’ when accused of further rieving in 1590, along with elder Airchie, Will of the Steele and ‘Lang’ John. It is unclear who his father was, or whether he was the same as one of the contemporary Gibs. His killing by men of Tynedale is recorded in 1597, with the description that he was ‘a notorious offender in England, and besides, being a soldier and trained in war, was a captain and principal leader’. Gilbert ‘Gib’ (16th/17th C.) brother of Robert of Redheugh. In 1583 a letter from Musgrave to Burleigh describes him as ‘Gibbe Ellot’ among the most important Elliots of Liddesdale, along with his brothers Robert of Redheugh, William of Hartsgarth and Archibald. He may be the Gib, ‘son to Robine Ellott’ who was among a number of Elliots (along with servants of Robert of Redheugh), Croziers and others accused in 1590 of stealing livestock from Middleton Hall in England in 1589; he is recorded as ‘Gib Elliot son to Robin’, and his servant John Noble and ‘his man’ John Shevell were also listed. In 1591 he was described as ‘loit freind and seruitour’ of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme when he reuled Commonside, Northcroft, Hillend and ‘Stoghill’ from him, being given this lease for service performed for the Laird of Branxholme. In 1595 he was also servitor of Sir Walter Scott Branxholme when he witnessed a charter. He is probably the Gybb Elwood alias Robes Gibb’ who, according to an English account, along with Scott of Buccleuch and Scott of Harden met with some Englishmen to get help in the plan to rescue Kinmont Willie. He is probably the ‘Gyb Elliot brother to Robert Elliot of Reidheuch’ who was held as a prisoner in England in 1597. In 1599 he had a remission, along with Gideon Murray of Ellbank and Walter Scott of Harden, for burning Westburnflat in Liddesdale. In 1603 he was probably my louty Gilbert Elliot of the Kirkton to whom Sir Walter Scott leased the lands of Wester Commonside and Northcroft. He may have been an illegitimate son of Robert the 16th Chief, with his mother possibly being Helen Kield (unless this story is complete fabrication); he would then be the ‘bastard brother of Robert Elliot of Redheugh’ recorded in 1603. It is not impossible that he is the same man as ‘Gibbe wi the Gowden Gartins’. Gilbert ‘Gib’ (16th/17th C.) younger son of Martin of Braedlie. He may be the ‘Gibbie’ who, along with Archie and their accomplices, was accused of taking part in a raid into England in 1587. He is probably also the ‘Martins Gib’ in a group complained about by the English Warden for the murder of 2 Englishmen during a raid in 1588. He is recorded as brother of ‘Martin’s Arche’ in 1590 when, along with Gib, cousin of Martin, and others, he was accused of stealing cattle and horses from England. He was probably the ‘Martin’s Gib’ who, along with Will Elliot of Heuchhouse and ‘Adie’s John’ Crozier were accused of stealing from William Henderson of ‘Falfofeeld’ in 1590. Also in 1590 he was accused of stealing from Thomas Rutherford of Blackhall (in England), along with Martin’s sons (and so presumably his brothers) Aircie and John, as well as Martin of Prickinghaugh. He was probably the ‘Martin’s Gib’ accused in 1590 along with a list of Elliots and others said to have stolen from the ‘Hewrde’ family, as well as maiming and taking prisoner Christopher ‘of the Whithall’. He was probably the ‘Martin’s Gib’ listed in 1590 among Elliots and Armstrongs complained about by a large group of Englishmen for a raid on Blackcleugh in Kirkhaugh, taking many prisoners for ransom. He was probably the Gib, son of Martin, who (along with his brother John) was part of a complaint about a raid into Gilsland in 1596, led by Sir Walter Scott of Harden. He is probably the ‘Martin’s Gibbe’ who Lord Evers described being killed by English raiders in 1597; the slayer was a Dodd, it is said in retaliation for an earlier raid. He was described as ‘brought up in the wars in Flanders and France, and has since been a leader to that wicked race’. Note that he may be confused with ‘Martin’s Gib the Cousin’, who is recorded at about the same time. Gilbert ‘Gib’ (16th/17th C.) younger son of Gavin of Falnash. In 1595 he was mentioned along with Wat Scott of Harden and 2 of his nephews (sons of William of Falnash), Archie and Hob in a list of English complaints against Liddesdale men. His name is recorded as ‘Gibbe Elliott brother to Will E. of the Fawenesh’. Gilbert (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1598 as ‘Gib Elliot called Stottan Gib’, along with his brother John and other ‘brothers, tenats and servants’ of William of Falnash. There were complaints against them by Margaret, widow of James Douglas of Knightsrig, for stealing cattle from her lands of Corsetburn. Gilbert of the Mains (16th/17th C.) witnessed in 1599 to the bonds (signed at Branxholme) between Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch and the Armstrongs and Elliots of Liddesdale. His name is recorded as ‘Gilbert Elliot of the Maynis’; it is unclear where ‘the Mains’ might have been, but it seems likely he was a prominent Elliot of the time, and perhaps the same as one of the contemporary family members noted by another designation. Gilbert ‘Gib the Galyart’ (16th/17th C.) convicted in 1618 of stealing the purse of John Armstrong of Holm when they were in the house of Alexander Young of Selkirk. He was sentenced to be scourged through Edinburgh and then banished from the Kingdom. It is unclear to which branch of the Elliots he belonged. His nickname referred to a lively dance, and was apparently a common nickname for someone who was smart in dress or lively in spirit. Gilbert ‘Gib the Tutor’ (17th C.) described as a servant of Robert of Redheugh. He was involved in stealing cattle from Englishmen at ‘Chipsies’ and ‘Islysyde’ in about 1623. He was one of the men who had planned to murder Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1624, as part of the feud between the Scotts and the Elliots. He is listed as ‘Gib Elliot, callit the Tutor’, along with Gavin of Hillhouse and ‘Will Elliot, callit Gibbis Will’.
Elliot

who may have been his son. They were meant to kill the Earl in Jedburgh at the time of a Justice Court, and then followed him to Edinburgh, but after failing they confessed. Robert of Redheugh stated that the idea for the murder originally came from him, but Gavin of Hillhouse said that ‘Gib was bot a feible couter and wald never do the turne’. Gilbert (17th C.) married Janet Richardson in Kelso in 1635. They had a daughter Elizabeth in 1636. Janet (b.1639) and Margaret (b.1642), both baptised in Hawick Parish, were probably also his children. He may be the same as one of the other Gilberts. Gilbert (17th C.) signatory of the National Covenant in Hawick in 1638. He is recorded as being ‘now in Quhithauche’, which could be Whithaugh in Liddesdale. Gilbert of Brugh (d.bef. 1648) 2nd son of Gavin, he gained the Lairdship since his elder brother Archibald died before 1621. In 1621 he is recorded as witness to a contract for money due by the Chisholm to his deceased brother. He is recorded in the Circuit Court of 1623 when he acted as caution (along with several others) for Mungo Scott in Castleside (who may have been his tenant). His wife’s name is unknown and his only son was Archibald (d.1650), who was served heir to his grandfather in 1648. However, details of these generations of the Elliots of Brugh seem quite uncertain. Gilbert (17th C.) younger son of Robert of Falnash. In 1637 he was apprenticed to John Nichol, merchant in Edinburgh. Gilbert (17th C.) younger son of Archibald of Brugh. He was mentioned being ‘in Carllops’ and brother of John in Southfield (who succeeded to Brugh) in 1665. Nothing else is known about him. Sir Gilbert ‘Gibbie’ (1651–1718) of Heads-shad and of Minto, 1st Baronet and Lord Minto. He was younger son of Gavin Eliott of Grange and Midlem Mill, and grandson of ‘Gibby wi the Gowden Gartins’ (although these early generations are somewhat uncertain). His sister Margaret was the mother of Rev. Robert Lithgow of Ashkirk. He may have purchased part of the land of Minto (perhaps Craigend and Deanfoot) from John Turnbull in about 1674. He may be the ‘Minto’ who acted as agent for renting some of the Duchess of Buccleuch’s farms in 1675. He may be the Laird of Minto who paid the Land Tax on more than £2100 in 1678. He was a lawyer in Edinburgh, and a zealous Presbyterian. In 1679 he acted to have the preacher William Veitch’s sentence commuted from execution to banishment, and it is said that this established him as a capable lawyer. In 1681 he is reported to have ridden from London, beating the King’s messenger, and allowing the Earl of Argyll to escape from Edinburgh Castle before the capital sentence was imposed. He later took part in Argyll’s disastrous expedition to Scotland from Holland (perhaps helping to raise funds, along with the Lairds of Torwoodlee and Polwarth). In 1685 he was among the rebels (under Sir Patrick Home and Sir John Cochrane) who engaged the Royalist force at Muirdykes in Renfrewshire, and afterwards fled to Holland. He was then convicted of high treason for plotting against the King, but pardoned in 1687 (it was stated this was because of the service to the Crown offered by his father). He became an advocate in 1687 and was fully back in favour when William of Orange acceded in 1689, when he was appointed Clerk to the Privy Council in 1689 (until 1692). He was knighted in 1692. In 1694 he was listed as one of the creditors of Gilbert Eliott of Stanedge. In 1696 he was on the Commission of Supply for Roxburghshire and in 1698 for Selkirkshire. In 1696 he bought the Headshaw estate (from the female heiress Mary and her husband Patrick Porteous) and in 1697 purchased Langhope (probably the one near Ashkirk). He was created a Baronet of Nova Scotia (for Headshaw) in 1700 and became a Judge. He was appointed one of the Parliamentary Commissioners for Roxburghshire in 1702 and hence was a member of the last Scottish Parliament, voting against the Union. In 1703 he purchased the Minto estate (which had been combined with Craigend and Deanfoot) from Gideon Scott of Highchester. In 1704 he was one of the Commissioners of Supply for Roxburghshire and for Selkirkshire. In 1705 he was appointed Deputy Keeper of the Signet and shortly afterwards was created a Lord of Session, taking the title of first Lord Minto. Also in 1705 he had a royal charter for the lands of Headshaw, Dryden, Crawknowe and ‘Clews’ in Ashkirk Parish, which included the erection of these lands into the Barony of Headshaw, as well as the patronage and teinds of Ashkirk Parish. In 1706 he combined the Barony of Headshaw and his lands of Langhope and Minto into the Barony of Minto and Craigend. In 1705 he was one of the members of the Scottish Parliament to vote against having a single Parliament for the whole of the United Kingdom. His portrait was painted in about 1715. On the frieze of the pulpit in Ashkirk Kirk are the initials ‘S / GE’ and ‘D / (I)C’ for ‘Sir Gilbert Eliott’ and ‘Dame Jean Carre’, his second wife. He married first Mary (or Helen) Stevenson, daughter of an Edinburgh Burgess, and they had one daughter, Mary, who married Sir John Elphinstone of Logie; his first wife died in 1689 after 9 years of marriage. In 1692 he secondly married Jean, daughter of Sir Andrew Kerr of Cavers Carre. Their children were: Sir Gilbert (b.1693), who succeeded; and Andrew, who drowned at age 16 on his way to Holland. Gilbert (17th/18th C.) 2nd son of Robert of Larriston and grandson of James Elliot of Stobs. He was a merchant in Hawick, was said to be ‘of Nethermill’ (which was probably the place of that name in Dumfriesshire, adjacent to lands owned by his grandfather, John Maxwell of Cowhill), and is described in 1696 as ‘brother german to Robert Elliot of Larriston’. His son Charles Edward was born in 1693, and settled in Essex, while another (unnamed) son eventually emigrated to California, where he is said to have descendants. It is claimed that both sons fought in the 1715 Jacobite uprising and later lived in Java for a while (but like other family legends, this may be confusing generations and individuals). Gilbert (17th/18th C.) son of William of Penchrise and Janet, daughter of John Elliot of Thorslieshope. He was ‘at Mount’, which may have been the farmstead near Whitleyfoot. He died without issue. Gilbert (c.1670–aft. 1727) second son of John of Brugh, who farmed at Southfield, and younger brother of William ‘the Laceman’. He lived for many years at Nether Southfield and took over the tenancy at Winningtonrig in 1710. He was also factor for his cousin, Sir Gilbert Elliott of Stobs. He is probably the Gilbert who leased the farm of Over Southfield (perhaps an error for Nether Southfield) from the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1698. He witnessed a baptism for Glendinnings in 1702, and both he and John ‘in Nether Southfield’ witnessed a baptism in 1704. He was stated in 1767 to have been tenant in Nether Southfield like his father before him and in about 1710 he ‘broke Hawick Common by plowing a part of it’, for which he got no protection from the Duchess’ Chamberlain, ‘Auld Falnash’; during the riding of the Common that year his flock was hounded more than those of the other neighbouring farmers and he was fined by the Hawick Bailies. In 1717 there was a complaint that one of his servants had encroached upon the Hawick Common at Winnington Moss. He witnessed the baptism of a child of Walter Scott in Newbigging in 1725. In 1727 his brother William of Wells left him money in his will. He is probably the Gilbert who witnessed the baptism of his grandson Gilbert in Hawick in 1734. He married Agnes Turnbull of Southfield in 1698; she was daughter of Walter Turnbull (from Jedburgh) and Helen Elliot (from Hawick). Their children were: Jean and Barbara, twins (b.1701); Helen (b.1702), who married James Grieve, farmer at Commonside; Jane (or ‘Jammet’, b.1704); John (b.1708), who became a Captain and married Jean, daughter of James Grieve in Todshawhaugh; Agnes (b.1710), who died in infancy; Elizabeth (Arabella, b.1712); James; and another Agnes (b.1718). They were all christened locally (in Hawick, Cavers and Kirkton Parishes). The 1701 baptism was witnessed by his father John and brother George, while the 1704 witnesses were John Elliot (uncle of Sir Gilbert of Stobs) and shoemaker John Elliot. He was referred to as ‘Mr. Elliot in Rig’ in the 1712 baptism and as being ‘in Rige’ in 1718. The year of his death is not known. Gilbert (d.bef. 1752) son of Robert of Larriston. It is unclear if he was the oldest son, but he appears to have been the only one who had issue. He settled in Newcastle and married Margaret, daughter of James Scott of Caulfield. He had 2 children: Jane Stewart, who married John Williams of Kensington; and Maj.-Gen. William (b.1741), who bought back the family lands of Larriston, but died unmarried. Sir Gilbert (1693–1766) 2nd Baronet and Lord Minto, eldest son of ‘Gibbie’. He was educated in law at Utrecht University in the Netherlands, and became an advocate in 1715. He was M.P. for Roxburghshire 1722–26. He reached the bench as a Lord of Session in 1726, assuming the title of Lord Minto, later becoming a Judge and eventually Lord Justice Clerk of Scotland in 1763. It is said that it was partly through his influence that his relative Sir Gilbert Elliott of Stobs was eventually pardoned for the murder of Colonel Stewart. He purchased Raperlaw (which had once belonged to an Elliott of Stobs), followed by Fallahill in 1727, Newlands in 1734 and part of Langhaugh in 1743. He was responsible for the extensive alterations carried out at Minto House in 1744 and 1745, including the addition of 68 new windows, and building up a library. He also improved the grounds, with a pond-head being built across the glen in 1735, an avenue of larches added in about 1736, and most of the houses moved to Minto Green. In 1739 he was among the local landowners asked to decide where the Teviot Brig in Hawick should be built. An anti-Jacobite, he reputedly hid among the crazes when part of the Jacobite force stopped at Minto House in 1745. He paid the window tax for Minto House in 1748. He was known as a music-lover and supposedly introduced the German flute into Scotland in 1726. When appointed Lord Justice Clerk, he had a house built in Edinburgh, on Argyll Square. He was recorded as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire in 1761. In 1718 he married Helen (d.1774), daughter of Sir Robert Stuart (or Stewart) of Alvanbank and had 13 children: Eleanor (b.1719), who married John Rutherford of Edgerston; Jean (b.1720), who died in infancy; Sir Gilbert (1722–77), who succeeded; Mary (b.1724), who probably died young; Robert (1725–57), Captain in the Royals; Jean (or Jane, 1727–1805), who was author of ‘Flowers of the Forest’; Andrew (b.1728), who became Lieutenant-Governor of New York, married Elizabeth Plumstead and lived at Greenwells; Marianne (1730–1811), who died unmarried in Edinburgh; John (1732–1808), became an Admiral and died at Monteviot; twins Margaret (b.1734), who died in infancy and Ann (or Anne, b.1734), who married Charles Congleton of Congleton in Edinburgh in 1762; Grizell (b.1737), who probably died young; and Archibald (1743–59), who died in Antigua, aged 16. He died suddenly at Minto. Sir Gilbert of Minto (1722–77) 3rd Baronet, son of Sir Gilbert. Born at Minto, he was educated for the Scottish bar, becoming an advocate in 1743. He went to Holland in 1744 and married 2 years later. He was said to be a great public speaker. He was M.P. for Selkirkshire 1753–65 and for Roxburghshire 1765–77 (when he died, but was succeeded as M.P. by his son). He was appointed one of the Lords of the Admiralty, as well as being Keeper of the Signet in Scotland. He was conspicuous as a parliamentary orator, being said to have almost single-handedly argued the successful case for making the office of Sheriffs in Scotland independent of the Crown. He was recorded as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire in 1761 (when still ‘junior’ of Minto). In 1761 he became Lord of the Treasury, in 1762 Treasurer of the House of Commons and from 1771 he was Treasurer of the Navy. He was also known as a man of philosophical interests and literary talent, with his song ‘Amynta’ being popular in its day; it begins ‘My sheep I neglected, I broke my sheep-crook, And all the gay haunts of my youth I forsook’ (or alternatively ‘My sheep I’ve forsaken, and left my sheep-hook, And all the gay haunts of my youth I forsook’). He also had poems published on the death of Col. James Gardiner and the Earl and Countess of Sutherland. In addition he wrote a letter to David Hume, which was later published. Before inheriting Minto he lived in London and later Twickenham. In 1767 he started the first experimental postal service in Hawick. He is probably the Sir Gilbert who is recorded as owner of the lands of Dryden, Headshaw, Crawknoewe and Clews in about 1788. In 1746 he married Agnes Murray-Kynynmound, only daughter of Hugh Dalrymple; she was heiress (from Sir Alexander Murray) of Melgund in Forfarshire and of Kynynmound in Fife, and died in 1778. He was succeeded by his son Sir Gilbert (b.1751), who became 1st Earl of Minto and adopted the Murray-Kynynmound extension to his surname when inheriting his mother’s lands. His other children were: Isabella (b.1749), who died unmarried; Hugh (1752–1830), Governor of Madras and the Leeward Islands; Alexander (1754–78) of the East India Company; Rev. Robert (1755–1824), Rector of Wheldrake; David (b.1757), who died aged 5; an unnamed son; Eleanor (1758–1818), who married William Eden, 1st Baron Auckland; and Marianne, who died in Edinburgh in 1811. He died when visiting Marseilles for his health and is buried at Minto. Gilbert (b.1725) born in Cavers Parish, son of Walter in Brugh. He became tenant farmer at Blackburnfoot in Castleton Parish. He married Betty Forbes and their children included: George, who lived in Castleton; Gilbert, tenant in Glenzier, who married a Miss Davidson; William; and Margaret, who married Adam Scott from Langhaugh. Gilbert (b.1731) younger son of the 2nd William of Bothwickbrae. He had one child, Thomas (probably illegitimate, by Sarah Growesmith), who purchased Wilton Lodge. He paid the Horse Tax at Langlands in 1785–86. He is recorded as ‘Gilbert Elliot of Longlands’ or Langlands when he was taxed for having a footman in 1785 and 1786 and a carriage in 1786 and 1787. He was also taxed for having 2 female servants in 1785 and 1786; his son Thomas is listed on the tax roll from 1787, suggesting he may have died or moved. Gilbert (1734–59) eldest son of Capt. John of the Elliots of Brugh. He was baptised in Hawick, the witnesses being his grandfathers Gilbert Elliot and James Grieve. He joined the Navy when no more than 10 years old, and served under Capt. Elliot Elliot (his distant cousin from the Stobs Elliots) on the fireship Aetna. In 1759 he was on the Tyger, commanded by Capt. Brereton, ‘who deserted his post for a slight wound in the head and tied a white napkin on his face and went below’. Elliot took over command of the vessel ‘till a cannon shot carried away his bowels, and he dropped on the deck’. Apparently the Captain was court-martialed, and although acquitted was afterwards known in the Navy as the ‘white-faced Captain’ because of this incident. In his will, made a week before his death, he left most of his possessions to his shipmates, but his sword and belt ‘to William Elliot of the Honourable Company’s Military of Madras’ (whose identity is unclear). He died unmarried. Sir Gilbert Murray Kynynmound (1751–1814) 4th Baronet and 1st Earl of Minto. Son of Sir Gilbert and Agnes Murray Kynynmound, he was educated largely in England. He studied for the bar, but followed his father into politics. He became M.P. for Morpeth, Helston and Berwick in 1774 and was known for his debating skills. He was then M.P. for Roxburgh 1777–84 (following in his father’s footsteps), Berwick 1786–90 and Helston 1790–95. He was served heir to his father in 1778, in the Barony of Minto and Headshaw, and the lands of Shielwood. He paid the land tax for Langhope in Ettrick Parish in 1785. In 1780 he held Craigend, but had liferented much of the rest of Minto to 6 other gentlemen (surely for the sole purpose of allowing them to vote in Roxburghshire, where he was standing as a candidate), each of them having just a little more than the required £400 of land: Alexander Alison; David Dalrymple, Lord Westhall; Sir John Dalrymple, Baron Dalrymple; Rev. Robert Elliot, his brother; Sir John Stewart of Allanbank; and Robert Trotter of Bush. At the same time he disposed the liferent of Dryden to 3 other men: Dr. William Elliot; George Potts, younger of Todrig; and Rev. Simon Haliburton. He was listed as a voter in Selkirkshire in 1788. In 1788 he was listed as owner of most of the Parish of Minto, valued at £2108 13s 4d and Newlands (which had formerly been in Hassendean Parish), valued at £80, as well as Raperlaw (valued at £416) and Willie’s Peel (valued at £104) in Lilliesleaf Parish and the associated teinds (valued at £129 12s 4d), and Shielwood, Dryden, parts of Headshaw and associated teinds (valued at £1420 18s 4d) in Ashkirk Parish. He was taxed for having 4 servants (gardener) in 1778 and 1779 and 3 gardeners in 1785 and 1786, with 5 (including butler, footman and groom) in 1787–92 and 6 in 1793, 1794 and 1797. He paid tax on 3 female servants in 1785 and 1786, 6 servants in 1787, 7 in 1788, 6 in 1789, 5 in 1790 and 4 in 1791. He was recorded on the Horse Tax Rolls in 1785–86, when he had 2 carriage horses, 4 in 1787–89 and 6 in 1790–94. In 1797 he was taxed for having 8 farm horses and 1 saddle horse at Minto. He was also taxed for owning a carriage in the period 1787–98. In 1791 he gave a speech in the House of Commons proposing the repeal of the Test and Corporation Acts (a popular cause in Hawick at the time). He was appointed Commissioner in Toulon in 1793, then went to Corsica as Viceroy. In 1796 the Duke of Buccleuch and others tried to convince him to remain in Corsica rather than contest the election. He was present at the Battle of St. Vincent in 1797, and a sword taken there from the Captain of the ‘San Josef’ was presented to him by Adm. Nelson. On his return in 1797 he was made Earl of Minto for his services attempting to secure Corsica against the French Republic. He was Lieut.-Col. of the 1st Battalion of Roxburghshire volunteers in about 1803. His estate added the lands of Barnhills in 1797 and Hassendeanbank about 1799. In 1806 he resigned the lands of Barnhills, Hassendeanbank, Standhill and Lantonhall in his own favour. He was appointed Governor General of Bengal (which effectively meant India at that time) in 1807, holding the post until 1813. There he annexed Amboyna and the Molucca Islands, took Bourbon and Mauritius from the French and subdued the pirates in Borneo. He also helped quell an army mutiny and personally led the expedition to take Java (where John Leyden died) from the Dutch. He was on the subscription list for Jamieson’s Scots dictionary in 1808. Returning to Britain in 1814 where he was created Earl of Minto, and Viscount Melgund. Much of the improvements to the Minto estate were carried out under the supervision of his wife, since he spent so much time away; Minto House was extensively altered, with the work completed in 1814, and the plantations were added to; this included doubling the width, adding to both wings and covering the entrance hall with a cupola. Unfortunately he died on his way back to Scotland, the sad news being brought to people preparing to draw his carriage through the streets of Hawick and light bonfires in celebration. Many locals apparently refused to believe he was dead, and there grew a tradition that he lived in secret rooms in the House and wandered the Crags at night. A life-size portrait of him hangs in the Town Hall. In 1777 he married Anna Maria, daughter of Sir George Amyand and she died in 1829. They had 3 daughters and 4 sons: Gilbert Elliot (b.1782), who became the 2nd Earl; Adm. Sir George (b.1784); Anna Maria (1785–1855), who married Lt.-Gen. Sir Rufane Shawe Donkin; John...

Elliot

Edmund (b.1788), M.P. for Roxburghshire; Harriet Mary Frances (1790–1825), who died unmarried; William (1792–1811), who died returning from Bengal; and Catherine Sarah (1797–1862), who married Sir John Peter Boileau. He is buried in Westminster Abbey. He adopted the addition of ‘Murray-Kynynmound’ to his surname by royal licence in 1797 (the surname becomes confusing at this point; see Elliot-Murray-Kynynmound). His will was proved at the Prerogative Court of Canterbury in 1815. His portrait, by George Chinnery, is in the Museum. His wife's portrait was painted by Sir Joshua Reynolds, but was stolen from Minto House in 1930. Gilbert (18th/19th C.) son of Gilbert in Blackburnoot and descended from the Elliots of Falnash. He was tenant in Glenguez, near Canoombie and married a Miss Davidson according to a family pedigree. He is probably the Gilbert, married to Isobel Davidson, whose children, baptised in Canoombie Parish, included Elizabeth (b.1786), Margaret (b.1790), John (b.1792), Margaret (again, b.1794) and Matthew (b.1797). Gilbert (18th/19th C.) resident of Minto Parish. His children included: Gilbert (b.1807); Mary Elizabeth (b.1811); and Frederick William (b.1812). It is unclear how he is related to other Gilberts. Gilbert (b.1809) born in Ashkirk Parish, son of Jesse and Margaret Smith, he was a millwright in Hawick. He was listed as a journeyman millwright on Melgund Place in 1841, by 1851 was a millwright at the Coach House on Langlands Place in Wilton, but in 1851 was still listed as a journeyman millwright at Langlands Place. In 1832 he married Cecily (or Cecilia) Robson (b.c.1811) and their children included: Walter (b.1834); Helen (b.1837); George (b.c.1839); and Margaret (b.1841). Lt.-Col. Gilbert (1826–65) 5th and youngest son of Gilbert Elliot-Murray-Kynynmoung, 2nd Earl of Minto. He served with the Rifle Brigade. In 1858 he married Katherine Anne, daughter of Rev. Dr. Gilbert, Bishop of Chichester. Gilbert John of Brugh (1864–1945) 2nd son of Rev. William of Hereford, from whom he succeeded as head of the Elliots of Brugh. He married Bessie Clark Davidson in 1895 and their children were Air Chief Marshall Sir William and Brig. James. Grizel (17th C.) only child of Simon ‘in Philhope’. She was the heiress of the lands at Philhope (in the Borthwick). When her father died she was given as ward to Robert of Fahnash, and later (sometime before 1644) married his son John. In 1642 she was served heir to her great-grandfather Simon of Philhope in the 10-pound land of Philhope. In 1644, with the consent of her husband, she resigned half the lands of Philhope to her mother Elizabeth Chisholme and step-father Archibald in Philhope. Rev. Harold ‘Harry of Peebles’ (c.1611–53) recorded as ‘Hairie Elliot’ and also ‘Henry Elliot’. He was son of William of Peebles, and grandson of Gavin of Brugh (near Dodburn). He graduated from Edinburgh University in 1631, taught for a while in Jedburgh, was presented to Bedrule Parish in late 1639 and ordained there in 1640. He replaced Henry Pearson, who was ousted for his connections to Episcopalianism. However, he was himself ousted from his position in 1649 for being on the side of the King. He may have remained in Bedrule until his death about 4 years later, and ‘lived in a most dejected and miserable and cast down tradition’. After that the church of Bedrule was vacant for another 5 years. He married Elizabeth Douglas and also earlier Helen MacGhie (daughter of John of Balmaghie) and had at least 3 children. In 1650 he had a discharge of a debt with Robert Pringle, ‘tutor’ to Will Bennet of Grubet. It is recorded in 1662 that Elizabeth Douglas and 7 fatherless children petitioned Parliament, claiming persecution (presumably for not supporting the Covenanters) of her husband and family for publicly supporting his Majesty’s interests, for example during the expedition of 1648, and that he had been forced out of his charge, and they had lived from hand to mouth since then. They were allowed £100 out of vacant stipends (although 10 years later she had received none of it). His children include Christian, John (possibly son of his first wife, who married Elizabeth Fithie) and Adam (who may have been a minister in London). John’s elder son was Thomas, who was Solicitor to the Prince of Wales, and his elder son was Sir John of Peebles (d.1786), who lived in London and was a famous physician. Hector (16th/17th C.) appeared before the Judiciary Court in Dumfries in 1622. He was recorded being ‘in Rig’, so that he might have been related to the Elliots of Rig; however, it seems likely to be a different Rig. Hector (18th C.) lived at Southdean, where he married Christian Oliver in 1736. Their children included: Robert (b.1738); John (b.1740); and Mary (b.1741). Hector (18th C.) resident of Southdean Parish. He is surely related to the earlier Hector, as well as Robert from the same parish, whose children were born about a decade later. His children included: William (b.1753); Susan (b.1754); and Christian (b.1756). Helen of Binks (b.1796) daughter of John, she was known as ‘the White Rose o Liddesdale’ and married Archibald Blake in Liverpool in 1820. Henry (16th C.) recorded among a large list of men of Liddesdale who did not appear at the Justice-aiire in 1494/5, with the Lord of Liddesdale and Captain of Hermitage being fined. He was probably related to some of the others Elliots who were listed. Henry (17th C.) recorded as ‘Harie Elliot, son-in-law’ when he was overseer of William Elliot of Binks in 1665. Assuming that the date is correct, it is unclear who he might have been. Henry (17th C.) resident of Denholm on the Hearth Tax in 1694. Henry (d.bef. 1715) farmer at ‘Sorbe-trees (i.e. Sorbietrees) near Newcastle.' In 1715 Henry Elliot of Bells in Northumberland and John Elliot of Larriston in Roxburghshire were appointed ‘tutors’ for his children Jane, Elizabeth, Margaret, Gilbert, Christine, Henry and Adam. Based on the names and the date, it seems this may be the same man as Henry of Lodgell. Henry ‘Harry’ (17th/18th C.) 2nd (or 3rd) Laird of Harwood, son of William and grandson of Simon of the Binks. His father left him the lands of Harwood, Tythehouse and Appotside. He built a new house at Harwood and also purchased Chapelknowe in 1675. He paid the land tax in Hobkirk Parish in 1678. He was Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire in 1678 and 1690. He is recorded in 1676 as ‘Harie Elliott’ when he was cautioner to a ‘letter of horning’ against William Elliot of Phillhope, brought by Walter Scott, called ‘Westport’. He witnessed Sir Gilbert Elliot of Stobs ‘bond of provision’ in 1677. In 1681 he was a witness for a bond between Walter Lorraine and Walter Scott in Wauchope. He is recorded in a bond of 1683 with Robert, Lord Jedburgh, with Simon Elliot of Swinside as cautioner, and in 1688 he was a cautioner for Gilbert Elliot of Stonedige. He also feued the lands of ‘Caephope and Calahope’ from Sir John Scott of Acrum in 1692. He had a bond with William Elliot of Bewlie in 1692, another in 1694 with John Kerr of Cavers, and one in 1696 with Rev. John Goudie of Sprouston. He appears to have paid off some of Gilbert Elliot of Stonedige’s debts in the mid-1690s. He was the Laird of Harwood in 1694 when the tax on 7 hearths was paid on ‘Harits hous and office houses’. In 1694 he purchased Fairmielees for his eldest son William, reserving liferent for himself. However, in 1699 he gave up the liferent on the condition that William paid off some of his debts and provided for the 2 youngest sons, John and Henry. He married Mary, daughter of John Scott of Dryhope and had at least 6 children. He had 3 sons who married sisters, all of them daughters of the Laird of Todrig, Walter Scott: William (who succeeded) married Jean; John married Nelly; and Henry of Peel married Elizabeth. He had another son, Walter of ORMiston, who is said to have married the eldest daughter of Andrew Kerr. He also had a daughter Elizabeth, who married Robert Elliot, 2nd Laird of Midlem Mill, and another daughter Anne (or Anna) who married William Cur-rer, tenant in Hyndhope. In 1699 he gave his eldest son William the lands of Harwood, Appotside and Tythehouse in agreement for paying his debts and granting him a yearly allowance (the implication is that he was in firm by this time, his son already being mentioned in all the documents relating to Harwood for several years previously). The dates of his birth and death are unknown, but he was certainly alive in 1701, and in 1707 his heir was William still described as ‘younger of Harwood’. Henry of Lodgell (1672–1714) 2nd son of John of Tholrieshope, Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire. His brothers were John of the Binks and William of Tholrieshope. He succeeded his father in Hudshouse. In 1708 he had a Crown Charter of the lands of Lodgell in Esesdale (part of what had been known as Black Tarras), this being settled on him by his brother William, after Simon of Lodgell became bankrupt. He married Margaret (1680–1768), daughter of Robert Elliot of Midlem Mill; she survived him for more than 50 years. Their children were: William of Lodgell, who married Jane, daughter of William Elliot of Harwood-ON-RULE; John and Robert, who probably died young; Adam in Flatt, who married Elizabeth Elliot of Sorbietrees; Margaret, who married Charles, brother of Scott of Gorrenberry; Catherine, who married Edmund Atchison in Mosspeebell; Elizabeth, who married Robert Scott in Single; Jean, who married John Armstrong in Sorbie; and Henry (1712–94), who farmed at Flatt and married Janet Little. Henry (17th/18th C.) son of William of Penchrise and Bessie Grieve, he was tenant in Riccarton. He married Isobel, daughter of John Elliot in Dinlees, and sister of John in Park (mentioned in 1730). Their children included: William, a baker in Hawick; Catherine, married Thomas Armstrong of Riccarton Mill; and Jean. Henry of Peel (17th/18th C.) son of Henry of Harwood and Mary Scott of Dryhope. He may be the Henry ‘in Hudshouse’ recorded as one of the witnesses to the 1700 marriage contract between William Elliot of Harwood (his brother) and Jean, daughter of Walter Scott of Todrig. He was tenant farmer at Bells in Northumberland and was listed on the roll of electors for Roxburghshire in 1761. He was a tenant in Deadwater; one story is recounted (in 'Beauties of the Border') where after a harsh winter he reported to the Duke of Northumberland that unlike on the neighbouring farms he instructed his shepherds not to skin any of the dead sheep until the warm weather came, ‘when, to my great joy, the most part of them came to life again’!

He is said to have been well known as a ‘toper’, with his standing toast being ‘Here’s to all Elliots and Elliots’ bairns, And them that lie in the Elliots’ airmes’. He married Elizabeth Scott of Todrig (probably the sister of 2 of his brothers’ wives). He had many children, but only 3 are recorded: Henry of Peel, who married Jean, daughter of John Elliot of the Binks and sold Peel; Walter (d.1741), surgeon on H.M.S. Waiger, who died following a shipwreck off Patagonia; and William, who was a Captain and tenant in Rowanburnfoot. Henry (1700-84) Laird of Harwood, successor to William. In 1731 he signed the marriage contract of William Elliot of Loddegill and Jean Elliot of Harwood (this being before he succeeded to Harwood). He did not get along with his father, particularly after much of Harwood was let for an extended period to the Pott brothers. He appealed to the Court of Session about his father’s behaviour and finally managed the estate for his father’s trustees. He was keen to improve the lands, in particular to enclose the fields, but he cared nothing for antiquities, and had all the old buildings pulled down (including the old town of Harwood). He did, however, build an edifice thatched with heather (‘Elliot’s Folly’) on a small hill, from which he could watch his workers. He paid the window tax in Hobkirk churchyard. He never married and was succeeded by his nephew William; the succession was set out in a ‘deed of tailzie’ in 1769, and formalised in a disposition of 1783. Henry (18th C.) younger son of John, farmer in Cooms. He farmed at Sorbietrees. It is unclear if he was related to the earlier Henry in Sorbietrees. He married Christian Scott, from Falnash. Their children were: William in Sorbietrees; Catherine; and Elizabeth, who married Adam Elliot in Flatt. Henry (1712-91) younger son of Henry of Loddegill, he was farmer at Flatt. He is probably the ‘Henry Elliot in Flatt’ who paid the window tax in Castleton Parish in 1748. He was recorded at Flatt on the 1785-91 Horse Tax Rolls. He served as an executor for Henry of Peel, who died in 1780. In 1786 he subscribed to a theological book by a Carlisle author. He was a witness in 1788 at the court proceedings to establish Maj.-Gen. William Elliot as head of the clan. Also in 1788 he was listed among the voters of Roxburghshire, specifically under ‘Votes of Mr. Thomas Waugh’. He married Janet Little (c.1730-99). Their children were: Margaret (b.1760), who died young; Catherine (b.1762), who married Dr. Andrew Graham from Dalkeith, probably related to Dr. Walter Graham of Hawick; Henry (1763–93), who died unmarried; and John (1769–1823), who married Jean Scott and farmed at Flatt. Henry of Peel (d.1780) son of Henry of Peel and Elizabeth Scott from Todrig. He paid the window tax in Castleton Parish in 1748. He was recorded as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1761. He sold Peel, and afterwards farmed at Rowanburnfoot in Dumfriesshire. He married Jean, daughter of John Elliot of Binks. Their children included: Jean, William and Thomas, who all died unmarried; Capt. John (d.1782) of the 28th Foot Regiment, died at St. Kitts; George (c.1753–1807), who had a lumber business in North Carolina; Col. Henry of the Royal Marines, who emigrated to Canada; and Catherine, who married Joseph Jackson in Harlaw Mill. His executors were: his brother Capt. William; Henry in Flatt; John of Binks; advocate Adam Ogilvie; Cornelius Elliot, W.S.; Lieut. John; Robert, brother of Henry of Harwood; and John in Binks. Henry (1731–90) son of William of Tarras, he was tenant in Dinlees. He is recorded at Dinlees in 1791 when he subscribed to John Learmont’s book of poetry. Henry (b.c.1740) son of William of Bush and Binks. He was tenant farmer in Stanniswater, Westerkirk. He married Jean Laidlaw from Gorrenberry and their children included: Henry, who died young; William in Stanniswater (b.1774), who moved to Fauldshope; Margaret (c.1776–1842), who married Walter Anderson of Broom; and Catherine, who married James Graham at Irving. Maj.-Gen. Henry of Rosebank, Kelso (1763–1841) younger son of Robert of Harwood. He was a member of the Jedforest Club. He was served as heir of provision to his uncle Henry of Harwood in 1787. He married Jean (or Janet, 1780–1863), daughter of Rev. Dr. Thomas Somerville. He died without issue. Henry (c.1765–1860) tenant at West Fodderlee and Westerhouses. He could be the son of William, shepherd in Templehallshiel, born in Hobkirk Parish in 1764. He was at West Fodderlee in 1841. In 1851 he was a widower at Westerhouses, farming 200 arable acres and 870 acres of moor and pasture, employing 13 people. He married Robina Burnett (c.1722–1844). Their children included: Henry (1801/2–73), tenant at Greenriver; and Robert (c.1807–45). He died at Westerhouses. Henry (18th/19th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. It is unclear how he was related to other contemporary Elliots. His children included: Henry (b.1812); Betty (b.1815); an unnamed child (b.1817); and Robert (b.1819). Henry (1769–1841) son of Capt. Robert and Elizabeth Pringle. He became an ensign in the 70th Regiment, serving in Ireland and the West Indies. He was then an officer with the 60th and 96th Regiments, and ended up as Lieut.-Col. He retired from the Army and settle at Rosebank, near Kelso. He became a member of the Jedforest Club and was the chairman at the 1834 dinner when refusal to toast the sitting M.P. led to most of the Whigs to leave the club. He married Janet, daughter of Rev. Dr. Somerville of Jedburgh. He died at Rosebank, Kelso, and is buried in Jedburgh Kirkyard. Henry (1792–1874) son of William in Dinlees. He was a tenant farmer in Colterscleuch and Dinlees. He leased Colterscleuch in 1816 and gave up the lease of Dinlees in 1842. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘ Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. He was listed at Colterscleuch in 1841 and in 1851 and 1861 was farmer of 1700 acres there, employing 5 labourers. He was still listed there in 1868. He married Janet (b.1793), daughter of Walter Elliot in Hermitage. Their children included: William (b.1813), tenant in Colterscleuch; Janet (b.1815); Helen (b.1815), twin of Janet; William (again, 1817–98) tenant in Colterscleuch; Agnes (b.1820); Agnes (again, b.1823); Margaret (1825–1905); Betsy (b.c.1829); Walter (1827–49); Esther (1833–56); Mary (b.c.1835) and Joanna (1837–1920), who married John Harrison, and had children who later farmed at Colterscleuch. He is buried at Castleton. Henry (1793–1818) eldest son of John, tenant in Flatt, he was born in Castleton Parish. He had a son William (b.1817) in Cumberland with Esther Glendinning of Newcastleton. He died in Jamaica Henry (1801/2–73) son of Henry, farmer at West Fodderlee and Westerhouses, he was born at Rawflat. He was tenant of Greenriver (i.e. Hobsburn). In the 1830s he farmed at West Fodderlee, and at Gatehousecote in the 1840s. In 1851 he was at Gatehousecote, farming 1300 acres of pasture and employing 35 people. By 1861 he was at Greenriver, as farmer of 4300 acres, employing 30 labourers. He lived there for the rest of his life. He also ran the various farms of the Abbotrule estate for the 4 Henderson brothers. He also had the farms of Dalgleish, Westerhouses (where he was recorded in a directory of 1868) and Dykeraw. Additionally he ran the financial arrangements for Charles Scott, who farmed at Tythehouse and Dykeraw. He is said to have been a good judge of cattle and familiar at Newcastle market. He always carried a lucky half-crown in his pocket, which was worn down to a blank piece of silver by the time of this death. He married Agnes Taylor in 1833 and she died in 1878, aged 71. Their children included: John (1831–78), a surgeon in Calcutta; Janet (b.1833), who died in infancy; Janet (1835–48); Robina (1836–1907), who married Peter Pennycook of New Hall in 1855; Agnes (1837–1906), who married William Scott and died in Edinburgh; Henry (1839–91), who succeeded on the farms; Jane (1840–56); Margaret (b.1843), who died young; and Margaret (again, 1851–83). He is buried in Hobkirk churchyard. Sir Henry George (1817–1907) 2nd son of Gilbert Elliot-Murray-Kynynmound, 2nd Earl of Minto. He had a career in the Diplomatic Service, holding posts in many capitals of Europe, ending as Ambassador in Vienna 1877–84. He married Anne, daughter of Sir Edmund Antrobus. Their children were Gertrude (who died unmarried) and Sir Francis Edmund Hugh. Henry (b.c.1819) son of James, farmer at Lymiecleuch. In 1851 he was listed as head of the family, with the 3700 acre farm of Lymiecleuch held in trust for his siblings Scott, William, Walter, Mary and Janet. Henry (b.1821–63) son of Thomas and Helen Scott. In 1851 he was farmer of ‘a large store farm’ employing 9 labourers at Kirndean. He lived with his sisters Ann and Christian. In 1861 he was farmer at Lanton in Jedburgh Parish, where he died. Henry (b.1823/4) from Canobie, he was a baker in Newcastleton. In 1861 he was at about 46 North Hermitage Street. His wife was Ann and their children included Robert, John, William and Helen. Henry Erskine (b.1829/30) joiner in Newcastleton. In 1851 he was journeyman carpenter with James Douglas in Newcastleton, and listed there as ‘Cousin’s Son’. He was living at about 6 Langholm Street in 1861, and employing 7 men. In 1859 he married Elizabeth, daughter of John Scott and Isabel Grieve. Their children included: James Douglas (b.c.1860); Beatrice Cavers (b.1861); Isabella (b.1863); William Thomas (b.1866); and Jane (b.1868). Henry (1839–91) son of Henry, from whom he took over as farmer at Greenriver in Rulewater. Shortly after his mother’s death in 1878 he became ill himself, eventually becoming paralysed. He was looked after by his sister Robina Pennycook and the farm was run by his nephew James Lindsay Oliver. Herman F. (1854–95) 4th son of Sir Walter of Wolfelee. He was born in India, was educated at Harrow and joined the Black Watch, rising to the rank of Major. He was apparently very stout. He was decorated in Egypt and the Sudan and died in Mauritius. Hugh (17th C.) described as ‘Hew Ellot, smith’ when he was a witness in a Hawick Magistrates Court case of 1642. ‘John Elliot, wag’ was also a witness, so may have been his brother or other relation. He is probably the Hugh, married to Margaret Dickson, whose children born in Hawick included Helen (b.1640), William (b.1643) and Hugh (b.1644). Hugh (17th C.) recorded as ‘Hewgo Ellot, smith’ in 1685 when he was fined by the Hawick Magistrates for throwing off Adam Young’s bonnet in the church, to which Adam Young retaliated and was also fined; Adam was also a smith, so this may have been a professional rivalry. He is probably the Hugh, son of Hugh and Margaret Dickson, who was born in Hawick in 1644. He was listed as a smith in 1687 when he witnessed a baptism for James Davidson and may also be the Hugh who witnessed a baptism for James Atkinson in 1687. He is probably the ‘Hew Elliott, snythe in Newmynes, in Slittrig’ in 1672 when he was admitted as a Burgess of Hawick, gratis, ‘by the importunity of ane person of quality’. Hugh (1752–1830) 2nd son of Sir Gilbert, 3rd Baronet of Minto. He was brother of the 1st Earl of Minto. He was educated along with his elder brother and the pair were mentored by David Hume. He attended Oxford University and finished his military training at Metz. He fought with the Russian Army and then became a British diplomat in Bavaria before being appointed Ambassador to Prussia. In 1780 he married his first wife, Charlotte von Kraut and fought a duel with her lover (a scandal that, it is said, followed him for the rest of his life). After he moved to Copenhagen he abducted his daughter Isabella from his wife’s influence in Berlin, and the couple divorced. He then served in Dresden and Naples and was Governor of the Leeward Islands 1809–14. He was a strong abolitionist and was reported to be the force behind the conviction of a man for the murder of a slave in the British Virgin Islands. In the period 1814–20 he served as Governor of Madras. He secondly married Margaret Jones, after whom Lady Elliot Island in Queensland was named. His children were: Isabella (d.1826), who married George Payne; Theodore Henry (d.1842); Emma (d.1866), who married Sir Thomas Hislop; Edward Francis (1796–1866); Caroline; Harriet Agnes; Gilbert (1800–91), Dean of Bristol; Adm. Sir Charles (1801–75), who was Governor of Bermuda, of Trinidad and of St. Helena; Hugh Maximillian (1802–26); and Sir Thomas Frederick (1808–80). He died in London and was buried in Westminster Abbey. Ingram (15th C.) recorded among men of Liddesdale who failed to appear at the Justice-aire in 1494/5. He was listed after Edmund and before Martin, who he may have been closely related to. Ingram (16th C.) recorded in 1541 when he was accused of having been on a raid on Bewcastle in which Englishman ‘John Makrobyn’ was killed. His brother Adie was also listed, as well as Airchie. Isabel (17th C.) resident of Castleton Parish (probably at Yethouse) according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. John, who was listed before her must have been closely related. Isabella (19th C.) listed as grocer and spirit dealer in Newcastleton in Slater’s 1852 directory. She could be the Isabella from Nicol Forest in Cumberland, who was listed in 1851 at about 7 Douglas Square, with her daughters Agnes and Violet; she was wife of shepherd William. James (15th C.) listed along with Laurence, Simon and John Elwald, as well as Robert Turnbull and Robert Dalgleish, when they were said to be rebels captured by Patrick Dickson, Bailie of Peebles, in 1482/3. His name was listed first, and so he was presumably head of some Borders branch. For his service Dickson received a grant from the King for the following 19 years. He is probably the ‘Jacobi elwald’ recorded at the Justice-aire in Peebles in 1498 when Thomas Middlemas had remission for resetting him after he and his accomplices had burned a ‘pele in bothil’.

James (15th C.) recorded in the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh in 1493. Thomas Brown in Minto and George Davidson in Raperlaw were given remission for several crimes, including helping him in thefts occurring before the date of their existing remission. Probably the same James was mentioned in 1494/5 when Adam Turnbull in Hornshole had remission for several crimes, including stealing livestock from Synton, with his help. He may be the same as one of the other contemporary Elliots. James (d.1526) recorded as ‘James Elwald’ when he was convicted and hanged in Edinburgh for his part in the Battle of Skirmish Field. This was an event where Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme, along with other Scotts, Elliots and their followers tried to wrest control of the young James V from the Earl of Angus, this being part of ongoing power struggles within Scotland. His crimes also included ‘common Theft and Reset of theft’. However, it seems clear that he was simply a scapegoat, being probably the most important Elliot that was captured (perhaps a son of Robert of Redheugh, for example). He could be the ‘Jacobi Elwald’ recorded in 1535 when ‘Georgii Elwald’ had a remission from the crime of associating with him. James (16th C.) entered in 1537/8 for crimes along with his brother Simon ‘Elwald’ and William in Leaugh, with sureties being Robert of Redheugh and his brother Archibald. They were accused of breaking open the shop of Thomas Graham in Selkirk. How he was related to other Elliots is unclear. James (16th C.) tenant in Skelfhill in 1569 when he was listed in a bond of security signed in Hawick. He may have been related to ‘Gawin Eliott in Skelfhill’ (later of Stobs) who was the proprietor of the lands. His name is listed as ‘Jame Eliot in Skelshill’. James ‘Jamie’ (16th C.) listed among men accused of raiding Harwood on Teviot in 1581/2. He was brother of ‘Rowans Hobbe’. They were declared rebels after not appearing to answer the charge. James ‘Jamie’ of the Park (16th C.) recorded having a pledge before the Privy Council in 1573. He was also recorded in 1583 in a list of Elliots compiled by the English wardens. He must have been related to Jock Elliot of the Park, and may also have been descended from Simon. He was surely related to ‘James Rowe of the Park’ recorded in 1581. He is probably the James of the Park for whom there was surety before the Privy Council in 1573. However, there may be 2 men here, since in 1573 James of the Park was deceased when his son Hob was interchanged with John of the Park as ward with Sir William Scott of Balwearie. James ‘Dobson’ (16th C.) tenant in Whitehillbrae. He was recorded in 1574 as ‘James Elott alias Dobsoun thair’, after Archie in ‘Quheitilbray’, among men who had been ordered to be removed from the lands of Robert of Redheugh. He may have been related to other man of this area who were also listed, e.g. the Elliots in Priesthaugh and ‘Vicar’s Hob’. It is unclear what his nickname meant. James ‘Grey Will’s Jamie’ (16th C.) recorded as ‘Jeme Elliot called gray Wills Jeme’ in 1583, and listed among the Elliots of Park (separately from Jamie of the Park). He was presumably son of ‘Grey Willie’. James ‘Jamie’ of Millburnholm (16th C.) recorded in 1587/8 when accused by Sir John Forster of being on a raid on England in 1585, along with many other Elliots. His name was listed as ‘Jame of Milbourne home’, and seems highly likely to have been an Elliot, perhaps the same as one of the other Jameses. James ‘Airchie’s Jamie’ (16th C.) listed among men accused in 1590 of raiding Middleton Hall in England in the previous year. He was named as ‘Arches Janye’ along with ‘Gib Eliott son to Robin’, 2 servants of Robert of Redheugh and others who were accused of stealing horses. James of the Binks (16th C.) recorded in 1590 among Elliots of the Steele, the Park, and others, when complained about for a raid into England. On a later record of the same case he is ‘of the Byrks’, so there could be confusion over where he was from. In 1590 he was ‘of the Bynckes’ when accused of stealing a gelding and furniture from Englishmen John Heron and Henry Charlton. It is unclear how he might have been related to later Elliots of Binks. James (16th C.) recorded as ‘Martin’s man’ in 1590 when he was on a list of men, including Martin’s Airchie, the elder and younger Will of the Steele, Airchie ‘Cowfowle’ and 2 Shielis, accused of stealing from ‘Dotland’ a couple of years earlier. He was presumably a servant of Martin of Braidslie, and could be the same as one of the other Jameses. James see James Elliott. James of the Hill (16th/17th C.) brother of Airchie of the Hill. He is listed among a large group of Elliots and others who were accused in 1590 of taking Ralph Hall and others prisoner and ransoming them. He was additionally listed in 1590 along with Airchie of the Hill among a group accused of taking livestock, goods and prisoners from the Pott’s of Carrick, and along with his brother Archie of the Hill among a group accused of rieving from ‘Borne’ in Redesdale. He was ‘James on the hill’, also in 1590, when named first along with Anthony of the Binks, James ‘Half Lug’, Hobbie ‘the Tailor’ and 60 others, accused of raiding ‘Windgates’, taking more than 100 cows and 4 horses, slaying George Hume, leaving 6 or 7 men near death and robbing 5 houses. He was also listed as brother of Airchie of the Hill among Elliots, Armstrongs, Turnbulls, Laidlaws and Croziers, accused in 1590 of rieving from the Laird of ‘Trogghwen’ and Hedley of ‘Garret Sheills’. In 1591 he was part of a group (along with his brother Airchie of the Hill) accused of plundering from Jeffrey Tailor and the tenants of Scaleby. Probably the same man is listed along with John and Mark of the Hill among men of Liddesdale and upper Teviotdale accused of raids into England in 1595. James ‘Tod’ (16th/17th C.) recorded as being ‘alias ‘toddé’ ‘ in 1596 when he was among men complained about for a raid on ‘Allergartle’ in England, along with Willie and Geordie ‘Kange’. He was also ‘Jamy Ellott ‘todde’ ‘ when accused of raiding ‘Dormontstead’ in the same year. James (17th C.) possessor of the farm of Clintwood in Liddesdale in 1632. It is unclear if he was related to the earlier Archibald in Clintwood. James (17th C.) son of John ‘wag (soldier) in Hawick’ recorded in 1642. He was named as one of the men accused of stealing the wallet of the servant of the Laird of Cavers in Hawick. He gave evidence, saying that he never saw the wallet. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Margaret Davidson and their children included: William (b.1650); Jean (b.1652); and Archibald (b.1655). James (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. His wife was Bessie Knox and their son James was born in 1651. James (17th C.) tenant in Snaberlee, one of the executors or overseers for William Elliot of Binks in the mid-1660s. James (17th C.) resident of Orniston on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. It is unclear if he is connected to the later Elliots of Orniston. James (17th C.) recorded as resident at Byreholm in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. James (17th C.) listed as tenant at ‘bour’ (possibly near Bowser Rig) in Castleton Parish on the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. He paid tax on 2 hearths, since he was tenant ‘wt an kilne’. James (17th C.) resident of Firth in Lilliesleaf Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. James (17th/18th C.) tenant in Hummelknowe Mill. His children probably (with no mother’s name give) included: Marion (b.1698); Jean (b.1700); Janet (b.1702); Martin (b.1707); Isabel (b.1709); James (b.1710); John (b.1715); Walter (b.1718); and an unnamed child (b.1719). James (17th/18th C.) tenant in Bowanhill. In 1723 he halved the lease of the farm with Archibald Elliot. In 1725 it is recorded that he was ‘trysted with a long continued sickness’. Isobel Beattie was assisting him, which she used as an excuse to postpone appearing to be publicly rebufked in Hawick. James (18th C.) shepherd in Stobicote. His son James was baptized in Cavers Parish in 1733; this could be the James who married Betty Goodfellow and lived at Newcastle. James (18th C.) younger son of William of Penchrise and Janet Elliot. He was tenant in Millholm in Castleton Parish. He had a son, who was also James, and who died without children. James (18th C.) tenant at Meikle Whitlaw, recorded in 1753. He was probably son of Robert of Larriston, and brother of Robert who was a senior clerk at the Pay Office in London. Helen, who married Rulewater joiner Walter Amos, may have been his sister. He died unmarried. James (18th C.) recorded as being ‘Fenwick’ in 1758 when his daughter Magdalene was baptized in Hawick Parish. Gavin was witness to the baptism, this presumably being the Gavin who was known as last Elliot of Fenwick. He may have been brother of Gavin and another son of Robert of Fenwick. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Margaret Young. Their children included: John (b.1760); and Charles (b.1764). James (18th C.) son of James in Millholm and descended from the Elliots of Unthank. He was ‘in Castleton’ (although it us unclear whether he was tenant in the farm of Castleton, or just lived in the Parish). He died without issue. James (18th C.) recorded being ‘in Harrotknow’ (i.e. Harwood-knowe) in 1760 when his son Robert was baptized in Hobkirke Parish. He must have been related to John in the same place, who had children baptized in 1775 and 1780. James (b.1728) resident of Robertson Parish. He married Margaret Scott in 1753 and their children included: John (1754–1817); Margaret (b.1756); William (b.1757); Francis (b.1758); Andrew (b.1760); James (1761–1850); and Betty (b.1768). James (1729/30–1819) tenant at Harwood-sike-foot and then Little Whitlaw. He was at Sykefoot in 1797 when he was taxed for having 2 farm horses and 2 non-working dogs. He married Christian Blyth, who died at Harwood-sike-foot in 1796, aged 61; she was daughter of John Blyth, Deacon of the shoemakers of Jedburgh, and his second wife, Janet Scott. Their children included: William (b.1764), who died in Jamaica; Janet (b.1766); John (b.1768); Isabella (b.1773), who married farmer John Angus; and Peggy (b.1776). The family are buried in St. Mary’s Kirkyard. James (1733–94) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Elizabeth (or Betty, 1729–1817) Goodfellow, and they both died in Newcastleton. Their children included: James (1762–1851), who married Christian Fletcher; probably Eupham; Elizabeth (b.1766); and Elspeth (b.1770). He could be the James, son of James, shepherd at Stobicote, born in Cavers Parish in 1733. James (18th C.) listed as innkeeper at ‘Harrot’ in 1791, when he paid the cart tax in Hawick Parish. He was probably based at Harwood-on-Teviot. James (c.1733–1816) son of John of Whithaugh and Margaret Scott. He was a shepherd in Twislehope. He married Elizabeth Jackson (c.1744–1806) Their children included: Rolland (c.1766–99), who married Katherine Little; Barbara (c.1774–92); and James (b.1783). James (1736–82) son of Walter of Ormiston. In 1778 he married Isabel Rule in in Hawick; she was presumably his 2nd wife and the couple were fined by Cavers Session in 1779 for their irregular marriage. An entry in the diary of James Sibbald states ‘Heard at the fair James Elliot of Ormiston was married to his own servant’. His children included: Simon (b.1770); James (b.1776); and Andrew (b.1777), who may have been shepherd at Cocklawfoot and emigrated. All 3 of these children were baptised in Cavers in 1778. It seems that his children were unable to inherit and hence Ormiston went to his sister Helen and her husband Thomas Currer. James (1748–1828) shepherd in Castleton Parish. His wife was Helen Elliot, who died in 1809 at Cleuchhead. They are easy to confuse with a contemporary Castleton couple with the same names. Their children probably included: William (b.1773); Isabel (b.1774); Helen (b.1779); Jean (b.1781); James (b.1783); John (1785–1854), who married Helen Murray and emigrated to Westminster Township, Middlesex County, Ontario; and Walter (b.1787), who may be the Walter who lived at Dinleyhaughfoot. He died at Burngrains and is buried in Castleton. James (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. His wife was Helen Elliot. They are easy to confuse with a contemporary couple of the same names. Their children probably included: Helen (b.1775); Adam (b.1777); Isabel (b.1779); Mary (b.1780); and Thomas (b.1791). James (18th C.) resident of Harwood in Hobkirk Parish. He had sons Charles (b.1784) and George (b.1786). James (b.c.1765) joiner in Newcastleton. He is listed among heads of households in 1835–41. In 1841 he was at about 3 Walter Street. James (b.1765) son of shoemaker Robert. In 1798 he married Janet Renwick, announced in Hawick and Cavers Parishes. His wife died in 1835. James (1769–1824) youngest son of William of Whithaugh. He was born in Castleton Parish and became a merchant in Hawick. He worked as a clerk for William Oliver ‘Auld Cash’, who was the most prominent general merchant and banker in Hawick at the time. He was listed in Oliver’s 1808 will as ‘my clerk, brother of John Elliot Esq of Whithaugh’. He is probably the James, merchant in Hawick, who was declared bankrupt in 1815, and who was listed as ‘late Merchant in Hawick’ in 1824 when his outstanding debts were to be sold. James (1770–1855) son of Ninian. His mother’s name is not given on the baptism record, but it seems likely it was Janet Douglas. He was a shepherd in the Teviothead area; most of his children were born at Sundhope. In 1798 he married Janet (1774/5–1843), daughter of John Grieve and Elizabeth Paisley; she died at Broadhaugh. Their children included: Ninian (1799–1885), who died in Ontario; Elizabeth (b.1801); Janet (b.1803); John (b.1806), who died young; Jean (or Jane, b.1809), who married James Riddell, who lived at Lochburnfoot; John (again, b.1811), probably the carrier in Rober-ton; James (1814–80), who died at Northhouse; and William (b.1816). In 1851 he was a retired shepherd living with his daughter Jane. He died at Valesburn. James ‘Jamie’ (1772–1855) 3rd Laird of Wolfelee, younger son of Cornelius, the 2nd Laird, his brother William dying during their father’s lifetime. He became Writer to the Signet in 1798. Trained in his father’s Edinburgh law office, it is said he did not enjoy the sedentary job, but he did attend to much of his father’s country business. However, from the early 1800s he improved the Wolfelee estate by planting trees and hedges, repaired dykes, cottages, etc. He was still ‘junior of Wolfelee’ listed along with his father as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805 and 1819. In 1810 he became a Major in the 1st Rox- burghshire Volunteers. He was also ‘younger of Woollee’ in 1811 when recorded as a freeholder in the Michaelmas Head-Court of Jedburgh. He suc-ceeded to the estate in 1821, and for a few years lived at Mackside. He built the mansion there in 1825–27 (although probably retaining some of the previous house) and it was him who changed the name from ‘Woollie’ to ‘Wolfelee’. He was a Justice of the Peace and in 1823 fined some shepherds for playing Hobkirk Baa on the wrong day. He took part in the Hawick celebrations for the Reform Bill in 1832. He was also a founder member of the Jedforest Club, but left after a political dispute in 1834. He was also one of the Magistrates of the county who were present in Hawick during the election troubles of 1837. He was living at Stewarfield in 1837. About 1849 he gave land for Wolfelee Free Kirk and Manse to be built. He had 12 children, many of whom were born at at Stewarfield (later called Hartrigge), near Jedburgh. Although personally attached to the Established Church, he gave land to establish a Free Church and manse. In 1799 he married Caroline, daughter of Walter Hunter of Polmood and Lady Caroline Mackenzie, and she died in 1824. In 1827 he secondly married Margaret, daughter of Robert Davidson of Pinnaclenhill, Kelso, his cousin, who died in 1856 (and is buried in Kessal Green, London). His children were: William (who died in infancy); Sir Walter (1803–87), who succeeded; James Forbes (1807–41), a Lieutenant with the 5th Madras Infantry, who died in Nellore; Robert (1807–96), twin of James, who reached the age of 89; John Elphinstone (b.1810), Rector of Whalton, Morpeth, who married Georgina Bates of Milburn and changed his surname to Elliot-Bates; William Thomas (1812–90), who died in Australia; George Mackenzie (1822–56), who also died in Australia; Charles (1824–88), Royal Artillery Colonel, who married Christina Ramsay of Balmain and later Mary, daughter of Henry Davidson of Muirhouse and the Archbishop of Canterbury’s sister; Caroline (b.1805), who died at the age of 13; Elizabeth Margaret (d.1889), who died unmarried; Eleanor Mary (1815–1915), who married Herman Freyherr von Pöllnitz and reached the age of 100; and another child (with his 2nd wife), who died young. He helped 2 of his sisters out of debt. He was known as a Liberal in politics. He was married Elizabeth Young and their children included: John (b.1796); Isabell (b.1798); Daniel (b.1800); James (b.1802); and Elizabeth (b.1804). James of Goldielands (1769–1848), son of Adam and descended from the Elliots in Brugh, he became a teacher in Wilton. He wrote ‘A Scripture Catechism, with references instead of answers’, running to 4 editions (the last 3 being 1798, 1803, 1808). He retired as schoolmaster at Wilton in about 1810 and was replaced by James Turnbull. Around the same year he was put in charge of supervising the cutting that had to be done to create the Avenue leading to Wilton Lodge. He was overseer of works (or factor) for the Duke of Buccleuch, serving from about 1810 into at least the late 1830s, and living at Goldielands; he was there on the 1841 census. Baron Von Holbein lodged with him as a prisoner during the Napoleonic Wars. He was a prominent Hawick Tory, taking an active part in local politics in the early 19th century. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825 and may be the ‘J. Elliot, Hawick’ who subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. He was also one of the founder members of the Wisp Club in 1826. He provided the minister with details of the agricultural state of Hawick Parish for the 1839 entry in the New Statistical Account. He married Agnes Pirrie (d.1840) in Wilton in 1794; it is suggested that she was born in 1758, but that is surely too early. All their children were baptised in Wilton Parish: Margaret (b.1795), the eldest daughter, who married John Wilson, ‘the Dip’; Adam (b.1797), a medical doctor, who later lived at Goldielands; Agnes (1799–1863); William (b.1801), hosiery manufacturer; Helen or Nelly (b.1803); James (b.1805), mathematics and physics professor in Liverpool; and Robert (1807–88) of Leighwood, Dunkeld. Letters of his for the period 1810–37 are in the National Archives. His will in Jedburgh Sheriff Court Records is dated 1849. His portrait is in the Museum, painted by an unknown artist. James (18th/19th C.) resident at Newcastleton, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He is presumably the same as another James. He could be the James recorded as driver in Newcastleton in 1835 or the other James recorded as joiner. James (18th/19th C.) blacksmith, probably in Castleton Parish. He married Janet Robson and their children included James (b.1818/9), who was an agricultural labourer in Newcastleton. His wife secondly married William Cowan, who she is recorded with in 1841. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Helen Glendinning and their children included: William (b.1827); John (b.1829); Thomas (b.1832); Adam (b.1834); and Jane (b.1837). James

Elliot

(18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Bella Armstrong and their children included: Betty (b.1826); George (b.1828); and Janet (b.1831). These 3 were all baptised in 1835. His widow, son George and daughter Janet (or ‘Jenny’) were living at about 11 South Liddle Street in 1841. James of Cooms (18th/19th C.) recorded in the Land Tax Rolls in 1822. James (18th/19th C.) listed as shepherd at ‘Waterside, Castleton’ among heads of household in 1836–41. James (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Foulshields in Castleton Parish. He is listed among male heads of households in 1835–40. He emigrated to America in about 1840. James (18th/19th C.) teacher at Hermitage School. He was listed there among heads of households in the Parish in 1835–38 and recorded in Pigot’s 1837 directory. In 1841 the schoolhouse there was occupied by labourer Robert (and family), who may have been his son. James (b.1783/4) from England, he served with the 2nd Dragoon Guards. In 1841 he was an agricultural labourer living at about 54 High Street with his wife Mary. In 1851 he was a lodger with the Bells on Turk’s Close and recorded as a Chelsea Pensioner. In 1861 he was living with his daughter Agnes and her husband Thomas Crosbie. James (c.1785–1850) farmer at Lymiecleuch in 1841. He may have been son of James, shepherd in Twislehope. He was at Lymiecleuch in 1821 when he subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821 and in 1825 when he subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’. He married Betty Scott (c.1789–1835). Their children included: Elizabeth (1810–35); James (1814–27); Rolland (b.1815), tenant in Mackside; Henry (b.c.1819); Scott (b.1824); Mary (b.c.1826); James (again, 1828–43); William (b.1830); Janet (b.1834); and Walter (b.1835). In 1851 the head of the family was Henry, with the 3700 acre farm held in trust for his siblings Scott, William, Walter, Mary and Janet. James (b.1787/8) agricultural labourer in Roberton Parish. In 1841 he was at Roberton Woodfoot and in 1851 was farmer of 6 acres there. In 1861 his wife and 2 sons were living at Riddell Mill. His wife was Jane (b.1799/1800) and their children included: John (b.c.1823); James (b.c.1825), a dyker; Janet (b.c.1826); William (b.c.1828); Adam (b.c.1830); and Alexander (b.c.1832). James (1792/3–1873) carter and sheep dealer in Newcastleton. He could be the ‘J. Elliot, N. Castleton’ who subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. He is probably the cattle dealer of that name listed as male head of his family in Newcastleton in 1835. In 1851 and 1861 he lived at about 29 North Hermitage Street. He married Margaret Shiel (1808–87). Their children included: Roland E. (1832–88), who died in New Westminster, British Columbia; Robert (b.1834); Thomas (b.1836); James (1839–47); Katherine (1841–47); Charles Scott (b.1843); William (b.1846); and James (b.1849). He died at Kershopebrae, and his wife died in Hawick. James (1794–1884) born in Roberton Parish, son of John and Elizabeth Scott. He was long-time proprietor of the Ewe and Lamb, being a spirit merchant at 3 Orrock Place. He may be the same James recorded as proprietor of a public house on ‘High St.’ in Pigot’s 1825 directory (and this could be the Punch Bowl at No. 27, marked ‘Elliot’ on Wood’s 1824 map), and listed as a vintner on the Round Close in Pigot’s 1837 directory; this same James was proprietor of the Royal Oak in 1832. On the 1841 census he was an innkeeper and spirit dealer on the Sandbed. In 1851 he is listed as a vintner on Orrock Place, in Slater’s 1852 directory he is a vintner at the Ewe and Lamb and in 1861 he was innkeeper at 3 Orrock Place. He married Helen Paterson (1806/7–54). Their children included: John (1835–58), who was Cornet in 1855; Helen (b.1838); William (b.1841), who died in infancy; Elizabeth or ‘Betsy’ (b.1843); Ann Scoon (‘Annie’, 1844–92); Margaret (b.1846), who died young; and James. A portrait exists of him. They are buried at Borthwick Waas. James (b.c.1797) grocer and spirit dealer on Needle Street. He is recorded there in 1841, along with wife Agnes and children Agnes, Margaret and Benjamin. Probably the same James is listed as a grocer on the Mid Row in Pigot’s 1837 directory. James (1797–1866) son of Robert and Wilhelmina Hislop, he was born in Castleton Parish, where most of his children were baptised. He became farmer at Middleholm, near Langholm. He married Helen (1804–80), daughter of joiner John Douglas. Their children included: Robert (1824–50), who died in Liverpool; Elizabeth Beattie (1825–94), who married Langholm clogger Thomas Hounam; John (1828–56), who worked as a joiner with his uncle James Douglas; Anne (1830–95); Christian Douglas (1833–89), who married shepherd William Elliot Pringle; Janet Douglas (1835–92), who married forester Adam Inglis; William Douglas (1837–87), who lived in Langholm; James Douglas (1840–1920), who also farmed at Middleholm and late lived in Ewesdale; Walter Douglas (1843–77), bank clerk, who moved to County in 1876), and he described the geology of Upper

James (b.c.1800) from Newcastle-ton, he was a shoemaker on Havelock Street in

Wilton, listed in 1861. His children included Andrew, Elizabeth, Helen, James and William. His children were born in Teviothead and Langholm parishes. James (b.1800/1) from Teviothead Parish, he was shepherd at Wauchope Common. In 1851 he was living at Hawthornside Cottages and listed as a shepherd, and was listed as retired at Wauchope Common in 1861. He married Margaret Scott (from Ettrick), and their children included Adam, Isabella and Mary. James (b.1802/3) born in Minto Parish, probably son of William. He was a farmer and then a grocer, wine and spirit dealer at the Crown Inn in Denholm in the 1860s. He may also have been a joiner in Denholm. In 1837 he married Mary, daughter of farmer Robert Bulman. In 1841 and 1851 he was living with his father-in-law, probably at Eastgatehall farm. By 1861 he was on Main Street as a grocer, etc. His children were: Alison (b.1838); Janet (b.1840), perhaps also known as Jessie; Elizabeth Simpson (‘Eliza’, b.1840), probably twin of Janet; William (b.1845); and Mary Ann (b.1850). James (b.1803/4-80) son of John and Jean Scott, he was tenant farmer at Flatt in Castleton Parish and later at Westwater. By 1851 he was ‘Farmer not now tenant but residing’ at Flatt. He was succeeded in the tenancy of Flatt by his nephew John. He married Margaret Little (c.1818-83) in 1847 and their children included: John (1848-66); William (1849-97), also tenant in Westwater; Thomas Scott (1850-1906), who died at Salkend; Jane Scott (1851-1928); James Main (1855-1917); George Thompson (1855-1921), who died at Twickenham; and Henry (1864-1913), an engineer, who died in Barcelona. James (b.c.1805) labourer in Hobkirk Parish. In 1841 he was living at Langburnshiel. He married Margaret Scott in 1838. Their children included: Janet (b.1838); Isabella (b.1845); and Mary (b.1850), born in Kirkton Parish. James (b.1862) may also have been their son. James of Goldielands (b.1805) son of the earlier James, who was teacher at Wilton. Later in life he was also referred to as ‘Professor Elliot’, while his brother Adam was called ‘Dr. Elliot, Goldielands’. In 1841 he was listed as a teacher, living with his father at Goldielands. In 1851 he was a teacher of mathematics, lodging in Duke Street in Edinburgh. He contributed talks to the Archaological Society (e.g. on local birds in 1876), and he described the geology of Upper Teviotdale for the Edinburgh Geological Society in 1870 and the Hawick district for the Berwickshire Naturalists’ Club in 1873. In 1880 he gave the land of the former bowling green off Bourtree Place to the Baptist congregation. He is probably the James who was Professor of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy at Queen’s College in Liverpool. He wrote ‘An Elementary Course of Practical Mathematics’ (1850), which ran to several editions, ‘Moses and Modern Science’, as well as several other books. In 1857 he was described as ‘late of Edinburgh, now of Queen’s College, Liverpool’. In 1879 he wrote to the Spectator about the extraordinary mental arithmetic powers of his friend (and fellow student at Edinburgh) George Bidder. Adam who wrote to Charles Dar-win from Liverpool in 1872 (about the possible offspring of a woman and an ape) may have been his son. James (1807-41) eldest son of James the 3rd Laird of Wolfelee and brother of Walter, 4th Laird. He was a Lieutenant in the 5th Madras Native Infantry and died in Nellore (south-eastern India). He had a twin, Robert, who died in 1896. James (b.1807/8) from England, he was a farmer in Newcastle. In 1861 he was living in North Hermitage Street and farming 4 acres. His wife was Helen and their children included William, Isabel, John, James, Mary, Esther, Jane and Rubina. James (b.1812/3) from Langholm, he was an agricultural labourer living in Castleton Parish. He could be the ‘driver’ at ‘Wheathaugh’ recorded as a head of household in Castleton for the first time in 1837. In 1851 he was residing at Whithaughburn and in 1861 at Whithaugh Cottages (probably the same place). He married Sophia Miller (b.c.1814) from Eskdalemuir. Their children included: George (b.c.1839); Archibald (b.c.1841); Thomas (b.c.1845); Andrew (b.c.1846); Euphemia (b.c.1848); Isabella (b.1849); John (b.1851); and William (b.1854). James (b.1812/3-90) born in Northumberland, son of Robert of Hermitage, who farmed at Moraylees and Haydon Bridge. His mother was Mary Scott from Skelfhill. He farmed at Galalaw. In 1851 and 1861 he was farming 250 acres there, and employing 12 people. At the same time Robert Turnbull farmed the other part of Galalaw. He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scot-land from 1853. James (1814-80) son of shepherd James and Janet Grieve. He was recorded as a shepherd at Broadhaugh in Teviothead Parish.

Elliot

Elliot

in 1851 and was a labourer living at Lochburnfoot in 1861. He married Mary Nichol (1818–1901), who died in Hawick. Their children included: Janet (b.1841); Margaret (b.1845), who married John Young; and Eliza (b.1847), who married James Inglis. He died at Northhouse. James (b.1818/9) agricultural labourer in Newcastleton, son of blacksmith James and Janet Robson. In 1861 he was living at about 13 South Liddel Street. In Castleton in 1847 he married Ann (or Annie), daughter of Matthew Elliot and Dorothy Purdom. Their children (some of whom were born in Northumberland) included: Janet (b.1847); James (b.1849); Matthew (b.1849); Dorothy (b.1852); Isabella; Thomas; and William. He could be the labourer James who was visiting farmer Henry at Gatehousecote at the time of the 1851 census. James (b.1819/20) born at Wolfelee, he was a coal carter. In 1851 he was visiting William Mercer in Galashiels. James (b.1825/6) born at Hayeknowe, son of Thomas and Margaret Hume. He was a grocer at 2 Buccleuch Street. In 1861 he was listed as a grocer at 7 Sandbed, with his brother Thomas and George also in his house. He married Jane Peddie Ewen in 1861. Their children included: Thomas; Jane Ewen; and James Oliver. James (1830–77) son of John. He was inn-keeper of the Grapes Hotel in Liddesdale in the 1860s and 1870s and died there. James Thomas Spencer 5th Laird of Wolfelee (1845–92) eldest son of Sir Walter. He was born in Madras and educated at Harrow. Poor eyesight hampered some of his career prospects (and he also apparently became quite hefty in later life). He spent about 7 years in Argentina, returning in 1872, and living at Wolfelee. He became involved in local and national politics and stood as Conservative candidate for the Hawick Burghs in 1880, and was defeated by Sir George Trevelyan. He then bought some land in Manitoba, but did not live there for long. He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1875. He represented the Borders at the Highland and Agricultural Society, and personally managed 2 of the farms on the Wolfelee estate (with the help of Mr. McPherson). He was a J.P. and Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire. He joined the Border Mounted Rifles (volunteers), eventually becoming Quartermaster Sergeant before they were disbanded in 1892. He was also a member of the Jedforest Club. In addition he was Vice-President of the Upper Teviotdale Fisheries Association in the 1880s. He was also a keen Freemason, holding high office locally and nationally. He was a guest of the 1888 Common Riding Dinner. He succeeded his father in 1887, but had no children and hence was succeeded by his brother Edward. In 1888 he married Emily Grace, 2nd daughter of William St. Lawrence Gethin, brother of an Irish Baronet, and the couple resided at Wolfelee. He died suddenly, aged 47 and was buried in Southdean churchyard – ‘My name it is J.T.S. Elliot, And I am the laird o’ Wolfelee; A fig for the Rosebury Earl, Wha thinks he daur meddle wi’ me’ [JCG]. James (1848–1928) son of William, shepherd at Scotch Kershape. He worked as a gamekeeper in Liddesdale and was later a farmer over the Border. He married Margaret Murray (1854–1918) and their children were: Davina (1873–96); William (1875–1902); and Catherine (1877–1974), who married Alexander Hunter. James (1859/60–1936) postmaster in Newcastleton. He was grandson of William and Isabella Armstrong, who are buried in the same lair at Ettleton. He married Lizzie Jane, who died in 1919, aged 50. They had a son John who died of wounds in 1918. James ‘Jimmy’ (d.1923), J.P., farmer at Burnhead and later at the Flex. He was for a long time a member of the Commin Riding Race Committee. He was recorded as the starter at the Common Riding Races in 1873 and 1875 and gave several speeches at Common Ridings in the 1890s. He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1880. He also acted as Convenor of West Teviotdale for the Highland and Agricultural Society and was invited to be a wool judge when the Agricultural Show came to Hawick in 1914. In 1895 he gained the farms of Meikle and Little Whitlaw from the Scotts of Buccleuch, exchanging them for Fenwick. He was still alive in 1919 when there was a gathering of the Flex photographed. In 1892 he married Isabella Douglas Amos (d.1945), daughter of James Amos. He and his wife are buried at Borthwick Waas. He left a sum of £500, the interest to be run for as prize money in the Flex Stakes each year at the Common Riding. James (b.1873) son of Francis, he was born at Parkhill-haugh in Roberton Parish, where his father was a stone dyker. He was educated at Robert School and was an apprentice blacksmith with William Pow at Borthwickbraeburnfoot. He came to Bonchester Bridge as a journeyman blacksmith with Thomas Rutherford, then went to Edinburgh and worked with Mackenzie Brothers there for 8 years. He joined the 4th Volunteer Battalion Royal Scots in Edinburgh in 1896. He returned to Bonchester Bridge to take over as blacksmith from the Rutherfords in about 1902. He was Superintendent of Range for Rulewater Miniature Rifle Club in 1905 and then Secretary. In 1899 he was married in Edinburgh.

Jean see Jean. Jane (18th/19th C.) recorded as ‘Miss Jane, Burngrains’ in 1821 when subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’. She could be the Jean (b.1781), daughter of James, who died at Burngrains. Janet (17th C.) recorded in the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694 among those ‘Payed but not listed in Hauick Toun’. Janet (19th C.) listed as grocer and spirit dealer in Newcastleton in Slater’s 1852 directory. She could be the ‘Jeannie’ listed in the 1851 census as mother of grocer James Edgar, probably at 28 Langholm Street. Jean see Rutherford (d.bef. 1621) daughter of Jean and granddaughter of Gavin of Stobs. She inherited Stobs ford (d.bef. 1621) daughter of Jean and granddaughter of Gavin of Stobs. She was inherited by her aunts Dorothy and Esther. She married William, brother of Robert Elliot, 17th of Redheugh, and they had 3 children: Robert; Francis; and James. Her husband was successively called ‘of Hartsgarth’, ‘of Rig’ and ‘of Hartshaugh’. Jean (17th C.) listed as resident of Redheugh on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. There were John Elliots listed before and after her, and so she was presumably related to at least one of them. Jean (1709/10–74) daughter of William, Laird of Harwood. In 1731 she married William Elliot of Black Tarras, also called ‘of Ludgegill’. The marriage contract is signed by Thomas Scott of Todrig, Charles Scott (brother of the Laird of Gorumberry), Thomas Scott of Stonedge, George Scott (brother of the Laird of Newton), John Scott of Weens, Henry Elliot (both elder and younger, in Deadwater), Robert and William Elliot (sons of John Elliot in Larriston), Henry Elliot (son of William of Harwood) and Robert Kerr (son of the deceased Andrew Kerr in Roughleenook). Many of these men were her close or distant relatives. Their oldest son was William, tenant of ‘Dinlie’ (presumably Dinlees). Jean (1727–1805) born at Minto, 3rd daughter of Sir Gilbert, 1st Earl of Minto. In her teens she entertained a group of Jacobites under John Goodwillie at Minto House, while her father (a staunch anti-Jacobite) hid among the crags. She is also known as the writer of a popular version of ‘Flowers of the Forest’. This was published anonymously in 1776. It was written in response to a bet by her brother Gilbert (later 3rd Baronet) that she would be unable to produce a good ballad on the subject of Flodden. She must have based her version on parts of a traditional ballad, but nevertheless her interpretation quickly became popular. And although she declined to claim credit for it, she was locally referred to as ‘the Flower’. Some of her other verse is published in ‘The Border Elliots and the Family of Minto’ (1897). She played a strong role in sorting out her father’s affairs after his death in 1766. She later moved to Edinburgh, where she was described as ‘a prodigious fund of Scottish anecdote’, but also that she ‘did not appear to have ever been handsome’. She was said to be elegant, fashionable and intelligent, with a liking for French literature. However, she was also said to be the last lady in Edinburgh to use a sedan chair. Returning to Teviotdale in her last year, she died, unmarried, at her brother’s house at Monteviot. A portrait of her as an elderly woman was painted by an unknown artist (also sometimes ‘Jane’). Jean ‘Lucie Lass’ or ‘Jeanie Luce’ (b.1788/9) postmistress in Newcastleton. She was described as ‘a crazy female who could neither read nor write’, and it later seemed unthinkable that she would ever be entrusted with the mail. She would be dressed in ‘a drugget petticoat reaching a little below the knee, a man’s coat and shepherd’s plaid, with her feet and legs encased in a pair of Wellington boots’ and in later years had a weather-beaten face, piercing eyes, shaggy eyebrows and an uncovered head. She was said to be treated well by residents of Liddesdale because she was related to some of the better families in the area, and also because she was such a gossip. She was succeeded as postmaster by Jamie Nichol. She may be the pauper living with carrier Thomas Turnbull’s family at about 1 Whitchester Street in 1841. In 1851 she was listed as ‘Parish Relief once District Post’ on Douglas Square. She could be the pauper living with the Beattie family in 1861. It is unclear what her nickname meant. Jean (b.c.1910) originally from Jedburgh, she also lived in Hawick and later in Stirling. In 1984 she published ‘Musings of a Border Grandmother’. Jesse (b.c.1775) from Miledm, he was educated in Ancrum, Jedburgh and Berwick. He was schoolmaster in Ashkirk from 1799 until the 1840s. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. He is recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories. He married Margaret Smith. In the 1841 census he is listed at Ashkirk Schoolhouse with his wife Margaret, along with Robert and John, who were probably grandchildren. His children included: James (b.1799); Andrew (b.1800); Charles (b.1803); Margaret (b.1805); John MacKenzie (b.1807); Gilbert (b.1809), a millwright in Hawick; and Robert (b.1815). Jean (18th C.) recorded at Unthank in Ewesdale, particularly to Hermitage Water. In 1851 she is recorded as a receiver of Parish Relief, living on Douglas Square. She could be the grocer Janet recorded in Newcastle in 1852. She was said to have been reminiscent of Madge Wildfire from Walter Scott's 'Heart of Midlothian'. A local character, she never wore headgear or stockings, kept her hair cropped short, used a shepherd’s plaid for warmth and liked her whisky. John (15th C.) recorded as ‘Johannis de Elaund’ in the 1256 assize roll of Northumberland. He complained that one of his neighbours tried to strangle him. John (15th C.) recorded as ‘Johannis Elwald’ in 1436 when he witnessed a sasine for the lands of Wolfehope and Wolfehopelee. The other men listed were all from relatively nearby. It is unclear how he was related to other Elliots, and it is even possible he was the clan leader at the time. John (15th C.) recorded as ‘Johannis Elwald’ in the Exchequer Rolls of 1459 for the Lincluden area when his fine was compounded. Probably a different ‘Johannis Elwald de Dauduran’ is also listed. John (15th C.) listed along with James, Laurence and Simon Elwald, as well as Robert Turnbull and Robert Dalgleish, when they said to be rebels captured by Patrick Dickson, Bailie of Peebles, in 1482/3. John (15th C.) recorded in 1493 as ‘Jak elwald’, he lived at Newton of Caverton. He had remission for several thefts: cattle from John Waddell from ‘elinburn’; sheep from John Lamb in Wilton; a horse from Wilton; and sheep from William Martin in Whitchester. He also committed common theft before the time of his previous remission. His surety was Sir Robert Ker. It is unclear how he was related to other Elliots. John (15th/16th C.) witness to the 1488 sasine in which Robert Scott of Allanhaugh leased the lands of Greenwood (i.e. Girnwood) and the Lyne. He is recorded there as ‘John Elwalde of Thorleshope’ and his brother Patrick is also mentioned as a witness. In 1494/5 he was listed being ‘in thornlawishop’ among a list of Liddesdale men who failed to appear at the Justice- aire. Presumably the same man is recorded as ‘Johne Elwald in Thorleshope’ in 1498 in a document listing many Liddesdale men who pledged themselves to Patrick, Earl of Bothwell for good behaviour. He must have been a close ancestor of Roland, Robert (or ‘Hob’ or ‘Robin’) and the later John of Thorleshope. He may be the John who was one of the Elliots who witnessed a sasine for the lands of Robert of Redheugh in 1497. John (15th C.) listed among a large number of Liddesdale men who did not appear before the court in Jedburgh in 1494/5. His name was given as ‘Johannis elwald lawson’, with the last part presumably being a nickname. It is possible he is the ‘Law’s John’ recorded 40 years later. John (15th C.) listed among Liddesdale men who failed to appear at the Justice- aire in 1494/5. He was son of ‘wrycrag’, but it is unclear how to interpret this nickname, or who his father may have been. John (15th/16th C.) listed as ‘Johne Elwald in Sondhope’ in a respite of the Register of the Privy Seal of 1510 given to Robert of Redheugh and several others in Liddesdale. Since only a few Elliots are mentioned, it seems likely that he was a close relative of the chief. He is also listed along with William of Larriston and a number of other Liddesdale Elliots in another respite of 1516. He is recorded there as ‘John Elwald in Sandop’. He was probably tenant of the lands of Sundhope, near Whitrope. John ‘Gret Johnnie’ (16th C.) tenant in Priesthaugh. In about 1510 he and Patrick were entered by Robert of Redheugh at a Justice Court in Jedburgh. John ‘Law’s John’ (16th C.) listed as one of the band of Armstrongs and others who were denounced as rebels in 1535 for a raid on the farm at Craik. His name is given as ‘John Elwald, called Lawis-Johne’; it is possible that his father was a Lawrence. He may have been a servant of Thomas of Mangerton, along with William, son of Alexander ‘Elwald’, who is also listed. It is possible he is the same man as (or otherwise related to) ‘Law’s Jock’ mentioned in the 1570s. He could alternatively be the ‘lawson’ recorded in 1494/5. John ‘Jock Unhappy’ (d.1536) recorded as ‘John Elwald, alias Jok Vnhappy’ when he was convicted of theft etc., and hanged. John (16th C.) recorded as ‘Joanni Elwald’ on the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale. He and his brothers were the tenants of ‘Catlie’ (probably ‘Gatliehill’). John of the Hill (16th C.) recorded as ‘Joanni de lie Hill’ in 1541 on the rental roll for Liddesdale, when he was one of the tenants of ‘Streichelhope’. He may be related to Airchie of the Hill, recorded around the 1580s and others with the same designation.

Elliot (16th C.) tenant of Ramsiegill in the 1541 rental roll for Liddesdale. Other men recorded as being 'in Ramsiegill' (but tenants of other farms) were Robert and William. He may also be the John who was a tenant in Stirkshielhope (along with other Elliots associated with Ramsiegill); his son 'Jacobo Elwald' called 'Nelis Jok' was also named (but may be a confusion). He was perhaps related to the earlier Hob and later Gavin of Ramsiegill. John of Thorlieshope (16th C.) son of Robert (or 'Robin'). Along with others he was entered in a bond to John Kerr of Ferniehirst by James Douglas of Cavers in 1546. He was there recorded as 'John Elwand'. There are other similar bonds involving Robert of Redheugh and him in 1547 and 1548. It is unclear what crimes he was accused of. He may be son of the 'Rolland Elwald in Thorleshope' recorded in 1516 and may be related to the John of Tholithic recorded in 1583. John (16th C.) recorded as son to 'Hob Quiytserk' in 1546 when he was one of the men to be entered as prisoners with John Kerr of Ferniehirst. He was recorded as son of 'Quiyetserk' in 1548 when there was a further a bond of Robert of Redheugh with the Kerrs of Ferniehirst for him and John of Tholithic to be 'entered'. He was probably another Liddesdale Elliot. John ‘Nelly’s John’ (16th C.) recorded in 1548 when, along with Robert of Redheugh and Richard of the Park, he had a bond to enter 2 prisoners with the Laird of Cavers in 1546. He is recorded as 'Jhone Elliott, callit Nelleis Jhone'. He is probably the same man as 'Neillis Jok' (although listed as 'Jacobo Elwald', i.e. James rather than John) recorded in 1541 among the tenants in Stirkshielhope; he appears to have been son of another John, with his mother presumably being Helen. John 'Jock o the Park' or 'Little Jock Elliot' (d.bef. 1578) son of Simon of the Park. He was a notorious riever, and subject of a traditional ballad. His tower may have been located where Newcastleton railway station was later built. He is recorded purchasing (or perhaps leasing) Hangingside (i.e. the land later known as Hawthornside) in 1562, confirmed in 1572/3. In October 1566 he was pursued by the Earl of Bothwell, after failing to appear at Hermitage along with the other Elliot leaders. Since he refused to stop, Bothwell shot him and they then fought at close quarters. He apparently struck Bothwell 3 times, while himself being stabbed twice in the chest, and collapsed about a mile away. It is said that he died of his wounds (although this is not clear, since it seems that the same man is documented later) and traditionally this is said to have happened on the Billhope Burn. Meanwhile Bothwell was taken back to Hermitage where he eventually recovered, after being visited by Mary Queen of Scots. In 1569 he was pledge for ‘the hail branche of the Park’, with William Ker of Cessford, younger, as his surety. In 1569 he was held in Balwearie Castle, as pledge for ‘Gray Will Elliot’ and ‘Hob Mirk Elliot’, who were surely close relatives. In 1570 he signed a bond along with other Elliots, giving pledges for Hob, son of Elder Will and John of Heuchhouse. There was surety for him in 1573, before the Privy Council. He may be the same ‘John ne of the Park’ listed among Monipennie's Border chiefs, published about 1594 (but probably compiled earlier). He was ‘unquhile Johnne Elliot of the Park’ when it was reported that he had previously acted as joint surety for Simmie Elliot of the Park; he also served as surety for 2 other Elliots. Unless he lived to be quite old he is unlikely to be the same John of the Park recorded in the 1580s – ‘They leave not spindle, spune nor spit, Bed, bolster, blanket, sark nor sheet, John o’ the Park, Rypes kist and ark, For a’ sic wark, He is richt meet’ [SRM], ‘Wha daur meddle i’ me? Wha daur meddle wi’ me? Oh, ma name it’s we Jock Elliot, An’ wha daur meddle i’ me?’ [T]. John ‘Jock’ (16th C.) tenant of Fiddleton. He is recorded in 1569, along with Hob ‘the Lady’ and Hob of Unthank, when 'Will Elliot callit the Lord' when held in Loch Doon Castle as pledge for them. He may be related to the later John in Fiddleton. John ‘Law’s Jock’ (16th C.) tenant of Priesthaugh. He is recorded in 1574 as ‘Jok Elliot callit Lawis Jok in Priesthauch’ among men who had been ordered to be removed from the lands of Robert of Redheugh. ‘Lawis Thome’ and ‘Lawis Richie’ were also named and presumably brothers. Their father may have been Lawrence, or perhaps they came from Laws in Liddesdale. Probably the same ‘Jokke Elliot in Priesthauch’ is listed in 1569 among the tenants that Gavin Elliott in Skelhill was surety for. It is possible he is the same man as ‘Lawis-Johne’ recorded in 1535. John (16th C.) described as John ‘Elwood’, brother of Will of the Steel in 1576 when the English Wardens complained to the Deputy Warden for West Teviotdale that he had stolen 100 sheep from Hexhamshire. He could be the same as John ‘of the Steill’ who was taken prisoner by Johnstone of that Ilk in 1572, with Robert of Redheugh and Martin of Brairdlie entering into a bond with Johnstone for his return to Johnstone after they had ‘borrowit’ him. He could be the recorded John of the Steele (unless this was an error for Will of the Steele) recorded in 1590 as first in a list of Elliots of the Park and Binks, and others, accused of a raid into England. John ‘Scot’s Hob’s Jock’, ‘Rob’s John’ (16th C.) listed among those implicated in the ambush of Scotts and Gledstains at Whithaugh in 1580. His name is given ‘Jok Elliott, callit Scottis Hobbis Jok’, and hence he was presumably son of ‘Scot’s Hob’. In 1581 he was part of a bond of caution entered with John Carmichael, who had been Keeper of Liddesdale: ‘Scot’s Hob’s Gavin’ was also listed and presumably his brother. He was also part of a second bond in 1581, for the ‘hail gang of Park’. He was listed in 1582/3 as one of the cautioners for Sim’s Rowie of the Park. He is recorded as ‘Johne Elliott, called Robeis John’, and his name appears with Sim’s Archie, Jamie’s Hob and others. His name comes second (after Archie of the Park) among those giving assurance for the Elliots of Park in the 1584 bond signed with the English Wardens at Hermitage; there he is ‘Scotts Hobbs Jock of the Parke’. He was recorded as ‘‘Scotts Hobs’ Jocke’ in 1587/8 when accused by Sir John Forster of being on a raid on England in 1585, along with many other Elliots. His father was presumably Robert and his grandfather either a Scott or nicknamed ‘Scot’; However, it is otherwise unclear who he was and how he may have been related to the earlier Jock o the Park. John of Bowholm (16th C.) recorded as ‘Johne Elliott of Bowholmis’ among cautioners for men accused of crimes against Englishmen in 1579/80. He was recorded as ‘John Elliott of Bohomes’ in 1587/8 when accused by Sir John Forster of being on a raid on England in 1585, along with many other Elliots. His father was presumably Robert and his grandfather either a Scott or nicknamed ‘Scot’; However, it is otherwise unclear who he was and how he may have been related to the earlier Jock o the Park. John of Bowholm (16th C.) recorded as ‘Johne Elliott of Bowholmis’ among cautioners for men accused of crimes against Englishmen in 1579/80. He was recorded as ‘John Elliott of Bohomes’ in 1587/8 when accused by Sir John Forster of being on a raid on England in 1585, along with many other Elliots, including Hob of Bowholm. It is unclear how he was related to Hob, but they were probably brothers or father and son. His son David was declared as a fugitive in 1605. John (16th C.) son of ‘Elder Will’, he was sentenced to imprisonment for rieving in 1580/1, along with several other Elliots, Armstrongs and Nixons of Liddesdale. In 1581 James Stewart ‘of Scherelaw’ was cautioned to present him to the Privy Council and in 1582/3 Stewart was found liable to pay a penny for his non-appearance. He was probably brother of Robert, who was captured in Hawick in 1567. Their father was clearly William, but it is unclear to which branch of the Elliots they belonged. It is possible he was the man transcribed as ‘Johne Ellott, son of the Elder Tod’ who was warded in Edinburgh in 1580. John of Heuchhouse (16th C.) prisoner in Blackness Castle in 1570, along with Hob Elliot, son of ‘Elder Will’. The pair were allowed to return to Liddesdale following a bond given by Martin of Brairdlie, Elder Will, John of the Park, Adam ‘called Cowdas’, Hob of Heuchhouse and ‘Clementis Hob’; however, they were not produced after 8 days, and the Elliots incurred a penalty of 4000 merks. There was a reminder at the Privy Council in 1578/9 of the pledge to enter him into ward, along with Hob, son of Elder Will; they were supposed to go to the houses of John Cockburn of Ormiston and William Lauder of Halton, but did not go. He was also listed in 1581 along with William of Redheugh, Adam of Shaws, Archie of the Hill and others. They were accused by Englishman James Foster of ‘Svmwhaite’ of stealing cattle and goods. In 1579/80 he was ‘Johne Elliot, son of Dand of Heuchhous’ when he was listed among men (including Martin of Heuchhouse) accused of raiding into England. In the 1580s he (and Gavin of Ramsigill) also accused Capt. Carvell and his band ‘with the clans of Leven’ of stealing 200 cattle and 30 horses from their lands. He must have been related to the earlier Andrew and Martin of the same place. He could be the John who is recorded in 1583 as brother to Hob of Heuchhouse. In 1587/8 he was accused by Sir John Forster of being on a raid on England in 1585, along with many other Elliots, including ‘Reid’ Martin of Heuchhouse, who was surely a close relative. In 1590 he was part of a group of Elliots who were accused of a raid by Thomas Hall of ‘Gersom-feed’ and the tenants of ‘Dortreis’ in England. His name was also given in 1590 along with Croziers, Fosters and others accused of stealing livestock and a detailed list of items from a servant of Sir John Forster. ‘William Elliott son to John of the Hewghhouse’, complained about for a raid into England in 1595, was presumably his son. John ‘the Gyde’ (16th C.) listed in 1576 when Robert of Redheugh acted as surety for him ‘that he sould abstene fra thift and resett of thift in tyme cumming’. His name was given as ‘Johne Elliott, cal- lit Jok the Gyde’, and the pledge was stated to have been broken by 1578/9. He was probably related to Jock the Gyde recorded almost 50 years later. John ‘Gavin’s Jock’ of Ramsigill (16th C.) listed in 1569 as ‘Gawins Jok in Ramsygill’. Ade, ‘callit the Cowdais’ was held in Blackness

Castle as pledge for him and ‘Wilcakis Hob’. Perhaps the same ‘Jock’ was listed as tenant of Gavin of Elliot of Fulnash in 1569; the Laird appeared in Hawick to give surety for his tenants, and he may have been related to Will, Dand and Hob, other Elliots who were also listed as tenants. He is recorded in 1574 among Scotsmen who were reset in England, where he was ‘Gawynnis Jok’ (making it clear that his father was Gavin); his brother ‘Hobbe’ was also mentioned. In 1576 there was a complaint that Neil Montgomery of Langshaw had allowed him to break from ward. In 1581 he was listed along with Martin of Braidlie and Robert Kerr of Ancrum when they were cautioned for the non-appearance of Jock’s Willie and ‘I’ll Hob’, both from Ramsiegill, who were possibly his sons; they were fined in 1582/3. In 1581 the notary signed for him because he could not write himself. He was listed in 1583 as ‘Joke of Ramsgill’ in a letter from the English wardens, where he was the first man listed under the Elliots of Burnhead. He was probably related to the Jock of Ramsiegill recorded in 1612, as well as to other Elliots of Ramsiegill and Burnhead. Probably the same man is recorded as ‘Gawins Jok’ under the heading ‘Burnhead’ in Montpenny’s list of Border chiefs (published around 1594, but probably compiled earlier). John (16th C.) recorded as ‘Johme Elliot, callit of the Dewisleis’ in 1578/9, when it was stated to the Privy Council that he was previously meant to have been placed into ward, but in fact had not been. This was along with Andrew ‘callit the Wowaris Andro’, with sureties John Carmichael, younger of that Ilk and William Scott of Montbenger. He was probably from Eweslees. Probably the same John was recorded as being ‘of the Dewhowses’ in Ewesdale, along with Ringan, when they signed the 1584 bond of assurance with the English Wardens. John ‘Jock’ of the Hill (16th C.) recorded in 1583 in a list of Elliots of the Burnhead branch. He was surely related to Archie of the Hill, who is also listed. Probably the same John ‘Jocke Elwood’ was ‘brothers sonne’ to Airchie of the Hill in 1591 when they were accused of plundering from Jeffrey Tailor and the tenants of Scaleby. He is probably the Jock listed along with Mark and James of the Hill among Scotsmen accused of raids into England in 1595. Possibly the same ‘Johne Elliot of the Hill’ acted as cautioner in 1611 for John of Heuchhouse to appear in court at Jedburgh. John of Burnhead (16th C.) named in 1590 along with ‘Gib Elliot son to Robin’, 2 servants of Robert of Redheugh and others who were accused of stealing horses from Middleton Hall in the previous year. He was recorded as ‘called the lard of Burneheads’. He may be the same as one of the other contemporary Elliots associated with Burnhead. John ‘Half Lug’ (16th C.) listed among the Elliots of Burnhead in 1583, where his name is given as ‘Joke Elliot called Halfe loges’. Probably the same John was ‘halfe lug’ in 1590, when accused with several other Elliots of leading a raid on ‘Windgates’ in England. He may be the ‘Wyll Elliotts John of Burnheads’ recorded in 1595 among Scotsmen accused of raiding into England. He was ‘Jok Elliott of Burnheheid, called Halfe Lug’ when listed among Liddesdale men declared as fugitives for not appearing at a court in 1605.

John ‘Jock’ of Thorlshiope (16th C.) listed in 1583 among the Elliots of the Braidlie branch, his name appearing as ‘John Elliot of Thornesope’. He may be the same as the John of Thorlshiope recorded 4 decades earlier, but is more likely to be his son. Probably the same John was recorded in 1569 when Martin of Braidlie and Archibald Armstrong of Mangerton promised to enter him in ward if requested by the Lord Regent. Probably the same John was pledge in 1569 for ‘the haill branche of the Thorlshiop (except Hob of the Shaws and his brother Will of the Steele), with Sir Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule as his surety. He was also ‘of Thorlshiop’ when held in Wester Wemyss in 1569 as pledge for Hob of the Shaws and Archie ‘Fyre the Brais’. John ‘Jock’ (16th C.) listed as ‘Hobbis Jok’ in 1581 when he was among those cautioned for the non-appearance of ‘Symmis Rowie’ of the Park. Others listed were Rob’s John (unless this was an error and the same man), Sim’s Archie and Jamie’s Hob, who may have been related to him; they were fined in 1582/3. He was also referred to as ‘Johme Elliot, called Rowes Johnne’. John ‘Sim’s John’ of the Park (16th C.) presumably son of Simon, and probably related to ‘Jock o the Park’ from a couple of decades earlier. He is probably the John of the Park for whom surety was recorded in 1573. He was to be warded with Sir William Scott of Balwearie, but was interchanged with Hob, son of the deceased James of the Park; the cautioners were Sir Walter Ker of Cessford, Andrew Ker of Faldonside and Walter Riddell of that Ilk. He may be the ‘Johne Elliot of the Park’ listed in 1580 among those implicated in the ambush of Scotts and Gledstains at Whitaugh. An English list of 1583 has him first among the Elliots of Park, giving his name as ‘Sims John Elliot of the Parke’; others named (to whom he was probably closely related) are ‘Grey Willie’, ‘Scots Hobbie’, Jamie of the Park, ‘Grey Will’s Jamie’ and ‘Hob’s Hobbie’. Also in 1583 he was ‘John Elwet of the Park’ when the Halls of ‘Haveracres’ complained that he had led about 100 men in a raid that resulted in the deaths of 4 Halls. He may be the John of the Park, recorded in 1590 along with Gabriel, as well as Elliots of the Steele, Thorlshope and others, who were accused of raiding into England. ‘He must have been related to ‘Rowie’ or ‘Robin’ of the Park, recorded in 1578 and 1581 and ‘young Archie of the Park’ who was one of the Elliots to sign a bond with Scott of Buccleuch in 1599.

John ‘Jock’ (16th C.) recorded in the 1585 remission for men of Dumfriesshire as being ‘Jock Ellat in Bowgrains’. This was probably somewhere near Langholm, but could be same as Burngrains. John of Copshaw (16th/17th C.) probably a son of Robert of Redheugh, his brothers being Robert, the 14th Chief, possibly Martin of Braedlie and Archibald of Falnash. In 1568 he led a party of Elliots, Armstrongs and others, which burned the house at Torwoodlee, killing George Pringle there. In 1580 he was among those implicated in the ambush of Scotts and Gledstains at Whithaugh; his brother Tom was also listed. Also in 1580 he was said to have joined the group of Elliots and Armstrongs that raided the farm of Slaidhills, stealing cattle and leaving a servant for dead. He was also in the party that attacked some Elliots, Scotts and Gledstains at Whithaugh in Liddesdale in 1580, killing Walter Gledstains. He was listed in 1581 among Armstrongs, Elliots and others who accused the Scotts and their allies of several crimes, contrary to the bond between them. He may be the ‘Jock of Copshawe’ (surname not given) who was among a group of men accused in 1582 of taking part on a raid into England in which Martin Taylor and 3 others were killed. He is probably ‘Joke Elliott called Copshawe’ listed among the Elliots of Braedlie in 1583. In 1584 the Warden of the Middle Marches, Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst, lists him among the ‘principalis of the branchis of Liddisdal’. He is also mentioned in 1588 (although this could have been his son) when Nichol Cairncross was surety for his brother Hob, who was in the Tolbooth. He may be the ‘John of Copshawes’ whose tower, somewhere near Saughtree, was marked on Sandison’s c.1590 map of the Deabateable Land. He was named by an English informed as part of the group that raided Carlisle Castle to free ‘Kinmont Willie’ (although he is likely to have been too old to take part himself, and so this may have been a son). In 1594/5 he was named in an indenture between the Scottish and English Wardens. He is probably one of the 3 Johns who signed a bond written by Sir John Forster to try to end family feuds on the Border in 1595/6. In an English letter of 1596 it is stated that he had built a tower at ‘Blackstone lea’ (which was probably near Mangerton, or may simply have been a misunderstanding for Copshaw). He was one of the trustees for the young Robert (17th) of Redheugh appointed in about 1597. In that year he wrote (along with Robert of Redheugh and William of Hartsgarth) from Larriston to the English Warden, explaining that they had sworn to the Scott of Buccleuch that they would not have dealings with any Englishmen. In 1599 he was ‘Jok Elliot of Copscaw’ among Elliots who signed a bond at Branxholme with the Warden of the West March regarding the inhabitants of Liddesdale; he did this with his hand on the notary’s pen ‘because I can nocht wryte my self’. In 1605 he was accused, along with his son Robert (and servant John Routledge and Adam ‘Rakese’), of attacking Wauchope (in Rulewater) with 100 men, stealing cows, sheep, etc., but was acquitted. He was found guilty of the murder of Pringle in 1607 and denounced as a rebel when he did not appear; if this is the same man, then he must have been quite old by then.

John ‘Rowie’s John’ (16th C.) recorded in 1581 as part of a bond of caution entered with John Carmichael, who had been Keeper of Liddesdale. Several other Elliots were listed, including Jock and Gavin, sons of ‘Scot’s Hob’. He was also part of a second bond in 1581, for the ‘hail gang of Park’. He was also listed among the Elliots of the Park who signed for their whole band in the 1584 assurance given to the English Wardens. His name is given there as ‘Roweis Johne of the Parke’. His father was presumably Roland. John ‘Jock o the Lies’ (16th C.) one of a group of Elliots who signed a bond for ‘Willie’s Hob’ in 1587. It is unclear where his seat was, but presumably in Liddesdale. He may have been closely related to the Elliots of Ramsiegill and of ‘the Hill’. He was probably related to ‘Ade Elwald de Leyis’ who is recorded in 1541. John (16th C.) brother of ‘Willie’s Hob’, he was part of the bond for his brother, made to William Douglas of Lochleven and his son James Douglas, Commendator of Melrose in 1587. His father was probably William. John (16th C.) recorded as ‘Johnne Elliot, sone to unhquhil Ringane the Portar, or Blasteis Jok’ in 1578/9, when John Carmichael, younger of that Ilk was caution for him (and others) not to raid into England. He was also ‘John the Portars sonne’ among Elliots of Ewesdale in Monipennie’s c.1594 compilation of Border chiefs. He may have been son of Ninian ‘the Porter’ from Ewes Doors. John ‘Lang Jock’ (16th C.) recorded among Nixons and Elliots complained about by the English Warden regarding 2 separate raids in 1588. He was also recorded in 1590 as ‘longe Jocke Elliot’ when, along with relatives of Martin of Braidlie and others was accused of stealing cattle and horses from England. Probably the same man was ‘longe John Elliott’, accused in 1590 along with elder Will of the Steele, Archie and Martin’s Gib ‘the cousin’ of stealing from the tenants of ‘Greinridge’. He is also ‘longe John’ listed among Elliots and Armstrongs complained about in 1590 by a large group of Englishmen for a raid on Blackcleugh in Kirkhaugh. He was also named in 1590 on a list of Elliots, Nixons and others who were accused of being on a raid into England in 1588. His nickname presumably means he was tall. John (16th C.) recorded as ‘Cowshawes’ in 1590 along with other Elliots and Nixons when there was a complaint from the English side of the Border that in 1588 they had stolen in ‘playne dayelight, thir hirdes’ and 24 head of cattle. He may be related to Will ‘called Cowsauche’, who was a fugitive in 1605. John ‘Cull the Spade’ (16th C.) recorded in 1590 along with other Elliots and Nixons who were accused of going on a raid into England in 1588. He is listed separately from John ‘Cowshawes’, along with Gavin’s Hob, who may have been close relatives. John ‘the Child’ (16th C.) listed among a large group of Elliots who were accused in 1590 of taking Ralph Hall and others prisoner and ransoming them. It is unclear what his nickname referred to, or whether he is the same as one of the other Johns. John (16th C.) listed among Elliots and others who were accused in 1590 of taking horses and prisoners on a raid into England. He is recorded being ‘of the Hillend, but separately from Mark of the Hill (making it seem that he was not directly related to that branch), and just before Elliots of Ewesdale. John ‘Jock’ of Burngrains (d.bef. 1608) probably from the lands near Meikledale, in Ewesdale. In 1606 his sons Hob and Will were listed among men declared as fugitives for not appearing at a court in Hawick. He is recorded as ‘vajgle Johnne Ellote of Burnegranes’ and also ‘Jok of Burgranes’ in 1608 when his son William (or possibly Ninian, since the records are confusing) was sentenced to hanging for resisting the King’s Guard. He may have been related to Adam of Meikledale, who also held Burngrains later in the 17th century. John (16th/17th C.) younger son of Martin of Braidlie, referred to as ‘Martin’s John of Burnmouth’. He was probably the son of Martin recorded in 1590 along with his brother Airchie, as well as ‘Martin’s Gib’ and Martin of Prickinghaugh, when they were accused of stealing from Englishman Thomas Rutherford of Blackhall. He was probably the John, son of Martin, recorded on a 1590 list of Elliots (including his brother Airchie and cousin Dand), Croziers, Nixons and others accused of rieving from William Robson of ‘Allerweshe’. He is probably also the John listed among Elliots (including his brother Gib, as well as Airchie of Chintwood, who was also his brother) and Armstrongs complained about in 1590 by a large group of Englishmen for a raid on Blackcleugh in Kirkhaugh, taking many prisoners for ransom. He was probably the John, son of Martin, who (along with his brother Gib) was part of a complaint about a raid into Gilsland in 1596, led by Sir Walter Scott of Harden. He was denounced as a rebel in 1611 and his lands and goods forfeited to Thomas Cranston. It is possible that he was the ‘Johnne Elwode in Barn’ (16th/17th C.) listed among fugitives who did not appearing at a court in Hawick in 1605. He was son of Will of Fiddleton and listed along with his father and brother Ringan. John ‘Jock’ (16th/17th C.) listed among fugitives who did not appearing at a court in Hawick in 1605. He was son of ‘Heidheid’, but it is unclear how he was related to other Elliots. John ‘Jock’ (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1605 as son of ‘Wower’s Andro’. He was listed as a fugitive among Liddesdale and Eskdale men not appearing at a Borders Commissioners’ court in Hawick. It is unclear who his father might have been. John ‘Jock’, ‘the Murt’ (16th/17th C.) listed among men declared as fugitives for not appearing at a Borders Commissioners’ court in Jedburgh in 1605. He was also referred to in 1611 when ‘Robert Elliot, called Martenis Hob’ was cautions for his appearance at court in Jedburgh. However, he was acquitted of the charges. It is unclear what his nickname meant, but he may have been related to Will in Burnhead, called ‘Murt’. John ‘Jock’, ‘Blackheid’ (16th/17th C.) listed among Liddesdale men declared as fugitives for not attending a

Elliot court in Peebles in 1605. He is recorded as ‘Jok Elliot, called Blakheid’. His nickname was presumably to distinguish him from other contemporary Johns. He was perhaps related to Archibald and William, who also had the same nickname. John ‘Reid Jock’ (16th/17th C.) listed among Liddisdale men declared as fugitives for not attending a court in Peebles in 1605. It is unclear how he might have been related to other Elliots. John (16th/17th C.) son of Archie of Foulshiels. In 1611 John Ainslie, Burgess of Jedburgh was cautioner for him to appear in court at Jedburgh; however, he was acquitted of the charges. John of Heuchhouse (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1611 when John of the Hill acted as cautioner for him to appear in court at Jedburgh. He was acquitted of the charges. He is surely related to the John of Heuchhouse recorded 30 years earlier. John ‘Jock’ (16th/17th C.) referred to in 1612 as ‘in Braidiel’. He was on the jury for the trial of Hawick Bailies and others over the death of John Elliot ‘in Redden’ while in custody. He may have been the same as one of the other contemporary Johns. John ‘Jock of Rynsiegill’ (16th/17th C.) from Ridden in Liddesdale, the designation is probably the same as ‘Ramsiegill’. He was a thief who was caught plundering from a Hawick Burgess in 1612, and imprisoned in the church steeple. He then apparently committed suicide, and his widow Bessie ‘with the ffive fatherless barns’ brought an action against the Bailies. However, it was proved by witnesses that ‘he was fund lying deid... hangit himself in his aune belt’. He was recorded in Pitcairn’s ‘Criminal Trials’ as ‘Johnne Ellote in Redden, callit Johnne of Rynsiegill’. John of Arkleton (d.1622) 2nd son of William of Fahnash and brother of Robert of Fahnash (who was Justice of the Peace in Roxburghshire). He was also referred to as ‘of Fahnash’. In 1615 he witnessed a sasine of Kirkton by William Armstrong. In 1616 he was on the jury that convicted Jock Scott ‘the Suckler’ of sheep stealing. In 1617 he appeared before the Privy Council with a number of other Border lairds to renew the bond for the good behaviour of his supporters and tenants. He married Ester Armstrong, who was one of the heirs-portioners of Ninian Armstrong of Arkleton. They had one child, Archibald of Arkleton. John ‘the Dod’ (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1624 when Adie and Will Usher were convicted for stealing sheep from him and others. He is distinguished from John ‘callit the Gyde’ in the same case. He may have farmed on the Dod Burn. Perhaps the same John ‘callit Dods’, tenant in Thorlieshope, was recorded in 1623 when he was a cautioner (along with John Turner in Nether Nisbet) for Michael ‘Birnie in Fairynilies’ at the Justice Court in Jedburgh. He was probably also the ‘Jok Elliot, callit Dod’ who had 3 cows stolen from his lands of ‘Buceburne’ in 1623. John ‘the Gyde’ (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1624 along with John ‘the Dod’ when they had 5 sheep stolen from them by Adie and Will Usher. It is unclear what his nickname meant (but there was also a William Scott ‘the Gyde’); he is probably related to the earlier ‘Jok the Gyde’. John (17th C.) recorded in 1642 as ‘Jock Elliot called Jock a gods name’ on a long list of Borderers to be apprehended and tried for various crimes. It is unclear what his peculiar nickname meant. His lands were probably around Liddesdale. John (17th C.) 3rd son of Robert of Falnash. Before 1644 he married Grizel Elliot, heiress of Philhope, who had been ward of his father since her own father had died. In 1644 Philhope was sold to Archibald Elliot and Elizabeth Chisholme. He started as a merchant’s apprentice in Edinburgh in 1636, but the entry is deleted 2 years later, presumably meaning that he had changes in his circumstances. This may have been the time of his marriage, when he took over running Philhope. He was probably the John, ‘Falnashes brother’, recorded in the Land Tax Rolls for Hawick Parish in 1663, paying £216 for Broadlee. John (17th C.) described as a ‘wag’, i.e. soldier, in Hawick in 1642 when he is listed among a large number of people accused of theft (probably wrongly). His son James was also mentioned there. John (17th C.) described as ‘in Whitscheill’ in 1665 when he was named as a debtor of William Elliot of Binks, along with many other Elliots. John (17th C.) said to have been an illegitimate son of the first Gavin of Brugh, he was hanged for theft at Hexham. However, these generations are quite confused. John (d.1679) from Southdean Parish. He is recorded as one of the men banished to America in 1679 for being a Covenanter, and dying at Moul Head of Deerness, in Orkney, when their ship wrecked and they were ordered shut up beneath the hatches. John (d.c.1685) tenant in Hyndhope (although it is not clear which one). His will is recorded in 1685. John of Thorlieshope (1621–98) son of Adam of Meikledale. In 1657 his father purchased for him the lands of ‘Isgill’ (or Elfgill), ‘Midgheop’ (or Midgeholm) and Newgibbing, retaining the liferent for himself. In 1671 he was ‘indweller in Hudshouse’ and already possessed Thorlieshope. He purchased Larriston
Elliot

Rig and Hopehead and in 1675 he gave a ‘wadsett’ for Robert Elliot of Larriston’s lands of Over and Nether Larriston, Redheugh, Blackhope and ‘Greenhollis’. He paid tax on £520 in Castleton Parish in 1678. He probably had the house at Thorlleshope rebuilt in 1682 (since there is a stone there bearing that date). In 1690 he was a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire. In 1697 he (along with his 3rd son John) purchased another wadsett on the lands of Larriston Rig and Hopehead. He was a Commissioner of Supply in Roxburghshire in 1690. It is said that he was conspicuous among the band of local minor Lairds who engaged in smuggling cattle across the Border during the time when such trade was illegal. He was a cautioner for a bond by Henry Elliot of Harwood in 1692, and also witnessed the bond between Harwood and Bewlie in 1692. He was recorded at the Castleton Kirk Session in 1698. He married Jean Elliot of Dinlabyre before 1671. In 1677 he secondly married Jean, daughter of Thomas McDonuggall of Stodrig. He had 10 children: William of Thorlleshope and Ove, who was also Commissioner of Supply and married Christian Ainslie; Henry of Lodgegill (1672–1714), who married Margaret, daughter of Robert Elliot of Midlem Mill; John of the Binks (1674–1751), who married Christian, daughter of Robert Elliot, factor to the Duke of Buccleuch; Andrew, who died unmarried; Margaret, who married Sim Elliot of Lodgegill; Janet, who married William Elliot in Penchrise; Helen, who married John Elliot of Cooms (or perhaps William of Cooms); Jean, who married Thomas Armstrong of Sorbie; Christopher, who married John, brother of Elliot of Dinlabyre; and Elizabeth, who married Edward Elliot. He is buried at the Nether Kirk of the Ewes. John (17th C.) described as ‘sometimes in Dinlbeir now in Hudshouse’ in 1665 and 1668, when he was named as a creditor for the estate of William Elliot of Binks, who was his father-in-law. In 1662 he was also one of the witnesses to the last testament of William Elliot of Harwood and Binks, described as his father-in-law. John of Brugh (1627–1705) eldest son of Archibald of Brugh. He farmed and lived at Nether Southfield. He was recorded as tenant there in at least the period 1690–98, however, he was already at Southfield when his daughter Beatrix was baptised in 1654. In 1665 he borrowed money, with his brothers Gavin and Gilbert as guarantors. In 1667 he was on the panel for William of Dinlabyre being served heir to his great-grandfather William of Hartsgarth. He is probably the John recorded at Nether Southfield in 1694, when he paid tax on 2 hearths there. In 1701 he was witness to the birth of the twin daughters of his son Gilbert. In 1702 he helped arrange the settlement for his grand-daughter Eleanor when she married Sir Gilbert Elliott of Stobs. He witnessed two baptisms in Hawick in 1702, one for Robert Scott in Goldielands and another along with his brother Gilbert. In 1704 he and his son Gilbert witnessed a baptism for William Hood in Newbigging. He married Margaret (1630–1706), daughter of Robert Johnstone, who was said to be Minister of Auncrum, although no man of that name held that particular office, and so he was possibly minister elsewhere. she died the year after him. They had at least 9 children: William, merchant in London, later of Brugh and Wells; Gilbert in Winningtonrig and Nether Southfield; Robert, mentioned in his brother William’s will; Thomas of Haydon Bridge or Canonbie Mill, who married a Miss Robinson; an unnamed son (b.1672); George (b.1676), Minister of Hownam; Beatrix (b.1654): a daughter who married Hobbie Scott; Jeanette (b.1672), who was left money in William’s will; and Joan (b.1675), also left money in her brother’s will. Most of their children were christened in Hawick Parish. The witnesses in 1654 were William Douglas (perhaps of Cavers) and Gilbert Elliott (perhaps of Stobs), in 1672 were James Liddell (probably Hawick Town Clerk) and James Scott and in 1675 were John Hardie and schoolmaster John Purdom. His wife died the year after he did and they were buried at St. Mary’s, the tombstone once reading ‘Here lies John Elliot in the Southfield descended from the renowned family of the Elliots of Lariston by his grandschir Gavin Elliot of the Brough ...’ and that his wife was ‘sister of the ancient family of the Halliburtons of Muirhouselaw’. John (c.1650–1728) son of Adam of Mosspeeble. He was described as being ‘in Dinley’ (i.e. Dinlees). He married Margaret Scott from Falnash (perhaps an older child of Gideon Scott). Their children were: probably Ninian (1697–1724); Adam (1702–24); John (b.1703), who died young; John in Park; William (c.1703–91), who married Helen Scott, from Blackhall; Isobel, who married Henry, 2nd son of William Elliot in Penchrise; Janet; Christian; and Anna. He died at Park. His will is registered in Edinburgh Commissary Court in 1730. John in Leaunig (17th C.) 3rd son of William of Penchrise and Mary Elliot, he was recorded in 1683. He had a son, Archibald, who was an Excise Officer. John (17th/18th C.) shepherd in Langside in Cavers Parish in 1700 when his daughter Elspeth was baptised. He could be the tenant in Langside who is recorded paying tax on 3 hearths in 1694. John (17th C.) resident of Castleton Parish (probably at Yethouse) according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Isobel, who was recorded after him, must have been closely related. John (17th C.) tenant in Saughtree in Castleton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. John (17th C.) name of 2 separate men recorded paying the Hearth Tax in 1694 for households near Redheugh in Castleton Parish. John (17th C.) resident of Castleton Parish, listed between Sorbietrees and Flatt, according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. John (17th C.) recorded as a householder at Branhxholme on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls, when he was taxed for 2 hearths. It is possible he was the same as one of the contemporary Johns. John (17th C.) resident at Monk's Croft (in Hassendean Parish) according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He was probably related to William who was also listed there. John in Harden (17th/18th C.) son of Adam in Dykeraw. He had a daughter, Marion, and a son, William in Hole. His lands were Harden in Liddesdale. John (17th/18th C.) described as ‘in Tower’ in Cavers Parish in 1698 when his daughter Jane was baptised. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish, where he had 2 children baptised. He married Helen Scott in Cavers Parish in 1701. Their children included: Walter (b.1703); and Margaret (b.1705). John (17th/18th C.) married Christian Grieve in Hawick Parish in 1702. John (17th/18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. In 1704 he witnessed the baptism of a daughter of Gilbert, farmer in Southfield and Winningtonrig, who was probably a relative of some sort. The other witness was John Elliott, uncle of Sir Gilbert, 3rd Baronet of Stobs. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, where he married Helen Laidlaw in 1705. Their children included: Andrew (b.1705); William (b.1707); John (b.1711); and Walter (b.1713). John (17th/18th C.) miller at Appotside Mill who was witness to a sasine for the Elliots of Harwood in 1704. His son James was also a witness. John of Castlehope and Billhope (17th/18th C.) 2nd son of William of Mosspecie, he was descended from the Elliots of Falsnash. Castlehope was an earlier name for Twislehope. He married Margaret, daughter of Robert Elliot of Caerlenrig. Their children were: William in Whithaugh and Braidlie (b.c.1678–1767); Robert of Castlehope and Billhope; and Walter in Brugh. John (17th/18th C.) recorded as ‘in Rig’ 1711 when his son Francis was baptised in Cavers Parish. It is unclear if he was related to the other Elliots in Rig. John (17th/18th C.) said in some genealogies to be son of Robert of Lodgell. In 1711 he married Helen, daughter of John of Thorlshope. However, this information may be confused, and his name may be an error for William of Cooms. John of Larriston (17th/18th C.) appointed in 1715 as one of the legal guardians for the 7 children of Henry, farmer at Sorbietrees. ‘John’ could be an error, since Robert was the Laird of Larriston at this time. He could also be the John whose sons Robert and William signed the 1731 marriage contract of William Elliot of Lodgell and Jean Elliot of Harwood. John (17th/18th C.) described as being in Stobicote in 1716 when his son Archibald was baptised in Cavers Parish. Probably the same John was also in Stobicote in 1728 when his son James was born. John (17th/18th C.) married Helen Turnbull in Bedrule Parish in 1714. Their children (with no mother given) may include John (b.1715), Janet (b.1723) and Helen (b.1725). John (17th/18th C.) tenant in Goldielands and Crumhaugh from at least 1715. In 1721 2 of his servants (Walter Scott and Helen Turnbull) are recorded getting married in Hawick. He is recorded as ‘in Goldielands’ in 1723 when he was considered as an elder of Hawick Kirk. He was admitted as a Burgess of Hawick in 1727. He was still tenant in Goldielands in the period 1730–5 when his shepherd, Robert Hobkirk, had a run-in with the Town Herd, Mungo Armstrong (as recounted in 1767). And a few years later he had to speak with the Bailies to recover cattle owned by himself and other local tenants, which the Burgh Officers had driven to the West Port after they were found being pastured on the Common. John (17th/18th C.) described as being in Earlside in 1724 when his daughter Katherine was baptised in Cavers Parish in 1724. John of Demainholm (17th/18th C.). Recorded in the period 1695–1726 in papers with the Scotts of Buccleuch dealing with his debts. In 1727 he sold the lands of Demainholm to William of Thorlshope and Overton. John of Peel (d.def. 1721) youngest son of William of Harwood. His older brother Simon pre-deceased his father, while his brother Henry succeeded to the main estate of Harwood. He was given the lands of Baxtonlees (also called Peel) by his father. He paid the land tax on £160 in Castleton Parish in 1678, and was recorded then as being in Backestonelyes alias peel'. He married Elizabeth Elliot (from an unknown branch of the family). He had a son John, to whom he conveyed the lands of Peel; however, on John's death these lands went to his daughters. His children were: John, tenant in Langside in 1723; Christian, who married Adam Elliot of Unthank; Jean, who married Thomas Pringle in Kirkton; and Margaret, who married Robert Dalgleish in Fastheugh. His daughters sold Peel to Henry, son of their uncle Henry of Harwood. He appears to have been dead by 1721, when Elizabeth is referred to as his widow (although Tancred suggests that his son John predeceased him and he lived until about 1730). John of Binks (1674–1751) 3rd son of John of Thorlleshope. He was granted a charter of Binks by Sir Gilbert Elliott of Stobs in 1674. His brother Henry of Lodgellig died in 1714, when he became a curator for his nephew William. In 1718 he was granted a charter for Binks by Sir Gilbert Elliott of Stobs. He and his descendants also held the lands of Burnmouth; he is probably the ‘Jo. Elliot in Burnmouth’ who paid the window tax in Castleton Parish in 1748. In 1700 he married Christian (c.1682–1726), daughter of Robert Elliot, Factor to the Duke of Buccleuch, and had 9 children, but the only sons who survived to adulthood were Robert of Binks and William of Bush. His children included: Robert of Binks (1702–66); John (b.1704), who died young; William of Bush (1705–99), who married Margaret Aitcheson; John (again, b.1710), who was a Burgess of Jedburgh and died without issue; James, George, Henry and an unnamed son, who all died young or unmarried; and Jean (b.1726), who married Henry Elliot of Peel. He is buried at Castleton. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Minto Parish. His children baptised there were: John (b.1727); Adam (b.1725); and Margaret (b.1729). John (17th/18th C.) referred to as being ‘of Langlands’. He married Elizabeth Wilson in Ashkirk in 1723. Their children, born in Ashkirk and Wilton Parishes, included: Isobel (b.1724); James (b.1726); Robert (b.1728); John (b.1731); and Beattie (b.1733). John (17th/18th C.) tenant in Park, son of John of Dinlees. He is mentioned in 1730, but nothing else is known about him. His brother William may have taken over the tenancy from him. John (17th/18th C.) cooper in Hawick. He married Catherine Elliot in Hawick in 1723. Their children included: Bessie (b.1724); William (b.1726); Katherine (b.1729); and Henry (b.1737). John of Whithaugh (c.1702–48) eldest son of William, who purchased Whithaugh for him (as well as Redheugh for his brother Robert) in about 1730. He paid the window tax in Castleton Parish in 1748. He married Margaret (c.1704–1768), daughter of Robert Scott of Gorrenberry. Their children were: William (c.1723–76) of Whithaugh, who married Margaret Shortreed of Essenside and secondly Elizabeth, sister of the Laird of Wolfelee; Robert (1725–70), farmer at Hermitage and Millburnholm, who married Janet Scott from Greenwood; John (1726–1813), farmer at Twislehope, who married Janet Turnbull from Mangerton; Margaret (b.1727), who died young; Mary (b.1728), also died young; Walter (b.1729), died young; Thomas (1730–1807), also tenant in Twislehope; Helen (b.1731), married A. Waddie, purser in the Royal Navy; Isobel (1732–1807); James (c.1733–1816), shepherd in Twislehope; and Elizabeth (c.1734–1807), who died unmarried. He and his wife are buried at Unthank. John (18th C.) rented the farm of Todshawhill from the Scotts of Buccleuch in at least the years 1744–46. Note that his name may have been James rather than John. John (b.1701/2–88) from Castleton Parish. He married Hannah Grieve. Their children included: Robert (b.1761); William (1763–88), a surgeon who died at Cape Coast Castle in Africa; Janet (b.1765); John (b.1767); and John (again, b.1769). He and his wife are buried at Langholm, but mentioned on the family gravestone in Castleton (although the dates may not be correct, since he would be very old when he had his children). John (18th C.) recorded in Penchrise when his sons William (b.1728) and Thomas (b.1730) were baptised in Cavers Parish. He may be the same as another contemporary John. John (18th C.) married Agnes Best in Bedrule Parish in 1726. Their children (with no mothers’ name listed) may be Thomas (b.1727), John (b.1728), Helen (b.1729), Agnes (b.1732), James (b.1734), John (b.1737) and Margaret (b.1740). John (18th C.) recorded as ‘in Sinhope’ (probably Sundhope), when his daughter Helen was baptised in cavers Parish in 1733. He could be the same as John ‘in Southdeanrigg’ whose daughter Katherine was baptised in 1741. John (17th/18th C.) from the Black Tarras branch of the family, he was eldest son of William of Cooms. In 1732 he was described as ‘now of Cumes’, having inherited Cooms from his father. In 1709 he married Agnes, the eldest daughter of Robert Mather of Greenhill. Their children (mostly baptised in Hawick) were: Robert (b.1711), who married Catherine Armstrong from Sorbie; John (b.1715); and an unnamed child (b.1716). John of Brugh (d.bef. 1756) 2nd son of William of Brugh and Wells. He is said to have been settled on a trade in London with £1000. He may be the John, described as tailor of London, who witnessed his sister Eleanor’s marriage contract with Sir Gilbert Elliott of Stobs in 1702 (along with his father William of Wells). In 1735 he was described being ‘of Islington’. He married Elizabeth, widow of Sir John Crispe. Nothing much is known about him, except that he died before his brother William. His only child was William Nassau, who inherited Wells from his uncle. Capt. John of Brugh (b.1708) only surviving son of Gilbert, who farmed at Winningtonrig. He was christened in Cavers Parish. William ‘the Laceman’ was his uncle. He may have farmed for a while at Over Southfield. He is said to have joined the Army in about 1739 and at Dettingen in 1743 served under Lieut.-Col. William Elliot, who was his cousin, and alongside George Augustus Elliott, who was another relative. In 1749 joined the 2nd Troop of Horse Grenadier Guards and he became a Captain. In 1730 he married Jean, daughter of James Grieve of Branxholme Park. Their children, mostly baptised in Hawick and Kirkton Parishes, were: Helen (b.1731), who probably died young; Gilbert (1734–59); Mary (b.1735); Helen (again, b.1739); Anne (1740–1833), eldest surviving daughter, who married Thomas Hall; and William (d.1817). A portrait shows him on ‘Old Crop’, the charger that his cousin George Augustus Elliott had ridden at Dettingen and gave to him. John (1710–bef. 54) younger son of John of Binks. He was a Burgess of Jedburgh. He appears to have been given the farm of Binks by his father. In 1754, after his death, his older brother William of Bush was served as his heir. He died without issue. John of Adderstoneshiel (18th C.) son of Walter in Brugh, possibly the eldest son. He married Helen Moffat from Gorvald and they had a son John, who was baptised in Hawick in 1740. John (18th C.) merchant in Castleton. There is a record of Robert, farmer in Braidlie, paying him for ‘merchant goods’ in 1749. John (1711–92) 3rd Laird of Borthwickbrae, being one of 14 children of William, the 2nd Laird. Probably the same John of Borthwickbrae was apprenticed to a goldsmith in Edinburgh in 1731. He was christened in Roberton and died at Orchard. In 1744, along with Walter Grieve (farmer at Branxholme Park), he leased the lands of Linohope from the Buccleuch Estates. In the period 1743–60 he had a dispute with Sir James Stuart of Coltness over the lands of Branxholme Muir. He was made an Honorary Burgess of Hawick in 1750. His wool manufacturers in Hawick is mentioned as early as 1754 (in records of the Board of Trustees for Manufacturers), although it is unclear precisely what the company made. However, this may well have been the early partnership with Thomas Turnbull and some local men. In 1761 he was recorded as a Commissioner for Selkirkshire. He was one of the Commissioners appointed in the court case regarding the division of Hawick Common in 1767. In 1769 he formed a partnership with others in the main carpet factory in Hawick, receiving the money that was offered by the Government for encouraging initiatives in Scottish industry and agriculture. The partnership was renewed in 1779 and consisted of Walter of Ormiston (his brother-in-law), Thomas Turnbull of Minto and William Robertson from Dunfermline. He may be the Elliott of Borthwickbrae who purchased the liferent of the superiority of the Barony of Stonedge and Howa before 1766, but had renounced this by 1788. He was listed among the voters of Roxburghshire in 1780. It is said that a ewe presented to him by Douglas of Cavers gave birth to a lamb in 1774 which lived until 1796 (a very old age for a sheep). He was taxed for 2 male servants in 1778, and 1 in 1779, 1785, 1787 and 1788 and 2 in 1790 and 1791. He was recorded at Borthwickbrae on the 1785 and 1788–91 Horse Tax Rolls and in 1792 at Orchard. He paid the land tax on part of Borthwickbrae and the west side of Howcleuch in 1785. He also paid tax on 2 female servants at Borthwickbrae in 1785, 3 in 1787 and 2 in 1788–91. He was taxed for owning a carriage at Borthwickbrae in the period 1785–92, and is probably the ‘John Elliott Esqr in Orchard’ who was taxed in Cavers Parish in the year 1792/3. He was listed as a voter in Roxburghshire in 1788, and probably a supporter of the Duke of Buccleuch’s interests in the county; the privately-printed description is ‘family in good circumstances. The son has a good estate through his mother, and is at the Bar. Second son in the Army’. He was also listed in 1788 among the voters in Selkirkshire. In 1753 he married Margaret, daughter of Alexander Murray of Cringletie. In Edinburgh in 1764 he secondly married Margaret (who died in 1792), daughter of Walter Laing and heiress of the lands of Meikledale, Flex, Old Melrose and Burnfoot-on-Ale; she was probably the ‘Mrs. Elliot’ listed as owner of the Flex in 1788 and on the 1811 Land Tax Rolls (although deceased before then), as well as Wester Essenside, part of Leaphill and Burnfoot in Ashkirk Parish (valued together at £952). His children were: twins Alexander (b.1754), who died young and William (b.1754), who succeeded, but changed his surname to ‘Lockhart’ or ‘Eliott-Lockhart’ (see Lockhart); Walter of Old Melrose (1766–1809); Margaret (b.1767), who married David Simpson of Teviotbank and Knowe (and was mother of Gen. Sir James Simpson), and may secondly have married Walter Grieve, tenant of Branxholme Park; and Janet, who also died young. John (18th C.) tenant in Kershopeburnfoot. His wife Elizabeth died in 1752, aged 36. Their children David Matthew and Agnes died young. They are buried at Ettleton. John (18th C.) shepherd at Earlsidesheils. His daughter Elizabeth was baptised in Hobkirk Parish in 1758. He could be related to the earlier John in Earlside. John (18th C.) shepherd in Langburnsheils in Hobkirk Parish. His children included William (b.1764) and Margaret (b.1770). John (18th C.) owner of part of the lands of Grange near Chesters. In the 1811 Land Tax Rolls he was listed as former owner. John (1725–1801) son of Robert, from the Caerlenrig branch. He was born in Cavers Parish and was a tanner in Hawick. He was listed as a tanner in 1748 when he paid tax on 11 windows in Hawick. He is probably the tanner of that name recorded being paid in 1751 for lime for mending the East Port. He was appointed as Hawick’s first part-time postmaster in 1767; he was re-appointed, apparently against his better judgement, several years later. He lived down the Punch Bowl Close, which also acted as the post office. Probably the same John, tanner, was one of those appointed in 1763 to oversee the collection of money for a new bell for St. Mary’s. He is probably the John who in 1766, along with Francis (his brother), witnessed a baptism for merchant James Oliver and his wife Christian (their sister); he also witnessed another baptism for them in 1781. In 1769 he was appointed to the commission to discuss the Common with representatives of the Duke of Buccleuch. In 1787–92 he was recorded as a tanner on the Horse Tax Rolls in Hawick. In 1778 he married Margaret Curle, who died in 1807, aged 67. Their children included: Isobel (b.1779), who probably died in infancy; Robert (1780–1851), farmer at Roan; James (b.c.1781), who died in infancy; Christian (1883–1855), who died at Roan; William (1785–1827), also died at Roan; and Isobel (again, 1784/5–1859), who died in Hawick. He was buried, along with most of his family, at Teviothead. In 1773 he witnessed the christening of Helen, daughter of shoemaker Adam Elliot (suggesting they were related). His will is registered with the Peebles Commissary Court in 1802. John (1725–1813) younger son of John of Whithaugh and Margaret Scott of Gorr enberry. He farmed at Castl elohe, which was a former name for Twislehope. In 1786 he subscribed to a theological book by a Carlisle author: Thomas, also in ‘Twesilhope’ also subscribed (although it is unclear who this might have been). His wife is probably the ‘Mrs Elliot, Twislehope’ who subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ in 1784. He married Janet Turnbull from Manger toun. Their children were: John (b.1781), who died young; William (b.1783), also died young; Robert (b.1785), surgeon in Haltwhistle, married Jane Elliot from Cringlehykes, daughter of John and grand-daughter of Robert in Hermitage; Andrew (b.1787), married Elizabeth Armstrong from Newcastle; Walter (b.1789), who lived in Charleston, U.S.A.: and Margaret (b.1791). John (18th C.) Hawick bookseller of the late 18th century. A book by Samuel Charters was published by him in 1793. John (1731–1808) eldest son of William in Park. He was tenant in ‘Baggot’, i.e. Bygate in Liddesdale. He was farmer at ‘Bagget’ and elsewhere in Castleton Parish, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when he owned 9 horses. He is probably the ‘Mr. John Elliot, Park’, who subscribed to a theological book by a Carlisle author in 1786 and who is recorded on the 1786–92 Horse Tax Rolls. He died unmarried. His will was recorded with Peebles Commissary Court in 1808. Adm. John (1732–1808) son of Sir Gilbert, 2nd Lord Minto. He joined the Royal Navy at the age of 13, becoming a Lieutenant in 1756. He was famed as a Captain for capturing a fleet of the French admiral Thurot in 1760, having chased them from Carickfergus to near the Isle of Man. An 8 ft long cannon captured from the French was long on display outside Fatlips Castle. On being received by the King afterwards he apparently turned down a knighthood, but received cash instead. He was promoted to Commodore, and retired on half-pay in 1765. He then served as M.P. for Cockermouth in 1767 and was appointed General of the Mint in Scotland in 1767. He returned to active duty in 1777, attaining the rank of Rear Admiral in 1787 and full Admiral in 1795. He was ‘Captain John Elliot of his Majesty’s ship the Edgar’ in 1780 when he was entered into the voters’ roll for Roxburghshire, on the basis of his ownership of Easter Essenside and Hermiston. In 1788 he is recorded as owner of Mounthooly and other lands in Jedburgh Parish, as well as Kirklands in Ancrum Parish and Easter Essenside in Ashkirk Parish. He was listed among the voters of both Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire in 1788. He was taxed for owning a carriage, horses and dogs at Monteviot in the 1780s and 1790s, as well as for having several male and female servants. He lived at Monteviot House, where he died, unmarried. He also purchased Easter Essenside, Mounthooly and Woodend, which he left to his nephew Lord Minto. He was sometimes known locally as being 'of Essenside', e.g. when listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805 and 1819 (when he was already deceased). He was also listed on the Land Tax Rolls for 1811 at Mounthooly (although this was after his death). His will was proved at the Prerogative Court of Canterbury in 1808. John (18th C.) tenant in Wigg. His children included: John (b.1768), tenant in Wauchope Gardens; James (b.1770); and Betty (b.1772). He could be the same as one of the other Johns. Jean (18th C.) surgeon living at Cleuchhead. He was also listed on the Land Tax Rolls for 1811 at Mounthooly (although this was after his death). His will was proved at the Prerogative Court of Canterbury in 1808. John (18th C.) tenant in Wigg. His children included: John (b.1768), tenant in Wauchope Gardens; James (b.1770); and Betty (b.1772). He could be the same as one of the other Johns. Jean (18th C.) resident in Shankendshiels. His children, baptised in Hobkirk Parish, included Agnes (b.1771) and Helen (b.1772). He could be the same as one of the other John from Hobkirk Parish. John (18th C.) resident in 'Harroktin' (i.e. Harwoodshiels) in Hobkirk Parish, when his children Jean (b.1778) and John (b.1789) were baptised. He must have been related to James in Harwoodshiels, who is recorded in 1760. John (18th C.) resident in 'Hargleughhead' in Hobkirk Parish. It is unclear where this was, but possibly he was shepherd at Harecleuchhead (near the old boundary of Hawick's Common), which was actually in Kirkton Parish. His son Robert was baptised in 1762, and may have been the direct ancestor of Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliot Trudeau. He could also be the same as some (although surely not all) of the Johns recorded in these other nearly contemporary baptisms in Hobkirk Parish, with no mother's name given: Elizabeth (b.1758), 'in Earlsidesshiels'; William (b.1764), in Langburnshiels; William (b.1766), 'in Hopehead'; John (b.1768) in Wigg; Margaret (b.1770) in Langburnshiels; James (b.1770), in Wigg; Agnes (b.1771) in Shankendshiels; Betty (b.1772) in Wigg; Helen (b.1772) in Shankendshiels; Jean (b.1775) 'in Harroktin'; and John (b.1780) 'in Harroktin'. Without knowing which of these children were his it is impossible to guess the names of his parents and hence trace this Elliot line further back. John of Reidheugh (1740/1–1809) 2nd son of Robert of Redheugh, whose father had purchased the ancestral farm for him. He himself farmed at Cleughhead and Foulshiels, while his brother (presumably Thomas) was given liferent of Redheugh. He is probably the farmer at 'Cleughead' or 'Cleugheads' in Castleton Parish, recorded on the 1785–97 Horse Tax Rolls. He was also taxed for having a non-working dog in 1797. In 1793 he disposed of the stock and household furniture from Redheugh to his brother Thomas (who also lived at Redheugh and farmed Foulshiels). In 1799 he married Margaret, 2nd daughter of Rev. John Russell, minister of Canonbie. They had no children and he settled Redheugh on his nephew Robert in 1806. He died at Newlands and is buried in Castleton cemetery. Dr. John (18th C.) surgeon living at Cleuchhead in Liddesdale towards the end of the 18th century. He could be the same as the farmer at Cleuchhead. He subscribed to Caw's 'Poetical Museum' in 1784, and it is possible he supplied material for it; indeed he may be the 'Gentleman of taste, in Liddesdale' to which Caw was indebted for providing a manuscript copy of 'Dick o' the Cow' and other verses. He was also 'J. Elliot, M.D. Cleughheads' in 1786 when he subscribed to a theological book by a Carlisle author. He was visited in about 1792 by Sir Walter Scott and Robert Shortreed, on their 'raid' into Liddesdale, to gather material for what would become 'Minstrelsy of the Scottish Border'. He apparently already had a manuscript copy of ballads that he had collected himself. He presented Scott with an old Border war horn, which still hangs in Abbotsford. And afterwards he sought out other ballads 'among the darker recesses of the mountains'. Rev. John (1749/50–1817) licensed by Jedburgh Presbytery in 1793, he became assistant to Thomas Elliot of Cavers (who was probably his uncle). He was presented to the Parish of Kirkton in late 1800 and ordained there early the next year, remaining as minister until his death. In 1786 he married Jean Armstrong, who died in 1828, aged 75. Their children were: Elizabeth: twins Adam and Mary (b.1794); and Isobel (1797–60), who died at Coliforthill. John (18th C.) Bailie in Hawick in the 1780s. He was one of the local people who subscribed to Caw's 'Poetical Museum' (1784). His son James died in 1782. He may be the same as one of the other contemporary Johns. John (c.1750–1801) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Janet Little (c.1757–1825). Their children included: Christian (b.1792); Robert Elliot (b.1794); and Thomas (b.1799). He and his wife died in Newcastle. John (c.1750–1821) eldest son of Robert, tenant of Hermitage. He farmed at Hermitage, Highfield, Crinkledyke and Deadwater. In some family trees he is confounded with an earlier John. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. In 1783 he married Christian Grieve (b.1753), but she died less than a year later; she was probably daughter of William Grieve, farmer at Southfield. He secondly married Margaret Scott from Skelfhill. His children included: Jean (1790–1886); Robert, who married a Miss Maxwell from Langholm and had children who emigrated to the U.S.A.; Janet, who married Robert Elliot from Haltwhistle, son of John who farmed Twislehope; James, who emigrated to the U.S.A.; John (1796–1833) in Nether Hindhope; Thomas (1815/6–87), who married Elizabeth Turnbull and succeeded his brother as farmer at farmed at Nether Hindhope; Catherine, married Robert Webster; Mary, married Robert Hall of Doanham in 1846; Elizabeth, married Gideon Yule from Kelso; and Margaret, who married John Dagg from Kidderminster. He is buried at Ettleton Cemetery, the stone being inscribed ‘Here lies John Elliot in Burnmouth and Christian Grieve his spouse’. John of Binks (1754–1820) eldest son of Robert. He served as an executor for Henry of Peel, who died in 1780. He owned Binks from at least 1788 (when it was valued at £300) and was listed as owner of Binks in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls. In 1790 he married Mary Robson (1767–1858) in 1790, who was from Boghall, daughter of Adam Robson and Helen Hume; her sister Janet also married a John Elliot and she must have been related to his mother, who was also a Robson from Boghall. Their children were: Robert (b.1791), who died young; Jane or Jean (b.1792), who married William Nixon of Lynwood; another Robert (1794–1814); Helen (b.1796), ‘the White Rose of Liddesdale’, who married Archibald Blake from Liverpool; Elizabeth (d.1798), who died in infancy; John (b.1799), who married Mary, daughter of Thomas Smith of Darnick and farmed at Calaburn; and another Elizabeth, who married William Turnbull of Merrylaw in 1847. In 1851 his widow was listed as an ‘Annuitant, Gentlewoman’, farming about 610 acres at Binks. He died at Burnmouth and is buried in Castleton Cemetery. He is probably the John who was recorded as farmer at Burnmouth on the 1785–97 Horse Tax and Dog Tax Rolls, and who was of Binks’ when listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805 and 1819. His will was registered with Peebles Commissary Court in 1821. John (1753/4–1817) resident of Roberton Parish. In 1787 in Cavers Parish he married Elizabeth or ‘Betsy’ Scott (1757/8–1842), who died in Hawick. Their children included: Elizabeth (b.1792); James (1794–1884), long-time proprietor of the Ewe and Lamb in Hawick; and Jean (b.1798). The marriage is probably the one recorded between James and Betty Scott in Cavers in 1787. He died at Brauxholme and the family are buried at Borthwick Waas. John (18th/19th C.) lived at Bowanhill, near Teviothead. He is probably related to the earlier Archibald who farmed there. He married Margaret Turnbull in 1793. Their children included: Archibald (b.1800); Walter, married Jean Anderson and emigrated to Delaware County, New York; John; Margaret, who married Thomas Thompson and later George Stewart; and Betty, who married a Mr. Thompson. John of Cooms (1740/1–1809) married Margaret Helen (b.1776), daughter of Rev. John Russell, minister at Canonbie. He died at Newlands in Liddesdale. John (1760–1806) son of Ninian and Ester Crozier. He was born at Burnmouth in Liddesdale. A family pedigree describes him being ‘in Middlemoss’. He married Janet Robson (1761–1848), daughter of Adam Robson and Helen Hume; her sister Mary married another John Elliot. Their children included: Ninian (1789–1870), who died in Westminister Township, Canada; Adam (1791–1871), who died in Ontario; Helen (b.1794), who joined her brothers in Ontario; Ester (b.1797), who married Robert Elliot in Powisholm; Mary (1801–77), who died in Newcastle; and Janet (1805–81), who died at Teviothead. He died at Middlemoss, near Langholm. John of Whithaugh (1759–1847) eldest son of William of Whithaugh. He was served heir to his grandfather John in 1777. In 1788 his lands of Whithaugh (half of the former farm) were valued at £200 3s. He subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ in 1784, a theological book by a Carlisle author in 1786 and John Learmont’s book of poetry in 1791. He is recorded as farmer at Whithaugh on the 1785–97 Horse Tax Rolls. He was also taxed for having a non-working dog in 1797. He was listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805 and 1819, and also served as a Justice of the Peace. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821 and Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He is probably the John of Whithaugh listed on Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories; Walter was also listed as a farmer there at about the same time. He was listed as head of his household at Whithaugh in 1835–41. He married Jean (1758–87), daughter of Elliot of Binks. They had 1 child, Elizabeth, who married Thomas Keir from Powisholm, and whose son William Keir inherited Whithaugh. He was still alive in 1841, when he was ‘Esquire of Whithaugh’ and in his 80s. His will is register in the Jedburgh Sheriff Court in 1848. John (1769–1823) son of Henry, he was tenant farmer at Flatt in Liddesdale. He was already at Flatt in 1791 when he subscribed to John Learmont’s book of poetry. He is recorded as farmer at Flatt on the 1792–97 Horse Tax Rolls; he owned 7 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. He was also taxed for having 3 non-working dogs in 1797. He married Jean Scott, from Ladhope in Yarrow, who died in 1838, aged 63. Their children included: Henry (1793–1818), who died in Jamaica; Margaret (b.1794–1804); Janet (b.1795), who married Robert Elliot of Redheugh; William (1796–1838); Jean (b.1798), who died in infancy; Jean (again, b.1800); John (1801–40), engineer in Glasgow, who married Helen Elliot of Kirkdean, granddaughter of Elliot of Harwood; James (1803/4–80), who died at Westwater; and Margaret (again, b.1809). This Margaret may have been the ‘Miss M. Elliot, Flatt’ who subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. John (b.1767) cooper in Castleton Parish, son of William and Anna Scott, descended from the Elliots of Fahnash. Some of his children were born at Byreholm. He married Elizabeth Crozier and their children included: William (b.1790), probably shoemaker in Newcastle; Gideon (b.1791); Helen (b.1793); Anne (b.1798); Margaret (b.1803); John (b.1804), who probably died young; and Agnes (b.1808). John (b.1768) labourer at Wauchope Gardens, Blackcleuchmount and Templehallshiels. He was son of John in Wigg and surely related to William in Templehallshiels. He married Betsy Taylor and their children included: William (b.1798), who lived at Wauchope Cottages; Betty (b.1800); John (b.1802); Walter F. (b.1804); Robert (b.1807); Alexander (b.1809), probably the shoemaker in Hawick; Margaret (b.1813); and Agnes (b.1815). Most of the family emigrated to Otsego County, New York. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Denholm, listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. No occupation or other information is given. He could be the tenant in Denholm whose son John was born in 1804. John (18th/19th C.) lawyer who set up a partnership with John Oliver in Hawick around 1790. They became agents for the Commercial Bank around 1820 and are listed as writers in Hawick in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. He may be the ‘John Elliot, Hawick’ who subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. However, he left for Jedburgh in 1829 to become Sheriff-Substitute, which office he held until 1835. The Hawick firm eventually became Geo. & Jas. Oliver’s. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. John (b.1769) son of William in Hillhouse and Mary Haliburton. He was born in Castleton Parish and became a merchant in London. He married Miss Robinson in London and they had 13 children, William, Robert, Margaret, John, Mary, Ann, Jane, Eliza, Mary, Thomas, Louisa, George and Walter. John of Reidhengh (18th/19th C.) recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. It is unclear who this is, since the owner at that time was Robert Elliot; perhaps this is an error. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish. He had several children baptised there, including John (b.1807), Brown (b.1820), Elizabeth (b.1822), Jane (b.1824) and an unnamed child (b.1826). John Edmund of New Belses (1788–1862), youngest son of the 1st Earl of Minto. He was named after the statesman Edmund Burke. He had a successful career in the Bengal civil service. He accompanied his father back from India in 1814 and had to perform the sad duty of carrying the news of his death to the Borderers who were awaiting his triumphal return to Minto (including celebrations for drawing his carriage through Hawick). He is probably the ‘Hon. J.E. Elliot, Eildonhall’ who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He was elected Liberal M.P. for Roxburghshire in 1837, when several people in Hawick were prosecuted for rioting. He spoke in the House of Commons in the following year, when Sir James Graham proposed a motion that Hawick be removed as a polling place; he supported the actions of the Bailies and townspeople, and claimed that the situation had been exaggerated by the other side (and perhaps fabricated in order to discredit the election). In 1841 he received a majority in Hawick, but lost to Francis Scott in the County. However, he was re-elected in 1847 and remained M.P. until 1859, being elected unopposed in 1852 and 1857. In a directory of 1852 he was listed as living at Wilton Lodge. He was donor of a silver-mounted hammer for the Chief Magistrate’s use in Council meetings (engraved with his initial electoral

He held lands at Belses, Ryeknow and Abbotsmeadow, which were sold to the Marquess of Lothian in 1872. In 1809 he married Amelia, 3rd daughter of James Henry Cassamajor of Madras and they had 6 children: Amelia Jane (d.1837), who married Thomas Campbell Robertson; Anna Maria Elizabeth, who married Pierce G.E. Taylor; Lt.-Col. Edmund James (1813–54), who married Matilda Inglis, and died in the Crimean War; William Brownrigg of Benrig (1820–1900), who married Mary Geraldine McCartie; Capt. Amyand Powney Charles of the Bengal Army (1823–69), who married Anna Maria Alexander; and Augustus John (1824–89) of the Bengal Civil Service, who married Helen Lewis and Katherine Mangles. John (1780/1-64) from Castleton Parish, he married Ann Graham, who was from Hartsgarth. Their children were: Ellen (b.1816), who probably died young; and John (1818–1902), who married Agnes Beattie and Elizabeth Nichol in Canada. In 1818 the family emigrated to New Brunswick, with the infant John. His wife died on the voyage and he later married Helen, with whom he had daughters Elizabeth and Ellen. The family settled in Westminster Township, Middlesex County, Ontario in 1836. He was a farmer and strong churchman and gave land for the First Presbyterian Church in Westminster Township. There were several Johns born in Castleton Parish around 1781, so he could be son of John and Janet Turnbull, or Walter and Isabel Douglas or a different John entirely. John (b.1790/1) agricultural labourer living in Parkhillhaugh in 1841 and Deanburnhaugh in 1851. He married Jane (or ‘Jean’) Goodfellow (1795–1860) in Roberton Parish in 1818 and their children included: Francis (b.1818), whose wife was Christina; Elizabeth (b.1820); James (b.1822); William (b.1824); John (b.1827); and Gideon (1833–1913). John (b.1795/5) born in Canonbie, he was an agricultural labourer in Castleton and Southdean Parishes. In 1835–41 he was living at Clerkleap and in 1851 was at Westerhouses. He married Henrietta Carruthers and their children included: Janet (b.c.1821); Gilbert (b.1831); Henry (b.1833); Mary (b.1836); Matthew (b.1838); and Elizabeth (b.1841). John (1795–1859) 2nd son of William ‘of Carlenrickrig’ (who was an architect in Kelso) and grandson of the minister of Cavers. He was born in Kelso and became a solicitor in Hawick and Jedburgh. In 1841 and 1851 he was a banker in Jedburgh, where he lived at Boundary Bank. However, by 1851 he is described as blind. He married Janet Usher (daughter of Thomas of Courthill). Their children included William (procurator in the Roxburghshire Sheriff Court), Thomas Usher, Isabella, John, Jane Robertson, Charles Scott, Elizabeth Pott and Esther. He should not be confused with the earlier lawyer John who had a partnership with John Oliver in Hawick before moving to Jedburgh. John John (1795/6–1834) son of Walter and Helen Crozier. He was tenant of the Roxburghshire Sheriff Court), Thomas Usher, Isabella, John, Jane Robertson, Charles Scott, Elizabeth Pott and Esther. He should not be confused with the earlier lawyer John who had a partnership with John Oliver in Hawick before moving to Jedburgh. John John (1795/6–1834) son of Walter and Helen Crozier. He was tenant of Templehall. John (1796–1833) son of John, who farmed at Highfield, Crinkledyke and Deadwater, and grandson of Robert in Hermitage. He was tenant in Nether Hyndhope in Oxnam Parish. After his death he was succeeded as farmer by his brother Thomas. John (1796/7–1875) shepherd at Blinkbonny in Castleton Parish. He was listed there among heads of households in 1835. In 1841 he was a labourer in Newcastleton, living on North Hermitage Street. In 1851 and 1861 he was at Blinkbonny. He married Jean Armstrong (1809/10–85) from Kirkpatrick. Their children were: Janet (1828–52); Helen (1829–60); Jane (1833–97), who married James Beattie; William (b.1836), also died young; Robert (b.1837), also died young; William (1840/1–60). He must also have lived at Border Rigg, where some of his children died. The family are buried at Ettleton. John of Binks (1799–1875) eldest surviving son of John of Binks and Mary Robson. He purchased Calaburn in Wilton Parish. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘ Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. In Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories and Slater’s 1852 directory he is listed as owner of Burnmouth. He is probably the farmer at Burnmouth listed among heads of households in 1835–41. He served as a Commissioner of Supply and Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. He is listed at Upper Burnmouth in 1841, along with Janet, possibly a relative. In 1851 he was farming 2,000 acres there and employed 6 labourers. By 1861 he was farming 5,000 acres and employing 10 people. He was still at Burnmouth in 1868. In 1851 he married Mary, 2nd daughter of Thomas Smith, architect in Darnick. Their children were: John (1853–1909), who married Jane Pott Oliver; Jane (1855–1939); who married Rev. John C. Martin; and Mary (c.1858–1941). He died at Burnmouth and is probably buried in Castleton Cemetery. His portrait, by an unknown artist, is in the Museum. John (18th/19th C.) grocer and labourer in Newcastleton. He is listed among heads of households in 1835–38. John (18th/19th C.) shepherd in Castleton Parish. He is listed among heads of households at Newhouses in England in 1836 and perhaps the same shepherd is at Sorbietrees in 1840 and 1841. John (b.1800/1) from Castleton, he was a tailor who lived at Quarrelah, near Harwood-on-Teviot. It seems possible he was related to Henry and Adam, who are recorded as tailors in Newcastleton in 1841. In 1851 he was a tailor employing 2 men. He married Helen Scott (b.c.1806) from Galashiels. Their children included: Janet (b.1824); Robert (b.1826); John, Mungo (b.1828); William (b.1830); James Rutherford (b.1832); Nenion (note the spelling, b.1834), a lawyer in Edinburgh; Walter (b.1840); Edward (b.1842); Elizabeth (b.1844); and Thomas (b.1846). It seems the family must have moved from the area before the 1861 census. John (1801–40) son of John, tenant in Flatt in Castleton Parish, with his mother being Jean Scott from Ladhope. He was an engineer in Glasgow. He married Helen Elliot (1812/3–82), daughter of Thomas of Kirkdean and grand-daughter of Elliot of Harwood. They had a son, John (1839–97), who was also tenant in Flatt. John (b.1801/2) from England, he was a shoemaker in Newcastleton. He was listed among heads of households for the first time in 1840. He was listed in Slater’s 1852 directory. He married Margaret Pott (from Castleton Parish) and their children included: Betty; Andrew; James; John (b.1840); Isabel (b.1844), Esther (b.1844), twin of Isabel; and Margaret (b.1846). He lived at about 2 Whitchester Lane. John (1801/2–90) from Southdean Parish. In the 1830s he moved to Ross and Cromarty, where he was manager at Tarbot Mains farm, Poinicol, for about 50 years. He married Margaret Dagg from Castle ton. Their children were: William (1825–94), who died at Poinicol; and Michael (1827–82), who died in Melbourne. John (1808–89) son of Matthew, who farmed at Netherraw, with his mother being Janet Scott. He worked as a labourer and roadman in Newcastleton. He was listed as labourer (and son of Matthew) among heads of households in 1841. In 1841 he was at about 21 North Hermitage Street. In 1861 he was on Douglas Square. Later he was tenant at Sandholm. He was said to be very knowledgeable about the area, and helped the Berwickshire Naturalists’ Club on their tour of upper Liddesdale in 1889, shortly before he died. He married Frances (or ‘Fanny’) Broadfoot

Wilson, and she died at the Grapes Inn, Newcastleton, in 1860, aged 62. He secondly married Mary Thomson. His children included: William (1826–47); Matthew (1828–65), who died in London; Margaret (1829–1904), who died in Newcastleton; James (1830–77), who was innkeeper of the Grapes Inn; Janet (b.1833); Andrew (1835–1905), who died in Birmingham; John (b.1838), road surveyor; and Helen (1842–1908), who died at Brox. John (1809–81) younger son of William of Harwood and Helen Rutherford. He was born at Hurdalee and farmed at Primrosehill. He married Jane, daughter of Archibald Jordan of Bonjedward and they had a son and 2 daughters.

Rev. John Elphinstone (1810–90) son of James, 3rd Laird of Wolfelee. He trained as a lawyer, apprenticing to William Bell and becoming Writer to the Signet in 1833. He was appointed as Rector of Whalton, Morpeth. In 1855 he married Mary Scott, from Southerton in 1848, when he was a joiner's apprentice. In 1855 he married Mary Scott, from Southerton Parish in 1861. He married Sibella Hunter (b.1855) from Langholm in 1848 and their children included (b.c.1849): Elizabeth; Matthew (b.1851); John (b.1852); James (b.1855); Thomas (b.1858); William (b.1861); Margaret (b.1863); Dorothy (b.1865); and Georgina (b.1867). Some of the family may have emigrated to Huron County, Ontario. John ‘Jock’ (b.c.1825) son of George and Agnes Beattie. His grandfather drowned, perhaps when he was thrown into Whitehaugh pond near Newcastleton. He lived near Bonchester Bridge since about the 1870s and worked as a dyker. His biography is told by Tancred in ‘Rulewater’; if some information was incorrect, he could be the same as one of the Johns from Castleton. John (b.1825/6) shoemaker in Newcastleton, son of William, who was also a shoemaker. In 1851 he was living on North Hermitage Street and in 1861 on Douglas Square. In 1849 he married Jane McVittie (1826–1905) from Ewesdale. Their children included Jane (b.1850), Christian (b.1851), Janet (b.1853), Robert (b.1855), Mary (b.1857), William (b.1860), Helen (b.1863), Elizabeth (b.1866) and Isabella Anne (b.1869).

{72x329}Peel, and also carried on the leases on Kirndean, Scott-Elliot died, he succeeded to the liferent of 1861 and 1868. When another uncle, John his uncle James there. He was recorded at Flatt farmer at Flatt in Castleton Parish, succeeding {72x448}Scott, died at Clerkleap, killed by being knocked down by a goods train. John (b.1835) son of James, a spirit dealer at 3 Orrock Place. His mother was Helen Patterson. He worked as a railway clerk and bank clerk. He was Cornet in 1855 and can be seen as Left-hand Man in the first photograph of the Common Riding Principals. John (1836–58) 2nd son of Robert of Redheugh. He was baptised in Castleton Parish and died at Cardona, Mexico, predeceasing his father. John (1836–1905) son of Ninian, he was a roadman like his father. In 1864 he married Jane Jackson (1840–1912). Their children were Jane (b.1865), James (b.1866), Eliza Jane (b.1868) and Marion (b.1871). John (1838–1913) son of John. He was District Road Surveyor in Newcastle upon Tyne. He married Betsy, daughter of innkeeper John Scott; she died in 1889, aged 60. Their children included: Agnes (b.1865), who died in infancy; Archibald (1863/4–90); William (1861/2–1904); Frances Mary (1866/7–1907); and Jane (1872/3–1956) John (1839–97) born in Glasgow, son of John and Helen Elliot. He was farmer at Flatt in Castleton Parish, succeeding his uncle James there. He was recorded at Flatt in 1861 and 1868. When another uncle, John Scott-Elliot died, he succeeded to the liferent of Peel, and also carried on the leases on Kirndean, Myredykes and Singdean. He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1863. John Burns (19th C.) Councillor and cashier for the Gas Company. He married Margaret Butler, great-grand-daughter of Walter Grieve of Hawick. John (19th C.) partner in the builders firm Aitken & Elliot. He married Christina, daughter of James Wintrup. John (1853–1909) eldest son of John of Binks and Mary Smith. He may be the John ‘of Binks, Burnmouth’ who became a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland in 1880. He matriculated arms in 1897. He sold Calaburn, breaking his families direct ties with the Hawick area. He married Jane Pott Oliver and their children were: Maj. Edward John (1881–1918), who married Dorothy Allen Smith and was killed in action; Sina Gertrude Pott (1882–1965), who married Lieut.-Col. Edwyne Douglas-Jones; Lt.-Com. James Oliver (1883–1965), who married Margaret Hogben; Mary Smith Turnbull (1885–1967); John Stephen (1886–1972), Navy Captain and Surgeon, who married Magda Virginia Salvesen and became a lecturer at Newcastle University; Clement Nixon (1889–1969), who married Katherine Winnifred Penney and moved to Rhodesia; Edward John, who married Dorothy Allen, daughter of Richard Sidney Smith of Clifford Chambers, and was killed in WWI; Lt.-Col. Henry Hawes (1891–1972), who became Surgeon to the Viceroy of India and retired to Springbank, Melrose; Robin Alexander (1891–1969), twin of Henry, he became banker in Canada; and Jean Oliver (b.1892), who was an Almoner at the Royal Free Hospital, London. He died at Southsea, Hampshire. Katherine of Arkleton (b.c.1700) daughter of William of Arkleton and Anne Ainslie of Jedburgh. She was married 3 times. Firstly (about 1720) she married David Laing of Westerkirk. Secondly, in 1727, she married Rev. Charles Telfer, who was minister of Hawick Parish. Thirdly, she married Robert Elliot of Fenwick (son of Francis and Rachel Langlands). Her only child appears to have been Gavin, who succeeded to Arkleton (but is said to have lived with a loose woman who he had to acknowledge as his wife to qualify his daughters to succeed to the estate). Katherine (b.1701) elder daughter of Adam of Teindside, she was baptised in Hawick Parish. In Wilton Parish in 1719 she married Robert, son of Robert of Midlem Mill. When her brother Walter died in 1721 she was served as his heir. Baroness Katharine ‘Kay’ (1903–1994) of Harwood, born Katharine Tennant in Peeblesshire, 7th daughter of Sir Charles Tennant. She died 171 years after her father was born, and her great-grandfather was a witness at Robert Burns’s christening in 1759. As a child she played at 10 Downing Street, where her half-sister Margot was married to Prime Minister Herbert Asquith. She studied politics at the London School of Economics, was an accomplished violinist, played the organ, spoke fluent French, rode until age 80 and boasted that she beat 2 Prime Ministers at golf. In 1934 she married Walter Elliot, Conservative M.P. for Glasgow Kelvingrove and they made their home at Harwood, near Bonchester. She was a leading public figure in her own right, being active in farming, council and social work. She was made C.B.E. in 1948, D.B.E. in 1952 and was raised to the peerage in 1955 after her husband’s death, becoming Baroness Elliot of Harwood. She became Chairman of the Conservative Party in 1957, serving on several government committees and being on Roxburghshire County Council for 29 years. She worked tirelessly for the Conservative Party, although never abandoned some of her Liberal roots, being strongly against the death penalty and involved with prison reform, for example. In 1973 the Katharine Elliot Centre was named in her honour. She was the first woman, other than the Queen, to speak in the House of Lords and the first woman to get a private bill through the Lords. The Tweeddale Press Group voted her ‘Borders Man of the Year’. She became a Justice of the Peace in 1998. In 1993 she tripped over her parliamentary robes after the opening of Parliament and was rushed off to hospital, still in her robes, suffering a fractured hip. She died at Hawick Cottage Hospital shortly afterwards and was buried in Hobkirk Kirkyard (note her name is also spelled ‘Katherine’). Lawrence (15th C.) listed in 1482/3 along with James, Simon and John Elwald, as well as Robert Turnbull and Robert Dalgleish, when they said to be rebels captured by Patrick Dickson, Bailie of Peebles. Perhaps the same ‘laureneci elwald’ was recorded at Mosspaul in 1494/5 when fined for non-appearance at the Court of the Justiciary, the Earl of Bothwell serving as surety (but 3 other men of the same name were also listed in 1494/5). Lawrence (15th C.) listed among Elliots and other men of Liddesdale who failed to appear at the Justice- aire in 1494/5. He is listed separately from 2 other Laurences, but appears after William and David, sons of William, and before John in Thorlieshope. Lawrence (15th C.) recorded among men of Liddesdale who failed to appear at the Justice- aire in 1494/5. He is listed separately from 2 other Laurences, along with Ralph, William, Edmund, Ingram, Martin and Lawrence (son of Martin). Lawrence (15th C.) son of Martin, he is listed among many Liddesdale men who did not appear at the Justice- aire in 1494/5. The Lord of Liddesdale and Captain of Hermitage were fined as a result. Martin, listed just before him, as presumably his father. Len (20th C.) starting as a message boy with Stothart’s in 1939, he eventually took over the firm when David Stothart retired in 1971. He ran Hawick’s well-known toy emporium until its final closure in 1989. He is also believed to be the last person in Hawick to go through the 6-year apprenticeship as a saddler. Leon (16th C.) recorded as ‘Leoni Elwald’ on the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale, when he and his brothers were the tenants of Sundhope. He was also listed as one of the tenants of Whitrope, along with William in Ramsugill, John, Robert and another ‘Leoni’. Madge Callaghan (1928–) wife of Bob, she received an M.B.E. in 1998 for services to lawn tennis. Also known as a campaigner for the Waverley Line, she had a carriage on the new line named after her in 2015. She recited David Hill’s poem ‘The Bleach’ on the ‘Hawick Speaks’ tape and on the 2006 CD ‘Hawick and Teviotdale in Song and Poetry’. She was recorded speaking in dialect as part of the BBC ‘Voices’ project in 2004. Margaret nee Roger (16th C.) widow of Robert ‘Elwand’, who was a tenant of Mark Ker at Borthwickshiel. In 1540 she raised an action against 2 Murrays for stealing cattle from Borthwickshiel in 1528, apprehending her and burning her house. The Murrays defence was that their actions were part of a raid by the Earl of Angus (Lieutenant of the Borders) against thieves and traitors in Teviotdale and that she was harbouring such thieves, namely her sons David and Alexander, as well as helping her other sons John and Ringand (Ninian). Margaret (d.1697) heiress of Reidheugh, elder daughter of Robert. She was recorded paying the land tax (of £500) in 1663. In 1637 she married James Elliott, 6th son of Gilbert of Stobs in 1637. The couple were granted many of the Elliot lands in Liddesdale, excepting 3 farms that were given to her sister Esther and some farms that were held in ‘liferent’ by their father Robert. Her son Robert succeeded to the Redheugh and Larriston lands, but she retained a dower right to rentals from Larriston. She later reduced her claims in order to help her son’s financial difficulties. She further reduced her claims on the family’s former lands on Hermitage Water, which helped enable her grandson, Robert of Larriston, to buy back Larriston in 1695. However, right after her death Larriston Rig was sold off, and the rest of the estate was bought by Oliver of Dinlabyre in 1719. Margaret (17th/18th C.) daughter of Arthur of Harwood, who died in 1698. She was recorded as proprietor of Harwood in a 1710 land evaluation of Hawick Parish, with her lands being valued at more than £800, the third highest in the Parish. She was served heir to her father in 1711, probably when she reached the age of majority. She married William Elliott of Thorlieshope and they had 14 children. She is buried at Oxnam. Margaret nee Laing (d.1792) daughter of Walter Laing of Meikledale. She inherited Meikledale, Flex, Old Melrose and Burnfoot-on-Ale. In 1764 she became the second wife of William of Borthwickbrae. She was recorded as owner of the Flex (valued at £114 10s 9d) in 1788, and also in about 1811 (although she was deceased by then). She also owned Wester Essenside, Leaphill and Burnfoot in Ashkirk Parish, which were valued together at £952 in 1788. Her children included William (who succeeded to Borthwickbrae and changed his surname to include ‘Lockhart’), Walter of Old Melrose, Margaret (who married David Simpson of Teviotbank) and at least two children who died young. Margaret (1779–1816) daughter of William of Arkleton, she was born in Jedburgh. In 1807 she married Adam, son of Rev. William Scott, Minister at Southdean. In 1810 her brother Robert died, and she succeeded him as the only surviving child of their father. She then assumed the surname Scott-Elliot and her son William succeeded to Arkleton. Margaret (19th C.) recorded as proprietor of a shoemaker’s business on the Cross Wynd in Pigot’s 1837 directory. Mrs. Marjorie L. née Laidlaw (19th C.) from Ancrum Mains, daughter of Adam, who had been a builder in Hawick. She is sometimes incorrectly named as ‘Margaret’ rather than ‘Marjorie’. She was the first librarian of Hawick Public Library 1878–94, and possibly only the second female chief librarian in Britain. She was said to be a forceful and dominating lady. She was married to a farmer, but later re-married to D. McBurnie Watson. Another Mrs. Elliot, librarian, is recorded as a member of Allars Kirk in 1829, although this cannot be the same woman. Mark (d.1564) recorded as being ‘callit of the Hill’ when he was found guilty of sheep-stealing and reset and hanged. Those convicted along with him were Hob Scott ‘of Colyfurid’ and John Scott ‘the Clerk’. He may be related to later Elliots of the Hill. Mark of the Hill (d.1611) listed among a large group of Elliots who were accused in 1590 of taking Ralph Hall and others prisoner and ransoming them. He was probably the Mark listed along with James and Jock of the Hill among Scotsmen accused of raids into England in 1595. He was listed among men declared as fugitives for not appearing at a Borders Commissioners’ court in Jedburgh in 1605. He was recorded being ‘in the Hill’ when he was convicted and executed at Jedburgh court in 1611. He was probably a descendant of the earlier Mark of the Hill. Mark (1776–1854) brother of Maj. William Elliot of Harwood and also Thomas. He served as a private soldier in the Royal Marines and was present at the mutiny of the Nore in 1797. He later served as a Captain in the Roxburghshire Yeomanry, and helped get the Liddesdale men to the muster in Hawick. A story is told of him at an inspection of the troops in Hawick, during which his horse made a bolt forward. When Capt. Elliot of Harwood asked ‘Where the devil are you going Mark?’, he replied ‘Ask my horse’. He was tenant farmer at Lanton, where he died unmarried. A portrait of him hung at Clifton Park. Martin (15th C.) mentioned in 1494/5 when he was listed among Liddesdale men who failed to appear at the Justice-aire. His son Lawrence was listed just after him. He may have been related to the later Martins. Martin ‘of Abye’ and of Braidlie (d.1590), possibly second son of Robert of Redheugh who died at Flodden (in which case he must have been born before 1513). However, he could instead have been son of the next Robert of Redheugh (b.c.1505, 14th Chief), and hence born somewhat later. He was first known as ‘of Abye’, these probably being the Abbey lands in north-eastern Liddesdale that were once owned by Jedburgh Abbey. He acted as the effective leader of the Elliots in roughly the period 1563–73, presumably during the minority of his nephew. He received a Crown Charter to the lands at Braidlie in 1549; it is unclear whether this was the lands on the Borthwick Water (which is claimed in the Dowager Elliot’s history) or on the Hermitage Water (which would make more sense). He is mentioned in 1556/7 as brother of Robert of Redheugh. He was recorded in 1561 as ‘Martine Elwald of Reideuch’ among a list of men charged to appear before Queen Mary regarding the state of the Borders. In 1563 he had a bond with Robert of Redheugh to enter Jock, son of Gavin Elliot of Ramsiegill, to Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst. He was probably the Elliot of Braidlie who led the ‘Brodies’ in the burning of Hawick in 1565, as part of a feud with the Scotts of Branxholme and Buccleuch, perhaps sparked by the murder of David Scott of Hassindean in 1564. A raid by about 300 Elliots resulted in about 10 miles of Scott of Buccleuch’s land being burned, and the deaths of many men, women and children. Counter raids followed on Liddesdale and Teviotdale for the next few years. Also in 1565 he had offered to make a deal with Lord Scrope, handing over Hermitage in return for English protection; although the offer was not fully taken up, the Elliots did receive support from the English Wardens. He was probably involved in the ambush of Scotts by Elliots at Ewes Doors in 1565. In 1566 the Elliots were again raiding into England, and the feud with the Scotts appears to have been resolved. His force to have defeated that of the Earl of Bothwell in 1566/7, sent to subdue the Elliots and others. In 1567 he received a pardon for his former crimes, and agreed to keep peace on the Border, being given money by both the English and Scottish authorities. He may have been among the roughly 300 men who raided Torwoodlee in 1568 (perhaps slaying several Pringles), and was one of the men summoned to settle the feud between the Pringles.

and Elliots in 1575. In 1569 he was said to have met the Black Laird of Ormiston in Liddesdale and forced him to stop giving refuge to the English Earls of Northumberland and Westmorland to return to England (from where they had fled after an uprising in support of Mary, Queen of Scots). He and Archibald Armstrong promised in 1569 to enter into ward John Elliot of Thorliveshope. In 1569 he also served as pledge for ‘the hail branche of the Reidheuch that dwells within the Swyrise’, with Alexander Home of Manderson as his surety. He was also pledge for the Nixons in the same year. Additionally in 1569 he gave assurances, along with Archibald Armstrong of Mangerton and Lancie Armstrong of Whitaugh, to ‘Rowie Forrester’ (who was probably the deputy English Warden), ‘that that sall mak obedience according to the rest of the centre’. Also in 1569 he was recorded being held ‘with My Lord Regentis Grace’ as pledge for his eldest son Simon, as well as ‘Archeis Hob’. Furthermore, in 1569 he appeared in Edinburgh to request that he be released from ward to return temporarily to Liddesdale, to be replaced with his nephew Gib and offered to give service ‘in kep ing the hous of Armitage’; he signed ‘with his hand at the pen’. In 1570 he wrote to the English Warden, Sir John Forster, making a deal that avoided Liddesdale being ravaged by the English on their way to Teviotdale. Also in 1570 he headed a group of Elliots who signed a bond, giving pledges for Hob, son of Elder Will Elliot and John Elliot of Heuchhouse. In about 1572, Robert of Redheugh came of age, and he ceased to be the leader of the clan; later there would be strife between the two sets of the Elliots that they led. He was probably the ‘Martin of Brady’ who gave a pledge for the surname of Nixon in 1573. In 1574 he was given ‘liferent’ of the teinds of Castleton by Scott of Buccleuch. According to the register of the Privy Council he gave a pledge for the Nixons in 1573, was also surety in 1574, was moved from ward in Blackness to St. Andrews and had re-entry in ward in 1577. In 1575 he was summoned to appear to answer for the feud between the Elliots and the Pringles. He was said to have built himself a strong tower around 1576, described in an English letter being ‘strongly vawted, att the head of Liddell, with open ventes for traynes of powder’; this was distinct from Larriston, but it is unclear where it was situated. In 1578/9 William Ker of Cessford and Andrew Ker of Faldouside were cautioners for him, pledging that he would not raid into England. In 1578/9 he was among 22 Border Lairds who did not appear before the Privy Council when summoned; he had been surety for several different sets of men (mainly Elliots), who had not been entered into ward as promised. His sons ‘Sym, Gawin, Arche and Hob’ are mentioned in 1580; they were implicated in the ambush of Scots and Gledstains at Whitaugh (and it may be that he was the instigator of the raid on Whitlaw that preceded it). In 1580 there was a complaint by the Countess of Bothwell, James Gledstains of Cocklaw and Wat Scott of Harden that he was maintaining Lancie Armstrong of Whitaugh and his family and followers, and that a group of Elliots of the Park and Gorrenberry had attacked Harwood, Whitlaw and Hosocate; this included his own sons Gavin, Hobbie and Archie, as well as his nephews Airchie, Gib and Dandie. In 1580/1 there was caution of £2000 for his entry to the Privy Council ‘when warned’. In 1581 he and John Turnbull of Minto were caution for the re-entry of Hob Elliot of Braidlie (who had been released from prison in Edinburgh), as pledge for the Elliots of Gorrenberry. Also in that year he was among a large group denounced as rebels for failing to present men to answer their rievings crimes. In 1581 he was allied with Simon Armstrong of Mangerton and Lance Armstrong of Whitaugh when they made a set of complaints against Walter Scott of Goldielands, James Gledstains of Cocklaw and Robert Elliot of Redheugh; he specifically complained about a group of Scots attacking his farm of Northcroft, and of another group of Scots attacking his sons Hob and Dand as they rode near Headshaw. All the leaders were charged to appear before the Privy Council with pledges of assurance from their supporters; it is interesting that at that time he appeared to be on sided against Robert of Redheugh. And lastly, in 1581 he had a bond of caution with Lancie Armstrong of Whitaugh and a number of other Elliots, entered with John Carmichael, who had been Keeper of Liddesdale. In 1581/2 he was declared a rebel for the non-appearance of his supporters who had been accused of raiding Eilrig, Bellendean and other farms. Along with Robert of Redheugh and 2 Armstrongs, he was also denounced in 1582/3 by the Privy Council for failing to make redress for the crimes committed by their tenants and servants. The Elliots of Braidlie are listed in an English letter of 1583 as Martin, his son Simon, Gawin ‘the Clerk’, Hobbie, Archie (all 4 of these probably his sons), Jock ‘Copshaw’, John of Thorliveshope, Will of the

Steele, Dand and John of Braidlie (probably also his sons) and Simon of Harden; they were probably all closely related to him. He was among the Border Lairds summoned to appear before the Privy Council in 1583/4 to give their advice regarding the quieting of the troubles in Liddesdale and Teviotdale, and it appears that the feud between factions within the Elliot clan were resolved at this time. In 1584 he was listed second among the Elliots when they gave a bond of assurance to the English Wardens at Hermitage Castle. In 1586 he and his eldest son Simon had a lease of lands from the Earl of Bothwell, including Kilford, ‘Hietrie Clewis’ and ‘Ricartoun Cleucht’. He was last definitively mentioned at a Wardens’ meeting at the Bell Kirk in April 1590. Also in 1590 he was on a list of Elliots accused of raiding the English farm of ‘Whynatlie’ in the previous year, stealing 60 cows, 2 horses, taking goods worth £100 and burning 5 houses; others listed include his sons Airchie and Hob, as well as Robert of Redheugh (his nephew); of course he may not have been on this raid himself. In 1591 he had a charter of ‘liferent’ of ‘the ten pund land of auld extent of Philhope’ from James VI, confirmed by Parliament the following year; he must have been very old by this time, or this was the later Martin of Braidlie. He is mentioned in one version of the ballad ‘Jamie Telfer’, where he is referred to as being ‘of the Preakin Tower’, i.e. Prickinghough, which may have been his home for a while. He was among several Elliots who signed a bond written by Sir John Forster to try to end family feuds on the Border in 1595/6 (although, since he was probably deceased by then, this may have been his grandson, also called Martin of Braidlie). He may have married an Armstrong (supported by his first son being called Simon) and their children were: Simon, probably first Elliot of Philhope; William of Braidlie, who married Mary Scott of Buccleuch and was hanged in 1607; Robert of Braidlie, called ‘Martin’s Hob of Prickenhaugh’, whose son and grandson were both declared fugitives; Andrew ‘Dand’; Archibald, called ‘Martin’s Archie of Clintwood’, banished from both Kingdoms; Gavin; Gilbert, ‘Gib’; John, called ‘Martin’s John of Burnmouth’, denounced a rebel; and a daughter who married Francis Foster of Kershopefoot. Martin ‘Martin o Heuchhouse’ (16th C.) one of the 10 thieves captured in Hawick in 1567 and held in Edinburgh tolbooth, unlike many of the others who were drowned. He was probably a descendant of the William ‘in Heuchous’ recorded in 1516. If he was not executed in 1567, then he could be the same man as ‘Reid Mertin’. Martin (16th C.) presented to the Parsonage and Vicarage of Castleton in 1574. He could be the same as one of the contemporary Martins (or closely related to them). The charge was vacant in the following year. Martin ‘Reid Mertin’ of Heuchhouse (16th C.) recorded in 1579/80 as ‘Rid Martene Ellot of Heuchhous’ on a list of men accused of raiding into England. ‘Hob’ of Heuchhouse is also listed as his brother. In 1584 he was ‘Martinge Ellot of the Hewghehowswe’ when, along with John of Heuchhouse, he signed the bond of assurance with the English Wardens at Hermitage. In 1587/8 he is recorded as ‘ `Reade’ Martyn Ellott of the Hewghouse’ when accused by Sir John Forster of being on a raid on England in 1585, along with many other Elliots; John of Heuchhouse was also listed, and so presumably closely related. Martin (16th C.) recorded in 1584 along with his brother David, as sons of ‘Elder Will’ on the 1584 bond of assurance with the English Wardens. They gave assurance on behalf of their whole part of the clan, but it is unclear where they were from; certainly Martin of Heuchhouse was listed separately. Martin (16th C.) recorded in 1583 as ‘Rytchis Martyn’, on a list of the Elliot chiefs of the time, said to be closely related to the leader of the clan. Presumably his father was Richard. Martin of Braidlie (d.1607) son of Simon of Philhope (‘Mertin’s Sym’) and grandson of the earlier Martin of Braidlie. He could be the ‘Martyne’ listed by Monipennie in about 1594 among the chiefs of the Border, along with the Laird of Redheugh (but this list was probably compiled earlier, and referred to his namesake, who was already deceased by then). He was also sometimes known as ‘of Prickenhaugh’ and so presumably inherited those lands from his relatives. He was probably the ‘Martine Ellott of the Prickinge hawghe’ accused in 1590, along with ‘Martin’s Gib’ and Airchie and John (sons of Martin, and hence probably his uncles) of stealing horses from Englishman Thomas Rutherford. In 1592 he had a charter of the lands of Philhope, along with his eldest son Simon. This charter also included rights of the Kirk of Castleton. In 1593 he was probably the ‘Martyn Ellott of Bradley’ who was part of the large raiding party of Elliots and Armstrongs into Tynedale. In 1599 he and Robert of Redheugh made an agreement (on behalf of their relatives and friends) to settle their differences with with Sir Walter Scott of Branc holme. Also in 1599 he was part of a bond with the Warden (Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch) to be responsible for the behaviour of the inhabitants of Liddesdale. He must thus have been an important Liddesdale Elliot chieftan, and sometimes confused with his grandfather, the more powerful Martin of Braidlie, who died about 15 years earlier; he was described as ‘good old Martin’s oye’ (i.e. grandson). He may have acquired Braidlie in only 1606, from Sir James Douglas of Drumlanrig, the cautioners for the payment of 4000 merks being Gilbert of Mains, William of Falnash and Robert Scott of Haining. He was captured in 1606 by the Earl of Dunbar (then Commissioner on the Border) and hanged at the court at Foulden (near Berwick), along with his uncle William as well as the Armstrongs of Mangerton and Whithaugh. After his death Braidlie (in the Barony of Hawick) went to William of Falnash, who had one of his guarantors in an arrangement between him and Sir James Douglas of Drumlanrig. The name of his wife is unrecorded, but their children included: Simon of Philhope; and a son, whose name is unknown, but whose son Robert was served heir to his grandfather’s great-grandfather, Martin Elliot of Braidley, in 1653. Martin (d.bef. 1618) holder of lands in Lilliesleaf. He married Agnes Lorraine and had a son and William. It has been suggested that he was the same man as Martin of Braidlie; although this seems unlikely, the similarity of names may indicate a relationship with that family. Martin (17th C.) servant of John Letham. In 1656 he was ordered to pay 30 shillings ‘for absence from his service for 5 weeks’, although he was let off the money claimed ‘for the Trooper coming to the said John Lethane’. Martin (18th C.) resident of Minto Parish. He married Margaret Stewart in 1821 and their children included: John (b.1723); Adam (b.1725); and Margaret (b.1729). Mary (18th C.) cook at Dinlabyre in 1791, when she worked for William Oliver. Matthew (15th C.) listed among a large number of Liddesdale men who failed to appear at the Justice-aire in 1494/5. Matthew (15th C.) listed as former tenant in ‘helmys’ among a large number of Liddesdale men who failed to appear at the Justice-aire in 1494/5. His lands were possibly Helm in Cavers Parish (or potentially Whames in the Borthwick valley), and he is listed separately from another Matthew. Matthew (18th/19th C.) from Canonbie, he lived in Castleton Parish. He married Janet (also known as ‘Fanny’) Wilson. Their children included: Elizabeth (b.1782); Andrew (b.1785); John (b.1787); Matthew (1788–1874); Henry (b.1791); and Janet (b.1796). Matthew (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Betty Elliot and their children included Betty, Margaret and William. It is possible this is an earlier marriage of the Matthew who married Dorothy Purdom. Matthew (1788–1874) son of Matthew and Janet Wilson. He was a labourer in Newcastleton, living at about 9 Doncaster Street in 1841 and 26 South Hermitage Street in 1861. He is probably the labourer in Newcastleton listed among male heads of households in 1835. He married Dorothy (‘Dolly’) Purdom and their children included: Annie (b.1821), who married farmer- worker James; Matthew (b.1821); John (b.1823), a ploughman at Barnes, who may have emigrated to Huron County, Ontario; Isabel (b.1825); and Thomas (b.1827), who possibly emigrated to Canada with his brother. Matthew (1788/9–1877) tenant in Netherraw. He was listed as head of household at Netherraw in 1835–41. He was farmer of 20 acres at Netherraw in Castle- ton Parish in 1841 and 1851. He was the last farmer of Netherraw, with the buildings being demolished after his death, and much of the land planted. He married Janet Scott (c.1788–1875) and their children were: John (b.1808); Betty (b.1811); Matthew (b.1812); Robert (b.1814); Helen (b.1816); Ann (or Annie), 1819–84; William (1820–36); Andrew (b.1821); Isabel (b.1823), who married a Wilson; Margaret (b.1825); Janet (or Jane, b.1827); and Frances (or Fanny, 1829–1914). Matthew (b.1821) resident of Castle- ton Parish, son of Matthew and Dorothy Pur- dom. In 1851 he was a farm servant at Hud- shouse. He married Cecilia Turnbull and their children included: Stavert Turnbull (b.1844); and Elizabeth (1850–96), who married James Duncan Helm and died in Hawick. Matthew (‘Mattha’ (c.1871–1945) half-back for Hawick in the 1890s, who also played for Scotland. His 1895 Scotland cap is in the Museum. Michael (13th C.) recorded as ‘Michaelis de Elaund’ in the 1256 as- size roll of Northumberland. He may have been an early Elliot, living just across the Border. His son Nicholas, who was 7, and Gilbert, son of Thomas, from the same place, seem to have died in an acci- dent ‘in villa de Elaund’. Miss ?? (b.1830s) became famous for knitting about 130 pairs of socks to send to local soldiers during WWI. She lived on Dalkeith Place. Mr. ?? (18th/19th C.) teacher at the ‘Latin School’ in Hawick, i.e. the Grammar School. His son John died in 1798. It is unclear if he was the main master or an as- sistant at the school. Mrs. ?? (17th C.) listed among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. She probably ran an inn or shop. She could be the same Mrs. Elliot recorded in 1735 when the Council records show £2 7s being spent in her establishment ‘when the poer was mended’, suggesting that her inn was near one of the town’s ports. Mrs. ?? (20th C.) from Borthaugh. She was heavily involved in the local Women’s Voluntary Service during WWII. Nenion (19th C.) Edinburgh-based solicitor before the Supreme Courts of Scotland and Clerk of the Teind Court. He was involved with the Edinburgh Border Counties Association and contributed several papers to the Hawick Archaeological Society Transactions. Nichol (17th C.) 4th son of Walter of Arkleton. He was farmer at Unthank. He married Janet, daughter of Rev. John Lithgow of Ewes. His children were: Thomas (b.1700), who probably died young; Anna (b.1702); Adam (b.1703); Janet (b.1704) referred to as ‘in Newmill’, who died unmarried; and Margaret (b.1707), who married William Armstrong of Woodhead. Nichol (17th/18th C.). His son John was baptised in Kirkton Parish in 1725. Given the forename, he was probably connected with the farmer at Unthank. Nicholas (14th/15th C.) recorded as deceased in 1408 in a document relating to St. Giles’ lands in Edinburgh, where he is ‘Elwald’. Nicholas (15th C.) recorded in 1494/5 when his son Gilbert was among Liddesdale men cited for non-appearance at the Justice-aire. Ninian (15th/16th C.) witness in 1497 to a sasine for the lands of Robert of Redheugh. Other witnesses were Robert, William, John and Andrew ‘Elwald’ (presumably important men of the clan), as well as 2 Croizers, a Graham and a Forster. Ninian (16th C.) recorded in the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale as a tenant of the steadings of ‘Cleirlandis, Robsteid, Thomscotsteid, Cranswat, Gusbank, Hurklebuss’. Another (or the same) Ninian is recorded, along with John, as tenant of Roughley in the same roll. Ninian ‘Ringan the Porter’ (16th C.) recorded as tenant at Ewes Doors about 1567. His nickname could be an epithet from the ‘Doors’. In 1569 he was ‘Niniane Ellot, calleit the Portar of Ewis durris’ when ordered to enter the ‘Doors’. In 1578 he was ‘Niniane Ellot, callyt the Portar’ when his son John (or ‘Blasteis Jok’) was cited, and hence he was already deceased by then. ‘Archie Ellot, sone to Ringhais Will Ellot the portar in Glenvoren’ could be his grandson. Ninian and John, who were tenants of Roughley in 1541, may also be related. Ninian (16th C.) recorded in a huge list of men whose superior was Lord Maxwell in 1585, when they had remission for their previous crimes. He is the first named of ‘Niniane, Thome, George and Will Ellattis’, suggesting they all resided in the same place. They are listed among Armstrong, Little etc. of the area around Eskdale. Ninian ‘Ringan’ of Dodburn (16th C.) recorded among a large number of Ellots and others complained about for a raid into England in 1589. His name is listed as ‘Rynion Elliott of Dodborne’ and ‘Renyon Ellott of Dodburne’. He is surely related to the slightly earlier Simon of Dodburn and William of Dodburn. Ninian ‘Hob’s Ringan’ (16th/17th C.) listed among men declared as fugitives for not appearing at a Borders Commissioners’ court in Jedburgh in 1605. He was recorded as ‘Rinyeane Elliott, called Hob’s Rinyeane’. Ninian ‘Ringan’ (d.c.1608) son of William of Fiddleton. He was listed (along with his father and brother John) among men declared as fugitives for not appearing at a court in Hawick in 1605. In 1608 he was sentenced along with William, son of John Elliot of Burngrains with resisting the King’s Guard. They were also recorded as ‘Niniane Ellote, sone to umq’ Jok of Burgranes; William Ellote, sone to Will of Fiddeltoun’, which is confusing. The pair had been declared rebels some years earlier for theft, murder and other crimes. Hiding in ‘the West countrie’ they were sought out by Sir Robert Hepburn and men of the King’s Guard, but they shot at the Guard, killing William Bailie and being captured after the house they were in was set on fire. They were sentenced to be taken to Edinburgh Castle Hill, to have their right hands cut off and then to be hanged. He must have been related to the ‘John’s Gavin’ of Fiddleton who was tried in 1606. Ninian (d.1660) 4th son of Elliot of Unthank (whose name is unknown), he was tenant in Eweslees. His brothers were probably Adam of Meikledale, William of Mosspeeble and William of Unthank. He received a lease of Eweslees from the Earl of Buccleuch in 1643. His eldest son appears to have predeceased him, and when he died he left 2 grandsons who were minors, with their appointed guardians being William of Unthank, Gavin of Outersiderig and James in Harwood. He married Margaret `Acheson' (probably Aitchison). His children included: a son, whose children were Ninian of Eveslees and Robert of Eveslees; Robert in Gorrenberry; and William in Lymiecleuch. However, this information is all quite uncertain. Ninian (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His son Ninian was baptised in 1694. It is possible he is the same as Ninian of Fahnash. Ninian of Fahnash (d.bef. 1703) son of Gavin and grandson of Robert. He had a charter of Fahnash dated 1667 from Archibald of Fahnash, his cousin. He had a son, Walter. He may be the Ninian who leased Todshawhill, Whames and part of Branxholme Muir in 1672 and 1673. Ninian (b.c.1709) born at Shaws in Castleton, he may have been son or grandson of William of Penchrise and Bessie Grieve. He married Agnes Paterson and they had a son Ninian (b.1735) who lived at Riccarton. His wife's gravestone is in Teviothead cemetery; she died at the age of 58. He could be the shepherd in Commonbrae marked on the same stone, who died at Slatehills in 1762. He may have been father of Adam (1734–60), also marked on the gravestone, who died at Commonbrae. Ninian (18th C.) son of Robert in Know. He was tenant in Priesthill, which was probably the farmstead near Whithaugh. Ninian (1735–1816) son of Ninian and Agnes Paterson. He was a shepherd in Castleton, associated with Riccarton and Dods. He was recorded as shepherd at Riccarton on both the 1797 Horse and Dog Tax Rolls and also in the Castleton Parish section of the Roxburghshire Militia in 1797. He appears to have married 3 times, to Margaret Bryden (b.1731) at Riccarton in 1756, then Esther Crozier (1731–66) and lastly to Janet Douglas (1745–1834) at Upperraw. His children probably included: Margaret (b.1756); John (b.1760) in Middlemoss; Margaret (again, b.1763); Adam (b.1765); Ester (b.1766), who married Robert Ballantyne from Pinglehole; Mary (b.1772); Robert (b.1774); Ninian (b.1776); Catherine (b.1777); Christian (b.1778); William (b.1784); and Walter (b.1789). He died at Shaws.

Elliot

Ninian (1776–1847) son of shepherd Ninian and Janet Douglas, he was born at Riccarton. In 1841 he was listed as ‘Lab. or Roadman’ and living at about 13 North Hermitage Street. He married Margaret (1779–1863), daughter of John Nichol and Elizabeth Riddell. Their children included: Ninian (1808–89); John (b.1810); Helen (b.1812); James (1814–98), road contractor; and Janet (1821–1901), who had a daughter to John Nichol (presumably a cousin of some sort). Ninian (1789–1865) eldest son of John and Janet Robson, he was born in Castleton Parish and may have lived at Blackburnfoot. He emigrated with his family to Middlesex County, Ontario, and all but their first child was born there. He married Agnes Turnbull (b.c.1790). Their children included: Janet (b.1815), born in Castleton; Mary (b.1821); Elizabeth (b.1823); Esther (b.1829); Francis (b.1829); and Agnes (1837–41). Ninian (1799–1885) born at Sundhope in Castleton Parish, son of shepherd James and Janet Grieve. He married Janet, daughter of Elliot Grieve, who was born at Blinkbonny. They emigrated to Canada where their children were born, Janet, James, Elizabeth, Elliot Grieve, Gardner, John, William, James, Catherine, Thomas and Margaret. They lived in North Dorchester Township, Middlesex County, Ontario, where he was a farmer. Ninian (1808–89) son of Ninian and brother of John. He was a road contractor in Newcastleton, living on Douglas Square in 1851 and 1861. He married Jane (1812–65), daughter of John Nichol and Marion Murray. Their children included: John (1836–1905), also a roadman; Margaret (b.1838), who died young; Marion (1840–99). Patrick (15th C.) brother of John of Thorlshope. He is recorded in 1488, when he was witness to a sasine for the lands of Girnwood. It is possible that the same Patrick was listed among a large number of Liddesdale men who failed to appear at the Justice-aine in 1494/5. Patrick (16th C.) entered at a Justice Court in Jedburgh in about 1510, by Robert of Redhengh, along with ‘Gret Johnnie in Priesthaugh. Patrick ‘Pate’ of Ryleknow (16th C.) recorded in 1569 among men that Sir John Forster served as surety for. This makes it seem like he was from the English side. Phillip (18th/19th C.) saddler of Hawick (probably from the East-end). He was the Council’s elected Cornet in 1790, but after he drew up a narrow list of invitees some of the young men of the town (presumably mainly the West-enders) chose George Wilson as their own Cornet instead. The two cavalcades approached the West Port from different sides of the Raws and Bailie Hardie blocked the rebel cavalcade (felling the first man with an oak stick), allowing the elected Cornet’s party to proceed unmolested to the Moor (as described by Robert Wilson). Ralph (15th C.) recorded among a large list of men of Liddesdale who did not appear at the Justice-aine in 1494/5. Two men listed as ‘radulphi elwald’ are there, although this forename is not otherwise common among the Elliots. One of them had a brother, William, who is also listed in 1494/5. Richard ‘Little’ (14th C.) recorded in Cumberland in 1389, appearing before the justices of gaol delivery. His nickname was recorded as ‘parvus’ and his surname as ‘Elwald’, the same as William ‘One-Eyed’, who was also recorded. Richard (16th C.) recorded in 1548 as ‘Ryche Ellott of the Park’. Along with Robert of Redheugh and ‘Nelly’s John’, he had a bond to enter 2 prisoners with the Laird of Ferniehirst. He was presumably related to other Elliots of Park. Richard ‘Law’s Richie’ (16th C.) tenant in Swayne. He was recorded in 1574 as ‘Riche Ellot callit Lawis Richie in Swinteis’ among men who had been ordered to be removed from the lands of Robert of Redheugh. ‘Lawis Jok’ and ‘Lawis Thome’ in Priesthaugh were also named and presumably his brothers. Their father may have been Lawrence, or perhaps they came from Laws in Liddesdale. Richard (16th C.) listed in 1581/2 as ‘Ritche Elliott, callit Rowanes Willis Ritchie’ among Elliots accused of raiding the farm of Harwood on Teviot. He was presumably son of William and grandson of Roland. He is listed after ‘Rowans Hobbe’ and his brother Jamie, who may be related. He was declared a rebel after not appearing. Richard ‘Ritchie’ (16th C.) recorded in 1587/8 when accused by Sir John Forster of being on a raid on England in 1585, along with many other Elliots. His name is written as ‘Riche Elliott, ‘Bessies wifes Riche’’, but it is unclear exactly what this means and who he was related to. Richard ‘Ritchie’ (d.1606) called ‘Richie Elliott of Heuchous’ when he was found guilty of stealing a sheep. The Border Commissioners wished to spare him, but he was nevertheless sentenced to death by the Privy Council. He could be the same man as ‘Ryche Elliott of the Lewlandes’, listed just before William, son of John of Heuchhouse in 1595 among Elliots complained about by the Lord of Gilsland for a raid into England. He was also listed along with Will, also of ‘the Hewghhouse’ in relation to another 2 raids in 1595. Richard (17th C.) see Robert. Richard (1817–91) eldest son of William, farmer at Doopool. Along with his brothers William (1819–91) and John (1823–1910) he was farmer at Hartwoodmyres for about 50 years. In 1861 they were farming 900 acres and were all unmarried. Robert (15th C.) recorded as ‘Roberto Elwald’ in 1481 when he and his mother leased the lands of ‘Glenstokane’ in Galloway. Perhaps the same Robert had a sasine for the lands of ‘Rachane’ in Peebleshire, also in 1481. It is unclear how this man (or men) may have been related to local Elliots. Robert of Redheugh (d.1497) first Elliot chief about whom we have documented information. Since it is said that he died as an old man, he may have been born in the 1420s. He is described as 10th Chief of the Elliots, even although the names of the first 9 chiefs are unknown (but it is a safe bet that some of them were Robert!). It is claimed the first chief was granted lands in Liddesdale by Robert the Bruce in about 1320; this earlier Robert was probably the first Elliot Laird of Redheugh and Larriston. A record found among papers at Ferniehirst was said to refer to an early Elliot of Redheugh, ‘Chieftan of the South’, who was killed in battle with 3 of his sons (possibly Homildon Hill in 1402), and whose daughter Mary married Cuthbert Blackadder, whose eldest son was alive in 1447; this earlier Elliot may have been his grandfather. He was established at Redheugh from at least 1476, when he was granted lands of ‘Dalman’ (possibly Demainholm), ‘Bluntwood’ and ‘the Crouke’ by Archibald Douglas (‘Bell-the-cat’), Earl of Angus and Lord of Liddesdale; the charter describes him as ‘our velbelufyt fameliar squiar, Robert Elwald of ye Redheuch for his guid and faithful servis to us don and for to be don’, and it is signed at Lintalee. In 1479 he was further granted ‘Layhalcht, Carolschelis, hartsgarth et le faulde’ (i.e. Leahaugh, Corrie’s Shiel and Hartsgarth) in the lordship of ‘ledesdale’. In 1484 he was Robert ‘Elwald’ of the Redheugh when the Earl of Angus directed ‘Walter Scot de Edschau, Radulpho Ker, fratri Walteri Ker de Cesfurd et Willielmo Elwaldo de goranbery’ to infeft him in the lands of Over and Nether ‘Larrostane’. In 1489 there was a further precept for ‘redehuch’, ‘layhauch’, ‘hartsgarth’, ‘caraschele’, ‘dawmane’ and ‘larostanys superior et inferior’. In 1491 the Earl of Angus swapped Liddesdale for Bothwell, ending the association of the Elliots with their superiors the Douglasses. He may be the Robert son of Gilbert ‘Elwald’ who produced a remis- sion at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1493 for the crime of stealing a grey horse from William Scott of Tushielaw; his surety was Robert Scott of Whitchester. He may also be the Robert mentioned in 1493 when Patrick Hardie had remission for stealing oxen from him. It seems likely he was the ‘roberti elwald, senioris’ who was listed among many Liddesdale men who failed to appear at the 1494/5 Justice-aire. He is said to have had one son, Robert, Captain of Hermitage, who died in his lifetime. He was succeeded by his grandson, Robert, according to a ‘retour d’inquest’ of 1497/8 in the Douglas of Cavers papers. He is there said to have died ‘about the feast of the Invention of the Holy Cross last bypass’, i.e. in early May, and his grandson inherited his lands of Tillielee and Cauldcleuch. Robert of Reidheugh (d.c.1491) son of Robert, he was also known as ‘Robin’. He is sometimes listed as 11th Chief of the Elliots, even though he died in his father’s lifetime. He served as Captain of Hermitage Castle (probably Deputy Keeper), perhaps being appointed on the death of David Scott, younger of Buccleuch (in about 1484). In 1491 the Earl of Angus was bound to hand over his son Robert (as well as his own son, the Master of Angus) to King James. He was succeeded by his son Robert (12th) of Redheugh. He may also have been father of William of Larriston, although these early generations are not clear. Robert ‘the King’ (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1494/5 among a long list of men of Liddesdale who did not appear at the Justice-aire. Patrick Hepburn, Earl of Bothwell, and George Turnbull of Hallrule, Captain of Hermitage, served as their sureties and were fined. His name was given as ‘Roberti elwald vocatus king’ and he listed second (after William) in a long list, perhaps suggesting his prominence among the Elliots. He was also one of a large number of Elliots (mostly ‘Elwalds’) listed in a 1500 document relating to pledges of good behaviour to Patrick, Earl of Bothwell. In 1502 he is probably the ‘Hob the King’, brother of ‘Dand the Man’ and son of William, who was involved with stealing 180 sheep from Tweeddale and Lauderdale. They were already rebels at that point, with 3 men from around Greenhead producing a ‘respite’ for resetting them. It is unclear which William was his father, and how he was related to any other Elliots. He may be the Robert who witnessed a sasine (along with several Elliots and others) for Robert of Redheugh in 1497. Robert (15th C.) recorded among a large list of men of Liddesdale who did not appear at the Justice-aire in 1494/5, with the Lord of Liddesdale and Captain of Hermitage being fined. His name is listed as ‘roberti elwald comitis’, with his nickname perhaps being ‘the Count’ (to distinguish him from ‘the King’ and other contemporary men of the same name). Robert of Langhaugh (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1494/5 among men of Liddesdale who failed to appear at the Justice-aire. He is listed there as ‘Roberti elwald de langhalch’. He is also recorded in the document listing men who pledged themselves to Patrick, Earl of Bothwell in 1498 for good behaviour. He is there recorded as ‘Robert Elwald of the Langhalch’. This is probably the Longhaugh on the Hermitage Water. Robert ‘Young Rider’ (15th/16th C.) listed in a large number of men of Liddesdale who failed to appear at the Justice-aire in 1494/5. He is also listed among men who pledged their good behaviour to Patrick, Earl of Bothwell in 1498. He is recorded as ‘Robert Elwald, callit zong ridar’. Robert of Reidheugh (d.c.1516) 12th Chief of the Elliots, son of Robert and grandson of the previous Laird of Redheugh. In 1491 he is probably the Robert, son of ‘Robert Elwolde, of the Hermitage’ who was delivered (along with the Master of Angus) as security by the Earl of Angus to King James. He was served heir to his grandfather in 1497/8 in the lands of Tillielee and Cauldcleuch, according to a ‘retour’ in the Douglas of Cavers papers (where he is ‘Robert Elwalde). 2 other Robert Elliots, and 2 William Elliots were on the panel for this inquest. He had sasine for the Liddesdale estates in 1497 and in 1501 he had another retour (at Jedburgh) for his grandfather’s lands, held of the Earl of Bothwell. He additionally inherited Priesthaugh, with the Abbots of Melrose as superiors. In 1502 he was ‘Robertus elwald in redheuch’ when he and George Turnbull in Hallrule were fined for failing to present David Turnbull in Bunochester at court in Jedburgh. He was witness to a sasine at Hermitage (for Adam, 2nd Earl of Bothwell) in 1508, along with William Elliot and Robert in Dinlees. He may be the Robert ‘Elwald’ who was on the 1509 panel for deciding on the inheritance of Cavers by James Douglas. He was ‘Robert Elwald of Redheuch’ when summoned to come before the King to promise to keep good order in 1510. Following this he had a respite in the Register of the Privy Seal of 1510 for all crimes carried out by him and his associates (except for treason) to be unpunished for 19 years to come. Also listed explicitly were Robert of Dinlees and John in Sundhope, suggesting they might have been brothers or sons (other associates were 2 Nixons, 2 Croziers, 2 Hendersons and an Armstrong). His children were Robert (possibly killed at Flodden) and a daughter who may have married David Scott of Howpasley (or possibly Tushielaw), with William of Larriston perhaps being another son. In general it seems difficult to separate him from the next Robert (in deciding how many generations there really were, and who may have been killed at Flodden). It is unclear if he was the ‘Robert Elwald of Redheuche’ who had a respite for his crimes in 1515/6, along with his brother William of Larriston and some Nixons, Foresters and Croziers, numbering 40 men. If this was him, then he seems likely to have died in 1516 and was succeeded by his grandson Robert in 1526. Robert of Reidheugh (d.1513) referred to as 13th Chief of the Elliots, even although he appears to have died in his father’s lifetime. He was son of Robert, although the number of different Roberts in the preceding couple of decades seems quite uncertain. His sons were: Robert, who succeeded his grandfather in 1526; possibly Martin of Braidlie (although he seems more likely to have been his grandson); Archibald of Falnash and Gorrenberry; and probably John of Copshaw. He was probably the ‘Master Elliot’ said to have been killed at Flodden. However, this may be confusion with his father (since it seems hard to believe he was very old at Flodden), and there is no documentary evidence to separate the various Roberts. Robert (15th/16th C.) recorded as ‘Robert Elwald of Dunle’ in a 1510 respite to Robert of Redheugh and many others in Liddesdale. It seems likely he was a close relative of the Elliot chief. He is also listed as ‘in Denly’ in a 1516 ‘respite’ to William of Larriston and several other Liddesdale Elliots. He was presumably tenant farmer at Dinlees on the Hermitage Water. Robert (d.1530) referred to as a ‘common thief’ in 1530 when he and Adam Nixon were allowed to escape from the custody of John, Lord Hay of Yester, and for which Lord Hay’s brother (also John) was imprisoned in Linlithgow. Probably the same Robert ‘Elwald’ was hanged for theft in Linlithgow that same year, along with Matthew and William Nixon and Robert Noble. It is unclear how he might have been related to other Elliots. Robert (d.bef. 1539) recorded in the Selkirk Protocol Book in 1539/40 when his widow, Janet Scott, purchased lands in Applethorpehall from Robert Scott of Howpasley. He is recorded as ‘Robert Elwand of [Touringtis?]’, but could possibly be a deceased Robert of Redheugh. Robert (d.bef. 1540) referred to as ‘Robert Elwand’ in 1540 when his widow Margaret Roger raised an action against 2 Murrays for stealing cattle from Borthwickshiel (where he was a tenant) in 1526. His sons included David, Alexander, John and Ringand (Ninian), all of whom were wanted as thieves. Robert of Ramsiegill (16th C.) recorded as ‘Robbe Elwald of Ramsegill’ in 1532 when the King charge a commission with his capture (along with Croziers and Foresters) for the killing of Thomas Dalgleish and Adam Turnbull. In 1541 he was ‘antiquo Roberto Elwald de Ramseysgill’ when listed among the tenants of Stirkshielhope; ‘Roberto Elwald in Ramsegill’ was also listed and presumably a different man (although it is unclear if they were related). Robert of Reidheugh (c.1505–bef. 1557) 14th Chief of the Elliots, served heir to his grandfather in 1526, with his father probably being killed at Flodden. His grand-uncle (or perhaps uncle) William of Larriston led the clan during his minority. In 1526 he inherited his grandfather’s Liddesdale lands of ‘Reidheuch, Layhauch, Hartsgarth, Careschel, Dalemane’ and ‘Over and Nether Larastanis’. In 1531 he was probably the Robert ‘Elwolde’ of the ‘Armytage’ who was one of 3 attendants who accompanied the Earl of Bothwell to a secret meeting with the Earl of Northumberland. He was further recorded as Captain of Hermitage in a document of 1532 and another in 1548/9 (when he had a bond to enter John ‘Cragill’ as a prisoner with the Laird of Ferniehirst). In 1537/8 he and his brother Archibald were sureties for William in Leaugh, plus brothers James and Simon, who had broken open a shop in Selkirk. He may be the ‘Robert Elwald seriando’ (i.e. ‘sergeant’) who was recorded as tenant of Shaws in the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale; he may also be the Robert who was tenant of the lands of Copshaw. He may be the ‘Robert Ellwald’ listed in 1541 among Scotsmen accused of burning the corn of William Carnaby at Halton. In 1546 his son was described as ‘sone to Robyne of the Redhwyych’. He was listed as ‘Rot. Eluand of Reidheuch’ in a 1550 bond signed by him and 10 Scotts in which they promised the Queen to keep order and hand over criminals. In 1552/3 he and Thomas Armstrong of Mangerton were appointed by the Privy Council to meet the Governor at Dumfries and accept the charge of keeping the peace in Liddesdale. He was succeeded by his son, Robert. He seems likely to have also been father of Martin of Braidlie (who led the burning of Hawick in 1565), although genealogies often have this Martin as his brother. Jock of Copshaw may have been another son (since he appears to have been Martin of Braidlie’s brother). Robert (16th C.) recorded as ‘Roberto Elwald de Flaswod’ in 1535 in a trial in Jedburgh in 1535, where Robert Scott of Allanhaugh was accused of bringing him and William ‘Mend the caill’ from Liddesdale to plunder cattle at Midlem and elsewhere. His lands could be ‘Flas’ near Westruther, but seems more likely to be ‘Flask Wood’ north of Langholm. Robert (16th C.) recorded as being ‘in Rammisgill’ in the 1541 rental roll for Liddesdale, when he was one of the tenants at Stirkshielhope. Old Robert ‘Elwald de was sone to Robyn of the Redhwych when he held by Lord Maxwell in 1537/8. In 1546/7 he succeeded some time before 1557. He may have appointed as guardian to his children, although his uncle Gavin (later of Stobs) was his brother. He was executed for the murder of David Scott. His uncle Gavin (later of Stobs) was named as Laird at the time, perhaps because he had at least 2 children: Gavin (d.1565), who succeeded; and William (b.1547) who succeeded after his brother. He was executed for the murder of David Scott. His uncle Gavin (later of Stobs) was appointed as guardian to his children, although his half-brother William (later Burgess of Peebles) disputed this, but was deemed too young. Robert of Reidhewgh (d.bef. 1564) 15th Chief of the Elliots, son of Robert, whom he probably succeeded some time before 1557. He may have appeared along with his father at a Judiciary Court held by Lord Maxwell in 1537/8. In 1546/7 he was ‘sone to Robyn of the Redhwych’ when he was among several men entering Elliots as prisoners at Ferniehirst, and in 1548 (referred to as ‘younger of the Reidhewght’) had a similar bon for entering John, son of Robin of Thorlieshope. His ‘eym’ (i.e. uncle) Archibald was also referred to there and he signed with the help of the notary (meaning that he could not write). He had a bond for entering Nixons in 1557 and in that year his brother Martin is also referred to (confusing, since Martin of Braidlie is sometimes placed in the family tree as his uncle). He was ‘of Redhuch’ in about 1557 when he rented Priesthaugh and Penangushope from Melrose Abbey. Around the late 1550s he was one of the men on the panel to resolve the conflict over the lands of Newbigging (in Hassendean) between the children of Gavin Elliot of Horsleyhill. In 1561 he was ‘of Reidheuch’ when listed (along with his Gavin, brother of Archie’s Will) among Border lairds who appeared before the Queen to promise to present the names of those who were guilty of theft; he was called ‘of Redheuch’ when later listed (after Martin ‘of Reiduech’) among men charged by the Privy Council to appear before Queen Mary regarding the state of the Borders. In 1563 he was appointed Deputy Keeper of Hermitage Castle, while the Earl of Bothwell was in exile, with William Douglas of Cavers acting as security for him. He had a bond of 1563, along with Martin of Braidlie (his brother) for entering Jock, son of Gavin Elliot to Sir Thomas Ferniehirst. He married Jean Scott, sister of Buccleuch, around 1550 (and after his death she married Gavin Elliot of Stobs). His children were: Robert of Redheugh; William of Hartsgarth; Gilbert of Stobs, ‘Gibbie wi’ the Golden Garties’ (although this is not certain); Archibald; Gavin of Brugh; and a daughter, who was the 2nd wife of Will, 2nd son of Richard Graham of Netherby. A report on the West Marches compiled in the period 1563–66 states that ‘oulde Robyn Elliot and young Robyn, his son, are both dead’. Robert ‘Reid Hob’ (16th C.) listed in 1569 among the tenants that Gavin Elliot in Skelhill was surety for. It is unclear how he was related to other Elliots. Robert of the Shaws (16th C.) said to have been the Elliot who convinced those who had been rounded up in Hermitage Castle to allow the wounded Earl of Bothwell to enter in 1566, by agreeing to let all of them go. It is said that he was granted the rent of the lands of ‘Blackgrave’ as a reward. It is possible that ‘Shaw’ is the same as ‘Coppshaw’, but is more likely to be the lands of that name on the Hermitage Water. In 1569 he and...

his brother Will of the Steele were excepted from the pledge that John of Thorlieshope had for the whole of that branch of the Elliots. Also in 1569 he was ‘Hob of the Schawis’, listed along with Airchie ‘Fyre the Brais his brother’, when John of Thorlieshope was held in Wester Wemyss Castle as pledge for them. In 1572 he was among the Elliots who signed a bond with John Johnstone of that Ilk for returning John of the Steel (who had been broken out of ward). He is also ‘Hobb Elliott of the Shaves’ when accused in 1590 along with Will of Fiddleton and others of stealing livestock and goods from the Laird of ‘Troghwen’ and Hedley of ‘the Garret sheills’. In 1591 he was part of a group (along with Airchie of the Hill and others) accused of plundering from Jeffrey Taylor and the tenants of Scaleby. Either he or his son was probably the ‘Hob of the Schawis’ who was one of the Liddesdale Elliots to sign bonds with Scott of Buccleuch in 1599. He was probably also related to Adam and Gilbert of the Shaws who are recorded in 1583. Robert ‘Hob’, ‘the Lady’ (16th C.) recorded in 1569 among Elliots of Eseddale. ‘Will Elliot callit the Lord’ was held in Loch Doon Castle as pledge him, as well as John of Fiddleton and Hob of Unthank. Robert ‘Hob’ (16th C.) recorded being ‘callit Hob of Unthank’ in 1569. This was along with Hob ‘the Lady’ and John of Fiddleton, when Will ‘the Lord’ was held in Loch Doon Castle as pledge for them. Robert ‘Hob’ (16th C.) tenant of Gavin of Elliot of Fahnash in 1569. The Laird appeared in Hawick to give surety for his tenants. He may have been related to Will, Dand and Jock, other Elliots also listed as tenants. Robert ‘Hob’, ‘Sweet Milk’, ‘Great Legs’ (16th C.) recorded in 1569 when Andrew Ker of Faldonside had a bond with him. His name appears in the Register of the Privy Council as ‘Hob Elliot callit Sweit Mylk alias Greit Leggis’. It is possible that he was related to William ‘Sweet Milk’, whose death in a duel at Newmill is immortalised in the song ‘Rattlin Roarin Willie’. His second nickname presumably means that he was tall. However, there is no information about how he was related to other Elliots. Robert ‘Martin’s Hob of Prickenhaugh’ (16th C.) son of Martin of Braidlie. He was also sometimes called ‘Hob of Braidlie’. His lands were at Prickinghaugh in Liddesdale. He was one of the band of 300 or so Elliots, Armstrongs and others who plundered Torwoodlee in 1568. He is probably the Robert of Braidlie for whom there was surety before the Privy Council in 1573. He is listed as ‘Hobbie’ in 1580 among a group of Elliots (including his brothers Gavin and Archie, and 3 cousins), who attacked the lands of Harwood (on Teviot), stealing 40 cows and oxen, and then later attacked Slaidhills, Whitlaw and Hoscote; he was declared a rebel after not appearing to answer the charges. He was also implicated in the ambush of Scotts and Gledstains at Whithaugh in 1580. He was ‘Hob’ of Braidlie when sentenced to imprisonment in 1580/1 for several crimes of theft, along with other Elliots, Armstrongs and Nixons. He is probably the ‘Hob Elliott of Braidley’ for whose re-entry in 1581 Martin of Braidlie (presumably his father) and John Turnbull of Minto served as caution; he was pledge for the ‘gang of Gorrumberrie’, and was released from ward in the Castle and Tolbooth of Edinburgh. In 1581 his father complained about how he and his brother Dand had been attacked while riding near Headshaw; Walter Scott of Headshaw and 5 or 6 others attacked them and ‘struckin the hand from the ane and hurt the uther in perrell of his lyff’, although it is unclear whether he or his brother lost his hand. He is listed as ‘Hobbe Elliott’ among a 1583 list of Elliots of Braidlie and was probably also the ‘Robin Elliot of Braidley’ listed among the landed men of the Border in about 1590. He is on a list of Elliots (including his father Martin and brother Airchie) accused in 1590 of raiding the English farm of ‘Wynatlie’ in the previous year. He is probably the Hob listed among Elliots (including his brother Gib, as well as Airchie of Clintwood, who was also his brother) and Armstrogonc complained about in 1590 by a large group of Englishmen for a raid on Blackcleugh in Kirkhaugh, taking many prisoners for ransom. Two of his sons were later denounced as rebels (‘Kirstie’ and one other). In 1611 he was ‘Robert Elliot, called Martenis Hob’ when he was cautioner for ‘Jok Elliot, called the Murt’, for his appearance at court in Jedburgh. He was also one of the cautioners in 1611 for ‘Kirstie Elliot callit Hobis Kirstie’, along with Robert of Redheugh, William of Gorremberg, Archie of Clintwood and William of Prickinghaugh. He may be the same as ‘Robert Elliot, called of Braidlie’ when witness to the document of 1613 infefting Robert of Redheugh in his lands. Robert ‘Hob’ of Heuchhouse (16th C.) listed among Elliots who signed a bond in 1570, promising to give pledges for the release of John of Heuchhouse (who was surely a brother or son) and Hob, son of Elder Will. In 1578/9 he was among 22 Border Lairds who did not appear before the Privy Council when summoned; it was reported that he had previously been surety for John of

In 1579/80 he is recorded along with his brother ‘Reid Mertin’ on a list of men accused of raiding into England. In 1581 he was among a large group denounced as rebels for failing to present men to answer their rievng crimes. He is recorded in an 1583 letter from Musgrave to Burleigh, describing the leaders of the Elliots of Liddesdale. He is described as ‘Hobbe Elliot of the Hewghus’, and listed along with Robert of Redheugh and 3 of the chief’s brothers, so he was presumably closely related. His brother John is also mentioned, and he could be the John of Henschouse who is recorded about the same time. Robert ‘Scot’s Hob’ (16th C.) listed as ‘Scotis Hob’, along with his 2 unnamed sons, in a 1574 list of Scots rebels who were reset in England. In 1578/9 he is ‘Hob Elliot, callit Scotis Hob’ when it was declared by the Privy Council that he was meant to return to prison with William Cunningham of ‘Caprintoun’, with cautioner John Carmichael, younger of that ilk. However, he had not re-entered ward with Cunningham, and hence his cautioner defaulted. He is recorded as ‘Scotes Hobbe’ in 1583 in a list of Elliots of Park. It is unclear whether his nickname meant ‘Scottish’ or that he was perhaps stepson of a Scott, or his father was nicknamed ‘Scott’. It is possible that ‘Hobbie’s Hob’, who is also listed, was his son. Gavin, who was convicted of theft in 1580/1, was probably also his son; he was ‘Scotis Hobbis Gaven’ in 1581. Another son, ‘Scotis Hobbis Jok’ is recorded in 1580, 1581 and 1584. Robert ‘Hob’ of the Park (16th C.) son of James of the Park. There is a pledge for him before the Privy Council in 1573; he was exchanged for John of the Park, who was to be warded with Sir William Scott of Balwearie, and although he had been freed, was ordered to present himself again to be warded. In 1576 there is a complaint that he had been freed from ward with William Porterfield. He is listed in 1578/9 in a re-statement of a promise made to the Privy Council as a ‘plege for the gang thairof’, that he should stay in ward with William Porterfield of Duchall. His sureties were Robert of Redheugh and Martin of Bradlie. However, he was stated to have ‘not remanit bot eschaipit fra the said William Porterfield’. He was listed among those implicated in the ambush of Scotts and Gledstains at Whithaugh in 1580. Also in 1580 he was held in ward by the Earl of Lennox in Dumbarton Castle. In 1581/2 he was declared a rebel after failing to appear to answer charges about farms near Hawick being raided. He was presumably important in the family of Elliots of the Park, and also related to the deceased John of the Park and ‘Symmy’ of the Park, who were also mentioned in the same 1578/9 document. Either the same or a different ‘Hob Elliot of the Park’ was declared a rebel of 1606. Robert ‘Hob’ (16th C.) son of ‘Dand of Braidlie’ and probably grandson of Martin of Bradlie. In 1574 it is recorded that he was to remain in ward. In 1576 the man with whom he had been warded, George Maxwell of Newark, was ordered to appear before the Privy Council to explain why he had been freed. In 1580 he was warded with the Provost and Bailies of Edinburgh, along with John, son of ‘the Elder Tod’. He may be the same as one of the other contemporary Roberts. Robert ‘Hob’ (16th C.) listed among those implicated in the ambush of Scotts and Gledstains at Whithaugh in 1580. His name is given as ‘Hobbe Elliot, callit Kene’. The meaning of the nickname is unclear, but he may have been closely related with ‘Archie Kene’, and must have been a supporter of Lance Armstrong of Whithaugh. Robert ‘Hob’ of Glenvoran (16th C.) recorded as ‘Hobie of Glenvore’ on Sandison’s c.1590 map of the Debatable Lands. His lands were in the upper Ewes valley. Probably the same man was ‘Robine Elliot the Bastarde of Glenvoren’ listed among a large group of Elliots who were accused in 1590 of taking Ralph Hall and others prisoner and ransoming them. Probably the same ‘Robene Elliot of Glenvorane’ was declared a fugitive in 1606. (‘Reid Hob Elliot’) suggests that he had red hair. He is probably also the Robert of Skelfhill who was one of those summoned by the Privy Council in 1575 to settle the feud between the Elliots and Pringles. Robert ‘Hob Billie’ (16th C.) recorded in 1588 when James Dalgleish and Nichol Bryden were convicted of helping him, David Elliot, Armstongrs and others steal cattle from near Edinburgh. He is probably the ‘Hobbe Elliott ‘Hobbe bullie’ listed among Elliots, Armstongrs, Turnbulls, Laidlaws and Croziers, accused in 1590 of rievng from the Laird of ‘Troghwen’ and Hedley of ‘Garret Sheills’; he is also ‘Hobb ‘Bullie’’ when accused of having been in another group who stole from the same farms earlier. Robert ‘Gavin’s Hob’ (16th C.) recorded in 1590 along with other Elliots and Nixons when there was a complaint from the English side of the Border that in 1588 they had stolen in ‘playne dayelight, thir hirdes’ and 24 head of cattle. He is recorded as ‘Gawens Hob Elliot’, but it is unclear who his father Gavin was. Robert (16th C.) recorded as being ‘in Borthuikbra, servant to Wat Scott of Tushelaw’ in 1589 when he refused to restore 2 mares and a horse that had been stolen. He was presumably tenant at Borthwickbrae, but was not obviously related to the later Elliots of Borthwickbrae. Robert (16th C.) recorded as ‘Hob bullie’ in 1589, among a group of Elliots and others complained about for raiding into England. It is unclear what his nickname meant. Robert of Reidheugh (d.c. 1591) 16th Chief of the Elliots, son of Robert. He was a minor when his father died sometime around 1563, and Martin of Braidlie (probably his uncle or perhaps great-uncle) acted as clan chief, while his new stepfather was Gavin Eliott of Stobs and Skelfhill. In 1569 he was ‘Robert Elliot of the Skelfhill’ when he promised to enter as surety in place of his stepfather, if required. He became of age in about 1572 and took over as clan chief. He was recorded as Captain of Hermitage in 1573. Also in that year he was among a large group of Border lairds to sign a bond with the Regent Morton. He signed the ‘Band of Roxburgh’ in 1573. Additionally in 1573 there was a decree by Douglas of Cavers for his removal from the lands of Langside (which he fought against, on the basis that his father and grandfather had held these lands). He was the Robert of Redheugh who signed a bond recognising Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst as Warden of the Middle Marches in the 1570s. He is probably the ‘Young Robin’ recorded ‘for the wrangus spo-liationoum and awaytaking of thair teindis’, along with Gaving of Horsleyhill and William Douglas of Crook, on the 1574 testament of Walter Scott of Buccleuch. Also in 1574 he witnessed a discharge between Douglas of Cavers and Cranston of that Ilk. Additionally in 1574 he served as surety for a number of Borderers with the Privy Council, specifically for the lands of Priesthaugh, Peelbrae, Swinstead and Dodrig; he was found liable for 5000 merks for not removing the thieves and replacing them with ‘trew men’. In 1578/9 he was among 22 Border Lairds who did not appear before the Privy Council when summoned, and was found liable for the fines, because the men he made pledges for had continued their riving activities (in his case, ‘Joke the Gyde’ Elliot and Sim, son of Lancel Armstrong of Whithaugh). In 1579/80 he acted as surety for a group of Elliots and others accused of conducting raids into England; his brother Archie is also named there, and he himself was accused of being part of a raid on Coquet Water. In 1580 he, the Scotts of Buccleuch, Gledstains and others, followed a group of English and Scottish thieves who had raided Meikle Whitlaw; he was wounded in a fray with Armstrongs and Elliots on their return. In 1580/1 he was directed to give up his position as Captain of Hemitage. In 1581 he was allied with Walter Scott of Goldielands and James Gledstains of Cocklaw when they made a set of complaints against Martin of Braidlie, Simon Armstrong of Mangerton and Lance Armstrong of Whithaugh; all were charged to appear before the Privy Council with pledges of assurance from their supporters. Along with Martin of Braidlie and 2 Armstrongs, he was also denounced in 1582/3 by the Privy Council for failing to make redress for the crimes committed by their tenants and servants. He signed a bond of support for the Warden of the Middle Marches, Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst, probably in the early 1580s. He is ‘Robin Elliot, of the Redheugh’ when he complained of an English raider on his lands at the Steele in the 1580s. In a letter of 1583 from Musgrave to Burleigh he is ‘Robin Elliot of the Reddhuighe, cheife of the El-lotes’, along with his brothers William of Harts-garth, Gilbert, Archibald and Gavin, and many other Elliots, including Hob of the Heuchhouse and his brother John, Adam and Gilbert of the Shaws, Archibald ‘Fyre the Braes’ and ‘Richie’s Martin’, as well as Garth Simson, all of whom were said to be his ‘brethren, or his men that are daly at his commandement’. Also in 1583 he was denounced as a rebel for failing to appear to answer the charge brought against him by Robert in Dodrig, that his men had repeatedly attacked the servants there, although he had no legal right to the lands. He was recorded in 1584 as ‘Robeine Elliot’ in a letter from the King and was temporarily imprisoned in Edinburgh Castle, along with Martin of Braidlie and Armstrong of Whithaugh. He was chief of the Elliots (named first, along with Martin of Braidlie and William of Falnash) in their assurance to the English Wardens to keep the peace in 1584, signed at Hermitage Castle. In 1583/4 and 1584/5 he was among the Borderers who were summoned to appear before the Privy Council. In 1590 he was named first on a list of Elliots accused of raiding the English farm of ‘Whynatlie’ in the previous year, stealing 60 cows, 2 horses, taking goods worth £100 and burning 5 houses. In August of 1590 he appeared before the King and Council to answer for some of his men, and this may be the last time he is recorded (he certainly died before June of the following year). He was probably the Laird of Redheugh listed by Monipennie (published around 1594, but Elliot compiled earlier) among Border chiefs, along with Robert (probably his son) and Martin (probably of Braiddie). He married Marion (or Marjorie), daughter of James Hamilton of Sprouston in 1572; through this marriage and its Bothwell connection, he became allied with the side of Mary, Queen of Scots. They had 5 children: Robert of Redheugh; William of the Rig and of Harts-garth, who married Jean Rutherford; a daughter, who married Hector Lorraine of Harwood; Nicola, who married Gerard, brother of Sir Thomas Carleton; and Gilbert, illegitimate (possibly by Helen Kidd). His sons were all minors at the time of his death. He may also be the Elliot of Redheugh who is said to have married a daughter of Thomas Carlton of Carlton Hall. He could have been the ‘Robert Elliot callit Yhoun Robene’ who was recorded in the last testament of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme in 1574, along with William Douglas of Crook and Gavin Elliot of Horsleyhill, as men who owed him for teinds several years earlier; if so, he probably owned (or leased) Penangshope. He may also be the ‘Robin Elliot’ who, along with his brother William, George Simpson and their accomplices were accused of raiding into England in 1582. Robert ‘Clement’s Hob’ (d.bef. 1578) one of the Liddesdale thieves captured in Hawick in October 1567 by the Earl of Moray, in a surprise attack during the Market. He was one of the 10 who were afterwards held in Edinburgh tolbooth, unlike the 18 who were immediately drowned. His father was presumably Clement; although it is also possible that he was the same as the Robert who was nephew of Clement Crozier (and certainly Clement was a prominent name among Croziers and otherwise unknown among Elliots). In 1569 he and Archie Keen escaped from the Castle of Doune and then went on ‘a marauding expedition’; he is there listed as being ‘in Gorumbery’. Also in 1569 he is listed along with ‘Dand of Bradlyde’ when ‘Archie Keene’ was held in Blackness Castle as pledge for them. In 1570 he was one of several Elliots who signed a bond related to the release from ward of John of Heuchhouse and Hob, son of Elder Will. In 1574 he is ‘Hob Elliot callit Clemmettis Hob’ when listed among a list of mostly Croziers who had been ordered to be removed from the lands of Douglas of Cavers; he is listed after Mirk Hob in Penchrise. In 1578/9 there was a reminder at the Privy Council that he had been one of the joint sureties for John of Heuchhouse and Hobbie, son of Elder Will; he is listed as ‘umquhile Hob Elliot, callit Clemmentis Hob’. His son Dand is recorded in 1581. Robert ‘Mirk Hob’ (16th C.) one of the 10 Liddesdale rievers held in Edinburgh tolbooth after being captured in Hawick in 1567. Surely the same man was ‘Hob Mirk Elliot’ in 1569 when John of the Park was held in Balwearie Castle, as pledge for him and ‘Gray Will Elliot’. He is probably the same as ‘Mirk Hob in Peneryse’ recorded in 1574 among a list of Croziers who Douglas of Cavers was supposed to have removed from his lands. His is also ‘Hob Elliot, callit Mirk Hob, in Pencyrse’ recorded in 1576 when several Border Lairds acted as joint sureties for him; they were Sir Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule, Robert Elliot of Redheugh, Gavin Elliot of Fahnash and Walter Scott of Goldielands. He was thus associated with the farm of Penchrise. By 1578/9 he was among many Borderers state to have ‘brokin and contravenit the condition abonespecificit, having committit diverse crymes of thift and resset of thift’; he was thus declared a fugitive. Robert (16th C.) son to ‘Elder Will’, another of the Liddesdale thieves captured in Hawick in 1567. In 1570 there was a charge brought against several Elliots involving him and John of Heuchhouse, complaining that they had been released from Blackness Castle, but their clan had failed to ‘enter the said pledges’ on eight days’ warning; among those who signed the bond was ‘the said Elder Will’, as well as Martin of Braidie. There was a reminder of this pledge in 1578/9, where it was stated that he and John of Heuchhouse had not been imprisoned in the houses of John Cockburn of Ormiston and William Lauder of Haltoun, as pledged. He was probably brother of John, who was convicted of theft in 1580/1. Robert ‘Vicar’s Hob’ (16th C.) one of the outlaws of Liddesdale apprehended in Hawick in 1567, where he is ‘Rob’. In 1574 he was listed among men who had been ordered removed from the lands of Priesthaugh and others by Robert Elliot of Redheugh; he is there ‘Robert Elliott callit the Vicaris Hob’. In 1576 there was a pledge to the Privy Council that he would refrain from thieving; he was recorded there as ‘Hob Elliot, callit the Vicaris Hob’, with cautioners being jointly Sir Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule, Robert Elliot of Redheugh, Gavin Elliot of Fahnash and Walter Scott of Goldielands. He is probably the same ‘Hobie Elliot, called Vicar’s Hobb’ for whom Edward Lorraine of Harwood and John Turnbull of Minto were cautioners in 1589. Robert ‘Hob o Thorlieshope’ (16th C.) one of the Liddesdale thieves captured at Hawick market by the Earl of Moray in 1567; he is recorded as being ‘in Thorlinsope’. In 1569 he was entered before the Regent by Sir Andrew Ker of Hirsel, Gilbert Ker of Primside Loch and Andrew Ker of Faldonside. Probably the same Robert of Thorlshope was appointed as one of the sergeants for the Justiciary Court held by the Keeper of Liddesdale in 1537/8. He is ‘Roberto Elwald officiario’ who was tenant of Thorlshope on the 1541 rental roll for Liddesdale; ‘officiario’ suggests he had an official role in the area. He is ‘Robyn Elwald of Thorlshopp’ listed in 1541 by the English among Scotsmen who reset English rebels; ‘Wilcokes Elwald’ is listed along with him, and so possibly a relative, and he is also listed along with Clem Crozier, who may have been a neighbour. He was also mentioned in 1541 when Airchie, ‘brother and son to Robert Ellwald of Thorlshope’ was listed among Scotsmen responsible for the burning of the corn of William Carnaby at Halton; this suggests that Airchie was his brother and perhaps that their father was also Robert. He is also probably the ‘Robin of Thorlshyop’ whose son John was entered in a bond by James Douglas of Cavers in 1546 and in other bonds with Robert of Redheugh in 1547. In 1546 he had to sign with the help of the notary (meaning that he could not write). He was probably related to (or possibly the same as) the ‘Rob of Thoirlishop’ recorded in about 1594. Robert ‘Will Cock’s Hob’ (16th C.) listed in 1569 as ‘Robert Ellot callit Wilcokis Hob’. He and ‘Gawins Jok in Ramsygill’ were the pledges for whom ‘Ade Ellot callit the Cowdais’ was held in Blackness Castle. It is possible he was the same man as Hob of Thorlshope. His father was probably ‘Will Cock’. Robert ‘Airchie’s Hob’ (16th C.) third son of Archibald of Falnash, he seems to have been a regular supporter of Martin of Braiddie on raids. He was mentioned in 1569 among a number of pledges to exchange for Martin of Braiddie when Martin was warded with the Regent Moray. He is probably the ‘Arches Hobbes’ whose 2 sons were among several Elliots and Nixons complainsd about by the English Warden for the murder of 2 Englishmen during a raid in 1588. Robert ‘Hob’ (16th C.) recorded among Nixons and Elliots complainned about by the English Warden regarding a raid in 1588. His name is recorded as ‘Hobbe Elliot of the Sheale’, but it is unclear where his lands were. He could be the same as Hob of the Staneshiel recorded in 1590 and 1595. Robert ‘Willie’s Hob’ (16th C.) presumably son of William. In 1584 he signed the bond of assurance with the English Wardens, his name appearing along with several Elliots of Ramsiegill, but separately from ‘Hobb Elliot of Ramsegill’ (the leader of this branch). He was recorded in 1587 in a bond by several Elliots, including his brother John, when he was imprisoned, probably for rieving; he had to be entered as ‘hail man and feir’ at Melrose. He was released in 1598, with Adam Tweedie obliged to make good for this theft. He may be the same as one of the contemporary Roberts. Robert ‘Hob’ of Bowholm (d.1595/6) listed as ‘Hob of Bowholmes’ in a list of Borderers made in about the 1580s. He was listed along with ‘Will Colithis Hob’ under the area of ‘Welshaw’. In 1584/5 he was listed as ‘Hobb Bowholmes dwelinge in Tevidale’ along with other Elliots of Heuchhouse; he was singled out as the only member of the Heuchhouse branch that the leaders would not vouch for. He was recorded as ‘Hob Elliott of Bohomes’ in 1587/8 when accused by Sir John Forster of being on a raid on England in 1585, along with many other Elliots, including John of Bowholm. In 1590 he was part of a group of Elliots who were accused of a raid by Thomas Hall of ‘Gersomfeeld’, and also accused of another raid along with Archie (who was probably related). In the same year he is ‘Hob of Behomes’ who was accused of further rieving along with Martin’s Airchie and William ‘Ryddie’. Also in 1590 he was accused along with his brother Dand, as well as ‘Willie’s Airchie’ of Stitchillhill of stealing from Englishman Richard Thurlwall; he was recorded as ‘Robine Elliott Bohomes’. He is ‘Hobb Bohomes’ when accused in 1590 along with Will of Fiddleton and others of stealing livestock and goods from the Laird of ‘Troghwen’ and Hedley of ‘the Garret sheills’. Also in 1590 he was listed along with other Elliots, Croziers and Armstrongs, accused of taking cows and horses from the tenants of Woodhall and Netherhouses in England. He was ‘Hobe Elliott of the Bowholmes’ listed among Scotsmen accused of raids into England in 1595. In 1595/6 he was ‘Hob of Bowholme Scotsman’, servant of William (possibly the William in Hoscote who was delivered as a prisoner to England about this time), when sentenced to death for several crimes in England and ‘taken with the bloody hand’ by the Captain of Harbottle. He was executed at Hexham. Robert ‘Ill Rob’ or ‘Hob’ of Ramsiegill (16th C.) recorded as ‘Yll Hob’ in 1580, when he was held in ward in Edinburgh Castle, with Alexander Erskine as his pledge. He was convicted for theft in 1580/1 along with other Elliots, Armstrongs and Nixons. He was recorded there as ‘Hob Elliot, callit Ill Rob of Ramsigill’. In 1580 he was produced at the Privy Council to prove that he was in ward with Erskine of Gogar. In 1581 Martin of Braidlie, Gavin’s Jock and Robert Kerr of Ancrum were cautioned for his non-appearance, when he was stated at that time to be imprisoned in Edinburgh Castle; his brother ‘Gavin’s Jock’ of Ramsiegill was one of his cautioners. The same group were fined in 1582/3 for his non-appearance, as well as that of Jock’s Will, his brother; he is recorded there as ‘ill Hob of Ramsygill’. In 1584 he signed the bond of assurance with the English Wardens, his name appearing first to speak for his branch, with Archie of the Hill, Rowie of Ramsigill and Will’s Hob also listed. In 1587/8 he is recorded as ‘Hob Elliot of the Ramsygill’ when accused by Sir John Forster of being on a raid on England in 1585, along with many other Elliots. He was also one of the Elliots who entered a bond in 1587 for ‘Willie’s Hob’. Several other Elliots are also mentioned there, in particular ‘Gavin Elliot of Ramsigill’, who must have been a son or brother. He was also ‘Hob Elliot of Ramsigill’ who complained in the 1580s of an English raid upon his lands, stealing livestock and taking prisoners. Probably the same man is ‘yll’ Hobb Elwood’ recorded in 1591 as part of a group of Elliot and others accused of plundering from Jeffrey Taylor and the tenants of Scaleby. He was presumably a son of Jock and probably related to the Robert recorded as ‘in Rammisgill’ in 1541. However, he was probably the ‘Hob Elliot, brother of Gavin’s Hob (probably a transcription error for Jock) of the Ramsygill’ who remained in prison in 1581 for the ‘haill gang of the Burnehedis’ after Jock’s Willie was released; this would make him son of Gavin of Ramsigill. Robert ‘Jamie’s Hob’ (16th C.) listed in 1581 and 1582/3 among the cautioners for Sim’s Rowie of the Park. His name was recorded as ‘Hobbe Elliot, called James Hobbe’, and he was listed along with Rob’s John, Sim’s Archie and others. His father was thus presumably James. He was also listed in 1581 along with other Elliots in a bond of caution entered with John Carmichael (who had been Keeper of Liddesdale), relating to the Elliots of Ramsiegill. He was also part of a second bond in 1581, for the ‘haill gang of Park’. Robert (16th C.) listed among men accused of raiding Harwood on Teviot in 1581/2. His name is given as ‘Rowy Elliot, callit Rowans Hobbe’, which is confusing, although it is later ‘Hobbe Elliot, callit Rowans Hobbe’. His brother Jamie, as well as ‘Rowanes Willis Ritchie’ are listed after him; they were declared rebels after not appearing to answer the charge. Robert ‘Hobbie’ of Burnhead (16th C.) Laird of Burnhead in Liddesdale (and not the one just outside Hawick). In 1584 he was accused of being part of a foray into England. He is perhaps the earliest known resident of Burnhead, and may have had the tower built for him there. In 1587/8 he is recorded as ‘Hob Elliott of the Burnheades called ‘Fydlers Hob’ when accused by Sir John Forster of being on a raid on England in 1585, along with many other Elliots; the reference to ‘Fydlers’ may refer to the nickname of his father. He was ‘Robin Elliot the laird of Borneheades’ in 1589, among a group of Elliots and others complained about for raiding into England. He may have been ‘Hob Elliot called Hob the laerde’ listed among a large group of Elliots who were accused in 1590 of taking Ralph Hall and others prisoner and ransoming them. Additionally in 1590 he was among a group of Elliots, Armstrongs and Croziers, said to be 200 strong, who were accused of raiding the towns of ‘Allentown’ and ‘Linbriggs’, taking 100 cows, 20 horses and 20 prisoners. He was also listed among Elliots, Armstrongs, Turnbulls, Laidlaws and Croziers, accused in 1590 of riev- ing from the Laird of ‘Troghwen’ and Hedley of ‘Garret Sheills’; there he is ‘Hobb Elliot of the Burnheades’. Also in 1590 he was listed along with other Elliots, Croziers and Armstrongs, accused of taking cows and horses from the tenants of Woodhall and Netherhouses in England. He was also ‘Hob Elliott called the laird of Burnheades’ when complained about for another 2 raids into England in 1595, this time along with Elliots of Falnash, as well as ‘Auld Wat’ Scott of Harden, Armstrongs and Hendersons. Additionally in 1596 he was ‘Hobbe Elwood larde of Burnhead’, when it was said that along with Scott of Buccleuch he met secretly with Englishmen, presumably to discuss helping each other with raids. It is unclear how he is related to other local Elliots, such as ‘Bramche of the Burnhead’ also recorded in the 1580s and ‘Gawins Jok’ recorded in the 1590s. It is possible he is the same man as ‘Curst Hobbie’. Robert ‘Curst Hobbie’ (16th C.) recorded in 1583 (in a letter from the English wardens) among the Elliots of Burnhead. It is possible he is the same man as Hobbie of Burnhead, recorded a year later. He is probably related to other Elliots of Burnhead, as well as Elliots of Ramsiegill and of the Hill. Robert ‘Rob o Thoirlishop’ (16th C.) mentioned in Monipennie’s list of Border chiefs, published around 1594 (put probably compiled earlier). ‘Arthuir fyre the Brays’ is listed beside him. He must have been related to the earlier ‘Hob’ of the same place,

Elliot

The son of Robert of Unthank who is listed in a pedigree of the Elliots of Thorlshope (in the Berwickshire Naturalists' Club transactions of 1889); he was known as 'Bony Hob', warded in Lochdun in 1569 and died unmarried (although that could be the earlier Hob of Thorlshope). In 1584 he, 'Fire the Brae' and one other 'assure for the hole branch comenge of the howse of Thorlsope'. He was recorded as 'Hob of Thorlesopp' in 1590 among Elliots of the Steele, the Park, Binks, and others, when accused of raiding into England. Additionally, along with Martin's Gib and 'Adie's John' Crozier, he was accused of stealing from William Henderson of 'Fallofeld' in 1590. In another case in 1590 he was 'Robin Elliot of Thorlesop' when listed among Elliots, Nixons, Shiels and others accused of stealing from the tenants of Woodhall in England. He was listed in 1595 as 'the officer alias the laird of Thorslesop' among Elliots complained about by the Lord of Gilsland for a raid into England; the 'officer' designation suggests that he inherited the position of sergeant of Liddesdale from the earlier Robert of Thorlshope. In a complaint about another raid in 1595 'young Robyn Elliot of Thorsosop' was probably his son. There was a complaint against him (along with a Nixon and 2 Armstrongs) by the English in 1597; but Scott of Buccleuch stated that he was already in Hexham Jail.

Robert (16th C.) tenant in Dodrig, son of Archibald. In 1583 it was stated that he and his father were 'kindlie tennentis' of 'thrie quarteris of the landis of Dodrig, pertening to the chaiplanrie of the paroche kirk of Caveris' for 36 years previously, and had built a house there. This may have been the pele-house whose remains are on the east side of Gray Coat. He complained to the Privy Council that his servants there were attacked by Robert of Redheugh's men on several occasions, trying to dispossess him of the lands.

Robert of Redheugh was denounced as a rebel for not appearing to answer the charge. Robert (d.1592) 6th Laird of Horsleyhill, eldest son of William, the 5th Laird. He is recorded in 1564 when he was granted all of his father's property. In 1581 he is listed along with many Armstrongs and Elliots who complained to the Privy Council about the actions of the Scotts. In 1582 he took legal action against Dame Isobel Ker, Widow of Sir Walter Ker of Cessford, for the delivery of his father's charters, specifically for Horsleyhill, 'Dowiswood', Westerhouses (called Little Hassendean), Newgibbing (called the Middle Mains of Hassendean), Caveling, Monkscroft and Hassendean. However, the order to deliver these seems never to have been followed, since he died without formally being served heir to these lands. He also had a dispute with Robert Scott of Hassendean over a merk land in 'Dowiswood'; his widow Agnes Scott was served with the letter of removal in late 1592. It is unclear to which branch of the Scotts she belonged, but there may have been a connection with Haining (given that their son William was later a retainer of Robert Scott of Haining). He married Agnes Scott, and their children included: Robert, who pre-deceased him; William, who succeeded and sold Horsleyhill to Gilbert Elliott of Stobs; another Robert, who married an illegitimate daughter of Scott of Harden, and from whom the Elliots of Borthwickbrae are descended; and one more son, from whom the Elliots of Selkirk and Newhall probably derive (probably father of James, Burgess of Selkirk in 1635). The existence of these last 2 sons is suggested by Scott of Satchells, but no direct evidence has been uncovered.

Robert, the Tailor (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1590 among a large number of Elliots and others who were accused by Ralph Hall of 'Gersomfeeld' and others for taking Ralph and other prisoners, then ransoming them. His name was recorded as 'Robine Elliot called the Taillour'. Also in 1590 he was 'Hobie the taylor' when accused along with James of the Hill, Anthony of the Binks, James 'Half Lug' and 60 others, of raiding 'Windgates', taking more than 100 cows and 4 horses, slaying George Hume, leaving 6 or 7 men near death and robbing 5 houses. There was an Armstrong of the same name at that time, and it is possible there was confusion and they are the same man (although whether an Armstrong or an Elliot would then be unclear). Robert 'Hob of the Leyes' (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1591 in a group of Elliots of the Hill and others accused of plundering from Jeffrey Taylor and the tenants of Scaleby. He is recorded in 1595 among Elliots complained about by the Lord of Gilsland for 2 raids into England. He was also 'alias the troche', although it is unclear what this nickname may have referred to (perhaps a trough). He may have been related to some of the others named, n 1595 e.g. Robert of Thorlshope, Rich 'of the Lewlandes' or William, son of John of Heuchhouse. Robert 'Hob of Staneshiel (16th/17th C.) part of a group of Elliots who were accused of a raid by Thomas Hall of 'Gersomfeeld' and the tenants of 'Dortres' in 1590. Hob Elliot of Staneshiel, John of Heuchhouse and Davie 'the Carlin’ were also named in the same accusation. He was further accused in 1590 by William Hall of ‘Gersomfield’ of rieving at ‘Steward sheile’, along with Quentin’s Airchie Crozier and others. He was also recorded in 1595 among men complained about by the Lord of Gilsland for raids into England. His name is recorded as ‘Hob Elliott of the Stanesheale alias bane pryck’. He probably lived at Staneshiel in Liddesdale, and the meaning of his nickname is unclear (but probably not complimentary). Robert ‘Hob’ (16th/17th C.) listed in 1595 among Scotsmen accused of raiding into England. His name was recorded as ‘Hob Elliott alias kyll of the spade’, although it is unclear what his nickname meant. He was listed along with John of Burnhead, who may have been related. Robert (16th/17th C.) younger son of Robert, 6th Laird of Horsleyhill and Agnes Scott. According to Scott of Satchells (who confusingly refers to him as William) he became a servant to Scott of Harden (presumably ‘Auld Wat’) and married Scott’s illegitimate daughter (whose name is not recorded). He was recorded as a servant to Scott of Harden in a bond dated 1620. He is the progenitor of the Elliots of Borthwickbrae, Oakwood Mill and Wolfelee. His only known child was Robert, who was ‘in Borthwickshiels’. Robert ‘Hob’ (16th/17th C.) son of Jock of Burngrains. He was listed (along with this brother Will) among men declared as fugitives for not appearing at a court in Hawick in 1605.

Robert (16th/17th C.) recorded as ‘in Langraw’ in 1610 when he was part of an inquest for lands in Rulewater. Robert (16th/17th C.) recorded as being ‘in Gledstaines’ in 1610 when he denounced his possession of this part of Feu-Rule when he was not accepted as a ‘kindly tenant’ by his superior, Sir Andrew Ker of Oxnam. This could have been the land later called ‘Little Gledstains’.

Robert of Dinlabyre (b.c.1580) son of William of Braidlie and Dinlabyre. In 1599 he witnessed the bonds (signed at Branxholme) between Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch and the Armstrongs and Elliots of Liddesdale. In 1600 he was said to be about 20 years old when there was a plan to substitute him for his father as a hostage in England. In 1611 he was denounced as a rebel, along with his brother Gavin and several other Elliots and Armstrongs, for hunting illegally, as well as destroying woods etc.; his name is transcribed there as being ‘of Drumlybyre’. He is recorded as ‘Robene Ellote of Dunlabyre’ in 1612 when he failed to appear to serve on the jury for the case of Jock Elliot dying while in custody in Hawick.

In 1613 the King granted him all the lands forfeited by his father in 1607. In 1623 he served as cauhtioner for Robbie Armstrong in ‘Greinay’ and his brother John. Probably the same ‘Robert Elliot of Dinlabyre’ is recorded in 1632 in a rental roll of Kelso Abbey when he possessed the lands of ‘Hoillis’ in Liddesdale, as well as Dinlabyre. His sons probably included William of Dinlabyre (d.bef. 1693) and John in Unthank. Robert of Copshaw (16th/17th C.) listed in 1612 among Elliots and Armstrongs denounced as rebels for hunting illegally, as well as destroying woods etc. His brother Francis was also listed. He was also recorded among those fined in 1612 for failing to appear to sit on the jury when the Hawick authorities were accused of the murder of a man who died in the steeple of St. Mary’s. His brother Francis was also listed. Robert (d.bef. 1637) eldest son of William of Rig and Jean Rutherford, heiress of Stobs. He was served heir to his mother in 1621 and was in turn succeeded by his brother Francis. Robert ‘Hob’ (16th/17th C.) recorded being called ‘Ladd, in Qhuthauch’ in 1623 when he appeared before the Commissioners’ Court in Jedburgh. Robert (16th/17th C.) son of Robert and a daughter of Scott of Harden, he was grandson of Robert, the 6th Laird of Horsleyhill and brother of William, the last Elliot Laird there. He is referred to as being ‘in Borthwickshiels’, and so must have been tenant of that farm. He married a Haitlie from Mellerstain and had 2 children: Thomas (d.1686), who succeeded him; and William (1617-85), who became minister in Yarrow. He is recorded in a list of ‘communicants’ of the Borthwick valley in 1650, with his wife being ‘Euphemia Hastie’ and their son Thomas also listed.

Robert ‘Hab’ (17th C.) possessor of the lands of ‘Baggat’ (i.e. Bygate) in Liddesdale in 1632. He could be the same as one of the contemporary Roberts. Robert of Fahnash (d.1645), J.P., son of William, he was a Justice of the Peace in Roxburghshire. He was recorded along with his father (and more than 170 others) in a ‘respite’ of 1594 to Sir James Johnstone and his followers for the killing of Lord Maxwell at Dryfe Sands. In 1595 he was listed among Elliots and others accused by the Lord of Gilsland for raids into England; he was explicitly listed with ‘Auld Wat’ Scott of Harden, as well as his brother Archibald and uncle Gilbert. In 1598 he was recorded as son of William of Fahnash when he was witness to a document for the Regality of Melrose. He is probably the Robert ‘younger of Fallinesche’ who was cauhtioner for Gavin Elliot of Fiddleton in 1606. In 1610 he was cautioner for James Irving of Cleuchhead and in 1611 for Gavin ‘of Coklek’. In 1618 his father is referred to as ‘William called of Falnash in Braidley’, suggesting Falnash had already been passed to him. He rebuilt the house at Falnash around 1620, probably replacing the tower with a farmhouse; a stone built into the present house carries the date 1620 and the initials ‘R.E.’ and ‘M.S.’. The family also owned land in Wilton Parish. In 1623 he sold Arkleton to Adam Cunningham, the reason not being known, but Scott of Satchells wrote ‘By Maxwell’s rage out of their hands it got, And was possess’d by Cunninghame and Scot’. In 1624 he purchased Hislop and Langhaugh in the Barony of Hawick. In 1627 he was one of 9 men charged with performing a valuation of the lands in the Parish of Hawick. He was listed in 1628 among the major landowners who met to elect M.Ps. for Roxburghshire. Also in 1628 he had a crown charter for the lands of Philhope and the wardship of Grizzell Elliot, heiress of Philhope (to whom he would marry his son John). He was appointed a Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire in 1634. He married Marion Scott (from an unknown branch of the Scotts, but perhaps the Scotts of Harden). They had 7 children: William, who married a Maxwell of Cowhill, but died before his father; Archibald, who succeeded; John, who married Grizel Elliot of Philhope and held the lands of Broadlee; Gavin of Caerlenrig, who married Janet Elliot and was father of Ninian; Gilbert, who became a merchant’s apprentice in Edinburgh in 1637; Robert, who also became a merchant’s apprentice in 1646; and Jean, who married Adam Carleill of Byrdkirk. Robert (d.1663) 4th son of William of the Binks and brother of Simon. He was called ‘of the Binks’. In 1630 he was charged as ‘ane commoun and notorious theefe’ and fled to Flanders. It is described in the Register of the Privy Seal that ‘he is returned again and hes begun his old accustomed trade of theft’, stealing 6 cattle from Englishman Sir Arthur Gray. He was convicted of theft and tried in Jedburgh, but the Provost there released him on a bond whereupon he fled. In 1631 he turned up in Carlisle jail, from where the Sheriff of Roxburghshire requested his transfer. He had a son called Simon, who was a minor when he died. Robert ‘Hob’ (17th C.) recorded as being ‘called ofThorbishop’ (presumably Thorlieshope) in a 1642 list of many Borderers who were to be captured and tried for theft and other crimes. In about 1648 he was recorded as Robert ‘of Thorlishoppe’ on a list of ‘mostroopers’ (i.e. thieves). He may be the ‘young Robyn Elliott of Thorlesop’ recorded in 1595. Robert (17th C.) younger son of Robert of Falnash. In 1646 he was apprenticed to Edinburgh merchant Archibald Graham. apprenticed to John Nichol, merchant in Edinburgh. Robert (17th C.) listed as a fugitive in 1637. He was also recorded as ‘sone to Hobbeis Chrystie’ listed among fugitives of the Border in 1642. It may be that he was listed twice, since Robert ‘called Chrysteis Hob’ also appears. He was probably son of the Christopher who was son of Robert of Braidlie; he was thus a great-grandson of Martin of Braidlie. Robert (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Isobel Henderson and their children included: John (b.1646); William (b.1650); Bessie (b.1652); and Janet (b.1655). Robert of Black Tarras (d.bef. 1665) 2nd son of Simon of the Binks and younger brother of the William, Laird of Harwood. He was granted the lands of Black Tarras by his father. After the Restoration both he and his brother William were fined £1,200 for supporting the Commonwealth. In 1652 he married Margaret, eldest daughter of William Riddell ‘portioner’ of Bewlie. In his wedding contract he is described as ‘in Sauchetrie’ and was infefted in the lands of Black Tarras. His children were: Simon of Black Tarras; Francis; and William of Cooms (d.1714), who married Helen Elliot of Thorlieshope. He was still alive in 1663, when referred to as ‘of Ludgegill indweller in Sauchtrees, Liddesdale’. By 1665 his wife was a widow. Robert of Reidheugh and Larriston (c.1583-c.1644) 17th Chief of the Elliots, son of Robert. He was the last of the Elliots of Redheugh in the direct male line. He was still a minor when his father died, with his guardian being his uncle William of Hartsghart and when he was 14 the additional trustees appointed were William of Falnash, John of Copshaw and his mother’s brothers, John and Andrew Hamilton of St. John’s Chapel. At the time when Francis, Earl of Bothwell forfeited his lands, he was in possession of Redheugh, Over and Nether Larriston, Hartsghart, Leaafald, Corrie’s Shiel, Langhaugh, Leaughaugh and Demainholm. He is probably the Robert who was the first Elliot name signed on the bond written by Sir John Forster to try to end family feuds on the Border in 1595/6. In 1597 he (along with William of Hartsghart and John of Copshaw) wrote from Larriston to the English Warden, explaining that they had sworn to the Scott of Buccleuch that they would not have dealings with any Englishmen, and furthermore they offered security for the actions of their followers. In 1599 he, along with Martin Elliot (son of ‘Mertin’s Sym’), made an agreement to settle their differences with Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme. They also promised to the Warden (Sir Walter Scott) to be responsible for the inhabitants of Liddesdale. Additionally in 1599 he was one of the leading Elliots and Armstrongs to write to Lord Scrope to get their family hostages freed from England. There was also a pledge made in his name (and others) in 1599 following the murder of several Englishmen (who had been waiting in hiding to ambush the Scots) near Bewcastle. In about 1600 he was ordered to pay £ for theft of horses by Will of Fiddleton. In 1600 he was among leaders from the Borders who were ordered to attend a meeting at Falkland to discuss ‘the present disordouris of the Bourdours’. He escaped the convictions and executions that came down on the men of Liddesdale around 1606; it is said that this may have been due to the influence of his brother-in-law John Murray of Lochmaben. In 1607 he brought an action against George Henderson, tenant of Winnington, accusing him of cutting down trees on his land at Birkwood. In 1608 he and (14 other lairds) were removed from their lands by the Privy Council for being ‘ringleaders suspected either of their bygone conversation or for their present disordered courses’; he was sent along with Walter Scott of Goldielands to Cupar in Fife. In 1608 he was charged by Scott of Buccleuch to remove from all lands in Liddesdale, but this was not followed through with; however, there was a decreet of removal in 1612, after the death of the old Laird of Buccleuch. He was then denounced as a rebel, but through the influence of his brother-in-law John Murray he obtained a new agreement with Buccleuch over these lands in 1613; this included Over and Nether Larriston, Redheugh, Blackhope, ‘Greenholles’, Hartsagarth, Langhaugh, Leathaugh, ‘Carriescheill’ and ‘Dowmane’. In 1615 Buccleuch accused him of adding the names of 3 properties to the charter, and he went to London to plead with Scott of Buccleuch. A court case was started in 1617, and he was unable to produce the charter, which led to a further order of removal. However, Robert was served heir to his father in 1619, presumably part of the ongoing legal proceedings. His main dwelling around that time was at Demainholm. There were also attempts to remove his tenants; William Scott of Newark complained that his tenants at Foulshiels were harried by a group of Elliots. Over the next few years he failed to collect any rent on his lands, incurred debts and many of the old Elliot lands in Teviotdale were lost. In 1622 he and his brother William sold the lands of Winnington Rig to Gilbert Elliot of Stobs. In 1622 and 1623 he served as cautions for Rowie Crozier from Hartsagarth. He was probably the ‘Robert Elliot of Reidheuch, in Larestoun’ who was removed as a tenant of Scott of Buccleuch in 1624. His brother-in-law John Murray (Earl of Annandale) apologised to Scott of of Buccleuch in 1624 for a dispute over lands with Buccleuch and for stealing from Englishmen. Also in 1624 he was accused of conspiring to murder the Earl of Buccleuch, the 3 would-be assassins (all Elliots) apparently confessing their part. He was at that time prisoner in Edinburgh Tolbooth related to debts. He was also accused of being involved in stealing cattle from Cuthbert Heron, an Englishman; he seems to have escaped punishment, although his servant Adam Usher was hung for that crime. Despite being induced to confess to the crimes, pleas by Francis Hamilton and the Earl of Annandale resulted in Scott of Buccleuch asking for the trial to be postponed. Within a short period of the King’s death in 1625 he received a pardon for the theft and other crimes, although it is unclear when he was released from confinement. His wife petitioned the Privy Council because of poverty during his imprisonment. It seems that when his daughter and heiress was married in 1637 he still held his Liddesdale lands, including the 3 farms that had been in dispute, namely ‘Blaikhope’, ‘Greenholis’ and Langhaugh. He married first a sister of John Murray (later Earl of Annandale) and secondly (after 1618) Lady Jean Stewart, daughter of Francis, Earl of Bothwell and Lady Margaret Douglas, widow of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch. He had no children with his first wife, and with his second had no sons, but 2 daughters: Margaret, (or Mary) his heir, who in 1637 married James Elliott (6th son of Gilbert of Stobs); and Esther (d.1664), who married Alexander Clerk, Minister of Letherton, and died in Inverness. He gave all his lands to his daughter Margaret and her husband James, except Leathaugh, Greenholm and Gullyflat, which were given to Esther and her husband, and he retained Larriston, Blakemore and Greenholm ‘in liferent’ for himself. The year of his death is quite uncertain, but he probably died in the period 1666–73, with his estate heavily encumbered by debt. Robert of Braidlie (17th C.) nephew of Simon in Philhope. In 1653 he was served heir to Braidlie. Robert (b.c.1645) younger son of Archibald of Falnash, he was christened in Hawick. Robert (17th C.) referred to as ‘Robert Elliot, called of the Maynes’ in 1659 when he witnessed a document relating to lands of Hobkirk Parish for William Elliot of Harwood. Robert of Larriston (d.bef.1695) eldest son of James Elliot, and Margaret, heiress of Redheugh. He was thus a grandson of the last Elliot of Redheugh as well as being grandson of ‘Gibbie wi the Gowden Garters’ of Stobs. He took the ‘Elliot’ spelling after inheriting the Liddesdale lands through his mother. He was probably the Robert of Larriston whose lands in Castleton Parish were valued at £1334 in 1643. He may have been the ‘younger of Laristoune’ who was an executor for William Elliot of Binks in the 1660s and when appointed Justice of the Peace in 1663. He was recorded paying the land tax (on £1334) in 1663. In 1672 he was appointed one of the Justiciars for the Borders (for apprehending mosstroopers). He was served heir to his grandfather Robert of Redheugh in 1673, inheriting these lands through his mother. However, the Teviotdale lands had already been sold off and the Liddesdale lands were heavily encumbered by debt. Hence in 1675 he was forced to put Over and Nether Larriston, Redheugh, Blackhope and Greenholm into ‘wadsett’ with John Elliot of Thorlieshope and in 1677 sold outright the land of Demainholm to John Elliot ‘in Mainholm’. In 1678 he still paid the land tax on £1934 in Casteret Parish. In 1685 he was a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire. In 1692 he had a ‘precept of clare constat’ from the Commissioners of the Duchess of Buccleuch as heir to all the lands of his grandfather, Robert of Redheugh. About 1688 he was forced to sell most of his lands after getting into financial difficulties, his creditors obtaining a ‘decree of adjudication’. He managed to hold onto Over and Nether Larriston only. In 1667 he married Elizabeth, eldest daughter of John Maxwell of Cowhill, Dumfriesshire, and she had one son with him, but died before 1675. He later married Janet, 2nd daughter of Scott of Todrig (probably Thomsa). His children were: Robert, who succeeded to Larriston; Gilbert of Nethermill, who was a merchant in Hawick; William, who was apprenticed to a barber in 1699; and Janet, who married Robert Gledstains of that Ilk and secondly John Scott of Gorrenberry. His testament is recorded in 1688, but he may have died after that. Robert (17th C.) recorded in 1678 as owner of part of Raperlaw called ‘Wyliespeel’, or Willie’s Peel. This was valued at £104, and corresponded to William Turnbull’s lands in Raperlaw in 1643. In another version of the the 1678 records he is transcribed as ‘Richard’ and ‘in williespeil’. He may be the same as one of the other Roberts. Robert (17th C.) recorded as ‘in Blackhall’ in 1680 when he was indicted at the Justiciary Commission in Jedburgh for ‘reset of theft’. He probably lived in Ewesdale. Robert (17th C.) recorded as ‘in Stobs’ in 1684 when he was on a long list of men declared as fugitives for refusing to conform to Episcopalianism. Robert (17th C.) tenant in Giddenscleuch in 1694 according to the Hearth Tax rolls. Robert (17th C.) miller at Hummelknowe Mill on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He is surely related to the slightly later Robert. Robert (17th C.) tenant in Stitchellhill in Castleton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. Robert of Caerlenrig (1655–98) 2nd son of Gavin. He paid tax on 2 hearths at Caerlenrig in 1694, and ‘his herd’ is also listed. He married Mary Elliot, who died in 1727, aged 80. He may have first married Agnes Langlands (who was probably sister of his brother Francis of Fenwick’s wife Rachel Langlands). His sons were Robert (b.1690s) of Caerlenrig and John. He also had a daughter, Margaret, who married John Elliot of Castlehope and Bilhope. His testament is recorded in 1699, when he was ‘of Carlenrickrig’. He is buried at Teviothead. Robert 2nd Laird of Midlem Mill (d.bef.1725) elder son of Gavin Elliott of Midlem Mill and Grange, and probably grandson of ‘Gibbie wi the Gowden Gairters’. His father settled the lands of Midlem Mill on him in 1653. He paid the land tax on £36 in Cavers Parish in 1678; it is unclear what lands these were, but they were owned by the Duke of Buccleuch by the late 18th century and listed in Castleton Parish in 1788. Also in 1678 he also paid tax on about £400 for Midlem Mill and other lands in Bowden Parish. He was a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire in 1685 and 1690, and it appears that he acted as factor to Elliot of Minto. He is recorded in 1693 as witness to a bond between Elliot of Harwood and Henry Douglas, writer in Edinburgh. In 1694 he was cautioner to a bond between Henry Elliot of Harwood and John Kerr of Cavers. He also witnessed a disposition between Gilbert Elliott of Stanedge and Henry Elliot of Harwood, as well as other bonds for the Elliots of Harwood about the same time. He was described as ‘sheriff in that part of the sherrif-dom of Roxburgh’ in 1694. He contributed £200 to the Darien Company in 1695. In 1695 he acquired the lands of ‘Clarelaw, called Langsyde' and North Prieston, which he bought from John Elliot of Langsyde. He added Whitmuir in 1702. He may have acted as factor for Gideon Scott of Highchester in the period 1695–99. In 1700 he was one of the Roxburghshire heritors who petitioned Parliament. He was witness to the marriage contract between William Elliot of Harwood and Jean Scott of Todrig in 1700. He also had a ‘tack’ for the lands of Stanedge the discharge of which is recorded in 1700. He was factor for his younger brother Sir Gilbert of Headshaw (and Minto) from 1706; it is said that when he was introduced as the brother of Sir Gilbert, he would say ‘na, na, Gibbie’s my brother’. He rented Easter and Wester Hassendeans from the Duke of Buccleuch in 1720. He married Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Henry Elliot of Harwood in 1678 and had 9 children: Gilbert (d.1709); Robert (d.1753), who succeeded to Midlem Mill; Margaret (c.1680–1768), who married Henry Elliot of Lodgellig; Marion, who married Andrew Haliburton of Newmains; Anny, who married Robert Paterson of Drygrange; Elizabeth, who married lawyer John Gibson and possibly another Paterson of Drygrange; Helen (or ‘Nelly’), who married William Elliot of Wolfelee; Magdalen (1694/4–1773), who married John Pasley of Craig; and a ‘natural daughter’ Elizabeth, who married Richard Paterson, portioner of Midlem. Robert of Penchrise (17th C.) involved in a court case in the 1690s. Along with William of Lymiecleuch he failed to pay a bond due to John Riddell of Haining; when they failed to show up in court the farms went to their guarantor, Sir Gilbert Elliot of Stobs. Robert (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was married to Marion Culbertson and in 1694 their son Robert was baptised. The witnesses were Robert Storie and Robert Halliwell and this was one of the earliest entries in the existing records for Wilton Parish. Robert (17th/18th C.) probably resident at Acreknowe. He married Mary Hislop in Cavers Parish in 1703. He is likely to be the father of William, born to a Robert in Cavers in 1706. Robert (17th/18th C.) married Bessie Brydon in Hawick in 1706. He was probably the Robert whose daughter Bessie was born in Wilton in 1709. Robert of Larriston (17th/18th C.) eldest son of Robert. His father had sold the family’s lands in 1688 after being declared bankrupt. In 1689 his grandfather, John Maxwell of Cowhill, gave him the lands of ‘Cullshangan’ in the Parish of Crossmichael and the half merkland of Kirkland of Kirkpatrick Irongray. His grandmother further reduced her dower rights, and with this help from his grandparents he was able to in 1695 to buy back (or perhaps redeem the ‘wadsett’ on) the lands of Over and Nether Larriston (including the mill, mill lands and Larriston Rig) from Christopher Irving of Binks. In 1696 he reinstated his grandmother’s 500 merks dower rights from the rents of Larriston. However, after his grandmother died in 1697 he gave a wadsett for the lands of Larriston Rig and Hopehead to John of Thorliveshope and his son John. He formally succeeded his father as heir of the Elliots of Redheugh and Larriston in 1712. However, he continued to have financial difficulties and in 1719 he sold outright the last of the family’s local possessions to John Oliver of Dinlabyre, these being Over and Nether Larriston and Larriston Rig. He then moved to Newcastle, but later returned to Liddesdale, taking up residence in a cottage on the farm of Redheugh, where he died. He married Mary Applebie (or Appleby), and possibly had a 2nd wife. His children included: Robert (d.1752), a clerk in London, who died unmarried; James, farmer at Whittalow, who died unmarried; Jean; another daughter, probably Helen (‘Nelly’), who married Walter Amos, joiner; and a ‘natural daughter’ Elizabeth, who married Richard Paterson, portioner of Midlem. Robert of Penchrise (17th/18th C.) eldest son of William of Dinlabyre. He was recorded as ‘younger’ in 1697 when he married Helen, eldest daughter of Arthur Forrester of Kingfield. In about 1698 he sold Dinlabyre to John Oliver. Nothing else is known about him. Robert (1665/6–1757) resident of Castleton Parish. He was married to Jean ‘Ruan’, who died in 1743, aged 73. Their children included William, merchant in Castleton, who died in 1741. They are buried at Castleton. William, son of John and Hannah Grieve, is also mentioned on the gravestone, and so presumably related. Robert (17th/18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. He witnessed a baptism in 1705. Robert (17th/18th C.) farmer in Powisholm. In 1707 he was ‘taken upon tryall as precenter’ in Castleton Parish. Robert (17th/18th C.) married Jean Elliot in Wilton Parish in 1710. Their children, born in Hawick Parish, included: Mary (b.1712); Jean (b.1717); Anna (b.1719); and Margaret (b.1720). Robert of Teindside (17th/18th C.) younger son of Simon of Swinside. He was sometimes referred to as ‘of Tyneside’, although his lands were certainly Teindside in Teviotdale and not in England. His brother Gideon owned Harwood-on-Teviot and in 1724 he sold Teindside to Gideon, In 1718 he married Jean, daughter of Rev. John Simpson of Morebattle. Robert (17th/18th C.) resident at Hummelknowes, where his children were born. They were: James (b.1720); William (b.1732); Robert (b.1735); and Isabel (b.1737). He may be the Robert who married Jane Elliot in 1717 or the Robert who married Margaret Douglas in Cavers and Kirkton in 1719. Robert (17th/18th C.) resident at Ormiston in Cavers Parish. His children included: John (b.1727); and Bessie (b.1729). Robert (d.1752) son of the last Robert of Larriston. His brother James farmed at Whitlaw, and his sister (or perhaps other near relative) Helen married Walter Amos, joiner in Rulewater. He went to London in 1712 was a clerk in the office of Sir John Bernard. He became a senior clerk in the Pay Office, Great Court Yard, St. James's, London. He lived in the Parish of St. Peters, Cornhill, London. He loaned money to the Elliots of Stobs (his distant relations). He died unmarried. He left some silver plate, gold rings, snuff-boxes and a portrait of Lord Heathfield. Robert 3rd Laird of Midlem Mill (d.1753), oldest surviving son of Robert, 2nd Laird. He was Chamberlain to the Duke of Buccleuch for Eskdale from about 1723–27 (although complaints about his conduct are recorded in letters of the 1740s), with Robert Scott of Burnhead taking over in 1728. In 1728 he took over as Chamberlain for Teviotdalehead from Gideon Scott of Falnash, serving until 1741. During this period he lived at Langholm Castle, Broadhaugh and Branxholme. He must also have lived at Midlem Mill for some of that period and remodelled the house, since a stone built into the mill is inscribed 'R.E. 1730 K.E.' In 1734 there was a formal inquiry by the Bailies and Council 'how he came to take down the Bailies' seat in the kirk and by whose allowance', suggesting some disagreement over the authority of the Patron versus the Burgh. In 1735 he rented part of the farm of Branxholme Mains. He was one of the local lairds asked to decide on the position of the new Teviot Bridge in Hawick in 1739. In 1740 a baptism in Hawick was witnessed by 'Gardiner to Midlamil at Branxome', showing that he was living at Branxholme at that time. He leased the farms of Priesthaugh and Peelbrae from the Buccleuch Estates in 1741. He paid the window tax in Bowden Parish in 1748 (and his widow paid in 1753). In 1719 in Wilton Parish he married Katherine (b.c.1701), only child of Adam Elliot of 'Tyndeside' (i.e. Teindside) and granddaughter of Walter Elliot of Arkleton. They had 14 children: Robert (b.1719), who must have died young; Elizabeth (b.1721), who married Simon Haliburton of Howcleuch, minister at Castleton and Ashkirk; Anny and Margaret (b.1722), who were unmarried and lived at Lichfield Street in London; Gilbert (b.1724), died in infancy and buried in Ewes Kirkyard; Gavin (b.1727), 4th and last Laird of Midlem Mill, selling the estate to Prof. George Stewart and moving to London; Henry (b.1729); Robert (b.1730), in the Royal Navy; Andrew (d.1779), a Major in the Marines, who died in Rhode Island, U.S.A.; Adam (d.1752) a baker who died in Lisbon; Maisy, who lived in Berwick with her mother; Helen (d.1795), who married James Wilkie, merchant in Marseilles; Jean (b.1738), who was christened in Hawick and lived with her mother in Berwick; and another child who died young. He is buried at Bowden. When he died the estate was in debt and was sold off 3 years later by his trustees. His widow and unmarried daughters then moved to Berwick. Robert (17th/18th C.) miller of Hawick Mill. He was listed as ‘Tacksman of the Mill and Lands of Hawick’ in the baptism records of some of his children. He married Jean Scott and their children included: Rachel (b.1718); Jean (b.1722); Margaret (b.1724); Beatrix (b.1727); and Janet (b.1728). He was probably son of Walter, who was listed as miller in the 1710s. He was also described as ‘tacksman of mill and lands of Hawick’ in 1722 when he rented Ginglewells and Dinlees (on the Hermitage Water) from the Buccleuch estates. He was probably the Robert listed as ‘Tacksman’ in 1725 when he witnessed a baptism in Hawick for William Tudhope. Robert ‘of Carlenrickig’ or ‘Rig’ (1694–1777), eldest son of Robert of Caerlenrig, his mother probably being Agnes Langlands. The dates of his birth and death are given elsewhere as (1697–1767), but those on the tombstone in Teviothead are probably correct. Due to ‘embarrassed circumstances’ he was forced to sell Caerlenrig and then farmed at Wintertonrig. He is among the subscribers to the reprinted Buchanan’s ‘History of Scotland’ (1752), being listed at ‘Winterton-bridge’. In 1721 he married Christian (b.1697–1767), daughter of William Elliot of Borthwickbrae; she was sister of William, 2nd Laird of Borthwickbrae. They had 6 sons: Robert (1722–1770), writer in Edinburgh, who died unmarried; William (1724–97), farmer at Wintertonrig, who married Margaret Anderson; John (1725–1801), who married Margaret Curle; Thomas (1731–1808), who became minister of Cavers; and Francis, ‘Frank'

Elliot Elliot had 8 children: the eldest son, William (b.1766), of Clifton, and she died in 1820, aged 88. They Elizabeth, youngest daughter of Robert Pringle of Peel, who died in 1780. In 1766 he married Robert Lisle. He served as an executor for Henry Stonedge in the late 1700s when it was owned by Lodgegill and other lands. He was also tenant at 1763 from William Elliot of Tarras for Blakehope, Henry for the lands of Fernielees and a sasine in rank. In 1763 he had a bond with his brother as `Captain', he appears never to have held that Foot by 1757. Robert in Harden; Margaret, who married James David- ily and their children included: Jean, who mar- ried Catherine Armstrong, from the Sorbie fam- ily and their children included: Jean, who mar- ried George Pott, the purchaser of Caerlenrig; and Christian (b.1738), who mar- ried James Oliver in 1765. He and his son William were witnesses for a baptism for William Grieve (farmer in Southfield) and his daughter Mary in 1764. He and his wife both died at Wimmingtonrig. Robert of Binks (1702–66) eldest surviving son of John of Binks. He was a tenant farmer in Burnmouth. He was recorded as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1761. He married Elizabeth Robson (c.1722–93), who was from Boghall. Their children were: John (b.1754), who suc- ceeded; Robert (b.1756), who died young; Jean (1758–87), who married John Elliot of White- haugh; Christian (1761–82); and Catherine, who died unmarried. His daughter Jean was probably the ‘Miss Jean Elliot, Burnmouth’ who sub- scribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). He is buried in Castleton Kirkyard. Robert (18th C.) resident of upper Teviotdale. He married Bessie Nixon. Their children included: Robert (b.1740) in Falnash Mill; Janet (b.1743), who worked at Falnash; Thomas (b.1747) in Broad- haugh; and Beatrix (b.1750), also lived at Broad- haugh. Robert (1711–82) son of William and Margaret Mather, he was grandson of William of Cooms. He was born in Hawick Parish. He mar- ried Catherine Armstrong, from the Sorbie family and their children included: Jean, who mar- ried George Graham from Greenknowe; Thomas in Harden; Margaret, who married James David- son; and Robert in Crookham. Robert (1720/1– 82) youngest son of William, Laird of Harwood. He joined the army as an Ensign in the 1st Reg- iment of Foot in 1738 and was a Lieutenant on half-pay in Sir William Pepperell’s Regiment of Foot by 1757. Although commonly referred to as ‘Captain’, he appears never to have held that rank. In 1763 he had a bond with his brother Henry for the lands of Fernielees and a susine in 1763 from William Elliot of Tarras for Blaketheope, Lodggegill and other lands. He was also tenant at Stonedge in the late 1700s when it was owned by Robert Lisle. He served as an executor for Henry of Peel, who died in 1780. In 1766 he married Elizabeth, youngest daughter of Robert Pringle of Clifton, and she died in 1820, aged 88. They had 8 children: the eldest son, William (b.1766), succeeded to Harwood after the death of his un- cle Henry; Robert (b.1767), married Anne Hilly of Portsmouth and was a Vice-Admiral in the Royal Navy; Pringle (c.1768–88) was apprenticed to a surgeon; Henry (1769–1841) married Janet, 2nd daughter of Rev. Dr. Somerville of Jedburgh and attained the rank of Major-General in the Army; Thomas (b.1771) farmed at Kirndean and mar- ried Helen, daughter of Thomas Scott of Peel; Margaret (b.1773), the only daughter, married Peter Brown of Rawflat; Andrew (1775–1810), was a Captain in the 70th Regiment and died un- married at St. Thomas, Virgin Islands; and Mark (1776–1854), who was a tenant farmer in Lan- ton. He died at Hobsburn. Robert of Fenwick (18th C.) son of Francis and Rachel Langlands. He may be the Laird of Fenwick recorded paying a year’s rent for the weight-house in Hawick in 1729. Along with Walter Scott (farmer at Com- monside) he leased Unthank and Fiddleton from the Buccleuch Estates in 1733. In 1737 he and Robert Harrison, William Ogilvie of Hoscote and lawyer Thomas Watson entered into a partnership to establish and stillhouse and brewhouse in Haw- wick. He is recorded in 1738 receiving the ‘tack’ from the Buccleuch Estates of a ‘stillhouse and brewhouse on east side of the water of Slitridge, and of ground adjacent; also a malt kiln and barn yet to be built; all lying in parish of Hawick’. This may be the first record of brewing and distillling near Hawick; it may refer to the lands of ‘Wusky Hooses’ and/or the ‘Brewery Haugh’ on Slitrig Crescent. He became a Burgess of Glas- gow in 1753. About 1756 he sold Easter High- chesters and Lairhope to Henry Scott, Duke of Buccleuch; he may have died shortly afterwards, since there are other documents between the Duke of Buccleuch and his trustees in 1756–8. He was recorded as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1761. He firstly married Jean Scott (from an un- known branch of that family), this probably being the irregular marriage of Robert ‘eldest lawful son to Francis’ to Jean Scott in Carlisle in 1716 that was a matter brought before the Hawick Parish Session in 1717; he must have been fairly young at the time, suggesting this was an elopement or rushed marriage of some kind. He secondly married Katherine (b.1697), daughter of William Elliot of Arkleton; she had previously married David Laing of Westerkirk and Charles Telfer mi- nister of Hawick. It is said that his only child was Gavin, who was the last Elliot of Fenwick; however, ‘James Elliot, Fenwick’, whose daugh- ter Magdalene was baptised in Hawick Parish in 1758 was probably another son. Robert ‘Hobbie’ (18th C.) resident of a cottage called Hassely Cleugh on Stonedge farm. A story is told (recounted by Walter Deans) of how he went to the blacksmith’s at Unthank to get a ‘sling’ (perhaps for a sled), but the smith was busy, and by the time it was his turn he had forgotten what he came for. Eventually he decided ‘it was time for him ta gang hame, as he had a ferr road ta gang’ and the smith said ‘Ay Hobbie, it’s a lang sling’, to which he replied ‘a lang sling, that’s the verra thing a’ wanted made, a gude sling, darsay am donnert’. Robert (b.c.1700) son of Walter in Brugh. He married Elizabeth Scott, who came from Doorpool. He had one known child, Adam, who lived in Hawick and was father of James of Goldielands, schoolmaster at Wilton. Robert (18th C.) tenant in Sundhope farm in the middle of the 1700s. Robert (18th C.) resident of Ewesdale. He married Janet Scott, who was also from there. Their children included: Thomas (b.1741); and Mary (b.1743). Jean (b.1737) and Robert (b.1739), born in Langholm Parish, may also have been their children. Robert of Reidheugh (1705–93) 2nd son of William in Brae and Whithaugh. His father purchased Redheugh for him around 1730, thus regaining the home of his ancestors. He was tenant in Cleughhead in 1744 when he had a charter of confirmation for Redheugh in liferent for himself and in fee for his son William. In 1778 he was also tenant in Foulshiels, Kershope and Shaws. In 1786, for reasons unknown, he disinherited his eldest son William in favour of his 2nd son John. He was recorded as Robert of Redheugh on the 1786–92 Horse Tax Rolls. His lands of Reidheugh were valued at £96 1s in 1788. He married Margaret Beattie (d.1767). They had at least 3 children: William, tenant in Hillhouse, who married Margaret Haliburton from Roughley; John of Redheugh (1741–1809), farmer in Cleughhead and Foulshiels, who married Margaret Russell; and Thomas (1745–1800), who married Mary Thomson. Both he and his wife are buried in Castleton Cemetery. Robert (b.c.1715) eldest surviving son of William of Thorlleshope and Overton. He succeeded his father in 1744 and immediately sold Thorlleshope. He is probably the Robert who paid tax at Overton (in Oxnam Parish) in 1748 and also the Robert of Overton recorded as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1761. He may then have moved to London. He married Mary Henderson, who died at the age of 25. He also married a second time. His children included: Cassandra, who was 2nd wife of Dr. William of Arkleton; Margaret (1751/2–1842), who died unmarried in Jedburgh; and Rebecca (b.1753), who died in infancy. Robert (1717/8–1816) resident of Roxburghshire, whose death is recorded at the age of 98. The report states that ‘a short period previous to his death, he told Mr John Scott, mealdealer, Hawick, that about 70 years ago he was sent by his father to Hawick, with one shilling to purchase a stone of barley-meal, a capful of salt, a pound of butter, and a pennyworth of tobacco – all of which he got for the said shilling’. Robert (1722–79) lived at Sorbie in Ewes Parish. He married Janet Wilson (1726–85) and their children included: William (1753–85), who married Jean Davidson; Jean (b.1756); Margaret (b.1758); Walter (b.1764); John (d.1792); and Mary (1778–88). He and his wife are buried at Ewes Churchyard. Robert (1722/3–70) eldest son of Robert of Caerlenrig. He was a writer in Edinburgh and died unmarried. He could be the Robert, writer in Edinburgh, who acted as Proctor for Hawick during the 1767 perambulation of the Common, undertaken as part of the case brought by the Duke of Buccleuch for its division. Robert (1724/5–70) 2nd son of John in Whithaugh. He was tenant farmer at Hermitage and elsewhere from about 1748, farming an area of perhaps 5,000 or 6,000 acres, on the eastern side of the Hermitage Water, including Brae, Gorrenberry, Hermitage and Millburnholm. It is said that he was a well organised farm manager, who had little help from the Buccleuch Estates. He married Janet Scott from Greenwood. Their children were: John (1750–1821), tenant in Hermitage, and also farmer at other farms, who married Christian Grieve and then Margaret Scott from Skelfhill; Walter (1754–97), who farmed Millburnholm and married Helen Crozier from Brighouse; William (1759–1829) in Millburnholm, who married Elizabeth Laidlaw from Falnash; Jean (b.1760), who married William Sharp of Hartsgarth; Robert (b.1760) tenant in Moraylees and Haydon Bridge, who married Mary Scott from Skelfhill; and Philip (b.1862), merchant in America. There are meticulous farm records of his, which survive. Robert (1725–57) 2nd son of the 2nd Sir Gilbert of Minto. He was a Captain in the Royals. He died suddenly at the home of his brother Sir Gilbert. Robert (b.1730) younger son to Robert of Midlem Mill, he was baptised in Cavers Parish. In 1744 he was apprenticed as a merchant to John Haliburton of Howcleuch (who was surely related to Rev.
Simon Haliburton who married his sister Elizabeth). He later joined the Navy, being an ensign in the Marines. He is also said to have been a clerk on H.M.S. Royal George. He married, but nothing else is known about him. Robert (18th C.) son of Adam in Dykeraw. He was described as being ‘in Know’, which is probably Priesthill Know in Liddesdale. He married Helen Grieve and their children included: Robert in Know, who married Marion Elliot; and Ninian in Priesthill. Robert (18th C.) writer (i.e. lawyer) in Edinburgh, who was legal agent for the town, particularly during the protracted case involving the division of the Common. He was made an Honorary Burgess in 1761. It is possible he is the same as the descendant of the Elliots of Caerlenrig. Robert (18th C.) resident at Woodburn in Roberton Parish when his daughter Helen was baptised. Robert (d.1799) shoemaker of the Cross Wynd. He was probably son of Adam, older brother of schoolmaster James (later of Goldielands), and may also have been brother of shoemaker Adam. He subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). In 1761 in Hawick Parish he married Isobel Scott, who died in 1796. His children probably included: Walter (b.1762), who carried on his business; James (b.1765), whose wife may have died in 1835; Janet (b.1767); and John (b.1771). In 1768 he witnessed a baptism for John Nichol. Robert (18th C.) resident of Southdean Parish. He could be the son of Hector born there in 1738. His children included: Hector (b.1765), probably father of Robert (b.1792); Isabel (b.1767); Jean (b.1768); and Margaret (b.1771). He is surely related to the Hector whose children were born in Southdean Parish in the 1750s. Robert (18th C.) tenant in Heap in Wilton Parish. His wife was Janet Russell and their children included: Isabel (b.1776); Robert (b.1777); Betty (b.1779); and Isabel (again, b.1785). Robert (18th C.) resident at Parkhill Wester in 1774 when his son John was baptised in Roberton Parish. Robert (18th C.) son of Robert in Know, this probably being Priesthill Know in Castleton Parish. He married Marion Elliot and died without issue. Robert (b.c.1745) son of William of Wolfelee with his 2nd wife Margaret Ogilvie. He was a merchant in Amsterdam. He purchased the estate of Pinnaclehill near Kelso. He died without issue and left Pinnaclehill to his niece Charlotte. Robert (1746–1817) tenant at Powisholm and other places in Castleton Parish, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. It is possible he was son of William in Southdeanrig. He married Wilhelmina Hislop (1763–1836). Their children included: Christian (b.1788); Margaret (1790–95); Ann (b.1793); Robert (b.1796), who also farmed at Powisholm; John (b.1797), who farmed at Middleholm; James (b.1798); Margaret (b.1799); and William (b.1802), who was farmer at Harden in Castleton Parish. Robert (c.1752–1827) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Betty Elliot (c.1755–1828) and their children included: Ann (b.1783); Elizabeth (b.1784); Helen (b.1786); and Robert (1788–1812), who was a teacher. Rev. Robert (1755–1824) younger son of Sir Gilbert, 3rd Baronet of Minto. He was Rector of Wheldrake Church in Yorkshire. In 1779 he was given livery of a set of small pieces of land formerly called Minto Townhead, consisting of: South Croft; North Croft; Quicksands Park; Notman’s Shot; Langlands; Temple Croft; Howden; Whitfield; West South Croft; Minto Town; and the green of Minto. These were valued at £461 1s 10d, enough to put him over the required minimum of £400 to be on the roll. In 1788 he was listed under ‘Votes of Sir Gilbert Elliot’ among the voters of Roxburghshire. He was recorded as a freeholder in the Michaelmas Head-Court of Jedburgh in 1811. He was still listed as liveryman in Castleton in the Land Tax Rolls of 1811. In 1788 he married Mary, daughter of Rev. Edmund Garforth of Askham. They had 5 children: Eleanor Maria Anne, who married Dr. James Grant of Jedburgh; Isabella Lucy, who married Gilbert, 3rd son of Sir William Elliott, the 6th Baronet of Stobs; Agnes, who died unmarried; Robert, who was a Captain in the Royal Navy; and Edward Eden, Accountant General in Bombay. Robert (c.1759–1844) cattle dealer in Newcastleton. He may be the son of William who was born in Hobkirk Parish in 1758. In 1841 he was living at about 10 Langholm Street, with Helen and Mary, who were probably his daughters. He is probably the Robert who married Mary Elliot (c.1768–1840) in Castleton and whose children included Isabella (1799–1804); Mary (1804–54); and Robina (1816–42). Robert (c.1760–1824) son of Robert, who farmed at Hermitage. He was tenant in Moraylees and Haydon Bridge. He married Mary Scott (c.1776–1843) from Skelfhill and their children were Robert (1809–44) and James (1813–90), who were both tenants at Galalaw. Capt. Robert (1761–1840) younger son of William of Whithaugh, he was born in Castleton Parish. He was in the Merchant Navy, serving as Captain of the ‘Hope’, which operated between Calcutta and Canton. He farmed at Glencarholm, near Canonbie. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He married Alison Grieg (c.1779–1856). Robert (b.1762) son of John, he was born in Hobkirk Parish. He emigrated to America, settling in Quebec, where he married Elizabeth Louise Josephine Savoie in 1788. Their children included: Andre (b.1788); Marie-Louise Allet (b.1790); Simon (1793–1865), who married Rebecca Armstrong and was great-grandfather of Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau; Joseph (b.1795); Marie (b.1796); Charlotte (b.1798), who probably died young; Hélène Allet (b.1802), also died young; Margaritte (b.1805); twins Hélène and Charlotte (b.1807); and Sara-Marie (b.1810). Robert (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Roan in Castleton Parish, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He was also taxed for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797. He died in Trois-Rivières, Quebec. Robert ‘Little Hobby o the Castleton’ (18th/19th C.) resident of Byreholm in Castleton Parish. In the ‘Local Historians Table Book’ of 1841 it is described that he was ‘a dwarf’, ‘reputed to be a fairy changeling’, who had died less than 20 years previously. He was ‘a most irascible creature’ who would pull out a knife when insulted, but was too slow to catch people. He also had a run-in with his neighbour William Scott from Kirndean, threatening the big man to a duel for tarnishing his reputation, causing Scott to flee from his house. Robert (b.1767), W.S., son of William in Hillhouse and Mary Haliburton, he was born in Castleton Parish. He became a lawyer in Kirkcaldy and died unmarried. Robert (1767–1854) son of Capt. Robert, and grandson of William of Harwood. He was born at Hobsburn in Hobkirk Parish. He joined the Navy in 1781 and rose through the ranks, becoming Commander in 1801 and going on half-pay in 1814. In 1846 he was promoted to the rank of Vice-Admiral. In 1790 he married Ann, daughter of Andrew Hilley of Plymouth. His children were: Elizabeth Pringle (1801–47); Robert Hilley (b.1803), Captain in the Navy, who married Elizabeth Carr; and Helen (or Ann), who married John Paton of Crailing, his 1st wife being her cousin Eleanor Elliot. He stayed at Hundalee and then at Glenbank and was a member of the Jedforest Club. For several years before his death he was completely blind. Robert (1768/9–1856) shepherd at Blinkbonny. He married Elspeth ‘Huitson’ or ‘Hotson’ (possibly Whitson), who died in 1815, aged 50; she was probably related to George ‘Hotson’ (d.1728), who is buried in the adjacent lair at Ettleton. Their children included: Margaret (b.1789); Helen (b.1791); William (b.1794); Christian (b.1799), who may have married shoemaker William Elliot; Elspeth (1803–59); Robert (b.1807); and John, who died in infancy. Robert (18th/19th C.) from Langbursheils. He was an apprentice baker with Thomas Kedie in Hawick. He produced a sketch entitled ‘Wilton Path and Damside, 1810’, which is one of the first representations of Wilton. It was reproduced in the Hawick News in 1910 and discussed in the Transactions in 2015. Robert (b.1769) farmer at Lanton Mains, taking over from his father, William. He married Margaret Hall (c.1778–1818) and their children included: Christian (c.1810–27); and Jane (c.1812–31). The family are buried at Abbotrule Kirkyard. Robert (18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. Probably the same Robert was father of: Mary (b.1783), born at Tythehouse; William (b.1792), born at Harwood; and John (b.1794), born at Robert’s Linn. Robert (b.c.1770) born in Bedrule, he was a farmer. In 1841 he is ‘Independent’ and in 1851 recorded as ‘Pauper Formerly Farmer’. His wife was Jessy from Morebattle and their children included Margaret, Mary (who married David Turnbull), Christian and Janet. Robert of Cooms (18th/19th C.) subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. He was cautioner for a bank in Langholm in 1825. It is unclear how he was related to other Elliots. Robert of Arkleton (1775–1810) son of William and Cassandra Elliot. He was a Captain in the 5th Bombay Native Infantry, and saw active service at the siege of Seringapatam. He returned home about 1803 to take possession of the family estate. He was then a Major in the 1st Battalion of the Roxburghshire Volunteers. He led some of the men of Liddesdale and the Slitrig valley to Hawick in response to the False Alarm of 1804. He returned to India where he was promoted to Major. He later accompanied the mission to the Isle of France, where he (and many others) were killed on the H.M.S. Africaine when attacked by 2 Franch frigates. Robert ‘Blinnd Robbie’ (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick. His wife Margaret Robson’s death is recorded in the Hawick Parish records in 1805. It appears that they were married in 1790. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Deadwater who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825 and William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. It is unclear how he was related to other Elliots. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of London who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick' in 1825. He probably had a local connection. Robert (1780–1851) son of John, tanner in Hawick. He was farmer at Roan. He may be the ‘R. Elliot, Roon’ who subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. He was listed among heads of households in the Parish in 1835–41. In 1851 his widow is recorded as farmer of 130 arable acres and more than 4,000 acres of moorland, employing 5 labourers. His wife was Isabel, who was also from Hawick. He is buried at Teviothead. Robert (b.1780/1) from Ewesdale, he was a farmer in Robertson Parish. In 1841 he was a gamekeeper at Harden and in 1851 was a retired farmer at Scarnook. His wife was Janet (from Canonbie). Robert (b.1785) son of John, farmer at Twislehope. He was a surgeon in Haltwhistle. He married Jane Elliot from Cringledykes, daughter of John and grand-daughter of Robert in Hermitage. Their children were Margaret, Jane, John (surgeon in Bellingham), Robert (surgeon in Haltwhistle), William (lived in london), Janet, Jane, Alice, Georgina, Andrew (who married Helen from Hermitage), Kate and Margaret (who married James Hill, Controller General for Scotland). Robert (1790–1872) eldest son of William, and grandson of Robert of Caerlenrig, he was born in Kirkton Parish. He became tenant in Teindside and is recorded there in 1825 when he subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’. Probably the same Robert ‘of Teindside’ was one of the founder members of the Wisp Club. He is recorded there as farmer in 1841, living with William (probably his brother) and Margaret (probably his mother). In 1851 he was recorded there as farmer of 440 acres, employing 6 labourers. He died unmarried. Robert (181th/19th C.) spinner in Hawick. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. Robert (c.1785–1849) son of William and Jean Davidson from Ewes. He was a Slater in Hawick, recorded at Townhead in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. He was at about 2 Loan in 1841. He married Janet ‘Bleak’ (or Black, c.1789–1831). Their children included: Margaret (1811–79), who married William Miller; William (1814–67), who married Helen Smith; Jane (1816–74), who married John White; Janet (1818–83), who married Thomas Thomson; twins Martha (1822–92) and Robert (b.1822), who probably died young; Thomas (1825–64); and John Scott (1829–1914), who was Cornet in 1851. His will is registered with Jedburgh Sheriff Court in 1849. Robert (1791–1858) son of Walter and Helen Crozier. He farmed at Hermitage, like several members of his family before him. He is probably the Elliot from Kirndean who was on the Committee of the Proprietors of Castleton Library. He is listed among male heads of households in 1835–41. In 1851 he was farming 2,000 acres of moorland and employing 4 labourers. He married Mary (c.1804–35), daughter of Thomas Murray and Janet Inglis, from Whisgills. She was probably already dead in 1841, and he was certainly a widower by 1851. He was wealthy enough to be employing a governess in 1841. His children were: Janet (1826–73), who married Colin Hay; Walter (1828–93), who farmed Hermitage after his father died; Thomas (1830–54), who died on the Isle of Mull; Helen (1832–93); and Mary (b.1834). Robert (1793/4–1858) only son of William, tenant at Millburn. He also farmed at Millburnholm. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821 and Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. In 1827 he married Helen (or Eleanor), daughter of John Davidson from Bewcastle; she died in 1886, aged 82, and was buried at Etternley. Their children: included William (1828–91), who emigrated to New Zealand; Anne (b.1829); Elizabeth or Betty Laidlaw (b.1831); and John Davidson (b.1834–96). He died at Toftholm and is buried at Unthank. Robert of Reidheugh (1794–1869) only son of Thomas and Mary Thomson. He inherited the lands of Redheugh from his uncle John. During his time the road to Hawick (B6399) was built adjacent to the farm. He also had the Rede Burn partially diverted and drained the marshy area behind the farm. In 1805 (although this date seems too early) he sold Cooms and Middlemoss to Humble Lamb of Ryton. He was listed for the first time as a head of household in Castleton Parish in 1837. He was on the Borders Union Railway Committee for Liddesdale in the 1850s. He served as a Commissioner of Supply and Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. He was also Vice-President of the Liddesdale Curling Club. He was listed at Redheugh in Slater’s 1852 directory and in the 1861 census was ‘Land Proprietor’ there. In 1851 he and his wife settled Redheugh jointly on their 2 sons, reserving the liferent for themselves. He was still at Redheugh in a directory of 1868. In 1820 he married Jessie (or Janet, c.1796–1871) Elliot from Flatt. Their children were: Thomas (1821–69), who married Elizabeth Kyle; Jane (1822/3–67); Mary (b.1824), who died young; John (1825–58), who died in Mexico; Mary (1827–53); Henry (b.1829), who also died young; and another daughter. He settled Redheugh jointly on his 2 sons in 1851.
Elliot

He and his wife are buried in Castleton cemetery. Robert (b.1794/5–1878) carrier in Newcastleton. He may also have lived at Greens. He was a carter in Newcastleton, listed among heads of households in Newcastleton in 1835–41. He was listed in Pigot’s 1837 directory as carrier to Carlisle once a week, and also to Hawick once a week. In 1841, 1851 and 1861 he was at about 33 North Hermitage Street. In 1861 he was listed as farmer of 26 acres. His wife was Agnes Murray Elliot (c.1794–1876) from Westerkirk. Their children included: Isabella (b.1819); Janet (b.1821); Agnes (b.1823); Agnes (again, 1824–97); Christian (b.1826); John (1828–57); Robert (b.1830); Barton (a daughter, 1831–1920); Robert (again, b.1834); Jane (or Jean, b.1835); and James Douglas (1838–78), who died in London. Robert (b.1795/6) shepherd in Castleton Parish, where he was born. In 1861 he was living at about 1 Langholm Street in Newcastleton. His wife was Isabella and their children included Robert and Violet. His wife was from England, and his children were born there. Robert (1796/7–1865) son of Robert, tenant in Powisholm in Castleton Parish. He farmed at Powisholm, like his father, and is recorded there in the 1840s to 1860s. He is probably the ‘R. Elliot, Powisholm’ subscribed to William Scott’s ‘ Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. He married Esther (1798–1889), daughter of carter Adam Elliot from Newcastleton. Their children included: Robert (1821–1908), who live at Bankend and Powisholm; Margaret (1823–1900), who married Andrew Thompson; Wilhelmina (1825–93), married John Robson and died at Teviothead; Adam (1827–80), who worked for a while as a baker in Hawick: John (1829–48); Ann (1831–95); Mary (1833–1906); James Armstrong (1835–1903); Elizabeth (1837–85), married John Glendinning from Liverpool and died in California; Sibella (1839–1911); and William (1843–1921). He is probably related to the Robert who farmed at the same place earlier. Robert (19th C.) recorded as ‘ Robert, esq. of Leehaugh ’ on Pigot’s 1837 directory. He probably lived at Leehaugh near Newcastleton, and could be the same as Robert of Redheugh. Robert (1802–77) born in Castleton Parish, son of William and Jean Easton. He was an agricultural labourer and shepherd. He was listed among heads of households as labourer at Gillfoot in 1835 and Whitropeburn in 1836–38, and shepherd at Phauknnowe in 1840 and 1841. He is listed as labourer at Phauknnowe in 1841 and Upperraw in 1851. He married Betty Telfer (c.1805–75). Their children included: John (1822–26); Isabella (1827–46); William (b.1829); Jeannie (b.1832); Robert (b.1834); Sarah (b.1839); and John (b.1841). He died at Whitehillbrae. Robert Kerr 6th Laird of Harwood (1805–73) eldest son of William the 5th Laird. Before 1835 he lived at Greenriver on the Stonedge estate. He succeeded to the Harwood estates at the age of 30 and moved into the new house that his father had had built on the estate. He served in the 23rd Royal Welsh Fusiliers, reaching the rank of Lieutenant. He is said to have been a keen country sportsman, excelling at riding with the hounds. Along with some friends he started the ‘Jedforest Harriers’, meeting at Swinnie Toll-bar, Howahill, Chapel of Cross (presumably Shiplaw Corse), Ruletownhead and elsewhere. He became a member of the Jedforest Club in 1829. He was a J.P. for Roxburghshire, as well as being Deputy-Lieutenant (from 1848), a Commissioner of Supply for the county, Tax Commissioner and member of the Police Board. In 1845, after a 2 year legal battle, he inherited the Clifton estates from his cousin Robert Pringle. He said ‘ The name Clifton has been a lucky one with me. When staying at Clifton, near Bristol, I met my wife, a Miss Clifton, and I succeeded to the estate of Clifton’. On the announcement of the legal victory there was a great celebration at Harwood, with a bonfire lit on a nearby hill. He was said to be a keen supporter of the ‘uppies’ in Hobkirk Baa. In 1833 he married Mary Anne, daughter of Charles Claude Clifton of Twymaur, Brecon, and she died in 1871. His 13 children were: Mary-Anne Frances (1834–1917), said to be the prettiest, who married Sir Edward Clude Cockburn; William Claude (1835–1922), who succeeded; Charles John (1836/7–1863), who died aged 27, after returning from India; Robert Henry (b.1838) of Clifton Park, who married Anna Maria Louisa, daughter of Lord Trimlestone, and whose son Robert would later succeed as Laird of Harwood; Ellen Eliza (b.1839), who married Chetwode Drummond Pringle; Adelaide Catherine (1840–1926), who married Sir Basil Francis Hall; Chandos Frederick (1842–62); Anna Maria Octavia (b.1844), who died young; Caroline Clifton (1845–1923), who married James Moffat of Edenhall; Edward Claude (1846–1913), married Eleanor, daughter of John Jones of Melbourne; Charlotte Elizabeth (1848–93), who married John Dalton of Sleningford Park, Yorkshire; Anna Maria (b.1849), who married Lieut.-Col. James Colquhoun; and Mark Pringle (1851–1924). The family used to spend the winter at Brighton, where he would go hunting. He died there following a hunting accident. His will is registered with Jedburgh Sheriff Court in 1873. He was buried in Hobkirk Kirkyard. Robert (b.1804/5) born in Hobkirk Parish, he was an agricultural labourer and gardener in Hawick. In 1841 he was living at Slitrig Cottage with his wife and mother-in-law Margaret. By 1851 he was a widower, still at Slitrig Cottage and in 1861 he was a shepherd at Bucklands. He married Janet Crozier in Wilton in 1841. Their children included: Margaret (b.1842); and Robert (b.1844). He could be the son of John born in Hobkirk in 1807. Robert (1808–88) youngest son of James, schoolmaster of Wilton, who lived at Goldielands. He was a sheep farmer in Roxburghshire, Selkirkshire and Dumfriesshire, before settling at Laighwood, near Dunkeld. He received prizes for his sheep from the Highland and Agricultural Society in the 1850s and 60s. He corresponded with George Cupples, who was gathering data for Charles Darwin, on the subject of the proportions of sheep born of each sex. He was also on that Society’s Committee for Land Improvement. Robert (1808/9–44) elder son of Robert, farmer at Hermitage, Haydon Bridge, etc. His mother was Mary Scott from Skelfhill. He probably held the tenancy of Galalaw farm, but died in Madeira (or perhaps Madras, India). After his death his brother James became tenant at Galalaw. Robert (b.1808/9) born in Hobkirk Parish, he was farm steward at Westerhouses in 1851 and 1861. He married Mary Renwick and their children included Elizabeth, Margaret, John, William, Francis, Marianne, Henry (b.1851) and Agnes (b.1854). Robert (c.1811–45) agricultural labourer who was living at Fodderlee Cottage in 1841. He married Mary Elliot (b.c.1814) and their children included Elizabeth (b.c.1834), Margaret (b.c.1835) and John (b.c.1839). His will is registered with Jedburgh Sheriff Court. He could be the Robert, son of John, born in Hobkirk Parish in 1807. Robert (b.1812/3) born in Castleton Parish, he was a shepherd and labourer. In 1861 he was at about 37 South Hermitage Street. He married Mary Armstrong in 1840. Their children included: Christian (b.1842); Robert (b.1845); Jane; and Archibald. Robert (1807–96) younger son of James of Wolfelee and brother of Sir Walter. He was a twin of James. He was an elder of Wolfelee Free Kirk and also took a keen interest in the Sclenty Schuil. He lived to the age of 89. Robert (b.1814/5) born in Newcastle, he was an agricultural labourer living around Sunny-side in Denholm in 1841. The family was living in a cottage at Hundalee in 1851. In 1861 he was a ploughman in Oxnam Parish. In 1836 he married Hannah Whillans from Crailing. Their family included: John (b.c.1837); Archibald; and Walter. His elderly uncle Walter, formerly a mason from Cavers, was also living with them in 1851. The family may have emigrated to Bruce County, Ontario. Robert (b.c.1815) labourer who was living at Hermitage Schoolhouse in 1841. He married Agnes Milligan and their children included: Jessie (or Janet, b.1835); Margaret; and Jane (b.1839); and Matthew (b.1841). He may have been related to James, who was schoolmaster at Hermitage. Robert (b.1818/9) born in Hawick Parish, he was farm steward at Cavers estate in the 1860s. In 1851 and 1861 he was living at Cavers East Lodge (called ‘Cavers Garden’ in 1861). He was listed as ‘gamekeeper’ and his wife as ‘portress’. His wife was Isabella Elliot, probably daughter of John, who was shepherd at Shiplaw Corse. Their children included: Margaret (b.1850); William (b.1852); Mary (b.1854); Stuart Douglas (who became a Colonel in the Volunteers); Elizabeth (b.1858); John (b.1860); Isabella (b.1863); Janet (b.1869); Janet (again, b.1866); Agnes (b.1869); and Robert (b.1872). Robert (1821–1908) son of Robert, who farmed at Powisholm, and Esther Elliot. He was an agricultural labourer living at Bankend in Castleton Parish in 1861. In 1849 he married Christian Elliot (c.1826–1904) and their children included Agnes Murray (1850–1904); Robert (1851–1928); John (1853–1935); Esther; and Adam (1858–1903). He died at Powisholm. Robert Henry of Clifton Park (b.1837) 3rd son of Robert Henry. He inherited the lands of Clifton Park from his father. In about 1874 he also owned lands in Linton Parish. In 1868 he married Anna Maria Louisa Barnewall, only daughter of Thomas, Lord Trimleston. Their son Thomas became the next Laird of Harwood. Robert (1845–1918) younger son of Andrew, farmer at Twislehope. He emigrated to New Zealand in 1864 and married Elizabeth Fitt. Their children were Ettie, Eliza, Maud, Agnes and Andrew. Robert (b.1850/1) born in Kirkton Parish. In 1901 he was farm steward at Barnes Cottages. His wife was Annie and their children included Annie, Henry, Thomas, Jane, Edward and Robert. Robert of Reidheugh (d.1915) only son of Thomas and Elizabeth Kyle. He inherited Redheugh, being served heir to his grandfather in 1887. He married Effie McGregor Corbett, but they had no children. In 1918 his sister Anna Mary sold Redheugh to the tenants, James and Thomas Scott. Robert (1865–1937) son of Walter, farmer in Hermitage, and descended from the Elliots of Falnash. He also farmed at Hermitage, but gave up the lease and retired to Newcastle. He married Isobel, sister of J.G. Wilson, manufacturer in Hawick. He secondly married Mary Elisabeth, daughter of Walter Paisley, ironmonger from Hawick. His only child was Isabella Jane Armstrong. Robert Young Scott ‘Bob’ (1920–2016) born on February 29th, so he celebrated his 21st birthday in 2004! A High School Maths teacher for 28 years, he coached tennis locally and received an M.B.E. in 1998 for services to lawn tennis. He married Madge, who coached tennis along with him, and they had sons Kim and Sean. Roland (15th C.) recorded as ‘Rollando Elwald’ in 1466 when he witnessed a charter at Kirkcudbright for Robert Herries. Roland (15th C.) recorded in the Justice- aire held in Jedburgh in 1494/5. Along with ‘Willot’ and some Armstrungs, Hector Lauder, brother of the Laird of Todrig, had remission for bringing them to the area to attack the tenants of Whitmuir. They are described as ‘traitors of Leven’, but are as likely to have been from Liddesdale as England. Roland (15th/16th C.) recorded in a 1516 ‘respite’ to William of Larriston and several other Liddesdale Elliots. He is listed as ‘Rolland Elwald in Thorsleshop’. He is surely related to the other Elliots of Thorlieshope, perhaps the generation between the John of the 1480s and 90s and the Robert or Robin of the 1540s to 60s. Roland (16th C.) tenant of the lands of Riccarton, recorded in the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale. Listed after him are William Elliot, along with Martin and Patrick Crozier. He may be related to some of the other nearly contemporary Rolands. Roland of Thorlieshope (16th C.) recorded in 1546 when he was one of the men to be entered as prisoners to John Kerr of Ferniehirst. This was along with John, son of Robert of Thorlieshope (whose relationship to him is unclear), as well as John, son to ‘Hobe Quhytserk’. Roland ‘Rowie’ of the Park (16th C.) recorded in 1578 when he was held by Patrick Houston of that Ilk with a pledge of good behaviour to the King. He is probably the Robin of the Park who was accused (along with Simon and others) by the English in 1581 of stealing cattle and taking Thomas Routledge prisoner. He could be the man transcribed as ‘James Rowe in the Park’, listed along with Sym of the Park and Archibald of the Park in the Register of the Privy Seal in 1581. It is thus possible that he was son of James of the Park. However, he is probably the ‘Rowie Elliot of the Park, called Symmis Rowie’ listed in 1581 as the leader of the gang of Elliots of the Park released from Edinburgh Castle; his father was thus Simon. In 1582/3 his name was transcribed as ‘Robbe’ when several other Elliots were charged for his non-appearance. Roland ‘Rowie’ (16th C.) recorded in 1594 as ‘Rowie Elliot of Ramsegill’ when he signed the bond of assurance with the English Wardens. Probably the same man is recorded as ‘Rowe Ellocht of the Hall’ in a huge 1585 remission of crimes for men whose superior was Lord Maxwell; his name appears near those of Ewesdale residents, and it seems likely he was ‘of the Hill’ (rather than ‘Hall’). ‘Hob and Will Elovittis, brother’ are listed after him, so possibly his brothers, or brothers to each other and more distantly related to him. Roland ‘Rollie’ (17th C.) described as ‘called Park’ in the 1660s when he was listed as a debtor of William Elliot of Binks, along with many other Elliots. He may have been a descendant of the earlier Elliots of Park. Roland (1815–41) son of James, tenant at Lymiecleuch. He was tenant farmer at Macksidie in 1841. In 1837 he married Beatrice Pott (c.1799–1878), who died at Wilton Hill, Hawick. Samuel (18th C.) possibly a resident at Wells. Probably the same man was father of: James (b.1723) in Cavers Parish; Samuel (b.1725) in Cavers; Walter (b.1828) in Hobkirke and Bedrule Parishes; Alison (b.1730) in Hobkirk; and William (b.1732) in Bedrule, Samuel (b.1750) son of William of Wolfelee with his 2nd wife Margaret Ogilvie. He was a merchant in Antigua. He has 2 daughters: Alicia, who married William Hay Carre and Sir M.A. Crosby; and Eliza, who married Lord Despenser. Simon (15th C.) listed in 1482/3 along with James, Lawrence and John Elwald, as well as Robert Turnbull and Robert Dalgleish, when they said to be rebels captured by Patrick Dickson, Bailie of Peebles. Simon (16th C.) entered in 1537/8 for crimes along with his brother James ‘Elwald’ and William in Leabaugh, with sureties being Robert of Redheugh and his brother Archibald. They were accused of breaking open the shop of Thomas Graham in Selkirk. How he was related to other Elliots is unclear. Simon (16th C.) recorded in 1541 as the tenant of Park in Liddesdale. Either the same or a different Simon was also tenant at ‘Coklaik’. He was probably an ancestor of the Simon of the Park recorded about 4 decades later. Simon (16th C.) recorded as ‘Sym Elwald’ in 1546 when he was

witness to the bond entering some Elliots as prisoners with John Kerr of Ferniehirst. He signed with the help of the notary (suggesting that he could not write), ‘in absens of my brother young William’. He may be the same as one of the other Simons. Simon ‘Sim’ (16th C.) proprietor of lands at Dod Burn and adjacent farms. In 1567 Robert Scott of Thirlstane and Master Thomas Weston relieved Sir Walter Scott of Branhxholme as surety for him and Airchie’s Will in Gorrenberry. He is recorded in a bond of security of 1569 signed in Hawick, in which he is given as ‘Sym Elliot in Dodburne’, with Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch serving as surety for him. 5 tenants are listed for whom he was surety himself. He may have been related to the other Elliots in the bond, e.g. Gavin in Skelfhill or Gavin of Falnash. When he failed to appear in 1569 (along with Gavin of Falnash and Willim of Gorrenberry), Scott of Buccleuch was to be liable for £1000. Also in 1569 he was one of the relief pledges listed for Gavin in Falnash (the other 2 being William of Gorrenberry and Gavin Elliot of Skelfhill, who were probably close relatives). Along with several other Elliots he signed the bond with the Regent Morton in 1572. In 1573 he was to be entered into ward in St. Andrews, according to the register of the Privy Council. Simon ‘Simmie’ of the Park (16th C.) probably related to the earlier Simon of the Park. In 1578/9 there was a restatement at the Privy Council of a pledge that he should be placed in ward with the Laird of Corstorphine; his sureties were Martin of Braids and the deceased John of the Park, while Hob of the Park was also mentioned in the same document and so surely related. He was said to have escaped from ward, and hence his cauntenors were fined. He could be the same as one of the other contemporary Simons. He is listed as ‘Sym Elliott of the Park’ in 1581 among Armstrongs, Elliots and others who accused the Scotts and their allies. He was surely father of ‘Symmis Rowie’ of the Park, recorded in 1582/3, and possibly also father of ‘Symmis Arche’, who was one of the the cautioners for ‘Symmis Rovie’. ‘Sims John Elliot of the Parke’, recorded in 1583, was probably also his son. He was likely related to the other Elliots of the Park who are listed in 1583, namely ‘Grey Willie’, ‘Scots Hobbie’, ‘Jamie of the Park’, ‘Grey Will’s Jamie’ and ‘Hob’s Hobbie’. Simon of Philhope, ‘Mertin’s Sym’ (d.bef. 1592) eldest son of Martin of Braidlie. He is first mentioned in 1569, when he was among a number of pledges in exchange for Martin of Braids with the Regent Moray. He is also mentioned in 1580 along with his brothers Gavin, Archibald and Robert; in that year they were all implicated in the ambush of Scotts and Gledstains at Whithaugh. He is ‘Sime Elliot’, son of Martin of ‘Bradley’ in a letter of 1583. In 1586 he was ‘Sym Elliot, sone to the said Martene’ when he occupied the farm of Ricarton Cleuch, which was released to him by Francis, Earl of Bothwell. He was ‘Syme Elliott Mart’n’s son’ in 1590 when accused of stealing 8 cows from ‘Medupp’ in England, along with ‘Ill-willed Will’ Crozier and ‘Quentin’s Airchie’ Crozier. He received a Crown Charter of the lands of Philhope (in the Borthwick valley) in 1591, along with his father. It is unclear if he succeeded to the lands for long after his father’s death. There were Elliots at Philhope for several subsequent generations. His wife’s name is not recorded, but his children included: Martin of Braidley; William of the Binks; and James ‘in Hollis’ (Hollow). His son Martin, along with Robert of Redheugh, made an agreement to bury their differences with Sir Walter Scott of Branhxholme in 1599. Simon of Harden (16th C.) listed among the Elliots of Braidlie in 1583. His lands were presumably Harden in Liddesdale. It is possible he is the same man as Simon of Philhope. Simon ‘in Philhope’ (d.bef. 1628) eldest son of Martin of Braidlie and grandson of the earlier Simon of Philhope. He is recorded in the charter for the lands of Philhope in 1592. In 1615 his wardship, which had been in the hands of the Crown since his father’s execution in 1607, was granted to Thomas Armstrong of Craig. He married Elizabeth Chisholm (who was presumably from one of the local families), who survived him, and may later have married Archibald of Philhope. They had one child, Grizel, who was given as ward to Robert of Falnash when Simon died; she later married Robert of Falnash’s son John and was heiress of Philhope. Simon ‘Sim’ (16th C.) recorded with a tower in the Debatable Land on Sandison’s c.1590 map, to the north of Larristone. This could have been near Burnmouth perhaps. Simon ‘Sim’ (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1623 as ‘Syne Elliott, callit Gudyd, in Linsburne’ when he was accused of stealing 3 cows from Jock, ‘callit Dod’ from the lands of ‘Buceburne’. He was found guilty along with Abie Armstrong, although Archie Armstrong ‘Raccas’ and Francie Armstrong ‘Tueden’ were acquitted. He was ordered to be hanged for his crimes. Simon of the Binks (d.bef. 1656) 2nd son of William of the Binks, and great-grandson of Robert, 13th Chief. He is first mentioned in 1599 when accused of theft and then in a marriage suit with an illegitimate daughter of ‘Gibbie wi’ ye Gowden Garters’ of Stobs. It is said that he ‘hand-fasted’ with her on condition that he pay a considerable dowry if was unsatisfied with her (which he was, since he married another woman). This led to him selling Binks to Gilbert Elliott (around 1601), although his son William bought it back. He was on the inquest at the Judiciary Court of 1622 and 1623, when listed as ‘Sime Elliott, Benkis in Thorlieshoip’ and ‘callit of Benkis’. He is also referred to as ‘Symne Elliot of Binkis in Thorlieshope’. He was tenant at Thorlieshope (from at least 1622), Larriston (around 1627) and Huddishouse (around 1637). He is referred to as ‘Symione Elliott of the Benckis in Huddishouns in Liddersdaill’ in 1637 when his son William purchased Harwood; William may have ‘wadset’ the lands to him and hence he himself was listed as owner in 1643, when ‘Harrit’ was valued at £433 6s 8d. As a result he is occasionally referred to as the 1st Elliot Laird of Harwood. He purchased Lodggegill in 1647 and Cooms in 1650, and together these made up Black Tarras. He is recorded in a contract of 1648 involving the vicarage teinds for Hobkirk Parish, and in a discharge for the teinds in 1649. His sons were: William, more usually called 1st Laird of Harwood; and Robert of Black Tarras, who married Margaret Riddell from Bewlie. His brother Robert is noted in the Register of the Privy Seal as a thief. He also had a daughter who married a Scott, her sons John and William later witnessing a document relating to Harwood (and it is possible this was Rev. John of Hawick). His name is sometimes written ‘Simeon’ or ‘Syme’. In 1656 his charters of Lodggegill and Cooms were confirmed by Cromwell, by which time he was deceased. Simon of Black Tarras (17th C.) probably eldest son of Robert of Black Tarras and Margaret Riddell. He inherited half of the lands of Lodggegill. He is mentioned in 1671 when he brought a case of assault and robbery of his lands of Tarras, Skelhull and ‘Longkeipsyde’ against Henry in Harwood, Henry’s brother James, John in Dinley, Robert of Pingleholes, William of Phillope, John of Brugh and others; this suggests some dispute with his neighbours. He was declared bankrupt in 1690 and the lands of Lodggegill were adjudged to William of Thorlieshope, who settled them on his brother Henry. Simon of Dinlabyre (17th C.) recorded in a letter of 1692 to the Earl of Tarras. He must have been related to William of Dinlabyre, who died around 1693. He may have been the last Elliot Laird of Dinlabyre, who sold the estate to John Oliver in about 1700. Simon of Swinside and the Binks (17th/18th C.) eldest son of William of the Binks and Harwood. In 1670, along with William of Unthank and his son Adam, he purchased Lymiecleuch (including Corriesike, Langbyre and Giddenscleuch) from William Elliott, younger of Stobs. However, he sold his share to William Elliott of Stobs 3 years later. In 1672 he bought Middleknowes in Oxnam Parish and in 1674 he obtained a Crown Charter of the Barony of Swinside, designating his eldest son as heir, but retaining liferent for himself. In 1678 he is recorded as owner of the lands of Swinside and Middleknowes in Oxnam Parish, valued at more than £2000. He is ‘Symeon Elliott of Swinsysde’ when he signed the 1678 marriage contract between the Elliot of Midlem Mill and Harwood. He is recorded as ‘Simeon of Swinesyde’ in a bond of 1683. In 1690 he was on the Commission of Supply for Roxburghshire. He was cautioner for a bond between Henry Elliott of Harwood and William Elliot of Bewlie in 1692, witness to a bond for Henry Elliot of Harwood in 1696 and cautioner for another in 1696. He registered his arms as Baron of Swinside in 1697. In 1699 he witnessed a disposition for Elliot of Harwood. In 1714 he settled various of his lands on his sons and he sold the lands of Binks to John of Thorlieshope, sometime before 1718; however, it has also been suggested that he sold them to Christopher Irving some time before this. He married Jean Elliot (from an unknown branch of the family) before 1672. They had 7 children: William, Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire, who succeeded to Swinside; Adam of Beirhope; Gideon of Harwood on Teviot; Simon, mentioned in 1688 (d.bef. 1714); James, also mentioned in 1688 (d.bef. 1714); Robert of ‘Tyneside’; and Christian, who married Dr. John Haliburton from Jedburgh and whose son Simon Haliburton married Elizabeth Elliot of Midlem Mill. Simon John of Brugh (1940– ) only son of Sir William (Air Chief Marshal). He was educated at Eton and McGill University. He is the present head of the Elliot of Brugh. He married Sonia Annabel Shand in 1972 and their children are Alice Rosalind, Benjamin William and Catherine Camilla. The family live in Dorset. Stuart Douglas (1856-c.1930) son of Cavers gamekeeper Robert and Isabella, he was born in Cavers Parish. He worked in Edinburgh as a Supreme Court Solicitor, and was also a City Councillor there. He was President of the Edinburgh Borderers' Union for 23 years and Secretary of the Edinburgh Border Counties Association for 25 years. He was heavily involved with the volunteer movement, which he joined in 1876; he was an officer of the 4th Battalion of the Royal Scots (Lothian Regiment), rising through the rank to become Lieutenant-Colonel. In 1882 in Hawick he married Agnes, daughter of William Laidlaw. Their children were Agnes Laidlaw Douglas, Isabella, Edith, Constance R., Florence W., Robert A.D. and William Gilbert. Note that his name is also sometimes 'Stewart'. Thomas (16th C.) recorded in 1534 as procurator to Gavin in a legal agreement carried out in Hassendean Kirk. Gavin made a letter of reversion to William Scott for the 40-shilling lands of 'Neder Gallelaw'; this may have been Gavin of Horsleyhill, and it is possible they were closely related. Thomas 'Law's Tom' (16th C.) tenant in Priesthaugh. He was recorded in 1574 as 'Thome Elliott callit Lawis Thome' among men who had been ordered to be removed from the lands of Robert of Redheugh. 'Lawis Jok' also in Priesthaugh and 'Lawis Richie' in Swinstead were also named and presumably his brothers. Their father may have been Lawrence, or perhaps they came from Laws in Liddesdale. Thomas (16th C.) brother of Jock of Copshaw. In 1580 he was among those implicated in the ambush of Scotts and Gledstains at Whithaugh. He is recorded as 'Thom Elliot of Copshawe' when accused along with William of Gorrenberry, the Armstrongs of Whithaugh, and others of attacking the farms of the Laird of Bellister in England in 1587. He is probably the 'Thom of Copshaw' whose son Francis was listed among men who failed to appear at court in Jedburgh in 1611. Thomas of Bonedward (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1623 when is son Will was found guilty of stealing a horse from Walter Scott of Burnfoot-on-Ale. Thomas (17th C.) servant of Gilbert of Craigend who witnessed a sasine for Appotside in 1632. Thomas of Bewlie (d.1686) tenant farmer at Borthwicksheilds, son of Robert in Borthwickshiels and descended from the Elliots of Horsleyhill. He is recorded along with his parents in a list of communicants in the Borthwick valley in 1650. His only known sibling was William, minister at Yarrow, for whom he became executor (for his debts!) after his death. In 1672 he purchased Bewlie from Walter Turnbull of Bewlie and settled these lands on his eldest son William in 1675. He is recorded as Thomas 'in Borthwicksheilds' in an undertaking of 1685 with Henry Elliot of Harwood. He married Margaret, daughter of William Scott of Chamberlain Newton (and she died in 1672). They had 5 children: William, 1st Laird of Borthwickbrae (b.1658); Thomas (c.1660–1723), progenitor of the Oakwood Mill Elliots; Dr. Gideon (d.bef. 1723), of North Sinton; Mary, who married Patrick Riddell (incorrectly recorded sometimes as Nichol) of Muselee; and Susanna, who married William Scott of Stonedge (and whose daughter married William of Wolfelee). His will is recorded in 1686. Thomas of Haydon Bridge (d.c.1688) 4th son of John of Brugh. He may also have been described as 'of Canonbie Mill'. He married a Robinson. Their children included: George, who was killed in battle; Walter, unmarried; Gilbert, killed at Dettingen; and William, born posthumously, who was a joiner at Haydon Bridge. Thomas (1659/60–1723) tenant of Oakwood Mill, 2nd son of Thomas and Margaret Scott of Chamberlain Newton, and brother of the 1st Laird of Borthwickbrae. In 1719, along with his son Andrew, he witnessed a sasine for Helen, 2nd daughter of James Elliot in Calrous. He married Jean (c.1660–1743), daughter of Cornelius Inglis of Newton (possibly from the same family who once owned Branxholme), and she died in Selkirk in 1743, aged 83. His children were: Thomas in Oakwood Mill, Bailie of Selkirk, who married Bessie Tudhope; William (b.c.1688), 1st Elliot of Wolfelee; Andrew, who married Agnes Shortreed and Mary Simpson; Bessie (b.1697), who died young; Isobel (b.1702); another Bessie (or 'Elizabeth', b.1704), who married Robert Shortreed of Essenside in 1725; and Agnes (d.1801), who married John Sibbald from Whitelaw and Walter Cunningham from Hindhope, and had 20 children in total, with Col. Sibbald of Pinnacle being a grandson of hers. He may also have had a daughter Elizabeth who was the 2nd wife of William of Whithaugh. He is buried in Lindean churchyard, this location suggesting a connection with the family of 'James Elliott of Bridghemouth' mentioned by Scott of Satchells. Thomas (b.c.1685) eldest son of Thomas in Oakwood Mill and related to the Elliots of Borthwickbrae. He was also tenant in Oakwood Mill, was described as a 'malster' (presumably a maker of malt) in Selkirk and was Bailie there from 1721. In 1708 he married Bessie, eldest daughter of John Tudhope (also a Bailie in Selkirk). Their children were John, John (again), William, Agnes, Jean, Agnes (again), Andrew, Jen (again), Robert, Elizabeth, Elizabeth (again) and Margaret. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Harwood on Teviot. In 1740 he was ‘at Harwood’ when he witnessed a baptism for William Nichol, shepherd at Teindside. He was described as ‘in Harwood’ in 1744 when he leased Northhouse and Suddernrig from the Buccleuch Estates. He was recorded in the list of rental arrears for Northhouse in the period 1745–48. It is unclear how he was related to other Elliots. Thomas (1723–51) eldest son of William the 1st Laird of Wolfelee. He was a physician. In 1751 he married Helen, daughter of Sir John Elphinstone and whose mother was a daughter of Sir Gilbert Elliot of Minto. He died only about 6 weeks after the marriage. A story is told of his wife being accidentally shut in a secret lower vault of Megginch Castle after being instructed to locate some family valuables. In grief, his wife his father, his death coming after catching fever through chance circumstances. He pre-deceased his husband by almost 56 years. Thomas (18th C.) purchaser of the Langlands estate (later called Wilton Lodge) in July 1783. His lands were valued at £278 12s 8d in 1788 (with much of the former Langlands estate having been sold off to others, but still including Calaburn). He sold it again in about 1790 to Lord Napier. He was the probably an illegitimate son of Gilbert, a younger son of William, 2nd Laird of Borthwickbrae and Sarah Growesmith. There is a record of a boundary dispute between him and the Duke of Buccleuch over the Pipewellheugh and Gardener’s Haugh. His father Gilbert is recorded at Langlands on the female servant tax roll for 1785 and 1786, and he himself in 1787 and 1788. He was also taxed for having a footman and 2 horses in 1787 and 1788. In the 1789–92 Horse Tax Rolls for Hawick he was listed as ‘late of Langlands’. Thomas (1730–1807) son of John of Whithaugh. He was tenant in Twislehope, along with his elder brother John. He was a subscriber to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ in 1784. In 1786 along with John (his brother), also in ‘Tweeslihope’, he subscribed to a theological book by a Carlisle author. He was listed at Twislehope on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He was taxed for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797, and his wife was also taxed for 2 dogs. It is said that Sir Walter Scott visited him at Twislehope on his first trip through Liddesdale. His will is recorded in Peebles Commissary Court in 1809. Rev. Thomas (1731–1808) local minister, 6th son of Robert ‘of Carlenrickrig’ and Christian Elliot of Borthwickbrae. He was licensed by the Presbytery of Jedburgh in 1757, presented to Kirkton on the last day of that year and ordained in mid-1758. Then he was translated to Cavers in 1763. He paid the Horse Tax in 1785–92. He was said to have gentle manners and great modesty, but also was talented as an astronomer and mathematician. The famous Dr. Thomas Chalmers had his first ministerial duty as his assistant 1799–1800. In 1760 he married Anne, daughter of William Elliot (2nd Laird) of Borthwickbrae (presumably his cousin). Although she died only a year later they did have a child, William (b.1761), who became an architect in Kelso (designer of the extension to the old Wilton Kirk), and probably the same William became a wright’s apprentice in Edinburgh in 1775. He published a description of Cavers for Sinclair’s Statistical Account and a paper on practical astronomy, ‘New and improved Method of taking Observations at Sea’ in the Transactions of the Philosophical Society of Edinburgh. A miniature portrait of him exists. A communion token dated 1761 (the second oldest in existence from the Parish) dates from his ministry. He died in Kelso. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Southdean Parish. His children included: Margaret (b.1769); James Thomas (b.1771); Thomas (b.1774); William (b.1777); and Isabel (b.1780). It is possible that he was the Thomas who married Ann Veitch in Southdean in 1762. Thomas (18th C.) mason at Newmill. He married Helen Douglas. Their children, born in Hawick Parish were: Betty Margaret (b.1771); Margaret (b.1772); Walter (b.1772); and James (b.1774). Thomas (b.1741) from the Ewes valley, son of Robert and Janet Scott. He married Elizabeth (born in Bowden), daughter of Robert Carruthers and Isobel Balmer. Their children included: William (1770–1824), who married Jean Easton; Robert (1781–1858); Elizabeth (‘Betty’, 1782–1843), who married farmer James Scott; Mary (b.1786); and Thomas (b.1791), who married Isabella Aitchison and may have died in the U.S.A. Thomas (1744/5–1800) 3rd son of Robert of Redheugh. His brother John farmed at Redheugh, but he also lived there and farmed Foulshiel. He is the Thomas who was recorded on the 1794 and 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as farmer at Redheugh. He was also taxed for having 3 non-working dogs in 1797. In 1786 he subscribed to a theological book by a Carlisle author. In 1793 his brother John of Redheugh disposed of the stock and household furniture from Redheugh to him ‘in order that he may be enabled with more ease and convenience to live upon the lands of Redheugh’. He married Mary Thomson. Their children included: Jean (1794–1867), who married Thomas Jardine; Robert (b.1794), who married Jessie Elliot and inherited Redheugh from his uncle; and Margaret (1797–1823), who married William Nichol. He and his wife are buried in Castleton Cemetery. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Hawick. He is said to have married Margaret, daughter of William Elliot, cooper in Castleton and farmer at Dinlabyre. He may be the same as one of the contemporary Thomases. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His children included: Isabel (b.1783); Archibald (b.1788); and Thomas (b.1791). It is possible he was connected to the Thomas of Colterscleuch (b.1788) and Thomas (b.1791). Thomas (18th/19th C.) farmer at Appletrehall according to the 1797 Horse Tax register, when he owned 2 work horses. Thomas (18th/19th C.) farmer at ‘Fenzlehope’ in Castleton Parish, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Thomas (18th/19th C.) farmer at Borthwick Mains, recorded on the 1794–97 Horse Tax Rolls. In 1797 he was owner of 4 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. He also paid the dog tax at Borthwick Mains in 1797. Thomas (1771–1850) son of ‘Captain’ Robert and brother of Capt. William of Harwood. He lived at Kirkdean in Liddesdale. He was a Corporal in the Roxburghshire Yeomanry (Volunteers), directing some of the Liddesdale part of the troop, along with his brother Mark. Together with Robert Kerr Elliot (his nephew) he is recorded loaning money in 1805, which was repaid by James Scott in 1845. He is probably the Elliot from Kirndean who was on the Committee of the Proprietors of Castleton Library. He was farmer at Kirndean listed among heads of households in 1835–41. He is still recorded at Kirndean in Slater’s 1852 directory (even although he was deceased). In 1802 in Southdean Parish he married Helen (1776/7–1849), elder daughter of Thomas Scott of Peel. They had 5 sons and 6 daughters: Esther (c.1803–27); Robert (1805–24), Ensign in the 16th Madras Native Infantry, who died at Wallajabad in India; Thomas Scott (1806–32), who died at Lanton; Elizabeth Pringle (1808–18); Margaret (b.1809), who died in infancy; Margaret (again, 1810–39), who married William Boog of Sweethope; William (1811–71), the eldest surviving son, who inherited the lands of Peel from his uncle Thomas Scott (and the lands later descended to John, farmer at the Flatt in Liddesdale), taking the additional surname Scott; Helen (1813–82), who married John Elliot, tenant in Flatt; Ann Jane (1815–92), who died at Friars Mount, Jedburgh; Christian (1817–86); John (b.1819), 2nd surviving son, who inherited Riccalton from his uncle John Scott, and also took the additional surname of Scott; and Henry (b.1821–63), who farmed at Kirkdean for a while. Thomas (b.1766) younger son of William of Whithaugh. He was a doctor in Carlisle. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821 and to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He married Eliza, daughter of Robert Batey of High-town near Haltwhistle and their children were William (doctor in Carlisle), Robert (b.1811), Elizabeth (b.1813), Margaret (b.1814), Sophia (b.1816), Thomas (b.1817, surgeon in Carlisle) and Jane Isabella (b.1819). Thomas (b.1771) son of William in Hillhouse and Mary Haliburton. He may have been tenant in Hillhouse for a while, like his father. He died unmarried. Thomas (c.1776–1838) son of Walter, from the Henderson’s Knowe branch. He had brothers Archibald and William. He lived at Colterscveuch and Bowanhill. He married Magdalene Thomson (1776–1861). The family emigrated to America, eventually settling in Andes, New York, where he died. His children were: Mary, who married shepherd Walter Scott in 1822; Walter (1798–1858), who lived at Niagara, Ontatio; Betty (b.1800); James (1802–28); William (1809–88), who settled in Bovina; and Robert (1812–18), who died at sea. Letters have survived to him from relatives in Scotland. Thomas (b.1791/2) born in Castleton Parish, he lived in Robertson Parish. He was a labourer living at Howcleuch in 1841. He was Land Steward at Borthwick Mains in 1851 and 1861, and still recorded there in 1868. He may have been related to Thomas who was at Borthwick Mains a few decades earlier. He married Mary Grieve and their children included: James (b.c.1815); Thomas (b.1818); Esther (b.1819); John (b.1821); Helen (b.1825); and William (b.c.1833). Thomas (b.c.1800) agricultural labourer in Castleton Parish. He may be the Thomas, son of John and Janet Little born in 1799. In 1835 he was at Myredykes and in 1837–41 was listed as shepherd there. He married Anne Pott (b.c.1811) and their children included John (b.1829), Betty (b.1832) and Janet (b.1840). Thomas (19th C.) owner of property on Slitrig Crescent, marked in Wood’s 1824 map at around No. 10. It is unclear who he was, since he is not listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory or the 1841 census. He could be the Thomas from Hawick who subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. Thomas (1804/5–bef. 1861) originally from Ireland, he was a hosiery worker in Hawick. In 1841 he was on the High Street in Mather’s Close. In 1851 he was at Lynnwood Cottages. However, in 1860 he moved to Bournemouth, where he was postmaster and letter carrier for the Rule valley. He was first to introduce a spring cart to the district and would carry passengers to and from Hawick. However, the venture was not a great success and he gave up, eventually moving elsewhere. In 1824 he married Margaret Hume, from Cavers Parish. Their children included: James (b.1825), who was a merchant at the Sandbed; Elizabeth (b.1827); Mary (b.1829); Peter (b.1831); Robert (b.1834); Rev. William Hume (1837–1927), minister at Ramsbottom; John Little (1839–60); Thomas (b.1842); Michael (b.1844); George Lewis (b.1846); Michael (again, b.1849); and Betsy (1852–57). Thomas (1807–91) son of William and Jean Easton, he was farmer at Mangerton. He was recorded as shepherd at Mangerton among heads of households in 1835–41; his brother Robert was also listed as a shepherd. In 1841 he was listed as a labourer at Mangerton. In 1851 he was farming 115 acres there, and employed 5 labourers. In 1852 he was listed as miller at Mangerton Mill and was listed at Mangerton in a directory of 1868. In 1838 he married Janet (1815–47), daughter of joiner John Douglas. Their children included: William (1839–23), who died at Gattonside; Elizabeth Beattie (1841–91); Jean Easton (1842–1910), also died at Gattonside; Helen Douglas (1844–1917), also died at Gattonside; Janet Anne (1846–97); and John (1847–1904), who worked for a bank in London and married Margaret Eliza Middleton. Thomas (1811/2–76) grocer in Newcastleton, probably son of joiner Andrew. In 1851 and 1861 he was at about 14 South Hermitage Street. In 1841 he married Hannah Storey, who died in 1882, aged 61. Their children included: Mary (b.1843); Andrew (1845–1930), who married Margaret Glendinning; Betty (b.1847); Margaret (b.1850); Thomasina (b.1853); Arkle; Helen; Hannah Janet (b.1862), who died in infancy; and John James (1865/6–1944), who died in Longtown. The family are buried in Ettleton Cemetery. Thomas (1815/6–87) son of John, who farmed at Highfield, Crinkledyke and Deadwater, and grandson of Robert in Hermitage. He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1852. In 1861 he was at Under Hindhope in Oxnam Parish. He succeeded his brother John as farmer at Nether Hindhope in Oxnam Parish. He married Elizabeth Turnbull from Redmoss. Their children included: John (1859–1918) in Hyndhope; Thomas of Attonburn, who married Jane Robson from Bellingham; James; Mary; Margaret, who married Dr. J.P. Elliot from Bellingham; Robert Turnbull of Chatto; Jean (d.1913); Elizabeth (d.1870); Susan, married A.O. Rutherford; William Scott (1876–1912); Walter of Toft (b.1878); Arthur of Hindhope (1880–1968); and George of Alnam Moor and Brockdam (1883–1933). Dr. Thomas (1817–59) son of a doctor who came from Whitehaugh in Liddesdale. He was probably born in Carlisle. He studied in Edinburgh and Paris and then took up a surgeon’s practice in Carlisle, in partnership with his brother William. He became known as a pioneering ophthalmologist, who had an early understanding of how to cure strabismus (squinting). He was on the Carlisle committee for the proposed railway between Hawick and Carlisle. He died of typhus at the age of 42 and has a plaque to his memory in Carlisle Cathedral. Thomas (19th C.) wright recorded in Newcastleton in Slater’s 1852 directory. It is possible he is also the Thomas listed as grocer in the same directory. Thomas (1821–69) elder son of Robert of Redheugh and Jessie Elliot. He was born in Castleton and inherited Redheugh jointly with his brother John. In 1851 (while living at Redheugh with his father) he was already listed as farmer of 90 arable plus 1200 moorland acres, and employer of 4 labourers. He was on the Borders Union Railway Committee for Liddesdale in the 1850s. He was a Justice of the Peace in Roxburghshire. He married Elizabeth Kyle and their children included: Robert, who inherited Redheugh and married Effie McGregor Corbett; and Anna Mary, who sold Redheugh in 1918. He died at Knockton, just a few days after his father. He is buried in Castleton cemetery along with his wife. Arthur (1864/5–93), who died in India and is marked on the same gravestone, was probably another son. Thomas (1825–64) younger son of Robert and Janet Black. He was a grocer in Hawick. In Slater’s 1852 directory he was listed on the Fore Row as a grocer and spirit dealer, and in 1851 he was also listed as a blacksmith. In 1847 he married Helen Welsh and their children included: Helen Broad (b.1848); Robert (b.1850); Janet Blake (b.1853); and an unnamed child (b.1855). He was buried in the Wellogate (although the inscription is illegible). Thomas (c.1827–89) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Elizabeth Armstrong (c.1819–1919), who died at Glendivan. Their children included Mary (b.1851) and probably Maggie (1866–86). He died in Langholm. Thomas Robert Barnewall 8th Laird of Harwood (1871–1924), only child of Robert Henry of Clifton Park. He succeeded his father to Clifton Park and his uncle William (7th Laird) in Harwood. He was also referred to as ‘of Clifton’. He sold Harwood to William Elliot of Muir Glen in 1924. He married 3 times: firstly in 1892 to Rose, 3rd daughter and co-heir of Col. John Joicey of Newton Hall, Northumberland, and she died in 1912; secondly in 1915 Dagmar, daughter of C.E. Ahlborn of Landekrona, Sweden, and she died in 1937; and lastly in 1942 to Mrs. Helen Campbell. He had 7 children: Robert Barnewall of Clifton Park, who lived in Carmarthenshire; Lieut.-Comdr. James Kerr; Thomas William Henry; Rose Adelaide Maud; Frances Eva; Lieut. Charles Edward of the K.O.S.B.; and Diana Catherine. Walter (13th/14th C.) recorded in the Ragman Rolls as William ‘Alight’ or ‘d’Alyth’ (in Perthshire) when he swore fealty to Edward I in 1296. It seems likely that he was a direct ancestor of the Eliots of Roxburghshire. He was imprisoned at Tonbridge Castle and his younger brother Thomas was taken to Kenilworth Castle. The family lands at that time were ‘Alyth’ or ‘Eliot’ in Perthshire, although they were probably given Redheugh and associated lands in Liddesdale by Robert the Bruce in the early 1300s. He further paid homage to Edward in 1304. In 1306 he is listed among the adherents of Bruce who forfeited lands, and it was probably in the few years following that he was granted Redheugh. There are no recorded links between him and the later Roberts of Redheugh; however, it may be that his descendants were called Robert in honour of his patron. His son Thomas is recorded as a witness to a Perthshire charter in 1304. Walter (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Margaret Wilson and their children included Elizabeth (b.1635); Janet (b.1644); Janet (again, b.1646); John (b.1648); James (b.1651); and Marion (b.1655). Walter of Arkleton (1634–1702) second son of Adam Elliot of Meikledale, his mother being a daughter of Glendinning of that Ilk. In 1669 he bought back the lands of Arkleton (from Francis Scott), which had previously belonged to the Eliots; he was described as ‘indweller in Arkleton’, showing that he already lived there. In 1671 he paid tax on £700 of land for Arkleton. He probably had the old tower rebuilt as a farmhouse, which contains a stone bearing the date 1676 and initials ‘W.E.’ and ‘K.F’ (for him and his wife). He registered arms in 1676 and in 1694 documented how the estate was to be inherited after his death (excluding his eldest 2 sons). He contributed £100 to the Darien Company in 1695. In 1698 he was on the Commission of Supply for Roxburghshire. In 1670 he married Katherine, daughter of Arthur Foster of Stanegarthside. Their children were: Adam of ‘Tyneside’, who married Ann Drury; Arthur of Harwood, who married Anne Disney; William of Arkleton (d.1721), who married Anne Ainslie of Jedburgh; Nichol in Unthank, who married Jane Lithgow; James, who married Miss Chambers; Walter, who died unmarried; Henry, Robert and Gilbert, who all died young; Jeanette, who married Gideon Scott (later of Falnash), brother of Walter of Harwood; Helen, who married Andrew Murray of Tundergarth by contract of 1679; and Mary, who married Robert Graham of Slipperfield. He is buried in Ewes churchyard, along with his wife and several children. Walter (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Helen Grieve and their children included: William (b.1671); Margaret (b.1673); and Adam (b.1675). Walter (17th/18th C.) 4th son of William of Unthank. He was described being ‘of Carotrig’, which was Carewoodrig. He died unmarried. Walter (17th/18th C.) recorded as an elder of Hawick Parish in 1711. He was called ‘tacksman of ye milne and customer of Hawick’ in 1712 when he asked the Session to find him and his family specific seats in the Church ‘seeing he was burdensome to others’. It thus appears that he was tenant at Hawick Mill and also a weaver of some sort. Robert, who was ‘Tacksman of the Mill and Lands of Hawick’ around 1720 was probably his son. Walter of Ormiston (17th/18th C.) son of Henry of Harwood. He witnessed his brother’s marriage in 1700 and a bond by his brother in 1703. The connection with Ormiston is confusing, since it was probably his son Walter who acquired Ormiston from the Gledstains of Cocklaw. He is probably the Walter, tenant in Bellendean, who was recorded as brother of Isobel, when she married Walter Turnbull of Firth in 1738. He is said to have married the 1st daughter of Andrew Kerr of Lindean (whose first name is not recorded); however, this may be confusion with later family connections with Currer descendants of Kerr of Lindean and Whitmuir. They are said

Walter (17th/18th C.) Bailie-Depute of the Regality of Hawick. He is recorded as ‘Bailie, substitute of Gideon Scott of Fahnish’ in 1700/1 when he presided over a criminal court in Hawick, banishing an offender (who had been in irons for 10 days) from the town. In 1705 he is recorded as ‘bailie’ when he witnessed a baptism for Bailie Robert Ruecastle. He is described as ‘bailie-deput of the regality of Hawick’ in 1718, when his servant John Turnbull was rebuked by the Hawick Parish Session. By 1721 he was ‘late Baillie Depute of the Regality’ (probably meaning he had given up the office, rather than being deceased) when he was recorded having provided ‘as much oak as was ane axtree to the great church bell in the year 1718’ (i.e. the axle for the bell). He may be the same as one of the other Walters. He married Marie Lindsay, and their son Francis was baptised in Hawick Parish in 1701; he was there described as ‘bailie’, with the witnesses being Francis Elliot ‘in Hawick’ and James Ogilvie. He may also have had a son Gideon in 1700. Walter (d.1741) son of Henry of Peel. He was a naval surgeon on H.M.S. Wager, which shipwrecked off Patagonia. This event became infamous because of what followed, with the survivors marooned on an island in the southern winter. There was a mutiny and the crew split into groups. Walter was among officers who were set adrift before regrouping with some of the men and trying to row up the coast of Chile. After suffering several mishaps and enduring horrendous weather Walter became ill and was ashore with 4 officers when the 6 other men rowed off in the boat, never to be seen again. He died of starvation, while the others traded their last possession, a musket, and were taken in a canoe and imprisoned by the Spanish, eventually to return to Britain. John Byron (later Vive-Admiral and grandfather of the poet Lord Byron) wrote ‘he died the death many others had done before him, being quite starved. We scraped a hole for him in the sand and buried him in the best manner we could’. Walter (17th/18th C.) farmer in Brugh. He was 3rd son of William in Whitehaugh and Braidlie (who repurchased Redheugh) and descended from the Elliots of Fahnish. It is unclear whether he farmed at Brugh or if the appellation was just to distinguish him from other Walters. The name of his wife is not recorded. He had 7 children (the order of births being unknown): John, farmer at Adderstoneshiel, who married Helen Moffat from Garvald; Robert (b.c.1700), who married Elizabeth Scott from Doorpool, and whose children lived in Hawick: Adam in Hartside, who married Mary Pott; George, who lived in Cuba; Helen, who in 1727 in Hawick Parish married James Gray, tenant in Whitlaw; William (b.1710) who was a cooper and married Hannah Scott; and Gilbert (b.1725) who was tenant in Blackburnfoot and married Betty Forbes. William was baptised in Kirkton Parish and Gilbert in Cavers. Walter (17th/18th C.) merchant in Hawick. He married Bessie Scott in 1712. Their children included: Janet (b.1713); Archibald (b.1715); John (b.1717); Margaret (b.1719); Jean (b.1724); Marie (b.1726); Bessie (b.1728); and Agnes (b.1730). Walter (1702–bef. 21) only son of Adam of Teindside and grandson of Walter of Arkleton. He was baptised in Hawick Parish. He died before marrying and was succeeded by his sister Katherine. Walter of Ormiston (d.1777) probably son of Walter, he was one of the founders of carpet manufacturing in Hawick. He (or perhaps his father) obtained Ormiston after 1734, when the last of the Gledstains of Cocklaw died, and he proceeded to build a mansion house there in 1747. Before that he was tenant in Bellendale and Braidhaugh. He was recorded as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1761. In 1766 he wrote to the Duke of Buccleuch, in response to a suggestion that a woollen factory be developed on one of the Duke’s estates, proposing that Hawick would be the perfect place. He formed a partnership with others in 1769 (perhaps earlier), constituting the main Hawick carpet factory. He was one of the Commissioners appointed in the court case regarding the division of Hawick Common in 1767. In 1735 he married Margaret (b.1716), daughter of George Currer of Hartwoodburn and their children included: James (1736–1782), who inherited Clerklands; Andrew (b.1739); Simon (b.1741); Walter (1744–80), who died at Bellendale; and Helen (b.1747), who married Thomas Currer (perhaps a cousin), Bailie of Selkirk. The first 3 children were baptised at Bellendale and the last 2 at Braidhaugh (in Cavers Parish). He may have secondly married Isobel or ‘Tibbie’, (probably youngest, b.1708) daughter of William Elliot of Borthwickbrae, and she died in 1797. ‘Mrs Elliot of Ormston in Hawick’, who paid the female servant tax in 1789 and 1791, was probably his wife. Walter (b.1731) son of William from Robertson and Bessie Scott from Wilton. He was a resident of Wilton Parish. His children were...

Elliot (b.1776) and Mary (b.1779). Walter (b.1761); Janet (b.1765); Violet (b.1773); Nelly (b.1776) and Mary (b.1779), Walter (18th C.) farmer at Henderson’s, near Teviothead. He married Isabel Grieve and their children included: Thomas (b.1776), farmer at Colterscleuch andBowenhill; Christian (b.1778); William (b.1780), miller; Margaret (b.1783); John (b.1788), who emigrated to New York State; and Archibald. Walter (18th/19th C.) cooper at Dinlabyre. He is probably the farmer at Dinlabyre, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. John is recorded separately as farmer there (and with more horses), and so presumably a near relative. He married Isabel Douglas and their children included: Christian (b.1777); Adam (b.1779); John (b.1781); Adam (b.1790); and probably Catherine, Margaret, Henry, Elizabeth and Walter. He may be the son of Adam in Hartside born in 1762 (but that would make him too young to have married by 1777). Walter (1753/4-97) younger son of Robert in Hermitage and brother of John. He was probably tenant at Hermitage and also at Millburnholm. He was at Millburnholm in 1786 when he subscribed to a theological book by a Carlisle author. He is probably the Walter listed as a farmer at Hermitage on the 1794 and 1797 Horse Tax Rolls; he owned 2 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. He married Helen Crozier (c.1767–1851) from Brighouse. Their children were: Robert (1791–1858), who married Mary Murray from Whisgills and farmed at Hermitage; Jean (1792/3-1872), who married Henry Elliot from Colterscleuch; John (1795/6–1834) in Templehall; and Helen (b.1797/8), who married Walter Scott, from Newton near Hawick. Walter (1762–1827) shoemaker of the Cross Wynd, son of Robert and Isobel Scott. He married Margaret (or ‘Peggy’) Oliver in Kirkton Parish in 1802. Their daughters were Margaret (b.1803) and Isobel (b.1805), of whom Adam Brown painted miniature portraits, as well as Janet (b.1807). He is listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. His wife Margaret carried on the business and is listed in the 1837 directory. Lt-Col. Walter of Old Melrose (1766–1809) christened in Roberton, he was a younger son of John Elliot of Borthwickbrae. He became Lieutenant Colonel in the 22nd Regiment of Foot (the same rank reached by his elder brother William, who changed his surname to Lockhart). He was recorded among the voters of Roxburghshire in 1788. In 1788 he was already listed as owner of Old Melrose. He was listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805 and in 1819 (when already deceased). He was still listed in 1811 as owner of Old Melrose. He died unmarried. Walter (18th/19th C.) resident of Southdean Parish. He married Jane Haig. Their children included: Christian (b.1793); Robert (b.1795); Mary (b.1797); Adam (b.1800); Margaret (b.1802); Walter (b.1804); William (b.1806); and Christian (again, b.1811). Some of these baptisms did not include the wife’s name, but seem likely to be the same family. It is possible that Jean, born to Walter and Jean ‘Harg’ in Ashkirk Parish in 1789 was also their child. Walter (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick. In 1818 he married Euphemia, daughter of James Laidlaw and Margaret Scott from Hobkirk Parish. They had 3 daughters and 1 son: Anne; James; Janet; and Margaret, who married James Kennedy and had 11 children. He was deceased by 1841, when his wife is listed as a seamstress at Mill Bank along with his daughter Janet. Walter (b.1787) probably son of James and Helen Elliot. In 1851 he was living at ‘Dinleauhaugh’ (i.e. Dinleyaughfoot). He married Janet Dinwoodie (b.1801), from Dumfriesshire. Their children (some of whom were born in Langholm Parish) included: Walter (b.1833); William (b.1835); James (b.1836); and John (b.1838). Walter (18th/19th C.) toll-keeper in Newcastle listed among heads of households in 1835. He may be the same as the shepherd at Castleton Townfoot in 1836 and 1837, farmer at Greenholm in 1838 and 1840, and labourer in Newcastle in 1841. Walter (18th/19th C.) recorded as a flesher in Denholm in 1837. Sir Walter 4th Laird of Wolfelee (1803–87), collector, Indian archaeologist, naturalist and sportsman. Born in Edinburgh, he was eldest surviving son of James, the 3rd Laird. He spent his early life at Hartrigge near Jedburgh and was educated in England. He had an illustrious career in the Indian Civil Service 1821–60, working with the Board of Revenue and as private secretary to Lord Elphinstone. He was later Vice-Chancellor of Madras University and a Member of the Council of the Governor of Madras, briefly serving as Provisional Governor. Early in his career he was captured during an uprising at Mahratta, and was imprisoned for 6 weeks. He was an early contributor to the ‘Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal’ and helped establish the ‘Madras Journal of Literature and
In 1833 he travelled through the Middle East with Robert Pringle of Yair and others, being present at the Church of the Holy Sepulchre when about 500 pilgrims were crushed to death on Good Friday. In 1837 he was appointed private secretary to Lord Elphinstone (a distant cousin), Governor of Madras. He eventually rose to become a Member of the Council of Madras, which was the highest position a civilian could attain. He was responsible for rescuing the Amaravathi Marbles (now in the British Museum), compiled a history of the coins of southern India, donated his Indian coin collection to the British Museum and wrote an important work of ethno-botany ‘Flora Andhirica’ (1859). His hunting trophies from India were fixed around the entrance hall and staircase at Wolfelee. He only succeeded to the estates at the age of 52, and appointed William Oliver of Langraw as factor. In 1860 he returned permanently from India and retired to the family home at Wolfelee, where he had the House altered and extended and immersed himself in natural history and other projects. He was a Vice-President of the Archaeological Society. He donated several items to the Museum, including the bronze horde found near the summit of Ruberslaw in 1863. His collections have been the focus of an exhibit in the Museum, these included stuffed animals, Indian weapons and coins, and he also owned several Raeburn paintings. He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1861. He became a member of the Jedforest Club in 1862. He also served as a Justice of the Peace, Commissioner of Supply and Tax Commissioner for Roxburghshire, as well as Deputy-Lieutenant for the county. He was heavily involved with the construction of the new Hobkirk Kirk in 1863, and was said to have an ‘unwavering belief in the truths of Christianity’. In 1867 he contributed a sketch of the history of ‘Denholm and its Vicinity’ to the Berwickshire Naturalists’ Club. In 1868 he also gave land for the erection of a new Wolfelee Free Kirk. In 1871 he published a call for cooperation among regional societies of naturalists. He was listed as owner of Wolfelee on the Land Tax Rolls of about 1874. By 1875 he also owned part of Kirknove, Wester Swanshiel and half of Langraw. He was also on the committee for the Upper Teviotdale Fisheries Association. He was knighted (as a Knight Commander of the Star of India) in 1866, a Fellow of the Royal Society, as well as several other learned societies and was awarded an Honorary Doctorate by Edinburgh University in 1878. In 1885 he published a final volume of ‘Coins of Southern India’, revising the proofs by ear, since he was quite blind by then. In 1839 (in Malta) he married Maria Dorothea (1816–90), daughter of Sir David Hunter-Blair of Blairquhan (grand-daughter of Sir James Hunter-Blair, Provost of Edinburgh). They had 6 children: James Thomas Spencer (1845–92), who succeeded; Walter Blair (1847–1869), Navy Lieutenant, who died at sea; Edward Hay Mackenzie (1852–1920), who succeeded his brother; Dorothea Helen, who in 1866 married William Elliott-Lockhart, 6th Laird of Borthwickbrae; Herman F., who served with the Black Watch and died childless in Mauritius; and Caroline Elizabeth, who married her cousin Arthur von Poelnitz. Lady Elliot was known as an outspoken woman, who shared in some of her husband’s interests and made Wolfelee an open house for visitors to the district. Sir Walter became blind in old age, but retained his memory to the end, which came suddenly. He is buried in the kirkyard at Chesters. His collection of the coins of Southern India was gifted to the British Museum. A limited-edition book ‘Sir Walter Elliot of Wolfelee: A Sketch of his Life and a few Extracts from his Notebooks’ was written by Robert Sewell in 1896. Walter F. (1804–74) son of John, was born in Hobkirk Parish and was a joiner in Chesters. In 1841 he is recorded as farmer at Abbotsrule and in 1851 as joiner at ‘Abbotrule (penticle)’. In 1827 in Hobkirk Parish he married Margaret (1803–80), daughter of George Minto. Their children included: Helen (1828–1915); John (1830–1910); George (b.1831); William (b.1835); James (b.1837); Walter Henry (b.1841); Robert Henderson (b.1843); and Margaret (b.1849). He emigrated to the U.S.A. with his family in 1852, joining his brother John, who had gone out about a decade earlier. They settled in Otsego County, New York. Walter (b.1811) son of John and Margaret Forrest, he was born in Castleton Parish. In 1841 he was a quarryman at Stitchelhill Quarry. In 1861 he was listed as a blind quarryman, living with his mother on South Hermitage Street. Walter (b.1819/20) born in Castleton Parish, he was shepherd at Lairhope in Teviothead Parish in 1851 and 1861. He married Elizabeth (or ‘Eliza’) Elliot and their children included: William (b.1843); Jane (b.1845); Thomas (b.1847); Walter (b.1850); James (b.1853); Margaret (b.1856); Jane (b.1858); and Elizabeth Turnbull (b.1862). Walter (1828–93) son of Robert and Mary Murray. He was farmer at Hermitage in 1861, having taken over from his father.
In 1861 he was living there with his sister Mary, a domestic servant and 3 farm workers. He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1866. In 1864 he married Agnes, daughter of John Armstrong and Janet Glendinning. Their children were: Robert (b.1865), who also farmed at Hermitage; Mary Murray (b.1867), who married John G. Wilson, manufacturer in Hawick; Janet Glendinning (b.1869), who died aged 14; and Ellen (b.1873), who married Archibald R. Oliver Rutherford of Dinlabyre. Walter (1840–99) son of Andrew, farmer at Twislehope. He was recorded as farmer at Twislehope in 1868. He married Anne Brown and their children were: Andrew (b.1874); James (b.1876); Eliza (b.1878), who married Thomas Potts; Elizabeth Jane (b.1880), who married Christopher Hether and Archibald Bridges: John (b.1881), married Anne Gwilliam; Anne (b.1883), married William Broatch; Sarah (b.1885), married Edmund Harvey Thompson and lived in Galt, Ontario; Walter (b.1887), married Gertrude Gwilliam; Agnes (b.1889), married Dennis Rivers Le Deau; Janet, died in infancy; and David (1898–1918), killed in action in France. In 1905, after his death, most of his family emigrated to Canada. Walter Nichol (1846–82) son of William and Christian Crozier, he was born in Liddesdale Parish. He married Mary Cowan, who died at the Golf House, Hawick in 1933, aged 85. Their daughter Jane Tait died in Hawick in 1892, aged 21. He himself died at Millburn. Walter Blair (1847–69) 2nd son of Sir Walter of Wolfelee. He was born in Madras, served in the Royal Navy, became a Lieutenant and died of yellow fever on H.M.S. Raccoon. Walter (b.1851) eldest son of Thomas in Blackhaugh and descended from the Elliots of Newhall. He worked as a factor in Argyll, but in 1896 purchased Kirndean in Liddesdale. Later he also bought Walterhead of Dryfe wood in 1958. He died suddenly and is buried in Hobkirk churchyard. Walter (1934–) Selkirk-based poet and historian. He spent his early life in the Ettrick valley, served in the K.O.S.B., then worked as a fencer and woodcutter, before a fractured skull led him to change career to being a museum assistant, performer and writer. His books include Clash-ma-clavers chap book’ (1985), ‘Song for Yarrow’ (1991) and the series of guide-books ‘Ballads Trail’ (2000), ‘James Hogg Trail’ (2000) and ‘Sir Walter Scott Trail’ (2000), as well as in ‘Jorum: six poets in Border Scots’ (2000). William (13th/14th C.) Burgess of Perth who signed the Ragman’s Rolls in 1296. His name is recorded as ‘William Alight’. Since there is a strong suggestion that the Border Elliots came via the Perth and Angus areas, it seems possible that he was the direct ancestor of the first Laird of Redheugh, perhaps given lands in Liddesdale by Robert the Bruce in the early 14th century. William ‘One-Eyed’ (14th C.) recorded in Cumberland in 1389, appearing before the justices of gaol delivery. His nickname was recorded as ‘monoculus’ and his surname as ‘Elwald’, the same as Richard ‘parvus’. William of Gorrenberry (15th C.) recorded as ‘Willielmo Elwald’ in 1484 when he was one of the men directed by Elliot the Earl of Angus to infeft Robert of Redheugh in the lands of Larriston. In 1489 he was one of the men further directed to infeft Robert of Redheugh in other lands, there recorded as ‘Willelmho elwad de gouinbery’. He may also be the William who was witness (along with Ninian, Robert, John and Andrew ‘Elwald’ and others) to a sasine for the lands of Robert of Redheugh in 1497. He was probably closely related to the Elliots of Redheugh and Larriston, as were the later Elliots of Gorrenberry. However, it has also been suggested that this branch of the family was one of the ‘twelve great families’ of Elliots who came to Liddesdale in the 14th century. William (15th C.) recorded in the records of the Justice-aire held at Jedburgh in 1493. Hector Lauder was allowed to ‘compone’ for several crimes, including associating with him and ‘alias fures de branxhame’ (i.e. other thieves of Branholme). In 1494/5 John and Thomas Liddersdale in Hawick were allowed to ‘compone’ for aiding the ‘elwaldis de branxame’ in their crimes. It thus appears that there was a branch of the Elliots living near Branholme at that time, although it is unclear how they might have been related to other Elliots. Perhaps the same William ‘elwald’ was recorded at the Justice-aire held in Selkirk in 1494/5 when John Hervey in Fairnilee had remission for crimes that included resetting him and Robert Heiton. William (15th/16th C.) recorded as ‘Willelmi elwald’ in 1494/5 when he failed to appear along with 85 other Elliots, Armstrongs, Wighholms, Croziera and others. This resulted in fines for the Lord of Liddesdale (Patrick, Earl of Bothwell) and the Captain of Hermitage (George Turnbull of Hallrule). His name was given first, suggesting he may have been an important member of the clan. Ralph, listed as brother of William in 1494/5 may have been his brother. Perhaps the same William was also described as ‘Wilzam Elwald’, son-in-law of George Armstrong in a document of 1500, listing pledges of good behaviour made to Patrick, Earl of Bothwell. Several other men of the same name are mentioned in that document, e.g. William and David, sons of William (who may have been his sons, but without further designation it is impossible to say). William (15th/16th C.) son of William. He was listed among many men of Liddesdale who failed to appear at the Justice-aire in 1494/5 to answer for their crimes. It is unclear which William was his father, but David (also son of William) was probably his brother. William ‘Siders’ (15th/16th C.) listed among a large number of Liddesdale men who failed to appear at the Justice-aire in 1494/5. He is listed as ‘Willehmi elwald syders’. He is also recorded in the 1498 pledge to Patrick Earl of Bothwell, along with many other Elliots, Armstrongs and others. He is listed there as ‘Wilzam Elwald, Siders’; the designation is possibly the same as ‘Side’. William (15th/16th C.) listed in 1501/2 as ‘William Elwald his follower’ when Andrew Kerr of Fernihurst received the lands of Feu-Rule from their superior, Sir William Douglas of Cavers. He may have been acting as Kerr’s Bailie. He may have been the same as one of the other contemporary Williams. William (15th/16th C.) recorded as ‘in Ramsigill’ in a list of Elliots and others given respite for their crimes in 1510. Since Robert of Redheugh is listed with only a small number of other Elliots, this might suggest he was closely related to the chief, as well as to Robert of Dinlees and John in Sundhope. He may be the same William ‘in Rammligill’ recorded as a tenant of Whitrope in 1541; the other tenants were Leon, John and Robert. He must have been related to Robert who was also ‘in Rammsigill’ in 1541. William of Larriston (15th/16th C.) second son of Robert of Redheugh, 11th Chief, recorded in 1511. He is listed as brother of Robert of Redheugh in a ‘respite’ given in 1515/6. In 1516 he had a further respite in the Register of the Privy Seal, where he is ‘William Elwald of Larestanis’. A number of other Elliots are also listed, specifically those at Mosspatrick, Dinlees, Thorlieshope, Sundhope and Heuchhouse and ‘Bagget’, and others bound to them, including men by the name of Forester, Thomson, Gledstains, Turner, ‘Leche’, Atkinson, Caverhill, Rowill (presumably Rule), Lawson, Wilson, White, Telfer, Nixon, Henderson, Simpson, Hunter, Davidson, ‘Billop’ (i.e. Billhope), Warwick, Dickson, Noble, Burn and ‘Purdoun’ (Purdom). He was probably serving as chief of the Elliots in 1516, since Robert of Redheugh (his nephew perhaps) had been killed at Flodden, and the next in line Robert was probably still a minor. He probably led the clan during the minority of the next Robert of Redheugh (probably his grand-nephew). He may be the William of Larriston who is recorded in 1547, along with William ‘younger’ (so presumably his son). He is said to have married the heiress of Robert Scott of Horsleyhill and to have had one son, whose son was Gavin, the first Elliot of Horsleyhill (if this was not William, then perhaps he had another son). He may be the Elliot of Larriston whose daughter married Sir Walter Scott of Howpasley. William (15th/16th C.) recorded as ‘William Elwald in M·Patrick’ in a ‘respite’ of 1516 to William of Larriston and a large number of neighbouring Elliots and others. He may be related to the William in Mosspatrick recorded in 1541.  William (15th/16th C.) listed in a 1516 ‘respite’ to William of Larriston and several other Elliots of Liddesdale. He appears as being ‘in Heuchous’, this probably being Heuchhouse near Dinlabyre. The later Martin of Heuchhouse is surely his descendant. William (16th C.) son of Alexander. He was a servant to the Thomas Armstrong of Mangerton, listed along with a large number of Armstrongs and others who were denounced as rebels in 1535 for a raid on Craik. ‘Law’s John’ was also listed, and so possibly a relative. William ‘Mend the caill’ (16th C.) named along with Robert ‘de Flaswood’ in a trial in Jedburgh in 1535. Robert Scott of Allanhaugh was accused of assisting them in stealing 5 cows from ‘Corsle’ (probably Corslie on the Gala Water) from John Veitch. They were probably among the thieves of Liddesdale who it is claimed that Scott brought to attack Midlem and other places. His nickname may refer to the vegetable ‘kale’. William (16th C.) recorded in 1537/8 as being ‘in Layheuch’ (i.e. Leahaugh) along with brothers James and Simon. They were entered with Robert of Redheugh and his brother Archibald for breaking open the shop of Thomas Graham in Selkirk and stealing 100 merks worth of cloth, hides, etc. They were also bound not to harm Thomas Graham or his friends and servants in the future. He was presumably related somehow to the Redheugh branch. William (16th C.) referred to as ‘Williame Ellot callit Bruk’ in 1540/1 when he had respite for reasonable acts, including not being at the Solway raid and associating with the Dougases. One possibility is that his name is associated with ‘Brugh’. William (16th C.) tenant of Mosspatrick recorded in the rental roll of Liddesdale in 1541. Williams with no designation are also listed as tenants of several other farms, including ‘Pantodene’, Singdean, Heuchhouse and the small steadings of Clearlands, etc. It is unclear if some of these were the same men. He was probably related to the William recorded in Mosspatrick in 1516. William ‘Cock’ (16th C.) recorded in 1541 along with Willie ‘White Sark’ and Clement Crozier, accused of having killed Englishman Robert Hall at ‘Tredermayn’. His name is listed as ‘Wilckoe Elwald’, which seems likely to be a combination of his forename and nickname. The same ‘Wilckoes Elwald’ was listed along with Clem Crozier and Robin of Thorlieshope, accused in 1541 of resetting English fugitive Robsons. He may have been related to ‘Cock’ Crozier and it seems likely he was father of ‘Wilckis Hob’ recorded in 1569, as well as ‘Wilcox’ Gawen Elliott’ recorded in 1587/8. He may be the same as one of the other Williams. William ‘White Sark’ (16th C.) recorded in 1541 along with ‘Wilkoke’ and Clement Crozier. They were accused of having raided ‘Tredermayn’ and killed Englishman Robert Hall. His name is given as ‘Willy Elwald called ‘whitsarke’. William (16th C.) listed in 1544 as ‘Willie Elwode John Crossier sister sone’, when he was among local men who gave their assurances to the English. The John mentioned here, who was presumably his mother’s brother, was a prominent member of the Crozier family at that time, possibly the son of ‘Cock Crozier’, who seemed to be chief of the Slitrig valley branch of the family a generation earlier. William (16th C.) resident of Whithope recorded in 1549, among a list of the tenants and servants of Sir Walter Scott of Brauxholme who complained about the Kers ravaging their farms. William of Larriston (16th C.) recorded as ‘Elliot of Larestanis’ in 1556 when he had a bond for entering William Nixon to John Kerr of Ferniehirst. He may have been the son of the previous William of Larriston, and the ‘younger’ mentioned along with William of Larriston in 1547. He is probably the ‘yowng Wylliam Elwand’ involved with a bond to enter some Elliots as prisoners at Ferniehirst in 1546; however, his brother Simon was witness on his behalf. He also (along with Robert of Redheugh and Archibald) had a bond to enter Robert Crozier as a prisoner in 1548; he signed with the help of the notary (meaning that he could not write). Around the late 1550s he was one of the men on the panel to resolve the conflict over the lands of Newbigging (in Hassendean) between the children of Gavin of Horsleyhill. He may be the ‘Williame Elliot, callit young Williame’ listed (after Robert of Redheugh) in 1561 among a list of men charged to appear before Queen Mary regarding the state of the Borders. He is surely the ‘William Elliot of Lamestone’ recorded in part of the trial for the murder of David Scott of Hassendean in 1565, along with Gavin of Horsleyhill and William of Fallnash. For his non-appearance John Douglas of Cavers and William Douglas of the Crook were fined and he was denounced as a rebel. However, he may be confused with William of Braiddie, who was also described as being ‘of Larriston’. William ‘Elder Will’, ‘the Tod’ (d.bef. 1586) recorded in 1567 when his son John was captured in Hawick for being a Liddesdale thief. In 1569 he was ‘elder Will Elliot’ when he was pledge ‘for himself and his haill branche’, with Alexander Home of Manderston as his surety. Also in 1569 he was ‘Elder Will the Tod’ when held in Blackness Castle as pledge for his eldest son and also ‘David Curling his brother’. In 1570 he was among a group of Elliots who signed a bond related to the release from ward of his son Hob, as well as John of Heuchhouse. There was surety for one of his sons (name not given) in 1577, according to the register of the Privy Council. In 1578/9 he was among 22 Border Lairds who did not appear before the Privy Council when summoned. He had been among the sureties for an earlier assurance for his son Hobbie, as well as John of the Heuchhouse. He is also recorded in 1580/1 when his son John was convicted of riving. In 1581 he was ‘Will Elliott, called Elder Will’, among a large group denounced as rebels for failing to present men to answer their riving crimes. His sons David and Martin signed the bond of assurance to the English Wardens, taking ‘the burden upon us for ourselves, brethren, and brethren bairnes and servants. He is probably the ‘Willie the Tod’ from Liddesdale who was already deceased in 1586 when his son William was granted a lease of the lands of ‘Culgatis’. He may be the Will of Heuchhouse accused along with Martin’s Archie in 1590, of stealing from ‘Halliden’ and additionally he was named among Elliots, Nixons, Shiels and others who in 1590 were accused by the tenants of Woodhall of stealing from them; however, these are probably his son William. The Will of Heuchhouse accused (along with Rich and others) accused of raiding into England in 1595 may have been his son William. William ‘Wedder-Neck’ (d.1561) hanged in 1561 for the crimes of theft and reset, along with Peter Turnbull (‘the Monk’) and Henry Black in Softlaw. It is unclear how he might have been related to other Elliots. His name is recorded as ‘William Elliot, callit Woddir-nek’. William ‘Will’ (16th C.) listed in 1563/4 along with George in Adderstoneshieil, Alexander and 2 Croziers. They were to be presented by John Gledstains of Cocklaw to answer accusations brought against them by Englishman William Selby. His name is recorded as ‘Will Elliot of the Burnmouthis’, which seems likely to have been Burnmouth near Saughtree (although perhaps there was another place of the same name in the Slitrig valley, where the Gledstains’ lands were). William (16th C.) listed as ‘bastard sone to vmqle Robert Elliot’ in the 1564 trial for the murder of David Scott of Hassendean, along with Elliots of Horsleyhill and others. His father may have been Robert, 15th of Redheugh. He may be the ‘William Elliot of the Redhughe’ who was among several Elliots accused by the English in 1581 of stealing cattle and goods from ‘Symwhaute’. He may also be the William, brother of ‘Robin Elliot’ accused of raiding Englishman Andrew Taylor’s livestock and goods in 1582. William (d.1580) 5th Laird of Horsleyhill, was the 2nd son of Gavin, the 1st Laird. He is presumably the William, along with his father Gavin and brothers Andrew and Robert, accused of murdering Hugh Douglas in about 1547. In the late 1550s he was involved in the family dispute over the lands of Newbigging in Hassendean and in 1563 was arguing with John Scott in Catslack. He is probably the William of Horsleyhill recorded in the Register of the Privy Council in 1563/4, along with his brother Robert, in a case involving the Scotts of Tushielaw stealing cattle from Bailielee; their cautioner was John Preston, Burgess of Edinburgh. In 1564 he was listed as ‘fadir brother and tutour’ to Gavin, son of the deceased Robert of Horsleyhill; this was in connection to the complaint by John Turnbull of Hassendean against Dand (who was lso his brother). In 1564 it was presumably he (although the Lairdship around this time seems hard to follow) who was found guilty of involvement in the murder of David Scott of Hassendean; also involved were Robert, Gavin and Archibald, who were probably his brothers. He was banished after this, but was pardoned in 1565 by Queen Mary (perhaps because of his marriage to a Kerr). He purchased the lands of Horsleyhill from his nephew William, initially in 1568 for a period of 15 years, finally buying them outright from William’s wife Margaret Turnbull in 1570/1. In 1569 he also bought the Middle Mains of Hassendean from his nephew. In 1572/3 he promised the Regent that his family, servants and tenants would continue to be obedient subjects, with Thomas Weir of Kirkton as cautioner (it is unclear what events this was in response to). In 1574/5 he was involved in a court case where Scott of Bucleuch claimed some lands; he was able to prove that he was infested in Westerhouses, Clarilaw and Hassendeanburn, but his superior, William Douglas of Cavers, was instructed to remove him from the lands of Catslack. In 1575 he was one of the men summoned by the Privy Council to settle the feud between the Elliots and the Pringles; his brother Gavin was also summoned. In 1575/6 he was a complainant regarding ‘mails’ for his steading of Easter Montbenger. He may be the William ‘of Torslyhill’ (if this is an error for ‘Horsleyhill’) on Monipennie’s c.1597 (but drawn up earlier) list of Border Lairds. He married Elizabeth Kerr sometime before 1556, and secondly in 1569 married Elizabeth, daughter of James Douglas of Cavers. He had at least 2 children: Robert, who succeeded; and William of Caveling, (b.1572), Burgess of Peebles, who married Christian Chisholme. James in Peebles may have been another son. William ‘Will’ (16th C.) tenant of Gavin of Elliot of Falnash in 1569. The Laird appeared in Hawick to give surety for his tenants. His name is recorded as ‘Wille Elliot’ and he may have been related to Dand, Jock and Hob, other Elliots also listed as tenants. William ‘Ringan’s Will’ (16th C.) mentioned in 1579 when his son ‘Archie Elliot, sone to Ringhanis Will the portar’ was among Armstrongs and their compatriots who promised to yield to Lord Maxwell. He is separately recorded in 1579 as ‘Ringanis Will Elliott the portar in Glenvoran’. He may have been related to Ninian, tenant in Ewesdoors and Glenvoran (with Will, son of Ringan the Porter also named in the same citation). Possibly the same ‘Ringanis Wille Elliot’ was listed in 1611 for not appearing at court in Jedburgh. William ‘Grey Will’ (16th C.) recorded in 1569 when John of the Park was held in Balwearie Castle, as pledge for him and ‘Hob Mirk Elliot’. He was listed in 1574 among Scotsmen who were reset in England. His name there is given as ‘Will Elliott, called Gray Will’. He is also listed in 1583 among the Elliots of the Park branch. His name is given as ‘Will Elliot, gray Wille’. He is probably father of ‘Grey Will’s Jamie’, who is also listed. He is ‘Gray Will’ when listed along with Jock of the Park in a list of Borderers in the 1580s. William ‘Jock’s Willie’ (16th C.) warded with George Ramsay of Dalhousie in 1580, when ordered to be presented to the Privy Council. He was recorded in 1581 when he was released from being warded as pledge for the ‘gang’ of Elliots of Burnhead. Hob, brother of Gavin’s Hob (this may be an error for Gavin’s Jock) of Ramsiegill remained as pledge for these Elliots. Also in 1581 he was ‘Will Elliott, called Jokkis Willie, pledge for the haill gang of Ramsygill’. He was also recorded in 1582/3, when Martin of Braidlie, Gavin’s Jock and Robert Kerr of Acrum were fined by the Privy Council for his non-appearance, along with ‘Ill Hob’. He was ‘plege for the haill gang of Ramsygill, quha wer ressavit be thame out of ward of the tolbuith of Edinburgh’. ‘Ill Hob’ of Ramsiegill was his brother, and presumably they were both sons of Jock. His son may be the ‘Wyll Elliotts John of Burnheads’ recorded in 1595. William ‘Will the Lord’ (16th C.) recorded in Monipennie’s list of Border chiefs of c.1594. He is listed under Ewesdale along with ‘John the Portars Son’ and ‘Will of the Devisleyes’. In 1569 he is ‘Will Elliot callit the Lord’ when held in Loch Doon Castle as pledge for John of Fiddleton, Hob ‘the Lady’ and Hob of Unthank, all Elliots of Ewesdale. In 1578/9 he is ‘Will Elliot, callit the Lord’, when John Carmichael, younger of that Ilk was caution for him (and other Elliots of Ewesdale) not to raid into England. It is possible he is the same man as Will of Fiddleton. William (16th C.) recorded as ‘Will of Devisleyes’ in Monipennie’s list published about 1594 (although probably compiled earlier). He is listed among the Elliots of Ewesdale. It is possible that the place is a misreading of ‘Eweslees’. William (16th C.) son of ‘Jock’s Willie’, although it is unclear to which branch of the family he belonged. In 1580/1 he was sentenced to imprisonment for theft, along with several other Elliots, Armstrongs and Nixons of Liddesdale. William ‘Will’ (16th C.) tenant in Mospatrickhope in 1581 when he appeared on a list of Armstrong, Elliots and others who accused the Scotts and their allies of various crimes. He and 2 others gave assurances for the Elliots of Gorrenberry to the English Wardens in 1584. He is recorded as being ‘of Morspatrikshors’ in Monipennie’s list of Border chiefs (published around 1594) along with ‘Archie Keene’ under the heading ‘Gorumberie’. He is probably related to the William who was tenant in Mospatrick in 1541. William ‘Aichrie’s Will’ (16th C.) second son of Archibald of Falnash and Gorrenberry. He is first mentioned around 1556 and probably still alive in 1596. In about 1556 he is ‘Vil El- lot callit Arche Wille’ when, along with Walter Scott, he rented ‘Westcoit’ in Ringwoodfield from the monks of Melrose. He is probably the William ‘callit Archeis Will’ listed in 1561 among men charged to appear before Queen Mary regarding the state of the Borders. His brother ‘Gawin El-wald’ also appeared before the Queen in 1561, promising to provide the names of thieves. He was ‘of Goorenberry’ when witnessing a bond of his father’s in 1561/2, and hence must have acquired Gorrenberry by then. In 1567 Robert Scott of Thirlestane and Master Thomas Weston relieved Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme as surety for him and Sim Elliot in Dodburn. He is recorded in 1569 acting as surety for his tenants in a bond of security signed at Hawick (but not listing any tenants explicitly); he is there recorded as ‘Will Ellot alias Archeis Will’. When he failed to appear in 1569 (along with Gavin of Falnash and Sim of Dodburn), Scott of Buccleuch was to be liable for £1000. He was also one of the designated relief pledges for Gavin of Falnash in 1569. Along with several other Elliots he signed the bond with the Regent Morton in 1572. He is probably the William ‘of Gorumberry’ who was to be entered into ward in St. Andrews in 1573. In 1574 he was involved in a dispute with William Douglas of Cavers over the lands of Caerlenrig (which had been held on wadset by his father from Douglas’ father). Douglas tried to have him removed from the lands, and in 1576 the case was still not settled, with his sisters having to confirm that he was still alive. He may be the William in Gorrenberry who was one of the men summoned by the Privy Council in 1575 to resolve the feud between the Elliots and the Kerrs and also summoned with other Border Lairds (including Robert of Redheugh and Martin of Braidlie) to appear before the Privy Council in 1583/4. He is recorded as ‘William Ellot of Goddamburie’ when accused along with Tom of Copshaw, the Armstrongs of Whithaugh, and others of attacking the farms of the Laird of Bellister in England in 1587. He was said to have been part of the group who raided Carlisle Castle to free ‘Kinmont Willie’, being named by an English informer as ‘Will Ellott goodman of Gorrombye’ (although he is likely to have been too old to take part himself). In 1590 he and Simon Armstrong of Whithaugh were accused of rieving from the Lord Warden’s tenants. He is probably the William ‘of Gorrumberrie’ in 1599 (unless this was a son) among Elliots who signed a bond at Branholme with the Wardens of the West March regarding the inhabitants of Liddesdale; along with Robert of Redheugh, Martin of Braidlie and Jock of Copshaw he was listed as one of the ‘principalis of oure breche’. His son may have been the ‘Willie’s Archie’ who, along with many other Elliots, signed bonds with Scott of Buccleuch in 1599; he did this with his hand on the notary’s pen ‘because I can nocht wryte my self’. He is the ‘doughty Willie o’ Gorrenberry’ in some versions of the ballad ‘Jamie Telfer in the Fair Dodhead’. William ‘Will o the Steele’ (16th C.) recorded in 1569 when he and his brother Hob of the Shaws were excepted from the pledge that John of Tholrieshope had for the whole of that branch of the Elliots. A letter from Sir John Forster in 1576 complains that his brother John ‘Elwood’ had stolen 100 sheep from his lands in Hexhamshire. In 1581/2 his son Will was listed among men accused of raiding Harwood-on-Teviot. He was listed among the Elliots of the Braidlie branch in 1583. In 1584 he was among the Elliots of the Tholrieshope branch who gave assurances to the English Wardens at Hermitage. In 1590 there is a complaint by the tenant of Birdoswald about a raid into England made by both old and young ‘Will Ellot of the Steill’ in 1588, and in 1590 there was a further complaint against ‘Will of the Steile the elder, and his son Will’. The younger William is also recorded on his own in a further accusation in 1590, while he was accused in 2 separate cases, where he is ‘elder Will of the Steile’ (and ‘Steill’) and in a further complaint of 1590 (for stealing from Englishman John Armstrong 2 years earlier) where his is just ‘Will of the Steill’. Both he and his son were among men accused in 1590 of having raided the farm of Dotland a couple of years earlier. Both he and his son are on a 1590 list of Elliots (including from Redheugh and Braidlie) accused of raiding the English farm of ‘Whynatlie’ in the previous year. Also in 1590 he is ‘old Will Ellot of the Steile’ listed among Elliots and Armstrongs complained about by a large group of Englishmen for a raid on Blackcleugh in Kirkhaugh. Hence it seems likely that all mentions of Will of the Steele after that date are probably for his son. William ‘Will’ of Hartsgarth (16th/17th C.) probably 2nd son of Robert (15th) of Redheugh. He was hence brother of Robert (16th) of Redheugh, as well as ‘Gibbie wi the Gowden Gairties’, Archibald and Gavin of Brugh. He was sometimes referred to as ‘Robyn’s Will’ and was recorded as early as 1581. He was said to have ridden with his brother on raids into England and the pair were involved in a dispute with Scott of Buccleuch. In a letter from Musgrave to Queen Elizabeth’s Chancellor he is ‘Wille Ellot of Harskarth’, brother of the chief. He was accused of leading a group of Liddesdale and Teviotdale men on an attack into Mindrum in England in 1583/4, in which several men were killed and a number taken prisoner; these being freed by the King and the Warden had orders to get him to repay what was stolen, but that had still not been done by 1590/1. In a letter from the King in 1584 he is described as ‘Will Ellot of Hartstarth bry’ to Robene of Reidhwech’. He was ‘of Harkescarth, called Robyns Will’ when accused of being on a raider on the tenants of Featherstonehaugh in 1587; Martin’s Airchie was also there, as well as 160 others, and it is claimed that they burned 23 houses and took 3 prisoners. He served as a guardian for his nephew Robert (17th) of Redheugh; in about 1590 he was listed as ‘Well Elliot of Hartsarco, tutor of Reidheuch’ among the landed men of the Borders. In 1593 he was ‘of Lariston’ when accused of being involved in the death of Charlton’s in England, along with Scott of Buccleuch. He was also ‘William Elliot of Lawreston’ when accused in 1593 (along with Martin of Braidlie and Kinmont Willie Armstrong) of leading about 1000 men in a raid on Redesdale, taking 1005 head of cattle, 1000 sheep and 24 horses, as well as burning a mill and stealing £300 worth of goods. In 1593 he was ‘of Hartsarco’ when accused of killing 2 Tynedale men called Dods. In 1594 there was a complaint against him by Englishman Gilbert Park of ‘Warton’. In 1595/6 he complained about men of Tynedale who were stolen cattle from him, and he himself involved on a retaliatory raid into England; he was there ‘Will Elliot of Larrestone alias Harskarth’. He was ‘of Larestone’ in 1594/5 when there was an attempt to deliver Jock Graham as prisoner in his stead. He is probably one of the 2 Williams who signed a bond written by Sir John Forster to try to end family feuds on the Border in 1595/6. He appears to have held Hartsgarth through wadset until 1595/6, when it was gained by William of Larriston (son of Martin of Braidlie). In 1597 he (along with his nephew Robert of Redheugh and John of Copshaw) wrote from Larriston to the English Warden, explaining that they had sworn to the Scott of Buccleuch that they would not have dealings with any Englishmen. He was also known as William ‘of Rigg’ until 1622, when Winningenroig was sold by his brother, and he received 2500 merks for his share. In 1605 he represented his mother, Marion Hamilton, in a complaint against the Douglases. Some time before 1608 he married his half-cousin Jean, daughter of Robert Rutherford of Edgerston, with her mother being a daughter of Gavin Elliott of Stobs; this may be garbled into him being the ‘William called ‘Neck of Steel’, a son of Robert Elliott of Laristoun’, who is said to have married Joan, daughter of Thomas Rutherford, the ‘Black Laird’ of Edgerston. He may have married a second time, since in 1642 the deceased Jean Rutherford is described as his 1st wife. He probably had children, but this branch of the Elliots was extinct by 1634 (as stated in the matriculation of arms for Sir Gilbert Elliott of Stobs in 1673). Note that some genealogies suggested he had 3 sons, including William of Roan, but this may be confusion with another William, perhaps the son of Martin of Braidlie. His children probably included: Robert (d.bef. 1637), who succeeded; Francis, who succeeded his brother; and James, who was ‘second lawful son’ in 1639. William ‘Willie’ (16th C.) son of William, ‘callit the Tod’. He is probably the eldest son (name not given) of ‘Elder Will the Tod’, who, along with his brother ‘David Carling’, were the pledges for whom their father was held in Blackness Castle in 1569. In 1586 he was granted a lease of the lands of ‘Culgaits’ in Liddesdale by Francis, Earl of Bothwell. It is unclear where exactly these lands were. Given a connection with ‘Tod’, it is probable he was son of ‘Elder Will’. William (16th C.) tenant in Dodburn. In 1586, along with his brother Archie, he was accused of ‘a great strough at the Eschelles in England’. William of Falnash (probably their laird) was surety for them at the Justice Court in Jedburgh. He may have been related to other Elliots associated with Dodburn. William (16th/17th C.) recorded in an indenture of 1594/5 between the Scottish and English Wardens. His name is written as ‘Wille Elliott, called Cowlaughes’ when he was delivered as a pledge for the crimes of Hob (who may have been related). Probably the same man was ‘Will Elliott, called Cowsauche’ listed among Liddisdale men declared as fugitives for not attending a court in Peebles in 1605. He may be related to John ‘Cowshawes’ who is recorded in 1590. William ‘Will’ (16th/17th C.) recorded along with ‘Riche Elliott of the Hewghhouse’ in 1595, as well as another Elliot called Hob. They were accused of stealing horses from a farm in England. William of Braidlie (d.1606/7) 2nd son of Martin, who was probably responsible for the burning of Hawick in 1565. He was known as ‘Will o the Dale’, as well as being ‘of Lariston’, ‘of Hartsarco’ (although this may be confusion with a different man, brother of Robert of Redheugh) and later ‘of Dinlabyre’. He may be the ‘Will Elliot of Bradlie’ who entered the bond of 1557 to bring ‘Robene Pet’ to the Warden, John Kerr of Ferniehirst (although that seems too early, and hence may be a different William). Along with several other Elliots he signed the bond with the Regent Morton in 1572. In 1574 he was one of the hostages taken by the Regent Morton to ensure the good behaviour of the clan and was held by James Scrimgeour, Constable of Dundee. In 1578, there was a pledge to the King after he was released by Scrimgeour; he was there referred to as William, son of Martin. However, within a few months he headed 200 men on a raid into Tynedale. He may have spent time in the wars in Flanders and France, since he is not recorded for more than a decade. He was ‘of Larriston’ in 1593 and 1594 (making him possibly confused with another family branch). He led the Elliots and Armstrongs in a massive raid on Tynedale in 1593, with as many as 1,000 men taking part; they drove more than 2,000 head of livestock back to Scotland, as well as taking £300 in goods. In 1595 he was ‘of Lareston’ when his servants John and Clement Nixon were complained about for a raid into England. In 1595/6 he may be the same man as ‘William Elliott of Harscat a principal actor in the attempt of Tyndale’ delivered by Scott of Buccleuch to Sir John Forster (this is presumably Hoscote, but it is not entirely clear if this is the same or a different William). In 1596 he was ‘Wille Elliott of Lairiston’ when (along with Walter Scott of Harden and the young Laird of Whithaugh) accused of stealing a large number of cattle and horses from ‘the Leabecke at Wilkinskarre’. He was ‘Will Elliott of Larestane’ in 1597 among a list of men the English Warden demanded pledges for. He is probably the ‘William Ellwald of Duneleabyre’ listed among 5 Scotsmen delivered by Sir Walter Scott to the English Deputy Warden in 1597 as hostages for the general peace on the Border. He remained a prisoner for more than 2 years, despite pleas by several Elliots for his release. In 1598/9 he was ‘William Elwood, elder’, (to distinguish him from a youngster of the same name) among a group of Scotsmen who tried to escape from their English prison. In 1600 there was an offer to substitute his son Robert, which was rejected; however, he and Simon Armstrong of Whithaugh escaped soon afterwards. He may also be the William ‘of Eskez’ listed in 1600 (along with William of Clintwood and Simon Armstrong of Whithaugh) as the men delivered by Scott of Buccleuch to the English Warden as pledges for Liddesdale; after his escape from York he is described as ‘Will of Hoscotes an Elwood’, suggesting he is the same William who was tenant in Hoscote (but then the designations become hopelessly confused!). In 1606/7 he was one of the leaders in Liddesdale who were rounded up and executed by the Earl of Dunbar, then Commissioner on the Border. He married Mary, daughter of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch, and their children were: Robert of Dinlabyre; Gavin of Braidlie; and William of Braidlie. He was hanged at Foulden Justice Court along with his nephew Martin and other Elliot and Armstrong leaders. William (1546/7–aft. 1616) 4th Laird of Horsleyhill, son of Robert, he succeeded from his brother Gavin when he was 19. In 1566 he was served as heir to Gavin in a Precept of Clare Constat of the Middle Mains of Hassendean and of Horsleyhill, from the superior, Alexander, Lord Home. He then settled the ‘4 merk land’ of Horsleyhill on his wife, Margarta Turnbull. There is no record of children for the couple. In 1569 he gave a charter of the lands to his uncle William and in 1570/1 his wife sold Horsleyhill to his uncle William. However, it appears he also sold Horsleyhill and the Mains of Hassendean to his uncle Gavin in 1572, with his uncle William taking the case to court, with Gavin’s infeftment being annulled in 1574/5. In 1573 he also sold Caveling to his uncle William. He may be the William of Horsleyhill who is recorded in a bond of 1594/5, when James Gledstains of Cocklaw pledged that Hector and Richard Turnbull of Clarilaw would not harm him or Gavin Elliott of Stobs. In 1616 he is recorded acknowledging the redemption of the reversion of the Middle Mains of Hassendean, granted by his grandfather Gavin of Horsleyhill to Lord Home in 1555. He may be the William of Horsleyhill whose son Robert ‘Ellet’ is among those listed in the King’s 1594 ‘respite’ for the murder of Lord Maxwell at Drye Sands; if so, then he had at least one child. William ‘Will o the Steele’ (16th/17th C.) son of the elder William. In 1588 both old and young ‘Will Elliott of the Steill’ were complained about for a raid. In 1590 he is recorded as ‘William Elliott of the Steill the younger’ among a group of Elliots and others who took livestock and goods from Over Warden in England. Also in 1590 both he and his father were accused of leading a raid on Catton, where they took livestock and prisoners. He was further accused in 1590 (along with Shiels and Nixons) of stealing from Roland Walker. Both he and his father were accused in 1590 of being in a group of Elliots and others who raided Dotland about 2 years earlier. He is listed along with Elliots and others accused in 1590 of stealing from the ‘Hewrde’ family, maiming and taking prisoner Christopher ‘of the Whithall’. Both he and his father are on a list of Elliots (including from Redheugh and Braidlie) accused of raiding the English farm of ‘Wlynatlie’ in the previous year. In 1596 there was a complaint that he and others (including Anthony Elliot of Binks and Geordie Simpson) had raided lands in England at King Water. In 1597 he is listed among men for whom the English Warden demanded pledges. In 1597 he was `William Ellwald of Steale' when he was among 5 Scotsmen delivered by Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch to the English Deputy Warden. However, he was recorded as `Will Ellwood alias Will of the Stile' when released on a bond to return to Scotland; however, he soon led a raid into Tynedale, taking 200 head of cattle and 30 horses in broad daylight, so that the English Wardens called for his execution. He may have escaped punishment, since he is recorded in 1599 as `Will of the Steill' when, along with many other Elliots, he signed a bond with Scott of Buccleuch. William of Braidlie (16th/17th C.) son of William of Braidlie and Dinlabyre. He may be the same as one of the other contemporary Williams. William of the Binks (16th/17th C.) 2nd son of Simon of Philhope and grandson of Martin of Braidlie. This line of Elliots of Binks is easy to confuse with the slightly later line that came from the Elliots of Falnash. His wife's name is not recorded. Their children were: Anthony `in Rouchlie'; Simon of the Binks (d.bef. 1656); James; and Robert (d.1663). William `Will' of Fiddleton (16th/17th C.) recorded occupying Fiddleton in 1567. In 1578/9 John Carmichael, younger of that Ilk was caution for him, that he would not raid into England. He was complained about for a raid into England in 1589. He is probably the `Will of Fyttington' listed among a large group of Elliots who were accused in 1590 of taking Ralph Hall and other prisoners and ransoming them. Also in 1590 he was listed first in a group of Elliots and about 80 others accused of stealing from `Trowhen' and killing 2 Englishmen in 1589, with the complaint repeated in 1590; he was there `Will Elliott of Fydderton'. Additionally in 1590 he was the first in a list of Elliots, Armstrongs and Croziers, said to be 200 strong, who were accused of raiding the towns of `Allenton' and `Linbriggs', taking 100 cows, 20 horses and 20 prisoners. He was also listed among Elliots, Armstrongs, Turnbullis, Laidlaws and Croziers, accused in 1590 of rieving from the Laird of `Trogwhe' and Hedley of `Garret Sheills'; he was also among a group accused of having earlier stolen livestock and goods from the same people. Also in 1590 he was listed along with other Elliots, Croziers and Armstrongs, accused of taking cows and horses from the tenants of Woodhall and Netherhouses in England. In about 1600 Sir James Sandilands complained about the theft of 2 horses by him. He was probably the Will of Fiddleton listed among men declared as fugitives for not appearing at a court in Hawick in 1605: his sons John and Ringan were also listed as fugitives. He was apparently still alive in 1608 when his son Ninian was sentenced to be executed for killing one of the King’s Guards while trying to escape arrest. William, son of John of Burngrains, was also convicted (and the records confusingly also switch the 2 men’s fathers in one part, so it is possible that his son was William and not Ninian). He must have been related to the Gavin and John recorded in 1606. William `Will’ (16th/17th C.) recorded as `Will Elliott, sone to Will Elliot of the Steill’ in 1581/2, when he was among men accused of raiding the farm of Harwood-on-Teviot. He was declared a rebel after not appearing. William `Will’ of Thorlieshoppe (16th C.) listed in 1590 along with Will of Fiddleton and others of stealing livestock and goods from the Laird of ‘Trogwen’ and Hedley of ‘the Garret sheills’. His name is given as `Will Elliott of Thorlshippe ‘Renyon Will’’, suggesting that his father was Ninian. William 3rd Laird of Falnash (d.bef. 1620) son of Gavin. He is first recorded in 1564, when he was `Gawenis Willie, of Fallinesche’ at the trial for the murder of David Scott of Hassendean; he was denounced as rebel for not appearing, but must have been rehabilitated later. In 1566 he was among a group of Elliots cited for attacking the Pringles and killing George Pringle of Torwoodlee; this was part of a feud between the 2 families. He also purchased ‘Hoscoit’ (i.e. Hoscote). In 1575 he was listed as son of Gavin of Falnash among those summoned to answer for the feud between the Elliots and the Pringles. In 1579/80 he was charged by John Carmichael, Keeper of Liddesdale, with raids into England. He is probably the William of Falnash who signed the Assurance of Liddesdale with the English Warden Sir John Forster in 1584; this was along with Robert of Redheugh and Martin of Braidlie, making it clear that he was an important Elliot chief at that time. In 1586 he was cited along with 15 other Border lairds for failing to bring their followers to justice. He was also surety for 2 of his tenants in 1586, Will in Dodburn and his brother Archie; however, the fines were not paid and by 1590 he was ‘put to the horn’ (although he must have somehow been reprieved). He is named in 1590/1 in a case brought against the Scottish Wardens and leaders on the Border, for failing to produce certain fugitives. He is probably the ‘Williame Ellet in Fellinesche’ listed (along with his son Robert and many others) in the King’s ‘respite’ of 1594 for the murder of Lord Maxwell at Dryfe Sands. In about 1590 he is listed among the landed men of the Borders. He is mentioned in an indenture of 1594/5 between the Wardens, his case (whatever it was) being delayed. He may be one of the 2 Williams who signed a bond written by Sir John Forster to try to end family feuds on the Border in 1595/6. He was one of the trustees for the young Robert (17th) of Redheugh appointed in about 1597. In 1598 there were complaints by the widow of James Douglas of Knightsgir against several of his ‘brother’s, tenants and servants’. Also in 1598 there were complaints to the Privy Council by Sir James of Sandilands about raids on his property in which his name is listed. Along with his son Robert, he signed a bond with Scott of Buccleuch in 1599. Also in 1599 he witnessed the bonds (signed at Branxholme) between Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch and the Armstrongs and Elliots of Liddesdale. In 1600 he was among leaders from the Borders who were ordered to attend a meeting at Falkland to discuss ‘the present disordouris of the Bourdours’. In 1602 he signed the ‘New General Band’ along with other Border landlords. He received 500 merks for redemption on the lands of Outersiderig with Walter Scott of Synton. He then purchased the farms of upper Ewesdale from the Earl of Home, specifically Mosspeeble, Over and Nether Woodend, Unthank, Fiddleton, Blackhall and Mosspaul; he forced out the former tenants. After Martin of Braidlie and Prickenhauagh was executed in 1607, he paid the 4000 reversion money to Sir James Douglas of Drumlanrig and acquired the lands of Braidlie in the Barony of Hawick. In 1607 he was cautioner for John Elliot of Copshaw, who was found guilty of the murder of George Pringle of Torwoodlee; he had to pay the fine of 500 marks on the non-appearance of John of Copshaw. He had a charter of the lands of Arkleton (presumably purchased from the Armstrongs) in 1611. Also in 1611 he served as cautioner in Jedburgh for Gavin ‘of the Schawis’ and for the Laird of Foulshields. Additionally he was part of an assize at the Justice Court on Jedburgh in 1611. He signed a bond in 1612 (along with several Scotts) for keeping the peace in the Borders. In 1618 he is referred to as ‘William called of Falnash in Braidley’, suggesting he had already passed Falnash to his eldest son. He had 4 sons: Robert of Falnash, J.P. in Roxburghshire who married Marion Scott; John of Arkleton, also called ‘of Falnash’, who married Ester Armstrong; Archibald, who is mentioned in 1595; and probably one other, who owned Unthank, and whose children were the Elliots of Meikledale, Mosspeeble, Unthank and Eweslees. William (16th C.) tenant in Falnash Mill in 1589. He was listed among the ‘brothers, tenants and servants’ of William of Falnash who were complained about by Margaret, widow of James Douglas of Knightsgir, for stealing cattle from her lands of Corsetburn. William (d.c.1608) son of John of Burngrains. Listed (along with his brother Hob) among men declared as fugitives for not appearing at a court in Hawick in 1605. Along with Ninian, son of William of Fiddleton (although they are also confusingly listed the other way round, with his father being Will of Fiddleton) he was sentenced to execution in 1608 for killing one of the King’s Guards while resisting arrest. The pair had been declared rebels some years earlier for crimes including theft and murder. William of Caveling (b.1572) 2nd son of William, 5th Laird of Horsleyhill. His mother was Elizabeth Douglas of Cavers. In 1592 he was passed over (in favour of Gavin Elliott of Stobs) as tutor to his nephew William of Horsleyhill because he was still too young. In 1599 he was described as indweller and Burgess of Peebles; his connection was through his uncle, Archibald Douglas, who was Parson in Peebles. He was served heir to his father in some lands in 1603, when he was described as a Burgess of Peebles. About this time he sold Caveling to Gavin Elliott of Stobs. In 1604 he bought (under wadset and reversion) the lands of Cruxton from Robert Scott of Thirlestane. He was listed in 1607 among Douglases and others who swore not to harm the Horsburghs. He may be the William ‘called of Horsliehill’ who was among the group of Scotts and others who attacked Selkirk Mill in 1608. Also in 1608 he rescued a man who was chased into his house in Peebles by a gang of his enemies. He was still living in 1610. He married Christian Chisholme. William of Gorrenberry (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1611 when he was one of the cautioners for ‘Kirstie Elliot callit Hobis Kirstie’. Other cautioners included Robert of Redheugh, Archie of Clintwood, Martin’s Hob and William of Princkinghaugh, some of whom were probably relatives. He was also witness in 1613 to the infeftment of the lands of Robert of Redheugh. It is unclear how he was related to the other Elliots of Gorrenberry or of Redheugh. William (16th/17th C.) son of Archie of Clintwood. He is listed among 5 Scotsmen delivered by Sir Walter Scott to the English Deputy Warden in 1597. His name is repeated in 1600, when the list of pledges for Liddesdale, delivered to the English Warden by Buccleuch consisted of him, William ‘of Eskez’ (possibly ‘Hoscote’, and probably his uncle, William of Braidlie and Dinlabyre) and Simon Armstrong of Whithaugh. He was described as ‘young Elwood’, also called ‘the boye’ when listed in 1598/9 as one of the Liddesdale prisoners in England. In 1600 (after the other 2 Liddesdale pledges had escaped from prison in York) he is described as son of ‘an Ellwood called Martin’s Archie’, making it clear that he was a grandson of Martin of Braidlie. William (16th/17th C.) listed among men declared as fugitives for not appearing at a court in Hawick in 1605. He was recorded as ‘Will Eliott in Burneheid, called Murth’. He was presumably related to other Elliots of Burnhead and may also have been related to Jock ‘the Murt’. William ‘Gled Will’ (16th/17th C.) listed among men those who were fugitives for not appearing in a Borders Commissioners’ court in Hawick in 1605. He is recorded as ‘Gleyd Will’. William (16th/17th C.) son of Martin and Agnes Lorraine. In 1618 his mother granted him her half husbandland of lands in Lilliesleaf. He later deponed this land to Andrew Riddell, as confirmed in a service of heirs to Walter Riddell in 1702. William of Prickinghaugh (16th/17th C.) recorded as witness to the 1613 ineftment for Robert of Redheugh in his lands. It is unclear how he was related to Christie (son of ‘Martin’s Hob’ of Prickinghaugh) who was declared a rebel in 1611. Also in 1611 he was one of the cautioners for ‘Kirstie Eliott callit Hobis Kirstie’, with others including Robert of Redheugh, William of Gorrenberry, Archie of Clintwood and Martin’s Hob, some of whom were probably relatives. William of Rig (16th/17th C.) 2nd son of Robert of Redheugh, 16th Chief and brother of Robert. He may have been raised partly by his step-father Gavin Eliott of Stobs. He was probably the brother of Robert of Redheugh who had a bond to appear at court in Jedburgh in 1611. He was witness to the ineftment of Robert of Redheugh in his lands in 1613. He may also have been known as ‘of Hartsgarth’. He married Jean, daughter of Thomas Rutherford of Edgerston and Jean Elliott, co-heiress of Stobs. Their children were: Robert (d.bef. 1637), who succeeded; Francis (d.bef. 1699), related to the Elliots of Dinlabyre; and James (d.bef. 1699). He may be the William of Hartsgarth who died in 1613 and whose great-grandson William of Dinlabyre was Kene’. He was acquitted of charges at court in Jedburgh. He may have been related to Archie and Hob, both called ‘Kene’, recorded a few decades earlier. William ‘Blackheid’ (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1611. 2 Hendersons were accused in Jedburgh of several crimes, including the theft of 4 cows of his from the lands of Flatt. He may have been related to Airchie and Jock, who had the same nickname. William ‘Sweet Milk’ (d.1627) from the Rule valley, said to be a minstrel. He is cited for immorality as ‘William Sweet Milk’ in the Cavers Parish records in 1623 and along with Robert Scott and Helen Langlands in 1624. He was killed at Newmill in a duel by William Henderson from Priesthaugh, as immortalised in the song ‘Rattlin Roarin Willie’. Although the basis of the story was traditional, the Jedburgh Presbytery records describe his ‘fearful and cruel slaught’er’ and the excommunication of his assailant. A thorn bush near the spot was called ‘Milksweet Willie’s Thorn’, and was still pointed out in the early 1800s. It is unclear to which branch of the Elliots he belonged, however, his murderer is said to have been rooted out by Gilbert Elliott of Stobs and young Elliot of Falnash (either of whom may have been a distant relative). It is possible he was related to ‘Dandie Eliott called Sweet Milk’ whose name is recorded in association with complaints about raids into England in 1598. William (16th/17th C.) 7th and last Laird of Horsleyhill, son of Robert and Agnes Scott. He was a minor when his father died in 1592, with his grand-uncle Gavin of Stobs appointed as his tutor. In 1606 curators were appointed to manage his affairs and in 1607 they requested from the Chancery the writs and charters of Horsleyhill so that he could be served heir to his grandfather William. However, he sold Horsleyhill shortly afterwards to Gilbert Eliott of Stobs and was thereafter ‘called of Horsleyhill’, rather than being the Laird. He became a retainer of Robert Scott of Haining, who may have been related to his mother. In 1617 he was accused of attacking William Mitchell, a Burgess of Selkirk, apparently trying to rip his ears off, as well as half his beard; however, he was acquitted on assurance of ‘his great oath’. In 1619 he was found guilty of attacking and stabbing William Turnbull in Philiphaugh, who had loaned a plough to Sarah Lough in Selkirk to till a piece of land that he had tried to get for himself. He was fined £40 and ordered to remain in Edinburgh until he found caution for 500 merks. He is probably also the ‘Wm. Elliott, sometimes in Horslaw’ who in 1623 was acquitted of the charge of stealing sheep from Clinhill. William ‘Will’ (16th/17th C.) listed among Liddesdale men declared as fugitives for not attending a court in Peebles in 1605. His nickname was given as ‘Caudflute’. William ‘Laurie’s Jock’s Willie’ (16th/17th C.) listed among men of Teviotdale declared as fugitives for not appearing before a court in Jedburgh in 1606. His name is recorded being ‘callit of Peill’ in 1622 when 2 men were accused of stealing sheep from his lands at Brighousecleuchhead. William (16th/17th C.) recorded being ‘in Heisches’ in 1623, when he was entered at the Judicial Court. His cautioners were Gilbert Elliott of Craigend and Archie of Bowholm. However, it is unclear where ‘Heisches’ may have been. William (16th/17th C.) possessed the lands of Hermitage in 1632. He may have been ancestor of the later Ellots of Hermitage. William (17th C.) described as ‘William Ellot, tailor’ (17th C.) recorded as being ‘called of the Boulex’ when he was listed among a large number of Borderers who were declared fugitives in 1642. It is unclear where the place name might have been, but many of the men he is listed with were from the Liddesdale area. William (17th C.) described as ‘William Elliot, tailor in Cavers’ in a Hawick magistrates case of 1642, when Douglas of Cavers’ servant accused him and several other people of stealing his wallet in Hawick. William (17th C.) from Ashkirk, he married Mary Taylor. Their children included James (b.1651). William (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. His wife was Agnes Elliot and their son Francis was born in 1653. William of Mosspeebel (17th C.) 2nd son of an unknown Elliot, probably owner of Unthank. His grandfather was William of Falnash. He married Mary, daughter of John Carmichael, Laird of Castlehope. They had 2 sons: Robert of Mosspeebel, who died unmarried; and John of Castlehope and Billhope. William (17th C.) recorded in 1662/3 as Chamberlain to the Scotts of Buccleuch for Canonbie and Morton, and in 1663–70 for Hawick, Hassendean and Eckford. He is probably the same as one of the other Williams. William of Binks and Harwood (d.1662) eldest son of Simon of the Binks. In 1637 he bought the lands of Harwood, including Tythehouse and Appotside from Edward Lorraine

Elliot

Parson at Bedrule. He is sometimes suggested (e.g. by Tancred) to have instead been son of William Eliott of Stobs. His great-grandson, Sir John was physician to the Prince of Wales and was created a baronet in 1778. William (16th/17th C.) recorded being ‘callit of Peill’ in 1622 when 2 men were accused of stealing sheep from his lands at Brighousecleuchhead. William (16th/17th C.) recorded being ‘in Heisches’ in 1623, when he was entered at the Judicial Court. His cautioners were Gilbert Elliott of Craigend and Archie of Bowholm. However, it is unclear where ‘Heisches’ may have been. William (16th/17th C.) possessed the lands of Hermitage in 1632. He may have been ancestor of the later Ellots of Hermitage. William (17th C.) described as ‘William Ellot, tailor in Cavers’ in a Hawick magistrates case of 1642, when Douglas of Cavers’ servant accused him and several other people of stealing his wallet in Hawick. William (17th C.) from Ashkirk, he married Mary Taylor. Their children included James (b.1651). William (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. His wife was Agnes Elliot and their son Francis was born in 1653. William of Mosspeebel (17th C.) 2nd son of an unknown Elliot, probably owner of Unthank. His grandfather was William of Falnash. He married Mary, daughter of John Carmichael, Laird of Castlehope. They had 2 sons: Robert of Mosspeebel, who died unmarried; and John of Castlehope and Billhope. William (17th C.) recorded in 1662/3 as Chamberlain to the Scotts of Buccleuch for Canonbie and Morton, and in 1663–70 for Hawick, Hassendean and Eckford. He is probably the same as one of the other Williams. William of Binks and Harwood (d.1662) eldest son of Simon of the Binks. In 1637 he bought the lands of Harwood, including Tythehouse and Appotside from Edward Lorraine

William ‘Laurie’s Jock’s Willie’ (16th/17th C.) listed among men of Teviotdale declared as fugitives for not appearing before a court in Jedburgh in 1606. His name is recorded being ‘callit of Peill’ in 1622 when 2 men were accused of stealing sheep from his lands at Brighousecleuchhead. William (16th/17th C.) recorded being ‘in Heisches’ in 1623, when he was entered at the Judicial Court. His cautioners were Gilbert Elliott of Craigend and Archie of Bowholm. However, it is unclear where ‘Heisches’ may have been. William (16th/17th C.) possessed the lands of Hermitage in 1632. He may have been ancestor of the later Ellots of Hermitage. William (17th C.) described as ‘William Ellot, tailor in Cavers’ in a Hawick magistrates case of 1642, when Douglas of Cavers’ servant accused him and several other people of stealing his wallet in Hawick. William (17th C.) from Ashkirk, he married Mary Taylor. Their children included James (b.1651). William (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. His wife was Agnes Elliot and their son Francis was born in 1653. William of Mosspeebel (17th C.) 2nd son of an unknown Elliot, probably owner of Unthank. His grandfather was William of Falnash. He married Mary, daughter of John Carmichael, Laird of Castlehope. They had 2 sons: Robert of Mosspeebel, who died unmarried; and John of Castlehope and Billhope. William (17th C.) recorded in 1662/3 as Chamberlain to the Scotts of Buccleuch for Canonbie and Morton, and in 1663–70 for Hawick, Hassendean and Eckford. He is probably the same as one of the other Williams. William of Binks and Harwood (d.1662) eldest son of Simon of the Binks. In 1637 he bought the lands of Harwood, including Tythehouse and Appotside from Edward Lorraine

William ‘Laurie’s Jock’s Willie’ (16th/17th C.) listed among men of Teviotdale declared as fugitives for not appearing before a court in Jedburgh in 1606. His name is recorded being ‘callit of Peill’ in 1622 when 2 men were accused of stealing sheep from his lands at Brighousecleuchhead. William (16th/17th C.) recorded being ‘in Heisches’ in 1623, when he was entered at the Judicial Court. His cautioners were Gilbert Elliott of Craigend and Archie of Bowholm. Elliot

(with the permission of Gilbert Elliot, who had the lands in wadset). However, his father was listed as owner in 1643. Thus, although he is sometimes referred to as the 1st Elliot Laird of Harwood, this may really have technically been his father Simon. He later sold Binks to John Elliot of Burnmouth. He may be the William ‘in Harret’ who acted as surety for Janet Scott (wife of John Glendinning, ‘Sowtail’) in 1644, when she promised to appear before the Justice-General on a charge of witchcraft. He is listed in a contract for the vicarage teinds of Hobkirk Parish in 1648 and discharge of 1649. He was also the William ‘of the Burnmouth, indweller in Liddesdale’ who had a loan discharged in 1653. In 1654 he purchased a wadset of Appotside from Edward Lorraine and his son Walter; his signature was written by the notary because he could not write himself. He purchased Appotside outright in 1656 and was confirmed in his charters of Harwood, Tythehouse and Appotside by his superior, Sir Gilbert Elliot of Stobs. He (along with his son John) purchased lands at Baxtonlees near Peel in 1659 from Sir Gilbert Elliot of Stobs. After the Restoration both he and his brother Robert were fined £1,200 for supporting the Commonwealth. He was recorded paying £433 6s 8d on the Land Tax Rolls in about 1663. He married Christian Greenlaw in 1627 and in 1659 gave her a sasine of ‘liferent’ of Appotside (presumably as part of the marriage contract); he was then described as ‘of Apitsyde’. His children were: Simon of the Binks and Swinside (although there is some confusion between him and his son William); Henry (or ‘Harry’), who succeeded to Harwood; Jean, the eldest daughter; Margaret, who married William Elliot of Philippie; Jean (also called ‘Jennet’), the youngest daughter); and John of the Binks and later of Baxtonlees or Peel. George may have been another son, who died about 1666. He was ‘indweller in Burnmouth’, although described as ‘of Harwood’, when he died. His testament and inventory of goods are in the National Archives. In 1665 ‘Harie Elliot, son-in-law’ is recorded as an overseer of William of Binks, who may have been him (if the date is correct). William of Unthank (d.1670s) probably 3rd son of the 4th son (whose first name is unrecorded) of William of Falnash, his brothers being Adam of Meikledale, William of Mosspeebie and Ninian of Eweslees. He ‘flitted from Eweshead’ in 1642’ and probably moved to Gorrenberry. He is recorded in 1660 when he was guardian to the 2 grandsons of his brother Ninian in Eweslees. He is referred to as ‘called Unthank’ in a list of debtors in the last testament of William Elliot of Harwood and Binks in 1662. He was also among the men fined (£1800) after the Restoration in 1662, presumably meaning that he acted against the King in the Civil War. In 1670, along with Simon of the Binks and Swinside, and his own son Adam, he purchased Lymiecleuch (including He is probably the William who paid the land tax for half of Lymiecleuch in 1678 (the other half being paid by Sir William Elliot of Stobs). Corriesike, Langbyre and Giddenscleuch) from William Elliot, younger of Stobs. His children included: Robert, who died unmarried; Adam of Mosspeebie and Lymiecleuch; William of Penchrise; and Walter of Carewoodrig. Rev. William (c.1617–85) from Borthwickshiel, son of Robert. He graduated from St. Andrews University in 1637 and became minister at Yarrow in 1641. In 1654 he was one of the local men who signed an attestation about the ‘carriage and deportment of the deceased Francis Earl of Buccleuch’; this was part of efforts to have the fines reduced on the Buccleuch estate that had been imposed by Cromwell for the Earl supporting King Charles. He was confined to his parish in 1662 for refusing to conform to Episcopacy. However, he was ‘indulged’ (i.e. allowed to resume his duties) in 1679 for about a year. In 1664 he had a bond with Sir William Scott of Harden (his father and grandfather having had close connections with the Scotts of Harden). When he died he had debts amounting to £8,333 13s 4d (Scots probably), with his brother Thomas in Borthwickshiel becoming his executor. His will is recorded in 1686. William of Lymiecleuch (17th C.) local landowner of the mid-to-late 1600s, according to James Wilson. He may have been a son of Ninian of Eweslees, or else son of William of Unthank and the same as William of Penchrise (or perhaps was William of Unthank himself). William of Grange (17th C.) paid the land tax in Ancrum Parish in 1678. He was probably related to other Elliots of Grange. He was a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1685. In 1788 he was listed as a former owner of lands in Nether Ancrum, valued at £20. William of Penchrise (17th C.) son of William of Unthank, he was the first Elliot at Penchrise. He may have been the same William (along with Robert) of Lymiecleuch and Penchrise who was involved in a court case in 1695 over not paying a bond due to John Riddell of Haining; not appearing, their lands were yielded to their guarantor, Sir Gilbert Elliot of Stobs. He married Bessie Grieve, who died in 1683 (her will being recorded in 1684). Their children included: William of Penchrise, who married Janet Elliot of Thorlieshope; Henry in Riccarton, who married Isobel, daughter of John Elliot in Dinlees; John in Leaugh, who married Mary Elliot; Ninian in Ruecastle, who married Agnes Paterson; Adam in Catlowdie, who married Mary Irving; Jean, who married Robert Grieve in Teindside; and Eupham, mentioned in 1683.

William of Straghan (17th C.) said to be a direct descendant of the Elliots of Stobs, he was the progenitor of County Fermanagh branch. He was a Lieutenant in the army, who defended Ballyshannon and fought under William III at the Battle of the Boyne. He married his cousin, Mary, daughter of William Cairnes of Killyfaddy.

William of Bewlie, 1st Laird of Borthwickbrae (b.1658), eldest son of Thomas of Bewlie, who was tenant in Borthwickshielis. His mother was Margaret Scott from Chamberlain Newton. He may be the William who was taxed for 4 hearths at Borthwickshielis in 1694 (assuming he kept his father’s tenancy of the farm there). It is said that he wanted to buy Horsleyhill, but since it was not for sale, he instead purchased Borthwickbrae. He received a Crown Charter for Borthwickbrae in 1698. He was on the Commission of Supply for Roxburghshire in 1690, 1695 and 1704. He was involved in a bonds with Henry Elliot of Harwood in 1692 and with Sir William Scott of Harden in 1694. He contributed £200 to the Darien Company in 1695. He was one of the ‘curators’ for Alexander Scott of Synton. Scott of Satchells describes him as a good farmer (‘kept the sheep upon the Down’) and a generous supporter of the poor ‘was the Poors relief, for he fed and clad them both with Flesh and Fleece’, in contrast to his cousin James of Bridgehaugh. In 1686 he married Isobel, daughter of William Scott of Synton and sister of John Scott of Synton. He may also have married a second time, but her name is unknown. He had 16 children, 9 of whom survived: William (1689–1756), who succeeded to the Borthwickbrae Lairdship; Francis, who became a merchant’s apprentice in Edinburgh in 1710; Thomas (b.1687): Jean (b.1688), who in 1705 married Gideon Scott of Newhouse, brother of the Laird of Woll: Mary, who in 1715 married Gideon Burnett in Whitehope; Christian (b.1697), who married Robert Elliot of Rig (probably Caerlenrig) in 1721; Anne (b.1704), who married Thomas Elliot, minister of Kirkton and Cavers; Susanna (b.1704); and Margaret, who married William Borthwick in Glendinning. Isobel (or ‘Tibby’, b.1708) may have been his youngest daughter and married Walter Elliot of Orniston.

William of Philhope (17th C.) eldest son of Archibald of Philhope. He married Margaret Elliot of the Binks and Harwood in 1663. He is recorded in the 1678 Land Tax Rolls as ‘William Elliot of philip for braidielie’, paying the tax for land valued at £216 in Hawick Parish. He was also listed paying tax on land valued at £400 in Selkirkshire in 1678; he was recorded being ‘of philip’ and ‘hes bene thretie [although hard to read] yeires bypass residenter in the land’. He was ‘Wm Elliott of Phillip’ on the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. In 1700 his wife assigned to him the remainder of the money bequeathed to her by her mother. His son William was a witness to this document of 1700. He was probably succeeded by William, although father and son are hard to separate in records. He may have been the Elliot of Philhope who entered into a teinds agreement with the curators of the Duke of Buccleuch in the late 1660s.

William (17th C.) listed as son of deceased William of Philhope, son-in-law of William of Binks, when he was in the testament for the deceased George, son of William of Binks. He was recorded in a list of landowners and tenants of Hassendean Parish in 1666. He was one of the heritors in support of the suppression of Hassendean Parish in favour of Roberton. There is a ‘letter of horning’ against him (and Henry Elliot of Harwood) by Walter Scott, called Westport in 1676. His son Arthur became an apprentice skinner in Edinburgh in 1694. And possibly the same Arthur married Mary Douglas in Edinburgh in 1721, by which time William is recorded as deceased. Another son James became a tanner’s apprentice in Edinburgh, also in 1694. William (17th C.) mercchant in Hawick. In 1669 fellow merchant Samuel Newbie was convicted of striking him in the head with his sword and wounding him in the face with a bridle.

William (17th C.) resident of Hawick recorded in 1693. The Bailie of Regality, William Scott, was in his house sorting out some financial business between John Hardie and Walter Rue-castle, when he was assaulted by Walter Ruecaster. He must have been an innkeeper, or some prominent townsman. He could be the William of the Sandbed listed among those contributing to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. William of Dinlabyre (d.1693) son of William of Braidielie and Mary Scott, daughter of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch. However, he seems to have lived rather late in the century for a man whose grandfather is meant to have died in 1607, suggesting that there may be some confusion here. He was a local landowner of the mid-to-late 1600s, and appears to have been the most prominent Elliot in Liddesdale in the latter half of the 17th century (after the death of the last Robert of Redheugh). He may be the William of Dunliebvre whose lands in Castleton Parish were valued at £400 in 1643; if this was not him it must have been an earlier relative. In 1667 he was ‘now of Dinlabyre’ when served heir to his great-grandfather William (who died in 1613), in the lands of Killoley, Big-house, Heuchhousebrae, Dinlabyre, Easter Flicht, ‘Hie-Eshies’ and Burnfoot in Liddesdale; in 1691 he appears to have been served again as heir to his great-grandfather William of Hartshaugh in 4 quarters of the lands of Killoley, Brighouse and Heuchhousebrae (called the lands of Dinlabyre), as well as Easter Flicht, ‘Hydashes’ and Burnfoot. He is probably the William (transcribed as ‘of Dunilliperies’) who paid tax on £400 of land in Castleton Parish in 1663. In 1672 he was appointed one of the Justiciars for the Borders (for apprehending mosstroopers). He signed the bond of provision for fulfillment of Sir Gilbert Elliott of Stobs marriage contract in 1677. He paid the land tax on £400 in Castleton Parish in 1678. He was made a Justice of the Peace in 1680. A carved stone lintel bearing his initials and the date 1682 is built into a rockery at Dinlabyre and an earlier one dated 1668 might suggest when he had the house rebuilt. In 1691 he was served heir to his grandfather. He firstly married a sister of Archibald, Lord Rutherford and secondly in 1686 married Margaret Scott. His children included: Robert of Dinlabyre, who probably sold Dinlabyre; Thomas; Henry; Gilbert, apprenticed to a periwig-maker in 1692; and Christian. His testament is recorded in 1693. William of Caerlenrig (17th C.) local landowner of the mid-to-late 1600s, according to James Wilson. William (17th C.) tenant in Carewoodrig. He is recorded being ‘in Carritridge’ in 1685 among local men who were accused of frequenting conventicles. William of Meikledale (17th/18th C.) 2nd son of Adam of Meikledale. He succeeded on the death of his brother Andrew (who was eldest son of Adam with his 2nd wife, Janet Scott) in 1682. He was served ‘heir of tailzie’ to his ‘brother german’ (meaning that they had the same mother as well as father) Andrew’s lands of Meikledale and Meikledalehope. In 1696 he sold (by ‘wadsett and reversion’) Meikledale to his nephew William, 3rd son of Walter of Arkleton. He married Barbara Forrester and also possibly a Scott of Merrylaw. His children included Adam (who died at Hartsdie in 1760) and Lucy. He is said to have died in reduced circumstances, leaving his children unprovided for. He was still alive in 1698. William (17th C.) recorded as resident at Pinglehole in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. William (17th C.) tenant in Stripshieldsen in Castleton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. William (17th C.) tenant in Powisholm in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. William (17th C.) resident at Gillfoot in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. William (17th C.) resident at Westburnat in Castleton Parish on the Hearth Tax records of 1694. William (17th C.) resident of the west-side of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. He could be the same as one of the contemporary Williams. William (17th C.) tenant in ‘outer slaidhills’ according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. William (17th C.) resident at Monk’s Croft (in Hassendean Parish) according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He was probably related to John who was also listed there. William (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Agnes Allan and their children included: Margaret (b.1685); and William (b.1687). He could be the same as one of the other contemporary Williams. William of Arkleton (1665–1721) 3rd son of Walter of Arkleton, he succeeded to the estate after his father disinherited his older brothers. In 1700 he had a Crown Charter for the lands of Meikledale and Meikledalehope, which he purchased from his uncle William of Meikledale. In 1692 he married Anne, youngest daughter of Robert (or perhaps Andrew) Ainslie of Jedburgh and she died in 1733; her dowry involved Meikledale. His children included: Katherine (b.1697), who married David Laing of Westerkirk, secondly later Charles Telfer minister of Hawick and thirdly Robert Elliot of Fenwick; William (b.1700), who died unmarried; Adam (b.1702), who succeeded and married Christian of Thorlieshope; and Christian (1704–23). He is buried in Ewes Kirkyard. William of Cooms (d.1714) younger son of Robert of Black Tarras (or perhaps the eldest son, it is not clear). He inherited Cooms (half of Black Tarras) from his father. He was declared bankrupt in 1690, but receive a Crown charter of Cooms in 1708 (perhaps being enabled to keep Cooms because his brother-in-law purchased Lodgegill from his brother Simon). He married Helen, sister of William of Thorlieshope. Their children included: John (b.1709), who married Agnes, daughter of...
Robert Mader of Greenhill; a second son, whose name is unknown; Henry in Sorbietrees, who married Christian Scott of Falnash; and Simon. William (17th/18th C.) tenant in ‘Adderstown’ (probably Adderstoneshiel) in Cavers Parish. His children included: an unnamed child (b.1698); Jean (b.1701); Frances (b.1704); and Margaret (b.1705). In 1708 he was listed being in ‘Etherstoneshields’ when his daughter Betty was baptised. William of Wells, ‘the Lace-man’ (c.1670–1728) descendant of the Elliots of Brugh, he was eldest son of John and Margaret Johnstone, who lived at Southfield and are both buried in Hawick. It is also speculated that he derived from an illegitimate son of Gavin of Brugh, but these generations are quite uncertain. He was an apprentice to merchant Patrick Johnstone, but it is unclear where this was (since there is no record of it in Edinburgh). Johnstone seems likely to have been a relative of his mother and was a Bailie in Edinburgh (perhaps the Patrick who was later Provost of Edinburgh). In 1692 he became a Burgess and Guild Brother of Edinburgh and was by that time already a merchant in London. He was a successful dealer in gold and silver lace, hence his nickname ‘the Lace-man’, and was also described as the King’s tailor in London (but this could be local hyperbole). He owned an estate in Reigate in Surrey. He is referred to as ‘of Brugh and Wells’, having purchased the estate of Wells in 1706 from Thomas Rutherford; this was on the advice of his son-in-law (Gilbert Elliott), who owned neighbouring farms. He had Wells erected into a barony in 1707 and registered his arms in 1711. He is surely the same Mr. Elliot, born and educated at Nether Southfield, who is recorded as supplying Hawick Parish with a new mort-cloth in 1720. About 1720 he also purchased the estate of Haddon (near Kelso) from Sir Gilbert Elliott (it is said, to help him financially). Further Bordens purchases included Ormiston, Hunthill and Scraesburgh. Despite his local lands and importance, he lived mainly in London, visiting the Borders seldom and briefly. He is said to have lost money in the South Sea Bubble around 1720. He worked to have his son-in-law pardoned after he had to flee following the death of Col. Stewart of Stewartfield in 1726. He spent £1000 setting up his son in business in London, and also left ‘many thousands of pounds’ for the the grandchildren of Sir Gilbert Elliott of Stobs, his son-in-law. He married Eleanor, whose last name is not known, and she died in 1745; she may be the ‘Ellenor Tankard’ who married William Elliot in London in 1682. Their children included: William, who succeeded and became a Colonel; John, whose son inherited Wells; Eleanor (d.1728), who married Sir Gilbert Elliott of Stobs; Charlotte (d.1753), who married Maj.-Gen. Roger Elliot (of the St. Germains family), Governor of Gibraltar, and secondly married a Mr. Burroughs; Arabella, who married John Bishop and had a son Elliot Bishop; and Margaret, who married Jonathan Waggaman. He left a sizeable fortune when he died. When he witnessed his daughter Eleanor’s marriage contract in 1702 it was also signed by John Elliot, tailor of London, who must have been a relative, possibly his son. Portraits of him and his wife, and of his daughter Lady Eliott, once hung in Wells House. His will was made at St. Martin in the Fields, and describes his surviving family, as well as mentioning a miniature portrait of his painted by Mr. Harle. He was buried in the Dissenter Burial ground at Bunhill Fields. An inventory of Wells House, drawn up for his son in the second quarter of the 18th century, includes portraits of him and his wife, as well as his daughter, Eleanor. William of Swinside (17th/18th C.) eldest son of Simon and grandson of William of the Binks and Harwood. He received a charter of Swinside during his father’s lifetime in 1674. He was witness to the marriage contract of a daughter of Henry Elliot of Harwood in 1692. He was ‘younger of Swinside’ in 1698 when he was on the Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire, but just ‘of Swinside’ when listed as one of the heritors of Roxburghshire who petitioned Parliament in 1700. He was also a Commissioner of Supply in 1704. Sometime before 1702 he married Barbara, eldest daughter of Thomas Rutherford of Wells. She died by 1722 and he remarried, probably to Elizabeth McClean. In 1730 he purchased Sharpitlaw in Kelso Parish, which he conveyed to his son Robert, retaining liferent for himself. He had 9 children: William of Swinside (b.1701); Thomas (b.1703); Sussana (b.1705); John (b.1706); Adam (b.1709); Elizabeth; Walter; George; and Robert of Sharpitlaw. Note that Tancred’s history places him as the son of William of the Binks and Harwood, rather than the grandson. A document of 1707 lists William ‘younger of Swinside’, so it is also possible that there was an additional generation. William (1661/2–1731) tenant in Whithaugh and Braidlie. He was eldest son of John of Castlehope and Billhope and descended from the Elliots of Falnash. Around 1730 he bought Whithaugh for his 1st son and Redheugh for his 2nd son. He married Isabella (c.1680–1769), daughter of Scott of Falnash (perhaps Gideon Scott, who would be the right generation, or his brother Robert). Their children included: John of Whithaugh (c.1702–78), who married Margaret, daughter of Robert Scott of Gorrenberry; Robert of Redheugh (1709–93), who married Margaret Beattie; and William in Braidlie (1711–71), who died unmarried. Note that the dates of his birth and death are very uncertain, with some sources suggesting he died in 1767, aged 89. He and his wife were buried at Hermitage Chapel. William (17th/18th C.) 2nd son of James of Redheugh and brother of Robert of Larriston. He was grandson of ‘Gibbie wi the Gowden Garters’. He will was proved in 1694. According to a family pedigree of about 1704 he `went away to be a horner'. William of Penchrise (17th/18th C.) son of William of Penchrise and Bessie Grieve. His siblings included Henry in Riccarton, John in Leahaust, Ninian in Rucastle, Adam in Catlowlie and Jean (wife of Robert Grieve in Teindside). He married Jane (or Janet), daughter of John Elliot of Tholishedope.

Their children included: Gilbert of Mount; John; Walter; James in Millholm; William in Selkirk, who married Marion Elliot; and Adam in Dykeraw. He may also be father of Thomas, who was born in Cavers Parish in 1699. Note that information about this family seems uncertain. William (17th/18th C.) younger son of Adam in Dykeraw, he was tenant farmer in Millbunholm. He is said to have firstly married a Miss Henderson and secondly married Marion Nixon, with whom he had a son William in Dykeraw. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. His children included: Beatrix (b.1707); Agnes (b.1710); and Dand (b.1714). William 1st Laird of Wolfelee (1688–1768) second son of Thomas of Oakwood Mill and grandson of Thomas of Borthwickshiel, with his mother being Jean Inglis. He was a lawyer in Edinburgh, being sent there by his father, and it is said he did not really settle down to a serious business life until his marriage. He was apprenticed to Andrew Haliburton, W.S. and his own law office was in the Lawnmarket, although later he also had an office in Selkirk. He dealt with legal business for Scott of Harden for several decades. He purchased the estate of Wolfelee in 1730 (from his distant relatives, the Eliotts of Stobs), although it is said that he seldom stayed there, except when his legal business took him to the area. He sold off the Stonedige part to his future father-in-law. In 1751 he bought several neighbouring properties from William Kerr of Abbotrule, as well as half of Kirkknowe from Richard Mair. And in 1757 he and his son Cornelius bought ‘Forkings of Unthank’, ‘Eyelee’, the ‘old Glebe of Hobkirk’ and the ‘Cleugh or back brae of Unthank’ from Thomas Scott of Stonedige. He was recorded as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1761. In 1722 he married Helen, daughter of Robert Elliot of Midlem Mill and Elizabeth Elliot of Harwood. In 1727 he secondly married Margaret, daughter of William Scott of Stonedige, and she died only 3 years later. In 1732 he lastly married Margaret, daughter of Adam Ogilvie of Hartwoodmyres, and she died in 1796; there was a portrait painted of her. His children were: Thomas (b.1723, by his 1st marriage), a doctor who pre-deceased his father; Elizabeth (also by his 1st marriage), who married William Ogilvie of Hartwoodmyres, her father’s brother-in-law; Cornelius (1733–1821), who succeeded to Wolfelee; Adam (1740–1804), who married Rose Leonard, worked in Danzig, and died on the Isle of Wight; Thomas, who died in infancy; Robert, merchant in Amsterdam, who bought Pinnaclehill, Kelso; Samuel, merchant in Antigua; Janet (or Jean), married Maj. Henry Balfour of Pilrig, Leith; and Helen, married Capt. Robert Davidson of Pinnaclehill. Not known as a great land improver, he nevertheless purchased several Border estates, becoming quite wealthy in later life. He was a friend of the Grieves of Bransholme Park, often staying there. He is said to have been tall and handsome. He was healthy and working up until the day he died. William (17th/18th C.) son of John in Harden and grandson of Adam in Dykeraw. He was tenant in ‘Hole’, which is probably the same as ‘Hollows’. His children included William, John and Isabel. William of Harwood (d.c.1736) 3rd Laird (although some say he was 4th), eldest son and successor to his father Henry. He is recorded in bonds of 1693 and 1694 as the eldest lawful son of Henry and in 1697 as ‘younger of Harret’. In 1698 he was on the Commission of Supply for Roxburghshire as ‘younger of Harrow’. His father assigned the lands of Harwood, Appotside and Tythehouse to him, suggesting he took over financial control of the family estates, although his father appears to have lived for several years afterwards. He was just ‘of Harwood’ in 1700 when he was one of the Roxburghshire heritors who petitioned Parliament. He is listed in 1704 as one of the Commissioners of Supply for Roxburghshire. He married Jean (or Jane), eldest daughter of Walter Scott of Todrig by postnuptial contract in 1700. The witnesses (probably all relatives) were Robert of Midlem Mill, Henry in Hudshouse and his own brothers Walter, John and Henry. They had 10 children: Henry (1700–84), who succeeded; Thomas and John, who died young; Robert, ‘Captain’, whose son William became Laird of Harwood; Elizabeth, who married William Scott of Milsington; Jean (1709/10–74), who married William Elliot of Lodgelgill and Tarerras; Marion (or ‘Mary’), who married John Scott of Weens; and Margaret, Christian and Janet, who all died unmarried (Janet in her 90th year). It is unclear when he succeeded to his father, but certainly by late 1707, when he was involved in the discharge of a bond along with Walter Scott of Todrig (his father-in-law). He had a bond of provision for his children in 1720, updated in 1726. He had a reputation for being eccentric (or perhaps ‘of weak intellect’) and for not seeing eye to eye with his son and heir, Henry. In 1731 they both ran horses in the annual race held near Hartshaugh, and he tricked his son by buying an old racehorse from Newcastle, which won at a canter; it is said that the cheers could be heard across the Rule valley. He let much of the Harwood estate to James Pott and his brothers, provoking his son into appealing to the Court of Session, and having him placed under trust, with only a small annuity. This ‘Bond of Interdiction’ was in 1731 and to last 21 years. The appointed trustees were Sir Gilbert Elliott of Stobs, Robert Elliot of Midlem Mill, Thomas Scott of Todrig (his brother-in-law), Henry (his son) and Sir Gilbert Elliot of Minto. He was essentially forced to resign his lands to his son in 1733. His wife had a contract in 1736 restricting her ‘liferent’ and handing over the mansion house of Harwood to her son Henry. William of Thorlieshope and Overton (17th/18th C.) eldest son of John of Thorlieshope. His father settled on him several lands, including ‘Isgill’. In 1690 Simon of Lodgelgill and his brother William of Cooms were declared bankrupt, and he was awarded Lodgelgill, which he settled on his own brother Henry. In 1698 he acquired Blackhall and Overton from his father-in-law (Andrew Ainslie), and had a crown charter for these lands. He was one of the Roxburghshire heritors who petitioned Parliament in 1700 and was appointed Commissioner of Supply in Roxburghshire in 1704. He could be the Laird of Thorlieshope whose Chaplain, Mr. Tait, was recorded preaching in Hawick in 1721. He forced his cousin’s son Adam to sell Meikledale in 1725 to pay off debts. In 1729 he entailed all his lands on his eldest son William. In 1682 he married Christian, eldest daughter of Andrew Ainslie of Blackhall (who had been Provost of Jedburgh). They had at least 10 children, including: William of Thorlieshope and Overton (b.1694), whose 2nd wife was Margaret, daughter and heiress of Arthur Elliot of Harwood; John; Robert; Walter (b.1701); Elizabeth (b.1702); James (b.1704); Walter (again), described as 5th son; Helen, who married William Mather of Greenhill; Christian, who married Adam of Arkleton; Cecile (b.1706), who married William Hall, tenant in Hyndhope; and Andrew (b.1707), tenant in Edgerston Tofts. He moved to Oxnam Parish and is buried there. William (1689–1756) 2nd Laird of Borthwickbrae, eldest son of William and Isobel Scott. In 1721 he leased the west end of Branzholme Muir from the Scotts of Buccleuch for 21 years. Little else is known about him. In 1706 he married Margaret (probably his cousin), daughter of John Scott of Synston, and they had 14 children: William (b.1706), christened at Roberton, but died at sea; Margaret (b.1707), who married Thomas Scott of Wauchope, who later purchased part of the Borthwickbrae estate; John (1711–92), who succeeded to Borthwickbrae; Magdalene (b.1713), who married Walter Grieve of Branzholme Park; Elizabeth (b.1716), who died unmarried in 1809, aged 92 (90 in the Parish Register); Jean (b.1718), who married Thomas Borthwick in Shaw; Alexander (b.1720); Mary (b.1722); Christian (b.1724); Thomas (b.1726); Gilbert (b.1728), who probably died young; Ann (b.1729), who married Thomas Elliot, minister of Kirkton and Cavers in 1760; Gilbert (b.1731), whose son Thomas purchased the Langlands estate; and Isobel (b.1731), who married Walter Elliot of Ornmiston, one of the founders of Hawick’s carpet-making trade. He must have been quite young when he married. A Roberton Parish record of 1707 relates to Isabel Riddel, who acted as midwife to his wife, the baby being delivered ‘before the time’. William of Thorlieshope and Overton (1694–1744) eldest son of William of Thorlieshope. He lived in Oxnam Parish. His father settled on him the lands of Blackhall in 1698, Thorlieshope in 1711 and the remainder were entailed to him in 1729. In 1727 he acquired Demainholm from John of Demainholm and in 1731 he sold Meikledale to William Scott in Meikledale. In 1707 he had an illegitimate child with Isobel Minto, Charles. In 1711 he married his 2nd cousin Margaret, daughter and heiress of Arthur Elliot of Harwood. His wife was recorded as having the third most highly valued lands in Hawick Parish in 1710. They had 8 sons and 6 daughters, including: Robert, who succeeded; James (b.1726); Walter (b.1729); and Andrew (b.1737). Col. William of Brugh and Wells (1696–1764) eldest son of William of Brugh and Wells, ‘the Lace-man’. He was guardian for his nephew Granville Elliott (son of his sister Charlotte and the deceased Roger Elliott) around 1720. He joined the Army in 1722 as Coronet in the Royal Regiment of Horse Guards and was then Captain in Churchill’s Regiment of Dragoons. He was served as heir to his father in 1730. However, he spent most of his time at his estate near London, with Archibald Jordan acting as his factor at Wells (and whose surviving rental book from 1728–60 gives a glimpse into the conditions of a Border laird at that time). At Wells he was keen on developing the gardens, had a bowling green, kept dogs and also had fishing and hunting gear. His Border estates included Ormiston (in Eckford Parish) as well as Hadden (near Kelso). In 1737 he became a Major in the Grenadier Guards and was Lieutenant-Colonel by 1741. In 1743 he was at the Battle of Dettingen, where he served as A.D.C. and equerry to King George II. His nephew George Augustus Elliott (later Lord Heathfield) and his cousin Capt. John Elliott (son of Gilbert of Winningtonrig) were officers under him. He resigned his army commission in 1746. He paid the window tax for ‘Walls’ in Hobkirk Parish in 1748. He was elected M.P. for Caine, Wiltshire in 1741 and held the seat until 1754. He went through a long legal battle with Lady Rutherford of Chatto over his father’s purchase of Ormiston, this ending in 1753. He was recorded as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1761. It is said that he took a keen interest in the well-being of his Elliot relatives. In 1737 he married Lady Frances Nassau d’Auverquerque (apparently against her father’s wishes), daughter of Henry, Earl of Grantham, and she died in 1772. They had one child, Henry (b.1741), who died in infancy. The family are buried at St. James’, Westminster. He was succeeded by his nephew William Nassau. William (17th/18th C.) resident in Hawick. He married Margaret Balmer (or Bulmer) in Hawick Parish in 1725. Their children included: Helen (b.1728); and Archibald (b.1729), who may be the weaver who married Janet Aitken. William in Peelbraehope (18th C.) recorded at the baptism of his children: Janet (b.1727); William (b.1729); and Helen (b.1731). William in Crumhaugh (18th C.). In 1726 he married Margaret Scott and their children included John (b.1727) and Christian (b.1729). William (1703–91) son of John in Dinlees, he was tenant at Park in Liddesdale. He is mentioned in 1730 as brother of John in Park. He married Miss Scott from Blackhall, probably Helen Scott (1702–74). Their children included: John in Bygate (1731–1808); Margaret (1736–1827), who married Archibald Armstrong in Sorbietrees; and Violet, who married George Dalgleish in Castleton. ‘Miss Vilette Elliot, Park’ subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ in 1784. William of Bush (1705–79) 2nd surviving son of John. He married Margaret, daughter of Robert Aitcheson, farmer at Eveslees. He inherited Binks from his brother Robert in 1754. He farmed at Arkleton for 20 years, as well as farming Bush and Binks. His children were: John; Henry, who married Jean Laidlaw from Gorrenberry; Christian (b.1738); Jean (b.1740); Robert (b.1742); and Margaret (b.1745). William (18th C.) younger son of William of Penchrise and Janet, daughter of John Elliot of Thorlieshope. He lived in Selkirk. He married Marion Elliot from Linslaw and their children included William, Robert and Mary (who married A. Muir in Whithaugh). William (18th C.) from Roberton Parish. He married Bessie Scott from Wilot in 1727. Their children included: Walter (b.1731), born at Whitfield, who is probably the Walter whose children were born at Alton and Wester Groundistone; and Agnes (b.1733), born at Groundistone. William (b.1706) eldest son of William of Borthwickbrae and Isobel Scott. He died at sea, but the details are not recorded. The farm was inherited by his brother John. William (1707/8–41) son of Robert and Jean ‘Ruan’, he was a merchant in Castleton. He died aged 33 and is buried at Teviothead. John, who married Hannah Grieve, may have been his brother. William (18th C.) son of Adam in Dykeraw. He was tenant in ‘Hole’ (although it is unclear where this was). His children included William, John and Isobel. William of Tarras (1708/9–79) son of Henry of Lodgegill and Margaret Elliot of Midlem Mill. His father died in 1714 and his uncle John of Binks was appointed one of his curators. He succeeded to Lodgegill (or Black Tarras) in 1732. He rented Ginglenwells from the Duke of Buccleuch in 1736. He was involved in bonds with Capt. Robert Elliot for Fairnielees in 1761 and Blakehope and Lodgegill in 1763. He was a great breeder of race-horses, and once raced an unknown horse in Newcastle, but was virtually ruined by betting debts when it fell near the post after he had backed it heavily. The financial problems during the American War meant he had to sell Blakehope and Tarras to the Duke of Buccleuch, but he was allowed to lease Dinlees for a modest rent. In 1731 he married Jean Elliot (1709/10–74), daughter of William, Laird of Hawwood. Their children included: Henry (1731–90), tenant in Dinlees; Margaret, who married Mr. Haig; Janet, who died unmarried; John (1741–54); Jane (1742–61); William (b.1745), also tenant in Dinlees; and Jean, who married Mr. Crichton. He and his wife are buried at Castleton. William (1711–71) tenant in Braidlie on Hermitage. He was 3rd son of William in Whithaugh and Isobel Scott. He died unmarried and was buried at Unthank, where the stone stated that he died aged 50. However, a family pedigree also suggests he was born in 1694. William (b.1710) son of Walter in Brugh. He was a cooper (in London according to some sources, but that is surely a transcription error, since his entire family were born and lived locally). He married Hah (or Anna) Scott and their children, born in Whithaugh area (perhaps daughter of Robert) and secondly married Margaret Shortreed (c.1735–88) from Essenside (perhaps daughter of Robert) and secondly married Elizabeth Elliot, probably sister of the Laird of Wolfelee; she may be the ‘Betty Elliot of Whithaugh’ whose death is recorded in Hawick in 1798. His children were: Elizabeth (1754–1815), who married Robert Weir from near Canonbie; Margaret (c.1755–1837), who lived in Kirkcaldy and made a family pedigree in about 1790; Jean (c.1757–1839), who married James Bogle from Kirkcaldy; John (1759–1847), who married Jean Elliot of Binks; Robert (1761–1840), Captain of ‘the Hope’, who married Alison Greg: William, (1762–1843), W.S., J.P., lived in Hawick; Isobel (1765–1808); Thomas (b.1766) doctor in Carlisle; and James (1769–1824), who was a merchant in Hawick. He is said to have died aged 59, but this seems unlikely given the ages of his parents and siblings. William (18th C.) farmer at Whithaugh in Wilton Parish. In 1756 he married Isabel Jackson and their children included Agnes (b.1757), ‘Ketty’ (b.1759), Helen (b.1761), John (b.1763) and William (b.1766). William (18th C.) shepherd at Harwood in Hobkirk Parish. His children included Henry (b.1741), Jean (b.1743) and William (b.1751). Probably the same William was shepherd at ‘Hawkcleughlongels’ (which seems likely to be Hawklawtongues) in Hobkirk Parish, having children Jean (b.1745), William (b.1747), Walter (b.1752) and Janet (b.1755).

William (1711–71) tenant in Braidlie on Hermitage. He was 3rd son of William in Whithaugh and Isobel Scott. He died unmarried and was buried at Unthank, where the stone stated that he died aged 50. However, a family pedigree also suggests he was born in 1694. William (b.1710) son of Walter in Brugh. He was a cooper (in London according to some sources, but that is surely a transcription error, since his entire family were born and lived locally). He married Hah (or Anna) Scott and their children, born in Whithaugh area (perhaps daughter of Robert) and secondly married Margaret Shortreed (c.1735–88) from Essenside (perhaps daughter of Robert) and secondly married Elizabeth Elliot, probably sister of the Laird of Wolfelee; she may be the ‘Betty Elliot of Whithaugh’ whose death is recorded in Hawick in 1798. His children were: Elizabeth (1754–1815), who married Robert Weir from near Canonbie; Margaret (c.1755–1837), who lived in Kirkcaldy and made a family pedigree in about 1790; Jean (c.1757–1839), who married James Bogle from Kirkcaldy; John (1759–1847), who married Jean Elliot of Binks; Robert (1761–1840), Captain of ‘the Hope’, who married Alison Greg: William, (1762–1843), W.S., J.P., lived in Hawick; Isobel (1765–1808); Thomas (b.1766) doctor in Carlisle; and James (1769–1824), who was a merchant in Hawick. He is said to have died aged 59, but this seems unlikely given the ages of his parents and siblings. William (18th C.) farmer at Whithaugh in Wilton Parish. In 1756 he married Isabel Jackson and their children included Agnes (b.1757), ‘Ketty’ (b.1759), Helen (b.1761), John (b.1763) and William (b.1766). William (18th C.) shepherd at Harwood in Hobkirk Parish. His children included Henry (b.1741), Jean (b.1743) and William (b.1751). Probably the same William was shepherd at ‘Hawkcleughlongels’ (which seems likely to be Hawklawtongues) in Hobkirk Parish, having children Jean (b.1745), William (b.1747), Walter (b.1752) and Janet (b.1755).

William (18th C.) resident at Southdeanrig in Cavers Parish. His children included: William (b.1743); Robert (b.1746), possibly the tenant farmer in Powisholm; William (again, b.1748); Janet (b.1750); and Helen (b.1753). William (18th C.) shepherd at the Flex. His wife was Janet Gledstains and their son James was born in 1743. William (18th C.) in Toon-o-Rule. He had a daughter Isobel born in 1748. William (1722/3–1806) described as ‘portioner in Lanton Mains’ on a tombstone at old Abbotrule Kirk. He must have had a close connection with the Abbotrule area. He may also have been tenant at Knowesouth, recorded on the Land Tax Rolls in 1811. He married Jean Henderson in Bedrule Parish in 1759, and she died in 1807, aged 79. Their children included: Margaret (b.1760); Mabel (b.1762); Janet (b.1764); Jean (b.1768); Robert (b.1769), also farmer at Lanton Mains; and William (b.1772). 3 of his children died in infancy. He was probably brother of George, tenant in Doorpool. William Nassau of Brugh (1736–75) only son of John, who was 2nd son of William of Brugh and Wells (‘the Laceman’). In 1764 he was served heir to his uncle Col. William of Wells, and took the additional name of his aunt’s family, Nassau. Also in 1764 he married Martha Tryphena Louisa, daughter of Sir Nathaniel Meade; she died in 1796. Her name was given to a wood on the Wells estate, ‘Mead’s Grove Plantation’. Their only son William, who succeeded, was an M.P. He may have earlier married Mary Scawen of Reigate. In 1775 he purchased West Lees, extending the Wells estate. But he died a few months later at his lodgings in Bath. William (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Marion or Mary Laidlaw and their children included Adam (b.1750), Henry (b.1753) and Mary (b.1761). Dr. William (18th C.) physician in Jedburgh. He is recorded as licenser of Dryden and part of Headshaw in 1788. Dryden was then valued at £290 and his part of Headshaw at £116 19s 6d. He was among a group of men to whom Sir Gilbert Elliot of Minto granted liferent of part of his lands in order to add them to the Roxburghshire voters’ roll. He may have been related to the Elliots of Minto, William (18th C.) farmer at Nether Stanegarthside, probably son of Thomas. He married Mary (or Marion) Pattison, who died in 1794. Their children included: John (b.1761); Robert (1784–1813); Margaret (1769–1846); an unnamed child (b.1772); and Mary (b.1780). The family are buried in Ettrick Cemetery. Dolly, who married Andrew Pattison in Nether Stanegarthside, and died in 1763, aged 64, was probably related to him. William (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. Probably the same William was father of Gideon (b.1767) and John (b.1777). William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish, perhaps tenant in ‘Sandridgeshills’. In 1746 he married Margaret Elliot and they had a daughter Margaret in 1755. William (18th C.) recorded at Cavers in 1791 when he subscribed to John Learmont’s book of poetry. William (1723–97) son of Robert of Caerlenrig. He farmed at Winnington Rig and neighbouring farms. He and his father Robert were witnesses for a baptism for William Grieve (farmer in Southfield) and his sister Mary in 1764. He may be the William who was joint possessor (along with Robert Potts) of the farm of Turn in 1779. He was recorded as farmer at ‘Winnington’ on the 1785 Horse Tax Rolls and ‘Winningtonridge’ in 1786, continuing there until 1797 when he farmed at ‘Winningtonrigg & c.’ and owned 4 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. He also paid tax for having 4 non-working dogs at Winningtonrig in 1797. He married Margaret Anderson and she died in 1845, aged 90. Their children were all baptised in Kirkton Parish. Their sons were: Robert (1790–1872), tenant at Teindside; James (b.1791), who died in infancy; and William (1796–1842), tenant at Mangerton. Their daughters probably included: Christian (1786–1880), who married Walter John Grieve, farmer in Southfield; Margaret (b.1788), who died in infancy; Margaret (again, 1793–1809); and Mary (1795–1837). His will is registered with Peebles Commissary Court in 1798. William (18th C.) tenant farmer at Templehall in Rulewater, recorded in 1751 when the lands were sold. His son William, younger, was also mentioned. His daughter Elizabeth was born in 1750. William (18th C.) Hawick baker, son of Henry in Riccarton and Isobel Elliot. He is probably the William listed as Bailie during the 1760s to 1780s. He is recorded as ‘baxter’ in 1763. He is probably the baker who witnessed a baptism for merchant Walter Scott in 1766. He was one of the Magistrates during the proceedings for the Division of the Common and in 1769 was appointed to the commission to discuss the Common with representatives of the Duke of Buccleuch. He paid the horse tax in Hawick in the period 1785–90 and 1794. He married Janet (her name sometimes given as ‘H.’) Grieve of the Branxholme Park family. Their children were: Henry (b.1756); Jean (or Jane, b.1759), who died unmarried; James (b.1761); Walter (b.1763), who died young; and Helen, who married Henry Armstrong from Riccarton Mill (who may have been a cousin). The witnesses in 1763 were Excise Officer Archibald Campbell and merchant Thomas Willie. William (c.1714–1806) shepherd at Templehallshiel. In 1757 he married Helen Turnbull (c.1725–95) from Wilton, with the marriage being recorded in Wilton and Hobkirk Parishes. Their likely children are: Robert (b.1758), possibly the cattle dealer in Newcastle; Thomas (b.1761); George (b.1762); Henry (b.1764); and Margaret (b.1770). It also seems likely that he was father of John, labourer around Wauchope. He died in Newcastleton and his wife died at Roan. William (18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. He married Betty Wilson in 1756 and they had a son John (b.1760). He witnessed a baptism for James Buckham in 1764. William (18th C.) resident of Southdean Parish. His children included: John (b.1760); and Helen (b.1761). He is probably the William who married Christian Oliver in Southdean in 1758. William of Arkleton (1735–91) eldest surviving son of Adam and Christina Elliot, he was baptised in Ewes Parish. He succeeded when quite young, and in 1744 had tutors appointed, including Andrew, younger son of William of Thorlieshope. However, the estate was probably heavily encumbered when he succeeded. He became a doctor in Jedburgh, where his children were born. He subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). He paid tax in Jedburgh for having a male servant in the period 1778–85 and a female servant in 1785, as well as the Horse Tax in Jedburgh from 1785. He is probably the Dr. William of Jedburgh who was listed among the voters of Roxburghshire in 1788. He may also be the William of Arkleton who was as a voter in Dumfriesshire in the same year. He inherited Thorlieshope through his wife, but sold it to James Jardine, tenant of Arkleton. He firstly married Marie, a sister of Dr. Lindsay, then secondly married Cassandra, daughter of Robert Elliot of Overton, co-heiress of Thorlieshope. His children were: Adam (1774–97), Lieutenant in the 72nd Regiment of Foot, who died unmarried; Robert (1775–1810), Major with the 5th Bombay Native Infantry, who died at sea; William (b.1777), army surgeon, who died unmarried while serving in the West Indies; Margaret (‘Peggy’, 1779–1816), who married Adam, son of Rev. William Scott of Southdean; John (b.1781); and Gilbert (b.1784). His son Robert succeeded when he returned home in 1803 and his daughter Margaret succeeded in 1810. William (18th C.) farmer at Burnhead and Appletreehall. His wife was Helen Hume and their children included Janet (b.1770), Margaret (b.1773) and Jean (b.1775). William (18th C.) resident of Chisholme in the Borthwick valley. His daughter Margaret was baptised in Robertson Parish in 1773. William (18th C.) son of Robert of Redheugh. In 1744 his father had a confirming charter for Redheugh, in which he was assigned the farm in fee. He was later tenant in Hillhouse. He was disinherited by his father in 1786, for reasons that are not recorded. He married Margaret Halliburton from Roughley in 1764. Their children included: William (b.1765), who was a doctor in Newcastle; Robert (b.1767), who was a lawyer in Kirkcaldy; John (b.1769), a merchant in London; Thomas (b.1771) in Hillhouse; and Margaret (b.1774), who married Castleton Schoolmaster Mr. Forsyth. William (c.1745–95) buried in Castleton Kirkyard. His wife was Elizabeth Oliver (c.1759–85) and they had a son James. He was probably related to Walter (1755–77), who died at Tweedenside. He himself died at ‘Dedburn’. William (d.bef. 1809) farmer at Myredykes. He was recorded as farmer at Myredykes and other farms on the 1794–97 Horse Tax Rolls, when he owned 3 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. He was also taxed for having 3 non-working dogs in 1797. His only daughter, Helen, married James Oliver (farmer at Borthwickbrae Burnfoot) in 1797. His wife’s death is recorded in Hawick Parish in 1809. Bailie William (d.1795) merchant in Hawick, whose death is recorded. He was Bailie during the 1770s and 80s. It is unclear if he was the same as the baker who was also Magistrate around the same time. He witnessed a baptism for George Turnbull and Isabel Hardie in 1777. William (c.1740–96) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Isabel Crozier (c.1740–82). Their children included: Marion (b.1761); Janet (1765–1838); James (b.1770); and James (again, b.1772). He died at ‘Pigeonhole’ and is buried in Castleton Kirkyard. William of Brugh (c.1740–1817) eldest son of Capt. John and Jean Grieve. He was a grandson of Gilbert, who farmed at Winningtonrig, and was descended from the Elliots of Brugh. He is said to have been born in Belgium (presumably where his father was serving), although his siblings were all christened locally. He was given a commission in the Army in 1758, was appointed Cornet in the Inniskilling Dragoons in 1761 and was appointed A.D.C. to Gen. Johnstone (who commanded the forces in Ireland) in 1766, holding that post until 1780, but being transferred to the 11th Dragoons in 1779. He was also Commissary General of Stores for the Army in Ireland. Shortly after being married in 1780 he left the Army and entered the Church. He became Rector of Trim, as well as being Chaplain to Bishop Ossory and also a regimental chaplain. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Nicolas FitzGerald, from Turlough, County Mayo. Their children were John (who died as a young man), Eliza (who married John Mockler from County Meath), Harriet (who married Capt. Elliott Seward, godson of Lord Heathfield), Lt. Col. William (d.1845) and Gilbert (who served in the Army and was Governor of the Island of Paxos). He died in Cheltenham and was buried in St. Mary’s Churchyard there. Maj.-Gen. William (1741–1803) only son of Gilbert of Larriston, who was the direct heir of the Elliots of Redheugh and Larriston. His mother was Margaret, daughter of James Scott of Calfield. His father died when he was quite young. He is said to have worked for a while as a tailor’s apprentice at Bowanhill (Teviothead), perhaps spent a year at Skelfhill, then entered the service of Sir Gilbert Elliott of Stobs as a stable boy. Being recognised as the head of the clan, Sir Gilbert had him educated and arranged for him to go out as a cadet in the East India Company Artillery in 1761. By 1763 (or perhaps 1764) he obtained a commission and was rapidly promoted, becoming a Lieut.-Col. in 1782. It is said that he distinguished himself in the Carnatic, where he commanded artillery under Sir Eyre Coote. He made a small fortune in the East India Company and was able to resign in 1785, to return home. He repurchased the lands of Larriston (including Nether and Over Larriston and Blackhope) from William Oliver of Dinlabyre in 1786, and added Larriston Rig and (also called Haggiehaugh) in 1790. His lands of Larriston were valued at £834 in 1788. He is recorded at Haggiehaugh on the both the 1797 Horse Tax and Dog Tax Rolls (when he was a Colonel) and in the same year when taxed for... having a male servant. He was also a Deputy-Lieutenant of Dumfriesshire. He tried to establish his claim to be head of the clan through court proceedings in Jedburgh (presided over by the Sheriff, the same Oliver of Dinlabyre), being formally served heir to his grandfather Robert of Larriston in 1788, and matriculating arms in 1793. Perhaps country life was too quiet for him, because he resumed his commission with the East India Company by 1788. However, it seems unlikely that he returned to India, and may have worked for the company in England, rising to the rank of Major General. He died unmarried and named George Fraser Scott (a son of his cousin) as his heir. A memorial to him in Littleham Church, Exmouth misspells his appellation ‘of Larrinton’. He is probably the William from Castleton whose will was proved at the Prerogative Court of Canterbury in 1803. William (1744/5–93) farm worker who lived at Doeburn in the Hermitage valley. His children included Elizabeth (b.c.1770). William (1745–1807) son of William, who farmed at Tar- rass and Lodgegill. He was tenant in Dinlees on Hermitage Water. In 1786 he subscribed to a theological book by a Carlisle author. He is recorded at Dinlees on the Horse Tax Rolls in 1785–89 and 1794. He was taxed for having 4 non-working dogs in 1797. He married Agnes Amos (c.1753–1842) from Langholm. Their children included: Margaret (b.1781); William (b.1790), who also farmed at Dinlees; and Henry (b.1792) in Colterscleuch. William (1753–1821) son of Robert and Janet Wilson. He was born in Ewes Parish. He married Jean Davidson (1751–1827) from Canonbie and their children were born in New Langholm. He could be the William listed at New Langholm on the subscription list for William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. Their children included: Margaret (b.1783); Robert (1785–1849); John (1785–1847), who became a minister in Peebles and married Janet Scott; William (1789–1822), who lived in England; Matthew (b.1791), who died young; Janet (b.1793); and Jane Beattie (b.1797), who died young. William ‘Willie’ (c.1750–1827) son of Robert in Hermitage and Janet Scott from Greenwood. He was tenant in Millburnholm. He was the farmer there when Sir Walter Scott and Robert Shortreed visited on their tour around Liddesdale; it seems likely that Scott took some of the qualities of ‘Dandie Dinmont’ from him. The meeting is described in detail by Scott. He is probably the farmer at Millburnholm who is recorded on the Horse Tax Rolls in the period 1786–1797 and also on the Dog Tax Rolls in 1797. In 1787 in Hawick he married Elizabeth Laiddlaw from Falnash, who died in 1822, aged 72. Their children were: Jean (b.1792); and Robert (1793–1858), who married Mary Scott from Skelfhill and died in Toftholm. One source states he was born in 1759. William (1761–c.1835) son of Rev. Thomas of Kirk- ton and Cavers. He was an architect in Kelso and may have been the William who became a wright’s apprentice in Edinburgh in 1775. He built the Teviot Bridge near Kelso 1794–95 (probably to designs by Alexander Stevens). He also designed the extension to the old Wilton Kirk, which was built in 1801. Langholm Town Hall and the houses at Chesters and Crailing were his work, as were renovations at Yair and Drumlan- rig Castle. He married Jean Robertson in 1791 and their children included: Esther (b.1792), who married Charles Scott of Knowesouth; Thomas (b.1793), who died in infancy; John (b.1795), W.S. in Hawick and Jedburgh, who married Janet Usher; William (b.1797), surgeon in London; Ann (b.1799) who married Kelso ironomomger Thomas Sibbald; Jean (b.1799); another Thomas (b.1802); Alexander (b.1804); Robert (b.1807); and Walter (b.1810), who carried on the architect’s business in Kelso. William Nassau of Brugh and Wells (1766–1818) only son of William Nassau of Brugh and Wells, whom he suc- ceeded in 1775. He was listed among the voters of Roxburghshire in 1788; he was described at that time as having ‘a good estate’ and supporting Sir Gilbert Elliot. In 1778 and 1779 in Hobkirk Parish he was taxed for having 3 male servants. In 1788 he is recorded as owner of the lands of Wells and West Lees (in Hobkirk Parish) and Huntknow (listed in Bedrule Parish), as well as Orniston (in Eckford Parish) and Hadden (in Sprouston Parish). He was also taxed for having a male servant at Wells in 1794 and 1797 (along with Gilbert Elliott, who was serving as his factor there). Already owner of the Wells estate (which had been erected into a barony by his grandfather), in 1801 he purchased the adjacent Barony of Bedrule from the Kerrs of Cavers Carre. This included the lands of Bedrule, Fulton, Dunion- hill, Dunionshank, Bedrule Mill, Gourlaybog and Poinderhaugh. He became an M.P., for Portar- lington 1801–02 and for Peterborough in 1802–18. He was Chief Secretary for Ireland and was a member of the Privy Council. In Westminster he was called ‘the Spectre of the Castle’, because he was so thin; however, he was said to be well regarded by his contemporaries. He was listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805 and in 1819 (when already deceased). He was recorded as a freeholder in the Michaelmas Head-Court of Jedburgh in 1811. He was also recorded as owner of Wells and West Lees, as well as the Barony of Hadden, on the Land Tax Rolls in 1811. He died unmarried at Minto House. He had named his relative Lord Heathfield (or his son) as his successor to the Wells estate, but outlived them both, so succession fell to Sir William Elliott of Stobs as heir of the line. He left his portrait, plate and library to Lord Minto. His will was proved at the Prerogative Court of Canterbury in 1818. William (1762–88) son of John and Hannah Grieve. He was a surgeon, who died at Cape Coast Castle in Africa. He is mentioned on the family’s gravestone in Castleton cemetery. William (1762–1843), W.S., J.P., younger son of William of Whithaugh (descended from Elliot of Mosepoolie) and Elizabeth Elliot (probably sister to the Laird of Wolfelee). He was a writer (i.e. lawyer) in Hawick, where he was also a Justice of the Peace, and he lived in Newcastleton in later life (probably from about 1820). It is also possible he was the writer in Edinburgh who subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). He was ‘Writer in Hawick’ in 1789 when he paid tax for having a female servant. He also paid the Horse Tax in Hawick in 1791–94. He drew up a pedigree of the Elliots in about 1790 (and made a formal deposition of the document in 1841, when he was living in Newcastleton); this was said to be quite accurate back to the time of his great-grandfather’s generation, but incorrect before that. He subscribed to John Learmont’s book of poetry in 1791. He is probably the writer in Castleton who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825 and may be the William from Castleton who subscribed to William Scott’s ‘ Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. He is described as ‘Writer Ind.’ living in the house of joiner John Cavers in Newcastleton at the time of the 1841 census. He seems to have died without issue. William in Orchard see William Elliot Lockhart. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. In 1797 he married Janet Gordon from Hawick Parish. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Southdean Parish. His children included: William (b.1796); and Frear (b.1798). William (1765–1851) eldest son of William in Hillhouse and Mary Haliburton, he was born in Castleton Parish. He may be the William of Liddesdale who studied at Edinburgh University 1784/5. He received a surgeon mate’s diploma from the Royal College of Surgeons in Edinburgh in 1794. He was a doctor in Newcastle. In 1808 he received an M.D. from St. Andrews University. He married Jane Grieve, from Newburn. Maj. William (1766–1802) eldest son of Cornelius the 2nd Laird of Wolfelee. He was a Major in the 1st Madras Cavalry and died in Vellore (southern India). His portrait (in a red hunting coat) was painted by Raeburn. Wolfelee was inherited by his younger brother James. William (18th/19th C.) farmer at Dykecroft, recorded on the 1794–97 Horse Tax Rolls. It is unclear how he was related to other Elliots. William (d.1816) Town Herd of Hawick. He is ‘late Town Herd Hawick’ in the record of his death. It is possible he was the man recorded at Whitchesters in 1797. William (18th/19th C.) recorded at Whitchesters in 1797, when he paid tax on 2 non-working dogs. William 5th Laird of Harwood (1766–1835) son of ‘Captain’ Robert and Elizabeth Pringle of Clifton. He succeeded his uncle Henry, who had considerably improved the estate. Gideon Pott, farmer at Penchrise, was appointed to clear his debts before he succeeded to the estate. Shortly afterwards he joined the recently formed Roxburgh Fencible Dragoons. He was promoted to Major and served under his distant relation Lt.-Col. William Elliot (later Elliot-Lockhart) of Borthwickbrae, repelling the French from Killala Bay in Ireland in 1798. It was claimed that his men were guilty of killing a group of Irishmen who were hiding in a straw barn (this apparently told by a man from an Irish Cavalry regiment who visited Hawick a few years later, whose father and brothers were said to be among the dead). In 1788 his estate consisted of Harwood, Appotside, Fairnielees, Templehall and Kilnknowe, valued at £2143 2s. Also in 1788 he was mentioned as being about to be added to the list of voters in Roxburghshire. He subscribed to John Learmont’s book of poetry in 1791. He paid the Horse Tax in Wells in 1791 and Hundalee in 1792. He was recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as owner of 2 horses at Borthwickbrae. In 1802 he was made Captain commandant of the western troop of the Roxburghshire Yeomanry (Volunteers). Every man of the troop assembled (in Jedburgh) at the False Alarm. He was commonly called ‘The Major’ locally. He was listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805 and 1819. He was a member of the Jedforest Club from 1812. He was recorded as a freeholder in the Michaelmas Head-Court of Jedburgh in 1811. In 1811 he was recorded on the Land Tax Rolls as owner of Harwood and Appotside, as well as Fairnielees, Templehall and Kilmknowe. In 1819, after troubles over the proposed Reform Act, he suggested forming his own troop of yeomanry to quell the riots, but the offer was declined. He lived for many years at Hundalee (where he paid tax for having a male servant in 1792–94 and the dog tax in 1797), where several of his children were born, and was also tenant at Stonedge. He then leased Weens from 1819 or 1820 for a few years, moving to Greenriver (Stonedge again in 1824) and then Mossburnford. He also had a house in Jedburgh. In 1834/5 he had a new house built at Harwood, but he died before moving into it. In 1804 he married Helen (or Eleanor, c.1783–1846), 2nd daughter of Maj. John Rutherford of Mossburnford. His children were: Robert Kerr (b.1805), who succeeded to Harwood; Eleanor (or ‘Ellen’, b.1806), who married John Paton of Crailing; and John (b.1809), who married Jane Jerdan of Bonjedward and farmed at Primrosehill. He was buried in Hobbirk Kirkyard. His will is registered with Jedburgh Sheriff Court in 1838. William of Borthwickbrae, see William Elliott Lockhart.

William (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isabel Wilson in 1791 and their children included Archibald (b.1792), Isabel (b.1794), Janet (b.1796) and Walter (b.1798). William (18th/19th C.) resident of Thorlieshope. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. It is unclear how he was related to other Elliots connected with Thorlieshope. William (18th/19th C.) drover in Castleton Parish. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. It is unclear how he was related to other Elliots. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Roan. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. It is unclear how he was related to other Elliots. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. His wife was Isabel Jackson and their children included William (b.1801) and John (b.1803). They could be the William (aged 65) and Isabela (aged 70) living at Langhaugh in 1841 and recorded as labourer at Langhaugh in 1838–41. William (1770–1824) son of Thomas and Elizabeth Carruthers. He lived at Foulshiel and later Hartsgarth in Castleton Parish. He was probably the ‘W. Elliot, Hartsgarth’ who subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. He married Jane Easton and their children included: James (b.1800); Robert (b.1802); George (b.1805); Thomas (b.1807); Ann (1810–92), who married Walter Armstrong; William (b.1812); Betty (b.1815); Walter (1818–99), died a bachelor; Walter (again, b.1819); and Jane (b.1822). He drowned in the Kershope Burn and is buried at Unthank. William (1771/2–1855) son of George, like his father he was tenant farmer at Doorpool in the Rule valley. He was a prominent member of the Relief Kirk in Jedburgh. In 1812 he married Isabella Stephenson, who died in 1850, aged 65. Their children included: George (b.1813); Janet (b.1815); Richard (1817–91); William (1819–91); and John (1823–1910), who married Agnes Stevenson Rutherford. His sons Richard, William and John were tenants in Hartwoodmyres for about 50 years. He died at Hartwoodmyres. The family were recorded on a memorial stone at old Abbotrule Kirk. William (c.1778–1843) from Hawick. He married Agnes ‘Bone’ and they had a son William (c.1800–78), who married Jane Oliver. In about 1833 he emigrated to Canada, settling in Halton, Ontario. William (c.1780–1824) from Castleton Parish, he lived at Gillside. His wife was Mary Murray and their children included: Mary (b.1803); Nelly (b.1811); Betty (b.1815); Christian (b.1818); Eppy (b.1821); and Isabel (b.1824). William (b.1780) son of Walter, who farmed at Henderson’s Knowe, he was a miller in Hawick Parish. In 1816 he emigrated with his family to Smith’s Falls, Lanark County, Ontario. In 1802 he married Margaret Scott. Their children included: Elizabeth (b.1802); Janet (b.1804); William (b.1806); Adam Scott (1807/8–99), who died in Ontario; Walter; James; Margaret; Janet; John; and Ellen. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Minto Parish. His children included: Walter (b.1800); James (b.1802), probably the grocer in Denholm; Nelly (b.1804); and Betty (b.1806). William (b.1790) son of William, tenant at Dinlees. He was farmer at Dinlees on Hermitage Water, like his father. His children included William, Jessie, Helen and Margaret. He is probably the ‘W. Elliot, Dinlee’ who subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. William (c.1790–1853) labourer in Castleton. In 1841 he was at Little Whithaugh with his wife’s mother, Jenny Crozier also living with them. In 1851 he was a widower and farm servant at Whithaughburn. He is listed as a farm servant at Whithaughburn in 1835. William (18th/19th C.) labourer listed at ‘North Gunholm’ (perhaps meant for Greenholm) among male heads of households in 1835. He married Jean Oliver (c.1792–1847). Their children included: Agnes (b.1813); Betty (b.1815); John (b.1817); Jean (b.1819); James (b.1822); George

(b.1825); Gideon (b.1828); William Keir (b.1830); and Helen (b.1832). He died at Whitlaughburn. William (1789/90–1869) boot and shoe maker in Newcastleton. He is listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories. He probably lived at 6 Whitchester Street. In the 1841 census he is listed with his wife Christian and children Betty, John (also a shoemaker), Ann, Christian and James. His cousin Robert Murray (‘Formerly Teacher’) was living with him in 1851. He married Christian Elliot (1797/8–1846) and their children included: Betty (b.1819); William (b.1821); Helen (b.1823); John (b.1825); Isabel (b.1827); and Anne (b.1829). He may have been son of cooper John and Betty Crozier, who was born in 1790. William of Brugh (1789/90–1845) eldest surviving son of William, Rector of Trim, and descended from the Elliots of Brugh and farmers of Southfield. In 1818 he succeeded as head of the Elliots of Brugh on the death of William Wells. He became a Lt.-Col. in the Royal Canadian Rifles. He served in the Peninsula Wars and commanded the Niagara frontier, where he died, and where there is a memorial to him in St. Mark’s Church. In 1829 he married Mary Ann Charlotte Moore, daughter of Capt. Moore of the Royal Marines. Their children were: Rev. William, Prebendary of Hereford; and Capt. Henry Sheridan (d.1867). William (1792–1811) youngest son of the 1st Earl of Minto. He was 3rd Lieutenant on the H.M.S Fox and died returning from Bengal. William (1794/5–1866) shepherd in Castleton. In 1861 he was on Langholm Street. He married Isabella Armstrong, from Nichol Forest, Cumberland, and she died in 1870, aged 75. Their children included: Walter (1820/1–40); Robert (1825/6–74); Violet; and Agnes (1836/7–90). William (b.1794/5) mason in Roberton Parish. In 1841 he was living at Whitecleuchside and in 1851 was at Woodfoot (probably Cleuchfoot). His wife was Elizabeth and their children included Mary, Isabella, Francis and William. Perhaps the same William was a widowed dyke builder living at Myrselawgreen with his daughter Jane in 1861. William (b.1795/6) from Selkirk, he was ‘Tacksman, Toll-bar’ at Mackside Toll in 1861. His wife was Elizabeth and their children included James, George and William. William (1796–1842) younger son of William, farmer at Wimingtonrig. He farmed at Magentong and died unmarried. William (1796–1838) son of John and Jean Scott. He was farmer at Flatt in Castleton Parish, like his father before him. He was one of the Tory supporters who became a victim during the ‘Tully’s Mill’ mobbings at the 1837 election. William (1797–1869) younger son of William, architect in Kelso and grandson of Rev. Thomas of Cavers. His brother John was a lawyer in Hawick. He was born in Kelso and became a surgeon in London. He married Sarah Georgina Miller and they had 14 children. William (b.c.1800) son of John, labourer at Wauchope Gardens. His children were born at Saughtree in Castleton Parish, although he was living at Wauchope Cottages in 1841 and Tythehouse in 1851 and 1861. He was Farm Steward at Tythehouse in 1861. He married Margaret Murray (who died before 1851) and their children included: Elizabeth (or ‘Betty’, b.1822); John (b.1823); Margaret (b.1824); Thomas (b.1826); James (b.1828); Scott (b.1830); Anne (b.1832); and Agnes (b.1835), who married Peter Cairns. William (1801–64) hosiery manufacturer who founded William Elliot & Sons in 1823. He was son of James of Goldielands and brother of Dr. Adam and of Margaret, who married John Wilson, ‘the Dip’. He served his time as a stocking-maker, then built up his own business in Slitrig Crescent (around No. 6). His business is listed as a hosiery manufacturers on the Crescent in Pigot’s 1837 directory. In 1851, essentially as an extension of his nearby factory he built Tower Mill over the Slitrig and paid for a new bridge (now part of the Kirkstile) to be built in place of the Auld Brig (which was demolished, with the approval of the Town Council and Roads Trustees). As a result he obtained possession of the stone from the demolition of the Auld Brig, some of which found its way into other buildings. He was one of the Orrock Trustees. He was also a Town Councillor from 1861, and his portrait hangs in the Museum. He served as a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire. He lived on the Crescent. It was said that the citizens of Hawick, keen to hear about the future fortunes of the hosiery industry, looked forward more to his spech at the New Year’s factory festival than they did to the throne speech! He is also supposed to have said that he preferred hosiery because ‘though it was not so profitable, it gave most employment in proportion to the capital invested’. He was probably the William whose heirs are recorded in about 1874 owning part of the ‘particate lands’ once owned by shoemaker Robert Oliver. He married Isabella Scott (b.c.1806) in 1836. Their children included: Jane Carrin (b.1836); Agnes (b.1838); James (b.1840); William Scott (b.1843); and Adam (b.1844). His 2 sons carried on the firm of Elliot’s. He died at the old family home of Goldielands. William (b.c.1802) son of Robert, tenant in Powisholm. He farmed at Harden in Castleton Parish. He married Jean Pattison (b.c.1811). Their children included: Robert (b.1839); and William (b.1843). William (19th C.) blacksmith and leader of the Jedburgh drum and fife band. He walked to Hawick in 1832 after the Reform Bill was defeated in the House of Lords, calling on Hawick men to follow him to London to overthrow the Lords, a threat he was talked out of. He later left Jedburgh, then emigrated to America, where he set up the Elliot Frog and Switch Company in St. Louis, which helped build the U.S. railroads. William (19th C.) from Hawick, he is recorded as winner of the `standing high leap' at the 1834 Common Riding Games. He may be the same as Steeleroad-end. William (19th C.) recorded at ‘Road End’ near Newcastleton in 1868. This could perhaps be the same as Steeleroad-end. William (1828–91) son of Robert and Eleanor Davidson. His father was farmer at Millburn in Castleton Parish. In 1861 at Lochburnfoot near Teviothead he married Helen (1839–1920), daughter of James Miller and Euphemia Winthorpe. At that time he was living at Fahash. In 1862 they emigrated to New Zealand, and he died at Nevis, Central Otago. Their children were Euphemia Wintrup, Helen Davidson, Jane, Isabella Douglas and Ann Jemima. Rev. William Hume ‘Hume’ (1837–1927) from Hawick, son of Thomas and Margaret Hume. He was brother of James, merchant in the Sandbed. He trained as a writer’s apprentice in Hawick. He went to Edinburgh University in 1859, and was minister at Haltwhistle in Northumberland. In 1874 he became minister of the St. Andrews Presbyterian (Dundee) Church in Ramsbottom, and served until his retirement in 1907. He wrote ‘The Country and Church of the Cheeryble Brothers’ (1893), and ‘Story of the ‘Cheeryble’ Grants: from the Spey to the Irwell’ (1906), describing the real life counterparts of the Scotsmen used as inspiration for characters in Charles Dickeons ‘Nicholas Nickleby’. He also wrote verse, for example ‘God and our Country’, about the Covenanters, as well as verse in both Scots and Lancashire dialects. He was a keen member of the Bury and District Burns Club. He was said to have a ‘remarkable command of the Scotch language and Scotch dialect, and also of the Lancashire dialect’. He married a daughter of P.L. MacTaggart of Liverpool. He is buried in Wandsworth Cemetery, London. William (19th C.) Hawick’s first cabman. His daughter Jessie married Alexander Kyle. William ‘Wullie o Gowdlands’ (or Goldielands) (19th C.) simple-minded soul who lived at Goldielands, and liked to dress up for special occasions, marching in front of the Saxhorn Band, the Volunteer Band, with the Cornet, etc. He was long remembered for one occasion when he arrived the night before a band event so as not to sleep in. William Claude 7th Laird of Harwood (1835–1922) eldest son of Robert Kerr. He succeeded to Harwood in 1873, with Clifton going to his brother Robert. He was born at Greenriver and baptised at Mossburnford. Educated at Cheltenham College, he entered the army in 1854 and soon became a Lieutenant in the 9th (Norfolk) Regiment. He was decorated in the Crimean War, but had retired from the army after only about 2 years. He served as a Commissioner of Supply and Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. He was a keen hunter and also proficient in boxing. In about 1874 he was recorded as owner of the farms of Harwood, Appotside and others. In 1876 he married Bertha Eliza, daughter of William Charles Blackman of Southsea, and she died in 1895. After his marriage in 1876 he lived mainly in Wales, seldom visiting Harwood, which was set out for the hunting season. He had no children and was succeeded by his nephew Thomas. William (b.1838/9) born in Castleton Parish, he was a cattleman, living at Adderstone Shiel Cottages in 1901. His wife was Christina and their children included ploughman James. Col. William Scott (1841–aft. 1919) son of William Scott, with whom he is easily confused, his mother being Isabella Scott. He had brothers Adam of Caverstrome and James of Mosstower. He ran the factory at Tower Mill and lived at Teviot Lodge. Some time before 1900 he installed electric lighting at his house at Teviot Lodge, using wires running from his factory at Tower Mill. In 1859 he (or perhaps his father) instigated setting up a company of Hawick Volunteers, and he eventually became Colonel of the Battalion. In 1874 he won a shooting competition between Volunteers from around Scotland. He was later Major and Honorary Lieutenant-Colonel of the Battalion’s successors, the Border Rifles, serving until 1891. He was also a keen meteorologist, and regularly sent his readings to G.J. Symons who published British Rainfall readings. He donated fossil shells to the Museum. In 1919 he retired from the firm of William Elliot & Sons, and passed ownership to his son, who was also William Scott. He married Margaret Cadenhead, daughter of Dr. George William Thompson. He secondly married Elizabeth MacNee. His second daughter was Isabella. His youngest daughter Margaret (b.1879) married manufacturer William Boyd Sime. Teviot Lodge was gifted to the High School by his daughters in 1933. William (1830/1–1903) eldest son of Lt.-Col. William, he succeeded as head of the Elliots of Brugh in 1845. He was educated at Cambridge and trained as a minister, becoming Prebendarry of Hereford Cathedral and Rural Dean of Hereford. He married Anne Louise Bennett in 1829 and their children were Col. William (who wrote ‘The Elliots of Brugh and Wells’) and Gilbert John. He wrote a study of Ecclesiastical Dilapidations. Lt.-Col. William Fitzwilliam Elliot (1849–1928) 4th son of the 3rd Earl of Minto. He served with Princess Louise’s Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. In 1880 he married Elizabeth Fanny, daughter of John Rutherford of Halifax, Nova Scotia. His children were Mary Adelaide (who married Sir John Hepburn Miln-Home), Margaret Cecil Anne (who married Maj. Frederick Adrian Cathcart) and John Augustus Gilbert (who worked in Kenya). William Scott (19th/20th C.) son of Col. William Scott of Teviot Lodge. He took over the hosiery firm of William & Elliot and Sons when his father retired in 1919. William (b.1859) son of Walter of Hollybush and descended from the Elliots of Newhall, he was an auctioneer in Muirglen, Lanark. He farmed at Langburnshiels on the Harwood (on Rule) estate and in 1924 he bought the whole estate from the 8th Laird, Thomas Robert Barnewall Elliot. He was a prominent auctioneer in his day, who was well known in agricultural circles. In Glasgow in 1866 he married Ellen Elizabeth Shields, daughter of a farmer. Their children were Ellen Elizabeth (who married Lt.-Col. John Craig of the Royal Scots Fusiliers) and Walter, who also farmed at Harwood and was an M.P. William of Brugh (b.1861) elder son of Rev. William, Prebendarry of Hereford. He matriculated arms in 1902,-establishing his descent from Gavin of the Brugh and Robert of Redheugh. He wrote the book ‘The Elliots of Brugh and Wells’. In 1890 he married Mary Frances (d.1919), daughter and co-heiress of Arthur B. Warre of Westfield House, Ramsgate. Their only child was Allison Mary, who married her cousin Lt.-Col. George Augustus Elliot of the Royal Irish Regiment. Sir William of Brugh (1896–1971) born in Wormit, Fife, elder son of Gilbert John of Brugh, he became head of the Elliots of Brugh. He joined the army in 1915, becoming a pilot in 1918 and was shot down and rescued in Russia in 1919. He rose to become Air Chief Marshal and Chief Staff Officer to the Minister of Defence, also receiving a knighthood. He married Elizabeth Rosemary Alice Chancellor and their children were Louise Elizabeth Rosemary and Simon John. Willot (15th C.) recorded in the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh in 1494/5. Along with Roland and some Armstrongs, Hector Lauder, brother of the Laird of Todrig, had remission for bringing them to the area to attack the tenants of Whitemuir. They are described as ‘traitors of Leven’, but are as likely to have been from Liddesdale as England. Lauder’s crimes also included resetting Elliots, Armstrongs, Fosters and others who were traitors; this makes it seem likely he and Roland were already declared as rebels before this time. His name is recorded as ‘Willot elwald’, but this is odd, since ‘Willot’ was sometimes a variant of ‘Elliot’. Zandra see Alexandra (also formerly spelled ‘Elot’ and permutations including ‘Ellat’, ‘Ellet’, ‘Elleott’, ‘Elliot’, ‘Ellote’, ‘Ellott’, ‘Eliot’, etc., as well as variants such as ‘Ellwald’, ‘Ellwand’, ‘Elual’, ‘Elwalde’, ‘Elwode’, ‘Elwole’, ‘Elwood’, ‘Eluat’ and even ‘Willat’; see also Elliot and Elliot-Murray-Kynynmound).

Ellioti (e-lee-o-tee) n. specific name for several species found on or around the Indian subcontinent, which were first described by Sir Walter Elliot of Wolfelee. They are specifically: Buceros, hornbill; Dendrocopus, woodpecker; Golunda, groove-toothed mouse; Leopardus, leopard; Perinis, honey buzzard; Platydoris, sea slug; Syrmaticus, pheasant; and Tupaea or Anathana, tree-shrew (also spelled ‘Elliotti’ and ‘Elliottii’).

Elliot-Murray-Kynynmound (e-lee-i-kin-in-mund) n. Arthur Ralph Douglas (1846–1923) son of William Hugh and brother of Gilbert John, the 4th Earl of Minto. He was editor of the Edinburgh Review and Liberal M.P. for Roxburghshire 1880–92. In 1880 he defeated Sir George Henry Scott-Douglas by only 10 votes. He also defeated Charles Barrington Balfour of Newton-Don in 1885 and Mark Francis Napier in 1886, when he had become a Unionist. However, he lost in the rematch of 1892, although he returned as an M.P. for Durham 1898–1906. He was Financial Secretary to the Treasury 1903–06. In 1888 he married Harriet Dagmar Ryan and they had 2 children, Robert Douglas (who died young) and Capt. Hubert William Arthur (of the Wiltshire Regiment). Emma Eleanor Elizabeth née Hislop (1824–82) daughter of Gen. Sir Thomas Hislop and wife of the 3rd Earl of Minto. She wrote several works relating to family history, including ‘A Memoir of the Right Hon. Hugh Elliot’ (1868), ‘Life and Letters of Sir Gilbert Elliot, first Earl of Minto’ (1874), ‘Lord Minto in India’ (1880) and ‘Border Sketches’ (1870). George Francis Stewart (1822–1901) son of Gilbert, the 2nd Earl of Minto. He wrote ‘The Border Elliots and the Family of Minto’ (1897) as well as some other works. He was a local M.P., and was given a celebratory dinner in the Exchange Hall in 1868. He died unmarried. Gilbert (1782–1859) 5th Baronet and 2nd Earl of Minto, born in Lyons. He was son of Gilbert the 1st Earl, who had adopted the extra surname after inheriting titles through marriage. Educated at Edinburgh University and Cambridge. He was Captain of the Roxburgh Militia 1802–05, and later (from about 1808) Lt.-Col. Commandant of the 1st Regiment Roxburghshire Militia. He became M.P. for Ashburton in Devonshire, and then for Roxburghshire from 1812 (following a long family tradition), defeating Alexander Don by 6 (or perhaps 7) votes. He was only M.P. until 1814, when he succeeded as Earl, taking up his seat in the House of Lords. He was also Roxburghshire M.P.; Lt.-Col. Gilbert, 3rd Earl; Adm. Sir Charles Gilbert John Brydone (1880) and ‘Border Sketches’ (1870). George Francis Stewart (1822–1901) son of Gilbert, the 2nd Earl of Minto. who married Katherine Anne Gilbert; and Sir Henry George (1817–1907), who married Anne Antrobus. Gilbert John (1845–1914) 4th Earl of Minto, eldest son of William Hugh. He was educated at Eton and Cambridge. He was known as an allround sportsman in his youth, excelling on horseback, at rowing, shooting and angling. He rode in the Grand National 5 times (breaking his neck in 1876) and won the Steeplechase at Paris in 1874. He was newspaper correspondent in a number of wars and an officer in others (serving in the Scots Guards), this taking him to various parts of Europe, Asia and Africa. He was Commandant of the Border mounted volunteers. He first went out to Canada in 1883 as military secretary to the Governor-General, and there helped suppress the rebellion led by Louis Riel, being present at the battle of Fish Creek. Back in Scotland, in 1889 he became Brigadier-General of the Scottish Border Volunteer Brigade. In 1891 he succeeded to the Earldom of Minto, before which he had the title of Viscount Melgund. He became Governor-General of Canada in 1898, serving until 1904 and then was Viceroy of India (1905–1910), being jointly responsible for the Morley-Minto reforms of 1909. He returned to Scotland in 1910, but did not long enjoy his retirement. In Hawick he was made an Honorary Burgess in 1898, following his appointment as Governor-General of Canada, and Minto Place was named after him. In 1883 he married Mary Caroline, daughter of Gen. Charles Grey. They had 5 children: Eileen Nina Evelyn Sibell (1884–1938), who married Lord Francis George Montagu-Douglas-Scott, 6th son of the Duke of Buccleuch; Ruby Florence Mary (1886–1961), who married the 2nd Earl Cromer; Violet Mary (1889–1965) who firstly married Lord Charles George Francis Mercer Nairne and secondly became Lady Astor; Victor Gilbert Lariston Garnet (1891–1975), who succeeded; and Gavin William Esmond (1895–1917), who was killed at Flanders. Photographs of him show a fine handlebar moustache. He died at Minto House and was buried there. Many streets, schools, parks and towns (particularly in Canada and India) were named after him. Sir Gilbert Edward George Lariston, O.B.E., J.P. (1928–2005) 6th Earl of Minto, succeeding his father in 1975. He was baptised in S.S. Mary & David in Hawick. Educated at Eton and Sandhurst, he was commissioned into the Scots Guards and served as aide-de-camp to the Commander-in-Chief in the Far East and then Cyprus. He returned to run the farm at Minto, and played an active part in local affairs. He was elected to the Borders Regional Council, serving 1974–80 and 1980–96, being Convener for the period 1990–96. He was a J.P. for Roxburghshire from 1961 and was Depute Lieutenant for Roxburgh, Ettrick and Lauderdale. He was called ‘Gibbie’ by his friends, the same nickname used generations earlier in his family. He was a Brigadier in the Royal Company of Archers, the Queen’s bodyguard in Scotland. He served on several national committees, including being President of the South Scotland Chamber of Commerce, and was awarded the O.B.E. in 1986. In 1952 he married Lady Caroline Child-Villiers, and after a divorce married Miss Ballantine of New Jersey, and had 2 children: Gilbert Timothy George Lariston (b.1953), who succeeded; and Laura (b.1956). Gilbert Timothy George Lariston of Minto (1953– ) son of Gilbert Edward George Lariston, he became 7th Earl of Minto in 2005. Hugh Frederick Hislop (1848–1932) 3rd son of the 3rd Earl of Minto. Like several members of his immediate family he served as an M.P., for the North Division of Ayr, 1885–92. In 1879 he married Mary Euphemia, daughter of Col. Samuel Long. His children were Nina Emily (who married Sir Charles Lennox Somerville Russell), Mabel Victoria (who married Hugh Munro and secondly married William Stewart McGeorge and Lieut. Hugh Samuel Roger of the Coldstream Guards. Sir Victor Gilbert Lariston Garnet (1891–1975) 5th Earl of Minto, son of Gilbert John. He was known as Viscount Melgund until he succeeded his father in 1914. He was educated at Eton, being then commissioned into the Lothian and Border Horse before entering the Scots Guards in 1913, becoming a Captain and serving through WWI. After the war he read the Roll of Honour for the fallen in WWI in St. Cuthbert’s Kirk. He then went to Canada as A.D.C. to the Governor-General. Returning to Scotland, he ran his estate and played an active role in local work, becoming a Justices of the Peace and Deputy Lieutenant of Roxburghshire in 1924. In 1930 a portrait of the 1st Countess Minto by Joshua Reynolds was stolen from his private collection at Minto House and has never been recovered. In 1921 he married Marion, daughter of George William Cook of Westmount, Montreal. They had 4 children: Bridget Elliot (1921–2005), who married Lt.-Col. James Averell Clark and Maj. Henry Claude Lyon Garnett; Willa (b.1924), who married Maj. George

David Chetwode; Gilbert Edward George Larriston (b.1928), who succeeded; and Lieut. George Esmond Dominic (b.1931), who married Countess Marie-Anne Esterhazy, ‘Bunny’. William Hugh (1814–91) 3rd Earl of Minto, eldest son of Gilbert. He was Liberal M.P. for Hythe 1837–41, Greenock 1847–52 and Clackmannanshire 1857–59. In 1859 he succeeded to the Minto titles. In 1860 he had a writ for the lands and Baron of Headshaw, part of Hassendean Common and Langhope. He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1863. He was Deputy-Lieutenant for Roxburghshire, served on the Lunacy Board for the counties of Roxburgh, Selkirk and Berwick and chaired the Board of Lunacy Commissioners for Scotland. He was also a Justice of the Peace and Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire, as well as on the county Prison Board. He was a staunch supporter of the Established Church. He gave the main speech at the inauguration of the Leyden Monument in Denholm in 1861. He was also Patron of Hawick and Wilton Football Club. In 1844 he married his cousin Emma Eleanor Elizabeth, daughter of Gen. Sir Thomas Hyslop (or Hislop). They had 4 children: Gilbert John, who succeeded; Arthur Ralph Douglas, barrister, who married Madeleine Harriet Dagmar Ryan; Hugh Frederick Hislop, M.P., who married Mary Euphemia Long; and Lt.-Col. William Fitzwilliam, who married Elisabeth Fanny Rutherford. He died in London. William Brownrigg (1820–1900) eldest son of John Esmond Elliot, M.P. He was a J.P. for Roxburghshire and a Commissioner of Supply for the county. He was also a member of the Jedforest Club. He resided at Bensrig, near St. Boswells. In 1858 he married Mary Geraldine, daughter of Justin McCartie of Carrig- navar, County Cork. Their children were William Gerald and Cyril Herbert, both of whom died unmarried (whether the extra names are included in the Elliot surname or as middle names is confusing in these generations, with the triple-barrelled surname typically being only adopted by the Earl of Minto; note that ‘Kynnymound’ is also spelled ‘Kynmond’ etc.).

the Elliots (el-i-lee-itz, e-litz) n. important local family since at least the 15th century, thought to have been granted land in Liddesdale sometime in the 12th to 14th centuries, perhaps originally as vasals of the Douglasses. There are theories and legends of how they came originally from Angus or from Eliot (now called Arbirlot) in Forfarshire, or were descended from a Norman soldier named ‘Aliot’. This might be consistent with ‘William Alight, burgois de Seint Johan de Perth’ (who signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296) being a direct ancestor of Elliots who were granted land in Liddesdale, perhaps in the time of Robert the Bruce. Another version of the origin of the name is that it derives from the old English personal name Elwold; this is consistent with some of the earliest local recordings of the name as ‘Elwald’, ‘Ellwand’ and variants (although it is possible that this was simply a scribal affectation). Probably the most likely early history has a Breton origin, perhaps ‘Halegouët’ (or Huel-gaot), with land (later called ‘Alyth’) being given in Perthshire around the late 12th century, then moving to Liddesdale when given the lands of Redheugh around the early 14th century. There were people of that name close to the Borders from at least the 13th century (e.g. ‘Elewald’ and ‘Helewald’ in England in 1230, and Reginald son of Eliot in Dumfriesshire in the period 1242–95); the close geographic connection makes these people seem like likely ancestors for the Border Elliots, although other branches may have a different origin entirely. The first recorded example in the Borders may date from 1425/6 and there is certainly a ‘Johannis Elwald’ in 1436 and Gilbert in 1453. They grew more powerful and numerous through the 15th century and in the 16th century effective took over control of Liddesdale from the Armstrongs. In 1494/5, among a list of Liddesdale men who failed to appear at the Justiciary there were listed 27 Elliots. They then had a reputation as notorious rievers, e.g. the Master of Halles brought in ‘the Elwands’ in 1515/6. The clan submitted to England in 1547, with 74 men giving their pledges to Lord Wharton. Under Martin of Braidlie they were particularly powerful in the 1560s, but this led to a deadly feud with the Scotts, which included burning Hawick in 1565! A letter of 1583 lists the leaders of the family in Liddesdale. The clan suffered after the Union of the Crowns and attempts at ‘pacification’ of the Borders. The Elliots of Minto are derived from a grandson of the Elliots of Stobs (who spelled their name differently), who in turn come from the earlier Chiefs at Redheugh in Liddesdale. The family moved their seat to Stobs for some time, although the chief once more sits at Redheugh. The Elliots of Brugh were also once well represented in Hawick, with other branches such as the Elliots of Horsleyhill and Wolfelee also being locally important. Elliots have been famous as soldiers, administrators and landowners. A pedigree of the family, dated about 1704, was discovered among the papers at Minto. The clan motto is ‘Fortiter et recte’ (boldly and rightly) – ‘The double L and single T Descend from Minto and Wolffe, The double T and single L Mark the old race in Stobs that dwell, The single L and single T The Eliots of St. Ger mains be, But double T and double L Who they are, nobody can tell’ [T], ‘Land of Eli- liots and of fame, Of every bold and Border name, Who they are, nobody can tell’ [T], ‘Land of El-

Elliot (e-lee-i’) n. Nichol (b.1835–1904/5) born in Cornhill, Northumberland, near Coldstream, where his father was schoolmaster. He became a joiner, working around the Borders. In the late 1850s he worked at Wilton Lodge, which was then being renovated for David Pringle. His ‘Literary Hours of a Working Man’ (1862) consists of prose and verse pieces, many from around this time, some having been previously published in the Haw- wick Advertiser. He also had poetry and prose printed in the Border Treasury (in the 1870s), as well as a longer story ‘Nellie Macpherson’. Later he worked as Clerk to Sunderland Police Court and published essays and poems in papers from Sunderland and Newcastle (see also Elliot).

Elliot’s (e-litz, e-lee-itz) n. stockmakers of the mid-19th century, William Elliot & Sons, with their factory in Slitrig Crescent (probably No. 6), as well as at Tower Mill. The firm began around 1820, growing out of Waldie, Elliot & Co. (the Crescent), with Wilson & Elliot (Tower Knowe Mill), being formed in 1823. Elliot went on his own from 1830, later giving up spinning and fo- cussing on hosiery. The firm was still listed at the Crescent in Slater’s 1852 directory. It acquired Stonefield Mill and the old Waulk Mill in 1850 and had the new Tower Mill built (also on the site of the Auld Brig) in about 1852. The same firm later built Buccleuch Mills on Green Lane in 1862 (more recently Glenhowe). It had ssepae factories for spinning and knitting. In 1869 it is re- corded that the firm employed 617 men, women and children, manufacturing ‘Cheviet wool stock- ings, drawers and undershirts’. In 1871 the 3 lo- cations employed 490 people between them, spin- ning 70 tons of wool and manufacturing 70 tons of goods. In 1896 J.P. Alison deigned a new wool store for the factory.

Elliot’s Folly (e-litz-fo-lee) n. popular name used for a building constructed by Henry Elliot, Laird of Harwood in the mid-1700s. It was built on a small hill near an ancient camp, was thatched with heather and used by the Laird to watch his workers.

Elliotside (e-li’-sid) n. lands that were formerly part of the estate of Douglas of Cavers, precise location uncertain. There are deeds relating to the lands in 1545, 1566 and 1614.

Elliot’s Field (e-litz-feeld) n. isolated house by the Slitrig, seen from the Waverley Line between Stobs and Shankend. It is on the east side of the Slitrig, by Fleety Wood and was later called Fleety Cottage. Andrew Beattie appears to have been tenant or shepherd there in the 1820s and 30s. Robert Grieve and his wife were there in 1861, along with a domestic servant and 8 lodgers who were working on the railway. Robert Grieve was there in 1861 and R. McLean in 1868. Some shale from here, part of the Riccarton Beds, were found to contain graptolite fossils, including spec- imens of the species called ‘Monograptus riccar- tonensis’ (marked ‘Elliot’s field’ on the 1863 Or- dinance Survey map, it was recorded as ‘Elliottsfeld’ in 1857 and ‘Eliotisfield’ in 1860).

It was named after the elm trees that used to grow there. The Hawick Co-operative Society had extensive premises in the street, including stables for the Store horses. One of the last town gas lamps from this street is preserved in the Museum. Nos. 1–7 are grade C listed buildings.

Elm Hoose (e-lum-hoos) n. villa-style house at 17 North Bridge Street, converted into a hotel. It was built as the residence of Dr. John R. Hamilton in about 1880. After conversion to a hotel the dining room became one of the town’s restaurants. It is grade C listed.

Elm Hoose Hotel (e-lum-hoos-hō-tel) n. name used for Elm Hoose after it was converted into a hotel.

the Elms (thu-elmz, e-lumz) n. name given in 1901 to the house off Weensland Road known as ‘Elmbank’ (or ‘Elm Bank’), which had been built in 1884. It was purchased in 1945 as a manse for Wilton Parish Church. By the 1990s it was back in private hands and renamed ‘Ellistrin’, with present address 6 Fenwick Park.

eln (eln) n., arch. a unit of length approximately equal to 37 inches, a yard – ‘...ten pennies for weaving of the elne of cloth against their will ...’ [BR1660], ‘...that none who shall cast peatts for this year in Whitchesters Moss shall take above twelve yards of measure amongst the Moss side for spreading of the said peatts, and that conform to the said twelve elns there must be a bridge left’ [BR1735], ‘...to take no more ground to spread peatts next the moss side than the breadth of eight elns ...’ [BR1743] (also ell).

Elphinstone (el-fin-stin) n. Alexander (17th C.) witness in 1652 to the marriage contract between Robert Elliott (2nd son of Simon of the Binks) and Margaret Riddell (eldest daughter of William, portioner of Bewlie), where he is described as ‘in Hopsburne’. In 1653 he is recorded in a sasine as ‘indweller in Hobisburne, baillie in that part to William, Earl of Lothian’. He was presumably related to the later Alexander.

Alexander (17th/18th C.) eldest son of William and Margaret Langlands. In 1713 he sold the lands of Hartshaugh and Kirklands of Hobkirk to William Kerr of Abbotrule. John of Henderstoun (16th/17th C.) brother of George, Janet and Agnes. William Turnbull of Rulewood had a ‘letter of apprising’ against him in 1622 for non-payment of several bonds. He then had to yield up the Barony of Henderstoun (in Peeblesshire) and other lands to Turnbull. His son and heir was William. John (d.1649) 2nd Lord Balmerino, son of James, who was tried for supporting catholocism. He was imprisoned for opposition to Charles I, but eventually pardoned. He remained a staunch Covenanter, presiding over the Parliament which met in Edinburgh in 1641. In 1643 he was recorded in the valuation rolls as owner of Over Crailing and the Wester Mains of Hundalee. He also held lands in Hobkirk Parish, valued at £4844 16s 8d. It is said he was a mortal enemy of William Elliott of Stobs. Some of his lands in Rulewater were sold to John Stewart, Earl of Travair and combined into the Wells estate. However, the bulk of his Rulewater property eventually became part of the estate of Elliott of Stobs. He was succeeded by his son John, and the titles became extinct in 1746 when Arthur, 6th Lord Balmerino was beheaded for supporting the Jacobite cause. Thomas (d.c.1519) received a gift of rights of the lands of Hassendeanbank, along with William (probably his son) in 1510. In 1512 he is also recorded in the Register of the Privy Seal along with his wife Elizabeth (an error for Janet?) Turnbull in a deed for Hassendeanbank. In 1512 he had a charter from Cuthbert Cunningham, Earl of Glencairston for half of the lands of Hassendeanbank, along with his wife Janet Turnbull (daughter and co-heiress of Walter Turnbull of Gargunnock). William had a ‘precept of clare constat’ in 1519, suggesting he was deceased by then. William (d.c.1486) younger son of Sir William of Pittendreich. He took up an ecclesiastical career. He became a Prebendary Canon of Glasgow and was Rector of Ashkirk by 1437. In 1479 he was stated to be holder of the Prebendary of Ancrum. He probably succeeded to his sons rights as Archdeacon of Teviotdale in 1481. He may have held the office until he died. He partnered a son, William, with an unknown woman of baronial family. It has been suggested that his was Margaret, daughter of Sir William Douglas of Drumlanrig. Their (illegitimate) son William became Bishop of Aberdeen and founded the university there. William (1431–1514) Bishop of Aberdeen and Chancellor of Scotland, son of William, Archdeacon of Teviotdale and grandson of Sir William of that Ilk. His mother may have been Margaret, daughter of Sir William Douglas, 1st Baron of Drumlanrig and also Baron of Hawick. He was an official at Glasgow University in the 1470s and became a Lord of Council in Parliament by 1478. He appears to have held some of the rights as Archdeacon of Teviotdale in the period 1479–81, with his father taking over from him. He was on the Privy Council in 1508/9 when John Muir of Rowallan was directed to give ‘warrandice’ to George Scott for Dryden, Commonside and Over Harwood. He was probably the William who (along with Thomas) received a gift of the rights of the lands of Hassendeanbank through ‘non-entry’ in 1510. William (15th/16th C.) Burgess of Edinburgh. In 1519 he had a ‘precept of clare constat’ for half of the lands of Hassendeanbank. This suggests he was son of Thomas, who held the lands in 1512. Almost immediately he gave a charter of the same lands to Andrew Ker of Cessford and Agnes Crichton. William (17th C.) acquired the lands of Hartshaugh in the Rule valley, along with his heir Alexander. The lands were probably bought from Gilbert Elliott of Craigend in the mid-1600s and remained in the family until 1713. It is unclear to which branch of the Elphinstones he belonged. In 1637 he was ‘Williamie Elphingstoun in Blacklyemouth, alias Steytheveyage’ (presumably ‘stay the voyage’) when he witnessed a Hobkirk sasine. His wife was Margaret Langlands, daughter of the minister of Wilton. William (17th C.) listed as tenant of Hartshaughmill on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He was surely a descendant of the earlier William of Hartshaugh. He belonged to the 16th century. In 1561 we find the names ‘Elrighill’, when listed among the mill and mill lands in 1707, when they were valued at £60 (formerly written ‘Elphingston’, ‘Elphensingston’ and variants).

Elrickhill (el-rik-hil) n. lands near Denholm, recorded in the Douglas of Cavers deeds around the 16th century. In 1511 it is ‘Elreachill’ when listed (along with ‘Drileth’, ‘Murelaw’ and ‘Dennummains’) as part of the Barony of Cavers. It was still in the Barony of Cavers when inherited by Sir William Douglas in 1687, when written ‘Ellrighill’, and by his brother Archibald in 1698, when transcribed ‘Elvighill’. It is unclear exactly where these lands were located, but presumably near Denholm.

else (els) adv., arch. already, ere now – ‘Forbye, A was i the hert’s hyimm, els!’ [ECS], ‘... for it was weel-on o haaf-past five, els!’ [ECS], ‘Have ee come back els!’ [GW] (also written ‘els’).

elshin (el-shin) n., arch. a shoemaker’s awl – ‘...or pinglin’ wi’ an elshin like the souters o’ Selkirk’ [JMW] (also elsin).

elsin (el-sin) n., arch. an awl (also elshin).

Elwald (el-wawl) n. early form of Elliot, e.g. recorded in a in 1497 when several men of that name witnessed a sasine for Redheugh. It is unclear if the Gilbert son of ‘Elwald’, ‘Walter son of ‘Helewald’ and ‘Helewald’ son of Herbert, listed in an assize in Newcastle in 1230, were connected. Perhaps the earliest record is for ‘Johannis Elwald’, who witnessed a sasine for Wolfelee and Wolfehopelee in 1436. Gilbert Elwald is mentioned in 1453, on a document relating to lands in Feu-rule. ‘John Elwalde’ of Thorliveshope is recorded in 1488 and 1498. ‘Robert Elwole, of the Hermitage’ is recorded in 1491. A letter of remission for Patrick Earl of Bothwell in 1500 names 14 men of that surname in Liddesdale and surrounding areas. The same spelling is used in the Register of the Privy Seal in 1510 and 1516, for families of Redheugh, Larriston, etc., so this is clearly an alternative early spelling (although Pitcairn in his ‘Criminal Trials’ states ‘The Elwals, notorious Border Thieves. The name is now extinct’). It is unclear whether this spelling was related to the pronunciation of the time, but it seems likely it was only used by scribes as an anglicised version of the name. In 1526/7 we have Gavin recorded, and in 1535 George and James. William and Robert Elwald are recorded as Liddesdale thieves in 1535. In the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale the name is recorded consistently as Elwald. Letters from English Wardens to their superiors from around this time also consistently use the form ‘Elwald’ (with spelling variants; although one letter of 1542/3 uses the perhaps more phonetic spelling ‘Eylwittes’). James Elwald in 1552 (formerly written ‘Elphingston’, ‘Elphingstoun’ and variants).
the earlier references were to an entirely different family, e.g., there were Elwolds in Ellingham Parish, Northumberland, in the 12th century, in Newcastle in 1230 and throughout the Border counties of England in the 13th and 14th centuries. A man called ‘Elewald’ was killed in 1278/9 when accidentally struck in the head by a mallet near Alston in Cumbria. There were also people of the designation ‘de Elauand’ recorded in Northumberland in the 1260s and 1270s, which may be the same family (also written ‘Ellwald’, ‘Ellwald’, ‘Elwalde’ and occasionally ‘Elwand’ and ‘Elwood’); the ‘-wald’ ending suggests a Saxon origin, and there is an ‘Elwaldus’ mentioned as early as 964 in the Melrose Chronicle; the use of this form for members of the Border Elliot family has caused some confusion in accounts of the origins and history of the Ellots, but was probably mostly an affected form used in formal documents.

the Engineer (thu-in-ji-neer) n. name of one of the stagecoaches which regularly ran between Carlisle and Hawick before the railway, the other being ‘the Favourite’. The route started at the Tower and finished at the Grey Goat Hotel (on English Street) in Carlisle. The coach ran from 1825 until 1862. Robert Govenlock was one of the original guards. According to Pigot’s 1825 directory the 2 coaches were called ‘the Mail’ and ‘the Sir Walter Scott’, but it may be that these names were never used locally.

England (ing-glund, -glind) n. country to the south of Hawick, usually entered across the Carter Bar or near Canonbie. The 19th century saw a large immigration to Hawick of people from English hosiery centres around Derby, Leicester and Nottingham – ‘Ours was a land – a free fair land – Ere England had a name; And minstrel’s harp and warrior’s brand Have aye upheld her fame’ [JT], ‘Mong the beauty spots of England I have rambled far and near ... But I like anld Hawick the best’ [TK], ‘Dive ee leike ti beide up Ingland?’ [ECS], ‘Here were the white road from England Drops to the Rule and the Jed, Leaps the proud pulse of the exile, Back to the motherland sped’ [WL] (sometimes written ‘Ingland’; note the pronunciation is always i-, never e-).

Englandshire (ing-glund-shIr) n. humorous name for England – ‘Here, hevin contemplated the ‘glorious river Tweed – clear and majestic’ Burns, for the first time in his life crossed owre inti Englandshire ...’ [WL] (a Ländlesism).

English (ing-gleesh) adj. coming from south of the Border, n. the people living south of the Border – ‘...in refusing to go as ane gyd to the Inglis to Langholm’ [BR1651], ‘The English love to sip through a stiffened upper lip. They believe they are a race of self-made men; thus relieving the Almighty of the blame for making Blyghty, and relieving Him of blame for making them’ [TD], v., arch. to translate into English – ‘And startled up auld liart carlins may be Englished, ‘and transformed themselves into old grey headed witches’” [EM1820].

English (ing-gleesh) n. Adam (17th C.) Hawick resident, married to Margaret Thorbrand. Their children included: John (b.1642); Janet (b.1644); William (b.1646); and Janet (again, b.1649). Probably the same Adam is listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick ‘eist the water’ in 1694 (it is possible that this is a variant of ‘Inglis’).

the Engineer

the English Cricket Field (thu-ing-gleesh-\textit{kri-ki’-feeld}) n. former field near St. Cuthbert’s, used for cricket, P.S.A. rugby matches etc., situated where Lyle & Scott’s offices now stand.

the English Grammar Schuil (thu-ing-gleesh-graw-mur-skil) n. another name for Hawick Grammar School, once in Orrock Place. The name possibly came from a combination of the formerly separate ‘English’ and ‘Grammar’ schools, and may only have been used once they were merged (otherwise the name is too confusing!).

the English Kirk (thu-ing-gleesh-kirk) n. informal name for the Episcopal Church, because of its ties with the Anglican Church. In Hawick this was the name given (with no obvious sense of disparagement) to St. Cuthbert’s Church, partly also because of the number of southern incomers who joined its congregation.

the English Schuil (thu-ing-gleesh-skil) n. name formerly used to refer to the ‘Parish’ as opposed to ‘Grammar’ school, i.e. the elementary school, which was taught in English rather than Latin. In the 17th century the school-house was St. Mary’s Kirk, and it is unclear what building was used in the early 18th century. In 1683 there was a plea made for the school to be house elsewhere than the Kirk, partly because ‘the pews had suffered a considerable loss by the scholars breaking the same’. In 1715 it is recorded that 5 merks were appropriated by the Council for the rent of a house for the school, with the other half to be paid by the Kirk Session. In 1722 the master was given 40 merks by the Council for renting a school-house for 4 years ‘when he had not the liberty to teach in the kirk’ and in 1737 he was allowed £8 annually for the rent of a schoolhouse. In 1739 the first purpose-built school was erected, being 30 feet by 16 feet (inside the walls). The school once had its own flag that was carried in the Common Riding procession, behind the Grammar School flag and in front of the apprentices flag, according to the 1747 Council decree. Pupils attended this school for 2 years, learning reading, writing and arithmetic. It united with the Grammar School in 1824/5. The same name was later informally used for St. Cuthbert’s School, which was attached to ‘the English Kirk’ and opened about 1848, with a purpose-built school constructed 1849/50. An Episcopalian school was also opened in Wilton in 1851, and there appears to have been a third one in the town at about the same time.

the English side (thu-ing-glesh-sid) n. the other side of the Border into England – ‘Here Johnie Armstrong, take thou my sword, That is made o’ the metal sae fine; And when thou comest tae the English side, Remember the death of Hughie the Graeme’ [T], ‘...James Olifer, toum piper, seeing several immoralities, revellings, drunkenness, frequent cursing, blaspheming ye name of God, ...beside his irregular marriage on the English side ...’ [PR1720], ‘The long line of the Carter, Teviotdale flung wide, And a slight stir in the heather – a wind from the English side’ [WHO].

enlairge (en-lārj) v. to enlarge – ‘...To gratify yer ain purit Enlairging every flaw’ [FL].

enlichten (en-līcht-en) v., arch., poet. to enlighten – ‘...the commandment o the Lord is pure, enlichtenin’ the eyne’ [HSR], ‘His licht-enini’s enlichtenit the warld; the yirth saw, an’ trimmlet’ [HSR], ‘...an’ was enlichtened on the posseation as regards the Common-Ridin’’ [BW1939].

enormitie (ee-nor-mi-tee) n., arch. a shocking crime, outrageous wrong – ‘...quhither we or any of oure foiarsaidis be the actoris of the enormities, sall be chalenged ...’ [SB1599], ‘...by yr night rambling commit divers and sundrie abominable irregularities, unlawful faults, and enormities and abuses by yr scandalous outrages ...’ [BR1706], ‘...John Binnie, late Baylyea for his miscarriages, egregious enormities and faults ...’ [BR1706].

enshair (en-shār) adj. to ensure – ‘Enshair for sunshine! That’s what they want tae dae tae make the Common-Riding pay’ [HE1939].

Ensign (en-sīn) n., arch. a standard-bearer in an army unit. This word is used in the 1706 Burgh Records to refer to the Cornet, but does not appear again after that – ‘...and voted Thomas Hardie, merchant, to be ensigne and to carrie the colour’ [BR1706].

enter (en-tur) v., arch. to present oneself or someone else in court, to assume possession of lands or property – ‘...to haue enterit, ressauit and rentallit, and be the tenmour heirof enteris, ressauis and retallis the said Gilbert and his airis ...’ [SB1591].

episcopacy (ee-pis-kō-pi-seck) n. the government of a church by bishops, also known as ‘prelacy’ in Scottish history. This form of church organisation was thrown out in Scotland during the Reformation, about 1560. However, Episcopalianism was also favoured by the Stewart kings, as well as by most of England, and Charles I tried to forcibly reimpose this form of worship and governance on Scotland in 1637. This led to the signing of the National Covenant in 1638 and the Solemn League and Covenant in 1643, and the resultant complications over Scotland’s role in the English Civil War. Later Episcopacy was forcibly re-introduced in Scotland following the restoration of Charles II in 1660. All ministers appointed since 1649 were ordered to resign and ask for reinstatement. Although most accepted, the strongest Covenanters refused, particularly in the south-west of Scotland, where there was a growing rebellion as more bishops were appointed. There then followed 2 decades of persecution of the Covenanters until Presbyterianism was again introduced in the Revolution of 1688-89. Episcopalian ministers were ejected soon after William arrived in Britain, and for the next few years ministers continued to be removed for refusing to ‘pray for William and Mary’. The last Episcopal incumbent of Hawick Parish was John Langlands, ousted in 1689 during the Revolution. Episcopal services apparently continued for a while in a private house. The ideals became mixed with those of the Jacobites through the 18th century. Thomas Somerville, minister at Cavers, apparently refused to take the oath for William and Mary, moving to Hawick to preach to a group of episcopalians including members of the Gledstains and Chisholme families. Along with Francis Scott (ex-minister of Hassendean) they set up a meeting house at the Playlaw (i.e. near the Auld Mid Raw and Kirk Wynd) in 1712, following the passing of the Act of Toleration. A small groups continued to met in a house in the Kirk Wynd until about 1777, with Rev. Findlay McLennan leading the last services. With a lapse of almost 70 years a mission station was started by Rev. W.S. White of Jedburgh in 1846. Rev. Robert Campbell continued in the following year, the first baptism was 1847, the Church Schools were built in 1850 and the new Church itself opened in 1858.

Episcopalian (ee-pis-kō-pā-lee-in) adj. belonging to the Episcopalian Church, pertaining to the government of a church by bishops.

Episcopalianism (ee-pis-kō-pā-lee-in-i-zum) n. the doctrine of governing a church through bishops, prelacy. In Scotland’s history this has tended to mean the opposite of Presbyterianism.
the Episcopal Kirk (\textit{thu-ee-pis-kö-pä-lee-in-kirk}) \textit{n.} the Scottish Episcopal (or Episcopal) Church is essentially a vestige of the Disestablishment of the Church of Scotland in 1689. It is run by bishops, and has much in common with the Church of England. Like the rest of Scotland, Hawick's parish church was Episcopal in the period 1662–89. Thereafter local Episcopalians probably met in secret. There is an entry (in the Parish Kirk records of the 1770s) of a baptism performed by Rev. Findlay McLennan (`Minister of the Episcopal Congregation of Hawick') in 1753. The church met publicly again in a Kirk Wynd house in the late 18th and early 19th centuries. This building was situated at the western end, opposite the churchyard. A new church was opened in Jedburgh in 1844 and a mission was started in Hawick by the Jedburgh minister in 1846, meeting in the Orrock Place Grammar School, with the school (and possibly the congregation itself) meeting in Inglis' Ballroom from 1847. The Church Schools were built about 1850 in Slitrig Crescent, with services held there for several years. The purpose-built St. Cuthbert's Church was erected in 1857/58, with the site and building paid for by the Duke of Buccleuch.

the Episcopal Schuil (\textit{thu-ee-pis-kö-pal-skil}) \textit{n.} another name for \textit{St. Cuthbert's Schuil}. There was also a private school taught under Episcopal supervision in about 1846 by Thomas Marchbanks in a pended apartment in the Mid Raw; probably the same school operated in the ballroom of the Half-Moon Hotel around a year later. An Episcopal school opened on Wilton Crescent in 1851, and in 1852 it is recorded that there were 3 such schools operating within Hawick and Wilton, with 180 children registered.

\textit{Eppy} (\textit{e-pe} \textit{si'-ee, -soo'}) \textit{n.} local nickname, probably from the late 18th or 19th centuries. Her real name was probably \textit{Euphemia Stevenson}, and her name came with the darkness (or dirtiness) of her attire. She is described in an Edinburgh Magazine article of 1820 as a modern witch, who wore a mantle that was `black as soot (whence probably she derived her title), and of a most aromatic perfume' and also wore a large hood. Her personal appearance was also said to be striking, with 3 prominent teeth and a long `whiskin' beard'. She was said to be demanding food and money, promising good luck to those who complied and cursing those who refused. She told fortunes, especially relating to affairs of the heart, and it is said that she was so well connected with the common people, that she could use the information gathered previously to yield apparently impressive readings. Her death is said to have come a few days after convincing her own sister to sever her foot, after the appendage had been giving her so much trouble that she wanted it to be amputated. She may have been married to William Scott, with the death of their daughter Helen recorded in 1805. She was dead by 1820 and was said to have lived into the 90s – `...the far-famed Euphemia Stevenson, alias Black Eppy, alias Eppy the Witch, alias Eppy Sooty' [EM1820], `...bar yeh haafang chaap as black as Eppy Suittie' [ECS], `Black as the yiss o spades; black as Eppy Suittie. – Expressions signifying exceeding blackness'[ECS], `Eppy Sootie and Wullie Park, Geordie the Buck and Higgins Phill, Jamie Nichol the Hawick band clairk, The Duddy Laird and Shallow Bill' [HI] (also written `Eppie Suittie' and variants; the name may have been in more widespread use as a dark-faced 18th century witch).

the Equestrian Monument (\textit{thu-ee-kwes-tree-in-mon-ew-min}) \textit{n.} formal name for \textit{the Horse}.

equup (\textit{ee-kwup}) \textit{v.} to equip.

\textit{er} (\textit{er, ur, ir}) \textit{v.} are, specifically the plural and 2nd person singular form of `to be' – `er ee shuir about that?’, `er they ony guid?’, `oo er the Borders’, `...and gaun among oor ain folk withoot them jaloosin whae oo er’ [JEDM], `Ma breeks er a' splattered wi' glaur'[RM], `...sin maist o' thum er hidden ahint street frontees'[BW1978], also used for 1st person singular – `am er so’, `ee might no be fri Hawick, bit am er’, `You'll never hear the words `I am' For Hawick folks say `A'm er’' [IWL] (note the pronunciation varies depending on context, stress, etc., this form often used emphatically).

Ernay (er-nil-in) n. former house marked on the 1799 map. It was a private residence, and the property passed through several owners before becoming a public house.

Ernay (er-nil-in) n. stream that joins the Ettrick Water between Singlie and Ettrickbridge. The lands there were owned by the Crown from at least 1456. They were associated with a branch of the Turnbulls in the 15th century, perhaps the same branch who were also at Whithope and Harden in the Borthwick valley. John Turnbull was Laird there in 1464/5. It is probably the Crown property of 'Erneheuch', which was let along with Singlie to Walter Turnbull of Gargunnock in 1484, Thomas Home of Langshaw in 1490, Patrick Home of Fastcastle in 1492 and Sir Robert Ker in 1499. It remained Crown property until at least 1502. The Laird of Whithope 'in ernheuch' was recorded in 1494/5 and Robert Scott was recorded there in the same year. The Laird of Cessford was tenant in 1541, paying £28. It passed to Sir William Scott of Harden about 1605 and was later owned by the Scotts of Bonnington (it is 'Ernhuch' in 1456, 'Ernhuych' in 1464/5, 'Erneleuch' in 1468, 'Erneleuch' in 1490 and in 1494/5, 'Erneleuch' in 1502, 'Ernheuch' in 1541, 'Erbescleugh' in 1593, 'Erneheuch' about 1605 and ‘Ernesheugh’ in 1624).

Erneside Craigs (ern-síd-krágs) n. craggy outcrop in southern Castleton, situated between Blinkbonny Height and the Kershope Burn. Nearby are the remains of a settlement, about 70 m by 40 m in size.

Ernest Augustus (er-nist-aw-gus-tis) n. (1771–1851) King of Hannover. He was 5th son of George III, being made to serve with the Hanoverian hussars in 1790, returning to England in 1776. In 1799 he was created Duke of Cumberland and Teviotdale. Very unpopular in Britain at the time, he was variously accused of murder and incest. Because of the rules of succession he became King of Hanover in 1837 on the death of his brother William IV, and was apparently much more popular there than back home. He married Friederike Caroline Sophia Alexandrina of Solms-Braunfels. He outlived his 8 brothers and was succeeded by his son George V of Hannover.

Ernest Augustus William Adolphus George Frederick (1845–1923) only son of George V of Hanover and grandson of Ernest Augustus. After the death of his father he assumed the title of Duke of Cumberland and Teviotdale in the British peerage. However, he was an officer in the Austrian army, and since he fought against Britain in WWI he had his titles stripped in 1919. He was thus the 3rd and last Duke.

Ernilton (er-nil’:in) n. former house marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map, located in the hills approximately north of Steele Road. The area to the north is marked ‘Erniltoun b. fell’, corresponding probably to the modern Arnton Fell, suggesting that one of the streams there was the Erniltown Burn. The rental roll for Liddesdale from about 1376 lists 42 separate pieces of land under ‘Quarterium de Ermyldoune’, which is probably the same place. The name was thus formerly of much greater significance. Owners of land there around 1376 include ‘Johannis Raufson’, ‘Ricardi Broun’, ‘Thome Gilson’, ‘Adé de Syde’, ‘Elie Nabill’, ‘Daud Stodhirde’, ‘Ennie de Lawys’, ‘Ricardi de Lawis’, ‘Robert de Lawis’, ‘Matheir Meryng’ and ‘Willedme Nycson’.

Erskine (ers-kin) n. Adam (15th C.) left 3 sheep in the 1491/2 will of Sir David Scott of Branxholme. He is listed as ‘Ade Ersyyn’.

Alexander (d.bef. 1509) served heir to his father Thomas in 1494, when he became 3rd Lord. He thereby also inherited the estates of Synton and Dalgleish and the office of Sheriff of Selkirk (as well as many other lands and titles), for which he already held a crown charter of 1489. He witnessed a document reflecting the ‘Lagussendean’ in 1480/1. He had a sasine for Synton on 1493. He held the lands on formal presentation to the King of a pair of gilt spurs at Whitsunday, if asked. He may be the Laird of Whitlade who was fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire held in Selkirk in 1494/5. In 1502 his son and heir Robert had a charter of the lands of Nisbet from him. He married Christian, daughter of Sir Robert Crichton of Sanquhar. Their children included Robert (4th Lord), Walter, Christian and Agnes. He later married Ellen, daughter of Alexander, 1st Lord Home.

Charles of Shielfield (1771–1825) 2nd son of Rev. James, he succeeded on the death of his brother Lieut.-Col. Henry. He was a lawyer, who was Sheriff-Substitute for Selkirkshire, as well as being Baron Bailie of Melrose, and stayed at the Priory there. He was a good friend of Sir Walter Scott, under whom he worked. He was a founding member of the Jedforest Club. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. In 1806 at Borthwickshields he married Barbara, only daughter of George Pott of Todrig. Their children included: James, who succeeded, and married his cousin Barbara Pott; and Col. George Pott, who married Jane, daughter of Rev. G. Coventry. David Stuart (1742–1829) 11th Earl of Buchan. Interested in history and the arts in Scotland, he was a founder member of the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland and also founded the Ednam Club to maintain interest in the poetry of James Thomson. He was also instrumental in having the Encyclopaedia Britannica published. In 1786 he purchased the Dryburgh estate, saving the abbey from further destruction. He used it as the centrepiece for his planned ‘Caledonian Temple of Fame’. The main parts of this vision that were completed were the obelisk in the Abbey grounds, the Wallace statue and the Temple of the Muses. He had Dryburgh House substantially rebuilt and lived there until his death. Sir David (1772–1837) historian and dramatist. His father, the 11th Earl of Buchan, had bought Dryburgh Abbey, saving it for posterity, and he inherited the estate in 1810. He wrote historical plays, among them ‘James V; or, The warlike days o’ Hab of Hawick: an historical drama’ in 1829, published by John Anderson, Edinburgh, 1830 (this being a fanciful version of the old story). He is also described as ‘Captain Erskine of Dryburgh’. He died without issue and the Dryburgh estate passed to Henry David, 12th Earl of Buchan. Rev. Henry ‘Harry’ (1692/3–1773) son of James of Shielfield in Berwickshire and Elizabeth, daughter of John Scott of Ancrum. He was licensed to preach by Kelso Presbytery in 1722, was presented to Robertson Parish at the end of 1727 and became minister there early the next year. He married Janet Cunningham (who died aged 64 in 1766), daughter of the minister of Hawick. Their children included James, Marjory and Robert. He was succeeded in the Robertson ministry by his son James. Note that the slightly earlier minister of Chirnside of the same name (whose wife Margaret Halcro is famous for being roused from the family mausoleum when the sexton tried to cut the ring from her finger, thereby recovering and living for another 51 years!) and his son Ebenezer, founder of the secession church, who were related to him. The memorial tablet to Rev. Robert Scott of Robertson had some lines added to it in his memory also. James of Grange (1680–1754) 2nd son of Charles, 5th Earl of Mar. He served as Lord of Session. He held the superiory of the lands of Whitslade and Dalgleish, which he sold to James Adam in 1723. He married Rachel, daughter of John Chiesly of Dalry. Rev. James (1731–88) son of Harry, the minister of Robertson, he was licensed by the Presbytery of Selkirk in 1757 and became preacher at Caerlenrig ‘chapel-of-ease’ (i.e. Teviothead) in 1763, remaining for only about a year. He was presented to Kirkton at the end of 1763 and became minister there in 1764. He was then translated to Robertson Parish in 1774, replacing his father. A new Manse was built for him soon afterwards. He was one of the founders of the Hawick Farmers’ Club in 1776. In 1777 he succeeded his cousin Patrick as 7th Erskine of Shielfield. In 1779 he was listed as ‘Rev. James Askin of Dryburgh’ in Robertson Parish when he was taxed for having a male servant. He wanted to transfer to Wilton (according to a letter of 1784 to Hugh Scott of Harden). He was recorded on the Horse Tax Rolls in Robertson Parish in 1785. In 1786 he was translated to St. Boswells, but died only about 2 years later. He married Henrietta Scott, daughter of Charles of Goldielands, and she died in 1818 at the age of 79. Their children included: Henry, who was in the army and succeeded, but had no offspring; Charles, who became a lawyer in Melrose, married Barbara, daughter of George Pott of Todrig and succeeded his brother; and William, who was a preacher and tax surveyor in Haddington. James of Shielfield (1809/10–75) son of Charles. In the 1850s he was said to hold the female representation of the female line of the Scotts of Goldielands and Crumhaugh. He married his cousin Barbara Pott and she died in 1886, aged 76. He was succeeded by his son Charles. He and his wife are buried at Dryburgh Abbey. Sir John (d.1552) 5th Lord Erskine, 2nd son of Robert, who died at Flodden. He was also referred t as ‘of Nisbet’. He was named along with his father in an indenture of 1510 involving lands within their Barony of Synton, with Kers. He inherited the lands of Synton from his father in 1513 and they passed to his son and heir John in 1557. He married Margaret, daughter of Archibald Campbell, Earl of Argyll. His 2 eldest sons, Robert and Thomas, died before him. His daughter Margaret was a mistress of James V, and mother of James, Earl of Mar (and later Regent of Scotland). John (d.1572) 6th Lord Erskine and 1st (or 22nd) Earl of Mar. He was a member of the Council of Mary, Queen of Scots, guardian of James V and served as Regent of Scotland in 1571. In 1557 he inherited his father’s lands of Synton. He was among the prominent men of the nation who signed the document declaring James as Monarch (in place of Mary) in 1567. He married Annabella, daughter of William Murray of Tullibardine, and was succeeded by his son John, 2nd Earl of Mar. His daughter Mary married Archibald Douglas, 8th Earl of Angus. John (c.1562–1634) 2nd (or 23rd) Earl of Mar and 1st Lord of Cardross, son of the 6th Lord Erskine. He served as Treasurer of Scotland. He inherited his father’s lands of Synton in 1573, but sold them to the Earl of Bucheuch in 1619. He is recorded gaining the lands of Synton and Synton Mill from Sir John Edmondston in 1593. He resigned his lands in 1620, so they could be re-granted to his heir. This included superiority over the local lands of Synton, Whitslade and Dalgleish. He married Anna, daughter of David, Lord Drummond and was succeeded by his son John and had several other children. John (d.1653/4) 3rd or 24th Earl of Mar, descended from the family who formerly held lands at Synton. In 1635 he was served heir to his father's Earldom of Mar, which included superiority over Whitslade and Dalgleish (which was one third of Synton). The Scotts of Whitslade held the main estate at this time, and Synton was held by the Scotts of Buccleuch. He married Jean Hay (daughter of the Earl of Erroll) and was succeeded by his son John, who was Chancellor and married Mary (or Margaret), daughter of Walter Scott, 1st Earl of Buccleuch. Sir Robert (d.1452) 1st Lord Erskine, son of Sir Thomas of that Ilk and his 2nd wife, Janet Keith of Synton. Through his mother he probably inherited the Synton estates and possibly the hereditary sheriffdom of Selkirk. He witnessed charters during the regency of the Duke of Albany. He was captured at Homildon Hill in 1402, but released by 1405 and was again in English captivity in 1427. He claimed the Earldom of Mar in right of his mother in 1435. He passed on his estates (retaining the 'liferent') to his son Thomas in 1448, this including Synton and Dalgleish. He married a Stewart and secondly Elizabeth, daughter of David Lindsay of Glenesk. He was succeeded by his son Thomas, 2nd Lord. Robert (d.1513) son of Alexander, 4th Earl of Mar. He had a charter for the lands of Nisbet, Synton and lands within Selkirk in 1499/1500. He and his heirs had a charter for Nisbet in 1502. He obtained a charter of the lands of Synton and associated lands of Whitslade and Dalgleish in 1507/8 (when he was heir apparent to his father). Part of the deal was that he could infeft Whitslade to John Cockburn of Orniston and John Glendinning the lands of Dalgleish. He was Baron of Synton, rather than owner of specific lands within it, since Scott of Synton is mentioned as early as 1509, about the time he became 4th Lord. In 1510 there is an indenture of him and his son, with Ralph Ker of Primside Loch and Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst involving lands in Synton, as well as Nisbet; this was witnessed by John of Dun, as well as Alexander and Robert, who were probably all closely related. He married Isabella, daughter of Sir George Campbell of London. Their eldest son, Robert, died before him and he was succeeded by his second son Sir John, the 5th Lord. The youngest of his 3 sons was James, who married Christian Stirling, and who was progenitor of the Erskines of Shiefield. He was killed at Flodden. Robert (18th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Katherine Gledstains and their daughter Mary was baptised in Hawick in 1775. She is probably the 'Kate Gladstains Mother to Molly Eskine' whose death is recorded in 1816. Thomas of that Ilk (d.c.1404) son of Sir Robert, Chamberlain of Scotland. He witnessed charters during the reign of Robert III. He was witness to the confirmation of the lands and titles of George Douglas, Earl of Angus. He held many other titles and positions, including Keeper of Edinburgh Castle in 1371. He was recorded as Sheriff of Selkirkshire in 1373. In 1383 he is recorded when Peter of Keburn, Lord of Henryland renounced to him the rights to the rentals from the lands of Dalgleish in Selkirkshire. In 1389 he witnessed the charter of Walter Scott to the superiority of Kirkurd; he is there referred to as 'consanguineo nostro', suggesting he was related to King Robert II. He married Mary, daughter and heiress of Sir William Douglas; she died in childbirth and a duel was fought over the right to her titles, the crucial dispute being over whether her child was stillborn or died after birth. He secondly married Joneta Keith, from whom he may have inherited the Synton estates. He was captured at Homildon Hill and may have died while a prisoner. He was succeeded by his son Robert. Thomas (d.1493/4) 2nd Lord Erskine, son of Sir Robert, the 1st Lord. Among other lands he held the estate of Synton and office of Sheriff of Selkirk, which passed to his son Alexander. This may have come through his grandmother Joneta Keith, Lady of Cadzow. He had a crown charter in 1448 for the lands of Erskine, Sheriffdom of Aberdeen, etc., as well as the lands of Dalgleish and Synton; these had been resigned by his father, while retaining 'liferent'. He was 'Thoma, domino Erskin' when witnessing charters for the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1451/2 and 1455 and another for the Douglasses in 1456. He is recorded as Sheriff of Selkirkshire in 1469. He also served as Justiciar for Lothian in 1474. Along with Alexander, he witnessed an ‘instrument’ relating to lands in Haysendean in 1480/1. He resigned his lands in the King’s hands in 1489, and they were re-granted to his heir, Alexander. He married Janet Douglas, possibly a daughter of the 1st Earl of Morton. His children included Alexander, 3rd Lord; Helen; Isobel; Elizabeth; and Mariotta or Muriella. He may also have been father of Margaret, who married James Rutherford of that Ilk and Wells.

He died 3 months before his son Alexander succeeded in April 1494. William (16th C.) Parson of Campsie and Commendator of Paisley. He was appointed as titular Archbishop of Glasgow in 1585, but deprived in 1587, when the General Assembly dissolved the archbishopric. He may have continued to be referred to as Archbishop until 1594, but unlike his predecessors, played no important role in affairs in Teviotalde. His seal was rather crude compared to those of earlier bishops, showing St. Kentigern and the words ‘SIG-ILLUM GUILIELMI ERSKENE ARCHIEPISCOPI GLASGU.’ (formerly written ‘Erskyn’, ‘Erskin’ and variants).

es (ez) v. is (third person singular, present tense) – ‘is he bide?’, ‘...how zan a privilege it hez been and still ez ti bide in the West End’ [IWL], ‘If we are inquiring about a sick friend we might say, ‘Is hei bediit?’ We would not, however, hear the word ‘is’ so sounded in the answer. ‘Hei ez that, puir fella’’ [WL] (often used emphatically, in response to a statement, even if it contained ‘is’; note is is also frequently used, depending on context, and eez is sometimes used for emphasis; also spelled ‘ez’).

Ésa (ee-sa) n. (b.c.457) possibly first chief of Bernicia, the Anglian kingdom of north-eastern England and south-eastern Scotland, which included Hawick. He was succeeded by his son Eoppa and grandson Ida who became the first genuine King of Bernicia.

Éscape (ee-skāp) n. Hawick-based electronic band of the late 1980s and early 1990s, mainly Iain Scott on vocals and posing, supported by Keith Middlemas and sometimes others. They were the last band to play at Humphrey’s (ex-COPI GLASGU.’ (formerly written ‘Erskyn’, 'Erskin' and variants).

Eschetho (e-shē-tō) n. lost place-name in Lilliesleaf Parish, probably replaced with Lintonbank or perhaps being the same as the lands later referred to as ‘Riddell’ (the name is recorded from about 1150 and likely comes from the Old English ‘æsc sceat hoh’, meaning ‘the corner height with a thin tree’).

Ésdaile Law (es-dāl-law) n. hill to the west of Hawick, just north of Blawearie, reaching a height of 357 m. It has been suggested that the line of a Roman road passed here, connecting Craik Cross with Dere Street, via Groundistone Heights and Harelaw.

Ésdaile Sike (es-dāl-sīk) n. stream that rises near Blawearie and flows in a north-western direction to reach the Ale Water.

esh (esh) n., arch. ash (the tree or wood) – ‘Aa mind yince o’ sei-in a wice-like esh-plant that was growin’ on a steep cley bankin’’...’[DH].

Eshiebank see Ashybank

esk (esk) n., arch. the eft or newt – ‘The pert little eskis they curlit their tails, And danced a myrthsome reele’ [JTe] (also ask).

the Esk (tu-e-sk) n. popular name for the River Esk. It is formed of the Black and White Esk, which merge near Castle O’er Forest. It then runs through Langholm, merges with the Liddel and the Eden and empties into the Solway Firth. Historically it was an important part of the West Marches. In 1583 Captain Thomas Musgrave described it thus: ‘Eske is a fayre ryver, and cometh thronге Esdall, and is Scottishe, inhabited with Batteason of Essdell, untill it come neare a placed called the Langhalme castill and meeteth with the water called Use, which waters and dales are bothe my Lorde Maxwells untill it come to Canony kyrke, and then the Armestronges and Scottishe Graymes have it untill it meete the ryver of Lydall at the Mote skore, where Fargus Grayme his howse stands. Eskbank (esk-bawngk) n. former station on the Waverley Line, just south of Edinburgh.

Eskdaill (es-dāl) n. courtesy title of the heir to the heir to the Dukedom of Buccleuch (i.e. first son of the Earl of Dalkeith), which keeps the older spelling. It was written this way in 1619 when Walter Scott was created Lord of Whitchester and Eskdaill, as well as Earl of Buccleuch.
Eskdaill Bank

Eskdaill Bank (esk-dāl-bawŋk) n. street rising steeply uphill across the roundabout from Mart Street, better known as the ‘Killin Hoose Brae’. It was developed in 1897 and named after a title of the Scotts of Buccleuch.

Eskdaill Terrace (esk-dāl-te-ris) n. street named in 1883, developed in 1885, and incorporated into the west end of Weensland Road in 1955. Since the land was originally purchased from the 5th Duke of Buccleuch, it was named after one of the titles given to Walter, Lord Scott of Buccleuch in 1619 and more recently borne by heirs to the Earldom of Dalkeith. The main road to Denholm used to pass through this location (i.e. above the present Weensland Road) until rejoining near Bogliebarns (i.e. near the present Little Shop).

Eskdale (esk-dāl) n. valley of the River Esk, running from roughly Canonbie to Eskdalemuir. It was once a Lordship, held by the Avenel family from the late 12th century until it passed to the Grahams through marriage in 1243. In 1309 Robert the Bruce confirmed a charter to Melrose Abbey of lands there (held of Graham) and the superiority was granted to Sir James Douglas. It remained with the Earls of Douglas until they forfeited their lands and it was granted to George, Earl of Angus in 1458/9. Melrose Abbey still held the office of Bailie from around 1484, and it still belonged to the Abbey in 1553/4.

March! march! Eskdalemuir! [DH] (it is ‘Eskdailmur’ in 1524, ‘Esdaill Muir’ in 1533/4 and ‘Eskdaill Muir’ in 1633).

the Esmond Elliot Wards (θu-ez-min-|-e-lee-i’-wawrdz) n. wards in the Cottage Hospital, named for the Hon. Esmond Elliot, brother of Lord Minto, who was killed in WWI. His sister Lady Violet Astor gave a sum to build the wards, and the foundation stone was laid by the Prince of Wales in 1924.

Esplin (esp-lin) n. Thomas (19th C.) English stockmaker who came to Hawick in the mid-1800s. He helped introduce cricket to the Town. He may be related to (or an error for) John, who was living at about 19 Howegate in 1841.

Essenside (e-sin-sid) n. hamlet to the west of Ashkirk, consisting of Wester and Easter Essenside, with Essenside Head above the former and Essenside Loch above the latter. Old Essenside was a former farmstead between Western Essenside and Essenside Loch. An ancient fort and settlement are in the hills to the west. The lands were owned by branches of the Scotts from the 16th century, and Easter Essenside was later farmed by the Shortreeds for several generations. Bernard Shortreed was recorded as tenant there in 1494/5. In about 1616 a group of Scotts murdered Walter Scott ‘in Essenside’ (son of ‘Auld Wat’ of Harden) while he was fishing on the Ettrick. Geordie Johnstone was there in 1623. In 1643 the teinds of the Laird were valued at £60 and held by Robert Scott of Heap. In 1678 John Scott of Synton is recorded as owner of these lands, valued at £365. The ‘Laird of Todrick younger’ was listed there in 1694 – ‘Out beyond the Langhope Burn and over Essenside …’ [WHO] (it is marked as ‘Essinsyd’ on Gordon’s c. 1650 map, while Blue’s 1654 map shows ‘W. Essinsyd’ and ‘E. Essinsyd’ and it is ‘Eastenside’ on the 1718 Buccleuch survey; it is ‘eschinsyd’ in 1494/5, ‘Eschinsyd’ in 1622 and ‘Essinsyd’ in 1623).
Essenside Heid

Essenside Heid (e-sin-sid-heed) n. hill above Wester Essenside, reaching a height of 314 m, and now being in a wooded area. The higher hill to the west (which appears to be unnamed) contains the remains of a fort and settlement. The hill-fort is oval, about 75 m by 50 m, with 3 ramparts, and containing 9 hut-circles, some perhaps being from a later settlement. Another hill to the north (also unnamed) contains traces of cord rig.

Essenside Loch (e-sin-sid-loch) n. body of water lying just above Easter Essenside in the Ale valley. A plan of the Loch was made by John Ainslie in 1774. In 1815 there was a dispute between Archibald Cochrane of Ashkirk and Gilbert Elliot, Earl of Minto, over rights to the marle in the loch. There are rig lines visible to the south of the Loch – ‘But ere they had won where the wandering moon Lit Essenside Loch with her di- stic). there is no record of any minister

Ettleton (e-tul-tin) n. former parish near Newcralston, with a churchyard that still contains medieval grave stones. It is reached from a short dead-end road leaving the main road south of Newcastleton by the Milnholm Cross. Some of the oldest stones have been incorporated into a wall, which is dedicated to the memory of the Armstrongs, and others are behind a railing. The church was in the patronage of the Lords of Lids- desdale, but there is no record of any minister serving there. There is now no sign of the church that served the parish until 1604, when it was merged with Castleton; it was located on a terrace to the north and west of the graveyard. There are the remains of a settlement to the north (said to have been a village once), where ancient coins were found in the early 19th century. A more extensive farm and field system is located to the west, possibly being the lands of Side. There was also probably another chapel at Chapelknowe, at the edge of the old parish towards Canonbie. It appears on Bagomond’s Roll of 1275 as ‘Rectoria cum vicaria de Eddiltoun’. In the Exchequer Rolls for 1540 the teind lambs were paid to the rector there, amounting to £29 12s. The farm there along with Millholm, was possessed by David Goldie and James Mitchelson. The patronage and teinds of the kirk are still mentioned when it is described as a ‘pendicle’ of Castleton. The present church was built in 1824. There is also the Boston Memorial Hall. The lands of ‘Ethrik’, Rodono and ‘Carrick’ were erected into a free regality by James I in 1436 (origin uncertain; sometimes formerly spelled ‘Ettrick’, it is ‘Ethryc’ and ‘Ethric’ in c.1236, ‘Ettricke’ in 1415 and ‘Ethryk’ in 1519).

the Ettrick (thu-e’-reek) n. popular name for Ettrick Witter – ‘The border lass sings it in strains sweet tho’ sad, On the banks o’ the Ettrick or Yarrow’ [WS], ‘Fareweel, my Ettrick! fare-ye- wee! I own I’m unco laith to leave ye; Nane kens the half o’ what I feel, Nor half the cause I ha’e to grieve me!’ [ES].

Ettrickbank (e’-reek-bawngk) n. cottage in Ettrickbridge, once the home of the Ettrick Shepherd and of the Scott family in the mid-19th century. Ettrickbridge (e’-reek-brig, et-reek-brig) n. Ettrickbridge, also called ‘Ettrickbridge-end’, a village set out by the 3rd Duke of Buccleuch in the late 16th century in the Ettrick valley, west of Selkirk. The lands there had been held by the Scotts of Harden until about 1746. The original bridge there was built of freestone in 1628 by Auld Wat of Harden and had 3 arches. The romantic version of the story is that the old riever had accidentally killed a child in a cross-Border raid, and at the request of the Abbot of Melrose erected this bridge at a spot where several lives had been lost crossing the river, so that in future many lives would be saved. The bridge was ruined by 1715 and rebuilt in 1739, but washed away in 1777. The replacement came in 1780 about half a mile further up-river, and this had the old stone displaying the Harden coat of arms built into it. It became a royal hunting forest, with royal parties being based at Selkirk and Galashiels. Ettrick Brig-end (et-reek-brig-end) n. the village of Ettrickbridgeend, also known as ‘Ettrick-brig’.

Ettrick Forest (e’-reek-for-ist, et-reek-for-ist) n. name formerly used for a large tract of land generally lying to the west of Selkirk, and also sometimes called ‘Selkirk Forest’ or just ‘the Forest’. It formed the last large part of the great Caledonian Forest situated around the Ettrick and Yarrow valleys, and now almost entirely gone. It consisted of Scots pine, oak, birch and hazel. However, it should be noted that the word ‘forest’ could also refer to an area of bare, high land, rather than necessarily implying that it was full of trees. It became a royal hunting forest, with royal parties being based at Selkirk and Galashiels.
Ettrick

Lands there were granted to Sir James Douglas by Robert the Bruce in 1321, and they remained in the superiority of the Douglases until forfeited to the Crown in the middle of the 15th century. Rents were paid to the Crown, with a few specific farms where the King or Queen kept their own flocks of sheep. Margaret Tudor received lands there in 1503, which later passed to the Scotts. There was often a Keeper of the Forest, with the Earl of Gloucester being one of the first appointed, by Edward I. It was also used as a sanctuary for fugitives, with Wallace and Bruce hiding there, for example, and known as a lawless place in riving days. In early times there were special Forest Courts, with jurisdiction over the residents, and the Forest was divided into 3 Wards, known as Ettrick, Tweed and Yarrow. Each Ward was under the charge of 2 rangers, one of whom was referred to as the Master Ranger. The Wards were divided into steadings; in the 15th century there were 45 in Ettrick, 23 ½ in Yarrow and 17 in Tweed, each paying £6 in rent, as well as payment in livestock – ‘...May hang upon a soor ploom tree, And sleep in Ettrick Forest’ [JT] (it is ‘Ettrick-Forest’ in 1525).

Ettrickheid (et-rek-heid) n. area around the head of the Ettrick Water. The lands there were part of the holdings of Melrose Abbey, for which the Scotts of Buccleuch had the office of Bailie from the late 15th century (it is ‘Ettrikheid’ in 1524 and 1525 and ‘Ettrikheid’ in 1553/4).

Ettrickhill (et-rek-hil) n. village, being the western extension of Ettrick. Here is the monument to the Ettrick Shepherd, marking the site of the cottage he was born in.

Ettrickhouse (et-rek-hoos) n. Ettrickhouse, former farm in the Ettrick valley. In 1557 Scott in Thirlestane paid rent to Melrose Abbey for these lands. The tenants there in 1609 were John Scott, James Amos and Archibald Stewart. Sir Robert Scott of Thirlestane had a charter for these and other lands in about 1620 and granted them to Sir Walter Scott of Whitslade in about 1622. They were inherited by Thomas Scott of Whitslade in 1655 (it is ‘Ettrikhous’ in 1557, ‘Atrikhous’ in 1564 and ‘Ettrikhous’ in about 1622).

Ettrick Pairish (e'-rek-paar-resh) n. parish in Selkirkshire, containing the upper reaches of the Ettrick valley, extending to St. Mary’s Loch. It is bounded by Roberton to the south-east. It incorporated the ancient parish of Rankilburn or Buc- cleuch from 1650. There was a ‘New Kirk’ there from the early 16th century, with the present building dating from 1824 (it is ‘Atrik’ in 1539).

Ettrick Pen (et-rek-pen) n. summit that is the highest point in the headwaters of the Et- trick, on the border with Dumfries & Galloway, reaching a height of 692 m (2,270 ft). It was long referred to as ‘Eskdalemuir Pen’ by those living in Eskdale – ‘...For, swift as the deer on Ettrick Pen Sweep at the sound from scaur to glen, And swift as the towering kestrel stoops When a field mouse moves in the bracken hoops’ [WHO], ‘Away owre i’ the wast, Ettrick Pen, raxin abune his neebors, And the muckle roond shooders o’ the Moffat Hills ...’ [DH] (the name is probably another example of the p-Celtic ‘pen’).

the Ettrick Shepherd (thu-et-rek-she- purd) n. popular name for the other James Hogg.

Ettrickside (et-rek-sid) n. the side of the Ettrick Water – ‘There are brace on Ettrickside Where the broom and bracken bide; But the’re charmin’ spots that hide Roond auld Ha-wick’ [TK].

Ettrickside (et-rek-sid) n. former name for a farm in the Ettrick valley, owned by the Scotts of Thirlestane in the early 17th century, with tenants in 1609 being William ‘Houp’ and Thomas Brydon. It was once part of the parish of Rankil- burn. In 1621 it was described as an ‘outset’ of Gamesleuch (it is ‘Ettrikyside’ in 1609 and ‘Etriksyd’ in 1621; it is marked ‘Etrikssyld’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

Ettrick Terrace (e'-rek-te-ris, et-rek-te-ris) n. street in ‘the Terraces’ of the Wellogate, built around 1892 by Hawick Working Men’s Building and Investment Company, and named after the river.

Ettrick Witter (e'-rek-wi'-ur, et-rek-wi'-ur) n. river that rises at Ettrick Head, east of Moffat, and joins the Tweed near Abbotsford. The first bridge across it was built for Alexander II in 1234 and connected Kelso Abbey with a cell of monks at Lesmahagow in Lanarkshire, although it is unclear how long it lasted. The next bridge was built by Auld Wat of Harden at Ettrickbridge in 1628 and replaced in 1780. There was also a ford near here from at least 1647 – ‘...I hear the lintie in the whins Where Ettrick rins’ [JBS], ‘So Ettrick flowed by an elf-heart led With an elf-song sung the while, And the crystal tear that a fairy shed Made a wasted moorland smile’ [WHO] (the river was formerly known as ‘Ethric’, ‘Etryk’, ‘Hetterich’, ‘Etreyich’, ‘Atrie’, etc., and may be related to the Old Welsh ‘Atre’ meaning ‘playful’).

the Evangelical Union (thu-ee-vawn-je-lee-kul-yoon-yin) n. evangelical church group in Hawick, formed in 1848 and later renamed the Congregational Kirk (although there were separate, but related, groups with that name at about the same time, the early history being complicated). They met on O’Connell Street, with Rev. Alexander Duff being the first minister. The church was formed on E.U. principles, but only joined the Scottish Evangelical Union in 1859. The building was constructed on O’Connell Street in 1848–9 and finally sold about 1892 when the new church was erected on Bourtree Place. Also called the ‘Evangelistic Union’ and later the ‘E.U. Congregational Church’ when there was a union between the Evangelical and Congregational churches in Scotland. It was finally renamed simply the ‘Congregational Church’, and moved to new premises on Bourtree Place in 1894.

A’ things are changed for evermair ...’ [FL], ‘...I’d cherish her, my faultless dove For evirmair’ [WP], ‘Till in His hame I dwell for evermair ...’ [WL].

Evers (ee-vurz) n. Sir Ralph (1508–1545) officer of Henry VIII, born in Witton Castle, Yorkshire, son of William the 1st Lord Eure (or Evers). He was married to Margery Bowes (grand-daughter of Sir Richard Bowes, who had been Warden of the English Middle Marches). He was deputy at Berwick and Governor of Scarborough Castle in the siege of 1536. About 1545 he became English Warden of the West Marches, at the same time as his father was Warden of the East March. In 1544 he led a raid on west Teviotdale, when Branzholme tower was burned, 8 Scots slain, 30 taken prisoner and a large amount of livestock carried off. His force met Hertford’s force at Edinburgh, after razing Haddington and Hawick on the way from England (although this may be an error, since the two places are hardly on the same route). He was certainly in charge of the force that looted and burned Jedburgh in 1544. He later led an English invasion that devastated the Borders in 1545, being promised lands that he conquered in Teviotdale and the Merse. This invasion followed the raid of Lord Hertford as part of the ‘Rough Wooing’, in which the Border Abbeys were attacked and tombs were destroyed. It probably included Hawick, although there are no explicit records of this. He was supported by several Kers and other locals, at the siege of Conlingham and the burning of Selkirk. His forces were routed at Ancrum Moor, where he was killed along with his fellow commander Sir Brian Latoun. He was ironically buried at Melrose Abbey, which his own forces had desecrated earlier. Apparently his body was skinned and the skin used to make purses for Scottish officers. An English ballad, ‘Lord Ewie’, is about him – ‘Lord Ewie was as brave a man As ever stood in his degree; The King has sent him a broad letter, All for his courage and loyalty’ [T]. Ralph 3rd Lord Eure (1558–1617) son of William. He succeeded Sir John Forster as Warden of the English Middle March about 1553–57. He married Margaret Dymoke of Scrivelsby and was succeeded by his son Ralph (also written ‘Eure’, ‘Eyre’, ‘Ewrie’, etc.).

Ewen (yoo-win) n. Andrew (c.1760–1840s) born in Kelso, son of Andrew and Mary Hogherd. He was a Skinner and tanner in Hawick. He had the premises in Tannage Close from 1812, moving to Slitrig Crescent by the 1820s. He was listed as Andrew ‘sen. Crescent’ in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory and his tannery on Slitrig Crescent is shown on Wood’s 1824 map, around No. 1. He was listed among heads of households of Wilton Kirk in 1835. He was listed as a tanner in Pigot’s 1837 directory. His business was eventually taken over by John Nichol, who was later Provost. He was a staunch Whig who worked to help elect Capt. Elliot. It is said that Elliot influenced the Whig members of the county to appoint his son as the Minister of Hobkirk the year after the 1832 election. He married Jane Peddie (from Kelso), and their children included: Jean (b.1790), who was living unmarried at Slitrig Crescent in 1851; Andrew (b.1792), a manufacturer in Jedburgh; Mary (b.1794); Helen (b.1796); Rev. John (b.1800), local minister; and Henry (b.1804), also a skinner. He was still alive in 1841 and listed in Slater’s 1852 directory (although he was probably deceased by then). His children Jane, Helen and Robert were all living together unmarried on Bridge Street in 1861. One of his daughters was probably the ‘Miss Ewen’ who donated a 1576 bible to the Museum in 1857. Andrew (b.1792) son of Andrew. He worked in Hawick before moving to Jedburgh, where he was a manufacturer. He was still in Hawick in 1825 when he subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’. He is recorded as ‘Andrew Ewen, jun.’ as a currier on the Crescent in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. In 1841 he was a manufacturer at Al- lars Mill in Jedburgh, living with his son Robert. Henry (b.1804) son of Andrew and Jane Peddie. He was also a skinner in Hawick. In the 1837 Commons inquiry into ‘fictitious voters’ he was mentioned as exchanging property with John Haldane in Selkirk, apparently for the purpose of voting. He is recorded as such in the electoral roll of 1837 and on the 1841 census is living with his elderly father and sister Helen on the Crescent. In 1851 he was listed as a farmer on Slitrig Crescent and in 1861 was at 3 Bridge Street (probably corresponding to the modern No. 20), still unmarried with his mother and sister. In 1857 he donated the skull of an ancient ox to the Museum, found at Synton Moss. Rev. John (1800–75) son of the Hawick skinner Andrew and Jane Peddie, he was born in Hawick. He was educated at Edinburgh University and licensed to preach in 1822. He became assistant to Rev. James Arkle in Hawick soon afterwards, apparently refusing to accept remuneration for this position. He was then tutor to several notable Roxburghshire families, including travelling in Europe, and also worked as preceptor to the only son of a gentleman in Yorkshire. He was presented as minister of Hobkirk in late 1833 and ordained there in 1834. This was said to be due to the influence of Capt. Elliot (brother to Lord Minto) who his father had supported in the election the year before. There was much dissent among the heritors and some even laid an accusation of simony against him, so it was a year before he was finally ordained. He also acted as Persbytery Clerk. His was appointed by the Crown amid some controversy, the heritors being unable to agree. He remained there until his death. He wrote a statistical account of Hobkirk Parish in 1834. The oldest known communion token from Hobkirk is from 1837 and bears his initials; it is crudely made and probably formed from the material of older tokens. In 1841 he is recorded living at the Manse with Jane an Margaret (presumably his sisters). He married Isabella Yeaman (who died in 1898), daughter of James Fitchie, manufacturer of Deanfield, Meigle. Their children were: Anna Jane, who married George Watson, minister of Hownum; Rosanadra, ‘Rose’ (1849–1912), who married Col. John Joicey of Newton Hall, Northumberland; John Sangster, stockingmaker (1851–1913); and Charles Henry, engineer (1855–1909). Robert (18th C.) gardener at Cavers in 1786, when he was working for George Douglas. His name is recorded as ‘Ewans’. Robert (1823–1900) native of Hawick, son of Jedburgh manufacturer Andrew and grandson of Hawick skinner Andrew. He was educated at Peebles, then briefly worked in the Hawick Town Clerk’s office before working with his father in the hosiery trade in Jedburgh. For many years he worked for William Watson & Sons, then about 1860 opened his own tweed and hosiery firm at Millbank, apparently the first firm to make tartan stockings; he sold the firm in the early 1880s and it became Currie’s and then Hogg’s. He was part of the old ‘eternal council’, and after reconstitution became a Councillor and Magistrate for 9 years before being Provost 1875–78. His Provostship saw the new sewage works developed, and the purchase of Wilton Manse and Glebe. He was a Liberal who worked locally for the Reform Bill. Although not a Common Riding supporter, he was a member of the Parochial Board, member of the South of Scotland chamber of Commerce, one of the founders of Hawick Heritable Investment Bank, and a deacon in the Hawick Free Church. In 1841 he was living with his father in Jedburgh, but by 1851 was living on Hawick High Street with his widowed mother...
Ewen’s Court

Elizabeth and sisters Elizabeth and Jane. In 1861 he was recorded as a hosier, employing 40 people. His wife was Blanche, from Edinburgh, and their children included Andrew and Eliza. He wrote the booklet ‘Through Canada in 1878’. Long involved in banking, he left Hawick about 1880 to promote the ‘People’s Bank of Scotland Ltd.’ in Glasgow, died in Edinburgh and is buried in the Welloagate (also sometimes ‘Ewinn’).

Ewen’s Court (yoo-winz-kör) n. former name for Tannage Close, after Andrew Ewen, skinner, who ran a tannage business there. It marked the southern end of the Little Haugh on Woods 1824 plan.

Ewen’s Loch (yoo-winz-loch) n. small pond in the ‘Ewen’s Moss’ area, to the west of Kaimend.

Ewen’s Moss (yoo-winz-mos) n. former name for an area in the hills to the south-east of Hawick, corresponding to the area now centred on Ewen’s Loch, west of Kaimend. This is south of the once much larger Hillsiesland Loch.

Ewes (yooz) n. settlement on the River Ewes, a few miles north of Langholm, or more generically the name for the valley. The surrounding parishes of ‘Over Ewes’ and ‘Nether Ewes’ were here. The church by the roadside at Ewes, built 1866/7, is famous for its ancient bell hanging in the fork of a tree. It is built on the site of the 13th century Nether Kirk of Ewes, dedicated to St. Cuthbert. There was formerly a school here and a blacksmith’s and post office to the north at Brieryshaw – ‘Sequestered vale! my loved, my native Ewes, Thy beauty’s worthy of a nobler song, Nor can these broken notes express the strong Unuttered thoughts that thrill my rustic muse’ [MW].

Ewesdale (yooz-dāl) n. valley of the River Ewes, running north of Langholm. It is familiar to Terries who drive much of the valley between Fiddleton and Lanholm along the A7. Historically it appears never to have been a barony, and to have been separate from the Regality of Eskdale to the south. In the 15th century it was a Lordship, held by the Douglases. The upper part (with the ‘Ower’ Kirk) was once a Lordship of the Homes, while the lower part of the valley belonged to the Lindsays, then the Maxwells; the 2 parts were united in the hands of Alexander, Earl of Home in about 1610. However, the superiority of the lands in the lower part (along with patronage of Nether Ewes Kirk) continued to be held by the Maxwells into at least the 18th century. The valley was burned by the English in 1514, when it was described as ‘8 myles of Lienth in the said Marchies, wherupon was 27 pleughes’. George, Lord Home, granted lands in ‘the vuyr parrochyn of Ewisdale’ to Ninian and David Armstrong in 1528. Throughout the 16th century it was listed among those places near the Border whose inhabitants were responsible for ‘dalie slauchteris, birning, fyre raising, open reflis, thiftis and depredations’. In 1579 there is a record of a feud between the Elliots of Ewesdale and the Armstrongs of ‘the Gyngillis’. Much of the land fell into possession of the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1643. The ‘lordschipp of Ewisdaill’ was listed among the possessions of the family in the 1663 marriage contract of Anne, Countess of Buccleuch. The region was for a time part of Roxburghshire (on account of being part of contiguous lands held by the Duchess of Buccleuch), from at least 1672, and was last restored to Dumfriesshire in 1747. The name formerly applied to parts of Eskdale as well. There were once mills at Meikledale, Sorbie, Arkleton, Bliss, Glenvorane, and Wrae. The main families of the area were the Littles, Armstrongs, Elliots, Scotts (of Ewesdale) and Beatties. An ancient turf dyke ran along the hills on the western side of the valley, and old roads of various vintages can be traced up the hillsides and across the pass at Ewes Doors. There are many signs of ancient habitation in the area, with more than a dozen locations marked as settlements, along with a couple of hill forts. A book ‘The Ewes Valley: An Historical Miscellany’ was written by Brenda I. Morrison and R. Bruce McCartney in 2000, with a historical article by John Elliot (spelled ‘Euesdaill’, ‘Euisdaill’, ‘Euisdaill’, ‘Ewisdaill’, ‘Ewisdale’ and variants; it is ‘le Vale de Ewithe’ in 1296; some sources suggest the origin of the name is ‘efts dale’ or ‘newts dale’, but it seems more likely that like other local rivers, the origin of ‘Ewess’ is obscure).

Ewes Doors (yooz-dörz) n. pass at the source of the Eweslees Burn, about a mile up the burn from Eweslees farm, off the A7 south of Moss-paul. There is a mound here that may have been a Roman watch tower. The land may also have been known as Glenvorane and was owned by a branch of the Elliots in the 16th century. It was the location for a fight between the Elliots and the Scotts in August 1565, part of the feud between the Lairds of Braidlie and Branxholme, in which several Scotts were killed. It was said that the Elliots raided into Scott territory, then about 400 of them waited in ambush at the pass, killing 6 of the Scott party (2 Scotts, 2 Dalgleishes, a Short and one ‘Thieffinmis’) and capturing 60. Another story tells of how Walter Scott of Branhholme and his men laid in wait here for a gang Ewesdown Sike of Cumbrian raiders, scaring them off and recapturing their booty. There was once a chapel near here (presumably closer to the river), dedicated to St. Paul and connected with Melrose Abbey. The last testament of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme records a debt owed ‘to the porter of Ewisy’ for the rest of the price of ane horse; this suggests that there may have been a change-house located at the pass here, with the proprietor known as the ‘porter’. There are also several linear earthworks here, crossed by the terrace-way that forms part of the old road from Eweslees to Caerlenrig (which may have been originally Roman). The Parish of Ewes was disjoined from Dumfriesshire in 1565 (it is ‘Ewis dores’ in 1565).

Ewesdown Sike \textit{(yooz-down-, yowz-dooin-sik)} \textit{n.} stream in the headwaters of the Teviot. It joins Worms Cleuch at the steading of Ramsay-stream in the headwaters of the Teviot. It

Ewes Kirk \textit{(yooz-kirk)} \textit{n.} name of one of 2 churches in the Ewes valley, formerly referred to as the Ower Kirk and the Nether Kirk. The upper one was abandoned after the Reformation and the congregation merged with that of the lower one. The present building was constructed in 1867, with designs by James Burnet of Langholm. A roll of ministers is: Roger Kirkpatrick in 1556; William Graham, from 1627; Mr. Chisholme in about 1642; John Lithgow 1646–64; John Home c.1664–81; John Melville early c.1682–89; John Lithgow 1689–94; Robert Darling 1694–1717; Robert Malcolm 1717–61; Richard Scott 1761–90; John Cunie 1790–91; John Laurie 1791–1817; Robert Shaw 1816–53; Thomas Smith 1853–1901; David Preston 1901–.

Eweslees \textit{(yooz-leez)} \textit{n.} farm off the A7 near where the Mosspaull Burn meets the Eweslees Burn. John Elliot ‘callit of the Dewisleis’ is recorded in 1578/9. Hugh and David Scott were there in the period 1788–97. Robert Scott was farmer there in 1841 until at least the 1860s. Ewesles Knowe is about 7 km to the north-west. Remains of rig-and-furrow cultivation can be seen near the head of the Eweslees Burn, as well as the Exchange Bar \textit{(thu-eks-chānj-bawr)} \textit{n.} public house at 9 Kirkstyle or 1 Silver Street, opposite the former Exchange Buildings, and popularly known as ‘Dalton’s’ after an early proprietor, John Dalton. It has been there since the mid-19th century, the building previously being the Exchange Buildins

the Chartist Store. It is a grade C listed building.

the Exchange Buildins (thu-eks-chānj-bildinz) n. built over the Slitrig beside Towerdike-side, the foundation stone was laid in 1865 by the Duke of Buccleuch. A photograph of 1860 shows the site before construction commenced. The buildings consisted of a large hall, accommodating about 1500 people (and thus the largest in town), smaller halls, an arcade of shops and a house. It had a duel role as agricultural hall and entertainment centre, but soon came to be used mainly for concerts, shows, etc. It was later used as a dance hall and cinema, with various names, the Empire, the King’s, the Odeon, the Classic and finally the Marina. In later years it was a bingo hall, with attached bars, most of which burned down in 1992. The northern section and the Arcade doorway survive, the rest being converted into a car park in 1998. The remaining three level building is designated to house the Border Archives.

the Exchange Hall Congregation (thu-eks-chānj-hawl-kōng-gree-gā-shin) n. name used for the Free Church congregation established in 1866, which met in the Exchange Hall for a few years until St. Andrew’s Kirk was built. The named continued in popular use for some years afterwards.

excommunication (eks-ko-mew-nee-kā-shin) n. official exclusion from the Church, being the ultimate punishment in former times. Imposition of this order meant that public proclamations were read at all nearby churches ordering all parishioners to shun the offender, and to refuse to offer them food or shelter. Civil rights were also affected, until an Act of 1690. But in general excommunication meant being a social outcast and losing one’s livelihood. The Pope excommunicated the whole of Scotland for Robert the Bruce’s involvement in the murder of John ‘Red’ Comyn (who was Baron of Bedrule, among other places). This led to the Declaration of Arbroath, and the eventual lifting of the National excommunication. There are no records of individual Teris suffering this fate. In 1724 2 people from Stow had their Act of Excommunication read at Hawick Kirk and all the churches of the Presbytery of Merse and Teviotdale.

Eyelee (I-lee) n. former name for lands in Holkirk Parish, probably adjacent to Forkins and Unthank. They were sold in 1757 by Thomas Scott of Stanedge to William Elliot of Wolfelee.

Eyemouth (I-moooth) n. Eyemouth, town at the mouth of the River Eye in Berwickshire, a fishing and holiday resort town, dominated by its harbour. The nearby mansion of Gunsgreen House was the home of the Homes, built around 1755 by James Adam. Somerset erected a fort nearby for his 1547 invasion force, which led to the battle of Pinkie. It became a Burgh of Barony in 1597, prospered through the herring trade and was once an infamous smuggling centre. In a disastrous storm of 1881 more than half the shipping fleet was wrecked, and 191 men drowned, including 129 from Eyemouth. Eyemouth Herring Queen Festival started in 1939, following on from an earlier celebration. Population (1991) 3,473 (the origin of the name is the Eye water's mouth, with 'Eye' from Old English for 'river').

Fair (für) n. Richard (16th C.) owner of half a partie of land on the south side of the public street according to Hawick’s 1537 Charter.

Fairbairn (für-börn) n. James (18th/19th C.) farmer at Castleside, in Ashkirk Parish, recorded on the 1789–97 Horse Tax Rolls. In 1797 he was owner of 8 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. He was additionally taxed for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797. James (b.1806/7) born in Westruther Parish, he was farmer at Easter Fodderlee around the 1860s. In 1851 he was living in Jedburgh, but by 1861 he was farming 212 acres and employing 7 labourers. His wife was Helen Rutherford, and they also lived with his mother-in-law, who was a farmer’s widow. By 1868 his wife was recorded as farmer at East Fodderlee, and so he was presumably deceased. John (1858–1943) son of the Maxton blacksmith Charles, with his mother being Elizabeth Elliot, he came to Hawick in the early 1900s. He eventually became manager of the King’s Theatre (in the Exchange Buildings). He retired in 1928. He was known as a writer of poetry, several of which were published in the Hawick Express. His output includes ‘Alec, Oor Bellman’, ‘On Seeing A Tramp Passing’, ‘Look On The Bright’, ‘The Cornet’s Chase’ and ‘Wilton Park’. He also published the poem ‘To the most glorious ... Memory of ... Sir Walter Fairbairn’s Craigs

Scott’ in 1932. However, he is best remembered as writer of ‘The Exile’s Dream’, which was put to music by John Huggan. He died at his home, 25 Wilton Crescent, and is buried in Wellogate Cemetery. Peter (1807/8–69) from Edinburgh, he was a shoemaker in Hawick. He married Janet, daughter of Michael Grieve and Rachel Scott, and she died in 1877. In 1861 he was living at 3 Fore Raw. Robert (1813/4–96) married Hannah Ann Murray, as recorded in Cavers and Southdean Parishes in 1825. His wife died at Lanton Craig in 1851, aged 49. He emigrated to America with his family, with daughter Helen dying in Nebraska in 1872 and Margaret at Burnkinford in 1845. He died at Elmira, Illinois, and there is a memorial to him and his family in Bedrule kirkyard.

Fairbairn’s Craigs (fair-bärns-krägez) n. rocky region to the south-west of Larriston Fells in Castleton Parish, located near the head of the Staneshiel Burn.

fairce (fär-s) adj., arch. fierce – ‘...thir verra rigs was den for fairece sodgers in fechtin-graith’ [ECS].

fair dæ wi (fär-dā-wi) v. to need, desire strongly, ‘murder’ – ‘A could fair dæ wi a fish sup-per the now’, ‘No ow oo’ve got nae rails or bridges Hawick could fair dæ wi them now’ [AY].

fair din (fär-dīn) adj. done in, worn out, exhausted – ‘Whilst admitting to being ‘fair din’, our mothers took a great pride in the results of their wash-day’ [BB], ‘...the horse hez obviously been in a battle. It’s fair dune. It’s jeegered ...’ [IWL] (also spelled ‘fair dune’ etc.).

The Fairest Spot o’ a’ (thu-fā-rist-spō-ō-aw) n. song with words and music by Tom Ker, written about 1890. It was often performed at social nights for the Teviotdale Bicycle Club and first sung at the Common Riding at the 1909 Colour Bussing by T. Caldwell. It fell into obscurity after WWI, but was revived after WWII, with music arranged by Adam Rutherford Grant (from his own memory and some notes left by Tom Ker and Adam Grant). In its new form it was first sung by George L. MacDonald at the Callants’ Club Smoker in 1948. It has the same rhythm and meter as Ker’s ‘I Like Auld Hawick the Best’, and like his other songs, each ‘chorus’ has different words. Again falling out of fashion for decades, the song was revived for the 2005 Colour Bussing by Joyce Tinlin and is included in the CD ‘Hawick and Teviotdale in Song and Poetry’ (2006) sung by Joyce Tinlin.

Fairfoul (fair-fawl) n. Andrew (c.1606–63) son of a minister from Anstruther, he studied at St. Andrews and became minister of North Leith and then Duns. In 1661 he became the first Archbishop of Glasgow after the Restoration. He was zealous in persecuting Covenanters. He died on his way to Edinburgh after less than 2 years in office and is buried at Holyrood. His seal showed a crozier and a saltire, with a monk and a tree with fowls, together with a fish and the words ‘SIGILLUM R. P. ANDR. ARCHI[EPISC]O GLASGU’.

Fairgrieve (fär-greev) n. David (b.1791/2) born at Ledgerwood in Berwickshire, he was a tailor on the Howegate, listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories and in Slater’s 1852 directory on ‘Middle row’. In 1841 and 1851 he was on the Mid Row. His wife was Janet and they had a son Robert. George (b.1781/2) from Jedburgh, he was a tin-plate worker in Hawick. In 1841 he was a tinsmith on O’Connell Street and in 1851 he was listed as a white-smith at about 6 High Street. Slater’s 1852 directory lists ‘George Fairgrieve & Son’ on the High Street. His wife was Margaret and their children included William, Thomas, Helen and Margaret. George D. (19th/20th C.) 5th man to serve as Secretary of the Congregational Kirk. Helen (b.1830/1) daughter of tinsmith George. She was listed as a milliner on the High Street in Slater’s 1852 directory. James (18th/19th C.) tin-plate worker on the High Street, listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. In 1837 he was listed as an ironmonger as well as tin-plate worker at the Tower Knowe. In 1841 he was living at Tower Knowe (probably No. 3) with his wife Isabella. Janet (17th C.) listed among the poor households in Abbotrule who could not pay the Hearth Tax in 1694. John (b.1789/90) from Galashiels, he was a carrier in Lilliesleaf. He is probably the John from Galashiels who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawik’ in 1825. His daughter Jessie married road labourer James Goodfellow. In 1852 he is listed running his cart from Hawick to Lilliesleaf, leaving from the Plough on Thursdays; his name is given in Slater’s directory as ‘Job’ (also written ‘Fairgreave’, ‘Fairgrieve’ and ‘Fergrieve’).

Fairhurst Drive (fär-hurst-drīv) n. part of Burnfoot, built in 1950 and extended around 1966. The name derived from the fact that the first houses were of the early concrete ‘Whitson Fairhurst’ style. Later houses built to fill gaps were of a different style.
fairies (fä-reez) n., pl. imaginary mischievous spirits. The exact nature and appearance are ill-defined, this being part of their mystique. However, the picture of small, winged creatures is largely a Victorian English invention, having little in common with the Scottish concept. Local stories often had them as small creatures, sometimes dressed in green. There was great local superstition about fairies until well into the 19th century. People claimed to have seen them cavorting at the Miller’s Knowes and the Wellogate. 2 green circular mounds, or ‘fairy rings’ (now known to be generally caused by a fungus) were once situated on the north bank of the Teviot, but were obliterated when Laidlaw’s Cauld was built. Similar rings once existing at Carterhaugh were supposedly related to the fairies in ‘Tamlane’. Windburgh Hill was supposed to be a domain of the ‘guid folk’, and a shepherd disturbing them by throwing a stone into the (non-existent) bottomless loch is said to have caused the great flood of the Slitrig in 1767. An area in the Borthwick Water was called the Fairy Knowe, apparently where a shepherd was thrown in the flooded burn by the fairies. An article on local fairies, written by ‘A.M., Hawick’ appeared in the Edinburgh Magazine in 1820. A child of a woman at Minto Craigfoot was said to have been swapped for a changeling and only saved when Rev. Borland of Bedrule administered a concoction made from the foxglove. Another tale is of a changeling baby who became ‘an ugly emaciated creature’, who demonically played the fiddle and was thrown in the fire by a tailor, when the original baby reappeared. James Ruickbie told a story of a girl in Innerleithen who was taken by fairies, but returned after prayers. The farm of Winningtonrig was said to have 2 fairies, which often performed favours on the farm, but once were interrupted while piping and dancing, and in retaliation made all the animals call out loudly for the next day. A fairy at Bedrule was said to have been given the farmer’s wife’s last barley, and in return filled her meal chest. Objects that were meant to offer protection from these spirits include a husband’s ‘blue bonnet’, a hank of red thread, a natural stone with a hole in it, and branches of the rowan tree. Related supernatural phenomena of local lore include ‘bogles’ and ‘spunkies’. Prehistoric tools and other artefacts turned up by the plough were formerly associated with fairies or elves.

fairkishin (fä-ri-ki-shin) n., arch. a good quantity, sometimes implying untidiness – ‘Thae scones ir weel heirt; A pat a guid fairkeesheen o butter inti thum’ [ECS] (cf. ferkishin).

Fairley (fä-lee) n. Robert (19th/20th C.) weaver from Northumberland, who lived in Selkirk, Innerleithen and elsewhere, but spent much of his life in Hawick. He wrote poetry, being a prize-winner in the Verter Well competition, where he used the pseudonym ‘Birkinshaw’. He published ‘Poems and Songs’ (1881) and a second edition called ‘Teviotside Musings’ (1892) (also sometimes spelled ‘Fairlie’).

Fairloans (fä-lönz) n. farm in Liddesdale, located to the east of Saughtree, near to Myredykes and very close to the Border. Robert Armstrong was tenant there in 1694. Walter Jardine was farmer there in 1794–97, with James Beatie as shepherd. David Jackson was shepherd in the early 19th century. Nearby limestones quarries were developed, this being the ‘Thorlleshope Lime Works and Fairloans Quarries’ (it is marked on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Fairloans (fä-lönz) n. farm near the head of the Kale Water, north of the Border at Catcleuch Hill. It should not be confused with a place of the same name in Liddesdale. Around 1800 an old woman lived there called Kitty Hall, a native of Northumberland, who recited for James Telfer a version of the ballad ‘The Death of Parcy Reed’, this being published in 1844.

fairm (färm) n. a farm – ‘Holstered pistols carried For gairdin’ o’ the fairns, Less militant in eichy fower The year thae laid doon airms’ [MB] (cf. the more common ferm).

fain (färn) n., arch. a fern – ‘A’ll sort ee, yih little bleckie, for poww-in aa ma fairns (ferns)’ [ECS], ‘Ilk day, I’ll gather soft green fairns For beddin’ for oorsels an’ bairns’ [WP].

Fairneylaw (fä-nee-law) n. George (d.c.1493) priest of the Diocese of Glasgow who is recorded as notary for a sasine relating to Hawick in 1490. He is separately recorded as ‘Sir’, usually indicating that he was a cleric without a Masters degree. He was notary to a sasine of 1484/5 relating to Mangerton, where he is called ‘Priest’ and another sasine for a ‘tenement’ in Hawick in 1484, where he is referred to as ‘Chaplain, Glasgow Diocese’. According to tradition he was a chaplain sent from Melrose Abbey to collect the tithe from Roger (or sometimes Robert) Langlands. When he persisted Langlands supposedly drew his broadsword and cut off Fairneylaw’s head at Wester Hepe. The story further relates how Langlands escaped punishment from the King by apologising for removing the chaplain’s hat, but omitting to add that his head was inside it! How much of the story is true remains unclear, although it is clear that Fairneylaw did have a local connection, and there is a record of Roger Langlands being denounced as a rebel in 1494/5 for failure to appear to answer for the slaughter of 'Sir George Farnylaw, chaplain'. It is also unclear whether there is a connection with the Heap Cross, which probably once existed at Stiches, and which was traditionally said to mark the site of the murder (however, it seems likely its existence as a marker long preceded these events). Fairneylaw Place in Stiches is named after him. Janet (16th C.) listed in the 1552 last testament of William Scott, younger of Branxholme. She is recorded as 'Jonete Farnielaw', but it is unclear whether she was from the Hawick area or not. John (16th C.) holder of 2 particates of land on the north side of the public street according to Hawick's 1537 Charter. His name is written 'Farnelaw'. It is conceivable that he was related to the earlier 1537 Charter. His name is written 'Farnelaw'. It is conceivable that he was related to the earlier priest. William (15th C.) recorded as 'William Farnlie' when witness to a charter between Henry Wardlaw of Milton and John Scott of Thirlestane in 1483. It is not impossible that he was related to George (the name is also spelled 'Farnylaw', 'Farnelaw' and other variants).

Fairneylaw Place (far-nee-law-plis) n. part of Stiches, off Stiches Road, along with Oxnam Court and Maxton Court, built in 1978 and named after Sir George Fairneylaw – 'Then thinking it time to finish off The story of the bonnet, He said, wi’ a twinkle in his een, ‘The Abbot’s heid was in it’' [FL].

Fairneyside (far-nee-sid) n. former name for lands near Newton in Bedrule Parish, listed as 'Fairney-side' in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls.

Fairnielees (far-nee-leez) n. Fairnielees, part of the former estate of Harwood in the Barony of Feu-Rule. It belonged to Hector Turnbull of Stonedge in 1609, when he sold it to Gibbie Elliott of Stobs by wadset and reversion. It may be the 'Fairnilies' where in 1623 Michael Birnie stole sheep belonging to Walter Scott of Todrig and Simon Nichol. It is recorded in a contract of 'wadset' in 1647 (discharged in 1649) involving Walter Riddell and William, Earl of Lothian. Different quarters of the lands were owned by Sir Walter Riddell, Sir Thomas Ker of Cavers and James Laidlaw. 'Tithous with 4th part of the lands of Fairnielees' were listed among the properties of Sir William Eliott of Stobs in the Barony of Feu-Rule in the late 17th century. In 1694 the 3 east quarters are recorded being sold by Gilbert Elliot of Stonedge to Henry Elliot of Harwood. There were Ogilvies there in 1758. By 1788 it had been disjoined from the estate of Elliott of Stobs and was valued at £1200 (meaning it was a large farm at that time), forming part of the estate of Elliot of Harwood. In 1811 it was listed among those lands owned by William Elliot of Harwood and with the same value. These lands were still being referred to in documents of the late 19th century. The precise extent is uncertain, but Lurgiescleuch was the eastern quarter of the lands. Fernieles Sike rises between Berryfell Hill and Pike Fell and joins Lurgies Burn just north of Lurgiescleuch (it is 'Phairnilies' in 1562, 'Faireneleys' in 1609, 'Fairnileys' in 1647, 'Fernilies' in 1677, 'Fairnelies' in 1694, 'Phairnilies' in 1700 and 'Faireneleys' in 1811).

Fairnilee (far-nee-lee) n. mansion house in the Tweed valley, near Yair, built 1904-06 by John James Burnett. It was a Crown property from at least the 1460s, leased to Thomas and James Ker in 1480 and by 1501 let to George Ker. John Hervey was recorded there in 1494/5, when he had remission for rieving crimes. In 1541 it was tenanted by George Ker of Linton. The farm remained a property of the Kers until at least the late 17th century and there were Rutherfords of Fairnilee in the 18th century. The grounds contain the ruins of 'Old Fairnilee', a 16th century house, where Alison Rutherford wrote her version of 'The Flowers of the Forest'. It was also the setting for Andrew Lang's story 'The Gold of Fairnilee'. Until 1818 the main road from Selkirk to Edinburgh passed here, avoiding Gala. This is probably the 'Fernleigh' mentioned in the 1837 inquiry into 'fictitious voters', 10 men having been denied their claim to the life-rent there, including John Goodfellow, William Goodfellow, John Hislop, Andrew Ewen, Peter Wilson and Walter Wilson, all of Hawick (also spelled 'Farnilie', 'Farnelee', 'Fernelea', etc.; it is 'Farnylee' in 1501 and 'Fairnalie' in 1780; the origin is probably Old English for 'ferny pasture').

Fairnington (far-nin-tin) n. hamlet just to the north of Peniel Heugh monument. There was formerly a hospital associated with the place. There is said to have been a stone circle in the nearby Harlaw Plantation, but there is now no sign of it. There were once Maitlands there. In 1494/5 Ninian Rutherford in Ancrum was allowed to 'componge' for stealing cattle and grain from several tenants there and Walter Rutherford for similar crimes, the victims including men by the name of Hogg, Ormiston, Stenhouse, Purves and Wyat. The Earl of Bothwell was recorded as owner in 1502. The lands (including the hospital) were listed among those possessed by the Scots of Buccleuch in 1634. The estate was sold by Francis Scott, Earl of Buccleuch to George Rutherford in about 1647, and was afterwards a seat of a branch of the Rutherfords. The mansion house dates mainly to the end of the 17th century, but incorporates part of an earlier structure. It is said that there was once a stone circle in a field to the east (the origin of the name is Old English ‘fairny dūn’, meaning ‘the ferny hill’, and first occurs around 1200 as ‘Faringdun’; it is ‘farnynston’ in 1502, ‘Farnynston’ in 1505 and ‘Pharnyngtoune’ in 1568/9; it is ‘Fernitoun’ on Blaeu’s c.1654 map).

Fairnyside (fär-nee-sid) n. former farmstead in the upper part of the Allan Water. It was described as a ‘pendicle’ of Brugh in 1660. It is shown on the 1718 survey of Scott of Buccleuch lands, attached to Skelfill and Langcleuchside. It was leased from Buccleuch Estates in 1744 by Elizabeth Mason, widow of Robert Scott of Harwood, along with the farm of Skelfill (marked ‘Fainnyside’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map, perhaps on the western side of the Skelfill Burn; it is ‘Fairneside’ in 1718 and ‘Ferniside’ in 1744).

fairs (färz) n., pl. fairs and markets were once important focal events for towns, involving buying and selling, as well as hiring and entertainment. In Hawick there were several regular fairs, which petered out by the end of the 19th century. The horse- and cattle-related tryst was on the third Tuesday in October, starting in 1785. The main hiring (of servants) and cattle fair was on the 17th of May, with another on the 8th of November (also called the Winter Fair). For a while the May Fair lasted over 2 days, and was one of the most important events in Hawick’s annual calendar. In 1669 there was a request by William Douglas of Drumlanrig for the town to be allowed to hold 2 other fairs and this was allowed by the Crown, these being on the 6th of May and 10th of September, ‘for buying and selling of horse, nolt, sheip, fish, flesh, meill, malt and all sort of grain, cloath, lining and wollen, and all maner of merchant wair’. St. Jude’s Fair was mentioned in 1673, and this may have been another name for the Winter Fair. In 1700 it is recorded that 27th June was a fair day (but it is unclear which one). Herds were hired on the 1st, 2nd and 3rd Thursdays in April starting in 1780 and moving to the 1st of March by the late 19th century. A sheep market (also called the Tup Fair) was on the 20th and 21st of September, and a wool fair was held on the first Thursday after the St. Boswells Fair in July (or sometimes the day before, i.e. 17th). Fair days were extremely busy in town, with the High Street, Tower Knowe and Sandbed thronging with people. Into the late 18th century they were also commonly scenes of fighting and riots – ‘The rural Fair! in boy-hood’s days serene, How sweet to fancy was the novel scene, The merry bustle, and mix’d uproar, While every face a jovial aspect wore’ [JL].

Fairside (fär-sid) n. former farmstead in Liddesdale, probably close to Steeleroad-end. It is listed in 1632 among lands possessed by Hab Henderson, along with Todscleuch, Tailside and Cleuchside.

fair wather (fär-waw-thur) n., arch. flattery, coaxing – ‘Phrase: ‘If he’ll no dae’t be fair wather, he’ll dae’t be foul’ (= by severity)’ [GW].

fairy (fä-ree) n. an imaginary being with mischievous magical powers – ‘Survey yon ring, of lively green, Where fairies, dancing, erst were seen’ [JTe] (see also fairies).

fairyfauld (fä-ree-fawld) n., arch. a fairy ring, nearly circular ring of dark grass (or sometimes mushrooms), said to be where fairies held their meetings, but naturally explained by the outward growth of the mycelium of a fungus as it exhausts the soil nutrients.

the FairyFauls (thu-fä-ree-fawldz) n. former name for an area on the Wilton side of the Teviot, next to the ford that was at the foot of Walter’s Wynd (so where Victoria Laundry was later built). The name presumably relates to the 2 ‘fairy rings’ that could once be seen there (due to the growth pattern of a fungus), but were eradicated when Laidlaw’s Cauld was built. A ‘claystone axe’ was found there, and once in the Museum collection.

the Fairyfauld’s Stream (thu-fä-ree-fawldz-stream) n. former name for a stream that entered the Teviot near the ford at the foot of Walter’s Wynd, on the opposite bank. It may also have been used as a fanciful name for the Teviot
the Fairy Knowe

A7. It was there in 1542 that James V tried to organise an attack into England, but the collected nobility refused to follow him.

Falalhill Summit (faw-la-hil-sum-i) n. highest point on the Waverley line between Hawick and Edinburgh at 880 feet above sea level. The summit itself was level and had extensive sidings. The lands of Falalhill were once a seat of the Murrays – ‘Frae the grey auld city it started oot Wi’ an unco herty will; But it hirpled alang like a sair dune man Or it brested Fala-hill’ [WL].

Falchion (fal-chee-in) n., poet. a short sword having a convex edge and sharp point – ‘...Yet, not of warring hosts and faulchion-wounds Again the harp of ancient minstrels sounds’ [JL] (also written ‘faulchion’).

Falconer (fawl-ki-nur) n. Rev. James F. minister of Denholm and Bedrule, linked with Minto, 1976–77. Robert (15th C.) recorded as ‘Robertum Fawconar’ when he witnessed the 1450 ‘retour’ for the Barony of Hawick. All the other men listed were important locally. He was also ‘Roberto Falconar’ in 1452 when he witnessed the sasine for the Barony of Hawick going to William Douglas of Drumlanrig. His name appears among a list of 4 burgesses. Thomas (15th C.) witness to the 1432 sasine giving the Barony of Cavers and Sheriffdom of Roxburghshire to William Douglas; he is there ‘Thoma Falconor, pres-biter’ (presumably of Glasgow Diocese). He is also recorded as ‘Thoma Falconar capellano’ in 1452 when he was one of the witnesses to the sasine for the Barony of Hawick, signed in Hawick. He was thus a chaplain, presumably of Hawick or Cavers. He was probably related to Robert, who was also listed. And a second Thomas is also listed as a witness. William (15th C.) recorded as witness to a sasine of 1490 when Robert Scott purchased a ‘tenement’ from Robert Cessford in Hawick. He was probably a local resident.

Falderal (fawl-du-rawl) n., arch. folderol, trifles, petty matter, fancy but inconsequential thing – ‘They can eat their falderals that like, but recommend mei tae a sonsy bicker o’ guid auld fashioned Scotch porridges ...’ [JEDM].
Faldonside

Faldonside  (faw-, fal-din-sid)  n. hamlet, house and nearby Loch just south of the Tweed between Selkirk and Melrose. The estate was long owned by the Kers. Part of the lands were owned by the Riddells of that Ilk in the 17th century. Being immediately to the south-west of Abbotsford, the estate was planted in a similar style in the early 19th century (formerly written ‘Fawdonside’, ‘Fadounsyde’, ‘Fawdounsida’, ‘Fawdounside’, etc.).

the Falkland Raid  (thu-fawl-klind-räd)  n. raid on the Royal Palace at Falkland in 1592, led by the Earl of Bothwell, along with 300 horsemen from the Borders, including Wat of Harden. The raid was unsuccessful in capturing the King, James VI, but Bothwell did take him prisoner at Holyrood the following year. After the raid Walter Scott of Goldielands and Gideon Murray were instructed to destroy the houses of Harden and Dryhope belonging to Walter Scott of Harden (although it is unclear if this was done).

fall  (fawl)  n., arch. old Scots unit of length, also used for area. As a length unit it corresponded to 6 ells or about 18.6 English feet, with measurements traditionally being made using a rope of this length. A Scots furlong was 40 falls and a Scots mile 320 falls. After unification with England the fall became 6 English ells or 22.5 feet. As a length unit it corresponded to a Scots acre. 1 just `40 falls’ were equivalent to 1 rood or a unit of area it was one square fall, i.e. 36 square ells. As a length unit it corresponded to 1 rood or a unit of area it was one square fall, i.e. 36 square ells. As a length unit it corresponded to 1 rood or a unit of area it was one square fall, i.e. 36 square ells. As a length unit it corresponded to 1 rood or a unit of area it was one square fall, i.e. 36 square ells.

Falla  (fawl-la)  n. village in Oxnam Parish, to the east of Camptown off the A68 (the origin of the name is probably Old English ‘fag hlaw’, meaning ‘speckled hill’ and first occurs as ‘Falaw’ in 1549).

Falla Cleuch  (fawl-la-klooĕ)  n. stream that rises on the northern slopes of Drinkstone Hill and drains into Synton Loch.

falli  (fa-li, -lō)  n., arch. a fellow – …a muckle big, bang fallih, braib-shoodert, rash an stufey, that staapet alang the Jethart road wui a taath-steppin streide’[ECS], ‘There are no ‘Yauld, bang fallows’ or ‘Muckle leash fallows’ now-a-days’[JTu], ‘…A dizen near, I’m sure they were, O fallows in a raw’[WaD], ‘…A buirdly auld falla wi’ muckle to sell, And muckle to gie wi’ his crack’[WL] (also written ‘fallih’; cf. the now more common felli).

falliship  (fa-li-ship)  n., poet. fellowship – ‘Sall the throne o’ inequitie hae falliship wi’ thee …?’[HSR].

Falnash  (fawl-nash, faw-nesh)  n. farm and hamlet near Teviothead, reached by the side road across the Teviot at Bowanhill. It is described as a ‘20 merklands’ around 1390 when given to Thomas Cranston of that Ilk and may have been the residence of Dalgleishes in the mid-15th century. In 1456 William Dalgleish had a sasine for the lands, which had previously been in the hands of the King. Simon Dalgleish had a sasine in 1464. In 1511 it was confirmed to a later Simon Dalgleish, with the consent of his son Kentigern. The Elliots owned the lands from at least 1556. In 1569 a bond of security signed in Hawick lists the following tenants: ‘Wille Elliot, Johnne Turnair, Jame Caveris, Georde Armestrang, Georde Turnbull, Andro Turnbull, Jame Bichat, Dande Elliot, Jok Elliot, Hobbe Elliot, Jok Murray, Will HUntar, Johnne Nobill’. In 1627 its value was ‘estimat to 300 merks in stok; in teynd to 40 lb’. In 1643 the lands of Robert Scott of Falnash were valued at £1400. In 1667 Archibald Elliot paid 9,000 merks to Francis Scott to clear the ‘reversion’ on the lands, and then sold them to his brother Gavin Elliot of Caerlenrig. Walter Scott of Harwood and Falnash is recorded on the 1678 Land Tax Rolls; his lands in Hawick Parish were valued at £1550 13s 4d. The lands held by the Laird of Falnash once extended much further than the modern farm; in the 1718 survey of lands of the Scotts of Buccleuch the lands of Falnash bordered on those of Commonside. Gideon Scott, the Falnash

Duchess of Buccleuch’s Chamberlain in the late 17th and early 18th centuries lived here and was called ‘Old Falnash’. He also acted as the Duke’s Bailie in Hawick, and others in his family were also nicknamed ‘Falnash’. The Scotts of Langshaw also held lands here along with the mill (so this may be Falnash Mill), inherited by Walter of Langshaw from his father Francis in 1690. John Scott was recorded there in 1705. Walter Scott paid tax for 11 windows there in 1748. The lands were sold by Thomas Scott of Falnash to Henry, Duke of Buccleuch in about 1760. By 1788 Falnash and Haregrain were valued together at £684. Robert Laidlaw was the farmer there in the 18th century, followed by Thomas Laidlaw. John Baptie was shepherd in 1797. In 1811 it was valued (along with Haregrain) at £684, part of the properties of the Duke of Buccleuch. William Turnbull was farmer in 1841 and in 1851, when the farm covered 4500 acres and had 17 labourers. Robert L. Turnbull was farmer in the 1860s and 70s. The burial place of the Scotts of Falnash is in Teviothead Cemetery, with a large table-stone once inscribed with most of the names. The area was part of Hawick Parish until Teviothead Parish was formed in 1850. Before the mid-18th century one of the routes from the south towards Selkirk diverted at Teviothead and went over to the Borthwick valley via Falnash, Lairope and Old Howpasley – ‘...Falnash, and Commonside; inform Fenwick, and Goodland, With Ha’ick, Burnfoot, and Hassindean, to wait on my command’ [WSB] (the name first appears in the late 1300s as ‘Fallyness’; it is ‘Fallynash’ and ‘Fallineche’ in 1456, ‘Fallyn Eche’ in 1461, ‘Fallinesh’ in 1464, ‘Fawynche’ in 1511, ‘Fawynche’ in 1561/2 and is later spelled ‘Fallenash’, ‘Falenash’, ‘Falleineshe’, ‘Fallenesh’, ‘Fallinasch’, ‘Fallin-ashe’, ‘Fallineche’, ‘Fallinesch’, ‘Falloinesh’, ‘Fallinesg’, ‘Falnash’, ‘Farnesche’, ‘Falnesh’, ‘Falneshe’, ‘Fahnish’, ‘Fanash’, ‘Fanesh’, ‘Fanash’, ‘Fawandeshe’, ‘Fawenshe’, ‘Fawineshe’, ‘Fawynche’, etc.; it is transcribed ‘Fenneske’ in 1644, written ‘Fennish’ in Hawick Burgh records of 1728 and ‘Finesh’ in tax records of 1748; it is marked ‘Fanessh’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map; its origin is simply Old English for ‘at the fallen ash-tree’; note there is also a ‘Fawyny’ in Berwicksire, near Mellerstain).

Falnash (fawl-nash) n. Richard (13th C.) described as ‘Richard de Fawnyns’ when his daughter Christian married William of Haliburton. This may well have been Falnash, since the Haliburtons of that Ilk were involved in transferring the lands to Thomas Cranston of that Ilk in the late 14th century.

Falnash (fawl-nash) n. Nickname for Chamberlains of the Duke of Buccleuch in the 18th century, who were Lairds of Falnash. The Chamberlain also acted as Bailie of the Regality of Hawick, with local administrative power, involvement in the kirk session, etc. Previous owners of Falnash, the Ellots, were also given that appellation – ‘For Stobs and young Falnash, They followed him up and down In the links of Ousenam Water They found him sleeping sound’ [T].

Falnash Burnfit (fawl-nash-burn-fi) n. Former name for a farmstead near Dryden. John Elliot died there in 1832. The Helm family lived there in 1841.

Falnash Mill (fawl-nash-mil) n. Former farmstead near Falnash, perhaps the same place later called Birkiebrae. William Elliot was tenant there in 1589 (while another William was Laird of Falnash). It may be the lands of ‘Falnish de molendino [mill]’ inherited by Walter Scott of Langshaw from his father Francis in 1690. Walter Davidson is recorded there, among the poor of Hawick Parish, in 1694. James Veitch, blacksmith, lived there in the early 18th century and Robert Elliot in the mid-18th century. Walter Hogg lived there in the early 19th century. Adam Beattie and his family were there on the 1841 census. In about the middle of the 18th century, near Falstone, a boy called Paterson was born without hands or feet, and shortly after his birth his family moved to here, where he was brought up, although not long afterwards the family moved again to the Carlisle area, where he died at the age of 7; at the time many claimed that this fulfilled a prophecy (sometimes ascribed to Alexander Peden, but probably older) which went ‘Atween Craig-cross and Eildon Tree A bonny bairn there is to be, That’ll neither have hands to feight, nor feet to flee; To be born in England, brought up in Scotland, And to gang hame to England again to dee’ (it is ‘falnesshmiln’ in 1694 and ‘Falneshmiln’ in the 18th century).

Falnash Parkheid (fawl-nash-park-heed) n. Former farmstead near Falnash. The Anderson family were there in 1841.

the False Alairm (thu-fawls-a-larm, -a-lærum) n. Perceived French Invasion on the evening of Tuesday 31st January 1804, when warning signals blazed all across the Borders, calling men to arms to repel Napoleon’s forces. At 9 p.m. in Hawick a beacon was lighted at the heights of Crumhaughhill, known then as Gotterson’s Falset (fawl-si’ n., arch. falsehood, fraudulent dealing – ‘...ploittit aganis the said Erle of Buccleugh ane manifest falsit, and causitt vitiat the said dispositioun and chaurrent ...’ [SB1624].
Falside

Falset (faw-, fawl-si’) n. former name for lands in upper Liddesdale, near Saughtree. It is probably the ‘Terra de Fawsyde’ in the Ernildon area of upper Liddesdale, on the c.1376 rental roll and valued at 33 shillings. It is recorded in the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale, value at 48 shillings and tenanted by Henrisons (possibly Hendersons). It is recorded as ‘Cleuchside otherwayes designed Falset’ among the possessions of Hab Henderson in 1632, suggesting it was associated with Cleuchhead. It was marked as ‘Fasetsyde’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map, near Saughtree, roughly between Pinglehole and Dawstonburn, perhaps near the modern Spout Sike. It is mentioned as ‘Falsett’ on the 1718 survey of properties of the Scotts of Buccleugh, when it appears to be confused with Pinglehole.

Falside (fawl-sid) n. farm in Southdean Parish, between Chesters and Roughlee. This could be the lands held by ‘William de Fausyde’, who swore fealty to Edward I in 1296. It was mentioned in a document of 1502, when Ralph Ker of Primside Loch obtained a charter of appraising of the lands after George Douglas, Master of Angus failed to present one of his tenants who had stolen from the English. 2 towers near here, ‘West Fawsyde and Est Fawsyde with a pele of lime and stane in it’ were burned by Dacre’s men in late 1513. It was described as 8 steadings valued at £10 in the Exchequer Rolls in 1538 and 1539 (with William Douglas being allowed the ‘fermes’ from there in 1538 and Sir Andrew Kerr of Fernihirst in 1539. Tenants in 1541 were Adam Cowman, Robert Oliver (alias ‘Laird’), Ninian Oliver, Walter Oliver, Roger Oliver (called ‘Little Roger’), Robert Laidlaw, Alexander Laidlaw, John Oliver, and Roger Oliver (called ‘Lang Roger’). The lands were split into 9 separate steadings with a total value of 175 shillings. Ringan, Dandy and Martin Oliver were recorded there in 1544. Jock Common was tenant there in 1571/2. It was among lands inherited by Robert Douglas of Brieryyards from his father John in 1606. In 1669 there were 5 Oliver tenants, namely Knowes or the Watchknowe. James Knox spotted it and ran down the Howegate to the Tower Knowe, firing his gun to signal the lighted beacon, and gaining a prize of 20 shillings. Caleb Rutherford then went around town beating his drum. A trumpeter was dispatched up the Slitrig valley to rouse the men as far as Liddesdale, where several men swam across the Liddel to muster. A piper there mounted his donkey and played the rousing ‘I am little Jock Elliot and wha daur meddle wi’ me?’ Walter Scott of Wauchope was at the head of the company that came from Liddesdale to meet the company of Capt. Corse Scott of Synton at the Tower Knowe. All the local volunteer units were mobilised, and people bid farewell to their loved ones. The Liddesdale volunteers reached Hawick by 8 a.m., travelling on horse and foot. After the muster at Hawick, the mounted men proceeded down the Teviot valley, many reaching Duns before they heard of the mistake. The foot volunteers were arranged on parade at the Haugh by Lord Minto, awaiting marching orders, which fortunately never came. Capt. Pringle of Whytbank was visiting Lord Napier at Wilton Lodge at the time and the butler is supposed to have said ‘My Lord, supper is on the table, and the beacon’s blazing’; Pringle rode to Selkirk to assemble his troop there. The Selkirk men marched off and reached as far as Dalkeith. Meanwhile the Berwickshire Yeomanry mustered at Duns and marched to Dunbar. A tailor from Denholm, who marched off with the others, but would rather have remained at home was apparently heard to mutter ‘Aw wush aw was a wummin! aw wush aw was a wummin!’ The Alarm was raised by a soldier at Home Castle at 8.30 p.m., probably mistaking the fire from a charcoal burner at Shoreswood Colliery for a signal of the French were not really coming, although some suggested it had been a ruse to test the Volunteers (but there is no evidence to support this). Sir Walter Scott describes some of the local events in his note ‘Alarm of invasion’ in ‘The Antiquary’ (he himself is said to have ridden from Gilsland to reach Dalkeith 24 hours later). The Hawick Provost lit a centenary beacon at Crumhaughhill in 1904, and there was a reenactment in 2004 – ‘One moment the watcher stood, robbed of his wit. Then he roared to the farmhouse: ‘The beacons are lit! The lightnings are loosened, the war dogs untied, And it’s time for the Borders to saddle and ride!’ [WHO].

Falside

Stephen, David, Thomas and 2 Patricks, as well as Commons. In 1694 the tenants recorded were Steven Oliver, David Common and John Oliver, Thomas Oliver and his sons, and (another) Steven and Dand Oliver. In the 17th century the lands were split into ‘East Fa’side’, ‘West Fa’side’ and ‘Fa’side’. The Olivers were tenant farmers there through the 17th century until 1747 and were the ancestors of the Olivers of Langraw. George White and John Armstrong are recorded there in 1797. William Pringle was shepherd there in 1841, 1851 and 1861. J. Ord was farmer in the 1860s. The farm also had a mill, with a mill pond. On the hill on the opposite side of the road there are signs of rig and furrow. There was also a place of the same name in Selkirkshire, owned by the Scotts in the 16th century. There is a restored 16th century L-plan mansion of the same name in East Lothian (also ‘Fawside’ etc.; the name dates back to at least 1502/3 and the origin is probably Old English ‘fah side’, meaning ‘the speckled slope’; it is ‘Fawsyde’ in 1538, ‘Fawssyd’ in 1539, ‘Fawsid’ and ‘Fawside’ in 1544, ‘the Fawside’ in 1571/2, ‘Fawsyde’ in 1606, and ‘Fa’syd’ and ‘Fasyd’ in 1669; it is ‘Fasyde’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map and ‘Fallside’ on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Falside (fawl-siːd) n. former lands in the Ettrick valley in Selkirkshire, north of Foulshiels. They were once Crown lands from at least 1456 until 1502. James Scott (also of Kirkurd and Hassendean) was recorded as possessor of the lands of ‘Myddilstede de Fausysde’ 1473–99, being granted the lease for life. James Scott is recorded in 1494/5 having sheep stolen from him there. In 1501 the rentals were assigned to his wife Margaret and son John, and he again had the lease in 1503. Margaret, received the lands ‘in liferent’ in 1510, with the heirs of the deceased John (probably James’ son) being granted heredity. Adam ‘in Falside’ is recorded in 1526. Adam Scott claimed the tenancy in 1541, paying £13 6s 8d yearly. This was probably the ‘Fauwsyde’ where Janet Scott, widow of Robert ‘Elwand’ received instruments for lands at Appletreehall that she bought from Robert Scott of Howpasley. It was recorded as a 40-merk land in 1653. The ‘lands and steadings of Falsyd’ were listed among the Buccleuch estates in the services of heirs in 1644, 1653 and 1661, and in the marriage contract of Anne, Countess of Buccleuch in 1663. The lands were later in the hands of the Scotts of Hassendean. And in 1693 they were still part of the estates of Anne, Duchess of Buccleuch (it is ‘Falsyd’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map; it is ‘Fausyd’ in 1456, ‘Fawsyde’ in 1473, ‘Fawside’ in 1480, ‘Fausyde’ in 1483 and 1491, ‘fawsyd’ in 1494/5 and ‘Fawsyde’ in 1541).

Falsyde (fawl-siːd) n. James (14th/15th C.) parson of the church of ‘Ruiale’, probably ‘Rule’. He was a witness to the charter from Archibald, Earl of Douglas about 1406, granting the Barony of Hawick to Sir William Douglas of Drumlanrig. Another James ‘of Fausyd’ of Glasgow Diocese was an imperial notary in the 1450s and may have been related. James (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. He farmed on one of the farms of the Knowesouth estate. James (17th/18th C.) gardener in Hawick. In 1704 he had children William and Bessie baptised. Other children were probably Janet (b.1694), James (b.1701) and Marion, who married Andrew Turnbull. James (17th/18th C.) recorded as an elder of Hawick Kirk in 1718, but not mentioned as such in a list a year earlier. He may have been related with Thomas. John (16th/17th C.) servitor of the Laird of Buccleuch. He is listed among the 180 supporters of Sir James Johnstone who had a respite in 1594 for killing Lord Maxwell and others at Drye Sands. John Cuthbert Rutherford (d.1915) son of Rev. J.T., minister of Eskdalemuir. He was training as a lawyer when WWI broke out, and as a member of the 1/5th K.O.S.B., he served as a Lance Corporal. He was killed by a shrapnel shell in Gallipoli. His 2 older brothers were also killed in the war, and it appears that the surname may have died out with them. Margaret (17th C.) listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick ‘eist the water’ in 1694, when she paid tax for 2 hearths. It is possible that she is the Margaret who married William Scott, but was widowed and secondly married Robert Thomson in Newmill. Nicholas (13th C.) sIgnatory of the Ragman Rolls in 1296, where his name is given as ‘Nicol Fausy’ in the county of Roxburgh. He may well be an ancestor of the local Falsides. William (in Roxburghshire) and Robert (in Edinburgh) also signed in 1296. His seal was attached, showing a tree of four branches. In 1298 he is recorded in an English document as a ‘rebel with the Scots’, when he and his wife Loretta are recorded as former owners of lands at Doddington in Northumberland; his name is there ‘de Fauside’. In 1303/4 he is ‘de Fauside’ when his wife’s dower lands in England were restored to him. Philip (14th C.) owner of lands in Liddesdale, listed on a c.1376 rental document of the Douglasses of Morton. His lands are recorded as ‘Terra Philippo de Fausyde cum Holdoun’, worth 35 shillings. Thomas (17th C.) resident at Winningtonrig according to the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. His name is written ‘Faside’ and he was probably related to the William who is also listed. Thomas (17th/18th C.) mentioned in an Edinburgh marriage record of 1712 as ‘doctor of the grammar school at Hawick’. He was also recorded in 1709 as schoolmaster at Hobkirk. So whether he was actually associated with Hawick school (perhaps temporarily), or whether this was an error, is uncertain. He married Anne, daughter of the late Alexander Robertson. William (13th C.) recorded as being ‘de Fausyde’ in Roxburghshire when he swore fealty to Edward I in 1296. He may have been related to ‘Nicol Fausy’, who also signed. He was also on a jury in 1304 at Dumfries (made up of men from Dumfriesshire and Roxburghshire) to decide on the privileges claimed by Robert Bruce, Earl of Carrick (later King); he was there ‘del Fausyde’. His lands may have been the Falside in Southdean Parish. William (14th C.) recorded in 1335/6 when he was pardoned by Edward III for crimes in Scotland, along with Eustace Lorraine and Richard of Craik. His name is listed as ‘Willo de Fawsede’ and it is possible he was a descendant of the earlier William. William (16th C.) factor (or similar) for Scott of Branxholme in the Parish of Eckford, recorded in the last testament of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme in 1574. William (17th C.) resident at Winningtonrig in Cavers Parish in 1694 according to the Hearth Tax rolls. His name is written ‘Faside’ and Thomas is also listed, and so presumably related (also written ‘Faside’, ‘Fasyde’, ‘Fawsyde’, etc.).

Fanna Hill (faw-na-hil) n. hill to the west of the Note o the Gate, reaching a height of 514 m (1643 ft) and containing a triangulation pillar. It is one of the highest hills in Hobkirk Parish (it is marked on the 1718 Buccleuch survey and on Stobie’s 1770 map; a region to the south is labelled ‘Muckle Fanna’ on the 1718 map).

fanner (faw-nur) n., arch. a machine used to create wind for winnowing chaff – ‘The winnowing machine, or corn fanner, from the best information, made its first appearance in Hawick’ [RRG].
Fanns (fawnz) n. farmstead near the Fanns Burn, north of Langhope and Todrig and west of Ashkirk. It is located just to the west of where the Fanns Burn meets Blindhaugh Burn. Note that there is a farm of the same name in Yarrow Parish, farmed by Andersons in the 19th century (also spelled ‘Fans’; it is marked on Ainslie’s 1773 map).

farewell (fur-weel) n., interj., arch. farewell – ‘Farewell to Teviot’s flowery vales, My heart is unco wae ta’ lea’ thee’[JS], ‘Farewell, John Barleycorn, farewell! Nae mair your scorn I’ll dree’[JT], ‘Hail guid freends, farewell an’ thonk ye, I’ve been gled to grip your hand’[WL].

farle (faw-rul) n., arch. a large slice, quarter, fardel – ‘Syne a farle o cake frae my mither he got, And she ca’ed him a brave little mannie’[JT].

Farnylaw see Fairneylaw

Farquhar (far-kur) n. James (18th/19th C.) grocer at the Sandbed, listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. He could be the same as the tobacconist listed living with (presumably) his brother Peter in 1841. He could also be the James on the Cross Wynd, listed as an insurance agent for the United Kingdom company in 1852 (although probably deceased by then). Peter (b.1781) son of James and Margaret Oliver, he was born in Hawick. He was a stocking needle maker on the High Street, recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory, where his surname is listed as ‘Farquhar’. He is also listed on the High Street in 1837. In 1841 he was living at about 39 High Street with his wife Elizabeth, children Margaret (a milliner), Isabella (a teacher) and Catherine (who married Thomas Scott), and (presumably) brother James. His wife was living with their 3 daughters on the Cross Wynd in 1851 and so he was presumably deceased. He married Elizabeth, who was probably a daughter of stockmaker William Beck. Their children included: Margaret (b.1810); Isobel (b.1812); Elizabeth (b.1814); Catherine (b.1816); and James (b.1823).

Farquharson (far-kur-sin) n. Rev. William (19th/20th C.) minister of St. Andrew’s Church 1908–14. He was one of the members of the committee that formed Hawick’s first scout troop in 1909. After Hawick he became minister of St. Philip’s Church in Portobello.

farrest (fawr-ist) adj., arch. farthest, most distant – ‘The dun and the grey kept farest away, But Piatserson’s meir sha came foremaist’[JP] (cf. the more common ferrest and farest).

Farthin Raw (far-thin-raw) n. Farthing Row, formerly a popular name for a group of houses off Wilton Place (the origin is probably the Old English or Norse for a land measure).

Fasson

Fasson (faw-sin) n. nickname for Thomas Young.

fash (fash) v. to worry, trouble, bother, annoy – ‘dimi fash is’, ‘This far, sir, I hae tain the baidnes till fasche zou vith . . . ’[SB1584], . . . his excuse that he would lie long enough in it by-and-by without fashing it in his liftime’[WNK], ‘See The cursed page that once did fash us’[JH], ‘Long fashed wi’ a thriftless and drontly guidman . . . ’[JT], ‘We were fashed wi’ the reck . . . ’[JT], ‘. . . But little the mavis fashis its heids: Fower een are better than twae!’[DH], ‘Says the auld laird – ‘We’ll be hard fashet For the want o’ weet’’[WL], n. trouble, fuss, bother – ‘Fit ti gar aa the trauchles an the fashions gan leike the snaw off the deike in a thowe’[ECS], ‘. . . Yer yammerin’ fash, an feckless prode Can only be a pest in’t’[WP] (from French).

fashies (faw-sheez) adj., arch. troublesome, annoying, tricky – ‘Fleis an midges . . . kittle craitters (mae ways as yin) an fashies thic ti middle wui’[ECS] (a variant of fashious: spelling varies).

fashion (faw-shin) v. to shape a garment by narrowing and widening on a knitting machine.

fashionin (faw-shin-in) n. narrowing and widening while knitting, to shape the final garment.

fashionit (faw-shin-ee, -i) pp., poet. fashioned – ‘. . . an’ in thy buik a’ my membirs were writ, whilk on an’ on wer fashamen, whan as yit ther was nane o’ thame’[HSR].

fashious (faw-shis) adj., arch. troublesome, peevish, fastidious – ‘And there’s mony a less pleasant and mair fashious way o’ spendin’ a caller wunter efternume . . . ’[DH], ‘. . . bit oo wasn’ sae fashious then, an it was only yince a eer onyway’[BW1961].

Faskenn (fas-kin) n. tower house marked on Blaeu’s c.1654 map near the Whitrone Burn meets the Hermitage Water. It could be related to Flasket Sike, which is in the same area, or may be a transcription error.

Fasson (faw-sin) n. Lieut. Francis Anthony Blair ‘Anthony’ or ‘Tony’ (1913–42) born at Lanton in Bedrule Parish and educated at Jedburgh Grammar School, he joined the Royal Navy. Along with Colin Grazier, he volunteered to swim out naked to a damaged U-Boat in the Mediterranean, after the crew had been captured. They recovered several documents and pieces of equipment, passing them to someone else in a small boat, before the submarine sank, drowning him and Graizer. The recovered items included the ‘M4 Enigma Machine’ and codebook, which were passed to Bletchley Park, where the cipher was cracked, and probably thousands of lives saved as a result. He was posthumously awarded the George Cross ‘for outstanding bravery and steadfast devotion to duty in the face of danger’. There is a plaque honouring his memory in Bedrule Kirk.

Fast Castle (fawst-kaw-sul) n. stronghold dramatically perched on the coast between St. Abbs and Cockburnspath. It has existed since the 14th century, long possessed by the Humes, and notorious during the reign of Logan of Restalrig. An old lock from the Castle was presented to the Hawick Archological Society in 1856.

Fastcastle (fawst-kaw-sul) n. former farm in the Rule valley, on the west side of the river, near the bridge to Bedrule Mill. It became part of the extensive estate of Wells and was probably adjacent to Doveshaugh. In 1644 John and Thomas Young from there were cited by the minister for not signing the Covenant; at that time it was owned by the Earl of Traquair. In about 1795 it was listed among parts of Cavers Parish that were nearer to Bedrule Kirk than their own kirk. An ancient fortification at ‘Fast’ was possibly an outwork of Bedrule Castle, which lay about 500 m to the south-east. It is just by the roadside, on a natural rise, built up into a motte-like structure, with a rampart on the summit enclosing an area about 35 m by 25 m. Just to the north-west there are signs of rig-and-furrow cultivation in aerial photographs (marked on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Fast days (fawst-dæz) n., pl., arch. an old church custom of fasting on particular Sundays, with preparatory services on the preceding Saturday and thanksgiving services on the following Monday. This was particularly prevalent before the annual Communion service, before which there would be a Sacramental Fast Day, when all work was suspended and there were 2 (long) church services. This custom died out locally towards the end of the 19th century. Official fast days in Hawick were the 2 Wednesdays before the last Sunday of June and before the second Sunday of December. Earlier than the 19th century the June days were closer to harvest time. Other neighbouring areas had different days, but typically on Wednesdays or Thursdays (although in Castleton it was the Friday before the 2nd Sundays of June and November). There were also other days officially prescribed for fasting, sometimes by Act of the General Assembly, e.g. for prayers ‘for King George and his royal family’ in 1715, with several other examples yearly in the Parish records – ‘...ye durst not crook ye’re mooth tae whistle on a Fast-day, but now ye may whistle or sing or anything ye like on a Sabbath day’ [WIS].

Fasteneven (faws-ten-ee-vin) n. another name for Fastern’s E’en – ‘Of holidays throughout the year, There’s nane that raises sic a steer As Fasteneven ... ’ [JoHo].

Fastern’s E’en (faws-turnz-ee-in) n., arch. old name for Shrove Tuesday, or the day before fasting starts at Lent. Festivals of different sorts were held in many Scottish towns, including handball games, sometimes referred to as ‘Fastern’s E’en Baa’. In Hawick the Baa game was held on the previous day, in earlier years on the following Monday, and before about 1780 on Fastern’s Eve itself. In the 2 or 3 weeks leading up to the event there would be fights between gangs of youths from the ‘Eastla’ and ‘Westla’ sides of town – ‘...shall keep the same assurance till Fasternes eve next to come ... ’ [CBP1584], ‘At Fasten’s E’en, when ba’s are played, I’ll look for ane that is nae here ... ’ [TCh].

Fastheugh (fawst-hewch) n. former lands on the southern side of the Yarrow valley, with Fastheugh Hill rising above. The lands were owned by the Crown in the latter part of the 15th century. William Donaldson was there in 1493 when he had 12 goats stolen by William, son of William Scott of Goldielands. In 1494/5 James Ker was tenant there when sheep were stolen by Adam Howison in Commonside. John Clerk was also living there at the same time when his goods were plundered. In 1502 John Murray of Falahill’s farm there was raided by Turnbulls. And in 1535 a raid on these lands was among the crimes for which Robert Scott of Allanhaugh was accused; at that time they were held by Lancelot Ker. Lands there were granted to James, son of James Pringle of Tynnes in 1540. George Ker was tenant there when sheep were stolen by Adam Howison in Commonside. John Clerk was also living there at the same time when his goods were plundered. In 1502 John Murray of Falahill’s farm there was raided by Turnbulls. And in 1535 a raid on these lands was among the crimes for which Robert Scott of Allanhaugh was accused; at that time they were held by Lancelot Ker. Lands there were granted to James, son of James Pringle of Tynnes in 1540. George Ker was tenant there in 1541, paying £30 yearly. The lands were part of the Buccleuch estates in 1663 and when surveyed in 1718 (it appears on Blaeu’s c.1654 map as ‘Fastheuch’; it is ‘Fastewech’ in 1456).

Fasthill Plantin (fawst-hil-plan-tin) n. plantation near Synton, just to the south of Synton Parkhead (it is already marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

fat (fawt) n., arch. a vat, wooden tub – ‘Two females are convicted of stealing great quantities of ale, sometimes turned, sometimes working in the fatt . . .'[BR1697].

fatefi (fa-ti) adj. fateful – ‘. . . But then yin fatefii day. A retail giant came oor way, And it wasni long afore, They’d ta’en owre yon Presto store'[IWL] (also spelled ‘fatefii’).

Fathill Plantin (faw’-hil-plawn’in) n. plantation on the Chisholme estate, to the north-west of Parkhill and to the west of Churnton Burn. There is a possible old enclosure there.

Fatlips Castle (fa’-lips-kaw-sul) n. tower built in the 16th century, perched on Minto Crags, and sometimes also called Minto Tower. It is 9 m, 3 stories high, with a vaulted basement and parapet walk. Built by the Turnbulls, it passed to the Elliots in 1705, and is now the property of the Minto estate. It was restored in 1857 and then renovated in 1897/8 (to designs by Sir Robert Lorimer) as a shooting lodge and private museum. The collection on display included an early, large breech-loading gun (possibly the one taken from Sebastopol by Col. Sir Gilbert Elliot), a muzzle-loading cannon (taken by Adm. Elliot from the French off the Isle of Man in 1760) and a third cannon (that belonged to the mutineers of the Bounty was recovered from deep water off Pitcairn Island by Capt. Russell Elliot). At that time there was a carriage drive approaching it from the west. Since the 1960s it was sadly neglected and became vandalised. However, a grass-roots campaign, supported by the Minto estate, resulted in funds being secured from public and private funds, and a renovation was completed in 2013. A fanciful tradition states that an underground passage led from here to Barnhills Castle. The origin of the name is uncertain, but one idea is that it derives from the look of Turnbull of Barnhills; there are other stories, including that of Michael Scot into a hare. The Hoggs held Fauldshope for centuries and are commemorated in James Hogg’s ‘Fray at Elibank’. It was rented by the Earl of Traquair in 1633 and William Dalgleish was there in 1797 – ‘Young Wattie o’ Harden has crossed the Yarrow, Wi’ mony a hardy an’ desperate man; The Hogs and the Brydens have brought him to dare you, Selkirk, over the Ettrick from Oakwood. A ruined keep here was once the home of the Hoggs, including Will Hogg called ‘the Wild Boar o Fauldshope’ and several wives who were reputed to be witches. One ‘Lucky Hogg’ is supposed to have turned Michael Scot into a hare. The Hoggs held Fauldshope under the Scotts of Harden for centuries and are commemorated in James Hogg’s ‘Fray at Elibank’. It was rented by the Earl of Traquair in 1633 and William Dalgleish was there in 1797 – ‘Young Wattie o’ Harden has crossed the Yarrow, Wi’ mony a hardy an’ desperate man; The Hogs and the Brydens have brought him to dare you, Fauldshope

fauld (fawld) v. to fold – ‘did ee fauld up they claes yit?’, ‘Paid James Wintrop for falding brods in Bailies’ loft, 1 14 0’[BR1735], ‘These taits o’ gowden hair, Aboon thy fauld eye’[HSR], ‘Aside the sparkling jewels put, thy silken robes gae fauld . . .’[TCh], ‘The bonnie wee flowers fauld their leaves in the gloamin’ . . .’[JT], ‘. . . And robin fauld his ragged pipes, Reckons his arles and airts awa’[DH], ‘In owre the Firth a clean wind blaws And the fauldin’ plaid is gethert . . .’[WL], n. a fold (also written ‘fald’).

fauld (fawld) n. an enclosure for livestock, sheepfold, pen – ‘When the sheep are in the fauld, and the ky at hame, And a’ the world to sleep are gan . . .’[CPM], ‘. . . one year there was a dyke on one side of a fauld, built within the edge of the Common’[C&L1767], ‘. . . nar he-gaits owt o’ thy fauls’[HSR], ‘I’ve suffered cauld in Auld Nick’s fauld. In nichts o’ drookin’ rain I’ve seen it . . .’[TD], ‘Yon are the hills that my hert kens weel, Hame for the weary, rest for the auld, Braaid and high as the Aprile sky, Blue on the tops and green i’ the fauld’[JBu], ‘The last sheep cryin’ thae the fauld, The afterglow duist turnin’ cauld . . .’[DH], group of people bound together by common beliefs, congregation – ‘To where the Faither’s fauld at last . . .’[WL].

faulder (fawldur) n. a folder, person in the knitwear industry who folds finished garments, usually attaching the hanging tag and placing the garment in its bag for presentation.

fauldit (fawld-it) pp., adj. folded – ‘They think if they’re only fauldit up In the empty husk o’ a creed . . .’[FL].

Faulds Cottage (fawldz-ko’-eej) n. farmstead to the west of Buccleuch.

Fauldshope (fawldz-höp) n. farm south-west of Selkirk, over the Ettrick from Oakwood. A ruined keep here was once the home of the Hoggs, including Will Hogg called ‘the Wild Boar o Fauldshope’ and several wives who were reputed to be witches. One ‘Lucky Hogg’ is supposed to have turned Michael Scot into a hare. The Hoggs held Fauldshope under the Scotts of Harden for centuries and are commemorated in James Hogg’s ‘Fray at Elibank’. It was rented by the Earl of Traquair in 1633 and William Dalgleish was there in 1797 – ‘Young Wattie o’ Harden has crossed the Yarrow, Wi’ mony a hardy an’ desperate man; The Hogs and the Brydens have brought him to dare you.

For the Wild Boar of Fauldshope he strides in the van [ES] (note that it is easily confused with ‘Phaup’ near the head of the Ettrick; marked as ‘O. Falshoop’ and ‘N. Falshoop’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map; it is probably the ‘Faulishop’ recorded in 1456).

fault (fawl’ n., arch. a misdemeanour, offence – ‘...by yr night rambling commit divers and sundrie abominable irregularities, unlawful faults, and enormities and abuses by yr scandalous outrages ...’ [BR1706] (cf. the more common fault).

fause (faws) adj., poet., arch. false – ‘Behold, the setting sun that gilds the skies! O! when I’m fause, may it nae mair arise!’ [CPM], ‘Itt wasne kinde, thou cruelle manne, To prove sae fause a luve to me ...’ [JT], ‘...And the three fause Ha’s o’ Girsonsfield Alang wi’ him he has them ta’en’ [LHTB], ‘...therfor ilka fause waye do I hate’ [HSR], ‘...or what sall be dune until thee, thou fause tung?’ [HSR], ‘Bestow on the gay a’ the favours o’ fashion, Bestow on the great a’ that money can yiel’’ [DA], ‘By thae fause notions the lass had naething To caa her bonny, – but she had ae thing’ [WL].

fausehood (faws-hood) n., arch., poet. falsehood – ‘...an’ heth conceifet mischief, an’ brung furth fausehuid’ [HSR], ‘...an’ thair richt han’ is ane richt han’ o’ fausehuid’ [HSR].

fausely (faws-ly) adj., poet. falsely – ‘Natheless thaye flirtaret hi wi’ thair mooth, an’ thaye spak fauslie until him wi’ thair tungs’ [HSR].

faut (fawt, faw’) n., arch. fault – ‘I’d rather be ca’d Hobie Noble, In Carlisle where he suffers for his fault, Before I were ca’d traitor Mains, That cats and drinks of meal and maut. Fala, &c.’ [CPM], ‘Ye keep ye’re neibours aw in fear, Ye’re fauts they winna hide’ [BY], ‘Now we a’ have oor fauts, do the best that we can ...’ [UB], ‘...cleense thou me frae secret faults’ [HSR], ‘On neighbours fauts, how prone to dwell, For tongues gae clanking like a bell’ [RF], ‘...a fault easy enuch putten richt’ [ECS], ‘Ti finnd fault wai = to find fault with’ [ECS], v., arch. to fault.

fautit (faw-tee’, -ti’) pp., arch. faulted – ‘A’ve wroacht here threi-an-toonty eer, an’ A’ve never been fauteet yet’ [ECS].

faultless (faw’-lis) adj., arch. faultless – ‘He tells me through the chink wi’ care About his faultless, dainty ware ...’ [WP].

the Favourite (tha-fiv-ri’) n. name of one of the regular stagecoaches operating in Hawick in the 19th century. In Pigot’s 1825/6 directory it is listed leaving the Spread Eagle in Jedburgh for Hawick on Tuesdays and Fridays at 5 p.m. and leaving Hawick for Kelso via Jedburgh on Tuesdays and Fridays. In 1837 it is listed leaving from the Tower Inn on Tuesdays and Fridays at 8 a.m., bound for Jedburgh and Kelso. Later in the 19th century it was one of 2 coaches running between Hawick and Carlisle, the other main one being called ‘the Engineer’.

faw (faw) adj., arch. multi-coloured, variegated (the word survives in several place names, e.g. Faw Hill, Fawhope, Falla and Falside).

Faw see Faa

Fawcett (faw-si’) n. Richard owner of Wolfelee when it was run as a hotel.

Faw Hill (faw-hil) n. hill in Southdean Parish, just to the north-east of Ruletownhead, reaching a height of 294 m. Fawhopeknoke Sike rises to the north and passes there to join the Riccarton Burn. John Crozier is listed as shepherd at ‘Phaupknoke’ in 1797. There were 4 huts there housing railway workers on the 1861 census (also sometimes ‘Phaup Knowe’; a farmstead there is marked ‘as Fapknow’ on Stobie’s 1770 map; it could be related to the places listed as ‘Folepul’ and ‘Fopillis’ in earlier documents).

Fawhope see Phaup

Fawhope Knowe (fawp-now) n. hill in Liddesdale, just to the south-east of Riccarton Junction, reaching a height of 294 m. Fawhopeknoke Sike rises to the north and passes there to join the Riccarton Burn. John Crozier is listed as shepherd at ‘Phaupknoke’ in 1797. There were 4 huts there housing railway workers on the 1861 census (also sometimes ‘Phaup Knowe’; a farmstead there is marked ‘as Fapknow’ on Stobie’s 1770 map; it could be related to the places listed as ‘Folepul’ and ‘Fopillis’ in earlier documents).

Fawhopeknoke Sike (fawp-now-sik) n. stream in upper Liddesdale, which rises on the slopes of Saughtree Fell and runs southwards, to the east of Riccarton Junction, passing Fawhope Knowe and through Catscleuch Culvert, to join Riccarton Burn.

Fawlaw (faw-law) n. George (15th C.) recorded being ‘in hawic’ at the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh in 1494/5. He had remission for stealing a ‘dacre’ of (i.e. 10) hides from James Braidfoot out of ‘le bog de Selkirk’. His surety was Robert Scott of Whitchester. George of Wells (16th C.) surety for John in Littledean in 1502. He is also recorded in an inquest in Jedburgh in 1523. He is also listed as ‘George Fawlo of Wallis’ in 1530 among the Border Lairds who submitted themselves to James V to keep better order. He may have been Laird of Wells east of Jedburgh. James of Spittal (17th/18th C.) recorded as ‘James Falay’ in 1700 among the Roxburghshire heritors who petitioned Parliament. John (15th/16th C.) tenant in Littleleane. He was recorded at the Justice- aire in 1502, as surety for his wife Janet Rutherford, and was fined for her non-appearance. Later in 1502 he had remission for being part of the slaughter of David Henrison in Maxton Kirk and for stealing from Muirhouselaw in the company of Thomas Grahamslaw; his surety was George of Wells. Additionally he had remission in 1502 for involvement in the seizing of 3 Henrisons from Muirhouselaw, delivering them to Englishmen, to be held for ransom, for stealing livestock from them and for associating with Herbert Pringle; his surety was Walter Haliburton. Perhaps the same John was granted a charter for ‘Esther Fawlaw’ in 1510, along with the office of the East Ward of Roxburghshire. In 1512 he had a charter for Softlaw. Philip (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 as ‘Philip Faula’ when Alexander ‘Wyndis’ of that Ilk was convicted of the ‘forethought felony’ done to him on St. Mary’s Day while riding to Branh- holme, with Robert Scott being fined for non- appearance. It is unclear what malice was done to him, and whether he was connected with the later local priest Thomas. He must be the same ‘Philip Faulo’ who had 4 horses stolen from him and his neighbours at ‘Quhitchester-holme’ by associates of John Dalgleish around 1510. Thomas (16th C.) priest mentioned in the Charter of 1537, with 2 partícates of land on the south side of the public street. He is designated both ‘Sir’ and ‘Mr.’, making it unclear whether he held merely a Bachelors or a full Masters degree in the priesthood. Since several other clergymen are also mentioned, it is unclear what his status was within St. Mary’s Kirk of the time. A possibly related William Fawlaw also possessed a partícate of land on the north side of the street. William of Kirkton (14th C.) member of the ‘retour of inquest’ if 1438 for Ker of Altonburn. He was certainly a Rox- burghshire Laird, but it is unclear whether this was the Kirkton near Hawick. William (16th C.) holder of a partícate of land on the north side of the public street according to Hawick’s 1537 Charter. William (d.bef. 1560s) farmer in Hobkirk Parish. The land ‘callit William Fallaw- isclois’ to the east of Nether Bilerwell is mentioned in 1562 (also spelled ‘Fallaw’, ‘Faulaw’, ‘Faulo’, ‘Fawlo’, ‘Fowlaw’, etc.).
Fawside

Fazal Din’s (faw-zul-dinz) n. O’Connell Street draper’s and general store in the mid-20th century, run by Fazal Din, one of Hawick’s first residents from Asia. The shop was on the north side of the street – ‘Throwe time incomers came, Like Fazal Din and Gusto, And then ow’re at the Haugh, There came a bit ca’d Presto’ [IW].

F.D.L.’s (ef-dee-elz) n. Fruit Dealer’s Limited, a greengrocer’s business in the 20th century, with one branch on the south side of the High Street and another on North Bridge Street.

feal (feel) n., arch. turf, sod, particularly when used to build walls or as a roofing material – ‘Feal or turf dikes are now seldom employed. Stone walls and hedges are generally in use’ [RJE], ‘That pair who, in Glendale, Lived in a house was mostly feal’ [HSR] (see also fail).

feard (feerd) pp., adj. scared, afraid – ‘er ee fear o that dog?’’, ‘Noo, aw was nae wey feard – aw only thocht that aw hadna seen him while aw was loitin’ doon...’ [BCM1880], ‘A’m feard o um’, ‘Ay mei, Nannie; Ah’m fair feered, div ee hear what hei’s sayin’?’ [JEDM], ‘A was feerd A’d be owre lang, for it was better as a quarter after fourw be the toon’s clock’ [ECS], ‘Hei wuznae farder to show his political teeth and no jist throwe his pen...’ [IHS], note that the preposition ‘for’ is often used instead of ‘of’ – ‘she was aye feard for her fither’ (also spelled ‘feared’, ‘feard’ and ‘feered’; cf. feart).

fearder (feer-dur) pp., adj. more afraid – ‘...who dwelt near a kirkyard, when asked if he was not afraid, ‘Na’, said he, ‘I’m ay feirdier for the leivin than the deid’ [WaD] (also written ‘feirdier’).

feardie (feer-dee) n. a coward, timorous person – ‘...hi might look tough, bit heis just a feardie it hert’.

fearie (fee-ree) adj., poet. afraid – ‘It makes me dowie, sad, and fearie To hear them preach’ [JR].

feart (feerz) pp., adj. scared, afraid – ‘They’ll a’ be fear’t they’re missing oot, they’ll want tae join the fun’ [T], ‘The collie dog noo unco fearst As owls wi’ orra shrieks by flit’ [WFC] (also spelled ‘fear’t’; cf. feard).
Feast Knowe (feest-now) n. small hill in Southdean Parish, part of Belling Hill.

the Feast o the Assumption (thu-feest-o-thu-aw-sum-shin) n. Feast of the Assumption of Mary, a Catholic celebration of the assumption of the body of the mother of Christ into heaven, which supposedly happened several days after she was entombed. This is celebrated on 15th August, and prior to the Reformation would have been an important day in the Hawick calendar, particularly because of the Parish Church being dedicated to St. Mary. The ‘return’ for the Barony of Hawick in 1450 states that it is held of the superior, the Earl of Douglas, for the payment of an arrow at Hawick Kirk on the day of the Assumption. The Charter of 1511 indicates that the Barons of Hawick are to be paid an arrow ‘in blenche-feme’ on this day. Similarly, in the 15th century, Scott was to pay a silver penny to Inglis at St. Mary’s on this day for the lands of Brannholme.

feat (fee’) adj., arch. neat, trim – ‘...it was nae bigger than a three year an’l lad, but feat and tight, lith and limb, as ony grown woman’ [LHTB].

fechs (fechs) interj., poet. faith, truly – ‘Fechs! ‘deed say you! For wee you try ...’[WFC] (cf. faiks).

Fenwick (fen-cek) n. house and area on the Teviot opposite Branxholme Park and just down from the Muir. Walter Scott of Fenwick was witness to a document for Whitchesters in 1456 and others in 1484/5 and 1488. William Scott of Fenwick was recorded in 1502, was on an inquest panel in 1509 and gave a pledge for another Scott in 1510. The ‘ditch of Fenwick’ formed part of the northern boundary of the Common in the 1537 charter. It is listed as part of the Barony of Hawwick in 1511, 1572, 1594 and 1615, among those lands held by the Baron ‘in tenandry’. Later it became part of the Lordship of Whitchesters. In 1627 it was described as a ‘neuer payit ferme’, i.e. a farm that had never been rented to a tenant, and ‘estimate to pay 8 bolls in stok, parsonage 2 bolls, and vicargie 3 lbs’. In 1643 these are probably the lands of Robert Scott of ‘Cloak’ valued at £100 and still held by him in 1678. In the 1718 survey of lands of the Scotts of Buccleuch it is shown that a small part of the farm lay on the northern side of the Teviot. There were Eliot lairds there in the late 17th and early 18th centuries. It was farmed by Scotts until the mid-18th century. Bailie Thomas Turnbull purchased the estate in 1762. The farm was still valued at £100 in 1788 (and still in 1811) when owned by Thomas Turnbull; Thomas Turnbull of Fenwick is the largest owner of land within the Burgh of Hawick on Wood’s 1824 map. David Lees was farmer there in 1861, when it was composed of 140 acres. In 1895 the farm was gained by the Scotts of Buccleuch, being exchanged for Fenwick with James Elliot of Flex. The farmhouse dates from the late 17th century, but has been extensively renovated. It is a 2 storey structure of harled rubble. The entrance has a lintel bearing the initials ‘R S’ (presumably ‘Robert Scott’) and ‘M T’ and the date 1687; a shield above has been suggested to be the arms of Myrton of Cambo, ancestors of Kerr of Cavers Carre, although this seems hard to understand. The house is a grade B listed building – … Falnash, and Commonside; inform Fenwick, and Goudiland, With Ha’ick, Burnfoot, and Hassindean, to wait on my command’ [WSB] (earlier spelled ‘Fynnik’ and other variants; the origin is probably Old English ‘fen wic’, meaning ‘the dwelling by the fen’; the name appears at least as early as 1456, when it is ‘Fenwyk’, it is ‘Fenvik’ in 1484, ‘Fenwik’ in 1484/5 and 1488, ‘fenik’ in 1502, ‘Fenwyk’ in 1509, ‘Fynwik’ and ‘Fennik’ in 1510, ‘Fennyk’ in 1511, ‘Fynnik’ in 1526, ‘Fenyk’ in 1530, ‘Fenvik’ in 1540, ‘Fynnik’ in 1561, 1572, 1594 and 1615, ‘Fynnik’ in 1562, ‘Phenik’ in 1627 and ‘Fenik’ in 1729; it is on Gordon’s c. 1650 map as ‘Fennik’, on Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Fenick’ and on the 1718 Buccleuch survey as ‘Fenick’).

Fenwick (fen-ee-k) n. Francis P. ‘Frank’ (b.1855) son of John, proprietor of the Tower Inn, he was born in Hawick. He was farmer at Northhouse and was a guest at some Common Riding functions in the 1880s. He became proprietor of the Tower Hotel and was Acting Father in 1893. He was also a starter at the Common Riding Races. In 1901 he was a retired farmer at Barnes. He may have later lived at Harts-garth. His wife was Mary A., and their children included John B. and David B. James (19th C.) landlord of the Tower Hotel in the mid-19th century. He was on the original committee of Hawick Bowling Club, and probably first President. This is probably confusion with John. John (17th C.) son and heir of Randall. In 1652 he gave a lease of lands to his sister Catherine, including ‘Hawicke’ in the parish of Kirkharle (i.e. the one in Northumberland). John (b.c.1808) born at Auchtergaven in Perthshire. He was proprietor of the Tower Hotel in the middle part of the 19th century, with William Crozier as his head hostler. He is recorded providing the dinner for the Magistrates’ party at the Common Riding of 1840. He was there in 1841, with his wife Helen (probably Stewart). He was listed as innkeeper at the Tower in Slater’s 1852 directory. He helped with the last ceremonial run of the coach from Hawick to the south in 1862. In 1849 he married Janet Crone or Bawden and was listed with her at the Tower Hotel in 1851. Their children included Sophia Agnes and Francis Peter (who became proprietor later). John (1803/4–74) farmer at Northhouse. His elder brother was Peter. He was recorded at Northhouse in 1868. He married twice, his second wife being Janet Crone, who died in 1888, aged 73. He is probably the same as the coach driver above, and is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. Randall (d.bef. 1652) recorded as ‘of Hawicke’ in grants of 1624 and 1626 from the Swinburne (Capheaton) Estate Records. His wife was Katharine. He may have been son-in-law of Edward Gray of How-ick (by coincidence). His son and heir was John and a daughter was Catherine. This is presumably the ‘Hawick’ in Northumberland. Sir Roger of Wallington (d.1544) commander of part of the English force under Lord Dacre in 1513. He led 300 men who burnt the town of Lanton near Jed-burgh.

Fenwick Loan (fen-ee-k-lu:n) n. former name for the road running from Haysike over to Whitchesters. The name was referred to in the description of the boundaries of the Common in 1767 – ‘The east down that Syke into Weatland Burn and the dykes of Alton Crofts, and so on to Fenwick Loan head, where the march turns south by hillocks up the west side of the head of the Loan …’[C&L1767].

Fenwick Park (fen-ee-k-pawrk) n. name given in 1890 to an area of large houses, reached from Weensland Road up Manuel’s Brae. Some of the houses had been there perhaps a century before. This included St. John’s, which had been known as Ivybank, St. John’s Manse (previously ‘The Birks’) and Elmbank, or ‘The Elms’. New building occurred in the few years after 1962 to make the modern housing development of Fenwick Park. The name derives from Fenwick on Teviot, specifically referring to Thomas Turnbull of Fenwick who owned land there.
Fenzlehope

Fenzlehope (fenz-lup) n. former farmstead in Liddesdale, where Thomas Elliot is recorded as farmer in 1797. It could be related to the earlier records of ‘Folepul’ and ‘Fopilis’, but note that ‘Phaupknow’ is listed separately on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls.

fer (fer) adj. far, distant – ‘si near and yet si fer’, ‘Lo, than wad I dander fer aff, an’ bide in the desart’ [HSR], ‘...a-thoarth the fer seide o Tiet’s flooery vale ...’ [ECS], ‘Hei’s be fer the senior citizen’ [CT], ‘...And fer oor steps hae sundert’ [DH], ‘In fer-away days the Picts, When they cam to make oor toon ...’ [TK], adv. far, by the greatest degree, further – ‘it was fer better afore’, ‘she was be fer the youngest o threi dowters’, ‘But I’ve seldom seen twae decent fouk differ fer’ [RW], ‘As fer as the east is frae the west, sae fer heth he remu-\yard our transgressiones frae us’ [HSR], ‘Sae fer fer back the lang road it has come’ [JEDM], ‘...and it’s nae time afore ye’ve fer owre mony!’ [DH] (from Medieval English).

He could be the same Ferguson who farmed at Denholmindhill, opening up the first Quarry there. His wife was probably Helen, innkeeper in Denholm, and they had children Alexander, Margaret and Janet. Alexander (b.1812/3) innkeeper in Denholm in the 1860s. He was born at West Middle, and so probably son of Alexander. His premises were probably on Eastgate. In 1861 he was living with his widowed mother, Helen. Christina (1844–1939) daughter of mason James, she was born in Denholm. In the 1851 census the family was living near Sunyside, and her name was listed as ‘Catherine’. She emigrated to the Melbourne area with her parents in 1855. In 1879 she married John Band, but they had no children. She named her house on Princess Street in Melbourne ‘Roxburgh’, after her home county. After her husband’s death she lived with her sister Agnes, and she was buried in Melbourne General Cemetery. Helen (b.c.1785) innkeeper and spirit dealer in Denholm. She was born at Linhope. She was probably married to Alexander, farmer at West Middle. In 1837 she was recorded as a widow, and 1841 she was living around Eastgate with her children Alexander, Margaret and Janet. She is recorded as vintner and grocer in 1852. James (18th/19th C.) spinner in Hawick. (b.1852). Their children were christened in the Free Kirk of Jedburgh. He died of dysentery in Australia. James ‘Jamie’ (d.c.1861) character who worked at Mosspan most of his life, first as a ‘post-boy’, then as a ‘strapper’. He was only once allowed to take the reins of the coach, but overturned it near Langholm. He was a widower by the time of the 1861 census and died a few months later. Rev. John (c.1655–1737) ordained as minister of Roberton in 1696, after several years of appeals to the Presbytery for preachers to be supplied. For part of 1697 he helped with vacancies in Angus and Mearns and received calls from Aberbrothock and Montrose, which the Presbytery refused. There then followed some debate in which the Commission for the Assembly blamed the Presbytery for not declaring the parish vacant. He was finally translated to Aberbrothock (i.e. Arbroath) in 1699, despite a petition to the General Assembly from his parishioners. It is said that he had the old Abbey Church there destroyed, in order to build himself a tomb. He married firstly Margaret MacDougall and secondly Bethia Brand. John (18th/19th C.) paid the cart tax in 1790 and 1791, when he was at Kippielaw. He was also recorded at Greensidehall in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when he owned 2 work horses. Ferniehirst (fer-nee-hirst) n. lands and tower just south of Jedburgh, built in the 1470s by Sir Thomas Kerr following his marriage to Margaret Kerr of Kersheugh. The tower there is sometimes referred to as ‘Ferniehirst Castle’. The land was valued (along with Limekilnwood) in 1538 at £4 6s 8d. It was stormed by Dacre’s men in 1523, recaptured by Sir John Kerr and his men in 1549, when they butchered all the French garrison. It was destroyed soon afterwards by James VI and rebuilt in 1598. Disused in the 18th century, it was repaired in the 19th and used as a youth hostel from about 1935–85. In 1988 it was restored again by the Lord Lothian, and is now a Kerr family home, also containing the Kerr Museum. It is said to be haunted by the ‘Green Lady’. The castle features in Jedburgh’s Callants’ Festival – ‘Hermitage wistfully lifts her head, Where the mists on the lone moors fall: Ferniehuryst, lulled by the crooning of Jed, Lies wrapped in her sylvan shawl’ [WL] (also spelled ‘Ferniehurst’, as well as variants such as ‘Farnyhiryst’, ‘Farneheryst’, ‘Farnihiryst’, ‘Farnyhiryst’, ‘Farnylyryst’, ‘Fernyheryst’, ‘Phairnehiryst’, ‘Phairnhiroyst’, ‘Phairnyhiryst’, ‘Phairnyhiryst’, ‘Pharnyheryst’, ‘Pharnihiryst’, ‘Pharnyhiryst’, ‘Pharnyhiryst’.

‘Pharnyhiryst’ etc.; the origin of the name is probably the Old English ‘fearnig hyrst’ meaning ‘the ferny wood’; it first appears in 1493 as ‘Farnyhiryst’; there is a place of the same name in Cad- donfoot and Stow Parish).

Middle and Hangingside in the Parishes of Cavers Tythehouse in Hobkirk Parish, along with Holm, Hallrule, Hallrule Mill, Deanside, Appotside and that time the lands consisted of Town o’ Rule, Ter of Archibald Douglas, Earl of Angus. About this time the lands were owned by Lord Balmerino in 1643, valued at more than £4800 and by Elliott of Stobs in 1678, when Stonedige and Fairnielee had been disjoined and the value was roughly halved. The Mains of Feu-Rule were inherited in 1632 by Margaret and Isobella from her brother Walter Turnbull of Rawflat. The Barony passed from William, Earl of Lothian to William Elliott of Stobs later in the 17th century. In the 1690s it passed from Sir Gilbert Elliott to his son Sir William. The Common for the barony lay on the farm of Hallrule, and is referred to in a return of 1610 for Appotside. Before 1722 the Lairds of Weens had the right to graze on the Common, but in that year it was arranged that 1/5th of the land be given to Weens in exchange to yielding the pasturage rights, although retaining the right to cast peats on the Common (also written ‘Fee-rule’, ‘the feu of Roull’, ‘Feuruell’, ‘Fowruell’, etc.; it is ‘Feoroule’ and ‘the Fewroule’ in 1543, the ‘Feu of Roule’ in 1479, ‘Fewroule’ in 1499, ‘Fewrourl’ in 1500, ‘fee of Roull’ in 1501/2, ‘Fewroule’ in 1509/10, ‘Farroule’ in 1541, ‘Fewroull’ in 1562, ‘Fowroulie’ in 1574, ‘Fewroull’ in 1581/2, ‘Fewalroull’ and ‘Fewrewlie’ in 1602, ‘Fewroull’ in 1603, ‘Frewewell’ and ‘Fewruil’ in 1610, ‘Fewerrule’ in 1629, ‘Fewalroull’ in 1632, ‘Fewalroull’ in 1637, ‘Few of Roull’ in 1647, ‘Fowroule’ and ‘Feuaroull’ in 1656, ‘Fewaroull’ in 1659 and ‘Feweroull’ in 1703).

an isolation hospital for victims of infectious disease, particularly scarlet fever. Formally called the Hawick and District Joint Fever Hospital, or the Hawick and District Infectious Diseases Hospital. It was funded jointly by the Town and County, but saw little use. The hospital was designed by Alexander Inglis and built around 1902. It had 24 beds and also had an adjoining wooden smallpox hospital. The name ‘Fever Hospital’ was also sometimes used as an alternative name for the Anderson Sanatorium, built on the site of a former dilapidated building at Howdenburn in the last few years of the 19th century. The former Fever Hospital became an annex of Burnfoot Primary School in the 1960s and was converted into a Social Work Outreach Centre in the 1990s.

Firth (firth) n. farm and former hamlet south of Lilliesleaf. The poet William Knox was born there. It was formerly part of the Barony of Belses. In 1569 it was part of the lands sold by Jedburgh Abbey to Adam French, and was listed ‘with the teyndis and woddis of the samin’. Walter Turnbull was tenant there in 1576/7. It was listed as part of the Lordship of Jedburgh in 1587. Thomas Hamilton (1st Earl of Haddington) owned the land in the early 17th century and owned by the Turnbulls of Firth. It (or perhaps just the superiority) was owned by the Kers of Cavers Kerr in the 17th century. Hector Turnbull was owner in 1643, his lands being valued at £195. Walter Riddell farmed there in the mid-17th century. John Turnbull paid the land tax on £195 there in 1678. Andrew Knox and James Elliot are recorded there in 1694. Walter Turnbull paid tax for 13 windows there in 1748. Thomas Knox is recorded as farmer in 1797. George Pott was owner in 1788 (and still recorded in 1811), when the value was still the same. The Drydens were there in the mid-19th century. It was owned by John Martin in about 1874 it was later purchased by Walter Haddon (also formerly ‘the Firth’, it is probably ‘Phirth’ in 1476; it is marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

fir-top (fir-top) n., arch. a fir cone – ‘The fir-tops fall by Branxhom wall, When the night blast stirs the tree; And it shall not be mine to die on the pine, I loved in infancy’ [JL] (see also pine-top).

They have released many records and have backed many well-known American acts.

Fisher (fi-shur) n. Alexander (b.1802/3) from Galashiels, he was schoolmaster in Newcastleton from the end of 1823. He was also an elder of Castleton Kirk. He was recorded there in Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories and was also recorded as schoolmaster in the 1841 and 1851 censuses. In 1852 he was still Parish Schoolmaster, and also acted as Librarian. He married Georgina Fyfe and their children included: Alexander (b.1828); George Fyfe (b.1829); Jean (b.1832); Robert (b.1834); Thomas Stavert (b.1836); Alice (b.1838); Jessie (b.1840); Angus Barton (b.1843); Margaret (b.1848); and James (b.1851). Alexander (b.1828) son of Alexander the schoolmaster, he was born in Newcastleton and educated in Edinburgh. He was a teacher in Galashiels, where he was also editor of the Border Advertiser. He published many verses, for example ‘The Gala Forest Rifles’ in support of the volunteer movement in the 1850s. He was probably the ‘A. Fisher’ whose poem about Hermitage Castle was published in 1863. He emigrated to Canada, where he died. Daniel ‘Deeby Danny’, owner of a fruit shop on the Bridge Street corner of the Baptist Opening in the middle part of the 20th century. He started in business with a fruit and vegetable barrow. David, M.B.E. (1874–1938) Hawick Provost, born in Galashiels. He worked in the grocery trade around Scotland, becoming Ministry of Food District Inspector for South-East Scotland in WWI. He was a J.P. for East Lothian from 1912, and moved to Hawick when he acquired James Brydon & Sons, High Street, in 1919. Becoming a councillor for South High Street Ward in 1922–38, he was Provost 1931–38. He also became a Magistrate and was honorary treasurer, as well as being Vice-Convenor of Roxburgh County Council. He received an M.B.E. in 1932. Fisher Avenue was named after him. His portrait was painted by James Tait. Rev. James (d.1640) minister of Southdean from 1626. He was translated to Yarrow (St. Mary’s Kirk of the Lowes) in 1635. He signed the Covenant in Hawick in 1638, as minister of ‘Sct marie Kirk of the Lowes’. He gave £20 towards building the library at Glasgow University in 1637. James son of Danny, he managed Mitchell the glaziers on Oliver Crescent and was affectionately known as ‘Gless Erse’ Malie (17th C.) cottar at Grange in Abbotrule Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. This was probably a woman’s name, a pet for of ‘Mary’. Mrs. ?? (18th C.) listed in Hawick among those taxed for having female servants in 1789 and 1790. She was presumably the wife of a fairly wealthy Hawick resident of the day (formerly also spelled ‘Fischer’). Fisher (fi-shur) n. pseudonym for a Liddesdale poet in the 19th century. His verses on the Earl of Dalkeith reaching maturity in 1852 are included in David Anderson’s collection of 1868.

fitbaa (fi’-bu, fi’-baw) n. football, referring either to the ball or the game – ‘...and that was the beginnin’ o’ the fitba’ played there till many years back atween Alewate an’ Ettrick folk’ [BCM1880], ‘Oor fitba’ wi’ handba’ was oft interspersed [AY], also used to mean rugby football – ‘Aw’m gettin’ half price tae the fitba’ And doon tae the toon in the bus’ [AY]. Locally the game has its roots in the ‘baa’ (i.e. handball) games played annually in many Border towns, as well as more casual games played at other times of the year. There is mention of a large match of around 1600 played at ‘Kelsy’ (probably Kelso) in the memoirs of Robert Carey, the English Warden of the Marches. The ‘Carterhaugh Baa’ of 1815 was essentially a re-enactment of those early games. The Rugby and Association rules only became adopted in the latter part of the 19th century – ‘Then strip lads, and to it, though sharp be the weather, And if, by mischance, you should happen to fall, There are worse things in life than a tumble on heather, And life is itself but a game of football’ [SWS] (also spelled ‘fitba’ etc.).

late 1160s he was witness to the confirmation of the gifts of lands to Jedburgh Abbey. In 1166 he witnessed a charter by King William to Robert de Brus. After his death there was a document confirming the lands he had given to the monks of Paisley Priory, including a ploughgate in Hassendean (called Huntlaw). He married Eschina de Mollie, heiress of Mollie (or Mow) and Huntlaw. Their son was Alan, 2nd High Steward. The Stewartship was therafter hereditary and led to the Stewart Kings several generations later. His seal shows a knight on horseback, holding a sword and shield and with the words ‘SIGILL. WALTERI FILII ALANI’ (also written ‘Fitzalan’).

Fitz Malger (fitz-mal-gur) n. Race (12th C.) granter of half the lands of Shortbutts to Jedburgh Abbey. This took place in the late 1100s, and the lands were in Liddesdale, described as being in the territory of Sorbie. Presumably his father was ‘Malger’, a name that occurs among some Norman families south of the Border.

Fitz-Scott (fitz-sko’) n. Uchtred (12th C.) first known ancestor of the noble Scotts, with some indication that his family came from Galloway, and that they had held the barony of Scottstoun in Peeblesshire. Although, there is no definite information about his parentage or earlier ancestors, his designation as ‘son of Scot’ distinguished him from others of the same name. He lived during the reigns of Alexander I and David I. Around 1116 he witnessed an inquest made by David (then Prince of Cumbria) regarding the foundation of the church at Glasgow, and also witnessed the foundation charter for the monastery at Selkirk (where he was ‘Uchtred filio Scot’). He was among the courtiers of King David I. About 1145 he witnessed the charter of King David’s son Henry to the church of Melrose. His son was probably Richard. The Dukes of Buccleuch and many other local branches of the Scotts can trace themselves directly back to him (also written ‘Uchtred Filius Scot’, i.e. the son of Scot).

five-an- (fiv-an‘) adj., arch. five minutes after, as in phrases such as ‘five-an-twenty past’ – ‘Blennie’s ... thy had a five-an-twenty past yin whuscle, an it went at five-an-twenty past’ [DaS], ‘... Syne we wad scamper off, five ell a wund, To be the first to grab her han’” [WL].

the Flag (thu-flawg) n. Hawick’s colour, standard, pennon, pennant, or pensil, also known as ‘the Banner Blue’. It is meant to be a copy of the original flag captured at Hornshole, which is believed to have originally belonged to a group of English soldiers attached to the Priory of Hexham. The oldest surviving flag dates from 1707, sometimes called ‘the Union Flag’, since it contains the date 1707 (but the connection with the Union of the Kingdoms is probably just a coincidence) and is in the Museum; it was ordered by Bailie Ruecastle at a cost of £10 14 shillings, and was ready for the end of May that year. It was a replacement for a much older flag, which was so decrepit in 1706 that the Cornet-Elect refused to carry it, causing near riots. The result was that the Bailies took the responsibility of carrying the Flag that year, while the young men of the town appointed their own unofficial Cornet (whose name is not recorded) to carry another Colour. The Hawick flag is ‘A Banner Azure with Saltire Or’ with the date 1514 also in gold, and should be pennon-shaped (with the date read correctly when held like a lance). The vertical line may have simply hidden a seam. The letters ‘HC’ (for ‘Hawick Colour’ or ‘Hawick Common’ or perhaps even ‘Hawick Callants’, no one is entirely sure) were probably added later, perhaps to the original after its capture. The 1707 flag, of much lighter material than later version, was probably not the first replacement (although some have suggested that it might have been). A flag from around the end of the 18th century still had the correct colours, but with ‘1514’ in red and the cross in yellow; this was repeated for the replacement of 1832. A new flag made in 1865, and carried by the Cornet in the procession for the opening of the Allan Water supply and the opening of the Carlisle railway, was mistakenly given a red (or crimson) cross, and was square-shaped (‘...They love the banner that leads them on – the banner of red and blue’ [JEDM]). New flags were purchased in 1865, 1877 and 1892, still with the wrong colours. The error was probably made around 1850 (or 1845 and again around 1855 if 2 flags were purchased between 1832 and 1865), presumably because of indifference by the Town Council and citizens to the details of the ceremonial side. At the end of the 19th century it was established (by Craig & Laing, although the yellow colour had been suggested a few years earlier by J.E.D. Murray) that the flag should be pennon-shaped and with a golden cross, and this was implemented for the new flag of 1903, with subsequent copies retaining this design. The old coloured Flag was last used at the Thursday morning Chase of 1903 (and can be seen outside the Town Hall in an 1893 painting by Frank Wood). A replica flag was made by the ladies at Pringle’s and sent to the K.O.S.B. troops in Germany during WWII, then returned with the names of places where local men had fell embroidered on it. Flags of schools and guilds were also carried in earlier Common Ridings, but since the mid-18th century only the Town’s Colour has been allowed. In 1851 the Flag was stolen when flying at the Tower Hotel overnight, but recovered a week later in Silver Street. Until 1861 the flag used to fly from the Chief Magistrate’s (sometimes the Junior Magistrate’s) house until it was bussed on the Thursday evening. After that year this happened at an inn selected by the Cornet, until the Colour Bussing was moved to the Town Hall in 1887. Now the unbussed Flag first appears at the Thursday morning Chase and is bussed on the Thursday evening, after being displayed from the Town Hall balcony all day. After being bussed inside the Town Hall it is waved from the balcony and left on display there. On the Friday the Cornet carries it at the Chase, then the Acting Father takes it to St. Leonard’s, where it is displayed outside the farmhouse. It is then taken by the Cornet on the Ride around the Marches. After the Cutting of the Sod it is carried by the Acting Father, and handed again to the Cornet at the gate from pilmuir Field onto the Mair. The Cornet rides proudly round the course with the Flag and later it is displayed from the roof of the committee room. Leaving the Mair, it is dipped in the Teviot and is returned to the Council Chambers for the night. On the Saturday it again goes to the Mair, and is returned on the Saturday afternoon at the Handing Back ceremony. The Flag was loaned to Hexham Abbey for the procession for the consecration of a new nave in 1908, with a copy presented to the Abbey by the Callants’ Club in 1914 and a replacement presented by the Provost in 1972 (the one last carried by the Cornet in 1971); this now hangs in the abbey’s north nave, with the 1914 copy returned to Hawick. There was a new flag in 1972, which was used until 1991. The flag was bussed by the Queen at a special Golden Jubilee ceremony in Melrose in 2002. It is rarely brought out except at the Common Riding, but formerly was used in local processions, e.g. at the opening of the Allan Water supply in 1865 (when a new Flag was provided) and the Dod Burn water supply in 1882. The Flag is also draped over the coffins of ex-Cornets, the practice beginning with James Smith in 1904. A practice flag (green, with the words ‘Aye Defend’ in yellow, donated by the Mosstroopers’ Club) is used by the Cornet and the Acting Father at the Mair after the Wednesday morning Chase. A new flag was provided in 2014 – ‘Hail to the banner that proudly floats o’er us, Hail to the brave hearts that bear it along’ [JT], ‘Then rally on to the good old flag – let the slogan ring out again!’ [JEDM], ‘...And blue as my wee lad’s wondering eye Watching the Flag go fluttering by’ [JYH], ‘The flag is our emblem, an’ stands for a’ that we cherish an’ haud dear!’ [BW1939], ‘The flag for which our fathers died At Hornshole be Teviotside’ [IWL].

flannen (fla-nen, neen) n., adj., arch. flannel – ‘Ma flannen serk’s aa up ma back an’ s hard as buckram’ [ECS], ‘A can mind when tredsmen wore Flannen serks wi a navy blue stripe’ [DH] (also written ‘flaanen’ and variants).

flapper (flaw-pur) n. one who owns or trains horses for ‘flapping’ meetings, also a horse that races at such meetings.

flappin (flaw-pin) n. amateur horse-racing in the Borders, not under the Jockey Club or National Hunt rules. The word has been used elsewhere in Britain (and also for greyhound racing), but the Borderers have been the most enthusiastic supporters of unofficial racing. The main locations are at Hawick Moor, Langholm and Selkirk (at the Rig). Those at Hawick Moor that are not associated with the Common Riding are organised by ‘Hawick Horse’. There were also races on Flatt farm near Newcastleton until the early years of the 21st century. There were formerly meetings across much of Scotland, although support waned in most places, with the last meeting in the Aberdeen area around the 1990s. The only other place in Scotland to now have such race meetings is Irvine. Among places known to have meetings in the past are Insh (Aberdeenshire), the Black Isle, Bogside, Lanark, Canobie, Dumfriesshire (near Newton Stewart) and Galashiels (once). Historically, flapping has a reputation as a hot-bed of swindlers and ruffians, and the exclusive Jockey Club still gives a ‘warning off’ penalty for participants. The Common Riding of 1946 was the first flapping meeting to be held in Scotland. The Tradesmen’s Handicap, run on Common Riding Friday is the flappers equivalent of the Derby – ‘...daein a pickle flappin tae on his Uncle Elec’s Nell’ [IWL], ‘...Till hei got intae flappin’, racin’, no under orders’ [MB] (the origin and antiquity of the word is uncertain, but there is a claim it comes from an old slang word for a loose woman; however, it seems more likely it is related to ‘flap’, recorded as ‘a sudden happening’ in Aberdeenshire).

flappit (flaw-pit, -pee) pp. flapped – ‘He crawled and flappit ower the dyke, An’ roosed the bees ayont the bike’ [WFC].
Flask (flawsk) n. former lands on the east side of the Ewes valley, between Hoghill and Terrona. Flask Wood is still marked on the Ordnance Survey map. It was also formerly called ‘Flaskholme’, although in some periods the 2 names may have referred to distinct neighbouring lands. Along with Howgill and Glendivan it was described as a 10-merk land when inherited by Robert, Lord Maxwell in 1550, by John, Lord Maxwell in 1604 and by Robert Maxwell in 1619. Archibald Armstrong ‘in Flaskholme’ is recorded in 1607. It may be the ‘Flocksteid alias Flasket’ possessed by John Scott ‘balie in Liddisail’ recorded in 1632. Both Flask and Flaskholme are listed among the Dumfriesshire possessions of the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1653, 1661 and 1663. It was ‘Flask alias Flaskholme’ when the superiority was inherited by John Maxwell, Earl of Nithsdale in 1670 and by William, Earl of Nithsdale in 1696. There were Armstrongs there in the 17th century. It was surveyed along with other Scott of Buccleuch properties in 1718, when it consisted of 540 acres, bounded by lands of the Laird of Cooms, Howgill, Nether Wrae and Terrona. It is also stated that ‘the water hath done it much damage by altering its course’. Robert Beattie, James Johnston and their families lived there in 1841 (it is ‘Flaskhooome’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map and on the 1718 Buccleuch survey).

Flasket Sike (flaws-ki’-sik) n. small stream on the west side of Whitrope Burn in upper Liddesdale.

Flaskwud (flawsk-wud) n. Flaskwood, former name for lands in Liddesdale, recorded in the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale, listed as vacant at that time. It was probably the ‘Flaskett’ included along with Over Closs, Millburn and several adjacent farmsteads when surveyed for the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1718. The farm was presumably on the Flasket Sike, off the Whitopte Burn in upper Liddesdale.

Flat (fla’) n. a storey in a mill, or an area defined for specific factory production, e.g. ‘the Back Flat’ or ‘the Middle Flat’ – ‘...one day while going through one of the spinners’ flats there he noticed a piecer lounging about’ [JHH].

Flat (fla’) n., arch. a cow-plat, cake of cow dung (Jamieson says this is ‘apparently from its flat form’).

Flate (fla’) pp., arch. scolded, chided (also ‘flacet’; this is the past tense of flyte, not by E.C. Smith; the past participle is flitten).

Flatlins (fla’-linz) adv., poet. flatly, at full length – ‘Ane other thro’ the breeks him bare, While flatlins to the grund he fell ...’ [CPM].

Flatt (flaw’, flat) n. farm just north of Kershopefoot, on the Scottish side of the Border. It is already ‘Flatt’ in 1541 when valued at 5 merks and tenanted by Simon Armstrong. ‘Young Sim’ was recorded as residing there in 1583. Will Elliot ‘called Blakheid’ had 4 cows stolen from the lands there in about 1610. Lancie Armstrong of Flat was recorded in 1611. It was possessed by Francis Robson in 1632. Elspeth Scott was tenant there in 1694, and paid tax on 3 hearths. It was surveyed along with other Scott of Buccleuch properties in 1718, extending to 442 acres, bounded by the Kershope Burn, Liddel Water and Sorбиetrees; the map shows the house in the same place as today’s farmhouse and some old trees corresponding to the modern Sorbiholm Strip. Henry Elliot paid tax on 11 windows there in 1748. Elliots were tenants in the later 18th and early 19th centuries. Henry Elliot was there in at least the period 1785–91. John Elliot was farmer there in 1797 and another John in the 1860s. There was a mill pond to the east. A mineral spring on the farm was once considered to have healing properties, and is marked ‘Stinking Well (Chalybeate)’ on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map. The farm was used for ‘flapping’ race meetings in the latter part of the 20th century. It is also a former name for lands to the east of Smallholm Crags (also ‘The Flatt’, it is ‘the Flates’ in 1583; it is ‘Flett’ on Blaeu’s c.1654 map and ‘Flat’ on Stobie’s 1770 map).

flaw (flaw) n., arch. a piece of ground used for drying peats – ‘A flaw o’ peats, the spot of ground occupied by an individual, on the edge of a moss, on which his peats are spread for being dried, in the summer season’ [JoJ], a quantity of peats (also flowe).

Fleck (flek) n. Thomas (18th/19th C.) farmer in Hobkirk Parish. He paid the Horse Tax at ‘over Chesterhall’ in 1797; this was probably a temporary name for Over Bonchester. His children included: Betty (b.1789); and James (b.1791).

Flecks see the Flex fleece (flees) n., arch. a supply of stock, a flock or company of people, humorous term for an outfit of clothes – ‘A’ve bocht a new fleece o warm claes for the wunter months’ [ECS].

the Fleece see the Fleece Inn
Fleece Close

Fleece Close (flees-klos) n. passageway at 6 High Street, named after the Fleece Inn, the ballroom of which it led to. In the mid-19th century there was the sign of a golden fleece at the entrance.

the Fleece Inn (thu-flees-in) n. inn formerly at 6 High Steet, also known as ‘the Golden Fleece’. It was reached by the long passageway there, behind what was for a long time Davies the saddler’s. The attached ballroom was further up the close, with access from an outside staircase (seen in an old sketch). In the middle of the 19th century it was used for many purposes, including weddings, dances, theatrical performances and concerts in the winter, as well as ‘Blinnd Wull’s’ dance classes. At one point there were 3 separate dance instructors using the ballroom. It was a popular place for raffles to raise money for distressed workers. There were performances of all kinds there, including the exhibition of a supposed mermaid and performances by Borders clown Billy Purves. One of the last performances there was a recital of selections from Shakespeare by a father and daughter. It was also used for many years for the monthly business meetings of Allars Kirk, with the upper room (No. 5) used for this purpose known jokingly as ‘the Manse’. Thomas Easton ran a school here for a while and in 1838 it was the location for the meeting that organised the opening of the Chartist Store (i.e. the Co-op). George Hunter was the proprietor in 1825 and 1837, Margaret Best is listed there in 1852, then James Hay, followed by James Scott, with the last tenant being town bellman Samuel Lawrence. The licence was reduced from that of the hotel to a public house in 1871 and lost altogether in 1875 for a ‘breach of certificate’. There are 2 sketches made by T.H. Laidlaw in 1899. The ballroom was demolished in 1948 – ‘Jock Buckham to the Fleece is gane To sleep among his plaidin’ hose, I look fu’ baul’’ [JR]. ‘...Gude faith your cares will get a fleg, Though baith the deil an’ Merlin Ye meet that day’ [JR] ‘...She threw doon a guinea, and thought it weel waired, For he, to her ailment, had given a fleg’ [TCh], to fling (as a horse, from a fright).

fleg (fleg) v., arch. to frighten, scare, drive away by scaring – ‘...But stuff my wame wi’ guid kail brose. To fleg the caul’ Syne strutting in guid plaidin’ hose, I look fu’ baul’’ [JR], ‘...Gude faith your cares will get a fleg, Though baith the deil an’ Merlin Ye meet that day’ [JR] ‘...She threw doon a guinea, and thought it weel waired, For he, to her ailment, had given a fleg’ [TCh], to fling (as a horse, from a fright).

fleggär (fl-gur) n., arch., poet. someone who flinches, one who frightens – ‘Even in the Tranties, wi’ their beggars, The spoilers had found fearfu’ fleggars’[AD], a horse that is prone to flinging off its rider (the meaning of Agnes Douglas’ line may possibly instead be ‘an exaggerator, liar’ just be ‘scarer’).

flei (fl) n. a fly, any general flying insect – ‘is that flei a cleg or jest a hoose-flei?’, ‘shut yer mooth or the fleis’ll get in’, ‘Dirty white-wesh, deid-rot treis, Baked bean tins and mawky fleis ...’ [DH], v. to fly – ‘she’s gliffed stiff ti flei’, ‘But hei took iz roond the Haugh – Oh, how the time did flei!’ [DH], ‘...it’s sixteen eer sin oor Queen an Prince Philip last veesiteet the toon. How time fleis’[BW1978] (also spelled ‘fley’; see also hoose-flei, mawky-flei and shairny-flei).

flei ceemetry (fi-see-mi-ree) n. humorous term for fly paper – ‘They came to a horrid, fascinating end on revolving ‘fly cemetery’s’ ...’ [BB], humorous term for a fruit slice made of pastry and currants.

fleich (fliech) v., poet. to cajole, coax, beseech, flatter – ‘...blaw apon my gairden that its spices may fleet owt’[HSR], ‘Where the weet comes frae the flowe, And fleets, ye mind, on yon bit lea’ [HSR], arch. to be awash with water – ‘...and boggy ground on the other which fleets water all the winter season’[GT].
flei-in oot (fly-in-oo’) adj., arch. sticking-out – ‘Yet there was a Hawick wumman used to take a flyin-oop lip whenever the train got to Reston Junction . . .’ [DH].
flei in the air (fly-in-ðru-ðr) interj. used to express doubt – ‘that’s nae mair gold is flei in the air’.

Fleming (flë-min) n. Sir David of Biggar (d.1405/6) eldest son of Sir Malcolm. He distinguished himself at the Battle of Otterburn in 1388. Being in royal favour he gained several properties and titles, including being (briefly) given the Barony of Cavers and Sheriffdom of Roxburgh by King Robert III on being forfeited by the Earl of Douglas in 1405. In 1404 he was a Commissioner for negotiating a truce with England. In 1405 he was one of those ensuring (unsuccessfully, for he was captured by the English) the safe passage of Prince James of Scotland by ship to France, to escape the plottings of the Douglases. However, the Royal force was met at Long Hermiston Moor and he was killed there by James Douglas of Balveny, son of Archibald Earl of Douglas. As a result Cavers (and the Sheriffdom) returned to Douglas hands, and later Douglas of Balveny became the 7th Earl of Douglas. He married Jean, daughter of Sir David Barclay of Brechin and secondly married Isabel, heiress of Monycabow. He had a daughter Mariion (who married William Maule of Panmure) and 2 sons, Sir Malcolm and David. He was ancestor of the Earls of Wigtown. Hugh (12th C.) landowner at Malton in Yorkshire. He is recorded in Reginald of Durham’s collection of miracles of St. Cuthbert, probably written in the 1170s. He was said to have fled Malton due to the incursions of the army of William the Lion, and sought refuge in the chapel of St. Cuthbert in the Slitrig valley. A vision of the saint told him to take moss from the stone basin that was outside the chapel and place some under his hood. He was thereby able to pass his enemies undetected and return to Malton. James (17th C.) recorded in the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694 among those ‘Payed but not listed in Hauick Toum’. He was probably from the west side. His surname appears to be ‘Fliming’. He is probably the James ‘Fleemin’, married to Agnes ‘Putrie’, whose children born in Hawick included William (b.1685), Margaret (b.1687) and Isobel (b.1692). John (14th C.) chaplain at Hawick in the mid-1300s. He may be the same as ‘John de Hawick’ mentioned in 1356. All that is really known about him is recorded in an action brought against him by John Leche, secretary of the Bishop of Glasgow in 1363, asking for confirmation that he held the Hawick benefice ‘although John Fleming, a younger man than himself and not a priest, held the Church and contested it, saying the patronage belonged to him’. John (18th/19th C.) cabinet-maker in Castleton listed among the subscribers to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. He is listed as a joiner among heads of households in 1835. He was listed as a wright in Newcastleton in Pigot’s 1837 directory. He does not occur on the 1841 census. John (19th/20th C.) farmer at Roan, near Newcastleton. He served as a Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. Robert (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Ruecastle. He was taxed in 1797 for having 2 non-working dogs. Robert (b.c.1810) tailor who lived on Kiyard in 1841. He was there along with shoemaker Walter, probably his older brother, as well as Elizabeth, probably their mother, and children Janet and James. W. (18th/19th C.) recorded as a teacher on Melgund Place in Pigot’s 1837 directory. He is probably the young schoolmaster called William who was residing in Kelso in 1841.

flegmers (fleen-durz) n., pl., poet. splinters, fragments – ‘. . .thou salt basch thame inti fleldirs like ane patter’s vesshel’ [HSR], ‘Thou didist smatter the heeds o’ leviathan intil flegmers . . .’ [HSR].
flesh (flesh) n., arch. a general term for butcher meat – ‘A made a faiasable mael oot o pie-soop, . . .caald flesh, picklit ingans . . .’ [ECS], ‘. . .for aw’ve the pot on the day, an’ aw henna the flesh in yet’ [JTû].
flesher (fleen-shur) n., arch. a butcher. There were formerly strict laws attached to the treatment of meat, which the Town Council enforced, e.g. in 1713 a flesher was fined for bringing a carcass into the Town that had already died in the country. In Hawick the ‘fleshers’ were one of the 7 incorporated trades, which until 1861 had two representatives on the Town Council. They obtained their ‘Seal of Cause’ in 1720, when there were 7 of them, but had ceased to exist by the end of the 19th century. In Selkirk the ‘Fleshers’, a remnant of the former trade incorporation there, are still an active group with their own reception etc. during the Common Riding. The amount of business done locally was at a fairly low level until the latter part of the 18th century. Cutting the hamstrings of escaped cattle in the public street was one of the barbaric practices of the 18th century mentioned by Robert Wilson. An 1860 photograph (of George Davies’ shop) shows the once common sight (before being banned in 1862) of carcases hanging up outside the shop – ‘Item, to day, Bessie Henderson, spouse to Cuthbert Henderson, fleeshour, being accused . . . ’ [BR1638], ‘Item, that all fletheseris present the hale flesh slaine by them at the mercat place . . . ’ [BR1640], ‘The flesheris are ordained by the council not to sell skins until they shall first be exposed in the market place . . . ’ [BR1663], ‘The incorporations are 7, viz. weavers, tailors, hammermen, skinners, flesheris, shoemakers, and baxters’ [RRG], ‘. . . Past flesher, wabster, hind’ [DH] (also sometimes ‘flecher’; several spelling variants exist, such as ‘fleshour’).

Fletcher (fle-chur) n. Alexander (b.1883/4) saddler in Newcastleton, listed on Pigot’s 1837 directory and Slater’s 1852 directory. He was at about 48 North Hermitage Street in 1841 and 1851. His wife was Elizabeth (‘Betty’). Probably the same Alexander was listed as a tailor in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. Andrew (18th C.) Hawick resident, married to Janet Kedie. Their children included: Janet (b.1737); Mary (b.1740); and Walter (b.1741). He was probably related to Betty Fletcher, who was married to Thomas Kedie at about the same time. George (d.c.1558) son of Thomas, from whom he was given the lands of Ruecastle in 1519. His son was John.
George (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. His son John was born in 1636. George (17th C.)
owner of lands in Ruecastle in Bedrule Parish.
In 1643 his lands were valued at £12. He is probably related to the George who was recorded in Bedrule Parish in 1694. George (17th C.)
resident of Bedrule Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. He farmed on one of the farms of the Knowesouth estate and is probably related to James and John, who are also listed.
George (18th C.) tenant farmer at Turn near Stobs. He was there in the 1750s when his servant Robert Thomson got into a violent altercation with the Hawick Town Herd over his flock being hounded off the Common. He could be the George, son of James, born in Bedrule Parish in 1730. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isobel Reid, whose surname is written ‘Red’. Their children included: William (b.1670); Thomas (b.1672); James (b.1675);
and Helen (b.1676). James Haining states that ‘in some notes of James Wilson, Town Clerk, apppears a famous Fletcher m. to Isobel Reid or Rae’, but it is unclear what was famous about him. He is probably the James, son of Thomas, born in Ashkirk in 1644. James (17th C.) tenant in Belledean. Along with several other men from the upper Borthwick, he was charged in 1685 with being a Covenanter. However, all the men took the ‘Test’ and promised not to frequent conventicles.
His name is given as ‘Flesher’. James (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. His name is recorded as ‘Flecher’. His wife was Janet Scott and they had a son George (b.1662). James (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. He farmed on one of the farms of the Knowesouth estate. His children, baptised in Bedrule Parish, included William (b.1693) and George (b.1698). James (17th/18th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish. He may have been son of the earlier James. His children included Mary (b.1726), Margaret (b.1728) and George (b.1730).
Andrew (b.1732) and William (b.1735), baptised in Ashkirk Parish, may also have been his children. Rev. James (1725/6–1803) from Dalkeith, became the first minister of the Newcastle-ton Burgher Kirk in 1762. He was one of 6 students who entered the divinity hall in 1758, only 2 of whom became ministers. His appointment to Castleton came after a long delay, caused by dif-culty in finding a suitable man. He was said to be skilled at optics and keen on astronomy, and a friend of James Veitch of Inchbonny. He is also said to have built a ‘wooden horse’ which he used to get around the Parish; it is unclear whether or not this was an early predecessor of the bicycle. There were also stories of how he had second sight and predicted things about the next 3 ministers of the parish. He was said to be ‘a man of singularly primitive manners’ and was not a successful minister, being a strict disciplinarian and having an off-putting manner. A new Kirk was built around 1773, but it was said that the congreggation was in decline by 1793. Around this time there was also the establishment of Newcastleston, dramatically altering the parish. A complaint was made to the Selkirk Presbytery in 1801 that he was preaching against accepted doctrine, which led to discussions of his dismissal, during which he announced his resignation; he had apparently come to a new but unorthodox understanding of the Trinity, and written of this in a preface to an edition of Dr. Watts on 'The Sonship of Christ'. He moved back to Dalkeith and shortly before his death published 'The orthodox scheme freed from the remains of Arianism ...', largely a commentary on the works of Rev. Isaac Watts. He married Christian Beattie in 1769 and had a daughter, also Christian (d.1835). The family are included Margaret (b.1726). John He married Margaret Scott, and their children in-cluded: Helen (b.1693); Thomas (b.1696); Margaret (b.1698); Isabel (b.1701); Janet (b.1704); Jean (b.1708); John (b.1706); and possibly Jean (b.1718). John (16th C.) son of George, he inherited the lands of Ruecastle in 1558/9. Then he sold the lands to Sir John Kerr of Ferniehirst immediately. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isobel Brydon and their children included Janet (b.1680) and Isobel (b.1690). John (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. He farmed on one of the farms of the Knowesouth estate. He may be the John whose children baptised in Bedrule in 1694. He is recorded as 'Hob Flescheour'. John (19th C.) owner of the lands of Ruecastle (in Bedrule) in 1470/1. Robert 'Hob' (16th C.) recorded in 1561 when Robert, son of Walter Scott of Synton, promised to produce him at the next truce day at Coldstream. This was to answer the charge that he stole 3 horses from Steven Simpson in Berwick. He is recorded as 'Hob Flescheour'. Thomas (d.c.1470) inherited the lands of Ruecastle from his father Robert in the 5th year of the King's reign (i.e. either 1441 or 1464), 8 years after his father's death. Thomas (15th/16th C.) son of Robert, from whom he inherited the lands of Ruecastle. In 1497 he retained Ruecastle after having them held 'in wadset' to Janet Moscrop. He gave the lands to his son George in 1519, except for 'liferent'. Thomas (d.1680) from Bedrule parish, where he has one of the earliest surviving gravestones. William (15th C.) tenant in 'le crug', which could be 'Crook' near Hawick. His name is given as 'William flegiar' when he failed to appear when called by William Douglas, Sheriff of Roxburghshire, at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1493; he appears right after 4 Routledges who are connected with the lands of Trows near Crook. He was also called in 1494/5 and again failed to appear. William (17th C.) resident of Castleside in Ashkirk Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694 (formerly spelled 'Flechar', 'Fleggear', 'Flegiar', 'Fleschar', etc.).
Flex

The lands were among those inherited by James Douglas in 1572 along with the Barony of Hawick and listed among the property of the Baron in 1594. In a land valuation of 1627 it is listed as ‘estimat to 100 merks in stok, parsonage 2 bolls, vicarage 5 lbs’. A charter for the land was given to John Gledstains in 1653, when it was described as ‘extending to five merks, old extent’, and it was probably the main residence for the Gledstains of Whitlaw. It was still valued at 5 merks (of old extent) when inherited by Francis Gledstains of Whitlaw in 1672. John Stoddart was listed there among the poor of Hawick Parish in 1694. Walter Martin and William Henderson were tenants there in 1702. Robert Boyd purchased the farm in 1751 and in 1753 march stones were laid out along the burnside to mark the boundary with the Common. John Laing lived there in the late 18th century, and William Eliott Lockhart in the late 19th. By 1788 the lands of Flex had been disjoined from those of Whitlaw, were valued at £144 10s 9d and were owned by Mrs. Elliot of Borthwickbrae; it had the same value and owner in 1811. William Scott ‘at Flex’ was also recorded in 1811. Henry Scott Riddell also lived here for several years, walking 9 miles to preach at Teviothead. In about 1874 it was recorded being owned by Allan Eliott Lockhart. The Cornet and followers come back to Hawick this way after the ‘Orderin o the Curds an Cream’. A fanciful tradition states that an underground passage led from the farmhouse to Goldielands Tower. J.P. Alison designed a house (or alterations perhaps) in 1896. An oval-shaped hollowed stone found there is in the Museum – ‘To Flex and Wulliestruther, St. Leonards, Haggisha’, And Hawick there is in the middle, The centre o’ them a’ [WL] (also spelled ‘Flecks’, ‘Flexis’ and other variants; it is ‘Flex’ in 1296, ‘Flexis’ in 1458, ‘Flekkis’ in 1464/5 and 1511, ‘Flex’ in 1514, ‘Flekkis’ in 1559 and 1572, ‘Fleks’ in 1594 and 1615 and ‘Flexes’ in 1717; it is marked ‘Flecks’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map and ‘Flax’ on the Buccleuch survey of in 1718; the origin of the name is obscure, but ‘fleck’ is a Scots word for a cattle pen made of hurdles).

Flex (fleks) n. Alexander (14th C.) witness to a charter granting the lands of Altonburn to the Kers in 1357/8. All of the other men were from Roxburghshire, and so presumably these were the lands near Hawick. He must have been related to the earlier Richard. ‘Alexander de Flex a Scotsman’ was ordered to be released from the Tower of London in 1356. Probably the same ‘Alexandro de fleckys’ witnessed a charter for lands in Lessuden being granted to Melrose Abbey in about 1370. Richard (13th C.) recorded as being ‘de Flex’ in Roxburghshire when he signed the Raman Rolls in 1296. His seal shows a crescent enclosing a star (suggesting a connection with the Scots perhaps) and the name ‘S’RICARDI DE FLECHIS’. He was also on a jury in 1304 at Dumfries (made up of men from Dumfriesshire and Roxburghshire) to decide on the privileges claimed by Robert Bruce, Earl of Carrick (later King); he was there ‘Richard del Fleckes’. His lands were presumably those at the Flex, near Hawick.

Flex Back Burn (fleks-bawk-burn) n. another name for Acreknowe Burn (it is so described in the 1767 description of the Common).

Flex Burn (fleks-burn) n. stream running from Williestruther down to the Slitrig.

Flex Lodge Park (fleks-loj-pawrk) n. name of the field on Hawick Common to the north-west of the Flex farm.

Flex Mairech East (fleks-märch-oost) n. enclosure on Hawick Common Moor to the east of Williestruther cottage.

Flex Mairech West (fleks-märch-west) n. field on Hawick Common to the east of Williestruther Loch and south of the field called ‘Flex Mairech East’.

the Flex Stakes (thu-fleks-stäks) n. race run at the Common Riding. An amount of £500 was left by James Elliot (d.1923), farmer of the Flex, with the interest to be run for yearly.

fley (fli, flī) v. poet. to scare, frighten, put to flight, make flee – ‘And whiles a wee bit prayer began, To fley away the ghaists and witches’ [JT], ‘He was fley’d oot o’ his wuts’ [GW] (cf. flei).

flicher (flī-chur) n., arch. a flake (also flitch and flichter).

flicht (flīch) n., arch., poet. flight – ‘... The gems that whirl in crazy flicht Mann end in draiglin’ lifeless mud’ [WP].

flicht (flīch) n., arch. a flake (of soot or snow), a small speck (e.g. in porridge or other food), a mote of dust – ‘... where yin braiths God’s air clear an no suddit wui suitty flicht’ [ECS] (also flicher and flichter).

Flitch (flīch) n. former name for an area in Liddesdale, south-east of Castleton, close to the Border. It is now marked by ‘Flight’s Moss’ on the Ordnance Survey map, although the area around the farm ‘The Flatt’ near Kershopefoot may also be meant. It is recorded as ‘Flygh’ in the c.1376 rental roll of Liddesdale, with a value of 20 shillings. The farm of ‘Hieflycht’ is listed in 1541, with a value of 3 pounds and tenanted by Martin Nixon. Matthew and John Nixon were there in 1544. The eastern part was inherited by William Elliot of Dinlabyre in 1667 (and apparently again in 1691), having earlier been held by his great-grandfather William of Hartsgarth. John Wilson was tenant there in 1694 and James Lamb also a resident. In the 1718 survey of Scott of Buccleuch lands it appears to be combined with Kirndean and Clintwood. Robert Robertson was shepherd there in 1797. It is marked on Mercator’s 1595 map of Scotland as ‘Flightes cha.’ and on other roughly contemporary maps as ‘Flightes cast’, suggesting there was confusion over whether there was a chapel or a castle there. It is probably the ‘Flygh superior’ listed as a 36-shilling land. The remains of a farmstead are located near the head of the Boghall Burn. The New Statistical Account mentions 2 ‘camps’ on the farm, one round and the other square (it is ‘Flycht’ in 1516, ‘Fleght’ in 1544 and ‘Flight’ in 1694; Blaeu’s 1654 map shows ‘East Flicht’ and ‘West Flicht’, with ‘Flicht’s Fell’ above, while it is still marked on Stobie’s 1770 map and is labelled as a ruin on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

flichter (flich-tur) v., arch., poet. to flutter, to fly about lightly (as snow) – ‘He little ken’d my heart was flighting fain. My winsome lad! O gin ye war my ain!’ [CPM], ‘...an the flichterin burdies daibbelt an dookeet [ECS], ‘The bum leaves flichtered crinklin’ Wi’ the first soft flecks o’ snaw’ [WL].

flichter (flich-tur) n., arch. a flake (of soot or snow) (also ficher and flight).

flichty (flich-tee) adj., arch. flighty – ‘...proving yet again that it’s no’ the weemen-folk that’s flighty!’ [DH].

flid (flid) n. a flood – ‘...And calm’st the raging, roaring fluid, When dashing wild’ [RDW], ‘The neist big fluide ill show them fun’ [WKN], ‘...shurelie in the fludes o’ grit waters thaye salhna cum nie untill him’ [HSR], ‘Oo’ve a hist’ry theae the Fluid Oo’ve a Moat where Druids stuid’ [TK], ‘Through fire and fluid the real auld gutter bluid Aye circled roond the auld green Moat’ [TK] (also spelled ‘fluid’ and ‘flude’ and probably formerly pronounced fliid).

fliddin (flid-din) n. a flooding – ‘The fluidin’s gey bad aa the watergate lang, – I’ve a fine pair o’ towels, as cheap as they’re strang!’ [WL].

the Flid Merk (thu-flid-merk) n. name sometimes used for the plaque at Towerdykeside, marking the level of the Slitrig flood of 1846. The level was marked annually by James Smith, Cornet that year, and a painter to trade. The plaque was placed there by him and his friends in 1902, with the inscription ‘Flood Mark July 1846’.

flids (flidz) n., pl. the Teviot floods every few years, with significant floods in 1796, 1806, 1846, 1926, 1938, 1948, 1953, 1955, 1963, 1977, 2005 (twice, the October one being the worst in living memory), 2015 (with 600 people being evacuated from their homes), etc. A record of 1782 notes damage to the bridges along the Mosspaul to Haremoss Turnpike (essentially the A7). Dramatic floods at Minto are reported in 1783 and 1789, and a torrential rain-storm in 1806. The flood of November 1938 swept away the Victoria Bridge and the Mansfield Bridge. The Slitrig can also rise rapidly, and perhaps even more dramatically. The most famous such event being the Great Flid of August 1767, when the river rapidly rose 22 feet (about 6.5 m) above its normal level, sweeping away many houses, as well as the old Corn Mill, and drowning 2 people. The Teviot flood of 1796 carried away part of the burial ground at Hassendean. Sir Walter Scott describes the flood of 1806, when the lower floor of Minto House was filled with water and trees and livestock sailed past his own house. This flood also devastated Rulewater, particularly at Bonchester Brigend. The 1806 flood was also bad around Denholm, sweeping away the bridge over the Dean Burn, and removing the remains of the burial ground at Hassendean. The flood of 29th July 1846 swept away Slitrig Crescent footbridge and its level is marked by a brass plaque in Towdykeside about 1

2015 (twice, the October one being the worst in living memory), 2015 (with 600 people being evacuated from their homes), etc. A record of 1782 notes damage to the bridges along the Mosspaul to Haremoss Turnpike (essentially the A7). This flood also devastated Rulewater, particularly at Bonchester Brigend. The 1806 flood was also bad around Denholm, sweeping away the bridge over the Dean Burn, and removing the remains of the burial ground at Hassendean. The flood of 29th July 1846 swept away Slitrig Crescent footbridge and its level is marked by a brass plaque in Towdykeside about 1.5 m (5 feet) above pavement level. This flood followed a tremendous thunderstorm starting between 7 and 8 o’clock, with the water level rising steadily, the town bells belling rung at midnight, and the level peaking at 14 feet above normal shortly afterwards. The Auld Brig was again blocked by debris and effectively dammed the Slitrig. Lynnwood Cauld and 2 bridges over the Slitrig were swept away. Walls, cauldps, carts, trees, cattle, etc. were carried off. Silver Street became part of the river, water ran over the Tower Knowe and down the Mill Port and water flowed down the High Street as far as the Round Close, forming streams to the Teviot down several closes. The Teviot also overflowed, causing great damage over a wider area, and sweeping away iron railings at the Haugh. There was similar damage in Teviotdale, Rulewater (where the river was said to be 10–12 feet higher than normal and Hobsburn bridge was lost) Liddesdale (where some cottages were washed away) and elsewhere, with a rider drowned while returning from Langholm Common Riding. A stone in Newcastlecom commemorates the flood there, where water poured down the main street. In 1862 part of the Haugh flooded overnight on the Friday of the Common Riding, making conditions extremely wet for the Saturday races and games. The year 1948 also saw a major flood throughout the Borders, about which there is a book, ‘The Great Borders Flood of 1948’ by Lawson Wood. The Teviot’s highest flow rate (since recording began in 1963) was 142.4 m$^3$/s on 17th February 1997 – ‘On Hawick burst the flood’s resistance, Plough’d the paved streets, and tore the walls away. Floated high roofs, from whelmed fabrics torn; While pillar’d arches down the wave were borne’ [JL].

flitten (fli-tin) pp., arch. scolded, chided (past participle of flyte, noted by E.C. Smith).

flittin (fli-iin) n. a house removal, formerly applied to the moving of farm workers at Whitsun tide – ‘...the spinning wheel, ...was an indispensable top-piece to the bride’s home-going flitting’ [JAHM], ‘There’s flittings east, there’s flittings west. Their rents are rais’d anew ...’ [WH], ‘A sei there’s a flittin next door’, ‘At the fit o the brae a flitten was gaun on’ [ECS].

float-whey (föö-wha) n., arch. a dish made by boiling whey, particularly from ewe’s milk – ‘Flot quhaye, a common dish in the pastoral districts of Scotland, formed by bolininf the whey after it is expressed from the cheese curds, with a little meal and milk, when a species of very soft curd floats at the top’ [JL].

Flockhart (flok-hawr) n. William (16th C.) farmer at Hawthornside. ‘Williame Flockartis barne and yaird’ are listed in the 1562 Baronial dispute in Feu-Rule.

flocks (flosks) n., arch. waste wool or cotton used for stuffing mattresses and furniture – ‘Lift the tyke, that’s filled wi’ flocks ...’ [IJ].

Flodden (flö-din) n. battle of 9th September 1513, the Scots being led by King James IV, and Henry VIII’s English by Thomas Howard, Earl of Surrey. The motivation was to divert some of the English troops away from their French campaign. However, the battle was disastrous for the Scots, with Surrey bringing his forces in behind them, making retreat back to Scotland nearly impossible once things started to go badly. The battle commenced about 4 p.m. and went on into the night. Eventually James was dead, along with 1 archbishop, 4 abbots, 12 earls, 17 lairds, perhaps 400 knights and as many as 10,000 others. Borderers under Huntly and Hume played a significant role and suffered huge losses. Sir William Douglas and most of the Hawick men were also killed. One exception was John Chisholme, who returned with the family pennon, although his brother was killed. In the wake of Flodden the Borders was left with almost no defence against the ravages of Surrey and Dacre – ‘Sons of heroes slain at Flodden! Met to ride and trace our common’ [JH], ‘Scotia felt thine ire, O Oden! On the bloody field of Flodden ...’ [JH], ‘Green Flodden!
Flodden Field

The Flooers o the Forest revived for the 2013 Flodden quincentenary, sung by Michael Aitken.

The Flodden Memorial (thu-flo-din-me-mô-ree-ul) n. memorial on Flodden Field, erected in 1910. The Flodden Memorial Committee, representing both sides of the Border, was chaired by Sir George Douglas. The monument consists of a celtic cross of grey Aberdeen granite, 12 feet 6 inches high on a rough-hewn granite and concrete cairn. The inscription reads simply ‘Flodden 1513. To the brave of both nations. Erected 1910’. It is located on Piper’s Hill near Branxton.

the Flooer o Rankleburn (thu-floor-ô-rang-kul-burn) n. nickname of Mary Scott.

The Flooers o the Forest (thu-floo-urz-ô-thu-to-rist, -flow-) n. ancient song whose words exists in 3 separate versions, written by Mrs. Patrick Cockburn (Alison Rutherford), Jean Elliot (of Minto) and Mrs. John Hunter. The tune is recorded in the early 17th century and may not originally have had words. It is also unclear whether the song originally had a connection with the battle of Flodden. Jean Elliot’s version of the words made the song a lament for the death of James IV and other Scotsmen at Flodden. It was published anonymously, and only identified with Elliot later. In Selkirk this version is known as ‘the Liltin’, and the tune is played after the Casting of the Colours. Alison Cockburn’s lyrics appear to be about a financial crisis, and were probably written earlier than Elliot’s (although not published until 1765). The song was immensely popular in the 19th century, being regularly sung in Hawick at the Colour Bussing and similar events. The tune is played internationally at funerals and remembrance ceremonies, where it is often referred to simply as ‘the Lament’ – ‘I’ve heard the lilting, at the yowe-milking, Lasses a-lilting before dawn o’ day; But now they are moaning on ilk green loaning: ‘The Flowers of the Forest are a’ wede away’ [T].

The Flooer o Yarrow (floors-oo-ri-dor, -flower) n. nickname for Mary Scott, popularised in a ballad of the same name. She was from Dryhope Tower and married Walter Scott of Harden about 1576. She was mother of 6 sons and at least 4 daughters. It is also said that she raised another boy who was found in the spoil from a Cumberland raid (like ‘Whaup o the Rede), and grew to be a poet, composing some of the Border ballads – ‘’Tis Yarrow’s fairest flower, who through the gloom Looks wistful for her lover’s dancing plume’ [JL], ‘…Amang them aa there was name to narrow Auld Harden’s leddy, the ‘Flooer o Yarrow’’ [WL].

Flooery (floors-oo-ree) adj. flowery – ‘And yonder is the Lover’s Lane And Lynnwood’s flo’ry braes’ [GD], ‘Fornent iz, athort the fer seide o Teiot’s flooery vale …’ [ECS], ‘Now a’ m no yin for flooery talk, Or prone ti airs n’ graces. A’ll no pretend ti suffer fools, A’ say it ti their faces’ [IHS/GoM].

Floors Castle (floors-caw-sul) n. castle near Kelso, built by John, 1st Duke of Roxburgh, between 1718 and 1740. It was designed by William Adam, and extended around 1839 by William Playfair. It is the home of the Duke and Duchess of Roxburgh, and the largest inhabited house in Scotland. It includes collections of art, porcelain, taxidermy and tapestries. James II was killed here when a cannon exploded in 1460, and it was ‘Greystoke’ in the Tarzan film of 1984. The entire estate is enclosed by a continuous high wall, with a few lodge houses, and contains terraced woodland and open parkland (also formerly ‘Fleurs’; the origin of the name is probably just Old English for ‘floor’ or ‘ground’ and first appears as ‘le fliris’ in 1516).

Floopy docken (floors-oo-ree-do-kin) n., arch. goosefoot, Chenopodium Bonus Henricus or Chenopodium album (named for the apparently powdery leaves).

Florence (floors-in) n. (d.1210) nobleman and cleric, known as ‘Florentius’, he was son of the Count of Holland, and also nephew of both King Malcolm IV and William I. He became Bishop of Glasgow in 1202, but resigned in 1207 before he was consecrated. He was also Chancellor of Scotland. He died in Zeeland. His seal bore the figure of a young man seated at a lectern with a book, with a rod of office in one hand, and has the words ‘SIGIL. FLOREN[TI] GLAS[GUENSIS ELECT].

Florida (flores-ta) n. farm in Liddesdale, situated just before Old Castleton on the B6357. Between the house and the river lies an earthwork, possibly a homestead of mediaval date, which lies partially in woods and has been partly eroded by the river. The old house of Dykeraw lay somewhere to the east in what is now forest. John Turnbull and family were there in at least 1841–68. William Hislop was there in 1841 and John Scott and his family in 1851.

Floss Burn (floss-burn) n. stream joining the Leap Burn to form the Lang Burn near Langburnshiel, which then becomes the Slitrig. It is joined by Kiln Sike below Robert’s Linn and had several other waterfalls on burns that join it from the east. It marks the start (or end) of the Catrail (‘floss’ is an old Scots word for boggy ground).

Fodderlee (fo-dur-lee) n. farms and general area on the east side of the Rule valley between Hallrule and Billewer. David Shiel was tenant there in 1567. The lands there were acquired by Adam French from Jedburgh Abbey in 1569 and were split into the East and West farms in the 17th century. In 1643 Helen Turnbull held lands there valued at £80 and James Turnbull £180. It was among lands whose superiority was inherited by daughters of George Scott (brother of Sir Walter of Whitslade) in 1670. In 1678 the land tax on £100 was paid by Mark Turnbull and on £80 by ‘the widow in fotherlie’. The lands (or perhaps just their superiority) were among those inherited by William Kerr of Abbotrule in 1680. Robert Kerr of Fodderlee was first recorded in 1685, and appears to have owned half of the lands. Mark Turnbull was tenant in the late 1600s. John Turnbull, John Kerr and George Scott were recorded as tenants there in 1694. The east lands passed to Robert Kerr’s daughter Mary (who also married a Kerr) and then grandson Andrew. In 1757 it passed to Robert Thomson, whose mother was Margaret Kerr. Andrew Oliver, ‘Fodderlee-birks’, is recorded in 1784. ‘Fodderlee, Fodderlee-bank head, and Fodderlee-birks’ are recorded in 1795 as parts of Hob Kirk that are closer to Bedrule Kirk than their own kirk; these same lands were among those moved to Hob Kirk when Abbotrule was suppressed. James Davidson was tenant there in 1797. The modern map shows Old Fodderlee, Easter Fodderlee and Wester Fodderlee, this last being closest to where the Fodderlee Burn joins the Rule Water. A report in 1836 describes how a cairn was removed near there ‘near to a place where tradition says a battle had been fought’ (it is ‘Fodderlie’ in 1567, ‘Foderly’ in 1569, ‘Foderley’ in 1587 and 1588, ‘Fodderlie’ in 1643, ‘Fotherlie’ 1670, ‘fotherlie’ in 1678, transcribed ‘Foderlie’ in 1680, ‘Fetherlie’ in 1690, ‘Fetherlie’ in 1694 and 1707 and ‘Fatherlee’ in 1797; it is marked as just ‘Fodderlie’ on Gordon’s c. 1650 map and Blaen’s 1654 map; also written Fotherlie, see also Auld Fodderlee, Easter Fodderlee and Wester Fodderlee).

(fo-dur-lee-baunmach heed) n. former farm near the modern Easter Fodderlee. It is shown on Stobie’s 1770 map.

Fodderlee Burn
(fo-dur-lee-burn) n. stream flowing into the Rule Water from the south, past Abbotrule. A memorial plaque by the road marks the site of the Sclaterford, where there was a skirmish between a large English raiding party and some local forces in 1513 (also spelled ‘Fodderlie’ etc.; the origin is probably simply ‘the foddler meadow’).

fog (fog) n., arch. moss, particularly as used for thatching or for packing between slates – ‘Item for leading the slates . . . Item for fogg gathering and carrying’ [PR1713], ‘. . . shall not be allowed either fog or fuel, neither to cast, win, or lead peats, turfs, or divots, or lead clay or mortar out of the Common . . . ’ [JW1719]. ‘The fog or moss, which grows on the edge of the spring, and is sprinkled with the water, is about eight inches high’ [RAB] (also written ‘fogg’).

foggage (fo-gage) n., arch. winter grazing, the second growth after the hay has been cut – ‘They are supported during the winter by the foggage and coarse hay . . . ’ [RAB], ‘. . . then the lambs were put to the charge of the Town Herd of Hawick . . . and continued on the stubble foggage’ [C&L1767], ‘. . . a body can find the praisious scents o field an foggee’ [ECS].

foggie (fo-ghee) adj., arch. mossy, covered in moss or lichen – ‘. . . an clappet masel doon a meenint on ov a foggie bank’ [ECS], ‘We’ve speel’d upon its foggie stem, an’ dern’d amang its green’ [JoHa] (also ‘foggy’).

foir (foir) adj., arch. fore, situated in front – ‘. . . all hennis, cockis, and cappones, be cuttit and schorne in the wing, and all young foulis be cuttit in the foir toe . . . ’ [BR1655].

foir (foir) adj., arch. word of unknown meaning, possibly an error for ‘feir’, meaning in good health – ‘The quhilk day, Adam Gowanlocke in Hoitt, having apprehendit ane for meir, quhyt mainet and quhyt taillit . . . ’ [BR1641].

fold (fold) adj., arch. made of turf, earthen – ‘. . . there was a fold dyke built on the Common by the possessors of Fenwick, which dyke was levelled by order of the Magistrates and rendered useless’ [C&L1767] (probably an anglicised version of fail).

Folepul (fol-pul) n. former lands in Liddesdale recorded on a rental roll from about 1376, and listed under the ‘Foresta’ section. They are valued at 40 pence. Their location is unknown (this could be a transcription error, although it is unclear for what). It could be the same place listed as ‘Fopillis’ in the 1541 roll, when it was valued at 2 shillings, but vacant. It was possibly related to Fawhope Knowe.

folk (fök) n. people, mankind, inhabitants, one’s family – ‘Some folk think a’ other folk gowks . . . ’ [FL], ‘Ee canna pass keind – it be-longs eer foak, man!’ [ECS], ‘. . . an gliffin auld folk an bairns, baith’ [ECS]. The population in 1851 was about 9000. Hawick’s present population is around 16,000, and the recorded peak was in 1891, with a total of 19,204 people – ‘But I like auld Hawick, and her folks I like, Her men and maidens free’ [FH], ‘Hear me, ye Folk o’ Teviotdale, I’m here ti tell nae flatterin’ tale’ [WP] (sometimes written ‘foak’; cf. the older fouk).

folli (fo-li, -la, -lee) v. to follow – ‘yow yins folli oo’, often used specifically to refer to supporting the Cornet on horseback – ‘hei folli maist years’, ‘. . . and in the follihin year ti a terrible place cad foothy (foo-tee) adj., adv., arch. involving cheating, underhand – ‘Footy play’ [GW], v. to cheat, act unfairly.

fooze (fooz) n. fuzz, a light, fluffy, powdery substance – ‘Half way throwe the night heiw was produce frae his pocket a half soaked pandrop covered in fooze and say ‘shiel!’’ [IWL].

foozy (foo-zee) adj., arch. spongy, soft, velvety to the touch (also foizzly).

Fopillis (fo-pilz) n. former lands in Liddesdale, listed on the 1541 rental roll. The entry comes between Howden and Dawson, suggesting the location is in the upper part of the valley. The lands were valued at 2 shillings and were vacant at that time. It is possible this is the same as ‘Folepul’ listed on the c.1376 rental roll and possibly related to Fawhope Knowe.

for (for) conj. because, since – ‘she was roused for she hedni been tellt about eet’ (this sense more common than in Standard English), prep. on account of, because of – ‘The said day, Margaret Ainslie, servitrix to Allan Deans, millar, being accused for the stealing of monies ... ’ [BR], ‘Hei taught oo rugby, cricket, roonders, Country dancin, softba’, gym And A dinni mind tellin ee A was gliffed stiff for him’ [IWL], with the purpose of, with the end in view of – ‘Then the lasses began to the barn for to thrang’ [JoHa], in favour of – ‘A’m no for ony mair’, ‘Ir ee for a bit dander? foraye (for-aye) adv., arch. always, forever – ‘The cunsil o’ the Lord stan’s foraye ... ’ [HSR], ‘That he shud still leve foraye ... ’ [HSR].

forbeit (for-bit) pp., arch. forbade – ‘... ande gif it sal happyn me or myne aieris, as God forbeit it do ... ’ [SB1470].

Forbes (förbz) n. Archibald (19th/20th C.) son of John, he took over the running of the nurseries business in 1909 and was also President of the Hawick Horticultural Society. Sir Arthur (1623–95) 1st Earl of Granard, son of Sir Arthur of Castle Forbes in Ireland. He commanded a Royalist Scottish force in the 1650s. In December 1653 he came down from the north with 80–100 men and with Andrew Kerr of Sunlaws and Chatto as prisoner, and stopped at Borthwickbrae. Pursued by an English Commonwealth force, they were easy to follow in the snow and there was a skirmish at Phillip in the upper Borthwick valley. The English were victorious, but Forbes managed to escape, apparently recuperating in a cottage near Glasgow. He later fought for the loyalist cause in the north in 1654, and was captured at Glenlyon. He returned to Ireland, was made Earl and joined the cause of William III. He is buried in Sligo. John (1841/2–1909) proprietor of the Buccleuch Nurseries on Slitrig Crescent. Born in Aberfeldy, Perthshire, he came to Hawick in 1867 as gardener at Wilton Lodge for David Pringle, later becoming tenant of the gardens. He started up his own business in 1870 at the Dowemont Nurseries, then after about ten years moved into larger premises on Slitrig Crescent, the land granted by the Duke of Buccleuch. Named the Buccleuch Nurseries, they became famous throughout Britain, and were a prominent sight from the railway. The gardens received a royal warrant and the name was changed to the Royal Nurseries in 1907. It then became a private limited company in 1908. He won many awards for his floral displays. He was Councillor for Slitrig Ward for 3 years, and long involved with the running of St. Andrew’s Church. Liliias Magdalene nee Scott (1918–2013) daughter of composer Francis George Scott, she was born in Glasgow. She was known as a singer, and published poetry over about a 75 year period, some of it in Scots.
Forbes’ Nursery

Forbes’ Nursery (förbs-nsur-ee, förb-zeezn-sur-ee) n. another name for the Buccleuch Nurseries.

forby (for-bi) adv. besides, in addition, moreover – ‘he played rugby an’ fitba an’ din rimin forby’, ‘...an’ ther is none apon yirth that I desyre forby thee’ [HSR], ‘Forbye this he refusset the taabermakle o’ Joseph ...’ [HSR], ‘Forbye, there was naither a bus nor a clud in the lift to make a shadow’ [BCM1880], ‘...sellin hosiers forby in the ‘Spotted Hoose’’ [IW], ‘Ye’ve wasted mony a guise quess, Forbye white paper; An’ I think but on the time ye kill, Ye foolish creature’ [WtD], ‘...To herry if they daur a nest, forby, But birds had fled’ [WFC], ‘...A lassie sings at her darg forbye, As she busies but and ben’ [WL], ‘And – she’s juist middit – Wants, forbye, To get the auld man’s Denner pie’ [DH], prep. except – ‘...an, forbye, it was lang or nicht!’ [ECS], ‘What the devil mair wad ye hae forby a guie wage and the Common-Riding’ [DMW] (also spelled ‘forbye’ and ‘forbye’).

Ford (förd) n. W. Inglis (20th C.) 6th Secretary of the Congregational Kirk.

Fordel (för-dul) n. ancient name of Melrose (‘Acres of Little Fordell’ is still recorded in the early 1600s).

forder (for-dur) adv., arch. furthermore, in addition – ‘...and forder, vnder the paynne of perjury, diffamation, and to know hath fayth nor credit in the law ...’ [SB1585] (also the later furder).

fords (fordz) n. before the erection of the Teviot Bridge in 1741, the river had to be forded, or when unfordable it was crossed by ferry at the Coble Pool. The main fords were at the foot of Walter’s Wynd to enter town through the North Port or near Parkdaill (sometimes called the Howe Ford) connecting to a footpath which went uphill to join the main road at Longbalk. There are still fords at the bottom of Burnfoot, Newmill, Priesthaugh and on many local farms, which can be used when the water is low.

fordweblit (for-dwe-blee, -blit) adj., poet. enfeebled, very weak – ‘I am fordweblit an’ sair brokin: I hae rairet bie reesen o’ the wanrest o’ my hait’ [HSR].

Fordyce (for-dis) n. Elizabeth Fordyce ‘Lizzie’ (20th C.) proprietor of a grocer’s shop at the corner of Trinity Street and Earl Street in the mid-20th century. Rev. Robert minister of West Port Free Church in the late 19th century, until about 1894. He was the second minister there and a native of the Shetland Isles. He also helped fill the vacancy at St. George’s 1879–80.

forebree (for-bree) n., poet. forehead, temple – ‘...thy forebrees ar like ane piece o’ ane pumgranate within thy loiks’ [HSR].

fore-breist (for-breest) n., arch. the front of anything, particularly the front row of the gallery in a church (noted by E.C. Smith; also front-breist).

fore-end (for-end) n., arch. first part, front portion, opposite of back-end – ‘...an hundredth punds Scotts out of the fore-end of the eighteinpences gathered for the militia money in 1685 ...’ [BR1685], ‘...and that of the forend of the stent imposed upon the toun for that and other ends’ [BR1701] (also written ‘fore end’).

foremanit (for-nä-mi) pp., arch. fornamed, previously mentioned – ‘Witnesses to the subscripion of ye fornamit persones valuars of the said lands ...’ [PR1627], ‘...in exerceing the said office to my vtheres foirnameit freindes and overseeres ...’ [SB1633] (there are spelling variants).

forenicht (for-nicht) n., poet. evening, time between twilight and bed-time – ‘Sae it seemed that the least the lad could dae Was to lift a wheen kye in the forenicht gray’ [WL].

foren in (for-nin) n. morning, forenoon, period between dawn and noon, or sometimes more specifically the late morning – ‘what er ee daein this forenin?’, ‘...so he was in a bad tuin a’ foremin’ [DH] (also written ‘foremien’; often distinguished from mornin, which is earlier).

forepairt (for-pår) n., arch. the earlier portion of a period of time (noted by E.C. Smith).

the Fore Raw see the Fore Raw the Fore Raw (thu-for-raw) n. row of pended tenements that stood on the south-east side (i.e. left hand side on the way up the hill) of what is now Drumlanrig Square. The entrance to William Lockie’s Mill was there. It also once held the Teribus Arms and the West-end Mission (it is ‘Front row’ in Pigot’s 1837 directory; presumably it was ‘Fore’ relative to St. Mary’s Kirk, with the Back Row being further away).

Fore Raw (för-row) n. Fore Row, name used for a row of houses in Wilton Dean on the 1841 census. By 1851 it was known as ‘Front Row’, and was numbered from 1 to 6. This referred to a block of houses on the north side of the Dean Road, where it meets the Overhall Road. The name distinguished it from Burn Row, which was lower down, and Upper Row, which was up the small track above the green. The names were probably never in general use and disappeared by the time of the 1861 census.

foresait (för-säit) n., arch. the front seating area, front part of a pew or gallery – ‘... anent ye precedenie in ye samen in ye foresait of ye loft att the head thereof’ [PR1715].

forest (fo-rist) n., arch. a preserve, a tract of land, often bare and hilly, upon which deer were traditionally hunted – ‘... ‘Trees’, retorted the gillie; ‘wha ever heard o’ trees in a forest?’’ [RB] (note, the former use of this word did not imply trees!).

Forest (fo-rist) n. Jean (17th/18th C.) Hawick woman who ran an inn in the late 1600s and early 1700s. She was listed among those who subscribed to the fund for the new Kirk bell in Hawick in 1693/4. She was also listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick ‘eist the water’ in 1694. In 1702 she was fined for allowing people to be drinking in her house after 10 o’clock at night. Her name is written ‘Jeane Forrest’ and ‘Jane Forrest’.

forestair (för-stäir) n., arch. an outside staircase at the front of a building – ‘A conspicuous feature of many of the dwellings was the ‘out’ or ‘forestairs’ projecting onto the streets’ [VK&M]. Many of the examples on the High Street were removed around 1781 when the streets were paved, and more were removed by order of the road trustees, with the Council paying more than £50 to have the work done. One of last sets in Hawick was removed in 1884 when the old Town Hall was demolished. Perhaps the last example is in St. Mary’s Place – ‘Paid expense of fore stairs, taken away by order of trustees, 55 18 l’ [BR1792] (also ootstair).

forestall (för-stawl) v., arch. to buy goods before they reach market in order to resell them at a higher price – ‘Thomas Howison, merchant, is fined for forestalling two bolts of beir from the Lady Newtoune, and ane from Gladstanes’ [1699]. ‘Four Hawick fleshers are fined £40 Scots each for forestalling the sheep market, by buying of sheep and lambs, and instantly, for gain, reselling them to the butchers of Jedburgh’ [BR1700].

forestaller (för-staw-lur) n., arch. someone who profits by buying up goods before they get to market in order to increase the price and resell them – ‘Various persons are fined ‘for breach of the proclamation of His Majesty’s Privy Council, against regrating of victuals and forestallers’’ [JW1699].

the Forest Club (thu-fo-rist-klub) n. dining and coursing club, based around Selkirk, also sometimes known as the ‘Ettrick Forest Club’. It was established in 1788 by 13 lairds of the Ettrick Forest, modelled on similar clubs in Edinburgh. Members met once a month (outside winter) in the County Hotel, Selkirk. Coursing was introduced in 1794 and lasted for 60 years. Sir Walter Scott (of Abbotsford) was a member. Michaela Reid wrote a history of the club in 2000.

Forester (fo-rees-tur) n. Alan (16th C.) tenant of ‘Syskett’ in 1541. This was probably in the far south of Roxburghshire and he was probably related to the Foresters who possessed neighbouring lands. Andrew (16th C.) recorded in 1541 as the tenant of Ryleknowe, near the southern tip of Roxburghshire. Probably the same Andrew was also tenant of ‘Avirholme’ along with Lancelot. He was probably related to Simon, who was tenant of the nearby Burnfoot. Henry (18th C.) farmer at Langraw in Castleton Parish according to the 1788-94 Horse Tax Rolls. James (15th/16th C.) recorded in a 1510 list of associates of Robert Elliot of Redheugh who received respite for their crimes. His name appears as ‘Forestare’. In 1515/6 he was recorded in another remission to Robert Elliot of Redheugh and others, where he is listed as ‘in Grenehauche’. This could be Greenhaugh in Northumberland, but seems more likely to be Green in Liddesdale. In 1516 he was also part of the remission given to William Elliot of Larriston and his associates. John (14th/15th C.) cleric of Glasgow Diocese. He was Archdeacon of Glasgow 1409-14 and is recorded as Archdeacon of Teviotdale in 1418. John (16th C.) recorded in 1532 as ‘Johny Forestar’. He is listed along with Sym (to whom he was surely related), Croziers and Elltis, who were the subject of a commission ordered by the King to capture them, for the killing of Thomas Dalgleish and Adam Turnbull in Teviotdale. He could be the same as one of the other contemporary Johns. John ‘Shake Buckler’ (16th C.) listed among the Liddesdale men denounced as rebels in 1535 for a raid on the farm at Craik. His name is givn as ‘John Forrestare, called Schaik-buklak’. His servant Ninian Gray is also listed, so he must have been a man of fair substance. John (16th C.) listed in the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale as tenant of Greenhaughshaw. It seems reasonable to assume he was related to James in Greenhaugh (his son perhaps), and that he was related to the tenants of nearby farms with the same surbame, namely Alan, Andrew, Lancelot, Simon and William. John (17th C.) resident at Hudshouse in Castle- ton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. John of Stanegarthside (17th/18th C.) nephew of Nicholas, from whom he inherited ‘Greina, Purviven and Burnemouth’ in Liddesdale in 1693. Lancelot (16th C.) joint tenant of ‘Avirholme’, along with Andrew, in the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale. Robert of Stanegarthside (d.1598) buried at Staplegordon Church in Cumbria. He may be the Forster of Stanegarthside who killed William Armstrong near where the Kershope Burn meets the Liddel. Simon ‘Sim’ (16th C.) recorded in 1532 as ‘Symme Forestar’. He is listed along with Johnnie (to whom he was surely related), Croziers and Elliots, who were the subject of a commission ordered by the King to capture them, for the killing of Thomas Dalgleish and Adam Turnbull in Teviotdale. He may be the same as the tenant in Burnfoot in 1541. Simon (16th C.) tenant of Burnfoot (on the Tinnis Water) in southern Liddesdale, according to the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale. He was probably related to Andrew and Lancelot, who possessed neighbouring farms. William (15th C.) held the benefice of Cavers Parish from about 1450. He could have been from the Torwood or perhaps Corstorphine branches of that family. He resigned Cavers in 1467, with the Pope issuing an edict for the appointment of the new priest, previous appointments (including presumably his) being made by the monks of Melrose. William (16th C.) recorded in the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale as tenant of Bennetholm. He was probably related to the other contemporary Foresters. William (17th C.) listed at Harwood among ‘The poor in Hawkich Parioch’ on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls (also written ‘Forrester’; once interchangeable with ‘Foster’).

the Foresters (thu-fo-rees-turz) n. a mutual aid society, once very active in Hawick. The Ancient Order of Foresters has its origins in the 18th century, and was established in its modern form in 1834. The Hawick Foresters’ court was once very important as a form of insurance for workers. The organisation used to turn out in local parades. The Roll of Honour of local members who fell in the wars was formerly in Orrock Church Halls and is now in the Museum.

the Foresters’ Hall (thu-fo-rees-turz-hal) n. hall on O’Connell Street, run by the Hawick branch of the Foresters, occupying the lower floor beneath the British Legion, formerly being part of Johnstone’s tea rooms. It was used for dance lessons, prayer meetings and other social functions, and closed around 1992.

fore-supertime (for-su-pur-tim) n., arch. evening, literally meaning the period between teatime and suppertime (E.C. Smith describes this as ‘probably now obsolete’ and ‘one of the few Scottish instances of identifying a period of the day by reference to a meal’).

foresome (fo-ri-sun) adv., arch. forward, eager, bold, lacking restraint – ‘...the Ettrick Shepherd ...was much rather blate than foresome ...’. (HSR) (cf. forrit).

Forkins (for-kinz) n. farm south of Hobkirk, near where the Wauchope, Harwood and Catlee Burns meet to form the Rule Water, on the west side of the bridge. It was also formerly known as ‘Forkins of Unthank’. There was once a blacksmith’s there, and in the 17th century there was an inn at this location, in use until the early 19th century; its remains lie among trees on the east side of the bridge, near the entrance lodge to Wolfelee. It was formerly on the main route from Hawick to Newcastle, until the new road was built via Bonchester Bridge in about the 1820s; this was also part of a drove road. There was also a local police station there in the latter part of the 19th century. The lands were sold by Thomas Scott of Stonedage to William Elliot of Wolfelee in 1757. Walter Amos was wright there in the late 18th century (also called ‘the Forkins’ and sometimes written ‘Forkings’); it was ‘Forkens’ on Stobie’s 1770 map; the origin of the name is probably from the division in the river, rather than the road, but there are no early records of the name).

the Forkins (thu-for-kinz) n. name used for the area where the Hermitage Water meets the Liddel Water in Liddesdale.

Forkins (for-kinz) n. former farmstead in the upper Borthwick valley. It is marked on Ainslie’s 1773 map, near where the Howpasley Burn joins, close to where the modern turns towards Craik.

forlaine (for-lain) pp., poet. forgotten, set aside – ‘The Lord redeims the saul o’ his servents; an’ nane o’ thame that trust in him sall be forlaine’ [HSR].

Forman (for-min) n. Sir John of Davine (d.bef. 1516) son of Nicholas. His brother Andrew held the Archbishopric and Primacy of Scotland, and was said to be one of the instigators for the Battle of Flodden. In 1502 he and his brother were granted the ward of the lands of Rutherford by James IV and he was one of the ‘tutors’ appointed to Helen, heiress of Rutherford. He was Sergeant Porter to James IV, and was knighted in 1503. In fact he married Helen Rutherford, who inherited the lands of Rutherford, Wells and Edgerston after the death of her brother Richard. Along with his wife, he was infeeted in these lands by the King in 1505 and 1506. In 1504 he (when referred to as ‘of Ruthirfurde’) was pardoned for being an accessory to the murder of Thomas Rutherford in Jedburgh Abbey. The lands of Rutherford, Wells and others were confirmed to him and his wife by James IV in 1511. He was one of the few Scots taken prisoner at the Battle of Flodden. He probably had a daughter who married William Gourlay of Kincraig. John (17th/18th C.) merchant in Hawick. He witnessed a baptism in 1702 (for tailor Walter Riddell, with baxter John ‘Weelands’ being the other witness). In 1706 he married Margaret ‘Weelands’. It is recorded in 1711 that the ‘half Ducatoon and twenty shillings Scots piece’ that he ‘pawnded’ to guarantee his marriage had not been claimed and so was given to the poor fund. It is unclear whether this donation was simply the intent, or whether something happened to the couple in the intervening years. They had a son John in 1707. Nicholas (d.1478/9) succeeded as Archdeacon of Teviotdale on the death of Patrick Hume in 1478. However, he died within only a few months, before he could be confirmed. Robert (19th/20th C.). His wife funded the Foreman Hall in Roberton, dedicated to his memory and that of her great-nephew, who was killed in WWI (also written ‘Foreman’).

Forman Hall (for-min-hal) n. community hall in Roberton, situated approximately opposite the church. It was designed by J.P. Alison and built in 1922/3. It was funded by Mrs. Forman of Borthwicke in memory of her husband Robert, and also her great-nephew, Lt. Campbell Ross, who was killed at Flanders in 1917. It also contains a monument to the Rev. Alexander of Huntlaw (d.c.1658) minister at Hassendean. He graduated from St. Andrews in 1603 and was ordained at Kailzie in 1613, then translated to Hassendean later in the same year. He was rebuked by the Presbytery in 1615 for ‘receiving the gudwife of Sintoun to the communion, notwithstanding he understood she was ane contemner both of her awin min. (Mr Alex. Hog, Ashkirk) and of the Word out of his mouth’ (whether this was an indication of religious dissent or a purely personal matter is unclear). He was one of the 55 ministers who signed the ‘Liberties of the Kirk’ protest to Parliament in 1617 and gave £20 towards building the library at the University of Glasgow in 1636. In 1626 there is a ‘letter of deliverance’ against him in favour of Thomas Turnbull of Knowe and Walter Scott of Acrum, probably relating to a debt or disputed teinds. In 1633 he was owed £333 6s 8d for his stipend in the inventory of the deceased Earl of Buccleuch, as well as £9 12s for the communion. In 1649 he was ‘invaded with a drawn sword’ by one of his parishioners, Robert Hislop. In 1655 (although this date may be an error) his son was served heir to his lands of Huntlaw. He appears to have continued as minister at Hassendean until 1658 and died before 1665, when the Presbytery met to decide what payment was due to his son. He was recorded in the 1663 Land Tax Rolls (although probably deceased by then), among owners of lands that were then in Hassendean Parish, when he paid for lands valued at £66 13s 4d; this was Huntlaw, which remained with his family for another couple of generations. He married Margaret Clerk and their children included William of Huntlaw, and Alexander, who became minister at Kirktoun. In 1665 his son William was served heir to his lands of Huntlaw. Archibald of Huntlaw (who rented Huntlaw to Thomas Turnbull of Knowe in 1703) was probably his grandson and Agnes, who married George Minto, was his great-granddaughter.

Rev. Alexander (c.1622–83) son of Alexander,
Forrester Forsaid

Robert Scott oy and air forsaid, his airis and minister at Hassendean. He graduated from Edinburgh University in 1642 and became minister at Kirkton in 1664. He remained minister there until his death, and sat on the local (Jedburgh Presbytery) at least in 1666. He is recorded in 1665 repaying the money owed by William Forrest (possibly his brother) to Walter Clerk. He paid the land tax on £66 13s 4d for Huntlaw in 1678. His ‘insicht and plenishing, with librarie, and abulziments of bodie’ were estimated to be about £200. He married Anna Douglas (d.1681), whose will is recorded in 1682. Their children were: Archibald; Richard; William (became a tailor’s apprentice in Edinburgh in 1691); Margaret (married James Mirrielies in Edinburgh in 1702); and Anna. His will is recorded in 1683. James (17th C.) one of the tenants in Mervinslaw according to a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. His name was given as ‘forsett’ (which could feasibly be another surname, such as Forsyth). Julie (1918–2004) born in Alloa, nephew of Colin, Robert Scott oy and air forsaid, his airis and Forrester-Paton (fo-ris-tur-pa˘-in) n. Rev.

Colin (1918–2004) born in Alloa, nephew of Ernest, an Indian missionary. He was educated in Moffat, Norfolk, Oxford University and London University. Ordained by the United Free Presbytery in 1944, he left for missionary work in Ghana. There he was involved with literature and translation, as well as ecumenical work. Both he and his wife became heavily involved in the Christian Council of Ghana. They returned to Britain in 1972 and the following year he became an associate minister in Hawick, connected with Wilton and Burnfoot. He retired in 1983, but was appointed Chaplain to the Queen in 1981 and Extra Chaplain to the Queen in Scotland in 1988. He married Jean Lorimer Crichton Miller in 1943 and they raised 3 children while in Ghana.

Forrì (fo-re˘, -ri) adj., arch. farrow, descriptive of a cow that is not pregnant (also written ‘farrow’).

Forrit (for-i˘) adj., adv. forward — ‘can ee stand a wee bit ferther forrit?’; ‘hei’s lookin’ forrit ti the Trades’, ‘…in kase the ríchtous pit foret thair han’s untiil iniquitie’ [HSR], ‘…so will Maister Melrose o’ Hopehill please come forrit at aince tae assist in gettin’ the dammed horse oot o’ the dam’ [JEDM], ‘At yeh shop-door a motor stuid, an forrit A gaed ti finnd oot wahe was ocht eet’ [ECS], ‘To kill or free I forrit ran – Whan on my shoorder was his han’” [DH], ‘…and I stepit forrit to gie him the sad news’ [DH], ‘Burns was nae doobt loonk forrit ti meitin um but fund um ti be a bit o a disappointment’ [IWL], (of a clock) running fast, adj. lacking in restraint, overly eager – ‘oor awfili backwards it bein forrit’, v., arch. to forrì, aid, help – ‘I aidied to forrit the fray’ [JoHa] (cf. foresome).

Forrit (for-i˘) n. a forward on a sports team, specifically nos. 1–8 in rugby – ‘hei aye played in the forrits, bit sometimes prop an sometimes lock’, ‘…And sixteen forrits o’ thirteen stane Cam’ doon on the top o’ Dye!’ [DH].

Forster (for-stur) n. Andrew (16th C.) listed in 1581/2 among the men accused by the County of Bothwell of raiding her lands at Elibrig. He is described as ‘Andro Forster, callit Craikcrop, banieist Englishman’, and was an accomplice of the Armstrongs of Whithaugh. He was declared a rebel after not appearing to answer the charge. He could be related to the ‘Andro Forster’ who was recorded in 1541, accused of being involved in raids into England in which men were killed.

George (15th/16th C.) witness in 1497 for a document relating to the lands of Robert Elliot of Redheugh. Like the others, he was probably from Liddesdale. Sir John (d.1602) younger son of Thomas of Adderstone. He became Constable of Bamburgh Castle and later held lands around Alnwick. He was part of an English force that sacked southern Scotland in 1557 and was Warden of the English Middle March by 1559/60. He was Deputy Governor of Berwick and also Deputy Warden of the East Marches in 1563. He escorted Mary Queen of Scots to Berwick. He was also Keeper of Tynedale and Redesdale.

He and George Heron of Chipchase supported the Regent Moray on attacks on Liddesdale in 1569. He accompanied Sussex and Hunsdon on the raid into Teviotdale in 1570, when the Hawick folk burned the thatch themselves; he personally led the ‘horsmen too burne the townes and vyllages adjoyynynge’ He was the Warden of the Middle March during the Raid of the Redsewire in 1575 (with his name being recorded as ‘Sir George Foster’ in the ballad), when he was taken prisoner and held for a few days in Dalkeith. There are several letters from him in 1576 to the Deputy Warden for West Teviotdale, William Douglas of Bonjedward. He was still English Warden in 1584 when he and Lord Scrope led a raiding force of 7,000 men that invaded Liddesdale, taking the tower at Larriston and capturing 18 prisoners. After harrying the valley, he received a bond of assurance from the chiefs of Liddesdale (who spoke for most of the Elliots, Armstrongs and others). In 1595/6 he got the heads of several families to sign a bond of assurance to try to end the feuds existing between 25 English families and ‘the Ellotes, Armestrongs, Crossers, Nixsons, Nobles, Larences, Hendersons, Batyssons, Sympons and Lyttes’ in Scotland. It is said that he was challenged by a laird of Rulewater to a jousting match, which took place at the ‘Justin Haugh’; he was badly injured and laid under a bush to recover, this field being known as ‘Foster’s Bush’. He married Jane Radclyffe, heiress of Blanchland. He had several daughters and was succeeded by his (probably illegitimate) son Nicholas. Robert ‘Hob’s Robin’ (16th C.) English fugitive from Bewcastle who fled to the Scottish side. He was described in a letter from Thomas Wharton in 1541, along with Adam, as ‘grete offenders agaynst Inglishmen and Scotishmen’. In 1542 his men burned ‘the Cassilhill, Reyhilles in West Tevedall’, stealing livestock and taking 2 prisoners: this may be one of the nearby Castlehills, although it is unclear where ‘Reyhilles’ may have been. A few days later his men burned ‘Cromokhilles’ in West Teviotdale, which is surely Crumhaughhill. Their father ‘Hob’ was warded in Cockermouth Castle in 1541, but the Captain of Carlisle Castle would not take him.

Roland (16th C.) probably a brother of Sir John. He was one of the assistants to the English Warden and served as Captain of Wark Castle. In 1565 he wrote to Bedford, describing the ambush of the Scotts by the Elliots at Ewes Doors. He is probably the ‘Rowie Forester’ recorded in 1569, when Archibald Armstrong of Mangerton, Martin Elliot of Braidlie and Lancie Armstrong of Whithaugh gave assurances to him ‘that thai sall mak obedience according to the rest of the cuntre’ (see also Foster).

Forster’s Buss (for-sturz-bus) n. former name for a field between Bonchester Bridge and Bonchester Hill, a little above the flat ground once known as ‘Jeistins’-haugh’. The name is said to have been because this is where an Englishman, Foster, was killed in combat.

Forsyth (for-sith) n. Andrew (1949–2007) from Edinburgh, he came to Hawick as a police officer. He also became involved with the Scouts, the Duke of Edinburgh’s Award Scheme and Hawick R.F.C. Christian (18th C.) chambermaid at Wilton Lodge in 1791, when she was working for Lord Napier. George (b.1810/1) from Oxnam, he was farmer at Ashybank in the 1860s. In 1861 he was farming 283 acres and employed 10 people. He married Oreina Loff Hall and their children included James R. and Agnes H. Gideon (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Blackcleuch near Teviothead on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Janet (18th C.) chambermaid at Stobs in 1785 and 1786, when she was working for Sir Francis Elliot. John B. (20th C.) Burgh Chamberlain of Hawick in the 1940s. Mr. ?? (18th/19th C.) schoolmaster at Castleton in the early 1800s. He married Margaret, daughter of William Elliot in Hillhouse. Robert (b.1807/8) born in Denholm, he was a hosiery manufacturer. He was living around Main Street in Denholm in 1841, with his wife and a young weaver called Thomas Turnbull. In 1851 he was in Galashiels as a hosier master, employing one man. His wife was Catherine. Walter (19th C.) flesher in Hawick, recorded in 1873 when he was a Commissioner for the estate of flesher James Rodger. His shop was at 40 High Street. William (18th C.) hind at Hassendarbank. He married Margaret Gray and their children included: Thomas (b.1784); Peter (b.1785); Betty (b.1787), who married carrier William Tait; John (b.1790); and Peggy (b.1794). William W. (b.c.1870) born in Midlothian, he was Maths master at the Buccleuch School. He served as acting Headmaster during 1906–08 when the school was remodelled. He may be the same W.W. Forsyth who was made an Honorary Teri at the Tuesday morning ‘Hut’ of 1894 (also ‘Forsythe’).

for’t (for’, fort) contr. for it – ‘A’m no for’t at aa’, ‘…Resolved to clutch his ill-got store Though he should roast for’t evermore’ [RDW], ‘Ye’re in for’t now lad, ye’ll no can rin away sae readilie on the sea’ [WNK], ‘Ah’m ower auld for’t’, ‘Aweel, maister sailor, if ee sweer tae that Aw’ll take eer word for’t …’ [JEDM], ‘I’d juist get to some place afore there was ony need for’t’ [DH], ‘Ah weel, they were warried, they maun suffer for’t noo, The auld toon is fair doon the hole’ [WL].

for that (for-th-at) prep., arch. because, since – ‘For that yt ys neidfull and merytabelle to ber wytnes to the suthfastnes …’ [SB1431].

for the time (for-thu-timu) adv., arch. at the present time, from now – ‘…and that without consent of the baylyeas of the said burgh succesive for the tym[e]’ [BR1699].

fortnitt (for-‘ni’) adj., arch. fortunate – ‘She’s been gey fortitt’ [ECS].

Fortun (for-tun) n., arch. Fortune, chance personified – ‘An so it is that A heh thae thochts ti faa back on gin Fortun takes a pick at iz …’ [ECS].

the Forty Fits (thu-for’-ee-fits) n. popular name for the track leading from Calaburn farm to Whitehaughmoor etc., off the road north of Whitehaugh. A continuation of this road leads towards Shielswood Loch. It is marked ‘drove road’ on the Ordnance Survey map, and may well have been such, although the nearby drove road of which we have a description passed more directly from Whitehaugh to the ‘Fower Road Ends’. The name probably derives from the dykes on either side being about 40 feet apart.

the Forty Thiefs o Redfordgreen (thu-for’-ee-theefz-o-red-furd-green) n. popular name around the 1830s for a group of ‘faggot voters’ arranged by local Tories to swamp the local elections.

foryeild (for-yeeld) v., poet. to repay, recompense – ‘The Lord rewairdet me akordin’ til my righteousniss; akordin’ til the cleenniss o’ my han’s heh thae thochts foryeildet me’ [HSR].

Foster (fos-tur) n. Abraham ‘Abie’ (16th/17th C.) tenant in Greena who was accused in 1623 along with Hob of stealing sheep belonging to Gilbert Elliot of Stobs from Kershope. He was ordered to be banished. He may be the same ‘Abraham Foster in Grenehall’ listed among men declared as fugitives for not appearing at a court in Hawick in 1605; Sim ‘in Grenehall’ was also listed and hence presumably related. Elizabeth ‘Betty’ (18th C.) housemaid at Branxholme in 1791, when she worked for Adam Ogilvie. Sir George see Sir John Forster. Gilbert ‘Gib’ of Foulshiels (16th C.) named in 1590 along John Elliot of Heuchhouse and Martin’s Clem Crozier. They were accused of stealing livestock and a detailed list of items from a servant of Sir John Forster. He was surely related to John of Foulshiels. Helen (19th C.) charged with the murder of her daughter Betsy at the Slitrig in 1867. They lived at Catherine Scott’s boarding house on the Loan. Henry (17th C.) recorded as ‘Harie forrister’ when he paid the land tax on £420 for Greena in Castleton Parish in 1678. He was probably descended from earlier Fosters in Greena. Jean (17th C.) resident of North Synton in 1694 when she was listed on the Hearth Tax roll among ‘ye poor’. John (16th C.) listed as ‘younger, of Fouleschelis’ in 1581, among Elliots and Armstrongs complaining about crimes committed by the Scotts and their allies. He could be related to the John ‘Forster’ recorded in 1541, accused of being involved with raids in which Englishmen were killed. John (16th C.) son of ‘Meikle Rowie’ of Greenhaugh. He is recorded in 1583 among a large group of men led by William of Kynmont into Tynedale. John (b.1771/2) horse-trainer from England. He lived at Kirkgate and Kirkyard (i.e. St. Mary’s Place) in 1841 and 1851. His wife was Mary, and their children included John and Jean. Law (16th/17th C.) resident of Greena. In 1611 he is listed as ‘in Greneha’ among men who failed to appear at court in Jedburgh. It is unclear what the forename ‘Law’ might be. Robert ‘Hob’ (16th/17th C.) recorded as ‘callit Foulshelis’ in 1623 when he and Abie Foster in Greena were accused of stealing sheep belonging to Gilbert Elliott of Stobs from Kershope. He was ordered to be banished. His lands were probably Foulshielis in Liddesdale. He was probably related to the earlier Gib and John of Foulshielis. Robert (18th/19th C.) recorded as farmer at Leahaugh in 1836 when he was head of household in Castleton Parish for the first time. He was still there in 1837, but disappeared after that. He was perhaps son of the labourer recorded in Bygate and Upperraw 1835–41. Roland ‘Meikle Rowie’, (16th C.) tenant in Greenhaugh. In 1583 his son John was listed as part of a large group under William of Kinmont who raided Tynedale. Roland ‘Rowie’, ‘Ower the Moss’ (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1623 when he was found guilty of stealing from several farms. He stole 20 sheep from Myredykes, 20 sheep from ‘Callshiels’ and a horse from Chapelhill. He was ordered to be hanged for these crimes. Simon ‘Sim’ (16th/17th C.) listed among men declared as fugitives for not appearing at a court in Hawick in 1605. He was recorded as ‘Sym Foster in Grennehall’ and listed along with men from Liddesdale and Eskdale. Abraham ‘in Grenehall’ was also listed. William of Greena (16th C.) recorded in 1583 when it was said he had a daughter who had married Englishman Hob Foster of Kershope. William of Foulshielis (16th C.) signed the 1584 bond of assurance with the English Wardens, on behalf of his ‘bairnes and servands’. His name is listed along with many Elliots of Liddesdale, and is recorded as ‘larde of Fowlesheils’. William (16th/17th C.) recorded in Langhagh in 1611 when Roger Scott, Captain of Hermitage, was cautioner for him in Jedburgh. William (17th C.) recorded in 1642 as brother of the deceased James in Greena. This was on a long list of thieves of the Border who were to be tried. He may be the same man as ‘Weilliam Foster, called Rossis Will’ on a list of ‘moststroopers’ (i.e. men branded as thieves) in about 1648. William Air (1801–62) from Coldstream, he worked as a shoemaker, later moving to Glasgow. He is remembered for the verse that he published, especially those relating to angling contributed to ‘Whistle-Binkie’. He was a friend of the Ettrick Shepherd, and shared with him a love of country sports (see also Forster).

Foster’s Bush (fos-turz-bush) n. popular name for a field lying near the Justin Haugh, perhaps now part of Bonchester village. It is said that the English Warden Sir John Forster took part in a jousting challenge there and was unhorsed and wounded by one of the lairds of Rulewater. His supporters laid him under a bush to recover, hence the name of the field. Tancred states that it was still known by this name in the early 20th century.

fot (fo’) n., arch. a footless sock used in wet or snowy weather – ‘A chaamp that turns foats an cuittiekins soappin-wat’ [ECS] (also spelled ‘foat’; usually plural; cf. fottie).

fother (fo-thur) n., arch. fodder, food for livestock, v., arch. to feed cattle or horses, humorously applied to feeding people, to cater – ‘...a richt toon an big eneuch ti fother an fend for fremd folk an gangrels’ [ECS].

Fotherlie (fo-thur-lee) n. variant of Fodderlee.

fottie (fo-te, fo’-ee) n., arch. a child’s stockinged or woollen boot, booties – ‘And ye’se get fot-ties for yer feet At the Big Bazaar’ [JT], someone whose trousers, stockings or boots are too wide (cf. fot).

Fouledge (fowl-eej) n. matthew (18th C.) in-comer to Hawick around 1733, when he was asked by the Council to produce testimonials from his former residence, Jedburgh. Having failed to produce them by 1738 he was banished from Hawick along with his wife and family. A ‘Matthew Fowlen’ was born at Stobo in Peeblesshire in 1674 and could be related (possibly the same as ‘Fulton’).

Fouledge Park (fowl-eej-pawrk) n. name for a piece of land on Minto estate. In 1779 (and 1811) ‘Fowledge Park, and one north of it’ was valued at £45 10s 11d.

Fouledge Sike (fowl-eej-sık) n. stream that rises near Fouledge runs past Alderybar and joins the Southdean Burn, to run into the Northhouse Burn and then the Teviot (G. Watson suggests that the name is ‘foul leche’, meaning ‘smelly ditch’).

Foulis see Fowls

Foulmire Heights (fowl-mîr-hîts) n. high ground on the Border, roughly between Saughtree and Kielder. It reaches a height of 396 m, is the site of a triangulation pillar, and is the source of the Lariston Burn.

Foul Mooth (fowl-mooth) n. nickname for Robert Robson.

the Foul Raid (thu-fowl-rîd) n. popular name for the failed attempt by a Scots army under Archibald, 4th Earl of Douglas, to take Roxburgh and Berwick from the English in 1416. Hearing of a large English force, the Scots retreated ignominiously. In retaliation the English army attacked Teviotdale and Liddesdale, including the burning of Hawick, Jedburgh and Selkirk.

Foulshiels (fowl-sheelz) n. former hamlet west of Selkirk along the Yarrow, opposite Newark Castle. It was once a seat of the Scots, and now a farm. Mungo Park was born here in 1771. An ornamental piece of grate found in the ruins there was donated to the Museum in 1900 (it is ‘Foulsheils’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map and ‘Foulsheills’ on the 1718 Buccleuch survey).

Foulshiels (fowl-sheelz) n. farm about 2 miles north of Newcastleton, to the right off the B6399, above Redheugh. A bridle path once connected this with the upper Hermitage valley, via Harstgarth Fell and Twislehope. It was formerly split into Nether and Over Foulshiels. South of the farmstead, on a terrace on the slopes of Foulshiels Rig are the remains of a settlement. And on a ridge just to the west is another ruined building, along with field-banks, and extensive boundary banks and signs of cultivation along the Well Sike. About 470 yards (420 m) north of the present farmstead is the probably site of the tower-house of Foulshiels (marked on the 1859 Ordnance Survey map), with 2 enclosures, remains of a farmstead, boundary dykes and ‘lazy-beds’. The tower is about 12 m by 8.5 m and has been robbed of stone. Its location is probably the ‘Foulshielmoore’ in a rental record of 1541 and possibly the Nether Foulshiels mapped by Pont. In 1541 it was valued at 6 shillings and at that time the lease was vacant. ‘Johnne Forster, younger’ is recorded as proprietor in 1581, William Foster in 1584 and Gib Foster in 1590. Archibald Elliot was there in 1611. The farm was once owned by the Elliots of Redheugh, but was part of the ongoing dispute with Scott of Buccleuch in the early 17th century; William Scott of Newark’s tenants were settled there and complained in about 1620 that about 100 Elliots had raided the farm, removing all the hay and fodder. Hob Foster was associated with the farm there in 1623 when he was accused of stealing sheep from Kershope. The farm was owned by the Bishop of Caithness in 1632. Walter Turnbull was tenant there in 1694. Further to the west on the north side of Ewes Knowes are the remains of 7 or 8 turf buildings, probably the township of Over Foulshiels. Along the track to the north of the modern farmstead are the remains of a turf sheepfold and closer to Foulshiels Wood there are 2 or 3 others. The farm was surveyed in 1718 along with other properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch, when it consisted of 1729 acres and was bounded by Roan, Tarras, lands held by the Laird of Hoscote and the Hermitage Water. James Elliot was shepherd there in 1835 (the origin is probably from Old English ‘ful’ and Middle English ‘schele’, meaning ‘the dirty huts’; the name appears as ‘Fouleschelis’ in 1581, ‘Foulscheillis’ in 1611, ‘Foulschellis’ in 1632 and the Foul Well (thu-fowl-wel) n. former spring on Braidhaugh farm in Rulewater. It was located near the modern farmhouse, and said to have once been the cause of much sickness on the farm. It was eventually disused on account of its supposed harmful effects on the residents (mentioned by Tancred, it is also written ‘the Ffoull Well’).

Foulwud (fowl-wud) n. Foulwood, former lands in Liddesdale, recorded on a rental roll of c.1376. ‘Foulwood superior’ and ‘Foulwood inferior’ were both valued at 10 shillings. In a rental roll of 1541 ‘Ovir Foulwod’ was leased to Alexander Armstrong (probably son of ‘Ill Will’) and ‘Nethir Foulwod’ to Simon Armstrong (probably of Tininhurn). The lands of ‘Fowlwoods’ are also listed separately, but with no additional information. ‘Foulwodles’ is listed among the Liddesdale possessions of the Sheriff of Teviotdale in 1632, and ‘Fawhead alias Foulwod’ among possessions of Thomas Kerr of Ancrum. Nether Foulwood became the modern Gillside. The stream to the west is Foulwood Sike (it is marked on Blaue’s c.1654 map; ‘Ouerfoulwod’ and ‘Netherfoulwood’ are recorded in 1541).

Foulwud Sike (fowl-wud-sik) n. Foulwood Sike, stream in southern Liddesdale, rising on Sufficient Hill and running roughly eastwards to join the Liddel near Gillside.

foumart (fow-nar) n., poet. the pole-cat, Mustela putorius – ‘The waizle dunne fre the auld grey cairn. The theiffe foulmart came nighe’ [JTe], an offensive person or object – ‘...in case it had played the foumart wi him durin’ the forenoon ...’ [DH] (also written ‘foulmart’).

the Fountain (thu-fown'-in, -foon'-in) n. ornamental fountain in Wilton Lodge Park, in front of the Museum. It was installed as a result of money left to the town by Gilbert Davidson in 1896 and erected in the following year. Unlike the Brown Fountain and the MacNee Fountain, it does not usually have the name ‘Davidson’ attached to it, but is commonly referred to as simply ‘the Fountain’. The main cast-iron part of the fountain came from McDowell, Steven & Co., Milton Ironworks in Glasgow. It was painted silver through most of the 20th century and has decorations including dolphins and turtles. During renovations it was discovered that the original colour was probably blue and gold, and it was returned to this condition in 2018.

Fountainhall (town'-in-hal) n. village on the A7 towards Edinburgh and former station on the Waverley Line, at the junction with the Lauder Light Railway.

the Fountainheid (thu-fown'-in-heed) n. former name for an area near the Vertish, perhaps related to the spring there.

foutsome (fowt-sum) adj., arch. forward, interfering, officious – ‘A foutsome little brat’ [GW] (noted by J. Jamieson).

Fouty Sike (fow-tee-sik) n. stream in southern Liddesdale, running westwards to join the Liddel near the cottage of Clerkleap. The wood near its foot is known as Foutysike Wood and is shown as old trees on both sides of the stream on the 1718 survey of Buccleuch properties.

fow (fow) adj., arch. full, sated – ‘And O, my friend! wi’ me he’ll share a heart, As fow o’ kindness, as its free o’ art’ [CPM], ‘...for it’s ill speakin atween a fow man and a fastin’ [ECS] (Scottish proverb), ‘An what A’d ti haud-sae, A Wasna boass, { if the truith be telld, A was riftin-fowe!’ [ECS], comfortable, well-off – ‘A fow body’ [JoJ], ‘The per had a guid fow life thegether’ [GW], drunk, inebriated – ‘It was his habit tae get ‘fow’ as early on the Friday as hei could, an’ keep hissel’ mair or less in that con- diction durin’ the twae days at least, if no’ gey weel intae the next week’ [BW1939], adv., arch. very, rather – ‘The war lestit fow long’ [GW], n., arch. a firtlot of dry measure, a vessel full with this amount – ‘Payd John Aitken for 2 girds he fower-oors (fow-ur-oorz) n., arch. a meal taken at 4 o’clock or 4 hours before bedtime, particularly by farm-workers – ‘. . . an’ sae, after gettin’ there, and gettin’ some four-oors an’ supper, they made family worship . . . ’ [BCM1880].

the fower posts o misery (thu-fow-ur-pōsts-ō-mi-zun-ree) n. popular name for the narrow stocking frame used around the mid-19th century during a time when the hosiery workers made very poor wages.

the Fower Road Ends (thu-fow-ur-rōd-endz) n. cross-roads at the top of Stirches Road, past the Convent, a popular area for country walks. The road ahead leads to Tandlaw and Drinkstone farms, to the left is Stouslie and to the right the Boonraws and the A7. A drove road used to come from Boghall to here, and then follow towards Stouslie on its way to the Borthwick valley. The name is also sometimes used to refer to the crossroads at the top of the Nipknowes – ‘Sirches Mains and the fower road ends Drinkstone, or Boonraw West Ma feet turn left gaun on tae Stouslie That’s the road aw like the best’ [AY].

fowerteen (fow-ur-teen) n. fourteenth, arch. a fourteen-shilling piece – ‘There was left in a bag within the box . . . , ane old fourteen, two seven shilling pieces, two old three shilling pieces . . . ’ [PR1712] (used only sparingly compared with ‘fourteen’; see also fortyteen).

fowie (fow-ee) adj., arch. comfortably independent – ‘Possessing a comfortable indpendence, Roxb. It is never used like Bene, as a term of respect; but always in such connection as to suggest a different idea; as ‘He’s a fowie body’, expl. as equivalent to ‘an old lunks’. It is derived from Fow, full’ [JoJ].

Fowler (fow-lur) n. Isobel (17th C.) listed at Slack among the poor of Southdean Parish in the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. Her surname is recorded as ‘fouller’. John, F.E.I.S. (b.1844) taught in Hawick for more than 40 years. Born in Ross-shire, he came to Hawick as Headmaster at the West Port Free Church School, transferring to Drumlanrig in 1872. Probably the same Fowler, of Longview, made a sketch of the ‘Chamberlain’s Hoose’ about 1870. He married Elizabeth Sinton in 1872 and she died in 1920. Their children included William, Elizabeth, Robert, Annie, John, Margaret (a teacher in Kerikeri, New Zealand), James and George (who may have married Margaret Hamilton and moved to Brooks, Alberta). John (19th C.) first Secretary of the Hawick Home Mission when it was founded in 1873. Robert (17th/18th C.) recorded as ‘Fouluer’ when he was paid to be Hawick’s Town Piper in 1721. He probably took over from James Oliver and continued until about 1732. His name may also have been written ‘Foulier’. Robert (18th/19th C.) forester to the Duke of Buccleuch at least in the period 1798-1807. He worked at Hassendean Common and probably elsewhere. Walter (17th C.) named on a list of ‘idle and masterless men’ suggested by the Hawick Bailie to the Privy Council as suitable for sending to the wars in Germany in 1627. When produced before the Privy Council by the Bailie he was one of the men who were found ‘not fit for the wars’ and dismissed. Rev. William (c.1560-1612) poet and scholar who was Parson of Hawick in the reign of King James VI. He was son of William, a merchant of Edinburgh, with his mother possibly being Janet Fokart. His sister Annie married Sir John Drummond. He graduated from St. Leonard’s College, St. Andrews in 1573/4 and received his M.A. in 1578. He then studied in Europe, but apparently suffered at the hands of some Catholic Scotsmen and returned to Britain, acting as a spy to the Duke of Lennox in London 1583-84. He was appointed Rector of Hawick in 1585, being presented by Francis, Earl of Bothwell. He apparently received 2/7 of the salary, while the Reader (and actual minister), William Auchmowtie received the other 1/7. In 1587/8 he assigned the ‘tack’ of Hawick Kirk to Walter Scott of Bucceleuch for 5 years. He was still described as ‘Rector of Hawick’ when he was witness to a 1595 land document of Walter Scott of Branxholme. And later in 1595 when he witnessed another document of Sir Walter’s, he is described as ‘secretary to the Queen’. He accompanied Sir Peter Young to Denmark in 1589 to take part in the negotiations of the marriage of James VI with the Princess Anne. He became Master of Requests and Secretary-Depute to Queen Anne in 1589, and later her Secretary. He must have been at Holyroodhouse during much of this time; there is no reason to believe he ever visited Hawick, and he probably ceased to be Rector in 1601. However, there are papers of the period 1602–07 relating to an action with the feuars and others over payment of the Parish teinds. In 1606 he gave a feu charter to Walter, son of Walter Scott of Buccleuch, for the Kirklands of Hawick, except for the Manse and Glebe. And in 1608 he is still described as ‘parson of Hawick’ in a ‘tack’ whereby Sir Gideon Murray of Elibank received the teinds of Hawick Kirk. In 1603 he accompanied the Queen to London and never returned. He was apparently known as a great anagram maker. He wrote ‘An Answer to the Calumnious Letter and Erroneous Propositions of an Apostat named M. Jo. Hammiltoun’ (1581), dedicated to Francis, Earl of Bothwell, as well as a commendatory sonnet for James VI’s ‘Essays of A Prentise’ (1584).

His better known poetic works were published posthumously by his nephew, the poet William Drummond of Hawthornden, namely ‘The Triumphs of the most famous Poet, Mr. Francis Petrarke, translated out of Italian into English’ (published 1587), he refers to himself as ‘P. of Haucieke’. Several other pieces exist in manuscript form, including an almost complete translation of Machiavelli’s ‘Prince’, as well as some unfinished verses, anagrams and scrolls of official letters in French, Italian and Latin. Some of these manuscripts are still in Edinburgh University library. He married (although his wife’s name is unknown) and had 4 surviving children, with his eldest son, Ludovic being recorded as portioner of Restalrig. After his death he was succeeded as minister of Hawick by Thomas Abernethy (spelled ‘Fouler’, ‘Fouluer’, ‘Fowller’, etc.).

Fowlerawe (fow-lu-raw) n. former lands in the Slitrig valley, listed in 1547/8 in an English communication about farms they had burned. They were the property of the Laird of Gledstains, along with ‘Torne’ (probably Turn) and ‘Wener-ton’. The exact location and pronunciation are unknown.

Fowlerslands (fow-lurz-lawnds) n. former place name in Cavers, probably near Denholm. There was a confirming charter for these lands ‘in Denum’ to Thomas Cranston in about 1380. It was among the lands held by Thomas Cranston of that Ilk in 1458/9. It was referred to in 1483 when William Douglas of Cavers renounced these lands to John Cranston of that Ilk, as well as part of Denholm Mains. It was listed as part of the Barony of Cavers in 1511. It was regranted to Sir William Cranston in 1512 (where it is referred to as being ‘near the town of Dennom’), and listed as part of the Barony of Cavers in 1509/10. In 1636 it was referred to as ‘the land called the fouleris lands’ when passed from John, Lord Crnston to his nephew William Cranston. It was still in the Barony of Cavers when inherited by Sir William Douglas in 1687 and by his brother Archibald in 1698. It was then described as lands in Denholm (it is ‘Foullerysland’ in c.1380, ‘Fowllars lande’ in 1458/9, ‘Fowllerlands’ in 1509/10, ‘Foularis landis’ in 1511, ‘Fowlersland’ in 1512, ‘Foullars lands’ in 1574 and ‘Foulerlands’ in 1687 and ‘Foulerslands’ in 1698).

Fowlertoun (fow-lur-tin) n. Alexander (d.c.1423) cleric who was a servant of the captive James I. He held some rights of the Archdeaconry of Teviotdale, probably in succession to John Lyon. His surname is written ‘de Foulor- toun’.

Fowls (fowlz) n. Rev. David (17th C.) presented to Bedrule Parish by Lord Stewart of Traquair in 1633 and ordained there the same year. However, he was translated to Oxnam (probably a more valuable living) in 1634. He was deposited in 1639 for contempt of the Acts of the General Assembly. He thereafter lived in England, abandoning his 7 children. But in 1662 he petitioned Parliament along with his son John, claiming he had been deprived simply for refusing to sign the Covenant, and was then given a stipend. He appears to have spent much of the intervening time in England and was described being in Paddington, Middlesex in 1663. He married and had 7 children, including James (who became a merchant’s apprentice in Edinburgh in 1648) and John. James (18th C.) footman at Stobs in 1778 and 1779, when he was working for Sir Francis Eliott (also written ‘Foulis’ and other variants).

Fraiter (fræ-tur) n. John (17th C.) married Bessie (or Isobel) Wood in Ashkirk Parish in 1646. Their children included: Robert (b.1650); James (b.1652); William (b.1655); and John (b.1659). John (17th C.) resident of North Synton in 1694 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll among ‘ye poor’. John (17th C.) resident of ‘ye wood’ in Abbotreule Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He was listed right after the householders at Gatehousecote, but it is unclear where precisely his house was. Richard (17th/18th C.) hired as schoolmaster in Castleton Parish in 1707. He was probably previously schoolmaster at Westruther, from 1691. William (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1640 he and 2 others had to make public repentance for playing at ‘nineholes’ (i.e. nine men’s morris) on Sunday. His name is probably written ‘Frater’ (also written ‘frater’, this could be a variant of ‘Fraser’).

frame (främ) n. a knitting frame, formerly a hand-knitting machine built into a wooden frame, but in the modern era being a machine making many garment bodies or sleeves at once – ‘There’s a blithe kin’ o’ music In the whushin’ o’ the frames’ [WL].

frame flat (främ-flaw’) n. the floor in a mill on which the knitting frame were housed (see flat).

frame-worker (främ-wur-kur) n. a person who works the knitting frames in a mill, traditionally a male job – ‘Aw yon frame workers and knitters Shaded frae the sun bleezin’ doon …’ [AY].

Frampysden (fra-mis-din) n. John (d.1418) appointed as Bishop of Glasgow by Pope Boniface IX in 1391. This was as a result of a dispute in the church at the time, since Matthew de Glen-dowyn was already Bishop. He was never recognised within Scotland.
France

France (frawns) n. country in Europe, across the English channel from England. The Lovels and many other Norman families originated in northern France. The ‘Auld Alliance’ between France and Scotland started formally in 1295 and united the two countries against their common foe, England (although the details of the alliance over the centuries are extremely complex). A treaty of 1512 made all citizens of Scotland citizens of France and vice versa. The alliance effectively ended with the death of Mary of Guise, the wife of James V, in 1560. Britain formally declared war on France in 1756 (as part of the Seven Years War), the event being marked by drinking (as recorded in the Town books). The French Revolution had a dramatic polarising effect on Britain in the latter years of the 18th century. In Hawick there was a meeting of pro-war, anti-reform supporters in 1792, chaired by Lord Napier, leading to the following years being extremely politically charged, with animosity and suspicion between the 2 groups. The ‘loyalist’, pro-war group consisted mainly of wealthier men, while the ‘reformist’, anti-war group was mainly from the working classes. There were several specific incidents, such as 2 reformist publicans being denied licenses by the local J.Ps. Sympathisers of the Revolution were referred to as ‘black-nebs’. There were official illuminations in Hawick following the victory in the Battle of the Nile in 1798. There was a great enlisting into volunteer army units, prompted by a concern about French invasion, culminating locally in the ‘False Alarum’ of 1804. During the Napoleonic Wars there were French prisoners of war in Hawick. Huge numbers of local men fell in France during WWI and French prisoners of war in Hawick. Huge numbers of local men fell in France during WWI and French prisoners of war in Hawick. Many still lying in unmarked graves. Hawick became twinned with the French town of Bailleul in 1973.

France (frawns) n. James (18th/19th C.) Supervisor of Excise in Hawick recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory.

the Franchise Agitation (thu-fran-chiz-aw-ji-tä-shin) n. name generally given to a series of political demonstrations during the summer and autumn of 1884, demanding equally voting rights for a much larger fraction of working men, particular in rural districts. In Hawick there was a march of approximately 6000 people along the High Street, the procession being 2½ miles long, with 10 bands, along with many flags and banners. Several banners are preserved in the Museum, particularly from Dicksons and Laings. The Representation of the People Act (also known as the Third Reform Act), introduced by William Gladstone, was passed at the end of 1884.

Francis Hole (fran-sis-hol) n. popular name for a pool in the Teviot, to the east of Denholm (mentioned by James Murray in 1863).

Francis’ Well (fran-si-seez-wel) n. spring at the left-hand side of the main A7 just after Newton, to the north of Hawick. The origin of the name is uncertain, but could be related to St. Francis if connected with the nearby ‘Hallywell Hill’, which has its own ‘Hally Well’. John Cavers was farmer at the steadying there in 1797, when it is recorded as ‘Franciswell’.

Frankie’s (frawng-keez) n. Frankie’s the Inn Place, bar at 14 Bourtree Place.

Frankie o the Stobs (frawng-kee-ô-thu-stôibz) n. nickname for Sir Francis Elliott.

Frank Place (frangk-plis) n. street near Loch Park that had tenements constructed on it in 1881 and demolished in 1977. The location was the southern end of Lothian and Garfield Streets, directly opposite the top end of Allars Bank. It was named for Frank Hogg, who lived near there at the time of his death.

Frank Place Brig (frangk-plis-brig) n. occasional name for the road bridge over the railway at the top of Allars Bank and adjacent to the former Frank Place, also sometimes called the Welloigate Brig.

Frank Scott Court (frangk-skö’-kör) n. sheltered housing development off Buccleuch Street, built 2001/2 and named after ex-Provost Frank Scott. The bell from the Old Parish Church is displayed at the front of the new building.

Fraser (frä-zur) n. Alexander of Ewesdale (14th/15th C.) resigned his lands in Ewesdale sometime before 1426, when they were granted to Simon Little. This included Meikledale, Kirkton, Sorbie, etc. George Hardie (1823–81) second son of Bailie Robert Fraser and great-grandson of Bailie John Hardie. He was a draper by trade, succeeding his father in ‘John Hislop & Co’, 51 High Street. First elected to the Council in 1853, he was twice a Magistrate, as well as a J.P., and continued on the reconstituted Council, for North High Street Ward. He was made Provost in 1868, serving until 1871. He was a Whig Liberal in politics. He was a member of the first School Board and of the Parochial Board. He also led the resignations from the 4th Roxburghshire Volunteers and became Lieutenant in the 5th Roxburgh (Hawick Volunteer Corps), thereafter being involved in the argument between the two.
corps, which led to his dismissal and the disbanding of the 5th Roxburgh. The song ‘Hawick Volunteers’ was composed and first sung for him in 1860. He was a keen Common Riding supporter and said to have had a fine tenor voice. He was also a leading light in the Masons, and involved in the formation of the Lodge St. James. In addition he was an early Trustee of St. George’s Kirk. He was living at 7 Teviot Crescent in 1875. On his retirement he was presented with an inscribed tea set, later became landlord of the Imperial Hotel, and was buried in St. Mary’s (note, his name is also sometimes ‘Hardie’). George, J.P. (d.1962) came to Hawick as Excise Officer in 1936. He served for 18 years on the Town Council starting in 1940 and was Provost 1945–58. He gave his name to Fraser Avenue. He died at his home in Edinburgh. George Watson reporter who covered rugby for the Hawick Express. Ian Acting Father in 1994 and Common-Riding Committee Secretary since 2017. Jack (20th C.) well-known local ‘fixer-upper’. Brought up in Cavers, he worked as a joiner in Mansfield most of his life, and was famous for renovating old cars and bikes. He also rescued and restored the whistle from Blenkie’s mill and the Willie Leggat statue. John (18th/19th C.) baker and flour dealer at the Sandbed, listed in Pigot’s 1837 directory. Lesley daughter of Ian and Nancy. She is a local photographer who produced ‘Hawick Common Riding, An Illustrated Guide’ along with Judith Murray in 2009. Her imaging and photography company is ‘ILF Imaging’, known for its extensive coverage of the Common Riding, as well as providing general photographic services. She has been Treasurer of the Common Riding Committee since 2017. She proposed the toast to the Common Riding at the 2018 Dinner. Mrs. ?? (d.1840) midwife in Hawick. Her death is recorded in 1840. Baillie Robert (b.c.1795) father of Provost George Hardie and a draper by trade. His premises were at 7 Teviot Crescent. He is recorded as a merchant on Teviot Crescent on the electoral roll of 1832 and the censuses of 1841 and 1851 (when he was a widower). He was a good friend of William Laidlaw. Although his family joined the Free Kirk after the Disruption, he remained a staunch ‘Auld Kirker’. He was listed as a Steward at the 1836 Common Riding Races. He was mentioned in the 1837 Commons inquiry into ‘fictitious voters’; he swapped a liferent in Roxburghshire with one in Selkirkshire belonging to William Muir. In the 1850s he was on the Railway Committee for Hawick District. His wife was Rebecca and their children included John H., Margaret, George and Rebecca. A portrait exists of him. Sir Simon of Olivercastle (d.c.1291) from Peeblesshire, son of Sir Simon. He held extensive lands in Scotland, and was Keeper of Ettrick Forest, as well as Sheriff of Traquair and Peebles. In about the 1280s he was witness to a resignation of lands by Richard of Rule. In 1291 King Edward I ordered him to deliver harts to the Bishops of St. Andrews and Glasgow. His son, also Sir Simon, led the Scots to victory at the Battle of Roslin in 1303, refused to swear fealty to Edward, fought with Robert the Bruce, was captured by the English and was executed in London. Simon Lord Lovat (c.1667-1747) Chief of the Fraser Clan, he was famous for his belligerent nature and for changing allegiance, being a supporter of the House of Hanover in 1715 and of the Stuarts in 1745. He supposedly passed through Hawick along with the Jacobite army in 1745. There is a story told about a local man who acted as a guide and met him, later becoming a barber in Newcastle, and slitting the throat of one of the men who testified against Lovat. Defeated at Culloden, he was beheaded at the Tower of London, the last man to be executed in this way in Britain (also spelled ‘Frazer’). Fraser Avenue (frä-zur-aw-vi-new) n. part of Burnfoot built in 1949 and 1950 and named after Provost George Fraser. Fratch (frawch) v., poet. to argue, wrangle – ‘My curse light on the awkward sot, Who ... breeds a fratch about his shot’ [JR]. Fray (frä) n., poet. a fight, skirmish, conflict, brawl – ‘As her sons were ever foremost In the fray and the fray’ [TC], warning of an attack – ‘And when he cam to the fair tower yate, He shouted loud, and cried weel hee, Till out be-spak auld Gibby Elliot – ‘Whae’s this that brings the fraye to me?’ ’ [T], ‘While o’er my mind come thoughts of former days When ruthless feuds and fierce and bloody frays ... ’ [JCG], arch. a commotion, stir, fuss, especially in the phrase ‘ti make a fray’ – ‘They were makin’ a fray’ [GW], ‘Slips away the day, unbroken By strife or fray’ [??].
the Fray of Suport

the Fray of Suport (thu-frā-ov-su-pōr') n. Border ballad from the English side of the Ker-shope area, describing the raising of a pursuit after stolen goods. It has been described as one of the most uncouth and savage of the Border ballads and a version was recorded by Scocha in 2004.

Frazer (frā-zur) n. William (d.1760) supposed Jacobite deserter who settled in the district and is buried in Teviothead churchyard, apparently at the age of 107.

the Free Church see the Free Kirk

Free Church Lane (free-church-lān) n. popular name for St. George’s Lane, running from Buccleuch Street to the Teviot and named after what was Hawick Free Church. At one time it was also known as Johnman’s Opening. It was the scene of a murder in 1861. After Teviot Lodge was taken over it became the eastern boundary of the High School grounds. The Post Office sorting office has been there since 1972 (also called ‘Free Kirk Lane’).

freedom (free-dūm) n., arch. liberty to engage in the rights of a member of a community, especially a burgh – ‘Item, whatsomever person committis the said theft … sal be banyshit the town, and lose their freedom for ever’ [BR1640], the boundaries within which the laws of a burgh apply – ‘Impr. whatsomever person sal commit blud upon utheris within the freedom of Hawick …’ [BR1640].

the Free Gairdeners (thu-free-gār-di-nūrz) n. the British Order of Ancient Free Gardeners, a friendly society with Lodge No. 3465 operating in Hawick from the 1880s until the early 20th century. Dr. Barrie was the first and most enthusiastic member. There were 2 separate branches at one point, ‘Flower of the Border’, Hawick, No. 146 Border District, and ‘Lily of the Border’, Hawick, No. 6 Border District. There was also briefly a junior branch ‘The Flowerbud of the Border’ (Juvenile), No. 23 Border District. The National Archives have some of their records.

the Free Kirk (thu-free-kirk) n. the Free Church, established after the Disruption in 1843, when hundreds of Church of Scotland ministers left to form the Free Protesting Church. In Hawick Rev. John Wallace left as minister of the Parish Church along with about 600 of the congregation of 800. They met originally in the East Bank Meeting House, then built their own church in 1844. The site was purchased from Mr. Anderson, with Mr. Nixon of Lynnwood laying the foundation stone. This became St. George’s Church, which was long afterwards known as the Free Church or Free Kirk, and is now renamed Teviot Church. A second congregation started meeting in the West-end in 1855, leading to the construction of the West Port Kirk in 1866. Another Free Church congregation, St. Andrew’s, was founded in 1866, with the church itself constructed in 1868, to serve the northern part of town. There was also a Free Kirk started about the same time in the Borthwick (the Snoot), another in Denholm in 1844 and one at Wolfelee about 1849.

Free Kirk Lane see Free Church Lane

the Free Kirk Manse (thu-free-kirk-māns) n. manse for St. George’s Church, built on Wilton path in 1846. The land had previously been a garden belonging to Francis Ballantyne. The house was designed by Smith of Darnick and can be seen in the 1846 painting of the Common Riding Races. It was occupied continuously by the Free Kirk minister until Rev. Johnman died in 1923, then sold the following year. The junior minister had lived at Broomieknowe, and this house was gifted by Sir Thomas Henderson in 1925 to become the new Manse. This house may have been the ‘U.P. Manse’ and ‘Wilton Manse’ recorded on Ordnance Survey maps, which was demolished about 1969.

Free Lance (free-lānс) n. pseudonym for Isabella Anderson Gray.

the Free Library (thu-free-li-brā-ree) n. an early name in use for the Library.

freeman (free-mūn) n. another name for a Burgess – ‘Item, that ilk freeman’s eldest son and heir that is to be admitted freeman and burgess, his father being in life, sall pay forty shillings with the wyne and pertinents’ [BR1640].

Freeman (free-mūn) n. Patrick (17th/18th C.) charged in 1701 with going over the Border into England to get married. He is recorded giving evidence that the Burgh Officer was the first person to arrest him (i.e. that it was not done on the authority of any other court). Walter (18th C.) local man was engaged by the Council in 1747 to fix and upkeep the clock on St. Mary’s, with an annual salary of £1 5s. This included providing iron work for a dial-plate on the west side and alterations to the dial-plate on the east side. He was therefore presumably a metal-worker. He is also recorded making 420 communion tokens and a stamp for Hawick Parish Kirk in 1751. In 1752 he was paid the remains of his salary for upkeep of the clock.
of the clock for a year. He may be the same as the Walter who led the ‘Patriots’ (or was at least related to him). Walter (18th C.) leader of a secession movement in Hawick Kirk. He also led the ‘Patriots’, a group of 205 Burgesses and others who took the Town Council to court 1778– 81, claiming they had improperly managed the Common on behalf of the Burgesses and question-ning their authority. They particularly complained about the Bailies, stating that they were ‘generally a set of poor low men’ and that ‘he that drank most in the Bailies’ house had most interest in the decision’. In 1778 he and James Dryden were jailed in Hawick over the weekend and then taken off to Jedburgh Jail for another 2 days before being bailed (he is probably the one described as being ‘in bad health’ at the time).
The Court of Session ruled in favour of the Magistrates and Council, but the outcome also led to the Council being fixed at 31 members. He was probably the same watchmaker Walter whose daughter Isobel married John Clark in Edinburgh in 1780. He may be the Walter, married to Maregaret Falside, whose daughter Janet was baptised in Hawick in 1758. He is probably the Walter who was recorded renting the ‘mortcloth’ in Hawick in 1773 and also in 1774 for his ‘goadsister’.
Dr. William (1751/2–1821) surgeon and liberal politics leader in Hawick in the latter part of the 18th century. He was said to be a ‘blackneb’ and had a portrait of Napoleon in his house. He was an early friend of Robert Wilson, apparently influencing his political and religious views; it was said that ‘Dr. Freeman had made Rob Wilson a’ but the soul’. He subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ in 1784. He paid the Horse Tax in Hawick in the period 1789–97. He is probably the William who married Helen Scott in Hawick in 1788. He seems likely to be related to Walter, his son. He was buried at St. Mary’s, his gravestone reading ‘A man of sterling honour, integrity, and benevolence. A warm friend and affecionalte Relative. His talents as a professional may have been of the highest order and were ever at the service of the poor’ (also written ‘Freman’).

freen (18th C.) a friend – ‘Twa trusty

And gien um the nicest smile’ [AY] (also freend-ly).

freendly society (freend-lee-su-sI-i’-ee) n. a benefit society, organised for mutual assistance among workers. The Hawick Friendly Society was the first such organisation in town, forming about 1790. A second organisation formed about 1810, but both were dissolved by their members some time before 1840. The Foresters became important from the mid-19th century, with the Free Gardeners formed in the 1880s, and Trades Unions also appearing in the late 19th century to fill a similar need.

freendship (freend-ship) n. friendship – ‘Teri-Bus is now a charm That keeps heart an’ freend-ship warn For auld Hawick’ [TK], ‘And ye’ll fin’
the warmth o’ freendship Down the lang years

French (french) n. Adam (d.c.1578) 8th Laird of Thronidykes in Berwickshire. He was son of Robert and Anne Home and grandson of Adam (who in 1502 was on the panel for Sir David Home of Wedderburn inheriting some of his father’s lands around Lauder). He was a minor at the death of his father and had a charter from Thronidykes in 1555/6. He was involved in a contract relating to lands in Gordon in 1563 and in 1567 he had an action involving lands at ‘Pet-cookis’. In 1569 he acquired from Andrew Home, Commendator of Jedburgh Abbey, the lands of Ulston, Nether Crailing, Auld Jedburgh, Ruecastle, Abbotrule, ‘Bowatsyde’, Grange, Fodderlee, Over Bonchester, Mackside, Gatehousecote, Hartshaugh, Langraw, Raperlaw, Firth, Belses, Ancrum and others. This was for the sum of 30 hundred merks. In 1574/5 he was involved in a dispute over teinds in the Parish of Gordon. He married Margaret, daughter of Robert Hoppringle of Blindlee, and she died in 1582. His children were: Robert, who succeeded; James, executor of his mother’s will, who led an action against the Abbot of Jedburgh in 1583; and John, tutor of Thronidykes after his brother James died; Alexander, who was mixed up with the Earl of Bothwell; Thomas, who was in the King’s service; Margaret; Christine; Jonet; and Eupham. Adam of Thronidykes (1599–1617) only son of Robert, he was 10th Laird of Thronidykes. He was also Laird of Abbotrule and other lands that had been purchased by his grandfather from Jedburgh Abbey. His uncle John was appointed as his tutor in 1604. It is said that at the age of 14 he was attending school in Haddington when he was kidnapped from the care of his guardian Sir John Home, by William Home of Hardiesmill, John Cranston of Moriston and Sir Patrick Chirnside of East Nisbet, taken to Berwick and married to Sir Patrick’s daughter, Jane. This led to a trial before the Supreme Court of Scotland. However, the King finally allowed the marriage, but he died before there were any children. His 3 sisters, Jean, Alison and Margaret were served as his heirs in 1625. George (16th C.) 4th son of Adam, 6th Laird of Thronidykes. He is listed in 1549 among the associates of Walter Ker of Cessford who were accused of helping the English in raids upon the farms of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme. James (d.c.1604) 2nd son of Adam and Margaret Hoppringle. He acted as executor for his mother. In 1583 he instituted proceedings against the Abbot of Jedburgh. In 1588 his brother-in-law John Baillie of St. John’s Kirk had a letter of reversion to him for the annual rents of the former lands of Jedburgh Abbey, including Abbotrule, Nisbet, Ruecastle, Over Bonchester, Mackside, Belses, Over Ancrum, etc. He died soon after his older brother Robert and his younger brother John became his heir. Robert (d.1603) son of Adam and Margaret Pringle, he was 9th Laird of Thornydykes and 2nd of Abbotrule. In 1582/3 he and his mother had an action against a number of men for spoliation of their lands of Jordanhill and East Gordon. He was part of a feud that resulted in the death of Ninian Spottiswood in 1588. In 1589 he married Margaret, said to be only daughter and heiress of William Turnbull, younger of Bedrule (who pre-deceased his father), with her mother being Margaret, daughter of Sir John Home of Cowdenknowes; she died in 1593, leaving no children. He secondly married Margaret, daughter of Mark Home of Hardiesmill. Their children were: Adam, who succeeded; Jean, who married John, brother of William, Lord Cranston; Alison, who married Thomas Cranston of Huntlywood and secondly William Marjoribanks of Stainerig; and Margaret, who married Robert Brownfield of Todrig in Berwickshire. His brother John was appointed tutor to his son Adam in 1604. Robert of Frenchland (16th/17th C.) son of Robert, with his mother probably being sister of Christopher Halyday of Raehill in Annandale. He was serbed heir to his father in 1610. In 1613 he was a cautoner for John Johnstone of Westerraw to infect Andrew, son of William Scott of Bowhill in some lands. In 1598 he married Isabell Scott, who was from the Bowhill Scowts. They had 9 children, including William (who succeeded), Adam (who later acquired Frenchland and Thornydykes), Margaret (who became co-heir and married her kinsman William French) and Marian (also co-heir, who married David French, her sister’s brother-in-law). William (18th/19th C.) local man who got stuck in the cleuch on Toon-o-Rule farm one night while riding from Hawick to Abbotrule. It is said that he managed to pull himself out, but that his horse drowned, and the horse-shoes were found many years later when someone was casting peats.

frenfi (fren-fi) adj., poet. furious, wrathful — ‘...an’ let thy frenfu’ angir tak’ hand o’ thame’ [HSR].

frennishin (fre-ni-sin) n., poet. a state of extreme agitation, rage, fury — ‘He castet apon thame the frennishin o’ his angir, wrath, an’ indignatione ...’ [HSR], ‘Ye ruul the frennisin’ o’ the se; whan the waves o’t raise up, thou quashist thame’ [HSR], a state of distraction, such as when a child is woken from sleep — ‘He is ... in a frenishen’ [JoJ] (there are spelling variants; also frainishin).

Fresall see Frissell

fresh (fresh) n., arch. a thaw, the breaking of a spell of frost — ‘Atween a frost an a fresh = the setting-in of a thaw’ [ECS].

fri (fri, fre, frä) prep. from — ‘where div ee come fri?’, ‘...A day fri Hawick’s a day wasted!’ [DH], ‘...frä ma hoose upon the rock’ [JEDM], ‘...And keep oor dear hames frae disorders’ [WS], ‘I’ll sing the test a Callant tries When far frae hame and weary’ [RH], ‘...An’ at his voice the deid folk leapt Frae oot their graves’ [WP], also sometimes meaning ‘of’ — ‘hei deid fri a hert attack’, conj. from the time that — ‘Frase she cam in, her tongue never de-vauldit’ [GW] (the pronunciation varies, and can often be between the examples given; also spelled ‘frae’; cf. the less common fra and the older threah).

Friarshaw (fri-ur-shaw) n. farm on the north side of the Ale Water, roughly between Riddell and Lilliesleaf. It was the seat of a branch of the Douglases, descended from the Cavers line. It was valued at £5 12s 6d in 1592. In the 17th century the superiority was held by the Hamiltons, Earls of Haddington, along with other lands previously possessed by Melrose Abbey. It was valued at £285 13s 4d in 1643, 1663 and 1678 (including feu-duy of £13 6s 8d to the Earl of Haddington). It was still part of the Lordship of Melrose in 1670. In 1678 the feu duties were valued at £13 6s 8d, and held by the Earl of Haddington. Walter Rid dell of Friarshaw is recorded in 1695. There were Turnbuls there in the late 18th century. In 1788 it was owned by Rev. William Campbell. The 1811 Land Tax Rolls lists the owner as William Scott of Friarshaw, with a value of £286 (plus £60 in teinds). There were Scott-Douglas owners in the 19th century, but by the 1870s it was part of the estate of the Sprots of Riddell. It was called ‘Jerusalem’ by the locals, and was once monastic property. Another farm to the north-west is called Friarshawmuir — ‘We’d cross the brig and thread the wood, And climb to Friarshaw, Where we can see the Minto Hills And rugged Ruberslaw’ [FL] (the name probably comes from Middle and Old English ‘freere sceagga’, meaning ‘frier’s wood’; it first appears in 1563 as ‘Freierschaw’ and continues with similar spelling for the next century, being ‘Friershaw’ and ‘friershaw’ in 1678 and ‘Frier-shaw’ in 1695; it is marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Freershaw’).

did see me owtbye fled frae me' [HSR], ‘I was ane reproch amang a’ mine enimies … an’ ane fricht til mine acquaintance’ [HSR], ‘Bairnis wi’ it get sic frichts, There’s no ane that sleeps sou’ …’ [TCh], ‘… Advisin’ Jimmie not ti dee Wi’ useless fricht’ [WP], v. to frighten ‘… eneuuch to fricht the verra whoops frae their haunts’ [BM1907].

frichtfi (fricht-fi, -fu) adj., arch. frightful – ‘There’s whiles a wee thing that wags uncontrolled, And causes a frichtfu’ skaith …’ [WFC] (spelled ‘frichtfu’ etc.).

fri’d (frid, fred) contr. from it – ‘the troubles wi Gala is, oo’re no fer enough fri’d, ‘A was guy fer fri’d it the time’, ‘The water that cam’ frae’d was caller and clear …’ [JCG] (see also thrh’d).

Fridi (fri-di) n. Friday (also spelled ‘Fridih’; note the pronunciation with /ə/ rather than /ɪ/).

the Fridi (thu-fri-di) n. Common Riding Friday, being the Friday after the first Monday in June and the main day in the traditional celebrations, lasting almost a full 24 hours for the principals. The earliest it can be is 5th June and the latest is 11th June. It starts with the Drums & Fifes assembling at 6 a.m. in the Kirkwynd, traditionally playing ‘Teribus’ and ‘John Paiter-Son’s Mare Rides Foremaist’. It proceeds with the Snuffing and the Cornet’s Breakfast, with the Drums and Fifes continuing on a route round the old parts of the Town. The Cornet then gets the Flag and walks with it to the Tower, where the ‘Auld Sang’ is sung. The Procession of the officials’ motorcade plus riders then starts, going through Wilton then along the High Street and up the Loan for the Chase. The married riders go to the front as usual, this being the only time anyone rides past the Flag. After the Chase up the Nip Knowes the Acting Father takes the Flag to St. Leonard’s, where the main ‘Hut’ takes place. Here the curds and cream are served, which were ordered on the Thursday of the previous week. After the Hut, the mounted procession proceeds round part of the Common for the actual Riding of the Marches, with the Cornet performing the Cutting of the Sod. They then make their way to the Mair, with the Flag being placed on the roof of the committee room during the Races, and the Cornet being presented with a race-crop. After the events at the Moor, the riders proceed via Crumhaughhill and Myreslawgreen, where they receive refreshments. The Principals then go to the Coble Pool for the Dipping of the Flag, then the Song Singing, before returning the Flag to the Town Hall for the night. Then there is the Cornet’s Dinner and finally the Ball, ending with the climb to the summit of the Mote at dawn. Before 1752 it was fixed as the last Friday in May, but since then (largely because of the 11 day shift to the Gregorian calendar) it has been in June. In the early 19th century the Magistrates retreated left town at 10 a.m. and then the cavalcade returned to town after the Races, 3 abreast, led by the Town Clerk and the band. They would then march the Burgh boundaries and adjourn to the Town Hall for dinner. The modern schedule was essentially set down in the 1880s.

Fulton (fuln, fool-in)n. lands between Bedrule and Fodderlee, once the site of a small village. There is a ruined 15th century pele tower there. Adam Turnbull is recorded there in 1390. John
Fulton

Turnbull of ‘Foultoun’ took part in 1426 in the inquiry into the leprosy of John Turnbull of Minto. Thomas and Roland Turnbull were recorded there in 1493 and Cock Turnbull, William White and Robert White in 1494/5. Thomas Turnbull was tenant there in 1501 and George Russell in 1502. In 1502 some Oliveres were allowed to compon for stealing 100 of the Laird of Bedrule’s sheep from there at different times. In 1516 James V granted remission to several Turnbulls, including Adam, George and Andrew in Fulton. The tower is recorded being burned the Earl of Hertford’s men in 1545. It was the home of Margaret Home of Cowdenknowes in the 1570s, before her marriage to William Turnbull of Bedrule, and then was a Turnbull stronghold. In the 1580s it was the seat of Walter, heir apparent of Sir Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule. A letter of 1602 from William Turnbull to his father-in-law Thomas Ker of Cavers describes how he took possession of the lands and lists the tenants there at that time. In 1619 John Stewart of Traquair accused several Turnbulls of stealing wood from his lands at Huntliehill, and this included Walter in Fulton and his son Thomas. In 1623 Andrew Paterson, tenant there, was accused of stealing an ox and a cow, but found not guilty. The Kers were granted the lands in 1623, along with other Turnbull possessions (probably on default of loans). It was among lands owned by Sir Thomas Ker in 1643, valued at £440. George White was tenant in 1694. It was owned by John Ker of Cavers Carre in 1788. William Elliot of Wells bought the lands from the Cavers-Carre family in 1801. It was among lands owned by William Elliot of Bedrule in 1811. The minister of Bedrule formerly had the right to cut turf annually on the moor here. A Roman coin, specifically a denarius of Augustus, was found to the west of the tower. Further to the south-east is a possible ancient enclosure (the name occurs in 1296 as ‘Fougheltona’, is ‘Fouldton’ in 1390, ‘Foudtine’ in about 1390, ‘Foultoune’ in 1426, ‘Foultoune’ in 1493, ‘Foultoun’ in 1494/5, ‘Fouldtoun’ in 1501, ‘Fouldtoune’ in 1502, ‘Fouldtoun’ in 1516, ‘Foltoune’ in 1545, ‘Foultoun’ in 1583/4, ‘Fouldtoune’ in 1643 and 1678, ‘Faltoune’ in 1684 and ‘Folitun’ in 1694; it is still marked as ‘Foultoun’ on Gordon’s c. 1650 map and ‘Foultoune’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map; the origin is probably Old English ‘fugol tun’, meaning ‘bird farm’).

Fulton (fool’-in) n. James (18th/19th C.) stock- ing needle maker on the High Street, listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. William (1794–1875) first (and possibly only) Governor of Hawick Jail. He was born in Jedburgh, son of John and Rachel Watson. He was wounded in Holland in the 1st (Foot) Regiment, being struck in the face and chest by a bullet, and being pensioned out of the army. He was then a roadman at Castlewearie for about 25 years (where he is recorded in 1841), before becoming farmer at Mertin’s House (recorded in 1851). He is said to have been ruined as a farmer on account of his stackyard being burned down 2 or 3 years in a row, and was succeeded at Martin’s House by the Knoxes. He then became Governor of Hawick Jail (on Allars Bank), but it is said that his wife did not enjoy the situation and he instead became a forester at Eildon Hall, farmed at Mertoun House and moved to Denholm. He married Margaret, daughter of John Cairns and Elizabeth Louisa Thorburn, and she died at Martin’s House in 1859, aged 63. His children were: John (1815–1903), who emigrated to Ontario, Canada; Elizabeth (1818–1904), who died in Appleby; James (1820–86), born at Al ton, died in Manitoba; Mary (b.1824), who mar ried Walter Riddell and lived in Hawick; Anne (1827–1909), who married John Scott and lived at Castlewearie: William Scott (1831–91), a banker in Appleby. He died at 4 O’Connell Street and is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery.

Fulton Toor (ful’, fool’-in-toor, -toor-ur) n. ruined peel tower dating from the 16th century, about 1 1/2 miles south of the village of Bedrule, on the side road between Bedrule and Fodderlee. It was long a stronghold of the Turnbulls. The tower is recorded being burned the Earl of Hert ford’s men in 1545. Tradition holds that the last occupant of the tower was a strong Turnbull who was overcome by the Kers of Ferniehirst, pouncing upon him while he was singing to his infant child on his knee: ‘Little wat ye wha’s coming, Jock and Tam and a’s coming’. The remains of the tower are one storey high and surrounded by turf covered foundations of out-buildings. The dimensions are about 7 m by 9 m, and oblong in plan, with a circular stair-tower on the east. The walls of the tower were repaired around 1880 to preserve the ruin.

gair (gār) n., arch. a strip of green grass on a hillside, patch of fertile land among heather or barren land, hence a strip in general – ‘Gair, Gare. The term is used to denote any thing resembling a strip or streak: as, a blue gair in a clouded sky, (synon. bore,) a red gair in a clear sky, Roxb.’[JoJ] (the word survives in some place names, such as ‘Cat Gair’ in the upper Borthwick).

Gair (gār) n. former farmland in the Borthwick valley, mentioned in the mid-17th century. It lay in the part of Roberton that was previously in Hawick Parish, on the south side of the valley, probably near Todshawhaugh. John Pringle was recorded there in 1755 (probably related to the Scots for a strip of green on a hillside).

Gair (gār) n. farm by the Tina Water in the Ettrick Forest. The house was built around 1760. Andrew Laidlaw was tenant there in the mid-18th century and Walter Laidlaw later in the 18th century.

Gairdener’s Haughs (gær-di-nurz-hawch) n. Gairdener’s Haughs, a former name for the Playing Fields off Buccleuch Road. This is recorded in a boundary dispute of the late 18th century between Elliot of Langlands and the Duke of Buccleuch (also written ‘Gardenershaugh’).

gairdenin (gär-de-nín) n. gardening – ‘Hab says it’s a game played against the wather, the same as gairdenin ...’[DH].

Gairden Knowe Park (gær-din-now-pawrk) n. former name for lands near Newton in Bedrule Parish, listed as ‘Garden Know Park’ in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls.

gairden-rake (gär-din-, -deen-räk) n. a garden rake – ‘Examples of raik, rake, to raik, to rake, etc.: – Gairdeen-raik, muck-raik, beier-raik’[ECS].

Gairdner (gär-d-nur) n. (Gardner) George (18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. He is probably the George, son of James, baptised in Hawick in 1716. His wife was Mary ‘Partis’ (or Porteous) and their children included: Andrew (b.1756); Mary (b.1758); Isabel (b.1762); and Margaret (b.1765). In 1758 he witnessed a baptism for Walter Rae and Margaret Gardner (perhaps his sister) and another in 1760 for shoemaker James Porteous. In 1764 he witnessed a baptism for weaver Charles Scott and his wife Janet Porteous (who may have been his sister-in-law). Gideon (17th/18th C.) gardener in Hawick, on the 1693/4 subscribers’ list for the new Kirk bell. He was a resident of the west-side of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. In 1701 he witnessed a baptism for Adam Scott, along with miller James Paterson. He married Margaret Davidson and their children included: James (b.1686); Margaret (b.1700); and Isobel (b.1702). John (17th C.) resident of ‘oest the water’ (i.e. west of the Slitrig) on the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. He is probably the gardener listed among those contributing to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4 and the gardener who witnessed the baptism of Robert (Lord) Oliver’s son in 1704. He may be the John who was fined £10 in 1691 because he tried to run away down the Tolbooth stairs when cite by the Bailies. John Waldie (19th/20th C.) farm steward for the Earl of Minto at Hassendeanbank. In 1892 he married Helen Dickson, daughter of William Elliot and Christina Pow. His son Andrew (born before their marriage) took over as farm steward after him. The other children emigrated and were William, Christina Elliot, John, Betsy Waldie, Mary Helen McCreadie and James (‘Jim’). Robert (17th C.) resident of the west-side of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. He could be the Robert, married to Agnes Scott, whose children born in Hawick included: William (b.1697); and Agnes (b.1699), who married gardener Walter Scott in 1722. William (17th C.) resident of the west-side of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. He was listed as a gardener among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He could be the William, married to Agnes Scott, whose son Robert was born in Wilton in 1697. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Isobell Morton in Hawick in 1702. Their children included: Agnes (b.1705). Other children (baptised in Hawick Parish) who may be his are Margaret (b.1711), William (b.1713) and John (b.1716). The witnesses in 1705 were Michael Bridges and Adam Jordan. William (b.1683) born in Hawick, son of Robert. He witnessed a baptism in 1705. He is probably the merchant William who was elected as Cornet in 1710; if so he was unlikely to be the William who married Isobell Morton in Hawick in 1702 or Agnes Aitkin in 1710. However, he is probably the William whose children born in Hawick included William (b.1713) and John (b.1716). He is probably the William, merchant of Hawick recorded in 1721 when his servant Thomas Weddell was rebuked for fighting on the Sabbath (spelled ‘Gardiner’, ‘Gardner’, ‘Garner’ and variants).

Gairie Gill (gä-ree-gil) n. stream that rises fairly close to the Nine Stane Rig and runs south to join the Roughley Burn.

Gala Law

Gala Law was established as long ago as 1930. It includes University since 1998. The Braw Lad’s Gathering in June celebrates the town’s 1599 charter and was established as long ago as 1930. It includes a ride to the Raid Stane, where supposedly some English soldiers were killed while picking plums in 1337, an event also commemorated on the town’s coat of arms. The betrothal of Margaret Tudor to James IV occurred at the Market Cross in 1503. The lands were owned by the Crown in the early 16th century. If the town has a jewel it is Old Gala House, with parks dating from 1583. Now a museum, it was the former home of the Lairds of Galashiels, who were first Pringles and then Scotts. The Scotts of Gala burial aisle dates from 1636, although both the original church and the gothic replacement were demolished. New Gala House was home to ‘St. Trinian’s’ School during WWII, but was also demolished. The ‘Hunters’ Haa’ was an old peel tower that stood till the late 18th century, while the town’s Tolbooth was demolished in 1880. The Cormmill Fountain is a converted mill lade. The ‘Border Reiver’ equestrian statue is by Thomas Clapperton, a Gala native, outside the 1867 Burgh Chambers, which have an imposing clock tower by Robert Lorimer (added 1924–27). The main road from Hawick to Edinburgh only went through Gala from 1818, previously being via Fairnilee and Clovenfords. The town did not become a municipal burgh until 1864, although it had possessed burgh of barony status since 1599. The origin of the rivalry with Hawick is a mystery, but dates back at least to the time of the Carterhaugh Baa, when the Gala men switched sides. Population (1991) 13,753. It is said that if Gala didn’t exist, then Hawick and Selkirk folk would have invented it in order to have something to agree on — ‘Bout forest trees let Gala brag, We carena what belong them’ [JT], ‘. . . The Hawick team tae play fower games And oo’ve picked twae Gala reserves’ [AY] (note that the pronunciation of the final vowel sound can vary, and hence it is colloquially spelled ‘Gali’ etc.; the meaning of the name is ‘huts on the Gala Water’; Teries often talk about going ‘ower ti Gala’ rather than using another preposition; it is ‘Galowaschelis’ in 1456, ‘Galloschelis’ in 1512, 1525 and 1549, ‘Galloseschelis’ in 1574, ‘Galloseschelis’ in 1633 and ‘Gallowschelis’ in 1651).
Galalaw

to commemorate victory in the Crimean war in 1856 and took decades to recover – ‘For I like auld Hawick Wi’ a’ her kindly folk Frae Galalaw tae Haggisha’ ‘[RMc], ‘Gala Law ablae wi’ colour Wi’ golden broom and whins . . .’ [AY] (the origin is possibly from Old English for ‘gallows hill’, like the similar names near Biggar, Kelso and Gullane, and certainly having no connection with Galashiels; it seems an unlikely place for a public gallows to be situated, although it is possible that it served this purpose in the old Barony of Chamberlain Newton).

Galalaw (gaw-lu-law) n. farm above Guthrie Drive, on the slopes of Gala Law. The lands were owned by a branch of the Scotts from at least 1494 until 1762. In 1494 James Scott of Kirkurd granted the lands to his son David (later of Hassendean); at that time it was valued at 6 merks annually, and was held for the annual payment of 3 silver pennies at the Feast of the Pentecost, if asked. David was further recorded in 1507/8 and 1510. John Scott of Hassendean owned the lands in 1528/9. In 1534 Gavin Elliot sold the 40-shilling lands of ‘Neder Gallelaw’ to William Scott, the sealing of the letter of reversion being done at Hassendean Kirk. James Renwick was tenant there in 1628. It is probably the land (valued at £156) owned by a Scott (first name not recorded) lifrenter of Newton in 1643. William Scott of Galalaw paid tax on £156 in the Land Tax Rolls of 1663 and 1678. The land there was part of Hassendean Parish until being assigned to Wilton in 1690. Tax was paid on 5 hearths in 1694 for ‘Gallalaw his hous and cottars’. Alexander and Robert Pott were owners in 1788. James Aitkin is recorded there in 1797, when he owned 3 horses. The lands (or at least part of the lands) were owned by William Oliver ‘Auld Cash’ when he died in 1808; in his will they were described as ‘the six merks lands of Galalaw . . . lying within the old parish of Hassendean now annexed to the Parish of Wilton, Barony of Chamberlain Newton and Shire of Roxburgh. Robert Pott was recorded as owner in 1811, when it was valued at £156. Robert Turnbull was owner from at least 1821 and later sold a small part to Chisholme of Stirches. In 1851 Robert Turnbull farmed 150 acres there and James Elliot farmed 250 acres. The hill has been taken over by whins (it is ‘Gallowlaw’ in 1494, ‘Gallolau’ in 1501, ‘Gallolaw’ in 1507/8 and 1510, ‘Gallowlaw’ in 1511 and 1581, ‘Gallolaw’ in 1528/9, ‘Gallalaw’ in 1663, ‘Gallow Law’ in 1690, ‘Gallalaw’ in 1718 and 1770, ‘Gallowlaw’ in 1786 and ‘Galllaw’ in 1821; the origin may related to ‘gallows’, as for similarly named places elsewhere, although there is no known connection to hangings).

Galalaw Braefit (gaw-lu-law-brä-fit) n. former farmstead at the foot of Galalaw hill, possibly also the same as ‘Galabrae’. James Turnbull was there in 1841.

Galalaw Business Park (gaw-lu-law-biz-nis-pawrk) n. industrial park near Galalaw, constructed in the early 1990s, but largely empty.

Galalaw Cottages (gaw-lu-law-ko’-ee-jeez) n. Cottages near Galalaw farm ??.

Galalaw Knowes (gaw-lu-law-nowz) n. former alternative name for the Miller’s Knowes (the origin is probably the same as for ‘Gala Law’, but there is no obvious relation between them).

Galalaw Road (gaw-lu-law-röd) n. street in the Burnfoot area, named after the hill on the other side of the A7.

Galalean (gaw-lu-lee-in) n. someone from the town of Galashiels, not to be confused with ‘Galilean’ or ‘Galileean’, both of which suggest a certain nobility.

Galashiels (gaw-lu-sheelz) n. full name of Gala, an unattractive town that has to be passed through on the A7 to Edinburgh (in early records it is ‘Gallow-shiels’ etc.).

Galashiels grey (gaw-lu-sheelz-grä) n. grey cloth, formerly manufactured in Galashiels – ‘It is interesting to find him next year writing to a business correspondent in the ‘old country’ to send ‘Galacheils Gray at 6d or 7d per ell, to be here in September or October for winter only’ [HAST1921] (the cloth was probably made from a combination of white wool and black wool; it is recorded in 1736 that ‘at Gallowshiels are made a few coarse Kerseys, called Gallowshiels Grays, for Home-consumption’).

Gala Witter (gaw-lu-wi’-ur) n. Gala Water, a river that joins the Tweed from the north-west at Galashiels. The river is about 21 miles long. The Waverley Line crossed it no less than 15 times, with most of the bridges still existing – ‘Tho’ the Esk has pearly sprays, And the Gala windin’ ways; Th’e some bonnie banks and braes Aboot Hawick’ [TK] (it is ‘Galu’ in 1268).

Rev. Robert (1866–1937) educated at Glasgow University, he was licensed by Paisley Presbytery in 1891. He was licentiate at Saughtree Kirk for a few months in 1892. He was then assistant at Linlithgow, ordained at Buckie in 1898 and was later minister of Fordoun. William (16th/17th C.) mentioned as minister of Bedrule in 1599, having previously been at Penicuik. He had a son called John.

gale (gal) n., arch. collective noun for geese – ‘A gale of geese, a flock of geese, Teviotd. This is said to be a very ancient phrase’ [JoJ].

Galfrid (gal-frid) n. recorded as Vicar of Southdean in 1260. Galfrid or Galfridus was the lati- nised form of Jeffrey.

Gali see Gala

Gall (gawl) n. George (19th/20th C.) joiner in Hawick. He married Margaret, daughter of tailor John Riddle; she died in 1869, aged 39. Their son Robert was a collector with the Gas Company in Hawick.

Gallaslande (gaw-lis-lawnd) n. former lands in the Slitrig valley, listed in 1547/8 in an English communication about farms they had burned. They were the property of Clement Crozier, along with ‘Hoble Knowes’ (probably Hummelknowes). It seems likely that this is the same place as Hilliesland.

gallaynuel (gaw-lä-need) n., arch. a big, glut- tonous, ruthless man – ‘Wae be to them for a pack o’ greedy gallaynuel – they haena the mence of a miller’s yaud’ [ES] (noted in Roxburghshire by J. Jamieson).

gallivant (ga-li-van) v. to go about idly (particu- larly noted in Teviotdale by J. Jamieson, suggest- ing the local usage may be more common than in standard English).

the Gallopin Chairger (thu-gaw-lo-pin-chär-jur) n. nickname for James Hislop, also known as the ‘Gallopin’ Cadger’ – ‘Black Andra’ and the Birsin’ Badger, Tammy Robertson, Deevil Bell; The Blue Laird and the Gallopin’ Cadger, Baillie Birsleton and the Mell’ [HI].

Gallopin Davie (gaw-lo-pin-dä-vee) n. nick- name for David Broon.

Galloway (ga-ló-wä) n. Rev. Alexander (1847–1926) born in Tillicoultry, son of William and Isabella Dawson. He received his B.D. from Edinburgh University in 1872, was licensed by Edinburgh Presbytery that year and became assistant at Bowden, Lasswade and St. Mary’s, Partick. In 1876 he became minister at Milton of Balgonie and was admitted as assistant and successor to Minto Kirk in 1878, taking over fully from Rev. J.P. Macmorland in 1893. He was Lecturer on Church Music to the Divinity Students of the Scottish Universities 1912–14. In 1885 he married Margaret Rankin, daughter of William Smith, minister of Douglas. Their children were: William G., merchant in Japan, died in New York 1936; Isabella Dawson; Elizabeth Eleanor; and Alexander, Lieutenant in the K.O.S.B., later Instructor at Camberley Staff gallises n., arch. gallows, braces (peculiar double plural).

the Gallops (thu-gaw-lups) n. name for relatively new houses near Hassendeanbank. They were built on the pond for the former water wheel, which was filled in in the 1970s. The name comes from the popular name for some nearby fields.

galloway (ga-lō-wā) n. a small, study breed of horse, originally from Galloway, often used as a pack animal—‘...a party of Tynedale men passed the window in tattered clothes, driving lean galloways laden with coals’ [WSB].

the Galloway Road (thu-ga-lō-wā-rōd) n. former name for the road used for carrying coal from the Kielder area to Hawick, i.e. the ‘Note o the Gate’ or B6357. The name came from the Galloway ponies that were used to make the trips.

Gall Sike (gawl-sīk) n. small stream in Liddesdale, rising to the south of Dykecrofts farm and running roughly north-west to join Whithaugh Burn. The original house on Hillhouse farm appears to be shown on this stream on the 1718 survey of Buccleuch lands.

gallus (ga-lūs) adj., poet. bold, daring, self-confident, rash, reckless—‘...Ready to roar away in the gloaming Wi’ gallus young lads that think lichtly o’ scaith’ [DH], ‘...Airchie o’ the Reuch Sike, gallus auld Airchie, The lang nicht afore him, now’ [DH].

galore (ga-lōr) n., poet. plenty, superabundance—‘An’ he gafe thame galore for thair greed ...’ [HSR].

Galoshins (ga-lō-shinz) n. traditional folk play, common in many parts of Scotland, a variant of the ‘resurrection’ drama found in many parts of Britain (e.g. in England, where it is an example of a ‘mummers play’). The words of the play were passed down orally, and involve a hero called ‘Galoshin’, sometimes St. George, a doctor, and other characters. The height of popularity may have been the mid-19th century. It was typically performed for money by groups of ‘guisers’, usually young boys, visiting inns or private houses. Its timing was connected with either Halloween or Hogmanay (like other ‘guising’). It may be that this is the longest surviving example of a richer tradition dating back to Mediaval times. It is unclear how prevalent this play was in the Hawick area, but there are still some recollections in the early 21st century, from families connected to Bowden and Bonchester.

galt (gawlt) n., arch. a castrated boar (noted by J. Jamieson as a Roxburghshire word, but perhaps in error).

Galt (gawlt) n. former name for a town in Ontario, Canada, which was a common destination for Hawick emigrants in the 19th century. Settlement in an area along the Grand River was promoted by William Dickson, who sold lots to predominantly Scottish settlers. The town was originally called Shade’s Mill and was renamed Galt in 1825, after John Galt, Scottish novelist and Commissioner of the Canada Company. The town grew as an agricultural hub, with industry developing from the 1830s and the town becoming known as ‘the Manchester of Canada’. Originally the largest town in the area, it was eventually eclipsed by Berlin, which was later renamed Kitchener. The city of Galt continued to exist as a separate entity until 1973, when it became part of the new city of Cambridge, adjacent to Waterloo. Many street names in the area reveal the early Scottish influence. Local families with connections to this area include Aitkin, Amos, Cavers, Dryden, Kersel, Lamb, Lee (including James Paris Lee), Murray and Spalding.

game (gām) n., arch. sport, amusement—‘...none did resort to his house for game but such as were of a good age’ [PR1724].
game (gām) adj., arch. lame – ‘A game leg, a leg hurt by accident, so as to make the person lame, Roxb.; also Northumb.’ [JoJ] (compare the English ‘ganny’).

Gamel (ga-nel) n. clerk of the 12th century, during the reign of David I. With the permission of his sons Osulf and Ughtred, he granted the lands of ‘Caverum’ to Jedburgh Abbey probably around 1138. This gift was confirmed in charters by Earl Henry and by King William (in the period 1165–70), and reconfirmed in 1229. This was probably part of the Barony of Cavers (although Cavers Carre is a possibility).

the Games (thu-gānz) n. the Common Riding Games, held at Volunteer Park, also sometimes called ‘the Sports’. Amateur games, now long abandoned, were held on the Friday, with professional games on the Saturday, now moved to the Sunday. Until the early 19th century the Games were entirely amateur, with professional sportsmen only appearing later. In earlier times there was less of a distinction between the Games and the Races. In the 19th century there were Games on the Friday afternoon (after the Dinner) and on the Saturday morning, which were held at the Common Haugh, and included sprints and middle-distance running, hurdles, walking, jumping of several varieties, quoting, shot-putt, wrestling, Highland dancing and costume contests. There were also special races for boys and for old men. Professional cycling races were a feature in the very late 1800s. They were held on the Saturday morning at the Haugh from about 1855–67 and moved to the afternoon in 1868. The ‘Shows’ would also accompany the Games on the Haugh, and this must have been true from early times. The Games were moved to the Volunteer in 1893. The Amateur and Professional Games were switched back and forth between the Friday and Saturday in the early 20th century. The Amateur Games ending up on the Friday by 1913 and were discontinued in 1961. The Cornet stopped attending the Saturday Games from 1964. It became a tradition for the ‘Big Fower’ to engage in a pillow-fight balanced on a beam, and for this to take place at the Games. The Games were held on the Saturday before Common Riding week in 2005.

Gamescleuch (gānz-klooch) n. ruined 16th century tower near Ettrick village, on the opposite side of the valley to Thirlestane. It is said to have been built for Simon Scott (2nd son of Sir John of Thirlestane), who may have been poisoned by his step-mother on the eve of his wedding. The lands there were also referred to as Thornhill and Ettrickside and were formerly referred to as a steadng of Mount Common. They were once Crown property, in the King’s hands in the 1480s, but granted to Adam Scott in 1490 ‘without grassum owing to its sterility’, and again in 1492. They were again assigned to Adam Scott of Tushielaw in 1510. William Scott in Sundhope was tenant in 1541, paying £14. They were held by the Scotts of Thirlestane in 1573, but shortly afterwards passed to the Scotts of Tushielaw and then back again, following a ‘deceit arbitral’ by Sir Walter of Brauxholme in 1603. Arthur Scott of Gamescleuch was Laird in the 1590s. The dispute over these lands grew into a feud between the Thirlestane and Tushielaw branches. The murder of Walter Scott of Gamescleuch by John Scott of Tushielaw in 1609 may have been the inspiration for the ‘Dowie Dens of Yarrow’. The lands were also known as ‘Thornehill’, and in 1621 and 1667 were described having an ‘outset called Etriksyd’. There is now a caravan site there – ‘Gae warn the lads of Thirlistone, Gemscleugh, and Newburgh fair, With Tushielaw, and Midgehope, in armour to appear’ [WSB], ‘When the magic wing of the midnight hour Stoops low to the worn old Gamescleuch walls . . . ’ [WHO] (it is ‘Gamilliscleuch’ in 1479, ‘Gamliscleuch’ in 1486, ‘Gilmyscleuch’ in 1490, ‘Gammilliscleuch’ and ‘Gemmyscleuch’ in 1492, ‘Gamilliscleuch’ in 1510, ‘Gammiscleuch’ in 1541, ‘Gemmilliscleuch’ in 1573, ‘Gammilliscleuch’ in 1581, ‘Gammiescleuch’ in 1585, ‘Gamliscleuch’ in 1592, ‘Gemilliscleuch’ in 1603, ‘Gamelliscleuch’ in 1605, ‘Gennyscleuch’ in 1608, ‘Gammilliscleuch’ in 1621 and ‘Gemmilliscleuch’ in 1667; it is marked ‘Gemmillischleuch’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map; not to be confused with Gilmsanscleuch, also on Ettrick Water).

Garfield Street (gawr-feeld-stree’) n. housing south-east of the High Street, built in 1882. The houses were demolished in 1977 to make way for a car park, with only part of a factory remaining. Note that on the west side of the street the addresses of the bottom houses were Lothian Street, while the upstairs ones were Garfield Street. Named after U.S. President James Garfield, assassinated in 1881.

Garland (gawr-lind) n. David (b.c.1815) Hawick character of the mid-1800s. He married Mary Haig in Hawick in 1837. He worked as a stocking-maker, living at Kirkton in 1841 and appears to be deceased 10 years later, when his family lived at the Loan. His children included David, Janet and Agnes – ‘Kiny Stick and Daavid Garland, London Laidlaw and Little Dan, Johnny the Gover (in a far land), And Wat the Drummer leads the van’ [HI].

Garlawcleuch (gawr-law-klooch) n. former name for lands near Blackhouse in the Yarrow valley. They were Crown lands leased along with Blackhouse from at least 1456 until 1502. The lease was held by James Alemoor of that Ilk in 1479, James Oliver and his son in 1488, then Robert, Lord Lyle and then again the family of Alemoor of that Ilk. Patrick Alemoor was recorded there in 1494/5. The land was feued by David Pringle to James Stewart of Traquair in 1512. William Stewart was tenant in 1541 (spelled ‘Gairlacleuch’, ‘Garlacleuch’, ‘Garlacleuch’, ‘Garlawcleuch’, ‘Garriochcluch’, etc.).

Garnel Sike (gar-nul-sik) n. small stream in the headwaters of the Borthwick, joining the Craikhope Burn from the west, between Craikhope and Comb (probably from old Scots for a granary).

Garnet (gar-ni’) n. David (18th C.) groom at Minto in 1793 and 1794, when he was working for Sir Gilbert Elliot.

the Garrison (thu-gaw-ree-sin) n. popular name for a former tenement at the corner of the Howegate and Silver Street. ‘Hab o’ Hawick’ was supposed to have lived there in the 16th century. It was a 3 storey building, pended on the ground floor and with a corner turnpike stair. It was demolished in about 1799, and was apparently so well built that it had to be undermined and fell into a mass that blocked the street. The site was rebuilt in 1801 and was later the location for a printer’s, a post office, a library and a shop.
garron-nail (gaw-rin-näl) n., arch. a large nail —...with eighteen garron nails for sarking and scating the house of Woelie’ [GT] (from Old Scots ‘garron’, a beam).

Garthside (gawrth-sid) n. farm just to the east of Denholm. An ancient burial cist was discovered near here in 1902 (perhaps just across the A698), consisting of several red freestone slabs containing a few pieces of bone. gas (gas) n. Hawick’s gas lighting first appeared on the High Street in 1831, being the first among Border towns (and replacing the 60 oil lamps of 1813). The lighting ceremony was celebrated with a banquet. Electric lighting arrived in the early 20th century and one of the last lamps (from Elm Grove) is preserved in the Museum. Hawick Gaslight Company started in 1830 on part of the old Under Haugh (now Commercial Road), moving to Mansfield Road around 1882. In the early years the company was run by a manager with a single assistant. The manager’s house was formerly at the other side of the ford at the foot of Walter’s Wynd. The company also had a show-room at 66 High Street. Nationalised as part of Scottish Gas in 1948, the main works were dismantled in 1968 after conversion from coal gas to natural gas in 1964. The town was converted around 1970, with new pipes etc., to use the North Sea supply. However, the gasometers on the High Street in 1831, being the first among the gas works, near the present Burns Club from about 1830, moving to Mansfield Road from about 1882. The three gasometers there were familiar sights to generations of Teries — ‘...Juist hau strecht doon bye the Gas Works, And ye’re there’, says Robbie Dye’ [DH].

Gasscoing n. George (?) George (?) Burgh Treasurer and Callants’ Club President 1930. He was also a Church Warden at St. Cuthbert’s and organist there.

the Gas Hoose (thu-gaws-hoos) n. the gas works, originally at the north end of Teviot Bridge from 1830, moving to Mansfield Road around 1882 — ‘...As we sailed from the Gas-hoose bar’ [WE] (also sometimes hyphenated).

Gaskin (gas-kin) n. Benjamin Thomas of Tushielaw (d.1818) son of Col. Gaskin of the Barbados. In 1818 he married Anne Verona Simmons, who succeeded to the estates of her mother, Barbara Anderson. This included Tushielaw and Hislop. He may have taken the surname Anderson when gaining the lands, but died shortly after the marriage. His posthumously born son Benjamin was listed as ‘Benjamin T.G. Anderson, Esq. of Tushielaw’ in 1838, among the major landowners in Hawick Parish. His widow secondly married Rev. Thomas Gordon Torry.

Gass (gaws) n. George (?) George (?) Burgh Treasurer and Callants’ Club President 1930. He was also a Church Warden at St. Cuthbert’s and organist there.

Gate Burn (gā’-burn) n. stream running in the area just beyond the Caa Knowe. It rises in several streamlets and runs in a roughly south-western direction, joining the Thieveshole Sike and crossing the road at the Routlawford before joining the Allan Water. Its course once formed part of the boundary of the old Common (it is probably named after ‘Southfieldgate’, a former farmstead near there).

gate end (gā’-end) n. part of town, neighbourhood, immediate surroundings of one’s residence – ‘git back ti yer ain gate end’, ‘A was in that gate-end, so A thowt A’d just drop in an sei ee’, ‘The whole gate-end kens = all the neighbours know’ [ECS], ‘It’s mony a month sin oo last saw ye in this gate-end’ [JEDM], ‘But Wat o’ Harden this nicht will ken ‘To keep his neb in his ain gate en’’ [WL] (also written ‘gate en’ and sometimes hyphenated ‘gate-end’).

Gatehousecote (gā-tees-, gā’-ees-kō’, gā’-hoos-ko’) n. Gatehousecote, farm between Abbotrule and Hallrule Mill on the Foderlee Burn. John Turnbull was recorded there in 1493. John Turnbull and Andrew Turnbull are recorded there in 1502. In 1516 the tenants were Andrew Turnbull, William his brother, Thomas, Patrick and David. The lands were acquired in 1569 (along with several others) by Adam French and were described as being ‘with woods’ in 1588. Jock Turnbull was tenant there in 1575. There were Lorraines there in the early 17th century. It was among lands whose superiority was inherited by daughters of George Scott (brother of Sir Walter of Whitslade) in 1670, when it was described as having a mill. This was probably a small threshing mill, powered by water from a pond. The lands (or their superiority) were among those inherited by William Kerr of Abbotrule in 1680. John Shiel was a tenant there in 1684 when he was listed as a fugitive who had attended conveicnticles. In 1694 there were 3 householders (probably tenants) listed, Margaret Lorraine, Thomas Pringle and William Turnbull, as well as 3 cottars. It was long part of the Abbotrule estate, although almost sold off in the 1790s after being combined with Over Bonchester. It was a major farm on Abbotrule, having its own entrance lodge. It was listed among the properties of Charles Kerr of Abbotrule in 1811, and valued at £298. William Brodie was farmer in the early part of the 19th century. Henry Elliot was tenant in the 1840s, followed by David Henderson, John Usher, Peter Mackinnon and Donald Teacher into the 20th century. Around 1875 it was owned by David Henderson of Abbotrule and valued at about £300. Tom Douglas was owner in the early 20th century, when it was valued at about £223. It may also have been known as ‘Yethouse’ (the origin of the name is probably the Old English ‘gat hus cote’, meaning ‘cottage beside the goat shed’; it is first recorded as ‘Gaithouscott’ in 1493 and 1494/5, is ‘gaithous cote’ in 1502. ‘Gaittuscott’ in 1550, ‘Gatthouscott’ in 1569, ‘Gaithouscott’ in 1575, ‘Gaithouscott’ in 1588, ‘Gatascot’ in 1595, ‘Gaithouslok’ in 1616, ‘Gattascott’ in 1619, ‘Gatiscott’ in 1670, transcribed ‘Goatsorecoattis’ in 1680, ‘Gattascot’ in 1684, ‘Gaithouscott’ in 1694 and ‘Gatehouse-Scott’ in 1811; it appears as ‘Gathouscott’ on Gordon’s c. 1650 map and ‘Gatehousecott’ on Blaue’s 1654 map; it is ‘Gatehaughscot’ on a 1788 gravestone).

gatelin (gā-lin) adv., poet. directly, in the direction of – ‘Och that my wayes wer mae gatelin til keepe thy staatutes!’ [HSR], prep., poet. towards – ‘The towir o’ Lebanon, whilk luiks to get { `Aw’ll be hanged if aw gang a fit past yonder till aw gate a weetin’, anyway’ [WNK] (this is not a common form, cf. git and geet).

Gatliehill

Gatliehill (gaunt-lee-hil) n. former house on the Hermitage Water, roughly opposite Brahidie. It is probably the ‘Catle…’ listed on the c.1376 rental roll of Liddesdale alongside Gorrenberry and Dinlees and the ‘Catle’ on the rental roll of 1541 between Brahidie and Dinlees. The name seems to have disappeared (it is marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map; it is ‘Catle’ in 1376 and ‘Catlie’ in 1541).

Gatton (gaunt-in) n. Frances (18th C.) His Majesty’s Engineer for Scotland, who was made an Honorary Burgess in 1740, probably while passing through during work on canals and tunnels near Pinkie and Inveresk.

Gattonside (gaunt-in-sid, gaunt-in-sid) n. village on the north bank of the Tweed across from Melrose, with a medieval plan and many old orchards. The village was burned by Herfords army in 1545. There are remains of a pre-Reformation chapel. Gattonside House is an 1826 Georgian mansion. The suspension bridge to Melrose was built about 1830. The area was formerly known for its orchards (it appears as ‘Galtunesside’ in a map; it is ‘Catle’ in 1376 and ‘Catlie’ in 1541).

Gaylor (gā-hur) n. David (1846/7–1924) from the Dunbar area, he came to Hawick as a young man to learn the watchmaking trade with Mr. Gowans and Mr. Rutherford. He then went briefly to Bishop Auckland before returning to Hawick in 1875 to set up his own watchmaker’s and jeweller’s business. This was originally based at 14 Howegate, moving to 59 High Street about 1877, where he worked for 47 years. He was an early photographer around Hawick and would put on shows in the Exchange Hall and elsewhere, with his son William assisting, and his niece Dorothy providing piano accompaniment. The showing of local slideshows was continued by his son William and lasted until the 1950s; his early ‘magic lantern slides’ collection is still in the Museum. His Border Kinematograph business (with partner local manufacturer Sime) made films in the period 1899–1903 and they at one point considered buying the ‘Wee Thea’, but wound up due to lack of financing. Their films represent the earliest moving images of Hawick Common Riding and other local events, and are only a few years later than the first known films in Scotland. He was for a long time a Deacon in the Congregational Kirk and is said to have identified with the ‘Psychic Movement’ in later life. He married Jeanie (or Jane), daughter of blacksmith William Pow, and she died in 1919, aged 70. Their children were: David William, who became a Congregational minister at the East E.U. Church in Greenock; Elizabeth S., also known as ‘Bessie’; William Pow, who followed his father as an optician; and Margaret Jean, who married Andrew Dalgleish and had 2 sons who were Galashiels builders. William Pow ‘W.P.’ (1880/1–1963) son of David, whose jewellers business he carried on. He was known locally as a sportsman, amateur actor and singer, who made Adam Grant’s ‘Three Humorous Songs’ his own in the first quarter of the 20th century. He served as the 5th Treasurer for the Congregational Kirk. He continued his father’s interest in photography, continuing ‘lantern slide’ shows until the 1950s. After WWI he also became an optician, giving up the jewellery side of the business. He married Helen Scott Clark, who died in 1964, aged 78. David William Pow was their son.

Gaylor’s (gā-hurz) n. jeweller’s, opticians and photography shop at 59 High Street. It was founded by David Gaylor in 1875 as a jewellers and watchmakers, becoming an opticians after WWI, extending into photographic supplies and copying. It closed in 2008.

Geo. & Jas. Oliver

George

John Elliot, set up around 1791. The firm was established as 'John & George Oliver, writers and bank agents' in 1829 after John Elliot moved to Jedburgh. It was a partnership between Hawick's Town Clerk John Oliver and his eldest son. When John died in 1849 a younger son James came into the partnership. Their original offices were at 11 Buccleuch Street in part of what became Pesco’s. In 1852 the firm are listed as writers on Buccleuch Street, as well as insurance agents for the British Guarantee and for North British. From about 1852 (although there is some confusion over this date) they were then in the upstairs offices of the Commercial Building at 4 Tower Knowe, and remained there until moving to 13 High Street in 1986. Latterly the firm has also been an estate agents. Their register of sasines for 1779–1840 is in the National Archives.

rule the Jacobite rebellion occurred in 1715, although with little support in the Borders. The King spent much of his life in Hanover, and never learned to speak much English – ‘Your Geordie was a German laird, That used to delve his ain kail yard!’ [T]. George II (1683–1760) King from 1727, son of George I. George III (1738–1820) King from 1760, grandson of George II. He initially took an active role in government (losing America for example). However, he had a nervous breakdown, suffered from the hereditary disease porphyria, and was declared insane in 1810. His domestic life was uncharacteristically tranquil, with his devoted wife Charlotte Sophia. It is recorded that a fiddler was paid for playing before the Bailies and Justices of the Peace in Hawick when he was proclaimed as King in 1760 and further money was paid for liquor at his accession to the throne in 1761. Hawick officials used to regularly celebrate his June 4th birthday with the ‘King’s Rantin’. Half-pennies of his reign were often counterfeit, merchants in Jedburgh refusing to accept them, leading to a legal battle in 1785, which went all the way to the Lords.

George IV (1762–1830) King from 1820. He was appointed as Regent in 1811, with his father being unfit to rule. In Hawick there was a festive meeting to mark the occasion, with Bailie James Oliver proposing the toast ‘The Mucking o’ Geordie’s byre’. In 1822 he became the first reigning monarch to visit Scotland since 1650. He stayed for 2 weeks at Dalkeith House as a guest of the Duke of Buccleuch. In Edinburgh, George IV Bridge was named after him. Obsese and unpopular, it was hoped his visit would calm the rising Radical movement in Scotland. The event was partly organised by Sir Walter Scott, and led to an upsurge in the use of tartan for formal occasions. He has been portrayed by Rupert Everett, Peter Ustinov and Hugh Laurie. George V King of Hanover (1819–78) son of Ernest Augustus, born 3 days after his cousin, Queen Victoria. His full name was George Frederick Alexander Charles Ernest Augustus, and like other members of his family, was usually considered to have no surname. He became blind in a childhood accident. He acceded to the Hanoverian throne in 1851, when he also became the 2nd Duke of Cumberland and Teviotdale. He escaped to Austria when Hanover was annexed by Prussia in 1866. He married Princess Marie Alexandrina, daughter of Joseph, Duke of Saxe-Altenburg. He had one son, Ernest Augustus William Adolphus George Frederick, who became the 3rd and last Duke of Cumberland and Teviotdale. He spent most of his last years in Paris, where he died. George V (1865–1936) King from 1911. For his coronation celebrations in Hawick there was a procession from the Town Hall to the Old Parish Church, and then a parade up to the Mote for a ceremony in which the Duke of Buccleuch handed over that land to the town. George VI (1895–1952) King from 1936. He made a ‘secret’ visit to Hawick in 1943 to inspect the troops and returned in 1947 with Queen Elizabeth (the Queen Mother) and other members of the Royal Family, including the future Queen. His coronation in 1937 was marked in Hawick with a great parade of bands and floats, some of which exists on film. Trees were also planted in the Park, and a miniature silver spade used on this occasion (presented to Provost Fisher’s wife) is in the Museum.

Gibb (gib) n. David Scobbie, M.B.E. (1933–2007) born in Hawick, he was an apprentice at Braemar before doing National Service in the Air Force. He was later a traveller for Braemar before joining accountants John J. Welch & Co. in 1976, where he remained until retirement. He was well known locally as a singer, with a strong bass voice. He sung regularly at the Common Riding, particularly ‘Up Wi’ the Banner’, ‘Pawkie Paiterson’ and ‘Clinty’. He was a founder member of the Hawick Amateur Operatic Society and P.S.A. Choir. He also sung with Carlisle’s Abbey.
Singers and the Border Television Choir. A committed churchman, he was Elder and Treasurer of Trinity Church. He received the M.B.E. for service to entertainment in 2002. He added music to James Y. Hunter’s poem ‘Hawick Lasses – 1514’ in about 2001 and sings the song on the 2006 CD ‘Hawick and Teviotdale in Song and Poetry’.

Gibson (gib-sin) n. Adam ‘Yeddie’ (19th C.) Hawick man, famous for his angling skills, for whom the song ‘Lean Yeddie Gibson’ was written after his death while fishing the Teviot in the 1850s. He is buried in the old Kirkyard. John (1774–1814) born in Ayr. He was a soldier with the 94th Regiment of Foot. Posted to Hawick in 1795 (probably related to the French prisoners of war), he married Janet, daughter of Hawick butcher Gideon Renwick. Posted elsewhere, the couple returned to Hawick around 1802 and he worked as a tailor. He then re-enlisted, deserted, was press ganged into the navy, jumped ship, worked in Langholm and Kelso, and was acquitted for desertion. He was back in Hawick by 1810, and the family had 11 children. He is recorded as a tailor in 1810 when 2 of his unnamed children died. In late 1813 he murdered his wife at their home in the Mill Port, apparently accusing her 12th child of being fathered by a Frenchman, and of poisoning him. He was the last person to be hung in Hawick, the event taking place in the Haugh; this was unusual, and may in fact never have previously happened in the Town. He wrote ‘Some particulars of the life of John Gibson’ while awaiting execution. It is basically a screed on the evils of drink. Perhaps the only child to survive was Gideon, who was a witness to the murder, but at 10 years old too young to give evidence.
John, W.S. (19th C.) solicitor who was an agent for the Buccleuch estates, in at least the period 1822–78. He was originally called ‘younger’. He was present at Brantxholme at the banquet held in honour of the Duke of Buccleuch in 1839. Miss (19th C.) teacher at the girl’s school at Cleuch Head in Hobkirk Parish in the 1860s. She could be inspiration for the poem ‘The Flower of Rule’ by Robert Allan. Rev. Mungo (c.1660–1735/6) graduating from Glasgow University in the early 1690s, he was ordained as minister of Abbotrule Parish in 1698. He was translated to Sanquhar in 1713, and remained there until his death (brought on by a stroke suffered in the pulpit). He had 2 sons, George and William, and 1 daughter, Janet. Robert (d.1810) stocking-maker in Hawick, son of Walter. His unnamed child died in 1810. Walter (18th C.) mason in Hawick. His son William died in 1798. He may be the probably the Walter who married Janet Miller in Wilton in 1755 or the Walter who married Janet Laidlaw in Wilton in 1766. William (d.1798) mason in Hawick, son of Walter. He had an unnamed child who died in 1798. He is probably the William born to Walter and Janet Miller in Wilton in 1756 (also spelled ‘Gibson’ etc.).
Gibson’s

Gibson’s (gib-sinz) n. temperance hotel of the early 20th century situated on North Bridge Street. It became the Kings Hotel sometime after WWII.

Gid (gid) n. short form of Gideon.

Giddenscleuch (gi-dinz-klooch) n. Gideon-scleuch, farmstead near the of the side road from Teviothead, just before Merrylaw. The stream Giddens Cleuch joins the Teviot just there. 4 archaeological features, perhaps hut bases, were found on a broad terrace about 600 m south-west of the farm. The lands were listed in the early 16th century as part of those held by John Gledstains of Cocklaw and that Ilk. It was among lands purchased by Gilbert Elliott of Stobs from Douglas of Cars in 1620. It was ‘Guiddigscleuch’ among lands owned by the Elliotts of Stobs in the latter part of the 17th century. However, it appears to have been in the Barony of Cavers when Sir William Douglas succeeded as Baron (i.e. superior of these lands) in 1687 and when his brother Archibald succeeded in 1698. The lands were included among those of Primiecleuch (along with Corriesike and Langbyre) when sold by William Elliott of Stobs to a group of Elliots in 1670, but may have been bought back shortly afterwards. They were among lands inherited by Sir William Elliott from his father in 1692. There were Armstrongs there in 1841 (the name means ‘the ravine belonging to Gideon’; it first appeared as ‘Guidwynscleuch’ in 1509/10, is ‘Guddisclucht’ in 1519/20, ‘Guidingscleuche’ in the early 17th century, and later is ‘Gudinscleunhe’, transcribed ‘Gudduscleguch’ in 1620, ‘Gandinscleuch’ in 1687, ‘Guiddigscleuch’ in 1692, ‘Gidingscleugh’ in 1694 and ‘Guiddinscleuch’ in 1698: it is marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Guddingscleuch’; there is presumably a connection with a local family that used Gideon as a first name, e.g. the Scotts of Harden).

Gideon Scott & Sons (gi-dee-in-sko’-insonz) n. Hawick millwrights, set up by Gideon Scott in the latter part of the 18th century. The premises were on the Cross Wynd. Gideon’s sons Gilbert and James were also millwrights. The firm’s assets were sequestered in 1842.

gig (gig) n. a pony trap, light two-wheeled carriage drawn by one horse. These were still commonly used in local rural areas until about WWII – ‘Hei was supposed teh be the first man in the toon teh own a horse an gig (that was alicht twae-wheeled kind o’ buggy pulled be a horse …)’ [BW1979].

Gigg (gig) n. Mary (18th C.) housemaid at Minto in 1791, when she was working for Sir Gilbert Elliot.

gigot (ji-go’) n. one of the best cuts of meat, particularly a leg of mutton.

gigs (gigz) n., pl. modern term for musical bookings. Well known acts that have appeared in Hawick include: David Bowie (1966); Dr. Feelgood (1985); Fish (1992); 5ive (2017); Morrissey (2011); the Proclaimers (2003, 2012); Runrig (1989, 1996, 2000); Showaddywaddy (1988); and the Stranglers (1977).

Gigson’s Flat (gig-sinz-flaw’) n. former lands in Liddesdale, recorded as being vacant in the 1541 rental roll, where it is ‘Gigsonis Flatt’ or perhaps ‘Gibsonisflatt’. The location is uncertain, but it is listed after Kilgarth.

Gilboa Wud (gil-bo-u-wud) n. name given to a large plantation to the north-east of Ruberslaw (the origin of the name is unclear, but it may not be very old; it is marked ‘Gilbo Wood’ on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Gilchrist (gil-krist, -krist) n. Rev. John (d.1746) from Dumfriesshire, he was son of Mungo in Holm of Dalgarno. He was presented to Bedrule Parish in late 1713 and ordained there in early 1714, succeeding James Borland. He was a substitute preacher in Hawick in 1721, when the minister was ill. He dissented from the Act of Assembly of 1740 which deposed 8 seceding ministers. He remained at Bedrule until his death, and was succeeded by George Dickson. His only daughter married John Cranston, the minister of Ancrum.

the Gilded Chamber (thu-gil-deed-cham-bur) n. a series of get togethers taking place initially in a golden decorated room at the Gretel bar in the 1960s, which grew into an annual event. It is a sing-song for men only, and traditionally accompanied by potted-meat sandwiches.

Gildhouse (gild-hows) n. former name for lands near the Ettrick valley, probably associated with the later farm of Gildiesgreen, between Hellmoor Loch and Upper Shaws Loch. They were formerly Crown lands, split into the Weststead, Middlestead and Eaststead. In 1479 Thomas Scott had remission for a fee for these lands. David, son of Walter Scott in Headshaw leased part of the lands in 1486. John Cranston of that Ilk leased part of the lands in 1492. Robert Scott of Stiches was leasing the Weststead in 1501, when that was referred to as ‘alias Dodbank’. In 1502 the eastern part was said to be known as Baillielee and was leased to Peter Turnbull in 1510.
Gildshaw

Gildshaw (gild-shaw) n. lands in Liddesdale, precise location uncertain. They are recorded as ‘Gildshaw’ in a rental roll of 1376, with a value of 6 shillings and 8 pence.

gill (jil) n. a unit of measurement equal to one quarter of a pint or about 142 millilitres for Imperial measures. Note that Scots gills were at one time about one third greater in quantity. Scottish bars generally served spirits in shots of one fifth of a gill, but some used one quarter. A metric measure of 25 millilitres is now more common. A ‘Hawick Gill’ was once a term for half an imperial pint – ‘Till gills intae half mutchkins turned, Half mutchkins intae bottles, An’ mair the wit an’ fancy burned The mair we wat oor throttles’ [VW], ‘When I look back on time that’s past, On siller spent sae ill, I mourn that I, to mend the warst, Took aye another gill’ [DA], ‘A gill inside hiserk and a glint on his powe, Nin-nid-noddin’, and the merry fit tappin’ . . . ’ [DH].

gill (gil) n., arch. a gully, narrow valley, ravine – ‘Gil, (‘g’ hard). A steep narrow glen . . . It is generally applied to a gully whose sides have resumed a verdant appearance in consequence of the grass growing, Roxb.’ [JoJ] (also written ‘gil’; the word survives in place names, generally for streams in higher areas, e.g. Hog Gill, Long Gill and Rough Gill to the west of Newcastle, as well as the lands of Lodgell Gill, Ramsiegill, etc.).

Gill (gil) n. Peter (16th .) listed among people who were owed money by William Scott, younger of Branxholme, when he died in 1552. Several of the people listed before him were from the Hawick area.

the Gill (thu-gill) n. popular name for area around Gillside and Gillbraehead, south of Newcastle – ‘The fields alang the waterside; The fire abune the Gill; Auld Clintoche where the hool-lets hide; The loanin’ up the hill’ [ECB].

Gillan (gi-lin) n. Rev. James (c.1629–68) graduating from Edinburgh University in 1650, he became Minister at Cavers in 1657 or perhaps 1658. He was deprived in 1662 for refusing to conform to Episcopacy, and forced to leave the Presbytery of Jedburgh. He moved to Edinburgh, and then out to Currie for his health (and because outed ministers were then banned from the city). However, one night in 1668 he was seized by a group of soldiers, who claimed to be searching for the person who had tried to assassinate Bishop Sharp (actually James Mitchell, after whom Mitchell’s Slack was named). They forced him to run back to Edinburgh at midnight and stand outside waiting for the West Port to open, after which he was imprisoned. The next day he was taken before the Privy Council, but dismissed by them when they realised the mistake. He died 2 days later, probably as a result of the harsh treatment he had received. His name was usually spelled ‘Gillon’. His sister Elizabeth married William Forrest of Norserk. It is unclear whether he was related to the later ministers of St. Boswells and Hawick, but he was unmarried. He may be buried in Greyfriars Edinburgh. Rev. Robert (1761–1824) born in St. Boswells, son of Robert who was minister there. He was educated at St. Mary’s College and Edinburgh University, licensed by Jedburgh Presbytery and ordained at Ettrick in 1787. He was translated to Hawick in 1789, being presented by Henry, Duke of Buccleuch. However, there is an existing letter from the Magistrates and Town Council to the Duke of Buccleuch, protesting the appointment, so he was presumably not a popular choice. Despite this, he remained until 1800, when he was accused of an irregularity of some sort and demitted his charge, moving to Edinburgh. Nevertheless, he remained one of the Orrock Trustees. He paid the Horse Tax in Hawick in the period 1790–97. About 1799 he contributed to the local subscription to support the war against France. In 1793 he wrote an account of the town for the Old Statistical Account of Scotland, which contains valuable tidbits of information (including details of the beginnings of manufacturing in the town). He also wrote several books, including ‘An abridgement of acts of General Assemblies of the Church of Scotland from the year 1638 to 1802 inclusive’ (1803) printed in Hawick, ‘A short view of modern astronomy, for the use of schools and private classes’ (1814) and ‘A compendium of ancient and modern geography’ (1823). He also edited ‘The Scottish pulpit, a collection of sermons’ (1823). In 1798 he married Mannie (or Marion), daughter of William Campbell, minister of Lilliesleaf, and she died in 1845 at the age of 63. Their son Robert was born in Hawick and became an eminent minister of Inchinnan, Glasgow. Their other children were William, Margaret, Joseph (possibly the ’Joseph Gillon, Esq. Edm.’ who subscribed to Jamieson’s Scots dictionary in 1808), Alexander Murray, Cauvin and Agnes Farquharson. Rev. Dr. Robert (1799–1879) born in Hawick, son of minister Robert. He studied at Edinburgh High School and University, was licensed in Selkirk in 1829 and ordained in Stamfordham, Northumberland in 1830. He was then minister at South Shiel, Holytown (Lanarkshire), Wishaw, Abbotshall (Fife) and then St. John’s (Glasgow) for 14 years. When a thunderstorm broke out during a fiery sermon he preached at Hawick during his early days, it is said that one parishioner remarked ’You was grand scenery for Dr Gillan’s sermon’. He was active in social and political movements in Glasgow and was conferred a doctorate of divinity by Glasgow University in 1853. He moved to the small parish church of Inchinnan, Renfrewshire in 1861, but continued to lecture broadly. He was presented with his portrait in 1870 and was Moderator of the General Assembly in 1873. He published many of his sermons, including ’A General Fast Sermon’ (1832) and ’The Decalogue’ (1856). In 1833 he married Anne, daughter of George Green, minister at Cummuck. She died in 1847 and he secondly married Laura, daughter of John Buthry of Woodville. His son George Green was chaplain in the East India Company. He died in Inchinnan Manse (also written ’Gillon’).

Gillbeck (gil-bek) n. possible name for a farmstead in Liddesdale. It is transcribed as ’Gillbeck’ in the 1718 survey of lands of the Scotts of Buccleuch, when it was combined with Nether and Over Steele, along with other small farmsteads. It might be associated with the nearby Gill Sike.

Gillbraeheid (gil-brā-heed) n. Gillbraehead, farmstead in Liddesdale, of the B6357 between Gillside and Demainholm. It was formerly ’Gillbraehead’. This was where the minister of the Castleton Burgher Kirk lived in the 1760s to the end of the 18th century, and where their first meeting house was built. Thomas Turnbull was there in 1821 and James Armstrong in 1841. Thomas Chapman was caret there in 1861 and Richard Telfer was there in 1868 (it is marked as ’Gillbraehead’ on Stobie’s 1770 map and is ’Geelbraehead’ in 1799).

Gillespie (gi-les-pee) n. Marion (17th C.) recorded in the Council records of 1665 when she confessed to pulling the hair out of the head of Walter Lorraine. She was also accused of harassing another man at about the same time. She may be the Marion, daughter of Robert, born in Hawick in Hawick in 1639. Robert (17th C.) smith in Hawick. He was a Councillor who signed the 1640 ’Act of Bailies and Council’ and was recorded being elected to the Council in 1648. He is probably the Robert who married Marion Stoddart and whose children born in Hawick included: John (b.1636); Marion (b.1639); Patrick (b.1641); and Stephen (b.1642). The witnesses to the 1640 baptism were William Wilson and James Paisley.

Gillfit (gil-fi’) n. Gillfoot, former farm in Castleton Parish near the modern Gillfoot Moss. The farm of ’Guylefoot’ is listed among the Liddesdale possessions of the Sheriff of Teviotdale in 1632, and also ’Guylfoot’ among the lands of Thomas Kerr of Ancrum. James Scott was tenant there in 1694, with John Little and William Elliot also listed as householders. It is shown on a survey carried out for Anne, Duchess of Buccleuch in 1718, when it consisted of 266 acres and was bounded by the Liddel Water, Demainholm, Whisgills, Side and Millholm. William Stewart was farmer there in the mid-18th century. Robert Elliot and family were there in 1835. John Armstrong was shepherd at ’Guilfoot Upper’ in 1851 and William Little a labourer at ’Guilfoor Under’. William Armstrong was shepherd there in 1861 (it is ’Guylefoot’ in 1632, ’Gillfoot’ in 1694, ’Guilfoot’ in 1718 and ’Geelfoot’ in 1760; ’Gillfoot’ is marked on Stobie’s 1770 map; the name is surely just the foot of the gully).

Gillfoot Moss (gil-fi’-mos) n. Gillfoot Moss, boggy area in Castleton Parish, on the west side of the Liddel valley, opposite Mangerton. There is the remains of a farmstead there, including foundations of 2 buildings, as well as enclosures and rig lines visible from aerial photography. This is surely the old farm of Gillfit).

Gillheed (gil-heed) n. farmstead in Liddesdale, situated on Foulwood Sike, south-west of Mangerton. The name presumably derives from being at the head of the gully (’Guelhead’ is marked on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Gillhoose (gil-hoos) n. former lands in Liddesdale, listed as ’Gillhouse’ (after ’Gillesteide’) in a rental roll of c.1376. It was valued at 4 shillings.

gillie (gi-lee) n., poet. a male servant – ’Wha sendet tokins an’ ferlies intil the middle o’ thee, O Egypt, apoon Pharaoh an’ a’ his gillies’ [HSR].

gilliegawkie (gi-lee-gaw-kee) n., poet. a foolish or silly young man (used by John Hogg in 1806).

Gillies (gi-leez) n. Brian (1957–) son of George, he grew up in Burnfoot. At the age of 10 he joined the Hawick Legion Pipe Band. He was an apprentice knitter at Barrie & Kersel and then worked at Hogg’s. On the spur of the moment he signed up for the Royal Scots Dragoon Guards, where he spent 9 years as a gunner and joined the regimental band, eventually becoming Pipe Major. He returned to Hawick to be a knitter, but later served as Pipe Major with the Oman Army Pipe Band. Returning to Scotland again he joined the Annan Ex-Serviceman’s Pipe Band. He later worked at Johnstones of Elgin in Hawick. He has played pipe solos at many events, including the Edinburgh Tattoo in 1985. He scored ‘Highland Cathedral’ for pipes, based on a tune written by German musicians Ulrich Roever and Michael Korb in 1982 (originally intended for a military band, rather than pipe band). He wrote the song ‘Wauchope Cairn’ which the Burns Club sing on their annual visit to Wauchope, as well as ‘The James Thomson Bridge’ to commemorate that opening. Rev. James Wardrop (b.1862) trained at Glasgow Evangelical Union Hall, he was place in India with the London Missionary Society. In 1899 he became minister of Newcastle-ton Congregational Church, remaining until 1905. He was then minister at Muirkirk, Ayrshire and at Manse Street, Fraserburgh.

Gilligan (gi-lee-gin) n. James (b.1805/6) born in Sicily, he was a clothes and furniture merchant in Hawick, at 8 Howegate. In Slater’s 1852 directory he is listed as a ‘broker’. In 1861 he was at 2 Howegate, listed as a clothier employing 11 men and 3 women. His wife was Elizabeth and they had children: Sarah; James; Robert; Charles; and John. In the 1841 census he is a pedlar at about No. 18 Howegate.

Gillis (gi-lis) n. David (19th/20th C.) schoolmaster at St. Cuthbert’s School from early 1894 until he retired in 1915. He was also heavily involved in local musical activities and the Volunteer movement. He moved to Greenlaw after he left Hawick.

gillore (gi-lör) n., arch. galore, plenty, wealth (noted by J. Jamieson).

gill-maw (gil-maw) n., arch. a gourmand of coarse manners, guzzler – ‘...as a greedy gilmaw’, one who is not once in his taste, but devours by wholesale, Roxb.’[JoJ] (also gill-maw and cf. gollimer).

Gillon (gi-lin) n. Fr. Thomas (19th/20th C.) priest at S.S. Mary & David’s 1918–24. He was said to have been quiet, but well-respected in the Town. He moved to Linlithgow. His time as priest saw the introduction of the 1918 Education Act and the return of the survivors from the War (see also Gillan).

Gillshall (gil-shaw) n. former name for lands in Liddesdale, recorded in 1541 as ‘Gilschaw et Burnhous’. It is unclear where these lands were, but possibly related to ‘Gillfoot’, ‘Gillhead’, etc.

Gillside (gil-sid) n. farm in Liddesdale, on the west bank of the river to the south of Manger-ton. A carved stone found over the fireplace in the old cottage there is described in ‘Chronicle of the Armstrongs’. The area was formerly known as Nether Foulwood, and the stream to the west is still called Foulwood Sike. William Dalgleish lived there in the 1830s and 40s. The name may also be related to the lands of ‘Side’, which are marked to the west on Stobie’s 1770 map (probably the ‘Geelside’ where William Elliot and family lived in the early 1800s).

Gill Sike (gil-sik) n. small stream in Liddesdale, which rises near Snaberlee Rig and runs roughly westwards to join the Hermitage Water near Lea-haugh.

Gillsteed (gil-steed) n. former lands in Liddesdale, recorded in a rental roll of c.1376 as ‘Gillestede’, with a value of 2 shillings. This could be the same place as ‘Gillside’ or ‘Gillshall’.

Gilmanscleuch (gil-munz-klooch) n. hamlet in the Ettrick valley, just north of the farms of De-loraine, and near where the Gilmanscleuch Burn meets the Ettrick. The farm was once a Crown property, from at least the 1456. It was assigned to James and Roger Alemoor in 1484, Steven Lockhart in 1486, Patrick Home of Fastcastle and Robert Lyle in 1490, Alexander, Lord Home in 1492, George Home in 1501 and Adam Scott of Tushielaw in 1510. John Scott in Thirlestane claimed the tenancy there in 1541. A tower here was once home of a branch of the Scotts, with the land passing from the Scotts of Gilmanscleuch to Walter Scott of Harden in the late 16th century, when ‘Auld Wat’s’ youngest son (possibly John) was slain in a hunting match. He apparently said that the lands were worth a dead son. The lands (or perhaps the superiority) were later sold by John Scott of Harden to Anne, Duches of Buc-cleuch and passed to Francis, Duke of Buccleuch along with other lands in the Lordship of Et-trick Forest in 1735. The Scotts of Gilmanscleuch started with James in at least 1589, with William being the last in the early-to-mid 18th century. When Francis Scott inherited the lands from his father John in 1686 the lands were valued at £20 6s 8d (‘feudi-firmae’). James Scott was there in 1797. In 1802 it was valued at £67, when part of the Buccleuch estates. Adam and James Scott were joint tenants in the 1820s and 1830s. ‘Daft Jock Gray’ came from there; he was a singing beggar in the early 1800s. Henry Scott was farmer in the 1860s – ‘There’s Daft Jock Grey o’ Gilmanskyle, And Davie o’ the Inch, And when ye come to Singley, They’ll help ye in a pinch’ [DJG], ‘Warn Wat o’ Harden, and his sons, Wi’ them will Borthwick water ride; Warn Gaudlands, and Allanhaugh, And Gilmanskyle, and Commonside’ [T], ‘In Gilmanskyle, beneath the heuch, My fathers lang did dwell; Ay formost, under bauld Buccleuch, A foreign fae to quell’ [ES] (the origin is probably from ‘Gillemoon’s ravine’; also formerly written ‘Gilmerskyle’ etc., it was ‘Gilmyiscleuch’ in 1456, ‘Gilmyniscleuch’ in 1467, ‘Gilmyniscleuche’ in 1468, ‘Gilmyiscleuch’ in 1477, ‘Gilmyiscleuch’ in 1484, 1488, 1501, 1502 and 1510, ‘Gymyniscleuch’ in 1541, ‘Gymyniscleucht’ in 1585, ‘Gilmeskleuch’ in 1609, ‘Gimliscleuch’ in 1644, ‘Gilmelscleuche’ in 1647, ‘Gilmenscleugh’ in 1656 ‘Gimplenscleuch’ in the late 1660s, ‘Gilmencesleugh’ in 1678, ‘Gilmanscleugh’ in 1690; it is ‘Gilminscluche’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

Gilnockie (gil-no-kee) n. tower of the Armstrongs, near the confluence of the Liddel and the Esk, i.e. in the ‘debatable lands’. The original tower stood at the east end of Gilnockie Bridge (over the Esk), and now consists only of earthworks, the centre having been extensively quarried and later crossed by the A7. This is possibly the tower burned by the English in 1528. Another (or later) tower is on the west bank and further north, at Hollows. It was restored in 1978–80, and now houses the Clan Armstrong centre. This second tower is famous for being the home of Johnnie Armstrong (usually called ‘of Gilnockie’ to confuse things!), who was killed at Caerlenrig in 1530; it is also known as ‘Johnnie Armstrong’s Tower’ or ‘Hollows Tower’. This restored tower also contains an ancient stone, with carved spiral symbols, reused as a door sill. The name was also used for a nearby station on the Langholm branch of the railway – ‘The Elliot’s and Armstrangs did convene; They were a gallant companie: We’ll ride and meet our lawful king, And bring him safe to Gilnockie’ [CPM], ‘But when Johnny went from Gilnock-Hall, The wind it blew hard, and full fast it did rain; ‘Now fare thee well, thou Gilnock-Hall, I fear I shall never see thee again’.’ [T].

Gilpin (gil-pin) n. Rev. William (1724–1804) from a well-known English family, he was educated at Oxford, where he trained as a minister. He set up his own school, became a biographer of religious reformers and published illustrated volumes of his British travels, which revolutionised travel writing and attitudes. He was later Prebendary at Salisbury. During one tour, he visited Hawick in 1776, making a sketch of the Auld Brig, made from below the bridge. This is the oldest known sketch of any part of the town of Hawick. It shows 2 arches and the wooden parapet erected to replace the stone one washed away in the 1767 flood. It also unfortunately omits any of the surrounding buildings.

Gilpin Horner (gil-pin-hör-nur) n. character of Scottish legend, said to be an evil goblin. He was the basis for the goblin page in Sir Walter Scott’s ‘Lay of the Last Minstrel’, and said to be the inspiration for the whole work, when the future Lady of Buccleuch urged Scott to write a poem based on him.

gilravage (gil-raw-veej) v., arch. to create an uproar – ‘Gilravage ...To raise a tumult, or to make much noise, Roxb. To rove about; to be unsteady; to act hastily and without consideration, Roxb.’ [JoJ], n., arch., poet. noisy merry-making, uproar – ‘Wi’ hypicritikil mokirs &c., destroy a garden, by rooting up the plants, Roxburgh’ [JoJ].

Gilrig (gil-rig) n. place name in Roberton Parish, referred to in papers of the Buccleuch estates in the 1750s.

Gilroy’s (gil-roiz) n. shop on the Howegate from the late 19th century. It was a booksellers, toy shop and now mainly a newsagents.

Gilsland (gilz-lind) n. village in northern Cumberland, on the Irthing River, and near Hadrian’s Wall. It was the seat of the Dacres and also near the once strategically important Gilsland Gap. In former times the area was a popular holiday destination, and was known in the 18th and 19th centuries for its healing waters, e.g. the poet Leyden’s father went there to recover his health in 1800 – ‘Mong the beauty spots of England I have rambled far and near, By the northern lakes at Gilsland, Derwentwater, Windermere’ [TK].

Ginger (jin-jur) n. a fizzy soft drink of any flavour – ‘When A was wee the kids would ask for ginger when they played For that’s the name they gave to every drink they ever made’ [Sco] (this usage common around Glasgow).

ginger breed (jin-jur-breed) n. ginger bread – ‘Losh, Ah’ve forgotten the ginger breed men an’ the ha’penny whistles . . . ’ [JEDM].

ginger wine (jin-jur-win) n. a dark, spicy cordial drink made with ‘ginger wine essence’, which derives from a secret recipe of Kennedy’s (now Crosby) the chemists. There were probably other variants of this, such as the ‘black betty’ sold in Denholm.

Gingills (ging-gilz) n. former lands in Ewesdale, a little north of Langholm, once a seat of the Armstrongs. The spelling is variable, and it is also possible it is sometimes confused with Chingills, near Mangerton in Liddesdale. In 1579 the Privy Council ordered that several of the principle ‘Armstrangis of the Gyngillis’ should give assurance about the behaviour of the others. In 1583 an English account of the number of men in various parts of the Middle Marches listed ‘Euesdale, Gingles, 300’. Thomas Armstrong ‘of the Gygils’ signed the 1584 bond of assurance with the English Wardens. Ringan Armstrong ‘of the Gyngills’ is recorded in 1590. Towers of ‘Ecki gingles’ and ‘Tho. of ye Jingles’ are recorded on opposite sides of the Ewes valley on Sandison’s c.1590 map of the Deabateable Land. It may be the place transcribed as ‘Creingills’ in the Lordship of Melrose, among lands inherited by Sir John Riddell of that Ilk in 1669 (also written ‘Ginges’ and variants; it is ‘Gygilliss’ in 1573).

Gingenwells (ging-lin-welz) n. former house on the Hermitage Water, roughly opposite Gorrenberry. William Armstrong was tenant in 1694, with John Elliot also residing there. It was surveyed in 1718, along with other Scott of Buccleuch properties, when it was combined with Dinlees, consisting of 1067 acres and bounded by Greyestonehaugh, the Lord of Hoscote’s lands, Twislehope, Rispylaw and Gorrenberry. The lands there were rented by William Elliot of Tarras from the Duke of Buccleuch in 1736. There is possibly an association with ‘Chingills’ or ‘Gingills’, although they were near Mangerton and in Ewesdale, respectively (it is marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map and is ‘Ginglanwalls on the 1718 Buccleuch survey; it is ‘Ginglenwalls’ in 1694, ‘Gingenwalls’ in 1722 and ‘Ginglenwalls’ in 1736).
ginnle (gi-nul) v., arch. to catch trout (or other fish) by tickling (noted by J. Jamieson; cf. the more common guddle).

gird (girdl) n. a wooden or iron hoop from a barrel or other wooden construction – ‘Paid for girds to ye litter … 0 18 0’[BR1732], a hoop used as a children’s toy when guided with a metal rod – ‘gie’s a go o eer girdle’, ‘Oo’d aye hev a gird when The Store got in grapes’[??], ‘Often as a boy I trundled my ‘gird’ past the Cross Keys Inn …’[AL], ‘At fower o’clock we’d oot wi’ top or gird …’[WL], ‘…yur mother wad say ‘away alang ti the Store’ an ee wad take yur gir wu’ee’[BA] v., arch. to play with a hoop.

girdin (gir-din) n., poet. a girdle, binding – ‘as the garnmint whilk kivers him, an’ for ane girdin play with a hoop.

fower o’clock we’d oot wi’ top or gird

The Girdle Stanes (thu-gir-dul-stänz) n. stone circle ner Eskdalemuir, not far from ‘the Loupin Stanes’. 26 stones remain in a nearly circular arrangement of about 38 m diameter, with some having been washed away by the Esk.

girn (gi-rul) v., arch. to thrill, shudder, shiver, tingle, make one’s teeth tingle – ‘That chairkin’ skeelie gars iz girl’[GW], ‘A duist hyit jairgin thing, an that senseless road-injin fair garrd mei girn’[ECS] n., arch. a shiver, sudden thrill (also written ‘girfl’).

The Girl I Left Behind Me (thu-gi-rul-I-left-bee-ðünd-nee) n. tune that the Drums and Fifes play at certain times, popularised in the 1949 John Ford/John Wayne film ‘She Wore a Yellow Ribbon’. The song is known by many different names and is claimed to have either Irish or English origins. It is known to have been played by military drum and fife bands in the early 1800s and dates back to at least the late 18th century. It is one of the tunes specifically played on the Saturday, when the band march the Cornet and mounted supporters down the Loan.

girn (girn) v. to show the teeth in pain or effort, grimace, distort the face, complain peevishly, grumble, whine, cry – ‘stop yer girnin, wull ee?’; ‘John, whan he play’d, ne’er threw his face, Like a’ the girning piper race’[CPM], ‘…And nickering, gurnit with their muckle-rake teeth, Uncouthesome to the view’[JTe], ‘I’m no acquaintance wi’ mealy pows; I was brought up wi’ tups and ewes. Roberton Parish in 1689/90. The lands passed from Walter Dalgleish ‘of Greenwood’ to Adam Turnbull in 1439. Sir Thomas Turnbull of Greenwood and Lynse leased the lands to Robert Scott of Allanhaugh in 1488, but keeping 1 acre in the north parts of both Greenwood and Lyne for himself. Alexander, 2nd Lord Home was granted these lands in 1492/3, after being resigned by Sir Thomas Turnbull. Alexander, 3rd Lord Home succeeded to these and other lands in 1506. William, son of William Turnbull of Minto sold the lands to Walter Scott of Branxholme in 1532/3. In 1535 George, Lord Home regained the lands through royal revocation of the previous charter. The lands were held by the Scotts of Buccleuch in the late 16th century, and were stated in 1574 to be in the Barony of Minto; they were at that time valued at £10 and held of the King by service of ward and relief. The Scotts of Girnwood were tenants for about 200 years. The lands of ‘Grenewode et Lyne’ were inherited in 1634 by Francis Earl of Buccleuch from his father, then passed to his daughters Mary and Anne, and ‘Girnwood and the Lyne with thair pertinentis’ were listed among the possessions of Anne, Countess of Buccleuch in her 1663 marriage contract. There were 9 ‘communicants’ recorded there in 1650. It was listed among properties of the Duke of Buccleuch in 1678. Adam Elliot was tenant in 1688. Adam Scott was tenant there in 1694, and James Aitchison was also a resident at that time. It was surveyed in 1718 along with other Buccleuch properties, when it covered 603 acres (with 100 acres of ‘corn land meadow and pasture’), bounded by Outersiderig, Henwoodie common and Hoscote. The tenant reported gird down to the crops there in 1745. Walter Scott is recorded there in 1797 and was tenant until his death in 1818. Another Walter Scott was farmer there in the 1860s. Provost William Scott Nichol farmed there for a time, and there are memorial cairns there for him and his brother. The western-most section of the Catrail is near here, with part to the north now planted over, and reaching towards a tributary of the Dean Burn, while a long shallow section is also visible to the south; however, there have been debates about precisely which sections might have been part of the Catrail, and which might have been later boundary ditches. There is also another similar linear earthwork above the farm to the west, on the southern slopes of Girnwood Hill. There is a waterfall to the west of the farm, on Girnwood Linn, this probably being the associated place referred to in old documents as ‘the Lyne’. Just to the north east is a small unnamed loch, with enclosures nearby, while Girnwood Loch lies much further behind Girnwood Hill (formerly spelled ‘Girnewood’ and other variants, it first appeared as ‘Grenwode’ in 1315, becoming ‘Grenewod’ in 1439, ‘Grenwod’ in 1488, ‘Grenewood’ in 1493, ‘Grenewod’ in 1535, ‘Grenewoid et Lyn’ in 1574, ‘Girnwood’ in 1636 and ‘Grenewood et Linn’ in 1661; it is marked on a 1650 parish map as ‘Girnewoode’, on Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Girnewoode’, is ‘Girnewood’ on the 1718 Buccleuch survey and is bizarrely shown twice on Roy’s c.1750 map; the origin is Old English ‘grenew wudu’, meaning ‘the green wood’).

Girnwud Linn (girn-wud-lin) n. steep gorge on part of the Hoscote Burn to the west of the farm of Girnwood. It also contains a waterfall. It is probably the place referred to from early times as ‘the Lyne’. On the north side of the stream, near the bottom of the gorge is a roughly semi-circular earthwork, consisting of a ditch with a bank on each side. It measures about 75 m by 50 m, there is an entrance at the south-east end and it is best preserved at the north-west end. The interior has been ploughed and so there is no trace of any building foundations. There is a linear earthwork extending from here to more than half-way to Girnwood farm, the eastern end being the best preserved. The same earthwork may also have crossed the Linn, and extend towards Black Sike to the west. It has been suggested to have been related to the Catrail, but is clearly a less substantial boundary line.

Girnwud Loch (girn-wud-loch) n. small loch north-west of Girnwood farm, draining into the Hoscote Burn. North of here are remains of a linear earthwork, consisting of a bank and ditch, and stretching about 170 yards along a dyke to a point near the Ale Water; however, it has been destroyed by forestry plantation. This earthwork may have helped fuel the notion that the Catrail continued beyond Girnwood (it is marked, but not named, on Ainslie’s 1773 map).

girny (gir-nee) adj. complaining, peevish, cantankerous, whiny – ‘A bonny scab, bairn-high, whiter than whey, On a girny simmer’s day Wi’ a tear in its e’ [DH]. ‘Mother I think had no cash and Mary Ritchie had a severe girny old father’ [JeC].
Glack (glawk) n. former name used for a local branch of the Scots, apparently the same as Glack, closely related to the Scotts of Fenwick. The seat was ‘Glack’ in Peeblesshire, but the family also owned Fenwick and Highchesters in the mid-to-late 17th century – ‘…Then he married a wife according to his mind, And betwixt them twa they did procreate Headshaw, Askirk, Sinton, and Glack’ [CWS], ‘Oh! the laird of Glack, he must not be omitted, Though he sold the land of Goldieland long e’er he got it’ [CWS] (perhaps from Gaelic ‘glac’, a hollow; there are several Glacks elsewhere in Scotland; it is ‘Glak’ in 1581 and 1585, ‘Glæke’ in 1597 and ‘Glak’ and ‘Glake’ in 1609).

Gladstone see Gledstains
Gladstone (glad-stin) n. William Ewart (1809–1898) politician born in Leith, he entered politics in England, becoming Prime Minister no fewer than 4 times. He came from the Gladstains of Arthurshiel, who were descendants of the local Gladstains of that Ilk. He was elected M.P. for Midlothian in 1880, speaking in Hawick during the campaign. Apparently he and his wife used to often stay at the Mosspaul Hotel on their way north. Gladstone Street is named after him (see also Gledstains).

glaibber (glaib-bur) v., arch. to chatter, babble, to slobber while speaking, n. idle talk, someone who talks in a slobbering manner (noted by J. Jamieson and G. Watson).
glaibbers (glaib-burs) n., pl., arch. slavers, slobbering talk – ‘Whan ma lugs ir stawd wi thropply glaibbers’ [ECS] (also ‘glaibers’).

glaiks (glaiks) n., arch. a kind of toy or puzzle – ‘Glaiks. A puzzle game, consisting in first taking a number of ring off one of a large size, and then replacing them, Roxb., Mearns …A toy for children, composed of several pieces of wood which have the appearance of falling asunder, but are retained in their places by strings, Roxb.’ [JoJ].
glaiky (glaiky) adj., arch. thoughtless, foolish.
glaive (glāv) n., poet. a sword – ‘He drew his glaive of metal clear, And thought not of the sinful deed; And he has struck the Abbot there, The Abbot’s curse will cling to thee’ [BCM1880].
glam (glawm) v., arch. to grab, grasp, snatch – ‘He glaumed at it wi’ his muckle maigs’ [GW], ‘A gien un a thripny-bit . . . Hei glaumed at eet leike a cock at a grozert’ [ECS] (also written ‘glaunn’ and ‘glamn’).
glamour (glaw-mur) n., poet. enchantment, magical delusion – ‘He shot the roc-back on the lee, The dun deer on the law; The glamour sure was in his e’e, When Ringan nigh did draw’ [JL], ‘This is the cradle of glamour. This is the lap of romance, Here where the hill-birds wheel over, Here where the moor fairies dance’ [WL], v., poet. to enchant, bewitch – ‘. . . Where a’ the glens are glamourd ower Wi’ auld romance and sang’ [FL], magic – ‘And whether or not of glamourye, In sooth I cannot say’ [JTe], ‘Eh whow! the glam-magic { `And whether or not of glamourye, In glamourd ower Wi’ auld romance and sang’ [FL].
glamourie (glaw-mur-ree) n., poet. witchcraft, magic – ‘And whether or not of glamourye, In sooth I cannot say’ [JTe], ‘Eh whow! the glamourie an’ mich That ane sae dune, sae auld, Should, in a vesion o’ the nicht, Be young again, an’ yauld’ [ECB], ‘. . . I’ll keek throwe the mist to an age O’ glamourie roun’ Hermitage’ [WL].

Glebe Mills
Glaury Wat (glaw-ree-waw’) n. nickname of Walter Anderson.
Glauser (glaw-sur) n. Beat Swiss linguist, with a particular interest in regional British dialects. He visited Hawick during his researches in 1970, received his Ph.D. from the University of Basel in 1972, and published ‘The Scottish-English Linguistic Border’ in 1974. He states that dialect of the Hawick area is ‘the most unadulterated language in the whole of Europe’. He became Professor of English Linguistics at the University of Heidelberg. A reference to him appeared in ‘The Broons’ cartoon strip.
glebe (gleeb) n., arch. a piece of land to which the minister of a parish had rights – ‘. . . many portions of the new allotments on the glebe lands are infested with it’ [JAHM] (also gleib).
Glebe Mills
Glebeheid (gleeb-heed) n. land at the head of the glebe lands in Roberton, to the east of the manse. A couple of separate buildings are marked there on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map.
Glebe Mills (gleeb-nilz) n. knitwear factory built on a piece of land on the south of the Teviot, which was originally part of the endowment for Wilton Parish Church. First constructed in 1873 by Richardson, Noble & Co. (which company had previously operated out of Stonefield Mill), it was much extended by other companies, including Pringle’s, who are the current owners. Pringle’s purchased the factory in 1962 and started men’s knitwear production there a year later. It was extended in 1968. The gatehouse was designed by J.P. Alison.
Glebe Mill Street

Glebe Mill Street (gleeb-mil-stree’) n. street along the south side of the Teviot, built in 1877 beside Glebe Mills, on land previously belonging to Wilton Church.

Glebe Place (gleeb-plis) n. street in the Wellogate, being the continuation of Waverley Cottages down to Minto Place, built in 1875 and named after Wilton Glebe. It also contained Orchard Street from 1888 until 1892.

Glebe Terrace (gleeb-te-ris) n. original name for the upper houses of Minto Place, built in 1875, with the name being discarded in 1882.

Glebe View (gleeb-vew) n. street in the Terraces of the Wellogate, built in 1879 by Hawick Working Men’s Building and Investment Company. It is the opposite side of the street from Minto Place, and named after Wilton Glebe lands, which it overlooks. It included Orchard Street from 1892–99.

gled (gled) adj. glad – ‘Ye’re welcome, sakes ye’re welcome Where ye’re gled nae doot to be’ [WL], ‘Man, come on in, I’m gled tae see ye, In a’ this time, how are things wi’ ye’ [JRE], ‘The puir wee soul was unco gled, This was his day of days …’[WFC].

gled (gled) n., arch., poet. a kite, Milvus milvus – ‘The Kite or Gled, the Hobby and the Goshawk are also birds which ought to be found in the neighbourhood . . . ’[JAHM], ‘His een, as greedy as gled’s for gear, Wad settle whiles on a sonsie dear . . . ’[WL] (from Old English, the name survives in some place names, e.g. Gledsnest).

glede (gleed) n., arch. a sideways look, squint – ‘A glede o’ the tail o’ ma ee’ [HAST1863] (also gleid; cf. gledge).

gledge (glej) v., arch., poet. to squint, leer – ‘She gledged at her cousin, and triggered up her cap’[HSR], ‘The kimmers Faith and Hope gledge oot o the lamp-lit door Into the wundy dark o Eternity’[DH], ‘. . . and, sune, ye’re daun-derin’ alang gledgin’ about frae yin side to the t’other as ye gann’[DH], n., arch. a squint, side-long glance – ‘Yeh lounge owre the brig . . . an a gledge doon inti the Rule as it ran rowlin ti link in wui Teiot’[ECS], ‘Wi’ a gledge at the sky As the cutty reeks, A demm at a thistle And on wi’ his breeks’[DH], ‘. . . wi a last gledge at St. Mary’s clock keekin owre the ruifs like a sma local moon’[DH] (cf. glede).

gledhawk (gled-hawk) n., poet. the kite – ‘I had rather the gledhawks piked mine eyne, I had rather the corbie’s stripped me clean . . . ’[WHO] (cf. gled).

gledness (gled-nis) n. gladness – ‘. . . Sae grains the warld to gledness frae the deid’ [WL].

Glednest (gleed-nest) n. farmstead adjacent to Colterscleuch, formerly in Cavers Parish, now in Teviothead. It was locally known as ‘the Nest’. John Grieve and family lived there from at least the 1820s to 40s. John Hume was farmer there in the 1860s. It is run as a bed and breakfast guest house (presumably related to gled, although also suggested to have obtained the name from being build by a Gledstains).

Gled’s Nest (gleedz-nest) n. area at the head of March Sike, in the headwaters of Northope Burn. Now deep within Craik Forest, it is on the edge of Roxburghshire.

the Gledstain Porch (thu-gled-stin-pörch) n. burial aisle of the Gledstains family, forming the southern transept of Cavers Old Kirk. It is referred to in the Exchequer Rolls of 1524, and was probably even older. This once important family had lost almost all its estates and influence by the mid-18th century and the heritors had the aisle demolished.

Gledstains (gleed-stänz, gleed-stinz, glad-stänz) n. (Gladstone) Abraham of Hunthill (17th C.) possibly son of George of Dod. In 1676 he was served heir to his grandfather Walter of Dod in his lands of Hunthill. He was listed paying the land tax in 1678 for land in Cavers Parish valued at £180; this was a combination of Dod and Hunthill (then included within the valuations of Cavers Parish). By 1707 the 2 lands had been disjoined and were later owned by the Potts of Dod and the Duke of Buccleuch, respectively. He could also be the ‘ Laird dod’ who paid tax for land valued at £114 in Eckford Parish in 1678. Agnes (b.1677) daughter of Town Clerk Walter. She married a Col. Murray and went with him to Flanders. Alexander (15th C.) probably son of Thomas of Roberton and Flex. However, it is also possible he was son of James of that Ilk and father of John of Cocklaw, recorded in the 1480s. In 1458 he had a confirmation by James II of ‘terras dominicales de Kirktoune, et molendinum ejus-derin’, (and Baron of Hawick) had him removed from the lands of Flex and ‘Kirkton Mains’, which he claimed were wrongfully possessed. Neighbouring lands of East Mains had been removed for a similar reason from James of Cocklaw’s widow Janet Murray in 1437. In 1464/5 Douglas had a sesne for these lands, in which he is also mentioned.
Gledstains

Probably the same Alexander is recorded as witness to a sasine for Denholm Mains in 1465/6, along with Matthew and Cuthbert; he is listed between the Chaplain and Notary, so perhaps he held some official role. Andrew (15th C.) listed as ‘And. de Gledstane’ in 1451 when he witnessed a charter relating to the Church of Brechin. It is unclear how he might have been connected to other early family members. Andrew (15th/16th C.) listed on the ‘retour of inquest’ performed at Cavers in 1497/8 for Robert Elliot inheriting his grandfather’s lands of Tillielee and Caulcleuch. John of Winningtonhall is also listed and so possibly a close relative. Ann (c.1780–1850) daughter of John, the Town Clerk. Her and her sister Christian were served heir to their father in 1808 and sold 80 High Street in 1809. However, in 1811 she was probably the ‘Miss Gladstanes’ listed along with ‘Mrs. Richardson’ as owners of part of the particate lands of Hawick. With her sister, she later lodged with Wintrup the tailor in an old house where the Orrock Church was built. They were known locally as ‘the last of the Gledstanes’. Her sister was said to have died unmarried, although some accounts say she married Richardson (so perhaps there was another sister). She herself married John Scott, ‘Jock the Turk’. In about 1874 her family’s former lands (presumably on the High Street) were listed belonging to ‘Feuars of Mrs. Richardson and Miss Gladstanes’ Lands’. Archibald (15th/16th C.) recorded as ‘Archibald of Gledstanis’ in the 1500 appraisal of the lands of Whithope. It is unclear how he was related to the other Gledstains. Probably the same Archibald was on the panel of ‘retour’ in 1517 for Sir Walter Scott inheriting the barony of Branxholme. He may be the son of John, who was nephew of John of that Ilk and Cocklaw, mentioned in connection with a raid on the lands of Cademuir and Hurtleshope in 1518. Archibald (17th C.) resident of Northhouse according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. His name is recorded as ‘Mr Archibald Gledstaines’ (presumably an error for ‘Gledstaines’) and he was taxed on 3 hearths. The ‘Mr’ suggests he was a preacher or teacher perhaps. He was again ‘Mr’ in 1696 and 1697 when he leased the farm of Northhouse from the Scotts of Buccleuch. He also contributed £100 to the Darien Company in 1695. Bartholomew (15th/16th C.) witness in 1500, along with George and William, to a charter for Walter Ker of Cessford for the lands of Caverton. It is possible that they were connected with Kelso Abbey. Christian (d.1816) daughter of Town Clerk John. Her and her sister Ann were served heir to their father in 1808 (their brother James presumably dying before that). Some accounts say that she died unmarried, but she appears to have married manufacturer Walter Richardson. In 1811 she was probably the ‘Mrs. Richardson’ listed along with ‘Miss Gladstanes’ as owners of part of the particate lands of Hawick. Cuthbert (15th C.) recorded as ‘Of Gledstains’ when he was witness to a Cranston family sasine for Denholm Mains in 1465/6. David (15th C.) received 3 sheep in the will of Sir David Scott of Branxholme in 1491/2. He may be the same ‘David Gledstanes’ who witnessed a document for Scott of Branxholme in 1500. Lieut. Francis (d.1645) father of Walter the Town Clerk, and brother of Capt. James. At age 21 (or perhaps 29) he was killed at the Battle of Aulderne, near Nairn, fighting for the Covenanting army alongside Douglas of Cavers and nine other local gentlemen. He married Margaret Stewart, and his son Walter Francis was born in Hawick in 1642. Francis of Whitlaw (17th C.) probably directly related to John of Whitlaw who died in about 1672. He may have been son of an earlier John. He is easy to confuse with the Francis of Whitlaw (son of John) who was born in 1643. He may be the ‘francis Gledstaines’ who signed the ‘Confessions of Faith’ in Hawick in 1638. He managed the Cavers estates when ‘the Good Lady Cavers’ was in prison for her covenanting principles. He served as Chamberlain to the Buccleuch estates for Hassendean, Hawick and Wilton in 1657–59, taking over from his father, who was certainly dead by 1660 (according to a document of the Scotts of Buccleuch). In 1661 it is recorded that he owed about £3500 to the Duchess of Buccleuch for rentals in Hassendean and elsewhere, where he and his late father had been Chamberlain. In 1671 he was Bailie of the Regality of Hawick for William Douglas of Drumlanrig when there was a court of Regality held in Hawick. Francis of Whitlaw (b.1643) son of John, with his mother possibly being Anna Scott. He was also referred to as being ‘of Flex’. It is unclear how he was related to the Francis who was recorded in the previous few decades. In 1672 he was served heir to his father John of Whitlaw in the lands of the Flex (perhaps suggesting that there is more than one generation here). He was admitted as a Burgess of Hawick in 1675. He paid the land tax in Hawick Parish in 1678 for £266 13s 4d. He may be the same Francis of Whitlaw who was recorded several times in the 1690s and until about 1704. Francis (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Agnes ‘Wiggam’ and their daughter Isobell was born in 1670. Francis of Whitlaw (17th/18th C.) probably a descendant of the earlier Francis of Whitlaw. In 1692 he leased the farm of Meikle Whitlaw (which he held for service for his lifetime) as well as Little Whitlaw. He is recorded providing timber for repairing the town Tolbooth in 1692, as well as timber ‘for mounting of the steeple where the bell hings’; this was valued at £40, making him the first name among the subscribers of the new bell, listed on the enactment of the Council in 1694. Also in 1692 he made a proposal to the Town Council that he be allowed to enclose part of his land, but also including ‘a little brae upon our syd of the march betwixt him and us’; he would plant trees there, with the agreement that the Town receive half of the timber, when it was ready to chop down. He seems likely to be the local Gledstains who was taxed for 5 hearths at his house in 1694. His brother may have been Archibald, and although it is unclear if he had any children, it is possible that James and John may have been his sons. He witnessed a baptism of a tenant at the Flex in 1702. He was on the Commission of Supply for Roxburghshire in 1690, on a list of Roxburghshire heritors who petitioned Parliament in 1700 and may be the Francis of Whitlaw who was still a Commissioner in 1704. Scott of Satchells dedicated a chapter of his history to him. A sundial belonging to him was saved from destruction by William Norman Kennedy and presented to the Museum collection; it bore the initials ‘F.G.’, the motto ‘Fide et Virtute’ and the date 1693. Francis (17th/18th C.) wright of Hawick. In 1683 he was fined for attacking Bailie Thorbrand and for ‘violentlie taking 4 dukes [presumably ducks] on the street, which the bayleyea had first caught’. He was listed as a wright among those contributing to the new Kirk bell in 1693/4. He is probably the Francis on the east side of Hawick, who appears on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. In 1702 (or perhaps 1712) he was fined by the Kirk Session for being found drinking in a public house after 10 o’clock; however, he ‘protested yt. he was not in drinke’. He married Marion Scott and their children included William (b.1678), Marion (b.1682), Margaret (b.1682), Helen (b.1684), John (b.1686) and James (b.1689). Witnesses to the 1682 baptisms were ‘Mr Walter Gladstains’ (probably the Town Clerk, suggesting that they were related), shoemaker Thomas Turnbull and John Riddell. Francis (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1723 he married Helen Allan, whose surname is given as ‘Allan or Bridges’. Their children included: Margaret (b.1725); and John (b.1728). He could be the Francis, son of John and Margaret Harkness, born in 1685. He could be the Francis, innkeeper, who was a Bailie in the 1730s and 1740s. Francis (18th C.) Cornet in 1744. It was stated in the Town Book that he was ‘to go to the moss on Saturday yr. after’, this being perhaps the first indication of events taking place on Common Riding Saturday. He may be the Francis, son of Thomas and Bessie Sanderson, born in Hawick in 1718. He could be the Francis married to Elizabeth Scott, whose children baptised in Hawick included Thomas (b.1746) and Sarah (b.1747). Gavin (16th C.) recorded in 1580 when he sold the lands of Stobs to Gavin Elliott, who became the first Elliott Laird there. The cost was 400 merks. It is unclear how he was related to other Gledstains. George (15th C.) recorded in 1484/5 as a witness to Walter Ker of Cessford assigning Dolphinston to his son Mark. It is unclear how he was related to other members of the family. Probably the same George (along with William and Bartholomew) was witness to a charter for Walter Ker of Cessford for the lands of Caver-ton in 1500. He could be related to the George who had sasines for Craig in Dunfriesshire in 1458 and 1459. He may be the ‘Gorgoni de Gled- stanos’ who leased Hundleshope in Peeblesshire in 1471. George (15th/16th C.) obtained a sasine for the lands of Gladstanes in Roxburghshire in 1503, this being granted by Ninian Glendinning. It is unclear which lands are referred to here. In 1510 he witnessed a charter for this same Ninian Glendinning, for lands in the Barony of Scraesburgh. He may be the ‘George Gledstani’ listed in 1526 as a brother of Adam Scott in Clarilaw and William Scott, when a large number of Borderers had remission for attacking the Earl of Arran; this would suggest he was a step-brother or brother-in-law (i.e. he married a daughter of James of Kirkurd). George (15th/16th C.) recorded among the many Borders men who had remission in 1526 for their earlier attack on the Earl of Arran. He is listed separately from another George, but right before Walter, who is probably related. George of Dod (17th C.) possibly son of Walter. He was a local landowner of the mid-to-late 1600s, according to James Wilson. In 1643 he is recorded paying tax for lands valued at £180 in Cavers Parish; these appear to have been Dod and Hunthill, which were disjoined before 1707. He may be the Laird of Dod whose lands in...
Kirkton Parish were valued at £700, and whose mother was listed as liferenter of lands in Kirkton Parish, valued at £200. He is recorded as heir to Walter of Dod in 1649 when he was infested in the lands of Huntill (in Cavers Parish) by William, Earl of Lothian. He may have been father of Mary who married George Scott of Synton. He may have been father of Abraham of Huntill, who was served heir to his grandfather Walter of Dod in 1676. Gorgon (d.1456) probably a son of the Laird of Gledstains. He was described as ‘Gorgon de Gledstansys of Hundwellishop’, and must have held the family lands of Hundlehope in Peeblesshire. After his death the property passed into the King’s ward. He was mentioned in relation to the lands in a later charter of 1471. Herbert ‘de Gledestan’ (13th/14th C.), the earliest recorded Gladstone, from the county of Lanark, who swore fealty to Edward I in 1296. His seal bore an 8-leaved flower and the name ‘S’HERB D’GLEDSTAN’. He probably gained the family lands in the Parish of Liberton, about 4 miles north of Biggar. His exact descendants are uncertain, but were known to be in Roxburghshire in 1336. It is likely that he received his Lanarkshire lands from the Douglases, because of the close connection between the families for many subsequent generations; this may also have been the origin of the move to lands in Roxburghshire. The name Herbert occurred many times later in the Dumfriesshire and Peeblesshire branches. Herbert (15th C.) rendered the accounts of Annandale in the Exchequer Rolls for 1455. He is referred to as ‘eodem’, i.e. ‘of that Ilk’ in 1456 when he witnessed a charter for Robert, Lord Maxwell. He was probably the Bailie of Dumfries mentioned in the Exchequer Rolls in 1460. Probably the same Herbert also witnessed a charter in Annandale in 1487. Herbert (15th/16th C.) Rector of Dornoch, he held lands in Over Kelwood in Dumfriesshire. He was recorded in several charters in the years 1504–08. Probably the same Herbert witnessed a charter for Robert, Lord Maxwell in 1525. He is probably the Herbert, Burgess of Dumfries, whose great-grandson Mark was served heir in 1610 (as well as to the lands of his son, also Mark). James (d.1437) 6th of that Ilk, son of William, and younger brother of John and Thomas (although this is uncertain). He was witness to a charter along with his brother Thomas in 1404 (regarding the rights of Melrose Abbey for the benefits of Cavers parish), and resided at Cocklaw in Cavers Parish. He was the owner of the tower during the famous siege of Cocklaw (i.e. Ormiston) by the Percys in 1403. Also in 1403 he was probably the ‘James of Gledstane’ appointed as bailie of the regality of Sprouston for Archibald, Earl of Douglas. In 1413 he is recorded as holding the position of Bailie to the 4th Earl of Douglas, in the Regality of Sprouston, and possibly also in the Barony of Cavers (like his forefathers held for their Douglas superiors). In 1424 he was on a ‘retour of inquest’ made in Hawick for lands in Hownam. He married Janet Murray, who was involved in a law-suit against the Baron, Douglas of Drumlanrig in 1437 over ownership of East Mains. The next generation is uncertain, but his grandson was probably John of that Ilk and Cocklaw. He must also have been related to Alexander who lost the lands of Flex and ‘Kirkton Mains’ to the Baron in another court case of 1464/5. James of Cocklaw (15th/16th C.) son of John. In 1519 he entered into a marriage contract with Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch, to marry his son and heir John to one of Sir Walter’s daughters, or failing that any other woman Sir Walter selected; this involved a promise to give lands in Peeblesshire and Cavers to the couple, with Sir Walter promising to try to preserve the lands of Cocklaw intact in future. The Peeblesshire lands were in the barony of Hundlehope and the Cavers lands were ‘Guddischucht, Vnishop, Binkkis and Langbittis’. He was said to have been in possession of Cocklaw in 1534, when a fresh seal was added to the deed granting Hundlehope to John Turnbull, hence confirming him in those lands. Although the family no longer had the lands of Gledstanes in Lanarkshire, they were still called ‘of that Ilk’, and Arthurshiel, a neighbouring property was still owned by a branch of the family. He was succeeded by his son John. James of Cocklaw (1547–c.1615) son of John. He was 12th of that Ilk. In 1567 he was among men ordered to present themselves to be warded in Blackness Castle; his surety was Sir William Douglas of Cavers. He was probably the James of Cocklaw who signed the bond uniting against the Liddesdale thieves in 1569. In 1569 he gave surety for Archibald Elliot of Corrieske (along with Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch, who was surety for other Elliots) and was found liable when he failed to appear, with his lands and goods to be held if he did not pay the £1000. Along with Walter Scott of Goldielands, he gave security for the appearance of a number of Hawick residents (Allan Deans, John Scott, son to Philip’s Jock, and Johnnie Cavers) in a court case in Edinburgh in 1571, possibly connected with a raid. In 1571/2

he signed the bond to act against Borders thieves. According to the register of the Privy Council he was warded in 1571, had ‘surety in relief’ in 1571 and 1574 and served as surety in 1576. In 1572/3 he swore allegiance to the Crown and the Regent (and not to assist Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst), with his surety being William Ker of Caverton. He signed the ‘Band of Roxburgh’ in 1573, ‘with my hand at the pen’. Also in 1574 he served as surety for a large number of Borderers, specifically residents of Hummelknowes, Coliforth and Adderstoneshie; he was found liable to pay 5000 for not removing the thieves (who were mostly Croziers). In 1574 he was on the retours for Walter Scott of Branxholme as heir to his great-uncle David Scott, as well as his father Sir Walter Scott. He was the ‘little Gladstane, good in need’ who led the local contingent at the Raid of the Redeswire in 1575. The land near Bonchester known as ‘Little Gledstains’ may be connected with him in some way. He was a prominent Borderer of his time, his name being mentioned 32 times in the Register of the Privy Council, in connection with either Roxburghshire or Peeblesshire. He was probably the Laird of Gledstains who was on the defence side in the trial of 2 sons of Sir Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule in 1577/8. In the 1570s he was one of the ‘curators’ of the young Robert Scott of Thirlstane. Also in 1576 he was a surety along with Walter Scott of Goldielands and James Langlands of that Ilk for tenants in Lairhope and Bradlee, as well as George Elliot, ‘the Cleg’, and John Stoddart, ‘cobilman to the Lord of Langlandis’. In 1578/9 he was among 22 Border Lairds who did not appear before the Privy Council when summoned, and was declared liable for the fines associated with the pledges made in 1576. Also in 1578/9 he was cautioner for Robin Elliot of Redheugh, pledging that he would not raid into England. In 1580 he, Walter Scott of Goldielands and Robert Elliot of Redheugh complained to the Privy Council about Muckle Whitlaw being raided; they raised the fray, following the thieves to England. However, on their return through Liddesdale they were attacked by a band of Armstrongs and Elliots near Whithaugh. He was probably in the party that rode off to follow the raiders, and his brother Walter was killed. One of his farms was raided by Elliots and Armstrongs in 1580, as well as the farm tenanted by John Gledstains at Whitlaw. Also in 1580 he complained (along with the Countess of Bothwell and Wat Scott of Harden) of thefts and outrages committed by the Elliots on their farms. In 1581 he was allied with Walter Scott of Goldielands and Robert Elliot of Redheugh when they had a set of complaints made against them by Martin of Braidlie, Simon Armstrong of Mangerton and Lance Armstrong of Whithaugh; they were all charged to appear before the Privy Council with assurances for their supporters. He was a cautioner (although with Robert and Mungo, Burgess of Edinburgh) for Walter Scott of Goldielands being entered into ward in Edinburgh Castle in 1581. Also in 1581 he witnessed a ‘letter of slains’ in Hawick whereby Robert and James Scott forgave the Scotts of Alanhaugh and Over Southfield for the murder of their brother George. He was among the Border Lairds summoned to appear before the Privy Council in 1583/4. Also in 1583/4 he was involved in a caution for his tenant Thomas Burnet and others in his 3 husbandlands in Hundlehope, that John Scott there would not harm them. He was the Laird of Gledstains who gave assurances in 1584 for himself and other Gledstains, with the Elliot chiefs standing as assurance. He was probably the Laird of ‘Gledstanis’ listed on the 1590 ‘Roll of the Clans’ and is also probably the ‘James Gladstanis’ who was witness in 1595 to the bond between the Scotts and the Kerrs. In 1594/5 he made a bond that Hector and Richard Turnbull of Clarilaw would not harm Gavin Elliott of Stobs or William Elliot of Horsleyhill; this was signed at Hawick. In 1605 he was in court with the family of Thomas Peebles, Burgess of Peebles, who was murdered in 1561, with the family still seeking satisfaction; his sureties were John of Winningtonrig and John Rutherford, Bailie of Jedburgh. His name appears in the Register of the Privy Seal no less than 32 times, in connection with both Roxburghshire and Peeblesshire. He was regularly fined (e.g. in 1608 along with Horsburgh of that Ilk and Halden of that Ilk, binding them to keep the peace), imprisoned and denounced as a troublemaker, although he lived to a reasonably old age. In 1610 he and William Scott of Howpasley had an action against them by James Douglas of Drumlanrig for not paying taxes on their lands of ‘Ramseclewis, Howpaisley and Schawis’, and on his lands of Adderstone and Adderstoshie. He signed a bond in 1612 (along with several Scotts) for keeping peace in the Borders. In 1614 he resigned his lands of ‘Hundillishope, Acolmfeild, Wodegreytingtoun’ and land at the east end of Peebles to his son James, younger, and his wife; this suggests he was quite old by then. He was succeeded by his son James (who was succeeded after only a few years by Walter). His daughter Margaret married David, son of Hector Turnbull of Wauchope according to a marriage contract of 1593 (not 1567 as in one record). Another daughter Lilias married Richard Rutherford `Dickon Draw-the Sword', who led the Jedburgh contingent at the Raid of the Reidswire. He may also be the James of Cocklaw whose daughter Barbara married John, younger son of John Rutherford of Hunthill. James of Cocklaw (c.1584–c.1620) son of James, he was the 13th of that Ilk. He led a similar life to that of his father, committing theft, murder, etc. However, he was Laird of Cocklaw for only a few years. In 1606 he was `appeirand of Coklaw' when he served as cautioner for Thomas Turnbull (younger of Wauchope) who was accused of raiding and burning Appotside and Harwood. He was still `apparent of Cocklaw' in 1608 when he appeared for Archibald Douglas and others, swearing not to harm anyone in Peebles. In 1614 he was granted the lands of `Hundillishope, Acolmfeild, Wodegrevingtoun' which had been resigned by his father James, elder, together with his wife Beatrice Ker. In 1616 he (or perhaps his father) was on the jury for the trial of the ruffians hired by Jean Scott of Satchells and Lady Scott of Howpasley to mutilate the sheep and cattle belonging to Douglas of Drumlanrig. In 1618 he was said to be son and heir of James, and former owner of the lands of Hundleshope and others in Peebleshire, when John Scott had a charter from James VI. He was probably the James who was a Hawick Bailie in the 1620s. He married Beatrice Ker in about 1607, and hence Beatrice, who married James Grieve of Commonside, may have been his daughter. He was succeeded by Walter of Cocklaw and may have also had sons Robert and James. In 1620 Beatrice Ker (presumably his widow by then) and her 3 sons William, Robert and James, led an assault on the old lands near Peebles that the family had disputed for generations. Bailie James (16th/17th C.) Magistrate of Hawick recorded in 1627, along with Robert Scott. They were the Town’s Bailies when 16 men from Hawick were listed as being ‘idle and masterless’ and appropriate for sending to the wars in Germany. When the men were not produced he said that ‘he had not power, force nor friendship within the town of Hawick to apprehend the persons abonewritten or to exhibite thame’; it is unclear exactly what that meant (since it also states that the other Bailie did have ‘both power and friendship within the town’). He is probably the James who acted as witness to the Hawick Parish valuation of 1627. Capt. James (d.1645) grandfather of Walter the Town Clerk, he must have been a near relative of the Lairds of Cocklaw. He was part of Sir William Douglas’ Covenanters force, and was killed at the Battle of Aulderne along with his brother Francis. James (17th C.) resident of Abbotrule Parish. He married Marion Tudhope about 1668 and her will is recorded in 1682. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Jane Forrest and their children included: Alexander (b.1670); and Gavin (b.1673). Bailie James (17th C.) Hawick Councillor and Magistrate in the 1660s and Magistrate in the 1670s. He was on the list of Hawick men named in the 1673 trial following the so-called riot at St. Jude’s Fair. He may be the ‘Baylyea Gladstaines’ recorded in 1675 among the men named to go to check on the boundary wall being built by Walter Scott of Goldielands, to ensure that the Common was not being encroached upon. He is probably the ‘laye baylyea’ in Hawick listed among those contributing to funds for the new Kirk bell in 1693/4 and the ‘Bailyea Gladstaines’ who paid tax on 2 hearths in the east-side of Hawick in 1694. He may be the James, married to Isobel ‘Whyllance’ (i.e. Whullans), whose children baptised in Hawick included: William (b.1673); Isobell (b.1675); John (b.1677); James (b.1678); and Christian (b.1680). Probably Rachel (b.1683), with the mother’s name given as ‘Helen Whillance’ was also his daughter. James (17th C.) of Hummelknowes. Recorded in a letter to Walter, Earl of Tarras in 1692. James (17th C.) listed as a resident of Effledge on the 1694 Hearth Tax roll. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Laing in 1700. James (b.1701), Janet (b.1703), Euphan (b.1706) and Bessie (b.1710) could have been his children. James (d bef. 1734) 16th of that Ilk and Laird of Cocklaw, probably son of William. Scott of Satchells dedicated part of his Scott history to him in 1686. He registered arms in the period 1672–78. He was probably the Laird in 1678 who paid the land tax on £1240 in Cavers Parish. His brother John became a tailor’s apprentice in 1681. He may be the Gladstains of ‘Ormistoun’ who was among the local lairds who were taken off to Edinburgh Castle as supporters of the Covenanters in 1683. He was one of the Commissioners of Supply for Roxburghshire in 1685. He may be the James who witnessed a baptism for doctor William Scott in Hawick in 1687, along with Town Clerk Walter. He was certainly still living in 1707.
when he is recorded as gaining permission to cart divots off the Common. However, a Robert ‘of that Ilk’ is recorded on the Commission of Supply for Roxburghshire in 1704, so the succession is unclear around this time. He supposedly died unmarried, perhaps shortly before 1734 when his property was divided among his heirs; however, it is possible he died earlier and was succeeded by Robert (perhaps a younger brother). Cock-law passed to Janet Gledstains, who was either his daughter or perhaps the daughter of Robert.

James (17th/18th C.) blacksmith at Dodburn.
His son William was baptised in Kirkton Parish in 1718. William (b.1731), also baptised in Kirkton Parish, may also have been his son. It is possible he is the same man as the blacksmith in Hawick in the 1720s. James (17th/18th C.) blacksmith in Hawick Parish. In 1735 he was paid by the Council ‘for making ye coulter’ (presumably for using on the Common). He married Janet Moscrop and their children included: Bessie (b.1721); Janet (b.1723); and Walter (b.1725). The 1725 baptism was witnessed by Walter Nixon and John Scott ‘in Hawick’. He could be the James, son of Walter and Janet Scott, baptised in Hawick in 1688. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He was son of Walter and in 1718 married Marion Gledstains, daughter of another Walter. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Hobkirk and had daughter Margaret (b.1728). The witnesses appear to have been John Scott and John Paterson.

James (18th C.) outdoor servant working on the Wells estate in about 1730. He is mentioned in the estate book of factor Archibald Jerdan, described as a sort of handy-man. James (18th C.) possibly brother of Bailie Gledstains, they were together given responsibility about 1740 for col-cecting subscriptions ‘west the water’ for paying for the Teviot Bridge. He could be the James described as a tailor in Hawick in 1735. He may be the James (along with another John) who witnessed an Episcopal baptism for John of Whitlaw in 1753. James (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Elizabeth Turnbull in 1753. James (d.bef. 1808) only surviving son of town Clerk John. He owned the property at 80 High Street that was later the Liberal Club.
However, he did not long outlive his father, since his sisters Christian and Ann were served heirs to their father in 1808 and sold the property in 1809. He could be the James, son of John and Ann Weir baptised in Hawick in 1766. James (b.c.1795) farm labourer and gamekeeper who lived at Branxholme Town and later at Stintyknowe. He was probably related to the earlier Gledstains who were at Chapelhill. His wife was Barbara and their children included Betty, Agnes and Margaret. In 1861 he was ‘Formerly Gamekeeper’ at ‘Stintyknows Far House’. Janet nee Murray (15th C.) wife of James of that Ilk. In 1437, after the death of her husband, she was involved in a dispute with the Baron of Hawick, Sir William Douglas, over the lands of the East Mains of Hawick: Douglas won the dispute. Janet (16th C.) owner of 1 ½ particates of land on the south side of the public street according to Hawick’s 1537 Charter. She may have been widow of a local Gledstains. Janet (d.1737) probably the doughter of James, the 16th of that Ilk (although he is also said to have died unmarried, but perhaps this is confused and he merely died with no male heirs); however, she is also said to have been daughter of Robert of that Ilk. She died unmarmied and in 1738 the lands of Dod were divided among her ‘heirs-portioners’, who were John of Whitlaw, Robert Rutherford and Robert’s wife Esther, sister of Robert of that Ilk (and hence presumably her aunt). Cocklaw was eventually sold in about 1741. John (d.1412) 5th Glad-stains of that Ilk. eldest son of William and Margaret Turnbull. His mother transferred her properties to him when William died, some time in the reign of Robert III (probably the late 1390s).
This included Hundleshope in Peeblesshire and Roberton in Selkirkshire (perhaps the first record of the name ‘Roberton’), as well as land in the town of Selkirk. It is also possible that the lands of Ormiston etc. near Hawick were acquired by the Gledstains through this Turnbull connection; Margaret’s father John was surely related to the Turnbulls of the Borthwick Water and Selkirk-shire. This was the start of the family of Gled-stains of that Ilk moving their centre of activity to Roxburghshire. He was probably succeeded by his brother James, or possibly by Thomas and then James. John (15th C.) possibly 7th of that Ilk. However, the information is uncertain, partly because of the decline of the Earls of Douglas, their overlords. He was referred to as ‘Johanni de Gledstanyis de eisdem’ in 1456 in the Exchequer Rolls for Peeblesshire. On the fall of the House of Douglas, Gledstanes in Lanarkshire had been forfeited to the Crown, and was granted to the Earl of Angus in 1457. However, John also held Hundleshope (in Peeblesshire) in 1482. Around this time the Dumfriesshire branch of the family separated off. In 1463 he witnessed a retour for Gledstains

the 5th Earl of Angus ‘Bell the Cat’. He is probably the John Gledstains who acted as one of the Earl of Angus’ Bailies for infefting David Scott of Braxholme in the lands of Mangerton in 1482. He was probably the John of Cocklaw who was witness to a 1483 document dealing with Denholm Mains. He may have been the ‘John Gledstanes’ who witnessed a 1487 sasine for the lands of Boonraw and the ‘Johannem Gledstanes’ who was on the panel for Walter Scott inheriting the lands and titles of Braxholme and Buccleuch. In 1484/5 there is a record of a dispute between the Burgh of Peebles and him (together with Thomas Lowes of Manor) over lands at Cademuir; the decree that he and Lowes refrain from encroaching on Peebles Common was ratified by James IV in 1505/6. However, there was a further complaint that he sent ‘he send his houshald men and servandis, and cruelly dang and hurt thair hirdis and servandis that were kepand thair corne and gudis within thair said propir landis, and left twa of thame liand on the feild for deid’, after which he sent his nephew and son, with 26 of their accomplices to drive the people off their own lands. In 1492 there was a decree from the Privy Council against him, as well as William and Archibald Douglas of Cavers, to pay to John Rutherford of Humbale 100 merks due to his grandfather, Nicholas Rutherford. He may be the Laird of Gledstains who was surety for John Young in Deanbrae in 1494/5. Either he or the next generation would have been the Laird of Gledstains who was fined at the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh in 1502 for failure to ‘give suit’ for his lands of Adderstone and Adderstoneshiel. John in 1509 he was also on the ‘retour of inquest’ (listed first, in fact) for the inheritance of the Barony of Cavers by James Douglas. He is named in a Douglas of Cavers document in 1509/10, verifying their lands and Barony, except for the lands held by him, as shown by a charter of David II (although it is unclear whether this also refers to the Gledstains lands). He allied himself with the Scotts of Braxholme and Buccleuch. In 1517 he was on the panel of ‘retour’ for Sir Walter Scott inheriting his father’s barony of Braxholme. His lands at that time included Coliford, Ormiston, Dod and Giddenscleuch. He was apparently quite unscrupulous, trying to gain possession of part of the common lands of Cademuir (adjacent to Hundleshope), and being involved in a raid there in 1518. He was succeeded by his nephew John, who was mentioned in connection with the 1518 raid. John of Cocklaw (d.1519) nephew of John, the 8th Laird. He was the 9th Gledstains of that Ilk, although only for a year. He was probably already an old man in 1518 when there was a raid, involving him and his son Archibald, on the common lands of Peebles. It is described that the Laird of Gledstains sent forth ‘John of Gledstanes his nevoy and apperand air, Archibald Gledstanes, his sone, and others to the number of twenty-six men’. He was succeeded by his son James, who contracted in 1519 to marry his son John to a daughter of Sir Walter Scott of Braxholme. In 1517 his daughter Helen was infefted in ‘liferent’ of the lands of ‘Langhawcht’ in the Barony of Manor in Peeblesshire. He may be the John of that Ilk whose widow Margaret ‘Jardane’ is recorded in 1542 requesting from the Court of Session that Lord Somerville pay her the rents on the lands of Libberton (in Lanarkshire). John of Craigs and Over Kelwood (16th C.) probably son of Thomas, who held Over Kelwood in Dumfrieshire. He was confusingly referred to as being ‘of that Ilk and Craigs’, even although there were others ‘of that Ilk’ in Roxburghshire at the same time. He had a sasine of Over Kelwood in 1525, married Margaret Jardine and was still alive in 1537. He was probably succeeded by his brother Matthew. John (d.1574) probably a son of Gledstains of that Ilk, but his parentage is not known. He held the lands of ‘Quothquan’, which extended to 26 acres of the former larger estate of Gledstains in Lanarkshire. He attended St. Andrews University 1505-8, then studied in France. In 1534 he became an advocate, appointed ‘Advocatus Pauperum’ and was a Lord of Sessions from 1542. He was also Procurator of Judges, Member of the Privy Council and became Doctor of Laws. He was recorded in Edinburgh in 1550, on a panel ruling for the Privy Council. His property was inherited by his nephew, also John, who was Ormond Pursuivant for Scotland. John (1519–64) 11th of that Ilk, son of James. He probably married a daughter of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme (Janet or Christian), to whom he had been betrothed by a marriage contract of 1519/20 (which must have been shortly after he was born). This demonstrates the close links between the Scott and Gledstains families at this time. In 1537/8 there was an assurance by several Croziers that they would not harm him, his friends or servants, with Elliotis acting as cautioners. In 1542 he had a sasine for the lands of Adderstone and Adderstoneshiel. He was probably the Laird of Gledstains mentioned as a creditor in the inventory of the estate of William Scott, younger of Buccleuch in 1552. He is mentioned in connection with exploits of the Scotts after 1553. In 1553/4 he was ‘de Cocklaw’ when he was on the panel for Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme inheriting from his grandfather. He was charged with the murder of Thomas Peebles and William Bell at ‘Kaidmuir’ near Peebles in 1561, probably a continuation of the claim on those lands made by his family for generations; his name is given as ‘Jhone Gledstainsis of Cocklaw’. Although the trial was deferred indefinitely, his son James was pursued for damages by the descendants of the victims. Also in 1561 he was among a list of men charged to appear before Queen Mary regarding the state of the Borders. In 1563/4 he gave the tenancy of lands in Hundleshope (in Peeblesshire) to 2 men after they renounced their former ‘kindenes’ agreement. Also in 1563/4 he promised to enter 3 Elliotis and 2 Croziers for crimes against an Englishman, with Sir William Cranston as his surety. He is probably the ‘Lard o Cocklaw’ listed in 1564 among Border lairds who were ordered to support the warden, Ker o Cessford. In 1564/5 he ‘and his barnis’ are described as supporters of Buccleuch in the bond signed between the Scotts and the Kerrs. He was succeeded by his son James, ‘little Gledstane’. His other sons were: William of Cocklaw; Walter, killed by raiders from Liddesdale; and (probably) John of Whitlaw. A document of 1561 (for the rental of Corrie Sike) states that his son and heir apparent was John, which appears to contradict other information (and is perhaps an error, unless there were 2 confounded generations here). John (16th C.) tenant of Sir Walter Scott of Howpsley in the lands of Outersideig in 1569. Sir Walter acted as cautioner for his tenants at a meeting in Hawick, assuring that they would obey the laws of the Lord Regent. John of Whitlaw (16th C.) probably son of John, 11th of that Ilk. He was the founder of the Whitlaw and Flex branch of the family. He is mentioned in the 1574 last testament of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme as being left something unspecified. In 1580 he is recorded as ‘servand’ to the Countess of Bothwell, owner of Whitlaw, when the farm was raided by a group of Elliots and Armstrongs, who stole 100 sheep. He was in the party that followed the raiders, and one of his brothers was killed in a skirmish. John of Winningtonhall (16th/17th C.) probably the John ‘of Wydeton hall’ in 1584 when he signed the bond of assurance between men of Liddesdale and the English Wardens, his name appearing alongside other local Gledstains. Probably the same John ‘of Woudington Hall’ was witness to a marriage contract between the Gledstains of Cocklaw and the Turnbulls of Wauchope in 1593. He resigned his lands in 1605 (presumably for the purposes of a new infeftment), and is there styled ‘Joanni Gledstanis de Windintoun’. He is named as surety for James of Cocklaw and that Ilk in a trial of 1605 (relating to reparations for John of Cocklaw’s murder of Thomas Peebles in 1561). His location is there recorded as ‘Wynningtoun-hauch’ and ‘Wyndington Haugh’. In 1607 he was chancellor of the ‘assyse’ which found George Henderson in Winnington to be not guilty of chopping down trees belonging to Robert Elliot of Redheugh. It seems likely that he was a close relative of James of that Ilk and related to the John of the same place a century earlier. John of Whitlaw (d.bef. 1672) son of Walter. He stood in for his father as Chamberlain for the Duke of Buccleuch for Hassendean and Wilton Parishes in the period 1641–47 and was Chamberlain in his own right by 1647–48. He remained Chamberlain until at least 1656, and in the last couple of years also acted for Eckford, Hawick and Clarilaw. He was the Chamberlain who gave an account of the personal property and debts of Earl Francis Scott of Buccleuch when he died in 1651. In 1648 he was on the Committee of War for Roxburghshire. He was granted the lands of Flex by James Douglas, Earl of Queensberry in 1653. He is probably the John of Whitlaw recorded on the Land Tax Rolls of 1663, when £133 6s 8d was paid for Flex in Hawick Parish and £266 13s 4d paid for Whitlelaw; he also paid the teind of Eckford on behalf of the Countess of Buccleuch. He married Anna Scott (probbly daughter of Walter Scott of Synton) and their children, baptised in Hawick, included: Margaret (b.1639); Walter (b.1640); Francis (b.1643), who succeeded; an unnamed son (b.1645); and Helen (b.1646). His son Francis was served as his heir in the lands of Flex in 1672. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Margaret Wilson and their children included: John (b.1670); James (b.1672); John (again, b.1678); and Jane (b.1679). John of Hilliesland (17th C.) recorded in 1678 when he paid the land tax on land valued at £66 13s 4d in Hawick Parish.

He was surely related to Walter of Hilliesland, who paid the land tax in 1643 and 1663. He may have been father of the John admitted as a Burgess in 1692 and an ancestor of the Town Clerks who owned Hilliesland. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He was married to Isobel (or Bessie) Liddell and their children included Jane (b.1682) and William (b.1685). John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Harkness and their children included Walter (b.1676), James (b.1677), Thomas (b.1679); Archbald (b.1681), John (b.1683), Francis (b.1685) and Bessie (b.1687). John (17th C.) listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick ‘est the water’ in 1694. He was listed separately from the carier.
It is possible he was the same as the Hilliesland Laird. John (17th/18th C.) carrier in Hawick.
He was listed among those contributing to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4 and paid tax on 2 hearth according to the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694.
His son was William. In 1717 he and his son and daughter-in-law were all rebuked by the Session for fighting with one another on the street. He is probably the John ‘at the East Port’, who, along with his son William, were in 1700 ‘found guilty of stealing peats and strae, are sentenced to stand at the crosse for a season, and be banished the town’.
They stole 3 loads of peat from Galalaw and oat straw from the stack yard of Rev. Cunningham;
this was said to be ‘out of his extreme necessity’, probably related to the great famine that spread over the country at that time. John of Hilliesland (17th/18th C.) admitted as a Burgess of Hawick in 1692. He may have been son of the earlier John of Hilliesland (if not the same man) and perhaps father of the later John of Hilliesland; he was surely related to the Town Clerks of Hawick.
John (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish.
He married Isobell Burn and their children included William (b.1707). John (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1717 he married Jean, daughter of Adam Glendinning and their children included John (b.1718). John of Whitlaw (17th/18th C.) recorded as being a Hawick Parish heritor in 1718. His brother James became a skinner’s apprentice in Edinburgh in 1719. He is probably the same man as John of Flex who was recorded in a 1710 land valuation of Hawick Parish, when his lands of ‘Flex and Meikle and Little Whitalaw’ were valued at 400 merks. He probably succeeded Francis of Whitalaw, but it is unclear if he was his son or brother. He was probably succeeded by the next (and last) John of Whitalaw. John (d.1754) tenant of ‘Hilliesland Walls’ and presumably related to the Town Clerks’ family. He witnessed a sasine made by Town Clerk Walter in 1728. He was described as being ‘of Hilliesland’ when admitted as a Burgess of Hawick in 1733 (and was presumably a descendant of the John of Hilliesland who became a Burgess in 1692). He may be the John who witnessed an Episcopal baptism for John of Whitlaw in 1753. He may have been the last Laird of Hilliesland to live there, and was probably the Laird who was described (in 1767) as having earlier driven his herd to Hawick Common, down the Iver Burn. John of Whitalaw (c.1710–bef. 83) one of the last of the family to own land locally. He may have been son of the previous John of Whitlaw. In 1738 he was one of ‘heirs-portioners’ of Janet, daughter of Robert of that Ilk and Cock-law, when she died unmarried; he thus received part of the lands of Dod that Janet had still possessed. He was listed on a memorial of 1738, claiming the right of the Lordship of Rutherford to John Scott of Belford. He was stated to be tenant of Whitalaw in the 1750s when Robert Hobkirk was Town Herd. He was interested in genealogy and prepared a pedigree of the Scotts of Synton (through whom he was related on his mother’s side), Whitslade, etc. in 1769; this was used as the basis for much of the booklet on the pedigree of the Scotts of Stokoe, Todrig, etc., which was printed privately in 1783 (by which time he was deceased). He was witness to a sasine in Hawick in 1764. He was said to have been an officer under Prince Charles and remained a Jacobite sympathiser (as described by Robert Wilson). He went about on crutches in later life, and blamed his rheumatism on the house of Hanover! He was also known for having a large feast every Christmas. His daughter Mira was baptised in 1753, by Episcopal Minister Rev. Findlay McLennan, making it clear that the family continued to follow that particular faith; the witnesses were Dr. Robert Scott of Whitlade, as well as John and James Gledstains from Hawick (who were probably his brothers, cousins, or other near relatives). The name of his wife is unknown, and it is not clear what happened to Mira, or whether he had other children. John (1724–83) son of the second Walter, writer (i.e. lawyer) in Hawick. He was Town Clerk from about 1763 until 1783, with a short gap in 1768–70 (precise dates uncertain), when he was deprived of office for being a Jacobite supporter and refusing to take the oath of government (although Robert Wilson's account of this is confused). He was assisted by Thomas Wintrope for several years, perhaps until 1768. He was also tenant of Meikle and Little Whitlawes, and had the farms as aliment from the Duke of Buccleuch (although this could be confusion with his namesake, John of Whitlaw). He kept a public house in town (like his predecessors as Town Clerk), where it was said that most of Hawick's civic business was carried out. He was apparently liked to avoid litigation and was fond of resolving disputes by inviting both parties to his house in the evening to discuss things amicably. He wrote a detailed account of the great flood of 1767. In 1767 he one of the representatives of Hawick at the perambulation of the Common made as part of the court case for its division. In 1769 he was appointed to the commission to discuss the Common with representatives of the Duke of Buccleuch. He married Ann Weir, who died in 1805; she was probably the daughter of the earlier Town Clerk James Weir, born in 1738. Their children included: Walter (b.1765); James (b.1766), who owned 80 High Street; William (b.1768); Christian, who married manufacturer Walter Richardson Elizabeth (b.1776); and Ann (b.1781), who may have married John 'the Turk' Scott. The witnesses to the 1768 baptism were writer James Weir (probably his brother-in-law) and schoolmaster James Inglis. He appears to have been the last male of the direct family of Gledstains in Teviotdale. His 2 daughters were served as heiresses to him in 1808 and sold 80 High Street in 1809 (so his sons must have been deceased by then); they are probably the 'Mrs. Richardson and Miss Gladstanes' listed in 1811 as owners of part of the particate lands of Hawick. He was succeeded as Town Clerk by his nephew, John Inglis. John (18th C.) resident of Hawick who married Margaret Beattie in 1770. They had a daughter Joanna baptised in Wilton in 1778. John (18th C.) resident of Hawick who married Katherine Riddell in 1775. Matthew (15th C.) witness to a sasine of the Cranstons of that Ilk for Denholm Mains in 1465/6. Matthew and Cuthbert were also witnesses. Perhaps the same 'Matho Gledstanis' was witness to a letter of appraising for the lands of Whithope, directed by William Douglas of Cavers, in 1500. Matthew of Over Kelwood (d.bef. 1541) probably son of Thomas and brother of John. He lived in Dumfriesshire and was referred to as being 'of that Ilk', even though the Roxburghshire branch were probably the superior line. He married Elizabeth Livingstone and their daughter Mirabella married a relative, Herbert of Dundee. He had a sasine of Over Kelwood in 1536 and was still alive in 1539. His grandson Walter was also referred to as being 'of that Ilk'. Mira (b.1753) daughter of John of Whitlaw. There is an entry in the Hawick Parish Kirk baptismal records that she was baptised by Episcopalian minister Rev. Findlay McLennan, with witnesses Robert Scott of Whitslade, and John and James Gledstains (who were probably uncles or other close relatives). This was one of the few pieces of evidence that there was a continuing Episcopal Kirk in Hawick through the 18th century. Patrick (14th C.) juror in Roxburghshire in 1336, who swore fealty to Edward III in 1346 following the Battle of Durham (Neville’s Cross). He may have been a son of Herbert. Patrick (15th C.) recorded in the 1493 Justice-aire held in Jedburgh. He was 'Patricius gledstanis in coklaw'; he must surely have been related to the Gledstains of Cocklaw and that Ilk, although appears to have been a tenant rather than a laird. He was allowed to 'compone' for multiple thefts: 12 cows from John Anderson; 58 sheep from William Knight; 120 score sheep from James Sinclair and Robert Knight; 80 sheep from James Crays; 100 sheep and 50 cows from Hartshaw; plundering from the tenants of Glengeilt; and stealing horses and other things from Robert Walderston, William Allan, John Hutchison and their neighbours. His surety was Sir Robert Ker. Patrick (15th C.) tenant in Hummelknowes, recorded in the 1494/5 Justice-aire held in Jedburgh. He was allowed to 'compone' for the theft of 4 sheep from Yairi, with James

Pringle of Smailholm as his surety. It seems that he was a different man from Patrick in Cocklaw. Robert (15th C.) on the ‘re tur of inquest’ made in Hawick in 1424 for lands in Hownam. Probably the same Robert de Gledstaniis was a bailie of Sir William Crichton of that Ilk, when he infefted Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch in Grahamslaw in 1439. And he appeared as witness along with Crichton and others on a charter by Archibald, Earl of Douglas to the Kers of Altonburn in 1439. Probably the same Robert witnessed a charter for William Cranston of Crailing in 1443. Probably the same man is ‘Roberto Gleddistanys de le Crag’ in 1446 when he witnessed a charter between Inglis of Manor and Scott of Buccleuch; his lairdship was probably Craigs in Dumfrieshire. He is probably the same ‘Roberto de Gledstaniis’ (an esquire) in 1452 when he is the first witness listed on the sarine for the Baronoy of Hawick to William Douglas of Drumlanrig. In 1454/5 he is ‘Robert of Gledstaniys’ when he witnessed a document for Ker of Altonburn. And in 1463/4 he was ‘Roberto de Gledstanys’ among the men who received a reward from the King for the capture of John Douglas of Balveny. Probably the same man is recorded as ‘Gleddstanys’ when he witnessed a charter of 1468 dealing with the Scotts of Buccleuch and lands of Lemptlaw. Robert (15th C.) recorded as ‘Robertum Gledstaniys’ in 1484 when he was on the inquest panel for the inheritance of the Baronoy of Hawick. Robert (15th/16th C.) described as being from Annan when he witnessed a charter at Caerlawrock in 1492/3. Probably the same Robert is described as ‘scutiferis’ (i.e. shield-bearer) when he witnessed a charter for John, Lord Maxwell, in 1505. Robert (17th C.) recorded as ‘pr Todscha hauch’ when he signed the ‘Confessions of Faith’ in Hawick in 1638. He was proprietor of Todshawhauch in a 1650 list of communicants of the Borthwick valley. His wife may have been Agnes Rule, with their daughter Margaret baptised in Hawick in 1639. In 1648 he was listed on the Committee of War for Roxburghshire (along with Walter of Cocklaw and John of Whitlaw, who must have been closely related). Either he or a son of the same name was listed in 1686 as tenant of the lands of Whames in the ratification of the Baronoy of Hawick to Anna Duchess of Buccleuch. Robert (17th C.) Hawick resident who was on a 1684 list of men declared as fugitives for religious non-conformity. Robert (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His children included Margaret (b.1693) and Margaret (again, b.1700). Robert (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His children probably included: Anna (b.1690); Walter (b.1693); Robert (b.1696); John (b.1700); and Janet (b.1703). The witnesses to the 1693 baptism were John Stuart and John Black. Robert (17th/18th C.) listed as ‘of that Ilk’ in 1704 as a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire. Also in 1704 he petitioned the Bailies of Hawick to let him ‘cast divots in the Common of Haviecke’; this was to thatch his stable at Hummelknowes. It is unclear who he was, since the Laird of Cocklaw at the time was James; but perhaps he was a brother of James, and hence son of William. Probably the same Robert of that Ilk married Janet, daughter of Robert Elliot of Larriston in 1706 (and she secondly married John Scott of Gorrenberry in 1716, so he was presumably dead by then). Robert (17th/18th C.) workman in Hawick. He married Janet Brown, and their children included: John (b.1700); Janet (b.1703); Robert (b.1705), who lived in Roberton Parish; Marion (b.1708); and Margaret (b.1709). The witnesses in 1705 were Bailie Patrick Richardson and weaver Andrew Brown (probably his wife’s father or brother). Robert (17th/18th C.) Hawick resident. He married Isobell Hobkirk in 1714. Robert (17th/18th C.) Hawick resident. In 1721 he married Marion ‘Lun or Douglas’ (suggesting his wife had previously been married). Robert (18th/19th C.) Hawick resident. He married Jean (or Jane) Scott in 1780 and she died in 1805. Robert (b.c.1763) perhaps son of William, resident of Chapelhill. He married Mary Scott in Wilton Parish in 1788. This means he was probably different from the Robert who married Jean Scott 8 years earlier. Their children included: Peggy (b.1789); William (b.1792); and James (b.1794). When Peggy was baptised the family were at Overhall. Perhaps the same Robert was a 78 year old agricultural labourer living with the Anderson family at Whitehaugh Cottages in 1841. Robert (b.1812) eldest son of William. He married Mina Nichol. In 1840 he and his wife emigrated to Canada along with his parents and siblings. Thomas (14th/15th C.) son of Sir William and brother of John and James. He may have owned the lands of Flex. He acquired Roberton (in Selkirkshire) from his mother in 1412, confirmed by a charter of James I in 1430. It is possible he is the same Thomas Gleddstaniis appointed (along with Stephen Scott and others) as a procurator by Ellen Rule of Primside when she resigned her lands to their superior, Archibald, Earl of Douglas. Probably the same Thomas had a charter from the Duke of Albany (around 1410) for the lands of ‘Withnyhope’ in Selkirkshire. He could be the same Thomas who witnessed a confirmation of the Church of Cavers to Melrose Abbey in 1404. His wife was Margaret and he was succeeded by their son Alexander. Thomas (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1511 when he witnessed a charter for Margaret Colville relating to lands in Oxnam. It is unclear how he was related to other Roxburghshire Gladstains. He could be the Thomas who had a charter for ‘Overkeldvd’ (in Dumfriesshire) in 1509, and hence was probably a son of Herbert, Rector of Dornoch. Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1706 he married Bessie Sanderson and their children included Janet (b.1707), Bessie (b.1716) Bessie (again, b.1717) and Francis (b.1718). John (b.1710) and Janet (b.1712) could also have been his children. He could be the son of John and Margaret Harkness who was born in 1679. Thomas (18th/19th C.) carter in Hawick. The death of his unnamed child is recorded in 1816. Thomas (19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Mary Miller and their son John was baptised in 1872. Thomas (19th C.) resident of Southdean Parish. He married Isabella Fox, daughter of Gilbert Amos, who was joiner at Chesters. He died in an accident at Southdean sawmill. Walter (15th C.) witness to a sasine of 1470 relating to the lands of Grahamslaw and the Scotts of Buccleuch. The same Walter may have witnessed a Buccleuch document of 1464/5 relating to Ladyurd, and hence be from the Peebles area. Probably the same Walter also witnessed a document relating to Kirkurd for the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1475/6. Walter (15th/16th C.) listed on the pardon granted in 1526 to a large number of Scotts, Turnbulls and other Borderers who had assisted the Homes in attacking the Earl of Buccleuch (the only one not called Scott), who was a close cousin to the Scotts and was given the lands of Whitlelaw for this service; however, this may have been an earlier generation. He is probably the Walter of Whitehall, presumably an error. He may be the Walter of Whitlaw who is listed by Scott of Satchells as being one of the 24 ‘Pensioners’ of Buccleuch (the only one not called Scott), who was a close cousin to the Scotts and was given the lands of Whitlelaw for this service; however, his son John stood in for him, and was deceased by the time of the 1642–43 accounts. In one document he is transcribed as ‘Walter Gledstones in Whitehall’, presumably an error. He may be the Walter of Whitlaw who was recorded in 1640s. He (or perhaps his son) may have been Laird of Dod in 1643 when he held the lands of Adderstonesiel, with his mother having the liferent of Adderstonelee. He may be the Walter of Dod whose daughter Eupham married John Rutherford of Littleleugh. Walter of Whitlaw (d.c.1643) part of the assize at the Justice Court in Jedburgh in 1611. He was also part of the 1616 jury that convicted Jock Scott, ‘the Sucker’, of sheep stealing. He is recorded as a ‘personne of assye’ in the local Circuit Court of 1622. In 1627 he was one of 9 men charged with performing a valuation of the lands in the Parish of Hawick; he was one of the men who refused to accept some of the items in the valuation, presumably because of a dispute over either the Kirland, Ladyland or Trinitylands. He was also recorded in a county valuation of lands in Hawick in 1643, his lands being valued at £266 13s 4d. He also appears as Chamberlain (or Factor) to the Earl of Buccleuch in existing records of rents and teinds for the period 1631–40 for Hassendean, Hawick and Wilton Parishes, also including Denholm. He was probably ill by the next year when his son John stood in for him, and was deceased by the time of the 1642–43 accounts. In one document he is transcribed as ‘Walter Gledstones in Whitehall’, presumably an error. He may be the Walter of Whitlaw who was listed by Scott of Satchells as being one of the 24 ‘Pensioners’ of Buccleuch (the only one not called Scott), who was a close cousin to the Scotts and was given the lands of Whitlelaw for this service; however, this may have been an earlier generation. He is probably the Walter of Whitlaw whose daughter Margaret married Walter Scott, Laird of Galalaw. Walter (17th C.) possessor of the farm of Blackburn in Liddesdale in 1632. Walter (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Margaret Wood and their daughter Marion was baptised in Hawick in 1640. Walter of Cocklaw (17th C.) probably the son of James, as recorded in 1648. He may have had brothers William, Robert and James. He was likely the ‘Laird of Gladstains’ who witnessed a family baptism in 1642, and

Gledstains whose lands in Cavers Parish were valued at £1240 in 1643; this consisted of the farms of Hummelknowes, Orniston and Orchard. He was ‘of Cocklaw’ in 1648 when listed on the Committee of War for Roxburghshire. It is possible he was the Walter of Cocklaw who was recorded as superior of the lands of Hundlehope in Peeblesshire in 1620 when they were granted to Sir William Scott of Harden. He may have been succeeded by a son (or brother), William, who is recorded in 1663. Walter (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Margaret Wood and their daughter Agnes was born in 1641. Walter of Dod (17th C.) recorded in a 1643 valuation of lands in Hawick Parish (with the spelling ‘of Halysland’). His lands were worth £66 13s. 4d. per year. He is presumably different from Walter of Whitlaw, who was listed separately in 1643. However, it is unclear how he was related to other local Gledstains, but he may have been father of John of Hillsieland who paid the land tax in 1678. Walter of Dod (17th C.) recorded in 1649 when his son and heir George was infested in the lands of Hunthill (in Cavers Parish) by William Earl of Lothian. It is probably the same Walter of Dod who married Agnes Douglas of Cavers, and whose son Walter was minister at New Abbey. His grandson Abraham was served heir to his lands of Hunthill in 1676. Walter of Flex (17th C.). He married Esther, daughter of Richard Rutherford of Littleheugh and granddaughter of John Rutherford of Capehope. His wife’s mother may have been Eupham, daughter of Richard Rutherford of Littleheugh and granddaughter of John Rutherford of Capehope. His wife’s mother may have been Eupham, daughter of William Gledstains. It is unclear how he was related to other Gledstains of Flex. Rev. Walter (1624–60) son of Walter of Dod and Agnes Douglas of Cavers. He graduated from Edinburgh University in 1645 and in 1650 became minister at New Abbey, Kirkcudbright. He married Margaret, 2nd daughter of John Crichton of Crawfordston, who was widow of William Lawrie in Inglinton. His children included James and Agnes. His widow married James Mair, minister of Troqueer. His gravestone had the following lines (in Latin): ‘Q. Wherefore lies the Gladstone Hidden by the dark stone? A. The bosom of the earth Conceals the gem of gold’. Walter (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Margaret Turnbull and their children included Marion (b.1639), John (b.1643) and Bessie (b.1649). Walter (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Isobel Lauder and their children included Helen (b.1646) and Jean (b.1649). Walter (17th C.) merchant in Hawick. In 1676 he and James Liddell were involved in checking the weights used by other traders in Town. Walter Francis of Hilliesland (1642–1718) son of Lieut. Francis and Margaret Stewart, he was born in Hawick, about 3 years before his father was killed. He was Town Clerk 1673–1696, and after a 1 year gap again in c.1696–1710, then sharing the position with his son Walter until his death in 1718. He was Town Clerk on the list of subscribers for the Kirk bell drawn up in 1693. He may be the Walter ‘in Hawicke’ who is listed among the heritors of the Regality of Melrose in 1682. He is probably the ‘Mr Walter Gladstaines’ who witnessed a baptism for wright Francis in 1682. He may also be the Gledstains whose letter to Sir William Douglas of Cavers in 1683 told of the imprisonment of several local lairds for trumped up charges relating to supporting the Covenanters. In 1697 he was one of 4 men who protested against the continuing of Robert Ruecastle as Bailie, through there being a vacancy and on account of an agreement made with the Commissioners of the Duchess of Buccleuch, until a new election for Bailie was held. In 1701 he was cited at the Kirk Session for being drunk at a burial and ‘using expressions savouring of blasphemy in his drunkenness’; he acknowledged his guilt and being reported again in 1702 promised to endeavour to remain sober. In a 1710 land valuation of Hawick Parish his lands were valued at 100 merks. He was also a heritor of Hawick Parish, recorded in 1711 and 1718. He was listed as ‘Mr Walter Gladstaines’ when he witnessed a baptism in 1687; the other witness was James, who was probably a close relative, and may have been James of that Ilk. He was also ‘Mr Walter Gladstaines’ when he paid tax for 4 hearths in Hawick, ‘eist the water’, in 1694; this suggests he had quite a substantial house. In 1707 ‘the town clerk’s wyf’ (presumably his wife) was ordered by the Council to be paid back for expenses incurred at the Queen’s birthday in 1706. He translated Rev. Cunninghame’s ‘Lines written on the situation of the burgh and town of Hawick’ (possibly the earliest verse about Hawick) from the Latin. The ancient family bible, now in the Museum, appears to have been largely inscribed by him. He may also have been the Town Clerk who entertained a party of Jacobite officers while their army was encamped in Hawick in 1715 (although Robert Wilson ascribes this to a later Town Clerk in 1745). In 1704 he also provided what was probably the first translation of the 1537 Charter, appearing in print in Wilson’s
Gledstains

‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He was married to Margaret Sinclair in Calder. Apart from Walter, their surviving children were William (b.1674) and Agnes (b.1677). Other children baptised in Hawick were Francis (b.1672), Gideon (b.1678) and Margaret (b.1681). Walter (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Janet Scott and their children included Agnes (b.1672), Margaret (b.1673), Janet (b.1676), Marion (b.1678), Helen (b.1684) and James (b.1688). The witnesses in 1676 were John Aitkin and James Deans. Bailie Walter (17th/18th C.) wright in Hawick. He was a Bailie in the 1690s and is probably the same as one of the contemporary Walters. Probably the same wright is recorded as in 1673 on the list of men named in the trial for the so-called riot at St. Jude’s Fair. Probably the same Walter was recorded as Bailie in 1697. Perhaps the same wright is listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick ‘eist the water’ in 1694 and among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. Walter (17th C.) recorded in the 1678 valuation roll as portioner of Samieston in Jedburgh Parish. This land was formerly owned by Moir of Otterburn, but sold to the Duke of Roxburgh. It was listed as ‘Lands in Samieston, formerly Walter Gladstain’s £233 6s 8d’ in 1788. Walter (17th C.) resident of Hummelknowes on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. It is unclear how he was related to other family members. Walter (17th C.) tailor listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick ‘eist the water’ in 1694. He was also listed as a tailor among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. Note the possible confusion with ‘William’, who was a tailor in Hawick at about the same time. Walter (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His children included: John (b.1695); William (b.1703); John (b.1706); John (again, also 1706); Janet (b.1707); John (again, b.1708); Bessie (b.1708); Isobel (b.1709); John (b.1711); and Robert (b.1713); and Walter (b.1716). It is possible that he is the same as one (or two) of the contemporary Walters. Walter (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1703 he married Helen Sanderson. He may have been related to Thomas, who married Bessie Sanderson. Walter junior (d.1739) son of Walter who was Town Clerk. He himself was Town Clerk from 1710 probably until his death. However, it appears that James Weir was also acting as Town Clerk for the last few years. It was said that he was a strong supporter of the Town Herd in stopping encroachment on the Common, but that ‘since his death there was never one to support the Herd, and the Common had been ten times worse used than it was before’. He is probably the Walter of Hilliesland who was admitted as a Burgess of Hawick in 1704. He may have had an inn (like other Town officials in those days); it is recorded in 1724 that £5 8s. Scots was ‘spent in the clerk’s, being the King’s birth-day’. He married Agnes (or Anna) Elliott from Langholm in 1706. He also married Elizabeth (‘Bessie’ or ‘Bet-tie’), daughter of Hawick tailor John Scott, in an ‘irregular marriage’ of 1720 (his name being incorrectly given as ‘William Gladstains, town clerk’ in the Session records); this marriage was carried out by ‘James Macabine’, possibly an Episcopalian minister. He also witnessed an irregular marriage in Hawick in 1724. He was succeeded as Town Clerk by his son John (1724–83). His other children included: Agnes (b.1721); Walter (b.1722); William (b.1721); Joanna (b.1726), who married James Inglis; William (again, b.1728); and James. Walter (1817–82) 2nd son of farm worker William. In 1840, along with his parents and siblings, he emigrated to Canada, settling on the banks of the Nith River in southern Ontario. He first made chairs at the Nithsvale Chair Factory, and was then responsible for the construction of the nearby Stanley Street Church and Knox Church. He ran a general store in Ayr Ontario for many years. In 1869 the family moved to a farm near Gentry, Missouri. In 1847 he married Jane, daughter of Alexander Easton and Jean-nie Kyle, who had emigrated from Castleton; she died in 1914. Their children were Jane, William R., Eliza, Alexander, Jeannie Kyle, George E., Anna M., Walter and Mary. They are buried at Knox Cemetery, near Gentry. Walter (b.1817/8) frameworker who lived at 7 Kirk Wynd. His wife was Helen and their children included Helen, David, Thomas, Mary and Agnes. He is probably the Walter ‘Gledstains’ whose recollections of James Hogg informed Robert Murray’s 1863 article. William (14th C.) recorded in 1346 along with Patrick when they paid homage to King Edward after the Battle of Neville’s Cross. He was described as being of ‘Mintowe’, suggesting that he was associated with Minto in Teviotdale. It is possible that he was the same as Sir William of that Ilk. Sir William (d.1365) probably the grandson of Herbert, and hence 3rd of that Ilk. In 1354 he witnessed a charter of Robert of Alton relating to the chantry at the Church of Roxburgh; his name also appears on 4 confirming charters. He also witnessed a deed of 1357/8 for the lands of Altonburn. He became a follower of the Earl of Douglas. He accompanied the Earl to France in 1356 and was made a Knight at the Battle of Poitiers. He was later imprisoned in the Tower of London for 16 months, being released in 1358. In about 1358 he witnessed a grant of the lands of Penangushope and Cauldcleuch to Melrose Abbey, by William, Earl of Douglas. In 1359 he is ‘William of Gladstains’ when he witnessed an Athole charter. There is a letter of protection of 1360 from William, 1st Earl of Douglas, referring to Sir William as his Bailie of the Barony of Cavers and charging him to protect the lands of the Abbot and Convent of Melrose within the Barony (specifically Ringwood). This is the first record of a connection between the Douglases and the Gladstains of that Ilk, which would last for several generations. At about the same time he witnessed a confirmation of the advowson of Cavers Kirk to Melrose Abbey. In about 1360 he witnessed a charter for lands in Lauderdale and was also recorded in the Exchequer Rolls as a watchet of wool on the marches. In 1363 he was one of a number of Scotsmen given safe conduct into England by King Edward (probably related to a ransom). His son was probably William, and their names appear frequently in local charters between 1357 and 1388. Sir William (d.c.1400) son of William according to a charter of 1365, when he was granted his father’s land of ‘Wodgrenyton, Wynkiston and Acolmfelde’ in Peeblesshire. He is probably the William who witnessed the charter by John Turnbull of Minto, granting Minto to Sir William Stewart of Jedburgh in 1390. He obtained lands near Peebles from David II, and is referred to in 1396 as ‘of Gladstanes and Coklaw’. This ‘Coklaw’ is believed to have been in Lanarkshire, and gave its name to the tower built later near Hawick. In 1396 Sir William Ingles was granted the Barony of Manor, except for the lands there that he possessed. He married Margaret Turnbull (said to be daughter and heiress of John Turnbull), acquiring other lands near Peebles (specifically Hundleshope), as well as in Selkirk and at Roberton. His sons were John, Thomas and James. In 1430 Margaret resigned her lands of Roberton to her son Thomas. William (15th C.) recorded in 1432 as a witness to the sasine giving the Barony of Cavers and Sheriffdom of Roxburghshire to William Douglas. Although no other designation is given for him, he must have been an important local laird at the time, probably connected with Cocklaw. William (15th C.) one of the men directed by the Earl of Angus in 1489 to infeft Robert Elliot of Redheugh in certain lands. The others were William Ker of Mersington, Ralph Ker of Primside Loch and William Elliot of Gorrenberry. His relationship to other Gladstains is unclear. He may be the William who in 1500, along with Bartholomew and George, witnessed a charter for Walter Ker of Cessford for the lands of Caverton. It is possible that they were connected with Kelso Abbey. William of Arthurshiel (d.bef. 1565) possibly a younger son of James of that Ilk and Cocklaw. He appears to have been the first Laird of Arthurshiel in Peeblesshire, and ancestor of Prime Minister W.E. Gladstone. William (16th C.) son of John of Cocklaw, who is recorded in a document of 1576. It is possible that he is the ‘William of Flecks’ who signed the 1584 bond of assurance between men of Liddesdale and the English Wardens, his name being listed along with other local Gladstains. William of Dod (16th C.). In 1627 his daughter Eupham married John Rutherford of Capehope. This could be an error for ‘Walter of Dod’. William (d.bef. 1672) son of Walter (or perhaps his younger brother), he was 15th of that Ilk. He is recorded as a baptismal witness in 1642 and as Laird in 1663, when he was appointed Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. In 1663 he also had sheep stolen from his land by John and Walter Glendinning. He was further recorded as Laird of Gladstains in 1663 when he paid Land Tax for £1240 for property in Cavers Parish. Perhaps the same William owned teinds and lands (valued at £130) in Makerstoun Parish in 1643, 1663 and 1678. He was succeeded by James, presumably his son. He was probably also the ‘deceased Gladstains of that Ilk’ whose daughter Margaret married William Murray in Edinburgh in 1693, the ceremony being carried out by John Langlands, former minister at Hawick. He may have married Elizabeth Wishart or Margaret Riddell. It is possible that Robert (mentioned as being ‘of that Ilk’ in 1704) was a younger son, and that he was also father of Esther, who married Robert, son of James Rutherford, surgeon in Jedburgh. William (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Bessie Stewart and their son William was baptised in 1671. William (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Elizabeth Wishart and their children included: Isobell (b.1671); William (b.1673); and Margaret (b.1676). He may be the same as one of the contemporary Williams. William (17th C.) Hawick resident. He married Margaret Riddell and their children included Margaret (b.1673). William (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Helen Gledstains and their daughter Marion was baptised in 1685. William (1674–1703) son of Walter the Town Clerk. He left Hawick at 15, eventually working as overseer in a Barbados plantation, where he died. He may be the William, ‘student’, who witnessed a baptism in Hawick in 1682. William (17th/18th C.) tailor in Hawick. He was listed among those contributing to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He was probably the William listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick ‘eist the water’ in 1694. In 1705 he witnessed a baptism for tailor James Turnbull. He was a member of the Council when it granted a bond (dated 1710, but recorded in the Town Book in 1711) to provide money for the Master of the new Grammar School. William (17th/18th C.) listed among those who subscribed to the fund for the new Kirk bell in Hawick in 1693/4. He is separately listed from the tailor, and so presumably was a different man of the same name. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish who married Isobell Porteous in 1700. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish who married Bessie Scott in 1703. Their children included Helen (b.1714) and William (b.1721). With no mother’s name given, some of John (b.1706), Margaret (b.1707), John (b.1708), William (b.1708), Janet (b.1709), Walter (b.1709) and Helen (b.1712) may also have been his children. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. His children included Jean (b.1709) and Robert (b.1712). He may be the same William whose wife was Mary Wilson and whose children baptised in Wilton Parish included: Agnes (b.1718); William (b.1720); and James (b.1722). William (17th/18th C.) son of Hawick carrier John. In 1713 he was cited in the Session book for excessive drunkenness, the minister having ‘found him vomiting in his drunkenness in ye Churchyard’. He apparently acknowledged his faults on his knees and promised to live temporarily thereafter. But the following year he was back before the Session ‘rebuked for his frequent drinking and wasting his father’s substance by Ryoting and reveling’ and was further threatened with imprisonment by the Magistrates. This is one of the earliest records of a habitual drunkard in Hawick! In 1717 he was rebuked for openly fighting in the street with his wife and father, and told that if he did not refrain from drunkenness he would be sent to the Bailie, who would then send him to the Circuit Court for harsher punishment. In 1714 he married Helen, daughter of Robert Purves. Their children included: John (b.1717); Jean (b.1718); Euphan (b.1721); and Helen (b.1724). Marion (b.1715) may also have been his daughter. William (17th/18th C.) described as being ‘of Kirklands’ in 1721 when his daughter Jean married gardener Robert Ker in Hawick. His lands could have been Kirklands in Wilton Parish, or one of the other local places of the same name. William (17th/18th C.) recorded as witness in Hawick in 1719 when his daughter Sara had a child with her husband James Scott. William (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Brockie in 1726. William (18th C.) ploughman at Braedlie on Hermitage Water, recorded in 1750. William (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Agnes Nichol in 1754. William (18th C.) married Catherine Riddell in Hawick Parish in 1759. He was living at Chapellhill when his children were baptised in 1762 and 1763. His children included: Henrietta (b.1761); James (b.1762); Robert (b.1763), probably the Robert who married Mary Scott in 1788; and an unnamed daughter (b.1769). William (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish who married Betty Riddell in 1773. William (18th/19th C.) listed as innkeeper in Hawick in 1791 when he paid the cart tax. It is unclear where his inn might have been. William (18th/19th C.) recorded as owner of a horse at Hoscothesiel in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. William (18th/19th C.) farmer at Harwood. He is recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, having 3 working horses. William (18th/19th C.) farmer at Bowanhill Roadside (at Teviothead), listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when he owned 3 horses. William (18th/19th C.) agricultural labourer in the Hawick area, son of Robert and Mary Scott. He married Elizabeth Davidson. Their children included: Robert (b.1812), married Mina Nichol; Mary (or Marion, b.1814), who married William Paterson; Walter (b.1817), married Jane Easton; James (b.1821), married Jennie Edgar; Margaret (b.1825), married Robert Hall; Catherine (b.1827), married a Mr. Rose; and William (b.1830), married Helen Pringle. The baptisms were in Robertson Parish, when he was at Vales for the first 2 and at Parkhillhaugh for the next 3. In 1840 the family emigrated to Canada, settling at Nithvale, across the River Nith from Ayr, Ontario (note that the spelling varies in older records, including ‘Gladstain’, ‘Gladstaines’, ‘Gledstains’, ‘Gladstanes’, ‘Gladstains’, ‘Gladstaines’, ‘Gladstanes’, ‘Gladstanen’, ‘Gladstains’, ‘Gladstanes’, ‘Gladstanen’,

the Gledstains (thu-gled-stänz) n. once prominent local family, being the most common former spelling of the name ‘Gladstone’. The origin of the name is probably related to the Old Scots ‘gled’, meaning a kite. The family had its roots in Lanarkshire (the original lands being a few miles north of Biggar), acquired land in Peeblesshire and then moved its main centre to the Hawick area, with lands in Kirkton and Cavers and principal residence at Cocklaw. Cocklaw Castle (at Ormiston, but never more than a minor tower house) was involved in the 1403 ‘Siege of Cocklaw’. In 1509/10 the lands of John Gledstains of that Ilk within the Barony of Cavers included Coliford, Ormiston, Dod and Giddenscleuch, and it was said that he had a charter of confirmation from King David (which must have been from the mid-14th century). ‘Little Gladstain good at need’ led Hawick men at the 1575 Raid of the Redeswire. A member of the family sold Stobs estate to the Elliots in 1580. A major branch, connected directly to the Gledstains of that Ilk and Cocklaw, was the Gledstains of Whittle and later Hilliesland. They provided Town Clerks to Hawick for about 110 years with only minor interruptions (1673–1783). The family also provided Cornets in 1714 and 1744. The Cocklaw estate included Orchard and Hummelknowes, and the family held it until 1734, when the last Gledstains of the Ilk died. The burial aisle of the Gledstains of Cocklaw was pulled down by the heritors sometime in the 18th century. Branches of the family also held lands at Dodd, Coliforthill and Adderstone Shiel. They farmed at the Flex and elsewhere, and had property at 80 High Street, as well as a town house in the Mid Raw. The local Gledstains lost much of their lands in the 18th century, and then the name died out, but descendants undoubtedly remain in Hawick. Another branch, of Craigs and Kelwood in Dumfriesshire, also died out in the male line. Meanwhile the Arthursheils branch flourished and produced William Ewart Gladstone, who became Prime Minister. The family aisle in old Cavers church was abandoned, but was located where a set of steps leading to the gallery was built. The family motto is ‘Fide et virtue’ (with faith and valour), which was engraved on a sundial belonging to Francis of White law, bearing the date 1693. The original arms feature a savage’s head dripping blood, with a bonnet of bay and holly leaves. The papers of the Douglasses of Cavers include many documents relating to the Gledstains of Cocklaw, beginning in the year 1530.

the Gledstane Bible (thu-gled-stän-bi-bul) n. old family bible in the Museum, once belonging to Walter Gledstains of Hilliesland, Town Clerk of Hawick. It is a ‘Beza’ Bible, Geneva edition, dated 1601. It contains many handwritten entries relating to this once important local family. The bible came into the hands of Catherine Cheyne, a servant of the family, then passed to her nephew, William Smith (outlet in Hawick), then to Andrew Irvine (merchant in Hawick), who presented it to the Burgh. James Wilson described it in 1858 and J.A.H. Murray transcribed many of the entries in 1878.

Gledstane’s Lands (gled-stänz-lawndz) n. former name for a small piece of land near Hunthill and Lanton. The lands appear to have been held by George Gladstains of Cocklaw in 1466. They formed the dowry of Lilias, daughter of James Gladstains of Cocklaw, when she married Richard Rutherford in the latter part of the 16th century. It was ‘Gladstaneis-part de Langtoun’ in 1510 when Ninian Glendinning had a charter for the Barony of Scraesburgh. In 1536/7 the ‘ten merkland of old extent lying in the town and territory of Langtoun called Gladstaneis-landis’ when listed as the exception to the lands in the Barony of Scraesburgh infested to John Rutherford of Hunthill by Ninian Glendinning of that Ilk. In 1685 the succession to the Rutherfords of Hunthill estates included the Barony of ‘Scraisburg alias Hunthill, exceptis 10 mercatis terrarum, antiqui extentus, vocatis Gledstanes Lands’. It seems likely that this was the same piece of land later called Hunthill and owned by the Gledstanes of Dod.

Gledstone’s (gled-stänz) n. Gladstone’s mill at No. 10 Union Street, being adjacent to the corner of Union Street and North Bridge Street. The site had been James Brand’s ‘New Academy’ in the mid-19th century. The mill closed in the late 1970s and was converted to a warehouse, used by N.G. Thomson. It was then converted to Blonettes bar, but was demolished after the concrete house on the corner burned down.

Gledstone Street (gled-stän-stree’) n. Gladstone Street in the West End, built in 1878, and named after Prime Minister William Ewart Gladstone. The first buildings were 2 large houses and gleed

Glendinning see Glendonwyn Glendinning (glen-di-nin) n. Adam Fitzhugh of Glendonwyn (13th/14th C.) probably the first of the family to use the designation ‘of Glendonwyn’ or Glendinning. He was an important man during the reign of Alexander III. He had a charter around 1286 from John Macgill for lands in Clifton and Morebattle. He may have married Agnews, daughter of Sir John Towers. He was succeeded by his son Adam. Adam of Glendonwyn (13th/14th C.) probably a descendant of the Fitzhugh family. He held many lands under the superiority of the house of Douglas. He had a discharge of 1313 from Archibald, Lord of Galloway, for all his past feu-duties. In 1320 he had a charter from King Robert for part of the duties from Roxburgh Castle. In 1325 he was confirmed in the lands of ‘Fallhope’ in Roxburghshire, these possibly being ‘Phaup’. He may have married a daughter of Wauchope of that Ilk and was succeeded by another Adam. Adam of that Ilk (d.1363). He held lands in Ewesdale and elsewhere, with the Earl of Douglas being his superior. These generations are confused, and it is unclear how many separate Adams there were. He may be the Sir Adam who married Margaret Douglas, daughter of Sir John of Lothian and sister of Sir James of Dalkeith (although accounts differ, and she may have been wife of a different Adam). He is probably the ‘Ade Glendonying’ (also transcribed as ‘Glentoun’) who forfeited lands in the town of Roxburgh, which were granted to Henry Ashkirk in about 1362. His children included: Sir Adam, who succeeded; Sir Simon, who died at the Battle of Otterburn; Matthew, who became Bishop of Glasgow; Thomas; a daughter who married a de Mundaville; and another daughter who married Thomas de Moffat. Sir Adam (d.c.1397) son of Adam and Margaret Douglas, daughter of Sir John Douglas of Lothian. His grandfather was probably Adam Fitzhugh of Glendonwyn, who first adopted the ‘of Glendonwyn’ appellation, and his brother Matthew was Bishop of Glasgow. However, these early generations are unclear. In a rental roll c.1376 (among the charters of the Douglases of Morton) he is ‘Domino Ade de Glendenwyne’ and listed as holding the lands of ‘Eskdale Mur’ and ‘Le Baly’. About 1380 he witnessed a charter for Henry of Swinton. He is recorded as ‘de Glendonwin’ in 1389, in a charter confirming the lands of Wauchope to Alexander of Wauchope. He acted as general receiver for the Earl of Douglas’ rents. In 1385 he received a charter for the feu-duiies of Scarborough. He was an envoy to the English court and also travelled to Picardy in France. He obtained charters for many lands, including ‘Easter Fawhope’ (probably ‘Phaup’, either in Ettrickdale or near Moss- paul) and Brecallow in Dumfriesshire. In 1390 he was a witness of the confirmation of the lands of Minto to William Stewart of Jedburgh. A 1391 charter of Archibald, Earl of Douglas, dated at Glendonwyn, describes how the Earl was mortifying certain lands in the Barony of Hawick in order to found a chapel in Westerkirk, and directing him to arrange this. He may have married Margaret Douglas, but this could be confusion with an earlier generation. He was married to Wauchope’s daughter Margaret and was to succeeded to the lands if there were no other heirs; this appears to have happened. His children probably included: John, who died at Homildon Hill; Sir Simon, who married Mary, daughter of Archibald, 4th Earl of Douglas; William; Adam; Matthew; and Robert, in Annandale. Adam (15th C.) received a cow in the will of Sir David Scott of Branxholme in 1491/2. He is listed as ‘Ade Glendonwyn’. Mark and Margaret were also listed. Adam (17th C.) listed at Winningtournig in Cavers Parish in 1694 according to the Hearth Tax rolls, although his name is crossed out and he is then listed among the ‘deficient’. Adam (17th C.) tenant in Black-burn in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records Adam (18th C.) possibly the son of William, born in Roberton in 1734. In 1765 he is recorded as shepherd at Mains in Liddesdale. He married Agnes Crozier. He had 4 sons, the eldest, William (who married Mary Elliot), being a shepherd, and the youngest, Adam (b.1762, who married Elizabeth Crook), a soldier. Adam ‘Slow Adam’ (d.1808) carter in Hawick. He married Isabel Roger, who died just 3 weeks after him. They had a daughter, Margaret (1770–75), who is buried at Borthwick Waas. Probably the same Adam was recorded as owner of a horse in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He could be the same Glendinning shown as owner of lands on the south side of the west-end of the High Street on Wood’s 1824 map (even although deceased by then). Esther, who married John Rieve in Howcleuch, may have been his sister (since she is buried next to his daughter). Adam (1762–1851) son of Adam and Agnes Crozier, born in Castleton. He was a soldier, although it is not known which regiment he originally served in (but it may have been the Scots Greys). It is said that he served all over Europe, although family tradition also says that he never served abroad. In 1805 he was Cornet with the Royal Wagon Train, becoming Lieutenant to the 9th Royal Veterinary Battalion in 1806. He was in the party for Lord Nelson’s funeral. He retired on full pay to settle back in Newcastle. In 1841 he was at about 5 Langholm Street and listed as ‘Luit. Army R. Vet. Bat. H.P.’ His wife was Elizabeth and their children included: Thomas, who served in Canada with the Royal Wagon Train; Mary (b.1804), who married John Griev of Branxholme Braes; and Isobel (1805–92), who married James Ingles. It is possible that he was the servant at Harden and Myredykes in Castleton Parish, listed among heads of households in 1835–41. Adam (1802–68) eldest son of shepherd William and Mary Elliot. He was born at Cauldronfoot in Castleton Parish. He was a shepherd at Potholm in 1841 and at Tweedhead in 1851 and 1861. He married Margaret Robson (from Ewes) and they had 6 sons and 7 daughters. It is said that all of his sons became shepherds, including the eldest, Adam, whose 4 sons were all shepherds in the Jed and Rule valleys. Their children included: Helen (1829–1915), who married Walter Kitchen; William (1831–1911), who married Anne Kyle and died at Gatehousecote; Peter (1833–1904), who emigrated to Canada, worked as a miner and is buried in Ross Bay Cemetery, Victoria; Adam (1836–1920), who emigrated to Victoria, Canada; Mary (b.1838), who had a daughter, Margaret; Margaret (b.1838), who lived at Shankend; Janet (1840–78), who married James Temple Robson; John (1842–1907), who died at Westshiel; Ninian (c.1844–98), a shepherd in Northumberland; Agnes (1846–90), who died in Oregon, U.S.A.; Walter (1849–1928); Isabella (b.1851); and Elizabeth (b.1852), who married George Rutherford. He died at Tweedhead. Adam (1806–1865) son of John and Margaret Hatlie, he was baptised in Castleton Parish. He moved to Liverpool, where he was a soap manufacturer. He married Agnes, daughter of William Glendinning and Mary Elliot. Their children were: Mary, John, William, Mary, Robert, Adam, James and Randle. Adam (1855–1935) son of William, he was a shepherd like his father. He worked at Colterscleuch and elsewhere. He married Eliza (1855–1941), daughter of James Scott and Janet Cavers. He is buried in Ettleton Cemetery. They had a daughter Janet (b.1879). Alexander of that Ilk and Parton (d.1616) son of John. In 1562 he inherited the lands in Liddesdale that had belonged to his grandfather Ninian, according to a document from James, Earl of Bothwell. He was a witness to a bond of caution in 1585. He married Alison, daughter of Alexander Gordon of Troquhane and secondly Nicola, daughter of Robert Herries of Mabie. His children included: John, who pre-deceased him; Robert, who succeeded; Simon, who died young; and William, who predeceased his father and had descendants who went to Ireland. Andrew (b.1800) probably son of Walter and Elizabeth Park, he was born at Glendinning, Westerkirk. He became shepherd at Craikhope where he is recorded in 1851. In 1837 he married Jean, daughter of Andrew Anderson, who was for 50 years shepherd at Glendinning. Their children were: Andrew, who emigrated to New Zealand, where he called his farm ‘Glendearg’; Thomas, who was in the county police; and William, shepherd at Kiddem Hill, Eskdalemuir, whose son Andrew was shepherd at Rueltownhead. Andrew (b.c.1815) son of William, who lived at Ashkirk Mill and was a mason. In 1834 he won the foot race at the Common Riding Games. Andrew (19th/20th C.) son of William, who was shepherd at Kiddem Hill, Eskdalemuir, and grandson of Andrew, who was shepherd at Craikhope. He became shepherd at Rueltownhead, and had 3 brothers who were also shepherds. Archibald of Fiddleton (16th/17th C.) recorded in the Circuit Court of 1622 when he was cautioner for his brother Andrew. He also appeared, along with John Graham of ‘Thicksyd’, as caution for ‘Lancie Glendinning, now in Dryf’ (formerly tenant in Logan), as well as ‘Hob and Andro Glendonnings in Logane’ (also in Riddings and Hudhouse, respectively). Archibald (17th C.) resident at ‘Julian’ in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. He was surely related to John, who was also listed there. Archibald (17th/18th C.) tenant in Hawick Shiel. He married Margaret Glendinning and their children included: George (b.1689), born in Ashkirk Parish; and John (b.1702), born in Hawick Parish. Archibald (19th C.) joiner in Newcastle. He was listed among heads of households in 1838–41. Bartholomew (d.c.1503) eldest son of John of Glendonwyn and Parton. He was witness to Alexander Home becoming Bailie of the Lordship of Eskdale in 1495. He witnessed a charter for Glendinning

Gordon of Lochinvar in 1501. He and his brother Simon were killed by John Lindsay of Wauchope when he was discharging his duties as Sheriff by attempting to arrange for one third of the lands of Wauchope to go to the widow of Lindsay’s father. Lindsay was executed for this crime in 1505. He probably died about the same time as his father, and his brother Ninian succeeded. He married Margaret, daughter of Sir John Gordon of Lochinvar. David (1860–1942) son of William, he was a shepherd like his father. He worked at Hawthornside and elsewhere. In 1883 he married Margaret Martin (1863–1934) from Canonbie; she died at Lurgiescleuch. Their children were: Matthew Martin (1883–1967), who also worked as a shepherd and married Agnes Skilling; Annie (1885–1964), who married John Easton; William (b.1886), who died in infancy; Elizabeth Agnes (1888–1983); William (again, 1891–1975), who married Mary Jane Easton; Robert (1893–1934); Adam (1896–1976); Margaret Jane (b.1899); and David Martin (b.1903). Ellen (17th/18th C.) said to be an elderly member of the Newcastleton Burgher congregation in about the 1810s. She was the last hold-out for the practice of reading each line before singing psalms in church. When the change arrived, she claimed she had gotten the better of the Session by not joining in, but reading and singing the lines later at home. George (18th/19th C.) carrier at Hummelslew. He is recorded in a list of men volunteering in 1803 to fight against the French. He could be the George who was living at Lower Calloch in 1841, aged about 65, and listed as ‘Independent’. Henry (18th C.) hired at Braedlie (on Hermitage) in 1750, probably as an assistant shepherd. James (17th C.) recorded as being ‘in Burgh, in Cavers parish’ in 1684 when he was listed as a fugitive among many others for refusing to conform to Episcopalianism. He was presumably tenant at Brugh and probably related to shepherd John, who was recorded at Brugh in 1694. He may be the ‘John in Brough’ whose will is recorded in 1684 (although the first name is incorrect, the match of the dates is probably not a coincidence). James (17th C.) recorded as being ‘in South-field’ in 1684 on a long list of men declared as rebels for refusing to take ‘the Test’. James (17th C.) tenant in Stobicote on the 1684 list of men declared rebels for being Covenanters. He was listed separately from James in Southfield and James in Brugh. James (17th C.) shepherd at Whitecaugh in Wilton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. He could be the James who witnessed a baptism for Robert Stewart in Wilton in 1694. James (b.c.1704) farm worker, born at Whitchesters, probably son of John. He lived there for 41 years and later moved to Hawick. In 1761 he was one of 3 men chosen to perambulate the boundary between Fenwick and Alton Croft in order to regularise it. He could be the James who married Bessie Rule in Hawick in 1721, both of them being described as ‘in whitchesters’; their children (baptised in Hawick Parish) included Janet (b.1724) and James (b.1727). James (18th C.) resident at Outsidesheil in 1775 when his daughter Margaret was baptised in Roberton Parish. James (18th C.) wright in Hawick Parish. His wife was Helen Laidlaw and their children included: Betty (b.1757); Margaret (b.1761); and Adam (b.1766). The witnesses in 1766 were Charles Rutherford and John Richardson. He could be the James who witnessed a baptism for carrier John Richardson in 1764. He could be the son of James and Bessie Rule baptised in Hawick in 1727. James (1749/50–1823) married Margaret Brydon, who died in 1839, aged 83. She may have been daughter of William Brydon, born in Ettrick in 1756. His wife died at Gair (probably the one on Timacra Water) and he died at Glendinning. They are buried at Borthwick Waas. He could be the James, son of Thomas, baptised in Roberton in 1748. James (18th/19th C.) farmer at Headshaw Mill, recorded as owner of 2 horses on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. James (b.1775/6) from Nichol Forest in Cumberland, he was a tailor in Newcastleton. He was recorded in Pigot’s 1837 directory and Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1841 and 1851 he was at about 10 South Hermitage Street, He married Esther Kyle and they had children William (also a tailor), Margaret and Esther. James (19th/20th C.) son of William, who was shepherd at Kiddem Hill, Eskdalemuir. His grandfather Andrew had been shepherd at Craikhope, where he also worked as shepherd. James (19th/20th C.) law clerk in Hawick who was Cornet in 1909 and Secretary of the Common Riding Committee in 1925. He served for many years as Master of Ceremonies for the Common Riding. He was also Callants’ Club President in 1934 and Club Treasurer for 20 years. John of Glendownwyn and Parton (d.1503) son of Sir Simon. He possessed large amounts of land, including Glendinning, Clifton, Scransburgh, Brecklow, Wauchope, Westerkirk and Langholm. He is probably the Laird of Glendinning who was fined in 1494/5 for non-appearance at the Justice-in Jedburgh. In 1495 he was superior of Scraesburgh when the west half of the town there was inherited by George Rutherford. He married Agnes, daughter of Robert, Lord Maxwell of Caerlaveroch. He secondly married Elizabeth, daughter of William, Lord Sinclair. His children included: Bartholomew, the eldest, who was killed by John Lindsay of Wauchope; Ninian, who succeeded; Simon, also killed by Lindsay; Adam, father of John of Bishopton; and Janet, who married Gilbert Grierson, 2nd of Lag. He may be the Laird of ‘Glendunwin’ for whose murder Patrick ‘Dunwedy’ in Eskdale was hanged in 1508/9. John (15th/16th C.) described as Coroner of Eskdale in 1507/8 when he gave licence for Robert Erskine to be infefted in the lands of Daigleish. He could be the same man as John of that Ilk if the year of his death is incorrect. John of Glendonwyyn and Parton (c.1510–c.60) son of Ninian, from whom he inherited lands in Dumfriesshire, Kirkcudbright and elsewhere. He may be the ‘Domino de Glendywyn’ who heritably held the lands of Riddelwyn and Parthen (b.1891); William (b.1895); Mary (b.1897); Helen (b.1891); William (b.1895); Mary (b.1897);
Margaret (b.1901); John (b.1902); and Walter (b.1905). Margaret (15th C.) bequeathed a cow in the last will of Sir David Scott of Branxholme in 1491/2. She is recorded as ‘Margarete Glendonwyn’ and Adam and Mark are also listed. Margaret (17th C.) recorded in 1643 as liferenter of Stousle and another farm (probably Boonraw) in Hassendean Parish, valued at £291. She was probably the ‘Mary’ of Dod and Whittlaw (possibly daughter of George of Dod) who married George of Synton and Boonraw. She was probably also the ‘Liferenter of Boonraw’ recorded on the Land Tax Rolls of 1663. It is unclear when she died, but her son George Scott of Boonraw was owner of the same lands in 1678. Margaret (17th C.) resident at Outs inside, recorded among the poor of Wilton Parish in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Mark (15th C.) received a cow and 2 bolls of victuals in the will of Sir David Scott of Branxholme in 1491/2. He is listed as ‘Marco de Glendonwyn’ and Adam and Margaret are also named. Matthew (d.1408) 2nd son of Adam de Glendonwyn of Glendonwyn. His mother was grand-niece of Sir William Douglas, ‘the Flower of Chivalry’ and his brother Sir Simon was killed at Otterburn. He held the benefice of Cavers Parish from 1376, which was void by the death of John Ganon. At this time he was said to also hold a Canonry of Glasgow, with the expectation of a Prebend. He was appointed Bishop of Glasgow by Pope Clement VII in 1387, succeeding Walter Wardlaw, and serving until his death. He also served as ambassador to England. In 1401 he introduced a new tax in the Diocese of Glasgow. He died at his manor of Lochwood near Glasgow. Note that there was dispute in the church at the time, with an alternative Bishop (John de Framysden) appointed by Pope Boniface IX in 1391, but never recognised in Scotland. Matthew (14th/15th C.) recorded as ‘Matheo de Glendonwine’ when he witnessed the 1420 charter for the half barony of Branxholme, passing from the Inglis’s to the Scotts. Ninian of Glendonwyn and Parton (d.1541) son of John of Parton. He succeeded after his brothers Bartholomew and Simon were murdered by John Lindsay of Wauchope. In 1503 he granted a precept of sasine for George Gladstain in the lands of Gladstanes in Roxburghshire. He was confirmed in the Barony of Scraesburgh in 1510, and other lands in Dumfriesshire and Roxburghshire in the following years. In 1528 he resigned Clifton and Scraesburgh to the King, in favour of himself and his wife. In 1530 he was superior of Scraesburgh, when John Rutherford resigned his lands into his hands, and then he regranted them. He married Janet, daughter of Sir John Dunbar of Mochrum, and possibly also Katherine, daughter of John Maxwell, Lord of Caerlawrock. He was succeeded by his son John. Ninian (1806–84) son of William and Mary Elliot, he was born at Shaws in Castleton Parish. He was a shepherd at Plashedts in Northumbeland. In 1836–38 he was listed as shepherd at Willowbog, England, among heads of households in Castleton Parish. In 1840 and 1841 he was at Kidd’s Linn. In 1827 he married Margaret Little (1797–1841) in Westerkrk and their children were Helen (b.1827), William (b.1828), Mary (b.1830), John (b.1831), Janet (b.1833), Mina (b.1835), John (again, b.1837) and Agnes (b.1840). He secondly married Mina Turnbull (1810–93) and their children were Isabella (b.1847), Agnes (b.1847), Margaret (b.1848), Joan (b.1850), Adam (b.1853) and Robert (b.1856). He died in Bellingham. Ninian (1855–1941) son of shepherd William, he was born in Teviothead Parish. He worked as a shepherd in Northumberland. In 1879 he married Hannah Robson, daughter of Richard Brown and their children were Richard Brown, William and Annie Brown. Peter (1863–1956) son of William and Ann Kyle. He was a shepherd, like his father and brothers. He was at Wormscleuch in 1881. Richard (15th/16th C.) Sheriff in Edinburgh who confirmed in 1505/6 the summons served to George, Master of Angus for payment to Sir William Douglas of Cavers for breaking their marriage agreement. He is recorded as ‘Richard Glendunwyne’. It is unclear how he was related to the other Glendinnings. Robert of that Ilk and Parton (b.1585) son of Alexander. He became heir in 1606 after his older half-brother died. He had extensive lands in Ewesdale and Eskdale. He married Margaret, daughter of William Maxwell, Lord of Terregles and was succeeded by his son John. Robert ‘Hob’ (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1622 as tenant in ‘Logane’ and also Hudshouse. Archibald in Fiddleton and John Graham in Thickside acted as cautioners for him, Lancie in Dryff and Andrew in Riddings. Robert (19th C.) recorded as ‘residenter’ in Newcastleton in 1835, on a list of male heads of families. Scott (b.1806/7) born in Wilton Parish, he was farmer at Boghall. He was listed among heads of households as a mason at Boghall in 1835 and then had his entry deleted in 1840, but was added as ‘Glendinning Scott’ in 1840 and 1841. His mother was Isabella Murray and his wife was Elizabeth.
In 1851 he was recorded as farmer of 55 acres, employing 2 men. He was still recorded at Boghall in 1868. Sir Simon (d.1388) son of Sir Adam of Glendowyn. He was younger brother of the next Sir Adam, and older brother of Matthew, who became Bishop of Glasgow. In 1368 he witnessed a charter at Cavers for lands being resigned by Thomas Balliol. He died at the Battle of Otterburn, fighting alongside his superior, the Earl of Douglas. Sir Simon (c.1378–1437) of that Ilk, son of Sir Adam and nephew of Matthew, bishop of Glasgow. He succeeded after his elder brother John was killed at Homildon Hill. He held considerable lands, including those of Wauchope and parts of Ewesdale. He also held the hereditary office of Bailie of the Regality of Eskdale. He was said to be a strong ally of the house of Douglas, helping to keep peace on the Border in the Earl’s lands. He travelled to England several times in the early 1400s, and was a hostage for the Earl of Douglas in about 1408. In 1406 he had a charter of the lands of Wythyn, Glencross and others in Roxburghshire. In 1407 he was witness to the charter for the Barony of Hawick to William Douglas of Drumlanrig. He was one of the witnesses to the charter of 1435 transferring lands within the Barony of Hawick from John Inglis to his son Thomas. He married Mary, daughter of Archibald, 4th Earl of Douglas and Margaret Stewart, daughter of King Robert III. He was succeeded by his son Sir Simon. Other children included: John, who settled in England; Bartholomew, who was Chaplain at Westerkirk, but deprived for non-residence; Janet, who married Gilbert Grierson, 1st of Lag; and Hawise. Sir Simon of that Ilk (15th C.) son of Sir Simon and Mary Douglas. He was said to be greatly esteemed by James II. He was hereditary Bailie of Dumfriesshire. In 1407 he was recorded at Outersideshiel on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Thomas (17th C.) recorded as witness to a Rulewater sasine in 1631.

In 1455 he was mentioned in the Exchequer Rolls for Roxburghshire. In 1456 he witnessed a charter for Robert, Lord Maxwell and in 1458/9 had a charter for the Barony of Parton in Kirkcudbrightshire. He also served as Bailie of Eskdale in the late 1450s. In 1459 he was one of the witnesses to the regranting of the Barony of Hawick to William Douglas of Drumlanrig, made in Perth. By 1464 he was designated ‘of Parton’ when he was again a guarantor of a treaty with England. In 1465, as Lord of the Barony of Scraesburgh, he granted the west half of Scraesburgh and all of Hunthill to Robert Rutherford of Chatto and his wife Margaret. He married Agnes Hepburn and secondly Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Alexander Lindsay, Earl of Crawford. He may also have married Marjory Johnstone. His children included: Simon, who pre-deceased him; John, who succeeded; Alexander, probably progenitor of the Drumrask branch; Archibald; Matthew, who held the lands of Whitslade, Glenkirk, etc.; and Margaret, who married Robert Rutherford of Chatto. Simon (15th C.) listed among the Roxburghshire men given remission in 1488/9 for their support of the deceased James III. Most of the men appear to have been associated with Douglas of Cavers. It is unclear how he was related to the other Glendinnings. He may be the same Simon who produced a remission (along with William Grahamslaw) at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1493. Thomas (14th) recorded as witness to an instrument for the Hospital at Polmadie in about 1391. He was a ‘scutifero’ for Glasgow Diocese. Thomas (15th/16th C.) recorded as ‘Thomas Glendynnyn’ when he witnessed a letter of acquittance for George Scott of Whames in 1510/1. Thomas (17th C.) recorded as ‘Thomas Glendynnyng in Harrot’ (i.e. Harwood) when he witnessed a Rulewater sasine in 1631. Thomas (18th/19th C.) farmer at Outersideshiel, recorded there when his daughter Jean was baptised. Other children who may have been his include James (b.1748), Andrew (b.1750), Margaret (b.1752), Janet (b.1754), Thomas (b.1756), Walter (b.1759), Isobel (b.1761), Agnes (b.1766) and Christian (b.1768). Perhaps the same Thomas was recorded at Outersideshiel on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Thomas (1751/2–1831) shepherd at Blackcleugh. He is buried at Teviothead. In 1786 he married Mary Weir (d.1848). Their children included: Mary (b.1787); Robert (b.1789), who died aged 19; William (b.1795); Christian (1798–1881), who married Jessie Purdom; and Betty (b.1800). Thomas (b.1795) son of Adam, who Glendivan

Glendivan came from near Newcastle. His father served in the Royal Wagon Train, and obtained for him a cornetcy in the same corps when he was 18. He fought at the Battle of Waterloo. He became Lieutenant, and was transferred to the American (or 60th) Regiment, serving in Canada. Thomas (b.1845) son of Andrew and Jane Anderson. His father was shepherd at Craikhope, where he was born. He became a member of the county police force. Thomas (b.1853) son of shepherd William, he was born at Redmoss in Castleton Parish. He worked as a shepherd at various farms in Northumberland. In 1877 in Ewes he married Nicholas (1858–1930), daughter of William Murray and Agnes Bell. Their children were Ellen, William, Thomas and John James. Walter (17th C.) resident of Coliforthill on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. William was listed right after him and so surely related. Walter (18th/19th C.) farmer at Hummelknowes Mill, listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Walter (b.c.1785) roadman and labourer living at Lees in Wilton Parish. He was listed among heads of households in 1835–1841. His wife was Elizabeth. Walter (1849–1928) son of Adam, he was born at Tweedenhead in Castleton Parish. He was a shepherd like his father and several brothers. He lived in Northumberland, Langholm, Southdean, etc. In 1885 he married Jane (b.1859), daughter of James Turnbull and Margaret Ewart. He died at Hobkirk Manse Cottage. Their children were: Margaret (b.1885); Adam (1887–1917), who served with the K.O.S.B. and died in Israel; and James (b.1889), who died in infancy. William (14/15th C.) Subdean of Glasgow in 1413/4. He was probably related to the noble Glendinnings. William (14/15th C.) witness to a document for the Diocese of Glasgow in about 1465. He must have been associated with the Diocese, and was probably the William, Rector of Crawfordjohn, who witnessed other records about the same time. William (16th/17th C.) listed among men declared as fugitives for not appearing at a court in Hawick in 1605. He was recorded being called Lord in the Cruikis’ among men of Liddesdale and neighbouring areas. William (17th C.) resident of Coliforthill on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls, probably related to Walter who was also listed there. William (17th C.) resident at Blackhope in Castleton Parish, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. William (1760–1840) son of Adam and Agnes Crozier and brother of Lieut. Adam. He was shepherd at Thorlleshope and lived at Cauldronfoot. He then moved to Cooms in Tarras Water and died at Tweedenhead. He was at Cooms in 1821 when he subscribed to William Scott’s ‘ Beauties of the Border’. He married Mary, daughter of Ninian Elliot and Janet Douglas. Their children include: Janet (1801–94), who married John Armstrong and died at Hermitage Cottage; Adam (1802–68), who married Margaret Robson and died at Tweedenhead; Agnes (1804–88), who married Adam Glendinning and died in Liverpool; Ninian (1806–84), who married Mina Turnbull; and William (1810–37), who married Judith Armstrong. William (b.c.1780) road contractor living at Ashkirk Mill in 1841. His wife was Elspeth and their children included John and Andrew, who were both masons. William (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Tofttholm. He was recorded as a head of household for the first (and only) time in 1836. William (b.1809/10) son of William, he was a tailor in Newcastle. He was recorded in 1841 and 1851 at about 10 South Hermitage Street. He was absent from the 1861 census. William (1830–1911) eldest son of Adam and Margaret Robson, he was born at Boghall in Liddesdale. He worked as a shepherd, like his father and many other family members before him. He married Anne (1830–1918), daughter of David Kyle, farmer at Broadlee in the Borthwick. Their children, born at Boghall, Wormscleuch and elsewhere in the Parish were: Adam (1855–1935), shepherd at Cotterscleuch; David (b.1857), who died in infancy; David (1860–1942), shepherd at Hawthornside; William (b.1862), shepherd at Hundalee in Jedwater; Peter (1864–1956), shepherd at Wormscleuch and Gatehousecoat; and Margaret (1867–1939). He died at Gatehousecote and his wife at Cleughhead, Southdean, and they are buried in Hobkirk Kirkyard. William (b.1862) son of William and Ann Kyle. Like many of his family members before him, he worked as a a shepherd. He lived in Castleton, Morebattle and Southdean Parishes. In 1897 he married Agnes (b.1871), daughter of William Hardie. Their children were: Hardie Bain (1900–54); William (b.1902); Margaret (b.1905.6); and Ann Kyle (1909–32), who married Robert Cromarty (formerly ‘Glendonwyn’ and variants, such as ‘Glendinen’, ‘Glendining’, ‘Glendinnyn’, ‘Glendinwin’, ‘Glendinwyn’, ‘Glendonewyn’, ‘Glendonowyn’, ‘Glendonyn’, ‘Glendowne’, ‘Glendunowyn’, ‘Glendunyn’, ‘Glenduning’, ‘Glendunwin’, ‘Glendunwyn’, ‘Glendynwyn’ and ‘Glendynwyn’).

Glendivan (glen-di-vin) n. former lands in Evesdale, near where the Glendivan Burn meets the Ewes Water. Along with Flask and Howgill it was described as a 10-merk land in 1550, when inherited by Robert, Lord Maxwell, by John, Lord Maxwell in 1604, by Robert, Lord Maxwell in 1619, and still held by John, Earl of Nithsdale in 1670 and William, Earl of Nithsdale in 1696. It is probably the ‘Glendorane’ (likely a transcription error) and ‘Glendovan’ listed among the Dumfrieshire possessions of the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1653, 1661 and 1663. It was surveyed along with other Scott of Buccleuch properties in 1718, when it consisted of 368 acres, bounded by Howgill, Sorbie, Kirkton and lands of the Laird of Arkleton. The map shows farmhouses on both sides of the burn, some parts of the farm on the other side of the Ewes Water and a small area of the farm owned by the Laird of Arkleton. John Irving and Robert Armstrong were there in 1797. William Irvine was farmer there in 1841, his son John taking over later. There were also Eastons living there in 1841. A little further up the burn from the farmhouse are remains of 2 settlements (not to be confused with Glendonwyn in Meggatdale; also sometimes ‘Glendiven’; it is ‘Glendowane’ in 1550 and ‘Glendowane’ in about 1610; it is ‘Glendowin’ on Blaeti’s 1654 map, ‘Glendovein’ on Gordon’s c.1650 map, ‘Glendoven’ on the 1718 Buccleuch survey and confusingly ‘Glendonwyn’ on Crawford’s 1804 map).

Glendonwyn (glen-don-win) n. old form of Glendinning, the family name coming from lands in the upper Meggat valley. There was formerly a tower there, with remains still visible in the mid-19th century, on the south side of the Poldovich Burn, a few hundred metres south of the modern farmhouse. There was once an antimony mine here. There are several nearby earthworks and enclosures. and practiced for a while in Carlisle, in partnership with a Mr. Mawson. He later emigrated to New Zealand, where he became a successful sheep farmer. He married Catherine Anne (‘Cathy’) Pringle, daughter of Walter. Their children were James Douglas, Mary Catherine and Margaret. James (1836–1914) partner in Wilson & Glenny’s, who gave the Town its Public Baths in 1912. He was born in Mill of Lethenty, Aberdeenshire, only son of John and Katherine Wilson. Like his parents he was a Quaker. He was the last private owner of the corn mill and farm of Lethenty in Aberdeenshire. In 1865 he moved to Blackburn in Lancashire, where he went into business as a cotton spinner, with his cousin, John William Cruickshank. Health problems forced him to sell his business and move abroad for the winter of 1873. He returned to England, to start a cement business in Chester. He was consequently briefly in partnership with London concrete pioneer Charles Drake (who was responsible for the Congregational Manse), although the business, based at Thorlieshope, folded in 1875. But also in 1875 he was invited to become a partner in a tweed business with his uncle George Wilson and 2 cousins, Charles John and George Murray Wilson; thus was born Wilson & Glenny. In 1891 it became a limited company under the name Wilson & Glenny, Ltd. In 1867 he married Georgina Waterhouse (1844–1923). They had 4 children: John (1868–1919), who worked for the family firm; Charles James (b.1871), who was for a long time Director at Wilson & Glenny; Elizabeth (1875–90), who died while still at school; and George Crosfield (b.1878), who became a lawyer and moved to New Zealand. He had the house at Bucklands extended in the latter part of the 19th century and died there. James Esme (b.1905) son of Charles James. He was Cornet in 1927 and lived at Deanfield. His 1926 Delage car still exists. He also flew aeroplanes. John (1799–1844) from Kinnuck, Aberdeenshire, son of James and Elizabeth Wigham. The family can be traced back to John, who was born in 1641 at Mill of Colihill (also Aberdeenshire). In 1833 he married Katherine, daughter of William Wilson, Hawick manufacturer, and must have been a regular visitor to Hawick. Their children were: Elizabeth (1835–45); James (1836–1914), who became partner in Wilson & Glenny’s; and Mary Ann (1838–1917), who married John Charles Wilson. John (1868–1919) eldest son of James. After leaving school he entered the family firm of Wilson & Glenny. However, he retired from the business while still quite young. He married Helen Borthwick and their children were: Barbara (b.1899); Katherine (b.1903); Phyllis Mary (b.1905); and Evelyn Georgina Wilson. Mary Ann (1838–1917) sister of manufacturer James, and son of John and Katherine Wilson, she was born in Mill of Lethenty, Aberdeenshire. She married Charles John Wilson, partner of her brother. Her children included Hawick Provost George Heron Wilson. She died at Deanfield.

Glenpyet (glen-pI-i’) n. former name for lands in the Yarrow valley. They were Crown lands in the late 15th century, split into 3 steadings, the middle one being leased to Thomas Dickson of Orniston in 1479. In the 1480s they were leased by Robert Lauder, William Inglis and Thomas Dickson. The Middlestead of Glenpyet was referred to as ‘Wallacehil’ in 1486. They were still Crown lands in 1502 when half was held by David Inglis. They were feued by the Murrays in the early and late 16th century. In 1541 they were valued at £24. They belonged to the Scotts of Buccleuch from at least the 16th century. They are recorded as ‘Glenpoyt’ in the 1574 last testament of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme, when James Brewhouse was tenant. Sir Walter owed ‘males’ for these lands to his half-brother Gideon Murray. ‘Jedion Murray of Glenpint’ is among the 180 or so followers of Sir James Johnstone who had a ‘respite’ in 1594 for their role at Drye Sands the year before (it is ‘Glenpoyte’ in 1456, ‘Glenpoyt’ in 1468, ‘Glenpoite’ in 1479 and 1489, ‘Glenpot’ in 1541, ‘Glenpoit’ in 1575/6 and ‘Glenpoitt’ in 1594).

Glenrauchan (glen-raw-chin) n. former name for lands in Ewesdale. It is listed among the lands in Ewesdale held by Alexander, Lord Home in 1509/10. Archie Scott from there was declared a fugitive in 1606. It was listed among the lands in the Lordship confirmed to Alexander Earl of Home in about 1610. The lands were listed in 1663 among those owned by the Scotts of Buccleuch in the Lordship of Ewesdale. It may correspond to the modern Glenrief (it is ‘Glenrauchane’ in 1506 and 1509/10, ‘Glenrauchan’ in about 1610 and ‘Glenrichen’ in 1663; it is probably the ‘Glegachan’ marked near Eweslees on Blaue’s 1654 map).

Goldielands (göl-dee-lindz) n. farm with tower, set in a prominent position overlooking the confluence of the Borthwick with the Teviot. The lands were possessed by the Scotts of Buccleuch since Goldielands Cottage

1446, when they exchanged half of Branxholm and neighbouring lands with Inglis of Manor for some in Lanarkshire. William, son of William Scott of Goldielands was recorded in 1493 and George Scott in Goldielands in 1510. The ‘ditch of Goldielands’ formed part of the northern boundary of the Common in the 1537 charter. In late 1548 the ‘manis of the landis of Goldiland’ are among those that were raided and burned by a group of Kers, Englishmen and others, complained about in a summons by Sir Walter Scott of Branxholm; 200 ‘thrawes’ of barley, along with corn cattle and other goods were lost. The farm was surveyed in 1718, along with other properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch; at that time it consisted of 254 acres, bounded by Crumhaugh, Hawick Common, Alton Croft, Fenwick and the River Teviot, and with a small part on the north side of the Teviot. The Scotts of Goldielands were an offshoot of the Scotts of Branxholm, who were important in the Hawick area for several generations. The tower was probably built mostly in the 16th century, and is now a ruin on the farm. Probably its most famous resident was the first Laird, Walter Scott ‘the Laird’s Wat’, who took part in the Raid of the Redeswire and whose son Walter was probably at the rescue of Kinnmont Willie in 1596; his tombstone is preserved in the Museum, and was part of a family vault located below the steeple in the northern aisle of the present St. Mary’s Kirk (later used as the furnace chamber). Tradition says that the last Laird was hanged from his own gateway for stealing cattle; however, there is no evidence of this. Walter Scott of Goldielands lands in Hawick Parish were valued at £566 13s 4d in 1643. The family history in the 17th century is murky, but we are helped through the existence of a complaint made in 1672, preserved in the Melrose Regality records. The Scotts of Goldielands eventually failed to have a male heir, and their lands were inherited by the Scotts of Crumhaugh, except for the estate of Goldielands itself, which returned to the Scotts of Buccleuch. In 1627 the farm is described as a ‘neuer payit ferme’ (i.e. never having been rented to a tenant), estimated to pay ‘100 lbs. in stok, parsonage 3 bolls, vicarage 7 lbs. 10 sh.’ It has been a tenanted farm owned by the Duke of Buccleuch since the mid-1600s. William Lyne was a tenant there in 1642. There were Elliots living there in the 18th and 19th centuries. Andrew Riddell was recorded there in 1705. In 1706 the title Baron of Goldielands was created (among others) for Henry, son of Anne, Duchess of Buccleuch. A plantation to the west of the tower is probably quite old, and is shown clearly on the 1718 drawing. In 1788 the estate of Scott of Goldielands was recorded as having been valued at £400, and by then owned by the Duke of Buccleuch – ‘He pass’d the Peel of Goldiland, And cross’d old Borthwick’s roaring strand’[SWS], ‘Does the blaze rise on Goldielands? Walter of Branxholm grasps his brand, And calls upon his gallant band – ‘For Hawick ride’ ... ’[WiS], ‘But to the story that’s afloat, I’ll tell it while ’tis green: Near Goldielands, within the wood, A heidless man was seen’[TCh], ‘O, I maun gang doon by Gowdlands To’er, Where the Teviot wails i’ the wintry rain ... ’[FGS], ‘Ever more dear were the echoes are ringing Out through the green glades by Goldielands’ wall; Where the sheep bleat to the sound of your going, In the lush pastures by fair Branxholm hall’[WL], ‘And bursting ranks of doves rise heavenward From Goldielands’ high tow’ring stone’[IWS] (also spelled variously ‘Gaudilands’, ‘Goldiland’, ‘Gouldiland’, ‘Goudielands’, ‘Gowdilands’, ‘Gowdilands’, ‘Gowdilands’, etc.; the name first appears in the mid-15th century, being ‘Gouldilandis’ in 1435 and ‘Gouldylandis’ in 1446 and 1493; it is ‘Goldelandis’ in 1510, ‘Goldland’ in 1549, ‘Gordelandis’, ‘Gorlanidis’ and ‘Goldelandis’ in 1574, ‘Gouldilandis’ in 1574 and 1575, ‘Gowdelandis’ in 1577, ‘Goldelandis’ in 1574, 1580 and 1581, ‘Goldelandis’ in 1583/4, ‘Gaudelandis’ in 1586, ‘Goldielandis’ in 1593 and ‘Gaudylandis’ in 1594, and from 1596 tends to begin with the Scots ‘Gowd’ rather than ‘Gold’, e.g. ‘Gouldilandis’ in 1596, ‘Gouldielandis’ in 1610, ‘Gowdilands’ and ‘Goudlands’ in 1627, ‘Gowdilands’ in 1643, ‘Gowdilandis’ in 1646, ‘Goldelandis’ in 1648, ‘Gawdilandis’ in 1649, ‘Gauddilandis’ in 1650, ‘Gowdilaw’ in 1655, ‘Gowdilands’ in 1682, ‘Goudlands’ in 1690 and ‘Gouldilans’ in 1698; it is on Gordon’s c. 1650 map as ‘Gudielands’, Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Gaudylands’, de Wit’s c. 1680 map as ‘Gaudylands’ and Roy’s c.1750 map as ‘Gold Lands’; the origin might be either from yellow flowers once growing there, perhaps from the richness of the soil or from the Old English personal name ‘Golda’; there is no reason to believe the Victorian view that it was once the residence of the ‘Goldie’ family). Goldielands Cottage (gōl-dee-lindz-ko-ej) n. cottage on the farm of Goldielands. There were Armstrongs there in the latter part of the 19th century.
Goldielands Toor (gol-dee-lindz-toor) n. tower on the farm of Goldielands. It is a typical 16th century peel tower, built in a useful location as a watch-tower to protect Branxholme. The tower is approximately 10 × 7 m, with 5 stories, and formerly had a parapet walkway. In lay-out and construction, it is similar to Burnhead Tower, and was the model for Westburnflat Tower in Sir Walter Scott’s ‘Black Dwarf’. There is a view in Grose’s ‘Antiquities of Scotland’ from 1789, showing the tower in good condition and with an adjacent barnkin, although the details may not be factually accurate; it shows a walled enclosure with the large tower (along with a couple of small outbuildings) in the south-west corner, and another tower in the south-east corner. There is now no evidence of the wall, although a mound may indicate where the second tower stood. The towers may have once been called ‘Speed o fit’ and ‘Tranty fit’, who were also said to be 2 witches who lived there. The main tower is now a fairly well preserved ruin on the farm of the same name, attached to more modern farm buildings. Many original features survive, such as fireplaces, doorways, corbels and an aumbry. Tom Scott’s painting of the tower is in the Museum. It is a grade B listed building.

goldilocks (gol-dee-locks) n. the wood crow-foot, Ranunculus auricomus – ‘…appears its sister species the Galdilocks (R. Auricomus) with tender stem, elegant leaves, and large golden blossoms’ [JAHM] (‘goldilocks’ is probably a mis-print).

Golf Course Park (g/=olf-k/=ors-pawrk) n. name for the field lying adjacent to the golf course, just to the east of St. Leonards farm. It is part of Hawick Common.
goller (go-lur) n., arch. a deep, loud growl, a stifled howl, suppressed yell, v., arch. to emit a gurgling noise, to speak passionately and inarticulately, (of a dog) to growl violently.
gollerin (go-lur-in) n., arch. a gurgling sound, particularly that made by a strangled animal (noted by J. Jamieson).
gollimer (go-l-mur) n., arch. a guzzler, voracious eater (noted by J. Jamieson; cf. gull-maw).
gome (goon) n., arch. a man (obscure; noted by J. Jamieson).
gomeril (go-me-rul) n., arch. a stupid person, bumptious person, fool (also spelled ‘gomerel’; cf. gamphrel).
go’n (goon) interj., contr. go on, used to express disbelief or encouragement – ‘G’on! = go on!’ [ECS] (also written ‘g’on’).
gone see go’an
gonial (go-nee-ul, goa-yul) n., arch. a sheep that has died of disease, ‘braxy’ mutton – ‘I do not mean the best of you to want meal a week ot twa, you have plenty of gonyell and green kail …’ [WSB], a dolt, a loud, empty-headed person (also spelled ‘gonyle’, ‘gonyell’ and variants).

the Gonial Blast (thu-go-nee-ul-blawst) n. severe snowstorm in southern Scotland in early 1794, described by the Ettrick Shepherd (although there is some confusion over whether this is 1794 or 1795). Thousands of sheep were killed, particularly in Eskdale, but also in many other areas. Around 20 shepherds also perished, including William Scott at Priesthaughshiel and one at Sorbiertrees. There is also a detailed description by Rev. William Brown of Eskdalemuir, including the progression of the weather from 23rd January onwards, with the fatal day being the 25th; he lists shepherds who perished in neighbouring parishes, and tallies the dead sheep in Eskdalemuir to over 4,000 (the name derives from gonial; also spelled ‘Goniel’).
gonterniblicks (gon-tur-ni-bliks) interj., arch. an exclamation of gladness (noted by J. Jamieson, who also gives ‘gonternickles’).
gontrins (gon-trinz) interj., arch. exclamation of joyous admiration – ‘My gontrans, lass, ye soon will fin’ A wilfu’ man maun hae his way’ [HSR] (also ‘gontrans’: specifically used in Lilliesleaf).

Goodbrand (good-brawnd) n. Rev. Stephen (1921–97) graduated from Aberdeen University in 1949. He was minister at Southdean Kirk (linked with Hobkirk) 1966–72.

Goodfellow (good-fe-lo, -li) n. Adam (18th C.) married Janet Kersel in Wilton Parish in 1788. Adam (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf. His children included: Robert (b.1795) and Robert (again, b.1796). Alexander Scott (1807–51) son of Hugh and Elspeth Scott. He succeeded his father as tenant at Trow Mill and was later farmer at Headshaw. He was listed as miller at Trow Mills in Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1835 he married Isabella, daughter of Alexander Forrest. Their children were: Margaret (b.1836); Hugh (b.1838), who died in Argentina; Alexander Forrest (b.1840), Mill Master at Trow Mill; John (b.1842), who emigrated to Canada and then Washington State; William Forrest (b.1844), perhaps also died in Argentina; Elspeth Scott (b.1846), who married Thomas Laidlaw; Archibald; and Andrew, who died in infancy. Andrew (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. His children included: John (b.1719); George (b.1721); Janet (b.1723); Helen (b.1725); an unnamed son (b.1728); Bessie (b.1730); and an unnamed daughter and son (b.1733). Andrew (18th C.) lived at Milsington in 1764 when his son Andrew was baptised in Roberton Parish. Gideon (b.1766) and John (b.1769) were probably also his sons. Andrew (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. His daughter Jane was baptised in 1772. Andrew (18th/19th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He married Euphan Cavvers and their children included Janet (b.1793); and Andrew (b.1796). Andrew (18th/19th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He married Mary Hobkirk in 1799 and their children included: Margaret (b.1800); William (b.1802); and John (b.1804). Andrew (18th/19th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He married Elizabeth Armstrong and their children included James (b.1822). Andrew (c.1794–1852) probably son of Robert and Helen Lies. In 1818 he married Isobel Young. Their children born in Lilliesleaf include Robert (b.1819), William (b.1821) and Archibald (b.1823). He emigrated to Ontario, Canada. Andrew (1807–85) son of Thomas and Isabella Renwick. He started his working life making sheep drains for Mr. Pringle at Hyndlee. He then moved to the Bairnkine, farmed Swinnie Bar briefly, then worked under James Weaver, forester to the Marquis of Lothian. In 1841 he was recorded as a wood forester, living at Stewartfield Lodge. He became forester at Hartrigge in 1846, living at the Wildcatgate. In 1846 he married Jane Mitchell, from Lanton and she died in 1892. Their children included: Jean; John; Jane and Andrew, who became forester at Abbotsrule. He was known for his collection of curiously shaped stones (which after his death were largely bought by Mr. Scott of Queen Mary’s House, Jedburgh). Andrew (b.1849) son of Andrew and Jane Mitchell. He was forester on the Abbotsrule estate from 1878. He married Janet Smail from Morebattle in 1873. Archibald (17th C.) tenant in ‘Tuilshope’ (presumably Twislehope) in Castleton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. Archibald (17th/18th C.) from Cumberland, he was probably son of Hector, the family home being at Redsyke farm in Bewcastle Parish. He was a shepherd at Skelfhill. He may have married Mary Scott, daughter of the farmer at Falnash. His son was William, farmer at Adderstonlee. He may have returned to the Bewcastle area as an old man to live with his eldest son Hector, whose family lived there for several more generations. He also had a daughter (probably Jean) who married a Scott and had sons William (mason at Falnash Mill) and Robert (shepherd at Merrylaw). Archibald (b.1727) born in Hawick, son of William and Helen (or Isobel) Scott. He married Elizabeth ‘Betty’ Irvine. Their children included: baker Hugh; and William (b.1752), baptised in Cavers. He may be the Archibald who, along with John, witnessed a baptism for Walter Douglas and Christian Goodfellow in 1762. George (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Elizabeth Dryden in 1759 and their children included: James (b.1760); Adam (b.1764); George (b.1766); Alison (b.1769); Robert (b.1772); William (b.1774); and Alexander (b.1779). George (19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf and Ashkirk Parishes. He married Christian Stoddart and their children included: Agnes (b.1800); Ann (b.1802); James (b.1812); and Robert (b.1816). The first 2 children were baptised in Lilliesleaf and the later 2 in Ashkirk. George (19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf. He married Betty Marton and their children included: Catherine (b.1832); Margaret (b.1834); and George (b.1836). Rev. George (19th C.) from Hawick, he became minister of Newarthill Church, in the Anti-burgher Presbytery of Hamilton, in 1891. George Lamont (1951– ) local songwriter and musician, great-grandson of John Cumming. Born in Hawick and brought up at the Prefabs, he works as a gas engineer. He is the front man for the ‘G.L.G. band’, and was previously in the bands ‘Nemesis’ and ‘Bogard’. An acoustic guitar player, he is also a member of the Tennessee Songwriter’s Association. He wrote the songs ‘Hawick Stands Alone’, and ‘We are the Heart of Hawick’. Gideon (18th/19th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He married Betty Elliot and their children included: Andrew (b.1792); Jane (b.1795), who married John Elliot; James (b.1798); and Gideon (b.1801). Hugh (1767–1847) prominent baker in Hawick. He was son of Archibald and Elizabeth Irvine. His baker’s shop was at the bottom corner of the Howegate (No. 1, on the Silver Street corner). He also milled flour for a while at Trow Mill and farmed at Greensidehall and Broomiebrae. He was said to be known for his intellect and conversation, and was a keen attender of Wilton Kirk. He remarked about the new minister (Rev. Stevenson) ‘Oh, he has plenty o’ guid rough stuff in him, and when he comes to a difficulty he dashes in a trowelfu’ o’ lime, and goes on again’. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. In Ashkirk Parish in 1793 he married Elizabeth (or Elspeth or Euphemia or ‘Epie’), daughter of John Scott. Their children were: John, Cornet, Bailie and grocer; William, baker; Alexander, miller at Trow Mill; and Betty and Hugh (d.1805), who died in infancy. Hugh (b.1838/9) born in Ashkirk Parish, eldest son of Alexander. He was farmer at Trow Mill. He is listed there in 1861 (at the age of 22) as mill master, farmer of 50 acres and employer of 7 people. He was living with his brothers Alexander, William and Archibald and his sister Elspeth. He was there later in the 1860s, but must have emigrated, since he died in Argentina, and his brother Alexander took over at Trow Mill. Isobel (17th C.) resident of Orchard on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. James (17th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He married Margaret Wright and their children included: Margaret (b.1680). James (17th C.) resident of ‘Dodburne in Kirkton Parioch’ according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. James (17th C.) resident at Wester Heap according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. James (17th/18th C.) recorded at Efflidge in 1710. He was surely related to the earlier James from Dodburn. His children baptised in Kirkton Parish included Janet (b.1708) and James (b.1710). James (18th C.) servant in Goldilands when he married Janet Hogg in Wilton in 1728, the proclamations also being made in Hawick Parish. Their son George was born in Hawick in 1731. James (18th C.) farmer at Bedrule according to the 1785–94 Horse Tax Rolls. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf. He married Christian Hobart and their children included Water (b.1805) and Jess (a son, b.1808). Bailie James (18th/19th C.) son of Robert and brother of Robert and John. He was a joiner in Hawick. He was a Bailie in the 1810s and served as Senior Bailie in 1821; thereafter he was always known as ‘Bailie Goodfellow’. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He was chairman of the meeting when Lord Brougham visited Hawick in 1833. His niece Agnes (daughter of Robert) married Walter Haddon. He married Magdalene (or Margaret) Scott. Their children included: Margaret (1792–1826), who married George Buckham; and Agnes (b.1796), who married Thomas Young, but died aged 20. James (18th/19th C.) blacksmith at the Sandbed, recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. James (18th/19th C.) wright on the Back Row, listed on Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. His property is marked on Wood’s 1824 map in about the middle of the right side of Drumlanrig Square. He could be the same man as the Bailie. James (19th C.) living at Muirhouselaw in 1841 and in Lilliesleaf in 1851 and 1861. In 1861 he was described as ‘Agricultural Labourer and Grocer’. He married Jessie, daughter of John Fairgreeve, carrier from Selkirk. Their children (baptised in Lilliesleaf Parish) included: George (b.1839); Elizabeth (b.1842); John (b.1845); Christina (b.1849); Helen (b.1851); Janet (b.c.1855); and James (b.c.1859). James (b.1834/5) born in Edinburgh, he was a ‘Woollen Cloth Finisher’ on Dickson Street in 1861. His wife was Isabella from Stow and their children included Elizabeth, Mary, Isabella and George. Janet (19th C.) listed as a milliner or dressmaker at Wilton Place in Slater’s 1852 directory. John (17th C.) shepherd at Milsington according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He could be the John whose daughter Jean was baptised in Robertson Parish in 1680. John (17th C.) resident of Briery Yards according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. John (17th/18th C.) tenant at Southfield. He was fined in 1677 for ‘abusing the marches of Hawicke marching betuixt John Hardie and him’. He rented half the farm of Over Southfield from the Duchess of Buccleuch in at least the period 1690–96. He was also tenant farmer at Over Southfield, according to the the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He and his son William were joint tenants of Southfield around 1710 (as attested in evidence given regarding the state of Hawick’s Common in 1767). He was listed as being at ‘Southside’ in 1713 when he witnessed a birth at Braxholmtown. He married Margaret Cook in 1713; he was said to have taken a wife when he was 90 years old, and this may have been that time. He was deceased by 1721 when his widow married tailor William Oliver; they were both at ‘Over Southfield’. John (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. His children included: Thomas (b.1754); and Jean (b.1756). John (18th C.) married Christian Cavers in Wilton Parish in 1730. He may be the John whose daughter Christian was baptised in Kirkton in 1735. He may also be the John who along with Archibald, witnessed a baptism for Walter Douglas and Christian Goodfellow in 1762. John (b.1756) wright in Hawick, probably son of Robert and Margaret Scott. In 1782 he married Janet Deans, daughter of flesher George Deans. Their children included: Agnes (1784–1872), who married Walter Haddon, father of Andrew Haddon of Honeyburn; and Robert (b.1786). John (18th/19th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He married Jane Jardine and their children included: Helen (b.1809); and Andrew (b.1811). Bailie John (1798–1869) son of baker Hugh and Elspeth Scott. He was Cornet in 1822 and was also a Magistrate in Hawick. He had a grocer’s and candlemaker’s business at 1 Buccleuch Street. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He is probably the merchant in Hawick listed among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1840. He is listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory at the Sandbed, in 1837 on Buccleuch Street and in Slater’s 1852 directory (as a ‘tallow chandler’) on Teviot Square. He is probably the Mr. Goodfellow whose property is marked there on Wood’s 1824 map. He opened the first public baths and wash-house in Hawick, by the river-side, where Orrock Church was later built. In 1837 he was involved in a dispute with the ‘Trades and Operatives’ over expenses for the celebration (i.e. the drinks bill) and parade for the proclamation of the new Queen. He was listed among a group of 10 men who had been denied their claim to be on the electoral roll in Selkirkshire on the basis of joint life-rent there.

In Slater’s 1852 directory he is listed as proprietor of the Public Baths at Teviot Square and also listed there as insurance agent for Scottish Provident. He ran the grocer’s until 1857, when it had ceased to be successful and he emigrated to New Zealand. He married Margaret, daughter of John Mercer and Euphemia Scott, and she died in 1838. Their children were: Euphemia (b.1828), who emigrated to New Zealand with her father; Archibald (b.1830), who died young; Margaret (b.1832), who married Walter Hume and later emigrated to New Zealand; Jane (b.1835), who died young; and John (b.1838), who also emigrated with his father. A portrait of him exists.

John (b.1808/9) born in Jedburgh, in 1860 he was living at Woodhouse in Southeian Parish. His wife was Beatrix from Hawick. Their children included: Thomas, Oliver, James, Peter, Robert and William. John (19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf. He married Ann Swanstone and their children included Jean (b.1844). John (1825–1900) son of Robert and Elizabeth Kedzie. He emigrated to Canada, where he was a pioneer in Innisfil Township, Ontario. He married Margaret Cross and secondly Esther McCullough. John Cumming (1834–1917) born in Jedburgh, son of William and Helen Cumming. The family spent some time in Glasgow but moved to Hawick when he was young. He became a publisher at 63 High Street. He was an early member and regular contributor to the Archaeological Society, and a keen temperance supporter. He gave a speech at the 1891 Colour Bussing, including some Common Riding reminiscences. He wrote a memoir of his early life about 1901, which was published in the 1997 Transactions. He also wrote historical articles for the Border Magazine. He married Martha Hain in 1865 and Andrew Hain was their son. He wrote ‘Border Biography’ (1890, based on articles from the ‘Hawick News’), ‘Occasional Poems and Verses’ (1893) and ‘Hawick’s Annual Festival and Other Verses’ (1911), as well as producing the ‘Illustrated Guide to Hawick and Vicinity’ (1898) and the updated edition ‘Goodfellow’s Guide to Hawick’ (1914). He also wrote several short booklets on local history, specifically ‘Hawick myths: No. 1 Gawyn Douglas’ (1983), ‘Hawick and Gavin Douglas’ (1987), ‘Reminiscences of the Hawick Archaeological Society’ (1891), ‘Satchells (A Review and the Riddell Monument’ (1894), ‘The Common Riding’ (1894), ‘The Bibliography of Hawick’ (1896) and ‘John Casper Leyden: An Historical Retrospective – Explanatory and Critical’ (1903). In addition he published pamphlets on wider topics, namely ‘The Early History of Scotland, from an Archaeological Point of View’ (1881), ‘The Archaeology of Books’ (1882), ‘The Egyptian Question’ (1882), ‘The Present Aspects and Position of the Radical Movement’ (1883) and ‘The Social Life of the People, Politically Considered’ (1892). John (1842–1912) son of Alexander Scott, tenant at Trow Mill. He was born in Hawick and emigrated to Victoria, Canada, then moved to Seattle. He married Florence Agassiz and they had 11 children. Robert (17th C.) resident at Whithope according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Robert (1715–79) son of William. He married Margaret Scott (1721/2–87). Their children included: Agnes (1748/9–66); John (1756–86), who married Janet Deans in 1782; Robert (b.1759); and James, joiner and Bailie in Hawick. They are buried in Old Wilton Cemetery. Robert (18th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Margaret Kedzie in 1768. John (d.1809), son of the deceased Robert, whose death is recorded in Hawick Parish, may also have been his son. Robert (18th C.) farm-worker at Greenhouse in Lilliesleaf Parish. He could be the son of Robert and Margaret Scott baptised in Hawick in 1759; however, based on family names it seems likely his father was James, perhaps from the Bowden area. He married Helen Leis (or among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1785. Thomas, son of Robert, born in Lilliesleaf Parish; and Oliver (b.1813). He is probably the (b.1809); Helen (b.1811), who married Thomas Pott and their children included Marion (b.1636), Isabel (b.1639), Janet (b.1642), Janet (again, b.1646) and John (b.1650). William (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Pott and their children included Marion (b.1636), Isabel (b.1639), Janet (b.1642), Janet (again, b.1646) and John (b.1650).

This branch of the family is not directly connected with the Hawick family of J.C. Goodfellow etc. His son Andrew was forester around Jedburgh. William (b.1636), Isabel (b.1639), Janet (b.1642), Janet (again, b.1646) and John (b.1650). William (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Pott and their children included Marion (b.1636), Isabel (b.1639), Janet (b.1642), Janet (again, b.1646) and John (b.1650).

William (17th/19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf. He married Jenny Biggar and their children included Elizabeth (b.1802). Robert (19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf. He married Elizabeth Dodds and their children included Margaret (b.1807). Robert (1790–1880) born at Merrylaw, son of William and Rachel Easton. He farmed at Merrylaw, Gillestone and Croslie (near Stow). He later worked on estates in Devonshire, Argyllshire and Midlothian and was Land Steward at Inch Estates, Liberton. He married Elizabeth, daughter of John Kedie (or Kedzie) of Hawick. They had 6 children: Isabella, who married Andrew Forgij and lived at Newbattle Abbey; Rachel; William, who married Mary Whitaker and farmed in North Wales; Margaret Elliot; John, who emigrated to Innisfail, Canada in 1844; and Archibald, who died in infancy. Robert (b.c.1805) joined on Teviot Crescent. His wife was Grace, and their children included Adam C., Janet, Joshua, Robert, Jane and Elliott. Robert (19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf. He married Mary Dodds and their children included Helen (b.1842) and George (b.1845). Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. Most of his children were born in Midlothian. He married Isabella Renwick, who was from Forkins in Rulewater. He was probably a gentleman’s servant, and spent the latter part of his life at Penrith. His son Andrew was forester around Jedburgh. This branch of the family is not directly connected with the Hawick family of J.C. Goodfellow etc. He is probably the Thomas, son of Robert, who was born in Roberton Parish in 1785. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. He married Isobel Renwick (from Jedburgh) and their children included: Andrew (b.1807); James (b.1809); Helen (b.1811), who married Thomas Lunn; and Oliver (b.1813). He is probably the Thomas, son of Robert, born in Lilliesleaf Parish in 1785. Thomas (c.1790–1849) miller at Roughheugh Corn Mill. He was listed as miller there among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1835 and 1840. He is also described as tacksman (i.e. tenant) there on the 1841 census. His wife was Mary and their children included: Mary; Robert; Jane; Janet; and Elizabeth.

William (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Pott and their children included Marion (b.1636), Isabel (b.1639), Janet (b.1642), Janet (again, b.1646) and John (b.1650). William (17th C.) tenant for the Duchess of Buccleuch in Phaup on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. William (17th/18th C.) tenant in Over Southfield along with his father John in about 1710. This was attested in evidence given regarding the state of Hawick’s Common in 1767. He could be the William whose children baptised in Hawick Parish included John (b.1714), Robert (b.1715), Marie (b.1716), James (b.1716) and Margaret (b.1719); he may have married Agnes Wright and later Bessie Gledstains. William (1692/3–1740) son of Archibald, who came from Cumberland to Teviothead, with his mother being a Scott. He was tenant farmer at Adderstonelee. He also had half the farm of Bowanhill, Teviothead, with Archibald Elliot having the other half. He married Isobel Scott (1697–1773) at Skelfhill; she is recorded re-leasing the lands of Bowanhill in 1744. Their children were: Archibald; Andrew, who died at sea; Isabel; John, wine merchant in London and later Berwick; Robert, whose son William emigrated to Ontario; Hugh, who died young; and William, farmer at Merrylaw. He is buried with his wife in Teviothead cemetery. William (1738–1821) son of William and Isobel Scott. He was tenant at Merrylaw for about 50 years. He is recorded there in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls and was also taxed for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797. He married Rachel (1747–1809), daughter of John Easton, from the Damside family in Hawick. Their children were: Euphan, or ‘Euphy’, who went to London and married John Smith; Isabel, who married Adam Scott in Westerkirk; Rachel, who married Thomas Proudfoot, shepherd at Headshaw; William, stocking-maker in Hawick; Margaret, who married shepherd William Helm; John, who died young; and Robert, who married Elizabeth Kedzie. He is buried with his wife in Teviothead cemetery. William (1782–1849) son of William, farmer at Merrylaw and Rachel Easton. He was a stocking-maker in Wilton, listed at Damside among heads of households in 1840. He was on Lower Damside on the 1841 census. He married Helen Cumming in Jedburgh in 1830. Their children were: William, who married Isabella Amour Own and was Schoolmaster in Haddington; John Cumming, bookseller... and local historian; Rachel Easton, who married John B. Miles; and Jessie, who died young. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. He married Margaret Dodds and their children included Jessy (b.1808), John (b.1809) and Thomas (b.1811). William (b.1799/1800) born in Robertson Parish. In 1841 he was an agricultural labourer, in 1851 was a ‘Roadmaker’ and in 1861 was labourer, all at Curcarwood in Yarrow. His wife was Isabella and their children included Mary, Janet, Andrew, John, James, George and William. William (1806–1890) son of Hugh and Elspeth Scott. He took over his father’s bakery business. He was listed as a baker at the Sandbed on Pigot’s 1837 directory. In 1837 he is recorded on the electoral roll as tenant of lands of James Douglas of Cavers. He was also listed among a group of 10 men who had been denied their claim to be on the electoral roll in Selkirkshire on the basis of joint life-rent there. However, in 1839 he emigrated to New Zealand with his family. He married Ann, daughter of John Scott. Their children were: Helen (b.1836), who married Samuel C. Baird; Ann (b.1838), who married William Macky; Hugh; John; Euphemia, who married David Scott Robertson; Margaret, who died in infancy; Jane, also died in infancy; William, who died in Oakland, California; Thomas; and James Alexander. William (19th C.) lived at Kirkhope and Dodhead in Ettrick Parish. He was probably son of William and Isabel. He married Margaret Forest and their children included: John (1891–1917), who was killed in action in France; and 2 daughters who lived at 16 Wellogate Place, Hawick, one of them married to a Tucker (also written ‘Goodfalo’, ‘Goodfalow’, ‘Goodfallow’, ‘Goodfelew’, ‘Goodfelu’ and variants; note never pronounced gid-fe-li).

the Good Samaritans (thu-gid-saw-ma-ri’-inz) n. abstinence group which succeeded from the Good Templars in Hawick, objecting to paying money into central coffers. They lasted for many years in the latter part of the 19th century.

Gordon (gor-din) n. town and parish on the western side of Berwickshire. There was once a branch line of the Berwickshire Railway here. The ‘de Gordon’ family took their name from the associated barony. It is also the name of the surrounding parish. Greenknowe Tower is nearby.

Gordon (gor-din) n. Alexander (d.1575) brother of George, 4th Earl of Huntly, and nephew of James IV. He was a servant of the Queen Dowager, Mary of Guise and spent some time in France. In 1549 he sent a detailed report of the capture of Ferniehirst Castle by the English from the French. He was Postulate of Caithness and then appointed as Archbishop of Glasgow in 1550. But in the following year the see was re-signed to the Pope, following a request from the Scottish Crown. Hence he was Hawick’s Archbishop for about a year. He was then pensioned and given the title of Archbishop of Athens, later becoming Archbishop of the Isles and then of Galloway. He became a Protestant. In 1566 he preached at the wedding of the Earl of Bothwell and his niece, Jean Gordon, and in 1567 he signed the bond agreeing to the marriage of Bothwell with Mary Queen of Scots. Rev. Alexander (d.1785) son of Alexander of Blairtown, he was educated at Marischal College, Aberdeen 1748–52. Licensed by Jedburgh Presbytery in 1768, was presented to Kirkton Parish in late 1774 and ordained there the following year. In 1758 he married Joan Perrie (or Pirrie), who died in 1793. They had no surviving children. Rev. Charles (c.1656–1710) from Aberdeenshire, brother of John, the Provost of Aberdeen. He graduated from Aberdeen University in 1676 and became minister at Campvere in 1686. He returned to Scotland to answer calls to Dumfries and Dalmeny, the latter of which he took up in 1691. He was presented to Ashkirk Parish at the end of 1694 and became minister there the following year. He was offered the Chair of Divinity at Aberdeen University in 1697/8, and the Assembly suggested to translate him in 1698, but he refused to accept it. He was described as ‘a learned and holy man of uncommon integrity’. In 1690 he married Rosina Campbell, daughter of the minister of Dumphries. They had 2 sons, George and James, and a daughter, Christian. Charles (18th C.) house servant at Cavers in 1791, when he was working for George Douglas. Eric (20th C.) assistant priest at S.S. Mary & David’s from 1942, having previously been at Portobello. Rev. James Drummond (1870–1944) son of Rev. William and Helen Drummond. He graduated M.A. from Aberdeen University in 1891, B.D. in 1894 and B.Sc. in 1895, when he was licensed to preach. He was assistant at St. Machar’s, Aberdeen, then at Errol. He became Acting-Chaplain to the forces at Aldershot in 1900 and was then Chaplain with His Majesty’s Indian Ecclesiastical Establishment, becoming Senior Chaplain in Bengal in 1921. He was translated to become minister at Bedrule in 1923 and remained until his death. He married Annie Sutherland Gunn (who died in 1955, aged 82), and their children were Nannie Drummond, William Lindsay Drummond, John Gunn Drummond and James Forrest Drummond. He is buried in Bedrule churchyard. John (18th C.) house servant at Branxholme in 1794, when he was working for Adam Ogilvie. John (18th/19th C.) Sheriff-officer and constable of Hawick. He is mentioned in the murder case in 1814 which resulted in Hawick’s last hanging. He could be the Sergeant John who was living at Howdenburn in 1841, at about age 80, and described as ‘Army H.P.’ John (b.1806/7) sawyer who lived at Howdenburn. He was listed among heads of households in 1835–41. In 1861 his occupation was listed as ‘Colporteur’. His wife was Ann and their children included Margaret, Thomas and John. Rev. John (19th/20th C.) assistant to Rev. John MacRae at Hawick Parish Church towards the end of his ministry (around 1890). He was a guest at the 1888 Colour Bussing. He married Alison, sister of J.E.D. Murray. He became a minister in Aberdeen and retired to Edinburgh. Rev. John (b.1878) son of John, the minister of Glasserton and Margaret Bryce. He also had 2 maternal uncles who were ministers. He graduated from Glasgow University in 1902. He was licensed by Wigtown Presbytery in 1905, was assistant at Galston and then ordained as minister of Hobbirk in 1907. He demitted his charge in 1919, later becoming a teacher in North Berwick and obtaining a Ph.D. at Edinburgh University in 1928. Patrick (16th C.) recorded in 1549 as ‘Patricus Gordon’ when he was listed as a tenant, along with Hector and David Turnbull, of the lands of Appletreewall. Ross (1941– ) born in Croft Road, he has long been a Common Riding supporter. He went to his first Ride-out in 1959, completing more than 400, including following 51 times consecutively to Mossilpaull, as well as attending more than 150 huts. He was President of the Mosstroopers’ Club in 1985. He married Jean, daughter of ex-Cornet Bill Brydon and sister of ex-Cornet Rob Brydon. Their children are Ally and Kirsty. Rev. Thomas (1844–1917) son of the minister of Twynholm, he was educated at the University of Glasgow, graduating M.A. in 1864. He was assistant minister at Bothwell, Scone, Twynholm, Balmaghie and Fenwick. He served as minister at the ‘mission’ church at Saughtree 1877–86. Afterwards he was assistant at Edgerston, where he was minister from 1892. He married Adelaide Dobie. He wrote ‘The Scottish Reformation Movement in the Sixteenth Century’ (1883) and ‘Creed and Civilisation – their Alliance in the Experience of History’ (1905). Walter (??–??) watchman at Innes-Henderson in the early part of the 20th century. He was well-known for his pieces of babble, e.g. ‘A liner burnt ti the grund in mid-ocean’, ‘A’m brikkin up ma iron bedstead for fire-wul’ and ‘When the man’s deid, he’ll be made for life’.

the Gordon Airms (thau-gor-din-ärnz) n. hostelry west of Yarrow, at the crossroads where the B709 road from Ettrick meets the A708 Yarrow road. Sir Walter Scott last met the Ettrick Shepherd here in 1830, and it is now run as a hotel. George Turnbull was the proprietor in the early 19th century, followed by John Leigh and then James Douglas.

gore (gör) n. a textile frame formerly used to make fully-fashioned ladies silk underwear, also known by the epithets ‘papper’ or ‘bosomer’ (the word is used elsewhere to mean a triangular or tapering piece of material inserted to shape a garment).

gormaw (gor-maw) n., arch. the corromant, Phalacrocorax carbo (noted by J. Leyden).

Gorrenberry (go-rin-bu-ree) n. farm on the Hermitage Water, home to a branch of the Ellists in the 15th and 16th century and the Scotts in the 17th and 18th. It is recorded as a 10 merk land in a rental list of c.1376 among the charters of the Douglases of Morton. It has been suggested that this branch was one of the ‘twelve great families’ of Ellists who moved to Laddesdale in the early 14th century. The earliest recorded Laird is ‘Willelmo Elwald de goranberry’ in 1484, and in 1489 he was ‘Willelmo elwad de gomnbery’. The connection between this early Laird and other Ellists is not known. However, the lands appear to then passed to the Ellists of Redheugh. In 1541 Archibald Elliot, 3rd son of Robert of Redheugh was designated ‘of Gorrenberrie’ (and was later Laird of Falnash), and the lands were then valued at 10 merks. Archibald’s son William was also Laird, and the last Elliot Laird on record was another William in 1613. The lands then passed to the Scotts of Buccleuch, with John, illegitimate son of Walter, 1st Earl of Buccleuch being given the lands in 1629. John Scott held the lands in 1643, when they were valued at £1600; they still had the same value in 1678 and 1707. A payment for the ringing of the bells of Hawick Kirk for ‘Gorrenberie’s boril’ is recorded in 1722. The lands were sold by John Scott of Gorrenberry to Henry, Duke of Buccleuch in about 1760. In 1788 the lands were still valued at £1600 and owned by the Duke of Buccleuch. Robert Laidlaw was farmer there in 1792–97. Michael Anderson was farmer there in the 1820s to 40s, James Anderson was shepherd in 1835 and David Anderson farmer in 1851. William Hislop was farmer in 1868. The motto of the Gorrenberry Scotts was ‘Sperandum’. There was once a tower here, but its precise location is unknown. According to Jeffrey this earlier house was located to the west of the present farm, closer to Bught Shank; however, the rectangular mound there may have been a farmstead. Tradition connects the place with a brownie, called ‘the Cowie’, and John Leyden also invented the beauty ‘May of Goranberry’ – ‘O May she came, and May she gaed, By Goranberry tower: And who was it but cruel Lord Soulis That carried her from her bower?’ [JL] (also spelled ‘Gorrnanberry’, ‘Gorrenberie’, ‘Gorrenberrie’, ‘Gorronberrie’, ‘Gorronberrie’, ‘Goringberrie’, Gorrenberry Cottage (go-rin-bu-ree-co’-ee) n. cottage by the main road to the west of Gorrenberry farm. Labourer John Armstrong and family lived there in 1851.

Gorrie (go-ree) n. William (1744/5–1816) resident of Roberton Parish. He died at Woodburn and is buried at Borthwick Waas along with Margaret (1750/1–1822) and Charles (1755/6–1834), who both died at Whithope.

Gorthon Scott (gor-thin-sko’) n. area that is mentioned ‘with woods’ among Rulewater lands in the Lordship of Jedforest in 1587 (spelling, pronunciation and identification are uncertain).

Gospatric (gos-pat-rik) n. (11th/12th C.) first known Sheriff of Roxburghshire, and perhaps the first known person holding such an office anywhere in Scotland. He may have been son of Uhtred, who was son of Ulfkill. He owned the lands of Nether Crailing and his grant of the Chapel of Crailing was confirmed in about 1150 (probably after he was deceased). He was also listed as Sheriff when he gave a ploughgate of land in Crailling around the foundation of Jedburgh Abbey, as confirmed in later charters. He is mentioned in the charter for the foundation of Selkirk Abbey around 1120, when he was ‘Cospatrico vicecomite’. He also witnessed a grant to Durham Cathedral around 1126 and witnessed another grant to the church attached to Roxburgh Castle about the same time. There were several other contemporary men of the same forename, and it is not known to what later family he may have been related. One suggestion is that he is the same as Gospatric of Swinton, brother of Colban. Given that he was Sheriff of Roxburghshire, he was probably related to John, son of Orm, who held the same office later in the 12th century.

Gospel Haa (gos-pul-ha) n. former name for a building on Ruecastle farm (presumably a jocular term, from a resemblance to a place of worship).

got (go’, gō’) pp. had, especially as a teacher or similar – ‘A got Ned for Maths’, got called, was named – ‘he aye got ‘Faggy’ when he was younger’.

gotten (go’-in, go-tin) pp. got – ‘...or thance A micht never heh gotten off the bit aa day’ [ECS] (this participle form is more common than in standard English).

Gotterson (go-tu-si-n, go’-u-si-n) n. John (17th C.) listed at Old Jedburgh among the poor of Southdean Parish in the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. Matthew writer of ‘The Callant’, this probably being James Smail from Jedburgh, and not a pen-name for J.E.D. Murray as once suggested. Thomas (18th C.) resident of the Roberton and Ashkirk areas. He married Agnes Murray. Their children included: William (b.1746), baptised in Robertson; and Thomas (b.1748), baptised in Ashkirk. Walter (18th/19th C.) resident of the Lilliesleaf area. He married Violet Laidlaw. Their son William was born in Lilliesleaf Parish in 1800 and baptised in Maxton. William ‘Wulie’ (b.c.1770) well-known Hawick character of the early 19th century. He farmed near Crumhaugh-hill, the area sometimes known as Gotterson’s Knowes. He also kept an inn (or perhaps an ‘innerie’) in the ‘Back Raw’. This was a cluster of buildings with a cess pool in the middle that he referred to as the ‘silver lake’. Once when he refused to accepted a new tenant on the gounds that there were bugs in his furniture, the Bailie asked him if them were no bugs already at his inn and he replied ‘Aw dinna want ony mair!’ [ECS] or similar { `A got Ned for Maths’, got called, was named – ‘he aye got ‘Faggy’ when he was younger’. He was known for his skill at curing horses and cows and volunteered as a driver in the local Militia in 1803. He was mentioned in a story told about beggar John Brown, occurring about 1820. He was a farmer living alone on the Back Row on the 1841 census; Mary, who lived next door, was about the right age to be his daughter. He married Janet Irvine in 1794, the marriages being recorded in both Bedrule and Ancrum Parishes. Their children (baptised in Wilton) included: Mary (b.1795); and Thomas (b.1797). When asked why he turned up to his wife’s funeral in blue, rather than the traditional black, he replied ‘Aw got her in blue and aw’ll pairt wi’ in blue’. His ‘Sunday ootsteeks’ were donated to the Museum collection in 1863 – ‘Weel he wad ken Wull Gotterson Wi’ his strapin’ ootsteek shoon’ [DH] (formerly spelled ‘Gottersonne’ and other variants).

Gotterson’s Innery (go’-ur-sinz-i-nu-ree) n. inn kept by Wullie Gotterson in the Back Row, where the Stag’s Head is now. Martin Dechan grew up there.

Gotterson’s Knowes (go’-ur-sinz-nowz) n. former name for the area around a small farm on the summit by Crumhaughhill, farmed by Wullie Gotterson, and containing the Watch Knowe.

Gouinlock (goo-in-lok) n. Walter (1855–1907), J.P., born in Ashkirk, son of John. He was educated at Selkirk Grammar School. His father moved to Traquair Knowe in 1869, and he himself managed that farm for 20 years. He was also a cattle breeder. He was heavily involved in the Parish Council and School Board in Innerleithen. He married and had a son and a daughter (see also Govenlock).

Gould (goold) n. John (1780/1–1857) Hawick framesmith and frameworker, originally from Glasgow. He was involved in an 1834 improvement of the broad stocking frame, whereby two stockings could be made at once. He moved into the basement of 7 Brougham Place when blacksmith Murray vacated his smithy. By 1837 he was listed as a framsmith on the Round Close and by 1851 he was employing 4 men and 2 boys there. He was listed as a framsmith on the Round Close in Slater’s 1852 directory. He married Elizabeth Taylor. His children included: Alex, whose wife Isabella Smith, sister-in-law Janet Smith and child John all died of cholera at Allars Crescent; William, who also worked as a framsmith; and Elizabeth. He is buried in Wellogate Cemetery (also written ‘Gold’ and ‘Goold’).

Gourlay (goor-lee) n. Adam (13th/14th C.) recorded in the Ragman Rolls of 1296 paying homage to Edward I of England. His location is only given as Roxburghshire. However, he (along with Alan de Gourlay) served on a jury in 1303/4 to decide on the succession to Sir Thomas Chartres, Baron of Wilton. So it seems reasonable to suppose that he held lands fairly locally. Other men of the same surname who also paid homage to Edward I in 1296 were from Edinburgh, Berwickshire and Forfarshire. He could be the ‘Ede Gurlay’ whose lands of Rutherford and Maxton were granted by Robert the Bruce to John de Lindsay in 1321. Rev. Adam (1800–81) born at Chesters, near Ancrum, son of James and Margaret Redford. He graduated from Edinburgh University and was licensed to preach by Jedburgh Presbytery in 1825. He became assistant minister at Bedrule and at Lilliesleaf. In 1842 he was presented as minister of Lilliesleaf by James Henry Robert, Duke of Roxburghie. He was Clerk of the Presbytery in 1843 and Clerk of the Synod in 1853. In Slater’s 1852 directory his name appears as ‘Gourlay’. He married Margaret Campbell Baxter (1813–1900), daughter of his predecessor. Their children were: James (1836–99), insurance clerk; Anne Campbell (1837–85), married George Alexander, farmer; David Baxter (1839–1913), farmer; Margaret Redford (1846–1925); Maria Nicolina (1848–93); Adamina Retart (1852–1924); Adam (1854–88), banker; and Jane Charles Russell Currie (b.1856), married Walter Robert Brodie. Alan (13th/14th C.) served along with Adam on the jury to decide on who inherited the Barony of Wilton in 1303/4. He is recorded as ‘Alain de Gourlay’ and was likely related to Adam. He is probably the man transcribed as ‘Aleyn Gurnay’ on the Ragman Rolls of 1296, where his seal shows a squirrel feeding within two interlaced squares, with the name ‘S’ALANI GORLEY’. Archibald (14th C.) father of John, who was served heir to the lands of Rulewood in 1387. Since John, son of Henry had been granted the lands in 1380, as confirmed in 1390, there may be confusion with dates. These charters are held by the Stewarts of Traquair.

Arnulf (15th C.) witness to a sasine for the lands of Denholm Mains in 1465/6, when he is recorded as ‘Arnulf Gurlay’. He is probably the ‘Arnald Gorlay’ who was part of an action (along with several other Border lairds) registered with Parliament by John, Lord Somerville in 1476. He is probably the ‘Arnou’ who married Katherine, the daughter and heiress of Alexander Inglis, and hence inherited lands near Branxholme. John of Rulewood was probably his son or grandson. David B. (b.1838/9) farmer at Bewlie Hill. He was listed there in 1861, farming 184 acres and employing 8 people. He was there with his brother James. He was also recorded there in a directory of 1868. Henry (14th C.) granted the lands of Rulewood to his son John in 1380. In 1390 the grant was confirmed by Malcolm of Drummond, Lord of Mar and Garroch, who was Baron of Cavers. James (15th C.) recorded as ‘Jacobum Gourlaw’ when he was on the inquest panel for the inheritance of the Barony of Hawick in 1484. John was also on the panel. John (15th C.) recorded in 1432 as a witness to the instrument of sasine giving the Barony of Cavers and Sherifdom of Roxburghshire to William Douglas. He was also on the ‘retour of inquest’ for Ker of Altonburn in 1438. He must have been related to the later John of Rulewood and Arnulf. John (15th C.) on the panel for James Douglas of Drumlanrig inheriting the Barony of Hawick in 1484. James was also on the panel. He may be the same as John of Rulewood. John of Rulewood (15th/16th C.) holder of the lands of ‘Kyrktoun’ in the Barony of Branhelm. He was named on an inquest in 1497/8 (as John Gourlay of Roulwod’) and was probably also the John on the inquest for succession to the Home lands in 1506. He is probably the ‘Jhon Gowrlay’ who was among the men chosen to value the lands of Whithope in 1500. In 1508 he was ‘Johannem Gourlay in Roullwoide’ on the panel for Adam Hepburne inheriting the Lordship of Liddesdale. He was probably the John ‘Gourlaw’ who was on the panel to decide on the inheritance of the Barony of Cavers in 1509. In 1509 he was granted the lands of Rulewood by William, Lord Herries of Terregles. He was already deceased in 1521 when the lands passed to his son John. He was probably son or grandson of Arnulf. John (16th C.) son of John of Rulewood. He is recorded in a sasine of 1521 granted by Walter Scott of Branhelme, for the ‘6 merkland of Kyrktoun’ in the Barony of Branhelm. These lands had passed to the family through ‘Arnou Gourlau’ who married Katherine, daughter and heiress of Alexander Inglis. In 1525 he was served heir to the lands of Rulewood. In 1528 he was probably the John listed among supporters of Archibald Douglas, Earl of Angus who were called to appear before the King. He is also ‘John Gourlaw of Roulwod’ in 1533 when part of an inquest at Jedburgh. He may be the John of Rulewood who had a contract with William Turnbull in Hassendeanbank in 1540 (probably not 1640 as recorded in one source). William (14th C.) granted ‘10 merks of lands’ in Chamberlain Newton (probably Groundistone) by William Lindsay of the Byres. The charter is undated, but probably around 1390 (formerly spelled ‘Gurlaw’ and variants).

Gourlay Bog (goor-lee-bog) n. former name for lands in Bedrule. In the c.1795 Old Statistical Account it is recorded that there was ‘a small common near the church called Gourlay Bog, on which the minister of Bedrule was also in use to pasture’. The common was divided some time in the 18th century. It was ‘Gourlaybog’ in 1801, when listed as part of the estates (valued at £14) bought by William Elliot of Wells (presumably related to a former owner called Gourlay).

Goushill (gows-hil) n. area between Todrig Burn and Blindhaugh Burn, to the north of Todrig farm (it is marked on Ainslie’s 1773 map).

His wife died in 1816, when his surname was given as ‘Gibbons’. He witnessed a baptism for Thomas Rae in 1778. Lawrence of Cardrono (14th C.) Sheriff of Peeblesshire in 1358/9 and probably longer. He was recorded as Warden of Roxburgh in 1373, when King Robert II granted him 100 shillings for ward of the Castle of Roxburgh; the money came out of the rents of Whithesters, Adderstone, Wilton, Chamberlain Newton and Minto. William of Hermiston (18th/19th C.) he was a glazier in Edinburgh, but was listed as a voter in Roxburghshire in 1788. He owned the lands of both Wester Hermiston and Easter Hermiston in 1788. He was further listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805 and 1819. In the Land Tax Rolls of 1811 he was listed as owner of Easter Hermiston (whose 2 parts had previously belonged to ‘Sinton’ and ‘Johnsoun’) as well as Wester Hermiston. He was still owner of Hermiston in 1817 (also written ‘Govan’ and ‘Goven’).

gove (göv) v., arch. to wander aimlessly, to stare in a vacant manner – ‘Confoondit by philosophy, I gove’ at him, he glowert at me, And, Ah, he had an eller eel!’ [DH] (also written ‘goave’; see also gover).

Govenlock (go-vin-lok, gow-in-lok) n. Adam (17th C.) local man, referred to as ‘in Hoitt’ in 1641 when he claimed a white mare that he had found on his lands. Adam (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Northhouse. He was recorded paying tax on 2 non-working dogs in 1797. Adam (b.c.1780) farmer at Childknowe in Lilliesleaf

John (b.c.1828) son of Robert. He ran Mosspaul after his father’s death, probably up until it closed. He then resumed work as a coach driver. He (or another John) was also the proprietor of the Subscription Rooms in the early-to-mid-1800s. He married Isabella Nichol in 1864 and she died in 1884. His daughter was Margaret Ruickbie Govenlock who married William Turnbull Riddle Graham and was mother of the 1902 Cornet. John Nichol (19th/20th C.) married Nelly Scott in Robertson Parish in 1904. Margaret nee Ruickbie (1792–1863) daughter of James Ruickbie, she married Robert, landlord of the Mosspaul Inn. She was born somewhere near Lilliesleaf. She was apparently widely known for her hospitality and kindness, and was quite tall. At Mosspaul she was often to be found in a seat by the open fireplace in the kitchen. Not very widely travelled, she was once quizzed about how far she had been when she replied ‘Hoots, aye, aw was yince at Denholm’. Her children were Margaret, Elizabeth, James, Robert, John and Helen. She was buried at Teviothead. Robert (17th C.) married to Isobel Cowan, his son Adam was baptised in Hawick Parish in 1651. He was landlord of the Mosspaul Inn for about 45 years from 1816. His tenure there saw many improvements to the hotel, although the coming of the railway led to its later closure. He also worked as a guard on the Edinburgh to Carlisle mail coach. He was said to have a commanding appearance and distinctive personality. He was also one of the founder members of the Wisp Club, and the first Treasurer. In 1821 he subscribed for 6 copies to William Scott’s ‘ Beauties of the Border’ and in 1825 he did the same things for Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’. He was listed at Mosspaul in the 1841 census. In 1811 he married Margaret, a daughter of James Ruickbie. They had several children, including: Margaret, who married Mark Turnbull; James, who married Minnie Beattie; Elizabeth, who married gamekeeper Alexander Robertson; Robert; John, who married Isabella Nichol, and was grandfather of Cornet William N. Graham; and Helen (1831/2–74). He died shortly before the last coach run from Hawick to Carlisle. There is a portrait of him in the Museum, by an unknown artist. Robert (b.1821/2) son of Robert. He was farmer at Teinside and also involved with the Archaeological Society in the late 1800s. In 1861 he was farmer of about 4000 acres at Teinside, employing 12 people. He took part in the last ceremonial running of the stage-coach from Hawick in 1862. He was still recorded at Teinside in 1868. He was probably also the tenant farmer at Wolfeleuchhead recorded in the 1870s.
He probably died unmarried. Robert (19th C.) married Margaret Scott in Wilton in 1847. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He was married to Helen Turnbull and their children included William (b.1672). Thomas (18th C.) married Helen Douglas in Wilton Parish in 1749. He may be the Thomas whose children baptised in Roberton Parish include Christian (b.1751) and Helen (b.1752). Thomas (18th/19th C.) married to Betty Oliver. Their children baptised in Ashkirk Parish included Thomas (b.1814), John (b.1820) and William (b.1822), a farm labourer at St. Boswells. Thomas (1841/2–1923) born at Moss paul, son of James. He was a blacksmith in Stow. He married Christina Shankie. He was killed by a runaway horse. Walter (18th/19th C.) married Mary Armstrong in Wilton Parish in 1810. Walter (19th C.) married to Mary Tait, their son Robert was baptised in Southdean Parish in 1828. Walter (1812/3–57) farmer at Dryden near Ashkirk. He was living at Haremoss with his older brother John and mother Mary in 1841. In 1851 he was farmer at Greenhill of 80 arable acres and 520 acres of hill-land, employing 7 people. In 1848 he married Jessie Redford (from Lilliesleaf) and they had daughters Isabella S. (b.1849/50), Mary A. (b.1850/1), Jessie (b.1856) and Margaret Walteria (b.1857). In 1861 his widow was a ‘Farmeress’ of 600 acres at Greenhill, employing 8 people. William Paterson (1789/90–1856) born in Cavers Parish. He was a shepherd, and was recorded living with his brother Adam in Wilton Dean in 1851. William (1798–1888) born at Chesters, son of Robert. He worked as a day labourer in Rule Water. In 1842 he emigrated with his family to Bruce County, Ontario, Canada. In 1824 he married Christian (1801–91), daughter of William Laidlaw and Helen Douglas. Their children were: Robert (1825–1906), who married Jane Armstrong and lived at Brant; Helen (1827–1906), who married and had 1 daughter; Elizabeth Oliver (1829–1907), who married James Rowand, one of the first pioneer residents of Saugeen, Ontario and M.P. for West Bruce, Ontario; Christian (b.1831) unmarried; William (b.1833), born at Yethouse, who married Jane Shanks; Andrew (b.1834), who married Betsy Laidlaw; James (b.1836), who married Mary Hendry; Janet (b.1838), who married Archibald Armstrong and had 6 children; Walter Douglas (b.1839), married Mary Rogan; and John, born in Canada, married Janet Stewart. All except the last child were born in Hobkirk Parish. The family emigrated to Ontario in 1842, where he purchased some land near Brampton, Ontario. They then moved to the Saugeen area in 1851, arriving there by crossing the Saugeen River on a raft, before there were any roads. His offspring are still living in Canada. He died aged 90, when he had about 120 living descendants. William (18th/19th C.) married Anne Crozier in Wilton in 1842 (also spelled ‘Goinlock’, ‘Gouinlock’, ‘Govanlock’, ‘Gowanloch’, ‘Gowanlock’, ‘Gwenlock’), ‘Gwenloke’, ‘Gowanloke’, etc.).

Gracie (grä-see) n. Bryce (b.1837) born in Troqueer, near Dumfries. He came to Hawick in the 1870s to work in the hosiery industry. He married Elizabeth Carter and their children were: Agnes (b.1857), who married John Scott; John (b.1859), who married Isabella Scott in Hawick; Isabella (b.1861), who was a midwife who married John Aitkin; Alexander (b.1863); Elizabeth (1865–1953), who married John Brotchie Brown; Mary (b.1867), who married John Alfred Scarborough in Wilton; Bryce (b.1869), who married Rachel Cairns in Hawick; William James (b.1871); Janet (b.1873), who married Archibald Aimers; Jessie (b.1876), who married John Stanton; and Margaret (b.1880), who died in infancy. The youngest 3 children were born in Hawick. Bryce (1892–1939) son of William and grandson of the earlier Bryce. He was a tailor in Hawick. He served during WWI. He later emigrated to California. William James (1871–1937) born in Maxwelltown, just before his family moved to Hawick. He married Isabella Richardson (1872–1932). Their children were: Mary (b.1895), who died in infancy; William Paul (1897–1917); and Bryce (1892–1939), tailor.

Graham (grä-um) n. Alexander (19th C.) along with John, presumably his brother or son, he was listed in Pigot’s 1837 directory as an ironmonger on the High Street. Andrew (b.1784/5) born in Canonbie, he was a draper at 3 Sandbed. He was listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He was Junior Magistrate in the 1820s, recorded in 1828 when the Slitrig (Drumlanrig) Bridge was extended. In 1851 he was a retired draper on Teviot Square, and was listed among the local gentry on a directory of 1852. In Leith in 1821 he married Christian, youngest daughter of John Nixon. Their children included: George (b.1824); Mary (b.1826); Jane Elliot (b.1827); and John (b.1830). Charles (18th/19th C.) described as ‘Yeomanary Trumper’ in 1882 when the death of his infant son is recorded. He presumably played the trumpet for the local volunteers. David (17th C.) rented part of the farm of Raesknow from the Duchess of Buccleuch in at least the period 1690–98. He was also resident at Raesknowe according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He could be the David, married to Marion Bell, whose children born in Hawick Parish included: Bessie (b.1671); William (b.1671); Robert (b.1675); and Archibald (b.1678). In 1682 he witnessed a baptism for
Graham

Walter Bell, who was also a tenant at Raesknoek. David (1677/8–1718) preacher at Teviothead ‘chapel of ease’ in 1715, when the church was started for people in the outlying parts of Cavers and Wilton Parishes. This is probably the same as the minister of Langholm from 1705, who was translated to Kirkmehoe in 1716 and died 2 years later. He may have simply travelled from Langholm to Teviothead periodically. He is already recorded in 1714 as ‘preacher in ye meeting house in Carlangridge Chapel’ when recorded as substitute for Hawick’s absent minister. David (b.1807/8) from Selkirk, he was a grocer in Lilliesleaf, listed in Pigot’s 1852 directory. In 1851 he is recorded on the north side of Main Street. His wife was Mary and their children included John and Mary. Mrs. Elizabeth (19th C.) recorded as owner of part of Howlands, along with Mrs. Agnes Bowie, in the mid-1800s. It is unclear who her husband might have been. George Rome (b.1835) son of John, farmer at Hollows Mill, near Canonbie. His older brother Simon trained as a draper in Hawick, with his younger brother John also in the same business, and their older sister Mary having married Hawick draper Walter Armstrong. In 1861 he was a draper’s assistant with Wood, Graham & Co., 6 Tower Knowe. From 1871 he moved to live with his mother’s family, the Dicksons. Hugh ‘Hughie the Graeme’ (16th C.) subject of a Border ballad, it is unclear if he was a historical figure or not. The story is that the Bishop of Carlisle seduced Graeme’s wife, and so he carried out a raid in which he stole the Bishop’s finest mare, was then captured by Lord Scroope and hanged at Carlisle Castle. There are several different versions – ‘Here Johnie Armstrong, take thou my sword, That is made o’ the metal sae fine; And when thou comest tae the English side, Remember the death of Hughie the Graeme’ ’[T]. Hutchin ‘Richie’s Hutchin’ (16th/17th C.) Englishman who was declared an outlaw for the murder of Thomas Graham (son of ‘Richie’s Will’) and John ‘Orfeur’ around the end of the 16th century. He was also indicted in England for helping Scott of Buccleuch in the rescue of Kinnmont Willie in 1596 from Carlisle Castle (being ‘the third man that entered the same’), as well as for theft and raiding (particularly during the ‘Ill Week’) and for speaking against the Queen and King. His brothers William (‘Mickle Will’), George (‘Richie’s Geordie’), William (alias ‘Carlisle’) and Richard (alias ‘Lenox’) were also convicted. In about 1605 he obtained remission for helping in the capture of ‘Sandy’s Ringan’ Armstrong. There are also mentions of ‘Young Hutchin’ around 1606, who may have been his son. He is probably the ‘Hutchon Grame’ listed in a letter from Captain Musgrave in 1583, listing his children as Andrew, Robbie, Arthur and Richie. James (17th C.) footman to Walter, Earl of Buccleuch. He was listed in the deceased Earl’s inventory in 1633, when he was owed for his annual fee. James (1612–50) Marquess of Montrose. He was a leader of the Covenanters after 1639, leading the army (including the Teviotdale Regiment) which invaded England and captured Newcastle in 1640. He opposed the Solemn League and Covenant and became the main leader of Royalist forces in Scotland from 1644, including at the Battle of Auldearn, where several local Gladstains and Douglass fell. However, his men were massacred at Philiphaugh in 1645. He fled to Norway, but was later made Captain-General of Scotland by Charles II. Landing in the Orkneys in 1650 he raised a small army, but was betrayed and handed over to the Covenanters. He was hanged in Edinburgh, his head fixed on a spike and his body quartered and distributed among the Scottish cities. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Helen Goodfellow and their children included: Helen (b.1677); an unnamed child (b.1683); Christian (b.1686). In 1687 a witnessed a baptism for Robert Cook. James (18th C.) resident of Falnash. His wife was Jane Graham and their children included Mary (b.1757) and Betty (1758). Sir James R.G. of Netherby (1792–1861) eldest son of Sir James, the first Baronet of Netherby Hall in Cumberland. He served as 1st Lord of the Admiralty. He was M.P. for several different parts of England, including Carlisle 1826–29 and East Cumberland 1830–37. He switched from being a Whig to a Tory in 1835. In 1838 he proposed a motion in the House of Commons to disqualify Hawick from being a polling station for future elections after the Radicals had been harassing Tory supporters at elections. The motion was defeated by only 22 votes. He was present at the banquet held at Branzholmie in 1839 in honour of the Duke of Buccleuch. James (1838–97) son of coal-agent William and Janet Turnbull. He was a frame-worker in Hawick. However, he also started his own small hosiery manufacturers ‘James Graham & Son’ (according to his obituary). In 1866 he married Ann Little, daughter of James Kennedy. Their children included: Elizabeth Patterson (b.1866); William (b.1868);
James Kennedy (b.1870); Janet (b.1871); Walter Warwick (b.1872); and John (b.1874). James (19th C.) farmer at Braidlie on the Hermitage Water. He is recorded there in 1868. He won cattle prizes in agricultural shows. His daughter Ann Twentyman married Dr. David Somerville Doughty in 1891. James E. ‘Jimmie’ Cornet in 1933, worked as a dyer. He assisted Bill Brydon as Left-Hand Man again after WWII. Jane ‘Jean’ (b.c.1785) grocer on Brougham Place in 1841 and the Round Close in 1851. Her children included: John (b.1807/8), a frameworker, born in Hawick; Thomas (b.c.1815), a watchmaker, born in England; and Elizabeth (b.1816/7), also born in England. She could be the Jean listed as a grocer on Silver Street in Pigot’s 1837 directory. It is unclear who her husband was. Jean Cunninghame (?–?) Lady Polworth, who wrote ‘Sailor’s daughter: 1928–1946’ (1993). Sir John of Abercorn (d.c.1337) said to have been granted the Soulis family lands in Liddesdale around the time of Robert the Bruce. He had a son, also Sir John, who died without issue. His heiress (perhaps Mary, Margaret or Elizabeth) may have married Sir William Douglas, the Knight of Liddesdale, to whom Liddesdale passed. However, this is all unclear. John (15th/16th C.) probably from Liddesdale. In 1497 he was one of the witnesses for a document dealing with the lands of Robert Elliot of Redheugh. He could be the John, brother of Matthew who was listed in the Exchequer Rolls among men of the area around Hawick who were fined in 1501. That John was brother of Matthew in Howplesley, who was surety for himself at the Justice-aire in 1502 and was fined for non-appearance. John (16th C.) witness in 1550 to a lease granted by the curators of the young James Cranston to his mother Janet Beaton, who was wife of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme. He is listed as ‘Johnne the Grahame’. Probably the same John witnessed a bond in 1548 when some Elliots had a bond to enter Robert Crozier as a prisoner. John ‘Jock’ (16th/17th C.) son of Rob. In 1594/5 he was offered as a pledge for William of Larriston, but was deemed to ‘not worth the sum’. John (17th C.) recorded as tenant in Whithaugh Mill in 1642 he is on a long list of Border ‘notorious criminals, thieves and ressetters of thift’ who were to be captured and tried. John of Claverhouse (1648–89) soldier, from a family who were staunchly loyal to the throne. He was ‘Bonnie Dundee’ to those who considered him a hero and ‘Bluidy Clavers’ to his detractors; his reputation has certainly been coloured by propaganda. The song ‘Bonnie Dundee’ was popularised by Sir Walter Scott. He served in France and Holland, returning to Scotland in 1677, where he rose through the ranks, eventually becoming a member of the Privy Council. He was employed by Charles II to enforce episcopacy upon Scotland, and to persecute the Covenanters, being given special powers as head of a military commission to seek out conventicles. One of the first such expeditions was to Galashiels in 1679, where a field meeting was held by Thomas Wilkie perhaps (although there are several men of similar name) deposed minister of Lilliesleaf. In 1681 he passed through Hawick, Selkirk, Buccleuch, Craik and Wolfcleuchhead with his dragoons, in search of conventicles. George Deans refused to take him to Galashiels, defying the Bailies. His troop mustered in Hawick in 1685 and he wrote a letter from Tholihshope in the same year. Later he was made Viscount Dundee and became a Jacobite supporter, and raised the standard of James in the north. He married Jean Cochrane, from a Presbyterian family. He was killed at the Battle of Killiecrankie. John (17th/18th C.) son of merchant Walter. He was among the group of young men who were fined in 1706 for being involved in the disturbances at the Common Riding that year, including carrying their own flag and defying the Bailies. He and James Scott (‘of Westport’) were briefly imprisoned and then fined, with his father Walter, as well as Francis Elliot, acting as their coheners. He is probably the John born to Walter and Janet Briggs in 1688. John (17th/18th C.) tenant in Raesknowe in about 1710, as attested in evidence given regarding the state of Hawick’s Common in 1767. He could be the same John as the later tenant in Allanhaugh Mill. John (17th/18th C.) merchant in Hawick. In 1720 after not appearing on 3 occasions at Hawick Kirk for some sin, he was threatened with excommunication. Eventually he ‘satisfied in sackcloth’ 11 times before he was ‘received into the society of the kirk as a lively member thereof’. It is possible he is the son of merchant Walter, who was part of the rebel party at the Common Riding of 1706. John (17th/18th C.) tenant in Allanhaugh Mill. He married Margaret Helm in 1724. Their children included: Christian (b.1725); and David (b.1728). The 1725 baptism was witnessed by John Scott in Over Southfield and Andrew Turnbull in Drydenburn; on the same day he witnessed a baptism for Andrew Turnbull. John (18th C.) resident at Philhopeshie in 1774 when his son Thomas was... baptised in Roberton Parish. He may be son of the Thomas recorded at Philhope a generation or so earlier. John (18th/19th C.) brewer of Hawick who was one of the first members of the Curling Club (so recorded in 1812). He may have been related to (or feasibly the same as) the later proprietor of the Holland House. John (b.c.1770) innkeeper and spirit dealer at Dovemount. He is thus recorded in 1841, when he was living with Anne (probably his daughter) and another Anne (probably his grand-daughter). His inn was one of the earliest buildings in the Dovemount area. John (b.1785/6) from Langholm, he was a clockmaker in Hawick. In 1841 he was listed at about 17 High Street, and in 1851 and 1861 was at No. 29. In 1842 he was in jail in Dumfries. He was listed as a clockmaker on the High Street in Slater’s 1852 directory; note that there was also a separate ‘Jonathan’ who was a clockmaker in Hawick at the same time. His wife was Margaret. He had grand-daughters Margaret Taggart and Margaret Bell. He may be the ‘Mr. Graham, clockmaker’, who donated coins to the Museum in 1857. John (b.1791/2) farmer at Hollows Mill near Canonbie. He married Elizabeth Dickson. They had 4 sons and 4 daughters: Mary (b.1827), who married Walter Armstrong, draper in Hawick; Robert (b.1828); Sybella Rome (b.1828, twin of Robert); Helen (b.1830); Margaret (b.1831); Simon Dickson (b.1833); George Rome (b.1835); and John (b.1838). His sons Simon and John became drapers in Hawick (with George being a draper’s assistant there), establishing Wood, Graham & Co., at the Tower Knowe in the 1850s, and then forming S. & J. Graham, silk merchants, in London in 1860 or 1861. John (b.1792/3) from England, he was a grocer and meal-dealer in Newcastle-on-Tyne. In 1851 he was at about 46 North Heritage Street, and he was recorded on a directory of 1852. He may be the same John who ran a weekly cart to Brampton and another to Hawick (returning from the Bull & Butcher in Hawick on Thursdays). His wife was Jane and their children included Richard and Jane. John (b.1831) proprietor of ‘Graham’s Hotel’ at 6 Back Row from 1869. He was son of coal agent William and Janet Turnbull. The family were at 8 Back Row in 1871 and 1881. In 1852 he married Helen Riddle (b.1831). Their children included: Isabella Richardson Riddle (b.1852); William Turnbull Riddle (b.1853), who married Margaret Govenlock; John (b.1855), who moved to Dublin as a coach painter; George Turnbull (b.1857), who died young; James Melrose (b.1868); Walter (1860–64); Thomas (b.1862), who married Isabella Haldane and joined the Black Watch; Martin (b.1864); Helen (or ‘Nellie’, b.1865), married John Murray; Agnes (b.1867), who died young; Walter (again, b.1868), who emigrated to America; George Turnbull (b.1869), also emigrated to America; Mary Christie (b.1872); Agnes Martin (b.1873); and Jessie Isabella (b.1875). John (b.1837/8) youngest son of John, farmer at Hollows Mill near Canonbie. The family had been farmers and millers on the Esk and Liddel since the time of Mary Queen of Scots. He probably moved to Hawick to apprentice as a draper, and in about 1860/1 with his brother John he founded S. & J. Graham, silk merchants of London. After 1875 (the Collie Failure) he became traveller on the Continent for Wilsons & Glennys. Retiring in 1892, he lived at Huntigstilte, Grasmere, and then in France, where he died at Mentone. He married Jane Murray Wilson, daughter of Hawick Provost George Wilson and his brother Simon married his wife’s cousin, Annie, daughter of John G. Wilson of Ladylaw. Their children were: Walter (b.1868); Elizabeth Richardson Dickson (b.1870); Katherine Glenny (b.1871); Madge (b.1875); Michael George (b.1879); and Jean (d.1936), who married artist Frank Bramley. John ‘Jock the Dog’ (?) larger than life Hawick man, known for tales of his huge appetite. He has worked in the mills. Jonathan (b.1802/3) from Langholm, he was a master watch and clock-maker at about 32 High Street. Note that there was another clockmaker called ‘John’ in Hawick at the same time. They are both listed in Slater’s 1852 directory. His wife was Jane and their children included Thomas and Jane. Joseph (b.c.1790) tailor living at Ryeleahead, at the southern end of Castleton Parish, in 1841. His wife was Elizabeth and their children included John, Robert, Ann and Jane. Mandy (?) one of two women who attempted to join Ride-outs in 1996. Matthew (15th/16th C.) tenant in Howpasley. His brother John was recorded at the Justice-aire in 1502, when he was fined for non-appearance. Probably the same John was listed in the Exchequer Rolls in 1501 among mostly local men who had been fined, with his brother John’s name appearing after his. Matthew (15th/16th C.) recorded at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1502; he was stated to have once been in Brunxholme and now in Hislop, was surety for himself and was fined for non-appearance. It seems unlikely that he was the same man as Matthew in Howpasley.
Graham

(whose brother was recorded at the Justice-aire shortly after him). Matthew (18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His wife was Nelly Oliver and they had a son Matthew (b.1783). He may be the Matthew who was a subscriber to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). Patrick (17th C.) recorded in the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694 among those ‘Payed but not listed in Hauick Town’. He was probably from the west side. Robert (15th C.) witness to a charter of 1489, signed at the monastery of Paisley. Robert (17th C.) listed among the ‘Cottars in Hassanden’ on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Robert (b.1801/2) joiner on the Cross Wynd. In 1841 he was living there, but had moved to 1 High Street by 1851. His wife was Margaret and their children included John, Thomas, Isabella, Margaret, William, Alexander and Janet. Robert (b.1814/5) carter living at 69 High Street in 1861. His wife was Margaret and their children included Jean (who married William McDougall), Elizabeth, Thomas, John Robert, George and James. Robert M. (b.1880) born in Hawick, he moved to Edinburgh in about 1898, where he was a tailor. An accident in his youth prevented him from achieving his sporting ambitions, although he remained an enthusiastic supporter of sports, particularly rugby. Simon Dickson (b.1833) from Canonbie, son of farmer John and Elizabeth Dickson. He moved to Hawick to become an apprentice with draper Walter Armstrong at the Tower Knowe. Walter was his brother-in-law, having married Mary Graham in Hawick. Along with William Wood he formed the drapers firm Wood, Graham & Co., Tower Knowe. Then in 1860/1 he and his brother John founded S. & J. Graham, silk merchants, London. He married Annie, daughter of John G. Wilson of Ladylaw. She was a cousin of his brother John’s wife, Jane Murray Wilson. Thomas (15th C.) witness to a charter signed at ‘Wester Torban’ in 1450, relating toism in 1702. He is probably the merchant listed after already being a Bailie. He witnessed a baptism in 1702. He is probably the merchant listed among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4 and may be the Walter resident of the west-side of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. He is probably the Bailie Graham who was charged by the Council to appear before the ‘commissioners of unfree traders’ to complain about the sum levied on Hawick. In 1706 his son John was among the young men fined for the disturbances at the Common Riding that year; he was there described as a merchant and ex-Bailie and acted as cautioner for the accused men. This John was probably the son of Walter and Janet Briggs born in Hawick in 1688, meaning that his wife would have been Janet Briggs. Perhaps the same Walter, merchant, is recorded as becoming a Burgess of Edinburgh in 1706, by right of his father Archibald, merchant, being a Burgess there.
Graham

He was still on the Town Council in 1707 (when a fine was imposed on the 2 acting Bailies). He was an ex-Bailie when the bond was granted by the Council (dated 1710, but recorded in the Town Book in 1711) to provide money for the Master of the new Grammar School. Probably the same Walter is recorded as an elder of Hawick Parish in 1711. He may also be the Bailie Graham whose daughter Elizabeth married Thomas Huggan of Hawick in an ‘irregular marriage’ in Longtown. He is likely to be the Bailie Graham who was an elder of the Kirk, appointed in 1717 for collecting monies ‘westward from the bridge to the foot of the play la’, suggesting that he lived around this area; he was similarly appointed in 1722. In the 1718 survey of the lands of the Duchess of Buccleuch he is stated to be owner of a small piece of land within the East Mains of Hawick, extending to 2 acres and 12 perches. A great falling out with Bailie Ruecastle (one of the sitting Magistrates) in 1718 had to be resolved by the intervention of the Session and the Minister; he was at that time a councillor, and is said to have accused Ruecastle of ‘Sacriledge, Thift’ and other transgressions, the nature of which are unclear. Other children of Walter baptised in Hawick in the relevant period include Margaret (b.1692), Janet (b.1695), Archibald (b.1701), Jean (b.1702), Anna (b.1705) and Walter (b.1707). Walter (17th/18th C.) resident of Effedge. His children baptised in Kirkton Parish included Malie (b.1718) and Mary (b.1720). Dr. Walter (1762–1829) Hawick Doctor of the early 1800s, born in Arthuret, Cumberland, son of Walter and Mary Johnson. He may have had a brother, Andrew, who was a doctor in Dalkeith. His premises were in Buccleuch Street. About 1799 he was one of the local men contributing to support the war against France. He was probably the Dr. Graham with whom Sir Andrew Smith served an apprenticeship. He was one of the doctors called in the trial for the murder case of 1814, resulting in Hawick’s last hanging. He is recorded as Walter ‘sen.’ at Buccleuch Street on Pigot’s 1825/6 directory and his house is marked on Wood’s 1824 map. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. A portrait of him exists. He married Margaret Scott in Westerkirk in 1787, and their children (born in Arthuret, Cumberland) were: Mary (b.1790); Walter (b.1792), who was also a doctor in Hawick; and James (d.1799), who died in Hawick. Dr. Walter (c.1792–1858) son of Walter and Margaret Scott, he was born in Arthuret, Cumberland, and became a doctor in Hawick, like his father. His premises were on Buccleuch Street, probably at No. 10. He is recorded as Walter ‘jun. M.D.’ on Pigot’s 1825/6 directory, and his house is marked on Wood’s 1824 map. In Pigot’s 1837 directory he was a physician on Buccleuch Street. In Slater’s 1852 ‘Graham & Thompson’ are listed as physicians on Buccleuch Street; he must therefore have been in partnership with George William Thomson. In 1857 he donated copper coins to the Museum. Later in life he lived at Borthaugh. In 1831 in Kelso he married Alison Brown, who was from Eskdalemuir. Their children included: Walter (b.1832); Margaret Moffat (b.1834); Mary Elizabeth (b.1842), who married William Roddie; and William Brown (b.1843). By 1861 his widow was living at Borthaugh along with her sisters Janet Brown and Margaret Scott, as well as 3 of their children. He died at Borthaugh. An obituary was written by Dr. John Douglas. William ‘William of the Mote’ (16th C.) prominent member of the family who lived at ‘the Mote’, otherwise known as Liddel Strength, on the English side near where the Liddel joins the Esk. He should not be confused with William Scott of the Mote in Hawick. He is ‘William of the Mote’ in a letter by Lord Scrope in 1601, accusing him of resetting some of those responsible for killing Sir John Carmichael. William ‘Richie’s Will’ (16th C.) 2nd son of Richard of Netherby. He is mentioned by Lord Scrope in 1595/6, when Scott of Buccleuch was said to have been on a raid with him. In 1596 he complained about a raid on his lands by the Lairds of Edgerton and Bedrule, with 20 men stealing 24 horses and £100 of goods. In 1594/5 it is written that ‘Hobbie of the Belsies turned ‘man’ to Richies Will’ and was to be entered to trial by the Wardens. He was also said to have been among Englishmen who (along with several other Grahams) met with Scott of Buccleuch before the rescue of Kimmont Willie in 1596. He first married a daughter of Armstrong of Mangerton and secondly married a daughter of Robert Elliot, 15th of Redheugh. He had at least 9 sons. In 1605 ‘Ritchie’s Hutchin’ was found guilty of his son Thomas. Rev. William (d.aft. 1638) graduated from the University of St. Andrews in 1611. He is recorded as minister at Ewes Kirk from 1627. William (18th/19th C.) farmer at Borthwickshiel, recorded on the 1790–97 Horse Tax Rolls as owner of 5 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. He also paid the dog tax at Borthwickshiel in 1797. He subscribed to Andrew Scott’s book of poetry, printed in Kelso in 1811. William (18th/19th C.) resident at

Rigfoot in Ewesdale. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. William (18th/19th C.) resident at ‘Holstaine’ who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. It is unclear how he might have been related to other Grahams. William (18th/19th C.) labourer at Harden in Castleton Parish. He is listed among male heads of households in 1835, when he had just left for America. William (b.1795/6) from England, he was farmer at Lawston in southern Castleton Parish. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. He was recorded as head of his household in 1840 and 1841. In 1851 he was farming 500 acres and employing 8 labourers. His wife was Mary and their children included Mary, Thomas, Elizabeth, Robert, John, William, Christopher, James and Ann. William (b.1809) born at Fairnleyhaugh (or Fairnleehaugh) near Yair in Selkirkshire, he was a coal agent in Hawick. In 1841 he was on the Howgate working as an agricultural labourer. In 1851 he was living at ‘Leafy House’ (probably Ivy House) on Weensland Road and working as a mason’s labourer. He was recorded as ‘Carman’ (i.e. coach-driver) in 1861, when he was living on Weensland Road. In 1829 in Stow he married Janet, daughter of Hawick shoemaker James Turnbull. Their children included: Margaret (b.1829), who married John Combe; John (b.1831), who was proprietor of ‘Graham’s Hotel’ in Hawick; Agnes (or Ann, b.1835), who married Robert Haliday; James (b.1838), who married Ann Little Kennedy; Janet Turnbull (b.1841), who married baker William McCallum; and Helen (b.1844), who married Robert Jardine. He could be the William, son of John and Ann Dixon, born in Selkirkshire in 1803. Sgt. William (19th C.) veteran soldier who served in the Crimean War and the Indian Mutiny. He probably lived in Hawick. He can be seen in an early photograph, in the uniform of the 4th Roxburghshire Volunteers. William Turnbull Riddle (b.1853) eldest son of John and Helen Riddle. In 1875 he married Margaret Ruickbie Govenlock, descendant of James Ruickbie. Their son William Nichol was Cornet in 1902. The family lived at 14 Howe gate. William Nichol (b.1881) Cornet in 1902 and one of the founder members of the Callants’ Club. He played for Hawick R.F.C. and worked as a plumber. His father was William Turnbull Riddle and his mother was Margaret Ruickbie Govenlock, great-grand-daughter of poet James Ruickbie (also spelled ‘Graeme’ and formerly ‘Grame’, ‘Grayme’, etc.).

the Grahams (θnu-grāmz, gra-umz) n. family with origins in Midlothian, with a cadet branch moving to Eskdale in the late 14th century and becoming a large clan in northern Cumbria. They were a powerful force in that area, holding at least 13 towers, until the early 17th century when they were targeted by the Earl of Cumberland and others in an attempt to pacify the Borders. They were a scourge of the English wardens, with a reputation for riding with the Scots when it suited them. 150 of the family were rounded up in about 1605 and mostly executed or deported to Ireland or to fight in the wars in Holland. The clan motto is ‘Ne oublie’ (forget not) and the crest shows a falcon killing a stork – ‘For it’s hey the Graems! and Ho the Graems! The gallant Graems are a’ frien’s to me; And if I had them a’ here this nicht, Ane foot o’ ground I never wad flee!’ [T] (also spelled ‘Graeme’ and other variants).

gate. The name was used in the 18th century. Immediately below here is where a large hole opened up during the great flood of 1767.

Graham’s Hotel (grā-umz-hūtel) n. hostelry run by John Graham from 1869 at 6 Back Row. It was where the inaugural meeting of the Hawick Burns Club took place in 1878. In 1885 it was renamed Holland House.

Grahamslaw (grā-umz-law) n. area to the north-east of Eckford, the hill there containing 9 caves. The lands were owned by the family of Grahamslaw of that Ilk, with ‘Johan de Grimmeslawe’ signing the Ragman Rolls in 1296 and Christian ‘Grymislaw’ resigning the lands into the hands of the King in 1429. The Barony was long held by the Crichtons of that Ilk. The lands were granted by William Crichton of that Ilk to Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1436/7, with a ‘precept’ in 1439, and are described as ‘8 husband lands’ in 1528/9 when still owned by Walter Scott of Branxholme. A separate ‘6 husband lands’ called ‘Portaris Landis’ or ‘Porterlandis’ are also mentioned as a Scott possession in 1517, 1553/4, 1574, 1634, 1653, 1661 and 1663. In 1454 an ‘instrument’ dealing with ‘Burrell lands’ in Eckford (witnessed in John Waugh’s tenement in Hawick) describes how Robert ‘of Grimslaw’ was the former laird. A precept of sasine in 1500 grants the lands to Walter Scott of Branxholme. The former estate there contains a beehive-shaped dovecote (the origin is probably ‘Grim’s hill’, combining the Old English ‘hlaw’ with Old Norse ‘Grimr’,... where this was a nickname for Odin, perhaps relating to the caves; the name appears as ‘Grymislaw’ in 1429, ‘Grymyslaw’ in 1500, ‘Grimmislaw’ and ‘Grymyslaw’ in 1574 and ‘Greameslaw’ in (1663).

Grahamslaw (grā-umz-, grinz-law) n. Adam (15th/16th C.) had sasine for the lands of Newton in Bedrule Parish in 1504, with his name given as ‘Ade Grenislaw’. Probably the same Adam was a member of the panel for deciding on the inheritance of Christian (Ilk (14th/15th C.) resigned the lands of Grahamslaw in a letter of 1429, as recorded in an instrument of transumpt requested by Stephen Scott of Castlaw in 1445. Her name is written ‘Cristiane de Grimislaw’. Henry ‘Harry’ of Little Newton (d.bef. 1606) recorded in 1606 when his sons William and George were held by the Hardvics for the murder of Robert Turnbull of Hallrule. They were then transferred to Edinburgh Tolbooth at the direction of the Lords of the Privy Council, and there was a complaint that the family of the murdered man wanted to ruin them and keep them in prison forever, rather than prosecute them. John of Newton (15th/16th C.) witness to the ‘retour’ for the Kers in the lands of Borthwickshiel in 1471. He was also a member of the panel for Walter Scott inheriting Braxholme and Buccleuch in 1492. In 1493 he had remission for being with Alexander, former Duke of Albany. In 1494/5 Thomas, brother of Lord Cranston, had remission for the (unspecified) crime done to him at Denholm. He is recorded in 1498 along with Adam, when he had remission for committing with ‘the traitours if Levin, Ruthirfurdis, and Turnebullis’. In 1500 he was one of the men selected to value the lands of Whithope. In 1501 he was mentioned in the Exchequer Rolls in relation to the administration of some fines in Roxburghshire. He may be the ‘Johannem Grimyslaw’ who in 1482 was on the panel for Elizabeth Cunningham inheriting the lands of Appletreehall and the eastern part of Hassendean. His son Thomas was listed in 1492/3 when he witnessed the confirmation of Rutherford and Wells to James Rutherford. John (15th/16th C.) tenant at ‘the Place of Cambys’, probably Minto Kames. In 1502 Peter Turnbull in Bonchester had remission for several crimes, including stealing 40 cows and 5 horses from his farm, with the help of some rebel Turnbuls. John of Newton (16th/17th C.) son and heir of Adam. He could be the John who had a sasine for Newton in 1541/2. He could be the ‘Johne Grymislaw’ who signed the bond to act against Borders thieves in 1571/2. He also swore allegiance to the Crown in 1572/3, with William Ker of Caverton as his surety. In 1586 he sold Newton to Robert Kerr of Ancrum (later Newton), who married his daughter Helen. He is probably the ‘Johnne Grameslaw of Lytill Newton’ who was among the men accused of helping the English raid lands belonging to Sir Walter Scott of Braxholme in 1548. He could be the same ‘Johnne Grameslaw of Lyttill Newton’ whose 6 sons William, James, Robert, John, Andrew and Thomas were killed by a group of Turnbuls from Stanedge, Barhills and Minto, the trial being in 1604. John (d.c.1601) probably son of John of Newton. Along with his brothers William, James, Andrew, Robert and Thomas, all servants of Thomas Ker of Craillinhall, they were killed by a group of Turnbuls and Davidsouns from the Minto area. In 1610 a commission was appointed by the Privy Council to apprehend the accused, since they had still not found caution for the crimes. His sister, Helen Grahamslaw, Lady Newton (who had married Robert Kerr), was mentioned as one of the pursuers in the case, as well as Robert Kerr of Newton ‘as sister’s son’.

Grahamslaw (15th/16th C.) landlord of the ‘Burrell lands' in Eckford Parish, as described in a document of...
1454 signed in John Waugh’s tenement in Hawick. He was succeeded by his only daughter Helen, who married Simon Burrell and was succeeded by their only daughter Janet, whose John Burrell resigned the lands in 1448. He may be the ‘Roberto grynlaw’ listed in a document for lands in Morebattle in 1445. Thomas of Newton (15th C.) member of the 1464/5 panel to rule on the inheritance of the Barony of Cavers by Archibald Douglas and also the panel to decide on the disputed lands of Kirkton Mains and Flex. He was thus a prominent Roxburghshire landowner of the time and is listed as ‘Thomas Grymyslaw of Newtowne’. Thomas (15th C.) son and heir of John of Newton. In 1492/3 he witnessed the confirmation of Rutherford and Wells to James Rutherford. He is probably the Thomas of Newton, ‘Junior’, who was surety for William Falside in Ancrum at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1494/5. Also in 1494/5 he was ‘Junior dominus de newtoun’ when his brother William had remission for associating with him. They fell him fou o’ hollow granes T’ express his dismal pleasures’ [FL], ‘Lord, a’ my langin’ is afore thee; an’ my graenin’ isna hidden frae thee’ [HSR], ‘Bie reesens o’ the voce o’ my graenin’ my banes cleefe til my skin’ [HIR], ‘...Sae grains the world to gledness frae the deid’ [WL], n. a graon – ‘But wi’ a deep and hollow graun. grain (grăn) n., arch. small quantity, tiny amount, bit, speck – ‘A didna ken a grain o odds o’d for na A hedna seen’t thre kens-whan’ [ECS].

grainary (grăn-u-ree) n., arch. a granary – ‘It wis in what we ca’d the grainary the part o the steedinn where they kept the grain. The sheaves wis built intae round stacks outside and thatched, an’ the grainary wis empty’ [TH].

Grainfoot, former farmstead on the Tinnis Burn in Castleton Parish. Archibald Beattie was there in the 1770s. Walter Armstrong lived there in the late 1700s. On Stobie’s 1770 map it is marked to the east of Reidmoss. It may have been at the foot of Todhunter Grain.

Grain Hill (grăn-hil) n. hill in the north part of Ashkirk Parish, on the right-hand side of the Woll Rig road, with Wollrig Grain passing nearby. The farm of ‘Greenshill’ recorded in 1797 in Ashkirk Parish was probably near there.

grainin (grăn-in) adj., arch. groaning, grumbling, complaining – ‘At the grey grainin’ ranks o’ poles that leaned ...’ [DH].

grap (grăp) n., arch. an iron-pronged fork used for gardening or farming – ‘...as he just went out with grap and creel to his father’s tata field served as surety for him. In 1494 he was ‘William Grymyslaw’ when he was a witness for the transfer of lands in the Barony of Hassendean (formerly spelled ‘Grymslaw’, ‘Grimslaw’, ‘Grinyslaw’, ‘Grymyslaw’, ‘Grymyslaw’, ‘Grymslaw’, etc.).
grafth (grafth) n., stuff, material for a particular purpose – ‘Gar a the grafth gang to the axes, Wi’ rapid speed; And brawly we can ca’ our pins, In time o’ need’ [JR], clothes, attire – ‘A traveller is ordained to pay a tailor £10, 6s. for grafth to his horse for the hail year’ [BR1638], ‘When priests in haly grafth did shine’ [JR], ‘You gowd o’ Martin-mas Cleeds timely daith. graithin (grā-thin) n., arch. equipment, vestments, furnishings – ‘Master Walter Scott, …, mounted upon a gallant charger and arrayed in a sufficiency of Border graithing’ [RM].

gralloch (gral-luch) v., poet. to disembowel – ‘…And the soreichspurtled slaisterbags Wad gralloch my guts!’ [DH].

gramarie (graw-nee-ree) n., poet. witchcraft, magic – ‘Until he did his ain men see, With witches’ hazel in each steel cap, In scorn of Souils’ gramarye: Then shoulder-high for glee he lap’ [JL], ‘Dark was the vaulted room of gramarye, To which the wizard led the gallant knight’ [SWS] (there are spelling variants).

gramercy (graw-ner-see) interj., poet. thanks – ‘Now Dickie has feld fair Johnie Armstrong, Fala, &c. The prettiest man in the south countrie. Gramercy, then can Dickie say, I had but twa horse thou has made me three. Fala, &c.’ [CPM] (from the French).

the Grammar Schuil (thu-graw-nur-skil) n. Hawick Grammar School, founded in 1710, following a meeting of the Parish Heritors organised by Rev. Alexander Orrock, and bolstered through the Orrock Bequest of 1711 (hence the confusion about the date of its foundation). There was probably a school from about the time of the Reformation, but it may not have had a continuous existence. Andrew Sword was recorded as schoolmaster in c.1592 and in 1616, William Hay in 1606 and Adam Scott in 1622. In the Parish valuation of 1627 it is stated that there ‘is no provision for ane schole, but thair is verie great necessitie for a schole’. James Carmure was recorded as schoolmaster in 1631. However, it is unclear how well supported education was in the town through the rest of the 17th century and before there had long been calls to establish such a school. The Burgessesses were taxed in 1710 (probably for the first time), to support this school and its master. It existed alongside the Parish School (often called the English School), which was for elementary education, with lessons in English. The Grammar School was a secondary school for the wealthier classes, which to begin with would have charged fees and had lessons in Latin. The first schoolmaster was James Innes. It is unclear where the school started, since the land at Orrock Place was obtained (from Andrew Rodger) only about 1724. At that time it contained 2 ruinous houses, plus sheds and a yard. The school seems to have been rebuilt from these buildings soon after 1724. But a new building was completed on the site in 1732, constructed by John Turnbull, mason, and Walter Scott, wright. This building was damaged in the 1767 flood. The school used the Town Hall as overflow from 1821, and the schoolhouse in Orrock Place was abandoned in some years as being too small. By 1825 the school was run by a Rector with 2 assistants. The school was rebuilt in 1825–26, designed by Smith of Darnick, when it was merged (actually a joint master was appointed in 1824) with the Parish School to become the United Schools. In 1839 it was written that the subjects taught were reading, writing, arithmetic, geography, mathematics, Latin, Greek and French. A new room was added to the school in 1846, but then it still only contained 4 rooms. It was then in use until Buccleuch School (now Grampus (grawn-pis) n., arch. an ignoramus, fool (noted by J. Jamieson).

Grand (grawnd) adj. great, fine, splendid – ‘that’s a grand hat ee’ve on’, ‘Now there’s a new coat feenished! Is it no grand?’ [JEDM], ‘…a grocer body gaun eis yirrints, gien iz the weel-wurn hail: ‘It’s a grand-day!’’ [ECS], ‘…A gaed an got masel cleaned an spruishit wui a grand swaible o waeter’ [ECS], ‘There was’na gran new blouses every other Setturday, an’ white gloves for whust o waeter’ [ECS], ‘There was’na grawnd new blouses every other Setturday, an’ white gloves for whust o waeter’ [ECS], ‘The fremmit freends ye neebor there Are neebor-like and grand’ [WL].

Grand-dowter (grawnd-dow-tur) n. a granddaughter – ‘Ma great-grandfather’s sister was mairried ti Robbie Burns’s granddowter’s husband’s brother which makes mei a tremendous close relation ti oor National Bard’ [IWL].

Grander (grawn-dur) adj. finer, more splendid – ‘Though there may be grander toons Still a Teri hert aye turns Tae the Teviot and the bonnie Border burns’ [RMc].

Grandest (grawn-dist) adj. greatest, finest – ‘that’s the grandest hing’, ‘Man it’s the grandest place aw’ve ever seen And no a bit like Hawick’ [AY], ‘And Jess McVeetie offered, up the Wynd, The grandest sticky taffee in the toon’ [WL], ‘For in yon Bridge Street queue A got the grandest blether, Wi’ freends like Robbie Knox And Henry’s fither’ [IWL].

Grandfather (grawnd-fith-ur) n. grandfather – ‘Gie me a guid-gaun grandfather clock’ [DH], ‘…Pop’s grandfather George and his brother Billy were Cornets’ [IWL] (also written ‘grandfather’).

The Grange (thu-grawn-d-märch) n. traditional march at the Common Riding Ball, led off by the Cornet and his Lass.

Grange (gränj) n. area just to the west of Chesters, south-east of Ancrum. ‘Chesters’ Grange’ and ‘Grange Banks’ are shown on today’s Ordnance Survey maps. Perhaps the lands were formerly separated into east and west; if so Adam Thomson was recorded at the east part in 1494/5. Lands there valued at about £1460 were owned by Rev. William Bennet in 1643, and another part owned by Gavin Elliot, valued at £260. In 1678 part was owned by William Elliot of Grange, valued at about £350. Mr. Hair paid tax for 13 windows there in 1753. The farm there was developed around 1790 by Thomas Ogilvie, who had purchased Chesters a few years before. Richard Hair was owner in 1788 and Henry Hair is recorded as farmer there in 1797. The 1811 Land Tax Rolls listed ‘Part of the Lands of Grange, formerly possessed by John Elliot’, valued at £108 (‘Gronge’/‘Grange’ are marked on Baleu’s 1654 map).

Grange (gränj) n. former name for lands in Ringwoodfield, somewhere near Northhouse or Teviothead. Around 1557 Simon Scott of ‘Fernili’ and Archibald Elliot of Gorrenberry rented these lands, along with Bowanhill, from the monks of Melrose. The name is recorded as ‘Grangia alias Stanyhetoun’ and the value was £4. In 1564 it was recorded simply as ‘Grange’. It is possible that this was a grange of the Abbey, located perhaps near Staney Hill. This could be the Grange in Castleton Parish listed in 1797 when John Turnbull was there.

Grange (gränj) n. Robert (13th/14th C.) referred to as ‘de la Graunge’ when he swore fealty to Edward I in 1296. His lands could have been the Grange near Ancrum, or possibly the one at Abbotrule. He was on a jury an inquest for the inheritance of Wilton and other lands of William de Chartres in 1303/4.

The Grange (thu-gränj) n. former farm in the Barony of Abbotrule, just to the north of the main house. The lands transferred to Southdean Parish and later to Hobkirk Parish. Thomas Rutherford was recorded there in 1494/5. It was among the lands purchased by Adam French from the monks of Jedburgh in 1569 and later passed to the Kers. In 1629 Walter Scott, son of William, who was son of Walter of Todrig, was served heir to the lands; they were at that time described as ‘a 32 shilling land of old extent’. It was among lands whose superiority was inherited by Bessie and Anna, daughters of George Scott (brother of Sir Walter of Whitslade) in 1670, when it was described as also having a mill. Rev. James Ker, minister of Abbotrule, was also Laird of Grange in the mid-to-late 17th century; he preached a field conventicle in the house in 1679, with about 500 people listening from the lawn outside. In 1680 it was listed among lands whose superiority was held by the Kerrs of Abbotrule. In 1707 ‘Grange’s lands’ were held by ‘Ains of R. Watson’ and valued at £396; it must have therefore been included in a large set of farms at that time. Grange afterwards formed part of the farm of Ruletownhead. In 1788 the farm was owned by Patrick Kerr of Abbotrule and valued at £396. Part was listed in 1811 being owned by Charles Kerr of Abbotrule, formerly possessed by John Elliot, and valued at about £34. Alexander Wight was farmer there in 1797. Around 1875 it was owned by David Henderson of Abbotrule and valued at about £43 (it is marked on Stobie’s 1770 map and was ‘Grainge’ in 1670 and 1680).

Grant (grawn’, grawnt) n. Adam (1859–1938) composer of the music for several Hawick songs and compiler of others. Born in St. Andrews, he spent his early years in Edinburgh, and at the age of 12 was apprenticed as an organ builder and piano tuner. He came to Hawick at 19 to be organist at St. Cuthbert’s. He moved to St. John’s in 1991 and remained there until 1936, serving the same church for 45 years. He also set himself up as a piano tutor and tuner and in 1882 opened a shop (which he shared with 3 other businesses at No. 2 High Street), selling sheet music. He moved to larger premises at 10 North Bridge Street in 1885, and lived above the shop. This became the main musical business in Hawick, selling instruments as well as music (and later gramophone records), and acting as a booking agent, as well as publisher of local music. He was official Common-Riding accompanist for more than 40 years (at least 1896 until 1937), and Callants’ Club accompanist for over 30 years He also wrote non-Hawick music, sometimes under the name ‘Rosenberg’. He also helped James Sinton with non-Hawick music, sometimes under the name ‘Rosenberg’. He also helped James Sinton with non-Hawick music, sometimes under the name ‘Rosenberg’. Andrew farmer at Riddell, descendant of the Sprots. In 2015 he presented a talk to the Archloagical Society on the history of the Riddell estate. Derrick (17th/18th C.) factor to Douglas of Cavers in the early-to-mid 18th century. Probably the same George was the Duke of Buccleuch’s Chamberlain for Ettrick Forest, Hassendean, Burnfoot and Melrose at least in the period 1748–56. He was factor for Scott of Harden 1734–55 and was also factor to Francis Scott of Gorrenberry when Adderstone was purchased in 1750. George (18th/19th C.) surgeon in the Royal Navy. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825 and must have had a local connection. Dr. John (1823–76) from Knockando in Moray, he was a 5th generation descendant of Patrick, 2nd son of James, Laird of Grant. He served as a doctor in Hawick, and was listed as a physician on the High Street in Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1851 he was listed as a general practitioner, living at about 21 High Street, with an ‘M.D’s Messenger’ and a servant. For most of his time in Hawick he lived at the top of Walter’s Wynd, 47 High Street. He was listed there in 1861, with his housekeeper and stable boy. He was well known for keeping otter hounds, horses and other animals in the back of the property in the mid-19th century. The Border Magazine of 1904 contains a grizzly account of ‘A Day on Teviot with the Otter Hounds’ which he led in 1863, with his dogs (‘Caledonia’, ‘Royal’, ‘Ringwood’ and ‘Pibroch’) chasing an otter from Burnfoot to Spittal, and his young hound ‘Bobby’ being brought in to dispatch the otter.

Another account published in 1904 described a hunt on the Ale Water, when he succeeded in a break and then another 2 hours. Like all ministers of the time, he was known for rebuking the congregation. In later life he had a long white beard.

In 1840 he married Jane, daughter of James Dickson of Mauricewood. Their son William (1849–1911) became a wealthy timber merchant in Leith (and was Master of the Merchant Company of Edinburgh 1905–07), and his this William’s son also became minister of Cavers. Their other children were: Isabella (1841–1904), who married the minister of Coltness; Lewis (b.1842), who died young; Lewis (1844–1916), Kirkcaldy engineer; Jane Dickson (1846–1924), who married Robert Michael Ballantyne, children’s author; and James (1849–1911), who became a doctor and died in Tasmania. His name is recorded on the family gravestone in Jedburgh Abbey cemetery.

Rev. William Kenneth ‘Ken’ (1883–1971) minister of Cavers 1924–54, before it merged with Kirkton. He was the son of William and Eliza Mary Usher of Edinburgh (daughter of brewer Thomas), and grandson of Rev. William Grant who had been minister of Cavers himself. He was educated at George Watson’s College and Edinburgh University, where he graduated M.A. in 1905. He was licensed to preach by Edinburgh Presbytery in 1908 and became assistant at St. Bernard’s in Edinburgh. He was then minister at Edrom and of the ‘Second Charge’ of St. Andrew’s from 1916. In 1918 he was Chaplain to the Forces serving in Salonika. In 1924 he was translated to Cavers Parish. He married Evelyn Maud Mary Urquhart in 1914 and they had one son, Alan (1916–2010).

Fr. William (20th C.) Chaplain at St. Margaret’s Convent in Hawick in the period 1948–60. William Alan Kenneth (1916–2010) son of Rev. Ken, he was born in St. Andrews and raised at Cavers Manse. He became an aeronautical engineer at Boscombe Down and worked on the V Bombers. He married Eleanor Wray Sandford in 1942 and they had children Clive Roger, Colin William and John Alexander.

(grawp) pp., arch. gripped – ‘But she . . . roared and grat, an’ grap ma airms’ [HAST1868], ‘. . . She grap at it, muttering, I should haec had mair, But yet I will tak’ it at Copshawholm Fair’ [AD] (also written ‘grap’; this is the past tense form, while grappen is the past participle).

grape (grāp) v., poet. to grope – ‘. . . And belike they grabbed whaur they couldna see, And the nits were sweir to faa’ [WL] (also spelled ‘graip’).

the Grapes (thu-grāps) n. the Grapes Inn, previously at 16 Buccleuch Street, which was the main centre in Hawick for the carrying trade, before the coming of the railway. It once had a private well, which others were sometimes allowed to use. The inn was erected by a carrier named John Hargreaves, after he acquired the property in 1820. John Beck was the proprietor in 1825, Robert Hobkirk in 1837 and Margaret Best in 1855. Most of the buildings have been greatly altered, but a turretted staircase and workshop survive.

Grapes Close (grāps-klōs) n. also known as Grapes Inn Close, the pend between 16 and 18 Buccleuch Street, named after the Grapes Inn, which once occupied that area. The name continued in use long after the inn itself closed. The Drums and Fifes march out to here on the Thursday night, since it is close to the site of one of the town’s tolls. It is also on the route of the Cornet’s Walk.

Grapes Hotel (grāps-hō-tel) n. hotel in Newcastle at 16 Douglas Square, also known as the Grapes Inn and just ‘the Grapes’. Jane Kyle was proprietor there on Pigot’s 1825 directory and still in 1851 and in Slater’s 1852 directory. John Elliot was inn-keeper in the 1860s.

grav see gravit

grat the Gravelly Haugh (thu-graw-vu-leew-hawed) n. former descriptive name for an area on the south side of the Slitrig near Lynnwood, where the old Common boundary briefly crossed to the other side of the river. This could be what was meant in an entry from the Parish Records of the early 18th century – ‘To a poore lad’s cofine yt dyed in the Gravell, £2’.

the Gravies (thu-grā-vēez) n. popular name for old Wilton Kirk cemetery.

gravit (grav-vi’) n., arch. a scarf, especially a warm woollen one – ‘pit yer gravit on’, ‘. . . Till they’ve a’ gotten gravats made oot o’ gude rope’ [UB] (also spelled ‘gravat’; accent on the 2nd syllable).

graw (graw) v. to grow – ‘Gala graws on ee efter a while, a bit like cancer’, ‘. . . for which yin year he’d ti graaw a beard . . . ’ [WFC] (cf. the more common growe).

grawn (grawn) pp. grown – ‘The wand’rin’ Burnfoot path is graun’, Lang by the river’s side . . . ’ [WFC] (also spelled ‘grau’).

gray (grā) n., arch. an arithmetic book (so-called from the book written by James Gray, schoolmaster in Peebles, which was heavily used in schools in the 19th century).

Gray (grā) n. Agnes (17th C.) resident of Headshaw Mill in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when she was listed on the Hearth Tax roll among ‘ye poor’. Andrew (17th C.) resident in Lilliesleaf according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. His is probably an ancestor of the later Andrew who owned lands in Lilliesleaf. Andrew (18th C.) recorded in 1788 as owner of lands in Lilliesleaf (valued at £86 13 s 4 d). He could be the Andrew from whom the Riddells of that Ilk purchased the lands of ‘Hoglar-burn’ in Lilliesleaf Parish, according to the 1813 Tax Rolls. He was probably a descendant of the earlier Andrew from Lilliesleaf. Andrew ‘Dand’ (17th/18th C.) recorded being ‘in Weensland’ in 1723 when he was considered as an elder of Hawick Kirk. He was also so labelled in 1725 when he witnessed baptisms for carrier Thomas Porteous and William Hislop. He was described as tenant in Weensland in 1728 when his daughter Margaret married Walter Scott from Hawickshiels. Andrew (18th C.) recorded in Hawick in 1764 when he was paid for ‘the wind-pointer, fen, and hands, in church steeple’. He was presumably a clock-maker or other merchant. Andrew (18th/19th C.) resident of London who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He presumably had a local connection. Andrew (19th C.) noted local jumper from Hawick, also associated with the early years of Hawick Baa. He won the running hop-step-and-leap at the St. Ronan’s Games in 1830. At the Saturday Games of the 1834 Common Riding he won the ‘running high leap’ and the ‘hop, step and leap’, bringing to 23 his total of local prizes. He is probably the handloom weaver of that name living with the Crosier family at about 30 Loan in 1841. Andrew (b.1784/5) resident of Lilliesleaf. He was probably the Andrew who is recorded as owner of ‘Hungry-hills, Four Rigs and Tenement and Yard in Lilliesleaf’ according to the 1811 Land Tax Rolls. He was listed as an agricultural labourer in 1841 and as a ‘Landed Proprietor (of 7 acres)’ on Main Street in 1851. His wife was Jean from Gretna. Their children included: James; Catherine; and Isabella (b.1831), who wrote poetry under the pseudonym ‘Free Lance’. Charles (18th/19th C.) first (and only) minister of the Independent Kirk in Hawick. He arrived in November 1805, having previously been a stone mason, and being trained by the Haldane’s in Edinburgh. After only a few years he apparently became more of a convert to baptist views than much of his congregation, leading to the entire church folding by 1813. He left Hawick, since there were not enough baptist followers to support him at that time. David (17th C.) resident in Lilliesleaf according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. David (17th C.) resident at Stoulie according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. David (17th/18th C.) tenant in Whitlaw in 1702 when he witnessed a baptism for James Colwort, also in Whitlaw. He may be the David who witnessed a baptism for James in Whitlaw in 1728 and another (the same day) for John Anderson. Duncan (15th C.) witness to Hawick’s earliest known sasine in 1453, where he is described as an esquire. Presumably the same Duncan ‘Graye’ was also witness to a charter of William Douglas of Cavers in 1450, in which James was also a witness. Francis ‘Frank’ (1839–1922) from Yeadon in Yorkshire, where he was bandmaster from the age of 17. He came to Hawick in 1860 with his brother Barnabas, to work as a weaver. In 1861 they were lodging at 21 High Street. He was made bandmaster for the local detachment of the Border Rifles, and remained in this position for 43 years. Since the volunteers had no instruments, he travelled to Edinburgh with Capt. Chisholme of Stiches to purchase them. He can be seen in an early photograph and is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. George (17th C.) recorded as being in ‘Rupertlaw’ (probably Raperlaw, but possibly Rupertlaw) in 1684 when his servant George Young was listed as a fugitive for refusing to conform to Episcopalianism. George (18th C.) recorded being in ‘Wiensland’ in 1764 when his son’s baptism was witnessed by gardener James Scott and Walter Scott (probably related to his wife). He was also listed being in Weensland in 1766 when baptismal witnesses were Adam Scott and William Elliot. He married Helen Scott in 1756 and their children included: Margaret (b.1758); David (b.1759); John (b.1762); James (b.1764); Esther (b.1766); George (b.1769); and Francis (b.1771). George (d.1808) merchant in Hawick, son of James, who was from Ashieburn. He was listed as a merchant on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He died in Hawick. George (19th C.) resident of ‘Peatihouses’, i.e. Burnhead Cottages, in 1857, when he donated coins to the Archaeological Society. He was surely related to William, who was listed as a lambswool stocking maker at ‘Parkhouses’ on the 1851 and 1861 censuses. George (1914/15–1991) born in Hawick, he started work with Walter Wilson’s and was a ‘Bevin Boy’ during WWII. He then worked on the railway before becoming a personnel officer with Turner & Rutherfords. He was a member of the Labour Party, was on the Town Council 1955–61 and served as a Bailie. He was also a keen amateur dramatist and singer. Gilbert (18th/19th C.) gardener in Hawick. The death of his daughter Janet is recorded in 1810. Cardinal Gordon Joseph (1910–93), born in Leith, son of mechanical engineer Francis William. He was ordained as a priest in Edinburgh in 1935, then assisted his uncle, who was priest at St. Andrews, while taking a degree there. In 1941 he was appointed priest of S.S. Mary & David’s in Hawick, and remained there until 1947. One of his tasks was to put together the centenary booklet. During the War years he also served nearby German and Italian prisoners of war. He also became Dean of the Borders and served on the Roxburgh education committee. He left to become Rector at St. Mary’s College, Blair (near Aberdeen) and became Archbishop of St. Andrews.

James (b.1728); and an unnamed son (b.1730).
He may be the same James who witnessed a charter for William Douglas of Cavers in 1450, along with Duncan, who may have been related. And he is probably the James listed as deputy to Sir Archibald Douglas of Cavers in 1455. James (17th C.) resident of Birkwood in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll there. He could be the James, moved to Bessie Dunlop, whose children included Agnes (b.1688), Eupham (b.1689), Robert (b.1691), William (b.1693), Janet (b.1696), Walter (b.1701), Janet (again, b.1703) and an unnamed son (b.1707). Probably the same James was listed among those collecting money for the Parish in 1724. James (17th/18th C.) elder of Hawick Kirk. In 1717 (along with John Scott, candlemaker) he was appointed to collect monies from `Whitla, Whitlahaugh, Flexes, and Burnflat', and in 1718 he was described as `in James who witnessed a baptism in 1687. James (17th/18th C.) tenant farmer at Whitlaw. In Hawick in 1627 he married Helen Eliott, daug-her of Walter in Brugh. Their children included:

James (b.1728); and an unnamed son (b.1730).
It seems likely he was son (or grandson) of the earlier James, who was elder of Hawick Kirk and related to David who was in Whitlaw in 1702.
The witnesses to the 1728 baptism were David Gray and John Scott. James (18th C.) resident of the Allars area. He was already deceased in 1805 when the death of his son James is recorded.
James `Jamie’ (b.c.1793) Hawick man who was born crippled. He famously told a story about meeting the lame Sir Walter Scott at the head of the Loan as a boy. He could be the weaver ‘James Grey’ recorded at about 41 Loan on the 1841 census. James (d.bef. 1808) from Ashieburn. The death of his son, merchant George, is recorded in Hawick in 1808. Janet (17th C.) recorded among the poor of Hassendean Parish in 1694, when she was at Horsleyhill. John (15th C.) recorded as one of the ‘nobles’ on the witness list for the 1432 sasine for William Douglas be-given the Barony of Cavers and Sheriffdom of Roxburghshire. It took place at Cavers house and the other men were all local. He must have been related to James Gray, who is also listed. John `Wi Yin Ei’ (16th C.) servant to the young Laird of Mangerton. He was listed in 1541 among Scotsmen accused of burning the corn of William Carn-aby at Halton. His nickname is recorded as `with on ee’, presumably meaning that he has an injury to one eye. He could be one of `John Gray thelder, John Gray yonger’, who were listed in 1541 among Scotsmen accused of the murder of Englishmen during several raids along with Armstrongs, Fosters and others. John (17th C.) described as ‘in Lilsle’ (i.e. Lilliesleaf) in 1632 when, along with 3 other men, he feued Westbarns from Thomas Hamilton, Lord Binning. In 1642 his son, also John, married Janet, daughter of William Wood in Raperlaw. John (17th C.) son of John, tenant in Lilliesleaf. In 1642 he married Janet, daughter of William Wood in Raperlaw. The couple received lands belonging to Wood in Lessuden and near Barnhills. They sold the Lessuden lands to Walter Scott of Raeburn in 1671. John (17th C.)
resident in Ashkirk Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. John (17th C.) recorded at Raperlaw in Lilliesleaf Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He may be related to the ear-ier Johns from Lilliesleaf. John (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Mary Laidlaw and their children included: Thomas (b.1771).
John (18th C.) listed as groom at Borthwickbrae in 1793, when he was working for William Eli-liot Lackhart. He could be the John who married Agnes Scott (from Hawick) in Roberton Parish in 1789. John (18th/19th C.) farmer at Wiltonburn Epps, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when he owned 2 work horses. John (18th/19th C.)
farmer at Ashkirk Bridgend, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. John (18th/19th C.) farmer at Heuchhouse in Castleton Parish, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. It is possible he was the
Mr. Gray of Castleton who He subscribed to John Learmont’s book of poetry in 1791. John ‘Daft Jock’, ‘Jock the Ladle’ (1776/7–1837) wandering beggar and simpleton, who travelled around Roxburghshire, Selkirkshire and Peebleshire in the early-to-mid 1800s. A native of Ettrick, he later moved to Selkirk with his packman father, Johnnie. He was also referred to as ‘Daft Jock Gray of Gilmancesleuch’. His nickname ‘the Ladle’ came from a version of ‘And he played upon a ladle . . . ’ that he used to sing, along with a ladle as prop. He was also known for imitating ministers and for bawdy songs. He would make up his own songs by throwing together rhymes from elsewhere. He usually wore knee-breeches, bright red garters, enormous buttons and a tall hat. It is mentioned in William Chambers ‘Memoir of Robert Chambers’. One of his songs was a popular one with the chorus ‘Rob Rodger, he ca’s up the rear, And Caleb beats the drum’ [RM], with a different version in the Chambers book, with chorus ‘And the laddie he’s but young, And the laddie he’s but young, And Robbie Scott ca’s up the rear, And Caleb beats the drum’ [DJG]. He would mimic the older local preachers and was sometimes disruptive during services. He was also known for singing bawdy songs. He also sang rhyming couplets of Wullie Craw’s, and verses attributed to him refer to people and places around Wilton and Hassendean, as well as other places. He was said to be the inspiration for ‘Davie Gallatley’ in Sir Walter Scott’s novel ‘Waverley’. A portrait of him was painted by William Smellie Watson. He is said to have been very attached to his father, and took to bed after his father’s death, dying within a week. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Margaret Collier in 1796. Their children included: James (b.1796); Jane (b.1802); and Christian (b.1802). The witnesses in 1796 were the whole Associate Congregation. John (18th/19th C.) stocking-maker in Hawick. His son Andrew died in 1805. John (b.1790/1) born in Crailing, he was a carrier and grocer in Hobkirk Parish. In 1851 he was living at ‘North Town O’ Rule’, which is the cottage known locally as ‘Drythropple’. His neighbour was the poet John Halliday. His wife was Isabella and their children included Andrew, Eliza and Agnes. John ‘Jock’ (1812–83) born in Wilton, he lived in the Westend and was known as a cheerful simpleton. He stayed at the Corner of the Green Wynd and the Loan with his sister Lizzie and her husband James Anderson, and helped his brother-in-law with his dairy. He was a common sight on the streets, driving a donkey cart and having a pet starling. He later became bald, apparently as the result of a hair tonic, and is buried in the Wellogate. ‘Jock, the cuddie’s tail’s off’ [RM], John Y. (19th/20th C.) left money to establish the John Y. Gray Prize Fund at the High School. Margaret (17th/18th C.) Hawick resident, recorded in 1720 being made to stand ‘upon the usual place of repentance in sackcloth’ in St. Mary’s Kirk for 7 Sundays. This was for ‘her sin of drunkenness and baseness’. Peter (18th/19th C.) carrier recorded as owner of a horse in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls for Hawick. Robert (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Margaret Redford in 1722 and their children included Agnes (b.1723), James (b.1725) and Bessie (b.1729). It seems likely he and his wife were related to Helen Gray and William Redford, respectively, who had children a little earlier in Ashkirk Parish. Robert (19th/20th C.) baker at 10 High Street around the 1890s. Thomas (16th C.) probably from Liddesdale, he was listed in 1535 among a number of Armstongs and others who were denounced as rebels for stealing cattle and taking prisoners from Craik. Ninian Gray, servant to John Forester ‘Shake Buckler’ is also listed, and so may have been a relative. Thomas of Townhead (17th C.) had an ‘instrument’ brought against him, along with Rev. Francis Scott in 1689, by 2 of the Hassendean heritors. This suggests that he was associated with Hassendean Kirk and also refused to give up Episcopaliam. He may be the same Thomas who has an ‘instrument’ in his favour in 1675 ‘on the appearance of his wife, Bessie Scott, within the parish Kirk of Hassendene’. He paid the land tax on £214 for lands previously held by Scott of Alton and ‘Now called Know Townhead’ in 1678. In 1692 he ‘peyed formerly for the viccorage of Hassandene alias Townhead’. He was recorded at Hassendean Townhead on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls, when he was taxed for 2 hearths. In the 1811 Land Tax Rolls there is a record of ‘Thomas Gray of Alton’s Lands, now called Know Townhead’; it is unclear where his lands of Alton were. Thomas (17th C.) resident of ‘Crackuooll’ in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll. Perhaps the same Thomas was listed in 1724 among those collecting money for the Parish. Thomas (18th/19th C.) first definitely known proprietor of the Mosspaull Inn. He is thus recorded on an 1803 list of members of the 1st Battalion of the Roxburghshire Volunteers. He was probably landlord at Mosspaull until 1816. He was a friend of James Ruickbie, who wrote a poem about the improvements that had been carried out at the hotel – ‘Tam, the storm baith loud and fierce is, Ever since I left Mosspaul, Yet accept my two-three verses, Now I’m in a tift tae scrawl’ [JR].

William (17th C.) resident at Castleside near Branxholme according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. In 1694 he was recorded as the Duchess of Buccleuch’s tenant of the farm of Castleside. William (18th/19th C.) farmer at Craggs in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls for Lilliesleaf Parish, when he owned 3 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. He also paid the dog tax at Craggs in 1797. William (b.1796/7) born in Ancrum Parish, he was farmer at Ormiston in the 1860s, having previously lived in Channelkirk. In 1861 he was farmer of 210 acres at Ormiston and employing 7 people. His wife was Marion and their children included John, Janet, Violet, Christina and Marion (sometimes written ‘Grey’).

Gray Coat (grā-kō’) n. hill south of Dodburn Filters and to the east of Priesthaugh. It contains the remains of several different homesteads and earthworks and its southern slopes are crossed by the Catrail. To the north-east of the summit is an ancient cairn, about 6 m in diameter, but surrounded by 3 grass-covered bankso; it is said to resemble the Round of Tivla (in the Shetlands), and probably a Bronze Age burial mound. The homestead is on the northern slopes, measuring 47 m by 37 m, perhaps defined by a twin palisade and with a house about 50 m diameter house inside. There are signs of cord rig on the northern and southern sides of the summit, as well as the souther-eastern slopes. Close to the summit are the remains of a settlement surrounded by a wall about 105 m by 60 m, with entrances in the south-west and north-east. The interior contains evidence of at least 8 houses. On the south-eastern side, beside the grassy track, are the remains of a small pele-house, possibly Peelbrae or Dodrig. The pele-house was 8 m by 4 m, with some rybots discovered in an excavation. To the south-east and north-west of these ruins are the foundations of 2 other buildings.

gray-daylicht (grā-dā-licht) n., arch. dawn, the light of dawn – ‘...whan the slogan waekent the waller an sterteet the fray i the gray-daylicht’ [ECS].

Gray Hill (grā-hil) n. hill above Old Northhouse, reaching a height of 317 m and with a triangulation pillar on top. There are 2 ancient settlements on its slopes, as well as a portion of the Catrail on the other side of the road. On the far eastern slopes there is an area of rig-and-furrow cultivation.

graylin (grā-lin) n. grayling, Thymallus thymallus, a fish with a small mouth and large dorsal fin, introduced locally from the south of England to a pond at Monteviot in the 1850s, and accidentally released after a flood.

gray oats (grā-ōts) n., pl., arch. an inferior kind of oats.

gray row (grā-row) n., arch. a bread roll made of rye or oats – ‘Something ti serr as an off-pit ... a Gowpeenh berries or a penny gray rowe’ [ECS].

the Great Bell (thū-grā’-bel) n. term used to refer to the new bell of St. Mary’s, recast in 1694 after ‘it was rent, anno 1693, and was of new founded’. A subscription was taken around the Parish, and an Act of the Bailies and Council was passed stipulating that only the families of those who had contributed (at least 12 shillings) were entitled to use the bell to announce burials, with the same restriction applying to the hand or ‘Deed’ bell. These ‘Havers of the Bell’ still had to pay a small fee for its use, however. The list contains 180 names, including some identifying information (occupations, nicknames, etc.), and hence is an invaluable record of Hawick’s wealthier citizens at the end of the 17th century. In 1718 the Bailie Depute contributed ‘as much oak as was ane axtree to the great church bell’, meaning it got a new ‘axle-tree’ to swing on. In 1723 it was ordained that anyone who contributed to the rebuilding of the bellhouse should have the same rights as those listed in 1694. The bell was taken down (and presumably replaced again) in 1747 when work was done on the steeple. Repairs to the old bell contributed to the Town’s debts mentioned in 1612. The bell was replaced by a new one in 1763, when the Kirk was rebuilt. The new bell weighed 560 pounds and the exchange was arranged through ex-Bailie Thomas Turnbull in London.

the Great Border Games (thū-grā’-bōrd-gāmz) n. name used in the mid-19th century for the Games on the Saturday of the Common Riding, held at the Haugh.

the Great Flid (thū-grā’-flid) n. popular name for the flood of the Slitrig in 1767, also known as ‘Hawick Flood’. This occurred on 5th August 1767, beginning about 4 p.m., and lasting until after 6 p.m. There was no great rainfall in Hawick and the flood only affected the Slitrig, with the Teviot above Hawick being easily fordable that day. The Slitrig rose 22 feet (about 6.5 m) above its normal level, as many as 15 houses were swept away, along with the Corn Mill, the garden wall of the Manse and the Parish school room. The smaller arch (at the east end) and part of the northern parapet of the Auld Brig were also swept away, and from there 2 men, trapped by the rushing waters, were carried off and drowned. Mrs. Aitkin narrowly escaped by crawling over a ladder laid between upper windows across the waters rushing down Silver Street, before the house was carried away. Four people trying to save belongings from Eckron’s house were swept down to the Sandbed and rescued there. Two other men were rescued after climbing on top of the kiln. A servant girl waded into her master’s house to rescue the £300 in gold that he had there, only to be carried away, and she narrowly escaped drowning, being cast onto a green downriver, still clutching the bag of money. It is also said that the flood carried off most of the records of the Town’s incorporated trades. The waters poured up the Backdamgate and filled the closes along both sides of the High Street as far as the Cross Wynd. Part of the Tower was undermined and in danger of falling. The flood was probably exacerbated by the arches of the Auld Brig becoming blocked with debris. There is a tradition that it started when a shepherd threw a stone into a loch at Winburgh Hill, disturbing the fairy folk! It is also stated to have been started by ‘the fall of a Water-spout’ (whatever that means!). The Hawick minister, Rev. Laurie gathered some parishioners together in the kirkyard to pray during the flood, afterwards claiming to have helped abate the waters; although apparently the flood had already much receded by then. Another incident later recounted is that a baby was carried off in its cradle, but rescued without injury; similarly, it is said that a bedstead was carried off with a cat on it, which landed safely on a sandbank in the Common Haugh. It is also said that a Hawick shoemaker, who was several miles further down the Teviot and, unaware of the flood, noticed a board on the river bank, and discovered it was his own shop sign and that James Aitkin, returning from Kelso, noticed some of his own merchandise washed up on the haugh at Menslaws. There are several accounts of the events in Hawick that day, the most detailed being by Town Clerk John Gledstains. The loss of property was estimated to be £4000 (see also fids).

Greathill (grā-hil) n. former name for a farm in Jedforest. It was described as 2 steadings valued at 50 shillings according to the Exchequer Rolls in 1538 and 1539. In the rental roll of 1541 the tenant was Archibald Oliver, paying 25s (it is ‘Greithill’ in 1538 and ‘Greithil’ in 1541).

Greatlaws (grā-laws) n. place name in Lilleyeslie Parish, south of Clerklands and close to a hill-fort. William Riddell was there in 1595/6. It was part of the lands whose superiority was inherited by Sir Walter Riddell of that Ilk from his father in 1636. ‘Bessie Stoddart gudewife of Greatlaws’ was owner in 1643, when the lands were valued at £104. It passed from Riddells of Greatlaws to ministers of the name Duncanson through marriage. Andrew Duncanson paid £104 for the land tax there in 1663 and 1678. It was probably among lands inherited by daughters of George Scott (brother of Sir Walter of Whitslade) in 1670. Thomas Turnbull was there in 1694. In 1788 it was owned by Sir John Riddell. William Laidlaw was farmer there in 1797. It was owned by Sir John Buchanan Riddell in 1813 and valued at £287. Hedger Peter Stoddart and his family were there in 1851 and 1861 (it is ‘Greitlaw’ in 1595/6, ‘Greitlawes’ in 1630, ‘Greitlawes’ in 1636 and 1669 and ‘Greatlawes’ in 1670; it is marked ‘Greeklawes’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map, but with the modern spelling on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Great Legs (grā-legz) n. nickname of Adam Laidlaw and also Robert Elliot.

Greatmoor (grā-moor) n. hill about 10 miles south of Hawick, between the Maidens and Cauldcleuch and reaching 599 m (1,964 ft). It is marked on the Ordnance Survey maps as ‘Greatmoor Hill’. The summit contains a large man-made cairn as well as a triangulation pillar – ‘Was there never a maid on Ettrick side Who waved to her love on his last long ride? Came never a steed over Greatmoor moss With the corpse of his rider bound across?’ [WHO], ‘...Then Greatmoor and Windburgh against a purple sky’ [WHO], ‘Penchrise and Gritmuir, Ruberslaw, dark wi waist-high heather, And the slant, green, edge o’ the Cairter Bar’ [DH]. Also the name of another hill just west of Skelfhill Pen, reaching a height of 481 m (formerly written ‘Gritmoor’; it is marked on Blaeu’s c.1654 map as ‘Gritt moore’, a little further south of its real location and is ‘Greatmoor Hill’ on Stobie’s 1770 map).

great pipe (grā-pip) n., arch. the Highland bagpipe – ‘The town’s piper, for his nicht revelling, on going on the fair nicht playing with the great pipe thro the haill toun, is fined £100 Scots’ [BR].

great teind (grā'-tind) n., arch. the tithe due from grain – ‘All thir 51 lands adjacent to ye toune are estimat to pay nyne scoir 15 bulls in stok, 49 bulls in great teynd, laik ane firlot, and 20 lbs of vicarage’ [PR1627].

the Great War (thu-grā'-waatr) n. the First World War, WWI, in which there were almost 1,000,000 dead on the Allied side, with over 3,000,000 casualties. Around 1,000 local men lost their lives between 1914 and 1918, i.e. about one for each day of the war. The K.O.S.B. were involved in the Gallipoli campaign of 1915, and there were more than 120 men of Hawick and district died (over half on a single day). For Hawick it was also a time when the Stobs army camp was a significant part of local life. Soldiers were billeted in Hawick, and trained in several open spaces around the town. Women were employed on knitting frames, a job previously reserved for men, and many tweed manufacturers turned to filling military orders. The Common Riding was cancelled for the years 1914–18, with the Council resolving to do nothing while the war continued. However, J.E.D. Murray rode the marches on his own, and the Common Riding of 1919 was a special occasion. In 1918 the Common Riding Weekend was used for Red Cross benefit events and the Vertish Hill Sports were held on the Saturday. 19th July 1919 was declared ‘Peace Day’ with bonfires lit around Britain. The Vertish Hill Sports were held on that day, with about 2,800 children each being given a bag of cakes. On 30th August that year there was a ‘Welcome Home’ parade in Hawick, starting at the Drill Hall and continuing to the Volunteer Park, where there was a fete and sports day. The Hawick War Memorial was erected in 1921 next to the Museum, and there are other memorials in many of the local villages. A book ‘Hawick and the Great War, A Pictorial Record’ was published in 1919 and a history, ‘All These Fine Fellows’, was written by Derek Robertson in 1999.

Great Warrington Sike (grā'-waw-rin'-in-sik) n. stream in Castleton Parish, which rises on Larriston Fells and joins Storff Sike and then runs into Larriston Burn. There is a boundary bank and old enclosures near where it joins Storff Sike. Little Warrington Sike is to the north.

was inferior to that of the Green, both as regards the number of adherents and means at their disposal . . .’ [WNK].

Greena (green-u) n. former fortified house in the lower Liddel valley, south of Greena Hill, south-west of Kershope. It is located on the west side of the Liddel Water, roughly opposite the remains of Stonehouse Tower. From the remains it probably measured about 10 m by 7 m, and there is also evidence for 2 adjacent buildings in an enclosure. The name was probably ‘Greenhaugh’ in earlier times. It is probably the lands owned by Richard ‘de Grenehou’ recorded in an English record of 1281/2. James in Greenhaugh is mentioned in 1510 and 1515/6. In 1541 the lands of Greenhaughshaw were valued at 30 shillings and tenanted by John Forrester. ‘Will o Greena’ was a well-known resident, possibly an Armstrong, who was killed in a duel with Foster of Stanegarthside, the site said to be marked with a stone. Will Foster of Greena is recorded in 1583 (and could be the same man). John Foster, son of Meikle Rovie of Greenhawghe is recorded in 1583. A map dated 1590 shows a tower of ‘Lard o’ Jockes Grenehaugh near the confluence of the Tinnis Burn with the Liddel Water. There could have been two separate farms of Over Greena and Nether Greena. Robbie Armstrong and James ‘Dittone’ were there in 1623, as well as Abie Foster. It is probably the ‘Porterleyne Greina’ possessed by Archibald Douglas in 1632; he was some kind of servant of William, Earl of Angus, and his lands were inherited by his daughter Margaret in 1634. William, brother to the deceased James Foster in Greena is listed as a wanted thief in 1642. Also in 1642 John Douglas of Gervald was granted the lands of ‘Greina’ and others. Sir William Douglas of Cavers was owner in 1643 when the lands were valued at £420. ‘Harie forrester’ paid the land tax (on £420) there in 1678. The residents there in 1694 were James Steel, James Robison, John Oliver, 2 James Armstrongs, ‘Arck’ Armstrong, John Armstrong and John Hall. In 1707 the lands were owned by Forrester of Stanegarthside and by Oliver of Dinlabyre by the 1780s. The farm was valued at £420 in 1788 and in 1811, when owned by William Oliver of Dinlabyre. Labourer George Turnbull and his family lived there in 1841. Robert Jardine of Liddelbank paid the land tax there in 1874, with his home being on part of the former lands there (it is ‘Grenehauche’ in 1515/6, ‘Grenehauchschaw’ in 1541, ‘Greinay’ and ‘Greenay’ in 1623, ‘grinach’ in 1678 and ‘Grinna’ in 1694; it is marked ‘Grenehag’ on Sandison’s c.1590 map of the Debatable Land, while ‘N. Grina’ and ‘O. Grina’ are marked on Blaeu’s c.1654 map and it is ‘Greena’ on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Greenbraeheids

Greenbraeheids (green-brā-heeds) n. Greenvbraeheids, a farm in the Slitrig valley just south of Hawick, reached over the Hummelknowes Bridge, or via a track off the top of Wellogate Brae. Robert Shiel and John Cairns were tenants there in 1797. James, John and Robert Shiel were... farmer there in 1841 – ‘...While Greenbraehead (in older times Priestcrown) To meet Crowbyres send the signal down’ [WNK].

Greenbraehead Brig (green-brā-heedz-brig) n. another name for Hummelknewes Brig.

Green Burn (green-burn) n. stream to the west of Newcastleton, behind Kirk Hill. It runs south, joining Black Grain and flowing into the Tinnis Burn. The old farmstead of Greenburn lies along its banks, as well as grouse butts and old sheepfolds nearby. To the east are the remains of 2 huts.

the Green Cafe (thu-green-kaw-fee) n. cafe that stood at 80 High Street, at the bottom of Brougham Place, leading to the nickname for that street. It was established in 1838, and existed until around 1999. Latterly it has been painted red, and was for a while a confectioner’s shop.

the Green Cafe Brae (thu-green-kaw-fee-bra) n. popular name for Brougham Place, also known as ‘the Cafe Brae’.

the Green Cafe Brig (thu-green-kaw-fee-brig) n. occasional name for the road bridge across the former railway at the top of Brougham Place.

Green Cleuch (green-klooch) n. small stream on the south side of the Hermitage Water, between Gorrenberry and Twislehope.

green coat (green-kō) n. the long-tailed dress jacket in deep green, traditionally worn by the Principals during the Common Riding. The origin of this tradition is unknown. In the late 19th century it was stated that the form of the trousers had changed, but the green coat had long been used. The first record of a Cornet being fitted for a suit was in 1815, but it is unclear if this was green. Ex-Cornet’s traditionally don their old jackets each year at the Dinner and Ball, the only other time it is worn being at the Mosstroop-old jackets each year at the Dinner and Ball, the was green. Ex-Cornet’s traditionally don their for a suit was in 1815, but it is unclear if this used. The first record of a Cornet being fitted with the nickname for that street. It was established in 1838, and existed until around 1999. Latterly it has been painted red, and was for a while a confectioner’s shop.

the Green Gress (thu-green-gres) n. the Green Grass, being an old West End name for the Loaning or Tryst ground. This was 1 acre and 34 poles in area and extended to both sides of what is now Rosebank Road. It was much used as a leisure area by West Enders, and as a gathering place for youths, leading to its other popular name the Sweerin Green.

Greenhaugh (green-hawch) n. lands in southern Liddesdale, probably an older name for Greena.

the Greenhead (thu-green-head) n. former name for the area at the top of Myreslawgreen.

Greenheads Terrace (green-heedz-te-ris) n. Greenheads Terrace, street built in 1938 in the West End, named for being at the ‘head of the green’.

Greenhill (green-hil) n. farm to the north of North Synton, now known as Dryden Greenhill. Mrs. Govenlock was recorded as farmer there in 1868.

Greenhill (green-hil) n. Rev. Charles Kinnear (1817–86) born at Cash, Strathmiglo, Fife, son of Charles Kinnear and Christian Baxter. He graduated from St. Andrews in 1840 and was ordained to Garelochhead in 1844. The following year he was translated to Roberton Parish, where he was minister until his death. In 1851 nd 1861 he was recorded at the Roberton Manse, living with his mother Christiana and sister Margaret, as well as 3 servants. He married Isabella, daughter of Horatio Blair of Glasgow, and she died in 1907. He wrote ‘Sermon on the Death of Allan Eliott Lockhart of Borthwickbrae’ (published in Hawick, 1878).

Greenholm (green-hōm) n. farm in Liddesdale, on the east side of the Hermitage valley near Snaberlee, opposite Redheugh. South Greenholm is marked on today’s Ordnance Survey map, with North Greenholm gone. Aerial photography has shown rig lines and an enclosure to the north-east. It should not be confused with the lands of ‘Greena’ further to the south (where the Tin- nis Burn meets the Liddel Water). It may be the ‘Grenhowe’ recorded in 1365 when Edward III bestowed protection on John Thirlwall and his tenants there and in Roughley, and also the ‘Grenehow’, valued at 20 merks, in Liddesdale recorded in a rental list for Douglas of Morton in the 1370s.
Greenhoose

It was owned by Elliot of Redheugh in at least the late 15th and early 16th centuries. It was one of 3 farms that Scott of Buccleuch claimed Elliot of Redheugh had falsely added to his charter; however, it was still owned by the Elliots in 1637. It was one of 3 farms given by the last Robert Elliot of Redheugh to his daughter Esther in about the 1640s. ‘Gulenfalt & Greehoime’ is listed on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls, with Francis Elliot, Arthur Beattie and Archibald Armstrong recorded there. It was owned by William Manderson according to the 1788 county valuation and the Land Tax Rolls of 1811, and valued (along with Leaugh) at £136 15s 8d. Walter Elliot was farmer there in 1840. William Dodd of Greenholm lived in Newcastleton in the 1860s and John Routledge was farmer there in 1868 (marked ‘Greeenoome’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map and also on Stobie’s 1770 map; it may be ‘Greenholles’ in 1612, ‘grenehoillis’ in 1613, ‘Greinhoilles’ in 1624, ‘Greinhoillis’ in 1637 and ‘Greenhoilis’ in 1675).

Greenhoose (green-hoose) n. Greenhouse, farm between Hassendean and Belses. It was once in Minto Parish, being part of the Hassendeanburn estate. However, in most records it was in Lilliesleaf Parish and was part of the lands of Raperlaw in the 1643 Land Tax Rolls, owned by Turnbulls and Davidsions. In 1678 it was partly owned by Ralph Davidson of Greenhouse (valued at £104) and part by Andrew Davidson (valued at £65). John Stewart and Walter Davidson were recorded there in 1694. Andrew Davidson paid tax for 13 windows there in 1748. In 1769 it was bought by Walter Turnbull of Firth from Andrew Davidson. In 1788 it was recorded as belonging to Robert Laidlaw in Kingleddoors, valued at £210 5s 6d. In 1797 James Turnbull was farmer there, when it was listed on the Horse Tax Rolls for Lilliesleaf Parish. In 1811 it is recorded that ‘Part of Davidson of Greenhouse’s Lands in Lilliesleaf’ had been acquired by Edgar Hunter and was then owned by William Riddell of Camieston; at the same time, Ralph Davidson’s part was valued at £104 and Andrew Davidson’s part at £65, both owned by Robert Laidlaw in Kingleddoors, as well as part of Davidson’s lands valued at about £37. Alexander Horsburgh was there in the 1860s.

The Green Hut (thu-green-hu’) n. name given to several small shops in Hawick over the years, particularly one near the top of the Loan on the right (once a chip shop, now closed), one built off Weensland Road near the top of Trinity Steps (also once a chip shop, and still flourishing as a convenience store), and one that sold ice-cream and other refreshments up the Park. Some of them have also been known as the ‘Wee Shop’.

green jersey (green- jer-zee) n. the dark green shirt worn by Hawick Rugby club since 1885 and considered a badge of honour.

the Green Kirk (thu-green-kirk) n. popular name for the Hawick secession church at Myreslawgreen, also known as the West End Meeting House. It was established by the Anti-Burgher congregation after they had feued a piece of ground in Myreslawgreen in 1765 or 1766. Its roots went back to 1741, from which time several secessionists from in and around Hawick had attended the congregation at Midlem, and the minister there preached every third Sunday at Hutleburn farm near Ettrickbridge. This continued until the Hawick congregation was established in 1763, led by James Scott, farmer at Boonraw. The manse was not built until 1768. The church later became the West United Secession Church, after the breach in the Associate Synod had been healed, and was also described as the United Presbyterian Chapel. The first building of 1763 was replaced in 1823 (and a stone plaque bearing that date still survives). It was plain and unassuming and ceased to be used as a church in the 1870s, becoming a Masonic Hall until about 1923. It was also used for dances in the 1930s and the War years, when it was affectionately known as ‘the Rabble’. Afterwards it became a saleroom run by Bert Leishman and was finally demolished in 1969 and is now the site of Myreslaw Court. The congregation meanwhile moved to Orrock Church, which was built 1872/4 (probably on ‘particater’ lands once owned by shoemaker Robert Oliver). The Museum has 2 old collection ladles from the church and a communion token exists from 1768, as well as a communion cup and flagon inscribed ‘United Associate Church, Hawick, 1769’. A roll Greenlaw green-law (green-lawn) arch. green-lawn (also greenie).

Greenlaw greens green-laws (greenz) farm just south of Newcastleton and north of Mangerton, on the same side of the Liddel. It is probably the ‘Grenys’ listed as a 3-shilling land in c.1376 rentals around Mangerton among the charters of the Douglasses of Morton. In 1541 it was valued at 10 shillings, with tenant Thomas Armstrong, ‘the Bul’. ‘Abie’ Armstrong from there was hung for murdering a blind man on Ancrum Bridge in 1623. Andrew Crozier ‘Jeans Andro’ was also there in 1623. It was possessed by Jock and Ninian Armstrong in 1667.

Greens greens (green) hill in the southern part of Southdean Parish, reaching a height of 368 m. It is north of the much higher Carlin Tooth, and now lies within Wauchope Forest. The ridge to the north-east is called Tamshiel Rig, and has the remains of an Iron Age fort. To the north-west, near what was called Coblaw Plantation are the remains of a settlement, consisting of an enclosure and foundations of 2 buildings. The site has been mutilated by forestry activity. To the west of this settlement was an old cairn, about 10 m across, now destroyed by a forestry road.

Greenlaw greens green-laws (greenz) farm just south of Newcastleton and north of Mangerton, on the same side of the Liddel. It is probably the ‘Grenys’ listed as a 3-shilling land in c.1376 rentals around Mangerton among the charters of the Douglasses of Morton. In 1541 it was valued at 10 shillings, with tenant Thomas Armstrong, ‘the Bul’. ‘Abie’ Armstrong from there was hung for murdering a blind man on Ancrum Bridge in 1623. Andrew Crozier ‘Jeans Andro’ was also there in 1623. It was possessed by Jock and Ninian Armstrong in 1667. In 1667 Walter Lorraine was tenant there, and also Walter Lorraine (possibly son of the previous Walter) in 1682. Hugh Beattie was tenant in 1682. In 1694 William Armstrong was tenant, with Simon Armstrong also listed there. It was surveyed in 1718 along with other properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch; at that time it consisted of 164 acres, bounded by a common to the east, Tweedden Burn to the south, the Liddel Water to the west and the lands of the Laird of Whithaugh to the north. The farm also had 22 acres of land on the other side of the Liddel Water, bounding on Millholm and it shared a common of 116 acres with the farms of Yethouse and Chingills. Robert Thomson was there in the early 18th century, followed by William Thomson. William Ogilvie was farmer there in 1797. William Scott was farmer in the first half of the 19th century. Little Ogilvie was stone mason there in 1851 (note that this is easily confused with Greens near Kershouse; it was ‘Grenys’ in 1541, ‘Greinis’ in 1623, ‘Greines’ in 1632 and ‘Greins’ in 1667 and 1694; it is marked on Blaeu’s c.1654 map and Stobie’s 1770 map). the Greens (thu-greenz) n. popular name for Hawick R.F.C. after the dark green jerseys they have worn since 1885. Also used to refer to Mansfield Park as a location or the team’s clubrooms – ‘...Lost your bonnet, and a’ that was left o’ your voice, As the Greens got the wummin’ try’ [DH]. Greenshields (green-sheeldz) n. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Agnes Deans and their children included: Janet (b.1684); and James (b.1687). James (17th C.) tenant in Birneyknow. He was recorded in 1684 on a long list of people declared as fugitives for refusing to conform to Episcopalanism. His name is recorded as ‘Greenshields’. He was probably related to the Covenanter John. James (17th C.) resident at Stobicote according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. James (17th C.) listed among those who subscribed to the fund for the new Kirk bell in Hawick in 1693/4. He was a resident of the west-side of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. He is probably the James recorded in 1687 when he was fined, along with a group of other men (including Steven, to whom he was surely related), for clandestinely removing their sheep from the Town’s flock, without paying the Town Herd. He may be the James, married to Margaret Scott, whose son James was baptised in Hawick in 1684. James (17th/18th C.) resident in Whithope in 1717 when his son John was baptised in Roberton Parish. Other children included: an unnamed son (b.1719); and James (b.1721). John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Isobel Scott and their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1677. John (d.1679) from Cavers Parish. He drowned on the ‘Crown of London’ when it shipwrecked off the Orkneys when carrying a cargo of Covenanters captured at Bothwell Bridge and bound for America. Robert (17th C.) resident in Minto Parish who appears in the Hearth Tax records of 1694. His name is written as ‘Greenshields’ and he is listed ‘with an kilne’, suggesting he was an artisan of some sort. Robert (17th/18th C.) candlemaker in Hawick. In 1702 he married Margaret Henry. His children included Christian (b.1703). Steven (17th/18th C.) quartermaster of the weavers in Hawick in 1693. In that year John Hardie was fined for pushing him out of his seat in the balcony of St. Mary’s Kirk, as well as pulling at his bonnet. He witnessed a baptism for John Thomson in Hawick in 1687. He is probably the Steven recorded in 1687 when he was fined, along with a group of other men (including James, to whom he was surely related), for clandestinely removing their sheep from the Town’s flock, without paying the Town Herd. He was listed as a weaver among those contributing to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. In 1694 he was ‘Steivan Greinsheils’ among those on the west-side of Hawick who paid the Hearth Tax. He is probably the Steven, son of Thomas and Janet Scott, who was born in Hawick in 1647. He is probably the Steven, married to Bessie Bridges, whose son Thomas was born in 1683, and perhaps also the Steven, married to a Rule, whose daughter Janet was baptised in 1687. in 1687. William (17th/18th C.) weaver in Hawick. In 1710 he was fined for fighting with William Hill (another weaver) in St. Mary’s Kirk. They apparently scuffled before the service (probably over seating) then struck at each other during the sermon. He could be the William whose daughter Marion was baptised in Hawick in 1692 (also written ‘Greensheils’, ‘Greenshills’, ‘Greenshels’, ‘Greenshield’, ‘Greensheils’, ‘Greenshills’, ‘Greensheils’ and variants).

Greenshiels (green-sheelsz) n. former lands in Castleton Parish, south-west of Foulshiels and west of Redheugh. It was listed on a rental roll of c.1376 in the ‘Quarterium de Ludne’. Thomas Armstrong was tenant there in 1535 when he was denounced as a rebel along with other Armstrongs. There are remains of a farmstead and related structures on both sides of the banks of Greensheils Sike. There are old boundary dykes defining the lands, including a field system and some rig lines. The farmstead consisted of at least 4 separate buildings, plus turf huts. The farm appears to have been abandoned during the 17th century. Further up the burn, on the eastern side there are 3 shieling-huts and an enclosure (it is ‘Greensheils’ in c.1376 and 1535 and marked ‘Greensheils’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map; note that it is easy to confused with Greens, south of Newcastleton).

Greenshills (greenz-hill) n. farm in Ashkirk Parish, recorded on the 1797 Horse Rolls, when James Johnstone was farmer. It is probably related to Grain Hill.

Greenside (green-sid) n. house on Main Street in Denholm, which held the Post Office in the 20th century, until 1966.

grieve (greev) n., arch. a farm manager or overseer.

Grieve (greev) n. Adam (16th C.) listed as ‘Adam Greife serwand in the brewhouse’ in the 1574 last testament of Sir Walter Scott. It is unclear whether he was from the Hawick area, like many others recorded there. Agnes nee Hardie (b.1815/6) resident at Hermitage Schoolhouse. She married farm worker John, and they were living at Brox in 1841. She was already a widow by 1851, and listed as a grocer in 1861. Her children included John, Agnes, Adam and Thomas. Alexander (1826–68) born in Jedburgh, son of Michael and Rachel Scott. He married Elizabeth Young Rutherford, daughter of Barbara Potts Young and possibly a Mr. Rutherford; she died in 1914, aged 77. The couple lived in Hawick for several years, then moved to Jedburgh, where he was foreman at Allars Mill. He was mill foreman living at Ladhope (near Galashiels) when he died. Their children were: Barbara (1853–1927), who died unmarried; Rachel (b.1855), who married railway guard James Mathieson; Michael (b.1858); Elizabeth (b.1861), who married stone mason James Russell; and Alexander (1868–26). His widow moved back to Hawick. Alexander (1868–1926) born in Hawick, he was son of Galashiels mill foreman Alexander and Elizabeth Young. He was born after his father’s early death. His uncle was Walter from Hawick. He was an actuary with the Hawick Savings Bank and manager of the Hawick Heritable Investment Bank, Ltd. He died unmarried and left several legacies to the town. Andrew (b.1821/2) seed merchant in the Cross Wynd in 1851. His wife was Janet and their children included James. Archibald (c.1775–1852) son of Walter and Janet Grieve. His father farmed at Easter Alemoor, Hangingshaw and also Perthshire, where he was born. He married Agnes Stephenson in Yarrow Parish in 1811. He died in Ohio, U.S.A. Arthur Charles (1876–93) 3rd son of Charles John of Braxholme Park. He served as a midshipman in the Royal Navy. He was on the H.M.S. Victoria off Tripoli when it collided with H.M.S. Camperdown during manoeuvres. Only 202 of the 718 men were rescued, and he himself drowned, with his older brother William Herbert on the nearby ‘Nile’ witnessing the whole thing. He and his brother have a memorial plaque in St. Cuthbert’s Church. Charles (18th/19th C.) resident at Newcastle-on-Tyne, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘ Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. He could be the labourer who married Margaret Oliver and whose son William died in 1872. Charles John (1841–1915) farmer at Braxholme Park, like his father. His twin brother James Alexander died at a young age. He was son of William and Eliza Anne Gordon. He received an L.L.B. from Cambridge University in 1866. He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1878. He was a church warden at St. Cuthbert’s and became a member of the Jedforest Club in 1898. In 1870 he married Elizabeth (1842–1914), 2nd daughter of Charles Alleyne Willing. Their children were:
Amy Francis (b.1871); James Wyndham Alleyne (1872–1939); Mary Evelyn (1873–1923); William Herbert (1874–1908), who died in a naval explodion in Queensferry; Arthur Charles (1875–93), who went down with the flag-ship ‘Victoria’ aged 17;

Betha Helen (1877–1937); Marion Catherine
(b.1878); Christina (1879–1945); Dorothy Forster
(b.1881); Charles Walter (1882–1929); Alexander Norman (1884–1920); Margaret Bruce (b.1885);
and Nigel Gordon (b.1889).

Charles Walter (1882–1929) farmer of Branxholme Park, son of Charles John, he was educated at Glenalmond School. He was President of Teviotdale Farmers’ Club and served in WWI as Squadron Sergeant-Major in the Lothians and Borders Horse. He was also a Church Warden at St. Cuthbert’s. He later lived at Westerdykes. He married a daughter of Thomas Anderson Laing. He was Acting Father in 1919, the first Common Riding after the war.

Christian nee Brydon (1784/5–1854) from Etrick Parish, she married Walter J. of Lang-well. After his death she moved into Hawick.
In 1851 she was an ‘Annuitant’ living at about 12 Buccleuch Street, and in Slater’s 1852 directory she is listed among the local gentry there.

Christopher (18th/19th C.) resident at Slaidhills in about 1822. His son William was born in Teviothead Parish in 1804. Christopher Murray real name of Hugh MacDiarmid.

(1788–1856) son of shepherd Robert and brother of Hawick slater Walter. He was born when his parents were living at Greensidehall. In 1820 he married Maragret Murray in Selkirk. He had his own slater’s and glazier’s business in Selkirk.
He died of cancer of the ear and was buried at Ashkirk.

Elliot
(c.1777–1858) born in Fortinggall, Perth son of local farmer Walter and Janet Grieve. He was thus related to both the Colters-cleuch and Deanburnhaugh branches of the family. He farmed at Huntly in Yarrow. In 1826 he married Harriet Turnbull (d.1857), recorded in Yarrow Parish; she died in 1857, aged 67.
Their children included: Walter (b.1828/9); and Janet (of Jessie, 1832–77), who married Robert Grieve, tenant in Over Huntly. He was at Lower Huntly in 1841 and Outer Huntly in 1851. He died at Over Huntly and is buried at Borthwick Waas, where the gravestone appeared to say he died in 1852, aged 75.

Elliot
(c.1784– 1874) son of John and Elizabeth Paisley. His children were born in Castleton parish, some of them at Blinkbonny. He married Janet Elliot
(c.1777–1825) and their children were: Elizabeth (Lizzie, 1812–1907), who married Edward Dun; John (1806–38); Janet (1808–1906), who mar-rried Ninian Elliot; Sameul (b.1808), who probably died young; William Elliot (1810–80); Christian (or Catherine, b.1814), who married George Laidlaw; and Elliot (b.1816) and Ninian (b.1818), who died in infancy. The family emigrated to Canada, and lived in Westminster Township, Middlesex County, Ontario. He secondly married Jane Baty.

George
of Easter Swanshiel (b.1731) buried in Hobkirk kirkyard. He probably acquired his farm from the Turnbells who had owned it earlier, perhaps through being related. The session register says his funeral had use of the ‘new plush moarcloth’. He was succeeded by James, probably his brother.

George (1779–1841) eldest son of John and Isabella Turnbull. His father farmed at Craik and Hoscote. He was christened in Robert-ton Parish. He inherited Craik, as well as Outersside and Meadshaw. He is recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as owner of 3 work horses at ‘Creak’, as well as 1 saddle horse. He also paid the dog tax at Craik in 1797. He farmed along with his brother Walter until the collapse of the wool market around 1817. He is also said to have farmed as Creich in Sutherland, but it is unclear if this is an error for ‘Craik’. He moved to Edinburgh in 1832 emigrated to Quebec, Canada with his family. In about 1809 he married Minto
(b.1790), daughter of William Bell and Markie Minto. His children were: Marky Minto (1810– 46), who married Charles M. Murray; Isabella (1812–1901), who married John William Schneider; Jessie (b.1814); John, who died young after wandering off in the winter; William Bell (1818– 85), who married Elizabeth Fairbairn; and another John (b.1820), who married Nancy Sweet.
He is buried in Montreal.

George
(1805/6–49) toll-keeper at Hawick’s Eastern Toll at the time of the 1841 census, moving to the North (or Dove-mount) Toll Bar later. He married Margaret Lambert in 1828, and she was the sole toll-keeper by the 1851 census. Their children included William (b.1831), James (b.1833), Isabella (b.1835) and Jane (b.1838). He was probably the George born to William and Jean Manuel in Lilliesleaf Parish in 1801.

George
(b.1818/9) from Et-trick Parish, he was farmer at West Buccleuch.
He was listed as a ‘Stock Farmer’ there in 1861.
In 1868 he was recorded as farmer at Buccleuch and Ramseycleuch.

George

James, farmer at West Bucleuch, where he himself was farmer later. He was born in Innerleithen and his mother was Christina Glendinning. He married Violet Glendinning, who died at Drinkstone farm in 1962, aged 76. They had daughters Williamena Mary Forster and Jean. He is buried at Ettrick. Gideon (18th C.) son of Walter in Coltersculeuch. He married Isabel Laidlaw. Their children were: Walter (b.1742); and Margaret (b.1744). He may be the Gideon, son of Walter, who was one of 2 young men carried off from the Auld Brig during the great flood of 1767. Isabella née Laidlaw (1764–1857) daughter of David Laidlaw from Highchers. In 1785 she married Robert, shepherd at Harden, Heap, Toddshaw, Greensidehall, etc. She had at least 7 children and died aged almost 93. James (16th C.) described about 1580 as factor to the Countess of Bothwell, i.e. Margaret Douglas, widow of Walter Scott of Branxholme. This may have been at Milsington. He is said to have been the ancestor of Walter, first known Grieve tenant of Branxholme Park, as well as the Grieves who farmed Commonside. It is unclear if he was an original ‘grieve’, however, a family tradition says that the local family was descended from the McGregor Clan. James (16th/17th C.) recorded as ‘in Bowmanhill’, which may be ‘Bowmanhill’ near Teviothead. He was foreman of the jury in 1612 which heard the case involving the death of Jock Elliot while imprisoned in the steeple of Hawick Kirk.

His son William inherited his lands of Brotherton in 1619, when he was ‘in Bowminhill’. James (17th C.) married Margaret Laidlaw in 1648. Their son James was born the following year, and could have been James of Commonside. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Beatrice Gledstains and their son John was born in 1670. James (17th C.) tenant in Hyndhope (but it is unclear which one). The will of his wife Isobel Anderson is recorded in 1681. James (17th C.) tenant for the Duchess of Buccleuch at Linhope in the Hearth Tax records in 1694. He could be the same as one of the other contemporaneous Jameses. James (17th C.) shepherd at Priesthaugh in 1694 according to the Hearth Tax rolls. James (17th C.) tenant in Ruletown in 1694 according to the Hearth Tax rolls. He paid tax on 4 hearths there ‘for himself & cottars’. James (17th C.) recorded among the poor of Hassendean Parish in 1694, when he was at Hassendean Mains. James ‘Wester James’ (17th/18th C.) tenant in Commonside. He was listed at Commonside on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls, when he paid tax for 2 hearths. He married Janet Elliot in Hawick Parish. Their children included: Helen (b.1700), who married John Anderson; Elspeth (b.1701), who married William Grieve, probably a cousin, and had a daughter Joan, who married Dr. James Mounsey; James (b.1703), who became a doctor in Russia; and John, who appears to have died young. In 1704 he witnessed a baptism for Robert Rodger in Whitcheesters. He could be the same as the James in Commonside who died in 1712. James (1669–1712) younger son of William, farmer in Commonside. If he really died in 1712 (as appears on the gravestone in Borthwick Waas), then another James Grieve must have taken over from him as tenant of Commonside. His son William was farmer at Coltersculeuch and Southfield. James (17th/18th C.) tenant farmer at Commonside. His family had farmed there for many years. However, he appears to be different from the earlier James, who died in 1712. The rental records for ‘Teviotdale Head’ mention James senior and junior in Commonside in the period 1715–18. He is mentioned in a marriage record of 1720 for his servant at Commonside, Agnes Falside. He retired about 1724, after which the lease of Commonside was taken by Walter Scott, later of Wauchope. He became an elder of Hawick Kirk in 1723. In 1723 he also informed the Session about the ‘Fiftie merks, left in legacie by Margaret Grieve, his aunt’ (this may suggest that they were both children of Walter of Branxholme Park). Either he or perhaps his father was the James who ‘mortified’ 100 ‘merks’ for the poor of Hawick Parish, this being given out (mainly to those from the country parts) in 1715. He could have been the James who married Beatrix Gledstains in Hawick in about 1669. He could have been the James born to James and Margaret in Hawick in 1649 or the son of John and Beatrix Gledstains born in Hawick in 1646. James of Easter Swanshiel (d.1733) probably brother of George, who was Laird before him. However, he only held the lands for a couple of years after his brother. He is buried in Hobkirk kirkyard. After his death Easter Swanshiel was sold and annexed to Wolfelee. James (1684–1781) son of Walter and Blanche Borthwick. Like his father, he was tenant farmer at Branxholme Park, as well as Todshawhaugh. He is probably the James who is recorded being in arrears for the rent of Todshawhaugh in the period 1712–18. The ‘servitrix’ to his children, Dorothy MacVittie, was married in 1721. In 1734 he is probably the James who witnessed the baptism.
of Gilbert Elliot (his grandson) in Hawick. He is recorded as tenant at Todshawhaugh in 1735. He re-leased Todshawhaugh from the Buccleuch Estates in 1744, but was recorded being in arrears shortly afterwards. He is recorded in a farming record of Robert Elliot (in Hermitage) in 1749. In 1751 he was renting 'Whelmes' as well as Todshawhaugh. There are letters of his to Scott of Harden in the 1760s in the National Archives. He was probably the James in 'Branxholme-Park' listed as a subscriber to Caw's 'Poetical Museum' (1784), presumably signing up years before it was published. He married Helen, daughter of John Laing of Westerkirk. His children included: Walter (1710–99), the eldest son, who succeeded as tenant in Branxholme Park; Robert (1725–83), who married Jean Curle; William (1726–86), tenant in Southfield; James (1737–73), who married Janet, daughter of William Scott of Woll; Jane, who married Capt. John Elliot of Southfield and Brugh; Anne; Margaret; and Fanny. He and several of his family are buried at Borthwick Waas. James in Commonside (c.1694–1772) eldest son of Walter in Colterscleuch. In 1722 he married Helen (1702–84), daughter of Gilbert Elliot of Brugh and Agnes Turnbull; she died at Broadlee in 1784, aged 84, and is buried at Borthwick Waas. As well as Commonside, he also farmed at Soudenrig and Over Huntly. The following children (baptised in Cavers Parish) are probably mostly his: Helen (b.1720); Janet, who died young; Isabella (b.1723); Robert (b.1724); William (b.1724); Walter (again, b.1725); Agnes (b.1726); Gilbert (b.1728); James (b.1729); William (again, b.1729); Walter (b.1729); William (again, b.1731); Walter (again, b.1733); John (b.1735); Janet (again, 1737–1816), who married Walter Grieve, son of Robert in Deanburnhaugh; Thomas (b.1739); William (again, b.1741); Margaret (b.1743); and possibly an unnamed son (b.1743). He is buried in Borthwick Waas cemetery, where the headstone said he was 78 years old. His children James (d.1751, transcribed as 2 years old, but it would make more sense if this was 22) and Agnes are also commemorated on the same stone, as well as John and 'brethren and 1 sister died while children'. Dr. James (1703–63) son of tenant farmer James (possibly called 'Wester James') and Jenet Eliot, he was born in Hawick Parish. He also had an older sister, Elspeth (b.1701), who married William Grieve, and whose daughter Joan married Dr. James Mounsey. It is unclear how he was related to other local branches of the Grieve family, but it is possible they were descended from Grieves in Commonside. Note that secondary sources describing his life are often contradictory. He studied medicine at Edinburgh University, graduating with an M.D. in 1733. His first position was in Russia, as a doctor at the Kazan and Siberian factories. By 1744 he was physician to the St. Petersburg land hospital, as well as to a guard's hospital. In 1743 he married Elizabeth Tamesz (1725–58), said to be either Dutch or German. He then became St. Petersburg city physician, Deputy Director of the Russian Medical Chancery and physician to Empress Elizabeth, before transferring to Moscow as its city physician. In 1751 he was elected a Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians in Edinburgh. He returned to Britain in 1757 to arrange the education of his son James Tamesz (1744–87), practised medicine in London, but returned to Russia in 1761. He then appears to have been working for John Hobart, Earl of Buckinghamshire, the British Ambassador. He is said to have received a snuff-box inscribed 'Presented by the Empress Catherine to her body physician James Grieve' in French. He translated 'The History of Kamtschatka, and the Kurilski Islands' (1764, facsimile editions 1963 and 1973). His only son, James Tamesz inherited his mother’s fortune, became a Moscow businessman, purchased property in Scotland and Surrey and is buried at Bath Abbey. He himself died in Moscow, although some sources suggest he was the physician at Charterhouse Square who died there in 1773. James (1713/14–1801) gardener at Newton. He is buried in Bedrule kirkyard. James (1737–73) son of James and brother of Walter, tenant at Branxholme Park. In 1771 he married Janet, daughter of William Scott of Woll. There is a James and Janet Scott to whom several children were born in Yarrow in the 1770s and 1780s; if this is him, then he died after 1790. He is probably the James 'Junior' who witnessed a baptism for William in Southfield (presumably his brother) in 1763. James (18th C.) recorded in Harden in 1772 when his son James was baptised. Probably the same man is described as 'the now deceased Mr. James Grieve' in 1773 when his son William was baptised. He could be the same as one of the other Jameses. James (1751–1838) son of Walter, from whom he succeeded as tenant of Branxholme Park. He is probably the ‘James Grieve, Hawick’ who subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784), with his grandfather James in Branxholme Park listed separately. He subscribed to John Learmont’s book of poetry in 1791. He is probably the James recorded at Todshawhaugh on the 1787–92 Horse Tax Rolls, as well as at Branxholme Park in 1788 and 1782–94. He is recorded in 1797 as tenant at Branxholme Park, with 11 farm horses. He farmed on a large scale, also being tenant of Riccarton, Braidlie and Sundhope (in Liddesdale), Todshawhaugh and Harden (on the Borthwick), Buccleuch (in Ettrick) and Smale (in Northumberland). He was one of the trustees for the estate of William Oliver ‘Auld Cash’ (who died in 1808). Extracts from his diary were published in the Transactions in 1950. In 1821 he made some notes relating to the characters in the song ‘The Bonnie Lass o’ Branxholm’. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. In the 1832 electoral roll he was listed as a joint tenant (with William) of the Duke of Buccleuch’s lands at Branxholme Park. He is said to have told his son that in the past Branxholme was so heavily wooded that a man could ride on a white horse from Todshawhaugh to the Castle Hill without anyone being able to see the horse. He married Agnes Hall (and not Ann Sibbald, who married his cousin James), and she died in 1836. Their children were: William Oliver, tenant in Branxholme Park; and Thomas of Skelfhill. Note that he should not be confused with his cousin James, who farmed at Branxholme Braes at about the same time. James (18th C.) postillion (i.e. carriage driver) at Cavers in 1786, when he was working for George Douglas.

James (18th/19th C.) farmer at ‘Moorfarm’ (in Wilton Parish) according to the Horse Tax Rolls of 1797. James (b.1763) son of William, farmer in Southfield. He was tenant at Roan in Castleton Parish, and was recorded on the 1788–97 Horse Tax Rolls, and in 1797 when he owned 4 farm horses. He was also taxed for having a greyhound in 1797. He was also said to be of ‘Roandead’. James (c.1771–1862) son of Walter, farmer at Easter Alemoor, Hangingshaw, etc. In 1803 he married Janet Brodie in Yarrow. Their children included Jessie, who married Dr. William Buchan Lorraine (who was born in Selkirk). James, J.P. (1773–1855) son of Robert, farmer at Stonedge, and Jean Curle. He was grandson of James, tenant in Todshawhaugh and Branxholme Park, and cousin of James who was contemporary tenant in Branxholme Park. He himself was farmer at Branxholme Braes. He is probably the James who was renting Branxholme Town and Castlehill farms in 1792 and who was renting Branxholme Town in the period 1834–43. He was recorded at Flex on the Horse Tax Rolls of 1792–94. In 1797 he is recorded in the Farm Horse Tax list as tenant of Branxholme Braes and Flex, with 7 horses for farm use. He also paid tax in 1797 on 3 non-working dogs. He was one of the trustees for the estate of William Oliver ‘Auld Cash’ (who died in 1808). He was among the first to be listed on the ‘Donations’ page for the Hawick Savings Bank in 1815. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘ Beauties of the Border’ in 1821 and Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. In 1841 he is listed with 2 servants and in 1851 he was farmer of 2790 acres, with 10 farm labourers and 6 servants in his house. In 1797 he married Ann Sibbald (1779/80–1840); she may have been daughter of John Sibbald, younger of Pinnacle. Their children were: Ann (1798/9–1832); Jean (1801–22); Robert (1802–94); John (1803–92); William (1805–51), who worked in Liverpool; James (1807–62); Charlotte (1810–27); Margaret (c.1812–64), who died in Canada; Walter (b.1814/5); and Charles (1815/6–36). He and his wife are buried at Borthwick Waas. James (b.1775/6) farmer at Wollrig. In 1861 he was there farming 480 acres and employing 4 labourers. His wife was Margaret and their children included James, Jane and Helen. James (d.1859) shepherd at Birneyknowe. He married Janet Rennick, who was sister of Benjie, a well-known mole-catcher and poacher. Their children included: Thomas (b.1820); and James (b.1821), tailor at Bonchester Bridge. He and his wife later rented a cottage on Gatehousecote farm and both died in the same year at a farm at Hawthornside.
1837–46. He was a journeyman tailor in Newcastle and elsewhere, settling down as a tailor at Bonchester Bridge about the time he got married. It is said that about this time he resolved to become a teetotaller and struggled to overcome his earlier craving for drink. He was appointed to the Hobkirk Parish Council when it was first formed, and remained on it until his death. He also served as officer to the Hobkirk Heritors. He married Helen (or ‘Ellen’) Hall in Hobkirk in 1852; she was daughter of a shepherd at Gatehousecote. They had 7 daughters and 1 son: Helen (or ‘Ellen’, b.1852), who married W. Minto, cab proprietor in Hawick; Janet (b.1855), who married Walter Turnbull, carpenter in Bonchester Bridge; Isabella (b.1858), who married T. McGowan; Margaret (b.1860), a dressmaker, who worked for the Post Office; Mary Telfer (b.1863), who died young; Wilhelmina Elliot (b.1865), married Thomas Hogg from Selkirk; Agnes Rutherford (b.1868), married A. Bruce from Musselburgh; and James (b.1871), who was also a tailor. James (1833/4–1904) farmer at West Bucleuch. He married Christina Glendinning, daughter of Archibald and Violet Beattie. Their son Thomas died in the South African War in 1902. They also had daughters Agnes Margaret and Violet and sons William (who farmed at Stobswood, near Duns), George (who also farmed West Bucleuch) and Andrew (of Flass, Westruther). James (c.1843–80) only son of Robert and grandson of James, farmer in Branxholme Braes. He married Mary Turnbull (c.1846–90). Their children were: Thomas, who died young; Robert (1865–1920); and Mary Turnbull Pott (d.1903). James Wyndham Alleyne (1872–1939) eldest son of Charles John, farmer at Branxholme Park. He was born in Robertson Parish. He served with the Indian Forestry Service. In 1938 he was fined 10 shillings after his dog ‘arrested itself’ by walking into the police station, after being picked up 2 times earlier for not having a collar and tag. He lived at Beechwood Beech, Alton, Hants. He married Marjorie Patmore. Jane Little nee Hay (b.1825/6) daughter of Robert Hay and Ann Little. She married Robert Grieve (d.1853), who was a solicitor’s clerk. She took over the running of the Crown Inn in 1848 after the deaths of her father and then her mother. She continued there after the death of her husband, moving later to a smaller hotel at 8 Bridge Street, where she lived with her daughter Annie Little. In 1863 she presented the Museum with a toddy ladle that had been used at the Common Riding dinner for 130 years. She appears to have gone bankrupt in 1864, her assets being sequestrated. Janet (17th C.) resident of Colterscleeuch on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. Janet (17th C.) listed at Lairhope among ‘The poor in Hauick Paroich’ on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Janet (17th C.) recorded among the poor of Hassetdean Parish in 1694, when she was at Horsleyhill. Joan (b.1738) daughter of William and sister of Dr. John, she was born in Hawick. She was also known as Joanna. She was sent to live with her uncle, Dr. James, in Russia (although some sources mistakenly suggest she was his daughter). In 1754 she married Dr. James Mounsey (1710–73), who was a surgeon in Russia, became known as a naturalist and was elected to the Royal Society. Her husband returned to Scotland in 1762, buying the estate of Rammerscales in Dumfriesshire (and being one of the first to raise crops of rhubarb there). He long believed that the agents of Empress Catherine were out to get him, and is said to have faked his own death. His last Russian descendant died during the siege of Leningrad in 1942 (although these may be from an earlier family of his). She remarried after his death. John (15th C.) recorded at Ferniehirst in 1494/5. John Hervey in Fairnilee had remission for several crimes, including stealing 30 sheep from him. His name is written ‘Johanne greiff’. John (17th C.) married ‘Jenet Inglish’. Their son James was born in Hawick in 1644. This could have been James of Commonside, although there are other possibilities. John (17th C.) tenant in Eilrig. His will is recorded in 1684. He was surely related to Robert, who was there at the same time. He may be the John, married to Margaret Scott, whose children baptised in Hawick Parish included Walter (b.1682). John (17th/18th C.) tenant of Crurie near Eskdalemuir. He married Helen, daughter of Walter Grieve in Colterscleeuch, who was said to be his cousin. He was thus presumably directly related to the Grieves of the Branxholme and Borthwick areas. His son Walter farmed at Airswood, and he had another son, John, from whom descended farmers at Deoraine and Bowhill. John (b.c.1741) son of Walter and Janet Anderson. He lived in Castleton Parish, specifically at Park, where most of his children were born. In 1767 he married Elizabeth Alexandra (b.1741), daughter of Walter Paisley and Margaret Dalgleish. Their children included: Elliot (1784–1874), who emigrated to Ontario; Margaret (b.1768), who may have married John...

dered mare’s milk. He practised medicine in London, and was elected to 15 separate medical, scientific and antiquarian societies, including the Royal Society. He returned to Russia with his family in 1798, acting as court physician to Emperor Paul I. He (and 2 other Scots) performed the autopsy on Paul’s body after his assassination in 1801. He was then physician to the family of Emperor Alexander I. In 1792 he married Rebecca Kinnersley (1771–1811). Their daughter Eliza Emma married Guy Lennox Prendergast and they had at least one other child, Maria Augusta. He died of a stroke in St. Peersburg and was buried there. John (18th C.)
made Helen Cathrae. Their children Janet (b.1775) and Alexander (or perhaps Alexandra, b.1778) were baptised in Hawick Parish. John

He was farmer at Craik according to the 1787–94

Horse Tax Rolls. In Roberton in 1778 he mar-rried Isabella or ‘Bell’ (1757–1835), daughter of Walter Turnbull and Dorothea Chisholme; she was born at Firth and died at Meadshaw. Their children were: Margaret (b.1777); George (1779– 1841), who was a schoolmaster; Walter J. (1781– 1861); Dolly (1783–1806); Jane (1785–1835), who married William Moffat of Garwald; John, who died in infancy; and Isabella (c.1789–c.1831), who married David Ballantyne. He died at Craik and is buried along with several family members, commemorated on the same gravestone as the Potts of Hoscote. John (18th C.) married Isabel Pott in Hawick Parish in 1785. John (18th C.) farmer at Hartwoodmyres according to the Horse Tax Rolls of 1785–91. John (18th C.) wright in Hawick.
His son William died in 1798 and an unnamed child in 1805. In 1809 his son John died in Hawick Parish; either he or his son was ‘lang John’.
John (18th/19th C.) farmer at Blackburnfoot in Castleton Parish, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He could be the John from Castleton who subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. John (b.c.1770) son of Robert, who farmed at Easter Alemoor and elsewhere. He had a twin brother Walter. He mar-rried Helen Watson in 1812 and Helen Grieve in 1822. He lived in Edinburgh. His children were:
Jessie (b.1814); Walter (b.1816); John (b.1819);
Helen; Thomas; and Robert. John (b.1775/6) corn dealer who lived at Gledsnest. He was there from at least the 1820s. He was probably the John at Cotlerscleugh who subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. He was recorded there on the 1841 census. He married Jean Hume and their children included: Robert (b.1819); Peter (b.1821); John (b.1823); Walter (b.1827), Betsy (b.1829); William; Isabella; Jean; and Mary. Most of his children were born in Cavers Parish. John (1800–80) wright of (Stobs) Woodfoot, son of shepherd Robert and brother of Walter. In 1841 and 1851 he was at Birkwood Foot (presumably Stobs Woodfoot) and was described in 1851 as a master carpenter. Along with his son Robert he started a coach-building business in Havelock Street. He was a member of Allars Kirk in Hawick. He married Elizabeth Glendinning in 1820 and after her death married Janet, daughter of James Cranston and Margaret Mitchellhill, in 1838. Together they had 14 children, many of whom lived long lives in the Hawick area. They were: Isabella, who married Kirkton joiner Andrew Scott; Agnes; Robert, who married Elizabeth Turnbull in Hobkirk; Helen; Elizabeth (‘Betsy’ or ‘Betty’), who married John Lewis and later John Fleming, both joiners, and later in life had a grocer’s shop on the Howegate; Margaret, who married James Christie in Hawick; John, who died of consumption; Catherine, who possibly married David Ballantyne in Hawick; James; Walter, emigrated to Victoria, Australia, married Elizabeth miller and lived to the age of 91; Helen or ‘Ellen’, named after her recently deceased half-sister, married gamekeeper Thomas Simpson; and William, who was a joiner in Havelock Street, but died aged 23; David, also a joiner in Havelock Stree, died aged 22; and Christina, who died in infancy. John (1803–92) 2nd son of James, farmer at Branxholme Braes. He was farm overseer at Howpasley. He married Mary (b.1804), daughter of Adam Glendinning. Their children were: Elizabeth (1827–96), who married William Beattie; James (b.1828), who married Mary Brown; Ann (b.1832); Robert (1833–1913), who emigrated to New Zealand; Margaret (b.1846/7); William (b.1839/40); John (b.1841); Adam (b.1845); Charlotte Mary Ann (b.1848); Adam (b.1851); Stephen (b.1852); John, who died in infancy; Margaret (b.1853) who married shoemaker Peter Fairbairn; Lewis and later John Fleming, both joiners, and in life had a grocer’s shop on the Howegate; Margaret, who married James Christie in Hawick; John, who died of consumption; Catherine, who possibly married David Ballantyne in Hawick; James; Walter, emigrated to Victoria, Australia, married Elizabeth miller and lived to the age of 91; Helen or ‘Ellen’, named after her recently deceased half-sister, married gamekeeper Thomas Simpson; and William, who was a joiner in Havelock Street, but died aged 23; David, also a joiner in Havelock Stree, died aged 22; and Christina, who died in infancy. John (1803–92) 2nd son of James, farmer at Branxholme Braes. He was farm overseer at Howpasley. He married Mary (b.1804), daughter of Adam Glendinning. Their children were: Elizabeth (1827–96), who married William Beattie; James (b.1828), who married Mary Brown; Ann (b.1832); Robert (1833–1913), who emigrated to New Zealand; Margaret (b.1846/7); William (b.1839/40); John (b.1841); Adam (b.1845); Charlotte Mary Ann (b.1848); and Helen (b.1851). Katherine (1837–1916) daughter of Thomas and Marion Margaret Dickson. She helped plan the planting of shrubs at the Borthwick Waas cemetery, along with their sister Marion. She married David Ballantyne in Hawick in 1853. Margaret (b.1810/11) born in Galashiels, she was married to George, toll-keeper at the Eastern Toll in Hawick at the 1841 census. Her husband died in 1849 and by the 1851 census she was toll-keeper at Wilton Place North Bar. She lived there with her daughters Isabella and Jane and servant Betsy Waugh. She could have been the Margaret Lambert who married George Grieve in Lilliesleaf in 1828. Marion Fisher (1831–1921) daughter of Thomas, farmer at Skelfhill, and Marion Margaret Dickson. Along with her sister Katherine and Robert Noble of Borthwickbrae, she planned the shrubbery around Borthwick Waas Cemetery in 1895. She also left money in her will for the upkeep of the cemetery. She could be the Miss Grieve of Skelfhill who donated Roman artefacts from Cologne to the Museum in 1863, in addition to a shrike. Michael (b.1779/80) wool-spinner in Hawick. He married Rachel Scott, and she died in 1851, aged 64. Their children included: Janet (b.c.1814), who married shoemaker Peter Fairbairn; Elizabeth (c.1815–88), who died in Hawick Poorhouse; Walter (b.c.1816), who married Mary Oliver; John (b.c.1817), also a woollen spinner; Rachel (b.c.1822); Mary (b.c.1824–56), who died unmarried; Alexander (b.1826), mill foreman in Galashiels; Margaret (b.1829), who probably died young; and Christina (b.1830), who married tailor William Milner. Michael (c.1842–1912) son of Walter. He left Hawick in 1874 to work in hosiery manufacturing in Leicester and retired to Queensborough. He married Isabella Scott in Hawick in 1866. Their children were: Walter (b.1867); Maggie Scott (b.1869); Thomas Scott, who became senior partner of T. Grieve & Co., Ltd., hosiery latch-needle manufacturers of Leicester, inventing the fashioning needle; Adam (b.1872); William Helm (b.1874); Mary (b.1875); Janet (b.1877); Herbert (b.1878); Isabella (b.1879); Agnes (b.1882); and John (b.1886). Michael Anderson (1858–1919) son of Adam and Jane Anderson, he was a joiner in Newcastleton. In 1887 he married Margaret (1865–1930), daughter of Adam Nichol and Esther Hardie. Their children were Adam Nichol (b.1887) and Christina (b.1891). Norman William (1852–1936) youngest son of William Oliver, farmer at Branxholme Park, from his 2nd marriage with Sarah (or Elisa) Clarke (nee Wagstaff). He was ‘formerly of Eskdale and Liddesdale’, then was on the boards of several tea and rubber companies in what was then Ceylon, but was living in East Grinstead in 1891. He compiled some information about his family history in 1893. He married Charlotte Adelaide, daughter of George Hamilton Verity. Their children were William Robert, Christina Verite, Ruth Marion and Elsie Wagstaff. He died at West Heath in Surrey. He is commemorated at Borthwick Waas Cemetery. Norman W. (19th/20th C.) said to be a native of Hawick and rugby internationalist, who trained as a doctor and moved to New Zealand. In 1928 he gave £2,000 for a maternity home in Hawick, to be named after Earl Haig. It is possible this is confusion between Norman William Grieve and James Norman Grieve Davidson. Robert (16th/17th C.) farmer in 1609 when he was one of a large number of tenants of Sir Robert Scott of Thirlestane and others who were bound not to reset Walter Scott of Headshaw and others. It is unclear where he was farmer, or if he was the same as Robert in Commonside. Robert (17th C.) described as ‘in Commonside’ in 1632 when he and several others feued the lands of Westbarns from Thomas Hamilton, Lord Binning. He may have been father of Walter in Branxholme Park and William in Commonside. Robert (17th C.) tenant in Commonside. In the 1686 confirmation of lands to Anne, Duchess of Buccleuch, it is described how the lands of Wester Winds were Grieve

'sometimes possesst' by him, and he also occupied Dryden, Easter Winds, Commonside, Nether Croft and Hoghill. He was presumably related to the earlier Robert in Commonside. Robert (17th C.) tenant in Eilrig. His will is recorded in 1686. He was surely related to John, who was there at the same time. He may be the Robert who (along with Walter) witnessed a baptism for John in Hawick Parish in 1682. Robert (17th C.) tenant in Teindside, whose testament was listed at Peebles Commissariot in 1686. He may be the Robert who (along with Thomas Borthwick, suggesting the countryside south of the Town) witnessed a baptism for Robert Laidlaw in Hawick Parish in 1676. Robert (c.1690–1782) tenant in Deanburnhaugh. It is unclear how he was related to the other local Grieves. It is possible his father was James. His children were: James; Walter d.(1822) of Over Huntly; and Janet (b.1737).
He died at Alemoor. Robert (1725–85) son of James, farmer in Todshawaugh and Branxholme Park. He was tenant farmer at Stonedge. He married Jean Curle in Roberton Parish in 1772 and she died in 1814, aged 76. James (1773– 1855), farmer in Branxholme Braes, was their son.
They are buried in Borthwick Waas. It is unclear if they had any other children. Robert (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isabel Scott and their son Walter was baptised in 1763. The witnesses were Thomas Miller and George Kedie. Robert (18th C.) leather-dresser in Hawick. He was a subscriber to Caw's 'Poetical Museum' (1784). He may be the same as one of the contemporary Roberts. Robert (1741– 1829) son of William. He succeeded his father as tenant in Southfield and also tenant Hawick Shiel. He paid the Horse Tax at Southfield in 1794 and 1797 and the Dog Tax in 1797. He mar-rried Jane Huggan (1754/5–1830), who died in Lilliesleaf. Their children included: Mary (b.1765);
James (b.1773); Agnes (b.1780), who married Thomas Oliver, farmer in Lilliesleaf; and Walter John (b.1787), tenant in Southfield and Hawick Shiel. Robert (18th C.) recorded as farmer at Harwood in Hobkirk Parish on the 1789–92 Horse Tax Rolls. He was succeeded at Harwood by Walter, who was probably his son or brother. He may be the same as one of the other Roberts. Robert (18th C.) paid the cart tax in Lilliesleaf in 1787–89. Robert (b.1764) son of William, farmer in Southfield and Margaret Elliot. He was a merchant in Leith. Robert (d.1814) shepherd at Harden, Heap, Todshaw, Greensidehall and elsewhere. In 1785 he married Isabella, daughter of David Laidlaw from Highchesters; she died in 1857, aged 92. Their children were: Walter, who was a successful slater and plumber in Hawick; Robert (b.1790), also a shepherd; Margaret (b.1792), born at Heap; Isabel (b.1794), born at Todshaw, who married shepherd Robert Anderson; David (b.1788), born at Greensidehall; Agnes, who married slater William Scott; and John, who was a wright at Stobs Woodfoot. He died at Alton and was buried in Wilton Kirkyard. Robert (1790–1862) 2nd son of shepherd Robert. He also worked as a shepherd. He married Janet, daughter of Robert Glendinning and Isabella Murray in Yarrow in 1817 (although she had been born in Hobkirk Parish). Their children included Robert, who married Margaret Allan and then Sarah Cumingham and died in Hawick Poorhouse. In 1861 he was recorded as an agricultural labourer at Old Belses, with wife Janet and children Jean, Margaret and David. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Leith who subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He must have had a local connection. Robert (19th C.) Clerk of the Course at the Common Riding Races in the 1840s. He may be the same as one of the other local Roberts. Robert (b.1801/2) shepherd at Slaidhills, above Teindside. He had earlier lived in Bedrule Parish. In 1861 he was a retired shepherd, living at Elliotfield. His wife was Elizabeth ('Betty') and their children included Margaret (b.1827), John (b.1832), Ann H., Esther, Walter, Archibald, Elizabeth and Margaret (again).
By 1861 he was a retired shepherd living with his wife at Elliotfield. He could have been the Robert who married Elizabeth Cavers in 1822/3.
Robert (1802–85) eldest son of James, farmer at Branxholme Braes. He farmed at Whitchester and later took over Branxholme Braes. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He is recorded at Whitchesters in 1841 and 1851 (when he farmed 1000 acres and employed
9 labourers) and at Branxholme Braes in 1861
(when he farmed 1200 acres and employed 8 men) and 1868. In 1833 he married Mary Pott (1804– 94). Their only child was James (c.1843–80), who married Mary Turnbull. Robert (1818/9–1853) of the Crown Inn in Hawick. Born at Teviot-head. He trained as a solicitor's clerk, but was recorded as keeper of the Crown Inn in 1851 and in Slates' 1852 directory. He married Janet Hay, dughter of the former proprietor of the Crown.
Their children included: Robert Hay; and Ann Little, who was a governess. He died aged about 34 and his wife carried on at the Crown Hotel until 1866. Robert (1818–72) son of Walter John, farmer at Southfield. He spent about 12 years in Australia, returning to Scotland about 1851. He took over as tenant of Southfield when his father died in 1861. In 1863 he married Christina Gray (1844–80). Their children were: Walter John (1865–1948), who also farmed Southfield; William Gray (b.1866), who emigrated to Denver, Colorado; Robert Elliot (b.1868), who went to New Zealand; John Wright (b.1869), who also went to New Zealand; and James Christian (b.1872), also New Zealand. It appears there were no descendants of the 3 brothers who went to the southern hemisphere. The family are commemorated at Borthwick Waas. Robert (1826–1907) son of John, elder in Allars Kirk for 50 years, and grandson of Robert, who lived at several farms in Wilton. His mother was Elizabeth Glendinning, and he was born in Wilton. He worked for several years as an estate steward for Sir William Elliott of Stobs and Wells. He was recorded as land steward at Stobs Cottage in 1861. Along with his father he then started a coach-building business in Havelock Street in 1867. In 1853 he married Elizabeth (‘Betty’), daughter of James Turnbull, who may have been farmer at Billerwell (and died in 1858, aged 85), and she died in 1861, aged 34. In 1865 he secondly married Isabella Ballantyne in Hawick. His children were: Margaret (b.1854/5); John (b.1859), who married Wilhelmina Balmer and secondly Mary Gavin; Henry; Robert Ballantyne; William Henry; Annie Mary Jane; Annie Mary Jane (again); and Elizabeth, ‘Lizzie’. He kept a diary (from 1857 to 1865, when he was working on the Stobs estate), which has been transcribed by one of his descendants. Robert (1825/6–1900) born in Bowden, he was farmer at Huntly in Kirkhope Parish (including land in Ashkirk Parish) from 1857. He took over the tenancy from Elliot Grieve, and married Elliot’s daughter Jessie (also known as Janet). He was at Over Huntly in the 1860s and 70s and recorded at ‘Outer Huntly’ in 1861. His children included James (eldest son, who died at Carbon, Alberta), Henry (died at Saltcoats, Saskatoon), Elliot (died at Tweedmouth), Walter (4th son, who died aged 12), John Robert (youngest son, who died young) and Christina (joint tenant in Over Huntly until 1921). The family are commemorated on a gravestone in Borthwick Waas. Robert (1865–1920) only surviving son of James, farmed at Whitchesters and Branxholme Braes. His children included: James; and Robert Archibald Vivian (1907–42), who was killed in action in the Middle East. Robert (1868–1945) younger son of Robert, tenant in Southfield. He married Isabella Lillies, and had no descendants. Robert (1901–77) son of Walter John, farmer at Southfield. He took over the tenancy when his father retired in 1937. His son Walter carried on with the farm until 1988, by which time the same family had held the tenancy for more than 230 years. Robert Archibald Vivian ‘Vivian’ (1907–42) son of Robert and grandson of James, farmer at Branxholme Braes. He played rugby for Hawick and was Cornet in 1929. He was a Lieutenant in the Gordon Highlanders and was killed in action at El Alamein. He married Nora, youngest daughter of Charles James Glenny. He is commemorated at Borthwick Waas. Thomas ‘Tom’ (16th C.) one of the tenants of Sir Walter Scott of Howpasley in the lands of Outersideig in 1569. Sir Walter acted as cautioner for them in Hawick, that they would obey the laws of the Lord Regent. His name was recorded as ‘Thome Greif’ and he was probably related to Will, who was also listed. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Wigg in Hobkirk Parish when his daughter Helen was baptised in 1788. He is probably the Thomas who married Helen Stevenson in Hawick in 1774. Their other children included: Thomas (b.1778), baptised in Hawick; Betty (b.1782), also baptised in Hawick; and John Stevenson (b.1790), baptised in Hobkirk. Thomas (1738/9–1828) farmer at Glendinning and at Muselee. He is recorded at Muselee on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls and also paid the dog tax there in 1797. He married Jane, daughter of James Stevenson and Jane Scott; she died at Muselee in 1797, aged 43. He himself died at Glendinning and they are commemorated on a gravestone in Borthwick Waas. He may be the James, son of James, baptised in 1739 in Cavers Parish, probably son of James in Commonside. John Stevenson Grieve, baptised in Hobkirk in 1790, may have been his son. Thomas (1797–1848) farmer at Branxholme Park and later tenant at Skelfhill. He was the younger son of James, farmer at Branxholme Park, and brother of William Oliver. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He was wealthy enough to be employing a governess in 1841. In Hawick in 1822 he married Marion Margaret, youngest daughter of Archibald Dickson of Housebears, and she died in 1860, aged 56. Their children were: James (1825–44); Archibald (1827–1921); William (1829–85), who farmed Skelfhill after his father died; Marion Fisher (1831–1921); Catherine (1833/4–35); Thomas (1834–79), who was a sailor and died at Valparaiso; Walter (1836–82); Katherine (1837–1916), who married David Ballantyne in Hawick; John Scott (1840–93); and Margaret (1843–1903). Thomas Gordon (b.1844) 3rd son of William Oliphant, tenant of Branxholme Park. He was a Lieutenant in the 6th Dragoons Guards. He married Fanny Strickland and their children were: James (1851–1928), tenant of Branxholme Park; Margaret (1853–1937); John (1855–1939); and 3 unnamed children. His will is recorded in 1888. Walter (b.1857) son of Robert and descendant of the James recorded about 1580. He was also likely to have been brother of William, tenant in Commonside. He was tenant of Branxholme Park, signing the lease in 1691. He was recorded as a householder at Branxholme Park on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls, when he was taxed for 2 hearths. He married Blanche (or ‘Blench’, 1661–1716), daughter of William Borthwick of Reashaw. Their children included: James (1684–1781), tenant of Branxholme Park and Todshawhaugh; Margaret (b.1671); Robert (b.1676); and 3 unnamed children christened in the 1670s. Walter in Colterscleuch may also have been a son. The witnesses in 1676 were William Grieve (perhaps his brother) and John Bell. He was buried at Borthwick Waas, along with his wife and descendants. Walter (d.1688) son of William in Commonside and brother of James, who was also tenant there. He died along with his son William and daughter Jean, all within a few months of each other, and are buried at Borthwick Waas. His will is recorded in 1688. Walter (c.1670–1710) farmer in Colterscleuch. He was said to be brother of James, tenant in Branxholme Park, and hence a son of Walter (they are commemorated together at Borthwick Waas). His wife was probably Katherine Ogilvie (d.1759). His children were: James (b.c.1694), tenant in Commonside and Over Huntly; Walter, who married Janet Anderson from Tushielaw; William, who had at least 1 son; Hugh (b.c.1708), who is said to have had a son; Gideon, who married Isabel Laidlaw; and at least one daughter, possibly Helen, who married John Grieve of Crurie, said to be a cousin. Walter (b.c.1700) son of Walter in Colterscleuch. In 1727 he married Janet Anderson from the Tushielaw family. Their children were: John (b.1728); Walter (b.1730); Michael (b.1732); Christian (b.1734); Margaret (b.1736); and James (b.1740). Walter (1710–99) son of James. Like his father he was tenant of the Duke of Buccleuch at Branxholme Park. He was recorded renting Branxholme Park from at least 1745. Along with John Elliot (younger of Borthwickbrae) he leased the lands of Linhope from the Buccleuch estates in 1744. He paid the window tax for Branxholme Park in 1748. He was involved in loans with the Elliots of Harwood in the 1750s. He was made an Honorary Burgess in 1777. He rented Todshawhaugh and Whames in 1792. He held the lease for Todshawhaugh, where he was recorded in 1796 when there was a bond between William Elliot of Harwood and others with him. He was also farmer at Todshawhaugh on the 1789–91 Horse Tax Rolls. He owned 1 saddle horse and 3 farm horses in 1797, as well as paying the dog tax in 1797. His first wife was Katherine (1718–59), daughter of Adam Ogilvie of Hartwoodmyres, and the couple had children relatively late in life. He secondly married Magdaline, daughter of William Elliot of Borthwickbrae. His surviving children were: James (1751–1838), the only son; Helen (or Eleanor), who married Alexander Scott of Synton; Margaret (1755–86), who married John Balfour in Pilrig; Catherine (1757–86), who married William Sibbald of South Leith; and Jane (1762–87). The witnesses to the 1757 baptism were William Ogilvie of Hartwoodmyres (his brother-in-law) and Mr. Grieve of Todshawhaugh (probably his father James). He died at Todshawhaugh. Walter (c.1724–90) son of John, farmer in Crurie. He may have been born in Moffat and was farmer at Crooks and Airdswood, also in Dunfiesshyre. He also worked as an architect. In 1744 in Robertson Parish he married Jean (1727–77), daughter of Adam Pott and Betty Elliot. The marriage was in 1744, with his wife’s sister Betty marrying Thomas Stavert at the same time. Their children were: John and Elizabeth, who died in infancy; Adam (b.1748), who may also have died young; Helen (1750–63); Nathaniel (b.1751), also died in infancy; John (1754–95), who was Laird (or perhaps tenant) of Hoscote and Craik; Betty (b.1756); Helen (b.1764); and Nathaniel (again, b.1770). Walter (1736/7–1822) son of Robert in Deanburnhaugh. He farmed at Hungryhill, Easter Alemoor and Hangingshaw, and also spent time in Perthshire. In Roberton in 1762 he married Janet Grieve (1737–1816), daughter of James in Commonside. Their children were: Robert (1762/3–87), who died unmarried; twins Walter and John (b.c.1770); James (c.1771–1862); Archibald Campbell (b.c.1775); Elliot (c.1777–1858), who married Harriet Turnbull and was tenant at Over Hunty; and Jannet (1779–1858), who married Andrew Aitchison. He died at Over Huntry and was buried at Borthwick Waas. Walter (b.1767) farmer at Southfield, son of William and Mary Elliot. He married Christina, daughter of William Elliot and Margaret Henderson. He is easily confused with the slightly later Walter John of Southfield (and the marriages are very similar, so they may be confounded in family histories). He is recorded on the 1790–91 Horse Tax Rolls at Southfield. He is probably the Walter recorded as tenant at Howpasley in 1794 and 1797, as owner of 3 horses, and who also paid the dog tax at Howpasley in 1797. He is probably also the Walter who died unmarried in 1801. Walter (c.1770–1851) son of Walter and Janet Grieve. He was thus descended from Grieves in Colterscleuch and Dearnburnhaugh. He was born at Broadlee in the Borthwick and had a twin brother John. He farmed at Craiglands in Dumfriesshire. He married Janet Campbell Veitch (who was christened in Lilliesleaf) and had 9 children: Robert (b.1797), who married Janet Murray; Elizabeth (b.1798), who married John Hogg; Jannet (b.1800), who married Andrew Watherston; Helen (b.1803), who married Francis Scott; Margaret (b.1805), who married David Brydon; John (b.1808), who married Mary Burns; Jane (b.1811), who died young; Walter (b.1813), who was also born at Broadlee, emigrated to Queensland and married Ann Gordon; and James (b.1818), who was born at Hartwood- myres. Walter (b.1781) son of John and Isabella Turnbull. He is sometimes referred to as ‘Walter J.’ and is easy to confuse with Walter John. His father farmed at Hoscote and Craik, and he was born at Hoscote. He is referred to as being of Langwell. He married Christian Brydon. His wife is recorded as ‘Annuitant’ at about 12 Buccleuch Street in 1851 and is listed among the local gentry in a directory of 1852. He may thus be the ‘Mr. Grieve’ whose property is shown on Wood’s 1824 map at about No. 12 Buccleuch Street. His children included: Isabella; and Helen. Walter (18th/19th C.) described as ‘late of Langwell’ on his gravestone at Borthwick Waas Cemetery. He married Christian Brydon, who died in Hawick in 1854, aged 70. Walter ‘Wat’ (1786–1856) slater of 23 Buccleuch Street, son of Robert (a shepherd in Roberton) and Isabella Laidlaw. He learned his trade with Thomas Cathrae, and started his own plumbing and slating business about 1805. He is listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories and Slater’s 1852 directory as a slater and glazier. He married Janet Scott in Wilton, and she died in 1821, aged 27. Their only surviving child was Agnes, who married engineer Adam Melrose. He later married Agnes Scott of Milston, who died in 1865, aged 80. On the 1841 census he was living on Buccleuch Street with wife Agnes and daughter Agnes. A portrait of him exists. Walter John (1787–1861) farmer at Southfield and Hawick Shiel. Born in Hobkirk Parish, he was son of Robert. However, he was surely related to the earlier Walter of Southfield. He was one of the founder members of the Wisp Club in 1826. In 1860 he was farming 650 acres at Southfield and employed 3 men. He married Christian (1786–1880), daughter of William Elliot and Margaret Anderson from Winningtonour; this was in Cavers Parish in 1812. Their children were: Margaret (1813–19); Jean or Jane (1814–81), who married builder James Harkness; Mary Christian (1816–45), who died unmarried; Robert (1818–72), who also tenanted Southfield; Wilmina or Wilhelmina (1820–78), who married draper James Turnbull; Agnes (1822–47), who married Walter Purdom and died at Ormiston; William (1824–78), who emigrated to Keppel, Ontario, Canada; and Helen Margaret (1826–85), who died in Hawick, unmarried. He is buried at Borthwick Waas, along with several of his family. Walter (b.1805/6) agricultural labourer at Hallrule Porter Lodge according to the 1841 census. His wife was Jean and their children Robert, Helen, John, James and Isabella. Walter (1813–96) son of Walter, he was born at Broadlee in the Borthwick valley and christened in Ashkirk Parish. He emigrated to Queensland, Australia, where he married Ann Gordon and had 10 children. Walter (19th C.) plumber of W. Grieve & Son, 20 Buccleuch Street. Although he was no relation of the Walter Grieve of the plumbers and slaters business at 23 Buccleuch Street, he nevertheless worked for the older Walter and eventually took over the business. He may be the Walter recorded in about 1875 owning part of the former lands of Patrick Cunningham in Hawick. Walter (c.1816–48) probably son of Michael and Rachel Scott. He was a wool-spinner in Hawick. In 1841 he married Mary Oliver, who died in 1902, aged 82. His wife was sister of William Oliver, the blind fiddler. Their children were: Michael (b.c.1842), who worked in hosiery manufacturing in Leicester, and had a son Thomas who invented a fashioning needle; Adam (b.c.1845), who was a mason in Edinburgh; and Agnes (b.c.1847), who married Crimean War veteran Andrew Butler. Walter (b.1827) born in Teviothead Parish, son of John and Jean Hume. He was a plumber, slater and glazier in Hawick. In 1861 he was living at 5 Slitrig Bank with his widowed mother (then called ‘Janet’), and he was then an employer of 8 men and 3 boys. He married Elizabeth Rogers and their children included: Mary (b.1862); John (b.1864); Walter Thomas (b.1865), who was Cornet in 1895; George Glen Rogers (b.1868); William Rogers (b.1871); and Jane Hume Rogers (b.1873). Walter (b.1838) son of James and Janet Inglis. He lived at Southfield, where most of his children were born. In 1864 he married Joanna Jardine (b.1846). Their children included: James (b.1867); Abraham (b.1868); ane (b.1872); Janet (b.1874); Isabella (b.1878); Christina (b.1881); and Adam (b.1884). Walter John (1865–1948) son of Robert and Christina Gray. He took over the tenancy of Southfield while still a minor after the deaths of his father in 1872 and mother in 1880. He was known locally as a keen cyclist in the early days of that sport. He served as factor to the Duke of Buccleuch at Bowhill about 1902–12, living at Carterhaugh. He was a member of the Hawick Archaeological Society and local farming organisations. He married Isabella Elizabeth (1873/4–1953), daughter of Andrew Easton of Todrig, and secondly married Jane Scott in 1900. Their children were: Robert Elliot (b.1901), who took over the tenancy of Southfield; Jane Scott (1903–77); and Christina Gray (1904–70). He retired in 1937 and died at 29 Orchard Terrace. Walter Thomas (b.1865) son of Walter and Elizabeth Rogers. He was a plumber and served as Cornet in 1895. He was the first Cornet to be presented with the Cornet’s Medal by the Provost. William ‘Will’ (16th C.) one of the tenants of Sir Walter Scott of Howpasley in the lands of Outersideig in 1569. Sir Walter acted as cautioner for them in Hawick, that they would obey the laws of the Lord Regent. He was probably related to Thomas, who was also listed. William (1631/2–1701) tenant in Commonside. He was presumably related to other local Grieves. He was listed as tenant (along with James, as well as John Waugh) at Commonside on the 1694 Hearth Tax records. He may have been brother of Walter, tenant in Branxholme Park; he may be the William who witnessed a baptism for Walter in 1676. His children included: Walter, who had 2 children William and Jean who died with him in 1688; and James, who succeeded as tenant in Commonside. He is buried in Borthwick Waas. William (17th C.) resident at Broadlee in Ashkirk Parish, recorded on the Hearth Tax roll in 1694. William (17th C.) shepherd at Priesthaugh in 1694 according to the Hearth Tax rolls. William (17th/18th C.) probably descended from the Grieves in Commonside. In 1720 in Hawick he married Elspeth (or Elizabeth), daughter of ‘Wester James’ Grieve; she may have been his cousin. Their children included: Robert (b.1728); William (b.1731); another William (b.1733); Joan (b.1738), who married Dr. James Mounsey; and John (b.1744). He may be the former tenant of Allanhaugh Mill described as being deceased in 1767. William (1707–1800) son of James, farmer at Commonside. He was tenant at Colterscleuch and Southfield. In 1744 he is recorded as tenant of Colterscleuch and Westcoterig, along with Gideon Grieve, leasing from the Buccleuch Estates. Shortly after that he moved to Southfield. He was probably the tenant in Nether Southfield for whom James Rutherford was shepherd. In 1757 he was tenant at Southfield, and was found (along with other neighbouring tenant farmers) to be making ‘bakes’ at Black Grain Moss, against the explicit orders of the Town Council. As a result a group led by Bailie Robert Scott mustered in Hawick at 4 a.m. and went up to the Common, to break up the peats. He paid the Horse Tax at Southfield in 1785–89. He married Betty Grieve (1708/9–85). Their children included: Walter (b.1733); Hugh (b.1738); Robert (b.1741), who also tenant Southfield; Mary (1744–89), who married Alexander Baptie, tenant in Southdean; and James (b.1748). He was 93 when he died and is buried in Borthwick Waas. William (1726–86) 2nd son of James, tenant of Branxholme Park and Todshawhaugh. He was involved in a bond with Henry Elliot of Harwood in 1759. He was himself tenant farmer at Southfield. It is also possible that he was one of the 2 William Grieves who tenant Allanhaugh Mill in the early-to-mid 18th century. In 1751 he married Margaret Mary, daughter of Robert Elliot of Caerlenrig (who later farmed at Winnington Rig). Their children were: Mary (1760–91), who married hosier John Nixon in Hawick in 1782; Ann (1761–1834), who married Rev. John Laurie in Hawick in 1786; James (b.1763), tenant in Roan;
Grieve

Christian or Catherine (1763–83), who may have married John Elliot farmer at Millburn, in Hawick in 1783; Robert (b.1764), who worked as a merchant in Leith; Helen; Jean (d.1810); Isobel (d.1805), who married John Kedie in Hawick in 1785; Tibbie, who married teacher Christopher Armstrong; Margaret (b.1765), who may also have married an Armstrong; Walter (1767–1801), who married Christina Elliot and continued to farm at Southfield as well as at Howpaslley; Janet, who married William Robertson, carpet manufacturer in Hawick in 1789; and William. The witnesses in 1763 were Robert Elliot, ‘Ridge’ (his father-in-law) and James Grieve ‘Junior’ (probably his brother) and in 1764 were ‘Mr Robert Elliot’ (presumably his father-in-law) and William Elliot, ‘Winnington ridge’. He may be the ‘William Grieve, Hawick’ who subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). William (d.bef. 1809) tailor in Hawick. He married Henrietta Scott in Hawick in 1784, and she died in 1809. William (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Linhope, recorded as owner of a horse on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. It is unclear how he was related to other local Grieves. William (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Phaup, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He is presumably not the same man as the shepherd at Linhope, who is listed separately. Additionally he was taxed for having 2 non-working dogs at ‘Phaup’ in 1797. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf, recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. William (18th/19th C.) tenant at Henwoodie in the 1820s and 30s. William Oliver (1796–1875) son of James and Agnes Hall. He succeeded his father as tenant farmer of Branholme Park, East Buccleuch and Sundhope. He was President of the Teviotdale Farmers’ Club and was heavily involved in all local agricultural matters, being known as a great breeder of hill stock. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He became a member of the Jedforest Club in 1839. He was a member of the Photographic Society of Scotland from 1855. He served as a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire. In 1840 in Elgin he married Eliza Ann (1821–46), daughter of Charles Gordon. They had 3 sons (twins James and Charles, plus Thomas) and 1 daughter. In 1851 he is listed as farmer of 4000 acres, employing 20 farm workers and with 5 servant in his house. He was still farmer at Branholme Park in 1868. He was listed in the Land Tax Rolls of about 1874 as owner of Dinlabyre and Greena. In 1851 he secondly married Sarah Clarke (nee Wagstaff), daughter of James of Bilby, and they had 1 son. He thirdly married Mary Gordon, from Heckington. His children included: twins James Alexander (1841–46) and Charles John (1841–1915); ChristinaMary (b.1843), who married Wheatley Robertson of the Indian Army; Thomas Gordon (b.1844); and Norman William (1852–1936). William (b.1797/8) joiner and cartwright in Newcastle. He was probably at about 2 Walter Street in 1861. His wife was Mary and their children included Elliot (a daughter), Charles, Walter and Robert. William (b.c.1804) married Margaret Dalgleish in 1837. His son Robert was born at Ettrick, moved to Queensland in 1883 and still has descendants there. William (1805–51) younger son of James, tenant in Branzholme Braes, and descended from the Grieves of Branzholme Park. He was born in Hawick and became a grocer on the High Street. He is probably the grocer and spirit dealer living on Silver Street in 1841. In 1851 he was living at about 6 High Street. He is listed as a High Street grocer in Slater’s 1852 directory, and may also be the corn dealer listed there, as well as the William recorded on the High Street serving as insurance agent for National and seedsman. Additionally he may have been the William serving as ‘sub-distributor of stamps’ at the Stamp and Tax Office on the High Street. In 1840 he married Christian (or Christina) Graham (1814–88). They had a son, James (b.1841). He and his wife are commemorated on the family gravestone in Borthwick Waas. William (1818–85) son of George and Minto Bell. He was probably born at Craik, where his father farmed. However, the family moved to Edinburgh and then emigrated to Canada in 1832. In 1846 he bought land in Richmond township in Ontario and operated a tavern at Grieve’s Corners, which still bears the family name. He married Eliza Fairbairn and their children were Esther, George, Robert, Minto, Georgina and William. William (1825–78) younger son of Walter John, farmer at Southfield. He emigrated to Canada in the early 1850s, married Agnes Fairbairn from Berwickshire and had a large family. William (1829–82) 3rd son of Thomas and Marion Dickson. He took over the farm of Skelfhill after his father’s death, also having tenancy of Stobicote. He was known for being a judge of Cheviot sheep and was President of the Teviotdale Farmers’ Club. He was at Skelfhill in 1861, farming 3084 acres and employing 12 people, with his brother Walter also farming 2000 acres and employing 3 people. His sisters Catherine and Margaret were also living there, as well as 6 domestic and farm servants. He died unmarried. William Gray (1866–1914) younger son of Robert, tenant in Southfield. He emigrated to Denver, Colorado. He married Lilliam Kirschbaum and they had 1 daughter and 3 sons. William Herbert (1874–1908) 2nd son of Charles John of Branxholme Park. He was a Lieutenant in the Royal Navy. In 1893 he was on board the ‘Nile’ off Tripoli, when he witnessed the collision that caused the sinking of H.M.S. Victoria, with the loss of hundreds of lives, including his brother Arthur. Later he himself was killed in another naval disaster, this time involving an explosion in Queensferry. There is a memorial brass to him and his brother in St. Cuthbert’s Church (formerly written ‘Greave’, ‘Greaves’, ‘Greif’, ‘Greiff’, ‘Greive’, ‘Grive’ and variants). Griffith (gri-fith) n. Sir Richard Waldie (1850–1933) officer in charge of the Border Rifles. He was educated at Jesus College, Cambridge and served with the 2nd Dragoon Guards, retiring with the rank of Captain. He succeeded to the baronetcy and family estates near Kelso on the death of his father in 1889. In 1891 he became Colonel of the local volunteer regiment, the Border Rifles. Under his command the Border Rifles became the 4th battalion of the K.O.S.B., with him as Honorary Colonel. He was Chairman of the Roxburghshire Unionist Association, Chairman of the Tweed Commission and a member of the Border Union Agricultural Society. He stood unsuccessfully in the 1906 general election for Roxburghshire. However he served as a member of Roxburghshire County Council and was also a J.P. He was Lord-Lieutenant for Roxburghshire, as well as being a Brigadier in the Royal Company of Archers. A keen sportsman, he was known as a rower at university, later as a curler, yaughtsman and particularly as a breeder of race-horses. He made his fortune through mines in Bohemia and lived for a while in Australia. He married 3 times, but had no children. He wrote the foreword to the book ‘With the Border Volunteers to Pretoria’.

Griffiths (gri-thits) n. Nigel (1955– ) politician. Son of a High School English teacher, he was educated there, as well as at Edinburgh University. He became Edinburgh councillor 1980–87 and Labour M.P. for South Edinburgh from 1987, being at one time Opposition Whip and spokesman on Trade and Industry.

Grime (grim) n., arch. to sprinkle, fleck – ‘The sun was na up, but the moon was down, It was the gryming of a new fa’n sna’ [HAST1902], ‘The sunny blinks, keekin through the leaves, spurtelt the road wui greimeens o licht’ [ECS], ‘The mune she shines sae bricht, Till a’ the yirth is marlt wi’ The grymins o’ her licht’ [DH] (also written ‘gryme’, ‘grime’, etc.).

the Grindle Burn (thu-grin-din-burn) n. the Grindin Burn, a stream that follows the Minto to Denholm road and joins the Teviot just beyond Denholm. In 1780 ‘Grinden Burn’ is listed as part of the southern boundary of the lands of Hawthorn Park and Mailchester Park (the origin of the name is probably Old English ‘gren dunu’, meaning ‘the stream running from the green hill’, named after the Minto; it is clearly shown on Pont’s 1590s manuscript map, and may be labelled ‘Grindoun’, this being interpreted as the name given to the hills; Blaen’s 1654 map intriguingly shows it linking to the Jordan Burn, hence linking the Ale and Teviot valleys directly!; it is ‘Grydone Burn’ in c.1537; James Murray calls it ‘Grindon Burn’ in 1863).

Grindin Hills (grin-din-burn) n. possible former name for the Minto Hills. Pont’s manuscript map from the 1590s indicates the word ‘Grindoun’ with ‘hills’ written below. This was transferred to Blaen’s 1654 published map as ‘Grindoun h.’, hence leading to some speculation that the hills gave their name to the Grindin Burn running below them. However, this name for the hills is otherwise unknown, and it seems unlikely that the Minto’s ever had this alternative name, with the origin simply being misinterpretation of what was written by Pont.
Grindstane Law

Grindstane Law (grind-stän-law) n. hill near the head of the Kale Water, just on the Scottish side of the Border, reaching a height of 468 m. It was near here in 1598 where one of the last skirmishes occurred between the Scottish and English. Accounts differ as to the numbers involved, with the group of Scotsmen being from 60 to 200 and the English group perhaps being as large as 400. The Scots claimed they were simply out hunting, going into England on 1st August and again the following day, after which they retired to dinner ‘Grindisdame law in Scotland’. They were then chased by the larger English party (led by Woodrington and Fenwick), as far as Plenderleith, with fighting occurring ‘near ane pairt callit Knowpark’. Some Scotsmen were killed, including Andrew Rutherford, brother of the Laird of Huntley, Robert Fringle, servant to the Laird of Bonjedward and James Robson, servant to the Laird of Greenhead. The Laird of Bonjedward was also injured and several prisoners were taken, including the younger men of Bonjedward, Hunthill and Greenhead, the Lairds of Tower and Billerwell, 2 Burgesses of Jedburgh and others, the total being as many as 12. The English also took about 50 horses. The prisoners were released, but had to appear to answer charges a few days later. The English claimed the Scots were out raiding, or at least cutting and stealing wood (which may well have been true), nevertheless, the English pursuit of the Scots was fierce.

grip at (grip-i’t) v., arch. to grab at, attempt to seize – ‘...with ane buit to carrie the staff or standard in, and offered to grippe at and carie the said Colour’ [BR1706].

the Gripeknowe (thu-grip-now) n. name for an area either in or bordering on Hawick Common Moor, the precise position being now uncertain. It was mentioned in 1766 in the description of 9 small pieces of land that were let in order to try to prevent encroachment on the Common by neighbouring tenants. John Scott was living there in 1784. Alexander Miller was recorded on a farm there when his son William was baptised in Kirkton Parish in 1786.

grippit (gri’pi’, -pee’) pp. gripped – ‘...and he fell off his seat where he was sitting, and grippit at James Chisholme’s fingers with his staffe ...’ [BR1666], ‘And then he grippit the bedrel’s spade, Ane pye therewith to seeke ...’ [JT], ‘My hazel staff I gripit fast, My hat upon my head did tether ...’ [JT].

grist (gri’st) n. thickness of yarn, girth, term used frequently by yarn-spinners synonymous with ‘coont’ – ‘It was of the same graits. Nobody in Hawick makes similar yarn’ [HAd1868].

grit (gri’, grit) adj. intimate, familiar, friendly – ‘The twaesome are gey grit again’ [GW], ‘they’ve been grit since they first met it the schuil’, ‘...As grit as the gouk and the tittle’ [JL], ‘Losh, John an’ mei was awfu’ grit afore aw was that age!’ [HEX1919], ‘The Brig and mei’s been afa’ grit since ever ma life began’ [JEDM].

the grit folk (thu-gri’-folk) n., arch. the local gentry – ‘The seams an ploys o grit-folk an Royalties ...’ [ECS].

Grundistone

Grundistone (grun-dee-stin) n. David (15th C.) Burgess of Cupar. He had a charter of the lands of ‘Bangall’ in Fife in 1458, with his surname written ‘Grundistoun’. He is recorded as deceased in 1481 when his son Thomas had a charter for lands in Fife. It is unclear whether his name relates to the farm near Hawick. David (15th/16th C.) listed as a witness to a charter in Edinburgh in 1511. He may have been son of Thomas. James (15th C.) tenant of Feny in the Edinburgh area in 1481. In 1485 he was recorded as tenant of ‘Luthry’ along with his son John. John (d. bef. 1490) tenant of the lands of ‘Luthre’ in Fife in 1490. His widow was also recorded, as well as his father James. Margaret (15th C.) recorded in 1470 as wife of Robert de Forest, when he had a charter for the lands of Forest in Fife. She was presumably related to David and Thomas. Thomas of Kingask (15th/16th C.) son of David, as recorded in a charter of 1481 when he was granted lands in Fife. He was Bailie in Cupar and also referred to as ‘custumar’. He is recorded in

Grundston, Grundistone

Grundston and Drinkston were valued together at £2440 in 1778 and owned by the Duke of Buccleuch. There was a marl pit there around 1800. Janet Scott (probably a widow) was head of the household there in 1841, and William Potts was farmer in 1851. There is a tradition (described by James Wilson) that an ancient stone there bore the inscription ‘Remember to pray’, but this had not existed in living memory by the mid-1800s, if indeed it was ever more than a fantasy (the name is first recorded in 1380 as ‘Grundestoun’; it is ‘Grundiston’ about 1390, ‘Grandiston’ and ‘Groundiston’ in 1525, ‘Grundiston’ in 1526/7 and 1551, ‘Groundeston’ in 1535, ‘Grundiston’ in 1635, ‘Groundiston’ in 1643, ‘Grundestoun’ in 1683, ‘Easter and Wester Grundistones’ in 1707, ‘Grundiston’ in 1744 and ‘Groundeston’ in 1841; the origin is possibly ‘Grundi’s farm’ with the Middle English personal name Grundi, and may refer to ‘Robert Grundi de Neuton’ who signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296 and his ancestors).

Grundistone Heights

several charters in the period 1495–1513, signed in Edinburgh or Fife, with his name spelled ‘Grundestoun’, ‘Grundistoun’ and variants. His wife was Isobel Seton. Probably the same ‘Thoma Grundystoun’ was witness to the charters made by Lord Lindsay of the Byres to James Scott of Kirkurd in 1484 for the lands of Over and Nether Newhall in the Barony of Chamberlain Newton. The charters were made in Edinburgh, so he may not have had a direct connection with the Hawick area; it may be a coincidence that his surname is the same as the neighbouring lands of Grundistone. Walter of Glascie (15th/16th C.) witnessed a charter in 1504/5 for Thomas of Kingask, to whom he was presumably related (also written ‘Grundiston’).

Grundistone Heights (grun-dee-stin-hiitz) n. Grundistone Heights, the area of high ground adjacent to the A7 north of Hawick, more commonly known as ‘the Heights’. The highest point on the road is 942 ft, and marks the boundary between Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire. The view from here, particularly south to the Cheviot Hills is magnificent. A former drove road used to cross the main road near here (marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map), passing over Biewlie Moor and Chapel Moor on its way to the Borthwick valley. It has been claimed that a similar route shows evidence of having been a Roman road, with traces between here and Woo Law, connecting Raeburnfoot with Newstead, via Craik Cross and Chapel Moor on its way to the Borthwick valley. It has been claimed that a similar route shows evidence of having been a Roman road, with traces between here and Woo Law, connecting Raeburnfoot with Newstead, via Craik Cross and Harelaw; however, this is not firmly established.

Grundy (grun-dee) n. Adam (13th/14th C.) recorded as ‘Adam Grundy’ on the 1303/4 inquest for the half barony of Wilton. It seems likely that he was related to Robert and held lands near Grundistone. Benedict (12th/13th C.) father of Robert, who witnessed a charter in Hassendean in the period 1214–49, probably the late 1220s. His name is given as ‘Benedicto Grundi’. He is the earliest known member of the family who gave their name to Grundistone. Robert (13th C.) son of Benedict. He witnessed a charter for Christina of Hassendean in the period 1214–49, probably the late 1220s. His name is given as ‘Roberto filius eius’ after that of his father Benedict. He was probably father or grandfather of the later Robert. Robert ‘de Neuton’ (13th C.) mentioned in 1291–96, he may have been the owner of what became ‘Grundistone’, with ‘Neuton’ presumably being the neighbouring farm now called ‘the Niton’. He signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296 and on the attached seal, which may bear a rose, his name is ‘S’ROBERTI GRVNDY’.

for the Royal Engineering Signals in WWI. After the war he entered a partnership with brother Archie in the family motor engineering firm. He started winning Scottish speed events from about 1926, and then began an astonishing run at the Isle of Man T.T. races, where for 10 years he only ever finished first or second. He rode for several companies, but became best known as a rider for Norton, which dominated the European circuits in the early to mid-1930s. He set many world records over 50 km to 100 mile distances. His final record included finishing first 30 times out of 50 placings. He died following a crash at the 1937 German Grand Prix at the Sachsenring in Hohenstein-Ernstthal. His body was given a military escort out of Germany and his funeral in Hawick was attended by thousands. Memorials were erected on the Isle of Man (at ‘the Cutting’) and in Saxony. He was buried at the Wellogate, and a bronze statue, by Thomas Clapperton was erected in Wilton Lodge Park in 1939. A book ‘Jimmie Guthrie (1897–1937): Hawick’s Racing Legend’ by John Rogerson and Gordon Small was published in 1997, and the Museum contains much memorabilia of his life and achievements. John (1832–1903) local businessman and architect. Born in Jedburgh, he came to Hawick when his father founded the slating and plumbing firm James Guthrie & Sons in the 1850s. He took over running this firm with his 2 brothers, but also trained as an architect. He supervised the feuning of Sunnyhill and designed Linden Park, the Buccleuch Memorial, houses for the Working Men’s Building & Investment Company, and many villas, including Deanfield, Hazelwood, Kilmeny, Lindesfarne, Langlands, Westwood and Woodnorton (originally Craigmores). He was heavily involved with the Archaeological Society, being a founding member and later President, and was also involved with the Buccleuch Memorial Institute. In 1861 he presented to the Museum part of a quern from Deanburnhaugh. He was also a painter and art lover, and contributed travel accounts to the local press. He painted a view of the High Street from the East End in 1858, another in 1893, one called ‘View of Rachel Anderson’s House, High Street’ and a view of the Auld Brig painted in 1869. He also painted a portrait of William Norman Kennedy, Alexander Michie and Robert Michie (3 of the founders of the Archaeological Society). Another example is a portrait of Thomas Brown. He designed the decorations and paintings for the centenary Burns night in the Commercial Inn and spoke there on ‘Burns the Pioneer’. He is also credited with bringing the ‘nosey wundis’ to Hawick, after he saw similar devices on a tour of the continent and built one for his house at 61 High Street. He married Elizabeth Purdom Borthwick, who died in 1908, aged 67. He is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. William Grant (b.1843) son of plumber James. The Gutterbludes (thu-gi-‘er-blidz) n. musical play about local characters written by J.E.D. Murray and Adam Grant, and subtitled ‘Hawick Callants Abroad and at Hame’. It was performed in the Town Hall on December 30th 1905, and January 1st–3rd 1906 and revived in 2000 and 2005 by the Two Rivers Theatre Company. The play is described as ‘A Drama of Hawick in 1835 in two acts and four scenes’, these being: ‘Teri Lodge’, a shanty (interior) in the Toronto forest; ‘The Haugh’ at Hawick Common-Riding; ‘Round the Ramparts’; and ‘The Auld Mid Raw’, Cow Jean’s lodging house. The play introduced the well-loved ‘Meda’s Song’ and ‘Clinty’s Song’, and also included ‘The Buccaneers’ (the Old Sailor’s Song), ‘The Funny Old Fellow’ (Maxwell’s Song), ‘D’ye think I’m an Irishman’ (Danny’s Song), 'Oor Gutterblude' (Cow Jean's Oration) and 'Westward Ho!' The script is one of only 2 of Jed Murray's plays to survive. It was preserved by his son Melgund, given to Jim Peacock, and then a new production organised by Jean Wintrop in 2000, with incidental music and some new pieces arranged by Ian Seeley (also spelled 'The Gutterbluids' etc.).

Many Hawick songs are included in his 'Memoirs of Hawick' brass arrangement, with the tunes being faithful to the versions published by Adam Grant, with some additional thematic material added.

Guyslands (glz-hundz) n. former name for Orchard. It occurs as 'Gyisland' (possibly in error) in a list of lands within the Barony of Cavers in 1509/10 (referring to charters from the time of King David) and is 'Gyislands' in a charter for Douglas of Cavers in 1511. Variants of the name occur until the late 17th century and it was still in the Barony of Cavers when inherited by Sir William Douglas in 1687 (it is possible these lands were related to 'Guy de Denum'; it is transcribed 'Graeslands' in 1687 and wrongly as 'Embslands' in 1698).

g'way (gu-wä) contr., arch. go away – 'G'way ee gree goggin' gowk, ee'r Mr. Spunk eersel'! [JEDM], 'Gae'way! g'way = go away!' [ECS] (see also gae'-way and 'way).

gypsies (jip-sezz) n., pl. people living a nomadic lifestyle, who originally came from northern India around the 14th century and are spread around the world in small groups, maintaining the Romany language and some elements of their traditional culture. Also called travelling people, 'tinkers', etc., although sometimes a distinction is made between genuine gypsies and travellers of more recent Irish origin. Local gypsy families include the Blyths, Douglasses and Youngs, and they are recorded as settling in the Yetholm area since the 16th century. The Yetholm royal family was the Faas, with one of the earliest being Johnne Faa, then King Patrick Faa and Queen Jean Gordon being well known in the 17th century, and the last of the family being Queen Esther Faa Blyth who died in 1883. They also traditionally gathered at St. Boswells Fair and other local fairs. There has long been animosity against them, e.g. there was an order in 1573 that all 'vagabond and counterfaitit people calland thame selfis Egyptianis' were to be banished from the Borders. Ashkirk Session ordained in 1643 that 'no person shall reset any Egyptians, and if they insist on staying, then to come and tell the Minister, and he, with the assistance of tlemen that he shall choose, shall go and out them out of the Parish'. In the years following the Act of Parliament of 1609 there were several groups (mostly of the name Faa) who were found guilty of being 'Egyptianis' and hanged in Edinburgh. In 1674 William Hall and his family were banished from Hawick for attacking the Bailie and for being 'vagabond Egyptians'. In Jedburgh in 1704 11 men were found guilty of being 'Egyptians' and transported to America, while a woman was scourged through the town and then nailed to a post by her ear for half an hour. In Hawick they have been regular visitors for centuries, often setting up on the Haugh. Some of their words have entered into the Borders vocabulary. There was a large battle between groups from Lochmaben and Yetholm at Hawick Winter Fair in the early 18th century (as recounted by Robert Wilson). It apparently started over possession of a young lady, and was finally broken up by the Burgh officers. 2 of the combatants died of their wounds while several others were put in the stocks or sent to Jedburgh Jail – '...The Gypsies frae Yetholm then topped up the lot Bie chicken some Hindi words intae the pot' [WaE] (the name derives from a romantic notion that they originated in Egypt).

Hadden (haw-din) n. village to the east of Sprouston and Kelso, in the extreme north-east of Roxburghshire. The Elliots of Wells held the Barony from at least 1729, and it was later part of the possessions of the Elliotts of Stobs, then the Elliots of Wells. Hadden Rigg, the site of a 1542 battle of the Scots and the English is adjacent (also written ‘Haddon’, the origin of the name may be the Old English ‘haga dun’, meaning ‘the hill with the fenced enclosure’, and hence it has something in common with Hawick: the name is first recorded as ‘Hawedun’ around 1200).

Hadden (haw-din) n. Bernard (12th/13th C.) nephew of Bernard, who was son of Brian, Lord of Hadden. He made grants to Soutra Hospital and Kelso Abbey in the late 1100s. He is recorded as Sheriff of Roxburgh in about 1203 (as ‘Bernardo de Hawedane’) and again in 1227/8. In 1223/4 he is recorded being allowed to commute his responsibilities as ward of Roxburgh Castle, and John Maxwell was listed as Sheriff at that time. In 1246 a perambulation of knights from both sides of the Border was arranged for the disputed lands between him and the canons of Carham. He had a son, also Bernard.

Hadden Rigg (haw-din-rig) n. site near Kelso of a battle in 1542, where the Scottish forces of the Earl of Huntly routed those of Sir Robert Bowes and the Earl of Angus (also spelled ‘Haddon’ and ‘Rig’).

Haddon (ha-din) n. Andrew (b.1742) from Selkirk, he came to Hawick in the late 1700s and married Christian, daughter of Bailie Walter Ruecastle. She was apparently due to marry Robert Howison, the banns having even been read. They appear to have lived in Selkirk, then Edinburgh and finally Paisley, where they had a daughter. Their son Walter returned to Hawick and married Agnes Goodfellow, niece of the Bailie. Andrew (1818–94) son of Walter and Agnes Goodfellow. He was a manufacturer and farmer of the 19th century. In 1841 he was recorded on the Back Row. He started with a stocking shop up the Loan, but moved his family to Honeyburn in 1848 (where several generations of the family subsequently stayed). In 1861 he was farmer of 205 acres there, and employed 9 labourers. He became a Councillor and Bailie in Hawick (being on the ‘Eternal Council’) and served on the first Roxburghshire County Council, where he was known for only speaking English when forced to! In later life he became a farmer at Honeyburn. He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1857. He married Anne, daughter of John White the manufacturer. Their children included: Walter (b.1841); Isabella; John; Agnes G.; Ann (or Annie), who married Rev. Robert Borland; and Andrew (b.1863), who was Cornet in 1891. He may be the ‘John Haddon’ listed in 1852 as a farmer in Denholm. Andrew, O.B.E. (1863–1936) of Deansyde, son of Andrew, brother of Walter and John He was a solicitor in Hawick and farmer at Honeyburn. He trained in Edinburgh and started in Hawick with the firm of Haddon & Turnbull. He was Cornet in 1891. He went to the Boer War with a group of Border Rifles (volunteers) largely from Denholm, and published some of his war diaries. On his return he set up as a solicitor at 7 Tower Knowe. He became Lieut.-Col. in the Volunteers, received an O.B.E. and served on the Hawick Military Tribunal during WWI. Along with his son Andrew he was heavily involved with setting up the Milk Marketing Board. He married May Laing Brown (1864–1954). He is buried at Denholm. Andrew Douglas ‘Douglas’ (1886–1952) son of Walter and brother of Ross, he was a partner in the family law firm. He became Cornet in 1910, and was heavily involved with the Callants’ Club, being President in 1928, and Treasurer and Secretary for about 40 years. He married Jane Martin and their children included Walter Andrew, Jean Douglas and Agnes. Andrew, O.B.E. (1904–93) son of Andrew and May Laing Brown. He was farmer at Honeyburn and also a solicitor. He moved his firm, Andrew Haddon to 3 Oliver Place and went into partnership with David Crowe as Andrew Haddon & Crowe, solicitors. He was Burgh Prosecutor for Hawick prior to Reorganisation in 1974, was a member of the first Borders Regional Council, was involved with local Liberal election campaigns and was awarded the O.B.E. for political and public service. He was also involved (with his father Andrew) in Teviotdale Dairy and the Milk Marketing Board. He married May Laing Brown and brother of Ross, he was a partner in the family law firm. He became Cornet in 1910, and was heavily involved with the Callants’ Club, being President in 1928, and Treasurer and Secretary for about 40 years. He married Jane Martin and their children included Walter Andrew, Jean Douglas and Agnes. Andrew, O.B.E. (1904–93) son of Andrew and May Laing Brown. He was farmer at Honeyburn and also a solicitor. He moved his firm, Andrew Haddon to 3 Oliver Place and went into partnership with David Crowe as Andrew Haddon & Crowe, solicitors. He was Burgh Prosecutor for Hawick prior to Reorganisation in 1974, was a member of the first Borders Regional Council, was involved with local Liberal election campaigns and was awarded the O.B.E. for political and public service. He was also involved (with his father Andrew) in Teviotdale Dairy and the Milk Marketing Board and was an elder in Denholm Kirk. He married Dorothy Blanche Hall.

Dr. David Alexander Ross ‘Ross’ (1890–1978) son of Walter and brother of Douglas, he was a long time doctor in Hawick at 19 Buccleuch Street. He was born in Hawick and educated at Fettes and Edinburgh University, graduating in 1913 and gaining his M.D. in 1919. In WWI he went to France with the 9th Royal Scots, being wounded and becoming Regimental Medical Officer. He later served with the 19th Field Ambulance and 14th General Hospital and was awarded the Military Cross. Back in Hawick, he went into partnership with Dr. Barrie and continued in that practice for 46 years. He travelled far and wide to visit his patients, in the early days by motorbike. He was involved with ex-servicemen’s associations and the Red Cross and served as police surgeon...

and doctor to local factories. He was a member of the Borders Hospital Board for 19 years and took a keen interest in the Hawick Cottage Hospital. He had a son and 3 daughters. Janet (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick. In 1706 she was one of the people (presumably living near St. Mary’s) who were disturbed at night by a group who were involved in drunken revelry. They delivered to her house a cripple that they had picked up from another house. John (19th C.) farmer in Cavers or Minto Parishes. He is recorded in a directory of 1852, with his surname given as ‘Hadden’. Dr. John (1845–1920s) doctor from Denholm, son of Andrew and brother of Walter and Andrew. He was born in the West End and educated at Minto school and Edinburgh University, where he was not allowed to graduate as an M.A. because he was too young, so he went on to win most of the prizes in medicine. He practised for many years as a dietician in Manchester. He also travelled the world, some of his journals being published in the Hawick News. He lived for a while in Canonbie (the house now being a hotel). He became known as an eccentric, with peculiar views on diet, such as suggesting that patients cut out their favourite foods and go on 24 hour fasts. He even suggested that a man could live on 2 gooseberries a day (but this may have been a joke)! He had the Text House built for him on Main Street in Denholm. He also bought up some properties and left them to be let rent-free to elderly residents of the village.

Marjorie (1905–95) daughter of Andrew and sister of Andrew. She won the Medway Challenge Cup (Cornet’s Race) riding ‘Rufus’ on Common Riding Saturday 1927, being possibly the first lady rider seen on Hawick racecourse. She was Cornet’s Lass in 1926 and married Donald Laing for J.E.D. Murray in 1890. In politics he was a Liberal Unionist. He married a daughter of Andrew and brother of Walter. He was killed by a falling tree. Walter (18th/19th C.) grocer and spirit dealer on the Fore Row, recorded on Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. His house is marked on Wood’s 1824 map, near the top left side of Drumlanrig Square. Walter (1841–1907) solicitor and banker. Born in the West-End, his father was Andrew of Honeyburn and his brothers were John and Andrew. He attended Minto School along with J.A.H. Murray. He apprenticed with Thomas Purdom, received further legal training in Edinburgh and returned to Hawick in 1864. He worked for the partnership Kirk & Haddon, with the partnership of Haddon & Turnbull (with Thomas Turnbull) starting in 1880. In his early days, his grandmother Agnes (nee Goodfellow) kept house for him. He acted as Police Treasurer and Collector for the Burgh from 1864 until his death. He was also agent for the Royal Bank of Scotland and associated with Kirkton and Lilliesleaf School Boards. He was Secretary of Hawick Working Men’s Building & Investment Co. from 1878. In addition he acted as clerk or secretary for a large number of other local concerns, including the Exchange Buildings and the Upper Teviotdale Fisheries Association, and also as factor of Cavers estate. He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1880. He was assessor for Hawick for a number of years, and Sheriff-Clerk Depute until about 1895. He was a member of the Hawick District Committee of Roxburgh County Council, and of Cavers Parish Council, a Director of Teviotdale Dairy Company and a member of the Border Mounted Rifles. He was an enthusiastic Common Riding supporter and Acting Father for J.E.D. Murray in 1890. In politics he was a Liberal Unionist. He married a daughter of Provost Ross of Dingwall. He built the house at Colislimn and also acquired the estate of Firth near Lilliesleaf. His son Douglas continued the family legal tradition, while Ross was a long-time doctor in Hawick (formerly also ‘Hadden’).

Haddo an Turnbull (ha-din-an-turn-bul) n. law partnership between Walter Haddon and Thomas Turnbull, established in Hawick in 1880.

Hadrian’s Waa (hā-dree-inz-waw) n. Hadrian’s Wall, ordered to be built by Roman Emperor Hadrian in the year 122, taking 6 years to complete. It snakes its way across England from the Tyne to the Solway, along the way. It is 73 miles long and was up to 5 metres high, although only a few good sections remain. Colloquially it is used as a way of referring to the Border, although in fact is far south of the modern boundary. Nevertheless, its existence probably had a lasting influence on Border history.

haggie (haw-gee) n., arch. a small hagg – ‘. . . And wondered wha my bouk wad find, Deep laired within some mossy haggie’ [JT].

Haggie (haw-gee) n. William (16th C.) recorded in 1581 as ‘Willelmus Hagy notarius publicus’ when he wrote a ‘letter of slains’ in Haick. This was for Robert and James Scott, forgiving a group of other Scotts from Allanhaugh and Over Southfield in the murder of their brother George. He was probably a cleric of Glasgow, and may have been a minister at one of the local churches. It is possible that his surname was ‘Haig’ or ‘Heggie’.

Haggiehaugh (haw-gee-hawch) n. former farmstead in the Liddel valley, just north of the present Larriston farm. It was known in earlier times as Larriston Rig. Charles Edward Stewart’s marched this way in 1745, and he spent the night there. John Oliver paid tax on 38 windows there in 1748 (suggesting that at that time the name was used for the main farmhouse of Larriston). The lands were purchased in 1790 by Maj.-Gen. William Elliot from William Oliver of Dinlabyre for £1,900 sterling, and joined to those of Larriston. Elliot had 6 horses there according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. James Rutherford was there in 1801. The 1711 Land Tax Rolls lists ‘Lariston-rig, now called Haggiehaugh’ among the properties of George Scott-Elliot of Larriston (marked on Stobie’s 1770 map as ‘Hagghaugh’; it is ‘Haggishaugh’ and ‘Haggyhaugh’ in 1797 and 1821; not to be confused with Haggishaah).

Haggishaah (haw-gees-haw) n. area around the foot of the Vertish Hill, also known as Burnflat, being the edge of the Common. The Common Riding cavalcade used to ride this way, up until 1803, when the Cornet was thrown from his horse and injured, recovering in a house there. Until 1991 there was a row of dilapidated cottages here, one being the birthplace of ‘Old Mortality’. They were demolished following a fire. The same area was fancifully said to be home of a Michael Paiterson, who entertained the local priests to dinner twice a year, on one occasion the haggis being so large that its skewer pin was used to mend the Corn Mill, inspiring Robert Burns lines ‘Your pin wad help ti mend a mill In time o’ need’ (R.E. Scott wrote about this in the Burns Chronicle of 1964). Walter Scott of Haggishaugh was recorded as owner of part of Burnflat in about 1874 – ‘At the Haggishaah’ we rank up, Weaver Will’s auld bonnet clank up’ [AB] (there are several spellings, including ‘Hangmanshaa’; it appears to be ‘Hagguhall’ on Stobie’s 1770 map; the name probably derives from Old English or Old Scots for ‘a copse by the waterside’, although more fanciful origins, sometimes involving haggis, have also been suggested; note that ‘Haggiehaugh’ was an old name for Larriston in Liddesdale).

Haggishaah Brae (haw-gees-haw-brä) n. name formerly given to Burnflat Brae. In former times it was when the Procession reached here that the Riding of the Marches really began.

Haggis Haa see Haggishaah

haick (hik, hık) n. a garment worn in Morocco, consisting of a large a piece of cotton, wool or silk cloth (a variant of ‘haik’, not to be confused with a town in the Borders).

Haick (hık) n. another former spelling for Hawick (recorded as such in a Church of Scotland register of 1586, on Pont’s manuscript of the 1590s, Robert Gordon’s map of the Clyde and Tweed basins, c. 1636-52, Blaeu’s map of 1654 and Nicolaes Visscher’s map of 1689; following Pont it is often written ‘Haïck’).

haiflin (hāf-lin) n., poet. a halfilling, stripeling, young lad – ‘When lowsed at een be it hairst or plooin’, The thought o’ the haiflin turns to woonin’’ [WL] (also hauffin).

Haig (hāg) n. Adam (17th C.) tenant in Belses. His wife was Isobel, heir of James Riddell, portioner of Lilliesleaf. Andrew (17th C.) listed as ‘cottar’ at Abbotrule Townhead in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Anthony (d.1801) weaver from Hawick, son of David. He could be the stockingmaker Anthony whose son Thomas died in 1819. He is probably the resident of Hawick who married Margaret Gibson in 1759 and had children including: Janet (b.1761); David (b.1763); William (b.1765); Margaret (b.1766); Jane (b.1767);
the Haig

Isabel (b.1770); David (again, b.1772); Janet (again, b.1774); and Margaret (b.1776). All these children were baptised in Hawick, but the 1770 one was also recorded in Wilton, with witnesses William Simpson and Gavin Wallace. Anthony (b.1812/3) provision merchant on the High Street, at about No. 17 in 1851. He was listed in Slater’s 1852 directory. He presented at least 3 papers to the Archæological Society in its first few years, on topics like ‘Medieval History’. His wife was Isabella and their included Thomas, George, Anthony, Margaret, John, Charles and William. He moved to Philadelphia and in 1863 made a donation to the Museum, when he is described as ‘an old member of the Society’. Anthony (b.1823/4) weaver in Hawick. He was living at 52 Loan in 1861. His wife was Euphemia and they had a son John. Earl Douglas (1861–1928) soldier, born in Edinburgh. He worked his way through the ranks, seving in the Sudan, in the Boer War and in India. He was the youngest Major-General of his time and became Director of Military Training at the War Office in 1906. He established a general staff and a territorial army and organised the British Expeditionary Force. In WWI he commanded forces in France and Belgium, becoming Commander-in-Chief of the B.E.F. in December 1915. Although successful, his tactics at Somme and Passchendaele have been much debated. After his retirement in 1921 he devoted his efforts to the Royal British Legion. He was made Earl Haig in 1919 and given £100,000 by a ‘grateful nation’. He became Baron Haig in 1921. In Hawick he was made an Honorary Burgess in 1925 when he attended the Callants’ Club dinner. The Haig Maternity Hospital was named after him in 1930 and Douglas Haig Court in 1976. Bemersyde House near St. Boswells, was bought for him by the Governor of the Royal Hospital was named after him in 1930 and Dou-

C.) Hawick man who executed the 1939–45 Roll of Honour for local soldiers who fell in WWII, displayed in the Museum. The design was the same as for the WWI Roll. He may be the same man as the painter and decorator who was the bugler for the Boy Scouts, seen in photographs of the 1910 visit by Beden-Powell. John (18th C.) recorded in a Hawick sasine of 1764 as ‘John Haig, in Whitfield, bailie in that part’. He may have been acting as a bailiff for the deed, or was a Hawick Bailie. Patrick (15th C.) part of a ‘retour of inquest’ held in Hawick in 1424 to decide on the inheritance of part of the Barony of How-nam. His name is recorded as ‘Hage’, and most of the other men were local lairds (formerly ‘Haige’ and variants).

the Haig (θu-haig) n. Haig Maternity Home, attached to the Springbank Clinic on Princes Street, and built in 1930, through the generosity of Norman W. Grieve. It was developed by the Town Council and handed over to the County. The labour and public wards were on the ground floor, with the nursery on the first floor. It was officially renamed the Haig Maternity Hospital when taken over by the N.H.S. in 1948. It delivered about 12,000 babies in Hawick from 1931 until 1988 when the B.G.H. was opened. The last baby born there was Claire White. The buildings were sold off for private housing in the mid-1990s. A history of the Haig was written by Dr. Suttie in 1999 (also sometimes called ‘the Home’).

hainchil (hān-chil) v., arch. to jerk the haunches, walk with a limp (also henchil).

the Hainin (thū-hān-in) n. the Haining, a house dating from 1794, in a walled estate on the left on the way into Selkirk from Hawick. Some of the decoration is by Archibald Elliot and the statuary by Canova. It served as a military headquarters during WWII, and partly burned down in 1944. The lakeside setting is impressive, and the grounds contain the site of Selkirk Castle on Peel Hill, as well as the stable block, former bear and wolf enclosures and the remains of a lectern-shaped dovecote. The estate was once granted to the Constable of Selkirk Castle. It was part of the Crown lands in Ettrick Forest from about 1456 until about 1507. It later became the home of a branch of the Scotts, said by Scott of Satchells to be descended from the Scotts of H assendean. They held the lands from at least 1477. Robert Scott of the Haining witnessed several local charters in the late 15th century. It appears to have been held by the Murrays of Philiphaugh (recorded in 1491), before passing back to the Scotts in 1492. Sheep were stolen from Robert Scott there in 1494/5. John Murray gave permission in about 1499 for John Scott (and his son John) to hold the lease. John Scott had a charter for the lands in 1507, when it was described as a land of 7 pounds and 2 shillings of old extent. Thomas Scott of Haining held a sasine for the lands in 1538. Walter Scott was tenant there in 1541, paying £24 yearly. Andrew Riddell bought it from the Scotts in about 1625. John Langlands, minister of Wilton, had a sasine of lands there in 1664. In 1678 the lands were valued at almost £2000. Early in the 18th century the estate was bought by the Pringles of Clifton. In 1785 the lands were valued at about £1440. In 1842 it passed to John Pringle’s sister, Margaret Violet, and her husband Archibald Pringle Douglas of Adderstone and Midshiel. The grounds once held exotic animals, including a bear and a large monkey; the monkey shivered in cold weather, leading to the local phrase ‘Chitterin’ to death, like the Hainin’ Puggy’ – ‘Ca’ up young Hob, of Gilminscleugh, Oakwood, and the Bowhill, Brave Haining (hā-in) n. James (19th C.) proprietor of the Hawick Advertiser, taking over from James Dalgleish about 6 months after the newspaper started. He took Dalgleish as a partner when he returned to Hawick in 1857, but bought him out in 1870 after disagreement about taking his son William Dalgleish into partnership. He then sold it to William Morrison in 1876. His premises were at 9 High Street. He married Agnes Robson, and James H. was their son. A portrait exists of him. James Halliday (1870–1946) son of James and Agnes Robson. He was long involved with the Archeological Society, he was Treasurer 1907–11, Assistant Secretary 1917–18, Joint Secretary 1920–25 and 1929, Secretary 1930–35 and Vice-President 1936. He wrote many articles for the Transactions. His series of monumental inscriptions in Hawick’s cemeteries, with extensive notes, are an extraordinary achievement, leaving a huge legacy of local family history. He married Isabella Christina, daughter of coal merchant Thomas Rutherford.

halberd (hal-burd, ber’) n. a pike fitted with an axe-head, a weapon consisting of an axe-head and steel spike, or other arrangement of several sharp edges, mounted on a long pole, used in the 15th and 16th centuries. Those carried by the Burgh Officers at the Common Riding are traditionally said to be exact copies of those taken from the English at Hornshole; James Wilson in ‘Annals of Hawick’ states that there were people then living (around 1850) who claimed to have seen the original halberds. In 1908 the artist Tom Scott donated an old halberd head that he said belonged to Hawick – ‘Her line o’ males shall pass away Wi’ the halbert, brand and spear . . . ’[T], ‘Paid Robert Tinlin for mending his halbard . . . 0 0 6’[BR1771], ‘. . . Hauberk and Halberd in gallant array’[JT], ‘When drum and fife went through the town On Common Riding morn, Wi’ deadly halberts in the van, By burgh beagles borne’[?], ‘Here is the glitter of halbert, There the bright flash of a spear: Caught in the spell of the Border, Shades of her story appear’[WL], ‘Stout tower and halberd and sword thwart the invading in-vader . . . ’[IWS] (from Old French, also spelled ‘halbert’).

halberdier (hal-bur-deer) n. a soldier armed with a halberd, a guard carrying a halberd as a sign of his duty – ‘See how the Saxons plumes bob in the sky – Yeoman and carbinier, Billman and halberdier, Fierce is the foray, and far is the cry’ [ES], ‘The halberdiers wi’ buttons clear, Like sunbeams brightly glacin’’[JT].

the Halberdier (thu-hal-burd-eer) n. one of two official at the Common Riding who carry halberds. One of them delivers the Council’s invitation to the Cornet-elect, receiving a new shilling in return. They also perform other official duties during the Common Riding, such as reading the Proclamations and leading various processions, such as the Drums and Fifes on the Thursday night. It is unclear when halberdiers began to lead these processions, but there are records in the early 19th century, and by the end of the century the present traditions were well established. They were originally Burgh Officers, appointed by the Council along with the town drummer and piper (or fifer), and would lead the parades in front of the musicians. Earlier records suggest that they received payment for decorating their coats at Common Riding time. In 1712 cloth was ordered to make 4 coats ‘for the tuo officers, pyper, and drummer’. And more cloth was bought in May of 1732. The present uniform is a long brown coat and trousers, with yellow trim (and 16 buttons) and a top hat. Previously it is recorded as consisting of grey coats with mulberry-coloured collar and cuffs, long shoulder-knots of coloured ribbon, knee-breeks and Sunday hat. In 1875 it is recorded that one of the Halberdiers appeared in the ‘much disputed new suit’. Through most of the 20th century he was a Council employee with the official title of ‘Burgh Officer’, and the other Halberdier was the ‘Assistant’. He would usually read the Proclamation and deliver the letter to the Cornet Elect. This changed with Reorganisation in 1974/5, with the title changed to ‘District Officer’. And with the Scottish Borders Council taking over in 1996 the job has ceased to be part of the official duties of a Council employee, with the 2 Halberdiers receiving token payment from the Common Riding Committee. A new uniform was gifted by Lovet Mill in 2006 (see also Burgh Officer).

Halberdiers (hal-burd-eer) n. the men who have carried the halberds during the Common Riding generally perform the duty for many years, and in former times also served as town criers and policemen. Tracking them over the centuries is complicated by their changing roles, being sometimes ‘Burgh Officer’, ‘bellman’ or just ‘officer’. A partial list includes: ‘Jok Scott, belman in Hawik’ in 1610; Walter Stewart and James Kinnaird in 1638; Wull ‘the Bellman’ Scott, late 1600s; John Stewart until about 1696; Alexander Scott from 1696; Alexander Young, at least 1696–1707; James Oliver, recorded in 1718; James Cowan, recorded in 1723; John Stewart, recorded in 1723 and around 1743; Francis Turnbull, from 1734 until at least 1767; ‘Wull Leppie’, early 1800s’ Rob ‘the Naig’ Tinlin, until about 1815; Sandy Bryson, early 1800s; Caleb Rutherford, 1820s; John ‘Tufty’ Wilson, 1830s; William Turnbull, 1820s to 1840s; Tom Wells, 1850s; Thomas ‘Tam-a-Linkin’ Turnbull till about 1860; James Smith, 1860s; Michael Wintrope, from 1860s; Fraser Richardson, late 1800s; Tom Cook, 1880s; Walter Lawson, 1880s; Mssrs. Beattie and Harkness, around 1899; John Waldie, early 1900s; Robert Naylor 1928–57; Alec Dobbie 1929–58; Bill Allan 1958–84; ‘Dimmer’ Anderson 1959–2008; George Milligan 1985–96; Robert Payne 1997–; ‘Eck’ Barclay 2009– (also called Burgh Officer).

Halbert Noble (hal-ber’-no-bul) n. pseudonym used by a Newcastlepoet. His 1861 poem ‘The Last Dandie Dinnmont’ appeared at the end of David Anderson’s collection of his own poems.

Haldane (hawl-dan) n. James (18th C.) Hawick resident who married Helen Bryson in 1774. Their children included: Helen (b.1775); Ann (b.1778); and James (b.1781). He is probably the ‘James Halden’ who is stated to have had 2 stocking frames in Hawick in an account of local industry by David Loch in about 1777. James Alexander (1768–1851) younger brother of Robert, he had a naval career, but left to pursue an evangelical calling. Along with his brother and possibly John Aikman and Rowland Hill, he visited Hawick in 1798. It is said that they ‘preached from a heap of stones – the debris of the old Tower of Hawick’, which could have been the demolished Garrison at the bottom of the Howe­gate. The men they inspired in Hawick became known as ‘Haldanites’ and within a few years had started the congregation that met in the Tabernacle. James (b.c.1790) born at Chantleikerk, he was miller at Riddell Mill. In 1851 he was recorded as farmer of 60 acres, employing 2 labourers. He was listed as miller at Riddell Mill in Slater’s 1852 directory. His wife Helen was from Selkirk. His children included: William; James, corn merchant in Hawick; Helen; Euphemia; and Janet. James (1823/4–98) born at Standhill farm where his father worked before moving to Riddell Mill. He came to Hawick where he set up as a corn merchant at 4 Howe­gate, building up the business as the railway opened to Carlisle. He ran the farm at Sinton Parkhead for a while, while his nephew ran the business. Overall he ran his corn merchant’s for about 40 years. It is said he was a very strong man, who could carry a sack of oats under each arm, and once assisted the police by literally ‘lifting’ the culprit to the police station. He was an elder in Allars Kirk, a Liberal in politics and a keen bowler. In 1851 he married Isabella Aitken (who died in 1894, aged 60). Their children included James, Agnes (who married butcher John Davies), Isabella (who married Thomas Graham), Lizzie (who married Peter Rutherford, farmer of Clifton Hill), Jessie, Phemie, Ellen (who died aged 23), Annie Aitken (who died aged 22) and 2 Johns (who both died young). He was buried in the Wello­gate Cemetery. James (19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Isabella Laid­law and their children included Agnes (b.1860) and William (b.1862). James (1857/8–1930) son of corn merchant James. He was a simpleton with a ‘palley’ arm, who assisted his father. He also used to regularly drop in on Robert Purdon, Town Clerk, until presented with a bill for his time! James (1840/1–1884) nephew of corn merchant James, he helped run the business. He married Elizabeth Jackson (who died in 1913, aged 75). Their children were Bella, Lizzie and Jane. John (16th C.) mentioned as one of those excepted in the 1564/5 bond between the Scots and the Kerrs. His name is recorded as ‘Johne Haldene of the Ilk’. In 1569 he was a surety along with Rutherfords, for Robert Ker of Lochtour. Also in 1569 he was among the lairds who signed a bond to keep peace on the Border. John (18th C.) mason of Galashiel, who possibly worked on the Slitrig Bridge and was made an Honorary Burgess in 1776. John (b.1814/15) born in Bow­den Parish. He was miller at Riddell Mill in 1841 and at Highchesters Mill in 1851. He was listed as miller at Highchesters Mill in Slater’s 1852 directory. His wife was Isabella, and their children included James, Isabella, Robert, Helen and John. Robert (1764–1842) Scottish evangelical preacher, elder brother of James Alexander. He inherited the family estate of Airthey House (now part of Stirling University), but later sold it to fund his missionary work. The preaching meet­ings of him and his brother in Hawick in 1798 (and not 1789, as sometimes stated) led to the formation of the Independent Church and the later construction of the Tabernacle on the Kirk Wynd, this being effectively the seed for the later formation of the Congregational and Baptist Kirks. He helped fund the construction of the Tabernacle in Hawick and supported Mr. Paton, who was the first preacher of the new Hawick congre­gation. The first (and only) permanent minister of the Independent Kirk in Hawick, Charles Gray, was trained at the Haldane brothers’ academy in Edinburgh.

haldin (hal-din) pp., arch. held – ‘...of the said lands of Quhitchester to be haldin of the said William and his aieris in myn or thair de­faltis’[SB1470] (cf. the later hauenden).

halesome (hāl-sūm) adj., arch. wholesome — ‘Wi’ halesome fair my brod You’ve set ...’ [WL].

the Half Moon Hotel (thu-hawf-moon-hötel) n. hotel and pub situated at 64 High Street, which held popular dances in its ballroom in the 19th century. Common Riding events were often held there. The ballroom was also regularly used for weddings and other events, and held the Episcopal school and church meetings from about 1847–50. In the early part of that century the hotel was known simply as ‘Mrs. Inglis’ and was a favoured place for factory workers to meet on Saturdays to have their pay distributed. It was taken over by Anthony Boiston, who changed the name. It is recorded as the Cornet’s headquarters, where the Flag was displayed from the Thursday night in 1875 and as the location for the more informal Colour Bussing of 1881. Although the inn is long gone, the adjacent passageway is still known as Half Moon Yard. Previous to the existence of the hotel there was a pended house on the site (also written ‘Hauf’).

Half Moon Yaird (hawf-moon-yārd) n. passageway off O’Connell Street, behind where the Half Moon Hotel used to be, off the south side of the street.

Haliburton (ha-lee-bur’-in) n. Agnes ‘Nanny’ (18th C.) housemaid at Stobs in 1789 when she was working for Sir Francis Elliott. Andrew (17th C.) resident of Hawick. His wife was Helen Brown and they had an unnamed son in 1670. Andrew, W.S. (1673–1738) 3rd son of Thomas of Newmain, Berwickshire. He served as factor to Scott of Harden in at least the years 1711–24. He was probably the Andrew, ‘writer in Edinburgh’ who acted for William Elliott of Harwood in at least the period 1705–08. In 1700 he married Marion, 2nd daughter of Robert Elliot of Midlem Mill. David of Mertoun (16th C.) listed in 1549 among the associates of Walter Ker of Cessford who were accused of helping the English in raids upon the farms of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme, including Goldielands and others near Hawick. It is unclear how he was related to the other Haliburtons of Mertoun and Dryburgh: he may be the younger son of William of Mertoun, who married Euphane, daughter of the Laird of Gledstains, and whose marriage required permission from the Cardinal on account of them being too closely related. George of Pinnacle (16th/17th C.) married Dorothy, who was probably a daughter of Gavin Elliot of Stobs. In 1608 his wife was one of the heirs of Stobs who complained about a raid by the Scotts of Northhouse and others. George (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Agnes Gledstains and their children included Janet (b.1635) and Henry (b.1640). Walter (b.1642), with the mother’s name given as ‘Manie Gledstains’, was probably also his son. George (17th/18th C.) Burgess of Hawick, recorded in 1694 when he had to pay his Burgess fee, suggesting that he had just become a full member of one of the Trades. He may be the George, married to Margaret Scott, whose son Walter was baptised in Hawick in 1703, and perhaps also the wright whose son Benjamin was baptised in 1704. His other children probably included Mary (b.1701), Bessie (b.1707) and Henry (b.1708). He may be the George who is recorded supplying liquor to Wells House in the second quarter of the 18th century. George (18th C.) local merchant who took possession of the lands of Dovemount in 1770 from Robert Langlands and subsequently sold off various parts. He is listed as ‘George Hallyburton, Dovemount’ when he subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’, (1784). He could be the George whose house near Hawick Mill was severely damaged in the flood of 1677. In 1788 he is recorded as owner of ‘William Tudhope’s lands, purchased from Langlands’ in Wilton Parish, valued at £25; this is probably Dovemount. In the 1811 Land Tax records he is listed as owner of Dovemount (although he may have already been deceased), ‘acquired from Langlands’. Later in the 19th century the lands were owned by Thomas Laidlaw. George (18th/19th C.) farmer at Newton in Wilton Parish, recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Henry (17th C.) wright of Hawick, listed among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He is listed as ‘Hendrie Halliburton’, living on the west-side of Hawick on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He is probably the Henry who had a son Henry in Hawick in 1696. He may be the Henry who witnessed a baptism for John Beattie in Hawick Parish in 1676. John of Muirhouselaw (17th C.) possibly son of Adam of Muirhouselaw. He held lands in the Baronies of Belses and Pinnacle according to the tax roll for the Abbey of Jedburgh in 1626. He was probably the Laird of ‘Morislaw’ who represented Roxburghshire in Parliament in 1625. He may be the same John who was on the ‘retour’ for Ker of Cessford in 1600, and who had a charter for Friarslaw in 1606. He was one of the minor barons of Roxburghshire convened to try to elect representatives to Parliament in 1628. He held lands.
in Maxton Parish in 1643. He may be the John of Muirhouselaw who married Margaret, daughter and heiress of David Boswell of Bowhill. His son John (b.1634) succeeded to Muirhouselaw, as well as to Bowhill. John (1634–1704) son of John and Margaret Boswell. He probably also held land at Belles. He married Jean (d.1703), daughter of Mark Pringle of Clifton and had sons John (who succeeded) and Patrick (who became Dean of Guild in Edinburgh). John (17th C.) resident of Minto Craigend who appears in the Hearth Tax records of 1694. He is listed as owner of 4 hearths along with William Cunningham, but it is unclear who they were or why they were listed together. It is possible he was the same as John of Muirhouselaw. John (17th C.) tenant in Lilliesleaf Mill according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. John of Howcleuch (d.1750s) doctor from Jedburgh. In 1714 he married Christian, daughter of Simon Elliot of Swinside. He became Laird of Jedburgh. In 1714 he married Christian, daughter of Simon Elliot of Swinside. He became Laird of Jedburgh and also owned Borthwick Mains, these perhaps being inherited through his wife. His son Simon became minister of Newcastle. His daughter Margaret died in Hawick in 1798.

Rev. Simon (1720–1797) son of John, a doctor in Jedburgh, and Christian Elliot of Swinside. He was educated at Edinburgh University and licensed by the Presbytery of Dalkeith in 1745. In 1749 he was presented to Castleton Parish by the Duke of Buccleuch and became minister there in 1751. The delay was because of an objection by Sir Gilbert Elliot of Minto, one of the Lords of Session at the time, in part because he used notes while preaching. Regarding using notes, the Presbytery stated that ‘there was no law of the Church against that, and that it was practised by several ministers of the best character’. However, the objections appeared to run deeper than this, since he also had threatening letters sent to him and was insulted by a mob in Castleton, with 3 men and 1 woman imprisoned in Edinburgh for riotous conduct following the reading of his appointment; the congregation objected to having no say in the appointment of their minister and locked up the church and filled the lock with stones. Some of the members of his church left in 1751 to start a secession church (later to become the Newcastle- ton United Presbyterian Church). He employed a preacher to help him in 1759 and later an assistant minister, John Campbell. In 1762 he was presented to Ashkirk Parish by Sir Gilbert Elliot, and ordained there in 1763, apparently to the great delight of the Castleton parishioners. There is no record of whether he was as popular at Ashkirk! However, he did have the new church built for him there in 1791. He inherited the lands of Howcleuch and Borthwick Mains from his father, but in 1755 sold them to Walter Scott, farmer at Commoside. In 1779 he was granted liferent of Elliot of Minto’s lands of Shielwood (valued at £260) and the west and north-west parts of Headshaw (valued at £149 14s 2d). This grant of lands was just so that he could be added to the Roxburghshire voters’ roll; in 1788 he was listed under ‘Votes of Sir Gilbert Elliot’ among the voters of Roxburghshire. He was recorded at Ashkirk in the 1785–91 Horse Tax Rolls. 1794/5 he was listed in the Carriage Tax Rolls. He held the superiority of part of Headshaw in life-rent. He was described as ‘simple-minded’ (by Rev. Russell of Ettrick). During his bachelor days his housekeeper was his sister Peggy. He became senile in his old age. He married Elizabeth, 2nd daughter of Robert Elliot of Midlem Mill (and probably widow of Charles Paterson of Drygrange) in 1749. Their children included: Katherine; John, who was a Captain with the East India Company, died in India and was the last male representative of the family of Newmains and Mertoun; and Robert and Thomas, who both died young. He wrote a description of the Parish for Sinclair’s Statistical Account. Thomas of Muirhouselaw (1692–1716) son of John and grandson of John and Jean Pringle. In 1708 he married Elizabeth, 2nd daughter of George Rutherford of Fairnington. He was killed by his brother-in-law George Rutherford in a fight which flared up over a boundary dispute. His cousin George (Lord Provost of Edinburgh) married his widow and succeeded to Muirhouselaw. Thomas (18th/19th C.) carrier in Hawick. In 1791 he paid the cart tax in Hawick. He was owner of 2 work horses according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Thomas (18th/19th C.) helped compile a ‘New Valuation of Houses and Gardens in the Town of Hawick’ in 1814. He could be the Thomas, farmer at Tushielaw, who, along with James (also farmer there) was listed in the 1835 electoral roll as joint proprietor of a house in Hawick, succeeding their father Walter (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. In 1703 he married ‘Maly Eliot’ from Hawick Parish. Their children included: Margaret (b.1709); Andrew (b.1712); Isobel (b.1714); Mary (b.1718); and Janet (b.1721) (see also Haliburton; formerly spelled ‘Haliburtonn’, ‘Haliburtoun’, ‘Haliburtoun’, ‘Halibeourton’, ‘Hallyburton’, ‘Halyburton’, ‘Helliborton’, ‘Heliebourton’, etc.).
Haliburton’s Wynd

Haliburton’s Wynd (ha-lee-bur’-inz-wind) n. another name for Walter’s Wynd, in use in the 18th and perhaps 19th centuries.

Halidon Hill (ha-li-din-hil) n. battle in 1333, the site being about 2 miles north-west of Berwick. It followed Edward III deciding to take back the port from the Scots. The siege of Berwick lasted months, with Edwards men ravaging the Scottish Borders while they waited. To relieve the siege Lord Archibald Douglas finally led his forces to engage the English at Halidon Hill, the Scots becoming bogged down and being slaughtered by English archers. Part of the English force was commanded by Edward Baliol. The other Scots commanders were Robert Stewart (the future king) and John Randolph, 3rd Earl of Moray. English casualties were light, but the Scots lost thousands of men, including the Guardian, at least 5 other Earls and perhaps 90 knights. Sir Michael Scott of Rankilburn was one of the few local men who survived. It is said that the battle was proceeded by hand to hand combat involving Turnbull of Rule and Sir Robert Benvale, with Turnbull being slain. A block of stone was placed there in 1913 by the Berwickshire Naturalists’ Club.

haliness (hä-lee-nis) n., poet. holiness – ‘…worship the Lord in the beutie o’ haliness’ [HSR], ‘Sing unto the Lord, O ye saunts o’ his, an’ gie thanks at the remembirence o’ his haliniss’ [HSR] (also written ‘haliniss’).

Halifax (haw-lee-fawks) n. type of British bomber that crashed near Craik village in 1944, killing all 8 crew members. A memorial plaque in Craik commemorates the event.

Halket (hal-ki’). John (c.1780–1828) studied at St. Andrews University 1794–8 and Edinburgh University 1801/2. He spent some time as a tutor in the family of George Douglas of Cavers. He was licensed by Jedburgh Presbytery and was minister at Coupar from 1807 until he died.

Halkyn (hal-kin) n. alternative name of Ashkirk Manse, situated just beside the church.

Hall (hal, law) n. Agnes (18th C.) chambermaid at Cavers in 1785, when she was working for Capt. John Douglas. Agnes (b.1799/1800) widow of Thomas. She was a draper in Newcastleton from at least 1837 until the 1860s. She had children George, Thomas and John. They lived at about 35 North Hermitage Street. Andrew (18th/19th C.) farmer recorded at Heap on both the 1797 Horse Tax and Dog Tax Rolls. He owned 8 horses, and so must have had a fair sized farm, and he also had a greyhound. He could be the Andrew, married to Betty Laidlaw, whose son Benjamin was baptised in Wilton in 1809. Andrew (b.1822/3) born in Edrom, he was a farmer at Horsleyhill. He is recorded there in 1861 as farmer of 395 acres, employing 10 people. His wife was Helen and their children included Anna and Margaret L. Andrew (19th/20th C.) son of Benjamin and Margaret Wilson, he was a tweed foreman. He married Mary, daughter of Robert Greenwood. Benjamin (b.1809/10) spinner at Nixon’s Mill. He was living at Lynwood in 1841 and 1851. He married Margaret, daughter of spinner Robert Wilson. Their children included Jessie, Betsy, Andrew, Isabel, Robert and Benjamin. David (17th C.) recorded as tenant of ‘Oldsteson’ in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. It is unclear precisely where this farm was, but probably near Roughlee. David (1826/7–86) from Batley in Yorkshire, he settled in Hawick in 1849 to work in the woollen trade. He became the best local cricket batsman, inspiring the game within Hawick. He helped as instructor for the Hawick team when it formed in 1849. His brother Joseph came to Hawick later. He worked as a woollen waste merchant for about 30 years. In Slater’s 1852 directory he is listed as a partner with Joseph as an earthenware and glass dealer, as well as rag dealers, on Backdamgate (incorrectly listed as ‘Hill’). The brothers were lodgers on the Cross Wynd in 1851, working as wool dealers, employing 4 women and 2 boys. He was at 15 Backdamgate in 1861 and later lived at Hopehill. He may be the David listed as owner of ‘Part of Roughlee’ in about 1874, acquired from Langleys, which had been owned by Hector Blaikie according to the 1811 Land Tax Rolls. He married Mary Day, who remarried George White of Dudley, and died in 1904, aged 72. Their children were Rowland Carr and Lucy (who married Dr. Adam Frederick Hunter Dryden and emigrated to the U.S.A.) as well as several children who did not survive past infancy. He is buried in Wellogate Cemetery. George (17th C.) Hawick resident. In 1679 he was convicted of ‘ane blood’ on Robert Scott, and ordered to pay him 5 shillings Scots per day on account that his arm was swollen and he could not reap. Rev. George (c.1680–1740) graduating from Edinburgh University in 1699, he became Chaplain to the Laird of Torsonce (near Stow), was licensed by the Presbytery of Earlston in 1706, and became Chaplain to Thomas, Earl of Haddington. He was ordained as minister of Abbotrule in 1714 and remained there until translated to Linton in 1728. He was also presented to Lochmaben in 1722, but appears not to have gone there. He preached in Hawick at least once, in 1721. He is recorded in 1726 along with Alexander Horsburgh of that Ilk in a bond with Robert Pringle, writer in Edinburgh. And in 1733 part of a debt to Alexander Horsburgh of that Ilk was repaid. But a court action by John Horsburgh of that Ilk followed in 1735, presumably to recover the rest of the loan. He married Emelia Duncan (d.1768) and their children were Patrick, Gilbert and Jean (who married Colin Campbell in Edinburgh). He published ‘Practical Sermons on several subjects’ (1732). George (18th/19th C.) married Elizabeth Oliver in Hawick in 1792. Their children included: Thomas (b.1793), said to have been a sailor in the American War of 1812; and Agnes (b.1800), who married Jacob Evans and died in Philadelphia in 1884. It is claimed in some genealogies that he was born in Duns in 1763, also had children John (b.1796) and George (b.1798), both born in Duns, and emigrated to Philadelphia, dying of yellow fever shortly afterwards; however, it seems possible that two completely different Georges are being conflated here. It seems reasonable to assume that his wife was daughter of John Oliver and Agnes Ekron (based on his daughter Agnes’ descendants in America having possession of Agnes Ekron’s book of the catechism), but any connection to Halls from Duns is much less clear. George (b.1789/90) born in Northumberland, he was a sheep and cattle dealer in Newcastle. He was listed as a Castleton drover in 1821 when he subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’. He was on the Borders Union Railway Committee for Liddesdale in the 1850s. In 1841, 1851 and 1861 he was living at about 19 Douglas Square. His first wife was Sarah and he secondly married Christina, daughter of joiner John Douglas; she worked as an assistant post-mistress in Newcastle. His children included Helen and John. George (b.1821/2) from Jedburgh, he was shepherd at Ruletownhead in 1861. His wife was Elizabeth and their children included Andrew, Arcilla, Helen and James. George (1822/3–90) fishmonger, game and poultry dealer in Hawick. His business at 40 High St. was established in 1866 and later moved to No. 66. In 1861 he was a forester at Bowmont Forest Cottages, and so must have moved to Hawick after that. His shop can be seen in a photograph of 1903, probably shortly after it moved to these new premises. He married Agnes Wright, and she died in Leeds in 1908, aged 83. His children included Cecilia, John, Betsy Briggs, Margaret, John Wright, Alison and Robert. He is buried at Oxnam. Gilbert (15th C.) witness to a sasine of 1469 for the lands of Wolfelee for Home of Wedderburn. Robert was listed before him and so presumably related. Gilbert (1771–1842) son of William and Isabel Best, he was born in Wilton Parish. He is recorded as ‘Ind.’ at Greensidehall Cottage in 1841. He was probably a retired farmer from that area. He married Agnes Robertson, who died at Ashkirk in 1835, aged 65. He died at Greensidehall and was buried in Old Wilton Cemetery. Isabella ‘Tibbie o Wigg’ (19th C.) married George Scott, shepherd at Hardlee and Hyndlee. One of her sons was Overhall farmer James. James (d.1570s) described as ‘in Wollie’ (presumably Wolfelee) when Will Robson ‘in Rochtrewchmylne’ was charged with his murder. Robson failed to appear and so his surety, James Langlands of that Ilk, was ordered to pay 20 merks to his daughter Malie. James (16th C.) recorded in 1590 when accused by the English Warden of being part of a raid into England 3 years earlier. John Scott ‘the Tinckler’ led the group of what was claimed to be 500 men on a day-long foray. He had sons Janie and Hob, who are listed with him in an accusation of 1590 for a raid on ‘Wartoum’. His son ‘Jamy Hall of Heavyside, younger’ is recorded in another complaints of 1590. They may have been descended from William and David, who were recorded as tenants in Heavyside in 1494/5. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Burmemouth. In 1699 he was sent by the Castleton Session to Leith to obtain ‘twelve flagons of claret wine, and bring it for the sacrament’. James (1719/20–88) ‘dweller at Gatehaughscot’ according to his gravestone in Bedrule kirkyard. He married Agnes Thomson, who died in 1786, aged 71. Their son died in Bedrule in 1794, aged 32, and was married to Margaret McKenzie. James (b.1819/20) born in Morebattle Parish, he was a shepherd at Fairloans in Bedrule Parish in 1861. He married Helen Hobkirk and their children included Margaret, Helen and James. Janet (b.1774/5) listed as ‘Ind.’ in the 1841 census at Ewes Old Toll Bar. She was living with Mary, who was probably her daughter, and had other residents in the house, probably lodgers. In 1851 she was listed as a widow at the Old Toll Bar. Jean (18th/19th C.) local character, brought up at Dodburn, she later lived at ‘the Yett’, near Hawick Moor. She had a reputation as a witch, with many stories told.
of her apparent powers. She was certainly an imposing woman, with masculine features, a hirple and a strong personality. John (15th C.) witness in 1436 to a sasine for the lands of Wolfelee and Wolfehopelee. The other men listed were all from relatively nearby, including Thomas, who was presumably related. John (16th C.) one of the King’s shepherds, who, along with John Hope, had sheep stolen from him by a group of Armstrongs and others in 1535. This was at ‘Braidlee in the Forest’, which was probably the farm in the Borthwick valley. The same 2 men were recorded in the Exchequer Rolls of 1540 in ‘Braidie and Filop’ when they were paid £6 13s 4d for 10 bolls of grain. John (16th C.) tenant of ‘Newbegyne’ who was witness in 1557 to the bond in which Turnbuls and others promised to bring William Nixon to Sir John Kerr of Farniechirst. The others involved were from Rulewater and neighbouring areas, and so this was probably a local Newbigging, but perhaps the one near Oxfam. He may be the same John ‘of Newbiging the elder’ listed first in 1544 among Halls who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. John ‘Jock’ (16th C.) tenant of Sir Walter Scott of Howpasley in the lands of Outersideig in 1569. Sir Walter acted as cautioner for his tenants at a meeting in Hawick, assuring that they would obey the laws of the Lord Regent. John (17th C.) servant of Andrew Turnbull, who was tenant at Wolfelee Mill. In 1684 he appeared on a long list of men declared as fugitives for religious non-conformity. John (17th C.) resident at Greena in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. John (18th C.) shepherd at Carewoodrig. His wife Mary Elliot died in 1784 and is buried in Teviothead cemetery. He may have been son of Robert (d.1789), also buried there. John (18th C.) married Violet Laidlaw in Wilton Parish in 1773. Their children included Isabel (b.1775) and Violet (b.1777). John (b.1814/5) born in Hawick, he was a wool spinner. In 1861 he was living at 3 West Port (but he does not appear to have been in the Hawick area in 1841 or 1851). His cousin Annie Ekron was also living with him in 1861 (although the relationship between them is not clear). He married Henrietta (or ‘Henny’) Hume in 1840: she was from Selkirk. John (b.1817/1) born in Morebattle, he was a shepherd at Spittal-on-Rule in 1851. His wife was Alison and their children included James. John (19th C.) from Hawick, he is recorded winning 2 leaping events at the 1835 Common Riding Games. Joseph (b.1829/30) from England, he was younger brother of David, and came to Hawick later. The pair set themselves up as woollen and rag dealers on Backdamgate. In 1851 they were employing 4 women and 2 boys and they were listed as rag dealers in Slater’s 1852 directory. Kitty (18th/19th C.) originally from Northumberland, she lived at Fairloans near the head of the Kale. She recited for James Telfer (the poetic schoolmaster of Sauhtree) a version of the ballad ‘The Death of Parcy Reed’, which he transcribed and presented to Sir Walter Scott and was published in ‘Local Historian’s Table Book’ in 1844. She said that ‘she never liked to sing the verses, as she knew them to be perfectly true, and consequently could not bear to think there had been, of her own surname, such wreatches as the betrayers of Parcy Reed’. Malie (16th C.) only lawful daughter of James in Woollie. She was given 20 merks in compensation by James Langlands of that Ilk, when William Robson failed to appear to answer to the charge of murdering her father. Rev. Mercer (1855–1927) born in Galashiels, 5th son of builder John and Isabella Matthew. He attended St. Andrews and Edinburgh Universities and was licensed by Selkirk Presbytery. He became assistant at St. Mark’s in Dundee and was ordained minister at Careston, Forfarshire in 1886. The next year he was translated to Robertson Parish where he was minister until his death, although he was assisted by Æneas McInnes from 1894. Peter (1847–1928) printer and reporter, he was brother of Anthony, who modelled for the ‘Golden Boy’ on the dome of Edinburgh University’s Old College, and was a great athlete in his youth. He worked for a while for the Hawick Advertiser and later had a florist’s shop in Edinburgh. Robert (15th C.) witness to the 1469 and 1479 sasines for Wolfelee. Gilbert was listed after him in 1469 and probably a close relative. Robert ‘Hob’ (16th C.) tenant of the farms of Simon Elliot in Dod Burn, listed on a bond of security signed in Hawick in 1569. Robert (1692/3–1789) probably shepherd at Carewoodrig, where he died. His wife Janet Scott died at Linhope in 1738. John, shepherd at Carewoodrig was probably his son. He lived to the age of 96. Robert (18th C.) recorded as ‘Robt. Ha, Dodburn’ in 1771 when he paid the Hawick Council for 3000 divots (presumably from Hawick Common). Along with several other neighbouring farmers he paid a penny per 50 divots. Robert (18th/19th C.) farmer at West Mains (in Cavers Parish), recorded on the 1794 and 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He was owner of 7 farm horses and 1 saddle horse in 1797.
(19th/20th C.) son of Benjamin and Margaret Wilson. He was foreman at William Laidlaw & Son's. Thomas (15th C.) recorded as ‘Thome de Hall’ in 1436 when he witnessed a sasine for the lands of Wolfelee and Wolfehopelee. John is also listed, and so probably related. The other men listed were all from relatively nearby. Thomas (15th/16th C.) recorded as ‘Thomas Haw’ when he was on the panel which met at Cavers to decide on inheritance of certain Elliott lands in 1497/8. Thomas of Thorlieshope (18th C.) recorded as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1761. It is unclear how long he held the lands of Thorlieshope or where he was from. Thomas (18th C.) farmer at High Tofts in Kirkton Parish according to the 1794 Horse Tax Rolls. Thomas (18th/19th C.) farmer at Silverbuthall, according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Thomas (d.1837) Newcastleton linen and woollen draper and spirit dealer listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Borders’ in 1821. He may be the same Thomas, resident of Newcastleton, who was recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax rolls. He married Agnes Inglis, who died in 1865, aged 65. His widow was a draper on North Hermitage Street from at least 1841 until the 1860s. His children included George, Thomas and John. Thomas (b.1793) son of George and Elizabeth Oliver, he was born in Hawick. It is said that he was emigrated to America, became a sailor, was captured by the British in the War of 1812 and died in Dartmoor Prison. Thomas (b.1799/1800) carter in Denholm from at least 1841. He was a carter in 1851 he was listed as a coal agent, living at Hассendean Station House, and in 1861 was a carter somewhere near Leyden Road in Denholm. His wife was Isabella, from Kirkton Parish. He had daughter Jane (or ‘Jeany’) and Helen. Walter (1778–1863) houseman of Brougham Place who was one of the founders of the Relief (Allars) Kirk. In 1841 he was recorded at about 13 Brougham Place, living with his wife Agnes and children Mary and Ann. William (16th C.) recorded in 1549 as ‘Williame Haw’ when he was a resident of Whames and listed among the men complaining about their farms being ravaged in the previous year by a group of Englishmen, assisted by Kers and others. William (17th C.) recorded in Hawick in 1674 when he and his family were banished from the Town for running at the Bailie with a sword and threatening to shoot him, ‘and because they are vagabond Egyptians’. He could be the William who married Janet Aitchison and whose children baptised in Hawick included Bessie (b.1652), John (b.1654) and James (b.1657). William (17th/18th C.) married Helen Anderson in Kirkton Parish in 1709. William (b.1679/80) shepherd in lands adjacent to Hawick Common. He was shepherd at Winnington Rig for 24 years, then 2 years later moved to Langflat, where he worked for 8 years, until about 1751, thereafter living at Dodburn and Acreknowe. He gave evidence in 1767 regarding the previous use of the Common, and was a widower at that time. He is probably the William whose children Anna (b.1719), Thomas (b.1721), Robert (b.1723), Walter (b.1724) and James (b.1732) were baptised in Kirkton Parish and Gilbert (b.1733) in Cavers Parish. In 1719 and 1721 he was recorded being ‘in Rige’. William (18th C.) tenant in Hyndhope in Oxnam Parish. He paid the window tax there in 1748. In 1730 he married Cecile, younger daughter of William Elliot of Thorlieshope and Ove. William (1733/4–1803) married Isabel Best in Wilton Parish in 1770. Their children included: Gilbert (b.1771); Agnes (b.1776); and Magdalen (b.1779). He died at Damhead and is buried in Old Wilton Cemetery. William (18th C.) married Janet Ker. Their son Robert was baptised in Hawick Parish in 1778. The witnesses were John Ker (presumably a relative) and James Douglas. William (d.1854) student of divinity and assistant teacher at the Academy in the Subscription Rooms who drowned in the Borthwick on the Friday of the Common Riding. William, J.P. (19th/20th C.) foreman dyer in Hawick. He was a Director of the Working Men’s Building Society, Chairman of the School Board and later of the School Management Committee, as well as a prominent local Liberal politician. He was also President of the Hawick Co-op in the 1880s and involved with the I.O.U.S. Mechanics. He was Sunday School Superintendent at St. George’s Kirk 1895–1908. William, M.I.C.E. (19th/20th C.) writer of ‘Liddesdale, Roxburghshire’ (1903), ‘Newcastleton, Roxburghshire: a border village’ (1905) and ‘Border village (Roxburghshire): a plea for the people: with some remarks on the Liddle and Solway fisheries’ (1907). Probably the same William left money for the William Hall Day School Prize Fund in Newcastleton (formerly written ‘Haw’).

Hallas (haw-las) n. nickname for John Douglas in 1628.

Halldykes (hal-diks) n. former lands attached to the estate of Mangerton. They are recorded as ‘Haldykis’ in a rental roll c.1376, with value 6 shillings and 8 pence.

Halliburton (haw-lee-bur’-in) n. Henry (d.1832) cattle-dealer in Hawick. He was Cornet in 1807 and was also selected as the ‘rebel’ Cornet of 1809 (the dispute being at least partly because the Council selected someone from the east side of the Slitrig), but declined for (unspecified) domestic reasons. However, he still played an important part in the Common Riding that year, being described as ‘fearless, and, at the same time, a fear-inspiring man’, who rode to the front of the ‘rebel’ cavalcade as it re-entered the Town, swinging his whip to clear a path. He was the first person to die of cholera in the outbreak of early 1832. He contracted the disease while taking his stock to market in Morpeth and died a few days later in Hawick, on 15th January. His brother James and nephew Thomas both contracted cholera, but recovered. However, a neighbour, John Murray died 9 days after him, and several other neighbours followed. He lived on the Back Row, adjacent to Rob Young the blacksmiths. The field marked ‘Mr. Halliburton’ behind the Back Row on Wood’s 1824 map was probably his. James (b.1782/3) cattle dealer from Hawick, brother of Henry. He contracted cholera from his brother, who was the first person to die in the Hawick outbreak of early 1832. However, he and his son Thomas both recovered. He later lived at Hopehouse in Ettrick Parish. He had another son, James. He may be the James in Hawick who subscribed to 10 copies of Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. James (b.1792/3) from Jedburgh, he was a shoemaker in Denholm. He is recorded as a shoemaker in Denholm in 1837 and in 1841 was at about the Canongate. In 1833 he married Mary (1804–72) daughter of Thomas Colledge. Their children included: Janet (b.1835); James (b.1837); Jean (b.1839); Thomas (b.1842); Agnes (b.1845); and Grace (b.1850). By 1851 he was ‘Proprietor of Houses’ at 10 Bongate in Jedburgh. He could be the James who was listed as a Steward at the Common Riding Races of 1836 (see also Halliburton).

Halliday (haw-li-di) n. Helen (b.1796/7) probably mother of the poet John. In 1841 she was recorded at Hawickshiel with Barbara, probably a daughter. She was ‘independent’ at that time, suggesting that she was a widow, with enough money to live on. By 1851 she was at Easter Longbautk (where John also lived for a while), with her grandson James, and in 1861 she was a pauper (formerly farm servant) at Myreslawgreen. It is said that her son inherited from her a love of Scottish ballads. Her husband’s name is unknown, but he was presumably a farm labourer at Hawickshiels. The one recorded marriage that could be hers is between James and Helen Gladstones in Kirkton in 1817. James (17th C.) fleshier in Hawick. He was recorded in 1692 ‘for publicly selling up and down the town ane carcass of swyne which was leprous, and consequently dangerous to be made use of’. He was listed among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He could be the James listed as a resident of Hawick ‘uest the water’ on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He may be the James who married Margaret Dickson, and whose children baptised in Hawick included: William (b.1669); Agnes (b.1671); Margaret (b.1675); and Isobel (b.1681). The witnesses in 1675 were Robert Wright and John Tinlin. John (1821–1902) born at Hawickshiels, a few miles south of Hawick, probably son of Helen, although his father’s name is unknown. He was writer of the song ‘Bonnie Teviotdale’ and many poems, sometimes under the name ‘The Rustic Bard’. He only had about 2 years of formal schooling and at the age of 10 was hired as an assistant shepherd by one of the local farmers. He was recorded as a labourer at Skelfhill stables in 1841. Sometime before 1845 he moved to the Longbautk where he lived for a few years before moving to Hobkirk in 1849, where he worked as a hedger, ditcher, harvester, etc. He lived for a while at Drythropple, and developed a reputation as a skilled horticulturalist. Along with Sandy and James Mathieson (gardeners at Weens and Wauchope, respectively), he founded the Hobkirk Flower Show. In 1851 he reported to a local newspaper a story of the appearance of a ‘Brocken spectre’ (i.e. mirage of a shadow); at that point he was living at ‘North Town of Rule’. In 1854 he moved to Bridge of Allan (a different one from where he grew up!), where he was a landscape gardener. He was also said to be an expert angler. He published ‘The Rustic Bard: or, A voice from the People’ (1847) when living at Longbautk. This book of verse contains many pieces in local dialect, which are invaluable early published examples of the language. He also features in Dr. Rodgers’ ‘Scottish Minstrel’ (1856). In 1859 he donated a silver coin of Alexander II to the Archaological Society. It is unclear whether he had any local connections after this date, although the will always be remembered for ‘Bonnie Teviotdale’. He married Margaret Carruthers in Hobkirk Parish in 1847 and is recorded living with her at North Town o’ Rule in 1851. He may have been proprietor of the ‘Lady of the Lake’ in Bridge of Allan. His wife died in 1877 and he moved to Stirling in 1893, where he stayed with relatives in the Castle Hotel. He was said to have maintained a ‘vigorous and hearty old age, his interest in literature, especially poetry, being unabated’. He died in Stirling, and is buried at Logie. Robert (18th/19th C.) chaise-driver at Teviotbank in 1797, when he was working for David Simpson. William (b.c.1868) hempooper maker on the Back Row, recorded in 1841. His wife was Janet, and their daughter Margaret was also there (also written ‘Halyday’, ‘Helliday’, etc.).

hallin (haw-lin) n., poet. a cottage, dwelling, inner wall between door and fireplace – ‘Hallans, sleekit ower wi’ plaister, Glintin’ a’ as white as snaw, Worthy o’ its noble maister, Kitchen, passage, rooms, an’ a’ ’ [JR], ‘There’s few hearts to pity the wee coverin’ form That sits at your hallin a bield frac the storm’ [JT], ‘Men bound together in run-rig commonty And in the old unity of hall and hallan, tholing together … ’ [DH] (also spelled ‘hallan’).

hallin-shaker (haw-lin-shā-kur) n., arch. a beggar, tramp, sorry creature – ‘A met a doit-erin, duddy, auld hallin-shaker as A laampeet doon that lan brac’ [ECS] (literally a partition-shaker).

Halliwell (haw-lee-wel) n. James (17th C.) gardener at Whitehaugh in Wilton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. His name is written ‘Helliwell’. Janet (17th C.) recorded in 1676 when she was fined along with Isabel Stuart for fighting over the placement of their market stalls. Her surname is given as ‘Holywell’. William (17th C.) resident at Newlands on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls for Hassendean Parish. His name is written ‘Halliwell’. He was probably related to James. William (17th/18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. His children, baptised in Hawick Parish, included: George (b.1704); and Isobel (b.1708). The 1704 baptism was witnessed by fellow shoemaker George Allan and weaver John Swan (also written ‘Holywell’).

Hallmoss (hal-mos) n. boggy area between Drinkstone Hill and the main A7, just north of Groundistone farm. The nearby wood is called Hallmoss Plantation. There has been a claim that part of a Roman road was visible here, as well as an ancient enclosure of some sort.

hallow (ha-low) v., arch. to hallow, make a loud call of derision – ‘…by crying themselfe and hounding others to cry publikey and loudly to hallow out at windows and too hout the baylyeas when passing by … ’ [BR1706].

Hallrule (haw-, hawl-ruol) n. hamlet about 8 miles east of Hawick, between Bonchester and Bedrule. It was formerly a major estate of Hobkirk Parish. Much of the land of the farm there had been the Common of the barony of Feu-Rule and the farm may also have been known as the Mains of Feu-Rule. James White was a resident there in 1493. The lands are recorded being held by George Turnbull in 1493 and 1502, and in 1516 the tenants were Robert, William and Thomas Turnbull. The town there was burned by the Marquis of Dorset’s men in 1523 and the tower burned by the English in 1545. The lands passed from Archibald Douglas, Earl of Angus to Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst in 1581. In the late 16th and early 17th centuries the Laird of half the lands was George Turnbull, and through his daughter Isobel they appear to have passed to the Turnbulls of Barnhills. It may be among the lands in Feu-Rule granted to Gilbert Elliott by Andrew Kerr, Lord Jedburgh in 1629. It is said that the Elliots of Stobs gained the lands through some underhand method. The ‘town’ is mentioned in 1632 along with the Mains of Feu-Rule ‘alias Fewroule vocatis Halroule’ when the superiority was inherited by Robert, son of Andrew Ker of Faldonside. In 1649 parts of the Barony of Feu-Rule were erected into the Barony of Hallrule, and held by William Elliott of Stobs in the mid-17th century. By 1678 Elliott of Stobs owned lands there valued at £2142, and were merged with 2 pieces of land of Hawthornside valued at £211. The farms of ‘Over and Nether Hallrule with mill thereof’ are listed among the properties of Sir William Elliott of Stobs in the late 17th century. The farm was still in the Barony of Cavers when that was inherited by Sir William Douglas in 1687, when transcribed ‘Dowallrowl’, and by his brother Archibald in 1698, when transcribed ‘Dewallroull’. William Buckham was there in 1694, paying for 4 Hearth, while George Brown and Walter Brown were also householders on the lands (and 3 other poor householders were additionally listed). In 1709 the Barony of Hallrule was transcribed as consisting of ‘Helme, midle with mill, Hangingside, Burrel [probably Billerwell], Roulweens [perhaps Bedrule and Weens], Hathernsyde, Seasewholhouse, Pleundhill, Bonhouse, Appsdsyde with mill, Harrot with mill, Tithous with 4 parts of Riddmaburne’. In 1725 Sir Gilbert Eliott of Stobs gave the east side (valued at £414) to his son John. In 1779 the Barony had been broken down into parts, including: ‘Inner-Halrule, consisting of six inclosures’, valued at £493 17s 8d; ‘Over-Halrule’, valued at £832 12s 5d; ‘Mill and mill lands of Halrule’, valued at £136 9s 10d; Billerwell; and Hawthornside. Andrew Currie and then George Currie were tenants there in the 18th century, as well as Barries. William Scott was there in 1788. In the 1788 county valuation the farm (including Billerwell) was valued at £2144 16s 8d and owned by Sir Francis Eliott of Stobs. The farm was sold to John Wilson in about 1803, and he had the modern house built there. The farms of Inner and Outer Hallrule are described in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls, with the part to the west belonging to Sir William Eliott (valued at £428 11s 6d) and the part to the east belonging to John Wilson of Hallrule (valued at £404 11d). John Wilson’s part lay ‘on the north-side of the public road to Weens, bounded by Billerwell march on the east; by the top of Ruberslaw, where march stones are placed, on the nort; by the said public road on the south, and on the west, forty-four yards west from the west-side of the gate next Halrule, leading to Town-o’-Rule in a straight line to the top of Ruberslaw, passing close by the Clump of Firs, the east fence of which is the march’. Wilson also owned 5 of the 6 enclosures of Inner Hallrule (valued at £427 4s 2d), purchasing them from Sir William Elliot and dispossing the north-east one to Thomas Cleghorn of Weens. James and then Daniel Mather were tenants from the early 1800s; Daniel had a large cairn removed, inside of which was found an ‘urn’ with a herringbone-type pattern (now lost). The mansion there was occupied by Peter Pennycook in the 1860s and was a home of the Ushers of Norton and Wells. There was also once probably a small threshing mill there, powered by water from a pond. The farm contains part of Ruberslaw, and 2 Roman coins were once found here. The former farmhouse had a couple of good rooms in it known as ‘the Laird’s Rooms’, where the Elliots would stay sometimes when they visited the farm. There is a tradition that Lord Heathfield was born there during one such visit. The farm is fairly well-wooded and contains a walled garden, as well as a new pond (formerly written ‘Haroul’, etc., it is ‘Haw of Roull’ in 1484/5, ‘aula de Roull’ in 1493, ‘Aula de Rule’ in 1494/5, ‘Hawroull’ in 1502, ‘Hawroull’ in 1508, ‘Fewhawroull’ in 1511, ‘Hawroull’ in 1516, ‘Halrowle’ in 1526, ‘Hallrowll’ in 1527, ‘Hallrewll’ in 1557, ‘Hallrowe’ in 1561, ‘Hawroull’ in 1562, ‘Hawrowle’ in 1576, ‘Hawrowll’ and ‘Hallrowle’ in 1581, ‘Hallrowll’ in 1581/2, ‘Hallrowll’ in 1595, ‘Hawroull’ in 1603, ‘Halroule’ and ‘Hallroull’ in 1606, ‘Hawroull’ in 1686, ‘Hallroull’ and ‘Harroull’ in 1694 and ‘Harule’ in 1760 and 1797; it is ‘Hall of Roul’ on Gordon’s c. 1650 map and ‘Hall of Roull’ on Blaen’s 1654 map; it has its modern spelling by Stobie’s 1770 map).

Hallrule Common (hawl-rool-ko-min) n. former name for lands in the southern part of the farm of Hallrule. It is recorded in a charter of 1606 when Hobbsburn and Weens were sold to John Scott. It marked the northern boundary of these lands, and is stated to be ‘the lands called the Common of Halroule’.

Hallrule Mill (hawl-rool-mill) n. former corn mill and farm at Hallrule, long tenanted by the Turnbulls. The mill lands (and 1/6th of the mulltures) were assigned to Agnes Herries, following the Baronial dispute over Feu-Rule in 1562. In 1574 it was recorded that the whole of the Barony of Feu-Rule ‘is thirlit to the mylne’. The mill passed to Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst in 1581. The earliest named tenant on record is ‘Walter Ammous’ in 1685. ‘Walter Almes’ was still there in 1694, when he paid tax on 3 hearths ‘for himself and cottar’. In the following centuries it was often let along with the farm of Hallrule. It was owned by the Elliots of Stobs in the 18th and early 19th centuries. In 1779 it was valued at £136 9s 10d. Robert Turnbull was tenant there in 1797. It was purchased by Thomas Cleghorn in 1805 and added to his Weens estate. In 1811 it was valued at £136 9s 10d. It is recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory and Slater’s 1852 directories, when the miller was James Laidlaw. He remained until 1855 when William Bell purchased the farm from Eliott of Stobs (it recorded as ‘mylne of Habroule’ in 1574, ‘Ha roul Miln’ in a charter of 1649, ‘Harroulmyn’ in 1694 and ‘Harulemyn’ in 1797; it is marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map and Stobie’s 1770 map).

Hall’s (hawlz) n. fishmonger’s shop next to the Town Hall in the mid-20th century, which also used to have game hanging on hooks outside the windows.

Hally Well

Hally Well (haw-lee-wel) n. former spring to the south-east of Hallywell Hill, between Newton and Groundistone Heights on the A7. Francis Well is right beside the road, further south (it is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Hallywell Hill (haw-lee-wel-hil) n. small hill just to the east of the A7 after the turn for Boonraw. The name comes from the nearby spring, although any connection to anything holy is unknown.

Haltwhistle (hawl’-whi-sul) n. town in north-eastern Cumbria, important in riving days, having several existing towers and strongholds. It was a seat of the Ridley family.

haly (hā-lee) adj., arch. holy – ‘...that on the Wednesdays next after the Feasts off the Insomniacs off the Haly Crows...’ [SB1431], ‘...That I met a gallant company To the haly kirkrepairing’ [JTe], ‘But for a’ this haie I sete my King apon my haly hill o’ Zion’ [HSR], ‘For our haunt sall rejoyce in him, because we was trustet in his haly name’ [HSR], ‘Yer haunts nae mair she will molest, On muir or mead The Haly Word her skin

Halyfirsted (ha-lee-fir-steed) n. lands in Liddesdale once attached to the estate of Mangerston. They are recorded in about 1376 on a rental roll, listed as ‘Halyfirsted’ and with a value of 20 shillings and 4 pence.

Clerekroft, Cresswell, Hornshole and Crook, as well as Rodono, Thistlebome and others in Ettrick. He also held the feu duties of Friarshaw, as well as owning most of the lands in Melrose Parish and others in Maxton and Lusseden according to the Land Tax Rolls of 1678. Della nee Oliver (1938/9–2016) she was Cornet’s Lass to Billy Cavers in 1949 and was Diamond Jubilee Lass in 2009. She married Dr. Rory and they lived at Bucklands. She had children Peter and Susan. Elizabeth (1758–1816) born in Belfast of Scottish parents, she became a writer, particularly of essays. She is best known for her novel ‘The Cottagers of Glenburnie’ (1808), which is seen as a forerunner of the ‘Kailyard’ style. It was supposedly based around Wilton Dean, and written during a visit with James Anderson in Wilton Lodge. Francis (16th/17th C.) son of James of St. John’s Chapel, from whom he succeeded to the lands of Appotside and Tythehouse in the Rule valley in 1610. In 1630 he granted a sasine of Appotside and Tythehouse to the minister William Weir, who was his brother-in-law. He is recorded as a witness to the 1632 sale of Harwood to Gilbert Elliott by Edward Lorrain and Rev. William Weir and gave his permission for the sale of Appotside and Tythehouse to Edward Lorrain. He could be the ‘Mr. Francis Hamilton’ who wrote to Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1624 regarding the plot by Robert Elliott to murder Scott; he was clearly a friend of John Murray (the Earl of Annandale), Elliott’s brother-in-law, and stated that Elliott should be saved for the sake of Murray. He may have moved to Baillieborough in Ireland. Rev. Gavin James (1777–1837) son of Gavin from Blackwood, Douglas. He was licensed by the Presbytery of Lanark in 1799 and ordained as minister at Harbottle in Northumberland in 1809. He was presented to Ashkirk Parish in late 1810 (by Lady Minto and her son Gilbert Elliott, Commissioners of Lord Minto, who was in Bengal) and became the new minister there in 1811. He served as Presbytery Clerk. In 1809 he was preparing essays on agricultural topics, under the patronage of the Board of Agriculture, but this never appeared in publication. He compiled the entry on Ashkirk Parish for the ‘New Statistical Account of Scotland’; this was prepared for publication by Walter Todd, since he died before it was due to appear. He suffered from ill health and had an assistant for the last 5 years. In 1809 at Hawick Mause (suggesting a previous connection with the area) he married Mary, only daughter of James Walker of Antigua, and they had children. Their daughter Joanna married Thomas Thorburn. James (c.1415–79) son of James of Cadzow. He was closely connected with the Douglases. He became 1st Lord Hamilton in 1445. In 1471/2 he presented the marriage contract between Archibald, Earl of Angus, and Sir David Scott of Buccleuch. He leased the lands of Craig Douglas in 1459, Winterburgh, Altrieve and Berrybush in Yarrow in 1469 and Craig Douglas in 1478. He married Euphemia Graham, widow of Archibald, 5th Earl of Douglas. He was thus stepfather of William, 6th Earl of Douglas and Margaret, the ‘Fair Maid of Galloway’. He secondly married Mary, daughter of King James II. He was succeeded by his son James, 1st Earl of Arran. James (c.1475–1529) Earl of Arran, son of James, 1st Lord Hamilton. He helped negotiate the marriage James IV with Margaret Tudor and was created Earl of Arran on their wedding day. He was appointed Lieutenant General of Scotland, and commanded the Scottish fleet in 1513. He opposed Archibald Douglas, Earl of Angus in the power struggles during the minority of King James V, and was defeated by Angus’ men in the ‘Cleane the Causeway’ riot in Edinburgh in 1520. In 1522 he became Lieutenant of the South. Sometime before 1526 there was an attempt to capture him, made by a force headed by George, Lord Home, and David Home of Wedderburn. This force included about 160 Borderers, many of them Scotts, Turnbulls, Pringles, etc., and all of whom received remission for their crimes; the list is useful in containing family relationships among some local families. He eventually received the lands of Bothwell from the forfeited estates of the Earl of Angus. He was listed in 1526/7 among prominent men charged by James V not to attack the lands of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme, John Cranston of that Ilk and Walter Scott of Synton while those men were in ‘respite’ for the charge of treason. He firstly married Elizabeth, daughter of Alexander, 2nd Lord Home; this wedding was annulled when it was discovered that his wife’s first husband had still been alive. He secondly married Janet, daughter of David Bethune of Creich. He was succeeded as 2nd Earl of Arran by his son James and also had many other children, including Joanna (who married Alexander Cunningham, 5th Earl of Glencairn) and at least 14 who were illegitimate. There were several called after him: Sir James of Finnart, Lord of Session; James, Bishop of Argyll and Lismore; and James of St. John’s Chapel and Sprouston, whose daughter Marion married...
Robert Elliot of Redheugh. James (c.1516–75) 2nd Earl of Arran, son of James, 1st Earl. He was next in line to the throne after James V’s only child, Mary Queen of Scots and was Regent of Scotland during Mary’s minority. He became a Catholic and consented to the marriage of Mary to the French Dauphin, this leading to the Rough Wooing. He may have been present at the Battle of Ancrum Moor in 1545. He remained involved in Scottish politics, until 1565 when he moved to France, but returned to imprisonment in Scotland in 1569. He married Margaret, daughter of James Douglas, 3rd Earl of Morton. He was succeeded by his son James, who he tried at one point to marry to Elizabeth I of England and to Queen Mary. James (d.1580) illegitimate son of James, 1st Earl of Arran and brother of John, Archbishop of St. Andrews. He was nominated as Archbishop of Glasgow in 1547, but rejected the following year, largely due to his illegitimacy. Hence he was almost Hawick’s Archbishop. However, he later received papal dispensation and was appointed Bishop of Argyll. He later became a Protestant. James of St. John’s Chapel and Sprouston (d.1585) younger illegitimate son of James, 1st Earl of Arran. He married Marie, daughter of Patrick Hepburn of Fairnington. His children included: John of St. John’s Chapel (d.1587), who married a Cairncross of Colmslie; Patrick (d.1598); James of Harwood (d.c.1610); Andrew of St. John’s Chapel; Thomas of Telsnate; and also probably Alexander, Marion, Margaret, Nicholas and Jane. James (d.c.1610) son of James of St. John’s Chapel and Sprouston. He was sometimes referred to as being ‘of Harwood’. A contract of 1598 with Hector Lorraine describes how he loaned money to the Loraines, with the reversion of Harwood and Appotside residing with him. The amount was increased to almost £1200 by 1600. By 1602 he had a feu charter of the lands of Tythehouse and Appotside, as well as having confirmation from the superior, William Maxwell, Lord Herries, that he held the right of marriage of Hector Lorraine, as well as the reversion of Harwood and Hawthornside. He probably arranged the marriage between Hector Lorraine and his niece, daughter of Robert Elliot of Redheugh and his sister Marion Hamilton. However, the Loraines were unable to repay the ‘wadset’ to him, and the lands legally changed hands some time in the early 17th century, confirmed by a disposition of 1630 and ‘charter of alienation’ in 1632 (where he is referred to as the ‘deceased James Hamilton of Harwood’). His son Francis inherited Appotside and Tythehouse from him in 1610. In 1619 it is recorded that Edward Lorraine was required to marry Margaret Hamilton, sister to his heir Francis. He married Jean, sister of William Cairncross of Colmslie; she was sister of his brother John’s wife. His children included: Francis of Harwood; Andrew of Killenover, Donegal; Jean, who married James Chisholm of Gornewood and secondly Patrick Kincaid of Edinburgh; a daughter who married John Ballyboe of Mulenard; John; and William. James (17th C.) Hawick resident, mentioned in a court case of 1673. He was found guilty of cutting the ‘goune-tail’ of John Scott’s wife. He could be the James who was married to Bessie Scott, and whose son Robert was born in Hawick in 1673. James (b.c.1800) stocking-maker of the West End. He may be the man of that name who was listed among people to have contracted cholera, but recovered, in 1832. In 1841 he was at about 17 Loan with his wife Jean and their children Robert, Charles, James, John, Ann, Margaret and Thomas. Dr. James Oliver ‘Oliver’ (1886–1938) son of John R. and father of Rory. He graduated from Edinburgh University in 1908. In Hawick he went into partnership with his father and continued the practice after his death. He joined the R.A.M.C. Reserve of Officers in 1910 and served with them when war broke out. He was in charge of No. 4 Ambulance Train, B.E.F., France when he was discharged due to ill-health in 1917. He then became Commandant of the Hawick Military Hospital. He was a keen rugby supporter and was President of Hawick R.F.C. in 1914. In 1919 he moved to the South of England, performing bacteriological research in Bournemouth. He then took up a position in the Barbados and travelled extensively. In 1916 he married Sara Chisholm (who died in 1938). Their son Rory was also a doctor in Hawick. He died at his home in Edinburgh at the age of 52, effectively as a result of his war disability. He is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. Jean (16th/17th C.) daughter of John of St. John’s Chapel and sister of Marion and Margaret, who jointly inherited the Lordship of Winnington in 1610. The lands consisted of Winningtonhall and mill there, Swinestead, Over and Nether Kirkwoodhead, Brandside and Horselee, as well as some land in Jedburgh. She married Walter Bellenden, brother of the Laird of Auchmuill. John of St. John’s Chapel (d.1587) son of James of St. John’s Chapel and Sprouston. He married Margaret Cairncross, sister of the Laird of Cohnslie, and secondly married Margaret Nichol. His daughters and co-heiresses were Margaret, Marion and Jean, who are mentioned in 1593, by which time he was deceased. In 1610 his 3 daughters inherited the lands of Winnington as heirs to their great-grandfather Patrick Hepburn. Their names were listed as ‘María’, ‘Jeanna’ and ‘Margaretá’ and the lands consisted specifically of Winningtonhall and mill there, Swinestead, Over and Nether Kirkwoodhead, Brandside and Horselee. Rev. John (16th C.) minister at Ashkirk from 1570, being presented to the parsonage on the death of John Murie. He was thus the first parish minister after the Reformation. John Scott was recorded as Reader in 1574, but they may have overlapped. John (1626–69) 4th Earl of Haddington, younger brother of Thomas, 3rd Earl, whom he succeeded in 1645. He also had the titles of Lord Byres and Binningand succeeded to the superiority of lands previously held by Melrose Abbey, including Hassendeanbank, Brieryyards, Clerkcroft, Cresswell, etc. In 1655 he must have held the superiority of the Barony of Hassendean when he gave a ‘precept of clare constat’ to Thomas Turnbull for the lands of Cockerheugh. He is probably the Earl of Haddington recorded paying tax in Lilliesleaf Parish in about 1666. He married Christian, daughter of John Lindsay, 17th Earl of Crawford. He was succeeded by his son Charles. John Rankine (b.1822/3) born in Bathgate, he was teacher at Minto School in the 1850s and 1860s. One of his pupils was James ‘Dictionary’ Murray. He was listed there on Slater’s 1852 directory. He also served as Heritors’ Clerk, Session Clerk, Kirk Treasurer, Registrar and Inspector of Poor for the Parish. In 1851 his sister Margaret was acting as housekeeper. In 1854 he married Jane Tait, eldest daughter of Alexander Robertson. Their children included Isabella, Robert and Alexander R. Dr. John Rogerson (d.1916) born in Dumfriesshire, he was grandfather of Rory. He was a local doctor who was the main instigator for the setting up of the Cottage Hospital. He lived at Elm House, which he had built for him. He was also known for showing Irish Terriers, and was President of the Ornithological Society. He was Chairman of the Scottish Committee of the British Medical Association when war broke out in 1914, and helped coordinate medical services in Scotland during WWI. J.C. Goodfellow dedicated his 1911 collection of verses to him. He married Alice Mary, eldest daughter of the second marriage of James Oliver of Thornwood. Their sons were: Archibald (1881–1915), who died at Gallipoli; and Dr. James Oliver (b.1886), who continued his practice. Margaret (16th/17th C.) daughter of John of St. John’s Chapel and grand-daughter of James. She was sister of Marion and Jean, who jointly inherited the Lordship of Winnington on 1610. She married Robert Home of Carronsyde. Marion (d.1619) daughter of John of St. John’s Chapel and sister of Jean and Margaret. Her name is transcribed as ‘Mania Hammiltoune’ in 1610 when she and her sisters inherited their great-grandfather Patrick Hepburn’s Lordship of Winnington. Richard (15th C.) listed as a witness to the sasine for the lands of Kirkton Mains and Flex in 1464/5. His name is recorded as ‘Ricardo Hammylytoune’. Robert (16th C.) recorded as Reader at Minto in 1579. Dr. Roderick ‘Rory’ (1920–1999) born in Torquay, both his father and grandfather being Hawick doctors, he was a doctor himself in Hawick for 38 years. He served on the Town Council from 1966, the Regional Council from 1975 and the District Council from 1985–88. Sometimes referred to as ‘Rory the Tory’, he was known for his magnanimous gestures (e.g. opening a local swimming gala by jumping in fully clothed). He also wrote the ‘Golfer’s Guide to Wee Places’ (1980). He married Della Oliver. Sir Thomas ‘Tam o the Cowgate’ (1563–1637) son of Thomas of Priestfield, he was a lawyer in Edinburgh who served as an Avocate, Senator of the College of Justice, Lord President of the Court of Session, Lord Clerk Register, Principle Secretary of State and Lord Privy Seal. In 1612, as Lord Advocate, he obtained a decree before the Lords of Council and Session against people in the Hawick area who had charged more than 10 percent interest. Also in 1612, when he was Lord Clerk Register, he made an index of royal charters and other ancient Scottish documents. This was described in 1798 in a book edited by William Robertson and usually referred to as ‘Robertson’s Index’. Since many of these charters were lost, the index forms an invaluable record of early Scottish history. He became Lord of Session as Lord Duncairn, was raised to the peerage as Lord Binning in 1616, then created Earl of Melrose in 1619 and finally 1st Earl of Haddington in 1627. He gained the superiority of lands that had been held by Melrose Abbey (and latterly by John Ramsay, Earl of Holderness), including those in upper Teviotdale. He is recorded in a charter of 1619 granting the lands of ‘Horneshoill’ to Thomas, 2nd son of Thomas Turnbull of Minto. In 1621 the Earl of Buccleuch resigned the lands in Ringwoodfield to him. He also held lands in Belses that he leased in 1632 and that same year he feued Firth to Hector Turnbull and also feued lands in Rucastle and Raperlaw. He probably sold the superiority of Melrose to the Scotts of Buccleuch. He married Margaret, daughter of James Borthwick of Newbyres and secondly Margaret Foulis and was succeeded by his son Thomas. Thomas Lord Binning (1600–40) son of 1st Earl of Haddington, he became 2nd Earl. This included inheriting his father’s lands in Roxburghshire and elsewhere, including superiority of lands formerly held by Melrose Abbey. There is a charter of Charles I to him for lands in the Borders, including ‘Hassidenbank, Brieiraidris, Clerkcroft, Kerswell in Hassingtoun, Hornishoill, Craighous’ and others. He signed the National Covenant in 1638 and served as a Major under Gen. Leslie. He was killed in a massive explosion in the powder magazine at Dunglass Castle only 3 years after succeeding. He married Catherine, daughter of John Erskine, 18th Earl of Mar. He was succeeded by his son, also Thomas. Thomas of Binning and the Byres (1626–45) son of Thomas, he became 3rd Earl of Haddington. In 1640 he was served heir to the extensive lands of his father, including the superiority of lands formerly held by Melrose Abbey. This included Hassendeanbank, Brieryyards, Clerkcroft, Kerswell and Hornshole. He is listed as owner of most of the lands in Melrose Parish in 1643. He also held feu-duty for Riddell and Friarshaw in Lilliesleaf Parish. W.F. (20th C.) Burgh Surveyor in the 1940s.

hang (hawng) n. euphemism for ‘hell’ – ‘ . . . A henni seen the forecast for the next ride-oots bit A hope ti hang heit gits nice weather’ [We] (note that this is never hing).

hang (hawng) pp., arch. hung – ‘ . . . an, ferrer up . . . hang another caal, leike a bruch roond a muin’ [ECS] (also written ‘haang’; this was once a past tense for hing, with the past participle being ‘hung’, as in English).

Hangany (hawng-ga-nä) n., arch. last day of the year, Hogmanany, also a gift given to children on this day – ‘As long as Allars House existed, the bairns got their ‘hangany’ every Old Year’s Day’ [JTu] (also written ‘Hanginnay’; cf. Hogmanay and Hangmanay).

Hangerhope (hawng-ur-böp) n. former farmstead situated on the slopes of Whiteacres Hill, to the south-east of Kaimend. The ruin is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map. Hangerhope Plantation is marked on current maps.
Hangingshaw

Hangingshaw (hawng-in-shaw) n. site of 15th century house in the Yarrow valley, near Yarrowford, stronghold of ‘the Outlaw Murray’. These were Crown lands in the late 15th century, leased by John and Patrick Murray. The lands remained with the Murray family for about 300 years. It was raided by Philip Turnbull in Whithope and David Turnbull in Carlinpool about 1500. John Murray held the lease until at least 1513. In 1527 Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme paid 500 merks to James Murray of Falahill for slaughter and spoliation at these lands. And in 1535 the lands were named among those claimed to have been raided by Robert Scott of Allanhaugh. In 1541 the lands were owned by Patrick Murray o Hangingshaw (also of Falahill), with a rental of £50. The 18th century mansion built there burned down in about 1769, and the present house dates from 1846, after the estate was purchased by Sir James Johnstone of Westerhall. Tradition states that the custom of the Murrays was to make visitors drink an intoxicating amount of ale from the ‘Hangingshaw Ladle’ – ‘Auld Juden he strayed by the side of a river, When the watcher on Hanginslaw-louf did cry, – ’Ho, Juden, take care! or ye’re ruined for ever, The bugle of Ackwood has thriske soundad high’ [ES] (it is ‘Hangandischaw’ in 1456, 1468, 1484, 1494 and 1501, ‘Hangingschaw’ in 1502, ‘Hangandeschaw’ in 1507 and 1527 and, ‘Hangynschaw’ in 1535 and ‘Hangistschaw’ in 1541; it is ‘Hanginshaw’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map; there are places of the same name elsewhere, e.g. opposite Heriot).

Hangingshaw Hill (hawng-in-shaw-hil) n. hill in the upper Ale valley, to the west of Borthwickshiel. It reaches a height of 319 m. There are signs of an unenclosed settlement on the southern slopes. There is an old enclosure on the western side. Gilbert ‘de Hanguydeschawe’ in the county of Roxburgh, who swore fealty to Edward I in 1296 may have been connected with these lands (there is a hill of the same name near Woden Law in Hownam Parish).

Hangingside (hawng-in-sid) n. former name for Hawthornside or perhaps adjacent or overlapping lands, in use in the 16th century. The lands were given to Richard of Hangingside after William Lorraine transferred his allegiance to the English King. ‘Jock o the Park’ Elliot held the lands in the late 16th century. The existence of a tower house there is suggested by the Peel Knowe just north-west of Hawthornside, and it is said that stone from the tower were used to build the new farmhouse. Gilbert Elliot of Stobs received a charter of the lands from the King in 1621 and his son William was served as his heir to the lands in 1645. In early times the farm may have been part of the Barony of Feu-Rule. It was incorporated into the Barony of Hallrule in 1649 (when both ‘Hangingside’ and ‘Hathernsyde’ were listed). Douglas of Cavers held the superiority until at least 1698. William Elliot of Stobs was served heir to his father in the lands of ‘Hangansyde’ in 1645 and it was listed in the late 17th century among the Elliot of Stobs properties in the Barony of Feu-Rule. It must have been soon after that the modern name of ‘Hawthornside’ was adopted. The land appears to have given rise to a surname (or vice versa), since the land was owned by Hangingside of that Ilk, but only for about half a century. This surname may have later been confounded with Handyside. The naming situation is more complicated, however, since the Hanganside family existed earlier, owning lands at Newton Don from the late 14th century (it was ‘Hangansyde’ in 1621 and ‘Hanginsyde’ in 1687 and 1698).
in 1436. He is referred to as ‘Patrick Hangatsyde’. Richard (14th C.) recorded in 1388 when he gave Kaimflat in the territory of Little Newton (in Lauderdale) to Kelso Abbey, for masses to be said for the soul of his superiors, William and James of Douglas. It seems that he held lands in the eastern part of what would be called Newton. Probably the same Richard was Bailie of the Earls of Douglas in the Barony of Dunbar, as recorded in 1407. Richard (15th/16th C.) granted the lands of ‘Hangetsyd’ (i.e. what would become Hawthornside) by James, Earl of Douglas. Since this was granted by James, Earl of Douglas, it was probably before 1488. The transfer may have been because William Lorraine had been the former owner and transferred his allegiance to England. There was a sasine confirming the lands to his son Richard in 1543. He is probably the ‘Ric. de Hangatsyde, scutifero’ who witnessed a charter in 1432. Richard of that Ilk (16th C.) son of Richard. There was a sasine in his name for the lands of Hangingside in 1543. He was recorded among Border Lairds paying homage to the Duke of Somerset in about 1547. It appears he may have sold the lands to Jock Elliot of the Park in 1562, except that they were still held by his descendants Helen and Barbara in 1598. He is recorded as ‘Richard Hangatsyde of Littiltoun’ when he was part of a panel of 1562, deciding on a dispute in the Barony of Feu-Rule. In 1563 there is a confirmation of his charter to his son Alexander of a third part of Liddesdale, of uncertain location, but probably near Castleton or Riccarton.

It is recorded in the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale as ‘Hangmanis Aiker’, with value 30 pence and tenanted by Thomas Armstrong (it is possible that it is related to Hagiehaugh).

Hangrel (hawng-grul) n., arch. a butcher’s hook for hanging a carcass, a gambrel, structure in a stable for hanging riding gear.

Harbottle Castle (hawr-bo’-ul-kaw-sul) n. a ruined castle on the Coquet River near Holystone village in Northumberland. First built by the Umfraville family in the 12th century, it was an important centre of power in the English Middle March. It was taken by Robert the Bruce in 1318, passed into the hands of Henry IV, and was ruinied by the 17th century.

hard (hard) pp., arch. heard – ‘…wi’ some sin’ syne that it was a Papish priest or bishop …’’ [BCM1880].

harden (har-din) n., arch. a coarse, grey cloth,
sack-cloth, originally made from ‘hards’, adj., arch. made of course, grey, woollen cloth – ‘wi’ a bit harden seck roond um’, ‘Yon kitchen lass at Wulton Ludge Liits bonny in her harden dailde’ [DH] (this is probably also confused with hodden and was formerly shortened to harn).

Harden (har-din) n. Harden House and the area surrounding it. This could be the Harden in Roxburghshire that was possessed by ‘Johan de Harden’ when he swore fealty to Edward I in 1296.
The estate was owned by a branch of the Turn-bulls in the 15th century, at least as early as 1431, and was resigned to the Baron of Wilton in 1468.
In 1482 it was granted to John, son of Walter Turnbull of Harden, the symbolic payment being one silver penny at the principle manor of Wilton on the feast of the Nativity. By 1491 the ‘superiority’ of the lands lay with John Scott, Baron of the half Barony of Wilton, and the tenancy was given by the King to Alexander, Lord Home. This remained the case until 1501/2 when he had a ‘bond of reversion’ to Robert Scott of Stitches for £100 Scots for the lands of Harden. In 1506 it was part of the lands inherited by Alexander Home, but at that time was ‘held for ward and relief’. It was confirmed to Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme in 1516 when Home’s estates were forfeited, but George, Lord Home had most of these reinstated in 1522, with the charter from Patrick, Earl of Bothwell to Walter Scott of Branxholme being revoked by the King in 1535. The Homes retained the superiority of the lands until well into the 16th century. In 1559 (perhaps 1550) Alexander Lord Home sold to William Scott of Todrig and his son Walter the lands of Harden, with tower, mains, etc., except for an acre of lands on the east side. The old house was destroyed around 1590, and the new one dates from the 17th century, with later additions. Tradition says that a child was brought here from England by mistake, wrapped among the plunder of a raid, and raised by a daughter of the Laird; he is claimed as the author of many of the Border ballads. There were 21 ‘communicants’ recorded there in 1650. In the 17th century there were separate farms at West Harden and East Harden (also called ‘Easter’ and ‘Wester’). The area was part of Wilton Parish until Robertson was formed in 1689/90. In 1694 there were 4 separate households recorded there (as well as the main house itself). Part was sold to the Buccleuch estates in 1727. James Cavers was farmer there in the 1760s. In 1788 it was valued with West Highchesters at £486 6s 6d and in 1811 it was valued at £463 9s (along with Highhesters Mill and Dunbush). Thomas Graham was farmer there in 1841 and 1851. A spindle whorl from the area was in Tom Scott’s collection, and a flint arrow-head was also found there – ‘As I came over the Harden hill A whaup on the moor was whistling shrill …’ [WHO] (formerly also ‘the Harden’; it is ‘Hardene’ in 1482, ‘Harden’ in 1501/2, ‘Hardane’ in 1526, 1535 and 1557, ‘Hardenn’ in 1550 and ‘Hardyn’ in 1568; it appears on Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Hardenn’ and Adair’s c. 1682 map as ‘Hardene’; it is wrongly placed to the east of Hawick; the origin of the name is probably Old English ‘hara dem’, meaning ‘the valley frequented by hares’; there are several other Hardens in Scotland and Northern England, probably most with similar origins). Harden (har-din) n. area to the east of Castle- ton, once with a tower house. ‘Hardenbank’ is listed on the 1541 rental roll for Liddesdale. ‘Seme Ellot of Hardin’ is listed among the Eliots of Braehead in 1583. Sandy Armstrong was there in 1623 and ‘Neather Harden’ was possessed by Sandy Armstrong and ‘Will in the Mylne’ in 1632. David Stark was tenant there in 1694, with George Scott also listed as a resident. Abraham Watson was farmer there in 1797. James Knox was there in 1868. It was still indicated on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map, but is now marked only as Harden Moss, Harden Burn and Harden Hill (further to the south-east). The location suggested for the former house is at the edge of a plantation on the left-hand side of the B6357 between Florida and Old Castleton. Confusingly, it appears to be combined with Highhouse, Hightrees, Howden and Burmoumouth on the 1718 survey of properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch, although these other farmsteads are not very close in location, and so this may be an error (the tower is indicated on Gordon’s c. 1650 map, while Blaeu’s 1654 map shows ‘O. Hardenn’ and ‘N. Hardenn’ and Stobie’s 1770 map shows simply ‘Harden’).

Harden (har-din) n. John (13th C.) recorded as ‘Johan de Harden’ in the county of Roxburgh when he signed the Ragnan Rolls in 1296. This seems likely to be the lands in the Borthwick valley, but his relationship to later owners is unknown.

Harden Anna (har-din-aw-na) n. former name for a farmstead near Harden in the Borthwick valley. John Storie was living there in 1762 (the name presumably derives from the meaning of ‘anna’ or ‘ana’ as a ‘holm’).

Hardenbank (har-din-bawngk) n. former name for lands in Liddesdale, recorded in the 1541 rental roll, and presumably part of Harden. At that time they were valued at 1 merk and tenanted by John Armstrong.

Harden Brig (har-din-brig) n. small stone road-bridge across the Harden Burn on the B711 Borthwick Road.

Harden Burn (har-din-burn) n. stream that joins the Borthwick just below Harden.

Harden Burn (har-din-burn) n. stream in Liddesdale, rising near the Border and running roughly westward to join the Liddel opposite the farm of Mains. It contains some waterfalls and was traditionally said to be the haunt of fairy folk.

Hardenburn (har-din-burn) n. place in Liliesleaf Parish, where?? – ‘We’ve wandered up by Hardenburn, And to the muckle tree, Or through the fairy-haunted glen And over the daisied lea’ [FL].
Hardenburnfit

Hardenburnfit (har-din-burnfi') n. former farmstead near the foot of the Harden Burn in Robertson Parish. It is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map near where the Merchelyton burn joins the Harden Burn. William Miller lived there in 1717. Peter Deans and family were there in 1841.

Harden Cottage (har-din-ko'-eej) n. former cottage near Harden. Mason William Clerk and family were living there in 1841 and 1851.

Harden Gill (har-din-gil) n. small stream in upper Liddesdale, on the south side of the valley, between old Castleton and Mains, and distinct from Harden Burn, which lies a little further north.

Harden Glen (har-din-glen) n. deep ravine in front of Harden House, where the riving Scotts are said to have had stolen cattle, sometimes also called the 'Beef Tub'. An early sketch was made by J.C. Schetky in 1808. Flakes of flint were found here in about 1938 – 'And if your heart's a Border heart, look down to Harden Glen, And hear the blue hills ringing with the restless hoofs again' [WHO], 'Can you see them in the moonlight as they ride thro' Harden Glen, Spurred and booted, wild and fearless, to invade the English fen?' [GHB], 'High over Borthwick's mountain flood; His wood embosomed mansion stood; In the dark glen, so deep below The herds of plundered England low' [SWS].

Harden Hill (har-din-hil) n. hill between Castleton village and Black Knowe in Liddesdale. It reaches a height of 288 m and has the Harden Burn to the north and Harden Moss to its northwest.

Hardenhoo (har-din-hoo) n. house marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map in Liddesdale near the modern Hartsgarth. The notation on the map may indicate an abbreviation, perhaps for ‘Hardenholm’. It is probably the same as ‘Hardenkaul’ listed on a rental roll c.1376 as being a 15-shilling land attached to Mangerton estate.

Harden Hoose (har-din-hoos) n. ancient seat of the Scotts, about 3 miles west of Hawick, home of Lord and Lady Polwarth, and famous as the former home of Border rievers such as Auld Wat of Harden. It is set dramatically above a deep ravine of a stream which joins the Borthwick, ideal for hiding stolen cattle, and planted with a surrounding woodland. The Scotts gained Harden from Lord Home in 1501. The earliest residence there was further down at ‘Auld Harden’ (although it is unclear whether this was the tower destroyed near the end of the 16th century or another). The present house dates from about 1630, with extensions around 1680–90, but may incorporate parts of an earlier one that was destroyed about 1592 (possibly by Walter Scott of Goldielands, following a royal order, because of Walter Scott of Harden’s part in the Falkland Raid). There were also major renovations to the north side in the 19th century. The earliest house was oblong, with 2 storeys and an attic, extended to the south in the 1680s. The house has a steep roof with dormers and thick walls. In 1694 the house is listed as having 17 hearths. There is also a 17th century sundial from Dryburgh House just to the east, about 4 feet high and with a square dial-stone. To the west is a bowling green, which may date from the 17th century. The building became a farmhouse from the 18th century, while the seat of the Scotts of Harden was at Mertoun, and it fell into disrepair in the early 19th century, before being restored. However, the family returned in 1913, after major renovations and some alterations were made. It was the location of some Common Riding Ride-outs in the 1930s. Hawick Museum has the lock from the garret door of the house, as well as a door knocker. Other artefacts associated with the house include a powder flask engraved ‘Judean Scoot of Heychesters’, a set of spurs and a bugle horn scratched with many letters. A family tree of the Scotts, drawn up by Sir Walter Scott, is displayed in the house. The arms of Scott of Harden is a variant on that of Buccleuch, with 2 stars and a crescent, supported by 2 mermaids. Their motto is ‘Reparabit Corru Phoebe’, usually translated as ‘There will be moonlight again’, referring to the habits of reiving days – ‘Ho! For the blades of Harden! Ho! For the driven kye’ [WHO], ‘Tell of danger, warn the ranger, Harden rides again’ [WL].

Harden Knowe (har-din-now) n. hill to the west and north of Harden House containing an ancient earthwork. It is the eastern spur of Mainshiel Head. The lands of Harden Knowes were in dispute in 1739 between Walter Scott of Harden and Pringle of Whitbank. The earthwork is situated on the high western side of the ravine, about 200 m from Harden House. It measures about 65 m by 50 m, and consists of 3 sides, with the ravine completing the rectangle. There are no traces of internal buildings, but the plan would suggest a mediaeval date. It has been obliterated.
Hardenlees

(former lands in Liddesdale, recorded in the c.1376 rental roll as ‘Hardealy’s’, with a value of 6 shillings and 8 pence. It is listed under the ‘Forestal’ section, which is to the north, and probably associated with Harden near Castleton (see Harden Mains). It was owned by the Rutherfords of Ruecastle and Knowesouth in the 17th century.

Harden Moss

(former lands in Liddesdale, recorded in the rental roll as ‘Hardenwode’ in 1471). It is unclear precisely where the lands were, but it is likely that ‘Hardenwode’ was the name of the area.

Harden Wud

(former lands in Liddesdale, recorded in the rental roll as ‘Hardenwode’ in 1471). It is unclear precisely where the lands were, but it is likely that ‘Hardenwode’ was the name of the area.

Harden Mains

(former lands in Liddesdale, recorded in the rental roll as ‘Hardenwode’ in 1471). It is unclear precisely where the lands were, but it is likely that ‘Hardenwode’ was the name of the area.

Hardie

David (19th C.) farmer at Priesthaugh. He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1870. He could be the David who was farmer at Sorbie in 1861. David T. (19th/20th C.) secretary at Blenkhorn, Richardson & Co., Ltd. He served as Treasurer of Hawick Free Kirk 1889–95. His mother was Elizabeth Taylor. George (d.bef. 1721) tenant in Acreknowe. He is listed there on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. In 1721 his widow Elspeth Reid married smith John Scott.

George (b.c.1785) hosier in Denholm. At one time he employed 20 workers. He was listed as a stocking maker in Pigot’s 1837 directory. In 1841 he was living on Westside with his wife Nelly. He appears to have died in 1851. Henry (17th/18th C.) merchant of Hawick. He was listed ‘eist the water’ among those paying the Hearth Tax in Hawick in 1694. He is probably the ‘Harie’ who was listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick ‘eist the water’ in 1694. In 1702 he was fined for being found drinking during the time of the Sunday sermon at George Rennick’s inn. He may be the Henry who was married to Isobell Newbie, or Grizzell Young. He is probably the Henry who witnessed a baptism for James Hardie in 1682 (with Walter Hardie as the other witness). Perhaps the same Henry (along with William, possibly his brother) was recorded in 1683 when he was among a group of men fined for throwing stones across the Teviot at night; they were fined for causing injury and ordered to pay for the clothes being bleached there that they damaged. Isabel (17th C.) daughter of cooper Robert. In 1683 she was struck by stones thrown across the Teviot by a group of men, wounding her, when she and Elspeth Scott (servant to Bailie Scott of Ormiston) were watching linen clothing that was being bleached there. James (15th C.) listed among the Roxburghshire men who had remission in 1488/9 from James IV for their support of the previous King, especially on the battlefield at Stirling. Most of the men appear to have been closely associated with Douglas of Cavers. James (17th C.) Hawick Councillor in 1668. Perhaps the same James is listed among those contributing to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He was also listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick ‘eist the water’ in 1694. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Bessie Hardie and their children included: Walter (b.1682); William (b.1684); Henry (b.1685); James (b.1687); and John (b.1689). The witnesses in 1682 were Walter Hardie and Henry Hardie, who may be related to him and his wife. James (17th C.) listed among the ‘Cottars in Hassanden’ on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He is surely related to the ‘John Hardis’, who is also listed there. James (17th/18th C.) described as ‘at ye Wester Kirk-styled’ in 1723 when the Hawick Session gave him money ‘to buy a beast for carrying heather, leading of fuel, and carrying to anie who would employ him’ to help him support his wife and several small children. Probably the same James ‘Heardye’ was paid by the Council in 1739 for ‘liding 600 difeits to tolbooth’ (i.e. transporting 600 divots for the roof of the Tolbooth). It is possible he is the same James as the pedlar described by Robert Wilson. He could be the James, married to Janet Little, whose children baptised in Hawick included Agnes (b.1722), Mary (b.1724).
and Janet (b. 1727). James (17th/18th C.) pedlar from Hawick. It is said (by Robert Wilson) that he was involved in the riot at the Winter Fair when the Commissioners of the Duke of Buccleuch tried to extract a duty. He apparently fell 5 Sheriff Officers with an oak club, which was afterwards held as a family reli. At the end of the scuffle he apparently shattered the sword of the leading Officer, and this was later recounted in a song (which does not survive). He may be the ‘Hardie’ recorded being paid by the Council in 1767 along with ‘Tinlin’ for watching the Auld Brig during th flood. A deceased James is described as a labouring man in Hawick in 1774 when his daughter Elizabeth married James Little in Edinburgh; whether this is the same man is unclear. A James, son of William and Bessie Scott was born in Hawick in 1720. James (18th/19th C.) farmer at ‘Doverford’ in Southdean Parish, according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. James (d.1808) weaver in Hawick, son of Robert. He married Betty Waugh in 1754 and their children included: John (b.1757); Helen (b.1760); John (again, b.1761); and Barbara (b.1764). James (b.1803) son of Rev. Thomas Samuel and grand-nephew of Rev. Charters of Wilton. He was listed as a surgeon living at Wilton Manse in 1825 when he subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’. James (b.1805/6) shoemaker in Hawick. He was listed on the Kirk Wynd in Pigot’s 1837 directory and also on the 1841, living with his mother Jean. His wife was also Jean, and she died before 1851. Their children were Helen and Elizabeth. In 1851 he married Helen Kersel, who was from Jedburgh. By 1861 he was at 16 Buccleuch Street. James (b.1813–91) born at Bridgehouse, Castleton, son of William and Violet Douglas. He was an agricultural labourer, living at Hartsgarth Burnside in 1851 and on South Liddel Street in Newcastleton in 1861. He may be the James who was elder of Newcastleton U.P. Kirk in the latter part of the 19th century. In 1841 he married Jane (1814–97), daughter of Andrew Thomson and Janet Scott. Their children included: Janet (b.1841); Violet (b.1843), who married William Cowan; Helen (b.1845), who had a son, James; Elizabeth Margaret (1848–57); William (b.1850); and Andrew (1853–1902), who married Jane Murray and worked as a groom and caretaker in Northumberland. James (b.1827/8) recorded as farm overseer at Deambrae in 1851. James (d.1874) Church Officer for Hawick Free Kirk from 1855 until his death. He may be the James whose version of ‘Pawkie Paiterson’ was recorded in 1873 in Frank Hogg’s Transactions article on old songs. John (15th/16th C.) Chaplain of Hawick, who was witness to the 1519/20 marriage contract between Sir Walter Scott of Bruxholme and James Gledstains. He is recorded as ‘Schir Johnne Hardy, chaplane’ and was listed after the Chaplain, William Cunningham. Since he was designated ‘sir’, he must not have had a Masters degree, and was presumably an assistant to Cunningham. John (17th C.) maltman in Hawick. In 1666 his servant George Irvine was fined for cutting divots at Myreslawgreen. He was recorded as a maltman in 1673 on the list of men named in the trial for the so-called riot at St. Jude’s Fair. John (17th C.) farmer of lands adjacent to Southfield. In 1677 John Scott at Southfield was fined ‘for abusseing the marches of Hawicke marching betuixt’ his lands and Southfield. He is mentioned in the Burgh Records in 1686 when 2 new marchers of the boundaries within the town were appointed; he was stated to have been a former marcher, along with William Purdom and William Paisley. He may be the same John who was resident on the west-side of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694, paying tax for 3 hearths. He may be the John whose son was the ‘younger’ recorded in the 1690s. He is probably the John who witnessed a baptism for John Elliot of Brugh in 1675. John (17th C.) listed among the ‘Cottars in Hassanden’ on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He is surely related to the ‘James Hardis’, who is also listed there. John (1668/9–1731) son of carrier Walter. In 1693 he was fined for ‘ane most egregious ryott committ by him upon the Sabbathday on Steven Greenshells’ by pushing him out of his seat in the Loft of St. Mary’s, as well as pulling on his bonnet. He married Isabel Aitken, who died in 1739, aged 53. Their children included: John (b.1725); and 2 unnamed children. He could have been the John, son of Walter and Janet Grieve baptised in Hawick in 1671. The family are buried in St. Mary’s along with the family of Bailie Robert, who must have been closely related (perhaps his brother). John (17th/18th C.) ‘younger, maltman’ in Hawick, on the 1693/4 subscribers’ list for the new Kirk bell. He was ‘John Hardie younger’ of the west-side of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. Since he was John younger, he was probably son of the maltman John recorded in the 1660s and 70s. He may have been the John Hardie, junior, maltman, who was uncle of Mary, wife of William Wilson (‘Whusky Wullie’), and hence had an only daughter, Agnes. John was appointed to the commission to discuss the witnessed a baptism for Adam Pott. In 1769 he was recorded as a merchant when he married Helen Cowan, servant to Widow Bell in Edinburgh. He was fined by the Hawick Bailies for his ‘irregular marriage’, which was performed in the Canongate by ‘W. Selkirke’; this may have been William Selkirk, who was ousted in 1690 for being an Episcopalian, suggesting that either the bride or groom (or both) subscribed to this church. There are several Johns born in Hawick in the relevant period who could have been him, e.g. son of James and Jane in 1683, son of James and Bessie in 1689 or son of John in 1690. John (b.1679) son of Patrick and Janet Scott. He was a tailor in Hawick. Probably the same John was involved in some financial dealings with Walter Ruecastle in 1693, in connection with which Ruecastle assaulted the Bailie of Regality, William Scott. In 1706 he married Isobel, daughter of William Aitkin. Along with his new father-in-law he was fined for holding a ‘supernumerary marriage’, i.e. having more guests than allowed by law. In fact the guests included the 2 Bailies, the Town Clerk, Scott of Horsleyhill and Dr. Scott. His children included: Bessie (b.1707); Margaret (b.1709); Agnes (b.1712); Helen (b.1713), who could be the Helen whose son Samuel was born in 1738, with ‘Father Dead’, or the Helen married to shoemaker Andrew Scott; Agnes (again, b.1716); Robert (b.1719); William (b.c.1722); and John (b.1725). Bailie John (1722–1800) councillor and manufacturer. He was grandson of Bailie Robert, although it is unclear who his parents were. It is also said that he had a brother nicknamed ‘Whether or No’. He introduced stock- ing frames to Hawick in 1771, bringing 4 of them back from a business trip to Glasgow, and setting them up at 37 High Street (the screw of the first one in use is in the Museum collection). This is usually considered as the beginning of hosiery manufacturing in the town. As a result Hardie is sometimes referred to as ‘Father of the Hawick Knitwear Industry’, although he only worked in the hosiery business for a few years. It is said that people taught in his stocking-shop were transplanted to Wooler, Kelso, Jedburgh, Langholm, Melrose, Selkirk and elsewhere. There is a single example of his business records in the Museum. In 1766 he was recorded as a merchant when he witnessed a baptism for Adam Pott. In 1769 he was appointed to the commission to discuss the Common with representatives of the Duke of Buccleuch. He was later accused of accepting a bribe in order to facilitate the Division of the Common. In 1771 he was paid by the Council for a bottle of wine when he carried out business with agents of the Duke of Buccleuch. In a description of Hawick’s trade in about 1777 he is said to have had 4 frames for making stockings, with James Halden being the only other stocking manufacturer in Town, with 2 frames. He made on average 2400 pairs of stockings per year, but gave up ‘in consequence of family distress’, with John Nixon effectively taking over from him. He is probably the John who paid the Horse Tax in Hawick most years in the period 1785–92 (listed as ‘Merchant’ some years). In 1787 and 1789–91 he paid tax for having a female servant. He owned land in several places around the town, for example being described as ‘porter of Weensland’ in 1787; he was listed as owner of land valued at £36 5s 8d (purchased from the Scotts of Horsleyhill) in 1788 and still listed as owner in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls (although deceased by then); this land was later split between Mrs. Watson of Wilton Bank and Thomas Lindsay Watson. He was Bailie almost continuously from 1771–1800, being chosen more often as Magistrate than anyone else of his time. In 1790 he stopped the rebel Cornet’s cavalcade from going out past the West Port (immortalised in the unofficial ‘shairny paidle’ verse of ‘Teribus’), felling the first of the rebel cavalcade. This allowed the elected Cornet and his party to proceed unmolested to the Moor, and hence the Common Riding passed without violence. He was known for his quick temper and for his upstanding and fearless manner. It is said that boys used to detour around the Cross so as to avoid his castigation as he leaned over his shop half-door. A story is told (by Robert Wilson) of how he was instructed by his doctor to go to Berwick to bathe in the sea a dozen or so times, which he did over only a couple of days, returning to his shop 3 days later and saying to his physician ‘And did ye imagine, Doctor, that I was to stay in Berwick ten or twal days? – ye ken that was impossible’. Another story tells how he surprised a supposedly dumb ‘spaeman’ in order to make him cry out and expose himself as a swindler. He was thereafter said to be able to make the dumb speak! Part of the dialogue from one of his court cases is preserved. He married Janet Elliot, and she died in 1760, aged 34. Their children included Margaret (b.1757). He secondly married Rebecca, daughter of George Swan in 1762, who died in 1809, aged 68. He had...

further children, including: John (b.1763); Rebe-

Archological Society. Margaret (b.1763) and Isobel Hardie (perhaps his daughter) and another for Betty Hardie (perhaps also his daughter) and a man called Little. He witnessed a baptism for John Crosbie and Janet Hardie (probably his daughter) in 1796. The family gravestone records that 16 children in all are interred there (presumably they mostly died young). He is buried in St. Mary’s Cemetery, and in 1933 the Callants’ Club erected a bronze plaque at 37 High Street (near the Cross), where he lived. He was the last local male descendant of a long line of Hardies. John (18th/19th C.) listed along with Robert as a carrier in Hawick on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He had 5 work horses. Both he and Robert paid the cart tax in Hawick in 1785–1791. An unnamed child of his died in 1808 and his son John in 1809. He is probably the John, who married Helen Scott in 1751 and whose children included: James (b.1759); Elizabeth (b.1761); John (b.1763); and an unnamed child (b.1768). The witnesses in 1763 were Robert Hardie (perhaps his brother) and George Scott (probably related to his wife), and in 1768 were carrier Thomas Thomson and weaver George Turnbull. John (18th/19th C.) boot and shoe maker in Newcastle, listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories. In 1841 he was at about 22 North Hermitage Street. His wife was Agnes and they had a son, Robert. By 1851 he was receiving parish relief. John (1815–91) son of William and Violet Douglas. He was teacher at the small school at Burnmouth, south of Newcastle in the 1860s. He married Mary Fleming, who died in 1850, aged 28. John Mungo Wilson (1920–

98) descendant of Baillie Robert, he presented the Drums and Fifes with 3 new drums in 1980 in commemoration of his great-grandfather Oliver’s Cornetship 150 years earlier. He was presented with one of the old drums in return. He worked in the oil industry, and was a life member of the Archaeological Society. Margaret (17th C.) resident of Headshaw in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when she was listed on the Hearth Tax roll among ‘ye poor’. Margaret Hunter (1801–44) daughter of Rev. Thomas Samuel and grand-niece of Rev. Charters of Wilton. She was ‘Miss Hardie, Wilton Manse’ in 1825 when she subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’. She married Rev. Joseph Thomson of Ednam. Mary (1717–96) wife of William Wilson, ‘Whusky Wullie’ (1713–91). She was one of 8 children, her siblings being: Janet (b.1712); Robert (b.1714); John (b.1719); Agnes (b.1720); John (again, b.1723); Christian (b.1725); and Janet (again, b.1729). When she married in 1737 she may have been the only surviving child. Her uncle was John, junior, maltman, and she was distantly related to Baillie John Hardie. Oliver (b.1800/1) Cornet in 1830, he lived at the foot of the Kirk Wynd and farmed at the Wellogate. He was also a church warden at St. Cuthbert’s. His wife was Margaret and their children included Mary, James and Robert. He was probably related to shoemaker James, who lived next door. Oliver (19th/20th C.) grocer on Silver Street, along with his brother Thomas Mason. They acquired the business of James Laing after his death. Along with his brother ‘T.M.’ they presented a new set of drums and fifes to the town in 1930, in commemoration of their grandfa-ther’s Cornetship of 1830. He lived at 10 Wilton Hill Terrace. He served as a Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. Patrick (15th C.) resident of Linton. In 1493, along with James in Graham-saw, he had remission for several crimes, including theft of 60 sheep from Wilton and arson there, as well as theft of 2 oxen from Robert Elliot. His surety was Andrew, son of James Ker. Patrick (15th/16th C.) recorded as ‘Patrick Harde’ as a witness to a charter of David Scott of Hassendean in 1510/11. Patrick (17th C.) carrier in Hawick listed among those who subscribed to the fund for the new Kirk bell in Hawick in 1693/4. He may be the same resident of the west-side of Hawick recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. Parish. He married Janet Scott, who was served in 1667 as heir to her great-grandfather, Patrick Scott, surgeon in Hawick. Their children included: Robert (b.1670), who probably died young; Robert (1672–c.1738), carrier in Hawick; James (b.1675); John (b.1679); and Patrick (b.1682), cordiner in Hawick. The only sons who survived were Robert and Patrick. Patrick (1682–c.1755) son of Patrick and Janet Scott. He was a cordiner (also referred to as shoemaker) in Hawick. His brother Robert was a carrier (but this may be meant for ‘cordiner’) in Hawick and died in about 1738. In 1735 he purchased a property on the west side of the Howegate that had previously belonged to Robert Scott of Falnash. In 1711 he married Agnes Hardie, only daughter of maltman John; it is unclear if they were cousins or otherwise distantly related. Their only surviving child was Mary (1717–96), who married William Wilson, ‘Whisky Wullie’, Burgh Procurator Fiscal. They also had children John (b.1719), Agnes (b.1720), John (b.1723), Christian (b.1725) and Janet (b.1729). Richard (17th C.) wright recorded as ‘Ritchie Hardie’ in 1644 when he was one of the men who appraised horses in Hawick for the Covenanters army. He is probably the Richard, married to Margaret Leyden, whose daughter Isobel was baptised in Hawick in 1636. Robert (17th C.) cooper in Hawick. In 1683 his daughter Isabel was injured when she was watching linen clothing that were bleaching and a group of men threw stones across the Teviot. Robert (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Riddell and their children included: Margaret (b.1670); Bessie (b.1676); and Agnes (b.1681). The witnesses in 1676 were Walter Purdom and James Scott (perhaps the Bailies with those names). He is probably the Robert who witnessed a baptism for James Brydon in 1676. He may be the Robert who was fined in 1657 for insulting Walter Purdom and James Thorbrand, Hawick’s Commissioners in Kelso, as well as calling the Burgh Officers ‘men-sworn lowns’. Bailie Robert (1661/2–1718) Hawick Magistrate in at least 1701 and 1702. In 1699 he and Patrick Richardson petitioned for Hawick to be relieved from the ‘fremdom of trade’ tax. In 1702 he and George Martin were listed as Bailies when they witnessed a baptism for tailor John Scott. In 1703 he and his wife were reburied by the Kirk Session for making a disturbance at the wedding of his wife’s brother William Oliver (to Christian Hart). He is also recorded in 1705 as intermediary in a disputed bill between Gideon Scott of Highchester, William Little of Hassendean Townhead and Thomas Turnbull of Knowe. He was Senior Bailie in 1706 when the Cornet-Elect (Thomas Hardie, presumably not a close relative) refused to carry the decrepit flag; he took over the duties, carrying it out of town, while the Junior Bailie carried it back, and they appointed others to carry it at the Moor. Also in 1706 he was severely insulted by John Binnie, previous Bailie, who was then fined and barred from being on the Council in future. He was still on the Town Council in 1707 (when a fine was imposed on the 2 acting Bailies) and was Bailie at the 1709 Common Riding. In 1710 he was stated to be one of the men given a key to the Charter Chest. He was also one of the Bailies in 1710, when the weavers resolved to settle their arguments over seating order in their loft in St. Mary’s. He was an ex-Bailie when the bond was granted by the Council (dated 1710, but recorded in the Town Book in 1711) to provide money for the Master of the new Grammar School. He is probably the Robert who was listed ‘eist the water’ in Hawick in the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694 and the merchant listed among those who subscribed to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He married Margaret Oliver, who was sister of merchant William Oliver, and related to ‘Auld Cash’; one of their grandsons was Bailie John. His wife died in 1719, aged 61. Their children included: Walter (b.1689); and Margaret, who married Robert Simpson in Edinburgh in 1716. He was buried in St. Mary’s, where the family tombstone has been kept. Robert (17th/18th C.) cordiner in Hawick. In 1702 he was fined ‘for bein in drinke, and rambling under cloud of night, in company with ane vagabond woman’. A couple of months later he was fined again for ‘going through the town, under the cloud of might, bein in drinke, disguised in women’s apparell, qrb he terrified and affrighted several persons’. He is probably the son of Patrick and only brother of cordiner Patrick, who died in about 1738 without issue. He may be the Robert recorded in 1698 when court proceedings were continued against him, while it was established whether the arrest was made by ‘the town or regall officer’. Robert (17th/18th C.) flesher in Hawick. In 1721 he married Isobel, daughter of gardener John Tait. Their children included: Isobell (b.1723); Robert (b.1725); John (b.1726); Barbara (b.1728); James (b.1730); and Janet (b.1735). In 1725 he witnessed a baptism for shoemaker Adam Kersel. Robert (18th C.) listed as a house servant at Midshiel in 1791, when he was working for Archibald Douglas. Robert (18th/19th C.) listed along with John as a carrier in Hawick on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. The same 2 men paid the cart tax in Hawick in 1785–91. His daughter Nellie died in 1819. He may be the Robert who witnessed a baptism for John in 1763. Robert (d.be. 1808) Hawick resident. His son James was a weaver whose death is recorded in Hawick in 1808. He could be the Robert who, along with James, witnessed a baptism for William in 1764. Robert (b.1791/2) farmer at Sorbie in Ewesdale. He was there in 1841 and 1851. His wife was Helen and their children included David (who was later overseer of the farm), Henry, Margaret, Walter, James, Janet, Isabella, Robert and John. Robert (d.bef. 1809) flesher in Hawick, possibly son of the earlier Robert. In 1809 his son William died. Rev. Dr. Robert (1808–37) born in Hawick, son of farmer John. He attended St. Andrews University 1822–3, then Glasgow and Edinburgh Universities. He became Professor of Rhetoric at Anderson’s College, Glasgow. He is probably the same Rev. Robert, LL.D. whose letter written on a voyage from Glasgow to Georgetown in 1837 has been published and is in the National Archives. He was appointed minister of St. Catherine’s, British Guiana, but must have died shortly afterwards. A portrait of him exists.

Samuel (17th C.) resident of Hawick. He subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). He could be the Samuel baptised in Hawick in 1738, son of Helen. Thomas (17th C.) married Bessie Ruciman in Roberton Parish in 1687. She was probably sister of Helen and Walter, who were married shortly before her in Roberton. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Ashybank who was listed in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Thomas (17th/18th C.) merchant, who is listed among those who subscribed to the fund for the new Kirk bell in Hawick in 1693/4. He (or perhaps his son) was probably the Thomas who was elected Cornet in 1706, but refused to carry the flag due to its decrepit condition. This led to near riots, with the Bailies taking over the responsibility, and the Council supplying a new flag for the following year. He was fined ten groats for his absence from the Common Riding and £20 for refusing to carry the Colour. He is probably the Thomas who was an elder of Hawick Kirk, recorded in 1717 being appointed to collect monies from ‘Hilhousland, Weensland, and Weensland milne’, suggesting he lived in this area. In 1722 he was still an elder, assigned to collect monies from the east end of the Town. He could be the Thomas who married Jean Irwin (or ‘Virran’), and whose children baptised in Hawick included Helen (b.1712), Janet (b.1715), James (b.1718), Bessie (b.1721) and Barbara (b.1725).

Rev. Dr. Thomas Samuel (d.1810) son of James of the Customs House in Leith, and nephew of Dr. Charters of Wilton (his mother being Jean). He was educated at Edinburgh University, was licensed by the Presbytery of Edinburgh in 1794 and ordained in 1796 as the Chaplain to the 7th Fencibles. He was presented to Ashkirk Parish in late 1797 by Sir Gilbert Elliot of Minto and became minister at Ashkirk in 1798. He obtained a doctorate from Edinburgh University in 1805. He was described as knowledgeable, compassionate, charitable and modest. His voice was apparently rather feeble, but he was nevertheless said to be ‘in the first class of Scottish preachers’. He was recorded making efforts to distribute cheap grain to parishioners in 1799. In 1800 he married Jean Colville (who died in 1816), daughter of the minister of Ormiston. Their children included: Margaret Hunter (1801–44), who married Rev. Joseph Thomson of Ednam, previously of Teviothead; James (b.1803); Jane Charters (1805–21); and Thomas Samuel (b.1810). In 1805 in Hawick he published a collection of exercises for schools, ‘Extracts for the use of parish schools’, which ran to 3 editions. His ‘Sermons’ were also published in Hawick in 1811 (edited by his uncle, Dr. Charters), and a manuscript copy was presented to the Museum by John Scott of Rodono in 1863. Walter see Wat Hardie. Walter (17th C.) described in 1868 as a ‘traveller’ (i.e. a ‘carrier’) when he was fined for ‘speiking reprochfullie of the Minister of the toune before William Layng one of the present Baylyeas’. This was Rev. John Langlands, who was an Episcopalian, this being just before the Revolution. His son John was fined in 1693 for fighting in the Kirk. His wife was probably Janet Grieve, and their son John was baptised in Hawick in 1671. He may be the Walter who was listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick ‘eist the water’ in 1694. He may be the Walter who Falnash (probably Gideon Scott) confessed to striking in 1677, when he was punished by the Hawick Bailies. He is probably also the Walter for was fined in 1678 for saying that Walter Scott of West Port ‘would be hanged’. He may be the Walter who witnessed a baptism for James Hardie in 1682. William (17th C.) described as a ‘cowpar’ (i.e. cooper) in a case in the Burgh Court of 1642 when he was fined, along with James Tudhope and Adam Martin on account of their livestock eating Gilbert Watt’s oats. He may be the William who married Bessie Scott in Hawick in 1638 and whose children included Thomas (b.1638). However, there are several alternative Williams at about the same time, e.g.: married to Malie English, daughter Bessie baptised in 1641; married to Janet, daughter Isobel born in 1648 and sons William and James born in 1654 and 1657; married to Manie Leyden, daughter Helen born in 1648; or married to Helen Rennadson, sons John and George born in 1644 and 1651. William (17th C.) ‘tacksman of the customs’ for the Earl of Queensberry in Hawick in 1673. That year there was a major disturbance...

when the agents of the Early tried to ‘ride the fair’, with him being imprisoned in the Tolbooth. The Hawick Bailies claimed that he had tried to extract ‘more than the usual custom’ from the market and refused to discuss this with them. William (17th C.) listed among the ‘Deficients in Hauick Parich’ in 1694. He appears to be at ‘The Tour of Hauick’. Perhaps the same William (along with Henry, perhaps his brother) is recorded in 1683 when he was among a group of men fined for throwing stones across the Teviot at night, injuring a couple of women who were watching their linens, and damaging the clothes being bleached there by James Bryden. William (17th/18th C.) probably a member of the Hawick Council. In 1701 he was one of those appointed to collect the ‘stent’ in the area ‘east the water’. Presumably the same William is described as ‘meal-maker’ in 1705 when he was appointed to collect another ‘stent’ for putting lead on the steeple of St. Mary’s. He could have been one of the farmers of the West-end. He may be the same William mentioned in a case of 1685 when William Purdom was charged with abusing him and one of the Bailies. He may be the William, son of John and ‘Jenet Inglish’ born in Hawick in 1654 (their second son of that name) or the William born to James and Isobel Huntlie in 1657. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Acreknowe. His daughter Janet was baptised in Kirkton Parish in 1718. William (18th C.) carrier in Hawick. In 1760 he witnessed a baptism for blacksmith Robert Young. He could also be the William who witnessed a baptism in 1777 for Betty Hardie and a man named Little; Bailie John Hardie was the other witness, suggesting they were brothers or some other close relation. William (18th/19th C.) Hawick butcher. He is listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, before carriers Robert and John, and so may have been closely related. He married Janet Scott in 1763 and their daughter Agnes was baptised in 1764. The witnesses were Robert and James, who were surely closely related. He could be the William ‘Caddan’ (the meaning of which is unclear) who died in 1809, son of flesher Robert. He could be the William, son of John, who was born in about 1722 and had brothers Robert and John. William (1779–1861) son of Thomas and Esther Armstrong, he was an agricultural labourer in Castleton Parish. He was listed among heads of households 1835–41, living at Brighouse and Dinlabyre; there was also a younger William in the Parish at that time, at Hudhouse. In 1851 he was at about 9 Doncaster Street in Newcastleton. He married Violet, daughter of James Douglas, who died in 1856, aged 69. Their children included: Thomas (b.1811); James (1813–91), also a labourer in Castleton; John (1815–91), schoolmaster; Walter (1817–82), a labourer in Newcastleton; Christian (b.1819), who died young; Esther (b.1822), who died in infancy; Elizabeth (or Betty, 1822–1900), who married William Telfer, grocer in Edinburgh; Christian (1826–54); William (1829–1916), who moved to Edinburgh; Kitty, who married Walter Ketchin; Esther (b.1831); and Matthew (b.1834). He died at Burnmouth Schoolhouse, where his son John was teacher. William (1829–1916) son of William and Violet Douglas, he was born in Castleton Parish. He moved to Edinburgh and worked as a railway porter. In 1870 he married Mary Knox and their children were Isabella and Violet (often spelled ‘Hardy’ in older records).

Hardie's Byre (hawr-deez-bi-ur) n. barn once near the top of the Loan, where the Hardie family farmed – ‘Up the Loan they went like fire, Till they came to Hardie’s byre …’ [T].

Hardie’s Hill (hawr-deez-nil) n. hilly area near Crowbyres, named after the Hardie family who farmed there for generations. It reaches a height of 211 m and has a triangulation pillar. It is sometimes known in the plural as ‘Hardie’s Hills’. The hollow (presumably to the south-west of the summit) was said to be where Hawick’s inhabitants hid when the English attacked the town. It was sometimes called ‘Auld Hawick’ (although how much this idea was invented in the era of Victorian romance is unclear). Its slopes were the scene of the ceremonial sod-cutting for the Hawick-Carlisle railway in 1859. A stone ball found there is in the Museum – ‘…O’ Hardie’s high and rugged hill An auld historic spot’ [GD], ‘Tis sweet to see the gloamin’ grey Creep o’er the grassy fell, And mark the sunbeams gowden ray Light up old Hardie’s Hill’ [JT], ‘Here Hardie’s Hills in rugged beauty rise, With knowes and hollows interspersed between …’ [JCG], ‘And saw the sun o’ Easter Heeze up and lowe until It kinned till a burnin’ buss The thorns on Hardie’s Hill’ [DH].

Hardisike (har-dee-sik) n. Thomas (18th C.) coachman at Cavers in 1778 and 1779, when he was working for James Douglas. His name may be an error for some other surname.
Hardlee

Hardlee (hawrd-le) n. former farmstead near the head of the Hyndlee Burn to the east of the Note o the Gate. Some of the sheppfolds there are said to have been made from the stones of the Hare Cairn. Francis Cavers was shepherd there in 1861. ‘Hardlee Flow’ is marked there on the modern Ordnance Survey map, in the depths of Wauchope Forest.

hards (hawrdz) n., pl., arch. coarse fibres of flax left over from ‘heckling’ and often used to make sack-cloth.

hard up (hawrd-up) adj. in poor health – ‘Then, take my word, ye re ’gey-hard-up’, For the symptoms never lie . . .’ [DH], ‘Aw veesited her in the Cottage, bit she was guy hard up’, ‘. . . An hard up means oo erni weel, An no juist short o cash’ [IWL] (also written ‘hard-up’; not usually used to indicate lack of money, E.C. Smith describes it as ‘a misleading idiom’).

hard-up gentry (hawrd-up-jen-tree) n., arch. the upper poor class – ‘Hard-up gentry = impecunious snobs’ [ECS].

Hardway (hawrd-wä) n. former name for lands in the Ewes valley. It is listed among the lands in Ewesdale held by Alexander, Lord Home in 1506 and 1509/10. It is recorded along with Mosspaun, Fiddleton and other lands in 1535 when superiority of parts of Ewesdale were confirmed to George, Lord Home. It is also listed as part of the Lordship of Ewesdale in about 1610. The lands were listed as ‘Hordway’ in 1663 among those owned by the Scotts of Buccleuch in the Lordship of Ewesdale (it is ‘Hardvy’ in 1506).

the Hare Cairn (thu-här-kärn) n. former ancient cairn which stood on the farm of Hyndlee in the headwaters of the Rule, now deep within the forest. It was close to the Wheel Causeway, near the shepherd’s cottage that was built later, the area called Swirefoot. The cairn was quite extensive, and said to have covered about an eighth of an acre. It was dismantled to build some sheppfolds and walls, and there was already no sign of it by 1859, although 2 burial cists were found beneath it. It is said that there was a slab bearing a carving of a leaf-shaped sword and cavities, which was sent to Abbotsford (also called ‘Haeer Cairn’).

Harecairn Sike (här-kärn-sık) n. small stream in the southern part of Hobkirk Parish, which runs into the Hyndlee Burn. Near the head of the burn used to be Hare Cairn. The Ordnance Survey Name Book (in 1859) notes that although no trace of it survived, 2 cists had been found there. It lay on the path of part of an old road identified with the Wheel Causeway.

Hare Cleuch (här-klooch) n. small stream to the west of Penchrise farm. There was a rifle range near here for Stobs Camp.

Harecleuchheid (här-klooch-heed) n. Harecleuchhead, former farmstead between Troutlawford and Penchrise, near the head of the Hare Cleuch. Labourer Thomas Douglas and family were there in 1841 and Edward Barton was shepherd there in 1861. A drove road used to pass near here (it is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Hare Grain (här-grån) n. small stream that rise on Pike Hill and flows roughly to the east to join the Lairhope Burn to the west of Lairhope.

Haregrain (här-grån) n. former farmstead on the Hare Grain, to the north of Hislop, near the boundary between Teviothead and Roberton Parishes. When Margaret Scott married William Scott (in Hislop) in Hawick in 1728, she was said to be from ‘Hairgrain’. By 1788 it was valued along with Falnash at £684, part of the properties of the Duke of Buccleuch. The value was still the same in 1811. Hairgrain Edge is the south-eastern extension of Pike Hill near there (it is ‘Hairgrain’ in 1788).

Hare Hill (här-hil) n. hill to the east of the B6399 just after Berryfell farm, being the south-western spur of Berryfell Hill. On its western slopes, crossed by the road, are 2 linear earthworks of fairly narrow proportions. One of them may have had a drainage function, leading down into Carlin Hole. The area to the north is known as Little Hare Hill.

Harehope Sike (här-rup-sık) n. small stream that rises between Threep Head and Esdale Law and runs roughly northwards to join the Ale Water.

Harekamb (här-kawm) n. former name for lands in the southern part of Lilliesleaf Parish. In the early 13th century a piece of Walter of Riddell’s demesne lands below there were among those granted to Melrose Abbey. It is unclear how to pronounce the name, or what its modern equivalent might be (although it might be connected with Harelaw and Kames).

Harelaw (här-law) n. farm between Lilliesleaf and Hassendean. A drove road used to pass here on its way to Groundistone and the Borthwick.
Haremoss

This may also have shared part of its route with a Roman road, probably connecting Newstead with Raeburnfoot (although this is more speculative). James Turnbull was farmer there in 1851.

Harelaw (här-law) n. name of an area right on the Border, east of Canonbie, site of the tower of Hector Armstrong in the late 16th century. There were also Grahams in this area in the 16th century. ‘Andro Armstrong, callit Lang Andro, in the Hairlaw’ is recorded in 1578/9. There was also a mill there. ‘Harlaw’ and ‘Harlawwood’ are listed among the Dumfriesshire possessions of the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1663 (also ‘Hairlaw’, it is ‘Harlaw’ in 1583 and ‘Harlaw’ in 1663).

Harelawcleuch (hawr-law-kloooch) n. name for a former farm in Jedforest. It is described as 3 steadings valued at £3 6 shillings in 1538 and 1539. In the Exchequer Rolls the comptroller was allowed the ‘fermes’ from ‘Harlawcleuch Vestir’ for the year of 1538. In 1541 Patrick Laidlaw, John Oliver and Richard Oliver were tenants in part of the farm, paying 33s 4d and John Laidlaw tenant in the other part, paying 11s 6d (it is ‘Hairlawcleuch’ in 1538 and 1539 and ‘Harlawcleuch’ in 1541).

Haremoss (här-mos) n. the end of the main turnpike road through Hawick in the late 18th and early 19th centuries, established by the ‘Scots-Dyke to Haremoss Road Act’ of 1764 (published 1770). It is on the A7 between Ashkirk and Selkirk, and marks the boundary of Roxburghshire with Selkirkshire. James Ruickbie was a toll-keeper here for a while. Haremoss Loch is on the right-hand side of the A7, and the area is known as Hare and Dunhog Moss Nature Reserve. Severel arrow-heads, flint scrapers and other prehistoric implements have been found in the area – ‘Where will ye get a whisky soss To moistify your middle, For now nae langer at Harremoss You’ll hear auld Ruickbie’s fiddle. By night or day’ [JR] (also written ‘Hare-moss’).

Harelaw-lippit (här-shul-li-pee’, -pi’) adj., arch. hare-lipped, having a cleft lip (also hyirshal-lippit).

Hare Sike (här-sik) n. small stream in the upper Borthwick valley, running roughly to the south to meet the Borthwick just beyond Craik village. In the headwaters is a sheepfold, as well as another old enclosure, visible on aerial photographs.

Harestanes (här-stänz) n. Regional Countryside Centre off the A68 near Ancrum. The mediæval hospital known as Ancrum Spittal stood nearby, and was burned in 1545. The farm was developed as the Home Farm of Monteviot Estate in the early 19th century, with the present farmhouse being built in 1877, and converted to a visitor centre and craft workshops in 1979–80. It provides a centre for wildlife interpretation and a starting point for several nearby walks (the name is reputedly from ancient standing stones that once existed here).

Hargrave (hawr-grav) n. James (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Nether Dykeraw according to the 1797 Dog Tax Rolls. James (1798–1865) born at Chesters (in Southdean), son of Joseph and Jane Melrose. He was educated at the old school at Stouslie and also at Gala Academy. Upon graduation he was a schoolmaster himself at Midlem for a couple of years. In 1819 he emigrated to join other family members in Quebec, Canada and worked as a fur-trader for the Hudson’s Bay Company for over 40 years. He started as a clerk in 1821 and finished as Chief Factor at the isolated York factory in Rupert’s Land (in modern Manitoba) on Hudson Bay, retiring to Ontario. He married Letitia Mactavish and their children included Joseph James, Letitia Lockhart, Mary Jane and Dugald John. Much early correspondence of his still survives, some published in ‘The Hargrave Correspondence’ (1938) and others in ‘The Letters of Letitia Hargrave’ (1947).

Hargreaves (har-greevz) n. John (18th/19th C.) carrier who purchased premises at 16 Buccleuch Street in 1820, developing stables and a warehouse there. The property is labelled ‘Mr. Hargreave’ on Wood’s 1824 map, and would later become the Grapes Inn. He is listed in 1825/6 running a service to ‘Edinburgh and all part of the North’, with Walter Jardine as agent. He is listed in Pigot’s 1837 register with service to Carlisle, Edinburgh and the English north-west on Tuesdays and Fridays. He is probably the John whose heirs are recorded owning part of the former lands of Patrick Cunningham in Hawick in about 1874.

Hargreaves’ (har-greevz) n. firm of carriers in the 19th century. Before the coming of the railway, their wagon passed through Hawick twice a week each way, carrying goods between Edinburgh and London. They brought the first 4 power looms to Hawick from Manchester in 1830, the trip taking 3 weeks. They are listed as ‘John Hargreaves, agent Walter Jardine’ in Pigot’s 1825 directory.

Harigals (har-ri-gulz) n., pl., arch. the entrails of a fowl, pluck, the intestines of a human, innerds, guts – ‘Scots an Ingleesh in a fraineeshin, fidgin mad-keen ti teer the harrigals oot o other’ [ECS] (also written ‘harrigals’).

Harker (hawr-kur) n. former station on the Waverley Line, the last before Carlisle.

Harkness see Herkness

harl (haw-rul) v., arch. to drag, haul, scrape, rake, n., arch. the act of dragging, a tug – ‘Then, with a harl, Out o’ baith house and hal’ they pack them, To the wide warl’’ [JR], a sinister, coarse person – ‘Thou breeds baith mony a slut and harl, O’ slander’s nurse!’ [JoHa].

harl (haw-rul) v. to roughcast, cover the walls of a building with a mixture of cement and gravel – ‘the Howegate re-development involved harlin aa the hooses it the back’, “…texture of harled walls accented by shadows cast by pebbles from oblique sunlight’ [DH], n. the mixture applied during harling.

the Harlequins (thu-hawr-hu-kwinz) n. full name of the Quins.

Harley (har-lee) n. Walter (b.1814/5) from Dalkeith, he was a frameworker in Hawick. In 1849 he married Joan Kersel, from Jedburgh. Their children included Robert, Adam and Joseph. In 1861 the family were living on Mather’s Close.

harn (hawrn) n., arch. a course form of course cloth – ‘Given for Seven Ells of Harn for Little Joly’s Serks, 18s’ [PR] (short form of harden or hodden).

harness (hawr-nis) n., poet. gear, armour – ‘But little harness had we there But auld Badrule had on a jack …’ [CPM].

Harperhill (har-pur-hil) n. former name for lands in the Barony of Cavers that were part of the lands belonging to the ‘hospitale de Rowle’ (i.e. Spittal-on-Rule). An acre of arable land there was granted to Archibald Elliot in Gorrernberry (probably the same as Archibald of Falsnash) by James Douglas of Cavers in 1554, along with the advowson of the chapel at Caerlenrig. In a following letter of reversion, Elliot agreed to pay 86 pounds Scots for the holding the land and patronage for 13 years. This acre was said to be ‘super lie Harparhill’ and be then occupied by William Storie. It is unclear whether the land was near Spittal-on-Rule or near Caerlenrig or elsewhere.

Harrigals see harigals

Harrison (haw-re-sin) n. John (19th C.) resident of Teviothead Parish. In 1858 he married Joanna, daughter of Henry Elliot, tenant in Colterscleuch. Their children were: Ettie (b.1860); Margaret Charlton (1865–1935); John (b.1867); Henry (b.1869); Janette (b.1873); Walter Scott (1876–1944); and Elliot (b.1879). After the death of his sister-in-law Margaret in 1920, Margaret and Walter became joint tenants in Colterscleuch. Robert (18th C.) along with Robert Elliot of Fenwick, William Ogilvie of Hoscoe and Thomas Watson (‘writer’ in Hawick) he proposed setting up a stillhouse and brewery in 1737. This may have become Hawick’s first distillery and brewery on Slitrig Crescent, and he was probably one of the partners in the business. Since his surname is not locally common, he may have been brought in from elsewhere as an expert in this business. Walter Scott (19th/20th C.) joint tenant in Colterscleuch along with his sister Margaret Charlton. In 1920 they succeeded their aunt Margaret in the tenancy.

Harrot (haw-ri’) n. former local pronunciation of Harwood, also used to refer to the Laird of Harwood in the Rule valley (it is marked thus on Stobie’s 1770 map; also spelled ‘Harret’ and other variants).

the Harrow Inn (thu-haw-ró-in) n. inn run by James Ruickbie in the early part of the 19th century, on the ground floor of 12 High Street. It was a haunt of the local literati, including the Ettrick Shepherd among others. The motto on its signboard was ‘Sow in Hope’. The neighbouring property was for a while the Ordnance Arms, and it may be that the name was for a period used for both. It may sometimes be confused with the ‘Plough Inn’, which was on the Sandbed. The site was redeveloped as part of the Royal Bank in 1857.

Harry o Burnheid (haw-re-ô-burn-heed) n. nickname of Henry Paterson.

Harry’s Well (haw-reez-wel) n. popular name for a well at Burnhead, so named because ‘Harry o Burnheid’ used to sit there.

Hart (har’ ) n. Adam (18th C.) witnessed a baptism for James Dalgleish (resident of Goldieclands) in 1778. He could be the Adam who married Janet Hislop in Wilton in 1770, with children Jean (b.1771) and Bessie (b.1774). Perhaps the same Adam married Margaret Tait in Wilton in 1775. Adam (b.1774) son of James and Helen Riddell, he was born in Wilton Parish. In 1841 he was farmer at ‘Lower Lockies hedge’. He married Alison Turnbull in 1800. Their children included: James (b.1801), weaver; Walter (b.1805), also a weaver; Adam (b.1808); John (b.1813), coal merchant; and Helen (b.1816/7), who kept house for her unmarried brothers James and Walter at Lockiesedge. Adam (b.1808) son of Adam and Alison Turnbull. He was living at Greensidehall in 1851, with his wife Isabella and children Adam, William and Isabella. Adam (19th C.) Cornet in 1863 and Acting Father in 1889. He was a Town Councillor and strong supporter of the Common Riding and was Master of Ceremonies at Common Riding events through the 1890s. He was one of the Councillors who turned out at Common Rdings from the late 1880s, encouraging others to do the same. He can be seen riding near the head of the Procession in the 1899 film clip. He may be the Adam of Lockiesedge whose son George Turnbull was killed in the Boer War in 1900. Andrew (17th C.) maltman in Hawick listed among those contributing to funds for the new Kirk bell in 1693/4. He is probably the Andrew listed ‘eist the water’ among those paying the Hearth Tax in Hawick in 1694. He may be the Andrew who married Margaret Yule in Jedburgh in 1679 and whose children, born in Hawick, included: George (b.1681); Andrew (b.1684); and James (b.1686). He witnessed a baptism for William Taylor in 1682. Fr. Dominic (?-??) priest at S.S. Mary & David’s 1930–38. He oversaw the opening of the new Halls shortly after he arrived. He was transferred to Lochgelly. George (17th C.) blacksmith in Minto Parish who appears in the Hearth Tax records of 1694. George (18th/19th C.) recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as farmer at East Highchesters, when he owned 2 horses. He is probably the George who married Helen Knox in Hawick Parish in 1785 and had children Elizabeth (b.1798), George (b.1799) and George (again, b.1800). George (b.1800) born in Robertson Parish, son of George and Helen Knox. He was probably related to the earlier George and William who were at Highchesters. He was farmer at Highchesters in 1841, was shepherd at the Malt Steep in Wilton in 1851 and was ‘Farm Steward, Game Keeper & Shepherd’ at Pilnuir in 1861. His wife was Jane (from Dundee) and their children included: John; Isabel; George; and William. Hector McBean (1890–1972) born in Hawick; he played for Hawick Waverley Rugby Club and became a teacher. He served in the K.O.S.B. during WWI. He spent 27 years teaching Latin and coaching American football at Greenwich Country Day School in Connecticut, U.S.A. (from its foundation). Here he was said to be very popular with his pupils and was apparently the most inspirational teacher President George Bush (Senior) ever had! He retired back to the Hawick area in 1952, living at Midlem, Lilliesleaf, Hawick and finally North Berwick. He taught Latin at Hawick High School for a couple of years and became active in St. Cuthbert’s Kirk. He wrote ‘St. Cuthbert’s Scottish Episcopal Church, Hawick, A Centenary Chronicle, 1858–1958’. It is unclear if he was related to Rev. James William Tasker Hart. James ‘Hart of Harts’ (c.1753–1818) farmer at Wilton Burn. It is said that at the age of 25 he stood 6 feet 3 inches tall, weighted 33 stones and was the strongest man in Scotland. He may be the son of George and Janet Stuart, born in Wilton in 1754, with siblings George, William, Isabel, Mary and another brother. He is probably the James recorded as owner of part of Roughneugh (valued at £10 6s 8d) in 1788, and still recorded in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls. Rev. James William Tasker (19th/20th C.) rector of St. Cuthbert’s 1892–1903. He had been minister at Barnes (Surrey), Teddington (Middlesex), St. Paul’s (Bristol), St. George’s (Bristol), Leckhampton (Gloucester) and St. Paul’s (Swindon), but exchanged with Rev. Douglas Powell Ware of Hawick. He wrote the poem ‘The Birth of the Moat’. He had to terminate his incumbency in 1903 due to the threat of losing his eyesight. He wrote ‘The Autobiography of Judas Iscariot, A Character Study’ (1884). Jean (17th/18th C.) Hawick resident who possibly kept a boarding house, or took in orphans perhaps. In 1725 she was given money and grain for keeping Bettie Hay and someone else with the surname Jolly. She could be the Jean who was married to William Bruntfield and had 6 children baptised in Hawick Parish in the period 1712–21. John (17th/18th C.) glover and innkeeper in Hawick. He was listed among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He witnessed a baptism in 1701, for tailor William Scott, and another in 1704, for tailor Robert Wilson. In 1702, along with ex-Bailie John Binnie and merchant Patrick Angus, he was fined for drinking after the ringing of the 10 o’clock bell. In 1702 he complained about 25 people (including the 2 Bailies), being illegally involved with dealing in foreign cloth, woollen garments etc.; his name is written ‘Heart’. Also in 1702 he witnessed a couple of baptisms in Hawick. In 1703 he was fined for the ‘penny-bridal’ at the wedding of his daughter Christian to William Oliver; he was also temporarily removed as an Elder. In 1704 he witnessed a baptism for Bailie George Martin. He may be the John whose daughter Mary married James Weems in Hawick in 1717. He could be the John listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick ‘eist the water’ in 1694. John (b.1813) son of Adam and Alison Turnbull. He was listed among heads of households in 1840 and 1841 as a ploughman at Silverbuthall. He was listed as an agricultural labourer at Silverbuthall in 1841 and 1851 and a coal merchant at Lockiesedge in 1861. His wife was Betsy and their children included Margaret, Adam, Alison T. and James K. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Highchester. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821 along with ‘G. Hart, Haychesters’. He could be the William, son of George and Janet Stewart born in Wilton Parish in 1760 and the William married to Margaret Scott, whose children born in Wilton included Mary Christian (b.1788), Margaret (b.1792) and Mary (b.1796). He may also have had a son George born in Cavers Parish in 1802 (also formerly written ‘Heart’).

Hartop (har-top) n. Graeme Thomas (1964– ) born in Hawick, and educated at the High School, he trained as an accountant. In 1994 he became Managing Director of Scottish Widows Bank. Kerr (1996– ) born in Melrose, from a Hawick family. He wrote the words for ‘The Best O’ A’ when still in school, with teacher James Letham setting it to music.

Hartrigge (hart-rig) n. farm about a mile north-east of Jedburgh. It was owned by the Kirktons of Stewartfield in the early 17th century, passed to Francis Scott of Mangerton and then to Capt. James Stewart of Stewartfield, when the name was changed. Thereafter it passed to the Davidsoms and the Millers and Lord Campbell (nephew of the minister of Ancrum) had a new mansion built there in the 19th century. The 1788 county valuation lists 24 parcels of lands composing ‘the Estate now known by the name of Stewartfield, but was formerly called Hartrig, Thirside, and the lands in Ulston’, together valued at £1077 6s. James Elliot of Wolfelee was living there in 1837. In the latter part of the 19th century it was owned by Lord Strathean and Campbell. Much of the original planted landscape survives, although with modern intrusions (also written ‘Hartrigg’; the origin is probably from Old English ‘heorot’ and Old Norse ‘skarth’, meaning ‘the river frequented by stags’; this name appeared in 1730, having previously been known as ‘Stewartfield’ and once the property of the steward of Jedburgh Abbey).

Harts (harts) n. former lands in Liddesdale, valued at 12 shillings in a rental roll of c.1376. It seems likely this was related to Hartsgarth and Hartside, which are also listed.

Hartsgarth (harts-gawrth) n. farm on the Hartsgarth Burn, between Hermitage and Newcastleton. It occurs in a rental roll of c.1376, with a value of 3 shillings. It was home to a branch of the Elliots in the late 16th and early 17th centuries. There was formerly a tower-house there, but its precise location is unknown (although marked next to the modern farmhouse on the 1862 Ordnance Survey map). Jeffrey suggests that 3 large stones from the old house were built into the garden gate at Redheugh. It was granted to Robert Elliot of Redheugh by Archibald Douglas, Earl of Angus in 1479. ‘Rowie Crozer in Hartskarthburnfute’ is recorded in 1611. In about 1622 the wadset of the farm was purchased by William (for 3,800 merks), brother of Robert Elliot of Redheugh. Through marriage to his niece the lands became owned by James Elliott, 6th son of Gibbie of Stobs by 1639. Rowie Crozier was tenant there in 1622 and 1623. It is traditionally said that Margaret Kidd lived there, providing several illegitimate children to Elliot of Larriston, including perhaps ‘Gibbie wi the Gorden Garters’. The lands were valued (along with Langhaugh) at £466 13s 4d in 1678. Robert Elliot of Larriston became bankrupt and sold the lands to Christopher Irving of Binks in 1688. Irving’s daughter married Adam Beattie who became the next Laird. It was sold by Adam Beattie to John Oliver of Dinlabyre in about 1700, and sold by William Oliver to William Sharp in 1773, who was there until at least 1789; he was recorded as owner in the 1788 county valuation and in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls, when it was valued (along with Langhaugh) at about £466 13s 4d. John Douglas was farmer there in 1797 and James Douglas was shepherd. The Beatties were owners in the early 19th century. John Barrie was farmer there in 1868. South of the farm was formerly the steading of Hartsgarthburnside. Hartsgarth Fell, to the west, and on the border with Dumfriesshire, reaches a height of 551 m (the name probably derives from Old English ‘heorot’ and Old Norse ‘skarth’, meaning ‘stag’s pass’; it first occurs as ‘Hyrtisgarth’ around 1376 and is ‘hartsgarth et le faulde’ in 1479, is ‘Hartstarth’ in 1557, ‘Harskarth’ in 1583, ‘Hartstarth’ in 1584, ‘Harthescarth’ in about 1590, ‘hairtis-girth’ in 1613, ‘Hartsgarthe’ in about 1624, ‘Hartsisgarth’ in 1637, ‘Hartiscarthe’ in 1642, ‘Harts-garthe’ in about 1720 and ‘Hargath’ in 1797; it appears as ‘Herskerth’ on Sandison’s c.1590 map and ‘Harsketth’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map and has its modern spelling on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Hartsgarth Burn (harts-gawrth-burn) n. stream in Liddesdale. It rises in a number of smaller streams, including the Routing Burn, Back Sike, Green Sike, Trough Sike and Cuttit Sike on Dinley Moss, Hartsgarth Fell and Roan Fell, on the border off Roxburghshire with Dumfriesshire. It runs down past Hartsgarth to join the Hermitage Water at Lehaugh. There are many old sheepfolds, shepherd’s bothies and cairns in the higher parts, as well as the former steading of Hatsgarthburnside just south of Hartsgarth.

Hartsgarthburnside (harts-gawrth-burn-sid) n. former farmstead on the opposite bank of Hartsgarth Burn from the main farm of Hartsgarth. John Elliot and family lived there in 1835 (marked on the 1862 Ordnance Survey map).

Hartshaugh (harts-uch) n. farm just south of Bonchester, on the opposite side of the Rule Water from Hobkirk Kirk. It used to have an adjacent have a corn mill. In 1569 the superiority was acquired by Adam French from the monks of Jedburgh Abbey, along with several other lands, and this passed to Alexander Lord Home in 1587. It was once part of the Barony of Abbotrule, but later became part of the Wolfelee estate. Thomas Turnbull was recorded there in 1579. A branch of the Turnbuls held charters for the lands from at least 1604, but had been ‘kindly tenants’ of Jedburgh Abbey there for many generations before; this same branch also owned Wester Swanfield until 1778. Lyle Turnbull was there in 1623. Gilbert Elliott acquired the land through ‘non-entry’ in 1630 and it was owned by William Elliot (formerly of Rigg and Hartsgarth) from about 1640. Lawrie Turnbull was owner in 1643, when it was valued at £15 (although Gilbert Elliott of Craigend and Hartshaugh also owned lands in Abbotrule valued at £65, so perhaps the whole farm was valued at £80). It was among lands whose superiority was inherited by daughters of George Scott (brother of Sir Walter of Whitslade) in 1670. It was again farmed by Turnbuls in the 17th century. In 1694 Walter Riddell was tenant there, with Andrew Dodds the blacksmith and James Haig, Andrew Turnbull, Adam Scott and John ‘Hinge’ also resident there. Later ownership passed to the Elphinstones, with William Elphinstone being recorded as owner in 1707, when it was valued £60 (including the mill and mill lands). It was sold to William Kerr of Abbotrule in 1713. In the 18th century there was an annual horse race on a haugh near here. It was part of the lands sold off by William Kerr of Abbotrule in 1751. In 1788 it was part of the estate of Cornelius Elliot of Wolfelee and valued (along with Hartshaugh Mill) at £60. 2 spindle whorls from the farm are in Hawick Museum (spelled ‘Hartishauch’ in 1567, ‘Haertiscauch’ in 1588 and also ‘Hartishauch’, ‘Hartisheuch’, ‘Hartisheugh’, ‘Hartishough’, ‘Hartishough’, ‘Hartshauche’, ‘Hart’s-hough’, ‘Harty’s-haugh’, ‘Hartshaughe’, ‘Heartshaugh’, etc.; it is marked as ‘Hartshauch’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map and has the modern spelling by Stobie’s 1770 map; the name presumably derives from deer).

Hartshaugh Mill (hert-suf-mil) n. former separate farm just south of Hartshaugh, containing a corn mill. The extensive mill lade (marked on Stobie’s 1770 map and the 1863 Ordnance Survey map) had its cauld about half way between Forkins and the mill. Adam Turnbull was there in 1623. William Elfinstone was tenant there in 1694. Janet Wilkie from there died in 1760. Thomas Smith was tenant in 1788 and 1797 and is still listed as miller there in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. It was listed among the properties of Cornelius Elliot of Wolfelee in 1788 (and still in 1811); along with the mill lands, Braidhaugh, Mackside and Blackcleughmouth it was valued at £355 2s. John Short was listed as miller there in 1837 and 1852. James Laidlaw was farmer there in the 1860s and a Mr. Waugh about the 1780s. Part of the lands of Unthank were incorporated within the farm around the early 19th century. The lands were once part of the Barony of Abbotrule, and were sold by William Kerr of Abbotrule to William Elliot of Wolfelee in 1751. Behind the stable door used to hang a perforated stone, used as a charm to stop witches from using horses at night (sometimes written ‘Hartsheugh’; it is ‘Hartshauche Mill’ in 1623, ‘hartschaugh milne’ in 1681, ‘hartschaughmilne’ in 1694, ‘Hartshaughmiln’ in 1751 and ‘Hartshieghmiln’ in 1797).

Hartside (hart-sid) n. former farm in Liddesdale, to the north of Cleuchhead. Hartside Sike is still on the map there. It may be related to the lands of ‘Hyrhtistede’ listed on a c.1376 rental roll (marked on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Hartside Sike (hart-sid-sik) n. stream in Liddesdale, rising on the southern slopes of Arnton
Hartsteed

Hartsteed (harts-steed) n. former lands in the upper Liddesdale valley, recorded on a rental roll of c.1376, under the section called ‘Ernyldoune’. They are listed as ‘Hyrtistede’, with a value of 2 shillings. It is possible this is the same place as Hartsgarth or associated with Hartside Silke, which flows east off Arnton Fell. ‘Hyrystede et Perysynocstede’ are listed under the ‘Quarterium de Ludne’ in the same c.1376 rental roll, with a valued of 5 shillings.

Hartwud (har’, her’-wud) n. former name for lands between Ashkirk and Selkirk. They are mentioned in a list of lands forfeited by the Earl of Douglas to the Crown in 1455. They were split into 3 steadings, the ‘Eststedte’, ‘Myddilste’ and ‘Weststedde’ of ‘Hertwode’. The western part was leased by William Turnbull in 1479 and 1486, and this seems to have been what was later called Hartwoodburn. Probably the same William ‘White’ Turnbull is recorded there in 1494/5 when the farm was burned. The steadings were leased to the Earl of Bothwell, Rutherfords and Homes at the end of the 15th century and remained Crown property until at least 1502. Robert Nichol and John Fletcher had sheep stolen from there according to a record in 1494/5. Lawrence Rutherford was recorded being tenant there in 1494/5 when the farm was burned. The Middlestead was tenanted by Andrew Ker of Greenhead in 1541 (it is ‘hartwood’ in 1494/5, ‘Hertwod’ in 1502 and ‘Hartwood’ in 1541; ‘Hartwood’ and ‘Hartwood B.’ are marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

Hartwudburn (har’, her’-wud-burn) n. Hartwoodburn, farm off to the left of the A7 just before Selkirk. It was formerly a home of a branch of the Scotts and thirled to Oakwood. It is perhaps the Eaststead of Hartwood mentioned in the latter part of the 15th century. William Turnbull leased these Crown lands in 1479. It was feued to Alexander, Lord Home, in 1510. The lands were occupied by Walter Scott in Headshaw in 1541, paying £26 yearly. In 1621 it was still valued at £26. In 1627 a band of Scotts, from Whitlaugh, Headshaw, Huntly and elsewhere harassed the tenant of the Earl of Home there. The lands were valued at £416 13s 4d in 1678. Lands there were held by the Homes when inherited by 3 heirs portioners in 1693. It was owned by John Pringle of Clifton in 1785, when valued at £208. James Laidlaw was tenant there in 1785. It was owned by Mark Pringle of Clifton in 1802 and still valued at £208 (it is ‘Hartwodburne’ in 1468, 1474 and 1542 and ‘Hartwoodburne’ in 1621 and 1678).

Hartwudmyres (har’-wud-mirz) n. Hartwoodmyres, farm on the road over Woll Rig towards the Ettrick valley. John Wilson was recorded as tenant there in 1494/5. It was seat of a branch (or branches) of the Scotts from at least 1539/40 until 1695. Elizabeth Stewart held the lands in 1512. William Scott was tenant there in 1539/40. In 1541 the tenancy was claimed by John Home of Cowdenknowes. Walter Scott, younger of Tushielaw, was there in the 1570s. Scott of Hartwoodmyres held lands valued at £26 13s 4d in Wilton Parish in 1643. A 10-merk land (of old extent) there was inherited by Sir William Scott of Harden in 1676. The lands were valued at £566 13s 4d in 1678. Later it was home to the Ogilvies. John Grieve was there in 1785–91 and Archibald Park 1792–97. It was valued at about £460 in 1785 and 1802. In the mid-to-late 19th century it was farmed by brothers Richard, William and John Elliot. A Roman fort and site of a Roman camp are between here and Oakwood (it is marked ‘Hartwoodmyris’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map and ‘heartwoofmyrys’ on Adair’s c. 1688 map; it is ‘hartwodmyris’ in 1494/5, ‘Hertwodmyris’ in 1512, ‘Hartwod Myris’ in 1541, ‘Hartwodmyris’ in 1573, ‘Hartwodmyries’ in 1578/9, ‘Hartwoodmyres’ in 1612, ‘Hertwoidmyres’ in 1618, ‘Hartwoodmyre’ in 1628, ‘Hartwoodmyres’ in 1638, ‘Hartwoodmyre’ in 1648 and ‘Hertwoodmyres’ in 1692).

Harvey (hawr-vee) n. Hugh (1841–1914) station master at Belses 1874–1906. In 1864 he married Margaret Burns, who died in 1915. Their children Margaret (‘Love’) and Nellie both continued to work at the station after their father retired. The family also ran a gig as a taxi service. After he retired he moved to Firview above the station. He is buried at Ancrum Kirkyard. Documents relating to this time have been published in ‘Backtrack’ magazine. Robert (b.1819/20) born in Hawick, he was a farm-worker in Robertson Parish. In 1851 he was living at Highchesters Cottages and in 1861 was a ploughman at Robertson Glebefoot. He married Barbara Deans in 1845 and their children included Andrew, Margaret, Mary, Jane, Helen, Agnes, Janet, Robina Deans (b.1855) and Robert (b.1856). Rev. Thomas (c.1645–1717) graduating from Glasgow University in 1665, he was a minister in Ireland for 13 years, and then spent some time in England. He attended the first meeting of the Synod of Lothian in 1687 after the ‘Toleration’ and became the first post-Revolution minister at Abbotrule in 1689 (although it is unclear in these troubled times when he actually took over from Robert Spottiswood, since it is also claimed that Abbotrule was one of the few local parishes where the minister was not ‘outed’). It is also unclear exactly how many years he remained, since it is recorded that that James Ker was formally reappointed in 1690, but was probably too elderly to take up the position; he may have assisted Ker for some time. In 1692 he was translated to Auchterderran in Fife, but suspended in 1699 for profaning the Lord’s Day. He then went to Ireland and settled at Donoch, near Londonderry. He married a daughter of this same James Ker Thomas (b.c.1800) tailor at Kippielaw in Wilton Parish. He was listed there among heads of households in 1840 and 1841. He was also recorded there in 1841, along with his wife Agnes and children James, Andrew, Agnes, William and Thomas (also spelled ‘Harvie’ and ‘Hervey’).

Harwick (har-wik) n. city in Pennsylvania, U.S.A., village in Cambridgeshire, name of small towns elsewhere in the world and also sometimes a surname (not to be confused with a similar, but more illustrious word).

Harwud (har-wud, har-wood, haw-ri’) n. Harwood, a seat of the Elliots, near the head of the Rule Water, locally known as ‘Harrot’. This has long been a major estate of Hobkirk Parish, existing since before the Reformation. It was held by Eustace of Lorraine in the early part of the 14th century, being forfeited to the Blairs of that Ilk some time before 1357. However, the Lorraines were restored to the lands at some point, certainly by the middle of the 15th century. ‘John Lorane of Harwood’ is recorded in 1464/5, and the lands continued to be held by the Lorraines until the early 17th century. The farm was burned by the English in 1542. The estate was attacked over a period of years by some of the ‘Turnbuls, part of a feud between Lady Margaret Lorraine (nee Turnbulf) and some of the rest of her Clan. Edward Lorraine had sold the lands partly in wadset to Rev. William Weir and then in 1632 the pair had a further wadset to Gilbert Elliott, with the reversion of the lands to Edward Lorraine (for 6500 merks) if he repaid the amount within 5 years. However, in 1637 it was sold outright to William ‘Ellot’, son of Simon of the Binks, who became the first Elliot Laird of Harwood. The Cranstons were superiors around this time, with those rights passing to the Elliotts of Stobs. It was ‘Harrot, or Harwood’ in 1643, when valued at £433 6s 8d and owned by Simon Elliott. ‘Harrat with mill thereof’ was listed among the properties of Sir William Elliott of Stobs in the Barony of Feu-Rule in the late 17th century. It was valued at £633 6s 8d in 1678 (including what used to be Appotside). Henry Elliot paid tax for 14 windows there in 1748. By 1788 it was ‘Harwood, or Harrot’, valued at £433 6s 8d. It is said that one of the early Elliot Lairds were engaged in (illegally) driving cattle across the Border. J.P. Alison designed servants quarters as an addition to the house in 1906. The 8th Elliot Laird sold the estate to William Elliot (from Lanarkshire) in 1924, and it later passed to his son, Walter, who was an M.P. and cabinet minister. His wife would become Baroness Katharine Elliot of Harwood. 5 flints discovered there are in Hawick Museum, as well as a piece of green pottery. There are several other places of the same name, including those in the Teviot and Slitrig valleys (the origin of the name is probably just ‘hare’s wood’; it is ‘Harwod’ in 1464/5, ‘Harwode’ in 1562 and 1631, ‘Harrat’ in 1598, 1648 and 1649, ‘Harwoid’ in 1606, ‘Harrit’ in 1643, ‘Harret’ in 1655, ‘Harrett’ in 1678, ‘Hared’ and ‘Harit’ in 1694, ‘Harrit’ in 1699, ‘Harrot’ in 1700, ‘Harrote’ in 1728, ‘Harriot’ in 1748 and ‘Harrot’ in 1797; it is marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Harewood’, with ‘Woode of Harewood’ just to the north, however, it is ‘Harrot’ on Stobie’s 1770 map, reflecting the contemporary pronunciation).

Harwud (har-wud) n. Harwood, area in the upper Slitrig valley containing Harwood Knowe (crossed to the south by the Catrail) and Harwood Burn, which runs north to join the Langside Burn and then the Slitrig. Remains of an 18th–19th century farmstead were investigated in the mid-1980s before the area was ploughed for forestation.

Harwud see Harwud on Teviot

Harwud (har-wud, har-wood) n. William (15th C.) Chaplain who witnessed an instrument for lands in Morebattle relating to Melrose Abbey in 1444. He also witnessed another instrument for the Abbey in 1445.

Harwud Burn (har-wud-burn) n. Harwood Burn, stream that passes Harwood (in Hobkirk Parish) to join the Rule Water at Forkins (marked ‘Harrot Burn’ on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Harwud Burn (har-wud-burn) n. Harwood Burn, stream in the upper Slitrig valley. It rises with the King’s Sike and Drowning Sike and joins Langside Burn between Stanishope and Shankend. The Catrail crosses its headwaters. The farm of the same name was owned by the Eliotts of Stobs at the end of the 17th century, e.g. being listed in the Land Tax Rolls for 1678 and inherited by Sir William Elliott in 1692 (it is ‘Harrodburn’ in 1678 and ‘Herretburn’ in 1692).

Harwud Cottage (har-wud-ko’-eej) n. Harwood Cottage, former house on the Harwood Burn, to the south-west of the main estate in Hobkirk Parish (marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Harwude (haw-wud) n. former name for a stream recorded in the royal charter for the lands of Whitslade in about 1170. It is referred to as ‘rivulo de Haruude’, but the identification with a modern location is unclear (the pronunciation is uncertain, but it is assumed that this is the same word as the other local ‘Harwoods’).

Harwudhill (har-wud-hil) n. Harwoodhill, lands that were once owned by the Scotts of Crumhaugh, and possibly the Scotts of Howpasley before that. This was presumably land near Harwood-on-Teviot. It is listed among lands in the Barony of Hawick held ‘in tenandry’ by the Baron in 1511, 1572, 1594, 1615 and again in 1686, where it is ‘sometimes called Lant’. The tenant was Adam Scott in 1502. There is a sasine of 1722 giving these lands and others ‘in liferent’ to Beatrice Scott, wife of Walter Scott of Crumhaugh (in 1502, 1572 and 1594 it is ‘Hardwodhill’ and it is ‘Hartwodhill’ in 1511).

Harwud Hoose (har-wud-hoos) n. Harwood House, in Rule Water. The old house was built in the 17th century and had 1665 carved over its lintel. In the 1694 Heath Tax roll, 7 hearths were listed at ‘Harits hous and office houses’. The new house was built in 1834/5 for Maj. William Elliot. The stables were altered by Dick, Peddie & MacKay in 1901 (see also Harwud).

Harwud Knowe (har-wud-now) n. Harwood Knowe, hill in the headwaters of the Slitrig Water, to the east of the Harwood Burn, between Shankend and the Maidens. It reaches a height of 333 m. There may have been a farmstead near here, with James Elliot in ‘Harrotknow’ being recorded in Hobkirk Parish in 1760 and John Elliot in 1775 and 1780.

Harwud Lake (har-wud-læk) n. pond to the south-west of Harwood House in Hobkirk Parish. It was part of the former mill lade system.

Harwud Mill (har-wud-mil) n. Harwood Mill, farm and former corn mill in Hobkirk Parish, just south of Forkins, on the Harwood Burn. It may be the same mill that was known as ‘Ap potside Mill’ in the 17th century. It was the location for the ‘hail’ for the ‘uppies’ in the game of Hobkirk Baa in the 19th century. The Heath Tax rolls lists 4 hearths there in 1694. Walter Turnbull was tenant there in 1797. It is listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory, with Walter Cavers as the miller. James Smith was farmer there in 1868 (also written ‘Harwoodmill’, it is ‘Haratmilne’ in 1694 and ‘Harrotmiln’ in 1757; it is marked ‘Harrot Mill’ on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Harwud on Teviot (har-wud-, haw-ri’-ón-tee-vée-i’) n. farm on the west bank of the Teviot, south of Newmill. Called ‘Harwood on Teviot’ to distinguish it from Harwood in the Rule valley (as well as Harwood in the Slitrig valley, and others throughout the U.K.). It was once split into ‘Nether Harwood’ and ‘Over Harwood’. The lands were owned by the Abernethy family from at least 1393 until 1494, passing then to Patrick, Earl of Bothwell. In 1580 it was held by Margaret Douglas, Countess of Bothwell in liferent, and in heritage by her son Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch; they complained about a gang of about 18 Eliotts attacking the farm and stealing 40 cows and oxen and leaving 14 lying dead, all at the instigation of Martin Elliot of Brudlie. It was the seat of a branch of the Scotts in the 17th and 18th centuries (formerly at Broadhaugh and descended from the Scotts of Newark). The arms of the Scotts of Harwood has a band with 2 crescents and a star on the background of an oak tree, and motto ‘Ardenter Amo’. The lands were listed in 1634, 1653, 1661 and 1663 among those held by the Scotts of Buccleuch. Walter Scott of Harwood is recorded on the 1678 Land Tax Rolls; along with Falnash it was valued at £1550 13s 4d. In 1681 Thomas, son of Thomas Crawford, merchant in Edinburgh, was served heir to the lands of Over and Nether Harwood. William Forester is listed there among the poor of Hawick Parish in 1694. The estate was sold by Robert Scott of Harwood to Henry, Duke of Buccleuch in about 1738. By 1788 it was valued at £440. William Gladstone was farmer there in 1797, when he is recorded having 3 work horses. In 1811 it was valued at £440 as part of the properties of the Duke of Buccleuch. John Beattie was farmer there in the 1860s. There are also several others Harwoods in Britain (it appears as ‘Harwode’ in 1393, ‘Harwod’ in 1435, ‘Harewode’ in 1446/7, ‘Herwod’ in 1477, ‘Herwode’ in 1494, ‘Harwode’ in 1510/1, ‘Herrett’ in 1581/2 and ‘Harwode’ in 1634 and 1652; it is marked ‘Harwod’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map and ‘Herrot’ on the 1718 Buccleuch survey).
Harwud Park

Harwud Park (har-wud-pawrk) n. former shepherd’s cottage near Harwood. It was ‘Harrot Park’ in 1788 when Alexander Lillico was herd there.

Harwud Rig (har-wud-rig) n. ridge to the north of Skellhill Pen, reaching a height of 393 m.

Harwud Sike (har-wud-sik) n. small stream that joins the north side of the Teviot near Harwood.

Harwudsikefit (har-wud-, ha-ri’-sik-fi’) n. Harwoodsidefoot, former farmed at the foot of the Harwood Sike, in Teviothead Parish. James Elliot is recorded as farmer there in 1797, and several of his children died there. Shepherd William Oliver was there in 1851 (also written ‘Harwoodseykefoot’).

Harwudtoon (har-wud-toon, haw-ri’-toon) n. Harwoodtown, a former farm and settlement adjacent to Harwood in the Rule valley. Thomas Turnbull was from there in 1567. It was owned by Hector Turnbull of Stanedge in 1609 and Andrew Turnbull in 1610. The old houses there were pulled down by Henry Elliot, who was Laird in the latter part of the 18th century. There is now no sign there was once a hamlet there (it is ‘Harwoodtoun’ and ‘Harwodtoun’ in 1562 and 1567, and ‘Harrottown’ about 1605).

has (hawsh) v., arch. to cut, particularly with a scythe, slice, hack, chop, slash – ‘...and how horribly the bogs were hashed ...’ [HSR], to fatigue a person, overtax oneself – ‘It’s been a gey hashin’ day for iz at the herst, A’m muittit oot an’ fair platchin’ [GW].

hash (hawsh) n. a mess, a clumsy failure – ‘hei made a right hash o oot’, a confused mass, a confused crowd of people, a haver, blither, person clumsy in speech, general term of contempt – ‘He’s a wundy hash’ [GW], ‘Ye muckle, careless, thoughtless, thriftless hash, To spend yer siller in a siccan trash’ [JoHa], ‘A gossip.

hask (hawsk) n., arch. the throat, a short, dry cough – ‘...and complained that there was a fly in his hask ...’ [RM].

Hasliehirst (haz-lee-hurst) n. former cottage on Stonedge farm (presumably from ‘hirst’, a hillock or unproductive piece of ground; see also Hazely Hirst).

Haslo Brae (has-ló-brá) n. former name for a hill near Wauchope, indicated on a map of 1772.

hasna see hasni

hasni (haz-, has-ni, -ne, -na) contr. hasn’t, has not – ‘Wha hasna heard how I withstood That whilk they ca’t ‘The Great Hawick Flood?’’ [AD], ‘He hasna got a copper so he daurna’ ring the bell’ [WE], ‘The care o life she hasna een to see ...’ [WL] (also spelled ‘hasna’ and ‘hasnæ’).

hass (has) n., arch. the neck, throat – ‘Then deep in her hass she mutterd a word, And proddit him in the flanke’ [JTe], ‘The master’s hearte raise to his hass, His stomach vow’d to flynch’ [JTe], ‘He laid hans on him, an’tuik him bie the hass, sayin’, Paye me that thou awest’ [HSR], ‘I am wearable o’ my cryin’; my hass is dryet, mine eyne feil while I waite for my God’ [HSR], the neck of a glen, head of a pass – ‘A gigantic castle to guard the ‘hass of the hope’’ [WaD] (this occurs as a suffix in several local place names. e.g., ‘Hawkhass’, ‘Sorbie Hass’ and ‘Whitrope Hass’).

Hass (has) n. farm on the A7, south of the Carter Bar, between Huntford and Edgerston. There are signs of old fields banks and rig lines there. A quarry nearby contains basaltic rocks from the Hawick-Acklington Dyke (also called ‘the Hass’).

the Hassely Cleuch (thu-ha-ssu-lee-clooch) n. former cottage in the west corner of Stonedge farm. ‘Hobbie’ Elliot lived there in the late 18th century.

Hassendean (has-in-deen) n. hamlet and surrounding district about 6 miles north-east of Hawick at the foot of Minto hills, and once the site of the first station north of Hawick on the Waverley Line. This was also once a separate parish, having a link with the monks of Melrose Abbey from early times. After decades of debate over the distant parts of the Parish (particularly those in the Borthwick valley, with a new church built there in 1658), the Parish was suppressed in 1689, with the area distributed among to Minto, Robertson and Wilton. There are stories of near riots during the de-roofing of the Kirk in 1690. The Barony of Hassendean was presumably once a single estate, but became 2 separate parts, with the western and eastern half baronies having separate Barons. Walter Fitz Alan was granted land there by Malcolm IV about 1155. A ploughgate of land here was given to Paisley Priory in the 1180s by Alan Stewart (son of Walter). The lands were included in a dowry granted to Joan of England (sister of the English King) when she married King Alexander in 1221. In 1304/5 there is a record of the rentals from the farms there, ‘by the hands of Sir Alexander de Balliol’. In about 1320 James Cunningham was granted lands there by Robert the Bruce, this being the eastern half barony, and the Cunninghams held the superiority of these lands for perhaps 300 years. The lands were temporarily given to Henry Percy in 1334 (although the English never really had control over southern Scotland) and in 1341/2 the vills of Jeddeworth, Bonnieknows, and Hassindene’ were granted to Henry Percy. There were further mentions by the English King in 1356, 1397 and 1408. William Livingstone of Drumry was baron of ‘Lang Hassendean’ (presumably the eastern half barony) in a document of 1470 and it passed to Alexander, Lord Home in 1493/4. In 1482 Elizabeth Cunningham inherited the eastern part from her father; it was ‘then waste’, but valued at £10 Scots in times of peace and was held of the superior the Lord of Kilmours (another Cunningham). In 1493 a man was charged with bringing Englishmen to the area where they stole 100 cows, as many sheep and other gear. Walter Taylor was recorded there in 1493 and Matthew Turnbull in 1494/5. It is recorded that Alexander Lord Home was owner of lands there in 1502. The area was long a seat of the Scotts of Hassendean, the first being David in the mid-15th century, and Sir Alexander Scott of Hassendean reported to have fallen at Flodden. This branch of the Scotts held the lands until about the end of the 18th century (when the lands became part of the Buccleuch estates); their motto was ‘Trusty and True’. The lands were burned by the Earl of Hertford’s men in 1545 (and recorded by the English as ‘Hessington’). The superiority of the lands was confirmed to Alexander, Lord Home in 1509/10 and James, Earl of Home in 1621. In 1718 the farm of ‘Hasindeane & Marlsbyde’ was part of the estates of the Scotts of Buccleuch, covering 583 acres (‘besides two pieces of land which are intermixed with it’) and bounded by Kames, Minto, Hassendeanbank, Knowe, Townhead, Horsleyhill, Hassendean Common, Newlands and Huntlaw. The farmhouses (together with trees) are shown clustered about the modern location, on the eastern side of the Hassendean Burn, with a corn mill also there. The central estate of Hassendean was at some point split into Hassendean-bank, Hassendean-burn and Teviot-bank. It was home of Dickson’s nurseries from 1728 until the early 19th century. The tenant farmers were the Turnbulls through the 18th century. Robert Dickson is recorded owning 8 horses there in 1797 and Adam Turnbull was a farmer there at the same time. The lands were listed in the 1788 county valuation and the Land Tax Rolls of 1811 as owned by the Duke of Buccleuch and valued at £533 6s 8d. The Shiel family farmed there in the early-to-mid 19th century. It is also famous from the ballad ‘Jock o’ Hasseldean’ and the tune ‘Hazeldean’ – ‘…They are a’ away to Hassendean burn, And left both wheel and cards’[T], ‘Hassenden came without a call, The antientest House among them all’[CWS], ‘…Then came Alton; And the wives of Briddieyards, They’re a’ away to Hassendean, And left their woo and cards’[CWS] (it occurs in the late 12th century as ‘Astanesdene’, ‘Hadestandena’, ‘Hastensden’ and ‘Hatstanesdena’; many different spellings are known in earlier records, e.g. ‘Astenesdene’, ‘Essenden’, ‘Hal-syndene’, ‘Hasanden’, ‘Hasendane’, ‘Hasarden’, ‘Hasindane’, ‘Hasindaine’, ‘Hasinedane’, ‘Has-sendeane’, ‘Hassendean’, ‘Hassendenain’, ‘Hassende-nane’, ‘Hassendenin’, ‘Hassenden’, ‘Hassendene’, ‘Hassindane’, ‘Hassindaine’, ‘Hasinedane’, ‘Hassende-an’, ‘Hassendane’, ‘Hassindein’, ‘Hassenden’, ‘Hassen-dane’, ‘Hasinden’, ‘Hasendene’, ‘Hasendain’, ‘Hasendene’, ‘Hasendane’, ‘Hassindean’, ‘Hassenden’, ‘Hassendene’, ‘Hassindan’, ‘Hassindane’, ‘Hassindean’, ‘Hassindeane’, ‘Hassindin’, ‘Hassindine’, ‘Hassingdene’, ‘Hassingdeane’, ‘Hassingden’, ‘Hassingdon’, ‘Hassinge-tone’, ‘Hassynde’ and ‘Hassynedne’, with the modern spelling not gaining prominence until the 18th century; it is marked on Gordon’s c. 1650 map, de Wit’s c. 1680 map as ‘Hasinden’ and Visscher’s 1689 map as ‘Hasindein’; Blaen’s 1654 map shows ‘Hasindein Tour’, ‘Burnfoote’, ‘K. of Hasindein’ and ‘Banck’; the origin of the name is probably from the Old English personal name ‘Heathustan’ plus ‘denu’ for valley).

Hassendean (has-in-deen) n. sometime version of ‘Hassingdon’ in Eccles Parish, Berwickshire, long owned by the Broomfield family. Probably this is name derives from an error, but makes for possible confusion with the local Hassendean.

Hassendean (has-in-deen) n. Adam (12th C.) recorded as ‘Ada de Astenesdene’ in about the 1220s when Christina, daughter of his son William granted lands of Cresswell to Hugh the brewer. The document therefore gives us 3 generations of this local family. Christina (12th/13th C.) daughter of William, who was son of Adam. Some time in the periof 1214–49, probably the late 1220s, she granted her lands of Cresswell to Hugh, brewer of Hassendean. It is possible this was the same as the later Cresswell family. Elias (12th C.) witnessed a charter some time in the period 1153–82 for Waltheof, son of Cospatrick for lands in West Lothian. His name is given as ‘Helia de Hadestandena’. Richard (12th C.) recorded as ‘Richard dean of Hassendean’, within the Diocese of Glasgow, as witness to several charters in the period between about 1175 and 1195. Probably the same person is Richard ‘de Hassendean’ about 1170 and referred to as Chaplain in Hassendean when listed as previous possessor of a ploughgate of land in Hassendean when it was gifted to Paisley Abbey by King William in the period 1179–90. He is probably the ‘Radulpho decano de hastindene’ who witnessed the grant of lands in Whitton to Melrose Abbey in the late 12th century (as stated in a confirmation of 1454, with ‘Ralph’ perhaps being a simple error). He was Dean of Teviotdale in documents of the late 1170s and early 1180s. His name occurs at least 10 times. He is probably the ‘R., Archdeacon’ (an error for ‘Dean’) in a now missing charter (originally in the period 1183–91) in which Robert the Bruce confirmed the grant of lands in Whitton to Melrose Abbey. Robert (15th C.) tenant of the Mains of ‘Bothkennmer’ in Stirlingshire in 1492. Thomas (13th/14th C.) Warden of the Monastery of Kelso. He is recorded in about 1330 as ‘Domino Thoma de Hassysynden’ when he witnessed a charter relating to the Church of Roxburgh. Walter (16th C.) listed in the 1574 last testament of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme. He is recorded as ‘Walter Hassindan’ and owed about £13 for some service, possibly as a factor or similar, like Walter Scott of Hassendean and others who are named. His name was presumably related to the former parish. William (12th/13th C.) son of Adam. Around the 1220s his daughter Christina granted lands of Cresswell (in Hassendean Parish) to Hugh, the brewer of Hassendean.

Hassendean Bake (has-in-deen-bāk) n. recorded in a 1536 charter when William Scott of Hassendean granted ‘two husbandlands in demesne lands in le Easter Hassenden …inter le merche bake ex occidentali et le passage gait ex orentali inter turrem de Hassindene et dicti le Hassindene bake’. It is possible that this is simply an early variant of Hassendeanbank.

Hassendeanbank (has-in-deen-bawngk) n. farm at Hassendean, previously part of the lands of the Barony of Hassendean, along with Hassendeanburn and Teviotbank. It is recorded at least as early as 1409 when lands there were confirmed to John Turnbull, son of Adam of Whithope. In 1432 William Turnbull was Laird there. In 1492 Walter Turnbull of Gargunnock gave a charter of the lands to Andrew Douglas and in that same year Cuthbert Cunningham had a sasine for the lands. Walter’s daughters Margaret and Janet had a sasine in 1501. William Cunningham of Kilmours was recorded as owner in 1502. In 1510 William and Thomas Elphinstone (probably the Chancellor of Scotland and his son) received the rights of the land through ‘non-entry’, and Thomas married Elizabethe Turnbull, heir of half the lands, for which they had a charter in 1512. David and Robert Turnbull were tenants in 1516. Andrew Ker of Cessford had a sasine in 1519, and his son Walter Ker in 1543, confirmed in 1576. Meanwhile William Turnbull held a piece of the land in 1536 (probably Cockerheugh), and in 1540 reference is made to the deceased John Turnbull of Hassendeanbank. The farm was burned by the Earl of Hertford’s men in 1545. George Turnbull from here was recorded in 1573. Robert Ker, 1st Earl of Roxburgh, inherited the lands in 1610. Thomas Turnbull was infested in these lands by the Comendant of Melrose in about 1622; they were valued at 13s 4d at that time. In the 17th century the superiority was held by the Hamiltons, Earls of Haddington, along with other lands previously possessed by Melrose Abbey. By 1643 the lands were held by the Earl of Roxburgh (as also recorded in 1678, 1684 and 1694) and valued at £550. Lands here were still listed as being part of the Lordship of Melrose in 1680 (a vestige of the connection with Melrose Abbey). Sir William Douglas of Cavers inherited 6 acres of land here in 1687, followed by his brother Archibald in 1698. William Redford was tenant in 1688. The lands passed to Minto Parish in 1690. John Redford, Adam Young, William Turnbull and Richard Turnbull were there in 1694, with Margaret Renwick, Janet Henderson and Mungo ‘Modrell’ listed among the poor. James Turnbull was there in 1785. The Duke of Roxburghe (perhaps just as superior) exchanged his lands here with those of George Douglas of Cavers at Denholm Haugh in 1797. It was listed under the Duke of Roxburghe in the county valuation of 1788 and the Land Tax Rolls of 1811, and the Earl of Minto in about 1874, with a value of £550. The Dickson family held the estate through most of the 18th and 19th centuries and had nurseries nearby. Andrew Bruce was farmer there in 1797, when he owned 12 horses. Ephraim Selby was farmer there until the 1860s, when his son Robert too over. Col. Archibald Dickson had the house rebuilt in the late 1870s. Latterly it was the home of Ken Oliver. The course of the Teviot used to change after floods and ice-storms, and sometimes in the 18th century would pass by the foot of Hassendeanbank brae. To the north-west lie the faint remains of a double-ditched settlement, about 160 m by 75 m, with another possible settlement adjacent. To the south, by the Teviot, are cropmarks indicating a roughly oval fort, 60 m by 30 m, and there is also an old enclosure just south of the farm (also written ‘Hassendeankirk’; this is probably what is labelled ‘Banck’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map on the opposite side of the Hassendean Burn from the Kirk; it is ‘hassundene bank’ in 1409, ‘Hassindenbank’ in about 1410, ‘Hasindebank’ in 1432, ‘Hassindenbank’ in 1492, ‘hassindeane bank’ in 1502, ‘Hassendenbank’ in 1510, ‘Hassindanebank’ in 1512, ‘Hassindeanbank’ in 1516, ‘Bank-hessington’ in 1545, ‘Hassinbank’ in 1573, ‘Hassindanebank’ in 1579, ‘Hassindenbank’ in 1634, ‘Hassendenbank’ in 1684, ‘Hassindanebank’ in 1607, ‘Hassindenbank’ in about 1622 and 1640, ‘Hassindinbank’ in 1670 and ‘Hassendeanebank’ in 1680).

Hassendeanburn (has-in-deen-burn) n. farm and estate at Hassendean, previously part of the lands of the Barony of Hassendean, on the north bank of the Teviot, about 3½ miles from Hawick. John Hope and James Shiel were listed there among the poor of Hassendean Parish in 1694. It was home of the Dicksons who made the area famous for establishing the first and largest nursery and seeds business in Britain, starting in 1729 and expanding to Hawick by 1766 (and being the progenitor for nurseries in Edinburgh, Chester and Perth). Archibald Dickson was there in the 1780s. Christian Dickson was living there in 1861 and George Mack was farmer later in the 1860s. A new house was constructed in 1876, with designs by Wardrop and Reid and there were alterations in the 1890s to designs by J.P. Alison. Hawick Provost Robert Fraser Watson lived there in later life. At one time the house contained the writing desk of Napoleon Bonaparte, purchased by Watson. The mansion was demolished in the 1950s, but some of the trees planted in the area may survive from the days of the Dicksons. There is still a farm there. Just south of the farm buildings there is a road bridge over the railway (it is ‘Hassendenburn’ in 1566 and ‘Hasundenburne’ in 1694; it is probably what is marked ‘Burnefoote’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map, between the Kirk and Tower of Hassendean).

Hassendean Burn (has-in-deen-burn) n. stream that passes through the former Parish of Hassendean. It effectively rises on the eastern slopes of Drinkstone Hill, running roughly to the east and being joined by the Dearly Burn and Huntlaw Burn. It turns roughly south at Hassendean village, with a rail bridge over it at a culvert, then joining the Teviot near Hassendeanburn.

Hassendean Burnfit (has-in-deen-burn-fi’t) n. former name for lands near where the Hassendeanburn meets the Teviot, presumably lower down than Hassendeanburn farm itself. This is probably the ‘Burnfoot’ listed in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls for Hassendean Parish, with John Veitch and William Liddell listed there among the poor of the Parish. It may be the ‘Burnfoote’ marked near to Hassendean on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

Hassendean Common (has-in-deen-ko-min) n. former Common of Hassendean Parish, to the west of Hassendean. It bordered on the lands of Wester Groundistone, Drinkstone and Clarilaw. Its division was discussed at least as early as 1757, when it was part of the Parishes of Minto and Wilton. It was divided in 1763 and subsequently enclosed into fields (a detailed map exists from 1762), at the instigation of the Buccleuch estates; an action was brought in 1762 against Henry, Duke of Buccleuch by Capt. John Douglas of Midshiels, John Chisholme of Stirches, Thomas Turnbull of Knowe and others. As well as those men William Scott of Burnhead also received a share. The name survives in the farm in that area. A drove road used to cross it.

Hassendean Court (has-in-deen-kör’t) n. part of Stirches, off Hazelwood Road, built in 1975 and named after the Hassendean district.

Hassendean Hill (has-in-deen-hil) n. small hill between Horsleyhill and Hassendean farms. It reaches a height of 171 m.

Hassendean Kirk (has-in-deen-kirk) n. church of the ancient parish of Hassendean. It originally belonged to the Bishop of Glasgow, being granted by David I, confirmed in 1170. However, it was granted by the Bishop of Glasgow to Melrose Abbey, for the sustenance for poor pilgrims coming to Melrose, as confirmed in about 1195, 1206, 1220 and 1231/2. It was dedicated to St. Mungo (or Kentigern) in the reign of William the Lion and then in 1193/4 patronage was given to the monks of Melrose Abbey, who built a house there, the Monk’s Tower, as a hospital for wayfarers and pilgrims. In 1315 the profits from the church were re-assigned to Melrose Abbey, with a confirmation in 1326. In 1488 the Vicar was bound not to interfere with the Abbey’s right to the ‘erde silver of the quer’, i.e. the money charged for burials in the kirk choir. William Grahamslaw was recorded being ‘apud ecclesiam de hassinden’ in 1493, suggesting that he was farmer of lands there. Melrose Abbey held the church essentially until the Reformation; there was still a rental for the ‘kirkland of Hassinden’ recorded in about 1564. These kirklands were probably the ‘Hassendenkirk’ farmed by John Turnbull of Hassendeankirk in 1564. The patronage of the church and rentals were granted to Walter, Earl of Buccleuch in about 1560, and went to William, Earl of Morton in 1608. The churchyard there must have held local burials for many centuries. In 1670 it was declared that Turnbull of Knowe owned the burial place within the bell house. There were still marriages taking place there in 1687. The parish was suppressed in 1689 and the church roof removed to Roberton, amid scenes of great hostility in 1690 (not in 1687, as suggested by the verse). This followed several decades of uncertainty over the status of the parish. A crowd gathered to try to prevent the unroofing, and the first man to climb a ladder was said to have been killed falling after being struck by a stone. Sheriff Douglas was called and was supposedly cursed by an old woman. There was also said to have been a scuffle near Hornshole, with the church bell thrown in the river (and either left there or retrieved to be the bell for Roberton). The historical record of events indicate that it was indeed a serious riot and that workmen were injured (but not killed), with several of the heritors accused of instigating the riot. The last incumbent was Francis Scott, who was removed in 1689 after the Revolution; other local ministers filled in for a few years, the last being Samuel Johnstone in 1693 (perhaps preceded by James Borland). The ruined church can be seen in a sketch of 1788 (by Adam de Cardonnel, based on a drawing by Archibald Rutherford in 1776), showing decorated arches. It was largely swept away, along with some of the graveyard, in a flood of the Teviot in January 1796 (or possibly 1795), the destruction completed by the 1806 flood, so that now no sign of it remains. The exposed coffins and headstones of the Ogilvies were removed to Ashkirk kirkyard. The site of the church is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map, and since the Teviot has changed its course somewhat, the location now corresponds to a bank on the south side. Several pieces of sculpted stone, said to have been from the church, were discovered in the rock garden of Teviot Bank, including a ‘cresset’ (medieval lamp stand) described in 1918. There is additionally part of a carved tombstone built into the garden wall at Minto House. And a piece of sculpted stone, the capital of an Ionic wall pillar, was found in a field beside Roberton Kirk in 1963, which may also be a piece of the old Kirk at Hassendeankirk. The old bell in Roberton Kirk, inscribed ‘For the Tolbuith of Melrose – 1649’ may have hung at Hassendeankirk for a while before being removed to Roberton, and possibly being thrown into Hornshole by angry parishioners according to tradition. It is recorded in 1716 that the widow of the last minister gave some church items to Robert Parish, namely a large bible, pulpit cloth, pewter vessels and session books. There is an existing communion token that is plain and square, bearing the letters ‘H.K.’. A roll of the ministers is: Richard, Dean around 1170s to 1190s; William, Vicar around 1280; probably John Cavers in the 1480s; Walter Douglas in at least 1488/9–1500; John Duncan, Vicar until 1538; George Scott, Vicar from 1539; Keitigern Reid, 1539; John Duncan (again), Vicar until 1544; John Anderson, Vicar from 1544; Patrick Crawford, Chaplain in 1549; Thomas Weston, Vicar c.1568–76; William Auchmowtie (Minister, along with several neighbouring parishes), from 1574; John Scott, Reader in 1575; Thomas Newbie, Reader 1576–82; John Bonar 1594–c.95; Simon Scott, from 1595; John Mather 1602–09; Robert Collace, Reader in 1606; Allan Lundie 1610–11; James Mitchelson 1611–13; Alexander Forrest 1613–58; William Myshet 1664–78; Francis Scott 1678–89 – ‘It was in the year o’ aughty-sev’n Highchesters ca’d oot a’ his men To meet the Shirra of Tividale At the Kirk o’ Hassendeankirk’ [T] ‘K. of Hasindein’ is marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

Hassendeankirk (has-in-deen-kirk) n. former name for lands associated with the church of Hassendeankirk. ‘William Trumbill of Hassindane Kirk’ is recorded in 1553/4. It is ‘Hassendenkirk’ in 1564 when John Turnbull of Hassendeankirk complained that he had 80 sheep stolen from there. These lands were formerly associated with Melrose Abbey.

Hassendean Mains (has-in-deen-mānzn) n. former name for a farm in Hassendeankirk Parish, presumably being the ‘home farm’ for the Baron of Hassendeankirk. A charter of 1516 records Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme gaining the lands of ‘Nether Mains of Hassendean’ and the ‘Mains of Hassendean’ from the forfeiture Alexander, Lord
Hassendean Mill

Home. In 1535 there was a revocation of a charter James Lundy had for ‘Ouir and Nethir Manyes of Hassindene’, and also a charter Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme had for ‘Estir Manyes of Hassendene’. In 1550/1 Robert, son and heir of Adam Scott of ‘Nethirmanis of Hassenden’ is recorded being infested in the lands of Little Drinkstone (this is probably the same as Adam and Robert Scott of Clarilaw and Alton). The ‘Middle Mains’ and the ‘East Mains’ were described in the 16th century. The Middle Mains was granted to Gavin Elliot by Alexander, Lord Home (superior of Hassendean) in 1555, along with Horsleyhill. In 1616 the ‘Middle Mains of Hassendean’ was sold by the Earl of Home to Gilbert Elliott of Stobs. The Earl of Tarras held the lands in 1694, when the residents recorded there were George Scott, Walter Riddell, Thomas Turnbull, Walter Turnbull, Robert Learmonth and Robert Brown, with James Grieve listed among the poor.

Hassendean Mill (has-in-deen-mil) n. former corn mill at Hassendean farm. It is clearly marked, on the east side of the Hassendean Burn, on the 1718 Buccleuch survey. The mill dam and mill lade are marked on the 1841 Ordnance Survey map. It is recorded being repaired in 1744 and in 1752 its ‘cauld and dam’ suffered great damage from a flood in July.

Hassendean Station

The Hassendean Oak (thu-has-in-deen-ok) n. outstanding example of an ancient oak tree (Quercus petra) near Hassendean. It has a short, squat trunk, with an extensive crown, suggesting it was once pollarded. The trunk has a circumference of about 20 ft (194 cm) and it reaches a height of 26 m.

Hassendean Parish (has-in-deen-pa-reesh) n. old parish of Hassendean, centred around the farms of Hassendean, but extending into the modern Wilton area, and also containing a detached part in the Borthwick valley. It existed from at least 1155, when Malcolm IV granted the land to Walter, son of Alan the Steward. The chapel belonged to the monks of Melrose from the end of the 12th century, when they were given its lands and tithes in order to build a hospital for pilgrims to Melrose. This building was referred to as the Monk’s Tower, and the lands connected with it were called the Monk’s Croft. The church itself was situated near where the Hassendean Burn meets the Teviot. The main part of the Parish was burned along with much of Teviotdale by Hertfords men in 1545. The Cunninghams were superiors of the eastern half Barony from the early 14th century, for about 300 years. In 1598 some of the ‘non-entries’ in the Barony were gifted to the Diocese of St. Andrews by James IV. By the 17th century most of the land was owned by Scott of Buccleuch. In 1643 the total valuation of the lands in the Parish was £6326 and in 1678 was £7704. The Parish teinds were valued at £232 6s 8d in 1643; this valuation continued in 1707 and in 1788, when transferred to Wilton, and still held by the Scotts of Buccleuch. In 1649 the land and crops of the Parish were valued at about £4200 in Roxburghshire and £1200 in Selkirkshire. In 1678 the rents in the parish were valued at £7793 10s 8d in Roxburghshire and £1133 6s 8d in Selkirkshire. The Parish long had an isolated part in the Borthwick valley, roughly between the Harden and Robertton Burns; this part may have been served by the chapel at Chapelhill (just across the Borthwick), with a priest supplied by the Parish, and lasting until about the Reformation. A series of petitions and inquiries finally led to the whole of Hassendean being joined to the newly created Roberton Parish in 1658, but reinstated in 1666, only to be finally suppressed in 1689 and redistributed to Minto, Roberton and Wilton. Most of the lands went to Minto, while the vicarage rights etc. were given to the new parish of Roberton. The church roof was removed to Roberton in 1690 amid scenes of violence, resulting in a workman being killed and apparently a curse being placed on the Douglases of Cavers. The graveyard continued to be used until partially swept away in a Teviot flood of 1796, which also removed the remaining ruins of the old church. A register of births and marriages from the parish has been preserved.

Hassendean Pond (has-in-deen-pound) n. pond at Hassendean, probably formerly used for curling. The 1812 minutes of Hawick Curling Club notes that ‘R. Wilson bet Jas. Millar that the Dove Mount Well is 20 feet higher than Hassendean Pond. R.W. lost. Thereafter Millar bet Wilson that the Dove Mount Well is no higher than Hassendean Pond, but Mr Thomson (who decided the former bet offhand) could not decide this without a great deal of trouble’.

Hassendean Schuil (has-in-deen-skil) n. former school in Hassendean Parish. The only known schoomaster there is Robert Collace, recorded in 1613 and 1631.

Hassendean Station (has-in-deen-sta-shin) n. railway station on the Waverley Line situated at Hassendean. This was the main station for the area around Denholm, and the first station on the line to the north of Hawick. The station still Hassendean Toon (has-in-deen-toon) n. former farm, probably an alternative name for the main farm at Hassendean itself, which was also referred to as ‘Toonheid’ or ‘Knowtoonheid’. Like much of the area the lands there became part of Minto Parish in 1690 (it is ‘Hassydane toune’ in 1548/9).

Hassendean Toor (has-in-deen-toor, -tow-ur) n. former tower in Hassendean, also known as ‘the Monk’s Tower’. It is referred to as the ‘Castle of Hassendene’ in a charter of about 1537. It could be the same as the ‘tower and fortalice’ at Easter Hassendean, mentioned in a sasine of 1532. It passed from Melrose Abbey to the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1546/7. It is referred to in a confirming charter of 1574 as ‘Hassindean alias Munkis Tower’, 1653 as ‘Hasendene-tour alias Munckisture’ and similarly in 1661. In 1663 ‘all and haill the toure and fortalice callit Hassendein Tour alias Monckis Tour, with the barne, yairdis, girnallis, meidowis, croftis, housis, and bigingis thairof’ is listed among the possessions of the Scotts of Buccleuch. ‘Scott of Satchells refers to ‘John Scot of Monks-tower, brother to old William Scot of Alton’. The Ordnance Survey Name Book of 1862 describes that the remains were removed about 15 years earlier and the stones used to build the farmhouse at Hassendean.

haste (hást) v., arch. to hasten, make haste – ‘...he has seen the Town’s Herd scare and haste them out of the way with his dogs’ [CkL1767].

Hastie (häs-tee) n. John (c.1680–c.1730) member of a family that had been pipers in Jedburgh for generations. His death was lamented in a poem published in Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784), but dating from decades earlier. It was also reprinted by John Leyden in ‘The Complaynt of Scotland’, referring to it as ‘this excellent Dirge, which elucidates so much the manners of the Border Pipers’. From the poem we learn that he was also a fiddler; it ends with ‘Here lies dear John, whose pipe and drone, And fiddle aft has made us glad: Whase cheerfu’ face our feasts did grace – A sweet and merry lad’. He was said to be a player of the Lowland bagpipe (rather than a bellows-driven pipe of the Northumberland form) and to be the first piper to introduce several tunes that became common among Teviotdale pipers. He was succeeded in about 1731 by his nephew Robin (or Robert), who was last of the Hasties to be piper in Jedburgh. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Jean Gledstains and their children included Alexander (b.1646). Thomas (17th C.) resident of Hummelknowes on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls.

Hastings (häs-tinz) n. Sir Robert (13th/14th C.) Englishman who was Sheriff or Constable of Roxburgh at least 1298–1304. In 1302 he, along with Sir Alexander BailiOL was appointed to superintend the construction of a fortress in Selkirk. In 1301 he pursued some men who had stolen cattle from England, and with Sir Hugh de Audley and others captured the 12 men, including 2 of the appellation ‘del Hepe’. This was part of an agreement between himself, his brother Sir Richard and Sir Hugh de Audley for pursuing robbers in Roxburghshire. Also in 1301 he wrote to King Edward describing actions that had been taken against John de Soules. In 1301/2 he was one of 2 men appointed by Edward I to oversee the construction of a new castle at Selkirk. In 1303/4 he was Sheriff at the inquest to decide on the inheritance of the half barony of Wilton. Warren (1732–1818) East India Company civil servant who went on to become Governor-General of India, but was impeached for corruption (although acquitted on his return to Britain). After his trial he stayed at the Mosspaul Inn and visited Hawick as a guest of James Anderson at Wilton lodge, being famously ordered off Thomas Turnbull’s lands at Wilton Glebe when out hunting – ‘Ye’re that damned Indian rubber (robber) Warren Hastings; get off the ground at yince’ [RM].

Haswell (has-wel) n. James (1714/5–82) probably son of John, who was Provost of Jedburgh. He himself served as Provost of Jedburgh in 1766. He was Sheriff-Substitute of Roxburghshire in 1780. He married May Paterson and had a son, John. He was buried at Jedburgh Abbey. John (17th C.) taxed for 2 hearths on the west-side of Hawick on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Margaret (17th C.) described as ‘liferenter of Uttersideriggs’ in a 1643 evaluation of Wilton Parish lands, where she is listed as the 5th largest landowner. She is probably from the family of later Provosts of Jedburgh. She could be the Margaret, daughter of Archibald Maxwell of Cowhill, who married William Elliot, younger of Falnash in 1635, and was granted liferent of Outerside; Elliot died in 1637.
and it seems reasonable to suppose that she re-married. Thomas (115th/16th C.) recorded in Belses in 1502. He was surety for John Buckham, who was also in Belses. William (17th C.) on the 1693/4 subscribers’ list for the new Kirk bell. He could be the William, married to Marion Scott, whose children baptised in Hawick included: Agnes (b.1679); Isobel (b.1681); Margaret (b.1685); and Janet (b.1688) (also written ‘Hasswell’ and ‘Hasuell’; cf. Hessell).

haw (haw) n., poet. the hawthorn or its red berry – ‘What’s wrong wi the world? We hed mony haws – and nae snaws ...’ [DH], ‘Sombre hedges crimson lit by haw-heavy twigs and boughs’ [DH].

Haweic (haw-wik) n. one of the known early variants of the name for Hawick.

Haweik (haw-wik) n. spelling of Hawick in Bagimond’s Roll of 1275.

Haw Gill (haw-gil) n. small stream that forms part of the boundary between Roxburghshire and Dumfriesshire, running into Muir Burn and eventually the Liddel Water. It is shown on the 1718 Bucleuch survey as part of the bounds of the farm of Nether Whisgills.

Hawhic (haw-wik) n. one more of the early variants of Hawick.

Hawic (haw-wik) n. an early spelling variant of Hawick, being one of the more common. It is recorded, for example, in the Roll of Expenses of King John of England in 1209, confirmation of a grant by the Lovels in 1246 and 1248, the Scottish Rolls of 1347, the sasine for the Counsellords in 1447, the charter for Whitchesters in 1455, the Exchequer Rolls in 1455, an indenture between the Douglasses of Drumlanrig and Scotts of Bucleuch in 1470 and in some entries of the Justice- aire in Jedburgh in 1493.

Hawich (ha-vich, ha-wich) n. common misspelling for Hawick, as well as one of the known earlier spellings. This is a German surname and a place name, including East and West Hawich in Massachusetts, U.S.A.

Hawick (hIk, hoik) n. oor ain auld toon, population (1991) 15,812, at the confluence of the River Teviot and the Slitrig Water, in the old county of Roxburghshire, where it is the largest town. It is one of the furthest towns from the sea (about 69 km) in Scotland. One of Scotland’s leading textile centres, it is also famous for its Common Riding, rugby, and long tradition of civic independence. It is first recorded in the 12th century, and built up around the Tower and St. Mary’s Church. It has been a Burgh of Barony since some time in the 15th century, with the earliest existing Charter being from Sir James Douglas in 1537. It was burned by the English in 1418, 1548 and 1565, and the inhabitants burned it themselves in 1570 so as to not to provide food or shelter to the invaders. Almost all records before the 1630s were lost through incursions of ‘Englishmen and thieves’ – ‘Up wi’ Hawick, its rights and common ...’ [AB], ‘...That while we hold in memory the warrior days of old, Hawick’s trade shall prosper more and more, her sons be more extolled’ [JEDM], ‘But this I ken for certain shair – A day frae Hawick’s a day wasted’ [DH], ‘...And Hawick there in the middle, The centre o’ them a’’ [WL] (through the 12th and 13th centuries there are spellings like ‘Hawhic’, ‘Hawyk’, etc., which continued until the 17th century, with the modern spelling first appearing in the early 14th century; the origin of the name is uncertain, with ‘heded houses’ from the Old English ‘hagawic’ being the most popular, although there are no early enough examples with the ‘g’ to prove this, and other ideas, such as ‘town on the low pasture’ or ‘high dwelling’ have also been suggested).

Hawick (haw-wik, hoik) n. the other one, population 536, in Kandiyohi County, Minnesota, U.S.A., Zip code 56246. It is on the Burlington Northern Railroad and MN highway 23, close to the city of Willmar (and coincidentally to the slightly larger town of Melrose) and 68 miles from Minneapolis. The site was first settled in 1857, officially incorporated in 1866 and named ‘Roseville’. A station was built there when the St. Cloud and Willmar branch of what was the ‘St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba Railway’ reached the town in 1886. The station was originally named ‘Russell’, but said to have been renamed Hawick by railway manager Robert Manuel (son of a Hawick Burgh Surveyor) when it was realised there was another Russell elsewhere. There is a separate Roseville nearer to Minneapolis, and the name ‘Hawick’ stuck for this little township. The usual pronunciation is of course different, with the w pronounced and the accent on the first syllable (note that details of the naming are unclear, it is unclear who exactly Robert Manuel was, and there is a separate story of a Norwegian name ‘Harvig’ which became Hawick).

Hawick (ha-wik) n. the third one, a deserted mediaeval village in Northumberland, near where Hawick Farm and Hawick Crags are on the modern Ordnance Survey maps. In the 12th century the village of Hawick was part of the Lordship of Bolbec, and held by the Lords of Bolam in the 13th century. Thomas of Woodstock, 6th and youngest son of Edward III of England, was created Duke of Gloucester there by his brother Richard II in 1385 on an expedition to Scotland. There is reference to a ‘Bastell House’ there in 1541 and a record of 1584 records that 4 ‘decays’ had taken place since 1535, although it is unclear precisely what this refers to. It is absent from the hearth tax list of 1666, there are only 6 families recorded there in 1734 and 4 buildings in a map of 1769. The township was transferred from Kirkharle to Kirkwhelpington parish in 1847, by which time it must have been already little more than a farm. Much of the earlier earthworks have been put under the plough, but the boundaries of the former village can still partially be seen in ridge and furrow. The nearby Chapel Hill probably contained the chapel near its summit; St. Katherin’s chapel at Hawick is recorded in the 13th century, and a font plus bones were dug up there in the 18th century. Nearby there is a neolithic site, consisting of a small area of sandstone containing at least a dozen cup-shaped marks, some of which are apparently arranged along the rim of a circle (the origin is suggested to be the Old English ‘haga wic’, i.e. the same as for our rim of a circle (the origin is suggested to be the Hawick (ha-wik) n. fictional district in the video game ‘Grand Theft Auto’. In 2013 the text at the Grant Theft Auto V’ web-site describes the shopping experiences of the town of Los Santos, including ‘the disheveled and disaffected drug addict hipster vibe in Hawick’. This caused much offence when reported in the press, although ‘hipster’ seems quite complementary.

Hawick (ha-wik) n. the dialect spoken in and around Hawick – ‘ee’re no allowed ti speak Hawick it the skuil, ee heh’i speak posh’, ‘Braid Haaick’[ECS].

Hawick (hiK) n. song with words by J.L. Her cus and music by Adam Grant. The words come from a poem penned by James Hercus, sometime before his death in 1885, with the music coming later. Since the words describe many of the Hawick traditions, it is somewhat mysterious that it should have been written by an Orkadian, who, although living in the Borders, appears to have had no strong ties to Hawick. It is recorded being sung as a new song at the 1898 Colour Bussing by R.T. Paterson. The music was said to be by ‘M. Rosenberg’, which was a pseudonym for Adam Grant. It was then sung regularly at Colour Bussings, and there is a suggestion that the tune may have changed, with the modern one first sung at the 1910 Colour Bussing by George Scott. It was popular with singers John Campbell and Robert T. Roddan.

Hawick (ha-wik) n. A.P. (20th C.) Guizer Jarl in the 1921 Shetland Up-Helly-Aa festival, so a ‘Hawick’ man has been the Shetland Cornet (in a festival that, incidentally, is only about 200 years old). Andrina Isbister (1891–1963) daughter of Thomas and Anderina Smith. She is buried at Hisswick, Northmavine. Andrew of ‘Skatsa’ (16th/17th C.) possibly son of Victor, he is recorded in Shetland documents of 1575, 1580, 1586. In 1575 he was ‘of Stratsa’ in the Register of the Privy Seal when one of those listed as having been falsely accused by Lord Robert Stewart, tyrannical Earl of Orkney and Shetland. In 1578 he was a debtor to the burgesses of Dysart. Then in 1596, along with his brother David and others he was accused of attacking Robert Cheyne of Ury, who was Bailie of ‘Tingwall’. He is also mentioned in a charter of 1613, although that may be his son. Andrew Hugh (1905–62) son of Gideon Anderson Smith and Jane Hawick (so he took his mother’s name). He was born at Leith and married Barbara Nicolson Malcolmson. He is buried at Knab Side Cemetery, Lerwick. Bartholomew (16th/17th C.) possibly the same as the son of Vincent, he married Catherine Sinclair in Orkney in 1612. His wife left a testament in 1630 when he is described as ‘Bartilimo Hawick of Nescheoun, parish of Delting’. Elizabeth (18th/19th C.) married Magnus Stove in 1811. Elizabeth Mary (1896–1989) daughter of Thomas and Anderina Smith. She married John Tulloch in 1931. She is buried in Knab Side Cemetery. Edmund (b.c.1630) farmer in Pulburgh, West Sussex. He is recorded in 1690 in a list of seatings at Sidlesham Church. George (16th C.) recorded as Reader at Kirkbudo in 1574. Gideon Smith (1832–1909) born at Sandvoe, Northmavine, Shetland. He married Louisa Ratter and died at Pund of Mangaster. Gilbert (b.1863–1941) born at Tingon, Sullon, Northmavine. He married Barbara Henderson Tulloch in 1892. Isabella Ann ‘Bella’ (1910–90) musically talented Shetland woman, whose married name was Hunter. She restarted the Lerwick Girl Guides, arranged musicals and operettas and gave Scottish country dancing lessons. A book of reminiscences of her life was written by Ann Hill in 1993. James (17th C.) Jedburgh resident, who is recorded having several children christened there in the 1640s and 1650s, including James in 1647, who was probably the eldest son and father of a later generation of Jedburgh Hawicks. It is unclear whether he was related to the Shetland branch, or descended from one of the earlier ‘de Hawick’s. James Cheyne (1855–1927) born at Houbans, Northmavine in Shetland. He married Margaret Henderson. James (1893–1976) son of Thomas and Anderina Smith. He was born at Nibon and is buried at Hillswick. Jane (1858–1931) born at Gruna, Gunmister, Northmavine. She married Gideon Anderson Smith and is buried at Mid Yell. John (13th C.) recorded in the Boldon Book of 1183, a listing of the Bishop of Durham’s lands. Under the village of Whickham he is ‘John Hawyk’, holding 2 cottages and 6 acres. John (d.c.1568) servitor to John Gledstains, who was Senator of the College of Justice. A record of his testament is recorded in Edinburgh in 1568/9. John (18th C.) married Isobell Scollay in Delting in 1753. Katherine (16th/17th C.) of the Shetland family. She married Laurence Sinclair of Ustaness (who was born in 1575). Her husband was found guilty in 1602 of being part of the murder of Mathew Sinclair of Ness (a cousin of some sort) and was denounced as a rebel in 1611 for failing to appear. Their children were William, Robert and Matthew. Kenneth Arthur (??– ) computer scientist. He obtained his Ph.D. from Edinburgh in 1991 and held positions at the Edinburgh University Parallel Computing Centre, the Northeast Parallel Architectures Centre in Syracuse, New York, the University of Adelaide, (where he worked with Hawick-born David Wallace), and as Chair of Computer Science at the University of Wales, Bangor. He was Professor and Chair of Computer Science in the Institute of Information and Mathematical Science at Massey University, New Zealand from 2003. Since 2013 he has been Professor at the Digital Centre, University of Hull. Margaret (13th/14th C.) from Northumberland, she was admitted as a taxpayer in London in 1309/10, where she is referred to as ‘Margareta Hawyk, no doubt a widow’. Margaret (15th C.) first recorded in 1428 as a nun at Neasham, in the Parish of Hurworth on the Rivert Tees. She was elected as Prioress there in 1429, her surname being written as ‘Hawyk’. In 1436 the Bishop of Durham ordered an investigation into whether the rules and morals of the nunnery were being kept up. A further commission in 1437 found several defects and excesses and this led to her resignation as Prioress. However, she was allowed to remain there, with the use of a private room. There is no information about how she was related to anyone else of the same surname. Margaret (17th/18th C.) of the ‘Scatsta’ family, she married Alexander Dunbar of Hardwell, probably in the early 1700s. Margaret Robb (1928–97) daughter of Robert Laurence. She was a primary school teacher. She married Gerald Kingsley Greening. Matthew (d.1645) one of the earliest members of the Shetland family, he was tenant in Southladie in Yell. One of his children had the curious name ‘Matches’. His wife was Inagarth Gregorinsdorcht, and died in 1648. Robert (d.c.1587) Burgess of Dumfries whose testament is recorded in Edinburgh in 1587. Robert (d.1648) tenant in Firth in Delting. His testament is recorded in Shetland. Robert (18th C.) married Margaret Scollay in Delting in 1757. Thus he probably married his brother’s sister-in-law. Robert Laurence (1898–1963) born in Lerwick in the Shetland Isles, son of a fishing skipper. He served in WWI and in 1931 emigrated to New Zealand, where he was a rubber factory worker, chauffeur, grocery assistant and farmer. He married Elizabeth Halcrow in Lerwick in 1926. Their daughter was Patricia Margaret Robb. Vincent (16th C.) first of the Shetland Hawicks of whom we have record. He is mentioned in a deed of 1573 (in the Melby charter chest) as ‘unqle Vincentius Hawick of Scatstay’, so he was presumably already dead by then. His family members are also listed there, namely Robert, Andrew, Daniel, Matthew, Bartholomew, James, Thomas, John, Christian, Samuel, Margaret, Catherine, Janet, Agnes, Elspeth, and Sarah. This Andrew may well be the same as the one noted above. Whether Vincent was the original settler from the Hawick area is unknown (‘Hawick’ is fairly rare as a surname, but ‘K.A. Hawick’ comes up frequently in web-based searches, because of his computing connection; see the Hawicks and de Hawick).

Hawick Academy (hIk-aw-ka-du-mee) n. private school set up for James Murray in Buccleuch Street in 1857. Murray started as Headmaster there when he was only 19. The building had formerly been the Subscription Rooms, and a school there had been known as ‘the Subscription School’. It moved to a building a few doors down, which had previously been the Quaker Meeting House and also a temporary cholera hospital. It closed in 1866 a few years after Murray had moved to London, and the building was demolished in 1868.

the Hawick Advertiser (thu-hIk-ad-ve-r-tI-zur) n. newspaper established in 1854, with full name ‘the Hawick Advertiser and Roxburghshire Gazette’, published by James Dalgleish. It was originally published every other Saturday and cost 1½d. It was shortly afterwards taken over by James Haining, with Thomas Cathrae being editor 1857–74. From 1857 it was published weekly and in 1876 it was taken over by William Morrison. Reports of the Hawick Archaeological Society were printed in the Advertiser for several years. The newspaper became becoming monthly towards the end, when it was renamed ‘the Hawick Monthly Advertiser’, and eventually merged with the Hawick Express in 1914.

Hawick Albion (hIk-awl-bee-in) n. rugby team for 12 to 16 year olds. Their strip is a green and white quartered shirt, with green socks, or sometimes a plain green shirt. They play at Mansfield Park, next to the Hawick R.F.C. ground.

Hawick Amateur Operatic Society (hIk-am-ee'-ur-o-pe-raw'-eck-su-sl-i’-ee) n. musical organisation founded in 1910, with the first performance being H.M.S. Pinafore in 1911. It has mounted an annual musical production most years since then. Ian Seeley wrote a history of the society in 2010, ‘On With the Show’.

Hawick Amateur Swimming Club (hIk-am-ee'-ur-soo-min-klub) n. swimming club based in Hawick, established shortly after the Corporation Baths were gifted to the town by the owners of Wilson & Glenny in 1912. It was also known as the Hawick Amateur Swimming Association. Local swimmers Ronnie Murphy, Tom Robson and Brian McConnell has particular success in the 1950s and 60s. The Club disbanded when ‘the Bathes’ closed in 1982, but re-established in 1995 by Alison Bruce and Jean Amos, now based in the Teviotdale Leisure Centre.

Hawick Among the Hills (hIk-u-mung-thu-hilkz) n. song written by John Inglis in the 1870s to the tune of ‘Scotland Yet’, and dedicated to James Winthorpe (his friend who had emigrated to Canada). It is recorded being sung by Inglis himself at a farewell function for a Mr. Routledge in 1878. New music was written by William Inglis Robson in 1887, perhaps influenced by Balfe’s ‘Killarney’. It was first sung at the 1887 Colour Cussing (in the Council Chambers) by Nellie Anderson and then at the 1889 Colour Bussing by Miss McGregor. Addie Ingle changed the arrangement, removing some of the more ornamental Victorian parts. The original second verse is now rarely sung.

Hawick an Area (hIk-an-ä-ree-a) n. Ordnance Survey Pathfinder map number 485, 1:25,000 scale, useful for detailed roads around Hawick.

Hawick an Border Car Club (hIk-an-bördur-kawr-klub) n. main local automobile racing club. Its aims are to further the interest of motorising and motor sport, including organising events and promoting competitions.

Hawick an Borders Motorbike Club (hIk-an-bördur-mo’-ur-lik-klub) n. Hawick & Borders Motorcycle Club, which organises the annual Jimmie Guthrie Memorial Run of old motorbikes at Denholm Green, started in 1962. Often shortened to ‘Hawick & Borders M.C.C.’.

Hawick an Buccleuch Boolin Club (hIk-an-bu-kloo-boo-lin-klub) n. erroneous name sometimes given for a local bowling club. There are neighbouring, but separate, Hawick and Buccleuch Clubs.

Hawick and its Old Memories (hIk-and-its-öld-me-reez) n. book compiled by James Wilson and published in 1858 as an addendum to his ‘Annals of Hawick’ (1850). It is also known as ‘Memories of Hawick’. It contains additional notices of the Town, further extracts from the Burgh Records, transcripts from the Parish Hawick an Wulton Cricket Club (hIk-an-wul’-in-ki’-kli’-klub) n. Hawick’s cricket club, playing in the Border League, with grounds and clubhouse at Buccleuch Park since 1860. Cricket was introduced to Hawick around 1844, with several teams being formed in 1849. Hawick & Wilton formed by later amalgamation and was the only one to survive. The original members of the Hawick and Wilton club were John Scott, William Dryden, Thomas Scott, John Waugh, Martin Pott, William Ainslie, William Howieson, James Scott, William Turner, Charles Paisley, Robert and Dandy Mather, James Fiddes and George Wilson (secretary), all of whom lived in Wilton. They played on the Upper Haugh and then the Under Haugh, and practised at Galalaw, before being gifted Buccleuch Park by the Duke of Buccleuch. It was this club that introduced the ‘handling code’ in 1872, after they had purchased a football to keep the players fit in the winter months, both leading to the formation of Hawick R.F.C. A pavilion was built, along with new fencing, following a 3 day ‘Charles Dickens’ bazaar in 1889. The ground was developed in the 1970s, with a new brick pavilion built to replace the wooden one. The team is amateur, but has often had a single professional player.

Hawick an Wulton Fitbaa Club (hIk-an-wul’-in-fi’-baw-klub) n. rugby football club connected with Hawick and Wilton Cricket Club. It was formed separately from ‘Hawick Football Club’ in 1885 and folded in 1890. For a few years there were these two teams existing, as well as St. Cuthbert’s. They played their matches on the cricket field.

Hawick Archæological Society (hIk-ar-kee-u-lo-jee-kul-su-sl’-ee) n. Hawick’s club devoted to local history, founded in 1856, organising lectures, outings, and publishing the annual ‘Transactions’ since 1863. The Society was officially started on 16th September 1856, with the founders including William Norman Kennedy, Robert Michie, J.A.H. Murray, Alexander Michie, James Thom, George Webster and Robert Murray. The first lectures were given on 27th September 1856 by George Webster and Robert Michie and the first of the regular monthly meetings was on 8th October that year. The basic organisation of monthly meetings and an annual outing was quickly established. However, the Society was reconstituted in 1888 after meetings had lapsed for a couple of years (there were no meetings in 1886 and 1887, and only a few in 1888 and 1889, partly because the Society was engaged in moving its collection to the new Museum in the Buccleuch Memorial). It celebrated its jubilee in 1906, with the freedom of the Burgh given to J.A.H. Murray at a banquet attended by 260 people. It received its own coat of arms in 1992. Objects of interest were donated to the Society at regular monthly meetings, resulting in the need to rent premises to store them, with the first Museum being opened in 1858 at the eastern end of the High Street. After several moves the society offered its collection to the Town Council on the condition that Wilton Lodge be converted to a Museum, the move happening in 1910. Monthly lectures have been organised annually since the club began, with the season now concentrating on the winter months, and talks usually held in the Town Hall on Tuesday evenings. The society has done a great deal to preserve and commemorate the history of the Hawick area.

Hawick Art Club (hIk-ar’-klub) n. the main art organisation in Hawick since being established in 1930. The Club holds weekly meetings, as well as regular art tutorials and talks. It also holds an annual open art competition. The Club at one time held an extensive collection of local paintings, which were handed over to the Council, eventually finding a home in the Scott Gallery. An earlier organisation, called the Hawick Fine Art Association, held an exhibition in 1883 and in 1884/5.

Hawick Baa (hIk-baw) n. handball game, played on the day before the game in Jedburgh (which was on Shrove Tuesday), or in earlier years the Monday after Shrove Tuesday, the last time being in 1939. Hawick’s game is probably not as ancient as that of Jedburgh, or even those of Denholm and Hobkirk. Although its origin is unclear, it took place regularly until about 1780, and then restarted in 1842. In the intervening years Hawick players used to attend the Denholm and Hobkirk games. The first ‘baa’ of 1842 was ‘hailed’ by John Gilroy. In 1893 it apparently was played a week early due to an error in Oliver & Boyd’s Almanac. The game ran annually, with a break during WWI until 1919, and then continued until the outbreak of WWII, and was not revived afterwards. The main game was known as the ‘men’s baa’, with the ‘callents’ baa’ played on the Saturday before. It took place mainly in and around Commercial Road and the Teviot, with much activity in the river itself. The two sides were the West Enders and the East Enders. In the 18th century there were battles between the ‘Eastla’ and ‘Westla’ gangs, mainly youths under about 16 that formed into regiments, with drums, flags, halberds, clubs, etc., in the 2 or 3 weeks before Eastern’s Eve. The hails in the 1840s were the toll-bar at the Haugh end of Commercial Road, and opposite Dickson & Laings, where the town boundary crossed the river (the area between these hails being open ground at that time). By the 1850s the hails were moved to the Coble Cauld and the arches of the railway bridge over the Teviot. Balls were sponsored, often by local businesses, with about 6 or 7 per year, each having a prize or money going to the hailer. One ball in 1866 took 3 hours, but normally balls were much shorter. One year the game reached the Sandbed, with players scrambling over a roof, and in 1902 much of the activity took place on the frozen Teviot. Many injuries were noted, and there may also have been one or two drownings.

Hawick bake (hIk-bák) n., arch. an occasional name for a sort of hard-baked scone seasoned with allspice – ‘There’s a sugar bool an taffy, tipenny pies, currney scones an’ Hawick bakes …’[JEDM] (possibly named in competition with ‘Selkirk banni’).

Hawick Balls (hIk-bawlz) n. local confection, consisting of a ball-shaped boiled sweet with a mint flavour. It was said to have been invented by ‘Bonnie Aggie Lamb’ and manufactured by Hills since around 1900. The recipe was later bought by Smiths and then by Buchanan’s of Scotland, based in Greenock – ‘Sookin a Hawick Ball as A gaun throwe Gala …’[IWL] (note, typically pronounced bawlz not bawz).

Hawick Benefit Building Society (hIk-be-fi-bil-din-su-sl-icee) n. mutual improvement society in Hawick, which probably did not last very long. The National Archives have some records from 1851.

Hawick Bicycle Club (hIk-bi-see-kul-klb) n. cycling club formed in Hawick in 1881, eventually becoming Hawick Cycling Club.

Hawick Biliard Club (hIk-bi-lee-urd-klb) n. club set up in 1877, based in a building erected at the corner of Beaconsfield Terrace and Green Lane, also known as the Teviotdale Club.

Hawick Boolin Club (hIk-boo-lin-klb, -b-olin-klb) n. lawn bowling organisation, formed in 1854, and possibly the oldest bowling club in the Borders. There were 42 original members when it was founded, and the first President was John Laing. The club green was originally at Allars Crescent (before the houses were built there) and then between North Bridge Street and Bourtree Place (where the Baptist Church was built). The club organised the first Border open tournament in 1872. The green and clubrooms are on Buccleuch Street to the west of the Old Parish Church, the site being granted by the Duke of Buccleuch in 1873, and opened the following summer. The Duke was gifted with a pair of gold-mounted bowls by the Hawick and Buccleuch clubs in 1882. J.P. Alison designed a new pavilion, built in mock-timbered style in 1892. A special 150th anniversary badge was produced in 2004.

Hawick Brae (hIk-brá) n. local name for the steep hill that rises from Bonchester in the direction of Hawick.

the Hawick Burghs (thu-hIk-bu-ruz) n. parliamentary constituency, created after the Representation of the People (Scotland) Act of 1868, which lowered franchise and redistributed seats. It was composed of Hawick, Selkirk and Galashiels, being separate from the counties of Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire. George Trevelyan was the first M.P. in 1868, and the constituency was dissolved in 1918. The M.Ps. who won elections were as follows: 1868 G.O. Trevelyan; 1869 (bye-election) G.O. Trevelyan; 1874 G.O. Trevelyan; 1880 G.O. Trevelyan; 1882 (bye-election) G.O. Trevelyan; 1885 G.O. Trevelyan; 1886 (bye-election) G.O. Trevelyan; 1886 A.L. Brown; 1892 T. Shaw; 1894 (bye-election) T. Shaw; 1909 Sir J.N. Barran; ?? (sometimes also called ‘the Border Burghs’).

Hawick Common Riding (hIk-ko-min-rü-ding) n. booklet first published by the Callants' Club in 1983, written by Ron Taylor, but with input from a large number of people. Although originally meant for school children, it is the definitive description of the Common Riding tradition. It was revised in 1998 by Frank Scott.

Hawick Common Riding (hIk-ko-min-rü-ding) n. booklet published in 2009, full title ‘Hawick Common Riding, An Illustrated Guide’. It was written by Lesley Fraser and Judith Murray. A ‘Kidz Guide’ was also produced at the same time, telling the story of the Common Riding from the point of view of Rupert the horse.

The Hawick Common Riding (thu-hIk-ko-min-rü-ding) n. 78 r.p.m. recording released by the Beltona label in the 1930s. It features a medley of Hawick songs in 2 parts. The songs covered are ‘The Border Queen’, ‘Up wi’ Auld Hawick’, ‘Clinty’, ‘I Like Auld Hawick the Best’, ‘Pawkie Paiterson’, ‘Bonnie Teviotdale’ and ?? This is probably the first time these songs had been recorded. The singer was ‘Allan Ramsey’, probably a pseudonym for James Dalgleish. Accompaniment is by a small band, including strings.

Hawick Common Ridin, 1846 (hIk-ko-\-min-rü-\-din-\-i-\-teen-for-\-ee-siks) n. painting by Andrew Kennedy, being the earliest known visual representation of the festival. It is a view from near the foot of Walter’s Wynd showing the Cornet and the Right- and Left-Hand Men crossing the Teviot on horseback near Laidlaw’s Cauld, while the games are in progress on the Under Haugh (i.e. Commercial Road area), with stalls, tents and a stand erected for spectators. It also shows the sparse houses in Wilton at that time. The painting now hangs in the Museum. The painting was restored in 2014.

Hawick Community Hospital (hIk-ko-\-mew-ni'-ee-hos-pi'-ul) n. local hospital, replacing the Cottage Hospital and opening in 2005 on Hawick Constitutional Club

Victoria Road. The hospital consists of a single storey building.

Hawick Cronies (ha-wik-kro-neez) n. song recorded on a 78 r.p.m. record in the 1930s, with ‘Hawick’ on the flip-side. It was sung by ‘Allan Ramsey’, who was probably James Dalgleish. The song starts with a humorous dialogue between a Teri man and an English woman. The writer of the lyrics and origin of the tune are unknown. It was on the Beltona label, catalogue number 1838.

Hawick Curlin Club (hlk-kur-lin-klub) n. organisation established in 1803, being one of the first organised sports clubs in Town. It had 59 members when it formed, including Archibald Dickson (seedsman), Dr. Robert Douglas, John Graham (brewer), Rev. James Henderson, Thomas Hill (saddler), David Laing (hosier), John Oliver (Town Clerk), Bailie Oliver (baker), Francis Rutherford (watchmaker), Charles Scott (glover), James Scott (tobacconist), Rev. W. Williamson, Robert Wilson (historian), and Rev. Dr. Young. Games were played at various times on Hilliesland Moss, the Cole Pool and Laidlaw’s Cauld. The club was re-constituted in 1854, with the Duke of Buccleuch as Patron, after giving his permission for the club to use Loch Park. The curling pond near St. Leonard’s was used from 1866 until 1890, when a new pond at Crowbyres was opened. Competitions with other local clubs were held in the late 1800s, these clubs including Branzholme and Borthwickbrae, Teviothead, Rulewater, Hassendean and Minto. The Hawick club seems to have folded before WWI.

Hawick Cyclin Club (hlk-si-klin-klub) n. Hawick Cycling Club, which formed in 1881 as the Hawick Bicycle Club, becoming the Hawick Amateur Bicycle Club in 1889 and then adopting its present name in 1901. In the late 19th century the club’s uniform consisted of grey outfits with maroon caps. Members on penny farthings can be seen outside Wilton Lodge in 1881. In 1901 a team was raised by James Haig (apparently annoyed at no Teris being picked for Scotland) which challenged and beat a rest of Scotland team. The club folded in 1911, reforming under new rules in 1925 at a meeting chaired by W.P. Gaylor. It was also suspended during WWII. Nan Robson became the first female club captain in 1954. The club was sponsored by Bantel from 1981 until the mid-1990s. Members compete in races as well as riding in leisure events, and has produced several successful competitive cyclists. The clubrooms are now in Teviot Crescent.

Hawick Draughts Club (hlk-drafts-klub) n. society existing in the late 19th century, with Bailie Morrison as President for a while.

Hawick Exchange Company (hlk-ek-chänj-kum-pee-nee) n. company formed to raise money to construct the Exchange Buildings. It was formed in 1861 and dissolved in 1881, and its records are in the National Archive.

the Hawick Exiles Club (thu-hlk-ek-silz-klub) n. club that thrived in the Manchester area in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. It grew out of the large number of Teris who were drawn to that area by textile work. The club met in ‘the Crown’ in Salford, with the first Chairman being John Smith.

the Hawick Express (thu-hlk-eks-pres) n. weekly newspaper, established in October 1870 by James Dalgleish as the ‘Hawick Express and Scottish Border News’. For many years John Rule was editor and part proprietor, then Mr. Craw took over the business, followed by James Edgar, who was editor as well as proprietor. It was originally priced at 1 penny, and in competition with the Advertiser. It merged with the Advertiser in 1915 to become the ‘Hawick Express & Advertiser and Roxburghshire Gazette’, then the ‘Hawick Express and Roxburghshire Advertiser’ from Hawick Film an Video Group (hIk-fi-lum-an-vi-dee-o-groop) n. established in 1964 as Hawick Film Group, it meets fortnightly in Croft Road, putting on film shows and organising competitions. They were responsible for the film ‘Sons of Heroes’ shortly after forming, and several more recent local videos.

Hawickgate (hIk-ga’) n. former name for an area in Jedburgh. In 1643 the ‘fenced acres of Jedburghside and Hawickgate’ were valued at £10 per acre for a total of £620. By the late 18th century the teinds of the lands were held by Douglas of Adderstone. The bulk of the lands (still valued at £220 along with Jedburghside) were...

owned by the ‘Acerers of Jedburghside and Hawickgate’ in 1788; at the same time Thomas Waugh of Hawkburn held 13 acres in Hawickgate that had belonged to the Marquis of Lothian (valued at £130), 6 acres in Jedburghside and Hawickgate that had belonged to James Riddell (valued at £60) and 2 ½ acres in Jedburghside and Hawickgate that had belonged to James Chisholme (valued at £25). The name is also recorded in 1804 in a set of surveying exercises, the title being ‘Fernibrae and Brown’s lands at Hawickgate’. It is written ‘Hawick-gate’ in the 1813 Land Tax Rolls for Jedburgh Parish, when Archibald Douglas of Adderstone had part of the teinds there; additionally Thomas Waugh paid tax on 2 ½ acres there that had belonged to James Chisholme and 6 acres that had belonged to James Riddell (presumably the name comes from being on the road out of Jedburgh towards Hawick).

Hawick Gill (hIk-jil) n., arch. a somewhat jocular term for half an imperial pint, i.e. twice the size of a standard gill. It occurs in the traditional song (printed in Ramsay’s collection of 1724) often called ‘Andro and his Cutty Gun’ – ‘Blyth, blyth, blyth, was she, Blyth was she but and ben; Weel she lo’ed a Hawick gill, And leugh to see a tappit-hen’ (this being a quart jug), the verse also being referred to in a note in Sir Walter Scott’s ‘Guy Mannering’. Note that the same song appeared in Robert Burns’ ‘Merry Muses of Caledonia’ in a bawdier version, without the reference to Hawick. The phrase occurs in Scott’s ‘Carle, Now the King’s Come’, written in 1822 – ‘A Hawick gill of mountain dew, Heised up Auld Reekie’s heart, I trow’ [SWS]. The lines ‘Come, hostess, bring’s a Hawick gill, An’ to his health I’ll fill’ are from 1813, ‘If her ye’d gien a Hawick gill, She might been leal’ from about the same time and ‘Bring’s a Hawick gill, An’ here’s to Hawick’s bonnie lassies!’ in 1859. The phrase was certainly known in the Edinburgh area, but it is unclear if it was in common use outside poetry, and there are no physical examples of the measure known in Hawick. However, this entry appears in the Hawick Treasurer’s books – ‘Mor payed at traying ye wine – 2 double gilles, 12s.’ in 1732. This suggests that the measure was in use locally, even of the phrase was not. Despite this, it certainly entered the vocabulary of later local poets – ‘Ye’er sides are retch’t an’ I’m gey ill. Come let us hae a Hawick gill For auld lang syne, or aiblins twa, This air is damped an’ unco raw’ [WNK], ‘...gie um a gude Hawick gill; it’ll dae um nae herm’ [JEDM], ‘The auld Miser has cost me three guid Hawick gills already this mornin’ and he’s no fu’ yet’ [JEDM], ‘Then Fenwick, bring’s a Hawick gill, An’ here’s to Hawick’s bonnie lasses!’ [GWe]. ‘A Hawick gill was in my ee, – My heart as light as oony feather, – When warm wi’ love and barley bree, I crossed the moor among the heather’ [JT].

Hawick Golf Club

Hawick Golf Club (hIk-golf-kluhb) n. founded in 1877 by Robert Purdom and others, it was fully formed by early the following year, with a committee of 7. The Club received permission from the Town Council to use part of the Vertish Hill, provided no damage was done. General Scott of Hoscote was the first Honorary Captain, with ex-Provost R.F. Watson the Captain, and Robert Purdom the Secretary and Treasurer. It was the first such club in the Borders. The Ladies Club was started at least as early as 1893. The course is on the Vertish Hill, being part of the Common, rented from the Council, but maintained by the club. There were originally 11 holes, with one more added in 1879 and the last 6 completed by 1894. The first Clubhouse was a house at the foot of Burnflat Brae adapted for use about 1880. The present Clubhouse was built in 1894/5, on land gifted by the Duke of Buccleuch, and with funds from a bazaar, which included the performance of J.E.D. Murray’s ‘The Caddie’s Ghost’. The design of the clubhouse was by J.P. Alison. It was extensively refurbished in 1996. The course has 18 holes, is 5,933 yards, par 68 (5,239 yards, par 69 for the ladies course), and with stunning views from several holes. The following is a list of the holes in order: Road; Thorntree; Nipknowes; Well; Terrace; Hunter; St. Leonards; Quarry; Alcohol; Whitlaw; High; The Corner; Herds; Wood; Gallery; Pit; Burgess; and Home. The course record is 61 and the longest hole is the 7th. Famous golfers to have played there include Tony Jacklin in 1989. An early history was published by James Barrie in 1898 – ‘I have climbed the Loan a hundred times On the way to Vertish Hill; The caddies I’ve met by St. Mary’s chimes, And engaged them with right goodwill, But now. alas! ’tis a hope that is past, The game’s a perfect bore; The strain on my brain can no longer last – I’ll never play golf any more’ [RGD].

Hawick Group (hIk-groop) n. name sometimes given by geologists to particular Silurian shales of the Southern Uplands accretionary terrane, found near Hawick. It is of particular interest because of the so-called Llandovery-Wenlock extinction event, involving graptolites, as described by the work of Charles Lapworth.

Hawick Guide (hIk-gidl) n. ‘Hawick Guide: Directory and Yearbook’ published by James Edgar in the early 1900s. As well as being a tourist guide, it contained private addresses of local gentlemen, farmers and societies, as well as a death roll.

Hawick Harlequins see the Quins

Hawick Heritable Investment Bank (hIk-her-it-a-bul-in-vest-min’-bawngk) n. local bank that was a limited company, founded in 1876. J. Murray was the agent in the 1880s. It lasted into the early 20th century and some records are in the National Archive. It may have merged with the Standard Property Investment Co. of Edinburgh in the mid-1930s.

Hawick High Schuil (hIk-hI-skil) n. Hawick’s secondary school, on Buccleuch Road. Also the name of a private tutor’s school that was in the Subscription Rooms at 13 Buccleuch Street, in the second half of the 19th century, when the present High School was still named the Buccleuch School. This private school lasted until about 1874. The first appearance of ‘Hawick High School’ as a secondary school was when it was started by the School Board as a fee-paying school for senior students, following a petition by ratepayers. It was situated in roughly 1874–76 in the Masonic Hall at Myrselawgreen. It was effectively replaced by Teviot Grove Academy, which became the senior part of Buccleuch School (although based at the east end of town). This became ‘Buccleuch Higher Grade School’ in 1908, and eventually ‘Hawick High School’ in 1915. A web-site listing illustrious former pupils was started as a school project in about 2011. There is film of a school sports day at the cricket field in 1909/10.

Hawick Hill (ha-wik-hil) n. homestead in Western Australia, south-east of the town of Wagin at Latitude 33°24’ South, Longitude 117°29’ East (there is also a ‘Mount Hawick’ and ‘Hawick Island’ in Western Australia).

Hawick Home Mission (hIk-hôm-mi-shin) n. evangelical group set up in 1873, inter-denominational, but intimately related with the Baptist Church. The instigators were John Beatie, Willie Miller and Tammie Bell, who convinced the gospellers J.G. Scroggie and W.D. Dunn to come to the town from Galashiels at the end of 1872. They carried on gatherings for 17 weeks. A meeting was then held, overseen by Lord Polwarth, which resulted in the founding of the Mission, with 46 members enrolled and Willie Miller as the first President. 2,000 people attended a ‘camp meeting’ at Netherhall, with Scroggie and Dunn in attendance. In 1873 and for many years afterwards, Lord Polwarth invited the members to spend Common Riding Saturday at Mertoun House; later the venue was changed to Harden Glen. The organisation strongly opposed the Common Riding. In 1879 the Mission agreed to contribute to the Baptist Church’s appointment of a new pastor. There was also a choir formed. The group purchased and converted Oliver’s former auction house in Bourtree Terrace in 1883. The main services were on Sunday evenings and were packed during their most popular period. Meetings were also held in a house on Baker Street, on the Miller’s Knowes in the summer, at Drumlanrig Home, and in some of the surrounding hamlets, particularly Newmill. In 1887 there was disagreement over the rules and most of the committee resigned, to be replaced by a new committee. They also ran services for the troops out at Stobs. The organisation was also involved with the Christian Endeavour youth movement. Originally having members who were also in other local congregations, by 1907 it was effectively a church in its own right; however, numbers were by then starting to decline from the high of 210 members. A Superintendent (i.e. resident pastor), Mr. Conneley, was appointed in 1928, but stayed only a few months. After WWII there were also open air meetings at the Horse. In 1952 the Mission started to celebrate Communion, it joined the Fellowship of Independent Evangelical Churches in 1955 and appointed P.D. Chisnell to be Superintendent in 1957. In 1963 they withdrew from the F.E.I.C., sold off their main hall in 1967, sold more in 1974, and allowed Youth With A Mission to use their space in 1977. Some former members eventually joined the Y.W.A.M. offshoot, the Abundant Life Church. In 1985 the Mission finally closed, handing over its remaining property and records to the Baptist Church Mission finally closed, handing over its remain-

Hawick Horse (hlk-hors) n. Hawick Horse Racing Association, a body that organises local ‘flapping’ meetings. It has its origins in the decision to break away from the National Hunt and Jockey Club Rules for the Common Riding races of 1883. Local races have been run under a variety of rules since then. The Border Horse Racing Association was set up in 1972 with founding members Donald Fairgrieve (Gala), Charles McCrerie and Murray Richardson. When many of the Border towns broke away from the B.H.R.A. in 1987 the H.H.R.A. or ‘Hawick Horse’ was formed.

Hawickhorst (ha-vik-horst) n. surname originating in Germany, dating to the 13th century, with descendants in the U.S.A. and elsewhere. It is unrelated to our town, probably being a corruption of the German ‘Habicht horst’ meaning ‘hawk’s nest’.

Hawick Horticultural Society (hlk-hort-tee-kul-tew-rul-su-sl-i’-ee) n. local gardening society, founded in 1849, shortly after Hawick’s allotments were started. John Forbes was President for many years. Highlights of the society’s calendar were the twice yearly shows. It survived until the 1970s.

Hawick Hosiery (hlk-ho-shu-ree) n. hosiery company, which later became a knitwear manufacturers, with factory at Trinity Mills on Earl and Duke Streets. The company began in 1874 and ran for over a century until about 1990, effectively transforming into Hawick Cashmere Company Ltd.

Hawick Hosiery Manufacturers Association (hlk-ho-shu-ree-maw-new-fak-chur-rurz-aw-so-see-a-shin) n. business organisation representing the interests of local knitwear manufacturers, formed at a meeting in 1909, with 9 companies represented. It was constituted as ‘Hawick Hosiery Manufacturers’ Association’ a year later, with 7 more companies joining. It started as effectively a cartel for fixing prices (i.e. to avoid local companies undercutting each other) and evolved to focus more on setting wages. In 1966 the word ‘Hosiery’ was replaced with ‘Knitwear’. The Association disbanded in 1999.

Hawick Hosiery Trade Society (hlk-ho-shu-ree-tried-su-sl-i’-ee) n. former workers’ organisation in Hawick. It was formed out of the disputes between employees and employers, relating to wages and working conditions. In about 1868 a new arbitration body, formed of 9 employees and 9 workers was formed, and this resolved to abolish the Society, except in its purely charitable role.

Hawick Hosts (hlk-hosts) n. local tourism guides, consisting of blue-jacketed hosts out on the streets to assist tourists in the summer months since 1998. The original idea came from Scottish Enterprise Borders, but its implementation involved the Scottish Borders Council, Scottish Borders Tourist Board, Hawick Chamber of Trade and local businesses. It is now organised by the Hawick Welcome Initiative. The Hosts welcome visitors at the main car parks and pedestrian areas, handing out brochures and encouraging them to ‘stop, shop and explore’.

Hawick hug (hlk-hug) n., arch. a tight embrace in wrestling, mentioned in Wilson’s ‘Tales of the Borders’ – ‘He therefore threw his arms round the back of his opponent … with the intention of giving him a ‘Hawick hug’, but he found he could not join his hands together so as to effect his purpose, and his strength could not accomplish it’ (probably related to the ‘Cornish hug’, but the connection with Hawick is uncertain.

Hawickify (hl-kee-fi) v. to make something more Hawick-based, particularly to convert to Hawick dialect – ‘… it’s been on the back burner a’ this time waitin on iz gettin roon ti hevin a go at Hawickifyin eet’ [IWL]. ‘This is an Edinburgh sang, bit oo’ve Hawickified eet’ [DC].

Hawick Immortals (hlk-i-mor-ulz) n. poem published privately some time in the early 20th century (and at least before 1959), listing many Hawick nicknames of the past. It is anonymous, and the writer takes pains in an introduction to explain that no offence is meant, and in no case is the nickname associated with the actual name of the person. It may have been written by

R. Jamieson. Most of the nicknames come from a period around the mid-19th century.

Hawick in Bygone Days (hlk-in-bl-gôn-dız) n. book written by James Turnbull in 1927, when he was in his 70s. It contains many stories of his youth and a description of essentially every shop in the town in the 1850s and 60s.

the Hawick Inkle Company (thu-hlk-ing-kul-kum-pi-nee) n. ‘inkle’ loom weaving company that existed from at least 1782. In that year it leased from the Burgh part of the Common Haugh, as well as the Easter Common Haugh (now Teviot Crescent) and Myreslawgreen, to use as bleachfields; in fact that part of the Under Haugh became known as the Bleachfield. The partners in the company were Dickson, Turnbull and Robertson, 2 of whom were also involved in carpet manufacturing. It is stated (by James Wilson) that the Duke of Buccleuch gave land ‘with a water-fall, for an inkle manufactory, and for bleaching; but this trade, after thriving for a good many years, was discontinued’. However, it is unclear if the same company was referred to here, and if so if it was the land in Wilton. There is a record (from the Board of Trustees for Manufactures) of aid being given to Dickson, Turnbull and Robertson in 1765 and in 1785. The company bought the Rough Haugh waulk mill from John and William Thomline (dyers and finishers) in 1797. The company did not last long into the 1800s, and inkle manufacturing in general was only important in Hawick for a few decades.

Hawick in Scene an Song (hlk-in-seen-an-sawng) n. video created by Madge Elliot and Cameron Robson in 2002, with support from Hawick Tourist Association and Hawick Millennium Group. It features film scenes from 1999–2001, along with Hawick songs performed by local singers.

Hawick Instrumental Band (hlk-in-stru-men’-ul-bawnd) n. forerunner of the Saxhorn Band, it was active in Hawick in the middle part of the 19th century, before the Saxhorn Band was formed in 1855.

Hawick in the 20th Century (hlk-in-thu-too’-ee-th-sen-chu-ree) n. publication of the Callants’ Club in 2004, representing several aspects of the town during the first hundred years of the history of the Club.

Hawick Invicta (hlk-in-vik-ta) n. junior football team based in Hawick, which existed somewhere around the years 1922–24.

Hawick Island (ha-wik-I-liud) n. small island in Montague Sound, Western Australia. This is one Hawick that is not far from the sea! Its approximate location is Latitude 14°20’ South, Longitude 125°20’ East.

Hawick Jail (hlk-jäl) n. the town prison. This was formerly in the Tolbooth and then the old Town House. There it was apparently partly below ground, about 16 ft by 12ft, and apparently not too hard to escape from! Because of this, people were sometimes imprisoned in the steeple of St. Mary’s. The jail was referred to as ‘the Thiefs’ Hole’ or ‘the Rogues’ Hole’ or ‘the Saut Box’. In 1778 it was described in the Town book as the ‘loathsome, wretched Jail of Hawick’. Towards the end of the 18th century it was described as being partly used as a blacksmith’s shop and sometimes as a prison, where men were held for a night or two before being sent to the county prison; it was also too cold in the winter for the Magistrates to meet in the upstairs room, and so they would meet in an inn. The county jail was in Jedburgh, and was often used for local prisoners, because of the inadequacy of the cell in Hawick. A new jail was built on Allars Bank (later Nos. 5 and 6), perhaps around 1840. This was overseen by Michael Anderson, until the Police Act came in, about 1861. A register for 1844–62 has been published by Graham Maxwell.

Hawick Jock (hlk-jok) n. nickname for a character from the 19th century – ‘Goold Ballantyne and auld Hawick Jock, Wattle Moudie, Jock Gray and a’; Jenny’s Penny wi’ plaid o’ check, Betty Revel and auld Jean Law’ [HI].

Hawick Kirk (hlk-kirk) n. usually referring to St. Mary’s, which was for many centuries the parish church of Hawick. The first mention of a church in Hawick is in 1183, when ‘Henry the parson’ was witness to a charter. The church was dedicated to St. Mary in 1214. The ‘Auld Pairish Kirk’ was the parish church of Hawick in the period 1844–1987.

Hawick Knitwear (hlk-ni’-wär) n. local knitwear company, based on Liddesdale Road, with a history dating back to 1874. At one point it employed more than 200 people. The company went into administration in 2016, but was partly...
Hawick Knitwear Manufacturer’s Association purchased by a Hong Kong based business soon afterwards.

Hawick Knitwear Manufacturer’s Association (hIk-ni’-wär-maw-naw-fawk-chur-ruz-aw-sō-see-a-shin) n. local employer’s association. They conceded to a guaranteed 4 day working week following the general mill strike of 1972. The association wound up in 1999, with Ray Chlopas as the last Director/Secretary.

Hawick Lasses (hIk-law-seez) n. reel composed by Robert Pringle.

Hawick Lau (ha-wik-low) n. (1974–) Hong Kong actor and singer, with Chinese name Lau Hoi Wai. For a teenage heart-throb, his English stage name seems somewhat peculiar to say the least. He grew up in Hong Kong, but also spent some time at High School in Canada. His TV roles include the series ‘Virtues of Harmony’ and his albums are ‘A Boy’s Story’ (1998) in Cantonese, and ‘La La La’ (2000) in Mandarin.

Hawick Literary an Scientific Institution (hIk-li’-er-u-ree-an-sl-in-ti-cek-ins-ti-chew-shin) n. early discussion society, disbanded in January 1856 and effectively replaced by the Archaeological Society in September of that year. A separate Literary Society was formed around 1860, being run by Adam Paterson and meeting in the back room of Ellen Riddle’s shop at 24 High Street. In the late 19th century there were several Literary Associations connected with the various churches in Hawick. The ‘Hawick and District Literary Society’ organised lectures well into the 20th century.

Hawick Loan (hIk-lō) n. name formerly used for the Loan – ‘As Aw was gaun up Hawick Loan . . .’ [JSB], ‘And my heart is up the Hawick Loan, on the trail that exiles ken . . .’ [JYH].

Hawick Loanin (hIk-lō-nin) n. the tryst ground at Thorterdykes, also known as ‘the Green Gress’, site of an annual horse fair in the Autumn (for a while the third Tuesday in October), as well as other public activities before it was built on.

Hawick Mary (hIk-mi-ree-aw-sō-see-a-shin) n. nickname for a resident of Jedburgh in the early part of the 19th century. It was said that she was ‘not too strict in regard to morals’, and ‘was sometimes called on by the Rev. Andrew Bonar in the usual discharge of his ministerial duty’ [HAST1873]. She may have kept a boarding house, where Wull Ainslie stayed. Her full name is unrecorded.

Hawick Medico Relief Society (hIk-me-dee-kō-ree-leaf-su-sl-i’-ee) n. benevolent society in Hawick in the early 19th century. It was a medical insurance club, led by Robert ‘Lurgie’ Wilson. It arranged for payment of the members’ medical bills, with a monthly contribution. It is described as still existing in 1839.

Hawick Military Association (hIk-mi-li-ty-ree-aw-sō-see-a-shin) n. local Volunteer unit, which commenced in 1798 after the perceived threat from the French army of the Revolution. It was formally disbanded in early 1801 (perhaps to have a new grant to put it on a firmer footing) and re-embodied later in 1801. However, it was disbanded again in 1802 after the Treaty of Amiens. The original name, ‘The Volunteer Loyal Armed Association of Infantry, was quickly abandoned. The Captain Commandant was Gilbert Chisholme of Stiches. A ceremonial standard, presented to the Volunteers in 1799 (by Mrs. Chisholme) is in the Museum. The men presented Chisholme with a silver cup in 1802 when they disbanded. They consisted of about 60 men, and were the main volunteer infantry corps at the time (with the Roxburghshire Yeomanry being the local Cavalry unit). They had a highly decorative uniform, consisting of scarlet coats with long swallow-tails, green facings and lapels, together with black stock and white frills, white waistcoat and breeches, short black gaiters and heavy cross-belts of white leather with a brass badge in the centre bearing the words ‘Hawick Volunteers’, as well as 62 brass buttons, and a tall bear-skin shako with a white feather plume and white epaulettes. The men also would all have had powdered hair at that time. Another volunteer unit, the Light Company of the Roxburgh Volunteers, formed in 1803 after war broke out again with France. The Roxburghshire Local Militia was formed in 1809, with the 1st Regiment based in Jedburgh and the 2nd Regiment based in Kelso.

Hawick Mill (hIk-mill) n. the old town corn mill, once the property of the Baron of Hawick, with a fraction of the grain going to the superior according to the ancient feudal system. There is mention of a mill in Hawick as early as 1412. The valuation of the Parish in 1627 describes ‘the Myll land, estimat to pay 3 bolls in stok, and 3 firlotts teynd’. The 1686 ratification of the Barony of Hawick to Anne, Duchess of Buccleuch includes ‘all and heal the Milne of Hawick, with the milne lands, multures, sucken, knaveship, and pertinents of the same whatsoever’. The land at the Miller’s Knowes was once farmed by the miller. Originally the mill was in the Mill Port, with the lade going through Backdamgate, behind the Tower and crossing under the Tower Knowe. There is a record of repairs in 1744. This mill was partly washed away in the 1767 flood, and demolished soon afterwards. The new mill was built on the Mill Path and had fields in the Wellogate area. ‘Husband Lands of Hawick with Mill and Customs’ was valued at £2626 13s 4d in 1707, when part of the holdings of the Scotts of Buccleuch, and still valued at the same amount in 1811. Wood’s 1824 map shows a corn mill on Backdamgate and a flour mill on Mill Path. The Mill Path buildings survive and were renovated as flats in 2002 – ‘The miller o’ Hawick Mill fed mei Wi’ mony a kind o’ corn’ [JSB].

the Hawick Missal Fragment (thu-hlk-sul-frawg-min’) n. name often used to describe a section of a medieval missal, discovered in the Heritage Hub in 2009. Dating from around the 1180s, the 4-page fragment was found within uncatalogued papers originally from the family of Rutherford of Knowesouth. It was intensively studied by Dr. Matthew Cheung Salisbury of Oxford University. It was first sung in Oxford and inspired musical events held at the Abbeys of Jedburgh, Kelso and Melrose, as well as Glasgow Cathedral, including compositions by Sean Dougherty, Michael Nyman, Grayston Ives and Goldie.

Hawickmoor (hlk-moor, mewr) n. former cottage on Hawick Common, the site lying in the field known as Upper Acreknowe, which is to the south-west of the Reservoir. It was written ‘Hawick Muir’ in 1841, when the tenants were James Cairns and his sons James and William. The younger James was there in 1851 when it was called ‘Hawick Farm’ and was Town Herd in 1861 when it was ‘Hawick Moor, Herd’s House’. There is now no evidence of former habitation at the site (it is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map, south of Pilnuir Rig and is marked on J.P. Alison’s map of the Common in 1777).

Hawick Moss (hlk-mos) n. name given specifically to the boggy area around the old curling pond, opposite the entrance road to St. Leonard’s, and to the field to the west of there, the ‘Moss Brow’, i.e. to the left of the road, after the Nip Knowes, on the way to the racecourse. The name is sometimes also applied to a wider area — ‘. . . It’s aw gaed into Hawick Moss, An’ ‘twas like to swally mei’ [JSB].

Hawick Mossbrow (hlk-mos-brow) n. top of the hill near the original race-course gate. The name was explicitly used for the field there, lying to the left of the road after the crossroads on the way to the racecourse. This was essentially the centre of the old Common – ‘Take a glass o’ cheerin’ whisky, Then down o’er Hawick Mossbrow fu’ frisky’ [AB] (also ‘Hawick Moss-brow’ and ‘Hawick Moss Brow’).

Hawick Moss Plantin (hlk-mos-plawn’-in) n. tree plantation west of the road between St. Leonards farm and Williestruther cottage. It contains the former curling pond and the site of a cottage.

Hawick Muir (hlk-moor, mewr) n. another name for the Mair. Also sometimes the address formerly given to tenants of various farmsteads on the Moor, or particularly to the former cottage to the south-west of Acreknowe Reservoir.

Hawick Music Club (hlk-mew-zeek-klub) n. club based in Hawick that organises classical music concerts. It was founded in 1951.

Hawick Mutual Improvement Society (hlk-mew-chew-ul-im-proov-min’-su-sI-i’-ee) n. local improvement society existing around the end of the 19th century, peaking around the 1870s. It was also called the ‘Hawick Young Men’s Mutual Improvement Society’.
