Smail (smāl) n. Adam (16th/17th C.) granted a half husbandland of land in Lilliesleaf in 1595/6. He was described as 'son of Thomas there'. Adam (18th/19th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. He is probably the Adam, son of shoemaker John and Helen Aitkin, born in 1758. His name is recorded as 'Smeal' in about 1810 when his wife Jean Phillips died. Their son John was baptised in 1786, with witnesses Walter Aitkin and William Philip. Adam 'Yeddie' (b.c.1780) joiner on Bourtree Place, his premises located behind No. 8. This is marked on Wood's 1824 map. Probably the same man was listed as a wright on the High Street on Pigot's 1825/6 directory and still listed on the High Street in Pigot's 1837 directory. He was recorded being at 'Eastend' on the 1841 census, with Adam Scott as his apprentice. At one point he owned the entire property from 6 to 16 Bourtree Place and all the way back to the railway line. He married Elizabeth (or 'Eliza') Redford. Their children included: Margaret, who married weaver Charles Scott; and Alison (b.1806), baptised in the East Bank Kirk, who married roper William Munro. He could be the Adam born in Jedburgh in 1779. It seems likely he is the wright recorded at Kirkton on the ballot for the Militia in 1799 and the joiner at 'Deanbraebarr' in Cavers Parish on the 1801 Militia ballot ('Denholm braeheads' is crossed out and hence perhaps essentially the same place). Alexander (16th/17th C.) son of William. He was granted a half husbandland and a cottageland in Lilliesleaf in 1595/6. His father was also granted land at the same time. They were presumably residents of the village of Lilliesleaf at that time. Perhaps the same Alexander 'in Lylisle' witnessed a transaction for William Middlemas of Lilliesleaf in 1580. Alexander (17th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Andrew (18th C.) resident of Minto Parish. He married Margaret White and in 1724 their daughter Jean married Walter Aitchison. Andrew (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, son of James. He was living at Alton in 1737 and Clarilaw in 1741. In 1738 he witnessed a baptism for Walter Riddell, who was living at Alton. He married Margaret Hume, the marriage recorded in both Minto and Roberton Parishes. Their children included: James (b.1737); Agnes (b.1738); Walter (b.1739); and Andrew (b.1741). One of the witnesses in 1737 was George (presumably a near relative), while in 1741 the witnesses were Richard Turnbull and John Scott. Andrew (18th C.) recroded as teacher of a private school at Longnewton in 1740. It is not impossible that he is the same as the Andrew who lived in Wilton Parish at about the same time. Andrew (18th C.) married Katherine 'Frier' in Minto Parish in 1740. William (b.1742), John (b.1744), Isobel (b.1746) and George (b.1749) were probably also his children. Andrew (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. His children included John (b.1752), Betty (b.1753), Andrew (b.1754), George (b.1756), Robert (b.1757), Margaret (b.1759) and Agnes (b.1762). Andrew (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Betty Scoon in 1765. Andrew (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. He married Anne Oliver and their children included: Margaret (b.1767); Thomas (b.1770); and an unnamed child (b.1773). Andrew (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. He married Janet Purves and their children included Andrew (b.1778), Margaret (b.1781) and John (b.1784). Anne (b.1786), Mary (b.1789), Thomas (b.1790) and Thomas (again, b.1792), with no mother's name given, were probably also his children. He was recorded being in Ancrum Parish in 1789. Andrew (18th/19th C.) servant at Ormiston in Cavers

Parish. In 1797 he was listed among men on the ballot to serve in the Militia and in 1799 was among those 'In the Ballot Box 1797 not Drawn Still residing in Cavers Parish' and he was still listed at Ormiston on the 1801 Militia ballot. Andrew (18th/19th C.) recorded as journeyman wright at Clerklands in 1797 he was listed among men on the ballot to serve in the Militia. In 1799 he was 'In the Ballot Box 1797 not drawn still residing in Askirk parish'. George (17th C.) resident of Minto Kames who appears in the Hearth Tax records of 1694. George (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He was a cottar in Headshaw Mill. He married Margaret Scott and their daughter Elizabeth (b.1717) was baptised in Headshaw Mill ('being weak'). George (18th C.) married Helen Hill in Minto Parish in 1744. George (b.c.1780) toll-keeper at Spittal Toll. His wife was Janet. George (b.1810/1) from Ancrum, he was a blacksmith in Denholm. He is recorded on the 1841 census and by 1861 was at around Leyden Road. His wife was Agnes, and their children included John, Margaret and George. He secondly married Janet, and had step-daughter Janet Brown, as well as children Robert W., James D. and Mary. James (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. His children included Bessie (b.1741), William (b.1742) and Elizabeth (b.1748). James (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish, recorded at Linthill in 1789 when his son Robert was baptised. James (19th C.) purchaser of the farm of Catshawhill in Lilliesleaf Parish. This was sometime before 1837. He was a nurseryman and seedsman. He was probably succeeded by William. James (19th C.) farm steward at Timpendean in the mid-to-late 1800s, working for Mr. Elliot Boag. He married Margaret, daughter of William Oliver, hind at Langraw. James (1828–1905) from Jedburgh, brother of printer John. He became a banker with the National Bank in Kelso, opening the branch in Earlston. He then moved to the Commercial Bank, working in Earlston, Galashiels, then Kirkcaldy, and eventually becoming Secretary of the head office of the Commercial Bank in Edinburgh. He was strongly connected with Rulewater, meeting his wife Margaret Boa there, and being a keen angler of the Rule and Jed Waters. He wrote verse under the pen-name 'Matthew Gotterson' and under this name published the poem 'The Callant' in the Scotsman in 1889 (reprinted in 'Hawick Songs and Recitations' in 1892); this was used as the anthem for the Callants' Club, the third verse being put to music by Addie Ingles in the late 1940s, and the words were erroneously attributed to J.E.D. Murray in the 2001 Hawick Songs anthology. A version of the ballad 'Little Jock Elliot' was written under this pen-name. There was additionally a collection of poems called 'Roole Water: a Remembrance'. He also wrote broadly on angling topics and was a President of the Berwickshire Naturalists' Club. He wrote an extensive article on the Catrail in 1880, having tried to trace it course for several days accompanied by Mr. Craig-Brown and Mr. Elliot of Hollybush, as well as local farmers and shepherds. He was also a keen Volunteer, being an officer of the Border Battalion and Secretary of the Border Rifle Association. Additionally he was involved as treasurer or secretary of the agricultural societies in Selkirkshire as well as the Landward School Board. His wife died later the same year he did. John (16th C.) recorded being in Lilliesleaf in 1580 when he witnessed a transaction in Selkirk. He could be the son of Thomas, who received a half husbandland in Lilliesleaf from his father in 1581/2. Also in 1581/2 there was a marriage contract between him and Janet, daughter of John Redford in Lilliesleaf; the couple gained a half husbandland in Midlem from his father Thomas and he promised his mother land in Lilliesleaf in liferent. John (17th C.) merchant in Lilliesleaf according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He was probably related to Thomas, who was listed right before him. John (17th C.) wright in Lilliesleaf according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. He was probably related to other Smails living there. Perhaps the same wright John was listed among Covenanter fugitives in about 1684. John (18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. He may be the John who witnessed a baptism in 1772 for Walter Aitkin. He married Helen Aitkin and their children included: George (b.1743); James (b.1744); Margaret (b.1746); Jean (b.1758); and Adam (b.1761). The witnesses in 1743 were cooper John Aitkin (perhaps related to his wife) and shoemaker Robert Wilson, and in 1758 were James Oliver and Walter Aitkin. John (18th C.) married Agnes Graham in Wilton in 1758. John (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Christian Smail and their daughter Anne was baptised in 1792. John (b.c.1780) servant to Alexander Scott, tenant in Ashkirk, according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia. John (b.1785/6) born at Hermiston in Lilliesleaf Parish, he was a cadger and carrier in St. Boswells. In 1852 he is recorded running a cart between Lilliesleaf, St. Boswells and Kelso.

His wife was Esther and their children included Thomas and Jane. Margaret 'Meg' (16th/17th C.) resident of the Lilliesleaf area, wife of Mungo Young. In the 1628 witchcraft trial of Isobel Howison, she gave evidence that about 9 years earlier Howison came to her sick child 'and said he had gotten a blast of ill wind betuene tuo furres [furrows] and shee spake some words over him and he wes better within twentie four houres'. Martin (16th C.) listed as one of the tenants of Skelfhill and neighbouring farms in a bond of security signed in Hawick in 1569. His name is listed as 'Martine Smaill'. Robert (b.c.1770s) servant at Adderstoneshiel according to the 1799 ballot for the Militia in Kirkton Parish. Robert (b.c.1780) servant at Raperlaw Townhead in Lilliesleaf Parish according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia. Robert (b.1798/9) born in Ancrum, he was a farmer at Hillhead in Lilliesleaf Parish. His brother John also helped run the farm. In 1851 they were farming 41 acres and employing 1 labourer. Another brother, William, also lived on the farm. Thomas (16th C.) recorded in a document of 1561/2, agreeing that Thomas Young, his brother-in-law, should occupy some lands in Lilliesleaf during his mother's life. His mother was Elizabeth ('Bessie') Riddell, presumably related in some way to the Riddells of that Ilk. His sister was Margaret. Probably the same Thomas in 1563 leased for 19 years a tenement from his neighbour Thomas Gray. He was to pay 20 shillings twice a year, along with 'ane pek to the boll' of grain, and if he built a kiln there, then Gray would provide him with beams for its construction. The witnesses in 1563 were 'Berte' Riddell, James Leithead and Robert Hastie, who may also have been from Lilliesleaf. In 1564 he witnessed a marriage contract for John Johnstone, tenant in Hermiston. Probably the same Thomas in Lilliesleaf is recorded in 1581/2 when Walter Turnbull in Belses took over his debt with Richard Wilson in Howford. In 1581/2 he resigned his half husbandland in Lilliesleaf in favour of his eldest son John and arranged a marriage contract between John and Janet, daughter of John Redford in Lilliesleaf; he gave the couple his half husbandland in Midlem and his wife Helen Clerk received quarter of a steading of William Middlemas. He may be the Thomas in Lilliesleaf whose son Adam was granted land in the village in 1595/6. Thomas (17th C.) married Janet Paterson in Ashkirk in 1642. Thomas (17th C.) resident in Lilliesleaf Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He was probably related to merchant John, who was also listed there. Thomas (18th C.) tenant farmer in Borthwickbrae in the Horse Tax Rolls for 1787–88. Thomas (18th/19th C.) farmer at Catshawhill in Lilliesleaf Parish according to the 1794 and 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He was probably related to William, who farmed at Raperlaw. Thomas (18th/19th C.) recorded as 'Junr.' at Longnewton on the ballots for the Militia in 1799 and 1801. Thomas (b.1808/9) agricultural labourer from Ancrum Parish. In 1851 he was living at Hallrule Cottages and in 1861 was at Fairnington in Roxburgh Parish. He married Mary, daughter of Walter Hogg from Wilton. Their children included Margaret, Walter, Janet, Euphemia, John, Thomas and George. Thomas (19th/20th C.) driver of the Wolfelee estate carts (mainly coal from Hawick) under 3 separate Lairds. He married Mary, daughter of Thomas Baptie and a Buckham. He retired to Hawick. William (16th/17th C.) granted a half husbandland of land in Lilliesleaf in 1595/6. His son Alexander was also granted land at the same time. William (17th C.) tenant in Harwood in Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Turnbull. Their son William was born in 1687. He could be the William born to Martin and Helen 'Furgrie' in Hawick in 1635. William (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Helen Wight and their son Philip was baptised in 1688. William (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Helen Leyden and their children included: William (b.1744); Adam (b.1754); and Helen (b.1756). William (18th/19th C.) farmer at Catshawhill in Lilliesleaf Parish in 1785. In 1786 he was 'of Catch' at Raperlaw. His surname was given as 'Smeal' in 1788, when he was recorded as owner of Catshawhill. He was still at Raperlaw in 1797. He is probably the William 'Small' recorded as possessor of the land of 'Kaims-muir park' in 1780. In the Land Tax Rolls of 1811 (although the information came from earlier) he was listed as owner of Catshawhill and part of Raperlaw. He may have been father of James of Catshawhill recorded later. Probably the same William at Raperlaw subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. Probably the same William of Catshawhill served as a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire. His name was recorded as William 'Sonnail of Catshawill' in the 1819 list of Commissioners of Roxburghshire. William (18th/19th C.) from Lilliesleaf Parish, he married Janet (or 'Jenny') Stuart. Their children included: Margaret (b.1801); and Elizabeth (b.1803). name given, may also have been his children. William (d.1838) from Lilliesleaf. In 1790 he married Janet Thomson and their children included: Janet (or 'Jessy', b.1803), who married Andrew Buckham; Alexander (b.1805); and Robert (b.1810), who probably married Ellen Ramage. Helen (b.1797) and William (b.1799), with no mother's name given, may also have been his children. In about 1820 the family emigrated to eastern Ontario and there are descendants in the United States. He may have been father of William who in about 1823 married Mary Hunter in Edwardsburgh Township, Ontario; if so, he was said to have been a companion of a young Walter Scott at Smailholm. He died in Elgin Ontario and is buried in Montreal. William (c.1795–1879) prominent citizen in the area of Edwardsburgh, Ontario, along with his brother Robert and nephew Andrew. He was said to be from the Jedburgh area, but was probably son of William and Janet Thomson, who came from Lilliesleaf, emigrating in 1820. In about 1823 he married Mary Hunter (from Ayrshire) and their children included Robert, Andrew, Thomas, John, Alex and Ann. He served as 'Reeve' of Edwardsburgh and county councillor and was an organiser of the Reform movement, which laid the foundations for the Liberal Party of Canada. His farm was called Glen Smail (formerly written 'Smaill', 'Smaile', 'Small', 'Smeal', 'Smeall', 'Smell' and 'Smyle').

Smailcleugh (smāl-klooch) n. former house about 3 miles south of Jedburgh in Southdean Parish. It was near the foot of the Smail Cleuch, on the opposite side of the Jed Water from Ferniehirst Mill. The farm was in the 17th century the residence of the famed Ringan Oliver, who was said to have lived in a tower there. There was a blacksmith's there in the 19th century (also written 'Smailcleuch').

Smaile see Smail

Smaile Burn (smāl-burn??) n. stream now running underground from the Nipknowes to Haggishaa, with the original course being over the Vertish, and on to the Slitrig. The name was in use from at least as early as the 15th century. The springs that feed it provided an early town water supply (1797–1865), conveyed in lead pipes to a reservoir at the top of the Loan (the origin is probably from Old English for 'small'; the name occurs in 1433 as 'Smaleburne' and is 'Smale Burn' in 1448).

Smailholm (smā-lum) n. village north-west of Kelso, with Smailholm Tower, the 18th century Smailholm House and a church dating back to the 13th century, last rebuilt in the 19th. Robert Ker of Altonburn had a charter of the lands in 1404 and Robert Pringle had a charter probably not many years later. The lands were held by Lord Cranston in 1502. In 1544 it was raided by men of Tynedale and Redesdale, taking 600 cattle, 100 horses and 100 prisoners. Also the name of the surrounding Parish of northern Roxburghshire, bounded by Kelso and Makerstoun, as well as Berwickshire. According to one story, St. Cuthbert was born in the nearby village of Wrangham, which has entirely disappeared. It is said that it was the first parish to divide its common land, starting a trend that would sweep across Border parishes, including Hawick, Wilton, Hassendean, etc. 'Book of the Bazaar, On Smailholm Men, Smailholm Parish and Smailholm Church' (1896) was written by William Lamb Sime (the origin is probably Old English 'smael ham', meaning 'the narrow village'; the name first appears in 1160).

Smailholm (smā-lum) n. Henry (c.1327–bef. 1364) priest of the Diocese of St. Andrews. He was probably from Smailholm and may have been connected in some way with Kelso Abbey. He received a B.A. from Paris in 1354/6 and M.A. in 1348, both under Walter Wardlaw. In 1348/9 Thomas 'de Duns' took a degree under him and he then served as Proctor of the English Nation. In 1349 he already held the Vicarage of 'Fagov' (i.e. Fogo) when there was a petition for a canonry of Dunkeld for him. He was in Avignon in 1353/4. In 1354 he was 'M.A. scholar of canon law' when he requested a canonry of Glasgow, having not received the promised canonry of St. Andrews yet. He was admitted as Archdeacon of Teviotdale in 1354, with his name written 'de Smalham'. He appears to have been excommunicated, since there was n interdict against him, but nevertheless he served as Archdeacon until his death, by which the position was vacant in 1364. It is unclear if he was related to the slightly earlier John or later Robert 'de Smalham'.

Smailholm Toor (smā-lum-toor, -tow-ur) n. 5-storey 15th century peel tower on an isolated crag near Smailholm village, about 6 miles west of Kelso, renovated in the 1980s and now housing a museum. It may have originally been built by the Kerrs for the eldest son of Ferniehirst. The existing tower was probably built by the Pringles around 1400. It was the subject of many raids in the 16th century, and was sold to the Scotts of Harden in 1645. It is sometimes also called 'Sandyknowe' from the farm and hillock on which it stands. Sir Walter Scott regarded it as very inspirational in his youth – 'These crags, that mountain tower, which charmed my fancy's waking hour ... Methought grim features, seemed with scars, Glared through the window's rusty bars' [SWS], 'At Smailholm's Tower, Scott's youthful hours Were nursed in song and story' [RF].

smairg (smārg) adj., v. to bedaub, besmear – '... for thaye smairg inequitie apon me, an' in wræth thaye hæte me' [HSR], '... an a smairggin rowk feiles ilka thing' [ECS], to smear sheep with a tarry mixture to protect the fleece against vermin.

smairt (smār') adj., v. smart (also the more common smert).

Small (smaw, smawl) n. Adam (18th/19th C.) resident of Belses Mill. His son William was recorded on the ballot for the Militia in 1801. James (17th C.) listed along with Andrew Robson in the 1663 Land Tax Rolls. Together they paid tax on £390 for the lands of the Laird of Haining (probably John Pringle). William (18th C.) leased the lands of Boghall (presumably in Wilton) from Scott of Harden in 1749 for 11 years. William (18th/19th C.) mason recorded in Barnhills in 1799. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Belses Mill recorded in the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. He was still at Belses Mill in 1801 and recorded as son of Adam (it is possible this is the same as Smail).

small-pox (smaw-, smal-poks) n. contagious viral disease, which was a major source of death across Europe until well into the 19th century. It was not always fatal (Mary, Queen of Scots and Elizabeth I of England both contracted it), but it often left victims scarred or blind. Hawick was hit by a particularly fatal outbreak in 1821. Innoculation was introduced in the early 19th century, but taken up in a patchy way, and largely among the wealthier classes; its historical effeciveness is still a matter of debate, but ultimately it led to eradication of the disease (see also the smaa-pox).

smally (sma-lee) adj., arch. small, meagre, under-sized – 'Smaallie (adj.) = delicately framed (applied especially to a child of frail physique)' [ECS], 'A smally bairn' [GW] (also written 'smallie'; diminutive of smaa).

smarroch (sma-roch) n., poet. a confused collection, crowd – 'The dirdums o' the wheezlebugs Chunter the lee-lang day And for a smarroch o' scowderdowps My greasly hert is wae' [DH].

Smasha Hill (smaw-sha-hil) n. hill to the east of Blawearie at the end of the 'Hill Road to Roberton', reaching a height of 335 m. It contains a Bronze Age burial cairn, about 500 m yards east-north-east of the summit, measuring about 10 m in diameter and about 0.4 m high. There are also several others in the vicinity. On the north side of the hill there is a 'droveway sign-wall', a section of drystone dyke to indicate the direction for droving, or perhaps as a warning to drovers (it is 'Smaillshaw-hill' and 'Small Shawhill' in the 1765 description of the boundaries of Wilton Common, suggesting that it was originally named after a small wood near there).

smashit (smaw-shee', -shi') pp., poet. smashed – 'An' whamseaevir sall fa' on this stane sall be smashet ...' [HSR].

smat (smat) pp., poet. smote – 'Behald he smat the rok, that the waters rashet owt ...' [HSR], 'An' smat a' the first-born in Egypt ...' [HSR].

smatter (sma'-ur) n., pl., arch. small pieces, smithereens – 'Hei broke it inti smatters' [GW], v., arch. to break into small pieces – '... And rap'd, but answer getting nane, The pane he smattered wi' a pelt' [HSR], 'Thou didist smatter the heæds o' leviathan intil flenders ...' [HSR].

Smeaton (smee'-in) n. John (b.1827/8) born in Dunfermline, he was Governor of Hawick Combination Poorhouse during the 1861 census. He presented some items from Borneo to the Museum in 1863, as well as 5 silver and 1 copper foreign coins. His wife was Matron and Harriet Smeaton (probably his sister) also worked at the Poorhouse.

smeddum (sme-dum) n., poet. spirit, mettle, common sense, resourcefulness, strength – 'The smeddum o' your barmie pills, Gars misers loose their poses, But wi' your carts ye send twa deils, Like to rive aff folks noses' [JR], '... And pits sic smeddum in my step' [WL] (from Old English).

smeeg (smeeg) n., arch. a kiss (noted by J. Jamieson).

smert (smer') adj. smart, clever – 'deh try ti be smert', 'Let cleverality, mockreef folk that are unco smert ...' [ECS], well-dressed, stylish, attracive – 'ee're lookin awfi smert the day', 'Hei's a smert keind o fallih, thon' [ECS]', 'Weel, aa met a lorry-driver, As smert as ee could sei ...' [DH], 'Hei's a big smert felli mind' [JCo], 'she's a smert lookin lassie, no like her mother', brisk, quick – 'An so, efter a smert hurl, oo clattert inti Hawick High Street duist on the chaap o six ...' [ECS], v. to smart – 'ma backside's still smertin', '... And lashed oor smertin' cheeks' [WL] (cf. the less common smairt).

Smellie (sme-lee) n. James (19th C.) teacher at Ashkirk in the 1860s. He also served as Registrar and Inspector of Poor for the Parish.

Smert (smer') n. (Smart) Alexander (1815–84) born in Stow, son of Alexander and Jean Murray. He was a baker in Hawick, listed on the High Street in 1841 and also in Slater's 1852 directory. In 1851 he was at about 39 High Street and in 1861 at 2 Allars Crescent. He married Agnes Priest (b.c.1818), who was from Wilton and their children included: Alexander (b.1838), naval engineer and coal merchant; William (b.1841); Agnes (b.1843); Jane (b.1845); Jane (again, b.1849/50); and George (b.1856/7). He died in Edinburgh. Alexander (1838–1911) son of baker Alexander, he was born in Hawick. He served with the Royal Navy, being engineer of H.M.S. Reindeer. In 1877 he donated to the Museum a large number of items from the Americas and the Pacific, namely: 'bow and arrows as used for hunting warfare by the South Sea islanders, stick from coffee tree in Sandwich Islands, eight walking sticks comprising one made from the bone of a whale's jaw, four from Robinson Crusoe's Island, two of oak from Vancouver Island, and appletree stick carved by North American Indians of British Columbia; scorpions preserved in bottle; young alligator preserved in spirits, and alligator's egg taken from the same nest as the alligator; large insect from Panama Bay; sea-porcupine from Gulf of California; two Mexican copper coins; large bone of walrus or sea lion, and five walrus teeth; specimen of lava and fern from the crater of Kilalea, Sandwich Islands; two Mexican cocoa nuts; beans from Central America, and from the island of Taboga, Panama Bay; specimens of silver ore from British Columbia, and from the Mexican mines in Rosaire; specimen of coral from the island of Galapagos'. He retired from the Navy in 1879 and became a coal merchant in Edinburgh, living on Malta Terrace. In 1860 he married Helen Parr in London and their children included Helen, Alfred Campbell, John Ernest, Agnes and Jeanie. He died in Dollar. Rev. William (1775/6–1837) from Blackfriars Kirk in Jedburgh, he was 'probationer' at Castleton Burgher Kirk following the resignation of Fletcher in 1801. He was said to have done much to inspire confidence in the waning congregation and helped to secure a site for the new church in Newcastleton village. However, he remained only a short time, because in 1802 he was called to Paisley. He died suddenly while returning from a meeting of the Presbytery there. A volume of his sermons was published by his son Rev. William of Linlithgow.

smerter (smer-tur) adj. smarter – '...Like panoramic views were cast, still better an' still smerter' [VW].

smiddie see smiddy

Smiddielands (smi-dee-lawndz) n. former name for lands in Bedrule Parish, adjacent to Newton. They were included in the lands inherited by William Kerr of Newton in 1637.

smiddies (smi-deez) n. blacksmith's workshops. These used to be common and crucial parts of everyday life in Hawick and surrounding area. Local ones included Peter Clark's at the Sandbed, Rob Young's of the Back Raw, and 3 in the Fore Raw (including James Bowie and Tom Ferguson), as well as others in the Croon Close, Brougham Place (Murray in the basement of No. 7), Melgund Place (No. 5) and Albion Place. In the mid-19th century there must have been around a dozen in Hawick. Those of the surrounding countryside included Ashkirk (Kirkhouses), Bonchester Bridge, Borthaugh Wudfit, Borthwickbrae Burnfit, Cauldmill, Chisholme, Denholm (two), Flex, Forkins (or Unthank), Hassendean, Headshaw, Heap (or Stirches), Hobkirk (Blacklee), Kirkhouses, Kirkton, Lilliesleaf, Minto, Newmill, (Bedrule) Newton, Park (Copshaw), Stobs, Teviothead (Bowanhill) and Todshawhaugh. The business in the Crown Close (Telfer's) survived until the late 1970s, and Hook's on Union Street even more recently. As well as shoeing horses and dealing with other metalwork jobs, through much of the 18th and 19th centuries they were also responsible for performing medical procedures like tooth extractions and bleedings for various ailments. Adam Scott is recorded as smith in Hawick in 1640 and 'Hew Ellot' in 1642.

smiddy (smi-dee) n. a smithy, blacksmith's workshop – 'He took the horses next to Boa's smiddy to get their shoes taken off' [RM], 'And in winter we wad gather round the bleezin' smiddy hearth ...' [JT], a frame-smith's or mechanical workshop in a mill (also spelled 'smiddie').

the Smiddy (thu-smi-dee) n. former blacksmith's in Ashkirk, now a pub and restaurant.

smiddy-end (smi-dee-end) n., arch. gable wall of a blacksmith's – 'A dandert aboot amang the auld byres an smiddie-ends' [ECS], 'Oh, the Auld Smiddy end, where in youth's happy day A merry band o' bairnies wad gather at their play' [JT].

smirl (smi-rul) n., arch. a trick, prank – ''I'll play him a smirl for that yet', Teviotd. Nearly syn. with Pliskie' [JoJ].

smirn (smirn) n., arch. a smug, officious person.

smirr (smir) n., poet. drizzle, light rain – 'A smirr o' rain was fa'in' That buid to spoil the day' [WL], 'There cam' a blast wi' smirr o' snaw As Tam cam' amblin' hame' [WFC], v., arch. to drizzle (the origin is unknown).

smitch (smich) n., poet. Thou art a' fair, my loefe, ther is nae smitch in thee' [HSR].

Smith (smith) n. Adam (17th C.) listed as a smith on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick 'eist the water'. He paid tax on 2 hearths. Adam (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His son James was baptised in 1696. Agnes (17th C.) resident of Hallrule who was listed among the poor in Hobkirk Parish in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Sir Alan (1917–2013) born at South Shields, he was R.A.F. pilot who fought alongside Douglas Bader and was awarded the D.F.C. He was later an industrialist, being a strong Tory supporter and becoming a friend of Margaret Thatcher. He ran Dawson International from 1970. He was Chief Guest at the 1986 Common Riding. With the demise of Pringle's following soon afterwards, he was among the executives blamed for the downfall of Hawick's knitwear industry. Major A.K. (19th C.) resident of Melbourne who must have had a local connection. He donated several article from Australia and New Zealand to the Museum in its early years. Alexander (18th C.) resident of Appletreehall. In 1764 he witnessed a baptism for John Hunter, who also lived at Appletreehall. He married Margaret Laidlaw in 1766, and their children, baptised in Wilton Parish, included: James (b.1767); Isabel (b.1770); John (b.1772); Susanna and Christy (b.1773); John (again, b.1775); Margaret (b.1778); Peggy (b.1780); David (b.1784); and Alexander (b.1786). The witnesses in 1770 were James Dryden and Thomas Reid and in 1772 were James Dryden and Robert Hume. Alexander (b.c.1770s) wright at Nether Burnmouth according to the ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1799. Alexander (b.1817) son of James, he was blacksmith at Appletreehall and later also vet there. He was listed among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1841. He lived at Appletreehall with his sister Jane. Late in life he married Margaret, from Stranraer. Alexander (1824–81) son of James, who was blacksmith in Hawick at 5 Melgund Place, and before that at Cauldmill, where he was born. He emigrated to Australia in 1854, being sent to build and manage the Melbourne Gas and Coke Co. He was involved in developing many gas and water works in Victoria. He served in the Victorian Legislative Assembly and Melbourne City Council and was Mayor of Melbourne 1875–76. Alexander (19th C.) teacher at Loughor in Wales. In 1869 he donated to the Museum a Welsh 'bidding letter' and several foreign coins. He must have had a local connection. Alexander 'Alex' (d.1960s) originally from Wick, he came to Hawick to work as a watchmaker in George Reid's High Street shop. In 1947 he started his own jeweller's and watchmaker's shop on Walter's Wynd. This business was continued by his son Hamish. He also had a son Alasdair. Andrew (17th/18th C.) mason in Bedrule Parish. His children Isobel (d.1690) and William (d.1693) are buried in Bedrule kirkyard. Andrew (b.c.1770s) weaver at Roughheugh according to the ballots for the Militia in Wilton Parish in 1799 and 1801. Sir Andrew, M.D. 'Smithie fri Soothfield' (1797–1872) born at Heronhaa near Southfield son of a shepherd, he was an Army surgeon who became Director General of the Army Medical Department and is sometimes described as the father of South African zoology. He was born in Kirkton Parish, his father being Thomas P., his mother Grizzel Tait, and the location given as Winnington. He was baptised by James Henderson 'dissenting Minr. Hawick' a month later. He was the eldest of 5 children, having 1 brother and 3 sisters. He attended school at Stobs, where he was said to be flogged regularly for playing truant. In 1809 the family moved to Hassendean and he attended Minto and then Lilliesleaf schools. He had a 3 year apprenticeship with Dr. Walter Graham in Hawick (sometimes given incorrectly as a 'Mr. Gordon in Roxburghshire') before training at Edinburgh University from 1813 and joining the Army Medical Service in 1815, shortly after Waterloo. He trained at various stations around Britain, and later when quartered in Edinburgh, continued his studies at the University, where he received his M.D. in 1819, with a thesis on secondary smallpox. He went to the Cape in 1820 as a medical assistant to the 72nd Regiment, and was there for 16 years, also being associated with the 49th and 98th Regiments and the Cape

Mounted Rifle Corps. He was district surgeon at Albany and in 1822 opened the first free dispensary for native patients in South Africa. He learned much about the indigenous peoples and was sent on several missions to visit tribes beyond the frontier, resulting in a description of the customs of the Xhosa tribes in 1824. He also reported on the Bushmen and the Amazooloo (specifically the San, Khoi-Khoi and other peoples). Spending much of his leisure time studying natural history, he established a reputation as a zoologist and ethnographer. In addition his expertise in zoology was sought out by Charles Darwin and he was appointed the first Superintendent of the South African Museum from 1825. He led a 6 month expedition to Port Natal, the report from which ultimately led to the founding of the colony at Natal. In 1834 he led probably the first scientific expedition into the interior, where he also negotiated treaties, as well as exploring the Oori, Mariqua and Limpopo rivers, returning after 18 months. About 5,000 specimens, 500 drawings and 1800 artefacts were brought back. In 1836 he met a young Charles Darwin when the Beagle stopped at the Cape, showing Darwin rock formations and giving him some rock samples. He returned to Britain in 1837, being promoted to the rank of surgeon and based at Fort Pitt, Chatham. A grant was appropriated to publish his 5 volume 'Illustrations of the Zoology of South Africa' (1838–47), which he wrote with no personal remuneration. He identified and named many animals, particularly reptiles and birds. He described more species of South African birds than anyone before or since and Gekko smithii (a gecko), Lepidophyma smithii (a lizard) and Pangshura smithii (a freshwater turtle) are all named after him. He was also first to formally describe the largest living shark, the whale shark, as well as to properly distinguish the genus of the great white shark and to name it 'Carcharodon' (so that the species was sometimes called 'Carcharodon smithii' as a result). Ill health prevented him publishing the journal from his expeditions, but much of the information appeared elsewhere (and his diaries from 1834–36 were finally published in 1939–40). He continued to be promoted, becoming Principal Medical Officer at Chatham, then Deputy Inspector of Hospitals in London, and by 1853 he was Director General of the Army and Ordnance Medical Department. During the Crimean War he was publically attacked in the press for being responsible for the state of medical care for British troops, with Florence Nightingale calling him the 'smoke-dried Andrew Smith'. However, his conduct was vindicated after inquiries by several parliamentary committees. In 1858 he donated a collection of African butterflies to the Museum, as well as several hundred drawings and plates of African animals. He retired in 1858, when he was made a K.C.B. He received numerous other honorary titles and awards, including being Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons of Edinburgh, the Zoological Society and of the Royal Society. He was made an Honorary Burgess in 1838 on a visit back to Hawick. He also received honorary degrees from Edinburgh and Trinity College, Dublin. In 1844 he married his housekeeper, Ellen Henderson (c.1802–64), and converted to her Roman Catholic faith. After the death of his wife and then his sister, he lost interest in African exploration and scientific writing and went into decline. He died at his home at 16 Alexander Square, London and is buried at Kensal Green Cemetery. There are at least 2 known portraits of him. A plaque (on the right-hand side of the road past Southfield) marks the site of the cottage in which he was born (actually on the opposite side of the road). Annie Henderson nee Cowan (b.1861) daughter of Elliot Cowan and Jeanie Hunter. She was well known locally as a singer, for example, singing 'Up Wi' the Banner' at the 1889 Colour Bussing. She was mother of William, James and Elliot and married to Cornet John, with whom she moved to the Manchester area in the 1890s. In 1926 she and her son James made the trip out to visit Gallipoli. She gave a talk to the Archæological Society in 1935, providing valuable information about 19th century Hawick language and place names. It was said that she insisted on her family speaking Hawick dialect at home in Manchester and their house was a haven for other Teries in Lancashire. Her son Elliot referred to her as 'a leal and competent guardian of the vernacular', and explicitly highlighted her influence in developing his fascination with the dialect of Hawick. Archibald 'Airchie' (b.1782) son of Thomas and Mary Scott 'The Flooer o Rankleburn'. He was listed as son to Thomas at Hartshaugh Mill on the Militia ballot in 1801. It is said that as a young man in charge of carts in Berwick, he was press-ganged into joining the crew of a man-of-war. He returned to Rulewater a few years later and married Mary Turnbull (whose sister Ellen has married his brother Peter). One of their sons was found dead at the bottom of a cliff at Edgerston, while a daughter married Robert Taylor. He may be the Archibald whose children, baptised in Hobkirk Parich, included Thomas (b.1802), Mary (b.1804), Walter (b.1807), Betty (b.1812), Archibald (b.1814), Peter (b.1817), Isabel (b.1820) and Andrew (b.1825). Along with the rest of his family he emigrated to America. Archibald (19th C.) married Margaret Armstrong in Hobkirk Parish in 1837. Charles (19th C.) grocer on the High Street. He is listed as grocer, spirit dealer and victual dealer on the High Street in Pigot's 1837 directory. He was Cornet in 1840. He appears to have left the town shortly afterwards. Mysteriously he appears to have fathered an unnamed child who died in 1840. Charles (b.1817/8) from Edinburgh, he was a tailor in Hawick. In 1861 he was 'Clothier or Foreman Taylor' at 15 Howegate. His wife was Jane and their children included Margaret, Jane, Charles, Thomas, Christina, Agnes and Jessie. Rev. Cornelius Finlayson (b.1911) born in Denholm, son of Rev. John and Agnes Hume. He was educated in Denholm, at Hawick High School and at Edinburgh University (where he graduated M.A. in 1932 and B.D. in 1935). He later graduated with a Ph.D. from Glasgow University in 1953. He was licensed by the Presbytery of Hawick in 1935, became assistant at Stirling Holy Rude 1936–39 and was ordained as minister at Crossford in 1939. In 1941 he married Helen Heron (b.1908), daughter of Donald Grigor and they had children Ethel Agnes Hume and John Donald Finlayson. Rev. David (b.1892) educated in Dunfermline and at Edinburgh University. He was licensed to preach by Dunfermline Presbytery and was assistant minister in Dumfries. He was ordained as minister of Saughtree Kirk in 1921. However, he was translated to Inverkeithing the following year, and later went to Ceres. He married Anna Clarke. David Nicholson 'Kel' (20th C.) driving instructor in Hawick. His nickname came from the fact that he grew up in Kelso. He was well known as Clerk to the Course at the Common-Riding Races for many years, with many stories told of his droll humour heard over the loud-speaker system at the Moor. Elliot Cowan (1891–1917) native of Hawick, whose father, grandfather and great-great-grandfather had been Cornet. His father was John and his mother Annie Cowan. He was a student at Manchester Municipal High School and worked as an accountant. Well read in all forms of literature, he had a particular interest in Scottish writing and the vernacular of Hawick. In 1914 he wrote what is probably the best example of Hawick dialect prose 'Mang Howes an' Knowes: a Day's Dander Throwe Border Waeter-Gates'. This when he was only 23 years old, and after having spent most of his life in the Manchester area, where his family moved. It was published in 1925, with illustrations by his brother, James Dryden. He also contribued the dialect dictionary and discussion 'Braid Haaick' to the Transactions, as well as publishing 'To Dee and Don: recollection and rumination' (reprinted from the Hawick Express) in 1912. He was also a lover of music, from high opera to old Scottish songs. Never being in robust health, it was said that he was disappointed not to be able to enlist like his 2 brothers. He lived at 61 Carlton Street, Old Trafford, Manchester. He died at the age of only 25 and is buried in the Wellogate. George (18th C.) tenant in Hawick. He married Helen Graham and their children included: Janet (b.1722); and George (b.1725). The witnesses in 1725 were weavers Robert Wight and John Stevenson. George, A.R.C.O. (19th/20th C.) organist at St. Cuthbert's in the early 20th century. He gave organ lessons to Adie Ingles. Gilbert (18th C.) house servant at Stirches in 1778 and 1779, when he was working for Gilbert Chisholme. In 1792 he witnessed a baptism for Walter Stewart, who lived at Stirches. Hamish D. (1946/7–2023) jeweller at Bourtree Place, well known for incorporating local elements into his designs. He was educated at Burnfoot and Hawick High. He worked with Lyle & Scott and was then a fencer on motorways, then worked in his father Alex's jewellery shop at 45 High Street, which in 1970 became his own business at 17 High Street. The premises moved to 47 High Street then in 1991 to Eastbank House on Bourtree Place (with members of the Linden being enlisted to move the heavy safe). He was Hawick Business Forum Chairman in the 1980s. He designed badges and chains of office for several of the local clubs, including for the President of the Archæological Society (in memory of his father) in 1991. He also made badges for Jedburgh, Lauder and Duns festival principals (e.g. the Cornet's Badge from 1988). The 'Teribus Clock' has been a feature of his shop since 1996 (constructed by him, Tosh Scott and other local tradesmen). He and Tosh Scott also provided a new clock for the Town Hall balcony. In 2012 he created a Hawick version of the olympic torch. He married Sylvia and had children Janie and Graham. James (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. He probably farmed near Newton. James (17th C.) resident of Spittal-on-Rule on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. James (17th C.) resident of Roberton Parish, in the Hassendean part. He witnessed a baptism in Hassendean for William Lamb in 1687. He married Margaret Armstrong in 1679 and their children included: Walter (b.1679); Janet (b.1682); and Margaret (b.1688). He is probably the resident in Westerhouses recorded in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls for Hassendean Parish. It seems likely that he and his wife are related to the Walter Armstrong who married Isobel Smith in Roberton in 1686. James (1680/1–1743) blacksmith at Longtown. He had at least 3 children who died young: Archibald (b.1722/3); Mary (b.1725/6); and Agnes (b.1725/6). He was buried in old Wilton Cemetery. James (17th/18th C.) recorded at Ashybank in 1709 when he married Helen Turner in Cavers Parish. James (17th/18th C.) married Agnes 'M.' in Wilton Parish in 1708. James (17th/18th C.) married Elspeth Aitken in Wilton Parish in 1708. Isobel (b.1710), with no mother's name given, may have been his child. James (17th/18th C.) married Helen Turner in Cavers Parish in 1709. James (17th/18th C.) married Beatrix Buckham in Bedrule Parish in 1718. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at 'Heap burnfoot' in 1725. He married Elspeth (or Elizabeth) Aitken and their children included: Helen (b.1716); Margaret (b.1719); Agnes (b.1723); and James (b.1725). The witnesses in 1725 were James and Robert Easton. It is possible he was the same as the blacksmith at Longtown. He is surely related to John, who was blacksmith at Stirches and recorded at Heapburn at about the same time. James (18th C.) married Margaret Buckham in 1746, the marriage recorded in both Bedrule and Kirkton Parishes. James (18th C.) married Margaret Brown in Kirkton Parish in 1749. These children, baptised in Kirkton, may be his (although some of them must be another family): Betty (b.1747); John (b.1748); John (again, b.1750); Mary (b.1752); Margaret (b.1753); and Isabel (b.1755). James (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Elizabeth Armstrong in 1761. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Isabel Lees and their children included James (b.1766). James (18th C.) married Jean Davidson in 1775. The marriage was recorded in both Hawick and Wilton Parishes. Their children, baptised in Wilton, included: John (b.1777); Margaret (b.1779); and John (again, b.1781). James (18th C.) married Betty Elliot in Cavers Parish in 1793. James (b.1790/1) gardener in Castleton Parish, originally from Canonbie. He was living at Castleton in 1841 and in Newcastleton in 1851. His wife was Margaret and their children included James, Betty, George (a teacher), John and Joseph. James (18th/19th C.) resident at Appletreehall. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He could be the James who married Jean Forsyth in Wilton Parish in 1816 and had childern: Alexander (b.1817); Janet (b.1819); and Jane (b.1821). James (b.c.1780) carpet-weaver in Hawick according to the ballot for the Militia in 1801. Probably the same weaver in Hawick is recorded when an unnamed child of his died in 1809. He could be the James who had a child John (b.1800) with Margaret (or 'Peggy') Oliver, baptised in Hawick, and married Margaret Oliver in Kirkton in 1802. The couple additionally had James (b.1804) in Kirkton, and Robert (b.1806) and John (b.1809) baptised in East Bank Kirk. James (1785–1855) born in Oxnam, son of John. He was blacksmith in Hawick at 5 Melgund Place, and before that at Cauldmill. He may have been a grandson of John, blacksmith at Heap. He is listed in Pigot's 1837 directory as blacksmith and mill-wright on Melgund Place along with William (presumably his son). In Slater's 1852 directory he was listed as a blacksmith on Melgund Place. He married Margaret (or 'Peggy') Kennedy in Wilton in 1804 and she died in 1872, aged 86; she was daughter of James, and sister of William Norman and Robert. Their children included: John (b.1805), baptised in Wilton Parish; William (b.1807), baptised in Melrose Parish; James (1809–37); Janet (or 'Jessie', 1811–70); Isabel (1813–29); Robert (b.1815); Helen (b.1817); Margaret (b.c.1820), teacher; Charles Kennedy (b.1822); Alexander Kennedy (b.1824), who emigrated to Australia, working as an engineer and became Mayor of Melbourne; Joan (1824/5–82), who married shoemaker William Burnet; Thomas Young (b.1827), watchmaker, who emigrated to Australia; and Gilbert (b.1830). Most of their children were born in Cavers Parish, with Thomas recorded at Cauldmill. He is buried in old Wilton Kirkyard. A story is told of how a stranger saught shelter from the rain in Cauldmill Smiddy in the early 1820s, and after he quoted some lines of poetry the visitor confessed that he was the author, William Knox, whereupon he was invited in for a meal and conversation. His wife donated a flying fish to the Museum in 1867. James (b.1805/6) stocking-maker, who was one of the 5 men tried for mobbing and assault during the 1837 election in Hawick. He was the only one found not guilty; this was largely because of a technicality, with the indictment saying he chased one of the men into the house of Jean Turnbull (nee Riddell), while it was actually the house of her son George. James (19th C.) one of the 6 elders of Hawick Parish who left along with the minister during the Disruption of 1843 to form Hawick Free Kirk. He was probably the first Session Clerk of the new church, serving until 1855. James (19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Mary Glendinning and their children included Mary (b.1822). James 'Jamie' (b.1805/6) born in Cockpen, Midlothian, he was a grocer on the Howegate and then Burgh Officer and Halberdier in Hawick from about 1860. He was the Burgh Officer for a while along with 'Tam-a-Linkin', then with Michael Wintrup. He was noted as a wit. He also looked after the town's poor house for many years. It is said that he was well liked in the town, and that even the beggars respected him. He married Margaret Shiel, and their children included: Agnes (b.1831), who married house painter James Smith (probably no relation); William (b.1833); James (b.1835); and Catherine (b.1838). He lived at 4 Loan according to the 1861 census. James (19th C.) member of the East Bank Kirk, married to Janet Miller. Their children included Margaret (b.1828) and Alexander (b.1830). James (19th C.) married Helen Turnbull in Bedrule Parish in 1830. James (b.c.1795) farmer at Braidhaugh in Hobkirk Parish. His wife was Helen and their children included: Helen (b.1837). James (b.1805/6) from Cockpen in Midlothian, he was a Sheriff Officer in Hawick. In 1861 he was living at 4 Loan. His wife was Margaret and their children included William. James (b.1810/1) farmer at Templehall and proprietor of Harwood Sawmill. He was at Harwood Mill in 1841 and listed there in 1861 as farmer of 1000 acres, employing 3 labourers. He was still recorded as farmer at Harwood Mill in 1868. He maried Elizabeth (or 'Betty') Henderson in 1836 and their children included: Thomas (b.1837); Mina (b.1839); Elizabeth (or 'Betty', b.1844); William (b.1846); James (b.1848); Peter; and Oliver (b.1853). The Jane Smith (aged about 70) living with him in 1841 was probably his mother. He was probably the 'Jamie Smith of Harwood Mill' listed among local 'Hard-riding Dick's' in H.H. Dixon's 'Field and Fern or Scottish Flocks and Herds (South)' (1865); he was said to be a keen fox-hunter. He could be the miller of that name who in 1873 donated to the Museum 'curious weeds found among foreign beans, and fossil'. James (19th C.) married Elizabeth Henderson in Hobkirk Parish in 1836. James (b.1817/8) from Canonbie, he was gamekeper at Larriston House in 1851 and 1861. James (19th C.) married Isobel Beattie in Wilton Parish in 1844. James (19th C.) married Elizabeth Scott in Hawick Parish in 1845. Their children, baptised in Hawick Free Kirk, were Jane (b.1846) and Mary (b.1849). James (19th C.) married Agnes Oliver in Hawick Parish in 1847. James (b.1815/6) born in Hawick Parish, he was a shoemaker in Wilton. In 1851 he was lodging with the Rivile family on Wilton Path, along with his wife Jane. James (b.1819/20) born in Hawick, he was a woollen spinner in Wilton. In 1861 he was living on Roadhead with his wife Caroline (from Jedburgh) and their children James H. and Mary. James (b.1823/4) painter, son of whip and thong maker John. He was a grandson of James 'Deacon' Dryden, father of John and grandfather of Elliot Cowan. He was Cornet in 1846, and Acting Father for his son John in 1881. He annually painted a line at Towerdykeside to mark the level of the flood in the year of his Cornetship; this was replaced by a plaque in 1902. There is a painting (by Andrew Kennedy) of him and his Right- and Left-Hand men crossing the Teviot near Laidlaw's Cauld. This is probably the earliest image of the Common Riding. There is also a photograph of him with the Cornets of 1845 and 1897; this makes him one of the first Cornets of whom we have a photogrpahic image. He may be the James who donated coins and 'copy of Queen Mary's prayer' to the Museum in 1871. In 1848 he married Agnes, probably daughter of Howegate grocer and Burgh Officer James Smith. Their children were: Margaret Shiell (b.c.1850), who married Allan Watt; Elizabeth (b.c.1851); Hannah; John (b.1856); Jemima Catherine (b.1863); Ann; Agnes Ellior (b.1869); Agnes Ellior (again, b.1870); and Helen (b.1873). The family lived at 8 Howegate, then 3 Green Wynd, and then 4 Loan, where they kept a 'house of refuge'. After his wife's death he lived at 1 Silver Street and lastly 19 Howegate. He was still alive in 1901. James (19th C.) married Jane Hogg in Wilton Parish in 1852. James (b.1831/2) from Canonbie, he was groom and gardener, living at Cavers Manse Cottage in 1861. His wife was Mary (from Hutton, Dumfriesshire) and their children included Walter, Peter T. and Mary. James Turnbull (d.1905) eldest son of Thomas and Mary Smith. In 1900 he married Margaret Murray (b.1875), who was from Galashiels. Their children were Peggie, Mary and Thomas James (born after his father's death). He died following a bad fall from his bicycle at 'Jenny Walker's Brae'. His wife was later keeper of the Laidlaw Memorial Hall. James Dryden 'Jamie' (c.1881–1966) son of John and Annie Cowan, and older brother of Elliot Cowan. He was named after his great-great-grandfather 'Deacon Dryden', who was Cornet in 1772. He moved to Manchester with the rest of his family when he was young. He became a member of the Royal Institute of British Architects and was employed by a brewer's in Manchester for many years. After retiring he moved back to Hawick, where he and his wife settled at 11 Backdamgate. He was a keen student of Hawick's dialect and became known as a local historian, who was often consulted. He was also a rugby enthusiast, acting as correspondent for Manchester papers, for both Rugby Union and Rugby League. He provided the illustrations for 'Mang Howes an Knowes'. He accompanied his mother to Gallipoli in 1926, as part of an organised family memorial trip, and wrote about it for the Hawick Express; they were able to walk on the battlefield where his brother William had fallen, and he made a sketch while they were there. He was a member of the Archæological Society Committee and contributed an article to the Transactions in 1958. He acted as Bard for Lodge 111, and was also a member of the Callants' Club. He was donor of the J.D. Smith bequest, which benefited several local causes. He was described as a 'small and dapper figure'. He married his cousin Jane Hunter Scott. He was buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. Jean (18th C.) kitchen maid at Wilton Lodge in 1791, when she was working for Lord Napier. Jenny nee Ferguson (1908–74) born in Stirling, she trained as a teacher in Dundee, being qualified as a primary teacher with a specialisation in music. She first taught in Yetholm, then moved to Manchester, after marrying local baker Robert T. The couple moved to Hawick in the late 1930s, where her husband established his bakery business on Bridge Street. She taught at Drumlanrig 1964–71, and while there wrote the music for 'Hurrah! for the Cornet', to words written by her Primary 5 class. She also wrote a song 'The Jewel in the Crown' for the 1970 Burnfoot song competition. In 1971 she remarried, becoming Mrs. Dorward. She died at the Cottage Hospital and was buried in Wilton Cemetery. Jessie (b.1811/2) daughter of blacksmith James. She was living with her widowed mother at 6 Melgund Place in 1861. She is probably the 'Mis Smith' who in 1866 donated to the Museum a 'collection of copper coins and tokens'. John (16th C.) doctor recorded in 1581/2 being in Riddell and also in Lilliesleaf. He witnessed the marriage contract between Helen, daughter of Alexander Gledstains and Gavin Gledstains (who sold Stobs), as well as an instrument of sasine between Alexander Gledstains (Burgess of Selkirk) and Gavin Gledstains (who sold Stobs to Gavin Eliott). John (17th/18th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish, recorded at Stirkrig in 1701. He is probably the John who married Margaret Aird in Bedrule in 1695. His children included: James (b.1696); William (b.1698); Janet (b.1699); 'Euphame' (b.1701), who probably married miller Alexander Scott; Margaret (b.1703); and Helen (b.1706). He was recorded as Elder of Bedrule in 1735. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living at Orchard in 1715. His children were probably: James (b.1714); Margaret (b.1715); John (b.1717); and William (b.1719). John (17th/18th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish. His children included Bessie (b.1715), John (b.1717), Robert (b.1718), Janet (b.1721), an unnamed child (b.1722), Beatrix (b.1724) and Euphan (b.1727). He is probably the John who married Janet Turnbull in 1714. He may be the Elder of Bedrule recorded in 1724. John (18th C.) married Helen Hood in Bedrule in 1726. John (18th C.) married Janet Hogg in Bedrule in 1733. John (18th C.) blacksmith at Heap on the Stirches estate. In 1736 he is recorded living 'Heapburn', at Stirches in 1741, at 'Heap foord' in 1744 and at 'Heapburn' in 1747; presumably all these were in fact the same place. In the records for the division of Wilton Common in the 1760s he is referred to as 'John Smith, smith in Heip, on the lands of Stirkshaws' and 'smith in Heip Smidie'. In 1735 he married Margaret Dryden (1712/3–51) in Wilton Parish. Their children included: James (b.1736), who died aged 7; Margaret (b.1739); John (b.1739), who died young; Alexander (b.1741); Isobel (b.1744); and Elspeth (b.1747). The witnesses in 1736 were John Lockie and John Scott, in 1741 were Robert Scott and James Dryden (probably related to his wife), in 1744 were James Dryden (again) and Walter Scott and in 1747 were James Dryden (again) and Thomas Laidlaw. He seems likely to have been closely related to James, who was also at Heapburn about the same time. John (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His wife was 'Cicil Spinnie' (or 'Spindie'). Their children included John (b.1751), George (b.1752), James (b.1754) and

Agnes (b.1756). Helen (b.1758), an unnamed son (b.1760), Margaret (b.1762) and Agnes (b.1767) may also be his children. John (18th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish. His son Henry was baptised in 1751. John of Spittal (18th C.) made an Honorary Burgess in 1777. John (18th C.) resident of Firth in Lilliesleaf Parish. His daughter Betty was baptised in 1790. It is possible that the same John was a ploughman at Bewlie Hill according to the 1801 Militia ballot. John (18th C.) resident at Scaw Mill in Wilton Parish, when he paid the cart tax in 1791. It is possible he was the same as the Stirches blacksmith. John (d.1794) blacksmith at Heap. He must have been son of the previous blacksmith John (or else he was the same man and quite old when he died). He may have been father or grandfather of James, the blacksmith at Cauldmill and at Melgund Place, Hawick. He died at Cavers and is buried in old Wilton Cemetery. Isabel, who died in 1807, aged 27, was buried along with him, and so probably a daughter. John (18th/19th C.) weaver in Hawick. He married Betty Chain (or 'Chine' or 'Shien') in Hawick in 1757 and had children: Christian (b.1758); James (b.1760); Walter (b.1762); Robert (b.1764); William (b.1766, probably 'Wull the Cutler'); and John (b.1768). He was listed as a weaver in the 1764 baptism, when the witnesses were clothiers Gavin and Thomas Turnbull, and also in 1766 when the whole congregation were witnesses. The witnesses in 1768 were fellow weavers Francis Cairns and Robert Chisholme. The death of his son Robert is recorded in 1798, his daughter Christian in 1800 and his wife Betty Chain in 1799. John (18th C.) gamekeeper at Cavers in at least the period 1793–97, when he was working for George Douglas. He was recorded in Cavers in 1792. His children, baptised in Cavers Parish, included Isobel (b.1790), Christian (b.1792) and John (b.1794). John (18th/19th C.) innkeeper in Newcastleton. He is probably the resident of the village recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. In 1817 his inn was used as the meeting place for creditors of a bankrupt merchant in Newcastleton. He was listed as proprietor of a public house in Newcastleton on Pigot's 1825/6 directory. He was probably the John, inkeeper in Newcastleton, who subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He may be the carter of that name recorded as male head of household in Newcastleton in 1835. John (b.1773/4) from England, he was a shoemaker on the Mid Raw in 1841. Jane and John, who lived with him were probably his children. John (b.c.1780) carter at Riddell in Lilliesleaf Parish according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia. He was distinct from the man of the same name who was a ploughman at Bewlie Hill in 1801. John (d.1811) weaver in Hawick, son of Walter. John (b.1794/5) whip and thong maker on the Howegate. He lived at 8 Howegate, being there in 1841 and 1851, and was at 3 Brougham Place by 1861. He married Elizabeth Dryden (b.c.1801). Their children included: Christian (b.1820/1); James (b.1823/4), who was Cornet in 1846; Helen (b.1826/7); and Walter (b.1835), who was a shoemaker. He could be the John who was born to John in Cavers Parish in 1794, but he was also related to William, 'Wull the Cutler'. His sister Jenny is said to have gone to Flodden in about 1820 and returned with green twigs to adorn the Cornet's followers in the procession to the Games. John (b.1805/6) from Ancrum, he was a frameworker in Hawick. He was living on the High Street in 1841, at 'Facing Teviot' (i.e. off Teviot Road) in 1851. His wife was Helen and their children included Helen (b.1832/3), Robert (b.1836/7), Peter (b.1839/40), William (b.1844/5) and Sarah (b.1847/8). His son is probably the William of the Loan who in 1900 donated to the Museum a shilling of William III and 4 copper coins. John (19th C.) gamekeeper for the Earl of Minto. A story is told in the 1881 Border Counties' Magazine of how he kept a pet fox on a chain; it would deliberately scatter barley within reach so that it could catch a hen when it got close enough. John (b.1810/1) born in Edinburgh, he was a baker in Denholm. His shop was probably on Main Street. He married Margaret Eckford and their children included Helen, William, John and Catherine J. John (1827–69) of Darnick (near Melrose). Last major head of the family architects and builders business, John & Thomas Smith. They were responsible for many of the finest Victorian buildings around Melrose, as well as the North Brig in Hawick, the Wallace Statue at Dryburgh and the Hermitage Water Bridge. He was commissioned to make a survey of the Auld Brig of Hawick before it was demolished in 1851. He was also an early photographer, who took photographs of Queen Victoria's visit in 1867. He added an east wing to Darnick Tower. His sister Mary married John Elliot of Binks. The Smith Memorial Hall was built in Darnick in his memory. John (19th C.) one of the first professional cricketers in town, playing for the Wilton team in the late 1850s. Rev. John Anderson (1840–1911) born in Renfrewshire, son of William Fairley and Jane

Anderson. He studied in Edinburgh and Glasgow. He was assistant at Buckie Free Church and was ordained as minister of the Free Church in Bewcastle in 1873. In 1876 he moved to Newcastleton Free Kirk. In 1898 he was given a colleague and successor (Alexander Lowe) and retired from many of his duties. In 1894 he was involved in legal action, claiming he had been defrauded into making investments. In 1873 he married Jane W. Steele and in 1882 he secondly married Eliza J. Reid. John (1856–1904) son of Cornet James and sister of Margaret, the matriarch of the Watt family. He was Cornet in 1881, with his own father as Acting Father. He also served as Acting Father in 1886 (2 years after his own father served in this role). He married Annie Cowan, and their sons were: James Dryden; William, who died at Gallipoli; and Elliot Cowan, who wrote 'Mang Howes an Knowes'. A plumber by trade, he moved with his family to Old Trafford, Manchester in the 1890s. There he became the first Chairman of the Hawick Exiles' Club. Dying at a young age, he was buried in Hawick, being the first Cornet's coffin to be draped with the Burgh Standard. Rev. John (1859–1928) born at Haddington, son of John and Janet Young, he graduated M.A. from Glasgow University in 1888. He was a Glasgow City Missionary 1885–87, was licensed to preach by the Free Church Presbytery of Glasgow in 1889 and was assistant at Paisley St. George's. He was minister at Denholm Free Kirk from 1892 until his death. In 1908 he helped compile the notes of Rev. Duncan Stewart into the book 'The Covenanters of Teviotdale and Neighbouring Districts'. He married Agnes Hume. His daughter was a geography teacher at the High School in the 1950s and his grandson was a local vet. Joseph (18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His daughter Janet was baptised in 1761. Joseph (19th/20th C.) gas manager in Hawick. His daughter Annie was the 2nd wife of Robert Riddle Thompson. He may be the 'Mr Smith, gasworks' who in 1875 donated to the Museum an 'ancient sun-dial' as well as 3 silver coins. Rev. Malcolm (1860–91) from the Gillespie area in Glasgow, he graduated M.A. from Glasgow University in 1886 and B.D. in 1889. He was ordained as the 1st minister of Wilton South Kirk in 1890. However, about a year and a half later he drowned while swimming on holiday at Spittal (despite apparently being a strong swimmer). Some of his sermons and a memoriam were collected and published in Hawick in 1891. Margaret nee Murray (b.1875) daughter of Robert, carpenter at Blacklee, Hobkirk Parish. She married James, eldest son of Thomas Smith, tenant farmer at Tythehouse. They had 3 children, but her husband died as the result of an accident. She later was keeper of the Laidlaw Memorial Hall. Rev. Martin trained as a Pastor at Charlotte Chapel in Edinburgh, he became Pastor of Hawick Baptist Church in about 2018. Oliver (19th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. He married Mary Smith and their children included William (b.1832). Thomas (b.1835), with no mother's name given, may also have been his child. Oliver (19th C.) son of Thomas and Jane Oliver. He was a farm steward at Langraw in 1861. He married Helen Waters in Hobkirk in 1833 and their children included: Jane Oliver (b.1837); Alexander (b.1839); James (b.1841); John (b.1843); Oliver (b.1845); Henry (b.1848); Janet (b.1850); and Helen (b.1853). The last 3 children were baptised in Southdean Parish. Oliver (19th C.) resident of Grahamston, Falkirk, who probably had a local connection. In 1865 he donated 5 weapons to the Museum: 'blunderbuss used by the last of the mail coach guards; sword from Sheriffmuir battle field; sword stamped, 'A. Ferrara', from Falkirk battle field; Indian cutlass from Cawnpore; Indian spear, from Owhyhee'. He also donated an American gold dollar, 12 silver coins and 20 copper coins in 1865 and a 1797 twopenny piece in 1866. Patrick (15th C.) listed in 1463/4 among the men who were rewarded by the King for assisting in the capture of John Douglas of Balveny, probably part of the force led by Scott of Buccleuch. He is recorded as 'Patricius Smyth'. The other men were Scotts, Turnbulls, a Gledstains, a Langlands, a Dalgleish etc., and so he is probably also local. Patrick (17th/18th C.) recorded as teacher at a private school at Belses in 1719. Patrick (18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His children included Patrick (b.1757) and Andrew (b.1760). Peter (18th/19th C.) brother of Thomas (tenant of Hartshaugh Mill), he was factor to Elliot of Wolfelee. He was resident in Kirknowe in Hobkirk Parish in 1788 and 1790 when he had children baptised. He was also tenant of Kirknowe in 1797, when he owned 2 horses. In 1807 he bought the lands of Hobkirk Kirkstile (part of Kirknowe) and farmed there. He married and had at least 7 children: Peter (b.1788), who married Helen Scott; Isobel (b.1789); Betty (b.1790); Jane; Margaret (b.1797); Thomas (b.1798); and Walter (possibly b.1802), who emigrated to America. James (b.1793) was probably also his child. Peter (b.1780) eldest son of Thomas and Mary Scott,

'the Flooer o Rankleburn'. He is probably the Peter recorded at Bankend on the 1801 ballot for the Militia. He farmed at Harwood Mill. He was probably the Peter at 'Harrot' who subscribed to 6 copies of William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. He married Ellen Turnbull, whose sister Mary married his brother Archibald. They had a large family, including: Thomas (b.1801); Walter (b.1803); Peter (b.1804); Archibald (b.1806); Elizabeth (b.1808), who married J. Blake; Mary; Andrew (b.1812); William (b.1814); Mark (b.1815), who died at Lanton; Turnbull (1816–79), farm steward, who died at Hawick; Nelly (b.1818), who married W. Elliot; and Isobel (1821–1898), who died in Hawick. He is said to have been very strict in all things relating to religion. Peter (b.1788) eldest son of Peter, he was factor for James Elliot of Wolfelee in the early 1800s and lived at Kirknowe. He was farmer at Kirknowe in 1841 and in 1851 was farming 170 acres and employing 4 labourers. In 1823 he married Helen Scott, one of the Scotts of Woodhouse and related to the Turnbulls who farmed at Spittal. Their children were: Isobel or Isabella (1824–49), who married Robert, son of Robert Stewart, farmer at Hawthornside; Peter (b.1827), who married Isobel Oliver; Betty (b.1830); John (b.1832); and Agnes Scott (b.1835). Peter (1804–86) son of Peter, who was the eldest son of Thomas. He became farmer at Harwood Mill, where he was born. In 1841 he was an agricultural labourer at Parkhead in Roberton Parish, in 1851 was at Hunthill and in 1861 he was farm steward at Greenriver. His cousin Mary married Robert Purdom of Hawick. He himself married Elizabeth 'Betty' Ronaldson Dunlop in Coldstream. Their children were: Mary (b.c.1839); Peter (b.1841), who died at Jarrow-on-Tyne; Helen Turnbull ('Ellen', b.1843), who married A. Telfer; Williamina (or Mina, b.1847), who married Sandbed baker John Young (and was mother-in-law of J.E.D. Murray); and Elizabeth (or Betsy, b.1852), who emigrated to Queensland. There is a story told of him encountering a 'spunkie' (i.e. 'will-o'-the-wisp') when riding past Mackside Demmings. He was active until a few years before his death, which occurred at Swanshiel. Peter (b.1825/6) toll-bar keeper at Deanbrae in 1851. His wife was Margaret and they had a daughter, Dorothy. Robert (16th C.) recorded in 1541 on a list of associates of James Douglas of Cavers when he complained about his farm of Whitriggs being burned by Walter Scott of Branxholme. He was probably a tenant of Douglas of Cavers. He may be related to the two Thomases who were also listed. Robert (17th C.) Hawick Councillor who signed the 1640 'Act of Bailies and Council'. Robert (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was recorded as a resident of Whitfield in 1751 and 1769. He was also farmer in Newton, in Wilton Parish. He became tenant in Mervinslaw in about 1754. He is probably the Robert who witnessed a baptism for James Pott, resident of Borthaugh, in 1751. He was one of the founders of the secession church, which met in Hawick in 1763. In 1764 he was said to have been a former tenant of Murray of Philiphaugh who resolved an issue over use of the Common with James Robson, tenant of Calaburn. He may be the Robert who is recorded as formerly being in possession of an enclosure that was part of Silverbuthall, according to the 1811 Land Tax Rolls. He married Alison Irvine (or 'Irwin') in 1748, the marriage being proclaimed in Wilton and Ancrum Parishes; she could be the daughter of Thomas Irvine and Jean Irvine, baptised in Wilton in 1725 and potentially the sister of the wife of James Scott of Silverbuthall and Boonraw). Their children included: John (b.1749); Thomas (b.1751); Walter (b.1753); James (b.1755); Janet (b.1758); Nelly (b.1762); Robert (b.1764); and Thomas (again, b.1769). The witnesses in 1751 were James Dryden and Walter Scott. The witnesses in 1769 were James Scott (probably the farmer at Boonraw, who was also an Anti-Burgher) and Walter Irvine (who was surely related to his wife), the baptism carried out by Mr. Arnot, who had previously been connected with the Green Kirk in Hawick. Robert (18th C.) resident of Minto Parish. In 1780 it is recorded that he was tenant of ' 'House and yard', with rent of 10s. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, living at Silverbuthall in 1791. He married Isobel Ormiston and their children included: Esther (b.1791); and Robert (b.1794). Robert (18th/19th C.) slater in Hawick. His employee David Reid was recorded on the ballot for the Militia in 1801. Robert (18th/19th C.) farmer at 'Swin' in Kirkton Parish, possibly the same place as 'Swinsteid'. He is recorded there on the Horse Tax Rolls of 1797 as owner of 2 horses. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Stonedge in Hobkirk Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book in 1799. Robert (19th C.) married Margaret Miller in Hobkirk in 1833. Robert (b.1816/7) originally from Maxton, he married Helen Redpath in Hobkirk in 1840. He was living with his wife at Weens Cottages in 1851 and 1861. His mother Mary was living with them in 1861. Robert (b.1816/7) from Lanarkshire, he was an agricultural labourer. He was living at Greenbank Cottages in 1861. His wife was Barbara and their children included Alexander, Walter, Jane, John, Elizabeth and Margaret Finlay. Perhaps he is the 'R. Smith' who in 1867 donated to the Museum 2 sliver coins found at Wollrig. Robert (b.1837/8) drystane dyker in the Hawick area around the 1860s. In the 1861 census he was in Wilton Parish, married to Mary and with daughter Janet. Robert Tait (d.1958) baker and rugby player. He played prop and was capped 7 times for Scotland in 1929 and 1930. He married Jenny Ferguson, who wrote the music for 'Hurrah! For the Cornet'. Spending some time in Manchester, in the late 1930s he returned to Hawick and took over the bakery business of W. & R. Johnstone on Bridge Street. Ronald 'Ron' High School Geography teacher who was Assistant Headteacher 1984–2002. He has been heavily involved in Hawick R.F.C., co-editing 'The Green Machine: 125 years of Hawick rugby' (1998) and also 'Glimpses of Green' (2002). He was a Scottish Borders Councillor and from 2011 until 2013 served as Hawick's Honorary Provost. He was Rotary Club President from 2020 and also an Elder of Teviot Church. Stephen (1946/7–) teacher at Bonhester and Newcastleton Schools, he also worked in Hawick as a social worker for 14 years. He wrote the science-fiction novel 'Creation Farm' in 2014, a collection of stories 'Not for Real' in 2023, and also books of poetry. He lives in Chester, is an elder of Hobkirk and Southdean Church, has been President of the Rulewater Horticultural Society, records local newspapers for the Borders Talking Newspaper and sings with the P.S.A. Male Voice Choir. Thomas (16th C.) name of 2 men recorded in 1541 on a list of tenants and other associates of James Douglas of Cavers when he complained about his farm of Whitriggs being burned by Walter Scott of Branxholme. They may have been related to Robert, who was also named. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Margaret Gray and their daughter Bessie was baptised in 1690. The witnesses were James Murray and William Smith. Thomas (17th/18th C.) born at Wells in Rulewater. He was described in 1717 as 'now keeper of ane puppie pleay' (perhaps a dog entertainment of some kind) when he was fined for assault in Hawick. Thomas (18th C.) footman at Knowe in Minto Parish in 1785, when he was working for Thomas Turnbull. Thomas (1757–1827) brother of Peter, it is unclear where the previous generation came from. He was tenant at Hartshaugh Mill when his children were baptised in 1785 and 1788. He was listed as miller on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when he was owner of 2 horses. His son Archibald was listed on the Militia ballot in 1801. He is still listed as miller of Hartshaugh Mill in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. He married Mary Scott, the 'Flower of Rankleburn'. Their children were: Peter (b.1780), who married Ellen Turnbull of Harwood Mill; Patrick (b.1781); Robert; Archibald (b.1782), who later emigrated to America; Thomas (b.1784); Andrew (b.1785); Isobel (b.1787); Walter (b.1788), who may have died young; Betty (b.1790); Margaret (b.1791), who married William Crozier; Mary (b.1793), who married Robert Purdom of Hawick in 1817; and Jane (or 'Jean', b.1795), who married John Dalgleish. He secondly married Jane (or 'Jeany') Oliver in Southdean Parish in 1807. Their children were: Oliver (b.1809), who married Helen Waters and emigrated to America; James (b.1810), who married Elizabeth Henderson; Mina, who married W. Telfer, farmer at Roundabouts; Elizabeth, who died in 1864, and may have been the same as Betty; William, who emigrated to New Zealand; and another Oliver, who may have been a twin of William and died young. He is probably the 'T. Smith' whose mother is recorded dying in Hobkirk in 1815. Thomas (18th/19th C.) from England, in 1789 he married Margaret Paterson in Roberton Parish. Their son Thomas (b.1790) was baptised in Roberton. Thomas. (18th/19th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish. His children included James (b.1795). Thomas P. (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Heronhaa near Southfield. He was recorded at Winnington in 1798 and Winningtonrig in 1800. In 1797 he married 'Grizzle' (or Grizel) Tait, the marriage being recorded in both Kirkton and Wilton Parishes. They had 5 children: Sir Andrew (1797–1872), army surgeon and famous zoologist; Joan (b.1800); Barbara (b.1802); James (b.1804); and Agnes Anne (b.1807). All their children's births were recorded in Kirkton Parish, with at least the first 2 baptisms carried out by James Henderson of East Bank Kirk. He may also be the Thomas whose son James was baptised in Hobkrik Parish in 1810. Rev. Thomas (1828–1901) born at Powfoot in Dumfriesshire, son of John and Marion Murray. He was educated at Edinburgh University and licensed by Annan Presbytery . He was ordained as minister of Ewes Kirk 1853 and remained there until his death. In 1856 he married Margaret, daughter of William Sutherland Fraser, jeweller in Edinburgh. Their children were: Agnes (1857–1913), who married Alexander Simson from Melrose; and Marion (b.1860), who married James Calder, doctor in Jamaica. Thomas (b.1827/8) born in Cavers Parish, son of blacksmith James. He was a watchmaker on the Howegate (near the top of the east side), listed in the 1851 census and in Slater's 1852 directory. His wife was Isabella. Thomas 'Tom' (b.1837) son of James and Elizabeth Henderson, and grandson of miller Thomas. He is recorded as a keen follower of the Jedforest Hunt in the latter part of the 19th century. He was tenant farmer at Tythehouse in Hobkirk Parish. He married a distant cousin, Mary Smith. Their children were: James Turnbull; Elizabeth; Thomas, who emigrated to Canada; and Peter Smith, who farmed at Coldtown. Thomas Aird (b.1854) son of William and Isabell Aird, who was sister of Thomas Aird. He was brought up at Bridgehaugh near Selkirk. He became tenant farmer at Kirkton and Bedrule, remaining at Bedrule 1898–1921. He was a keen hunter and said to be a heavy man, requiring specially bred horses. He had at least 3 children, Isabel, Jessie and William (who all followed the Jedforest Hunt when young). Thomas 'Tom' (19th C.) tenant farmer at Tythehouse. He was a keen supporter of the Jedforest Hunt. His eldest son was James. Thomas (b.c.1870) son of John James, who was born in Malta, and Isabella Morrison. Although born in County Durham, he grew up in Hawick, where his father was a hand-loom weaver and later publican. He also worked as a spirit merchant in Hawick. In 1901 he married Margaret, daughter of James Blaikie. Their son John James was born in Wilton in 1902. About 1907 he emigrated to Rainy River, Ontario, his wife coming later. Thomas 'Tom' (19th/20th C.) local bowler, who also laid out at least 30 greens, including the one for Wilton Bolwing Club. Turnbull (1816–79) son of Peter and grandson of the first known Thomas of Rulewater. He was a farm steward. In 1877 he was at Branxholme when he donated 7 copper coins to the Museum. He died in Hawick. Walter (d.bef. 1811) weaver in Hawick. He was on the subscription list for Caw's 'Poetical Museum' (1784). He could be the son of John and Betty 'Shien' born in Hawick Parish in 1762. He may also be the Walter who married Helen Gibson in Hawick in 1789 and had an unnamed child baptised in Hawick. His son John, also a weaver, died in 1811. Walter (18th/19th C.) servant at Tythehouse in Hobkirk Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book in 1799. He may be the Walter whose children, baptised in Hobkirk Parish, included William (b.1798), Francis (b.1800), Francis (again, b.1801), Walter (b.1802), John (b.1814) and Thomas (b.1815). Walter (b.1787/8) born in Hobkirk Parish, he was farmer at Scaw Mill near the Dean. He may have been son of John, who was previously at Scaw Mill. He was recorded as miller there in Pigot's 1825/6 and 1837 directories. He was listed among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1835–41. He was farmer there on the 1841 census, married to Janet and with daughter Mary. He was still alive in 1861. Thomas, who was living at Scaw Mill Stable in 1841 may have been his son. Walter (b.1792/3) thong maker of the High Street, according to the 1841 and 1851 censuses. In 1841 he was at Miller's Close. He married Janet Oliver in 1814 and their children included Helen and Isabella. His mother may have been Helen. He was a widower by 1851. Walter (d.1840) weaver in Hawick. Walter (19th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. He married Elizabeth Taylor in 1836 and their daughter Janet was baptised in 1837. Walter (b.c.1805) agricultural labourer in Hobkirk Parish. He was at Hallrule in 1841. His wife was Margaret and their children included Janet (b.1829/30), John (b.1831/2), Andrew (b.1836/7) and Isabella (b.1839/40). Walter (19th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. He married Margaret 'Phorson' and their son Robert was baptised in 1852. William (16th C.) servant to Walter Scott of Branxholme. In 1581 he witnessed a transaction in Selkirk involving John Geddes in Branxholme. William (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Marion 'Hellin' (possibly 'Helm') in 1655 and their children included: George (b.1656); and Agnes (b.1660). Probably the same William witnessed a baptism for Thomas in 1690. William (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Margaret Anderson and their son Thomas was baptised in 1660. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living in Denholm in 1721, 1723, 1726 and 1729. He may be the William who got married in Kirkton in 1712 (with no wife's name given). His children may have included Margaret (b.1713), Marion (b.1715), George (b.1721), John (b.1723), Helen (b.1726), Euphan (b.1729), Bessie (b.1731) and Jane (b.1735). Perhaps the same William was recorded at Denholm in 1715. William (18th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. His daughter Charlotte was baptised in 1762. William 'Wull the Cutler' (1766–c.1833) son of John and Betty 'Chine' and was related to the Hawick family that produced 2 Cornets in the 19th century. He was a wright by trade, making the first 'spinning jennies' in Hawick, but must have specialised in cutlery at some point. He was known as a very snappy dresser in the late 18th century, and was particularly vain about his hair. He apparently took the first taste of the 'Auld Brig gin' (a keg of water) in the joke prepetrated on the exciseman by Wat Inglis. He took up fishing late in life. He is listed in Pigot's 1825/6 directory as 'cutler & basket maker' on the High Street. He was nephew of Catherine Cheyne, who was longtime domestic servant of the Gledstains of Hilliesland; from her he gained possession of the 'Gledstane Bible', which he passed on to merchant Andrew Irvine. There is a portrait of him by Adam Brown (presented to the Museum in 1862), showing him as an angler. W.N. Kennedy wrote about him, the article being published in 1868 – 'Auld Cash and Tufty blithely trip, Lean Yeddie Gibson's creel is full, Jamie Tamson and John the Dip Gang hand in hand wi' Cutler Wull' [HI]. William (b.c.1780) wright in Hawick according to the ballot for the Militia in 1801. It is unclear how he was related to other Smiths. William (c.1785–1857) born in Oxnam Parish, son of John. He was probably brother of James, blacksmith in Hawick. He was a blacksmith in Denholm, listed on Pigot's 1825/6 and 1837 directories. He is also listed in 1835 as a joint proprietor in Denholm with William Barrie, hosier. He probably lived on Westside. His wife was Elizabeth Anandale, and their children included Catherine and Margaret. He may be the William, at Hayknowe, whose model plough (for which he won a premium at Kelso in 1848) was presented to the Museum in 1857. He knew John Leyden and Sir David Brewster, and was known for his strong literary tastes, as well as his ontributions to the local flower show. William (19th C.) perhaps born on the English side of the Border, he married Mary, daughter of William Laidlaw in Hobkirk Parish in 1827. Their children were: James; Joan; William; Helen (b.1829), who married William Stewart in Hawthornside; Thomas (b.1831); Anne (b.1833); and Mary (b.1836). His sister Mary married William Redpath, who worked at Weens. William (19th C.) blacksmith of Hawick, probably son of James. He is listed in the 1835 electoral roll as joint tenant along with James. In Pigot's 1837 directory 'Jas. & Wm. Smith' are listed as blacksmiths on Melgund Place. He does not appear on the censuses of 1841–61, but is listed in Rutherford's 1866 directory as blacksmith on Melgund Place. William (b.1803/4) from Stow, he was a mason living at Commonside Bankhead in 1841 and 'Bowanhillbridge' in 1851. His wife was Isabel and their children included Bridget, William, Alexander, Adam and Helen. William (19th C.) married Jane Whillans in Southdean in 1855. William (b.1822/3) from England, he was listed as 'Railway Gaffer' in Newcastleton in 1861. He was on South Hermitage Street, lodging with carter Francis Scott. He is probably the Bill Smith who was in charge of bringing the first locomotive engine by road from Carlisle; the engine bogged down in mud and toppled a number of times, falling on him and killing him. William (b.1831/2) from Selkirk, son of John and Margaret. In 1861 he was a ploughman living at Easter Fodderle Cottages in Hobkirk Parish. He was already a widower and had children Isabella (b.1856/7) and John (b.1857/8). William (19th C.) farmer at Learmouth, Cornhill. In the 1860s he was a non-resident voter in Cavers Parish. Rev. William Grierson (d.1870) born in Edinburgh, eldest son of James. He was educated at Glasgow University and ordained minister of Fintry in 1840. He was presented to Ashkirk Parish by Gilbert John, Earl of Minto and became minister there in 1861. He married Hannah Grierson of Bridgenorth, who died in 1891. They had a son Alfred William, who died young. He wrote a description of Fintry Parish. William (19th C.) resident of Albion Place. In 1866 he donated 1 Chinese and 5 British coins to the Museum. Rev. William (b.1840) born in Oldhamstocks, son of David and Ann Thompson. He graduated M.A. from the University of Edinburgh in 1868. He was licentiate at Saughtree Kirk 1870–77. He was ordained as minister of Dunsyre in 1877. William Walter (1852–1942) born in Hawick, son of gamekeeper Thomas and Ellen Robson. He worked as gardener in various English country houses and emigrated to New Zealand in about 1875. He continued to work as a gardener. He held the view that many native species would be driven extinct by the effects of colonisation and so began to collect native plants, insects, Maori artefacts and other items. He wrote extensive notes, some of which were published, and several species were named after him. In 1903 he was appointed to the commission charged with putting the Scenery Conservation Act into effect. He was later appointed curator of Pukekura Park,

New Plymouth. It appears he was not easy to work with, holding down positions typically for only a few years at a time. However, he remained a sought-out authority on new Zealand natural history until his death, at New Plymouth, in his 90th year. He married Mary Foreman and had at least 7 children. Rev. William (1855–91) born in St. Fergus, Peterhead, son of a blacksmith. He studied at the Free Church College in Aberdeen and was ordained by the English Presbyterian Church in Scarborough. He then assisted at several churches, included Roberton. He came to Wolfelee Free Kirk to help while Rev. William Russell was ill in 1890. He was then inducted in 1891 (although some of the congregation objected that he was not himself in good enough health to take on the full task). He collapsed in the middle of his second sermon as minister and died about a month later, leaving a widow and young child. He married Agnes Shewan Kerr and their only child was John Kerr (b.1890), who died in infancy. William (1893/4–1915) son of John and Annie Cowan, brother of Elliot and James. He became a calico designer in Manchester, but enlisted with the Territorials in Hawick, becoming a Corporal in the 1/4th K.O.S.B. He was was killed at Gallipoli in the disastrous offensive of 12th July 1915. His name is recorded on the Helles Memorial (formerly written 'Smycht' and other variants).

Smith an Telford's (smith-an-tel-furdz) n. hosiery factory on Lothian Street. It consists of several parts of different height, built over a period of time in the early 20th century. One section has a mansard roof, a 'modern movement' roof, and there are windows on the curved corner where Lothian Street meets Allars Bank. Recently the building was used by Douglas, and then by an antique dealers.

S.M.T. (es-em-tee) n. Scottish Motor Traction Company, which took over the main Hawick coach routes from Border Motor Transport about 1930, and ran bus service for about 50 years. They acquired the Borders-based company Brooke and Amos in 1926 and later Adam Graham and the Border Motor Transport Co. As well as the Edinburgh to Carlisle service, they ran bus lines around Hawick, as well as transporting mill workers. The firm became Scottish Omnibuses in 1949 and the local fleet was known as Eastern Scottish. The colours of the bus fleet were a distinctive green, later becoming green and cream. After de-regulation of bus services, the name of the operator (and the quality of service) changed several times, e.g. to Lowland Scottish and First. The offices were in Oliver Place and the main bus depot was in Dovecote Street, which closed in the 1980s.

smugglin (smu-glin, -gu-lin) n. smuggling, the trade in goods without paying duties. This was rampant in the Hawick area in the 17th and 18th centuries and on into the 19th. Before the Union, the difference in duties meant that salt, skins and malt were smuggled into England, and wool smuggled into Scotland. In the late 18th and early 19th centuries there was a brisk local business in smuggling whisky south of the Border, because of the large difference in duties. This was particularly after the increase on whisky duty in 1799. The favourite source of goods locally was from Capt. Daniel Fleury, who would land his boat at Boulmer in Northumberland, from where 'Boomermen' would secretly carry goods over the Border. In addition to Boulmer, other villages used as ports were Crastor and Embleton. There was also a vigorous trade in black market salt, again encouraged by increased taxation. Smugglers were pursued by the excise officers. In the 18th century there was a collector, 2 supervisors and 18 officers in Teviotdale, and by the 19th century there were 28 mounted Revenue Officers employed in Roxburghshire. In 1836 the minister of Hobkirk records that 'smuggling and illicit distilling are not now practised'. Robert Murray wrote an article on the topic in 1875.

smuik (smūk, smik) n., arch. smoke, fumes, v., arch. to smoke, emit fumes – 'The mill chimlih smuiks leike a killogie' [ECS], to fumigate, suffocate with smoke – 'Thay've been ti smuik the hoose efter the fivver (fever)' [ECS], particularly to smoke out insects – 'To Smook, Smuik, To suffocate by means of sulphur; a term applied to the barbarous mode of destroying bees in order to gain their honey; or, as it is expressed, to 'put them doun', Teviotd.' [JoJ], 'Whan div ee smuik the beis?' [ECS] (also smook).

snab (snawb) n., arch. a cobbler, shoemaker.

snab (snawb) n., arch. a rugged rise, rocky slope, steep ascent (Coldwell Snab is near Hermitage Castle).

Snaberlee (snā-bur-lee) n. area just to the east of where the Hermitage Water joins the Liddel, marked as 'Snaberlee Rig' on modern Ordnance Survey maps. There was formerly a small thatched cottage at Snaberlee Brae, inhabited by a lone woman until the late 19th century. In the early 1750s this was the site of open air sermons as part of the Secession movement in this parish. The farm was acquired by William Manderson from the Laird of Whithaugh and in 1811 valued at £23 8s (the origin of the name is probably from the Old Norse personal name 'Snæbjorn'; it occurs as 'Snabirly' on Blaeu's 1662 map and is 'Snaberly' on Stobie's 1770 map; it is 'Sunaberlie' in 1665, 'Snaberlie' in 1666 and 'Snaberly' in 1811).

the Snoot Kirk (thu-snoo'-kirk) n. small former church in the Borthwick valley, built shortly after the Disruption of 1843 as Roberton Free Church, also known as Roberton United Presbyterian Kirk. The dissenting congregation first held meetings in the joiner's yard at Deanburnhaugh, before being given the ground at Parkhillhaugh by John Chisholme, with the church being built very quickly. It was reached from the main road via a footbridge. By 1852 the declining rural population meant that the church was reduced to a preaching station; it picked up again later, but always had a struggling existence. It switched from Selkirk Presbytery to Jedburgh Presbytery in 1880. The building was renovated in 1908/9, when a vestry was also built. It continued to be used as a church until 1927, and the congregation formally merged with Roberton Kirk in 1930. The land reverted to the Chisholme estate and was gifted to the Scottish Youth Hostel Association by Mr. Bruce of Chisholme in 1935. It was then used by the Youth Hostel Association, particularly as a pony trekking centre. The building succumbed to dry rot in the mid-1990s. A roll of the ministers is: John Dow 1845–52; James Logan around 1860; Thomas W. Paterson 1889–1900; Alexander Cameron 1906–11; David Brunton 1912–25.

the Snuffin (thu-snu-fin) n. ceremony taking place at the Kirkstile, near the site of the western end of the Auld Brig, early on the Friday morning of the Common Riding. Snuff is dispensed to the waiting crowd, harkening back to an old social custom of passing round the snuff box during some convenient halt in any proceedings. There is also a more fanciful story told that when the band returned from Hornshole in 1514 they found an old man partaking of snuff on the Auld Brig (long before tobacco came to the old world!). Formerly the ceremony took place on the Thursday evening on the Auld Brig, and was simply a private habit indulged in by the Burgh Officers and band members. It slowly became an accepted part of the traditions. After the Auld Brig was demolished in 1851 it was discontinued for several years, but subsequently restarted through the efforts of William Norman Kennedy, who provided a horn mull. The Thursday evening ceremony ceased in the 1870s. In 1881 the ceremony is recorded involving 'many hundreds'. The ceremony was again revived by the Ceremonial Committee in 1887, when the sons of W.N. Kennedy undertook to again be at the Snuffing with their father's horn mull. George O. Murray also provided a horn mull in 1889, or possibly just the snuff. Since those days the Snuffing has grown in popularity, was extended to the Friday morning, and now is restricted to the Friday morning only. The original horn mull is still in use. Since 1921 the song-singer has been in charge of distributing loose snuff from the horn, in a melee at the Kirkstile, protected by two bodyguards! This happens when the Drums and Fifes reach the site of the Auld Brig, shortly after 6 a.m. After the Song Singer reaches the Tower Knowe he throws small packets of snuff down from a window to the people below; these packets are highly sought after, even although the taking of snuff is now a thing of the past. It is traditional for the crowds to disperse to nearby hostelries for rum and milk refreshments afterwards. There is a short film clip showing the Snuffing of 1905 and others in 1929, 1932, 1933, 1934 and 1937 – 'It was mebbe a melee ootseide bit in the shop itsel was leike the snuffin at the Commin Ridin!' [HEx1966], 'At Snuffin' when ee hear the drum Efter ee've hed milk an rum Want ti laugh, want ti greet, Want ti be nimble on eer feet' [MB], 'A had never ever seen the Snuffin ceremony until the first time that A turned up' [HD].

the Solway (thu-sol-wā) n. Solway Firth, the estuary far to the west, which represents the Border between Scotland and England. It is fed by many rivers and streams, including the Liddel – '. . . Was neither the scream of the grey sea-mew Seeking the Solway, nor yet the cry Of the restless whaup as it circled by' [WHO].

Solway Moss (sol-wā-mos) n. level, boggy area between Longtown and Gretna. It was the site of a battle in 1542, where the English army under Sir Thomas Wharton routed the much larger Scottish army. Only a small number of men were killed, with many Scots (including the Borderers apparently) surrendering to the English, and some drowning in flight. It is said that this defeat contributed to the death of James V.

Somervel see Somerville

Somerville (su-mur-vil) n. Alexander (18th/19th C.) tenant farmer at Lees in Wilton Parish. He married Janet Anderson in 1811 and their children include: William (b.1813); and James (b.1816). The 1813 baptism was witnessed by James Somerville, Nanny Thomson and Nanny Mein. Euphemia nee Eckford (d.1928) daughter of Hawick grocer John Eckford, she married George, who was a cousin of Sir James A.H. Murray. She lived in Denholm and bequeathed money, which was used to purchase property, including buildings around the arch on Sunnyside, where she had lived. It was hoped that rental would maintain the Somerville Trust, which supplied a nurse for Denholm, but eventually the moneys dwindled and the properties were sold. Hugh (17th/18th C.) 'agent' who witnessed baptisms for John Ekron in 1721 and 1725. John (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 when Walter, son of Walter Scott of Headshaw had remission for resetting him in his crimes. Mary nee Fairfax (1780–1872) daughter of Sir William Fairfax (one of Nelson's Captains), who lived at Burntisland in Fife, she was born in the Manse at Jedburgh, home of her mother's sister Martha Charters and Rev. Thomas Somerville. In 1804 she married a naval officer, Samuel Greig (Russian Consul for Britain, whose father had been the man who had brought Hobkirk's Adam Armstrong to Russia), who was a distant cousin; he died 3 years later. She was a regular visitor in Jedburgh, where she was taught Latin and other subjects by her uncle. She was in Jedburgh on the evening of the False Alarm of 1804. She had a telescope made by James Veitch of Inchbonny, was well acquainted with Sir David Brewster and also got to know Sir Walter Scott. In her widowhood she became further acquainted with mathematics, with the encouragement of William Wallace. In 1812 she secondly married her cousin William Somerville (1771–1860), eldest son of Dr. Thos.; he was a widower, an army surgeon (later physician to Chelsea Hospital) and an amateur scientist who encouraged his new wife's studies. The couple lived for several years in Edinburgh before moving to London; among their circle of friends there were influential scientists such as Thomas Young, John Herschel and Charles Babbage. Despite only 1 year of formal education, she educated herself at the family's Burntisland home and became a mathematician and science writer. In fact she has the distinction of being the first person to whom the word 'scientist' was applied, in 1834 in a review of her textbook 'On the Connexion of the Physical Sciences' (which ran to 10 editions). She published only 3 scientific papers in her lifetime (still quite unusual for a woman at that time), but contributed significantly through books. She translated and annotated a technical version of Laplace's work, hypothesized a planet perturbing the orbit of Uranus (which led to the discovery of Neptune), and wrote a popular geography and geology textbook. She was elected an honorary member of the Royal Astronomical Society and received many other honours; although the Royal Society forbade the appointment of female fellows, they commissioned a bust of her for their rooms in 1824. She spent most of the time from 1838 living in Italy. She was a great supporter of women's education, and Somerville College, Oxford was named after her. She also has an asteroid and lunar crater named in her honour. A history of her life was written by her daughter Martha. She is buried in Naples. Her children were: Woronzow Grieg (1805–65), a barrister; William George Grieg (1806–14); Margaret Farquhar Somerville (1813–23); Thomas Somerville (1814–15); Martha Charters Somerville (1815–79); and Mary Charlotte Somerville (1817–75). Robert (16th/17th C.) recorded 'in ye Midle' in 1623, when Thomas Hood in Ancrum was accused of stealing 2 cows 7 years earlier from him. This was from lands at 'Plassadge' in England, the cattle belonging to him and Walter Scott of Todrig. It is unclear if he was tenant in Middle in Cavers Parish or elsewhere. Rev. Thomas S. (d.bef. 1710) minister of Cavers. He was son of James, who was second son of Sir James of Cambusnethan. He studied at St. Salvator's College and St. Andrews University, where he graduated in 1666. He was presented to Cavers in 1674 and ordained there in the following year. It is recorded that the Presbytery had to swear him in at the 'kirk-stile', since the church and churchyard were locked up and no keys were to be had from the house of Sir William Douglas of Cavers. The Presbytery were also met by a number of women in the churchyard bearing stones, which they threatened to throw, and called them 'soul murderers and the devil's servants'. Given the Covenanting support in Cavers Parish, it is clear that the new Episcopalian minister was not popular! In 1689 he refused to pray for William and Mary and read the Proclamation of the Estates (i.e. refused to embrace the return to Presbyterianism), but he may have continued as minister until 1693 (precisely what the arrangement was is unclear, since there was great confusion after the Revolution). He then moved to Hawick, where he continued to preach (probably in his own lodgings) to some adherents of Episcopalianism and the exiled James II. This group included members of the Gledstains and Chisholme families. Baptisms are recorded by him in Hawick in 1694 (for the Gledstains) and 1697. He was listed as 'Mr Tho. Sumervaill', living on the west-side of Hawick, on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. In 1696 he witnessed the will of Bessie Scott, widow to Walter Scott of Whitehaugh. He is said to have ministered in Hawick along with Francis Scott, ousted minister of Hassendean, and a meeting house was opened at the Kirk Wynd (or Playlaw) after the passing of the Act of Toleration in 1712 (but he must already have been dead by then). He may also have assisted Rev. John Langlands until about 1700. He married Miss Burnside and their son William was minister of Hawick (i.e., trained as a Presbyterian, despite he himself remaining true to his Episcopalian principles), while their daughter Dorothia married William Hadden, one of the masters of Edinburgh High School in 1710, and they had one other daughter. Rev. Dr. Thomas (1741–1830) historian, born in Hawick, 5th child and only son of Rev. William. He was orphaned at about age 17 and educated in Hawick, Jedburgh and at Edinburgh University. One of his close early friends was Samuel Charters, who would become minister at Wilton (and whose cousin he would marry). After his father died he was involved in the litigation to claim money from the Whitehaugh estate, with his father's 2nd wife being Isobel Scott, heiress of Whitehaugh. He was licensed by the Presbytery of Edinburgh in 1764 and acted as substitute at the Tron Kirk for 9 months. He was presented to Minto Parish in late 1766 by Sir Gilbert Elliot of Minto, becoming minister there early the following year. He was also for a while tutor of the 2 sons at Minto House (one of whom would become the 1st Earl of Minto). He was presented to Jedburgh in 1772, translated there the following year (following some objections over patronage), and this is where he spent the rest of his life. He was recorded there in the Horse Tax Rolls in the 1780s. He obtained a doctorate from St. Andrews University in 1789 and became one of his Majesty's Chaplains for Scotland in 1793. He was arrested while visiting the House of Commons about 1798, being mistaken for the accomplice of a notorious swindler. In 1798 he was offered the Chair of Church History at Edinburgh University, but declined, and had a yearly pension from 1800. He became a member of the Jedforest Club in 1813. He was also a Fellow of the Royal Society of Edinburgh. He wrote several political and historical books, including 'Candid Thought on American Independence' (1780), 'The History of Political Transactions and of Parties from the Restoration of King Charles II to the Death of King William III' (1792), 'Observations on the Constitution and State of Britain' (1793), 'The Effects of the French Revolution with respect to the interests of humanity, liberty, religion, and morality' (1793) and 'The History of Great Britain, during the Reign of Queen Anne' (1798), as well as several sermons published in Kelso, Hawick and Edinburgh. He also wrote descriptions of Jedburgh and Ancrum for the Statistical Accounts. His posthumously published book 'My own life and times 1741–1814' (1861) contains some valuable anectodes relating to Hawick in the latter 18th century, and describes some aspects of everyday life in the neighbourhood in those times. He married Martha Charters (daughter of Samuel, Solicitor of Customs for Scotland), who died in 1809 and they had 3 sons: William, Inspector of Military Hospitals, and second husband of his niece by marriage, Mary Somerville the mathematician; Samuel, solicitor; and James Burges, who died young. They also had 4 daughters: Christian, who married Walter Riddell of Friar's Glen, 3rd son of Patrick Riddell of Muselee; Janet (or Jenny), who married Joseph Pringle of Ferney Green, Consul General at Medeira, and secondly Lieut.-Gen. Henry Elliot of Rosebank (son of Capt. Robert, brother of the Laird of Harwood); Margaret (d.1843); and Martha, who married William Rutherford, solicitor of Jedburgh. His wife is said to have been a clever woman, who took great care with the education of her children, who were taught by David Brewster (later Sir David). When he died he was 'father of the church', i.e. the oldest serving minister, in his 90th year. He is buried in Jedburgh Abbey. Sir William (12th/13th C.) son of William of Carnwath. It is said that during the reign of William the Lion he slew a fearful monster, which was terrorising the district of Linton; the place was known as Wormington, and the event is commemorated in a carved stone in wall of the parish church. He was 'Willelmo de Sumerville' when he witnessed the granting of the Church of Molle to Kelso Abbey in the mid-1100s. In 1174 he had the lands conferred on him by the King. He also became Sheriff of Roxburghshire, as well as the Chief Falconer to the King. Rev. William (1691–1757) son of Thomas, the minister of Cavers, he was minister of Hawick Parish 1731–57, and father of Dr. Thomas. It is said that he spent time as a youth in Hawick, but after his father's death, his mother took him to be raised in East Lothian. He graduated from Edinburgh University in 1707, became a tutor for the family of Alexander, Lord Elibank, and was licensed by the Presbytery of Duns in 1719. He thereafter spent time in the household of James, Lord Somerville (presumably a relative), managing his business affairs. He was called to Hawick Parish in late 1731 and ordained early the following year. In 1735 he was involved with the Duke of Buccleuch in the sale of land within Dalkeith. He wrote an account of the Parish sometime before 1743 (perhaps in 1738), this being one of the earliest descriptions with any detail; the original manuscript was owned by William Ogilvie of Chesters in the latter part of the 19th century. There he mentions an examination he made of the Buccleuch vault under St. Mary's in 1738; his transcription of stones there was eventually published in James Wilson's 'Memories of Hawick'. He is listed at the Manse in 1748, when he paid the window tax in Hawick Parish. In 1733 he married Janet, only daughter of John Grierson, minister of South Queensferry (their post-nuptial contract is in the National Archives); she was said to be a great beauty. Their children included: Agnes (b.1735); James (b.1740), who may have died young; Thomas (b.1741), who became minister at Jedburgh; Jean (b.1742), who probably also died young; William (b.1744), who probably also did not survive; Janet (b.1745); and Helen. The witness in 1741 was schoolmaster James Anderson and the witnesses in 1742 were Francis Gledstains and Robert Boyd (the Bailies at the time). His first wife died in 1749 and in 1753 he secondly married again Isobel (or Isabella) Scott of Whitehaugh, described as 'a maiden-gentlewoman of about 80', and she died in 1759. His children Agnes and Thomas brought an action in 1761 against John Scott of Whitehaugh, claiming that the marriage contract of their step-mother's father, Walter Scott, meant that they should be entitled to payments from the Whitehaugh estate, but the judges ruled against them. He is probably the 'Mr. Somervell' who hired the Hawick Parish mortcloth in 1758 (although probably deceased before then). It has sometimes been claimed that he was the original of the 'little round fat oily man of God' of James Thomson's 'Castle of Indolence', but others insist that the model was instead an English clergyman, Rev. Patrick Murdoch. William (1771–1860) son of Dr. Thomas and Martha Charters, he was born at Minto. He trained as a surgeon and entered the army, travelling on expeditions to the Cape of Good Hope. He also travelled on a Mediterranean expedition against Napoleon and to Canada, where he was inspector-general of hospitals from about 1807–11. He joined the Jedforest Club in 1812. In 1812 he became deputy inspector of army hospitals in Scotland and in 1816 had to move to London as a member of the army medical board. In 1806 he married Miss Rutherford of Knowesouth, but she died 2 years later. In 1812 he secondly married his cousin Mary, daughter of Adm. Fairfax, and widow of Samuel Grieg; she is known worldwide as one of the first female mathematicians. It is said that after his marriage he gave up his own ambitions to support his wife's scientific career. In 1818 he was involved in a legal case over inheritance of Knowesouth, claiming that his first wife's uncle, a lawyer in Jedburgh, had defrauded him out of liferent on the estate. He became seriously ill in 1838, so that his family wintered abroad and from then on lived mainly on the continent. He died in his 89th year in Florence and is buried in the Protestant cemetery there. William (c.1800–49) shoemaker who lived at Miller's Close on the High Street. He married Isabella (1807–89), eldest daughter of James Murray, and hence he was uncle of Sir J.A.H. Their children included John, Christian, Jean and James. He may have been born in Kelso, son of William and Mary Weatherhead (also spelled 'Somervel', 'Somervell', 'Sumerval', 'Sumervel', 'Summervale', etc. in early records).

the Somerville Buildins (thu-su-mur-vil-bil-dinz) n. modern name for a block of houses on Sunnyside in Denholm, with a pend through the middle (also called 'Summerville House').

Sonderland (son-der-lund) n. lands said to be in the Barony of Hawick, when granted in the early 14th century (probably shortly after Bannockburn) to Sir James, Lord of Douglas, along with 'Lintonrothbrekis'. The record is in 'Robertson's Index', which is not always accurate. Hence it seems likely that this was meant to be Sunderland in Selkirkshire and the reference to the Barony of Hawick was an error.

soopit (soo-pee', -pi') pp., adj. swept – '... gowstie wind, which soupit owre the houses' [EM1820] (also swupit).

soople (soo-pul) adj. supple, floppy – '... By a wheen o' soople shanks' [WL], '... And the sicht o' her limbs and her soople body, Gaed straucht to the auld man's heid like toddy' [WL], '... As souple as a buxom lass' [WFC], limp, helpless with laughter, drink, etc. – 'Hei leuch till ei was away in a kink, an fair soople' [ECS], '... Aa heard geeglin'! And when Aa lookit roond, Aa saw twae lassies comin' alang the path, fair soople!' [DH], wily, astute – 'Back cam' the soople spugs And ate the auld breid, But puir lang-craigit hernseugh Had mair pride than greed' [DH], n. a pliant rod – 'Then oot came the thresher, baith sturdy and steive, A thick aiken soople he grip't in his neive' [JoHa], v., poet. to make supple – 'At Raesknowe to dance, an' to soupple their shanks, An' some brass raise, the brigs to repair, man' [JoHa] (also spelled 'souple' and 'soupple').

sooplest (soo-plist) adj. most supple – 'Dan gie's a loup to the pipe o' the sailors – Sooplest o' callants there ...' [WL].

soor (soor) adj. sour – 'that was a right soor aiple', '... May hang upon a soor ploom tree, And sleep in Ettrick Forest' [JT], '... But sank his teeth in them to find them soure' [WL], scowling, ill-humoured, brooding – 'ee're awfih soor looking the day, what's the mitter?', v. to sour – '... And the auld laird stappin' hamewan, Is a soored man' [WL] (also spelled 'soure').

soorage (soo-reej) n. a system of sewers, sewage. Hawick got its first sewage plant in 1878 – '... Past the Sew'rage gate, if he thocht he was late Went supersonic Dye' [DH], 'The what?

Oh, the sewerage, 'm aye on for that: You're lauchin'; but that's no sae droll!' [WL], '... bein yaised ti bein doonwund o the sewerage at Mansfield Park' [IWL] (also written 'sewerage').

the Soorage Works (thu-soo-reej-wurks) n. Hawick Sewage Works, build by the Town on Mansfield Road in 1877/8. The land had formerly been part of Wilton Glebe and this flat area was also known as Burnfoot Haugh. Early plans and other documents are in the National Archives.

soor-dock (soor-dok) n., arch. the common sorrel, Rumex acetosa, the young leaves formerly being nibbled by children.

soor-dook (soor-dook) n., arch. buttermilk or perhaps yoghurt (once a popular drink; sometimes used incorrectly to refer to curds an cream).

soor-faced (soor-fāsd) adj. sour-faced – 'hei's a sour-faced auld girn'.

Soorhope (soo-rup) n. Sourhope, farm near the Bowmont Water in the upper part of Morebattle Parish. In the 18th century it was farmed by a brother of William Scott of Thirlestane (the origin is probably 'the valley of sour pasture' and the name first occurs in 1544).

soor-kit (soor-ki') n., arch. a dish of clotted cream (noted by J. Leyden).

soor ploom (soor-ploom) n. a boiled sweet, usually green and with a very acid taste, traditionally made in both Galashiels and Peebles.

sooth (sooth) n., adj., adv. south – 'Ti the sooth, ayownt the sweire, stuide Black Law ...' [ECS], '... Lookin sooth owre God's ain country Frae the Vertish Hill' [IWL], 'Auld Scotland we love thee, the North, East and West, But we live in the South, so we like it the best' [JCa], 'When the wund blaws canny I' the kindly sooth Wi' the barest hint O' heather in her mooth' [DH], '... Where aince the thunderin engines raced Far sooth to London toun' [WL], 'And come I frae sooth or nor-ward, My rest sall but be the same In the dear auld toun in the hollow – For the dear auld toun is hame!' [WL].

the Sooth (thu-sooth) n. formerly, the South of Scotland district Rugby Union team, which existed through most of the 20th century, and is effectively replaced by 'the Borders' team.

Sooth Berryfell (sooth-be-ree-fel) n. another name for the main farm at Berryfell.

Sooth Bright Street (sooth-brī'-stree') n. South Bright Street, a street in the West End off Bright Street. The houses were built in 1927, but after restoration work in 1973 they were found to be unsafe and were demolished in 1975. The street was named after statesman and social reformer John Bright.

Sooth Croft Park (sooth-kroft-pawrk) n. Southcroft Park, former name for a piece of land on Minto estate. It is marked to the west of the old church on a 1766 map of Minto estate. It was valued at £73 3s 6d in 1779 when included among lands whose liferent had been granted to Rev. Robert Elliot. They are still so listed in 1811.

Soothdean (sooth-deen, soo-, sow-din) n. Southdean, hamlet on the A6088 towards the Carter Bar, on the banks of the Jed, formerly written 'Souden' and variants. Formerly part of Jed Forest, the name 'Soothdean' is fairly synonymous with Chesters, although perhaps more often applied to the upper part of the district. It is also the name of the associated Parish, which extends to Wolfelee and also contains the former Free Church there. The original church dates back to at least the 13th century and was a meeting place for Scottish leaders before Otterburn. A replacement church was built about 1690 and the current one in 1876. The village itself was burned by Dacre's men (led by Sir John Radcliff) in late 1513 and again in 1544. Jock Oliver was recorded living there in 1544. In 1669 the farm of that name was tenanted by James Oliver, David Oliver and Thomas Oliver. William Oliver and David Baptie were there in 1694. James Baptie was tenant there in at least 1797–1801. Residents in 1801 included Alexander Baptie, Robert Kerr and Peter Sinton. An old outhouse in the area was called Peden's Barn and connected with Covenanters. The settlement has been on the main route from Hawick to Newcastle since long before the modern road was developed (around the 1820s). There are many nearby archæological remains, including hill-forts, settlements and ruined peel towers. Several Bronze Age artefacts found nearby are in Jedburgh Museum, including a flat axe, part of a rapier blade, and a socketed axe. Othere items from the area include a greenstone axe, a whinstone hammer-head and 3 small whorls of polished green stone. The Statistical Account of 1794 notes that the region contained several ancient cairns, one of which was found to contain bones, and nearly all of which had been robbed for stones. 'Souden Kirk: a Border shrine' was published by John R. Spence in 1951 (the origin is probably a corrupted version of 'Souden', the original pronunciation, which may be from the Old English 'suth dun', meaning simply 'the southern hill' or may be related to Old Welsh for a hill-fort; the name first occurs as 'Souddon' in 1275 and has various related forms, including Sudhden in 1291/2, 'Suthdon' in 1319, 'Soudon' in 1404, 'Soudoun' in 1426, 'Sowdon' in 1455, 'Sowdone' in 1484/5, 'sowdene' in 1488/9, 'Sowdoun' in 1491/2, 'Sodane' in 1538, 'Sodene' in 1539, transcribed as 'Fowden' in 1544, 'Sowdoun' in 1559, 'Suddoun' in c.1560, 'Suddoun' in 1572, 'Suddoun' in 1575, 'Suddum' in 1586, 'Sudan' in 1638, 'Sudden' in 1689 and 'Souden' in 1701; 'Soudan K.' is marked on Morden's 1687 map of Scotland and 'K. of Soudann' on Blaeu's 1654 map).

Soothdean (sooth-deen) n. region in the hills to the east of Colterscleuch, containing Southdean Rigg (which reaches 354 m) and Southdean Burn (which joins Northhouse Burn). There was also formerly a farmstead here. The lands were once part of Ringwoodfield (marked 'Sudarig' on Blaeu's 1654 map; it is spelled 'Suddenrigg' in 1693 and 'Suddenrig' in 1744).

Soothdean Kirk (sooth-deen-, soo-, sow-din-kirk) n. church in Southdean Parish. The original church was first mentioned as early as the 1260s. It was valued at about 50 shillings per year according to Bagimond's Roll of 1275. 'Ade de Osberneston' was appointed cleric there by the English King in 1291/2. Adam, the Parson, signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296. It was in the Diocese of Glasgow and Archdeaconry of Teviotdale, but it is not known when it was dedicated. The patronage was held by the Douglases, passing to Scott of Branxholme in 1528, reverting to the Crown in about 1537 and recovered by the Earl of Angus in 1542/3. The church consisted of a west tower and a nave, probably of 13th century, together with a chancel, probably added in the 15th century (replacing an earlier chancel). Excavations also revealed foundations of a perhaps earlier building, a few feet to the north of the nave. The church was the location for a meeting of Lord Douglas and the other Scottish commanders in 1388, in which an English spy is meant to have revealed information that was important for the skirmish at Newcastle and the battle at Otterburn. The ruins of this original 'Souden Kirk' stands just below the level of the main A6088 road, about a mile after Chesters. A commemorative plaque was erected there after excavations by the Hawick Archæological Society in 1910. At the same time part of the tower was roofed over to hold some of the unearthed stonework, and the site was dedicated as a memorial to the Battle of Otterburn; repair work was carried out on the tower in 2015. A carved super-altar (of sandstone, about 23 cm by 18 cm), probably from the 15th century, was moved to the new church. This original church was abandoned in 1688 when the roof collapsed (on a Sunday, but fortunately after the congregation had left). A second church was built in 1689/90, whose roofless walls stand in the graveyard of the grounds of the new (1876) church near Chesters. This building had no ceiling and it is said that the pauper's coffin (with its hinged bottom) was stored in the rafters, in plain view of the congregation. Its doorway survives and part of the 'jougs' could be seen on the wall until fairly recent times. The new church contains a memorial window to James Thompson, author of 'The Seasons' and 'Rule Britannia' and another supplied by the tenantry of Jedforest. The organ was a gift of Mrs. Mair, wife of the minister. The new churchyard is displaced from the church, up on Chesters Brae. The Manse for the Kirk is located to the east of Whiteburn farmstead; it was built in 1795, on the site of the former building; this was 'The Mans' on which tax was paid for 4 hearths in 1694 and 20 windows in 1748. The glebe lands extended to 40 acres. The patronage was held by Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme from 1528, then the Earl of Angus from 1542/3. The benefice of the Rectory was held by Douglas of Bonjedward in the period 1566–72. The church was linked with Edgerston 1960–73, linked with Hobkirk in 1973, united formally with Hobkirk in 1988 and then linked with Cavers and Kirkton 1988–97. It became part of the wider area of Ruberslaw in 2004 (along with Denholm, Minto, Bedrule and Hobkirk). The oldest communion token is heart-shaped and made of lead. A roll of the ministers of the church is: Galfrid, Vicar in 1260; Adam of Osberton from 1291/2; Adam, Parson in 1296; Robert Halliwell, Prebend in 1319; Thomas Forest, Rector at least 1404–15; Robert Penwen, from 1424 until at least 1455; John Inglis, Rector in 1471; William Scott, Rector from at least 1482–1491/2; Richard, Parson in 1526/7; Hugh Douglas, Rector at least 1558/9–63; Walter Lyle, Exhorter in 1567; John Douglas, Reader 1574–87; Andrew Clayhills, Minister in 1575; John Scott, Reader 1579–82; William Douglas 1585; Andrew Douglas 1599–1605; George Douglas 1607–08; James Logan, presented 1608; William Weir 1610–26; James Fisher 1626–35; John Davidson 1635–66; John Dargavel 1667–70; George Baptie 1670–88; Thomas Rutherford 1689; Samuel Johnstone 1690–99; Thomas Thomson 1700–16; Thomas Leck, presented 1716; John Inglis 1718–43; John Oliver 1736–55; Robert Muirhead 1756–84; William Scott 1785–1809; John Richmond 1810–47; John Mair 1847–1902; George Henry Donald 1902–06; John R. Spence 1907–50; John Roberts 1951–65; George Urquhart 1966–72; Stephen Goodbrand 1973–82; James A. Strachan 1983–88; Adam McC. Bowie 1988–96 (it is marked 'K. of Soudan' and 'K. of Sowdan' on Gordon's c.1650 maps and 'Soudan K.' on Blaeu's c.1654 map).

Soothdean Law (sooth-deen-, soo-, sow-din-law) n. Southdean Law, hill near Southdean and also formerly the name of a farm there. In 1669 the tenants were Andrew Douglas and Robert Laidlaw. The hill is on the left hand side of the A6088. It reaches a height of 300 m and contains a fort and settlement, as well as having a triangulation pillar, all on the western peak. The fort consists of a pear-shaped enclosure around the summit, about 50 m by 30 m, and is probably from the early Iron Age (perhaps the first millennium B.C.E.). There is an annex to the north-east of the main enclosure, and this is probably later. In this area there are also the remains of 11 stone-walled houses (from 4.5 to 8 m in diameter) and several enclosures, perhaps dating to the 2nd, 3rd or 4th century. The surrounding slopes contain evidence of a field-system and rig lines, some running right up to the boundaries of the fort, and hence probably of a similar age. There are also the remains of an old building and enclosure to the north-west, in the direction of Slack's Tower. 2 Bronze Age socketed axes were found near here, but their location is unknown (it is 'Sudenlaw' and 'Souden Law' in 1669).

Soothdean Manse (sooth-deen-, soo-, sow-din-mawns) n. house of the minister of Southdean Parish. It is north of the village, to the east of the A6088. The former building was 'The Mans' on which tax was paid for 4 hearths in 1694 and 20 windows in 1748. It was rethatched in 1786. The current house was built in 1795, on the site of the former building. The nearby glebe lands extended to 40 acres. A crude stone axe was built into a wall opposite here.

Soothdean Mill (sooth-deen-, soo-, sow-din-mil) n. former corn mill in Southdean Parish, situated on a lade off the Jed Water, just to the east of Chesters village. It was valued at £5 in the Exchequer Rolls in 1538, 1539 and 1541. Patrick, Janet and Marion Oliver were joint tenants there in 1541, with William and Marion (probably also Oliver, but surname not given) renting one third of the farm. James Shiel was tenant there in the 1680s and 90s. It is referred to in 1738 by the Duke of Douglas's factor, shortly after it had burned down. Walter Riddell was tenant there in 1797 and Robert Riddell was there in at least 1799–1801. George Bell was miller and farmer there in 1866. 'Southdeanmillhead' is recorded in the late 18th century. There is still a farm in the same location, with evidence of its former use as a corn mill and a saw mill (it is 'molendini de Sowden' in 1538, 'molendini de Sowdene' in 1539, 'Sodenmylne' and 'molendini de Soden' in 1541, 'suden milne' in 1681 and 'Suden Mylne' in 1694).

Soothdean Pairish (sooth-deen-, soo-, sow-din-pā-reesh) n. Southdean Parish, lying along the upper banks of the Jed, crossed by the A6088 road from Hawick to the Carter Bar. It is also sometimes referred to as Chesters Parish. The Parish is about 12 miles by 7 miles in size, and is bounded by Jedburgh, Oxnam, Castleton, Hobkirk and part of Northumberland. It was formerly in the Diocese of Glasgow and Archdeaconry of Teviotdale. It was a Rectory of Glasgow, taxed at £5 6s 4d in 1275 and £3 8s in 1376. In early times it was called 'Suden', and pronounced that way until fairly recently. In 1649 the land and crops of the Parish were valued at £5500. In 1678 the lands had the same value, split between the Marquess of Douglas and Gilbert Eliott of Wolfelee. It received part of the former Abbotrule Parish in 1777 (including the area having the former church), with a small part moved from Hobkirk in 1793. However, a northern section (bordering on Bedrule, including Gatehousecote and Ruletownhead) was later transferred to Hobkirk Parish. There were 45 men listed there between the ages of 19 and 30 in 1799. A £50 'mortification' to provide for the poor (with unrecorded origin) was mentioned in 1798. The Parish was valued at about £6500 in 1811. Some of the Cheviots are in the Parish, and the highest hills are Carter Fell, Carlintooth Fell, Peel Fell and Wolfelee Hill. Chesters is the main settlement, although it really only grew in the 19th century. The Parish contains a great many ancient forts, remains of peel towers, etc. There are Parish Council books for 1851–1930 in the Borders Archive and the Parish records date back to 1696. In 1834 there were in the Parish: 4 heritors; 20 larger and 18 smaller tenants; about 17,000 sheep; and one 'alehouse' at the Carter Bar. The register of births begins in 1696 (with a gap 1700–37 and also in the 1740s) and marriages and deaths in 1736 (but also with gaps); registration was irregular for births, but fairly complete for the proclamation of banns. There are heritors' records from 1770. The population in 1755 was 480 (it is 'Soudon Parioch' in 1694).

Soothdeanrig (soo-, sooth-deen-rig) n. Southdeanrig, former farmstead near Northhouse, lying on part of Southdean Rig, between the Cromrig and Southdean Burns, south of the Teviot. The lands were included in a set leased by Walter Scott of Branxholme from Melrose Abbey in 1500 and stated to be in the Lairdship of 'Ringwoodfield'. It is probably the place transcribed as 'Southcothrig' (along with 'Vestcotrig' and 'Bolburg') where the King's shepherd Richard Henderson is recorded in 1540. 'The gudman of Syntoun and Arche Ellot of Thirlishoup' (probably Walter Scott of Synton and Archibald Elliot of Thorlieshope) rented these lands, along with Cauldcleuch, from Melrose Abbey in 1557; at that time it was valued at £5. Capt. Walter Scott of Satchells said that Robert Scott of Satchells (his father probably) received the lands of 'Southinrig' for his service to the house of Buccleuch. It was recorded as part of the land of Ringwoodfield in the Lordship of Melrose in 1634, 1653, 1661 and 1663. William Clerk was there in 1708. In 1718 it was surveyed along with other Buccleuch properties, at that point covering 1017 acres and bounded by Northhouse, Phaup, Binks, Bowanhill and Colterscleuch. James Grieve was recorded there in at least 1723–35 and William Main in 1724–29. In 1744 the lands were leased by Thomas Elliot, farmer at Harwood. William Elliot was there in 1748–53, James Grieve was tenant in 1751 and Walter Elliot was there in 1757. Gideon Scott was there in 1785 and John Turnbull was herd 1785–97. An enclosed area on the north-east side contained a building and sheepfold, shown on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map (it is 'Sowdinryg' in 1500, 'Sowdenrig' in 1557 and 1564, 'Soudenrig'in 1621, 'Sudenrig' in 1634, 'Soudenrig' in 1660, 'Suddenrig' in 1661, 'Suudinrig' in 1663, 'Suddenrigg' in 1693, 'Suddenridge' in 1708 and 'Southdean rigg' in 1723; it appears on Blaeu's 1654 map as 'Sudarig' on the 1718 Buccleuch survey as 'Sowdenrige' and on Stobie's 1770 map as 'Southdeanridge'; see also Soothinrig).

Soothdean Rig (sooth-deen-, soo-din-rig) n. ridge in Southdean Parish, lying to the south of the main A6088, being essentially the northern shoulder of Charlie's Knowe. The area is rich in archæological remains, around the Carter Burn, as well as further north to Jordan Sike. In particular there are apparent remains of buildings within enclosures.

Soothdean Rig Shiel (sooth-deen-, soo-din-rig-sheel) n. shepherd's cottage on Southdean Rig. Francis Dickson and his son Francis, were shepherds there through much of the 19th century.

Soothdean Schuil (sooth-deen-skil) n. former school in Southdean Parish. It may have been established in the early 17th century. Thomas Turnbull is the first recorded schoolmaster in 1620. A new school was thatched in 1786 and repaired in 1800–02. In 1803 there were extra fees for students learning single-entry or double-entry bookkeeping. There were more than 70 pupils in the 1830s. School Board minute books are in the Borders Archive for the period 1873–1919. A roll of schoolmasters includes: Thomas Turnbull, 1620; George Weir, 1622; David Turnbull, at least 1734–35; Thomas Turnbull, from at least 1748 to 1751; John Scott, 1759; William Preston, at least 1770–72; John Turnbull, 1772–97; John Irvine, 1797–1800; Thomas Armstrong, 1800–c.41; Richard Armstrong, at least 1837; Niel Taylor, at least 1841 to the 1860s; and J.D. Clark, c.1932.

Soothfield (sooth-feeld) n. Southfield, farm about 4 miles south of Hawick, lying on the boundary of the old Common. It was previously split into 'Nether Soothfield' and 'Over Soothfield', and these farms were surveyed along with other Scott of Buccleuch properties in 1718. The name is also used for the general area around the farm. The marshy area just to the north was once dammed and labelled as 'Mill Dam' on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map. James Glendinning was a tenant here in 1684 when he was listed among men declared as a fugitive for attending field conventicles. Adam Laidlaw was there in 1711. Grieves farmed here from at least the 1750s until 1988, when the lease was given up by Walter; this is probably the longest tenancy by a single family of any farm of the Buccleuch Estates. William Clerk was a servant there in 1797 and George Douglas was living there in 1801. There are several forts, carins and ancient settlements in the vicinity, several of which have been destroyed by cultivation, e.g. the largest, which was on Sooty Hill. Several flint and chert implements found in the area around the farm are in the Museum, and some others may be in the National Museum of Antiquities. A spearhead found near here is probably still in the Museum's collection, and has been classified as Middle Bronze Age; it was said to have been turned up by the plough in about 1857 'in a partially demolished encampment or hill fort on the farm of Southfield' (it is marked on Gordon's c.1650 map as 'Soutfield', is marked as 'N. Southfield' and O. Southfield' on Blaeu's 1654 map, and also marked on Visscher's 1689 map of Scotland; the name presumably just means 'the south field', but it may suggest that it was once part of Hawick Common; there are several places of the same name elsewhere in Scotland).

Soothfield Gate (sooth-feeld-gā') n. Southfield Gate, former farm, long ruined, near the road end just beyond the Caa Knowe, just after the turn-off for Southfield farm and shortly before the road reaches the Gate Burn at the Troutlaw-ford. The name is also used to refer to the road to Southfield, and hence to the far end of the Common and the Caa Knowe. Weaver Charles Murray and family were living at 'Hawick Shiels Yett' in 1841, which is probably the same place – '... And syne, with them, by Southfield Gate, I pray I'll hear the Burgess-Roll and answer to my name' [JYH] (also written 'Southfieldgate'; it is marked 'Southfieldgate ruins of' on J.P. Alison's map of the Common in 1777).

Sooth Hermitage Street (sooth-her-mi'-eej-stree') n. South Hermitage Street, part of the main B6357 through Newcastleton, lying to the south of Douglas Square.

Soothinrig (soo-thin-rig) n. former name for lands at Southdean Rig, being more recently part of the estates of the Duke of Buccleuch and part of Colterscleuch farm. They were once held by an ancestor of Capt. Walter Scott of Satchells, and given for his services to the Duke (see also Soothdeanrig).

the Sooth Kirk (thu-sooth-kirk) n. name formerly used in Newcastleton for the United Presbyterian Church after it united with the Church of Scotland in 1929. The name was used to distinguish it from the 'Park Kirk' (see Newcastleton Burgher Kirk).

Sooth Liddle Street (sooth-li-dul-stee') n. South Liddle Street, being the southern extension of North Liddle Street and Mid Liddle Street.

Sooth Port (sooth-pōr') n. South Port, being the gate from town leading south up the Cross Wynd until the mid-18th century. The gate was probably situated a little way up the Wynd, and was once the beginning of the road towards Newcastle. It was recorded being 'taken down' in 1732, and may have been more fully removed in 1762 along with the Mercat Cross. A plaque was placed on the Town Hall near the original location by the Callants' Club in 1964. Until the 1830s this was the road to Newcastle and other points to the south-east (also sometimes Crosswynd Port or 'Cross Port').

Soothron (sooth-rin) n., adj., arch. people from the south, i.e. the English – '... for at that period such was the thirst of Southron revenge that things both sacred and civil met with the same treatment' [WaD], 'And the fierce rievers swam the currents o'er In hot pursuit of flying Southron foe' [GWe], '... Where pricking and spurring are rife, And the bluid boils up like a sea; But Southrons gand doon i' the strife! And wha daur meddle wi' me?' [T] adj., arch. southern – 'Oor forebears an ther Southron neebers coodna sit soft ava i thae days' [ECS].

Sooth Synton (sooth-sin'-in) n. former name for the main farm of Synton (or Sinton), to distinguish it from 'North Synton' on the opposite side of the Ale valley. It was long the property of the Scotts. The house there was rebuilt in the 18th century and demolished in the latter part of the 20th century. James Scott from South Synton Mill was minister at Ashkirk in the late 1500s (it is marked 'S: Sintoun' on Pont's c.1590 manuscript map, 'South Sintoun' and jist 'Syntoun' on Gordon's c.1650 maps and 'South Syntoun' on Blaeu's 1654 map).

soothwards (sooth-wurdz) adv. southwards – '... And, galloping doon the glen, Aye soothwards they disappear; They are riding their raids again For their ain or their neighbour's gear' [TK].

the Sootie Kittlin (thu-soo'-ee-kit-lin) n. nickname in use in the 19th century, presumably (somehow) related to a sooty kitten – 'The Sootie Kittlin' and Bumma Rae, Jenny Tranklets and auld Cauld Kail, Jamie Sprinkie, Kessy, the Kay, Doctor H'Yiggs and the Wat Wat Sail' [HI].

Sooty Knowe (soo'ee-now) n. small hill just south-east of Southfield. It once contained a cairn, described in 1858 by W.N. Kennedy as 'by far the most stupendous of these remains', even after much quarrying of the stone. It was said that the houses at Hawick Shiels were built from its material and it was also used to repair local roads. In 1869 Dr. James Brydon describes that 'the Suttie Knowe on the farm of Southfield, in this parish, measures forty or fifty yards across' and 'its original height cannot be ascertained, as many hundred cartloads of stones have been removed from it', but that it was still 7–10 feet high at that time. It was said that no human remains or any other artefacts were ever discovered inside it. The ancient cairn was still marked on the 1926 Ordnance Survey map, but subsequently was futher obliterated by cultivation and quarrying. Nevertheless, it is still clear that stones scattered around the summit were put there by people a long time ago. From here one can easily see the nearby Caa Knowe and Lord's Tree sites, and it is easy to believe that their significance was connected in some way.

Sorbie (sor-bee) n. farm on a side road just south of Ewes, a few miles north of Langholm, once the site of a corn mill. It was confirmed to Simon Little in 1426. 'Dauid Armstrang de Sourby' witnessed a document for the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1456. The lands were occupied by the Armstrongs into the 17th century. It was valued at £250 in 1671. John Armstrong is recorded leasing a quarter of the farm in 1672 and 1673 and there was a 1685 gravestone for John Armstrong of Sorbie in Ewes Kirkyard. Sorbie was surveyed along with other Scott of Buccleuch farms in 1718, when it covered 329 acres, bounded by Kirkton, Glendivan, Howgill, Middle and Over Wrae, Staplegordon, lands of the Laird of Rennaldburn and Burnfoot in Westerkirk. Thomas Armstrong leased the farm in 1735. William Borthwick was there in at least 1785–90, Mrs. Borthwick in 1794 and Alexander Borthwick in 1797. Robert Hardie was farmer in 1841 and D. Hardie in 1868. Henry Scott Riddell was born here in a shepherd's cottage which stood in the plantation near the bridge. A plaque on the bridge commemorates the site and a centenary celebration was held here in 1898. 'Sorbie Haas' was the former name used for the road from the Ewes valley to Westerkirk (the same name occurs elsewhere in Scotland and Northern England; it is 'Sourbi' in 1462, 'Sourby' in 1456 and 'Sorby' in about 1748; it is 'Sourby' on Blaeu's 1654 map and 'Sorby' on the 1718 Buccleuch survey).

Sorbie (sor-bee) n. former name for lands in Liddesdale, near to Sorbietrees. In the late 1100s Race Fitz Malger granted the whole 'shaw' there, and 1 acre next to the shaw, with pasture for 40 cows and their calves, 2 bulls, 10 oxen and 2 horses. This was together with half of the land of Shortbutts, which was also in the territory of Sorbie. The farm of Abbotshaws may recall this early land transfer (it was 'Sourebi' in the late 12th century).

Sorbie (sor-bee) n. James (b.c.1770s) labourer at Lawston according to the ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1799. On the 1801 Militia ballot he was a servant at Liddel Bank (also written 'Sorby').

Sorbie Hass (sor-bee-hass) n. name used for the road winding between Sorbie and Staplegordon. This was the main route through the lower Ewes valley to the Langholm area until Langholm became a separate parish in 1703. There was an old hawthorn tree at the junction of this road with the main Ewes road, which grew until sometime in the 19th century. It was said to be used as a meeting spot by the monks of Melrose (also written 'Haas', the word comes from Old Norse for a pass; the road is labelled on Crawford's 1804 map).

Sorbietreis (sor-bee-trīz) n. Sorbietrees, farm obout 3 miles south of Newcastleton. When surveyed along with other Scott of Buccleuch properties in 1718 it extended to 1492 acres and included the farmsteads of High Mangerton, Catheugh and 'Demmebeck'. It was bounded by the Kershope Burn, Flatt, Mangerton, lands of the Laird of Whithaugh and Kershope, with the farmhouse clearly shown and a wood of old trees around the Fouty Sike. In 1541 it is listed along with Ragarth and Sorbie, with value 10 merks, and stated to eprtain to the Laird of Mangerton. It was formerly a stronghold of the Armstrongs. George Mitchelson and Roland Porteous were there in 1694. A shepherd here perished during the 'Gonial Blast' of 1794. Archibald Armstrong was farmer there in at least 1794–97. John Amos was a tailor there in 1797 and William Armstrong was farmer in 1801. William Armstrong was there in 1841 and 1851; he was killed by the minister of Walton (being mistaken for an intruder), and is buried in Ettleton cemetery. The present farmhouse was built by the Buccleuch Estates and is run as a bed and breakfast. The New Statistical Account reports in 1839 the existence of a circular earthwork on the farm. This is probably the site where ramparts were once removed, revealing paved area on the south side, with some burned material. In 2001 it had the dubious distinction of recording the first Scottish Borders case of foot and mouth disease – 'A wailing sugh is borne upon the breeze, Athwart the shatter'd pines of Sorbietrees' [HNo], 'To Sorbietrees and Larriston, Wi' news that Wull was deid, And craws micht leeve in peace at last Frae Flatt to Tweeden-heid . . . ' [DH] (the origin of the name is probably the Old Norse 'saurr' and Old English 'treow', meaning 'trees at the muddy farm'; it first appears as 'Sourby' in 1456, but could be the 'Southby' recorded in the c.1376 rental roll of Liddesdale; it is 'Sorbe et Sorbetrees' in 1541, 'Sorbitrees' in sorner (sōr-nur) n., arch. someone who lives off their neighbours, a scrounger – '... the country suffered sadly from bands of thieves, and sorners fleeing from labour and living in plenty upon the fruit of other men's labour' [WNK], 'Dr Somerville also explains that Sorners, a class frequently referred to in the statutes, were persons destitute of a fixed home ...' [FH], 'The land was simply swarming with beggars and sorners, the latter of whom extorted food or help by terrifying the dwellers in lonely farms and cottages' [JJV].

sorri (so-ri, -ra, -re) n., arch. sorrow, a troublesome child – 'But I am puir an' fu' o' sorra ...' [HSR], 'For my liffe is spendet wi' sorra, an' my yeers wi' sichin' ...' [HSR], 'Yih saucy sorrih! ee'r owre fow-hauden' [ECS], 'A raikin sorrih is applied to child given to wandering against parental wishes' [ECS], (also spelled 'sorrih', 'sorra', etc.; the final vowel sound varies).

sorrifi (so-ri-fi) adj., arch. sorrowful – '... an' begoude til be sorrafu' an' verra hivy' [HSR], 'An' they wer excessiv sorrafu' ...' [HSR].

sorri-rape (so-ra-rāp) n., arch. a shoulder-strap attached to the handles of a handbarrow to relieve the strain on the bearer's arms (noted by J. Jamieson).

Sorrowlessfield (so-rō-les-feeld) n. farm near Earlston. It is traditionally said to have been the only neighbouring farm to which anyone returned from Flodden, but it is actually known to have belonged to a Will Sorules in the 12th century. It was part of the lands owned by Melrose Abbey. Several flint arrow-heads and other implements have been found nearby, and a decorated spindle whorl from there is in the Museum (it is 'Sorrowlesfeild' in about 1564 and 'Sorlersfield' on Blaeu's 1654 map).

sort (sor') v., arch. to tend, look after – 'Thay're fer owre mony foak i the hoose for yow ti sort eersel' [ECS], to arrange, put in order – – 'A'll heh ti sort thum; thay're aa mixty-maxty an need ti be keindeet' [ECS], to dress oneself, make oneself presentable – 'Geet eersuls sorteet, an A'll wait on ee, an oo'll gang aathegither' [ECS], to deal effectively with, rebuke, chastise – 'A'll sort ee, yih little bleckie, for poww-in aa ma fairns (ferns)' [ECS], to mend, repair – 'The sklater cam ti sort the ruif' [ECS] (most of these meanings are not standard in English).

sort (sor') n., arch. a considerable number of some kind, but not too many – 'There was a sort (or a sort o' folk) at the kirk the day' [GW] (noted by J. Jamieson).

sorter (sor'-ur) n., arch. person employed in a woollen factory to open bales of wool and separate the wool according to quality.

sortit (sor-tee', -ti') adj., pp. sorted, put in order, arranged, restored – '... that weel-sorteet an taen sic grand care o' [ECS], 'Yiddie's gairdeen's aye neice; it's that weel sorteet' [ECS], 'When they sortit the muddle oot at last, The lassies grat and roared ...' [DH], '... An oor it was Or I'd the mischief sortit' [WL].

so's (sōz) contr. so as – 'A'll pit thum there, so's ee can look it thum efter'.

soss (sos) n., poet. a soggy mess, wetting, drink of alcohol – 'Where ye will get a whisky soss To moistify your middle, For now nae langer at Haremoss You'll hear auld Ruickbie's fiddle' [JR].

sot (so') adv. so, indeed, used as an emphatic response to 'not', particularly by children – 'Ee er not! A em sot!', 'A ded sot', 'ee wull sot'.

sotter (so-tur) v., arch., poet. to swarm –'The troots fair sotter't in the Dunk-puil' [GW], 'Last nicht a guid ding-on o' rain, Wi' deid leaves sotterin' under fit ...' [WFC], to form an eruptive sore, to boil, sputter, scorch – 'And leugh, and cried, as he trampet him down – He will be a sottering bleeze' [JTe] n., arch., a cluster of things, expecially scabs or pimples, a seething mass, swarm (of flies, minnows, rabbits, etc.) – '... a creeper-kivvert cottage wui its gairdeen a perfect sotter o bonnie flooers' [ECS].

souch (sowch, sōch) v., arch. to blow, howl, sough, sigh – 'How the wund's souchin' i' the chumla heid!' [JAHM], 'There's music in the soughin' wand, And in the whirrin' reel' [JT], '... The ice-drap hings at ilka twig, And sad the nor'-wind soughs through a'' [TDa], 'Over the pastures of Bellendean The wind wails a weary souch ...' [TK], '... a boaggly, gloomin planteen, where the whussellin wund gaed soachin throwe' [ECS], '... And feel the soughin o' the wund, The lash of raindrops stingin' [WL], '... Murnin in tongues man kent afore His first word was let-fa, They keen and souch and blaw' [DH], to single softly, whistle, hum – 'As I am naturally musically inclided, I happened to be soughing over a well-known tune ...' [JR], n. a sigh, blow, sound of the wind – 'Through the darksome yew with eiry sough, The gurly breeze it did play' [JTe], 'Wi' drearie sugh the e'ening win', Comes through the glen sae foggie' [JoHa], 'A calm souch, too, you aye maun keep, Save maybe for ae bit creak ...' [WFC], '... A snell sough flichters them doun' [WL], a hubbub, fuss, frenzy – 'A cot in the midst of a wide-spreading wood, Afar from the sigh and the sugh of the crowd' [JoHa], 'What wad they dae workin, Wi the sough o the flude i the air . . . ' [DH], 'It was a soft nicht, and birdsang seems to traivel better wi a souch o rain i the air' [DH] (from Old English; also spelled 'sough', 'sugh', 'soach', etc.).

soucht (sowcht) pp., arch. sought – 'Bie nicht on my bed I soucht him wham my saul loes' [HSR], '. . . ay, I soucht him, but he couldna be fund' [HSR], '. . . Wi' his rowth o' gowd he had need o' noucht, But the mair he gethered, the mair he soucht' [WL] (cf. sowt).

Souden (soo-, sow-den) n. former name for Soothdean – 'And Ellen was old Sowden's pride, And the flower of the forest land' [JTe] (also written 'Sowden' and variants).

Souden (soo-, sow-den) n. Geoffrey (13th C.) recorded as 'de Soudan' in 1269, when he was listed as one of the retainers of Robert de Brus, when the group set out to Scotland, at the command of the English King. He could have been associated with Southdean. James (15th/16th C.) recorded as a sergeant at the Court in Jedburgh in 1502. His name was written 'Jacobum sowdane'.

Soudenrig (soo-din-rig) n. former name for the farmstead of Soothdeanrig.

Soulis (soo-lis) n. Ermengarde (14th C.) daughter of William, the last de Soulis Lord of Liddesdale. Her name is also written 'Ermygarda' and similar. After her father's death she held the income from half the lands in Liddesdale, forfeited some time shortly before 1338, when they went to William (or John) de Warren. This severed the long link between this family and Liddesdale. Fulco (12th/13th C.) successor to Ranulph, as recorded in 1222/3. He also served as King's Butler. In 1262 he was recorded owing money for lands in Cumberland that had belonged to Ranulph. He may be the 'Fuleon de Sules' who witnessed an Athole charter in the late 1190s. He was probably succeeded by his son Nicholas. Another son was William, who drowned. Sir John (d.c.1318) probably son of Nicholas and elder brother of Sir William (as confirmed in a charter of c.1280 between Sir William and Jedburgh Abbey). Around the 1280s he also witnessed a grant of lands in Fogo to Melrose Abbey, and was listed as brother of Sir William. In 1288 he was paid his knights fee by the Chamberlain of Scotland and in 1290 was among those confirming the Treaty of Salisbury. He is likely to be the 'John de Soulys' who had custody of the lands of the late Hugh Lovel in 1291, with further lands and privileges granted in 1292/3, and confirmed in 1294; these probably included Hawick, as well as lands in England. He had protection from Edward I in 1293 and in 1294 witnessed documents for the Bishop of Durham. In a letter of 1295 he is described as a messenger and procurator of King John Balliol. He witnessed a confirming charter of English lands relating to the Steward of Scotland in 1296. He is probably the 'Dominus Johannes' recorded several times in the Ragman Rolls of 1291–96. His seal there (and elsewhere) had 3 horizontal bars and a 'riband dexter', with the words 'S'JOH'IS DE SOULES MILITIS'. In 1297 there was a petition to the English King from the brothers of the hospital at Berwick, complaining that he had dispossessed them of a certain piece of land in Liddesdale. In 1299 he is described by Edward I as one of his enemies when he was returning to Scotland as an ambassador to France, with the English trying to intercept them on the journey from Flanders. He was Guardian of Scotland for a while, jointly with John Cumming, after Wallace abdicated in 1300. He is said to have captured Sir Andrew Harclay, commanding 300 Englishmen, with the aid of 50 Borderers. He led an attack at Lochmaben in 1301, and there is a letter from Robert Hastings to King Edward in that year, decribing actions taken against him. He was a fugitive from England in 1303/4 when he leased the castle and barony of Durisdeer, and his lands at Westerkirk were taken. Around the same time he was given a letter of safe conduct by Edward I. In about 1315 he was granted 2 sets of lands in Dumfriesshire for supporting Robert the Bruce; he was there described as son of Sir Nicholas. He is easy to confuse with another John, described as his nephew, who died in Ireland in about 1310; it is possible that the 2 men are compounded here. In 1322 he is described as having died in France when his lands of Westerkirk were granted to Melrose Abbey. He married Hawise Fitz Alan (or Stewart), heiress of Old Roxburgh, and secondly (although this seems uncertain) married Margaret of Ardross. His daughter (and possibly only child) was Muriel, who married Sir Richard Lovel. John (d.c.1310) said to have died fighting for Robert the Bruce at the Battle of Dundalk (or Faughart) in Ireland in about 1310. Sir John is described as his uncle, making it clear that there were 2 nearly contemporary Johns. However, their lives may be mixed together. Muriel (d.1318) daughter of Sir John, she married Sir Richard Lovel, Baron of Hawick, about 1305. She obtained the manor of Old Roxburgh from her mother Hawise Fitz Alan. Her children were Eleanor, Joan and James. Sir Nicholas (d.1264) Lord of Liddesdale, who probably built the original Hermitage Castle. He was probably son of Fulco, following whom he served as 'pincerna regis' or Royal Butler. He was recorded in a charter of the period 1230–36 involving the monks of Newbattle. In 1244 he was among Scottish noblemen who swore to keep the peace with England. He was also Sheriff of Roxburgh, recorded in 1246, when he was among men who perambulated the Border. He witnessed a document involving the lands of Bonkle in 1247, when he was Sheriff of Roxburghshire. In 1248 there was a complaint against him for transgressing the approved March customs. He helds the lands of Stanfordham in Northumberland in the 1250s. In 1255 he was removed from the King's councils. He married Annora de Normanville, who is recorded in 1244, when the couple's lands in Stanfordham and 'Stokesfeud' were restored to them. His sons were Sir William, Sir John and Thomas (as confirmed in a charter of around 1280, where Sir William granted lands to Jedburgh Abbey). He died at Rouen. Sir Nicholas (d.aft. 1296) Lord of Liddesdale, probably grandson of the previous Nicholas, He was the son of William and Ermengarde Dorward, who was daughter of Marjory, illegitimate daughter of King Alexander II, and hence he was one of the claimants to the throne when Queen Margaret (the 'Maid of Norway') died. He was mentioned as son and heir of William in a record relating to the former lands of the Earl of Fife in 1293. He signed the Ragman Rolls of 1291 and 1296, where he was 'Nicol de Soules, baro', but died soon afterwards. His seal is attached to the Rolls and has 6 vertical stripes, with another seal showing a raven. The Nicholas from Fife who paid homage in 1296 may have been a different man. He must have been in charge of Hermitage Castle when the army of Edward I reached there in May 1296. Also in 1296/7 his wife Margaret asked for her 'terce' of the 'Wal de Lydel' (i.e. Liddesdale) which were formerly held by her husband. In 1311 he is listed among Scotsmen whose lands had been taken by Edward II, but were now returned (specifically his lands of 'Tulk and Cluny') because they 'came to his peace'. He married Margaret (or Marjorie), daughter of Alexander Comyn. His children included: Sir William, his heir; John; Thomas; and a daughter, who married John de Keith. His seal bore a device of a bird surrounded by tracery and the words 'SIGILLUM NICOLAI DE SOULĪ'. Ranulph (b.c.1102–bef. 1170) Norman knight, possibly either in Perthshire or belonging to the family of Doddington in Northamptonshire. He was given land in Liddesdale by David I, becoming Lord of Liddesdale. He held the important position of King's Butler to Malcolm IV and perhaps also to William the Lion. Charters of c.1147–51 describe him as the 'cup-bearer to the King of Scots' when he witnessed several lands and rights being granted to Jedburgh Abbey. In the same period he also gave lands of his own to Jedburgh Abbey, including the church of St. Martin in Liddesdale as Osbert his Chaplain held it, and the church of Dodington (near the original family seat in Northamptonshire), as well as the hunting teinds of Liddesdale (according to a confirming charter in this same period); these rights were confirmed in about 1165. He is recorded as 'Rannulf de Sola'. His grant of lands in Liddesdale to the hospital of St. Peter in York was given during the reign of David I and confirmed by Malcolm IV. He is believed to have built the first castle in Liddesdale, at Castleton (near the confluence of the Liddel and the Hermitage Water), sometime in the 12th century. His daughter Julianne married William de la Haya. Probably having no male heir, he was succeeded by his nephew Ranulph. Ranulph (d.1207) probably nephew of the previous Baron of Liddesdale and son of William. He may have been the Ranulph who gave a charter of further lands ('Wambehope') to Jedburgh Abbey sometime in the late 12th century. One of the witnesses was his brother Richard. In the period 1178–88 he witnessed a grant to Cambuskenneth Abbey (along with Gervase Avenel, Lord of Eskdale, Robert of Wilton and Walter Berkeley, Chamberlain). In 1208/9 he was fined in Northumberland for being found with venison (although he may have been already deceased by then). He was assassinated by his domestic servants (presumably in the castle), this story being later confounded with that of his descendant of a century later, William. Richard (13th C.) witnessed a grant in about 1280 where William gave lands near Castleton to Jedburgh Abbey. He was thus a close relative of William, perhaps his brother. He was pardoned by Edward I in 1292 for 'forcibly carrying off Richard de Tayllur from England into Scotland'. The pardon came at the request of William and John (who were probably closely related to him). Sir Thomas (d.bef. 1304) another of the family who swore allegience to Edward I in 1296, where he is described as being from Roxburghshire. His seal there showed a 'bend' and the words 'S'THOME DE SOULIS'. He was probably another son of Nicholas and Annora de Normanville and younger brother of the Nicholas who also signed the Ragman Rolls. He is probably the Thomas recorded in a Northumberland document of 1283. He is listed in 1296 among former Englishmen dwelling in Scotland, whose servants were to be removed. Also in 1296 he is listed as owner of the lands of 'Hoghe' in Northumberland. In 1298 his lands in Stamfordham, Northumberland, are described, and he is then described as a rebel. In 1300 he was delivered as a prisoner to Exeter Castle. In 1303/4 his widow Alicia had the lands of her uncle John 'de Mulcastre' restored and later in 1304 she petitioned Edward I to grant her her husband's lands in Stamfordham. William (d.1278/9) son of Fulco. He is recorded drowning in the 'water of Erthingge' (probably Irthing in Cumbria) after falling off his horse, with the court judging it as 'misadventure'. Sir William (c.1245–c.93) probably son of Nicholas and Margaret Comyn (or perhaps the other Nicholas and Annora de Normanville). He was knighted by Alexander III in 1270. He is probably the William who is recorded being assigned a knight's fee in Stamfordham in 1271. In 1277/8 he and the Bishop of St. Andrews were sent as envoys by King Alexander to talk with Edward I regarding crimes committed on the Border. About 1280 he granted lands near Castleton church to Jedburgh Abbey, specifically 2 arable acres near the cemetery and half an acre of meadow which High the smith held of him; this charter confirmed that he had brothers Sir John and Thomas, and it was also witnessed by Richard 'de Soule', who must have been a close relative. In the period 1279–86 he granted lands in Mow to Melrose Abbey. In 1283 he petitioned English justices for his rights at Stamfordham. He served as Justiciar of Lothian, recorded when he witnessed a document in 1284/5. He was Sheriff of Roxburgh Castle in 1289/90 and Sheriff of Inverness in 1291. He was at the Parliament at Brigham in 1290. He signed the Ragman Rolls of 1291, swearing fealty to Edward I. He was replaced as Sheriff of Inverness in 1291/2. In 1293 he is probably the William whose lands former lands of 'Tholybovile' are recorded, along with his son and heir Nicholas. He married Ermengarde Durward, whose mother was Marjorie, daughter of King Alexander II. His children probably included: Nicholas, of Liddel Castle; Ermengarde, who married Patrick, Earl of Dunbar; and another daughter, who married John of Atholl. William (d.c.1321) son and heir of Nicholas. He had a letter of protection from Edward I in 1304. He claimed the lands of Liddesdale in 1306/7, but they were given to Johanna, widow of Sir John de Wake, until he came of age. At some point he switched allegiance from England to Robert the Bruce. He was later restored in the family's lands and became Lord of Liddesdale, as well as taking up the position of hereditary Royal Butler. He also gained other lands through forfeiture, e.g. Westerkirk, Kirkandrews, Gilmerton, Nisbet, Longnewton, Caverton, Maxton and Mertoun. His lands of Liddesdale, as well as Longnewton, Nesbit, Maxton, Caverton and Westerkirk, were forfeited (probably after Bannockburn) and were granted to Robert, son of Robert the Bruce. He was one of the signatories of the Declaration of Arbroath in 1320. Also in 1320 he witnessed the charter of the Lordship of Jedburgh to Sir James Douglas. His family held Hermitage Castle until about 1320, when he was accused of attempting to murder Robert the Bruce, and forced to confess at the 'Black Parliament'. He probably died a prisoner in Dumbarton Castle. The conspiracy may have involved a plan to place him on the throne instead of Bruce (on account of his great-grandmother being a daughter of Alexander II). It is said that he led a lavish and privileged lifestyle and had 360 squires in his livery when apprehended at Berwick in 1320. Known for mistreatment of his servants, his reputation reached legendary status after his death, popularised by John Leyden and others. His reputation may have arisen from Bruce's propaganda machine, mixed with stories of his ancestors. He is reputed to have dabbled in black magic, and to have been responsible for the disappearance of local children, with the help of his assistant 'Robin Redcap'. He also supposedly slew 'Cout o Kielder' by drowning him in a nearby pool in the river. He is said to have been boiled alive in lead at the Ninestane Rig by his own men, perhaps helped by Walter Scott of Branxholme, with the cauldron (although absurdly small for the task) long being preserved at Skelfhill. He is often referred to simply as 'Soulis'. He does not appear to have had an heir, but his daughter Ermengarde (or 'Ermygarda') held rights to the income of half of the lands after his death. Forfeited lands of his in Longnewton are referred to in an English record of 1335/6. All of his Liddesdale lands were confirmed to Sir William Douglas in 1342. After his death this once important family faded from memory, although the Parish of Saltoun ('Soulis-ton') continues to hold their name, and the ancient cross near Eccles probably bears the family arms (the name is often written 'de Soulis and also spelled 'de Soules', 'Soulle', 'Soullis', 'Soulys', 'Sowles', 'Sules', 'Sulis', 'Sulys'; it may come from a place in Northamptonshire or in Normandy).

soum (soom) n., arch. a unit of pasturage, the number of sheep or cattle that can be supported by a unit of pasturage (typically 1 cow or 10 sheep, although the number of sheep seems to have varied with location) – 'Allow the said Mungo Armstrong two summ of sheip extraodrinary for this year, and one summ yearly thereafter, for keeping up the shiell in the Muir' [BR1726], '... and particularly he has had taken in soums from the tenant of Appletreehall, from the tenant of Crowhill, from Galalaw' [DCW1765], '... the Town Herd of Hawick, who had liberty of taking in soums ...' [C&L1767], '... the tenents of Weensland put to the charge of the Hawick Herd they paid ten groats a soum for' [C&L1767], 'A soum is said to have consisted of about ten sheep or one cow, a horse having been considered as equal to two soums' [RWB] (also spelled 'summ', etc.; cf. soom and sowm).

Souter (soo-tur, soo'-ur) n. native of Selkirk, literally a shoemaker, referring to the town's former main industry – 'Up wi' the souters o' Selkirk And down wi' the Earl o' Home! And up wi' a' the lads That sew the single-soled shoon!' [T], 'Soutersane, souters twa, Souters in the Back Raw' [T], 'On behind them came the 'Souters', Leal of heart and courage true, Men who never stain'd their honour, But resolv'd to die or do' [JAHB], 'With saddle and bridle, like mosstroopers born, The Souters of Selkirk still muster at morn ...' [WHO] (derived from Latin; note it is also used sometimes for a native of Forfar).

Souter Land (soo-tur-lawnd) n. soubriquet for Selkirk.

Souter's Acre (soo-turz-ā-kur) n. former name for a piece of land in Wilton Parish that was part of the estate of Whitehaugh. It was sold to Thomas Laidlaw in the mid-1800s and was valued at £11 13s 4d in about 1874 (the spelling and hence pronunciation are based on handwriting in the Land Tax Rolls).

the Southern Reporter (thu-su-thurn-ree-pōr'-ur) n. newspaper, published in Selkirk from 1855 by the Tweeddale Press. It became the 'Southern Reporter and the Border Standard' in 1957, and merged again with the Hawick Express and the Kelso Chronicle & Jedburgh Gazette in 1983.

the Southern Uplands (thu-su-thurn-up-lindz) n. range of hills near the Border, generally west of Hawick. It is sandwiched between the Southern Uplands Boundary Fault to the north and the Cheviot hills of England to the south, reaching heights of 800 m and including the Southern Upland Way. The range is dominated by Ordovician and Silurian sedimentary rocks and includes the Carsphairn, Cheviot, Ettrick, Lammermuir, Lowther, Moffat, Moorfoot, Roxburgh and Tweedsmuir Hills – 'Fold upon fold before me, the uplands stretch afar; A land so rich in romance, and song of love and war' [WL].

the Southern Upland Way (thu-su-thurn-up-lind-wā) n. long distance walking route, opened in 1984, running from Portpatrick to Cockburnspath. It is 212 miles (340 km) in length, being the longest of Scotland's long distance footpaths, and comes nearest to Hawick around Yair. It is sometimes jokingly referred to as the 'Southern Upwards Way'.

the South Fencibles Regiment (thu-sowth-fen-si-bulz-re-jee-min') n. voluntary force set up Henry, Duke of Buccleuch in 1778, being embodied at Edinburgh. The Duke recruited from throughout the Scottish Borders. He is recorded being in Castleton on hiring day, for example. The regiment was disbanded at Dalkeith in 1783.

Soutra Aisle (soo-tra-I-yul) n. site of the Soutra mediæval hospital, where a section of the Roman road Dere Street is also preserved. It is located off the A68 between Jedburgh and Dalkeith, the Aisle itself being a private burial vault for the Pringles, dated 1686 and built in part of the former Church.

Soutra Hospital (soo-tra-hos-pi'-ul) n. a mediæval hospital, located on high ground about 40 miles from Hawick, just off the A68, also known as 'Soltre'. It was founded by Malcolm IV in 1164 for the accommodation of travellers and pilgrims and the treatment of the sick and poor of the district. It was dedicated to the Holy Trinity. A spring near there was known as the Trinity Well, and visited by many for its supposed healing powers. It was run by the Augustinian monks from the 12th century until around 1650, being annexed in 1462 to Trinity College Church and Hospital, Edinburgh. The superior was referred to as the 'Magister' or Master. It fell into ruin after the Reformation, and Trinity College Church and Hospital itself was demolished in 1848 (to make way for the railway). It was said that much of the ruins were used locally for building materials in the early 19th century. Excavations at Soutra have provided a wealth of evidence relating to mediæval medicine, including over 300 identified plant species. The hospital was run with the granting of 300 estates, including a small-holding in Hawick, 'Soutra Croft'. This is almost certainly the area that became known as the Trinity lands at the eastern end of town. The endowment of this croft may have gone to an altar dedicated to Mary in the church of Soutra (also written 'Soltre' and variants).

Soutralands (soo-tra-lawndz) n. another name for Trinitylands, the part of Hawick given to Soutra Hospital. In 1507 they are referred to as 'vulgariter vocatas ly Soltrelandis' and in 1578 as 'Sowtre landis in Hawik'.

Spalding (spawl-, spee-din) n. Charles 'Chairlie Speedy' (19th C.) manager and elder in Allars Kirk in the late 1800s. He could be the son of George and Agnes Stewart (born in Hawick in 1846, and who died in 1903) or the son of Robert and Jean (born in about 1837). Charles (19th/20th C.) one of the survivors of the Gallipoli Campaign, who visited the region in a group of Hawick veterans in 1965. George (b.1818/9) plasterer in Hawick. In 1851 and 1861 he was at 8 Cross Wynd. He married Agnes Stewart and their children included: Agnes (b.c.1841); Charles (b.c.1845); Ellen (b.c.1847); and Jemima (b.c.1850), Thomas (b.c.1853); Robert (b.c.1855); and Isabella (b.c.1860). James (19th C.) professional runner from Hawick. He recorded many wins in the period 1863–78. In one Common-Riding Games, he won the 300 yards, 500 yards and half-mile races. He also won races in Middlesbrough, Bolton and Burnley. He is probably the son of William and Margaret born in 1845/6. John (1838–1918) son of William and Margaret Scott. He was a framework knitter in Hawick. He married Catherine Michie in 1863; she was daughter of Robert Michie and Christina Gillis. They emigrated to Canada, settling in Galt, where they were friends with fellow Teri Robert Murray. Their children were Christine, Helen, James, Catherine Wiekie and Mary. Robert (18th C.) resident in Harwood Mill. In the baptismal records his surname is recorded as 'Speedy' in 1790 and 'Speeden' in other years. This makes it clear that he was 'Spalding' and probably an ancestor of the family nicknamed 'Speedy' in Hawick in the 19th century. His children included: George (b.1790), Charles (b.1792), Jean (b.1792), Janet (b.1792) and Jean (again, b.1795). Robert (b.1810/1) frameworker in Hawick. In 1841 he was at 'Head of Silver St' and in 1851 was on 'Kirkstyle Place'. By 1861 he was on Dovemount St. in Wilton. He married Jane Robson in Hawick in 1834. Their children included: Charles (b.c.1837); William (b.c.1840); and Isabella (b.c.1842). Robert (1855–1934) younger son of George and Agnes Stewart. He married Agnes Revel in 1876. He could be the 'Robbie Speedy' mentioned in 'Hawick Immortals'. William (d.1430) cleric of the Diocese of St. Andrews. He had a dispensation from the Pope in 1429, that he could hold 2 benefices, despite being the illegitimate son of a priest and a married woman. He thereby became Rector of Collace and Dean of Dunblane. Later in 1429 he said he would demit Collace to be Rector of Lilliesleaf, which had also been requested by Nicholas Tunnock. He became Rector of Lilliesleaf, but died 'in Curia' before giving up Collace. William (b.1812/3) frameworker in Hawick. In 1841 he was on the Back Row, in 1851 he was living on the Kirk Wynd and was in Mather's Close in 1861. His wife was Margaret and their children were: John (b.c.1839); Helen (b.c.1840); Charles (b.c.1841), who married Agnes Stevenson; Mary (b.c.1843); Robert (b.c.1845); James (b.c.1846); and Robert (b.c.1853). He also had a step-daughter, Mina Young, suggesting that his wife was previously married to a Young. He is probably the William who emigrated (with his family) to Guelph, Ontario and worked as a weaver in the factory of McCrae & Armstrong; while John Inglis was working there, he led the men to stop the machines and sing 'Teribus' at the factory during the Common Riding of 1876.

spang (spang) v., arch. to span, stretch across, spring, leap, stride vigorously – 'And she lap sae yald, and spanged sae hich, Her rigging banes did rattle' [JTe], 'Now the hiring is done, and off they a' spang, They rin to the ball-room to join wi' the thrang' [DA], '. . . they'd think as muckle, an speirin (speer-in) n., arch. questioning, inquiry, information – 'Be so good as write your Mother and me letters if you have got any spearings of William' [TEL] (often plural; there are various spellings).

The maister spiered a thing That fand me oot a fule' [WL] (also spelled 'spier' and 'speer'; from Anglo-Saxon).

Speirmanslands (speer-minz-lawndz) n. former name for lands in Bedrule Parish. In 1623 they are 'Speirmanislandis' when granted to Thomas Ker of Cavers-Carre, along with Fulton, Crosscleuch, Menslaws and Ruecastle. They were also named in services of heirs for Kers of Cavers Carre in 1672, 1678 and 1684. The precise location is uncertain (it is 'Spearmanslands' in 1672, 'Spearmanelands' in 1678 and 'Spirmansland' in 1684).

Speirs (speerz) n. Kenneth 'Kenny'(??–) professional folk musician born in Gala. He worked for many years as a teacher in Hawick and lived near Denholm. He was a founder member of the John Wright Band, released the solo albums 'Bordersong' (1998) and 'North Wind Blowing' (2002) and has recently formed the band Real Time, with their self-named CD released in 2002, followed by 'Hell and High Water' (2004). He has also organised guitar workshops locally. His songs of a local flavour include 'My Borderland'.

speirt (speer', speert) pp., arch. asked, inquired – 'He stottit oot wi' founert look, Syne at the sky he spiert; 'Is my name Airchie Paiterson? If no, I'm keen to hear't' ' [WL] (also spelled 'spiert').

spelleen (spe-leen) n., arch. spelling – 'Oo've hed ever sae mony ill coonts an ill spelleens at the skuil the day, bit A got thum aa richt' [ECS].

Spence (spens) n. Alan (12th/13th C. listed in the period 1214–49 as witness to the sale of lands in West Lilliesleaf by Adam, son of Adam of Durham to Melrose Abbey. His name was given as 'Alano spens'. It seems likely that he was somehow associated with Lilliesleaf. Barry L. (1950/1–2017) son of William, he ran Spence's Music Shop for more than half a century, taking over from his father in 1966. Starting at the height of Beatlemania, he was the main person from whom Teries bought hit records through the last decades of the 20th century and into the 21st. A blues fan himself, he stocked all kinds of music. He was a long-standing member of the Teviotdale Harriers. His wife is Margaret and their children Adrienne and Sandi. John of Condie (d.1573) son of James, he became a Lord Advocate in Scotland. He was also Queen's Advocate to Mary, Queen of Scots, from 1555. He acted as one of the curators for the young Sir Walter Scott, whose father had been killed in 1552. In 1564/5 he signed the bond between the Scotts and the Kers and also signed the further bond of 1568/9. Rev. John (19th C.) minister at Denholm Congregational Kirk 1844–46. In 1844 he married Ann Drew of Portobello. He seems to have left the ministry and there are records of 4 children being baptised in Rhu Parish, Argyll to a couple with the same names. Rev. John Ryrie (1880–1957) born in Helensburgh, son of James and Jane Ryrie. He graduated M.A. from Glasgow University in 1901 and B.D. in 1905, and was licensed by the Presbytery there in 1905. He became assistant at South Leith before being ordained as minister at Southdean in 1907. He remained there until 1950. He married Janet, daughter of James Currie and their children included James (b.1911). He published 'Border Shrine – Souden Kirk' (1951). Matthew (16th C.) farmer at Weens. His barn and yard are mentioned in the 1562 document regarding the Barony of Feu-Rule.

Spence's (spen-seez) n. Spence's Music Shop at 4 Buccleuch Street, which has been Hawick's main supplier of recorded music, instruments and equipment from 1966. The business was started by William Spence in Drumlanrig Square in 1962 before moving to its familiar location. William's son Barry retired in 2017.

Spender (spen-dur) n. Robert 'Rab' (17th C.) recorded on a gravestone in Abbotrule. His wife 'Margat Turnbul' was commemorated on a stone that was set into the east window of the ruined church, but is now not discernible.

sperk (sperk) n. a spark – 'ee think ee're a bright sperk div ee?', v. to spark – 'And the roar of the pitte was in their mouthes, And its fire was sperkin i' their eyn' [JTe], '... whaese heidmaister Robert Wood sperked off his lifelong interest in poetry' [IWL], to issue, fly out, to sputter (as grease in cooking), to spatter.

sperkit (sper-kee', -ki') pp., poet. sparked – 'The kerlyn's eye it sperkyt wi' joy, Her leathery chaftis grew wide ...' [JTe].

the Spetch (thu-spech) n. the Spetchman's (or Spetchmond) Haugh, an area of the Teviot above the Laurie Bridge. For much of the 20th century it was a favourite area for bathing in the Summer – 'Yer great-great-grannie's great-great-grannie Bathed in my Spetch in sunshine balmy ...' [WP], '... Dookin in the Spetch was braw Divin in off the Dunk wa'' [IWL].

the Spetchman's Haugh (thu-spech-minz-hawch) n. full name for the Spetch, being the flat land in the Park, on the south bank of the Teviot adjacent to the Laurie Bridge. The name is old, but not officially recorded until recently, hence its origin is obscure. It is written as 'Spetchenhaugh' in a disposition of 1709, printed in the report on the division of Wilton Common in 1765. In 1709 the land was feued by Robert Langlands of that Ilk to James Wight, weaver in Hawick. James Wight was served heir to his grandfather in 1751, who then sold the land to Thomas Turnbull of Fenwick. The area was used in the period 1812–14 for morning roll call of the French prisoners of war in Hawick (although willows are a prominent riverside feature near there, there is no evidence to support suggestions that it comes from an old Scots word for 'willow', and it seems more likely to derive from a personal name like 'Spetch' which means a leather patch or a cobbler in some dialects; it was 'Spetchinhaugh' in 1765).

the Spetchman's Sang (thu-spech-minz-sawng) n. poem written by David Hill, with the refrain 'A day frae Hawick's a day wasted'. Music was written for it by Scocha in 2001.

Spetchmond Haugh (spech-mund-hawch) n. a variant on the old name for the Spetch.

spewin (spew-in) adj. extremely bad-tempered – 'spewin o ill-naitur'.

the Spider Hoose (thu-spI-dur-hoos) n. name for an outbuilding at Branxholme. Tradition says that it was either named after one of the Duke of Buccleuch's favourite horses, or after a story connected with Wullie Craw climbing up to its rafters. It is recorded as 'Spider's House' in the Ordnance Survey Name Book and map of 1859, to the west of the castle ruins.

spier see speir

Spiers (speerz) n. Rev. George pastor of Hawick Baptist Church around the 1950s. He was also minister at Shotts in Glasgow.

spile (spīl, spī-ul) v., arch. to spoil – '... for breach of Sabbath by gutting herring in the evening thereof, qch he ingeniously acknowledged, thinking they would spile if lying ungutted until ye Monday' [PR1712].

spill (spil) v., arch. to spoil, damage, ruin something – '... and gif any wobstar spillies, and makes not sufficient work after tryell, under the pane of £10 to the Bailies, and satisfaction to the party owner thereof' [BR1657].

Spinnie Bank (spi-nee-bawngk) n. area on the west side of the Liddel Water just north of Langhaugh, passed through by Spinnie Sike.

Spinnie Sike (spi-nee) n. stream that runs roughly south-east to join the Hermitage Water near Netherraw. There are the remains of 2 stock enclosures and sheep stell to the south of the stream. There was once a blacksmith's shop at 'Spinniesbank-End'.

spinnel (spi-nul) n., arch. a spindle.

spinniers (spin-nee-urz) n., pl., arch. a woman's cap with long lappets, a pinner – '... Aw'll leave her ma eye-holes To be a squintin'-glass To set her spinniers streight, For they often stude aglei' [JSB].

Spinniesbank (spi-neez-bawngk) n. former farmstead in Castleton Parish. It is marked on Stobie's 1770 map just to the north of Langhaugh, and must have been located on Spinnie Sike.

spinnin (spi-nin) n. the industry of spinning yarn in Hawick grew up in the early 18th century and became fully established in the 1750s. Women would spin on the 'muckle wheel' and the yarn was carried on horseback to places such as Kendall, Boroughbridge (Yorkshire) and Stirling. The spinning wheel held a prominent place in households into the early 19th century, a wheel being the main gift for a new bride. The two main types were the 'little wheel' and the 'meikle (or muckle) wheel', an example of the former from Crumhaughhill being in the Museum. In 1733 a spinning school was opened in Hawick and in 1734 a spinning mistress was hired from England to take charge of the school, with some funding from the Board of Trustess for Manufactures. The first factor for the school was Robert Howison, and the instigation for founding it came from Douglas of Cavers, as well as Sir Gilbert Eliott of Stobs, John Chisholme of Stirches and some other local gentlemen. Weaving appears to have been added about 1736. The industry really took off when machinery was first introduced around 1798. In about 1850 it was estimated that yarn-spinning supplied about 1300 looms in Hawick.

spinnin jenny (spi-nin-je-nee) n. a spinning machine that allowed multiple spindles to be turned using a single wheel, invented by James Hargreaves in Lancashire in 1764, and named after his daughter. It was in use in Hawick from the late 18th century until the mid-19th. In 1816 there were as many as 100 hand spinning jennies in the town. It was eventually replaced by the 'spinning mule', invented by Samuel Crompton; with the invention of an automated version in 1825 it was soon in wide use in Hawick's spinning mills.

spinnin jenny (spi-nin-je-nee) n., arch. a cranefly, 'daddy longlegs', a toy made with a piece of pipe-stem and a match, which spins by twisting a thread attached to the middle of the match and threaded through the pipe-stem (cf. jenny-spinner).

spinnle (spi-nul) n. a spindle – 'And the yairns whussle throwe the hacks Frae spinnle heavy banks' [WL].

the Spion Kop (thu-spI-in-kop) n. former drinking club based on the Loan from about 1890 (named after the mountain in Natal, which was the scene of a defeat of the British by the Boers in 1900, and Dutch for 'Look-out Hill'; the same name was used throughout Britain, e.g. for a street in Selkirk and the terraces at Liverpool Football Club).

spirly-leggit (spir-lee-le-gee') adj., arch. having thin legs.

spitefi (spī'-fi) adj. spiteful – '... Her mither's choice, to be fair to the lass, For a spitefu' dame was Herodias' [WL] (also written 'spitefu' ').

spite o (spīt-ō) prep., arch. in spite of – '... To drive care awa, spite o' frost, wund, an' snaw, The young fellows roond gathert there, man' [JoHa], 'Yet spite o' their snortin' an' snuffin' ... ' [JoHa], '... Her mither's choice, to 'Yet, spite o' needle, yarn an' clout, His waulit hair was keekin' out' [RDW].

spither (spi-thur) n., poet. empty speech, frothy talk – '... Or some auld aunt's loquacious swither O' with and glee', 'Wha valu'd not your college spither, A rigmarie' [JR] (this word is obscure).

Spittal see Spittal-on-Rule

Spittal (spi'-ul) n. fishing village south of Berwick that became a seaside resort town in the 19th century – 'Thae browt 'im a mount for heiz got the smittal Juist half the size o' a donkey at Spittal' [MB]. Also a local name for Spittal-on-Rule and other former hospitals, e.g. Smailholm Spittal.

Spittal Brig (spi'-ul-brig) n. bridge at Spittal-on-Rule, carrying the A698 across the Rule Water. The original bridge was built in 1748 by the Douglases of Cavers and stands just to the north of the modern bridge.

Spittalflatt (spi'-ul-flaw') n. former lands in Liddesdale, recorded as 'Spittelflatt' in 1541. It is stated to be valued at 6 merks and at that time vacant, but formerly tenanted along with the lands of Flatt. It is presumably adjacent to Flatt. The connection is to a hospital is unclear, but just to the north is Abbotshaws.

Spittal Haugh (spi'-ul-hawch) n. former farm near Spittal-on-Rule. It was a tenanted farm of the Cavers estate.

Spittal Mill (spi'-ul-mil) n. corn mill of the 17th century in Spittal-on-Rule, and name of the associated farm. The old Teind Barn there was presumably connected with the mill. John Borthwick was miller there in 1683. James Scott was miller there in 1694. In the 18th century the lands of Spittal-on-Rule were separated between the Murrays, Veitches and Bunyans, with the Veitches being tenants of the mill lands. John Veitch is recorded as tenant in 1792–97, Mark Turnbull in 1837, James Turnbull in 1852 and James Ingles in the 1860s.

Spittal-on-Rule (spi'-ul-on-rool) n. former village in the easternmost part of Cavers Parish, near the confluence of the Teviot and the Rule, between Denholm and Bedrule, off the A698. Rich in history, it is now little more than a farm. A leper hospital was probably founded there before 1425, with an attached chapel, possibly dedicated to St. Mary. The location of the chapel may have been the same as the later teind barn, or very close. In the chapel in 1425/6 there was a meeting of Turnbulls, Scotts and others to investigate the leprosy of John Turnbull of Minto (since lepers were legally forbidden from holding lands). John Davidson in Minto was recorded in 1493 having stolen 100 ells of woollen cloth from there. George Thomson was recorded there in 1502 (when he had 2 pigs stolen) and John Scott was also recorded there in the same year. The patronage of the church there was granted to James Douglas of Cavers in 1508 and the 'advocation and gift of the kirk of Spitaill' was listed among the rights inherited by the Barons of Cavers in 1509. The small graveyard was still used in the 18th century, and the vestiges of a former orchard were still clear in the early 20th century. At the nearby 'Dead Haugh' the Turnbulls are supposed to have begged the King's forgiveness (with ropes around their necks) in 1494, instead every tenth man being hanged. The town was burned by Hertford's men in 1545, probably destroying the hospital and chapel. However, the 'advocation of the church' was still mentioned in the 1558 Douglas of Cavers charter. In 1554 an acre of land 'in terris hospitlis de Rowle, super lie Harparhill' was granted to Archibald Elliot of Gorrenberry, along with the advowson of the chapel of St. Mary at Caerlenrig (perhaps suggesting a connection between the chapel at Caerlenrig and the one associated with the leper hospital at Spittal). The Mains of Spittal-on-Rule was sold by William Douglas of Cavers to Gilbert Ker of Primside in 1563. The lands were farmed by Patrick Storie in 1605 and Richard Brown in 1610. Robert and John Wright were tenants there in 1642. John Lindsay was tenant there in 1684 when declared as a fugitive for refusing to conform to Episcopalianism. 9 people were listed there on the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Adam Leyden was there in 1721, Alexander Gowk in 1726, John Bunyan in 1727–30, John Veitch in 1727, James Bunyan in 1728, William Veitch in 1729–30 and William Douglas in 1733–44. John Fairbairn was there in 1781 and Thomas Rutherford and Archibald Whillans were servants in 1799. Thomas Rutherford, John Murray, John Henry and Archibald Whillans were living there in 1801. There were 3 tenants in the 18th century, the Murrays, Veitches and Bunyans, but the 3 holdings were combined in 1807. Thomas Bunyan was there in 1795. In about 1795 it was listed among parts of Cavers Parish that were nearer to Bedrule Kirk than their own kirk. William Johnstone is recorded as tenant in 1797. Robert Middlemas was a servant there in 1797 and George Veitch in 1799. John Turnbull was farmer in 1841 and 1851, James Turnbull in 1861 and William G. Turnbull in 1868. It was purchased by Thomas Greenshields Leadbetter from Mrs. Palmer-Douglas in 1913. The farm was a major local supplier of Leicester rams in the 19th century. Several ruins can still be found here, including the Teind Barn, once the oldest building in the parish, and an ancient stone grave, found in a small knoll near the modern farmhouse. The 1863 Ordnance Survey map shows the location of the site of the chapel and old graveyard. The Kirkyard (or 'Leper') Well was said to possess healing powers, and the last Denholm witch was buried here. The hospital that gave its name to the location was possibly for lepers and maintained by monks from one of the nearby abbeys. A road bridge crosses the Rule Water nearby, with the adjacent arch of an older structure. The village was the location for a toll on the road between Denholm and Jedburgh; the Toll House at the road bend has had its windows bricked up and painted over with 'false' windows. Often locally called just 'Spittal' (and spelled various ways in the past, such as 'Spittle' and 'Spittalrule'; the origin of the name is 'hospital by the river Rule', with 'spital' being a Middle Scots word for a hospital, usually connected with a monastery; there are many places in Scotland and northern England that are also called 'Spittal' for the same reason; the name first occurs as 'spittale de roull' in 1493, then 'villa de spittale' in 1502, 'Spittale' in 1508, 'Spitaill' in 1509, 'Ecclesia de Spittale' in 1511, 'Rewle Spittel' in 1545, 'the Spytyll, Roull' in 1548/9, 'Spittalroull' in 1558, 'Spytall of Roule' in 1563, 'Spittroull' in 1576/7, 'Rowll Spittell' in 1605, 'Rowlespittell' in 1610, 'Rowllspittle' in 1619, 'Spittle of Reule' in 1649, 'Spitle' in 1694 and 'Spital' in 1801; it is marked 'Spittel of Roull' on Pont's c.1590 manuscript map, 'Spittell' and 'Spittel of Row' on Gordon's c.1650 maps and 'Spittell' on Blaeu's 1654 map).

Spittal Plantin (spi'-ul-plawn-tin) n. former name for a plantation near Spittal-on-Rule. It is unclear whether this referred to a wood near Spittal Ford, by the Teviot, or a wood by the Rule. The linen weavers of the Denholm area used to soak their lint near here.

Spittalrule see Spittal-on-Rule

Spittal Toll (spi'-ul-tōl) n. former toll-house at Spittal-on Rule, on the corner of the A698, with the road to the north-west formerly leading to the ford. The building is well known for its pretend painted windows. It is also known as 'The Lucky Hoose'.

Spittaltoon (spi'-ul-toon) n. lost place name in Liddesdale, once part of the lands of Mangerton.

It is listed as 'Speteltoun' and worth 4 pounds in a rental roll of c.1376.

Spittal Toor (spi'-ul-toor) n. Spittal Tower, modern farmhouse on the site of a former fortified house, west of Bedrule, up the Tower Burn from Spittal-on-Rule. The former farm, often just called 'Tour', was owned by Turnbulls in the 16th century. Gavin Turnbull 'of the Toure' was recorded in 1551 and James Turnbull 'of the Toure' in 1579/80. It was valued at £104 in 1643 and 1663. The 'Mains of Tour' (perhaps the same as the Mains of Spittal) was valued at £560 in 1643 and at that time owned by Douglas of Bonjedward. By 1678 the former lands of Turnbull of Toor were then in the hands of the Douglases of Cavers. The farm was tenanted by the Murrays in the 18th century, ancestors of 'Dictionary' Murray. John Murray was a gardener living there in 1715. [blank] Clerk was there in 1742 and Robert Cavers in 1778. In about 1795 it was listed among parts of Cavers Parish that were nearer to Bedrule Kirk than their own kirk. William Johnstone, younger, was recorded as farmer there in 1797 and Charles Scott was a servant there in the same year. Robert Bain was a servant there in 1799 and in 1801 William Tait and Samuel Porteous were servants and Thomas Oliver a shepherd. Robert Barrie was farmer there in 1851 and 1861. It was combined into a larger farm with Spittal-on-Rule in the 19th century (it was 'touris of Roulwode' in 1622 and 'Tower' in 1715; it appears on Pont's c.1590 manuscript map and Gordon's c.1650 map simply as 'Tour' and on Blaeu's 1654 map as 'Tourr').

spitter (spi'-ur) n., arch. a light shower of rain or snow, small drops, hence drivel – 'Wha valu'd not your college spither' [JR], v., arch. to rain lightly (also written 'spither').

Spottiswood (spots-wud) n. Alicia Anne (1810–1900) eldest daughter of John of Spottiswood, near Lauder. In 1836 she married Lord John Montagu-Douglas-Scott, 2nd son of Charles, 4th Duke of Buccleuch, who left her a widow in 1860. In 1870 she succeeded her brother as heir to the family estate and adopted the surname Scott-Spottoswood. She was said to have had a large collection of antiquities and to have endeavoured to save many of the ruins of Border peels. She wrote poetry and is famous for composing the tune for 'Annie Laurie' as well as other songs. Andrew (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish, mentioned in a Session record in 1635. His children included: Isobel (b.1633); Robert (b.1638); William (b.1642). David of that Ilk (d.c.1550) son of William and Elizabeth Hoppringle. He was probably the 'Spottiswod of that ilk' who was listed in 1549 among the associates of Ker of Cessford who were accused by Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme of raiding and burning his farms at Goldielands and on the Borthwick. He married Katherine Pringle and Jane Brounfield of Hardacres. He was succeeded by his son Ninian. James (15th C.) rector of the church of Rankilburn, listed in 1453 on a roll of bachelors entered at the newly founded University of Glasgow. He is 'rector ecclesiæ de Rankelburn'. James of that Ilk (15th C.) son of Henry. He was listed on a retour of inquest for lands of the Swintons in 1464. He, as well as his sons James and Adam and brother George, are recorded at the Justice-aire held in Lauder in 1493. He married a daughter of Sir Adam Johnstone of that Ilk. He was succeeded by William, who died at Flodden. John (1510–85) son of William of Spottiswood, who was killed at Flodden. He graduated from Glasgow University in 1536, went to London, returned to Scotland in 1543, became a Reformer and was appointed Superintendent of Lothian. He was recorded in 1558 as Rector of Calder, in a document along with John Sandilands, Rector of Hawick; he has been incorrectly named as Rector of Hawick at this time. He was appointed as minister of Calder in 1560. was killed at Flodden). He married Beatrix, daughter of Patrick Crichton of Lugton and Gilmerton and had children: John, who succeeded as minister of mid-Calder; James, Bishop of Clogher in Ireland; William; Rachel, who married James Tennent of Linhouse; and Judith. John (1565–1639) son of John, who was minister of Calder, and grandson of William of that Ilk, who was killed at Flodden. He went to Glasgow University at age 12 or 13, graduated in 1581, and became a favourite churchman of James VI. He was appointed as Archbishop of Glasgow in 1603 and translated to St. Andrews in 1615. He must have temporarily held the superiority of local lands, since he granted a charter to Robert Scott for the lands of Headshaw, Crawknowe and Clews in 1606 and another to John Turnbull for the lands of Barnhills in 1607. He was Moderator at the Assembly that abolished the presbytery. He later became Primate of Scotland and Lord Chancellor of Scotland. He crowned Charles I at Holyrood in 1633. He objected to the Covenant, escaped to England, was deposed and died in London, being buried in Westminster Abbey. He married Rachel, daughter of David Lindsay, Bishop of Ross. His children were: Anne; Sir John; and Sir Robert. Rev. Robert (c.1634–1696) graduating from Glasgow University in 1654, he became minister at Temple in 1663 and was translated to Crichton in 1676. He was deprived in 1681 for not taking the Test. However, he was translated to Abbotrule in 1687, but may only have been minister there for a very short time. He seems to have been a Presbyterian minister, who survived through the Episcopalian years past the Revolution. His wife's name is not recorded, but their children included: Jean; Alexander, who became a merchant's apprentice in Edinburgh in 1677; Robert, who also became a merchant's apprentice in Edinburgh, in 1681; and Elizabeth, who was buried in Greyfriars Cemetery in 1696 (spelled 'Spitiswode', 'Spotswood', 'Spottswood' and variants).

Spout Burn (spow'-burn) n. stream that flows through the plantation from near Cleuchhead farm, past the old Minto House to the artificial lake. It is unclear if it carries on through Minto Glen (it is marked on the 1766 plan of Minto estate).

Spoutburn Park (spow'-burn-pawrk) n. name for a piece of land on Minto estate. It was listed in 1779, 1788 and 1811 along with Coach Park, with a joint value of £43 14s 6d. In 1780 it was recorded being on the western boundary of Lillielaw Park; this suggests that the stream passing through Minto Glen may have been known as Spout Burn.

Spoutgills (spow'-gilz) n. farmstead in Castleton Parish marked on Stobie's 1770 maps, with 'Spoutgillfoot' just to the north. It is on a stream to the south of the Tweeden Burn, perhaps corresponding to the modern Jordan Sike, in which case it would be essentially the same as Blinkbonny. John Armstrong died there in 1756 and is buried at Teviothead. Thomas Beattie lived there with his family in the 1770s and 80s.

Sprot (sprō') n. Edward William of Drygrange (1846–98) younger surviving son of Mark. He presented a bell to Lilliesleaf Kirk. In 1867 he bought the estate of Drygrange from Sir George Leith and built a new mansion there. He married Marian Gray, daughter of James Boyd and also married a second time. His children were: Edward Mark of Drygrange (b.1872), who served with the King's Shropshire Light Infantry; James William Lennox (b.1886); Harold Maitland (b.1888); and John Boyd (1889–98). Frances (1808–1902) sister of Mark of Riddell. In 1883 she gave money to built 6 cottages for 'friendless and deserving widows or daughters of clergymen, and other ladies who had formerly been in better circumstances'. John (18th C.) recorded at Woll on the 1787–92 Horse Tax Rolls. He is recorded at 'New Woll' in 1794. It is unclear if he was connected with the later Sprots of Riddell. John (1775–1817) son of James and Frances Blair, descended from merchants in Edinburgh. He lived at King's Road. Clapham Park, London. He made his fortune in the East India Company and provided for his 2 sons (who may have been minors when he died). In 1801 he married his cousin Mary, daughter of Banjamin Yule of Wheatfield. Their children (baptised in Holborn, Clapham and Streatham) included: Mark (1802–81), who became owner of Riddell; James (b.1804), who (with an amusing coincidence of names) bought the Spott estate near Dunbar; Marion (b.1805); Janet (b.1809); Mary (1811–46), who married Sir William Maxwell; and Caroline Isabella (1817–57), who married Capt. William Fordyce Blair. It is unclear whether he purchased Riddell before his death, or whether that was done by his executors on behalf of his son Mark. Col. John (1830–1907) son of Mark. He was educated in England and Germany and entered the 83rd Regiment as ensign in 1848. He served in Ireland and then for many years in India, where he was also put in charge of public works, directing the building of a road. He was Lieutenant during the Indian Mutiny of 1858. He returned to Britain in 1860, being in charge of the depot at Chatham and serving again in Ireland and in Gibraltar. He took leave from the army spending 18 months touring Europe, but then resumed duties as Major of the 91st Highlanders. He was then appointed Assistant Adjutant and Quartermaster-General for Scotland. He is said to have been the first person to recognise the potential military uses for the bicycle. He retired with the rank of Lieutenant-General in 1885, having succeeded to the Riddell estate in 1883. Despite reaching a higher rank, he is often referred to as 'Colonel', this being from his position as honorary colonel of Princess Louise's Argyll and Southern Highlanders. He extended the main farmhouse at Riddell in 1898. He was a Deputy-Lieutenant and Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. He joined the Jedforest Club in 1885. In 1869 he married Georgina Mary, daughter of H.E. Surtees of Redworth Hall and The Grove, county Durham. In 1878 he secondly married Cecilia Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Rev. W.B. Doveton of Corston. In 1886 he thirdly married Charlotte Gertrude, daughter of W.T. Cole of Boscastle, Cornwall (whose mother was Anne Rutherford, daughter of William Scott of Raeburn and Lessuden and cousin of Sir Walter Scott). His children included: Cecilia Mary Dorothea (1880–1964), who married Patrick Keith Murray; John Mark Francis (1881–1946); Col. Alexander William Ramsay (b.1883); Cecil George; Edward Walter Hearle (1887–1975); Gertrude Gladys Violet (1888–1966); and Jack Hugh Stewart (b.1894). He wrote 'History of the family of Sprot and the ancient mansion and estate of Riddell'. He also wrote several military pamphlets. Maj. John Mark Francis 'Mark' of Muselee and Riddell (1881–1946) son of Lt.-Gen. John. He gained the rank of Major in the Royal Scots Dragoon Guards (or 'Greys'). He presented his regiment with the Sprot Cup in 1906 for an annual steeple chase race. He was President of the Scottish Agricultural Organisation Society. He served as Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. He married Meloria, daughter of Sir John Adam Hay. His eldest son was John, who succeeded. Their daughter Cecilia Doriel married Sir William Whitelaw and became Viscountess Whitelaw. Maj. John 'Jock' (1910–2010) of Riddell, born at old Riddell House. His sister was the Viscountess Whitelaw. He was educated in Buckinghamshire and Kent and joined the British Linen Bank in Edinburgh, later working for the International Paint and Compositions Company in London. He served with the Territorial Army and during WWII was a lieutenant at Drem Airfield, an intelligence officer in St. Boswells, a captain in charge of Italian prisoners of war in Galashiels and then was with special forces in India. He was stationed in Galsshiels when Riddell House burned down in 1943. After the War he modernised the Riddell estate, developing the woodland in particular. He also served on Roxburghshire County Council. He was on the Royal Company of Archers and was an elder of Lilliesleaf Kirk. He also chaired the National Farmers' Union in Selkirkshire, the Co-operative Forestry Society and the Scottish Woodland Owners' Association. He was awarded the M.B.E. for his role as Vice-Chairman of the Electricity Consultative Council for the South of Scotland. He became interested in the history and the history of the Riddell estate. He moved to Clerklands in 1987. He lived to his 100th year and was buried at Lilliesleaf. An autobiography was published on his 98th birthday. The estate was transferred to his nephew Andrew Grant. Mark (1802–83) eldest son of John and Mary, daughter of Benjamin Yule of Wheatfield, he was born in London, in the same house as Benjamin Disraeli. His father spent time in India and made his fortune in London. His great uncle Mark, was a financier who was involved with founding the London Stock Exchange. He was educated at Trinity College, Cambridge. His father died in 1817, and inheriting a fortune, he abandoned plans to enter the army (with an ensign's commission purchased for him in the 90th Regiment of Foot). The Riddell estate was purchased in 1823, while he was still a minor. He was listed as proprietor in Pigot's 1825/6 and 1837 directories. In 1826 he built an estate office there, which is now the main farmhouse. He had the lands drained and planted and built several farmhouses at that time. Letters relating to an agreement he had over the march dykes at Riddell are preserved in the Walter Mason Collection. In 1848 he was appointed as a Deputy-Lieutenant of Roxburghshire and he also served as a Commissioner of Supply and Justice of the Peace for the county. In 1851 he was farmer of 1705 acres, employing 12 men and 26 women and had 9 servants living with his family in Riddell House. He was listed at Riddell in Slater's 1852 directory. In about 1874 he was listed in the Land Tax Rolls as owner of the Barony of Riddell, as well as Friarshaw, Newhouse and other lands in Lilliesleaf Parish; he also held some of Midlem, the superiority of lands in Ashkirk and Bowden Parishes, as well as Lilliesleaf. In 1829 he married Elizabeth, daughter of John Shewell of Sutton Park, Surrey. His sons were: John (1830–1907), who succeeded; Capt. Mark George (1832–59), who died in Geneva; James Lewis Boyd (1845–57), who died at school in Ealing aged 13; and Edward William (1846–98) of Drygrange. Mark (b.1881) see Maj. John Mark Francis (also sometimes 'Sprott').

S.S. Mary an David (sintz-mā-ree-an-dā-vid) n. Roman Catholic Chapel at 15 Buccleuch Street. This was the first Catholic church in Hawick since the Reformation, made necessary largely by the arrival of Irish workers, who had been meeting informally through the 1820s and 1830s. Fr. William Wallace of Traquair worked to build the church and purchased land in 1841. This plot (later designated 15 Buccleuch Street) was bought from William Wilson, between the Subscription Rooms and the meeting house of the Society of Friends. The land formerly held several 2-storey buildings, which were demolished. The foundation stone was laid in June 1843 (amid inclement weather), officiated by Fr. Wallace himself, flanked by the 2 Bailies. It was opened by Bishop Gillis the following year, with several other priests in attendance, as well as Earl and Lady Traquair and the choir of St. Mary's. It original seated 400, the furnishings, altar and pulpit being given by the Earl of Traquair. When erected it was the only Catholic church between Edinburgh and Carlisle. A house for the priest was built in 1850/1 on the property immediately to the south and the associated school was started in 1854 (later with a separate building behind the Chapel on Buccleuch Terrace). A side aisle on the south was constructed in 1879, increasing the seatings by about a factor of 2. The Statue of the Sacred Heart was unveiled in 1913 and a War Memorial in 1920. The adjoining property (built as the Subscription Rooms) was purchased in the 1920s, and opened by Archbishop McDonald as the new Halls in 1930. The ornamental facade was removed in 1967 when renovations extended the front by a few feet. For much of the 20th century there was an assistant in Hawick, as well as the Priest. The Scottish Catholic Archives have records covering the period 1793–1939 and there are marriage and birth records from 1847 in the National Archives. The roll of the priesthood is: James Monaghan 1846–47; Patrick Taggart 1847–87; Patrick Shivers 1887–92; John Stevenson Lyle 1892–1912; George H. Bennett 1912–18; Thomas Gillon 1918–24; Edward Mellon 1924–30; Dominic Hart 1930–38; Daniel Kelly 1938–42; Gordon Gray 1942–47; James K. Stalker (staw-kur) n. Rev. James (d.1816) son of John of Edinkillie, he graduated from King's College, Aberdeen in 1777. His brother Donald was schoolmaster at Rothiemurchus. He was licensed by Chanonry Presbytery in 1784 and in 1785 was ordained as assistant minister at Fort George. Here he was Chaplain to the Royal Forces, leading to some service that earned the gratitude of his Patron, William, Duke of Roxburghe (then Lord Bellenden). He was also made a Burgess of the Burgh of Nairn in 1793. He was presented as minister of Lilliesleaf by the Duke of Roxburghe in 1804 and admitted there the following year. However, this was against the wishes of some of the Lilliesleaf parishioners, who wanted the previous incumbent's son John Campbell as their minister. This disagreement led to about 70 families seceding to form a Relief congregation, which built the secession church in the village. Despite a rocky start, he stayed at Lilliesleaf until his death, and remained unmarried. A letter to his brother describes in detail the circumstances of his presentation to Lilliesleaf Parish. He subscribed to Andrew Scott's book of poetry, published in Kelso in 1811. He died at the Manse.

Standhill (stawnd-hil) n. site for sidings on the Waverley Line, just north of Hassendean, in Ancrum Parish. The farm (or at least its 2 parts) was once owned by the Kers. David Murray was recorded there in 1494/5, when sheep, cattle, horses and other goods were pillaged from there, as well as the farm being burned. George Turnbull of Standhill is recorded in 1553/4. John Hodge was there in 1580. Hector Turnbull had a charter of 'feu farm' of the '2½ lands' of Standhill in 1610 and it was held by the Turnbulls of Knowe, as recorded in 1631 and in 1660 and existing in the National Archives. John Turnbull 'in Standhill' had his lands valued at £120 in 1643; he is also recorded as owner in the Land Tax Rolls of 1663 and 1678. It appears to have passed to the Riddells about 1664. However, Turnbull of Standhill is supposed to have been the leader of the Covenanter supporters who besieged and broke into Drumlanrig's Tower in 1679. It later formed part of the estates of the Elliots of Minto; there are deeds among the Minto papers dating from 1610 to 1806. 'Captain Turnbull' paid tax for 14 windows there in 1748. In 1779 it is recorded that the lands were owned by 'Mrs Turnbull and Mrs Stenhouse' and in 1788 by Capt. Stenhouse. John Amos was farmer there in 1794–97. William Jaffrae and James King were living there in 1801. The Minto estates sold it in 1951 (it is 'Standhill' on Pont's c.1590 manuscript map and Blaeu's 1654 map; it was 'standhil' in 1494/5).

St. Andrew (sin'-awn-droo) n. patron saint of Scotland, who was crucified on a diagonal cross in Patras, some of his bones later finding their way to Scotland. The saltire was adopted as the flag of Scotland, according to legend because it appeared against the blue sky when King Angus prayed to St. Andrew during a battle in 832 C.E. It is reputedly the oldest national flag in Europe. The same saltire has made its way onto the Hawick flag.

St. Andrew's Convent (sin'-awn-drooz-konvin') n. name of the former convent and nursing home at Stirches House, often known simply as the Convent.

St. Andrew's Kirk (sin'-awn-drooz-kirk) n. St. Andrew's Church, founded as a branch of the Free Church in 1866, to serve the north end of town and also Wilton. Originally called 'Wilton Free Kirk', it was founded largely through the efforts of Thomas Laidlaw and George Hobkirk, with the first organisational meeting taking place in Peter Laidlaw's warehouse in March 1866. The congregation started with 115 members from Hawick Free Kirk, first meeting in the Exchange Hall until the church was built on North Bridge Street in 1868/9, and then named St. Andrew's. Its gothic-style design was by Glasgow-based architect J.T. Rochead, and it had a spire reaching a height of 103 feet. It was constructed by local building firm George Tait. The church could hold 900 people, and below it was a hall that could accommodate about 200 for Sunday School and other activities. The church manse was built off Weensland Road in 1890. A church organ was added in 1904 and in 1911 there were major alterations (designed by J.P. Alison), with the addition of a church hall. A serious fire in 1922 resulted in major repairs and a closure of 18 months, during which time the congregation joined St. John's. The church was demolished in 1959/60, with congregation becoming part of Trinity Church. The site was used as a petrol station and later a car wash. A roll of the ministers is: Duncan Stewart 1868–1908; William Farquharson 1908–14; James A. T. Kennedy 1915–21; John Mowat 1922–30; George Sutherland 1930–40; John W.G. Masterton 1941–46; Neil D. Stanefield Centre (stān-feeld-sen'-ur) n. club for old people living in the area around the Stonefield housing development, converted from a building on the old brewery site. It has more recently been used as a nursery.

Stanefield Cottage (stān-feeld-ko'-eej) n. former house attached at the north end of the Rockvale block on Lynnwood Road, reached over the mill lade by a foot bridge. William Norman Kennedy and family lived here in the mid-19th century. The whole block was also referred to as 'Stonefield Cottages' and perhaps also 'Slitrig Cottages'. The house was demolished to make way for the Stonefield houding complex (it is marked on the 1858 Ordnance Survey map).

Stanefield Mill (stān-feeld-mil) n. factory on the eastern side of Lynnwood Road, demolished in 1973. It originally received water power via the Slitrig Dam. It was purchased by William Elliot in 1850 and enlarged in 1860. It was occupied by Laing & Irving in the mid-19th century, then Noble & Richardson for a few years (from about 1871), and later Grieve & Laidlaw and J. & R. Macnee, becoming a spinning factory around the 1920s. A painting showing the mill was painted by J.F. Pollocj in about 1890 and is in the Museum (also written as 'Mills').

Stanefield Place (stān-feeld-plis) n. Stonefield Place, housing aimed at elder people, built on the sites of the former Buccleuch Nurseries and Stonefield Mill in 1971–73. A footpath leads there to the old railway line. The housing underwent extensive redevelopment in 2015/6.

Stanegarthside (stān-girth-sīd, -garth-) n. mansion house above the banks of the Liddel Water on the English side. It was originally built as a tower house perhaps around the 13th century, with wings added in 1682. It was long the seat of the Forsters. William Glendinning was at Nether Stanegarthside in 1778 – 'There stands a House, and that a worthy one, By Kersup-foot in the Eye of the Sun; A stately Building, all of plain hew'n Stone, All built within this year or twain' [CWS], 'What map of the Border Country would be complete without Bewcastle, and Stanegirthside, where the Captain of Bewcastle lived?' [DH].

Staneholm (stān-hōm) n. former farmstead in the Upper Teviot valley. It was part of the larger set of lands called Ringwoodfield when leased from Melrose Abbey by the Scotts of Branxholme in 1500. It is probably the land called 'Grangia alias Stanyhetoun' which 'Sym Scot of Fernili and Arche Ellot of Gorumberry' rented from Melrose Abbey in about 1557; it was worth £4 at that time. Blaeu's c.1654 map shows it as 'Stonyhelme' south of Southdeanrig on the 'Cairtann' Burn. The precise location is uncertain, but a connection with Staney Hill, just east of Southdean Rig, seems likely.

the Stane o Destiny (thu-stān-ō-des-ti-nee) n. stone on which Kings of Scotland were historically crowned at Scone, which was removed and taken to Westminster by Edward I in 1296, to be fitted into a chair used to crown subsequent English sovereigns. Although just a rather unremarkable oblong of locally-mined sandstone, the object was held to have mystical properties, with legends claiming it came from ancient Ireland or even the Middle East. In 1950 a group of 4 Scottish students removed the stone from the Abbey and 'repatriated' it to Scotland. With major Border crossings closed the group smuggled the stone by car up the A7 and there is a rumour that it spent the night in Hawick (perhaps in Bob and Nessie Oliver's shop on Drumlanrig Square) on its way north. Certainly one of those responsible, Alan Stuart, had a granny who lived in Hawick at the time. There was a huge police operation to find the culprits and the stone, which was deposited at Arbroath Abbey a few months later, quickly being returned to England, but 'loaned back' to Scotland in 1996.

stane pirrie (stān-pi-ree) adj. daft, featherbrained – 'Stane pirrie (for daft) derived, I think from Pirrie's stone ginger in Hawick' [HAST1958] (probably influenced by the adjective pirry, with a play on the name of the manufacturer Alex Pirrie).

Stanesden Burn (stānz-din-burn) n. former name for a stream near Hermitage Castle. It is mentioned in a description of the lands of 'Merchinlee' granted to monks of Kelso, which formed the site of the original hermitage. The description mentions a ford crossing the Hermitage Water where this stream joined. It has been suggested that it is the same as what is now called the Roughley Burn.

Staneshiel (stān-sheel) n. former farmstead in Liddesdale, close to the Staneshiel Burn. This is probably the 'Stanesheldes' and 'Stanesheld' where John Nixon and Jenkin Nixon were in 1544. It was 'Stanny sheile' and 'Stain sheile' in 1590 and 'Stanesheale' in 1595 when Hob Elliot was there. John Crozier was also recorded at 'Stanyesheile' in 1590.

Staneshiel Burn (stān-sheel-burn) n. stream in the upper Liddel valley. It rises near Bloodybush Edge and runs roughly north-west to join the Liddel Water between Dinlabyre and Steeleroad-end. There are remains of cottages at the foot of the stream, while higher up it contains a waterfall known as 'Kiddslinn' or 'Kitty Linn'. A farmstead there is recorded in 1544. It could be the 'Stanehilburnfoot' where labourer Walter Hislop was living in 1835.

staney (stā-nee) adj. stoney – 'Whan thair juudges ar owerthrawn in stanie pleces . . . ' [HSR], 'How oft a day thy patient feet Maun measure out the stanie street' [JJ], '. . . an the gray waas o Fatlips keekeet oot threh atween the treis that skuggeet Barnhill's staney bed' [ECS], 'A flock mattress wi' muckle lumps That felt like staney rocks' [AY] (also written 'stanie').

the Staney Brae (thu-stā-nee-brā) n. alleyway from Allars Bank to Allars Crescent, with houses being part of Allars Bank. It was formerly part of Backdamgate, and presumably named for its roughness. An anvil at the bottom marks the site of the old blacksmiths.

Staney Burn (stā-nee-burn) n. former name for Honey Burn.

Staney Cleuch (stā-nee-klooch) n. small stream that rises to the north of Skelfhill farm and joins the Allan Water. There are signs of cord rig around it.

Staneyford Moss (stā-nee-fōrd-mos) n. Stonyford Moss, boggy area on the former Synton estate, located to the left of the A7 just before Synton Loch. It was one of 4 boggy areas drained by the Laird of Synton around 1800, and described as covering 40 acres. During the drainage, old oaks and red deer antlers were uncovered. There are traces of rig-and-furrow cultivation to the south. It seems likely (although perhaps on the wrong side of the Ale Water) that this is the 'Staniford' listed in about 1170 in a charter describing the perambulation of the pasture lands granted to Orm of Ashkirk.

Staneygill (stā-nee-gil) n. lands in Liddesdale, to the north of Whisgills. In a rental roll of c.1376 'Stanygill' was valued at 5 shillings. In a 1541 roll 'Stanygill' was leased to Simon Armstrong (possibly of Tinnisburn), and valued at 5 shillings. In 1632 it is listed among the Liddesdale possessions of the Sheriff of Teviotdale, as well as among the lands of Thomas Kerr of Ancrum. Stanygill Rig lies to the east of Tinnis Hill, with the Stanygill Burn running roughly southwards to meet the Tinnis Burn near Redmoss. Where Black grain and Dow Sike join the Staneygill Burn is a sheepfold built over the remains of a rectangular structure, possibly a tower. Jeffrey suggested this was 'Puddingburn Ha' ', but that seems more likely to be much further north, near Paddington Sike. The remains of the tower here are about 7 m by 5 m, with the east wall missing entirely. Further upstream, on the west bank, is a platform suggestive of the location of an illicit still (it is 'Stannygill' and 'Stanygill' in 1632; 'Stainygil' is marked on Blaeu's c.1654 map).

Staneyhaugh (stā-nee-hawch) n. former lands in Liddesdale, recorded on a rental roll of c.1376, with a value of 8 shillings. The precise location is unknown, but probaby on the west side of the Hermitage Water (it is 'Stanyhalch' around 1376; it could be connected with Staneshiel).

Staney Hill (stā-nee-hil) n. hill to the south-west of Old Northhouse, reaching a height of 335 m. It may be related to the lands of 'Staneholm', recorded in the 16th century (it is 'Stony Hill' on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map, but 'Staney Hill' today).

Staney Meadi (stā-nee-me-di) n. former name for lands near Newton in Bedrule Parish, listed as 'Stoney Meadow' in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls.

Staney Stewart (stā-nee-stew-ur') n. dyke builder in John Ballantyne's song 'Pawkie Paiterson'. His first name is unknown, but one possibility is Andrew Stewart, and agricultural labourer living at Crow Byres in 1841, about the time the song was written – 'And as for Stoney Stewart, He's often scarce o' stanes, And for to mend his aulf fail dykes Aw'll leave him ma auld banes' [JSB].

stang (stawng) n., arch. a sting, wound, stab or pain made by a sting – '... by which means they appear to have secured themselves an immunity from the "venomed stang" of the toothache' [WNK], 'Her words nae stang was cairry' [WL].

Stanger (stān-jur) n. Tony (1967/8–) rugby winger, he attended Wilton an Hawick High and played for the school teams, as well as the Wanderers and Linden. He first played for Hawick R.F.C. while still in high school in 1985/6. He later played for the Borders, Edinburgh, Grenoble and Leeds Tykes. He first played for Scotland in 1989 and gained 52 caps, scoring a total of 106 points, including a record 24 tries, one of which was the famous Grand Slam winner. He also played for the British Lions in 1997. He married Bid and settled in New Zealand, running a company that helps to develop coaching skills. A portrait if him was unveiled in the High School in 2025 – 'Come and tell me, Tony Stanger, have your feet returned to earth? Was it for this magic moment that your mother gave you birth? When you louped halfway to Heaven, did you hear the mighty roar, As fifty thousand voices were all willing you to score' [TD].

Stanishope (sta-nis-hōp) n. farmstead in Cavers parish, to the north of the Maidens, reached via a track from Shankend. The Catrail passes near here. It is probably the 'Scanehushope' among lands in the Barony of Cavers resigned in 1368 by Thomas Baliol to his superior William, Earl of Douglas. It is listed among lands in the Barony of Cavers in an English document c.1380. It is listed as part of the holdings of Douglas of Cavers in a charter of 1511. There are further deeds from 1614, 1624 and 1625 in the Douglas of Cavers papers. An account of Roxburghshire written in 1649 gives it as the source of the Slitrig Water. It was owned by the Eliotts of Stobs at the end of the 17th century. It was listed among the lands of Eliott of Stobs in 1678. It was still in the Barony of Cavers when inherited by Sir William Douglas in 1687 and by his brother Archibald in 1698. It was still listed among the possessions of Sir William Eliott of Stobs in the Land Tax Rolls of 1811. William Little was shepherd there in 1861 and R. Elliot was there in 1868. The area is under forestation and an extensive area around the former steading are now sometimes called 'Stennishope forestry plantation' (also written 'Staneshope', 'Stenishope' and 'Stennishope' on the Ordnance Survey map; the origin is probably from Old English 'stan hus hop', 'the valley with the stone house'; the name first occurs as 'Stanehushope' in the mid-14th century, is 'Stenhoushope' in c.1380, is 'Stanishop' in 1511, 'Stenhouse Hope' in 1649, 'Staineyshope' in 1678 and is transcribed 'Stoniehome' in 1687 and 'Stainhope' in 1698).

stanit (stā-nee', -ni') pp., poet. stoned – 'An' the husbanmen tuik his servents an' nevellet ane, an' killet anither, an' stanet anither' [HSR].

stank (stawngk) n., arch. a pond, swampy pool, ditch 'Alang by the dead water stank, Jock Fenwick I met on the lea, But his saddle was toom in a clank, An' wha daur medle wi' me?' [T], '... lying within Leeheads-dykes, on the south side of the runner of the reedy moss stank, and west side of Leeheads easter dyke' [DCW1765] (from French; see also midden-stank).

stank (stawngk) v., arch. to breathe hard, pant, gasp for breath – '... till there was nochts left o the nerrest-hand loch bit paddihs, fishes stankin for braith, an glet' [ECS], n., arch. a deep breath, gasp, pant.

the Stank (thu-stawngk) n. popular name for a bridleway to the south of Lillieleaf village.

stank-hen (stawngk-hen) n., arch. a water-hen, moorhen, Gallinula chloropus.

stankish (stawng-kish) adj., arch. somewhat stagnant – 'stankish water' [GW].

Stanledge (stan-lij) n. former name for Stanedge.

stanner (staw-nur) n., poet. a rounded pebble on a shore – 'Stannirs, the rough projecting stones on the shore of the sea, on the banks of rivers, and the braes of burns' [JL].

stanner (staw-nur) n., poet. a stander, pillar – 'He mæde the stannirs o't o' siller ... ' [HSR].

stannin (staw-nin) pres. part. standing – 'hei was stannin at the bottom o the Policeman's Brae', 'Thy honour is true as the time-stan'in' blue, It aye was, an' ever will be' [JoHa], '... the aod, fat priest was up, stannin' at his own back dour' [JTe], 'He turns the wuldirniss intil ane stannin' water, an' drye gruund intil wals o' water' [HSR], '... so that A was stannin on bluiddy Ancrum Muir' [ECS], 'There was Jock, wui Robbie an Yid, an kens whae forby, stannin at the road-end' [ECS], 'For now o' the Loan I used to ken There's hardly a stannin' stane' [DH], '... Comes breistin abune the tides o nicht To the cauldrife fule still stan'in there' [DH], '... Dotards, can ye leave them stannin'?' [GWe], 'Ee sei, the Queen was at the tither side o' the car frew where Aw was stannin' [BW1978] (also written 'stan'in', etc.; note that 'stand' is usual for the verb, but the present participle loses the d).

stannin stane (staw-nin-stān) n. a large stone that appears to have been deliberately placed in its location, often upright, and of great antiquity. Examples near to Hawick include individual stones at Midshiels, near Saughtree (the Knocking Stone and the White Stones), at Hermitage (the Buck Stone), on Brown Rig, at Lilliard's Edge and near Priesthaugh (the Tinlee Stone), as well as the stone circles at Burgh Hill and Ninestane Rig.

Stan Reid's (stan-reedz) n. popular venue for dances in the pre-WWII years, located in the Drill Hall, and organised by Stan Reid. For the next few years dances were organised by the Territorial Army, but still referred to as 'Stan Reid's'.

Stansfield (stanz-feeld) n. Sir James (d.1687) receiver general for the Scotts of Buccleuch from 1673, taking over the position from Patrick Scott of Langshaw. He was a Colonel in the Parliamentary army. He was murdered near Haddington by his son Philip, apparently because he disinherited him. The curious story involves the body apparently bleeding at the son's touch, this being considered as a divine sign of his guilt, and after the son was hanged his tongue was cut out for cursing his father, his hand cut off for patricide and his severed head put on public display. William (20th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1947 he was the last 'ploughman' recorded in baptismal entries in the parish. This was only 2 years after the first record of a 'tractor man'.

stap (stawp) v., arch. to stop up (a hole), block, stuff, choke, fill up – 'Drawe owt alsua the speer, an' stap the waye agayne thame that persikute me ...' [HSR], '... thaye ar like the deef eddart that stapps hir lug' [HSR], 'Hawick does not use ti stap for to stop except in the expression ti stap up = to choke up or to cram' [ECS], 'The brander's stappeet up!' [ECS], '... An' stap, a dish in ilka haund, Wi' bread ye scarce could see' [WFC], 'So ... I'm weel-weshed, then stapped wi' ingin, And yits and liver, lites and a' thing ...' [DH], 'Then he staps his pipe Wi' bacca rank, And trots till he's dry Alang the bank' [DH], 'I liked to see the big man twirl the poke, And stap it fu' o' sugar and brose meal' [WL], to stop, halt, remain – '... And onward, 'lang the passage hied, But Geordie had nae time to stap' [HSR], to thrust, push vigorously – 'Stap eet in throwe the door!' [ECS], n., arch. a stopper, stave of a wooden vessel, 'Ti take a stap oot o' yin's bicker' means literally to reduce the size of one's dish, or figuratively to humble someone – 'A'll taik a stap oot o yoor bicker = I'll reduce your allowance' [ECS], 'Ti gang a' ti staps' is to fall to pieces, become worthless, deteriorate, degenerate – 'Ma wesheen-tub is geizent. Its gaen aa ti staps' [ECS] (see also stappit).

stap (stawp) v., poet. to stride, take long steps – 'A muckle big, bang fallih that staapeet alang the Jethart road' [ECS], '... And the auld laird stappin' hamewan Is a soured man' [WL], n., arch. a step, stride, long awkward step – 'A'll taik yow doon a stap' [ECS], a tall, awkward person – 'Haud aff me, ye muckle lang staup' [JoJ] (also written 'staap' and 'staup'; see also stappin).

Staplegordon (stā-pul-gor-din) n. village a few miles north of Langholm and name for the surrounding parish. The settlement was formerly of greater importance and was once a burgh in its own right; however, in the 17th century, it was effectively replaced by Langholm as the main town in the araa. The parish was briefly united with Roxburghshire following an Act of Parliament in 1672. It was united with Wauchope in 1702 and its name changed to Langholm Parish. The last parish minister died in 1702, but there is still an old graveyard there, the resting place of former barons, who were de Cunigburgs, Douglases, Glendinnings, and Littles (it is 'Stabilgortoun' in 1324, 'Stablegortoun' in 1493 and 'Stablegorden' on Sandison's c.1590 map).

stappin (staw-pin) adj., arch. striding awkwardly (also written 'staupin'; noted by J. Jamieson; see stap).

stappit (staw-pee', -pi') pp., poet. stopped up, crammed full, stuffed – 'The brander's stappit up' [GW], poet. stopped – '... but the lipps o' thame that speik lees sall be stappet' [HSR], '... when a muckle lang car stoppit and a man wi horn-rimmed glesses stuck his heid oot' [DH].

stapple (staw-pul) n., arch. the stalk of a clay tobacco pipe (also pipe-stapple and stopple).

stapplick (staw-plik) n., arch. the stalk of a tobacco pipe (noted by J. Jamieson; also stapple).

star (stawr) n., arch. the pupil of the eye, particularly in the phrase 'the star o the ei'.

Starcleuch (stawr-klooch) n. a hill between Cauldcleuch and Greatmoor, about 10 miles south of Hawick, also known as Starcleuch Edge – 'Breath of the heather from glade and glen, By Caldcleuch and Starcleuch and Penchrise Pen' [JYH], 'Just the verses, in strong-standing Scots – un-pawky, hale and sound – and all on one theme. A hill called Starcleuch Edge' [DH].

Stark (stawrk, sterk) n. Andrew (1827–1900) from Westruther, Berwickshire, son of Robert and Isabel Moir. In 1861 he was a grocer and corn dealer on Dickson Street in Wilton. He was later a farmer in Lilliesleaf Parish and at Broom in Ancrum Parish. In 1858 in Wilton he married Eliza, daughter of James Riddel. Their children included: an unnamed son (b.1858); Mary (b.1860); Jane (b.1862); James (b.1864); Isabella (b.1866); Robert (b.1870); and William (b.1875). David (17th C.) tenant in Harden in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Ian (1954–), O.B.E., born in Gala, he became known as an champion in horse trial competitions. He won 4 silver medals at the Olympics (in 1984, 1988 and 2000) for equestrian events, as well as gold medals in the European Eventing Championships in 1991 and 1997 and was winner of the Badminton Horse Trials in 1999. He retired from competition in 2007 and in 2013 opened the Ian Stark Equestrian Centre at Greenhill Farm near Ashkirk. He was Chief Guest at the Common Riding in 2003 and guest of honour at the 2012 Hawick Olympics celebration. He was awarded the M.B.E. in 1989 and the O.B.E. in 2000.

starlight special (star-lī'-spe-shul) n. night train that sometimes passed through Hawick station.

starnie (stawr-nee) n., poet. a star – 'When no' a starnie lent its light To cheer my lonely way' [JT], '... And sweetly the starnies a' blink through the blue' [JT], 'I saw the wee starnies beginning to sparkle, Aboon Christen-berry I saw the moon spiel ...' [DA] (cf. ster and stern).

the Star o' Robbie Burns (thu-stawr-ō-ro-bee-burnz) n. song written in 1879 by James Thomson, with music by James Booth (an English-born accompanist, based in Glasgow). It seems likely that Thomson met Booth when the latter was musical director for a performer at the Exchange Hall in 1873. The song was first sung at the Hawick Burns Club by Thomas Strathearn on the 120th anniversary of Burns' birth, in Graham's Hotel (later the Holland House). It was also popularised by the tenor singer J.M. Hamilton. The song was soon taken up by Burns admirers worldwide. It is typically the only song performed at Burns suppers that was not written by the Bard himself (sometimes also pronounced raw-bee).

start an o'er loup (star'-in-ōr-lowp) n., arch. the limited right of livestock to startle and leap over a boundary into neighbouring lands – '... and no beasts belonging to other persons than the tenants ever came upon any of the head-rooms, unless in the way of start and o'er-loup' [DCW1765], '... did not disturb the Hawick horses, as they allowed start and oerloup ...' [C&L1767], 'The tenants of his Grace, whose farms lay contiguous to the town-common, had been in the practice of taking start and o'er loup with their cattle on the burgh muir' [RW] (see also owerloup).

the Station (thu-stā-shin) n. Hawick Railway Station, built when the Edinburgh line was opened in 1849 and reconstructed in 1862 with the opening of the Carlisle line. The original station was about 80 m west of the newer one, and was then used as a goods depot. An extra platform and subway were constructed for the 1914 Highland Show. The Station area also had extensive goods yards and sidings, and the offices of coal merchants. The last train left on 5th January 1969, with the track lifted 2 years later, and the buildings demolished in 1975. The site eventually saw the opening of the Leisure Centre in 1982. There is little remaining to indicate a station was ever there, although part of the original platform is incorporated into the footpath to Burnfoot. The name is still occasionally used to the Station Brig (thu-stā-shin-brig) n. popular name for the bridge across the Teviot, officially called North Bridge – 'When ee stood there on the Station Brig Just lookin' at the waitter There was naething mair excitin' And naething else wad maitter' [AY].

Station Buildins (stā-shin-bil-dinz) n. block of houses between Commercial Road and Laing Terrace, previously part of Dovemount Place, but renamed in 1890, and now being 'Station Buildings, Dovemount Place'. It is 4 storeys high, with shops on the bottom and ornamental dormers. The much more plain lower block on the corner of Commercial Road was added later (this may be the block designed for Alan Watt by J.P. Alison in 1894). In its early days the name 'Station Buildings' was displayed prominently at the top. Businesses here include James Byrdon, grocers, and Kearney the chemists.

the Station Hotel (thu-stā-shin-hō-tel) n. hotel and pub on Dovemount Place, opposite Hawick's former railway station. Also popularly known as 'the Station' or 'the Station Bar'. The building was constructed in 1871, with Scots Renaissance and Baronial features, and is Grade C listed. The signal box by the station had the ability to ring a bell there to warn passengers in the bar that a train was leaving in 5 minutes.

station-maister (stā-shin-mās-tur) n. a station-master – '... where the station-maister has verra obviously juist laid doon his howe and put on his official coat and hat when he heard the signal wires gurrin' [DH].

the Station Viaduct (thu-stā-shin-vI-a-dukt) n. main railway bridge crossing the Teviot just south of the Station, having 6 arches. When it was being built some 'alluvial beds' were unearthed, and a collection of items was donated to the Museum, including 'horns, bones, hoofs, opaque glass, antique pipes'; it was believed that these artefacts were less than 200 years old. The last train crossed it on 18th April 1971, when it was lifting track. The viaduct was blown up (twice!) in September 1975. The base of one of the pillars is still visible in the river (also called 'Teviot Viaduct' or just 'the Viaduct').

statute (sta'-ew') v., arch. to decree, enact – '... the two present baylyeas, and toun counsell being conveined, did statut and enact unanimouslie nemine contradicente ...' [BR1694], '... the said Baylyeas and town Counsell did statut and ordaine that the said Robert Hardie ... should carie the said colour .....' [BR1706], pp., arch. decreed, enacted – 'The said day, it is statute and ordained that the cordiners shall try this market for insufficient leather and unbarkit schone ...' [BR1643], 'It was statut, enacted, and ordained that noe person ... should ... transport or cary any other colour, pencell, or standard ...' [BR1707] (also spelled 'statut').

statutory labour (sta-tew-tu-ree-lā-bur) n. a system by which labouring classes were required to undertake public works up to a certain number of days a year. It was particularly used for the upkeep of roads, following Acts of 1617, 1661 and 1669. In later years there was some compensation for the work done. The system was abolished in 1845 and replaced by land assessment to pay for hired labour. But this would be a regular burden on local men in the late 17th, entire 18th and early 19th centuries.

staucher (staw-chur) v., poet. to stagger, stumble about – 'She chased auld Winter frae the lea Ti staucher hame ti Greenland ...' [WP], 'Gin wi' your faith set firm aboon, Ye staucher on alane ...' [WL] (also spelled 'stacher').

staun (stawn) v. to stand – 'Thy rough and ready weapon's nane sae blunt, 'Twill staun' a rattle 'gainst their cuttl't gullies' [JoHa], 'Sae weel we trow that's no' begun, Will gar us turn or staun' aghast, man' [JoHa], '... behald, he stan's ahint our wa'' [HSR], '... for they loe til praey stanin' in the synigogues an' in the nuiks o' the throwgangs' [HSR], '... But mansions stan split doon the middle, now – On Sunnyhill' [DH], 'Hei was stan'in at his back door, ca'in them blots on the landscape ...' [DH], n. a stand – 'There's pethers and potters, and gingergread stan's, Peep-shows, puff-and-darts, and great caravans ...' [DA] (also spelled 'stan').

staund (stawnd) n. a stand – 'A' kind o' trade's now at a staund, But fill an' toom the bicker' [JoHa], 'The guidman he pu'd doon the gun frae her staund ...' [JoHa], v. to stand – 'Syne bade them keep their hearts aboon, An' staund firm to the carls' [JoHa].

staur-licht (stawr-licht) n., poet. starlight – '... The whaups a' beddit, and ilk lamb and yowe, Snug aneth the staur-licht, the haill nicht afore him' [DH] (see also ster, stern and starnie).

stave (stāv) v. to sprain, wrench, benumb – 'A staved ma pinkie when the baa dunted off eet', 'Staived thoom = a sprained thumb (a painful strain caused by the end of the thumb coming into violent contact with a hard body)' [ECS], n. an injury caused by a sprain or twist – 'it's no broken, it's juist a stave' (also written 'staive').

stave (stāv) v., arch. to walk aimlessly (noted by J.A.H. Murray).

stavel (stā-vul) v., arch. to stagger, stumble (also written 'staivel').

Staven (stā-vin) n. John (16th C.) listed in the Admiralty Court Book in 1557 as 'Johnne Staven in Hawick' when he purchased a tenement in Jedburgh from advocate John Moscrop. The land was on the Canongate, and he paid £20. It is unclear if his surname has been transcribed correctly; it could be 'Steven' or 'Stavert', for example.

Stavert (stā-vur') n. Adam (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Elizabeth Pott and their children included William (b.1635) and John (b.1640). Adam of Hoscote (1750–1827) son of Thomas and Elizabeth Pott. He bought the portion of Hoscote that his brother George had inherited from their uncle, George Pott, and also bought the other portion from his cousin John Grieve. He is probably the Adam recorded at Todrig on the 1785–90 Horse Tax Rolls and 1791–97 at Hoscote. In 1793 he paid the land tax at Philogar in Hownam. He is recorded at Hoscote on both the 1797 Horse Tax and Dog Tax Rolls. He was confirmed in the lands of Hoscote by Hugh Scott of Harden in 1801. He paid the land tax at Hoscote in 1802. He was listed as a Commissioner for both Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire in 1805 and 1819 (although his name was transcribed as 'Stewart'). He was owner of Cunzierton and Harcarse in Oxnam Parish, as well as Outerside in Roberton Parish, according to the Land Tax Rolls of 1811. He was the Laird of recorded when he borrowed money from William Elliot of Harwood in 1824 and still Laird in 1825. He married Anne, daughter of John Brownell of Breck, Recorder of the Isle of Man. Their only child was Hannah, who married Archibald Dickson of Hassendeanburn. In 1797 he secondly married Agnes, daughter of John Scott of Whitehaugh; she is recorded as a widow in 1851, living with her brother James Scott at Whitehaugh, and she died in 1855, aged 83. Their children were: Thomas (1798–1847), who succeeded; Margaret (1801–65), who also later succeeded to Hoscote; Elizabeth (b.1805–1862), who married Richard Bryn; and John (1807–59), who succeeded his brother Thomas. When he died his trustees included Walter Scott, George Pott and James Pott. His gravestone in Roberton Cemetery appears to say that he died at the age of 84. Lieut.-Col. Adam William (1939–) current holder of the 'Stavert of Hoscote' title. He was educated at Stowe and Sandhurst. He married Shuna Nancy McNab and has family. Andrew (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Margaret Brown and their children included Janet (b.1776) and Walter (b.1778). Andrew (19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Margaret Elliot and their children included Elliot (b.1838). Andrew (1809–91) son of Robert, he was a farmer at Dykecrofts in Castleton Parish. He was recorded there in 1841 and in 1851 he was farming 1500 acres and employing 13 labourers. He was also there on the 1861 census and still there in 1868. He married Margaret Armstrong in 1836 and their children included: Ann (b.1834); Robert (1838–99), who moved to England; Francis (b.1840); Mary (b.1842); William (1843–91), died in Cheshire; Thomas (b.1845); Margaret (b.1847); Helen (b.1849); Andrew Graham (b.1851); and Jessie Elliot (b.1854). His brother Robert (a discharged soldier) was also living with them. He died at Dykecroft. Archibald (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Jean Foster and their daughter Helen was baptised in 1656, with witnesses Adam Ogilvie and John Henderson. Archibald (b.1806/7) tenant farmer in Saughtree. In the 1834 electoral roll he is listed as joint tenant along with his brother Robert (residing in Manchester). The lands were assigned to them by their father with the consent of the Duke of Buccleuch. He is listed among heads of households in 1835–41. He was recorded at Saughtree in Pigot's 1837 directory and Slater's 1852 directory. He was on the Borders Union Railway Committee for Liddesdale in the 1850s. In 1851 he was farmer of about 3,000 acres of 'mountain-land', employing 4 labourers; in 1861 it was 3,200 acres and employing on average 8 labourers. He lived with his sister Janet. In the early 1860s, at this suggestion, Oliver's Auction Mart in Hawick added the sale of lambs. He donated an item formerly belonging to Johnnie Armstrong of Gilnockie, this being a direct ancestor of his mother. He also donated a red deer to the Museum in 1863. He was still recorded at Saughtree in 1868. In 1875 may be the 'Mr Stavert, of Saughtree', who donated to the Museum an 'ancient stone cross'; it is unclear if this is the same as one of the pieces of cross from Abbey Sike connected with Elliot. Archibald of Hoscote (b.1828) eldest surviving son of William and Marion Park. He became Laird of Hoscote in 1857, succeeding his aunt Margaret, his uncles having already died. He also owned lands in Oxnam and Hownam parishes, and had a house in Edinburgh at 34 Palmerston Place. He was recorded in the Land Tax Rolls of about 1874 (incorrectly as 'Andrew') as owner of Cunzierton and Harcarse in Oxnam Parish, as well as (correctly as Archibald) Outerside. In 1857 he married Rosina, daughter of William Hope, and she died in 1897. Their children were: William James (b.1858), Rector of Burnsall, Yorskshire and Chaplain to the Earl of Craven; Thomas Hope (b.1859), Major in the Leinster Regiment; Herbert John (b.1861) accountant in Edinburgh; Archibald Arthur (b.1864) with the Priory of South Queensferry, linlithgow; Francis Edward Vose (b.1870); and a daughter. Miss C. (18th/19th C.) listed at Florida in 1821 when she subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border'. This was probably the farm of that name in Liddesdale. It is unclear how she was related to other Staverts. Elizabeth 'Lizzy' (18th/19th C.) recorded in Hawick in 1815 when her child died. Dr. Elliot (1810–85) son of Thomas and Janet Armstrong, he was born at Saughtree in Castleton Parish. His forename came from his maternal grandmother, Margaret Elliot. He graduated in medicine from Edinburgh University in 1834 and became a doctor in Preston, Lancashire, where he was also a councillor. In 1837 he married Margaret Jenkinson and they had children Elizabeth, Thomas and Margaret. He secondly married Ann Eliza Whitehead. He died at Saughtree and his surviving daughter Margaret was an executor. Elliot (19th C.) farmer in northern Liddesdale. He was donator to Hawick Museum of the 2 stone cross pieces which were found near the Abbey Sike in the mid-19th century. The first was about 4 feet long, in the shape of a sword handle, and found about 1850 near the 'Abbey'. The second was a rounded head with a cross on each side, found by shepherd John Chisholm in the Abbey Sike in 1880. He could be the Elliot (b.1838), son of Andrew, baptised in Castleton. George (b.1701/2) herd at Whitfield. When between the age of 12 and 13, he was farm servant to the 4 tenants of Mabonlaw with his father and after 7 years they went to Whitfield, where his father died in about 1731. He was herd at Whitfield until about 1736 and then at Drinkstone for the next 3 years. He was recorded at Whitfield in 1730. He witnessed baptisms in Wilton in 1730 for William Harkness in Stouslie, Robert Scott in Tandlaw and James Turnbull in Appletreehall. He married Jean Elliot in 1729 and their children, baptised in Wilton, included: George (b.1730); Jean (b.1732); Bessie (b.1734); and Walter (b.1739). The witnesses in 1730 were Robert Scott and William Harkness (in the same year he was witness, along with Robert Scott, for William Harkness). He was in Todshawhill in 1764 when listed among the men selected to perambulate the boundaries of Wilton Common. A story is told in which either he or the previous herd at Whitfield was tied up by men who were cutting peat on Wilton Common, in order to stop him hounding off their horses. George (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. His children included Agnes (b.1737). He could be the same man as the contemporary George who had children baptised in Wilton Parish. George (18th C.) tenant in Allanhaugh Mill. He married Betty (or 'Eliza) Neil in Roberton in 1750 and their children included: Mary (b.1758); Thomas (b.1760); and Betty (b.1766), who probably married Henry Turnbull. George (18th C.) married Ann Roger in 1775, the marriage being recorded in both Hawick and Wilton Parishes. George (18th/19th C.) farmer at Orchard, listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Walter is listed alongside him, and so presumably his brother or son. George (18th C.) married Jane Gledstains in Hawick in 1782. George (1756–1807) son of Thomas and Elizabeth Pott. He inherited part of Hoscote from his uncle George Pott. He was a surgeon in the Royal Navy. He is probably the George who owned Outersiderig in 1788. In 1783 he married Elizabeth Brownell, sister of his brother Adam's first wife. Their children were: Thomas (b.1787), Deputy-Lieutenant in Selkirkshire; and William (b.1792), who married Marion, daughter of Archibald Park, Windymains. He died in Liverpool. James (d.c.1682) tenant in Earlside. His will is recorded in 1682. He must have been related to William, who is recorded at Earlside in 1684. John (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Margaret Hill and their son John was baptised in 1650. Alexander (b.1636) and 'Heilling' (b.1641), with no mother's name recorded, may also be his children. John (17th C.) resident of Minto Craigend who appears in the Hearth Tax records of 1694. John (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He is recorded in Todshaw in 1720, 1723, 1725 and 1726. He married Marion Wilson in Roberton in 1718. Their children included: Thomas (b.1720); John (b.1723); George (b.1725); and Thomas (again, b.1726). He may be the John in Wiltonburn who was one of the men selected to perambulate the boundaries of Wilton Common in 1765. John (17th C.) resident of Minto Parish. In 1738 he married Helen Veitch from Cavers Parish. Margaret (b.1740), baptised in Cavers, was probably their child. Perhaps the same John had children to a previous marriage, Agnes (b.1732) and Jean (b.1734). John (18th C.) married Margaret Scott in Hawick Parish in 1769. His daughter Elizabeth was baptised at 'Todshaw hillshiel' in Roberton Parish in 1771. She may have been the Betty who married John Henderson in Cavers in 1791 and probably John Turnbull in Wilton and died in 1831 at West Port. He is probably related to the earlier John recorded at Todshaw. John of Hoscote (1807–59) born in Roberton Parish, son of Adam. He was Laird of Hoscote after Thomas, his older brother. He served as Justice of the Peace. In 1841 he was living in Toxteth Park, Lancashire, with his sister Elizabeth Bruce (who was a widow) and his mother. In the 1850s he was living at Burngrove. He was elected as a Life Member of the Archæological Society in 1858. In Somerset in 1842 he married Elizabeth Bridget Watson, who died in 1868, aged 48; she was daughter of William Watson of Burnhead. He had no children and died in George Street, Edinburgh. Margaret (1801–65) elder daughter of Adam Stavert with his wife Agnes Scott. In 1851 she was living with her mother and uncle, James Scott of Whitehaugh. She inherited the estate of Hoscote after the death of her brothers Thomas and John. She married her cousin, Thomas Stavert, and died without children. Hoscote was inherited by her nephew Archibald. Ralph Alan (d.1978) inherited Hoscote in 1932. During WWII he was posted to India, where he worked as an engineer. He married Pearl Gallagher and she died in 1985. The iron gates, removed during the war, were replaced after his death, as a memorial to him. They are buried at Borthwick Waas. Robert (17th/18th C.) early member of this local family. He is listed at Earlside along with William on the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. He is also recorded in 1695 at Earlside (or 'Earlswood'). His children (baptised in Cavers Parish) included: Janet (b.1695); Robert (b.1701); Isobel (b.1705); and Thomas (b.1709). Robert of Earlside (18th C.). First of the local lairds (rather than tenants) of this family, he may have been the son of Robert born in 1701. Robert (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Hummelknowes in 1737 and Ashybank in 1745. His children included: Isabel (b.1737); Margaret (b.1739); William (b.1743); Jane (b.1745); and William (b.1747). Perhaps the same Robert, married to Henrietta Black, had several children baptised in Cavers, including Thomas (b.1750), Walter (b.1752), Janet (b.1753) and Elizabeth (b.1756). Robert (18th C.) farmer at Effledge according to the 1794 Horse Tax Rolls. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton. He was probably son of Thomas, farmer at Saughtree. He married Helen (or 'Nelly') Pott. Their children included: Thomas (b.1780), who farmed at Saughtree; Robert (b.1781); and Helen (b.1783). He is probably the Robert recorded at Saughtree on the 1785–92 Horse Tax Rolls. Robert (b.c.1780) servant at Coliforthill according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Cavers Parish. He may have been related to Thomas, who was previously farmer at Coliforthill. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. His wife was Mary Graham and their children included: Robert (b.1808); Andrew (b.1809), farmer at Dykecrofts; and Ketren Elliot (b.1810). Thomas (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Marion Laidlaw and their children included William (b.1684) and Marion (b.1692). The witnesses in 1684 were John Purcell and William Purdom. He may be the Thomas who witnessed a baptism in Hawick in 1695 for John Armstrong in Park. Thomas (17th C.) resident at Todshawhaugh according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident of Minto Parish. His son John was baptised in 1705. Thomas (b.1697) son of William, he was baptised in Cavers Parish. He may be the Thomas who married Marion Williamson and whose son William was baptised in Galashiels Parish in 1723. Thomas (1709–93) son of Robert. He occupied the farm of Coliforthill, it is said this was a reward for military service rendered to the Duke of Buccleuch. He paid the Horse Tax at Coliforthill in 1785–97. Although supposed to have died in 1793, he is probably the Thomas recorded at Coliforthill in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He was additionally taxed for having 3 non-working dogs in 1797. In 1744 he married Elizabeth (or Betty, d.1793), daughter of Adam Pott of Hoscote; his wife's sister Jean married Walter Grieve at the same time in Roberton. They had a large family, including:

George (b.1756), who inherited part of Hoscote; Adam (b.1750), baptised in Cavers, who was later Laird of Hoscote; Betty (b.1752), Jean (b.1758) and Janet, none of whom reached adulthood; and Robert, who married Helen Pott. He may be the Thomas whose daughter Betty (b.1745) and unnamed child (b.1746) were baptised in Kirkton. He may also be the Thomas whose children Margaret (b.1748), William (b.1754) and Thomas (b.1761) were baptised in Cavers. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was recorded at Broadlee in 1753, 1762 and 1763. His children were probably John (b.1747), Isabel (b.1750), Margaret (b.1753), George (b.1756), William (b.1759), Mary (b.1760), George (again, b.1762) and Janet (b.1763). He may be the Thomas who married Margaret Lamb in 1749, the marriage being recorded in both Roberton and Wilton Parishes. It is unclear how he might have been related to Thomas, farmer at Coliforthill. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. His son Robert was baptised in 1756. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Marion Davidson and their daughter Helen was baptised in 1767. Thomas (d.1798) farmer at Saughtree. He is probably the Thomas listed there on both the 1797 Horse Tax and Dog Tax Rolls. He is recorded in the Edinburgh Magazine as dying 'in consequence of a fall from his horse in hunting'. His son Robert probably took over as farmer of Saughtree. Thomas, listed as farmer at Saughtree in 1799 was probably his grandson. Thomas (d.bef. 1810) resident of Roberton Parish. He may have been the son of Thomas (who lived at Broadlee), baptised in Roberton in 1756. He is probably the Thomas who married Jane (or 'Jean') Kidd in Roberton in 1777; her death is recorded in Hawick in 1810, by which time he was already deceased. He was recorded at Harden Burnfoot in 1781 and 1784. His children included: Margaret (b.1778); Thomas (b.1779); Marion (b.1781); and John (b.1784). Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish who became a spinner in Hawick. He was at Sawburnsyke in 1801. He married Margaret Dodds, who died in 1811. Their children included Thomas (b.1801), baptised in Kirkton. Thomas (1779–1831) son of Robert and Helen Pott. He was farmer at Saughtree. He is probably the farmer at Saughtree recorded on the ballot for the Militia in Cavers Parish in 1799 and 1801; in 1801 he was recorded being in the 'Yeomanry Cavalry'. He subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. He married Janet Armstrong, probably daughter of Archibald Armstrong, farmer at Sorbietrees. Their children were: Robert (b.1802); James (b.1803); Archibald (b.1806); Thomas (b.1808); Elliot (b.1810), who was a doctor in Preston; Helen (or Ellen, b.1812), who married John Murray and died at Wolfelee farm; Janet (b.1814); Agnes (b.1816); and John Armstrong (b.1824). He may be the Stavert of Saughtree who was on the Committee of the Proprietors of Castleton Library. Thomas, J.P. (b.1787) elder son of George, grandson of Thomas and Elizabeth Pott. He was a Deputy-Lieutenant of Selkirkshire. He married his cousin Margaret. Thomas (1791–1869) born in Hawick Parish, son of Robert. Both his parents died when he was 8. He moved to Ettrick at the age of 14, where he was one of the men eployed to haul building materials for Thomas Boston's memorial. In 1820 he married Margaret Boa, and they had their first child, Catherine in Scotland. In 1821 the family emigrated to Prince Edward Island (Canada), where he was one of the pioneer settlers. They had several children who went on to be farmers on Prince Edward Island. Thomas of Hoscote (1798–1847) elder son of Adam. He was born at Hoscote, and lived in the house until he died, unmarried. The family were Lairds of Earlside and then Hoscote from about 1695 until 1900. He was listed as a Commissioner of Selkirkshire in 1819, when still younger of Hoscote. He became a member of the Jedforest Club in 1821. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He was involved with financial deals with the Elliots of Harwood in the 1830s. He was listed among the local gentry in Pigot's 1837 directory. He was listed as 'Proprietor' at Hoscote in 1841, living with 5 servants. He was succeeded by his brother John. Thomas (18th/19th C.) spinner in Hawick who subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He could be the framework knitter, married to Euphemia who lived on the Loan and was born in about 1805; his wife was Euphemia Bramwell and their children included Margaret (b.1835), Thomas (b.1837) and Jamima (b.1839). Walter (17th C.) mentioned in 1655 when Robert Ruecastle was ordered by the Hawick Bailies to pay him 'four merkis, borrowed when he went from Glasgow to Edinburgh, and 7s. Scots for a leg of mutton'. Walter (18th/19th C.) farmer at Orchard, along with George, listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He could be the same Walter recorded at Nether Tofts in the 1794 Horse Tax Rolls. Either he or a younger Walter was recorded as a labourer at Ormiston on the 1801 Militia ballot in Cavers Parish. William (17th C.) married Marion Henderson in Ashkirk Parish in 1660. Their son John was baptised in 1661. William (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Agnes Scott and their son Walter was baptised in 1661. William (17th C.) recorded in 1684, along with his wife Jean, signing a petition to the Laird of Cavers against having to pay a year's rent towards the fine exacted for the release of the good Lady Cavers. He is the first local man of this family on record, although they may have been retainers of Douglas of Cavers since the time of Otterburn. He may be the William listed at Earlside along with Robert on the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. He is surely related to James in Earlside, whose will is recorded in 1682. He may be the William whose son Thomas was baptised in Cavers in 1697. William (17th/18th C.) married Malie Stoddart in Hawick Parish in 1707. William (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Elizabeth Scott and their children included: Walter (b.1760); John (b.1762); Mary (b.1765); and William (b.1768). William (18th/19th C.) draper and grocer in Lilliesleaf, listed in Pigot's 1837 directory. He may be the 70 year old William recorded on Main Street in 1841. He is probably the William who married Ann Brown and whose children, baptised in Lilliesleaf, included: Elizabeth (b.1812), a straw-hat maker in Lilliesleaf; William (b.1814), sawyer and ploughman; and Janet (b.1817). He is probably the draper 'Wullie', after whose 'roup', the main village draper became John Lunn. William (18th/19th C.) stockingmaker in Hawick who subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. William (b.1792) younger son of George, grandson of Thomas and Elizabeth Pott. He married Marion, daughter of Archibald Park, Windymains. Their eldest surviving son Archibald became proprietor of Hoscote after the death of their distant cousin Margaret (who was also the wife of his uncle Thomas). William (b.1814) son of Lilliesleaf draper William. He was a sawyer on Lilliesleaf Main Street in 1851 and a ploughman at Riddell West Lodge in 1861. He married Agnes Riddell and their children included: William (b.1854); David (b.1855/6); and Thomas (b.1857/8). William James (19th/20th C.) proprietor of Hoscote. He wrote an introduction to 'The Annals of a Border Club' in 1898 (formerly written 'Stavart', 'Stevert', etc.).

Staward (staw-urd) n. Henry (14th C.) traditionally said to be the ancestor of the Stavert family. He may be the Stavert who carried the pennon of the young Laird of Cavers (Archibald Douglas) at Otterburn. The story is also told of how his helmet was so dented at the Battle that he had to have it fixed by a blacksmith on the way back to Scotland. The Stawards (or Staverts) are traditionally retainers of the hereditary Sheriffs of Roxburghshire.

stawed (stawd) pp., adj., arch. sated, surfeited, full of drink, tired of something, wearied – 'A'm staw'd o' kail every day' [GW], 'Weel, A ranged the haaf o the toon, or A turnt staaed' [ECS] (also written 'staaed'; cf. seek-staaed).

stay (stā) n., poet. a help, support – 'Becaus thou hest been my staye, therfor in the skaddaw o' they wings wull I rejoyce' [HSR].

St. Boisel (sin'-boi-zul) n. (d.c.664) Abbot of Melrose Abbey and teacher of St. Cuthbert. Almost all that is known about him comes from Bede. He was a Northumbrian, trained at Lindisfarne by St. Aidan. He is supposed to have had prophetic powers, predicting his own death in a plague. He was buried at Melrose. Relics relating to him were taken to Durham, and parts of a shrine dedicated to him can be seen in Jedburgh Abbey Museum. His day was once celebrated on 23rd February. The town of St. Boswells was effectively named after him.

St. Boswells (sin'-bo-zulz) n. formal name for the town known as Bosells.

St. Boswells Fair Road (sin'-bo-zulz-fār-rōd) n. name used for the drove road across the middle of Wilton Common on the 1764 map.

St. Bullion's Day (sin'-bu-lee-inz-dā) n., arch. St. Swithin's Day, 15th July (from St. Martin of Bullion, whose feast day was 4th July, which became 15th July in the new calendar).

St. Clair see Sinclair

St. Cuthbert (sin'-kuth-bur') n. (c.638–87) 7th century bishop, born in the Borders, possibly on Leader Water. He was Prior at the old Melrose Abbey in the early 660s, and this was later one of the resting places for his body (although he was buried at Holy Island). He was called a saint because his body was said to have been miraculously preserved 11 years after his death (and also said to be still uncorrupted when examined at the time of the Reformation!). He is traditionally supposed to have lived for a time near the location of St. Mary's in Hawick, founding a church there and spreading Christianity throughout Teviotdale and beyond. A description of miracles described in a 12th century account of his life (by Reginald of Durham) contains one of the earliest mentions of Hawick. It also refers to a chapel dedicated to him, which has been identified with a site at Cogsmill, and which was associated with several apparently miraculous stories. This may be the same place referred to by Bede as a place where St.Cuthbert took shelter, and miraculously found a loaf of bread, when travelling from Carlisle to Melrose. His remains were removed from Lindisfarne by his followers and moved from place to place, finally coming to rest at Durham Cathedral, where they are to this day, along with several relics associated with him. In the Middle Ages both 20th March and 4th September were celebrated as his saints day.

St. Cuthbert's (sin'-kuth-burts) n. popular name for St. Cuthbert's Kirk.

St. Cuthbert's Chaipel (sin'-kuth-burts-chā-pul) n. chapel on the Slitrig dedicated to St. Cuthbert, noted in the 12th century by Reginald of Durham and believed to have been at a site near Cogsmill. The chapel is supposed to have been founded in 687 (the year the saint died) and already ruined by the 12th century. Stories were related by Reginald in about the 1170s, as told to him by Dolfinus, Pastor of Cavers. The miracles include: a crowd celebrating his saint's day being protected from a snowstorm, even although the chapel was roofless; 2 women from Hawick, Sægifa and Rosfritha, whose candle went out, but another one appeared; a woman (Dolfinus' mother) was cured of swelling, after being an invalid for 17 years; a flock of sheep belonging to a poor widow from Cavers Parish was protected from wolves in the churchyard; a woman from Raperlaw, who was crippled from birth, was cured; and Hugh Fleming from Yorkshire, fled to Teviotdale, spending the night in the chapel, where moss from the stone basin prevented his enemies from recognising him. There is now no sign of the building, although the location has been associated with an apparently levelled shelf at Cogsmill, measuring 49 yards by 31 yards, with the probable graveyard surrounded by an earthen bank and covered with trees. This lies about 400 feet south of Adderstoneshiel farmhouse, and the stand of trees was planted to mark the site in about 1830. The location was probably first identified in an article in the Hawick Advertiser in 1862 (perhaps by J.A.H. Murray). The area was once locally referred to as 'the Chaipel Park'. Excavations in the late 19th century uncovered 2 carved globe-shaped stone finials, which were added as gateposts to the farm garden. It is suggested these date from the 17th century, although there is also a record of some much older stonework being unearthed earlier. The associated graveyard must have been used for centuries, but there were already no existing stones there by the mid-19th century. Note that there have also been suggestions that the site of the chapel may have been near Penchrise (presumably an erroneous interpretation of the name) or near Hummelknowes (because of the adjacent Priestcrown).

St. Cuthbert's Court (sin'-kuth-burts-kōr') n. housing built on Slitrig Crescent opposite St. Cuthbert's Church in 1984, previously occupied by James Melrose & Sons engineers. It was essentially rebuilt from a wing of the former brewery.

St. Cuthbert's Cricket Club (sin'-kuth-burts-kri-ki'-klub) n. cricket club formed in 1862 for the pupils of St. Cuthbert's School and junior members of the Church choir. They played on the Brewery Haugh and had George Peterson and Ben Tillotson as professionals at various times. Nicknamed 'the Saints', it was the last club to survive, other than Hawick & Wilton, folding in 1889.

St. Cuthbert's Fitbaa Club (sin'-kuth-burts-fi'-baw-klub) n. rugby club associated with St. Cuthbert's Cricket Club in the late 19th century. It was formed in 1877, with William Laidlaw as Captain for the first 2 seasons. They played against the separate 'Hawick' and 'Hawick and Wilton' teams, and won the whole Borders championship one year. The club folded in 1892.

St. Cuthbert's Haugh (sin'-kuth-burts-hawf) n. another name for the Brewery Haugh.

St. Cuthbert's Kirk (sin'-kuth-burts-kirk) n. St. Cuthbert's Episcopal Church. The foundation stone was laid in 1857, after the 5th Duke of Buccleuch gifted the land between Slitrig Crescent and the river and paid for the building. The design was by Sir George Gilbert Scott (responsible for the resoration of several English Cathedrals, as well as the Episcopal Cathedral in Edinburgh and the Foreign Office in London), with John Herbertson of Galashiels the main builders and Melrose's supplying the iron work. The church was opened in 1858, and gave the first permanent home to a congregation that traces its roots back to the Disestablishment of the Church of Scotland in 1689. In Hawick it is sometimes referred to as 'the English Kirk'. For a long time it started its services half an hour later than the other churches. It was named after the local St. Cuthbert, who is said to have had a chapel nearby. There is a stained-glass window showing him as a bishop holding the head of King Oswald of Northumbria in his hand (apparently representing the fact that the Abbot of Melrose was the King's Confessor, thus holding his conscience). There is also an 1889 memorial window to the 5th Duke of Buccleuch, showing him presenting a model of the building to the Bishop of Glasgow, and 2 memorial windows for the Scott-Watson family of Burnhead, as well as a War memorial window, unveiled in 1921. The nave had 4 bays and there is a bell-cot over the chancel arch. The reredos by J. Oldrid Scott (son of the main architect) was added in 1905. At that time the niche in the apse became the site for a statue of St. Cuthbert holding the head of Oswald of Northumbria, like in the window design. The chancel screen is by Sir Robert Lorimer, and was added in 1908, at the same time that a vestry was built (designed by Lorimer and John Fraser Matthew). The vestry contains the original communion table, lent to the congregation in 1847 by Isaac and Johanna Edmondson. A plaque in the church commemorates to 2 Grieves of Branxholme Park who were killed on board naval vessels before WWI. The nearby Church Hall was formerly part of the brewery (and was converted around 1980 and is now 2 houses). The church posseses its own Episcopal Cemetery, and the adjacent Rectory has been converted into houses. The church building is currently listed category B. A centenary history was written in 1958 by Hector McBean Hart. Records for the church and school covering 1847–1944 are in the National Archives. The roll of ministers (sometimes called Rectors) of the Church is: Robert Campbell 1847–54; John Rose Dakers 1854–82; Douglas Powell Ware 1882–92; James W.T. Hart 1892–1903; Edward T.S. Reid 1903–10; Alexander L. Ross, assistant 1904–09; Alexander J. Hay 1911–55; Philip Crosfield 1955–60; Edward Robertson 1960–69; Maurice Sunter 1969–70; Aidan Michael Burn-Murdoch 1970–77; Humphrey Lopdell-Bradshaw 1977–88; Jonathan Willans 1988–91; Stuart Maxwell Paterson 1992–??; Simon Cake 2019– ; – 'It was Christmas times, and the Christmas chimes From St. Cuthbert's steeple rung; And the holly-green on the wall was seen, And the Christmas hymn was sung' [JT].

St. Cuthbert's Kirk Club (sin'-kuth-burts-kirk-klub) n. St. Cuthbert's Church Club, a local musical society of the late 19th century.

St. Cuthbert's Schuil (sin'-kuth-burts-skil) n. Episcopal school near to St. Cuthbert's Church on Slitrig Crescent. The school was for pupils of Episcopalian families, and like the church was gifted by the 5th Duke of Buccleuch. It was built in 1850–52 and had a house for the schoolmaster attached. The building was also used for a few years for church services. Previous to the erection of the purpose-built school there had been an Episcopal school on the Mid Raw around 1846 and another (per perhaps the same one) in the ballroom on Half-Moon Close, starting in 1847 or 1848. The new school was situated on the opposite side of Lynnwood Road, beyond Stonefield Mill and was reached via a footbridge across Slitrig Dam. The school was often known locally as 'the English Schuil'. Pupils over the age of 12 were transferred to the High School in 1928, and it became St. Cuthbert's Primary School. It was closed in 1956, and the pupils incorporated into the renamed Drumlanrig and St. Cuthbert's Primary School. The school and adjacent schoolhouse were demolished in 1972. School Inspectors' Reports for 1935–56 are in the National Archives. The register for 1934–56 and log books for 1941–56 are in the Borders Archive. A list of schoolmasters (perhaps not all of them being Head teacher, and some of them for only a short period) is: Mr. Ellis; Mr. King; Mr. Craven; Jacob Jay 1861–93; Mr. Bountvie; Mr. Beaton; James Turnbull; Walter Inglis; David Gillis 1894–1915; Mr. Lumsden; Mr. Cormack 1945–48; and Mr. Walker.

St. Cuthbert's Way (sin'-kuth-burts-wā) n. 62 mile (100 km) hiking trail from Melrose to Lindisfarne (Holy Island), named after the 7th century saint who began at Melrose Abbey and was buried on Holy Island. It was established in 1996.

the Steadin Pump (thu-ste-din-pump) n. former water source behind the Congregational Church, also known as 'Bourtree Well'.

Steadman (sted-min) n. George (b.1844/5) legendary wrestler from Whitehaven. He won the all-weights wrestling tournament at Hawick Common Riding Games for many years in succession in the 1880s. He started competitive wrestling in 1862 and still won at the Grassmere Games at age 51. He also took the prize in the Liverpool Road (London) contest 31 years running. He was about 275 pounds and 5 foot 11 inches, and often won other events, such as hurdles and 'neatest costume'.

Steel (steel) n. Lord David Martin Scott (1938–) born in Kirkcaldy, son of a minister, he became M.P. for Roxburgh, Selkirk & Peebles from 1965, at age 26, and was known as 'Boy David'. He remained Hawick's M.P. until the boundary changes saw him move to Tweedale, Ettrick & Lauderdale in 1983. However, in 1970 he only won by 550 votes. He was Liberal Party leader from 1976, including the period of the 'Lib-Lab pact' and the SDP-Liberal Alliance, resigning in 1987. He was knighted in 1990 and became Lord Steel of Aikwood in 1997 when he retired after 32 years in Westminster. He then became the M.S.P. for the Lothians and first Presiding Officer of the Scottish Parliament 1999–2003. He rode to Mosspaul and followed the Cornet on the Friday in 1965 and was Common Riding Chief Guest in the Millenium year. James (17th C.) resident at Greena in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. John witness in 1510/1 to a letter of acquittance by George Scott of Whames and Borthaugh, written in Edinburgh. He is recorded as 'Johnne Steyll'. Judith Mary 'Judy' nee MacGregor, M.B.E. (1940–) born in dollar, she studied law at Edinburgh University, where she met her husband, David. The couple married in 1962. She has published poetry, plays and other writings. In 1987 she founded the Rowan Tree Theatre Company in the Borders, and in 2011 was awarded the M.B.E. for services to theatre in the Borders. She championed the renovation of Aikwood Tower (including wood recycled from the pews of Hawick Parish Church), later housing a museum to her idol, James Hogg, 'the Ettrick Shepherd'. In 2007 her play 'The Journey of Jeannie Deans' was the first production to be staged in the new Heart of Hawick auditorium. She has 3 children, Graeme, Catriona Judith and Roray, and an adopted son, Billy. The couple retired to live in Selkirk. Rev. Robert (1826–1920) born in Saltcoats, he attended the Evangelical Union Hall in Kilmarnock. In 1866 he came to Newcastleton to be minister of the Congregational Church there, and remained until 1875. After that he was minister at Dalmellington and Galston in Ayrshire. During the 1851 census he was a lodger in Newcastleton, listed as 'Independent Minister', and so he had an association with the village long before 1866. Sir Samuel Strang of Philiphaugh (1882–1961) son of William Strang, who he succeeded at Philiphaugh. He stood unsuccesfully as an M.P. for Selkirk and Peebles in 1910 and served with the Lothians and Border Horse in WWI. He was an M.P. in Kent for a decade, was later President of the Scottish Unionist Association and was created a Baronet in 1938. He served with the Forestry Commission 1932–49 and was in charge of timber in Scotland in WWII. He was a County Councillor for Selkirkshire, Lord Lieutenant for that county 1948–56 and an Ensign in the Royal Company of Archers. He was also a member of the Archæological Society.

the Steel (thu-steel) n. hill between the Teviot and Borthwick valleys, north of Swanstead Hill and south of Branxholme Wester Loch, reaching a height of 326 m. It may be associated with the lands of 'Steyll' mentioned in the 1420 charter for half of the lands of Branxholme (probably from the old English for steep).

The Steel Bonnets (thu-steel-bo-nits) n. book by George MacDonald Fraser, full title 'The Steel Bonnets: The Story of the Anglo-Scottish Border Reivers', it was written in 1971. Fraser was known as a writer of swash-buckling historical fiction. His background makes this book both grippingly written and over-romanticised.

Steele (steel) n. Andrew (1811–82) local poet, born in Coldstream. He spent a few years in the parish school, worked as an agricultural labourer and was then apprenticed as a shoemaker, moving to Galashiels. He published his first poem in the Kelso Chronicle and sometime thereafter published a volume of his poems. He moved to Hawick about 1869 and published a second edition of his book in 1871. In later life he sold tea for a wholesale grocer. He was also a great dog lover, writing a poem to his dog Nailer. His longer verses are derivative of well-known English poets, but his Borders poetry is more valuable. He died at 14 Dickson Street and was buried in Wilton Cemetery. John (19th C.) factor of the Minto estate, recorded in 1885. Thomas (19th C.) married Margaret Landles in Lilliesleaf Parish in 1838.

the Steele (thu-steel) n. former name of lands in Liddesdale, associated with the modern Steele Road. The specific place marked on maps is the ridge of land just to the north-west of the road junction at Steele Road, between the Hermitage and Liddel Waters. 'Willaim Niksoun in the Stele' is recorded in 1516, 'Barte Nixson of Stelle', as well as Archie, Thomas and Alexander in 1544, and Will Elliot of the Steele in 1583 and 1599. In 1584 Harry and Archie Nixon 'of the Steill' were among men who signed the bond of assurance with the English Wardens. John Elliot was there in 1590 when complained about for a raid into England. Additionally the lands of 'Stellis within the Dyk' are recorded in 1541, when it was tenanted by Nixons; it is unclear if these are the same lands or not. Francie Beattie was there in 1623. Andrew Young was tenant in 1694. It was surveyed for the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1718, when it consisted of Nether and Over Steele, and was combined with Brighouse, 'Ingrasswall', 'Guelbeck' and Cleuchhead. Together they covered 706 acres and were bounded by Taylorcleuchhead, Dinlabyre, Bygate and Shaws, with the farmhouse being marked near the modern location of Cleuchhead and another farmhouse to the north, perhaps around Shawshiel Rig. The 'Steele Road' is the name given to the road that crosses here, linking the Liddel and Hermitage valleys (also written 'the Steel'; it is 'Stell' and 'Stelle' in 1544, 'the Steill' in 1586, 'Steill' in 1694 and 'Steell' in 1718; the same word occurs in other place names, such as 'Ashiesteel', and means the spur of a hill, with the same Old English root giving us the word 'stile'; see also Steele Road).

Steele Knowe (steel-now) n. hill in Southdean Parish, on the left side of the A6088 after the hamlet of Southdean. It reaches a height of 273 m. To the north-east is an old stock enclosure with turf walls, as well as 4 small cairns. To the north is another enclosure, with a bank and ditch. On the south-west slopes are the remains of 2 turf huts. On a terrace on the west side are the remains of 3 round-ended buildings, one of which is 26.5 m long and dividided into 3 parts (and may have been a combination of byre and domestic uses). There are also other enclosures and banks in this area between the hill and Jordan Sike, some cut through by a gas pipeline. To the south of the hill there is a roughly 3 km boundary bank, which runs all the way from Jordan Sike to the east, to finish south of Lethem (also written 'Steel Knowe').

Steele Plantin (steel-plawn-tin) n. plantation in Liddesdale, running along the north side of the Steele road (i.e. the road connecting Steele Road station with the B6399.

Steele Road (steel-rōd) n. small station on the Waverley Line, between Riccarton and Newcastleton, now a house. The station was opened in 1862 and closed in 1869 along with the rest of the railway. The name used until 1900 was Netherhope. There was a signal-box south of the station, which has been demolished. The place name 'Steele' long precedes the railway, with Nether and Over Steele being farmed by the Elliots and the Croziers from at least the 16th century and surviving into the 20th century. 'Steele Road' is the name of the road that crosses 'the Steele', and the station took its name from that. Several large enclosures have been identified to the west from aerial photography, as well as 2 areas of rig-and-furrow to the east (sometimes 'Steel Road'; it is 'the Steile' and 'the Steill' in the 1580s; it is marked as 'O. Steell' and 'N. Steell' on Blaeu's 1654 map).

Steeleroad-end (steel-rōd-end) n. shepherd's cottage on the B6357, south of Larriston, marked the end of the road over 'the Steele'. It is situated where the way to the hamlet (and ex-station) of Steele Road meets the main road. It may also have been called 'Riccarton roadend'. This could be the 'Road End' where William Elliot was recorded in 1868.

steivest (stee-vist) adj., poet. strictest, stiffest – 'He'd hae us aye weel in hand – The steivest o' sair, thrawn clesses ...' [WL].

stelebow (steel-bō) n., arch. stock held temporarily by the tenant of a farm.

stele fellow (steel-fe-lō) n., arch. a riever who was involved in a raid into England, and was not captured and held as surety for those found guilty.

stell (stel) n. a stall, enclosure, shelter for sheep or cattle, usually composed of a dry-stane dyke and often circular, with an opening on one side, away from the prevailing wind – '... and numerous stells have been erected for the shelter of the stock' [RJAW], 'They were with great difficulty brought to a 'stell' (a feeding-place for sheep in winter) ...' [RB], 'Sheep drains, sheep stells, and March fences have done much ...' [WA], '... Thrae yowes i' the stells in the warm July days' [DH], '... Scarce farm or stell or shearing-stance But echoed with some jibe at France' [WHO] (see also stells and sheep-stell; these are given other names elsewhere, with 'stell' being particularly prevalent in the south of Scotland).

stell (stel) n., arch. a still for whisky – 'When Meggie grat, an' vow'd that she Wad rather seen the gaugers I' the stell that day' [JoHa].

Stell Brae (stel-brā) n. another name for the Stellhoose Brae.

Stell Hoose (stel-hoos) n. house situated at the corner of Havelock Street and Wilton Hill, demolished in 1945, with the site becoming part of the garage there. It was described as 2 buildings when the land passed from George Haliburton to John Miller in 1813. Dyer Robert Scott was there in 1835, and foreman John Middlemas and mason George Oliver in 1840. James Black and John Middlemas lived there in 1841 and it is marked on the 1858 Ordnance Survey map (originally adjacent to the farmlands of Wilton Mains, so presumably there was once a 'stell' nearby; also sometimes 'the Still').

the Stellhoose Brae (thu-stel-hoos-brā) n. a former name for Wilton Hill, named after the house that once stood at the bottom.

Stellhoose Park (stel-hoos-pawrk) n. area beside the 'Stell Hoose', which was drained in 1826. The area later contained the 'Cadger's Well' from 1842 until the early 20th century.

stells (stelz) n. sheep enclosures. These are usually circular and often about 50 yards in circumference and five feet high, although they vary in size. The entrances are on the leeside of the prevailing wind, and are usually built wider at the top than the bottom. The stone came by sled from nearby quarries. There are thousands of them across the Borders and there is a claim that the basic design originated in Hawick.

Stells (stelz) n. lands in Liddesdale, recorded on the 1541 rental roll as 'Stellis, within the Dyk'. It is valued at 31 shillings and tenanted by Nixons. The lands of 'Litlesteill' may have been nearby; they were valued in 1541 at 6 shillings and tenanted by Bartholomew Nixon (it is also possible this was related to Steele Road or the Steel).

stend (stend) v., poet. to leap, spring, bound – 'The spring that ilk ane lik'd he kend; Auld wives at sixty years wad stend . . . ' [CPM].

Stenhoose (sten-hoos) n. (Stenhouse) John (b.1812/3) born in Holmes, near Melrose, he was a grocer in Hawick. He was listed on the High Street in Pigot's 1837 directory and Slater's 1852 directory (when he was also a toy dealer). His shop was at about No. 51. He is probably the John who, along with James Little, were selected by Hawick merchants to 'rent the customs' from the Duke of Buccleuch. He left the Town, probably in the mid-1850s. His wife was Catherine and their children included Elizabeth, Helen, Jessie and John. John (b.1812/3) born in Stow, he was a carrier in Bowden. In 1852 he is recorded running a weekly service between Hawick and Lilliesleaf, Midlem or Bowden, leaving from the Coach & Horses on Saturdays. His wife was Agnes P., and their children included Janet, John, Joan and Helen. Neil 'Stenny' (1980/1–) educated at Drumlanrig and Hawick High Schools. Originally a scrum-half for the High School, Hawick Albion, the P.S.A. and the Linden. From the age of 17 he was playing for Hawick R.F.C. and at 18 was playing sevens in a Scottish side. He later moved to stand-off and turned out regularly for the Greens, being part of the 2002 Cup-winning side. He then made over 100 appearances for Nottingham before retiring from the game at age 27 and works as a teacher in Nottingham. His wife is Laura and their children are Gillie and Quinn.

Stenhoose's (sten-hoo-seez) n. shop in Hawick in the mid-19th century.

Stennishope see Stanishope

Stenson (sten-sin) n. Alexander (17th C.) tenant in Wattie's Spindles in Southdean Parish according to the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. James (1667/8–1743) resident of Priesthaugh. He married Jean Thomson, who died in 1719, aged 44. He may be the same as James recorded at Northhouse or James recorded at Hawick Shiel in 1694. James (17th C.) shepherd at Northhouse according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. His name is written 'Steinsone'. James (17th C.) resident at Hawick Shiel in 1694, according to the Hearth Tax rolls. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Ormiston on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. His name is written 'Stinsone' (also written 'Steinson', 'Steinsone' and 'Stinsone').

stent (sten', stent) n., arch. a stint, allotted portion, liability for tax, tax imposed by a burgh or trade – '. . . and that after ane stent to be made through the haill town for their maintenance . . . ' [BR1644], 'Ane annual and yearliee stent of fyftie merks scotts money to be imposed and laid upon the haill inhabitants burgesses of the toune' [BR1703], '. . . resolved that the excrescence of the town's yearly stent is to be applied . . . for paying the debt . . . in relation to the New Bridge' [BR1747], 'By cash for stent collected east the Water of Slitrig, . . . 3 8 8' [BR1761], '. . . the farm foreman usually divided the field into 'stents' or equal divisions' [GM], 'Aboot a fifty

' [BR1694], '. . . for which the inhabitants are ordered to be stented according to their abilities, twice in the year, until paid' [JW1763], '. . . if the tenants of Mervinslaw stented their head-room, the deponent's proportion for Cala-burn would be 11 sheep and two cows; but until the stenting took place, the deponent was under no restriction as to numbers' [DCW1765]. This was an annual fee paid in return for Common rights, often being an assessment on Burgesses paid into the town coffers and used for public improvements. In Hawick the practice largely stopped after the Division. However, there was still a 'cattle stent' collected from burgesses for grazing their animals on the Common, which continued until the middle of the 19th century, and formed part of the Burgh's income (a corruption of 'extent'; cf. Stintyknowe).

stent-maister (sten'-māṣ-tur) n., arch. an official appointed to fix the 'stent' to be paid – 'Stent-masters appointed to stent the inhabitants for the schoolmaster's wage' [BR1660], 'Gedeon Scott of Falnash . . . and the bailies, appoint stent-masters . . . ' [BR1699].

Stenton's Pump (sten'-inz-pump) n. former spring near the corner of Melgund Place and O'Connell Street, also known as the 'Melgund Pump'. The smith who used to live there charged two pence a month for the use of his well when the public wells went dry (the name probably comes from the Stainton family, who lived near there in the early-to-mid 1800s).

stent-roll (sten'-rōl) n., arch. a valuation prepared for the purpose of imposing levies on Burgesses – '. . . Ane yeirlie stentroll to be made' [BR].

Stephen (ste-vin) n. (12th/13th C.) priest of Lilliesleaf Kirk, recorded as a witness to a grant of Glasgow church lands. This was sometime after Idel, possibly in the 1220s.

stevel (ste-vul) n., arch. a stumble, a strong buffet causing one to stagger.

Steven (stee-vin) n. Alexander (16th/17th C.) recorded in a deed of 1623 as schoolmaster at Headshaw in Ashkirk Parish. William, who was recorded as schoolmaster in Jedburgh in 1630, may have been related to him. Alexander (19th/20th C.) proprietor of the 'Berwick News' and 'Berwick Journal'. He married Mary, daughter of David McBurnie Watson. He gave 3 bursaries to the Edinburgh Border Counties Association, in memory of 'Ada Carr Steven', 'Mary Watson Steven' and 'Esther Watson Steven'. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. His children included: Walter (b.1702) and Beattie (b.1704). Robert (16th/17th C.) notary for a bond between Robert Turnbull, tenant in Bedrule, and Joseph Tennant, minister of Bedrule in 1614. He was also notary in 1618 for a bond between Walter Turnbull of Bedrule and George Rutherford, younger in Abbotrule. In 1619 he was notary public in Raperlaw when accused of being among many Turnbulls and others, under Walter of Bedrule, who took hay from Huntliehill. As one of the few men who appeared personally, he was not declared as a rebels (also written 'Stevin').

Stevens (stee-vinz) n. Mrs. ?? (18th C.) housekeeper at Cavers in 1789 when she was working for George Douglas. She was presumably wife of Thomas. Thomas (18th C.) vallet at Cavers in 1786, when he was working for George Douglas. He is probably the Thomas from Cavers whose will was proved at the Prerogative Court of Canterbury in 1797.

Stevenson (stee-vin-sin) n. Agnes 'Nancy' (18th/19th C.) daughter of John of Kirkstile in Hobkirk Parish, and sister of Nel and Maizie, whom she lived with. She kept an unlicensed driking establishment at her cottage, apparently buying a whisky jug from Douglas Laidlaw in Hawick, to give her whisky an appearance of quality. She was visited by the exciseman one day and thereafter fined, although let off lightly because James Elliot of Wolfelee was on the bench. However, when caught again and fined more severely she gave up her illicit business. She was the last surviving member of her family and lived her last days at the old blacksmith's house at Forkins. Alexander (d.1724) shepherd at 'Wadiespinnells', presumably near Lethem in Southdean Parish. His will is in the Douglas of Cavers papers. Andrew (1795–1871) younger son of George. Like his father he was blacksmith at Bonchester Bridge, taking over after the death of his brother John in 1823. He sold the cottage and blacksmith's shop at Hobkirk Kirkstile to James Elliot of Wolfelee. It was said that he could neither read nor write, his education at the parish school having been hampered by a speech impediment. In 1861 he was listed as blacksmith at Bonchester Bridge, along with his grand-nephew Thomas Rutherford. Rutherford took over as smith at Bonchester after his death. Andrew (19th C.) Hawick carrier. He may have been the Andrew born in 1832, son of James and Marion Douglas. His cousin Elizabeth Stevenson married Thomas Huggan. He may be the Andrew who married Janet Beattie in 1837. Andrew (b.1905/6) Hawick man who worked for Turnbull the Dyers, where his father was Foreman. He moved to Langholm in the 1930s to work for Arthur Bell and started his own dyeing business in 1946, called the Langholm Dyeing Company. His sons David and Neil joined the family firm, which evolved into Edinburgh Woollen Mill. Ann (18th C.) servant at Wells in 1791, when she worked for Gilbert Eliott. Archibald (18th C.) merchant of Peebles, who was made an Honorary Burgess in 1736. Archibald Forrester (1811–47) son of Rev. David of Wilton. In Pigot's 1837 directory he was recorded as a surgeon in Lilliesleaf. He was recorded as a surgeon at the Sandbed (possibly Bridge House) in 1841. In 1835 he married Mary Moodie in Lilliesleaf Parish. They had children: Jessie (b.1839); Jessie (again, b.1843); Alexander (b.1845); and James (b.1845), twin of Alexander. He died the year of a cholera outbreak in Hawick. Rev. Charles Findlater (1831–1905) son of Rev. David of Wilton. He was born in Wilton Parish. He was educated at Edinburgh University and licensed to preach by Jedburgh Presbytery. He was ordained at Stobhill in 1860 and was Minister of Barry from 1866. He died unmarried. It seems likely that he was named after Rev. Charles Findlater, minister of Linton and Newlands, who died in 1828. Rev. David (1784–1851) born in Glasgow, son of David and Jean Renton, he was educated at Glasgow University. He became schoolmaster at West Linton in 1810 and was licensed by Peebles in 1817. He was presented to Wilton by Walter Francis, Duke of Buccleuch in late 1825, taking up his new position in 1826, where he remained until his death. In 1834 he wrote a description of the Parish for the New Statistical Account. He married Christian Taylor, daughter of a Lasswade farmer and they had many children, including: William (1810–57), who became a merchant and died in the U.S.A.; Archibald Forrester (1811–47), a surgeon in Hawick; Jane (1813–43), who married James Farish of Montreal; Alexander (1815–41), also a surgeon; Thomas (1817–78), who worked with H.M. Customs; James (1819–44), a merchant; Catherine, who died in infancy; Anne (1821–91); Christian Buchanan (1823–87); Robert Dundas (1827–58), another surgeon; Catherine Forrester (1829–37); Charles Findlater (1831–1905), who became minister of Barry; and Ellen (1833–52). He published 'Two Sermons preached on the death of Rev. James Strachan' (1840) and 'Sermons on important subjects, Doctrinal and Practical' (1841) and also wrote a description of Wilton Parish for the New Statistical Account of 1845. David, C.B.E. (1941–) son of Andrew, he was born in the Haig Maternity Home, even although his family lived in Langholm by then. His grandfather had been foreman-dyer at Turnbulls of Hawick. He attended school in Langholm, then Dumfries Academy and Edinburgh University, before qualifying as a chartered accountant. He was a champion pole-vaulter, breaking Borders and Scottish records on 10 occasions; his first open competition in the pole vault was at the Hawick Common-Riding Games. He represented Scotland in the Commonwealth Games in 1962, 1966 and 1970, and Britain in the 1964 Olympics. He joined the family dyeing business in 1967. In order to promote the 1970 Commonwealth Games tartan he (and his brother Neil) started Edinburgh Woollen Mill. This grew into a retail company, expanding outlets, and using Heather Mills in Selkirk for producing cloth. He sold the company in 1996 and later concentrated on his firm Ashleybank Investments. He also became a racehorse owner, having several winners. Additionally he sponsored Borders show-jumper Ian Stark. He was made C.B.E. in 1988 for business achievements. He was Deputy Lord Lieutenant of Dumfriesshire for 20 years and was made Honorary Freeman of Dumfries and Galloway in 2012. He has been involved in several charities, such as the Robertson Trust and Scottish Sports Aid, championed the redevelopment of Langholm's Buccleuch Centre and was founder chairman of the Langholm Initiative. He was the Hawick Common Riding Chief Guest in 2017. His wife Alix is a former international long-jumper and hockey player. They have 2 daughters, Karen and Lynne. Elizabeth 'Betty' (18th C.) cook at Branxholme in 1791, when she worked for Adam Ogilvie. Francis (b.c.1770s) servant at Larriston House according to the ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1799. George (16th C.) tenant of Sir Walter Scott of Howpasley in the lands of Outersiderig in 1569. Sir Walter acted as cautioner for his tenants at a meeting in Hawick, assuring that they would obey the laws of the Lord Regent. He was surely related to Peter, who was also listed. George (d.bef. 1759) son of John. He was blacksmith at 'Hobkirk-style', recorded in 1735. He married a daughter of John Shiel of Hobkirk Kirkstile. Their children included: Charles (b.1732); John (b.1735); Betty (b.1738), who married gardener Adam Kersel in 1759; James (b.1740), who probably died young;

Jean (b.1743), who married Robert Riddell in 1767; Ann (b.1746), who married William Henry in 1771; and Janet (b.1755). George (b.1760) son of John of Hobkirk Kirkstile, and probably grandson of the earlier George. He worked in the blacksmith's shop with his father. He may be the George who was lived at Bonchester Bridgend according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He married Jane (or 'Jeany') Laidlaw. Their children (baptised in Southdean Parish) included: Jane (or Jenny, b.1787), who married Robert Amos; Betty (b.1789); John (1791–1823); Andrew (b.1795); Agnes, who married Alex Baptie; and Janet (b.1787). He appears to have changed the spelling of the family surname from 'Stephenson' to 'Stevenson'. George Drummond 'Stevie' (1933–2012) played for Hawick P.S.A., Linden and the Greens in the period 1951–67. He was capped 24 times for Scotland, scoring a try against England in his debut match in 1956. He was also referred to as 'Back-door Stevie' because of the number of times he was called into the Scotland squad at the last minute. A career highlight was a solo try scored for the Scottish District when they defeated South Africa at Mansfield Park in the 1960s. He played at centre and wing, and at 6 feet 2 inches was tall for a back. Serving an engineering apprenticeship in Hawick, he then did National Service, worked for Bibby's the farm suppliers and became a a sales representative for Ballantine's Whisky (although ironically he was a teetotaller), settling in Currie. His married Jessie and had children Fiona and Mark. Gilbert (b.c.1770s) servant at Birneyknowe according to the ballot list for the Militia in Cavers Parish in 1799. Helen (16th C.) resident of Whithope recorded in 1549, among a list of the tenants and servants of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme who complained about the Kers ravaging their farms. Her name is given after James Scott, with Adam Scott being the tenant, and hence she may have been related to one or both of them. Helen 'Nel' (b.1771) daughter of John, Laird of Hobkirk Kirkstile and sister of Nancy and Maizie, with whom she lived. She married a Murray, but they separated and she apparently hated to be called 'Mrs. Murray'. She made a living by spinning yarn. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Thomson and their son John was baptised in 1672. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. His children included: John (b.1702); William (b.1703); and John (again, b.1707). James (17th/18th C.) tenant in Harwood on Teviot. In 1708 he was described as '(in Harwood) tenent to arcleton'. He married Jean Thomson and their children, baptised in Hawick Parish, included: Adam (b.1705); James (b.1707); John (b.1708); Bessie (b.1710); and Margaret (b.1710). The witnesses in 1705 were Andrew Riddell in Goldielands and Gilbert Elliot in Southfield, in 1707 were Adam Elliot of Arkleton and Francis Gledstains in Braidhaugh and in 1708 were Adam Elliot of Arkleton and Robert Thomson in Newmill. James (18th C.) married Jane (or Jean) Scott in Cavers Parish in 1754. His wife died in 1814, aged 87. Their children included: Jane (1754–97), who married Thomas Grieve and died at Muselee; John (1759/60–87), who died at Alderybar; and James (1760/1–85), who also died at Alderybar. James (18th C.) married Ann Dryden in Hobkirk Parish in 1766. He may be the James whose son James was baptised in Hobkirk in 1770. James (b.c.1780) tanner in Hawick according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia. James (1805–89) educated in Jedburgh, he entered the office of Roxburghshire Procurator-Fiscal Shortreed, and was appointed to that position himself in 1827 when he became of age. He served for the astonishing period of 60 years, latterly assisted by his son. He was also Clerk of Supply for Roxburghshire. He was a clerk in Jedburgh when he subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. There are letters to him preserved in the Walter Mason Collection from the 1820s. He was honorary secretary and later full member of the Jedforest Club. He was an ardent Tory, but took no part in local politics. He married Charlotte, daughter of William Graham, doctor in Jedburgh and secondly married a daughter of Rev. William Aston Shute. His eldst son James Charles took over most of his county duties. John (16th C.) priest at the Kirk of the Lowes. He was listed as 'vicar pensioner of the Forrest kirk' in 1574 when he was still owed for previous years in the last testament of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Learmonth and their son Robert was baptised in 1634. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His son Gilbert was baptised in 1704. John (17th/18th C.) married Helen Turnbull in Cavers in 1705. John (17th/18th C.) weaver in Hawick. Probably the same John was baptismal witness in 1708 (along with weaver John Richardson) for weaver David Reid, in 1714 (along with shoemaker John Scott) for James son of John Scott 'Laird', in 1721 (along with weaver Adam Scott) for merchant

William Black and in 1725 (along with weaver George Wight) for weaver Robert Wight and for George Smith (along with weaver Robert Wight). In 1716 he married Jean, daughter of Thomas Scott called 'Laird'. Their children included: Janet (b.1717); Thomas (b.1719); John (b.1720); John (again, b.1722); Robert (b.1724); and James (b.1726). The witnesses in 1719 were wright John Pringle and Walter Scott in Newbigging, in 1720 were weavers James Scott and Thomas Greenshields, and in 1722 were weavers Robert and Walter Tinlin. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Mary 'Milleken' and their daughter Janet was baptised in 1719. John (18th C.) early member of the Stevensons of Rulewater, first recorded in 1729 when he made use of the Hobkirk 'mort cloath' for a family burial. They were living at Singdean at that time. His mother died in 1733. His son was George, who was blacksmith at Hobkirkstile. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Howcleuch in 1716 and 1721. His children probably included: John (b.1716); Margaret (b.1721); and James (b.1728). John (18th C.) recorded getting married in Kirkton in 1751, with no wife's name given. John (18th C.) son of George, he was Laird of Hobkirk Kirkstile, which he inherited from his grandfather John Shiel. He was also portioner of Kirknowe. He lived in a cottage at Singdean. He sold Hobkirkstile in 1779. He had 3 daughters, Nel, Nancy and Maizie, whose lives are described in Tancred's history of Rulewater. He may have been the John who married Agnes Douglas in 1758. George (b.1760) was probably may also his son, as well as possibly John (b.1765). Janet (b.1759) may have been his daughter, as well as Betty, whose daughter Betty Beattie married blacksmith Tom Rutherford. John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Mary Scott and their son John was baptised in 1785 (or perhaps 1775). The witnesses were Archibald Elliot and John Smith. John (b.c.1770s) wright in Hawick. He is recorded on the 1799 ballot list for the Militia and still on the list in 1801. John (d.1823) elder son of George and brother of Andrew. He took over from his father as blacksmith at Bonchester Bridge. After his death he was succeeded in the business by his brother Andrew. He may be the John whose children, baptised in Hobkirk Parish, included: Betty (b.1770); Helen (b.1771); Jean (b.1773); Douglas (b.1776); Agnes (b.1778); Maizie (b.1781); and William (b.1783), who was a tanner in Hawick. He may be the 'J.' who married Nelly Rodger in Hobkirk in 1769. John (18th/19th C.) married Elizabeth Renwick in Roberton in 1819. Rev. John (1846–1929) born in Eccles, Berwickshire, son of John, the schoolmaster there. He graduated from Edinburgh University in 1865, was licensed by Duns Presbytery in 1869 and was ordained as assistant and successor to Rev. Archibald Craig of Bedrule in 1875. He was Clerk of the Presbytery in 1891. He married Christina Laing of Denholmhill, and she died in 1891. He secondly married Christina Govanlock Turnbull (daughter of John Turnbull, farmer at Priestrig), and she died in 1961 at the age of 94. His children were: Margaret Scott, who married Thomas William Brockie; Mary Farmer (d.1918), who married John B. Forsyth; and John, who was a Captain in the R.A.M.C. He demitted his charge in 1923, died at Bonchester Bridge and is buried at Bedrule, where there is a memorial plaque inside the church. John Briggs (1849–1931) son of Thomas P., he was born in Hawick. He went to Brownsea Island, Poole and then to Bournemouth in 1887, where he became Parks Superintendent, retiring in 1919. His children included Thomas, John, Charles, Harry and Hugh. He is probably the John Briggs recorded as proprietor of Commonside in about 1900. Margaret (19th C.) resident of the West Port area. In 1832 she is one of the Hawick people who contracted cholera, but recovered. Mary 'Maizie' (18th/19th C.) youngest daughter of John who lived at Hobkirk Kirkstile with her sisters Nel and Nancy. She had a natural son called Robert Wilson, who worked on the plantations at Wolfelee. In later life she was the cleaner at Hobkirk Church. But she used the cushions from the 'Lairds' Lofts' as a bed for lodgers during the week, and was dismissed when this was discovered. Michael (d.1789) first landlord of the Tower Inn, from about 1771. In that year it is recorded that Bailie Hardie was reimbursed by the Council 'for a bottle of wine (Stevenson's), at attending His Grace the Duke of Buccleuch', suggesting that he was already running the inn by then. He was brought from Yorkshire specifically to be inn-keeper and was admitted as a Burgess of Hawick in 1773. In 1773 the Council recorded that they met 'in Michael Stevenson's' to petition an agent of the Duke of Buccleuch regarding repairs to the Auld Brig. He is recorded as inn-keeper there in 1778 and 1780. He was taxed for having 2 4-wheel carriages in the years 1785–1789 and for having a female servant in 1787 and 1788. In 1785 he was taxed for employing James 'Stevanson' (who was presumably therefore unrelated) as a waiter, as well as an unnamed waiter in 1787. 'Mrs. Stevenson' was taxed for carriages in the year 1789/90 and for having a female servant in 1789, suggesting that he was deceased by then and that his wife continued for a time as the proprietor. In 1798 the death is recorded in Hawick of 'Mrs. Stevenson spouse to Decd. Mr. Stevenson tower inn'. He is described by W.N. Kennedy as 'of Falstaffian proportions, and a fine burly specimen of the Boniface brotherhood, and is reputed to have weighed upwards of thirty stone'. It was said that he needed a pulley to get to his feet in the morning and that after he died the coffin had to be hoisted in and out of the window of his bedroom. Patrick (16th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Hislop and their children included: Robert (b.1651); and Bessie (b.1652). The witnesses in 1651 were Robert Grieve and William Elliot. Peter 'Pate' (16th C.) tenant in Outersiderig, for whom Sir Walter Scott of Howpasley stood as cautioner in 1569. He was listed as 'Pait Stevinsone' right after George. Peter (18th C.) surgeon in Hawick. He subscribed to Caw's 'Poetical Museum' in 1784. It is possible he was later the Peter, surgeon in Hexham, who died there in 1828. Robert (17th/18th C.) tenant in Hawick Shiel. His wife was Mary Plendergast and their children included: Margaret (b.1684); and Christian (b.1702). Robert (18th C.) weaver in Hawick. He married Agnes Reid and their children included: Jean (b.1756); Janet (b.1758); John (b.1760); Jane (b.1762); Betty (b.1767); and Thomas (b.1771). The witnesses in 1762 were shoemaker John Scott and tobacconist James Scott. Robert (19th C.) stockingmaker in Hawick. His infant child's death is recorded in 1840, with his wife Christian Scott dying 2 days later. Sandy (??–2002) local solicitor, born in Kelso. He came to Hawick in 1963, was Acting Father in 1973 and Secretary of the Common-Riding Committee 1977–87 and again for part of 2001 Thomas (17th/18th C.) said to have come from Hummelknowes and become tenant at Little Whitlaw, where he kept more than a hundred sheep on the Town's Common. However, the 'Town Herd of Hawick hounded, scattered, and destroyed said Thomas Stevenson's sheep, till he was obliged to make sale of what was left, and gave up his farm'; this is according to evidence given by John Douglas in 1767. Thomas (18th/19th C.) winder of 'pirns' for stocking-makers. He lived near the West Port. He had a son, also Thomas, whose wife Margaret was one of the people who contracted cholera in early 1832, but managed to recover. He may be the deceased Thomas whose wife Isobel Turnbull died in 1840 (on the same day as 9 others, and hence possibly in a cholera outbreak). His son Robert with Isobel Turnbull was baptised in Hawick in 1797, with witnesses Rev. W. Knox (although hard to read) and merchant George Waldie. Thomas (b.1800/1) son of Thomas. He married Margaret Laidlaw in Wilton in 1829. They lived at the West Port, where his wife contracted cholera from a neighbour in 1832, but recovered. He was listed among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1835, when he was at Roadhead. He and his wife were at Roadhead in Wilton in 1841, 1851 and 1861. Their children included Jane, Isobella (who was Mrs. Peden), Thomas, Andrew, Agnes (who married Charles Spalding) and Jane. Jane could be the 'Miss Stevenson, Wellington Street' who in 1877 donated to the Museum 'four Roman coins found at Chollerford'. Thomas Pasley (1818/19–72) married Mary, daughter of William Laidlaw, and she died in 1890, aged 71. Their children included: Thomas P. and Jemima (b.1860), who both died young; Agnes, who married mason James Turnbull; William Laidlaw, woollen merchant; John Briggs, who moved to England; Thomas, postman and proprietor of the Douglas Hotel; and Beatrix (b.1857). He is buried in Wellogate Cemetery. Thomas (b.1819/20) grocer in Hawick. In 1860 he was a 'storekeeper' at Havelock Street when one of his daughters was born. He was living at '8 and 10 Loan' in 1861 when recorded as 'Grocer (Salesman)'. His wife was Mary and their children included William, Walter L., Jane P., John, Agnes, Mary, Beatrix and Jemima. Thomas (19th C.) from Langholm. Around the 1860s he came to Newcastleton once a week to operate a branch of the British Linen Company Bank. Thomas Pasley (b.1862) son of Thomas P. He worked as a postman and was later in the Douglas Hotel. Walter (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living at Trow Mill in 1744 when his daughter Jane was baptised. His other children included Walter (b.1741) and Helen (b.1745). Walter (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish who married Janet Oliver. Their children included: William (b.1768); Walter (b.1768); Gilbert (b.1770); and Katharine (b.1779). The witnesses to William's baptism in 1768 were Gilbert Oliver (probably his father-in-law) and Francis Aitkin. He may be the same man as 'Wat the Heckler', who was a mason at Newbigging, also known for being involved with smuggling during the winters. Walter (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1794 his daughter with Ann Howison died. Walter Laidlaw (19th C.) partner with Alexander Innes in the woollen merchants firm Innes, Stevenson & Co. He retired in 1892, after which the firm continued with F.E.H. Chambers as a new partner. William (18th C.) listed as owner of a 'House and Yard' in Minto Parish in 1779. It was owned by Lord Minto in 1811 and valued at £3 13s 2d. William (1729/30–1807) tenant farmer at Langburnshiels. He is recorded as owner of 5 farm horses and 1 saddle horse on the Horse Tax Rolls of 1797. He also paid tax on 5 non-working dogs in 1797. His servant Gilbert Gray is recorded on the 1801 Militia ballot. He contributed to the subscription for the defence of the country (against the French) in 1803. It was said that his 'sound knowledge, singular abilities, and successful improvements, as a store-farmer, have been seldom equalled'. He could be the William who married Isabel Vass in Hobkirk in 1773 and whose unnamed child was baptised in Hobkirk in that same year. William (b.1783) born in Hobkirk Parish, son of John, he was a tanner in Hawick. In 1841 he was living at about 23 High Street. He appears to be absent at the time of the 1851 census and in 1861 he was a widower living in the Poorhouse. He married Jane Paisley and their children included: John (b.1808); Agnes; Isabel; Jane; Thomas (b.1819); Margaret; and Williamina. He was one of only 11 residents of the Town who had been on the list for the Militia in 1803 and were still alive in 1862. William Laidlaw (1845/6–93) worked for Laing & Irving, eventually becoming a partner in Irving, Groerson & Stevenson. He left this partnership to go into business with A.K. Innes as Innes, Stevenson & Co, retiring only about a year before his death. He built the villa Dunira. He married Susan Yule, who died in 1872, aged 26. Their only child was Bella, who married Maj. James Rodger (formerly spelled 'Stevinsone' etc., and interchangeable with 'Stephenson' before the mid-18th century).

His children included Janet (b.1723), Adam (b.1726), Bessie (b.1728), Margaret (b.1730) and Elizabeth (b.1732). Alan (b.1829/30) from Barra in Inverness-shire, he was a quarryman in Hawick. In 1861 he was living on Teviot Crescent with his wife Agnes and children Angus and Annie E. In 1860 he donated a 'copper coin of Charles II' to the Museum. Alexander Earl of Mar and Garioch (d.1435) illegitimate son of Alexander, Earl of Buchan, and grandson of King Robert II. He was a supporter of his uncle, the Regent Albany. He married Isobel, Countess of Mar, daughter of William Douglas, Earl of Mar. Through her he inherited titles, including part of the Barony of Cavers and the Forest of Jedburgh, as recorded in a document of 1405. He was appointed Admiral of the Realm of Scotland about 1420. He had only one (illegitimate) son, Sir Thomas, who pre-deceased him. Alexander (c.1454–85) 1st Duke of Albany, 2nd son of King James II. He was Warden of the Western Marches from 1475. He also held the positions of Lord High Admiral, Governor of Berwick, and Lieutenant of the Kingdom. He was imprisoned after being suspected of plotting against his brother James III, but escaped and made pacts with Edward IV of England. He led an invasion in 1482, along with the army of the English King, assuming control of Scotland briefly. However, the Lords turned on him, he fled to England and led another invasion in 1484 (along with the unseated Earl of Douglas and others), which was unsuccessful because of lack of support from England. He also offered to give Ewesdale and other parts of the Borders to England. After being sentenced to death in Scotland he fled to France, where he died in a tournament accident. His titles were inherited by John, son of his 2nd wife. Several men from the Borders were much later (in 1493) given remission at Jedburgh for having been among his supporters, including Ralph Ainslie, Thomas Brown in Minto, Robert Dalgleish in Howden, George Davidson in Raperlaw, John Grahamslaw of Newton, Adam Kirkton in Crailing Mill, Patrick Mow, Thomas Riddell brother of Riddell of that Ilk, Gilbert Shiel in Bedrule, George Turnbull of Bedrule, John Turnbull in Bedrule, Thomas Turnbull in Gatehousecote and John Waugh (possibly in Hawick). Sir Alexander of Dalswinton and Garlies (d.c.1500) son of Sir William of Minto. In 1458/9 he and his wife Elizabeth had a charter for the lands of Sunlaws and Morebattle. His family held lands locally, including Howpasley, which he resigned about 1468, when he was still 'younger'; these may have previously belonged to an elder brother, Andrew, who must have died first. Another brother was Sir Thomas of Minto to whom he gave consent in 1476 to his father's grant of the lands of Minto. In the same year he also resigned to his brother the lands of Sunlaws and Morebattle, also with the consent of his wife, Elizabeth, reserving for themselves a 20 merk land there. In 1477 he had a charter for the lands of Dalswinton, with the permission of his son, witnessed by his brother Thomas of Minto. He served as Scottish Ambassador to England in 1485 and fought at Sauchieburn in 1488. He is probably the Alexander mentioned in 1501 when it is stated that sasine had been given to him for half of the market rights in Minto, which had been in the King's hands for 3 years. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Archibald Douglas of Cavers. He was succeeded by his son Alexander, who was killed at Flodden. His other children included: Agnes, who married John, 3rd Lord Maxwell; John; Archibald, Parson of Kirkmaho; and Janet, who married Sir John Dunbar of Mochrum. Sir Alexander of Garlies (d.1513) son of Sir Alexander and Elizabeth Douglas, daughter of the Laird of Cavers. He married Elizabeth Kennedy, probably a daughter of Kennedy of Blairquhan. He was succeeded by his son Sir Alexander, and was said to have also had 16 daughters, each of whom married a laird of distinction. He was killed at Flodden. Sir Alexander of Garlies (c.1508–c.93) son of Alexander who was killed at Flodden. He was the 4th of Garlies, and was a minor under his uncle Archibald, parson of Kirkmaho. He was captured at Solway Moss in 1542 and his son was held as hostage in his place. Also in 1542 he erected his lands into the Baronies of Dalswinton and Garlies. The Dalswinton Barony included the family's half merkland in Minto, and patronage of the Rectory there. He was a Commissioner for Wigtownshire in the 1550s and sat in Parliament in 1560 and 1565. He acted as ambassador to Henry VIII in 1572. He was still alive in 1593, but died soon afterwards. He firstly married Katherine, daughter of Sir James Crichton of Cranston Riddell. He secondly married Margaret Dunbar and thirdly married Catherine, daughter of his cousin Walter Stewart of Barcyle. His children were: Sir Alexander, who died before him, with his son Sir Alexander succeeding; John; Margaret; Anthony; Robert; William; and Helen. Sir Alexander of Garlies (d.1597) 5th of Garlies, grandson of Sir Alexander, the previous Laird, his father (also Sir Alexander) dying before his grandfather. His mother was Katherine, 2nd daughter and co-heir of William, Lord Herries of Terregles. He inherited many lands, including the small piece of land and rights within Minto. He was knighted in 1590 and sat in Parliament in 1594 and 1596. He married Christian, daughter of Sir William Douglas of Drumlanrig and secondly married Elizabeth Douglas, daughter of David, Earl of Angus, who was widow of Lord Maxwell. His children were Alexander (who succeeded), Thomas, William, Helen, Janet, Nicholas and John. Alexander of Garlies (d.1649) son of Sir Alexander and Christian Douglas of Drumlanrig. He inherited his father's rights in Minto in 1603; this included a half merkland in Minto, with the advowson of the Kirk there. He became Lord Garlies in 1607 and sat in Parliament several times. In 1623 he was raised to be Earl of Galloway. A firm supporter of Charles I he was appointed as a Privy Councillor. He married Grizel, daughter of Sir John Gordon of Lochinvar and their children included: Alexander (d.1638); Sir James, who succeeded; and Anne. Alexander (16th/17th C.) son of James of Tinnis. In 1609 he was listed along with Walter Scott of Headshaw and other Scotts as men that Sir Robert Scott of Thirlestane and his tenants were fined for resetting. This was part of the feud between the Scotts of Thirlestane and Tushielaw. His brother John was mentioned later. Perhaps the same Alexander 'in Tynneis' witnessed a transaction in Selkirk for the Turnbulls of Philiphaugh in 1580. Alexander (17th/18th C.) dyker in Hawick. He married Margaret Wilson and their children included Margaret (b.1714). The witnesses in 1714 were weaver Robert Tinlin and shoemaker Robert Allan. Alexander (b.c.1770s) hosier in Hawick. He was recorded as a stockingmaker in Hawick in the 1799 ballot for the Militia and at the Sandbed on the 1801 Militia ballot for Wilton Parish. His unnamed child died in 1811. He could be the Alexander who married Margaret Scott and had children Ebenezer (b.1805), Betty (b.1808), David (b.1810) and David (again, b.1812), baptised in Wilton. Alexander (18th/19th C.) married Agnes Stevenson in Cavers 1809. Alexander (b.c.1820) servant at Cavers House in 1841. Allan (19th C.) from Barra in Invernesshire, he was a quarryman in Hawick. He married Agnes Ekron in 1857 and their children included: Angus (b.c.1857); Anne E. (b.1862); and Elizabeth (b.1871). His wife may have been daughter of Andrew Ekron, with her mother's name being Elizabeth. Andrew (d.c.1460) eldest son of Sir William of Dalswinton, brother of Alexander and Thomas of Minto. In 1458/9 he had a crown charter of the lands of Minto, Howpasley, Longnewton, as well as lands in Dumfriesshire, Kirkcudbright and Wigton. However, he probably died soon after, since his brother Alexander resigned the lands in about 1468 and later succeeded to Dalswinton and Garlies. Andrew (16th C.) recorded as servant to the Laird of Riddell in 1596. He was accused of crimes by Englishman Nicholas Forster in the previous year. Andrew of Ochiltree (c.1560–1628/9) son of Andrew, Master of Ochiltree, he was the 3rd Lord. He served as Lieutenant and Warden of the West Marches in the 1580s. He was later First Gentleman to the Bedchamber of King James VI. He was also General of Edinburgh Castle. He settled in Northern Ireland at Castle Stuart. He married Margaret, daughter of Sir John Kennedy of Blairquhan and was succeeded by his son Sir Andrew. Andrew (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at Midshiels in 1732 and 1737, and at Langlands in 1739. In 1729 he witnessed a baptism for Robert Turnbull and Elspeth Douglas, residents of Midshiels and in 1733 another for William Turnbull, also living at Midshiels. He is mentioned in 1764 as one of the men for whom Robert Easton cut peats on Wilton Common, perhaps in the 1730s; he was then 'weaver in Langlands'. He married Marion Huntly in Wilton in 1731 and their children included: Janet (b.1732); Robert (b.1734); Mary (b.1737); and Janet (again, b.1739). The witnesses in 1732 were James Scott and John Thomson, in 1737 were John Pringle and Robert Turnbull and in 1739 were Walter Scott and James Blaikie. Andrew (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, living at 'Langlands' in 1744 and 1748. He witnessed baptisms for James Gray in Langlands in 1738, William Allan in Langlands in 1739 and for John Pott in Langlands in 1741. He married Janet Douglas and their children included: Agnes (b.1742); James (b.1744); George (b.1746); James (again, b.1748); Ann (b.1750); Andrew (b.1753); and Margaret (b.1755). The witnesses in 1742 were James Douglas (perhaps related to his wife) and James Dryden, in 1744 were William Scott and what looks like James Dryden and in 1748 were Walter Scott and James Dryden. Andrew (18th C.) married Jean Wright in 1761, both from Wilton Parish. Andrew (18th/19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf. He married Christian Crozier. Their children (born in Lilliesleaf, but baptised in Linton) included: Peggy (b.1787); and Robert (b.1790). Andrew (b.c.1770s) servant at 'Longtoun' according to the 1799 ballot for the Militia in Ashkirk Parish. Andrew, J.P. (19th C.) owner of the farm of Cotfield in Lilliesleaf Parish in the 1870s. In about 1874 he is recorded owning the share of Lilliesleaf Common (and its teinds) that formerly pertained to the lands of Bewlie Hill, as well as Hermiston. Archibald (16th/17th C.) illegitimate son of James of Tinnis. In 1608 he was among the relatives and tenants of Sir Robert of Thirlestane who were bound over not to harm Archibald of 'Dephoip' or his sons. Archibald (19th/20th C.) gardener at Wells estate. He had a brother who worked on the Maxpoffle estate and sisters who lived in Melrose. In 1882 at Bedrule Schoolhouse, he married Frances, daughter of schoolmaster William MacNeill. After Wells estate was sold off he moved to West Linton. The couple's only child was William MacNeill. Bell (18th/19th C.) spinner from Glasgow. It is said that when the first spinning jenny arrived in Hawick, for operation at the Tower Knowe Mill, one of the strongest workers was given the task of operating it, but gave up, claiming that no one could stand to run it. The employers, Waldie & Pringle, then called for an experienced operator from Glasgow, to show the workers how it could be done easily and so she came to Hawick. This was probably around the early 1830s. Charles (b.1618) son of Francis and grandson of the last Earl of Bothwell. He was born at Tranent. There are papers relating to his lands of Wilton, Liddesdale and others in 1647 and 1648. He fought at the Battle of Worcester. He died unmarried, bringing an end to the local connection of the Hepburns and Stewarts. Charles 6th Duke of Lennox and 3rd Duke of Richmond (1639–72) son of George, 9th Seigneur d'Aubigny and grandson of Esmé, 3rd Duke of Lennox. On the death of his cousin Esmé he inherited the Lennox and Richmond titles. This included the Baronies of Ancrum, Ashkirk and Lilliesleaf. As Duke of Lennox he paid a small amount in the 1663 Land Tax Rolls in Ashkirk. However, it is unclear if he played any role in local affairs. He served as hereditary Great Chamberlain of Scotland. He drowned at Elsinore on a trip as ambassador to persuade Denmark to join a war on the Dutch. Although he married 3 times (the third time to Frances Teresa Stewart, mistress of his cousin Charles II), he died without issue. Charles (d.1744) 4th Earl of Traquair, son of John 2nd Earl. He succeeded to his brother

William, his other brother George having died before him. He was the last of his family to be Laird of Wells in Rulewater. Burdened with his grandfather's debts, he sold the estate to Thomas Rutherford in 1687. In 1684 he was also listed as Lord of Linton and Caverton, when he became a Burgess and Guild Brother of Edinburgh. He married Mary, daughter of Robert Maxwell, 4th Earl of Nithsdale and was succeeded by his sons Charles and then John. Charles Edward 'Bonnie Prince Chairlie' or 'the Young Pretender' (1720–88) son of James Francis and grandson of King James VII. In 1745 he attempted to capture the throne for his father, from George, landing in Scotland, gaining the support of an army of Highlanders and marching into England, where they met defeat. He and his supporters travelled south from Jedburgh, probably via the Note o the Gate. After being on the run for several months in Scotland he was able to flee to France and died an old man in Rome. Although there seems to have been little local support for him at the time, part of his army passed near Hawick in 1745, and many tales grew up around events said to have happened then. A butter-dish said to have been used by him at Newmill was donated to the Museum in 1856 and a 'piece of tartan plaid' worn by him and 'left by him in a house where he obtained shelter after his defeat at Culloden' in 1867. Charles (18th/19th C.) married Janet Broad in 1805, the marriage recorded in Kirkton Parish and East Bank Kirk. Charles (19th/20th C.) local writer, who used the pseudonym 'Karl Brown'. He who wrote a poem about the Sclaterford skirmish and may be the 'Carl Brown' who wrote 'A Hawick Common-Riding Toast'. He is also the author of the novel 'Andrew Macpherson: a tale of the Borders' (1905), which was serialised in the Hawick Express. This tells the story of the minister of the fictitious Roselea (a thinly disguised Lilliesleaf) and his love affairs, with some of the action taking place in South Africa. David (18th C.) merchant of Hawick who married Ann Fordyce of Aberdeen in Edinburgh in 1776. David 'Dave' (1930–2018) son of David and Jean, he was born on Ramsay Road. Contracting polio as an infant, he underwent many operations. Not letting his physical condition hold him back, he and Billy Murray cycled around Scotland when they were 19. He only received 4 years of schooling, but was an avid reader. He worked in Pringles and Pescos, where his last years before retirement were spent as gateman. Later he joined local walking groups and was a keen member of the Archæological Society, being known as a font of knowledge on Hawick and the nearby rural areas. He was recorded speaking in dialect in 2004 as part of the BBC 'Voices' project. He met Marjory McGee at Waverley Station in 1949 and they were married in 1956. Their children were Elsa (b.1958) and Norma (b.1960). The family lived on Minto Place and Wellogate Place. Derek James resident of Wilton Dean, he published 'The Armstrongs' (2017) and 'Wha Daur Meddle wi Me' (2018). Rev. Duncan (1841–1908) from Dunblane, he was educated in Perth and at Edinburgh University and New College. He became the first minister of St. Andrew's Free Church, being called there in 1867 (despite originally having the intention of doing missionary work in Africa), inducted in 1868 and remaining for about 40 years. He was assisted for the first year by John Tainsh. His sister also helped him with some activities associated with his church. He was said to have 'the appearance of a jolly farmer of some twelve stones' and to possess a powerful voice. He was also described as 'a Puritan of the truest type'. He was involved with the temperance movement and the National Bible Society and locally with the Cottage Hospital and with Stobs. He also researched into Teviotdale connections with the Covenanters, for example publicising the besieging of Drumlanrig's Tower. He had deep sympathy with those persecuted in the times of the Covenanters, lectured on this widely and was preparing a book on the topic when he died. His widow and Rev. John Smith of Denholm put together his posthumous work 'The Covenanters of Teviotdale and neighbouring districts' (1908). In 1890 in Hawick he married Mary Jane Simpson Mitchell (1855–1922), who was born in India, daughter of a missionary who was later minister of Cluny. They had a son, John Livingstone (1894–1971), who was born in Hawick, and was a vet. He died in Hawick and was buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. Elizabeth 'Bessie' (17th C.) resident of Denholm. In about 1684 she was accused of attending conventicles. Elizabeth 'Betty' (18th/19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf. An account of hers to Thomas Inglis for soap, muslin and lace from 1797. Esmé 5th Duke of Lennox (1649–1660) son of James, 1st Duke of Richmond. His father died in 1655 and he was served heir to the family properties and titles. This included the Baronies of Ancrum, Ashkirk and Lilliesleaf. He went into exile to France with his mother and died of smallpox. His titles passed to his cousin Charles. Francis 5th Earl of Bothwell (1563–1611) nephew of James Hepburn, the 4th Earl. His father was John, Commendator of Coldingham, being an illegitimate son of James V (hence he was first cousin of James VI) and his mother was Lady Janet Hepburn, daughter of Patrick, the 3rd Earl. He was a powerful force in late 16th century Scotland. He was lay Commendator of Kelso Abbey, and held many baronies and estates, including Wilton, granted in a charter of 1568. Patronage of St. Mary's Kirk in Hawick was confirmed to him in 1581 and 1585 by James VI. In 1586, instructions from the King to Archibald Douglas, Earl of Angus (Lieutenant on the Border), conferred responsibilities on him to make bonds with leaders in Liddesdale and set up court in either Jedburgh or Hawick. Also in 1586 he re-leased several lands in Liddesdale to Elliots. A charter of 1587 confers on him the forfeited titles of his uncle, the 4th Earl, including Keeper of Liddesdale and Hermitage. In Novemeber 1587 (according to an English letter) he rode to Branxholme and Hawick, there meeting with leaders from Liddesdale; although he publicly reminded them of the justice on the Border, his stepson Scott of Buccleuch carried out a raid around Bewcastle using his trumpet and standard. In 1589 there was a charge to him and Alexander, Lord Home, to keep peace with each other during the King's absence. In 1590 he was among Border landlords and heads of families ordered to find caution for the conduct of their dependents. In 1591 he escaped from prison in Edinburgh and there was a 'band' between the main noblemen of the Borders to lay aside their quarrels in order to capture him. He led several attempts to capture King James VI, including the 'Falkland Raid' of 1592, which involved about 300 horsemen from the Borders. This led to him losing all his titles, including Keeper of Hermitage, as well as his estates, to Sir Walter Scott, 1st Lord of Buccleuch (his stepson). A 'summons of treason' of 1592 lists him and his wife, along with many men (including some from the Borders) who were his supporters. Eventually forced to flee abroad, he died in Italy. There is a bond of 1604 in which he promises '6 or 7 chalders of victual during recipient's life' to his servant Walter Scott of Burnfoot (on Ale Water) when he was restored to the King's favour and his former privileges; this never happened, with the Privy Council recording a complaint between his sons Francis, John, Harry and Frederick against William Scott of Burnfoot and his brothers Walter and Robert, and furthermore his son and heir Francis was still trying to recover the lands in the 1620s. He married Lady Margaret Douglas, widow of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme and Buccleuch; she was also denounced as a rebel following the Falkland Raid. His daughter Elizabeth married James, Master of Cranstoun (and their daughter married Sir Gilbert Eliott of Stobs). Another daughter Jean married Robert Elliot of Redheugh. A son John was Commendator of Coldingham, and another, Harry, held lands in Teviotdale. His seal showed a 'bend' in the 1st and 4th quarters, and a rose and 2 lions in the 2nd and 3rd, together with a surtout, a lion rampant, an anchor and a shield bearing 'F.S.' He is mentioned by Scott of Satchells, who mixes up father and son – 'King James the Fifth his bastard Son Was of as much regard, He married Buckcleugh's Relict He being but a Laird' [CWS]. Francis (1584–1639) eldest son of Francis, Earl of Bothwell. He was rehabilitated in 1614, a few years after his father's death. But he did not get back the bulk of the lands that had gone to the Earl of Home and the Lords of Roxburghe and Buccleuch. King Charles interceded to try to resolve differences between him and the Earls of Buccleuch and Roxburghe. In 1632 the patronage he had held of many churches around the Borders (including both Hawick and Wilton) went to Walter Scott, Earl of Buccleuch. His rehabilitation was ratified by Parliament in 1633. In 1634 2 of the 'tutors' of the young Earl of Buccleuch went to London to hear the King's determination of the ongoing dispute he had over Buccleuch lands. He received lands in Lothian and made a financial arrangement over rights to the lands in the Borders in 1634. He married Isobel, daughter of Robert Seton, 1st Earl of Winton. Their children were Charles, Robert, Margaret and Elizabeth. Francis (17th C.) Hawick resident, married to Helen Muir. His son William was born in 1637. Francis (b.c.1785) stocking-maker who lived at Appletreehall. He was also an army pensioner. His wife was Rachel and their children included George, Euphemia, Agnes, Francis, John and Janet. George (16th C.) farmer at Rulewood. His barn and yard are mentioned as part of the land dispute between Barons of Feu-Rule in 1562. George (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, living at Groundistone in 1729. He married Isabel, daughter of William Harkness in 1727, the marriage being proclaimed in both Hawick and Wilton Parishes. Their daughter Mary was baptised in 1729, with witnesses James Scott and Robert Riddell. George (c.1715–93) Professor of Humanity (i.e. Latin) at Edinburgh University for more than 30 years from 1741. He was recorded as a Commissioner for Selkirkshire in 1761. He bought the estate of Midlem Mill in 1773, but must have already held Selkirkshire property before that. He was granted liferent of Shielswood by Elliot of Minto (probably as part of the common practice of adding supporters to the county voter's roll); he renounced this right in 1779, when it was given to Rev. Simon Haliburton. His son Gilbert was a historian and reviewer. George (b.c.1780) servant at Groundistone according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Wilton Parish. George (b.c.1795) tenant of the quarry at Bedrule Mill in the 1841 census. His wife was Isabella and they has a son William. Helen 'Nelly' (18th C.) cook at Orchard in 1791, when she worked for William Elliot Lockhart. Helen (18th/19th C.) daughter of Rev. Walter. Along with her sisters Mary and Isabel, she succeeded her brother Matthew in the lands of Barnhills in 1796. The lands were sold soon afterwards to Sir Gilbert Murray Kynynmound Elliot, with whom she had a heritable bond in 1798. She succeeded her 2 sisters in 1803. Henry 'Harry' (16th/17th C.) younger son of Francis, 5th Earl of Bothwell. He is recorded in the period 1640–42 in legal papers of Francis Scott, Earl of Buccleuch over the teinds of the lands of 'Kalrige, Commounsyde and Mylnesingtoun'; the first place could conceivably be Caerlenrig. Hercules of Whitelaw (d.1595) son of John Stewart, Lord Darnley and brother of Francis, Earl of Bothwell. He was said to have owned Whitlaw near Hawick, but this is more likely to have been one of the numerous areas of a similar name elsewhere (near Bowden, Morebattle and in Lothian). In 1590 he and Francis, Earl of Bothwell were cautioners for Robert Elliot of Redheugh and Martin Elliot of Braidley. A 'summons of treason' listed him in 1592 and in 1593/4 he was denounced a rebel, along with others who had helped the Earl of Bothwell. He married Mary, daughter of Patrick Whitelaw of that Ilk, and their children included Margaret and John. He was hanged in Edinburgh. Isabel (d.c.1348) probably daughter of Sir Alexander of Bonkill. She married Donald, Earl of Mar. They had 2 children: Thomas, who succeeded as Earl of Mar, and also inherited Cavers, but died childless; and Margaret, who became Countess of Mar in her own right, and was the ancestor of the Earls of Douglas. Donald was Regent of Scotland for a few months, but was killed at the Battle of Dupplin Moor in 1332, 3 years after his uncle, Robert the Bruce. She secondly married Geoffrey Murray, but divorced him soon afterwards. She thirdly married William Carswell, who was Sheriff of Roxburghshire. She claimed the sheriffship of Roxburghshire and the custody of Selkirk Forest as a hereditary right; this was looked into by Edward III in 1334 and led to the appointment of her husband by the English (then in control of the Borders) in 1347. She appears to have been deceased in 1348 when her husband William Carsewell was granted her rights and lands in Scotland until her son Thomas (Earl of Mar) came of age. She may have also married Alexander Balliol, Laird of Cavers. Note that a later Isabella, Countess of Mar, was her grand-daughter. Isabel (17th C.) recorded in 1676 when she was fined along with Janet Halliwell for fighting over the placement of their market stalls. She could be the Isabel born in Hawick in 1650 to Francis and Helen Muir. James name of 6 Kings of Scotland, see under James. James (d.1513) 1st of Traquair, 2nd (and illegitimate) son of James Earl of Buchan, his mother being Margaret Murray. In 1507/8 he was the first witness to the document relating to the tower in Hawick 'between the bridges' for the Scotts of Whitchesters. Sometime before 1505 he married Katherine, grand-daughter of James Rutherford of that Ilk and Wells. He is said to have taken her away from her family and compelled her to marry him. She is said to have failed to inherit any of the Rutherford lands because of this marriage being to a kinsman. However, their son would later become Laird of Wells, after the death of her sister Helen. They had a son William (who succeeded and married Christina, daughter of John, 2nd Lord Hay of Yester), and another son James, as well as a daughter Mary and another daughter who may have married Archibald, 6th Earl of Douglas. His widow complained about her treatment at his hands and the fact that she had lost her share of the inheritance to her sister; the result was that Rutherford and Wells went to her grandson Sir John of Traquair. He was killed at Flodden. James (16th C.) resident of Whithope recorded in 1549, among a list of the tenants and servants of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme who complained about the Kers ravaging their farms. He may have been related to the tenant there, Philip, or to Helen who was listed after him. James (d.1557) eldest illegitimate son of James V. His half-siblings included Mary (Queen of Scots), James (Earl of Moray, later Regent), Robert (Prior of Whithorn), Robert (Earl of Orkney), Adam (Prior of Charter House) and John (Lord Darnley, Commendator of Coldingham). He was the Commendator of Melrose and Kelso 1534/5–57, one of the last before the Reformation, and probably lived in the Commendator's House. He gave the 'Monk's Tower' at Hassendean to Walter Scott of Branxholme in 1546/7 and granted a charter of Cockerheugh to William Turnbull in 1556. His seal is in the National Museum of Scotland. James (c.1531–70) illegitimate son of James V, his mother being Margaret Erskine. He was also known as 'the Regent Moray' and sometimes 'the Earl of Mar'. He became chief advisor to his half-sister Mary Queen of Scots on her return to Scotland in 1561, and was one of the leaders of the Scottish Reformation. In 1561 (or 1562) he commanded an expedition against freebooting Borderers. This included surrounding Hawick on market day to surprise people reselling stolen goods. 53 men were captured and 18 of them drowned in the Slitrig, 'for lack of trees and halters', while another 6 were hanged later in Edinburgh. A record of 1562 mentions expenses for 'bere in the town of Melrose eaten by the horses of the gentlemen who were at Hawik in company with the earl of Murray at the drownyng of the thevis'. In 1567 he repeated the exercise on Hallowe'en, attended by Lords Morton, Howe and Lindsay and their followers. In preparation for their visit, Hawick was among towns who were charged to 'have in reddines bakin breid, browin aill, hors meit, mannis meit and uther neidfull ludgeing and provisioun'. They then captured 34 thieves, including 22 Elliots and 6 Croziers, having 11 of them immediately hanged and 7 drowned in Hawick. It is said (by Robert Wilson) that the hangings happened on 2 beams laid across the Auld Brig. 10 of these men were held in Edinburgh Tolbooth and we have a record of their names (5 were called Robert Elliot!). He may also have revisited Hawick in 1569, and certainly in that year led an assault on Liddesdale, blowing up the tower of Mangerton, burning Whithaugh, etc. There was an order from the Privy Council for a large number of men (from all over southern Scotland) to muster in Hawick to meet him on 8th October (moved by 2 days to coincide with the full Moon), 'weill bodon in feir of weir, with xx dayis victuallis and provisoun', in order to subdue the 'rebellious subjects' of the Middle and West Marches. He was Regent from 1567, but fell from favour after failing in a bid to seize the crown from Mary. He was assassinated in Linlithgow by his old rivals the Hamiltons. He was suceeded by his daughter Elizabeth, who married her kinsman James Stewart. James of Bothwellhaugh (16th C.) in 1581 he received the Earldom of Arran from James Hamilton, who was considered insane, but these titles were restored to Hamilton in 1586. In 1584 he was appointed Lord Warden General of all the Marches, but this only lasted 1 or 2 years. James of Tinnis (16th C.) ally of Scott of Thirlestane. His home was presumably Tinnis in the Yarrow valley. In 1592 he had caution 'to behave himself loyally' and 'not come within ten miles of the King's presence'; he was also cautioner for several others, including William Scott in Hundleshope and his brothers Robert and David. He was listed in 1592 among those summoned for treason and William Stewart of Traquair was ordered to demolish his 'place and houses of Tynneis' because of his involvement in the Falkland Raid. His sons included Alexander, John and Archibald. James of Wells (16th C.) recorded in 1592 when he complained to the Privy Council about Turnbulls attacking his lands of Wells. Specifically, John, brother of Walter Turnbull of Bedrule, threatened and menaced his servant James Newlands when he was ploughing. He may be the same as another Stewart. James of Shillinglaw (d.1607) 6th of the Barony of Traquair and also Laird of Wells in Rulewater. He succeeded his father William in 1605, his 3 elder brothers all having died without issue. As well as inheriting several lands, he had the right of patronage of Bedrule Kirk. However, he only enjoyed his position for a couple of years before dying and being succeeded by his grandson, Sir John, the 1st Earl. He married Catherine Kerr and their children were John (whose son succeeded), Robert of Shillinglaw, William, Margaret, Janet (who married John Veitch of Dawyck), Gelis, Walter, Isobel and Mary. James of Nether Horsburgh (16th/17th C.) son of Robert of Shillinglaw. In 1634 he was served heir to his father's lands of 'Helme et Middill', with grain mill and fuller's mill called 'Dowishauch', comprising a 3 merk land in the Barony of Cavers. He was separately served heir to his father in the lands of 'Roulwood', 'Majorwellis et Westlies', extending to a 6-pound land of old extent, lying in the Barony of 'Hareis' by annexation. James (17th C.) described as a cordiner when he was a witness at a trial of Hawick Magistrates Court in

1642. He was deceased in 1666 when his son Walter gave evidence for a case involving a fight in St. Mary's Kirk. He could be the John, married to Manie Scott, whose children baptised in Hawick included John (b.1643), Walter (b.1646) and an unnamed son (b.1648). Probably the same James witnessed baptisms in 1648 for George Hope and for James Lunn. James 4th Duke of Lennox, 1st Duke of Richmond (1612–55) eldest son of Esmé and Katherine Clifton. He was a key Royalist supporter in the Civil War and is buried in Westminster Abbey. Among his many titles and properties were the Baronies of Ancrum, Ashkirk and Lilliesleaf, being granted these by Charles I in 1641. In 1643 he is listed as holder of feuduties for Headshaw in Ashkirk Parish, valued at £18 5s. He still held superiority over Barnhills in 1653. He was succeeded by his young son Esmé. James (17th C.) recorded as resident of a parish in Clydesdale. He married Margaret Hutchison. Their twins Susanna and Janet were baptised in Hawick in 1688, with witnesses William Scott of Brieryyards and John Scott of Whitehaugh. James Francis Edward 'the Old Pretender' (1688–1766) son of King James VII (or II), he was forced to move to France when he was an infant and his father was ousted from the throne for being a Catholic. He this became the de facto leader of the 'Jacobite' movement. He led the Jacobite Rebellion of 1715, and escaped back to France when the attempt to take over from George I failed. In October of 1715 about 200 horsemen past through Hawick and proclaimed 'the Chevalier'. About 2 weeks later the Highlander army camped at Hawick Moor. There are many stories told relating to what happened during those few weeks. His son Charles, 'Bonnie Prince Chairlie', also led an unsuccessful revolt 30 years later. James (17th C.) resident of Chesters according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. James (17th/18th C.) smith at Falnash. His children included: Janet (b.1701); and James (b.1703). Margaret (b.1691) and David (b.1693), baptised in Hawick, may have also been his children. The witnesses in 1703 were John Scott in Falnash and Robert Riddell, miller in Falnash. Sir James of Coltness (1713–80) also referred to as 2nd Bart of Goodtrees. He was eldest son of Sir James and Anne Dalrymple. He married Frances, daughter of James, Earl of Wemyss and was succeeded by his son, also Sir James. This branch of the family often spelled their name 'Steuart'. He owned the Chisholme estate in the mid-18th century, being involved in a dispute with John Elliot of Borthwickbrae over Branxholme Muir in the period 1743–60 and with Henry, Duke of Buccleuch in 1763–67. James (18th/19th C.) listed as owner of a horse in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls for Hawick. James (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Stonedge according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. James (b.1770s) mason recorded in 1797 among Hawick men balloted to serve in the Militia. The annotation 'Serving' suggests that he was already serving, with his name appearing again in 1798; in the amded list of 1799 he was among those already serving in the Militia. James (b.c.1780) servant at Stobsden according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Cavers Parish. James (18th/19th C.) earthenware dealer of the High Street, recorded in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. He could be the 'Mr. Stewart' marked on Wood's 1824 map at about 24 High Street or the other one at about No. 55. He could be the merchant of that name whose child died in 1805. James (b.1815) son of Robert, farmer at Hawthornside. He excelled at wrestling and jumping and took part in the Hobkirk Baa along with his brothers. At the 1840 Common-Riding Games he won prizes for wrestling, the standing and running hop-step-and-leap and the hitch-and-kick. He married Margaret (1827–1901), daughter of William of Netherwells (who had the distinction of being born after her father's death in a riding accident). Their children were Robert (who was born at Town-o-Rule and married Elizabeth Forster), William Glass, Alexander, Penelope and Mary. James (b.1823/4) from Perth, he was a frameworker living in Wilton Dean. He was at No. 8 Burn Row in 1851. He married Margaret Cairns and their children included: Isabella (b.1846); Jessie (b.1850); William (b.1852); Mary Ann (b.1854), who married George Richardson; James (b.1856), who worked for the Manchester Guardian and was proprietor of 'Gas World'; Thomas Cairns (b.1858); Daniel (b.1860); Margaret (b.1863), who married James Hood; Alexander (b.1865); and Robert (b.1867). In 1867 he donated to the Museum a German coin and a large mussel shell. Rev. James (1821–86) born in Stirling, 2nd son of David and Janet Galloway. He was educated in Stirling and at Glasgow University. He was licensed by Stirling Presbytery, became assistant at Largs and was first ordained as minister at St. Mary's, Dumfries in 1849. He was translated to Wilton Parish Church in 1851 and remained until his death. During his ministry the present Wilton Church was built, Mansfield Glebe and Old Manse were acquired by the town, and Wilton Hill and Stewartfield were feued for building purposes. Additionally he became a Life Member of the Archæological Society in 1859. He w as great horseman, who would make his horse jump the Manse gates if they were closed when he rode out. It was said that he once rode his horse to Keso Fair, where he sold it in the morning and bought another in the afternoon; his groom told him that it was the same horse, but he refused to believe this until it was clear that the horse knew its way to the correct stall in his stable. East and West Stewart Place are named after him. A large cross in his memory stands near the main entrance to Wilton Church. He married Isabella, daughter of James Reid of Wellfield. Their children were Elizabeth Whiteman, Isabella Reid, David Charles, James Reid, Catherine, John and Eleanora. He published 'Wilton Sabbath School Hymnal' (Hawick, 1877) and 'Last Sermon preached in Wilton Church, 12th Sept. 1886' (Hawick, 1886). His funeral sermon was given by Dr. John Mair and published in 1886. James (b.1828/9) from Langholm, he was schoolmaster at Clarilaw. At the time of the 1851 census he was a visitor at Merrylaw. He was teacher at Clarilaw Schoolhouse in Wilton Parish in 1861. In 1862 he donated to the Museum 'two shank bones of sheep, used in pinning the roofing flags to the oak rafters of an old house in Annan'. Jean (17th C.) recorded in the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694 among those 'Payed but not listed in Hauick Toun'. She was probably from the west side. She could have been related to the dyker John, who was also listed. Jeanie (b.1820/1) born in Ettrick Bridgend. As a girl she worked at Catslack Burn and there met the Ettrick Shepherd on several occasions, sometimes acting as waitress when her master entertained the poet. She described him as a 'muckle jolly-looking fellow, singin' his ain songs and making grand speeches, wearing aye a shepherd's tartan plaid tied aneath his oxter'. In later life she lived at No. 8 Melgund Place. She could be the Jean, daughter of Charles and 'Tibby Fraiter', who was baptised in Yarrow Parish in 1823. Sir John (d.1419) son of Sir William of Jedworth and Minto. He was referred to as being 'of Teviotdale or Jedworth' and also became the 1st of Garlies. In 1406–09 he had an annuity from the customs of Edinburgh. In 1396 he married Marion, the only daughter (and heiress) of Sir Walter of Dalswinton. He was succeeded by his son Sir William of Minto. His wife resigned the Barony of Dalswinton in 1420 (when he was presumably deceased) to be granted to Sir Herbert Maxwell. His widow married Sir John Forester of Corstorphine in 1422. Sir John of Minto (d.bef. 1512) son of Sir Thomas, who had given up the lands in Minto, even although the family kept the designation. In 1477 he was the eldest son of Sir Thomas when he witnessed a charter for his father and mother. He also served as Provost of Glasgow. He is mentioned as being 'now Marshall' and son of Thomas in the 1501 Exchequer Rolls, in relation to superiority of Minto. In 1502/3 he and his wife had a charter for the lands and Barony of Minto, as well as other lands. He witnessed a couple of charters in Edinburgh in 1508. Also in 1508, as superior of the Barony of Minto, he gave a precept of sasine to Sir William Cranston of that Ilk for 2 husbandlands called 'the Stewart lands' in the Lordship of Crailing. In 1510 he was fined for failure to appear at the Justice Aire in Jedburgh. He married Janet Flemming and was succeeded by Robert (who married Janet, daughter of John, 'the Outlaw Murray'). He is sometimes said to have died at Flodden, but was already deceased in 1512 when his son Robert was infeft in his lands near Rutherglen. His eldest daughter Janet is mentioned in 1512. John (c.1484–1536) son of Alexander, Duke of Albany and nephew of King James III. He inherited the titles of Duke of Albany and Earl of March from his father. He acted as Regent during the minority of his cousin's son, James V. In 1516 he granted a new infeftment of the Barony of Branxholme to Sir Walter Scott. Ousted from power in 1524, he spent most of the rest of his life in France. John of Traquair (16th C.) recorded as Parson of Bedrule in 1562. He probably succeeded from William Kerr, but was himself succeeded by Sir John Douglas (however, this may simply have been because of disputes over the patronage). He could have been the same as Sir John, 4th Laird of Traquair. He witnessed a document for Sir Walter Ker of Cessford in 1555. John (16th C.) listed along with George Wilson as 'servants and ministers for the time to William Ryddaill', brother to the Laird of Riddell. This was in a transaction signed in Lilliesleaf Kirk, suggesting that he may have been associated with that church. Sir John of Minto (d.1583) son of Robert. He came from the family that had previously been Barons of Minto, and continued to use the designation. He still held part of the superiority of the Barony of Minto, which was inherited by his grandson Walter in 1614. Like his father he was Provost of Glasgow. In 1556 he renounced his 3-pound land in Langnewton (called 'Stuart Lands') to Sir William Douglas of Lochleven. He was a Collector for moneyn related to the benefices in several Scottish counties in the 1560. His name is recorded as witness to many documents, e.g. he was among the prominent men of the nation who declared James as King in place of Mary in 1567. He served as surety for Borderers in 1573. He married Joanna Hepburn and was succeeded by his son Matthew, who was also Provost of Glasgow. He also had a son Robert, recorded in Glasgow in 1564. His seal bore a horizontal band surmounted by a 'bend engrailed' and a cinquefoil on the left. He may be the 'Lard of Mynto, Collectour to the Comptrollar' recorded in relation to a case in Glasgow in 1566/7. Sir John (d.1591) 2nd son of William, he was the 4th Laird of Traquair. In 1549 he was served heir to his brother Robert, who died in 1548. In 1559 he settled the family disputes over succession, signing confirmation with his cousin Richard Rutherford of the lands of Edgerston, while he kept Wells (in Rulewater), as well as superiority of Edgerston. In 1564 he was listed among Border lairds who were ordered to support the warden, Ker of Cessford. In 1564/5 he was a witness to the bond to end the feud between the Scotts and the Kerrs. He was knighted in 1565. In 1574 he was on the retours for Walter Scott of Branxholme as heir to his great-uncle David Scott, as well as his great-grandfather Sir Walter Scott. In 1581 it was confirmed that he had the 'half merk land of Kirklandis of Bedrowll', including the patronage etc., which had belonged to Kerr of Ferniehirst. He was among the Border Lairds summoned to appear before the Privy Council in 1583/4. He died without issue and was succeeded by his brother Sir William. Sir John of Traquair (c.1600–59) son of John. He succeeded to the Barony of Traquair from his grandfather James, 6th of Traquair, being served heir in 1606. He was also Laird of Wells in Rulewater, and probably the Earl who purchased adjoining lands from John, Lord Balermino. In 1619 he complained (through his tutor, Sir Robert of Shillinglaw) that a group of Turnbulls had cut down a large quantity of timber and removing hay from his lands at Huntliehill and further complained to the Privy Council that the Turnbulls of Bedrule were still at large, despite being denounced as rebels in 1615 and 1616 for not removing themselves from Huntliehill. He was apparently a favourite in the court of Charles I and was made an Earl in 1633. However, he supported the wrong side in the Civil War, being taken prisoner at Preston, and living in poverty after he was released. In 1634 he resigned the superiority of Edgerston to John Rutherford of Edgerston. In 1643 he was recorded as owner of lands valued at £210 10s in Cavers Parish, £409 10s in Hobkirk Parish (these both being for the Wells estate) and £108 for lands in Ruecastle in Bedrule Parish, as well as the teinds of Bedrule, duties in Roxburgh and a large fraction of lands in Maxton Parish. His lands included Fastcastle, where 2 residents were cited in 1644 for not subscribing to the Covenant, saying that 'they would ken no session nor minister, but follow the command of their master, my Lord Traquair' (suggesting that he himself was a dissenter). He married Catherine, daughter of David Carnegie, Earl of Southesk. Their children were John (2nd Earl), Margaret (who married James Douglas, 2nd Earl of Queensberry), Elizabeth Stewart (who married Patrick Murray, 2nd Lord of Elibank), Catherine and Magdalene. John (1622–66) 2nd Earl of Traquair and also Laird of Wells, eldest son of the 1st Earl. He served with the Marquess of Montrose and then the Duke of Hamilton. He paid the land tax on property in Cavers, Hobkirk and Bedrule Parishes in 1663. He married Henrietta Gordon, daughter of George, 2nd Marquess of Huntly and second Anne, daughter of George Seton, 3rd Earl of Winton. Their children included William (3rd Earl), George, Charles (4th Earl), John, Elizabeth, Isabel and Lucy. John (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He is probably the John who, along with William, witnessed a baptism in 1661 for James Scott and Agnes Stewart. He married Janet Renwick and their children included: Margaret (b.1651); George (b.1653); and Margaret (again, b.1656). Isobel (b.1648), with no mother's name give, is probably also his child. The witnesses in 1651 were William Laidlaw and Robert Paterson and in 1656 were William Donaldson and Thomas Currie. John (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Isobel Scott and their children included Margaret (b.1658) and James (b.1661). John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen Veitch and their children included: Jean (b.1649); Marion (b.1651); and Jean (again, b.1653). The witnesses in 1651 were John Scott and James Liddell. John (17th C.) listed as being 'in Cavers' in the 1684 list of those who were declared fugitives for religious non-conformity. He may be the John whose wife Elizabeth Turnbull was also reported for attending conventicles. John (17th C.) recorded at Greenhouse in Lilliesleaf Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. John (d.c.1696) cordiner who was Burgh Officer for many years in the latter part of the 17th century. Following his death, Alex Scott was appointed in his place in May 1696. He may be the John who witnessed baptisms in Hawick in 1683 for John Barrie, resident of Wilton Parish and for Thomas Turnbull. In 1686 he was 'cordiner and toune-officer' when he gave evidence regarding a stolen pack of wool in Hawick. He was probably the 'John Stuart' who witnessed baptisms in 1685, 1687, 1688 and 1689, being 'officer' in one record, and was probably the man of that name listed among those contributing to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. In 1695 he was ordered to announce 'by towcke of drumm' that no one was to resett or aid Elizabeth Miller, who had been found guilty of theft. Probably the same John was a weaver who married Marion Scott and had children: twins Janet and Jane (b.1680); Marion (b.1682); James (b.1684); Jane (again, b.1686); and William (b.1688). The witnesses in 1680 were William Purdom and Mr. Walter Gledstains (the Town Clerk, suggesting that he may indeed have been the Burgh Officer), and in 1688 were Mr. Walter Gledstains and 'litster' George Young. He may have been related to the John who was a Burgh Officer a few decades later. John (17th C.) recorded as 'caliario' when he witnessed a Hawick sasine in 1687. The meaning of the description is unclear, but might suggest that he was a shoemaker perhaps (or he could be the same man as the Burgh Officer). John (17th C.) dyker listed among those who subscribed to the fund for the new Kirk bell in Hawick in 1693/4. It is unclear whether he lived in the town or outside. In 1685 his wife, Margaret Scott, was fined £10 Scots for defaming Janet, the daughter of ex-Bailie James Gledstains, 'confessing yt she sd yt she tooke some flesh out of the pott'. He is probably the John 'dyker to Irland' listed among the 'Deficients in Hauick Parich' in 1694; he may have worked as a dyker for Thomas Ireland. Perhaps the same dyker John was recorded in the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694 among those 'Payed but not listed in Hauick Toun'. He was probably from the west side. John (17th C.) resident of Woll in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll. He could be the John who in 1694 witnessed baptisms for John Williamson, for James Rutherford and for William Scott. John (17th C.) listed as a merchant on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick 'eist the water' in 1694. He could be the John, son of James and Janet Scott, who was born in Hawick in 1652. He could also be the John who was married to Grizel Thomson, and whose son John was born in 1680. Sir John of Minto (d.1697) probably nephew of Sir Ludovic. He was the last in the long line of Stewarts of Minto, who were prominent citizens in Glasgow in the 16th and 17th centuries and held the Barony of Minto. The family interest in Minto had probably been lost either by his uncle or grandfather Sir Walter, although he was still referred to being 'of Minto'. He died on the outward voyage of the Unicorn as part of the Darien Scheme. Rev. John (d.bef. 1706) minister of Wilton. He studied at St. Leonard's College and graduated from St. Andrews University in 1670. He became minister of Wilton in 1683, the first Episcopalian since before the Reformation, being presented to the Parish by the Archbishop of Glasgow. There is an existing letter referring to him in 1683, following a complaint from the Archibishop of Glasgow that John Langlands had not preached for several Sundays; the precise nature of his appointment is unclear. He was also presented to Borthwick in 1688 (the delay suggesting there was argument over the extra duties and stipend). However, he was deprived in 1689 for not reading the Proclamation of the Estates and not praying for William and Mary (i.e. refusing to give up Episcopalianism). In 1690 he performed the marriage ceremony in Langholm for Walter Gledstains, junior of Hilliesland (that family being strong Episcopalians). In 1706 his widow Margaret Forbes, is recorded receiving money from the Session of Arngask Parish, on the recommendation of Jedburgh Presbytery. John (17th/18th C.) 'workman' in Hawick. In 1709 he married Margaret Hislop, both of them being from the Town of Hawick. Their children included Walter (b.1710). John (17th/18th C.) tenant in Todshaw. His son Thomas was born in 1720. John (17th/18th C.) recorded as 'officer' in Hawick in 1723 and 'town officer' in 1725. Probably the same John was recorded in the Town Treasurer's book receiving payments in 1731 and 1732. He was likely to be the same John recorded as Burgh Officer around 1743 along with Francis Turnbull; after the Town Herd, Mungo Armstrong, complained to the Magistrates about neighbouring tenants keeping their livestock on the Common, the pair were ordered to collect these animals, and managed to bring several black cattle to the West Port. He was probaby related to the Burgh officer of the same name who died about 1698. He married Janet Cuthbertson and their son Walter was baptised in 1725, with witnesses Henry Orrock and Francis Ruecastle. John (18th C.) gamekeeper at Cavers in 1779, when he was working for James Douglas. Sir John of Allanbank (1714–96) from the Berwickshire family, he was Sheriff of that county. He became an Advocate in 1737 and was appointed Solictor of the Stamp Duties in 1767. He is listed as being life-renter of lands in Minto Parish in 1779 (and recorded as former liferenter in 1811). His lands were those that had been earlier known as Craigend and Minto Mill farms, including Minto Craigs, Millbank, Craigend Haugh, Millhaugh and a haugh by the Spittal road. He was one of 6 men who had been given liferent of parts of Minto by Sir Gilbert Elliot as a tactic to increase his support among the voters of Roxburghshire. There is no evidence that he had any other local connection. He married Margaret Agnes Smith and was succeeded by his son, Sir John. Rev. William Brown was chaplain to his family before becoming minister of Bedrule. John (18th C.) watchmaker in Hawick. He married Catharine Hall and their children included: William (b.1786); and Douglas (b.1788). The witnesses in 1786 were butcher Andrew Waugh and Kirk Officer Thomas Miller and in 1788 were wigmaker Francis McKenzie and Kirk Officer Thomas Miller. John (18th C.) watchmaker in Hawick. He was on the subscription list for Caw's 'Poetical Museum' (1784). John Govan of Hermiston (d.c.1861) lived at Cotfield in Lilliesleaf Parish in the mid-19th century. He became a member of the Peeblesshire Society in 1827. In 1835 he was involved in a dispute over closing off an old drove road on his property at Hermiston. In 1851 he was listed as a landed proprietor at Cotfield, farming 97 acres. He was listed at Cotfield in Slater's 1852 directory and was still at Cotfield on the 1861 census, living with his nephew Peter and 3 servants. By 1874 he was owner of the lands of Bewlie Moor. His wife was Anna and her 'Lady's Companion' was Maria Mackintosh from Kensington, who appears to have been listed at Cotfield in a directory of 1868. He is buried in his family enclosure in Lilliesleaf Kirkyard. John (b.c.1820) son of Robert, farmer at Hawthornside. He took part in the Hobkirk Baa along with his brothers and was described as 'a very tall and powerful man and whom no one dared tackle'. He married Margaret Grieve from Buccleuch. John Thomson (1830/1–71) stockingmaker of 1 Loan. He later worked as a carrier. He married Jane Paterson in 1852. Their children included James, John, Agnes and another John (who all died in infancy) and Jane (who died aged 18). John (b.1830/1) farmer at Hermiston in 1861. He was probably son of the previous John. He married Agnes Marshall. John Livingstone 'Jock' (1894–1971) born in Hawick, only son of Rev. Duncan of St. Andrews Kirk. He was educated at Edinburgh Academy and at the Royal Dick Vetinary College. In WWI he served in the Scottish Horse and the Argyll & Southern Highlanders. He played flanker for Scotland's rugby team in 1921. He served in the Colonial Veterinary Service 1923–9 and became a Fellow of the Royal Society of Edinburgh. He was Director of the Veterinary Service of the Gold Coast (later Ghana) 1930–48. He wrote 'The Cattle of the Gold Coast' (1956). He was a large man, who was said to require 2 tubes in each wheel of his bicycle and to have once run over a lion! He is buried at Limpopo, South Africa. Maj. John Ross (1918–2015) from Loganswell in Renfrewshire, he moved to the Borders with his mother, who was a teacher at Yetholm and then Denholm. He worked as a tailor, but joined the Army Reserves in 1939. He was a survivor of Dunkirk and was them commissioned with the K.O.S.B., serving in India and Burma, and retiring with the rank of Major. He then became a tailor in North Berwick and ran a guest house there. He joined the Hawick Archæological Society in 1981, serving on the Committee and as Syllabus Secretary. He wrote 'Borderers in Battle', which describes the Burma campaign of the K.O.S.B. Katherine (15th C.) recorded at the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh in 1493. She was a resident of Minto when Adam Turnbull in Hornshole was able to 'compone' for stealing from her, specifically 6 'chattels'. In 1494/5 the same Adam Turnbull had remission for several crimes, including stealing 6 cows and oxen and 2 bullocks from her in Minto. Kathleen W. nee Scott (1928–2023) growing up at Milsington, she attended Roberton School and Hawick High School. She was a keen horse rider. She became involved with the Young Farmers club, and on one overseas exchange trip she met Aberdeenshire farmer Sandy, who she married the following year, 1952. She moved north to Gunhill, near Inverurie, where they had children Alex, Tom and James (who later continued to run the farm at Milsington). Always intrested in the Borders and local history, she started writing books in the 1980s. She was a founder member of the Borders Family History Society and helped organise the first Hawick High School reunion in 1980. She helped organise a cairn at the old Redfordgreen School, as well as being involved in the W.H. Ogilvie Committee.

She wrote 'An Historical Record of Borthwick Wa's Burial Ground' (1987), 'Borthwick Water: two centuries of life in the parish of Roberton' (1991), 'Redfordgreen School, 1885–1955' (1995) and 'History of the Scotts of Milsington' (5 volumes, 1993, 1996, 1998, 2004, 2008). Ludovic (1574–1624) 2nd Duke of Lennox and 1st Duke of Richmond, son of Esmé the 1st Duke of Lennox. He was the next in line to the throne of Scotland after James VI. He was made Lord High Admiral in 1591 and in 1592 was appointed Warden of the Middle March. In that year he and the Laird of Cessford were directed by the King to deal with the Armstrongs of Whithaugh and Roan. He gave a charter to Robert Scott for the lands of Headshaw and Easter Essenside, probably in 1593 (although transcribed as 1553); he must have been Baron of Ashkirk then. In 1594 he resigned into the hands of the King (for later infeftment) the Earldom of Bothwell, including his Lordships and Baronies, such as Liddesdale, Longnewton, Wilton and Chamberlain Newton, lands of Teindside, Harwood, Slaidhills, Carlinpool and Alemoor and patronage of the Kirk of Hawick. In 1603 he had a charter for the lands and baronies formerly belonging to the Archbishop of Glasgow, which included the Baronies of Ashkirk, Lilliesleaf and Ancrum. He married 3 times. He was buried in Westminster Abbey and was succeeded by his brother Esmé. Sir Ludovic of Minto (17th C.) son of Sir Walter. He is recorded in several deeds in 1663. He was involved in disputes with his father and also an unsuccessful investment in lands in Ireland. In 1670 he sold the Barony of Minto to the Marchioness Dowager of Montrose, Isabella Douglas. He married Elizabeth Cunningham, daughter of the 8th Earl of Glencairn, but they divorced in 1668. There were no children from the marriage and he was probably succeeded by a nephew, Sir John. Margaret (d.1417) elder daughter of Thomas, 2nd Earl of Angus. After the death of her brother Thomas in 1377, she and her sister Elizabeth became coheiresses of the Angus titles and estates. However, her sister surrendered her claims in 1379, and so she became Countess of Angus in her own right. She married Thomas, 9th Earl of Mar, who died in 1374; thereafter she was known as the Countess of Angus and Mar. She became mistress of William, 1st Earl of Douglas, who was married to her ex-husband's sister, also called Margaret. She lived at Douglas' home at Tantallon Castle and bore him a son, George, who became 1st Earl of Angus in the Douglas line (after she resigned the Earldom in his favour in 1389). She was certainly still openly living at Tantallon in 1388, and seems to not have been castigated for her behaviour. However, in 1416 she had to give up some lands in Berwickshire because of a dispute with the Prior of Codingham. Margaret (c.1619–1693) married Lieut. Francis Gledstains, who was killed at the Battle of Alderne in 1645. She was mother of Walter Gledstains of Hilliesland, who was Town Clerk of Hawick. Her death is recorded in the family bible of the Gledstains of Hilliesland. Margaret (b.c.1775) recorded as 'Independent' in 1841, when she was living as a widow at the Sandbed. Her children included Mary, Margaret, Wilson, Beatrice and Margaret. Margaret (19th C.) daughter of Robert, farmer at Hawthornside. She was known as an attractive girl with a charming personality. She married civil engineer William Blood of Cranagher, and their children were Blindon (who became Gen. Sir Blindon, K.C.B.), Bagot, Robert and Margaret. Mary see Mary Queen o Scots Matthew (1516–71) 4th Earl of Lennox, son of John, 3rd Earl. He was assigned the rentals of the Lordship of Ettrick Forest. After his death in 1575/6 there were complaints to the Privy Council on behalf of 2 Burgesses of Edinburgh and a large number of Borderers regarding payment of the 'mails'. He married Margaret, daughter of Archibald Douglas, 6th Earl of Angus. Sir Matthew of Minto (d.1610) son of John. His family still held part of the superiority of the Barony of Minto, although it is unclear if they played any direct role in the district. Like his father he was Provost of Glasgow. His gardener was made a Burgess of Glasgow in 1601. He was among those appointed as commissioners to keep the peace in Lanarkshire in 1610. He firstly married Janet Stewart and their children were Sir Walter of Minto (who succeeded) and Janet. He secondly married Jean Colquhoun and had a son, Robert. He witnessed a document for the Duke of Lennox in 1594. His daughter (or possibly wife) may have been the 'young lady Minto' who made a request for a miller to be made a Burgess of Glasgow in 1608. Matthew of Barnhills (d.c.1796) son of Rev. Walter, minister of Ashkirk. He was served as heir to his father in 1750, but was not infefted in the lands of Barnhills until 1780. He had a 'decreet of excambion' with Robert Bennet in 1775. In 1780 he appears to have sold Barnhills to Cornelius Elliot and bought it back the following year. In 1780 he had a sasine for the lands of Wester Barnhills 'in fee' (with Alexander Alison holding them 'in liferent'). He was listed on the roll of electors for Roxburghshire in 1780. His sisters Mary, Helen and Isabel inherited the lands in 1796. Mr. ?? (20th C.) Stationmaster at Hassendean. In 1934 he was sacked for allegedly for staging a fake robbery at the station so that he could steal money from the safe. Robert 1st Duke of Albany (c.1340–1420) 3rd and illegitimate son of King Robert II, brother of 'John' who became King Robert III. He functioned as Regent during his father's infirmity, and also after his brother's death during the minority of his nephew James I. He was thus involved in internal power struggles in Scotland, as well as in leading military expeditions into England. This included indirect involvement in the 'Siege of Cocklaw' in 1403. He was captured at Homildon Hill in 1402, his son Murdoch was exchanged with Henry Percy, and he besieged Roxburgh Castle in 1417. Andrew 'de Hawick' served as his Secretary from 1406. He married firstly Margaret Graham, Countess of Menteith, and secondly Harriet, daughter of Sir William Keith. His children were: Murdoch, who became the 2nd Duke of Albany and was beheaded; Isabel, who married Alexander Leslie, Earl of Ross and Walter Haliburton of Dirleton; Margaret, who married Sir John Swinton; Marjory, who married Sir Duncan Campbell of Lochow; Elizabeth, who married Sir Malcolm Fleming of Cumbernauld; Joan, who married Robert Stewart, Lord of Lorn; Beatrix, who married James, 7th Earl of Douglas; a daughter who married an Abernethy of Salton; John, Chamberlain of Scotland, who married Elizabeth, daughter of Archibald Earl of Douglas; Andrew; Robert; and (a second) Elizabeth, who married Malcolm Fleming of Biggar. Robert of Traquair (d.1548) eldest son of William. In 1547/8 he is listed among the supporters of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme in a bond of loyalty to the Crown, along with the Kerrs. He was succeeded by his brother John. Sir Robert of Minto (d.1553) son of Sir John. In 1529 King James V granted him and his wife the Barony and lands of Minto. In 1533 he was appointed as his representative by William, son of the deceased John Turnbull. William Turnbull offered 'kindly service' to him, and he delivered an old reversion relating to Thomas Turnbull of Rawflat. He was Provost of Glasgow 1526–36. He married Janet, daughter of John, 'the Outlaw Murray'. His children included: John of Minto, also Provost of Glasgow; Agnes, who married John Wallace, 1st of Auchams and Dundonald; and Elizabeth, who married John Maxwell of Calderwood. James, brother to the Laird of Minto, recorded in Glasgow in 1580, was probably also his son. Sir Robert of Shillinglaw (16th/17th C.) 2nd son of James of Traquair. His lands of Shillinglaw lay close to Traquair in Peeblesshire. However, he also had charters in 1614 and 1617 for the Barony of Horsburgh and lands elsewhere, probably including lands in Cavers Parish. In 1618 he was listed among commissioners appointed to keep law and order in Teviotdale and in 1619 appointed as a Commissioner for Tweeddale. He served as tutor to his nephew John, who became the 1st Earl of Traquair; he was tutor in 1619 when there were 2 cases brought against the Turnbulls for cutting down timber at Huntliehill and for removing hay from there. He was a member of the Commission for the Middle Shires around 1618. In 1634 his son James of Nether Horsburgh was served as his heir. Robert (17th C.) resident of the former Hassendean Parish. He married Mary 'Malkye' (Mackie) in Roberton Parish in 1684 and their children included: Elizabeth (b.1685) and Robert (b.1687), baptised in Roberton; and William (b.1694) and George (b.1698), baptised in Wilton. The witnesses in 1687 were George Scott (probably the one associated with Easter Groundistone) and Thomas Cowan. The witnesses in 1694 were John Scott and John Glendinning, and this is the earliest existing entry in the Wilton Parish records. He is probably the James recorded at Easter Groundistone on the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Robert (18th C.) servant of Francis Coltart in Woodburn (in the Borthwick valley). He is recorded in 1729 in the Roberton session books, having an altercation with William Bell, farmer at Broadlee. Robert (18th C.) schoolmaster at Caerlenrig from 1763. In 1767 he was an unsuccessful applicant for the position of schoolmaster in Eckford and he may also have applied for the position in Jedburgh. It is possible that the same man was Schoolmaster at Wilton 1782–85. He was 'Mr Robert Stuart, schoolmaster, Wilton' on the subscription list for Caw's 'Poetical Museum' (1784). He may be the same as the Robert who married Margaret Collier or the Robert who married Janet Cunningham. Robert (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret ('Peggie') Collier and their children included: Andrew (b.1773); Agnes (b.1776); Janet (b.1777); Robert (b.1779); James (b.1781); and Charters (b.1786). The witnesses in 1776 were the Associate Congregation and in 1781 were the

'Special Congregation'. Robert (18th C.) resident of Damside in Wilton. He married Janet Cunningham and their children included: Janet (b.1772); Mary (b.1775); Mary (again, b.1777); and Anne (b.1784). The witnesses in 1775 were James Knox (probably the gardener at Damside) and John Lorraine. Robert (b.c.1770s) carrier in Hawick. In 1799 he was recorded as servant to Robert Pringle in Allars. Robert (18th/19th C.) recorded at 'Back of the Woods' in Hawick Parish on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He was probably farmer at this house near Crawbyres. Robert (b.c.1790) son of Alexander and Mary Colquhoun. The origins of the family probably lies in the north, perhaps related to the Stewarts of Appin who lost their lands after supporting the 1715 and 1745 rebellions. He was tenant of Hawthornside farm 1834–47. He rented a farmhouse for another couple of years, but then left the district. He had a sister, Mary, and a brother, Alexander, who died young. He married Margaret Burnet and their children were: Alexander (b.c.1815), who died unmarried; Margaret (b.c.1825), who married William Blood of Cranagher, and whose son was Sir Bindon Blood; Robert (b.c.1820), who married Isabella Smith, daughter of the factor of Wolfelee and secondly married Esther Hudson; John (b.c.1820), who married Margaret Grieve from Buccleuch; Annie, who married John Wallace; Thomas (b.1816/7), who married Annie Donkin of Newcastle; Mary (b.c.1825), who married Daniel McPherson; and William Colquhoun (b.1828/9), who married Helen Smith. His sons James, Robert and John were prominent for the 'uppies' in Hobkirk Baa; however, the youngest son, William, was considered the best runner in the Borders in his day. Robert (19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Isabella Waugh and their children included: Martha (b.1833); Robert (b.1835); Margaret (b.1837); Thomas (b.1841); Andrew (b.1839); and George (b.1846). Robert (19th C.) married Elizabeth Wilkie in Southdean Parish in 1837. Robert (19th C.) married Isabella Smith in Hobkirk Parish in 1847. Robert (19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Margaret Oliver and their daughter Mary Oliver (b.1850) was baptised in Cavers. Sir Thomas of Minto (d.1500) son of Sir William of Garlies. His brother Alexander married Elizabeth Douglas of Cavers and at one point held the lands of Howpasley. The family clearly had a local connection, including land in Minto Parish. His great-grandfather was Sir William of Jedworth, whose mother was a sister of Sir John Turnbull of Minto. He became Provost of Glasgow. In 1476 he had a charter of a third of the lands in the Barony of Minto, as well as superiority over the whole of the Barony, which had been resigned by his father, Sir William (and with the consent of his older brother Alexander). He had a further charter for the lands of Sunlaws and Morebattle in 1476, resigned by his brother and attached to the Barony of Minto. In 1477 he and his wife had a charter for lands in Renfrew. He witnessed a charter in Edinburgh in 1486. In 1488 he was granted a fee by the Crown, for his service as Marshal. He also had a lease of the lands of 'Dunrod and Fintelauch' for his fee, and continued in this position until at least 1492. In 1490 he granted the lands of Nether Crailing called 'Stewartlandis', which had been annexed to Minto, to Bartholomew Rutherford. In 1491/2 he resigned the lands of Sunlaws, which were granted to Robert Ramsay and his wife Agnes Haitlie. He married Isabel, daughter of Walter Stewart of Arthurlie. Their children were: Sir John of Minto, also Provost of Glasgow; William, who became Bishop of Aberdeen and High Treasurer of Scotland; Archibald; Agnes; Marion, married Adam Maxwell of Southbar; Margaret; James; Nicolas; Robert, recorded owning some of his father's lands in Renfrew in 1514–16; and John. The family kept the 'of Minto' designation for several generations (including 5 Provosts of Glasgow), although they appear to have had no continuing local presence. Thomas (17th C.) listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick 'eist the water' in 1694. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of the Selkirk area who later in life lived in Hawick. He was described (in an 1872 article by Alexander Hogg) as ' a deil-ma'-care sort of fellow' who was 'ever ready for a ploy'. He was involved with a scheme to get a respectable elector of Selkirk incapacitated so that she could not vote, being suspected of drugging the man. Although the man was induced to recover and the Tories won the day, he was rescued from the Selkirk Magistrates by a crowd of Liberals and carried off in triumph. Thomas (b.c.1800) publican on the Loan. He is recorded as vintner at the Nag's Head in Pigot's 1837 directory. In 1841 he was living with his wife Elizabeth at about the first house on the Loan. Walter (12th C.) see Walter Fitz Alan. Sir Walter (1293–1327) son of James, who he succeeded as 6th High Steward of Scotland. He was knighted after Bannockburn. In about 1320 he was 'Walteri Senescalli Scotie' when he was granted lands in Roxburghshire that had been forfeited by Sir John de Soulis and others. This included Eckford, Nisbet, Langnewton, Maxton and Caverton. He was Governor of Berwick, commanding there when there was a siege by the English in 1319. He was a signatory of the Declaration of Arbroath in 1320. Also in 1320 he witnessed the charter of the Lordship of Jedburgh to Sir James Douglas. He married Marjory, daughter of Robert the Bruce; she died possibly after a fall from a horse, with their son John (who became King Robert II) said by some to have been born by Cæserian section. He had earlier married Alice, daughter of Sir John Erskine of that Ilk, and later married Isabel, sister of Sir John Graham of Abercorn. He had a son, Sir John, who died without issue. He also had a daughter who married Sir William Graham of Kincardine, and another daughter, Egidia, who married Sir James Lindsay of Crawford, secondly married Sir Hew Eglintoun and thirdly married Sir James Douglas of Dalkeith. Walter (16th C.) recorded as Rector of Minto in 1542 and 1544. He was presumably a member of the Stewarts of Minto family. Sir Walter of Minto (d.1640s) son of Sir Matthew. In 1606 he was involved in some kind of fight with a group supporting Sir George Elphinstone in Glasgow, being held in Dumbarton Castle for a while. In 1614 he was served heir to his grandfather Sir John in ⅔ of the superiority of the Barony of Minto (as well sa lands in Morebattle). In 1618 he was made a Burgess of Glasgow. Apart from his title, he had no direct local connection and lived in Glasgow, being Bailie to the Regality there (but not Provost, like several of his ancestors). He was also keeper of Dumbarton Castle. In 1641 he was a representative for Clydesdale to meet with the King. He married Christian Crawford in 1598/9. Their daughter Mrs. Lilias Stewart was buried in Greyfriars Cemetery in 1663. The family fortunes dwindled at this time and he had to mortgage his property in Easter and Wester Craigs in Glasgow, which was sold off by his son, Sir Ludovic. He may also be the Stewart who sold off the family interest in the Barony of Minto. Sir Ludovic was succeeded by Sir John, who was even more impoverished (it is said he was a pauper who was sent barefoot to Edinburgh to beg a favour from one of his rich Stewart relatives) and died on a voyage out to the colony at Darien. Walter (17th C.) mentioned in one of the first existing entries in the Town book of 1638 as an officer of the Town (along with James Kinnaird). They were presumably the 2 Burgh Officers of the time, corresponding to the Halberdiers of today. Walter (17th C.) son of cordiner James. In 1666 he was a witness to the fight in St. Mary's Kirk between William Turnbull and James Chisholme. He could be the Walter baptised in Hawick in 1646, son of James and Manie Scott. Walter (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Craik in 1733. His children included: Robert (b.1733); Janet (b.1735); Walter (b.1739); Walter (again, b.1741); and Mary (b.1745). Rev. Walter (1706–62) son of Bailie Matthew Stewart in Newton of Mearns, he was baptised in Canongate, Edinburgh. He studied at the Universities of Edinburgh and Leiden and was presented to Ashkirk Parish in 1730 by Sir Gilbert Elliot of Minto, one of the Lords of Session at the time. He paid the window tax at 'the mance' in Ashkirk Parish in 1748 and again in 1753. In 1742 he was recorded in Selkirk as 'minister of the Gospel at Ashkirk for victual supplied for the poor'. He also bought (from John Mackenzie of Devlin) the land at Barnhills in 1749 and hence is sometimes described as 'of Barnhill' (or 'Barnhills'). He was thus designated among the Commissioners for Roxburghshire in 1761. In 1750 in Edinburgh he married Mrs. Mary Duncanson (who died in 1793) of Garshake. Their children included: Mary (b.1751); Matthew (1752–82) of Barnhills; Helen (1754–1815); Margaret, who died in infancy; James (b.1756), died young; and Isabel (b.1759, or Isabella). Matthew inherited the lands of Barnhills from him and after Matthew's death they passed to Mary, Helen and Isabel. Walter (18th C.) resident of Roberton and Wilton Parishes. He was at Greenbank in 1780 and Stirches in 1792. He married Betty Miller in Roberton in 1774. Their children included: Betty (b.1780); Janet (b.1782); and Walter (b.1792). Isobel (b.1776) and Marion (b.1778), baptised in Roberton, with no mother's name listed, were probably also his children. The witnesses in 1792 were Gilbert Smith and Thomas Ferguson (both servants of Chisholme of that Ilk, suggesting that he also worked for the laird of Stirches). Sir William of Jedworth (d.1402) 2nd son of Sir Alexander of Darnley and Crookston or perhaps son of Sir John of Jedworth, his mother being a sister of Sir John Turnbull of Minto. He was probably grandson (or other descendant) of 'John Senescal de Jedwith' who signed the Ragman Rolls. He was also known as 'of Teviotdale'. He may have been an ally of the English until 1384 when Teviotdale was recaptured for Scotland, then fighting on the Scottish side and being rewarded by Robert II with lands in Roxburghshire. He received money from the French to support the war against England in 1385 and was present at Otterburn in 1388. He was knighted around this time and in the 1390s served as auditor of the exchequer, as well as commissioner at march days. He was additionally appointed as Sheriff of Roxburghshire, although the extent of the appointment is not known. In the period 1390–1402 he acted as Clerk of Audit according to the Exchequer Rolls. In 1390 he was granted the lands of Minto by John Turnbull ('Out with the sword'), who was his uncle. This was confirmed by Robert II in 1390/1, and included the patronage of the church, which had been resigned by George Abernethy. He was thus probably the first of the Stewarts to own lands in Minto. He was probably the Sir William who witnessed a Lindsay charter for Stouslie and Groundistone about 1390. An udated charter of Robert III (probably around 1400) grants him ⅓ of the lands of Minto. In the late 1390s he accompanied Archibald Douglas (later 4th Earl of Douglas) in an attack on the English-held Roxburgh Castle. In 1398 he was one of the 'borowis' for the Earl of Douglas bounds on the Middle March, according to an English document. He witnessed charters for the Earl of Douglas in 1400 and 1402. He led an unsuccessful raid into Northumberland in 1400 and was at the battle of Homildon Hill in 1402. There he was captured, tried and executed at the instigation of Sir Henry Percy, his body being quartered and displayed on the gates of York. He married Isabel, who was widow of Sir Richard Oliver, although her maiden name is unknown. He was succeeded by his son Sir John, 1st of Garlies, and had at least one other son. His widow Elizabeth remarried to Walter of Bickerton and received some of the customs duties of Edinburgh and Linlithgow in the period 1407–20. Sir William of Dalswinton (15th C.) son of Sir John, 1st of Garlies. In 1429 he succeeded to the Barony of Minto, but this was disputed by Walter Turnbull. As a result it seems that the barony was split, so that his family held the half barony. He was knighted by James III in about 1443 and sat in Parliament in 1467. He married more than once, with his last wife being Euphame Graham. His children included: Andrew, his heir, who predecesed him; Sir Alexander of Garlies, who fought at Sauchieburn and married Elizabeth, daughter of Archibald Douglas of Cavers; Sir Thomas, who succeeded to Minto; and Walter of Tonderghie. William of Traquair (16th C.) son of James. In 1526 he was listed in the remission for a large number of Borderers who attacked the Earl of Arran's forces. His brother James was also listed. He became heir to the lands of Rutherford and Wells through his aunt Helen Rutherford. In 1533/4 he was involved in a bond in Selkirk with Patrick Murray of Falahill. In 1538 he had a regranting of his lands of Traquair. In 1541 he is recorded as occupier of Garlawcleuch, Blackhouse and Douglascraig in Yarrow; he may also be the William who was occupier of Berrybush and half of Phaup in Ettrick. Also in 1541 he was involved in a dispute with the Dicksons of Ormiston. He married married Christina, 2nd daughter of John, 2nd Lord Hay of Yester. Their children were: Robert, who succeeded; John, who succeeded Robert; William, who succeeded John; James, who succeeded William; Margaret, who married James Murray of Falahill and George Douglas, younger of Bonjedward; and a daughter who married William Sinclair of Blans. William (16th C.) holder of a particate of land on the north side of the public street according to Hawick's 1537 Charter. Sir William (d.1605) 5th Laird of Traquair. He succeeded to his brother Sir John, also inheriting the lands of Wells in Rulewater. In 1567 he was listed as brother-german of Sir John of Traquair when he witnessed the wedding contract for Elizabeth, sister of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch. He was a 'gentleman of the bed-chamber' of James VI and was made Governor of Dumbarton Castle in 1582. In 1592 he was surety for George Douglas of Bonjedward and Andrew Douglas of Timpendean. He witnessed a document for the Earl of Lennox in 1594 and in the same year was appointed a deputy justice for Roxburgh, Selkirk and Peebles. In 1602 he complained about 'reif' committed on him by James Scott of Whithopei and in 1603 was in dispute with Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme and his chamberlains over taxation. He died unmarried and was succeeded by his brother James of Shillinglaw. William (16th/17th C.) servant of James Douglas of Cavers. In 1612 he, along with William Douglas of Whitriggs and his brother Robert, was accused by Gavin Elliot of Brugh of attacking his family on their way home from Cavers Kirk. However, the group were acquitted after swearing that the claim was untrue. Perhaps the same William was deputy Sheriff of Roxburgh in 1618 when he acted as Bailie for Sir William Douglas of Cavers in a sasine for the lands of Crook. William (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1661 he, along with John, witnessed a baptism for James Scott and Agnes Stewart. He could be the William 'Stevert' who married Marion Henderson and whose son John was baptised in 1661, with witnesses John and Robert Henderson. Alternatively he could be the William 'Stevert' who married Agnes Scott and whose son Walter was baptised in 1661, with witnesses Adam Ogilvie and James Dunlop. William (b.1657) 3rd Earl of Traquair, son of John, 2nd Earl, whom he succeeded in 1666. He was also Laird of Wells in Rulewater. He died unmarried and was succeeded by his brother Charles. William (17th C.) listed as resident at Harden in Wilton Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He could be the weaver in Heap who witnessed a baptism for fellow weaver John Cairns in Wilton in 1711. William (17th C.) tailor listed among those who subscribed to the fund for the new Kirk bell in Hawick in 1693/4. He is also listed in 1694 on the west-side of Hawick on the Hearth Tax rolls. He could be the William born in Hawick in 1637, son of Francis and Helen Muir. He could also be the William who married Margaret Scott and whose children baptised in Hawick included: Margaret (b.1669); Charles (b.1673); and Francis (b.1677). William (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He is probably the William who witnessed a baptism for Walter Wilson in 1690. He married 'Mals' Hastie and their daughter Isobel was baptised in 1690. The witnesses were John and James Stewart (who were surely related). William (1695/6–1760) tenant farmer in Gillfoot. He is buried in Ettleton Cemetery. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Agnes Elliot in 1720. Their children included Robert (b.1723) and Agnes (b.1726). He may be the William 'Steward' who witnessed the baptism of an illegitimate child for George Langlands of that Ilk in 1724. He also witnessed a baptism for Robert Scott, resident of Tandlaw, in 1729. William (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, living at Groundistone in 1742. He married Marion 'Houison' and their children included Margaret (b.1739) and Janet (b.1742). The witnesses in 1742 were James Dryden and George Lamb. William (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, living at Stouslie in 1770 and 1780. He married Margaret Ormiston in Wilton in 1764. Their children included: Helen (b.1765); Mary (b.1767); Isabel (b.1770); and George (b.1771). Probably the same William secondly married Jean Scott in 1777, with children: George (b.1778); and James (b.1780). The witnesses in 1770 were James Dryden and Thomas Reid. The baptism in 1780 was performed by Rev. John Young (meaning that he was a member of the Green Kirk), with witnesses James Scott and George Turnbull. William (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Jean Scott and their children included George (b.1778) and James (b.1780). William (19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. He married Mary Mackay and their children included Margaret (b.1850) and Jane (b.1852). William Colquhoun (b.1828/9) youngest son of Robert, farmer at Hawthornside. He took part in Hobkirk Baa along with his brothers. He was known as one of the best runners in the Borders and was unbeaten over about 30 races. On one occasion he was dancing and playing the fiddle at Billerwell until 2 a.m., set out an hour later to meet his brother in Newcastle, arriving at 4 p.m., and then won a sprint race that his brother had put him up to. He ran against Willie Scott from Martin's House, in a specially arranged match over half a mile near Stobs, and won. He married Helen, daughter of William Smith in 1853 and moved to Newcastle (also spelled 'Steuart', 'Stuert' etc. and in earlier times interchangeable with Stuart as well as 'Steward').

Stewartfield (stew-ur'-feeld) n. popular name for the area around East and West Stewart Places.

Steyll (stīl) n. former name for lands near Branxholme, mentioned in the 1420 charter when half of the lands of Branxholme were granted to Robert Scott of Rankilburn. The description is of 'the lands and houses of Steyll, and the half of the broad meadow towards the lands of Steyll . . . on the west side of the Syke'; the exact location is uncertain. Somewhere around Branxholme Town seems feasible, but a location much further west, near the hill called 'The Steel', is also possible (also written 'Steyl' in 1420).

steys (stīz) n., pl. stays, a corset, girdle – '. . . sellin a thing frae hoosehold goods ti backlacin steys' [IWL].

St. George's Kirk (sin'-jōr-jeez-kirk) n. church in St. George's Lane, built in 1843–44 after the Disruption as the Free or Protesting Church. The land was purchased by the new congregation from James Anderson of Wilton Lodge. The original building was designed by Andrew Thomson of Glasgow and John Smith of Darnick. Several articles were placed in the foundation stone (and could not be found when the church was rebuilt). A manse was built on Wilton Path in 1846, designed by Smith of Darnick. The church was known as 'Hawick Free Kirk' for more than 50 years. It changed its name to 'St. George's United Free Church' in 1900 (after the union of the Free and United Presbyterian Churches); the reasons for the choice of the new name are uncertain. After purchase of the house and grounds of 'Ellabank' next door, the church was rebuilt in 1913–16 using Doddington stone, but with parts of the original walls and a lintel inserted from the old building. The austere Gothic design is by architect J.P. Alison. It is a grade C listed building. An adjoining hall was built a few years later. A pipe organ was installed in 1920 and a manse was preented to the church in 1925. It was re-named simply 'St. George's Church' in 1929 (after the union of the United Free Church and the Church of Scotland). It contains an east-end window, commemorating the 1929 reunion (possibly the only such window in Scotland), by Lilian J. Pocock of London. The organ was added in 1920 in memory of Bessie Scott (a gift of Peter Scott & Co.). A separate West Port 'Free' congregation had been established in 1855, and after that church closed in 1956, St. George's was renamed 'St. George's West'. Since 1988 it has been known as Teviot Parish Church, with links to Roberton Parish. Kirk Session records for 1842–82 and 1900–14 are in the National Archives. A roll of the ministers is: John Aikman Wallace 1843–70; William H. Gaulter, assistant 1859–64; John MacGregor 1865–73; M.P. Johnstone 1873–79; W.A.P. Johnman 1880–1923; Donald G. Ross 1911–35 (assistant until 1923); C. Sydney Finch 1936–1959; Archibald Mills 1959–66; Thomas N. Hood 1967–82; Neil Combe 1984– .

stickit (sti-, stee-kee', -ki') adj., pp. stuck, gored with an animal's horns, stabbed – 'The said John Gladstainis stiket John Purdie at the table' [1596/HAST1910] (also steekit).

stickit minister (sti-kee'-mee-nees-tur) n., arch. someone trained for the clergy but without a charge, popularised by the 1893 novel of that name by S.R. Crockett.

stick the heid in (stik-thu-heed-in) v. instruction to head-butt, or more generally to fight.

sticky-ooty see stickie-ootie

sticky tam (sti-kee-tawm) n., arch. goose-grass, Galium aparine (more commonely sticky wullie).

sticky wullie (sti-kee-wu-lee) n. cleavers, goose-grass, Galium aparine, a plant with hooked bristles on its leaves and round seeds that catch on clothing, and provide entertainment for children (jocularly called 'adhesive William' and the velcro plant, it has many names; see also bluid-tongue, lizzie-rin-the-hedge, robin-rin-the-hedge, stickers and sticky tam).

stiffie (sti-fee) n., arch. someone who is stuck-up, priggish or overly formal, a stiff – '... apart from one or two 'stiffies', we all looked forward to these sessions' [BB] (no longer in use with this meaning).

still (stil, stūl) n. a stool – 'sit still on that still, wull ee?', 'For mending the Stule of Repentence, 10s' [PR] (also spelled 'stuil' and 'stule').

Still (stil) n. James (17th C.) clerk for Hobkirk Parish in the years around 1693. It is recorded in that year that Magdalene Nicholson (widow of the Baronet of Stobs) paid him for her share of building a new church at Hobkirk.

the Still (thu-stil) n. another occasional name for the Stell Hoose.

still an on (stil-an-ōn) adv., arch. nevertheless, anyway – 'Still an on, thir billies hed a sair hatter or they got the bruits weerd bye the cairts' [ECS], 'But still an' on, ye'll no', I trow re fashed wi' goustin' blatter' [WL].

still an yow (stil-an-yow) n., arch. a children's ball game, where a ball is bounced off a wall and has to be caught by a nominated player, who, failing to succeed shouts 'still' to the others and then has to hit one of them with the ball to make them the new thrower – 'At fower o'clock we'd oot wi' top or gird, And whiles, gin we could boast a baa, I've seen oo play for oors at 'Still an' yow', Stottin't on Drummond's gable waa' [WL].

stilt (stil') n., arch. the handle of a plough – '... That ye between the stilts was bred, Wi' ploughmen schooled, wi' ploughmen fed' [BS], 'The Jamie Sword would leave the plough-stilts, and ... set to work to excavate the boulder' [RJR], a crutch.

stilt (stil') v., arch. to use stilts, cross water on stilts – 'To stilt the water, To cross it on poles, Roxb.' [JoJ], to go on crutches.

stilt (stilts) n., pl. wooden poles with foot perches, formerly used to cross rivers and streams. They were common in Hawick before the main bridges were built. And before the Victoria footbridge was constructed, workers used them to get to the mills across the Teviot. In Denholm every household had a pair, with the favourite crossing place being just below Denholm Mill.

Stinkin Well (sting-kin-wel) n. name for a spring to the east of the farm of Flatt in southern Liddesdale (marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Stintieknowe (stin-tee-now) n. small farm steading out beyond Stirches, near Dykeneuk Loch, and also known variously as Stinty-Knowes, Stinty Knowe etc. Walter Scott was farmer there in the early 19th century. In 1841 there were 2 households there, one the Curries and the other housing a variety of people. In 1851 Thomas Smith and family were in one house and the Campbell brothers in the other. In 1861 labourer William Thomson and family were at the cottage with James Gledstains and family at 'Stintyknows Far House'. The hill there was originally the 'stenting knowe', where Wilton Common was stented, prior to its division in 1764. In other words this site was essentially the Wilton equivalent of the Caa Knowe – 'Stinty Knowe then the Cala Burn There isna a walk mair pleesant Now oor on the Whitehaugh Road And in front o' ee a pheesant' [AY], 'There's Lockie o' the Stinty Knowes, There's Nicol o' Dykenook, And Bryson o' the Priestrigg, And Hall into the Heap' [DJG] (also written 'Stintie Knowe', Stintyknows', 'Stinty Knowes', etc.; it appears to be marked 'Lintinhall' on Stobie's 1770 map).

the Stintin Burn (thu-stin-tin-burn) n. former name for the stream in Wilton, which rises on Whitehaugh Moor and flows in a southerly direction, past Whitehaughmoor farm to join the Cala Burn. It is marked on the 1764 map of Wilton Common as 'The Stintin Burn', rising in several springs, as well as in 2 small boggy areas called Titling Moss. There was a ford over the burn, near the confluence with the Cala Burn, which was on the boundary of Wilton Common.

stipeet see stipit

stipen (stī-pin) n., arch. a stipend – '... aw see they're payin' ye yer steipin' afore the sermon's dune' [WNK] (also steepend).

stipit (sti-pee', -pi') adj. stupid – 'hei was knocked stipit in the tackle', 'div ee hink A'm stipit?', 'ee er stipit', 'Deh be si stipit ... Hei's been at a denner an' disni want tae spill ony whusky!' [JCo] (also spelled 'stuipit', 'stipeet', 'stippit', etc.).

Stirches (stir-cheez) n. area to the north of Silverbuthall, reached via Dickson Street. The name is now mainly identified with the council housing scheme, was developed after the property was purchased in 1971, with building commencing in 1973. The housing comprising a series of streets bounded by Stirches Road and Guthrie Drive, and contains a primary school, but no businesses. The main road to Selkirk and the north once went through here. The name goes back at least to the 16th century, and was formerly 'Stirkshaw' or 'Stirkshaws'. There is a charter of James VI to Walter Scott, son and heir of Robert, 2nd son of Walter of Synton, of the 6-merk land of 'Stirkschaw'. 'Watt Scott of Stirkschawis' was listed among 'Landit Men' of Scotland in about 1590. There were sons of the Scotts of Synton (or Whitslade) there in the 16th and 17th centuries. Thomas Scott of Whitslade paid tax on £214 for the land in about 1660; it was then in the Barony of Chamberlain Newton. However, he sold the 'six merk-land of Stirkshaws' to Walter Chisholme of that Ilk (and his son William) in 1660. William Chisholme was owner in 1678 and it was still recorded with the same value in 1788 and 1811. William Cavers was living there in 1682 and William Telfer in 1683. The lands were part of Hassendean Parish until 1690 when that parish was suppressed and that part allocated to Wilton. In 1694 tax was paid on 4 hearths for 'Stirkshaus' his house', and Janet Lamb was listed among the poor. James Ormiston was there in 1721, Walter Lorraine in 1724–29, John Blyth in 1728 and William Lamb in 1729. George Graham was there 1741–44 and 1749–56. The estate was valued at £430 in the 1740s. Thomas Scott was tenant in about 1756–64. The estate was valued at £214 in 1764. Walter Stewart was living there in 1792 and Richard and William Turnbull were wrights there in 1797. The estate was bought by John Farrar Blenkhorn in 1898, who was already renting the house. The house was redesigned and eventually passed to the Sisters of St. Augustine, and used as a private nursing home. The estate was sold off in parts, following Minnie Blenkhorn's death in 1922. The lower area was developed as the Stirches housing estate in the mid-1970s – 'Coming in by Stirches hill, I saw auld Hawick a dreaming still' [IJ], 'Wi' haltin' step by Stirches brae To roam the Heap Hills ower ...' [WFC], 'A gentle walk up the Stirches road Then, when ee look around Ee think wi' awe this is hame And it feels like hallowed ground' [AY] (the name occurs regularly from 1481 until the early 18th century as 'Stirkschaw', 'Stirkschawis', 'Stirkshaws', 'Styrkschaw' and similar spellings; the modern 'Stirches' is first recorded in 1713, but it is still 'Stirkshaw' in Hawick Burgh records of 1728; it is 'Styrkschaw' in 1500, 'Stirkschaw' in 1501/2, 'Stirkschawis' in 1502, 'Styrkschaw' in 1504/5, 'Stirkschaw' in 1505, 'Stokschawis' in 1512, 'Styrkschawis' in 1579, 'Styrk Schawis' in 1579/80, 'Styrkschawis' in 1580/1, 'Stirkschawis' in 1590, 1592 and 1599, 'Sterchehewis' in 1602, 'Stirkshaues' in 1694, 'Stirkshawes' in 1678, 'Stirchaus' in 1682, 'Stirkshaws' in 1708 and 'Stirthces' in 1720; the origin is clearly from Old English 'styrc' plus 'sceaga' or Scots 'shaw', meaning a wooded area with young bullocks).

Stirches Band (stir-cheez-bawnd) n. popular name for the military band of the Upper Teviotdale Rifle Corps at the end of the 19th century, whose Captain was John Scott Chisholme of Stirches.

Stirches Brick Works (stir-cheez-brik-wurks) n. works set up by Capt. Chisholme of Stirches, which produced bricks, tiles and pottery between about 1850 and 1870, mainly used in local building projects. The original idea had been to establish a pottery works, until it was found that the local clay was unsuitable. The works were abandoned when the price of transportation and coal became too expensive. The buildings were used by the shepherd when the estate was purchased by Blenkhorn in 1890. Some ruined remains can be seen on the right of the road leading from the Convent to Stouslie.

Stirches Burn (stir-cheez-burn) n. stream that rises perhaps near Priestrig and flows through Stirches and then partially underground to become the Howden Burn.

Stirches Croft (stir-cheez-croft) n. former farm on Stirches estate, just to the west of the road to the main house (it is marked on the 1897 Ordnance Survey map).

Stirches Hoose (stir-cheez-hoos) n. Stirches House, an extensive mansion above Stirches housing scheme. A previously existing house was the residence of the Chisholms for about 200 years, being built on top of a mediæval tower in the mid-17th century by Walter Chisholm. The original tower was square (perhaps similar to Goldielands) and had a protecting courtyard wall. It was built by Scott of Whitslade, after he became Laird in the late 15th century. Above the doorway was a Latin inscription 'Christus Rex Regum qui non dormitat in ævum protegat hanc ædem necnon sine crimini plebem 1503' ('Christ the King of Kings, who never sleeps in heaven, protect this house and the people guiltless of crime'); a copy is still above the door of the present house (an extra 'b' on the end of 'crimini' suggests it is an imperfect copy). The lower floor had a vaulted ceiling, with the upper floors reached via a staircase in the roughly 6 foot thick walls. The second level held a public room about 30 feet by 18 feet, with a fireplace at each end, and there were sleeping rooms above. The upper stories were demolished in about 1666, with new accommodations built on either side and the south front added to the house. The initials 'W.C. M.B. 1666' were carved above one of the windows (Walter Chisholme and his wife Margaret Balderstone), this panel now in the north-east gable. Tax was paid on 19 windows there in 1748. The main house was added to and altered over the years, becoming a white-washed cluster of buildings. The main building was in turn largely demolished in 1899/1900 for John Blenkhorn, and rebuilt to the designs of J.P. Alison. This included a fabricated Blenkhorn coat-of-arms in stained glass on the staircase and a stable for 12 horses. The only mediæval parts surviving are sections of the south gable and west wall. After it was finally completed in 1904, James Blenkhorn lived there for only another 5 years before his death. There are photographs of how the house looked during his time there. After Minnie Blenkhorn's death in 1922 the house went on the market and since 1926 has been run by the Augustinian Sisters as St. Andrew's Nursing Home, better known as 'the Convent'. An intricately carved slab from the old house, bearing the Chisholm crest, is in the Museum.

Stirches Ludge (stir-cheez-luj, -loj) n. small house near the entrance to the drive-way of the former Stirches House, there since at least the mid-19th century.

Stirches Mains (stir-cheez-mānz) n. farm in the Stirches area, to the left of the road just after the Convent. The farmer there recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax and Dog Tax Rolls was Mrs. Scott. Alexander Scott was recorded as tenant in at least 1797–1801, while Thomas was also living there in 1799–1801 and James Turnbull was a servant there in 1801. In the early 19th century was James Bunyan and in 1841 was Walter Knox – 'Owre the lang brae frae Stouslie; Frae the mains o' Stirches doun; How micht I come at the day's end To the bonny Border toun?' [WL] (presumably once the home farm for Stirches).

Stirches Mains Hill (stir-cheez-mānz-hil) n. name sometimes given to the hill near Stirches Mains, reaching a height of 266 m.

Stirches Quarry (stir-cheez-kwa-ree) n. former quarry on the opposite side of the road from Stirches Mains.

Stirches Road (stir-cheez-rōd) n. the main road from Dickson Street to Stirches House, and also once the main road to Selkirk and points north. It now provides access to much of the Stirches housing estate.

Stirches Schuil (stir-cheez-skil) n. primary school in the Stirches housing sheme, built in 1976 on Roxburghe Drive. It's characteristic feature is a forest of pyramidal roof lights.

stirk (stirk) n., arch. a young bovine animal after weaning, generally those kept for slaughter rather than breeding, usually referring to bullocks or steers, but also sometimes heifers – '... That he keeps about a score of sheep, sometimes more, sometimes fewer, two cows, and sometimes a stirk' [DCW1765], '... also from James Wardlaw, in Riccarton, was bought for 23s 'an ox stirk of the guidwife's at the mill' ' [JaT], 'Transform'd may I be to a stirk, If bonny Meggy's wanton smirk ... ' [JR], 'His time is up, he comes a hornless sirk – For faith! his sca'p's sae soft that horns won't grow on't' [JoHa], '... Sure he'd hae the heart o' a stirk, Could look without love on sic beauty' [JoHa], '... I know not if the stirks grew tired before the stars were set' [WHO], '... And whiles I feel like tethered stirk Stuck here amang it a' ' [WL] (also sometimes 'stark'; from Old English; the word occurs in several local placenames, e.g. 'Stirches').

Stirkcleuch Height (stirk-klooch-hī') n. hill that is the north-eastern spur of the Pike, between Penchrise Pen and the Maidens. It reaches a height of 443 m. Further to the north-east is Burnt Craig.

stirkie (stir-kee) n., arch. diminutive form for a young bovine animal – 'Each 'eer, as Januar' – end returns, Ilk yowe and stirkie waefu' murns ... ' [DH].

Stirk-rigg (stirk-rig) n. small hill about 1 km north of Bedrule farm, reaching only about 160 m in height. Just to the west of the summit are the remains of a circular earthwork, about 45 m in diameter, probably a settlement. It was said (in the New Statistical Account) to have been removed by cultivation in the 18th century, but is still visible in aerial photographs. This was the former site of a farm, which was incorporated into the farm of Newton, with all signs of the farmhouse disappearing. John Smith was there in 1701. 'Stirkrig' and 'Stirkrig-hill' were listed as part of Newton according to the Land Tax Rolls of 1811 (also 'Stirkrigg').

Stirkshaws (stirk-shawz) n. early name for Stirches, after the stirks which grazed there. It changed to 'Stirches' in the early 18th century. The Chisholms were Lairds of Stirkshaws for about 250 years (also 'Stirkschaw', 'Stirkschaws', 'Stirkshaw', etc.; incorrectly written 'Strikshaws' by Keith Scott).

Stirkshielhope (stirk-sheel-hōp) n. former farm in Liddesdale, listed as 'Styrkschelhope' in a c.1376 rental roll of Liddesdale. It was valued at 8 merks and listed under 'Foresta' (which seems to have been the northern part, including the Hermitage valley). It is recorded as 'Streichelhope' on the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale, and still valued at 8 merks; the tenants were Robert Elliot in Ramsiegill, John of the Hill, Adam Elliot of Lees, 'Old' Robert Elliot of Ramsiegill, John Elliot and John's son James called 'Nelis Jok'. It could be related to 'Stitchel Hill' near Riccarton.

Stirk Sike (stirk-sīk) n. small stream that joins the west side of Dawston Burn to the north of Saughtree. It is between Watch Sike and March Sike and is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map.

Stirling (stir-ling) n. Benjamin (b.1805/6) resident of Lilliesleaf. In 1851 he is recorded as 'Pauper (formerly Tinsmith); Deaf & Dumb'. David (14th C.) priest and notary from St. Andrews Diocese, who is recorded as 'de Strivelyn'. In 1364 he was given the promise of the Church of Cavers on the resignation of William de Greenlaw. However, he probably never had possession of Cavers, since John de Govan held the benefice from about this time. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. James 'Jim' (1924/5–) from Cumnock, he volunteered for the Royal Navy at the age of 18. He was a telegraphist and then served on minesweepers. He was on a ship the cleared mines for the D-Day landings and later his ship was sunk and the crew spent hours in the water befor being rescued. After the war he joined the police, serving in Duns, Coldstream, Yetholm, Jedburgh and Hawick. He retired as a sergeant. He is Hawick's last surviving link with D-Day. Peter (b.1812/3) from Newtown, he was a tailor in Lilliesleaf, listed in Slater's 1852 directory. He was living on the north side of Main Street in 1851. His wife was Agnes. Robert (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf. His children included George (b.1743), Mary (b.1745), James (b.1750) and Margaret (b.1753). Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf, who paid the 1785 cart tax there and is also recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He is surely related to James, who is also listed in 1797. He was an innkeeper in Lilliesleaf, who subscribed to Andrew Scott's book of poetry, published in Kelso in 1811. He may be the Robert who married Rachel Mathison and had children including Robert (b.1771), Sally (b.1774), Peggy (b.1776), Agnes (b.1778), Rachel (b.1780) and William (b.1783). Robert (18th/19th C.) recorded as 'Junior Carter' at West Middles in Lilliesleaf Parish in the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. He is probably son of the older carter of the same name. He is probably the journeyman wright (suggesting that one of the occupations may have been an error) listed on the 1801 Militia ballot in Lilliesleaf. He is probably the Robert who married Jenny Gray and had a son James (b.1803) baptised in Lilliesleaf. Other children, with no mother's name given, who may be his, include Bella (b.1794) and William (b.1799).

stishie (sti-shee) n., poet. bustle, uproar – 'When the stishie has smoored oot my rest . . . ' [WL] (cf. strooshie).

stitch (stich) n., arch. a furrow or drill of potatoes, turnips, etc. (see also tatti-stitch).

stitcher (sti-chur) n. a worker who stitches final trimmings (e.g. ribbons or pockets) on garments in the knitwear industry, using a sewing machine, this traditionally being a woman's job.

Stitchel Hill (sti-chul-hil) n. hill just to the north-east of Riccarton junction, rising to 318 m. There was formerly a fortified house near here (it is 'Stitchelhill' in 1694 and 1736; it is marked as 'Stritcher-hils' on Gordon's c.1650 map and Blaeu's 1654 map).

Stitchelhill (sti-chul-hil) n. farmstead in northern Castleton Parish, near the hill of the same name. It could be related to the lands of 'Styrkschelhope' listed in northern Liddesdale in a rental roll c.1376 and 'Streichelhope' recorded in a rental roll of 1541. 'Willie's Airchie' Elliot 'of Strychill hill' is recorded in 1590. In 1632 it was owned by Gilbert Eliott of Stobs and listed as 'Struchehill alias Stitchelhill' (and listed among rentals of Kelso Abbey). It was surveyed for the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1718, when it was combined with Laidlawhope and Whitrope, and extended to 1990 acres, bounded by Laws, Dawstonburn, Millburnholm and Roughley. The lands were rented by John Laing from the Duke of Buccleuch in 1736. John Oliver was farmer there in the 1830s. William Roxburgh was shepherd in 1835. There was a lime works there according to the 1841 census, with 7 quarrymen working there. George Scott and family were living there in 1861 (it is 'Stitchelhill' in 1694 and 1736; it is marked as 'Stichilhill' on Stobie's 1770 map).

stithy (sti-thee) n., arch. an anvil – '. . . While block and stithy rang wi' our daffin' an' our mirth' [JT].

Stiven (stī-vin) n. Rev. David Sime (d.1986) son of David Russell and Jeannie Sime, he was born near Dundee, where he was school Dux. He served with the Royal Scots, was awarded the Military Cross and returned to Britain wounded (with a missing leg, and an obituary having been written about him after being reported killed in action). He graduated from St. Andrews in 1919 and received his B.D. there in 1922, having a special interest in Hebrew and Biblical Criticism. He spent some time in Jerusalem, then became assistant at St. Cuthbert's in Edinburgh before being appointed as minister of Teviothead Kirk in 1925. He was translated to Gilcomiston, Aberdeen in 1929 and Inveresk in 1937. He was minister of Iona Parish 1958–66 and received a Doctorate of Divinity. He married Margaret ('Peggy') McIntosh in 1923 and they had several children (his surname is sometimes given as 'Steven').

stiver (stI-vur) n., arch. a small coin, something of little value – '. . . A single stiver would I give? never! Though he fell at my very door' [JoHa], 'Nixt race when it came oot an' won, Hed no a stiver tae pit on' [MB] (from an old Dutch coin).

stivet (sti-vi') n., arch. a stupid or obstinate person – 'He's an auld stivet!' [GW].

St. James' Fair (sin'-jām-zeez-fār) n. traditional fair held near Kelso, formerly on 5th August, and now in September. Its origins go back to the days when Roxburgh was a town, and the traditional location at Friar's Holm, where the Teviot meets the Tweed, is near the site of the old castle. It was for a long time the biggest fair in Roxburghshire. Traditionally the Magistrates of Jedburgh had the right to 'ride the fair' in Kelso.

St. James' Flid (sin'-jām-zeez-flid) n. name sometimes given to the flood of 9th August 1806, so called because it happened juts a few days after St. James' Fair. It was particularly devastating in Rulewater, with much property at Bonchester Bridgend being swept away. Sir Walter Scott described how the lower floor of Minto House was filled with water and trees and livestock sailed past his own house. It also took away the bridge over the Dean Burn at Denholm.

St. James' Hall (sin'-jām-zeez-hal) n. the Masonic Hall on Union Street, formerly used as a dance venue.

St. John's Kirk (sin'-jōnz-kirk) n. the former St. John's Church on Oliver Crescent. It was built as an additional Hawick church in 1878–80, largely by donations from Rev. John Thomson and his wife (who had inherited a large sum). The builder was Alexander Ferguson. It had the town's tallest steeple at 32 m or over 100 feet, and an adjacent church hall was also constructed in 1885. It also had magnificant stained glass windows by Wailes & Strang of Newcastle. It received its official status as a 'quoad sacra' parish by Decreet of the Court of Teinds in mid-1881. The church survived for about 80 years, but in 1959 the congregation merged with those of St. Andrew's and East Bank to form the new Trinity Kirk. The church itself was sold and partially demolished in 1960, but re-opened as Arthur Armstrong's department store in 1962, later becoming Almstrong's. The steeple was removed and some of the stained glass (by Wailes & Strang of Newcastle) was rescued by R.E. Scott and the Brothers of Charity, a monastic order from Gattonside, where they were installed. The buildings are now listed on the Buildings at Risk Register for Scotland and although approval was given for conversion into accommodation units, no work has been done. A roll of the ministry is: John Thomson 1881–89; Alexander Thomson 1889–94; William Brown 1894–1902; Robert Dickson 1902–05; William Lindsay 1906–13; Arthur Dunnett 1913–20; Walter Carter 1920–29; Alexander Donaldson 1930–54; William Wood 1956–59.

St. Jude's Fair (sin'-joodz-fār) n. name used for a fair held at Hawick in the 17th century, specifically mentioned in 1673. In that year the Baron (the Earl of Queensberry) complained to the Privy Council that the Bailies and others in Hawick stopped his officers from 'riding the fair' (i.e. collecting duties); this was probably part of a feud between the 2 parties over the use of the Common. It was also known as the 'St. Simon and St. Jude Fair'. St. Jude's feast day was 28th October, which was only a week or so before the date of Hawick's Winter Fair in the 18th century. Hence it seems likely that this was an alternative name for the Winter Fair, perhaps with the date being moved at some point and hence the association with St. Jude being dropped.

St. Leeonard's see St. Leonards

St. Leonard (sin'-le-nurd) n. Christian saint, believed to have been a 6th century hermit, although his historical existence is not certain. He became one of the most popular saints in Western Europe in the late middle ages. He is Patron of pregnant women, captives and prisoners of war, based on a version of his life from the 11th century, and an event involving the release of a Prince of Antioch from a Muslim prison in the 12th century. He is supposed to have created an Abbey at Noblac (now St.-Léonard) in France, where he is buried. His cult spread through Europe, with at least 177 British churches dedicated to him, including the hospitals of that name in Peebles, Edinburgh and Alnwick, as well as a smaller one at Ednam. There was additionally a nunnery named after him in Berwick and a hill and mill in Lauder. Shrines dedicated to him were associated with the curing of leprosy, as well as the freeing of captives and the safe delivery of children. It is unclear when and for what reason his name became attached to parts of Hawick Common. He is now regarded as patron saint of the Hut.

St. Leonards (sin'-le-nurdz, sin'-lee-nurdz) n. general name for the farm and neighbouring area lying on the Common at the top of the Vertish. The tenant of the farm plays host to the Cornet and his supporters during the Chases before the Common Riding, and officially serves the curds and cream breakfast on the Friday. It is traditional that the Flag is displayed outside the farmhouse during the Thursday and Friday morning Huts. The Hut is effectively a barn at the farm, which replaced a temporary marquee in 1924. The singing of 'Teribus' outside the farmhouse after the Friday morning 'Hut' was started in 1890. The tenant was Thomas Reid in the late 19th century. A stone axe found near there is in the Museum. It is unclear when the name was attached to the farm; it is labelled 'Hawick Townhead' on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map – 'And lang may St. Leonard's retain the power To feast the sterling Teri; And lang may the flag Owre a cornet wag, And lang may we a' be cheery' [JEDM], 'In front of old St. Leonard's now the throng With one accord assemble, old and young All share the duties that to them belong – Again the Common Riding Song is sung' [JCG] (named after Christian Saint Leonard, the reasons for which, and era being unknown; also written 'St. Leonard's').

St. Leonard's Handicap (sin'-le-nurdz-hawn-dee-kawp) n. former race taking place at the Common Riding. It is recorded in 1875 on the Saturday, being run over 1 ½ miles.

St. Leonard's Moor (sin'-le-nurdz-moor, -mār) n. another name for Hawick Moor – '... Then in the breast alike of rich and poor There rises up a sense of joy refined, As on they journey to St. Leonard's Moor' [JCG].

St. Leonard's Moss (sin'-le-nurdz-mos) n. another name used generally for Hawick Moss, for the marshy land behind St. Leonard's farm or more specifically applied to the boggy land near to the north of Pilmuir Rig farm, in the middle of the Dipper Field. It is marked near Pilmuir Rig on J.P. Alison's map of the Common in 1777. In 1713 the Council granted the right to 'cast bakes' anywhere on the mosses of the Common, except for here, Winnington Moss or Whitchesters Moss. Burgesses were told they could cut their peat on the moss here in 1733.

St. Leonard's Park (sin'-le-nurdz-pawrk) n. race-course at the Mair, opened in 1854, and used exclusively for the Common-Riding Races since 1855. It is one of the highest race courses in Britain, and also used for a few 'flapping' meetings every year. The paddock was extended in 1889 and offices erected in 1894.

St. Leonard's Vaults (sin'-le-nurdz-vawlts) n. former name for the Ewe & Lamb pub in the late 19th century, at the Sandbed/Orrock Place (also sometimes 'St. Leonard's Spirit Vaults' and 'the St. Leonard's Bar').

the St. Leonard's Stakes (thu-sin'-le-nurdz-stāks) n. race formerly run on the Saturday of the Common Riding, from at least 1887. It was at one time a 'selling stakes', with the winner to be sold for 50 sovereigns. The 1888 race was declared void after the leading horse slowed before the post to allow the second horse to win, while another horse had jockeys of different weight switched.

St. Leonard's Well (sin'-le-nurdz-wel) n. spring just to the south of St. Leonard's Moss, between Pilmuir farm and Pilmuir Rig farmstead. It seems possible that this was the first local place to be associated with the saint, with the farm name following later. It may be the same as 'Lurgie's Well' (if that was not nearer to St. Leonards farm).

St. Malachy (sin'-maw-la-chee) n. (1094–1148) Archbishop of Armagh, baptised 'Maelmhaedhoc O' Morgair', who was the first Irishman to be canonised, and is known for his vision of the identity of the last 112 Popes. In 1139 he journeyed to Rome via Scotland, England and France. The chaplainry of 'Malachi and meadow lying within steads of Stobycot and Staneholm' was mentioned in 1500 as part of the lands of Ringwoodfield excepted from the lease to Walter Scott of Branxholme. This may have been the early chapel near Northhouse.

St. Margaret (sin'-mawr-gri') n. (d.1093) born in Hungary, her family fled William the Conqueror, were shipwrecked off Scotland, and then befriended by King Malcolm, who married her in 1070. She was brother of Edgar Ætheling, and daughter of the exiled English Prince Edward. Probably because of her familiy's influence, the Scottish King made many incursions into Northumbria. She had 6 sons and 2 daughters. She died a few days after her husband and son were killed at Alnwick Castle. She was canonised in 1251 and her feast day was 10th June (recently moved to 16th November). Another St. Margaret of Antioch was an early Christian martyr, and there are also other saints of the same name.

St. Margaret's an Wulton Sooth (sin'-mawr-gritz-an-wul'-in-sooth) n. former church near the top of Commercial Road (No. 34), built in 1894 to plans drawn up jointly by J.P. Alison and J. Chalmers of Glasgow. This replaced a temporary iron structure, and used red sandstone from Langtown Quarries. Originally called Wilton South Church, it was built for a new congregation established by the United Presbyterian Church in 1888. Wilton South merged with St. Margaret's Church in 1940 and was linked to the charge of St. George's West and Roberton churches in 1984. The building fell into disrepair towards the end of the 20th century, and the last service was in 1987. The congregation merged with that of St. George's and the building was demolished in 2001 (see also St. Margaret's Kirk and Wulton Sooth Kirk).

St. Margaret's Convent (sin'-mawr-gritz-kon-vin') n. convent in the West End, built 1910–12, for sisters belonging to the 'Third Order' of St. Dominic (being free to engage in pastoral work outside the convent), the first of its kind in Scotland. They originally came from Stone in Satffordshire. The first 4 sisters arrived in Hawick in 1909 (to a rather mixed welcome), setting up temporarily at 14 Buccleuch Street, opposite the Catholic Church. They included Sister Mary Antoninus, Sister Margaret Mary and Sister Theresa Margaret. A resident chaplin followed in 1912. They took immediate charge of the Guilds associated with S.S. Mary & David's, as well as teaching at the school. They also formed a Women's section of the Sacred Heart Confraternity. They moved to Myreslawgreen in 1912, the foundation stone having been laid there the previous year. A hall there was used as the Church Hall for S.S. Mary & David's until the new halls were opened on Buccleuch Street in 1930. The building is believed to be the last in Hawick built using the red sandstone from Denholm Quarries, with architect Reginald Fairlie from Edinburgh. From 1934 the sisters ran the St. Margaret's Home hospice, which was built on the grounds of the Convent. The Hall was demolished in 1970, with Myreslaw-court built on part of the site. The last nuns left the town in 1987, with the Convent building being taken over as part of the old-age Home. Chaplains at the Convent included: Michael A. Payne 1936–43; William Grant 1948–60; and Thomas Kelly 1961–63.

St. Margaret's Drive (sin'-mawr-gritz-drīv) n. dead-end road off Bright Street, formerly being on the grounds of St. Margaret's Convent. It was named in 1990.

St. Margaret's Home (sin'-mawr-gritz-hōm) n. residential facility for the sick and aged, off Myreslaw Green. It was developed on the grounds of St. Margaret's Convent from 1934, with considerable extensions being made since. It was opened by Archbishop McDonald and was founded as a 'Home for Incurables', with accommodation for 45 patients. In 1987 the nuns left the town, and the Home was taken over by a voluntary committee. Since 1999 it has been run privately.

St. Margaret's Kirk (sin'-mawr-gritz-kirk) n. church on Wellington Road in Wilton, originally called Wellington Church. It was built in 1886 to house a congregation that had followed Rev. J.A. Birrell out of Hawick Parish Church following some internal disagreements. It was erected as a separate parish by a Decreet of the Court of Teinds in 1896. In 1940 the congregation merged with Wilton South to become St. Margaret's and Wilton South. The abandoned church building was used for commercial purposes, first as a Food Office and then sold off in 1950 and used as a food shop; it was demolished in 1975 and new housing was built on the site in 1977. The former manse became the manse for the new united congregation. A roll of the ministry is: William Miller 1886–98; Charles Brownlie 1898–1904; William McCullough 1905–35; Alexander B. Connon 1936–40.

St. Margaret's Schuil (sin'-mawr-gritz-skil) n. Roman Catholic primary school, originally established in 1854 by Fr. Taggart, with the financial assistance of Fr. Wallace of Traquair. This provided education for the children of Catholics within the community, originally mostly Irish workers who came to Hawick to work in the hosiery industry. Within a couple of years of its establishment it had 50 pupils enrolled. A new building was constructed on the present site on Buccleuch Terrace in 1878, and later extended. The staffing problems were largely solved when the Dominican Sisters arrived in Hawick and supplied 2 teachers. A more modern building was erected in 1965 to accommodate 140 pupils, and was opened by Cardinal Gray. However, due to declining numbers, the school was closed in 2018 and the building was demolished in 2020. School Inspectors' Reports for 1867–1951 are in the National Archives.

St. Mary see sin'-mā-ree n. title sometimes used for the Virgin Mary, the mother of Jesus of Nazareth and wife of Joseph. The church in Hawick was dedicated to her in 1214 (and this may have been a rededication). A spring in Castle Cary (the main seat of the Lovels) was also dedicated to her, there possibly being a connection here. The celebration of her Assumption (i.e. the apparent taking up of her body) on 15th August was of local importance, being mentioned in the 1511 Charter as the date on which the token payment was to be made to the Baron, as well as in the earlier charter of 1407 when the Barony was granted to Douglas of Drumlanrig, and in the 1420 charter of half of Branxholme to the Scotts of Buccleuch. There were several other feast days associated with Mary, e.g. 1st January, 2nd July (Visitation), 8th September (Nativity) and 8th December (Immaculate Conception), which may also have been important in Hawick at one time. The entire month of May was also specially dedicated to Mary. James Wilson suggests that the date towards the end of May, mentioned in 1214, when the townspeople paid tribute to their church's saint, may have led to the Common Riding taking place at that time of year

St. Mary's see St. Mary's Kirk

St. Mary's Kirk (sin'-mā-reez-kirk) n. St. Mary's Church, occupying an eminence above the confluence of the Slitrig and Teviot. The existence of a church in Hawick is first recorded in 1183, and it was dedicated to St. Mary in 1214 by Adam, Bishop of Caithness (as recorded in the Chronicle of Melrose Abbey, 'Dedicata est ecclesia Sanctae Mariae de Hawic a dompno A. Episcopo Cathenensi iiij, Kal. Junii', i.e. 'the Church of St. Mary of Hawick was dedicated by Lord Adam, Bishop of Caithness, May 29'). The original was probably at least as early as the coming of the Normans to the area, and may have been much earlier and Saxon. It contained ornate stonework, a few pieces of which are in the Museum (donated in 1861), including pillars surmounted by capitals and also a pattern of carved foliage, which appears to have been brightly painted. The original may have been roofed with red flagstones. It was reslated and repaired in 1670. For centuries the church bell was rung to mark the passing of a resident of the Parish. Tradition says that a bell and clock were brought from Melrose Abbey when it was suppressed. The bell broke in 1693 and was melted and recast the following year (the Council enacting that it was only to be rung for deaths in those families that had contributed to the cost). In 1717 the charge for non-Burgesses was 2 shillings Scots (6 shillings for those outside the Burgh). The clock is recorded as early as 1701, when mention is made of it being broken for the last 12 years! In 1718 the Council asked for contributions for providing a new clock, and it was repaired in 1747, with new dial-plates made on the west and east sides; it was repaired again in 1761 at great expense, a clockmaker being brought in from Redpath for the purpose and a stent being raised to pay for it. However, it was stated in 1863 that it exhibited 'a wayward independence by differing ten minutes or so from its modern sister east the street'. The current clock dates from only 1873, with the former one being donated to the Museum by the Town Council. In the early 18th century there were 3 entrances: the 'meikle' door at the west end; the 'queer' or chancel door; and the 'porch door' in the tower. The old steeple may have been turretted with a flat roof and a belfry at one of the corners; this 'bell-house' was rebuilt in 1723, since its ashlar work was in danger of falling. In 1729 it is recorded that the bell was rung daily at 6 a.m. and 10 p.m.; by the early 19th century the times were 5.30 a.m. and 8 p.m. Stone stairs were built up to the steeple loft around 1714, and the ladder to the steeple was mended in 1727. The bell was also taken down (and presumably replaced) and the steeple mended in 1747. The main floor of the church was still not fitted with seats in 1718, when the Session records describe a dispute over space for stools. Already in 1723 there were calls for an extension to accommodate the congregation, with the Minister expressing his disappointment in 1724 at failing to convince the Session to act. In 1733 there was an appeal to the Duke of Buccleuch's commissioners to repair and extend the church. It was largely demolished in 1763, apparently being too solid to bring down easily. The church was rebuilt in 1763/4, in a much more plain style and a new bell was obtained at that time (at a cost of £50, weighing 560 pounds and made by Lester & Pack of Whitechapel); the cost was £497 (exclusive of the bell), the money coming from the heritors, the Trustees of Alexander Orrock, the weavers incorporation, the rural tenantry (who carted the materials) and the Burgh (who supplied the bell). Some of the original stone was used, but all previous ornamentation was hidden. The T-shaped plan used the long wall for gathering the congregation around both the communion table and pulpit, which was the common design after the Reformation. The steeple was also rebuilt at that time, John Purves, wright in Kelso, being the main contractor. The upper gallery of the kirk was then reserved for members of the incorporation of Weavers, with the front row kept for the Magistrates. Most of the other seats were reserved for heritors, farmers and members of the session, with very few for the ordinary townspeople (who had to stand). The 'oak Boards in which the old Recods of the Kirk Session of Hawick were bound' are in the Museum. In 1826 it is recorded that some people were paying 6 shillings (presumably annually) for the use of a seat, and there was an appeal to the Duke of Buccleuch for a larger church (which could seat 700 for a population of around 5000). Internal renovations were carried out around 1863 by mason's Marshall & Ballantyne and joiner's Scott & Wright. This work revealed the memorial stones of Walter Scott of Goldielands and some later family members (concealed under wood on the west-side of the aisle, where a furnace was installed), as well as some carved stonework from the earlier church. Severely damaged in a fire of 1880, it was substantially renovated in 1882/3 by the Edinburgh firm Wardrop & Reid, essentially as a replica of the one that burned down. The main changes were the addition of 2 circular windows in the gables as well as dormer windows, a move of the entrance from the south to the north side, and the building of 2 internal staircases instead of 3. The 18th century tower survived the fire, and is built in rubble of 5 stages, being topped with an ogival slated roof and a wrought-iron weather vane. There has been some dispute over the ownership of the tower, with the Town Council regarding itself as the owners in the 19th century (and being responsible for its upkeep, as well as that of the clock contained within it); however, the legal status of such ownership was not established. The Kirk had its exterior refurbished in 1973, when floodlights were also installed to illuminate it on special occasions. It is currently a Category B listed building. The church contains the Buccleuch Vault, resting place of many of the earliest Scotts of Buccleuch, which has been sealed since the 1763 re-building. The church yard has been in use since at least the 13th century, and was in earlier times used for many civic functions, e.g. for the election of bailies. The permission to erect 'through-stones' appears only to have been given in 1712, following an Act of 1708. Although a proposal for enclosing the kirkyard was made in 1723, the surrounding wall was only built in 1811, and repaired in 1857. The churchyard was closed to burials in 1864. The iron gates were added in 1937 to mark the 400th anniversary of the granting of the 1537 Charter, and in 1973 the churchyard was extensively landscaped and tidied up. The 700th anniversay of its consercration in 1914 attracted an estimated crowd of 4,000. It was used for a while as a Red Cross Military Hospital in WWI. Before the Reformation (i.e. the late 16th century) St. Mary's was, of course, Catholic, like other churches in Scotland. In 1432 there was permission from the Pope to raise money (through 'indulgences') for repairs on account of how many people went there for the Feast of the Assumption (because of the church being dedicated to Mary). It was part of the Archdiocese of Glasgow, and in 1447/8 was made a canonry and prebend of the Collegiate Church of Bothwell. Patronage of the church was vested in the Baron of Hawick for most of history, but given to the Earls of Bothwell in the late 15th and early 16th centuries. The church became insufficiennt for Hawick's population in the later part of the 18th century, when other churches began to be set up. It was the Parish Church until 1844 (when the Old Parish Church was built), becoming a 'quoad sacra' church in 1860, with a church hall being built on Slitrig Crescent. In 1951 it was united with Orrock Kirk, with that church being turned into halls and the former building on Slitrig Crescent sold. It reverted to the main parish church again in 1987. Also in 1987 the interior was refurbished. After it was separated from 'Old Parish' the new Manse was off the Braid Road. From 1997 it was linked to the churches of Cavers and Kirkton. Kirk Session records exist from 1700. The oldest recorded communion token bear the mark 'M.A.K.' for 'Master Alexander Kynneir'. Other existing tokens date from 1843 and 1860. A 'gaufre', or utensil for baking sacramental wafers, exists, and may be pre-Reformation. The National Archives contain records relating to the quoad sacra parish dating from 1833. A roll of the meenisters while it was the Parish Kirk is given elsewhere. The subsequent roll of the ministry is: John Thomson 1860–79; Stewart Burns 1880–1925; Eric M.K. Raff 1926–27; William Simpson 1927–33; Walter M. Calderwood 1934–54; John C. Scott 1954–59; James P. Wilson 1959–66; David J.G. Docherty 1967–70; Duncan Clark 1971–84; Alexander C. McCartney 1985–87; David Burt 1996–98; William Taylor 1998–??; Marina D. Brown 2010– Alastair Cook ?? – 'While, as up yonder Sacred Mount I looke; On which the temple that's situat on high, Stands much admired by strangers passing by' [RRC], 'Hark! the bell of old St. Mary Finds us armed alert and wary' [RSC], 'I sei the Slitrig whirlin' doon, and I hear St. Mary's clock' [JEDM], 'Where stands St. Mary's pointing to the sky, Encircled round its walls in peaceful rest And with the dust of ages intrepressed The ashes of the dead forgotten lie (The while the living pass unheeding by)' [TK], '. . . And the jowe o' St. Mary's bell' [WL] (usually referred to as just 'St. Mary's' or in earlier times as 'the Kirk' or 'Hawick Kirk' or 'the Pairish Kirk' to distinguish it from the other churches).

St. Mary's Knot (sin'-mā-reez-no') n., arch. a knot tied triply, so that it is hard to undo – 'He has tied them a' wi' St. Mary Knot, A' these horse but barely three. Fala, &c.' [CPM] (the note in Caw's 'Poetical Museum' suggests that the line refers to ham-stringing a horse, but this is inconsistent with the following verses).

St. Mary's Loch (sin'-mā-reez-loch) n. loch lying in the central southern uplands, about halfway between Hawick and Moffat. It is the largest body of water in the Borders, about 4 miles long, 7½ miles in circumference and 30 fathoms deep in places. It has the smaller Loch o the Lowes at its head. A description of Selkirkshire written in 1649 describes the 2 bodies of water as the smaller 'Over Loch of the Lowes' and the larger 'Nether Loch'. There was a dispute over right to the Loch between Lord Napier and Scott of Rodono in the mid-19th century. It is famous for its picturesque views and as the haunt of the Ettrick Shepherd. A bronze axehead said to have been found here is in the Museum – 'Long, long ago, ere the Yarrow wound Or the rainclouds filled St. Mary's, Long, long ago, when on Ettrick ground The only folk were the fairies' [WHO] ('S^{t} Maries Lochs' is marked on Gordon's c.1650 map).

St. Mary's Place (sin'-mā-reez-plis) n. name adopted by the Council in 1946 for what was formerly Old Churchyard or Auld Kirkyaird. The house at the corner with the Kirk Wynd, No. 1 St. Mary's Place and 31 Drumlanrig Square was designed in 1891 by J.P. Alison and built for Miss Lamb; it is a grade C listed building. Most of the other houses in the street are quite old.

St. Mary's Schuil (sin'-mā-reez-skil) n. St. Mary's Infant School, gifted by the 5th Duke of Buccleuch in the latter part of the 19th century. The buildings were at the top of Brougham Place, behind Trinity Church. It was set up through the efforts of Rev. John Thomson as the Parish School for St. Mary's, and hence was also called 'St. Mary's Quoad Sacra School'. The first master was William Murray, who had been running a private school at 8 Kirkgate (i.e. St. Mary's Place) since 1850. When the new school opened Murray marched all his students there in a body. The school became connected with the government so it could have student teachers, and after the passing of the Education Act it became the responsibility of the new School Board. A wooden building was built to house the infant department. Eventually the school became specialised as an infant department, with the older primary pupils attending Trinity. It closed in 1967, the pupils being split among the neighbouring schools. The main building was later used by a knitwear firm before being converted into 2 houses, with the outbuildings demolished. School Inspectors' Reports for 1852–1951 are in the National Archives. The Borders Archive holds registers for 1898–1967 and log books for 1874–1967.

St. Mary's Shiel (sin'-mā-reez-sheel) n. former lands in Liddesdale, recorded in 1541 as 'Sant-Marie Scheillis', and there being no tenant at that time. The location is unknown, but the name suggests it could have been associated with Hermitage Chapel.

St. Mary's Steps (sin'-mā-reez-stepz) n. common name for the main staircase leading to St. Mary's Kirk from the Kirkstile. There are 33 steps in all.

St. Mary's Well (sin'-mā-reez-wel) n. spring on the north-north-west side of Ruberslaw. It was probably a 'holy well', i.e. at one point having some religious significance. A former spring near Hawthornside was known by the same name, or perhaps just Mary's Well.

St. Michael (sin'-mī-kul) n. David (12th C.) witness to a charter for Richard Lovel to the Priory of St. Andrews about the 1190s. His name is given as 'Dauid de sco michaele'. John was also a witness and they were both presumably part of the family that held lands at Whitchesters and elsewhere nearby. Elmeras (13th C.) son of Robert. In about 1240 he resigned his lands of 'Ylistoun' (Elliston near St. Boswells) to be granted to Dryburgh Abbey. John (12th C.) first witness listed in about 1200 when Richard Lovel granted lands near Branxholme to the Priory of St. Andrews, confirming the earlier grant by Henry Lovel. David is also listed and so probably his son or brother. It seems likely he is descended from Walter, who is mentioned a generation earlier. John (13th C.) witness in 1249 to a charter granted by Agnes 'de Illifistun' (i.e. Elliston) to Dryburgh Abbey. He may well have been related to this Agnes. He is probably the same Sir John who witnessed a grant by Henry of Ashkirk to Coldstream Priory in about 1250; he is there 'Johanne de Sancto Micaele'. John (13th C.) son of John of St. Michael. In 1278/9 he was accused of slaying Richard Bullock at 'Cambok', in a group along with 3 others. He was stated to be already dead, and so not declared an outlaw. Hence he cannot have been the later John, son of Sir John, but was surely from the same family. Sir John (13th/14th C.) listed on the Ragman Rolls of 1296 as 'Sire Johan de Seint Michel del Counte de Rokesburgh'. Presumably the same man is listed separately as 'Dominus Johannes de Seint Michel, miles'. His seal consists of an oval showing St. Michael slaying the dragin and a man with a hawk on his wrist, together with the name 'S'JOHANIS DE SCO MICHAELE'. He probably held lands at Whitchesters and elsewhere in the county. Another 'Johan' is also listed, presumably his son, along with 'Renaud de Seint Michel, clerk' (i.e. Reginald), possibly another son. He appears to have been Laird of Heavyside in Morebattle, lands that he forfeited between 1298 and 1304. In 1311 he is listed among Scotsmen whose lands had been taken by Edward II, but were now returned (specifically his lands of 'Heveside') because they 'came to his peace'. This is said to be an old Cumberland family and may be the same family who are recorded holding lands at Reban, Kildare in Ireland around 1300. John (13th/14th C.) possibly son of Sir John. He was 'Johan de Seint Michel' when he swore fealty to Edward I in 1296; however, this may simply be the same man listed again. John (d.1451/2) holder of the lands of Whitchesters in the Barony of Hawick. He was listed on a 'retour of inquest' made in Hawick in 1424 for lands of Hownam and was 'Johannem de Samichell' in 1426 when on the inquest for the inheritance of Eilrig by Walter Scott of Rankilburn. In 1432 he witnessed a document for the Swintons. He was probably the John of St. Michael who was witness to the 1435 charter where lands of Branxholme and others in the Barony of Hawick were transferred from John Inglis to his son Thomas. He also witnessed a document for Swinton of that Ilk in 1432. In 1447 he witnessed a decree about James, Earl of Douglas being older than his twin Archibald; he was recorded being 'de Quitester'. He was succeeded by his son John. John 'of St. Michael' (15th C.), son of John. He was probably the last of his family to hold local lands. He is probably the 'Johanne de Sancto Michaeli juniore' who witnessed a charter bewteen Margaret Cusing (wife of Hawick Burgess Simon Routledge) and Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1447. A 'retour' of 1452 confirms to him the lands of 'Qwitchester', on annual payment to the Baron, the Earl of Douglas, of a white or red rose at the feast of St. John the Baptist. In 1455 John of Langlands attested in a notorised document (made at St. Mary's Kirkyard) that he had inherited his father's lands of Whitchesters. In 1455 King James II granted Whitchesters to David Scott, heir to Buccleuch for services to the King, the lands having been forfeited by 'John of St. Michael, traitor' (probably his father). In 1456 there was a further notorial instrument attesting that he had inherited Whitchesters from his father; by this time his is described as 'quondam Johanni de Sancti Michaele, filio quondam Johannis de Sancto Michaele', suggesting that he was also deceased. The family, originally Norman, but settling in Ireland, had apparently held Whitchesters since before 1183, but forfeited them before 1455. Robert (12th/13th C.) probably related to the local family. In about 1180 he witnessed a confirmation of the grant of lands in Eskdale to Melrose Abbey by the Avenels. He witnessed a marriage contract for Philip de Valognes in about 1200, which was probably made in Roxburghshire; he was recorded as 'Roberto de Sancto Michaele', and other witnesses included John of Wilton and Simon of Hawick. His son 'Elmeras' is recorded in about 1240, related to lands at Elliston near St. Boswells. Roger (12th/13th C.) recorded in the early 1200s when he granted land in Old Machar, Aberdeenshire to Arbroath Abbey. This was confirmed by his nephew Joh of St. Michael, who may have been connected with the Roxburghshire family. Walter (12th C.) earliest known member of this family in Scotland. He was referred to in a charter sometime in the period 1163 to 1183. Henry Lovel granted the Priory of St. Andrews 2 oxgangs of land in Branxholme, which was half of the lands formerly held by him; he also witnessed this charter. It is unclear what local lands he continued to hold and who his heir was. William (12th C.) probably related to Walter, who held lands at Branxholme. He served with Robert 'de Huseville' as an envoy from William I to the count of Flanders in 1173. He was given lands in Montrose by the King and he witnessed charters in about 1173, 1180 and 1186, the last for Eschina, widow of Walter the Steward (also written 'de St. Michael'; the name is almost certainly Norman, but the original place is not known, however, they may have come to Scotland via Somerset, along with the Lovels; it is possible there is a connection with the Carmichaels).

St. Mungo's Day (sin'-mung-gōz-dā) n. Saint's feast day celebrated on 13th January, the anniversary of the death of St. Mungo in the year 613. He was Bishop of Glasgow and sometimes credited as founding the city. His day was celebrated before the Reformation and still referred to in the 1622 records of the local Commissioners' Court. Also sometimes known as St. Kentigern, his image is included on the Founder's Window of St. Cuthbert's Kirk.

St. Ninian's Road (sin'-ni-nee-inz-rōd) n. street in the Terraces, named in 1931. The name was suggested by J.P. Alison, after St. Ninian (who died in 432), since he was one of the people to whom Trinity Church in Edinburgh was dedicated, this being connected to the Trinity lands in Hawick, near which the street was built.

St. Ninian's Well (sin'-ni-nee-inz-wel) n. former name for a spring on the Woll estate at Ashkirk. It is about 220 m to the west-south-west of the Parish Kirk, on a steep slope. This is one of a large number of sites throughout Scotland connected in name with this early Scottish Christian missionary. Ashkirk Kirk, which lies to the north-east of the spring, was originally dedicated to this saint. It has been suggested that the spring could have been so-named because it was used for baptisms.

stob (stob) n., arch. a stake, fence post – '... Of drystone dykes or fence stobs And far the eye can see' [WL], 'Compared wi' a nibbie, a walkin'-stick's nea better than a palin'-stob' [DH], a coarse nail (the first meaning is probably the origin for 'Stobs' and 'Stobi Hill', while the second may apply to 'Stobicote'; also stab).

Stob Cleuch (stōb-klooch) n. small stream that rises on Stob-cleuch Edge and runs eastwards to join the Gorrenberry Burn.

Stobedge Wud (stōb-ej-wud) n. plantation to the north of Minto Crags. In 1780 it is recorded that 'Stobbedge planting dyke' formed part of the western boundary of Crigend and Minto Mill farms. An unrelated farmstead called 'Stobedge' was in Ancrum Parish and once part of the Chesters estate.

Stob Fell (stōb-fel) n. hill in the upper Hermitage valley, north of Billhope. It reaches a heigh of 518 m.

Stobicote (stō-bee-ko') n. farm between Southfield and Old Northhouse. The lands were leased to Walter Scott of Branxholme by the Abbot of Melrose in 1500 along with other lands in the 'Lordship of Ryngwodfeild'. In 1540 the King's shepherd William Henderson is recorded being paid for oats there. The first owner may have been David Scott, son of 'Wicked Wat'. In about 1557 it was rented from Melrose Abbey by Simon and John Scott, sons of the Laird of Allanhaugh; it was valued at £6 at that time. It was listed as 'Stobbit, Coitbrugh' in 1634, 'Stobbit, Coitburgh' in 1653, similarly in 1661 and 'Stobitcoat-burgh' in 1663 (i.e. merged with Brugh in the transcription), when still part of the lands of Ringwoodfield in the Lordship of Melrose held by the Scotts of Buccleuch. It was valued at £260 in 1643. In 1684 tenants James Glendinning and John Simpson were declared as fugitives for being Covenanters. 7 people were recorded there on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. James Scott 'Drover' was tenant there in at least the period 1712–29, John Elliot was living there in 1716–22, Thomas Davidson was there in 1716, James Jackson in 1717 and William Telfer in 1720–23. When surveyed in 1718 it consisted of the combined farms of Over and Nether Stobicote, covering 694 acres, bounded by Allan Water, Brugh, Doecluch, Northhouse and Braidhaugh. William Edmondson was there in 1727, James Jackson and John Elliot in 1728, Walter Henderson in 1729 and William Scott in 1738. It was also the birthplace in 1765 of Gideon Scott, millwright. William Wilson was there in 1772. James Anderson was farmer there between at least 1763 and 1797. In 1788 the lands were valued at £260, and by then owned by the Duke of Buccleuch. George Hobkirk and family lived there in 1841. The route for the Mosspaul ride-out passes near here (also known as 'Stobiescot', 'Stobicote' etc., and is 'Stobitcote' on the Ordnance Survey map; it is 'Stobycot' in 1500, transcribed 'Stobbe-Tait' in 1540, 'Stobecoit' in 1557 and 1564, 'Stobitcote' in 1643, 'Stobbitcoat' in 1660, transcribed 'Stobatcate' in 1684, 'Stobitcoatt' in 1694, 'Stobbitcoat' in 1712 and 1716, 'Stobitcott' in 1717 and 1723, 'Stobitcoats' in 1718, 'Stobit Cott' in 1724, 'Stobbitcot' in 1718 and 'Stobbitcott' in 1799; it appeared as 'Stobbycott' on Blaeu's 1654 map and on de Wit's c.1680 map of Scotland, while Stobie's 1770 map has 'Stobbitcot'; the name probably means 'cottage made with nails').

Stobie Cote see Stobicote

Stobie Cleuch (stō-bee-klooch) n. small stream joining the Hermitage Water from the west near Leahaugh Cottage, just north of Redheugh. On the lower banks of the stream there are the remains of 4 circular turf stells.

Stobie Rig (stō-bee-rig) n. small ridge of land between the Liddel Water and Foulshiels farmshouse, just south of Stobie Cleuch.

Stobie's map (stō-beez-map) n. map of Roxburghshire prepared by Matthew Stobie and published in 1770. Although this map is useful, it was prepared for the gentry and hence began the insidious process of anglicising our local place names.

Stobi Hill (stō-bee-hil) n. hill in the Ale valley, between Whitslade farm and Todrig farm, with Whitslaid Hill being the southern spur. There is a linear earthwork, an old field-bank, running from the hollow between this hill and Whitslaid Hill north towards Todrig (it is marked 'Stobiehill on Ainslie's 1773 map).

Stobi Meadi (stō-bee-me-di) n. former lands in Lilliesleaf granted by Walter of Riddell to Melrose Abbey in the early 13th century and recorded as 'Stobimedue'.

Stobitcote see Stobicote

Stobo (stō-bō) n. John (17th C.) traveller from Kelso. In 1659 the Hawick Council decreed that the would not 'trouble nor molest our market, in buying either butter or cheese before the bell ring for that effect' [BR1659].

Stobs (stōbz) n. estate and former hamlet about 4 miles south of Hawick, along the Slitrig. In the 19th century it had about half a dozen homes, as well as a post office, blacksmith's shop and joiners (mostly in a long row of cottages), although there is now little trace of these buildings. It was also a station on the Waverley Line, converted into a house after the 1969 closure of the railway, with extensive sidings linking it with the military camp. The estate is heavily wooded, with sitka spruce and other conifers dominating. The name is recorded in the early 14th century, and gave rise to a surname. Thomas Cranstoun was granted the barony of Stobs by David II, sometime previous to 1370. A grant sometime before 1375 has Thomas, Earl of Mar and Lord of Cavers, granting parts of Cavers to Thomas Cranston, with his lands of Stobs being excepted. In 1458/9 the lands were among those held by Thomas Cranston of that Ilk. In 1509/10 it was listed as part of the holdings of Douglas of Cavers since the time of King David. In 1544 the lands were owned by Clement Crozier, and then passed to the Gledstains family. The superiority of the lands of Stobs was held by the Cranstons as part of the Lordship of Denholm according to a discharge of 1574. Gavin Gledstains inherited the ands from his deceased brother George in 1580. They were sold before 1584 to Gavin Elliot of Bailielie, whe then became the first Eliott of Stobs. On his death they were inherited briefly by his surviving daughters and a grand-daughter, but sold in 1607 to 'Gibbie wi the Gowden Garters', who took full possession of it in 1614 (with the superior at that time being Sir John Cranston of that Ilk). In 1608 it was attacked by William Scott of Northhouse and a party armed with 'swords, gauntlets and plate-sleeves' threatening to burn 'all the evidents and writs of the said lands' unless they got what they wanted; 2 years later the same William and his brother Robert Scott attacked Gilbert Eliott of Stobs on the streets of Hawick. Beginning with this Gilbert, 'Gibbie wi the Gowden Gairtins', the estate became the seat of the Eliott family for many generations. In 1649 it was listed (along with Adderstoneshiel) as a principal house on the Slitrig. The superiors of the lands were the Lords Cranston in the 17th century. In 1678 it (along with Langside, Penchrise, Stanishope, Harwood Burn and William's Rig) was valued at £1633 6s 8d, and owned by the Eliotts of Stobs. In 1694 'The place & ofice houses' of Stobs was taxed for 13 hearths, while 'Stobs his cooks wife' was taxed for a hearth in Hawick. John Henderson was recorded living there in at least 1726–30 and Andrew Lillico in 1736–41. Sir Gilbert Eliott paid tax for 14 windows there in 1748 and 15 in 1753. In 1788 (and in the Land Tax Rolls of 1811) it was valued at £1633 6s 8d, with the teinds having been purchased from Douglas of Cavers and valued at £400. There was a small school near here, mentioned in about 1802. The estate was sold to the War Office in 1902, apparently partly because the terrain resembled the South African veldt. Over the next 5 decades it was used extensively as an army training camp and also prisoner of war camp. It was broken up and sold after WWII. A memorial stone cross was erected after WWI. A plan of the estate from 1779 is in the National Archives (also spelled 'Stobbs', 'Stob', 'Stobbis', 'Stobbes', etc.; the name is recorded in 1309 as 'Stobbis' and in 1370 as 'stokkis', perhaps in error, with 'the Stobbis' appearing in 1458/9, 'Stobis' in 1509/10, 'Stobbis' in 1511, 'the Stobbis' in 1586 and 1592 and 'Stobbs' in 1643; the modern spelling dates to at least Gordon's c.1650 map, but is 'Stobbs' on Blaeu's 1654 map; it may be from the Gaelic, Old Norse or Old English for 'stakes' or 'stumps', perhaps meaning that it was a place marked by tree stumps).

Stobs (stōbz) n. David (16th C.) recorded as tenant in Mervinslaw in a rental roll of 1541. His steading was valued at 12s 6d. His surname is recorded as 'Stobbis'.

Stobs Camp (stōbz-kawmp) n. army camp, about 4 miles south of Hawick, established in 1903 as a summer training ground, with the officers stationed in Stobs Castle. The camp was based at the former estate of Stobs, including adjoining farms, covering about 10,000 acres. A small gauge railway track went from the Waverley Line right up to the camp, this tramway being dismantled when the camp expanded during WWII. Used initially by volunteer units as a summer training ground, it saw increased use around the time of the two World Wars and grew to be so large that it was referred to as 'the Scottish Aldershot'. At its peak in 1915 there may have been as many as 15,000 men stationed there. After WWI the camp wound down, with many of the huts being sold off. It was also used as a prisoner of war camp, with about 6,000 German troops interred there in WWI, and a small number in WWII. After the war it was used for the repatriation of Polish troops, and then reverted to use as a summer training camp until it closed in 1956 and was sold in 1959. Horst Rossberg wrote his recollections as a prisoner of war in the 1991 Transactions. Some concrete foundations survive, along with steps and terracing, showing the location of many more. The training ground stretched all the way to Penchrise Pen. A small cemetery, just inside the camp, was used to bury the 36 prisoners of war and 6 internees who died in the camp, the bodies being reinterred in 1962; the memorial was rebuilt in 2018. 2 interpretation boards were installed in 2020.

Stobs Castle (stōbz-kaw-sul) n. family seat of the Elliots, destroyed in a fire in 1712, resulting in the loss of many of the family's early documents. A tradition is that people from Hawick were blamed for setting the fire. The original tower stood in a plantation about 400 yards south-east of the present structure, but there are no remains to be seen (it is marked as the site on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map). A new mansion was built on the same site in 1719, but in 1764 it also burned down. It was said to be 'a twae storey heigh thack-house' [WaD]. It is said that many of the foundation stones were removed from the old castle in 1797. William Bulman was recorded as a servant there in 1799. The house was rebuilt by Sir William Elliot from around 1793, as a gothic-style residence. After that it was always referred to as 'Stobs Castle' rather than 'Stobs Hoose'. The builder was John Laing of Hawick, and the architect was Robert Adam, this being his last castle. It narrowly escaped buring down again in 1824, being saved by the actions of the servants. There were also later Victorian alterations, around 1865, probably by James Anderson Hamilton. A carved family coat of arms hangs over the north entrance. 50 High Street has a freestone cornice salvaged from the Castle at the beginning of the 19th century. Manufacturer Thomas Lindsay Watson lived there briefly around 1892, when it hosted a demonstration of perhaps 6,000 people in support of the Liberal Unionists. When the estate was sold to the War Office in 1902 the house was used as officers quarters. The gothic single-arched bridge approach also survives, along with the Grecian-style gateway to the approach road. And along the track south of the house is the stable block.

the Stobs Castle Stakes (thu-stōbz-kaw-sul-stāks) n. race run over 2 miles on the Saturday of the Common Riding in the late 19th century.

Stobs Ceemetry (stōbz-see-mi'-ree) n. small cemetery situated just inside Stobs Camp, south of the former station. This was where 36 prisoners of war and 6 civilian internees were buried. A memorial was built from stones carried up from the Slitrig by Mr. Oliver, farmer at Winningtonrig. The names of those buried there were recorded along with an inscription: 'To our comrades who died far away from their country'. The site was maintained by locals until 1962, when the bodies were reinterred at Cannock Chase German Military Cemetery in Staffordshire. A few remains of the memorial can still be seen today.

Stobs Cottage (stōbz-ko'-eej) n. former name for a cottage on the Stobs estate. The estate manager lived there in the 1860s.

Stobs Crater (stōbz-krā'-ur) n. crater on Mars, named after the area of Stobs in 1976. It is roughly 12 km in size, and situated at about 5° S, 321.6° E.

Stobsden (stōbz-den) n. former name for a place in Cavers Parish, presumably close to Stobs. It could be the same as Stobs Wudfit. John Learmonth was a farm servant there in 1799 and James Stewart in 1801.

Stobs Hoose (stōbz-hoos) n. name sometimes used for Stobs Castle, particularly before the baronial style mansion was built in the late 18th century. The estate was owned from the late 16th century by the Eliotts of Stobs, who built a fortified house there, which was destroyed in 1712. The new house was built in 1719, but was largely replaced by 1800. There were also additions around 1865.

Stobsiade (stob-zee-ad) n. newspaper produced by German prisoners of war at Stobs during WWI, with 26 issues being produced in the period 1915–19. At first it was produced by civilian internees, but by late 1916 (when the civilians were moved to the Isle of Man) it was continued by the military prisoners. It contained advertisements, news, poetry, puzzles and short stories About 4,000 copies of each issue were printed (by Scott & Paterson in Hawick). The name means 'news from Stobs' in German, but is a play on the popular 18th-century epic poem 'Jobsiade'. Despite censorship and other restrictions, the publication contains remarkable creativity and humour.

Stobside Hill (stob-shaw-hil) n. hill just to the west of Headshaw. It reaches a height of 298 m and may correspond to the 'Stobbsidehill' recorded in a description of boundaries in Headshaw in 1780.

Stobside Hill (stob-sīd-hil) n. former name for a hill on the farm of Dryden. It is recorded as 'Stobbsidehill' in 1780 and probably corresponds to the modern Stobshaw Hill.

Stobs Limery (stōbz-lī-mu-ree) n. name used for the lime works at Limekilnedge. It started production in the 1790s and ran into the latter part of the 19th century.

Stobs Lodge (stōbz-loj) n. former lodge house at Woodfoot, near the beginning of the drive to Stobs Castle, on the west side of the Slitrig. In the early 1900s it was let in the summer to a family called Nixon.

Stobs Loch (stōbz-loch) n. another name for Barnes Loch.

Stobs Park (stōbz-pawrk) n. former name for a farm near Stobs.

Stobs Sidins (stōbz-sī-dinz) n. railway sidings built for Stobs Military Camp at Acreknowe farm. This made a connection to the Stobs Camp internal tramway via a transfer platform. The tramway connected various parts of the camp at different times, e.g. it once ran to the rifle range on Penchrise Pen, and also to the 'Meldrum Destructor' (i.e. incinerator).

Stobs Station (stōbz-stāshin) n. former railway station at Stobs, once much used by the military. It was originally called Barnes, but renamed almost right away to Stobs. It had an 'up' platform (to London) and a 'down' platform (to Edinburgh) as well as a bay platform on the west side. The station building was built in a baronial style. Just south of the station was the cemetery for prisoners of war and internees.

Stobs War Memorial see Slitrig War Memorial

Stobs Wudfit (stōbz-wud-fi') n. former set of cottages near Stobs, also called just Wudfit.

stock (stok) n., arch. the rental on a leased farm in additional to the teinds, this being in kind or its monetary equivalent, the amount of crops produced in addition to the tithe – 'This is estimat to pay communibis annis [in average years], fyve scoir and 12 bolls in stok, and 28 bolls in teynd' [PR1627], 'Rentall of the Dutches of Buccluches ferme Lands of the barronie of Branxholme woltoun and whytchester sett stock and teind att Hawick' [Buc1690].

stockeen (sto-keen) n. stocking – '... an serred hes time teh the stockeenmakin trade wi' Peter Laidleh ower in Wultin Grove' [BW1978] (see also stockin).

Stockcleugh Edge (stok-klooch-ej) n. slope on the border with Dumfriesshire, being the southern part of Tamond Heights (it appears to be marked 'Slack Cleugh Edge' on the 1718 Buccleuch survey).

Stock Grain (stok-grān) n. small stream in the upper Borthwick valley. It rises on Stock Hill, joining Ladshaw Sike and Gavel Sike to become part of the headwaters of the Howpasley Burn.

Stock Hill (stok-hil) n. hill lying between the headwaters of the Teviot and Borthwick valleys on the border with Dumfries and Galloway, reaching a height of 477 m (1563 ft) and having a triangulation pillar. It is about 2 km south of Craikhope. It was at the western corner of Hawick Parish before Roberton separated off. This was the site of the crash of a SEPECAT Jaguar GR1A jet (XX732) in 1986, on practice manoeuvres, with the death of its American pilot, Capt. David Ronald Buteau Jr.

stockin (sto-kin) n. a sock (often plural; locally the word long remained applicable to articles of male clothing as well female; see also the former pronunciation stockeen).

stockin soles (sto-kin-sōlz) n., pl. the wearing of socks without shoes – '... hei sits be the fire in his stickin soles' [IWL] (note that in standard English the phrase is 'stockinged feet' or sometimes 'stocking feet').

stock-in-tred (stok-in-tred) n., arch. stock-in-trade – 'The commercial kind are pairt o' the stock-in-tred o' maist bacca-shops ... ' [DH].

stockit (sto-ki', -kee') adj., pp. stocked – 'Then up wi' the purse an' the siller, A weel-stockit maiden for me' [JoHa], 'My faither was laird o' a weel stockit mailin' ' [JT].

stocks (stoks) n., pl. long, white neckcloth worn as part of formal riding gear, popular in the 19th century. It was first adopted by the Principals at the 1928 Common Riding.

the stocks (thu-stoks) n. wooden boards with semi-circles cut into them, placed together to hold people as a form of public punishment. Hawick's stocks were next to the Mercat Cross. A new set is recorded being purchased in 1755. In 1787 the 'stocks, wood and iron work, and lock' were mended. They were in regular use until the end of the 18th century, and were donated to the Museum by the Town Council in 1867 (in fact the wood crumbled and was replaced with a replica, using the original ironwork around 1898). People were sentenced by the Bailies to spend up to several days in the stocks for relatively minor crimes, including theft and assault. Usually the feet were secured, but sometimes also the arms. The last use was for an elderly female offender in November 1800. The stocks were given to the Museum by the Town Council in 1861 – '... and sal lie aucht days in the stockis, and stand with ane paper with the theft written upon their forehead at the mercat-crosse, upon the mercat day' [BR1640], '... the baylyea fynes and onlaws him in fyftie pound Scotts, and ordaines him to go to the stockis immediately, and yrin to continue during the sd. regall baylyea his will and pleasure' [BR1693] (see also the juggs).

Stockwell (stok-wel) n. Henry (18th/19th C.) servant of Hawick butcher Andrew Wilson. In 1815 he was found not guilty of assaulting Janet Ogilvie (or Orrock). It is stated that both were married people. He appears to have been married to Elizabeth Rae and had a daughter Isabella in Kelso in 1812. He was probably son of Thomas and Margaret Fairbairn, born in Kelso in 1789.

Stockwell Orphanage (stok-wel-or-fi-neej) n. orphanage in London, established in 1867 for boys and in 1879 for girls. In the 1880s Hawick had a circulating library, based at 2 Dovecote Street, to raise money for the orphanage.

stockyaird (stok-yārd) n. a stockyard, area where livestock is kept on a farm, typically close to a slaughterhouse – '. . . and convey the chests containin the plate ti Caverton Mill where it was buried in the stockyaird where it lay until the danger was passed' [IWL].

Stoddart (sto-dur') n. Andrew (19th C.) married Helen Little in Roberton Parish in 1831. Archibald 'Airchie' (16th/17th C.) listed along with John and Gilbert, servants to the 'Laird's Jock' (probably Armstrong) in 1595, when accused of stealing cattle from England. Archibald (17th C.) resident at Barnes in 1694 according to the Hearth Tax rolls. David (14th C.) owner of lands in 'Ermildon' (i.e. somewhere around Anrton Fell) in Liddesdale according to a c.1376 rental roll. 'Locus Dauid Stodhirde' is listed there with a value of 23 shillings and 4 pence. Elizabeth 'Bessie' (17th C.) recorded in 1643 as 'gudewife of Greatlaw' in Lilliesleaf Parish. Her lands there were valued at £104. She was presumably widow of the former owner of Greatlaws and may have been connected with the Riddell family. Francis (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish who married Bessie Paterson in 1724. Their son Walter was baptised in 1725. He may be the Francis whose death at Stouslie is recorded in Wilton Parish in 1738. Francis (18th C.) married Janet Hardie in Ashkirk Parish in 1754. Gilbert 'Gib' (16th/17th C.) listed along with Archibald and John, servants to the 'Laird's Jock' (probably Armstrong) in 1595, when accused of stealing cattle from England. James (17th C.) listed at Flex among 'The poor in Hauick Parioch' on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He could be the John who married Grizell Elliot and whose daughter Malie (b.1674) was baptised in Hawick Parish. James (17th C.) married Janet Brydon in Ashkirk Parish in 1653. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish who married Ann Dalgleish. Their daughter 'An' was baptised in 1701. James (17th/18th C.) married Margaret Stoddart in Wilton Parish in 1712. James (18th C.) recorded in Ormiston in 1726 and 1727. His children, baptised in Cavers Parish, included Walter (b.1726) and Walter (again, b.1727). He is probably the James who married Isabel Nichol in Cavers Parish in 1725. James (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Jane Armstrong and their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1772. The witnesses were wright James Roger and merchant John Scott. James (19th C.) mason of Deanburnhaugh. He was one of the earliest Trustees of the Congregational (then Evangelical Union) Kirk. John (15th C.) recorded as 'Joanne Stodhird' in the 1447 sasine for the Cousinlands, purchased by Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch. The witnesses are Scotts, except for the last 2, who are this man and Patrick Turnbull; it is possible that they were the Hawick Bailies at that time. John (16th C.) described as 'Johnne Stoddart, cobilman to the lard of Langlands' in 1576. This was in a pledge made for him (and George Elliot) to the Privy Council by Walter Scott of Goldielands, James Gledstains of Cocklaw and James Langlands of that Ilk. He was listed in 1578/9 among Borderers deemed to have continued in thieving and hence declared as fugitives. He was stated to have been 'enterit' and 'deliverit in the sheref of Roxburch his handis'. In 1586/7 he was 'cobleman at Hawick' when listed among Borderers accused of crimes who had failed to appear in court and were given one more chance to find sureties. Perhaps the same man (or else his son) was 'Johnne Stoddart, cobleman at Hawick' when listed among those declared as fugitives for not appearing at a Borders Commissioners' court in Jedburgh in 1605. What happened to him is not recorded, but it seems likely he would have been hanged or fled the area. His existence shows that there was a man employed to ferry people across the Coble Pool from at least the latter part of the 16th century. John (16th/17th C.) listed along with Archibald and Gilbert, servants to the 'Laird's Jock' (probably Armstrong) in 1595, when accused of stealing cattle from England. John (18th C.) described being 'in Hawick' in 1725. He may be the John who witnessed a baptism for William 'workman in Hawick' in 1722. He married Margaret Stuart in Hawick Parish in 1720. Their children included: Archibald (b.1721); John (b.1723); and Janet (b.1720). The witnesses in 1725 were weaver James Weens and wheelwright William Wilson. John (18th C.) recorded in 'Borthwickburnfoot' in 1764, 1766 and 1772 when 3 of his children were baptised in Roberton Parish. He married Mary Anderson in Roberton in 1762. Probably the same John was father of Isabel (b.1764), Betty (b.1766), Mary (b.1768), Jean (b.1770) and Margaret (b.1772).

John (b.c.1780) journeyman nailer in Minto according to the ballot for the Militia in 1801. He may have worked with John Oliver, who was also mlisted as nailer in Minto in 1801. Kenneth (1964–) born in Hawick, he qualified as a music teacher then became a hairdresser and moved to Australia. He was awarded the title of 'Australian Hairdresser of the Year' in 2005 and has styled hair for stars such as Kylie Minogue, Jerry Hall and Nicole Kidman. Robert (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Catherine Riddell and their son Alexander was baptised in 1637. Robert (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish, living at the Flex. He married Jean Little and their children included: Isobel (b.1671); and Margaret (b.1674). Jane (b.1676), with no mother's name given, is probably also his child. The witnesses in 1674 were William Henderson (also in Flex) and Walter Martin. Robert (17th/18th C.) tenant at the Flex, probably related to the earlier Robert who was there. In 1708 he witnessed a baptism for William Henderson 'younger in Flex'. He married Janet Scott and their children included: Jane (b.1684); Janet (b.1686); Robert (b.1691); William (b.1693); Margaret (b.1695); Bessie (b.1701); and Francis (b.1704). The witnesses in 1695 were William and Francis Henderson and in 1704 were William Henderson (also in the Flex) and Andrew Riddell (in Goldielands). Robert (18th C.) married Margaret Little in Hawick Parish in 1726. Robert (d.1759) resident of Ewes Parish. He married Margaret Laidlaw, probably in 1756. Their children included: John (b.1757); and Robert (b.1759), baptised after he had already died. The witnesses in 1759 were John Turnbull and Patrick Maxwell. Thomas (18th C.) labourer in the Hawick area. He was a 'workman' in 1725, and was living at Stouslie in 1729, Tandlaw in 1732 and Burnfoot in 1737. He married Elspeth Turnbull and their children included: Janet (b.1725) and James (b.1729), baptised in Hawick; and Margaret (b.1729), Thomas (b.1732) and James (again, b.1737), baptised in Wilton. The witnesses in 1725 were Walter Nixon and Simon Miller (both in Hawick Shiel), in 1729 were William Grieve and John Scott, in 1732 were John and James Dryden and in 1737 were James Blyth and Walter Scott. Thomas (1828–1905) born in Roxburgh, he attended school in Hawick, being apprenticed as a joiner at 16. He joined the army at 20 and left for Australia in 1853. In the Ballarat area (near Melbourne) he worked as a miner, becoming a speculator and director of many mining companies. By 1880 he was a wealthy man, purchasing statues, and inspiring a local zeal that has led to Ballaarat being called the 'City of Statues'. His bust sits in the local Town Hall. He is recorded subscribing to Hawick Common Riding in the 1880s Walter (17th/18th C.) married Janet Redford in Ashkirk Parish in 1689. Walter (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He was herd at Harwood in 1711. He married Jean Scott in 1709, the marriage being recorded in Wilton Parish. Their children included Isobella (b.1711) and Margaret (b.1713). The witnesses in 1711 were Gideon Scott of Falnash and Bailie Walter Elliot. Perhaps the same Walter had children Christian (b.1707) and Walter (b.1710) baptised in Roberton Parish. He may therefore be the same man as the Walter recorded at Meadshaw in 1710. Walter (18th/19th C.) weaver at Ashieburn in Ancrum Parish, recorded in the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. Walter (18th/19th C.) servant of Robert Simpson at West Riddell in about 1823. He may be the Walter who married Jessie Hogg in Roberton Parish in 1842. She is probably the widow Janet (from Ashkirk Parish, with surname 'Hogg' scored out on the census) was in 1851 living at Whitecleuchshide (in Roberton Parish) with children Walter (b.c.1845), Adam (b.c.1847) and unnamed (b.1851). Walter (19th C.) married Margaret Baxter in Lilliesleaf in 1845. William (17th/18th C.) married Janet Mercer in Hawick Parish in 1711. William (17th/18th C.) workman in Hawick. In 1719 he was 'servant to David Gray tenant in Weensland'. He was living at the Sandbed in 1724. He married Helen Wilson (also from Hawick) in 1719 and their children included: Archibald (b.1720); Robert (b.1722); and Janet (b.1724), baptised in Wilton. The witnesses in 1720 were David Gray in Weensland and merchant John Johnston, in 1722 were John (who was surely related) and Richard Scott of Boghall, and in 1724 were Walter and John Scott. Based on naming conventions, John may have been his brother, with Archibald as their father. William (17th/18th C.) 'casaer' (i.e. roadlayer) in Hawick. In 1719 he was 'Casaer in Flexs' when he married Marion, daughter of tailor Walter Gledstains. Their children included: John (b.1723); Bessie (b.1725); Janet (b.1727); and Jean (b.1730). Robert (b.1720), with the mother's name given as Agnes Gledstains, was probably also his son. The witnesses in 1730 were Will Stoddart (surely related) and John Telfer. He may be the William who (along with Archibald Paterson, perhaps also the cassayer at the Flex) witnessed a baptism for William Cathrae in 1728. William (b.c.1795) born at Bonjedward, he was gamekeeper at Wilton Lodge in 1851. His wife was Alison and their children included John, Elizabeth and Margaret. William (19th C.) woolsorter who was Cornet in 1873. He acted as Right-Hand man again in 1875, since the previous year's Cornet was unable to attend. William 'Willie' (20th C.) mill worker in Hawick. He spent some time working in Canada as a teenager and served in WWI. In 1937 he became Hawick's only Communist Town Councillor, but within a few months joined the Labour Party. He was involved in setting up the Hawick Workers' Mill, which supplied woollen goods to anti-Fascist forces in Spain, as well as helping provide jobs for unemployed mill-workers in Hawick (formerly spelled 'Stodart', 'Stoddert', 'Stodert', 'Stodherd', 'Stotherd' and other variants; also Stothart).

stog (stōg) v., arch. to walk heavily, stride sturdily, stump – 'By the policies o Ancrum Hoose . . . A stoaggeet-on on the shadeet seide' [ECS]. ' stog (stōg) v., arch. to stab, pierce, jab – 'I have stogd myself in the leg' [HAST1922].

stoggit (stō-gee', -gi') pp., poet. stabbed, thrust – 'Thou hest stogget sair t me, that I micht fa'. . . ' [HSR].

Stoghill (stōg-hil) n. former name for lands near Commonside in upper Teviodale. In 1591 these lands, along with Commonside, Northcroft and Hillend were already occupied by Gilbert Elliot when leased to him by Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch. It is unclear if the name is a variant of something more familiar.

stoiter (stoi-tur) v., arch. to stagger, stumble – 'Making a low bow, he wheeled about, and 'stoitered' away as fast as his feet could carry him' [JTe], 'The step may stoiter, the eyne be dim . . . ' [WL], '. . . But byways for the likes o' me Although the step may stoiter' [WL] (cf. the more common stotter).

Stonedge (sten-leej, stō-nej) n. farm west of Wolfelee above Howahill, once part of one of the main estates of Hobkirk Parish, also formerly known as 'Stanledge'. It was also once a barony in its own right. It is probably the seat of John 'de Stonesleghe' who signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296 and is 'de Stounesleighe' in 1303/4 on an inquest for inheritance of the half barony of Wilton. The lands were bestowed on David Home of Wedderburn by Archibald Douglas, Earl of Angus in 1464. It could be the 'Stanleche' in Ettrick Forest, whose 'grassum' was mentioned in the Exchequer Rolls of 1477 (although this could be confusion with Crown lands of the same name in Stirlingshire). James Turnbull was recorded there in 1586/7 and in 1590. Walter Scott was tenant there in about 1600. The size and ownership of parts of lands referred to as 'Stonedge' are complicated. The Earl of Angus sold off his superiority of these and other Rulewater lands to Sir William Cranston in 1605. The estate is recorded belonging to Hector Turnbull in at least 1603–09, part sold to Gibbie Eliott of Stobs in 1609 and part still owned by Andrew Turnbull in 1610. Andrew and Cuthbert 'McDowall' were there in 1616. It was sold by William, Earl of Lothian to Sir Thomas Ker of Cavers in 1647, but given back the following year. Then in 1651 it was sold by William, Lord Cranstoun to William Eliott of Stobs (tradition says that Cranston did this to secure them against being forfeited before his joined attempts to rescue Charles I). In 1671 the lands of Over and Nether Woollee, Stonedge, Unthank, Howa, Sneep, Hobsburn and Little Gledstains were separated off from those of Stobs to become the new estate of Stonedge; this was disposed to Thomas, the eldest son of Sir Gilbert Eliott of Stobs with his 2nd wife Magdelen Nicolson, and when Thomas died it went to his brother Gilbert. In 1694 the residents were John Mair, elder, Agnes Scott, John Mair, younger and Robert Oliver. In 1718 the western part was sold to Adam Scott (tenant farmer at Wauchope), and passed to his brother William, who later purchased the eastern part and became the new Laird of Stonedge. Along with Howa, Scott's part was valued at £856 12s, with Elliot of Stonedge holding lands at the same time that were valued at £676 14s 8d. In 1766 the eastern part was valued at £412 19s 6d, with the superiority liferented by Elliot of Borthwickbrae, while the western part was valued at £842 6s. Adam Scott's son Thomas sold his lands to Robert Lisle. Part (including Unthank) was also sold to Elliot of Woollee. In about 1788 it was listed as being disjoined from the Stobs estate and valued at £1300 in total, Elliot of Wolfelee holding lands in Stonedge valued at £112 5s 7d, while Robert Lisle's part was valued at £1187 14s 5d, and Cornelius Elliot of Wolfelee also owned small parts valued (along with Unthank) at £110 17s 2d. Lisle sold his lands in 1793 to James Chisholme before the previous purchase had really been completed. Robert Smith was living there in 1799 and Robert Glendinning in 1801. In 1811 it was listed as being owned by Robert Lisle and valued at about £1200. It passed through marriage to the Sinclairs, being owned by Lord Sinclair by about 1874. Robert Grieve (who died in 1785) was tenant farmer there. James Stewart was shepherd there in 1797. Lands formerly in Stonedge (including Unthank) were listed among the properties of Cornelius Elliot of Woollee in 1811, valued at £112 5s 7d. The farm was tenanted by Thorburns through much of the 19th century and by the Barrie family into the 20th century. The original house was a strong tower situated on a rocky ledge, said to be surrounded by a very thick wall. All sign of this was already gone by the 19th century, although it is said that Mr. Barrie (who lived at Harden) picked up the old key to the peel and passed it on to the Marquess of Lothian. It was stated in the 1850s that there is an 'encircled barrow' near here, consisting of a cairn surrounded by 9 upright stones, in the direction towards Shankend; however, if it existed it is now lost (many spelling variants exist in earlier documents, including 'Steinleath'; it is 'Stainletche' in 1562, 'Stenleche' in 1567, 'Stanielege' in 1586/7, 'Stonyleache' and 'Stonyletche' in 1590, 'Stanyleche' in 1595, 'Stanyleg', 'Stanylege' and 'Stanelege' in 1601, 'Stanileche' and 'Stainieloche' in 1603, 'Stanyledge' in 1604, 'Stanyledge' and 'Steneledrig' in 1606, 'Stennyledge' and 'Staneleiche' in 1607, 'Staineleche' and 'Stenletch' in 1609, 'Stanielege' in 1611, 'Stanyledge' in 1612 and 1615, 'Stainledge' in 1616, 'Stenniledge' in 1618, 'Staniledge' in 1647, 'Stainledge' in 1648, 'Stenniledge' in 1677, 'Stennilodge' in 1682, 'Stenneledge' in 1692, 'Stennilege' in 1694, 'Staneledge' in 1704 and 'Standlidge' in 1748; it is marked as 'Stennalitch' on Pont's c.1590 manuscript map and 'Stennaleuch' on Blaeu's 1654 map, with a large tower indicated; note that the l has persisted in the local pronunciation despite the official spelling, and that the pronunciation is never stān- ; the meaning is probably 'stane leche', meaning 'stony stream' or 'bog').

Stonedge (sten-leej, stō-nej) n. John (13th/14th C.) recorded as being 'de Stonesleghe' when he signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296. Although his name has also been transcribed as 'Scouneslegh', the more modern transcription makes the connection with the lands in Hobkirk Parish clear. His seal bore a 'cabossed' stag's head with a cross between the antlers and the name 'S'. . . OHIS DE STYKS'Y?'; William of Yetholm had a similar seal. He is 'de Stounesleighe' in 1303/4 on an inquest for inheritance of the half barony of Wilton.

Stonedge Hill (stō-nej-hil) n. hill lying to the south-west of Stonedge farm, reaching a height of 369 m. On its western side is a linear earthwork, some 330 m in length, probably an agricultural boundary, now obscured by the forestry plantation. Near the top of the hill there was previously a cairn, probably quite ancient, but now obliterated by forestry ploughing.

Stopford (stop-ford) n. James George (1765–1835), 3rd Earl of Courtown. He was referred to as Viscount Stopford until the death of his father James, 2nd Earl of Courtown, in 1710. In 1791 he married Mary, daughter of Henry Scott, 3rd Duke of Buccleuch and they had 6 children. His wife's portrait was painted by George Romney in 1793. He was M.P. for Great Bedwyn until 1796, when the Duke of Buccleuch proposed him as the Tory candidate for the Lanark Burghs (including Selkirk at that time). However, he was locally quite unpopular and the Duke did not support him for the election in 1802, and he instead became M.P. in Dumfries. He was succeeded in his titles by his son James. Stopford Street in Newcastleton was presumably named after him.

stop or lat (stōp-or-la') v., arch. to try to prevent someone from causing harm, literally to 'let and stop' – '... that he may stope or latt ...' [1622 Circuit Court records], '... which did without ony stoppe or let occasione ane great disturbance, confussione, and mutinie amonst the other civil inhabitants of the said towne ...' [BR1706] (spelling varied).

stoppit (sto-pee') pp. stopped – 'hei was stoppit be the polis' – 'The witch didna dee, as micht hae been hoppit, But ever sinsyne her cantrips were stoppit' [BM1901], '... stopple (sto-pul) n., arch. the stalk of a clay tobacco pipe (local variant of stapple).

the Store (thu-stōr) n. Hawick Cooperative Store, which opened in 1839 as 'the Chartist Store' with a small shop in Silver Street. It grew into a set of around half a dozen general stores, 5 butchers, a baker's shop (from 1851), shoe shop (1859), coal branch (1865), drapery (1873), carting (1874), van service to the country (1884) and penny savings bank (1887). The firm also ran its own stocking-makers at the old Tabernacle building in the years 1874–81. The stableyards and dairy were built on Orchard Terrace in 1891 (designed by J.P. Alison). The main shop, usually the one referred to as 'the Store', stretched from Tannage Close to Baker Street and from the High Street to Teviot Crescent. It contained many departments, including clothing, electrical, shoes, furniture, toys, ladies hairdressing and a tea room. This main building was constructed in 1885 at 65, 67, 69 and 71 High Street, with the surviving upper level frontage at 65–67 designed by local architect Michael Brodie in a French Renaissance style, with the first and second floor windows having arched heads, eacg with a different carving; this is a category B listed building. This was Hawick's biggest department store, with smaller shops elsewhere in town. There was a relatively large grocer's shop in Noble Place and others at the Sandbed, Drumlanrig Square, Myreslawgreen and Ladylaw Place, as well as the complex on Elm Grove (which contained a grocer's and a butcher's). Shoppers collected stamps that could be redeemed for goods, and departments within the 'Store' communicated via characteristic pneumatic tubes. The main shop closed in 1987, with the property sold off to several developers. The Co-op at Burnfoot remains, however; it was Hawick's first purpose-built self-service grocers. A history was published in 1889 – 'There er peis, peis, Thit come up ti yer kneis, In the Store, in the Store, There are peis, peis, This come up ti yer kneis, In the Hawick Co-operative Store!' [T], '... waitin eer turn at the Store' [ECS], 'In Hawick in days lang syne When the world and huz were younger Oo dune oor messages at the Store A still can mind ma number' [IWL].

the Store Dairy (thu-stōr-dā-ree) n. building and yard on Orchard Terrace and Elm Grove, constructed for use by Hawick Cooperative Society. It was built in 1891, designed by ??, and used to run the Store's dairy operations through most of the 20th century. The buildings were converted into Elm Court housing.

the Store Field (thu-stōr-feeld) n. field once grazed by the Hawick Co-op cows, situated behind Wester Braid Road, near the Miller's Knowes. The Co-op employees used to organise an annual sports day and picnic there, as a sort of forerunner to the Vertish Hill Sports – 'The picnic up at the Store Field The whole o' Hawick was there' [AY].

the Store van (thu-stōr-vawn) n. van that used to sell grocery items around the town. The vans started as a country delivery service in 1884 and continued into the latter part of the 20th century – '... wi' a biscuit in my hand Fresh frae the lang mysterious spicy drawer O' the Store van' [DH].

Storey (stō-ree) n. George (1913–44) born in Duns, he married Yolanda Jean Wilson, who lived in Hawick. He was a Private with the 9th Royal Scots and was killed during the liberation of Brunssum in the Netherlands. Matthew (b.1842) born in Castleton Parish, son of Thomas, he was a shoemaker in Hawick. In 1861 he was a boarder at 3 Back Row. Known as a runner, in 1862 he raced Thomas Richardson in a head-to-head contest and won, and repeated the win in another contest in 1864. In 1876 he donated to the Museum a 'pair of top-boots made for the Cornet, James Scott in 1810'. In the 1880s he had his own boot and shoemakers's shop at 3 Silver Street. He married Helen Richardson in 1864 and their children included Thomas (b.1865), William (b.1868), Janet (b.1870) and Isabella (b.1872).

Storff Burn (storf-burn) n. small stream in upper Liddesdale, rising on Larriston Fells and flowing roughly north-west to join Great Warrington Sike, before eventually running into Larriston Burn.

Storff Sike (storf-sīk) n. small stream in upper Liddesdale, which rises on Larriston Fells and is joined by Little Warrington Sike. Note that it distinct from Storff Burn, which lies further south.

storfully (stōr-fu-lee) adv., arch. excitably, in an agitated way – '. . . and than if she carries on storfully, as she's amaist shure to do, thraw half-a-dozen o' plates or sae doon i' the floor . . . ' [WNK] (cf. stoor and stour).

Storie (stō-ree) n. Adam (16th/17th C.) recorded in Raperlaw in 1619. He was listed among many Turnbulls and others, under Walter of Bedrule, who were accused of taking hay from Huntliehill and declared as rebels for not appearing to answer the charge. Adam (17th C.) tenant in Chester-house in Rulewater. In 1684 he was listed among men declared as fugitives for attending field conventicles. Adam (17th/18th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish. His son Adam was baptised in 1721. In 1722 the discussion of his 'bill' before the Bedrule Session was delayed because Thomas Borthwick, who was to speak on the subject, was absent. Adam (17th/18th C.) wright in Denholm. His children included: Marion (b.1723); Robert (b.1728); and Marion (b.1730). Adam (18th C.) married Elizabeth Ferguson in Bedrule Parish in 1753. Andrew 'Dand' (15th/16th C.) resident of Rewcastle. In 1502 Robert Rule (from the same place) was surety for him, and he was also surety for himself, with the pair fined for non-appearancei at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. Ann (20th C.) proprietor of a grocer's shop at 6 Allars Bank in the mid-1900s. Cuthbert (17th C.) recorded in 1627 as 'Cuthbert Storey of Hawicke' in a presentment where 13 sheep were stolen from him. This is Hawick in Northumberland. David (b.1809/10) born in Morebattle, he was an agricultural labourer. In 1841 he was at Howcleuchshiel, in 1851 at Clarilaw in Bowden and in 1861 was shepherd at Nether Tofts in Kirkton Parish. He married Janet Lunn in 1833. Their children included: Margaret (b.1834); Elizabeth (b.1836); Euphemia (b.1839); William (b.1841); Fanny (b.1844); Janet (b.c.1848); Joan (b.c.1849); Mary (b.c.1851); Ellen (b.c.1854); Robina (b.c.1855); and David (b.c.1857). Gideon (18th C.) from Ashkirk Parish, he was recorded at Roughheugh in Wilton in 1735. In 1727 he married Isobel Brown, who was also from Ashkirk. Their children (baptised in Wilton) included: John (b.1731); and Elspeth (b.1735). The witnesses in 1735 were Robert Scott and Robert Storie (who was surely related). Harry (??–) Common Riding Song Singer 1950s??–1972. He was ill for a while and Bert Armstrong filled in for a few years, but he returned again as the official singer. Apparently there were some complaints about his over-gesticulating! Helen (15th C.) listed at the 1493 Justice-aire in Jedburgh when William Douglas of Cavers was fined for her non-appearance. She was listed again in 1494/5. Other people who were not entered by the Sheriff were fairly local (but she is one of the only women). James (16th C.) holder of a particate of land on the north side of the public street according to Hawick's 1537 Charter. He may have been related to William. James (16th C.) servant of Gavin Eliott of Stobs and Jean Scott. In 1573 he was placed on their recently purchased 6 merk land of Chamberlain Newton. However, he was attacked by Walter and John Scott (sons of Margaret Turnbull, who was widow of David Elliot in Chamberlain Newton), who possessed the other half of the farm. They 'crewellie sett upoun him, hurt and voundit him in sindrie partis of his body, and left him for deid; of the quhilkis hurt as yit he is in danger of his lyfe'. It is unknown whether or not he survived. James (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. He probably farmed near Newton. He may be the James 'in Spitle' whose will was recorded in 1681 (if he made a testament long before he died), or else they were father and son. Either he or a near relative was probably the 'Laird Storie' whose lands in Ruecastle in Bedrule Parish were valued at £18 in 1643, 1663 and 1678. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He is recorded as 'undermiller att . . . ' (probably Newmill) in 1700. His children included: William (b.1693); Bessie (b.1698); and Anna (b.1700). The witnesses in 1698 were Robert Thomson and John Goodfellow and in 1700 were James Craw and James Dryden, smith at Newmill. James (d.bef. 1741) from Ancrum Parish. In 1718 he married Jean Bennet, who was from Bedrule Parish. In 1741 his widow gave money to the poor in Ancrum Parish, owing from her husband. James (18th C.) tenant and herd in East Burnfoot (on Ale) in 1731. He is probably the James who married Elizabeth 'Mortoun' and whose son Adam was baptised in Wilton in 1725. James (d.1797) from Rulewater, he died at Robert Biggar's Inn in Hawick in 1797. He could be the James who married Elizabeth Henderson in Bedrule in 1755, and his wife could be the widow of that name who died later the same year in Silver Street. James (18th/19th C.) weaver recorded in Barnhills in 1799 and at Belses on the 1801 Militia ballot for Ancrum Parish. James (b.c.1780) servant at Colterscleuch according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Cavers Parish. James (1780/1–1855) born in Southdean Parish, he was a labourer in Hawick and also known locally for his poetry. He published 'Poems on several subjects' (1837). He also competed in the 'Auld Brig' competition, contributing 'The Auld Brig's Parting Address to Hawick'. When Agnes Douglas was declared the winner of the contest he is suppsed to have said 'The blush of shame may paint our cheeks When women best deserve the breeks'. He was said to be a repository of local stories relating to the Covenanters, some of which later made their way into the book 'The Covenanters of Teviotdale and neighbouring districts' by Duncan Stewart. He was recorded living at about 71 High Street in 1841 and on Brougham Place in 1851. He died unmarried. John (15th C.) received a boll of victuals in the will of Sir David Scott of Branxholme in 1491/2. He is listed as 'Johanni Storis'. John (16th C.) recorded as 'John Story' on a list of tenants of Newton in Bedrule in 1531. John (17th C.) recorded as tenant in Roughlee in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. He is listed along with Robert, to whom he was surely related. John (17th C.) tenantin 'Roods' (or 'Rodes') in Southdean Parish according to the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. John (17th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Easter Alemoor in 1757 (when he was 'younger', suggesting his father was also John) and at 'Harden anna' in 1762. He married Marion Borthwick. His children included: John (b.1757); and Helen (b.1762). John (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Borthwickshiel (probably) in 1735 when his son John was baptised. John (d.bef. 1815) gardener in Hawick. He married Isabel Watson, who died in 1815. Their children included: Elizabeth (b.1764); Elizabeth (again, b.1765); Helen (b.1767); Margaret (b.1796); Isabel (b.1772); and Robert (b.1779). The wintesses to the 1765 baptism were Thomas Cowan and Walter Scott and in 1772 were the whole congregation. John (19th C.) married Margaret Hobkirk in Hawick Parish in 1849. Patrick (16th/17th C.) tenant in 'Rowll Spittell' (i.e. Spittal-on-Rule). In 1605 Robert Scott of Thirlestane was caution for Walter Scott of Dykes in a bond not to harm him. Robert (17th C.) resident of the old Hassendean Parish. He was recorded at Over Boonraw in 1688. He married Isobel Wright in 1679 and their children (baptised in Roberton Parish) included: Isobel (b.1680); Margaret (b.1682); Bessie (b.1684); Walter (b.1686); and Robert (b.1688). The witnesses in 1684 were Robert and George Ormiston (who lived at Boonraw), in 1686 were William Nichol and Adam Scott and in 1688 were again George and Robert Ormiston. He witnessed a baptism for Robert Ormiston in 1684. Along with Robert Ormiston, he witnessed a baptism for William Nichol in Boonraw in 1696. Robert (17th C.) recorded as tenant in Roughlee in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. John was also tenant there and so presumably related. Robert (17th C.) resident of Denholm on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. Robert (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Elizabeth Cavers in Wilton in 1720 and their children included: Christian (b.1723); and John (b.1726). He is probably the Robert who witnessed baptisms in 1725 and 1732 for William Scott in Newton and in 1735 for Gideon in Roughheugh. He could be the Robert who was joint tenant (with Robert Scott) in Newton in 1717. Robert (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He had an unknown child baptised in 1744. He could be the deceased Robert whose grandson John died in Hawick in 1800. Robert (b.c.1805) joiner at Branxholme Woodfoot. His wife was Betty and their children included Jean, Thomas, Margaret, Robert, Janet and George. Robert (b.1812/3) born in Lilliesleaf, he was a groom who lived at Falnash. His wife was Janet Middlemas, and already dead by 1861. His children included Helen, George and Robert, and he had a nephew, William Easton. Thomas (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 when Thomas Scott in Branxholme and John Scott in Spittal were convicted of a crimes against him. They came 'across him in villa de spittale Inter aqueduct de damys'. Thomas (d.bef. 1632) described as 'in Roucastle' in 1632 when his widow Bessie Craik feued lands in Ruecastle from Thomas Hamilton, Lord Binning. Thomas (17th C.) tenant at Acreknowe (along with William Armstrong) recorded on the 1684 list of men declared fugitives for refusing to conform to Episcopalianism. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. He is surely descended from the 'Laird Storie' who in 1643 owned the same piece of land, which later became part of the Knowesouth estate. He was recorded being an Elder of Bedrule

Kirk in at least the period 1724–35. He is probably the 'Portioner in Ruecastle' whose daughter Helen was baptised in 1735. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish. He owned part of the old lands of Ruecastle, as recorded in 1788, with value £18 (plus teinds). Probably the same Thomas had lands in Bedrule valued at the same £18 in the 1740s. Probably the same Thomas was recorded paying the Land Tax for part of Ruecastle in 1811 (although probably deceased by then). Thomas (b.c.1780) labourer at 'Cadafits' according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish. His location is obscure, but could be Caddroun Pots. Thomas (b.1793/4) blacksmith in Newcastleton. He was listed in Pigot's 1825/6 and 1837 directories and Slater's 1852 directory. He was living at about 40 South Hermitage Street in 1841, 1851 and 1861. He firstly married Mary Armstrong and their children included: William (b.1817), also a blacksmith; Hannah (b.1820); Elizabeth (b.1822); and John (b.1824). He secondly married Janet Nichol and their children included: Mary (b.1830); Thomas (b.1831); Margaret (b.1834); Walter (b.1836); Helen (b.1837); Elliot (b.1838/39); Robert (b.1839); Matthew (b.1842); Alexander (b.1844); Nichol (b.1849); Janet (b.1850/1); and Esther (b.1852). His father-in-law John Nichol (b.c.1780) was living with his family in 1841. William (16th C.) holder of a particate of land on the north side of the public street according to Hawick's 1537 Charter. William (16th C.) recorded in 1551 as then occupier of an acre of arable land in the lands of Spittal-on-Rule, specifically on 'lie Harparhill' (whose location is unknown), which was granted by the Baron of Cavers to Archibald Elliot in Gorrenberry. He witnessed the associated notorial instrument and letter of reversion, along with 2 men called Alexander 'Wreth', one of whom was a miller. William (17th C.) recorded as 'in Weynis' (probably Weens in Rulewater) when he witnessed a Rulewater sasine in 1631. William (17th C.) resident of Denholm. He and his wife Marion Beattie were accused of attending conventicles, probably in about 1684. William (17th C.) listed at Wadeshill among the poor of Southdean Parish in the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. William (18th/19th C.) recorded as servant at Bewlie in Lilliesleaf Parish in the Lieutenancy Book for 1799 (also formerly spelled 'Storey', 'Storrie', 'Story' and 'Storry').

Storiesteed (stō-ree-steed) n. former name for lands in Liddesdale, recorded in the 1541 rental roll, listed before Byreholm, and so presumably somewhere near Castleton. It appears as 'Storeissteid alias Gudelland', with a value of 5 shillings and tenanted by Christopher Armstrong.

storm (stōrm) v., arch. to beset or cover with snow or otherwise deprive livestock of pasture – 'The term 'being stormed' was originally used to express the want of food suffered by sheep when the ground was covered with snow' [RB].

storm-staad (stōrm-stawd) adj., arch. delayed because of a storm – 'Storm-staad (stawd) = starom-stayed; delayed by stormy weather whilst on a journey or errand' [ECS] (see also staa). stōrm-stawd adj., arch. delayed because of a storm – 'Storm-staad (stawd) = starom-stayed; delayed by stormy weather whilst on a journey or errand' [ECS] (see also staa)

Storrey (stō-ree) n. J.B.S. (??–??) writer of the local poem 'A Sonnet'.

Storrie (stō-ree) n. Arthur B. (19th/20th C.) captain of the Hawick rugby team that beat Gala away in 1893 to take the Border championship.

The Story of Hawick (thu-stō-ree-ov-hIk) n. book about the history of Hawick, written by William S. Robson and published in 1937, partly to commemorate the 400th anniversary of the granting of the 1537 Charter. It contained 22 illustrations by Allan Watt Robson (son of the author), as well as 12 photographs by Walter Brydon. A second edition, revised and enlarged, was published in 1947. The book contains several appendices, including (in the 2nd edition) a list of events in the history of the Common Riding.

stot (sto') v. to bounce, rebound, recoil, cause to bounce – 'wull ee stop stottin yer baa off ma waa?', 'Item ane stot of twa yeir auld or thairby price 30s' [SPB1579], '...And the star beame stotted out of the way, When it saw the ryders come' [JTe], 'Stottin' a bool, ba', etc.' [GW], 'The rain hed been fair stottin at Jethart an it wasneh muckle better at Selkirk or Galeh' [BW1978], 'The rain was fairly stottin As I'd never seen't afore' [WL], '...Stottin't on Drummond's gable waa' [WL], to stagger, reel, walk unsteadily – 'hei was stottin drunk', to walk with a deliberate bounce, bustle – 'An' farmer bodies, awfu' rude, In wrath aboot were stottin', Red-wud that day' [JoHa] n. a bounce, rebound, a buffet – 'A stot i' the mooth' [GW] (also sometimes 'stoat'; see also off the stot).

stot (sto') n., arch. a bullock, castrated bull, usually in its second or later year – 'Item, nyne stottis and queyis of tua zeir auldis, price of the pece ourheid, xl s.' [SB1574], '...stotis and queyis of twa yeir auldis, 3s. 4.d' [JW], 'God send the land deliverance Frae every reaving, riding Scot: We'll sune hae neither cow nor ewe, We'll sune hae neither staig nor stot' [LHTB], '... The Pricker then, like stricken stot, To eard fell in a swoon' [JTe], 'I wull tak' nae stot owt o' thy hous ...' [HSR], 'This alsua sall pleese the Lord mair nor ane stot or bullok that heth cluts an' hoorns' [HSR], 'Doddies an stirks an queys an stots' [ECS], 'A muckle jet-black Angus stot – I gey near fainted on the spot' [TD], 'And this ye may take as Wat Harden's word: Each stot they ha' stolen comes hame wi' a herd!' [WHO], 'We met wi' a rush i' the pass, Wi' a clash made the steel-fire flee, But he fell like a stot on the grass; And wha daur meddle wi' me?' [T].

Stot (sto') n., arch. James (18th C.) miller at Weensland. He married Margaret Leyden. Their children, baptised in Hawick, included Margaret (b.1719) and Charles (b.1723). The witnesses in 1723 were 'Dand' Gray in Weensland and gardener William Riddell. Perhaps the same James had children William (b.1711), Bessie (b.1714) and James (b.1716) baptised in Bedrule Parish. James (18th C.) Hawick resident. His wife was Margaret Cavers and their children included John (b.1730). James (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He is recorded at Highchesters in 1753. His children, baptised in Roberton Parish, included: Magdalen (b.1745); Margaret (b.1748); Margaret (again, b.1749); Agnes (b.1752); William (b.1753); and James (b.1755). James (18th C.) married Mary Harkness in Wilton in 1761. James (19th C.) married Jane Lamb in Hawick Parish in 1777. Robert (18th C.) married Betty Thomson in Wilton in 1775. Walter (18th C.) Hawick resident. His son James was born in 1734. He could be the Walter who witnessed a baptism in Wilton for Walter Scott in Borthaugh in 1741. He could be the Walter recorded in Wilton in 1737 when there was a funeral for 'Walter Sttots Wife'. Walter (18th/19th C.) servant at Minto Kames according to the Lieutenancy Book in 1799 (also written 'Stott'; it is possible that some of these may be errors for 'Scot').

Stot Cleuch (sto'-klooch) n. small stream in southern Liddesdale, which flows roughly northeast to meet Tinnis Burn.

Stotfield (sto'-feeld) n. lands that were part of Lilliesleaf Common. Along with Nolt-lair, it was described in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls that it was feued by John Scott in Bewlie Mains from William Riddell of Camieston.

Stothart (sto-dur') n. Adam (18th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish. His son Walter was baptised in 1741. David (1773–1841) son of James and Jean Little, he was born in Langholm and was a resident of Deanburnhaugh. He married Christian Jackson, from Canonbie, who died at Doecleuch in 1851, aged 70. Their children included: James (1804–60); Christian (1805–82), who probably married William Gledstains; Jane (1807–41), who died at Deanburnhaugh; Joseph (1809–80), a mason at Deanburnhaugh; Henry (1814–90), baptised in Roberton; William (1815–78); David (1819–89), also a mason; Mary (1822–95); and Thomas (1828–95). They are buried at Borthwick Waas. In 1841 his wife and children Jane, Joseph and David were living at Deanburnhaugh. David (b.c.1780s) tenant at Muselee, recorded on the ballot for the Militia in Roberton Parish in 1812. David (1819–89) son of David and Christian Jackson. He was born in Roberton Parish. In 1861 he was a mason living in Ayton. Later the family moved to Hawick, living on North Bridge Street. In 1847 he married Mary Orkney (1825–99), who was from Ayton and died in Hawick. Their children included: David (1848–1921), a joiner; James (1850–1909), who was killed by a train; John (1852–89), who died by suicide; Elizabeth 'Lizzie' Pringle (1855–84), who married James Swan Wood and had a daughter Agnes who married revolutionary socialist John Maclean; George (b.1857), George (again, b.1862) and Mary Jane (b.1862), who all died in infancy; Joseph (1864–1933), a saddler and bootmaker; and Mary Alice Jackson (1868–1925), who married James Orr and died of self-inflicted 'irritant poisoning'. David (b.1851) son of Joseph, he was born at Deanburnhaugh. He worked as a dyker and mason, living in Wilton and Hawick. He is recorded in prison in Jedburgh and Dumfries in 1868, 1869, 1876 and 1881. David Orkney Smith 'D.O.' (1900–72) son of Joseph. He was a shopkeeper at 6 High Street, where his father was a saddler and bootmaker. After he took over the shop he branched out into sporting goods, fishing tackle and toys. He took on Len Elliot as a partner and later passed the business to him. He was also involved with local operatic productions. His cousin was Herbert Stothart, Hollywood musical director who won as Oscar for 'The Wizard of Oz'. James (1850–1909) son of David and Mary Orkney, he was born in Ayton. By the time of the 1881 census he was living in Hawick. He was co-owner of Stothart & Rutherford, bootmakers of Hawick. He was associated with the Total Abstinence Society in Hawick, serving as its President and was politcally identified with Socialist causes. He was said to have taken a great interest in the welfare of the youth of the Town. He lived at 8 Orchard Terrace, where his niece Agnes Wood acted as his housekeeper for a few years from about 1901. He was killed by throwing himself in front of a passing express train at Bishopbriggs Station in Lanarkshire. He is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. Janet (17th/18th C.) Hawick resident who is recorded in 1725 being added to the poor list and receiving a badge allowing her to go begging. She may have been the Janet born to William and Bessie Elliot in Hawick in 1685. John (19th C.) married Betty Cowan in Castleton Parish in 1837. Joseph (1809–80) born in Langholm, son of David and Christian Jackson. He was a mason at Deanburnhaugh, being recorded there in the 1841 and 1851 censuses (in 1841 with his mother, along with David probably his brother). In 1861 was living at Wilton Dean. He married Janet Hudson in Roberton in 1832 and their children included: Jane (b.1842); Margaret and Adam (b.1844); Christian (b.1847); and David (b.1851), who was a dyker. Joseph (1864–1933) son of David and Mary Orkney. He was a saddler at 6 High Street, taking over in the 1880s from George Davies, who had been saddler there before him. He was also a bootmaker and passed the business on to his son David Orkney. He was involved with the Temperance Society in Hawick. He lived at 15 Lockhart Place. He married Janet Dick Smith (1866–1945) and their children included: David Orkney Smith (1900–72); and James Dunlop (1906–61). The family are buried in Wilton Cemetery (also spelled 'Stotherd' and 'Stothert'; see also Stoddart).

Stothart's (sto-durts) n. D.O. Stothart, sports goods, fishing tackle and toy shop at 6 High Street through most of the 20th century. The shop was a butcher's run by George Davies in the mid-19th century. It was then taken over as a saddler's by James Thomson, then by Robert and Thomas Hall and then by George Davies (junior). Joseph Stothart took over in the 1880s, continuing the saddler's business and eventually it passed to his son David, who moved out of saddlery into sports equipment, fishing tackle and toys. Len Elliot took over the business in 1971 and it closed for good in 1989, when compulsorily purchased as part of the renovations for the Tower.

stotter (sto'-ur) v. to stagger, stumble, totter – 'hei was stotterin hame as yaisual', '... but his hand from his earliest years was pervaded with a sort of nervous excitement which made it stotter (I use the Scotsch word, as more expressive)' [HSR], 'Thaye reel bak-an-forwart, an' stotter like ane drunken man ...' [HSR] (cf. steiter and stoiter).

stottin (sto'-in) adj. extremely drunk, so as to stagger about, raining so heavily that the drops are bouncing.

stour (stowr, stoor) n., arch. fuss, commotion, disturbance, hubbub – '... And the master kinket like to fa', Withe laughing at the stoure' [JTe], '... That marks the way to lordly wealth and power, He shunn'd the path, and fell 'mid hardship's stoure' [JoHa], 'Hauf o; the world is up in a stoure, Disturb'd wi' the charms o' sweet Maggie M'Givelry' [JoHa], 'Get up, my lads, and make a stour, And weel the fiddle screw!' [WH], 'But just in middle of the stour, Into the cottage sweepit A stranger' [HSR], '... amid the dust and stour of the old meal ark' [RJT], '... raisin at yeh whup a steer an a stoor, an gliffin auld folk an bairns, baith' [ECS], a storm, tempest, blizzard – 'But sic a stour I never saw, Wi' maddened elemental strife' [HSR], poet. strife, struggle, a battle, – 'Yet up he raise, the truth to tell, And laid about him dunts fu' dour: His horsemen they fought stout and snell, And stude about him in the stour' [CPM], v., arch. to bustle, rush – '... and though it gard the divots stour off the house riggins and every caber dunner ...' [EM1820] (see also the related stoor and storfully).

stourie (stow-, stoo-ree) adj., poet. dusty – 'May flowers did bloom, the skies were clear, The roads were dry an' stowrie' [JoHa], active, restless, excitable (said of a young child) – 'Cuddle doon ye stoorie loon – Ye wee croodlin' doo' [JT] (see also stoorie).

Stouslie (stooz-lee) n. farm and cottages out beyond Stirches, reached by the left hand road at the 'Fower Road Ends'. The Lindsays held these lands as Barons of Chamberlain Newton from the time of David II (late 14th century). There were Turnbulls here in the late 1400s, when the lands were a Lairdship. John Turnbull from the Borthwick was granted the lands by John, Lord Lindsay, having previously been held by William Lindsay of 'Garmilton', and Turnbull resigned them back to Lord Lindsay in 1468. Thomas 'Trumbul' of Stoiuslie was witness to a sasine in 1488. George Turnbull was recorded there in 1493 and Walter Turnbull in 1494/5. In 1494/5 Thomas and Adam Grahamslaw from Newton 'came in the King's will' for stealing 60 sheep from here; these belonged to Walter Scott of Howpasley and Walter Turnbull of Stouslie, but were also said to pertain to the King. There were Scotts living here in the 1500s. In 1506 'Stously and the five merk lands of Grundiston were valued at £5 Scots, in time of peace at six merks, and were held of the Earl of Bothwell as baron of the barony of Chamberlain-newton for one penny blench'. In the 16th century it was still part of the Barony of Chamberlain Newton, with superior being the Earls of Bothwell and then the Lords of Home. Scott of Satchells lists 'John Scott in Stowslie' as one of the 24 'Pensioners' of Buccleuch. In 1643 it was valued at £67 3s 4d, along with Boonraw ('but disjoined') and recorded as 'Stouglie [probably a transcription error for 'Stouzlie'], or Stouslie, formerly in Hassendean Parish'. It was part of the estates of the Duchess of Buccleuch by the end of the 17th century. Mary Gledstains was liferenter of this farm and another (probably Boonraw) in 1643; she was probably widow of George Scott of Boonraw. Archibald Scott was liferenter there in about 1663, when he paid tax on £91 for the land. In 1678 George Scott paid land tax on £291 for these lands, along with Boonraw. John Henderson was living there in 1682. It was leased by George Scott of Boonraw and continued by his heirs in 1692. In 1690 the lands became part of Wilton Parish when Hassendean was suppressed. David Gray was recorded there in 1694. William Henderson was there in 1706. It was surveyed in 1718 along with other properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch, when it consisted of 101 acres, bounded by Boonraw, Heap, Wilton Common and Coldhouse. Thomas Stoddart was there in 1729, William Harkness in 1730, Adam Harkness in 1732, William Nichol in 1735–37 and George Scott in 1742. Francis Stoddart died there in 1738 and Robert Scott in 1750. There are 3 buildings marked there on the 1764 map of Wilton Common; at that time it was valued at £9 13s 4d, as part of the Buccleuch estates. William Stewart was there in 1770–80. By 1788 it had been disjoined from Boonraw and was valued at £67 3s 4d. William Stewart was recorded there in 1770. The Cala Burn was the western boundary of the farm, with the farmhouse on the burns eastern side. One of the cottages was formerly a school administered by Wilton Parish. The Town Dump is nearby and recently part of the farm was turned into a glamping site – '... His staghounds still in the leash are led, As he turns his eye to the Stowhouselea' [BCM1880], 'Owre the lang brae frae Stouslie; Frae the mains o' Stirches doun; How micht I come at the day's end To the bonny Border toun?' [WL] (also spelled 'Stowslie', 'Stouslea', etc.; the origin of the name is possibly 'Stuf's wood' from the rare Old English personal name 'Stuf', plus 'leah', a wood, or perhaps from the Old English 'stybb', a tree stump; the name first appears as 'Stowislee' in about 1390; it is also 'Stowislee' in 1468, 'Stowisle' in 1488, 'stowisle' in 1493 and 1494/5, 'stowlislee' in 1494/5, 'stowisle' in 1502, 'Stouslee' in 1525, 'Stowislie' in 1551, 'Stouslie' in 1552, 'Stowslie' in 1643 and 1663, 'Stouslie' in 1678, 'Stousley' in 1692, 'Stueslie' in 1729, 'Stuslie' in 1737, 'Stuoslie' in 1742, 'stoueslie' in 1750 and it is still 'Stouslea' in 1841; it is marked 'Stowlsee' on the 1718 Buccleuch survey, 'Stously' on the 1764 map of Wilton common and 'Stously' on Stobie's 1770 map).

Stouslie Schuil (stooz-lee-skil) n. former school at Stouslie, run as a country school by the Parish of Wilton, and later by Hawick. It was founded in 1789 and a small private endowment was set up by a few of the heritors in 1838. In the 1830s it had about 50 pupils. The school was also sometimes referred to as Priestrig School (e.g. in 1803, when the salary of the Schoolmaster was set at 100 merks). In about 1790 it was written that 'the unworthy schoolmaster at Stouslea was apt at times to neglect his scholarsm and go to Hawick and get on the spree' [RJT]. Schoolmasters included William Lockie 1806–43 and David Wells in the mid-19th century. The National Archive has records relating to the period 1874–1920.

Stouslie Sike (stooz-lee-sīk) n. small stream marked 'Stously Syke' on the 1764 map of Wilton Common, lying to the northwest of Stoulie farmhouses. It is probably the stream passing Priestrig recorded on the modern Ordnance Survey map.

stouth (stooth, stowth) n., arch. theft, robbery – '... a party convicted of stealing peats, is ordained to pay the bailies £10 for each of the three 'stouths' and to go to the stocks' [DMW], '... guylty of breach of fair, and stouth committ by him out of the purse of William Elliot ...' [BR1687], 'Where wi' herry and spulzie, wi' raif and wi' stouth, We stammached our hunger and quenched our drouth' [JTe] (also spelled 'stooth').

stovies (stō-veez) n., pl. a dish made of sliced potatoes stewed with onions, occasionally with dripping or small pieces of meat added – 'oo aye liked ti hev stovies wi oor haggis' (short for 'stoved potatoes').

stow (stow) v., poet. to crop, trim, especially as a mark of ownership – 'Grief's stow'd the feathers o' her wing, Her heart's like lead' [JoHa], n., arch. a slice, piece cut – 'A cut or slice; pron. stoo' [JoJ].

Stow (stow) n. town on the Gala Water, near the Moorfoot Hills, in the old county of Midlothian, and now in the Scottish Borders region. It is roughly half-way between Hawick and Edinburgh, and was a station on the Waverley Line. The road to Edinburgh via Stow (later the A7) was only opened in 1818, after which it has become well-known to all Teries. The settlement was once known as 'Stow of Wedale'. Formerly one of Scotland's original seats of sanctuary, it was also the Bishop of St. Andrews summer residence. The ruined Old Kirk (late 15th century, having been repaired in the 17th century) replaced an older church of 1242 and an even older one allegedly built by King Arthur, and holding a piece of the 'true cross'. An ancient broch, Bow Castle and the 1654–55 Pack-horse Bridge are nearby. The town probably achieved burgh status in 1699. Population (1991) 528 – 'Syne, up on the tap, wi' a thankfu' sigh, That its wark was gey weel throwe, Like a het-fit callant chased on by a whulp, It cam scamperin' doon to Stow' [WL].

Stow (stō) n. John (c.1525–1605) English historian. From humble beginnings he published several influential works, including editions of Chaucer, Chronicles of England and a Survey of London, although he remained poor all his life. His Chronicle contains the story of Hawick's residents burning the thatch from their roofs before a visit by Sussex and his men in 1570.

stowed oot (stowd-oo') adj. full to overflowing, stuffed to the gunnels.

St. Quentin Strip (sin'-kwen-tin-strip) n. plantation to the southwest of Riddell, north of Boosmill. The name may be connected with St. Qunitegern's Fountain or else the forename Quentin formerly used by the Riddells of Riddell.

St. Quintegern's Fountain (sin'-kwin-ti-gernz-fown-tin) n. former name for a spring in Lilliesleaf recorded in the Register of Sasines in 1816. Given that the kirk there appears to have been dedicated to St. Mungo (also called 'Kentigern') it seems likely this was a spring near the church, perhaps one of the springs marked in Lilliesleaf Moss on modern maps. It may also be the place once knownas the 'Kirsenin Well'.

Strachan (straw-chin) n. Henry (15th C.) witness to the charter of James Scott of Kirkurd, granting Galalaw to his son David in 1494. He is recorded as 'Henrico Strathauchin'. Rev. In 1711 he was living 'with James Bell in Cavers But his Wife in Wiltoun burn'. His children included: Marion (b.1711); and James (b.1714). James (b.1778/9) from Elgin, he was a shopkeeper on the Crescent, listed in Pigot's 1837 directory. In 1841 he was a handloom weaver, living at about 13 Slitrig Crescent with his wife Jane. In 1851 he was on the Kirkgate with his niece Elizabeth and a lodger. Rev. James (1783–1840) son of William, minister of Coulter, he was educated at Edinburgh University and licensed by the Presbytery of Biggar in 1805. He was assistant to Thomas Elliot of Cavers at some point and was himself presented as minister by George Douglas of Cavers in early 1809. He stayed there until his death. He was described as having 'integrity of principle, uprightness of mind, straightforwardness of purpose ... and an uncompromising detestation of everything mean and dishonourable' and his sermons were said to be particularly well-conceived, strong and elegant. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He married Jane Brown, daughter of the minister of Crailing. Their children were: William (1820–97), in H.M. Stationary Office; Janet Dawson (1821–1837); David (b.1823); a daughter who died young; James (b.1831), an army officer; Elizabeth Howison (b.1833); and Robert (b.1835). He wrote a description of the Parish of Cavers in 1839 (finished off by Henry Scott Riddell) for the New Statistical Account. 2 sermons preached on his death by David Stevenson, minister of Wilton, were published in 1840. Rev. James Carson (1917–89) born in Edinburgh, son of Alexander and Margaret Maxwell Craik. He was educated at Maybole and Edinburgh University (1935–41), where he graduated M.A. and B.D. Straiton (strā'-in) n. John (18th/19th C.) currier in Hawick. In 1795 he witnessed a baptism for William Wilson, his brother-in-law. In 1797 his surname is 'Stratton' when his employee James Elliot' was listed among the men in Hawick on the ballot to serve in the Militia. In 1790 he married Agnes, younger daughter of Walter Wilson. Their children included: John (b.1791), who was a teacher in Haddington; Walter (b.1793); Oliver (b.1794), who had a hat shop in Dalkeith and lived for a while in Hawick; Catherine (b.1796); Margaret (b.1798); Betty (b.1799); Ann (b.1801); and William. The witnesses in 1795 were merchants William Wilson (his brother-in-law) and George Turnbull (who was married to his wife's sister). He could be the John, son of Peter 'Straiten', born in Lilliesleaf in 1762. Oliver (b.1794) son of John and Agnes Wilson. He ran a hat shop in Dalkeith, and it is said he would regularly walk from there to Hawick, where he visited his relatives and may have purchased hats from William and James Wilson. He lost his money through bank failure and later moved to Hawick, living in the house of William Wilson. It was said that he 'had a scientific and literary turn of mind, and although most attentive and industrious, and very methodical in his habits, he did not possess much business aptitude'. Surely the same Oliver was living on Wellington Street in 1871 when he donated to the Museum a German coin. Peter (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf. He married Elizabeth Oliver, and their children included: Peter (b.1759); John (b.1762); William (b.1764); Janet (b.1766); a son with indecipherable name (b.1768); and Elizabeth (b.1771). Peter (18th C.) paid the cart tax in Lilliesleaf Parish in 1785, when his name is listed as 'Straton'. He is probably the Peter, son of Peter, born in Lilliesleaf in 1759 (also written 'Stracton', 'Straiten' and 'Straton').

Strang (strang) n. William (17th C.) servant to Walter Earl of Buccleuch. He was listed in the deceased Earl's inventory in 1633, when he was owed for his annual fee. It is unclear if he was a servant at Branxholme or in Edinburgh or elsewhere.

Strange (strānj) n. name used in the 19th century (as described by Jeffreys) for the land between the Rule and Jed valleys, which was formerly 'Strynds', possessed by the Olivers in the 15th and 16th centuries. Walter Turnbull was there in 1682. John was recorded as tenant there in 1689. The residents recorded on the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls were George Oliver and John Oliver. William Strange was a mole-catcher there in 1799. The location is marked on Stobie's 1770 map, and can be seen in aerial photographs, near a fork in the stream and just to the east of a small pond (it is 'Strang' in 1694; see also Strynds, Strangeburnfit and Strangeburnheid; the pronunciation may have been strīnj, evolving from 'strynds').

Strangeburnfit (strānj-burn-fi') n. former farmstead in Abbotrule Parish. It is recorded in 1774 when there were Sintons there.

Strangeburnheid (strānj-burn-heed) n. former farmstead between the Rule and Jed valleys. It lay between Burnbrae and Ashtrees, and is marked on Stobie's 1770 map as just 'Strange'. It is unclear which stream this corresponds to on modern maps, but probably the branch of the Rule Burn, on the north side of the road between Ruletownhead and Westerhouses. The land here was once 'Stryndis', a home of the Olivers. It was probably called the 'burnhead' to distinguish it from a later farmstead built at Strangeburnfit (see Strange).

strangel (strawng-ul) v. to strangle – 'come here so A can strangel ee' (also spelled 'strangul'; note no hard g sound).

Struthers (stru-thurz) n. Alan (14th C.) from the Northumberland family, he became Lord of Lyham through marriage. He was English Sheriff of Roxburgh in at least 1368–70. The lands he held included the Hawick in Northumberland. In about 1370 he was 'Alano de le Strother' when he witnessed a grant by John Neville of lands in Lessuden to Melrose Abbey. His children included Alan (contemporary of Chaucer at Cambridge), Henry, William (married a daughter of the Mayor of Newcastle) and Joan. Sir Thomas (d.1395) probably son of Henry, who was Sheriff of Northumberland. He was likely to be the Sir Thomas 'of Strother' whose charters are included in the collection of David Laing (although that does not match with a death in 1395). He was appointed custodian of Jedburgh Castle in 1394. He was reputedly an English champion, who was marauding around the Scottish Borders, bragging that he would take on any Scotsman. The challenge was met by Sir William Inglis (then of Branxholme) at Rulehaugh, witnessed by Archibald, Earl of Douglas and Henry Percy, Earl of Northumberland. Struthers was killed in single combat it is said. Other accounts describe how Inglis' force had attempted to breach the Castle walls and after being repelled when the English soldiers returned from the town, he challenged Inglis to single combat for breaking the truce (also written 'Strother' etc.).

Strynds (strindz) n. former lands in the Rule valley, near Westerhouses, later known as 'Strange'. This was home of a prominent branch of the Oliver family in the late 15th and early 16th centuries. Robert Oliver from there, along with 7 other Olivers and a Shiel, had remission in 1494/5 for the crime of communing with the English. Several members of the same family had remission for thefts and other crimes in 1502 in a number of cases. Later in 1502 4 Olivers from here were all found guilty of rieving crimes and probably hanged. This branch was said to never have been heard of again, although it was supposedly related to the later Olivers of Lustruther. The lands were valued along with Westerhouses at £6 5s, according to the Exchequer Rolls in 1538 (and the comptroller was allowed the 'fermes' from there for that year), as well as 1539. Edward Oliver was there in 1541, when the rent was 15 shillings. There were still Olivers there in the late 17th century (also 'the Strynds'; it is written 'le stryndis' in 1494/5, 'Stryndis' and 'Stryndes' in 1502, 'Stryndis' and 'Strydis' in 1538, 'Stridis' in 1539 and 'Strydis' in 1541; the origin is probably the Old Scots word for rivulets; see also Strange).

St. Stephen's Chaipel (sin'-stee-vinz-chā-pul) n. Roman Catholic Chapel built in 1962 on Burnfoot Road (at the corner with Fairhurst Drive) to serve the Burnfoot area. The building has a novel triangular design with a high slender spire. In 1986 it was closed as a chapel, declared surplus to requirements and in 1988 sold by the Archdiocese to the Abundant Life Church.

Stuart (stew-ur') n. Rev. John (1865–1930) born in Fife-Keith, son of John Macpherson and Elizabeth Wright. He was educated in Aberdeen, graduated M.A. in 1887 and B.D. in 1890, and was licensed by the Presbytery there the same year. He became assistant at St. Clement's Parish (Aberdeen) and then at Selkirk before becoming minister of Kirkton in 1892, where he remained until his death. In about 1900 he complained about the state of Kirkton Manse and the money he had personally spent to renovate and redecorate it. He acted as Chaplain for Stobs Military Camp 1903–12; despite this, he complained in several letters around 1921 that the Army had not paid the teinds from Stobs. Rev. John Thomson (b.1928) born in Aberdeen, son of John Thomson and Elen Hay Petrie. He was educated in Aberdeen, graduating M.A. in 1957. He was assistant minister at Drumchapel St. Andrew's in 1957–58, licensed by Aberdeen Presbytery in 1957 and ordained as minister of Glasgow Auldfield in 1958. He demitted his charge on joining the Royal Army Chaplains' Department in 1961. In 1978 he became minister of Denholm, Minto and Bedrule, and remained until 1984, when he moved to Duffus, Spynie and Hopeman. He retired in 1993. In 1957 he married Audrey (1933–73), daughter of James Edward Duguid Thomson and their children were Graham (b.1959) and Jennifer (b.1966). In 1978 he secondly married Elsie Mary (b.1930), daughter of John Wink Ogilvie, who brought children Alison, Simon, Alexander and Sarah (see also Stewart).

the Subscription Academy (thu-sub-skrip-shin-aw-ka-du-mee) n. another name for Hawick Academy. There was a school run out of the Subscription Rooms from about 1830, sometimes referred to as the Subscription School. It was renamed 'the Subscription Academy' in 1857 when J.A.H. Murray was invited to be headmaster (at age 17!). Not long after the school moved along Buccleuch Street to the former Quaker meeting house, and was then called 'Hawick Academy'. It ran until 1865, after Murray had left for London. The 'Subscription School' meanwhile carried on with James C. Mudie as headmaster. Sometimes called 'Hawick High School', this ran until about 1874, when Mudie left town. Meanwhile Mudie's assistant, James Brand, had left to start his own school in Union Street, which eventually became the senior part of the High School (the confusion and interconnection between the several Buccleuch Street schools makes some accounts very muddled!).

the Subscription Rooms (thu-sub-skrip-shin-roomz) n. building erected on Buccleuch Street in 1821 from public subscriptions, and used as an institute for the arts, as a library and as a public meeting place. The location is shown on Wood's 1824 map. The foundation stone was laid with full Masonic honours, with a speech by Robert 'Lurgie' Wilson and a special verse by James Ruickbie. For the next few decades it was a popular venue for lectures, 'magic lantern' shows, concerts and related social gatherings. It was also used as the location for a private Academy, taught by Mr. Fleming 1837–40. Later it was rented to the Commercial Inn, although the main hall continued to be used for concerts etc. A particular event was a set of plays performed over 9 days by a company of actors (led by Burns Bryson, Keeley Halswelle and Gus Blake) from Edinburgh in October 1856, immortalised in the book 'Noctes Hawickianæ'. About 1864 it was sold to Mr. Mudie, who used it to run his private school, called 'Hawick High School', which was later taught by Mr. Brand, who moved to Union Street. It was also used for a while as the premises for the 'West-end Academy', taught by Mr. Brodie. In the 1890s it was purchased by James Bonsor's hosiery mill who used it until the 1920s. It was then purchased by the Catholic church and converted (largely through voluntary work) to become the Halls for S.S. Mary & David's Chapel next door. Until only a few years ago it had a frontage ornamented with a portico supported by 4 Grecian pillars. It was renovated in the early years of the 21st century and saw temporary use again as a school in 2006, housing pupils following the fire in Denholm – 'This house a public building is design'd To gratify the curious mind; Subservient to the parson and the player, By turns a theatre, and a house of prayer' [JR].

the Subscription Schuil (thu-sub-skrip-shin-skil) n. name used in the earlier part of the 19th century for the private school based at the Subscription Rooms (see also the Subscription Academy).

Summerfield (su-mur-feeld) n. Victorian villa between Ladylaw and Mayfield, now split into Summerfield East and Summerfield West. It is reached up Rosalee Brae, being the big house on the right. It was probably home to manufacturer James Veitch in the early 20th century.

Summers (su-murz) n. Adam (d.1808) clogger in Hawick. He married Isabel (or Helen) Currie in 1789, the marriage being recorded in both Hawick and Cavers parishes, his wife being from Cavers. Their children included: John (b.1790); Thomas (b.1792); and Isabel (b.1794). The witnesses in 1794 were the 'Associate Congregation'. His name is also given as 'Summer' and 'Sumors'. John (18th/19th C.) writer (i.e. lawyer) in Hawick who subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He could be the writer in Edinburgh, whose daughter Eliza married James Drummond of Comrie, W.S., in 1792. He is probably the clerk to the Town Clerk John Oliver who was one of the reform-minded men who met regularly in the upstairs room of Robert Wilson (although listed as 'George Somers' by Walter Wilson in 1874).

summond (su-mind) v., arch. to summon, particularly in the legal sense – '. . . for somonding of divers and sundry of the trade of weivers before ane oyr judge qu. the Baylyeas' [BR1684], 'The beddal was ordered to summond to ye next meeting of ye Session James Crow in Branxholm for breach of Sabbath' [PR1712], 'The Beddall was ordered to summond Robert Eliot eldest lawful son to Francis Eliot . . . He married Margaret Flemington and their children included: Margaret (b.1787); Joanna (b.1787); Ann (b.1793); and Alexander (b.1798). His son William died in Hawick in 1798. Perhaps the same Mark secondly married Janet Crow in Hawick in 1800.

Sunderland Hall (sun-dur-lind-hawl) n. mansion on the south side of the Tweed, near where it meets the Ettrick. This was probably the 'Sonderland' granted to Sir James Douglas after Bannockburn; it was stated to be in the Barony of Hawick, although that was presumably an error. The Shaws, who were schoolmaster and minister of Selkirk held the annual rent in the early 17th century. It was the home of the Kerrs, later the Plummers, and then the Scott-Plummers, who were descended from the Scotts of Woll. It was listed among the principal houses of Selkirkshire in an account of 1649 ('Sunderlandhal', 'Sunderlandwood' and 'Sunderlandtoun' are all marked on Gordon's c.1650 map).

sundert (sun-dur') pp., adj. sundered – 'We've wandert mony a mile And fer oor steps hae sundert . . . ' [DH] (also sindert).

Sundhope (sun-dup) n. former farmstead on the Sundhope Burn, above Whitropefoot. It was valued at 8 merks according to a rental roll of c.1376 and still 8 merks on the 1541 roll, when 'Leoni Elwald' and his brothers were tenants. The farm was owned by the Scotts of Buccleuch from at least 1613. Robert 'Houiton' and Adam 'Houitone' are listed there in 1694, as well as George Nichol. It was surveyed for the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1718, when it extended to 1654 acres, bounded by Stitchelhill, Millburnholm and lands held by the Laird of Gorrenberry and others. At that time the farmhouse is shown in the same position as the modern one. It was tenanted by the Grieves of Branxholme Park for several generations. Robert Elliot was tenant in 1748 and Robert Hutton also lived there. It was listed among the farms of the Duke of Buccleuch being let by public roup in Hawick in 1755. John Anderson was farmer there in 1785. James Jackson was shepherd there in 1797, James Elliot and Ninian Scott in 1799, Ninian Elliot in 1801, Walter Anderson in 1835 and Andrew Rodger in 1851. It was held by James Raymond Johnstone of Alva in 1802, when valued at about £500 (including Hollandrig and 'Sandbed of Sundhope'. There are waterfalls on the burn there. 5 flints found nearby are in Hawick Museum. North of the farmstead, towards Sundhope Rig, there is a linear earthwork, about 130 m long – 'Whut'rope and Sundhope They ken the soond weel; It's nae news to thaim That he troks wi the deil' [DH] (it first appears as 'Sondayhop' in c.1376, is 'Sondhope' in 1510, 'Sandhop' in 1516, 'Soundhop' in 1541 and 'Soundhope' in 1613 and 1799; the stream is marked 'Soundhoupp' on Blaeu's 1654 map, while the farm is 'Soundhope' on Gordon's c.1650 map and 'Sandhope' on Stobie's 1770 map).

Sundhope (sun-dup) n. farm in the Yarrow valley, where the burn of the same name meets the Yarrow from the south, just to the west of Yarrow Feus. It was a Crown property from about 1456, with the lease to the Laird of Alemoor being given up in 1488, when it was let to 'Robert domino Lile' in 1488. Then it was let half to William Murray and half to Roger Murray from at least 1490 until 1499. In 1493 Alexander, brother of Robert Scott of Whames, was accused of stealing livestock from there, and John Waugh also stole a large number of sheep from the Murrays. In 1494/5 Robert Turnbull in Castlehill (near Branxholme) was charged with stealing 15 score sheep from the Murrays there. It remained Crown property until at least 1502. In 1512 it was feued to Gavin Murray. In 1541 William Scott was tenant there, paying £14, while William and James Murray also appear to have occupied it, paying £24. A 1649 description of Selkirkshire states that 'Sundhope Burn flows from Sundhope Edge and falls into Yaro foreanent the Catislake [Catslack] at the foot of Sundhope'. William Scott was tenant there in the first half of the 18th century. There were Andersons and Laidlaws there in the 19th century. It was said to be the site of the slaying of Scott of Harden's younger son, Scott of Gilmanscleuch – 'But, low, low down, on Sundhop broom, My brother Harden spyd; And, with a stern and furious look, He up to him did ride' [ES]; 'Ere all is done, our blood may soak Our Scottish houms, and leave a stain – A stain like that on Sundup's cloak, Which never will wash out again' [ES] (it is 'Sundhop' in 1456 and 1468, 'Sondhoip' in 1490, 'Sundhop' in 1496, 'Sondhop' and 'Sondhoip' in 1499 and 'Soundhope' in 1541; it is 'Soundhope' and 'Soundhop' on Gordon's c.1650 maps and 'Soundhoope' on Blaeu's c.1654 map).

Sundhope Burn (sun-dup-burn) n. stream in Castleton Parish. It rises on Sundhope Rig and Greatmoor and flows roughly sounthwards to join the Whitrope Burn near Whitropefoot.

Sundhope Faas (sun-dup-fawz) n. waterfall on the Sundhope Burn, near where it meets the Whitrope Burn on the Newcastleton road, about 12 miles south of Hawick. It has been a favourite picnic spot. It is also known as the Laird's Linn.

Sundi (sun-di) n. Sunday. Formerly there were strict rules about what behaviour was deemed suitable for the Sabbath. Work of any sort was banned, and there are fines frequently recorded in the parish records for transactions such as pulling vegetables. Certainly non-attendance at church was considered disreputable until fairly recent times, and regaular non-attendance was a serious matter in the 18th century. Up until the mid-19th century even walking on Sundays was considered an offence (also spelled 'Sundih' etc.).

sundials (sun-dI-ulz) n., pl. devices that use the shadow of a gnomon, cast by the Sun, to tell the time of day. These were common ornamentation on buildings or in gardens around the 17th and 18th centuries. The Museum has 3 local specimens, which have been saved from demolitions, inscribed: '17 WK 48', from a demolished house in the High Street, donated by 'Mrs E. Wilson' in 1865; '1823', from Dickson Street; and 'BC BT 1756'. There was also one from Francis Gledstains of Whitlaw, dated 1693 and a 'slab bearing a sundial' from St. Mary's Kirk was described in 1863. In addition there are (or were) sundials at Harden, Lilliesleaf Kirk (dated 1642 and repurposed as a baptismal font), Synton Parkhead, Weens, Wells and Yarrow Kirk.

Sundi-mense (sun-di-mens) n., arch. 'ti gie yin's claes Sundi-mense' is to attend church in one's new clothes on the first Sunday after one gets them (also kirk-mense).

Sundi Schuil (sun-di-skil) n. Sunday School, i.e. religious instruction for school children taking place on Sundays. Hawick already had 2 such institutions in 1786 and was among the first to establish them in Scotland. The first was probably introduced by Rev. Charters of Wilton, followed shortly afterwards by Rev. Sharp of Hawick (however, it is sometimes also stated that William Crawford of Wilton introduced the first Sunday School in the 1730s). It was recorded in 1792 that the Wilton heritors wanted the Schoolmaster to open a school there. In 1802 it was reported that within Jedburgh Presbytery there was one (dissenting) school in Jedburgh and one that failed in Cavers. Around 1817 the town became well-known in the Borders for very popular Sunday Schools, which had been set up by Rev. James Henderson of the East-End Burgher congregation. David Russell of the Relief Kirk also set one up at about the same time. These early examples often lasted for many hours, but were about the only chance to learn reading, which many local children benefited from. Henderson's Sunday School is sometimes said to have been the first in Scotland, and although this is clearly not correct, it may have been an early example of an ambitious educational programme on Sundays (rather than a shorter event aimed at children). Sunday Schools have continued in most of the town's churches down to the present time – 'Sunday Schule picnics then Horse and cairt ti Harden Glen . . . ' [IWL].

sung (sung) adj., pp., arch. singed – '. . . Brunt broun in the sun and near sung' [WL].

Sun Hope (sun-hōp) n. small stream that rises on Sunhope Hass, Bye Hill and Little Tudhope Hill on the Roxburghshire border with Dumfriesshire and forms some of the headwaters of the Frostlie Burn.

sunket (sun-ki') n., arch. a lazy fellow (noted by J. Jamieson).

sunk-pocks (sunk-poks) n., pl., arch. bags tied to the 'sunks' on the back of a horse or ass.

Sunlaws (sun-lawz) n. settlement on the Teviot south of Kelso, containing the Jacobean-style mansion called Sunlaws House Hotel (or Roxburghe Hotel), with adjacent golf course, an abandoned Mill and nearby caves. As part of the English invasion of 1544 there was 'a town called Synlawes, whereat divers bastel houses were destroyed, eight Scots taken, and 60 oxen brought away', with at least 6 men killed in attempting to pursue the raiders. The estate of Sunlaws was home of the Kerrs of Chatto and Sunlaws. The house burned down in 1720 (the origin is probably 'the look-out hill'; it is 'Sunlaes' on Blaeu's c.1654 map).

sunlicht (sun-licht) n., arch. sunlight – 'Sunlicht at last, and the dancin' day, and a quick eyed lass to see' [JYH], 'Oh, laddie! when sunlicht Is ower your young way, Fu' bricht wi' sweet promise O' manhood's fair day' [MNR], '. . . Wi' rowth o' callants in her train And sunlicht in her hair' [WL].

Sunnybank (su-nee-bawngk) n. cottage in Wilton Parish, just north of Tandlaw. Walter Blake, thatcher, lived there in 1841, as well as farm worker Richard Turnbull and his family. Walter Scott was there in at least 1835–41, Henry Paterson in 1851 and William Scott in 1861.

Sunnyfield (su-nee-feeld) n. bungalow on Sunnyhill Road, built in 1955.

Sunnyhill (su-nee-hil) n. area between Wilton and the Dean, consisting of Sunnyhill Road and surrounding region, containing mainly larger houses. The name was earlier also applied to the Rosalee Brae area. It was named apparently for its aspect with respect to the Sun. The area was feued in the latter part of the 19th century under the supervision of John Guthrie. Langlands was the first house about 1878, followed quickly by Deanfield, Kilmeny and Westwood – 'Here the tree-clad slopes rise upward From the water's sparkling rill, Where clematis and laburnum Deck the homes on Sunnyhill' [WL], '. . . in the days afore the nouveau riche manufacturers became upwardly mobile in mair ways than yin and built their mansions on Sunnyhill' [IWL].

the Sunnyhill Cornets (thu-su-nee-hil-kōrnitz) n. nickname given to the series of Cornets who were sons of mill owners around the early years of the 20th century.

Sunnyhill Road (su-nee-hil-rōd) n. main road in the Sunnyhill area, named because the houses are mainly south-facing.

Sunnyside (su-nee-sīd) n. name for one of the newer houses in Sunnyhill, specifically on Dean Road. William Burns was living there in the early 1900s.

Sunnyside (su-nee-sīd) n. farm just east of Ormiston, about 2 miles from Hawick. Robert Murray was there in 1795 and William Veitch and John Beattie in 1801. William Burns was there in 1906. It may have been called Ormiston Mains before the 19th century. A story is told about Burgh Officer Caleb Rutherford making a visit there in the early 1800s, to sequester the property, with the farmer's wife offering hospitality to Rutherford and then claiming she had poisoned him to send him rushing back to Hawick (it is 'Sunniside' in 1801; it is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Sunnyside (su-nee-sīd) n. street that runs along the back of the Green in Denholm, with houses facing towards the south. From 1966–86 the post office was located there.

Surrey (su-ree) n. name often used for Thomas Howard, Earl of Surrey (1473–1554) English nobleman who fought at Flodden and was later made Duke of Norfolk. After his victory, and knowing that the Borders forces had been devastated, he split up his troops to carry out raids, with Lord Dacre plundering and killing across Teviotdale. In a bizarre coincidence, at Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee in London, the Hawick Volunteers were met by the Surrey Rifles, whose headquarters was in Flodden Road! – 'After Flodden was decided, Surrey half his troops divided' [JH], 'When the spirit, bruised and bleeding From the shock of Surrey's blow, Crushed and mangled past all heeding Aught on earth save Scotland's woe' [TK], 'For yet the thought o't harrows, Whiel memory endures, A curse on Surrey's arrows, that sped oor Forest Floo'rs' [JBS], 'Didst thou not hear the din above thy grave, When full of Flodden's pride victorious Surrey Swept far o'er Teviotdale with slaughters' wave, And threatened Hawick in blood and fire to bury?' [JAHM] (note that the force that devastated Teviotdale in 1570 is sometimes erroneously connected with 'Surrey', while in fact it was led by 'Sussex').

heided for the ferthest tollbar frae his hoose on Pickin' Night' [BW1995].

Sutherland (su-thur-lind) n. Alexander (b.1798) stockingmaker in Wilton Dean, son of Mark. In 1841 he was living on Burn Row and by 1851 his widow was there with 2 of their children. He married Mary Kerr in 1814 and their children included: Mark (b.1814); Margaret (b.1816); Ann (b.1818); James (b.1821); Janet; Helen; Isabella; Mary; and Walter. Alexander (b.1859) son of Walter, he worked in the hosiery industry. The family lived at Maxwell Street, Wellington Street, Myreslawgreen and Beaconsfield Terrace. In 1900 he became proprietor of the Imperial Hotel on Oliver Place. He married his cousin Isabella Riddell in 1880 and their children included: James (or 'Jimmy'), who was Cornet in 1901; Isabella (b.1881); Mary; Thomas; Alexander; Walter (1890–1918), Hawick and Scotland rugby player; and John (1892–93), who died of whooping cough. He may be the Alexander, married to Janet Maben, whose daughter Christina was born in Wilton in 1891. David (19th/20th C.) married Jane Murray. Their children, born in Hawick, included: David (b.1891). Donald (19th C.) married Agnes Marshall in Wilton Parish in 1867. George (19th C.) married Sarah Laird. Their children, born in Hawick, included: James (b.1874). Rev. George (b.1902) born at Wick, son of Peter Alexander. He was educated at Wick Academy and High School and then Edinburgh University. He was a student assistant minister at Edinburgh St. Berbard's South 1929–30 and was licensed by the Presbytery of Caithness. He was ordained in late 1930 as minister of St. Andrew's Kirk in Hawick. He moved to Glasgow Belhaven in 1940. In 1930 he married Elsie Bruce. James 'Jimmy' (19th/20th C.) son of Alexander and brother of rugby player Walter. He was Cornet in 1901. He led his supporters on the first ride-out to Mosspaul and J.E.D. Murray was his Acting Father. James (b.1820/1) frameworker in the Dean, son of Alexander. In 1841 he was living on Burn Row, in 1851 at No. 6 there and in 1861 probably in the same place. He married Isabella Cairns in 1845 and their children included Isabella, Mary, Jessie, Alexander and Helen (b.1857). John (19th C.) married Isabella Simpson in Hawick in 1864. Mark (18th C.) stockingmaker in Hawick. He married Margaret Flemington and their children included: Margaret (b.1787); Joanna (b.1789); Ann (b.1793); and Alexander (b.1798). The witnesses in 1787 were shoemaker Robert Elliot and workman Thomas Thomson and in 1789 were shoemaker Robert Oliver and farmer William Scott. Probably the same Mark married Janet Crow in Hawick in 1800. Norman J. (b.c.1890) son of Galashiels monumental mason George P. He ran the Hawick office of the family firm, with premises on Bridge Street. He was District Commissioner of the Boy Scouts. In his honour the local Scouts pipe band adopted the Sutherland tartan in 1953. Robert (19th C.) married Margaret Pratt. Their son David was born in Wilton in 1881. Rory (1992–) born in Melrose, he was educated at Trinity and the High School. He represented the Borders and Scotland in the back row of youth teams, but switched to playing loose-head prop with Hawick R.F.C. Afterwards he played for Biggar and Gala and then professionaly for Edinburgh from 2014. He was first capped for Scotland in 2016 and was named to the British Lions squad in 2021. Walter Kerr (1838/9–1902) born in Wilton, son of Alexander, he worked in the hosiery trade. In 1861 he was a 'Finisher of Hosiery' at 12 Back Row. He was also listed as a warehouseman and frame knitter. He married Ann, daughter of Thomas Scott and Ademine Bellom, and she died in 1902. Their children included: Alexander (b.1859); Adelina (or 'Adeline', 1861–1919); Thomas Scott (b.1863); Elizabeth Fiddes (b.1865), who married John Scott in 1888; Mary (b.1865); James (b.1871); Adam (b.1873); Ann Scott (b.1875); and Helen Leithead (b.1878). He may be the 'Mr Sutherland, Dyer' who donated a Canadian banknote to the Museum in 1863. Walter Riddell 'Wattie' or 'Suddie' (1890–1918) youngest son of Alexander and Isabella of the Imperial Hotel. He was educated at Teviot Grove Academy. He was a member of the Teviotdale Harriers, being Border Champion over 100 and 220 yards, and was part of the team that won the 1 mile relay at the Common-Riding Games of 1910. He also won the Scottish Amateur Athletic Association 220 yards title and represented Scotland. He played wing for Hawick R.F.C. from the age of 17, his first game being against Gala. He excelled at Sevens, being part of the 1912 team that won all 5 Border tournaments. He went on to become Captain of Hawick. He played for Scotland from the age of 18, his first cap being Willie Kyle's last, and went on to be capped 13 times. On the outbreak of WWI he joined the Lothian and Border Horse, transferring to the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders and later to the Seaforth Highlanders, where he became 2nd Lieutenant. He was killed by a stray shell in October 1918, in the last days of the War. Afterwards his position on the Scotland team was taken by Eric Liddle – '. . . Or swerve like a Sutherland down the line to a rattling Mansfield score' [JYH] (also formerly 'Southerland').

Sutter (su'-ur) n. William (17th/18th C.) 'packeman traveller' recorded in Hawick in 1707. He was rebuked for being in the house of Richard Lethem at the time of Sunday serice, 'with one pair of leather breaches and some harness under his oukster'.

Suttie (su-tee, su'-ee) n. Dr. Alastair (1938–2001) born in Enniskillen, he grew up in Moray, where his father was a vet. He qualified in Medicine at Aberdeen University in 1961. He came to Hawick after holding various posts in the north of Scotland. He joined Bill Cameron as a general practitioner in 1964, and remained in practice in Hawick until he retired in 1998. During that time he ran a training practice, and helped to develop the Health Centre. He wrote the 'History of Haig Maternity Hospital' (1999) and made a photographic study of bridges over the Teviot. Married to Gillian, their daughter Alison worked for the Liberal Democratic Party. Alison Mary (1968–) daughter of Dr. Alastair, she attended Hawick High School, and then read French and Russian at Heriot-Watt University. After graduation she worked in Russia and then for the European Parliament. In the period 2006–10 she was Head of the Liberal Democrat Leader's Office and was the party's Campaign Manager in 2010, as well as being coordinator of their negotiating team after the 2010 election results produced a hung parliament. She then became a Special Adviser to Deputy Prime Minister Nick Clegg. In 2013 she was created a life peer as Baroness Suttie of Hawick. Euphemia see Eppy Sootie.

Swamp Field (swawmp-feeld) n. name for the field on the Common just to the south of the race-course.

Swan (swawn) n. Alexander (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Patish. He married Elspeth Henderson and their children included: Francis (b.1817); Margaret (b.1819); William (b.1822); Walter (b.1824); Thomas (b.1826); George (b.1828); Alexander (b.1830); and Archibald (b.1832). Elizabeth 'Bessie' (17th C.) listed as merchant among those contributing to the new Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. She was also on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick 'eist the water' in 1694. She seems likely to have been a shopkeeper (or similar) on the High Street. She could be the daughter of George and Margaret Bridges born in Hawick in 1642 or the daughter of Mungo and Helen Bridges born in 1672. George (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish who was married to Margaret Bridges. Their son John was born in 1643. George (18th C.) weaver in Hawick. He married Rebecca Scott. Their children included: Jean (b.1735); John (b.1737); and Rebecca (b.1741), who was the 2nd wife of Bailie John Hardie. The witnesses in 1737 were merchant James Sanderson and writer Thomas Watson and in 1741 were Thomas Watson and merchant Charles Tudhope. He witnessed baptisms in 1757 for weaver John Thorburn, in 1764 for John Hardie and his daughter Rebecca and in 1768 for mason William Ekron and Betty Dobie. He could be the George Swan who witnessed a baptism for Francis Cairns in 1783. Isabel (b.c.1760) listed as a shopkeeper in Pigot's 1837 directory. By 1841 she was a pauper, living around Eastgate. James (17th/18th C.) weaver in Hawick. He is recorded in 1698 as a witness in the assault case involving John Scott, litster, and ex-Bailie Robert Wright. It is possible that his forename is an error for 'John'. James (b.1834) born in Earlston, son of John and Isabella Shiels. He was a grocer in Hawick. In 1861 he was a grocer and spirit merchant at 29 (later 27) High Street. He is probably the grocer called Swan who had a piggery in a yard on Orrock Place. He is mentioned having a yard behind the Museum in Orrock Place in the court case for the Museum robbery of 1865. He emigrated with his family to Detroit, where his son Andrew was involved with the Detroit Gas Company and his son James was a successful lawyer. He may be the James who donated a Chinese coin to the Museum sometime before 1865. He married Isabella Tatlor (from Loanhead) and their children included Agnes (b.1857), Isabella (b.1859), Andrew (b.1860), Euphemia Taylor (b.1862), James (b.1864) and William Taylor (b.1866). John (16th C.) listed in 1534 when he was a witness at Hassendean Kirk for the sealing of a letter of reversion when Gavin Elliot sold the lands of Nether Galalaw to William Scott. It is unclear if he was from Hawick, Hassendean or Selkirk (in whose Protocol Books the record appeared). John (16th C.) recorded in Hassendeanburn in 1580, when he acted as cautioner for Robert Scott of Alton when he borrowed money from the servant of Margaret Douglas, Countess of Bothwell. He may have been related to the earlier John. John (17th C.) married to Margaret Scott. Their children born in Hawick Parish included: Jane (b.1676); Mungo (b.1682); and Helen (b.1685). In 1676 he was listed being 'in Cavers' (suggesting he lived in the Teviothead area perhaps), with witnesses William and Mungo (who were surely close relatives). He may be the same as John 'Elder'. John (17th C.) listed as 'Elder' in 1694 among those 'uest the water' in Hawick on the Hearth Tax rolls. The younger John was also listed, suggesting that they were father and son. The pair were also weavers 'younger' and 'elder' recorded among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He was 'older' in 1700 when he witnessed a baptism for weaver John Jolly. John 'Nuckle' (17th C.) Hawick weaver on the 1693/4 subscribers' list for the new Kirk bell. He must have been separate from the elder and younger weavers who were also listed. It is unclear what his nickname meant. John (17th/18th C.) quartermaster of the Hawick weavers. In 1697 there was a case before the Magistrates dealing with Robert Tinlin, a young weaver, who had insulted him publicly, and refused to pay a fine imposed by the incorporation of weavers. He was also quartermaster in 1705 when the incorporation passed an act to prohibit any of their members from taking more than one apprentice at a time. He was still quartermaster in 1716 (along with the same Robert Tinlin) when he and other complained about people who were not part of the incorporated trades taking their seats in St. Mary's Kirk. He may be the 'John Suan younger' listed in 1694 among those on the west-side of Hawick who paid the Hearth Tax and the 'younger' weaver listed among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He may be the John who (along with Mungo) witnessed a baptism for weaver William in 1700. He was probably the weaver who witnessed baptisms for gardener Robert Roger in 1701, workman Archibald Elliot and shoemaker William Halliwell in 1704, and shoemaker Adam Kersel in 1725. He may be the John who, along with William, witnessed a baptism in 1704 for Walter Paisley at Weensland Mill. He is probably one of the 2 John Swans who in 1709 witnessed a baptism for John Scott 'att ye port'. He was one of the 'two John Swans' (possibly 'Black John' and 'White John' or father and son) who was a Hawick elder recorded as one of the men asked in 1711 to 'perlustrate' the town to look for people still drinking after 8 'clock at night. In 1718 he (or the other John) was among those charged by the Session with trying to resolve the dispute between Bailies Ruecastle and Graham. There was a John Swan whose son John was born in Hawick in 1693 and another in 1696. John 'Black John' (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish, with a nickname to distinguish him from 'White John'. One of them was probably the quartermaster of the weavers. He married Elspeth Clerk and their children included: Mary (b.1700); George (b.1702); Mary (b.1703); Jean (b.1704); Anna (b.1706); and Elspeth (b.1707).

In 1700 and 1704 he was entered in the baptismal register as 'distinctionis causa called black John'. The witnesses in 1700 were weaver John Lunn and James Scott 'Laird', in 1704 were James Scott 'Doctor' and John Scott 'Laird', in 1706 were Andrew Clerk and another John Swan, and in 1707 were weaver James Lunn and shoemaker John Scott. He is probably the John who was witness for baptisms for John Lunn in 1705 and for Archibald Douglas (along with James Lunn) in 1707. John 'White John' (17th/18th C.) weaver in Hawick. In 1701 he is recorded being 'distinctionis cuasa called white John'. He is probably the John who witnessed a baptism for a different John in 1706. He married Janet Allan and their children included: Mungo (b.1701); and Mary (b.1703). This suggests that he may have been son of Mungo. The witnesses in 1701 were Mungo (perhaps his brother) and weaver Thomas Turnbull (possibly his brother-in-law). Other children of either this or the other John are: William (b.1692); John (b.1693); Jean (b.1695); John (again, b.1696); and Janet (b.1706). The witnesses in 1695 were Thomas Turnbull and James Cowan. Mungo (17th C.) Hawick resident who married Helen Briggs, who was probably daughter of William and Bessie Brown. In 1665 (although this date may an error, e.g. for 1685) his son-in-law, Thomas Turnbull, was accused of throwing his wife (Helen) down some stairs when she attempted to visit her sick daughter. The families are probably inter-related through George and Margaret 'Bridges' who are recorded having children in the 1640s. His children included: Helen (b.1657); and Bessie (b.1672). He is probably the Mungo who witnessed a baptism for John (who could have been his brother) in 1676 and in 1678 and 1680 2 others (along with William, who was surely therefore also related) for William Bridges. It seems likely he was father of 'White John'. Mungo (17th/18th C.) Hawick resident who married Jean Briggs in 1702. Their children included Jean (b.1702). Other probably children, with no mother's name given are Thomas (b.1705), William (b.1708) and Mungo (b.1710). The witnesses in 1708 were Michael Bridges and James Scott, Laird. His wife probably secondly married weaver Robert Wight in 1715, suggesting he was deceased by then. He is probably the Mungo who (along with John) witnessed baptisms for weaver William in 1700, (along with Thomas Turnbull) for weaver John Lunn in 1701, for James Beattie in 1704 and for Town Herd William Palmer in 1707. He was recorded as quartermaster of the weavers in 1707. Richard (15th C.) witness to a sasine in 1483 relating to lands in Hassendean, given by William Douglas, Laird of Cavers. He was also a witness in 1484 to a sasine relating to lands in the town of Hawick. Samuel (19th C.) married Isabel Rutherford in Southdean Parish in 1834. William (d.bef. 1694) weaver in Hawick. He is probably the William who witnessed a baptism in 1683 for Steven Greenshields. In 1689 he witnessed baptisms for fellow weavers William Brown and James Lunn. His widow 'Joan Bennet' was listed among those who subscribed to the fund for the new Kirk bell in Hawick in 1693/4. He is probably the William recorded as 'Wm Suan Elder' in the 1694 list (but likely drawn up 2 or 3 years earlier) among those on the west-side of Hawick who paid the Hearth Tax. He could be the William, son of George and Margaret Bridges who was born in Hawick in 1635. He married Helen (or Jane) Bennet, and their children included: Thomas (b.1669); George (b.1672); Margaret (b.1673); Mungo (b.1677); Jane (b.1680); and Walter (b.1683). The witnesses in 1680 were Walter Purdom and William Scott. He could be the William who witnessed baptisms in Hawick for William Bridges and Andrew Dodd in 1673, Thomas Lunn in 1675, John in Cavers in 1676 (with Mungo being the other witness, suggesting that all 3 were closely related), Patrick Bridges, William Bridges (along with Mungo again), Francis Scott plus Isobel Bridges in 1678 and Andrew Jardine in 1684. in 1680 he witnessed baptisms for William Bridges (again), Francis Scott, James Lunn, John Scott (of Cavers) and Margaret Scott and Andrew Jardine and Janet Bridges. He may also be the William who (along with Patrick Bridges) witnessed a baptism in 1689 for Adam Lamb. William (17th C.) recorded as 'William Suan, younger' in 1687 among a group of men fined for clandestinely removing their sheep from the Town's flock, without paying the Town Herd. He could be the same as the weaver of the same name. William (17th/18th C.) weaver in Hawick, on the 1693/4 subscribers' list for the new Kirk bell. He must be different from the William whose widow is also recorded on the same list, but could be their son. He may be the William who married Margaret Paisley and whose children, baptised in Hawick, included William (b.1692), Walter (b.1698), Agnes (b.1700), William (again, b.1703) and Mungo (b.1706); the witnesses in 1696 were Henry Orrock and John Hart and in 1700 were weavers John and Mungo Swan. He is probably the William who witnessed baptism for Andrew Turnbull in 1698, for weaver James Jolly (along with John, perhaps his brother) in 1700 and for Walter Paisley at Weensland Mill (also along with John). He is probably the weaver of that name who was a member of the Council when it granted a bond (dated 1710, but recorded in the Town Book in 1711) to provide money for the Master of the new Grammar School. William (17th/18th C.) weaver in Hawick. He is probably the weaver who witnessed a baptism for weaver Robert Tinlin in 1712. He is recorded in the records of the Presbytery of Melrose in 1726 when Christian Bunzie confessed that she had 'seen him playing at the kails in her father's garden'. He was 'a single, unmarried man, landlord of the house wherein Henry Gibson's relict lives'. His name is written 'Swain' and he could be the William, son of William, born in Hawick in 1683 or the William born in Hawick to another William in 1703. Perhaps the same William married Jean Stewart and their daughter Elizabeth was baptised in 1731, with witnesses John Elliot and John Scott. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton. His wife was Janet Swan and their children included: Jean (b.1806); and Samuel (b.1808), baptised at Liddelbank (written 'Suan', 'Suane', 'Swain', 'Swane' and variants).

the Swan (thu-swawn) n. former hostelry on Main Street in Denholm. It is recorded in 1852, when Thomas Field was proprietor. A meeting of 100 Total Abstinence supporters took place there the same year 'in Mr. Field's large room'.

swang (swang) pp. swung – '... But when he swang the tawse I didna craw sae prood' [WL].

the Swan Inn (thu-swawn-in) n. former public house on the Howegate. George Wilson was there in 1871.

swank (swangk) adj., arch. agile, lithe, smart, well set-up – 'Maybe a wife to some swank herd or pleughman, Or joost as like ne'er to be wed ava' [JoHa], 'The leesh, swank-leike fallih ('at A'd been followin eis lead)' [ECS].

swankie (swang-kee) n., arch. a smart, strapping young man 'If a young swankie wi' his joe, In some dark nook play'd bogle-bo ...' [CPM], – 'At e'en, in the gloaming, nae swankeys are roaming ...' [JEM], 'The only word I ever altered from the original instead of 'Swankies are jeering' 'Youths now are jeering'. My father said swankies was a modern word and not a good one' [JEM].

Swanscourt Hill (swanz-kōr'-hil) n. small hill to the north of the farm of Knowetownhead. It reaches a height of 139 m (marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map.

Swansdale (swanz-dāl) n. former lands in Liddesdale, recorded as 'Swanisdale' in the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale. It was valued at 12 shillings and tenanted by Jeffrey Crozier. The location is uncertain, but perhaps around Larriston.

Swanshiel (swan-sheel) n. farm just to the west of Hobkirk, situated on the north side of the Blackhall Burn. The farmhouse now called Nether Swanshiel. The lands were formerly split into Easter and Wester Swanshiels, which were recorded being once owned by the monks of Jedburgh Abbey. At the Reformation the lands were valued at £1 6s. 8d. The Abbey's tenants were Turnbulls, who later became owners of the lands. Robert Turnbull is recorded as tenant in 1567 and James Turnbull in 1580. In 1643 Adam Turnbull 'in Swansheil' owned land valued at £66 13s 4d, and another (or the same) Adam Turnbull 'of Swansheil' had lands valued at £32 10s. In 1678 the Easter and Wester parts were valued at £66 13s 4d and £33 6s 8d, respectively. The lands (or perhaps just superiority) were among those inherited by William Kerr of Abbotrule in 1680. James Turnbull was portioner there in 1684. John Wilkie was a tailor there in 1720. Wester Swanshiel was owned (along with Hartshaugh earlier) by the same branch of the Turnbull family for about 300 years until 1778. John Donaldson was tenant in at least 1797–1801. Earthworks from some ancient settlement were still visible a century ago. There was also once a joiner's shop there (it was 'Swanscheill' in 1567, appears as 'Sironscheill' in 1581, was 'Swoonshield' in 1604, 'Swansheil' in 1643, 'Swan-sheil' in 1684 and 'Swanhill' on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls; it is marked 'Suamsheils' on Pont's c.1590 manuscript map and 'Suamesheells' on Blaeu's 1654 map, but has the modern spelling by Stobie's 1770 map; Walter Deans says that it was formerly 'Suin Shieles' and 'Soneshiells' and suggests it meant the land facing the Sun, however 'swain scheil', meaning 'herdsman's hut' is more likely).

Swanshiel Cleuch (swan-sheel-klooch) n. name for the steep lower section of the Blackhall Burn, to the south-west of Hobkirk Manse.

Swanson (swan-sin) n. Andrew (16th C.) ploughman at Riddell. In 1580 he witnessed an agreement between James Riddell in Maxton and John Riddell in Newton Mill. Rev. Donald Masterton (1897–1954) born in Leith, son of Donald and Jane Harrison. He was educated at

Leith, at Edinburgh University (where he graduated M.A. in 1920) and New College, Edinburgh. He was licensed by the Presbytery of Edinburgh in 1923 and was assistant at Edinburgh Broughton Place 1923–24. He was ordained as minister of West Port Kirk in 1924. He moved to Renfrew North in 1931. In 1924 he married Elsie Wright Munro. George (b.1778/9) from Bowden, he was blacksmith at Gatehousecote in Hobkirk Parish in 1841 and at West Cote in Cavers Parish in 1851. His wife was Sibella and their children included Grace and George. George (b.1832/3) born in Cavers Parish, in 1861 he was a carter living on Dickson Street. His wife was Margaret and their children included Janet and George. James (18th C.) said to be from Wilton Dean, he was a waiter at the Tower Hotel. He lived in a small house where the gate of the Tower Hotel was later built. He was on the subscription list for Caw's 'Poetical Musum' in 1784. He is recorded there in 1785, working for Michael Stevenson, and named again in 1788. In 1790 he was working as a 'drawer' for vintner Robert Armstrong and was recorded as a waiter for Robert Armstrong in 1797. He was apparently very familiar with the customers of the hotel, of all ranks. One of his favourite phrases was 'Stick by cauld whisky, but never drink toddy, when ye're gaun a journey'. It is said that he was at some point dismissed by Armstrong, but reappointed after the Duke of Buccleuch interceded on his behalf. He had several children including: James, who became a ship's surgeon; and a daughter, who married weaver Tom Lunn (possibly the Mary 'Swanston' who married Charles and had a daughter Jane baptised in Hawick Parish in 1791). His wife Jean died in 1795. He could be the James 'Swenstone', married to Jane Wilson, whose daughter Elizabeth was baptised in Hawick in 1781. James (1779/80–1803) son of James, who was a waiter at the Tower Hotel. He was apprenticed to Dr. Walter Graham in Hawick. In 1797 he was experimenting with concoctions and left a bowl on the window-sill, which was drunk by his niece, who unfortunately died; this is mentioned in the Parish Records as 'James Swanson's granddaughter dyed with laudanum'. He left Hawick in 1798 to be a surgeon on a slave ship, sailing on 3 voyages. In 1802 or 1803 he was given command of 'the Prudence', which sailed to the Upper Guinea coast, returning to Liverpool with half his crew, a number of slaves, and also Tom Jenkins, who he brought to Hawick after a few weeks. It is said that attempts by the young African to say his (Swanson's) name sounded to the sailors like 'Tom Jenkins', which was then what they called him. He died in the Tower Hotel a few days after returning to Hawick, perhaps either from a lingering disease or from delirium tremens. He died at the age of 23 (coincidentally the day before Sir Walter Scott and the Wordsworths stayed in the Tower Hotel). He left behind an illegitimate son, who is probably the James, born to James and Betty Cairns in Hawick in 1797 (she may have been the Betty born in Wilton to Thomas Cairns in 1779). Note that a version of his life is told as part of the novel 'Alexander Hope: A Hawick Story'; this fictionalised account bears only passing resemblance to reality, but perhaps the part about him being found wandering round and round in a field and then collapsing may be true. James (1797–1856) illegitimate son of James and Betty Cairns. His father trained as a surgeon and became Captain of a slaving ship, returning to Hawick with Tom Jenkins, but promptly dying. He and Tom were raised by his father's sister and her husband Tom Lunn, who lived at Shuttlehaa in Teviothead. He must therefore have been the closest thing that Jenkins had to a brother. He was said to have been with Tom when he purchased a Greek dictionary at an auction in Hawick, continuing the bidding through a deal with David Moncrieff to help secure the book for Tom by funding his bids. He worked as a shepherd for James Scott of Allanshaws and then moved to Salisbury Craig in Edinburgh. He is recorded as a shepherd at Queen's Park in 1841 and on St. Leonard's St., Edinburgh in 1851. In May 1820 he married Sophia Glendinning (c.1802–70), the marriage being recorded in both Cavers and Ettrick Parishes; it is tempting to imagine that Tom Jenkins attended this wedding on his last trip back to Scotland before he left Britain for good. Their children included: Janet (b.c.1821); Elizabeth (b.c.1825); John (b.c.1827); Sophia (b.c.1829), who married Andrew Gunn in Edinburgh in 1851; Mary (b.c.1830), who probably had a child Sophia in 1862; Christina (b.1832), who probably died young; Walter (b.1833), who married Barbara Kay; Isabella (b.1835), who married James Reekie; and Adam (b.1837), who married Isabella Barrie. Their last 4 children were baptised in Cannongate Parish. He died in Carnegie Street, Edinburgh. John (b.1814/5) from Bowden, he was a farm labourer in Cavers Parish. In 1841 he was living at Whitriggs and in 1851 was a ploughman living on Westside in Denholm. He married Ann Little and their children included George, Archibald, Barbara and Elizabeth G. William (18th C.) from Southdean Parish. He was ordered to be transported to America in 1679 for being a Covenanter (probably after being captured at Bothwell Bridge), and escaped the shipwreck in the Orkneys which killed about 200 men. Most of the survivors were recaptured and sold as slaves in Jamaica and New Jersey. William (b.1774/5) from Bowden, he was farmer at Fastcastle in Cavers Parish in 1851. He married Margaret Bennet and their children included William. William (b.c.1780) recorded as miller of Doveshaugh Mill in Pigot's 1825/6 and 1837 directories. In the 1841 census he was miller at Bedrule Mill. William (19th C.) recorded as labourer at Dovemount in 1835 (also formerly written 'Swanston', 'Swanstone', 'Swanstoun', etc.).

A was sweetin' buckets' [We] (also spelled 'sweet'; the past tense is swat and the past participle swutten).

sweity (swee'-ee) adj. sweaty.

swek (swek) v., arch. to fiddle, swindle – 'Hei swekked his age ti join the Haim Guaird' [IWL].

swellit (swe-lee', -li') pp., poet. swelled – 'Recallinge alle her bytter greifis, Thye swellit the tyde of woe ...' [JTe].

swey (swī) n., arch. a horizontal bar swings across a fireplace, used for hanging pots etc. – 'Come haste and mak' a clean hearth-stane, Gar shine the crook and swey' [DA].

swiff (swif) v., arch. to make a sighing sound (of the wind) – 'Swiff, A term used to denote the hollow melancholy sound made by the wind, Roxb. Berwicks.' [JoJ] (cf. souch).

swig (swig) n., arch. treachery, deceit – 'A vitious, odious King, he play'd at swig, Whilst he lost Scotland all to Striviling Bridge' [CWS] (the word is usually 'swik'; an alternative meaning for 'play at swig' might be to indulge in drinking).

Swin (swin) n. former farm in Kirkton Parish, where Robert Smith is recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. It may be the same as the place recorded earlier as Swinsteid.

Swine Acre (swīn-ā-kur) n. lands once attached to the estate of Mangerton. 'Swybe Acre' was listed as a 3-shilling land in the c.1376 rental roll of Liddesdale (the name presumably relates to pigs).

swing-bat (swing-baw') n., arch. a wooden tool for beating flax, swingle – 'The person who, in the act of swingling flax, first breaks it with a swing-bat' [JoJ] (cf. swinglind).

swinge (swinj) v., poet. to beat, belabour – 'I'll thee obey, – or sorrow swinge me, I gie my aith' [JR].

Swingill (swin-gil) n. remote farmstead in Ewes Parish. It is located where the Swin Gill meets the Meikledale Burn. Henry Oliver and family were there in 1841.

swingle (swing-ul, -gul) v., arch. to beat lint or flax in order to separate the fibres from the woody parts (from Old English 'swincgle', to beat or whip).

swingler (swing-lur) n., arch. a person who beats flax, or an instrument used for beating flax.

swingle-trei (swing-ul-trī) n., arch. the swinging part of a flail, particularly used for threshing flax – '... and made carts, ploughs, wheelbarrows, gates, swingle trees, grape shafts, net stakes, and paling stabs' [RJT].

swinglin (swing-lin) n., arch. the process of beating lint or flax, using a swingling-stock and swingling-hand to separate the flax from the stalk and to extract the finest fibres. The carying out of this operation was formerly an occasion for social gathering in the countryside – 'The next operation was the famous swingling, which broke up and enlivened the dullness of the winter nights so merrily in the generations by-gone' [JAHM].

swinglind (swing-lind) n., arch. a wooden tool for beating flax, swingle – 'The swinglinds gaed like horsemen's swords' [JoHo] (also written 'swinglint'; cf. swinglind and swing-bat).

swinglin-haund (swing-lin-hawnd) n., arch. a sharp-edged wooden lath for dressing flax, also known as a 'swingling sword' – '... and beaten with a sword-shaped stick called a swingling-hand' [JAHM], 'They laid sae fast upon the boards, The swinglinds gaed like horseman's swords' [JoHo] (also 'swinglind' and 'swinglint').

swinglin-stock (swing-lin-stok) n., arch. an upright board, over which flax was held while it was beaten – 'The operation was performed by means of a swingling-stock a board fastened uprightly to another peice upon which the foot was placed to keep it steady' [JAHM].

swinglin-sword (swing-glin-sōrd) n., arch. a sword-shaped, wooden lath used for dressing flax. There are some old local examples in the Museum.

swing-lint (swing-lin') n., arch. a tool used for breaking flax, a swingle (cf. swinglind).

the swings (thu-swingz) n. general term for a playground – 'grannie, can oo gaun ti the swings'.

swing ticket (swing-ti-ki') n. a hanging tag attached to a garment (e.g. in the knitwear industry) when it is finished.

Swinnie (swi-nee) n. hamlet and farm off the A68 on the B6357 towards Hallrule. Thomas Oliver 'de Swyne', who witnessed a sasine in Rulewater in 1436 may have been from here. Robert Oliver was there in 1502. It was listed along with Clarilee in 1538 among lands in Jedforest that had passed to the Crown, but the lands were 'claimed by the laird thereof'; at that time they were valued at £4 6s 8d. In 1557 Sir John Kerr of Ferniehirst complained to the Queen that a force led by the Laird of Bedrule had terrorised the tenant, Adam Kirkton; this was presumably part of land dispute. It was owned by the Marquis of Douglas in 1643 and 1678, when valued at £400 (along with Old Jedburgh and 'Standalane'); the Earl of Lothian owned the teinds. There were 10 separate households listed there on the Hearth Tax Rolls of 1694. Archibald Douglas of Douglas was recorded as owner in 1788. John Goodfellow was there in 1797. Richard Davidson was farmer there in the mid-to-late 19th century. There was formerly a toll-bar there. In about 1833 a horn was found here, containing silver coins from the reign of James I of Scotland and around 1845 a set of 300–400 silver coins were ploughed up on the farm, these being from the reigns of Henry VIII and Queen Mary. There is a linear earthwork to the west of the farm, which runs about a mile and is probably an old agricultural boundary. A plantation about 1 km south of the farmhouse has an interesting jigsaw-piece shape (also written 'Swinney' and 'Swinny', it is 'Swynny' in 1502, 'Swyne' and 'Swynne' in 1538, 'Swynnee' in 1539, 'Swynne' in 1557 and 'Swynie' in 1694; it is marked on Blaeu's 1654 map as 'Sownie').

Swinnie Moor (swi-nee-moor) n. moorland area between Bonchester and Jedburgh, around the B6357, near the hamlet of Swinnie and Swinnie Plantation. An area called Swinnie Dyke Nook was once the supposed haunting ground of a 'bogle' (the origin of the name is possibly from Old Norse 'svithningr', meaning 'the place cleared by burning' and first occurs as 'Swlynny' in 1528).

Swinside (swīn-sīd) n. hamlet on the Oxnam Water south of Oxnam village, the area once being the seat of the Kers of Swinside. William of Abernethy held lands there in the early 14th century and William Landles in the late 14th century. In 1468 Patrick and William Douglas were tenants there. Brothers Adam, Robert, Henry, Simon and George Douglas were recorded there in 1502, as well as separately brothers James, Adam and 2 Johns. Andrew Rutherford had sasine for these lands in 1506. A Rutherford of Swinside is said to have been among those who died at Flodden. In 1579/80 and 1586/7 George Douglas was there. There were Hislops there in 1590 and Murrays and Douglases in 1623. The lands were held by Lord Jedburgh in the early 17th century. Simon Elliot of Swinside owned the lands in 1678, when they were valued at £1675. The Hearth Tax records list 13 householders on the estate in 1694. Alexander Lindsay paid tax on 31 windows there in 1748, while William Elliot paid tax for 10 windows. The estate of 'Swinside Elder' was valued at £375 4s 2d in the 1740s. John Smith was there in 1797. The farms there were run by Douglases in the mid-19th century (also written 'Sweinsyde', 'Swineside', 'Swinesyde', 'Swinsyde' and 'Swynside'; the origin is probably Old English 'swin set', meaning 'place where pigs are kept'; the name may be first recorded as 'Swyneshede' in 1335/6, then is 'Swynset', 'Swynyshede' and 'Swenisheuyd' in 1390 and 'Swyinsyde' in about 1390).

Swinsteid (swin-steed) n. Swinstead, former lands in Kirkton Parish, once held by the Elliots. This could be the 'Swintries' held by the young Robert Elliot of Redheugh and managed for him (along with Skelfhill, Peelbrae and Priesthaugh) by his step-father Gavin Eliott of Stobs in about the 1560s. James Murray and Hector Jardine were there in 1581. 'Gawin Ellot of Swinsteidis' is listed in 1583/4 among Border Lairds who were summoned to appear before the Privy Council. It is probably the 'Swenesteidis' where the fugitive Martin Burn was tenant in 1606. In 1610 it was listed as part of the Lordship of Winnington, possessed by 3 sisters called Hamilton, heirs of their great-grandfather Patrick Hepburn. In 1622 Gilbert of Stobs purchased the 15 merk land of Over and Nether 'Swynesteid' from Robert Elliot of Redheugh along with the rest of the lands of Winnington; it was described as 'now commonly called the lands of Hilend Barnes and Newtoun'. It then formed part of the estate of the Eliotts of Stobs in the 17th century. It may be the same as the farm of 'Swin' in Kirkton Parish where Robert Smith is recorded as farmer in 1797 (it is probably 'Swinsteis' in 1574, 'Swinteis' in 1576, 'Swynsteids' in 1581, 'Swynsteid' in 1610, 'Over and Nether Swynsteid' in 1657, 'Swynsteide Ovir et Nethir' in 1670 and 'Over and Nether Swynstead' in 1681).

Swinton (swin'-in, swin-tin) n. village in Berwickshire on the Leet Water, set out around the green with its 18th century cross. It is the original home of the Swinton family, who claim the oldest charters of any family in Scotland and are buried in the local church. Swinton House was built around 1800 to replace an earlier house destroyed by fire and also has a tower-shaped dovecote, still occupied by pigeons. The surrounding Parish absorbed the parish of Simprin in 1761, where Thomas Boston was minister. The Wheatsheaf Hotel has won awards for its restaurant.

Swinton (swin'-in, swin-tin) n. Charles (b.1795/6) born in Innerleithen, he was a handloom weaver in Hawick. In 1841 he was living at Kirkyard and in 1851 and 1861 at 4 Kirkgate (probably the same place). In 1822 he married Margaret Douglas, who was also from Hawick. Their children included: Isabella (b.1823); Thomas (b.1825); Anne (b.1829); John (b.1832); Charles (b.1835); James (b.1839); and William (b.1839). In 1869 he donated a copper coin to the Museum. John (1832–c.1913) son of Charles and Margaret Douglas. He was a shoemaker in Hawick. He was one of the founding members of the Common-Riding Ceremonial Committee. He also helped secure a Cornet in 1856, when the man elected by the Council refused to accept. He celebrated the Common Riding along with other exiles in 1858 in Galt, Canada. He also acted as starter for the Common-Riding Races. He remained on the Ceremonial Committee from 1887–95. In 1871 he donated to the Museum a 'volume of pamphlets, various dates from 1730'. In 1861 he married Elizabeth ('Betsy') Scott. Their children included Charles, Margaret, Ann and Elizabeth. Marion (18th C.) housemaid at Woll in 1791, when she was working for Charles Scott.

swire (swI-ur, swīr) n. a hollow between hills or flat area near the top of a hill, frequently having a road through it, a hill pass – 'Ti the sooth, ayownt the sweire, stuide Black Law . . . ' [ECS] (existing in place names, such as 'Priesthaugh Swire', 'Redeswire', 'Swire Knowe'; the use of this word is mainly restricted to the Borders).

the Swire (thu-swI-ur) n. Swire Knowe, a hill between Cauldcleuch and Greatmoor, reaching a height of 459 m. Just to the west is Windy Swire and south-east is Swire Rig – 'As I manage my steed on the slope of the Swire, I would sing thee a song of my heart's desire' [WHO].

Swirefit (swI-ur-fi') n. Swirefoot, former name for lands on Hyndlee farm, at the foot of the ridge between the Jed Water and the Catlee Burn. The Hare Cairn once existed there and a shepherd's cottage was built there later. A story is told about an old shepherd seeing fairies near here (also written 'Swyrefoot').

the Swires (thu-swI-urz) n. former name for the Borders, or perhaps some broad region within it. The phrase is used in the Register of the Privy Council in 1574 to refer to an area that certainy local Croziers and others were to remove themselves from – '. . . thay sould be permmittit to remove and transport thame selffis, thair wyffis, cornis and guidis outwith the Swyris, . . . on conditioun that thai never returnit agane to dwell within the saidis Swyris thairefter, except befoir thair returning and duelling thay fand responsall and sufficient suirteis, inlandis men . . . Sword (sōrd) n. Andrew (17th C.) Hawick's first schoolmaster on record, according to deeds of about 1592 and also in 1616. Perhaps the same Andrew was also Hawick's second recorded Town Clerk, from about 1620 until some time in the 1630s. He was also recorded as a notary public in Hawick in 1627 (for the Hawick Parish valuation). James (1786/7–bef. 1861) born in Stichill Parish, he was a master carpenter at Brieryshaw in the Ewes valley. He was listed there in 1841 and 1851. His wife was Helen and they had children Jessie, James and Helen. His wife was a widow and 'Fund Holder' in 1861. John (17th C.) witness to the Hawick Parish valuation of 1627. It seems likely he was closely related to Andrew, who was notary for the document. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Hazelhaugh in Southdean Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. John (b.c.1779) shepherd from Selkirkshire. He he was living at Ettrick House in 1841 and 1851. In 1801 at Gamescleuch he married Janet, daughter of Walter Lunn and Betty Turnbull, who lived at Colterscleuch. His children were born at Eilrig, Nether Dalgleish and Ettrick House. In 1861 his widow was living with their daughter Margaret Anderson at Easter Alemoor, where she died a year later. Their children included: Elizabeth (Betty, 1802–82), who married Adam Beattie, and died in Annan, Ontario; John (1807–79), who married Jean Colthard and died at Easter Alemoor; Margaret (b.1804), who married James Anderson, farmer at Easter Alemoor; Walter (b.1810), who married Bella Hislop; James (b.1812), who married Helen Rieve; Janet (1813–19); William (b.1814), who married Isabella Hardie; and Robert (1821–84), who married Margaret Nichol and died in Annan, Ontario. Thomas (18th C.) recorded in Hawick in 1743 as 'Officer', meaning that he was either Burgh Officer or Kirk Officer (probably the former). He was paid one shilling for guiding a troop of dragoons from Hawick to Langholm in 1740. He is also recorded in the Kirk Session records being paid 'for summonding the Parish' about the same time. In 1743 he witnessed a baptism for workman William Noble. Probably the same Thomas is recorded in 1756 when the Council paid 1 shilling for his 'sentence money'. He is probably the Thomas, married to Margaret Brown, whose children included John (b.1737) and Thomas (b.1739). Thomas (b.1813/4) born in Southdean Parish, he was shepherd at Tythehouse in 1861. His wife was Janet and their children included John and David B.D. (also spelled 'Sowrd' and 'Sworde').

Sym (sim) n. Rev. Arthur Pollok (1862–1946) born in Greenbank, near Edinburgh, son of William and Mary Thomson Pitcairn. He received his M.A. from Edinburgh University in 1881 and his B.D. in 1884. He was licensed by Edinburgh Presbytery that same year and became assistant minister at St. George's Parish in Edinburgh. He was ordained at Lilliesleaf in 1888. In the period 1895–99 he was examiner for degress at Edinburgh University. He was Secretary of the Ministers' Pension Fund Committee in 1907 and Clerk of the Presbytery in 1916. In 1900 he married Caroline Georgina, daughter of William Simson of the Bank of Scotland, and she died in 1938. He was awarded a doctorate by Edinburgh University in 1924. He demitted his charge at Lilliesleaf in 1928. He was also Convenor of the Committee on Admissions of Ministers of other Churches 1921–46 and Convenor of Committee on Proposed Scheme for Superannuation of Ministers 1933–37. He wrote the book 'The Parish of Lilliesleaf' in 1913. His religious writings included 'Sermon on Temperance' (1890), 'St. Paul's Last Letter' (1900), 'A Border Synod' (published in Hawick, 1902), 'Suggestions for a Pension Scheme' (Hawick, 1906), 'Studies in the Period of Elijah and Elisha' (1915), 'The Twenty-Third Psalm: an Anthology of Metrical Versions' (1923), 'Marriage in Scotland' (1933, 1936, 1940, 1942, 1949). He also contributed to Hastings' 'Dictionary of Christ and the Gospels', was editor of 'The Church of Scotland Year Book' 1914–20 and edited Mair's 'Digest of Church Laws' (1923). In 1916 he described an old sundial that was found in Lilliesleaf and repurposed as a baptismal font.

synin-gless (sī-nin-gles) n., arch. a mirror, looking-glass.

Synton (sin-tin, sin'-in) n. area just before Ashkirk, including several farms, formerly a large estate and separate barony, forming a disjoint part of Selkirkshire. The land was owned by the 'de Sinton' family for at east 4 generations. In the reign of William the Lion, Andrew de Sinton was appointed Sheriff of Selkirk, and gave up some lands in Roxburghshire, hence explaining why the estate became part of Selkirkshire. In the early 13th century the lands were described as marching with those of Lilliesleaf. In 1296 Marie de Sinton (probably widow of Alexander) signed the Ragman Rolls. In 1305 the lands were inherited by the 'de Keith' family through marriage to Isabella de Sinton. By the late 1400s the Barony was held by the Erskines, with some lands possessed by the Scotts in the 15th century, and with the Scotts being more or less permanent tenants from at least 1509. However, there are at last 2 separate lines of Scott of Synton, and the full genealogy is complicated and not agreed among various authorities. In 1494 the lands were valued at 40 merks, but in times of peace were worth £20; they were held for payment of a pair of gilt spurs at Whitsunday, if asked. The Barony may at one point have included the lands of Whitslade and Dalglish, while part, owned by the Veitches, was annexed to the Barony of Dawyck. In 1502 the estate was attacked by David Scott 'in Stirkschawis' (i.e. Stirches) and some Armstrongs, as well as Adam Turnbull of Hornshole, when many sheep and cattle were stolen. In 1510 the Baron, Lord Robert Erskine, and his son Sir John Erskine, had an indenture with Ralph Ker of Primside Loch and Andrew Kerr of Ferniehist. Details are complicated, but basically for 400 'merks' the Kerrs were sold a 20 merk land in Synton Mains (adjacent to the 5 merk land of Walter Scott), and another piece of land of equivalent value within Synton, together with the option to take over the Scott lands after a few years. In 1537 Gilbert Ker had sasine for a 20 merk land in 'South Syntoun'. The lands were also raided in 1562, according to a decree made for Sir John Kerr of Ferniehirst. The Laird of 'Syntoun' was listed among 'Landit Men' of Scotland in about 1590. The Barony was granted to Walter, Earl of Buccleuch in 1621. George Scott, said to be 14th Laird of Synton sold the lands to Sir William Scott of Harden in about 1627. The Lairdship was revived by Sir William's younger brother Francis. At some early time the lands were split into South and North Synton (on opposite sides of the Ale Water), as well as Synton Mill, Synton Parkhead and Syntonshiel farms. The main estate was South Synton, with North Synton owned by the Veitches from at least 1407 until 1641, when it was sold to Francis Scott of South Synton. The estate passed from Sir John Edmondston of that Ilk to John, Earl of Mar in 1593, and was bought outright by the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1619. The Barony and lands were listed among the possessions of the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1653, 1661, 1663, including 'the toure, fortalice, manor-place, housis, bigingis, yairdis, mylnes, mylnelandis, multoris, and sequellis thairof'. The estate was valued at £946 in about 1663. An account of Selkirkshire compiled in about 1680 describes 'the House of South Sintoun a Gentleman's Dwelling pleasantly situated, with a Village near unto it, called the Langtoun, under which toward the Water is a Myln belonging to the Gentleman, and above it, a Place called the Parkhead'. George Turnbull was living there in 1698, and James Veitch was a servant there at the same time. Thomas Bourhill was gardener there in 1717. In 1785 and 1803 the lands of Synton and Synton Mill were valued at £1600. George Helm was a servant there in 1797 and Andrew Shortreed in 1799. Residents in 1801 included valet Hugh Moffat, footman Peter McNaughton, coachman Andrew Ormiston and labourer Thomas Laidlaw. The arms of the original Scotts of Synton has 2 stars and a crescent and their motto 'Reparabit Cornua Phœbe'. The Harden-derived Scotts of Synton (and later the Corse Scotts) were important local lairds for many generations. Their arms are a 'bend azure' with a star and 2 crescents and their motto 'Crescendo prosim'. Since the estate was the site for the hereditary sheriffdom of Selkirk, there must have once been at least a fortified house there, but its precise location is unknown. It seems likely to have been near to where the 18th century house was built, this having stones built into it dating from 1570. This house was demolished in the latter half of the 20th century. In the mid-1800s it was written that an old tree near here 'measures fifteen and a half feet in circumference' (also spelled 'Sinton', 'Sintone', 'Sintonne', 'Sintoun', 'Sintoune', 'Sintun', 'Suyntone', 'Suyntoun', 'Syntone', 'Syntoun', 'Syntoune', etc., it is mistranscribed 'Swyntoun' in 1649; it is mentioned from at least the early 13th century; Gordon's c.1650 maps show 'Syntoun' and 'Sintoun', Blaeu's 1654 map shows 'South Synntoun' and 'North Sintoun', while Adair's c.1688 map shows

'Syntoun'; an early connection with 'Swinton' is not impossible).

Syntoncorses (sin'-in-kōr-seez) n. farmstead between Synton and Synton Mains. About 140 m to the east are the remains of a 'burnt mound', at least 3 m in diameter. Robert Scott was shepherd there in 1851.

Synton Cottage (sin'-in-ko'-eej) n. cottage that is to the west of Synton farm. About 160 m to the north are the remains of a farmstead, with a building, 2 enclosures and traces of rig-and-furrow cultivation. About 190 m to the north-east are the remains of a plantation bank.

Synton Hoose (sin'-in-hoos) n. former house on the estate at Synton. It was rebuilt in about 1775 by Alexander Scott of Synton, probably on the site of the earlier house. It was located where modern maps mark 'Synton', although it was abandoned after WWII, demolished in around 1970 and there is now little sign of where it was. The stables are inscribed with the date 1777, and it seems likely the main house was rebuilt at this time. Reset within the walls were 2 stones from the older house, which together read 'GEORGE SCOT IN SYNTOVN AND MARGRET EDMESTOVN HIS SP(OVS IN THE) ZER OF GOD 1570 THE HEAR [heir] T(O WALTER SCOT)...' The inscribed stones disappeared along with the house, although some tiles and bricks were discovered on the site in 2013 and were incorporated into new buildings there.

Synton Loch (sin'-in-loch) n. small lake to the left of the A7 before coming to the main Synton area. It covers about 6 acres and is stocked for fishing. It is what is left of the much larger area of Synton Moss, which was largely drained in the 18th and 19th centuries. To the southwest some bones of an aurochs was discovered there in 1979. On a ridge about 300 m to the south lie the remains of a settlement, trapezoidal in shape, about 75 m by 65 m, with entrance near the east corner. It contains 2 sets of banks and inside are what might be 4 hut platforms. An Iron Age sword, as well as shards of pottery, found there are in the Royal Museum of Scotland. These suggest earlier occupation of the site.

Synton Mains (sin-'in-mānz) n. farm just off the A7 opposite Ashkirk, with holiday cottages and a private loch. It has also been known as 'Synton North Mains'. In 1510 the Barons of Synton, the Erskines, had an indenture with Ralph Ker of Primside Loch and Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst over a 20 'merk' land within this farm, adjacent to the lands held by Walter Scott, and another 20 merk land where they please. In 1609 Walter Veitch was served as heir to his grandfather in the lands of North Synton, including 'lie Maynes' there. John Scott was servant there in 1709. Charles Scott was tenant in 1786. John Paterson junior was living at 'Sinton Northmains' in 1797, Thomas Paterson and James Scott were in the same place in 1799 and Walter Inglis was there in 1801. There are quarries nearby, used in the 18th and 19th centuries for dry-stane dykes. More recently there has been a driving range there (presumably once the home farm for Synton; it is 'the Manys of Syntoun' in 1510 and 'Sintownmill' in 1755; is marked 'Mains' on Ainslie's 1773 map).

Synton Mill (sin-'in-mil) n. farm and former corn mill on the south side of the Ale Water north of Synton. Isobel Scott, Thomas Nichol and Andrew Nichol were there in 1635, according to a court case before Ashkirk Session. Tax was paid for 6 hearths there in 1694. Andrew Fletcher was miller there in at least 1689–98. Robert Foster was miller there in 1703 and William Henderson in 1715. William Tait was cottar there in 1717 and Thomas Scott was there in 1719. John Redford was there in at least 1755–65. John Rutherford was tenant there in 1797, when there were 4 work horses on the farm. Adam Neil was miller there in 1851 (also written 'Syntonmill', it is 'Sintoune Milne' in 1689 and 'sintoune milne' in 1694; it is marked as 'Sintounmill' on Pont's c.1590 manuscript map, 'Sinntoun Mill' on Blaeu's 1654 map and 'Sintown Mill' on Ainslie's 1773 map).

Synton Moor (sin'-in-moor) n. another name for Synton Moss.

Synton Moss (sin'-in-mos) n. land near Synton farm on the high ground just before Ashkirk, also referred to as 'Synton Moor'. It was formerly a fairly extensive lake, but drained in the late 18th and early 19th centuries to obtain marl and peat. The remaining part is now called Synton Loch. Bones of several large extinct mammals were found there in the 19th century, including the skull of an aurochs 'Bos primigenius', donated by Henry Ewen in 1857 and the horns of a stag. A stone celt was dug up here along with peat in about 1864. The skull and several other bones from a prehistoric aurochs were discovered there in 1979, sent to Hawick Museum and later moved to Durham University.

Synton Mossend (sin'-in-mos-end) n. farmstead at the northern end of the Synton Moss area, to the left of the A7 before Ashkirk. It may have been alternatively known as Syntonshiel or Ashkirkshiel. The name is also applied to Synton

Loch. There are remains of a settlement in the woods to the south. A stone found on the farm had cup and ring markings and was moved to Whinfield Sawmills Yard in Selkirk before 1967. A horde of Roman coins was discovered there in 2011, consisting of 228 coins produced under 11 separate emperors, now displayed in the Trimontium Museum. A cutting by the A7 near gives a good opportunity to view folding of the Silurian strata – 'Past Ashkirk the exile feels that hame is nearly in sight Synton Mossend is left behind and it's a climb tae the heights' [GM] (see also Ashkirkshiel).

Synton North Mains see Synton Mains

Synton Parkheid (sin'-in-pawrk-heed) n. Synton Parkhead, farm on the road to Synton, off to the right of the A7. It is known locally as simply 'Parkheid'. William Inglis was there in 1581. Thomas Lockie was a wright there in 1715. William Scott lived there in 1764. James Sinton was a servant there in 1801 and John Fowler was hind in 1803. The lodge house to the north was probably from the late 18th or early 19th century, but has been demolished. The farm there is now known as the Shepherd's House. A bronze sundial in the garden there, on a modern pedestal, is inscribed 'SEIZE THE PRESENT MOMENT THE EVENING HOUR IS NIGH', and '1705 / THOMAS GRICE'. A Bronze Age sprearhead found there is in the Huntlerian Museum, Glasgow, a cup and ring marked stone was discovered there in about 1960 and in 2017 an enamelled cooper-alloy strap-fastener from the Iron Age (it is 'Parkheid in Syntoun' in 1581).

Syntonshiel (sin'-in-sheel) n. former farmstead in the south part of Synton estate. It is marked on Ainslie's 1773 map between the main road and Synton Loch, corresponding roughly to the position of Synton Mossend. Adam Henderson was a farm servant there in 1801.

syre (sī-ur) n., arch. an open drain, ditch, gutter.

't (t) contr. enclitic, common after many specific words, e.g. 'in't', 'is't', 'was't', etc. – 'What gars a fox aye climb to the top o' a hill whan he wants to look oure't?' [WNK], also used in a redundant sense with an extra 'eet' – 'A thocht A wad send Tam't eet' [ECS] (see also 'd).

tabber (taw-bur) n. a worker in the knitwear industry who hand sews labels (usually at the back of the neck) onto garments, traditionally a woman's job.

the Tabernacle (thu-taw-bur-naw-kul) n. building on the Kirk Wynd, built in 1805 for the Independent Church, and used by its congregation until about 1813. It was a plain building of 3 storeys, plus an attic. It saw additional use by the new Relief Church for a few months in 1810/11. After being sold by the Church, it had many uses, being a theatre (also used for dances, etc.), then a carrier's warehouse, wool store, stocking-shop and corn merchants. It was a hosiery mill run by the Co-operative Society 1874–81 and Peter Scott's 1881–93. It became a billiard saloon in the early 20th century and was finally demolished in 1976 when the area was remodelled – 'The House of God, each saint believes, Was once turned to a den of thieves; Now it of grace is such a bare house, 'Tis turned into a carrier's warehouse' [JR].

tafta (taf-ta) n., arch. taffeta – 'Item, the Grate Gumpheon of black tafta caried one the pointe of Lance, sutable by Mr. James Scote, 2d sone to Laurence Scot, aduocat' [SB1634].

Taggart (taw-gur') n. Fr. Patrick (1809–95) born in County Tyrone, Ireland, he was ordained about 1846. He served in Dumfries and Edinburgh before becoming priest in Hawick in 1847, remaining for almost 50 years. Originally he ministered to Catholics in St. Boswells, Jedburgh, Kelso and Galashiels, as well as in Hawick. He was finally relieved of the responsibilities of Galashiels in 1853. He opened a Catholic school in Hawick in 1854. He also ran an evening school, since many of his pupils worked during the day. He had a house built for him in 1851, after living in the vestry for 2 years! He was the 44th listed member of the Archæological Society in 1856. He was known for regularly going walks with Rev.

Dr. MacRae, and in general for being on good terms with the local protestant ministers. His services were used several times to try to quell riots that broke out during the building of the railway line, at St. Boswells and Shankend. It is also said that he helped get hosiery orders from the Admiralty directed towards Hawick firms in a time of very slack business. He later had a small cottage built behind the chapel to serve as his retirement home. In 1890 he was made a Domestic Prelate, with the title of Monsignor. He was buried in a vault at S.S. Mary & David's and a stained glass window was erected in his memory.

taggit (taw-gee', -gi') pp., poet. tagged – 'Her little tail wi' white was taggit, Which often she in kindness waggit' [JR].

taiblet (tāb-li') n. a tablet, a sweet confection in general – 'Note ... taiblet denotes the sugary or candy variety' [ECS], 'Thus coakih-nit taiblet = cocoanut candy' [ECS], a particular confection like a hard fudge, made from condensed milk, sugar and butter (see also tablet).

Tailleycleuch (tā-lee-clooch) n. fortified house marked on Blaeu's 1654 map, roughly near the modern Steelroad-end. The stream there is marked Taylor's Cleuch on modern maps. There is no sign of where the house may have been. A circular enclosure near there, and close to the railway line, was excavated in 1977; it is about 40 m in diameter, and seems to be a prehistoric settlement with later occupation, probably unrelated to the tower-house. It may be associated with the 'Tailside' recorded in 1632, which was probably close to there (see also Taylor's Cleuch).

Taillyaird (tāl-yārd) n. name for former lands within Crook, i.e. near the Kirkton Burn in Cavers Parish. It is recorded in 1581 as a 'hortulo herbario vulgo vocat taillzard', i.e. a small herb garden commonly called Taillyard, on the west side of the lands of Crook (note that the transcription of the name is unclear; 'Taill' probably refers to a small piece of land attached to a larger area).

tailors (tā-lurz) n. once one of the 7 incorporated trades in Hawick, which until 1861 had two representatives on the Town Council. They were probably incorporated towards the end of the 17th century. In 1679 their quartermasters were fined for 'making an act not to work out of their own houses'. They are recorded taking the Test in 1684. In 1734 the Council allowed a petition from them 'to convene at six o'clock to their work, and leave at eight o'clock at night'. The first female dressmaker in Hawick was in about 1793, with dresses before this period being made by the tailors. In 1836 there were 6 weavers in the incorporation, each paying 7 shillings admission fee. A minute books from the incorporation is in the Museum, but it only starts in the late 18th century. A similar book in Selkirk has its first entry in 1610.

Tailor's Slack (tā-lurz-slawk) n. short stream in Liddesdale, running into Greenshiel Sike, which becomes part of Ryedale Burn.

Tails Day (tālz-dā) n. former tradition on the day after 'Huntie Gowk', i.e. 2nd April, in which children (particularly at school) would try to pin paper tails on unsuspscting victims (this survived until around WWII).

Tailside (tāl-sīd) n. former farmstead in Liddesdale, probably close to Steeleroad-end. It is listed in 1632 among lands possessed by Hab Henderson, along with Todscleuch, Fairside and Cleuchside. It may be associated with the modern Taylor's Cleuch and the fortified house of 'Tailleycleuch'.

tailzie (tāl-yee) n., arch. term in Scots law, an entailment, whereby the legal succession of an estate is restricted to designated heirs – 'Free the gates ye thowless bailies! Leave for once your wads and tailzies!' [RSC], poet. a covenant – 'Til sic as keepe his taylye, an' til thae that beær in mind his commandements til do thame' [HSR].

taings (tāngz) n., pl., arch. tongs, fire-tongs – '... when a mischievous cow-herd callant made as if he would have gripped it by the nose with a pair of het taings' [LHTB] (also tings and tyngs).

taingle (tāng-ul, -gul) v. to tangle – 'And 'tween thaim Aa let gaun, And the yins that got away, Lies a lang taingled story ...' [DH], n., arch. a tall lanky person – 'A lang taingle o' a chap' [GW].

tairge (tārj) v., arch. to scold severely, question thoroughly – '... many stories are rife of the way in which he discomfited rustic innocence by tichtly-tairging the swain with interrogations' [WNK] (also written 'targe', the use of this word was often inspired by a line from Burns).

tairger (tār-gur) n., arch. someone who hurries, a particularly large specimen of its kind.

tairget (tār-gi') v. to target, n. a target, arch. a long narrow shred of cloth, a tatter – '... wui stoory claes aa tairgets an spatches an faizzent-ends, an skluiffin shuin wurn inti bauchels' [ECS] (the English pronunciation is probably more common).

tairgets (tār-gits) n., pl., arch. long narrow shreds of cloth, tatters – 'Hei's stoory claes war aa tairgets an spatches an faizzent-ends' [ECS].

tairm (tārm, tā-rum) n. a term – 'this ees ma last tairm it schuil', 'Oo thocht o' gettin' yin at the tairm' [HNe1914], 'Mebbe the tairm 'discovery' is the appropriate yin tae yase ...' [BW1938], 'Yin comprehensive tairm Covers them a' – Birth-pangs, rheumatics And deid-thraw!' [DH]i, '... wonderin. maybe, if he'd sellt his short bit tairm o time owre cheap ...' [DH].

taissel (tā-sul) n., arch. a tassel.

taistrel (tās-trul) n., arch. a slovenly or unmethodical person, particularly applied to a woman – 'Taistrill, tystrill, A gawkish, dirty, thowless sort of woman; often applied to a girl who, from carelessness, tears her clothes, Roxb.' [JoJ] (also written 'taistrill'; cf. teistrel).

tait (tait, tai') n. a small amount, little piece – '... when there's sic a need for baith you an' Katie to get the taits o' woo' spun up' [JTe], 'Lordsake, how mony o' thae things gangs to a gill; aw never gat sic a tait afore' [WNK], '... A tate o' meal, a pickle coals, Will help their New Year's Day' [TCh], 'A'll juist hev a wee tait o'd', 'The Cornet, a tait reed o' face On the road tae Monday Chase' [MB] (probably from Scandinavian).

Tait (tā') n. Adam (15th C.) on the panel for James Douglas of Drumlanrig inheriting the Barony of Hawick in 1484. Adam (17th C.) resident of Shielswood in 1694 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll among 'ye poor'. Alexander (d.aft. 1595) recorded as 'Vicar-pensioner and Reader' at Traquair 1567–80. He was then deprived, living afterwards at St. Bride's Kirk, Traquair. He became minister of Bedrule in 1585, but was ordered to demit this in 1591. He is mentioned as still living in 1595. Alexander (1782–1851) youngest son of miller George and Agnes Scott. He is probably the Alexander recorded as servant to William (probably meant for John) Sibbald at Borthaugh on the 1801 ballot for the Militia. In 1841 he was recorded as an agricultural labourer at Burnfoot Mill and his widow was living there in 1851. He died at Burnfoot in the 44th year of his service there. He married Margaret Younger, who died in 1858, aged 77. Their children included William and Margaret. They are buried in Wilton. Andrew (1778–1861) originally from Lauder, son of Andrew and Ann, he was a stockingmaker of the Green Wynd and was a close friend of James Hogg (of 'Teribus' fame). He was one of the founders of the Relief Kirk. There is a record of him being granted money by the Board of Trustees for Manufactures in 1817 for a broad frame, after he had demonstrated that he had discovered how to make down tippets and muffs on the frame. He managed to make white feathered muffs, but when taste changed to coloured muffs, he was unable to get the feathers to dye properly. He was living on the Back Row in 1832, adjacent to where there were cholera victims. He is recorded as a widower living with the Kyle family on the Green Wynd in 1841 and 1851. Archibald (b.1705) farmer near Borthaugh. He was father of George, tenant of Borthaugh Mill. He is said to have lived into his late 90s, have married twice and had 19 children. He may be the tenant in Whitehillbrae whose wife Margaret Turnbull died in 1760, with her funeral recorded in Hobkirk Parish. His children probably included Archibald (b.1741) and George (b.1743), both baptised in Hobkirk Parish. Archibald (18th C.) married Margaret Welch in Ashkirk Parish in 1768. Archibald (d.1824) agricultural labourer in the Hawick area. He is probably the Archibald, son of Archibald and Margaret Turnbull, who was baptised in Hobkirk Parish in 1741. He married Isabella Geddes, who died in 1822, aged 84. In her death record he is listed as 'Egglar', meaning a pedlar who collected eggs from outlying farms to sell at markets. Their children included: Janet (b.1773); Margaret (b.1777), who married carrier James Paterson; and William (b.1782), who was a carrier. His children were baptised in Hawick and Wilton Parishes; he was at Fenwick in 1777 and Borthaugh in 1782. The 1782 baptism was witnessed by George Tait (probably his brother) and Margaret Cowan; in an adjacent baptismal entry he was witness for George. He was probably son of the earlier Archibald and brother of George, tenant at Borthaugh Mill. He may be the Archibald who was charged with theft in Hawick in 1776. Archibald (1820–79) son of William and Elizabeth Forsyth. He was proprietor of the Ewe and Lamb Hotel in Melrose. He married Elizabeth Naylor. He died in Hawick. David (19th C.) shepherd near Addestoneshiel. In 1863 he presented to the Museum an otter that had been shot on Adderstoneshiel Moss. He is probably the 'D. Tait' recorded at Adderstonelee in 1868. Ernest E., O.B.E., J.P. (??–) accountant in Pringle's, he was President of the Callants' Club in 1966. He became Secretary at Pringle's in 1939, taking over from James Watherston. In 1947 he was made a Director of Pringle's. George of Pirn (15th C.) listed on the panel to decide on the disputed lands of Kirkton Mains and the Flex in 1464/5. He is recorded as being 'of the Pren', his lands being in Tweeddale (near Stow). The David 'de pryn' recorded in the Justice-aire in Selkirk in 1494/5 is probably his son (and his son George is recorded in 1498). It is said that the Taits of Pirn died out in the male line and were continued by a daughter who married Horsburgh of that Ilk; they may be the oldest known Taits. George (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 when James Gray in Fawhope had remission for stealing livestock from his farms of 'pyrne' (i.e., Pirn), Gatehope, Seathope and Innerleithen. He was probably son of the previous George of Pirn. Gray had also been accused of killing Anthony and stealing fron Patrick and Margaret, all of whom were probably related to him. George (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Janet 'Caidyea' (i.e. Kedie) in 1654. Their children included: William (b.1656); John (b.1658); Isobel (b.1659); and John (b.1661). The witnesses in 1656 were Thomas Vogan and John Fraiter. George (d.c.1693) tenant in 'Newtoun' in 1689 when his will was recorded. It is unclear which Newton this may have been (in the counties of Peebles, Roxburgh and Selkirk). George (17th C.) resident of North Synton in 1693 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll there. He may have witnessed a baptism in 1691 (but it is hard to read). George (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Roberton itself in 1731 and at Highchesters in 1742. Children baptised in Roberton who are probably his include Margaret (b.1731), Isabel (b.1738), Helen (b.1742), John (b.1748) and James (b.1754). George (1743–1812) son of Archibald, he was baptised in Hobkirk Parish. He was tenant at Borthaugh Mill, being the last miller there. He married Agnes Scott, who died in 1812, aged 70. Their children included: John; Isabel (b.1773); Archibald (b.1776); George (b.1778), builder in Hawick; William (b.1780); and Alexander (1782–1851). The 1782 baptism was witnessed by Archibald Tait (probably his brother), while he witnessed the baptism of William, son of Archibald Tait. He was buried in Wilton Old Kirkyard. George (1778–1853) son of George, who was tenant at Borthaugh Mill, he was born in Wilton Parish. He was listed as a mason at Borthaugh in 1797 on the list of men on the ballot to serve in the Militia and in 1799 was among those 'In the Ballot Box 1797 not drawn residing in Wilton parish'. In 1801 he was still listed as a mason at Borthaugh, but labelled 'Hawick Volunteer', suggesting that he was excepted from service because of already being in the volunteers. He became a builder in Hawick, whose son (also a mason) had the same name. He served on the 'Eternal Cooncil' as a representative of the hammermen; he was certainly there as early as 1827. He lived on the Punch Bowl Close at 27 High Street, owning the property there; his son George later rebuilt the front, while another son James ran a druggists in one of the 2 front shops and had a school in the back. He is probably the George listed as a builder on the Fore Row on Pigot's 1825/6 directory and on the High Street in 1837. 'Geo. Tait & Sons' is listed on Punch Bowl Close in Slater's 1852 directory. On the 1841 and 1851 censuses he is at Punch Bowl Close with his son James (druggist), with his other son George next door. He married Margaret Scott, who died in 1818, aged 38. Their children included: Margaret (b.1804); John (b.1808), also a builder; George (b.1812), who continued with his builder's business; and James (b.1815). A portrait of him exists. The family (including 3 children who died in infancy) are buried in St. Mary's. George (1812–97) son of builder George. He was also a mason and the 3rd George in a row in this family (his grandfather being miller at Borthaugh). Like his father before him, he was a member of the 'Eternal Coonsul', representing the hammermen for several years from 1846. The Tait builders (including his father and brother John) between them erected many of the Town's buildings, including much of North Bridge Street and a large number of local mansions, including Silverbuthall, Mayfield, East Bank Meeting House, St. Andrew's Church and Orrock Place Church. In 1841 he is recorded on Punch Bowl Close, listed at 76 High Street in 1851 and 1861, and still there in 1875. He rebuilt the front of the property that had been owned by his father; however, the building was later demolished (along with the one next door) to make way for the Pavillion Theatre. He was a nearly lifelong member (and later an Elder) of Orrock Kirk. He donated some fossils to the Museum in 1863, 1865, 1867 and 1868, in 1875 donated 'Sacramental tokens, used by the Associate Congregation' and in 1876 an 'antique carved stone found several feet below the ground'. He was described as having 'a fine portly form' and was latterly very deaf. In 1836 he married Beatrice Wilson, who died in 1862, aged 51. Their children included: Margaret (b.1838/9), who married James Turnbull of Galalaw; Beatrice (b.1839), who died in infancy; Beatrice (again, b.1845), who died young; George (b.1847), also died young; and Elizabeth (b.1851/2), who married Alexander Welsh from Coldstream. George (b.1829/30) son of grocer John. He was listed as a shoemaker at Wilton Place in Slater's 1852 directory. In the 1851 census he was living with his parents on Wilton Kirkstyle and listed as 'Deaf & Dumb'. Gilbert (b.1803/4) gamekeeper at Whitehaugh in Castleton Parish. His wife was Jane and their children included Christian and William. Gilbert (b.1812/3) from Bedrule or Southdean Parish, he was an agricultural labourer. In 1841 he was living at 'Wollrigg', in 1851 at Whitslade Shiel, and in 1861 was gamekeeper at Harden Cottage. His wife was Isabel and their children included Janet, Walter, Helen, Beatrice and James. He may be the James who in 1872 donated to the Museum 'a piece of petrified moss' that was found on Burnhead farm. James (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Janet Crozier and their children included Andrew (b.1689). James (d.1815) tenant farmer at Eilrig. He is recorded there on the 1787–97 Horse Tax Rolls. In 1797 he was owner of 4 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. He also paid the dog tax there in the same year. He is recorded as 'Mr James Tait' at Eilrig in 1798 when his daughter was baptised in Roberton Parish. He married Janet Scott in 1795, the marriage being recorded in both Roberton and Ettrick Parishes. Their children included: Janet (b.1798); Helen (b.1803); Henry (b.1806); and Georgine (b.1810). His death is recorded in Hawick in 1815, with the words 'Died suddenly'. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. In 1797 he married Helen Leithead from Hawick Parish. James (b.1805/6) coal agent in Denholm. His wife was Helen. He could be the James who married Helen Beattie in Cavers in 1832. James (1815–63) son of builder George, he was a chemist at 27 High Street in the mid-19th century. He also had a school in the back premises. He was said to be a 'cripple and walked very lame'. He married Catherine Anderson, from Jedburgh. James (19th C.) editor of the Kelso Chronicle. He wrote the 2 volume study 'Two Centuries of Border Church Life: with Biographies of Leading Men and Sketches of the Social Conditions of the People' (1889, 1891). It principally contains details of churches associated with Kelso Presbytery, encompassing several areas around Hawick, including Lilliesleaf and Liddesdale. He also edited Walter Riddell Carre's work 'Border Memories, or, Sketches of Prominent men and women of the Border' (1876) and 'Wilson's Tales of the Borders' (1881, 1884). James (19th C.) local artist. His painting 'Hawick Common Riding Procession at Tower Knowe 1890' is in the Museum collection. He is probably also the James who painted a portrait of Provost George Wilson and possibly additionally a picture of Minto Pond. John 'Jock' (16th C.) recorded in 1586/7 being 'in the toun of Halroule', among Borderers accused of crimes who had failed to appear in court and were given one more chance to find sureties. John (17th C.) piper, named by the Hawick Bailie in 1627, among 15 other 'idle and masterless men' as fit to be sent to the wars in Germany. While in Edinburgh Tolbooth he was among 7 of them who complained that they were not in fact the sorts of men who should be pressed into military service, but nevertheless were transported to the wars in Germany. John (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Agnes Henderson and their children included George (b.1691), John (b.1693), unnamed (b.1694), Margaret (b.1697), James (b.1699), Agnes (b.1703), and Andrew (b.1705). The witnesses in 1691 were William Easton and James Veitch. John (d.bef. 1721) gardener listed among those who subscribed to the fund for the new Kirk bell in Hawick in 1693/4. Probably the same John was resident of the west-side of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. In 1715 he was fined 'for breaking the marches between the Common and the propertey of the Dutchess of B. at the Woiliegate'. He was described as the deceased 'some times gardner' in 1721 when his daughter Isobel married flesher Robert Hardie in Hawick. The later gardener John was surely related to him. He may be the John who married Jane Gardner and had children Janet (b.1684), John (b.1693) and Robert (b.1696). The witnesses in 1696 were William Gardner (probably related to his wife) and Thomas Briggs. John (17th/18th C.) tenant in Adderstoneshiel. In 1719 his servant Bessie Anderson got married in Hawick and in 1720 his 'servitor' John Scott had a child baptised in Kirkton Parish. He may be the John whose son Thomas was baptised in Kirkton in 1723. John (17th/18th C.) gardener in Hawick Parish, perhaps son of the earlier gardener John. He was 'gardener att ye Cross wynd' in 1716. He is probably the John who witnessed a baptism for James Henderson in 1730. In 1716 he married Jean, daughter to Adam Armstrong in Barnes. Their children included: Isobel (b.1719); Beatrice (b.1721); Agnes (b.1723); John (b.1726); Bessie (b.1729); and Jean (b.1739). William (b.1732), with the mother's name given as 'Margaret' Armstrong, was probably also his child. The witnesses in 1719 were wright Francis Gledstains and carrier William Miller, in 1723 were smith John Scott and James Chisholme 'Laird', and in 1726 were Bailie Martin and 'Dand' Gray. John (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. In 1724 he married Margaret Turnbull in Wilton Parish. He could be the John 'Teat' recorded at Borthwickshiels in 1725 when his son John was baptised and the John 'Tat' recorded in 1735 at Girnwood when his son John was baptised. John (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was recorded at Ormiston in 1727. His children included: William (b.1725); and Helen (b.1727). John (18th C.) footman at Knowe in Minto Parish in 1778, when he was working for Thomas Turnbull. In 1779 he was listed as a house and riding servant. John (18th C.) tenant farmer in Fenwick in about the 1750s, when Robert Hobkirk was Town Herd. He was said to have 'came and drunk with Bailie Ker' in order to solve a dispute with the Town Herd over the use of the Common. John (18th C.) recorded at Winnington Rig on the 1787 Horse Tax Rolls. He may be related to (perhaps even father of) Grizzel, who married Thomas P. Smith and was mother of Sir Andrew Smith (whose baptismal record says 'Winnington'). John (1768/9–1812) road contractor who died at Abbotrule Lodge. His wife Elizabeth Bell died in Edinburgh in 1851, aged 82. Their youngest son Adam (born in Southdean Parish) died in Edinburgh, aged 30. The family were recorded on a tombstone in Abbotrule Kirkyard. John (1771–1851) son of George, he was born at Borthaugh Mill. In 1794 he married Agnes (or 'Nanny'), daughter of Gilbert Amos, and she died in 1815. The marriage was against the wishes of her family, and so she was carried off from Adderstonelee at midnight! He then moved to Cavers, where he served as a forester on Cavers estate. Their children included: Gilbert (d.c.1819); George (1796–1856); John (1799–1863), baptised in Kirkton; Walter (b.1801), also baptised in Kirkton; James (1803–70); Peter (b.1805); and Margaret (b.1812). In 1819 he emigrated to New York state with 5 children, settling in Oxbow on the Oswegatchie River. His grandson James D. Taitt wrote a history of Oxbow Presbyterian Church, marking its centenary in 1921 (with several mentions of Hawick area families). John (b.c.1770s) recorded as servant at Branxholme Park on the 1799 ballot for the Militia in Hawick Parish. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Catherine (or Christian) Welsh in Hawick in 1799 and their children included Archibald (b.1800), Helen (b.1803) and John (b.1805). Their baptisms were all entered at the same time in the register, with witnesses being George Helm and John Scoon. John (18th/19th C.) spinner in Hawick. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 1825 'History of Hawick'. John (b.1791/2) stone-cutter in Denholm, where he was a registered voter in the 1860s. In 1861 he lived at around the Canongate. He married Margaret Biggar and they had a son Thomas. John (19th C.) tenant farmer at Wolfehopelee and Braidhaugh in the mid-1800s. His daughter married farmer Thomas Grierson. John (b.1801/2) from Watten in Caithness, he was a grocer in Wilton. In 1851 he was living at Wilton Kirkstyle and he was listed as a shopkeeper at Wilton Place in Slater's 1852 directory. In 1861 he was at Melburn Cottage in Wilton. His wife was Christina, and their children included George (shoemaker), Jessie, Magnus Sandison, Christina, John, Robert, William, Elizabeth and Georgina. John (b.1808) son of builder George, he was a mason on the Cross Wynd. Like his father and brother George, he sat on the 'Eternal Cooncil', representing the hammermen from 1848. He and his brother built a good fraction of North Bridge Street, as well as several large mansions in the Hawick area. In 1851 he is listed as a builder, with 2 partners, employing 12 people, and residing at about 13 Cross Wynd. His wife was Agnes Reid from Langholm, and their children included Margaret, Isabella, Agnes, John, Helen, George and James. John (b.1829) son of carrier William, who died when he was young. He probably served in the army during the Crimean War. In 1863 in Wilton Parish he married Helen, daughter of mason Walter Cranston; she died in 1913. He was at that time described as a frameworker and Chelsea Pensioner and the witnesses were Archibald Brown and Agnes Cranston. Their children included: William Walter (b.1865); and Walter (b.1866). He also appears to have had an illegitimate son George with Mary Smith (nee Middlemas) in 1860. John G. (b.1830/1) head gardener at Cavers. In 1861 he was living at 'Cavers Garden', which was presumably the gardener's house on the estate. Rev. ?? (17th/18th C.) chaplain at Thorlieshope. He was one of the local clergymen who gave sermons in Hawick in 1721 when Rev. Cunningham was ill. Robert (17th C.) tenant in Honeyburn. In 1684 he was among men declared as a fugitive for attending field conventicles. He is listed separately from Robert in Hagburn. Robert (17th C.) tenant in Hagburn (in Rulewater). He is listed in 1684 among men declared fugitives for refusing to conform to Episcopalianism. Dr. Robert (19th C.) resident of Buenos Aires in Argentina, who presumably had a local connection. In 1864 he donated 'Bolas, for catching wild horses' to the Museum, along with a descriptive note. And in 1874 he donated 'an idol, made of wood from New Calabar, Africa'. Robert (19th C.) married Mary Patterson in Kirkton in 1834 (although crossed out). Robert (b.1808/9) born in Minto Parish, he was a mason in Hawick. He was lving on O'Connell Street in 1841, at 4 Melgund Place in 1851 and at Myreslawgreen in 1861. His wife was Helen and their children included Helen (b.1836/7). He secondly married Catherine and had further children including Agnes (b.1857/8) and Georgina (b.1859/60). Robert (19th C.) originally from Glasgow, he was a frameworker in Hawick. He was living on Tannage Close in 1841 and Walter's Wynd in 1851. He married Jane Smeaton in Hawick in 1844. His children included William (b.1837/8), presumably from an earlier marriage. He could be the Robert from Teviot Crescent who donated Russian copper coins to the Museum in 1868. Thomas (18th/19th C.) servant in Lethem in Southdean Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. Thomas (b.1801/2) born in Channelkirk Parish, he was a gardener at Wells and then farmer at Denholm Mill. He is still recorded as farmer at Denholm Mill in 1868. He married Isabella Gray, who was from Crailing. Their children included: James (b.1828); John Gray (b.1830); David (b.1832); Margaret (b.1834); William (b.1835); William (again, b.1837), who was a shepherd; Peter (b.1839); Robert (b.1840); Charles Anderson Gray (b.1846); and Thomas (b.1843). Their children were born in Jedburgh and Southdean Parishes. Thomas (19th C.) resident of the Hawick area who emigrated to America in about 1830, living in New York state. He collected several geological and other specimens that he intended to bring to Hawick on a return trip to his homeland. However, he was prevented from making the trip and instead bequeathed the items to the Archæological Society in 1863. This included fossils, coins and native items from America. James, also from New York, also made donations in 1863, and was surely related. Thomas (b.1817/8) born in Lilliesleaf, he was a joiner in Hawick. In 1841 he was a journeyman joiner living on Damside with Nelly (probably his mother), in 1851 was a journeyman joiner on Buccleuch Street and in 1861 was a master carpenter (employing 5 men) at Myreslawgreen. He is probably be the Thomas who was the 33rd listed member of the Archæological Society in 1856. He is probably the Thomas who in 1875 donated to the Museum an 'ornament of canopy of Green Wynd Kirk'. Thomas (1833/4–1923) son of stone-cutter John. He married Christina Black, who died in 1908, aged 70. Their children included Rule (1866/7–97). Probably the same Thomas was tenant at Denholm Mill, recorded in the 1860s. Walter (18th/19th C.) farmer at Adderstoneshiel, recorded on the 1788–92 Horse Tax Rolls. On the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls he was owner of 5 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. He also paid tax in 1797 on 3 non-working dogs. His son James was baptised in Kirkton Parish in 1786, when he was also at Adderstoneshiel. Betty (b.1784), John Caverhill (b.1787), Caverhill (b.1788), Margaret (b.1790) and Susan (b.1792) were probably also his children. Walter (20th C.) proprietor of a grocer's shop at No. 2 Dickson Street in the mid-1900s. William (17th C.) married Janet Cochrane in Ashkirk Parish in 1652. William (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when he was listed among the 'Cottars' on the Hearth Tax roll there. In 1697 he was 'cottar in Sinto' (presumably Synton). He married Agnes Beattie (sometimes written 'Brattie' or 'Brattine') and their children included James (b.1689), John (b.1691), Janet (b.1694), Marion (b.1697), William (b.1702), John (b.1705) and Robert (b.1705). The witnesses in 1694 were James Pringle and William Brown (who lived at Ashkirk Mill). Probably the same William was cottar in Synton Mill when his daughter Alison with Isobel Gibson was baptised in 1717. William (17th/18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. In 1721 he married Margaret, daughter of William Hope, gardener. Their children included: John (b.1722); William (b.1724); Thomas (b.1727); Henrietta (b.1730); and Isabel (b.1734). The witnesses in 1722 were merchants William and Walter Tudhope. William (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1756 he married Agnes Hogg. William (18th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Jean Gordon and their daughter Ann was baptised in 1758, with Thomas Bunyan as witness. His occupation may read 'tinclar', i.e. a metal worker. William (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1762 he married Margaret Crozier, who was from Minto Parish. William (18th/19th C.) servant at Hassendeanburn in Minto Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book in 1799. William (b.c.1780) servant at Tower in Cavers Parish according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia. William (1782–1832) son of Archibald and Isabel Geddes, he was baptised at Borthaugh in Wilton Parish. He may be the servant of James Riddell at Leaheads listed on the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Wilton Parish. He was a carrier, operating between Hawick and Dumfries and Annan, according to Pigot's 1825/6 directory. He was listed as a carrier in the subscription list for Robert Wilson's 1825 'History of Hawick'. He is probably the carrier William who married Elizabeth (or 'Betty'), daughter of William Forsyth, in Wilton Parish in 1813 and whose children included: Margaret (b.1812), who married James Daykins; Isabella (b.1814), who married John Lawrie; Elizabeth (b.1816), who married Peter Blair, miller at Hundalee and emigrated to Australia; Matilda (1818–1900), who married George Aitken in Linton and died in Edinburgh; Archibald (b.1820), who married Elizabeth Naylor and was proprietor of the Ewe & Lamb in Melrose; Catherine (1823–64), who married farm steward Andrew Walker of Linton Parish; Williamina (1826–31); John (b.1829), who married Helen Cranston; and William (b.c.1831), confectioner. His wife died 2 days after him, leaving 8 children as orphans. In 1833 his former premises in the east end of Hawick were advertised for sale, including 'dwelling-house, offices, garden, and pertinents', with the house being built within the previous 20 years. William (b.c.1784) born in Hownam, son of David and Janet (or Jessie) Armstrong. He moved to Hyndlee as a shepherd and spent most of his working life at Wauchope Walls (also known as 'Langhaughwalls' or 'the Waas'). He was recorded there in 1861 and 1868. He also acted as carrier between Hawick and Jedburgh and the Wauchope area. Along with his wife Rachel and daughter Rachel, he was a member of the original congregation of Wolfelee Free Kirk. He married Rachel Riddell in 1805. Their children were David (who married Mary Paterson), Betsy (who emigrated to America), Janet (who married T, Waugh), Mary (who married A. Elliot), Margaret (who married labourer Christopher Shakelton), Agnes Douglas (who emigrated to America), Rachel, Isabel (who married Will Bell), Helen (born at Hislop), Jane and James. William (b.1802/3) from Bowden, he was a baker on the Cross Wynd. On Pigot's 1837 directory he was listed as a baker on the High Street. He was at about 4 Cross Wynd in 1841. He later lived on Backdamgate and Kirkwynd. He married Elizabeth Kerr, who was from Langholm. Their children included: Jessie, who married John Davidson; Elizabeth; Margaret; and Robert. William (19th C.) married Elizabeth Rutherford in Hawick in 1834. William (19th C.) married Anne Hood in Wilton Parish in 1847. William (19th C.) married Elizabeth Hardie in Hawick Parish in 1853. William (c.1831–1913) youngest son of carrier William, who died shortly after he was born. In 1861 he was a frame-worker, living at 11 Teviot Crescent. He was later a confectioner in Hawick. In 1853 he married Elizabeth (or 'Betsy') Bell. Their children included William (greengrocer), Jane and Margaret. He died at 1 Glebe View. William (b.1836/7–1914) shepherd in Castleton Parish. He is probably the shepherd at Langburnshiels whose daughter was mother of Peter Jardine, forester at Wolfelee. He married Thomasina Nichol in 1860 and she who died in 1889, aged 52. Their children included: Thomas (b.1863); Walter Nichol (b.1866); James (b.1867); William (b.1871); John (b.1873); and Isabel Grey (1892/3–1914). He died in Hawick and is buried at Ettleton. William (19th C.) son of William, he was a greengrocer. He was at 72 High Street in 1875. William (19th C.) farmer at Pin in Liddesdale in 1868. William (19th/20th C.) superintendent of St. George's Sunday School from 1916 until WWII. Tancred (tawng-kred) n. Capt. George (1831–1914) eldest son of George Cleghorn of Weens. He was born and raised at Weens, then educated in Edinburgh and at Leamington. When rowing on the Thames as a boy, he mangled his hand and lost part of a thumb. He joined the East India Company at age 19 and became an ensign in the 43rd Bengal Native Infantry, caught an almost fatal illness and was sent to Simla to recover. He then moved to Kashmir, when he became ill again with dysentery and returned to England in 1853. There he joined the West York Militia, purchased a commission with the 17th Lancers, and was transferred to the Scots Greys, where he became Captain, spending time in various parts of England and also Ireland. He retired from the army in 1866. He was still 'Captain Cleghorn of Weens' in 1866 when he loaned to the Museum 'a collection of 71 medals for military service' for the temporary edxhibition. He became a life member of the Archæological Society in 1874. He was a keen shooter, bragging that over a year he (and some friends) killed about 1000 patridges, 400 pheasants and 60 grouse. He succeeded his father in 1855, and was known as 'Cleghorn of Weens' for 30 years. However, he assumed the name and arms of Tancred in 1885 following the death of Charles Tancred of Arden Hall, Yorkshire, according to the conditions of succession to his estate. He substantially improved the house at Weens in the early years of the 20th century. He took possession of the 'key of Gibraltar' which had been taken from 'the Rock' by Lord Heathfield, who was born at Wells. He was a member of the Roxburghshire County Council, Chairman of Hobkirk Parish Council, Deputy-Lieutenant for Roxburghshire and Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire, as well as the North Riding of Yorkshire. He joined the Jedforest Club in 1862. He was also a Vice-President of Rulewater Miniature Rifle Club from 1905. He wrote 'Historical Record of Medals and Honorary Distinctions' (1891), 'The Annals of a Border Club, the Jedforest' (1899) and 'Rulewater and its People: an Account of the Valley of the Rule and its Inhabitants' (1907, reprinted in facsimilie 1992). This last book is an extremely valuable account of the histories of families the Rule valley (and neighbouring areas), particularly in the 18th and 19th centuries, and including ordinary people as well as the landed gentry. And the Jedforest Club book is actually an excuse for him to present the histories of a large fraction of the local landowning families. He was said to be working on another book when he died, 'Old Border Lairds and their Tenants'; it is not clear how far he had progressed and no manuscript survives. In 1862 he married Mary Anne Hay (who died in 1914), 3rd daughter of Col. Thomas Lumsden, from Aberdeenshire. They had 11 children: George Harry Lumsden (1863–1935), who served in South Africa, married Sarah Ann Gillespie and died in New Zealand; James Charles (b.1864), who was a Royal Navy Commander and married Cecile Margaret, only daughter of Walter Macmillan-Scott of Wauchope; Thomas Angus (b.1867), Major in the Royal Artillery; Richard Fairfax (b.1875), moved to Queensland; Edward Meynell (b.1877), also Queensland; John Yule (b.1879), with the Indian Staff Corps; Walter Cecil (b.1885), born at Weens, Lieutenant in the Royal Navy; Mary Norcliffe; Katherine Wray (b.1869), born at Weens, who married Alexander Ormiston Curle, W.S.; Frances Madeline (b.1871), also born at Weens; and Edith Dalton (1873–90). A plaque in his memory was erected on the wall of Weens House in 1981 (also known as 'George Cleghorn' and 'Captain Cleghorn').

Tandlaw (tawnd-law) n. farm just out past the 'Fower Road Ends', with a small loch nearby, Tandlaw Moss. It appears to have been part of the estate of Robert Scott of Alton in 1643. Robert Scott of Tandlaw paid the land tax on £40 in Hassendean Parish in 1678. It was contained within Hassendean Parish until 1690 when it fell within the new Wilton Parish boundaries. Robert Scott was recorded there in 1702 and mason William Gibson in 1708. Thomas Scott was tenant in at least 1716–24 and in 1764 it was stated that after 1716 it was 'possessed by four different tenants, all now dead, till Cowdhouse it into his own hand'. Another Robert Scott was there in at least 1729–30 and Thomas Stoddart in 1732. In 1743 William Scott, younger of Coldhouse, was granted 'Little Drinkston, commonly called Tanlaw' by his father Robert. James (son of Robert Scott of Coldhouse and brother of William) was tenant in about 1744–47, Thomas Armstrong after that and then the farm was tenanted along with Coldhouse. Walter Scott was there in 1758 and Adam Armstrong in 1791. Rev. Robert Scott of Innerleithen is recorded as owner in 1788 (continued in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls), when it was valued at £40 and recorded as 'Tanlaw, or Tandlaw'. In 1851 it consisted of 200 acres. Robert Symonton was farmer there in 1797 and William Ormiston lived there in 1799. Adam Nichol was farmer in 1841 and 1851. The farm was owned by George Davidson in 1860, when a plan was drawn up showing the field layout and that at that time the lands included Crookedhaugh Moss, Coldhouse Kipp and the old building at Coldhouse (also sometimes 'Tanlaw'; it is 'Tandla' in 1673, 'Taandlaw' in 1682, 'Tandla' in 1702, 'Tanlaw' in 1743, and 'Tanlaw or Tandlaw' in 1813; not to be confused with 'Tanlaw Naze' near Teviothead or 'Tanlawhill' etc. near Eskdalemuir).

Tandlaw Moss (tawnd-law-mos) n. marshy area and small loch to the west of Tandlaw farm. It is the source of the Boonraw Burn. A gyrfalcon shot there by gamekeeper William Scott was presented to the Museum in 1863 (also sometimes 'Tanlaw Moss').

Tandlawrig (tawnd-law-rig) n. former farmstead owned by the Scotts of Coldhouse. In 1743, William Scott, younger of Coldhouse, was granted 'Little Drinkston and Tanlawrig, commonly called Cowdhouse'. It is unclear if it is the same as Coldhouse or just part of those lands.

the tane (thu-tān) n., arch. the one, that one, especially in the phrase 'neither the tane nor the tother', '... Waltir Scot of Branxhelm, knicht, on the tane part, and James Gledstanis ... on the tuddyr part' [SB1519], '... did they believe the Bible, ye micht as weel hae askit, for the tane just deserves as weel to be believed in as the tither' [EM1820], '... whan A kennd feine naether the tain nor the tother cood be the richt oor ...' [ECS], also used elliptically for the whole of the phrase – 'Hei's uncih lang i comin, A unk! Hei's no weel or ei canna wun – the tain' [ECS] (also spelled 'the tain'; cf. the tother).

Tanlaw Naze (tan-law-nāz) n. hill between Falnash and Caerlenrig, reaching a height of 310 m. The former farmstead near there was called 'Tanlawnese' (and variant) in earlier documents. Will and George Turnbull are recorded there in 1503. Along with the lands of Falnash and 'Cawsya' it was confirmed by James IV in a 1511 charter to Simon Dalgleish, with the consent of his son Kentigern Dalgleish. Along with Falnash and 'Cawsya' it was inherited by Archibald Elliot of Falnash from his great-great-grandfather Archibald in 1647. It was inherited by Walter Scott of Langshaw from his father Francis in 1690 the Tannage (thu-taw-neej) n. former popular name for Tannage Close – ' 'Weel, what is't au maun du'. 'Rin to the Tannage, and bring me a skinner's cleek' ' [WNK].

Tannage Close (taw-neej-klōs) n. passageway off the middle of the west side of the High Street, between Nos. 61 and 63. It was named after the tanning pits at the bottom of the close, with the business carried out by John & Walter Wilson from 1800. In the early 1800s it was called Ewen's Court, then was known as Moncrieff's Close until Tannage Close was adopted about 1857 (although the 1858 Ordnance Survey map shows the bottom part called Tannage Close, with the upper part labelled Moncrieff's Close). The Moncrieff family used to live on the east side of the close. The name 'Guthrie's Close' has also been used (from the plumber and slater's business on the west side). It was once an area of over-crowded housing, with re-development happening between the two world wars. A plaque was placed there in 2011 marking the nearby location of the workplace of Jimmie Guthrie.

tanner (taw-nur) n., arch. a sixpenny coin, sixpence – 'Ee got intae Stan Reid's for a tanner . . . ' [AY], 'Thrippences, tanners, bobs, florins, The odd halfcroon Come floatin' doon' [DH].

the Tanner's Pool (thu-taw-nurz-pool) n. former name for a pool in the Teviot near the foot of Tannage Close, which was used for tanning. The base of the old Mercat Cross was moved to here in about 1782 (and the iron ring in it used for securing skins), but removed to outside the Museum when Teviot Road was built.

tannin (taw-nin) n. the act of converting hides into leather by soaking in an infusion of barks sontaining tannic acid. The tanning of leather and dressing of sheepskins was formerly an important trade in Hawick. Tanners would usually have open tanning vessels, producing a strong smell in the vicinity. Mactaggarts skinworks was a related modern business that successfully operated through much of the 20th century. The name 'Tannage Close' is one of the few remnants of this occupation.

Tantledie (tawnt-le-dee??) n. nickname for someone in the late 18th or early 19th centuries.

tap (tap) n., arch. top, summit, a spinning top – 'I watche, an' am as ane sparra alane apon the hous-tap' [HSR], 'Let thame be as the gerse apon the hous-taps . . . ' [HSR], 'A rountree bus' oot o'er the tap o't . . . Target Field (tawr-, tār-gi'-feeld) n. field at the foot of Target Hill, where butts were set up for rifle practice in the late 19th and early 20th centuries.

the Target Hills see the Targets

Target Pond (tawr-, tār-gi'-pōnd) n. small pond in the Target hills, behind the Braid Road and near Black Quarries, also known as Mosshills Loch.

the Targets (thu-tawr-gits, -tār-gits) n. hilly area above the Braid Road, named after the former Boozieburn Rifle Range on the northern slope. It is also known as 'Target Hill' or 'Target Hills', and was formerly 'Moss Hill'. The area includes Target Pond and the disused Black Quarries, and was recently the site of a greyhound racing track – 'The summer sun shines as I sit in the silence Looking doon on ma hame frae the Target Hill's crest, Weel-kent are the streets and familiar the places Of this old mill town that I'll aye like the best' [IWL].

tarran (taw-rin) n., arch. a person of ill-humour, someone who tries to get their on way by nagging, peevish child.

Tarras (taw-ris) n. lands lying between the Liddesdale and Eskdale. The farm was listed in the c.1376 rental roll of Liddesdale, in the section labelled 'Foresta'. 'The Laird's Rowie' (i.e. Roland) Armstrong was recorded dwelling at 'Tarrassyde' in 1583. The lands there passed to William Scott (son of 'Auld Wat' of Harden) in 1606 and later his descendant became the first and only Earl of Tarras. The lands and Barony of Tarras were listed among the possessions of the Scotts of Buccleuch according to the 1663 marriage contract of Anne, Countess of Buccleuch; the bounds of the lands at that time are describe therein. It was valued at £1100 in 1671. The river there was so full of rocks that it was said to be impossible to drown in, since ones brains would be dashed out first! The word is also used to refer more explicitly to Tarras Water (the area is 'Tarres' on the 1718 Buccleuch survey).

Tarras Heid (taw-ris-heed) n. area at the head of Tarras Water (it is 'Taress head' on Blaeu's 1654 map).

Tarras Moss (taw-ris-mos) n. high area near the Border in a side valley between the Liddel and the Esk, notorious in rieving days. The lands were recorded as early as the late 14th century. The area was also known as 'Black Tarras' – ''We stabled them sure on the Tarras muir We stabled them sure', quoth he: 'Before we could cross that quaking moss, They all were lost but me'' [JL], 'A stark moss-trooping Scott was he, As e'er couch'd Border lance by knee; Through Solway sands, through Tarras moss, Blindfold, he knew the paths to cross' [SWS], 'See how they come when they hear the news Frae the lands ayont Craick Cross; They come frae Eskdale and bonnie Ewes, Through the wilds o' Tarras Moss' [JBB], 'And sae, as the cryin' gangs up i' the Border Bi Tarras and Hermitage, Ettrick and Yill . . . ' [DH].

Tarras Shank (taw-ris-shawngk) n. hill ridge lying between the Twislehope Burn and Tarras Sike, in the upper headwaters of the Hermitage valley (it is marked on the 1718 Buccleuch survey).

tatti-ploom (ta'-i-ploom) n., arch. a potato-apple, the seed-containing fruit of the potato plant (cf. ploom).

tattis (ta'-iz) n., pl. potatoes. It should be remembered that this plant has not always formed part of the staple of the local diet. Potatoes are first noted in Scotland in a household book of the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1701. There is a record that Dickson of Hassendeanburn paid William Turnbull, a Denholm carrier, 1 shilling for a peck of potatoes in 1729; this may imply one of the earliest examples of potato cultivation in Scotland. They were still a relative rarity in the 1740s and there was apparently much opposition to eating them to begin with. In about 1760 William Scott of Woll was among the first to plant them far apart in drills. they did not become a staple of the local diet until the late 18th century.

tatti-scone (ta'-i-skōn) n. a potato scone, scone made with mashed potato, flour and fat, and cooked on a griddle (see also scone).

Taylor (tā-lur) n. Andrew (16th/17th C.) listed after Simon Armstrong of Calfield and his servant in a 1601 list of Armstrongs and others who were said by the English to be outlaws under the Laird of Buccleuch. He thus presumably lived in Liddesdale and was an associate of the Armstrongs. He could be the 'Andro Tailliour' listed 'in Schortburtholme' among Liddesdale and Eskdale men declared as fugitives for not appearing in a court in Hawick in 1605. Archibald 'Airchie' (17th C.) recorded in 1632 as possessor of the lands of 'Zairdhous' in Liddesdale. Since this is listed by other farms near Newcastleton, it could be that Yethouse is meant. Rev. Campbell (1871–1941) born in Dundee, son of Rev. Neil. He was originally in the Free Kirk, he was minister at Whalley Range, Manchester before moving to Newcastleton Kirk in 1941. However, he died after little more than a year in the position. Charles (19th C.) teacher, who was one of the three people who met in 1877 to plan the Hawick Golf Club. He was also part of the first committee and later Club Captain. In 1879 he won the medal (presented by Robert Fraser Watson) at the first golf championship played in Hawick. He was conductor of the Hawick Choral Union in at least the 1870s. David (17th/18th C.) weaver in Hawick. In 1706 he witnessed a baptism for a child of Thomas Barrie. His children included Helen (b.1704) and David (b.1707). The baptism in 1704 was witnessed by weavers John Taylor (surely related) and David Miller. In 1711 he was a weaver at Roughheugh when his son Walter was baptised in Wilton Parish. He is probably the David who witnessed baptisms in 1724 for John Scott from Brieryhill and John Miller from Roughheugh. David (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was living at Todshawhill in 1756 and 1762. His children included John (b.1754), William (b.1756), Isobel (b.1759) and Walter (b.1762). Agnes (b.1748 and Thomas (b.1749), baptised in Minto, may also have been his children. David (19th/20th C.) joiner at Damfoot, Newmill. He was responsible for the original wooden Lawson Bridge, as well as the 'Joogly Brig'. Douglas (1823–87) son of John. He was an apprentice joiner with James Rutherford at Bonchester, and his first job was to remove the thatch from the 3 'Sclenty houses' in 1839. He was then a joiner on the Weens estate at Bonchester Bridge. He was the first in the area to erect wire fences, and developed a business supplying these. Henry Anderson worked for him in the late 1870s. In 1882 his joiner's business was taken over by Walter Turnbull. In 1846 he married Elizabeth ('Betsy'), daughter of John Thorburn, farmer at Stonedge. They had several children, including Walter. He died at Wilton Hill in Hawick and was buried at Hobkirk. Edmond (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 as 'ewmund talzor'. James Scott in Ashkirk had remission for accompanying him to steal cattle from the farm of Cauldshiels. Elizabeth 'Bessie' (17th/18th C.) recorded receiving money from Ashkirk Parish in 1727. George (16th C.) listed in 1579 among people who owed money to Isabel Donald, widow of Robert of Palace. He was probably from the Ashkirk area. George (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish who married Margaret Hislop. Their son George was baptised in 1690, with witnesses Robert Taylor and William Hislop (who were surely related to the couple). James (15th C.) had a sasine for a merk land in 'Betheruill' (i.e. Bedrule) in 1473. It is unclear how long he held lands in Rulewater. James (18th C.) Hawick resident. He married Betty Turnbull and their children included: Margaret (b.1761); Margaret (again, b.1763); and Peter (b.1766). The 1766 witnesses were weaver Robert Turnbull and John 'Kerswell'. James (18th/19th C.) fined in Cavers Parish in 1792 for an 'irregular marriage'. James (b.1821/2) from Jedburgh, he was a spinner in Hawick. In 1842 he married Elizabeth Best, who was from Bedrule. Their children included: Margaret (b.1842); John (b.1845/6); Catherine (b.1848/9); Agnes A.J. (b.1854/5); and Elizabeth Jane Boston (b.1856). They were living at about 62 High Street in 1851. In 1861 his widow had remarried to grocer William Brown and the family were living on the Mid Raw. Rev. James (19th C.) recorded at Bedrule in 1859 when he donated a coin to the Museum. It is unclear where he was a minister. Perhaps the same James, schoolmaster, married Betsy, daughter to the deceased William Turnbull, at West Lees in Wilton Parish in 1860. Janet (b.1780/1) born in Hawick Parish, she was recorded as 'Independent' at Highend in Hobkirk Parish in 1841. She was listed there as farmer's widow in 1851 and 1861 and was still recorded there in 1868. She had a daughter Margaret. John (16th C.) tenant in Alemoor. He is recorded in 1573 when he was to be entered at Edinburgh Tolbooth by David 'of Ailmure'. John (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Margaret Scott and their daughter Elizabeth was baptised in 1690. The witnesses were John Brown and William Allan. John (17th C.) recorded on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls at Borthaugh. John (17th C.) cottar at Newton in Hassendean Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. John (17th/18th C.) weaver in Hawick. In 1704 he witnessed a baptism for David, who was probably his son or brother. John (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. In 1725 and 1726 he was at Roberton Burnfoot and in 1729, 1733 and 1736 he was at Mains. His children included: David (b.1725); Bessie (b.1726); Helen (b.1729); Walter (b.1731); Bessie (again, b.1733); James (b.1736); Helen (again, b.1741); and Marion (b.1746). John (18th C.) farmer at Langraw in Rulewater. In 1771 he married Betty Amos and had a son, also John, later that year. He may be the John who was recorded as tenant at Blackcleughmouth in 1797 and whose son Walter was listed on the Miltiia ballot on 1801. Other children of his may have been John (b.1771), Betty (b.1774), Margaret (b.1778), Agnes (b.1780), Walter (b.1782) and Mary (b.1785). John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Lillico and their children included Margaret (b.1792). John (b.1770s) tenant farmer at Unthank, brother of

Walter. He may be the son of John baptised in Hobkirk in 1771. He may be the John 'junior' living at Blackleemouth in Hobkirk Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book in 1799. He was recorded as a labourer at Unthank on the 1801 Militia ballot in Hobkirk Parish. He married Elizabeth Renwick of Forkins. In 1800 they had a daughter called Betty (who married Douglas Lillico), followed by a son, John. They then moved to Swanshiel, where they had sons Robert (farm steward at Wauchope, before emigrating to America) and Walter (who married Margaret Gow). In later life he moved to Blacklee farm with his eldest son John (where they were in 1841). A few years after his death the farmhouse at Blacklee was allowed to fall to ruin. John (18th/19th C.) gardener at Hassendeanburn in Minto Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book in 1799. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His children included Betty (b.1800), John (b.1802), Robert (b.1806), Walter (b.1808), Walter (again, b.1808), Isobel (b.1811), William (b.1813), Isabel (b.1817), Margaret (b.1821) and Douglas (b.1823). Joshua Joseph Henry (1831–1910) composer of music for 'The Banner Blue'. Born in the Huddersfield area, he came to Hawick in 1884 to work as a worsted designer with the tweed manufacturers Blenkhorn & Richardson's, and later became their mill manager. Musically talented, before coming to Hawick he wrote wrote several short choral anthems, including 'Blow Ye the Trumpets in Zion', 'Come, Ye Children' and 'Rend Your Hearts', as well as a full Church of England Service. While in Hawick he wrote a new 'Te Deum', performed in Wilton Church in 1891, as well as his last anthem 'If, With All Your Hearts'. He was honorary organist at Wilton for about a year, after it installed a pipe organ in 1886. He was said to be 'a modest, retiring man'. He died at his hime at 2 Wilton Hill and was buried in Wilton Cemetery. Neil (b.1812/3) from Dunoon in Argyll, he was schoolmaster at Chesters, Southdean Parish around the 1840s to 1860s. He was recorded as Schoolmaster there on the 1841, with the former Master, Thomas Armstrong, there at the same time. In 1851 he was 'Parish Schoolmaster' and living with Alexander Oliver and family. He is listed as master of Southdean Parish School in Slater's 1852 directory. In 1861 he was Parish Schoolmaster at Chesters Schoolhouse, living with his wife, son and mother-in-law, Margaret Shiel. He is recorded in 1866 as Registrar, Session Clerk and Inspector of Poor and still Inspector of Poor for the Parish in 1868. He also acted as postmaster for Chesters. He was a Fellow of the Educational Institute of Scotland. He married Mary Shiel, who was sister of Thomas, schoolmaster at Hobkirk, and they had a son Malcom T.S. Patrick (15th C.) recorded among many men from Liddesdale who did not appear at the Justice-aire in 1494/5. Peter (b.1766) son of James and Betty Turnbull. He was a mason in Hawick. He lived at 19 Howegate in 1841 and 1851 and was unmarried. He was probably the Peter who was one of the founders of the Independent Kirk in about 1798. Richard 'Dick' (15th C.) recorded in 1456/7 as witness to the sasine for Ewesdale passing from Robert of Ewesdale to George Douglas, 4th Earl of Angus. His name is given as 'Dyk Talzour' and he may have been from Ewesdale. Robert (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 as being once in Longnewton, then in Sansystanes. His surety was Archibald Heriot, Captain of Ancrum. He was convicted for intercommuning with Adam and Thomas Turnbull, who had been declared rebels for the slaughter of Patrick Hepburn. Robert (17th C.) recorded in 1676 among a group of Hawick people found guilty of using faulty measures; along with John Scott of Wyndheid, he was specifically found to have a half-peck that was 'ane half-fourpitt short'. He was presumably a merchant or shopkeeper of some sort. Robert (17th C.) recorded in Ashkirk in 1691 when he witnessed a baptism for William Scott and Isobel Renwick. Robert (17th/18th C.) married Janet Oliver in Hawick Parish in 1702. They were both from Hawick Parish. Their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1706. Robert (18th C.) resident of Wilton and Ashkirk Parishes. He married Isobel Brown and their children included: Janet (b.1722), baptised in Wilton; and Walter (b.1724), baptised in Ashkirk. In 1723 he witnessed a baptism for John Easton in Galalaw. Robert (18th C.) merchant in Hawick. He may be the Robert, son of John, born in 1703 in Hawick. In 1742 he was 'Tobacconist' when he witnessed a baptism in Hawick for merchant James Douglas; this may be one of the earliest recorded instances of this word being used as an occupation. He was involved in a court case in 1748, in which he had taken £29 from his aunt Jean Taylor, getting Robert Tudhope to pretend to have borrowed it, but in fact he used it to pay a bill to merchant Thomas Turnbull; there he was stated to be a 'writer' (but that may be in error); he was stated to be a tobacconist in the related court case brought by Turnbull against Tudhope. He is stated to be a merchant when he witnessed a baptism for Walter Turnbull (from Hawick Shiels) in 1745. He may be the Robert who subscribed to the fund for the Slitrig Brig in 1776. He married Margaret Douglas (proclaimed in Cavers and Wilton Parishes) in 1730, and their children included: Thomas (b.1739); Robert (b.1742); and Margaret (b.1745). The witnesses in 1742 were merchant James Douglas (surely related to his wife) and gardener Robert Turnbull, and in 1745 were Walter Turnbull from Hawick Shiels (whose own baptism he had witnessed on the same day) and William Scoon, servant to Rev. Somerville. Robert (19th C.) married Mary Smith in Hobkirk in 1831. Robert (b.1847) emigrated from Hawick to Pennsylvania at age 18. He sheered sheep for a living in California, then moved to Wyoming and ended up with a 75,000 acre farm near Grand Island, Nebraska. Robert M. 'Rob' (20th C.) published 'Teviot Reaches' in 1951, containing sketches and etchings around the Teviot. Ronald 'Ron' (??–) headmaster at Burnfoot Primary School who wrote the booklet 'Hawick Common Riding', with the help of the Callants' Club in 1983. He was unfortunately to later become Headmaster at Dunblane Primary School and witness the terrible aftermath of the shootings in 1996. He returned to Hawick as Common Riding Chief Guest in 1997. Thomas (16th C.) witness in 1531 to a sasine for the lands of Harwood and Hawthornside being inherited by Hector Lorraine. He was probably local, like the other witnesses. Thomas (b.1829/30) born in Holywood, Dumfriesshire, he was a surgeon in Newcastleton. In 1861 he was living on Douglas Square. His wife was Mary Ann and their children included John T.E., James Joseph and Mary. Walter (15th/16th C.) recorded as 'Walterus Talzour Baron de Hassindene' in 1493. He is otherwise unknown as Baron there, so perhaps the translation should be 'of the Barony'. He was allowed to 'compone' for 'communing with the English', the Laird of Buccleuch serving as his surety. It is unclear how he might have been related to any other Taylors. Walter (17th C.) resident of North Synton. In 1643 he was listed among a group of 4 boys there who were summoned 'for byding out of the kirk on ye Lord's Sabbath'. Walter Noble (17th C.) tenant at Effledge who was among those declared as fugitives in 1684 for being a Covenanter. Walter (17th C.) resident in Ashkirk Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. Walter (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living at Orchard in 1733 when he married Bessie Blyth. Walter (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish who married Janet Nichols in 1758. He was at Whihope in 1761. His children included: John (b.1758); and Margaret (1761). Walter (b.1782) son to John in Blackcleughmouth according to the ballot for the Militia in 1801. He was brother of John and farmed at Highend in Rulewater. He may be the Walter whose children, baptised in Hobkirk, included John (b.1805), Agnes (b.1806), Betty (b.1809), Margaret (b.1811), Thomas (b.1813), Walter (b.1816), Janet (b.1818) and William (b.1821). Walter (b.1809) born at Swanshiel, he was a younger son of John, who had farmed at Unthank. He worked on the farm at Howahill, becoming tenant there. In 1849 he was listed on the original congregation of Wolfelee Free Kirk. He was still there in the 1860s, being listed as a widower in 1861. In 1834 he married Margaret Gow (whose mother was Margaret Barry). She was said to be a very beautiful woman, who died in childbirth in 1848. Their children were: John (b.1835), who worked on the farm at Howahill; Agnes (b.1838); Isabella; George, who emigrated to new Zealand; Thomas, who lived at Howahill and died there from blood-poisoning, caused by an axe cut; William, who went to Australia, but returned to Howahill; Margaret; and Walter. Walter (19th/20th C.) son of William, with his mother being a daughter of Dr. Pringle. William (16th C.) recorded in 1562 when he had expenses 'for keeping the tower and house of Hassinden'. He is also recorded in Hassendeanburn in 1580, when he acted as cautioner for Robert Scott of Alton when he borrowed money from the servant of Margaret Douglas, Countess of Bothwell. William (17th C.) tenant in Groundistone. He was mentioned in a session record in Ashkirk in 1635. William (17th C.) married Janet Welch in Ashkirk Parish in 1689. William (17th C.) carter in Hawick, on the 1693/4 subscribers' list for the new Kirk bell. He was listed as 'Wm Tylzer' on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick 'eist the water' in 1694. It is possible he is the William, son of James and Bessie Scott, born in Hawick in 1644. He could be the William, married to Isobel Scott, whose children baptised in Hawick were Bessie (b.1674), Elspeth (b.1677), Helen (b.1680), Marion (b.1682), Janet (b.1685) and Isobel (b.1687); the 1680 baptism was witnessed by Walter Purdom and William Haswell, the 1682 baptism by Walter Purdom and Andrew Hart and the 1685 baptism by Walter Paisley and James Gray. He is probably the William who witnessed a baptism for James Gray in 1684. William (18th C.)

resident of Roberton and Wilton Parishes. He was at Todshawhill in 1781. He married Betty Laidlaw in Roberton in 1778 and their children included: James (b.1781); Janet (b.1788); and Betty (b.1792). He is probably the son of David (who lived at Todshawhill) baptised in Roberton in 1756. William (b.c.1780) from England, he was a farmer at Newstead in Wilton Parish. He is recorded there in 1841. His wife was Margaret and they had a daughter Anne. He could be the William recorded as a labourer at Appletreehall in 1840 and 1841. William (b.1821) son of Walter (although which one is unclear), he was born in Hobkirk Parish. He was a farm labourer living at Howahill Cottage (while Walter was farmer at Howahill itself). He married Mary Crozier in 1847. Their children included: Margaret; Janet; and Walter. In 1849 he was among the original congregation of Wolfelee Free Kirk and was a trustee. William (b.1840s) son of Walter and Margaret Gow. He went to Australia in his early life, but returned to the family farm at Howahill. He was a County Councillor for Hobkirk Parish. In 1886 he married a daughter of Dr. Pringle in Dundee and they had 5 children. William (1847/8–1916) from the Newhouses family, he was farmer at Ashybank. He was also a cattle dealer in Hawick and owned 10 Teviot Crescent. He married Barbara, daughter of blacksmith James Murray, and she died in 1911, aged 62. Their children included: George B. (d.1917), killed at Mahiwa, British East Africa; Christian R. (d.1926); William (d.1954); James (d.1955); Isabella Murray (d.1955); Eliza Litster (d.1958); Robert (d.1959) The family are buired in Denholm. Rev. William Robert (b.1958) born in Airdrie, son of William and Elizabeth McMaster. He was educated at Glasgow High School, Glasgow University (where he graduated M.A. in 1979) and Edinbugh University (B.D. in 1982, M.Th. in 1994). He was licensed by Hamilton Presbytery in 1982, was assistant at East Kilbride Old 1982–83, was ordained by the Presbytery of Perth in 1983 and appointed Summer Mission Organiser and Youth Officer at St. Ninian's, Crieff. In 1986 he was inducted as minister at Slateford Longstone, was studying again at Edinburgh University 1993–94 and was Chaplain to Southfield Hospital, Youth Work Organiser at Murrayfield and Chaplain at Saughton Prison in 1994. He became associate minister at Murrayfield in 1997 and then minister of St. Mary's, Cavers and Kirkton in 1998. He served until 2004. In 1982 he married Alison Anne (b.1961), daughter of William Wason and their children were Duncan Andrew William (b.1986) and Catriona Elspeth Joanne (b.1988). He divorced his first wife in 1995 and in 1999 secondly married Lorna Margaret Mackenszie (b.1954), daughter of David MacKay (formerly 'Tailyeour', 'Tailyer', 'Tailzeour', 'Talzor', 'Tylear', 'Tyler' and variants).

Taylorcleuchheid (tā-lur-klooch-heed) n. Taylorcleuchhead, former farm in Liddesdale, situated around the stream marked Taylor's Cleuch on modern maps. It was surveyed in 1718 along with other properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch. It consisted of 217 acres, bounded by Riccarton, Cleuchhead, lands held by the Laird of Dinlabyre and Roughley. The farmhouse was shown on the west side of a stream, possibly Todshaw Sike, and this could be the place where post-mediæval remains were discovered in 1977. This could be the 'Taylor Gate' where labourer William Potts was living in 1797 (see also Tailleycleuch and Taylor's Cleuch).

Taylor's Cleuch (tā-lurz-klooch) n. stream that runs roughly eastward to join the Liddel Water south of Larriston. There are remains of an enclosure between here and the old railway line. It was partly excavated in 1977 before being surrounded by forest. It appears to be prehistoric with later occupation. There are also some mediæval and post-mediæval remains a little to the east by Todshaw Sike. It may have been called 'Tailorcleuchside' or Taylorcleuchheid.

teh'd (ted) contr. to it – 'ee could gaun right up teh'd', '... bit ee can pit a variety o things teh'd an aa like' [DaS] (variant of ti'd; note long e sound).

teh-teh (te-te) interj. ta-ta, used as a parting greeting – 'teh-teh the now then'.

tei (tī) n. tea, a hot beverage made using crushed leaves from the far corners of the Empire – 'go'an make is a cup o tei wull ee?', 'coffee's no ma cup o tei', 'Ee got pies and tei at the muckle tent ...' [AY], 'Yin Common Ridin mornin Ma mother says ti mei 'Ee'd better watch eer-sul, lass, Here's a 'stranger' in eer tei' ' [DH], a light meal served in the early evening, high tea – 'what's for the tei the night?', '... ee're in an awfu' hurry. Aw was watching ee while aw was takin' ma tei' [JHH], 'A niver got seek o'd. At least no until it was time ti gaun hame for yer tei' [We], 'I'll tak' my aith, ye've hed nae tei, So's ye could fill your wames wi' mei ...' [DH]. Tea did not start being drunk locally until about the 1760s, and was quite expensive for some time. In 1768 someone in Hawick was convicted for selling thorn leaves in place of tea leaves and was 'pinioned' as punishment (sometimes spelled 'tey').

teicher (tī-chur) v., arch. to ooze, said of a slight wound bleeding or exuding pus – 'When the skin is slightly cut, it is said to 'teicher and bluid', when the quantity of blood effused is scarcely sufficient to form a drop, South of S.' [JoJ].

teind (tīnd) n., arch. Scottish equivalent of the English tithe, a tenth part of one's income or produce from land, or a tenth of the value of the livestock born on a farm. This originally went to support the Church, but after the Reformation typically went to the local landowner. Such payments were split into 'vicarage teinds', which were minor tithes, often paid in kind (and originally to the vicar rather than parson) and 'parsonage teinds' which were the more major tithes, consisting of grain – 'The Earle Bukcleugh is patrone, who payis to ye minister 800 merks yeirlie, and leidis ye teynd' [PR1627], 'Although the teinds of particular lands do frequently form the subject of inquiry in our Teind Court ...' [NE].

teind barn (tīnd-bawrn) n., arch. a barn used for storing the grain that was collected as a 'teind', called a 'tithe-barn' in England. The ruins of the old example in Spittal-on-Rule can still be sen.

the Teind Barn (thu-tīnd-bawrn) n. ruined building in Spittal-on-Rule. It was still thatched until the early 1900s, and was said by Tancred to be the olderst building in the parish.

the Teind Court (thu-tīnd-kōr') n. court set up after the Reformation, to deal with the value and sale of teinds, and the adequate provision for local ministers. It was a court within the Court of Session, set up to decide on matters of valuation of teinds, stipends for ministers, etc. After 1707 its powers passed to the Court of Session.

teinder an thirder (tīn-dur-an-thir-dur) n., arch. a person who occupies arable land at a rent equal to $^2/_5$th of the produce (1 tenth and another 3 tenths) – '... the damage done to the corn at Whitlaw was comprised, and that Patrick Scott and John Gladstains paid the damage to the teinder and the thirder out of their own pocket ...' [C&L].

Teindside (tīnd-, teend-sīd) n. farm on the A7 south of Newmill, as well as the name for the general area, also referred to as 'Teinside'. The lands were owned by a branch of the Abernethy family from at least the late 14th century, passing from Sir William to his older brother James in 1393; they were at that time described as lying in the Barony of Hawick, with Archibald, Earl of Douglas as superior. The Abernethys sold the lands to Patrick, Earl of Bothwell in 1494. In 1446/7 Oswald Abernethy appeared before William, Earl of Douglas at Newark and publicly asserted that his only superior of these lands was the Baron of Hawick. The lands were recorded belonging to Douglas of Drumlanrig in 1502. In 1511 the lands were listed among those held 'in tenandry' by the Baron of Hawick. However, in 1572 they were included among those held 'in property' by the Baron, Douglas of Drumlanrig. The Scotts of Buccleuch held lands there since at least the early 1500s, although Francis, Earl of Bothwell had the lands confirmed to him in 1585. It is listed among the property of the Baron of Hawick (Douglas of Drumlanrig) in 1594 and 1615. In 1627 they were listed as a '25 merk land' producing '500 merks in stok, and to 100 merks in teynd'. The lands were listed in 1634, 1653 and 1663 among those owned by the Scotts of Buccleuch. James Grieve was tenant there in at least 1709–10. In 1724 Gideon Elliot purchased the lands from his brother Robert. James Scott was living there in 1731. Alexander Ogilvie was owner in the 1740s when valued at £426 13s 4d. Thomas Watson owned the lands in the early 18th century and sold them to Henry, Duke of Buccleuch in about 1750. There were Murrays living there in the mid-1700s to early 1800s. Thomas Barrie was there in 1788. By 1788 it was valued at £426 13s 4d and still the same in 1811, as part of the properties of the Duke of Buccleuch. Gideon Scott was there in 1797 and David Murray in 1799. George Aitken, John Telfer and Thomas Rutherford were living there in 1801. William Anderson was there in 1819. Robert Elliot was farmer in 1841 and Robert Govenlock in the 1860s. There is a hill-fort on the Slaidhill, which lies above, near the source of the Teindside Burn, and 2 more on Teindside Hill. An ancient burial cairn near the shooting lodge was described by W.N. Kennedy in 1857. Three more burial cists were uncovered by a ploughman in 1869, with an excavation carried out by Dr. Brydon, the site being a small mound about 150–200 yards north of the farmhouse and the cists containing human bones, animal bones, a piece of pottery, a flint flake, charcoal remains and many stones. A further cist was then discovered, prompting another excavation by Dr. Brydon and Lord Rosehill, discovering that the 4 cists formed a semi-circle and the ground around contained much charcoal, burned pieces of bone and more pottery. There are signs of 'cord rig' clutivation there also – 'The scenes of this wild upland vale, And most this spot itself prefer That has become they sepulchre On Teindside's rising dale' [HSR] (also spelled 'Tynside', 'Teinside', etc., and possibly formerly pronounced tīnd-; the origin is possibly Old Welsh 'din' and Old English 'side', meaning 'the slope by the hill with the fort'; it first occurs as 'Theynsyde' in 1393, is 'Tenside' in 1446/7, 'Teynside' in 1494, 'tynsyde' in 1502, 'Teneside' in 1511, 'Tenside' in 1528/9, 'Tenesyde' and 'Teneside' in 1572, 'Teyndsyde' in 1595, 'Teynsyde' in 1627, 'Tynesyde' in 1634, 'Tynesyd' in 1653 and 1663, 'Teyndsyd' in 1661, 'Teanside' in 1731 and 'Tein-side' in 1839; it is 'Teensydhall' on both Blaeu's 1654 map and Gordon's c.1650 map).

Teindside Brig (teend-sīd-brig) n. bridge across the Teviot just after Teindside. It was built as part of the development of the toll road, which became the A7, perhaps around 1762. At the same time as it was built the road was improved from the bridge to Teindside farm, past the Horse Pool. A new bridge was built around the 1930s. A farm adjacent to the bridge was formerly known by the same name and also called 'Teindsidebrae'. Walter Hogg was living there in 1779–84 and William Gledstains in 1784. Alexander Miller was tenant there in 1797, when it is 'Tiendside Bridge'. William Lamb was Taylor at 'Teindside Bridgend' in 1799. Hugh Johnstone and John Cairns and families lived there in 1841 and 1851 (it is 'Teenside bridgend' in 1781 and 'Tiensidebrigend' in 1783).

Teindside Burn (tīnd-sīd-burn) n. stream that joins the Teviot (from roughly the northwest) near Teindside. It forms part of the probable boundary line of the Catrail. The lands there are listed along with Teinside among the lands inherited by the Baron of Hawick in 1615. The lands there were purchased by the Scotts of Buccleuch about 1660. As it runs down from Slaidhills there is a waterfall in a ravine. A little further down there was once a cottage, marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map. Walter Hogg was farmer there in 1797, when Andrew Elliot was also there (it is 'Tynessydburne' in 1615, 'Teyndsideburne' in the mid-17th century, 'Teindsideburn' about 1755 and 'Tiendsideburn' in 1797; 'Teindburnfoot' is marked on Stobie's map of 1770).

Teindside Hill (tīnd-sīd-hil) n. hill lying on the north side of the upper Teviot valley, north of Teindside Lodge. Its contains the remains of 2 hill-forts, almost obliterated by cultivation. The one near the summit probably measured about 120 m by 65 m, while the one to the south sits on a rocky knoll, measuring about 60 m by 20 m, with a deep ditch on the north side. There were local excavations there by Mr. Govenlock in 1873, finding a 'hut eight feet square'. There is a further fort just to the north-west near Slaidhill. Additionally, there is a modern cairn, called 'Bert's Cairn', with an inscribed stone.

Teindside Ludge (tīnd-sīd-luj, -loj) n. house in Teviothead, also known as Commonside Cottage, situated on the side road to Commonside. It was once a farmhouse on the Buccleuch estate. Recently and part of the house has been let out for holiday accommodation. Just inside the entrance gate is a turf-covered cairn about 15 m in diameter.

Teindsideslope (tīnd-sīd-slōp) n. former farmstead near Teindside. In the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls John Irvine is recorded as farmer there, with 3 working horses. Alexander Johnson was there in 1799. David Cairns and Robert Walker lived there in 1841 and Constable Michael Oliver in 1851 (also written as 'Teindside Slope'; it is 'Tiendsideslop' in 1797).

teind yaird (tīnd-yārd-) n., arch. a yard used to store the produce collected as tithes – 'Item, to James Scott, servant, for keiping of the teynd yaird of Hawik, bigging the dykes therof, and heiding the stakes of the samyn the said year, eighteine pundes' [SB1633].

Teinside (teen-sīd) n. alternative version of Teindside.

Tei'ot (tee-i', tī-i') n., arch. Teviot – '... an thegither oo turnt ti the richt for the Teiot an the coonty toon' [ECS], '... And troots that i' the Tei'ot tipple' [DH], 'As by his haugh the Tei'ot rummle't' [DH] (a contracted spelling to denote the older pronunciation; also written 'Teiot' and 'Te'iot').

Teisday (tīz-di) n. Tuesday – 'I got to Berwick on Monday afternoon, and was unco weel on Teisday morning ...' [RW], 'My friens, be thankfu' that Sabbath is upon the day that its on, for had it been a Tysday ye wad hae been at Jeddart, or if a Fursday ye wad hae been at Hawick' [JW] (also written 'Tysday'; cf. the more modern Tuesdi).

teitim (tī-tim) n. teatime – 'A'll sei ee the back o teitim' (note the usual pronunciation of the second syllable; also tei-time).

Telfer (tel-fur, tāl-fur) n. Adam (b.1770s) resident of Grainfoot. He is recorded in 1797 among men of Castleton Parish balloted for serving in the Militia. In 1799 he was now at Redmoss among those 'In the Ballot Box 1797 not drawn still residing in the parish of Castletoun'. He was still at Redmoss on the 1801 Militia ballot. He was probably related to Thomas, who was a shepherd at Redmoss in 1797. Adam (b.c.1770s) shoemaker at Netherraw according to the ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1799. Adam (19th C.) weaver in Newcastleton according to the ballot for the Militia in 1799. Andrew (1734–1804) from Southdean Parish. In 1761 he married Christian Lillico (1736–1815) in Hobkirk Parish. His children, baptised in Southdean Parish, included: George (b.1762); James (b.1765); Marion (b.1767); William (b.1769); Elizabeth (b.1771); Isabel (b.1773); and John (b.1781), father of James 'the poetic schoolmaster' of Saughtree. Andrew (b.1784/5) from Crailing Parish, he was farmer at Roundabouts in Chesters in 1851. His wife was Euphemia and their children included Jessie and William (who took over running the farm). His widow was recorded at Roundabouts in 1861. Andrew (b.1808/9) from Hownam he was a shepherd at Jedhead in Southdean Parish. His wife was Mina and their children included John, Helen and Anne. Andrew Hunter Cowan (1845–1916) born at Lethem in Southdean Parish, son of shepherd William. It is said that he was the first to be baptised in the Presyterian tradition in Wolfelee Free Kirk and was thus named 'Cowan' after the minister. He attended school in Chesters and at the age of 16 apprenticed to joiner Gilbert Amos there. In 1867 or 1868 he moved to Edinburgh, where he became Chair of the Trades Council, being involved in the large demonstration organised after the failure of the Franchise Bill in 1884. He was then on the School Board and became a City Councillor in 1889, being regarded as the first working-class man to hold such a position in Edinburgh. As Convenor of the Plans and Works Committee, he was involved with the merging of Portobello with Edinburgh, with improvement in the fire brigade and with city control of street lighting. Also on the Library Committee, he helped establish a free library in Edinburgh. In 1899 he became a Bailie and was also a Justice of the Peace. He was actively involved in the Edinburgh Borderers Club. His wife was Elizabeth and they had 6 children. Archibald (18th C.) married Christian Liddell in Wilton in 1729. He is probably the Archibald who was at Borthaugh when his death is recorded in Wilton in 1736. Rev. Charles (1693–1731) minister of Hawick Parish 1723–31. He was the son of an Edinburgh Magistrate, also Charles, who was Captain of the Trained Band. He graduated from Edinburgh University in 1712, was licensed by Edinburgh Presbytery in 1719 (after reluctantly signing the Confession of Faith) and came to Hawick in 1721 as an assistant to Robert Cunningham. He helped lead sermons in Hawick while the minister was in ill-health. He was presented as the new Minister by Anne, Duchess of Buccleuch at the end of 1722 and ordained early the following year (after the Hawick elders petitioned the Presbytery 'for puting a quick end of Mr Talefer's tryals'). He is said to have borrowed heavily from Shaftsbury's 'Characteristics' and other essayists for his sermons, and to have had an ascetic temper and a high opinion of himself. He witnessed baptisms in 1723 for surgeon Walter Scott and for Robert Henderson in Hilliesland, in 1724 for workman Robert 'Huison', in 1725 for merchant Thomas Thomson, for William Cathrae in Closses and for merchant Andrew Turnbull, in 1728 for Thomas Turnbull and another couple in 1729 in Hawick, including one for Andrew Leithead (it was unusual for the serving minister to be a witness). In 1724 he complained about drunkenness at the Common Riding and in 1725 he proposed that 2 members of the Kirk Session should inspect 'the families in this town who give ale or brandie, either at the outgoing or incoming of the horsemen and footmen'. But, surprisingly, he reported afterwards that 'he was well pleased with the deportment and behaviour of those who were at the riding of the Common'. He is recorded preaching before the Lord High Commissioner in 1730 and was called before the Committee on Overtures the next day 'for certain comparisons which he had used', but the objections were dropped without censure. He married Katherine Elliot of Arkleton (widow of David Laing of Westerkirk) in 1727 in Hawick, and she lived until at least 1746. They had children: Elizabeth (b.1728), baptised in Hawick; and Christian Ann (b.1730), also baptised in Hawick, with witnesses Rev. Crawford (of Wilton) and 'Mr Cunninghame' (probably Patrick). Charles (18th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. His children included: Thomas (b.1771); Margaret (b.1774); and Helen (b.1777). Christian Lillico (1835–1909) daughter of James, Schoolmaster at Saughtree. She ran a small school near Sandholm, at the junction of the Liddel and Hermitage Waters, also known as the 'Brig End Schuil'. She was teacher there in at least the 1860s. Confusingly, she was known as 'Catherine', as well as 'Christina'. She died in Newcastleton. Christina (b.1796/7) tollhouse keeper at the Townhead Toll in Newcastleton. She was a widow in 1861, with daughter Elspeth and grand-daughter Christina. David (b.1824/5) son of John, he was farmer at Braidhaugh in Hobkirk Parish in the 1860s. In 1861 he was farmer of 500 acres there, employing 4 labourers. David (1945/6–2010) from Hawick, he joined Aberdeen Journals in 1973, becoming motoring correspondent, business correspondent, industrial correspondent and business editor. He was then editor of North of Scotland Publications, before returing to the position of business reporter. He married Moira and had children Ross, Robbie, Colin and Lesley. Elizabeth 'Betsy' (b.1828/9) born in Hawick Parish, she was daughter of Jane, who was teacher at the girls' school set up in Cavers in the mid-19th century. By 1861 she was the main teacher at Cavers Cottages, with Margaret Grierson as assistant teacher. George (16th C.) recorded in Dodhead in 1579 when he made an agreement with John Lauder in Singlie to exchange their lands at the end of a year. He promised, along with Adam Scott of Bonnington, to pay Lauder for tack of a quarter of the 'rowme'. There is surely a connection with the ballad 'Jamie Telfer o the Fair Dodhead'. George (17th C.) tenant near Adderstoneshiel listed in 1684 among those declared as fugitives for being a Covenanter. He could be the George 'Telfoord' listed as shepherd at Addeerstoneshiel among the 'deficient' on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. George (18th C.) herd at Nether Southfield. He married Mary Thomson and their daughter Euphan was baptised in Hawick Parish in 1740. George (18th C.) merchant in Hawick who subscribed to Caw's 'Poetical Museum' in 1784. He is probably the George who witnessed a baptism for merchant James Ekron in 1758. George (18th/19th C.) master of the English School in Hawick until 1822. George (1979–) joined Hawick Boxing Club along with his childhood friend Colin Bain, when they were 11, later joining Hawick Royal Albert Boxing Club in 1998. He had more than 200 amateur fights, boxing for Scotland, with a highlight being winning the Scottish Welterweight Championship in Hawick Town Hall. He had 9 professional bouts in 2003–05, winning 7 and losing 2. Henry (19th C.) married Elizabeth Hardie in Hawick in 1845. James (16th C.) tenant in Huntly and servant to the Laird of Buccleuch in 1579. There was a complaint that the neighbouring tenant in Hutlerburn had taken his horse, claiming that it had crossed the march dyke and was pasturing on Hutlerburn. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish, son of William in North Synton. He married Bessie 'Hutsone' and their son William was baptised in 1698. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at Wiltonburn in 1705. In 1724 he witnessed a baptism for Walter Veitch in Galalaw. His children included Agnes (b.1704) and Margaret (b.1705). The witnesses in 1705 were Adam and William Scott. He could be the James who married Bessie 'Hutson' in Ashkirk in 1696. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isobel Thomson and their children included: Jean (b.1716); and Isobel (b.1722). Perhaps the same James had a son William baptised in 1718 (with his wife's name recorded as 'Jean'). James (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Lymiecleuch in 1716 when he married Jane Stewart and at Deanhead in 1722. His children included: Jenet (b.1719); and Thomas (b.1722). James (18th C.) recorded in Chapelhill in 1726 when his daughter Christian was baptised in Roberton Parish. He may be the James who married Isobel Bell in Roberton in 1718. James (18th C.) recorded being in Southdean Parish in 1747 when his marriage to Anne Maxwell was announced in Melrose Parish, with John Young as cautioner. James (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. In 1761 he married Isabel Howison from Hawick Parish. James (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Dinlabyre. He was taxed for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797. James (b.1770s) resident of Whitriggs in Kirkton Parish. He is recorded in 1797 on the list of men on the ballot to serve in the Militia and in 1799 was among those whose names had not been drawn, but were no longer living in the area. James (d.1824) dyker whose death is recorded in Hawick Parish. James (18th/19th C.) baker on the High Street, recorded in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. James (b.1797/8) from Langholm, he was an inn-keeper in Newcastleton. In the 1850s he was proprietor of the Buccleuch Arms on North Hermitage Street. His wife was Janet and they had a daughter Mary. In 1852 his name was given as 'Telford'. James (1800–62) son of shepherd John and Isabella Taylor, with his stepmother being Anne Davidson, he was referred to as 'the poetic schoolmaster of Saughtree' in Liddesdale. He was described as 'a plodding, ill-rewarded schoolmaster in a roadside cottage on the banks of the Liddel'. He was born in Southdean Parish, although the census records of 1851 and 1861 state he was born in Oxnam Parish. He had 2 aunts who lived in a cottage near Battlingburn in Southdean Parish, and a story is told of one of them seeing a 'spunkie' (i.e. 'will-o'-the-wisp') the night the other one died; he thus seems to have grown up steeped in local superstition. He was first employed as a shepherd, but through self-education became a teacher to the children of shepherds in the Jedhead area. He was a great admirer of James Hogg, the 'Ettrick Shepherd', who he got to know in his youth and who inspired and encouraged him to write poetry. In about 1824 he was stopped from attending a trial in Jedburgh by the Burgh Officer there, 'Lang Eaby' (or 'Ebey'), and in revenge he wrote a satirical ballad 'The Fearfu' Hinderend of Lang Eaby'. This became popular locally, and it is said that Sir Walter Scott enjoyed reading it; he was also said to be concerned that the poem was potentially libellous and so picked out a hiding place to flee to if any suspicious person approached his dwelling. He became schoolmaster at Castleton in 1827 and was at the smaller Saughtree school from 1834 until he died. He was listed at Saughtree among heads of households in 1835–41, and was recorded as master of the auxiliary parochial school at Saughtree in Pigot's 1837 directory and Slater's 1852 directory. He was locally referred to as 'the poetic schoolmaster', since he wrote several ballads, including a long one, 'The Gloamyne Buchte', about an encounter between a shepherdess and a fairy. A version of the ballad 'The Death of Parcy Reed' was transcribed by him from an old woman called Kitty Hall (who lived at Fairloans near the head of the Kale). He published poems in the Newcastle Magazine (as well as a series of articles called 'Literary Gossip') and also in the Tyne Mercury, among other places. His first book was 'Border Ballads and other Miscellaneous Poems' (1824), which was dedicated to the Ettrick Shepherd; although it contains language that is rather pastoral (i.e. flowery), nevertheless it includes many dialect words that were probably common at the time and would otherwise be unrecorded. This collection contains his best-known poem, 'The Gloamyne Buchte', as well as 'Auld Ringan', about Ninian Oliver from Smailcleughfoot. 'The Gloamyne Buchte' was published on its own in 1843 and was additionally contained within Vol. II of the 'Local Historian's Tablebook' in 1844. He contributed to Wilson's 'Tales of the Borders' and his poem 'The Hunter-King' was included in 'Living Bards of the Border' (1859). Additionally, he wrote a novel 'Barbara Gray, or the Widow's Daughter: A Narrative of Humble Life' (1835); it is a melodrama about poor farm labourers and wicked landlords. This was incorporated into an extensive volume of stories and verse 'Tales and Ballads' (1862), dedicated to the Duke of Northumberland (including a substantially revised 'Auld Ringan'); at the end there is a statement about another book, 'Border Gatherings', being in preparation, but this never appeared. It is said that he never earned more than £20 per year, and so must have struggled to raise a family. His house was a simple 'but and ben', with the 'but' being where his family stayed, and the 'ben' being the schoolroom. It was described how he would sometimes tell his class 'in a quiet, conversational way, and in the pure Border doric, of what he had been reading', including treating them to 'a captivating lecture on the tales and traditions of our Borderland'. He was a great friend of Robert White of Newcastle, who wrote about the history of Northumberland and the Border; he would annually visit White in Newcastle, where they would haunt the book-stalls. However, he did not get along with everyone; he is probably the 'schoolmaster, likewise a poet' mentioned being antagonistic to John Halliday publishing his own verses in 1847. He is probably the James who in 1858 donated a 'Sword blade of the Highlanders' to the Archæological Society, found at Myredykes. In 1860 he donated 'two flint arrowheads, one found in Liddesdale, the other from Canada'. He married Janet Beattie (1802–89); she is recorded living at Saughtree in 1841 along with their children Margaret, Christian and Janet (he himself being absent). In 1851 the family were at Saughtree Schoolhouse (with Margaret having moved away by then). In 1861 his daughter Christian was living with them and described as a teacher; she ran a small school near Sandholm, at the junction of the Liddel and Hermitage Waters. They also had a train driver lodging with them in 1861. His children included: Margaret (b.1833); Catherine Lillico (1835–1909); and Janet Armstrong Stavert(1839–1911), who died in Liverpool. One of his daughters had a son, Telfer John Telfer, who died in 1889, aged 25. He died of a stroke at his his home, his wife Janet died at Bankend and the family are buried in Old Castleton Cemetery. He was described thus: 'his rain-beaten white hat, telling of a deal of wet weather about Saughtree and Daston Burn; the well wauket folds of his auld gray plaid hitched over his left shoulder; his big, awkward framework, with that unpresuming pock-pitted face, and the knowing look and sign of inward comfort'. James (19th C.) married Jane Sinton in 1836, the marriage recorded in both Southdean and Jedburgh Parishes. James (b.1821/2) shepherd at Wormscleuch in Castleton Parish. His wife was Christian and their children included Andrew, Margaret, John, James, Mary and Thomas. James 'Jim' (1941–) born between Gala and Melrose, he played rugby for Melrose and gained 25 caps for Scotland. He always wore a uniform and is remembered by many as a formidable presence while they were at school, but had a congenial personality outside. Richard (1837–92) born in Canonbie Parish (as 'Telfer'), son of John and Jane Bell. He became a policeman with the Borders Police, and was later Governor of the Hawick Poor House, starting some time after 1881. He married Margaret Jane Mathieson, who acted as matron at the Poor House. He died of a heart attack while working there. Thomas (16th C.) resident of Whithope recorded in 1549, among a list of the tenants and servants of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme who complained about the Kers ravaging their farms. Thomas (18th/19th C.) farmer at Lymiecleuch, listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Thomas (1757–1834) son of a shepherd, he born at Glendinning on the Meggat Water, in Westerkirk Parish, not far from Langholm. His father died the year he was born and he later carved his father's gravestone in Westerkirk Kirkyard. He became an engineer who was famous for road, canal and bridge construction, including the Menai Suspension Bridge in Wales. He worked on the Langholm Bridge over the Esk as an apprentice stonemason, and gave a bequest to keep the Westerkirk Library going in Bentpath and another to establish a library in Langholm. He was one of the first to suggest a Borders railway line, specifically a horse-drawn railway running from Berwick to Glasgow. He also published a poem 'Eskdale', which was printed in Hawick in the 'Poetical Museum' in 1784. Locally he was sometimes known as 'Laughing Tom'. He was buried in Westminster Abbey. William (b.1810/1) from Langholm, he was recorded as steward at Todshawhill in Roberton Parish in 1861. His wife was Janet and they had a daughter, Mina. William (19th C.) recorded in Pigot's 1837 directory as teacher at Castleton. It is unclear who he was or where exactly the school was located. It is possible this was an error for James Telfer. William Pattison (1836–1922) son of William Pattison and Elizabeth Murray. He was born in Newcastleton and educated in Dumfriesshire and then in Ontario, Canada. He worked as a stone-cutter and a teacher, later becoming a banker. He was elected a member of the Canadian House of Commons for Grey North in 1904, but was defeated in 1908. His son, William Pattison, Junior, was also a Canadian Member of Parliament (formerly spelled 'Tailford', 'Tailfourd', 'Talliefeir', 'Tylfoord', etc., and once probably the same as Telfer).

Telio's (tee-lee-ōz) n. cafe, chip shop, and ice-cream shop run by Telio Gonnella (apparently he was named after the village the family came from) in the mid-20th century on Dickson Street. There was another shop for a while on Green Terrace, and Telio also ran the hut near the top of the Loan as a fish and chip shop.

teld (teld) pp. told – 'In dooming Meggy down to h–ll door, By vote o' session; For that which I have often tell'd her Was nae transgression?' [JR],

"Whae the deevil wad hae thocht o' that without being telled?' [WNK], 'A was telld that if A was for a richt denner A wad need ti trodge on ti Jethart' [ECS], '... A Wasna boass, – if the truith be telld, A was riftin-fowe!' [ECS], (also written 'telld' and 'telled'; this is a less common variant of telt).

tell (tel) v., poet. to count out money – '... Aye, and tell me the monie on my cloak lap; For there's no ae fardin i'll trust thee. Fala, &c.' [CPM].

tellin (te-lin) n. a warning or scolding, usually in the phrase 'to take a tellin', meaning to heed an instruction – 'wull ee no take a tellin laddie?'.

tell ower (tel-ow-ur) v., arch. to recount, narrate, tell again – 'Jethart Castle! A body was need ti ken'd off leike as Wattie Laidlaw kennd eet, for ti tell owre, off-luif, aa its dambrod-checkeet story' [ECS].

telt (tel', telt) pp. told – 'A've telt ee yince', 'whae telt ee?', 'dae is ee're telt', 'ee telt mei', 'it's better felt than telt', 'a wee birdie telt is', 'I've tell't ye a' o' Jamie's hame, Sae gang an' see ...' [JoHa], 'We shook his hand and o' sic lore, Was telt, and he wad tell us a' ...' [JRE], 'Now hoo the Laird sped on his courting that day Was tell't as a secret to twa-three, an sae ...' [JJ], '... an' aw dinna believe aw ever tell't the story to aboon half-a-dozen folk in ma life' [BCM1880], ''I telt ye sae', is aye his sang Wi' doleful satisfaction' [WP], '... But brash and brazent she raised her voice And tell't her grim and deevilish choice' [WL] (sometimes written 'tellt' or 'tell't'; cf. the less common teld; it is always 'told' in standard English).

temp' (temp) v., arch. to tempt – 'Thou sallna temp the Lord thy God' [HSR], '... axet him ane quastione, tempin' him, an' sayin' ...' [HSR].

temper' (tem-pur) n., poet. tempter – 'An' whan the temper cam' til him, he said, ...' [HSR].

Temperance Hall (tem-pu-rins-hal, tem-prins-haw) n. former meeting hall at 6 Croft Road, the site now occupied by the Salvation Army Citadel. It was constructed in 1879 and intitially run by Miss Thomson, a daughter of the local minister. In about 1900 it was converted into a picture house, 'The Theatre'.

Temperance Hotels (tem-pu-rins-hō-tel) n. alcohol-free hotels, which were popular in the latter 19th century, some lasting until WWII. In Hawick the Douglas Temperance Hotel was situated on the Tower Knowe, where the Office Bar is now, Gibson's was on Bridge Street, Inglis's on Teviotside Terrace, Pringle's on Union Street, and the Washington Hotel at the 'Coffin End'. The Buccleuch and Victoria Hotels were also temperance for a time, and there were others, such as Blaikie's Temperance Hotel.

the Temperance Movement (thu-tem-pu-rins-moov-min') n. a social trend to recognise the evils of alcohol, which flourished towards the end of the 19th century, and died out between the Wars. The British Association for the Promotion of Temperance was formed in 1835 and, supported by some of the churches, it led to organised signing of teetotal declarations and the setting up of rigorously teetotal establishments. Locally the first such organisation was started in 1832, but still allowed the drinking of beers. The Hawick Total Abstinence Society was founded in 1838, with members pledging to avoid all intoxicating beverages. They lasted into the early 20th century, and had a popular annual soiree. There were also the Temperance Hotels (some lasting until WWII), the Temperance Burns Club, and even Temperance tents up the Muir. In 1920 a referendum to have alcohol banned in Hawick was opposed by a majority – 'Ye've been the cause o' muckle wae, O' meikle scaith and scorn; I'll sign the pledge this very day! Fareweel, John Barleycorn!' [JT].

Tempest (tem-pist) n. Sir Richard of Hertford (c.1309–79) son of Sir John of Bracewell, he had an older brother, Sir John and a younger brother, Peter, who married Mary Douglas of Liddesdale. He spent time in France on business for the English King. In 1347 he was appointed Constable of Scarborough Castle (for life) and in 1350 was appointed Sheriff of Berwick, a position he held until 1354. In 1357 he was made Sheriff of Roxburgh and given the Wardship of Roxburgh Castle, which he held until 1361. In 1361/2 there was an inquest into whether he 'retained Scottish grooms and other unfit persons' at Roxburgh Castle. In 1357 he witnessed the treaty for the ransom of King David of Scotland. He was also Deputy Warden of the East Marches in 1359 and appointed Warden in 1367. In 1362 he was again Warden of Berwick Castle. He was Sheriff of Roxburgh once more 1366–72 and Sheriff of Berwick 1372–75. He married Joan, daughter of Sir Thomas de Hertford and secondly Isabel, daughter of Sir Thomas de Bourne. He had sons John and William. Sir Richard (b.1356) son of Sir Richard of Bracewell. He was Warden of Roxburgh Castle in 1385, Warden of Berwick in 1386 and Lieutenant of Carlisle Castle in 1396. He was M.P. for Lancashire in 1401 and Yorkshire in 1403. He fought at Agincourt in 1415.

He had at least 3 sons. Sir Thomas (c.1476–1543/4) son of Robert of Holmside, he served in many positions in the north of England. He was in joint charge, along with Sir William Bulmer, of the force that burned Jedburgh in 1523. This raid led to his knighthood. His daughter Anne married Sir Ralph Bulmer. He was one of the English commissioners for negotiating peace with Scotland in 1528.

tempit (tem-pee', -pi') pp., poet. tempted – 'Whan your faethers tempet me, pruvet me, an' saw my wark' [HSR], 'Than was Jesus led up o' the speerit intill the wulderniss til be tempet o' the deevil' [HSR].

the Templar's Hall (thu-tem-plurz-hal, -haw) n. former name for the hall of the I.O.G.T. – '. . . We lairned oor bible in the Templar's Hall Aback o' Wattie Wulson's Mill' [WL].

Temple (tem-pul) n. Brenda nee Smith, born in Hawick, she lived in Newcastleton. In 1972 she married Loudon and they moved to Glasgow, where she studied art. She became a jewellery designer and silversmith, being particularly well known for her kilt pins. She was once commissioned to make a gold brooch for the Queen and produced pieces for celebrities such as David Byrne and Annie Lennox. Billy Connolly purchased 3 of her kilt pins, gifting one each to Steve Martin and Robin Williams. James (18th C.) listed as owner of a 'House and Yard' in Minto Parish in 1779, valued at £1 16s 7d. It was owned by Lord Minto in 1811. His son William was baptised in Minto in 1773. James (18th C.) resident of Southdean Parish. His children included Alexander (b.1774), Violet (b.1781) and Helen (b.1775). James (18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His children included James (b.1779) and Nelly (b.1782). James (c.1770s–bef. 1841) recorded as a wright in Hawick on the 1799 ballot for the Militia. On the 1801 list he was recorded as a joiner. He was a joiner of the High Street in Pigot's 1825/6 and 1837 directories. In the 1841 census his wife Helen Oliver and 5 children were living at about 33 High Street, with his sons carrying on the cabinetmaker's business. His children included: Helen (b.1805); James (b.1807); Robert (b.1810); Janet (b.1811); Alexander (b.1813); Marion (b.1815); John (b.1817); Margaret (b.1820); and Agnes (b.1822). James (18th/19th C.) resident of Minto Parish. He married May Halden and their son James was baptised in 1816. James (b.1807/8) son of James. He was listed as a High Street joiner in Slater's 1852 directory. In 1851 he was a master joiner and cabinet-maker, employing 7 men, at about 55 High Street. In 1847 he married Jane Turnbull, the marriage recorded in both Hawick and Wilton Parishes. Their children included Margaret (b.1848), Robert (b.1850), Helen (b.1852) and William Turnbull (b.1854). Loudon (1948–) son of Andy, he was born in Selkirk and moved to Hawick at the age of 5. He attended St. Mary's, Trinity, Burnfoot and Hawick High Schools, was raised on the High Street and O'Connell Street, and later lived on Fraser Avenue at Burnfoot. He worked at Pesco's after leaving school. Interested in music from an early age, he formed a skiffle band called the Vikings in 1959. He was singer in the Diamonds, who represented the Borders in the Macbeat contest in 1964, and was also in other Hawick-based bands The Modified, The Ceiling (also called the Ceiling Light Machine) and Lordy. Along with Bob Fish he started a folk club in the Victoria Hotel and the pair formed the folk band the Anvil Crew, which was later a trio with Brian Johnstone and Roy 'Big Sid' Cairns. His various bands supported many famous acts. In 1968 he started a new career as a reporter for the Hawick News and Border News Agency. His band Lordy went professional briefly, but he left after a gruelling tour of Germamny. In 1972 he married Brenda Smith (from Newcastleton) and they moved to Kilbarchan in Renfrewshire. He then worked for the Clydebank Press, became Editor of the Renfrew Press, was news editor for Clyde Guide and then news reporter for the Evening Times in Glasgow 1979–89. After that he went freelance, serving local and national publications, as well as radio and TV, and retired from journalism in 2018. He then formed the Brookfield-Knights music agency. During the pandemic he wrote 'The Music Goes Round and Round' (2020), describing his experiences in Hawick and elsewhere, as well as 'There's Gold in Them Thar Hills' (2021), 'Tales Jist Needin' Tae Be Telt' and 'The Bungalow Bar' (2021). R. (17th/18th C.) recorded being paid in 1722 for a 'jist to the steeple'. He was thus probably a wright or joiner in Hawick. Robert (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Whitriggs in 1737. His children included: James (b.1733); and David (b.1737). Perhaps the same Robert had children William (b.1724), Isabel (b.1726) and Janet (b.1728) baptised in Jedburgh and a son Robert (b.1731) baptised in Ancrum. Robert (1771/2–1827) surgeon in Newcastleton. He subscribed to (to 2 copies of) William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. He was also listed in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. He married Elizabeth (or 'Betty') Elliot (1777/8–c.1858). She is recorded in 1841 as 'Ind' at about 2 South Hermitage Street; in 1851 she was listed as a grocer, maiden name Elliot, living with her widowed daughter Kitty Scott (nee Temple) and grand-daughter Helen Scott. His daughter Catherine (or 'Kitty') married Matthew Scott in 1836 and secondly married James Crosby in 1851. He was recorded as a surgeon at Nether Stone in Bewcastle Parish at the end of the 18th century, when he had children baptised there. His children included: Helen (b.1797), who married and moved to Canada; and Janet (b.1799), also known as 'Jessie', who married (probably a Robson) in Newcastleton. He was buried at Ettleton. Thomas (b.1805/6) born in Minto Parish, he was toll-keeper at Spittal. He was recorded at Spittal Bar in 1851 and in 1861 was a miller living at 10 Allars Crescent. His wife was Jane and their children included Alison, Betsy, William, Andrew, Thomas and James. William (18th/19th C.) mason at Hillend in Minto Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book in 1799. He was 'Wester hillend' on the 1801 Militia ballot. He is probably the William who seo children James (b.1801) and Thomas (b.1805) were baptised in Minto.

Temple Croft (tem-pul-kroft) n. former name for a piece of land on Minto estate. It was among lands whose liferent was held by Rev. Robert Elliot from 1779. It was listed in 1779 and 1811, along with 'Notman-shot', with a joint value of £76 16s 8d. This may have been the land valued at 20 shillings in a rental roll of lands associated with the Templars in 1539/40 (it was 'Templecrofts' in 1780).

Templehaa (tem-pul-haw, -hal) n. Templehall, farm east of Harwood, near Wauchope. The name of the lands suggests a connection with the Knights Templar, which is confirmed by the connection with James Sandilands (member of the Hospitaller Order of St John) in the 16th century. David Crozier 'at the Tempilhall' is recorded among men of Liddesdale in 1494/5 and 1500, although whether this was the same place is uncertain. It was for a long time part of the Harwood estate. In 1538 and 1539 the lands were valued along with Wauchopebank at 40 shillings, and occupied by Patrick Turnbull. There is a 1567 charter of the lands, together with Brewlands, granted by James Sandilands (Lord Torphichen) to Andrew Turnbull (son of David of Wauchope). In 1605 there was an action by Jean and Beatrix, daughters of the deceased Walter Turnbull of Wauchope, to remove their mother Marion Lorraine and several Turnbulls from their lands of Templehall and Brewlands. They later passed to George Turnbull of Wauchope, then to Sir James Douglas of Mordington in 1627 and later to the Earl of Lothian. The Earl of Lothian paid tax on £300 for his lands there in about 1663. It was listed as a 4-pound land in 1678, when inherited by William Kerr of Abbotrule. At about that time it must have been valued at £229 15s 4d (based on Kerr of Abbotrules other lands). Adam Murray was tenant there in 1694. The farm then passed from William Kerr of Abbotrule to William Elliot of Wolfelee in 1751 and then immediately to Henry Elliot of Harwood. John Thomson was there in 1751. In 1788 the farm was listed among those owned by William Elliot of Harwood and valued at £229 15s 4d. In 1794 and 1797 the tenants were John and Thomas Clerk. William Hastie was a servant there in 1797, Henry Johnstone and James Dodds in 1799 and William Rutherford in 1801. In about 1811 it was still part of the Harwood estate and valued at £262 10s. John Elliot was there in the early part of the 19th century and James Smith was farmer there in the 1860s. It is also the name of a hill to the south-west, between the Lurgies Burn and the Wauchope Burn. Just north-west of the farm are the remains of a settlement, with the most visible feature being a 75-m long crescent-shaped ridge. On the slope to the south are the remains of an ancient cairn. There is also a place of the same name near Lilliesleaf that is suggested to have had connections with the Knight's Templar, with a 'Temple' near St. Boswells perhaps having a similar origin (it is 'Tempilhall' in 1538, 1539 and 1604 and 'Timpilhall' in 1663; it is marked 'Tempilhall' on Pont's c.1590 manuscript map, 'Tempil-halt' on Blaeu's 1654 map and has its modern spelling by Stobie's 1770 map).

Templehaa (tem-pul-haw, -hal) n. Templehall, former name for lands in Lilliesleaf Parish, said to have been connected with the Knights Templar.

Templehaa Common (tem-pul-haw-ko-min) n. Templehall Common, the commonty associated with the neighbouring Templehall lands, with uncertain history. Its division was discussed at least as early as 1719, and in 1734 it was arranged by James, Lord Cranstoun, and William Kerr of Abbotrule. At that point it was possessed by the tenants of Wauchope and Templehall. It could be the same place marked 'Wauchope Common' on the modern Ordnance Survey map, to the east of Templehall Hill.

Templehaa Hill (tem-pul-haw-hil) n. Templehall Hill, hill in the southern part of Hobkirk Parish, south-west of Templehall and to the east of Lurgiescleuch. It reaches a height of 342 m. Near the summit is an old cairn about 10 m across and on the southern ridge there is another almost twice as big, now quite denuded and within the forest.

Templehaashiel (tem-pul-haw-sheel) n. Templehallshiel, former farmstead in Hobkirk Parish, on the western banks of the Wauchope Burn, near Templehall Hill. William Elliot was shepherd there in the mid-to-late 18th century, Alexander Lillico shortly before 1788 and John Elliot lived there in the 1810s (it is marked on Stobie's 1770 map).

Templelands (tem-pul-lawndz) n. former lands in Liddesdale, listed as 'Tempyllandys' in the c.1376 rental roll. They were part of the lands owned by the church, but their precise location is uncertain (there is a place of the same name in Oxnam Parish).

the Temple o the Muses (thu-tem-pul-ō-thu-mew-zeez) n. monument in the form of a classical Greek pavillion, erected in 1817 by David Erskine as a memorial to the poet James Thomson (of 'The Seasons' and 'Rule Britannia" fame). It is situated on Bass Hill beside the Tweed, and near to Erskine's house at Dryburgh. It contains a bust of Thomson, and the original statue of Apollo having long since disappeared a new statue by Siobhan O'Hehir replaced it.

tenand (te-nand) n., arch. a tenant – '... and to becum tennand to me and thaim of the sammyn' [SB1470].

tenandry (te-nandree) n., arch. land that is leased from a superior, the condition of being a tenant, tenancy – '... tenandry of lande if Hardenwod with the pertinentis lyande within the soyleze of Borthwicsheillis ...' [DoR1445], '... with tennenttis, tennandrijs and seruice of frie tennenttis of the samin, with the pertinentis, liand within the baronie of Branxhelme ...' [SB1569].

tender (ten-dur) adj., arch. sickly, in poor health – 'You say you were all healthy when you wrote but that you are now got to be a little tender' [TEL].

tendit (ten-dee', -di') pp. tended – 'The hills where he herdit are bonnie and green, The hirsel he tendit is white i' the glen' [JoHa].

tenement (te-ne-min') n., arch. a piece of farmland that is tenanted – '... the tenements of Whitehaugh, Heap, Timberside, and Skawmill, Greensidehall, and Leeheads, the tenement of Mabenlaw, the North Croft, Easter Howlands ...' [DCW1765], a piece of land in a town held under some form of tenure and often built upon – '... upon ane tenement of land of his in Hawick, lyand betwixt the land of James Brown on the north part ...' [JW1558], '... befor ane of the baillies of the burcht of Hawik and thair purelie and semplie resigne the said tenement of land' [PR1571].

Tennant (te-nin') n. Hugh (19th C.) married Mary Halliday in Hawick in 1840. Rev. Joseph (c.1575–c.1633) from Listonshiels, he was son of John of Cairns, Mid-Calder. He graduated from Edinburgh University in 1595, was licensed in 1598 and ordained at Traquair in 1599. He was translated to Bedrule in 1601/2. He added responsibility for Abbotrule in 1605, when he is recorded being presented to the parsonage and vicarage on the death of Alexander Crichton. He appears to have been translated back to Bedrule again in 1608/9 and the reality appears to be that he held both benefices simultaneously for about 15 years. In 1616 he had a bond with Robert Turnbull in Bedrule. He witnessed a bond for Walter Turnbull of Bedrule in 1623 (also said by Tancred to have been witnessed by Thomas Tennant in Ruecastle, but this may be an error for Thomas Turnbull). He appears to have been deprived in about 1621, when Abbotrule was again disjoined from Bedrule. He is still recorded as a resident in Bedrule in mid-1632 (leasing 'Roullis land'). He died before the end of 1633 (probably unmarried), when his brother John of Cairnes became heir to a tenement in Edinburgh and land at 'Listounschellis'. Katharine see Katharine Elliot (also spelled 'Tennent').

Tennant's Map (te-nints-map) n. map of Roxburghshire published in 1840 and surveyed by N. Tennant. It was the most detailed map of the county before the Ordnance Survey. This can also refer to Walter Tennant's 'Plan of the Town of Hawick and Environs', which was published in 1850, and again is the best record of the layout of Hawick streets and buildings before the large-scale Ordnance Survey maps.

tennis (te-nis) n. raquet ball game traditionally played by people in white outfits near Langlands Bridge. The game was played informally in the mid-19th century, with later tournaments on the cricket field. Early enthusiasts included J.R. Carmichael, J.B. Sime, G.C. Glenny, C.J. Glenny, James Barrie, George Murray Wilson, Elliot Oliver, George Grier, James Locke, and T. Lindsay Watson. A club was formed in the 1880s, and cinder courts laid down at the site below the cottage hospital. However, the club wound up in 1893, with many of the members having switched allegiance to golf, and the courts were abandoned. George Heron Wilson gifted the courts beside the cricket field to the High School in the 1920s, and the courts in Wilton Lodge Park were built much more recently.

tent (ten', tent) n., arch. heed, attention, care – 'Tak tent o' time, ere time be tint' (inscription at 25 High Street), 'A' therfor whatsaeevir they bid yow tak' tent o', that tak' tent o', an' do' [HSR], 'Heær the richt, O Lord; tent weel my crye' [HSR], 'He'd been thinkin' o' the bygane days, An' o' his life misspent, An' vowin' that, if spared to leeve, He wad tak' better tent' [AO], 'Tak tent or ye'll maybe get ye're ain hides steepit' [WNK], 'A planteet masel i the machine, takin tent no ti crack ma cantel as A claam in' [ECS], '. . . only take tent! aw was as sober as aw am enow' [BCM1880], v. to tend, attend, watch over – 'Then Jeanie McFadzean, wha tented the weans, Sae blooming and lovely, but yet in her teens' [JoHa], 'Where tenting ewes is a' the trade, The brawest dress the tartan plaid' [DA] (from Middle English).

tenter (ten-tur) n., arch. a frame for stretching cloth, specifically rails with hooks set up outside to dry and evenly stretch cloth after fulling. Large tracts of land around the centre of Hawick were once used for this purpose, e.g. the Commercial Road, Laing Terrace and Rosalee areas, as shown on the 1859 Ordnance Survey map – 'A week after I saw him at the tenter field' [HA1865], 'The tenter grounds of Messrs. Laidlaw & Sons were almost all swept away . . . ' [BM1997], '. . . with its tenter-field for the drying of blankets scoured at the Under Damside . . . ' [WAPJ], v. to stretch out cloth for drying – '. . . for steaming them to make them soft, for tentering them, for shrinking them, for measuring them . . . ' [DMW] (this gave rise to the phrase 'on tenterhooks').

Tentifutie see Tentyfit

tenty (ten'-ee, ten-tee) adj., arch. heedful, attentive, careful – 'I mankind's ways hae marked weel, Wi' tentie, watchfu' e'e' [JoHa], 'An' Cupid sly, wi' tentie aim, Pops in some's heart an arrow' [JoHa], 'Come awa', my little lambie, Toddle tentie, come to me; Weel ye like to get a hobble On yer auld grandfaither's knee' [TCh], 'Oh, cruel death! how could ye slay The tentie herd, sae auld and grey . . . ' [TCh] (also written 'tentie').

Tentyfit (ten-tee-fi') n. Tentyfoot, the local name for an old tower at Branxholme. It is the only remaining part of the former courtyard of walls and buildings around the Castle, the fragment now standing being about 15 feet high. It is a grade A listed building (also spelled 'Tentifutie' and variants).

ter (ter) n. tar – 'ee've got ter aa ower yer new breeks', '. . . and in summer, whan the smuists are woarst an the pluiffin ter froes up atween the causa-stanes' [ECS], note that the English phrase 'tarred with the same brush' more often involved a stick in Scotland – '. . . the sister. who was 'tarred with the same stick' . . . soon severed the troublesome foot from her leg' [EM1820].

terce (ters) n., arch. the right of a widow to one third of the rents of her husband's property, this right being by default until 1681. A document of 1553/4 shows a dispute over the right of 'terce' between Janet Ker, 2nd (and divorced) wife of the late Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme and Buccleuch and his grandson, the new Sir Walter.

Teri (tee-ree) n. someone from Hawick – 'Then rally, Teries, yin and a', Let this year be the best o' a' ' [RH], 'Hark again the stirring strains! Rouse ye Teries from your slumbers' [RH], '. . . They'll wish that they had ne'er been born Or else been born a Teri' [JT], '. . . For Teries the wide world over Are Teries evermore' [TK], 'There's a welcome and a greeting from the Teri in the street, And a gladness in the knowledge that old Hawick's hard to beat' [WFC] (also occasionally written 'Teerie'; deriving from an abbreviation of the ancient Hawick slogan; the plural is Teries).

Teribus (tee-ree-bus) interj. short form of the Hawick slogan and battle-cry, 'Teribus ye Teri-Odin' – 'O Teribus! thy magic spell, Thy sons shall own where'er they dwell' [RH], '. . . And while the strains of Teribus float on the air Within each breast the life-blood proudly runs' [JCG], '. . . For it still sticks close to us In the town of Teri-bus. Rally round, rally round, rally round' [AW], 'The 'Callants' of Hawick gathered And joined with the hastening throng; And spontaneous The rousing Teri-bus Rang out as they marched along' [TK], 'Cry aloud, 'Teribus', conquering terror' [IWS] (various spellings exist).

Teribus (tee-ree-bus) n. the main Common Riding song, with words written by James Hogg in 1819 to a tune that is surely much older, effectively replacing the slightly earlier words of Arthur Balbirnie. It was originally called 'The Colour', and is distinguished from Hogg's other main song 'Flodden Field', which has the same chorus (and is about the events of 1513, rather than 1514). The words were reprinted in 1824, 1829 and 1836, with several changes. The melody bears some similarity with tunes derived from Border (or Northumbrian) pipe music (e.g. 'Bobby Shaftoe' and the essentially identical tune called 'Brave Wully Forster' that exists in a 1694 manuscript, as well as the beginning of a piece of music attributed to Praetorius, but believed to have been originally by Caroubel arond 1600). However, it is unclear whether this gives any hint as to its age or origin. The version played by the Drums and Fifes also has several differences compared with the tune that is sung. This is the tune played as the band strikes up on both the Thursday evening and the Friday morning of the Common Riding. An older version of the tune survives (on a manuscript page in the Museum), and said to be the one played by Walter Ballantyne, town piper in 1777; it is a variant of the better known tune, seeming more like a pipe tune, and perhaps fitting the words to Balbirnie's song better. Hogg's words were first published in Kelso (partly because of the two satirical verses); it is sometimes also referred to as 'The New Common Riding Song', to distinguish it from Balbirnie's song (the 'Auld Sang') of perhaps a generation earlier, which had the same tune. Hogg's words were clearly influenced by Balbirnie's (although perhaps they were both using phrases from even older lyrics). A version preceding Balbirnie's c.1800 verses had as the chorus 'T for Teri, O for Odin, H for Hawick and C for Common', but none of the rest survives. It may be that the song was also once called 'Drumlanrig's March'. Hogg's words are not entirely historically accurate, but that has not dampened their popularity. There were at one time suggestions for 'improving' the words to make them more factually correct, but this never caught on (it is unclear who wrote these improved words in the latter part of the 19th century, but they are now lost). Hogg's full version contains 24 verses, although only a subset of 14 of them are commonly sung, and 2 of the more controversial verses were not printed along with the rest until significantly later. There are also 2 additional verses attributed to Hogg that are never included: one referring to Henry Scott 'the Hero of Quebec'; and the other commemorating the tricentenary of 1814. A shorter 5 verse version of the song is sung at each Ride-out by the 'Big 4', after they have mounted for the ride back to Hawick, as well as on other occasions, such as at the Overseas Night on the Wednesday and in the Avenue on the Saturday; these verses begin 'Scotia felt . . . ', 'After Flodden . . . ', 'Down they threw . . . ', 'Magistrates . . . ' and 'Peace by thy portion . . . '. It is sung at St. Leonard's after the Thursday night Chase, and in the same place after the Thursday and Friday morning Chases of Common Riding Week. Its singing also marks the end of the Colour Bussing on the Thursday. At the 'Sang Singin' on the Friday (after the return from the Mair) the Sang Singer sings the complete version. The verse beginning 'Annual since our flag's been carried . . . ' is used for toasts to the Cornet, 'High the trump of fame did raise them' for the Right- and Left-Hand Men (only relatively recently) and 'Magistrates be faithful trustees . . . ' for the Acting Father. The Drums and Fifes also play the tune numerous times, such as when the Cornet is presented the letter on Pickin Night, on the site of the Auld Brig on the night of the Orderin o the Curds an Cream, at the Kirk Wynd at the start of proceedings on the Friday, as the official party march from the top of the Mill Path to the Song Singing, and on the Saturday when the mounted procession passes them at Drumlanrig Place, and at the Handing-Back ceremony – 'Teerie buss and teerie heather, Aye the ewe lap o'er the heather' [JR], '. . . Sings 'Teribus' wi' right goodwill On pyramid or steeple' [MG], 'A' man, if ye was to play ony other tune enow but 'Teribus', the toun o' Hawick wad rise' [RM].

Teribus (tee-ree-bus) n. pipe march (in 2/4 time and D Major), which is similar, although quite distinct from the traditional Hawick song. The tune is very similar to 'Bobby Shaftoe' (otherwise known as 'In and out the dusty bluebells'), much moreso than the faimilar Hawick song. Although it is a standard of many pipe tune compilations, it is not generally known to be associated with Hawick, although the name surely means there is some connection. It is unclear when it was first published, and hence it is possible that both it and the 'Auld Sang' derive from the same basic tune sometime pre-1800. However, the first definite appearance is in the 'Scots Guards' collection of 1954, and so it is also possible that this was merely a personal version from an unknown piper of the early 20th century, or simply an error in the naming of the tune. Note that some web-sites and published discussions erroneously assume this is exactly the same as the Common Riding tune. To further confuse matters there is an earlier version of the tune for the song 'Teribus' known, this written in 4/4 time and being a variant of the modern melody, but again with only a passing similarity to this pipe tune.

Teribus (te-ri-boos) n. Sir John (14th C.) listed as 'Johne de Teribus' when he witnessed a charter confirming the church of Cavers to Melrose Abbey in 1384. He also witnessed a document relating to the lands of Penangushope and Cauldcleuch in about 1360. It is presumably a coincidence that his name is similar to Hawick's slogan.

the Teri Bus (thu-tee-ree-bus) n. name of a mini-bus used for transporting old folk in Hawick.

the Teribus Airms (thu-tee-ree-bus-ārmz) n. public house in the Fore Raw in the mid-19th century, opening around 1840. The early proprietor was Michael Wintrup. A glass gin bottle labelled 'Teribus Arms' is in the Museum.

the Teribus Altar (thu-tee-ree-bus-awl-tur) n. Roman altar stone at Chesters Museum on Hadrian's Wall. It appears to contain the word 'TERIBVS', and since it has been labelled with a reference to the 'old gods', some Teries have suggested that it relates to the Hawick slogan. However, when it is realised that '-ibus' is a common Latin ending, other, more mundane explanations suggest themselves. Most likely the part visible reads together as 'DIBVS VI–TERIBVS', meaning 'to the gods named Viteri' (or alternatively the broken stone contains only part of an inscription), since there are many other examples of similar words on other altar stones.

the Teribus Clock (thu-tee-ree-bus-klok) n. unique ornamental clock outside Hamish Smith's jeweller's shop at the Horse since 1996. It was designed and constructed locally by Hamish Smith, Tosh Scott and other tradesmen. It features 3 horses with riders in Common Riding regalia, which appear every quarter hour, while the chimes play 'Teribus'.

teribus.com (tee-ree-bus-do'-kom) n. web-site dedicated to all things Hawick, set up by Cameron Reith in 2001.

the Teribus Spitfire (thu-tee-ree-bus-spi'-fīr) n. presentation Spitfire fighter aircraft, funded from £5,325 raised by townspeople during 'Spitfire Week' in August 1940. It was probably a Mark I Spitfire, identity number R7128, and possibly shot down on 8th July 1941.

Teribus ye Teri-Odin (tee-ree-bu-see-tee-ree-ō-din) interj. the Hawick slogan, whose origin is lost in the mists of time. A popular theory is that it derives from the Anglian 'Tyr haeb us, ye Tyr ye Odin' meaning 'Thor keep us, both Thor and Odin'. However, there is no evidence that Norse gods were ever worshipped in the Borders, and moreover, the period in which the area around Hawick was under the dominance of the Anglians of Northumbria (and hence speaking a version of Anglo-Saxon), but before it was Christianised (and hence not worshipping Anglo-Saxon gods), was quite short. This theory appears to have first been suggested by lexicographer John Jamieson around 1825, was accepted by Sir James Murray and further discussed by W.N. Kennedy in 1858. However, it is not supported by normal phonological development either (where one would have started with the Old English forms 'Tīw' and 'Wōdan' and these could not have conceivably developed into the Old Norse forms for the gods). Another idea is that the slogan derives from the Celtic 'Tir a buidh's, tir a dion' meaning 'Land of Victory, Land of Defence'. This is perhaps more likely, since Hawick people spoke a version of ancient Northumbrian (related to other 'Brythonic' languages, like modern Welsh) until perhaps the 8th century. A third, and least romantic theory is that the phrase is essentially a set of nonsense syllables used to sing along to the song (analogous perhaps to 'Hey tutti tatie', the former name for the tune used by Burns for 'Scots Wha Hae', said to have been the march used by Robert the Bruce's men at Bannockburn). However, it should be stressed that all of these ideas are based on guesswork, and the truth could be something else entirely. In any case it appears that Hawick's slogan is quite ancient, perhaps over 1,000 years old, and it is intriguing that it has survived through the Reformation and other political and social changes. Its survival is even more curious when one realises that, although familiar to everyone from Hawick, no one knows its meaning! – 'Teeribus and Teeriodin . . . is still shouted by the inhabitants of the borough, when they annually ride the marches' [JoJ], 'Teribus ye Teriodin! By our sires who fell at Flodden, Muster swift and rouse the river! Strike for Hawick, and Hawick for ever' [RSC], 'Ter y bus! Ter y Oden! Rolls from throat, and drum, and fife, Its deeper meaning mingles With the leaven of their life' [MC], 'Hawick heart's shall e'er be proud. 'Teribus y Teriodin!' Sing the slogan long and loud' [IWS] (the spelling is entirely subjective).

TERIBVS (te-ri-boos) n. inscription on a Roman stone in Chesters Museum. It was noted in 1876 when members of the Archæological Society visited Hadrian's Wall. Their guide, Dr. Bruce, described how the inscription was 'DEOS. VI-TERIBUS', referring to old gods, with the rest of the words missing.

Teridom (tee-ree-dum) n. the state of being a Teri, the area around Hawick – 'He burns to clasp the callant's hand That's come from some far distant land, Aince mair in Teridom to stand The nicht afore the morn' [JMS].

Teridom (tee-ree-dum) n. web-site aimed at Teries, set up by Jane and Kevin Currie in 2000.

Teries (tee-reez) n., pl. plural of Teri – 'Hail! Hail to the Teries, True, dauntless and cheerie – Laings, Watsons, and Wilsons, Scotts, Elliots, Laidlaws' [T].

Terie-ess (tee-ree-es) n. word sometimes used to refer to female Teries (e.g. by George Luff when referring to his waitresses at the 1899 Common Riding dinner.

the Teri-hub (thu-tee-ree-hub) n. Hawick-based email news-group, set up by Graham Peacock in 1999, providing information and entertainment for Teries at home and abroad. It grew out of the old Hawick News web-site list, which was one of the first Hawick-based web-sites. It later moved to being a Yahoo group (also written 'Teri Hub').

Teriland (tee-ree-land) n., poet. the area around Hawick – 'There was a priest in Teriland, An' had he leeved lang syne He'd been a brave Crusader, An' gaen to Palestine' [FL], 'Yet are there ever in their hearts enshrined, Visions of Teri-land, with many a thought Of friends and friendships they have left behind, Beneath the shadow of the auld green Moat' [TK].

Teriodin (tee-ree-ō-din) n., adj. second half of the Hawick town slogan, also referring to the song – 'When that gallant Chieftan came in view, And his war bugle loud he blew, The Hawick pipes played Teri Oddin, And sallied out the Border Bowmen' [MP], '. . . Join in the old refrain Shout Teriodin again and again' [JT], 'They ha'e nae Teri-Odin flag . . . ' [JT], 'Unfold the Teri Oden flag, To kiss the breeze o' Summer . . . ' [JT], 'Teri Odin's strain entrancing Through the air triumphant soared . . . ' [TK], 'Though names be forgotten, as time passes by, Teri-Odin for ever – united the cry' [WFC] (also written 'Teri Oddin', 'Teri Oden', 'Teri-Odin', etc.).

the Teri-Optimists (thu-tee-ree-op-ti-mists) n. theatrical group who performed songs, dances and sketches in the Town Hall in the 1930s. Prominent members included Bay Armstrong, Eileen Bannerman, Cameron Conn, Jimmy Glenny and Ian Mactaggart.

term-days (term-, te-rum-dāz) n., pl. the four days on which rents and other payments were traditionally due in Scotland, also known as quarter days. These days were once very prominent in the yearly calendar, particularly those in May and November; servants were hired by the year or half-year and leases by the year or longer, almost always on those days. The names, as well as the dates, were different in Scotland than in England. Called Candlemas, Whitsun, Lammas and Martinmas, they were originally on 2nd February, 26th May, 1st August and 11th November, respectively. However, Whitsun moved to 15th May when the Gregorian Calendar was formally adopted in 1752. But in 1886 the term days for hiring and renewing domestic and agricultural workers was changed in Scotland to 28th February, 28th May, 28th August and 28th November, and this was confirmed by an Act of 1990. Until well into the 20th century it was common to see the families of shepherds and other farm labourers moving from one farm to another on 28th May.

termigant (ter-mi-gin') n., arch. a violent, quarrelsome person – 'Termigants have been rife in this same month . . . ' [RM].

Term Thursdi (term-thurz-di) n. popular name for the first Thursday after Martinmas term, in November. It was formerly an important day in Hawick, which was treated as a fair day by the country residents. It was a day for settling accounts in Town, and for preparing for the Winter. The 'mairt' (usually a fattened sheep) would be bought for the Winter's meat supply and there would be a general ly festive atmosphere. The practice stopped towards the end of the 19th century.

the Terraces (thu-te-ri-seez) n. popular name for streets in the Wellogate, largely built through the Hawick Working Men's Building & Investment Company starting in 1866 and continuing to roughly the end of the 19th century. The land was petitioned for from the Duke of Buccleuch, partly as a result of the 1849 cholera epidemic. The grid-like layout gives little concession to the contours of the land.

terrier (te-ree-ur) n. nickname for a Territorial Army soldier. The T.A. headquarters is on Union Street.

terrification (te-ri-fee-kā-shin) n., poet. act of terriying, state of terror – '. . . wad meak the vera chafts to fo' abreed, wuv doonright terrification' [JTe].

terrin (ter-in) n. the act of applying tar, particularly to sheep. This was formerly a common practice locally, used to prevent infection in cuts and for identifying the sheep from a distance. However, the benefits were never entirely clear and it became less common by the mid-19th century as the preference for white woollens grew.

the Territorial Kirk (thu-te-ri-tō-ree-ul-kirk) n. name used in the early days of West Port Kirk.

Terrona (te-rō-nu) n. farm in Ewesdale, off the left-hand side of the A7 a couple of miles before Langholm. There are multiple spellings in older records. It was a 5-merk land when the superiority was inherited by Robert, Lord Maxwell, in 1550, by John, Lord Maxwell in 1604, by Robert Maxwell in 1619 and still held by John, Earl of Nithsdale in 1670 and William, Earl of Nithsdale in 1696. Adam Armstrong was tenant in 1679. The farm was surveyed in 1718 along with other properties of the Duchess of Buccleuch, when it covered 457 acres and was bounded by Cooms, Whitshiels, Arkin, Nether Wrae and Flask. James Little was there in 1797. James Paterson was farmer there in 1841 until at least the 1860s. There are remains of an ancient walled settlement to the southeast of the farmhouse (there are many spelling variants; it is 'Torronna' on Blaeu's 1654 map, 'Toroun' on Gordon's c.1650 map and 'Tareona' on the 1718 Buccleuch survey).

tertan (ter'-in) n. tartan, a distinctive pattern of coloured lines and bands for cloth, traditionally worn in the Highlands, with specific designs attached to clans, often spuriously. Hawick District Corporate tartan was launched in 1996, with a dress version in addition. There is no indication that locals historically wore tartan clothing – 'There's the spot where we were lyin' Rowed within your tartan plaid!' [JT].

tertle (ter-tul) v., arch. to recognise, observe – 'To take notice of; as, 'He never tertled me,' he took no notice of me, Roxb.' [JoJ] (cf. tartle).

the Test (thu-test) n. one of a number of oaths of allegiance introduced, particularly in the 17th century, to differentiate between Protestants and Catholics in England or adherence to Presbyterianism versus Episcopalianism in Scotland. The most important 'test' was probably that of the Test Act of 1681, which enforced Episcopacy and attempted to suppress the Covenanters. In Hawick in that year it seems that the Bailies and Council suscribed to a specific text, stating that no one should 'enter into covenants or leagues, or to convocate, convene, or assemble in any councils, conventions, or assemblies, to treat, consult, or determine in any matter of state, civil or ecclesiastical, without His Majesty's special command'. The tailors and weavers took the Test in 1684.

testamentar (tes-ta-men-tar) adj., arch. pertaining to a testament, nominated in a will, especially in the phrase 'testament testamentar', meaning a testament in which the details are specified by the person whose testament it is – 'The testament testamentar, and inventar of the gudis, geir, soumes of money, and dettis pertening to vmquhile Walter Scot of Branxholme . . . ' [SB1574].

testificate (tes-ti-fee-ki') n., arch. a testimonial, solemn declaration, evidence, specifically a document issued by a Kirk Session for someone moving to a new parish, describing whether they were married or unmarried and whether or not they were free of scandal; the requirement to produce such a document was prescribed in an Act of Assembly of 1648 – '. . . by reason of our being vagrant and vagabond persons wanting testificatts . . . ' [BR1700], 'To a man that had a testificate' [PR], '. . . and the beadle was further ordered to make inquiry anent the rest of the testificates' [PR1713].

testit (tes-ti', -ta') adj., arch. testate, mentioned as part of a will – '. . . nor pursue . . . but before the Bailies of this Bruch in ther awin Court, except for testat geir, under the pane of £5, toties quoties' [BR1640], 'Freemen prohibited from instituting prosecution for debts in any other than the Bailie Court, except testat goods' [JW1701] (also spelled 'testat').

tethert (te-thur') pp., adj. tethered – '. . . and that nane keippe any in the day fra the 15th of April till harvest, except they be tetherit, under the lyik pane' [BR1640], '. . . The cranes stand oot at the Port o' Leith Whaur the boats lie trigly tethert' [WL] (see also teather).

tethert (te-thur') adj., arch. in an untidy, unkempt or confused state (also written 'thether't').

tethery-methery (te-thu-ree-me-thu-ree) n., arch. an untidy mess, confused state (noted as 'tetherie-metherie' by E.C. Smith; related to the children's counting rhyme, see eendy-teendy).

tetty (te-tee) adj., arch. irascible, bad-tempered – 'Tettie, Having a bad temper, Roxb.; the same with Titty' [JoJ].

teuch (tewch) adj., arch. tough – 'They're teuch sauchs growin' i' the Reuch Heuch Hauch' [JAHM], 'Weel, weel, if ye wull read, read us some guide teuch fichting' [AM], '... thin Than a robin's leg And twice as teuch' [DH], 'Glooms and glints, sudden flashes of gold across the fields – teuch and smooth on grass ...' [DH] (the pronunciation formerly had a long diphthong merging ū and oo).

teuchent (tewch-en') pp., poet. toughened – 'The teughent bow o' toil's unstrung, Soft ease comes laughing gay, O' [JoHa].

Teueot (tee-ee-i') n. another early spelling of 'Teviot' (e.g. on Mercator's 1595 map of Scotland).

Teuiot (tee-ee-i') n. early form of 'Teviot', recorded in 1160 (the pronunciation of the time is of course unknown, but it seems that the v sound may have come later).

Tevidale (te-vee-dāl) n. former name for Teviotdale, used around the 15th and 16th centuries.

Tevidalenses (te-vee-da-len-seez) n. former name for the people of Teviotdale. At the Battle of the Standard in 1130 the second division of King David's army conisisted of them along with the Cumbrenses.

the Teviot (thu-tee-vee-i', -teev-yi') n. major river running through Hawick, having its source at Teviot Stone and joining the Tweed 37 miles later, near Kelso. It is the longest of the Tweed's tributaries and its main tributaries are the Borthwick, Slitrig, Rule, Ale, Jed and Kale Waters. Other minor watercourses joining it include: Lang Grain; Rashie Grain; Rams Cleuch Burn; Mare Sike; Giddens Cleuch Burn; Commonbrae Sike; Hare Sike; Black Cleuch Burn; Frostlie Burn; Falnash Burn; Dryden Burn; Nest Burn; Weens Sike; Teindside Burn; Northhouse Burn; Howden Cleuch; Harwood Sike; Vales Burn; the Allan Water; Fenwick Burn; Wilton Burn; Dean Burn; Howden Burn; Boonraw Burn; Kirkton Burn; Hassendean Burn; Honey Burn; Dean Burn; Grinding Burn; Ale Water; Oxnam Water and Kale Water. The river has always played a significant role in the life of Hawick. In the town it used to be crossed by a ford at the foot of Walter's Wynd, or by boat at the Coble, until the Teviot Bridge was built in 1741. The river was harnessed (and much polluted) by manufacturers in the 19th century. The river is prone to flooding, some historical floods being very dramatic. It also has the potential to dry up almost entirely in hot summers, and also sometimes in the winter (as in January 1748, March 1785, January 1787, winter of 1803/4 and November 1838), presumably due to blockage by ice. Some stone artefacts found around the river in Hawick are in the Museum – 'Here's to the river that takes its Ale before its Kale and kisses Anna at the mouth' [T], '... And Teviot's banks, where flowers of fairy blow, – Couldst thou with cold unraptur'd eye survey, Nor wake to bardish notes the bosom-thrilling lay?' [JL], 'Ah! when shall I by Teviot's stream The haunts of youth again explore? And muse in melancholy dream On days that shall return no more?' [JL], 'O swiftly gae speed the berry-brown steed That drinks o' the Teviot clear' [JL], 'Where nature's lavish hand profuse has strew'd Luxuriant beauties. Here the Teviot winds Her easy course, meand'ring round the vales' [JR], 'Far better loved young Lilias fair than tales of love to hear, To seek unseen her simple bower By Teviot's waters clear' [JTe], 'Life, like thy tide, sweet Teviot, hath its turns, Its devious windings, wayward, wild, and free' [GWe], 'The moon is on the waters! and silvert white they gleam, And soothing is the melody of Teviot's gentle stream' [GWe], 'There's ae auld toon by Teviot's side, That's famed in days o' yore' [JT], 'And while the Teviot's stream shall glide To reach Tweed's silver strand, They sons shall sing and dream of thee, Thou dear auld Borderland' [AO], 'While the silvert Teviot's flowing Ever onward to the sea ...' [TK], 'There's a toon, by hills surrounded, stands by bonnie Teviot's side' [TC], 'River of dreams, you are dear to us ever, Dear where the broad haughs invite you to Tweed; Dear where the willows dip low to your crooning Songs that you murmur through valley and mead' [WL], 'The Teviot babbles on its way; The clash of steel has passed away' [IWS] (origin uncertain, although the name is very old, possibly Celtic, and perhaps even older, with a suggestion that it is derived from the Sanskrit root 'taváss', perhaps meaning 'surging', which curiously may also be the same root as for the Tweed; it seems that the pre-Celtic hydronym gained the Cumbric suffix 'ed', probably later than the 8th century; it is 'Teuiet' in charters around 1200, 'aque de Teuyoth' in 1279, 'aqua de Teveot' in 1420 , 'Theviot' in 1547/8 and 'Teueot' in 1579, with other spellings including 'Teviott', Teiot', etc.; it is 'Tiot fl.' on Gordon's c.1650 map, and 'Teatt fl.' in Blaeu's 1654 atlas).

Teviot (teev-yi') n. Ninian (16th C.) listed in 1579 among men accused by the Bailie of Hexham of stealing 2 horses from near there. He was 'of the Hilhous', and his lands were probably the Hillhouse near Newcastleton. The other men named were Mungo Armstrong 'Flie the Gaist', Alexander Bell 'Crat Bell' and Ninian Armstrong 'Gawdie'.

Teviotbank (tee-vee-i'-bawngk) n. merchant ship, built in 1938 by J. Readhead & Sons Ltd. for the Bank Line (Andrew Weir Shipping & Trading Co. Ltd.) and sold off to a company registered in Panama in 1955. It may have been used to lay mines during WWII.

Teviot Bank (tee-vee-i'-bawngk) n. villa overlooking the north banks of the Teviot, about a mile before Denholm. A house was built there about 1791 for David Simpson, designed by Robert Burn. In 1799 Joseph Elliot was a coachman there and James Walker was a footman. The house was rebuilt in 1833 with designs by William Burn (son of the previous architect). There was also a stable building to the west and a walled garden with gardener's cottage to the east. It was the residence of William Scott, grandson of William Scott of Woll, then J.S. Heron-Maxwell, followed by Edward Heron-Maxwell. To the north are cropmarks, indicating a possible ancient enclosure. A piece of carved stone found here in 1918 may have come from Hassendean Kirk and is probably a 'cresset lamp' (sometimes written 'Teviotbank'; possibly also known earlier as 'The Knowes').

Teviotbank Gairdens (tee-vee-i'-bawngk-gār-dinz) n. street in Denholm off the north end of Canongate.

Teviot Brig (tee-vee-i'-brig) n. bridge across the Teviot, connecting the Sandbed with Wilton, built 1738–1741 with stone from Spittal quarry. This was the first bridge over the Teviot at Hawick, and it meant that traffic from the north no longer had to ford the river at Walter's Wynd, or travel all the way down-river to Ancrum. There had been some debate about whether to put it at the Sandbed or the foot of Walter's Wynd, the question being resolved by a group of local landowners (Sir Gilbert Elliot of Minto, Sir Gilbert Eliott of Stobs, Andrew Bennet of Chesters and John Chisholme of Stirches). There was also a great deal of trouble raising the money (£450 total cost) and paying off the original bond (£250 from the Duke of Buccleuch's commissioners), this being probably the largest municipal project undertaken by the town. The bridge was completed when 'the kistone was perfected and close' on 29th July 1741, but the debt took about 20 years to clear; this is despite other towns being asked to contribute (e.g. Glasgow contributed £5). During construction the animals used to transport materials were pastured on the Common Haugh and Myreslawgreen (with no other animals allowed there during that time). The original bridge was too narrow for carts to pass in the middle (sometimes causing arguments), and was very steep on each side. The piers were strengthened around 1751 (along with drains being added) and after many other repairs it was removed in 1865 and replaced with a less steep and contracted bridge. The architect was Andrew Wilson and the builder was John Marshall. During excavations for the new bridge the trunk of an oak tree was found embedded in the gravel, presumably left there in some long ago flood. The original bridge can be seen in paintings of 1800, 1808 and 1812. The new bridge has 3 arches and was designed by A. Wilson. The bridge was also popularly known as 'the Haugh Brig' and has subsequently become known as the Albert Bridge, possibly because of an error in the Ordnance Survey map of 1898. The name 'Teviot Brig' is also used for other bridges across the river, including the one built at Denholm in 1864.

Teviot Brig Road (tee-vee-i'-brig-rōd) n. name sometimes used for Albert Road, or the street between the Sandbed and the Teviot Bridge (i.e. Orrock Place).

Teviot Court (tee-vee-i'-kōr') n. sheltered housing development built by Eildon Housing Association in 1989–91 on the Tannage Close property previously belonging to the Co-operative Store.

Teviot Crescent (tee-vee-i'-kre-sin') n. street between the High Street and the river, originally part of the Common, with lands feued after the Division of 1777, and the Wee Haugh being the sole remaining piece of public land. The area was used as nurseries by Dickson's. The houses were built around 1832 as skilled, middle-class workers' residences, and are now listed for preservation. They are 2 storeys, but most have attic extensions with dormer windows. The street was obviously named after the river. William Laidlaw & Sons had their Teviot Crescent Mills here. A mill lade used to run from Laidlaw's Cauld along the side of Teviot Crescent and through the Mills. It was filled in in 1914. The Drums and Fifes walk along this street as part of their march around the old tolls on 'the Nicht Afore the Morn'.

Teviot Crescent Mills (tee-vee-i'-kre-sin'-milz) n. hosiery and tweed factory built by William Laidlaw in 1834 on Teviot Crescent, to the north of the Little Haugh, and later extended. The suitability of the site (owing to the drop in the Teviot) was first suggested by millwright Gideon Scott. The factory was once very large, extending along the Teviot from the Little Haugh until almost the foot of Dovecote Street. The footpath along the riverside was popularly known as 'the Back o the Mill' or 'Chinnie's'. The factory was also referred to as 'Laidlaw's'. It was demolished in about 1908 and the site cleared. The open dam was filled in around 1914, with the southern part later becoming a car park. The site of the mill was used as a garage (later a supermarket) and also contained the Henderson Technical College (now houses).

Teviotdale (tee-vee-i'-dāl) n. the valley of the Teviot, in which Hawick is nestled. The word is sometimes synonymous with Roxburghshire, i.e. extending beyond the boundaries of the river valley itself. It was also the name used for the local arch-deaconry in early church organisation. This area was part of the Diocese of Durham in the 11th century, but was transferred to the See of Glasgow by the end of the 12th century. The region was occupied by the English in the 14th century, neing recovered in 1383/4 – 'My native stream, my native vale, And you green meads of Teviotdale . . . ' [JL], 'When morn's first rays fall quivering on the strand, Then is the time to stretch the daring hand, And snatch it from the bending poplar pale, The magic harp of ancient Teviotdale' [JL], 'And for the world I wadna' leave My Bonnie Teviotdale' [JoHa], 'Young Mary was the loveliest lass In all green Teviotdale; Her cheek outvied the budding rose, Her breath the rosy gale' [JTe], 'Oh, Teviotdale! loved land of song, What memories to thee belong' [JCG], '. . . Where nature's voices join to speak In praise of glorious Teviotdale' [RHL], 'O sing me songs of Teviotdale That tell an old familiar tale' [IWS] (called 'Teuidalia' by the Romans; it was 'Teuegetedale' in about 1117, 'Theiudall' around 1147, 'Thevietedalia' about 1165, 'Tevietedale' in about 1170, 'Teuietesdale' in the early 13th century, 'Tevidaill' in Bagimond's Roll of 1275, 'Thevidat' in a Scottish record of 1297, 'Tevydalle' in an English document of 1391 and 'Tevidalia' in the 1407 charter for the Barony of Hawick; the early spelling varies wildly, e.g. 'Theuydalia' in about 1360, 'Teuidalie' in 1415, 'Tewydalie' in 1425, 'Thewidalie' in 1427, 'Teuidaylle' in 1431, 'Teuidale' in 1433/4, 'Tevidalie' in 1448, 'Tevidalia' in 1453, 'Theuidailie' in about 1452, 'tevidale' in 1498, 'Tewidaill' in 1501, 'Tavidale' in 1516, 'Tevidale' in 1479, 1500 and 1525, 'Tyvidalie' in 1525, 'Tevidaill' in 1530, 'Tavidale' about 1540, 'Tewydayll' in 1546, 'Theviotdaill' in 1547/8, 'Tevydell' in 1566, 'Tewidale' in 1567, 'Teviotdaill' in 1583/4 and 'Teuiotdaill' in 1591).

Teviotdale (tee-vee-i'-dāl) n. small region in New Zealand, between the town of Waipara and the coast. This north-east part of the South Island is dotted with familiar placenames, including Cheviot, Ferniehurst, Hundalee and Timpendean.

Teviotdale (tee-vee-i'-dāl) n. song with words by Robert H. Laidlaw and music by Frank Simpson. The words were published in the Hawick Express in 1934 and reprinted in 1950 when the music had been written. It was first sung publicly at the Glasgow Hawick Association's Common Riding Night, the singer being Mrs. Margaret Turnbull (a niece of Francis George Scott). The original key of D major was later lowered to B flat major. It has no chorus, and is probably a little too complex to be sung regularly.

Teviotdale (tee-vee-i'-dāl) n. blend of pipe tobacco sold by D. Simpson Ltd., from about the War years until the 1960s.

Teviotdale (tee-vee-i'-dāl) n. blended whisky, formerly labelled and sold by John Turnbull of Hawick.

Teviotdale (tee-vee-i'-dāl) n. Thomas (16th C.) Englishman, who was tenant in Ingram and had a local surname. He was recorded in 1590 as 'Thomas Tevidaile' when it is claimed that he was wounded by a group of Scottish raiders, specifically Burns, Youngs and others.

Teviotdale Amateur Bicycle Club (tee-vee-i'-dāl-am-ee'-ur-bī-see-kul-klub) n. earliest known cycling organisation in Hawick, also known as Teviotdale Cycling Club. It was formed before 1881, when the Hawick Bicycle Club (to become the Hawick Cycling Club) was formed, and some competitive events were held between them in the 1880s. The club ceased to be active in about 1889.

Teviotdale Bakery (tee-vee-i'-dāl-bā-ku-ree) n. former bakery at 2 Princes Street. It was run by Martin P. Baillie, father of singer Isobel.

the Teviotdale Club (thu-tee-vee-i'-dāl-klub) n. former social club near the foot of Beaconsfield Terrace, also known as 'Hawick Billiard Club'. The building was constructed in 1877, and has had many subsequent uses, including as a milliners, the office for Bonsor's factory and the Jehovah's Witnesses Kingdom Hall.

Teviotdale Crescent (tee-vee-i'-dāl-kre-sin') n. ??.

Teviotdale Cyclin Club (tee-vee-i'-dāl-sī-klin-klub) n. alternative name for Teviotdale Amateur Bicycle Club.

Teviotdale Dairy (tee-vee-i'-dāl-dā-ree) n. former dairy at 49 North Bridge Street, next to the Buccleuch Memorial. The buildings were designed in about 1899 by J.P. Alison as a symmetrical, 2-stotey, 3-bay block in red sandstone, with Dutch influence in the detailing. The company was set up in the late 19th century and continued in the 1930s as 'Honeyburn and Teviotdale Dairy Company' by Andrew Haddon and his son Andrew. Other partners were Jimmy Taddei and Mr. Collier the grocer. The company delivered certified (i.e. Brucellosis and T.B. free) milk to the local region. It was later owned by the Buttercup Dairy Company. It finally folded in 1982, with the building surviving (with monogrammed gable still visible, containing a bull and the monogram 'T. D. Co. L.') as a shop, although the bottling plant at the back was demolished.

Teviotdale Fermers' Club (tee-vee-i'-dāl-fer-murz-klub) n. organisation formed in 1859 to be a forum for discussion and to represent the interests of local farmers. The first President was William Aitchison from 1859–73, with James Oliver being secretary from 1859–1905. It used to meet in a room in the Tower Hotel, where portraits of several ex-Presidents hung through much of the 19th century. It grew out of the Agricultural society for the west of Teviotdale, formed by James Douglas of Cavers in 1835 (although both existed together for several decades). The Oliver family were Honorary Secretaries for the Club 1859–1994. The regular meeting time has been Thursday nights during the winter months. The club is still going strong.

Teviotdaleheid (tee-vee-i'-dāl-heed) n. name formerly used for the upper Teviot valley, particularly to refer to the Buccleuch estates there in the 17th and 18th centuries. It was once included in the lands formerly known as Ringwoodfield. It is referred to in 1551 as part of the bounds described when Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme was appointed Justiciar of Liddesdale (it is already 'Teviotdaleheid' in 1551 and 'Teviotdaillheid' in 1633).

Teviotdale Herriers (tee-vee-i'-dāl-he-ree-urz) n. Teviotdale Harriers, the local amateur running club. Following a cross-country run by 9 local men, who met at Deanfield, the club was formed in 1889 as a by several local merchants and professionals. The 12 founders were John R. Turnbull, Findlay Purdom, George Heron Wilson, John Purdom, Douglas Oliver, Robert Blair, James Blair, Harold Evers, Robert Anderson, Charles McLaren Purdom, Willie Laing and Robert Laing. The first Captain, Vice-Captain and Secretary/Treasurer were John R. Purdom, George H. Wilson and Charles M. Purdom, respectively, It is said to be the third oldest in Scotland in continual existence. The inclusion of track competitions came a few years after the club started. The club's Challenge Cup was first presented in 1894. Rob Barton was an early success for the club, representing Britain at 800 m in the 1908 Olympics. A Junior Section was formed in 1907 and a Ladies' Section in 1930. Clubrooms were built on Bath Street in 1956, and moved to the former Citizens Advice Bureau at 1 Towerdykeside in 2006. A history, 'The First Hundred' was written by John L. Coltman in 1989.

Teviotdale Hockey Club (tee-vee-i'-dāl-ho-kee-klub) n. mixed hockey team existing before WWI, based in Hawick. The 4 Laing brothers all played for the team.

Teviotdale Leisure Centre (tee-vee-i'-dāl-lei-shur-sen'-ur) n. official name for the Leisure Centre, also known as 'T.L.C.'.

Teviotdale Ludge (tee-vee-i'-dāl-luj, -loj) n. house in Commonside, just past Newmill, built in 1934 as a shooting lodge for the Duke of Buccleuch. It has been for many years run as a hotel, Teviotdale Lodge Country House. It has also been the site of Common Riding Ride-outs.

Teviotdale Ludge (tee-vee-i'-dāl-luj) n. Hawick branch of the Royal Antediluvian Order of Buffaloes, Lodge 10417. Sometimes known as 'the Buffs', this was one of two local branches of a fraternal and benevolent organisation founded in the 19th century. It folded in 1990.

Teviotdale Mills (tee-vee-i'-dāl-milz) n. former factory at the corner of Commercial Road and Albert Road, being the main premises of Scoon & Hood, previously Scoon & Barrie. It was built in 1877 (or perhaps earlier) by Greenwood, Watt & Co., and sold to Scoon & Barrie in 1888. J.P. Alison designed a new yarn store there. It was later Scoon & Hood's until about the Teviotdale Regiment (thu-tee-vee-i'-dāl-re-jee-min') n. foot regiment formed by Sir William Kerr, 3rd Earl of Lothian, in 1639, after the signing of the National Covenant. It was one of the armies raised to protect Scotland against Charles I, and also referred to as 'Lothian's Regiment' (Buccleuch commanded a Tweeddale regiment, Hume a regiment from the Merse, etc.). The Regiment probably consisted of about 500 men, many of whom must have been local. They were part of the Covenanter force that crossed the Tweed with Montrose in 1640, capturing Newcastle. The Regiment was disbanded in 1641, but reformed in 1642 and sent to Ireland. About 1642 Lords Lothian, Buccleuch and Cranston were made Colonels of foot of a combined force, with Sir William Scott of Harden commanding the horse. They returned from Ireland in 1644, but mutinied for lack of pay in 1645 and then suffered huge losses at the Battle of Auldearn. The Regiment continued to exist for about the next 40 years.

the Teviotdale Rifles (thu-tee-vee-i'-dāl-rī-fulz) n. alternative name for the Roxburghshire Rifle Volunteers, also known as the Border Rifles.

Teviotex (tee-vee-ō-teks) n. textile company based at 15 Commercial Road, weaving country tweeds and luxury cloths at Lovat Mill.

Teviot Grove Academy (tee-vee-i'-grōv-aw-ka-du-mee) n. seminary run towards the end of the 19th century at 10 Union Street by James Brand, also known as 'Brand's Schuil'. It was taken over in 1895 by the School Board and run as the town's Secondary School. Pupils were transferred to the new school from Buccleuch Street along with the teacher A.S. Williams. The Science and Art classes were held in the Buccleuch Memorial, and James Brand was the Rector. The secondary school transferred back to Buccleuch Street in the early 20th century. School Inspectors' Reports from 1896–1904 are in the National Archives.

Teviothaugh (tee-vee-i'-hawf) n. farm near Denholm, on the north side of the Teviot, just beyond the north end of Denholm and to the south of Minto. It was once part of the Minto estate. Nailer John Oliver was living there in 1815. Christopher Hislop was farmer there in 1841. It was farmed by James Young in the 1860s and by the Miller family in the late 19th century, until the 1920s.

Teviotheid (tee-vee-i'-heed, teev-yi'-heed) n. Teviothead, village about 9 miles south of Hawick, which is spread out along the A7, and was formerly called Caerlenrig. Prior to the opening of the Scots Dyke to Haremoss Turnpike, there was an alternative route from Langholm to Selkirk (skirting past Hawick) which diverged at Teviothead and crossed to the Borthwick valley. The area was for many years the home of Henry Scott Riddell, with a plaque on his cottage there, his memorial cairn overlooking the area, and his burial place in the churchyard. The Chapel of St. Mary's of Caerlenrig existed there from early times. There was a 'chapel of ease' there, for the outlying members of Hawick Parish from the early 18th century. The parish itself was formed in 1850 out of parts of Hawick and Cavers, and extends to the Dumfriesshire boundary. Prior to this time the area was generally known as Caerlenrig. The area was famous for the 1530 capture and hanging of Johnnie Armstrong and his men. His grave and commemorative plaque are there. The village long had its own primary school, but it was closed in 2004. It also had its own library from at least the 1830s. A stone war memorial (designed by J.P. Alsion) was erected after WWI – 'There is no men of all the men in this grey troop of mine But blind might ride the Borderside from Teviothead to Tyne' [WHO], 'At Teviothead there stand three stones, If ever you're that way, Take time to seek them out And read the words they have to say. One man was called to fight a fight And one to win a race And one to write a special song To mark his time and place' [IWL] (the place name appears as 'Teviotheid' in 1623 and is used regularly from the 1660s).

Teviotheid Cottage (tee-vee-i'-heed-ko'-eej) n. home of Henry Scott Riddell at Teviothead, built for him about 1840 by the Duke of Buccleuch, and also known as Dryden Cottage, Caerlenrig Manse and Dryden Burnfoot. It still exists and has a commemorative plaque to Henry Scott Riddell, erected there in 1898. About 100 yards to the east there were 2 ancient cairns that were excavated in 1869, an iron spearhead being found, which is now in Hawick Museum. The 1863 Ordnance Survey map shows an additional ruined building that is now gone.

Teviotheid Haa (tee-vee-i'-heed-haw) n. Teviothead Hall, village hall in Teviothead, used for various community events.

Teviotheid Kirk (tee-vee-i'-heed-kirk) n. church in Teviothead Parish. The site of the ancient Chapel of St. Mary's of Caerlenrig lies within the old churchyard, and contains an ancient stone, as well as the burial site of Johnnie Armstrong, with the memorial stone of 1897. 'Mr' Thomas Hume was recorded witnessing baptisms in the area in 1713 and 1714, suggesting he was acting as preacher there. There was a 'chapel of ease' near there around 1715, as part of Hawick and Cavers Parishes, built on the Thornyhaugh by Falnash, with regular services commencing in about 1721. A collection was made in Hawick Parish to raise money to repair the masonry of the meeting house in 1722. A petition of 1725, signed by about 100 locals, requested the Duchess of Buccleuch to supply an allowance for a preacher. In the 1752 Hawick Parish records the church is referred to as 'Meeting House at Thorny Hall'. A new building constructed on the other side of the stream in 1799 (later converted into the village school). The Parish was created in 1850 from the more distant parts of Hawick and Cavers, repaired in about 1821 when a new preacher was installed. The church was built in 1855/6, and designed by Mr. Cowan, the Duke of Buccleuch's Clerk of Works. It is a plain rectangular building of whinstone, with freestone edges and buttresses. Some alterations were designed by J.P. Alison around 1905. The church was linked with Hawick Old Parish 1972–89 and with Wilton from 1989. It celebrated its 150th anniversary in 2005, with the current Duke of Buccleuch in attendance. A communion token exists from 1854, oval in shape, perhaps the one donated to the Museum in 1900. A roll of the ministry is: Thomas Hume, at least 1713–14; David Graham, from 1714; John Chisholme, from 1720; John Laurie 1738–c.45; Andrew Walker 1745–50; Robert Rutherford 1750–56; Patrick Kerr, from 1757; James Erskine 1763–64; John Riccarton 1764–65; Charles Paton, from 1780; James Sanson 1785–c.88; Thomas Dyce 1792–c.1804; Robert Shaw 1804–16; Joseph Thomson 1817–19; Gavin Turnbull 1821–c.31; John Dobbie, about 1831; Henry Scott Riddell, 1832–42; William Lamb 1843–44; Daniel MacNee, from 1847; James Duncan 1850–53; Robert Young 1854–84; Robert F. Colvin 1884–87; Archibald H. Dinwoodie 1887–1919; Arthur H. Dunnett 1920–24; David S. Stiven 1925–29; John Livingston 1929–40; James Hill 1940–63; Robert McConnell 1966–72; David L. Wright 1972–86; George Watson 1989–91; Brian Hendrie 1992–97; John Shedden 1998– .

Teviotheid Library (tee-vee-i'-heed-lI-bru-ree) n. former library in Teviothead Parish, also called the Caerlenrig Chapel Library. It was probably established in the early 1800s and mentioned in the New Statistical Account in 1839.

Teviotheid Pairish (tee-vee-i'-heed-pā-reesh) n. Teviothead Parish, formed in 1850 from the outlying parts of Hawick and Cavers parishes, centred on the village of the same name. It is bounded on the south by Dumfriesshire, and on the other sides by the parishes of Roberton, Hawick, Cavers and Castleton. There was a chapel at Caerlenrig from early times and a 'Chapel of Ease' here from long before the Parish was created. Parish records exist from 1824.

Teviotheid Schuil (tee-vee-i'-heed-skil) n. primary school in Teviothead, which taught pupils up to the end of Primary 5. There was informal teaching there from at least the 18th century, and in 1775 a petition to the General Assembly and the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge resulted in a grant of £4. However, a teacher's salary was not established until 1803. Mr. Armstrong 'the Tailor' (brother of Hawick schoolmaster Christopher) was master there in the early 1800s. When the Presbytery refused to allow Tom Jenkins to take over as teacher, the smiddy was convered for his use (about 1815–18), with him having as many as 45 pupils and the official school just 4. The parish-appointed schoolmaster at that time was a Mr. Elliot. When Jenkins left, the new schoolmaster for the district was Simon Little, who was there intil at least 1861. Pupils were taught in the former meeting house until a new school building was erected in 1826 and a few years later a schoolhouse was built for the teacher. It was referred to as a 'side-parochial school' in 1839 and was run by Hawick and Cavers Parishes together. There were more than 30 pupils in the 1830s. The school closed in 2004, with the pupils being transferred to Drumlanrig.

Teviotheid Show (tee-vee-i'-heed-shō) n. annual agricultural show in Teviothead, organised by the Upper Teviotdale Pastoral Society, starting in about 1950.

Teviot Kirk (tee-vee-i'-kirk) n. Teviot Parish Church, being a new name for St. George's, adopted in 1988, and having links with Roberton.

Teviot Lodge (tee-vee-i'-loj, -luj) n. house that stood on the eastern part of the site of the present High School until shortly after WWII. It was built for the Dickson family, Miss Dickson being owner in 1824 and William Dickson living there in the mid-19th century. It was later the home of Col. William Scott Elliot. It was the first house in Hawick with electric lighting, installed by William Elliot (with the assistance of William Melrose), using 2 copper wires in porcelain insulators, running all the way from his factory at Tower Mill (across the roofs of houses, etc.). An ingenious mechanism allowed Elliot to operate a sluice at the mill so that the lights went off when he was ready for bed. And it was also arranged for signals to be sent by morse code between the house to the mill. A billiard room was added to designs by J.P. Alison in 1890. The daughters of Col. Elliot gifted the house and grounds to the school in 1933. It was used for a while as a nursery, and as the headquarters of the Women's Voluntary Services Organisation during WWII, while the gardens became part of the 'dig for victory campaign' and the riverside lawn was used for games. The house was demolished in the 1950s to make way for the High School science buildings and gymnasium, built around 1960. Wood's 1824 map shows its location and the lay-out of the grounds. A bungalow built at the corner of the site in the 1970s was given the same name.

Teviot Mill (tee-vee-i'-mil) n. hosiery factory in Weensland, built by Walter Wilson in the 1850s, on a piece of ground that had formerly belonged to John Oliver & Sons. The premises of Walter Wilson & Sons there made hosiery and tweeds. It was later associated with Sime, Williamson & Co. and Kenway & Co. Part of the mill was used for a while as barracks during WWI (also sometimes plural 'Mills').

Teviot Pairish (tee-vee-i'-pā-reesh) n. Teviot Parish Church, being the name used for what was St. George's Church, with a connection to Roberton.

Teviot Place (tee-vee-i'-plis) n. street name used in the mid-19th century, presumably the same as one of the other similarly named streets.

Teviot Raw (tee-vee-i'-raw) n. Teviot Row, street alongside the river in the Weensland area, previously named simply 'Weensland', renamed when houses were constructed in 1872 and demolished when considered unsafe in 1968.

Teviot Road (tee-vee-i'-rōd) n. road along the Teviot, parallel to the High Street, leading from Teviot Crescent to the foot of the Mill Port. The houses were developed from 1824, and on Wood's map of that year it is labelled 'New Projected Street'. Previous to that it was a roughly 3 foot wide cobblestone path, close to the water level, which was dangerous in high water, and connected the foot of Walter's Wynd with the Round Close. In the 1830s there was a proposal to build a High Street bypass along the riverside here, together with a bridge to the Sandbed, linking with the New Road, but this never transpired. During the construction of Pringle's Rodono Mills in the 1950s and 1960s there was extensive demolition of old buildings and closes around the bottom of the Round Close, with replacement by the path and steps. After Rodono was demolished the ground was cleared in 1980, part being grassed over and part being used as a car park. The Health Centre was built there in 1989.

Teviotside (tee-vee-i'-sīd) n. poetic name for the banks of the Teviot – 'As I came in by Tiviotside, And by the Braes of Branxholm, There I spied a bonny lass; She was both neat and handsome' [CPM], 'Welcome Spring's return'd again, Trees bud, flowers deck the plain, Birds their former notes do strain, Among the woods of Tiviot side' [BY], 'By Teviotside they took this Colour, A dear memorial of their valour' [AB], 'No place could be so dear to me As Bonnie Teviotside' [RHL], 'No pen or brush can e'er describe The beauty of the Teviotside' [JCa], 'A love ti walk be Teviotside And sei its ripplin witters glide' [IWL].

Teviotside Foondry (tee-vee-i'-foon-dree) n. former premises of James Melrose & Sons on the east side of Commercial Road, adjacent to the Victoria Laundry.

Teviotside House (tee-vee-i'-sīd-hoos) n. former private school at 1 Teviotside Terrace (then a corner house on North Bridge Street), run by Mrs. Dumbreck from 1865 until the 1870s. It was a school for girls, but also took in small boys, one of them being Sir Thomas Henderson. It was continued by her daughters, Euphemia and Katherine, and perhaps also by the Misses Mitchell into the 1880s.

Teviotside Road (tee-vee-i'-sīd-rōd) n. name used for the south side of Commercial Road before it was officially named in 1884.

Teviotside Terrace (tee-vee-i'-sīd-te-ris) n. short one-sided street off North Bridge Street, being the back of some houses on Dovecote Street, built around 1875. The Dumbrecks had a school for girls here on the corner from about 1865, called 'Teviotside House', which was presumably the origin of the name (with the street not actually very close to the Teviot).

Teviot Square (tee-vee-i'-skwār) n. former name for the Sandbed, or the western or central parts, in use between about 1847–57 (e.g. in Slater's 1852 directory). The name had been officially changed by the Council, but was never very popular – '... An' divots an' roughheads gotten where the modern's now ca' Teviot Square' [WNK]'.

Teviot Stane (tee-vee-i'-stān) n. source of the Teviot, reached by walking about 2½ miles over the moorland from where the road ends at Merrylaw farm. It was once the extremity of Cavers Parish, before being transferred to Teviothead in 1850. There was once a large stone there, said to be 4 feet high and 'thickly studded with initials', but broken into fragments, probably in the 19th century. An inscribed boulder was erected there by the Callants' Club in 1931 – '... And urged, in dreams, the forest race, From Teviot-stone to Eskdale moor' [SWS], 'Does your memory, Teviot, wake, To your birth by Teviot Stone' [RSC], 'Near to the stream that with pellucid wave, From Teviot stone flows to the Tweed's fair breast ...' the Text Hoose (thu-tekst-hoos) n. building at 3 Main Street, Denholm, bearing the inscriptions 'All was others all will be others' and 'Tak tent in time ere time be tint', just like houses on Hawick High Street. The house was apparently originally built in the 18th century by Thomas Turnbull, as one of 5 houses constructed for his 5 sons. It was demolished in 1910 and rebuilt by Dr. John Haddon, with the texts inspired by the ones in Hawick.

textiles (tek-stīlz) n., pl. the industry that has been the mainstay in Hawick for more than 300 years. It began with hand knitting, while frame knitting was introduced around 1680, carpet weaving from the early 1750s and hosiery became commercialised by John Hardie in 1771. In 1728 the Board of Manufactures set up a person in Hawick (as well as 9 other towns), to sort, staple and wash coarse, tarred wool. In 1777 there were stated to be about 65 looms in the Town, manufacturing a range of linen and woollen products, and by 1820 Hawick had about half of Scotland's frames. Cloth manufacturing began in about 1787. By the early 19th century there was also manufacturing of blankets and gloves. The first cloth to be made in Hawick was a coarse blue variety, which was sent to Leeds for finishing. Tweed grew to prominence from the 1830s, becoming the main sort of locally produced cloth. The focus shifted from stockings to woollen underwear in the latter half of the 19th century and to women's knitwear and sportswear in the 20th century.

' [BR1640], '. . . opening the dwelling house door of Agnes Wood, yr neighbour, and theiftuouslie stealing and away taking out of her house certaine goods and geir . . . ' [BR1696] (also written 'theiftouslie', 'thiftouslie', etc.; cf. theftously).

thift (thift) n., arch. theft – '. . . or that committs greitere thift, sal be banyshit the town, and lose thir freedom for ever' [BR1640], '. . . that the said Bailie Ruecastle was guiltie of Sacriledge, Thift, and with most opprobrious speeches and names . . . ' [PR1718], 'For out o' the hairt procede ill thouchts, murders, advoutries, furnications, thifts, fause-wutness, blasphemies' [HSR].

Thilestane (thīl-stān) n. former lands listed in the charter to James Scott, Earl of Dalkeith in 1693. It is listed among the lands in upper Teviotdale that were once part of the Lordship of Ringwoodfield, hence presumably this is not 'Thirlestane'.

thi'll've (thi-luv) contr. they'll've, they will have.

thim (thim) pron., arch. them (noted by E.C. Smith; thaim and thum are more common).

thimbler (thim-blur) n., arch. a thimblerigger, someone who runs a shell game – 'A fiddler is here, and a thimbler is there, Wi' nut-men and spice-men at Copshawholm Fair' [DA].

thimmle (thi-mul) n. a thimble, a foxglove flower (probably the more common local form; see also thummle; see also thimmles).

thimmlefi (thi-mul-fi) n. a thimbleful – 'No, no, just a thimblefu'. It manna gaun tae ma heid or Aw'll no' can tell ma story' [JEDM].

Thimmle Haa (th-mul-haw) n. former name for a building in Hawick, also known as 'Tummel Haa' (noted by G. Watson).

thimmles (thi-mulz) n., pl., arch. the foxglove, Digitalis pupurea.

thin (thin) conj., prep. than – 'she's a faster rinner thin am er', 'yer een er bigger thin yer belly', . . . when ee wax lyrical ti yer less thin fortunate Gala pals' [IHS] (also spelled 'than', as in English; cf. then).

thin see then

thing (thing) n., arch. amount, quantity, extent – 'I understand little thing can be brought against you o' this day's mischief' [RW], sort, kind (almost used as a sufix) – 'I've some mair paper, but it's no sic guid thing as that' [JAHM], 'Wad ye like some black ink, or some blue thing?' [JAHM], 'Mask iz a pickl new thing' [ECS], 'The broon thing's mair uise as the yallih' [ECS], pl. matters, duties, etc. – 'Ee'll finnd ee've other thing adae' [ECS] (these senses not common in English; also hing).

thingubeed (thing-u-beed) n. a thingumabob, someone or something temporarily forgotten (thingubby and hingummy are also used, as well as the English 'thingummy').

thingubby (thing-u-bee) n. something whose name is not known or forgotten, a thingummy, thingumajig, whatsit – 'A hink what's 'ei's name din eet, thingubby, frae up the Loan', 'Thing-a-bee, thing-a-beet, thing-a-meet, etc., is a substitute for the name of a person or thing unknown or temporarily forgotten. Cf. Gen. Scottish thingumbob, thingiment, etc.; English thingummy' [ECS], 'As ee get older ee yaise that a lot mair, thingubby, thingubby, thingubby!' [ME], adj. whatchamacallit, descriptive word which temporarily cannot be recalled – 'it was aa thingubby, ee ken?' (also written 'thing-a-bee'; perhaps used more frequently than 'thingummy' when referring to a person rather than a thing).

think shame (thingk-shām) v., arch. to be ashamed – '... he asked him if he 'did not think shame to leave sae often by this road', and suggested that 'it wad hae been mair decent like to hae gaen up the Loan and oot by the Langback this time'' [AM].

thir (thir) pron., arch. these – '... before yir witnesses, John Scot Bailzie, Robert Denis, surgeoune, George Scot, James Morlaw, and Robert Nilhag' [JW1558], 'Thir things were done day, month, place, and yeir of God foresaid ...' [BR1688], 'When 'thir' is used absolutely without a noun following, it generally becomes 'thirs'; 'Thirs is meyne'' [JAHM], 'The northern plurals, 'thir' and 'thae', answering to the southern 'these', 'those', are unknown in parts of the north-east of Scotland where we hear 'this beuk's', 'that scheen', for 'thir buiks', 'thae schuin'. 'Boonjeddart, Hundlie, and Hunthill, Thir three they laid weil on at last' [CPM], 'Thirs is mine, thae's (= those are) yours, but whae's aucht thon yins?' [GW], common in the legal phrase 'thir presents', meaning 'the present document' – 'Be it kend til al men be thir present lettris, me Dauid Scot of the Bukcluch ...' [SB1470], '... before thir witnes, Thomas Glendynwyn, Alexander Scot ...' [SB1510/1], '... befoir thir witnessis, ... Walter Scot of Gordelandis, Walter Scot of Tuschelaw, and Johne Watsoun, with vtheris diuerse' [SB1574], 'All thir 51 lands adjacent to ye toune are estimat to pay nyne scoir bolls in stok ...' [PR1627], 'I Thomas Henderson, smyth in Flex, grants me be thir presents ...' [BR1701], 'We by thir presents binds and obleisses us and our successors in the office of baylyearie and toune counsell of the said brughe of Hawicke ...' [HAST1902], adj., arch. these – 'Quo' Johnie, I'd rather in England die, Ere thir sax sheep gae t' Liddesdale wi' me' [CPM], 'But wha comes neir, wi' statelye stryde? Wha is thir gentil twa?' [WiSp], '... thir braes hed seen unco sichts' [ECS], 'The wund and the rain's been roarin' Thir twae nichts and mair ...' [DH], used specifically for foods – '... to which a collective significance is attached by the prefixing of a plural demonstrative or other adjective, as thir kail (= these kale)' [ECS] (sometimes plural; there is more common).

Thirat (thee-raw) n. Pierre Louis (b.1776/7) French Napoleonic prisoner of war located in Hawick. From Oranienbaum, he was an Ensign and midshipman of the Atlante. He was taken prisoner in Catalonia in 1810, taken to Leith in 1811 and from there ended up in Hawick. He was probably housed along with other officers at Slitrig Cottage. He painted 'View of St. Mary's' (1813), which shows where the prisoners lived. He may also have painted other local scenes. He may have been released as part of a prisoner exchange.

thirl (thi-rul) v., arch. to bind in servitude, to be bound or under obligation – 'they were thirled ti the mill, meanin they hed ti git their corn ground there', '... and thereby what corns shall grow on the lands disponed, are thirled to Roughheugh mill, and pay the ordinary thirledues' [DCW1741], 'Langsyne, when mills were few, The district roon Was thirled to ane, an' a' within The legal boond ...' [FL].

thirlage (thir-leej) n., arch. the state of being thirled, usually applied by rule of the landowner to his tenants. It was part of the feudal structure which tied a farmer to a particular mill – '... whereby these Baillies created a sort of thirlage that drew all the drinking to their own houses' [C&L1780].

Thirlestane (thi-rul-stān) n. ruined tower and surrounding area in the Ettrick valley, a mile or so north-east of the village of Ettrick. It was once the seat of the Scotts of Thirlestane, who became the Lords Napier of Merchiston and Ettrick, which included the Lord Napier who once resided at Wilton Lodge. They gained the lands in the early 1500s from the Laird of Cranston-Riddell, although there is a John Scott of Thirlestane mentioned in 1483 (when he became Baron of the half barony of Wilton). There is a record in 1493 of cattle and horses being stolen from Thirlestain Mains. The lands were formerly held by Melrose Abbey; in 1524, when Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme was regranted the office of Bailie of the lands of Melrose Abbey, he was given this farm and that of Northhouse for his fee. This continued in the inheritance of the lands and titles of his grandfather by Walter Scott in 1553/4 (and at that time the lands were jointly valued with Northhouse at £20 Scots), as well as his grandson Sir Walter in 1564 and the next Sir Walter in 1574. These lands were raided by a group of 160 Armstrongs in 1543. The precedence of the Thirlestane branch of the Scotts and ownership of the lands has a complex (and debated) history through the 17th century; the designation 'of Thirlestane' was used by 3 separate families (one probably for the lands of the same name west of Yetholm). Sir Robert Scott of Thirlestane had a charter for these lands from the Commendator of Melrose in about 1620 and granted them to William Scott of Harden in about 1622. It was still listed as part of the Lordship of Melrose in 1634, 1653 and 1661, when held (perhaps just the superiority) by the Scotts of Buccleuch. It was listed among the principal houses of Selkirkshire in an account of 1649. The Laird of Thirlestane's lands in Selkirkshire were valued at more than £3000 in 1678. According to Scott of Satchells, John Anderson was tenant there in about the 1680s. The L-plan tower stood on the left-bank of the Thirlestane Burn, north-west of the later farmhouse. The tower was burned by the English in 1544, although rebuilt. It contains a lintel stone with the initials 'R. S. M. C.' for Robert Scott and Margaret Cranston. The nearby house was built by the Napiers, partly using stones from the tower; however, it was demolished in the 1960s to avoid death duties. The estate passed to George Walker in the late 18th century and then to Richard Brack. The mill lade there was still visible in the late 19th century. It should not be confused with the castle near Lauder of the same name, or the area near Yetholm – 'Proud she looked round, applause to claim – Then lightened Thirlestane's eye of flame; His bugle Watt of Harden blew, Pensils and pennons wide were flung, To Heav'n the Border slogan rung, 'Saint Mary for the young Buccleuch!' [SWS], 'Wher Ettrick wandirs down a plain, With lofty hills belay't, The staitly towirs of Thirlestane With wundir hee surveyt' [ES] (also written 'Thirlstane'; 'Thyrlestan maiori' stream and 'Thyrlestangate' are recorded in a charter around 1236; it is 'Thirlstane' in 1524, 'Thyrlstane' in 1533, 'Thirlstane' in 1550 and 1553/4, 'Thrilistane' in 1557, 'Thirlistane' in 1564, 'Thyrlstane' in 1599, 'Thirlestaine' in 1661, 'Thirlstoun' and 'Thirlestoune' in 1670, 'Thirlstane' and 'Thirlstone' in c.1680, 'Thirlestaine' in 1690 and 'Thirlstoune' in 1695; it is marked 'Thirlstane' on Gordon's c.1650 map, 'Thirrllstaine' on Blaeu's 1654 map and is 'Thirlstaine' on the 1718 Buccleuch survey; the origin is presumably a reference to the 'mill-stone' to which tenants were 'thirled').

Thirlestane (thi-rul-stān) n. Thirlestane Castle, a turretted edifice of red sandstone, near Lauder, overlooking the Leader Water. The central section was built about 1590, then rebuilt in the 17th century and enhanced around 1840. It was the seat of the Maitland family, Earls of Lauderdale, and is now owned by a charitable trust and open to the public (the only connection with 'Thirlestane' in the Ettrick valley was the origin of the name).

Thirlestane (thi-rul-stān) n. farm near Yetholm, just to the north of Yetholm Loch. In 1661 the lands here were purchased from Sir Andrew Ker by James, brother of Sir William Scott of Harden. James Scott was thus the first Laird of Thirlestane in Berwickshire, who are not directly related to the Scotts of Thirlestane in the Ettrick valley. James' son William Scott was the 2nd Laird. It was said that a member of this family was a physician and distinguished chemist to Charles II, whose laboratory here was called the Warlock Room. William Scott-Kerr sold the lands and the house was demolished in the early 19th century.

Thirlwall (thi-rul-wal) n. John 'the elder' (14th C.) recorded as owner of the lands of Roughley and 'Grenhowe' (possibly Greenholm) in Liddesdale in 1365, when Edward III bestowed protection on his tenants there. The suggestion is that he had acquired lands that had once been part of the Comyn holdings in southern Scotland. His seat was at Thirlwall Castle in Northumbria, near the eastern end of Hadrian's Wall.

thirsel (thir-sel) pron., pl. themselves – 'Keep thum be thirsel' [ECS] (used as a collective plural; cf. theirsel).

the Thirteen Drifty Days (thu-ther-teen-drif-tee-dāz) n. popular name for a great snowstorm of early 1674 in which the snow fell continuously for 13 days. In the higher parts of southern Scotland whole flocks of sheep were lost, as related by the Ettrick Shepherd. It is said that many shepherds made walls from piles up the dead sheep in order to give some shelter to the living. As much as 90/Scotland perished. The winter weather began in January, and never really let up until the end of March, with the 13 days themselves beginning on 20th February (although there is some confusion over the dates). The Duke of Monmouth and Buccleuch obtained a special licence in 1675 to import 4800 cattle and 200 horses from Ireland to restock their farms in southern Scotland.

the Thirty Shillin Haugh (thu-ther'-ee-shi-lin-hawf) n. former name for an area of flat ground around the Hermitage Water near the old tower of Park.

this (this) adj. this, in distinction to 'next' (for example, on a Saturday, 'this Mondi' would be in 2 days, while 'next Mondi' would be 9 days away).

this day ... (this-dā) pron., arch. phrases such as 'this day ten days' mean '10 days from today' – 'The minister told us that God willing he intended to administer the Sacrament of ye Supper of our Lord this day twentie dayes, being the thirs Sabbath of October ...' [PR1720].

this efternin (thu-sef-tur-nin) n., adv. this afternoon – 'where er oo gaun this efternin?' (treated as though it is 'the sefternin' in analogy with 'the night', 'the day', 'the morn', etc.; sometimes shortened to the sef).

This is no my ain Hoose (this-iz-nō-mI-ān-hoos) n. tune that is in the repertoire of the Drums and Fifes, and sometimes played on picking night. The tune is also known as 'Colonel David Stewart of Garth's Reel' and is played as a strathspey reel throughout Scotland. It is recorded from at least the early 18th century and Bonnie Prince Charlie is supposed to have danced to it before the Battle of Prestonpans (also called 'Oh! This is no my ain Hoose').

thistledoon (thi-sul-doon) n. thistledown, a soft fluffy yarn used for luxury knitwear garments, called after the silky down or pappus inside the head of a thistle – '... An' oor cashmeres an' angoras An' oor thistledoon lambswoo'' [WL], '... Her step as licht as the thistle-doon, Wi' easy grace she gaed dancin' roun'' [WL].

Thistlesike (thi-sul-sīk) n. farm in Liddesdale, just south of Mangerton, on the opposite bank of the Liddel. It is on the Trysting Sike, and with the forest there known as Thistlesike Plantation. It is probably associated with the place known as 'Sisselscheillis' on the 1541 rental roll, valued at 13 shillings and 4 pence and tenanted by Alexander Armstrong.

the Thistly Bog (thu-thi-su-lee-bōg) n. former name for a boggy area somewhere to the north of the Woo Burn. It is unclear if it was part of Threephead Moss or further north. Some regarded the syke leading from here to the Woo Burn as part of the bounday of Wilton Common, but there was disagreement. As described in 1764, this was the location of a dispute between Walter Scott of Harden and Walter Scott of Burnfoot, with Harden having peats cast there, Burnfoot having the peats thrown back into the hole or broken up, leading to some kind of court case over the boundaries of Wilton Common – '... never knew any attempt, by any party having interest in the common, to assume the Thistly-bog, or any of the ground to the north of the Wooburn, as a part of the common' [DCW1765].

thit (thi', thit) pron. that – 'it was efter that thit aa moved ti Hawick', '... thit there's nae where else on earth it that moment, they wud rither be' [IHS] (only pronounced this way in certain contexts; see also that).

thits (thitz') contr. that's – '... it's that spirit thit's instilled in oor bairns, the next generation o' Teries, a love for song n' poetry thit nae other toon can boast' [IHS].

tho (tho, tho) prep. though – 'A was right tho!', 'she's a right affront tho', 'Hei cam tui, an rallied, tho, an away ei birrlt ...' [ECS], 'Note, too, that theh (or thoh) is used for although, though, notwithstanding, however, for which we use also for aa' [ECS] (also written 'thoh'; commonly used in conversation at the ends of sentences; note the short o and the common th instead of the standard English th).

thocht (thocht) n., arch. a thought, act of thinking – 'Sic a thocht! Na' never fear ye ...' [RH], 'The thocht o' what'll Hawick folk say Aye strengthened heart and hand' [RH], '... Nor gi'e a thocht to the awfu' cloors, That may empty oor saddles ere lang' [JBB], 'The thocht o' hills an' brattlin' burns Where grows the heather bell, lassie' [FL], 'Oh! mony a fond whisper and soul cheering thocht ...' [JJ], '... Their thochts wull often backward stray Ti Hawick their Border hame' [IWL], a pinch, small quantity – 'Gie's a thocht o' saut' [GW], a moment – 'Wait a thocht' [GW], pp., arch. thought, past tense of 'think' – '... That he heard Samuel Rutherford say, that he thocht nane had his purs bot he ...' [BR1642], 'Whae the deevil wad hae thocht o' that without being telled?' [WNK], 'Guid truly, aw maun be thocht little o' when nae-body thinks it worth while to hinder iz frae killing masel' [WNK], 'If onybody hed eyed iz, hei'd heh thocht A was shuir ready for Bowden!!' [ECS],

'An' aw thocht o' a wumman, A'd kent a ma life ...' [IJ], 'But then oor luck began tae turn We thocht we'd try yon wee bit burn ...' [DH], 'He thocht, wi the fog, he'd better bide the nicht there ...' [DH] (used for either the past tense or past participle; cf. thowt and thoucht).

thochtless (thocht-lis) adj., poet. thoughtless – 'The thochtless heart, the careless fit, An' hurts the chaps that has nae wit ...' [FL].

thochtlessly (thocht-lis-lee) adv., poet. thoughtlessly – 'Maist folk are apt to keep in shoals, An' thochtlessly sail wi' the stream ...' [FL].

thockit (tho-kee', -ki') pp., poet. panted, breathed heavily with exertion – 'His toothless gans they fell abreide, He thockyt and he blew' [JTe].

Thoftcotys (thoft-kots) n. former place name in the Borthwick valley, occurring in a document of 1410, when the Regent Albany conferred lands there and at 'Borthwic' on Sir William of Borthwick, on their resignation by Robert Scott. The lands are suggested to be at Hoscote, perhaps being an earlier version of the name, or just part of those lands (the name may be a rare local example of the Middle English root 'toft', meaning a homestead, unless it is the same as the earlier Yrostilcotis; it seems likely that this was a variant of Hoscote, with the transcription of the 's' for 'f').

thole (thōl) v., arch. to endure, tolerate, suffer, undergo, bear – '...His beating heart could hardly thole, For thinking on her beauty' [JR], 'And O, for blessings, never threshe, If ye wadna the brydle thole ...' [JTe], For she'll ride ye post to the clutye deil, And he to the reikye hole' [JTe], ''Tis love, and beauty, and the glass, Makes lifetime worth the tholin'' [JoHa], 'Then where's the rain we canna thole ...' [JoHa], 'Tho' hard tae thole, they seldom last, That's ae guid thing aboot them!' [IJ], '...he sall nevir thole the richteous til be muvet' [HSR], '...while I thole thy terrers I am distraucht' [HSR], 'Ilk ane maun thole the weird he's got E'en till it ends' [JJ], '...Thinks little o' the friendless form Maun thole the Winter's cauld' [JT], 'Though hard to thole, there's yet a hole, We aye get creepin' out' [DA], 'I couldna' thole the cauld hearth stane That doorway that is not' [JEDM], '...And set it in the sun to dry – The waiting o't he scarce could thole' [WFC], 'He'd better hae tholed wi' a half toom wame ...' [WL], 'Nor can I thole their snack-bar wit, Their bowlers and their brilliantine ...' [DH], '...and that she'll juist hev to thole, and hope it wadna be smittal' [DH], to allow, suffer – 'Jesus answirin' said untill him, Thole it til be sae now' [HSR] (from Old English; see also tholit).

tholemuiddy (thōl-mi-dee) adj., arch. long-suffering, patient, pensive, gloomy – '...thae thochts help iz ti cast ma dowth, thole-muiddy boot' [ECS].

tholit (thō-lee', -li') pp., arch. endured – 'Becaus for thy sak' I hae tholet reproch: shæme heth kiveret my fece' [HSR], 'He tholet nae man til do thame wrang ...' [HSR].

Thom (tōm, tom) n. James (c.1820–74) originally from Aberdeen, he was Superintendent of police in Hawick 1854–61. He was a founder member of the Hawick Archæological Society, being listed as the 4th member. He was also involved in the Hawick Volunteer Corps and helped found the Lodge St. James. He was appointed as Curator of the Society's Museum collection in June 1957. Also in 1857 he read a paper at the Archæological Society on 'the Noachian Deluge' and donated a collection of coins. In 1857 he donated a pair of Chinese slippers, in 1860 the 'Handles of Hawick Old Church Doors', in 1861 a large axe-head, found at Northhouse, in 1862 a 'bodle' found when No. 5 High Street was rebuilt and in 1871 'specimens of Thorlieshope limestone, with numerous shells embedded in it, and curious specimen of wood partially changed into coal, from Plashetts Colliery'. His wife was Jane and their children included George, James, Agnes, Alexander, William and John.

Thomas of Wilton see de Wilton

Thomas the Rhymer (to-mis-thu-rī-mur) n. (c.1210–c.1290) Thomas Learmonth, Laird of Ercildoune (an old name for Earlston). Although he certainly existed, little detail is known of his life, which has been heavily romanticised. He may have been born in Earlston, where a fragment of his tower remains. His name occurs as 'Thoma Rimor de Ercildun' when he witnessed a charter relating to Melrose Abbey in the period 1262–89. He possibly retired to the priory of Fail in Ayrshire, and his lands were transferred to the house of Soutra in 1294. He is best known through being the subject of an old ballad, which was extended by Sir Walter Scott; the mediæval romance is known from 5 surviving manuscripts, which were edited and published by J.A.H. Murray in 1875. He was said to have made many prophecies, often in rhyme, supposedly predicting the accidental death of Alexander III in 1285.

He is also meant to have gone off with the Queen of the fairies for 7 years (but actually seems to have been in Ayrshire!). It was also said that as a result of meeting the fairies he was unable to lie, hence his other nickname 'True Thomas'. His son, also Thomas, is recorded resigning lands to Soutra Hospital in 1294, where he is referred to as 'Thomas de Ercildounson son and heir of Thome Rymour de Ercildoun'. After his death his reputation as a prophet became legendary, with many new predictions being attributed to him, such as the defeat at Flodden, the Union of the Crowns, Bannockburn and the Jacobite risings – 'True Thomas lay on Huntlie bank, a ferlie he spied wi' his ee; And there he saw a ladye bright come riding down by the Eildon Tree' [SWS], '... Where Rymour, long of yore, the nymph embrac'd, The first of men unearthly lips to taste' [JL].

Thomline (tom-lin) n. Alexander (1781–1827) born in Wilton Parish, son of William and Jean Smith. He was a slater and glazier on the Cross Wynd, listed there in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. He married Janet Crawford and their children included: William (d.1808); Robert (b.1806); Elizabeth (b.1808); William (again, b.1811); and Alexander (b.1812). His wife could be the widow 'Tomline' recorded keeping lodgings on the Cross Wynd according to Pigot's 1837 directory. Alexander 'Alex' (19th C.) first Treasurer of the Hawick Home Mission when it was founded in 1873. Andrew (b.1792/3) stocking-maker in Wilton. On the 1841 census he was living on Underdamside with 'Tibby', who was probably his mother. George (d.1815) recorded in the Hawick death register. James (b.c.1770s) spinner at Roughheugh according to the ballot for the Militia in Wilton Parish in 1799. James (19th C.) inspector of the poor in Hawick in the late 1800s. He also served as a student teacher in St. Mary's School. He was also Registrar in Hawick in the early years of the 20th century. John (18th C.) woollen manufacturer of Hawick, in partnership with William. Since his name is given first he was presumably the older brother. The pair were tenants of the Waulk Mill in Wilton, purchasing the mill and adjacent lands from Dr. Robert Langlands in 1763 and using this for their dying and finishing business. They are described in David Loch's 1778 book on Scottish trade as 'dyers and clothiers' who 'have considerable business at present, and they have a brother in Glasgow instructing as to the making of cloths fit for that market, and how to use woad in dying of blues & c.' There are records of help given to them in 1779 by the Board of Trade for Manufactures, instructing them how to use a woad vat. In 1780 he and William were witnesses for a baptism for John Clerk, who was at Roughheugh. The company operated as dyers and finishers in the old Roughheugh waulk mill until they sold it to the Inkle Company in 1797. In 1764 they loaned money to Francis Scott, with 9 High Street as collateral, in a sasine that still exists. In 1788 he was recorded as owner of 'Waulkmill of Roughheugh' in Wilton Parish, valued at £22 6s, and another piece of Roughheugh valued at £9. He and William were still recorded as owners of the 'Waulkmill of Roughheugh, acquired from Langlands' on the Land Tax Rolls of 1811 (even although that information was out of date). The family had been known as 'Thomline of that Ilk' and had long resided in Wilton, with their main residence near 'the Nitton'. However, all trace of the family and its original home had disappeared by the 20th century. He is probably the John who married Mary Ekron in Wilton in 1772 and whose children included: Isabel (b.1773); Andrew (b.1775); James (b.1776); Jean (b.1778); John (b.1784); Andrew (again, b.1786); and William (b.1788). His wife was probably daughter of James Ekron and Isobel Betty Richardson. John (d.1849) Hawick stockingmaker who was presumably related to the old Wilton family. He is probably the John recorded on the 1841 census at the Cross Wynd, with wife Helen and children John and George. He may be the John who witnessed a baptism for James Murray (whose son was born at Damside) in 1810. He married Helen Scott and their son George was baptised in Hawick in 1825 Thomas (b.c.1815) shoemaker in Hawick. In 1841 he was at Kirkyard, on Silver Street in 1851 and by 1861 was at 48 Loan. His wife was Isobel and children included Jean (or Janet), James, Alexander, Robert, John, Ralph, Christian and James (again). Walter (b.c.1770) dyer in Wilton. He married Elizabeth ('Betty') Hinshelwood (or 'Hanselwood'). In 1841 he was living at Underdamside with his wife Betty. Their children included: Jane (b.1793); and Nancy (b.1807). He is probably the 'Walter Tomlin' whose child died in Hawick in 1798. In 1851 his widow Betty and son William were living on Underdamside with the family of John Peacock, his son-in-law. William (18th C.) partner with John in an early wool dying business at the Waulk Mill in Wilton. He was probably younger brother of John. In 1780 he and John were witnesses for a baptism for John Clerk, who was at Roughheugh. He and John were recorded as owners of the 'Waulkmill of Roughheugh, acquired from Langlands' according to the Land Tax Rolls of 1811. He married Margaret Scott in Wilton in 1766. Their children included: Agnes (b.1767); Jean (b.1769); Andrew (b.1770); and Walter (b.1771). He was recorded at Roughheugh in 1770, with the witnesses being Gavin Turnbull and Thomas Turnbull (perhaps their employees in the mill). He may also be the William who married Jean Smith in 1778. William (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. In 1778 he married Jean Smith and their children included: Alison (b.1779); Alexander (b.1781); Robert (b.1786); William (b.1789); and Jane (b.1794). William (b.c.1800) born in Innerleithen, he was a stocking-maker in Wilton. He was probably son of Walter and Elizabeth. In 1841 he was living in the same residence as the Lockie family on Damside. In 1851 he was living with his brother-in-law, John Peacock, as well as his mother Betty (also formerly spelled 'Thomlin', 'Thomling', 'Thomlins', 'Tomlin', 'Tomlins', etc.).

Thompson (tom-sin) n. John Riddle (19th C.) married Jessie T., daughter of Walter Wilson and Isabella Richardson. He had sons Robert Riddle (b.1860) and Walter Wilson (b.1862). Mark Hawick-born power lifter. He won the British Weightlifting Association Bench Press Championship in the 110 kg division in 2005. Robert Riddle (19th C.) son of John Riddle and Jessie Wilson. He was a baker and later insurance inspector in Hawick. He firstly married Margaret, daughter of baker Robert Young, and they had children Aggie Lamb Dryden, Jessie W., Walter W., Robert Young, Elizabeth Margaret and Thomas Dryden (who died in 1917 and is commemorated on the Mikra Memorial). He secondly married Annie, daughter of Joseph Smith, gas manager. Richard (18th/19th C.) from Hawick Parish. He is referred to as being at Woodfoot in 1808 when his sister Janet died. Richard (b.1820/1) from England, he was a mason in Wilton. In 1861 he was living on Ladylaw Place. His wife was Jane and their children included Maria, Lavinia and Melinda. Thomas 'Tommy', 'Tufty' Cornet of 1955. He rode on the Friday in his jubilee year. William Lindsay (19th/20th C.) from Allan Glen's School in Glasgow, he became High School Rector in 1908, and remained in the position until 1919 (see also Thomson).

Thomson (tom-, tam-sin) n. Adam (15th C.) recorded as a resident of 'est grange' at the 1494/5 Justice-aire in Jedburgh. Thomas Clommell in Minto was charged with stealing a pig from him. He probably lived at Grange in Ancrum Parish. Adam (17th C.) tenant in Singdean in Castleton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. Rev. Adam (1813–74) born in Coldstream, he was son of Dr. Adam, minister there, who was instrumental in abolishing the monopoly on publication of the Bible in Scotland. In 1833 he became assistant and successor of Rev. Henderson at the East Bank Church in Hawick, having also been called to Dunoon. He was recorded living at the East Port in Pigot's 1837 directory. He suffered from ill-health, spending 6 month periods in Europe in both 1852 and 1856. However, he remained as minister for 28 years, resigning in 1860 and leaving for Sydney, Australia the following year. There he became the first Moderator of the General Assembly of New South Wales. Before his departure there was a special soiree held, attended by almost all the local ministers. He was there presented with an illuminated address bearing the Burgh Seal, signed by the Magistrates and about 800 others, as well as other gifts, including a copy of the Encyclopædia Britannica from J.A.H. Murray on behalf of the citizens of Hawick. For the last 2 years of his life he was Principal of St. Andrew's College in Sydney. He published several sermons while minister in Hawick, including 'A pastoral memorial; discourses ...' (1860). His sister Elizabeth married John Wilson, manufacturer of Ladylaw, while another sister, Isabella, married Army Paymaster James M. Green and has a memorial obelisk in Wellogate Cemetery. He married Helen Ritchie Wilson (1819–53), daughter of hosiery manufacturer Peter. Their children were Adam, Mary (who married James Hogg) and Helen (who married James Fell). He later remarried. A memoir 'Life and Ministry of Rev. Adam Thomson, D.D.' was written by his son-in-law Rev. P. Landreth. A portrait of him exists. Adam (19th C.) married Jessie Affleck in Hawick in 1849. Alexander (15th/16th C.) listed among the Borderers (led by the Homes and Walter Scott of Branxholme) pardoned in 1526 for an attack on the Earl of Arran. Alexander (17th/18th C.) tenant farmer at Whitchesters. He is listed there on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls and is also recorded there in the early 1700s. He is probably the Alexander who witnessed a baptism for William Scott in Whitchesters in 1696. In 1706 he witnessed a baptism for William Scott, who was also tenant in Whitchesters (as well as Robert Scott, the other witness). He was attested to be tenant in about 1710 in the evidence given regarding the state of Hawick's Common in 1767. William Wilson was his servitor in 1712 when rebuked by the Hawick Parish Session. He witnessed a baptism for tailor John Wilson in 1713. He is probably the Alexander, married to Marion Armstrong, whose children born in Hawick included an unnamed son (b.1683) and John (b.1685). He was deceased in 1719 and 'sometimes tenent in Whitchesters' when his daughter Agnes married John Scott (tenant in Hawickshiel). Alexander (d.bef. 1777) resident of Hawick. He married Agnes Cathrae, who died in hawick in 1777. Alexander (19th C.) resident of Edinburgh, who may have had a local connection. In 1866 he donated to the Museum a 'black stone celt and two Egyptian carved stones; one representing amale and female worshipping the household god; the other a lady visitor – one servant is presenting to her the Lotus flower, another bringing in refreshments on a tray, while a third stands behind the lady's chair. They formerly belonged to the late Captain Mitchell, of Trinity'. Rev. Alexander McInroy (d.1897) licensed by Edinburgh Presbytery in 1888, he was assistant at St. Clement's in Dundee and then ordained as minister of St. John's in Hawick in 1889. He resigned his position in 1894. Allan (16th/17th C.) described as 'in Clarelaw' in a 1612 document, where a number of people were accused of over-charging interest on loans. Andrew 'Dand' (17th/18th C.) resident of Minto Parish who married Marion Brown in 1722. He may also have married in 1721, with the bride's name not recorded. His children included Robert (b.1723), Mary (b.1726) and Adam (b.1729). Andrew (17th/18th C.) resident of Minto Parish, probably distinct from 'Dand'. His children included Margaret (b.1719), James (b.1721), John (b.1723), John (again, b.1727), John (again, b.1729), William (b.1731) and Robert (b.1734). Andrew (b.1716/7) workman of Hawick, chosen as one of the 6 representative Burgesses in 1767 to define the boundaries of the Common. He may be the Andrew, son of John, born in Wilton Parish in 1715. He could be the Andrew who in 1772 witnessed a baptism for Andrew Leithead and Marjory Thomson. He could be the Andrew who married Margaret Riddell (who died in Hawick in 1781), with their daughter Betty baptised in 1758. Andrew (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. His son Andrew was baptised in 1738. Andrew (18th C.) cottar at Ashkirk Mill. He married Bessie Riddell and their children included: Robert (b.1745); and James (b.1749). Andrew (18th C.) married Isabel Mathieson in Castleton Parish in 1767. Andrew (18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His daughter Isabella was baptised in 1784. Andrew (18th C.) married Janet Paterson in Ashkirk Parish in 1774. Their children included William (b.1782). Andrew (18th C.) recorded at Burnfoot in Ashkirk Parish on the 1794 Horse Tax Rolls. Andrew (b.1763/4) farmer at Bewlie, recorded on the 1787–97 Horse Tax Rolls. He also had 6 farm horses in 1797 and paid the dog tax at Bewlie in the same year. He was probably the Andrew recorded being in Lilliesleaf Parish in 1787 when his marriage to Christian Usher was announced in Melrose Parish, with Andrew 'Heitton' as cautioner; she was daughter of John Usher of Toftfield. He was at Bewlie on the subscription list for Robert Wilson's 1825 'History of Hawick'. He was recorded as deceased in 1828 in a letter from James Usher, writer in Edinburgh, preserved in the Walter Mason Collection; this was either an error, or referred to his father perhaps. He was at Bewlie in 1841, along with children John, Jessie and Betsy. In 1851 he was a retired farmer at Bewlie Mains, where his son John was farmer. His children probably included: Robert (b.1788); John (b.1789); Janet (b.1794); Thomas (b.1796); Betsy (b.1798); James (b.1800); William (b.1803); and Andrew (b.1806). Andrew (b.c.1770s) mason at Calaburn according to the ballots for the Militia in Wilton Parish in 1799 and 1801. He was probably related to mason John, who was at Calaburn in 1799 and 1801 and George, who was there in 1801. Andrew (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Janet Scott and their children included: James (b.1804); Helen (b.1806); Robert (b.1808); Archibald (b.1810); Jean (b.1814); and Janet (b.1816). He could be the Andrew who was a servant at Fairloans on the 1801 ballot for the Militia. Andrew (b.c.1780) son to the tenant of Chapel (presumably George), he was recorded as 'Lame of one of his thumbs' on the ballot list for the Militia in 1799. Probably the same Andrew was ploughman at Chapel according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Lilliesleaf Parish. He is recorded as 'Independent' in 1841 when he was living in Lilliesleaf, probably on the north side of Main Street. He was there with his children Helen, George, Esther and Andrew. He married Jean Harvey and their children included: Helen (b.1815); George (b.1817); and Andrew (b.1826), who farmed at Billerwell. Andrew (b.1783/4) farm worker in Castleton Parish. In 1841 he was a 'Woodforester' at Sandholm, living with his children Janet, Andrew, Jane and Mary. He married Margaret Common, who died before 1841. Andrew (1788/9–bef. 1861) born in Ashkirk Parish, he was a road surveyor in Ewesdale. He was living at Brieryshaw in 1841 and 1851. He was unmarried and lived with his sister Mary Riddell; she was a widow in 1851, and listed as 'Fund Holder' in 1861. Andrew (19th C.) architect who subscribed to Robert Wilson's 1825 'History of Hawick'. Probably the same Andrew was involved with the building of St. George's Church in Hawick. Andrew (b.1800/1) born in Wilton, he was mill master at Roughheugh Mill in 1861. His wife was Helen (from Hobkirk Parish) and their children included: William (b.1829/30), born in South Leith; Margaret (b.1839/40), born in Edinburgh; and John (b.1841/2), also born in Edinburgh. Andrew (b.c.1810) millwright in Hawick. In 1841 he was living at Melgund Place. His wife was Agnes and their children included Walter and Elizabeth. Andrew (b.c.1815) stockingmaker in Hawick. In 1841 he was living on the Fore Row with his mother Lizzy and brother Richard. He is recorded in Dumfries Jail in 1841 and Jedburgh Jail in 1843. Andrew (b.1819/20) born in Castleton Parish, he was son of Andrew, who was also a forester, like him. In 1861 he was 'Assistant Wood Forester' at Sandholm. He married Margaret Elliot in 1849 and their children included: James (b.1850); Robert (b.1851); James (again, b.1852); Margaret (b.1854); John (b.1856/7); and Walter (b.1859/60). Andrew (b.1826) born in Lilliesleaf Parish, son of Andrew and Jean Harvey. He was tenant of Billerwell farm for about 40 years in the latter part of the 19th century. He was at Billerwell in 1861 as farmer of 300 acres, employing 5 people, also living with his brother George and sister Helen. He married Janet Turnbull in Wilton Parish in 1851. Their children included Margaret (b.1852/3), Jane (b.1854/5), Andrew (b.1856/7) and Mina (b.1859/60). He had a brother George and a sister Helen. Andrew (b.1832/3) born in Hobkirk Parish, he was a policeman in Wilton. In 1861 he was '1st Class Constable, Roxburghshire Constabulary', living at Under Hope Park. His wife was Helen and they had a son William (b.1861). Andrew (b.1834/5) son of shepherd Robert, he was born in Southdean Parish. He became shepherd at Wigg on Wauchope farm. Like his father he was a strong supporter of Wolfelee Free Kirk. His children included: William, who was also a shepherd at Wigg; and Marianne. His wife died in 1904. Andrew (19th C.) framesmith at Robert Ewen's factory, who left for Nottingham. He was a popular local singer. He is probably the Andrew listed as a millwright journyman at Melgund Place in 1841, with wife Agnes and children Walter and Elizabeth. Ann (18th C.) housemaid at Wells in 1785, when she was working for Gilbert Eliott. Archibald 'Archie' (16th C.) listed in 1576 as a servant of Sir Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule. There was a promise that he, as well as Martin Crozier in Bedrule, and Martin's son Martin, should all refrain from theft. However, they were all declared rebels in 1578/9. Archibald (18th C.) married Christian Liddell in Wilton Parish in 1729. Archibald (18th C.) foreman at Dickson's Hassendeanburn nurseries around 1770. Benjamin (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1729 he witnessed baptisms for miller John Henderson, John Scott and Adam Kersel. Rev. Charles (1795–1871) born in Dalserf in 1795, he was educated at Edinburgh University. He came to Hawick in 1821 to be assistant for Rev. James Arkle of Hawick Parish. There appears to have been some dispute with the Duke of Buccleuch about his appointment, and he did not become Arkle's successor. According to shoemaker Adam Wilson he both 'charmed and alarmed the Hawick folks'. He was ordained at North Shields in 1823 and became minister of Wick in 1840, then went to the Free Church at the Disruption of 1843, serving at Wick until his retirement. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 1825 'History of Hawick'. In 1825 in Hawick he married Janet, daughter of merchant Francis Ballantyne, and had 11 children. Their daughter Frances Ballantyne (d.1826) was buried along with her grandparents in St. Mary's Kirkyard. He visited Hawick in 1837, during the contested election, and gave evidence at the later investigation. He was mentioned in a poem by David Waters, suggesting he was locally an unpopular anti-Reform minister, and also claiming that involvement in vote rigging was the reason he failed to get support from the local aristocracy for a living – '. . . Or, maybe for a daintie kirk, As did his Reverend Frien' o' Shiels. – (Thae Tory priests are very diels For mischief, roguery and cunnin' . . .)' [RDW]. It was also said that by marrying the daughter of Ballantyne, he took some of the spoils that had been fraudulently extracted from Ballantyne's former partner, 'Auld Cash' – 'A black robed son of light – yclep'd a priest, Removed a load of guilt from off his breast, He wed his daughter and then shared the spoil Which half-way went to save Francisco's soul' [RDW]. Rev. Charles Logan (b.c.1860–1927) minister at Caledon, Ireland, he became minister at Wilton South Kirk in 1906. He resigned in 1912. In 1887 he married Agnes Isles Roger. He is buried in Corstorphine Hill Cemetery. Christopher (d.1800) recorded as 'Old Christophor' in the Hawick death register. David (16th C.) recorded in North Synton in 1581/2. George Caverhill in Whitehaughbrae resigned to him a tenement in Selkirk. David L. son of Rev. Lyndsay, he was educated at Hawick High School. He then attended Aberdeen and Glasgow Universities. He is an evolutionary and environmental biologist and is Associate Professor at the University of Hong Kong. Douglas (20th C.) proprietor of a grocer's shop at 64 High Street in the mid-1900s. He lived at 25 Wilton Hill. In 1947 thieves raided the house and used provisions they found inside to prepare a makeshift explosive, which they used to blow open a safe! Rev. Edward Peter Lindsay 'Lindsay' (1938–2014) born in Edinburgh, son of Edward Christie and Margaret Jamieson, he was brought up in Stow and attended George Watson's 1943–56. He studied at Edinburgh University, graduating M.A. in 1962. He served as student assistant minister at Edinburgh St. Nicholas 1960–62, was licensed by Edinburgh Presbytery in 1962 and was Assistant Minister at Palmerston Church in Edinburgh 1962–64. He was ordained as Minister of Balnornock North in Glasgow in 1964 and then moved to Hawick in 1972 as Minister of Trinity Kirk. He became a well-known and active member of the local community, growing to love its traditions and institutions. He acted as Callants' Club Chaplain and was also involved with the Probus Club. He was Common Riding Chief Guest in 2008 and retired that year after 36 years of service. Despite being advised to move away from his charge in order to enjoy a peaceful retirement, he insisted on staying on in Hawick. In 1964 he married Brenda Jessie (b.1944), daughter of William shanks and had children Stuart, David and Helen. Elizabeth (15th C.) mentioned in 1494/5 when she was allowed to 'compound' for resetting 'Joiffe Glenquhin' (possible Geoffrey Glenholm), who had been involved in the murder of the Laird of Alemoor. She is referred to as 'in Corrisheuch', which may be Corrie Sike in upper Teviotdale. However, it is unclear where she came from or how she may have been related to other Thomsons. She is recorded as 'Besse Thomsone' in the Treasurer's accounts for 1494/5 having obtained remission from the King. Elizabeth 'Betty' (17th/18th C.) Hawick parishioner who died in the early 1700s. She left a 'mortification' to help the poor. The Session decided to enter her name in gilt letters on a big black board in the church, as a way of encouraging other donations; unfortunately this project used up all the money she had left! Elizabeth 'Betty' (19th C.) baker in Newcastleton according to Pigot's 1837 directory. She could be the Betty Thomson (or Little) who was a widow at about 17 North Hermitage Street in 1841 and 1851. Elizabeth 'Betty' (b.c.1800) baker on the Fore Raw, recorded on the 1841 census. George (15th/16th C.) resident of Spittal. In 1502 it is recorded that he had 2 pigs stolen from him there, by Adam Grahamslaw, son of the Laird of Little Newton. George (17th C.) resident of Roberton Parish, when it included Hassendean. The baptism of his daughter Bessie is recorded in Roberton in 1680, 'begotten in fornication with Issobell henderson'; the witnesses were Robert and James Thomson (presumably close relatives, perhaps his brothers). He married Isobel Turnbull in Roberton in 1684 and had children including Isobel (b.1685) and Robert (b.1688). The witnesses in 1688 were Robert and James. Along with Robert he witnessed a baptism for James in 1686. George (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. He probably farmed near Newton. George of Fodderlee (18th C.) husband of Margaret Kerr, from whom he probably inherited the half lands of Fodderlee. In 1788 (and continued in 1811) he is recorded as owner of the lands of Easter Fodderlee, valued at £80. His son was Robert. George (18th C.) married Janet Gordon in Ashkirk in 1759. George (18th C.) married Helen Turnbull in Wilton in 1776. George (18th C.) house servant at Weens in 1791, when he was working for William Oliver of Dinlabyre. Perhaps the same George was also listed as groom at Borthwickbrae in the same year. He was still a servants at Weens in 1792. In 1794 he was a house servant at Lariston, still working for William Oliver. George (18th/19th C.) farmer at Chapel in the 1787–1789 Horse Tax Rolls for Lilliesleaf Parish. In 1797 he owned 5 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. He is probably the tenant in Chapel whose son Andrew is recorded in the Lieutenancy Book in 1799. George (b.c.1780) mason at Calaburn according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia. He was probably brother of Andrew and John, who were also masons at Calaburn in 1799 and 1801. George (b.1788/9) born in Cavers Parish. He was farmer at Cavers Knowes in 1841. In 1851 he was a gardener in Wilton, living at Wilton Kirk Style. He was a member of Allars Kirk in about the 1830s. His wife was Isabella (from Roberton) and their children included Helen, George, Walter, Margaret, Isabella and Elizabeth. George (b.1789/90) born in Chesters. He was a frameworker in Wilton. In 1841 and 1851 he was living at Roadhead and in 1861 on Wellington Place. His wife was Margaret and their children included Janet and Christina. Dr. George William (b.1818) son of Thomas and Anna Drummond from Midlothian. He was brother of Wyville Smith Thomson, who was minister at Cardross, Dunbartonshire. He became a doctor in Hawick with practice on the High Street. In Slater's 1852 directory he is listed as a druggist on 'Market pl' and as part of the partnership of 'Graham & Thomspon', physicians on Buccleuch Street. However, in 1861 he is recorded living at 10 Buccleuch Street. He became a life member of the Hawick Archæological Society in 1862. In 1841 he married Margaret Lang from Dumfriesshire. His children included: George William; Margaret Cadenhead, who married William Scott Elliot; Walter Gowdie; John Lang; Thomas Drummond; Anna Drummond, who married John Turnbull Laing; Emma M.; and Wyville Smyth. He lived at 10 Buccleuch Street and at Northville, Bridge Street. George (b.1820/1) from Lilliesleaf, he was farmer at Newhouses in Wilton Parish. He is recorded there in 1851 with his brother Andrew and sister Helen. George (19th C.) married Margaret Beck in Wilton in 1853. George (19th C.) slater in the Hawick area. In 1867 he donated to the Museum 'portion of a Hebrew book brought from Sebastopol'. George (19th C.) left Hawick in about 1869 and later became Provost in Johnstone in Renfrewshire. He was Provost there 1893–99. In 1897 he gifted to the Town an ornamental fountain, which was sited in Drumlanrig Square, to be replaced about 1910 with the more elaborate Brown Fountain. He attended the 1899 Common Riding, but was reported being in ill health later that year. Gideon (b.1684) son of Robert. In 1707 he and his father were witnesses for a baptism for James Renwick, undermiller at Newmill. Gifford (b.c.1780) servant at Haggiehaugh according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish. The word 'Gilford' is also written, making it unclear which version of this unusual name was correct. Gilbert (18th C.) married Ann Laing in Hawick Parish in 1761. Helen 'Nelly' (18th C.) laundry maid at Minto in 1789 when she was working for Sir Gilbert Elliot. Isobel (17th/18th C.) recorded receiving money from Ashkirk Parish in 1727. Isobel 'Tibbie Tamson' (d.1790) resident of Selkirk, said to be of weak intellect. She was accused of stealing yarn and hanged herself. According to local custom suicides could not be buried in consecrated ground, so her coffin was dragged to a place 'where 3 lairds' lands meet', specifically the Lairds of Philiphaugh and Bowhill and the Burgh of Selkirk, just to the north of Selkirk on Foulshiels Hill. She was interred there, with a rough gravestone placed there later to mark the spot. At Selkirk Common Riding a wreath is placed on her grave, which was marked with a plaque in 1990. There are similarities with the story of 'Jenny Saut Haa' in Wilton. J. (18th/19th C.) resident of Westburnflat. He subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. James (16th C.) recorded in 1541 on a list of tenants and other associates of James Douglas of Cavers when he complained about his farm of Whitriggs being burned by Walter Scott of Branxholme. James (16th/17th C.) notary who in 1599 signed a bond for John Turnbull of Minto that was subscribed between several Turnbulls at Barnhills. James (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. His children (with no mother's name given) included Margaret (b.1632), Thomas (b.1635), Robert (b.1638), William (b.1641), an unnamed child (b.1644), Marion (b.1644), James (b.1647) and Bessie (b.1648). Perhaps the same James, married to Isobel Scott, had a daughter Jean (b.1652). James (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He maried Janet Nivison and their daughter Bessie was baptised in 1659. James (17th C.) resident of Roberton Parish (the part corresponding to Hassendean). He married Margaret Riddell and their children included: Robert (b.1679); James (b.1680); Christian (b.1683); Bessie (b.1686); and Andrew (b.1688). The witnesses in 1680 were William Gray and Robert Graham and in 1686 were Robert and George (who were probably related). He is probably the James who (along with Robert) witnessed baptisms for George in 1680 and 1688, who witnessed a baptism for Robert in 1687 and who witnessed another for Andrew Leyden in 1683. In 1693 he was 'in Hassendeane' when Helen Robson confessed to buying salte from him in a private transaction conducted during Hawick Market (and was accordingly fined). He is probably one of the Jameses recorded at Hassendean on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. James (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk and Hawick Parishes. He married Agnes Thorbrand and their children included: David (b.1689), baptised in Ashkirk; and Alexander (b.1704), baptised in Hawick. James (17th C.) resident at Easter Highchesters according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. James (17th C.) resident of 'the netherend' of Hassendean Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. James (17th C.) resident at Hassendean Townhead according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish, living at Weensland in 1704. He married Agnes Thorbrand and their children included: David (b.1689), baptised in Ashkirk; and Alexander (b.1704), baptised in Hawick. The witnesses in 1704 were David Miller and Walter Paisley. James (17th/18th C.) married Elspeth Scott in Bedrule in 1715. James (17th/18th C.) blind man recorded in Hawick in about the 1720s when the Kirk Session gave him some financial support. James (18th C.) married Jean Phaup in Minto in 1722. Their children probably included Matthew (b.1723), John (b.1726), Jean (b.1729), James (b.1731) and Gilbert (b.1734). James (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Ashybank in 1726 when his daughter Janet was baptised. Ann (b.1727), baptised in Cavers, was probably also his child. James (18th C.) tenant at Midshiels. His daughter Christian married nurseryman Archibald Dickson. He could be the James who in 1729 witnessed a baptism for Richard Turnbull, resident of Midshiels. James (1700–48) poet born at Ednam. He grew up at Southdean, 3rd son of Thomas, who was Minister there (and who apparently died during an exorcism at Wolfelee). His mother was said to be both intelligent and pious. He should not be confused with his more famous Hawick namesake! His family moved to Southdean just 8 weeks after his birth. A cave near Ancrum, popularly known as 'Thomson's Cave' was supposed to have been a popular spot for him to visit, and to have his name carved on its roof. He may have attended Southdean Parish School, but certainly went to Jedburgh Grammar School. He was inspired by Rev. Robert Riccarton of Hobkirk. He was said to have been a mediocre scholar with an early interest in poetry, but he had a Jedburgh Presbytery Bursary in Arts and Divinity at Edinburgh University 1715–24; he was 'Lowland Bursar' for Hawick Parish for the last 4 of these years. He was patronised by Sir Gilbert Eliott of Minto, among other men, and spent some vacations at Minto. He also held lands at Wideopen, near Morebattle, inherited via his mother. He published his first poems in the Edinburgh Miscellany in 1720. He moved to London in 1725, firstly working as tutor to the children of Charles Hamilton, Lord Binning. He got to know Scottish and English poets in London, as well as patrons, and made a literary career for himself there. Among his acquaintances was fellow Borderer and poet John Armstrong (after struggling financiallly, which included being arrested as a debtor at one point). The best known examples of his output are the words for 'Rule Britannia' and the much-revised epic poem 'The Seasons' (used by Handel as text for his oratorio), as well as the highly successful play 'Tancred and Sigismunda'. However, his play 'Sophonisba' fared less well, with the line 'Oh, Sophonisba! Sophonisba, oh!' being satirised in the line 'Oh, Jimmy Thomson! Jimmy Thomson, oh!', which was apparently much better known than the play itself. He also had plays banned for being too political. Scenes from 'the Seasons' are inspired by areas around Jedburgh and Southdean, with the description of a storm collecting over mountain cliffs said to have been based on Ruberslaw. A cave near Ancrum, popularly known as 'Thomson's Cave' was supposed to have been a popular spot for him to visit, and to have his name carved on its roof. He moved from the centre of London to Richmond, Surrey, where he is buried. It is said that in later life he seldom went outside and spent much of his time in bed. He was also known for his drinking habits and was reckless with money. However, he helped 2 of his younger sisters set up a milliner's shop in Edinburgh and funded medical treatment for his younger brother John. He was said to speak in a strong Scots brogue all his life. In his 40s he fell in love with a neighbour, and wrote her several letters, but his affections were not returned. Towards the end of his life he wsa given the sinecure of the General of Customs for the Leeward Islands, probably due to the influence of his patron, Frederick, Prince of Wales. His play 'Tancred and Sigismunda' was popular for several decades and his last major poetical work was 'The Castle of Indolence' (1748), a satire on himself and his circle of friends (with some joking that it was indolence that kept it from being finished!). He died at his house on Kew Foot Lane in Richmond after over-heating and then catching a chill; his friend John Armstrong attended his deathbed. He died in debt, but this was partially recovered through performances of his play 'Coriolanus', the publications of his 'Works' and the sale of his house and possessions. His house was long a place of literary pilgrimage, and later incorporated into Richmond Royal Hospital. The armchair in which he composed the 'Castle of Indolence' (being high-backed and made of beechwood, with a burn on one arm where it is said a candle fell while he was absorbed in his writing) was acquired by Gilbert Eliott of Otterburn, factor at Wells; Eliott insisted that Burns sit in the chair during his brief visit to Wells House in 1787; Burns wrote 'Address to the Shade of Thomson' a few years later. A large hawthorn bush in a garden in Southdean was long regarded as being associated with the poet. There is a memorial obelisk to him overlooking Ednam, another memorial ('Temple of the Muses') on the Bass Hill of Dryburgh, erected by David Stuart Erskine, and a memorial window at Southdean Kirk, as well as a monument in Westminster Abbey. A portrait was painted of him in 1725 or 1726, an etching in about 1735 and another portrait in 1746. Erskine organised a memorial celebration for him, to which Burns was invited but sent lines of apology. There was also a bicentenary celebration at Ednam in 1900 – 'So long, sweet poet of the year, Shall bloom that wreath thou well hast sown While Scotia, with exulting tear Proclaims that Thomson was her son'. A bi-centenary celebration with speeches etc. was held at Southdean kirk in 1900 and a more extensive celebration in Ednam – 'To thee, fair Jed! a holier wreath is due, Who gav'st thy Thomson all thy scenes to view, Bad'st forms of beauty on his vision roll, And mould to harmony his ductile soul' [JL], 'And Ednam's Bard, whose moral strain, I ween, Shall run coeval with the tide of time, While love and taste and genius shall the soul sublime' [JTe]. James (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Todshawhillshiel in 1721 and 1726. His children, baptised in Roberton, included: 'Maury' (b.1721); James (b.1724); and Jean (b.1726). James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Agnes Turnbull and their children included Christian (b.1718), William (b.1721), Walter (b.1723) and Margaret (b.1726). James (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Isobel Wilson and their son James was baptised in 1725. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Isobel Deans and their children included Isobel (b.1726), George (b.1728), Robert (b.1730) and James (b.1732). James (18th C.) married Mary Elliot in Hawick in 1727. James (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Janet Hislop and their son John was baptised in 1728. James (18th C.) married Rachel Douglas in Wilton in 1731. James (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Agnes Welch, probably in 1734 (although no bride's name is given). Their children included: Marion (b.1735); Katherine (b.1737); Thomas (b.1739); William (b.1741); Katherine (again) and Margaret (b.1744); and Helen (b.1748). James (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Elizabeth Nivison and their children included Elizabeth (b.1743) and William (b.1744). James (18th C.) married Helen Turnbull in Wilton in 1747. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Jean Turnbull and their children included Andrew (b.1752). James (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Howcleuch in 1764. His children, baptised in Roberton, included Bettie (b.1750), Helen (b.1755), James (b.1758), John (b.1760) and Robert (b.1764). James (18th C.) tenant farmer at Nether Ancrum. In 1778 he had a sasine for the lands of Fodderlee, following a disposition by Robert of Fodderlee, who must have been a near relative. In 1784 East Fodderlee was sold to William Riddell, and along with Riddell he granted a disposition for the lands to John Thomson; this may have been the John born to a James Thomson in Minto Parish in 1783. He was surely related to George, who was recorded as owner of East Fodderlee in 1788 (unless there is an error in forenames). James (1752–1831) born in Hawick. In 1785 he emigrated to the Niagara district of what was then called Upper Canada. There he married Margaret Emerick and they had 10 children; this included David, who rose to the rank of Major in the Canadian militia, a founding member of the Grand River Navigation Company and owner of several mills and Canadian Member of Parliament. He and his sons built their brick house, baking the bricks themselves. He was described as 'a stern old Presbyterian'. James (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Betty Paterson and their children included Robert (b.1771). Given the coincidence of names, he may be the father of Magdalene, who married Thomas Elliot (with 1st daughter Elizabeth and 2nd son James); if so, he died after being gored by a bull in 1823, when 'herding Mr Scotts cows ... below the new houses upon yon scar head', with his wife afterwards stayed 'at the same house at the burn' having an allowance from Mr. Scott (possibly Archibald Scott of Howcleuch and Commonside). James (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish.

He married Mary Stirling and their children included Janet (b.1775). James (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He was at Dinlabyre in 1778. He married Janet Shiel and their son Duncan was baptised in 1778. James (18th C.) resident of Minto Parish. His children included Isabel (b.1776), Betty (b.1778), Robert (b.1779), James (b.1781), John (b.1783), Agnes (b.1786), Archibald (b.1788), Mary (b.1791), Thomas (b.1794) and John (b.1796). James (18th C.) married Jeany Oliver in Minto Parish in 1794. Their son James was baptised in 1794. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Outerside in 1793, in 1794 was 'late in Broadlee' and in 1798 was at Unthank in Ewes Parish. He married Isobel Graham in 1792 and their children included: Jane (b.1793), James (b.1794), Isobel (b.1796) and Janet (b.1799), all baptised in Roberton; and Mary (b.1802), John (b.1803), Edward Aitchison (b.1805), Robert (b.1807), William (b.1808), Christian Atchison (b.1810) and Edward (b.1811), all born in Ewes. James (18th/19th C.) married Margaret Aitchison in Wilton in 1796. James (18th/19th C.) married Betty Noble in Wilton in 1797. James (18th/19th C.) gardener at Stobs. In 1797 he was listed among men balloted to serve in the Militia. The entry is annotated with 'deserted', suggesting that he fled in order not to serve. His name still apears on the list in 1798, but among those who failed to appear or failed to produce substitutes; William Johnstone, farmer at Tower, was balloted in his place. A reward of 1 guinea was then offered for his apprehension. His status as a deserter was confirmed on the 1799 list. James (18th/19th C.) recorded as servant at Hermiston in Lilliesleaf Parish in the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. James (18th/19th C.) son of William, tenant in Raperlaw and Netherraw. He is listed in the ballots for the Militia in Lilliesleaf Parish in 1799 and 1801. He could be the James who married Margaret Easton and whose children, baptised in Lilliesleaf, included Christian (b.1810), Esther (b.1814), Jessy (b.1815) and Agnes (b.1818). James (b.1799), with no mother's name given, may also have been his child. James (b.c.1780) ploughman at Hermiston in Lilliesleaf Parish according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia. He is distinct from the son of William in Raperlaw who was also listed in 1801. James (18th/19th C.) servant at Teindside, recorded on the ballot for the Militia in Hawick Parish in 1799. Perhaps the same James was resident of 'Woodfoot' on the 1801 ballot for the Militia; he may have been related to John, who was at 'Branksholm Wood foot' on the same list, and Richard, who was farmer at Borthaugh Woodfoot in 1797. James (b.1776/7) born at Over Huntly, son of James and Mary Stirling. He may be the James, labourer at Woll, recorded on the 1799 and 1801 ballots for the Militia in Ashkirk Parish; William was joiner at Woll in 1801, and may have been a brother or other close relative. He was surveyor of roads on the Loan, listed in Pigot's 1825/6 and 1837 directories. He may be the 'Mr. Thomson' whose land is marked on the left side of the Loan, just before the Moat, on Wood's 1824 map. He was listed as a road-surveyor on the subscription list for Robert Wilson's 1825 'History of Hawick'. He is probably the James from Hawick, recorded in a document related to the Haremoss Toll, preserved in the Walter Mason Collection in Selkirk. In 1841 he was living on the Loan with his wife Rachel and children Robert, William, Mary and Rachel. He was still living on the Loan in 1851, as a retired surveyor. He married Rachel Wilkie (from Midlem) in Ashkirk in 1799. Their children (all but the last 2 baptised in Ashkirk Parish) included: Andrew (b.1800); John (b.1804); Robert (b.1806), grocer; Janet (b.1808); William (b.1810), hosier; Mary (b.1814); Rachel (b.1817); and Margaret (b.1821). James (b.1781) born in Minto Parish, son of James. He was a forester in Castleton Parish, living at Sandholm. Probably the same James was a labourer in Newcastleton on the 1799 ballot list for the Militia. He was listed as a labourer at Sandholm on the 1801 Militia ballot; Robert was also there and so perhaps his brother. He subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. He was listed as a 'Woodforester' at Sandholm in 1835–41. He married Margaret Common. Their children included: Janet (b.c.1816), who married Andrew Elliot; Richard (b.1817); Andrew (b.1819); Jane (b.c.1822) and Mary (b.c.1825). Either he or his father was recorded as forester for the Buccleuch estates in Liddesdale in at least the period 1798–1807. He is probably the Thomson from Sandholm who was on the Committee of the Proprietors of Castleton Library. James (18th/19th C.) listed at 'Pingle' on the subscription list for William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. He probably lived at Pingle south of Langholm, but it could have been Pinglehole. James (18th/19th C.) servant at Shaws in Castleton Parish. He was listed as male head of his family in 1835. He married Janet Jackson, but they were rebuked for 'antenuptial fornication' in 1832. James (b.c.1805) born at Appletreehall. He was a joiner in Jedburgh. His wife was Jane and their children included Mary Ann, John, Elizabeth, Isabella, James and Thomasina. James (19th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. He married Agnes Turnbull and their daughter Mary was baptised in 1835. James 'Jimmy' or 'Jamie Tamson' (1827–1888) poet and song-writer, born in Bowden, son of Robert and Helen Wilkie. He had a maternal uncle, Dr. Wilkie of Innerleithen, who was an archæologist and friend of Sir Walter Scott, James Hogg and Dr. Jamieson. He had an aunt, Henrietta Wilkie, Mrs. Drummond of Tranent, who also wrote poetry and he was additionally a second cousin of poet Thomas Aird. As a boy, he herded cows in the Eildons, where he was said to carry a battered copy of Burns' Kilmarnock Edition in his plaid, and where he got to know the poet Andrew Scott. From age 16 he served an apprenticeship as a wood-turner and cabinetmaker in Selkirk. He worked there for a while, before moving to Hawick, where he spent more than 30 years. His first compositions appeared in the Dumfries Herald. He was writer of 'Up wi' the banner', 'The Border Queen', 'Hawick Volunteers' and 'The Star o' Robbie Burns', as well as poems such as 'The Auld Mid Raw', 'The Mither Tongue', 'The Wee Croodlin' Doo' and 'Hairst', many contained in his book 'Doric Lays & Lyrics' (1870). 'Our Robin' was one of his first poems, being published in the late 1850s, with his 'Hogmanay' sung at the New Year of 1860 at the Ewan's Mill gathering. A great admirer of Burns, he helped found the Burns Club in Hawick; it is said that Burns' 'Kilmarnock Edition' was his constant companion while he was a herd. He was Bard for Lodge 424, as well as being Masonic Provincial Grand Bard for Peebles and Selkirk. He was said to have lived in the auld Mid Raw and later at 54 High Street, where a commemorative plaque was erected in 1995. In the 1861 census he is listed on Wilton Terrace, living with a housekeeper Mary Riddell, and her children Mary and Catherine, as well as their children together, John and Helen. In poor health in later life, he moved back to Bowden in 1886, but returned to Hawick a few months later and was supported by his Masonic brethren. At the suggestion of J.Y. Hunter, he set about composing a new Common Riding song in 1887 and later presented 'Up wi' the Banner' to the Cornet, this being only about a year and a half before his death. He died in the Cottage Hospital and is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery, where Lodge 424 erected a memorial obelisk (about a decade after his death). A wooden cup he made from material salvaged from the Mid Raw is in the Museum. The Hawick Burns Club unveiled his portrait at their clubrooms in 1924. In 2005 the new bridge across the Teviot was named after him, and an adjacent statue (by Bill Landles) unveiled in 2006. James (d.1939) son of John, farmer at Synton Mains. He became a saddler of 6 High Street, taking over the butcher's premises of George Davies, with Robert and Thomas Hall taking over from him. His brothers William and John were both farmers. He was secretary of the Border Oddfellows for 30 years and was for many years Session Clerk for East Bank Church. Janet (b.c.1790) confectioner at the Sandbed. In Pigot's 1837 directory she is listed as a baker and confectioner on the High Street. She was recorded at about No. 12 Sandbed on the 1841 census. John (15th/16th C.) witness to a sasine for the Erskines in their lands of Synton in 1508, where he is 'John Thomesoun'. Judging by the other witnesses, he may have been local. John (16th C.) recorded in 1539 as a subtenant of Margaret Falside and Walter Scott in their lands in either Ashkirk or Falside. John (16th C.) servant to Walter Scott of Headshaw. He was recorded in Headshaw in 1580 when he and Richard Brown acted as cautioners for Walter Scott of Headshaw to make payment to Thomas Ker of Kippielaw. In 1583/4 he was among a number of men from the area who were denounced for failing to appear to give evidence in a case against the Turnbulls of Bedrule. John (16th/17th C.) resident of Mangerton. In 1603 he was 'Johnne Thomsoun of Marguerstoun' when there was a complaint that he and others had raided 'Sewingdene' in 1601, stealing livestock and goods and injuring several people; 'Cubbie's Archie', servant of Simon Elliot of Binks, was the leader of the group, which also contained Armstrongs. John (17th C.) son of Rev. Thomas of Hobkirk. In 1639 he became an apprentice tailor with James 'Corsbie' in Edinburgh. John (17th C.) resident of Burnfoot-on-Ale. Along with Robert Hendry, was summoned by the Ashkirk Session in 1643 for 'flytting and swearing denyit the same, whereupon it is ordainit that umquhile hereafter they be tryit to be flytting, ilk ane of them sall pay 20s and stand in their linen before the parochine'. He could be the John whose children, baptised in Ashkirk, included Patrick (b.1632) and Agnes (b.1640). John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Caverhill and their children included William (b.1646) and James (b.1649). John (17th C.) recorded in Penchrise in 1684 when his son, also John, was on alist of Covenanter fugitives. John (17th C.) tenant in 'Mabinslaw' on a 1684 list of Roxburghshire men declared as fugitives for refusing to conform to Episcopalianism. He probably farmed at Mabonlaw. John (d.c.1687) tenant in Flatt when his will was recorded in 1687. It is unclear if this was the Flatt in Castleton Parish. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Isobel Whillans and their children included Margaret (b.1669), James (b.1674), Isobel (b.1684) and Bessie (b.1687). The baptism of Bessie was witnessed by Stephen Greenshields and Michael Turnbull. William (b.1685), with no mother's name given, could also be his child. John (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Janet Henderson and their daughter Jean was baptised in 1692. John (17th C.) tenant in Lethem in Southdean Parish according to the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick, living near the East Port. In 1706 he was one of the people who were disturbed at night by a group who were involved in drunken revelry, and later charged. He was apparently forced to 'ryse naked out of his bed' and threatened with being taken away by the pretend officers. He could be the John who married Isobel Whillans. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at Drinkstone in 1722 and Wester Burnfoot in 1731. He married Isobel Gray in 1714. Their children included: Andrew (b.1715); Andrew (again, b.1718); and Isobel (b.1722). The witnesses in 1722 were William Riddell and John Scott and in the same year he (along with John Scott) witnessed a baptism for William Riddell, who lived at Appletreehall. He is probably the John 'Thoms' who witnessed a baptism in 1731 for John Cook in Newton in Wilton Parish. He witnessed a baptism for Andrew Stewart in Midshiels in 1732. He may be the John in 'Brihool' (probably Brieryhill) whose funeral is recorded in 1750. John (18th C.) resident of Giddenscleuch. His son William was baptised in Cavers Parish in 1724. John (18th C.) resident of the Flex. He married Mary Miller and their children included: Mary (b.1721), Gideon (b.1722), James (b.1726) and Robert (b.1728), baptised in Hawick; and Mary (b.1731) and William (b.1734), baptised in Wilton. The witnesses in 1726 were George Gibson and James Gledstains. John (18th C.) married Marion Sword in Minto in 1728. Marion (b.1728), baptised in 1728, was probably his daughter. John (18th C.) workman in Bedrule. His sons John and James were baptised in 1735. John (18th C.) married Margaret Easton in Minto in 1740. John (18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. He was living at Templehall in 1751. His children included 'Mebill' (b.1749), George (b.1751), William (b.1754) and Janet (b.1756). John (d.bef. 1776) grocer in Hawick, mentioned in an Edinburgh marriage record of 1776, when his daughter Christian married David Brown. John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish who married Margaret Dodds. Thie daughter Alison was baptised in 1762. John (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Isobel Johnston and their son William was baptised in 1759. John (18th C.) farmer at Wester Essenside. He was recorded there on the Horse Tax Rolls of 1789–94. He is probably the John who married Mary Gray in 1758 and whose children, baptised in Ashkirk, included: Andrew (b.1759); Margaret (b.1760); Agnes (b.1761); Robert (b.1763), who probably took over the farm of Wester Essenside; Jane (b.1765); James (b.1768); Thomas (b.1774); and Mary (b.1776). John (18th C.) married Isabel Liddell in Wilton Parish in 1763. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish who married Margaret Boyd in 1789. Their children included: Thomas (b.1792); and John (b.1794). The 1792 baptism was carried out 'In presence of the Congregation' and the 1794 baptism witnessed 'by the Burgher Congregation'. John (18th/19th C.) tailor in Roberton Parish. In 1795 he is recorded at Greenbank. He married Helen Chisholme in Roberton in 1794 and their children included William (b.1795). John (18th/19th C.) Hawick carrier who owned 2 horses according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Perhaps the same carrier was recorded in 1797 among Hawick men on the ballot to serve in the Militia; in 1799 he was among those 'In the Ballot Box 1797 not drawn still residing in Hawick parish'. He was still on the list in 1801 and may have been related to carrier Walter, who was listed after him. John (18th/19th C.) farmer at Deanbrae, recorded as owner of 4 horses on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. John (18th/19th C.) gardener at Teviotbank in 1797, when he was working for David Simpson. John (18th/19th C.) possibly son of James, who owned Fodderlee and farmed at Nether Ancrum. He was granted a disposition for East Fodderlee in 1784 and in 1802 sold the lands to Thomas Gregson, farmer at Whitchesters. John (18th/19th C.) labourer who offered his services as a driver for the local Volunteers in 1803. John (18th/19th C.) tenant of Billerwell farm, in the Rule valley. After the Teviot flood swept away much of Hassendean churchyard (where his ancestors were buried) he moved the tombstone to Billerwell. He could be the farmer at Billerwell whose servant William Hunter was on the 1801 Militia ballot. John (b.c.1770s) mason at Calaburn according to the ballots for the Militia in Wilton Parish in 1799 and 1801. He was probably related to mason Andrew, who was at Calaburn at the same time, as well as George, who was there in 1801. John (18th/19th C.) married Janet Chisholme in Wilton in 1798. John (b.c.1780) resident of Branxholme Woodfoot according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Hawick Parish. Perhaps the John at 'Woodfoot' on the same list is a duplicate entry. He may have been son or younger brother of Richard, who was at Borthaugh Woodfoot in 1797 and perhaps James, who was also at Woodfoot in 1801. John (b.c.1780) servant at Penchrise according to the ballot for the Militia in Cavers Parish in 1801. John (18th/19th C.) member of the East Bank Kirk. He married Janet Reid and their children included: Janet and Jean (b.1803); and Cicely (b.1806). John (18th/19th C.) married Mary Nichol in Wilton Parish in 1804. John (18th/19th C.) married Margaret Elliot in Wilton Parish in 1805. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Isabel Dunlop and their daughter Agnes was baptised in 1806. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick who married Ann Dalgleish. Their son Thomas was baptised in 1804. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick who married Janet Wilson. Their children included: Margaret (b.1808); and Euphemia (b.1810). Perhaps Jane, with mother 'Agnes' Wilson, as also their child. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His children included John (b.1808), John (again, b.1809) and Betty (b.1810). John (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Rachel Scott and their son John was born in 1814, with witness appearing to be Jane Scott. John (18th/19th C.) farmer in the Hawick area. He married Agnes Lambert and their children included: Maria (b.1847); John (b.1848), who was a mason; and Thomas (b.1851). John (b.1789) son of Andrew, who farmed at Bewlie. He himself is recorded in 1851 at Bewlie Mains, farming 1035 acres and employing 35 labourers. He was unmarried at that time and living with his retired father and sister Betsy. John (19th C.) married Margaret Hunter Hardie in Wilton in 1823. John (19th C.) member of East Bank Kirk. He married Margaret Preston in 1828 and their children, baptised in Wilton Parish, included: Violet (b.1832); and Agnes (b.1834). John (19th C.) married Jane Little in Southdean Parish in 1833. John (19th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. He married Mary Beattie in 1838, the marriage being recorded in both Hawick and Southdean Parishes. Their daughter Margaret was baptised in Hobkirk in 1839. John (19th C.) married Margaret Latimer in Wilton in 1843. John (19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Ann Laidlaw and their daughter Mary was baptised in 1854. Rev. John (1823–1889) born in Over Roxburgh, son of farmer William and Margaret Shiel. He was educated at Ancrum School and Edinburgh University. He was licensed by Kelso Presbytery in 1854 and became assistant minister at Selkirk in 1856. He was ordained as minister of St. Mary's after it had become a 'quoad sacra' church in 1860. In 1861 he became a Mason in Lodge 111, receiving the first, second, and third degrees and afterwards being elected an office bearer, all in one evening. Additionally he became a Life Member of the Archæological Society in 1859 and donated a set of European coins to the Museum in 1864. He gave a talk to the Society in 1875 on 'Lake Dwellings' and another in 1877 on 'Rev. A. Craig of Bedrule and his Writings'. He lived at 9 Buccleuch Street and later built Rosalee when his wife inherited a small fortune. He also owned Allanshaws in Kelso. Together they founded St. John's Church in 1880, and he formally became its first minister in 1881 (having resigned his position at St. Mary's in 1879). He was Chaplain to the Cornet several times in the 1880s and supported the Common Riding at a time when many of the other local ministers railed against it. His acceptance of an invitation to the Cornet's Breakfast in 1887 was the start of that event becoming a formal part of the proceedings, and his reciprocation to invite the supporters to his church the following Sunday was the beginning of the 'Kirkin'. The lands that he purchased included some parts of what had previously been Roughheugh (and owned by Walter Scott). He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1877. He also served as a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire. In 1861 he married Mary Ann, daughter of James Scott of Allanshaws and Mary Brown. Mrs. Thomson also paid for the new iron pump at the Verter Well (she later married William Ludovic Mair, Sheriff-Substitute of Lanarkshire, and died in 1891). Their children were: Margaret Shiel (b.1863), who married Robert Grierson Laidlaw of Hazelwood, Hawick; Mary Brown (b.1864), Mary Scott (b.1868) and 3 others who all died in infancy. He wrote several books including 'Address to Ploughmen' (also called 'Address on the Evils of the Bondage System', published in Hawick, 1866), 'The art of weaving spiritualised' (Hawick, 1869 and 1874), 'Voices from the Plough' (Hawick, 1869), 'History of Peter Plough' (Hawick, 1872), 'Life and times of William Thomson' his father (1875 and 1879), 'Alexander Hope: a Hawick story' (1878, perhaps with a 2nd part in 1879), 'The Life of James Scott of Allanshaws' (1879), 'The Art of Ploughing Spiritualised', plus at least one other sermon and 'Speeches delivered on Different Occasions' (Hawick, 1882). Although 'Alexander Hope' was a work of fiction (with a strong moralistic message, particularly against the evils of drink), it contains several local anecdotes that are still of interest. John (19th/20th C.) farmer at Greensidehall and later Sinton Mains. He was brother of saddler James and farmer William. His son John was Secretary of the Oddfellows. John (19th/20th C.) commercial traveller of Hawick, he served as Session Clerk for St. George's Kirk 1915–24. Rev. John Archibald Glover (b.1883) son of John Cornwallis, minister in Edinburgh and Anne Dundas Glover. His brother was James C. He was born in Sanquharr, Dumfriesshire and educated at George Watson's College, Glasgow Academy and Glasgow University. He was licensed to preach by Glasgow Presbytery in 1906, became an assistant at St. Andrew's in Edinburgh, and in 1910 was ordained at Wallacetown, Ayr. He moved to the Tron Kirk, Edinburgh, in 1916 and served with the R.A. Chaplains' Department 1917–18. He became minister of Hawick Parish in 1925. He also stepped in as 'interim-moderator' for St. George's Kirk when it was without a minister in 1936/7. He wrote 'Roll of the Parish Ministry of Hawick, A.D. 1183–1929' (1936), which he had made into a fine manuscript volume, preserved in the church. He married Ethel Maud Richardson and they had a son Aiden (b.1911). Rev. Joseph (1791/2–65) son of John, the Town Clerk of Jedburgh. He was licensed by Jedburgh Presbytery in 1814 and appointed preacher at Caerlenrig (Teviothead) 'chapel-of-ease' in 1817. However, 2 years later he was ordained as minister at Ednam, then translated to Morebattle in 1844. In 1823 he married Margaret (who died in 1844, aged 43), daughter of Thomas S. Hardie, minister of Ashkirk. He later married Elizabeth F. Robson. He wrote an account of Ednam Parish. Rev. Lindsay see Rev. Edward Peter Lindsay. Lisa (1997–) attended Trinity and Hawick High Schools and then Edinburgh University. She played for Melrose Ladies, Edinburgh University, French side Lille Metropole and D.M.P. Durham Sharks. She turned professional in 2016. She made her international debut against England in 2016 and was Scottish team Captain for the 2018/9 season. She has been capped 35 times for Scotland. Margaret (17th C.) resident of Synton Mill. In 1643, along with Helen Murray, she was punished by the Ashkirk Session for losing their tempers; they were forced to stand in linen sheets 'at the kirke dure in tyme the people is ingathering, next to ye pillar, and to pay ilk ane of them, 12s, otherways umquhile they do not, they are to be put in the jouggs all the time frae the people convenes till they go home again'. She could be the Margaret, married to John Scott, whose daughter Elizabeth was baptised in 1653. Patrick (15th C.) listed at the 1493 Justice-aire in Jedburgh when William Douglas of Cavers was fined for his non-appearance. He was recorded being '$\bar{\text{i}}$ dēnū', which is probably an abbreviation for 'in dennum', i.e. he lived in Denholm. Peter (19th C.) resident of Galashiels. In 1877 he donated to the Museum a 'collection of thirty-nine silver and copper coins, and two bullets brought from Waterloo'. Richard (18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick Parish. He married Martha Norval and their children included: John (b.1758); and Margaret (b.1760). His wife was probably recorded in 1787 when 'Martha Novels Grandchild' died in Hawick. Richard (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1778 he married Euphan Cairns and their children included: James (b.1779); Janet (b.1781); John (b.1783); and Archibald (b.1785). The witnesses in 1779 were 'The Associate Congregation' and in 1781 the 'Special Congregation'. Richard (18th/19th C.) recorded at Woodfoot in Hawick Parish on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He was probably farmer at Borthaugh Woodfoot. He is likely to be the Richard whose daughter Isabel died in Hawick in 1815. He may have been father or elder brother of Andrew, who was recorded at Branxholme Woodfoot in 1801. Richard (19th C.) married Agnes Hardie in Hawick in 1844. Richard (b.1842/3) son of John, he was a spinner in Hawick. In 1872 he donated to the Museum a 'small circular window, from Dryburgh, consisting of a leaden frame filled with very small panes of coloured glass, and pair of wire ear-rings, such as were worn about a hundred years ago'. Robert (16th C.) farmer at Hawthornside 'Newtown'. His barn and yard are recorded in 1562 in the document dealing with the Baronial land dispute in Feu-Rule. Robert (d.c.1606) minister of Ratho who was presented as minister of Castleton Parish at the end of 1604. He may have held both at the same time, but not for long, since he was dead within less than 2 years. Robert (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. His daughter Isobel was baptised in 1641. He may be related to John, who was recorded at Burnfoot-on-Ale in 1643. Robert (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Dobie and their daughter Janet was baptised in 1646. Robert (17th C.) resident of Roberton Parish (the part corresponding to Hassendean). Along with James he witnessed baptisms for George in 1680 and 1688, and along with George he witnessed a baptism for James in 1686. It seems likely that he was father or brother of both George and James. He also witnessed a baptism for John Hope in 1681 and Andrew Leyden in 1683. He married Margaret Gray in Roberton Parish in 1679 and their children included: Helen (b.1680); Dand (b.1682); Robert (b.1684); and Janet (b.1687). He was probably also the Robert recorded in Burnfoot in 1697 when his son Robert was baptised in Wilton Parish. The witnesses in 1687 were James (perhaps his brother) and Thomas Caldwell. The witnesses in 1697 were Adam Scott of Burnfoot and James White. Robert (17th C.) tenant in Hawick Shiel mentioned in 1679 when Robert Wright was fined for destroying a load of peat that he had cut, and he himself was fined for 'ane ryott committ upon the said Robert Wright'. He may be the same as one of the other Roberts. Robert (d.bef. 1720) resident of Hawick Parish. He may be the Robert who witnessed baptisms for John Dryden (along with Alexander Riddell) in 1675 and 1683. His wife was Janet Dickson. Their son George was born in 1687, with Gideon Scott of Outerside and Rev. Thomas Shiel as witnesses (suggesting he was from the countryside to the south of Hawick). Other children included: Helen (b.1675); Gideon (b.1684); Isobel (b.1685), who married Robert Nichol in Hawick in 1720; and George (b.1687). In 1707 he and his son Gideon witnessed a baptism for James Renwick, undermiller at Newmill. This suggests he may be the same man as the tenant in Castlehill and Newmill. Robert (1668/9–1740) tenant in Greens in Castleton Parish. He married Betty Scott, who died in 1739, aged 73 years. He may have had a son William (also tenant in Greens), whose wife Isabella Armstrong died in 1748, aged 40. They are buried in Ettleton. Robert (17th/18th C.) tenant at Castlehill (near Newmill) in 1690. He is listed as 'Rot. Thomsone officer', but it is unclear what 'officer' meant. He is probably the same Robert listed as tenant at Newmill on Teviot on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls, where he was 'wt tuo kilns' and paid tax for 4 hearths. He was in 'Newmilne' in 1696 when his son Walter was baptised. He may be the Robert who witnessed a baptism for James Storie in 1698 and for smith John Dryden in 1700. He was also in Newmill when he witnessed baptisms in 1700 for William Bell in Whitchesters and Walter Wilson in Castlehill, in 1701 for smith John Dryden (whose wife was a Thomson), in 1702 for Gilbert Elliot in Nether Southfield, in 1704 for Walter Wilson in Castlehill, in 1705 twice (one at Branxholmtown), in 1706 for Robert Henderson, in 1707 for Walter Wilson again, for Walter Craw in Branxholme Town and for Robert Scott, carrier in Branxholmtown, in 1708 for James Stevenson in Harwood, in 1709 for James Scott, tenant in Nether Southfield, in 1710 for Walter Crow in Branxholme Town again, for John Nichol in Newmill and for Robert Prendergast, in 1712 for Robert Scoon in Branxholme Town, for William Allan (in 'Park'), for James Scott in Stobicote (husband of his step-daughter) and for carrier Thomas Penman, and in 1713 for John Riddell in Branxholme Town. Given all the baptisms that he witnessed, it is likely he was a Kirk Elder, acting for the Newmill area. He was recorded in Newmill in 1709 when his 'servitor' John Nichol had a child baptised. Probably the same Robert was in Newmill in 1723 when (along with William) he witnessed a baptism for smith James Dryden and in 1726 other baptisms (also along with William) for John Scott, for John Riddell and for Walter Scott in Newmill. In 1729 he and William also witnessed a baptism for Robert Goodfellow. In 1731 he witnessed a further baptism for William (who was also at Newmill). He may have been ancestor of the later Robert at Newmill on Slitrig (although maybe that is just a coincidence). He is probably the Robert who married Margaret Falside, and whose children baptised in Hawick included William (b.1694), Walter (b.1698) and Robert (b.1701). The witnesses in 1698 were John Dryden and Thomas Elliot. He is probably the Robert 'in New milne' whose stepdaughters included: Margaret Scott, who married

Walter Hume in 1707; and Anne Scott, who married James Scott (tenant in Stobicote) in 1712. It seems likely that his wife Margaret Falsyde was widow of William Scott, and that he took her children into his family. Robert (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was recorded in Burnfoot in 1697. He married a Gray and their children included Robert (b.1697). He may be the Robert whose son Robert was baptised in 1712. He may be the Robert in Appletreehall who had a legal process against James Laing, maltman of Selkirk in 1723. Robert (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish who married Anna Henderson. Their children included: Isabel (b.1701); and William (b.1704). Robert (17th/18th C.) married Mary 'E.' in Minto in 1704. Robert (18th C.) ex-Bailie in 1738 when he was involved with the construction of the Teviot Bridge. Perhaps the same Robert was recorded as an Elder of Hawick Parish in 1711. Robert (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Highchesters Mill in 1733. His children included: Robert (b.1733). He may be the Robert who in 1773 witnessed a baptism in Hawick for John Scoon and Rachel Riddell and in 1776 witnessed another baptism for miller John Scott and Betty Thomson (who was probably related). Robert (18th C.) married Margaret Gledstains in Minto in 1737. Robert (18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His daughter Margaret was baptised in 1738. Robert (18th C.) married Betty Crowden in Minto in 1749. Robert (18th C.) tenant of Billerwell farm in the Rule valley. His family came originally from the Hassendean area. He is recorded as tenant there on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when he owned 4 horses. He also paid the dog tax in 1797. When he died (in the late 1700s) he left around £1200 to a distant relative called Boog, who spent it all within about a year. He could be the Robert whose children baptised in Hobkirk Parish included John (b.1786), Gilbert (b.1788) and George (b.1790). Robert (18th C.) only son of George and Margaret Kerr. In 1757 he had a sasine for the half lands of Fodderlee. He married Mary Dick. She and her her son George had a sasine for the 'liferent' of Fodderlee in 1764. However, he had another sasine for these lands in 1766, along with Isobel Kerr. She was presumably either a second wife, or a relative of his mother. In 1778 the lands went to James, who may have been another son. Robert (18th C.) married Betty Fairbairn in Ashkirk Parish in 1769. Robert (18th/19th C.) farmer at Wester Essenside, perhaps son of John. He is probably the Robert recorded at Burnfoot in Ashkirk Parish on the 1791 Horse Tax Rolls. He is recorded at Wester Essenside as owner of 5 farm horses and 1 saddle horse on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He was probably also the farmer at Essenside taxed for having 3 non-working dogs in 1797. He was surely related to Thomas, who was recorded as farmer in the same place in 1799. He may be the Robert who married Isabel Simpson and had children, baptised in Ashkirk Parish, including John (b.1812), Mary (b.1814), William (b.1816) and Isabel (b.1819). Robert (18th/19th C.) married Margaret Lockie in Ashkirk Parish in 1794. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident at Newcastleton, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Robert (18th/19th C.) recorded as farmer at New Mill on Slitrig, on the Horse Tax Rolls of 1797. He is probably related to the Robert recorded there in 1712. He may be the Robert who was at 'Newmiln' in 1789 when his daughter Magdaline was baptised in Kirkton Parish; this suggests a relationship with Magdalene Thomson (1776–1861), who married Thomas Elliot from Teviothead and emigrated to New York state. Margaret (b.1785), baptised in Kirkton, was probably also his daughter. The Robert listed at New Mill on the ballot for the Militia in Kirkton Parish in 1799 was probably too young to be him, but may have been his son. Robert (18th/19th C.) footman at Minto according to the Lieutenancy Book in 1799. Robert (b.c.1780) labourer at Sandholm according to the ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1801. James was also listed there and so probably his brother, suggesting he was the Robert born to James in Minto in 1781. Robert (18th/19th C.) member of the East Bank Kirk. He married Nelly Oliver and their children included Nelly (b.1808). Robert (18th/19th C.) member of the East Bank Kirk. He married Mary Laidlaw and their children included John (b.1809), William (b.1811), Margaret (b.1813) and Jeany (b.1815). Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His children included John (b.1828). Robert (b.1801/2) agricultural labourer in Hobkirk Parish. In 1841 he was at 'Gatehousecote Hinds Houses'. His wife was Agnes and their children included George (b.1832/3), Isabel (b.1835/6) and Robert (b.1838/9). Robert (1806–70s) born in Ashkirk, son of surveyor James and Rachel Wilkie. He was listed as a grocer on the High Street in Pigot's 1837 directory and Slater's 1852 directory. In 1841 and 1851 he was living with his parents and siblings at 27 Loan. His grocer's and spirit merchant's shop was at 9 High Street, on the ground floor of the house owned by joiner Walter Wilson. He later became factor for the Cavers estate. In 1861 he was listed as a land factor, still living with his mother and sister at 27 Loan. He also served as Chairman of the Cavers Parochial Board. Robert (19th C.) married Agnes Hall in Wilton in 1828. Robert (b.1810/1) son of a shepherd at Bellsrigg in Deadwater. He was a shepherd in Rulewater, living at Blackburn Cottage in Southdean Parish. In the 1841 census he is recorded as 'Skyehead' and at Southdean Rig in 1851. He was one of the main early supporters of the Free Kirk at Wolfelee, being the first elder, one of the first two elders appointed in 1850 and one of the trustees. He married Margaret Armstrong, from Inverness-shire. Their children included: Andrew (b.1834/5), shepherd at Wigg; Helen (b.1836); Janet (b.1838); Esther (b.1840); Jane (b.1843), born at the Rig, who married carter James Moore; Thomas Armstrong (b.1845); John; and Euphemia. Robert (b.1811/2) born in Cavers Parish, he was an agricultural labourer. In 1851 he was a ploughman at Ruletownhead. His wife was Elizabeth and their children included: Isabella (b.1839/40); Archibald (b.1841/2); William (b.1843/4); and Janet (b.1848/9). Robert 'Bob' (19th C.) son of Adam and Janet Cairns from around Newtown St. Boswells. When young he worked on a farm, but an accident injured his arm. He was appointed as postman in the Rulewater district, succeeding George Nichol about 1873. Starting on foot, he later got a horse and trap. In 1900 he was transferred to Newtown St. Boswells, and received a long-service medal from the King. He lived at Weens Cottages, was a keen gardener, librarian for Hobkirk, active member of the Total Abstinence Society and deacon of Wolfelee Kirk. In 1873 he married Mary, daughter of shepherd Robert Hume. His children were: Adam, assistant gardener at Wolfelee, who married Martha Dalgleish; Robert, gardener at Hunthill, who married Margaret Eunson; James, blacksmith at Wark-on-Tweed, who married Euphemia Hope; George, footman at Kippilaw House; John, grocer; William, tailor; Charles, gardener; Helen; and Janet. Robert (1833/4–1909) from Crookham in Northumberlnd, he worked in the tweed business in Carlisle and was then a traveller for one of the Hawick firms. He was later a wool agent in Galashiels, and was regarded as one of the authorities on wool, yarn spinning and weaving in the Borders. Thomas (15th C.) recorded 'in quhithalch braa' in 1494/5. He contributed '1 nag' to the itinerant court held in Selkirk. His lands could be Whitehaugh Brae near Hawick. Thomas (15th/16th C.) witness to the sasine for Wolfelee and Wolfehopelee in 1522, for the Homes of Wedderburn. Rev. Thomas (c.1577–1626) graduating from St. Andrews University in 1597, he became minister of Soutra in 1605 and was translated to Hobkirk in 1609. He died sometime in the first half of 1626, with William Weir becoming Hobkirk's next minister. He married Janet Sinclair (who was buried in Greyfriars Churchyard in Edinburgh in 1667), widow of James Brydon. Their son John became a tailor's apprentice in Edinburgh in 1629, while another son was probably the Thomas who was minister to the garrison of the Earl of Callendar in 1645, then to a congregation in Hartlepool and finally to Slamannan. Rev. Thomas (c.1666–1716) minister at Southdean. He was son of Thomas, gardener to Andrew Edmonston of Ednam and descended from the family of Rousland, near Kinneil. He graduated from Edinburgh University in 1686, was licensed by Kelso Presbytery in 1691 and became minister at Ednam in 1692. He was translated to Southdean in 1700 (although there were also calls from Newcastleton and Morebattle) and remained there until his death. He is said to have died after being struck by lightning (or a 'ball of fire') while exorcising a ghost from a building at Wolfelee (there seems to be some truth in this story, with a tradition that the main house there was haunted by a brownie, and evidence that he was buried quickly after his death, but few details are certain). He was a quiet man, little known beyond his congregation, but respected for his piety and pastroral duty. In 1693 he married Beatrix Trotter of Wideopen (on Kale), daughter of Alexander Trotter of Fogo and Margaret Home of Bassendean, and she died in Edinburgh in 1725. Their children were: Andrew (b.1695); Alexander (b.1697); Isobel (b.1699); James (1700–48), well known as a poet, author of 'The Seasons'; Margaret; Mary (d.1790) who married William Craig in Edinburgh and whose son James planned Edinburgh's New Town; Elizabeth (d.c.1746), who married Robert Bell, minister at Strathaven, in Edinburgh in 1740; Jean (d.1781), who married Robert Thomson, Master of Lanark Grammar School; and John (d.1735), who acted as dictator for his brother James. His son John was Jedburgh Presbytery Bursar at Edinburgh University 1717–24, and younger sons were also supported by the Presbytery after the death of his wife in 1725. His house in Ednam was converted into the schoolhouse. A brass plaque was added to his gravestone at Chesters in 1867. Thomas (17th/18th C.) merchant in Hawick. He married Agnes Turnbull, daughter of the Laird of Knowe in Minto Parish in 1721. He was rebuked by the Hawick Session for this 'irregular marriage', which took place in England. Their daughter Marion was baptised in Hawick in 1725, with witnesses Rev. Charles Telfer and weaver James Roger. Perhaps the same Thomas also married Mary Elliot and had a daughter Elizabeth (b.1729). Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Isabel Dryden in 1718 and their children included: Robert (b.1719); and Adam (b.1722). Thomas (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish, recorded at Deanbrae in 1726. His children included Janet (b.1724) and James (b.1726). Thomas (18th C.) resident of Denholm. He is probably the Thomas who married Marion Tudhope in Cavers Parish in 1728. He was recorded at Denholm in 1729 and 1730 (when he was a herd). His children included Bessie (b.1729), Helen (b.1730) and Adam (b.1734). He is probably also father of some of these children baptised in Cavers Parish (with the others being part of the other Thomas; family): Helen (b.1728); Alison (b.1732); George (b.1732); and an unnamed child (b.1739). Thomas (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was at Borthaugh in 1732. He married Mary Elliot and their son John was baptised in 1732, with witnesses George Bell and George Home. His surname is written 'Thomason'. Thomas (18th C.) married Margaret Kersel in Minto in 1736. Thomas (18th C.) carrier in Hawick. He married Isabel Hardie and their children included: Peter (b.1756); Isabel (b.1759); Agnes (b.1762); and Robert (b.1764). The witnesses in 1759 were flesher Robert Hardie and Kirk Officer Alexander Bunyan. He is probably the carrier of that name who witnessed a baptism for John Hardie in Hawick in 1768. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Mary Coltart and their children included James (b.1765), Walter (b.1766) and Agnes (b.1768). He may be the workman who witnessed a baptism for stockingmaker Mark Sutherland in 1787. Thomas (1735/6–1813) probably son of John, he was born in Lilliesleaf Parish. He was farmer at Oakwood, but had to abandon it in the difficult times around 1780 and moved to a hovel at Howford in Ettrick. He lived for several years at Calaburn and later farmed at Millfield in Mertoun Parish. He was censured by the Wilton Parish Session for using a winnowing machine. However, while in Hawick, he attended the Green Kirk. He knew the beggar Andrew Gemmels (the original of Walter Scott's 'Edie Ochiltree'), and once bought a horse from him; at Calaburn it was known as 'Gemmel's mare'. In 1771 in Bowden he married Helen Scott (d.1832) and their children included: Janet (c.1772–1847); Alison (1773–1851); Janet (c.1774); John (1776–1852); Andrew (c.1778–1844); George (c.1780–1825); Helen (c.1783–1803); William (c.1785–1866); and Walter (c.1789–1833). He and his wife are buried in Maxton. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen Oliver and their son Thomas was baptised in 1773. He may be the deceased Thomas whose son Andrew died in Hawick in 1781. Thomas (18th C.) farmer in Minto Parish. In 1780 he was listed as holding part of Minto Hills farm 'in tack', the other part being held by Andrew Nichol. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Parkhill in 1787. He married Margaret Elliot in 1785 and they had an unnamed son in 1787. Thomas (b.c.1770s) mason in Hawick. In 1799 he was recorded as apprentice to mason John Laing when he was on the ballot for the Militia. Thomas (18th/19th C.) Hawick resident recorded as owner of a horse in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He may be the Thomas who was already deceased when his daughter Marion died in Hawick in 1815; in that record the word 'Slorige' or 'Slorage' appears after his name. Thomas (18th/19th C.) farmer recorded at Mervinslaw Mains on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Thomas (b.c.1770s) farmer at Wester Essenside according to the 1799 and 1801 ballots for the Militia in Ashkirk Parish. He was surely related to Robert, who was recorded as farmer in the same place in 1797. He could be the Thomas, son of John and Mary Gray, who was baptised in Ashkirk in 1774. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of the Hawick area. He married Jean Laidlaw and their children included: John (b.1821), baptised in East Bank Kirk; and William (b.1826), baptised in Ashkirk. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident at Roan. He subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His children included John (b.1817), Janet (b.1820) and Andrew (b.1823) Thomas (19th C.) married Robina Hay in Wilton in 1824. Thomas (19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Janet Elliot in 1842 and their children included Janet (b.1844). Thomas (19th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Alison Scott and their son George was baptised in 1849. Walter (17th C.) married Helen Grieve in Roberton in 1681. Their son James was baptised in 1685. Walter (17th/18th C.) married Janet Rutherford in Castleton in 1709. Walter (18th C.) married Helen 'Mader' in Bedrule in 1751. Their son George was baptised in Cavers in 1755. William (b.1753) and Janet (b.1760), also baptised in Cavers (with no mother's name given) were probably also their children. Walter (18th C.) married Isabel Dunlop in Wilton in 1779. Walter (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. His children included Janet (b.1780), Thomas (b.1784) and Thomas (b.1785). Walter (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isabel Horsburgh and their children included William (b.1787). Walter (b.c.1770s) carrier in Hawick, recorded on the 1799 ballot for the Militia. He was still on the list in 1801 and may have been related to carrier John, who was listed before him. It is possible he was the carrier 'Wat Thomson' who was the front driver of the cart between Hawick and Edinburgh around 1800, when 'Wull Slush' would sometimes help fill in for the other driver (according to W.N. Kennedy). Walter (18th/19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. He married Margaret Dalgleish and their children included: Margaret (b.1790); Mary (b.1793); John (b.1795); Agnes (b.1798); Thomas (b.1800); Rabina (b.1802); and Walter (b.1809). Walter (19th C.) married Beatrix Scott in Roberton in 1849. Their children included Wilhelmina (b.1850), William (b.1852) and Henry (b.1853). William (16th/17th C.) resident of the Trows who was recorded in 1618 as witness to a sasine for the Kirklands of Cavers, including Crook. William (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Bessie Dunlop and their daughter Janet was baptised in 1651, with witnesses Walter (surely related) and John Wilson. William (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. William (17th C.) tenant in Side in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. William (17th/18th C.) listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick 'eist the water' in 1694. He may be the same as one of the other Williams. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1702 he was listed as servitor to Gideon Scott of Falnash. His children, baptised in Hawick Parish, included William (b.1702) and Margaret (b.1707). The witnesses in 1702 were smith John Dryden and Robert Riddell, miller at Newmill. He is probably the William 'older' in Newmill, who (along with William 'younger') witnessed baptisms in 1716 and 1718 for James Scott in Stobicote, in 1717 for William Allan and in 1719 for William Clerk, workman in Castlehill. Perhaps the same William witnessed a baptism for smith John Dryden in 1705; Dryden's wife was Isobel, who may have been his daughter. He could be the William who married Agnes Cook and whose children included James (b.1680); the witnesses in 1680 were William Wilson and William Paisley. William (17th/18th C.) recorded as 'officer' in the Hawick Session records of 1722, when he was asked to summon a person to the Court of the Baron Depute. He was probably a Burgh Officer of the time, but may instead have been a Kirk officer. William (18th C.) resident of Newmill in Hawick Parish. He was probably son (or grandson) of Robert, tenant in Newmill. In 1733 he is recorded being at 'New Miln' and 'at New miln' in Hawick Parish in 1740. He may be the William 'younger', who (along with William 'older') witnessed baptisms in 1716 and 1718 for James Scott in Stobicote and in 1719 for William Clerk, workman in Castlehill. He was 'in Newmiln' in 1720 when he witnessed baptisms for Robert Scott in Branxholme Town, William Mitchellhill in Branxholme Town and James Dryden in Newmill. He is probably the William who (along with Robert, both in Newmill) witnessed a baptism for smith James Dryden in 1723. He may be the William who witnessed baptisms in 1726 (along with Robert) for John Scott, for John Riddell and for Walter Scott in Newmill, and another (along with Robert) for Robert Goodfellow in 1729. His servant Robert Deans witnessed a baptism in 1742 for William Anderson in Raesknowe; this was the same day as the baptism of one of his own children in Hawick Parish. He married Janet Elliot in 1729, the marriage being proclaimed in Roberton. Probably the same William in Newmill secondly married Isobel Scott (with whom he had children baptised in Hawick in 1738 and 1740), with her name being recorded as 'Margaret' in 1742. His children included: Elizabeth (b.1729); Nichol (b.1731); Margaret (b.1733), Katherine (b.1735); Janet (b.1738); Helen (b.1740); and Margaret (again, b.1742). All the baptisms were recorded in Hawick, except the first Margaret, who was baptised in Roberton Parish. Janet (b.1736), with no mother's name given, may also have been his daughter. The witnesses in 1731 were Walter

Scott and Robert Thomson, in 1740 were blacksmiths James Dryden, elder and younger, and in 1742 were his servant Robert Deans and Kirk Officer John Telfer. William (1715/6–86) tenant in Oakwood Mill. He married Julian Scott (1718/9–49) in Bowden in 1743. William (18th C.) married Agnes Gray in Minto in 1745. William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Doecleuch in 1749 when his son Thomas was baptised. William (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Elizabeth Scott and their daughter Elizabeth was baptised in 1750. William (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Ann Lockie in 1762 and their children included Jean (b.1774) and John (b.1777). William (d.bef. 1791) tailor in Hawick Parish. He married Beatrix Scott and she died in 1791. William (18th C.) resident of Minto Parish. He is listed in 1780 as possessor (probably tenant) of the lands of Horse Park, with rent of £9 9s. William (18th C.) stockingmaker in Hawick. In 1784 he witnessed a baptism for miller John Scott and Betty (who may have been his daughter or sister). William (18th C.) recorded as 'Servant to Capt. Douglas of Cavers' in 1784. He was listed as footman at Cavers in 1785, when he was working for Capt. John Douglas. In 1791–73 he was still footman at Cavers for George Douglas and in 1794 and 1797 was a house servant at Cavers. His son could be the 'William Thomson, Jun. Cavers' who subscribed to Robert Wilson's 1825 'History of Hawick'. His children, baptised in Cavers Parish included: Tibby (b.1778); Nelly (b.1784); William (b.1787); and George (b.1788). Additional children, also baptised in Cavers, may include: Walter (b.1779); and James (b.1792). He could be the late William referred to in 1863 when James A.H. Murray states thet he could remember a ruin standing on the Castle Knowe (adjacent to Cavers House) in his youth. William (18th/19th C.) farmer at Netherraw according to the 1794 and 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when he owned 7 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. In 1799 and 1801 his son James was recorded in the Lieutenancy Book for Lilliesleaf Parish; he is listed as 'Tenant Repperlaw Netherrow'. William (b.c.1770s) servant at Mains according to the ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1799. Perhaps the same William was a servant at Dinlees on the 1801 Militia ballot. He may be the William who married Margaret Lamb and had a son James (b.1801) baptised in Castleton Parish. William (b.c.1780) mason at Damside according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia. William (b.c.1780) servant of William Turnbull at Burnfoot in Wilton Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book in 1801. William (b.c.1780) joiner at Woll according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Ashkirk Parish. He may have been related to James who was also at Woll at the same time. William (18th/19th C.) listed at Gatehousecote on the subscription list for Robert Wilson's 1825 'History of Hawick'. William (18th/19th C.) member of East Bank Kirk. He married Jean Knox (or perhaps King) and their children included John (b.1813), David (b.1815), Isobel (b.1817), Ann (b.1819) and George (b.1822). He may be the William whose child died in Hawick in 1824. William 'Willie' (c.1785–1866) son of Thomas and Helen Scott, he was farmer at Over Roxburgh. He was born at Howford in Ettrick at Hogmanay, with the year of his birth therefore being unclear. His father was farmer at Oakwood, but had to abandon it in the difficult times of the late 1700s and moved for a while to Calaburn. He attended Stouslie School and Roberton School. He had to be rescued from the broken ice at Stouslie Loch as a child. In 1802 he went to Selkirk to be an apprentice joiner. From 1810 he and his brother John were joiners and undertakers in Selkirk. In 1827 he became tenant of Hopton, near Ancrum and moved to Over Roxburgh in 1837. He exhibited a model for an improved sheep dip at the Highland Agricultural Show in Inverness, which ended up in a museum in Edinburgh. He was a keen draughts player and once beat the champion, James Wylie, 'the Herd Laddie'. He knew the beggar Andrew Gemmels (the original of Walter Scott's 'Edie Ochiltree'), since his father had bought a horse from him that was on the farm at Calabruni; he had a tombstone erected for Gemmels in Roxburgh Cemetery. He was a Liberal in politics and an enthusiastic member of the established Kirk. In 1818 he married Margaret (c.1799–1862), daughter of John Shiel, farmer at Charterhouse. Their children included: Thomas (1819–82), who farmed at Smailholm; Jane (b.1821); John (b.1823), who became minister at St. Mary's Kirk; George (b.1824–95); Helen (b.1826); James (b.1829); and Jessie Elizabeth (b.1831). They also took in a girl called Mary Scott, who married F. Turnbull and moved to Pitlochry. His son, Rev. John, wrote 'The Life and Times of William Thomson' (1875, 1879). William (18th/19th C.) grocer on the Howegate, listed in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. In 1826 he and Robert Dryden were put in charge of the Parish mort-safes. William (b.1790/1) stone dyker living at Longhaugh on Hermitage Water in 1851. His wife was Helen and their children included Thomas, Jane (whose married name was Scott), Margaret and Janet. William (b.1799/1800) from Selkirk, he was a tailor on Allars Crescent. He was listed there in the 1851 census (when he employed 3 men) and in Slater's 1852 directory. By 1861 he was at 1 Manse Lane. His wife was Isabella and their children included Agnes, Margaret, William, Andrew, Ann and Jemima. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His son Walter was baptised in 1821. William (b.1810) manufacturer of hosiery on the Loan, listed in Pigot's 1837 directory. He was a son of surveyor James, and was living at about 27 Loan with his parents and siblings in 1841. William (19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Margaret Nichol and their son George was baptised in 1823. William (19th C.) member of East Bank Kirk. He married Helen Dickson and their children included: Sarah (b.1830), baptised the following year; and Helen (b.1833). William (19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. Cecilia Sinton and their son James was baptised in 1823. William (19th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. He married Jane Brown and their children included William (b.1835). Mary Bell Elliot (b.1831) and Andrew (b.1832), with no mother's name given, could also be his children. William (19th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. He married Ann Oliver and their son Robert Oliver was baptised in 1837. William L. (b.1818/9) from Minto Parish, in 1851 he was a 'Stone Dyke Contractor' living at Stouslie Schoolhouse. His wife was Elizabeth (from Hobkirk) and their children included Mary, William L. and James. William (19th C.) married Elizabeth Laing in Wilton in 1840. William L. (c.1820–bef. 1861) stone dyker, born in Minto Parish. In 1841 and 1851 he was living at Stouslie Schoolhouse. He married Elizabeth Anderson in 1845. Their children included Mary (b.1845/6), William L. (b.1847/8) and James (b.1849/50) and Isabella (b.1851/2). In 1861 his widow and children were living at Orchard Cottage. William (19th C.) married Margaret Waldie in Hawick in 1852. William (19th C.) married Jane Brodie in Wilton in 1854. William (19th C.) mason in Denholm in the 1860s. He was a registered voter at that time. William (19th/20th C.) farmer at Hummelknowes and later Coliforthill. William Lyndsay (19th/20th C.) High School Rector 1908–19. William 'Bill' or 'Jimpy' (1936–) worked in various mills in Hawick, and long involved with the British Legion, he was Common Riding Secretary 2001–05 (formerly spelled 'Thomason', 'Thomesoun', 'Thompsone', 'Thomsone', 'Thomsonne', 'Thomsoun', 'Thomsoune', 'Tomsone', etc.; also pronounced as in 'Tamson' or 'Thamson').

Thomson's Cave (tom-sinz-kāv) n. name given to a particular cave on the bank of the Teviot near Ancrum. This is said to have been a popular haunt of for the poet James Thomson (of 'The Seasons'), who wrote his name on the roof.

the Thomson Well (thu-tom-sin-wel) n. small ornamental iron drinking fountain on the site of the Mid Raw before the Brown Fountain was built. It was provided by Provost Thomson of Johnstone, Renfrewshire and handed over to the town in late 1897. It can be seen in a photograph of Drumlanrig Square taken in about 1898. It apparently bore the inscription 'Presented by Provost Thomson of Johnstone, to his native town in commemoration of Queen Victoria's record reign, 1897 . . . It's yer ain; protect it'. However, it was only in place for a few years and its whereabouts are unknown.

thon (thon, thōn) pron. that, those, yon, yonder – 'This is mine, that's yours, but whae's aucht thon?' [JAHM], 'Yiddie's a bleith fallih, bit A dinna leike thon Jock yin!' [ECS], 'And thon's jist the stert. What aboot the audience bogles?' [JuH], adv., adj. those – 'What's the name o thon close it the Croon Hotel?', 'But still, up thon weary brae, Onward aa blundert . . . ' [DH] (this form is peculiarly local, while yon appears in other British diaects; also sometimes thone; it is used to indicate more distant objects than 'this', while yon corresponds more often with 'that').

thonder (thōn-dur) adv., adj., pron. yonder, over there – 'if ee'r lookin for yer fither hei's ower thonder', 'Thonder was the moniment A jaloozed ti be the Lilliard's Edge Memorial' [ECS], 'Guidnicht to my freend owre thonder' [DH], 'Away up thonder abune the Wusp . . . at Westminster . . . ' [DH].

thone (thōn) adv., adj., pron. that, those – 'A fair likeet Nardini's ice cream. Was thone no the best?' [We] (also thon).

thoom (thoom) n. a thumb – 'hei's aa fingers an thooms', 'A ken ma thoom's beelin, 'cause it's putt, puttn (throb, throbbing)' [ECS], '. . . Wi' tea, an' crackers no' the size O' even ane's thoom nail' [WFC] (also spelled 'thoomb' or 'thoum').

thoom-steel (thoom-steel) n., arch. a stall or covering for an injured thumb.

thoosand (thoo-zind) n. a thousand – 'Thoosands, gude kens how mony, to the breeder, An' hauf as muckle for a cock to tread her' [JoHa], '... Mair worth than an estate a thoosand miles square' [JoHa], '... but A'd a thoosand raither be sair hackin' treis than hing aboot like this daein' nocht' [JEDM], 'Ten thoosand hands were raised on high, Wavin' an' raxin' towards the sky' [WP], 'A thoosand buttercups waited to confirm Yin's likin' for butter ...' [DH], 'What sacrifice To gie a pound Gin I've a thoosand mair?' [WL], 'Weary an' dowie, aye mysel A thoosand times I've tried ti tell ...' [WP], '... for gettin' a thoosand folk throwe their test' [IWL], 'Remeandering, Eddleston Witter, twae thoosand an therteen' [JuH] (cf. thoosant).

thoot (thoo', thoot) prep., poet. without – '... An', holy beacons, glow 'thoot flaw or wane' [JoHa], 'Nought but the vera rims o' men, 'Thoot saul or spunk – a glazent den' [JoHa].

Thor (thōr) n. Norse god of thunder, rain and farming. Son of Odin, he is traditionally thought of as one of the gods in the Hawick battle cry 'Teribus ye Teri-Odin'. It is unclear how old the tradition is of associating Thor with the Hawick slogan, but there appears to be little evidence that it precedes Victorian attempts to explain its origin. There is certainly no mention in Hogg's song of 1819 (which does mention Odin), or in anything published earlier than that – 'The spirit still lies on the Border side – The spirit of Thor and Odin' [JBB], 'With spirit rapt, and, full of kith and kin, Pray Thor of Holy Church exalt her horn' [JBSS].

Thorbrand (thōr-brawnd) n. Adam (17th/18th C.) wheelwright in Hawick. Probably the same Adam was recorded in 1707 when Walter Deans was fined by the Council for summoning him to the Court in Jedburgh when the case was already being considered by the Court in Hawick. He is probably the Adam who married Elspeth Stevenson and whose daughter Jean was baptised in Hawick in 1703. In 1717 he witnessed a baptism for tenant Walter Bryson. He is probably also the wright who witnessed a baptism in 1725 for carrier Walter Bryson. Adam (18th C.) married Susanna Rutherford in Ashkirk Parish in 1728. George (17th C.) son of wright James. He witnessed a baptism in 1683 for William Veitch. He was witness to the document describing his father's work on the 'steiple-loft' in St. Mary's Kirk in 1684; he is referred to as 'my sone wryter thereof'. He was probably son of the James who married Jane Veitch. James (16th C.) recorded as 'Jacobum Thronbrand in Wiltoun' in 1553/4 when he was on the panel for Sir Walter Scott inheriting his grandfather's lands of Branxholme and Buccleuch. It is not known where in Wilton he was tenant or whether he was related to later local Thorbrands. Bailie James (17th C.) wright and promemnt Councillor. He is recorded in 1660 when Bailie Walter Chisholme promised that he would not disobey the Burgh's rules regarding 'the question of neighbourhood for theiking' between them. He could be the James who was one of Hawick's Commissioners in Kelso who were insulted in 1657 by Robert Hardie (who was fined by the Magistrates). He was listed as Councillor in 1668 and Bailie in 1673. In 1669 a woman was fined for saying that 'the jogges was mair fitting for him nor hir'; he was probably Bailie at that time. He was described as a 'late bailie' when he was part of the Commission to discuss the division of the Common with agents of the Lord of Queensberry in 1672. He may be the wright on the list of Hawick men named in the 1673 trial following the so-called riot at St. Jude's Fair. Also in 1673 he was witness to baptisms for John Chalmers, Thomas Cowan and James Newbie. In 1683 wright Francis Gledstains was fined for attacking him and for stealing the 4 ducks that he had caught. Also in 1683 he was the wright who was late 'baylea in Havicke' when charged with the task of constructing the first gallery in St. Mary's Kirk. This was the 'Steeple (or Middle) Loft' in St. Mary's, built in 1684. In 1686 he is probably the Bailie Thorbrand whose horse was untethered from part of the Common and retethered where his peas were growing; presumably this was in retaliation for a previous punishment on the perpetrator. His servant Margaret Rutherford was recorded in 1687 when she gave evidence in a local court case involving the Leydens. In 1688 a man was fined for allowing his horse to graze among his crops. He was married to 'Jeane Wetch' (presumably Veitch). His sons included: Thomas (b.1652); and George (b.1654), who married Margaret Scott. Jane, who married William Laing, may have been his daughter. Given the confusion between the names he may well be the 'Bailyea Thorburne' listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick 'eist the water' in 1694. In 1675 he witnessed a baptism for William Welch (or 'Wetch'), who may have been related to his wife. James (19th C.) farmer at Stonedge in the 1860s. Jean (17th/18th C.) recorded in Hawick in 1697. She and others complained that Margaret Drummond and Elizabeth Miller had stolen items from their houses, as well as from Bailie William Laing's cellar. She could be the same woman as Jane, wife of William Laing. John (17th/18th C.) wright in the early 1700s. He is recorded in the Parish Records as 'wright in Hawick, and this, with what Bailife Purdem pay'd him, is all he gote for placing about the palling raill about Mr Elliott's grave stone, £12'. He may be the John who was listed as 'student' in 1704 when he witnessed a baptism for Adam Elliot in Whitchesters. Robert (16th C.) witness to an instrument of sasine for the lands of Crook in 1592. Simon Routledge was 'in Cruik', while he described as being 'there', presumably meaning he was a resident of Crook, but not a tenant. William 'Will' (16th C.) recorded in 1562 as a tenant in Greatlaws. Robert Hastie acting as factor in Lilliesleaf acknowledged receipt of the teinds from him and other tenants of 'Grett Law' and Clerklands. His name is listed as 'Volle Thurbrand' (formerly 'Thronbrand' and 'Thurbrand'; note that in early records it may be the same as Thorburn).

Thorburn (thōr-burn) n. Adam (d.bef. 1799) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Miller in Hawick in 1761. The death of his wife Janet Miller is recorded in 1799. Adam (1764–1837) carrier in Hawick according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He may be the Adam, son of Walter and Christian Ballatyne, who was baptised in Hawick in 1766. It was said later that he carried 'both mail and government bank notes'. His property may be the 'Thorburn' marked on Buccleuch Street on Wood's 1824 map. He had an unnamed child who died in 1798 and another who died in 1811 (where he is recorded as 'Berwick Carrier'). He married Janet Patterson in Hawick in 1794 and their children, baptised in Hawick Parish, included: Agnes (b.1796); Agnes (again, b.1797); John (b.1797); Adam (b.1799); Catherine (b.1801); Janet (b.1803); George (1805–82), farmer at Janesville, Rock County; William (b.1807); Nancy; and James (b.1815). The witnesses in 1796 and 1797 were Robert Tinlin and Michael Anderson. He emigrated to America in 1818, settling in Bovina, New York, where he became a farmer. A letter of 1818 was sent with him to Thomas Elliot, since he was about to make the trip to America. Andrew (19th C.) son of George, farmer at Stonedge. He is said to have gone out to the New Zealand gold rush with local builder John Eckford, and to have died in New York at the age of 99. Both his sister Janet and brother George are also said to have died at an advanced age. David (18th C.) resident of Hawick as recorded in a letter from him in 1791, preserved in the Walter Mason Collection. He may also be the David from 'Broumoorhight' recorded in another letter. He married Sarah Thomson and their son David was baptised in Hawick in 1790. George (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish, recorded in 1694 when he was listed among the 'Cottars' on the Hearth Tax roll there. He could be the George who married Helen Tailor in Ashkirk in 1707. George (18th C.) smith in Ashkirk. He was said to have married Jean, daughter of James Anderson and Helen Lithgow; their daughter Jean married John Anderson, tenant at Newton, Wilton Parish, and whose daughter Jean married John Eckford, who later claimed the remains of the fortune of his ancestor Hector Lithgow. Another daughter, Betty, married John Russell in Ashkirk in 1760. Assuming that the genealogy is essentially correct, then he would have been born around 1725 and could have been son or grandson of the earlier George from Ashkirk. George (b.c.1755) farmer at Stonedge. He was listed there in 1841, along with his son John and his family. His children included: John (b.c.1790), who farmed Stonedge after him; Thomas (b.c.1800), born in Ashkirk Parish, who helped his brother John on the farm; Janet, who married farmer William Little and lived to be 99; Andrew, who went to New Zealand and died in New York, aged 99; and George, shepherd at Harwood and Ormiston, who died at over age 80. He is easy to confuse with a contemporary man from Ashkirk; the forenames used are similar enough that the 2 families are surely related (or are being confounded here). George (18th/19th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He is probably the man recorded among Volunteers in 1803 as 'George Thorburn, Ashkirk, lame, but willing to serve' and also at New Woll when 'ready to go against the French with gun and bayonet'. He married Jeanie Henderson in Wilton Parish in 1786. Their children included: Jeanie (b.1788); John (b.1789); Anne (b.1791); George (b.1793), who was a carrier in Newcastleton; Thomas (b.1795); and James (b.1797). George (18th/19th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His children included John (b.1828). He may be the same man as George from Castleton Parish. George (1793–1884) born in Ashkirk Parish, son of farmer George. He was a carrier in Newcastleton, operating a weekly service to Hawick according to Pigot's 1825/6 and 1837 directories. In 1841 and 1851 he was listed at about 4 Stopford Street. He could be the George of Castleton who subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. He married Janet Geddes, who died at Stonedge in 1832, aged 33. He secondly married Mary Inglis, who died in 1889, aged 88. His children included: George (b.1818), who died in infancy; Andrew (b.1819); Jean (b.1821); Jane (b.1822); and Lieut. James (1824–58), who died at Aldershot Camp; John (b.c.1828); William (b.c.1840); Margaret; Isabella; and George (again). George (19th C.) said (by J.H. Haining) to have been son of George, farmer at Stonedge. He was shepherd at Harwood and Ormiston and claimed to have died at over the age of 80, like his sister Janet and brother Andrew. 2 of his daughters were: Kate, farmer at Harwood; and Jane, widow of wool agent William Dalgleish. However, there is no record of him on the local census records of the mid-1800s. George (b.c.1820) son of John. Like his father, he farmed at Stonedge. He was one of the 18 founders of the Relief Kirk in Hawick. He was tenant there in the 1860s. George Cumming (1950/1–) son of Park gardener Jack and brother of Hawick R.F.C. Secretary John. He worked at Forbes Nursery as a schoolboy, and was educated at Edinburgh University, where he received a Ph.D. in horticultre. He was founder and Managing Director of Global Horticulture Limited. He was speaker at the 2005 Callants' Club dinner and Chief Guest of the 2009 Common Riding. Isobel (17th C.) resident of Midlem. In about 1684 she was on a list of Covenanter fugitives. James (18th C.) footman at Cavers in 1778 and 1779, when he was working for James Douglas of Cavers. James (19th C.) local schoolmaster of whom a portrait exists. James (b.1824) born in Hobkirk Parish, son of John. In 1861 he was listed as 'Probationer M.A. of U P Church' when visiting the house of John Governlock in Ewesdale. He may be related to Rev. John, who was also from Hobkirk. Janet (18th/19th C.) daughter of George, farmer at Stonedge. She married William Little, farmer at Salenside. She is said (by J.H. Haining) to have 'lived to be 99, got second sight and a third set of teeth, although they decayed very quickly'. She has a brother Andrew who also lived to 99, and another brother George, who lived beyond 80. Jean (18th C.) cook and chambermaid at Knowe in Minto Parish in 1785, when she was working for Thomas Turnbull. Probably the same person was a female servant at Borthwickbrae in 1791. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He was married to Janet Gillis and their children included John (b.1703). John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Elizabeth Moss and their daughter Helen was baptised in 1727. John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish who married Margaret Inglis in 1754. John (18th C.) weaver in Hawick Parish. He married Helen Bulloch in 1756 and she died in Hawick in 1796. Their children included: Jean (b.1757); Robert (b.1759); and Elizabeth (b.1761). The witnesses in 1757 were mason Andrew Turnbull 'junior' and weaver George Swan. John (d.1794) carrier. His death is recorded in Hawick Parish. He was 'killed by his own cart at Drydon'. John (18th/19th C.) farmer at Minto Kames. He may have been son of Thomas, who was farmer there before him. He was recorded at Kames in the 1789–1797 Horse Tax Rolls. In 1797 he was owner of 12 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. He also paid the dog tax at Kames in 1797. He is probably the John who married Betty Horsburgh in Minto Parish in 1785 and whose children included Isabella (b.1786), Nelly (b.1789), Margaret (b.1790), Betty (b.1792), Jane (b.1797) and Robert (b.1798). John (18th/19th C.) proprietor of a public house and grocer on the High Street, recorded in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. He could be the same man as the carter and farmer. John (b.1784/5) farmer at Stonedge, son of George. His wife was Elizabeth and children included: George (b.c.1821); Eliza; Isabella (b.c.1835) and Jane (b.c.1837). He was at Stonedge in 1841 along with his elderly father. He was still living at Stonedge in 1851, along with his brother Thomas; he was then employing 4 men and farming 50 acres of arable land and 1250 acres of pasture. By 1861 his wife was a widow, and his son George had taken over Stonedge. John (b.c.1780s) labourer at Bellendean, according to the 1812 ballot for the Militia in Roberton Parish. John (b.1790/1) farmer up the Loan and also a carter. In 1841 he is listed at Green Wynd as a farmer, and in 1851 is a carter on the Loan and farmer of 10 acres. In 1861 he was a 'House Proprietor' at 32 Loan. He married Agnes (or Nancy) Beck, and their children included: Margaret Wilson (b.1819); Isabella (b.1821); John (or 'Jack', b.1827), also a carter; William (b.1829); and Agnes (b.1835), who married Galashiels mason Adam Thomson in 1859. He is probably the

John born to Robert and Isabell Hall in Hawick in 1791. John (19th C.) born in Hobkirk Parish, he was associated with Allars Kirk in Hawick. He became 3rd minister of St. Paul's Relief Kirk (in Aberdeen) in 1841. The church had financial difficulties, closed in 1842, to reopen in a new building, and in 1845 he resigned amid controversy. However, within a few months he was minister of the Relief Kirk at Dunning. He became minister at Gatehouse of Fleet in 1851, leaving in 1859 and dying in Glasgow. He married Jessie Walker and their children included John, Susanna, George and Elizabeth. John (b.1827) son of carter John. Like his father he worked as a carrier in Hawick. In 1861 he was living at 32 Loan along with his elderly father. He married Margaret Rae (from England) and their children included Agnes, Susan Wright (b.1854), John and William J. John (19th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His wife was Elizabeth and they had a son Douglas in 1846. John (b.1829/30) born in Hobkirk Parish, he was a ploughman. In 1861 he was living at Easter Essenside Cottage. His wife was Helen and their children included Margaret, Andrew and Jessie. John Bootland 'Jock' (1926–2021) born in Leith, his father died when he was 3 and the family lived in dire poverty. He came to Hawick as a refugee in 1939 (along with his step-brother and step-sister), lodging with the Doughty family and attending Denholm School. He worked on farms, then as a gardener at Forbes Nurseries, qualifying as a gardener/nurseryman with a correspondence course. Living at Appletreehall for a while, he worked as a tractorman, then moved to Courthill farm and had a business growing flowers and other plants. In 1972 he joined Hawick Parks Department, becoming foreman, with particular pride being the Walled Garden and nursery. During his tenure Hawick was Scotland in Bloom medium town category winner on 10 occasions, as well as the Par winning several other awards. He also had a long association with boxing in Hawick. He said that he would sneak through the wire at the Wilton Hill Camp to spar with German P.O.Ws. In in the 1980s he was made an Honorary President of the Scottish Amateur Boxing Association in recognition of his long service to boxing in Hawick. He was a long-time member of the Hawick Horticultural Society and British Legion Flower Show committees. In 1992 he became President of Hawick Rotary Club. He was also a founding committee member of the James McLean Trust, giving awards for sporting excellence. He married Teri Jean Lamb Cumming and they had sons George (b.1950) and John (b.1954). The couple celebrated their diamond wedding anniversary in 2019. John (1954–) son of Jock and younger brother of George, he was educated at Hawick High School and Napier College. He worked as a printer, being a compositor with the Hawick News and then the Scotsman. He purchased the Hawick firm Scott & Paterson in 1988. In about 2011 he took up a position with Scottish Rugby. He has been heavily involved in the Bill McLaren Foundation and has been Secretary of both Hawick R.F.C. and the 1514 Club. He married Margaret. Mungo (18th/19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf. He was at Friarshaw in the 1780s and 90s according to the Horse Tax Rolls. He married Isabel Redford and their children included: Robert (b.1791); Andrew (b.1793); Mungo (b.1795); William (b.1797); James (b.1799); and John (b.1803). Mungo (b.1794/5) born in Lilliesleaf Parish, he was farmer at Nether Bowerhouse in Berwickshire in 1861. Probably the same Mungo was at Headshaw in 1868. His wife was Margaret and their children included Robert and Andrew. Robert (18th C.) wheelwright in Hawick. He married Elizabeth Rae and their children included: John (b.1733); Adam (b.1735); Walter (b.1738); Thomas (b.1740); Jean (b.1743); and Margaret (b.1746). The witnesses in 1733 were Robert Turnbull and Robert Boyd. He could be the Robert who hired the Hawick mortcloth in 1760. Robert (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. His children included John (b.1752) and Nelly (b.1760). Robert (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isabel Hall and their children included Agnes (b.1789) and John (b.1791). Robert (18th/19th C.) tailor in Hawick. His daughter Nelly died in 1800. Robert (18th/19th C.) farmer in Hawick recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Where he farmed is unclear. Rev. Robert (19th C.) born in Bowden, son of Robert and Margaret Cochrane. He is said to have been taught by George Scott in Lilliesleaf. He attended Edinburgh University and was appointed to Falmouth in Jamaica in 1834. He joined the Free Church in 1843 and became minister of Warwick Presbyterian Church in Bermuda. His brother Walter was also minister in the same Bermuda church. Robert (19th C.) resident of Minto Parish. He married Isabella Oliver and their daughter Helen was baptised in 1846. Thomas (18th C.) farmer at Kames in Minto Parish according to the Horse Tax Rolls of 1787–88. He was surely related to John, who farmed there immediately afterwards. Thomas (b.1798/9) son of George, farmer at Stonedge, he was born in Ashkirk Parish. In 1841 he was an agricultural labourer living at 'Stonedge Stable'. In 1851 he was at Stonedge helping his brother John with the farm and in 1861 was a 'Barnman', helping his sister-in-law Elizabeth. He died unmarried. Walter (17th C.) tenant in Wooplaw in Southdean Parish according to the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. He was probably related to John, who farmed at the neighbouring Lethem. Walter 'Watt' (18th C.) tailor of Hawick Parish. In 1762 he married Christian Ballantyne, who was also from Hawick Parish and died in 1790. Their children included: Robert (b.1763); Walter (b.1765); Adam (b.1766); William (b.1768); Janet (b.1771); and an unnamed child (b.1773). The witnesses in 1763 were John Thorburn and Walter Ballantyne, in 1766 were Robert and Adam Thorburn (who were surely related) and in 1771 were the whole congregation. He may be the Walter who paid the cart tax in Hawick in 1791. Walter (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Mary (or Marion) Ekron and their children included: Mary (b.1761); Isabel (b.1766); and Elizabeth (b.1770). He is probably the Walter from Hawick recorded in a letter to a Selkirk lawyer in 1791. Walter (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Parkhill in 1780 and 1785. His children included: Janet (b.1780); Thomas (b.1784); and Walter (b.1785). Walter (18th/19th C.) farmer at Langton in Ashkirk Parish. In 1797 he paid tax on 4 work horses and 1 saddle horse there. Walter (19th C.) hosiery manufacturer of 21 Buccleuch Street. His family's land there is marked 'Thorburn' on Wood's 1824 map. He was nephew of William of William Lockie & Co. He married Betsy Stevenson Huggan, daughter of hosiery worker Thomas. Their children were William Lockie (Cornet in 1911), Bessie and Mary Hall (who married Robert Laidlaw). Walter (b.1822/3) resident of Roberton Parish. He was an agricultural labourer living at Harden in 1841, was living with his mother Janet Lockie at Borthwickbrae Haugh in 1851 and was at Borthwickbrae Burnfoot in 1861. He married Beatrix Scott from Newcastleton. Their children included Wilhelmina (b.1850), William, Henry, James, Janet and Marion. Walter 'Wat' (19th/20th C.) Bandmaster of the Saxhorn Band from about 1882. He was also known as an accomplished soloist. Prhaps the same Walter was a fifer with the Drums and Fifes around the 1880s. He could be the Walter who died in Hawick in 1925, aged 75. He is probably the Walter from Portobello, stepson of David Reid, who grew up on the Sandbed. Walter Lockie (1914–97) son of William and Agnes. He followed in his father's footsteps as Cornet in 1937. He was Right-Hand Man for a second time, after WWII in 1946. He farmed at farmed at Kidshielhaugh, near Duns. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Euphan Elliot and their children included: Violet Hardie (b.1798), baptised in Ashkirk, who married Hawick seedsman John Turnbull; and Walter (b.1801), baptised in Selkirk. William (d.1836) tailor on the Howegate. He was possibly the son of Walter and Christine Ballantyne who was born in Hawick in 1768. He was one of the founders of the Independent Kirk in Hawick in the late 1790s. He is recorded as tailor and 'furnishing' on the Howegate in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. Like some of the Independents, he later became a confirmed Baptist, and was effectively leader of that group in Hawick from the 1810s until his death. The initially small congregation met in his house. He married Margaret Renwick in 1792 and their son Walter was baptised later the same year. The witnesses were weaver Robert Renwick (probably related to his wife) and tobacconist William Brown. He may also have married Margaret Lunn in 1800. William Lockie (c.1850–1925) son of Walter. He worked as a hosiery manager and was Cornet in 1911. He married Agnes, daughter of coal merchant Andrew Robson. Their son Walter Lockie was Cornet in 1937 (also written 'Thorburne'; note that in early records it may be the same as Thorbrand).

Thorlieshope (thōr-leez-hōp) n. farm in the Liddel valley near Saughtree, once a seat of the Elliots. The house is situated in a glen, with similarities with the location of Harden. It is 'Thorleshop' in the c.1376 rental roll of Liddesdale. 'Robert Elwald' was Laird in 1488 and 'Johne Elwald in Thorleshope' is recorded in 1498, along with other Elliot Lairds through the 16th century. It is probably the 'Thornyshope' recorded in the 1541 rental roll, with a value of 4 merks and with Robert Elliot as tenant. The house of 'Thirleshope' belonging to 'Arche Elwode' was burned by the English in 1541. Probably the same 'Arche Ellot of Thirlishoup' rented Southdeanrig and Caldcleuch from Melrose Abbey in 1557. Robert Elliot, called 'Hob of Thorlieshope' was among the 34 thieves who were captued in Hawick in 1567 by the Regent Moray. John of Thorlieshope is listed among the Elliots of the Braidlie branch in 1583, while John 'of Thorlosope' signed a bond of assurance in 1584, on behalf of the Elliots of Thorlieshope. Adam 'Rakkis' was recorded there in 1611. The lands were already owned by the Scotts of Buccleuch by 1613. It could be the 'Thorishop' where Thomas Brown was recorded in 1618. John Elliot 'callit Dods' was tenant in 1623, as well as Robert Routledge. The lands appear to have part of the estate of Scott of Mangerton in 1643 and were valued at £520 in 1678, when John Elliot owned them. John Graham of Claverhouse ('Bluidy Clavers') wrote a letter from there to the Marquess of Queensberry on 3rd July 1685. Tax was paid on 5 hearths at 'Thorlishopes hous' in 1694. The lands of 'Thorlieshope and Castleton' were valued at £1340 in the 1740s. Thomas Hall was Laird in 1761 and William Walker by 1788 and still in 1811, when it was valued at £520. Robert Beattie was a labourer there and Andrew Oliver a mason there in 1801. William Nichol was steward there in 1841. John Wilson lived there in the 1860s. It was owned by the Jardines in the 19th century. It is said that the tower stood where the current garden is. A former house (perhaps the tower) was once described as being a ruined 2-storey building, with lintel dated 1682 and monograms 'DME' and 'WEAC' (surely related to William Elliot of Thorlieshope and Christian Ainslie, since this is the year of their marriage). This lintel and some other stonework was built into the new farmhouse, erected in the 19th century. A flint arrowhead was found in the garden in 1882, but subsequently lost. A mineral spring on the farm, up in Deadwater, was once regarded as having healing properties. There is also a disused lime kiln and quarry near the house, while further to the east, the Thorlieshope Lime Works and Fairloans Quarries operated until at least the end of the 19th century. Thorlieshope Pike is a nearby hill reaching 1,180 feet. A 'decorated stone disc, smoked on one side, whole surface polished' from here is in Hawick Museum. Sir Walter Scott used the name as the basis for 'Charlieshope' in 'Guy Mannering' (the name probably means 'valley with the thorny clearing'; it is 'Thorleshop' in 1488, 'thornlawishop' in 1494/5, 'Thorleshope' in 1498, 'Thorleshop' in 1500 and 1516, 'Thirleshope', 'Thorlieshope' and 'Thorlishopp' in 1541, 'Thorlyshop' and 'Thorlyshope' in 1546, transcribed as 'Thorllshowp' in 1547, 'Thorlishoip' and 'Thorlishop' in 1569, 'Thornesope' in 1583, transcribed 'Thorwishoip' in 1587/8, 'Thoirlishop' in 1594, 'Thorlesop' in 1595, 'Thirlishope' in 1613, 'Thoirleishoip' in 1623, 'Chorlesoip' in 1646, 'Thorlishoppe' in 1648, 'thorlishop' in 1678, 'Thorlishope' in 1690, 'Thorleshope' in 1692, 'Thorlishop' in 1704 and 'Thorlishope' in 1811; it is 'Thorlisope' on the 1718 Buccleuch survey and 'Thorlishope' on Stobie's 1770 map).

Thorlieshope Burnfoot (thōr-leez-hōp-burn-fi') n. former steading in Castleton Parish, near where Thorlieshope Burn meets the Liddel. Labourer David Jackson and his family were there in 1851 and 1861.

Thorlieshope Heights (thōr-leez-hōp-hīts) n. general name for hilly area to the east of Thorlieshope farm, south of Thorlieshope Pike. A triangulation pillar with a height of 396 m lies to the south, between here and Foulmire Heights.

Thorlieshope Pike (thōr-leez-hōp-pīk) n. hill on the eastern border of Castleton Parish, reaching a height of 360 m. The farm of Thorlieshope is located to the west, and Thorlieshope Heights to the south. George Watson writes in 1921 of a small stone cross lying in a quarry near there, possibly part of a boundary marker; there is no sign of it today.

thorn (thōrn) n., arch. the hawthorn tree (used in place names, e.g. Thorniewhats, Thornybank and Thornyhaugh).

Thornebogg (thōr-nee-bōg) n. former lands in the Slitrig valley, listed in 1547/8 in an English communication about farms they had burned. They were the property of Martin Crozier, however, the exact location and pronunciation are unknown.

Thornhill (thōrn-hil) n. town in Dumfriesshire, the nearest major settlement to Drumlanrig Castle. This is where the Baron's Head Courts were held, which the landowners in Hawick were accustomed to attend twice a year. In 1670 they were explicitly excused from attending the Michaelmas Court on account of the poor state of their crops.

Thorniewhats (thōr-nee-whats) n. farm just to the east of Hollows (Gilnockie) between Langholm and Canonbie, once a seat of the Armstrongs. The Scotts of Buccleuch possessed the lands there according to the 1663 marriage contract of Anne, Countess of Buccleuch. John Elliot was tenant there in 1676 (it is 'Thornyquhat' in 1579, 'Thornythaite' in 1583, 'Thornyquhattie', 'Thornyquhatt' and 'Torniquhatt' in 1585, 'Thorniquhat' in 1623 and 'Thorniequhatis' in 1663; it is marked as 'Thorniwhat' on Gordon's c.1650 manuscript map; note that it should not be confused with 'Thornyhaugh' near Falnash).

Thornton (thōrn'-in) n. former name for piece of land on the farm of Braidhaugh near Hobkirk, probably near to the Rule Water and 'Thornton Pool' (also 'Thornitoun').

Thornton (thōrn'-in) n. Lewis Henry Jenkins (19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. In 1853 he married Elizabeth, daughter of stockingmaker Peter Fraser.

Thornton Pool (thōrn'-in-pool) n. deep pool in the Rule Water near the farm of Braidhaugh. The name was still in use in the early 20th century.

Thornwud Avenue (thōrn-wud-aw-vi-new) n. Thornwood Avenue, a street in Weensland, named for its proximity to the former Thornwood House and constructed in 1976.

Thornwud Hoose (thōrn-wud-hoos) n. mansion built by James Oliver in 1870, which eventually became the Mansfield House Hotel. The name probably derived from being 'on a bleak hill side covered with whins and thorns', according to a contemporary newspaper report. The original design, in a Greek Revival style (with Italian elements), was by Glasgow-based architect John T. Rochead in 1867. The house was sold to Lt.-Col. Mudie in 1936 and by the 1950s it had become a hotel (see also Mansfield Hoose).

Thornwud Park (thōrn-wud-pawrk) n. Thornwood Park, a street in Weensland, part of Daykins Drive. The whole street was called Daykins Drive when built in 1982, but this name was favoured by many residents and later made official. It derives from the proximity to Thornwood House.

Thornybank (thōr-nee-bawngk) n. former name for lands in Hobkirk Parish, probably located between the lands of Harwood and Fairnielees. This could be the same as 'Thornydykes', where Robert French is recorded in 1603 ('Thorniebankis' in 1562).

Thornycleugh (thōr-nee-klooch) n. former farmstead to the west of Bellendean and south of Redfordgreen, in the far corner of what was once Roberton Parish. William Little 'in thornycluch' is recorded in 1494/5 when his son-in-law John Scott was fined. It is marked on Ainslie's 1773 map, to the north of Crooke Loch on the Bellendean Burn. The stream called 'Thorniecleuch Burn' is curiously on the other side of the B711, flowing into Clearburn Loch.

Thornyhaugh (thōr-nee-hawch, -haw) n. flat land by the stream near Falnash. The 'Chapel of Ease' for the outlying parts of Cavers and Hawick Parishes was built here some time around 1715. It was repaired in 1722 and used until 1789, when a new church was built on the other side of the stream. There are now no signs of this building. The area had a teacher appointed in the 18th century. The farm there was occupied by Robert Scott in 1738 and Robert Laidlaw was there in 1741. John Hume was there in 1781–85 and was tenant in 1797. Peter Hume was there in 1795. (it is 'Thornihaugh' in 1738 and 1741 and 'Thornihall' in 1781 and 1785; also written 'Thorny Hall' and 'Thorniehall', perhaps erroneously).

Thorterdykes (thōr'-ur-, thor-tur-dīks) n. old name for the land between roughly the Mote and the south side of Rosebank Road. It largely overlapped with what was also called Moat Croft, and probably also included the areas of Easterdykeback and Westerdykeback. It was also sometimes pronounced 'Whirter Dykes' in the 19th century. In the early 1760s there were sometimes open air services here for the newly established secession congregation, before the Green Kirk was built. The name is now in use for 'Thorterdykes Roadhoose', the pub there (it appears in 1666 as 'the thorter dikes', in 1863 it is 'Whirter or Thorter Dykes'; its origin is uncertain, but probably Old English for 'land lying athwart the Mote or a ditch').

Thorterdykes Roadhoose (thōr'-ur-dīks-rōd-hoos) n. public house at Thorterdykes. It is based in the house that was constructed as a villa on Rosebank Road in 1882 for manufacturer Thomas Scott and lived in by the Bonsors.

It is played in a different manner in Teviotdale. Two stand together, facing each other, having their hands clinched, and lifted above their breath, so as to form an arch. Under this perhaps twenty or thirty children pass, holding each other by their clothes. When all have passed save one, the arms of the two, like a portcullis, fall down and detain this individual as prisoner. He, or she, is asked in a whisper, 'Will ye be Tod or Fern-buss?' If Tod is the answer, the person takes one side, and must wait till all are caught one by one. This being done, the Tods draw one way, and the Ferns another, the two candidates still keeping hold of each other's hands; and he, who can draw the other and his party to the opposite side of the street, and separate their hands gains the victory' JoJ.

throwe-the-wud-laddie (throw-thu-wud-law-dee) n., arch. a severe scolding – 'She gae 'er man throw-the-wud-laddie' [GW], '... the phrase 'throwe the wud laddie' would also originate in the mills, and has reference to suffering for one's mis-deeds' [WL] (noted by E.C. Smith).

Thursdi (thurz-di) n. Thursday. This was formerly market day in Hawick (also spelled 'Thursdih'; cf. the older Thorsday).

the Thursdi (thu-thurz-di) n. common name for the Thursday before Common Riding weekend. It begins with a Chase up the Nip Knowes, with the Cornet carrying the (unbussed) flag for the first time. After the 'Hut' there is a ceremonial singing of 'Teribus' in front of the farmhouse at St. Leonard's and a ride around the racecourse at the Moor. Then the Principals visit local schools, requesting that the pupils be given the rest of the day and the next off school. In the evening is the Drum and Fife procession round the tolls, the Colour Bussing, the Burgh Officer's Proclamation, the tying of the ribbons at the Horse monument and the Cornet's Walk. The evening is the first time that the 'Big Threi' wear their traditional Cornet's uniforms of green jackets and tile hats. In early times the Halberdiers and musicians would visit the house of the Minister, Senior Bailie, Cornet and also various inns where the participants would dine on the Friday. At each location they would be greeted with refreshments, and they would also stop on the Auld Brig for snuff, with the bussing of the Flag itself being quite an informal affair. Until the 1880s the Flag used to fly from the Chief Magistrate's house after the morning Chase until it was bussed in the evening. Until 1886 the Cornet and his followers used to call at the houses of his supporters for refreshments after returning from the Thursday morning Chase. In the late 19th century there used to be a canter round the racecourse after 'the Hut' and then proceeded round by Wilton. In the years 1900–04 and in 1921 the Riding of the Marches and the Cutting of the Sod were tried out on the Thursday morning after the Chase. The striking up of the Drums and Fifes at 6 p.m. on the Kirk Wynd is considered by many people to be the start of the Common Riding proper.

the Thursdi Mornin Chase (thu-thurz-di-mōr-neen-chās) n. phrase used to distinguish the Chase of the Thursday morning of Common Riding week from the other Chases. It is in a sense a rehearsal for the events of the following day. It begins with the usual muster in the Backdamgate, but at 6 .m. the Cornet now has the (unbussed) Flag for the first time. As usual the married men go first, led by the Acting Father, followed by the Cornet and his unmarried supporters. There is usually a large crowd at the Vertish, to see the Flag again. The Acting Father takes the Flag at the top of the Nipknowes and carries it to St. Leonards, where it is displayed outside the famhouse while the Cornet and supporters attend the Hut. Afterwards the Song Singer sings Teribus outside the farmhouse and the riders remount. They proceed via Pilmuir field to the Moor, where they ride round the racecourse, the Cornet leading with the Flag. The return is via Crumhaughhill and the Loan, passing the children arriving at Drumlanrig School. The route then takes the cavalcade along the High Street, over the North Bridge, along Dovemount and turning onto Princes Street, down Wilton Path, through the Sandbed and so back to the Town Hall. There the Principals dismount and the Flag is displayed from the balcony awaiting the Colour Bussing in the evening.

the Thursdi Night Chase (thu-thurz-di-nī'-chās) n. name often used for the Chase at the Nipknowes on the Thursday evening before Common Riding week, officially called Orderin the Curds an Cream.

It kinnled till a burnin' buss The thorns on Hardie's Hill' [DH], in addition to – 'Hei'll need mair till't till (til) n. a kind of clay deposite by glaciers, impervious to water and giving an unproductive soil – 'We are all aware that our valleys and hillsides are covered, to a great extent, with beds of what we call 'till' ...' [PJE] (originally a Scots word, this became adopted as a geological term in English).

(enviously said of a prosperous person)' [GW], used before the infinitive – 'Hei was sweerin' at the men till work' [GW] (this is used more generally than in standard English, where it usually only refers to time; see also till't).

the Till (thu-til) n. river in Northumberland, which runs into the Tweed. It is deep and was hard to ford in former times. The crossing was important during the Battle of Flodden. It is also somewhat unusual in having 2 names, the upper part being called the Breamish – 'Says Tweed to Till 'What cars ye rin so still?' Says Till to Tweed 'Though ye rin wi speed And I rin slaw, For ae man that ye droon I droon twa'' [T], her mither's throat, it's cheerfu' music still, Has socht a nest in the yellow gorse beside the murmurin' Till' [JYH], 'Then the dreadful roar of battle Echo'd from the distant hill, While the life blood flow'd so freely That it dy'd the sluggish Till' [JAHB], 'The minstrel climbed the sacred mound And gazing eastward where the Till To Tweed his deviou pathway wound Through woods that fringed that fatal hill' [WHO].

Tillielee (ti-lee-lee) n. former name for the farm at Peelbrae. It is listed among lands in the Barony of Cavers in an English document c.1380. It was owned by the Elliots of Redheugh before 1497/8, when it is recorded as 'Tellile', along with 'Caldcluch', in the Douglas of Cavers papers. There was a 'retour of inquest' held at Cavers to rule on the inheritance of these lands by Robert 'Elwalde', grandson of the former Robert. It may also have been written 'Tilloly', and the name was mostly lost in the 17th century, although it may be related to the Tinlee Stone. It was still recorded in the Barony of Cavers when inherited by Sir William Douglas in 1687 and by his brother Archibald in 1698. The lands had a boundary with Dod, passing along the Dod Burn and then the Rowantree dyke to the boundary with Priesthaugh, the line being partly marked with stones (it is 'Tilloly' in c.1380, 'Tillelee' in 1511, 'Tillielie' in 1687 and transcribed 'Tilbie' in 1698).

Tillieleehope (ti-lee-lee-up) n. alternative name for the steading of Peelbrae, recorded as 'Tillieliehope' in 1660.

Tillotson (ti-lit-sin) n. Ben (19th C.) local criketer serving as professional for the Wilton team from 1857 and with Hawick and Wilton through the 1860s.

till't (tilt, til') contr., arch. to it – 'My principles is ready money for cobblin', an' aw'll stick till't' [WNK], 'I hae swurn, an' wull stan' til't ...' [HSR], '... it is hie, I canna atteen til't' [HSR], 'Some, pointing to the machine, would exclaim – 'See till't! disna that beat a'! Od, it has mair sense nor a bodie! It's a wonnerfu' invention!' [DMW], 'There's nae end till't, [ECS], 'Div ee taik shoogir till't?' [ECS], 'Hei'll need nae mair till't' [ECS], 'A hoose withoot a ruif till't' [GW], 'Take some saut till't' [GW], '... born and bred till't, Wi a Common Riding in the verra bludestream ...' [DH], also used elliptically for a verb of motion or labour – 'It's a case o hei till't an shui till't' [ECS], 'It was a case o' he till't an' she till't (= all hands to the pump)' [GW] (cf. ti'd and till).

till yince (til-yins) adv., arch. until at length, until some condition has been met – '... that none should enter intil the said loft, till once the persons that use ane right and proertie to the said loft be once settled' [BR1716].

tillysow (ti-lee-sow) n., arch. a small lodging-house or commercial inn built by a landowner to accommodate the servants of his guests at their own expense – 'He would say he would have a board placed before his house, with the announcement, 'No Tillysow kept here'' [JW].

the Tima Witter (thu-ti-mu-wi'-ur) n. small river that rises near the border with Dumfries & Galloway and flows about 6 miles roughly north to join the Ettrick Water at Ramseycleuch – 'Then a murmur wakes in the heath and fern, And the fairies gather, unseen of men, Riding up from the Rankleburn And trooping down from the Teema Glen' [WHO] (it is 'Tymeye' in 1235/6 and 'Temay' in 1415; 'Tima Burne' and 'Tima Burn' are marked on Gordon's c.1650 maps and 'Timo B.' on Blaeu's 1654 map).

Timberside (tim-bur-sīd) n. former farmstead in Wilton Parish, presumably close to Timerbsidemill. In 1765 it was listed among the properties of the Scotts of Whitehaugh.

Timbersidemill (tim-bur-sīd-mil) n. former name for Scawmill, a cottage in the north of the old part of Wilton Dean. It was once a corn mill, distinct from Deam Mill. The 1694 Hearth Tax rolls records 'Thomas Miller and John Bue wt an kilne betuixt thm' there; Andrew 'Andisone' was also recorded there, among the poor of Wilton Parish. Francis Scott was there in 1697. John Cairns was there in 1721 and James Scott in at least 1721–27. John Turnbull was there in at least 1743–7. In 1765 it was 'Timberside-mill, now called Skawmill' when part of the estate of John Scott of Whitehaugh. John Scott was recorded as farmer there in 1797 (it was 'Timbersydemilne' and 'timbersidmilne' in 1694, 'Timersydemil' and 'Timbersyde miln' in 1721, 'Timbersyde miln' in 1727, 'Timer miln' in 1743, 'Timber Syd mill' in 1747 and 'Timbersidemiln' in 1797; it is marked on Stobie's 1770 map).

Timbersidetreis (tim-bur-sīd-trīz) n. former name for a plantation near the south-west corner of Wilton Common, probably on Todshaw Hill – '... and from the pit at the west end of the last-mentioned house, south-west cross the high-way there, to the dyke on the north side of the plantation of Timber-trees' [DCW1765].

time (tīm, tim) n. time, a specific time such as for eating or feeding livestock – 'It's horse-time, cow-time' [GW] (note the pronuncation with the soft i in phrases such as 'tei time' or 'yon time'; also sometimes spelled 'teime' to emphasize the pronunciation).

time aboot (tīm-u-boo') adv. alternately, by turns, turn and turn about – '... Sure, time about is but fair play, His Highness syne maun now obey' [RDW], 'As oo canna geet away threh the shoap thegither, oo've duist aye ti taik oor hoalidays teime aboot' [ECS] (cf. the more common turn aboot).

the time of (thu-tīm-ov) adv., arch. during the period of – '... be the sonis of vmquhile Adame Scot of Alanehaucht aganis me, the said Walter, the tyme of my minoritie ...' [SB1585], '... by tarreing the tyme of Divine service in the houss of Geo. Renwicke, who keips ane change' [PR1712].

the time that (thu-tīm-thi') adv. while, during the period that – 'A thocht ee'd com ti the door the teime that A was oot' [ECS], 'Yow be geetin a wheen mae sorteet the teime at A'm rowe-in thir yins up' [ECS], '... men war layin on an chaappin, ... the teime a stane-nappin injin gaed-on leike a tuim mill' [ECS].

timmer (ti-mur) n., arch. timber – 'For faix! should e'er a faeman daur To drive a nail into her timmer' [JoHa], 'The leaves appear as they'd been steept In the rich blude o' simmer; Nae hand o' airt can imitate The hues that deck the timmer' [TCh].

timmer (ti-mur) adj., poet. wooden, tuneless, unmelodious – 'I join their praise by Te'iot's stream – What matter tho' my tune be timmer' [DH] (recorded in the Hawick News in 1954; cf. timmer-tuned).

timmersome (ti-mur-sum) adj., arch. timorous.

timmer-tuned (ti-mur-choond) adj., arch. having no ear for music, tone deaf (literally 'timber-tuned').

timous (tī-mis) adj., arch. opportune, timely, keeping proper time – '... to the effect timeous tryall and inspection may be taken, whether such families or persons can live and subsist upon their own, without being troublesome and burdensome to the said incorporation' [BR1699], '... Thomas Hardie, merchand, to carie the said Colour the forsaid day, and had formerly called and caused thair officers to give him tymous advertisement upon eight dayes preceiding ...' [BR1706], '... and they were only rescued from the perilous situation by the timeous arrival of some of their neighbours' [EM1820] (there are spelling variants, such as 'timeous').

timously (tī-mis-lee) adv., arch. punctually, early – '... to attend their respective posts on ye day following, without and within ye church, and to be timeously thereat' [PR1717], 'And finding that they have lost considerably through their not lifting the annual rents timeouslie ...' [PR1724] (there are spelling variants, such as 'timeously').

Timpendean (tim-pen-deen) n. ruined 16th century tower near Lanton, stronghold of the Douglases. It was burned by Hertford's men in 1545. The tower is high above the south side of the road, opposite the farm of Timpendean, which is on the other side of the A698. The area was referred to by Jedburgh residents as 'Timp'. It can be reached via a farm track, and is surrounded by older earthworks. The land here was long owned by the Douglases, originally being part of the lands of Bonjedward, but granted to a 2nd son, Andrew Douglas, in 1479. The Laird of Timpendean was listed among 'Landit Men' of Scotland in about 1590. In 1643 the widow of John Douglas held the lands in liferent, and the total value was £418. William Douglas paid the land tax there in 1663 and they still had the same value in 1678. The lands (or perhaps just their superiority) were among those inherited by William Kerr of Abbotrule in 1680. By 1707 the estate was valued at £567, with Douglas of Timpendean having acquired additional land in Lanton. 'Lady Fernington' (probably a Rutherford) paid tax for 23 windows there in 1748. In 1788 the estate consisted of 'six husband-lands of Timpeandean' (valued at £158), addition lands that had been liferented in 1643 to the widow of John Douglas (valued at £260), part of Lanton acquired between 1678 and 1707 (valued at £149) and another part of Lanton purchased from Capt. Scott (valued at £299). There is a plan of the farm drawn up in 1791. David Brown was a servant there in 1801. The lands were sold off by George Douglas, 12th of Timpendean to the Marquess of Lothian in 1843. It was tenanted by Scotts in the latter part of the 19th century. There are several circular structures and ramparts on a hill just to the south, presumably older than the tower. The tower is about 29 ft by 24 ft, with an addition made in the 17th century, in the direction of the earthwork. A polished stone axe found at the tower is in Hawick Museum and a bronze axe is in the National Museum of Antiquities. A 'Jocktileg Knife, found at Timpendean Tower, in 1826' is in the Museum – 'Hear the melody begin At the door of Cleikiminn, East a mile or so of Timpendean. Drown the echo of your grief In the joy of Lilliesleaf, Or the merriment of Redfordgreen' [WL] (the origin of the name is probably Old Welsh 'din pen' and Old English 'denu', together meaning 'the valley by the hill with the fort'; it first occurs as 'Tympynden' in 1499/1500, is 'Tympyndeane' and 'Tympanedene' in 1504, 'Tympenden' in 1540, 'Tympinton' in 1545, 'Timpindene' in 1551, 'Tympyndane' in 1557, 'Tympenden' in 1584/5, 'Tympenden' in 1590 and 1610, 'Tempindene' in 1600, 'Tempandeane' in 1655, 'Timpendein' in 1680, 'Timpingdean' in 1714, 'Timpintine' in 1739, and is written 'Timpentown' in 1858; it appears to be 'Tympintoun' on Pont's c.1590 manuscript map, 'Tympintoun' on Gordon's c.1650 map and 'Timpendein' on Blaeu's 1654 map).

Tindall (tin-dal) n. Robert (15th/16th C.) listed among the Borderers (led by the Homes and Walter Scott of Branxholme) pardoned in 1526 for an attack on the Earl of Arran. His surname is recorded as 'Tyndale'.

tine (tīn) v., arch., poet. to lose, suffer loss, mislay, forget – '... and runs fra the West to the east, till it go in to Tweed at Kelso, and there tynes its name and is in length 26 miles' [MGC1649], 'Drunken Donald all these Lands did tyne, But Gregorius Magnus recover'd them again' [CWS], 'Farewell, he cry'd, I maun gae o'er the hill, But I will see ye soon, or tyne my skill' [CPM], ' 'Come on, come on', cried Lucky Skrae, And dinna tyne the waye' [JTe], 'If ye tyne heart ye tyne a' ' [JTe], '... Or find a midge 'mang dockens tyned, An' darkness fa'in' ' [JoHa], 'I gat ane frae the priest, nor is it tyn'd yet, Sae lang time syne, guidfaith! I dinna mid o't' [JoHa], 'Their love for thee they never tine Thou bonnie Border toon' [RH], 'The mither tongue, what Scottish heart Its memory wad tine? The lightsome days o' happy years, The blinks o' langsyne' [JT] (also written 'tyne').

tink (tink) n., ins. short for 'tinker', a somewhat derogatory name for a Traveller, someone who moves from place to place doing casual work and buying and selling things – 'the right gypsies were fine, it was they tinks that aye left a mess ahint them', more generally a mischievous child (see also gypsy).

tink (tink) v., arch. to mend, solder – 'Tink, to river; including the idea of the noise made in riveting; a Gipsy word, Roxb.' [JoJ].

Tinkers' Knowe (ting-kurz-now) n. hill on the north side of the upper Teviot valley, between the Teindside and Back Burns and east of Commonside Moor. It reaches a height of 301 m.

tinkler (tingk-lur) n., arch. a tinker, metalworker, itinerant pedlar – '... assaulting, under cloud of night, wt ane halbert, in his own house, the persons of Thomas Leythen and Wm. Ainesley, tinkler' [BR1684], 'John Grimesby, tinkler, was onlawed and ammerciatt in tenn pound Scotts for ane egrgious ryit upon ane poore indigent beggar upon the fair day' [BR1687], 'And on 4th july of the same year a tinkler is fined for giving 'insolent and irreverent language to the two present baylyeas ... ' ' [DMW], 'One of this class, still remembered in this district, was Charlie Fox, the tinkler, who, with his family, and sometimes a donkey, used to go about from place to place selling besoms, mugs, &c.' [FH].

the Tinkler (thu-tink-lur) n., arch. nickname for John Scott, tenant in Harwood in the latter part of the 16th century.

the Tinlee Stane (thu-tin-lee-stān) n. the Tinlee Stone, near Peelbraehope. It is an upright stone over 4 feet high, about 3 feet broad at the base, and tapering towards the top. It has been used as a boundary marker, but its original purpose is uncertain. It may be significant that it is situated close to a section of the Catrail. An archæological report of 1981 describes 'a stone with a badly weathered inscription' found nearby.

Tinlin (tin-lin) n. supposed name of the first Cornet, who carried the flag back from Hornshole. This is possibly a confusion with the tales of Watt Tinlin, as further romanticised by Sir Walter Scott.

Tinlin (tin-lin) n. John (17th C.) weaver in Hawick, mentioned from 1669. In 1693/4 he donated money towards a town bell. Also in 1694 he was 'John Tinling weaver' among those on the west-side of Hawick who paid the Hearth Tax. In 1697 he was fined for publicly lying to John Swan, the quartermaster of the weavers, and then refusing to go to prison. He married Agnes Broun and their children were: Robert; Thomas (b.1677); George (b.1679); Agnes (b.1682); and probably Walter, father of 'Rob the Naig'; as well as 2 daughters who died in infancy (probably including the unnamed baptism in 1684). The witnesses in 1684 were George Young and William Purdom. He may be the John who witnessed a baptism for James Halliday in 1675 and another for William Bryson in 1680. John 'Jock' (c.1775–1844) son of Robert. He was William Wilson's first apprentice in 1790. He later lived in the Fore Row. He was there in 1841, with his sister Ann, and recorded as a woollen hose sorter. Perhaps the same stockingmaker John was listed on the men on the ballot to serve in the Militia in 1797; in 1799 he was among those 'In the Ballot Box 1797 not drawn still residing in Hawick parish' and he was probably the John listed as 'Constable' in Hawick on the 1801 ballot. It is described (by D.M. Watson) that he 'was of the simple cast, and many of his sayings are still remembered'. One of his memorable sayings was 'That eels leeved langest after they were killed o' anything he kenned o' ', John (19th/20th C.) resident of Birneyknowe. In 1906 he contributed to the fund for the renovation of Kirkton Kirk. Joyce nee Cavers, known locally for her beautiful singing voice, making 'The Fairest Spot o' a' ' her own. She has served as President of Wilton Dean Women's Institute and Chair of Hawick Saxhorn Band, and has been involved with the Bright Eyed Daughters. In 2015 she became the first woman to propose one of the main toasts at the Common Riding Dinner. She sings 'The Fairest Spot o' a' ' on 'Hawick and Teviotdale in Song and Poetry' (2006) and 'Soft Lowland Tongue of the Borders' on 'Sounds of the Borders' (2012). Richard (1772–1851) son of James and Ann White, he was baptised in Roxburgh Parish. He was a servant at Turn in Kirkton Parish according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia. He was at Kirkton by 1802 and in Wilton from 1810. In 1802 in Kirkton he married Isobel, daughter of Francis Oliver, tenant at Turn. Their children, baptised in Kirkton, included: Mary (b.1803); Anne (b.1805); Isobel (b.1807); and James (b.1809). The same couple also had children baptised in Wilton, including: Helen (b.1812); Margaret (b.1815); and Christian (b.1817). The family emigrated to Canada and he and his wife were buried at Binbrook, Ontario. Robert (1672–aft. 1725) eldest son of John and Agnes Broun. He was a weaver in Hawick. In 1702, 1704, 1705, 1707 and 1710 he witnessed baptisms for his brother Thomas. In 1697 he was fined by the Magistrates for publicly insulting John Swan, the quartermaster of the weavers, resisting the payment of a fine to the incorporation, and refusing to go to the Tolbooth. He witnessed baptisms in 1703 for Janet Bruntfield (wife of Walter Laing), in 1707 (along with Thomas) for Adam Brown 'Headhouse' younger, in 1712 for weaver Robert Turnbull, in 1714 for Alexander Stewart, dyker in Hawick, and in 1717 for weaver Robert Wight. He was later quartermaster of the weavers himself along with Swan, as recorded in 1716 (when they complained about other people using their assigned seats in St. Mary's). In 1721 he was recorded as a weaver when he witnessed a baptism for fellow weaver Andrew Jardine. He and Walter (probably his brother) witnessed a baptism for fellow weaver John Stevenson in 1722. He is probably the weaver Robert who (along with Walter) witnessed a baptism for weaver Thomas (probably his son) in 1725. He married Christine Purdom, and their children included: Thomas (b.1702), who married Janet Riddell; James (b.1704); Christian (b.1707); and possibly Robert who moved to Kirkwhelpington. The witnesses in 1704 were Walter Purdom (surely related to his wife, perhaps her brother) and carrier John Aitkin. Robert 'Rob the Naig' (1737–1815) son of Walter and Anne Tinlin. He was known as an outspoken and independent individual, said (just a few decades later) to belong 'to a class now extinct'. He was Burgh Officer, hence acting as half the town's police force. He was also Beadle at Hawick Kirk, and in that capacity would sit directly in front of the pulpit; he would shake his head when he thought that a visiting preacher had gone on too long, and if the sermon continued he would eventually proclaim 'hae dune'. When one particularly long-winded visiting preacher took so long that he saw the Wilton congregation coming down the hill he said 'Say amen, ye ass, Wilton Kirk's coming up the Common Haugh' and then 'Hae dune ye molehead, Wilton Kirk's comin ower Teiot Brig'. Claimed to be a descendant of Watt, his more immediate forebears were said to be from Old Crumhaugh. He used to openly give his views on matters such as the election of Bailies, and always ended his proclamations with 'Hawick for ever and independent' (James Wilson suggesting that this custom may have been handed down from earlier Halberdiers). He was also said to be extremely loyal to the Crown and Government, perhaps on account of being the same age as the King; he would refer to anyone who did not support the Government as a 'blackneb'. He is probably one of the two men (likely Burgh Officers) 'Tinlin & Hardie' paid during the 1767 flood for watching the Auld Brig. It was said that he held a rope by which means 2 men tried to escape when trapped on the Auld Brig, but the waters were too strong and the rope caught on the corner of a house, with the men being dashed on a wall and lost. In 1771 he was paid by the Council for mending his halberd (confirming definitively that he was a Halberdier). In 1773 he was paid for 'watching the town after fire'. He was the last Burgh Officer who collected the 'yule fees'. He is probably the Robert recorded in 1791 in a letter preserved in Selkirk in the Walter Mason Collection. In 1796 and 1797 he witnessed baptisms for Adam Thorburn and in 1797 another for James Mein. He also witnessed a couple of baptisms in 1804 and 1811. He married Margaret Turnbull in 1760 and she died in 1816. Their children were: Ann (b.1761), who married John Kersel; William (b.1763), called 'Wull the Naig'; Walter (b.1766), who died in infancy; another Walter (b.1767), who served as his assistant; and John (b.1775). He is probably the weaver Robert who witnessed a baptism in 1766 for Isabel (most likely his sister) and John Grierson. A story is told of an encounter between him and Wull Craw – 'Sic a sight I never saw. A Naig sent up to herd a Craw' [WiS]. His spurs were donated to the Museum in 1858. Robert (19th/20th C.) farm worker, who moved to Rulewater about 1879, working at Cleuchhead and then becoming hedger at Wolfelee estate. He married Jessie, daughter of Robert Minto, gamekeeper at Wolfelee. Thomas (b.1677) son of John and Agnes Brown and brother of Robert. He was a weaver like other members of his family. He and Robert witnessed a baptism in 1707 for Adam Brown 'Headhouse' younger. He married Bessie Dryden in 1701 and their children were: Jean (b.1702); Nicholas (b.1704), a daughter; Euphan (b.1705); Anna (b.1707); Margaret (b.1710); and Robert (b.1713). The witnesses in 1702 included his brother Robert, in 1704 were his brother Robert along with merchant Robert Brown, in 1705 were Robert again along with Adam Brown 'headhous elder', in 1707 were Bailie Robert Brown and his brother Robert again, and in 1710 were Bailie Robert and his brother Robert. Thomas (17th/18th C.) weaver in Hawick. He may be the Thomas who witnessed a baptism in Hawick for Adam Kersel in 1720. He is probably the weaver Thomas who (along with Robert, possibly his father or brother) witnessed a baptism for weaver Walter (perhaps his brother) in 1725. In 1719 he married Janet Liddell, who was 'servant to ye Lady Burnfoot'. Their children included: Isobel (b.1720); and Euphan (b.1725). John (b.1722), with the mother's surname given as 'Riddel', was probably also his child. The witnesses in 1720 were Archibald Scott of Boonraw and Robert Scott of Burnhead and in 1725 were weavers Robert and Walter (who had a child baptised the same day). Walter 'Watt' (c.16th C.) said to be a retainer of the Scotts of Buccleuch, holding a small tower in Liddesdale. He was a shoemaker by trade, but became famous as an expert archer, and supposedly shot the Captain of Bewcastle through the thigh. He was the inspiration for the fictional 'Watt Tinlinn' in Sir Walter Scott's 'Lay of the Last Minstrel', and hence fact and fiction are hard to separate – ' 'If I cannot sew', retorted Tinlinn, discharging a shaft, which nailed the captain's thigh to the saddle, 'if I cannot sew I can yerk' ' [SWS]. Walter (d.1761) probably son of John and Agnes Brown, although possibly a grandson. He was a weaver in Hawick from at least 1715. He and Robert (probably his brother) witnessed a baptism for fellow weaver John Stevenson in 1722. He is witnessed a baptisms in 1725 for weaver Thomas on the same day that Thomas and Robert witnessed a baptism for him; they were surely all related, perhaps as brothers. In 1723 he married Anne, daughter of John Tinlin of Kirklands, Ancrum. Their children were: Christian (b.1725), who married a Langlands; John (b.1727); Ann (b.1729), who may have married Robert Farquharson; Robert (b.1737), 'Rob the Naig'; and Agnes (b.1744), who may have been the mother of Robert 'Lurgie' Wilson. Isabel, who married John Grierson, may have been another daughter. Witnesses to the 1729 baptism were 'Mr' Chisholme and Thomas Watson and ito the 1737 baptism were merchant

William Tudhope and surgeon James Scott. Walter 'Wat' (b.1767) son of 'Rob the Naig' and brother of 'Wull the Naig'. He was assistant to his father and a shoemaker by trade. He was known for his strength of character and quick temper, which ran in his family; it was said that his 'angry word, like his father's, was quickly followed by a blow'. He liked to claim the it was his 'forfadder yat fetched the flag off Flowden Field'. He may be the Walter who witnessed a baptism for Thomas Laidlaw in 1796. William 'Wull the Naig' (c.1763–1836) another member of the family of Burgh and church officers. He was probably a son of 'Rob the Naig', and was a cousin of Robert 'Lurgie' Wilson (his aunt Agnes Tinlin being Wilson's mother). He may have been Beadle at St. Mary's for a while. However, he was known as a half-wit, who was tormented by youngsters with shouts of 'Naig, Naig' or 'splonsters'. He became a beggar, but had the same blunt, outspoken nature as his ancestors, and was often involved in street skirmishes. He was a common figure around the town in the early 1800s, living near the bottom of the Fore Row. He is listed as 'Will the Nag' in the death register (also 'Tindlin', 'Tinlan', 'Tinline', 'Tinling', 'Tinlinn', 'Tynlin', 'Tynline' and other variants).

Tinnis (ti-nis) n. lands in the Yarrow valley, between Hangingshaw and Yarrow. Modern maps show 'Old Tinnis' and 'Tinnis Farm'. There were Crown lands here from around 1456, held by Sir James Liddell for his fee as Ranger of Yarrow, then John Murray from 1488, with Alexander, Lord Home thereafter. In 1494/5 Thomas, George and Robert Mark and David Pringle were recorded there. It contained some of the King's flocks in 1502. Alexander, Lord Home, had a charter for the lands in 1512. James Pringle held the lands in feu according to a rental roll of 1541, with rental of £50. In 1551 the lands were inherited by Alexander, Lord Home from his father, George, Lord Home and in 1564/5 there was a decree by the Lords of Council that those inhabiting the lands remove themselves, namely the Stewarts and Pringles, as well as their tenants. A branch of the Pringles held these lands in the late 15th and early 16th centuries; there was a letter of reversion between the Pringles and Homes regarding these lands in about 1606. Thomas Scott 'callit of West Tynneis' was in Edinburgh Tolbooth in 1617. The Scotts of Buccleuch possessed the lands there in 1653 and according to the 1663 marriage contract of Anne, Countess of Buccleuch. There were Ballantynes there in the 19th century (also written 'Tinneis', 'Tinnes', 'Tinnies', 'tynis', 'Tynnes' and variants, as well as 'Tunnies', 'Tymmes', etc.; the origin may be the Cumbric 'din' for 'fort' or 'refuge'; it is 'Tinnise' and 'Tinneis' on Gordon's c.1650 maps and 'Tinnise' on Blaeu's c.1654 map, with Old Tinnis being marked 'Tonneis' and 'Tonniss' by Gordon and Blaeu, respectively).

Tinnisburn (ti-nis-burn) n. former lands in Liddesdale. 'Over and Neather Tynneisburne' are listed among the lands possessed by Thomas Kerr of Ancrum in 1632 (it is 'Tenissburn' on a map of Liddesdale drawn up by Sir William Cecil, c.1561., is 'Tyneisburne' in 1580, 'Tyneisburne' in 1599 and 'Tynnesburne' in 1605).

Tinnis Burn (ti-nis-burn) n. stream in Liddesdale, which rises on Tinnis Hill and flows roughly south-east to join the Liddel near Burnmouth (it is 'Tunnies burn' in 1718).

Tinnis Burn see Tinnis Witter

Tinnisburnfit (ti-nis-burn-fi') n. former farmstead in lower Castleton Parish, on the north side of the Tinnis Burn, where it meets the Liddel Water (it is marked 'Tinnisburnfoot' on Stobie's 1770 map).

Tinnisburnheid (ti-nis-burn-heed) n. former farm in Liddesdale, presumably on the Tinnis Water. It is 'Tynneisburnheid' in 1632 when listed among the Liddesdale possessions of the Sheriff of Teviotdale.

Tinnis Hill (ti-nis-hil) n. hill south-west of Newcastleton, on the border with Dumfries & Galloway. It reaches a height of 404 m, has a triangulation pillar and some remains of ancient cairns, sheepfolds and terraces. A wooden bowl found there, possibly neolithic, is in the Museum, as well as a 'horse-shoe of the Border Mosstroopers found at a depth of 4 feet'. There are cairns and standing stones to the south of the hill. The lands there were formerly a farm, valued at 6 pounds in 1541, and vacant at that time. There is another Tinnis on the Yarrow (including Tinnis Farm and Old Tinnis), another in Southdean Parish, east of Chesters (with an ancient settlement) and one more (with an ancient castle), near Drumelzier, between Peebles and Biggar – 'High Tinnis is crested with flame as of yore, And flings its broad glare down the Solway's red tide' [Fi] (it is 'Tynneshill' in 1541; it is 'Teinies hill' on Gordon's c.1650 map, 'Tinnise hill' on Blaeu's 1654 map and is also marked on Stobie's 1770 map).

Tinnis Hill (ti-nis-hil) n. another name for Hoodie's Hill in Southdean Parish. The fort on the east side is so recorded in the R.C.A.H.M.S. listings, and marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map.

Tinnis Witter (ti-nis-wi'-ur) n. Tinnis Water, also known as Tinnis Burn, stream that rises on the eastern slopes of Tinnis Hill and meets the Liddel near Kershope. It is said to have once been heavily wooded and 'the residence of freebooters' – 'Tarras and Dod and Douglas, Tinnis Water and Trow; To the drone of bees On the clovered leas, Would sing me a welcome now' [WL] (it is 'Tinsburne' on Sandison's c.1590 map; the origin may be the same as 'Tinnis' in Selkirkshire, namely the Cumbric 'din', meaning 'fort').

Tinniswood (ti-nis-wood) n. T. (19th/20th C.) composer of the piano tunes 'Cornet's Lancers' and 'Cornet's Schottische'. He also organised a local orchestra in the early 20th century.

Tinniswud (ti-nis-wud) n. former name for lands in Liddesdale, recorded as 'Tenaswd' in the c.1376 rental roll of the area. They were there valued at 9 merks. 'Tynneswoodgrene' is listed in 1541, with a value of 5 merks and tenanted by Simon Armstrong. It must have been somewhere on the Tinnis Burn, but the precise location is unknown.

tint (tin') adj., pp., arch. lost, mislaid, forgotten – 'Tak tent o' time, ere time be tint' [inscription at 25 High Street, and at the Text House in Denholm], '... and they could come to nae other conclusion, than that it had tint its companion' [LHTB], 'For Sense she now has drawn the cork, An's tint the art o' thinkin' ' [JoHa], 'Some's tint a hat, an' some a plaid, An' some hae tint their siller' [JoHa], 'I hae gane astraye like ane tint sheep ... the tither (thu-ti-thur) n., arch. the other – '...did they believe the Bible, ye micht as weel hae askit, for the tane just deserves as weel to be believed in as the tither' [EM1820], 'Yet hei cood only dae a wee bit ower echt feet an was streets aheid o' the tithers' [BW1974], adj. other, alternative – 'Ee sei, the Queen was at the tither side o' the car frew where Aw was stannin' [BW1978] (a variant of the tother).

tithe-penny (tīth-pe-nee) n., arch. the small amount of money given to the vicar of a parish in addition to grain, part of the 'vicarge teinds' – 'Butte ere he could find the tythe pennye, Wherewith he might assay, A pirl of wynd through the key hole came, And it blew from his loofe awaye' [JTe].

titlin (tit-lin, -leen) n., arch. the meadow pipit, Anthus pratensis – 'Proverb: 'As grit as the gowk and the titlene'' [JL] (the word was used in the name of several places on Wilton Common; see also mosscheeper and muir-cheeper).

Titlinbrae (tit-lin-brā) n. former farmstead in Wilton. It is marked 'Titlingbrae' on Stobie's 1770 map, north of Upper Calaburn and West of Tandlaw and Drinkstone. The 'Titling-braes' is mentioned in 1764 in evidence regarding the division of Wilton Common, when it was described as northeast of Calaburn. It seems to be the same as the area also called 'Titling-know' in the 1765 description of the common, to the north of Titling Moss. There is no obvious sign of any habitation near there today – 'On one occasion an old house at the Titlingbrae, out near Wilton Common, had become ruinous and was uninhabited ...' [FH].

Titlin Knowes (tit-lin-nowz) n. former name for a hilly region on Wilton Common, roughly north of Titling Moss. It seems to be essentially the same place as Titlin Braes.

Titlin Moss (tit-lin-mos) n. Titling Moss, name of 2 small boggy areas on Whitehaugh Moor, at the head of Stintin Burn. They are marked on the 1764 map of Wilton Common, while the 1859 Ordnance Survey map shows 3 small unnamed ponds in the same area (presumably named after the bird).

Titlin Wells (tit-lin-welz) n. Titling Wells, former name for several springs just to the south of Titling Moss, marked on the 1764 map of Wilton Common.

tittie (ti'-ee, ti-tee) n., arch. familiar term for sister – 'My tittie tellt 'twas nonsense a' – O wae! I lippent till 'er, An' wed wi' an auld man, for ease, braws, an' siller' [JoHa], 'Thou hest reffet awa my hairt, my tittie, my spuuse ...' [HSR], 'We hae a wee tittie, an' she hes nae breists' [HSR].

tittie-billie (ti'-ee- ti-tee-bi-lee) n., arch. an equal, match – 'Tam's a great thief, but Will's tittie-billie wi' him' [JoJ].

Titus (tī-tis) n. popular version of Tythehouse in the Rule valley.

Tividale (tee-vee-dāl) n., poet. variants of Teviotdale – 'Then Tividale came to wi' speed, The Sheriffe brought the Douglas down, Wi' Cranstane, Gledstain, good at need, Baith Rewle Water and Hawick town' [T], 'It was in the year o' aughty-sev'n Highchesters ca'd oot a' his men To meet the Shirra of Tividale At the Kirk o' Hassendean' [T].

Tiviot (tee-vee-i') n. alternative local spelling of Teviot, in use until fairly recent times as well as being used poetically – '...Whose melting tones of tender woe Fall soft as evening's summer dew, That bathes the pinks and harebells blue Which in the vales of Tiviot blow' [JL].

tiwards (ti-wardz) prep., adj. toward – 'the B6399 gauns oot tiwards Newcastleton' (sometimes 'tiward'; also spelled 'taewards'; cf. towrt).

toalt (tōl', tōlt) n., arch. a quilt, twilt, bedspread – 'A spatcht toalt = a patchwork quilt' [ECS], v. to quilt – 'Some weemen 'took in stairs teh wesh' and others munteet at h'yim, and 'toltin' was common' [HAST1958] (also twult).

toam see tome

toanty (tōn'-ee, tōn-tee) n. twenty (less common than toonty).

toantyith (tān'-ee-, tān-tee-ith) n. twentieth (cf. the more common toontyith).

toasts (tōsts) n., pl. these form an important part of many Common Riding functions. By tradition the Cornet's Toast is the verse of 'Teribus' that starts 'Annual since, our Flag's been carried ...', that of the Acting Father is 'Magistrates! Be faithful trustees ...', while the Right- and Left-hand men get 'They are Jolly Good Fellows'. The toast to the memory of Drumlanrig is always pledged in solemn silence. Other toasts might include 'the Provost', 'the Council', 'the Lasses', 'Absent Teries' and 'Safe Oot, Safe In'. Dinners typically end with 'Cornet's Up'.

tobacci (to-baw-ki) n. tobacco, plants of the genus Nicotiana, brought back from the New World from the 16th century and prepared for smoking or taking as snuff, originally believed to have remarkable medicinal properties. Like elsewhere in Europe, social customs were to change utterly with the arrival of these dried leaves. The first record in Hawick is in 1652. There were attempts to grow it in the Borders from about 1778, with successful farms near Crailing, Melrose and Kelso, but the business was scuttled by changes to agricultural laws and taxation – 'Persewit be John Scott, merchant, for payment to him of £6 10s. worth of tobbacco pypis, broken be him in carrying of thame out of Edinburgh' [BR1652] (also bacci).

tocher (to-chur) n., arch. a dowry, marriage portion – '. . . fyve hundir merkis for the mariage and tochir of James of Douglas, my sone and apperand are, wyth Jonet, the dochter of the said Dauid . . . ' [SB1470], '. . . the said Waltyr Scot, knicht, payand the toquhir to the said James . . . ' [SB1519], '. . . for, if she canna reckon kith an' kin, an' bring a heavy tocher, she can boast of a tight shape, a lily skin, an' a heart filled wi' the fear o' God' [JTe], '. . . That tell the tocher o' a leal Scots lass, The oot-gleam o' a hert that's true' [WL] (see also towcher).

tocher-gude (to-chur-good) n., arch. money given as a dowry – 'Item, to the Laird of Johnestoun for the rest of his tocher gud, ane thousand and foure hundreth merkis. Item, to the Laird of Phairnyhirst for the rest of his tochergude, and thousand pundis' [SB1574].

tocherless (to-chur-lis) adj., arch. without a dowry – 'But, alack! an' a day! her charms were laid, For Bess o' the Brae was a tocherless maid' [JoHa], '. . . A tocherless lassie, baith friendless an' poor' [JT].

Tocher Lodge Moss (to-chur-loj-mos) n. boggy area near Woll Rig, just to the south of the Bishop's Stone.

tod (tōd) n., poet. a fox – 'All his associates did wear a tod tail; Which they esteem most by their engadges, More than French gallants do of their plummages' [CWS], 'The todde he came frae the Screthy holes, And courit fou cunninglye' [JTe], 'And the tod ran up, and the tod ran down And the tod ran high and low; And unto the middle of Ringan's corn, The wily tod he did go' [JTe], 'Tak' us the tods, the wee tods, that waste the vynes . . . ' [HSR], 'An' Jesus saith untill him, The tods hae holes, an' the burds o' the air hae nests' [HSR], 'Another herd the flock may tend, And frae vile tods the lambs defend . . . ' [TCh], 'By none was the clash of their hot spears heard Save the tod in the crags and the lone night bird' [WHO], 'They've a tod for telegraph-boy, nae doot, Sae fer frae the haunts o' men . . . ' [DH], '. . . Then owre the heid and oot As shairp as a tod' [DH], '. . . O' ringin' frosts and gale-force blaws, o' thievin' tods and hoodie craws' [TD] (the word survives in several place names, e.g. Todholes, Todrig, Todscleuch, Todshaw and Todshawhaugh.

Tod (tod) n. Thomas of Drygrange (1726–1800), W.S., son of Archibald, writer in Edinburgh. His family were from Melrose. He was an advocate, who was one of the trustees for Dr. Robert Langlands when he sold off his estate to satisfy creditors in about 1780. He was on the roll of electors in Roxburghshire in 1780. In 1788 he was recorded as liferenter of the lands of Langnewton Mill, as well as lands in Newstead. He was also recorded in 1811 as owner of the feu-duties from Charles Kerr of Abbotrule. By 1875 these duties were among the possessions of Sir Walter Elliot of Wolfelee. One of his sons was probably the Tod of 'Tod & Romanes', who were the Edinburgh agents of the Burgh of Hawick in the early 19th century. Walter (18th/19th C.) resident of Langhope in Ashkirk Parish. He finished editing the 1837 description of that parish for the New Statistical Account, since the minister, Rev. Hamilton, died before publication. He also wrote 'The obligation of civil rulers to establish the means of religious knowledge and instruction: deduced from the universal moral government of God' (1836) and an essay describing a device for compressing peat into fuel, published in the Transactions of the Highland and Agricultural Society in 1832 (see also Todd).

Todcleuch see Todscleuch

Todd (tod) n. David (1930/1–) from Fife he was a policeman in Hawick and retired to Burntisland. He is known for his matchstick models, including one of Trinity Kirk, where he became an Elder in 1973. Francis (1857/8–1910) came to Hawick in 1889 as choirmaster at St. Andrew's Church, remaining for 15 years. He conducted the Hawick Select Choir and others throughout the Borders and was also a music teacher. Gladys Ruth (1901–2002) born in Hawick, she became a school teacher, returning to town in 1925. She spent 30 years at Drumlanrig School and then 4 years at Wilton, retiring in 1959. Always known as 'Miss Todd', she was fondly remembered by ex-pupils. A supporter of the Border Music Festival and lover of the Hawick songs, she lived to celebrate her 100th birthday. James (19th C.) stationmaster at Stobs in the 1860s. John (17th C.) tenant in Tushielaw in about the 1680s. Scott of Satchells states: 'John Tod that dwells in Tushilaw Can many sheep afford'. This suggests that he was a successful farmer. Nichol (19th/20th C.) resident of Ormiston Lodge. In 1906 he contributed to the fund for the renovation of Kirkton Kirk. William (15th C.) witness to the 1469 sasine for Wolfelee. It seems likely that he was local to Rulewater. His surname is recorded as 'Tode'. Sir William (d.bef. 1564) associated with Bedrule Kirk from 1541. He was recorded as Parson and Vicar of Bedrule in November 1557. It is feasible that this is a transcription error for 'Ker', who was a clergyman there soon afterwards; however, it seems that he resigned in 1557 and was replaced by William Ker. His 'tack' of 1557 was used by Kerr of Ferniehirst to support their 1564 claim against the parishioners of Bedrule that they had rights to the parish teinds (formerly spelled 'Tod' and 'Tode').

toddie scone (to-dee-skōn) n., arch. a small, round scone – '... an old lady called Porter stayed in the bottom flat and sold pies and toddie scones' [JRa] (see also scone and toddie).

toddle (to-dul) v. to walk with unsteady steps, walk jauntily, totter – 'Lang about Ettrick may ye toddle' [JR], 'The bales o' guid humour, the bags o' love fare, The smiles an' the smirkings that toddle it there' [JoHa], 'Some playfu' toddlin' sweet wee bairn'; Some lovely youth, or maiden dear ...' [AD], 'Come awa', my little lambie, Toddle tentie, come to me ...' [TCh], 'A toddlin' troot, and a toddlin' troot, And a wee bit bonnie toddlin' troot: If ye search a' the water aboot, Ye'll no' fin' siccan a toddlin' troot' [T].

Todds (todz) n. William (18th C.). In 1693 his children Thomas, Robert, Archibald and Oliver had a decree against Adam Scott of Bowhill and William Scott in Langhope. He was probably a tenant on Langhope (near Ashkirk).

Todgiehill (to-jee-hil) n. former name for Todshawhill.

Todholes (tod-hōlz) n. former lands in Liddesdale, recorded as 'Todholys' in c.1376, with rental valued at 4 shillings. It is probably the 'Toddellis' recorded in the 1541 rental roll, valued at 5 shillings and with Christopher Armstrong as tenant; given the position on the roll, its location is somewhere near Mangerton (the origin could be 'fox hollows').

Todholes (tod-hōlz) n. former lands in the Barony of Cavers, listed in the 1511 charter of the Douglases of Cavers, as 'Denummains, called Todholis' (or 'Todeholis'). In the 16th century Helena Douglas was heiress of 'Todheils' when she married Robert, 3rd son of Sir James Douglas of Cavers. It was listed as the principle 'messuage' of the demesne lands of Denholm in 1687 when part of the Barony of Cavers when inherited by Sir William Douglas and when inherited by his brother Archibald in 1698. The lands were described as also having a mill. It is unclear where these lands were, although possibly the same as 'Todlaw' on the Dean Burn (it is transcribed 'Todhold' in 1687 and 1698).

Todholeside (tod-hōl-sīd) n. former lands in Lilliesleaf. Along with 'Standestanerig' these lands were sold by Adam, son of Adam of Durham to the monks of Melrose in the early 1200s, sometime between 1214 and 1249. The precise location is unknown, but it lay between Clerklands and the part of Lilliesleaf held by William, son of Alexander of Lilliesleaf (spelled 'Thodholesid').

Todhunter Grain (tod-hun'-ur-grān) n. stream in Castleton Parish which rises on Windy Edge and flows into the Tinnis Burn near Whisgills. There are old sheepfolds along its banks. The former farmstead of Grainfoot may have been at the foot of this stream – 'Sad thoughts of the past often steal throuhg my brain, As I fancy I see him on the 'Todhunter-grain'' [DA].

Todlaw (tod-law) n. farmstead in Cavers Parish, on the Dean Burn, lying between East Middle and Denholmhill. The farmer there in 1797 was Michael Anderson and in 1801 was James Scott. In 1851 the farmer was Robert Scott. The 1863 Ordnance Survey 'Name Book' describes it as 'a one storey house with garden attached'. This could be the 'Todha'' near the head of Denholm Dean mentioned in a story related in 1830 (and printed in the Border Counties Magazine of 1881). The nearby roadbridge is the only way across the Dean Burn south of Denholm.

Todlaw Wells (tod-law-welz) n. plantation in Bedrule Parish, to the south-east of the Dunion, lying on the route of the Borders Abbey Way.

There is an enclosure, rig and furrow lines and a possible settlement in the area.

to-draw (too-draw) n., arch. 'To-draw, a resource; a refuge; something to which one can draw in danger or straitening circumstances, Teviotd.' [GW].

Todrick (tod-rik) n. older variant of Todrig.

Todrig (tod-rig, tōd-rig, -rij) n. farm near the confluence of the Todrig Burn with the Langhope Burn (which flows into the Ale). Some time in the period 1248–58 Henry of Ashkirk gifted the lands to Coldstream Priory. In about 1260 there is a charter from Aymer de Maxwell granting the lands to Alexander de Synton. 'Hector Laudir' brother of the Laird is recorded in 1494/5. Cuthbert Lauder from there was convicted of reset, communing with rebels and other crimes in 1508. There is a charter of 1511/12 confirming the superiority of the lands to John Lord Hay of Yester, which had previously belonged to his father. John Hay granted the lands to Stephen Lauder in about 1512; it was then in the Barony of Olivercastle through annexation. William Lauder inherited the Lairdship as heir of Stephen and in 1535 he announced that his tenant William Scott should be ejected from the lands. Katherine Gray had the right in 1538 to remove the sheep of Thomas and George Lauder. The Hays continued to hold the lands (or perhaps part of them) at least up until inherited by John, Lord Hay of Yester in 1610. The lands were held by the Scotts of Harden, with George of Todrig being the 3rd son of the first William of Harden. The family arms of this old branch of Scott of Todrig was cut into their seat in the old Ashkirk church in 1622. However, sometime around 1622 George's son Walter sold the property to Thomas, younger brother of Sir Walter Scott, 2nd Laird of Whitslade. For more than a century it belonged to this new branch of Scotts of Todrig or 'Toderick'. The motto of this branch was 'Pro aris et focis'. Tax was paid for 13 hearths on the estate in 1694. Thomas Scott's lands in Roxburghshire were valued at £552 in 1678 (this being for Wester Essenside, Leaphill and their associated teinds). Thomas Cowan was gardener there in 1709. John Hendry was living there in 1710. It was valued at £552 in the 1740s. The estate was sold off by Thomas Scott in 1746. George Pott was the proprietor on Ainslie's 1773 map. Robert Brown was living there in 1787–89. The estate was valued at £576 in 1785 and 1802. The main house dates from at least the 17th century on the eastern side, with alterations from 1862 converting it to a more modern farmhouse. The original entrance can still be made out on the south wall. Adjacent farm buildings contain 2 stone panels, one with the date '1698', the other having the initials 'G P' (probably for George Pott), together with a lozenge and inscription 'REBUILT 1833'. A mill is marked nearby, on the opposite side of the Todrig Burn, on Ainslie's 1773 map. A bronze tripod pot (probably dating from around 1500) found there in 1956 is in the Royal Museum of Scotland. There is a farm of the same name south of Greenlaw, and another east of Eccles. One of these places (or more than one perhaps) gave rise to the surname 'Todrick'. The arms of Scott of Todrig bore a star and 2 crescents and the family motto was 'Pro aris et focis' (for home and hearth) – 'First came Todrig, Then came Woll, Last came Whitslaid, The Chief of the Water Ail' [CWS] (the name occurs as 'Todholerig' in a charter of the late 12th century and is 'Thotheryg' in about 1260; the house is marked as 'Todrigg' and 'Todrig' on Gordon's c.1650 maps, 'Todrigg' on Blaeu's 1654 map, 'Todrig' on Adair's c.1688 map and 'Todrigg' on Ainslie's 1773 map; also formerly spelled 'Todrick', 'Todrik', 'Toderick', etc., it was 'Todderig' in about 1250, 'Toddryk' in 1535, 'Todryk' in 1540, 'Todryge' in 1638, 'Toodrige' in 1644, 'Todrige' in 1678 and 1682, 'Todridge' in c.1680, 'Todrigg' in 1694 and 1710, 'Todridge' in 1720, 'Todrige' in 1761 and 'Todridge' in 1785 and 1787; whether the origin is 'fox ridge', or something else, is unknown).

Todrig (tod-rig) n. Alexander (15th/16th C.) priest who witnessed an Edinburgh document in 1488. His name was spelled 'Todrick', and he may have had a connection to the local estate. He was also 'domino Alexandro Todrik capellano' when he witnessed a land transaction in 1502. Anne (16th C.) resident of Selkirk. She was summoned to court in 1535/6 to pay her neighbour fees that were owed to him. Archibald (15th C.) described as 'of Todrik' when he was witness to a document made at St. Giles in Edinburgh in 1477. Probably the same 'Archibaldus Todryk' who was a Bailie of Edinburgh according to a charter of 1482. He may be the earliest recorded person of this surname. Probably the same Archibald was 'Archibaldi Tothrik', Burgess of Edinburgh in a charter of the Collegaite Church of Dalkeith in 1504, where his son and heir William is also mentioned. David (16th C.) son of Robert, Burgess of Selkirk. He is recorded as witness to several documents in Selkirk in the period 1528–44. In 1536/7 he had a marriage contract with Helen, daughter of Stephen Wilkinson. In 1542 he was listed as 'serjeant' and in 1543 he complained about a transaction with Simon Fairley. He was witness to a transaction in 1544. David (16th C.) resident of Selkirk. He may be the David recorded in 1561 in Selkirk when he made an agreement with Robert Robson 'in Hauyk'. A tenement formerly pertaining to him is recorded in Selkirk in 1579 and he was a Burgess in 1580 when he witnessed another transaction in Selkirk. In 1581/2 he witnessed a dispute between Bailies in Selkirk. George (16th C.) Burgess of Edinburgh recorded as 'Todrik' in 1552. John (15th/16th C.) witness to an Edinburgh document of 1501/2, where his name is spelled 'Todrik'. Robert (d.bef. 1537) witnessed a document in Selkirk in 1527. In 1528 and 1534 he witnessed documents in Selkirk, along with his son David. Also in 1528 and 1534 he was recorded as owner of a tenement in Selkirk. In 1532/3 he was a 'special tenant' in the 20 shillingland of East Haining, wadset to John Scott, Burgess of Selkirk. He was deceased in 1536/7 when his son an heir David succeeded to his lands and money in Selkirk. Thomas (15th C.) listed as resident of lands in Linlithgow in a charter of 1496. Thomas (16th C.) described as 'Thomas Todrik, serjeand' in an Edinburgh document of 1548. Perhaps the same Thomas was a traveller when he witnessed a transaction in Selkirk in 1551. William (15th C.) recorded as 'Wil. Tothrik' in a charter of 1428 when he held lands in Edinburgh. He may be the earliest recorded person of this surname. William (15th/16th C.) referred to as 'of Todrig' in 1505 when he was a Burgess of Edinburgh and gained houses on Edinburgh High Street. He is also mentioned (as 'Willelmi Todryk') in a charter of Trinity Collegiate Church in 1511. It is unclear whether he had a local connection. Probably the same William was described as a Bailie of Edinburgh (and spelled 'Todrick', 'Todrik' and 'Tothrik') several times in the period 1501–07 and witnessed another charter in Edinburgh in 1502. He married the King's cousin Margaret Crichton and was given an exemption from customs for life.

Tod Rig (tod-rig) n. ridge to the north-west of Todrig farm and to the north-east of Langhope farm.

Todrig Burn (tod-rig-burn) n. stream that flows to the east out of Shaws Loch and past Todrig, before joining the Ale Water (it is 'Todriggburn' on Ainslie's 1773 map).

Todrig Mill (tod-rig-mil) n. former mill near Todrig farm. William Riddell was miller there in 1617. It is possible that he was the miller of 'Todrig mylne' who was said to have killed Robert, only son of Simon Scott of Bonnington, leading to the retaliatory murder of Walter, 3rd son of Walter Scott of Harden in 1616. Walter Nichol was there in 1763 and John Glendinning in 1781 (it is 'Todrig Mylne' in 1617, 'Todrigg Miln' in 1763 and 'Todrigg miln' in 1781; it is marked on Ainslie's 1773 map).

Todrig Shank (tod-rig-shawngk) n. former name for a place, presumably close to Todrig. It is 'Todrik Schank' in 1581 when it was the location where an agreement was signed by Walter Scot of Goldielands, Walter Chisholme of that Ilk, John Scot of Roberton and William Dalgleish in Crookston, relating to a dispute between Adam Scott in Bonnington and Robert Scott of Haining.

Todscleuch (todz-klooch) n. former fortified house in the Liddel valley, near the present Steeleroad-end. It is probably related to Todshaw Sike, which is marked near there on modern maps. The farm is recorded as 'Todcleuche alias Todcleucheside' in 1632, among the lands possessed by Hab Henderson. Ninian Wigham was tenant there in 1694, with Andrew Pott, weaver, also a resident. Michael Dang was recorded as farmer at 'Todsclueghside' in 1797 (marked on Gordon's c.1650 map and Blaeu's 1654 map, with 'Todscleughside' appearing on Stobie's 1770 map; 'Toddiscleuchsyde' is recorded in 1659 and is is 'Todscleughsyde' in 1694; the name is presumably related to the fox; note that there is an unrelated 'Todcleuch' near Canonbie).

Todshaw (tod-shaw) n. former farm in the Borthwick valley. It is unclear how far back the name goes, because of confusion with Todshawhaugh. However, it may be that this general name came first and the 'haugh' was added to the nearby farm later. In any case 'Todshaw' is listed among those lands granted to Sir William Wardlaw of Wilton in about 1400. The farm was part of the Harden estates in the 17th century. There were 18 'communicants' recorded there in 1650, namely George Turnbull, Isobel Renwick, John Turnbull, Janet Turnbull, Walter Fairgrieve, William Henderson, Sarah Rule, Michael Renwick, John Aitchison, Janet Scott, Mark Coltart, Janet Paterson, William Grierson, Mungo Brand, Isobel Shortreed, Marion Scott, Marion Brand and Grisel Hall. It was included within Hawick Parish (according to a valuation of 1678) and along with Todshawhaugh, Todshawhill, Whithope and Whithope Mill was valued at £1658 when disjoined to the new Roberton

Parish. It was included among lands inherited by Gideon Scott of Highchester from his father Walter, Earl of Tarras in 1694. Mungo Scott, John Mowat and John Rule were listed as residents there in 1694. The lands were part of a legal dispute between Gideon Scott of Highchester and Walter Scott of Woll in the early years of the 18th century. William Miller was there in 1703, Walter Scott in 1710–15, John Jackson in 1711, William Helm in 1720, John Stavert in 1720–26, Patrick Blaikie in 1722 and John Scott in 1725. It was sold by William Scott of Thirlestane in about 1750, with John Murray of Philiphaugh having a charter in 1753 for these lands, as well as Whitfield and Mervinslaw. It was owned by John Murray of Philiphaugh in 1757 when its head lands were divided from those of Mabonlaw. Until 1689 when Roberton was formed, it was part of Wilton Parish, while the separate farm of Todshawhaugh was in Hawick Parish. William Purdie was there in 1763–67, George Coltart in 1767 and Walter Armstrong in 1789. In 1788 the owner is recorded as John Johnstone of Alva, when it was valued at £113 15s 3d and it was £130 in 1811 with the same owner. In about 1874 the owner was Capt. George William Hutton Riddell. It lay between Mabonlaw and Mervinslaw, as marked on Stobie's 1770 map (while Blaeu's 1654 map shows it between Mabonlaw and Harden, but this map is not always accurate). The geography is somewhat confused by the existence of several places of similar name stretching over about 2 miles. Todshaw Hill (268 m) lies behind Highchesters Hill, on the north side of the Borthwick valley, with Todshaw Sike and Todshaw Dean being in the upper reaches of the Wilton Burn. Todshawhaugh farm is on the south side of the Borthwick valley, near where Todshaw Cleuch joins the river, and below Todshawhaugh Hill. And a higher Todshaw Hill (288 m) and the farm of Todshawhill lie about another mile to the south, near Chapelhill farm (recorded as 'Todschaw' in a 1588 contract and again in 1643; the name is presumably related to the fox).

Todshaw (tod-shaw) n. James (17th C.) witnessed a baptism for John Turnbull in Roberton Parish in 1681. William (17th C.) resident of Roberton Parish, when it contained Hassendean. He married Jean Kinnear in 1683 and their children included: John (b.1684); John (b.1685); and Elizabeth (b.1688). The witnesses in 1688 were James Scott and George Riddell. In 1687 he witnessed a baptism in Roberton for James Scott and Janet Elliot (formerly 'Totchaw').

Todshaw Cleugh (tod-shaw-klooch) n. stream that rises near Todshaw Hill and runs in a north-easterly direction to join the Borthwick Water to the east of Todshawhaugh farm.

Todshaw Dean (tod-shaw-deen) n. area along a stream in the headwaters of the Wilton Burn. The stream rises on Rotten Moss, where it was known as Rotten Moss Sike, and runs southwards to eventually join the Todshaw Sike and become the Wilton Burn.

Todshawhaugh (tod-shaw-, to-jee-hawf) n. farm a mile or so along the Borthwick, opposite Highchesters. It was along a tenanted farm of the Scotts of Buccleuch. It was surveyed in 1718 along with other Buccleuch properties, when it consisted of 167 acres, bounded by the Borthwick Water, Branxholme Park, Branxholme Mains, Todshawhill and Whames. It was also stated to have some stands of ash and birch trees. There was a William Turnbull there in 1426. It was among lands exchanged by Thomas Inglis of Manor with Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1446. It is probably the lands of 'Todschaw' held by Robert Scott in 1463/4, and Robert Scott was there in 1484/5. John Scott 'of Todschawhauch' is recorded in 1492 and Robert Scott 'in todshawhalch' in 1493. The tenant in 1549 was Walter Scott, who was one of the men who complained that their farms had been raided and burned the year before by a group of English and Kers. William Scott, who resided at Whames was also listed in 1549 as 'alias callit Wille of Todschawhauch'. Through the 16th century it was held by a branch of the Scotts. In 1627 it is described as paying '6 bolls in stok, 1 boll half boll in tenyd, 3 lb. in vicarage'. Walter Scott from Todshawhaugh was recorded in 1628 when he was accused of cutting down some of Scott of Buccleuch's trees on his park there. Robert Gledstains 'pr Todschahauch' (portioner there) signed the National Covenant in Hawick in 1638. There were 11 'communicants' recorded there in 1650, namely Robert Gledstains, Agnes Rule, James Scott, Andrew Cook, Agnes Davidson, Helen Wilson, Margaret Scott, Helen Robson, Walter Hogg, Isobel Scott and Lilias Armstrong. In 1650 John Renwick and 'Pail' Murray were tenants. Walter Cavers was there in 1680. It was part of Hawick Parish until Roberton was formed in 1689/90. Rev. Thomas Shiel and John Cuthbertson were tenants in 1672 and 1673, Thomas Shiel himself in 1675 and Thomas Shiel and Walter Scott in 1677. The minister was also recorded as tenant of the farm in 1690–93 and with his son Thomas also there in 1692. Robert Langlands appears to also have been tenant here in 1686. The householders recorded there in 1694 were Thomas Shiel, Thomas Turnbull, Robert Murray and Thomas Stavert, with Agnes Murray also listed there among 'the poor'. William Shiel (also son of the minister) was tenant in 1696 and 1698. James Grieve was recorded there in at least 1712–23, James Brydon in 1725 and Robert Govenlock in 1727. It was also the site of a blacksmith's in the 18th and 19th centuries. John Scot was there in 1765. Walter Grieve (of Branxholme Park) farmed there in the late 18th century, until he died in 1800. The farm was then leased to Robert Scott of Singlie. Walter Armstrong was living there in 1800. In 1812 the residents included tenant Robert Scott, hind David Laidlaw, ploughman John Hobkirk and labourer Robert Murray. In 1841 Walter Scott was farm steward there and the residents at the cottages were Turnbulls and Millers. The flat land on the south side of the Borthwick there is known as Todshaw Haugh, and the hill to the west is Todshawhaugh Hill (also spelled 'Todshawhauche', etc., it first appears as 'Todgishalch' in 1426, is 'Todschawhauch' in 1446, 'Togehawch' in 1484/5, 'Todschawhaulch' in 1486, 'Todshauhauch' in 1490, 'Todschawhauch' in 1492, 'Todschawhauch' in 1549, 'Todschawhauch' in 1580/1, 1591 and 1594, 'Todschawhaucht' in 1581, 'Todschahauch' in 1627, 'Todshahauche' in 1628, 'Todschawhauch' in 1648, 'Todshaw-haugh' in 1678, 'Todschawhauch' in 1692, 'Toitchahaugh' in 1694, 'Todshahauch' in 1714, 'Todshahaugh' in 1721 and 'Todziehaugh' in 1757; it is 'Todshahauch' on a 1650 parish map, appears to be marked simply 'Hauch' on Blaeu's 1654 map).

Todshaw Haugh (tod-shaw-hawf, -hawch) n. flat land on the south side of the Borthwick Water, just to the east of Todshawhaugh farm.

Todshawhaugh Hill (tod-shaw-hawf-hil) n. hill on the southern side of the Borthwick valley, south of Harden Bridge, and to the south-west of Todshawhaugh farm. There are remains of a hillfort and earthworks on the northern spur. The nearly circular earthwork, about 45 m in diameter has been almost obliterated by ploughing on the eastern side. The ditch of the ridge -fort appears to connect with this and runs for about 20 m to the south-west, with traces of a rampart along its inner side. A little further south is a peak called Ladies' Seat, which is a little higher.

Todshaw Hill (tod-shaw-hil, to-jee-hil) n. hill above Chapelhill and Todswhawhill farms, between the Teviot and Borthwick valleys. It reaches a height of 288 m and has a fort on its summit and settlement a little to the north, as well as some small ponds. The former farm of Todshawhill stood here. To confuse things, another hill of the same name, reaching 268 m, stands on the northern side of the Borthwick valley, near Mabonlaw farm. This (southern) one has a fort on its summit, and the farm of Todshawhill is adjacent. Between these 2 hills is the lower Todshawhaugh Hill. The fort is on a ridge near the summit, about 90 m by 70 m in size, surrounded by 3 ramparts, with an entrance on the west. A crescent-shaped depression inside is probably a hut floor. The other archæological site on this hill lies on the northern spur, covering an area of about 55 m by 40 m, surrounded by a single rampart, but much denuded by ploughing. There may be an entrance to the north-east and a scooped area inside could be a hut site. Note that there are several forts and settlements on the neighbouring Whitcastle Hill. There is yet another hill of the same name north of Alemoor Loch, which is 352 m high.

Todshaw Hill (tod-shaw-hil) n. hill on the northern side of the Borthwick valley, between Todshaw Sike and Todshaw Dean, just to the east of Mabonlaw farm. It reaches a height of 268 m, and can be easily confused with another hill of the same name near Chapelhill farm, on the southern side of the valley.

Todshaw Hill (tod-shaw-hil) n. hill to the north of Alemoor Loch, which is 352 m high.

Todshawhill (tod-shaw-, to-ja-, -jee-hil) n. former farm near Chapelhill, about 2½ miles west of Hawick. Its early history is closely related with that of Todshawhaugh, with which it can sometimes be confused. It was surveyed in 1718 along with other Buccleuch properties, when it consisted of 251 acres, bounded by the Todshawhaugh, Branxholme Mains, Branxholme Muir, Whithope and Whames. It was among the lands that passed from the Inglis family to the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1446. From at least the mid-16th century it was another home of a local branch of the Scotts. The farm was among those belonging to Scott of Buccleuch that were burned by a band of Englishmen and Kers in late 1548. Philip Scott is recorded as tenant in 1549. Andrew Scott of 'Totchahill, from the family of Robertoun' is listed by Scott of Satchells as one of the 24 'pensioners' of Buccleuch. It is described in a 1627 valuation as paying '21 bolls stock and teynd; estimat to pay in stock 12 bolls, parsonage 3 bolls, 3 lbs. vicarage'. The Land Tax Rolls of 1643 lists the value of the farm at £133 6s 8d, owned by John Scott of Todshawhill. There were 12 'communicants' recorded there in 1650, namely Agnes Scott, Euphan Haliburton, Helen Haliburton, Joan Scott, Agnes Scott, John Renwick, Isabel Kedie, Robert Renwick, John Renwick, Bessie Hendry, Robert Scott and Margaret Turnbull. Adam and William Scott were tenants from 1632 until about 1671. James Nichol was listed as a tenant in 1671 and Ninian Elliot in 1672 and 1673. James Carruthers was also recorded as tenant in 1673. Walter Scott of Harwood was leasing the farm in 1677. It was part of Hawick Parish until becoming part of the new Parish of Robertin in 1689/90. In 1691 it was leased to William Ogilvie and in 1693 to James Moffat, William Nichol and Robert Anderson. In 1694 the householders listed there were William Ogilvie, William Young (ploughman), Robert Blaik (shepherd) and James Scott, with Robert Scott listed there among 'the poor'. William Ogilvie was tenant again in 1696 and Capt. Francis Scott in 1697. Thomas Shiel was tenant there from at least 1699, when he had the farmhouse rebuilt on a more convenient site at about that time. 2 houses were built, each 42 feet long, one having 2 stone chimneys and 8 windows; it is unclear if anything survives from this time. This is probably the 'Todschill' where William Pott is recorded in 1702. John Douglas was living there in at least 1711–18 and James Leithead in 1722. Thomas Shiel was still recorded as tenant in 1735. In 1737 there is a record in Wilton of a funeral 'at Togahill'. It was tenanted by several generations of the Scoon family, starting with John in about 1748, with Robert being the last Scoon tenant, who emigrated to the U.S.A. in about 1842 after defaulting on the lease. The farm was then amalgamated with Chapelhill. David Taylor was living there in 1762, George Stavert in 1765, James Scott in 1765 and 1771, James Crow in 1766, Andrew Henderson in 1771 and William Taylor in 1781. Robert Scoon is recorded as farmer there in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Ploughman William Scoon and labourer John Scoon were living there in 1812. In 1841 the residents of the cottages there were the Hoggs and the Grahams – 'The three Scotts o' Commonside, The Tamsons o' the Mill, There's Ogilvy o' Branxholm, And Scoon o' Todgiehill' [DJG] (also sometimes incorrectly 'Todshawmill'; it appears as 'Todschawhillis' in 1435, 'Todschawhil' in 1446, 'Todschawhill' in 1549, 'Todschahill' in 1627, 'Todshaw-hill' in 1678, 'Toddyhill alias Todschawhill' in 1660, 'Toitchahill' in 1694, 'Todgahill' in 1791 and 'Todgiehill' in 1856; it is 'Todshahill' on a 1650 parish map, marked 'Todshahill' on Blaeu's 1654 map; the name is presumably related to the fox; note there is a farm of the same name in Eskdalemuir Parish).

Todshawhillshiel (tod-shaw-hil-sheel) n. former shepherd's cottage on the farm of Todshawhill. William Lawson was recorded there in 1716, James Thomson in 1721–26, John Stavert in the 1770s and Robert Riddell in 1788–90. William Scoon and Robert Riddell were there in the 1780s and George Michie was shepherd there in 1799 (it is 'Todshaugh Hillshiel' in 1771).

Todshawkip (tod-shaw-kip) n. former name for lands near Todshaw. Robert White was recorded there in 1721 when a child of his was baptised in Roberton Parish.

Todshaw Loan see Wester Loan

Todshaw Moss (tod-shaw-mos) n. boggy area on Wilton Common, at the end of the Todshaw Moss Road, between Pisgah Hill and Smasha Hill. It was left as Common land after the division of Wilton Common in 1764, although the 'Spread Ground' around it was included in the division.

Todshaw Sike (tod-shaw-sīk) n. small stream behind Highchesters Hill. It rises near Muckle Knowe, runs around Todshaw Hill and joins Wilton Burn. The upper part was once part of the southwestern boundary of Wilton Common.

Todshaw Sike (tod-shaw-sīk) n. small stream that joins Taylor's Cleuch and flows into the Liddel Water just south of Larriston. There is a complex of mediæval and post-mediæval buildings nearby. This may be the settlement once called 'Todscleuchside').

Tod Sike (tod-sīk) n. small stream that rises on Cockplay Hill and joins the Twislehope Burn just to the west of Twislehope farm.

Todsteed (tod-steed) n. Todstead, former farm in Liddesdale, recorded as 'Todistede' and with a value of 4 shillings in a rental roll of c.1376. It is unclear where this was located.

toff (tof) n., ins. a member of the upper classes, or more generally someone with a strong 'proper' English accent – '... A toff cam in wi' bulging pack And dumped it in the pend' [WL].

toft (toft) n., arch. a homestead, farmstead and attached land – '... the lands of Sheilswood, with houses, buildings, yards, tofts, crofts, outlets, parts, pendicles, and pertinents thereof whatsoever' [DCW1712] (the word survives in the names of several farms, e.g. Tofts, Toftfield, Toftholm and Kirkton Tofts).

toft an croft (toft-in-kroft) n., arch. an entire holding, land and buildings – '. . . to enter the said Walter in Eidschaw to his husbandland with onset, toft and croft and pertinents' [SPB1581].

Toftfield (toft-feeld) n. former name of an estate near Melrose, adjacent to Abbotsford. It was purchased by John Usher in 1753, then held by his son James and grandson John. In 1819 it was bought from the Ushers by Sir Walter Scott, who changed the name to Huntlyburn and improved the simple 2-storey house there. It seems that it was formerly called 'Tylehouse', perhaps related to tile manufacturing for Melrose Abbey (the 1574 will of Gibbie Hatley of Gattonside refers to a 'Faften field' which may be the same place).

Toftholm (toft-hōm) n. farm in the Hermitage valley, opposite Shaws. It was surveyed in 1718, along with other properties owned by the Scotts of Buccleuch. At this time it was combined with Tofts, covering 329 acres, bounded by Shaws, Overraw, the lands of the Laird of Hoscote, Graystonehaugh and the Hermitage Water. Andrew Crozier was there in 1623. James Crozier was tenant in 1694 and William Crozier was also listed there. Thomas Pott was recorded as farmer there in 1797 and in 1801 Adam Armstrong was a labourer there and Thomas Potts a shepherd. Adam Scott was shepherd there in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. A sandstone axe-hammer found near here is in Hawick Museum, donated by Adam Beattie in 1861. On the edge of a terrace just to the south-west there is an ancient enclosure and further south-west, on a small terrace, are the remains of a farmstead, named 'Upper Row' on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map. There is also a field system and rig lines there (marked as 'Tofts' on Blaeu's 1654 map, 'Toftholme' on Blaeu's 1654 map and 'Toftholme' on the 1718 Buccleuch survey, it has its modern name on Stobie's 1770 map; also called 'Toftsholm', it is 'Taftsholme' in 1694; this is probably from 'howm', meaning low-lying land beside a river; see also Toftsholm Sike).

Tofts (tofts) n. farm in Kirkton Parish, in modern times split into Nether Tofts and Upper Tofts. The place name is quite old, with 'William of Tofts' being recorded as Parson of Cavers in 1333, and possibly the Ingram, Robert and William 'de Toftes' recorded on the Ragman Rolls of 1296 also being connected with this location. Hence it may have given rise to a surname. There are deeds from 1550, 1554 and 1639 in the Douglas of Cavers papers. John Turnbull 'in toftis' is recorded in 1493. It was owned by the Turnbulls 'of Toftis' in the 16th and 17th centuries. Martin Douglas of Tofts inherited lands from his uncle Archibald (presumably the lands of Tofts) in 1608. Martin Douglas 'of Toftis' is also recorded in 1615 and John Douglas, 'called of Toftis' in 1619. It was valued at £300 in 1643 (when owned by 'Laird of Tofts', who also held £ of land in Abbotrule Parish) and in 1678 (when owned by an unnamed Turnbull). William Turnbull of Tofts inherited the 2 farms from his father Thomas in 1695. William Turnbull paid tax for 11 windows there in 1748. Anthony Turnbull was there in 1788 and still in about 1813, when still valued at £300. William Richardson Dickson of Alton were there in the 1870s. George and Robert Deans were farmers there in the 1860s (the origin is probably just 'the homestead' in Middle English, deriving from the Old Norse 'topt'; it has its modern spelling at least by Gordon's c.1650 map, while Blaeu's 1654 map already shows 'N. Tofts' and 'O. Tofts').

Tofts (tofts) n. possible former name for Kirkton Tofts (it is unclear whether this is the same place or not).

Tofts (tofts) n. Adam of Norwich (13th C.) listed in 1291 among men who had letters of protection from Edward I. He was serving the English King at Roxburgh Castle. It is unclear whether he was related to the Roxburghshire Tofts family. Gavin (17th C.) resident of the town of Saltoun in 1641. Ingram (13th C.) signatory of the Ragman Rolls in 1296, along with William and Robert 'de Toftes'. His name was listed first, so he may have been the senior member of the family. His seal consisted of a large fleur-de-lis and the name 'S'INGRAMI D'TOFTIS'. John (19th/20th C.) carter in Hawick. He lived upstairs at No. 3 Silver Street. His wife was Bessie and their children included: Robert, who was wounded twice in WWI; and James (b.1917), who was killed in Belgium and commemorated on the Tyne Cot Memorial. John (17th C.) recorded 'in Cribbis' in the Commissariot Book of Testaments of Lauder in 1637. Robert (13th C.) listed as 'de Toftes' when he signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296. His seal shows an 8-rayed figure and the name 'S'ROBERTI D'TOFTIS'. Robert (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1499 when he had remission for the murder of Cristiane Forfar. William (13th C.) swore fealty to Edward I in 1296, along with Ingram and Robert, all of them from Roxburghshire. William (14th C.) recorded in 1335/6 when he was 'persone ecclesie de Cauers'. He settled the amounts due on the lands of 'Ethrestone' (probably Adderstone), which had been forfeited by Robert 'of Ethrestone' to the English Crown. Probably the same man is recorded as 'Willelmo de Toftys' in 1363 when he was Rector of 'magna Cauers'. He was most likely associated with the lands of Tofts in Kirkton Parish, and parson of the neighbouring parish of Cavers. He was probably a descendant of the earlier 'de Tofts' family (the surname probably derived from the lands in Kirkton Parish).

the Tofts (thu-tofts) n. former farm in the Hermitage valley, just to the north of Toftholm. It is probably the 'Toftys' recorded as being in the 'Quarterium de Ludne' in a rental roll of Liddesdale c.1376, with a value of 5 merks. It is shown on Blaeu's 1654 map on the southern side of the valley, roughly opposite the present village of Hermitage. It was surveyed in 1718, along with other properties owned by the Scotts of Buccleuch. At this time it was combined with Toftholm into a farm covering 329 acres, bounded by Shaws, Overraw, the lands of the Laird of Hoscote, Graystonehaugh and the Hermitage Water. It probably included the area marked as Tofts Knowes on the modern Ordnance Survey map.

Tofts Hill (tofts-hil) n. hill in Kirkton Parish, just south of Upper Tofts farm. It reaches a height of about 250 m. There is a small pond on the north side and a quarry on the south side. Aerial photography has a slo shown 2 rectangular enclosures, some field banks and some rig lines to the south west of there.

Toftsholm Sike (tofts-hōm-sīk) n. small stream that rises at Thiefsike Head and runs roughly parallel to the Hermitage Water, to join that river at Toftholm. There is the ruin of a cottage on its north side, and the remains of 2 shieling-huts in its headwaters, as well as old remains of sheepfolds and dykes (see also Toftholm).

Tofts Knowes (tofts-nowz) n. area of terrace on the southern side of the Hermitage Water, opposite Hermitage Castle. There are the remains of an old settlement there, with a farmstead, an extensive field system, rig lines and quarry pits.

togedder (to-ge-dur) adv., arch. together – 'Imprimis Margitt Drummond and Elizeneth Miller, cohabiting in one little house togidder . . . ' [BR1697], 'John Binnie, late baylyea, Patricke Anguss, merchand, and John Heart, glover, wer onlawed for being found togedder by the church censers, after the tenn hour bell was rung' [BR1702], '. . . the present Baylyeas, Robert Hardie and Robert Brown, haveing conveined and called togidder the towne Counsell . . . ' [BR1706] (also written 'togidder'; cf. the more modern thegither).

toilets (toi-litz) n., pl. there have been many public toilets over the years in Hawick. Present conveniences include those in the Haugh, Howegate, the Cross Wynd, the Museum and Volunteer Park. The Burns Club was built on an 1843 'necessary' and the one at the end of Bourtree Place was demolished along with the railway bridge in the 1970s. Other toilets were at Towerdykeside, at the south end of the Little Haugh and by the McDonald Shelter (top of Mansfield Road). The first facilities were installed at the Moor in 1889. Two 1 penny locks were added to the closet doors in 1913 and a new urinal was built in 1925. The first Ladies toilets were built at the Paddock in 1963.

Tojo (tō-jō) n. nickname for High School teacher J. Anderson in the years after WWII.

Tokeley (tōk-lee) n. Albert Victor 'Vic' (1928/9–2003) born and raised in Yetholm, he lived most of his life in Hawick, working as an accountant and becoming Managing Director of Croall, Bryson. He was an all-round sportsman in his youth. He became President of the Rotary Club, was President and long-time committee member of the Archæological Society, and was a Tweed Commissioner for 34 years. He was well known as an expert on the Yetholm gypsies and on angling, writing 'The Kirk Yetholm Gypsies' (2004), which was completed by his daughters Anna and Jill, with the help of Jules Horne. A memorial stone was erected on Yetholm Green.

tolbooth (tōl-booth) n., arch. a small building where tolls are collected, a place where goods are weighed to determine payable duties, a town prison – 'Walter Anderson was onlawed . . . for ane egregious contumacy in not going to the tolbuith qn. charged thereto by the Bayleyeas ymselves' [BR1682], '. . . onlawed tenn pound Scotts for his own hand wtout the baylyea's license' [BR1685] (also written 'tolbuith').

the Tolbooth (thu-tōl-booth) n. Tolbooths were generally the place where traders paid their fees on market days and where goods were weighed, as well as acting as the town jail. Hawick's former Tolbooth was on the site of the previous Town Hall, before being demolished in 1781 (with the timber being sold for £1 6s.). It was said to be a 'humble and primitive erection' with a thatched roof of heather and a rough barn-like interior. It would have served many municipal functions in its day, including as the local court and town prison. The building was sold to the town by William Scott of Horsleyhill in 1657, although there was probably a building with a similar function before that, somewhere else on the High Street. In fact there is a mention in 1612 of the Town being in debt for a number of reasons, including 'bigging of thair tolbuith'. Its use by the Council for meetings is recorded in the Town Book in 1638 and 1660. Although used as the Town's jail, it appears to have been fairly easy to break out of it! The building was said to be in a ruinous condition in 1693 and was rebuilt around 1694. There was some dispute in the 17th century over the rights of the agents of the Baron to use it for particular purposes. In 1704 it is recorded that it needed to be thatched. In 1724 the Council resolved to demolish the old building and rebuild it, 'set out to the south corner of Horsliehills House' (probably on the other side of the High Street), at a cost of 600 merks. In 1727 the Council decreed that the weigh-house 'or under tolbooth' should be leased. A staircase was erected there in 1732. In 1737 the stair was mended and the building re-limed. 2 panes of glass were purchased for it in 1755. A man paid the Council for keeping 'wild beasts' in it in 1768. The lock of the old jail door is in the Museum. The word 'Tolbooth' was also later applied to the building at the Loan Toll, where the tolls were collected, as well as sometimes being used for other houses at toll-bars on the roads around Hawick – 'The Court of the bruche of Hawick, halden within the Tolbuith thereof . . . ' [BR1638], 'Item, whatsomever person that sall be committed in waird, and brekis the Tolbuith, or cumes furth thereof without license of the bailies, or ane of them, sal pay £10 money, and wardit during the bailies' will' [BR1640], 'Walter Scott . . . bailie of the regality of Hawick, under William Lord Drumlanrig, craves of the bailies of Hawick the key of the tolbuith . . . ' [BR] (also spelled 'Tollbooth' and 'Tolbuith').

tolerat (to-le-ri') pp., arch. tolerated – '. . . was ordered to bring a testimonie from Mr. Douglas, Minister of Kirkton, failing which he would not be tolerate to stay in ye toun' [PR1717].

the Toleration (thu-to-le-rā-shin) n. name sometimes used to refer to the 1689 Act of Toleration. This permitted freedom of worship for Protestant dissenters, but not for Catholics.

toll (tōl) n. a system of charging for the use of a road, introduced in the 18th century to fund major road improvements, but enormously unpopular with the general public.

toll-bar (tōl-bawr) n. a beam placed across a road at a toll house, to prevent carriages from passing without paying the toll, also used to refer to the adjacent house itself. It was also sometimes also called a 'turnpike bar'. There were toll bars every few miles along the main roads, following the Turnpike Acts of the mid-18th century. These toll houses were usually licensed for the sale of alcohol, and used as resting points by travellers. Hawick also had toll bars at the main entrances to town, specifically the Wester Toll, Loan Toll (or 'Auld Wester Toll'), Easter Toll, Dovemount Toll (or 'North Toll') and those at Crumhaugh and at the Common Haugh (also written 'toll bar').

toll-hoose (tōl-hoos) n., arch. a toll-house, building in which a toll-keeper lived. These were built every few miles along the main turnpike roads in the 18th and early 19th centuries, as well as at the main entrances to towns. Many are still in use as dwellings today and are easily distinguished because they have a window which seems perilously close to traffic. Existing examples include those at the Wester Toll, Greenbank (Roberton), Colterscleuch, Fiddleton, Langholm and Heriot. The former toll-house near the end of what became Commercial Road can be seen in the 1846 painting of the Common-Riding Races.

the Toll Hoose (thu-tōl-hoos) n. name used for any of the local buildings where tolls were collected. The name was particularly used in the 19th century for one near the corner of what became Albert Road and Commercial Road.

tolls (tōlz) n., pl. one of several toll-bars at the entrances to Hawick or on the neighbouring roads. In the 17th century even the main roads were in appalling condition. There was a Highway Act of 1669, and another of 1691, which led to little genuine improvement. General Wade's roads, built in the Highlands in the 1720s and 30s, led to further calls for general improvement and the Turnpike Act of 1750. This made construction of improved roads compulsory, paid for by collection at toll-bars, typically located every 6–8 miles. Hawick was on the Scotch Dyke to Hare Moss toll road, which is now part of the A7. This was established by a special Act of 1764, published in 1770. There were also acts to regulate maintenance of local roads under the statutory Labour system. The highway toll acts were repealed in 1807, but already astonishing progress had been made locally. As well as toll-bars across the main roads, there were also tolls at the entrances to towns, Hawick having 4 of these at one point. They were: the Wester Toll (on the New Road, outside the present High School); the Loan Toll (in the middle of the Loan, for the old road South); the Easter Toll (on Bourtree Place near the old Con Club); and Dovemount Toll (at Dovemount on the road to Edinburgh). Plaques mark their positions. There were additional tolls at other times, e.g. across the Teviot Bridge by the Common Haugh, and another at Crumhaugh.

tomati (to-ma'-i) n. a tomato – 'You say 'tomato' and I say 'tomati', You say 'potato' and I say 'potati' '.

tombstane (toom-stān) n. a tombstone – '. . . but also named on the family tombstane in Duns Kirkyaird' [IWL].

tome (tōm) v., arch. to draw out into a thin line – 'To tome, toum, to draw out any viscous substance into a line, Roxb.' [JoJ], 'ti toam taffie' [ECS], to undergo drawing out into a rope, be drawn out into a line – 'It cam towmin' out' [JoJ], 'To hing towmin' down, to hang in the manner of saliva from the lips' [JoJ] (also written 'toam'; cf. taw and toum).

Tomes (tōmz) n. Alan 'Toomba' (??–) rugby player, born in Hawick, but grew up in the Newcastle area, he worked for banks and the gas board. At about 6 ft 5 inches, he playing as a lock, and was known for his large stature. He played for Hawick R.F.C. from 1973, winning 48 caps in 1976–87, a record for a middle row player, and he also played for the British Lions in 1980.

Tomscotsteed (tōm-sko'-steed) n. former lands in Liddesdale, recorded in the 1541 rental roll as 'Thomscotsteid', and listed along with the other lands of 'Cleirlandis, Robsteid, Cranswat, Gusbank, Hurklebuss', with tenants William Elliot, David Elliot, Bartholomew Nixon and Ninian Elliot, valued at 5 merks. They were presumably a set of adjacent small steadings, but their location is uncertain.

the Tongue (thu-tung) n. narrow strip of land on the former boundary between Tofts and Hallrule. It was said to have been given by Turnbull of High Tofts to Douglas of Cavers as a way of protecting him from any attempts by Eliott of Stobs to force him off his land (as he had done to Turnbull of Denesyde). The field still survives, just east of the Dean Burn, to the left of the A6088 a little before Hawthornside.

the Tongue (thu-tung) n. spur of land in Castleton Parish, between the Green Burn and an unnamed tributary, situated north-west of Kirk Hill. There are the remains of a farmstead, a cottage and a sheepfold there. The farmstead may be 18th century; the cottage was known as Greenburn, and probably the farmstead also. At the southern end of the spur are further enclosures and 'lazy-beds'.

the Tongue Burn (thu-tung-burn) n. small stream that joins the Braidlie Burn a little to the north-east of Gorrenberry, on the north side of the Hermitage valley.

tongue-ruits (tung-ritz) n., pl., arch. roots of the tongue, especially in the phrase 'at one's tongue-ruits', meaning 'on the tip of one's tongue' or about to be said – 'It was at ma tung-ruits ti cry on the hoattery affair' [ECS].

Tonke (tongk) n. Walter (13th C.) recorded as Sheriff of Roxburgh Castle in 1296. He was probably a clerk of the English King's household.

the Too'er see the Toor took (took) n., arch. a tuck, pleat, a tug, pull, an excess of food or work, surfeit – 'A'm deed-teird: A hev hed a richt took o woark' [ECS], v. to tuck (also written 'tuke').

toom (toom) adj., arch., poet. empty, unoccupied, vacant – 'But, let me tell ye, gin yer pouch be toom, sirs . . . ' [JoHa], 'Toom as a teapot newly dreepit, Ae single plack, or I'll be wheepit!' [JoHa], '... an' whan he is come he fin'ith it toom, swupet, an' decket' [HSR], '... a leaden amulet, carried ten years by a Bucolic to prevent 'his pouch from ever being toom'' [HAST1862], 'Why, don't you see that if we had been ministers of separate charges there wad hae been twa toom kirks where there is one to-day' [RJYS], '... Mr. Spunk'll be lyin' lookin' up at St. Mary's Kirk wi' a green blanket ower his toom ribs ...' [JEDM], 'He was tired and wat and the big creel was toom' [UB], 'We view them now baith toom and bare Wi' empty pouches' [RF], '... Leaving the toum shafts o' the trap To mock his fuddled ee' [WL], not running, idle – 'A stane-nappin injin gaed-on leike a tuim mill' [ECS], v., arch. to empty, particularly a drinking glass – 'Ane faster than another strives, In tooming toil-fil't purses' [JoHa], '... An' play his pouch a pliskie – Will toom'd this night' [JoHa], 'An' aye we ca'd the ither cog, An' toom'd the reamin' horn!' [JT] (also spelled 'toum', 'tume'; see also tuim, etc.).

toon (toon) n. a town – 'There came a queer bodie unto oor toon ...' [JoHa], 'There's a toon, o' toons the pride That stands on bonnie Teviot side' [JLH], '... Frae the silent slopes on my native toon' [TC], '... On earth, Hawick is the only toon The nicht afore the morn' [JMS], formerly any settlement situated at a major farm – 'John Glendinen and Andrew were ordered to gather in the touns following, in ye landward part of ye parish, viz., Crumhaugh, Goldielands, Fenwick, Alton Crofts, and Whitchesters, together with Closses' [PR1717], 'Were ye e'er in Hawick toun? Gin ye hae, then fill your glasses' [GWe], arch. a farmstead, adj. relating to a town – '... that no other toune or landward heritor of tenements and houses within the said burgh ...' [BR1699], 'But the toun-clock cheery chimes owre a'' [WL] (also spelled 'toun').

the Toon Book (thu-toon-book) n. the official record book kept by the Town Clerk, essentially synonymous with the Burgh Records. The first such book that still exists was begun by Gilbert Watt on 1st October 1638 (although it starts with the 'Act of Bailies and Council' of 1640) and was continued by 4 successive Town Clerks until 8th October 1681. The second book covered the period 1681–1774 and other books followed, listing the official business of the Town, including details of cases before the Magistrates' Court, etc. They are crucial pieces of early historical information about events and people in Hawick, as well as the language. A book indexing the main entries was started by James Wilson in 1830 and covered 1681 to 1866 – '... quhilkis premises the said Adam Gowanlock desirit to be insert in the common toun-buik of Hawick' [BR1641].

toon clerk (toon-clerk) n. town clerk, an official appointed as secretary to a town council, keeping records and performing administrative duties – 'Item, whatsomever personnes gevis unrevrent language to the bailies, minister or towne-clark, sal pay £10 efter tryal ...' [BR1640], '... for calling Gilbert Watt, Toun-Clerk, ane suckler, and for other injurious words' [BR1650].

the Toon Clerk (thu-toon-klerk) n. the Town Clerk of Hawick. Originally he was appointed by the citizens to keep the town records and to perform other legal duties. He was chosen by the Burgesses every 2 years, the only official to be elected rather than appointed by the Council. The first recorded one was 'Hew Counston' or 'Cowstoun' in a single Privy Council document of 1612, and then Andrew Sword is recorded in 1630. The earliest existing 'Town Book', recorded by the Town Clerk, has its first entries in 1638. The Gladstains and Purdom families gave many decades of service to this office. The Town Clerk used to lead the march around the Burgh boundaries when the riders returned from Riding the Common. It was said in 1711 that he was 'now and then in custom to get ane burgess complimented over to him' (i.e. had his income supplemented by the occasional burgess fee). In 1720 he was awarded 10 shillings yearly for pen, paper and ink. In 1836 it is recorded that the Town Clerk was appointed biennially by a poll of Burgesses and paid 10 shillings annually, as well as receiving fees for courts and other services. The first full time appointment was not until 1937, and the position was dissolved along with Reorganisation in 1975. An approximate list follows (although some dates are far from certain): Hugh Cowston 1610s; Andrew Sword c.1620–1630s; John Richardson 1630s–1638; Gilbert Watt 1638–1650s; James Liddell 1658–1659; Andrew Tunno 1659–70; Andrew Rutherford 1670–c.73; Walter Gladstains 1673–96; William Rutherford 1696; Walter Gladstains c.1696–1710; Walter Gladstains and Walter Gladstains (second) 1710–18; Walter Gladstains (second) 1718–32; James Weir 1733–62; John Gladstains c.1763–70; James Winthrope the Toon Cooncil (thu-toon-koon-sul) n. Hawick's Town Council, which must have existed from the time of the granting of burghal status in the early 15th century. The earliest recorded composition of the Council was 12, plus 2 Bailies, the Clerk and the Treasurer. In 1701 the number was increased by 6 to 18. The Deacon Convenor from each of the Trades also sat on the Council. In 1759 it was decreed that all Councillors had to go on the Common Riding or else forfeit their place on the Council. By 1780 the Council consisted of 31 members, being the 2 Magistrates elected annually, 15 councillors (for life) elected by the sitting members, and 2 representatives (quartermasters) from each of the 7 incorporated trades. This was fixed by a ruling of the Court of Session in 1781, following an action raised by William Freeman and others. During the 19th century the Council met twice a month. The make-up of the body led to it being called 'the Eternal Cooncil'. The newer Town Council was constituted after the Police Act of 1861, with wider representation by all men paying a rent of £10 or over. The Council saw many changes over the years, particularly with the setting up of the County Council in 1889, and its extension in 1929, and the associated transfer of responsibility. It was disbanded in May 1975, following local government Reorganisation, when power was removed from the burghs and centralised. A minority of people claim things improved.

the Toonfit Kirk (thu-toon-fi'-kirk) n. the Townfoot Church in Newcastleton, the first to be built in the village. It was erected in 1803/4 for the Burgher congregation, which would become the United Presbyterian Kirk.

toonfitter (toon-fi'-ur) n., arch. someone who lives at the lower end of a town.

the Toon Hall (thu-toon-hall) n. the original Town Hall, sometimes called the 'Town House' was built in 1781 and demolished in 1884. This itself replaced the Tolbooth, which dated from about 1694, and earlier buildings before that. The current building was erected on the same site, 36 High Street, in 1884–86 at a cost of £16,000, with architect James Campbell Walker of Edinburgh, selected in an 1883 competition. The design is said to be Scottish Baronial with French elements, and is reminiscent of the work of David Bryce (with whom Walker had worked). The memorial stone was laid by the Duchess of Buccleuch, and the builders were John & William Marshall. The tower contains a clock, with 4 faces and bells ringing the quarter hours; the roof includes 2 separate weather-vanes (the one on the Cross wynd featuring a cock). The complex contains the Council offices, the old Council Chambers, the former Magistrate's Courtroom, the main Hall and the Lesser Town Hall. The back part (off the Cross Wynd) was once the police house, while the basement has the old police cells and was set up for use as a nuclear shelter. The building is used for many municipal purposes, including council administration, concerts and shows, the Colour Bussing, dances, etc. It currently stretches over 34–44 High Street and is a grade A listed building. Outside is a datum level of 352.9 ft elevation marked and another plaque commemorates the former site of the South Port. The Museum has a key of one of the old doors (donated in 1871) and two other old keys donated in 1875. A bench outside, designed by Bernie Armstrong, incorporates halberds in its design – 'In the Town Hall all things are ready, Knives and forks we'll ply them steady' [AB], 'There's the Town Hall tower wi' its clock tickin' ower' [IWS].

toonheid (toon-heed) n. the upper end of a town.

the Toonheid (thu-toon-heed) n. Townhead, former name for the top of the town, i.e. an area around the West Port. It was used as a location in Pigot's 1825/6 directory (e.g. for slater Robert Elliot). The Ordnance Survey map of 1863 marks St. Leonard's farm as 'Hawick Townhead'.

the Toonheid (thu-toon-heed) n. former name used for the top part of Denholm village, at the west end.

Toonheid (toon-heed) n. Townhead, name used for lands in Hassendean Parish, probably the same as the modern Knowetownhead. It was also known alternatively as 'East Mains'. In 1692 Thomas Gray paid the vicarage teinds for the lands there. Thomas Gray, James Thomson and John Hood were there in 1694 (it is 'Tounheid' in 1601 and 'Tounhead' in 1692 and 1694; it is 'Toune head' on the 1718 Buccleuch survey).

Toonheid (toon-heed) n. former farmstead in Southdean Parish near Chesters. George Oliver was the tenant there in 1669.

the Toonheid Port (thu-toon-heed-pōr') n. the Townhead Port, name used at one time to the West Port.

the Toonheid Toll (thu-toon-heed-tōl) n. the Townhead Toll Bar in Newcastleton. It was located on North Hermitage Street. Christina Telfer was toll-keeper there in 1861. The house still exists, on the right-hand side of the road coming out of the village.

the Toon Herd (thu-toon-herd) n. former Burgh employee, with responsibility for collecting the town's cattle in the morning, taking them to the Common to graze and returning them by nightfall. In the early 19th century he also had the privilege of setting up a drinks tent on the Moor at the Common Riding and from the mouth of this tent the Burgess Roll was read. He may have lived at St. Leonard's farm during some periods and in the cottage at Hawickmoor at others. In 1733 it is recorded that a herd was selected for horses pasturing on the Common, which was presumably a different person than the main Herd. In 1755 the building of a 'herd's house' is recorded, this presumably being somewhere on the Common. In the following year 1 shilling was 'given the herd when his child was almost burnt to death', and so there was perhaps a fire in the house. It is unclear when the first Herd was appointed, but the position was discontinued in the latter part of the 19th century. In 1836 it is recorded that the Herd was paid £20 annually. Those filling the appointment included: William Palmer (recorded in 1707); Adam Hobkirk (recorded in 1713); Walter Scott 'Crooked Wat' (early 18th C.); Mungo Armstrong (c.1720–c.44); James Armstrong (recorded in 1740); Robert Hobkirk (c.1752–c.57); James Wilson (late 18th C.); William Elliot (from at least 1800); Andrew Ormiston (until 1853); and James Cairns (from about 1853). In 1858 there was a donation to the Museum of an 'old horn of the Hawick Moor Cow herd' – 'About the year seveenteen hundred and ten, Walter Scot was Town Herd of Hawick' [C&L], '. . . the pond was scythed for thatch every year in the auld days be the toon herd whae bade at St. Leonards . . . ' [IWL] (also 'Toon Hird').

the Toon Hoose (thu-toon-hoos) n. name sometimes used for Hawick's previous Town Hall, also sometimes called the 'Council House'. It was built around 1781 on the site of the old Tolbooth, and was an unpretentious building with a tall steeple and an outside staircase. It had a thatched roof and was 'of a homely description, the rafters, visible from beneath, giving it the appearance of a common barn'. It incorporated a bell (at a cost of £24, 14s.), to complement the one at St. Mary's in order to call the curfew. Part of it was rented out for dancing lessons, singing lessons and lectures in the late part of the 18th century. One of the 6 wells fed from the Sclidder Springs stood beside it from 1797. In one of the last vestiges of feudalism the weight house on the ground floor was owned by a tenant of the Duke of Buccleuch ('tacksman of his Grace's customs); the Duke contributed £100 to the cost of the building, plus half the cost of paving the streets at the time. There were considerable additions to the steeple in 1806 and a clock was inserted in 1809. The top of the steeple also held a weather cock. The door in the steeple at the first floor level, with its projecting ledge, was known as the 'Oyes door' and was used for the reading of proclamations. The ground floor on the Cross Wynd side had open arches, which were closed at night with iron gates. This was the location for meal and butter markets. The Council Chambers were upstairs. There is a single surviving photograph from about 1880. The building was demolished in 1884 to make way for the new Town Hall.

the Toon Litter (thu-toon-li'-ur) n. carrier for bodies, hired out by the town, acting effectively as a hearse. It is referred to in 1722, when the charge was half a crown for those outside the Burgh or those not paying 'stent nor lott'. It is also mentioned in the Treasurer's Book in 1732. It is unclear when this stopped being used, or what form this took, but it was probably little more than a large wheel-barrow.

Toon-o-Rule (toon-ō-rool) n. Town-o-Rule, a farm north of Bonchester Bridge, formerly a significant settlement in the area, once one of the major estates of Hobkirk Parish, and later being a large part of the barony of Feu-Rule. There were houses along the left side of the syke there (according to Tancred), but there are is now no sign of where exactly they were. It has also been suggested (by Jeffreys) that the original parish church of Hobkirk was situated here. In 1535 there is a record of 'Thome Turnbull et Andree alias Dauid Turnbull' who were tenants there. This could be the 'towne in Tevedall caulyd Rowlle' burned by John Musgrave's men in 1542. The 'town' was burned again during the English invasion of 1545. The lands are described in 1562 as lying between the Mains of Hallrule and Plewlandhill on the east and those of Hawthornside and Hoilhouse on the west. It is probably where Jock Tait 'in the toun of Halroule' was recorded in 1586/7. 'Gibbie wi the Gowden Garters' obtained a charter of the lands in 1632. Walter Amos and Robert Paterson were there in 1739. William Elliot was tenant in the mid-18th century. Gideon Wilson was herd there in 1751. Thomas Rule was there in 1788. In 1805 it was sold off by Sir William Eliott to John Wilson of Hallrule, and at that time was also referred to as being the east part of 'Over or Outer Halrule'. William Mabon was farmer in the 1860s. There was also once a small threshing mill there, powered by water from a pond. The cottage on the north side of the farm was known as 'North Town-o'-Rule', referred to by locals as 'Drythropple', and renamed 'Heathfield' for a while. An old well there (built in circular form) was called 'Dobie' or 'Dubbie', and probably corresponds to the well marked to the north of the farm buildings on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map. The residents there used to use the Sun's reflection off 'Cloon Craig' on Ruberslaw to tell the approximate time of day. An ancient oval-shaped earthwork once stood close to the farmhouse, but was largely obliterated by agricultural improvements before the mid-19th century. A prehistoric stone axe-head was found in one of the outfields in the 19th century and part of a quern found there was donated to the Museum in 1858 (formerly spelled 'Toun o' Roull' and variants; the name appears in the records of Jedburgh Abbey; it is 'villa de Rowle' in 1535, 'Toun of Roull' in 1694 and 'Toun of rule' in 1739; it is 'Toū [i.e. Toun] of Roull' on Pont's c.1590 manuscript map, but appears incorrectly as 'Tour of Roul' on Gordon's c.1650 map and 'Tou of Roull' on Blaeu's 1654 map).

Toon-o-Rule Burn (toon-ō-rool-burn) n. Town-o'-Rule Burn, stream, running to the northwest of Weensmuir and Heathfield farms, and joining the Hallrule Burn.

Toon Piper (toon-pī-pur) n. official player of the pipes, probably the bagpipes. However, in earlier documents it is unclear precisely what kind of musical instrument is meant, with perhaps the Border pipes being used at some times and it is also possible the word 'piper' was also synonymous with 'fifer' in earlier times. Pipers are mentioned in connection with Hawick in the early 17th century, e.g. John Tait and John Laing were both 'pyper' in 1627. Adam Moffat was rebuked by Ashkirk Parish in 1638 for 'pyping at bridals' and was probably associated with Hawick or one of the other neighbouring towns. William Turnbull was appointed as Hawick's piper in 1674. Thomas Beattie is recorded as piper in 1693/4. In 1700 the town's piper was fined for playing through the town after the fair; it is recorded that he played the 'great pipe', which is unambigiously the Highland-style bagpipes. In 1703 the town's 'officers, pyper, and drummers' were to be paid for 'coatts att the Common rydeing in anno 1702' and were also allowed 'to have coatts att Common-Ryding this year, 1703, as formerly; this makes it clear that the piper and drummer (or drummers) were separate from the Burgh Officers at that time. James Oliver, 'Jafra the Piper', is mentioned several times in the Parish records of the 1710s (in connection with misbehaviour!). A man called 'Fouller' was paid to be piper in 1721; he was Robert Fowler, piper in about 1721–32. John 'Meader' (probably the same as Mather) was perhaps piper 1732–41. William Brown is recorded as Town Piper in 1745 and Walter Ballantyne in the 1770s, the last man whose name we know. Hawick had a town piper (along with a drummer and bellman, although they may well have shared duties) for probably a couple of centuries until the late 1700s, when he was replaced by a fifer (first mentioned in 1797). In 1803 the Council resolved 'that the piper shall not be any longer continued', and that was the last official mention. One of the last pipers may have been John Douglas, who is recorded as 'late piper Hawick' when his daughter died in 1810; however, there is a reference to him playing the riders back into town in Balbirnie's version of 'Teribus'. John Halliday wrote a poem 'Davie's Dead', published in 1847, which appears to be about a piper. The Common Riding Procession of 1894 is reported to have been led by the brass band, the drums and fifes 'and the pipers'. 'Hawick Pipe Band' traces its roots to 1937 – 'The town's piper, for his nicht revelling, on going on the fair nicht playing with toonsfolk (toonz-fōk) n., pl. townsfolk, townspeople – '... to the great disturbance both of stangers and toonsfolke' [BR1700], 'No' sae lang syne a guid wheen o' the toonsfolk didna' hesitate tae condemn the annual festival wi' a' the invectives they could command' [BW1939], '... hei confirmed the toonsfolks' right ti yaise the Common land and gave thum ... 'land for tillage peats and pasture' ' [IWL].

toon-raw (toon-raw) n., arch. the privileges of being in a town – 'To thraw one's self out o' a toun-raw, to forfeit the privileges enjoyed in a small community, Roxb.' [JoJ].

Toonrig (toon-rig) n. former fortified house on the Hermitage Water, on the north bank of the valley just east of Gorrenberry (marked on Gordon's c.1650 map as 'Tounrig' and on Blaeu's 1654 map and Visscher's 1689 map as 'Tounricg').

toon's officer (toonz-o-fee-sur) n., arch. an officer of a burgh – '... and James Olifer, toun officer, playing before him' [PR1718], 'Rob Tinlin whae was the toon's officer an the pairish beadle' [HEx1965] (see Burgh Officer).

the Toon's Purse (thu-toonz-purs) n. former prize race at the Common Riding. In 1834 it was also referred to as the 'Town's Plate', worth 10 sovereigns and only for horses that had not previously won a £50 prize. It was the opening event of the 1834–36 Friday Races. In 1857 the Town's Stakes (or Sweepstakes) was the main race on the Saturday.

the Toon Steel-yaird (thu-toon-steel-yārd) n. former steel-yard in Hawick, located on the High Street. It is recorded in Pigot's 1837 directory, when James Kennedy was 'collector'.

the Toon Subscription Purse (thu-toon-sub-skrip-shin-purs) n. race run at the Common Riding in at least the 1840s to 1860s. It took place on the Friday on the Moor in many years, but in some years there was a race with this title on both days. Presumably the prize money was raised by subscription in Hawick.

the Toon Treasurer (thu-toon-tre-shoo-rur) n. former position on the Council, charged with gathering the money from Burgesses and others. The first record of the election of a person to this office in in 1655. The position was later named Burgh Chamberlain. The Treasurer kept records of the financial transactions of the Burgh, which provide valuable information about what went on in Hawick in the 17th and 18th centuries. In 1739 the amounts started to be written in sterling rather than in Scots money. The Treasurer was elected annually on the same day as the Bailies, i.e. the 2nd Friday in October. In 1836 it is recorded that the Treasurer was paid £10 annually. Extracts from the Town Treasurer's books in the period 1721–1805 are given in James Wilson's 'Hawick and its Old Memories' (1858). People who have held the office include: John Scott, around 1734; William Scott, at least 1763–69; William Wilson, early 1800s; Walter Wilson, early 1800s; James Scott, early 1800s; James Oliver, 1820s; James D. Kenney, mid-1800s; John Murray, 1880s; A.S. Lawson, late 1800s; Adam Laing, early 1900s; George Gass, early 1900s.

toonty (too'-ee, toon'-ee, toon-tee) n. twenty – 'if ee're no in bed be the time A coont ti toonty ...', 'Aw'll never be drooned, for aw can keep in ma breath for toonty minutes' [WNK], 'Look ... Owre yonder, D'ye see him? Teh, toonty pund, I'm shair. Fish rinnin, fish rinnin Enough and to spare!' [DH], '... an oot o' the toonty-fower entered the wunner was Dick Wricht threh Langtoon' [BW1974], 'Last night A hed a dream, And wi' this A end ma ditty, It was toonty year frae now, Hawick hed been renamed Safeway City' [IWL], 'Teribus is an amazing piece o wurk, toonty fower versus o pure poetical genius ...' [IHS] (cf. the rarer toanty).

toor (toor) n. a tower – 'Ther was an certain houshaulder ... bigget ane touer, an' let it out til husbanmen ...' [HSR], 'Grey are the stanes o' Drumlanrig's toor o' the Border' [IWS], v. to tower – 'There, at the yeh hand, tooered the threeple Eeldons ...' [ECS] (also spelled 'tooer', 'toore', 'touer' and 'tour').

the Toor (thu-toor) n. popular name for Drumlanrig's Toor, for centuries the most imposing building and de facto geographical centre of Hawick. The word is also used generally for this area of Hawick (also spelled 'Too'er' etc.).

Toor Brig (toor-brig) n. occasional name used for the Drumlanrig Bridge over the Slitrig near the Tower Knowe.

the Toor Burn (thu-toor-burn) n. stream that runs from above Spittal Tower to join the Rule Water at Spittal-on-Rule.

the Toor Close (thu-toor-klōs) n. former name for a passageway next to Drumlanrig's Tower, giving access to the area behind. In 1767 it is said that 'trees, packs of wool, couples, joists, and household furniture' were all deposited there by the flood. The close is wide enough to allow the cavalcade to emerge at the Common Riding, and the wall contains the Cornets' Board.

Toordykeside see Toor Dykeside

Toor Dykeside (toor-dīk-sīd, tow-ur-dīk-sīd) n. Tower Dykeside, short street linking Slitrig Crescent with the Tower Knowe. The name derives from the wall which once encircled the Tower on the south side. It is a relatively new street, since the Tower is believed to have sloped down to the Slitrig perhaps as recently as the 18th century. Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 4 are all parts of the former Tower Hotel, which is grade B listed. The wall along by the Slitrig was mostly swept away in the flood of 1846 – 'And though the matin bells have not yet rung Their usual peal unto the world wide, Alert with joyous life both old and young Their steps are wending to the Tower Dykeside' [JCG] (sometimes 'the' Tower Dykeside, occasionally one word, and also formerly 'Toor-gate-side'; it is 'Tower Dyke side' on Wood's 1824 map).

toorfle (toor-ful) v., arch. to come to grief, perish – 'I'se rād he'll toorfel' [GW] (this variant said to be from Liddesdale; cf. torfel).

Toorgateside (toor-gā'-sīd) n. former name for Toor Dykeside. Before the wall was built the ground at the foot of the Tower sloped into the Slitrig – '. . . the erection of the Corn Exchange, which is intended to span the stream, and extend from the Towergate-side across to the old manse' [WNK] (also written 'Toor-gate-side' or 'Towergateside').

Toorgateside Cauld (toor-gā'-sīd-kawld) n. former name for a weir in the Slitrig near Drumlarnig's Tower (mentioned by W.N. Kennedy in 1861).

the Toor Hotel (thu-toor-hō-tel) n. Drumlanrig's Tower, during the days it was used as a hotel, also known as 'the Tower Inn'. This phase of the building's history started in 1773, and continued until 1981. The landlords used to farm fields at the Wellogate, with an onstead in Bourtree Place (which became the Con Club site). The ballroom inside was used for dances, theatrical performances and other social functions, particularly in the late 18th and early 19th centuries. There are reports that the band 'the Stranglers' played here in 1977, the concert ending in a fight between the audience and the bouncers.

the Toor Inn (thu-toor-in) n. usual name for the Toor Hotel in the 18th and early 19th centuries. The first landlord was Michael Stevenson, from 1773, followed by Robert Armstrong for about a decade. Thomas Scott was a ploughman employed by the Inn in 1799. William Brown ('Billy', d.1839) was landlord in the early part of the 19th century, then John Fenwick (with William Crozier as long time hostler) and later Frank Fenwick. The landlord farmed some land up the Wellogate and had some space for stabling where the Con Club was later built. A coachhouse for the inn stood where the Exchange Buildings were built in the 1860s. Wordsworth stayed here in 1803 and the first Burns supper in Hawick was held here in 1815. In the 1830s, being the Town's polling station, it was the focus of troubles during several elections.

the Toor Knowe (thu-toor-now) n. area in front of Drumlanrig's Tower, so-called because it was a few feet above street level into the 19th century. It would have seemed higher relative to the surroundings before all the houses were built, and it must have once had the mill lade crossing its nothern side, isolating it from the rest of the Town. It has been used as a street address since the late 19th century. It was formerly a small green hill, is said to have once had the 'deuil tree' upon it, and still had a few trees in the late 18th century. In the 18th century there were 2 small clay-built houses to the west of the river bank, the proprietors of which owned the Knowe itself. There was also formerly a row of single-storey houses extending for about 50 yards at the eastern end, which split the High Street in half at this point (running from roughly opposite 2 Tower Knowe to a point in line with 18 High Street). For a century from about 1760 it held the daily spectacle of arrivals and departures of the stage-coaches passing through the town. It was also where the Town Herd used to collect the cattle. It was formerly used as a marketplace and for annual hiring fairs, as well as being where bonfires would be lit to mark special occasions. No. 7 was formerly known as 'Kedie's Buildin', but rebuilt by James Harkness, with a cantilevered section sticking out over the Slitrig. Essentially the entire street is composed of grade C listed buildings. No. 4 contains ironwork cats on the roof, in a vain attempt to deter the pigeons – 'I wish tae guidness ee wad get alang the road tae the Too'r Knowe and no bother mei wi' eer blethers' [JEDM].

Toor Mill (toor-mil) n. Tower Mill, built over the Slitrig approximately where the 'Auld Brig' once stood. It was constructed on the site of an earlier mill by William Elliot & Sons in 1852. The building is 3½ stories in whinstone with sandstone dressings, built over a flat-arched bridge, and is currently listed Category A. The magnificent arch over the river makes its design quite unique. It was water-powered originally, and provided the first electric lighting in the town (conveyed all the way to the house of Col. William Scott Elliot at Teviot Lodge). The water wheel still exists in the basement, and is the largest of its kind in Scotland. When the water was low it was supplemented by by a steam engine, installed in 1882. At its height the workforce of the factory was 660. In the late 19th and early 20th centuries it operated as a carding and spinning mill, run by Col. Walter Elliot and then his son, Col. William Scott Elliot. Between the wars it was switched to hosiery production. During WWII the building was used as a grain and sugar store and then for several decades as a warehouse for Murray Brothers mail-order knitwear firm. The building fell into disrepair and ownership was transferred to the Scottish Historic Buildings Trust in 1995. There was strong disagreement about whether to demolish or renovate the building, but it was saved by the Hawick Townscape Heritage Initiative in 1998. With funding from the European Union rural development funding, Scottish Borders Council and the Scottish Arts Council, it was refurbished to accommodate visitor facilities and commercial space, as part of the Heart of Hawick initiative. The architects for the conversion were Gray, Marshall & Associates. The 'Bean Scene' opened in 2007, with a glassed section overlooking the Slitrig, and the old water wheel visible underneath. The rest of the building includes a small cinema and creative workspace (also sometimes called 'Toor Knowe Mill' or 'Elliot's Mill').

Toor Mill Dam (toor-mil-dam) n. Tower Mill Dam, name sometimes used for one of two short mill lades in the centre of Hawick. One fed Tower Mill from the Slitrig, with the cauld being at the foot of Slitrig Crescent. The other was effectively an extension of the Back Dam, running under the Tower Knowe to power the original Hawick Mill on the Mill Port.

Toor Shaw (toor-shaw) n. former name for a wood near Tower farm, on the slopes of Ruberslaw (mentioned by J.A.H. Murray in 1866.

toosle (too-sul) v. to tousle – 'They've crush'd an' spoilt her brand new cap, Her bonnet's a bamboozl'd, As flat as ony rattan trap, An' a' her ringlets toozl'd' [JoHa] (also written 'toozle').

toothrife (tooth-rīf, -rif) adj., arch. toothsome, palatable (recorded by J. Jamieson; see also teethrife).

toozy see tousie

top (top) n., arch. a tuft of hair, fowl's crest, upper bushy part of certain plants (cf. tap).

top-lookin (top-loo-kin) adj., arch. stalwart, erect in bearing (noted by E.C. Smith).

toppit (to-pee', -pi') adj. topped – 'There was the Eildons and then Ruberslaw and the roond toppit Minto Hills . . . ' [JEDM].

the Top Tent (thu-top-ten') n. large beer tent near the top of the hill at the Mair, distinguished from 'the Bottom Tent'. In recent years there have been live bands playing there in the late afternoon and evening of the Saturday.

torfle (tor-ful) v., arch. to come to grief, perish, to toss about, tumble, dishevel, tousle – 'Their ringlets fluttered round their lily necks, As if they had, by the effects, Been torfelled wi' the weather' [HSR], n. declining health, being in an unhealthy condition – 'Torfle, torfel, The state of being unwell; a declining state of health, Roxb.' [JoJ] (the word was used by the Ettrick Shephrd; see also torfelt), as well as toorfle for the Liddesdale variant).

torfelt (tor-fel') pp., arch. tossed about, tumbled, tousled – 'But the schip was now in the middle o' the se, torfellet wi' waves' [HSR], '... I am torfellet up an' doun as the locust' [HSR], '... hair aa torfellt an toozellt' [ECS].

tormentit (tor-men-tee', -ti') pp., adj. tormented – '... Tormentit ticht wi' steeks an' stringin', Syne jagged wi' preens!' [DH].

Toronto (to-ron-tō) n. largest city in Canada, in the province of Ontario. Many exiled Teries have settled in the area. In 1921 a number of them gathered at the home of James H. Ross and organised a Common Riding celebration of their own. It took place on 1st July (Canada Day) in High Park, with W. Matherston (who had lost a leg at Flanders) as Cornet and C. Ingles and W. Corbett as Right- and Left-Hand men, respectively. There was a replica flag, which was bussed, pipe music, a 'snuffin' ', Hawick songs, (non-alcoholic) beverages, races, a speech by Alex Craighead (from Galashiels), and all in over 30 C temperatures. Matthew Leydon probably served as Cornet in 1925. In 1926 the Cornet at High Park was Telfer Anderson Huggan, and the replica 1514 flag was bussed by Edith Whillans. In 1927 the Cornet was James Miller and the Lass was Annie Steele.

Torsonce (tor-sins) n. area on the Gala Water to the south of Stow, for long an important seat of the Pringle family. The last Clan Chief was John Hoppringle of that Ilk and Torsonce, who died in 1737. The mansion is built on the foundations of the older peel. Nearby are the ancient 'Our Lady's Well' as well as the remains of a chapel.

Torthorwald (tor-thur-wald) n. Adam (15th C.) received 10 shillings in the will of Sir David Scott of Branxholme in 1491/2. He may have been a local man.

Torwoodlee (tor-wood-lee) n. Georgian house north-west of Galashiels, built near to some older ruins, which were home to the Pringles. The tower dates from 1601 and replaces the one that was sacked in 1568. This was an attack by John Elliot of Copshaw and perhaps as many as 300 other Elliots, Armstrongs, Beatties and Grahams, when the master of the house (George Pringle) was murdered and a huge amount of loot stolen, including silverware and 17 horses. In the latter part of the 15th century the lease of the farm was granted to the Ranger of Tweed Ward for his fee. It was supposedly home of the Pringle who married Mary Scott in the ballad of that name. It was listed among the principal houses of Selkirkshire in an account of 1649. The house was used as a temporary refuge in 1681, by Covenanters the Earl of Argyll and John Scott (ousted minister of Hawick) on their escape from imprisonment. There are efforts underway to stabilize the crumbling structure. There is a golf course on the estate. A bridge nearby was built in 1808 and the modern house in 1783. The remains of Torwoodlee Broch (not to be confused with Torwood Broch, near Falkirk), perhaps 2,000 years old, is also nearby; it is similar to the better preserved one at Edin's Hall – 'The Leader, rolling to the Tweed, Resounds the ensenzie; They roused the deer from Caddenhead, To distant Torwoodlee' [SWS], 'There's Torwudlee, and the Blindlea, An' Buckholm, wi' his hat and feather; But, young Hawtree, he bears the gree Owre a' the Pringles o' Gala waeter' [RG] (it is 'Torwartlee' in 1456, 'Torvodle' in 1552 and 'Torwoidlie' in 1607; it is marked 'Torwoodly' on Gordon's c.1650 map, 'Torwoodlie' on Blaeu's c.1654 and 'Torrid Lee' on Roy's c.1750 map).

Tory Tam (tō-ree-tawm) n. local nickname, probably from the 19th century – 'Wicked Tammy and Tidy Mars, The Sap, Paul Laidlaw and Tory Tam; Tip-ma-Daisy hame frae the wars, Johnny Macmannus and Neddy Lamb' [HI] (presumably someone called Thomas who was a Conservative supporter).

tossel (to-sil) n., arch. a tassel, v., arch., poet. to tassel, form thread-ends into tassels – 'The tossilit curran weips hir teirs of blude, Nae primroisis will starre the wanhope wud ...' [DH] (also written 'tossil').

He wrote over 90 Scottish historical novels, and also the 5 volume study 'The Fortified House in Scotland'. His 'Cheviot Chase' (1953), set in the 1930s and 40s, is about a modern enmity between the towns of Hawick and Hexham caused by the Hornshole events, 'Balefire' (1958) is set in the Borders right after Flodden, while 'Portrait of the Border Country' is a useful work of non-fiction. He was Common Riding Chief Guest in 1957 and was made an honorary life member of the Hawick Archæological Society after giving a talk in 1986.

Trantfille (trawn'-fee??) n. former name for lands in Ewesdale, recorded in a 1525 'letter of reversion' between Simon Armstrong and George, Lord Home. The name occurs in a list between Unthank and Fiddleton, although the precise location is unknown (the origin may be related to that of 'Tranty-fit' etc.).

trantie (trawn-tee) n., arch. a person who is intelligent above his or her station (once a common term, cf. the Tranties, Tranty-fit, and possibly Tibbie Tantry; origin uncertain, but perhaps related to Middle English 'trant', a trick, or the provincial 'tranter', a pedlar; the word seems to be peculiarly local, but was already obsolete by the 1850s).

the Tranties (thu-trawn-tees) n., pl., arch. popular name for two sisters from Hawick who died about 1814 (according to James Wilson), Marjory and Isobel Hume. For about 30 years they kept a lodging house near to the Auld Brig, which was used by beggars and the Town's poor. They were said to be 'rather more intelligent than their neighbours in a similar humble condition of life'. They are also mentioned in Agnes Douglas' prize poem about the 'Alud Brig' – 'Even in the Tranties, wi' their beggars, The spoilers had found fearfu' fleggars' [AD].

Tranty-fit (trawn-tee-fi') n. Tranty-foot, supposedly a witch, sister of 'Speed-o'-foot' who lived at Goldielands. It may also have been a name for one of the two towers of Goldielands – '... The wonder-working witches Tranty-foot and Speed-o'-foot, the occupants of Goldilands Peel' [RW] (probably related to trantie, applied to someone who was so clever as to be suspected of withcraft).

trappin (traw-pin) n., poet. material used to trim a garment, such as lace, tape or ribbon – 'He gethers his trappin' and maks for the door, And he whustles awa oot o' sicht' [WL].

Traquair (tru-kwār) n. house south of Innerleithen, in a secluded valley of the Quair Water. It is reputed to be the oldest home in Scotland, being lived in continuously since 1107. It is associated with several Scottish Kings of the 12th and 13th centuries, as well as with the Stuarts and the Jacobite cause. Prince Charlie was entertained there by the 7th Earl in 1745. The 'Bear Gates' (or 'steekit yetts') were reputedly closed at that time, never to be reopened until a Stuart sits again on the throne (although there are other stories). Mary Queen of Scots also stayed here in 1566. The present structure is probably a 15th century core with alterations through to the 18th century. It is owned by the Maxwell-Stuarts, and now open to the public. The brewery in one of the wings of the house was built around 1700, although brewing on the site is even older. Brewing ended there in the late 19th century, but was restarted in 1965 (the first record of the name is 'Treverquyrd' about 1124; it is 'Tracquhair' in 1507/8, 'Tracquar' in 1527, 'Trocquair' in 1564/5 and 'Trakwair' in 1574; the first element may be the old p-Celtic 'tref' for 'farm on the Quair').

trash (trawsh) v., arch. to wear out, exhaust, to maltreat, abuse – ''He trash'd that horse terribly', by over-heating or over-riding him, Ettr. For., Roxb.' [JoJ].

trasht (trawsht) pp., arch. worn out, exhausted, over-worked, maltreated – 'It wasna leike as A was muitteet oot or onyways trasht' [ECS], 'Trash't wi' a sair day's wark' [GW].

trauchle (traw-chul) n., arch., poet. hard monotonous work, drudgery – '... The lang trauchle hame was aye the humbug' [JRE], '... are fit ti gar aa the trauchles an the fashes gang leike the snaw off the deike in a thowe' [ECS], v., arch. to work slowly and wearily, drudge, toil, overburden, fatigue, muddle – 'Ambition's imps wi' a' their art Ne'er trauchled Robbie' [WP], '... trei-cloot (trī-kloo') n., arch. a wooden heel for a boot – 'Tree-clout, a piece of wood formerly used instead of leather for the heels of shoes, Teviotdale' [JoJ], adj. having wooden heels – 'Till about sixty years ago [1800] the heels of shoes were, in the South of S., made of birch-wood. The heel thus put upon them was called the clout, and required to be frequently replaced ... demoniated tree-clout shoon' [JoJ] (also written 'tree-clout').

the Treincersgait (thu-trīng-kurz-gā') n. former gate, probably in Lilliesleaf, described in a court action of 1589 between William Riddell and William Middlemas. It was decreed to be 'ane commoun gait for horsmen and fitmen to carie laidis and pakis throw and for pepill to cum to the kirk for tymer and watlis coft in the mercatis to be brocht throw it on horsebakis and for sledis that sall happin to be coft in the mercatis to be brocht hame thairthrow, and nocht to be ane commoun gait for wanis cairtis sledis or ellding'.

Tremblay (trom-blā) n. Robert (13th/14th C.) landholder in Kincardineshire, probably a descendant of Walter. He is recorded several times as 'de Trembleye' (and variants) in the period 1296–1304. He may also be th Robert who witnessed a charter for lands in Fife in 1282. Walter (13th C.) probably the first man of this surname recorded in Scotland. He appears to have been heir to the Yorkshire lands of William de Somerville and before 1264 had acquired lands in Kincardineshire. The Somervilles may have come from 'Évreux' in Normandy, which is close to Le Tremblay, suggesting a Norman origin for this name. In connection with this, 2 charters of Amaury, Count of Évreux in about 1188 were witnessed by Evrard and Boschard 'de Tremblai', who may have been related. It has been suggested that 'Tremblay' is the origin for the 'Trumbles', i.e. Turnbulls of Roxburghshire (usually written 'de Tremblay').

tremmle (tre-mul) v. to tremble – 'The tear comes tremlin' ti my e'e Ilk time that I remember thee ...' [WP] (also spelled 'tremle'; cf. trimmle).

tresaurer (tre-saw-rur) n., arch. a treasurer – '... to give thair band to John Scott, tayleor, and towne tresawrer, which accordingly was done' [BR1707] (see also thesaurer).

trespass (tres-paws) n., arch. crime, transgression, offence – '... whereupon ye Session thought Trevelyan (tre-vel-yin) n. Sir George Otto (1838–1928) historian and Liberal M.P. for the Hawick (or Border) Burghs 1868–86. He was the first such M.P. in 1868, winning subsequent elections in 1869, 1874, 1880, 1882, 1885 and 1886 (three of which were bye-elections on account of his appointment to senior government posts). Later in 1886 he lost to A.L. Brown by only 30 votes, the election campaign being focussed on the issue of Home Rule. By this time he was a Unionist, rather than a Liberal. There are existing letters from him regarding subscriptions to Selkirk Races in 1872 and 1877. He held appointments as Secretary to the Admiralty, Chief Secretary for Ireland and also Scottish Secretary. He is perhaps best known as biographer of his uncle Lord Thomas Macaulay, and for his more famous sons George and Charles. Trevelyan Terrace is named after him.

Trevelyan Terrace (tre-vil-yin-te-ris) n. street in the West-end, originally built in 1879, but demolished and rebuilt in 1974–76. It was named after Sir George Trevelyan. The first houses were built there by joiners Riddle & Graham and Eckford the builder.

trimmle (tri-mul) v., arch. to tremble – 'Thou hest mæde the yirth til trimmel; thou hest brokin it . . . ' [HSR], 'Feærfuniss an' trimmlin' ar cum apon me, an' horrar heth ower-layde me' [HSR], ' 'My lease o' life', quo trim'lin' Dan, 'Is surely no run dune, Juist gies anither year or twa Or aw'm tane abune the mune' ' [AO] (also written 'trimmel'; cf. tremmle and trimmelt).

Trimontium (trI-mon-tee-um) n. Roman name for the Eildons, where there was a substantial fort, occupied from the late 1st through 2nd centuries. It was one of the most important sites on the northern frontier of the Roman Empire in those times, and guarded an important crossing of the Tweed. It was probably built around the year 80 and abandoned around the year 200 and not rediscovered until the building of the railway line in 1860. The fort itself covered about 15 acres, with an area of as much as 200 acres occupied. At one time it probably held about 1500 men from the 20th Legion 'Valeria Victrix' (Valiant and Victorious), with perhaps 1500 civilians living outside the fort. Many of the items recovered in the excavations are in the National Museums of Scotland, but some are in the Trimontium Museum at Newstead. The Trimontium Stone, a granite monument, was erected by the Edinburgh Border Counties Association in 1928.

the Trim Track (thu-trim-trawk) n. fitness course established in Wilton Lodge Park in 1978, made possible by a grant from the Silver Jubilee Fund.

Trinity (tri-ni'-ee) n. name for the area between the Bourtrees and Weensland, being called 'the Trinity Lands' from early times. These lands were part of the endowment of the Hospital Church of Soutra in the 14th and 15th centuries. Soutra was dedicated to the Holy Trinity and also known as 'Trinity Hospital', with a well there, also dedicated to the Holy Trinity, being known as the 'Tarnity Well'. This hospital was annexed in 1462 to Trinity College Church and Hospital, Edinburgh, which had been founded by Mary of Gueldres (widow of James II); the church lay at the foot of Calton Hill, and was demolished in 1848 because of railway development. The Hawick lands appear to have been among those owned by the Scotts of Crumhaugh in the 17th century. They gave their name to Trinity Street and Trinity School, as well as later (indirectly) to St. Ninian's Road. The naming of the new Trinity Church (not in the old Trinity area) has somewhat confused the geography.

Trinity Gairdens (tri-ni'-ee-gārd-inz) n. Trinity Gardens, public gardens below Trinity Church, near the Horse. It is a popular hang-out spot for youngsters. The gardens were renovated and a new band-stand built in 1999. The land was once known as the Wheathole, and was later the site of the East Bank Kirk – 'Doon at the Horse, on a sunny day Sittin' on a Trinity sate Or lookin' up at Wulton Kirk Man it's hard tae bate' [AY].

Trinity Haugh (tri-ni'-ee-hawch, -hawf) n. former name used for flat area by the river associated with the 'Trinity lands'. This land was owned by the Scotts of Buccleuch and was drained and feued in 1875.

Trinity Kirk (tri-ni'-ee-kirk) n. Trinity Church, off Brougham Place. It was built in 1843 to replace the old East Bank United Free Church meeting house, which stood lower down. In 1958 the three congregations of St. John's, St. Andrew's and East Bank joined together to become Trinity, when East Bank was renamed and the other two closed. The congregation was linked with Cavers and Kirkton in 2004. The building is set within its own grounds and has a session house and vestry at the south-west corner. The design is relatively plain and the architect is unknown (sometimes wrongly attributed to William Burn). It was extended to form a T-plan in 1872 and redecorated by William Jardine in 1892, with halls added in 1896. A pulpit and organ case, designed by Alexander Inglis, was added in the early years of the 20th century. The organ was installed in 1911, boasting 1,182 pipes, built by James Jepson Binns of Bramley Organ Works in Leeds. The church, session house, vestry and halls are grade C listed building. A roll of the ministers includes: Dennis Leadbeater 1960s; Lindsay Thomson 1972–2008 (the name comes from the 3 churches, and is unrelated to the Trinitylands to the east).

Trinitylands (tri-ni'-ee-lawndz) n. older name for the Trinity area of Hawick, dating back probably to the 14th century, and a connection with Soutra, also known as the 'Trinity Hospital'. The same lands were also known as the 'Soutralands', since they were originally part of the endowment of Soutra, although the reason for this is not known. The boundaries and full extent of the lands are also unclear. In 1472 there was a court action brought by Sir Edward Bonkle, Provost of Trinity Collegiate Church, against Thomas Blair, for rent on the lands. They were confirmed to Trinity Collegiate Church by Sir William Douglas of Drumlanrig in 1507. They are described (as 'Soltracroft') in a 1557 charter, as lying between 'Ladyland' to the east, the lands of the town of Hawick to the west, the highway to the south and the lands of West Mains to the north. In 1565/6 they were again leased to William Scott 'in Hawik' and his son and heir Robert; they are there described as lying between Ladyland, lands pertaining to the town of Hawick, and the West Mains. At least some of the lands were gained by Sir James Douglas of Drunlanrig, since the inventory drawn up after his death in 1578 states that he 'conqueist the Sowtre landis in Hawik'. In 1627 it was a 'three merk land called Trinity land' estimated as 'paying presentlie 20 bolls' and possessed by the Lord of Buccleuch and Walter Gledstains of Dod. In 1628 Walter Scott, Earl of Buccleuch complained that several Hawick men had cut down trees on 'his lands and barony of Branxholme and Trinitie lands of Hawick'. In 1692 the lands were leased by the Duchess of Buccleuch to Robert Scott of Horsleyhill. In 1696, it is included in a list of lands owned by the Scotts of Crumhaugh; this could refer to part of the lands, perhaps the same as 'Ladyland', which was owned by the Scotts of Goldielands and Crumhaugh in 1627. In 1748 a small part lying on the Wilton side of the Teviot was exchanged with the minister of Wilton for a part of his lands which the Duke wanted for carrying water to Burnfoot Mill. The name was still used as late as 1907 in plans for the location of new houses in the area (written 'Trinity Land', 'Trinity Lands', etc.).

Trinity Mills (tri-ni'-ee-milz) n. main factory of Hawick Hosiery Company on Earl and Duke Streets (and not Trinity Street, as the name might suggest), now the home of Hawick Cashmere Company, or 'Hawico'. It was built in at least 1888, when it was occupied by Renwick & Raeburn, then the Raeburn brothers 1889–97. It was occupied by Messrs. F. Knox Cowie & Co. 1906, but cthat ollapsed after about a year. Hawick Hosiery Company moved in in 1911 and was rebranded as Hawick Cashmere in 1990.

Trinity Schuil (tri-ni'-ee-skil) n. Trinity Primary School, previously situated near the top of the steps on the south side of Weensland Road, to the east of the entrance to the Miller's Knowes. It was built in 1876, and apparently originally called 'St. Mary's', but changed its name when the new St. Mary's School was built at the top of Brougham Place. It took the older pupils from St. Mary's Parish School and another school which formerly existed in Weensland. The school moved to its present location in 1935/36, the architects for the new building being Reid & Forbes of Edinburgh. It was constructed with a raised ground floor to protect against flooding. The former building was demolished and council houses built on the site in 1955. School Inspectors' Reports for 1915–53 are in the National Archive and log books for 1873–1906 in the Borders Archive. William Murray was first Headmaster, from 1876 and Bill Scrimgeour from 1950.

Trinity Steps (tri-ni'-ee-steps) n. Trinity Steps, unofficial name for steps leading from Weensland Road down to the bottom of Trinity Street. There are 56 steps.

Trinity Street (tri-ni'-ee-stree') n. street running off Weensland Road, named after the Trinitylands, the former name for the area, relating to lands once owned by the church at Soutra. The main houses were built in 1885. It has long had a hotel at the top, and the primary school is at the bottom. At the corner with Earl Street there was Lizzie Fordyce's grocer's shop in the earlier part of the 20th century, becoming J. Wood's.

Trinity Thistle (tri-ni'-ee-thi-sul) n. Trinity Thistle Football Club, a rugby club from the Trinity area, existing before WWI. It may also have been referred to as 'Trinity Union'.

trinkle (tring-kul) v., arch. to trickle – 'Yill Waeter . . . trinklin ti its treist wui Teiot' [ECS].

Trinlyknowe (trin-lee-now) n. land on the Caddon Water, owned by the Pringles from the late 15th century. In 1620 the lands were wadset to Walter Scott of Tordig, who sold them to Andrew Riddell of that Ilk in 1622. In 1669 John Riddell of Haining gave the liferent to John Riddell of Muselee and his eldest son William.

trinnle (tri-nul) v. to trundle, roll, spin, waddle – 'Ti trinnle a gird, eggs (etc.)' [GW], '. . . Crying 'Shairly it must be time, now, To trinnle my dydie egg!' ' [DH], 'So sklim' high heaven, trinnle throw hell . . . ' [DH], 'At Easter A've trinnled dydie eggs trodge (trōj) v., arch. to trudge – '. . . But happy gae lucky, we'll trodge on our way' [HSR], 'A was telld that if A was for a richt denner A wad need ti trodge on ti Jethart' [ECS].

trolie (trō-lee) n., arch. an unshapely thing that trails on the ground (noted by J. Jamieson).

tron (trōn) n., arch. a system of weights, officially abolished in 1618, but in use into the early 19th century, with the tron pound varying between 21 and 28 ounces avoirdupois – 'Item, that ilk merchand that buys cuntrie geir with trone wecht, sall sell it again in small with the lyik wecht . . . ' [BR1640], a standard of weight – '. . . and from thence bring home to the toune ane Holland brasen trone, to be ane true and just standard for the trial of their weights amongst themselves' [BR1687].

Trone (trōn) n. probable name for lands within Crook in the Parish of Cavers. It appears to be recorded in a document of 1581 as 'horreum vulgo nuncupat trone et troneland', i.e. a barn commonly called Trone and Troneland. It was in the north part of Crook (note it is possible that this is a scribal error for 'Trows').

Troneyhill (trō-nee-hil) n. small hill between Belses and Barnhills, with a farmstead on it. Thomas Turnbull was farmer there in 1536. It may be the 'Tronnyhill' listed among the farms burned by the Earl of Hertford's men in 1545, but if so is incorrectly listed under Rule Water. Watt and Dand Turnbull from there are recorded in 1576. David Turnbull of 'the Cronyhill' was probably from there when he was declared a rebel in 1581. It was among the lands for which the Bennets and then Ogilvies of Chesters were superiors. In 1788 it was listed as being part of the estate of Chesters. Robert Turnbull was living there in 1801 (it is 'the Tronyhill' in 1536, 'Trannehyll' in 1548/9 and 'Tronyhill' in 1576; it is marked on Pont's 1590s manuscript map as 'Tronehill', but does not appear on Gordon's c.1650 maps or Blaeu's 1654 map; the origin may be the Celtic for 'house with ash trees').

troosers (troo-zurz) n. trousers – 'Forfochen at the seams As a gangrel's troosers' [DH], '. . . they taen on onybody in a per o troosers' [IWL], '. . . a wumin can rin fer faster wae ir skirt up than a man can wae iz troosers doon' [MB].

troot (troo', troot) n. trout – 'A toddlin' troot, and a toddlin' troot, And a wee bit bonnie toddlin' troot: If ye search a' the water aboot, Ye'll no' fin' siccan a toddlin' troot' [T], 'Now a man that would net baith the fish and the troots Of his honesty, trowth, we may well have oor doots' [UB], 'My bonnie troots ye come ti kill; Ca' murder sport, an' nurse yer thrill' [WP], '. . . And troots that i' the Tei'ot tipple' [DH], trot (tro', trot) n. trot, used in the phrase 'on the trot', meaning 'in a row', one after the other – 'A got picked thrice on the trot'.

troth (trōth) n., poet. truth – '. . . Sae weel's ye're harness'd, and sae trig, In troth ye sit like ony bride. With my fa ding, &c.' [CPM], 'An' muckle mair I canna name, In troth I think but little shame . . . ' [JoHa] (cf. trowth).

trottit (tro'-ee', tro-ti') pp. trotted – '. . . As he trottit aboot on his short bit legs, Watchin' the rin o' play!' [DH].

Trotter (tro'-ur) n. Adam (18th/19th C.) joiner in Knowetownhead, recorded in the Lieutenancy Book in 1797. He was recorded as joiner at Hassendean on Militia ballot for 1799 and 1801. His is probably the Adam, son of James, baptised in Minto in 1775. Charles (20th C.) road surveyor. He purchased Wilton Bank from Robert Lindsay Watson in about 1950. Gavin (b.1770s) recorded in 1797 as 'Student of Phisic' at Knowetownhead, in the Lieutenancy Book, among names of men balloted for the Militia. He may well have been related to joiner Adam, who was also listed in 1797. George (18th/19th C.) grocer and spirit merchant on the High Street according to Pigot's 1825/6 directory. He married Sarah, daughter of William Beck. Their children were: Margaret (b.1806); Thomas (b.1809); William (b.1816); George (b.1818); Ann (b.1820); and Agnes Fulton (b.1822). James (18th C.) wright in Minto. He is listed among the subscribers to the reprinted Buchanan's 'History of Scotland' (1752). He is probably the James who married Isabel Hill in Minto in 1734 and whose children included Helen (b.1735), Thomas (b.1739), Isabel (b.1743), Margaret (b.1745), James (b.1747) and Margaret (again, b.1849). James (18th C.) farmer at Hermiston in Lilliesleaf Parish, recorded on the 1787–92 Horse Tax Rolls. James (18th C.) wright in Minto. He could be the son of James baptised in 1747. In 1801 his apprentice Adam Hilson was recorded on the ballot for the Militia. He is probably the James whose children, baptised in Minto Parish, included James (b.1771), Adam (b.1775), Gavin (b.1777) John (b.1781), William (b.1783), Margaret (b.1785), Thomas (b.1789) and James (again, b.1792). James (18th/19th C.) married Agnes Somerville in Wilton in 1807. James (19th C.) married Margaret Robison in Wilton in 1848. John (19th C.) married Agnes Dunbar in Hawick in 1848. Robert of Bush (18th C.) listed in 1779 as liferenter of a set of lands in Minto Parish, valued together at £433 17s 10s. The lands probably corresponded with what was previously called Deanfoot. In the 1811 Land Tax Rolls he is listed as having formerly been liferenter of these lands. The liferent of parts of Minto was perhaps just to get friends of Lord Minto onto the voters list in Roxburghshire. He was Postmaster General for Scotland. His wife's portrait was painted by George Romney. William (1816–1904) stockingmaker who was long Secretary of the Hawick Stockingmakers' Association (or Hawick Framework-Knitters' Society). He was son of George and Sarah Beck. He was a second cousin of Provost Edward Wilson and manufacturer Charles John Wilson as well as a grand-son of William Beck. He may be the William recorded in Selkirk in 1856 in a receipt for furnishings for the Charity School. He married Elizabeth Revell (1818–90) in 1837. They were on the High Street in 1841 and at Howdenburn in 1851. Their children included: Elizabeth (1838–1918); Sarah; William; Margaret; George; Thomas (b.1855); and Agnes (b.1862). William (1845–1923) probably son of William and Eliabeth Revell. He married Margaret Lyon in Hawick. Their children included: Margaret Ferguson (1878–1946); William (b.1880); Matthew Lyon (b.1881); Elizabeth R. (b.1886); and James (b.1889). William 'Bill' (1941–2021) son of Bill and Jenny, he was brought up in Wellington Street and spent his entire working life at Pringle's. He was a bowler, a keen fan of the Greens and supporter of the Common Riding. He married Elspeth Nichol in 1971 and they lived in Dalkeith Place. They had a daughter, Karen. Rev. William (19th/20th C.) born in Jedburgh, he attended St. Andrews Kirk in Hawick. He studied in Glasgow and was ordained as a minister of the Freek Kirk at Bannockburn in 1897. He later moved to New Zealand.

the Trough Inn (thu-trof-in) n. former inn on the right side of Weensland Road, by the old stone watering trough that remains there. A stockingmaker called Grey is recorded there when he died in 1840.

Trough Sike (trof-sīk) n. stream in Liddesdale, rising on the eastern slopes of Roan Fell and flowing into the Hartsgarth Burn. Near the head of the burn, on the south side is a circular sheepfold, with a carved stone inscribed 'James Elliot, Shepherd Septr 30', and a second stone inscribed 'William Elliot Builder 1820'. Peden's stone is just south of here.

Troutlawford (trow'-law-fōrd) n. point that formed the western boundary of the Common in the 1537 charter, remaining so until the Division of the Common in 1777. According to the 1767 description of the old boundaries of the Common, and the map drawn up by J.P. Alison, the Common came to a point here, between the road and the Gate Burn. Given the strange shape of the Common here, and the possibility that the farm of Hawickshiels may have once been within the boundaries of a larger Common, it seems likely that the ford had some special significance, so that it remained within the boundaries. The site is now where the Gate Burn crosses under the road, presumably being a ford in earlier times, and is marked by a plaque. There is an illustration 'The Troutlawford: Hawick Burgesses on the Trail of Reivers, 1546' by Tom Scott '... the Common Haugh and Common Muir of Hawick, lying betwixt the Burnfoord upon the east, Troutlawfoord upon the west, the dykes of Goldielands and Fenwick upon the north, and the syke of Winding-Toun Moss upon the South' [BR1734] (marked 'Troutling Ford' on some earlier maps, it is also sometimes 'the Troutlawford'; it is 'Trowtlaw Foord' in 1767).

Troutling Ford see Troutlawford

trow (trow) v., arch., poet. to trust, believe, feel sure – 'Sae did I trow, because I wiss'd it se; Wi' hopes, alake! we aft oursels betray' [CPM], 'He tends me weel I trow' [??], 'But gin they saw him when they trow he's sleepin', They'd fin' him fou, an', for ye ken what, greapin'' [JoHa], '... but I aye trowed the time o' sic miraculous things was past' [JTe], '... And who, if here at this same hour, I trow would little praise the poor' [AD], '... for they trow that they sall be heard for their meikle speikin'' [HSR], 'But I'll gi'e him his gilded ha', – I trow he's little skill ...' [JT], 'They're some beauty-spots, aw trow, Where the Slitrig wimples throw' [TK], 'Baith auld and young are mixed I trow – Rob Lurgie lingers wi' the lave, Caleb and Clinty seem cronies now Wi' Hornie Robbie and Cannie Dave' [HI].

trow (trow) v., arch. to troll, to fish by dragging a line through the water – 'Heels up, [he] trowed in the dam outright' [HSR], to waddle, roll about, roll (a hoop, ball, etc.) – 'Lang may you row, trow, guzzle, swatter' [JoHa], 'It rows aboot, it trows aboot, Baith near and far awa'; Whiles it is on the Maiden's Paps, And whiles on Ruberslaw' [TCh] (also written 'trowe').

Trow Brig (trow-brig) n. name sometimes used for the bridge over the Teviot at Hornshole.

Trow Burn (trow-burn) n. stream that joins the Teviot from the south near Hornshole, essentially a name for the lower part of the Kirkton Burn. It was said that the recesses around this burn were once hiding places for Covenanters – ''Twas then the plunderers found a grave where Trow goes purling down; And hence this trophy cherished still, of those Callants who saved the town' [JEDM], '... it was nae teime owregane or oo war birlin owre the Trow Burn leike five ell o wund' [ECS].

Trowburn Cottage (trow-burn-ko'-eej) n. cottage on the opposite side of the A6088, roughly opposite Beechurst, just outside of Hawick. The Trow Burn passes here. In a field to the west is a sand pit, seen as parchmarks in aerial photographs.

trowen (trow-in) n., arch. a trowel.

Trowhaugh (trow-hawch) n. lands listed among those held by the Baron of Hawick in 1615. They are also described in the 1627 valuation of Hawick Parish. They were presumably the same as the Trows, or situated nearby. The description is of 'ane land' (presumably meaning a husbandland) 'estimat to 4 bolls in stok, i boll teynd' (it is transcribed 'Troinhauch' in 1615).

trowin (trow-in) pp., adj., arch. rolling, waddling – 'A trowin' walker' [GW].

trowit (trow-ee', -i') pp., poet. supposed, believed, trusted – 'But whan the first cam', they trowet that they shud hae gotten mair' [HSR].

Trow Knowes (trow-nowz) n. farm just outside Hawick beyond Weensland, above Trow Mill. Andrew Nichol was there about 1880 and George Oliver and Robert Murray in 1906 (see also the Trows).

Trowmill see Trow Mill

Trow Mill (trow-mil) n. small woollen mill at 'the Trows', on the Teviot, about 2 miles down from Hawick. The factory was built in 1885, and was latterly run by Wrights of Trowmill Ltd. The area formerly held one of the corn mills of the Cavers estate, active up until the late 18th century. William Aitkin and William Borthwick were there in 1684. Archibald Aitkin was there in 1694 when tax was paid on 7 hearths for 'himself undermillers & kilns'. James Scott was living there in 1724–37, Walter Stevenson in 1744 and Robert Waugh in 1753. William Ferguson was there in at least 1787–92. James Curle was tenant there in at least 1797–1801, Thomas Winthrope was miller in 1801 and Stevn Oliver was servant there. and the millers in 1841 were William Cranston and James Black. Alexander Goodfellow was miller there in the 1850s and Hugh Goodfellow was farmer in the 1860s. A curious sandhill discovered there was described in the Archæological Society Transactions in 1876. Rubble from houses demolished at Lynnwood was used to extend the car park there in the 1980s. Known in the latter part of the 20th century for its mill shop and factory tours, it closed, with the site being cleared and redeveloped as housing – 'The waters o' the Teviot Are drumlie at Trowmill. . . . ' [WL] (also written 'Trowmill', it is 'Trow-miln' in 1684, 'Troumilne' in 1694 and 'Trowmiln' in 1797; it is marked 'Trowsmill' on Stobie's 1770 map).

trows (trowz) n., arch. a former small boat used for fishing in local rivers – 'Trows, a sort of vessel, used in what is called 'burning the water', or night-fishing on rivers for salmon' [JoJ], 'Between 1810 and 1820 a boat or rather a pair of trows was in use for ferrying at the stream where the common ford is now' [JAHM], 'The 'trows' were shaped something like this, Λ. The man stood with a foot on each leg of the 'trows', and steered and propelled it with the leister. When the 'trows' were not in the water there was a movable wheel attached to its point, and it was pushed along the road like a wheelbarrow' [JTu] (presumably related to both trow and trews).

Trows (trowz) n. hamlet on the south bank of the Tweed, between Roxburgh Newtown and Roxburgh Barns. It is also known as Makerstoun Trows. There is another place of the same name, and also a stream just south of Windy Gyle in Northumberland (the name perhaps derives from the narrow 'troughs' on the bed of the Tweed here, although another possibility is the old Celtic 'tros', suggesting a river crossing; it may have the same origin as for the more local area the Trows; it occurs on Blaeu's 1654 map as 'Trowis').

the Trows (thu-trowz) n., pl. popular name for the area surrounding the Teviot near Trow Mill, and for the farm also called Trow Knowes. Simon Routledge is recorded there in 1494. George Douglas was recorded there in 1502. 'Trows' was one of the farms of the Cavers estate, listed as such in 1511. The name is also used in the earliest account of the 1514 incident (Wilson's 'History of Hawick') to describe the general location, rather than the word 'Hornshole', this being more correct if the skirmish took place on the south side of the Teviot. George Douglas of Trows is recorded in 1517. It was still part of the Cavers lands in 1558. Witnessed to a charter of Crook in 1618 recorded there were William Thomson, Simon Renwick, 'Hobbie' Tudhope and John Douglas. The area was said to have been used for secret Covenanters' sermons in the 17th century. It was inherited by Sir William Douglas of Cavers in 1687 and by his brother Archibald in 1698, with the mill. James Douglas was there in at least 1694–1705, Archibald Douglas in 1747 and Alexander Douglas in 1791–96. The precise site of the former house is unknown, although it is marked between the Crook and Westcote on Stobie's 1770 map, and with Trowsmill down by the Teviot at the same time – 'Little Cot, Muckle Cot, Crook and the Trows, Worchart, Wormston and Cavers Knowes' [T], 'The lazy Griersons o' the Crook, An' Douglas o' the Trows, An' Caddon wi' his bluiddie shears, Fra' clippin' o' his yowes' [T], 'Hawick better lo'ed sic needfu' rows As cowed the English band at Trowes' [AD] (often written 'Trowes', it is 'le Trowis' and 'trowis' in 1502, 'Trowis' in 1511 and 1517 and 'Troues' in 1694; it appears as 'Trows' on Pont's c.1590 map, is still 'Trowis' on Gordon's c.1650 map, and 'Trowes' on Blaeu's 1654 map; the origin of the name is unclear, but one suggestion is the Old Welsh 'tros', which means 'across' something, and occurs in other place names associated with river crossings, while another suggestion is 'trowch' for a channel in a river bed, or a mill trough).

trowth (trowth) n., arch., poet. truth, troth – 'Tweel ye hae walth to wale on if it's sae; Sae sigh nae mair, for trowth ye mak me wae' [CPM], '. . . Of his honesty, trowth, we may well have oor doots' [UB], 'Thaye stan' siccer forevir an' evir, an' ar dune in trouth an' uprichtniss' [HSR], '. . . O' ane trowth thou art the Son o' God' [HSR] (also written 'trouth'; cf. troth).

trull (trul) n., poet. a prostitute – 'Thus to fulfil their lusts, and win their Trulls, We see that these ungodly gods were Gulls' [CWS].

Trumbull (trum-bul) n. occasional old spelling for Turnbull, now a name in its own right.

Trummel (tru-mul) n. variant of Turnbull, reflecting the formerly common local pronunciation – 'But there's nae reek i Jock Trummle's house This nicht – an' nane i mine ... ' [DH], 'An there's other families in Hawick caed 'Turnbull', an when oo speak aboot them oo caa them 'Trummel' ' [DaS] (also written 'Trummle').

trumph (trumf) n. a trump, the suit chosen in a card game to outrank other suits – 'that's a stipeet game if ee hev aa the trumphs', v. to play a trump or take a trick with a trump.

trunnle (tru-nul) v. to trundle, move along by rolling or spinning – 'it Easter oo trunnled eggs it the Miller's', '... As the wairp mills trunnle roond' [WL] (cf. trinnle).

Truslye (trus-lee) n. former name for lands near Groundistone, just to the north of Hawick, once part of the Barony of Chamberlain Newton. It was listed in 1535, along with 'Groundeston' as when the King revoked a former charter, and so its superiority passed from Patrick, Earl of Bothwell to George, Lord Home. It is unclear precisely where these lands were.

trustit (trus-tee', -i') pp., arch. trusted – 'Was unco clever, dealt sae fair, An' ilka day was trustit mair' [RDW], 'But I trustet in thee, O Lord: I said, Thou art my God' [HSR].

try (trI) v., arch. to test, examine, scrutinize, ascertain, find out – '... the cordiners shall try this market for insufficient leather and unbarkit schone, and what fines they receive, the ane half thereof shall pertain to the town's use, and the other half to the craft ... ' [BR1643], 'The quartermaster of the shoemaker trade tried the market, to find if the shoes were all of sufficient barked leather ... ' [JW1677], '... and with full power to them to try the sufficient work of yr respective trades as smith, wright, and couper worke att evry fair and marcatt wtin the sd toune' [BR1686].

tryit (trI-ee', -i') pp., arch. tried – 'Item, whatsomever person that committs ryottis ... , being tryit, sal pay 50 shillings ... ' [BR1640], tested, found, ascertained – '... whereupon it is ordainit that umquhile hereafter they be tryit to be flytting, ilk ane of them sall pay 20s and stand in their linen before the parochine' [Ash1643], '... and if tryit to be out of the kirk two Sabbaths together, without ane lawful cause, or seik, he shall satisfie before ye pulpit ... ' [Ash1643].

tryklee-taffie (trī-klee-taw-fee) n., arch. treacle toffee – 'Taffie-join = a social evening, the principal feature of which was the making of a panful of treacle-toffy (trykul-taffie, tryklee-taffie) . . . ' [ECS] (also 'trykle-taffie', etc.).

trykle yill (trI-kul-yil) n., arch. treacle beer, a drink made with treacle or molasses, together with sugar, water and yeast, once brewed by housewives. It was a cheap and refreshing drink, popular up to the end of the 19th century. It was sometimes used in porridge instead of milk – '. . . and he remembered that his old grandfather always had his jug of treacle yill' beside his porridge plate' [JeC].

trykle wauw (trI-kul-waw) n., arch. a kind of drink made using treacle (see also trykle wheech and trykle yill).

tryst (trīst, trist) n., arch. an appointment, rendezvous, meeting, meeting place, country get-together, market, particularly for the sale of livestock (but distinguished from a true fair or market in that it was not generally established by charter). In in the 18th and 19th centuries there was a tryst in Hawick held on the third Tuesday in October, established in 1785 on the land at Thorterdykes, also sometimes called the Cattle Tryst. Black cattle were stopped at Hawick on the way from northern markets, such as Falkirk, to southern markets at Carlisle or Newcastle – '. . . In honour of my Jeanie bright, At the tryste in the glen on a bonny summer night' [JTe], 'And fair or tryst aye proves the best To him wi' a bit brawl in't' [MG], 'When the tryst has been set in some lane leafy dell, That echoes the sound o' the eicht o'clock bell' [JJ], 'And can ye be the bonny lass That set the trysts wi' me! And sat beside me on the grass 'Aneath the hawthorn tree' [JT], v., arch. to meet, engage to meet, fix an appointment – 'They nivir trysted with the like emergence before them tabled . . . ' [PR1714], 'Turn backward Carle Time wi' me Through twice ten years o' gloom, And tak' me to the trystin' tree Amang the yellow broom' [JT], to arrange for someone to perform a service at a specific time or place – 'Yeddie Kyle o' Hayknowe, wha can han'le the bow, Was trysted to play on the fiddle' [JoHa], to befall, afflict – '. . . as justly he deserved the severest punishment to be trysted with' [PR1717], to arrange at the same time, be coincident – 'The Treasurer could not attend this day the Session in the Manse by reason of some emergencie he was trysted with and could not evite' [PR1724].

the Tryst Grund (thu-trīst, -trist-grund) n. part of the Common used for the annual horse fair in the Autumn, being in the Thorterdykes, with an area of 1 acre and 31 poles, and also being referred to as 'Hawick Loanin' or 'the Green Gress'. The fair was established by the Magistrates in October in 1785. There was also a cattle fair established in the same year (in November), to encourage drovers to stop off in Hawick.

trystin (trīs-, tris-tin) adj., pres. part., arch. meeting, getting together, bargaining, agreeing – 'And voice calls to voice by the spirit mound Where the Burgess-Dead keep trysting-ground' [JYH].

Trystin Sike (trīs-, tris-tin-sīk) n. Trysting Sike, stream that rises on Kirk Hill and runs roughly south-east to join the Liddel Water near Thistlesike, south of Mangerton.

trystit (trris-tee', -ti') pp., poet. arranged to meet – 'The e'enin' stern has risen ayont auld Ruberslaw, An' I've trystit wi' my lassie to meet her i' the shaw' [JJ].

Trystside (trist-sīd) n. loop off Longhope Drive at the top of Crumhaughhill, constructed in 1980 and named for the area nearby that was used as a trysting place, in particular for a horse fair.

the T26 (thu-tee-toon'-ee-siks) n. former name for the A7, designated in the 1936 Trunk Roads Act. It was also known as the T7.

tuck (tuk) n., arch. a beat, bang, tap, especially on a drum (from Old French; see also tuck o the drum).

tuck o the drum (tuk-ō-thu-drum) n. a proclamation made by public crier using his drum – 'The officers are ordered to banish Elizabeth Miller . . . and ordained to discharge, by toucke of drum, all persons from harboring and resetting her' [BR1695], '. . . and ane proclamation to go through the towne at night, by tuck of drume, discharging all inhabitants wtin. the sd. towne eyr to resett or harbour them afterwards . . . A Cornet there's been wi' tuck o' the drum' [JEDM] (a familiar phrase in the 18th and 19th centuries).

the Tud (thu-tud) n. nickname for someone in the late 18th or early 19th centuries.

Tudhope see Tudhope Hill

Tudhope (tu-dup) n. farm just to the west of Jedburgh, presumably the origin of the surname. There is a holy well on the farm. 'Jhone off Towdop' is recorded in the Burgh Court Book of Selkirk in 1523 and 'William Tudhoip' in the following decade.

Tudhope (tu-dup) n. Adam (16th C.) recorded in Hermiston in 1580 when he witnessed a transaction between John Johntone of Hermiston and Patrick Johnstone. Adam (17th C.) tailor in Denholm. He married 'Gellan' (or Helen) Dryden in Cavers Parish, probably in about 1675. In about 1684 he and his wife were accused of attending conventicles. He may be the Adam who is listed as a resident at Ormiston in Cavers Parish in 1694. Adam (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Margaret Scott and their children included Adam (b.1694). Adam (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Janet Clerk there in 1699. He may have been brother of Thomas as well as Janet, who married John Douglas in Cavers in 1707. Adam (17th/18th C.) married Isabell Stewart in Bedrule Parish in 1716. Helen who married John Rutherford in Bedrule Parish in 1721, and Bessie who married William Mill in 1725 may have been his sisters. Adam (17th/18th C.) workman in Hawick Parish. He married Marion Oliver in Hawick in 1722. They had a daughter Isabel (b.1723), with baptismal witnesses carrier Robert Aitken and mason Robert Mein. Adam (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick. In 1798 he married Agnes Scott, who was from Westerkirk. Their son James was baptised in 1799. Alexander (17th/18th C.) recorded in Selkirk in 1702 in a case brought by John Turnbull for assault. Bailie Charles (18th C.) either brother or son of William, he was a merchant of Hawick and was Magistrate in the 1750s. He witnessed baptisms in 1741, 1742, 1743, 1745, 1747 and 1757, suggesting that he may have been an elder of the Kirk. A 'lybell' from him to someone in Selkirk in 1741 is preserved in the Walter Mason Collection. He was listed as a supplier of goods for the funeral of William Scott of Whitehaugh in 1750. He is listed among the subscribers to the reprinted Buchanan's 'History of Scotland' (1752). He was 'of Easter Howlands' when listed among the landowners involved in the court case over the division of Wilton Common, but sold the lands to John sharp in about 1763. David (15th/16th C.) recorded in the Selkirk Protocol Books for 1536. William Douglas allowed him to grow oats and pasture cattle on the meadow of Friarshaw for the rest of his life. He was presumably a former tenant of the Douglases of Friarshaw. He also witnessed transactions in the period 1538–42. In 1562 he was appointed as executor for Janet Scott (who appears to have been someone else's wife, rather than his). leaving him her goods and land in Peebles. Probably the same David was recorded in 1563 leasing part of the lands of Hermiston in Lilliesleaf Parish. Francis (18th/19th C.) paid the cart tax in Hawick in 1785–91. He was listed as a carrier on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls for Hawick. He is probably the Francis who in 1767 married Betty Miller from Roberton Parish. Their children were: John (b.1770); Walter (b.1772); Isabella (b.1774), who may have married Joseph Henderson in 1794; Beatrix (b.1779); and Janet (b.1781). The witnesses in 1772 were the whole congregation. He is probably the Francis who paid for the use of the Parish 'mortcloth' in 1773. Francis (1805–70) born in Hawick, son of John and Isabella Dryden. He married Margaret Nutter from London. In 1840 he was selected as a teacher at Grahamstown in the Cape Colony, and went out to South Africa with his wife and 3 young sons, John, James and Francis. Gavin (b.1807) son of John and Isabella Dryden. He married Janet Watson (from Galashiels) in Wilton Parish in 1832. He worked as a wool-spinner in Selkirk (according to the 1851 census), and had at least one child, Ann (b.1842). He was listed as a spinner at Damside among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1835. James (17th C.) named on a list of men suggested by the Hawick Bailie as fit to be sent to the war in Germany in 1627, specifically they were said to be 'fitter to be employed in his Majesties service nor to be suffered loyttering at hame'. While in Edinburgh Tolbooth he was among 7 of them who complained that they were not in fact the sorts of men who should be pressed into military service, but nevertheless were transported to the wars in Germany. James (17th C.) recorded as one of 3 men fined for the oats of Gilbert Watt (the Town Clerk) that their livestock ate in 1642. He may be the same James who was recorded in 1644 when his horse was valued at 40 merks when provided for the Covenanting army 'in case the horses come nocht back again or be lost'. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Scott, and their children, baptised in Hawick, included: Margaret (b.1642); William (b.1643); Alexander (b.1645); Walter (b.1647); Christian (b.1650); and William

(again, b.1652). James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen Clapperton and their son Robert was baptised in 1635. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Falla and their daughter Janet was baptised in 1639. The witnesses were Robert and Allan Deans. James (17th/18th C.) brother of Robert. He was called before the Hawick Session in 1717, but excused because he was 'att Newcastle upon his brother's service and business'. He could be the James listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick 'eist the water' in 1694. James (18th C.) married Margaret 'Badie' in Hawick Parish in 1726. James (18th C.) merchant in Hawick. He may be the James who (along with William) witnessed a baptism for Walter Scott of Burnfoot in 1723. In 1718 he married Agnes, sister to gardener Walter Turnbull. Their children included: Walter (b.1720); Janet (b.1723); William (b.1724); and Elizabeth (b.1729), who may have married Robert Balmour in 1762. The witnesses in 1723 were merchant William (who was surely related) and wright Robert Scott. James (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Marion (or May) Littlejohn and their children included: Charles (b.1737); and Agnes (b.1740). James (18th C.) Hawick resident who married Janet Palmer in 1758. Their daughter Helen was born in 1760. It is possible he was the same James who married Margaret Henderson a year later. He may be the deceased James whose daughter Helen died in Hawick in 1798. James (18th C.) carrier in Hawick. He married Margaret Henderson in 1761. Their children included: William (b.1762); Adam (b.1765), mother's Christian name given as 'Isabel'; John (b.1767); Adam (b.1769); Charles (b.1773); and Elspeth (b.1774). The witnesses in 1762 were possibly George Turnbull and Robert Young (but hard to read), in 1765 were smith Robert Young and carrier Robert Chisholme and in 1767 were Robert Leithead and another James Tudhope. He may be the James 'Tuleup' whose use of the Parish 'mortcloth' is recorded twice in 1773. He may be the James who in 1773 witnessed a baptism for miller John Scott. James (18th C.) married Janet Mason in Wilton Parish in 1767. James (18th C.) married Betty Davidson in Hawick in 1784. James (d.1797) paid the cart tax in Hawick in 1785–91. He was presumably a carrier, and the same as one of the contemporary Jameses, perhaps the carrier married to Margaret Henderson. He is probably the carrier whose son William died in 1797. His death is recorded in Hawick, where he is stated to be 'late Langholm Carrier'. James (b.1823) born in Hawick, probably son of Thomas. He was a tobacconist and china merchant at 10 Sandbed. In 1861 he lived with his sister Janet, and his housekeeper was Agnes Huggan. In 1868 he donated 2 silver coins and 13 copper coins to the Museum, as well as the Roxburghshire valuation rolls of 1811, and a fossil mussel in 1869 and a copper coin in 1873. John (17th C.) described as maltman in Cavers in a Hawick magistrates court case of 1642, when Douglas of Cavers' servant accused him and several other people of stealing his wallet in Hawick. John (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1661 he (along with Adam Ogilvie) witnessed a baptism for James E.... He married 'mellie' Cowan and their children included Adam (b.1661). The witnesses in 1661 were Adam Ogilvie and Thomas Scott. John (17th C.) wright in Hawick. In 1686 he was appointed, along with James Boyd, as 'marchers of the toune betwixt neighbour and neighbour annent the marching of yr. yards and gavell, being joyned to John Hardie, William Purdome, and William Paysley, who were former marchers'. Also in 1686 he was appointed, along with fellow wrights Robert Cowan and James Boyd, to examine the sled that John Barrie claimed had been stolen from him by George Renwick. In 1688 he and John Hardie were 'two ordinary sworne burleymen of the said town and brughe' appointed to mark out the boundary between adjacent lands at the east end of Hawick. He was listed among those contributing to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4 and was listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick 'eist the water' in 1694. He could be the John who married Isobell Huntly and whose children born in Hawick included Walter (b.1670), Margaret (b.1672), Marion (b.1677) and Jane (1679). John (17th C.) butcher in Hawick. In 1692 he was one of the butchers in Hawick who gave evidence that James Halliday was selling bad meat. He was listed as a flesher on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick 'eist the water' in 1694. He was also listed as a flesher among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He was listed as a flesher when he witnessed baptisms for wright Andrew Scott in 1704 and for merchant Andrew Turnbull in 1723. He married Helen Gilespie and their children included: Robert (b.1693); John (b.1696); and Alexander (b.1702). The witnesses in 1702 were miller James Paterson and Bailie Patrick Richardson. He witnessed a baptism in 1714 for shoemaker Robert Elliot and in 1716 for Thomas Waugh (along with fellow flesher Thomas Wilson). John (18th/19th C.) married Helen Lamb in Bedrule in 1704. Their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1705. John (18th C.) merchant in Selkirk. In 1733 his servant Isobel Wilson complained that someone had tried to drown her at the Cross Well in Selkirk. Probably the same John was recorded in Selkirk in 1717 and 1718, charged with debts and with assault in 1727 and in a further cases for his debts and against someone for non-payment of rent in 1736. It was probably his son who was the John 'younger' recorded when accused of assault in 1719 and a claim against debtors in 1720. John (18th C.) carrier in Hawick who married Isabel Ker. Their children included: Robert (b.1735); Andrew (b.1739); Francis (b.1742); and Walter (b.1744). The witnesses in 1744 were merchant John Ruecastle and William Scoon, servant to Rev. William Somerville; fellow carrier James Paterson and his wife Helen Ruecastle had a child baptised on the same day. John (b.c.1770) saddler in Hawick who was Cornet in 1798. He was listed on the ballot for the Militia in 1799, along with his apprentices Andrew Leggat and William Turnbull. He was still on the ballot in 1801. He could be the John, from Hawick, who is on the list of subscribers for Caw's 'Poetical Museum' in 1784. He may be the John who witnessed a baptism for Joseph Henderson and Isabel Tudhope in 1794 and the John who (along with Walter) witnessed another for the same couple in 1798. John (18th/19th C.) Hawick resident married to Isabel Dryden. His wife may have been the Isabel (b.1781), daughter of Gavin Dryden, born in Hobkirk Parish. Their children included: Francis (b.1805), teacher in South Africa; and Gavin (b.1807), who married Janet Watson. He may be the son of Francis baptised in Hawick in 1770. He is probably the John who, along with Walter (perhaps his brother) witnessed baptisms in 1798 and 1801 for Joseph Henderson and Isabel (perhaps his sister). He may be the same man as the saddler. Robert 'Hobbie' (16th/17th C.) resident of the Trows who was recorded in 1618 as witness to a sasine for the Kirklands of Cavers, including Crook. Robert (17th/18th C.) resident of Selkirk Parish. He married Margaret Wood and their children included: James (b.1698); Margaret (b.1700); John (b.1703); Robert (b.1705); Isabel (b.1708); and John (b.1710). Robert (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He was living at Raesknowe in 1704 and was herd at Over Southfield in 1709. He married Jean (or Janet) Scott and their children included Mary (b.1701), William (b.1704), Robert (b.1707) and John (b.1709). The witnesses in 1704 were John Graham (also in Raesknowe) and Robert Riddell in Allanhaugh Mill. Robert (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He was 'servant to Falnesh' in 1708. He married Esther Elliot and their daughter Marion was baptised in 1708, with witnesses Walter Nixon in Hawick Shiel and James Falsyde. Robert (18th C.) brother of James, mentioned in 1717. Possibly the same Robert was married to Helen Scott and had children: Helen (b.1727); Robert (b.1733); and Betty (b.1735). Robert (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Helen Ormiston and their children included Elspeth (b.1723). He could be the Robert who was the second Wilton Common herd, living at the house at Calaburn from about 1729. Robert (18th C.) Hawick resident married to Helen Hardie. Their children included: John (b.1730); Janet (b.1737), who may have married Robert Renwick in 1766; and Anne (b.1741). The witnesses in 1730 were John (who was surely related) and Walter .... He could be the flesher who witnessed baptisms for skinner John Currer in 1743 and 1745. This same flesher was involved in a pair of court cases in 1748, involving the payment of a debt by Robert Taylor to Thomas Turnbull, in which he was an intermediary. Robert (18th C.) married Margaret Davidson in Hawick in 1760. Robert (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1767 he married Jean, daughter of John Ekron and Jean 'Dinlap' (i.e. Dunlop); she died in 1775. He is probably the Robert who in 1768 witnessed a baptism for mason William Ekron (perhaps his brother-in-law). Robert (17th/18th C.) resident of Selkirk Parish. He is recorded in a complaint in Selkirk in 1787. He married Margaret Fairbairn and their children included: Alexander (b.1768); Nelly and John (b.1770); Robert (b.1773); and Margaret (b.1778). Perhaps the same Robert is recorded being in debt in documents of 1813, 1814 and 1817. Robert (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1777 he married Marion Pott, who was from Cavers Parish. Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He may have been brother of Adam and Janet. His children included: Marion (b.1699), who probably married Thomas Thomson in 1728; and Thomas (b.1706). Thomas 'Tammy' (18th/19th C.) trader in toys and other items at local fairs. He was long remembered in Denholm by a phrase repeated by children, 'Tammy Tudhope the toy-man!' and the cry 'The fair's begun, yonder's Tammie Tudhope'.

It is unclear where he came from. Thomas (b.1791/2) tobacconist at the Sandbed in Pigot's 1825/6 and 1837 directories and Slater's 1852 directory. He was probably part of the business marked 'Tudhope & Scott' on Wood's 1824 map. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 1825 'History of Hawick'. In 1841 he was listed on the Sandbed and at Teviot Square (probably about 10 Sandbed) in 1851, when he was listed as a master tobacco manufacturer, employing 1 man and 1 boy. His Sandbed shop was seriously affected in the 1846 flood, with the front counter being underwater and water bursting through the back door, forcing tobacco into the street. He married Isabel Murray in 1816 and their children included: Mary (b.1817), who may have married George Porteous in 1848; Elizabeth (b.1819), who probably married Robert Biggar in 1846; Agnes (b.1821), who may have married Joseph Park in 1845; James (b.1823); John (b.1825); Thomas (b.1831); Janet (b.1835); and William (b.1837). Perhaps the same Thomas was one of the original deacons of Hawick Free Kirk from 1844. Walter (17th C.) resident of Hawick, married to Marion 'Thor'. Their son John was born in 1634. Walter (18th C.) Hawick resident who married Janet Graham in 1722. She was daughter of Walter Graham (perhaps the Bailie) and died in 1777. Their children included: Walter (b.1727); William (b.1729); Jean (b.1732); and John (b.1737). The witnesses in 1729 were Bailie Graham and John Graham (probably his father-in-law and brother-in-law). He is probably the merchant who (along with merchant William) witnessed a baptism in 1722 for shoemaker William Tait. Walter (18th/19th C.) recorded being 'with Joseph Henderson brewer' in Hawick in 1797 on the list of men on the ballot to serve in the Militia. In 1799 he was among those 'In the Ballot Box 1797 not drawn still residing in Hawick parish' and he was still a brewer on the ballot in 1801. He and John (perhaps his brother) witnessed baptisms for Joseph Henderson and Isobel (perhaps his sister) in 1798 and 1801. He may be the Walter, son of Francis, who was baptised in Hawick in 1772. Widow (17th C.) listed among the subscribers for the new Kirk bell in 1693/4. It is unclear who her husband was. William (16th C.) farmer at Hallrule. 'William Tudopis duelling hous and yaird' are recorded in the 1562 Baronial dispute over the lands of Feu-Rule. Bailie William (18th C.) merchant in Hawick. He is recorded buying a bag of 'Irish happenies' from the Kirk Session about 1711 and becoming an elder in 1723. In 1717, 1723 and 1726 he witnessed baptisms for wright Richard Turnbull, with his surname being 'Thowdup' in 1726. He witnessed a baptism for carrier Thomas Porteous in 1720 and for merchant James Tudhope (surely a relative) in 1723. He is probably the merchant who (along with merchant Walter) witnessed a baptism in 1722 for shoemaker William Tait and the William who (along with James) witnessed a baptism for Walter Scott of Burnfoot in 1723. In 1726 he and Charles (presumably either his brother or young son) had a charter for the lands of Easter Howlands. In 1729 he witnessed a baptism for Thomas Huntly. He is probably the William who (along with Robert Boyd) witnessed baptisms for William Davidson and for Robert Ker in Hawick in 1731. He was also recorded as a merchant in 1732 when he witnessed a baptism for George Porteous. He was elected Magistrate in 1737, although Bailie Burn complained that many of the voters were his servants or were minors. He was Bailie in 1738 when plans started for the building of the Teviot Bridge. He witnessed a baptism for weaver David Miller and another for shoemaker George Gardner. He is probably the merchant William who witnessed the baptisms of children of Walter Tinlin and William Oliver in 1737. In 1743 he witnessed a baptism for druggist Gideon Scott and was 'late Bailie' in 1743 when he witnessed a baptism for shoemaker George Gardner. He paid tax for 19 windows in Hawick in 1748 and his lands in Wilton were valued at £25 in the 1740s. He was still mentioned in 1764 in connection with the lands of Easter Howlands, during the legal process for the division of Wilton Common. In 1716 he married Elizabeth (or Elspeth), daughter of Robert Scott in Drinkstone; she was sister of Walter in Wilton and cousin of William of Whitehaugh. Their children were: Walter (b.1717); Robert (b.1719); Charles (b.1722); James (b.1723); Anne (b.1725); May (b.1728); May (again, b.1730); and William (b.1732). The baptismal witnesses in 1723 were schoolmaster James Anderson and surgeon James Scott, in 1725 were James Anderson (again) and 'Tacksman' Robert Elliot, and in 1728 baptism were 'Mr. Anderson' and Robert 'Pote'. He is probably the William who was former owner of lands (in Wilton Parish) that George Hailburton owned in 1788, having been purchased from Langlands of that Ilk. William (18th C.) married to Isobel Riddell. Their daughter Anne was born in 1739. William (18th/19th C.) Hawick resident recorded as owner of a horse in the 1797

Horse Tax Rolls. He could be the 'Hair Merchant' who died in Hawick in 1808 and whose sister Janet died in 1811 (also spelled 'Toudhop', 'Toudhope', 'Towdop', 'Tudhop', 'Tudhoup', 'Tudop', 'Tudup', 'Tudwp', 'Tutob', 'Tutop', etc.).

Tudhope Hill (tu-dup-, -tup-hil) n. hill east of Mosspaul, between the Allan and Hermitage Waters, on the border between Roxburghshire and Dumfriesshire. It reaches a height of 599 m (1,961 ft) and is topped by a triangulation pillar. The hill was the location for one of the beacons in the network for warning of French invasion around 1800. A smaller peak, to the west, is called Little Tudhope Hill, and reaches 483 m (also sometimes just 'Tudhope' or 'the Tudhope' and occasionally 'Tudhope Fell'; there were several former spellings, e.g. it is 'Tutop' in 1839).

Tuesdi (tewz-, chewz-di) n. Tuesday. This is early closing day in Hawick, and traditionally the day for the mid-week Ride-outs (also spelled 'Tuesdih'; cf. the older Teisday).

the Tuesdi (thu-tewz-, -chewz-di) n. sometimes referring to the Tuesday of Common Riding week. There is a Chase in the morning. This is also usually the day when the Principals, preceded by singers and members of the Drums and Fifes, visit the local hospitals and old-folks homes.

tufflt (tu-ful') adj., poet. ruffled, entangled, mentally confused – 'But, sir, my brain hath been sae tufflt, An' my puir musie sae corfufflt' [JoHa].

Tufty (tuf-tee) n. nickname for John Wilson, Burgh officer from roughly the 1810s to 40s – '... And the folk o' Hawick were made aware By tuck o' Tufty's drum' [JCG]. Also a nickname for some members of the Thomson family, e.g. Tommy, Cornet in 1955.

tug (tug) n. a tangle in hair – 'what've ee din ti yer hair ti git they tugs in eet?', a tangle of chestnut strings.

the Tug-o-War Shield (thu-tug-ō-wawr-sheeld) n. trophy shield dating from 1911 which was presented annually at a tug-o-war contest held at the Vertish Hill Sports. The event was 'banned' by the Council around 1990 following concerns over safety.

tuilyie (tūl-yee) n., arch. a quarrel, struggle, turmoil – 'Tuilyie-wap, a childish amusement in Teviotdale, in which a number of boys take hold of each other's hands, and wrap themselves round one who is at the head; clasping themselves as firmly together as possible, and every one pushing till the mass falls over' [JoJ] (also written 'toolyie' and 'tulyie'; cf. tully and tulzie).

tuim (tim, tūm) adj., arch. empty, 'like a tuim mill' means speaking without hindrance – 'Thay war gaun on leike a tuim mill' [ECS], '... the teime a stane-nappin injin gaed-on leike a tuim mill' [ECS] (see also toom).

tuin (tin, tūn) v. to tune, n. a tune, melody – 'Oo leike the tuines at thay play on the Common-Reideen morneen' [ECS], 'An then hei sterted singin, tae git iz message throw, Tae the tin o' Pawkie Paitterson an a've tae tell a' yow' [MB], arch. mood, temperament, specifically in the phrase 'a bad tuin' – 'What's putten ee i sic a bad tuin, ava?; Aw'm shair ee've been ill-naiter's sel aa nicht' [ECS], '... was gey sair putten-tilt to get to his work in time, so he was in a bad tuin a' forenuin' [DH] (occasionally spelled 'tin').

tuiner (ti-nur) n. a tuner, particularly someone who services machinery in the knitwear industry (the 1882 and 1883 Cornets were power loom 'tuiners').

tuip (tip, tūp) n., arch. a male sheep, ram – 'I wull affer untill thee brunt-saacrifices o' fatlins, wi' the insense o' tips ...' [HSR], 'The mountans skiffet like tips, an' the wee hills like lams' [HSR], 'Kye an tuips an keilies an yowes' [ECS], v., arch. to mate a ram and ewe – 'A neater messin ne'er was tippet' [JR] (also written 'tip'; cf. the more modern tup).

tuip-eild (tūp-eeld) adj., arch. barren – 'A tuip-eeld yowe' [GW] (also written 'tup-eild', 'tup-yield', etc.).

tuith (tith, tūthe) n., arch. a tooth – '. . . the skeleton . . . 'was perfect, but gey frush, that his chaft blades were like the branks o' a cow, an' ilka tuth in his head as soond as a bell' ' [WNK], . . . Love's instinct fetched me tuith an' nail Ti be your dear' [WP].

tuithache (ti-theek) n. toothache – 'A'm no in guid fettel the day, A've got the tuithache' (often 'the tuithache'; also spelled 'tuitheek'; note the pronunciation; this compound word has survived longer than 'tuith' itself).

Tullie see Tully

Tulloch (tu-loch) n. John (19th C.) fishmonger at 30 High Street in the late 19th century. He was noted as a bass singer and was Precentor of Allars Kirk. He moved to Campbelltown in 1899. Thomas of Elliston (18th/19th C.) son of Robert of Bogton. He served as Deputy Lieutenant in Roxburghshire in 1797 and 1798.

Tullochgariac (tu-loch-ga-ree-ach) n., poet. word of uncertain meaning – 'Ye'll no forget to send an answer, An', harkye, Wattie, gie's a dancer, An' ootright Tullochgariac prancer, To mak me start' [JoHa].

Tully (tu-lee) n. Andrew (19th C.) married Elizabeth Hume in Southdean Parish in 1849. David (b.1787/8) local farmer, who gave his name to the phrase 'Tully's Mill' when he was dragged into the Slitrig at the Mill Port and had the upper half of his clothing torn off by the mob for being a Tory voter. This was during the election of 1837; 5 men were tried for mobbing and rioting and assault, against 7 victims. He may have been one of the Hawick men who went down to London to be witnesses in the investigation. The court document state that the mob 'did violently drag or force him to the side of the Slitrig River . . . ' forcing 'him off the bank into the said river, which was then in a swollen state, and of considerable depth, and did compel him the pass through to the other side of the river'. The family lived at the Millpath, in a house that was removed to make way for the railway. His wife was Janet, and their children included James and Janet. The death of a child of his is recorded in Hawick in 1824. In 1861 he was living at 25 High street with grandchildren Agnes Murray, David Murray, James Tully and Jessie Tully; he was then described as a farmer of 75 acres. He was one of only 11 residents of the Town who had been on the list for the Militia in 1803 and were still alive in 1862. George (b.c.1780) baker in Hawick according to the ballot for the Militia in 1801. James (18th/19th C.) servant at Lethem in Southdean Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. His surname is given as 'Toolie'. James (b.1816/7) son of David. In 1861 he was living at 17 Howegate and listed as a farmer of 30 acres. His wife was Margaret and their children included James and David. John (18th C.) married Martha Jackson in 1730, the marriage being recorded in both Wilton and Minto Parishes. John (18th/19th C.) Hawick resident who owned a horse according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. John (18th/19th C.) mason who was chosen as 'rebel' Cornet in the 'Disputed Common Riding' of 1809 in opposition to the Council's choice of John Kyle. The dispute was over new regulations regarding invitations to supporters. He was the second choice of the 'Wesla Water' group, after Henry Halliburton had declined. He rode the Common on the Friday, behind the 'royalist' Cornet, although he had more supporters. He also entered the Haugh, although with some obstruction – 'If you love your ancient freedom, Their new Cornet never heed him; From among you choose a Cornet, Hand it down to sons unborn yet' [JH], 'The Westla' Lads waur Rebels ca'd, John Tully led them on a yaud' [MB]. John (19th C.) married Janet Tully in Hawick in 1851. Margaret (17th C.) recorded in Ashkirk Parish in 1635. Isobel Scott in Synton Mill complained that she had called her a witch and a thief; she denied the first, but claimed she could prove that Scott had stolen money from Andrew Nichol. However, after several witnesses were called there was no proof of theft, and so she had to sit in the place of repentance 'in her linen sheitts, and to sit all the tyme of preaching', then ask the congregation for forgiveness. William (18th C.) local wigmaker immortalised in a rhyme – 'Robert Miles the barber, and Michael up the stair, Willie Tully makes the wigs, and Jenny buys the hair' [T] (also spelled 'Tullie' interchangeably in early times, as wall as 'Tulley').

Tully's Mill (tu-leez-mil) n., arch. term meaning rough treatment at the hands of a mob, or more specifically being thrown into the Slitrig at the Mill Port. The term came from David Tully, known as a Tory supporter, who received such treatment during the election of 1837. Similar treatment was common during the elections of the 1830s. David Waters wrote a facetious poem called 'Holy Tammie's Prayer, and thansgiving for his marvellous escape from 'Tully's Mill' at the late election', published in 1838 – '... he got 'Tully's Mill' in the Slitrig under the Tower Knowe bridge' [JTu] (also written 'Tuillie's Mill').

tully-wap (tu-lee-wawp) n., arch. a game involving a chain of children curling around a leader and then all falling down – 'Tuilyie-wap, a childish amusement in Teviotdale, in which a number of boys take hold of each other's hands, and wrap themselves round the one who is at the head; clasping themselves as firmly together as possible, and every one pushing till the mass fall over. From Tuilyie and Wap, to throw' [JoJ].

tulzie (tul-zee) n., arch. a quarrel, fight, struggle – 'If it was het, the langkail gully, Play'd smash amang't to end the tulzie' [JR], v. to quarrel, come to blows – 'Syne Tam an' Geordie had a bout, An' tulzied 'boot a hizzie' [JoHa] (see also tully and tuilyie).

tummelt (tu-mul') pp. tumbled – '... Whilk dang puir Yeddie's head agee, Till drunk he tummilt, An', as oor sacred authors gree, Life's garden bummilt' [JoHa], 'O! Mony's the mirry mile I've raiked, And mony a wainch in hey tummle't ...' [DH] (also written 'tummle't').

tummle (tu-mul) v. to tumble – '... Losh he wammelt and tumm'led ower on to the floor' [UB], 'Wha toss an' tum'le, waupit a' through ither, Until the grun' they tread on seems alive' [JoHa], 'Sweat, pech, an' stacher up Parnassus' brae, An' though thou tum'le, try't an' try't again' [JoHa], 'When a' the world looks cauld an' grey, An' a' things tum'lin under ...' [WP], '... Here they come at the spring-cleanin', Tummelin' oot o' the derk again ...' [DH], 'Syne aff frae his shouther'll tummle his pack ...' [WL], '... And crystal rivers tummle doon' [IWL], n. a tumble – 'hei took a right tummle doon they stair'.

tummle-car (tu-mul-kawr) n., arch. a kind of primitive box cart with wheels that revolved with the axle, and hence moved with a jolting motion – '... Roostit horseshoon, an queer wheel-rings O' tumle cars, The swords o' ancient knights an' kings, Lost i' their wars' [JoHa].

tundle (tun-dul) n., arch. tinder, especially in the phrase 'as dry as tundle' (also written 'tundl'; noted by E.C. Smith).

tundle-box (tun-dul-boks) n., arch. a tinderbox (noted by J. Jamieson).

Tungrig (tung-rig) n. farm probably in upper Liddesdale, recorded in 1613 and 1622, relating to branches of the Scotts.

the Tunnel (thu-tu-nul) n. name used in the 19th century for a long, dark close leading to Backdamgate from around 12 or 14 High Street. It contained several badly illuminated houses and was demolished around 1857 when the Royal Bank was built.

the Tunnel (thu-tu-nul) n. epithet for the road between Hawick and Langholm, referring to the steep pass between upper Teviotdale and upper Ewesdale.

Tunno (tu-nō) n. Andrew (16th/17th C.) notary in Melrose. In 1612 he is recorded as schoolmaster in Melrose. He is recorded in making an extract of the 1615 sasine of Robert Scott of Alton from Gilbert Watt's Protocal Book, with the precise date is unknown. He is listed as procurator for some cases in the records of the Regality of Melrose in 1638–51. In 1642 his son Andrew is mentioned as a witness in Melrose and by the late 1640s was 'younger' and already a writer. His son was probably Town Clerk of Hawick (unless this was in fact him, rather than his son). Andrew (17th C.) Town Clerk of Hawick. It seems reasonable to presume that this man was son of the Melrose notary, who was described as a student in Melrose in 1642, and already a writer in 1643. In 1659 he is described as 'notary in Melrose, now at Hawick', in a bond referred to in a complaint against his tenant. He served as Town Clerk of Hawick 1659–70. In 1670 a case was raised against him by Walter Scott of Goldielands in the Melrose court of Regality (in which he is described as 'portioner of Melrose'), complaining that he held the 'protocol book' of Gilbert Watt, notary, which contained 2 instruments of sasine relating to succession of the lands of Goldielands. He agreed to make copies, although they do not appear to have survived. Christian (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when listed on the Hearth Tax roll among 'ye poor'. Men and women are listed, and so it is unclear if this was a male or female name. William (17th C.) servitor of Walter Scott, Earl of Buccleuch. He witnessed the Earl's last will and testament in 1633 (this could be the same as the surname 'Tunnock').

Tunnock (tu-nok) n. John (d.c.1407) Rector of Henderland in the Yarrow valley from 1393/4. It was stated that he held the church through lay patronage, suggesting a connection to the Cockburns. He still held the Church of Henderland in 1403, when he was perhaps at the papal court. It is unclear if he was related to Nicholas. Nicholas (b.c.1390) priest of Aberdeen Diocese who was educated in Paris. He was B.A. in 1409 and M.A. in 1410. He was a notary in Elgin in 1414 and Aberdeen 1414/5. He had several permissions to hold 2 benefices in the period 1419–22. He held the Church of Forvie (near Slains) from at least 1419 until perhaps 1426. He was granted a canonry in Aberdeen in about 1421, holding the Prebendary of Kirkmichael in Ross in 1421 and becoming Dean of Aberdeen in 1422. However, he was also in litigation with Thomas de Greenlaw over a benefice at about this time. He visited the Papal court in at least 1422 and 1426/7. There was a dispute over the Deanship and pension with several others for the next few years; this included Edward Lauder and James Scrimgeour, with Bishop Henry Wardlaw additionally involved. In 1429 he was given the Rectory of Lilliesleaf, which had been vacated by Michael Ochiltree, but he died soon after wards, with the Rectory being granted to William Spalding in 1430.

Tunny (tu-nee) n. James Good (d.1887) proprietor of the photography business J.G. Tunny & Co., which continued long after his death. The company had several studios in Edinburgh and also opened one at 47 High Street Hawick in the period 1903–06.

tup (tup) n. a ram, male sheep – 'The skulls o' elk-deer, bisons, tups, Fund i' the mosses . . . ' [JoHa], 'A large and powerful tup turned on Jock and attacked him' [RM], 'I'm no acquaint wi' mealy pows; I was brought up wi' tups and ewes . . . ' [JR], ' 'Let's awa' and see the tups', is the unvaryong watchword on the 'wild green links' of 'The Dales' ' [HHD], 'Your credit with us rises up each time you turn a stubborn tup . . . ' [TD] (this was formerly tuip).

tup-eild see tuip-eeld

the Tup Fair (thu-tup-fār) n. name sometimes used for Hawick's main 'tup' market, held on September 20th and 21st during parts of the 18th and 19th centuries. It was also for a while a major lamb fair.

Tup Knowes (tup-nowz) n. former name for lands near Hawick. They are mentioned among lost placenames by James Wilson in 1850, and may be part of the old Common.

tur (tur) v., arch. to turf, cover with turf – '. . . that every inhabitant within the brughe shall have liberty to tur and theik, and sett ane ladder in his neighbour's close' [BR1660].

turbleent (tur-bleen') n., arch. a sudden gust of wind, turbulence – 'Yeh gowsty nicht (wui a wund fit ti blaw doors oot at wundihs) a turbleent woare as the ordnar dang doon the firrst Peinelheuch Moniment' [ECS] (also 'turbleen' and 'turblin'; from the Mediæval English and Old French).

the Turf Hotel (thu-turf-hō-tel) n. former hotel at Langburnshiels, offering food, drink and accommodation to travellers. It was opened by Mr. MacDonald in early 1860. Later that year the guests and proprietor were attacked by a gang of navvies and there was an even worse riot on St. Patrick's Day 1862. It is unclear how long the hotel operated.

turfs (turfs) n., pl., arch. pieces of sod, used for fuel or building material – '. . . and there was a strife about casting of these turfs, and Langlands did not get them, for Harden caused burn them where they were casten' [DCW1765].

Turie (too-ree) n. name for former lands on the Stobs estate. It is listed in 1657, between Horselee and Acreknowe, although the location is unknown.

Turk's Close (turkz-klōs) n. popular name in the 19th century for a passageway between 58 and 60 High Street, home of the 'Turks'. This was a nickname of long standing for John Scott and his family.

the Turk's Halfpenny (thu-turkz-hāp-nee) n. name for a temporary trade union in Hawick, instigated as the result of John Scott ('the Turk') reducing the price of men's hose by 6 pence per dozen (or a halfpenny each) in 1817 The stockingmakers of the Town levied 6 pence on each man and used the funds to try to fight the imposition of wage reductions. James Hogg (of 'Teribus'), James Scott and others were arrested and spent several days in Jedburgh Jail before the employer yielded. The resulting celebration inspired James Hogg to recite the following verse: 'See my dear comrades, turned to ashes, The cursed page that once did fash us, And bear in mind, we once did wish Our persecutors just like this; But innocence should aye get clear – Our bonds are dead and we are here'.

Turlenbrae (tur-lin-brā) n. former farmstead in Wilton Parish, probably near Coldhouse and Whitfield, according to its entry on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. John Henderson was tenant at that time (it is possible this is an error for some other place).

turn (turn) v. to become, grow – 'Him and mei turned fast freends and Aw hev him in New York now . . . ' [JEDM], 'Ee're denner's turnin caald' [ECS], (more common than in standard English, and often with the participle coming after the noun; see also turnt).

turn (turn) n. the middle of something, particularly a night – '. . . the turn o the nicht' [ECS], the act or process of changing – '. . . a turn for the better; . . . the turn o the eer' [ECS], a bout of illness, especially in the phrase 'a bad turn', a favour – '. . . ee've duine iz a guid turn wui that' [ECS], a walk, stroll – 'A'm duist oot for a bit turn afore A gaan ti bed' [ECS] (these senses all more common than in standard English).

Turn (turn) n. former name of a farm near Stobs, roughly between Woodfoot Cottage and Railway Cottages. It could be the 'turni' where James Crozier was located in 1494/5. It is probably the 'Torne' listed along with 'Wenerton' and 'Fowlerawe' as farms on the Slitrig belonging to the Laird of Gledstains, which were burned by the English in 1547/8. It was among the lands of Winnington purchased by Gilbert Eliott of Stobs from Robert Elliot of Redheugh in 1622. It was still listed as part of the Barony of Winnington at the end of the 17th century. It was among lands whose superiority was inherited by daughters of George Scott (brother of Sir Walter of Whitslade) in 1670. William Turnbull was there in 1708 and James Nichol in 1720. George Fletcher was tenant there in the 1750s. When a valuation of the separate lands in the Stobs estate was made in 1779 an entry read 'Part of Te-ourn or Turn, possessed by William Elliot and Robert Potts in 1779', valued at £178 5s 5d, with the other part being Smithfieldhaugh and valued at £15 10s. Walter Paterson was a slater there in 1797, John Scott was a servant there in 1799and Richard Tinlin in 1801. In the 1811 Land Tax Rolls, Sir William Eliott of Stobs owned part of 'Te-ourn, or Turn', a small part of which was called Smithfieldhaugh'; together they were still valued at about £194. It was also referred to as 'Acreknowe Turn' and housed 2 separate families until about the early 1900s (also written 'Turne'; it is marked as 'Turns' on Blaeu's 1654 map and still there on Stobie's 1770 map; it is clearly marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map, but there is no sign of it today).

the Turn Again Stane (thu-turn-a-gān-stān) n. standing stone on the farm of Kaeside, overlooking Tweedbank, traditionally said to have been erected to commemorate the place where Elliot turned and speared Ker of Cessford to death at the battle of Skirmish Feild in 1526. In fact the stone lies beside an ancient pathway, and probably predates the 16th century.

Turnbull (turn-bul, tru-mul) n. Adam of Whithope (14th/15th C.) recorded in 1390 as a witness to the charter by John Turnbull of Minto, granting Minto to Sir William Stewart of Jedburgh. In a charter of 1409 he was 'ade turnebule de quithope' (i.e. Whithope) when his son John was granted lands at Hassendeanbank. Adam of Fulton (14th C.) listed among the witnesses to the 1390 charter where John Turnbull of Minto granted Minto to William Stewart of Jedburgh. Adam (15th C.) listed as one of the witnesses to the sasine giving the Barony of Cavers and Sheriffdom of Roxburghshire to William Douglas in 1432. It is unclear how he was related to other contemporary Turnbulls, but John of Bedrule and William of Hassendeanbank are also listed. He may be the Adam who witnessed a charter for lands in Sprouston in 1433/4, Adam of Wauchope (15th C.) described as 'Adam de Walchhop' (and listed after several Turnbulls) when part of an inquest into lands in Jedburgh in 1440. He may be the same Adam who was witness to a charter for Thomas Cranston being granted part of Sprouston in 1446 and who was also on a 'retour' panel for Ker of Altonburn in 1446/7. Adam (15th C.) granted the lands of Greenwood in 1439 by charter of James II. These lands had previously been held by Walter Dalgleish of Greenwood and are probably the same as Girnwood on the Borthwick Water. He was probably father or grandfather of Thomas of Greenwood, recorded in 1488, and also related to the Turnbulls of Minto. Adam (15th C.) recorded as 'Ade' in 1471 when he and George Cranston had remission for 2 'schelis' in Ettrick Forest. Adam of Philiphaugh (15th C.) recorded in 1484 when James Turnbull claimed compensation from him for disturbing him in his lands of Westfield and spoliation of his cow at his lands of Kirkhope. At the Justice-aire held in Selkirk in 1502 he was probably the 'Adam turnbull dominus de quhitlaw' (likely an error for 'Whithope') who was fined for failing to give suit for his lands of Philiphaugh. In 1503 he was 'de philiphalche' when he presented Ronald (probably a relative) to the court in Selkirk as suitor for his lands of Philiphaugh. In 1504 he was among a number of men who had remission for any involvement in the slaughter of Thomas Rutherford in Jedburgh Abbey. He is listed right after Mark, who may have been related, and before his son and heir William, followed by James in Kirkhope and James in Gargunnock. He is also listed in the 1506 remission for the same crime. His son and heir William is also recorded in 1504 as a procurator for Helen Rutherford, heiress to Rutherford of that Ilk. Probably the same Adam of Philiphaugh was on the panel for Adam Hepburn inheriting Alemoor in 1509. Janet, who was granted a charter for part of Philiphaugh in 1509 was surely related to him, as well as Ralph, who held the same third of Philiphaugh shortly afterwards. Adam (d.bef. 1509) resident of Hornshole recorded at the 1493 Justice-aire held in Jedburgh. He was allowed to 'compone' for several crimes, specifically: stealing 2 bolls of barley, a horse, linens and sheets and diverse tools from John and Thomas Young of Minto; stealing 'catallorum' from Katherine Stewart from Minto; common theft and pillage; stealing 36 ewes from the Murrays in Sundhope; stealing 56 ells of cloth and 2 horses from Lauder; stealing 40 sheep from Philiphaugh; and stealing 12 sheep from Thomas Williamson from the Kirkland of Wilton. Additionally he and Walter, also in Hornshole, were allowed to compone for a series of other crimes: stealing livestock from 3 separate men in Minto; bringing in Englishmen from Tynedale to plunder Minto; and for common theft. Their surety was Robert Scott of Howpasley. In 1494/5 he had remission for several related crimes: stealing sheep, cows and a horse from John Sinton in Synton, in the company of James Elliot; stealing further horses from Torwoodlee, Fairnilee and Lauder; stealing sheep from Glenrath; stealing an ox from Heartside and 'chattels' from Hugh Douglas; stealing cattle from Katherine Stewart in Minto; bringing in men from Tynedale to plunder from Thomas Wilkinson; and for common theft and delivery of stolen goods. His surety was Walter Scott of Howpasley. He was also described as 'in Hornshole' (i.e. tenant there) in 1502 when he was indicted for stealing 200 oxen and 80 horses from James Newton, tenant of Synton. David Scott (called 'the Lady') tenant of Stirches was involved in the same or a similar incident at Synton. Later in 1502 he was 'in Hornishole, now in chalmerlane newtoun' when he had remission for a series of crimes: stealing 80 sheep from Broadmeadows (probably also involving David 'the Lady' Scott in Stirches); bringing in Englishman Sir John Musgrave; stealing 2 horses from Lauder; stealing 3 oxen and a cow from Muircleuch; stealing 4 cattle from Hermiston; stealing 7 cows from Whitmuir; stealing 160 sheep from Hundleshope'; stealing 25 sheep from George Bonnington; stealing 28 sheep from the 'cauldschelhous'; stealing 30 sheep from Philiphaugh; stealing 100 sheep from William Turnbull at Oakwood; stealing 60 sheep from Cauldshiels; bringing in Archibald and Ninian Armstrong to raid Synton, stealing 200 cattle and 80 horses from James Newton there; and stealing 17 cows, 2 horses, 100 sheep, a doublet, a sword and 40 shillings from St. Leonard's Hospital near Peebles. James Newton in Synton and Walter Scott of Howpasley were sureties for him and Walter (son of Walter Scott of Headshaw) appears to have been involved in 2 of the same incidents. Musgrave's men burned Selkirk and stole 1000 merks worth of goods from the inhabitants; he also had remission for his role in this raid; George of Hallrule and Bartholomew in Rawflat acted as sureties for him. Also in 1502 he may be the Adam 'de natoun' (perhaps Newton) who was surety, along with several other Turnbull chiefs, for Margaret in Hawick, who was convicted of theft and resetting thieves. In 1509 Andrew Crozier was hanged for several crimes, including his murder, along with the murder of another Adam, called 'Gabirlenzeis'. There are no details given for the events leading to his death. He may be an ancestor of later Turnbulls who were tenants of Hornshole. He may be the 'Ade Trumbull' listed in the Exchequer Rolls in 1501, along with David and Robert, when they were fined, with George Douglas, Master of Angus responsible for their pledges. Adam (15th C.) member of the panel for the inheritance of the lands of Branxholme and Buccleuch in 1492. He may be the same as one of the other contemporary Adams.

Adam 'Gaberlunzie' (d.bef. 1509) killed along with Adam in Chamberlain Newton (so they may have been related). Andrew Crozier was hanged in 1509 for this and other crimes. No information is given about this incident and no clues as to the reason for his nickname, which is recorded as 'Gabirlenzies'. He was surely related to Walter, 'gabirlenze'. Adam (15th/16th C.) son of William. He was listed in the Exchequer Rolls in 1501 among mostly local men who had been fined. The other 15 men listed were mostly from the area immediately around Hawick. Note that there was also a separate Adam listed, but neither had another designation, and so it is impossible to know if they were the same as any of the other contemporary Adam's. Adam (15th/16th C.) witness to the notorial instrument of 1501/2 for the Kerrs of Ferniehirst, relating to their lands of Feu-Rule in the Barony of Cavers. It is unclear if he was the same as one of the other contemporary Adams. Adam (15th/16th C.) son of Walter in Stouslie. In 1502 William in Crumhaugh was surety for him at the Justice-aire, and was fined for his non-appearance. Adam (15th/16th C.) recorded among the men who were put to the horn in 1502 for involvement in the murder of Robert Oliver. The person called to enter him was Mark Ker of Dolphinton, George of Hallrule, while John in Wells was also listed and so surely related. Adam (15th/16th C.) described as 'of Billerwell' in 1502. In 1502 he was 'de bullirwell' when he was fined for failing to produce Ninian in court among a group of men charged with the murder if Robert Oliver. Also in 1502 he served as surety for Peter Turnbull in Bonchester. In 1506 he had remission for 'resetting, supplying and intercommuning' with William Turnbull of Minto, as well as with his accomplices, the rebels Mark, Edward and Walter Turnbull. In 1508 he was on the panel for Adam Hepburn inheriting the Lordship of Liddesdale; he was there recorded as being 'in Bullerwell'. George Turnbull was Laird of Billerwell in 1589, so presumably a descendant. Adam (15th/16th C.) listed as tenant of Fulton in 1516, along with George and Andrew (hence possibly his brothers). They were among Turnbulls to receive remission for their part in assisting Alexander, Lord Home. Adam (15th/16th C.) tenant in Wolfelee who was listed among the many Turnbulls given remission in 1516 for assisting the traitorous Homes; James was also listed there as tenants of 'Wolfley', and so may have been related. Adam (d.bef. 1532) killed along with Thomas Dalgleish, when a group led by Clem Crozier, Martin Crozier, Hob Elliot of Ramsiegill, Sym Forester and Johnnie Forester from Liddesdale raided 'within the boundis of Teviotdale'. He may be the same as one of the other Thomases. Adam (16th C.) listed along with Gavin in 1534 when they were entered into ward in Blackness Castle, with Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme being discharged of the bond he had made to the King for their good behaviour. It seems likely they were either father and son or brothers (with his name given first), but it is not clear where they were from exactly (the names match the Turnbulls of Billerwell, for example). Adam (16th C.) recorded in 1552/3 as 'Adam Trumbull of Woulie' when he had a bond with John Ker of Ferniehirst and others to remain within Jedforest. He is probably the Adam who was tenant in Wolfelee (along with Walter) when listed among many Borders men in the remission of 1526 for riding against the Earl of Arran. Probably the same Adam signed a bond in 1557 (along with others) with John Kerr of Ferniehirst to bring in William Nixon; he is there recorded as 'Adam Trumbill in Wolvlie'. Adam of Billerwell (16th C.) signed a bond in 1557 with Sir John Kerr of Ferniehirst, to bring in the thief William Nixon. Probably the same Adam of 'Bullerwell' is recorded in 1571 when he had to appear before the Privy Council and was warded. In 1576 he was recorded among a group of Turnbulls and others (from Barnhills, Howden, Belses and Chesters) who had a bond with another group of Turnbulls (from Minto, Bewlie, Kames and Troneyhill) and others, not to harm each other. He may be the same 'Adam Trumbill of Billirwall' who was part of the 'pacification' granted by the King to Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst and his friends and servants in 1581. He must have been related to the Adam recorded a couple of decades later. Adam (16th C.) tenant in Westwood. He is recorded in 1567 among men who Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst had to present to answer accusations of raiding into England. He could be related to the later Lairds of Westwood. Adam (16th C.) son of Sandy. He was recorded in 1567, along with Hector 'in Turnbull' (which seems likely to be a transcription error), brother to George, as well as 'Isobel's Robin', 'Part Pursell' and 2 Olivers. David Home of Wedderburn was instructed to enter them to answer charges of raiding into England. Adam (d.bef. 1578) recorded as 'in Belsis' when he witnessed a charter in 1549, hence he was presumably tenant of Belses. The charter was for

Robert Scott of Howpasley granting Appletreehall to Hector, brother of David Turnbull of Wauchope. In 1576 he was recorded among a group of Turnbulls and others (from Barnhills, Howden, Hallrule, Billerwell and Chesters) who had a bond with another group of Turnbulls (from Minto, Bewlie, Kames and Troneyhill), not to harm each other. Also in 1576 there was a pledge made before the Privy Council, that his sons 'Hekie', David, George and John would refrain from thieving. In 1576/7 his servant Patrick Bennet was attacked by Walter in Firth, servant of John of Minto (despite the bond that had been signed between the feuding Turnbull branches); his son Hector was also mentioned, with the pair appearing personally. His sons were all declared fugitives in 1578/9. Hector is recorded in 1580 having a brother-in-law called Patrick Richardson, and so presumably this was the husband of one of his daughters. Adam (16th C.) described as a 'clerk' at Hallrule in 1562, when his house and yard were part of the Baronial land dispute in Feu-Rule. The Adam of half a century later must be a descendant. Adam of 'Yaton Scott' (16th C.) listed in 1581 among 10 men accused of the murder of Walter, son of Wat Turnbull of Bewlie. Andrew was also listed as being at the same location, and although it is unclear where this was, most of the others were Turnbulls of Rulewater. Adam 'Reid Adie' (16th C.) tenant in Over Hassendean. He is recorded in 1576 when Sir Thomas of Bedrule was surety for him, promising that he would refrain from theft; the pledge was stated to have been broken in 1578/9. He is also recorded in 1583/4 among men of that area cited for failing to appear to give evidence relating to charges against sons of Sir Thomas of Bedrule. Adam (16th/17th C.) son of Stephen, from whom he inherited the right of rental of the lands of 'Wowlie and Wowahoplie' (i.e. 'Wolfelee' and 'Wolfehopelee') in 1590. He resigned the rental in favour of Sir William Cranston in 1607. In 1616 he was witness to a bond between William Scott of Todrig and Mark, son of Hector Turnbull in Hartshaugh, where he is referred to as Adam 'called of the Wowly'. He was surely related to the Adam in Woollee of the 1550s. Adam (16th/17th C.) referred to as 'sumtyme servand to the said Walter Trumbill of Raflat' in the 1603 trial of George Turnbull of Belses. George was accused of killing a son of Walter of Rawflat, and shooting another son, and also of capturing him 'binding him with fetteris, and hinging him be the feit and schouderis, ouer ane balk [beam], for the space of xij [12] dayis, quhairthrow his feit rottit fra him'. What became of him is unrecorded. Probably the same Adam, servant to Walter Turnbull of Rawflat was accused by the widow of Mark Turnbull of Nether Bonchester in 1617 of burning the 'writs and evidents' of the lands there, as part of harassment of her by Walter of Rawflat. It is possible he was the brother of David in Belses (with other brothers George and John) recorded in 1581 and 1583, when they were accused of attacking the farm of Rawflat. He could also be the brother of 'Geordie in Belseis' listed in 1586/7 among Borderers accused of crimes who had failed to appear in court and were given one more chance to find sureties. Adam (16th/17th C.) tenant of Wauchope in Rulewater, recorded in a court case of 1605. He may have been related to the George who was also a tenant there, and perhaps more distantly related to the Turnbulls of Wauchope themselves. Adam of Billerwell (16th/17th C.) one of the members of an inquest of 1610 to judge the proper succession to James Hamilton's lands of Appotside and Tythehouse. In 1619 he had a bond, along with his son George, with John Haliburton of Mertoun, and this was witnessed by 'my brother' Andrew Turnbull. His son George was witness to a sasine of 1612. Probably the same Adam 'in Bullerwall' was one of the men accused in 1606 of raiding and burning Appotside and Harwood in 1598–1605, when his brother Andrew was also listed; both were 'past fra', i.e. the case was not pursued. He then served as surety for the other Turnbulls. In 1617 he was transcribed being 'of Bullereule [Bedreule]' when complained about along with his eldest son George at the Privy Council; it seems more likely this was Billerwell than Bedrule. John Ainslie, maltman in Jedburgh, complained that he still owed him money and should be apprehended. Adam of Abbotrule (16th/17th C.) involved in a dispute in 1610, where Andrew Turnbull acused him and others of grazing their animals on his lands at Stonedge and Harwoodtown. He is probably the Adam, called 'of Tounheid of Abbotreull', who had a bond with Walter of Bedrule in 1617/8. He had a bond with John, son of Walter Scott of Chamberlain Newton, signed in Hawick in 1619 and registered in 1624. Adam (16th/17th C.) recorded as 'in Bonechester tounhead' (i.e. Bonchester Townhead) in 1618 when he witnessed a bond between Walter of Bedrule and Adam of Abbotrule Townhead. In 1619 he had a bond with 'his good friend, Walter Lorane in Gattascot'. He may be the 'Adam Trumble, called the As [presumably Ass], in Bunchester' who in 1619 was among a group of more than 100 men under John Ker of Langnewton who Sir Andrew Ker of Oxnam complained had broken up and stolen turfs cut for his use on Oxnam Moor (or the man listed as 'Ninian's Adie' or the one just listed as Adam). Perhaps the same Adam is recorded being in '... head', among Bonchester landowners, in the 1643 valuation for Abbotrule Parish; his lands were valued at £25. Adam 'Ninian's Adie' (16th/17th C.) listed in 1619 among a group of more than 100 men under John Ker of Langnewton who Sir Andrew Ker of Oxnam complained had broken up and stolen turfs cut for his use on Oxnam Moor. His name was given as 'Ninian's Ady' (so his father was Roland) among several Turnbulls from Bonchester. Adam 'Adie' (16th/17th C.) son of Thomas of Hartshaugh, the Kirklands and Swanshiel. However, there may have been other Adams in the same family (uncles and cousins) at the same time, so it is uncertain this is all the same man. He could be the Adam recorded in Hartshaugh in 1619 among a group of more than 100 men (including Hector in Hartshaugh) under John Ker of Langnewton who Sir Andrew Ker of Oxnam complained had broken up and stolen turfs cut for his use on Oxnam Moor. In 1623 he was served heir to his grandfather Hector of Hartshaugh in the lands of 'Viccarislandis' (i.e. Kirklands) in Hobkirk, as well as Wester Swanshiel and 'Clerksbankis'. He is recorded as 'in Hartshaugh' in the Circuit Court of 1622 when (along with another Adam Turnbull!) he was caution for James Turnbull of Braidhaugh, who was found guilty of stealing 24 sheep from 'Hairlesyd'. In 1623 he was recorded as the miller 'in Hartshauchmylne' when Lyle Turnbull gave security for him and when he was acquitted of stealing cattle from Gilbert Eliott's land at 'Leisburne'. It is unclear when he succeeded his father in the lands that had been in the family for many generations. However, it appears that he neglected to 'enter' with his superior and so in 1630 he lost Hartshaugh and the Kirklands of Hobkirk (to Gilbert Eliott of Stobs), although he held on to Wester Swanshiel. He is still recorded as owner of Wester Swanshiel in 1643, when it was valued at £32 10s; he may also have been the Adam 'in Swansheil' who was tenant in the other part of Swanshiel, valued at £66 13s 4d. It is likely he is the same Adam recorded in Easter Swanshiel and Wester Swanshiel on the 1663 Land Tax Rolls (even although he may have been deceased by then). Adam (17th C.) recorded in 1643 along with David as owner of land in Abbotrule valued at £30. This was probably part of Bonchester Townhead, where a separate Adam, as well as William, also lived. Adam 'Clerk' (17th C.) tenant in Bonchester according to the 1643 county valuation. His lands were valued at £25. He was distinct from the 2 Adams recorded at Bonchester Townhead, but could be the same as the Adam recorded in Hobkirk Parish in 1663. He could be related to Thomas 'called Clack' who is recorded as a landowner in Abbotrule in 1663. Adam (17th C.) tenant in Ruletownhead along with Walter in 1643. The lands were valued at £140. Adam of Ruletownfoot (17th C.) recorded in 1643 in the valuation of Abbotrule Parish. His lands were valued at £10. Adam (17th C.) listed in the 1643 county valuation, with his lands in Raperlaw being valued at £104. He may have been related to Walter and William who also held Raperlaw lands at the same time. Adam (17th C.) recorded on the Land Tax Rolls for Hobkirk Parish in about 1663. Although difficult to transcribe it appears that he also paid for his part of Hallrule in 1663. Perhaps the same Adam 'in Roull' was listed on the 1663 Land Tax Rolls for Abbotrule Parish when he paid tax on £70. Adam (17th C.) resident of Hawick in 1673 when a woman was fined for telling him to hang himself and calling him 'ane land loppon lowne'. Adam (17th C.) tenant in Nether Tofts. His will and that of his wife, Margaret Douglas, are recorded in 1682. Adam (17th C.) tenant in Hawthornside. In 1678 he paid tax on £40 at Hawthornside. In 1684 his son (whose name is not legibile or recorded) was listed among people declared as fugitives for attending field conventicles. The will of his wife Isobel Shiel is recorded in 1688. Adam (17th C.) tenant in Elfhaugh in Abbotrule Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Adam (17th C.) tailor listed among those who subscribed to the fund for the new Kirk bell in Hawick in 1693/4. He is probably the resident of the west-side of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. He could be the Adam married to Jane Turnbull, whose children baptised in Hawick included: Janet (b.1670); Thomas (b.1673); Robert (b.1681); Michael (b.1683); and Agnes (b.1687). Adam (1653/4–1732) son of William of Bonchester. He was tenant farmer at Doorpool. He married Margaret Turnbull, who died in 1731, aged 75. His only daughter Helen married Walter Scott, 4th Laird of Nether Bonchester. Along with his father and wife, he was buried in Abbotrule Kirkyard. Adam (d.1716) merchant at the Westport in Hawick. He witnessed a baptism for wright George Haliburton in 1704. He married Margaret Scott and their children included Bessie (b.1701) and Elspeth (b.1704). The witnesses in 1704 were carrier Andrew Clerk and innkeeper Francis Elliot. Probably the same merchant Adam married Janet Rae in Hawick in 1714. In 1716 his widow presented their son Adam for baptism in Hawick, with witnesses 'student' Patrick Cunningham and Beadle Walter Scott. Adam (17th/18th C.) tenant in Hassendeanbank. He may have been son of William of Cockerheugh. He was succeeded in the tenancy by his son James and then his grandson, who was also Adam. Adam (17th/18th C.) maried Janet Rae in Hawick in 1714. Adam (17th/18th C.) maried Helen Nichol in Minto in 1716. Adam (17th/18th C.) miller at Mangerton Mill. His children included: Christian (1718/9–35); and John (1723/4–45). Andrew, who was also miller at Mangerton Mill, was probably also his son. They are buried at Ettleton. Adam of Denesyde (17th/18th C.) last Turnbull Laird of Denesyde (also called 'Nether Hawthornside'). He is said to have been a Jacobite supporter in the rebellion of 1715, probably accompanying William Kerr ('Bitterbeard') in fighting with the Old Pretender. As a consequence he was encouraged to leave (or possibly run out of) the area by Sir Gilbert Eliott of Stobs, who bought up all the 'wadsets' which the estate was under and advised him to leave the country. Eliott agreed to keep 'St. Mary's Well' as a roadside watering place, and also gave him some money for his journey. He went south with his family, first to Tarsetfoot in Tyneside. His son Thomas was a weaver there, but some of his grandchildren returned to the local area. He may be the same Adam of Hawthornside whose son (first name not given) was among those listed as fugitives in 1684 for refusing to conform to Episcopalianism. Adam (18th C.) mason in Hawick. In 1745 he witnessed a baptism for shoemaker George Oliver. Adam (18th C.) resident of Kilnknowe. His wife Christian Lorraine died in 1762 and was buried in Hobkirk Cemetery. Adam (d.bef. 1769) Schoolmaster at Abbotrule, recorded as deceased in 1769 when his daughter Elizabeth married Finlay Stewart in New North Parish, Edinburgh. Unless the date is an error, he cannot be the same as the later Schoolmaster of the same name, but may have been his father. Adam (d.1785) Schoolmaster at Abbotrule. He was recorded as Schoolmaster in 1779 when he was stated to be too ill to teach and was living with his son-in-law in Dalkeith. He was allowed to continue with his salary until the fate of the Abbotrule School was decided by the Presbytery (the Parish being suppressed). When he died, the decision was made to merge the school with those in Hobkirk and Southdean. Adam (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Stevenson and their children included: Helen (b.1768); and Walter (b.1770). Adam (1766–1810) tenant of Hassendeanbank. His father was James, who also farmed there, with his grandfather being Adam and great-grandfather probably William, tenant of Cockerheugh. He is probably the Adam recorded at Hassendean on the 1787–94 Horse Tax Rolls and also in 1797, where he is listed as owner of 8 farm horses. He also paid the dog tax at Hassendean in the same year. He may be the 'Mr Turnbull' whose servant Thomas Hill was listed on the Militia ballot in 1801. In 1788 he married Betty, daughter of James Scott of Skelfhill. They had at least 12 children, including: Jean (1790–1874); James (1791–1854); Robert (1792–1822); William (b.1794), who farmed at Falnash and Merrylaw; Adam Ogilvie (1796–1835), who became an architect; Gideon Pott (1797–1841), who died in Berbice (Guyana); Agnes (1799–1829), who married Pater Brodie; Gavin (b.1800–54); Thomas (1802–81); Helen (1803–79); Betsy (1805–63); and John Robson (1807–66), Master of Works at Windsor Castle. Adam (1760/1–1851) eldest son of Thomas and grandson of Adam of Denesyde. He was a shepherd in Tyneside, but joined his younger brother Thomas on the farm at Grange, on the Abbotrule estate. He leased Midburn (also called 'Africa') in about 1823, and renewed the lease along with his eldest son Thomas in 1848. He is listed at 'Africa' in 1851, but must have died soon after the census was taken. At that time the farm consisted of 50 acres of arable land, 100 acres of pasture and employed 3 people. He married in Tyneside and had a daughter Margaret (who was brought up by her aunt at East Fodderlee and married James Stewart) and another daughter who died young. He secondly married Mary, daughter of John Turnbull, farm worker at Stonedge, and she died in 1852, aged 74. His children with his 2nd wife included Thomas (who farmed at Midburn), John (who married Jane Nichol and moved to Selkirk) and Michael (who married Beatrice Nichol, sister of his brother's wife). Adam (18th/19th C.) tailor in Newcastleton, listed in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. He could be the Adam from Castleton who subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. Adam Ogilvie (1796–1835) son of Adam and Betsy Scott. Like his brother John Robson, he attended Minto School and trained to be an architect. He was a builder in Edinburgh and died there. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 1825 'History of Hawick'. His son James Somerville became a doctor and emigrated to New Zealand. Adam (b.1817/8) grocer and spirit deal on the Mid Row. He was at about No. 4 in 1851 and was listed as a grocer on the Back Row in Slater's 1852 directory. His wife was Helen and their children included William, Robert, James and Alexander. Bailie Adam (1867–1946) son of Robert and Margaret Wilson. He was a teacher in Hawick. He was also well known on both the rugby and cricket fields. He played full back for Hawick R.F.C. in the 1880s. He was on both the South of Scotland teams in Rugby Union and Cricket. He took over from George Wilson as the second Secretary of Hawick R.F.C. He also refereed at least 7 international rugby matches. He also acted as Session Clerk to Hawick Parish. He was a member of the committee of the Roxburgh and Selkirkshire Unionist Association. He married Helen Paterson (1867–1942), and they had 4 children, including Rev. Robert Wilson (b.1893) and Helen (b.1895). He became blind 11 years before his death. Adam (19th/20th C.) stood in as Left-Hand Man in 1897, perhaps the only time this honour was given to someone who had not already been Cornet. It is said that he was meant to be Cornet in 1898, but either fell out with the organisers, or turned it down because his sister died about then. In any case he refused to act as Left-Hand Man again in 1898. Agnes (16th C.) daughter and heiress of Walter in Dalkeith. She married Thomas Home, also from Dalkeith, and in about 1567 she inherited the lands of Templehall and Brewlands in Rulewater. She passed them to Andrew, son of David Turnbull of Wauchope, who may have been a relative. Agnes (16th C.) listed in 1579 among people who owed money to Isabel Donald, widow of Robert of Palace. She was probably from the Ashkirk area. Agnes 'White Ersed Nannie' (d.1805) her death is recorded in the Hawick parish records (along with her nickname!). There are several possible births of Agneses that could be her. Agnes (b.c.1790) keeper of a lodging-house at 36 High Street. She was married to William, also known as 'Wull the Bellman'. Their children included Mary, William and Isabella. In 1861 she was a widow, still running the lodging house. Agnes (b.1814) daughter of Wilton Schoolmaster James and Margaret Dalgleish. She was teacher at the 'Image Garden' school in the 1840s, probably assisted by her mother, her father having died in 1834. She may have married David Host. The school building can be seen in the 1846 painting of the Common-Riding Races, but probably did not last more than a few years. In Slater's 1852 directory, she is listed as teacher at Wilton Cottage. Alexander (15th C.) notary public in the Fife area in 1488/9. It is unclear how he might have been related to local Turnbulls. He may be the same 'Alexandro Turnbull' among the witnesses to the charter granting Harden to John Turnbull in 1482, made at Kirkcaldy by Henry Wardlaw of Wilton. He was notary public for the diocese of St. Andrews in 1506, when there was a document relating to the lands of Allanshaws (in Lauderdale) held by Melrose Abbey. Alexander (15th C.) recorded in 1493 being 'in Wowlee', i.e. resident of Wolfelee. He was fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. The next entry was for Robert, also in Wolfelee. Alexander (15th C.) listed at the 1493 Justice-aire in Jedburgh when William Douglas of Cavers was fined for his non-appearance. He was recorded being in Unthank, which is presumably the farm in Rulewater. He was cited again at the Justice-aire in 1494/5. He was probably related to Henry, who was also recorded in Unthank in 1494/5. Alexander (15th C.) son of Andrew of Dryden. In 1494/5 he had remission for resetting Adam 'howatson' and Robert Jackson, who had stolen sheep from James Ker in Fastheugh and helped the 'Thieves and Traitors of Levyn' in killing the wife and 2 sons of Thomas Middlemas of Ploro, as well as stealing a long (and very detailed) list of his goods. He could perhaps be the same man as Alexander in Commonside, who served as surety for Adam Howison in Commonside, also in 1494/5; Alexander in Commonside was also recorded in 1502 when he was surety (along with John in Dryden) for Philip in Whithope and David in Carlinpool. He is recorded in the Treasurer's accounts for 1494/5 having obtained remission from the King. Alexander (15th C.) recorded in 'bellentyne' at the 1494/5 Justice-aire in Jedburgh. He probably lived at Bellendean. He was allowed to 'compone' for communing with 'the traitors of Leven'. His brother 'Blinnd John' was also recorded as 'sande turnbulis brother of bellentyn' in 1494/5, when he contributed 2 cows for the expenses of the Justicec-aire. Alexander (15th C.) son of Robert. He was recorded in 1494/5 when Thomas Lauder of Todrig had remission for several crimes, including resetting him. He had apparently stolen cattle from Thomas Yair in 'laudoma'. Alexander (15th/16th C.) tenant in 'dodrik', which is probably Dodrig to the south of Hawick. In 1502 Patrick, son of Adam Scott in Harwoodhill, had remission for stealing 15 sheep from him. Alexander (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 among men who Marjory Turnbull was convicted of resetting. His name appears after John, to whom he was probably related, but it is not stated where they were from. Alexander 'Sandy' (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1503 as 'sande turnbull in braidlee', his farm probably being the one in the Borthwick valley (although those near Ashkirk and in the Hermitage valley are also possible). He was listed among men who were fined (in his case 8 cows and a horse) for failing to attend the Justice-aire in Jedburgh, with Sym and Rob also listed in the same place (and hence probably related). Probably the same Alexander was tenant at Broadlee in 1508 when Cuthbert Lauder of Todrig was convicted of stealing 2 horses from him. Alexander 'Sandy' (16th C.) recorded in 1567 when his son Adam was among men who David Home of Wedderburn had to present to answer charges brought by Englishmen. Alexander (d.c.1600) farmer at Crosscleuch, near Fulton in Bedrule Parish. He is listed as deceased in a letter of 1602 which states that 'the ferme hes beine waist sen the pest tyme', suggesting that he had died of the Plague. His wife was Margaret Cockburn. Alexander (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. The baptism of his son Walter with Isobel Scott is recorded in 1650, with the label 'for:'. The witnesses were George Turnbull and Andrew Routledge. Alexander (1691/2–1761) married to Helen Murray, who died in 1780, aged 66. His son Thomas was a merchant in Denholm and is buried in Bedrule kirkyard. Alexander (18th C.) tenant in Langraw. His son was baptised in Hobkirk Parish in 1738. Alexander (d.1810) recorded as 'Brother to the Laird of Tofts' when he died in Hawick. It is unclear who his brother might have been, but perhaps Anthony. Alexander (d.c.1840) baker and keeper of a public house in Denholm, recorded in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. In the 1834 electoral roll he was also joint proprietor of houses with joiner John Turnbull. John was probably his son, and the public house was probably the Cross Keys on Denholm High Street. He is probably the Alexander who married Jean (or 'Jeanny') Scott, whose children included: John (b.1808); Betty (b.1810); James (b.1811); Robert (b.1813); William (b.1815); Thomas (b.1817); and Jeanie (b.1819). They may have also had a daughter Helen, who married farmer Robert Scott and was mother of gardner and botanist John Scott. He was dead before 1841, and his widow later became postmistress in Denholm. He may be the son of John baptised in Cavers Parish in 1785; his parents may be the John Turnbull and Jane Leyden who married in Cavers in 1781. Alexander 'Auld Sandy' (1791–1859) 5th son of James and Betty Adamson and brother of the schoolmasters of Wilton and Hobkirk. He was a carrier, based at Nursery House, Bonchester Bridge, initially helping his grandfather George Adamson. In 1851 he is listed as 'Carrier & Grocer' at '1 Woodside' in Bonchester. In later life he moved to Kirkton, where he died. In 1817 he married Elspeth ('Betty'), daughter of George Alexander, farmer at Bonchester farm. Their children were: James (b.1817); Helen (b.1819); and George (b.1822), who emigrated to New Zealand and died in Dunedin; Agnes (b.1824); Isobel (b.1826); Elizabeth (b.1829); Ebenezer Alexander (1831–93), who died in Leith; and Margaret (b.1834). Alexander Rutherford (1835–97) of the firm Turnbull the dyers. He was son of the company's founder, John. In 1861 he was master dyer, employing 30 people. He is probably the Town Councillor who served on the committee of the Archæological Society in the 1870s. He married Janet Armstrong Hume and their children were: Annie Hume (b.1865), who married Town Clerk John Ritchie Purdom; John Elliot (b.1868); James Armstrong (b.1871); and Arthur Rutherford (b.1873). Alexander Dobson (1853–1932) hosiery manager, he was son of George and Jessie Mark. He was cashier at Innes, Chambers & Co. He had both Wellogate Villa and Woodside built for him by David and Peter Dalgleish (Galashiels builders, who were his brothers-in-law). He was a member of the Hawick Archæological Society. He is recorded as 'Alex. D.', cashier at 2 Teviotside Terrace, where he died. He married his second cousin Mary Warwick. They had 8 children, including: William Dickson of the Crescent Cleaning Co., George, law clerk in Edinburgh; Keith; and Mary (b.1881), who married Provost James D. Lawson of Pittenweem. Alexander (b.1867) born at Newton, Jedburgh. He worked as a servant on the Wolfelee estate. In 1893 he married Margaret, daughter of Andrew Little, shepherd at Gorrenberry. Their children included John, Andrew, Helen and Alexander. Alison (16th C.) daughter and heir of John, Burgess of Selkirk. She is recorded in 1544 and 1545 when served as heir to her deceased father. She shared a tenement with Margaret, another heir (whose relationship is not stated). She immediately sold her share to William Elliot. Andrew of Dryden (15th C.) witness to a notorial instrument for the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1456. He is recorded as 'Andrea Turnbule de Driden', his lands probably being in upper Teviotdale. The Andrew of Dryden recorded 4 decades later may be the same man, but is more likely to be his son. Andrew (15th C.) listed in 1463/4 among the local men who were rewarded by the King for assisting in the capture of John Douglas of Balveny. He is surely related to other Turnbulls who were named (Stephen and John, who directly follow him, or Richard), but it is unclear how. He is recorded as 'Andreas Turnebule'. It is possible he is the same as Andrew of Dryden. Andrew (15th C.) witness to the sasine of 1488 in which Greenwood (i.e. Girnwood) and the Lyne were leased by Robert Scott of Allanhaugh. He is recorded as being 'of Hawick' and Thomas of Stouslie was another witness. It is possible he is the same man as Andrew of Stouslie. Andrew (15th C.) one of the witnesses to the 1490 sasine in which Robert Scott purchased a 'tenement' of land in Hawick from Robert Cessford. He is described as 'Andrew Trumbull of Stowisle', which is presumably Stouslie. He must be related to the Thomas of Stouslie recorded in 1488. Andrew (15th C.) recorded at the 1493 Justice-aire in Jedburgh as being at Bonchester. George, son of Walter in Bonchester, was surety for him, and he also served as surety for himself, being fined for non-appearance. Probably the same 'Dand' is recorded in Bonchester in 1503, listed among men who were fined (in his case 2 cows) for failing to attend the Justice-aire in Jedburgh; Crystal (son of Robert) and David were also listed being in Bonchester and hence perhaps related. Andrew of Dryden (15th C.) recorded as being 'of Dridane' in 1494/5 when his son Alexander had a remission for raids on Ker at Fastheugh and Middlemas at Ploro. He was also recorded in that same year when his son John was named among men who John Scott of Deloraine was accused of associating with. This is probably the Dryden in upper Teviotdale. He was surely related to John of Dryden, recorded in 1498, and probably a descendant of the earlier Andrew of Dryden. Andrew (15th C.) recorded as being called 'calvus' (i.e. 'bald') in 1494/5 when he had remission for burning and stealing from Fastheugh, for resetting the 'Traitors of Levyn' (i.e. Englishmen) and helping them in a raid on Hangingshaw. The Laird of Whithope acted as surety. Andrew (15th/16th C.) tenant at Gatehousecote. In 1502 he was among the men who were put to the horn for involvement in the murder of Robert Oliver. The person called to enter him was George of Hallrule, while John and William in Gatehousecote were also mentioned and so surely related. Presumably the same Andrew in Gatehousecote is also listed on the 1516 remission that a number of Turnbulls had for assisting Alexander, Lord Home. His brother William is also listed, as well as Thomas, Patrick and David, who were also at Gatehousecote, and so possibly related. Andrew (15th/16th C.) recorded as tenant in Bedrule in 1502, when he was listed among Turnbulls and others who failed to appear in court to answer to the charge of murdering Robert Oliver. Andrew in Gatehousecote was listed separately and hence was a different man. It is unclear how he might have been related to Thomas, Laird of Bedrule at the time. His surety was Mark Ker of Dolphinton. Also in 1502 he was 'in bethroull' when he served as surety for David, brother of the Laird of Bedrule at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. Andrew (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 he was among the men who were put to the horn for involvement in the murder of Robert Oliver. The person called to enter him was Mark Ker of Dolphinton. He was separate from Andrew in Gatehousecote and Andrew in Bedrule, who were also listed. Andrew 'Dand' (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1505 at the Justice-aire. Thomas of Bedrule, David of Wauchope, William of Minto and Bartholomew in Belses were joint sureties to enter him to the next court in Selkirk, after he was 'borowit out of the castell of Edinburgh'. Also in 1505 the Chancellor of Scotland, John Murray of Falahill and David Pringle of Tinnis were sureties for Richard Lawson, the Justice Clerk, to enter him at the Justice-aire in Selkirk; he is there 'alias dand' and given the men involved in the pledge, he must have been of some importance. He is probably the same as one of the other Andrews. Andrew 'Bellit Andrew' (15th/16th C.) tenant in Highchesters. He is recorded as 'bellyt androu' in 1503 among men who were fined (in his case 2 cows) for failing to attend the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. His nickname probably indicated that he was bald. Andrew (15th/16th C.) recorded as 'Sir Andrew', chaplain, in 1512 when he was witness to a charter where Roger Langlands of Wilton sold Mervinslaw to William Inglis of Langlandshill. He was thus probably the Chaplain of Wilton. Possibly the same 'Sir Andrew' was witness to a document at Kelso Abbey in about 1520. Andrew (15th/16th C.) listed as tenant of Fulton in 1516, along with Adam and George (hence possibly his brothers). They were among Turnbulls to receive remission for their part in assisting Alexander, Lord Home. Andrew (15th/16th C.) tenant at Overchester, listed in the 1516 pardon that many Turnbulls had for involvement with the traitorous Homes. His son Thomas was also listed. Other tenants there were Mark, Archibald, Mark younger, Richard, David and Ninian. Andrew (15th/16th C.) brother of David, tenant of Hassendeanbank. He is on the 1516 remission for Turnbulls and others who may have assisted the Homes. Andrew (15th/16th C.) tenant at Rule, listed in the 1516 remission for several Turnbulls for providing assistance to Alexander, Lord Home in plotting against the King. Ninian was also a tenant there, so possibly related. Andrew (d.bef. 1535) recorded in 1535 as 'Andree alias Dauid Turnbull' in the trial of Robert Scott of Allanhaugh. Along with Thomas, he was tenant in Town-of-Rule and said to have been cruelly killed by Scott and the men he brought in from Liddesdale. Andrew (16th C.) recorded as being 'in Hornishill' (presumably Hornshole) in 1562/3 when Alexander Lord Home tried to have several men removed as 'pretended tenants' from the local lands for which he was superior. He may be related to other Turnbulls who were connected with this place. Andrew (16th C.) tenant of Gavin of Elliot of Falnash in 1569. Elliot acted as cautioner for his tenants at a meeting in Hawick, assuring that they would obey the laws of the Lord Regent. His name is recorded as 'Andro', and he is listed after George, to whom he was surely related. Andrew 'Dand' (16th C.) son of Eckie (i.e. Hector) of Belses. In 1580 he, his father, and his father's brother-in-law Patrick Richardson were accused by Jean Hepburn, Lady Wedderburn, of murdering her husband John Hamilton and were denounced as rebels. In a separate record of 1580, he was convicted, along with John Young 'in the Cames' of murdering and stealing from John Hamilton of 'Benestoun'. Young was hanged, but being still a minor he was delivered to Andrew Lindsay to be kept in ward. His name is given as 'Andro Trumbill' and also as 'Dand Turnbull, sone naturall' to Hector. Probably the same 'Andro Turnbull, bastard sone to Heckie of Belseis' and (presumably a duplicate entry) 'Andro turnbull, bastard sone to umquhile Ekkie in Belseis' was listed in 1586/7 among Borderers accused of crimes. He is probably the Andrew in Belses for whom Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst acted as surety in 1587, as well as for George and David in Belses. Andrew (16th C.) son of David of Wauchope. He is recorded in a charter of 1567 when the lands of Templehall and Brewlands were feued to him by the superior James Sandilands (Lord Torphichen) on resignation by Agnes Turnbull and her husband Thomas Home. The feu was extended to his nieces Jean and Beatrix Turnbull in 1604, daughter of his brother Walter of Templehall. Andrew 'Spangand Andro' (16th C.) listed as one of the 10 men accused in 1581 of the murder of Walter, son of Wat Turnbull of Bewlie. His nickname may refer to 'springing' an arrow. There is no information about which branch of the Turnbulls he belonged to. Andrew (16th C.) tenant in 'Yaton Scott', listed in 1581 (along with Adam of the same place) among 10 men accused of the murder of Walter, son of Wat Turnbull of Bewlie. It is unclear where this location was, but presumably in Rulewater. Andrew (16th C.) son of John of Philiphaugh and brother of Mark. In 1579/80 he was brother to Mark, 'apparent heir of Philophauch', when he witnessed a transaction involving land in Lilliesleaf. Also in 1570/80 he was son of John of Philiphaugh when he witnessed a promise and brother of Mark when he witnessed another proclamation. Sir Andrew of Bedrule, 'Auld Bedrule' (16th C.) mentioned in the 'Raid of the Redeswire', so presumably Laird in the late 1500s. However, his relationship with other near contemporary Lairds of Bedrule is unclear, and it is possible that he never existed – 'But little harness had we there; But auld Badreule had on a jack, And did right weel, I you declare, With all his Trumbills at his back' [T]. He was supposed to be such a notorious thief that Home and Kerr refused to sign a bond of alliance with the Turnbulls and Rutherfords, claiming that he had stolen cattle from Home of Wedderburn. Andrew 'Dand' (16th C.) tenant in Troneyhill. He is recorded in 1576 among a group of Turnbulls and others (from Minto, Bewlie and Kames), who swore not to harm another group of Turnbulls (from Barnhills, Billerwell, Belses and Chesters). Watt from there is also listed and hence surely related. Andrew (16th C.) uncle of William of Barnhills. He is listed in 1584/5 as 'Andro Turnbull of the Bernhills' along with his nephews William, Robert, Gavin and Hector, among Borderers who were summoned to appear before the Privy Council. Andrew of Howden (16th C.) listed among the Border Liards who were summoned to appear before the Privy Council in 1584/5. His brothers George and Robert are also listed. Probably the same Andrew 'in Howdene' is listed in 1579 as a debtor to the deceased James Liddersdale, Burgess of Selkirk. He also witnessed a transaction in Selkirk in 1579/80, along with his brother Robert and was a witness in 1581 and 1582. Andrew 'Andro' of Bewlie (d.1601) son of Walter of Bewlie and brother of Robert and Hector. He was probably among the group of Turnbulls accused of harassing the widow and children of the murdered Walter Turnbull of Rawflat in 1581. In 1595 he was recorded along with his father Walter and brothers Robert and Hector, among Turnbulls and Davidsons, when John Ker of Barnhills complained they had harassed his tenants in Barnhills; most were declared as rebels for non-appearance. In 1601 he was 'Andro Turnbull of Bewlie' when accused of attacking a Bailie of Jedburgh and his son, and later, with his brother Hector, returning to harass the Bailie, with 'grit nowmeris of thair freindis upoun the streitis and in houssis of the said burgh, awaiting to have assisted thame in case thay had bene straitit'; he was committed to Edinburgh Tolbooth. There was then a proclamation posted at 'Jedburghe, Hawik, Selkirk, Peiblis, Lauder and other places' asking for any other complaints to be lodged against him and his brother Hector. Thomas, heir apparent of Minto, acted in 1601 as cautioner for him and his brother Hector, both 'called of Bewlie', that they should be lawful and also pay a fine for shooting pistols. Also in 1601 he is listed along with Mark of Bewlie, Eckie of Firth, Eckie in Stonedge and James, servant to the Laird of Minto, when Sir Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst was ordered to present them at Edinburgh Tolbooth 'to answer such crymes as thay wer suspect gilty of'; Kerr had to pay a penalty for failing to produce Eckie of Stonedge, so presumably he and the others were imprisoned. He was beheaded at the Market Cross of Edinburgh for his role in the murder of Thomas Ker and George Gardner in Jedburgh. This was part of a feud between Turnbulls and Kerrs, in which 30 Turnbulls and associates attacked specific Kerrs on Jedburgh Fair Day, perhaps in retaliation for the earlier murder of Henry Oliver. He lost 'the lytill fingar of his left hand' in the fight. The court case was long and complicated, and it seems clear that the legal system was stacked in favour of the Kerrs. Andrew (16th/17th C.) brother of Adam of Billerwell. In 1606 he was one of the Turnbulls accused of raiding and burning Appotside and Harwood in the period 1598–1605. Howerver, the case against him and some of the others was dropped, with the main Turnbulls of Wauchope being pursued instead. Andrew (16th/17th C.) heir to Hector of Stonedge. In 1610 he is recorded in a legal dispute with Sir Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst, Adam Turnbull of Abbotrule and others for having their animals graze his lands at Stonedge and Harwoodtown. In 1611 he was 'Andro Turnbull of Stanielege' when John Riddell, younger of that Ilk was cautioner for him in Jedburgh Court. Andrew (16th/17th C.) tenant in Bonchester. In 1612 he and his sons Thomas and John, along with John 'in Elscheuch' complained to the Privy Council that John, Lord Ker of Jedburgh, had unfairly imprisoned them, and they were ordered to be released. The details of the complaint were that Sir John Ker of Littledean, angry that he would not yield the farm at Gatehousecote, captured him and took him to Jedburgh, with the Laird of Bonjedward securing his release. Then later in 1612 Ker and his servants drove him and his family off Gatehousecote, causing his injured son Andrew 'to be taken out of the house in a pair of blankets, and to be cast on the feildis', as well as assaulting his son Thomas 'with batons'. Later John Ker's son William led an assault on him at Bonchester, capturing him again and having him put in the stocks in Jedburgh for 8 days, then apprehended his son Andrew, and meanwhile the Kers harvested all the crops. Ker of Littledean was found to have overstepped his authority and was sentenced to imprisonment in Edinburgh. He may be the same as one of the other Andrews. Andrew (16th/17th C.) son of Walter of Bedrule, he was also known as David. He was a butcher and Burgess of Jedburgh. In 1616 he had a bond with James 'called of Bedrule' (probably his uncle) and Mark in Hartshaugh. In 1619 he witnessed a bond for Walter of Bedrule and George Ker of Cavers Carre. Andrew (d.1622) recorded in 1618 along with George in Belses when the curators of the young Andrew Scott of Aikwood complained that they had not paid the profits of the lands of Hawthornrig for the previous 2 years. He is recorded as 'Andro in Belsches' when he was tried for perjury and bribing witnesses Robert Ker, David Turnbull and James Young. They had apparently all lied in a case of theft brought by him against William and Walter Middlemas. He was sentenced to execution in Edinburgh. Andrew of Bewlie (17th C.) presumably related to earlier Turnbulls of Bewlie. He married Marion, daughter of Thomas Turnbull of Knowe, according to a marriage contract of 1627. In 1628 there was caution paid for him by Thomas of Knowe to ensure that he did not molest Adam Scott of Burnfoot, Walter Scott of Midshiels, or their tenants and servants. In 1640 he paid off a debt to his step-father and wife (probably part of the marriage contract). He was recorded as owner of Bewlie, valued at '56 bolls victual, half bear meal, bear £6, meal £8 [actually £7] the boll', corresponding to £364. Either he or his descendant was recorded as Andrew of Bewlie in the 1663 Land Tax Rolls when he paid tax on £367. Andrew (16th/17th C.) servant to James Ker of Bewlie. He is recorded in 1622, along with Ker and other servants of his when there was a complaint by George of Newhall that they tried to find him to kill him, but instead attacked his servants and later attacked him with drawn weapons. Not appearing, they were all denounced as rebels. Andrew (17th C.) owner of lands in Ruecastle in Bedrule Parish. In 1643 his lands were valued at £54. He could be the same as one of the other Andrews. Andrew (17th C.) miller at Appotside Mill. He witnessed a Rulewater sasine of 1654, and may have been related to the Turnbull tenants of Harwood and Templehall who were also witnesses. It is also likely he was related to the man of the same name who was miller at Woollie Mill in the 1680s and 90s. Andrew (17th C.) resident of Hawick who married Janet Miller. Their children included Thomas (b.1648), Isobel (b.1651) and John (b.1654). The witnesses in 1648 were David 'Badie' and William Briggs. Andrew (17th C.) mason in Hawick. In 1676 Samuel Newbie was found guilty of assaulting him and another mason, Andrew Wilson. Andrew (d.1691) tenant at 'Woollie-mill' (i.e. Wolfelee Mill) in 1684 when his servant John Hall was listed among those declared as fugitives for religious non-conformity. His was one of the oldest gravestones in Hobkirk Kirkyard, the inscription being 'Here lys Andrew Turnbull, miller in Wollie Miln'. His wife Elizabeth Lillie died in 1719. He could have been father of Robert, who was tenant at Wolfelee Mill later. His descendants were tenants of Hallrule Mill for 3 generations. Andrew (17th C.) resident at Hartshaugh in Abbotrule Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Andrew (17th C.) cooper in Hawick, on the 1693/4 subscribers' list for the new Kirk bell. He was living on the west-side of Hawick, according to the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. He could be the Andrew, married to Margaret Chisholme, whose children baptised in Hawick included: Robert (b.1670); an unnamed child (b.1676); John (b.1679); Andrew (b.1681); and Walter (b.1686). He could be the Andrew whose son Adam was baptised in Hawick in 1698, with witnesses William Swan and John Turnbull. Andrew (d.c.1688) tenant in Belses whose will was recorded in 1688. Andrew (17th C.) resident of Appletreehall. In 1680 he was called as a witness in the trial of local Covenanters, but did not appear. Andrew (17th C.) resident of Roberton Parish, when it contained Hassendean. In 1681 he married Isobel Scott and their children included: Bessie (b.1681); Janet (b.1684); and Andrew (b.1686). The witnesses in 1686 were George Scott and James (who may have been related to him). Andrew (1667–1747) son of Thomas, he is sometimes described as the last Laird of Bedrule, although he did not actually possess any of the ancestral lands. He farmed at Minto Cleuchhead. He married Jean Scott, who died in 1712, aged 32. He secondly married Agnes Turnbull, and she died in 1732, aged 39. His is the first name included on a memorial tablet to the Turnbulls of Bedrule in Bedrule Kirk. His children with his 1st wife were: Agnes; Thomas, of the Hawick carpet factory; and William tenant of Ancrum Woodhead. And with his second wife: Jean, who died unmarried; Margaret, died aged 16; Helen (Nellie); Stephen; and John. His brother William was probably tenant at Bedrule Mill. Andrew (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living in Denholm in 1702 when he married Helen Paterson. Their children probably included Marion (b.1703). Other possible children are: Jean, daughter of William, who married William Fletcher in Minto in 1732; and Jean, daughter of William, who married Jean Paterson in Minto in 1735. Andrew (17th/18th C.) Hawick mason. He was listed as a mason among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He was one of the tradesmen chosen in 1713 by the minister and heritors to report to the Presbytery on the state of the Manse in Hawick. He was also charged with valuing Andrew Rodger's house for the Kirk Session, perhaps for the same purpose. Around the same time it was presumably the same Andrew who was paid by the Session for erecting a large sign with the name of Betty Thomson, who bequeathed money to the poor of the Parish. In 1715 he was the 'younger' mason (suggesting his father was also Andrew) when he witnessed a baptism for mason John. In 1716 and 1720 he witnessed baptisms for fellow mason John Napier. In 1720 he (along with mason John) witnessed a baptism for gardener Andrew Colwart. Either he (or possibly his son) was the mason Andrew whose illegitimate child Andrew, born to Margaret Aitken, was baptised in 1723; the witnesses were merchant James Aitken (probably Margaret's brother) and Beadle John Scott. In 1725 he witnessed baptisms for John Hardie and Isobel Aitken and for wright Walter Scott. He married the same Margaret, youngest daughter to William Aitken (tenant in Hawick) in 1724 and their children included: Andrew (b.1723); William (b.1726); John (b.1729); and Andrew (again, b.1732). The witnesses in 1729 were John (probably a relative) and George . . . , while the witnesses in 1732 were Henry Orrock and Gideon Ruecastle. He witnessed an irregular marriage between merchant John Scott and Anna Laing in 1724. Along with John (also a mason), he witnessed a baptism for smith William Young in 1725. Also in 1725 he was a candidate for Session Treasurer. Probably the same Andrew, along with mason John, witnessed baptisms for shoemaker Andrew Scott and Janet Turnbull in 1721, 1726 and 1728, and for smith Robert Turnbull in 1726. He witnessed a baptism for mason James Harkness in 1742, when he is 'elder' and another in 1743 for former Bailie Depute Walter Scott, when he was described as 'Senior'. He also witnessed a baptism for shoemaker George Gardner in 1743. He was probably related to the earlier mason of the same name, recorded in the 1670s (however, there may be more than 2 generations here). The mason called Andrew who is recorded in the 1740s and 50s seems likely to have been his son. Andrew (17th/18th C.) tenant in Drydenburn. His wife was Helen Beattie and their daughter Helen was born in 1725. Also in 1725 (on the same day) he witnessed a baptism for John Graham in Allanhaugh Mill. Andrew (17th/18th C.) servant of Rev. Robert Cunningham. In 1714 he witnessed a baptism for John Ekron. Andrew (17th/18th C.) merchant in Hawick. In 1725 he witnessed a baptism for weaver James Weens. In 1719 he was described as 'merchant att ye Damme bridge' when he married Marion, daughter of gardener James Falsyde. Their children included: James (b.1720); Andrew (b.1721); Margaret (b.1723); Robert (b.1725); James (again, b.1727); and Marion (b.1737). The witnesses in 1720 were William Cunningham (son of the minister) and Walter Scott (servant to the minister), in 1721 were baxters William Hodge and William Mitchel, in 1723 were Bailie James Burn and flesher John Tudhope, and in 1725 were Rev. Charles Telfer and John Scott. Andrew (18th C.) married Mary Lamb in Wilton in 1727. Andrew (18th C.) carrier in Hawick. In 1742 he was 'Elder Carrier' when he witnessed a baptism for Andrew 'Younger, Town Post'. He was thus probably father of Hawick's letter deliverer. He may be the Andrew who, along with John, witnessed a baptism for carrier James Henderson in 1733. Andrew (18th C.) recorded as 'Town Post' in 1738 when he witnessed a baptism in Hawick. It is unclear what this meant, but one possibility is that he was a Burgh Officer (since the Town courier seems unlikely). He was also 'Town Post' in 1742 when one of his children was baptised. He was additionally 'younger' in 1742, suggesting he was son of the 'elder' carrier (and not the same as the family of masons). He married Esther Porteous and their son Andrew was baptised in 1742, with witnesses merchant Robert Scott and carrier Andrew 'Elder' (presumably his father). Andrew 'Little Andrew' (d.1776) mason in Hawick, probably son (or other close relative) of the earlier Andrew. He may be the Andrew 'jun' who witnessed baptisms for workman Alexander Burnet in 1738, for shoemaker Thomas Scott and for gardener Robert Kerr in 1742, for weaver John Thorburn in 1757 and for James Dodds in 1758. Perhaps the same man was listed as Andrew 'senior', mason, when he witnessed a baptism in 1745. Probably the same Andrew, described as 'elder', was paid for fixing part of the steeple of St. Mary's in 1755. Probably the same Andrew was among the men paid in 1755 'for the herd's house building'. In 1757 and 1765 he witnessed baptisms for glazier William Turnbull and his wife Isobel Turnbull (one of whom was probably his relative). In 1759 he was 'mason, senior' when he witnessed a baptism for William Scoon. In 1765 he was 'Sen' when he witnessed a baptism (along with glazier William) for James Clerk. He may be the mason of that name who witnessed baptisms for mason Andrew (probably his son) in 1764, 1765 and 1767, as well as for for William Burnet in 1766. Probably the later masons of the same name were his decendants. He is probably the 'old Mason' of this name who died in Hawick in 1776. His son Andrew was also a mason, who died in Hawick in 1810. Andrew (18th C.) miller at Mangerton Mill. His wife Agnes Armstrong died in 1757, aged 39 years, and is buried at Ettleton. He was probably son of Adam, who was earlier miller of Margerton Mill. Andrew (18th C.) farmer near Hawick. He is recorded in 1789 buying 600 hawthorn plants for a hedge. Andrew (d.1810) mason in Hawick, who was son of Andrew. His father had the nickname 'Little Andrew' on the death register. He could have been the mason Andrew recorded earlier in the 18th century, but there is likely to have been another generation there. In 1763 he married Agnes Deans, who was also from Hawick Parish; in the record he is described as a mason. She may be the daughter of flesher George Deans born in 1735. Their children included: Andrew (b.1764); Margaret (b.1765); Andrew (again, b.1767); and Nichol (b.1769). The witnesses in 1764 were Andrew (probably his father) and Robert Thorburn and in both 1765 and 1767 were Andrew (again) and George Deans (probably his wife's father or brother). He is probably also the Andrew who witnessed a baptism for George Deans (probably his brother-in-law) and the mason Andrew who witnessed another for William Philip, both in 1777. He is probably the deceased mason whose daughter Janet died in 1811. Andrew (18th C.) married Beatrix Turnbull (both from Hawick Parish) in 1761. He may be the same as one of the other Turnbulls. Andrew (d.bef. 1811) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1811 it is recorded that his daughter 'Menie' (probably Wilhelmina) 'Burnt to Death'. He is probably the same as one of the other Andrews. Andrew (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish who married Margaret Veitch. Their children included Andrew (b.1770). Andrew (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Scott and their children included Alison (b.1777); Mary (b.1780); and Agnes (b.1786). He is probably the man recorded as 'Anne', married to Margaret Scott, whose son Walter was baptised in 1772, with witnesses merchants Andrew and Walter (possible relatives). He is probably the Andrew whose daughter 'Ailey' died in 1776. Andrew (b.c.1780) labourer at 'Poperburn' in Castleton Parish according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia. Wright Andrew was also listed there and probably his brother. They likely lived on the Piper Burn. Andrew (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Hislop and their children included: Thomas (b.1806); Janet (b.1808); Margaret (b.1810); William (b.1812); Oliver (b.1816); and Isabella (b.1817). The witnesses in 1808, 1810 and 1812 were wright William Hislop and Janet Paisley; these 3 baptismal entries were recorded together, suggesting that the family were members of one of the secession churches. Andrew (18th/19th C.) hosiery manufacturer based on the High Street, recorded on Pigot's 1825/6 directory. Possibly the same Andrew was a stockingmaker with William Wilson on the 1801 ballot list for the Militia; however, there was a separate stocking-maker of the same name also listed in Hawick in 1801. He may be the stockingmaker called Andrew whose young daughter died in Hawick in 1823. He may also be the stockingmaker whose 'bastard' child died in Hawick in 1800. Andrew (1795/6–1827) from Jedburgh, he was Procurator Fiscal for Roxburghshire. He is recorded in letters of 1826 and 1827 preserved in the Walter Mason Collection. He married Isabella Mein, who died in 1833, aged 35. Andrew (18th/19th C.) grocer and spirit dealer on the High Street, listed in Pigot's 1837 directory. Anna (17th C.) served heir to her brother James of Wauchope in 1674. Anne (b.1812/3) sewing teacher in Minto Parish. In 1841 and 1851 she was living in Minto village with her mother Jane and brothers John and William, who were agricultural labourers. In 1861 she was 'Annie', living with her brother John. Anthony of Knowe (18th C.) probably son of Thomas. He became a Burgess of Selkirk in 1712 when he was 'younger of Knowe'. In 1737 he was the ruling elder of Jedburgh Presbytery at the 1737 General Assembly. He is recorded in a discharge of 1741 for rents paid to Thomas Thomson and in a bill dispute in 1743 with Walter Scott, late of Cockerheugh. In 1742 he witnessed the baptism of Walter Scott, last of Crumhaugh, son of Walter of Crumhaugh, who was then residing at Midshiels; he also witnessed a baptism in the same year for James Miller in Appletreehall. He paid the window tax in Minto Parish in 1748. He may be the 'Laird of Know' whose estate was valued at £661 8s in the 1740s. Letters of 1748 exists that he wrote to William Elliot of Wolfelee (lawyer in Edinburgh) concerning rents at Huntlaw and in Selkirk. He is probably the Anthony who got married in Minto in 1739, with no wife's name recorded; if so, this was presumably his 2nd wife. He was probably succeeded by Thomas, who was probably his son, making Thomas's sister Isabella his daughter. Anthony (18th C.) married Margaret Douglas in Ancrum Parish in 1742. Their children included Bessie (b.1746), Jean (b.1748),

William (b.1750) and John (b.1753). Anthony of Tofts (d.1811) recorded as owner of Tofts in 1788. These lands in Kirkton Parish were valued at £300, and still listed being owned by him in the Land Tax Rolls of about 1813. He is listed among the Commissioners for Roxburghshire in 1805 and 1819. It is unclear how he was related to earlier Turnbulls of Tofts. He is probably the 'Laird of Tofts' whose brother Alexander died in Hawick in 1810. His own death is also recorded in Hawick. Archibald (15th C.) listed on the 'retour of inquest' for Ker of Altonburn in 1438. It is unclear which branch of the Turnbulls he belonged to, but he is listed right before Lawrence, and John of Fulton is also mentioned. Archibald (15th/16th C.) son of the deceased John, he is recorded in 1499 along with William of Minto having remission from the Privy Council for the murder of 'Johne of Rutherfurd' and for fleeing to England. Archibald (15th/16th C.) brother of Mark, who was tenant in Overchester. They were listed among several Turnbulls who had remission in 1516 for assisting the Homes against the King. Probably the same 'Arche turnbull markis bruther' is listed in 1503 among men who were fined (in his case 4 cows and a horse) for failing to attend the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. Archibald (15th/16th C.) witness to the sasine for Wolfelee in 1522. Hector is listed before him and possibly related. Archibald (16th C.) occupier of land in Ednholm in 1535, along with William Davidson and James Hobkirk. These lands were inherited by Janet Scott, widow of Walter Scott. Archibald 'Airchie' (16th C.) son and heir of Wat of 'Howatt'. This seems likely to be Howa in Hobkirk Parish. In 1553/4 he pledge for his father, as part of an assurance given by the Rutherfords and Turnbulls. His son George was recorded in the inventory of goods and finances for Mark Ker of Kippielaw in 1579. He is probably the 'Archie in Hawla' whose son Gavin was recorded in 1586/7 among Borderers accused of crimes who had failed to appear in court and were given one more chance to find sureties. In 1587 he was 'in Howa' when accused of being involved with taking sheep from Sir William Sinclair of Herdmandstoun, or at least of resetting the sheep stolen by his son Gavin. Sir Thomas of Bedrule appeared in his name, but he was found guilty and order to be confined until Sinclair received recompense. He appears to have been father of: Robert, tenant in Hallrule; William in Barnhills; Gavin in Howa; Hector in Stanedge; and George. Archibald 'Airchie' (16th C.) son of Thomas in Hartshaugh. In 1567 Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst was ordered to present him to answer changes of raiding into England. Archibald (16th C.) recorded in 1586/7 on a list of defaulters who refused to appear before the judiciary court. He is 'callit Unthank', which is probably the farm in Hobkirk Parish. He may well have been related to iother Turnbulls associated with Unthank, e.g. the earlier Leo, and the later Robert and David. Archibald 'Airchie' of Langraw (16th C.) listed in 1567 among men who Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst was ordered to present to answer changes of raiding into England. He is also recorded in 1579 among a group of Turnbulls who were accused of stealing cattle from the Laird of 'Pansoun' in England. He was also recorded in 1579/80 in a list of men accused of taking part in raids into England. His caution was the Laird of Bedrule. He was one of those charged to repay 'Johnne Selby of Twysill tuicheing the guidis taikin furth of Monylawis'. He could be the 'Archy Trumble' listed along with 'Gib Lorreyne' among men of Teviotdale in complaints of a raid into England in 1597 Archibald (18th C.) married Janet Park in Hawick in 1752. Archibald (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was recorded at Broomhall in 1759. He married Mary Lamb in Roberton in 1755 and their children included William (b.1756) and Margaret (b.1759). The witnesses in 1759 were Thomas Scott and Robert Easton. Archibald (18th C.) married Anne Rutherford in 1760, the marriage recorded in Wilton and Bedrule Parishes. Archibald (18th C.) portioner of Cavers Parish. In 1771 he borrowed £5 sterling from the Kirk Session. Archibald Oliver (1825–69) eldest son of Thomas Turnbull with his 2nd wife Mary Beattie. He was born at East middle and educated at Denholm and then from the age of 12 at Minto under Mr. Grant. He was said to be Minto School's second best scholar, after 'General Knowledge' Moodie. He became a legal apprentice to George Potts of Hawick at the age of 16. 4 years later he went to Edinburgh University, where he trained as a lawyer. In 1850 he became a junior partner with Elliot's in Jedburgh then set up on his own in 1859. He researched and wrote about the Turnbull clan, and also gave recollections of Denholm, which are related in Tancred's 'Rulewater' book. He is buried in the place of internment of his ancestors at Bedrule. Barrie (20th C.) proprietor of the family grocer's business at 51 High Street. His son John took over the business after he fell seriously ill. Bartholomew (15th/16th

C.) tenant at Rawflat in 1502 when he (along with George of Hallrule) was surety for Adam, in Hornshole and Chamberlain Newton. He is probably the Bartholomew in Belses who was joint surety along with Thomas of Bedrule, David of Wauchope and William of Minto at the Justice-aire in 1505, the 4 men signing a bond at Caerlenrig. Possibly the same 'Bertholomeum Trumbull' was on the 1508 panel for Adam Helpburn inheriting the Lordship of Liddesdale. Beatrice (1908–86) wife of Sir Richard, born in Armadale and died in Jedburgh. She is buried in Bedrule churchyard. Beatrix (16th/17th C.) daughter of Walter of Templehall (also called 'Wat o Wauchope'). Along with her sister Jean she inherited the lands of Templehall and Brewlands (in Rulewater) from her uncle Andrew (son of David of Wauchope). In 1605 she was represented by her 'tutor' George Turnbull, suggesting she was still a minor at this point. In 1632 she claimed the other half of the lands that had belonged to her by then deceased sister. Charles (b.1736) son of Robert and Euphan Douglas, born in Cavers Parish. He lived in both Wilton and Hawick, working as a gardener. He married Elizabeth Scott and their children included: Euphan (b.1761); Robert and an unnamed child (b.1764); Elizabeth (b.1766); Janet (b.1768); and Helen (b.1770). The witnesses in 1768 were Robert Scott (probably a relative of his wife) and Alexander Bunyan. His wife may be the 'Lizzy', spouse of Charles 'now in America', who died in Hawick in 1809. Charles (b.1809/10) from Denholm, he was a joiner in Hawick. He lived at about 20 Kirk Wynd in 1841 and 1851, moving later to Drumlanrig Place. His wife was Isabella and their children included Thomas, Euphemia, Jane, Charles, Mary, Jessie and Isabella. He may be the Charles who in 1858 donated to the Museum a 'Perforated Stone Amulet found at spot known as Witches' Camp, head of Loan', as well as an 'old horn of the Hawick Moor Cow herd'. Charles Frederick John (b.c.1920) articled to architect Alexander Inglis in 1936, he became a partner with Inglis in 1950 and ran the firm himself later. In 1951 he became an Associate member of the Royal Institute of British Architects. From 1959 he was a partner in Aitken & Turnbull and in 1965 he emigrated to New Zealand. He was involved with the Allars Crescent, Deanfield and Springfield housing developments in Hawick, as well as buildings at Netherdale in Gala and in the town centre of Jedburgh. Charles 'Charlie' (1939–2019) born at Crown Lane, son of baker George. He started his 60 year association with the Scouting movement in 1945 and joined the pipe band at the age of 12. He enlisted in the Royal Marines at the age of 18, serving for 19 years and being Pipe Major of the regimental band. He lived in Portsmouth for many years, but returned to Hawick to take over his father's 2 bakery shops. He renewed his association with the Hawick Scouts and was their band's Pipe Major 1975–2005. He wrote a history of the band for their 100th anniversary in 2017. He married Elizabeth Hunt and later Frances Scott, and had 5 sons. Christian (17th C.) resident of Ashybank who was listed in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Christian (b.1805) daughter of Thomas and Mary Oliver. She is recorded along with Eleanor in Pigot's 1837 directory as milliners and dressmakers on the High Street. She and her sister Esther were living with their mother Mary on Buccleuch Street in 1841. In 1851 she was a 'Woollen Seamstress & Annuitant' living on Allars Crescent. Cock (15th C.) son of John in Tofts. He was recorded at the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh in 1493 when he had remission for stealing an ox belonging to William Rennie (or perhaps Rae), from the house of Robert Aitkin in Minto. His surety was his father John. His name is given as 'Cok turnbule', but it is unclear if 'Cock' was a nickname or a short form of a forename. In 1494/5 Walter Rutherford was allowed to compone for several crimes, including assisting and resetting him after this same theft from Minto. Probably the same Cock 'of Fulton' was recorded in 1494/5 when George Shiel in Bedrule had remission for stealing and ox of his. Colin (1975/6–) played football with the Legion and rugby with the P.S.A. and the Harlequins before debuting for Hawick R.F.C. at the age of 19. He also played for the South of Scotland and professionally for the Border Reivers, as well as for club sides in New Zealand, Australia and Canada. He moved to County Durham and works as a kitchen fitter. Crystal (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1503 as 'Cristall t[ur]nbull Robin sone in bonechster'. He was listed among men who were fined (in his case 2 cows) for failing to attend the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. He was presumably son of of Robert, who was tenant in Bonchester. Cuthbert (d.bef. 1530) recorded as already deceased in 1530 when his tenement of land in Selirk is mentioned in relation to lands of Patrick Murray of Falahill. He witnessed a document in Selkirk in 1496. He may be the Cuthbert recorded in 1579 as once being owner of land in Selkirk. which later was owned by his daughter Janet, who married Cuthbert Brydon. David (15th C.) part of a 'retour of inquest' for the lands of Eilrig in 1426 and for the Barony of Hawick in 1427. Perhaps the same David was on a retour in 1439 for Douglas of Bonjedward. It is unclear how he was related to other contemporary Turnbulls. David (15th C.) witness to a sasine in 1484/5 for lands in Mangerton, involving the Scotts of Branxholme. 2 other signatories were Turnbulls of Rule Water. He may be the 'Dauid Trumbull' who was among the witnessed for the last will of Sir David Scott of Branxholme in 1491/2 (and possibly the David who received 10 sheep in the will). Perhaps the same David was listed among men of Liddesdale who failed to appear at the Justice-aire in 1494/5; he was explicitly listed with George of Hawick. He may be the same as 'David Trumbull with George Trumbull' listed along with a large number of men from Liddesdale and elsewhere pledging good behaviour to Patrick, Earl of Bothwell in 1498. It is possible that he is the same as David of Wauchope. David (15th C.) son of the Laird of Whithope, probably the one in the Borthwick valley (where Philip, son of William was recorded 40 years earlier). In 1494/5 he was recorded as being 'in Ernheuch' (probably adjacent to Singlie in the Ettrick valley) when he had remission for stealing 14 ewes from Ninian Murray at Kershope and for stealing a white horse from Thomas Forest at Innerleithen; his surety was Walter Scott of Tushielaw. Philip in Whithope was recorded in 1502, and may have been his son or brother. He was probably related to the John of Ern Cleuch recorded in 1464/5. David (15th C.) recorded being 'In hoscot[is]' (i.e. Hoscote) in the 1494/5 Justice-aire. In the accounts for the court held in Selkirk he contributed 1 horse. He may be the same as one of the contemporary Davids. David (15th/16th C.) listed in the 1501 Exchequer Rolls, along with Robert, 2 Johns, Ninian and George. Their £40 fine was granted to Thomas, son and heir of George of Bedrule. He could be the same as one of the contemporary Davids. David (15th/16th C.) brother of the Laird of Bedrule (probably Thomas). He is recorded in 1502 at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh when Andrew in Bedrule was surety for him (and he was additionally surety for himself), but fined for non-appearance. David of Bonchester (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 when David Scott (called 'Lady') in Stirkshaws had a remission for several crimes, including being part of a raid with him on the farms at Minto Craigend. Other participants of the raid were Archibald Armstrong, Ninian Armstrong and 'other Traitors of Levin and Liddalisdale'. They burned the farms, including 7 horses (presumably in a barn), as well as stealing 16 oxen and cows, 4 horses and sundry other goods. Perhaps the same David 'in bonechester' was mentioned in 1493 as surety for George Turnbull (there and in Stouslie), who was fined for his non-appearance. He was surely related to the John in Nether Bonchester, who is recorded in 1494/5. Probably the same David 'in bonechestir' was recorded in 1502 among many Turnbulls and others who were declared as fugitives for their part in the murder of Robert Oliver. The people who were supposed to enter him into the court were George of Hallrule and Robert Elliot in Redheugh, who were fined for his non-appearance. William in Bonchester was also recorded in the same 1502 case, as well as William's son Lawrence, and were presumably related. He may be the David for whom Walter, son of Walter Scott had remission in 1502 for resetting in his crimes. He is also recorded being 'in bonchester' in 1503 among men who were fined (in his case 5 cows) for failing to attend the Justice-aire in Jedburgh; Crystal (son of Robert), and Dand are also recorded in Bonchester and hence perhaps related. David (15th/16th C.) tenant in Carlinpool in 1502 when he and Philip Turnbull in Whithope had remission for bringing in the 'Traitors of Levin' to raid Fastheugh and Hanginshaw. Their sureties were John in Dryden and Alexander in Commonside. David (15th/16th C.) listed as witness to a charter signed in Edinburgh in 1506. He may be the same as one of the other Davids. David of Wauchope (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 when the Laird of Cranston was fined for failing to arrest him. Also in 1502 he served as surety for several men at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh, including George called 'Hawick', Thomas Dunbar and himself. He is recorded as joint surety along with Thomas of Bedrule, William of Minto and Bartholomew in Belses, to enter Andrew at the Justice-aire in Selkirk in 1505; the 4 men signed a bond to this effect at Caerlenrig. He is also listed in 1504 among men who were given remission for involvement in the murder of Thomas Rutherford in Jedburgh Abbey; David, listed after him, may have been his son. He is also recorded in 1508 as 'Dauid Trumbull de Wauchhop' when he was on the panel for Adam Hepburn inheriting the Lordship of Liddesdale. He may be the same Laird of Wauchope who was injured by an arrow at the skirmish at Sclaterford in 1513.

He probably had a son of the same name, since David of Wauchope is recorded in 1530 and 1567. David (15th/16th C.) tenant of Hassendeanbank recorded on the 1516 list of Turnbulls and others who had remission for any part in assisting Alexander, Lord Home. His brother Andrew is also listed. David (15th/16th C.) tenant in Overchester, listed among many Turnbulls who had remission in 1516 for assisting the Homes against the King. Several other Turnbulls are also listed there, and so probably related, with Mark apparently the main tenant, and William and John his sons. David (15th/16th C.) tenant at Gatehousecote, listed in the 1516 pardon that many Turnbulls had for involvement with the traitorous Homes. Other tenants there were Andrew and his brother William, as well as Thomas and Patrick. David of Wauchope (16th C.) denounced as a rebel in 1530, along with Walter Turnbull of 'Howay', Philip Nesbit of that Ilk, Robert Haig of Bemersyde and others. He may be the 'lard of Wawchop' listed among Borderers who swore allegiance to the English in 1544. He is recorded in 1549 when his brother Hector was granted 2 husband lands in Appltreehall by Robert Scott of Howpasley. In 1551 he signed the 'Auld Band of Roxburgh'. In 1553/4 he was listed among the Rutherfords and others in an assurance not to harm the Kers. Thomas (possibly his brother or other close relative) was pledge for him in 1553/4. Also in 1553/4 he was on the panel for Sir Walter Scott inheriting his grandfather's lands of Branxholme and Buccleuch. Around the late 1550s he was one of the men on the panel to resolve the conflict over the lands of Newbigging (in Hassendean) between the children of Gavin Elliot of Horsleyhill. He is probably the David of Wauchope among those who appeared before the Queen in 1561, pomising to provide lists of thieves and then required by the Queen to appear later in Jedburgh to answer for their failure to apprehend fugitives; his brother Thomas also appeared. In 1564 he is probably the 'Lard of Wauchop' listed among Border lairds who were ordered to support the Warden, Ker of Cessford. He is probably the same David who was recorded in 1567 when his son Andrew was granted the lands of Templehall and Brewlands in Rulewater; another son, Robert, was a witness to the charter. He is probably the David of Wauchope whose brother Walter of Hobsburn is listed among men ordered to appear in 1567 to answer accusations of raiding into England; he was also ordered to appear himself and to present his 'man and servand' Adam Lyle, while another brother of his, Thomas of Harwoodtown, was also instructed to present a servant. He signed the 'Band of Roxburgh' in 1573 along with his son and heir Hector, both 'with our handis at the pen'. His son and heir Hector is recorded in 1572/3, when he swore allegiance to the Crown. David (16th C.) tenant in the farm of Rouchhope according to a rental roll of 1541. Perhaps the same David was also tenant in the neighbouring farms of Wauchopehead and Wauchopebank. It is possible he is the same as one of the other contemporary Davids, perhaps even David of Wauchope. David (d.1576/7) presented to the Parish of Hobkirk in 1550, replacing James Bennet as priest there. He was referred to as 'Sir' David of Minto in 1569, when he was among a number of Borders clerics who were called before the Regent and Privy Council for adhering to pre-Reformation sacraments. He was recorded as the deceased Sir David in about 1577 when John Douglas replaced him as Vicar of Hobkirk. His designation 'in Minto' when he was called before the Privy Council suggests that he was from the family of Turnbulls of Minto (rather than being minister at Minto). David (16th C.) recorded being 'called David of Crawden' in 1583/4 when he was listed among some Borderers denounced for failing to appear before the Privy Council. David (16th C.) tenant in Belses. He was listed along with his brother George among a group of Turnbulls accused of performing a raid into England in 1579. He was also leader of a group of Turnbulls who attacked the farm of Rawflat in 1581, killing Walter of Rawflat there. The others in the group were his brothers George, John and Adam, as well as Thomas of Billerwell; the complaint was made again by the widow of Walter of Rawflat in 1583. George was in 1603 found guilty of several related crimes. This was all presumably part of some family feud. In 1587 he was brother of George in Belses, when Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst acted as surety for the pair, as well as Andrew also in Belses. David (16th C.) listed among the Turnbulls who were accused of harassing the widow and children of the murdered Walter Turnbull of Rawflat in 1581. He is transcribed as being 'of the Cronyhill', which was probably Troneyhill (and hence he may have been son of Thomas of Troneyhill). Failing to appear before the Privy Council, he was denounced as a rebel in 1583 (mis-transcribed as 'Andro Turnebill in Cronyhill' in part of the citation). His son Thomas was listed in 1610 amongst Turnbulls who were to be apprehended for not finding caution following being found guilty of the murder of Thomas Kerr of Crailinghall and 6 Grahamslaw brothers. David (16th C.) recorded in 1586/7 being in Jedburgh, among Borderers accused of crimes who had failed to appear in court and were given one more chance to find sureties. In 1587 his sureties were recorded being Sir Thomas of Bedrule and Andrew Oliver in Ancrum. David (16th C.) recorded in 1593 being 'in the Watter of Roule'. Along with Alexander in Odlhamstocks and 2 Frasers from the same place, he was accused of attacking the farmers of the lands of Newbigging (perhaps the one near Lauder) and were declared rebels for non-appearance. It is unclear whether he is the same as one of the other Davids. David (d.1598) son and heir of Hector of Wauchope. He married Margaret, daughter of James Gledstains of Cocklaw in 1593 (not 1567 as recorded in Tancred's 'Rulewater'). He and his bride were infefted in the lands of Langhaugh in Rulewater. He is referred to in reference to the lands of Wauchope in 1604 when his son Andrew's nieces inherited Templehall and Brewlands to the west of Wauchope. He was slaughtered near his house in 1598, with his neighbour James Lorraine of Appotside being one of those implicated, along with Gilbert and Hector, uncles of Hector Lorraine of Harwood. David (16th/17th C.) recorded as 'in Fowltoun' in a letter of 1602 listing the tenants of the lands of Fulton in Bedrule Parish. Other tenants of Fulton farm were Pate Clerk, Walter Turnbull, David Turnbull (son of Adam), Willie Turnbull (the 'Guidman') and Thomas Turnbull. David (16th/17th C.) tenant in Mackside. In 1611 his son 'Hob' was convicted and executed in Jedburgh. David (16th/17th C.) brother of Robert, who was tenant in Denesyde. In 1611 his brother acted as cautioner for his appearance in court in Jedburgh. David (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1618 as 'Davie Trumbill in West Leyis' when he was listed among fugitives in the Middle shires. He probably came from West Lees in Rulewater and was likely related to John who was there in 1616. David (16th/17th C.) recorded as a farm worker of George, portioner of Belses. In 1618 there was a compaint that he and John Brown were tending the animals at Belses during Sunday worship when a group of Middlemases from Lilliesleaf 'unhonnestlie strak and dang thame and brak their headis, to the effusioun of thair bloodis'. David (16th/17th C.) tenant in Lustruther. In 1622 he was found guilty of perjury, apparently having been bribed by Andrew in Belses to lie in the case of theft he brought against William and Walter Middlemas. He was sentenced to have his 'toung pearcet with ane hett boitkyn; and thaireftir Banischet this realme'. David (17th C.) tenant of Unthank in Hobkirk Parish, along with Robert, recorded in 1643. They were probably related to the earlier Archibald. David (17th C.) recorded in 1643 along with Adam as owner of land in Abbotrule valued at £30. This was probably part of Bonchester Townhead, where a separate Adam, as well as William, also lived. David (d.c.1748) schoolmaster at Southdean in at least the years 1734 and 1735. In 1734 he was accused of adultery with one of his pupils, Mary Davidson, who was probably about 16 years old. Another girl gave evidence at the Presbytery, but he was exonerated when it was decided that Davidson was unreliable and not pregnant; nevertheless, he was suspended as Precentor (but not as Parish Clerk). He was succeeded as Schoolmaster by his son Thomas in about 1748 (having previously been his assistant). David 'Millionaire Turnbull' (18th/19th C.) younger son of Thomas of Fenwick and Brieryyards. He left for India in 1799 as part of the medical service, became an indigo planter there and also speculated in cotton. In 1818 he was a civil assistant surgeon at Mirzapore, but retired some time after that. His nickname came from the large fortune he made in India as an indigo planter and cotton speculator. His son was William, who became Deputy Lieutenant for Selkirkshire and inherited Fenwick from his cousin. He died in India, during his father's lifetime (probably 1820s). David of Fenwick and Brieryyards (b.1837) son of William. He became a life member of the Archæological Society in 1874. He joined the Jedforest Club in 1875. He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1878. He was involved with the Upper Teviotdale Fisheries Association in the 1880s. He succeeded to all of the family lands in 1891 (except Palace, which had been sold). He had the house at Brieryyards renovated. However, he later sold all his property and left the country. In 1875 he married Christian, daughter of Hawick lawyer George Oliver. They had 1 daughter and 6 sons: William, who worked in the nitrate business in Chile and married Marie Salmon; David Oliver, a vet in Zomba, Nyasaland, who married Muriel MacKinnon; Margaret Lindsay, who married Hal Worke and had a son who went to British Columbia; George Archibald, who worked for the Cape Civil Service and was killed in the Boer War; Harry, who married Flossie Salmon; John MacLeod MacKinnon, who worked for the South African Forestry Service and wrote for Cornhill magazine; and James, who married Violet MacKinnon and died in East South Africa in WWI. Ebenezer (18th/19th C.) recorded in 1798 as a 'constable against the person in the parish of Cavers'. This was when James Thomson deserted after being balloted to serve in the Militia and his apprehension was sought. His name was also recorded as a constable in relation to a balloted man in Morebattle Parish; hence it is unclear where he was from. Ebenezer (19th C.) recorded in 1837 as apprentice to James Wilson, writer in Hawick. He could be the Ebenezer whose infant daughter's death was recorded in Hawick in 1822. Ebenezer (b.1821) son of stockingmaker Robert and Agnes Oliver, he was born in Denholm. In 1851 and 1861 he was living on Westgate and working as a stockingmaker. He married Margaret Henderson (from Eckford) and their children included: Robert (b.1849); Thomas (b.1851); Jean Purves (b.1853); and William Oliver (b.1857/8). Edward (15th C.) resident of Bedrule. In 1493 he had remission for stealing a cow from Robert Davidson in Newton, with the Laird of Bedrule acting as surety. Eleanor (1785–1853) daughter of William of Burnfoot. She lived at 5 Slitrig Bank with her younger sister Jane. In 1851 she was described as an 'Annuitant', showing that she had been set up with an allowance from her father. Eleanor (20th C.) proprietor of a grocer's shop on Langlands Bank in the mid-1900s. Elizabeth (15th/16th C.) received sasine of the lands of Lanton in Roxburghshire in 1506. This was along with Margaret, who was probably her sister. Elizabeth (15th/16th C.) had a sasine for Gargunnock and other lands in Stirlingshire, along with Janet (perhaps her sister). Elizabeth (16th C.) resident at Haining Castle in 1580 when an inventory of her possessions was recorded. Robert Scott of Haining and his wife Janet Scott were her executors, and she leaft everything to them, except for a gown and 'paitlot' to be given to each of her daughters when they came of age, plus a share of her goods, at the discretion of her executors. It seems likely that she was the mother or stepmother of Robert Scott of Haining and hence wife of Thomas Scott of Haining). Her goods (some in the houses of other people) included several gowns and petticoats, a feather bed, a bolster, several pairs of sheets, blankets, towels, cushions, curtains and some gold jewellery. She also had debts owing from Grizel Scott, Lady Borthwick, from William Crichton in Fala, from Patrick Murray of Falahill, from John, son to Patrick Turnbull, and from several people in Cranston. Elizabeth nee Elliot (16th/17th C.) daughter of Gilbert Eliott of Stobs, she married John Turnbull of Minto. Her husband died in 1641 while on army service in Newcastle, and her son John succeeded while still a minor. She and her brother-in-law Rev. William of Makerstoun appear to have acted as guardians for the young Laird of Minto; in 1643 she was listed along with her son and Rev. William as owner of the Minto estate. Other children of hers included William and Robert, who became merchants' apprentices in Edinburgh in 1650 and 1651, respectively, and probably Alison, who married William Douglas of Timpendean in 1655. Elizabeth 'Bessie' (17th C.) resident of Barnhills. Along with her cottar, Robert Young, she was arrested (probably around 1684) by Capt. Bruce for being a Covenanter and jailed in Selkirk Tolbooth. Elizabeth (d.1698) resident of Minto Parish, possibly related to the Turnbulls of Minto or of Knowe, who are buried there. Her small headstone marked 'Beseiy Turnbul' is still in the old graveyard, but her husband's name is illegible. Elizabeth 'Bessie' (17th C.) cottar at Horsleyhill according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Elizabeth 'Betty' (b.c.1770) listed as a flesher in Denholm on Pigot's 1837 directory. She was living on Main Street in 1841, with surname Leyden, with Robert Laidlaw (probably her grandson) being a flesher. Elizabeth nee Wilson (1753–1828) eldest daughter of Walter Wilson, 'Haunless Wat'. She married draper George Turnbull and worked in the draper's shop at 14 High Street. She is said to have ahd 15 children, 10 of whom survived infancy. Several of her children died of consumption, and it is said that 'when the last one was reported to her as being about to die, she would not even go to visit the sick one, so much had her motherly instincts been blunted by the constant visit of death to her children'. She was known in later life as 'Auld Betty Turnbull'. Elizabeth 'Betty' nee Alexander (b.c.1790) born at Swinnie, daughter of farmer George Alexander. She married carrier and grocer Alexander. In 1861 she was a 'Petty Shopkeeper' in Kirkton, living as a widow there with her daughter Margaret, who was born at Bonchester. Elizabeth 'Betty' (19th C.) daughter of inn-keeper John. She took over as Bonchester post-mistress from her brother John and also ran the public house at Bridgend after her father died in 1838. However she soon afterwards moved to another public house in Moffat. Elliot (b.1794/5–1857) labourer living at Whisgills Edge in Castleton Parish in 1841. By 1851 he was living near Canonbie and farming 3 acres. He may be the man of that name listed at 'Sorbies' in 1821 among the subscribers to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border'. He married Elizabeth (or 'Betty'), who died in 1873, aged 62. Their children included: Betty; Janet; Elspeth; Robert; Agnes (1847/8–1900), who died at Newcastleton; and Mary (1851/2–97), who died at Southfield. He died at Gillfoot and his wife in Newcastleton. The family are buried at Ettleton. Elspeth (17th C.) servant to Bailie Scott of Ormiston. In 1683 she was struck by stones thrown across the Teviot by a group of men, wounding her, when she and Isabel Hardie (daughter to cooper Robert Hardie) were watching linen clothing that was being bleached there. Elspeth (17th C.) tenant in Flatt in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Elspeth (19th C.) listed as a straw hat maker in Newcastleton in Pigot's 1837 directory. In 1841 she was living in the house of Rev. John Black. Esther (b.1809) daughter of Thomas and Mary Oliver. She is recorded along with Christian in Pigot's 1837 directory as milliners and dressmakers on the High Street. She and her sister Christian were living with their mother Mary on Buccleuch Street in 1841. In 1851 she was a 'Woollen Seamstress & Annuitant' living on Allars Crescent, in a separate household to her older sister. Fergus (15th/16th C.) tenant of Hillhouse, listed after James, also there, in the 1516 pardon for Turnbulls who might have assisted the Homes in actions against the King. This is not a common local name. Francis (16th/17th C.) recorded being in Bedrule in 1619. He was listed among many Turnbulls and others, under Walter of Bedrule, who were accused of taking hay from Huntliehill and declared as rebels for not appearing to answer the charge. Francis (b.1700/1) Burgh Officer of Hawick. He gave evidence during proceedings for the Division of the Common in 1767, when he was described as being married. He was also a Burgess, on which account his evidence was objected to by the Duke of Buccleuch's lawyers. He became a Burgh Officer in 1733, and remained until at least 1767. He described how he and fellow Officer John Stewart once managed to drive cattle belonging to neighbouring tenants (which were being pastured on the Common, against the orders of the Magistrates) to the West Port; this was probably around 1743. He was recorded as 'Town Officer' ina baptismal record of 1743. In 1753 he was one of the 2 Burgh Officers who were granted a yearly salary of 10 shillings 'on account of their age and infirmity'. He may be the Francis, son of William, born in Hawick in 1703. He could be the Francis who witnessed a baptism in Hawick in 1729 for Francis Scott. He married Elizabeth Gibson and their children baptised in Hawick, included: Isobel (b.1732); Isobel (again, b.1739); James (b.1740); and Gideon (b.1743). The witnesses in 1743 were Bailie Gideon Ruecastle and shoemaker John Scott. Francis (18th/19th C.) servant at Mackside in Southdean Parish. In 1797 he was listed in the Lieutenancy Book for Roxburghshire, with the annotation 'Subst.', suggesting that someone substituted for him. His name appears again in 1798, with John Peggie, tailor in Edinburgh, serving as his substitute in the Militia. Francis (18th/19th C.) mason at Yethouse. He was among the subscribers to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border'. At Yethouse in 1841 were Janet Brydon (aged about 70) and mason Francis (aged about 40), who were probably his widow and son. Francis (b.1797/8) stone mason at Yethouse. His mother was probably Elizabeth Brydon, who was there in 1841. It seems likely that his father was Francis, the mason at Yethouse recorded in 1821. He was still at Yethouse in 1851, but by 1861 his name appears as Francis Armstrong. Francis 'Frank' (19th C.) shepherd at a farm near Saughtree. He was a collector of local antiquities, including coins, flints, an iron sword, which were examined by the Berwickshire Naturalists' Club when they visited in 1889. Gavin (16th C.) listed along with Adam in 1534 when they were entered into ward in Blackness Castle, with Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme being discharged of the bond he had made to the King for their good behaviour. It seems likely they were either father and son or brothers, but it is not clear where they were from exactly. Gavin (d.1574/5) tenant in Over Ancrum. His will is recorded in the Commissariot of Edinburgh in 1574/5 and that of his wife Katherine Scott in 1578. Gavin (16th C.) recorded as 'Gawenn Trumble of the Wowley' among men complained about by the English Warden for a raid into England in 1587. The other men named included James of Stonedge as well as Oliver of Westerhouses. He presumably lived at Wolfelee in Rulewater. Gavin (16th C.) recorded as 'called of Bullerwell' when he witnessed a marriage contract between Gledstains of Cocklaw and Turnbull of Wauchope in 1593. The designation suggests that he no longer resided at Billerwell. He must have been related to the slightly earlier and late Adams. He may be the same 'Gawin Trumbill in Bullerwall' listed in a court case of 1605. Gavin in Howa (16th/17th C.) brother of Robert in Hallrule and Hector in Stanedge, as well as uncle of Hector of Barnhills. He is probably the 'Gawen', brother of William of Barnhills, who is listed among the Borderers summoned to appear before the Privy Council in 1584/5. He is probably the brother of Robert 'tutor of Barnhills' and also Hector who (along with his brothers, as well as Hector in Barnhills) was declared as a rebel in 1586 for his part in the murder of 6 men called Grahamslaw. Perhaps the same Gavin was 'sone to Archie in Hawla' recorded in 1586/7 among Borderers accused of crimes who had failed to appear in court and were given one more chance to find sureties. He is recorded in 1604, along with his nephews Hector and George, as well as Hector of Stanedge, being tried for the murder of 6 sons of John Grahamslaw of Little Newton. In 1606 he is recorded as 'Gawin Turnbill in Howe', brother of Hector in Stanedge and the deceased Robert in Hallrule, when there was a summons for them to prosecute the sons of Harry Grahamslaw who had been accused of the murder of Robert in Hallrule. There was clearly an ongoing feud between the 2 families. Gavin (16th/17th C.) son of the Laird of Bedrule. He is listed among men declared as fugitives for not appearing at a Borders Commissioners' court in Jedburgh in 1605. Gavin (17th C.) recorded in 1643 as owner of lands in '...side' in Abbotrule Parish. This was probably Mackside, with his land being valued at £24. He may have been related to the Laird of Tofts, who held the bulk of the property in 1643 as well as £102 worth of land in Minto. Gavin of Clarilaw (17th C.) recorded in a record of 1666 relating to Hassendean Parish. He was also listed in the 1663 Land Tax Rolls for Hassendean Parish, paying tax on £273. He was presumably related to the earlier Hector of Clarilaw. He could be the same Gavin who had a charter for 'Kerswell' in Hassendean from the Commendator of Melrose in about 1621. Gavin (17th C.) recorded in Roberton Parish (when it included Hassendean) in 1684. A 'bastard childs' of his was baptised, with witnesses John (who was surely related, perhaps his father) and Andrew Leyden. Gavin (18th C.) clothier in Hawick. He was listed along with Thomas as witness to a baptism for weaver John Smith in 1764. It seems likely he was either father or brother of Thomas (who was a clothier and dyer, and father of poet Gavin). He may be the Gavin who witnessed a baptism for John Cavers in Wilton in 1769. He and Thomas were witnesses to a baptism for William Thomline (who may have been their employer at Roughheugh Mill) in 1770. It is possible that he was the Gavin, son of William, born in Kirkton Parish in 1731 (but this would be too late if he was indeed the father of Thomas). Gavin (d.c.1800) school friend of John Leyden's. He was the first of his cohort to go off abroad, travelling to India, but dying soon after he arrived. He is mentioned in John Leyden's poem 'To Mr. James Purvis' – 'The first that tried the eastern sea Was Gavin, gentle youth, was he! His yellow locks fann'd by the breeze, Gleam'd golden on the orient seas: But never shall his steps be seen Bounding again on Denholm's pleasant green' [JL]. It is possible that he is the Dr. Gavin who was listed at Wiltonhall (in Wilton Parish) in the 1794 and 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Gavin (1764–1816) born in Hawick, son of 'Tammy Trumble' and Beatrix Ruecastle. He moved from Hawick when he was about 10, with his father seeking work in factories elsewhere, including Galashiels and being a dyer in a factory in Kilmarnock. Although his parents were once fairly well-off, their circumstances changed and he was forced to abandon his education and become an apprentice in a carpet factory (Gregory & Thomson) in Kilmarnock; he writes of himself that he was 'deprived early in life, by unforeseen misfortunes, of the means of pursuing that liberal plan of education he once had a prospect of'. He was said to be small in stature and of a dark complexion. It is also said that he spent more time thinking about poetry than weaving and as a result lived in poverty in a small garret, where 'the poverty of Burns, of which there has been much talk in the world, was opulence compared to it!'. In Kilmarnock he became a friend of Robert Burns (whose poetry style he imitated, and they both had many of the same influences). It has been suggested that he may have told Burns the story of the giant pin of the haggis served at Haggishaa, which inspired the lines in 'Address to a Haggis'. He moved with his family to Glasgow, where he worked as a labourer, and it was there that his first volume of verse was published. He later became an actor with George Sutherland's Company in Dumfries and wrote at least one short play, 'The Recruit'. In Dumfries he became reacquainted with Burns. However, the acting company in Dumfries broke up (at least in part because of it's revolutionary politics, which made it unpopular with the authorities). He married an actress (who appeared with him in 'The Recruit' in 1794) and in 1795 emigrated to America, settling in Charleston, South Carolina. There he joined a theatre company and contributed poems to the local newspapers. He lived in modest addreses in downtown Charleston and taught part time. In 1813 he became an American citizen. He had a brother, Thomas, who also emigrated to America, and has surviving relatives. His publications are 'Poetical Essays' (1788) and 'Poems, by Gavin Turnbull, Comedian' (1794). Many of his verses are ellegies and pastorals, in the tradition of the late 18th century, with one known as 'Silvanus, or The Genius of Tiviot' and another ode to the Tweed (as well as several to Irvine Water); however, the most interesting are in Scots dialect and in a similar style to Burns' best-known poetry. Note that the suggested years of his birth are given in some works as being as early as 1758 and as late as 1770, while the year of his death is sometimes suggested to have been much earlier than it was; in fact his death is recorded in a Charleston newspaper in 1816, where he is described as 'late Comedian, whose talents as a performer on the stage, will long be remembered by many of the inhabitants of this city'. Shortly afterwards a notice appeared in a South Carolina newspaper asking for subscriptions to a volume of poems to support his widow (however, no such volume ever appeared). The project 'The Collected Poems of Gavin Turnbull Online' was completed in 2015. He is buried in the cemetery of the First Presbyterian Scots Church in Charleston. Gavin (18th/19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, probably tenant famer at Brieryhill. His wife was Mary Blake and their son Gavin was born in 1800. Since Brieryhill was also sometimes 'Brieryhall', it is possible he is the 'Gawain in the Hall' mentioned in 'Daft Jock Grey's Song', in the verse that refers to Lord Napier of Wilton Lodge and Rev. Charters of Wilton. Gavin (1800–54) son of Adam, tenant of Hassendeanbank, brother of Adam Ogilvie and John Robson. He was partly educated at Minto Parish school under William Grant. He became a surgeon with the East India Company. He may have married Isabella Jane Fenwick in 1826 and they had 5 children. He secondly married Mary MacDougall Stuart in 1841. He died on Jersey. Rev. Gavin (1800–32) born at Brieryhill, he became minister of Teviothead 'chapel-of-ease' from 1821, and probably remained there until his death. He was certainly still preacher there in 1831. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 1825 'History of Hawick'. He published 'A Sermon on Meekness' in Hawick in 1832. He was probably son of John, who was tenant farmer at Brieryhill in Wilton Parish. In a letter written in 1824 he is described as 'a Midling preacher'. George of Bedrule (15th C.) witnessed a charter for Stephen Scott of Castlelaw in 1448. He may have been son of John of Bedrule, who was recorded in 1432. In 1461 he was witness to a sasine for lands near Branxholme, where he is recorded as 'of Bethroul'; William of Minto was also a witness, so he may have been a close relative. He may be the George who (along with Hector, John and William of Minto) was on the 1464/5 panel to rule on the inheritance of the Barony of Cavers. He was also witness to a sasine of Denholm Mains involving the Cranstons in 1465/6. Probably the same George 'of Bethoroull' witnessed a sasine of 1484/5 for Walter Scott of Branxholme for lands in Mangerton. He may be the George who witnessed a sasine for Wolfelee in 1479. He may be the George 'de bethroul' who had remission in 1493 (along with David Waugh, also from Bedrule, and weaver William White), their crimes being stealing cattle from Pringle in Pilmuir, associating with John of Gatehousecote, communing with the 'traitors of Leven' and accompanying the former Duke of Albany; his surety was Walter Ker of Cessford, while he himself served as surety for the other 2 men. He may be the Laird of Bedrule who was fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1494/5. 'Thomas turnbule Junior dominus de bethroul' served as surety for several Turnbulls in 1494/5; this suggests that he was still alive, but perhaps old and infirm, so that his son Thomas was effectively acting as chief of the Turnbulls at that time. He was probably succeeded by his son Thomas, mentioned as his heir apparent in 1501 and already mentioned several times in the previous decade. Thomas had a brother William, who was thus also his son. George (15th/16th C.) infefted by Walter Turnbull (probably Baron of Hassendean) in the lands of Hassendeanbank in 1493. He may have been a relative of Walter. He was deceased by 1534 when his son an heir John was recorded in a dispute with Andrew Davidson in Selkirk. George (15th C.) recorded being in Bonchester and also 'in stowisle' (i.e. Stouslie) at the 1493 Justice-aire in Jedburgh. David in Bonchester served as his surety and the pair were fined for non-appearance. George (15th C.) recorded at the 1493 Justice-aire in Jedburgh as son of Walter in Bonchester. The entry is after that for George in Bonchester and Stouslie, and hence this is possibly a different man. He was surety for Andrew Turnbull (in the same place), who failed to appear and was accordingly fined. He may be related to Walter of Stouslie, who is recorded in 1494/5. George (15th C.) recorded in the Justice-aire of 1493 along with 4 others. Their crime was concealing a trove of coins that had been found in Minto Kirk, but by rights were Crown property. The Laird of Bedrule served as surety for him and for John Sinclair. Perhaps the same George in Minto had remission in 1493 (in the very next case) for crimes before the date of his previous remission. George of Hallrule (15th/16th C.) recorded as 'of Haw of Roull' when he was witness to a charter of 1484/5, along with George of Bedrule and others. He was appointed as Captain of Hermitage by Patrick Hepburn, Earl of Bothwell, probably around 1492. In 1493 he was 'de aula de roule' when he was surety for Archibald Plenderleith in Bedrule, as well as Simon in Clarilaw. Also in 1493 he had remission for a series of crimes: stealing sheep from Nettleflat on Gala Water; separately stealing a horse and tools from Nettleflat; plundering from Thomas Rutherford at Bonjedward; and involvement in the slaughter of Archibald Rutherford. His surety was Sir Robert Ker. In 1494/5 he and Patrick Earl of Bothwell (Lord of Liddesdale) were fined £10 Scots for the non-appearance of William Elliot and each of 85 other Borderers; he was there recorded as Captain of Hermitage. Also in 1494/5 he was also surety for Thomas Turnbull in Gatehousecote. He is probably the George 'in the Hermitage' who pledged good behaviour to Patrick, Earl of Bothwell in 1498, along with a large number of men from Liddesdale and elsewhere. Probably the same George of 'Hawroull' was listed in 1502 among about 20 Turnbulls and others who were fined for failing to appear to answer for the murder of Robert Oliver; he was supposed to enter into the court John, Andrew and William in Gatehousecote, William in Bonchester and his son Lawrence, David in Bonchester, and David, Andrew and Hugh Shiel. Also in 1502 he was surety (along with Bartholomew in Rawflat) for Adam, tenant in Hornshole and Chamberlain Newton, who had brought Englishman Sir John Musgrave to burn and plunder Selkirk. That year he was also surety (along with Robert Scott in Stirches) for Walter Turnbull in Branxholme, as well as for Hector Shiel and for John Sinclair (from Cavers, who murdered John Moffat). Also in 1502 he was surety, along with several other Turnbull chiefs, for Margaret in Hawick, who was convicted of theft and resetting thieves. In 1508 he was on the panel for Adam Hepburn inheriting the Lordship of Liddesdale. All of these records together show that he was a prominent man in Rulewater at the time. George 'Hawick' (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 being called 'hawic' and living at 'turri de wauchop' (presumably Wauchope Tower). David of Wauchope was surety for him and they were fined for non-appearance. Perhaps the same man was 'georgii turnbule de hawik' and explicitly listed with along with David (who was probably a close relative and perhaps the same David of Wauchope), among men of Liddesdale who failed to appear at the Justice-aire in 1494/5. He presumably lived at or came from Hawick. George (15th/16th C.) listed in the 1501 Exchequer Rolls, along with Robert, 2 Johns, Ninian and David. Their £40 fine was granted to Thomas, son and heir of George of Bedrule. He could be the same as one of the other contemporary Georges. George (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 as 'in Wyndis' (probably Weens in Rulewater) when along with about 20 Turnbulls and others he failed to appear to answer for the murder of Robert Oliver. Walter Scott in Newhall Burnhead and Thomas Brown in Cavers were called to enter him, with his surety being the Sheriff of Roxburgh. Failing to appear, he was put to the horn and forfeited his goods. George (15th/16th C.) recorded 'in Toftis' in 1502 when he was allowed to pay a fine for his crimes of assisting rebel Robert Turnbull, called 'Muriale' in the burning of Riddell and stealing of 480 sheep, 2 cows and goods. John Turnbull of Tofts served as surety, so was presumably his close relative. Note that Pitcairn appears to have mistakenly called him 'David'. It is possible has the Turnbull of Tofts who married a daughter of Scott of Synton and was 'Lasy Toftturnbull'. George (15th/16th C.) tenant in 'tandilnes' (probably Tanlaw Naze) in 1503. He was listed among men who were fined (in his case 4 oxen, 4 cows, a horse and 30 sheep, which was more than most others) for failing to attend the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. He was probably related to William, who was listed in the same place. George (15th/16th C.) tenant in Bedrule, recorded in the 1516 remission for Turnbulls and others who may have given assistance to Alexander, Lord Home. It is possible that he was the Laird of Bedrule, but he is clearly listed as being 'in Bethroule'. He may be the same George 'in Bedrule' mentioned in 1523. George of Bedrule (d.bef. 1528) possibly son of Thomas of Bedrule, who is recorded in 1502. He is not mentioned on the 1516 remission for a large number of Turnbulls, suggesting perhaps that he was a minor, or elsewhere at the time (William of Minto is named first and is clearly the head of the family at that time). He was on an inquest in Jedburgh in 1523, along with George 'in Bedrule' (therefore possibly related). He may have been the Laird who was present at the signing of the bond among Border Lairds to help the Warden (Earl of Angus) in 1524/5. It is also possible that he was the George, son of Thomas, who was wounded by William Scott, son of Robert Scott in Allanhaugh. It is unclear exactly when this happened, but Scott had remission in 1535. He married Janet, daughter of Sir Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst in 1519 and was succeeded by his son Thomas. In 1528 Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme had a gift from King James V of the 'ward, relief and non-entry' of his lands, as well as the marriage of his heir, Thomas (then still a minor). He must have had other children, since Sir Walter Scott also had rights to the marriage of 'ony vther aire or airis male, or female, of the said vmquhile George'. In 1553 Robert 'brother german of the lord of Bedroull' is recorded in the Selkirk Protocol Books and presumably his son. In 1578/9 there is a record of John, 'broder sone to the said Sir Thomas', who must have been his grandson (although the son's name is unknown). Sir Walter Scott married his widow in 1530/1. George (15th/16th C.) recorded as being at Minto and listed right after William of Minto among a large number of Turnbulls pardoned in 1516 for assisting Alexander, Lord Home. He may be the same as one of the other Turnbulls. George (15th/16th C.) listed as tenant of Fulton in 1516, along with Adam and Andrew (hence possibly his brothers). They were among Turnbulls to receive remission for their part in assisting Alexander, Lord Home. He may be same as George 'in Foultoun' who was part of an inquest into the ownership of the lands of Longnewton held in Jedburgh in 1533. George (15th/16th C.) recorded as 'layman of the diocese of Glasgow' in 1526 when he had permission to marry Christian Ker, despite being within the 3rd and 4th degrees of consanguinity. This is preserved in the Selkirk Protocol Books. George (16th C.) son and heir of Thomas 'in Rawflat'. He is described in 1540 in a court case involving a dispute between his father Thomas and William Scott, tenant of Hassendean. Part of the dispute is over a 1536 marriage contract he had with William Scott's eldest daughter and heir, Elizabeth. George (16th C.) listed as 'in Bullorwell' (i.e. Billerwell) when part of a panel deciding on disputed lands, held in Jedburgh in 1533. In 1541 he is recorded as tenant of half the lands of Hyndlee in Jedforest. It seems likely he is also the George transcribed being 'of Bullckwell' when he was one of the pall-bearers at the funeral of Lady Isobel Kerr, wife of William, Viscount Drumlanrig, when she was buried in 1628. George of Standhill (16th C.) listed as pledge for the Laird of Minto in 1553/4. This was in the assurance given to keep peace with the Rutherfords and others. He and George 'of the Tour' were to remain in ward in Edinburgh, as pledges for Sir Thomas of Bedrule, Hector, Tutor of Minto and David of Wauchope. George (16th C.) farmer at Town-o-Rule. His yard there is listed among the lands disputed by the Barons of Feu-Rule in 1562. He may be related to the earlier Andrew and Thomas who are recorded as tenants there. George of Barnhills (16th C.) recorded in 1541 when he witnessed a dispute over a sum of money involving James Douglas of Cavers and William 'Familtounne'. He was also recorded in 1562 when he was ordered to be warded in Dunbar Castle. George Douglas, younger of Bonjedward was his surety. He was also listed in 1564 among Border lairds who were ordered to support the warden, Ker of Cessford. It is unclear how he was related to other Turnbulls of Barnhills. George (16th C.) holder of quarter of the lands of Raperlaw. In 1564 his lands there were leased to William Gray and William Redford. George of Chamberlain Newton and Woollee (16th C.) Burgess of Jedburgh, He was recorded as Laird of Chamberlain Newton in 1563 when he witnessed a notorial instrument between Robert Michelson and David Home of Wedderburn regarding the lands of Blackhaugh (near Clovenfords). There were Turnbulls at Chamberlain Newton earlier, but it is seems that this George no longer lived in the Hawick area, and hence it is unclear how he was related to other local Turnbulls. He may be the George who witnessed a charter in 1549, when Robert Scott of Howpasley granted Appletreehall to Hector, brother of David Turnbull of Wauchope. In 1567 he was 'of Wowlie' when he tried to eject David Elliot as tenant in his 6 merk land of Chamberlain Newton. In 1572 he sold half of Chamberlain Newton to Gavin Eliott of Bailielee

(and later Stobs) and his wife Jean Scott; they complained to the Privy Council that David Elliots' widow Margaret Turnbull (who is not stated to be a relative, but that is unclear), who possessed the other half of Chamberlain Newton, encouraged her sons Walter and John Scott to attack Gavin Eliott's servant there. He is probably the George 'of Vowly' whose son was murdered some time before 1587, as mentioned in the Privy Council (when those at the horn for the murder were excepted from a respite given to Borderers accused of crimes); the murder is also mentioned in instructions from the King to Archibald Douglas (8th Earl of Angus and Lieutenant on the Border) as 'the scollar named Turnble, sone to George Turnble in Wowlie'. George (16th C.) tenant in Catlee. In 1567 Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst was ordered to present him to answer changes of raiding into England. He was probably related to Eckie of Catlee, recorded in 1586/7. George 'Geordie' (16th C.) tenant of Gavin of Elliot of Falnash in 1569. Elliot acted as cautioner for his tenants at a meeting in Hawick, assuring that they would obey the laws of the Lord Regent. He was probably related to Andrew, who was listed right after him. George of Hassendeanbank (16th C.) listed among among men from the Jedburgh area accused in 1573 by Robert Kerr of Woodhead of raiding his house and farm, although they were acquitted because Kerr had reset the fugitive Kerr of Ferniehirst. He was listed as 'of Hassinbank'. George (16th C.) recorded as Reader at Bedrule in 1579 and 1580. There could be some confusion with John, who was Reader just before this. George (16th C.) of Hallrule, probably descendant of the earlier George of Hallrule. He is recorded as 'in Hallrewll' in 1557 when there was a complaint to the Regent about 'molestations' by him and Thomas of Bedrule. This related to the lands of Kirklands, Hallrule and Swinnie owned by Sir John Kerr of Ferniehirst, suggesting that there was an ongoing land dispute. He was 'of Halroule' in 1561 when listed among Border Lairds who appeared before the Queen to give names of those guilty of theft. He was probably 'The Guidman of Halrule' listed in 1564 among Border lairds who were ordered to support the Warden, Ker of Cessford. In 1571 he appeared before the Privy Council and was instructed 'to abide in Leith'. In 1574 he signed a bond of service with Archibald, 8th Earl of Angus, along with other Turnbulls. In 1576 he was recorded among a group of Turnbulls and others (from Barnhills, Billerwell, Belses and Chesters) who had a bond with another group of Turnbulls (from Minto, Bewlie, Kames and Troneyhill) and others, not to harm each other. Probably the same man was 'in Halroule' in 1581 when he and others were denounced as rebels for refusing to obey the charge to restore Sir Thomas Ferniehirst to the living of Bedrule parish. Also in 1581 he was listed among 10 men implicated in the murder of Walter, son of Wat Turnbull of Bewlie. In 1581/2 there was a charge to remove him and others from their lands for not complying. And in 1583/4 Sir Thomas Kerr had an 'escheat' to take his goods, along with those of John and Walter, farmers at 'Roull' and Hobsburn, respectively, who may have been close relations. He may be the George of Hallrule named in 1587 as one of the 13 main Lairds of the Middle March who were charged to keep thieves in check. In 1589 he was on a list of Border Lairds who failed to appear before the Privy Council to give 'thair gude advise anent the gude reule and quietnes of the Bordouris' and were denounced as rebels. He is the 'Turnble of Halroule' listed on the 'Roll of the Clans' of about 1590, and is the George 'of Halreull' listed among Border Lairds by Monipennie in 1597. In 1595 he was recorded along with Turnbulls of Minto, Bewlie, Barnhills and Stonedge, as well as Davidsons, when John Ker of Barnhills complained they had harassed his tenants in Barnhills; most were declared as rebels for non-appearance. In 1597 his daughter Isobel had a marriage contract with John, eldest son of Hector Turnbull of Barnhills. In 1603, as part of the marriage contract, he rented the half lands of Hallrule to the Turnbulls of Barnhills. It is possible that there are 2 generations of Georges compounded here. George (16th C.) brother of James 'of the Toure'. Along with his brother he was listed in 1579/80 among men accused of raiding into England. He is probably the 'George Trumbill in Tour' who signed the 1560 bond ('at the pen led by the notar') to settle the feud between the Rutherfords and the Kers. He may be the George 'of the Toure' who signed the 'Auld Band of Roxburgh' in 1551 and who was one of the pledges for the Laird of Bedrule in 1553/4; he and George of Standhill were to remain in ward in Edinburgh. He is probably the George 'of the Tour' listed in 1564 among Border lairds who were ordered to support the Warden, Ker of Cessford. George 'Geordie', 'the Duds' (16th C.) recorded in 1586/7 among Borderers accused of crimes who had failed to appear in court and were given one more chance to find sureties. He is listed as 'Geordie Turnbull, callit the Duddis'. George (16th C.) Laird of Billerwell in 1589, presumably a descendant of the earlier George and Adam. He was among men complained about by the English Warden in 1590 for a raid into England 3 years earlier; it was claimed that 200 men raided Doortrees and Stobs, taking 80 cows, 240 sheep, 10 horses, goods and 6 prisoners. The later Adam of Billerwell (whose son and heir was also George) may have been his son. If so he also had a son Andrew. He is probably also the 'Turneble of Bullerwall' listed on the 'Roll of the Clans' of about 1590. He is probably the 'Layrd of Bullerwell, a Tromble' who in 1598 was among some Scottish prisoners taken from a large group who went into England to go hunting; he was released soon afterwards. He may be the 'goodman of Bullerwell' who complained in 1601 about Englishmen stealing his cattle, sheep and horses. George of the Tofts (16th C.) listed among landed men of the Borders in the roll of 'Landit Men' of about 1590. He is probably the George 'of the Toftis' who was ordered to appear personally in 1567 to answer accusations about raiding into England. George (16th/17th C.) younger son of John of Minto. In 1595 he was recorded along with his father and brother Thomas, among Turnbulls and Davidsons, when John Ker of Barnhills complained they had harassed his tenants in Barnhillis; unlike his father and brother, he was declared as a rebel for non-appearance. George 'the Creelman' (16th/17th C.) recorded as 'callit the creilman in Crocecleucht' (i.e. 'Crosscleuch') in a letter of 1602 listing the tenants of the lands of Fulton. George (16th/17th C.) farmer at Crosscleuch, recorded in 1602 (and separate from George 'the Creelman'). He was son of the deceased John. George (d.1601) recorded as George 'Trumbill in Philhophaucht' when he was witness to transactions in Selkirk in 1579 and when he purchased land in Midlem in 1579/80. He is probably the George of Philiphaugh involved in a transaction in Selkirk in 1580. He was recorded in Philiphaugh in 1581 when he had a marriage contract between his son John and Katherine, daughter of Adam Hislop in Ashiestiel; his wife Isabel Murray is also mentioned. He witnessed a transaction in 1581 for James Ker in Yair. Also in 1581 he and his wife gave sasine of 2½ acres of land to Katherine, daughter of Adam Hislop in Ashiestiel. His son James witnessed him granting a sasine in 1581. In 1581 he represented the Sheriff of Selkirkshire and his tenants in an agreement to pay the minister of Selkirk. In 1581/2 he witnessed other transactions in Selkirk in 1581/2, including an agreement between the widow and son (Mark) of John of Philiphaugh. He is probably the George who witnessed a transaction for his brother Mark in Philiphaugh in 1581/2. In 1582 he witnessed another transaction in Selkirk. He is described as 'in Phillophauch' in 1601, when his son John was served heir to his 5-merk land in Philiphaugh, called 'Bairborisland'. He may have been son of John, who inherited these lands from his mother in 1558. George 'Geordie' of Belses (d.1603) brother of David in Belses, with other brothers being John and Adam. He was listed among a group of Turnbulls (led by sons of the Laird of Bedrule) who were accused in 1579 of raiding the lands of 'Pansoun' in England, stealing cattle and taking the Laird there prisoner; his brother David was also listed. The brothers were also recorded in 1581 when accused of attacking the farm at Rawflat and killing Walter of Rawflat. He was denounced in 1583/4 for failing to appear before the Privy Council; he was listed along with Sir Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule and others. In 1586/7 his brother Adam was listed among Borderers accused of crimes and given a last chance to provide sureties. In 1587 Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst acted as surety for him, as well as his brother David and also Andrew in Belses. He was tried in 1603 for a long string of crimes, including: murdering John Hamilton of Cumnock; murdering William, son of Walter Turnbull of Rawflat; capturing and torturing Walter Turnbull's servant Adam Turnbull (it is said that he had him hung by the feet and shoulders for 13 days, causing his feet to rot off); illegally carrying guns; shooting Walter Turnbull, younger of Rawflat; stealing 4 cows from John Donaldson in Melrose; stealing 6 cows, 20 sheep, 2 horses and goods from David Riddell in St. Boswells; stealing 16 cows from the Laird of Bemersyde; stealing 20 sheep from the Lady of Newton; stealing 5 sheep from George Davidson in Belses; stealing a horse from George Wilson in Langnewton; and being 'a commone briggane and notorious cowmone theif'. He claimed to have killed William Turnbull in self defence (suggesting some intra-family feud). He also appears to have killed the elder Walter of Rawflat, after he was pronounced a rebel for refusing to leave the lands of Rawflat and part of Belses in 1581. He was acquitted of most of the offences, but nevertheless convicted of illegally carrying fire-arms and had his right hand cut off at the Market Cross of Edinburgh. Later the same year he appeared on charges of 'the filthie cryme of Incest and Adulterie' with his brother Jock's wife Marion. At the same time he was accused of stealing a horse from Walter Turnbull of Rawflat in 1577, stealing 20 cows from Rawflat in 1579, stealing 4 horses from 4 millers in Jedburgh about 1600 and stealing a horse from the younger Walter of Rawflat. This time he was convicted of all charges, and hanged in Edinburgh, with all his lands and goods confiscated. He is probably the 'Turneble of Belses' listed on the roll of 'Landit Men' of about 1590. In 1598 was accused of being part of a gang that stole 16 cattle from Bemersyde. In 1603 he was tried in Edinburgh and had 'his richt hand strucken from his airm'. He is surely related to the slightly later George of Belses, possibly his son, as well as the Hector of Belses recorded in 1604. George (16th/17th C.) tenant of the lands of Fulton, recorded in a 1602 letter, which lists 2 other George Turnbulls! He is distinguished with the appellation 'callit of Crawden'. He was probably related to 'David of Crawden' recorded in 1583/4. George (16th/17th C.) brother of Hector of Barnhills, he was tenant in Howa. He could be the George, son to 'Archie of Howa' recorded in the inventory of Mark Ker of Kippielaw in 1579. He could be the George, brother of Hector in Barnhills who (along with his brother, as well as Robert 'tutor of Barnhills' and Robert's brothers Hector and Gavin) was declared a rebel in 1586 for his part in the murder of 6 men called Grahamslaw. In 1604 he was denounced as a rebel (along with his brother Hector, uncle Gavin and also Hector of Stanedge) for failing to appear on the charge of murdering 6 sons of John Grahamslaw of Little Newton. He could be the George 'called of Howden' who was named by the Privy Council when a commission was appointed to apprehend him and 7 other Turnbulls (plus 2 Davidsons), for not finding caution following being found guilty of the murder of Thomas Ker of Crailinghall and 6 Grahamslaw brothers. He was described as being 'in Howa' in 1606 when he was one of the Turnbull clan accused of laying waste to Appotside and Harwood in 1598–1605. The action against him was not pursued, although the Turnbulls of Wauchope were tried and Thomas Turnbull convicted. He was probably the George in 'Howay', brother of Hector of Barnhills, who resigned a tenement of land off the Kirk Wynd in Hawick in 1610. George (16th/17th C.) son of Adam of Billerwell. He witnessed a sasine in 1612 and was part of a bond with his father in 1619, with John Haliburton of Mertoun. George (d.c.1637) 2nd son of Hector of Wauchope. In 1605 he was 'tutor' to his relatives Jean and Beatrix Turnbull, daughters of Walter of Wauchope. He is also mentioned as 2nd son of Hector in a court case of 1605, where a separate George is also listed in Wauchope. In 1606 he was one of the men charged with stealing from and burning Appotside and Harwood, killing 3 men and cutting down Appotside woods in the period 1598–1605. Although he was tried (and probably involved), he was acquitted, with his older brother Thomas being the only one convicted. He is recorded in a 'contract of wadset' with Sir Andrew Kerr of Oxnam in 1612. He held the lands of Templehall (in the Rule valley) in exchange for advancing money to Sir Andrew. He must have gained a portion of the lands, since in 1627 he granted them to Sir James Douglas of Mordington. In 1632 Templehall and Brewlands are described as 'possessed by George Turnbull of Wauchope and his tenants', but the feu of the lands were held by Jean Turnbull, niece and heir of Andrew, son of David of Wauchope (hence presumably a distant cousin). However, his son James renounced all rights to the lands to William Earl of Lothian in 1655. He may have been the George describe as 'there' in relation to Templehall in a sasine of 1604. In 1637 he was described as 'called of Wauchope' when the guardianship of his son James was given to Hector in Clarilaw, as his closest male relative; it seems likely that this Hector was his cousin (since the record would have stated if they were brothers). George (16th/17th C.) tenant at Wauchope, recorded in a court case of 1605 in which John Elliot of Copshaw and others were accused of stealing livestock from Wauchope. He is separate from the 2nd son of Hector of Wauchope, who is also listed there, but could be related to the Adam, also tenant of Wauchope. George (16th/17th C.) son of James of West Lees. He was listed among men declared as fugitives for not appearing at a Borders Commissioners' court in Jedburgh in 1605. George (16th/17th C.) son of Walter of Bedrule. In 1618 he was witness to a bond between his father and George Rutherford, younger in Abbotrule. He was also recorded as son of the Laird of Bedrule among fugitives listed at the Privy Council in 1618. Perhaps the same George was listed in 1619 among a group of more than 100 men under John Ker of Langnewton who Sir Andrew of Oxnam complained had broken up and stolen turfs cut for his use on Oxnam Moor. George (16th/17th C.) acted as Chamberlain to the Scotts of Buccleuch for 'the Forest' in the period 1617–21. George of Belses (16th/17th C.) possibly son of the earlier George of Belses, who was hanged in 1603. He is later described in the Commissioners' Court as 'Geordie in Belsches', when he is accused of having stolen 11 sheep from the lands of 'Raflatt' (e.e. Rawflat) belonging to the Davidsons, in about 1612; he was sentenced to be hanged, but presumably was later acquitted. In 1618 the curators of the young Andrew Scott of Aikwood complained that he and Andrew (probably a close relative) had not paid the profits of the lands of Hawthornrig for the previous 2 years. Additionally in 1618 he is 'portioner of Belscheis' when he complained about a series of attacks by the Middlemases of Lilliesleaf. Specifically William Middlemas and his sons, brother and supporters fired at the windows of his house in the night, and were only saved 'by the timely arrival of some country people', then servants of William Middlemas attacked his farm workers while he was at Sunday worship and afterwards William 'upbraidit him with mony injurious and reprotchfull speitches, and proudlie and avowedlie appeallit him to the combat'. Several of those accused were found guilty by the Privy Council and imprisoned in Edinburgh Tolbooth. Andrew Ker of Roxburgh had a bond for him in 1622. Robert owned Templehall in 1647 and may have been his son. George (16th/17th C.) probably son of William and hence grandson of Walter of Bedrule. In 1619 he was listed among Turnbulls of Bedrule and Fulton who were declared rebels for removing timber from their former lands of Huntliehill, then owned by Stewart of Traquair. Additionally in 1619 he was 'son to the said William Turnble fiar of Badreule' when listed among Turnbulls accused of taking hay from Huntliehill. George (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish, mentioned in a Session record in 1635. George (17th C.) proprietor of Todshaw in a list of communicants of the Borthwick valley in 1650. George (17th C.) recorded being 'near Edderstonesheils' (i.e. Adderstoneshiel) in 1684 when he was listed among people declared as fugitives for being a Covenanter. George (d.c.1685) tenant in Birkhill when his will was recorded in 1685. It is possible this was the place of that name in Hobkirk Parish, where Walter and Robert were in 1694. George (17th C.) tenant in Doveshaugh. In 1686 he was fined in Hawick for having 'seedie and isufficient meale in the market, being about ane gouping of seed sived out of half ane pecke of his full sacke'. He was fined £10 and the 'pryce of the said haill meall'. George (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish who appears in the Hearth Tax records of 1694. There are 2 men of this name listed, and given how common the surname was locally, there is probably no way of determining who they were. George (17th C.) resident at Blackleemouth according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. George (1661/2–1728) tenant in Upper Bonchester, probably son of William of Upper Bonchester. He is buried in Abbotrule Kirkyard, as recorded on an old headstone there. He was probably related to William Turnbull, miller of Harestane, whose daughter Susan is recorded on the same stone. He apears to have bee the last Turnbull of Bonchester. His daughter Margaret married William Turnbull, tenant of Hartshaugh Mill. He is probably the George listed as 'his sone' after William 'in ye midle of ye toun' on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls; both of them are listed after William 'in Boonchaster'. George (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish, living at Synton in 1698. He married Janet Scott and their children included Helen (b.1695), William (b.1698) and Robert (b.1700). George (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. His wife was a 'Bellendan' (probably Ballantyne) and their daughter Magdalene was baptised in 1713. George (17th/18th C.) candlemaker in Hawick. In 1716 he gave in a bond of £60 Scots granted to Margaret Waugh (widow of Thomas), which she had bequeathed for the poor of the town. Presumably this was some loan between him and Waugh, which Waugh's widow decided to donate to charity. In 1712 he married Janet Cavers, who was also from Hawick and their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1713. The witnesses were Bailie Robert Hardie and shoemaker Walter Scott. He later married Isobell Scott and their children included John (b.1717), William (b.1718), Margaret (b.1720), George (b.1721) and Gilbert (b.1727). The witnesses in 1718 were merchant Adam Elliot and tailor James Boston. George (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living at Spittal in 1717 when his daughter Betty was baptised. He may be the George who married Betty Scott in Cavers in 1714. George 'Young Whitegates' (18th C.) married Elizabeth Dalgleish in Hawick in 1720. His wife was daughter of John Dalgleish, wright at Alton Croft. Perhaps the same George and Elizabeth had a son John in Crailing Parish in 1724. The meaning of his nickname is unclear, but it may be related to the Scotts who were called 'Whiteyetts'. George (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Alemoor in 1723 when his son William was baptised. Perhaps the same George was at Mains in 1731 when his daughter Elizabeth was baptised. George (18th C.) resident of Minto Parish who married Betty Lamb in 1729. Their children included John (b.1730), Helen (b.1731), George (b.1733) and James (b.1736). George (18th C.) resident of Ashybank in 1735, 1741 and 1747. He was recorded as a gardener in 1747. Children, baptised in Cavers, who are probably his include: William (b.1735); John (b.1736); Ann and Archibald (b.1738); William (b.1741); Robert (b.1743); Margaret (b.1744); Walter (b.1747); and George (b.1749). He was surely related to Walter, who was at Ashybank at the same time. George (18th C.) weaver in Hawick. In 1759 he witnessed a baptism for shoemaker Robert Oliver. He married Isabel Henderson in 1754 and their son Adam was born in 1757. The witnesses were tailor John Turnbull (who was probably related) and shoemaker Robert Oliver. George (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He is recorded at Appletreehall in 1772. He is probably the George who witnessed a baptism for Thomas Irvine of Newton in 1787. He married Jean King in 1767 and their children included: Margaret (b.1768); George (b.1769); William (b.1772); John (b.1776); Betty (b.1778); John (b.1781); and Helen (b.1786). In 1769 the witnesses were Andrew Turner and Thomas Reid and in 1772 Andrew Turner and John Mathieson. George (18th C.) resident at Roberton Parish. He was at Deanburnhaugh in 1773 and 1775 and Greenbank in 1781. His children included William (b.1773), Isobel (b.1775), Robert (b.1776), John (b.1779), Margaret (b.1781) and James (b.1783). George (18th C.) married Barbara Hardie in Hawick in 17656. George (18th C.) married Isabel Kedie in Ashkirk in 1767. George (18th C.) Hawick resident. He is probably the George 'Senr.' recorded on the 1785–92 Horse Tax Rolls, and hence father of George junior. He is recorded as 'senior' when he (along with Walter Wilson) witnessed baptisms for George 'Junior' in 1776 and 1777. He may also be the same man as 'George Turnbull Senr. Vintner' in Hawick, who is recorded in the Carriage Tax Rolls for 1794/5. He may be the George who hired the Hawick Parish mortcloth in 1758. He may be the 'Senior Mercht' whose son John was listed in 1797 among Hawick men on the ballot to serve in the Militia. George (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isobel Hardie and their children included: John (b.1774); John (again, b.1777); and William (b.1791). The witnesses in 1777 were Bailie John Hardie (perhaps his wife's father) and ex-Bailie William Elliot. He is probably the George who witnessed baptisms for Bailie John Hardie in Hawick in 1768, 1772 and 1774. His marriage was probably the one with 'Agnes' Hardie recorded in Hawick in 1771. George (18th/19th C.) draper in Hawick, with his shop at 14 High Street. He was sometimes referred to as 'Junior Merchant', and was hence son of another George, who had been a merchant before him. Note that the somewhat later drapers, William and James (at 11 High Street), were not closely related. He is recorded as George 'Junior' on the Horse Tax Rolls in Hawick in 1785–87 and 1791–97. He is probably the merchant George who witnessed a baptism for Archibald Paterson and Isabel Turnbull (perhaps a relative) in 1780 and the merchant who witnessed a baptism for Walter Wilson in 1798. He is probably the 'George Turnbull, jun. Hawick' on the subscribers list for 'Caw's 'Poetical Museum' in 1784. He is probably the George who paid the Shop Tax in Hawick in 1785. He is probably the junior merchant of that name who was among the creditors of Walter Lunn in the court case for bankruptcy against Lunn in the years 1799–1803. He is still 'Jun Mercht' in 1791 and in 1795 when he witnessed a baptism for John Straiton and Agnes Wilson (his sister-in-law). In 1774 he married Elizabeth (or 'Betty') Wilson, eldest eldest daughter of 'Haunless Wat'; she died in 1829. Their children included: George (1776–1809); Katherine (b.1777), who married William Oliver; Janet (b.1778), who died unmarried; Betty (b.1779–81); Walter (1780–1809); Elizabeth or Betty (again, b.1781), who married tobacconist James Scott; William (b.1783); Jane (b.1784); Agnes (or Nancy, 1785–1827), who was unmarried; William (again, 1786–1806); Margaret (b.1787); Thomas (b.1788), who married Jane Veitch; and Isabel (b.1791), who died young. The witnesses in 1776, 1777 and 1784 were George Turnbull senior and Walter Wilson (presumably his father and father-in-law), in 1778 and 1779 were weaver George (perhaps also his father) and merchant Walter Wilson (again) and in 1788 were merchant James Dickson and manufacturer Thomas Turnbull (perhaps a relative). In 1791 the witnesses were merchants Walter Wilson and William Wilson (probably his father-in-law and brother-in-law). In 1809 he was already deceased when his daughter Elizabeth married Hawick tobacconist James Scott. George (b.c.1765) farmer at Deanbrae. He was recorded there in 1741, with Janet (presumably his wife) and 3 agricultural labourers. George (18th/19th C.) resident of Minto Parish who married Janet Martin in 1793. Their children probably included:

Grizel (b.1794); John (b.1796), lkely the seedsman who lived on Allars Bank in Hawick; and Isabel (b.1799). If he was father of John of Allars, then he was probably the 'Mr Turnbull Allars' whose Clerk Robert Scott was listed in the Lieutenancy Book in 1799. George (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1794 he married Helen Laidlaw, who was also from Hawick. George (1776–1809) eldest son of draper George. He may be the 'Junr. Mercht.' listed in Hawick on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. It seems likely he was the George, son of George 'Junior', who was on the short-list for Cornet in 1794 (along with John, son of George 'Senior') and who was listed as a merchant when he was elected Cornet in 1795. He is probably also the 'George Turnbull Junr. Shopkeeper to his father' recorded in Hawick in 1797 on the list of men on the ballot to serve in the Militia. In 1799 he was 'George Junr. Merch with his father' among those 'In the Ballot Box 1797 not drawn still residing in Hawick parish'; he was still 'Junr. Merchant' on the 1801 list. George (18th/19th C.) resident of Larriston. He subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. George (18th/19th C.) recorded as proprietor of the Cross Keys in Hawick on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He had 3 work horses at that time. It is unclear whether this was the Cross Keys on the High Street or at the Sandbed. He was surely related to the John of the Cross Keys whose son Walter died in 1808. He could be the George 'Senior', whose son John was among those on the short-list for Cornet in 1794 (along with George, son of George 'Junior'), and who was probably the John of the Cross Keys who was Cornet in 1796. George (18th/19th C.) resident of Longnewton Moor, recorded in the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. George (b.c.1770s) mason in Hawick, recorded on the 1799 ballot for the Militia. George (b.c.1770s) servant to William White in Denholm, recorded on the ballot for the Militia in Cavers Parish in 1799. George (b.c.1770s) mason at Shaws according to the ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1799. George (b.c.1770s) servant at Burnfoot according to the ballot for the Militia in Wilton Parish in 1799. He may be the stockingmaker at Damside recorded on the 1801 Militia ballot. George (18th/19th C.) married Jeany Riddell in Southdean in 1806. It is possible that his wife was the 'Jane Riddell or Turnbull' whose son George's house 'in or near to Silver Street' was mentioned in the court case over the 1837 election riot, with her own house being below her son's. George (1783–1861) eldest son of James and Betty Adamson. He was born at Hillshaugh and became a carrier in the Rulewater district, like his grandfather, George Adamson. It is said he frequently acted as the disseminator of news. In later life he moved to Newcastleton and was a grocer and meal-dealer at about 41 North Hermitage Street. He was listed there on Slater's 1852 directory. He married Margaret Scott (from Wilton Parish), who died in 1860, aged 89. Their children were: James, born at Kirknow; Thomas, born at Unthank; Betty; and an unnamed child. He and his wife were buried at Ettleton. George (18th/19th C.) married Margaret Goodfellow in Lilliesleaf in 1822. George (b.c.1810) resident of Deanburnhaugh. In 1841 he was recorded as a male servant. He married Rachel Clyde and their children included: George (b.1832); David (b.1834), labourer; James (b.1837), miller; Christian (or Christina, b.1841); and Margaret (b.1845). His wife was still recorded in Deanburnhaugh in 1851 and 1861 (but he was absent, and so presumably deceased). George (b.1809/10) joiner at Appletreehall. He was listed as wright there among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1835–41. He was living there in 1841 with his siblings Betsy and William. His wife was Agnes and their children included Agnes, William, John, James, George and Isabella. George (19th C.) son of the gardener at Borthwickbrae and grandson of George, carrier in Rulewater. He was coachman to Hawick's Provost Wilson. George (b.1819) son of weaver William and brother of John S. He was an accountant, for a long time cashier for Nixon & MacKie, then in business for himself, later moving to Edinburgh. In 1861 he was a Commercial Accountant, living at 57 High Street. He married Jessie Allan Mark in 1843; her brother founded the wool merchant's firm W.D. Mark & Sons of Newcastle. Their children included: William (b.1844); John Mark (b.1846); George (b.1849); Christina Dobson (b.1850), who probably died young; Alexander Dobson (b.1853), cashier at Innes, Chambers & Co.; Margaret Ogilvie (b.1856); and Christina Dobson (again, b.1859). George (b.1823/4) stockingmaker in Hawick, son of John. In 1861 he was living with his parents and other family members at 5 Melgund Place. He is probably the George who was the 26th listed member of the Archæological Society in 1856. Sometime before 1865 he donated 14 copper coins to the Museum and in 1867 donated samples of ore from a mine in Anglesey, as well as a Turkish coin. Probably the same George donated 'specimens of lead ore' in 1876. He may also be th George of Ladylaw Place who donated an 'antique salt spoon' in 1877. George (1821–72) seed merchant, who was Cornet in 1841. He came from the Turnbulls of Allars House, and was son of John. In 1851 he was a seedsman and merchant at 4 Bourtree Place. He set up a partnership with the Dicksons, with office at 18 High Street, and nursery grounds where Teviot Crescent and North Bridge Street were later built. He donated coins to the Museum in the 1860s. He married Agnes, daughter of Peter Amos, farmer at Earlside. Their children included: Margaret, who married John Brown; Violet, who married Frank Wilson; Helen (d.1910), who married Thomas Telfer Charlton; Euphemia, who married her cousin Peter Amos (b.1860); Jane, who married Gilbert Davidson; John, unmarried; Agnes, also unmarried; Peter, also unmarried; Jessie, who married Rev. Peter Brice Gunn; Alice, who married Thomas Brice Gunn; and George, who married Nancy Brown. He was said to resemble 'John Bull' in later years. George (1826–66) 2nd son of John and Wilhelmina ('Mina') Scott. His uncles were schoolmasters at Wilton and at Hobkirk. George (19th C.) married Helen McMath in Wilton in 1852. George Purvis (b.1861) son of James, tenant farmer at Billerwell. He had a twin sister Mary. He emigrated to Canada, where he raised cattle. An earlier man of the same name (b.1821) was his uncle. Gideon (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, recorded at Newton in 1718 and Clarilaw in 1724, 1726, 1729, 1733 and 1739. He witnessed a baptism in 1724 for James Ormiston, resident of Boonraw. He married Helen Scott in 1718 and their children included: Thomas (b.1719); Robert (b.1721); James (b.1724); James (again, b.1726); Janet (b.1729); Helen (b.1733); and William (b.1739). The witnesses in 1724 were James Ormiston and John Huntlie, in 1726 were Robert Scott and another Scott (probably William), perhaps relatives of his wife, in 1729 were Walter and William Scott, in 1733 were Robert Scott and Thomas Turnbull (who may have been related) and in 1739 were John and Walter Scott. Gilbert (15th C.) recorded in 1494/5 along with Patrick. They were both stated to be 'at the horn' when John in Dryden was allowed to 'compone' for associating with them. Gilbert (18th C.) son of Walter, Schoolmaster in Minto. In 1733 he became a barber's apprentice in Edinburgh. Gilbert (b.1742) son of Thomas, who was one of the instigators of Hawick's carpet trade. He was born in Minto Parish. In 1758 he became a surgeon's apprentice in Edinburgh. He joined the Honourbale East India Company. It is said that he had extravagant habits and would send his bills Grisel (d.c.1685) described as 'in Roull' when her will was recorded in 1685. It is unclear where in Rulewater she may have lived. Hector (15th C.) member of the inquest panel for Archibald Douglas inheriting the Barony of Cavers in 1464/5. Other men listed included George, John and William of Minto. Hector (15th/16th C.) witness to the sasine for Wolfelee in 1522 for the Homes of Wedderburn. Archibald is listed right after him, and possibly related. Hector of Barnhills (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1531 as 'Bailie in that part', along with John Turnbull, in a sasine for William, Lord Herries of Terregles, Baron of Feu-Rule for Hector Lorraine of Harwood. He may be the Hector 'of Bernhyllis' who was listed among Borderers who swore allegiance to the English in 1544. Hector (16th C.) brother of David of Wauchope. In 1549 he was granted the 2 husband lands in Appletreehall belonging to Robert Scott of Howpasley. Along with his brother David and Patrick Gordon, he was already tenant of these lands at the time. In 1551 he signed the 'Auld Band of Roxburgh'. Hector of Barnhills (16th C.) probably son of the previous Hector. In 1553/4 he was on the panel for Sir Walter Scott inheriting his grandfather's lands of Branxholme and Buccleuch. He had a sasine for the lands of Barnhills in 1554. He may have been succeeded by William (recorded in 1584/5) and then the Hector (recorded in about 1590). Hector (16th C.) recorded as 'tutour of Mynto' in 1551 when he signed the 'Auld Band of Roxburgh'. In 1553/4 he was listed among the Rutherfords and others in an assurance not to harm the Kers; his pledge was George of Standhill. Also in 1553/4 he was a member of the panel of 'retour' for Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme and Buccleuch, where he is recorded as 'tutorem de Mynto'. Hector of Barnhills was also listed, proving he was a different man, although it is unclear to which branch of the Turnbulls he did belong (but presumably associated with the Turnbulls of Minto). He was simple 'of Mynto' in 1561, when listed among Border Lairds who appeared before the Queen to give names of those guilty of theft. He was 'The Tutour of Mynto' listed in 1564 among Border lairds who were ordered to support the Warden, Ker of Cessford. He was 'Tutor of Mynto' when he signed the 1569 bond to suppress Border thieves, also signed by several other men of Roxburghshire and neighbouring areas. Hector (16th C.) listed among men who Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst was ordered to present in 1567 to answer changes of raiding into England. He was recorded being of 'Vowley', which is probably Woollee. Hector (16th C.) listed in 1567 when he was among men to be entered by David Home of Wedderburn. He is recorded being 'in Turnbull' (although it seems likely this is a transcription error, perhaps for Town-o-Rule) and brother to George. 'Isobellis Robene', as well as Adam, son to Sanyd Turnbull, 'Part Pursell' and 2 Olivers were also to be entered from there. Hector 'Heckie' of Belses (16th C.) son of Adam in Belses. He was recorded in 1579 when his son Thomas was listed among men accused of raiding cattle from the Laird of 'Pansoun' in England. He was 'Hekie', son of Adam in Belses, for whom there was a pledge to stop thieving in 1576, along with his brothers David, George and John. Since his name was given first, he may have been the eldest son. The joint cautioners were Sir Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule and William Turnbull of Barnhills. He was also 'Ekkie Trumbill of Belsis' in 1580 when his son Andrew (then a minor) was convicted of murder. This was probably the murder of John Hamilton of Cumnock who was slain 'vnder silence of nycht in his bed within ane laych chalmer in the place of Polwart'. In 1580 there was a further complaint by Jean Hepburn, Lady Wedderburn, that he, his son Dand, and brother-in-law Patrick Richardson, killed her husband (John Hamilton of 'Benestoun', presumably the same man) at his home in Polwarth; they were all denounced as rebels. Sir George Home of Wedderburn received the 'escheeat' of his (Hector's) estate, as well as that of the other convicted man, John Young in 'Camys'. At the end of 1580 he gave sasine to his daughter and heir Katherine for the 'ten librates of land of old extent of Belses'. His brother John was a witness, as well as several men who lived in Belses. He was probably either deceased or exiled by 1581 when his brothers David, George, John and Adam were recorded. He is 'Heckie of Belseis' in 1586/7 when 'Andro' his 'bastard sone' is listed among Border criminals (this could be the same son as Dand); he is also the 'Ekkie in Belses' (with no surname given) whose brother-in-law 'Pait Richesoun' is on the same list in 1586/7. Hector (16th C.) recorded in Hassendeanburn in 1581 when he witnessed a transaction in Selkirk. He may be the same as one of the other Hectors. Hector 'Eckie' of Catlee (16th C.) listed in 1586/7 among Borderers accused of crimes who had failed to appear in court and were given one more chance to find sureties. He is recorded as 'Eckie Turnbull of Catlie', suggesting that his name was Hector. He may be the same as one of the other Hectors. He may be related to the earlier Turnbulls associated with Catlee. Hector of Wauchope (d.bef. 1612) son of David. In 1571/2 he joined several Borders lairds in signing a bond to act against thieves. In 1572/3 he was recorded as son and heir apparent of David of Wauchope, when he swore allegiance to the Crown, with William Ker of Caverton as surety. In 1573 he and his father signed the 'Band of Roxburgh'. In 1580 he and Walter of Hobsburn were cautioned to appear before the Privy Council, with Henry, heir of John Stewart of Craighall as surety. Also in 1580 he was in a group of Turnbulls of Minto, Wauchope, Bewlie and Hobsburn, who had a band to keep the peace with the Turnbulls of Bedrule and others. He was among the Border Lairds summoned to appear before the Privy Council in 1583/4. He is probably the unnamed Turnbull of Wauchope who was on the 1584/5 list of Borderers summoned to appear before the Privy Council in order to keep peace on the Border. He is probably the 'lard of Wauchop' listed in 1586 among leaders in upper Teviotdale in a document by King James VI instructing his Lieutenant on the Border. In 1587 Sir Archibald Douglas, Earl of Angus, acted as his cautioner. About 1590 he was listed among the landed men of the Borders. In 1590 he was in prison in Edinburgh Tolbooth when the Earl of Angus became bound to enter him to William Ker of Cessford, Warden of the Middle Marches, to anwser an accusation by an Englishman. Additionally he was mentioned in a 1590 case where the Earl of Angus was ordered to relieve the King of certain 'bills' of English complainant; he was described 'being now tenant and vassal to William, the present Earl of Angus'. In 1591 he was among local chiefs who signed a bond to support the King against the Earl of Bothwell and Alexander, Lord Home. It is unclear how he was related to Thomas, who was declared a rebel in the 1590s. In 1592 his surety was James Douglas, Commendator of Melrose. He was a signatory for the assurance of good behaviour of the Turnbulls descended from the house of Wauchope (separate from those derived from Minto) in 1595; he signed by 'touching the pen of the notary'. Also in 1595 he, along with John Rutherford of Hunthill and William Scott of Howpasley, were 'put to the horn' for failing to pay to the Sheriff their

'blench ferms and castle-wards'; in 1599 there was a complaint about the Sheriff (James Douglas of Cavers) for not prosecuting the men. In 1599 he complained that he had captured Gilbert and Hector Lorraine, who were 'at the horn' for the murder of his son David, and handed them over to James Douglas of Cavers, who had refused to enter them in court. He is probably 'the old Laird of Vaughopp' recorded in 1601 when and Englishman complained that he had stolen cattle from him. He signed a bond among Border Lairds in 1602 for keeping the peace (with his hand 'at the pen'). In 1603 he complained about Turnbulls from Nether Bonchester, Braidhaugh, Mackside and 'Harkschaw' stealing more than 20 cows from his lands. His 2nd son George was recorded in 1604 in a sasine for lands of Templehall. In 1605 he accused John Elliot of Copshaw of leading a group of about 100 riders who stole 80 cows, 100 sheep and 1 horses from Wauchope in 1602. His eldest son Thomas, 2nd son George and several other neighbouring tenants are also recorded; Elliot was found not guilty, however. His surety in this case was Robert Home, younger of 'the Heuch'. In 1606 he was the most senior of the men accused of raiding and burning Appotside and Harwood in the period 1598–1605; his sons George and John are also listed. They were accused of stealing a huge number of livestock, cutting down virtually the whole wood at Appotside and killing the young Laird of Harwood and his younger brother, as well as a servant of their mother, Lady Appotside. It is unclear exactly what Margaret (herself a daughter of the Laird of Bedrule) had done to invoke the ire of her neighbours and distant kin. Although he and the others were eventually acquitted, his son Thomas was separately found guilty of the same crimes. Probably the same Hector is recorded in 1612, when his son George was involved in a contract with Sir Andrew Kerr of Oxnam relating to Templehall (in the Rule valley). His son and heir David married Margaret, daughter of James Gledstains of Cocklaw in 1593, but was killed before 1599; those involved in his death included Gilbert and Hector (uncles of Hector Lorraine of Harwood), as well as James Lorraine of Appotside; this was presumably part of the same family feud. Thomas was heir afterwards, with George being the next son.

Hector of Clarilaw (16th/17th C.) listed in a bond of March 1594/5, along with Richard Turnbull, subscribed by James Gledstains of Cocklaw, that they would not harm Gavin Eliott of Stobs or William Elliot of Horsleyhill. He may be related to the Hector who had a charter for Pinnacle and Broomlands in 1550. In 1606 he was one of the Turnbulls accused of raiding and burning Appotside and Harwood in the period 1598–1605. As well as other crimes, he was singled out for his involvement with stealing livestock from and burning Appotside in 1598. However, he was cleared of all charges. He was surely related to the slightly later Hector of Clarilaw. Either he or his son was the Hector of Clarilaw who was on the 1616 jury that convicted Jock Scott 'the Suckler' of sheep stealing. He is probably the Hector in Clarilaw who was put to the horn in 1618 for the murder of Gavin Elliot in Hassindeanburn. In 1619 an action was raised by Elliot's widow and children to apprehend him, with the Laird of Cranston appointed to head the commission. Not appearing, there was an order to take his houses and goods for the King's use.

Hector (d.aft. 1610) probably son of Thomas of Hartshaugh (although some accounts suggest he was the youngest son of Sir Thomas of Bedrule). In 1580 he was a 'kindlie tenant' in possession of the lands of Kirklands of Hobkirk. His ancestors had probably been 'kindly tenants' of Jedburgh Abbey for several generations. In 1581 he was listed (along with his son Thomas) as 'in Hartishauch' among the 10 men accused of being involved with the murder of Walter, son of Wat Turnbull of Bewlie. Tom 'of Harkschaw' and his brother 'Lancy Trumble', who were listed among men who stole cattle from Wauchope in 1603, seem likely to be his sons or other close relatives. He had a charter to lands of Hartshaugh and Swanshiel in 1604, specifically the lands and mill of 'Hartishaugh', the lands of 'Wester Swoonshield', including the wood called 'Clerksbank', and the 'kirk lands called Vicar's Lands of the kirk of Hobkirk', except for the manse and glebe. These lands were in the Barony of Abbotrule. He is stated as having been tenant in Hartshaugh beyond the memory of man'. In 1610 he is recorded as 'in Hartshauch' when he was part of an inquest for succession to lands in Rulewater. His son Mark had a bond in 1616 (when he was presumably still alive) with William Scott of Todrig. He may be the Hector in Hartshaugh recorded in 1619 (along with Adam, also there) among a group of more than 100 men under John Ker of Langnewton who Sir Andrew Ker of Oxnam complained had broken up and stolen turfs cut for his use on Oxnam Moor. He married twice, and his children (to his 2nd wife) were James, Mark and William. 'Leonall' (possibly Lyle) may have been another child. His grandson Adam was served heir to his lands of 'Viccarislandis' in Hobkirk, as well as Wester Swanshiel and 'Clerksbankis'. It is unclear whether he is the same as any of the other contemporarty Hectors. Hector of Barnhills (16th/17th C.) surely directly related to the earlier Hector of Barnhills, and possibly son or brother of William of Barnhills. He had a charter of confirmation issued by James VI for the lands of Barnhills. He may be the Hector, brother of '[blank] Trumbill of Barnehills' recorded as in 1581/2 in Selkirk to 2 transactions (one along with James in Selkirk, who may have been related, and another along with Mark, heir of Howden); he was also recorded explicitly as brother of William of Barnhills in several other transactions in 1581/2. He witnessed a further transaction in 1582. In 1586 he was 'in Barnhills' when denounced as a rebel for his part in the slaughter of 6 Grahamslaws of Newton; the others named included his brother George, a son of Turnbull of Bedrule, Robert 'tutor of Barnhills' (perhaps his uncle) and Robert's brothers Hector and Gavin, as well as several Douglases. In 1590 he was among Border landlords and heads of families ordered to find caution for the conduct of their dependents. He is also listed among landed men in the Borders in about 1590. In 1595 he was recorded along with Turnbulls of Minto, Bewlie, Hallrule and Stonedge, as well as Davidsons, when John Ker of Barnhills complained they had harassed his tenants in Barnhills; most were declared as rebels for non-appearance. He is recorded in a marriage contract of 1597 and a following grant of lands of Hallrule and others in 1603. In 1599 he was a subscriber at Barnhills to a bond by John of Minto to enter the Lorraines; his servants George Bell and Robert Brown also subscribed. In 1602 he was recorded along with Thomas, younger of Minto and Mark of Bewlie, when they were accused of robbing a hunting party sent out by the Laird of Gretna, with permission to hunt for venison in Tynedale; they were found guilty of robbery and fined for the value of 3 horses. Also in 1602 it is recorded that he had been 'put to the horn' and the 'liferent of all and sundry' of his lands had been given by escheat to Alexander, Lord Home, including Hallrule (which a group of Armstrongs and Elliots attacked). His eldest son John married Isobel, daughter of George of Hallrule. He is probably the Hector of Barnhills who was tried in 1604 for the murder of 6 sons of John Grahamslaw of Little Newton; also tried were his brother George, their uncle Gavin and Hector of Stanedge. They were denounced as rebels for not appearing; however, they were probably rehabilitated, since his he and his son and heir John were taken to court in 1609 by David, son of the late John Scott 'called of the Tour in Hawick' for not paying what they had borrowed. In 1607 he and Thomas of Wauchope brought a complaint against James, son of Edward Lorraine, 'for presenting bended pistolets to their breasts for their slaughter'. In 1610 his brother George 'in Howay' is recorded resigning a tenement of land in Hawick. Hector of Bewlie (d.1604) probaby a younger son of Walter of Bewlie. In 1595 he was recorded along with his father Walter and brothers Robert and Andrew, among Turnbulls and Davidsons, when John Ker of Barnhills complained they had harassed his tenants in Barnhills; most were declared as rebels for non-appearance. Thomas, heir apparent of Minto, acted in 1601 as cautioner for him and his brother Andrew, both 'called of Bewlie', that they should be lawful and also pay a fine for shooting pistols. In 1601 he accompanied his brother Andrew of Bewlie to harass a Bailie of Jedburgh with 'long hagbuts and pistolets'; after confessing he was committed to Edinburgh Tolbooth. There was then a proclamation posted at 'Jedburghe, Hawik, Selkirk, Peiblis, Lauder and other places' asking for any other complaints to be lodged against him and his brother Hector. He was recorded in 1601 in a document to capture him and William Middlemas for the slaughter of Thomas Kerr of Crailing. This was the outcome of a serious fight between Kers and Turnbulls at Jedburgh Fair that year, which included Mark of Bewlie and his brother Robert (who was killed there); these 2 may well have also been his brothers. He was declared a rebel and there is a Commission of 1603 for the Provost of Jedburgh to gather men to apprehend him. He was killed at Lilliesleaf around Martinmas 1604 by Sir Andrew Ker of Oxnam. Ker had remission for this and other crimes in 1615. This was all part of an ongoing feud between the Turnbulls and the Kers, but the exact circumstances surrounding the events of these times are impossible to guess. Hector of Lilliesleaf (16th/17th C.) declared a rebel in 1604 for failing to appear to answer the charge of murdering Thomas Kerr of Crailing and his servant George Glaidner. Hector of Belses acted as cautioner. It is possible he is the same man as Hector of Bewlie. Hector 'Eckie' of Stonedge (d.1611) brother of Gavin in Howa and Robert, called 'tutor of Barnhills', who was also tenant in Hallrule. Their father may have been Archie in Howa. In 1586 he was declared a rebel for his part in the murder of 6 Grahamslaws; his brothers Robert and Gavin were also listed, as well as Hector in Barnhills (perhaps their nephew). In 1595 he was recorded along with Turnbulls of Minto, Bewlie, Hallrule and Barnhills, as well as Davidsons, when John Ker of Barnhills complained they had harassed his tenants in Barnhills; most were declared as rebels for non-appearance. He is recorded in 1596 as 'Hector Trumble of Stoney letch' when he was accused of crimes by Englishman Thomas Selbie and fined 'for lack of answer'. In 1601 he is listed along with Mark and Andrew of Bewlie, Eckie of Firth and James, servant to the Laird of Minto, when Sir Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst was ordered to present them at Edinburgh Tolbooth 'to answer such crymes as thay wer suspect gilty of'; Kerr was directed to pay the penalty for failing to produce him in particular. He is recorded as 'in Stanileche' in a bond of 1603 when he gave all his goods to Sir Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst for being unable to pay his debts and also apparently because Sir Andrew had saved his life. In 1604 he was one of the Turnbulls involved with slaughter and burning at Appotside and Harwood. Also in 1604 he was tried, along with 3 Turnbulls of Barhills, with the murder of 6 sons of John Grahamslaw of Little Newton; they were denounced as rebels for non-entry, with their cautioners being Robert Home of Carolside, Hector Turnbull of Belses and James Douglas of Cavers. In 1606 he is recorded as 'Hector Turnbill in Steneledrig', brother of Gavin in Howa and the deceased Robert in Hallrule, when there was a summons for them to prosecute the sons of Harry Grahamslaw who had been accused of the murder of Robert in Hallrule; there was clearly a feud between the 2 families. In 1606 he was one of the Turnbulls accused of raiding and burning Appotside and Harwood in the period 1598–1605; however, the case against him was not pursued. In 1607 he sold the lands of 'Carlinghall, Lailsell, Brounishall, Brumesclewis and Roberthill' to Gilbert Eliott of Stobs. Also in 1607 he brought a court case against Robert Scott in Northhouse. Additionally in 1607 he was cautioner for John Maxwell, Lord Herries. He is also recorded as 'of Steinieloche' in a set of documents in 1609 relating to the lands of 'Hardwodtoun', 'Fairneleyis' and 'Staineleche'. Andrew held these lands in 1610, and so was probably his son. This also suggests that he had been declared a rebel by then. In 1610 he was named by the Privy Council when a commission was made to apprehend him, along with 7 other Turnbulls and 2 Davidsons, since they were 'unrelaxed from hornings' following the murder of Thomas Ker of Crailinghall and 6 Grahamslaw brothers. He was killed by Sir Andrew Ker of Oxnam, but whether this was an 'official' act or part of a feud is unclear. Hector 'Eckie' of Firth (16th/17th C.) listed in 1601 along with Mark and Andrew of Bewlie, Eckie in Stonedge and James, servant to the Laird of Minto. Sir Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst was ordered to present them at Edinburgh Tolbooth 'to answer such crymes as thay wer suspect gilty of'; Kerr had to pay a penalty for failing to produce Eckie of Stonedge, so presumably he and the others were imprisoned. He took part on the affray at Jedburgh Rood Fair in 1601, when a large group of Turnbulls drew Thomas Ker (brother of the Jedburgh Provost) out of his house and killed him along with his servants. This was part of some ongoing feud between Turnbulls and Kerrs. He was one of 4 Turnbulls who were found guilty of the crime of murder and illegally carrying pistols. Perhaps the same Hector was recorded in 1602 along with James and Mark, when John Heatley of Mellerstain and James Home of Framepath were sureties for them to remain in Edinburgh Tolbooth. Also in 1602 he was recorded along with Mark of Bewlie when William Cranston, younger of that Ilk was surety for them to re-enter ward. In 1610 he was named by the Privy Council when a commission was made to apprehend him, along with 7 other Turnbulls and 2 Davidsons, since they were 'unrelaxed from hornings' following the murder of Thomas Ker of Crailinghall and 6 Grahamslaw brothers. Hector of Belses (16th/17th C.) acted as cautioner in 1604 for a group of Turnbulls from Stanedge and Barnhills (including 2 other Hectors!) accused of killing 6 sons of Grahamslaw of Newton. Also in 1604 he was cautioner for Hector of Lilliesleaf, charged with the murder of Thomas Kerr of Crailing. He must have been related to the George of Belses who was executed in 1603. Hector (16th/17th C.) had a charter of 'feu farm' for the lands of Standhill in 1610. He was probably ancestor of the later Turnbulls of Standhill. Hector (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1618 when there was an unnamed cautioner for 1000 merks for him. He promised not to molest Alexander, son of the late Sir John Drummond of 'Halthrondaill'. He may be the same as one of the other Hectors. Hector (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1619 as brother of Thomas in Raperlaw 'Townfute'. He was listed among many Turnbulls and others, under Walter of Bedrule, who were accused of taking hay from Huntliehill and declared as rebels for not appearing to answer the charge. He may be the same as one of the other Hectors. Hector of Clarilaw (17th C.) possibly son of the earlier Hector. In 1637 he was appointed (as closest relative on his father's side) as tutor to James, son of George 'called of Wauchope'. In 1643 he was recorded as owner of lands in Hassendean Parish valued at £273. In 1643 his daughter Elizabeth married Robert Scott of Burnhead. He probably had no sons, since Clarilaw appears to have gone to the Scotts of Burnhead after that. Hector of Firth (17th C.) feued Firth from Thomas Hamilton, Lord Binning in 1632. He was probably the son of the earlier Hector of Firth. John and Walter leased Firth later in the later 1600s, and must have been his descendants. He is recorded in a marriage contract of 1637 of his daughter with George Clerk. In 1643 his lands in Lilliesleaf Parish were valued at £195. Hector (17th C.) recorded in 'Rule' in the 1643 valuation of Abbotrule Parish. His lands were valued at £10. Hector (d.c.1683) tenant in Groundistone whose will was recorded in 1683. Hector (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He was recorded in about the 1720s when he was given money from the Kirk Session 'to help to buy a hors'. He could be the Hector, son of James, baptised in Roberton in 1688. Hector of Wester Swanshiel (18th C.) son of William. He was succeeded by his son James. Hector (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Bessy Rutherford and their children include Helen (b.1739) and Adam (b.1740). Perhaps the same Hector had a son William baptised in Cavers in 1731. Helen (16th/17th C.) wife of James 'Lethame'. She and her husband complained about being attacked by Walter Scott of Burnfoot and his wife n Hawick in 1616. Helen of Fodderlee (17th C.) recorded as owner of £80 of land in Abbotrule Parish in 1643. She was probably related to James, who was also recorded at Fodderlee in 1643. Helen (17th/18th C.) see Helen Chisholme. Henry of Craik (15th C.) one of the witnesses to the 1431 'letter of transumpt' of the earlier charter granting half of the barony of Branxholme to the Scotts of Buccleuch. He is recorded as 'Henrico Turnbull de Crak'. Perhaps the same man was the Henry who in 1437 was on the retour for deciding on ownership of the East Mains of Hawick. Henry (15th C.) leased a quarter of the lands of Appletreehall according to a document of 1470, with Alexander Scott of Howpasley having the other parts. He was probably related to Walter, who is recorded holding the lands of East Mains (of Hassendean) in 1493/4. He may be the Henry who witnessed a sasine for lands in Linton in 1509. Henry (15th C.) listed at the 1493 Justice-aire in Jedburgh when William Douglas of Cavers was fined for his non-appearance. He was recorded being 'in dēnū', which is probably an abbreviation for 'dennum', i.e. he lived in Denholm. He was cited again in 1494/5 for failure to appear. Henry (15th C.) tenant in Unthank, listed at the 1494/5 Justice-aire in Jedburgh. He was indicted and did not appear, with his surety, Matthew Hobkirk being fined. He was probably related to Alexander, recorded in Unthank in 1493. Henry 'Gy' (15th/16th C.) tenant in Cavers, recorded being 'callit gy'. His nickname may mean 'guide'. He is listed in 1503 among men who were fined (in his case 2 cows) for failing to attend the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. Henry 'Harry' (16th/17th C.) tenant in Wauchope in Rulewater, recorded in a court case of 1605. He is listed as 'Harie Trumbill'. Henry 'Harie' (17th C.) holder of part of the lands of Westwood near Bonchester in 1643. His lands were valued at £12 Scots, while those of Thomas (presumably his father or brother) were worth £40 Scots. Henry (18th/19th C.) farmer at Whitriggs in Kirkton Parish, recorded on the 1794 and 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He was owner of a total of 7 farm horses and 1 saddle horse in 1797. He married Betty Stavert in Kirkton in 1789; she was born in Hawick in 1766, daughter of George. Their children included: Henrietta (b.1791); Elizabeth (b.1793); and John (b.1795). Henry (19th/20th C.) resident of Adderstoneshiel. In 1906 he and his son Henry junior contributed to the fund for the renovation of Kirkton Kirk. Herbert (15th/16th C.) recorded in connection with lands in Bedrule in the early 1500s. Helen Rutherford of that Ilk had the 'half merk land of Bethiroull' confirmed to her by the King, this being near the Parish Church and 'held in tack by Herbut Turnbull'. In 1503 James 'harbertis sone' was recorded for not attending the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. Herman (15th C.) witness to a sasine in 1479 for the lands of Wolfelee for the Homes of Wedderburn. It could be that this is a transcription error for 'Hector'. Isabel (16th C.) recorded in 1579 as 'gudwif of Woll' among people who owed money to Isabel Donald, widow of Robert of Palace. The name of her husband is not recorded; it is possible he was a missing first generation of the Scotts of Woll, perhaps father of Walter, who is noted in 1606. It is also possible that she was mother (perhaps if she married twice) of John Turnbull, half-brother of Walter Scott of Woll, who is recorded in 1608. Isobel (16th/17th C.) daughter of Walter of Rawflat, sister of William and Walter. In 1603 she was one of the 'persewaris' of the case against George Turnbull of Belses, for a list of crimes, including killing her brother William and shooting her brother Walter. Another of the persuers was George Rutherford 'as kinsman', so he was either her husband or married to one of her relatives. In 1632 probably the same 'Issobella' was 'heir portioner', along with her sister Margaret, to their brother in the lands of the Mains of Feu-Rule. Isobel (17th C.) servant in Riddell. In about 1684 she was on a list of Covenanter fugitives. Isobel (17th C.) resident of 'Crawknow' in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when she was listed on the Hearth Tax roll among 'ye poor'. Isobel (17th C.) resident of North Synton in 1694 when she was listed on the Hearth Tax roll among 'ye poor'. Isobel (17th C.) recorded as resident of Kirknowe in Hobkirk Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Isobel (17th C.) listed among the poor living at Hassendean on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Isobel (18th C.) cook at Stirches in 1791, when she was working for Gilbert Chisholme. Sir James (1320–55) son of William, the first Turnbull. He married Mary Haliburton and died at Nisbet Moor. James (15th C.) listed among the squires who witnessed an agreement in 1432 between the Rules of Primside and the Kers of Altonburn. James of Hornshole (15th C.) witness in 1456 to an instrument relating to the lands of Whitchesters, made at Branxholme. He is recorded as 'Jacobo Turnbule de Hornshole'. He may have been an ancestor of the later Turnbulls who were at Hornshole. Perhaps he is the James who in 1437 was on the retour for deciding on ownership of the East Mains of Hawick. James (15th C.) recorded at the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh in 1493. He was described as a 'common thief', who had stolen things with John Davidson, resident of Minto. Davidson was allowed to 'compone' for his crimes, including stealing a horse from him. He may be the same as one of the other Jameses. James (15th C.) recorded in 1494/5 as the brother of the Laird of Whithope (probably the one near Harden in the Borthwick valley). He had remission for stealing 18 ewes from Bowhill, with the help of Walter Dalgleish. His crimes also included stealing iron windows, doors and 'crukis' from the tower of Howpasley. His brother the Laird of Whithope was surety for him. James (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1484 when he claimed compensation from Adam of Philiphaugh for the 'wrangwis vexacioun and disturblance' of him in his lands of Westfield and 'wrangwis spoliacioun of a kow' at his lands of Kirkhope. Probably the same James 'in Kirkhop' is listed among the many men given remission in 1504 for any part in the slaughter of Thomas Rutherford in Jedburgh Abbey. James (15th/16th C.) recorded as brother of Mark in Bonchester in 1494/5. He failed to appear and so his brother, serving as his surety, was fined. He was also recorded as brother of Mark in 1501 among 10 men whose fines were remitted; as well as his brother, there were Turnbulls of Fulton, Bonchester and elsewhere also listed. James (15th/16th C.) tenant in Hornshole listed in the Exchequer Rolls of 1501, among mostly local men who had been fined. He was probably related to Adam, who was tenant at Hornshole in 1502 and John in 1516. He may be the same as one of the contemporary Jameses. James (15th/16th C.) tenant in Fulton. In 1502 his son Thomas served as surety for himself and was fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. James (15th/16th C.) tenant in Girnwood in 1503. He was listed among men who were fined (in his case 4 cows) for failing to attend the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. James (15th/16th C.) brother of Herbert. He is listed in 1503 among men who were fined (in his case 4 cows) for failing to attend the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. James (15th/16th C.) tenant in Gargunnock. In 1504 he was among a number of men who had remission for any involvement in the slaughter of Thomas Rutherford in Jedburgh Abbey. Perhaps the same James of Gargunnock gave up his liferent of a tenement in Selkirk in 1538 in favour of his cousin John; his own son John was a witness. He may be related to the contemporary Walter of Gargunnock and Hassendean. James (15th/16th C.) witness to a charter for John Stirling for lands in Dumbarton, signed in Edinburgh in 1508. James (15th/16th C.) recorded as tenant of Wolfelee in 1516 on a list of many Turnbulls pardoned for any role in assisting Alexander, Lord Home. James (15th/16th C.) tenant in the lands of Hillhouse, listed among the men who had remission in 1516 for any assistance given to the Homes. Fergus is also noted as being there, and so presumably related. It is unclear if these were the lands in Liddesdale or other lands in Rulewater. James (16th C.) recorded as 'Jame Trumbill, young Pait's brother' on a list of Scotsmen reset in England in 1540. He was probably son of Peter (or perhaps Patrick) of Catlee. James (16th C.) recorded in Philiphaugh in 1540/1 when he witnessed a transaction in Selkirk. James (16th C.) recorded 'in Cavers' in 1579, this probably being Cavers Carre. He represented his son Thomas in a transaction in Selkirk, where a piece of land was purchased in Midlem. Perhaps the same James set a tack for his lands called 'Scottis Yard' in Selkirk in 1581. James of Abbotrule (16th C.) recorded as 'Jame' in 1565 when there was a bond with Walter Turnbull, tenant of Howa (in Rulewater) to present him to Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst. He may be one of the unidentified James Turnbulls who are on the list of Borderers summoned to appear before the Privy Council in 1584/5. James (16th C.) listed as tenant in 'Sironscheill' (probably Swanshiel) in 1581 among 10 men (mostly Turnbulls of Rulewater) accused of the murder of Walter, son of Wat Turnbull of Bewlie. James of the Toor (16th C.) recorded as 'of the Toure', along with his brother George, in a 1579/80 case of men accused of raiding into England. They were asked to pay recompense to the Laird of 'Panstoun', from whom they had presumably been accused of stealing. He is also listed among the men who were asked to appear before the Privy Council in 1584/5 to explain how they had been helping to quiet the Border. He was also listed as one of the landed men of the Borders in about 1590. He was probably related to William 'of the Tour of Roulwode' recorded in 1622. His lands were presumably at Spittal Tower. James (16th C.) tenant in 'Stenleche' (i.e. Stonedge) in 1567 when Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst was ordered to present him to answer changes of raiding into England. He is recorded in 1586/7 as 'Jamie Turnbull in Stanielege', among Borderers accused of crimes who had failed to appear in court and were given one more chance to find sureties. He was recorded being 'of Stonyletche' and 'of Stonyleache' among men complained about by the English Warden in 1590 for 2 separate raids into England in 1587. In one raid he is listed first and there were more than 40 other men involved, including his servant 'Jocke Weittie'. In the other raid there are several Turnbulls listed, among a group of about 200. James (16th/17th C.) recorded being in Hassendean in 1598. He was denounced along with John in Minto, Walter Scott 'of Ordschaw' and James Langlands for not paying Selkirkshire taxes to the Lord of Newbattle. He is probably the same as one of the contemporary Jameses. James (16th/17th C.) recorded as 'servitor to the Laird of Mynto' in 1601. He was listed along with Mark and Andrew of Bewlie, Eckie of Firth and Eckie of Stonedge, when Sir Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst was ordered to present them at Edinburgh Tolbooth 'to answer such crymes as thay wer suspect gilty of'. Probably the same James was recorded in 1602 along with Mark and Hector, when John Heatley of Mellerstain and James Home of Framepath were sureties for them to remain in Edinburgh Tolbooth. He may be the same as one of the other Jameses. James 'Baneist James' (16th/17th C.) one of a group of Turnbulls involved in a melee at Jedburgh Rood Fair in 1601. This resulted in the death of Thomas Ker and his servant, and the wounding of many men. As a consequence several Turnbulls were later convicted and hanged. Although he was one of those found guilty of murder and illegally carrying pistols, it is unclear whether or not he was executed. In 1610 he was named (as 'called Baneisht James') by the Privy Council when a commission was appointed to apprehend him and 7 other Turnbulls (plus 2 Davidsons), for not finding caution following being found guilty of the murder of Thomas Kerr of Crailinghall and 6 Grahamslaw brothers. It is not stated to which Turnbull branch he belonged, but probably somewhere around Minto. His nickname is presumably Scots for 'banished'. James (16th/17th C.) younger son of Sir Thomas of Bedrule. In 1616 he is described as 'called of Bedrule' when along with David (or Andrew, probably his nephew), butcher and Burgess of Jedburgh, he had a bond with Mark in Hartshaugh. And in 1618 he is 'brother german to Walter of Bedderreull' when he had a bond with James Jamieson of Lessuden. James (d.bef. 1619) eldest son of Hector of Hartshaugh. In 1608 he had a charter of the lands of Wester Swanshiel, granted by his father to be held in feu for rental. He was also the successor to the lands of Hartshaugh and the Kirklands. However, he could only have been Laird for a very short time after his father's death, before his own son Thomas succeeded in 1619. He must also have been related to the contemporary Adam and Lyle (probably either brothers or sons). James 'Jamie' of West Lees (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1605 when his son George was listed among men declared as fugitives for not appearing at a Borders Commissioners' court in Jedburgh. He was also recorded in 1617 in a bond with James Haswell, surgeon of Jedburgh; his son and heir William was also mentioned. James (16th/17th C.) recorded being 'called of Rapirlaw' in 1619. He was listed among many Turnbulls and others, under Walter of Bedrule, who were accused of taking hay from Huntliehill and declared as rebels for not appearing to answer the charge. His son John was also listed. James 'Maltman' (16th/17th C.) recorded in Raperlaw in 1619. He was among a group led by Walter of Bedrule, who were accused of taking hay from Huntliehill. James (16th/17th C.) son of 'Willie of Braidhauche', he is recorded in the 1622 Circuit Court, where he was found guilty of stealing 24 sheep from 'Hairrlesyd', this being possessed by the 'fear of Cavers (William Douglas) and his tennentis' (hence probably Earlside). He was 'clengit', i.e. found not guilty. His cautioners were Adam in Hartshaugh and another Adam, who were perhaps related. In 1628 there was a complaint by Robert Kerr of Cavers against him and his father, for opposing his apprehension after he was declared 'an idle and masterless man' (i.e. fit for military service). Also in 1628 he is named when his father William paid caution to the Privy Council, promising to atone for the disturbance they had caused at Abbotrule Kirk. James (d.bef. 1632) described as 'in Hassiden bank' and already deceased in 1632 when his son Walter feued part of Raperlaw. Probably the same James 'of Hassindanebank' was complained about in 1607 by George Scott in Castleside, with his surety being Thomas Ker of Cavers. James (17th C.) recorded as owner of £180 of land at Fodderlee in Abbotrule Parish in 1643. He was probably related to Helen 'of Fodderlie', who was also recorded in 1643. They are presumably distinct from the people with the same names who were at Bowshot Hill at the same time. James (17th C.) recorded at 'Bossithill' (i.e. Bowshot Hill) in Abbotrule Parish in a valuation roll of 1643. He was there with Helen, who was presumably his wife. Their land was valued at £33 6s 8d. James of Wauchope (d.c.1674) only son of George of Wauchope. In 1653 he inherited the 20-pound land of Wauchope in Jedforest from his uncle Thomas of Wauchope. In 1655 he renounced all claims to the lands of Templehall (in the Rule valley) to William Earl of Lothian. His sister Anna was served as his heir in 1674. James of West Lees (17th C.) probably a descendant of the earlier James. In about 1663 he was recorded paying £66 13s 4d on the Land Tax Rolls. James (17th C.) tenant in Fenwick. He married Isobell Margaret Stoddart and their children included Robert (b.1682), James (b.1685) and an unnamed son (b.1688). The 1682 baptism was witnessed by John Law and Robert Turnbull (who was presumably closely related). James (17th C.) tenant in Kirkton. In 1684 he was among a group of tenants of the Cavers estate who complained about the burden placed upon them by the huge fines imposed on Lady Cavers. They would have been forced into ruin had not the young Laird of Cavers, William Douglas, returned from the Continent to take charge of matters. James (d.1686) tenant farmer who also served as 'pyper' for the Parish of Abbotrule. His will is recorded in 1687 when he was 'piper, in Abotroull'. He left a reasonably sum of money to his only daughter. James (17th C.) tenant in Hartshaugh. The will of his wife Agnes Turnbull was recorded in 1688. James (d.c.1688) tenant in 'Caverspark' when his will was recorded in 1688. It is unclear if this was associated with Cavers Parish or Cavers Carre or elsewhere. James (17th C.) referred to as 'James Trumble' in 1688 when he was fined for assaulting Bailie Robert Wright and Town Officers. They were trying to take him to the tollbooth 'for certain riots and bluids' and threated 'to take yr lives wt ane drawn penknife in his hand'. James (17th C.) recorded as 'servitor of said Dame Magdalene' in 1690 when he witnessed a bond. He was thus some sort of employee of the widow of Stobs. James (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish who appears in the Hearth Tax records of 1694. He may be the same as one of the contemporary Jameses. He may be the James who married Margaret Lillico in Bedrule in 1694. James (17th C.) resident of Acreknowe on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. James (17th C.) tenant in Hobsburn according to the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. James (17th C.) tenant at Doorpool in Abbotrule Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He was probably related to Adam, who was tenant there at about the same time. James (17th C.) cottar at Ruletownfoot according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. James (17th C.) resident at Roan in Castleton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. James (17th C.) tenant in Hudshouse in Castleton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. James (17th C.) recorded in the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694 among those 'Payed but not listed in Hauick Toun'. He was probably from the west side. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. His son John was baptised in 1695. James (17th/18th C.) tenant in New Headshaw in Ashkirk Parish. He married Catherine Minto and their children included Janet (b.1701), Isobel (b.1705), Andrew (b.1707) and Margaret (b.1709). James (17th/18th C.) married Janet Thomson in Minto in 1715. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living in Cavers itself in 1715 when his daughter Helen was baptised. Perhaps the same James was in Denholm in 1720 when his son John was baptised. James (17th/18th C.) tenant in Tofts in Kirkton Parish. It is unclear if he was related to the Turnbulls of Tofts. His children included: James (b.1716) and Margaret (b.1718). He was recorded at Nether Tofts in 1718. James (d.c.1724) son of Adam and grandson of Thomas. His father had lost the lands of Hartshaugh and the Kirklands of Kirkton through 'non-entry'. He is probably the James of Swanshiel listed in 1680 among local men convicted for being Covenanters, the accusations including attacking 'the Tower and Castle of Hawick'; however, he did not appear in court, and was presumably in hiding at that point. In 1682 he was entered with his superior in the lands of Wester Swanshiel as successor to his grandfather. He was at that time already married to Elizabeth Scott. He is probably the same James 'portioner of Swan-sheil' who was among those declared as fugitives in 1684 for not conforming to Episcopalianism. He was probably the James recorded as resident at Easter Swanshiel in 1694. His son and successor Walter was born about 1700. He was succeeded by Walter (called William in Walter Deans' history). James (17th/18th C.) candlemaker in Hawick Parish. In 1708 he witnessed a baptism for William Aitken, 'younger carier'. He married Agnes Henry, who is recorded in 1721 as a teacher of poor children. Probably the same candlemaker James is listed on the west-side of Hawick on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. He is recorded as a candlemaker in 1685, and his wife as 'Isobell hewie', when their daughter Bessie was baptised; the witnesses were William Elliot and Thomas (perhaps a relative). James (17th/18th C.) tailor in Hawick. He is listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick 'eist the water' in 1694. He is probably the tailor recorded in the Kirk Session records paying 18s 'for 3 sticks lost from the quire'. He witnessed baptisms for fellow tailor Alexander Hislop in 1705, for tailor Archibald Scott (along with fellow tailor George Scott) in 1714, and for carrier Simon Mark in 1719. He married Margaret Forrest in 1703; both were from Hawick Parish. Their children included: James (b.1705); and Isobel (b.1709). The witnesses in 1709 were baker John Whillans and tailor William Gledstains. James (17th/18th C.) married Isobel Renwick in Wilton in 1708. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He is recorded at Wester Parkhill in 1714 when his daughter Janet was baptised. Other children who could be his include: Adam (b.1702); Anna (b.1706); and Mitchell (b.1712). James (17th/18th C.) wright in Cavers. His daughter Helen was baptised in 1722. Some of these children, baptised in Cavers Parish, could also be his: Helen (b.1715); Rachel (b.1716); Margaret (b.1719); John (b.1720); Thomas (b.1725); and Isabel (b.1728). James (17th/18th C.) Elder of Bedrule Kirk, recorded in at least 1722–24. He is distinct from the schoolmaster of the same name. James (17th/18th C.) schoolmaster in Hawick Parish, who probably also acted as Session Clerk. According to the handwriting in the baptismal records, he probably took over in the latter part of 1726, following the death of John Purdom, and perhaps after some interim person. His wife was Margaret Henderson. In 1726 he is 'schoolmaster in this toun' when his son Charles was baptised in Hawick, with witnesses John Turnbull (perhaps related) and John Scott. It is unclear how long he served. Perhaps the same James was Schoolmaster at Crailing until 1717, then appointed schoolmaster in Bedrule in 1719 and remaining until 1726, when replaced by a different James. He was also Session Clerk (as recorded in at least 1722–24), as well as Clerk to the Presbytery, for which he received additional payment from the ministers. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at Cawfaulds in 1728. He married Elspeth Martin and their children included: Margaret (b.1718); and Archibald (b.1728). The witnesses in 1728 were Thomas and Walter Turnbull (who may have been related). He may be the James who witnessed a baptism (along with Andrew Martin) for James Dryden in 1737. James (18th C.) married Isobel Huntly in Wilton in 1729. James (18th C.) resident of Appletreehall. He married Margaret Blyth and their son James was baptised in 1730, with witnesses George Stavert and Robert Scott. James (d.1733) schoolmaster in Bedrule. He replaced a different (and probably unrelated) James in 1726 and remained until his death. The Bedrule Session records mention earlier in 1733 that nothing had been done about the accounts 'because of the Clerk's long Indisposition', before his death was reported. James (18th C.) cooper in Hawick. It is possible he was the son of cooper

John baptised in Hawick in 1705. He married Nicholas Sheen (whose family name is also written 'Chain' and variants); she may have been daughter of Walter and baptised in Hawick in 1705. In 1740 he agreed to the banishment of his wife from Hawick for committing several thefts; he was to be fined and otherwise punished if he helped her in Hawick in the future. James (b.1709) son of William, he was born at Bedrule Mill, and the family claimed descent from the Turnbulls of Bedrule. He became tenant farmer at the Dykes, where he was recorded in 1742. He married Helen Spindie in Cavers Parish in 1739 and their children included: Thomas (b.1740); James (b.1742); Agnes (b.1744); and William (b.1755). James (18th C.) married Jane Little in Cavers Parish in 1744. Their son James was baptised in Wilton in 1744. James (18th C.) carrier in Hawick. He married Margaret Currie in 1758 and their children included Robert (b.1758), Janet (b.1760) and Thomas (b.1762). James (b.1736) tenant farmer at Hassendeanbank, son of Adam, who was also tenant there. He could be the James who in July 1774 was paid 2s 5d for 'sharpening Picks' as part of a boundary dyke at Hassendean and who in 1782 was tenant of the 'East end farm of Hassendean'. He was recorded at Hassendean Bank in the Horse Tax Rolls 1785–94. He was still tenant of Hassendean in 1793, when part of the farm was enclosed. He married Agnes, daughter of Thomas Turnbull (of Burnfoot and the Hawick carpet factory). Their children included Adam, who married Betty, daughter of James Scott of Skelfhill. He was the ancestor of the Turnbulls of Merrylaw. James 'Auld Meldrum' (d.1781) recorded in the list of deaths in Hawick. He may be the same man as one of the other Jameses. He was surely related to John, who was also recorded as 'Meldrum' in 1787 when his daughter Lizzy died. James (18th C.) married Janet Scott in Wilton in 1731. James (18th C.) married Agnes Allen in Wilton in 1732. James (18th C.) tailor in Hawick. He may have been related to the earlier tailor of the same name. He married Elizabeth (or 'Betty') 'Norval' and their children included: Margaret (b.1735); James (b.1739); John (b.1741); and William (b.1745). The witnesses in 1743 were ex-Bailie Robert Howison and wright Walter Scott. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton who married Margaret Anderson. They were living at Horsleyhill in 1739 when their son Thomas was baptised. The witnesses were James and John Dryden. James (d.1787) wright in Bedrule. He married Euphan Peden, who died in 1792, aged 62. Their children included: Mary, who died aged 9; James, who died at 16; and William, who lived at Lanton East Park. James (18th C.) miller at Harwood Mill in 1758 when his daughter Betty was baptised in Hobkirk Parish. Elizabeth (b.1762), Marion (b.1765), Isabel (b.1770) and Jean (b.1772) may also have been his children. James (18th C.) resident of Scawmill. He married Margaret Turnbull in Wilton Parish in 1764 and their children included: John (b.1766); George (b.1767); William (b.1769); Elizabeth (b.1770); Margaret (b.1772); and Ann (b.1774). The witnesses in 1770 were Thomas Reid and Robert Ormiston. James (18th C.) resident of Courthill. He married Jean Douglas in 1759 and their children, baptised in Wilton Parish, included: Janet (b.1760); Margaret (b.1762); Esther (b.1764); Isabel (b.1766); James (b.1768); William (b.1770); Jean (b.1771); Helen (b.1774); and Rebecca (b.1776). The witnesses in 1770 were John Mathieson and Andrew Turner. He may be the James who witnessed a baptism for James Black at Packhouses in 1774. James (18th C.) married Margaret Hume in Hawick Parish in 1766. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Ann Turnbull and their children included: Robert (b.1772); and William (b.1778). James (d.1797) resident of Hawick Parish. His death record states he was 'Schoolmr. Billetmaster & dean of the guild'. Presumably he held the position of Dean of Guild in Hawick, and was also a teacher somewhere. He could be the 'Mr Turnbull' who was recorded as a teacher at a private school in Hawick in 1789. James (18th C.) married Helen Wilson in Hawick in 1781. Their children included Mark (b.1784) and Janet (b.1786). James (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish, described as 'Strong man'. His wife Agnes Thomson died in 1787. James (18th C.) farmer at East Middle in Cavers Parish according to the Horse Tax Rolls of 1785. He may be the James whose son Andrew was baptised in Cavers in 1786. James (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He was recorded as an 'eggler', i.e. a pedlar who collected eggs to sell at markets. He married Helen Wilson and their children included: Mark (b.1784); and Janet (b.1786). In 1794 the death of his daughter and also another child are recorded, with his wife Nelly Wilson dying in 1795. His son Mark's death is recorded in 1804, when he was 'Eggler Crosswynd'. James (1752–1844) younger son of Walter, portioner of Ancrum. In 1787 in Cavers Parish he married Helen (also called Agnes) Rutherford (1761–1821), daughter of the farmer at Knowesouth Orchard. He farmed at Broomhall near Ancrum and later at Rewcastle (probably not Bewcastle, as reported by some sources). He may be the James, grandfather of William G. about whom a story is told regarding a smuggler dropping 2 kegs from his horse as he rode past the farm, which he managed to conceal while pointing the excisemen in the direction the smuggler had gone. His children included: John, farmer at Spittal-on-Rule; James (b.1789); Elizabeth Rutherford (b.1791); Betty (b.1793); Helen (b.1795); Isabella (b.1797); and Agnes (b.1799). He was recorded as 'Independent' at 'Honey town' (i.e. Honeyburn farm) in 1841, and he died there. James (b.1754/5–1825) ancestor of the Turnbulls of Bonchester Bridge and the Hawick grocers. It is unclear precisely where he was born and who his parents were. He lived at Hoddleswoodie and other places near Bonchester. He married Betty, daughter of George and Catherine Adamson (possibly the Betty born to George Adamson in Hobkirk in 1760); she died in 1828, aged 77. Their son James (b.1786) was schoolmaster at Denholm and Wilton. Their other children included: George (1783–1861), carrier in Rulewater; William (b.1787), schoolmaster at Hobkirk; Adam, who died in Edinburgh; Alexander, carrier; Thomas, carrier in Newcastleton; and John, grocer in Newcastleton. He and some of his family are buried in Ettleton Cemetery. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Betty Alexander and their children included: James (b.1791); Betty (b.1793); and Adam (b.1798). James (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1791 he married Margaret Taylor, from Roberton Parish. James (18th/19th C.) soldier in Dalkeith Parish. In 1791 he married Alice Oliver, who was from Hawick. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Southdean Parish. In 1792 he married Martha Hogg, who was from Hawick. James (18th/19th C.) carrier recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls for Hawick. James (18th/19th C.) tenant at Hobkirk Manse lands, listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as owner of 2 horses. James (18th/19th C.) farmer at 'Hightofts' (i.e. Upper Tofts), recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as owner of 3 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. He also paid tax on 2 non-working dogs in 1797. James (18th/19th C.) farmer at Greenhouse in Lilliesleaf Parish. He is listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls for Lilliesleaf as owner of 7 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. He also paid the dog tax at Greenhouse at 1797. James (18th/19th C.) recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as farmer at Highchesters, when he owned 3 horses. He also paid tax for having 2 non-working dogs at Highchesters in the same year. Probably the same James at 'Haychesters' was on the 1821 subscription list for William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border'. James (b.1774) son of John of Wester Swanshiel and Berryfell. He was born in Hobkirk Parish and became a tenant farmer. He was recorded as son to John in Berryfell on the ballot for the Militia in Cavers Parish in 1799. Also in 1799 he was tenant at Philhope when his son was baptised in Roberton parish. On the 1801 Militia ballot he was a labourer at Berryfell, described as 'somewhat deformed'. In 1803 he was a shepherd at Berryfell recorded on the Volunteer list as 'infirm, yet willing to serve, if in his power'. He was also tenant at Philhope in 1812 on the ballot for the Militia in Roberton Parish; he is absent from the rectified list, suggesting he was too old. He was later tenant farmer at Galalaw outside Hawick, the lands being purchased by his elder brother Robert. He is recorded in the 1841 census at Galalaw Braefoot. He married Mary Stavert in 1798, the marriage being recorded in Yarrow and Roberton Parishes. Their earlier children were baptised in Roberton. They included: John (b.1799), Mary (b.1809), James (b.1812) and Helen (b.1815), all baptised in Roberton; Eliza (b.1801), Catherine (b.1803), Mary (b.1805), Robert (b.1807), Ann (b.1808), Walter (b.1811), Agnes (b.1814), Margaret (b.1816), Margaret (again, b.1818) all baptised in Yarrow; and William (b.1821), baptised in Wilton. James (18th/19th C.) married Annie 'Maire' in Roberton Parish in 1800. James (b.c.1770s) shoemaker in Hawick. He was listed on the ballot for the Militia in 1799. In 1798 he married Margaret Ainslie, who was also from Hawick. Their children, mostly baptised in East Bank Kirk, included: Walter (b.1801); John (b.1805); Margaret (b.1807); James (b.1809); William (b.1811); Alexander (b.1814); an unnamed child who died in 1816; and Janet, who married coal carrier William Graham. James (1773–1858) son of Walter of Chesterhall near Ancrum. He became farmer at Billerwell in the Rule valley, along with his sons. He married Margaret, daughter of Mark Turnbull, tenant of Ancrum Mill, and she died in 1862, aged 78. His wife's brother was also Mark Turnbull, tenant of Lanton Mill, whose grandson was Provost of Melrose. Their children were: Walter (1805–64, who was the last of Chesterhall); Thomas (b.1809); James (b.1815); John (b.1817); Robert (b.1819);

George Purvis (b.1821); Margaret (1824/5–63), who died unmarried; and Mary (1812/3–60), who married John Laidlaw in Jedburgh. His daughter Elizabeth married Robert, son of John Grieve in 1853. William may have been another son. James (b.c.1770s) son of William in Acreknowe. He was recorded on the 1799 and 1801 ballots for the Militia in Kirkton Parish. James (b.c.1780) shepherd at Hartsgarth according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish. James (b.c.1780) servant at Stirches Mains according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Wilton Parish. He may be the same as one of the other Jameses. James (b.1782/3) stocking-maker in Wilton. He was listed among heads of households in Wilton in 1835, when he was at Damside, and in 1840 and 1841, when he was at Roadhead. His wife was Mary and their children included William, James and Mary. He may be the stockingmaker James whose infant child's death is recorded in 1822. James (18th/19th C.) married Nancy Marr in Wilton in 1805. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Nelly Muir (or Moore) in 1811 and their children, baptised in East Bank Kirk, included: John (b.1812); James (b.1816); Esther (b.1819); and William (b.1822). James (18th/19th C.) married Betty Reid in Wilton in 1815. James (18th/19th C.) listed at Wilton among subscribers to Robert Wilson's 1825 'History of Hawick'. James (b.c.1780) thatcher living at Firth in Lilliesleaf Parish. He was there in 1851 with family members Janet and Andrew. James (18th/19th C.) married Mary Hall in East Bank Kirk in 1807. James (1786–1834) son of James and Betty Adamson (not Anderson, as stated in one source). He was born in Hobkirk Parish, being baptised at Hoddleswoodie, and came from the Nursery House Turnbulls. He was schoolmaster at Denholm and then became the successor to James Elliot at Wilton School in the 1810s. His brother William was schoolmaster at Hobkirk. He was said to have a reputation for being an excellent teacher. He married Margaret Dalgleish (cousin of William Dalgleish, who established the 'Coutard Fund') in Cavers Parish in 1808 and they had 12 children, including: James (b.1809), Clerk of Session in Edinburgh; John (b.1811), who died in London; Agnes (b.1814), who was also a teacher and in 1859 married farmer David Knox; Elizabeth (or 'Betty', b.1816), who married James Dalgleish; Jane or Janet (b.1818); Charters (b.1820), who married Elliot Armstrong; Elspeth (b.1821); George (b.1823); Margaret (b.1824); Mary Scott (b.1827); and William (b.1830), auctioneer in Edinburgh. His wife and eldest daughter ran the 'Image Garden' school around the 1840s, and she survived him by about 50 years. James (18th/19th C.) son of Mark and an Elliot. He was descended from the Chesterhall, Ancrum branch of the Turnbulls. He was a shepherd at Minto Kames, then at Barnes and later at Old Fodderlee. His children include Robert (also a shepherd), Mark (a joiner in Peebles), James (a shepherd in Kingledoors) and a daughter (who kept house for him at Old Fodderlee). James 'Wiggam' (b.c.1780) Denholm tailor who was described as 'half-witted'. On the 1801 ballot for the Militia he was a tailor in Denholm, with the annotation 'has a natural Imbecility of mind' (presumably meaning that he was unfit to serve in the military). He also acted as the village crier, ringing the Dead Bell, announcing the name, and time and place of the burial and usually adding 'and ye're a' invited to the funeral'. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married May Stavert and their children included William (b.1821). James (18th/19th C.) married Mary Michie in Cavers in 1824. James (b.1799/1800) originally from Bowden, he was a blacksmith, grocer and spirit dealer at Appletreehall. He was listed as blacksmith at Appletreehall among heads of households in Wilton Parish 1835–41. In 1851 he was farming at Fenwick, having 140 acres and employing 2 servants. He married Margaret Forsyth in 1819 and their children included: Jean (b.1823); Janet (or Jessie, b.1826); Agnes (b.1828); James (b.1831); and Thomas (b.1833). He is recorded at Appletreehall in 1861 as a grocer and widower, with children Agnes and Thomas. James 'Jimmie Springkie' (b.c.1800) Hawick shoemaker who lived to an old age. His nickname derived from that of his father, 'Auld Springkell'. In Slater's 1852 directory he is listed as a shoemaker on the Cross Wynd. He may be the journeyman shoemaker living with James Scott and family on Damside in 1841. He is probably the James recorded at 4 Cross Wynd in the 1851 and 1861 censuses, employing a handful of men in his shoemaker's business. He lived with his sister Margaret; she may be the 'Miss Turnbull, Cross Wynd', who donated 8 silver coins to the Museum in 1858. He could be the son of Robert and Mary Laidlaw, born in Hawick in 1798, with sister Margaret born in 1793. He probably married Martha Blyth, who died in 1826, aged just 21. James (b.1800/1) born in Southdean Parish, he was farmer at Harelaw in Lilliesleaf Parish. In 1851 he was farmer of 11 acres. His wife was Allison and their children included William, James, Isobella, Eliza, Jane and Christina. James (1801/2–77) born in Minto Parish, he was forester at Cavers estate for almost 50 years. In 1828 he married Jane Weir, who appears to have already been deceased by 1841. He was living at 'Cavers Cottage' in 1851 and at 'Cavers Wood' in 1861. He may be the 'Mr Jas. Turnbull, Cavers', who donated a pair of swans to the Museum in 1860. The family belonged to the Associate congregation in Jedburgh. He had a family of 2 daughters and 3 sons: John (b.1829), the eldest, baptised in East Bank Kirk; Margaret (b.c.1830); Robert (b.1832), clothier in Denholm; James (b.c.1837); and Jean (b.c.1840). James (19th C.) married Janet Cairns in Wilton in 1826. Their children, baptised in East Bank Kirk, included: George (b.1828); and Andrew (b.1832). James (19th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Jean Weir and their children included: John (b.1829), baptised in East Bank Kirk; and Robert (b.1832), baptised in Jedburgh Associate Kirk. James (19th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Mary 'Mirder' or 'Mordon' and their children included: Ann (b.1828), baptised in Jedburgh Associate Kirk. James (19th C.) recorded being 'in Gillbraehead' in 1832 when accused of fathering a child with Janet Scott from Gillfoot. However, he denied it. He was surely related to the blacksmiths of Gillbraehead. James (b.1813/4) son of Hawick stocking-maker William. He was one of 5 men charged for mobbing Tory supporters during the 1837 election. He was found guilty and imprisoned for 12 months, partly because he had previously been convicted of assault. Probably the same James was recorded in jail in Hawick in 1845 and 1850. He is probably the 'Woollen Frame Work Knitter' living on the Howegate in 1851 with his wife Catherine and children Margaret, George, Euphemia and Catherine. James (1814–74) son of Robert and Ann Mathieson. He was a Hawick draper, conducting the town's highest class drapery business of the time at 11 High Street. This is listed in Slater's 1852 directory. In 1841 he was living with his parents on the Cross Wynd. In 1851 he was listed as a Master Draper, employing 4 apprentices, 5 women and 4 girls. In 1861 he was employing 2 men, 2 boys and 5 women. He was on the 'Eternal Cooncil' and was twice Senior Bailie. He was probably the Turnbull who was Jnuior Bailie in 1859, when he was croupier for the centenary Burns night. He was also Treasurer of East Bank Kirk, succeeding his father, was appointed Session Clerk in 1851 and was presented with a plate service by the congregation in 1865. In 1872 he donated to the Museum an 1803 copy of the Globe newspaper. He married Wilhelmina, daughter of Walter John Grieve, farmer in Southfield; she died in 1878, aged 58. Their children included: Robert (1850–53); Ann (c.1855–61); and Christina Mary, who married John Wield. He died at Wilton Grove (his son-in-law's house) and is buried in Wellogate Cemetery. In 1874 his wife donated to the Museum a 'horseman's pistol, formerly belonging to Rev. James Henderson, East Bank Church'. James (19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Barbara Little in 1845 and their son James was baptised in 1844. James (19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Mary Dalgleish and their son Thomas was baptised in 1851. James (1815–88) son of James, farmer at Billerwell. He was joint tenant of Billerwell with his brothers, and also of Prieston. He also farmed for a while at Ashkirk Mill. He is probably the James recorded as farmer at Wester Fodderlee in the 1860s. He married Mary, daughter of William Scott. Their children were: James Robert, who emigrated to Edmonton; William Scott, farmer at Tythehouse; Annie; George Purvis, who emigrated to Canada; Mary, twin to George Purvis; Walter, farmer at Hartshaugh Mill; Mark, twin of Walter; Elizabeth, 'Betsy', married Samuel White from Stow; Janet; Thomas, farmer at Greenholm, near Newcastleton; and Andrew, also farmer at Greenholm. He died at Midburn in Hobkirk Parish. James (b.1819) eldest son of James, Wilton Schoolmaster, and Margaret Dalgleish, he was born in Wilton. He became Clerk of Session in Edinburgh. It is said that he knew the law so well that he was often consulted by the professional lawyers. He married Jessie, sister of banker Archibald Douglas. Their children were Catherine (who married Henry Bunge) and James (a clerk in Register House). James (b.1822/3) born in Ancrum Parish, he was a blacksmith and shepherd at Spittal-on-Rule. He was recorded there in 1851 and 1861. His wife was Jane Scott, daughter of a Hawick joiner, with his mother-in-law being Agnes Scott. Their children included George B. and Adam. James (b.1823) eldest son of John. He took over the tenancy of Spittal farm. Nearly 80 sheep belonging to him were drowned in the flood of 1846, the carcasses being later sold cheaply in Hawick. He was miller at Spittal Mill on the 1852 directory. He is recorded there in 1861, as farmer of 500 acres, employing 17 labourers. He was living there with his step-mother Anne E. James (b.1824/5) frameworker in Wilton. In 1851 he was living at Stouslie Schoolhouse with his wife Eliza (from Dunblane). James (1825–78) eldest son of John, grocer of Newcastleton, and descended from a Hobkirk branch of the Turnbulls. His uncle James was schoolmaster at Wilton. In 1855 he acquired the old-established grocery and wine merchants at 51 High Street, and it lasted for more than a century. He also ran a cart out to Whitrope when the tunnel was being built there. Accounts for the period 1889–1964 are listed in the National Register of Archives. In 1854 he married Anne, eldest daughter of James Robson, a Jedburgh shoemaker; she died in 1890, aged 65. Their children were: Isabell Young, who married Charles Firth of Fell Grove, Yorkshire; Mina, who married William Cunningham of Brisbane, Australia; James Robson, who died unmarried; John; William, who emigrated to Toowoomba, Queensland; Mary, who married Frederick William Sykes from Leeds; Margaret; and Robert, who moved to Brisbane, Australia. He is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. James (19th C.) recorded in 1852 as saddler and ironmonger in Lilliesleaf. If this was not an error for 'Thomas', then they must as least have been closely related. It is also possible he was the same James who ran the Subscription Library in Lilliesleaf in 1852. James Douglas (b.1833) son of Thomas and Mary Beattie. He emigrated to Australia, where he farmed at Mount Prospect, Leichardt and Kotupna in Victoria, and in 1885 settled at Guy Fawkes (now called 'Ebor') in New South Wales. Robyn Crosslé wrote a book 'Turnbull: lives and letters' (c.1994) about him, containing extracts of many family letters, especially from his brother Gen. Peter Stephenson. He married Esther Rathie, daughter of his cousin Barbara Andison and James Rathie. Their children were Thomas Scott, Barbara, James Douglas, Mary, Archibald, Esther, John, William, Adam Robert and Barbara Esther Mabel. James (b.1830/1) carpenter in Wilton. In 1851 he was living at 'Stirches croft No. 2'. In 1846 he married Isabella Scott, who was from Ancrum. Their children included: Elizabeth (b.1847); Walter (b.1848); Margaret (b.1850); John (b.1852); and Richard (b.1854). James (b.1836) son of Robert, he was farmer at Galalaw. He married Margaret, daughter of builder George Tait. Their children were: Robert, who was an engineer in Toronto; James, who later farmed at Galalaw and married his cousin Amy, daughter of draper and tobacconist J.A. Turnbull; John, a science teacher in Kilwinning; and George, town missionary in Kirkintilloch. James (19th C.) schoolmaster at St. Cuthbert's School during part of 1893, between Mr. Jay and Mr. Inglis. James (19th C.) resident at East Bank House. He was one of the executors for the firm of Dickson & Turnbull when it folded in about 1876. He may have been a brother of George, the main Turnbull partner. James (1846–1923) engineer born in Hawick, who was long involved with Allars Kirk. His father died during the cholera outbreak of 1849. He wrote a memoir, which was published (at the insistence of John R. Purdom) as 'Hawick in Bygone Days' (1927), which contains an invaluable record of Hawick shops, businesses, people and customs of the mid-1800s. He may be the James (b.1848/9) living with his step-father John Ogilvie on Drumlanrig Place in 1861. He was at Drumlanrig Plaex in 1857 when he donated a Queen Anne sixpence to the Museum and was probably also the 'Mr Jas. Turnbull' who in 1863 donated another Queen Anne sixpence. He may have been a son of William and Isabella Rule, who were married in Wilton in 1847. James Robert (b.1852) eldest son of James, tenant at Billerwell. He emigrated to Canada and worked as an auctioneer in Edmonton. James (19th/20th C.) son of James, he was farmer at Galalaw like his father. He married his cousin Amy, daughter of draper and tobacconist J.A. Turnbull. Jane (b.c.1775) originally from England, she was listed as grocer and spirit dealer at Bonchester Bridge in 1841. She was probably proprietor of the Horse and Hounds Inn. She lived there with Thomas and John, who were probably her sons. Jane nee Scott (b.1777/8) postmistress in Denholm in the mid-19th century. She is probably the vintner of that name recorded in Denholm in 1837 and 1852. She married Alexander. In 1841 she was 'Jeany Turnbul Senr.' living at the Cross Keys Inn with her joiner son John, daughter Jeany and great-nephew John Scott. She was listed as postmistress in 1851, with her daughter Jane as assistant. Her great-nephew John was probably the later gardener and botanist. Jane (1792–1866) daughter of William of Burnfoot. She lived at 5 Slitrig Crescent with her older sister Eleanor. They were referred to as 'the Misses Turnbull' among the gentry of Hawick in Slater's 1852 directory. By 1861 she was living at the same address with her niece, also Eleanor Turnbull. Janet (15th/16th C.) daughter and co-heiress of Walter Turnbull of Gargunnock. In 1501, along with her sister Margaret, she was infefted in the lands of Hassendeanbank. In 1509 she and Elizabeth (perhaps another sister) had sasines for Gargunnock and other lands in Stirlingshire. She probably married Thomas Elphinstone, who had a charter for half the lands of Hassendeanbank (along with her) from Cuthbert Cunningham, Earl of Glencairn in 1512. And she may later have been the Mrs. Janet Seton (nee Turnbull) who infefted Archibald Douglas of Timpendean in Hassendeanbank. She may be the Janet who had a sasine for Lanton in 1502 (with Elizabeth and Margaret having the sasine in 1506). Janet (d.bef. 1526) granted a charter for part of Philiphaugh in 1509. She may have been daughter or wife of Adam of Philiphaugh. She is probably the deceased Janet described in 1526 as having possessing a third of Philiphaugh. This piece of land reverted to Ralph, whose widow Margaret Ker gained them according to the 1526 document. It is unclear how she was related to the Janet recorded possessing Philiphaugh in 1555. Janet (16th C.) recorded in 1555 when her son John was served heir to her lands of Philiphaugh. She could have been wife of Robert of Philiphaugh, who is recorded in the 1530s. Janet (16th C.) recorded in Ancrum in 1586/7 among Borderers accused of crimes who had failed to appear in court and were given one more chance to find sureties. It was quite unusual for women to be named as criminals in this way, and she is one of only 2 such names on this particular list. Janet (17th/18th C.) resident of 'Bedrule toun', recorded receiving poor money from the Bedrule Session in 1726. Janet (18th C.) recorded in 1771 as teacher of a private school in Denholm. Jean (d.bef. 1632) daughter of Walter of Templehall. Along with her sister Beatrix she inherited the lands of Templehall and Brewlands from her uncle Andrew (son of David of Wauchope) in 1604. She must have been a minor then, since in 1605 her 'tutor' George Turnbull (2nd son of Hector) acted on their behalf to removed several people from their lands. In 1632, by which time she was deceased, her sister claimed the other half of their inherited lands. Jean (b.1819) daughter of Alexander and Jane Scott. Her mother was postmistress in Denholm, and her brother John was a joiner. They lived at the Cross Keys Inn, where she was also a spirit dealer. She is probably the aunt of botanist John Scott, who raised him after he was orphaned at the age of 4. John (14th C.) early member of this family, perhaps son of Walter of Minto. He had a charter for the lands of 'Hundallwalschop', i.e. Hundleshope in Peeblesshire. This was given by King David II in 1357, as documented in a transumpt of 1534, with his surname recorded as 'Trumbull'. His daughter and heiress Margaret (hence presumably only child) married William Gledstains of that Ilk, so that Hundleshope passed to the Gledstains. Margaret later resigned her lands of Roberton to her son John; this suggests that this John of Hundleshope was related to the Borthwick Water Turnbulls. Probably the same John was granted the 4 merk land of 'Litlegrewy' (or 'Litill Greadby'), Glengarg and Glencraig in Dumfrieeshire by Dougall McDougall, also in the reign of David II. He is probably an earlier Turnbull than John of Minto, although surely related. John (14th C.) granted lands in Dumfriesshire by Dougal McDougall in the reign of David II. The lands were 'Litlegrewy', 'Glengarg' and 'Glencraig'. John (14th C.) Sheriff of Selkirkshire according to the Exchequer Rolls of 1360. He was also recorded as Deputy to the Sheriff in 1364. It is unclear how he was related to other Turnbulls in Selkirkshire. John (14th/15th C.) granted the lands of Wauchopehead in a charter of Robert III in 1404. The lands had been forfeited by 'John Bour'. John (14th/15th C.) son of Adam 'of Whytehope', i.e. Whithope in the Borthwick valley. He was granted lands at Hassendeanbank in 1409 by the Baron, William Cunningham of Kilmaurs. Several generations of Johns subsequently held these lands. Sir John of Falshope (14th/15th C.) said to have had a daughter who married George Scott, 2nd Laird of Synton. His lands were either Phawhope near the head of the Ettrick or Fauldshope opposite Oakwood. He may have been ancestor of Sir Thomas who held the same lands in the late 15th century. John of Minto (d.1423) nicknamed 'Out with the Sword' for his fiery temperament. He could be the 'John Turnebole' who held part of Minto according to an English document of c.1380. In 1390 he granted the Barony of Minto to his nephew, Sir William Stewart of Jedworth; the charter states that he 'was defective in some part of himself'. He was captured by the English in 1399 (along with Sir Richard Rutherford) and imprisoned in the Tower of London until 1413. Perhaps the same John had a letter of protection for setting out in the service of King Henry IV in Scotland. An English record of 1400 forbid his captors to release him and other Scottish leaders; he is there described as 'out wyth swerd'. Thereafter he took part in the Battle of Cravant (part of the Hundred Years War), supporting the French, at which perhaps as many as 3,000 Scots fell. He appears to have died there, although it is also alleged that he died later of leprosy, causing dispute over the title to his lands. He was succeeded by his son Walter. There was an inquiry in 1424 into whether the grant to Sir William Stewart was legal, because of his supposed leprosy. His sister may have married Sir Alexander Stewart of Darnley. John (14th/15th C.) recorded in 1415 as 'nobleman John Turnbul, doncel' (possibly meaning a junior squire), when he had permission to marry noblewoman Margaret 'de Gledstone' from Glasgow Diocese. There had to be Papal permission because he was her godfather. Although contracted to marry, they were 'canonically separated' according to a Papal letter of 1417, where Margaret had permission to marry Walter Turnbull, to whom he was related in the third degree. It is possible this is the same man as John of Minto. John of Fulton (15th C.) part of the investigation into the leprosy of John of Minto in 1425/6. About the same time he also witnessed a retour of Walter Scott in the lands of Eilrig, and is there recorded as 'Johannem Turnbull de Foultoune', along with David Turnbull. He may be the John who was on the 1429/30 'retour' panel for the lands of Caverton. In 1432 he was recorded as 'of the Fulton, Bailie of the regality of Sprouston', when he gave sasine (on behalf of Archibald, Earl of Douglas) of the lands of Primside passing from Andrew Rule to his son George. In 1438 he was Bailie of the Regality of Sprouston at the 'retour of inquest' for Ker of Altonburn. He is probably one of the 3 men named 'Johannem Turnbul' on a retour for Douglas of Bonjedward in 1439. He is described as 'of Foultoune' when part of an inquest into lands of Newlands, held at Jedburgh in 1440. Philip and James Turnbull are also named, and so may be related. He may also be the John who was on a 'retour' panel for Ker of Altonburn in 1446/7. John of Bedrule (15th C.) recorded as 'Johne turnbull domino de Bedorowll' in 1432 when he was one of the witnesses to the sasine giving the Barony of Cavers and Sheriffdom of Roxburghshire to William Douglas. It is not impossible that he is the same man as John of Fulton. His relationship to other Turnbulls is unknown, although he was probably closely related to William, founder of Glasgow University. He may be the John who in 1437 was on the retour for deciding on ownership of the East Mains of Hawick. He was probably succeeded by George of Bedrule, recorded from 1448. He may be the 'Johne Turnbule' who was on the 1456 panel that acquitted Andrew Ker of Altonburn of the charge of helping the English burn lands around Jedburgh. John of Lanton (15th C.) recorded as being of 'Langtoun' and constable of 'le Newerk' when he witnessed a charter in 1439. The document was a grant by Archibald, Earl of Douglas, to Andrew Ker of Altonburn, for lands in Primside, and was made at Newark Castle. John (15th C.) recorded in the Exchequer Rolls for 1451, when the custom of his goods was paid to Lord Crichton. In 1453 the rentals from the west side of Dunmure (it is not clear where this was) were in his hands. John of Hassendeanbank (15th C.) recorded in 1464 resigning the lands of Hassendeanbank to 'William de Edmondston'. This may simply have been resigning them to his superior before they were granted again, since the family appear to still hold the lands about a century later. In 1470/1 he was one of the witnesses to the decision to acquit Andrew Ker of Cessford of the charges of assisting the King's enemies. He is surely related to the William of Hassendeanbank who is recorded in 1432. John (15th C.) listed in 1463/4 among the local men who were rewarded by the King for assisting in the capture of John Douglas of Balveny. He is surely related to other Turnbulls who were named (Andrew, Stephen and Richard), but it is unclear how. He is recorded as 'Johannes Turnebule'. It is possible he is the same as one of the other contemporary Johns. John of Ern Cleuch (15th C.) member of the panel that met in Jedburgh to rule on the dispute over the lands of Kirkton Mains and the Flex in 1464/5. Probably the same John 'Turnebull' was on the inquest panel to decide on the inheritance of the Barony of Cavers in 1464/5 (along with Hector, George and William of Minto). He is probably related to the David of Ern Cleuch who is recorded 30 years later. John (15th C.) granted the lands of 'Stowislee' (i.e. Stouslie) in the Barony of Chamberlain Newton, resigned by William Lindsay of Garmilton. He is described as dwelling in Borthwick (presumably the Borthwick Water). In a document of 1468 he binds himself on payment of 100 merks Scots on 40 days notice to resign the lands in favour of John Lord Lindsay of the Byres. John (15th C.) recorded in 1468 when he was one of 2 men appointed to represent Selkirkshire on a Parliamentary inquisition to assess the tax on barons. It is unclear whether the is the same as one of the other contemporary Johns. John of Harden (15th C.)

probably the last Turnbull of Harden, son of Walter (who is recorded in 1468). He had a charter for the lands of Harden in 1482, granted by the Baron of Wilton, Henry Wardlaw. A letter under the seal of James IV in 1491 requires John Scott, Baron of Wilton to receive Alexander, Lord Home as tenant in the lands of Harden, which had fallen into the King's hands because he had 'died a bastard without lawful heirs'. He could be the same John who held the lands of Stouslie. He may be the John who acted as one of the Earl of Angus' Bailies for infefting David Scott of Branxholme in the lands of Mangerton in 1482. He may have married a daughter of Henry, 6th Baron of Wilton and Torrie. John (15th C.) listed in 1476 as being 'of Phirth', which could possibly be Firth in Lilliesleaf Parish. He is among a number of Border Lairds involved in an action over lands in Linton Parish, registered with Parliament. He is probably the John 'duellands in the Fithe' who in 1479 was ordered (along with James Alemoor of that Ilk) to pay rentals of lands in Cavers Parish to Robert of 'Murheid'. John (15th C.) son of Thomas of Phaup. He leased Phaup at least in the period 1483–7. He was listed as son and heir of Thomas 'of Fawlishop' in 1486 when he leased the lands of Huntly. John (15th C.) witness to the document of 1488 in which Greenwood (i.e. Girnwood) and the Lyne were leased by Sir Thomas of Greenwood to Robert Scott of Allanhaugh. It was signed at St. Mary's Church in Ettrick Forest and his name appears as 'Johanne Turnbull'. He may be the same as one of the other contemporary Johns. John (15th C.) recorded in 1490 when he was assigned the lands of 'Corscleuch' (i.e. Crosscleuch) by James IV. He may thus have been the first of the Turnbulls of Crosscleuch. John (15th C.) son of Robert in Wolfelee. He was fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1493. John (15th C.) tenant in Ruecastle, recorded in 1493. He had remission for stealing 6 oxen, 2 horses and 12 cows from tenants 'de slittrik' (i.e. on Sltirig Water). His surety was the Laird of Bedrule. Probably the same tenant in Ruecastle was fined in 1502 for non-appearance at the Justice-aire, when he was surety for himself. Additionally he was one of the 20 or so Turnbulls and others who failed to appear in 1502 to answer for the murder of Robert Oliver; Thomas of Bedrule was fined for not entering him in the court. John of Gatehousecote (15th C.) recorded in the Justice-aire at Jedburgh in 1493. George of Bedrule had remission for several crimes, including assisting him in his 'theft and treason'. Separately, George Waugh in Hawick was allowed to compone for resetting him when he was 'at the horn' for the murder of Archibald Rutherford. He was surely related to Thomas, who was also recorded in Gatehousecote at the same time. Probably the same John 'in gaithous coit' was recorded in 1502 among the men who were put to the horn for involvement in the murder of Robert Oliver; the person called to enter him was George of Hallrule, while Andrew and William in Gatehousecote were also mentioned and so surely related. Also in 1502 he was 'in gatehouscoit' when he served as surety for his brother Thomas, both fined for non-appearance. John (15th C.) recorded being 'in Hawick' at the 1493 Justice-aire in Jedburgh. Along with Robert Scott in Todshawhaugh, he was allowed to 'compone' for the crime of bringing in Englishmen and he was also charged with common theft. His surety was the Laird of Howpasley. John 'de Newhalburn' (15th C.) listed in the pardon granted by the King to Sir Thomas of Phaup in 1494. He may have been a son of Sir Thomas (perhaps the same son recorded in the 1480s); he and Robert of 'Mudlaw' are listed, with one of them being 'suorum filiorum' (his son), but it is unclear which one. His residence (transcribed as 'Newhalby' in Pitcairn's book) may have been the Newhall Burn to the south-west of Traquair. John (15th C.) listed in the will of Sir David Scott of Branxholme being bequeathed 40 sheep. He is probably the same as one of the contemporary Johns. John 'Case' (15th C.) listed at the 1493 Justice-aire in Jedburgh when William Douglas of Cavers was fined for his non-appearance; his nickname there is given as 'casy'. He is also recorded as 'Johne Turnbule, callit Case, in Nethir Bonechestir' in the accounts for the Jedburgh Justice Aire of 1494/5; he contributed 4 cows. He was probably related to the David of Bonchester recorded in 1502. He may be the 'Jok turnbull callit casy' recorded in 1503 listed among men who were fined (in his case 1 cow) for failing to attend the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. John (15th C.) recorded as being in Minto in 1493 when, along with 4 others, he 'came in the King's Will for treasonably concealing and Stouthreif of ten score pas-pennys pertaining to the King, found in the Kirk of Mynto'. His surety was the Laird of Bedrule. It is possible he is the same as John of Minto, who was recorded in the early 16th century. Perhaps the same man was recorded in 1498 as 'Suer[?] Johannes turnbul'; along with William of Minto,

Ralph Ker and others, he was part of a bond to act upon men who were already declared as fugitives. He may also be the John who was recorded as father-in-law to Robert Young in Minto, for who William of Minto served as surety in 1502. John (15th C.) resident of Bedrule, recorded at the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh in 1493. He had remission for committing theft before the time of his previous remission and also for involvement with the Duke of Albany during the earlier revolt. John 'Blinnd John' (15th C.) recorded in 1494/5 as 'Sande Turnbulis brothir of Ballentyn, callit blind Johne' in the accounts of the Justice-aire of Jedburgh, when he contributed 2 cows (for the expenses of the court, presumably in lieu of a fine). This is probably Bellendean near Roberton, but other places may be possible. His brother was clearly Alexander. John (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1494/5 as resident of Dryden. He was allowed to compone for the crimes of communing with rebels who were at the horn, specifically Patrick and Gilbert. Probably the same John, son of Andrew of Dryden was recorded in 1494/5 among men who John Scott of Deloraine was allowed to compound for associating with; they were said to have stolen 60 sheep belonging to William Murray from Sundhope. In the Register of the Privy Seal in 1498 he is listed being 'in Dridane', presumably meaning he farmed at Dryden, near Teviothead. Along with John Scott from Northhouse, he received a pardon for his crimes of assisting the English. In 1502 he was surety (along with Alexander in Commonside) for Philip in Whithope and David in Carlinpool. Also in 1502 he was surety for Robert Jackson in Wolfcleuchhead and Robert Jackson, tenant of the Laird of Howpasley (probably the same man). Probably the same John in Dryden was surety in 1502 for William Anderson and fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. John (15th C.) son of Matthew in Hassendean. In 1494/5 he and his brother Nicholas had remission for the murder of Robert Redford, with John Gledstains as surety. They are recorded in the Treasurer's accounts for 1494/5 having obtained remission from the King. John (15th/16th C.) name of 2 men listed in the 1501 Exchequer Rolls, along with Robert, Ninian, George and David. Their £40 fine was granted to Thomas, son and heir of George of Bedrule. John (15th/16th C.) son of Philip, probably the Laird of Whithope. He is mentioned in 1494/5 when the Laird of Bedrule acted as his surety and was fined for his non-appearance at the Justice-aire. He was also recorded in 1501 among 10 men whose fines were remitted, including Turnbulls of Fulton and Bonchester; his name is recorded as 'Johannis Trumbull Philipson'. John 'Blue John' (15th/16th C.) one of the Turnbulls and others who were failing to appear in court in Jedburgh in 1502 to answer for the murder of Robert Oliver. Many of the others were from Rulewater, suggesting he was also. His nickname was recorded as 'blew Johne', and he was distinct from John in Ruecastle, John in Jedburgh and John in Wells, who were also listed. John (15th/16th C.) recorded in Jedburgh in 1502 when he was among a large group of men who failed to appear to the charge of murder of Robert Oliver and were declared as fugitives. Mark Ker of Dolphinston was fined for his non-appearance. John (15th/16th C.) recorded as tenant in Wells in 1502. Along with about 20 Turnbulls and others he failed to appear to answer for the murder of Robert Oliver. Mark Ker in Dolphinton was called to enter him, and subsequently fined, while he was put to the horn and forfeited his goods; the Sheriff of Roxburgh served as his surety (unlike for most of the other men). He was probably related to Adam in Wells, who was also listed. John of Tofts (15th/16th C.) served as surety in 1502 for George, described as 'in Toftis', who was surely a close relative. George, along with Robert, called 'Muriale' had been involved in a raiding party that burned and stole livestock from Riddell. Probably the same John 'in toftis' is mentioned in 1493 when his son Cock had remission for theft of an ox from Minto. John (15th/16th C.) recorded in Belses in 1502. James Davidson 'in camys' (perhaps Camieston) was surety for him, and he was also surety for himself, and fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. John (15th/16th C.) recorded being 'de france' in 1502 at the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh. The Master of Angus (George Douglas) was fined for failing to arrest him. It is unclear where 'France' was located. John (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 among men who Marjory Turnbull was convicted of resetting. His name appears before Alexander, to whom he was probably related, but it is not stated where they were from. John of Minto (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 as an associate of Peter in Bonchester. Along with his accomplices, they had burned grain belonging to George Rutherford at 'Sandystanis'. He may be the same as one of the 2 men called John 'in Mynto' who were listed on the 1516 pardon for Turnbulls who assisted Alexander, Lord Home; one of these men is stated to be a cousin of William of Minto. John 'Lang John' (15th/16th C.) tenant in Whitrig (probably in the Borthwick valley) in 1503. He was listed among men who were fined (in his case 4 oxen, 2 cows, a horse and ' ruk of corne') for failing to attend the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. John 'Jock' (15th/16th C.) tenant in 'bowosyd', which is probably the same place later called Bowset. He is listed in 1503 among men who were fined (in his case 3 cows) for failing to attend the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. John 'Jock' (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1503 as brother to the Laird of Gargunnock, who may have been Walter. He was charged a cow for failing to attend the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. John (15th/16th C.) Abbot of Newbattle 1503–20. It is unclear how he might be related to other Turnbulls. John (15th/16th C.) recorded along with Robert as witness to a document relating to the lands of Allanshaws (in Lauderdale) and Melrose Abbey. John (15th/16th C.) recorded as tenant of Hornshole in 1516, on a long list of Turnbulls given remission for any role in helping the treasonous Homes. He was probably related to James and Adam, recorded as tenants at Hornshole in 1501 and 1502, respectively John (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1527 as owner of a tenement of land in Selkirk, lying between the main street and the Ettrick. Probably the same John is recorded in Selkirk in 1532. He may also be the John in Selkirk from whom Walter, son of Walter Scott of Haining was accused of stealing a horse in Selkirk in 1502. John 'Black Sow' (d.1531) hanged for 'Common Theft, outputting and inputting thereof'. There is no information about his relationship to other Turnbulls. John (16th C.) recorded as 'Bailie in that part' along with Hector of Barnhills in a sasine in the Barony of Feu-Rule in 1531. John (16th C.) listed in 1531 as 'tutor of the lord of Phillophaucht' and grandson of Robert 'Trumbill' when an acknowledgement was made in Selkirk for a tack being given to Mark Ker (Burgess of Selkirk) for 5 years for lands in Philiphaugh. Probably the same John 'of Philophauch' witnessed a document in 1530/1. Robert was also recorded as tutor of Philiphaugh in 1531 and surely related. He was presumably tutor for John, who was son of Ralph. John of Hassendeanbank (d.c.1540) son and heir of George of Hassendeanbank. In 1533 he made a declaration in Selkirk that he had tried to pay Andrew Davidson for the redemption of a tenement there. He was also recorded in a court case of 1540 involving a dispute between Thomas Turnbull, tenant of Rawfalt, with William Scott of Hassendean, over a 'wadset' of his (as well as other issues) for the lands of 'Nether Copit Rig' and 'Easter Mains, called Copit Rig'. He is probably the John 'of Hassendene' recorded in 1538 when he discharged Andrew Ker and his wife Marion Pringle for all previous fees on the lands of 'Mabyllynflat'. In 1540 he sold a tenement in Selkirk to John Thomson. He is probably the John 'of Hassindene burn or bank' who sold land in Selkirk to Adam Vogan in 1544; Henry was one of the witnesses and may have been related. His family appear to have held the lands of Hassendeanbank since 1409. John (16th C.) early example of a Turnbull not directly associated with the Borders. He was Deacon of the Guild of Wrights in Cupar, Fife. In 1554 he and others were imprisoned for leading the Craftsmen of Cupar in a revolt against their Provost and Bailies. John (16th C.) recorded in the Selkirk Protocol Books in 1535. He was chaplain and 'vicar pensionary of le barechy Benedochy' (i.e. the parish of Benedochy). His testament was read out in Selkirk, whereby he left everything to his servants and the poor, appointing as executors John Brydon (probably the notary in Selkirk) and his sister (perhaps wife of Brydon). John (16th C.) recorded in 1541 on a list of tenants and other associates of James Douglas of Cavers when he complained about his farm of Whitriggs being burned by Walter Scott of Branxholme. John (d.bef. 1544) Burgess of Selkirk. In 1544 his daughter and sole heir Alison was given sasine of his tenement there. However, confusingly she seems to have shared a tenement with another heir, Margaret. She immediately sold her half tenement to William Elliot. John (16th C.) recorded in 1559 as Clerk of Minto Parish. It is unclear how he was related to other Turnbulls. It is possible that he is the same as 'Johanne Trummill', who acted as a witness for the inventory after the death of William Scott of Kirkurd in 1552. John of Philiphaugh (c.1505–bef. 1582) son and heir of Ralph, Laird of Philiphaugh. He may be the John 'heir of Philophauch' who witnessed a document in Selkirk in 1535. In 1535 he was 'of Philhop' (but Philiphaugh is probably meant) when his wardship was held jointly by Mark Ker of Kippielaw (his uncle) and Robert (probably an uncle or grandfather). The pair agreed to each hold half of his lands until he came of age. However, in 1536 Robert gave over his half to Mark Ker. He came of age in 1536/7 when described as '[illegible] of Philop and lord of the lands of Holdene and Philop[hauch]'; it seems likely that 'Philop' refers to land near Philiphaugh and not

Philhope in the Borthwick valley. He then appointed his uncle Mark Ker as curator for his lands, failing which Andrew Ker of Auld Roxburgh. In 1539 he was on the inquest panel for Alexander Lauder succeeding to Todrig. Probably the same John of Philiphaugh is recorded in 1558 when he was served heir to his mother Janet, in her 5-acre lands of Philiphaugh. He was also recorded as witness to the 1560 bond between the Rutherfords and the Kers. He is probably the 'Lard of Phillophauch' listed among Border lairds who were ordered to support the Warden, Ker of Cessford. Perhaps the same John of Philiphaugh in 1579/80 served as an arbitrator on behalf of Thomas Dalgleish of Deuchar and Simon Scott of Gamescleuch in a case against Robert of Burnfoot and Robert of Burnhead and in the same year witnessed the installation of the new Parson and Vicar in Ashkirk. He is probably the Laird of Philiphaugh whose son and heir Mark and other son Robert both witnessed a transaction involving land in Lilliesleaf. Additionally in 1579/80 he and his son and heir Mark witnessed a transaction for lands near Melrose. In 1580 he was deceased when Patrick Murray of Falahill gave sasine of 4 acres of land, with mansion, houses, etc., to his daughters Janet, Agnes, Margaret and Marion (alias 'Mawsie'); his eldest daughter Elizabeth complained that this sasine should not prejudice her, while Janet and Agnes promised not to sell their parts without the consent of their mother's brother John Scott in Catslack. The witnesses included John Scott in Catslack, John Murray in Philiphaugh and James Ker in Yair. In 1580/1 he witnessed an agreement involving lands in Hassendeanburn. In 1581 he witnessed a dispute involving Scotts in Hundleshope. He was deceased in 1581/2 when his widow Isobel Douglas resigned her thirds and liferents of lands to his son and heir Mark; George in Philiphaugh and William, Burgess of Selkirk, were witnesses. John (16th C.) tenant farmer at Hallrule. His house and yard are referred to in the 1562 Baronial dispute over the lands of Feu-Rule. This could have been the same as John 'in Roull' recorded in 1583/4 along with George in Hallrule and Walter in Hobsburn, when Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst had an 'escheat' to seize their goods for not vacating their lands. He could be the 'Johnne Turneble of Halroule' listed in 1590 among Border landlords and heads of families ordered to find caution for the conduct of their dependents. John of Hassendeanburn (16th C.) recorded in 1564 when he accused David Elliot (son of Gavin Elliot of Horsleyhill) of stealing 80 sheep from his lands of Hassendean Kirk. It is unclear how he was related to the Turnbulls of Hassendeanbank. John (16th C.) son of Adam in Belses and brother of Hector of Belses. In 1576 Adam had a pledge before the Privy Council that his sons would refrain from thieving; this included him, as well as his brothers 'Hekie', David and George. In 1580 he was a witness when his brother Hector gave sasine to his daughter and heir Katherine for his lands in Belses. John of Gatehousecote (16th C.) recorded in 1567 among the list of men accused of treason for assisting James Hepburn, Earl of Bothwell. Probably the same 'Jok Turnbull in Gaithous Cott' was listed in 1575 he was among men asked to decide whether Robert Fraser was responsible for stealing some English horses. John (16th C.) tenant in Abbotrule. In 1569 he was warded within the Sheriffdom of Perth, with his sureties being Andrew Home, Commendator of Jedburgh, Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst, Sir Nicholas Rutherford of Hundalee and Robert Kerr of Woodhead. He could be the same as one of the other Johns. John of Denesyde (16th C.) described as holding a peel house. He was probably a direct ancestor of Adam, who left Denesyde in 1715. He may have been descended from Robert and David who were recorded in 1611. John (16th C.) tailor recorded as 'John Trumble' when he was made a Burgess of Glasgow in 1574. It is unclear how he might have been related to other Turnbulls. John of Howden (16th C.) recorded in 1576 among a group of Turnbulls and others (from Barnhills, Hallrule, Billerwell, Belses and Chesters) who had a bond with another group of Turnbulls (from Minto, Bewlie, Kames and Troneyhill) and others, not to harm each other. He is surely related to the later John of Howden. In 1580 he was listed among men who owed money to John Dawson in Selkirk. John (16th C.) recorded as Reader of Bedrule 1576–78. George was Reader right after this, so it is possible that one of the names is an error. He also appears to have served as Reader at Abbotrule and Lessuden. It is possible that he was an ex-monk of Dryburgh Abbey. John (16th C.) nephew of Sir Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule, with his father perhaps being Robert. He was listed in 1578/9 as 'broder sone to the said Sir Thomas' when members of the family were asked to appear before the Privy Council to answer for the murder of Thomas Shiel. John (16th C.) recorded as tenant in Hutlerburn in 1579 when there was a dispute over a horse with neighbouring tenants in Huntly. John (16th C.) gave a sasine in 1579 of his 10 poundland of 'Reuhop or Philop', in the Barony of Hawick and Sherrifdom of Selkirk, to Martin Elliot. This was surely Martin of Braidlie, whose son was Simon of Philhope. He did this with the consent of his son, whose forename is not given. It is possible he is the same as John of Howden, and possibly also John of Philiphaugh. John (16th C.) recorded in 1580 as occupier of 2 rigs in Lilliesleaf. These lay to the east of Porteous Croft, where William Middlemas held lands. John 'Jock' (16th C.) tenant of Nether Bonchester. In 1581 he was listed among the 10 men accused of the murder of Walter, son of Wat Turnbull of Bewlie. He could be the brother of David in Belses (with other brothers being Adam and George) accused of harassing the widow of Walter of Rawflat in 1583. John of Minto (16th/17th C.) possibly son of John. He may have been a minor when he succeeded, since Hector Turnbull 'tutor of Minto' is recorded in 1553/4 and in 1569. In 1571 he was one of the sureties for the leaders of the Olivers, along with Sir Thomas and 2 Rutherfords. In 1571/2 he signed a bond to act against Borders thieves and signed the 'Band of Roxburgh' in 1573. In 1573 he was among men from the Jedburgh area accused by Robert Kerr of Woodhead of raiding his house and farm, although they were acquitted because Kerr had reset the fugitive Kerr of Ferniehirst. In 1574 he signed a bond of service with Archibald, 8th Earl of Angus, along with several other Turnbulls. In 1575 he was one of the arbitrators for the Elliots in their feud with the Pringles. He also served as surety in 1576. In 1576 he was listed among a group of Turnbulls and others (from Bewlie, Kames and Troneyhill), who had a bond not to harm another group of Turnbulls (from Barnhills, Billerwell, Belses and Chesters); however, there was a complaint a few months later that his 'servand and dependar' Walter in Firth attacked Patrick Bennet, servant to Adam of Belses. In about 1578 he signed a bond with other Rutherfords and Turnbulls and another bond between the Kers and the Rutherfords. In 1578/9 he was among 22 Border Lairds who did not appear before the Privy Council when summoned. In 1580 he was ordered, along with Sir Thomas of Bedrule and Wat of Bewlie, to enter pledges into ward in Edinburgh Castle (which apparently he did) or be declared a rebel. He and Wat of Bewlie had a caution for £2000 that they would appear before the Privy Council, with William Redpath of Greenlaw as surety. Also in 1580 he was head of a group of Turnbulls of Minto, Wauchope, Bewlie and Hobsburn who had a a bond to keep the peace with the Turnbulls of Bedrule and others. In 1581 he and Martin Elliot of Braidlie were caution for the re-entry of Hob Elliot of Braidlie, as pledge for the Elliots of Gorrenberry. In the same year he was among a large group denounced as rebels for failing to present men to answer their rieving crimes and additionally among Border Lairds who denounced their bonds with Archibald Douglas, Earl of Angus. Also in 1581 he was accused of being head of a group of Turnbulls who came to the farm of Rawflat and there harassed the widow and children of the murdered Walter Turnbull, then stole the cattle and goods from the farm. In 1583 the Kerrs of Ancrum paid surety for him not to harm Agnes, widow of Walter of Rawflat and her tenants and servants; the document was signed for him, because he could not write. He was among the Border Lairds summoned to appear before the Privy Council in 1583/4. And he is recorded in 1584/5 as the first name on a list of Turnbulls, Douglases and others who were to appear before the Privy Council 'concerning thair obedience to his Majestie and quieting of the countrie'. He is probably the 'lard of Mynto' listed in 1586 among leaders in upper Teviotdale in a document by King James VI instructing his Lieutenant on the Border. In 1587 he served as 'cautioner in relief' for Sir Thomas of Bedrule, while Archibald Douglas, Earl of Angus, served as caitioner for him. The Earl of Angus was cautioner for him again in 1588, that he would appear before the Privy Council on £2000 penalty. In 1588/9 Alexander Horxburgh of that Ilk was surety for him that he and those he was responsible for would keep the peace, while he was surety for Hob Elliot, 'Vicar's Hob' (and someone else signed for him ' becaus I can not wryte'). Also in 1588/9 he served as cautioner for Wat Turnbull of Bewlie. In 1589 he and Walter of Bedrule were listed among leaders in Teviotdale who signed a bond for keeping peace with England. Also in 1589 he was on a list of Border Lairds who failed to appear before the Privy Council to give 'thair gude advise anent the gude reule and quietnes of the Bordouris' and were denounced as rebels. Additionally in 1589, he and Walter of Bedrule were cited by the Privy Council for not remaining in Edinburgh after instructed to do so because they were guilty of resetting a group of Turnbulls and Douglases who were involved in the murder of 6 Grahamslaws of Newton; James Gledstains of Cocklaw was his surety. He is also listed about 1590 among landed men of the Borders and in 1591 when he was among the Barons who pledged their support for the King against the Earl of Bothwell. Also in 1590 he acted as a 'surety in relief' for Walter of Bedrule and was mentioned in a case where the Earl of Angus was ordered to relieve the King of certain 'bills' of English complainant. In 1591 he subscribed to a bond of allegiance to the King against Bothwell, Home and others. In 1591/2 he acted as surety for Martin Elliot of Braidlie. In 1592 Alexander Horsburgh of that Ilk served as his cautioner in a bond of loyalty to the King. In 1595 he was recorded along with his sons Thomas and George, among Turnbulls and Davidsons, when John Ker of Barnhill complained they had harassed his tenants in Barnhill. He is also recorded in 1595 when he was one of the main signatories of a letter of assurance for the behaviour of the Turnbulls descended from the house of Minto; this included the Turnbulls of Hallrule, Barnhills, Gatehousecote and 'David Daviesoune of the Cambes'. In 1598, along with James in Hassendean, Walter Scott 'of Ordschaw' and James Langlands, were denounced for not paying Selkirkshire taxes to the Lord of Newbattle. In 1599 he served as cautioner for entering the Lorraines who were accused of the murder of David Turnbull, heir of Wauchope; there was also a bond subscribed at Barnhills in the same year, with a notary signing for him. His name is recorded in 1603 on a long list of local landowners whom the Baron of Hassendean (James Cunningham, Earl of Glancairn) was trying to remove. The name of his wife is not known. In 1603 his son Thomas was served heir to his lands in Minto (suggesting he was deceased by then). He had at least one other son, George. John (16th/17th C.) son of Sir Thomas. In 1592 he is recorded in a complaint to the Privy Council by James Stewart of Wells that he threatened his servant when he was ploughing the fields at Wells. He was assisted by his brother Robert, with the incitement of their brother Walter of Bedrule, and was denounced as a rebel for not apearing. John (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1599 as a servitor of the Laird of Bedrule (presumably Walter). He was a subscriber at Barnhills to a bond by John of Minto to enter the Lorraines of Harwood. He may be the same as one of the other Johns. John 'Jock' (16th/17th C.) nephew of George of Belses. In 1603 he was recorded as 'Jok Trumbill in Belsis' when his uncle George was convicted of 'the filthie cryme of Incest and Adulterie' with his wife Marion. John (16th/17th C.) from Braidhaugh. He is recorded in 1601 among a group of Turnbulls and Lorraines accused by Englishman Gray of Morpeth of stealing from him. William 'of Brodehaugh' is listed after him and so presumably his brother or son. John (16th/17th C.) tenant in Mackside. He is recorded in 1601 when he was accused by Mr. Gray of Morpeth of being part of a group of Scotsmen of stealing from him. The others were Lorraines of Appotside and Turnbulls of Braidhaugh. In 1603 he was 'of Maiksyde' when, along with Turnbulls from Nether Bonchester, Braidhaugh and 'Harkschaw', he was ordered to find caution of 300 merks to answer the accusation of stealing cattle from Hector Turnbull of Wauchope in the 1590s. He is also recorded as 'in Maksyd' in 1605 when he was pledged to appear at court in Edinburgh. John (16th/17th C.) described as 'in Tempilhall' in 1604 when he was 'Bailie in that part' for James Sandilands, Baron of Feu-Rule. In 1605 he was one of the people asked to remove themselves from the lands of Templehall and Brewlands. Another John, also tenant at Templehall or Brewlands, is also mentione in the same action. John of Barnhills (d.c.1628) eldest son of Hector of Barnhills. He had a marriage contract of 1597 with Isobel, daughter of George Turnbull of Hallrule. This was followed by a grant of the half lands of Hallrule in 1603, when he was still a minor. He had a charter for the lands of Barnhills in 1607, and a charter of confirmation in 1618. In 1609 he and his father Hector were part of an action brought by David, son of John Scott 'of the Tour in Hawick', for not paying what they had borrowed from him. In 1613 he sold '10 acres of Easter Barnhills' to Ragwell Bennet. In 1617 there was a 'renunciation' to him from James and George Scott (which branch of the Scotts is unclear). He had a 'wadset' with Gilbert Eliott (both elder and younger) of Stobs in 1617, and some kind of financial arrangement with Ragwell Bennet in 1618. His brother William in Langraw succeeded to the lands of Barnhills in 1628. John (16th/17th C.) one of the Turnbulls who were accused in 1606 of raiding and burning Appotside and Harwood in the period 1598–1605. He is recorded as 'Johnne Trumbill, sone to Hectour of Wauchope'. His brothers included George (also accused in this trial), Thomas (who succeeded to Wauchope) and probably David (who was originally the heir). He was acquitted, although his brother Thomas was found guilty.

John (16th/17th C.) son of Robert and grandson of Sir Thomas of Bedrule. He married Judith Forster, probably in the 1590s. John (17th C.) son of George in Philiphaugh. In 1601 he was served heir to his father's 5-merk land there, called 'Bairborisland'. He could be the same man as John of Philiphaugh, who was among the Border Lairds summoned to appear before the Privy Council in 1583/4. He was in turn succeeded by his son William in 1606. John of Howden (17th C.) member of the 'assyse' in Dumfries in 1622 and 1623. Also in 1623 he is recorded in a letter of inhibition in Selkirk, for non-payment to Sir John Stewart of Traquair. He could be the Turnbull of Howden who held half the lands of Philiphaugh in the early 1600s, succeeding his father George in the 5-merk land there, called 'Bairborisland'. He could be the same man as John of Philiphaugh, who was among the Border Lairds summoned to appear before the Privy Council in 1583/4. In 1627 he concedes some lands in Philiphaugh to William, portioner of Philiphaugh. In 1630 he was served heir to his father Mark of Howden in the lands of Philhope in the Barony of Hawick. He is surely related to the John who succeeded his father George of Howden in 1601 and the John of Howden recorded in 1576. John (16th/17th C.) half-brother of Walter Scott of Woll, described as 'apparent of Harden' in 1608 (even although there had not been any Turnbull Lairds of Harden for a century). Along with John Scott (brother of Walter of Woll) he attacked some of the citizens of Selkirk, and when apprehended by the Selkirk Bailies the pair were forcibly taken from imprisonment by a gang of Scotts and Turnbulls. They were then ordered to appear in Edinburgh or be declared rebels. It is possible he was a son of Isabel, who was described as 'gudwif of Woll' in 1579 (with her husband's name not recorded). John (16th/17th C.) part of a group of Scotts and their followers who forcibly released 2 of their kin from the Bailies of Selkirk in 1608. He is listed as 'apparent of Hundley' (presumably Huntly). His brothers Robert and Andrew were also involved. John (16th/17th C.) tenant in 'Elscheuch' recorded in 1612, this probably being Elfhaugh. Along with Andrew in Bonchester, and Andrew's sons Thomas and John, he complained to the Privy Council that John, Lord Ker of Jedburgh, had unfairly imprisoned them, and they were ordered to be released. John (16th/17th C.) tenant in Crosscleuch in Bedrule Parish in 1619 when he was denounced as a rebel for failing to appear in court along with several other Turnbulls. Their crime was taking wood from the Laird of Traquair's land at Huntliehill. William was also tenant there, and so presumably a relative. John (16th/17th C.) son of James 'called of Raperlaw'. In 1619 was listed among many Turnbulls and others, under Walter of Bedrule, who were accused of taking hay from Huntliehill and declared as rebels for not appearing to answer the charge. He was one of the few men who appeared personally and hence was not denounced as a rebel. John (16th/17th C.) described as 'in Newton' (possibly the one in Bedrule Parish) when he acted as caution (along Gilbert, son to Gavin Elliot of Brugh and 3 men from Headshaw) in 1623 for Mungo Scott from Castleside. Perhaps the same John was 'in Bedrule' in 1643 when his lands were valued at £34. John of Minto (d.1641) possibly son of Thomas. He signed the 'Confessions of Faith' in Hawick in 1638. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Gilbert Eliott of Stobs. His sons William and Robert became merchants' apprentices in Edinburgh in 1650 and 1651, respectively (and so must have been quite young when he died). His son John succeeded while still a minor. He died while on army service in Newcastle, this fact convincing his superior to allow his son to marry before he was of age. He is probably the John of Minto whose daughter Alison married William Douglas of Timpendean in 1655. John of Minto (b.1620s) son of John and Elizabeth Eliott. He was brother of William and Robert. He married Rachel Inglis in 1641, even although he was technically too young; this was because his father had died while in military service (and also through the help of his uncle William Turnbull, minister of Makerstown). In the 1643 Land Tax Rolls he was owner of the main part of Minto, along with 'Mr. William Turnbull' (his uncle) and Elizabeth Elliot (his mother), valued at £2006 13s 4d. He was also listed as holding the 'Minister of Makerston's Lands, being Hornshole', valued at £100. He is probably the John who was in 1655 served heir to his father John of Minto in ⅓ of the lands and Barony of Minto, including a half merk of land in Minto, with advowson of the church, '2 parts of the said landis undisponed'. At the same time he also inherited 1 merkland of Hornshole. It is unclear what his relationship was with John of Knowe, but it seems easy to mix them up; in 1655 he received from John of Knowe his third of the rent of Hyndlee and Rouchhope and in 1656 rented Minto Craig to him (definitively proving they were not one and the same man). In 1657 he was the heritable proprietor of the lands of Hornshole when he had a 'wadset' for them with John Scott of Brieryyards, with the consent of William Turnbull, minister of Makerstoun. He appears to have owned part of Standhill in 1660 and could be the John in Standhill recorded in the 1643, 1663 and 1678 Land Tax Rolls. Payments to Lord Lyon in 1662 suggest this is when the family matriculated their arms. He was renewed as a Roxburghshire J.P. in 1663. He was probably the Laird of Minto recorded in the Land Tax Rolls of about 1663 paying £2006 13s 4d. His wife may be the 'Lady Minto' who paid tax on £200 for lands in Southdean Parish in 1663. He had one child, also John, and father and son are also easy to confuse. It was probably his son John who sold off the Minto estate. John (17th C.) described as 'indweller in Machsyde' when he was witness to a sasine in Rulewater in 1653. John of Minto (d.bef. 1684) son of John. He was involved in a bond with John Turnbull of Knowe, partly paid off in 1668. He was probably the John, recorded along with William in James Wilson's list of local landowners of the mid-to-late 17th century. He was probably also the same John of Minto who was later married to Rachel, daughter of Cornelius Ingles of 'Eastbarnes' (she is recorded as his wife in 1681). In 1672 he had a charter of the Barony of Minto, which was ratified in 1681. In 1673 they were involved in a land deal with Walter Scott of Harwood, selling off the Minto estate, and ending its connection with his family, which had lasted many generations. He also sold about a third of the lands of Minto to Gilbert Eliott of Craigend (who was probably his maternal uncle, and not the same man as Sir Gilbert Elliot, who would unite them into the Barony of Minto in 1706). It seems likely that he was forced to sell off his lands to clear debts (but it may be that the arrangements in the 1670s were only wadsets, and he lost the lands for good in the 1690s). He is probably the John of Minto whose brother William is recorded in a deed in 1673. In 1674 he became a Burgess of Edinburgh in right of his wife Rachel Ingles (who was also a Burgess). His wife is recorded recovering the 'wadset' with the Earl of Tarras over lands in the Barony of Minto in the period 1682–94. This must be the same John of Minto descibed as deceased in 1684 when his son John was entered as a Burgess and Guild Brother of Edinburgh in his right. He had unnamed children buried in Greyfriars Cemetery in 1670 and 1674. John of Langshaw (17th C.) appointed one of the Commissioners for Roxburghshire (along with Harry McDougall of Makerstoun) in 1665. John of Knowe (d.1675/6) probably eldest son and successor as Laird to Thomas. In 1652 his brother William was appointed as tutor to the children of their relative Thomas in 'Chesterhouse' (probably Chesterhall near Ancrum). He appears to have rented Hyndlee and Rouchhope (along with other farmers) from John of Minto in 1655, and he rented Minto Craig from John of Minto in 1656. There is an account relating to him from 1664 among records in Selkirk. In 1655 he is recorded in a 'tack' with Thomas Turnbull, farmer at Hassendeanbank, and in 1657 in an 'inhibition' against Robert Turnbull, son of a Jedburgh merchant. In a discharge of 1658 he is listed along with other Turnbulls, suggesting that he was son of Thomas and brother of William. He is recorded in a bond with James Scott in 1658. He was fined £2,000 in 1662, after the Restoration. He was recorded on the Land Tax Rolls of 1663, paying £227. He was on a list of landowners of Hassendean Parish in 1666, and he complained against the planned division of that parish in the same year. He paid annual rent to the treasurer of Selkirk in 1667. In 1668 he is mentioned as cautioner for John of Minto (making it clear that they were not the same person, although their relationship is unclear). It was established in 1670 that he owned the burial place within the bellhouse of Hassendean Kirk. His wife Agnes Liddell died in 1648. He was probably succeeded by Thomas of Knowe, who was persecuted as a Covenanter. Another son was John, recorded as the son of John of Knowe who became an apprentice surgeon with Walter Turnbull in Edinburgh in 1675. His daughter Helen married Thomas Turnbull of Tofts in 1669. In 1678 Grizel (sister of Thomas of Knowe), who married Adam Scott of Burnhead, was probably his daughter. In the 1680s Thomas of Knowe was also recorded having a sister Marion, who was probably therefore another daughter. His children John, Alexander and Isobel are recorded in 1679 receiving money from his estate. Two wills (one dated 1661, while he was still alive, and another in 1676, possibly after he died) are among the papers of the Horsburgh family in the National Archives. His death is recorded on a table tomb in the old Minto graveyard, along with Thomas of Knowe (d.1646). John of Firth (17th C.) recorded receiving land from Walter Riddell in 1645. He paid tax on £200 according to the Land Tax Rolls of 1664. In 1675 he led a 'poinding' against Bessie Murray, widow of James 'Bucholme'. In 1678 he paid the land tax in Lilliesleaf Parish for his lands of

Firth. John (17th C.) recorded in 1676 among a number of local people fined for using weights that were lighter than the standards. Specifically his 'quarter wanted ane drop'. It is unclear if he was from Hawick or elsewhere, but he must have been a trader at the market in Hawick. He may be the merchant John recorded in 1673 on the list of men named in the trial for the so-called riot at St. Jude's Fair. John (17th C.) tenant in Cavers. He is recorded in 1684 when his former servant James Johnston was among those declared as fugitives for being a Covenanter. John (17th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He married Margaret Scott and their children included George (b.1680). John (17th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He married Helen Rutherford and their children included Agnes (b.1682). John (17th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He married Margaret Fowler and their children included William (b.1679), Margaret (b.1681) and John (b.1683). The witnesses in 1681 were James Todshaw and John Armstrong. John (17th C.) resident of Roberton Parish, when it contained Hassendean. He married Agnes Brown and their children included William (b.1683), Thomas (b.1685) and Isobel (b.1688). The witnesses in 1688 were Thomas Henderson and Andrew Rodger. John (17th C.) resident of Roberton Parish, when it contained Hassendean. He married Margaret Dodds and their children included Robert (b.1686) and Patrick (b.1688). The witnesses in 1686 were Patrick Dodds (who was surely related to his wife) and Thomas Robson and in 1688 were Patrick and John Dodds. He is probably the John who witnessed a baptism for Walter in 1687. John (17th C.) candlemaker in Hawick. His wife was Margaret Turnbull and their children included Agnes (b.1671). The baptism witnesses were John Scott and John Aitkin. In 1684 he was listed among many people declared fugitives for being a Covenanter, specifically for resetting other fugitives. John (17th C.) resident of Bedrule. In 1684 he was tried in Jedburgh for being a Covenanter. John (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Marion Aitken and their children included John (b.1689). The witnesses in 1689 were George Johnstone and Andrew Fletcher. John (17th C.) candlemaker in Hawick. He was fined in 1689 for his 'exhorbitant' marriage with Christian Scott. He may be the same man as the John declared a fugitive in 1684. In 1690 several people swore that he had said that Thomas Beattie 'should be hanged above all kneffs for going through the toune'; he was 'onlawed in ane provocation' and also for contempt of the Bailies, being fined £22 10s Scots. He was 'John Trumble, candlemaker' on the list of subscribers for the Kirk bell drawn up in 1693. He was listed as a candlemaker on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick 'eist the water' in 1694, when he paid tax on 2 hearths. Also in 1694 he gave evidence of theft against his employee Walter Scott, 'the Butterman'. John (17th C.) servitor of Gilbert Eliott of Stanedge who is recorded as witness to a bond of 1691 and again in 1693. Possibly the same John is described in 1694 as servitor of 'Mr Harie Mauld of Kellie' in another document relating to a bond of 1691 with Gilbert Eliott of Stanedge and Gavin Eliott, his uncle. John (17th C.) resident of Minto Parish who appears in the Hearth Tax records of 1694. He could be the John in Minto who in 1680 was called as a witness in the trial of local Covenanters, but did not appear. John (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. He probably farmed near Newton, and 'The malt kilne' is listed after him, suggesting he may have been maltman at Newton. John (17th C.) resident of Cavers who was listed in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. John (17th C.) carrier at Tofts according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. John (17th C.) tenant in West Middle on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He is probably related to the later John in West Middle. John (17th C.) tenant in Fodderlee according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. John (17th C.) tenant in Mackside in Abbotrule Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. John (17th C.) resident at Easter Highchesters according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. John (17th C.) resident of Raperlaw according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. He is listed among the 'deficients' of the Parish. John (17th C.) resident at Appletreehall according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. John (17th C.) shepherd at Clarilaw according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. John (17th C.) resident at Horsleyhill on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. John (17th C.) listed 'in Hawick' when his wife's will was recorded in 1690. He may be the same as one of the other Johns. He may be the weaver who witnessed a baptism in Hawick for James Miller in 1689. John of Knowe (17th/18th C.) probably son of John and brother of Thomas of Knowe. He may have been the John who became a surgeon's apprentice in Edinburgh in 1675. He is recorded in 1689 bringing an action against Rev. Francis Scott, after he had been removed by the Privy Council. John of Minto (17th/18th C.) son of John and Elisabeth Eliott of Stobs. He sold the

Minto estate in 1703 to his cousin, Sir Gilbert Elliot of Headshaw, ancestor of the Earls of Minto; it is also stated that he sold it to Walter Scott of Harwood in 1673, but perhaps this was a wadset only. His connection with the other Turnbulls (of Minto and/or Knowe) seems unclear, but he was probably the John (described as a merchant) who became a Burgess and Guild brother of Edinburgh in right of his father in 1684. It may have been his son Patrick who became a Burgess and Guild brother of Edinburgh in 1704, in right of his deceased father (in which case he died about 1703). John (17th/18th C.) cooper of Hawick, brother of Michael and Robert, who were also coopers. All 3 brothers were involved in a case before the Bailies in 1678. In 1689 he witnessed a baptism for weaver Andrew Dodds. He was listed among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He was also listed as cooper on the westside of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. In 1700 he was a witness for a baptism for flesher Robert Renwick. He was a cooper in 1709 when one of his children was baptised and when he witnessed a baptism for carrier Henry Paterson. He was an elder of the Kirk, and in 1717 charged with collecting money 'from ye foot of ye play la to the west end of ye toun', suggesting he lived in this area perhaps. He was still an Elder in 1718. In 1719 he was 'cuper elder' when he witnessed a baptism for weaver Robert Riddell. He was recorded as a cooper in 1699 when his son Andrew was baptised, with witnesses shoemakers Robert and George Oliver. It seems likely he was father of the cooper John who was on the shortlist for Cornet in 1710; if so his wife may have been Agnes Moffat and other children were James (b.1684) and Elspeth (b.1688). He married Helen 'Junk' in 1706 and had children including: James (b.1707); Michael (b.1709); Isobel (b.1712); Helen (b.1714); Mary (b.1716); and John (b.1719). The witnesses in 1709 and 1712 were cooper Michael and weaver Robert (his brothers), in 1714 were Bailies George Martin and Walter Elliot and in 1716 were 'Mr' Thomas Douglas (brother to the Laird of Cavers) and mason John Napier. John (17th C.) carter in Hawick, on the 1693/4 subscribers' list for the new Kirk bell. He was separate from the contemporary cooper of the same name. John (17th/18th C.) listed as 'oye to Mr James Ker Sometimes Minister att Abbotroule' in 1704 and 1707. His wife was Janet Turnbull and their children, baptised in Hawick, included Thomas (b.1704) and Mary (b.1707). The witnesses in 1704 were Bailie George Martin and Patrick McLellan and in 1707 were William Cunningham and apothecary Walter Scott. He was presumably either nephew or grandson of James Ker, but the precise relationship is unclear. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. His son Walter was baptised in Cavers in 1696. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He was shepherd in Whitchesters in 1710. He married Janet Elliot and their children included: Malie (b.1710); and Agnes (b.1712). The witnesses in 1710 were Walter Nixon and Henry Orrock. John (17th/18th C.) shepherd in Boonraw in 1708 and 1711 when his sons William and Archibald were baptised in Wilton Parish. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was at Wester Groundistone in 1721 and 1725. His wife was Janet Colvin and their children included: Janet (b.1717); John (b.1718); Marion (b.1721); Andrew (b.1723); and Agnes (b.1725). The witnesses in 1721 were George and Richard Scott and in 1725 were John and Walter Scott. John (17th/18th C.) mason of Hawick. He is probably the mason who witnessed baptisms in 1706 (along with mason John Napier) for mason Peter Mitchell, in 1711 (along with mason Nichol Turnbull) for mason Peter Mitchell, and in 1712 for mason John Napier. He may also be the John who witnessed a baptism for tailor Robert Chisholme in 1717. In 1717, along with John the cooper, he was ordered to collect monies from the west end of the Town, suggesting he may have lived there. It is possible he was related to the other John. In 1720 he (and mason Andrew) witnessed baptisms for Andrew Colwart and mason John Napier. He was still an elder in 1722. In 1723 he witnessed baptisms for James Beattie, innkeeper in the Sandbed and for weaver Walter White. In 1725, along with Andrew (also a mason), he witnessed a baptism for smith William Young. Along with Dand Gray in Weensland he witnessed a baptism in 1725 for tenant Robert Scott. He witnessed another baptism in 1726 for flesher Robert Hardie. Probably the same mason John had a child called Nichol in Hawick in 1709, the mother being Jean Dunlap (labelled 'fornicat.'). In 1721 he was recorded as a mason when he witnessed a baptism (along with Andrew) for shoemaker Andrew Scott and Janet Turnbull (who may have been related); the same 2 men were also witnesses in 1726 and 1728. He and wright Walter Scott built the 'Schooll and House to the Schoollmaster of Hawick' in 1728, with payments received in 1732–35. Probably the same mason in Hawick married Helen Lands and their children included: Margaret (b.1710); Andrew (b.1713); Andrew (again, b.1715); James (b.1717); Helen Margaret (b.1720); and John (b.1724). The witnesses in 1715 were baxter John Whillans and mason Andrew Turnbull, younger. John (17th/18th C.) cooper in Hawick. In 1710 he was on the short-list of candidates for Cornet. He was probably son of an earlier cooper of the same family; he may be the John born to John and Agnes Moffat in Hawick in 1686. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Mossbrae in 1718 when his daughter Isobel was baptised. Other children, baptised in Roberton Parish, who may be his (although some are probably children of John at Roberton) include: Michael (b.1703); Margaret (b.1707); Isobel (b.1709); Mary (b.1709); William (b.1712); Janet (b.1713); Margaret (b.1715); and James (b.1715). John (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Roberton itself in 1718, and was distinct from the John who was at Mossbrae. His children included Janet (b.1718). He may be the John who married Janet Little in 1705. John (17th/18th C.) described as 'servitor to Walter Elliott, bailie-deput of the regaility of Hawick' in 1718 when he was rebuked for having a horse race with Thomas Porteous on the Common Haugh on a Sunday. John (17th/18th C.) mason in Whitriggs in Kirkton Parish. His son James was baptised in 1721. James (b.1724), Margaret (b.1728) and Anne (b.1732), also baptised in Kirkton, may also have been his children. John (17th/18th C.) Hawick man who was paid in 1721 for gilding the hands of the Kirk clock. He may thus have been a clockmaker or other tradesman. John (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living at West Middle in 1723 when his son John was baptised. He is probably related to the earlier John in West Middle. John (18th C.) Schoolmaster in Abbotrule Parish. He was dismissed in 1740 and nothing else is known about him. It is possible that the same John was recorded spending a year at Jedburgh English School in 1739. John (1712/3–87) tenant in Mackside. His family were recorded on an old tombstone in Abbotrule Kirkyard (although he appears to also be referred to there as Thomas). His wife Isabel died in 1756, aged 41. Their children included Betty, James and Thomas (who probably carried on as tenant of Mackside), as well as William, Mary, Elspeth and Margaret, who died in infancy. John (18th C.) resident of Parkhill recorded in 1725, 1728, 1733 and 1743 when children of his were baptised. He may have been brother of Walter who also had children baptised at Parkhill around the same time. They could both be descended from James who was at Parkhill a couplf decades earlier. His children included: Robert (b.1725); Margaret (b.1728); Janet (b.1733); and Robert (again, b.1743). Several other children baptised in Roberton could also be his. John (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at 'Brirrieholl' (i.e. Brierhill) in 1741, what appears to be 'Timer miln' in 1743 and Timbersidemill in 1747. He is probably the John who witnessed a baptism for John Hood in Hornshole in 1742. He married Margaret Easton in Wilton in 1737 and their children included: Mary (b.1738); James (b.1741); William (b.1743); Thomas (b.1747); John (b.1749); Helen (b.1752); and Robert (b.1755). The witnesses in 1741 were John and Walter Scott, in 1743 were Walter and Robert Scott and in 1747 were James Dryden and Walter Scott. John (18th C.) married Margaret Kersel in Minto in 1746. John (18th C.) tanner in Hawick. He paid the tax for 15 windows in Hawick in 1748. It is unclear how he was related to other Turnbulls. John (18th C.) tailor in Hawick. In 1757 he witnessed a baptism for weaver George, who was probably related to him. John (1723–81) son of William, he was born at Whitriggs in Kirkton Parish. He was schoolmaster at Kirkton in at least the period 1743–46, also serving as Session Clerk for the Parish. In 1745 he was given 3 years' arrears of salary for being Session Clerk. In By 1750 he was Schoolmaster at Ewes, where he was also Session Clerk. In 1744 he married Isabel Scott in Wilton. He secondly married Bridget 'Monel' in 1759, the marriage recorded in both Hawick and Middlebie; she may have been related to Robert 'Mannell', who was an earlier schoolmaster of Kirkton. His children (with his 1st wife) were: William (b.1745) and Betty (b.1746), baptised in Kirkton; and John (b.1751) and Janet (b.1758), baptised in Ewes. He died in Hawick. John (18th C.) married Jane (or 'Jean') Lamb in 1770. The marriage was recorded in both Hawick and Wilton Parishes. John of Wester Swanshiel (b.1729–1820/1) son of Walter, whom he succeeded in 1750 (note there is some confusion here, since Walter Deans says he was son of James). In 1778 he sold Wester Swanshiel to Cornelius Elliot of Woollee, in order to lease a bigger farm (although he is recorded as still being the owner in 1788, so perhaps the sale had not gone through yet). This ended an association of those lands with his family for perhaps 300 years. In 1780 he occupied the farm of Berryfell and also rented Howashiel. He was a major heritor of Hobkirk Parish along with Henry Elliot of Harwood and Thomas Scott of Stonedge. He is recorded as farmer at Berryfell on the 1787–97 Horse Tax Rolls and on the 1797 Dog Tax Rolls. He later farmed at Whitehill Brae, where he died. He married Esther Douglas, a relative of Douglas of Trows. Their children were: Janet; Walter, who used to write songs and sonnets, entered the army, moved to England and had a single daughter; Esther; John, who was tenant at Brieryhill and later Minto Kames; Robert, who purchased Galalaw; Betty; and James, tenant farmer at Galalaw. James is recorded as his son on the ballot for the Militia in 1799. The combined age of he and his wife on their Hobkirk tombstone is 184 (he being 91 and his wife 93). His descendants included Mr. Turnbull of 2 Tower Knowe in the early 1900s. John (d.1772) mason in Minto. He is buried in Bedrule kirkyard. It is possible he is the same man as the mason in Denholm. John (18th C.) mason in Denholm. He married Marion Smith, had an unnamed child baptised in Cavers Parish in 1748 and a son John baptised in 1753. He may be the wright in Denholm who was fined in 1767 for lathing and plastering a room belonging to merchant William Irvine in Hawick, even although he was not a Burgess. After continuing to perform the work, the Hammermen petitioned the Magistrates to have him imprisoned in the Tolbooth, although the next day an agreement was reached to avoid imprisoning him. John (18th C.) cooper in Hawick, probably related to the earlier cooper of the same name. He married Christian Veitch and their children included Agnes (b.1756) and Elizabeth (b.1760). John 'Garleek Jock' (18th C.) gardener in Hawick. He was Cornet in 1762. Later that year he married Margaret Storie (who died in 1806), the couple being rebuked for their 'irregular marriage'. Their children included: William (b.1763); Robert (b.1763); Elizabeth (b.1766); and Margaret (1770–1808), who died in Hawick. The 1766 witnesses were Robert Turnbull and Thomas Pringle. He is recorded as 'garlic jock' when his wife died. John (18th C.) son of Thomas, tenant at Wolfehopelee. He was appointed schoolmaster in Southdean Parish in 1772. The heritors and minister were 'satisfyed with the abilitys and qualifications of John Turnbull, son of Thomas Turnbull tenant in Woolfhoplie, and unanimously chuse him to the office of schoolmaster and presenter and the session chuse him for their clerk'. He appears to have been appointed temporarily, until approved by the Presbytery, which happened 2 years later. He remained schoolmaster until 1797, when replaced by John Irvine. John (18th C.) listed as owner of a 'House and Yard' in Minto Parish in 1779, valued at £1 16s 7d. It was owned by Lord Minto in 1811. He could be the same as one of the other Johns. John (d.bef. 1799) resident of Hawick Parish. The death of his wife Elizabeth Scott is recorded in 1799. John (1743/4–1816) probably son of Thomas. He was tenant farmer at Mackside. He is recorded there on the 1794 and 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when he owned 5 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. He also paid the dog tax at Mackside in the same year. He married Ann Common, and she died in 1803, aged 41. They had a daughter who died in infancy. The family are recorded on an old tombstone in Abbotrule Kirkyard (although some of the names and generations may be confused). John (b.c.1745) farm worker at Stonedge. By his first wife he had sons William (a forester in Jedforest) and James (farm worker at Unthank, who died at Midburn). He secondly married Christian Grieve, and their children were: Robert, shepherd at Philiphaugh and elsewhere; Kate, who married and moved to London; Margaret, who married George Henderson, weaver at Kilnowe and was great-grandmother of Euphemia Henderson who lived at Weens Lodge; Mary, second wife of Adam Turnbull, farmer at Midburn; and Jane, who married Andrew Turnbull, gardener at Weens. John (d.bef. 1815) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen (or 'Nelly') Dryden, who died in 1815. Their children included Betty (b.1775), Jane (b.1776), William (b.1787) and John (b.1788). John 'Meldrum' (18th C.) recorded in 1787 when his daughter Lizzy died in Hawick. He is surely related to James, 'Auld Meldrum', who died in 1781. John (18th C.) baker in Hawick. He married Helen (or Agnes) Scott and their children included: John (b.1784); and Elionora (b.1789). The witnesses in 1784 were merchant George (surely a relative) and James Scott (probably related to his wife). John (18th C.) groom at Branxholme in 1785–88, when he was working for Adam Ogilvie, Chamberlain to the Duke of Buccleuch. He was listed as house servant at Branxholme in 1791. In 1794 possibly the same John was gamekeeper at Stobs for Sir William Eliott. However, in 1797 he was a house servant at Branxholme again. John (1762/3–1841) weaver in Hawick. In 1841 he was living on the Howegate with his brother James, who was also a weaver. He is buried in St.

Mary's along with his siblings Robert, James and Janet. John (b.bef. 1770) served as an officer in Stuart's Regiment of the Scots Brigade in Holland before turning to medicine. He was apprenticed to Benjamin Bell in Edinburgh and studied at Edinburgh University, receiving the Diploma of the Royal College of Surgeons of Edinburgh in 1793. He practised at Belford, Northumberland and then in Hawick. He received his M.A. and M.D. from St. Andrews University in 1796. John (18th C.) recorded at 'Cleughhead' in 1784 and 1787. His children Mary (b.1784) and Helen (b.1787) were baptised in Cavers Parish. It is unclear which Cleuchhead this may have been. Perhaps the same John had other children baptised in Cavers Parish, including John (b.1786). John (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was herd in Southdeanrig in 1785–97 when his children were baptised: John (b.1785); James (b.1791); Francis (b.1793); and Elspeth (b.1797). John (d.bef. 1816) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Mary Scott in 1773 and she died in Hawick in 1816. Their children included: John (b.1774); Margaret (b.1776); Christy (b.1778); Christian (b.1782); William (b.1785); Margaret (again, b.1787); and Robert (b.1788). The first child was baptised in Hawick and the rest in Wilton. He may be the John who witnessed a baptism for Walter Scott and Catherine Turnbull in Wilton in 1770. John (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. He married Euphemia Turnbull and their children included: Agnes (b.1780); Isabel (b.1781); Margaret (b.1783); and James (b.1784). John (18th C.) wright in Lilliesleaf Parish. His son William was baptised in 1790. Betty (b.1787) may also have been his child. John (18th C.) listed as servant at Cavers in 1793 and 1794, when he was working for George Douglas. It may just be a coincidence that there was a servant with the same name earlier at Branxholme and at the same time at Stobs. John (18th/19th C.) married Hannah Sinton in 1795, the marriage recorded in both Hawick and Wilton Parishes. John (18th/19th C.) mason in Roberton and Wilton Parishes. He was living at Harden in 1787, 1789 and 1794 and at Langlands Dean in 1797. He married Isobel Gray in 1786 and their children included: John (b.1787); Thomas (b.1789); Isobel (b.1792); Walter (b.1794); William (b.1797); and William (again, b.1800). John (18th/19th C.) son of Robert, tenant in Bewlie Hill. He is listed in the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. John (b.c.1770s) mason at Gillbraehead according to the ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1799. Perhaps the same mason was at Riccarton Toll at the time of the 1801 Militia ballot. John (b.c.1770s) servant at Courthill according to the ballots for the Militia in Wilton Parish in 1799 and 1801. John 'Jock' (b.c.1780) son of Robert, who was farmer at Hallrule Mill. He is so recorded on the 1801 Militia ballot, along with his brother Robert. A story is recounted by Walter Deans in 1887, who said that he was 'imbued with the ancient spirit and daring of the Turnbulls', and that he would regularly settle disputes with his enemies by picking fights at local fairs; on one occasion after he had dispatched a large group of enemies at Jedburgh, his mother, Tibbie Donaldson, said 'ma heart was wae to see them a' gushin' an' bluidin', and oor Jock knockin' them doon'. John (18th/19th C.) resident at Hudshouse. He subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. John (1770s–1827) Hawick clockmaker. He was listed on the ballot for the Militia in 1799 and still listed in 1801. His property immediately to the east of the old Town House was bought by the Council in 1827 and later used to build part of the new Town Hall; it was reported that in 1827 the Burgh borrowed £200 from cooper Walter Lamb, 'in order to pay the price of the subjects purchased from the heirs of John Turnbull'. His niece, Anna Maria Brown, wife of C. Brown, traveller of London, was served as his heir in 1827. He may have been related to the John who was paid for gilding the hands of the Kirk clock in 1721. John (1761/2–1803) probably son of Thomas, he was tenant in Mackside, like at least 3 generations before him. The family are recorded on an old tombstone in Abbotrule Kirkyard. John (18th/19th C.) son of George of the Cross Keys. He was recorded as son of George 'Senior' on the 1794 short-list for Cornet. He was elected Cornet in 1796, when he was stated to be of the Cross Keys. He was also recorded at the Cross Keys in 1808 when his son Walter died. This is probably the Cross Keys on the High Street (rather than the Sandbed), although this is unclear. He could be the John, son to George 'Senior Mercht' recorded in 1797 among Hawick men balloted to serve in the Militia; his name appeared again in 1798 and in early 1799 he paid £10 to avoid serving. In 1799 he was listed among men balloted in 1797 who had paid the penalty for not serving. John (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Colterscleuch, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He was additionally taxed for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797. John (18th/19th C.) recorded at Denholm on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. No information such as occupation is given about him. John (18th/19th C.) wright in Denholm, recorded in 1795 and 1797. He is listed as a wright on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, separate from the other John in Denholm who is also listed there. His children included: Thomas (b.1795); and twins Andrew and Joshua (b.1797). John (18th/19th C.) recorded at Grange in Castleton Parish on the 1797 Dog Tax Rolls. John (1762–c.1850) 2nd son of John, who was the last Turnbull Laird of Wester Swanshiel. His brother Walter moved to England, and so he became the local representative of the Turnbulls of Hartshaugh and Swanshiel. He was tenant at Brieryhill and later at Minto Kames. He is probably the John who was listed as owner of Wester Swanshiel in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls. He married and his children included John, Thomas, Walter and Margaret. He lived to an old age, being still at Minto Kames at the 1841 census, along with Thomas and Walter (perhaps his sons) and the family of Walter. He could be father of Gavin, who was minister at Teviothead. John (18th/19th C.) in charge of wood management at Branxholme in at least the years 1814/5, when he is recorded supervising and paying labourers for 'upholding the plantation dikes'. He is probably the John recorded at 'Branscholm' involved with the tenants of Scott of Buccleuch in Teviothead, according to a letter of 1819. He may be the same John recorded conveying a letter for Adam Ogilvie at Branxholme in 1790 and may be the same man as the groom working at Branxholme in the 1780s. He may also be the John who was a farm worker, about 75 years old, at Branxholme in 1841. John (b.c.1765) merchant on the south side of Main Street in Lilliesleaf in 1841. He is probably the draper or grocer recorded in Pigot's 1837 directory. John (b.1770s) resident of Nether Tofts in Kirkton Parish. He is recorded in 1797 on the list of men on the ballot to serve in the Militia and in 1799 was recorded among those whose names had not been drawn, but his named was labelled 'dead' and the entry crossed out. John (18th/19th C.) weaver at Hassendean in Minto Parish according to the Militia ballots in 1799 and 1801. John (b.c.1770s) wright in Hawick, recorded in the ballot list for the Militia in 1799. John (b.c.1780) mason in Lilliesleaf, as recorded in Pigot's 1825/6 and 1837 directories. He probably lived on Main Street in 1841. His wife's name was Elizabeth. John (b.c.1780) mason in Hawick according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia. He may be the same as one of the other Johns. John (b.c.1780) merchant in Hawick according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia. It is unclear if he was related to other merchants of the same name. John (b.c.1780) wright at 'Poperburn' in Castleton Parish according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia. Labourer Andrew was also listed there and probably his brother. They likely lived on the Piper Burn. John (b.c.1780) slater at Boosmill in Lilliesleaf Parish according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia. John (18th/19th C.) tailor in Lilliesleaf, listed in Pigot's 1825/6 and 1837 directories. He is probably the John junior, recorded as a tailor in Lilliesleaf in the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. John (b.c.1780) joiner on the High Street, recorded in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. In the 1836 electoral roll he was listed as joint proprietor with John junior. He is probably the 'John & Son' listed as joiner on the Round Close in 1837. His wife was Margaret. He is probably the John recorded along with his wife Margaret as a joiner on the 1841 census, around 10 High Street. John (b.c.1780) resident of Falnash according to the ballot for the Militia in Hawick Parish in 1801. John (b.c.1780) son of William, tenant in Acreknowe. He was recorded on the ballot for the Militia in Kirkton Parish in 1801, along with his brother James. John (b.c.1780) carter in Lilliesleaf according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia. John (b.1780/1) born in Wilton Parish, he was a servant at Stirches. He was listed as servant at Stirches among heads of households in Wilton Parish 1835–41. He was footman at Stirches House on the 1851 census. His wife was Isabella and they had a daughter, Ann. John (b.1780/1) stocking-maker in Wilton Parish. He was listed as stocking-maker at Crawhill Park among heads of households in Wilton Parish 1835–41. He was also an elder in Wilton Kirk. His wife was Janet and their children included Isabella and George. In 1851 the family were living on Wilton Place. John (18th/19th C.) married Isabella Wilson. Their son Walter was baptised in Hawick Parish in 1809. The witnesses were Walter Wilson and William [perhaps Walthie?]. John (b.c.1784/5) agricultural labourer, botn in Southdean Parish. He was living at Todshawhaugh Cottages in 1841 and 1851. His wife was Beatrix and their children included Robert, Janet and John. John (b.c.1780s) ploughman at Mabonlaw, according to the 1812 ballot for the Militia in Roberton Parish. John (b.1786/7) shepherd at Burngrove in Wilton Parish. He is recorded there in 1841 and 1851. His wife was Mary and they had a daughter Isabella. He is probably the John who married Mary Knox in Wilton in 1810. John (1787–1857) 2nd son of James, who farmed at Ruecastle. In 1811 he became tenant farmer at Spittal-on-Rule. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 1825 'History of Hawick'. He was recorded at Spittal in 1841 and 1851. He is probably the 'Mr. Turnbull in Spittal-on-Rule' who was said to take a keen interest in the Sclenty Schuil. In 1827 in Wilton Parish he married Isabella Lockie. Their children included: Janet (b.1820); Helen Rutherford (b.1822); James (b.1823), who took over the tenancy of Spittal; Mary (b.1825) and Isabella A.G. (b.1830). He secondly married Ann Euphemia Burnett (from Edinburgh) and further children included: John Rutherford (b.1838); Margaret Catherine (b.1840); Elizabeth Rutherford (b.1842); William George (b.1844); Alexander Jamieson (b.1846); Agnes R. (b.1847); Walter Douglas (b.1849); Anne Euphemia (b.1851); and Jessie Catherine (b.1856). Ann is recorded as 'Late Farmer's Widow' in the 1861 census. John (b.c.1787/8) eldest son of John, farmer at Brieryhill and Minto Kames. He carried on the tenancy of Minto Kames when his father retired. He married Esther Turnbull. His children included John, Isabel, Thomas, James, Agnes, Robert (who became a solicitor) and Walter (a stone mason). In 1851 he is listed as retired and living at Newton in Wilton Parish with his wife Esther and children Margaret, Robert, Walter, Esther and Mary, plus his brother Thomas. In 1861 he was at Wilton Dean. He retired from farming and lived to the age of 88. John (1788–1849) son of Thomas ('Bailie Tammy') and Margaret Darling. He may also have been a Bailie. He was a dyer on the Crescent, carrying on some of his father's business and founding the company John Turnbull & Son, Slitrig Dyeworks in 1819. He is recorded as dyer in Pigot's 1825/6 directory and as a dyer and carpet manufacturer in the 1837 directory. He maintained the Baptists within Hawick after the death of their local leader William Thorburn; he helped the congregation acquire a room for worship on the ground floor of 8 Allars Crescent. He married Isabella Rutherford in Jedburgh in 1831. His children were: Thomas (b.1833); Alexander (b.1835); John D. (b.1838); Catherine (b.1840); and Margaret Darling (b.1842/3), who married Thomas Bell, and whose daughter Isabella R. was the first person baptised in the new Baptist Kirk on Bourtree Place. In 1841 he was living on the Crescent with his wife Isabell and 4 children, but by 1851 his wife was a widow there. He is probably the John, dyer on the Crescent listed in Slater's 1852 directory, even although he was deceased by then (since the firm continued). A portrait of him exists. John (b.1796) born in Minto Parish, son of George. He was a seedsman and spirit dealer on Allars Bank. In 1851 he was living at Allars Bank and listed as a farmer of 130 acres (employing 5 labourers) and a nursery and seedsman (employing 42 people). In 1861 he was at the corner of Bourtree Place and North Bridge Street and listed as 'Nursery & Seedsman'. His wife was Violet H. Thorburn (from Ashkirk Parish), and their children included: George (b.1820); Euphemia (b.1822); Jessie (b.1824); William (b.1826); John (b.1828); Isabella (b.1830); and James Alexander (b.1837), who worked in the nursery business. In 1851 he was listed as a farmer. By 1861 he had moved to the east side of Bridge Street. John (18th/19th C.) married Helen Goodfellow in Lilliesleaf in 1825. Their children included Robert (b.1826) and George (b.1830). John (1796–1875) youngest son of William of Burnfoot and Eleanor Stephenson. He succeeded his father as farmer at Burnfoot and West Buccleuch. He also carried on his father's reputation as a breeder of shorthorn cattle at Burnfoot. In his younger days he was a keen follower of the Buccleuch Hunt. He was probably the John listed at Burnfoot among the subscribers to Robert Wilson's 1825 'History of Hawick'. He is listed as farmer at Burnfoot in 1835–41, among heads of households in Wilton Parish. He is recorded in 1851 and 1861 as farmer of 200 acres, employing 9 labourers and was still farmer at Burnfoot in 1868. He married Mary Kilner Anderson, who was from Huddersfield. Their children included: William (b.1833); Betsy Anderson (b.1836); Eleanor Stephenson (b.1833); Thomas Anderson (b.1839); and Mary (b.1841). His last 20 years were spent in failing health, and he was seldom seen in public. He died at Burnfoot. John (b.1796/7) stockingmaker in Hawick, probably born in Wilton Parish. In 1841 he was living on the High Street, in 1851 at 4 Melgund Place and in 1861 at 5 Melgund Place. He was Curator of the Archæological Society's Museum around the time of the robbery in 1865. In 1866 he donated the skeleton of a frog found at Hilliesland Moss. He married Helen Blaikie and their children included: John; George; Robert; James; and Hannah. John (19th C.) married Beatrix (or 'Beaty') Scoon in 1826, the marriage recorded in Roberton and Hobkirk Parish. John (19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. He married Helen Goodfellow and their children included Robert (b.1826) and George (b.1830). John (b.1803) youngest of 7 sons of James and Betty Adamson, he was born at Hobkirk Kirkstile. He had brothers who were schoolmasters of Wilton and Hobkirk. He became a grocer in Newcastleton. He was listed as a grocer and spirit dealer in Newcastleton, listed in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. He may be the carter in Newcastleton listed as male head of his family in 1835. In 1824 he married Wilhelmina (or 'Mina'), daughter of George Scott, shepherd at Lodgegill. They had a family of 10: James (1825–78), grocer in Hawick; George (1826–86), who died in Edinburgh and had a daughter Elizabeth Lawrie who was also a teacher; Elizabeth (b.1828), who married Jedburgh baker W. Hollands; Thomas (1830–60), who died at Morebattle, and had a son Dr. Adam Robert, who was medical superintendent at the Fife and Kinross Lunatic Asylum; Robert (1832–64), who died unmarried at Saratoga Springs, U.S.A.; William (b.1834), who died in infancy; William again, who also died (d.1836); William Elliot (1838–68), clerk at Register House; Walter Hall (b.1841) provision merchant in Edinburgh; and Margaret (b.1842), married Linlithgow paper merchant John Lovell. He is buried with his wife at Rosebank cemetery in Edinburgh. John (1807–c.49) son of John and Margaret Murray, he was born in Hawick Parish. In 1833 he married Helen (1808–98), daughter of William Laidlaw and Helen Douglas. In 1841 he was a joiner living on the Round Close, but emigrated soon afterwards, settling in Galt, Ontario. His children (the first 3 born in Hawick) were: John (b.1835); William (b.1836); Helen (b.1841); and Thomas (b.1850). John Robson (1807–66) youngest son of Adam, farmer at Hassendeanbank, and Betty Scott, from Skelfhill. He attended Minto School and Edinburgh University and became an architect. He was Master of Works at Windsor Castle in the period 1845–66. He married Ann Oliver from Middlesex and they had 5 children. He is buried at Windsor Castle. John (b.1808) son of Alexander and Jean Scott. He was a joiner and innkeeper in Denholm. He is probably the joiner recorded in Pigot's 1837 directory. He was proprietor of the Cross Keys on Main Street. In 1851 he was living with his mother Jane, who was postmistress, his sister Jane and his nephew John (who became a gardener and botanist). In 1861 he was living with his sister Jean and 'cousin' Agnes Scott, serving as his assistant; she was probably his niece, daughter of Robert Scott and Helen Turnbull and sister of botanist John Scott. John (19th C.) educated in Selkirk, he became schoolmaster at Millburn (otherwise known as Hermitage) in Castleton Parish in 1838. It seems unlikely that he was there for long. John (b.c.1810) joiner in Hawick, listed at the Round Close in 1841. He is probably son of John, who was also a joiner, and was part of the 'John & Son' listed as joiners on the Round Close in Pigot's 1837 directory. His wife was Helen, and their children included John, William and Helen. John (19th C.) skinner in Hawick. He was the 16th listed member of the Archæological Society in 1856. John (19th C.) farmer at East Middle, probably son of Thomas. He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1863. John (19th C.) son of Robert. He was a grocer to trade, with his shop at Bonchester Bridgend. In 1835 he became the first postmaster of the Rule valley, however he died not long afterwards and was succeeded by his sister Betty. John (19th C.) resident of Appletreehall. In 1863 he donated part of a Roman bronze fibula to the Museum. It is possible this was the 'fibula, made apparently either of jet or cannel coal and bearing a fine polish' found on the borders of Hawick Parish and described in 1839. John (b.1803/4) shepherd and agricultural labourer in Florida in Liddesdale. He was listed there among heads of households in Castleton in 1836–41. The 80 year-old James who lived with him in 1841 was probably his father. By 1851 and 1861 he was a shepherd and he is recorded as farmer at Florida in 1868. His wife was Jane, and their children included James, Janet, Walter, Elizabeth, John, William and Andrew. John (c.1818–c.1905) 2nd son of Adam and great-grandson of Adam of Denesyde, he was born at Old Fodderlee. He married Jane, daughter of William Nichol, farmer at Newlands, Minto, and she died in 1896. He later lived in the Back Row, Selkirk. He had 2 sons and 3 daughters. John (b.1822/3) frameworker in Hawick. He was living at 4 Melgund Place in 1861. He married Margaret Grieve and their children included John and Margaret. In 1861 he presented a Garibaldi Medal to the Museum. Probably the same John was recorded at O'Connell Street in 1861 when he donated Dr. Young's 'Essay on Government' and another book to the Museum; and he was on Melgund Place in 1865 when he donated American Confederate banknotes and a collection of 8 coins before that. Probably the same John donated a coin and an Irish bank token to the Museum in 1871.

He may be the John who became Museum Curator in 1865. John (19th C.) coachman at Weens estate. He married Helen, daughter of Walter Amos. Their son Walter Amos was carpenter at Bonchester Bridge and married his cousin Janet Kerr Amos in 1881. John (1825/6–75) eldest son of Alexander, who was forester at Cavers. He married Helen, daughter of James Stoddart, shepherd at Falahill. Their family consisted of 6 sons (including Alexander, servant at Wolfelee) and 5 daughters. He died at Westerhouses. John (19th C.) mason in Denholm. In 1863 he donated 2 old coins to the Museum. John (19th C.) son of Thomas, who was shepherd on Templehall. He married Agnes, daughter of shepherd Robert Telfer. Among their children was John, who was shepherd at several farms in Rulewater. John (19th C.) eldest son of John, farmer at Minto Kames. Along with his brother Thomas he went out to Australia when gold was discovered near Melbourne in the 1850s. He returned to Hawick and married Mary, sister of builder Adam Scott in 1866. He farmed at Priestrig. His children were John, Thomas, Christina (who married Rev. John Stevenson of Bedrule) and Esther (who kept house for her 2 brothers at Bonchester). John (19th C.) Race Judge at the Common Riding in the 1840s. John (b.1826/7) shepherd in Rulewater, son of John and grandson of Thomas who was shepherd on Templehall farm. He was born in Hawick Parish and was related to the Turnbulls of Hartshaugh and Swanshiel and also coachman John. He worked for Henry Elliot, senior and junior, then at Town-o-Rule, Westerhouses and finally Weens East Lodge. In 1861 he was shepherd at Westerhouses. He married Margaret Elliot from Newcastleton. They had 2 sons and 4 daughters: Janet, who was laundrymaid at Weens; Isabella; Agnes; John; Elizabeth; and Thomas. John (b.1828) son of tobacconist William, he was a baker in Hawick. In 1851 he and his father were both living at about 3 Howegate, and he was employing 2 men in his baker's business. In Slater's 1852 directory he is listed on the Howegate. John Struthers (b.1829) son of weaver William. He was a bank accountant, working in Jedburgh by the time of the 1861 census. His wife was Janet and their children included Ellen L., William and John W. (who was with Thomas Purdom & Sons). John (d.1891) related to the Turnbulls of Hartshaugh and Swanshiel. He took over driving the Hawick to Carlisle coach from Sandy Elder for the last few years that it operated. He later farmed at Wiltonburn along with his brother William. He may be the John of Wiltonburn who in 1870 donated a sixpence of Elizabeth I to the Museum and in 1872 donated a shilling of William III. John Anderson (19th C.) solicitor in Hawick. He was one of the members of the first committee of Hawick Golf Club in 1878, and was later Club Captain. He was also one of the founder members of the Hawick Billiards Club. John (19th C.) clerk at William Watson & Sons, he was an influential early member of the Hawick R.F.C. committee. John (19th/20th C.) wine merchant at 51 High Street. He was probably son of the founder of the grocery and wine store. John A. (19th C.) draper on the Howegate. He was later a tobacconist. His daughter Amy married her cousin James Turnbull, farmer at Galalaw. John (1836–1915) from the family of Bedrule, he was born in Jedburgh, where he worked at the Procurator Fiscal's Office before becoming the first accountant of the Hawick Branch of the Royal Bank of Scotland. After holding this position for 15 years he moved to the Gala branch where he was appointed Agent in 1902 and retired in 1909. He was also actuary for the Gala branch of the Trustee Savings Bank for almost 40 years. He could be the accountant on the 1857 list of members of the Archæological Society. He married Isabella Ewen Turnbull (1834–1917) and their children were James Brydon, John William, Gilbert Kilpatrick, Helen, Robert John (killed on a train in the U.S.A.), Douglas (of the Imperial Yeomanry, died at Pretoria), George Hector (died in Nashville, Tennessee) and E.J. (of Dayton, Ohio). John (1838–1910) son of John and grandson of 'Bailie Tammy'. He worked in the family dyers business. He lived at Kirkton House, which in 1901 had 9 rooms and 2 servants. He married Sarah Hall, who was from England. Their children included: Sarah Thompson (1862–78); John D. (b.1865); and Williamina Thompson (b.1869), who married James Boyd Sime. John (b.1859) son of grocer James and Annie Robson. In 1889 he married Mary Stewart at Ilkley. Their children were James Stewart; Charles Stewart; Isabell Young Firth; Donald MacLeod Victor; Frederick William Barrie; and Douglas Elliot Scott. John (19th/20th C.) master of Kirkton School. He is recorded in Slater's 1903 directory. In 1906 he contributed to the fund for the renovation of Kirkton Kirk. Probably the same John was Registrar and Inspector of Poor in Kirkton in 1902. John Turnbull (b.1868) son of John, farmer at Priestrig and Mary Scott. He was born in Wilton Parish. He became joint tenant at Bonchester with his brother Thomas. John Weir (b.1870) clothier in Denholm, son of clothier and tailor James. He was educated in Denholm until the age of 16, acting as pupil-teacher there. He was an apprentice with his father until 1890 then worked in Glasgow for 2 years, returning to Denholm to join his father in 'R. Turnbull & Son', later becoming the sole partner. He acted as local Registrar in Denholm and lived at Rosebank. In 1895 he married his cousin Isabella Macdonald; she was daughter of Jessie Scott, daughter of Robert Scott, farmer at Todlaw. John (19th/20th C.) Elder and Session Clerk of Kirkton Parish in 1908. John (19th/20th C.) cashier with Wilson & Armstrong at Weensland Mills. He later became a partner in Turnbull & Hodgson, coal merchants, then had his own coal business (based at the Coffin End) and finally was involved with Teviot Tweed Co. He married Barbara Scott Davidson, daughter of James. John (19th/20th C.) became Managing Director of Pringle's in 1929, following J. Boyd Sime's resignation. He himself resigned in 1933, to be replaced by Arthur Oddy and Wullie Mactaggart. John Fisher 'Guttie' or 'Gutty' (1932–82) son of Barrie, he was a local grocery merchant and Town Councillor, as well as husband of Myra. He attended George Watson's College in Edinburgh and served an apprenticeship with Wilson & Glenny before taking over the family business in 1954, based at 51 High Street. His business also sold a blended whisky called 'Teviotdale'. He revived the Turnbull clan in 1977, after effectively being dormant for centuries. He was a Town Councillor for 11 years, starting in 1969 and later served as Roxburgh District Councillor for Teviot South. He was also heavily involved in events twinning Hawick with Bailleul. He married Myra in 1956 and they made their home at 14 Rosebank Road, later moving to St. Ables, Wilton Park Road. His children were Barrie (b.1957), Deborah (b.1959) and Hamish (b.1961). The Turnbull Clan named their lifetime achievement award after him. Joseph (18th/19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Mary Armstrong and their son children included: Francis (b.1798); James (b.1800); William (b.1810); and Joseph (b.1812). Joseph (b.1792/3) born in Southdean Parish, he was a grocer in Jedburgh and then a frameworker in Hawick. In 1861 he was living on Drumlanrig Place. He married Helen (or 'Ellen') Young from Kelso, and their children included: Helen (b.1828); and Jane (b.1829). Joseph (b.c.1815) stockingmaker in Denholm. He was living around the Canongate in 1841. He married Catherine Waugh and their children included: Martha (b.1834); Joseph (b.1836); Isabella Minto ('Bell', b.1838); Andrew (b.1840); Betsy (b.1844); and Thomas Waugh (b.1848). Joseph (b.1821/2) postman in Hawick, perhaps serving the Denholm area in the 1860s. He may have been son of stockingmaker William. In 1851 he was a handloom weaver at 7 O'Connell Street and in 1861 he was a 'Post Messanger' at 1 Melgund Place. He may be the Joseph who donated coins to the Museum in 1860, 1861 and 1867, and was on its committee in 1864. He married Margaret Elliot and their children included: William; Archibald (b.1851); Adam Orrock (b.1853); Euphemia; Margaret O.; and John E. Katherine (16th C.) daughter and heiress of Hector of Belses. In 1580 her father gave her sasine for his 'ten librates of land of old extent of Belses'. Her uncle John was one of the witnesses. Lancelot 'Lancie' (16th/17th C.) brother of Tom 'of Harkschaw', which seems likely to have been Hartshaugh. The brothers were listed in 1603 along with Turnbulls from Nether Bonchester, Braidhaugh and Mackside, who were ordered to find caution of 300 merks each to answer the accusation of stealing cattle from Hector Turnbull of Wauchope in the 1590s. His name is given as 'Lancy Trumble' (which is an unusual forename for a Turnbull). Lawrence (15th C.) part of the 'retour of inquest' for Ker of Altonburn in 1438. It is unclear which branch of the Turnbulls he belonged to, but he is listed right after Archibald, and John of Fulton is also mentioned. Lawrence (15th/16th C.) recorded as witness to a land transaction in Edinburgh in 1501/2. Lawrence (15th/16th C.) son of William in Bonchester. In 1502 he was listed among many Turnbulls and others who were declared as fugitives for their part in the murder of Robert Oliver. The person who was supposed to enter him into the court was George of Hallrule, who was fined for his non-appearance. His father William was also recorded in the same 1502 case, as well as David in Bonchester, who was probably related. Lawrence 'Laurie in Maxsyde' (16th/17th C.) found guilty at the 1622 Commissioners' Court of stealing 2 cows from William Douglas of Cavers' land at Langside about 1614 and 2 sheep from elsewhere in 1619, and sentenced to be hung. He is also referred to as 'Lancie'. Lawrence 'Lawrie' of Hartshaugh (17th C.) recorded on the valuation for Abbotrule Parish in 1643. It is unclear how he might have been related to other Turnbulls who lived at Hartshaugh. Leo (15th/16th C.) tenant in Unthank listed among

Turnbulls given remission in 1516 for any role they played in assisting the Homes. Presumably these are the lands of Unthank in Rulewater. Lyle (16th/17th C.) described as 'Lyell Turnbull in Hartishauche' (presumably Hartshaugh) in 1618 (registered in 1623) for a 'wadset' of lands in Hobkirk Parish. He was also recorded in the 1623 Commissioners' Court when he was surety for Adam Turnbull in Hartshaugh Mill. He was surely related to Adam. He may be the 'Leonall' who was possibly a younger son of Hector of Hartshaugh, who witnessed a bond between Walter of Bedrule and George Rutherford (younger in Abbotrule) in 1618. Malcolm (17th C.) recorded as a Burgess of Selkirk in 1630, when he sold his tenement there. His son William witnessed another transaction in 1630. Margaret (14th C.) forfeited lands in Eyemouth (in Coldingham) which were granted to 'Ade Corfour'. This was during the reign of David II. Her surname is given as 'Trymbille'; it is unclear how she was related to other Turnbulls, but she was one of the earliest members of the family in Scotland. Margaret (14th/15th C.) daughter and heiress of John, who was granted Hundleshope in Peeblesshire by David II in 1357. She also held lands in Roberton and in the town of Selkirk, suggesting that her father was from the Borthwick Water and Selkirkshire Turnbulls. She married William Gledstains of that Ilk. They had a son John, to whom she resigned the lands of Hundleshope in her lifetime, probably around 1400. During the reign of Robert III she also resigned to her son John the lands in Roberton and in Selkirk. It may be that the lands the Gledstains family soon possessed near Hawick (Ormiston, Orchard, Hummelknowes, etc.) also came from her and the Turnbulls. Margaret (15th/16th C.) daughter and co-heiress of Walter of Gargunnock. Along with her sister Janet she was infefted in the lands of Hassendeanbank in 1501 (her brother William probably dying before then). Margaret (15th/16th C.) described being 'in hawic' in 1502 when she was convicted of common reset, theft and plunder and fined £3. Her sureties were Thomas of Bedrule, Walter of Minto, George of Hallrule and Adam of 'natoun'; she was surely from one of the local branches of the Turnbulls. She was 'Magareta', while the next case involved 'Marjora', who was presumably a different person. Margaret (15th/16th C.) received sasine of the lands of Lanton in Roxburghshire in 1506. This was along with Elizabeth, who was probably her sister. Margaret see Lady Margaret Lorraine. Margaret (16th C.) daughter of Robert. In 1536 she presented proof that her deceased father had held the tenancy of the lands of 'Uterall Burne' in Selkirkshire. Margaret (16th C.) wife of David Elliot, who was tenant in Chamberlain Newton. It is unclear which branch of the Turnbulls she came from. There was a court case to get her husband removed from the other half of the farm (owned at tht time by George Turnbull, Burgess of Jedburgh) in 1567. There appears to have been an ongoing dispute over this half of the lands, since in 1573 Gavin Eliott of Bailielee and Stobs (who purchased the half from George Turnbull) complained that she had ordered her sons, Walter and John Scott, to attack his servant there. By this time she was widow of David Elliot (who was also from the Horsleyhill branch, like Gavin Eliott of Stobs), and must have married a Scott. She claimed that although she had no title for the lands, she had possession 'be virtew of tak and assedatioun', although her accusers cliamed these 'ar of lang tyme bigane outrunin'. She was represented before the Privy Council by Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme (perhaps therefore a relative of her husband) and was 'visiit with seiknes' and did not attend herself. Her son John Scott did not appear and was declared a fugitive, while she and her son Walter were declared fugitives later in 1573, but then bound to Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme and John Tweedy, tutor of Drumelzier, not to molest Gavin Eliott, his wife Jean Scott, their children or servants. It seems likely that Walter and John were sons from her first marriage, perhaps to a Scott of Newton (but it this unclear). Walter and John also had a brother David, recorded in 1588, who was presumably also her son. Margaret (d.1593) daughter and heiress of William (younger of Bedrule) and Margaret Home. On the death of William, her lands and gift of marriage then came into the hands of the Crown, who appointed her uncle Sir James Home of Cowdenknowes and her grandfather Sir Thomas of Bedrule as tutors. However, Sir Thomas was declared a fugitive, leading to a lack of clarity over her future. In 1584 she was recorded as 'oy' (i.e. granddaughter) of Sir Thomas of Bedrule and also niece of Alexander Home of Huttonhall when there was a claim by Sir James Home of Cowdenknowes (her 'moder broder', i.e. another uncle) over 'the exhibitioun of the said Margaret', but the Privy Council decreed that control over her should remain with her 'keeper' Alexander Home. It was then ruled that she should stay in the house of Alexander Clerk of Balbirny, Provost of Edinburgh, until a decision about her future was made. She later married Robert French, Laird of Thornydykes and Abbotrule, but had no children. Margaret (17th C.) sister of Walter of Rawflat. In 1632 she and her sister Isobella were 'heirs portioner' to their brother in the lands of the Mains of Feu-Rule. Margaret (17th C.) along with Mary Chisholme she was accused of witchcraft in Lilliesleaf in 1650. It was reported that they went to Selkirk for trial by the ministers and elders 'quhairupon markis of Satan was found upon them both'. Their fate is not recorded. Margaret (17th C.) widow who was jointly responsible, along with James Scott of Whitlslade, for lands in Hassendean Parish in 1663 according to the Land Tax Rolls. She was 'relict of Alton', this probably being Robert of Alton, who died in about 1650. Margaret (17th C.) listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick 'eist the water' in 1694. She may be the Margaret who in the early 1700s received money for keeping 'Little Joly' (an orphan, who died only a few years later). Margaret (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In about 1800 she received 5s from th Session for 'going to the well' (probably Deadwater). Margaret nee Dalgleish (b.1789) son of John Dalgleish, she was born in Hobkirk Parish. She married Schoolmaster James in 1808, probably when he was teacher at Denholm. They later moved to Hawick, where he was Schoolmaster at Wilton. Her husband died in 1834 and later she ran her own school, along with her daughter Agnes, this being known as the 'Image Garden'. The 1841 census records her living at 'Wilton Cottage' with children Agnes, Elspeth, Jane, Mary and William. In 1851 she was still there, with Agnes, Mary and Margaret and in 1861 just with Mary. Margaret (b.1819/20) born in Minto Parish, daughter of Janet Deans. She was listed as a teacher in Lilliesleaf in Slater's 1852 directory. In 1851 she was a teacher of 'Female School teacher (of Sewing &c)' in Lilliesleaf, along with her mother. They lived on the north side of Main Street. Marie (17th C.) recorded in 1643 when she owned £40 in Hobkirk Parish. She is listed being in the same place as Mary Rutherford 'of Rydvell'; however, it is unclear where this was. Marion nee Lorraine (16th/17th C.) wife of Walter, called 'of Wauchope', whose daughters Jean and Beatrix inherited Templehall and Brewlands from him in about 1604. In 1605 their 'tutor' George Turnbull (2nd son of Hector of Wauchope) had her and several others removed from the lands there. This must have been part of some family feud. She was perhaps daughter of Hector of Harwood (although there is no proof for this). Marion (17th C.) listed as a a widow living at Effledge on the 1694 Hearth Tax roll. Her name appears just after William, to whom she was probably related. Marion (17th/18th C.) resident of 'Bedruletoun', recorded receiving poor money from the Bedrule Session in at least 1724–1729. Marjory (15th/16th C.) described being 'in hawic' in 1502 when she was convicted of resetting several men. The men were John Turnbull, Alexander Turnbull, John Elliot and John Armstrong, called 'The Fair Jock'. Mark (15th/16th C.) recorded at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1502. Walter Aitkin in Minto was convicted of associating with him and William, while they were 'at the horn'. His location is not given. Mark (15th/16th C.) tenant in Bonchester, recorded at the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh in 1494/5, when he served as surety for his brother James. He was also surety for himself, and was fined for the non-apperance of both of them. He is also recorded in 1501 among 10 men whose fines were remitted, with his name recorded there as 'Marci Trumbull'; his brother James is also listed, as well as Turnbulls of Fulton, Bonchester and elsewhere. He could also be the Mark (with no location given) listed in 1503 among men who were fined (in his 4 cows and oxen) for failing to attend the Justice-aire in Jedburgh; his brother Archie was also listed. Mark (15th/16th C.) listed among the many men connected with the Archbishop of Glasgow who had remission in 1504 for any involvement in the slaughter of Thomas Rutherford in Jedburgh Abbey. He is listed before Adam of Philiphaugh, who may have been related. In a separate list his name is right before David of Wauchope. Perhaps the same Mark was one of the witnesses to a document in Selkirk involving Robert, tutor of Philiphaugh. Mark (15th/16th C.) tenant of Over Chester when he was listed in the 1516 remission for several Turnbulls for assisting Alexander, Lord Home. His brother Archibald is also listed, along with 'Marc younger', presumably his son, as well as 'Richard Turnbull with Marc Turnbull in Overchester, David Turnbull with the same Marc, William Turnbull, John Turnbull his sons'. Presumably they were all related. Mark (16th C.) Burgess of Jedburgh. He was Provost in 1561 and in 1565 (when his name is given as 'Marcus'), during a dispute with Sir Nicholas Rutherford of Hundalee. It is unclear how he was related to other Turnbulls. Mark of Philiphaugh (16th C.) recorded as witness to a transaction in Selkirk in 1579. In 1579/80 he was 'apparent heir of Philophauch' when he (and his brother Andrew) witnessed a transaction involving land in Lilliesleaf and another for lands near Melrose when he was clearly son of John of Philiphaugh. He witnessed other transactions in 1579/80. He was still heir apparent in early 1581 when he witnessed a transaction in Selkirk, but later that year he was 'of Philophaucht'. Also in 1581 he witnessed an arrangement where Katherine Scott, widow of Robert of Colifort, resigned her lands of Hundleshope to her son Thomas. In 1581/2 his father was already deceased when his mother (Isabel Douglas) resigned her lands to him, in return for a promise of 8 bolls of grain annually from his lands of Howden. Also in 1581/2 he witnessed a transaction in Selkirk and set a tack for his lands in Howden, with his brother George as a witness. Mark of Bewlie (16th/17th C.) brother of Robert and probably son of Walter. He was probably among the Turnbulls who were accused of harassing the widow and children of the murdered Walter Turnbull of Rawflat in 1581. He was one of a group of about 30 Turnbulls who entered Jedburgh on Rood Fair Day in 1601, as part of a feud with the Kers. At the end of the fight Thomas Ker (brother of the Provost) and his servant were dead, along with 2 Turnbulls, one of whom was his brother Robert. There were also several serious injuries, and he himself lost 'the thowme of his left hand' in the fight. Another brother, Andrew, was also involved in the raid and lost his little finger. Also in 1601 he is listed along with Andrew of Bewlie, Eckie of Firth, Eckie in Stonedge and James, servant to the Laird of Minto, when Sir Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst was ordered to present them at Edinburgh Tolbooth 'to answer such crymes as thay wer suspect gilty of'; Kerr had to pay a penalty for failing to produce Eckie of Stonedge, so presumably he and the others were imprisoned. Probably the same Mark was recorded in 1602 along with James and Hector, when John Heatlie of Mellerstain and James Home of Framepath were sureties for them to remain in Edinburgh Tolbooth. Also in 1602 he was 'brother of the late Robert Trumbull of Bewly' recorded along with Hector in Firth for whom William Cranston, younger of that Ilk was surety for them to re-enter ward. In 1602 he was recorded along with Thomas, younger of Minto and Hector of Barnhills, when they were accused of robbing a hunting party sent out by the Laird of Gretna, with permission to hunt for venison in Tynedale; they were found guilty of robbery and fined for the value of 3 horses. He must also have been related to Hector of Bewlie, who was killed by the Kers in 1604 for his part in these events. He was convicted in late 1601, but it is unclear whether or not he was executed. He was also one of the 'pursuers' of the case against the Kers for the murder and maiming of several men in his party. He is probably the Mark listed in 1606 in letters of apology by the men responsible for the death of William Kerr of Ancrum. He is probably the Mark, brother of William 'called of Beulie' who was named by the Privy Council when a commission was appointed to apprehend them and 6 other Turnbulls (plus 2 Davidsons), for not finding caution following being found guilty of the murder of Thomas Ker of Crailinghall and 6 Grahamslaw brothers. Mark (d.bef. 1617) tenant in Nether Bonchester. He was recorded being 'of Neddir Bonchester' in 1590/1 among men who the Earls of Bothwell and Murray were charged to enter in court, and separately Kerr of Ferniehirst (on whose Jedburgh Abbey lands he also occupied). He was recorded as a raider into England in 1589/90, being 'in Nethir Bunecheste' in 1605 when he was pledged to appear in court in Edinburgh, along with 2 other Turnbulls. In 1603 he, along with Turnbulls from Braidhaugh, Mackside and 'Harkschaw', were ordered to find caution of 300 merks each to answer the accusation of stealing cattle from Hector Turnbull of Wauchope in the 1590s. In 1606 he was the occupier of the lands of Weens and Hobsburn when they were sold by Thomas Turnbull to John Scott. He could be the Mark listed along with Turnbulls of Braidhaugh and Mackside and Lorraines of Appotside, accused of stealing from an Englishman in 1601. He married Margaret Rutherford. In 1617 his widow complained that although the family had held the 'rowme of Nethir Bonchester past memory of man, as kindlie tennentis and possessouris to the Abbotis of Jedburgh', after her husband's death, she was harassed there by Walter of Rawflat, destroying crops, forcing her off the landi and burning the 'write and evidents'. However Walter of Rawflat denied these acts and was found not guilty by the Privy Council. Mark of Howden (d.bef. 1631) probably the Mark 'apparent of Howdene' who in 1581/2 witnessed a transaction in Selkirk involving Walter in Belses. He is recorded in 1612 among local men accused by the Privy Council of charging more than the allowed amount of interest. He was surely related to other Turnbulls of Howden. He failed to appear to answer the charge and was denounced as a rebel. In 1631 his son John of Howden was served heir to his lands of Philhope in the Barony of Hawick. Mark (16th/17th C.) son of Sir Thomas of Bedrule. He is probably the Mark in Bedrule who witnessed the bond between Robert in Bedrule and Joseph Tennant, minister of Bedrule in 1614. Mark (16th/17th C.) son of Hector in Hartshaugh (who appears to have lived to an old age) and younger brother of James. In 1616 he had a bond with William Scott of Todrig, and another with James (called of Bedrule) and David (or Andrew), butcher of Jedburgh. He is recorded as 'in Hairtishaugh' in 1619 when he was cautioner for Thomas Turnbull 'in Rowllspittle'. Mark (d.1689) described as 'portioner of fotherlie', it is unclear which Turnbulls he was related to. However, it seems likely he was related to John, who was at Fodderlee in 1694. He is recorded in 1678 when he paid the land tax at Fodderlee for land valued at £100 (in one transcript of the valuation the name is given as 'Margaret', but that is clearly an error). He married Bessie Kerr, who was surely related to the Kerrs of Fodderlee; their only child (and heir) was Helen. The testament of him and his wife Bessie Kerr was recorded at Peebles in 1690, by Walter Chisholme, whose wife was Helen, his daughter. When he died the assets of him and his wife consisted of 2 cows, 31 sheep, half a boll of sewn barley and 'insight and plenishing' of their house, valued at £30 Scots. Additionally William Turnbull, shoemaker in Jedburgh (who was surely related to him, perhaps his brother), acted as cautioner for the list of people who owed him money, namely: Robert Bonnar in Knowesouth; Adam Young in Hassendeanbank; Andrew Oliver in Bairnkine; William Scott in Birkhill; William Turnbull in Fulton; Andrew Rutherford in Rule; James [blank] in Earlside; and John Ker of Fodderlee. When no one appeared, Adam Chisholme in Newton became cautioner instead. Mark (17th/18th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish, who married Janet Tudhope in 1700. His children included Thomas (b.1703), John (b.1706), Andrew (b.1708), Janet (b.1713) and Mark (b.1716). Mark (18th C.) resident of Ancrum Parish. He married Janet Rutherford in 1778. Mark (b.c.1780) tenant at Spittal Mill. He was one of the local Tory supporters who was stripped almost naked and beaten up by the Radical mob at the 1837 election. 5 men were tried for rioting, with him being one of the 7 victims named. The court proceedings state that the mob 'did surround him, and violently tear off from his person a great part of his clothes, and did strike him and kick him severely on his legs and other part of his person'. He was recorded as farmer at Spittal Mill in 1851. He married Janet Scott in Cavers in 1832 and their children included: Thomas (b.1832); William (b.1833); Walter Scott (b.1835); Walter Scott (again, b.1837); and Isabel (b.1841). John (b.1827), also baptised in Cavers to a couple with the same names, was probably also their child (although born before their marriage). Mark, who was meal dealer at Spittal in 1841, was probably also his son. Mark (18th/19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Jane (or 'Jeany') Kerr in 1814 and their daughter Agnes Rutherford was baptised in 1816. Mark (18th/19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Agnes MacKenzie and their daughter Anne was baptised in 1821. Mark (b.1807) from Ancrum, son of Mark. He was related to the Turnbulls of Chesterhall. He was land steward at Menslaws farm. He was an agricultural labourer at Hallrule in 1841. He was recorded at Menslaws in 1851 and 1861. He married Betty Elliot (from Minto) in Cavers in 1832 and their children included: James (b.1833), baptised in Cavers Parish, who was shepherd at Minto Kames; Janet (b.1836), also baptised in Cavers Parish; William (b.1838/9), who emigrated to New Zealand; Mark (b.1844), baptised in Bedrule Parish; Margaret (b.1841); Helen (b.1846); Elizabeth ('Betsy', b.1849/50); and Ann Bell (b.1853). Mark (b.c.1810) probably son of Mark, farmer at Spittal Mill. In 1841 he was a meal dealer living at Spittal Mill Stable. He could have been the same Mark who in Melrose in 1843 married Margaret Govenlock, daughter of Robert Govenlock ('Gloomy Wunter') and Margaret Ruickbie; their children, baptised in Melrose, included Mark (b.1844), Margaret (b.1846) and Elizabeth Helen (b.1849). Mark (b.1862) son of James, farmer at Billerwell. His twin brother was Walter, farmer at Hartshaugh. He farmed at Midburn, where his mother Mary Scott lived with him. Mary (d.1816) recorded dying in Hawick, when she was listed as 'sister to Andrew Turnbull from Jamaica'. It is unclear who this Andrew might have been or how she was related to other Turnbulls. Mary Shortreed 'Myra' nee Sim (1932–2020), J.P., M.B.E., daughter of George and Jessie Sim, she was born in the Haig and bred in the West End. She was entirely educated at Hawick High School and was one of the children who contracted typhoid fever in the 1938 outbreak. She worked in Wilson & Glenny's office and married local merchant and councillor John F. Following the sudden death of her husband she wound up the Turnbull family business and moved home to the bungalow Coblestanes. She then decided to enter politics herself and was elected to the District Council in 1984, serving for 12 years, including 4 as chairperson. She was Hawick Provost 1988–1996 and was described at the time as 'the best wumman Provost Hawick has ever hed'. Her appointment was not without controversy, however, with her withrawing her original nomination in 1986, considering Hawick not to be ready, and then getting in unopposed 2 years later. There were some serious hiccups over traditionally all-male events, e.g. she was not invited to attend the annual Callants' Club dinner and initially not allowed to attend the Common Riding Dinner, despite being Provost. Nevertheless, she was able slowly to break barriers, being the first woman to speak at the Jethart Callants' Club smoker, the Galashiels Manufacturers' Association Michaelmas dinner and the Peebles ex-Cornets' Committee dinner. She was also on the board of Eildon Housing Association for 24 years, stepping down in 2017. She received an M.B.E. in 1996 for her public service. Her children were Barrie (an architect), Deborah (manager at Borders Pet Rescue) and Hamish (who runs a knitwear agency). Matthew (15th C.) tenant in Hassendean. In 1494/5 his sons Nicholas and John had remission for the murder of Robert Redford, with John Gledstains acting as surety. Maurice made a Director of Pringle's in 1947. There is a seat to his memory at the 15th tee on the Vertish. Michael (15th/16th C.) tenant in Abbotrule in 1502. At the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh his surety was Patrick in Mackside, and he also served as surety for himself; however, the pair were fined for non-appearance. He is also listed in 1503 among men who were fined (in his case 4 cows) for failing to attend the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. Michael (17th C.) recorded as witness to a baptism in the Hassendean part of Roberton Parish in 1686. This was for William (who was surely a relative), with the other witness being Thomas. Michael (17th C.) described as 'victore' when he witnessed a Hawick sasine in 1687. The description is probably an occupation of some sort (perhaps 'vintner' or 'vitualer' is meant). Probably the same Michael witnessed baptisms in Hawick for Andrew Porteous in 1684, James Davidson and John Thomson in 1687, Andrew Porteous and Robert Turnbull in 1688 and William Bryson in 1689. Michael (17th/18th C.) cooper in Hawick, who had brothers John and Robert. In 1678 all 3 were involved in a case before the Bailies involving a fight with Robert Brown, whose wife they called 'witches-gate', with him responding that 'their sister was ane of that sort'. He was referred to as a wright on the list of Hawick men named in the 1673 trial following the so-called riot at St. Jude's Fair. He may be the Michael 'Trumble' recorded in 1683 when flesher John Briggs was found guilty of insulting him and William Paisley, 'calling of them two drunken elders'. Likely the same Michael was also fined in 1685 'in and blood committ by him upon Thomas Briggs, fleshour', with Briggs also fined for assaulting him. Perhaps the same Michael was a witness to a case before the Bailies involding a fight between William Douglas and Robert Scott. Probably the same cooper Michael in Hawick was listed among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He is probably the Michael listed in 1694 among those on the west-side of Hawick who paid the Hearth Tax. He was senior Deacon of the hammermen in Hawick. He is probably the cooper who in 1704 witnessed a baptism in Hawick for James Beattie. In 1709 and 1712 he and Robert witnessed baptisms for cooper John (probably all 3 were brothers). In 1715 there was a dispute between the hammermen and the weavers over seating precedence in the gallery in St. Mary's Kirk. The Session determined that 'for his lifetime, [he] should have ye head of ye fore seat of ye loft, conform to ye desire of ye other two hammermen concerned'. To take this prized seat he had to be waiting at the Loft door when it was opened, and was not allowed to pass anyone else on the way to his seat. This right was not to carry on to his descendants. He may be the same Michael who, in 1714, was 'creat burgess upon the accompt that he built the stone stair that goes up to the steiple' (of St. Mary's). He could be the Michael, son of Robert and Janet Scott, born in Haick in 1645. It seems likely he was the Michael married to Bessie Bridges, whose children baptised in Hawick included an unnamed son (b.1672), John (b.1676) and Helen (b.1679). Michael (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Parkhill in 1731 when his daughter Mary was baptised. Michael (18th/19th C.) hosier at Appletreehall. He was declared bankrupt in 1821. Michael (1787–1849) son of William of Burnfoot. He inherited the Great Seal of the Turnbulls after his elder brother was effectively disinherited. He married Mary

(possibly sister of Dr. Walter Graham of Hawick, who died in 1832), and after her death emigrated to Canada with his 5 children in 1842. Their children (baptised in Hawick) were: Margaret Scott (1818–1908); Walter (1821–49); William (b.1822), who died young; Peter Stephenson (1826–89); Mary (1829–80); and William (1828–1901). He died at Woodside in Brantford, Ontario. Michael (18th/19th C.) grocer and spirit dealer of the High Street, recorded on Pigot's 1825/6 directory. He could be the Turnbull marked at No. 31 or around No. 66 on Wood's map. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 1825 'History of Hawick'. He could be the same as Michael, son of William of Burnfoot. Michael (d.1894) 3rd son of Adam and great-grandson of Adam of Denesyde. He helped his brother Thomas farm at Midburn (or 'Africa'). He married Beatrice Nichol (known as a great beauty), sister of his brother John's wife. He died at the old schoolhouse, Wolfelee. Mrs. ? (19th C.) resident of Kirkton Roadend. She served unofficially as distributor of mail in the district for many years. In 1893 she was presented with 'a cosy woollen shawl' by the Rev. John Stuart in recognition of her service to the community. Mungo resident of Fulton who in 1619 was listed among Turnbulls of Bedrule and Fulton who were declared rebels for removing timber from their former lands of Huntliehill, then owned by Stewart of Traquair. He may have been related to Walter, Thomas, Robert and Robert 'Fendie' who were also in Fulton. Myra see Mary Shortreed. Nichol (15th C.) recorded in 1488/9 as witness to an agreement between the Vicar of Hassendean and the Abbot of Melrose. Most of the other witnesses were local clergymen, and so the same was probably true for him. Nichol (17th/18th C.) mason in Hawick. In 1711 he witnessed (along with mason John) a baptism for fellow mason Peter Mitchell. He is recorded as a witness at Hawick Parish Session in 1718, inquired about whether he saw Andrew Jardine coming out of the Beadle's house at a very late hour. He was probably related to mason John, who had a son called Nichol baptised in Hawick in 1705. Nichol (d.1840) stocking-maker in Hawick. He married Margaret Laidlaw, who died in 1819, aged 56. They had a son Andrew (d.1804), who married Jean Ormiston (d.1838). Nicholas (15th C.) son of Matthew in Hassendean. In 1494/5 he and his brother John had remission for the murder of Robert Redford, with John Gledstains as surety. They are recorded in the Treasurer's accounts for 1494/5 having obtained remission from the King (where his name is 'Nichol'). Ninian (15th C.) son of William. He is recorded at the 1494/5 Justice-aire held in Jedburgh when he failed to appear and the Thomas, Laird of Bedrule was fined. It is unclear how he might have been related to other Turnbulls. Ninian (15th/16th C.) listed in the 1501 Exchequer Rolls, along with Robert, 2 Johns, George and David. Their £40 fine was granted to Thomas, son and heir of George of Bedrule. Perhaps the same Ninian was also listed in 1501 among 10 men, mostly Turnbulls, whose fines were remitted. In 1502 he was among more than 20 Turnbulls and others who failed to appear at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh for the charge of murdering Robert Oliver; Adam of Billerwell was fined for his non-appearance. He may be the same Ninian, son of William, recorded in 1494/5. Ninian (15th/16th C.) tenant at Overchester, listed in the 1516 pardon that many Turnbulls had for involvement with the traitorous Homes. Other tenants there were Mark, Mark's brother Archibald, Mark younger, Richard, David, Andrew, and Andrew's son Thomas. He was probably related to some of these men. Ninian (15th/16th C.) tenant at Rule, listed in the 1516 remission for several Turnbulls for providing assistance to Alexander, Lord Home in plotting against the King. His lands were referred to as 'Roule', which could be the same as Town-o-rule perhaps. Andrew was also listed as a tenant there. Norman (1942–2013) born in Edinburgh, he grew up on a farm and served in the R.A.F. He then ran a garage, before becoming a shepherd in the Hawick area. After retirement he became record-keeper for the Turnbull Clan Association. In 2012 he married Terri Booth. The Clan awarded him their lifetime achievement award in 2014. Norman High School history teacher. He was Acting Father in 1997. He was President of the 1514 Club in 1982, the Mosstroopers' Club in 1990 and the Callants' Club in 2007, becoming the first person to have held the chain of office of all 3 clubs. Patrick (15th C.) recorded as 'Patricio Turnbul' in 1447 when he witnessed the sasine for Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch's puchase of the Cousinlands. This was signed in Hawick, so he must have been a local man. His name appears at the end along with John Stoddart, so they may have been the Bailie's of the time. Patrick (15th C.) recorded in 1494/5 along with Gilbert. They were both stated to be 'at the horn' when John in Dryden was allowed to 'compone' for associating with them. Patrick

(15th/16th C.) recorded at Wauchope Tower at the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh 1494/5. He was allowed to 'compone' for associating with Turnbulls who were 'at the horn' for the murder of James Rutherford. He is recorded in the Treasurer's accounts for 1494/5 having obtained remission from the King. He was also recorded in 1502 as 'in Walchope' (i.e. Wauchope) when he had remission for associating with Archibald and Ninian Armstrong and William, son of David Scott of Tushielaw. He was recorded being absent from the indictment when summoned by the sergeant in Jedburgh. Patrick (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 among the men who were put to the horn in for involvement in the murder of Robert Oliver. The person called to enter him was Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst, who was fined for his non-appearance. He may be the same as one of the contemporary Patricks. Patrick (15th/16th C.) tenant at Gatehousecote, listed in the 1516 pardon that many Turnbulls had for involvement with the traitorous Homes. Other tenants there were Andrew and his brother William, as well as Thomas and David. Patrick (16th C.) witness to a Lorraine sasine for the lands of Harwood and Hawthornside in 1531. He is listed beside Robert, so they may have been related, as well as possibly related to the Lorraine family. Patrick (16th C.) recorded in the 1538 Exchequer Rolls as occupier of the lands of Wauchopebank and Templehall, which were at that time owned by the Crown. He is probably related to earlier and later Patricks of associated with these same places. Patrick 'Pate' (16th/17th C.) tenant at Wauchope in Rulewater. He is recorded as 'Pait Trumbill' in a 1605 court case. He may be a descendant of the earlier Patrick in Wauchope. Patrick (16th/17th C.) tenant at Templehall and Brewlands, along with Walter Scott, recorded in a contract of 'wadset' for the lands in 1612. In 1614 (registered in 1616) he is 'of Templehall' of marriage between his daughter Margaret and William, son of John Ainslie, Burgess of Edinburgh. His son Thomas was cautioner, while witnesses were William 'fiar of Bedrule' (probably his brother), Robert (possibly his uncle), and George also 'there' (in Bedrule or Templehall). (and probably another relative). Along with Walter Scott, he is also recorded as sometimes occupier of Templehall in 1627. He is probably the Patrick who was son of Sir Thomas of Bedrule. His children included Thomas and Margaret (who married William Ainslie in 1614). Patrick (16th/17th C.) recorded in Mackside in 1618 when he was witness to a bond between Walter of Bedrule and Adam in Abbotrule Townhead. Patrick (17th/18th C.) goldsmith in Edinburgh. In 1704 he became a Burgess of Edinburgh 'by right of umquil John Turnbull of Minto'. It seems likely he was a younger son of Turnbull of Minto. Patrick (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1717 he married Anna, daughter of William Douglas. Paul (16th C.) tenant of one of the farms of Midshiels, Appletreehal, Broadlee, Cottlaw or 'Burnside' in 1562/3 when Lord Alexander Home tried to remove his 'pretended tenants'. Andrew Turnbull in Hornshole is also listed among others. Percy (16th/17th C.) recorded being 'of the Stonylethe' (i.e. Stonedge) in 1601, when 2 Englishmen accused him of stealing their livestock. He was fined 'for lack of answer'. 'Percy' is not a common Scottish name, and so it is possible that this was an error and he is the same as one of the other Turnbulls associated with Stonedge. Peter (15th C.) son of the Laird of Bedrule. In 1493 he served as surety for John Waugh, who had remission for stealing sheep from the Murrays in Sundhope and for associating with the Duke of Albany. Peter (15th/16th C.) tenant in Bonchester who had remission for his involvement in a long list of crimes in 1502. This included the murder of James Rutherford at the Kirk of Hawick, burning and stealing goods from George Rutherford of Longnewton at Barnhill, stealing livestock from John Grahamslaw at 'Camys' (probably Minto Kames) with Turnbulls who were 'at the horn', bringing a party of English to raid from the lands of Robert Lauder at 'Merch-cluche' and capturing him for ransom, stealing sheep from George Tait and his tenants at 'Fichop', stealing sheep from John and William Cleghorn at 'Lethanehope', burning grain and stealing sheep from George Rutherford at 'Sandystanis', with the help of John of Minto and others, and for associating with the rebels Mark and John. Adam of Billerwell served as surety. Peter (15th/16th C.) tenant in Mackside in 1502. At the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh he was surety for Michael in Abbotrule and was fined for his non-appearance. Peter (15th/16th C.) feued the lands of the east steading of Gildhouse, also called Bailielee in 1510. Peter 'Pait' (16th C.) recorded in 1540 as 'Pait Trumbill called Catle' on a list of 'Scottesmen rebels resete within England'. His son 'Pait' called 'Catle younger' and another son 'Jame' are also listed. They presumably came from Catlee near Wauchope. Peter 'the Monk' (d.1561) listed in 1540 among Scottish rebels who were hiding out in England. He is recorded as 'Peter Trumbill called the Monk', and he is listed among Turnbulls from Catlee and Cragwood (several of whom were also called Peter). He was hanged for theft and reset, along with William Elliot 'callit Woddir-nek' and Henry Black in Softlaw. It is unclear where he came from. Peter Stephenson (1836–1921) 14th son of Thomas Scott of East Middle farm, and direct descendant of the Turnbulls of Bedrule. He was said to have been born at 'Deneburn' near Denholm, but his baptism was registered in Kirkton. He studied at Glasgow University, graduating M.D. in 1859, then studying briefly at Edinburgh Medical School before entering the army. He received a medal for serving during the Abyssinian campaign in 1867–68. In 1893 he became Surgeon Major General of the Indian Medical Service in Bombay. He was a fellow of the University of Bombay and Surgeon General with the Government of Bombay. In 1896 he returned to Britain, receiving a good-service pension, and was appointed honorary surgeon to the King. In 1870 he married Mary Oliver, daughter of George Oliver the Hawick solicitor, and she died in 1902. Their children were: Thomas (1871–72); Margaret Lindsay 'Meta' (b.1873) who married Maj. W.G. Cooper of the 34th Poona Horse; Mary (b.1874); Evelyn Jane (1875–76); George Oliver (b.1877), who served with the Indian Army; Nora Christian (1879–1974), married Rev. John Robert Paterson Sclater of New North Church, Edinburgh; Bruce (b.1880), Lieut. in the 23rd Sikh Pioneers; Hugh Stephenson (b.1882), who became a 2nd-Lieut. in the 57th Rifles; Percy Douglas (b.1886); and Dorothy Lillian (b.1887). He is named on the memorial tablet to the Turnbulls of Bedrule in Bedrule Kirk, which his 4 surviving children had put up in 1955. He is buried in Grange Cemetery in Edinburgh. Many of his letters are incorporated into the book 'Turnbull: lives and letters' (c.1994). Philip (15th C.) son and heir of Richard of Harden. He inherited the lands in 1448 through a charter by Henry Wardlaw, Baron of Wilton. He was probably succeeded by Walter, who resigned the lands to the Lady of the Barony in 1468. Philip (15th C.) son and heir of William of Whithope. He witnessed a charter for 'Irelandis landis' in the Barony of Wilton in 1454. Probably the same Philip witnessed a document in 1455 attesting that John of St. Michael inherited the lands of Whitchesters from his father. A charter of 1456 from William Douglas of Drumlanrig grants him the lands of Whithope in the Barony of Hawick. He may have been related to the neighbouring contemporary Philip (at Harden). Philip of Whithope (15th/16th C.) member of the panel for James Douglas of Drumlanrig inheriting the Barony of Hawick in 1484. In 1488 he was one of the bailies appointed by Sir Thomas Turnbull for the precept leasing Greenwood and Lyne to Robert Scott. In 1494/5 Thomas, Junior, Laird of Bedrule, served as surety for his son John (unless there was another contemporary Philip). He also served as surety for his brother, Stephen, who had raided the lands of John and Ninian Murray at Kershope. He was probably the Laird of Whithope 'in Ernheuch' who was surety for David Craik in 1494/5, who had remission for pillaging from Harthern. In 1500 he had 4 oxen taken from him, appraised and then given to Walter Scott of Branxholme, assignee for the Murrays; since no other goods could be found, he also lost his lands of Whithope to Scott of Branxholme. In 1500 he was witness to the instrument of sasine for Walter Scott of Branxholme inheriting lands from his grandfather. Probably the same Philip is described as 'in Quhithop' in 1502 when he and David in Carlinpool had remission for bringing in the 'Traitors of Levin' to raid the farms of Fastheugh and Hangingshaw; their sureties were John in Dryden and Alexander in Commonside. He was surely related to David, son of the Laird of Whithope recorded in 1494/5, may have been his son. It also seems likely he was related to the earlier Philip of Harden. Philip (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 among the men who were put to the horn in for involvement in the murder of Robert Oliver. The person called to enter him was Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst, who was fined for his non-appearance. It is unclear how he might have been related to other Turnbulls. Ralph (d.bef. 1526) recorded in a document of 1526 in the Selkirk Protocol Books. He held part of the lands of Philiphaugh. A third of those lands had been held by Janet Turnbull (perhaps related, or perhaps a first wife) and were in 1526 gained by his widow Margaret Ker. The attorney acting for his wife was Mark Ker (who was probably his brother-in-law). He was probably a descendant of Adam of Philiphaugh. In 1535 Robert declared that he (Ralph) was never given sasine of 10 shillings of rent on a tenement of William in Selkirk (all 3 men possibly related). Also in 1535 he was 'deceased lord of the said lands of Philhop' (Philiphaugh is probably meant) when Mark Ker of Kippielaw and Robert Turnbull agreed to each hold half of these lands until his son and heir John came of age. Chaplain Mark was one of the witnesses and may also have been related. His wife was Margaret, sister of Mark Ker of Kippielaw. He was succeeded by his son John (who may have been son of Janet Turnbull), who was a minor (with tutors Robert and Mar Ker of Kippielaw). Richard of Harden (15th C.) recorded in 1431 when he was among a number of witnesses who attested to being at the transfer of the lands of Heap between James Langlands of that Ilk and Walter Scott of Buccleuch; John and David are also listed beside him (although with no designation) and so may be related. He was possibly dead by 1448 when his son Philip inherited the lands of Harden in the Barony of Wilton. This family is probably related to the Turnbulls of Whithope. He may be the same Richard who was listed on a 'retour of inquest' made in Hawick in 1424 for lands in Hownam. He may be the Richard, 'doncel', from Glasgow Diocese, who in 1408 had Papal permission to marry Alice, widow of Sir Robert Scott; they were already living together and needed dispensation to marry since they were 'related in the second degree of affinity'. Richard (15th C.) listed in 1463/4 among the local men who were rewarded by the King for assisting in the capture of John Douglas of Balveny. He is surely related to other Turnbulls who were named (Andrew, Stephen and John) and may be the same as Richard of Harden. He is recorded as 'Ricardus Turnebule'. Richard (15th/16th C.) tenant in Overchester, listed among several Turnbulls who had remission in 1516 for assisting the Homes against the King. Several other men are also listed there, and so probably related. Richard (16th C.) listed along with Hector of Clarilaw (so presumably his son or brother), in a pledge made by James Gledstains of that Ilk in 1594/5, that they would not harm Gavin Eliott of Stobs or William Elliot of Horsleyhill. Richard (17th C.) resident at Hassendeanbank according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He was probably related to William, who was also listed there. He is probably the Richard who witnessed a baptism for William (probably a relative) and Christian Oliver in Roberton Parish in 1688. He may be the Richard whose son William was in Minto in 1718 when he got married. Richard (17th/18th C.) wright in Hawick. In 1714 he witnessed a baptism for tenant William Sanderson and in 1722 another for merchant Francis Scott. He is recorded in 1722 when he was paid for a joist for the steeple in St. Mary's Kirk. Along with Robert Boyd, he witnessed baptisms for Robert Thorburn and William Grieve (in Fenwick) in 1733. He married Janet Porteous in Hawick in 1714 and their children included: William (b.1716); Mary (b.1717); Janet (b.1719); Mary (again, b.1721); John (b.1723); Janet (again, b.1726); and Robert (b.1729). The witnesses in 1717 were baker William Hodge and merchant William Tudhope, in 1723 were merchants Adam Elliot and William Tudhope and in 1726 were William 'Thowdup' and John Scott. Richard (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at Midshiels in 1729 and surely related to Robert, who was there at the same time. He married Helen Turnbull in 1726, the marriage being proclaimed in both Wilton and Minto Parishes. Their children included Robert (b.1729), with witnesses James Thomson and William Turnbull. He is probably the Richard who witnessed a baptism in Wilton in 1729 for George Scott, resident at Wester Burnfoot, and another in 1741 for Andrew Smail. Richard (b.1770s) wright at Stirches. He is recorded in 1797 on the list of men on the ballot to serve in the Militia. William was also listed as a wright there and was surely related. In 1799 he was still at Stirches among those 'In the Ballot Box 1797 not drawn residing in Wilton parish' and he was still a wright at Stirches on the 1801 Militia ballot. Sir Richard of Ferniehirst (1908–98), G.C.M.G., career diplomat, son of Richard Francis, who was originally from the Borders. He was educated in London, taking a degree in physical chemistry. He joined the colonial administrative service and was posted to Kenya in 1931. He was Governor of Tanganyika during its hand-over and later Governor of Aden. He married Beatrice Gunn Wilson (1908–86) and they had twin children Alison and Julian, as well as another son. He was known as a wit and raconteur, as well as being an enthusiastic walker and cyclist. He is supposed to have remarked to Denis Healey, then Defense Secretary, that the British Empire would be remembered for only 2 things: 'the popularization of Association Football and the term 'f...off''. He was an Honorary Fellow of University College London and Magdalene College Cambridge. In 1979 he moved to the Borders, settling near Jedburgh. He and his wife are buried in Bedrule churchyard. Robert (15th C.) Presbyter of the Diocese of Glasgow. In 1431 he was the notary for the 'letter of transumpt' for the 1420 charter of half the lands of Branxholme being granted to Robert Scott of Rankilburn. This letter was made in the church of Cavers. Hence he was probably a local church official. Robert (15th C.) Rector of Lilliesleaf from about 1460. In 1440 the Pope revoked the gift to the Bishop of Glasgow and attached the advowson to the Holy See. It was later given to him, and he resigned it back to the Pope in 1480. Robert (15th C.) Abbot of Jedburgh 1476–78. In 1478 he is recorded as witness to a charter granting David Scott rights in Selkirk. Also in 1478 he was involved in a case registered with Parliament involving 'mails' on Stewartfield, belonging to the Stewarts. It is unclear how he was related to other Turnbulls. Robert of Hoscote (15th C.) resigned the lands of Hoscote into the hands of their superior, William Lord Borthwick in 1493/4. They were then conferred upon Alexander, Master of Home. He is referred to as being of 'Thoscot'. It is unclear how long these lands in the Borthwick valley belonged to his family. Robert of Broadlee (15th C.) resigned his lands of 'Bradelee' in the Barony of Hawick into the hands of the superior, William Douglas of Drumlanrig in 1479. Presumably this was to have these lands regranted. Either the same Robert, or perhaps his son is recorded in 1498 as being 'of Bradle' when he had remission, along with Alexander and John, son of Robert, for communing with Englishmen. He may also be the 'Rob turnbull in braidle' recorded in 1503 listed among men who were fined (in his case 6 cows) for failing to attend the Justice-aire in Jedburgh, with Sandy and Sym also listed in the same place (and hence probably related). Robert (15th C.) listed in 1482/3 among some Borderers who were captured by Patrick Dickson, Bailie of Peebles. The others were several Elliots and Robert Dalgleish. He may be the same as one of the Roberts who was later declared to be a rebel. Robert (15th C.) recorded in 1493 being 'in Wowlee', i.e. resident of Wolfelee. He was fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. The previous entry was for Alexander, also in Wolfelee and a later entry was for his son John. Robert (15th C.) recorded being 'in laris' at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1493. His lands may have been Lairhope above Falnash. He was allowed to 'compone' for the crimes of: stealing livestock from Blackhope in Eddleston Parish; stealing 2 cows from Shieldgreen; stealing 4 cows from Matthew Gotterson in the Forest of Lauder; and common theft. His surety was George, Master of Angus. In 1494/5 he had remission for stealing a horse, a dagger and other items from John Smith, with surety being John Murray 'in the Forest'; he was again described as being 'in laris'. Robert (15th C.) resident of Wells. He is listed at the 1493 Justice-aire in Jedburgh when William Douglas of Cavers was fined for his non-appearance. He was again cited for non-appearance in 1494/5. Robert of Mudlaw (15th C.) possibly son of Sir Thomas of Phaup. He is mentioned in the royal pardon for Sir Thomas in 1494/5, whose crimes involved receiving stolen sheep from him and other men, namely John 'de Newhalburn', Thomas Newton and Alex Gray; either he or John appear to have been son of Sir Thomas (but the Latin in ambiguous). He is also recorded in the Justice-aire held in Selkirk in 1494/5 when he was fined for failure to appear (with Thomas of Phaup listed just after him). His lands were probably near where Moodlaw Loch is, on the boundary between Selkirkshire and Dumfriesshire. He is probably also the Robert listed along with Alexander in 1494/5 when Edward Dunn in Phaup had remission for stealing more than 100 sheep from them, from the Waters of Yarrow and Tweed; Thomas in Phaup was surety for Dunn. Robert (15th C.) recorded as brother to the Laird of Bedrule in 1494/5. Thomas Turnbull, 'Junior' Laird of Bedrule served as his surety; it is unclear if this means he was brother of Thomas or uncle of Thomas (i.e. brother of George, the elder Laird). Robert (15th C.) recorded at the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh in 1494/5. He was tenant 'in le castel hil de branxame', i.e. Castlehill near Branxholme. He 'came in the King's will' for stealing 15 score sheep from the Murrays in Sundhope, with his surety being Lord Home. Robert (15th C.) recorded in 1494/5 when Walter Rutherford was allowed to 'compone' for several crimes, including stealing from him. The theft was of 14 sheep from 'sowdane braa' (presumably Souden Brae). Robert (15th/16th C.) listed in the Exchequer Rolls in 1501, along with Adam and David, when they were fined, with George Douglas, Master of Angus, responsible for their pledges. In 1502 he was procurator for Archibald Douglas, 5th Earl of Angus, when he resigned the Lordship of Eskdale into the hands of the King. He is probably the same as one of the contemporary Roberts. Robert (15th/16th C.) listed in the 1501 Exchequer Rolls, along with 2 Johns, Ninian, George and David. Their £40 fine was granted to Thomas, son and heir of George of Bedrule. Robert (15th/16th C.) recorded being 'de bonechester' at the 1494/5 Justice-aire held in Jedburgh. He was surety for himself and fined for not appearing. Probably the same Robert was also recorded as tenant in Bonchester in 1501 among 10 men, mostly Turnbulls, whose fines were remitted. In 1502 he was surety for himself at the Justice-aire; he was fined for non-appearance, denounced as a fugitive and had his goods escheated. He was recorded as 'Robin in bonechester' in 1503 when his son Crystal was charged for not attending the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. It is unclear how he might have been related to other Turnbulls from Bonchester. Robert 'Muriale' (15th/16th C.) described as one of the King's rebels and already 'at the horn' in 1502 when George Turnbull in Tofts was allowed to pay a fine for associating with him. They had burned Riddell, as well as stealing 480 sheep, 2 cows and sundry goods. On the same raid they killed a black mare belonging to Robert Scott. Robert (15th/16th C.) tenant in 'blindhalch', which is probably Blindhaugh near Ashkirk. In 1502 he was surety for Walter Wilson, in the same place, and fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. Additionally, in 1502 he was surety for Robert Rutherford in Todlaw, who had been charged with stealing from Jedburgh Kirk, as well as for another case where Rutherford had stolen livestock from several men in Jedburgh and Maxton. Robert (15th/16th C.) witness to a charter for Alexander, Lord Home, signed in Edinburgh in 1506. He may be the same as one of the other Roberts. Robert (15th/16th C.) listed in the Exchequer Rolls for Ettrick Ward in 1507, when he had an obligation for a payment. He may be the same Robert who was aid for a silver cup in 1513 in association with Yarrow. Robert (15th/16th C.) recorded along with John as witness to a document relating to the lands of Allanshaws (in Lauderdale) and Melrose Abbey. Robert (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1507 as a rebel, along with Simon, when several Dalgleishes (tenants of Braidhaugh) were given remission for associating with them. He was probably from somewhere in the Rule valley. His name is written 'Roberto Turnebule'. Robert (15th/16th C.) feued the east steading of 'Warmwood', also called Langcleuchhead in Ettrick in 1510. Either the same Robert or a descendant was tenant in 1541 of the Crown lands of 'Est Syde of Warmwod, alias Huitralburn' in Ettrick. Robert (15th/16th C.) tenant in Hassendeanbank, listed on the 1516 pardon for Turnbulls and others who may have assisted Alexander, Lord Home. David is also listed as tenant at Hassendeanbank. Robert (15th/16th C.) tenant in Hallrule who was listed among the many Turnbulls given remission in 1516 for assisting the traitorous Homes; William and Thomas were also listed there as tenants of Hallrule, and so may have been related. Probably the same man was also listed among the Borderers who were pardoned in 1526 for their role in marching against the Earl of Arran. Also on the list are his 'brethir sonnis' (i.e. nephews) David and George. He was also among the local lairds who had remission in 1527 for their part in the Battle of Skirmish Field and at Linlithgow. He was thus presumably a supporter of Scott of Branxholme. Robert of Howden (15th/16th C.) recorded in Selkirk in 1527 when he renounced his claims of wardship, relief and marriage against James, his cousin in Philiphaugh. This was done in the house of William (who was probably related). In 1528 he quitclaimed a piece of land in Selkirk called Ladylands and also witnessed documents. He was also recorded in documents in 1528/9 and 1531. He was probably the Robert 'tutor of Holdene' who witnessed a transaction between John Scott in Myres and Walter Scott, tutor of Howden. In 1534 he demitted his lands of Howden to George and John Murray. In 1535 he was 'tutor of Holdene' when he witnessed a document in Selkirk for Walter Scott of Roberton. Probably the same Robert is recorded in 1536 when he sold parts of Ladylands in Selkirk to James Crawford, to James Minto and to Thomas Forest. He may be the Robert who witnessed a marriage contract for Walter, son of Robert Scott in Howford in 1539. Robert of Philiphaugh (16th C.) recorded in 1530 as 'superior lord of Phillophauch' when he assigned half of Ladylands to Thomas Forest. He was listed in 1530 as 'Tutour of Philiphauche' when he was one of the Border Lairds who submitted themselves to James V to keep the rievers under better control. In 1531 he was still 'tutor' there when Mark Ker gave up any claims to Philiphaugh in his favour. In 1531 he is probably the Robert who formally acknowledged to his grandson John, 'tutor of the lord of Phillophaucht', that a tack had been given to Mark Ker (Burgess of Selkirk) for 5 years for lands in Philiphaugh. In 1531/2 he was part of an inquest to rule on a land arrangement in Selkirk. In 1532/3 he was superior of lands in 'the Ladyland' in Selkirk that he resigned to James Crawford and Christian Turnbull. He could have been married to Janet and father of John, who was served heir to his mother's lands of Philiphaugh in 1558. He may be the

Robert recorded in 1526/7 (in the Selkirk Protocol Books) attesting to a royal letter that he should be in possession of the rents previously held by Janet Hunter, widow of Thomas Turnbull, who lived at Coldingham. He may also have witnessed a baptism in Selkirk in 1527. He could be Robert complaining in 1535 that Ralph was never given sasine of 10 shillings rent for a tenement in Selkirk belonging to William. He is probably the Robert recorded in 1535 when he and Mark Ker of Kippielaw agreed to each hold half of the lands of 'Philhop' (although Philiphaugh is surely meant) until their ward John (son and heir of the deceased Ralph) came into entry of the lands; in 1536 he yielded up his half of the wardship. Robert (16th C.) Burgess of Selkirk. He witnessed a transaction there in 1532/3 and was probably distinct from the tutor of Philiphaugh. Robert (16th C.) witness in 1531 to a Lorraine sasine for Harwood and Hawthornside. Other witnesses were Patrick (possibly a relative) and 2 Lorraines. He could be the same as Robert in Hallrule. Robert (16th C.) recorded in Hutlerburn when he witnessed an agreement in Selkirk for John Scott being responsible for the death of Walter Down in 1540/1. He witnessed another transaction in Selkirk for Alexander Scott in 1541/2, Robert (16th C.) recorded as 'incola' (i.e. resident) in 1563 when he was witness to the transfer of Spittal-on-Rule from Douglas of Cavers to Ker of Primside. Robert 'Feeble Hob' (16th C.) denounced as a rebel in 1537 for stealing from Sir Walter Ogilvie of 'Dunlugus' at 'Colbrandispethe'. It is unclear how he was related to other Turnbulls. His nickname is listed as 'Febill Hob'. Robert (16th C.) brother of the Laird of Bedrule, recorded in the Selkirk Protocol Books in 1553. His brother was presumably Sir Thomas of Bedrule and hence he was a younger son of George of Bedrule. He claimed on behalf of Chaplain William Todd, possessor of the lands of 'Fentoun' that Andrew Ker of Faldonside was wrongfully keeping his cows on the land. Robert (16th C.) probably farmer at Hobsburn. 'Robert Turnbullis hous callit the auld hous and yaird thairof' are listed among the disputed lands in the 1562 Baronial dispute in Feu-Rule. His rig lay at the 'schadow', i.e. west side of the lands, adjacent to Hawthornside Wood, and were assigned to Agnes Herries as superior. He may have been father of Walter, who is recorded as Laird there in 1568 and 1574. Robert (16th C.) tenant in 'Siron Shiell', i.e. Swanshiel, recorded in 1567 among men charged to appear before the Regent Moray. He was also listed in 1567 among men who Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst was ordered to present him to answer changes of raiding into England. Robert 'Isobel's Robin' (16th C.) recorded in 1567, along with Hector 'in Turnbull' (which seems likely to be a transcription error), brother to George, as well as Adam, son to Sandy Turnbull, 'Part Pursell' and 2 Olivers. David Home of Wedderburn was instructed to enter them to answer charges of raiding into England. Robert 'Hob' (16th C.) listed in 1579 among a group of Turnbulls accused of stealing cattle from the Laird of 'Pansoun'. Robert (16th C.) recorded in Wauchope in 1581 when he witnessed a transaction in Selkirk for Kers. Robert of Bewlie (d.1601) son of Walter, he was among the Turnbulls who were accused of harassing the widow and children of the murdered Walter Turnbull of Rawflat in 1581. His brothers William, Mark and Andrew were also involved. In 1588/9 John of Minto was cautioner for his father Wat of Bewlie, not to harm his tenants and servants; presumably there was some kind of dispute between father and son. In 1595 he was recorded along with his father Walter and brothers Andrew and Hector, among Turnbulls and Davidsons, when John Ker of Barnhills complained they had harassed his tenants in Barnhills; most were declared as rebels for non-appearance. He was murdered in Jedburgh at the same time as John Middlemas (from Lilliesleaf), as well as 'Henry Davidsoun of Combes' and others were mutilated. There was a remission for Sir Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst (Provost of Jedburgh), Sir James Kerr of Crailing and George Moscrop, for these and other crimes, with many other Kerrs, Ainslies, Robsons and Rutherfords implicated. This was the result of some ongoing feud between the Turnbulls of the Minto area and the Kers of Jedburgh; a gang of about 30 Turnbulls entered Jedburgh on Fair Day seeking Thomas Ker, brother of the Provost. They eventually killed him and his servant, with John Middlemas also being killed, and many other men being wounded. Several Turnbulls were late convicted and hanged for their involvement, including his brother Andrew. His brother William was appointed tutor for his son Andrew in 1603 and Andrew was served as his heir in 1607. Robert (d.c.1605) tenant in Hallrule and 'tutor' of Barhills. He was brother of William in Barnhills, Gavin in Howa and Hector in Stanedge. He is probably the Robert, brother of William of Barnhills (as well as Gavin and Hector) who was listed in 1584/5 among Borderers summoned to appear before the Privy Council. He was recorded in 1586 as 'called the tutor of Barnhills' when he was among Turnbulls and Douglases declared as rebels for the murder of 6 Grahamslaws of Newton. His brothers Hector and Gavin were also on the same list. Presumably he was at one point a 'tutor' for a Turnbull of Barnhills who was a minor, perhaps Hector, who could have been his nephew. Probably the same Robert 'of the Barnhill' was among men complained about in 1590 by the English Warden for a raid into England. In 1592 he was listed as 'Robert Trumbill, sometime tutor of Barnhills' among a large number of men in a summons of treason. The list was started with Dame Margaret Douglas, Countess of Bothwell, and Francis Stewart, sometime Earl of Bothwell (and presumably the rest were their supporters). He is probably the 'Robert Trumble of Barnehill' recorded in 1601, along with James Douglas of Cavers and William Douglas of Whitriggs, when Henry Woodrington accused them of stealing his cattle. In 1606 the Bailies of Hawick apprehended William and George Grahamslaw for his murder. They were sons of Adam Grahamslaw of Little Newton, and were transferred to the Edinburgh Tolbooth. His widow, children and brothers were accused of trying to ruin the 2 accused, rather than prosecute them. The summons mentions his widow Grizel, as well as his brothers Gavin and Hector, and his eldest son Robert. Robert (16th/17th C.) possibly brother of Sir Thomas of Bedrule. He is probably the Robert 'son of the Laird of Beddroule' who was among Turnbulls and others charged to appear before the Privy Council in 1584/5. He may be the 'Robert Turnbule, called Hob of Bedroule' who was recorded in 1599 as 'depute and clerk' to James Douglas of Cavers; the pair were denounced as rebels for failing to turn over the taxes that they had collected. He may also be the clerk of the Sheriff of Roxburghshire who was complained about in 1599 for refusing to register the letters of horning against Thomas Ker of Cavers. This Robert took over as Sheriff Clerk of Roxburghshire after the death of George Douglas, as recorded in the Ker-Turnbull feud case of 1601. He was depute to the James Douglas of Cavers in 1600 when they were charged to appear before the Privy Council and was Sheriff Depute in 1600 for the 'retour' for the Kers of Cessford. In 1601 there were further complaints against him, as Sheriff Clerk of Roxburghshire, that he had failed to register some letters of horning against Walter Scott of Goldielands and Sir Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst; he was denounced as a rebel for not appearing. In 1614 he was witness to the marriage of the daughter of Patrick of Templehall, probably his nephew. Also that year he was probably the Robert in Bedrule who had a bond with Joseph Tennant, minister of Bedrule. And in 1618 he was witness to a bond between Walter of Bedrule and George Rutherford, younger in Abbotrule. However, some of these entries could be for Sir Thomas' son Robert (his nephew), with whom he is easily confused. It is probably his son John who is listed in 1578/9 as 'broder sone to the said Sir Thomas'. Robert (16th/17th C.) eldest son of Robert in Hallrule, with his mother being Grizel. He is recorded in a summons of 1606, in which the family are directed to prosecute the men accused of murdering his father within 15 days, or else they would be released from the Edinburgh Tolbooth. Robert (d.1611) son of David in Mackside. He was convicted and educated in Jedburgh in 1611. Robert (16th/17th C.) tenant in Denesyde. In 1611 he acted as cautioner for the appearance of his brother David in court in Jedburgh. Robert (16th/17th C.) resident of Fulton recorded in 1619 when a group of Turnbulls and others were accused of cutting down wood at Huntliehill. He is listed after Walter and Walter's son Thomas, but before Mungo and Robert 'Fendie', all being in Fulton. Robert 'Fendie' (16th/17th C.) resident of Fulton who in 1619 is 'callit Fendie'. He was listed among Turnbulls of Bedrule and Fulton who were declared rebels for removing timber from their former lands of Huntliehill, then owned by Stewart of Traquair. He may have been related to Walter, Thomas and Mungo, who were also in Fulton. Robert (16th/17th C.) son of Sir Thomas of Bedrule and brother of Walter of Bedrule. In 1586 he was among a list of Turnbulls and Douglases who were declared as rebels for their part in the murder of 6 men called Grahamslaw. In 1592 he is recorded assisting his brother John (at the instigation of their brother Walter of Bedrule) in attacking a servant of James Stewart of Wells in ploughing the fields at Wells; he was denounced as a rebel for not appearing. In 1618 he witnessed a bond of his brother Walter. In 1619 he was 'brother german to Walter Turnble of Badreule' when listed among a group of Turnbulls and others accused of removing hay from Huntliehill; he was one of the few men to appear at the court, and hence was not denounced as a rebel. He was witness to a bond of 1620 between Thomas Turnbull 'in Rowllspittle' (probably his brother) with Robert Pringle (probably later of Stichell). Also in 1620 he was probably the Robert called 'of Bedroull' whose son Thomas had a bond with Sir Walter Scott of Whitslade. He married Margaret Erskine and their children included John and Thomas. He is difficult to distinguish from his uncle Robert, who lived at a similar time. He is probably the Robert 'son of the Laird of Beddroule' who was listed among the Borderers summoned to appear before the Privy Council in 1584/5. Robert (17th C.) tenant farmer at Templehall in Rulewater, recorded in a contract of 'wadset' of 1647 and another of 1642, and witness to a sasine of 1654. He was also named in a disposition of 1652. His brother was Thomas, tenant at Harwood. And he must have been related to George and to James. He could be the Robert in 'Rouletoun' recorded in 1643, with his lands being valued at £104, and Thomas also listed there. Robert (17th C.) tenant of Unthank in Hobkirk Parish, along with David, recorded in 1643. Their lands were valued at £66 13s 4d. Robert (d.c.1662) tenant in Swanshiel. His daughter 'Mariota' (probably Marion) was served as his heir in 1662. Robert (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Scott and their children included Andrew (b.1643), Michael (b.1645) and Robert (b.1648). He could be the father of weaver Michael (recorded from the 1670s until the 1710s), who also had brothers Robert and William, as well as a sister. Robert (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Leyden and their daughter Isobel was baptised in 1654. The witnesses were John Scott and Walter Purdom. Robert (17th C.) son of John of Minto. His father was already deceased in 1651 when he became an apprentice merchant with John Mowbray in Edinburgh. Robert (d.c.1682) listed in Hawthornside when his will was recorded in 1682. He was surely related to William, whose will was also recorded on the same day, as well as Adam who was recorded there in 1688. Robert (d.c.1682) tenant in 'Horslie' when his will was recorded in 1682. These are probably the lands in the Slitrig valley. Robert (17th C.) resident of Roberton Parish, probably the part that was Hassendean. He married Agnes Renwick and their children included Agnes (b.1689). He could be the Robert who witnessed a baptism for Robert Scott in Roberton in 1681, another for William in 1686, one for William Scott and Bessie (who may have been related) in 1687, one for George Hood in 1687 and one for John Renwick in Horsleyhill in 1688. Robert (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Rosie Oliver and their children included: Janet (b.1681); Robert (b.1683); and Walter (b.1685). The witnesses in 1683 were William Paisley and Walter Oliver (who was probably related to his wife). Robert (17th C.) recorded being 'in Repertslaw' in a 1684 list of Roxburghshire men declared as fugitives for refusing to conform to Episcopalianism; this was probably Raperlaw. His name is given in another version of the record as 'Thomas'. Robert (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. Robert (17th C.) resident of Orchard on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Robert (17th C.) resident of Birkhill in Hobkirk Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He may have been related to Walter, who was tenant there. Robert (17th C.) tenant in Bonchester according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Robert (17th C.) resident at Chapelhill according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Robert (17th C.) resident at Cockerheugh on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls for Hassendean Parish. He may have been son of Thomas, who was at Cockerheugh about a gerneration earlier. Robert (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Helen Rathie and their children included: Isabel (b.1688); Jean (b.1691); and Helen (b.1694). His wife's name is 'Margaret' in 1691, when the witnesses were William Easton and James Veitch. The witnesses in 1694 were James and William Dunlop (who lived at Birkwood). Robert (17th/18th C.) weaver in Hawick. He was listed among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He may be the same Robert listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick 'eist the water' in 1694. In 1712 he appears to have been the first person to be allowed to plan for the erection of a 'through-stone' over his grave in St. Mary's Kirkyard. This followed the reading of an Act of 1708. He was allowed permission, but asked to contribute to the poor box. He may be the same weaver who was recorded in a sasine of 1687 disponing a West End tenement to his wife Helen Paisley, and whose daughter Isobel was born in 1688 (with witnesses Robert Allan and Michael Turnbull). He may be the weaver Robert who witnessed a baptisms for shoemaker Robert Paisley in 1700. Robert (17th/18th C.) cooper in Hawick, brother of Michael and John. In 1678 all 3 brothers were involved in a case before the Bailies. In 1708 he is described as 'couper' when he witnessed a baptism for weaver Robert Turnbull, younger. In 1709 and 1712

he and Michael witnessed baptisms for cooper John (probably all 3 were brothers). Robert (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was recorded as tenant in Appletreehall in 1711 when his son James was baptised. He could be the same as one of the other Roberts. Robert (17th/18th C.) recorded in 'Falsecastle' (presumably Fastcastle) in 1718 when his daughter Margaret was baptised in Cavers Parish. Robert (17th/18th C.) tenant in Whitlaw. He married Janet Donaldson in 1710. Their children included: John (b.1713); Robert (b.1719); James (b.1722); and Janet (b.1725). The 1725 baptism was witnessed by Archibald Paterson and James Johnstone. Robert (17th/18th C.) weaver in Hawick. He is probably the 'younger weaver in ye Howgate bewest ye water in Hawick' recorded in a baptismal record of 1708, and hence son of the older Robert; the child was called William, and the witnesses were cooper Robert Turnbull and Andrew Riddell, tenant in Goldielands. He is probably the weaver Robert who witnessed a baptism for shoemaker Robert Porteous in 1713. He may also be the Robert who witnessed a baptism for weaver David Reid in 1713 and another in 1716 for an illegitimate child of Walter Scott, brother of the Laird of Whitslade. He was also 'younger weaver in Hawick' in 1716. In 1717 he witnessed a baptism for shoemaker Robert Elliot. He may be the weaver who witnessed a baptism for butcher Robert Hardie in 1723. He married Margaret Elliot (perhaps the Margaret, daughter of William Elliot, who married a Robert in Hawick in 1707). Their children included: William (b.1708); Helen (b.1710); Agnes (b.1712); Robert (b.1714); Margaret (b.1716); Janet (b.1718); Walter (b.1721); Mary (b.1723); Isobel (b.1725); and Michael (b.1727). The witnesses in 1712 were weavers Robert Tinlin and William Swan, in 1716 were Bailie Robert Ruecastle and shoemaker Robert Elliot, and in 1725 were carrier James Simpson and tailor Thomas Wilkie. Robert (17th/18th C.) tenant in 'Woollee Miln', i.e. Wolfelee Mill. His wife Elizabeth Lillie died in 1719. His gravestone appeared to say that he died in 1622, but this must be an error. According to Tancred his children included: Isabel (b.1718); Janet (b.1719); Thomas; and William. He may be confused with the Robert who was miller at Woollee Mill 3 decades later. Robert (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at Midshiels in 1729 and surely related to Richard, who was there at the same time. In 1737 he witnessed a baptism for Andrew Stewart, resident of Midshiels. He married Elspeth Douglas and their children included Margaret (b.1729) and John (b.1738). The witnesses in 1729 were Andrew Stewart and William Douglas (who was surely related to his wife). Robert (18th C.) smith in Hawick Parish. He married Christian Turnbull and their children included James (b.1726) and Isabel (b.1730). The witnesses in 1726 were masons John and Andrew Turnbull. Robert (18th C.) Hawick resident who married Isobel Kedie. Their children included: John (b.1737); Janet (b.1738); Isobel (b.1740); and Thomas (b.1741). Robert (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living at Cavers itself in 1722 when his son William was baptised and in 1730 when his daughter Euphan was baptised. There are several other children, baptised in Cavers, who could be his. Robert (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Margaret Nichol and their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1726. Robert (18th C.) gardener in the Hawick area. He could be the gardener recorded at Whitriggs in 1727 when his son William was baptised in Cavers Parish. In 1733 and 1736 he was living at Midshiels. In 1742 he witnessed a baptism (along with James Douglas) for merchant Robert Taylor and Margaret Douglas (probably related to his wife). His wife was Euphan Douglas and their children included: Margaret (b.1729) Janet (b.1731), Helen (b.1733) and Charles (b.1736), baptised in Wilton; and Robert (b.1743) and and George (b.1745), baptised in Hawick. The witnesses in 1733 were James Dryden and Andrew Douglas (perhaps related to his wife), in 1736 were John and James Dryden and in 1743 were merchants Robert Taylor and James Douglas (who was probably related to his wife). Robert (18th C.) weaver in Hawick. He married Janet Kersel and their children included: Adam (b.1760); John (b.1762); Isabel (b.1765); and James (b.1768). The baptism in 1768 was witnessed by the 'whole congregation'. Probably the same weaver Robert witnessed a baptism in 1761 and another in 1766 for James Taylor. He was already deceased in 1803 when his wife died. Robert of Standhill (18th C.) recorded as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1761. He may be the 'Captain Turnbull Standhill' listed in the Window Tax Rolls for Ancrum Parish in 1748 and whose lands were valued at £120 in the 1740s. In 1737 his daughter Ann became the 2nd wife of Andrew Bennet of Chesters. It is unclear how he was related to other Turnbulls of Standhill. Robert (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Margaret Riddell and their children
