also died young; Jessie Lindsay (b.1862); Jane Fisher (b.1864), who married W.F. Duncan; another William (b.1866), who spent many years in Australia and later farmed in California; George Gray, a fruit grower in California; Mary, who married G.A. Hillman of Chino, California; Thomas; Daniel, a chemist in Basingstoke; and Catherine, who married chemist W.B. Rawlinson. He was healthy to the end, walking from his house at Galabrae into town until about a year before his death. He is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. Peter (19th C.) resident of Wilton. He married Rachel Scott in 1862 and their children included: Helen (b.1863); Hannah (b.1865); Sarah (b.1867); Thomas (b.1869); Robert (b.1871); and Sarah (again, b.1874). Richard (19th/20th C.) served as a Bailie and also as Justice of the Peace in Roxburghshire. He also wrote articles for the Archæological Society Transactions. In 1893 he was living at Wilton Lodge. Robert (15th/16th C.) recorded being ‘in knowis edzartoun’ in 1502. He was presumably tenant in part of Edgerton. He served as surety for his brother Walter (alias ‘Rutherford’), as well as for himself, and was fined for non-appearance. Robert (16th C.) tenant in Falside in 1541. His part of the farm was valued at 25s. He was probably related to Alexander, who was also tenant there. Robert (17th C.) recorded as tenant in Whiteside in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. Robert (17th C.) recorded as one of the tenants in Falside in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. He was probably related to James, who was also listed as a tenant there. Robert (17th C.) recorded in a rental roll of 1669 along with Adam Oliver. It is unclear where they were tenants, but perhaps Northbank or Slack. Robert (17th C.) listed in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. It is ambiguous where he was a tenant, but he is listed right after John in Wadeshill and before Robert in Southdean Law. He could be the tenant of Wadeshill who is recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. Robert (17th C.) listed as tenant in Southdean Law in the 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. Robert (17th C.) tenant in Roughlee according to the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. He is probably the same Robert recorded at Southdean Parish on the crossed out part of the rolls. Robert (17th C.) resident of Northbank according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. Robert (17th/18th C.) recorded in Haregrain in 1709 when his son James was baptised in Hawick Parish. The witnesses were Walter Grieve in Park and Walter Scott in Merrylaw. Perhaps the same Robert was herd in Commonside in 1714 when his unnamed child was baptised, with witnesses Thomas Hume ‘preacher’ and Walter Purdom. He is probably the Robert who witnessed a baptism for John Scott in Falnash in 1706. Robert (17th/18th C.) resident of Redfordgreen in 1711 and 1724. His children included Janet (b.1711) and Bessie (b.1724). Robert (17th/18th C.) resident of Elrig in 1711. His children included Andrew (b.1711). He must be distinct from the Robert in Redfordgreen, since the baptisms are just a month apart. Robert (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Thornyhaugh in 1741 when his son Thomas was baptised. Robert (b.1743), Walter (b.1745) and John (b.1747) were probably also his children. Robert (18th C.) farmer at Hyndlee in Hobkirk Parish in 1785-88, according to the Horse Tax Rolls. He was surely related to Thomas who was farmer there immediately afterwards. Robert (18th C.) tenant of Falnash from about the 1760s. In 1762 he witnessed a baptism in Hawick for James Nichol. He was a trustee for the creditors of Robert Shortreed of Easter Essenside in 1778. He was listed on the Horse Tax Rolls in the period 1785-97. In 1797 he was recorded having 3 work horses as well as 1 saddle horse. He also paid tax for 5 dogs in the Dog Tax Rolls in 1797. Around 1799 he was one of the local men who contributed money to help in the war against France. He may have been father of Elizabeth, who married William Elliot in Millburnholm. He may also have been father of Thomas, who moved from Falnash to take over the farm of Todshawhill in Eskdalemuir after the ‘Gonial Blast’ of 1795. He married Jane Shortreed and had children born in Cavers and Hawick Parishes: Elizabeth (b.1750); Mary (b.1752); Margaret (b.1753); Robert (b.1755); Jane (b.1759), who may have married Rev. William Hardie Moncrieff and died in 1821 at Falnash; Janet (b.1762); Thomas (b.1764); Janet (again, b.1765); William (b.1766); John (b.1769); Margaret (b.1771); and Cornelius (b.1772). The witnesses to the 1764 baptism were John Pott and George Pott of ‘Ridge’, while in 1766 they were Walter Scott senior (Commonside) and Robert Scott (Skelfhill). Robert (18th/19th C.) farmer at Gorrenberry, recorded on both the Horse Tax Rolls in 1792-97. He also paid the dog tax in 1797. He may be the Laidlaw at Gorrenberry whose daughter Jean married Henry Elliot of Bush. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1794 he married Janet Scott, who was from Cavers Parish. Robert (18th/19th
Laidlaw

C.) farmer at Fahash. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘ Beauties of the Border ’ in 1821 and Robert Wilson’s ‘ History of Hawick ’ in 1825. He may have been son of Thomas and grandson of the earlier Robert, tenant at Fahash. Robert (d.bef. 1809) wright at West Port. He was already deceased in 1809 when his wife Margaret Scott died. He married Margaret Scott in 1790. He was probably the Hawick mason who subscribed to Caw’s ‘ Poetical Museum ’ (1784). Robert (18th/19th C.) recorded at Harden in 1786 when his son Walter was baptised in Robertson Parish. He could be the Robert who married Margaret Grieve in Robertson in 1786. Robert (18th/19th C.) recorded in 1796 as ‘ Residenter in Denholm ’. He married Margaret Blyth and their children included Betty (b.1796) and Andrew (b.1798). Robert (18th/19th C.) tenant in Kingledoors. In 1788 (and also in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls) he is recorded as owner of the parts of Greenhouse in Lilliesleaf Parish that had previously been owned by Ralph Davidson and Andrew Davidson, valued together at £210 5s 6d. Robert (18th/19th C.) married Margaret Sibbald in Wilton Parish in 1803. Robert (18th/19th C.) carrier in Hawick. His son James died in 1819. He also had a child who died in 1838. He may be the Robert who married Anne Walker in Wilton in 1837. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Beatrice Michie and their children included: William (b.1815). Robert ‘ Auld London ’ or ‘ London Laidlaw ’ (1792–1787) son of William, the first of the family to come to Hawick, with his mother being Margaret Aitken. He rented the Moat and other fields and sold milk etc., at his house at 17 Loan. He acted as one of the witnesses called to London to give evidence about the conduct of some Hawick men at the election of 1837, and was given his nickname as a result. He is said to have told his friends on his return that during the boat trip there had ‘ only been a fir deal between him and eternity ’. His nickname was also pronounced ‘ Auld Lunan ’. He married Rachel Rae, who died in 1866, aged 71. Their children were: William (b.1815); Margaret (b.1820), who married Andrew Blyth; Rachel (b.1822); Janet (b.1825); Jane (b.1827); and Robert (b.1832), who was Cornet in 1852 and married Jessie Gow. He is probably the stockingmaker Robert whose infant son’s death is recorded in 1822 – ‘ Kinly Stick and Daavid Garland, London Laidlaw and Little Dan, Johnny the Gover (in a far land), And Wat the Drummer leads the van ’[HI]. Robert (b.1799) only son of Thomas, he was farmer at Nether Cassock, like his father. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘ History of Hawick ’ in 1825. He married Jean Beattie and his children included Mary and John. Robert (19th C.) married Ann Walker in Wilton in 1837. Robert (b.1820s) 4th son of Thomas. He became a small hosiery manufacturer in Glasgow, then in 1886 emigrated to New Zealand (although this may have been a generation later), Robert ‘ Robbie ’ (19th C.) appointed choir-master of Hawick Parish Church in the mid-19th century, being one of the first to hold such a position in Hawick. Robert (b.1825/6) butcher in Denholm. In Slater’s 1852 directory he was listed as a butcher and shopkeeper. In 1861 he was living with his mother Mary and sister Margaret, probably on Main Street. He may be the Robert who chaired the centenary Burns night in Denholm in 1859. Robert (1832/3–1908) son of Robert, he was a mason to trade, but later took over his father’s fields up the Loan. He was Cornet in 1852. He married Jessie Gow from Perthshire, who died in 1910, aged 48. Their children included James (who died aged 25 at Burnflat Cottage), John (who died in infancy), Robert (who died aged 17), Stewart (who died in infancy), another Robert (who died in infancy), Rachel, Eliza (who married Robert Oliver Pott, from Duns, woollen manufacturer in Honley, near Huddersfield), Walter and Agnes (who lived at Thongsbridge, near Huddersfield). Robert (19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Elizabeth Murray and their children included James (b.1863) and Janet (b.1866). Robert Grierson (1856/7–1933) son of Thomas, he helped run the family tweed manufacturing business along with his brother William. He was for a while President of the South of Scotland Chamber of Commerce. He was also Captain of the Golf Club. He lived at Hazelwood in the late 1800s. After the firm folded around 1908 he carried on as a commission agent, finally retiring only a few years before his death, and passing on that business to George Wilson & Sons. Sir Robert (1856–1915) 2nd son of William and Agnes Purdom, he was born at Bonchester. He was educated at Kirkton and Denholm schools, and served his apprenticeship with Wood, Graham & Co., drapers in Hawick. He then moved to work as a draper in London, leaving in 1875 for Cape Colony (i.e. South Africa), where he carried out business in Kimberley. In 1877 he sailed for Japan, but broke his journey in India. He moved to Calcutta, where he worked for 5 years. In 1881, along with Edward Whiteaway, he set up Whiteaway, Laidlaw & Co., which operated on a strictly cash basis (usual for businesses in India in those days), with the first premises in Chowringhee. The firm expanded from drapery into general goods, and soon there were department stores in about 20 major cities throughout India. In 1898 he became sole partner and the firm expanded into other Asian cities (including Shanghai and Singapore); it was often referred to as ‘the Selfridge’s of India’, at its height employed 2400 people, and remained in business until 1962. He also owned tea plantations in Darjeeling and rubber estates in the Federated Malay States, and was senior partner in a shipping firm. He joined the American Methodist Church in India and became involved in missionary work and Christian schools. In particular he supported the Calcutta Boy’s School, which opened in 1877, with a girls’ school following 9 years later. He spent 20 years in India before returning to Britain, settling in Chislehurst. He bought a new house there by Camden Park and named it ‘Bonchester’; the street that it is on was later called Bonchester Close. A Liberal, he became more interested in politics on his return to Britain, and was M.P. for West Renfrewshire 1906–10, with Winston Churchill being one of his political supporters. He was knighted in 1909, and became British Commissioner to the International Opium Commission in Shanghai. In 1909 he moved to ‘The Warren’ at Coney Hall, Hayes, and grew rhododendrons and azaleas there. A keen traveller, he was a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society. He was also President of the World’s Sunday School Association and an Executive of the National Temperance League. In 1912 he purchased the estate of Wolfelee from Edward Elliot, 6th Laird; in later life he was referred to as being ‘of Wolfelee’. In 1879 he married Mary, daughter of Capt. W. Blow Collins (unusual for businesses in India in those days), with the first premises in Chowringhee. The firm expanded from drapery into general goods, and soon there were department stores in about 20 major cities throughout India. In 1898 he became sole partner and the firm expanded into other Asian cities (including Shanghai and Singapore); it was often referred to as ‘the Selfridge’s of India’, at its height employed 2400 people, and remained in business until 1962. In 1912 he purchased the estate of Wolfelee from Edward Elliot, 6th Laird; in later life he was referred to as being ‘of Wolfelee’. In 1879 he married Mary, daughter of Capt. W. Blow Collins and widow of W.L. Francis of the India Office. He became step-father to the several children of his wife, and together they had children: William, who died in infancy; Ethel; Mildred (or Margaret); Dorothy; and 2 daughters who also died in infancy. He had the William Laidlaw Memorial Hall erected at Bonchester Bridge in memory of his son William, as well as his father, who was also William. He left some money in his will to support a school for poor children in South India, which is still known as the Laidlaw Memorial School, Ketti Nilgiris. He privately published ‘By the Way’, about a trip he took around the world.

Robert Henderson (1872–1953) writer of the words for ‘Auld Hawick My Dreams’ and ‘Teviotdale’, among other songs. He was son of stocking-maker Thomas and Robina Henderson and born at 6 Sltig Bank. He apprenticed as a printer in Hawick, but emigrated to America, working in Boston. On returning to Hawick he joined the Hawick Express and became foreman printer there. He contributed poems to the newspaper and also wrote the Betty Whutson’s Letter column for many years. He wrote an article on the Verter Well and associated poetry competition for the Archaeological Society. He was long connected with West Port Church, being Session Clerk there for 22 years, as well as Sunday School Superintendent. He was also a lay preacher himself and was a member of Lodge St. James 424. He married Agnes Anderson. He lived at 22 Beaconfield Terrace, where he died, and is buried in the Wellowgate Cemetery. Note that an older brother of the same name was born in 1863 and died in infancy, leading to some confusion over his own year of birth.

Simon (15th C.) listed as a witness on the 1432 sasine giving the Barony of Cavers and Sheriffdom of Roxburghshire to William Douglas. His name is recorded as ‘Symone Laidlaw’ and he may have been a ‘presbyter’, along with Thomas Falconer.

Simon (18th C.) tenant at Birkwood in Ashkirk Parish in 1762. He was later farmer at Boosmhill in Lilliesleaf Parish, according to a tack of 1773, with the Riddells of that Ilk. He was also tenant there according to the 1789–94 Horse Tax Rolls. He married Isobel Anderson and their children, baptised in Ashkirk Parish, included: Thomas (b.1758); Helen (b.1760); and Adam (b.1762). The witnesses in 1762 were William (perhaps his brother) and William Anderson (surely related to his wife). He is probably the Simon, son of Adam and Helen Bell born in Ashkirk in 1730.

Steven of Bank (16th C.) recorded in 1590 of stealing horses from Englishman John Salkeld. His name is recorded as ‘Steven Ladley of the Banke’ and others named are ‘Rennye’, Thomas Haugh and David of Roughlee. He is surely related to Ninian, who was recorded as tenant ‘in the Bank’ in 1572/3. Thomas (16th C.) tenant in Northbank in 1541, along with ‘Belle’ and Bennet. Thomas (16th C.) tenant in Letham in 1541, paying 22 shillings yearly. Lawrence and James were tenants in another part of Letham and probably related. Thomas (d.1543) tenant of the Earl of Angus. John Musgrave led a party of Englishmen on a raid into Scotland in July 1543 in which he was killed trying to recover the spoils.
from his farm. It is unclear where his farm was, but since the Douglases held much of Southdean, it could be that he was the tenant of Letham. Thomas (16th C.) son of Lyle. He was listed as ‘Lyalles Thome’ among men complained about by the English Warden for a raid into England in 1587. The other men were local Scotts, Oliver’s and others. Thomas (16th C.) tenant in the farm of Haugh in the Jed valley. In 1590 he was accused by John Forster of having reset Clement Crozier (son of Martin) and William Oliver of Lustruther. He was recorded as ‘Thomas Ladelye of the Hawghe’ in 1590 when he was among a group accused of taking livestock, goods and prisoners from the Pott’s of Carrick; others listed include Elliots of the Hill, Martin’s Clem Crozier, James Douglas of Earlside and John Henderson of Plederleith. He was also listed in 1590 accused of raiding the English Warden’s tenants, along with ‘Eddie’, as well as Andrew Waugh of Wadeshill. Additionally he and ‘Eddie’ were accused in 1590 of stealing a horse from Ralph Salkeld and along with ‘Rennye’, Steven of the Bank and David of Roughlee he was accused of stealing horses by John Salkeld. He was further recorded along with Lionel in 1590, accused of stealing from the Reeds of ‘the Old towne’ in England. Thomas (17th C.) paid the land tax in Southdean Parish on behalf of the Marquess of Douglas in 1663. He may be the same as one of the other Thomases. Thomas (17th C.) tenant in the farm of Rouchhirst according to a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. ‘Martin Laidlæ, yr.’ was also listed, and presumably his son or brother. Probably the same Thomas was listed at Rouchhirst in the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls, along with John. Thomas (17th C.) recorded as tenant of ‘Àntwoch’ (i.e. ‘Antroch’) in a rental roll of 1669 for Jedburgh Forest. Thomas (17th C.) tenant at the farm of Haugh in the Jed valley according to a 1669 rental roll. Probably the same Thomas was still tenant in Haugh on the Hearth Tax roll of 1694. There were Laidlaws at Haugh at the end of the 16th century. Thomas (17th C.) married to ‘Euphan Bellinden’. Their son William was baptised in Hawick Parish in 1676, with witnesses Thomas Borthwick and Robert Grieve. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Robertson Parish, when it contained Hassendean. He married Isobel Lorraine and their children included: Helen (b.1686); and Isobel (b.1689). He may be the Thomas who witnessed a baptism in Roberton in 1686 for John ‘Bleak’ and Katherine (who may have been his sister, or other relative). Thomas (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at Stirches in 1747. He is probably the Thomas who witnessed a baptism for John Smith (also living in the Stirches area) in 1747. He married Margaret Turnbull in 1744 and their children included: James (b.1745); Thomas (b.1747); Margaret (b.1750); and Robert (b.1752). The witnesses in 1747 were Walter Scott and James Dryden. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Hawick and Wilton Parishes. He married Margaret Anderson and their children included: Janet (b.1765) and James (b.1767), baptised in Hawick; and Janet (b.1769), Thomas (b.1771), Betty (b.1773), Agnes (b.1775), Adam (b.1778), and Adam (again, b.1780), baptised in Wilton. He is probably the Thomas who witnessed baptisms in Hawick in 1767 for herd John Scott and in 1771 for Thomas Elliot in Newmill. Thomas (18th C.) farmer at Hyndlee according to the 1789–91 Horse Tax Rolls. He succeeded Robert as farmer, and was presumably his son or brother. Thomas (18th C.) weaver in Hawick. In 1792 (along with fellow weaver William) he witnessed a baptism for Walter. He was thus probably closely related (perhaps brother) to the carpenter-making Laidlaws. In 1795 and 1797 he witnessed baptisms for William. He married Margaret Stewart and their children included William (b.1796). The witnesses in 1796 were Walter (perhaps his brother) and Walter Tinlin. He could be the son of William and Isobel Birnie baptised in Hawick in 1772. Thomas (18th/19th C.) ‘gauger’, i.e. exciseman in Hawick. The death is recorded in 1811 of ‘Mrs. Laidlaw’, spouse to his father. Thomas (18th/19th C.) farmer at Newlands in Minto Parish, recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as owner of 3 horses. Thomas (d.1823) farmer at Fulnash. He was probably son of Robert, who also farmed at Fulnash. He was listed at Fulnash on the Horse Tax Rolls of 1786. He took on the additional farm of Nether Cassock in 1800. He was probably the ‘Mr Laidlaw of Fulnash, a gentleman of great responsibility and intelligence’ who took the young Tom Jenkins into his household, and later encouraged his education. He married Margaret Beattie and had one son, Robert. He was listed at Nether Cassock when he subscribed to William Scott’s ‘ Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. He could be the Thomas of Cavers Parish whose son Robert was baptised in 1771. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. He married Agnes Glendinning and their children included Thomas (b.1814). Thomas (18th/19th C.) shoemaker who moved to London. In 1815

the death of his mother, Anne Hogg, is recorded in Hawick. Thomas (18th/19th C.) shoemaker at Denholm, recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. He may be the resident of Cavers Parish who married Amanda Wood and whose children included Anne (b.1817), Thomas (b.1820), Helen (b.1823) and John Young (b.1826). Thomas (1801/2–28) son of William. He emigrated to America and died in a canal there aged 26. His children included William (grocer in Hawick and manufacturer at Cumledge Mills), Thomas (also grocer for a while), Walter (who moved to Australia), Robert (hosiery manufacturer of Glasgow, who moved to New Zealand) and Catherine (who married Alexander Mercer and moved to Australia). Thomas (b.1810/1) born in Wilton Parish, he was a farmer at Longbaulk. In 1841 he was living at Easter Branzholme Loch (with a teacher, David, who was probably his brother). He was still there in 1851. In 1861 he was recorded as farmer of 20 acres there. His wife was Hannah and their children included John, David, Peter, Thomas, Sarah, Helen, Hannah and Mary. Thomas (b.1820s) 2nd son of Thomas. He carried on his brother William’s grocer’s business at 4 High Street, then moved to Bolton. His children included William, Thomas, James and Catherine. Thomas ‘Chinny’, ‘Secky’ (1829–1907) hosiery manufacturer who ran William Laidlaw & Sons from 1855, and built the mansion house he called ‘Sillerbuthall’ (completed in 1866). His name is entered onto the Land Tax records in about 1874 as owner of Dovemount and Silverbuthall (acquired in 2 parts from James Scott) and also for owning ‘Souter’s Acre’ that was formerly part of the Whitehaugh estate. He was recorded at Silverbuthall in 1868. He was the third son of William, and continued to develop the family business. He acquired Lynnwood Mills from William Nixon in 1864, carrying out more yarn spinning, while giving up hosiery, but extending Teviot Crescent Mills. It is said that he was an easy-going boss until he found out he was being cheated by some of his employees, and thereafter was much harsher; this probably explains his nickname of ‘Secky’ (and perhaps also ‘Sheckum’). His manner was described as being brusque and unaffected.

In the 1850s he served on the Borders Union Railway Committee for Hawick District. He was a Conservative in politics and was Councillor for North High Street Ward 1861–66. He served as a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire. He was also a member of the South of Scotland Chamber of Commerce, being President for a while. He was for many years Chairman of Hawick Gas Company. He also helped found St. Andrew’s Free Church, and deacon there for a long time. He married Beatrice, daughter of Robert Grierson, and she died in 1898, aged 66. Their children were: William; Robert Grierson, Daniel McGowan, who died aged 6 after an accident with a pony; Elizabeth, who died in infancy; Elizabeth (again), who married solicitor Henry Cousins; Jane Beatrice (b.1868), who married Anton Becker of Leeds; Margaret Isabella (b.1871), who married E. Jenkins, of the Bank of Scotland; and Kate, who lived in Edinburgh. He was buried at the Wellogate and his sons William and Robert G. wound up the family business about a year later. Several stories are told about him (in notes by James H. Haining). Thomas (19th C.) stocking-maker in Hawick. He married Robina Henderson, and their children included: Thomas (b.1864); Robert Henderson (b.1866), who died in infancy; William (b.1868); John Henderson (1870), a tailor who emigrated to Boston and settled in Port Hood, Nova Scotia, with his son Alexander Fraser being a leader in the Canadian co-operative movement; Robert Henderson (b.1872), song writer; and William (again, b.1874). Thomas (19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Ann Paterson and their children included Mary (b.1871).

Thomas Hill ‘T.H.’ (1846–1915) born in Annan, he became a master painter in Hawick. He was also a Bailie, and known as a local artist, living at 13 High Street. He illustrated Robert Murray’s ‘Hawick Characters’, Goodfellow’s ‘Guide to Hawick’ and Tancred’s ‘Rulewater and its People’. He also painted a back view of the old Town House. His wife Jane Scott Pow was daughter of Gavin Pow and sister of John Pow. He was also the ex-Bailie Laidlaw who was on the initial Common Riding Ceremonial Committee of 1887 and served as a Race Steward. Thomas A. Kenneth ‘Ken’ (1936– ) son of Jean and Arthur of 6 Northcote Street. He started cycling at age 15, and became extremely successful. He won the Scottish Daily Express 3-day road race in 1957, later winning the Scottish 100 mile championship in record time. He was the only Scot in the 1960 Olympic Games team and in 1961 was the first Scot to complete the Tour de France, leading during the 16th stage. He emigrated to New York in 1964, where he worked as a carpenter, and later moved to Savannah, Georgia. He married Theresa and emigrated to Savannah, Georgia. In 2005 he was made an Honorary Life Member of the Hawick Cycling Club at a special dinner. An annual event in Hawick, the ‘Ken Laidlaw Sportive’, was named in his honour. Walter (15th/16th C.) recorded is 1502 as brother of Robert ‘in knawis edzartoun’ and also in the same place. He was ‘alias Ruthirfurd’, although it is unclear hy he would have had this nickname. His brother was fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. Walter (17th C.) recorded as ‘Walter Laidley in Ormiston’ on the 1684 list of men declared rebels for refusing to take ‘the Test’. This is probably the Ormiston near Hawick. He is probably related to John, who was at Ormiston in 1694. Walter (17th C.) resident of Deanbrae according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Perhaps the same Walter had children baptised in Cavers Parish, including: Isabel (b.1696); Bessie (b.1701); and Janet (b.1713). Walter (1659/60–1712) tenant in West Deloraine. He is buried in Borthwick Waas, along with 6 of his children. He could be the Walter whose children baptised in Ettrick Parish included: an unnamed son (b.1695); William (b.1696); Helen (b.1696); Jean (b.1697); William (again, b.1697); an unnamed son (b.1699); and Margaret (b.1706). Walter (17th/18th C.) recorded in 1721 when he was paid by the Council ‘for a sled fuit when ye robbish was taken away at he crose’. He was presumably a tradesman of some sort in Hawick. He may be the Walter who witnessed a baptism for Thomas Scott in Hawickshiel in 1766. Walter (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Margaret Spinny and their children included: Isobel (b.1718); and James (b.1720). Walter (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Christian Anderson and their children included: Isobel (b.1737); and Margaret (b.1742). Walter (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Margaret Smail and their children included: Isobel (b.1737); and Margaret (b.1742). Walter (18th/19th C.) probably brother of William, with whom he came to Hawick to work in the carpet factory. In 1796 he witnessed a baptism for Thomas (perhaps another brother) and in 1797 he and Thomas witnessed a baptism for William. He married Mary Miller in Hawick in 1780 and their children included: William (b.1781); Beatrix (b.1784); Isabel (b.1785); William (again, b.1788); Margaret (b.1792); and Robert (b.1796). The witnesses in 1792 were weavers William and Thomas Laidlaw, who were probably his brother and another relative. The names of his children suggest that he could also have been a son of William and Isabel Birnie, but his baptism is not recorded in Hawick Parish. Walter (18th C.) recorded in 1787 as ‘Saughlaw’, when his daughter Margaret died and again in 1795 when his unnamed child died in Hawick Parish. Possibly the designation was the place where he lived, but this is unclear. He was probably related to James ‘sauglay’, recorded in 1810. Walter (b.1780) son of James and Margaret Scott. He was born at Weensmoor in Hobkirk Parish. He became head gardener at Raby Castle, home of the Duke of Cleveland. He had daughters Mary and Anne. Walter (b.c.1780) born at Meashaw, son of James and Isabella Scoon. He became a butcher in Hawick. He was listed on the High Street in Pigot’s 1837 directory. In 1841 he was living at about 19 High Street. In 1801 he married Margaret Oliver (b.1777) in Kirkton. Their children included: Robert (b.1802); Mary (1806–81) married James Little; Isabella (b.1812) married Mr. Temple; and Walter (b.1816). Walter (b.1811/2) from Jedburgh, he was a blacksmith in Wilton. In Slater’s 1852 directory he was listed as a blacksmith in Wilton Place. In 1851 he was on Wilton Place, at about the modern 34 Princes Street, and in 1861 on the east side of Dickson Street. His wife was Janet and their children included Thomas and Elizabeth. Walter (1838–1911) poet and local historian in Jedburgh. He wrote several articles about Jedburgh and its history and for 20 years acted as custodian for Jedburgh Abbey. He was a Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland. He wrote ‘Poems: chiefly on Jedburgh and vicinity’ (1901) and ‘Poetry and prose’ (1900, 1904, 1908) – “…a geyan yibble poyeter an a leal Bor der Scot ti buit, Walter Laidlaw maun be a sair miss ti the Waeter-gate o Jed’ [ECS]. William (16th C.) recorded in 1541 as one of the tenants of the lands of Deloraine and ‘Wardishope’ in Ettrick. William (17th C.) recorded as a tenant in Woll in 1639. He was called as a witness in a dispute between Francis Scott of Castleside and his mother-in-law, Margaret Scott. Perhaps the

Laidlaw teacher at the `Sclenty Schuil'. He could be the Thomson; and Nelly (b.1777), who became Thomas (b.1773); Mary (b.1775), who married an Oliver; Bettie (b.1769); Margaret (b.1771); children included: Agnes (b.1763), who married bers of the Associate Kirk in Jedburgh. Their Best of Kirkton Parish in 1762; they were mem-moor, and their burial grounds were adjacent the family were related to the Laidlaws of Weens-was a wright in Town-o-Rule. It was said that William (b.1732), James (b.1636); Janet (b.1639); Robert (b.1639); Thomas (b.1641); an unnamed daughter (b.1643); Agnes (b.1645); and William (again, b.1647). Probably the same William witnessed a baptism in Ashkirk in 1651 for John Stewart and perhaps one for James. William (17th C.) tenant in the farm of Bank according to a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. John Oliver was tenant there at the same time. William (17th C.) recorded as tenant in ‘Brewbuse’ in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. It is unclear exactly where this farm was. William (17th C.) tenant in Little Cavers recorded in 1684 on a list of men declared as fugitives for being Covenanters. William (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Isabel Laidlaw and their children included: Agnes (b.1688). William (1656/7–1717) tailor in Dobburn. He is buried in Bothwick Waas. William (17th/18th C.) herd in Wester Essenside. He married Mary Elliot in 1697. Perhaps the same Laidlaw (with no forename given) was herd in Huntly in 1715 when his son John was baptised. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. His children included: Jean (b.1701); and Janet and Catherine (b.1705). William (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His children included Isabel (b.1712) and Robert (b.1715). William (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Margaret Jackson and their children included: James (b.1706); and Robert (b.1708). William (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. In 1728 he was at Broadleeshiel when his daughter Bessie was baptised. Perhaps the same William was at Howcleuch in 1742 when his son James was baptised in Roberton. William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Ornmost in 1727, 1730 and 1737. He is probably the William who married Margaret Reed in 1725 and had children John (b.1727), Thomas (b.1730), Janet (b.1732), Betty (b.1735) and Bessie (b.1737). William (18th C.) son of shepherd James, he was a wright in Town-o-Rule. It was said that the family were related to the Laidlaws of Weensmooor, and their burial grounds were adjacent in Hobkirk Kirkyards. He married Margaret Best of Kirkton Parish in 1762; they were members of the Associate Kirk in Jedburgh. Their children included: Agnes (b.1763), who married an Oliver; Bettie (b.1769); Margaret (b.1771); Thomas (b.1773); Mary (b.1775), who married a Thomson; and Nelly (b.1777), who became teacher at the ‘Sclenty Schuil’. He could be the William who died in Hobkirk Parish in 1811. William (18th C.) resident at Mabonlaw in 1764 and 1767. His children (baptised in Roberton) included James (b.1764) and Alexander (b.1767). He may be the William who married Bett Matheson in Roberton in 1762, his wife being from Yarrow Parish. William (18th C.) married Helen Grieve in Wilton Parish in 1764. William (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Elizabeth Brown in 1764 and their children included: Adam (b.1765); and Helen (b.1768). William (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isabel Birnie (or Burnet) and their children included: William (b.1759); Isabel (b.1762); Margaret (b.1765); and Thomas (b.1772). The witnesses in 1772 were the whole congregation. Given the names, it is possible that he was father of William of the carpet factory, as well as father of Walter and Thomas. William (1759–1823) along with his brother (perhaps Walter) he came to Hawick from Leith to work in the Or-rock Place carpet factory. However, it seems that he may be the son of William and Isabel Birnie born in Hawick (so perhaps the bothers returned to Hawick rather than coming as complete outsiders). His property on the Cross Wynd was sold in 1811 to form part of the site of Allars Kirk. He was also one of the founder members of the Independent Kirk in Hawick, being an elder in that church and calling his youngest son after one of the evangelist preachers, Charles Gray (the ‘Tabernacle’ was built next door to his wife’s family home on the Kirk Wynd). He may be the William who paid the cart tax in Hawick in 1785. He was progenitor of the most prominent local branch of the family. He is probably the weaver William who in 1792 (along with fellow weaver Thomas) witnessed a baptism for Walter. In 1794 he witnessed a baptism for manufacturer Walter Richardson. In the early part of the 19th century he set up his own hosiers business with his son William, starting out with just 4 frames. They later expanded to both tweed and hosiers, building the main mill in 1834, and later focussing just on tweeds. He married Margaret Aitken (1765–1842), daughter of Robert and Janet Scott. They lived in the Mid Raw and their children were: Janet (b.1784), who married spinner Robert Wilson; William (b.1786), ‘Shaf-flies’; Robert (b.1792), ‘Auld London’, who lived at 17 Loan; James (b.1795), who married Ann Affleck and died leaving a young family; Thomas (b.1797), who emigrated to America and drowned in a canal; Walter (b.1797), who probably died in 1819; George (b.1797); Charles Gray; Isabella, who married William Wilson, spinner of Lynwood; Grace, who married draper George Borrowman; and 3 other sons, including one who farmed in Yarrow. The witnesses in 1795 were James Rae and Thomas (who was surely related) and in 1797 were Thomas and Walter (perhaps both his brothers). William (18th/19th C.) recorded as owner of a horse at Borthwickbrae Burnfoot in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. William (b.1768) son of James and Margaret Scott. He was born at Hartshaugh near Bonchester (although Tancred states he was born at Wester Swanshiel). He was farmer at Weensmoor in Hobkirk Parish. He is recorded there in 1841. His wife was Helen, daughter of James Douglas from Castleton; she was said to be a favourite of the Sheriff of Roxburghshire, William Oliver of Dinkabrye. Their children included: James (b.1797), who farmed at Hallrule Mill and Hartshaugh Mill; Douglas (b.1799), born at Kirknowe, but died young; Christian (b.1801), who married William Gowanlock; Margaret (b.1803), who married William Sibbald; Mary (b.1806), married William Smith; Helen, married John Turnbull and went to Canada; Douglas (again, b.1810), who emigrated to Toronto; Joanna (b.1812), who later went to Canada and married storekeeper David Davidson; John (d.1814); William (b.1815), who later farmed at Weensmoor; and Jennet or Jessie (b.1817), who married Hawick shoemaker Charles Scott. William (18th/19th C.) farmer at Greatlaws in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls for Lilliesleaf Parish, when he owned 4 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. William (1780–1845) born at Blackhouse in Selkirkshire, the Ettrick Shepherd worked for his family for 10 years. Together they helped Sir Walter Scott to gather Border ballads. He first encountered Scott when he travelled to Yarrow with John Leyden in 1802. He was a farmer, then an exciseman and later worked as Scott’s factor and secretary. He wrote several poems of his own, including ‘Lucy’s Flittin’ (which appeared in ‘The Banquet of Euphrosyne’, published in Hawick in 1811). He also wrote a description of Selkirkshire for the Edinburgh Cyclopaedia. William (18th/19th C.) married Betty Easton in Wilton Parish in 1809. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Nelly Waldie and their children included Mary Jane (b.1813). William (18th/19th C.) road contractor, who was one of the first residents of Bonchester Brigend in the early 1800s. William ‘Auld Laidlaw’, ‘Shaffles’ or ‘The Auld Laird’ (1786–1861) eldest son of the first William, along with whom he founded the hosiery firm William Laidlaw & Sons in 1811, succeeding to the business of Mr. Purdom. To begin with he was the traveller for the firm, spending much time in the Newcastle area (where he often stayed at the ‘Robin Hood’ on Pilgrim Street) and further afield, sometimes in the company of Robert Leishman. One story is told of how he returned to Hawick on foot during a snowstorm, losing his way, but bumping into Willie Winter’s post, thereby recovering his bearings. It is said that he loved to bargain, and could not take a trip, even once retired, without some goods to sell. He lived for a while in a house at 14 Howegate, with his stocking-shop behind; this is probably the place marked ‘Laidlaw’ on Wood’s 1824 map. In 1834 he built Teviot Crescent Mills, expanding into the much larger premises there and moving into tweeds. He built up a huge manufacturing business from humble beginnings. In his day he was apparently the only person to openly sing ‘Teribus’ out of season, at the Bailies’ dinner, and he would sing the ‘Auld Sang’ at the married men’s Common Riding dinner. He was an ardent Conservative in politics, losing his coat tails during the election troubles of 1837, and objections to ‘Radicals’ seeking the vote were often made in his name afterwards. In 1814 he married Jane Fisher (daughter of a Glasgow merchant), who died in 1844, aged 50. His sons were: William (1817–59); Peter Fisher; Daniel McGowan (1824/5–54), who built Hopehill; and Thomas (b.1829). They also had daughters Margaret (who married Rev. John Gilchrist Dyer in 1846), Jane, Jessie (1833–41), one who became Mrs. McGinly, and 4 others who died in infancy. He later married Jane Rutherford (nee Waldie) at Edinburgh in 1845. Her daughter Agnes Rutherford married William, her step-brother. Although most of his family left for the Free Kirk at the Disruption, he stayed with the ‘Auld Kirk’, despite repeatedly being cited for not keeping fast days. He lived beside his factory of Teviot Crescent, and is buried in St. Mary’s Cemetery. A portrait of him is in the Museum, by an unknown artist. William (b.1788) son of the first Hawick William’s brother (possibly Walter), and hence cousin of ‘Shaffles’. He was a weaver and later a grocer. Along with his brother Walter he owned property at 8 Loan. He is listed as a grocer in Pigot’s 1837 directory and Slater’s 1852 directory. He married Agnes Lamb. Their children included:

Mary (b.1819), who married Thomas Stevenson: Agnes (b.1821), who married Hugh Douglas; and Walter (b.1823), an engineer with the government in India. He is buried at St. Mary’s. He could be the ‘Wm. Laidlaw, Loan’ who arranged for a musician from Jedburgh to play for the ‘rebel’ Cornet of 1809. William (b.1792/3) porter in Hawick, living at about 20 High Street in 1841. In 1851 he was described as an ‘Out door Labourer’ and living around the Crown Close. His wife was Isabella and their children included John, Margaret, Elizabeth, William, Catherine, Sophia and Isabella. He could be the William listed in Slater’s 1852 directory as a coal agent (for Arniston Colliery) at the Station. William (19th C.) married Elizabeth Middlemas in Wilton in 1844. William (19th C.) tinsmith in Hawick. He married Helen Elliot Amos (from the Hobkirk family) in 1866. William (b.1814/5) shoemaker in Denholm. In 1851 he was living with his wife Margaret Jamieson and their children Janet, Ann, Catherine, Thomas, Margaret, Joan and Jane. William (1815–80) son of Robert, ‘Auld London’. He was a frameworker living on the Loan, at about No. 9. He married Christian Affleck Scott (1815–75). Their children were: Robert (b.1838); George (b.1840); Margaret (b.1846), who married Joseph Hogg; Rachel (b.1852); and Daniel (b.1855). He took in 3 sons of his uncle James when he died about 1838: Thomas (b.c.1824); Robert (b.c.1826); and Walter (b.c.1833). William (1815–84) son of William, who farmed at Weensmoor. He is recorded as farmer of Weensmoor in 1851, farming 52 acres and employing 1 labourer. He lived with his niece Mary and nephew James. By 1861 he was farmer at Bonchester, farming 152 acres and employing 3 people. He farmed at Bonchester for 19 years. He was listed on the first congregation of Wolfelee Free Kirk in 1849, was a trustee and was Treasurer for 37 years. He also helped with building the first church there. In 1853 he married Agnes Purdom (from Newcastleton), aunt of the Agnes Purdom who married mason Andrew Waugh. His children included: William (b.1854), farmer at East Fodderty; Robert (b.1856), Indian businessman and M.P. for East Renfrewshire; Agnes (b.1858), who married Stewart Douglas Elliot, a Councillor in Edinburgh; Helen (b.1859), who married James Phimister; James (b.1861), who emigrated to Canada and died unmarried; Isabella (b.1865), who worked for the Post Office in London; Arthur (b.1867), who emigrated to San Francisco and married Hattie Turner; John (b.1868), who emigrated to Australia; Margaret (b.1870), who married James Armour, a tea manager in India; Douglas (b.1874), a market gardener in Congleton; and Walter Scott (1877–1919), who trained as a doctor and managed a rubber plantation in the Straits Settlements. The William Laidlaw Memorial Hall was built partly in his memory. William (1817–59) son of William, he took over the firm of William Laidlaw & Sons in partnership with his brothers in 1845. The firm purchased Lynnwood Spinning Mill from Nixon’s. He was Cornet in 1838. In the 1850s he was on the Railway Committee for Hawick District. He married Agnes, daughter of builder Robert Rutherford, and his step-sister. Their children were: William, of Grieve & Laidlaw; and Jeannie Waldie Fisher (b.1858), who married John G. Wilson. He later married Christina F. Scott (who died in 1875, aged 59). In 1861 his widow was an ‘Annuitant’ at 3 Teviot Crescent. William (b.1818/9) originally from Melrose, he was a farmer at Clarilaw in Wilton Parish. He is listed there in 1841, when he farmed 150 acres and employed 8 men. His wife was Isabel and their children included William and Mary. William (b.1821) from Hawick. He married Betsy Elliot and became a sheep farmer in Fodderty, Ross and Cromarty. William (1821–1908) manufacturer, born in Hawick, son of James and grandson of hosier manufacturer William. His mother was Ann Affleck, from Peebles. At the age of 17 he was left with no parents, and entered the warehouse of his uncle William on Teviot Crescent, but after a few years became a grocer. His premises were on the High Street (No. 12), where the Cannon Inn had been and the Royal Bank would be built later. In the 1841 census he was there (near the top of the Millport), but in 1851 he was at No. 4 High Street, formerly Andrew Borthwick’s property. In Slater’s 1852 directory he was ‘William Laidlaw, jun.’ on the High Street. He left Hawick in 1854, turning over the grocer’s business to his brother and taking a lease of Cumledge Mills near Duns. He started in yarn weaving, but moved into blanket manufacturing. From 1875 he was also involved (along with other family members) with Allars Mill in Jedburgh. The overall business was called Laidlaw Brothers, and later Laidlaw’s Blanket and Tweed Mills, Ltd. He purchased Cumledge Mills outright in 1888. He managed the Cumledge Mill side of the business along with his sons William and Alexander, with the older brothers, James and John managing Allars Mill. In the 1930s the company directors included
3 William Laidlaws, all cousins! In 1844 he married Elizabeth Middlemas, from Ednam. Their children included: James, J.P., who was Provost of Jedburgh; John, J.P.; William; Alexander; Isabella Broomfield (who married Robert Huggan); and Ann, who was unmarried. He and his wife held their diamond wedding anniversary in 1904. He remained strongly a Teri at heart and was known for his stories of Hawick in olden times, one of his earliest memories being the celebration for the coming of age of the future Duke of Buccleuch in 1827. He died at Cumnudge Mills and is buried in Preston Cemetery, Berwickshire. William (19th C.) resident of Wilton. He married Elizabeth Bell and their children included: Mary (b.1861). William (1835/6–1917) son of Thomas. Along with his brother Robert Grier-son he was a partner in Thomas Laidlaw & Sons, but wrapped up the business in 1908. He died at Broadstairs and is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. William (1854–1911) son of William and Agnes Purdom. He farmed at East Fodderlee. In 1880 he married Elizabeth (‘Bessie’, 1854–1925) Hall, 2nd daughter of baker Robert Young. They had 4 sons and 1 daughter, including Douglas (b.1888), Agnes Lamb and Alexander (b.1892). In 1901 his family were living in Minto. William (b.1845/6) son of William and Jane Newell. His marriage certificate states that he was born in Dumfriesshire, although family tradition says that he came from Hawick. He emigrated to Australia and in 1870 in Melbourne married Agnes Ferguson (daughter of a Denholm mason). They had 2 sons. William (1852/3–91) son of William. He was a manufacturer of Grieve & Laidlaw, Stonefield Mills. He married Mary Reid Clark, who died in 1929, aged 76. Their children included William Rutherford Clark, who died aged 16. William (1857/8–1912) cycle agent in Haw-ick. He was Captain of St. Cuthbert’s (rugby) Football Club for its first two seasons, from when it formed in 1877. He was also known as a keen cyclist in his early years. He worked for 38 years with Geo. & Jas. Oliver, providing valuable assistance to John Oliver in his work as Clerk to the School Board. He was in partnership with Robert Milligan for a while as a cycle business. He married Betsy Park, and she died in 1935, aged 70. They had 2 children who died young. William (1866–1931) eldest son of Peter Fisher. At the age of 19 he emigrated to Queensland, where he was involved with gold mining and prospecting and served in the Australian Bushmen’s Corps in the Boer War. After marrying he moved to California where he became a fruit grower, and his wife Rev. Alice Z. Laidlaw was pastor at the church in Narod. (formerly spelled ‘Ladlaw’, ‘Ladley’, ‘Laid’, ‘Laidlay’, ‘Laidlae’, ‘Laidlea’, ‘Laidlie’, ‘Laidley’, ‘Laidlo’, ‘Laidlow’, ‘Laidhew’, ‘Laidly’, ‘Leudlaw’, etc.).

Laidlawhope (läd-lup) n. former farm in Liddesdale, probably on the Laidlehope Burn. It is listed as ‘Ladlawhope’ in the c.1376 rental roll of Liddesdale, with a value of 4 merks. On the 1541 rental roll it is ‘Ladilhope’ and still worth 4 merks, but vacant at that time. It is possible that this is the ‘Ladhope, of the laird of Howpawletts lands called Scott’ which were burned by the Armstrongs in 1544 (although ‘Lairhope’ could be meant). It is probably the ‘Laidhop’ listed in 1632 among the lands in Liddesdale owned by Gilbert Elliott of Stobs (and listed among rentals of Kelso Abbey). In 1718 it was combined with Whitrope in the farm of Stitchilhill (it is ‘Ladhope’ in 1718).

Laidlaw Place (läd-law-plis) n. street marked incorrectly for Ladylaw Place on the 1897 Ordnance Survey map.

Laidlaw’s (läd-lawz) n. William Laidlaw & Sons, manufacturers of hosiery and tweeds, founded in 1811 as a hosiery manufacturers in the ‘Mid Raw’. The business moved after a few years to 14 Howegate, with a second stocking-shop in the Backdamgate. Their main factory was next to the Little Haugh (Teviot Crescent Mills), erected in 1834, with extensions built to produce tweed in 1841. The firm then introduced piecing machines made by Melrose’s. They also made blankets in the 1840s. They were listed at Teviot Crescent Mills in 1852. From 1864 they purchased Lynnwood Mills and concentrated on yarn spinning and tweed manufacture. They also operated the Weensland spinning mill for several years after 1864. The family retired from business in 1908 although the company name carried on for a while, and was succeeded by George Wilson & Sons. The main mills were later demolished, although some photographs still exist to show how extensive they were. The Museum has company ledgers from 1926–32.

Laidlaw’s Cauld (läd-lawz-kawld) n. weir once stretching over the Teviot near the old Victoria Laundry, named after Laidlaw’s Mill nearby. It was built in about 1834 by Gideon Scott & Sons, and obliterates the piece of ground known as the Fairy Faulds. Traces can still be easily seen when the river is low. It was used to divert water through a mill lade, which ran alongside Teviot Crescent and through Teviot Crescent Mills, being filled in in 1914. The Cauld itself was largely removed after WWII. In earlier times there had been a ford near here, just upriver from the main ford at the foot of Walter’s Wynd. In the 19th century, when the river was frozen, there were sometimes curling matches played there. The Cornet and his Right- and Left-Hand Men are shown crossing the Teviot near the Cauld in the 1846 painting of the Common Riding. It also features in the song ‘The Anvil Crew’ – ‘But when we came to Laidlaw’s Cauld, There a horde of pirates lay’ [WE].

Laidlaw Terrace (läd-law-te-ris) n. street constructed in 1888 along the south bank of the Teviot, off North Bridge Street. This involved building up the river-side, with the library being added at the top in 1904 (now Nos. 1 and 2). It was named after William Laidlaw & Sons, yarn spinners and Tweed manufacturers, with the street essentially being built to provide accommodation for workers at Teviot Crescent Mills. The bottom of the street long had an undeveloped area used as a sawmill yard and later a builder’s yard, with an adjacent footpath along the riverside.

Laidlehope Burn (läd-lup-burn) n. stream that rises near Kiln Knowe, above the Slitrig’s headwaters, and flows south to join the Roughley Burn, not far from the Ninestane Rig. This is related to the farm of ‘Ladlawhope’ recorded in c. 1376. Where the burn was crossed by the Waverley Line there was Laidlehope Culvert (it is written ‘Laidlerhope’ by Smail in 1880).

laif (läf) n., arch. a loaf – ‘A made a fa- issable mael oot pie-soop, ... caald flesh, picklt ingans, an nae skrimp o laif’ [ECS], ‘Th’ breid in Glesca bein’ reduced a ha’penny th’ quarter laif’ [HEx1921], also used to distinguish bread from other baked goods – ‘Howt! A’m fair staad o laif, eend on. Let’s sei a hyimm-backen scone’ [ECS] (note that the plural is ‘laifs’).

laif-breid (läf-breid) n., arch. loaf-bread, flour-based bread baked as loaves, as distinct from other baked goods such as oatcakes.

laigh (lä, läch) adj., arch., poet. low – ‘...the said Francis Scott, his tenement of houses, high and laigh, back and fore, with the yeard and pertinents lying within the town and burgh of Hawick’ [BR], ‘...set, let, or hire any of their houses, high or laigh, back or fore, to any families or person, strangers, whatsoever, without the first acquainting the present Magistrates ...’ [BR1699], ‘The first ae guide that they met wi’. It was high up in Hardhaughswire; The second guide that they met wi’, It was laigh down in Borthwick water’ [T], ‘Then Johnie let a spear fa’ laigh by his thigh, Fula, &c. Thought well to hae slain the innocent, I trow ...’ [CPM], ‘...They fand their tree three ells o’er laigh – They fand their stick baith short and sma’. laigishin (lä-gi-shin) n., arch. a large, cumbersome quantity (related to the local word for ‘legacy’).

laik (läk) adj., arch. lacking, wanting – ‘All thir 51 lands adjacent to ye toune are estimat to pay nyne scoir 15 bolls in stok, 49 bolls in great teynd, laik ane firlot, and 20 lbs of vicarage’ [PR1627], Laik (läk) n. James (b.1740) son of Thomas, he was born in Hobkirk Parish. In 1785–91 he was listed as house servant at Wells, working for Gilbert Elliott. In 1785 his name was listed as ‘John’. In 1791 he was listed as a butler at Wells and in 1792, 1794 and 1797 as a house servant. His name was sometimes listed as ‘Luke’. He could be the James ‘Loch’ whose son Thomas was baptised in Southdean in 1774. Joshua (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. In 1715 he was a gardener in Cavers. His children included Christian (b.1715) and Isobel (b.1717). Rev. Thomas (17th/18th C.) minister who was licensed by Jedburgh Presbytery in 1711 and presented to Southdean Parish in July 1716. However, the parishioners refused to sign the call in December and he ended up as minister at Longframlington, Northumberland.

He was recorded in the Hawick Parish Session records of 1713 (presumably during a sermon) reminding parents to send their children to school, and also as a substitute in 1714 when Hawick’s minister...

was absent (also written ‘Laick’ and ‘Lake’ and probably the same as ‘Leck’).

Laissell (lāl-sēl) n. former name for lands in the upper Slitrig valley. It is listed in 1607 along with ‘Carlinghall’ (probably Carlin Hole), ‘Broumishall’ (probably Broon’s Hill) and other lands sold by Hector Turnbull of Stanedge to Gilbert Elliott of Stobs. It may be a transcription error for somewhere more familiar.

Laing (lān. lān) n. Adam (1818/9–1900) Hawick stockmaker apparently noted for his gentlemanly bearing. In 1851 he was at about 29 High Street and in 1861 was living at 5 Slitrig Bank. In 1844 he married Agnes (1824/5–1902), daughter of James Hogg, the writer of ‘Teribus’. They had 8 children: Jane (b.c.1845) or Jeanie, who married hosiery manufacturer James Renwick; James (1846/7–1909), grocer; Euphemia (1850/1–1918), who lived at Marlefield; Eliza (b.c.1853): Agnes (1855–1910) who married manufacturer Francis Elliot Wilson; Adam (b.1858), who died young; Christina Grey (b.1861), who married Alfred Warr, minister of Rosneath; and Jessie D. (b.1864), who married James White and lived in Glasgow. Adam (1859–1918) Burgh Chamberlain of Hawick, co-author of ‘The Hawick Tradition of 1514’ (1898) with R.S. Craig, and author of ‘Branxholme Castle and the Land of the Scotts’ (1901). The book ‘The Hawick Tradition of 1514’ was significant in establishing the connection between the Hawick Flag and Hexham, which overcame criticism at the time about the lack of historical evidence for the events of Hornshole. The 3rd son of Walter of Denholm Hill and Margaret Scott, he was educated in Denholm and at Teviot Grove Academy. He was an apprentice with Purdoms, trained further in Edinburgh and returned to Hawick to work with W.M. Syne. He served as Burgh Chamberlain for 16 years from 1891, before becoming the first Burgh Treasurer. He was one of the founder members of the Callants’ Club, its first Honorary Treasurer, and Vice-President during WWI. He was one of the founders of the Teviotdale Cycling Club, won a couple of Mosspaul to Hawick races, and was also involved with other local sports organisations. He helped get the Liberal Club premises built and was Club Treasurer for many years. He was a member of the Archaeological Society and the Berwickshire Naturalists’ Club. He also acted as Secretary of the Public Library and Secretary and Treasurer of the Museum. In addition he was heavily involved in erecting many of the monuments and plaques carried out in his day, as well as helping resuscitate Mosspaul. He was a keen Common Riding supporter and pushed for the resumption of the riding of the full marches at Pilmuir and the cutting of the sod ceremony. Sinton’s bibliography of Hawick-related works (which he helped to compile) states that he possessed a rare 3rd edition of James Hogg’s ‘Flodden Field and the Colour’, inserted inside of which was a manuscript of the tune as played by the town piper in 1777. Alexander ‘Sandy’ (1786–1850) hosiery manufacturer. He was son of John and Agnes Donaldson, brother of David, father of Walter and grand-father of J.T. of Linden Park. He was in partnership with his brother in the early 19th century with premises where the Sandbed Store was later located. Originally they spun yarn on the hand jenny and operated a small hosiery business. However, they joined with the Dicksons in 1802 to form Dicksons & Laings. He is probably the ‘A. Laing’ whose property at Dovemount is marked on Wood’s 1824 map. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He probably had the house Springbank built for him, above the main factory area. The family were Reform supporters of their day. In the 1834 electoral roll he and his brother David were listed as joint proprietors in the spinning mill. He is listed among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1835 and in 1840 and 1841 was listed as manufacturer at Wilton Mills. In the 1841 census he was living at Wilton Mills. His first wife was Ann (1789–1822), youngest daughter of Walter Wilson (and sister of skinner Thomas Wilson), who died in childbirth. Their surviving children were: and Ann (b.1811) who married John Elliot and moved to Massachusetts, U.S.A.; John (b.1812); and Walter (b.1820). He secondly married Janet, daughter of William Roger, who was his cousin (their mothers both Donaldsons being sisters). They had 2 surviving children: Margery Donaldson, who married William Brown from Galashiels and was mother of Alexander Laing Brown; and Alexander Brown (b.1829), who married Jane Dinwiddie. She was a widow living at Springbank in 1851 along with her son Alexander and 2 servants. Alexander ‘Allie’ (b.1829) son of manufacturer Alexander and his 2nd wife Janet Roger. He followed his father into woollen manufacturing. He was partner (with William Irving) in the firm Laing & Irving and lived at Ivybank. In the 1850s he was the Alexander (of Laing & Irvine) who was on the Railway Committee for Hawick District. He became a partner in Laing, Michie & Graham and Laing & Gawn, which later merged to become Currie, Lee & Gawn. His caricature appears in the book ‘Noctes Hawickiana’. He is probably the Alex recorded owning part of the former lands of Patrick Cunningham in about 1874. He married Jane Milligan (1844–1911), daughter of James Dinwiddie, who helped establish the hosiery industry in Dumfries. They had a large family, Alexander ‘Lal’ being the oldest son. Alexander James ‘Lal’ (b.1865) son of Alexander and Jane Milligan Dinwiddie. He was a prominent Hawick rugby forward from around 1883, being Captain of the Hawick team in 1888. He represented Roxburgh County and South of Scotland. He was known as a fast forward. He also played in the British team which first went to Australia in 1888. He emigrated to America shortly after this, married twice and had at least one daughter who visited Hawick a few times and died in Palm Springs. Andrew (b.1803/4) innkeeper of the Black Bull in Lilliesleaf, recorded in Pigot’s 1837 directory. In 1841 and 1851 he was gamekeeper at Ayton in Berwickshire. His wife was Isabella and their children included Jessy, Isabella, Thomas, Elizabeth, James, Helen, Robert and Margaret Ann. David of Westerkirk (d.bef. 1727). He married Katherine, eldest daughter of William Elliot of Arkleton in 1720. His widow later married Charles Telfer, Hawick’s minister and thirdly Robert Elliot of Fenwick. David (18th C.) mason in Hawick. He was probably the David, son of Walter, born in Hawick in 1710. In 1734 he and his men were paid for 6 1/2 days’ work they did on the West Port. He was recorded as a mason in 1742 when he witnessed a baptism for mason James Harkness and as a wright in 1745 when he witnessed 2 baptisms. In 1752 he was paid ‘for pointing a hole on the steeple-head, and altering a crack’. He was among the men paid in 1755 ‘for the herd’s house building’. He witnessed a baptism for John Richardson in 1772. He is probably the mason David who (along with mason Walter, likely his son) witnessed a baptism in 1790 for mason John (likely his other son). He is probably the Hawick mason who witnessed a baptism for William Douglas in 1794, along with mason John (possibly his son). He was deceased when his mason son Walter died in 1798. He married Helen Wallace and their children, baptised in Hawick Parish, included: Walter (b.1733); Ann (b.1735); Janet (b.1737); Helen (b.1739); Jean (b.1742); John (b.1744); and James (b.1746). It is possible he was also father of Hannah (b.c.1750), who married Andrew Hunter. The witnesses in 1742 were Robert Pringle, Excise Officer and wright Robert Pringle. David (1782–1840) son of John, he was a hosiery manufacturer in Hawick. He was originally in partnership with his brother Alexander and later as part of Dicksons & Laings of Wilton Mills. He was Cornet in 1805. He lived at No. 1 Wilton Bank, which was probably the same place as Springbank. He was one of the first members of Hawick Curling Club. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He married Janet, daughter of John Fiddes in Hobbirk Parish in 1811; she died in Glasgow in 1868, aged 79. Their children included: Elizabeth (b.1812); John (b.1814), draper; Agnes (b.1816); Helen (b.1819); Jemima (b.1824); and James Robert (b.1827). 3 of their daughters moved to Warkworth, Northumberland. His widow was living on Wilton Bank in 1841, along with Helen, Jemima, James and a servant. In 1851 Janet was living on the Howegate with Jemima and James. He died at Springbank and is buried at St. Mary’s. David (19th C.) Bailie of the 1820s and 1830s. He went to Jedburgh along with 70 special constables to help keep the peace in the election of 1831. He may have been the same man as manufacturer David. After the election of 1832 he released a prisoner in Hawick (by the name of Scott) who had been accused of disorderly conduct and assault. This led to complaints on behalf of the Duke of Buccleuch and others. He is probably the ‘D. Laing’ whose property is marked on Wood’s 1824 map, on the middle of the north side of the Sandbed. Donald McLeod (b.c.1898) son of Thomas Alexander and Agnes Brown. He enlisted in the army in 1914 when he was probably only about 16. After WWI he worked on rubber plantations in Malaya. He married his cousin, Margery Haddon. George (1883–1947) son of manufacturer John Turnbull and Anna Thomson. He was educated at home and in Eastbourne, along with his brothers Walter, Ivan and Maurice. He farmed at Nikuyu in Kenya. Gilbert (d.1777) son of Walter, he became a merchant in St. Petersburg. His brother was William of Meikledale and his sister Margaret married John Elliot of Borthwickbrae. He also had a nephew ‘Watty’ Scott, who spent some time in St. Petersburg, but returned to Scotland in ruin. He suffered strokes in the late 1770s and died in Russia. He married Elizabeth Catherine Gardner in 1765. Some of his correspondence is in the National Archives, labelled ‘I desire my son William not to burn these letters till he has leisure to read them all over’.

Ivan (1885–1917) 3rd son of John Turnbull and Anna Drummond Thomson. Born at Springbank (before it was the Haig Maternity Hospital), he was educated at home by a governess and at New College, Eastbourne, as well as in Belgium. When he returned to Hawick he lived at Ashleigh in East Stewart Place. Well-known as an athlete, he excelled at swimming, played three-quarter (wing) for Hawick R.F.C. and also played for the Teviotdale (mixed) hockey team. By some lucky chance he ended up playing for Scotland (with the home nations having separate hockey teams) in the 1908 London Olympics. The story goes that he was spotted on the platform by the other members of the team when their train passed through Hawick and convinced by a sporting friend, Dr. Norman Stevenson, to join the team. How much truth there is in this version is unknown (since a team sheet published the week before the game shows his name), but it certainly makes for a dramatic story! He played in 2 games, scoring the first ever Olympic goal in hockey (against Germany, which is ironic, given the events of a few years later). The official match report reads ‘At the beginning of the game Scotland attacked, and from a pass by Stevenson, Laing quickly scored the first goal’. That first game took place at Shepherd’s Bush stadium, months after the rest of the Games had finished. In the second game they were defeated by England. The team refused to play Wales for the 3rd place play-off (all in the same day!), and he apparently returned to Hawick on the overnight train. However, he never again represented Scotland at hockey. He went into partnership with his father in 1908, their hosiery business being Drummond & Laings, Wilton Path. This was later taken over by Innes-Henderson’s, with whom he remained until enlisting in the War effort. In 1915 he joined the 28th Battalion of the London Regiment, the ‘Artists’ Rifles’, and was then gazetted into the Coldstream Guards. He was awarded the Military Cross at the Somme in 1916. But he was killed by machine gun fire when his unit were taking Gouzeacourt. Another tragic casualty of WWI, he is buried in Metz-en-Couture cemetery in France. In 2008, to commemorate the Olympic goal centenary, the Archiological Society commissioned Hamish Smith to make a trophy to be competed for annually by girls versus boys teams at the High School. Bailie James (17th C.) Hawick Magistrate. His 1672 will is in the National Archives (but he appears to have died significantly later). He was related to the Laing family who were later Chamberlains to the Duke of Buccleuch and owned land at the Flex, Burnfoot-on-Ale and elsewhere. He was a Bailie during the 1660s and 70s. He could be the James recorded as one of the owners of West Mains in 1663. He was Bailie in 1668 when the Council made a decree to support the breaking of illegal dykes on the Common. He may be the James who was Bailie in 1670/1, and whose brother William was farmer at Earlside. He is recorded as an ex-Bailie in a sasine of 1687 when his son Walter was witness to a sasine in Hawick. He could be the James, married to Helen Elliot, whose son William was baptised in Hawick Parish in 1653. James (17th C.) tenant in Earlside. In 1684 he was among a group of tenants of the Cavers estate who complained about the burden placed upon them by the huge fines imposed on Lady Cavers. They would have been forced into ruin had not the young Laird of Cavers, William Douglas, returned from the Continent to take charge of matters. He was probably son of William, who was tenant in Earlside and transported for being a Covenanter. James (18th C.) hedger in Abbotrule, recorded in 1785. James Robert (b.1827) son of David and Janet Fiddes. He was a draper on the Howegate. In the 1851 census he was at about 2 Howegate, living with his widowed mother and his sister Jemima, as well as George Webster and a servant. His draper’s partnership with Webster is listed in Slater’s 1852 directory. It appears that he moved to London, where the business expanded, become a general warehousing firm. He later became partner in Paterson, Laing and Bruce, registered in London and Melbourne. He married Margaret, eldest daughter of Robert Fiddes of London. He had a son James Robert (d.1916), and a daughter Jane Tullock Fiddes. He is probably the James Robert of 27 Earl’s Court Square, London, who died in 1898. James (b.c.1847) only surviving son of Adam Laing and Agnes Hogg. He was grandson of James Hogg of ‘Teribus’ fame, and erected the gravestone to the memory of his parents and grandparents in Old Wilton Cemetery in 1909, replacing an older stone. He was a grocer in Hawick, being foreman in the business of Mungo Wilson on Silver Street, and later taking over. After his death the shop was acquired by Oliver and Thomas Mason Hardie. John (d.1483) from the Laings of Redhouse near Edinburgh, he held minor benefices and acted as secretary to Mary of Gueldres in the 1460s. He became Royal Treasurer from 1470 and was Clerk Register. In 1474 he was appointed as Bishop of Glasgow, thus becoming Hawick's bishop. He founded a Franciscan friary in Glasgow in 1476. He became Chancellor to James III in 1482 and was involved in the rejection of William Scheves, Archbishop of St. Andrews. His seal bore images of 3 saints, probably Kentigern, Michael and Catherine, and also the words ‘S’ JOHIS EPI. GLASGUENSIS’. John (16th C.) recorded as ‘John Lane’ on a list of tenants at Newton in Bedrule in 1531. John (17th C.) piper who was on a list of 16 local men named in 1627 by the Hawick Bailie as suitable for sending to the army in Germany, i.e. presumably considered undesirable to the town. While in Edinburgh Tolbooth he was among 7 of them who complained that they were not in fact the sorts of men who should be pressed into military service, but nevertheless were transported to the wars in Germany. John (17th C.) resident of Woll in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll. His surname is written ‘Leing’. John of Westerkirk (17th/18th C.) Chamberlain to the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1696 when he was on the Commission of Supply for Dumfriesshire. His children included: Walter, Chamberlain to the Duke of Buccleuch for Selkirkshire; John, Chamberlain in Liddesdale, who held lands at the Flex; Helen, who married James Grieve, tenant at Todshawhaugh; and another daughter who married Ogilvie of Brieryyars. John (d.c.1780) son of John of Westerkirk and brother of Walter. He was Chamberlain to the Duke of Buccleuch for Liddesdale in the period 1730–66. He also acted as ‘factor loco tutoris’, i.e. in place of one of the young Duke’s guardians for business in Teviotdale around 1756. In 1736 he rented ‘Stitchelhill and Leyes’ in Liddesdale from the Duke of Buccleuch. He lived at ‘The Roan’ and held lands at the Flex. He paid the window tax at Roan in Castleton Parish in 1748. He is recorded in 1774 writing from the Flex to his niece Meg (or Margaret) Elliot at Borthwickbrae, regarding the debts of Elliot of Borthwickbrae. He is also described as ‘of Burnfoot’ (probably in Ale Water); he was so recorded among the Commissioners for Roxburghshire in 1761 and on the roll of electors for Roxburghshire in 1780. The Elliots of Borthwickbrae eventually came to possess the lands of Flex and Old Melrose through this marriage to his niece. In 1777 he gained about 7 Scots acres of Hawick Common in the Division. John (18th C.) house servant at Wells in 1778 and 1779, when he was working for William Nassau Elliot. John (1744–1816) son of David, he was a mason in Hawick. In 1781 he married Agnes, daughter of Alexander Donald (also listed as Donaldson), and she died in about 1824. They had 9 children, including: David (b.1782), manufacturer in Hawick; Agnes (b.1783); Alexander (b.1786), who married his cousin Janet Roger; Helen (b.1788); Walter (b.1790); John (b.1792); James (b.1799). The witnesses in 1790 were masons Walter and David (probably his brother and father) and in 1792 were wright William Roger (who also married a Donald) and mason David (probably his father). An unnamed child of his died in Hawick in 1798. He may be the John who was recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls for Hawick. He conveyed all his property to his eldest son David, with the condition that he should pay £100 in rentals to his third son Walter a year after his death, or alternatively to give Walter half of the property of his ‘opposite to the West Pant-Well of Hawick’; because David ended up liable for his debts, but the other children renounced their claims, but still expected a share of money from this arrangement, it led to a dispute between the 2 brothers in court in 1829. John (18th/19th C.) mason of Hawick who worked on Stobs Castle around 1800 and who helped compile a ‘New Valuation of Houses and Gardens in the Town of Hawick’ in 1814. This may be the same mason who died at Doveshaughhead in 1824, aged 57 and whose wife Isabella Hunter died in Hawick in 1841, aged 69; this family are buried in Bedrule churchyard. He may be the Hawick mason whose unnamed child died in 1798. He is probably the Hawick mason who witnessed a baptism for William Douglas in 1794, along with mason David. John (1812–76) hosiery manufacturer of the mid-19th century. He was son of Alexander and Ann Wilson. He was partner along with his father in Dicksons & Laings from an early age. But after his father’s death he went into business for himself at 8 and 9 Slitrig Crescent, the firm being named John Laing & Sons; it survived until 2006. He is listed as a merchant in Hawick among heads of households in Wilton Parish for 1840 and 1841. In 1851 he was living at 18 Buccleuch Street and listed as a manufacturer of woollen hosiery, employing 28 men and 14 women. He was the first to introduce power frames into Hawick in 1858, and was also an early promoter of the use of merino wool. He was the first President of the Hawick Bowling Club. In the 1850s he was on the Railway Committee for Hawick District. He married Mary, 7th daughter of Thomas Anderson of Kirkcudbright, and she died in 1892, aged 68. Their children were: Alexander and Mary Marion (buried in Monten Cemetery, France), who did not reach adulthood; John Hugh Alexander, a doctor in Edinburgh; Janetta McNaught; Thomas Anderson, manufacturer; Patrick Anderson (b.1853), also manufacturer; and Samuel James Anderson (b.1861). He died at Slitrig House. A portrait of him exists. John (b.1814) son of David and Janet Fiddes, he worked as a draper and later was a hosier and coal merchant. He was cousin of John, the hosier manufacturer. His draper’s firm is recorded on the High Street in Slater’s 1852 directory. He lived at about 55 High Street in 1841 and 49 High Street in 1851 and 1861. His wife was Janet, and their children included James, Ellen, David and William. John (b.1817/8) from Bedrule, son of John, he was a boot-maker in Hawick. In Slater’s 1852 directory he was listed as a shoemaker on the High Street. In 1851 he was at about 29 High Street. In 1861 he is recorded at 10 High Street, and employed 8 men. John Turnbull (1854–1913) local manufacturer, son of Walter and Euphemia Turnbull. He was President of the South of Scotland Chamber of Commerce in the 1880s. He was prominent in local politics in the late 19th and early 20th centuries and lived at Linden Park. He was also on the original committee of Hawick Bowling Club, and President in the 1860s. He married Anna Drummond (1855–1931), 2nd daughter of Dr. George Thomson. Their sons were Walter, George, Ivan and Maurice Wyville. For several years the family held an annual New Year’s day mixed hockey match against the Grieves of Branxholme Park. Kenneth Joseph Price (b.1890) son of manufacturer Patrick. He married his cousin Florence Laing. He rode motorcycles in WWI until he learned to fly, becoming a pilot with the RAF in 1918, where he is credited as an ace with 5 victories. He is said to have been the first person to fly over Hawick. He was wounded in a motorcycle accident while on leave in 1918. He later worked as an engineer with John Melrose & Sons and lived well into his 90s. Maurice (1885–1955) son of John Turnbull and Anna Thomson. He was younger brother of Walter, George and Ivan. He was a successful district hockey player and later South selector. He served with the Royal Field Artillery in WWI and became Captain. He married Shiela Brown of Galashiels (unrelated to the other Browns who had married into this family). They had one son (who worked at the Cape Observatory) and several daughters. Norman Hugh Anderson (b.1888) son of manufacturer Patrick Anderson and Fanny Price, i.e. one of the ‘Balcary Laings’. He was a farmer at Cleuchhead. He married Cissy, daughter of Dr. George Gunn Bannerman. Their children included: George; Patrick, who received the Military Cross in WWII and set up the haulage firm P.A. Laing; and Drummond, who moved to Cape Town, South Africa. Patrick Anderson (1853–1921) son of John and Mary Anderson. He was a partner in John Laing & Sons, along with his brother Thomas. He lived at Balcary. He married Florence ‘Fanny’ Elizabeth (who was born in Chicago), daughter of Joseph Price of Clapham Common. She was sister of Mrs. Robert Pringle of Wood Norton, and died in 1917, aged 54. Their children were Patrick Lindsay Price (Major with the K.O.S.B. in WWI), Norman Hugh Anderson (farmer at Cleuchhead), Kenneth Joseph Price (engineer with Melrose’s) and Margaret Frances Lindsay (married Isaac Grey Wallis). This branch of the family were known as the ‘Balcary Laings’. Patrick Lindsay Price (b.1886) eldest son of Patrick Anderson and Fanny Price. He was a Major in the K.O.S.B. and was awarded the Military Cross in WWI. Patrick Anderson (20th C.) from the Balcary Laings, son of Norman. He served with the 51st Highland Division at Dunkirk and later transferred to the Reconnaissance Corps. He was awarded the Military Cross in 1945. He set up the haulage firm P.A. Laing. in 1955. He married Shirley, daughter of Hawick lawyer Guy H. Armstrong. There children were Hugh and Lucinda Steen. Robert (16th/17th C.) merchant of Hawick, probably a tanner. He gave evidence in the 1612 case of the death of Jock Elliot. He was ‘in the Kirkyairst of Hawick pricking some skynnis’ (showing that at that time the churchyard was used for many purposes) and found Elliot ‘hingand in his awin belt; quilk belt he cuttit, and thair being lyfe in the defunct, was brocht out, bot shortlie thairefter he deceist’. He may have been the same Robert who signed the 1640 ‘Act of Bailies and Council’. Robert (17th C.) witnessed a baptism for weaver Robert Bennett in Hawick in 1656. Robert (18th C.) footman at Minto House in 1788, when he was working for Sir Gilbert Elliot. Thomas Anderson (1851–1920) son of manufacturer John and grandson of Alexander. He was a partner in John Laing & Sons, along with his brother Patrick. He was Honorary Treasurer of the South of Scotland Chamber of Commerce in the 1880s. He lived at Netherwood and Langlee. He married Agnes Eliza Douglas Brown from Kirkcudbrightshire (who died in...

1933); she was sister of Esther Brown who married M.P. Alexander Laing Brown. They had a family of 11, including a daughter (who married Charles W. Grieve of Branxholme Park), Donald McLeod (who married his cousin, Margery Haddon), and Florence (who married her cousin Kenneth). This branch were known as the ‘Nether-wud Laings’. Walter (17th C.) son of Bailie James. He was witness to a sasine in Hawick in 1687. Probably the same Walter witnessed a baptism in 1687. He is likely to be the merchant and listed among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. It is possible he was a witess to a baptism for Andrew Angus in Hawick Parish in 1678. Walter (1649/50–1736) son of John of Westerkirk. He was a ‘writer’ in Edinburgh. From 1717 he was Chamberlain to Francis, Duke of Buccleuch, covering Eckford, Lemplitlaw and Langton (as well as Ettrick Forest for part of this period) and being based at Newark. He served in this function until 1734, being succceeded by William, probably his son. In 1716 he is ‘clerk to ye Duchess of Buccleugh’ and ‘Tenent of Park’ when his ‘servitor’ Walter Little married Janet Scoon. He married Margaret, 2nd daughter of Alexander Johnston of Elshieshells about 1713. His sons were probably William, Gilbert and James. His eldest daughter Violet married David Scott, tenant at Carterhaugh and his 2nd daught er Marion married John Laing, farmer at Westerkirk (and surely a relative) about 1750. Another daughter, Margaret, married John Ell-liot of Borthwickbrae (and through her the Eliot of Borthwickbrae would come into possession of her uncle John’s lands of Flex, Old Melrose, etc.). He died at Todshawhaugh, home of his brother-in-law James Grieve. Walter (b.1680) son of William and Jane Thorbrand. He is probably the Walter who married Janet Brunfeld, and had children Elspeth (b.1703) and David (b.1710); although only his wife witnessed the baptisms. He may have run off with a close family member, probably to England. Walter (d.bef. 1764) probably son of Walter, he was also sometimes Chamberlain to the Duke of Buccleuch at Newark. It is said that he was given the position after risking his life to save some papers for the Scotts of Buccleuch at Dalkeith House. His eldest daught er Margaret married John Elliot of Borthwickbrae in 1764, and she later inherited the lands of Meikledale, Flex, Old Melrose and Burnfoot. He had a son Gilbert who became a merchant in St. Petersburg and another son, William of Meikledale. James may have been another son.

His relationship with John (also a Chamberlain to Buccleuch) is unclear. Walter (d.1798) son of David, he was a mason in Hawick. He is probably the son of David and Helen Wallace born in Hawick in 1733. He is probably the mason Walter who (along with mason David, likely his father) witnessed a baptism in 1790 for mason John (likely his brother). Walter (b.c.1790) farmer at Denholmhill. He is probably also the builder in Denholm, recorded on Pigot’s 1825/6 directory.
He acquired Denholmhill farm in about 1818 and expanded the quarrying, which had been started by the Ferguson and the Littles. He opened up the eastern (white) quarry and the western (red) one. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He was still alive in 1851, but dead before 1861. His son Walter took over the farm and quarry. Walter (b.1819/9) son of Walter. He took over the farm of Denholmhill and the quarry there. In 1861 he was farming 520 acres, employing 26 people on the farm, and also tenant of the quarries, employing 37 masons and 26 labourers. He was still recorded there in 1868. His wife was Margaret, and their children included Walter, Christina, Thomas, Adam and Helen. Walter (1820–1895) manufacturer of Laing & Irvine’s and later ofDicksons & Laings.
He was son of Alexander and Ann Wilson and brother of John. He carried on with the firm afd after his brother John split off to form John Laing & Sons. He lived at Springbank and later Linden Park. He was a member of the new Town Council who argued for continued Council involvement in the Common Riding in the 1860s. He was also one of the founders of the Working Men’s Building & Investment Co., and its Chairman from 1890–

95. In addition he was on the School Board and became Chairman of the Science and Technical School in Hawick, as well as the School of Art.
A Liberal in politics, he was President of the Hawick Advanced Liberal Association. He married Euphemia Turnbull, who died in 1895. They had a large family, but all except John Turnbull died before reaching adulthood. Walter (1882–1959) son of John Turnbull and Anna Thomson. He was brother of Maurice, Ivan and George. He played for Hawick R.F.C. and served in the Coldstream Guards. There is a letter from him to his brother Maurice, bringing the news of Ivan’s death on the front. He married Joan Gotto from Belfast and had 2 children. He died in County Down.

William (17th C.) tenant in Earlside, brother of James, who was Bailie in Hawick. He was tried in 1678 for being a Covenantant supporter. However, he must have escaped (perhaps one of the men to flee when their transport ship was abandoned in London). He is listed among those declared fugitives for refusing to take ‘the Test’ in 1684. He was fined 500 marks for attending meetings of outed ministers. Later the same year he was recorded as being ‘in Hawick’ when he was banished ‘to the plantations’ along with several other men. Their crime was ‘rebellion and resett of rebels’, meaning religious non-conformity following the re-introduction of Episcopalianism.

On this second occasion he did not escape, but was among 32 men who were transported to Carolina, subject to great hardship on the journey and then after arrival, so that only 6 returned after the Revolution. He may be the William ‘Lyng’ whose widow was recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls, listed after the house of Earlside in 1694. He might be the William on the list of Hawick men named in the 1673 trial following the so-called riot at St. Jude’s Fair. He could be the William who witnessed a baptism for James Hamilton in Hawick in 1673 and another for William Welch (or ‘Wetch’) in 1675. He may be the William who witnessed a baptism for William Scott (who probably lived in the Borthwick valley) in 1676, as well as for Rev. Patrick Cunningham in 1680.

Bailie William (17th/18th C.) Hawick Councillor recorded in 1683 and 1684, who was Bailie in 1685 and in 1697. In 1685, along with Walter Scott, he had permission from the Council to be reimbursed for the costs of building the ‘Steeple Loft’ in St. Mary’s, suggesting that he was Bailie around the time of construction. In 1688 and 1700 he witnessed baptisms for merchant John Scott ‘Whiteyetts’ and he witnessed another for Robert Hogg in Weensland in 1688. He was ‘late baylyea’ on the list of subscribers for the Kirk bell drawn up in 1693/4. He is probably the ‘Wm Laing laite Bailyea’ who paid tax for 4 hearths on the west-side of Hawick, according to the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694; this suggests that he lived in a large house. He is probably the William who, along with ‘Mr James’ witnessed a baptism in Hawick in 1700 for glover James Scott. He was ‘late Bailie’ in 1700 when witnessing a baptism for schoolmaster John Purdom. He witnessed baptisms for shoemaker John Scott in 1708, for wigmaker John Scott, for glover James Scott and for tailor John Scott in 1709, for smith Thomas Huntly in 1714, and for miller Robert Elliot and for William Ogilvie (who married his daughter) in 1718. He could be the same ex-Bailie who in 1721 gave the excuse that he could not mount the ‘pillar’ of repentance in the Kirk because he was ‘valetudinaire and troubled with an uneasiness in his hough and feet’; the Session allowed him instead to pay a fine and be rebuked in his usual pew; it is unclear what his transgression was.

In 1716, 1718 and 1721 he witnessed baptisms for John Ekron. He was probably the William born in Hawick in 1652/3, son of James and Helen Elliot. This William married Jane Thorbrand (probably daughter of Bailie James), and their children were: James (b.1676); Jane (b.1678); Walter (b.1680), who married Jane Brunfield; David (b.1681); Margaret (b.1684), who married James Gledstains; Helen (b.1686), married a Grieve; Anna (b.1688), who married John Watson, Clerk to the Regality and then John Scott in 1724; John (b.1689); and Martha (b.c.1690), who married William Ogilvie. The witnesses in 1676 were William Elliott of Stobs and Thomas Scott of Whitslade, suggesting that he had some standing in the Town at that time. The witnesses in 1680 were William Scott, glover and Mr. John Purdom and in 1688 were James Scott and Robert Wright. In 1720 he was ‘late bailie of Hawick’ when he and Isobel Tait were recorded as ‘Fornicators’ when their daughter Mary was baptised. He is probably the William ‘Lang’ mentioned in 1735 when the widow of Robert Scott of Falnash sold her property on the Howegate, which was to the west of his, which by then belonged to James Scott.

William (1715/6–74) Chamberlain to Anne, Duchess of Buccleuch. He had a house on the Fore Row, referred to as ‘the Chamberlain’s Hoose’. He may also have been related to the William who, in the 1720s, owned a small corn farm and yard to the north (i.e. in Wilton Parish) of where the Grammar School was built at the Sandbed. He succeeded as Chamberlain for Ettrick Forest in 1735, taking over from Walter, probably his father; he served in this capacity until 1766. He was recorded in a Selkirk libel case in 1737. His brother was James, and he must also have been related to John, who was Chamberlain for Liddesdale (probably his uncle). Gilbert was probably another brother. Hudshouse (in Castleton Parish) was rented to him and his brother by the Buccleuch estates in 1742. In 1750 he purchased the lands of Meikledale from William Scott. He left these lands to his nephew, William Elliot Lockhart. William Elliot Lockhart. William (18th/19th C.) tenant of Sinton Mains. In 1813 he brought a case against John Smith, carter in Selkirk, claiming that Smith had taken his cart and harness when they were with an innkeeper in Edinburgh (also spelled ‘Lainge’, ‘Laaying’, ‘Layinge’ and ‘Leing’ in earlier documents).

Laing an Irvine’s (läng-an-ir-vinz) n. wholesale tweed merchants of the 19th century, with their main factory built in 1856 at the corner of Commercial Road and Bath Street. They were effectively an offshoot of Dicksons & Laings, being tweed manufacturers and later tweed merchants. For a while they operated out of Stonefield Mill. They also had a mill in Peebles. At the 1867 Paris Exposition the firm gained a bronze medal as a manufacturer of cloth. They went bankrupt in 1868, and the building later had many uses. They also traded at 26 High Street, which was sometimes called ‘Irvine’s Close’. The partners were Alexander (‘Allie’) Laing and William Irvine. The company partially reformed as Irvine, Grierson & Stevenson. There were also later firms of Laing, Michie & Graham and Laing & Gawn, which merged into Currie, Lee & Gawn.

Laing Terrace (läng-ter-ris) n. short street off Dovemount Place, built in 1872, and named after the Laings of Dicksons & Laings. It was essentially built to provide nearby housing for workers at Wilton Mills.

lains (länz) n., pl., poet. loins – ‘For my lains ar fillet wi’ foulsumese deseese, an’ ther is nae sunderness in my flesh’ [HSR], ‘Let thair eyne be derkenet that thaye seena, an’ let thair lains continwallie shak’ ’ [HSR].

laip (läp) v., arch. to lap – ‘A dog or cat licks or laps (=laps) milk, etc.’ [ECS], ‘...the cuill, silver Teiot, where it laippeet bye leafy Monteviot’ [ECS], ‘The dog’s laipin’ a’ the kittlin’s milk’ [GW] (also written ‘lape’).

laipie-luggit (lä-pee-ih-git, -gi’) adj., arch. lop-eared, having prominent or protruding ears (also ‘laipy-lugget’ etc.; noted by E.C. Smith).

lair (lär) n., arch. a place of shelter for livestock – ‘Three lambs I hae on Crawbrae lair Will no be worth a benty-strae’ [HSR], a final resting place, burial plot v., arch. to drive livestock to an enclosure – ‘That part of the Common called the west end of the little Bailie Hill, where Mungo Armstrong used to lair the black cattle under the charge in the middle of the day’ [C&L] (from Middle English; the word exists in several local place names, e.g. Cherry Lair, Dinmont Lair, Ewelair Hill, Lairhope, Lairs, Lamblard Edge, Lamblair Hill, Lamblair Knowe, Lamblairs, Marklair and Nolt-lair).

laird (lärd) n. a landowner, landed proprietor, nobleman, lord – ‘For here’s the laird’s Jock, the laird’s Wat, And Hobie Noble, come to set thee free’ [CPM], ‘My faither was laird o’ a wee stockit mailin’ ’ [JT], ‘Says the auld laird ‘We’ll hae nae crap This drookit year’ ’ [WL], ‘There was no belly-crawling dedication to some laird who had promised to take a dozen copies’ [DH] (also sometimes capitalised; in Scotland the word was applied to the owner of a estate of any size and hence is closer to the English ‘squire’ than ‘lord’).

Laird (lärd) n. nickname of James Scott, the first recorded Cornet. Thomas and Robert Scott are both recorded in 1693/4 with the same nickname, suggesting perhaps that they were all related, as well as an earlier James recorded in 1676. John Chisholme also had this same nickname in 1712. There are other similar nicknames, e.g. ‘the Blue Laird’, ‘the Black Laird’, ‘the Duddie Laird’ and ‘the Muckle Laird’. Many of these may have been Hilliesland ‘Lairds’, i.e. local men who kept fields up beyond the Wellogate, or elsewhere around Hawick. When a landowner had a grown son they would often be the ‘Auld Laird’ and ‘Young Laird’. In earlier centuries it was common for the sons of a major landowner to be known as ‘the Laird’s Wat’, ‘the Laird’s Jock’, etc.

the Laird (thu-lärd) n. nickname of the 18th and early 19th centuries, commonly given to men with some property, e.g. William Laidlaw, even small fields, e.g. the Hillsiesland Lairds. It may also be that the name was used jocularly or ironically. A person called ‘John ye Laird’ was one of the poor of the Parish who is recorded receiving some of the collection in 1711 and ‘Wat the Laird’ was recorded around 1800.

Laird’s Hill (lärdz-hil) n. hill in the upper Borthwick valley, just north-east of Old How-pasley, reaching a height of 343 m.

lairdship (lärd-ship) n. state of being a laird, territory and rights of a laird – ‘...and the said lairdship of Coklaw to cum to the airis famail of the said James ... ’ [SB1519].
Laird’s Knowe

Laird’s Knowe (lärdz-nou) n. small hill on Craik Moor, just to the north of the old Roman road. The stream to the north-east is Laird’s Cleuch Sike. It is unclear which Laird gave his name to these features.

The Laird’s Wat (thu-lärds-waw) n. popular name for Walter Scott of Goldielands – ‘...And the laird Watt, that worthy man, Brought in his surname, weill be’t seen’ [CPM].

lairge (lärj) adj. large – ‘...aw just went rummaging aboot, an’ then aw saw a lairge fire, an’ made ma way towards it’ [JHH].

lairge (lärj) adv., arch. boastfully (this meaning peculiar to Roxburgshire), adj., arch. boastful, bombastic, copious, full – ‘...and obligt that the sd. persones shall give satisfactione to ye kirke as orthodox and largie’ [BR1689].

Lairhope (lär-hop, lär-rup) n. former farm above Falnash on the Lairhope Burn, with a small loch nearby. The track here used to be (before about the mid-18th century) part of an alternative road from the south towards Hawick, crossing over to the upper Borthwick valley via Old Howpasley. The main lands were originally ‘Lairs’, with the ‘hope’ being attached, and later the base name being lost. It may be the ‘laries’ where Robert Turnbull was recorded in 1493 and ‘Robertus Scot in Lairs’ is recorded in 1501. It seems likely to be the ‘towne callid Ladduppe in Tyvidaill, of the Larde of Howpasleis callid Scot’ which was burned by a band of Armstrongs in 1543/4. Matthew Little was tenant there in 1576. Andrew Armstrong was there in 1623. It was valued in 1627, paying ‘50 lb., vicarage 10 lb.’, listed along with Chisholme and Parkhill. Walter Scott of Newton was owner in 1678, when it was valued at £266 13s 4d. It is listed along with ‘Lares’ in the list for the ratification of the Baroncy of Hawick to Anna Duchess of Buccleuch in 1686. Janet Greive was listed there among the poor of Hawick Parish in 1694. James Hislop was there in 1698. James Nichol was tenant there in 1705 and John Nichol was herd in 1711. The farm was purchased by the Buccleuch estates from the trustees of Elliot of Fenwick around 1756, when it was referred to as the ‘5 merkland of old extent of Lairs alias Lairhope’. James Renwick was there in 1786. In 1788 and 1811 it is ‘Larehope’ when valued at £266 13s 4d as part of the properties of the Duke of Buccleuch. John Anderson was shepherd there in the mid-19th century, George Rutherford in 1841 and Walter Elliot in 1851 and 1861. On the south-east slope of Lairhope Braes are the foundations of several buildings and enclosures of unknown age, probably a township by the side of the former main road (it is probably the ‘Larishop’ of 1500, and is ‘Lairhowp’ in 1576, ‘Lairhoip’ in 1623, ‘Lareshope’ in 1686, ‘Larehop’ in 1698 and ‘Larehope’ in 1711; it is marked ‘Lairhoop’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map; ‘lair’ is Scots for a place where animals sheltered).

Lairhope Burn (lä-rup-burn) n. stream in the headwaters of the Teviot, joining Hazelhope Burn to become Falnash Burn. It rises around Pike Hill and is fed by smaller streams such as Ruthead Sike, Hare Grain, Lousey Hass and Crib Sike. There is a marshy area around Lairhope farm.

Lairhope Braes (lä-rup-bräz) n. hilly slope just to the west of Lairhope, in the headwaters of the Teviot. The name presumably derives from being a slope on the old road that used to pass from here to the top of the Borthwick valley via Howpasley.

lairn (lärn) v. to learn – ‘she gien thum a bible verse ti lairn every night’, ‘A lairned eet frá mi fäther’, ‘...gie me understan’in’, that I may learn thy commandments’ [HSR], ‘Gin I hadna trawelled,’ the first ane said, ‘I had never lairned.’ ‘Gin I hadna my buiks,’ quo the second ane, ‘I had naething airned’ [WL], to teach – ‘that skelpin lairned um aa right’, ‘This day Mr John Purdom gave in ane account of poor scholar’s quarter wages ... and other three in the end of the account are set down, whom he learned gratis’ [PR1712], ‘Ye glorwin’ idiot. That’ll lairn ye tae glower at me’ [JEDM], ‘...Lairnin hunders o Hawick rugby boys The basics o the game’ [IWL].

lairnt (lärn) pp. learned – ‘...And mony generations syne, Cauldrie, I should hae lairnt to care’ [DH], ‘...that’s where hei lairnt about the world’ [IWL], ‘And the thing that makes oo spacial Is oo speak in oor ain way, And now that oo hev lairnt ee, Ee can dae eet tae’ [IWL] (also written ‘lairnd’).

Lairs (lärz) n. original name for lands that were later known as Lairhope. Robert Turnbull ‘in laris’ was recorded in 1493. It was owned by George Scott in 1501, with some dispute over whether it had been historically held ‘in blanch farm’ or ‘by ward and relief’, from the superior, James Douglas of Drumlanrig. Robert Scott was also recorded as tenant there in 1501. The lands of ‘Lares and Lareshope’ are listed among lands owned by Anna Duchess of Buccleuch in 1686, so they were separate at one point (it is ‘Laris’ in 1501: see also Lairhope and Larristofts).

Lairs Knowe (lārz-nəw) n. area to the west of the road up the Harden Burn, roughly opposite Old Harden.

laishur (lā-shur) n. leisure (also formerly leasure).

lait (lāt) v., arch. to allure, entice (noted as an old Teviotsdale word by J. Jamieson).

laith (lāth) adj. loath – ‘To hurt the creatures I’ll be laith, Gar but the owner pay the skaith’ [JR], ‘To injure you I would be laith, So hide not thou thy horns frae me . . . ’ [TCh], ‘Bit ‘nae man can tether tieme nor teide,’ an, sweer-drawn an laith tho A was . . . ’ [ECS], ‘. . . Ilk feathered songster’s laith to gang Frait the Bank aboon the Boosie’ [DA], ‘Sae, naething laith, hei drank it slowly doon . . . ’ [DH], ‘Aw tell o’ the day that Scobie was laith . . . ’ [MB].

laithly (lāth-lee) adj., poet. loathsome, horrible – ‘Aboon the aizles’ dying gleid, The laithly kerlyn satte’ [JTe].

Laitin (lā’-in) n., arch. Latin. The following gem is meant to have been recited by a Hawick pupil in the early 1800s – ‘Cæsar Galliam intravit summa diligentia omnibus copiis (Cæsar entered Gaul on the top of a diligence, his forces going in the omnibus)’.

Lakes Haugh Park (lāks-hawch-pawrk) n. former name for a piece of land in Minto Parish. It was listed ‘Lake’s-haugh’ in 1779, with a value of £36 9s 10d. It was among lands lferented to Robert Trotter in 1779, but disputed in 1780, with a rental of £10. It was still listed in the Land Tax Rolls of 1811.

Lal (lawl) n. nickname for Alex Laing.

Lamb (lām) n. Adam (d.1808) weaver in Hawick, son of weaver John. Perhaps the same Adam married Agnes Hogg (also from Hawick) in 1794. Adam (1826–1913) born in Hawick, son of John and Elizabeth. He trained as a thongmaker, but then emigrated to Galt, Ontario, later moving to MacGregor, Manitoba, where he was among the first settlers. He firstly married Janet Gibb, and secondly married Mary Queen. His children included Robert E. (1862–1932). Agnes ‘Bonnie Aggie’ (19th/20th C.) seller of confectionary in Hawick. She is believed to have been the originator of the recipe for Hawick Balls. She may have started in Needle Street and then moved to Commercial Road, where she was in business with Jessie McVittie. She certainly had a shop at 31 Drumlunrig Square for a while. She is probably the Agnes Lamb who married Robert Young, who was a baker at 75 High Street. Andrew (17th C.) tenant in Newlands. In 1684 he was listed among local men declared as fugitives for being Covenanters. Archibald (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was recorded in Cavers itself in 1741. His children included: Ann (b.1741); and Archibald (b.1743). Benjamin (b.1766) son of James, he was a weaver in Hawick. He married Mary Weens in 1790, and she died in 1806. Their children included: Elizabeth ‘Betty’ (18th/19th C.) recorded in 1799 when her illegitimate child was buried in Hawick. George (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, living at Wester Mill in 1751. Probably the same George witnessed in 1751 a baptism for Walter Ker, resident of Borthaugh. He married Mary Elliot in Wilton Parish in 1743 and their children included David (b.1745) and Jean (b.1751). The witnesses in 1751 were Walter and Robert Scott. George (18th C.) gardener who married Janet Laidlaw in Hawick Parish in 1759. Their children included: Margaret (b.1760); Janet (b.1763; Mary (b.1765); and George (b.1768). The witnesses in 1760 were John Laidlaw (probably related to his wife) and James Bridges. George (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Nelly Paisley and their children included: John (b.1779); George and Robert (b.1780); Margaret (b.1781); and George (again, b.1789). George (18th C.) Rector of the Grammar School James (b.1791); Agnes (b.1797); and Benjamin (b.1802). 1773–87. He may have been the first to use the title of ‘Rector’. He resigned from the position, presumably to take up another position elsewhere. It is not impossible that he could be the George Lamb described as a schoolmaster and formerly a dissenting minister, who performed ‘irregular marriages’ at Lamberton Toll near Berwick, dying in 1816, aged 68. He is recorded as ‘The Rev. Mr George Lamb’ in Hawick on the subscriber list for Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). George (18th/19th C.) gardener in Hawick who married Janet Laidlaw. Their children included: Margaret (b.1760); Janet (b.1763); Mary (b.1765); George (b.1768); and Walter (b.1771). The witnesses to the 1760 baptism were John Laidlaw and James Briggs. He is probably the George recorded as owner of a horse in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, and the George who died in 1802, father of cooper Walter. It is possible he is the George, son of John and Janet Scott, who was born in Wilton Parish in 1740. He may also be the gardener at Wilton Lodge listed in 1792–94, when he was working for Lord Napier. George (18th/19th C.) weaver in Hawick. His unnamed child died in 1809. In 1797 in Hawick possibly the same George married Betty Turnbull from Wilton. Hugh (18th/19th C.) Hawick baker. His daughter Betty died in 1801 and his son Hugh in 1805. James (d.c.1683) tenant in ‘Whitrig’ in 1683 when his will was recorded. This could have been Whitriggs or perhaps somewhere else in the counties of Roxburgh, Selkirk and Peebles. James (17th C.) name of 2 separate residents of Denholm on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. James (17th C.) resident at Flight in Castleton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. James (d.bef. 1808) weaver in Hawick. He was already deceased in 1808 when his son Adam died. James (b.1765/6) weaver who was an old man living at Slaidhills with his daughter Elizabeth in 1841 and 1851. James (b.c.1795) from Teviothead, he was an agricultural labourer. In 1841 he was living at ‘Eildrige Shank’, i.e. Eilrig Burnfoot and in 1851 he was at Dodburn. His wife was Catherine and their children included James, John, Catherine, George, Jane and Walter. Janet (17th C.) recorded among the poor of Haseendean Parish in 1694, when she was at Stirches. Janet (19th/20th C.) shopkeeper of a baby linen and fancy goods shop at 59 High Street. She can be seen outside the shop in an early photograph. The shop sign read ‘John Lamb’, presumably her father, and they must have been from the Needle Street family. She retired in 1928 and the business was sold to Miss Rutherford and later continued by Mr. Stormont. John (15th C.) tenant in Wilton who is mentioned in 1493. Jock Elliot (from Caverton) had remission for several crimes, including stealing 16 sheep from him. John (1652/3–1725) weaver in Bedrule. He is buried in the Bedrule kirkyard. He is probably the John listed on the Hearth Tax records for Bedrule Parish in 1694, and likely related to the William who is listed after him. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was recorded in ‘Gurnford’ in 1703, when his son John was baptised. This happened at the same time as the baptism of a son of John Lorraine, with the witnesses being Adam Scott and Walter Scott. He had other children George (b.1704) and John (again, b.1706). He may be the John who, along with William, witnessed a baptism for Robert Ormiston in Boonraw in 1696. He may be the John whose son William married Jean Turnbull in 1726. John (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was at Clarilaw in 1724. He is probably the John who in 1733 and 1738 witnessed baptisms for Robert Ormiston, resident at Boonraw. He married Bessie Collins in Wilton in 1711. Her surname is also recorded as ‘Colven’ and their children included: Janet (b.1718); and John (b.1724). The witnesses in 1724 were John Dryden and Thomas Dodds. He is probably the John who witnessed a baptism in 1729 for William, who was living at Stirches. John (d.1805) gardener on the Cross Wynd. In 1772 he witnessed a baptism for William Turner and Agnes Lamb (perhaps his brother-in-law and sister). He married Janet Turner and their children included Agnes (b.1757), William (b.1760) and Andrew (b.1761). The witnesses in 1761 were Bailie Robert Scott, merchant, and gardener Andrew (who was surely related to his wife). John (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1787 he married Isabel Welsh, also from Hawick. Their daughter Joan was baptised in Hawick, probably in 1789. The witnesses were Andrew Elliot and Thomas Miller. John (b.1793) son of James and Mary. He was a needle-maker at 10 Mid Raw. He is recorded there in 1841, 1851 and 1861. He was listed as a needle-maker in Slater’s 1852 directory. His wife was Janet and their children included Margaret, Mary, Elizabeth (‘Betsy’), Benjamin, Agnes, Isabella and John. Mary (18th C.) cook and chambermaid at Burnhead in at least the period 1786–88, when she was working for William Scott. Matthew (15th C.) resident of Raperlaw. In 1494/5 he was convicted of common theft ‘of old and new’, but his case was suspended. Miss (18th/19th C.) seller of ‘rock boos’ from the end of Needle Street in the 1800s. This could be the same as the person mentioned in ‘Hawick Immortals’ – ‘Auld Mag Lamb and her penny krame’. Robert (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He is recorded as a ‘fisher’ in 1708. He married Bessie Wilson and their children included James (b.1708), with baptismal witnesses carriers John Hardie and James Aitken and Bailie James Deans. Robert (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Jane Ormiston in Wilton Parish in 1764. Their children included: John (b.1765); Jean (b.1767); James (b.1769); Robert (b.1771); Janet (b.1772); and Robert (again, b.1781). The witnesses in 1769 were Andrew Turner and Thomas Reid, in 1772.

were Bailie Andrew Scott and Alexander Bunyan (Kirk Officer) and in 1781 were weaver John Briggs and Thomas Miller. Robert (b.1784/5) born in Hawick, he was a farm worker in Roberton Parish. He was living at Hosocate Cottage in 1841 and Deanburnhangh in 1851. By 1861 he was a gardener in Kelso. He married Christian Noble and their children included: John (b.1808/9); Betty (b.1810/1), who married a Gibson; Robert (b.1812); Margaret (b.1814); Robert (b.1816); Christian (or ‘Christy’, b.1819); Miney (b.1821); Agnes (b.1826); Peter (b.1832/3); and Barbara (b.1830/1). The first 2 children were baptised in Minto Parish and the next 4 in Ashkirk Parish. Robert (b.c.1832) born at Wilton Pathhead, son of John and Betsy. He trained as a woollen hosiery dresser, like his father. He emigrated to Galt, Ontario, along with his older brother Adam. They later moved to MacGregor, Manitoba, where they were among the first settlers. He farmed there and gave 2 acres of his land to establish a school, which he called Path Head School, after his birthplace. There is a cairn marking the location of the former school. Stewart (b.c.1815) Hawick resident who married Margaret Murray in 1840. He was found guilty of mobbing and rioting against Tory supporters at the 1837 election in Hawick, along with 3 others (and one who was found not guilty). Thomas (18th/19th C.) farmer at Woodhead (probably in Ewesdale). He was one of the founders of the Wisp Club in 1826. Thomas (1851–1939) Slater in Hawick. He joined the Hawick Fire Brigade in 1872, eventually becoming Captain and retiring from the service in 1922. Also a keen bowler, he won the Bucceuch Bowling Club championship 11 times. Walter (1771–1846) son of George and Janet Laidlaw. He was a cooper of the Sandbed, recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories. In 1841 he was living at about No. 6. He married Christian, daughter of William Phillips and Mary Scott. Their children included: George (b.1809), who moved to Canada; Mary (b.1811); William (b.1812), who trained for the ministry; Janet (b.1814); and Christian (b.1817), who was the 2nd wife of James Damone Kennedy. William (16th C.) recorded as Parson of Cavers Parish in March of 1546/7. It is unknown how long he held this position or if he was ever in the parish. He was the sister’s son and heir of Patrick Pantler, who was Abbot of Cambuskenneth and Secretary of State. William (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. William (17th C.) resident of Roberton Parish (when Hassendean was still part of it). He is recorded at Newton in 1688. He married Isobel Leyden in 1686 and their children included: William (b.1687); James (b.1688); and George (b.1689). The witnesses in 1687 were William Leyden and James Smith and in 1688 were William and James Leyden, who were surely related to his wife. He is probably the William who witnessed a baptism in 1681 and another for William Scott in Newton in 1683. He may be the William who, along with John, witnessed a baptism for Robert Ormiston in Boonraw in 1696. William (17th C.) resident at Stirches according to the 1694 Hearth Tax roll for Hassendean Parish. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Easter Alemoor in 1714 when his daughter Euphan was baptised. William (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was at Boonraw in 1724 and Stirches in 1729. He could be the William who witnessed a baptism in 1735 for William Scott, resident of Wester Burnfoot. He married Agnes Renvick in 1719 (and perhaps also proclaimed in 1718, although no wife’s name is listed). Their children included: John (b.1720); Jean (b.1724); Euphan (b.1727); John (b.1729); William (b.1731); and William (again, b.1735). The witnesses in 1724 were James and John Armstrong, in 1727 included William Lorraine and in 1729 were John Lamb (surely related) and John Scott. He is probably the William who witnessed a baptism for Walter Lorraine (resident of Stirches) in 1729 and another for John Lorraine in 1754. He could be the William ‘Ballad Singer’ who was already deceased in 1797 when his daughter Jean died in Hawick. William (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, son of John. He was recorded living at Wester Burnfoot in 1735. In 1726 he married Jean, daughter of Robert Turnbull, the marriage being proclaimed in both Wilton and Minto Parishes. Their children included: Jean (b.1728); Euphan (b.1734); Johanna (b.1735); and Robert (b.1739). The witnesses in 1735 were Walter Riddell and William Sanderson. William (18th C.) resident of Hawick who married Sarah Hume in 1763. His wife was from Minto Parish. They had an unnamed child baptised in 1766. William (d.1815) recorded in the Hawick death register as ‘Betty Ingles’s Husband’. It is unclear why he would have been recorded in this way, but presumably by the time of his death his wife was more well-known in the Town than he was. Rev. William (1812–77) born in Hawick Parish, he was son of cooper Walter and Christian Phillips. He was educated

His son Andrew was 5 when the family emigrated and died aged 95 in 1999; his ashes were returned to Hawick in 2001. Andrew ‘Andra’ (?–??) uncle of Ian and brother of Wullie. He was a stalwart committee man of the Archological Society and known for his sense of humour. Ian William (1952– ), B.E.M., High School History teacher, and son of Wullie. Educated in Hawick and at Edinburgh University, graduating in 1974, he then trained as a teacher at Moray House, returning to Hawick as a teacher in 1975. He later became Head of the History Department, retaining the position until retirement in 2009. He was the instigator of the battlefield tours for pupils and later adults from Hawick. He is writer of the words and music for ‘Auld Hawick, Ma Border Hame’, ‘My Teviot Valley’, ‘A’m Comin’ Hame’ and other more impromptu songs set to well known tunes. His poems include ‘The Vertish Hill’, ‘The Man that oo Ca’ Bill’ and ‘Doon Oor Close And Up Oor Stair’. He is frequent accompanist at Common Riding and other functions, having taken over in ‘the Hut’ from Adie Ingles. He has also been star of the annual Panto and played ‘Gibbie the Gowk’ in ‘The Gutterbludes’. He is a public speaker extraordinaire, local dialect enthusiast and general all-round entertainer. He has made a large number of valuable tape recordings of elderly locals (an archive of 150 cassette tapes being digitised in 2015), and contributed to local history and culture in innumerable ways. He also has an unrivalled collection of photographic slides relating to Hawick and area. He wrote ‘Honest men and bright-eyed daughters’ (1991), ‘Mair honest men’ (1993) and ‘Son of Honest Men’ (2000) with Derek Lunn, ‘Walking in the Land of the Reivers’ (2011) with Alan Brydon, and has contributed many articles to the Archaeological Society Transactions, as well as serving in most capacities on its committee. He wrote the musical plays ‘A Reiver’s Moon’ and ‘1514: The Musical’ with Alan Brydon. He was Hawick Citizen of the Year in 2000, Common Riding Chief Guest in 2004 and has been President of the 1514 and Callants’ Clubs. He also provides the acrostics for the Callants’ Club dinner guest. He was heavily involved in arranging the Adam Grant plaque, the James Thomson statue and the Bill McLaren bust. His ‘night cless’ has been popular for decades. He was recorded in dialect in 2004 as part of the BBC ‘Voices’ project. In 2013 he was awarded the British Empire Medal for services to the community in Hawick – ‘Now as maist o ee ken ‘A few remarks’ and ‘Ian Landles’ irni words ee wad expect ti come across in the same sentence!’ [IWL]. John Chapman Gray, J.P., ‘Chap’ (1892–1980), son of Bailie Andrew and uncle of Wullie. He had his schooling at Buccleuch and Wilton. He served an apprenticeship with Barrie & Kersel and spent the rest of his life with Innes & Henderson. In WWI he served with Lothian and Border Horse. He played rugby, swam and was in the water polo team in the opening game at ‘the Baths’. He was Cornet in 1921, Councillor from 1931 for South High Street Ward and Bailie from 1935. He served as Provost 1938–40, and has been described as Hawick’s first ‘working man’ Provost. The ‘Provost Landles Spitfire Fund’ raised money for the purchase of the ‘Teribus Spitfire’ in WWII. He rode the Marches himself in 1940, and led a group each year during the rest of the war. He was the first enrolled member of the Hawick British Legion, President of the Callants’ Club and of Hawick R.F.C. He was a director on the Board of the Co-op Society, Convenor of the County Health Committee and an elder in St. Andrew’s Church. Landles Road is named after him. Thomas (19th/20th C.) son of Bailie Andrew. He was a policeman and then worked with Urban Electric Co. in Hawick. He was a leading preacher with the Open Brethren. His son William was the local poet, father of Ian. William (14th C.) probably a descendant of John de Landales, who was great-grandson of Orm. He was granted the lands of Swinside and Renalston in about 1390, after they were forfeited by Robert Burrell. He was also granted a charter of lands in Oxnam. He was ‘William de Laundelis of Swynyshede’ in 1390 when he witnessed the charter of John Turnbull of Minto, granting Minto to William Stewart of Jedburgh. He also received a charter of lands in Oxnam, forfeited by John Wylie. His wife was Janet and they had a daughter Katharine, who married John Lauder. William ‘Wullie’, M.B.E. (1912–98) cousin of Bill and nephew of ‘Chap’, he was born at 7 Sandbed and educated at Bucceleuch and Wilton Schools. He worked in the knitwear industry, first for Turner & Rutherford and then at Glebe Mills, where he was company secretary. He later spent time working for Roberts of Selkirk.

and Thorburn of Walkerburn before returning to a Hawick firm in John Laing’s, and finally retiring in 1977. After retirement he wrote court reports for the Hawick News. However, it is as a writer that he is remembered, particularly as a poet, publishing over 400 pieces. Among these were ‘Oor Border Hame’ and ‘Borthwick Water’, both set to music. Many of his poems have local flavour, including ‘The Exile’s Return’, ‘A Callant’s Games’, ‘Hawick Sang’, ‘Hame Toun’, ‘The Centre o’ them a’, ‘The Rowan Hills sae Green’ and ‘The Herd’s Psalm’. His poetry collections include ‘A Breath frae the Hills: verses Scots and English’ (1950), ‘Gooseberry Fair, and other verses, Scots and English’ (1952), ‘Penny Numbers: poems Scots and English’ (1969) and ‘Turn o’ the Year and other poems chiefly in Scots’ (1989). As ‘Quartus’ he was writer of the ‘Thought For The Week’ Christian commentary column in the Hawick News; these were collected in ‘I to the Hills’ (1979), ‘All Good Gifts Around Us’ (1982) and ‘Roving Commission’ (1992). He wrote a short book on Will H. Ogilvie in 1992. He was awarded the M.B.E. for services to Borders literature in 1996. In addition he was a lay preacher, involved with the local Brethren Fellowship. He was father of Ian W. He is buried in Wellogate Cemetery.

Lang (lawng) n. formerly a common nickname for someone who was tall.

Lang (lawng) n. Andrew (1712–53) writer in Selkirk, son of John (Selkirk Deacon of Trades) and Isobel Murray (from Philiphaugh). He was recorded as the Procurator Fiscal in Selkirk in 1751. In 1741 he married Henrietta Chisholme, widow of Robert Mercer; she was daughter of William Chisholme of Broadlee and Ann Rutherford (daughter of Thomas Rutherford of Kowesouth). He drowned in the Ettrick and left a half of herself and her son John; she had several other discharges in the years until 1782. Andrew (1783–1842) son of John, who was Sheriff-Clerk of Selkirkshire. He was also Sheriff Clerk and served under Sir Walter Scott. His son John was also Sheriff Clerk and his grandson was the author, also Andrew. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He married Margaret Suter in 1809. Andrew (1844–1912) author, born at Viewfield in Selkirk. His parents were John, who was Sheriff-Clerk of Selkirkshire and Jane Plenderleath Sellar. He was descended from a family of trades deacons in Selkirk, and he also had Chisholmes of that Ilk and Murrays of Philiphaugh among his ancestors. He was educated in Edinburgh, St. Andrews, Glasgow and Oxford, and lived most of his life in London. He became a journalist, writing extensively for the Daily News and for Longman’s Magazine. He wrote such a varied selection of things that many people of the time believed he was a pseudonym for a whole group of writers! His collections of fairy tales and writings on angling are still widely read, but he was also a poet and essayist. For works of local interest, he edited Scott’s Waverley Novels, as well as his Poems and Ballads, wrote ‘Sir Walter Scott and the Border Minstrelsy’ (1910) and ‘Highways and Byways in the Border’ (1913, with his brother John). He is buried in Selkirk and the cottage hospital there was renamed the Andrew Lang unit. Janet (18th C.) laundermaid at Minto in 1791, when she was working for Sir Gilbert Elliot. John (d.1941) cousin on Andrew the author, and brother of Florence and Margaret, who both married Robson-Scotts. He worked for the Indian Civil Service. In 1923 he purchased Cleithaugh from the Duke of Roxburghhe. He also purchased Mervinslaw for the shooting. He was a member of the Roxburghshire District Council. He married Winifred Ethel Laurie (from the ‘Annie Laurie’ family). Their son William died when his aircraft crashed in 1941. Their 2nd son, John, was a Commander in the Royal Navy and inherited Newton. His wife remained at Cleithaugh until her death in 1958. John Robert (20th C.) 2nd son of John of Cleithaugh. He was a Commander in the Royal Navy. In 1967 he inherited Newton (near Bedrule) from his cousin Marjorie Robson-Scott. He married Jennifer Douglas and their children included Rear-Adm. John Stewart (b.1941) and Alistair Laurie (b.1943).

lang airm (lawng-aim) n., arch. to ‘make a lang airm’ means to help oneself at the table – ‘Now make a lang airm’ [GW].

langam lily (lawng-um-li-lee) n., arch. the dan- delion (a joking reference to Langholm).

Langbaulk (hum-bawk, lawng-bawlk) n. farmhouse on the left hand-side of Buccleuch Road, just after the Dunk, being at the end of the ‘Lumb- back’ road. It was formerly split into Easter and Wester parts. John Henderson was farmer here in 1797 and still recorded in 1841. Francis Henderson was there in the mid-20th century.

Langbaulk Road (hum-bawk-rød) n. more recently spelled Longbaulk, but pronounced ‘Lumb- back’, this is the right fork at the top of the Loan. It was probably developed as a proper road in about 1762, as part of the coach road to Carlisle before the ‘New Road’ was opened in 1815. It is now often used for country walks. Part of the original road is a grass-grown right-of-way, which leaves the metalled road and passes the Longbaulk farm steadings. It was named in 1965, with new private and council houses built here between 1970 and 1980. The part officially called ‘Longbaulk Road’ is a dead end, with ‘the Lumb- back’ continuing as Crumhaughhill Road. After the ‘New Road’ was built there was for a long
Langbaulk Toll-Hoose

Langburnshiels

Langbaulk Toll-Hoose (lum-bawk-töl-hooos) n. former toll-house on the New Road, being now the first house on Parkdaill.

Langbits (lawng-bits) n. lands in the Barony of Cavers. In 1519/20 they were promised from James Gledstains as part of the marriage contract for his son James, and a daughter of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch. It is unclear where exactly these lands were, but probably near Teviothead (written ‘Langbittis’).

Lang Burn (lawng-burn) n. stream in the upper Slitrig valley (essentially being the upper part of the Slitrig itself) running alongside the B6399 from Shankend to Langburnshiels. It is essentially formed from the confluence of the Leap Burn, Flosk Burn and Rope Sike. The lands there may be the same as those recorded in a Baronial dispute of Feu-Rule in 1562 (it is probably the tributary of the Slitrig marked ‘Langburn’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

Langburnshiels (lawng-burn-sheelz) n. Longburnshiels, hamlet and farm near Shankend on the Newcastleton road, once site of the ‘Turf Hotel’ used by railway labourers. It was contained within Hobkirk Parish and was once part of the estate of Elliot of Harwood, being listed as ‘Langburne’ among the Harwood farms on the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. Robert Oliver was there from around the 1760s, John Elliot shepherd at about the same time. Robert Elliot was recorded there in 1785, Robert Oliver 1786–90, Alexander Lillico in 1790 and Thomas Oliver in 1791–94. There was a Robertson there in 1797. The tenants were William Stephenson in the late 18th century till 1807, then James Mather from 1813, followed by Daniel Mather. The Carruthers and Elliot families were there in 1841, and the Carruthers and Scotts in 1851. Thomas Carruthers was manager of the farm there until the 1860s. The Hawick postman used to go as far as here by bicycle. Peculiar lines of stones have been noted on a nearby hill, examined by Alexander Michie and James Murray in 1863, as well as a possible hill-fort being described nearby (it is just ‘Langburn’ in 1790; this may be the place marked ‘Shells’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map; it has the modern spelling by Stobie’s 1770 map).

Langbyre (lawng-bir) n. former farmstead in the upper Teviot valley, near the modern Lymicleuch. It was among lands purchased by Gilbert Elliott of Stobs from Douglas of Cavers in 1620. It is listed among lands in the Barony of Cavers owned by the Eliotts of Stobs in the latter part of the 17th century. The lands were included among those of Lymicleuch when sold by William Elliott of Stobs to a group of Eliotts in 1670, but may have been bought back shortly afterwards. It was among lands inherited by Sir William Elliott from his father in 1692 (marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

Lang Cairn (lawng-kārn) n. Long Cairn, near the Kershope Burn, situated on Long Knowe, directly north of Scotch Kershope, now in the middle of Newcastleton Forest. It is the only known neolithic structure in Roxburghshire. It is a stone-built, barrow-like burial cairn, roughly pear-shaped, with maximum size about 53 m by 14 m, and with part of an exposed cist towards the north end. It was excavated around 1850 and investigated again in 1870 when it was said to contain ‘several stone coffins of various sizes standing exposed’. There is a nearby standing stone marking a boundary of the Debateable Lands.

Lang Cleuch (lawng-cloo-ch) n. stream that rises on the northern side of Skelfhill and runs roughly north-eastwards to join the Skelfhill Burn.

Langcleuch (lawng-clooch) n. former farmstead marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map in the upper part of the Allan valley, perhaps near Skelfhillhope. ‘Langcleuchside’ was listed as part of the lands of Ringwoodfield in 1660. ‘Langcleuchside’ is shown on the 1718 survey of Scott of Buccleuch lands, attached to Skelfill and Fairnyside. The cleuch itself is labelled on the map, corresponding to the modern Pen Sike. John Armstrong was farmer there in the late 18th century.

Lang Croft (thu-lawng-kroft) n. long field that once lay north and north-west of the present Crumhaughhill Road, and on part of which Longcroft Crescent and Road were built.

Langcroft Crescent (lawng-kroft- kre-sin) n. Longcroft Crescent, loop off Longbaulk Road, built in 1938 and named after the ‘Long Croft’ which once stood there.

Langcroft Road (lawng-kroft-rōd) n. Longcroft Road, street connecting Longcroft Crescent with Longbaulk Road, built in 1938 and named after the ‘Long Croft’.

Langcroft Road
Langdale

Langdale (lawng-di:l) n. remote area in Cumbria that was a neolithic axe factory. The polished greenstone volcanic tuff found here is the source for a large fraction of the neolithic axe-heads discovered around Britain. An example found at Borthwickbrae Burnfoot (measuring 4.5 × 1.75 × 0.75 inches and now in the National Museum) came from here.

lang drink o witter (lawng-drinık-ō-wi′-ur) n. colloquial expression for a tall, skinny person.

Lang Eild-rig (lawng-cild-rig) n. former name for lands near Newton in Bedrule Parish, recorded in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls.

langer (lawng-ur) adj., adv. longer – ‘Jimmy Rae’s no cuttin’ hair ony langer!’; ‘if ee stand there ony langer, ee’ll take ruit!’; ‘…and to remove from the town for ane yair and langer …’[BR1644], ‘He reas the text with haly anger, ’Till he could sit nor read nae langer’[JR], ‘Where will ye get a whisky soss To moistify your middler For now nae langer at Haremoss’You’ll hear thole, She tore his vera soul’[JTe], ‘Some say it is a gross abuse, Some say they’ll it nae langer’[DH] (note there is no hard g in the pronunciation).

langest (lawng-ist) adj. longest – ‘Aye’, he said, things lest langest efter they’re dune’’[JHH] (note the lack of the hard g in the pronunciation).

Lang Flow (lawng-flo) n. Long Flow, area between Redfordgreen and Bleak Law, marked on Ainslie’s 1773 map.

the Lang Field (thu-lawng-feild) n. name for the field of the Common, to the east of the road between Pilmuir and Pilmuir Rig farms.

Langflat (lawng-fla) n. former name for a farmstead bordering on the old Common, being the eastern part of Southfield farm, lying west of the road shortly before the Caa Knowe. Simon Learmouth and Alexander Kennedy were living there in 1694 when it is ‘Langflatte’ (mentioned in the 1767 description of the boundaries of the Common).

Langformacus (lawng-for-ma-ka:s) n. Longformacus, a village in Berwickshire, on the Dye Water, north-west of Duns, containing 18th century Longformacus House and associated unusual dovecote (the origin is ‘church meadow of Maccus’ in Old Welsh).

Lang Gill (lawng-gil) n. Long Gill, stream in a narrow ravine in the hills to the west of Newcastleton, rising on Millstone Edge and running roughly south to join the Black Burn. There are a couple of ruined bothies and sheepfolds along its banks, as well as turf-banked enclosure to the south (it is marked on the 1718 Buccleuch survey).

Lang Grain (lawng-gra:n) n. Long Grain, stream that joins the Whitrope Burn just south of Whitropefoot. There are grouse butts in the upper part and an old sheepfold part-way down. On the banks of the stream, just to the west of the main road are the remains of 2 shielings-huts. ‘Langgrainfit’ was a former farmstead on the drove road, once an important stopping point before the turnpike road (B6399) was opened. There are many other small streams with the same name, e.g. one in the headwaters of the Teviot, another at Mosspaul and a third near Altrieve in the upper Ettrick valley (‘Grain’ is Scots for a branch of a stream, derived from Old Norse).

Lang Grain (lawng-gra:n) n. stream that runs to the east to join the Black Burn near Mosspaul. It rises on Wisp Hill and forms part of the border between Roxburghshire and Dumfriesshire.

Lang Grain (lawng-gra:n) n. small stream that rises on Lamblair Hill and flows north-east to join Singleean Burn (it is marked on the 1718 Buccleuch survey).

Langgrainfit (lawng-gra:n-fi′) n. former farmstead on the drove road by Whitropefoot, near the foot of Long Grain.

Lang Hassendean (lawng-law-sin-deen) n. lands in the Barony of Hassendean, recorded in a charter of 1457 when they passed from William Cunningham to his son Neil, excepting the part called ‘Camehill’. There was a dispute among the Cunninghams, with the land being confirmed to Elizabeth (daughter of George Cunningham of Belton) in 1483, and confirmed again in 1514. The 1514 sasine states that the lands include a tower, so it may be that ‘Langhassendean’ was simply the name used for the main town of Hassendean. The ‘precept of sasine’ of 1514 also refers to ‘Eister Hassindeene’, so these may also be the same lands. A document of 1470 refers to the whole (half) barony as ‘Lang Hassindean’.

Langhauch see Langhaugh

Langhauch (lawng-hawch) n. former fortified house on the north side of the Teviot valley somewhere between Teviothead and Blackcleuch. The lands were listed among those held ‘in tenantry’ by the Baron of Hawick in 1511, 1572, 1594 and 1615. James Douglas of Drumlanrig had a ‘horning’ in 1607 for William Scott of Howpasley to remove from these and other lands. In 1624 the lands were purchased from the Earl of Douglas by Language

Robert Elliot of Falnash (along with Hislop). In 1647 Archibald Elliot of Falnash was served heir to his father’s 5 merk land there. They were sold back to the superior, James, Earl of Queensberry in 1650. They were owned by the Scotts of Crumhaugh from 1674. The lands of ‘Langshaugh water’ were inherited by Walter Scott of Langshaw from his father Francis in 1690, along with part of Falnash, Tanlaw Naze and Callshaw. The lands were among those inherited by Sir Francis Scott of Thirlestane from his brother Walter in 1695. It is ‘Longhaugh-water’ in 1707 when valued at £166 13s 4d (and can be identified as part of the Hawick Parish lands of Sir Francis Scott of Thirlestane in 1678). It is ‘Longhaugh-water’ in 1788 and ‘Langhaugh Water’ in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls, when valued at £166 13s 4d. (it is ‘Langhauch’ in 1511, ‘Langhauch’ in 1572, ‘Longhauch’ in 1610, ‘Langheuch’ in 1637 and ‘Langhauch’ in 1647; it is marked ‘Langhauch’ on Gordon’s c. 1650 map and Blaue’s 1654 map).

Langhaugh (lawng-hawch) n. farm on the Hermitage Water, between Netherraw and Hartsgarth. It is listed in a rental record of about 1376, valued at 10 shillings. It was held by the Elliots of Redheugh from the latter part of the 15th century to at least the early 17th. This is probably where Robert ‘Elwald’ was recorded as Laird there in 1494/5. Will Foster was recorded there in 1611. It was among the lands contested between the Elliots of Redheugh and the Scotts of Buccleuch in about 1612. It was one of 3 farms that Scott of Buccleuch claimed Elliot of Redheugh had falsly added to his charter; however, it was still owned by the Elliots in 1637. It was under a ‘wadsett’ until James Elliott (son of ‘Gibbie wi the Gowden Garters’) paid it off in 1639. The lands were valued (along with Hartsgarth) at £466 13s 4d in 1678. Christopher Irving of Binks purchased the farm (along with several others) in 1688, after Robert Elliot of Larriston became bankrupt. There was a shepherd recorded there on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. It was purchased by the Olivers of Dinlabyre about 1700 and sold in 1773 to William Sharp of Hartsgarth. Dyker William Thomson and family lived there in 1851. Before about 1874 it was owned by the Duke of Buccleuch. By the 18th century it appears that the farm had migrated down-hill. There is now a cottage marked there close to the road. On the eastern slopes of Thornside Hill above are 2 boundary dykes, probably defining the boundaries of the former farm, and area of about 50 hectares, including evidence of ancient field systems and rig lines. On a terrace on the hillside are the remains of a farmstead and hut (it is ‘Langalgh’ around 1376, ‘langhalch’ in 1494/5, ‘Langhauche’ in 1612 and transcribed as ‘Lahauche’ in about 1624; it is marked ‘Langhauch’ on Blaue’s 1654 map and ‘Longhaugh’ on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Langhaugh Waas (lawng-hawch-wawz, -walz) n. former farmstead near Langhaugh on the Wauchope estate, also sometimes referred to as ‘Wauchope Waas’ and popularly known as ‘the Waas’. It consisted of small patches of land between the road and the Rule Water. There may have been a small shop there in the early 19th century. The residents in the mid-19th century were William and Rachel Tait (also written ‘Langhaughwalls’, etc.).

Langheugh Hoose (lawng-hew-hoos, -hewch-hoos) n. villa-style house off Buccleuch Road designed by J.P. Alison in 1905. Langheugh Road was originally its drive-way.

Langheugh Road (lawng-hew-rød) n. private street off Buccleuch Road, opposite the playing fields, containing several large houses. It was developed largely in the period 1965–70, and named after several houses had already been built. Many of the residents use Buccleuch Road as their address.

Langholm (lawng-un) n. town 24 miles south of Hawick, along the A7, where the River Esk is met by the Wauchope Water and the Ewes Water. In the heart of riever country, it has been prominent in the tweed industry, with the first major factory being built in 1832; before that there was extensive employment in cotton manufacturing, and later the town was known for the production of checked cloth. Whita Hill (1163 ft) looms over the town, with the monument to Sir John Malcolm on the summit. It was actually 2 towns on opposite sides of the Esk, with the old town being made a burgh of barony in 1610 (with other charters later that century), and the new or ‘Meikleholm’ being built to a fairly regular pattern from 1778 by the Duke of Buccleuch. At the end of the 17th century it was temporarily in the county of Roxburghshire. The library dates from 1875–78 and the Town Hall from 1811–12. The ruins of Langholm Castle lie just to the north, built around 1526 and abandoned in the early 18th century. Additionally James Playfair’s Langholm Lodge was built 1786–89 as a hunting lodge for the Duke of Buccleuch. Langholm Common Riding dates back to 1759, with the first Cornet elected in 1817. It involves the carrying of traditional emblems through the streets and the unique ‘Crying of the Fair’ (an example proclamation being published as early as 1731), while the colours are based on those of the Derby winner. John Hyslop’s ‘Echoes from the Border Hills’ (1912, revised in 1992) contains anecdotes from Eskdale in the 19th century. The book ‘Langholm as it was’ (1912) was also written by John Hyslop, with a new edition appearing in 2002. Population 2,538 (1991) – ‘The roads atween Hawick And Langholm Are the roads atween Heaven and hell …’ [DH], ‘… was a gaird on the mail coach afore hei took ower the Croon Inn in the Langumi’ [BW1979] (it is ‘ye Langhame’ on Sandison’s c.1590 map, while ‘Cast. of Langhoome’ is marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

Langholm Castle (lawng-un-kaw-sul) n. ruined tower in Langholm, near the confluence of the Esk and Ewes Water, once home of the Armstrongs. It may have been built in the 1520s and abandoned 200 years later. All that now exists are the south wall and fragments of the adjoining walls. It is also known as ‘Langholm Tower’.

Langholm lily (lawng-un-lee) n., arch. a sobriquet for the dandelion (recorded in the Hawick News in 1954).

Langholmite (lawng-un-t”) n. person from Langholm. Famous Langholmites include Hugh MacDiarmid, Thomas Telford and William Julius Mickle.

over the hills to Langholm. The Parish Manse was at No. 23.

Langhope (lawng-up) n. former name for part of the farm at Crumhaughhill. There are several other places of the same name, including a height near the Wisp Hill, a stream that joins the Ale Water and a former property of the Scotts of Buccleuch near Melrose (it was mentioned in the court case for the division of the Common in 1767).

Langhope (lawng-hop, -up) n. Longhope, farm on the Langhope Burn near Todrig, west of Ashkirk, which was once a Scott possession. It is recorded in a document from the reign of William I, relating to the Diocese of Glasgow’s lands in Ashkirk Parish. They were Crown lands in the latter part of the 15th century, split into the ‘Eststeid de Langhop’, ‘Middillsteid’ and ‘Weststeid’. In the 1470s John Cranston of that Ilk had remission for the ‘grassum’ there. In the 1480s they were leased to Ainslies, Cranstons and John Scott of Todshawhaugh. In 1499 and 1501 they were assigned to Alexander Scott and his mother, Robert Scott of Stirches, Patrick Home and William Cranston of that Ilk. The land remained Crown property until at least 1502. In 1510 the west steading was feued to Thomas Cranston, the middle steading to Sir William Cranston and then Alexander Scott, and the east steading to Walter Scott; the middle steading was also called ‘Howford’, suggesting this was the place on the Ettrick, further to the north (making it unclear whether this was the same place or another Langhope on Ettrick). Walter Scott in Synton was tenant in 1541, paying £18 yearly. The meadow there ‘langhop medo’ was part of lands belonging to George Scott of Blindhaugh, which he assigned to his 3rd son William. ‘Robert Scot of Langup’ is listed by Scott of Satchells as one of the 24 ‘Penioners’ of Buccleuch (this probably around 1600). The Scotts of Langhope were descended from the Huntly branch, and owned the lands until about 1620. The old Scotts of Headshaw then bought the lands, which were sold (along with Headshaw) in 1629 to John of Yorkston, who passed it to his son John Scott of Langhope. ‘Langupmedow’ was owned by Scott of Woll in 1609. William of Langhope had a ‘wadset’ with Walter Scott of St. Leonards in 1669, and by 1677 Walter was ‘now of Langhope’. In 1688 it was sold to his son John Scott, then to Adam Scott of Bowhill in 1691. In 1691 the value was given as £18. Tax was paid for 5 hearths there in 1694. It was later owned by the Elliots of Minto (probably purchased along with Headshaw in 1696). Thomas Nivison was herd there in 1697. John Brydon was tenant there in 1784 and John Paterson in 1785. In 1785 and 1802 it was valued at £548 ‘of Stock’ and £33 for the teinds. Walter Todd lived there in the early 19th century and Thomas Scott in the 1860s. It is also mentioned in the ballad ‘The Fray of Elibank’ – ‘Though Andrew o’ Langhope had fa’n i’ the fight, He only lay still till the battle was by, Then ventured to rise an’ climb over the height, An’ there he set up a lamentable cry’ [ES] (the name occurs in the late 12th century; it is ‘Lang Hoip’ in 1541 and ‘Langhop’ in 1661; it appears on Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Langup’ and is ‘Langhope’ by Ainslie’s 1773 map).

Langhope Burn (lawng-hop-burn) n. stream that joins the Ale Water above Ashkirk. It is first noted as part of the boundary of the lands of Whitslade in a charter by William I and also as ‘the rivulet of Langhope’ as part of the boundary of lands granted toOrm of Ashkirk – ‘And now the dreary distance doth wear it like a bride, Out beyond Langhope Burn and over Essensive’ [WHO] (it is ‘rivulus de Longhope’ about 1170; there is another stream of the same name in the headwaters of the Ettric).

Langhope Drive (lawng-hop-driv) n. Longhope Drive, part of the private housing development at the top of Crumhaughhill, built in 1979. It is named after a former croft incorporated into Crumhaughhill farm, the name meaning a piece of enclosed land, usually a hollow.

Langhope Height (lawng-hop-h') n. hill south of Teviothead, being the western ridge of Comb Hill, with the stream called the Lang Hope nearby.

Langhope Rig (lawng-hop-rig) n. ridge above the Langhope Burn, between Shaws Under Loch and Akermoor Loch. Since 2015 it has been the location for a wind farm, consisting of 10 turbines. A related community fund has supported small projects in the neighbouring district.

langin (lawng-in) n. longing, desire – ‘Lord, a’ my langin is afore thee; an’ my gраenin’ isna hidden frae thee’ [HSR], ‘... an’ satisfieist the langin’ o’ ilka leivin’ thing’ [HSR], ‘... the thought, the langin’s, an’ the resolves o’ an exile thrae hame’ [BW1939].

langish (lawng-cesh) adj. longish, somewhat long – ‘Well, kindle the pipes chaps, and make yourselves sung, for it’s a langish yarn ... ’ [JEDM].

langit (lawng-ee, -i) pp., poet. longed – ‘Behald, I hae langet efter thy preceeps ... ’ [HSR], ‘... for I langet for thy commandements’ [HSR].

lang kail (lawng-kail) n., arch. a form of borecole that is purplish and with less wrinkly leaves than the more common variety, soup made from this – ‘If it was het, the langkail gully Play’d smash amang’t to end the tulzie’ [JR] (also written ‘langkail’; see also kail).

Langlands (lawng-lindz) n. former name for a large part of western Wilton town. The more extensive estate was the eastern half barony of Wilton, being the estate of the Langlands family since at least 1451. Robert of that Ilk’s estate in Wilton Parish was valued at £953 16s 8d in 1643 and he paid tax on £992 of land for the estate in 1663. It was still valued at £992 16s 8d in 1678. On the 1694 Hearty Tax rolls the estate is recorded as being composed of Whitlefield, Mervinslaw, Brieryhill, Dean Mill, Roughheugh and Hep. The Laird of Langlands is described as ceremoniously observing the marking of his land’s boundary with Hawick in the early 1700s. This happened at the Coble Pool and at Roughheugh Mill. The land remained in the family for 300 years, being diminished over time, particularly in the 18th century, and then sold off entirely in 1783 to Thomas Elliot. By that time the main estate was valued at £278 12s 8d and consisted of the half-Barony of Wilton, as well as Calaburn and ‘sundry inclosures in Rough-heugh, sold to other persons, but not yet disjoined’. It then passed to Lord Napier around 1790, to James Anderson about 1805 and finally descended to the Pringles. It was valued at £278 12s 8d in 1811, and some enclosures in Roughheugh were later sold to Rev. John Thomson, so that the value in about 1874 was about £262. By then the remaining property was known as Wilton Lodge and was purchased by the Town in 1889 as a public park. In older records there are people recorded living at ‘Langlands’, but it is not clear how extensive an area was covered by that designation. Note that there are several other places called ‘Langlands’, e.g. in Angus, Ayrshire, Devon, Essex, Falkirk, Kirkcudbrightshire, Lanarkshire, Somerset and Yorkshire (formerly spelled ‘Langlandis’, it is ‘Langlans’ in 1748).

Langlands (lawng-lindz) n. Victorian villa-style house in Sunnyhill, designed by John Guthrie about 1878. It was built for manufacturer Walter Pringle, and was one of the earliest villas in the Sunnyhill area. There were new stables, alterations and additions designed by Peddie &
Langlands

MacKay of Edinburgh in 1880. It was formerly the home of the Pringles and then Sir Thomas Henderson. Art deco style interior alterations were made in the 1920s or 30s. It is now split into ‘East’ and ‘West’ parts and is a grade C listed building.

Langlands (lawng-lindz) n. former name for lands in Liddesdale. They are recorded in 1541 along with Millholm, as pertaining to the Laird of Mangerton. The precise location is unknown.
It could be the same as the lands ‘called Langland, within a hedge, worth 33s. 2d.’ listed in the English part of Liddesdale in 1276 (it is ‘Lang-landis’ in 1541; the existence of this name also in Liddesdale is confusing).

Langlands (lawng-lindz) n. former name for land in Minto Parish. It is listed in the 1779 (and in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls) along with ‘Quarter of Whitefield’, valued at £73 3s 6d. It was among lands whose liferent was given to Rev. Robert Elliot (brother of Sir Gilbert Elliot of Minto) in 1779.
In 1780 it is listed as part of the eastern boundary of the lands of Hawthorn Park and Mailchester Park.

Langlands (lawng-lindz) n. former name for lands lying within the Barony of Caverton in Roxburghshire. The name occurs as ‘Langislandis’ in the Exchequer Rolls for the 1450s and 1470s.
There is presumably no direct connection with the lands in Witton.

Langlands (lawng-lindz) n. Adam (16th/17th C.) listed among the men who accompanied Robert Scott, younger of Haining in an attack on Selkirk Mill in 1608. Possibly the same Adam (tenant of some lands that are not transcribed) accompanied the Scotts of Whitehaugh, Head-shaw, Kirkhouses and Huntly when they forcibly took possession of the farm of Hartwoodburn in 1627. He may be the uncle of George of that Ilk recorded in 1610 when the family, along with several Scotts, petitioned for removal of a horning and reduction of penalties. George acted as cautioneer for him and several others, promising they would not harm Walter Scott in Hawick called of Todshawhaugh) and associates. Andrew (15th C.) monk of Newbattle, who was witness to a charter of the Barony of Cranston McGill in 1477/8. In 1488 he was Abbot of New-battle when he witnessed another document, and was Abbot until at least 1492. He may have been related to the local family. Andrew (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1610 as uncle of George of that Ilk when there a request to lift the ‘horning’ and modify the penalty on their ancestor. This was probably his father James, who was declared a rebel in 1581. It seems likely that he was brother of the previous Laird Robert. He may be the same Andrew who signed the ‘Confessions of Faith’ in Hawick in 1638. Charles (16th C.) recorded in 1531 as ‘Karolo vicario de Dryvisdall’, i.e. Vicar of Drysdale near Lockerbie. It is unclear how he was related to the other Langlands. Gavin (16th C.)
recorded in the register of Cupar Abbey in 1550.
George (16th/17th C.) of that Ilk, son of Robert.
In about 1611 he was served heir to his father in the half lands and Barony of Wilton, including the alternating advowson of the Parish Kirk. In 1610, along with his brothers Robert and James and his uncle Andrew, as well as several Scotts, he asked for suspension of the ‘horning’ (possibly the one imposed on James in 1581), and reduction of the penalties imposed to find caution that they not harm the Scotts of Todshawhaugh and Ormiston.
His cautioner in this dispute was William Scott, younger of Harden, while he himself acted as cau-tioner for the Scotts of Sinton, Whitehaugh and Burnfoot, as well as Robert, James and Adam Langlands, plus Roger in Hawick. He was confirmed in the half barony in 1614 and is recorded in a charter (related to Easter Heap) in 1615. In 1616 he was foreman of the jury that convicted Jock Scott ‘the Suckler’ guilty of multiple thefts.
He may have been succeeded soon afterwards by John, who is recorded as ‘of that Ilk’ in 1617.
However, he may be the same George who was recorded several times until 1638 (if John was not actually Baron). George (17th C.) of that Ilk. He possibly succeeded his father John (or is the same as the previous George). He is listed as Laird in 1628 among the major landowners who met to elect M.Ps. for Roxburghshire. He signed the Confession of Faith in 1638. This document was also signed by Robert ‘fier of that Ilk’ (i.e. probably his son and heir), together with Andrew and Walter of Brieryhill (probably close relatives). He was probably the George who married Esther Scott, younger daughter of ‘Auld Wat’ of Harden (and widow of Elliot of Fahnash). George died in 1681 of that Ilk. Probably son of Robert, he is recorded as witness to a Gledstains christening in 1672. The length of his tenure as Baron is uncertain. The land tax was paid by the ‘laird of Langlands’ in 1678 (for about £990), with the name not given, suggesting perhaps he was recently deceased and formal succession not yet established. His wife was Janet Douglas, whose will exists from 1681 (when she was ‘relict of George Langlands, of that Ilk’). Her ‘plenishing’ included ‘feather beds, bolster and cods, some of which were stuffed with worsted, blankets, sheets and table linen, servitors, board cloths, towels, spindles of worsted, and straiken yarn, round stoupit beds, kists, barrels, tubs, koags, and nickers, one and a half dozen trenchers, pair of clatts and (hand) cairds, heckles, reeds, dishes and ladles, baskets and creels, posset pig, pair of raxes and ane speit, broad pleats, two chandleis, salt fat, ane pot and flaggon, ane pynt stoup, crook, girdle and pot coffer’ [DMW]. George (d.1689) eldest son of John, minister of Wilton. His will exists, where he left a parcel of books and other goods, some money and bonds due to him. This is recorded at the commissariot of Peebles in 1690, where he is ‘Mr. George Langlands son to Mr. John Langlands late minister at Wiltoun’. It is unclear where he might have been a minister himself (or if he was instead a schoolmaster perhaps). He is probably the ‘Mr Geo: Langlands’ who witnessed a baptism in Hassendean in 1687 for Adam Scott and Esther Langlands (who was his sister). In his will, he is stated to have left ‘ane little parcell off books’, as well as £40 Scots of ‘lying money’ and £400 in cash. George (d.1752) of that Ilk, son of Robert and Mary Scott, and brother of Rev. John. He was the second last Laird. He may be the George who was entered as a Burgess of Edinburgh (as a surgeon) in 1715 and is further listed in Edinburgh records of 1718 and 1721. He is recorded as Laird in a disposition of 1725 and was ‘presess’ of Wilton Kirk Session meetings in 1741 and 1751. He paid the window tax for Langlands in 1748. There are existing papers relating to the sharing of the patronage of Wilton Kirk with the Duke of Buccleuch. He feued part of his estate, including Howlands, in the mid-18th century. He is recorded having an illegitimate child called ‘Rocher’ with Mary Rutherford of Hundalee) as a special ‘umpire’ for the feud between Ker of Cessford and Ormiston of Roxburghshire to William Douglas. He is recorded as ‘Jacobus de Langlandis’ in 1437 when a witness at the Jedburgh court to decide on the dispute between William Douglas of Drumlanrig and Janet Murray, widow of James Gledstains, over the lands of East Mains of Hawick. In 1447 he was ‘Jacobo Langlandis de eodem’ when he witnessed the charter from Margaret Cusing (wife of Simon Routledge, Burgess of Hawick) to Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch. He was the father of the John to whom he resigned the half Barony of Wilton in 1451, reserving a free tenement for himself and after his death to his wife Mary (or ‘Mariote’). He also swapped the lands of Milsington with those of Heap with Walter Scott at Wilton Kirk in 1451. And in 1453 he had an ‘excambion’ with Walter Scott of Kirkurd for the freehold of the lands of Wester Heap. This was signed by his son and heir John, as well as Robert of Langlands who must have been a close relative. James of Langlands (15th/16th C.) listed as witness to Richard Rutherford being served heir to his grandfather in 1499. He is recorded as ‘James Langglens of that Ilk’. Probably the same man was ‘of Wilton’ in 1500 when listed as one of the valuators for Whithope. He was probably either the son or brother of Roger/Robert (who killed George Fairneylaw). He is also probably the ‘James Langlandis of Wiltoun’ listed among 24 Roxburghshire who had remission in 1488/9 for their support of the deceased James III, particularly on the field of battle at Stirling. James (d.c.1590) of that Ilk, probably son of John. He is recorded in a sasine of 1559 and in a bond in 1564/5, where Walter Scott of Branxholme assumes the burden for ‘James Langlandis of that Ilk and his barnis’. So they were presumably related, perhaps through his wife or mother (and the suggestion is also that he had children by then). Also in that document he is listed (along with Nicholas Rutherford of Hundalee) as a special ‘umpire’ for the feud between Ker of Cessford and Ormiston of that Ilk. In 1569 he was on the panel of inquest for Grizel Borthwick inheriting superiority of her...

Langlands

Langlands

father’s lands in Wilton. He is mentioned numerous times in the Register of the Privy Seal. In 1569 he was one of the sureties for some Elliots, that they would enter into ward in St. Andrews. He was admitted as a messenger for Roxburgh by Sir David Lindsay, the Lyon King of Arms, in 1569 and mentioned in an inquest in Jedburgh the same year. He was entered before the Privy Council in 1571. He signed the Roxburgh band and ‘made faith’ to James IV and the Regent Morton in early 1572/3, with Andrew Ker of Faldonside as his surety; this appears to have been in relation to Kerr of Ferniehirst being declared a fugitive and all his former supporters swearing allegiance to the Crown. He was also surety for William, son of Walter Scott of Headshaw at the same time. He signed the ‘Band of Roxburgh’ in 1573 (‘with my hand at the pen’). He was also in 1573 surety for the non-appearance of William Robson, charged with the murder of William Hall of ‘Wollie’, and had to pay 20 merks to his daughter ‘Malie’ on Robson’s non-appearance. He was recorded as being ‘de Wiltounhill’ in 1574, when he was superior of the lands of Borthaugh (held by the Scotts of Buccleuch). In 1576 he gave a pledge for George Elliot, ‘the Cleg’ and John Stoddart, his ‘cobilman’. Also in 1576 he was a surety along with Walter Scott of Goldielands and James Langlands of that Ilk for tenants in Lairhope and Broadlee. Also in 1576 it is mentioned in a charter for Stewart of Minto that he held half the market rights of Minto at that time. Furthermore, in 1576 he had an obligation to relieve sureties before the Privy Council. Also in 1576 he was ordered to pay 20 merks to Malie Hall for satisfaction for the murder of her father, James Hall in Woollie by Will Robson of ‘Rochthewchmyne’. Along with 21 other Border lairds, he was summoned to appear at Stirling as caution for his kinsmen and retainers in 1578/9, but failed to appear. He was stated to have ‘enterit the said Johnne Stodart, his cobilman, to the said lord lieutenant and Justice’, but nevertheless was found liable for the other fines. In 1580/1 he witnessed an agreement to settle a dispute between George of Synton and Walter of Stirches regarding the lands of Synton Mill. In 1581 he was on a long list of Scots and others summoned to appear before the Privy Council to answer several charges made by Elliot of Braedlie and the Armstrongs. He was denounced a rebel in 1581 (among a large number of Border Lairds accused of not presenting men to answer riving charges), but must have been reinstated since he was among Lairds invited to appear before the Privy Council in 1583/4 to help quiet troubles in Teviotdale and Liddesdale. In 1581 he gave sasine to his son and heir Robert of his half Barony of Wilton, retaining lifrent for himself and after his death the payment of 20 bolls of grain annually to his wife Marion Scott for ‘upholding of hir and hir bairnes’; the precept of sasine was made in Selkirk (for unspecified reasons), the witnesses including Walter Riddell of that Ilk, George Scott of Synton, William Scott in Huntly and Walter Veitch of North Synton. The sasine was also recorded in Selkirk, with witnesses Rev. William Auchmowtie, John (his son) and 2 servants of his son Robert. In 1588 he is recorded in a contract regarding teinds with his son John (Parson of Wilton) and Walter Scott of Harden. In 1589 he was cautioner for Edward Lorraine of Harwood. The last record of him is in 1590 and he is probably the Laird of Langlands listed on the ‘Roll of the Clans’ in about 1590 (although probably prepared earlier). He married Marion Scott and was succeeded by his son Robert. Other sons included Rev. John and probably Andrew. James ‘Jamie’ (16th C.) recorded as tenant of lands of Kelso Abbey in 1567. It is unclear how he was related to the other Langlands. James (16th/17th C.) recorded being acquitted of crimes in Jedburgh in 1611. It is unclear how he was related to other Langlands. He could be the brother of George of that Ilk who was mentioned in 1610 when they petitioned to have their horning and penalties reduced. James (d.c.1695) brother of Rev. John of Wilton. In 1695 his nephew James was served as his heir. He presumably died without issue. His existence may provide a clue to the identity of the father of Rev. John of Wilton. James (17th C.) son of John, minister of Wilton and younger brother of George, from whom he inherited in 1691. He could be the James listed as resident of the west-side of Hawick on the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. In 1695 he was served heir to his uncle James. James (17th/18th C.) Baron of Wilton, who is said to have ridden a black stallion named Nimrod and would turn out in his gaudy finery for a ceremonial marking of the boundaries at the Roughheugh Mill (the axle of its water wheel being on the boundary), with him making a show of defending his property. This was described by Robert Wilson, but it is unclear which period this took place in; the name seems likely to be confused with another Baron. James (18th C.) married Janet Mack in Bedrule in 1737. It is unclear how he was related to the other local Langlands. Janet nee Douglas (d.c.1683) wife of George of that Ilk. She was a widow in her will, which includes a detailed list of her possessions, giving an idea of the contents of a late 17th century mansion house. John (d.c.1363) possibly the first family member to use the name ‘de Langlandis’, he was probably the successor to Thomas de Longueville (or Charteris), inheriting the Peeblesshire estate in 1340. He also had lands at ‘Milsallystoun’ (Milsington) and ‘Ochterhyud’ (Outerside), along with a mill there, which were granted to his widow ‘Mariote Cunyne’ (i.e. Marion Comyn) by David II in 1363. It is possible he was the John, son of Margaret, who had a charter for the Barony of Wilton after it was forfeited by William Maxwell during the reign of David II. John (15th C.) of that Ilk, son of James. In 1450 he was ‘Johannem de Langlandis’ on the ‘retour’ for the inheritance of the Barony of Hawick by William Douglas of Drumlanrig. He was granted the (eastern) half Barony of Wilton, along with Langlandshill (in Peeblesshire) in 1451 by James II, the lands having been resigned by his father. His mother Mary is also mentioned in this charter. This is the first definitive record of a line of Langlands Lairds that would stretch over 300 years. However, it seems clear that the family (or the closely related ‘de Charteris’ family) held the lands for several generations before. He probably moved the family seat from Peeblesshire to Wilton about this time. Also in 1451 he had a charter of ‘excambion’ with Sir Walter Scott of Kirkurd (and Buccleuch), where he gave up Milsington for Heap. In 1453 he witnessed a charter of ‘excambion’ with Walter Scott of Kirkurd involving the freeholding of Wester Heap; Robert of Langlands was also a witness, so probably a brother or uncle. He is recorded attesting that John of St. Michael inherited his father’s lands of Whitchesters in a document of 1455 notarised in St. Mary’s Kirkyard. In 1455 he is also recorded as ‘Lord of Heip’. He is probably the ‘Johannes Langlandis’ listed among the men who received a reward from the King for the capture of James Douglas of Balverny in 1463/4. And presumably the same ‘John Langlandis’ was on the panel in 1464/5 to rule on the inheritance of the Barony of Cavers and Sheriffship of Roxburgh by Archibald Douglas. It is unclear who succeeded him, but there is probably an extra generation between him and Roger, who was responsible for the death of George Fairneylaw around 1493. John (15th C.) listed among the Roxburghshire men given remission in 1488/9 for their support of the deceased James III. James of Wilton was also listed, and so they may have been related. Most of the men appear to have been associated with Douglas of Cavers. He may be the same ‘John of Langlandis’ listed among the men chosen by William Douglas of Cavers to value the lands of Whithope in 1500; James of Wilton was also listed there. It is possible he was the ‘Joh. Langlandis’ who witnessed charters in Edinburgh in 1471 and 1474. John (15th/16th C.) recorded in the accounts of the Lord High Treasurer of Scotland as an ‘Officiar’ in the period 1515–1523. The business sometimes involved delivery of letters and proclamations in the Borders, suggesting that he was from the local family, perhaps even the Laird of Langlands. Another James was recorded as ‘messenger’ to the Queen, delivering letters relating to the complaint between Sir John Kerr of Ferniehirst and the Turnbulls of Bedrule and Hallrule in 1557, and also witnessing the bond of 1557 in which Turnbulls and others swore to bring in William Nixon; it seems unlikely that this is the same man, but surely is related. John (16th C.) of that Ilk, possibly son of Roger. He was witness to a sasine in 1522. In 1528 he may be the John who was listed among the supporters of Archibald Douglas, Earl of Angus, who were summoned to appear before the King and forfeited their lands. He was made a ‘nuncio’ under the Lyon King of Arms in 1540. However, this is confused by Roger being recorded also in 1531/2. In 1539 he witnessed a notorial instrument for Cranstons. He may also be the same Laird of Langlands mentioned as a creditor in the inventory of the estate of William Scott, younger of Buccleuch in 1552. John (16th C.) recorded in Dunfermline in 1561. It is unclear how he is related to other Langlands. John (d.c.1602) son of James of that Ilk. He is first recorded in 1575 as ‘Johinne Langlandis, reidare at Wiltoun’ (i.e. Reader, meaning he assisted the minister, who served several parishes). He received a stipend of 20 merks and the Kirk lands left vacant by Thomas Weston. Afterwards he was appointed Rector and is recorded as Reader for the period 1574–85. During that time it appears that William Auchmowtie was minister for Wilton and several neighbouring parishes. The division of responsibilities between the 2 men is unclear, and it is also merely a guess that while Auchmowtie was a Protestant minister, Langlands had been trained as a Catholic Priest. Both he and Auchmowtie were witnesses in 1581 to the sasine where his father resigned his half Barony of Wilton to his brother Robert. In 1588 he is recorded as Parson in a contract (in which his father is mentioned as...

James of that Ilk), with Walter Scott of Harden involving payment of teinds. He was deposed from Wilton some time before 1590, possibly indicating that he had formerly been a Catholic. However, it is also possible that he was reinstated and served until his death, which appears to have been in 1602, when William Clerk became the new minister. It is possible that he was the minister who received the gift of about 80 acres of the Mains of Wilton, but other versions of the story (which seem more likely) say it was the 17th century minister of the same name. However, he was son of the Laird and certainly held property in his own right in Heiton and Easter Heap (and possibly elsewhere), which his son William inherited in 1612. His children included William (who was served as heir about 10 years after his death, suggesting perhaps there was an older brother or otherwise legal complications) and Bessie (who married Adam, brother of William Scott of Burnhead). John (d.bef. 1628) of that Ilk. His name occurs in a bond of 1617, and he must have succeeded George. If he was Baron, then he was succeeded by another George. Alternatively he may have been brother (or other close relative) of George, and not actually Baron himself. Rev. John (d.bef. 1692) minister of Wilton, he was brother of the Laird of Langlands (probably Robert, but possibly George). He graduated from Edinburgh University in 1634 and became one of the Masters of Edinburgh High School in 1638. He was also one of the signatories of the Confessions of Faith in Hawick in 1638. He was presented to Wilton by Francis, Earl of Buchan. (incorrectly given as Bothwell in one account) in 1641. He is reputedly the minister who received the extensive (80 acre) lands of Wilton Glebe (or Mains). It is said that his brother granted him the extra land of Wilton Mains to increase his income to help with his family of 10 (this account was told by the last local Langlands). He baptised Walter Scott, son of Gideon of Highchesters in 1644. There is a record of 1648 involving Gideon Scott and Francis, Earl of Buchan over valuation of teinds. In 1649 there is a record of complaint against the Earl of Buchan, craving a more stable stipend, which appears to have been resolved. He also preached occasionally at Borthwick Kirk, probably the last minister to do so; he certainly asked to be freed of his responsibilities in the Borthwick, or to be given a stipend out of it, in 1642. He is listed as proprietor of Wilton in a list of communicants of the area west of Hawick in 1650 (while the Baron, Robert, is listed at Dean Mill); from that document his wife may have been Agnes Douglas, although elsewhere she is named as Anna Douglas (and it is not clear which branch of the Douglas family she was from), and the other household residents (presumably servants) were John Scott, William Douglas, Adam 'Roe' (probably Rae), Janet Scott and Janet 'Rae'. He is recorded in a sasine of 1664 having an annual rent of land at 'Hayning' (probably the Haining in Selkirk). In 1662 he was confined to his Parish for refusing to conform to Episcopacy (i.e. being a Covenanter; the younger ministers were removed from their parishes), but possibly did conform, appears to have been reinstated in 1667 and is still recorded as minister in 1669. He continued as minister, but was removed some time after refusing to take the Test. There is a letter of 1683 from the Archbishop of Glasgow to the Persbytery to stop favouring him since he has not preached for some Sundays, and asking advice about John Stewart, who succeeded him that year; this suggests that he was probably removed because of religious dispute. In 1669 his son James became a merchant's apprentice in Edinburgh, and in 1692 his son Walter followed suit, by which time he was deceased. His children are listed (presumably in order) in the will of his son George. His daughters were: Anna, who married Henry Haswell in Crailing; Esther, who married Adam Scott in Galalaw; Elizabeth, who married William McKay or Mackie in Dunbar; Margaret, who married William Elphinstoun in Hartshaugh; Marion, who married Walter Leathead, portioner in Lilliesleaf; Agnes, who married Robert Elliot of Rig (i.e. Caerlenrig); and Rebecca and Janet, who both stayed in Hawick. His sons were: George, who died in 1689; the already mentioned James; Walter, who lived in Hawick; Robert, who died between 1665 and 1668; and probably John the minister of Hawick (although this is unconfirmed, it seems extremely likely). In 1695 his son James was served as heir to his brother James. It is possible his wife was the 'Mrs Langlands' who was taxed for 3 hearths on the west-side of Hawick in 1694. Rev. John (1633-1707) minister of Hawick. Note that he is easily confused with the earlier minister of Wilton of the same name, who was probably his father. He graduated from Edinburgh in 1662, was licensed by the Bishop of Edinburgh in 1666 and was installed in Hawick in October 1667, replacing Presbyterian Alexander Kinneir. He is still recorded as minister in 1684 when the new 'Steeple Loft' was built. He was eventually deprived in 1689 for not reading the Proclamation of the Estates and not Praying for William and Mary (i.e. he refused to give up Episcopalianism after the Revolution). He was also accused of praying for the late King James. He was the last Episcopalian minister of Hawick Parish, before the Revolution. He is mentioned in an Edinburgh record as marrying ‘without proclamation’ William Murray, younger of Haddin to Margaret Gladstains (daughter of the late Gladstains of that Ilk) in 1693. After his removal he continued to minister in Hawick to a small congregation of Episcopalians (and presumably Jacobite supporters), in a private house at the top of the Kirk Wynd. In 1694 he acted as cautioner for Robert Langlands (who was surely related and perhaps his son) renting 1/2 of the farm of Wiltonburn. He is mentioned in a disposition relating to the Alcorne family in 1695. He is recorded in the Gladstains bible baptising 4 of the children of Walter Gladstains in the period 1672–81. He is also said to have moved to the north of England, where his family settled near Alnwick (but this seems more likely to have been the family of one of his brothers). He married Margaret Rutherford and their children were: Robert (b.1675); John (b.1678), who became a doctor; Margaret (b.1681), who presumably died young; Alison (b.1682) who may have married Francis Scott in 1713, and was recorded being in Jedburgh Parish at that time; and Margaret (b.1687). John (b.1678) son of Hawick minister John, he became a doctor. He is mentioned in a disposition of 1708 (in the National Archives) when he assigned lands to William Ainslie of Blackhill. It is possible he was the John in Woodhouselee served as joint heir (along with Robert) of Walter, Chamberlain to Sir William Scott of Branxholme. He was probably the brother of the Laird or younger brother to Walter Scott of Hundalee resigned his lands in favour of his son Nicholas Rutherford. Peter (d.1549) Priest at Wilton Kirk. John Greenlaw replaced him after he died. He was presumably son of a former Laird of Langlands. It is probably the same Peter who in 1542 witnessed a procuratory where George Rutherford of Hundalee resigned his lands in favour of his son Nicholas Rutherford. Rachel see Rachel Scott. Richard (14th/15th C.) master of the hospital at St. Germaines. He witnessed a charter of Robert II in 1421. He was presumably related to the Langlands of that Ilk. Robert (15th C.) witness to the 1451 transfer of Heap for Milsington, between John Langlands of that Ilk and Walter Scott of Brauxholme. He was probably the brother of the Laird or younger brother to the heir, James. He also witnessed the related sasine at Milsington in 1453, where he is ‘Roberto de Langlandis’. Robert (15th/16th C.) of that Ilk, said to have been the Baron of Wilton who killed George Fairneylaw. However, it seems more likely that this was Roger, or that the names were used interchangeably. Robert (15th/16th C.) witness in 1512 to the charter where Roger of that Ilk granted his lands of Mervinslaw to William Inglis of Langlandshill. He was surely related to the Laird, probably brother or son. Robert (d.bef. 1610) of that Ilk, son of James. In 1580/1 his father resigned his hald Barony of Wilton in his favour, reserving a life rent for himself, and with a proviso to provide for his mother (Marion Scott) and her children. He is recorded as witness to a bond of March 1594/5 (along with William Scott of Allanhaugh and Allan Deans in Hawick) made by James Gledstains, pledging that Hector and Richard Turnbull of Clarilaw would not harm Gavin Elliott of Stobs or William Elliott of Horsleyhill. He was still head of the family in a record of 1599, but was succeeded by George some time before 1610. George’s brothers were Robert and James, and so they were probably all his sons. Similarly, George’s uncle was Adam, so this was probably his brother. His son George was served as his heir in 1611. Robert (17th C.) named by the Hawick Bailie on a list of 16 ‘idle and masterless men’ fit for sending to the army in Germany in 1627. When produced before the Privy Council by the Bailie he was one of the men who were found ‘not fit for the wars’ and dismissed. Robert (17th C.) of that Ilk. He appears to have succeeded George (probably his father) around 1640. In 1638 he signed the Confession of Faith and is recorded there as ‘fier of yt. ilke’. He was on the Commission of Supply for Roxburghshire in 1643 and was also on the Committee of War for the county in 1643, 1644, 1646 and 1648. He was the second largest landowner in Wilton Parish (after the Earl of Buccleuch) in a 1643 valuation, with a value of £953 16s 8d. He was probably also the Robert whose land in Hawick was valued at £3 in 1643. He is also recorded as a heritor of Wilton in 1649. Probably the same Robert was proprietor of Dean Mill in a list of communicants of 1650, and from that document his wife may have been Margaret ‘Per’ and their (adult) children George, Adam and Margaret. In any case, he was probably succeeded by George. In 1659 another son Robert is recorded becoming a merchant’s apprentice in Edinburgh. He was fined £1,800 (about 2 full years rental as valued on his estates) in 1662 for refusing to give up episcopacy. He was probably the brother of John, minister of Wilton (who was similarly fined). He must have been the Robert of that Ilk recorded in the Land Tax Rolls of 1663, when he paid tax on £992, with part ‘pertaining to Margaret Donaldsone’, who may have been his wife. Robert (17th C.) probably related to the Wilton family, although the connection is unclear. He was a tutor of a branch of the house of Cardross, being governor of the brothers of the Earl in the 1670s. In 1675 he was seized by guards under Sir Mungo Murray, but later released. He took refuge in Holland, returned after the Revolution and became a minister. Robert (17th C.) tenant in Toshawhaugh. In the 1686 ratification of the lands of the Scotts of Buccleuch it is stated that he was sometimes occupier of Whames. He may be the same as one of the other Roberts. Robert (17th C.) listed in 1694 among those on the west-side of Hawick who paid the Hearth Tax. He could be the Robert, married to Isobel Scott, whose daughter Isobel was born in Hawick in 1680. The witnesses to that baptism were Robert Scott of Horsleyhill and George Scott of Boonraw (who were probably related to his wife). He may be the Robert who witnessed a baptism for carrier James Scott in 1688. Robert (17th C.) rented 1/2 of the farm of Wiltonburn from the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1694 and 1696. Rev. John acted as his cautioner; this makes it clear that he was not the same man as Robert of that Ilk, but it also suggests that he was probably related to the minister. It seems possible that he may be the Robert, son of Rev. John, born in 1675. His will is recorded in 1696, suggesting that this is when he died. Robert (d.bef. 1725) of that Ilk, probably the son of George and Janet Douglas. He was most likely the Laird who was a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire in 1685 and again in 1690. He was also probably the Laird of Langlands in 1694 when his interests in Wilton Parish are recorded in the Hearth Tax rolls; he paid tax for 6 hearths at his house. In 1687 he was granted a sasine for 2 tenements in Hawick, and is also recorded in another Hawick sasine in 1691. He also owned the piece of the Sandbed on which the Grammar School would be built, which he bought in 1701 and sold to Adam Elliot of Arkleton in 1713. In 1701 he obtained a lease of Wester Alemoor from Gideon Scott of Highchester. He could be the Robert who witnessed a baptism for gardener Robert Roger in Hawick in 1701. In 1704 he was again listed among the Commissioners of Supply for Roxburghshire. He married Mary Scott and a sasine in her favour, recorded in 1690, may have been part of the marriage contract; it is unclear from which branch of the Scotts his wife came. He was also recorded as a Commissioner of Supply in 1704. His son George succeeded before 1725, when his widow was still alive. His eldest daughter was Isabella, who married Rev. Robert Lithgow of Ashkirk and died in 1740. Dr. Robert (1727–1803) of that Ilk. Son of George, he was the last Laird of Langlands, being served heir of the half Barony of Wilton in 1758 (with Walter Irwin acting as factor in the interim). Born in Hawick, he studied medicine in Edinburgh and practised there as a surgeon, perhaps also serving with the family of the Duke of Argyll. He played an active part in the work of Wilton Parish in the period 1759–73, his name appearing regularly in the minute books. He was recorded as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1761. As a member of the Roads Trustees Committee, he was the principal proponent for the building of the New Road for many years before it was finally approved by the Roads Trustees. His first proposal was in around 1765, and his only supporters then were Eliott of Stobs and Scott of Synton. He was also a local Justice of the Peace in the 1760s. He was one of the Commissioners appointed in the court case regarding the division of Hawick Common in 1767. He appears to have sold off the patronage of Wilton Kirk to Henry, Duke of Buccleuch. The estate was already much reduced when he inherited it, but it further diminished under his Lais. The estate was handed over to trustees (Sir Francis Eliott of Stobs and writers Thomas Tod and Cornelius Eliott) in the 1770s, and the final part was sold off in 1783. However, he kept the superiority of Langlands and on that basis was kept on the voters roll for Roxburghshire in 1780. He returned to Edinburgh to practise as a doctor in the mid-1770s. He is recorded in 1780 obtaining ‘liferent’ of the lands of Broomhall and part of Mertoun from Walter Scott of Harden, with sasine following in 1792. In 1783 he donated ‘a chicken, preserved in spirits, having two heads conjoined laterally at the back of the skull’ to the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland. He remained unmarried and died in Edinburgh in April 1803, being buried in Old Calton cemetery, in the burial place of the Boyds of Maxpoffle. Roger (15th/16th C.) of that Ilk, Baron of Wilton. Based on dates he is probably a grandson of John of Langlands who is last recorded in 1455. He is said to have headed the messenger of Melrose Abbey, George Faineylaw, around 1493 or 1494, in a dispute over tithes payable to the Abbey (although Faineylaw was actually a cleric of the Diocese of Glasgow, and his own name is often incorrectly given as ‘Robert’). The tradition also states that the Heap Cross marked the spot of the murder, although this is long gone (and seems likely to have existed long before). He is supposed to have immediately sought the King’s pardon, saying that he had knocked the bonnet off a dignitary of the church, and omitting to say that his head had been in it! The only historical record (from the Justice-aire in Jedburgh, described in Pitcairn’s ‘Criminal Trials’) is of Sir Robert Ker and John Rutherford of Edgerston being sureties for his appearance to answer to the slaughter of ‘Sir George Farnylaw, chaplain’, and of him being denounced a rebel and being fined (then having all his goods forfeited to the King) in February 1494/5 for failure to appear. He appears to have had a sasine for Wilton in 1503. He was reconciled at least by 1506, when he was witness at an inquest held in Jedburgh. He was also witness to a ‘retour’ of the Earl of Buccleuch in 1508 and another of Adam Hepburne, Earl of Bothwell that same year. In 1512 there is a charter of transfer of his lands at Mervinslaw to William Inglis of Langlandshill (the name connection with the lands perhaps suggesting he was perhaps a relative) for 1 penny ‘brench farm’ payable at Pente-cost in Wilton Kirk. Robert was a witness, and so presumably a relative. There are no records of him after this (and John is mentioned in 1522), so perhaps he did not survive Flodden – ‘Oh, Langlands ye’re a graceless man An’ a graceless man are ye; If ye wunna pay the kirk its due The kirk’s curse ye maun dree’ [FL]. Roger (16th C.) recorded as ‘of Wiltonhall’ in 1531/2 in a charter of the lands of Borthau. This may indicate that there was another generation in the early 16th century, and he may have succeeded from John and been succeeded by another John. Roger (16th/17th C.) recorded being in Hawick in 1610. George of that Ilk acted as cautioner for him (and several other Langlands and Scotts) that they would not harm Walter Scott in Hawick (called of Todshawa) and his associates. He was surely a relative of George of that Ilk (but probably not brother or uncle, since that would have been stated). Thomas (14th/15th C.) Abbot of Newbattle in 1422. He is recorded as ‘de Langlands’ and so presumably directly related to the main family branch. Walter of Brieryhill (16th C.) signatory of the local Confession of Faith in 1638. He signed along with George of that Ilk, Robert (George’s son and heir) and Andrew, who were all surely close relatives. Walter (d.c.1694) Chamberlain to Sir William Scott of Harden. In 1689 he is described as ‘chamberlain to Sir William Scot of harden elder and younger’ in a discharge with the treasurer of Selkirk regarding annual rent. In 1694 his brothers Robert and John were served as his joint heirs. Robert was described as his immediately younger brother, and John was ‘in Woodhouseie’. His will is recorded in Lander in 1698, where he is described as Chamberlain to Sir Walter Scott of Harden in the Parish of Merton. It is unclear how he was related to other Langlands; however, given the earlier connections of the Langlands of Wilton to the Scotts of Harden, it is probably he was from the local family. Perhaps he was the eldest (and otherwise unrecorded) son of Rev. John of Hawick, who also had sons Robert and John. William (15th C.) served as surety in 1493, along with the Laird of Bedrule, for John Sinclair in Minto, as well as for John Aitkin and Thomas Bell. It seems likely that he was either Laird of Langlands, or closely related. William (16th/17th C.) son of John, Rector of Wilton. In 1612 he inherited land at ‘Heytoun’ (possibly Heiton) and an annual grant of grain from ‘Eister Heap’. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Scott and their son William was baptised in 1719, with witnesses William Cunningham and Beadle John Scott (spelled ‘Langlan- dis’, etc. in earlier documents).

the Langlands (thu-lawng-lindz) n. important family in Wilton, from perhaps as early as 1290, and certainly 1451, until the family sold off the Langlands estate in 1783, with the last local family member dying in Hawick in 1819. Langlands Hill in Peeblesshire may have been the original family seat. The family may have once been ‘Longueville’, while the ‘de Charteris’ family may also have been one and the same; however, these connections have been the subject of much debate. Local members were buried in the eastern end of old Wilton Church, in an aisle under the gallery. A branch of the local family moved to the Newcastle area and there are memorial panels to some of them in Old Berwick church. The seal of the local family (showing a lion rampant, without motto) is in the Museum. The family shield is silver with a red chevron and 3 mullets (stars), while the crest shows an anchor standing in the sea and the motto is ‘Spero’ (‘I hope’) or ‘Bon Esperance’. The family seal was donated to the Museum in 1856 and an armorial panel in Wilton Kirk was apparently painted over in the middle of the 19th century – ‘They saw bold Langlands proudly ride in armour burnished bright, With stately Wallace by his side, Fair freedom’s fearless knight’ [JI], ‘And Langlands ne’er meets the marchmen now, To see that his flag is planted fair, And peace prevails where once was feud, And Langlands o’ Langlands is nae mair’ [BCM1880].

Langlands Bank (lawng-lindz-bawngk) n. long row of working-class housing, built between 1850 and 1855, on a parallel street to the south of Langlands Road, and named after the Langlands family who once owned the area. A series of steps led down to the lower level flats. The block can be seen in an 1865 photograph, with little other housing around. The houses were demolished in 1971 and the site grassed over, with the rubble being used to raise the level of the Big Haugh.

Langlands Boathoose (lawng-lindz-bo’-hoos) n. Langlands Boathouse, once in the grounds of what is now Deanfield, and the home of the Coble Pool ferryman.

Langlands Brig (lawng-lindz-brig) n. Langlands Bridge, a footbridge across the Teviot in Wilton Lodge Park, off Buccleuch Road at the western end of the Playing Fields. It was erected in 1894 and marks the former boundary of the Burgh (named after the Langlands family).

Langlands Cauld (lawng-lindz-kawld) n. another name for the Coble Cauld (mentioned in the 1767 description of the boundaries of the Common).

the Langlands Club (thu-lawng-lindz-klub) n. social club which met in a back room of the Museum in the early 20th century.

Langlands Court (lawng-lindz-kör’) n. sheltered housing complex built in 1984 near the previous Langlands Bank, and on the site of the former St. Margaret’s Church.

Langlands Dean (lawng-lindz-deen) n. former name for Wilton Dean. It was in use in baptismal records from at least 1797, but had died out by the 1860s.

Langlands Mill (lawng-lindz-mil) n. another name for Ladylaw Mill (sometimes called ‘Langlands and Ladylaw Mills’ or ‘Langlands Spinning Mill’), long the property of the Wilson family, and later the main factory of Wilson & Glenny’s. For a time the Langlands Mill part was separate, also sometimes known as the Roughheugh Waulk Mill. A new factory was built behind Dangerfield Mill, probably been 1810 and 1818 when the Wilson and Watson partnership ended; this is marked ‘Langlands Spinning Mill’ on Wood’s 1824 map. It was originally constructed for Wilson to supply yarn for his expanding stocking frame business. The mill was driven by water in the Wilton Dam. In 1831 it contained the first steam engine built in Hawick (by Melrose’s). A separate mill was built perhaps 1851 on a site adjacent to the Roughheugh Waulk Mill, and known at that time as ‘Ladylaw’, distinct from Roughheugh.

Langlands Park (lawng-lindz-pawrk) n. villa built possibly for James Oliver. It was designed in Scottish baronial style by Glasgow-based architect John Thomas Rochead in 1863. The house was renovated for Peter Scott in 1914, and so may have changed its name.
Langlands Place

Langlands Place \(\text{lawng-lindz-plis}\) \(n.\) street that was incorporated into Wilton Crescent in 1865 (marked on the 1859 Ordnance Survey map).

Langlands Raik \(\text{lawng-lindz-räik}\) \(n.\) area mentioned in an old description of the Common at Myreslawgreen, meaning an extent of land used for grazing sheep or cattle – ‘...the highway from West Port to Langlands Raik on the east’ (i.e. the ‘Common Vennel’, so that ‘Langlands Raik’ must have been around the Playing Fields or Coble; this could be ‘Reach’, i.e. a stretch of the Teviot).

Langlands Road \(\text{lawng-lindz-röd}\) \(n.\) street stretching from the top of Roadhead to Wilton Path. It was once known as ‘the kirk road from Wilton to Langlands’, and was named around 1868. The street was once very narrow, but widened about 10 feet in 1904, with some demolition of houses at the Roadhead end. The street was extended when Langlands Bank was demolished in 1971.

Langlee \(\text{lawng-lee}\) \(n.\) house above Langlands Road, built in 1907 to designs by J.P. Alison. It may have originally been built for for manufacturer T.A. Laing and was later the home of Walter of Wuahcope) in the late 19th century. It was extended when Langlands Bank was demolished when Langlands Bank was demolished in 1971.

Langlee \(\text{lawng-lee}\) \(n.\) farm on the west side of the Jed Water, opposite Ferniehirst Castle. It was listed as ‘Langlee’ in 1538 among lands in Jedforest that had passed to the Crown, but the lands were ‘claimed by the laird thereof’; at that time it was valued at 25 shillings. It is probably the lands of ‘Langley’ listed among those held by the French family in 1588 (and formerly part of the holdings of Jedburgh Abbey). It was owned by the Bruce family from the early 1800s, then the Dalrymples. James Fair owned the lands in 1788 and through the early 19th century, passing them to his nephew James Elliot Shortreed-Fair. It was bought by Charles Scott of Howcleuch (son of Walter of Wualhope) in the late 19th century. The house built about the 1790s was replaced with a design by David Bryce in the 1860s. There is planted parkland from an earlier period (it is marked on Blair's 1654 map as ‘Langly’).

Langlee \(\text{lawng-lee}\) \(n.\) area between Galashiels and Melrose, on the north of where the Gala Water meets the Ettrick. It was formerly an estate with mansion house. It is now a rather depressing suburb of Galashiels.

Langley Cleuch \(\text{lawng-lee-klooch}\) \(n.\) small stream in Liddesdale, that rises near Blinkbonnt and runs through Langleycleuch Wood to become part of the Tweedten Burn.
Langowerter

held by the Earl of Lothian. It was among baronies and lands inherited by daughters of George Scott (brother of Sir Walter of Whitslade) in 1670. Patrick Scott, fiar of Ancrum, paid the land tax on the whole parish there in 1678, when it was valued at about £2200. There was formerly a mill here, on the right bank of the Teviot, as well as a school. The area to the north of the village was formerly known as Longnewton Common – ‘The Craig for strength, Woodhead for length, Palacehill for beauty, Sandystones the most confused place In all Longnewton barony’ [T] (the name first appears as ‘Longa Neutun’ in 1220, and is thereafter often ‘Langnewtoun’, ‘Langnewtoun’, ‘Langnewtoun’, ‘Langnewtoun’, ‘Langnewtoun’, ‘Langnewtoun’, ‘Langnewtoun’, ‘Longnewtoun’, or similar; it is ‘Lang new’ on Gordon’s map of Scotland in Blaeu’s 1654 atlas; the origin is simply Old English for ‘long new town’, which is descriptive of the village).

Langowerter  (laŋ-ʊ-waw’-ur) n. former farmstead in upper Teviotdale. In the Hawick Parish valuation of 1627 it is listed between Hislop and Blackcleugh, ‘estimat to 20 lb., 3 lb. in teynd’ with ‘no corne’. It is unclear precisely where it was located.

Lang Penman  (laŋ-pen-min) n. nickname for a minor riever, captured by the Laird of Buccleuch in 1530. He was also recorded in 1535 as ‘servant of one called Dikkis Wille’ (possibly William Armstrong, son of Richard) among a list of men denounced as rebels for a raid on the farm at Craik. His surname was probably Penman and he was presumably tall.

Langraw  (laŋ-raw) n. farm just south of Bonchester Bridge. The land there was apparently once owned by monks from Jedburgh Abbey, as part of the Barony of Abbotrul. David ‘Schewill’ (or Sheil) was tenant there in 1516 and another David recorded there in 1567. A tower there was burned by the English in 1545. In 1569 it was acquired (along with several other lands) by Adam French from the monks of Jedburgh Abbey and was still listed as part of the Lordship of Jedburgh in 1587. Archie Turnbull ‘of Langraw’ was recorded in 1579/80. Robert Elliot ‘in Langraw’ is recorded in 1610, a Shiel was tenant in 1626 and George Shiel in 1688. The lands were valued at £104 in 1643 and 1663, with Lyle Shiel in 1643 and George Shiel in 1663 owning an additional £52 there. It was among lands whose superiority was inherited by daughters of George Scott (brother of Sir Walter of Whitslade) in 1670. The lands (or perhaps their superiority) were among those inherited by William Kerr of Abbotrule in 1680. In the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls, William Turnbull ‘of Langraw’ was taxed for having 2 hearths, and James Shiel, ‘portioener’ there, was also taxed for 2 hearths. Alexander Turnbull was tenant there in 1738. Walter Barrie and Thomas Hope are recorded as tenants in 1797. It was owned by the Turnbulls through the 17th and 18th centuries, until sold off by the heir of the last Laird in 1801. It was purchased by William Oliver and held by that family through most of the 19th century. William Oliver was owner in 1811, when it was valued at £104. By about 1874 it was partly owned by George Tancred of Weens, the other part by Sir Walter Elliot of Wolfelee. From 1882 it was tenanted jointly by William Bell junior and senior. A collection of partly burned bones was discovered here in the 19th century, in a circular area about 18 feet in diameter, reported in the Statistical Account in 1836; this could be the same as the tumulus that is reported to have existed there in 1926. A socketed bronze axe found there was donated to the National Museum of Antiquities in 1833. A stone axe-head, whorls and an arrow-head were found there and in the collection of Walter Deans (it is ‘Langrau’ in 1516; it is marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map and Stobie’s 1770 map).

Langraw Scaur  (laŋ-raw-skawr) n. former name for cottages near Langraw (by Bonchester Bridge), presumably named for a ‘scaur’ there. It was also known as ‘Scaur Nook’. William Oliver, hind at Langraw, lived there in the mid-19th century.

Langsandy  (laŋw-sawn-dee) n. nickname for Alexander Scott.

Langshaw  (laŋw-shaw) n. ruined 16th century L-plan tower a few miles north of Galashiels, stronghold of the Borthwicks. It is very close to Colmslie and Hillslep towers. It was in the hands of Lord Home in the latter part of the 15th century and was once a seat of the Murrays. Part of it was rented from Melrose Abbey by the Pringles...
Langshawburn

of Galashiels according to a document of 1529 (the name is probably simply Old English for ‘the long wood’ and is first recorded in 1586; it was spelled ‘Langschaw’ and variants and was later ‘Lainshaw’).

Langshawburn (lawng-shaw-burn) n. remote farmstead over into Dumfriesshire, just to the west of Craik Cross Hill. It was once split into Upper and Nether Langshawburn. Cowans and Murrays lived there in 1841 (it is marked on the 1718 survey of properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch).

Langside (lawng-sid) n. villa at 39 Weensland Road. It was built for manufacturer Adam Darling in the latter part of the 19th century. James Burnet was there in the 1930s (also written Darling in the latter part of the 19th century).

Langside (lawng-sid) n. former name for the lands at Langsidebrae. It formed part of the estate of Elliott of Stobs in 1678 and still recorded that way in 1811 and in about 1874. William Pott was living there in 1702, Walter Bowie in 1719, William Scott in 1757 and William Nichol in 1769 (it is ‘Langsyde’ in 1573, 1692 and 1698 and ‘Langside’ in 1678).

Langside (lawng-sid) n. farm near Bowden. A story is told of the Covenantanter Alexander Peden working there in disguise and then being recognised by locals at a field preaching on the following Sunday. There were Elliots of Langside in the 17th century (easily confused with Lansidebrae near Shankend).

Langsidebrae (lawng-sid-brä) n. farmstead just to the west of the Langside Burn above Shankend in the upper Slitrig valley. This is probably the ‘Langside’ listed among lands in the Barony of Cavers resigned in 1368 by Thomas Baliol to his superior William, Earl of Douglas. The lands here are referred to as just ‘Langside’ in a 1511 charter of Douglas of Cavers. In 1573 Douglas of Cavers had a decree to remove Robert Elliot of Redheugh from these lands, but Elliot argued that ‘his fader and gudsiere were in possessions of the saidis landis thir mony yeris bigane’. It is probably the farm of that name, possessed by William, younger of Cavers in about 1614 when some livestock were stolen. It was still in the Barony of Cavers when that was inherited by Sir William Douglas in 1687 and by his brother Archibald in 1698. It was ‘Langsyde’ owned by the Elliots of Stobs at the end of the 17th century, e.g. inherited by Sir William Elliot in 1692. John Elliot was tenant in ‘Langside’ in 1694. Walter and James Armstrong were farmers there in 1797, with William Hobkirk as shepherd. Thomas Cairns was there in 1868. John Rae was shepherd here in the mid-19th century.

Langside Burn (lawng-sid-burn) n. stream joining the Slitrig at Shankend and fed by smaller streams that rise on the slopes of the Maidens and Greatmoor, including Fore Burn, Mid Burn, Back Burn and Pap Sike. In its upper part is the waterfall of Hawkhass Linn, with an adjacent earthwork. A little further down, near where it crosses the line of the Catrail are the remains of a farmstead, being a D-shaped enclosure about 55 m across, with signs of 2 sets of rectangular foundations, one inside and one outside. The stream runs through Langside Burn Wood, near where the 1863 Ordnance Survey map shows some buildings. The steading of Langsidebrae is to the west. There is a farm of the same name in Bowden Parish and several others across Scotland.

Langside Burn (lawng-sid-burn) n. former name for a stream near Whithope, perhaps Whames Sike. It is listed as ‘lansideburne’ in about the 1190s when Richard Lovel granted lands between Whithope and Whames.

Langslack Sike (lawng-slak-sik) n. Longslack Sike, stream that flows roughly north-east to join the Jed Water, to the east of Southdean Mill. The area is rich in archaeological remains. Hyndhaughhead Tower lay on its northern banks, and Slack’s Tower a little to the south. There was another tower house just 150 m east of Hyndhaughhead, on the south side of the stream. The foundations are still visible, about 6.6 m by 3.8 m, surrounded by banks, and with 2 larger farmstead buildings adjacent. There are also signs of rig lines, enclosures and other banks from the former farm. It is also possible that there are remains of a homestead here, buried in peat. This may correspond to ‘Watersyde’ on Blaeu’s c.1654 map.

Lang Sike (lawng-sik) n. small stream joining the Leap Burn just to the west of Robert’s Linn bridge. The Catrail crosses just to the south and there are the remains of a settlement there, being about 110 m in diameter and enclosing 3 platforms. The area is now covered with forest.

langsome (lawng-sum) adj., arch. slow, tedious, weary, lengthy – ‘But I forget the langsome years that o’er our head ha’e fled, I didna see the burning tears Thae een o’ blue ha’e shed’ [JT].

the Lang Stand Oot (thu-lawng-stand-o’ ) n. local industrial dispute of 1822–23, lasting 14 months. It was prompted by the Hawick hosiers employers trying to reduce wages so that they could price their goods more competitively. This was a combined effort of all the town’s manufacturers, except William Beck. Plays and other entertainments were put on in the ‘Town Hall and elsewhere to raise money for the strikers. Strike leaders were imprisoned in Jethart Jail, but were freed without trial. Eventually the employers conceded.

Lang syne (lawng-syn) adj., arch., poet. of long ago, old-time, ancient – ‘Lang syne, whan decent gude grey clath, Did hap the laird an’ tenant baith’ [JR], ‘A’ ye wha doat on langsyne things, Wha heap auld armour up in bings . . . ’ [JoHa], ‘Jingo ring was mair i’ ma line i’ th’ lang-syne days . . . ’ [HEX1919], adv., arch., poet. long ago, literally ‘long since’ – ‘But aa mind a day, long-syne, Aa met ee at The Vertish edge’ [DH], ‘And whiles I think that muckle o’ life’s fun, The satisfaction kent langsyne . . . ’ [WL], n., arch., poet. the days of the past, old times, nostalgia – . . . Lang Synton (lawng-sin-tin) n. possible former name for lands, perhaps near Synton. In 1679 John Shortreed in ‘Longsintoune’ had a discharge for payment with the Burgh of Selkirk and he was in ‘Langseintein’ in 1681. Lang Tae (lawng-tā) n. hill in Craik Forest, near the head of Wolfcleuch Burn. It reaches a height of 438 m. Langtay Hill (lawng-tā-hil) n. hill just to the west of Cauldcleuch. It reaches a height of 554 m (1,786 feet) and is the source of the Skelfhill Burn. Lang Tam Dyce (lawng-tawm-dis) n. nickname for Rev. Thomas Dyce.

Lang-tholance (lawng-thō-lins) adj., poet. long-suffering – ‘. . . fu’ o’ tendir pitie, an’ gracious, lang-tholance, an’ waynesum in mercie an’ trouth’ [HSR].

Langton (lawng-tin) n. William (b.1814/5) from England, he worked as a stocking framesmith in Hawick. In 1841 he was at about 55 High Street, but by 1851 had moved to O’Connell Street. His brothers John and James were living with him by then. The family moved to 15 Backdamgate, then back to O’Connell Street by 1871. In 1837 in Hawick he married Mehala Dow, from London. Their children included: William (b.1837), also a framesmith; Rebecca (b.1840); Mehala (or Matilda, b.1844); Mary (b.1847); John (b.1854); Catherine (b.1851); John (b.1854); Eliza (b.1856); and Ann (b.1861).

Langtonheight (lawng-tin-hi’) n. farmstead in Ashkirk Parish, just to the east of Synton Parkhead. It is probably the ‘Langtoune’ where Thomas Hunter was tenant in 1697 and William Hislop was servant in 1698. Janet Robson was a widow living there in 1709 and Walter Veitch was tailor there in at least 1715–19. In 1716 Walter Dunlop was tenant there, Michael Anderson was herd and Thomas Scott was cottar. Francis Cunningham was cottar in 1717 and John Dunlop was tenant in 1724. This is recorded as ‘Longtown’ where Michael Anderson and Walter Veitch were located in 1719. Walter Thomson was farmer there in 1797, with 4 work horses on the farm. Walter Scott was shepherd there in 1851 (it is ‘Longtounheight’ in 1797; ‘Longtown’ is marked on Ainslie’s 1773 map).

Langtoon (lawng-town) n. Longtown, town on the A7 towards Carlisle, about 3 miles south of the Border. It has a handsome bridge, is near to the site of the Battle of Solway Moss (1542), and was a former station on the Waverley Line. Population about 3,000 – ‘. . . the wunner was Dick Wricht thre Langtoon whae got echt pound iz heis reward’ [BW1974].

Lanton (lawn-tin, lawng-toon) n. William (15th C.) member of the ‘retour of inquest’ for Ker of Altonburn in 1438. He is recorded as being of ‘Langthoun’.

Lanton Hill (lawn’-in-hil) n. hill south of Lanton village and west of Jedburgh, containing a farm of the same name. There are 2 forts on its northern side. There is also a linear feature stretching from here to the south, towards the Union.

Lanton Lady Lands (lawn’-in-lä-dee-lawndz) n. lands near Lanton that were once owned by the Douglases of Cavers and valued at £10. The lands were incorporated into Jedburgh Parish before 1788. They are described as ‘formerly in Cavers Parish’ in the 1788 draft valuation, when they belonged to Thomas Rutherford of Knowesouth. The name suggests that the lands were associated with a church for which Douglas of Cavers once held the patronage (along with Hassendean Lady Lands).

Lanton Mains (lawn’-in-mänz) n. farm just past Knowesouth on the A698. In 1870 a Bronze Age cist was discovered there, containing skeletal remains, a beaker and flint flakes.

Lanton Place (lawn’-in-plis) n. part of Stichers, off Guthrie Drive, built in 1978 and named after the village of Lanton.

lap (lap) n., poet. a flap of a garment, lapel

L698. It contains several 18th century buildings and also a 16th century peel tower incorporated into Lanton House. There is also a garden having a plaque inscribed with Wullie Landles’ poem ‘Lanton’. The village used to be home of the Crownery (i.e. coroner) of Roxburgh and was also known as Cranstoun. Lands here were part of the original grant to Jedburgh Abbey in the early 12th century. Later the lands were split among several different owners, with a total value of more than £1700. Janet Turnbull had sasine for the lands in 1502, and Margaret and Elizabeth Turnbull in 1506. The area was burned by Dacre’s men, led by Sir Roger Fenwick in late 1513, and by Hertford’s men in 1545. A ‘6 pound land of Langtoune’ was owned by the Scotts of Branxholme and Buccleuch from at least 1502; they were valued at £6 in 1574, when still held by the Scotts of Buccleuch. The lands were included in the main Barony of Branxholme according to the services of heirs in 1634 and 1653, and the 1663 marriage contract of Anne, Countess of Buccleuch. The Mathers of Lanton were a prominent family in the Jedburgh area in the 17th century. A large part of the land passed to the Douglases sometime in the 17th century (with 2 acres there being included among possessions of the Douglases of Cavers in 1687 and 1698) and was sold to the Fergusons in 1694, then passed to the Youngs and the Browns. Rev. George Dickson held part of the lands from 1770, and they were sold by his trustees to Sir Gilbert Murray Kinynmound Elliot in 1796. In the 1788 county valuation draft lands there were owned by George Black of Menslaws, the Duke of Buccleuch, George Dickson’s trustees, William Douglas of Timpendale, Walter Hunter of Polmood, Andrew Mather, John Mather’s heirs, Thomas Ogilvie of Chesters, James Porteous, Thomas Rutherford of Knowesouth, Robert Scott, William Turnbull and Thomas Waugh of Hawkburn.

There was once a school in the village (the origin is probably Old English ‘longa tun’, meaning ‘the long town’; it first occurs as ‘Langtoun’ in the mid-12th century, remaining that way for centuries, and still being ‘Langton’ and ‘Langtoun’ into the late 18th century; it is ‘Langton’ on Blaeu’s map of 1654).

Lanton (lawn-tin, lawng-toon) n. William (15th C.) member of the ‘retour of inquest’ for Ker of Altonburn in 1438. He is recorded as being of ‘Langthoun’.

Lanton Cauld (lawn’-in-kawld) n. weir in the Teviot near Lanton Mill.

Larristofts (law-ris-tofts) n. lands listed in 1511 among those held 'in tenancy' by the Baron of Havick, Douglas of Drumlanrig. The lands continued to be listed in 1572 when James Douglas inherited the Barony of Havick. In 1615 it is transcribed 'Lairis, Toftis, Kirkwood', which is probably 'Larristofts and Kirkwood'. It seems likely that this is related to the lands of Lairis near Teviothead, and unrelated to Larriston, although of course there may be other possibilities (it is 'Laristoftis' in 1511 and 'Lairis Toftis' and 'Lairris Toftis' in 1572).

Larriston (law-ris-tin) n. farm on the Liddel Water, south of Saughtree. The Larriston Burn, draining from Larriston Fells, joins the Liddel just below here. A former tower there was an important seat of the Elliots from the early 16th century. It is suggested that the site of the tower was on the Larriston Burn near Upper Larriston, some distance from the main house today. However, there may have been a separate tower-house near the modern house. Jeffrey says that when the foundation were dug up in about 1800 a large oven and an 18 pound cannon-ball were found. It may be the 'Lanorowstanys' listed as a 20 merk land in the c.1376 rental roll of Liddesdale. Two separate farms there were formerly called Over and Nether Larriston; these were granted to Robert Elliot of Redheugh by the Earl of Angus in 1484. The farm was occupied by several Nixons in 1544. This was probably the site of the tower built by Martin Elliot of Braedlie in the 1570s and which was attacked by the English in 1584 (referred to in another English account as 'Martins tower'). Probably a new tower was built by Robert Elliot of Redheugh in the late 1580s, since an English letter of 1596 describes that he 'within these 12 years, has erected another called laristone'. The last Robert of Redheugh mostly resided there in the early 17th century. He had a daughter Margaret, who married James Elliott, son of 'Gibbie wi the Golden Garters', and their son Gilbert became the next Elliot of Larriston. In the 1678 Land Tax Rolls the whole estate was valued at £1934, with Larriston itself valued at £834. Robert Elliot of Larriston became bankrupt and the lands of Over and Nether Larriston were sold to Christopher Irving of Binks in 1688. Tax was paid for 4 hearths at the house in 1694, and there was a shepherd and another house with a kiln recorded. Robert Elliot was able to buy back the lands in 1695, reinstating the dower rights from the rents to his grandmother (Margaret of Redheugh). Bonnie Prince Charlie is said to have spent the night here on his march south, and for a long time the bed he slept in was pointed out. When the farms of the Scotts of Buccleuch were surveyed in 1718 there were 3 small pieces of land belonging to the farm in loops of the Liddel Water adjacent to Riccarton farm. The Elliots of Larriston finally lost the lands through debt, selling Over and Nether Larriston and Larriston Rig to John Oliver of Dinlabyre in 1719 (for £1,808 6 shillings sterling). However, they were back in Elliot hands when purchased by Maj.-Gen. William Elliot (from William Oliver of Dinlabyre) in 1786. In 1788 the lands were recorded valued at £834. Maj.-Gen. Elliot left the lands to his cousin's son, George Fraser Scott, who took the additional surname 'Elliot'. This George Scott-Elliot was Laird in 1811 of 'Laristoun, comprehending Over and Nether Lariston, and mill and Mill Lands thereof', valued at £627. George Turnbull was a resident here in 1821. Scott-Elliot sold the estate in 1843 to James Jardine for £29,000. It may be the 'Lanorowstanys' listed as a 20 merk land in the c.1376 rental roll of Liddesdale. It was popularised in the Ettrick Shepherd's ballad 'Lock the Door Laristoun'. A lintel above the cottage door there is inscribed 'J.S.' and 'M.R.' for James of Stobs and Margaret of Redheugh—'See how they wane, the proud les of the Windermere, Howard ah! woe to the hopes of the day; Hear the wild welkin rend, While the Scots shouts ascend, Elliot of Larriston! Elliot for ayel!' [ES] (also spelled 'Lauriston' and 'Lariston': the origin is probably from the Middle English personal name 'Lauri' or 'Larri', a diminuitive of 'Lawrence';
Larriston Burn

Larriston Burn (law-ris-tin-burn) n. stream in Liddesdale, rising on Foulmire Heights and Loch Knowe and flowing west and south-west to join the Liddel Water near Steeleroad-end. Among its tributaries are Hirst Sike, Holm Sikes, Pipe Sike, Bught Sike, Storff Sike, Little Warrington Sike, Great Warrington Sike and Westly Sike. It has several waterfalls along its length. It passes the farmstead of Upper Larriston, where the original tower-house may have been situated, as well as Larriston lime works. The farm of Larriston Burn was once separate from that of Larriston. Airchie Elliot was there in 1590 as well as ‘Geordie Nixon of the Larestone burne’ in the same year, both accused of rieving (it is ‘Lareston burne’ in 1588). James Jardine was owner in about 1874 (also also written ‘Larriston Rigg’ and ‘Larristonrig’; it is Larriston ridge in 1694 and is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Larriston Fells (law-ris-tin-felz) n. centre of the Debatable Lands on the Scottish side, over the Border from Bewcastle Fells. The hills reach a height of 1,677 feet and lead the Larriston Burn to the west.

Larriston Knowe (law-ris-tin-now) n. hill that is part of Whitrope Edge, north of Whitrope-foot (it is unclear whether there is a connection to the Larriston further south).

Larriston Lime Works (law-ris-tin-lim-wurks) n. former lime manufacturory on the Larriston Burn, to the south-east of the main farm. This area has also been referred to as Upper Larriston. It started in 1811, and expanded in 1820 after demand from local farmers. It is labelled ‘Larriston Lime Works’ on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map, with ‘Tile Works’ a little to the south. There are remains of lime kilns and old quarries scattered over a wide area.

Larriston Mill (law-ris-tin-mil) n. former mill at Larriston.

Larriston Rig (law-ris-tin-rig) n. farm in Liddesdale, to the east of Larriston farm, also called Haggiehaugh. John Elliot of Thorlieshope owned the lands (or perhaps just a ‘wadsett’ on the lands) from about the 1670s. They were among lands sold by Robert Elliot of Larriston to Christopher Irving of Binks in 1688, after Elliot went bankrupt. However, they were bought back by Elliot in 1695. John Nixon and George Armstrong were there in 1694. George Scott-Elliot of Larriston was owner in 1811, when it was valued at £207 and ‘now called Haggiehaugh’.

The Lassie That Works in the Mill

(Thu-law-seez-thi’-wurks-in-thu-mil) n. song written by Walter Peden, in a dialect that is only partly Hawick. It was performed regularly by his sons George and Jock, lost for a while, but recovered from a tape recording at the Gilded Chamber. The music was later adapted by Henry Douglas, adding 8 bars to the original 16. Ian Seeley wrote a piano accompaniment for the 2001 ‘Hawick Songs’ collection. It is included on the 2006 CD ‘Hawick and Teviotdale in Song and Poetry’, sung by Henry Douglas.

lassock (la-sok) n., arch., poet. a small girl – ‘…And there’s noucht to marrow the tender grace That lights the smile o’ a lassock’s face’ [WL] (diminutive form of lass).

Lasson (la-sin) n. Robert (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. His son John was baptised there in 1712. Perhaps the same Robert ‘Lasten' witnessed a baptism for Hawick merchant John Johnston in 1721.

lat (law', lawt) v. to let, permit – ‘…`lat be, my lad, e’en lat it be; For sae rins a’ humanity’’ [DH] (it is unclear how common this has been in Hawick; cf. luit and lut).

latch needle (lawch-nee-dul) n. a needle with a small hook at the end which is closed with a hinged latch to hold the yarn in place while the loop is formed in a knitting machine, thus allowing loop formation and ‘knock-over’ to happen simultaneously. This was common on a ‘V-bed’ hand-knitting machine and is similar to a ‘bearded needle’. It was patented by a Leicester hosier in 1849.

Latoun (lā-tin) n. Sir Brian (d.1545) English commander of Henry VIII, who was Governor of Norham Castle. Along with Sir Ralph Evers headed the invading forces that laid waste to the Borders in 1544/5, possibly including Hawick and Branxholme. Their ‘bloody ledger’ boasts of destroying 192 towns, towers, barkines, churches and houses, killing 403 Scots, capturing 816 prisoners, and taking 10,386 cattle, 12,492 sheep, 1296 horses, 200 goats and 850 bolls of corn, along with an incalculable amount of goods. He was killed at Ancrum Moor and probably buried at Jedburgh – ‘The ravag’d aiby rang the funeral knell, When fierce Latoun and savage Evers fell’ [JL] (also spelled ‘Laiton’, ‘Layton’, etc.).

latter-will (law-tur-wil) n., arch. a will, document setting out a persons intentions for disposing of their estate – ‘Followis the Legacie and Latterwill. At Hawik, the ellevint day of April, the zeir of God jmvc and thrie scoir and fourtene zeris …’ [SB1574].

In 1841 he was living at about 41 South Hermitage Street. His wife was Janet and they had children Adam, John, William, Agnes and Walter. Agnes (17th C.) resident of Dryden in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when she was listed on the Hearth Tax roll among ‘ ye poor ’. Alexander (16th C.) son and heir of William, Burgess of Edinburgh. In 1540 he and his wife Marion Hay were given sasine of his father’s lands of Todrig by John Hay, Lord of Yester. These lands included the ‘ manor and mansion thereto and pertinents ’. Also in 1540 he and his wife was Marion Hay sold a tenement to Thomas. He was allowed to ‘ compone ’ at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh for a series of crimes, including stealing from several farms, bringing in Nixons from England and associating with William Elliot ‘ and other thieves of Branxholme ’. His sureties were Robert, son of Walter Scott of Headshaw, and the Laird of Buccleuch. In 1494 he was allowed to ‘ compone ’ at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh for a series of crimes, including stealing from several farms, bringing in Nixons from England and associating with William Elliot ‘ and other thieves of Branxholme ’. His sureties were Robert, son of Walter Scott of Headshaw, and the Laird of Buccleuch.
Lauder

Lauder of the deceased wife of William of Todrig. In 1543 she was `spouse with Todrig in the same year. She may have been ably the Katherine Gray, recorded in connection action involving the lands of Todrig. She is prob-1538 when her goods were listed as part of a trans-

a husbandland (probably in Todrig). Richard (16th C.) mentioned along with George in 1537 when they were ordered to remove themselves and their servants from Todrig. Sir Robert of the Bass and Quarrelwood (d.1337) son of Sir Robert. He was referred to as ‘elder’ to distinguish him from his son, also Sir Robert. He served as Ambassador to England during the time of Robert the Bruce. He was also Keeper of Berwick Cast-tle and for a while was Chamberlain of Scotland. From about 1319 he was Justiciar of Lothian, responsible for the justice aires south of the Forth, including those held in Roxburghshire. He was present at the Battle of Halidon in 1333. Robert (15th/16th C.) tenant at ‘Merch-cluche’ whose lands were raided and goods stolen by Peter Turnbull of Bonchester and a group of Englishmen. He himself was taken to Bewcastle ‘until he redeemed himself’, i.e. he was held for ransom. In 1502 Turnbull had remission for these crimes. Robert of that Ilk (16th C.) recorded in 1528/9 when he was involved in a deal with John Cranston of that Ilk, for lands in Smallholm. These lands had belonged to Oliver. He was also listed in 1549 among the associates of Walter Ker of Cess-tord who were accused of helping the English in raids upon the farms of Sir Walter Scott of Branx-

holme. Stephen (d.bef. 1530) Burgess of Selkirk. In about 1512 he was granted a charter by John Hay, Lord Yester, for the lands of Todrig ‘with the manor and dwelling house thereto and pertinents lying in the said barony of Olivercastell in the sheriffdom of Selkirk’. Richard Lauder was one of the witnesses, and presumably related. He witnessed a document in Selkirk in 1519. In 1526/7 he received money for lands then belonging to James Murray of Falahill. In 1527/8 he was ‘not sound in his mind but labouring in his final pains’ when he retifed his testament. He was deceased in 1530 when William Scott of Harden swore he owed him ‘na mair bot ane merc’, and others swore the same one behalf of William Scott in Todrig. This was all in the presence of his widow, Margaret Lauder. His son William inherited his tenement in Selkirk in 1532. Thomas of Todrig (15th C.) recorded at the Justice-aire in Selkirk in 1494/5. He had remission for his part in several crimes: attacking John and Adam Thomson in Selkirk; stealing sheep from Harthern; steal-

ing a cow and a list of items from William Mitchell at ‘war’; stealing a skin from the Laird of Dewar; stealing 16 head of cattle from ‘cabrostoun’; stealing cattle and sheep from Purveshili; resetting Alexander, son of Robert Turnbull; a theft from William Turnbull in Shielwood; and common theft and delivery of stolen goods before the date of his previous remission. Walter Scott of Howpasley served as his surety. He is also recorded in 1493 when his brother Hector was allowed to compound for rieving crimes; since the same Hector was later recorded as brother of the Laird of Todrig, then presumably that was him. He was presumably father or elder brother of Cuthbert, who was Laird of Todrig in the early 16th century. Thomas (16th C.) mentioned in 1538 along with George, when Katherine Gray had their sheep legally removed from Todrig. He is probably the Thomas listed among the friends who would vouch for Alan Mithag in Selkirk in 1539/40. Thomas (16th/17th C.) tenant in Braidhaugh in 1620. He was witness to a charter for Goldielands, given by Walter, Earl of Buccleuch. The lands of ‘Braidhaughe’ were presumably the place near Branxholme. Thomas (17th C.) resident at Priesthaugh in 1694 according to the Hearth Tax rolls. Thomas (18th C.) resident at Todridge. His son William was baptised in 1732. Walter (15th/16th C.) brother and heir of Cuthbert of Todrig. In 1528 he is recorded in a document in Auld Roxburgh (but preserved in the Selkirk Protocol Books) in 1528 when he made his brother James his procurator. William (d.1425/6) son of Sir Robert of Edrington and The Bass, and Edinburgh, and nephew of Sir Alan of Hatton. His mother was Annabella, and his half-brother was Alexander, Bishop of Dunkeld. He was educated in France and became Archdeacon of Lothian by 1405. He appears to have dispossessed John de Hawick from his position as Precentor of Glasgow in the period 1403–6. In 1408 he was consecrated as Bishop of Glasgow, succeeding Matthew Glendonwyn. He acted as an envoy to England and France and probably helped persuade Robert, Duke of Albany, to support Martin V instead of Benedict XIII. He was appointed as Chancellor by Murdoch, Duke of Albany, and continued under James I. It is unclear if he played a prominent role in Teviotdale. However, he did extend Glasgow Cathedral, and is buried at the old parish church in Launder. His seal was very elaborate, showing the Trinity, saints, a kneeling bishop, shields and the words ‘S’ WILLELMI DEI GRACIA EPISCOPI GLASGUENSIS’. William (d.bef. 1539) Burgess of Edinburgh, who was heir to Stephen. He was recorded as one of the officials for a document in Selkirk in 1527/8. In 1530 he was among a group of men from the Selkirk area who took goods from men from Moffat, but later returned them. In 1530 Patrick Murray of Falahill granted him sasine of lands in Selkirk. He may be the William who in about 1530 was heir to his grandfather John in a tenement in Selkirk. In 1532 he had a charter for Stephen’s tenement in Selkirk. A further document records how he was to receive rent for the building from Nicholas Ker and Marion Brydon. In 1533/4 he resigned a tenement in Selkirk to Marion Notman. In 1534 he was a Burgess of Selkirk when he resigned a tenement in Selkirk. In 1535 he was ‘burgess of Edinburgh and lord of the lands of Toddryk’ when he came to the house of his tenant William Scott and ‘placing outside of a stool at the front door as is the custom in such things’ announced that William Scott should be ejected from his lands of Todrig. He is probably the William of Todrig recorded in 1537 when William Mathieson agreed to pay annual rent to him for lands in Selkirk. He was deceased in 1539 when there was an inquest for the succession of his son and heir Alexander for his lands of Todrig; Katherine Gray, wife of Hubert Maxwell was also involved, and may have been his widow. In 1540 Alexander was given sasine of his lands of Todrig. William (16th C.) listed as ‘Maister’ in the 1574 last testament of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch. He was owed money ‘conform to the Lairdis obligatioun’. However, it is unclear who he was, or whether he was local (formerly ‘Ladder’, ‘Lader’ and variants).

Laura Bennett’s (law-ra-be-nits) n. corner shop in the Kirkstyle during the 1940s and 50s — ‘...And if owts oo forgot A often would be sen-et Ti some wee corner shop Like Laura Bennet’s’ [IWL].

the Laurels (thu-law-ruhz) n. Guest House at 8 Princes Street.

Laurie (law-ree) n. Christian name, usually a familiar form of Lawrence, also sometimes spelled ‘Lawrie’.

Laurie (law-ree, low-ree) n. George from Jedburgh Parish, in 1793 he married Margaret Lamb in Cavers. Their children Anne and Jean were born in Jedburgh. Rev. James (c.1704–83) Minister of Hawick Parish 1757–83. He attended university along with Dr. John Armstrong (of Liddesdale and later London). He graduated from Edinburgh University in 1724, was licensed by Duns Presbytery in 1732 and was ordained at Langton (in Berwickshire) in 1734. There he married and had a family. He was presented to Hawick by Henry, Duke of Buccleuch in mid-1757 and installed a few months later. In 1759.
he acted as witness for a baptism for Wright John Kay. He was known for being very pugnacious and was an acquaintance of the influential Dr. Alexander Carlyle (minister of Inveresk), who called him ‘a boundless liar’ in his diaries! He was also described thus: ‘as a companion he was very amusing by the relation of fictitious stories’; it is said that he recounted fantastic tales based on the time he and Dr. Armstrong had joined a band of gypsies while they were students and also the time he spent visiting the doctor in London, where he claimed he befriended the top politicians of the day. He accompanied Carlyle and his party through Langholm to Carlisle, where he got into a fight ‘with a drunken squire of the name of Dacres, who had insulted him with foul language’ (a descendant of Lord Dacres perhaps?). However, there is little independent information to support this general character assassination. He gathered some parishioners together in St. Mary’s churchyard to pray during the great flood of 1767, afterwards claiming to have helped abate the waters (although according to the miller the flood had already much receded by then!). Both the Burgher and Anti-Burgher secession churches were formed in Hawick during his ministry, presumably encouraged in part by his unpopularity. It was also said that he refused to allow the parishioners to use a well at the Manse, as they had done previously, and Council records show a wall was pulled down, which he had had built across a thoroughfare on Burgh property. In 1767 he was described as owner of property in the East End of Hawick.

In 1743 he married Elizabeth Foggo, who died in 1792. Their children (all baptised in Langton) included: John (b.1744), who was minister at Teviothead, Eskdalemuir and Ewes; Cumberland Alex (b.1746); Mary (b.1748); and Elizabeth (b.1751). He could be the James born to John and Elizabeth Whitehead in Cockburnspath in 1707 – ‘Lawrie, that honest man o’ God, Deeming it judgement sent abroad Frae heaven direct because o’sin, Collected folk the kirk within’ [AD].

John (16th C.) notary to a charter relating to Harden in the Barony of Wilton in 1559. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Girnwood in 1716 and 1718. His children included William (b.1714), Janet (b.1716) and Janet (again, b.1718). Rev. John (1702/3–62) graduating from Edinburgh University in 1722, he was licensed by Penpont Presbytery in 1731 and was the second of the regular preachers at the Teviothead chapel-of-ease from 1738 until about 1745. In that year he was translated to Middlebie. He witnessed 2 baptisms in Hawick Parish in 1743 (for workmen John Rieve and John Armstrong, who may have had a connection to Teviothead); he is recorded there as ‘Mr John Lawrie preacher of the Gospel’. He married Anna Bell, who died in 1797, aged 85, and they had at least one son. Rev. John (1744–1817) son of James, minister of Hawick. He witnessed baptisms in Hawick in 1761, 1762, 1763, 1764 and 1765, when he was still a student (perhaps being the stand-in when the parents did not have other witnesses available, or else being an assistant in the church). He was licensed by the Presbytery of Jedburgh in 1767 and became the minister at Teviothead (or Caerlenrig) shortly after that. However, there is some potential confusion here with the earlier Teviothead minister of the same name. In 1772 he was recorded as ‘Preacher’ when he witnessed a baptism for Thomas Lookup, who probably lived in the upper Teviot valley. He is probably the ‘Mr’ John who witnessed a baptism in 1776 for George Balmer. He subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). He was translated to Eskdalemuir in 1785 and to Ewes in 1791. He was taxed for having a female servant in the 1780s. He was recorded at Ewes on the 1790–1797 Horse Tax Rolls and the 1797 Clock Tax Rolls. In 1786 he married Anne, daughter of William Grieve, farmer at Southfield, and she died in 1834, aged 73. Their children included: James (1787–1851), Lieutenant in the Royal Marines; William (1788–1842), Captain in the Royal Marines; Mary (1789–94); John (1790–1861), who became a Major General; Elizabeth (b.1793), who married Lieut. David Maxwell, younger of Broomholm; Adam Ogilvie (1795–1814), Lieutenant in the Royal Marines, who died at sea; Robert (1797–1828), who died in Langholm; and Walter (1805–44), surgeon with the 4th Regiment Madras Light Cavalry, who died at Anantapur, India. John R. (19th/20th C.) wrote some lines in memory of his brother-in-law James Davidson. Walter (b.c.1833) baker at 39 High Street. His wife was Janet and their children included: David; Adam; Walter; and Euphemia. Walter (1858–1923) son of baker Walter. He was also a baker, based at 39 High Street, who became a licensed grocer at the foot of the Mid Row and wine and spirit merchant of 13 Teviot Crescent. Additionally, he produced and sold aerated waters. He was a well known speaker at social functions and a member of the Masons. He bequeathed money for the Laurie

the Laurie Brig (thu-law-ree-brig) n. footbridge across the Teviot at the Spetch in Wilton Lodge Park, named after Walter Laurie, built in 1924 and opened by the Prince of Wales. It is near here that the Scissors used in the opening ceremony are in the Museum (sometimes erroneously written ‘Lawrie’).

Laurie’s Den (law-reez-den) n. area to the north of Paw Hill and west of the farm of Ashtrees. To the south-west there are the remains of an ancient enclosure, perhaps a medieval stock pen (note the place of essentially the same name in Hawick, Lawrie’s Denn).

the Laurie Shelter (thu-law-ree-shel’-ur) n. shelter in Wilton Lodge Park located near the Boer War Memorial, named after Walter Laurie who bequeathed money for its erection.

law (law) adj., arch. low – ‘And fare thee weel now Liddesdale, Baith the hie land and the law – Keep ye weel frae traitor Mains; For goud and gear he’ll sell ye a’. Fala, &c.’[CPM].

Law (law) n. Agnes (17th C.) resident at Chesters according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls.

Archibald (b.1770/1) born in Bowden, he was a grocer and carrier in Lilliesleaf. In Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories he is recorded as carrier, leaving Lilliesleaf for Hawick once a week. In 1851 he was ‘Landed Proprietor & Ag. Lab.’ on the south side of Main Street. In Slater’s 1852 directory he was listed simply as a grocer. He had a daughter Ann. Gilbert (15th/16th C.) resident of Menslaws. In 1502 it is recorded that he had 5 firlots of grain stolen from him there by Adam Gilbowther Chesters according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls.

Hugh (19th C.) farmer and coal agent, who was the last tenant of the fields between Havelock Street and Howdenbank, at that time part of Wilton Mains. He may have been the same Hugh described as an engineer of Wilton Place. James (c.1560–1632) born in Fife, he graduated from St. Andrews in 1581, and became minister of Kirkliston. As a young minister he is recorded being censured (along with John Spottiswoode) for playing football on the Sabbath. He became a royal chaplain in 1601, and was titular Bishop of Orkney from 1605. He was Moderator of the General Assembly in 1608 and preached in favour of episcopacy before the assembly in 1610. In 1615 he was appointed Archbishop of Glasgow, succeeding his friend Spottiswood. He must have temporarily held the superiority of local lands, since in 1624 he gave a sasine for Headshaw, Dryden and other lands to Andrew Hay, and in 1628 gave a charter of the lands of Barnhills to William Bennet. He married at least twice. James (d.c.1682) tenant in Horsleyhill. His will is recorded in 1682. He could be the James who witnessed baptisms for Robert Scott and William Scott in Robertson Parish in 1681. Jean (19th C.) name (or possibly nickname) for a Hawick character of the mid-1800s – ‘Goold Ballantyne and auld Hawick Jock, Wattie Moudie, Jock Gray and a’; Jenny’s Penny wi’ plaid o’ check, Betty Revel and auld Jean Law’ [HI]. John (d.c.1687) tenant in Hawick. His will is recorded in 1687. Probably the same James witnessed a baptism in 1682 for James Turnbull in Fenwick. Rev. John (1791–1875) coming from Linlithgow West, he was educated at Edinburgh University and licensed as a preacher of the Associate Presbytery of Falkirk. He became the third minister of Newcastleton Burgher Kirk in 1812. He was described as ‘very young and blooming’ when he started and ‘never seemed to grow older or less comely’. He was thus an object of much attention among local farmers with marriageable daughters. He was said to be a ‘handsome and vigorous preacher’ who became known as ‘the Lion of Liddesdale’. He started one of the first Sunday Schools in the district, and brought in 2 people from Carlisle to give singing instructions to the congregation. He visited London in 1824, and his wife would only let him go if he left a portrait of himself, so he got one done in Hawick in about 2 hours. In 1828 he was translated to St. Margaret’s, Dunfermline. He moved to Innerleithen in 1850 and had his jubilee as a minister in 1847; he was from his congregation and one of 7 sisters. They had 4 daughters and 1 son: Agnes Janie, who married manufacturer George Wilson in Hawick; Janet, who married John Tod from Dalkeith; Ellen, who married Thomas Bonnar, architect in Dunfermline; and William, who died in Trinidad. In 1859 he remarried, to Jessie Sanderson, but she died in 1860. It is said that he was related to Prime Minister Andrew Bonar Law. He died at Eskbank, Dalkeith and is buried at Dunfermline, alongside his wife Jean Murray of Whisgills. John (1906–59) schoolmaster at Denholm. He married Margaret Janet Robertson. They are buried in Denholm. Robert (17th C.) described as ‘in Kames’ in 1632 when along with several others he feued Westbarns (near Belse) from Thomas Hamilton, Lord Binning. Walter (19th C.) commission agent of 7 Slitrig Crescent. His daughter Margaret married Walter Scott (of Lyle & Scott), while Kate married John Rennie (of the British Linen Bank) and Jane married Walter Phillips Kennedy (bookseller). He may be the Walter, married to Janet Kedie, whose children baptised in Hawick included: Mary (b.1868); Walter Phillips Kennedy (bookseller). He may be the Walter, married to Janet Kedie, whose children baptised in Hawick included: Mary (b.1868); Walter Phillips Kennedy (bookseller). He may be the Walter, married to Janet Kedie, whose children baptised in Hawick included: Mary (b.1868); Walter Phillips Kennedy (bookseller).

Lawrie (law-lee) adj., poet. lowly, humble – ‘I am meik an’ lawlie in hairt’ [HSR], n. the lowly – ‘...the lawlie sall hail o’t, an’ be gladsum’ [HSR].

lawly (law-lee) adv., arch. lawfully – ‘The Court lawlie fensit. The said day, with the consent of the bailies and council of said bruche of Hawick ...’ [BR].

Lawrence (law-rins) n. Samuel (19th C.) town bellman in the late 1900s, who was also the last tenant of the Fleece Inn – ‘Scottie Dottle and Reuben Watt, Dickie Lyon and Jethart Jim, Sam’l Lawrence and Wat the Cat, And Heather Jock baith gray and grim’ [HI].

Lawrie (law-ree, low-ree) n. David (18th/19th C.) from Glasgow, he was fifer to Capt. Campbell of the 91st Regiment. He used to play for the recruiting party, which paraded through Hawick on market days in the early part of the 19th century. In 1809 he offered to play for the ‘reb’ Cornet, but was forbidden by his Captain. James (18th C.) owner of lands referred to as ‘Lawrie’s Denn’, located around Oliver Crescent and Oliver Place. He may have been the ‘John Lawrie’ referred to by Robert Wilson as one of the founders of the Hawick Farmers’ Club in 1776. Peter (1828–1902) son of William, he was a stockingmaker in Hawick. He married Jane, daughter of Ebenezer Wemyss and Janet Laidlaw. In 1853 the family emigrated to Australia, settling in Tarnagulla, Wemyss and Janet Laidlaw. In 1853 the family emigrated to Australia, settling in Tarnagulla, Wemyss and Janet Laidlaw.

Lawrie’s Flat (law-reez-flaw’) n. name marked on the 1859 Ordnance Survey map for the orchard area roughly where Trinity School was later built, a little further from the centre of town than ‘Lawrie’s Den’.

Laws (lawz) n. former lands occurring as ‘Lawis’ on the 1594 list of those held ‘in tenancy’ by the Baron of Hawick. The name occurs between ‘Langhaugh’ and ‘Tofts’, suggesting a location in the upper Teviot valley. However, it is possible that the lands meant are those in Liddesdale.

Laws (lawz) n. former name for lands in upper Liddesdale, between the B6357 and Riccarton Junction. They are recorded in the rental roll of c.1376 in the region then known as Ermiton (probably around the modern Arnton Fell). ‘Laws superior’ is valued at 12 shillings and ‘Laws inferior’ at 7 shillings, as well as ‘Locus Ricardi de Lawis’ (8 shillings), ‘Locus Roberti de Lawis’ (8 shillings 4 pence) and ‘Locus Ennie de Lawis’ (3 shillings); it is unclear to which family these Lairds belonged. It seems likely this is the same place as Lawshall, which is marked on Blaue’s 1654 map and associated with Law’s Hill on modern maps. It could also be the same place as ‘the Hill’, which was a seat of the Elliots in the 16th century. It is ‘Leys’ on the 1718 survey of properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch, when it extended to 546 acres, bounded by Dawstonburn, Saughtree, Riccarton, Roughlee and Stitchelhill; the farmhouse was shown on the map close to the place marked as the remains of Riccarton Tower on modern maps.

Lawshill (lawz-hill) n. fortified house marked on Blaue’s 1654 map, roughly north of Riccarton farm. It is surely connected with the lands of ‘Lawys superior’ and ‘Lawys inferior’ listed on a c.1376 rental roll. Law’s Hill is essentially the southern spur of Shiel Knowe, with Palmer’s Hill Cutting passing through it. The farm was occupied by John Nixon in 1623 and by Walter Scott of Goldielands in the period 1634–47, along with Riccartonfoot and Prickinghaugh (it was ‘Lawishill’ in 1623 and ‘Laweshill’ in 1634).

the Laws of the Mairches (thu-lawz-ov-thu-mair-cheez) n. rules for governing the Border, set up by a commission of English and Scottish knights in 1249. This included the establishment of the Wardens and how they were supposed to deal with rievers etc.

Lawson (law-sin) n. Judge Alexander Sutherland (1842–1916) watchmaker and jeweller of 1 Sandbed. He started his business in 1864, and also acted as an optician, silversmith and shipping agent. He was a member of the Town Council for 43 years, being Treasurer, becoming a Bailie and later a Judge. He was a Mason, associated with B.U.R.A. No. 424. He was also one of the founding members of the Common Riding Ceremonial Committee in 1887, and acted as a Race Steward. The Lawson Bridge was named after him, and he can be seen in a photograph of the older version of the bridge about 1900. His wife’s name was Catherine. His daughter unveiled the Hornshole Memorial in 1901 – ‘. . . There to answer Bailie Lawson about every wound and scar’ [WE].

Isobel (18th/19th C.) living at Newmill in 1793 when her daughter Margaret (b.1774) was baptised in Robertson. She acted as ‘Sponcer for the child’. James of Cairnmuir (17th C.) had the teinds of the Parish of Bedrule ratified to him in 1639, confirmed by a Private Act of Parliament in 1641. It is unclear what his connection was, but the original grant appears to have been from Rev. Joseph Tennant in 1632. James (18th C.) waiter working for vintner Robert Armstrong in Hawick in 1794. Patrick (15th C.) recorded among a large list of men of Liddesdale who did not appear at the Justice- aire in 1494/5, with the Lord of Liddesdale and Captain of Hermitage being fined. Robert (17th C.) listed at Whithope among ‘The poor in Hauick Paroch’ on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Robert (18th C.) resident at Teindside. He married Margaret Scoon, who may be the daughter of Walter Scoon and Isobel Miller born in 1720. Their children included: Robert (b.1745); Isobel (b.1747); Elizabeth (b.1750); John (b.1756); and George (b.1760); and Walter (b.1760). His children were baptised in Hawick, Wilton and Robertson Parishes. He was probably also the workman whose son William (b.1742) was baptised in Hawick, with the mother’s name given as ‘Janet’ Scoon and witnesses John Elliot at Goldielands and Robert Scott at Crumhaugh. The witnesses in 1745 were the Thomas Elliot in Harwood and Bailie Robert Boyd, and in 1750 were John and Robert Scott from Galalaw. Robert (18th C.) probably son of Robert. He was resident at Chapelhill in 1774 when his daughter Agnes was baptised in Robertson Parish. Other children were William (b.1775), Walter (b.1776), Margaret (b.1778), Margaret (again, b.1779) and Robert (b.1782). Walter (b.1811/2) from Westerkirk, he was a farm worker in Robertson Parish. In 1841 he was at Meadow Cottage and in 1851 at Craik. In 1840 in Ettrick Parish he married Janet Jackson (from Cavers Parish) and their children included: Janet (b.1841); Jane (b.1842); Thomas (b.1844); Jean (b.1849); and Susanna (b.1854).

William (19th C.) Burgh Officer in the 1880s, acting as Keeper of the Town Hall among other duties. He was also the halberdier in 1887 when the custom was revived of having the Burgh Officer, accompanied by the Drums and Fifes, walk to the Cornet-elect’s house on Picking Night. Sir William (d.1632) son of Thomas of Little Usworth, County Durham. He was High Sheriff of Cumberland and in 1591 was made Convenor of the Commission of the Marches. Knighted in 1604, in 1605 he was Convenor to the English Commission to govern the Borders. His name occurs many times in relation to the pacification of the Borders (i.e. capturing men from various families and executing or exiling them). William (17th/18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Todshawhillshiel in 1716. His children included: Helen (b.1714); Robert (b.1716); and Walter (b.1719). William (18th C.) resident of Robertson Burnfoot in 1743 when his daughter Isobel was baptised in Robertson Parish. Margaret (b.1737) and Janet (b.1740) were probably also his daughters. William (18th C.) recorded at Eilrig when some of his children were baptised in the 1770s. He married Jean Elliot in Robertson Parish in 1771. His children included: Isobel (b.1772); and Robert (b.1775). William (19th/20th C.) of Edinburgh designer of Hawick’s WWI Roll of Honour (formerly also spelled ‘Lawson’, ‘Lawsonne’, etc.).

the Lawson Brig (thu-law-sin-brig) n. iron foot-bridge over the Teviot connecting Free Church Lane with the Haugh, originally constructed in 1904, and replaced in 1988. It was named after Judge Lawson and replaced an earlier wooden structure erected in 1886, with steps at either end. This was built by David Taylor, with building foreman J.P. Tait. There is a photograph showing the original opening in 1886. It was popularly known as the Shit Brig.

Lawston (law-stin) n. farm in the far south of Castleton Parish, between the B6357 and the Liddel Water, after Kershopefoot. There are rig lines the 1960s. It was originally the driveway from Weensland Road to Leaburn House. The road has a turning place half-way up.

Leaburn Grove (lee-burn-gröv) n. street off Leaburn Drive, developed in 2001.

Leaburn Hoose (lee-burn-hoos) n. former house on Leaburn Drive, demolished in 1964. It was the town-house of Thomas Lindsay Watson (presumably named after the meadow on which it was built, and the Boozie Burn that flowed through it).

lead (leed) n. a leash (more commonly used for a dog leash than in standard English).

lead (leed) v., arch. to convey a cart, carry peats etc. – ‘May it therfor please yow to grant your pet-itioner freedom and libertie as to cast, win, and lead, make in and away take of your Commmone Muire of Havicke als many divots as will thatch his said stable…’ [BR1704], ‘…upon ane missive letter from the laird of Gladstains, the bailies and council gave liberty to him to cast, win, and lead some divots off the common’ [BR1707], ‘…for him to buy a beast for carrieing heather, leading of fuel, and carrieing to anie who would employ him’ [PR1723], ‘Paid James Heardye for liding 600 difeits to tolboothe, 1 10 0′ [BR1739], ‘…the Hawick beasts seldom touched it, because of the distance, unless when they were leading their peats or turfs’ [C&L].

Leadbetter (led-be'-ur) n. Alan Edmonstone Greenshields (1897/8–1917) son of Thomas. He was a Major in the Royal Horse Artillery who was mentioned in dispatches at Gallipoli, was wounded at Longueval and killed near Ypres. He is buried at Elverdinghe and there is a memorial plaque in Bedrule Kirk. Thomas Greenshields, J.P. (1859–1931) son of James Greenshields and Margaret MacPherson, he was born in Glasgow and was an architect with Leadbetter & Fairley. He started his own architect’s practice in Edinburgh in 1890, taking on James McLellan Fairley as a partner in 1895. In 1897 he inherited Stobieside from his father and in about 1912 became owner of Spittal Tower near Bedrule, which he had restored. He designed the renova-tions for Bedrule Kirk in 1914, and the War Memorial there, and was an elder at the church 1919–31. He also designed the new Wells House, as well as many other houses in southern Scot-land. He married Mary Anne Usher (daughter of Sir John of Norton and Wells) in Ratho in 1890. There is a plaque to their memory inside Bedrule Kirk. Their children were James Greenshields (solicitor), John Usher and Maj. Alan Edmonstone (killed in WWI), Mary Balmer and Jean Gillespie.

Leaderfit (lee-dur-fi’) n. Leaderfoot, a village just east of Melrose, with a modern bridge over the Tweed for the A68, together with the elegant 1779–80 Drygrange Bridge and adjacent 1865 19-arch railway viaduct. The area is sometimes jok-ingly called ‘Tripontium’.

leadin (lee-din) n., arch. the grain or other crops carted in from the fields – ‘Fenwick had a happy knack of turning up on such occasions as clippings and hay leadings’ [BM1907], ‘I finished ma schooling at Kirkton …an startit work on the farm drivin a one horse wi a cart …for feedin sheep an cartin leadin in for cattle turnips’ [TH] (see lead).

Leafauld (lee-fawld) n. former lands in Liddesdale, near Leaugh, Langhaugh and Harts-garth. It is probably the land referred to as ‘et le fauld’ in 1479 among the lands of Robert Elliot of Redheugh. In 1637 it is ‘Leyfauld’ when part of the lands to be inherited by James Elliott and his wife Margaret, daughter of Robert of Redheugh (the name presumably comes from ‘le fauld’; it is ‘Liefauld’ in about 1624).

leafs (leefs) n., pl. leaves – ‘The fsslin leafs trimmelt an bevvert i the simmer breeze’ [ECS], ‘…keekin throwe atween the leafs ….’ [ECS] (an example of the use of a different plural in Hawick than in standard English).

Leafy Hoose (lee-fée-hoos) n. former name for a house in the Weensland area, recorded in the 1851 census. It is probably the same as ‘Ivybank’.

the League o Pity (thu-leeg-ō-pi’-ee) n. children’s wing of the National Society for the Preven-tion of Cruelty to Children, specifically the Scottish version. It was a prominent charitable association in the mid-20th century, organising many local fund-raising events. It was the fore-runner of today’s N.S.P.C.C. Schools.

Leaugh (lee-hawf) n. farmouse on the Hermitage Water, just south of the Hartsgarth Bridge. Across the road there is the remains of what was once a public right of way and probably the main road through the valley until the 18th century. The name was once also ‘Leauich’. It is ‘Layhalch’ in 1479 when granted to Robert Elliot of Redheugh along with ‘Carolschelis’ and ‘harts-garth’. The Ellists held it, along with Hartsgarth, Langhaugh and Leafauld, through the 16th century and into the early 17th. It was one of 3 farms given by the last Robert Elliot of Redheugh to his daughter Esther in about the 1640s. It was possessed by Will Armstrong in 1632. It was valued (along with Greenholm) in 1678 at about £137. John ‘Weily’ was there in 1694. It was owned by William Manderson according to the 1788 county valuation and the Land Tax Rolls of 1811, and still valued along with Greenholm at £136 15s 8d. Robert Elliot and John Blacklock were both there in 1837. Archibald Armstrong was farmer there in the 1840s. The farm was ravaged by the flood of 1846. Thomas and William Kyle were there in 1868. By 1874 it was owned by the Duke of Buccleuch. The farm at Leahead Holm was destroyed by the great flood of 1846 (it is ‘layhauch’ in 1489, ‘Layhauch’ in 1526, ‘Layhauch’ in 1537/8, ‘leyhauch’ in 1613, ‘Leyhauche’ in about 1624, ‘Lehauche’ in 1632, ‘Layhauch’ in about 1640, ‘Leaugh’ in 1694 and ‘Leehaugh’ in 1797, 1811 and 1841; it is ‘Leehaugh’ on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Leahead Brig (lee-hawf-brig) n. bridge carrying the B6399 road over the Hermitage Water at Leahead. It is for some reason labelled ‘Leahead Bridge’ on the Ordnance Survey map.

Leahead Cottage (lee-hawf-ko’-cej) n. cottage in Castleton Parish, between the main road and the river, between Leahead and Redheugh farms. Arthur Moffat was farmer there in 1861.

Leaheid Loch (lee-heed-loc) n. Leaheid Loch, a small body of water out beyond Stiches, by the roadside roughly opposite Stintynkowre, also called Dykenenk. There were adjacent farm buildings shown on the Ordnance Survey map of 1863.

Leaheids (lee-heedz) n. Leaheads, former farmstead by Leahead Loch. William Goodfellow was there in 1708 and Walter Scott in 1709. Alexander Cunningham was there in 1747, John Miller in 1759 and James Riddell in 1797. William Douglas was shepherd there around 1840 and Thomas Lockie was ‘Game Guard’ in 1851 (it is ‘Leeheads’ in 1791, ‘Leehead’ in 1840 and ‘Leaheid’ in 1841; it is marked on Stobie’s 1770 map of Roxburghshire).

leal (leel) adj., arch., poet. faithful, loyal, true – ‘... the leal an’ aefauld loe thee’ [HSR], ‘He’s weel an’ he’s leal, an’ he’s on his way home ... ’ [JJ], ‘For lads leal and true, And lasses braw and fair ... ’ [TC], ‘Here though art, and where to-morrow, Far from Hawick, leal and kind ... ’ [TCh], ‘... At his leal auld chieftan’s word’ [JEDM], ‘... A lad- die kind and leal’ [?], ‘... The leal hands haud oot a welcome, The sib herts still beat true’ [WL], ‘Lang may the Common Riding leeve in the herts O’ every leaf Teri ... ’ [DH] (from Old English; sometimes spelled ‘leil’).

leally (leel-lee) adv., arch. faithfully, loyally – ‘... and the faith in my body leelie and treuly bindis and obligis me til a noble and honorabil man, William Douglas of Drumlangrig’ [SB1470], ‘... wee shall leelie and trewlie keip this our bonde for all quarrells, bloods and goods ... ’ [CBP1584].

lealest (leel-ist) adj., poet. most loyal – ‘O he was the lord o’ the keenest sword, And he was the lord o’ the lealest love’ [JTe].

lealthfu’ (lealth-foo) adj., poet. loyal, staunch – ‘Her lealthfu’ heart’ [HSR].

leam (leem) v., poet. to gleam, flash – ‘But it never kent the glorie That leamed frae flags to riggin ... ’ [WL], n., poet. a gleam, flash, glow, radiance – ‘And the brunstane leme came frae their throats, And syntig his drakit tail’ [JTe], ‘... its kools ar kools o’ fire, whilk hae ane maist veem leme’ [HSR], ‘... Hae the same leme o colour As Mimi wore at her corsage And braidit in her hair’ [DH] (also written ‘leme’).

Lean Yeddie Gibson (leen-ye-dee-gib-sin) n. song of the mid 19th century, written probably by William Tait and Andrew Cameron, with help from Adam Brown and set to music by Walter Davidson. It is about an enthusiastic Hawick angler who died while fishing the Teviot in the 1850s.

Leap Burn (lee-p-burn) n. stream that joins the Floss Burn to create the Lang Burn near Langburnshiel. It is hence one of the headwaters of the Slitrig.

Leap Hill (lee-p-hil) n. hill along the ‘Hill Road to Robertson’, on the north side, to the south of Western Essenside. It reaches 319 m high and contains various ancient earthworks. A probable hill-fort, just south-east of the summit has been largely destroyed by cultivation. The remains of 2 old sheepfolds lie on the south side. This was also the name of a farmstead there, part of the lands owned by George Scott of Blindhaugh in 1544. In that year George’s 3rd son William was assigned ‘all and haill the leip hill langhoup medo and por- ciones of land about the burn syd callit lainghoup burn’, occupied by Walter Watson. It was owned by the Scotts of Woll in the early 17th century and the Laings in the 18th century, passing to the Cochranes of Ashkirk in 1795. It was valued at £140 in 1643 and owned by Thomas Scott; the teinds were valued (along with Woll, Castle-side and Broadlee), valued at £208 and owned by Robert Scott of Heap. Part was owned by Mrs. Elliot of Borthwickbrae in 1788 (as still recorded in about 1811) and Allan Elliott Lockhart by 1874, still valued at £143 (it is ‘Leiphill’ in 1609, 1643 and 1788).

Leap Hill (leep-hil) n. hill between Whitrope Cottages and the Maidens, reaching a height of 472 m (1544 feet). It is often referred to as simply ‘the Leap’ and was formerly called ‘Leap Steel’. There is a linear earthwork running west from the western slopes of the hill, now hard to make out, but perhaps once running as far as the head of the Harwood Burn (it is marked ‘Lyipe’ on Blaeu’s Survey map). It is often referred to as simply ‘the Leap’ and was formerly called ‘Leap Steel’. There is a linear earthwork running west from the western slopes of the hill, now hard to make out, but perhaps once running as far as the head of the Harwood Burn (it is marked ‘Lyipe’ on Blaeu’s Survey map).

the Leap Linns (thu-leep-linz) n. popular name for a narrow gorge through which the Ale Water flows, near Leap Hill, just south-west of Shieliswood farm. A pool there was sometimes a summer swimming spot. On an eastern spur of Leap Hill there, there are the remains of a settlement, about 100 m by 45 m, and contains evidence of a hut circle and 2 enclosures, probably later sheepfolds (the name is probably the ‘de Lepes intra Askirke et Whitesalde in Alne’, i.e. between Ashkirk and Whitslade, mentioned in a charter of the late 12th century; the ‘linns’ probably refers to the narrow gorge there, and not to a waterfall; it is marked ‘Leap Linn’ on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Leapsteal (leep-steel) n. former name for an area around the Leap Burn (described as part of the Catrail’s course, between the Maidens and Robert’s Linn, in William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ (1821), Wilson’s ‘Annals of Hawick’ and contemporary descriptions).

lear (leer) n., arch., poet. learning – ‘. . . For want o’ braith or lear’ [DH], ‘What’s this? His lear wad flype The wisdom o’ the day!’ [WL], v. to learn, teach (also lair).

Learmonth (leer-munth) n. Archibald (18th C.) resident at Whithope in 1742 when his daughter Helen was baptised in Roberton Parish. Other children included Robert (b.1741) and Margaret (b.1746). Perhaps he is the same as Archibald ‘Lernment’ at Deanhead, whose daughter Isabel was baptised in Cavers Parish in 1737. Henry (19th/20th C.) son of Henry. He was Cornet in 1882, with his own father serving as Acting Father. He was a ‘powerloom tuner’, but later farmed at Greenbraehead, and then emigrated to America. James (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1493 when he failed to appear when called by William Douglas, Sheriff of Roxburghshire, at the Justicair in Jedburgh in 1493; Laurence and Thomas were listed right after him. William, son of James, who was called later, may also have been his son. They were all recorded again in 1494/5, when the Sheriff was once more fined for their non-appearance. Perhaps the same ‘Jacobum Lermonth’ was recorded in 1508 when he witnessed the sasine for Adam Herpburn inheriting his father’s Lordship of Liddesdale; many of the other men were relatively local. James (16th/17th C.) recorded as schoolmaster at Minto in deeds of 1624 and 1625. James (17th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He married Helen Govenlock and their daughter Bessie was baptised in 1683. He witnessed a baptism for Andrew Fisher in 1681. James (17th C.) resident of Drinkstone according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Highchesters in 1710 and Whitfield in 1712. His children included: Robert (b.1710); and Isobel (b.1712). James Pringle, J.P., Manager of the British Linen Bank in Newcastleton in the mid-20th century. He lived at the Bank House and was first Treasurer of the village hall committee. John (17th/18th C.) resident in ‘Mains’ in Roberton Parish in 1717, 1721, 1726, 1729, 1731 and 1734. He is surely related to Thomas, who was there at about the same time. His children included: James (b.1717); Robert (b.1719); John (b.1721); Agnes (b.1724); Isobel (b.1726); John (again, b.1729); William (b.1731); and Thomas (b.1734). John (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was recorded living at ‘Moyspalgreen’ in 1755. He married Agnes Scott and their children included Thomas (b.1755). Perhaps the couple with the same names were in Canonbie in 1766 when an unnamed child of theirs was baptised. John (d.bef. 1794) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Turnbull in 1756 and her death is recorded in 1794. They had a daughter Margaret (b.1757). Lawrence (15th C.) recorded in 1493 when he failed to appear when called by William Douglas, Sheriff of Roxburghshire, at the Justicair in Jedburgh in 1493; James was listed right before him and Thomas right after. They were all recorded again in 1494/5, when the Sheriff was once more fined for their non-appearance.
Robert (17th C.) resident of Roberton Parish, when it contained Hassendean. He married Isobel Noble and their son John was baptised in 1686. Helen (b.1684) was probably also his child. He is probably the Robert who witnessed a baptism for William Falside in 1686 and another for James Noble in 1687. He may be the same Robert who was at Hassendean Mains according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Robert (17th/18th C.) resident of Robertton Parish. He was recorded at Borthwickshiel in 1711, when his daughter Isobel was baptised. Probably the same Robert was recorded at Howcleuch in early and late 1717 when his sons Robert and John were baptised. He may be the Robert who married Elspeth Little in Roberton in 1708. Thomas, who married Margaret Inglis in Roberton in 1726, may also be his son. Robert ‘Rob’ (17th/18th C.) Hawick resident who was married to Janet Andison. In 1721 they were rebuked by the Hawick Session because they ‘did accommodat married men and young men, yea, even boyes, with Candle and Cards, they curseing, swearing and blaspheming the name of God in ye season of ye night’; this would appear to a gambling house (although possibly to do with Tarot cards). In 1724 he was further cited for ‘allowing persons for meeting in his house for playing att cards’. After promising to no longer allow people to come to his house for gambling, the Beadle was instructed to check on him from time to time, this possibly ending the practice. He may have been the Robert born in Hawick to James and Helen Gowenlock. Robert (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Wait and their unnamed child was baptised in 1763. He could be the Robert, son of Robert, baptised in Hobkirck in 1736. Simon (17th C.) resident at Langflat (near Southfield) in 1694, according to the Hearth Tax rolls. Thomas (15th C.) witness in 1475/6 to a document relating to the lands of Kirkurd for the Scotts of Buccleuch. His name is recorded as ‘Thom Leirmond’. Thomas (15th C.) recorded in 1493 when he failed to appear when called by William Douglas, Sheriff of Roxburghshire, at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1493; James and Laurence were also listed, and so they were surely related. All 3 were again cited for non-appearance in 1494/5. Thomas (16th C.) one of the men indicted in 1552 for involvement in the murder of Sir Walter Scott of Braxholme and Buccleuch. He is recorded as ‘Thomas Lermont, callit Lard of that Ilk’. Thomas (16th C.) farmer at Weens, recorded as ‘Thomas Leirmont’ in the 1562 dispute over lands in the Barony of Feu-Rule. Probably a related Thomas ‘Leirmont’ is recorded in an inquest in Jedburgh in 1523. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. In 1727 and 1728 he was at Mains. He was surely related to John, who was at Mains at the same time. In 1726 he married Margaret Inglis, also from Roberton. His children included Isobel (b.1727) and Isobel (again, b.1728). Thomas (18th C.) resident of Whitehaugh in Wilton Parish. He married Jean Riddell in 1730 and their children included William (b.1735). The witnesses in 1735 were Thomas and John Irvine. William (15th C.) listed at the 1493 Justice-aire in Jedburgh when William Douglas of Cavers was fined for his non-appearance. He was recorded as son of James, who may have been the same James called earlier at the 1493 court. He was cited again at the 1494/5 Justice-aire. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He was recorded as gardener at Whitslade in 1698. His wife was a Brunton and their children included Isobel (b.1698). Perhaps the same William also married Isobel Scott and had further children Janet (b.1701) and Thomas (b.1703) (also spelled ‘Larment’, ‘Learmond’, ‘Lermond’, ‘Learment’, ‘Leirment’, ‘Lerment’, ‘Lermond’, ‘Lermond’, ‘Lermont’, ‘Lermonth’, ‘Lormon’ and variants).

lease (lees) n., arch. division of the threads for weaving – ‘In order to prevent two threads of different colours from coming together in the ‘lease’ at the end of each gang or course in warping . . . ’[BCM1881], v., arch. to wind off, separate threads before weaving – ‘Tt lease yairn’[GW].

leasehaud (lees-hawd) n. leasehold – ‘The trinne o’ pule and stream . . . the lost lease-haud o’ youth . . . ’[DH].

leases (lee-seez) n., pl. rentals of farms. These were traditionally made for periods of 15 or 19 years, but sometimes 9 years or shorter. The land-owner usually leased to the same farmer, sometimes extending over several generations of the same family. Rent was once paid in kind, but that eventually gave way to cash. There were several different kinds of lease, sometimes also called a ‘tack’.

leasur (lee-zur) n., arch. leisure – ‘Bot the season now confying us to our housses and giving us more leasur to mind and attend thes domesticke affairs . . . ’[BR1692] laishur).
leave (leev) n., arch. dismissal, permission to leave, playtime at school – ‘The bairns new oot o the skul for leave, gaed ... rinnin aboot’ [ECS].

leave-piece (leev-pees) n. a snack for playtime at school.

leazle (lee-zul) v., poet. to exert – ‘...nather do I leazle mysel’, makin' a-wark in meikle matters, or in things ower heich for me’ [HSR] (this word is only known once, and is suggested to be a misprint for ‘baazle’, a variant of ‘baissle’).

lebber (le-bur) n., pl., arch. slobberers, food dropped from the mouth (cf. labbers).

Leche (lesh) n. John (d.1395) secretary to the Bishop of Glasgow. He obtained the living of Hawick Church sometime before 1363 and in that year asked for papal confirmation that he held it over the former incumbent John Fleming. It is said ‘he had the church of Haweik, near the English march, which on account of wars and pestilences brings no fruits’. He held the Hawick benefice until at least 1378. There is no reason to believe that he ever visited the town, however. In 1366 he is recorded paying the contribution of the See of Glasgow to the King’s Chamberlain (and there was a contemporary of the same name recorded in the Exchequer Rolls who was a Burgess of Linlithgow). In 1376 he is the John ‘Lethi’ or ‘Lechi’ who was ‘vicar-general in spirituals’ of Walter, Bishop of Glasgow, when he arranged the transfer of the living of Cavers to Matthew Glendonwyn. There is a Patrick, perhaps his son, who was Dean of Glasgow sometime after 1421 and before 1444, and Chancellor of Glasgow from around 1444–60 (also spelled ‘Liche’ and possibly equivalent to ‘Lethi’).

Leck (lek) n. Rev. Joseph of Rawflat (c.1698–1785) minister of Yetholm, 1731–85. He gained the lands of Rawflat in 1739 and they later passed to John Edmund Elliot. He was listed on the roll of electors for Roxburghshire in 1780. A story is told of how he was set upon by robbers, and when he and the leader (the local gypsy Will Faa) recognised each other, there were apologies made, and the pair agreed never to speak of it again. He married Ann Scott from Sprouston and their children included: Henry (1736–67); Susan (b.1742), who married Henry Ainslie, Sheriff-Clerk of Roxburghshire; Jean: William; and Thomas. Robert (b.1811/2) from Castleton Parish, he was a publican at about 31 High Street in 1841 and 1851. This was possibly the same as the White Hart Inn and was listed as the Bull & Butcher in Slater’s 1852 directory. By 1861 he was listed as an agricultural labourer, living at 3 Slitrig Bank. He married Mary (1811–55) daughter of Robert Mitchellhill. Their children included Margaret, Jane, Mary, Robert, Julian, Helen, Thomas, James and William G.

lector (lek-tur) n., arch. a pupil of English (as opposed to Latin), someone who reads the scripture in church – ‘...those who learned humanity, and also the lectors, were all taught under one roof by the then incumbent ...and when those who learned humanity, and others who were lectors, were disjoined ...’ [PR1713].

ledder (le-dur) n. a ladder – ‘...As he spiels up and doon his ledder o' sang, Blithely I ken’[DH], ‘He's often swung frae scaffolds and faen frae ledgers’ [IWL] (see also the older lether).

leddie see leddy

leddy (le-dee) n., arch. a lady, female landowner or wife of landowner – ‘...her blessings on Leddie Elliot were both loud and long ...’[RM], ‘...But now I was ledy o' houses an' land’[JT], ‘Hooray for Verter’s famous Well, An’ Tamson’s Bonnie leddy’[VW], ‘And we'll hing thegether like burrs, As lang as oor heads we hain, For his Leddy has tabled his spurs, And Harden maun ride again’[TK], ‘Then a' the leddies curled their brows, The cup smashed wi' a tune ...’[WFC], ‘...Amang them aa there was nane to marrow Auld Harden’s leddy, the ‘Flooer o Yarrow’’[WL] (also spelled ‘leddie’ and ‘ledy’, and sometimes capitalised).

led ferm (led-ferm) n., arch. a small farm that is let along with a bigger one on which the tenant resides, the smaller farm having just one or more shepherds living on it – ‘It had been the custom for many years that Craikhope was let as a led farm along with Billholm ...’[RB].

lee (lee) n., poet. a lie – ‘...But raither wud wait till oor back’s oot o’ sicht, To drap what they ken is a lee’[WFC], v. to lie – ‘Let the leein’ lippes be putten til seelence, whilk speik sadlie ...’[HSR], ‘Thon loeist ill mair nor guid, an’ leein’ raethir nor til speik richteousniss’[HSR] (cf. the locally more common lei).

Lee (lee) n. Agnes (16th C.) widow of Robert. In 1541 she was recorded as tenant of half of the farm of Old Jedburgh. Her first name is written ‘Agnete’. George (b.1803/4) probably born in Hownum Parish, son of John ‘Lees’ and Isobel Paterson. He worked for several years as a jeweller in Hawick. He married Margaret Paris in Stow in 1826; she was daughter of the Stow schoolmaster. Their children included: Mary (b.1827); John (b.1829), who must have died young; James Paris (b.1831), firearms inventor; John (b.1833)
Canadian foundry owner; Isabella (b.1835); Margaret Paris; Ann; George; and Jessie. The first 5 children were born in Hawick. He emigrated to Canada with his family in 1836, originally settling in Galt, Ontario. He was recorded there as a watchmaker in 1852. Gilbert (16th C.) tenant of half of the farm of Old Jedburgh according to the rental roll of Jedforest in 1541. He was probably related to the Lees who held the other half of the lands. James (19th C.) recorded as teacher at a school in O’Connell Street on Pigot’s 1837 directory. James Paris (1831–1904) born in Hawick, son of George, a watchmaker and jeweller. His mother was Margaret Paris. The family emigrated to Galt, Canada when he was 5. There he became a watchmaker like his father, before moving to the U.S.A. and setting up the Lee Firearms Company during the U.S. Civil War, which led to the Remington-Lee rifle design of the 1880s. He later had a hand in developing the typewriter, and back in Britain developed the Lee-Metford rifle. Modifications to this design at the Enfield Royal Ordnance Factory led to the famous Lee-Enfield rifle in 1895, which was extensively used worldwide over the next 50 years. Variants of this rifle were used in every conflict from the Boer War to WWII, which led to the Lee-Metford and Lee-Enfield series. Oral tradition says that the first shots of the prototype were fired into an oak tree outside the foundry in Wallaceburg. The original gun is housed in a museum there. He married Caroline Chrysler (of the later automobile family) and had sons William and George. Gilbert (surely a relative) in the other half. William (15th C.) witness in 1436 to a sasine for the lands of Wolfelee and Wolfehopelee. The other men listed were all from relatively nearby, including Robert, who was probably related. William (16th C.) tenant of the farm of ‘Auld Jedburgh-heid’ according to the rental roll of Jedforest in 1541. He was surely related to the other Lees at Old Jedburgh.

William is also listed, before him and so probably related. Robert (16th C.) tenant in Old Jedburgh farm. In 1541 his widow Agnes was recorded as tenant of the half farm, with Gilbert (surely a relative) in the other half. William (15th C.) witness in 1436 to a sasine for the lands of Wolfelee and Wolfehopelee. The other men listed were all from relatively nearby, including Robert, who was probably related. William (16th C.) tenant of the farm of ‘Auld Jedburgh-heid’ according to the rental roll of Jedforest in 1541. He was surely related to the other Lees at Old Jedburgh.

The Leeberal Club (thu-lee-bu-ruil-klub) n. Hawick Liberal Club, being a political and social club connected with the Liberal Party. The premises stood at the corner of the High Street and Brougham Place, and were built in 1894 on the site of Milligan’s the cabinet-makers. The architect was J.P. Alison (with help by apprentice Alexander Inglis). The club went through periods of financial difficulty, with parts of the building being let for other purposes. It closed in the late 1990s and re-opened as Hawick Sports and Social Club. However, the building has been involved in an ownership dispute, and its future remains uncertain. The building is marked with a plaque commemorating the laying of the foundation stone.

called West Lees, near Appletreehall. The old names for the lands there were Easter and Wester Moormaw. There were Scotts of Lees in the 17th and 18th centuries, connected with the Scotts of Catslack. William ‘in Lees’ was recorded in 1698.
Robert Scott was there in 1705. John Elliot was tenant there in 1711, Adam Scott in 1721–35, David Renwick in 1725 and Robert Graham in 1729.
George Graham was there in 1747, John Irvine in 1759 and John Scott in 1764. Alexander Somerville was tenant there in 1812. The lands were valued at £52 in 1811, when owned by William Scott of Burnhead. John Wilson was farmer there in 1841 and Thomas Turnbull in 1861 (also written ‘Lies’; it is marked on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Lees (leez) n. Alexander (b.1821/2) from Earl-ston, he was a blacksmith on the High Street in Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1851 he was at about 79 High Street. His wife was Margaret and their children included Margaret and Isabella. David (1812/3–78) farmer at Fenwick. In 1851 he was recorded as farmer of 140 acres, employing 3 people. He married Isabella Tait, who died in 1871, aged 59. Their children included Janet, Isabella and James (who married Jane Little). He is buried in Wellogate Cemetery. David Crawford (19th C.) blacksmith in Hawick. He donated a set of communion plate to the Relief (Allars) Kirk before emigrating to America about 1850. These sacrament vessels went to the elders on the closure of Allars. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was at Clarilaw in 1721.
He married Margaret Graham and their children included: James (b.1719); and Francis (b.1721).
The witnesses in 1721 were John Dryden and James Blyth. Bessie (b.1723), James (b.1726) and Helen (b.1729), baptised in Minto, could also be his children. William (15th/16th C.) listed among the Borderers (led by the Homes and Walter Scott of Branxholme) pardoned in 1526 for an attack on the Earl of Arran. His surname is

original congregation of Wolfelee Free Kirk in 1849. He married Mary Scott in 1814. James (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when he was listed among the ‘Cottars’ on the Hearth Tax roll there. His name was written ‘Ligeruood’. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish when his daughter Margaret was baptised in 1719. He is probably the James who got married in Ashkirk in 1715 (with no wife’s name given). John (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. He farmed on one of the farms of Knuessouth estate. His name was written ‘Ligeruood’. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Isobel Kedie in 1699 and their children included: Isobel (b.1702); Margaret (b.1707); and John (b.1709). William (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. In 1720 he married Bessie Riddell, who was also from Roberton, the marriage taking place in Hawick. His name is recorded as ‘Ligertwood’ (former spelling variants include ‘Liddgertwood’, ‘Ligert-wood’, ‘Litchardwood’ and even ‘Lizzarhide’).

Leggat (le-ga) n. Andrew (18th/19th C.) coachman and servant to Rev. Dr. Charters of Wilton for 42 years. He was recorded as ‘chaise driver’ for the minister in the tax records of 1797. He was a seceder, being a member of the ‘Burgher’ congregation and hence never entered the church to hear his employer preach. When his master preached at a neighbouring church, he would sleep in the carriage until the service was over. He once drove all the way to Ashkirk by mistake without the minister inside the carriage. He was said to be rather slow in his movements, and a story is told of how, when sent on an errand into Hawick, he would fetch a horse from the far end of the Glebe, so that a maidservant had already gone to Hawick and returned before he was ready to go. It is also said that frequent complaints were made by the maidservants about his old-world and disobliging ways, but the minister would always just say ‘As long as I have a house, Andrew shall have a chair’. Andrew (18th/19th C.) gardener and house servant at Woll in 1778 and 1779, when he was working for William Scott of Woll. By 1785 he was ‘Footman & House Servant’ for Charles Scott of Woll and continued there until at least 1788. By 1791 there was a different servant at Woll, and he was listed as ‘postillion’ at Burnhead. He was still coachman at Burnhead in 1793. It seems possible he was the same man as the coach-driver for Rev. Charters of Wilton. He is probably the Andrew who married Janet Scott in Ashkirk in 1775, and whose children included: John (b.1777); Andrew (b.1779); Margaret (b.1780), possibly the same as Peggy; Gideon (b.1785); and William (b.1790), born in Wilton, who became a merchant in New York. Andrew (18th/19th C.) whipmaker in Hawick. His son William died in Hawick in 1808 and his daughter Margaret in 1810; she could be the daughter of Andrew and Janet Scott born in Ashkirk in 1780. His son William died in 1808. Gideon (18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His children included: Andrew (b.1750); Walter (b.1752); John (b.1754); Bettie (b.1856); Gideon (b.1758); James (b.1763); and Robert (b.1767). He may be the Gideon in Unthank who (perhaps secondly) married Margaret Oliver from Abbotrule in 1762. He may be the Gideon, son of Andrew, born in Kirkton in 1722. John (18th C.) listed as house and stable servant at Woll in 1797, when he was working for Charles Scott. He was probably son of Andrew, who had earlier been the servant of the Scotts of Woll. John (18th/19th C.) proprietor of a public house in Denholm, recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. He subscribed to Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He may be the John whose son Walter was baptised in Cavers Parish in 1791. Janet, described as ‘independent’ in Denholm in the 1841 census, may have been his widow; by 1851 she is a 76 year old pauper, recorded as born in Denholm. Margaret ‘Peggy’ (b.1780) probably daughter of Andrew and Janet Scott. She married Thomas Purdie in Wilton in 1802. Rev. Robert (b.1861) son of James and Jane Finlay, he was born at Coatbridge (or Old Monkland). He was educated in Glasgow and learned shorthand at an early age. He worked in an accounting office, then for a newspaper, but gave up journalism to train for the Church. He was licensed in 1889 and in 1891 was ordained as minister of Wolfelee Free Kirk. He remained there until 1898 when he left for Bankhill Church, Berwick, where he resigned in 1919. He set up a Literary Society in Rulewater and contributed to several newspapers and magazines. He did not marry. William ‘Willie’ or ‘Wullie’ (1718–1768) 2nd son of Andrew, blacksmith at Cauldmill, he grew up with his older brother Archibald and sister Margaret, who worked on Cavers estate. He was a simple-minded worker employed on Cavers estate to run errands, and is traditionally said to have been killed by the cook when he returned with the wrong vegetables. He was immortalised in stone through a crude statue, where he is posing with his dog, bonnet and basket. He lived with found a football team in 1953. The Club closed in 1997, with the clubrooms later used as a fitness centre. There was also a branch in Newcastle, at 3 North Hermitage Street.

the Legion (thu-lee-jin) n. Hawick British Legion Football Club, an amateur football team, originally sponsored by the Legion club, being founded with the aid of a donation in 1953. The club has had many premises and is now located in Princes Street.

lelin (leg-lin) n., arch. a milk-pail – ‘...the goods presented ... ranging from ‘rock bools’ to horn sporns to leglins’ [V&M].

lei (li) v. to lie, fib – ‘deh lei ti mei’, ‘yer mother can aye tell when ee’re lei-in’, n. a lie, untruth – ‘it was juist a teeny-weeny lei’, ‘Hei said they ca’d um Chairlie Broon – Mind, it could hev been a lei ... ’ [DH] (often spelled as in English ‘lie’; note the hard i sound, and that ‘to recline’ is pronounced II).

leier (li-ur) n. a liar – ‘yer a muckle leier, so ee er’ (note the hard i sound).

leify see lifey

leigh (lich) adj., poet. low – ‘Their courage grew leigh’ [HSR] (not common, cf. laigh, leuch and low).

Leigh (lee) n. Henry (c.1555–c.1606) of Rockcliffe Castle, Cumbria, son of Thomas. He was appointed Deputy Warden of the English West Marches in at least 1597. In that year there was an indenture signed at Copshawholm between him and Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch for the delivery of 5 Scotsmen. He appears to have suffered from lack of family wealth and was imprisoned, probably for meeting personally with James VI, among other things. He may be the same man who was Captain of Carlisle Castle in 1604 and a Border Commissioner in 1606.

lei-like (li-lik) adj., arch. like a lie, fictional, untruthful (recorded in the Hawick news in 1954).

Leipzig (lip-zig) n. battle of 1813, where the coalition armies defeated the French under Napoleon, being the largest battle in Europe until WWI, and the first major defeat for Napoleon. Although no British troops were involved, the victory was a cause of huge celebrations throughout the country. It was celebrated in Hawick with illuminations, probably meaning extra lamps and candles in the mains treets, burning tar barrels and a torchlight procession.

leish (leesh) adj., arch. supple, athletic, active, nimble, sometimes suggesting tallness – ‘...my father was buchtin’ the Brockalaw yowes to twae young, lish, clever hizzies at night after sunset’ [LHTB], ‘A pairteet thre the leesh, swank-leike fallih’ (at ‘Ad been followin eis lead) at the whusht road-end at Jeddit’ [ECS], ‘My fishin’-wand, it’s strang and leish ...’ [DH], ‘The gress grew lang and leish ahint the schule’ [DH] (occasionally spelled ‘leash’ or ‘leesh’).

Leishman (leesh-min) n. James (18th/19th C.) carrier operating between Hawick and Edinburgh and the north, as well as to Newcastle, according to Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. He may have married Catherine and had children including Robert. Robert (b.c.1812/3) Hawick hosiery traveller from the West End. In 1837 he was running a cart from Buccleuch Street to Edinburgh and Galashiels twice a week, and once a week to Newcastle. In 1841 he was listed as a carrier on the Back Row. He often accompanied William Laidlaw on sales trips to the Newcastle area. It was said to have been an open secret that Robert’s conscience did not trouble him with knotty questions of excise’ [JHH]. His wife was Margaret, and their children included James, Catherine, Agnes, Margaret, Jane and Thomas. His mother was probably Catherine (living with him in 1841). By 1871 he was living in Berwick and his name was spelled ‘Lishman’.

Robert ‘Bert’ (d.1961), well known local auctioneer, with a saleroom in the old ‘Green Kirk’ building at Myreslawgreen. He was writer of the ‘Betty Whutson’ column for many years. He was also a member of Hawick Town Council and Bailie from 1946 to 1961, when he died on a visit to Tasmania.

Leishman Place (leesh-min-plis) n. part of Burnfoot, built in two phases, beginning in 1957. It is a dead-end street off Ruberslaw Road and was named after Bert Leishman.

Leishman’s (leesh-minz) n. carriers firm of the early 19th century which ran weekly between Hawick and Newcastle.

leisome (li-sum) adj., arch. telling a lie, fibbing – ‘If it’s nae lee, it’s e’en unco leesum like’ [JoJ] (also written ‘leesome’, but not to be confused with leesome).

leisome-like (li-sum-lik) adj., arch. like a lie – ‘A leisome-like story’ [GW].

leister (lee-stur) n. a spear with three or more prongs used for fishing – ‘Wi’ their nets and their leisters, their bowats and gegs ...’ [UB], ‘In my youth, when ‘leisters’ were not illegal, or at least when their use was winked at by the powers that were ...’ [RB], v. to fish with a leister – ‘...when law allowed the leistering of salmon ...’ [RM] (probably from Old Norse; some old examples exist in the Museum).

the Leisure Centre (thu-leeshur-sen’-ur) n. Teviotdale Leisure Centre, Mansfield Road, opened in 1982 on the site of the former railway station. It consists of a swimming pool and squash courts, with an indoor bowling hall opened in 1985. It was designed by Faulkener-Brown, Hendy & Stonor of Newcastle, with opinions differing as to its aesthetic qualities. The bowling extension was not designed to match the original part, and here opinions do not differ. The palm tree fell into the pool in 2008.

Leitch (leech) n. Andrew (b.1838) son of Andrew from Largo, he studied at St. Andrews University 1855–59. He became a teacher, working in Castleton, Caithness, Dollar Academy, Dalry, and also in Hawick. George (b.1795/6) from Galashiels, he was farmer at Barnes in 1851. He was then farming 730 acres and employing 6 people. His wife was Isabel (from Smailholm) and their children included James M., Alexander, Isabel and Richard W. Simon (15th/16th C.) tenant of Minto Craigend about 1502, along with Thomas Young and his son Thomas, and William Johnstone. Their farms had been raided by a group led by David Scott, called ‘Lady’, in Stirkshaws, for which Scott received remission. His name is recorded as ‘Symon Leich’.

Leith (leeth) n. port situated where the Water of Leith joins the Firth of Forth, now essentially part of Edinburgh. It was an important port for local trade, particularly in the 18th and 19th centuries. Sometimes proclamations were read ‘at the peer of Leith’ in order to be widely broadcast, e.g. a record in the 1723 Session books relating to an attempt to ascertain whether a Hawick woman’s husband was alive or not.

Leithead (leeth-heed, lut-heed) n. Andrew (17th/18th C.) weaver in Crumhaugh. In 1722 he married Rachel Scott in Hawick Parish. They had a daughter Isobel in 1726, and another Isobel in 1732. The 1725 baptism was witnessed by William Elliot and John Scott. He could be the man of that name, 'old Andrew Cross Wind', who died in Hawick in 1778. He could be the Andrew who witnessed baptisms in 1772 for Robert and for Walter and in 1774 (along with Robert) for John. David (17th C.) resident of ‘Crackuooll’ in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll. Probably the same David married Janet Shiel with their daughter Agnes baptised in 1690, and witness Robert Pringle and James (probably a relative). Gladstones (b.1744) local labourer, son of William. He married Helen Hall and their children, baptised in Kirkton Parish, included: Betty (b.1769); Helen (b.1774); Gilbert (b.1776); Janet (b.1777); and another Janet (b.1786/7), who married shepherd and carrier Adam Scott. Henry (b.1817/8) from Polwarth in Berwickshire, he was a waiter at the Tower Hotel. He is recorded there in 1851 and 1861. His caricature appears in the book ‘Noctes Hawickiana’. He was said to have ‘a curious habit of putting his tongue out at the side of his mouth, and is here represented doing so.’ He married Helen (or ‘Ellen’) Hymers in Cavers Parish in 1856. Their children included James (b.1857), Margaret (b.1859) and Elizabeth Agnes (b.1860). Isabel ‘Tibbie o the Green’ (c.1795–1870) well-known West-ender of the mid-19th century. Daughter of market gardener Robert, the family had a garden at Myreslawgreen, the property of Mr. Turnbull of Briery-yards. She lived in a house near there, possibly corresponding to 4 Myreslawgreen, being there with her brother William until his death in the 1850s. She was known as an independent but warm-hearted person who kept old-fashioned dress. She is probably the woman of this name who was among West-enders to recover from cholera in 1832. In 1851 she was described as a ‘Gardener’ and in 1861 she was an ‘Outdoor Worker’. She also had a niece Isabel Mein and a grand nephew Robert M. Laurie. Her bier is said to have been the last that used the Hawick ‘mort-cloth’. The family name locally goes back at least to William of Cavers Parish, whose daughter Margaret was married in Edinburgh in 1708. James (17th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. He is listed separately from the wright there. James (17th C.) wright of Lilliesleaf according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isobel Nochol and their children included: James (b.1704). The witnesses in 1704 were ‘vintner’ Francis Elliot and weaver Andrew Jardine. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Orniston who married Janet Laidlaw in Cavers Parish in 1708. Helen (b.1710), baptised in Cavers, was probably his child. Perhaps the same James was at Orniston in 1705 when his son William was baptised in Cavers. James (17th/18th C.) resident in Milsington in 1717 and 1725. He may be the James who married Bessie Riddell in Roberton in 1725. His children, baptised in Roberton Parish, included Jean (b.1717) and an unnamed child (b.1725). He is probably also the James recorded at Todshawhill in 1722 when his daughter Margaret was baptised. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at Boonraw in 1723. He married Janet Hill in Bowden in 1716. Their children included: Janet (b.1723) and James (b.1725), baptised in Wilton; and Agnes (b.1728) and Isobel (b.1732), baptised in Morebattle. The witnesses in 1723 were John Scott and James Dryden. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Helen Blaikie and their son ‘Gledstines’ was baptised in 1775. He may have been a brother of Gladstains. James ‘Jimmy’ (d.2003) Acting Father in 1960. In 1961 he carried the Flag again, since that year’s Acting Father, Tom Crosbie, had broken his leg. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living at Orniston in 1702 and 1716. His children probably included: Andrew (b.1696); William (b.1702); John (b.1713); and Robert (b.1716). Perhaps the same John was at Whitfield in 1698 when his son William was baptised in Wilton; the witnesses were John and Robert Scott. John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Katherine Thomson and their children included: Jane (b.1767); John (b.1770); Jane (b.1772); Margaret (b.1774); and Andrew (b.1777). The witnesses in 1774 were Andrew and Robert (who were surely close relatives). John (18th C.) recorded as owner of land in Lilliesleaf in 1788, valued at £6 13s 4d. He was still recorded as owner in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls. He was probably related to William, who also owned lands in Lilliesleaf. John (18th/19th C.) carrier in the Denholm area. He was involved in the trip to the summit of Ruberslaw where the Lairds of Cavers and Wells met to resolve a boundary dispute over dinner. He allowed the cart to jolt, resulting in George Hunter (of the Fleece Inn) to come closest in his life to cursing! He may be the John of the Cross Wynd whose unnamed child died in Hawick in 1811. John (1781–1843) born at Shankend, son of William and Janet Tait. He lived at Sandyhall (Ashkirk), Woll (Ashkirk), Birkwood (Ashkirk) and Langshaw (Melrose). In 1803 he married Jane Harvey. Their children included: William (1805–74); Robert (b.1807), who married Janet Jessie Knox and emigrated to Waterloo County, Ontario; Jane (b.1811), who married William Dodds; James (b.1816), who died in Wyoming; Thomas (b.1817); John (b.c.1820); and Janet or Jessie (b.c.1824), who married James Cousins.

John (b.c.1810) carter in Hawick. In 1841 he was listed as a farmer, probably on the Cross Wynd, but by 1861 he was at Mather’s Close. His wife was Mary and their children included John, William, Janet, Henry, Thomas, Agnes, Mary and Margaret. He may have been son of the earlier John of the Cross Wynd. Richard (b.c.1775) mason who lived on the Kirkwynd. He married Elizabeth Aitkin and their children included Robert, David and Catherine. Robert (17th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Robert (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He is probably the Robert who (along with Andrew) witnessed a baptism in 1774 for John. He married Betty Lidlaw and their children included Andrew (b.1770) and Isabel (b.1772). The witnesses in 1772 were Andrew (perhaps his father) and Alexander Bunyan. He is probably the Robert whose wife was buried in Hawick n 1772. Robert (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isabel Hogg and their son Walter was baptised in 1777. The witnesses were John and Walter, who were surely his close relatives. He may be the Robert who witnessed a baptism for James Tushope in 1767. Robert (18th/19th C.) one of the founders of the Independent Kirk in Hawick in about 1798. Robert (18th/19th C.) described as ‘R. Leithead o’ the Green’. He may be the market gardener who was father to ‘Tibbie o the Green’. In 1809 he and weaver Peter Fletcher walked to Selkirk to secure the services of a drummer and a fifer for the ‘rebel’ party at the Common Riding. He could be the stock-making Robert who contracted cholera in 1832, but recovered; he lived in an upper flat of the house containing Henry Haliburton on the Back Row. He married Janet Anderson in 1782. Their children included: William (b.1783), who was a frame-worker; Robert (b.1785); Robert (b.1786); Jane (b.1787); Isobel (b.1790), ‘Tibbie o the Green’; Agnes (b.1792); and Mary (b.c.1800). His mother ‘at the green’ died in 1782. He is probably the stockingmaker Robert whose unnamed child died in 1811. Robert (19th C.) stockingmaker who lived on the Loan. In 1863 he presented the Archaeological Society with the flag from the ‘Wasla Water’ party of 1809. He was surely related to the earlier ‘R. Leithead o’ the Green’ who had been involved on the ‘rebel’ side in 1809. He could be the Robert born to Richard and Elizabeth Aitkin in 1805. Walter (17th C.) wright in Lilliesleaf according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. He was probably related to William, who was also listed in Lilliesleaf. He may be the Walter, portioner of Lilliesleaf, who married Marion, daughter of John Langlands, minister of Wilton. Walter (17th/18th C.) recorded receiving money from Ashkirk Parish in 1727. Walter (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Elizabeth (or Euphan) Henry and their children included: Andrew (b.1766); and George (b.1768). Witnesses to the 1766 baptism were Andrew and John, who were surely closely related to him. Probably the same Walter witnessed (along with John) a baptism for Robert in 1777. Walter (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Marjory Thomson and their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1772. The witnesses were Andrew (surely related to him) and Andrew Thomson (probably related to his wife). William (17th C.) resident in Ashkirk Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. Perhaps the same William married Isobel Scott and had a son Walter baptised in Ashkirk in 1691. The baptismal witnesses were Robert and William Scott (probably related to his wife). William (17th C.) resident in Lilliesleaf according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls, when he paid tax on 2 hearths. He was probably related to Walter, who was a wright in Lilliesleaf at the same time. William (17th C.) farmer in Cavers Parish. He is recorded as deceased in 1708 when his daughter Margaret married Alexander Grib in Edinburgh. William (17th/18th C.) gardener at Fenwick. He married Bessie Stevenson in 1714, possibly at the house of William Whillans at the Flex. This was a ‘supernumerary marriage’, i.e. the celebration had more guests than the modest amount prescribed by the law of the time. Both he and Whillans probably lost the bond that they had lodged with the Session. William (b.1721/2) farm labourer in Hawick Parish, living at Meikle Whital and Flex from infancy. He worked mainly as a ploughman. In 1741 he was recorded as resident at Whittalwaugh. In 1767 he gave evidence regarding the earlier use of Hawick Common; he was described as married at that time. He married Bessy Gledstains, and their children, born in Hawick Parish, included: John (b.1737); Gledstains (or Gladstone, b.1741), an unusual forename, presumably from his mother’s maiden name; and Janet (b.1743).
The witnesses in 1741 were carrier John Rueycastle and Kirk Officer John Telfer. Probably the same William witnessed a baptism for James Scott in Whitlaw in 1768. William (18th C.) recorded living at Orchard in 1749. His children, baptised in Cavers Parish, included John (b.1743), Richard (b.1745) and Robert (b.1749). William (18th C.) recorded in 1788 as owner of lands in Lilliesleaf Parish that had formerly been owned by the feuars of Lilliesleaf. These lands were valued at £171 10s. He was also recorded in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls as former holder of lands in Lilleisleaf that had been acquired by Edgar Hunter and were at that time owned by William Riddell of Camieston. He was probably related to John, who also owned lands in Lilliesleaf (also spelled and ‘Lithhead’).

lemane (le-mân) n., poet. a sweetheart, concu-bine – ‘Thar ar thriescoore queens, and fourscoore lemanes, an’ mays wuthowten nummer’ [HSR] (there are spelling variants).
Lempitlaw (lem-pi’-law) n. village in northeastern Roxburghshire, about 3 miles east of Kelso. It used also to be the name of a small parish, which was annexed to Sprouston. The church there was connected with Soutra. The site of the 13th century parish church can still be made out in the churchyard, which includes a well-preserved hog-back gravestone. The lands there were owned by Robert Scott of Rankilburn and his son Walter in the early 15th century.
They were effectively annexed to the Barony of Branxholme, remaining that way through part of the 16th and 17th centuries. In 1517 they were described as being ‘waste’, but valued at 20 pounds in times of peace. The lands were included in the main Barony of Branxholme according to the services of heirs in 1634, 1653 and 1661, and the 1663 marriage contract of Anne, Countess of Buccleuch. In 1692 the ‘tacks’ of the lands were set to Sir Patrick Scott, along with those of the Barony of Eckford and the lands in Hawick owned by the Scotts of Buccleuch. It was surveyed in 1718 along with other Buccleuch properties and still listed as a Buccleuch property in the Land Tax Rolls of the 19th century (the origin of the name is probably Old English ‘lempedu hlaw’, meaning ‘limpet-shaped hill’; it first occurs as ‘Lempopedelawe’ in 1190 and is ‘Lempatlaw’ in 1426, ‘Lempatlaw’ in 1463, ‘Lempetlaw’ in 1484, ‘Lem-patlaw’ in 1517, and ‘Lempetlaw’ in 1528 and

fortune hang her), Brought lentrin kail’ [JR], ‘It [the food] consisted of milk and meal and what was called ‘Lenten Kail’, an expression now rarely heard in the parish [of Teviothead]’ [HAST1902]

leper squint *(le-popup-skwun’) n., arch. a leper’s squint, a small, low window in a church through which lepers could hear and see the communion service without coming into contact with the congregation. There may be an example in Cavers Auld Kirk (also written ‘leper’s’ or ‘lepers’).

the Leper Well *(thu-le-popup-wel) n. popular name for a spring near Spittal-on-Rule, still current in the mid-20th century. The spring was surrounded by dressed stones, and its name gives some credence to the idea that there was once a leper’s hospital there. It was also known as ‘the Kirkyaird Well’, and used to be thought to possess healing powers, particularly for skin diseases.

leprosy *(lep-ru-see) n. chronic, mildly contagious disease caused by Mycobacterium leprae, characterised by inflamed nodules beneath the skin, loss of sensation and wasting of body parts. It now occurs only in tropical and sub-tropical regions, but was common in Medieval Europe, where is was seen as both holy and sinful. It was certainly rife throughout the British Isles by the 11th century. Robert the Bruce is suggested to have died of the disease in 1329, and John Turnbull of Minto may have died from it about 1425 (causing a dispute over his lands).

The hospital at Spittal-on-Rule may have been founded to help lepers, perhaps related to the Laird of Bedrule. A spring near there was known as a ‘leper well’. Cavers Auld Kirk may have a ‘leper squint’.

leprous *(le-ris) adj., arch. affected with pig ‘measles’ – ‘...[Fined] for publicly selling ... ane carcass of swyne which was leprous and consequently dangerous to be made use of’[BR1692].

leskit *(les-kee’) n., adj. elastic *(also lectic and eelectic).

Leslie *(lez-lee) n. A.J. (19th/20th C.) London sculptor responsible for ‘Youth’, which was incorporated into the Hawick War Memorial.

the Lesser Toon Hall *(thu-le-popup-toon-hal) n. smaller venue in the Town Hall, off the main auditorium, frequently used for lectures, coffee mornings etc.

Lessuden *(le-su-din) n. alternative older name for St. Boswells, surviving in Lessuden House (the origin is Old English ‘laes side wyyn’, meaning ‘the meadow by the slope with the pasture’; also spelled ‘Lesssudden’).

Lessuden Hoose *(le-su-din-hoos) n. family home of the Scots of Raeburn, in St. Boswells. It goes back to at least 1680, with remodelling in each of the following centuries. It has a tower-shaped dovecote dating from about 1800.

lest *(lest) v. to last, endure – ‘A deh ken how long he’ll lest is the new R.E. teacher’, ‘She’s like a guid bit tweed hersel’, Made tae lest forever’[IJ], ‘...thinkin that here was a meenit o his life he wad like to lest for ever’[DH], ‘...But how lang will it lest’[WL], adj. last, final – ‘she’s the lest o her generation’.

lectic *(les-teek) n., adj. elastic – ‘My mither aince for lectic sent me roun’, A yird o’ black to dae her need’[WL], ‘Skinny’ or ‘grey’ – ee ee ever got a choice: Succulent dauds o lectic-sided dough’[DH], ‘Sailin roond in a sea o’ bliss wi a concom in yin hand And a lectic ba’ in the tother ...’[DH] (cf. leskit and eelectic).

let bat *(le-foot-baw’) v., arch. to give an indication, let on, inform, declare – ‘Never luit bat! = Take no notice! or Keep ‘mum’’[ECS], ‘Brer Rabbit never luit bat’ when he ‘lay low and sed nuffin’’[ECS], ‘A hard ’im, but A never luit bat’[GW] (usually with a negative; cf. bat).

let dab *(le-foot-dawb) v., arch. to hint, divulge a secret – ‘Aw think she jalooses what Aw’ve come for, but mind, Aw never let dab about the rest o’ ee’[JEDM], ‘And, loons, here’s a secret I’m gaun tae loot dab ...’[DJ] (sometimes ‘loot dab’).

Letham see Lethem

Letham *(le-thum) n. James *(1954–) born in Airdrie, he was educated in Aberdeen at Madras College in St. Andrews and at the Royal Scottish Academy of Music in Glasgow. After training as a teacher he was appointed to Galashiels Academy, then became Head of Music at Jedburgh, before succeeding Ian Seeley as Head of Music at Hawick High School in 1997. He has been involved in a large number of musical enterprises in the Borders, including serving as musical director for Hawick Amateur Operatic Society, conductor of the Eildon Singers and the Borders Youth Orchestra and work with the Hawick community choir the Melody Makers. He has been a strong promoter of the work of Hawick-born composer Sir John Blackwood. He also wrote the music for ‘The Best O’ A’. He retired in 2011 (see also Lethem).

Lethem (le-thum) n. hamlet between the A6088 and A68, just before the Carter Bar, in the eastern part of Southdean Parish. In 1538 and 1539 it was described as 3 stedings and valued at £3 6 shillings. In 1541 Thomas Laidlaw was tenant of part paying 22s yearly and Laurence Lawrence and James Laidlaw were tenants of another part paying 22s yearly. John Oliver and Simon Robson were there in 1623. John Thomson was tenant there in 1694. Thomas Scott is recorded there on the 1785–97 Horse Tax Rolls and his son was still there in 1841. Walter Renwick was shepherd there in 1797. There was once a chapel here, but no signs of it remain, although the small hill to the west is known as Chapel Knowe; here there are the remains of a settlement, about 43 m by 33 m in size, overlain by a smaller, roughly triangular enclosure (note, however, that there could be confusion here with the ancient chapel which was once situated in the village of Leitholm in Eccles Parish). A fort is on the hill just to the north. ‘Katey’s Cross’ was also just to the west, once used as a gathering point for a local market, and on the site of the former settlement of ‘Wattie’s Spinnels’ (also written ‘Letham’, as well as ‘Leatham’, ‘Lethane’, etc.; there are other places of the same name in Eccles Parish near Berwick, also called ‘Leitholm’, as well as elsewhere in Scotland).

Lethem (le-thum) n. Edmund (13th/14th C.) rector of ‘the church of Saint Marie of Farmainish’ (i.e. St. Mary’s of the Lowes, Yarrow) from 1292. He is recorded as ‘Master Edmund de Letham’. In 1296 he swore fealty to Edward I, and later that year he received a writ from Edward to restore him to his lands and rights as ‘parson of the church of the forest’. Helen nee Turnbull (17th C.) wife of James. She kept an inn in Hawick after her husband’s death. Here in 1642 a large group was drinking with a servant of the Laird of Cavers, who accused his companions of stealing his wallet, with the case heard by the Hawick Magistrates. John and William, mentioned in the same case, were her sons. Henry (15th/16th C.) listed on the pardon granted in 1526 to a large number of Scotts, Turnbulls and other Borderers who had assisted the Homes in attacking the Earl of Arran. Isobell (b.1687) born in Hawick, daughter of James and Isobell ‘Gyrden’. She is recorded as ‘Lithen’ in the Parish records in 1713 when she returned to Hawick after working ‘in service’ in Edinburgh, and was asked to produce a ‘testificate’ since it was rumoured that she had been married and her husband Benjamin Taylor had deserted her. In 1715 she was described as ‘servitrix to ye Laird of Whithaugh’ (the one in Liddesdale) when summoned by Hawick Session from Castleton Parish ‘to come and satisfye here for her scandal of adulterie’. She stood several mornings at the church door in sackcloth, but because of the distance she had to travel was then leniently ‘to appear hereafter on the usual place of repentance in sackcloth two other days, before noon and after noon’. She appeared for the last time at the end of that year, and appears to have then fully satisfied the Session. It is possible she is the Isobell ‘Lithen’ recorded in 1716 when her son John, conceived in adultery with John Scott, was baptised in Hawick. By 1723 she appears to have settled into a relationship with William Hood, and again the Session became upset by ‘the scandal of adulterie’; she stood in sackcloth for 11 Sundays and her partner William for 6 Sundays. James (16th/17th C.) assualted by Walter Scott of Burnfoot and his wife Margaret with a large stone in St. Mary’s Kirk in 1616. They were later also accused of assaulting him and his wife on the High Street, along with 7 accomplices. The same James was probably an innkeeper, whose widow Helen Turnbull is recorded in 1642 as part of a court case when a group of people were accused of stealing a wallet in her establishment. Their sons are there recorded as John and William ‘Lethane’. He may also be the ‘James Lechen’ recorded in 1616 trial over the slaughter of the Laird of Drumhaurig’s sheep at Howpasley; afterwards when ‘Marion’s Geordie’ was confronted in Hawick as a suspect by James Douglas, he and 2 other men (‘Bonnie Johnnie’ Scott and James Wemy) took the pistol from Geordie before he could shoot. James (17th C.) probably son of John and Isobel Turnbull. He married Isobel Jardine (or ‘Gyrden’). Their children included: John (b.1783); Andrew (b.1686); Isobel (b.1687); and Andrew (again, b.1689). James (17th C.) recorded as an officer of the Baron in Hawick in 1672, specifically ‘the ane of the Erles officers’, at the 1672 setting of the fair. In 1673 he was recorded as Procurator-fiscal of the Regality of Hawick. James (17th/18th C.) sheriff officer in Hawick. He was ‘officer’ in 1700 when he witnessed baptisms for shoemaker Robert Paisley and for Robert Gledstains. In 1702 (or perhaps 1712) he was found guilty by the Session of drinking after 10 p.m., and for swearing. He is described as ‘James Leythen, shyreofficer’, but it still seems unclear whether he was a Burgh Officer or an officer of the court. He was ‘officer’ in 1711 when he witnessed a baptism for shoemaker Walter (who was surely related). He could be the same ‘James Leithan’ listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick ‘eist the water’ in 1694. It is possible he was the same James who was Procurator-fiscal of the Regality of Hawick in the 1670s, or otherwise was surely related to him. John (13th C.) witnessed to a charter for Melrose Abbey sometime in the period 1220 to 1243. John (17th C.) son of James and Helen Turnbull. He is described as ‘in Hawick’ in a 1642 Magistrates Court trial when he was one of several people accused of stealing the wallet of Samuel Rutherford (a servant of Douglas of Cavers) in his mother’s inn. He later accused Rutherford of violently demanding the whereabouts of his wallet. His brother William was also mentioned in the 1642 case. He could be the John ‘Lithen’, married to Isobel Turnbull, whose children baptised in Hawick included James (b.1648), James (again, b.1649), Helen (b.1652), William (b.1654), or alternatively the John, married to Janet Gledstains, whose son Francis was baptised in Hawick in 1643. Probably the same John ‘Lethane’ was mentioned in Hawick in 1656, when Martin Elliot was ordered to pay 30 shillings ‘for absence from his service for 5 weeks’, although let off the money claimed ‘for the Trooper coming to the said John Lethane’. John (17th C.) Bailie or officer of the Baron in Hawick in 1673. In that year the Earl of Queensberry complained that his representatives were attacked when trying to ‘ride the fair’ in Hawick ‘and particularly did assault and invade the said John Leathen with drawn swords, and masterfully pulled him off his horse, tore off his clothes, and struck him’. His surname is given as ‘Leathen’, and it is possible this may have been a variant of ‘Leyden’ rather than ‘Letham’. However, he may have been related to the slightly later James ‘Leithen’ who was a ‘shyreff-officer’. Richard (17th/18th C.) Hawick resident recorded as ‘Leythen’ in 1707. William Sutter was rebuked for being in his house at the time of Sunday morning service. Walter (17th/18th C.) shoemaker listed among the young men fined for their part in the disturbances at the Common Riding of 1706: his surname is recorded in the Town Book as ‘Letheyn’. The group seemed to be mostly from the West-end, suggesting he was also from there. He is probably the Walter, son of William ‘Lithen’ and Jane Morrison, born in Hawick in 1682. He was Walter ‘Lithen’ when he married Isobel Newbie in 1707; they had several children baptised in Hawick, including Marion (b.1708), James (b.1711), William (b.1713), Jane (b.1715), Walter (b.1717), Gavin (b.1719), Robert (b.1721) and Patrick (b.1723). The witnesses in 1711 were Bailie Robert Ruecastle and James Lethem ‘officer’ and in 1721 were Bailies George Martin and Robert Ruecastle. William (17th C.) brother of John in Hawick. They were listed in 1642 among acquaintances of Samuel Rutherford, servant of the Laird of Cavers, who accused them of stealing his wallet in Hawick. William (17th C.) listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick ‘eist the water’ in 1694. He is probably father of shoemaker Walter, and hence likely to have been a shoemaker himself. He is likely the son of John and Isobel Turnbull, born in Hawick in 1654 and the husband of Jane Morrison, whose children baptised in Hawick included Walter (b.1682), Thomas (b.1684), Beatrix (b.1687) and Helen (b.1689) (spellings vary, such as ‘Leithan’, ‘Lethane’, ‘Letham’ and ‘Lithen’; the surname probably derives from the lands of Leitholm in Berwickshire, but some fraction may come from the more local area in Southdean Parish; it is possible that the name was once the same as or confused with Leyden).

lether (le-thur) n., arch. a ladder – ‘...unless the bystanders had not quickly procured a leather, which taken at the west gavel of John Kaidzie’s house ...’ [JW1767] (see also the more common leder).

let on (let-oân) v. to take notice, to tell or inform, to declare or make known (E.C. Smith sugests ‘Synon. with ti let bat’).

let oot (let-oat, le-o’o) interj., arch. phrase said by children to others who had blocked the gutter with their feet – ‘At a given signal, the cry of Let oot! the water was freed to rush ‘doon the brae’ in a grand spate’ [ECS].

Letzlingen (letz-ling-gin) n. site of a Common Riding festival organised by Hawick men serving in the K.O.S.B. during WWII, when??.

the Level (thu-le-vul) n. popular name for the High Level pub.

Leven (lee-vin) n. old name for the ‘Line’ or ‘Lyne’ Water just over the Border in Cumbria. It was formerly one of the lawless valleys of the Border. It is probably the place referred to in the late 15th and early 16th centuries when many Scotsmen were charged by the Privy Council with ‘communing with the English of Levin’ and similar. For example, in 1493 Walter Scott of Headshaw paid a fine for ‘tresasonably Intercomming with the Thieves and Traitors of Levyn’. However, it seems likely that the term was used to apply fairly generally to rievers from over the Border, rather than only for Englishmen from this valley. Thomas Musgrave in 1583 described it thus: ‘Black Leven water is a littill brooke, and so is Whyt Leven the lyke, and are not in anie place a myle and a halfe distant one from an other, and are inhabited by the Nynxes, untill it come to a place called the Blackdobs, are then the Rutligis dwell on bothe the side of it, untill it come to a place called the Lukkins of Leven, then it descends Sowpert, wheare the Taylors have it, thens it descendes the boundes of Sopert, and is inhabited by Graymes called the Graymes of Leven, and runeth into the ryver of Eske at Gorth Storys howse called the Lard. There is also a river of the same name in North Yorkshire, which drains Lake Windermere into Morecambe Bay, but it seems unlikely this is what is meant in the 15th and 16th century references (it is written ‘levy’ in 1493).

lew in (loo-in) v., arch. to involve, oblige to do something – ‘Ti lew in = to involve; to ‘let in’ or ‘drag in’’ [ECS], ‘A was lewed in ti pay his fine’ [GW] (also written ‘lewe in’; only used in the past participle).

Lewenlees (lew-in-leez) n. possible name for lands in upper Liddesdale, recorded c.1376 on a rental roll as part of the area then known as Ermidon. It was recorded as ‘Lewynleys’, and valued at 16 shillings and 2 pence. In 1541 it was ‘Lewinlowis’ and valued at 10 shillings, with Robert Elliot as tenant.

Lewenshope (lew-in-höp) n. former farm on the north side of the Yarrow valley, south of Hangingshaw. These were Crown lands in the latter part of the 15th century, leased to Sir George Douglas and to the Murrays, with the Murrays continuing as owners into the 16th century. James Murray of Falahill held the lands of the Queen in 1528 and assigned them to his wife, Margaret Home. Patrick Murray of Hangingshaw was recorded as owner in 1541, when the rental was £50. ‘Lewinshope & Scadarig’ were held by Johnstone of Alva in the 1802 Land Tax Rolls (it is marked both ‘Lewinshoope’ and ‘lewinshoop’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map; it is ‘Lewynnishop’ in 1456 and 1471, ‘Lewinishope’ in 1484, ‘Lewynshop’ in 1486, ‘lewynhop’ in 1494/5, ‘Lewinshop’ in 1502 and ‘Leywynnishop’ in 1541).

lever (loo-ur) n., arch. a lever, pole for levering – ‘The mouse proposes to join her in spinning; and inquires, ‘But where will I get a spindle, fair lady mine?’ when the frog desires it to take ‘the auld mill lewer’’ [JL].

Lewis (loo-is) n. Alexander (19th C.) listed in Slater’s 1852 directory as a cole merchant for the Duke of Buccleuch, based at the Hawick Station.

James (b.1828/9) born in Cavers Parish, son of Walter and Barbara. He was living with his parents at Howgill in Ewesdale in 1841. By 1851 he was teacher at Burnmouth School in Castleton Parish. He lived there with his younger sister. By 1861 he had been replaced by John Hardie, but it is unclear what happened to him.

lew-warm (loo-warm) adj., arch. luke-warm, tepid (also written ‘lewe-warm’).

Leyden (li-, Il-din) n. Adam (17th C.) recorded as ‘Adam Ledan in Little Cavers’ in 1684 when he was among those proclaimed as fugitives for being Covenanters. Adam (17th C.) resident of Denholm on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. Andrew (b.1694) was probably his son. Adam (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living at Spittal in 1721. He probably married Helen Turnbull in Cavers in 1709 and their children included: Helen (b.1710); Betty (b.1712); Jane (b.1714); Isabel (b.1717); William (b.1719); and James (b.1721). Adam (18th C.) merchant in Hawick. In 1766 he witnessed a baptism for Adam Pott. He married Elizabeth Richardson and their children included: John (b.1757); Adam (b.1759); Elizabeth (b.1761); Peter (b.1762); Walter (b.1765); and Robert (b.1767). The witnesses in 1762 were weaver John Simpson and Kirk Officer Alexander Bunyan and in 1765 were Alex Nivison and James Brydon. He is probably the Adam whose son Andrew died in 1778. Adam (b.1780/1) bookseller in Hawick. In 1841 he was living on Miller’s Close with farmer John (probably his brother) and Helen (John’s wife). In 1851 he was a lodger on O’Connell Street. Adam ‘Yeddie’ (1788–1876) son of Robert and Helen Clerk. He was a farmer living up the Loan. In 1851 he was listed as a farmer of 30 acres, and resided at about 66 High Street. His fields were probably up the Wellogate. In 1816 he married Margaret Laidlaw, and she died in 1856. Their children included: Robert (c.1819–77), who married Betty McAlpine; Betty (b.1819), who died young; John (1821–57); Matthew (b.1824), who died in Melbourne; Andrew (b.1830), coal agent and Cornet; and Helen (b.1834), who married Alexander Nivison Scott. Andrew (17th C.) recorded in 1644 when he was among Hawick men mentioned in relation to raising money and supplies for the Covenanting army. He is probably the Andrew, married to Catherine Aitchison, whose children baptised in Hawick included Manie (b.1635) and Christian (b.1640). The witnesses in 1640 were William Lorraine and Simon Adamson. He himself witnessed a baptism in Hawick for Robert Scott in 1640. Andrew (17th C.) resident of Roberton Parish (probably actually the Hassendean area). He witnessed a baptism for Robert Scott and Isobel Turnbull in 1683 and another for Gavin Turnbull in 1684. He married Janet Fletcher and their children included: Isobel (b.1681); and Andrew (b.1683). The witnesses in 1681 were William Turnbull and William Redford and in 1683 were Robert Thomson and James Thomson. Andrew (18th/19th C.) youngest brother of Dr. John. He stated that, although young at the time, he remembers the farewell visit of his brother, and their mother singing the ballads ‘Young Benjie’, ‘Tamlane’ and ‘Bonora’. Andrew (b.1830) son of Yeddie, farmer at the Wellogate, who lived at 66 High Street. His mother was Margaret Laidlaw, from Melrose. He was Cornet in 1857, when the first known photograph of the Principals was taken (note that there is some confusion over whether the image might be flipped, with the sash over the wrong shoulder and hence the Right- and Left-Hand Men switched). He worked as a coal agent. In 1859 he married Margaret Elliot (b.1829) from Castleton Parish, daughter of John Elliot and Fanny Wilson. He moved to 6 Cross Wynd and later moved to Newcastle where he ran a pub. Their children included: Frances (formerly surname Elliot, b.1856); William Elliot (b.1859); Margaret (b.1861), who died young; Adam (b.1862), cabinet maker; and John (b.1864). George (b.c.1775) baker who lived at about 49 High Street. He is recorded there in 1841 with his wife Janet and children Joan, George and Margaret. James (1637/8–88) tenant in Earlsdie. His gravestone in Cavers kirkyard was written in verse, starting ‘Here lies the body of James Leydon, In this churchyard beneath this stone; And Margaret Scott, his spouse alone, Lyeth also here beneath this stone’. He married Margaret Scott, and their children included William, Adam and John. His will is recorded in 1688. He could be the James (with surname blank) recorded ‘in Earlesdie’ in 1690 when listed among people owing money to the deceased Mark Turnbull (porter of Fodderlee) and Bessie Kerr. James (17th C.) from Cavers Parish. He was ordered to be transported to America in 1679 for being a Covenanter, and escaped the shipwreck in the Orkneys that killed about 200 men. Most of those who survived were recaptured and sold as slaves in Jamaica or New Jersey. James (17th C.) tenant in Little Cavers. In 1684 he was among a group of tenants of the Cavers estate who complained about the burden placed upon them by the huge fines imposed on Lady Cavers. They would have been forced into ruin had not the young Laird of Cavers, William Douglas, returned from the Continent to take charge of matters. He may be the James who was listed at Ashybank in 1694 or the James in ‘Estloidge’ (if this is East Lodge) whose will is recorded in 1698. James (17th C.) tenant in Adderstoneshieil. The will of his wife Margaret Greenshields is recorded in 1690. James (18th/19th C.) paid the cart tax in Hawick in 1788-91. He was a carrier in Hawick according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls and had 4 horses at that time. He is probably the James ‘Leadon’ whose child died in Hawick in 1787. Jane (19th C.) one of the operators of the first 4 power looms to arrive in Hawick, at Dicksons & Laings in 1830. Janet (17th C.) recorded in 1688 along with Bessie Wilson, when they were fined for insulting Bailie Scott when he was equipping the Royalist Militia. Janet (17th C.) listed ‘eist the water’ in Hawick when she paid the Hearth Tax in 1694. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Gledstains and their son Francis was baptised in 1643. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isobel Turnbull and their children included James (b.1648), James (again, b.1649), Helen (b.1652) and William (b.1654). The witnesses in 1654 were Andrew Liddersdale and Robert Scott. John (1632/3-88) farmer at Earlside and ancestor of John Casper. He married Margaret, and his children included William, Adam and John. He is buried in Cavers old churchyard and is said to have composed his own epitaph in verse for his tombstone – ‘Here lies the body of James Leydon, In this Churchyard beneath this stone, And Margaret Scott, his spouse alone, Lyeth also beneath this stone. And their posterity that’s gone, Lies also here beneath this stone: William, Adam Leydon, and John, Ly also here beneath this stone. In Earlsdie they lived some years ago, Now here they ly beneath this stone’. John (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Agnes Young and their children included Janet (b.1688). John (17th C.) resident of Spittal-on-Rule on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His children included: William (b.1693); Margaret (b.1694); Isabel (b.1696); and Margaret (again, b.1696). John (17th/18th C.) resident at Dodburn. In 1706 he married Janet Scott in Hawick Parish; he was recorded being from Kirkton Parish. His children baptised in Cavers and Kirkton Parishes included: James (b.1706); Samuel (b.1707); and James (again, b.1709). John (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was recorded in Tower in 1727 when he married Bessie Murray. He may be the John who was in Denholm in 1730 when his son Samuel was baptised. He may also be the John who was in Birneyknow when his unnamed child was baptised. His other children may have included: Adam (b.1714); Bessie (b.1718); John (b.1722); Adam (b.1724); Walter (b.1728); John (b.1734); Margaret (b.1736); Euphan (b.1738); an unnamed child (b.1740); another unnamed child (b.1742); Margaret (b.1743); and James (b.1744). It seems likely that there are at least 2 families here. John (18th C.) tailor in Denholm, recorded in 1726. Probably the same John was also recorded in Denholm in 1730 when his daughter Bessie was baptised. His children included: Hugh (b.1726); and Bessie (b.1730). It is unclear which other children were his, and which were the other contemporary James in Cavers. John (18th C.) cooper at Dykes. His daughter Elizabeth was baptised in Cavers Parish in 1730. John (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish who married Margaret Laidlaw. Their children included: Robert (b.1750). John (b.1764) and Margaret (b.1766) may also have been his children. John (18th C.) father of John Casper (b.1775). He was shepherd at Henlawshiel from the late 1770s and later took over the whole of Nether Tofts. He married Isabella Scott. They had 3 other sons, as well as 2 daughters. His children may include Betty (b.1769), Thomas (b.1771), Jean (b.1777) and Mary (b.1780), all born in Cavers Parish, but with no mother’s name given. Robert was one son and the youngest was Andrew (but there appear to be no records of their baptisms). He is probably the John, son of John, born in Cavers Parish in 1734. John (18th/19th C.) heckler at Denholm, listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. William was also recorded in Denholm, and so probably related. John (18th/19th C.) resident at Newcastleton, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. John (d.1808) from Cavers Parish, he was described as a lapidary (i.e. jeweller) in Edinburgh when his death was reported in the Scots Magazine. He left £50 to his native parish. Dr. John Casper (1775–1811) linguist and poet, born in Denholm, in the thatched cottage on the Green (which can be seen in an early photo of Denholm, and still exists today). His father John was manager at Nether-Tofts farm and his mother Isabella Scott was from Liddesdale. The family moved to Henlawshiel when he was four. He was taught to read by his grandmother and learned Border ballads from his mother. He went to Kirkton School at age 9, where his roughly 3 years of schooling was interrupted by one schoolmaster dying and another being removed. He was tutored by Rev. James Duncan of Denholm for another couple of years, where he developed his Latin and Greek. abilities. It is said that his father wanted to purchase an ass to convey him the 3 or so miles to Denholm, and although put off by the ridicule he would get from his classmates, he accepted the offer when the owner threw in a copy of an old language dictionary (the ‘Calepini Dictionarium Octalinege’). At age 15 he went to Edinburgh University (apparently going half-way with his father on a horse, then walking the rest), where he qualified as a doctor and a minister. In Edinburgh he joined the Literary Society, where he made many friends and practised public speaking. He is said to have already known French, Spanish, Italian, German, ancient Icelandic, Arabic and Persian before he was 20! On trips back to Denholm he studied in a bower in Denholm Dean in the summers and in Cavers old kirk in the winters. He also spent one summer as an assistant teacher at Clovenfords (more specifically Caddonlee), where he met Nicol the poet. He was also allowed access to the library of Cavers House when back from university. In the later 1790s he served as private tutor in the summers, and so spent less and less time in his beloved Borderland. With an interest in travel and other cultures, he wrote ‘Historical and Philosophical Sketch of the Discoveries and Settlements of the Europeans in Northern and Western Africa, at the Close of the Eighteenth Century’, published in 1799. Additionally he contributed poetry to the Edinburgh Magazine. However, he continued to be a regular attender at Hawick markets, and nearly came to grief there in 1799, when a troop of Volunteers, friends of Mungo Park’s, objected to Park’s treatment in his book on African discoveries. He was licensed to preach in St. Andrews in 1798, and gave occasional sermons around Edinburgh. At one point there was an arrangement for him to become assistant and successor to the minister of Cavers, but this fell through. He collaborated with Walter Scott in collecting ballads, wrote poetry and edited ‘the Scots Magazine’ for about 6 months. In 1800 he spent several months touring the Highlands (his manuscript travelogue being published much later). His poem ‘The Elfin’ was published in Lewis’ ‘Tales of Wonder’ in 1801. On having the prospect of an appointment with the East India Company as assistant surgeon, he quickly completed his medical training, receiving an M.D. from St. Andrews. He paid his last visit to his parents and Teviotdale in late 1802. He missed embarking on the intended ship through illness, that ship wrecking on Margate Sands. While waiting for the next ship he prepared the epic ‘Scenes of Infancy’ for publication. He then sailed for Madras, where he served as surgeon, then went as surgeon and naturalist on an expedition through Mysore, although he became ill and convalesced in the house of Sir John Malcolm (of Eskdale). His anthology ‘The Scottish Descriptive Poems with some illustrations of Scottish literary antiquities’ was published in 1803. In 1805 he went on a sea voyage to Pulo Penang (Prince of Wales Island) Malaysia, where he was the only European on-board, and they narrowly avoided being captured by the French. He spent months there, where he met Stamford Raffles among other people, addressing his verses ‘The Dirge of the departed Year’ to Mrs. Raffles. He returned to Calcutta and after writing a dissertation on asiatic languages was appointed Professor of the Hindostani language in Bengal College, which he later gave up to be a Judge in Calcutta (being appointed by Lord Minto). After 2 years he switched position again to be a Commissioner of the Court of Requests in Calcutta, which required knowledge of the local languages. In 1810 he became Assay Master at the Calcutta mint, with relatively high salary and light duties. But this new easy life was short-lived, for in 1811 he accompanied Lord Minto on an expedition to Java, where he helped translate and write letters between the British and local chiefs. He accompanied the conquering British troops to Batavia but there contracted a fever (it is said from the ‘pestilential air’ of a store room containing ancient objects in a Dutch government building, but probably either malaria or dengue). Three days later he was dead, at the age of 36. He was buried at Tanabang Cemetery, Batavia (now Jakarta). He was said to be of medium stature, but strong and athletic in his youth. He also strictly abstained from vices. He talked loudly and a lot (Lord Minto wrote ‘I do not believe so great a reader was ever so great a talker) in a ‘shrill, piercing, and at the same time grating voice’. He was proudly independent, was said to be lacking in refined manners, and retained his Teviotdale accent throughout his life (which put off many Englishmen). Encouraged to lose his accent he replied ‘Learn English! no, never; it was trying to learn that language that spoilt my Scotch, and as to being silent, I will promise to hold my tongue, if you will make fools hold theirs’. It is said that the main defect of his personality was ‘his passion for display’ and hence ‘he was naturally enough judged by many, who measured him by an ordinary standard, to be more superficial than profound’. Nevertheless his drive to study, even through illness, was remarkable, and he said ‘I cannot be idle; and whether I die or live, the wheel must go round to the last’. He is supposed to have spoken 34 separate languages or dialects (the estimated numbers vary), and translated several texts in obscure dialects. He also translated some of the gospels of the New Testament into Pushtu, Maldivian, Beluchi, Macassar and Bugi. At the time of his death he was contemplating a comparative arrangement of languages. There are only 2 surviving likenesses of him, one being a sketch made by Capt. George Elliot on the voyage to Java. A monument to him was erected in 1861 in the middle of Denholm Green, designed by Hector H. Orrock. The cottage in which he was born still stands on the north side of the Green. A granite obelisk was erected at Henlawshiel where he spent his childhood. His first published poem was in the Edinburgh Literary Magazine in 1795, followed by many more, including ‘Ruberslaw’ that same year; these first contributions were signed ‘J.L., Banks of the Teviot’. As part of his long poem ‘Scenes of Infancy’ (1803), he wrote the oft-quoted lines: ‘Boast! Hawick, boast! thy structures rear’d in blood. Shall rise triumphant over flame and flood; Still doom’d to prosper, since on Flodden’s field Thy sons a hardy band, unwont to yield, Fell with their martial king, and (glorious boast!) Gain’d proud renown where Scotia’s fame was lost’. His 2 other poems with local flavour are ‘Lord Soulis’ and ‘Cout of Kielder’. He contributed several pieces to Scott’s ‘Minstrelsy of the Scottish Border’ (1801), including most of the essay on fairy superstitions. The glossary of his annotated ‘The Complaynt of Scotland’ (1801) is a useful early source of local words. He also edited ‘Scottish Descriptive Poems’ (1803). Much of his output was published in ‘The Poetical Remains of the Late Dr. John Leyden, with Memoirs of His Life’, edited by Rev. James Morton (1819). Although his poetry has largely gone out of fashion, the fantastic poems ‘The Mermaid’ and ‘The Elfin King’ have had a lasting popularity. Several of his translations and other largely completed projects, left with his friends Richard Heber and William Erskine, were published posthumously, but others were lost forever. 2 books, ‘Life of Dr. John Leyden, Poet and Linguist’ (1908) by John Reith, and ‘Leydeniana: or, Gleanings from some unpublished documents regarding Dr. Leyden’ (1912) by James Sinton, collected much of what had been learned about Leyden in subsequent years. A centenary celebration was held in Denholm in 1875 and there were also events in 2011 to mark the 200th anniversary of his death. A booklet ‘Dr. Leyden’s Punjabi Translations’ was published in 2011 – ‘The tongue that was spoken by Leyden and Scott . . .’ [WS], ‘His bright and brief career is o’er, And mute his tuneful strains; Quenched is his lamp of varied lore, That lov’d the light of song to pour; A distant and a deadly shore Has Leyden’s cold remains’ [SWS], ‘Regretted by the worthy and the wise, A higher monument is his, by far, Than any costly pile of stones can show, Or sculptured column towering to the skies’ [JCG], ‘A fremm land claimed his banes, and though He feared we’d a’ forget In loyal herts oor lad o’ pairts Will lung be honoured yet’ [WL]. John (b.c.1785) farmer on the High Street. He was living on Miller’s Close in 1841. His wife was Helen and they also lived with Adam (probably his brother), a bookseller. Janet, who was probably related, was a widow on Miller’s Close in 1851, with daughter Jane and grand-daughter Margaret Hutton. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Denholm. He married Isabella, daughter of Rev. William Burn. Their children included William (b.1811), proprietor of the Fox & Hounds. He could be the same as the heckler recorded in Denholm in 1776. John Lamb, O.B.E., C.B.E. (1904–88) descendant of John Casper, he was born locally and became a linguist and diplomat. A plaque to his memory was added to the Leyden memorial. Margaret ‘Peggy’ (18th C.) servant at Cavers when he owned 2 work horses. In 1835 he was listed among heads of households at Wilton, but in 1840 and 1841 was at Melgund Place. By 1851 he was a foreman in a wollen factory, living at 3 Weensland (which probably meant Weensland Mill Houses). In the 1841 census he was at about 7 Melgund Place. His wife was Helen (or Ellen) and their children included Robert, Helen, Margaret, John, Edward N. and George. Robert (c.1770–1840) carrier in Hawick. In 1816 he purchased 66 High Street, and the buildings behind 66 and 68, from stockmaking Walter Murray. His family owned these properties for almost 50 years. He may have been the Robert who was son of Adam and Eliza Richardson, born in Hawick in 1766. He is recorded as a carrier in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when he owned 2 work horses. He married Helen Clerk in 1791 and she is probably the wife of his whose death is recorded in 1808. Their son Adam (‘Yeddie’) farmed up the Wellogate.
Leyden

Leyden Bank

He probably died in the cholera epidemic, his death being listed along with 9 others on the same day. Robert (18th/19th C.) son of John and brother of Dr. John. He studied medicine. It is said that he took an unfinished portrait of his brother John (perhaps the only accurate portrait) and had it altered to become a portrait of himself. Sir Walter Scott wrote to him on hearing the news of his brother's death. Robert (19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Beatrice Balmer in 1844 and their children included: George Lunn (b.1855); Robert (b.1857); and Helen (b.1862). Samuel (18th C.) resident of Kirkton and Cavers Parishes. He was at Dodburn in 1730 when he married Helen Elliot. His children, baptised in Cavers, included John (b.1731), an unnamed child (b.1737), Hanna (b.1743), Jean (b.1745), Elizabeth (b.1748). William (17th C.) married Bessie Elliot in Roberton Parish in 1688. His wife was from Cavers Parish. He is probably the William who witnessed baptisms for Isabel (perhaps his sister) and William Lamb in Roberton in 1687 and 1688. William (17th C.) resident of Denholm on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. He was probably related to Adam, who was also listed in Denholm. He is probably the William who was living at Ashybank in 1702. He could be the William who was living at Ashybank who was also listed in Denholm. He is probably the William who was living at Ashybank who was also listed in Denholm. He is probably the William whose children, baptised in Cavers Parish, included: Andrew (b.1694); James (b.1696); John (b.1702); and Janet (b.1704). William (17th C.) resident of Ormiston on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. His surname is written 'Leadin'. He could be the 'W. Leyden' fined along with 'J. Swan' in 1702 for drunkenness. William (17th/18th C.) wright in Denholm in 1722 when his son Adam was baptised. Other children, baptised in Cavers Parish, who were probably his include William (b.1716), Helen (b.1717), William (again, b.1720), Bessie (b.1727) and William (again, b.1732). William (18th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. His children included an unnamed son (b.1724), William (b.1726), John (b.1728), Euphan (b.1731) and James (b.1734). William (18th/19th C.) carrier recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls for Hawick. He is probably related to the William mentioned in 1735 when the widow of Robert Scott of Falsness sold her property on the Howegate, which was to the east of his. He had a son who died in Hawick in 1815. William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His son James was baptised in 1751. William (18th C.) cooper in Denholm, recorded in 1769 and 1771. His children included James (b.1769) and Janet (b.1771). Probably the same William was the resident in Denholm, listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls; he was probably related to James, who is also listed under Denholm. There appear to have been 2 contemporaries Williams in Cavers, with other children of one or other family being Jane (b.1763), Betty (b.1765), John (b.1765), Isabel (b.1767), James (b.1767), Betty (b.1770), Jeany (b.1773) and Bellow (b.1773), William (b.1811) born in Denholm, son of John and Isabella Burn. In his youth he was a superb athlete, excelling at multiple sports at the St. Ronan's Games in the period 1832-35. In 1833 he won both the running and standing versions of the 'hop, step and leap', as well as 2 races. In 1834 and 1835 he won just about every event he entered, including the long jump, high jump, wrestling and throwing. He was a stockingmaker in Denholm and also proprietor of the Fox and Hounds. In Slater's 1852 directory he is listed as vintner at the 'Hare & Hounds'. His wife was Cecilia and their children included Elizabeth and Isabella (formerly written 'Leadin', 'Leadon', 'Ledan', 'Leiden', 'Liddon', 'Leidone', 'Leydon', 'Lidden', 'Lithen', 'Lydan', 'Lydan', 'Lydon', etc.).

Leyden Bank (lā-din-bawngk) n. street in Weensland, developed in 1963 and named after John Leyden.

Leyden Cottage (lā-din-ko'-eej) n. house in Denholm that was the birthplace of John Leyden in 1775. It is a small thatched and harled cottage off the north corner of the Green, on Leyden Road. It bears a commemorative plaque, and is now designated a 'Class B' listed building. It can be seen in the 1850s sketch by J.A.H. Murray and in a photograph from perhaps the 1860s. It was re-thatched in 1946 (also called 'Leyden's Cottage').

Leyden Monument (lā-, Il-din-mo-new-min') n. memorial to John Leyden erected on Denholm Green in 1861. It was designed by Hector H. Orrock and sculpted by Handside Ritchie. It consists of a Swinton stone Gothic spire on top of two tiers of Aberdeen granite columns. It used to get annual washs by the Denholm fire brigade. It was restored in 1982 with funds raised by a sponsored walk following the route Leyden took when he left to attend Edinburgh University.

Leyden's Road (lā-, Il-dinz-rōd) n. street in Denholm, lying between Sunnyside and the Canongate (also called 'Leyden Road').

Leyden's View (lā-dinz-vew) n. house on Main Street in Denholm.
Leyes

Leyes (leez) n. former name of lands in Liddesdale, roughly between Stichell Hill and Riccarton. It is now marked by ‘Leys Burn’ and the farm of Leysburnfoot. Adam Elliot of the Leys was recorded in 1541 and ‘Hob of the Leys’ in 1595. The lands there were rented by the Duke of Buccleuch to his Chamberlain John Laing in 1736. The farmhouse must have been quite close to what became Riccarton Junction (it is ‘Leysis’ in 1541; it is probably the place marked ‘Liwers’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

Leysburnfit (leez-burn-fi) n. farm where the Leys Burn meets the Roughley Burn, to the east of Whitonefoot and just west of Riccarton Junction. It is probably the second farmhouse shown on the combined farm of Stichilhill, Laidlawhope and Whitone in the 1718 Buccleuch survey. It is the same as ‘Fawhopeknewe’ standing shown on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map.

Leythen (li-thin) n. James (17th/18th C.) Sheriff-Officer in Hawick, recorded in 1702. Richard (17th/18th C.) probably an innkeeper in Hawick. In 1707 William ‘Sator’ was rebuked by reason of ye great distance she is from the burg, take money far ony merchant for liberty to stand before their doors [. . .] [BR1662], ‘. . .Walter Scott of Goldilands, quhair in he Desired liberty to bigg upon the topp of that paire of the Common dyke quhich marcheth with his ground . . .’ [BR1675], ‘. . .the Laird of Gledstaines . . .obtained allwayses when neid requyred the lyke liberty without interruptione’ [BR1704], privileges enjoyed by a free burgh, right of trading within a burgh – ‘Item, that the hale websters . . .convene and meet together . . .on any occasion concerning the craft, or for any other particular concerning the town and liberties thereof . . .’ [BR1640].

the Library (thu-Il-bru-ree) n. Hawick Public Library, founded in 1878 under the provision of the Public Libraries Act (which allowed the use of state money). It started in rooms in the Exchange, with a temporary move to Bridge Street in 1883, before moving to an upstairs part of the new Town Hall in 1886. The earliest history is unclear, with some accounts suggesting that the first ‘public’ library was founded in 1760 or the first ‘subscription library’ in 1762, with other ‘circulating libraries’ started later; the ‘Public Library of Hawick’ published a catalogue in 1792. Dr. Charters of Wilton set up a free circulating library for members of his congregation in the early 1800s. The Trades’ Library was started in 1802. The current library building on North Bridge Street, built with a gift of £10,000 from Andrew Carnegie, was opened in 1904 by Carnegie himself, with Mrs. Carnegie ceremonially unlocking the doors with a golden key. The opening day was a half holiday in the town, and the streets were decorated with flags etc. It was designed by John Nicholl Scott and Alexander Lorne Campbell of Edinburgh (who also designed the Boer War Memorial), following a design competition. The building has some stonework by William Birnie Rhind, with the exterior dominated by the corner entrance tower and the round-headed gables. There are 4 large windows with heraldic designs, with the arms of Dunfermline (Carnegie’s home town), Hawick, Galashiels, Selkirk, Jedburgh, Kelso, Roxburghshire, Selkirkshire, Berwickshire and emblems of Scotland, England and Ireland, together with the arms and mottoes of the Ker, Scott, Douglas, Gladstains, Elliot, Armstrong and Turnbull families. The building had a major extension, funded by Sir Thomas Henderson, in 1939. The Library the Liddel (thu-li-dul) n. popular name for Liddel Witter – ‘Right ower the knowe where Liddel lyes, – Nae wonder that it catch’d his ee! A thing of huge and monstrous size Was steering that way histilye’[ES], ‘Sweet sand the Liddle at our feet, I never heard it flow so cheery; With bliss life’s moments seemed complete That night by Liddle wi’ my dearie’[TCh] (sometimes written ‘Liddell’ or ‘Liddle’ and formerly ‘Liddal’).

Liddelbank (li-dul-bawngk) n. mansion on the Liddel Water, near the southernmost point of Roxburghshire. It was built on what had been part of the farm of Greena in 1793 for William Oliver, the local Sheriff and enthusiastic promoter of road improvements. Oliver was recorded there as owner of no less than 10 horses on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. James Alexander Attwood was there in the early 19th century and Walter Armstrong around 1821. Robert Jardine, M.P., lived there in the mid-19th century, William Brackenridge around 1870 and Thomas Bell in the latter part of the 19th century. Coal was once mined (in limited quantities) on the estate. It is also sometimes called ‘Bellsbank’. The house has a walled garden, now derelict – ‘Liddelbank, unrecorded in tale yet, or story, Neglected – forgotten in Border bards’ song: Fair gem of the Liddel, its pride and its glory, I will chant thee a stave as I journey along’[DA] (it is ‘Liddel Bank’ in 1797 and ‘Liddell Bank’ in the 1860s).

Liddel Castle (li-dul-kaw-sul) n. former Castle in Liddesdale, between Newcastleton and Saugh-tree, near the confluence of the Liddel and the Esk. Nothing remains now of this Norman fortification, except some impressive earthworks between the road and the river, on a promontory, surrounded on 3 sides by the river and the Kirk Cleuch Burn. It was once surrounded by the Castle Town, which gave its name to the area, although little evidence of former habitation remains today. The castle was probably built by Ranulph de Soulis when he was granted the surrounding barony by David I in the 12th century. It was constructed on the usual motte and bailey pattern, covering about 200 m² in the north section and 160 m² in the southern, sloping section. The location of a well can also be identified as a square depression. The castle appears to have been abandoned around the early 14th century. Around the 18th century it was sometimes referred to as ‘the Roman Camp’, because the origin of the mounds were not understood.

Liddell (li-dul) n. Andrew (17th C.) recorded as ‘servant to Widow Layng’ on the list of Hawick men named in the 1673 trial following the so-called riot at St. Jude’s Fair. Archibald (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1787 he married Betty Hardie, who was also from Hawick. Their daughter Jane was baptised in 1788. George (15th C.) Rector of Etrick Forest according to a charter of 1477. He was also recorded as Rector there in 1482 when he witnessed a charter for James Hunter, Rector of Cranston; the other minister who acted as witness was Alexander Murray, Rector of Hawick. He was probably a relative of Robert, who was Ranger of Yarrow Ward.

Sir James of Halkerston (d.c.1484) Ranger of the Ward of Yarrow in at least the period 1476–82. He was Steward to the Duke of Albany and as a result was tried for treason in 1484 an executed soon after. He was patron of Blind Harry, and it is said he was a major source of information for the poem ‘Wallace’. James (17th C.) Town Clerk 1658–59. Probably the same James was on the Council in 1668 and was Procurator Fiscal of Hawick in 1673. In 1673 Robert Scott of Horsley-hill was charged by the Bailies with stealing from his house ‘five firelocks with ane pair of bandellers belonging to the town’. Presumably he had charge of some of the firearms used by the Burgh Officers, and the theft could be part of the events around disputes between the Hawick authorities and the Baron’s Bailie. He may be the James who witnessed a baptism for John Stewart in 1651 and another for Thomas Scott in 1654. He is probably the James who witnessed a baptism for John Elliot, farmer at Southfield, in 1672. He may be the merchant of that name on the list of Hawick men named in the 1673 trial following the so-called riot at St. Jude’s Fair. In 1676 he checked the measures used by several Hawick traders, in presence of divers and sundry witnesses, upon complaint given in not only by the tacksman of the Duke’s measures for making use of other measures besides his, but also by ane great number of poor people; he thus effectively served as the surveyor of weights and measures for the Burgh, and is also referred to as a merchant. He may be the James, married to Isabell Watt, whose children included: Isobell (b.1650); and William (b.1653). Rev. John (17th C.) graduating from Glasgow University in 1674, he was licensed by that Presbytery in 1681. He was presented to Hobkirk Parish in late 1682 and ordained there in early 1683. However, he was deprived in 1689 for not praying for William and Mary (i.e. not giving up Episcopalianism), specifically saying that ‘he would never pray for them as long as his blood was warm’. He may have reformed, however, since he (or another man of the same name) was recorded as assistant at Montrose in 1696 and Brechin in 1698. Robert of Balmure (15th C.) Steward of King James II. He was one of the Commissioners for negotiating with the English in 1453. He served as Ranger of Yarrow Ward from at least 1456 and through the 1460s. He had the farms of Blackgrain, Montbenger and then Tinnis in Yarrow for his fee. Probably the same Robert was also Keeper of Dunbar Castle, as well as being involved with the leasing of Crown land in Galloway and March, and thus mentioned in the Exchequer Rolls through the 1440s and 50s. He may be the Robert whose murder by James Davidson ‘in Quhitmerhall’ is recorded at the Justice-aire in Selkirk in 1502. It seems likely he was related to George, who was Rector of the Forest in the 1470s and 1480s. Robert (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was at Cawfaulds in 1727. He married Bessie Scott (perhaps in 1714, although no wife’s name is given). Their children included: Robert (b.1717); Robert (again, b.1720); Janet (b.1723); and Isobel (b.1727). The witnesses in 1727 were Thomas Turnbull and William Douglas. He is probably the Robert who in 1729 witnessed a baptism for Andrew Harkness, resident of Clarilaw. Robert (18th C.) resident of Burnfoot Mill. He married Agnes Douglas and their children, baptised in Wilton Parish, included: Robert (b.1751); James (b.1752); Agnes (b.1754); Thomas (b.1757); Archibald (b.1765); and Euphan (b.1770). The 1770 baptism was carried out by Rev. Young of the Associate Congregation in Hawick. Robert (18th C.) tailor in Hawick. He was deceased by 1793 when his widow, Elizabeth Hardie married Alexander Shaw in Edinburgh. Thomas (17th C.) married Isobel Wright in 1686. They were both from Robertson Parish (probably the part corresponding to Hesendean). Their son Robert was baptised in 1687, with witnesses George Scott and James Wright (who was probably related to his wife). In 1686 he witnessed a baptism for George Cockburn in Robertson Parish. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He is recorded at Briery Yards in 1722 and Clarilaw in 1724, 1727 and 1729. He married Isobel Cavers and their children included: Thomas (b.1722); Isobel (b.1724); James (b.1726); Helen (b.1727); Helen (b.1729); James (b.1731); and Robert (b.1734). The witnesses in 1722 were William and Robert Easton, in 1724 were James Cavers (probably related to his wife) and John Dryden, in 1727 and 1729 were James and John Dryden. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He is recorded at Parkhouses in 1751. He married Margaret Hoy in 1740 and their children included: Robert (b.1742); William (b.1745); Mark (b.1748); Thomas (b.1751); John (b.1753); and Elizabeth (b.1759). The witnesses in 1751 were James Dryden and Walter Scott. Thomas (19th C.) tailor of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Davidson and their children included: Elizabeth (b.1825); Isabella (b.1827); and James (b.1829). Walter (17th C.) see Walter Riddell. William (17th C.) referred to as ‘merchant, younger’ in Hawick in 1644 when he held the surplus of the money collected for the Covenanting army. He or his father may be the same as the procurator fiscal of the Burgh in the 1630s. He may also be the William who was elected to the Council in 1648. He could be the William, married to Jean Lidderdale, whose children baptised in Hawick Parish included John (b.1637), Isobel (b.1639), Janet (b.1640), Marion (b.1644), Jean (b.1646) and James (b.1648). He witnessed baptisms in 1641 for William Wright and Thomas Oliver, both along with Andrew Liddersdale (who was presumably closely related to his wife). William (17th C.) listed among the poor of Hassendean Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls, when he was ‘in Burnfoot’. This was presumably Hassendean Burnfoot. He could be the William, married to Margaret Scott, whose daughter Margaret was baptised in Roberton Parish in 1683 (sometimes spelled ‘Liddel’ and formerly ‘Ledale’, ‘Liddale’, etc.; see also Liddle).
Liddel Strength

Liddel Viaduct (li-dul-vl-a-dukt) n. railway viaduct across the Liddel Water on the Waverley Line, just south of Newcastle. It has been demolished, but the approaches are still visible.

Liddel Witter (li-dul-wi-ur) n. the Liddel Water, formed by the meeting of 3 burns near Saughtree in the Deadwater heights, it is about 27 miles long and joins the Esk near Canonbie. It was a central feature in the area of cross-border raids that went on for centuries. In 1583 Captain Thomas Musgrave described it thus: ‘The ryver is all Scottishe, untilt it come to Kyrsopp foote, planted with Ellotes untill it come neare Wheatougehe towre, thene the Armestronges inhbit it on both sydes, untiilt it come to Kyrsopp foote, where it takes the dyvyssion of the realmes from kyrsopp – thene the Armestronges have the one syde, and the Englishe Fosters the other syde, soe it desendes by the Harlowe on the one syde and the Haythawyt on the other, and runeth into the ryver called Eske. Its valley, Liddesdale, is now quite under-populated, with Newcastle the major town (also spelled ‘Liddle’ and older variants).

liddar (li-dur) adj., arch. lazy, tardy – ‘Now Liddlesdale has lyan lang in, Fala, fala, fala, faliddle. There is nae riding there at a’: Their horses are grown sae liddar fat, They downa stur out o’ the sta’. Fala, &c’ [CPM], ‘I’ve been very liddar in writin’’ [GW].

Liddersdale see Liddersdale

Liddersdale (li-durz-dal) n. Adam (16th C.) “flescheour” (i.e. butcher) of Hawick listed in the testament of Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1574. He was owed money for supplying ‘flesche to the place’ and his name is recorded as ‘Adame Liddersdale’. Andrew (16th C.) holder of 5 participates of land on the north side of the public street according to Hawick’s 1537 Charter. He was probably related to others of the same surname who also owned lands at that time. He could be the same man as Andrew ‘Ludderdale’.

Andrew (17th C.) Councillor who signed the 1640 ‘Act of Bailies and Council’. He is probably the currier from Hawick who witnessed a deed in 1630 for Thomas of St. Mary’s Isle (in Kirkcudbrightshire), who was granted a fourth part of Easter Mains by Viscount Drumlanrig; John, currier in Hawick, and Andrew, currier in Selkirk, were also listed and so presumably related. He is probably the Andrew who witnessed baptisms in Hawick for William Wright and Thomas Oliver in 1641, for George Scott in 1651 and for John Leyden in 1654. Andrew (17th C.) recorded in 1651 when his daughter Janet, with Isobel Young, was baptised in Ashkirk. The record is labelled ‘for’, and witnesses were George Ormiston and George (who was surely related to him). George (16th C.) recorded in 1582 as witness to a sasine in Hawick, involving James Jack. He was son of Thomas, who was also a witness. Gilbert (13th C.) recorded as being ‘of Liddesdale’ in 1278/9 when he was on a panel at Newcastle. His family presumably had lands in Liddesdale, and may have given risen to this surname. Hawise (16th C.) owner of 1 particate of land on the south side of the public street according to Hawick’s 1537 Charter. The forename could have been ‘Hally’ or some other close variant. James (16th C.) recorded in 1581 as ‘alias Blakstanehous in Hawik’. He was probably a Bailie in Hawick, since he gave sasine of the half Barony of Wilton from James Langlands of that Ilk to his son Robert Langlands. It is unclear what his nickname refers to. Janet (16th C.) owner of 2 participates of land on the south side of the public street according to Hawick’s 1537 Charter. Presumably the same Janet was also joint owner (along with Stephen Scott and John Short) of another particate on the south, as well as a particate on the north side. She was probably related to Andrew, Hawise, Thomas and Nichol, and may have been a widow or heiress. John ‘Jock the Deacon’ (16th/17th C.) Hawick resident mentioned in a murder trial of 1612, with the events themselves happening 2 years earlier. He may have been a Burgh Officer of some sort, given his implication in the treatment of the prisoner in Hawick steeple. His nickname suggests he may have been Deacon in one of the Trades. Perhaps the same John ‘lidderdale’ was surety for George Waugh in Hawick at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1493; in the next entry the same John in Hawick was himself fined, with Thomas acting as his surety. In 1494/5 the pair of men were allowed to ‘compone’ for the crime of consorting with the Elliots of Branxholme. John (17th C.) leather merchant in Hawick. In 1630 he acted for Thomas of the Isle (in Kirkcudbrightshire) when he had a ‘clare constat’ for quarter of the lands of East Mains, from the Viscount Drumlanrig. He was presumably related to Thomas in some way, and probably closely related to Andrew (currier in Hawick) and William (currier and Burgess of Selkirk) who were witnesses. John (17th C.) schoolmaster in Hawick, who was one of the witnesses to the signing of the ‘Confessions of Faith and Bond of Union’ (Covenant) in 1638. He is the first schoolmaster on record in Hawick, and although it is not known what sort of school he was in charge of, it was presumably the Parish School. Margaret (16th C.) holder of 1½ particates of land on the north side of the public street according to Hawick’s 1537 Charter. Nichol (16th C.) holder of half a particate of land on the south side of the main street according to Hawick’s 1537 Charter. Philip (16th C.) recorded in 1552 when his wife (‘vxori Phelippi Lidderdail’) was listed as being owed money by William, youngster of Branxholme. He may be the same Philip listed as owning 2 particates of land on the north side of the main street in Hawick’s 1537 Charter. Robert ‘the Corbie’ (17th C.) one of a list of 16 local men named by the Hawick Bailie in 1627 as suitable for sending to the army in Germany, i.e. presumably considered undesirable to the town. However, when produced before the Privy Council by the Bailie he was one of the men who were found ‘not fit for the wars’ and dismissed. Thomas (15th C.) surety in 1493 for John in Hawick. He was probably related to the later Thomas. In 1494/5 both he and John were allowed to ‘compone’ at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh for the crime of consorting with the Elliots of Branxholme. In the Treasurer’s accounts for 1494/5 he is recorded having obtained remission from the King. Thomas (16th C.) mentioned in the 1537 as holder of 2 particates of land on the south side of Hawick’s public street. He was presumably related to some of the other Liddersdales in the Charter. Thomas (16th C.) recorded in 1582 as witness to a sasine in Hawick, involving James Jack. His son George was also a witness. Thomas (17th C.) of St. Mary’s Isle (in Galloway), given quarter of a ‘merkland’ of Easter Mains by Viscount Drumlanrig in a deed of 1630. The deed also mentions John and Andrew, curriers of the same place, and William, Burgess of Selkirk (probably a variant of ‘Liddesdale’; also spelled ‘Lidderdaill’, ‘Lidderdell’, ‘Lidderdale’, ‘Lidderdaill’, ‘Liddirdaile’, etc.; see also Lutherdale, which may be the same name in some cases).

Liddesdale (lī-di’z-dāl) n. valley of the Liddel Water, extending more than 20 miles from about Peel Fell to the Esk. In rievings days this was one of the most lawless areas in the land, with the Elliots and Armstrongs holding sway over the upper and lower parts of the valley, respectively. The name is sometimes used synonymously with Castleton Parish. A rental roll of around 1376, among the charters of the Douglasses of Morton, is invaluable for listing all the farms in the area in the late 14th century, including the names of many land-owners at that time (‘William Sturhes’, ‘Croyser’, ‘Fethyng’, ‘Loumane’, ‘Willelmi filii Alani’, ‘Willelmi del Syde’, ‘Johannis Rauffon’, ‘Ricardi Broun’, ‘Thome Gilson’, ‘Ade de Syde’, ‘Elie Nobill’, ‘Daid Stodhirdle’, ‘Ennie de Lawys’, ‘Ricardi de Lawis’, ‘Robert de Lawis’, ‘Mathei Meryng’, ‘Willelmi Nycson’ and ‘Philippi de Fausyde’); the lands are divided into 4 ‘quarterium’, the 1st unnamed, the others being ‘Ludne’, ‘Ermlydoune’ and ‘Manger-toune’, with an additional area being ‘Forest’, and a several other lands being listed as free tenancies or church properties. The lands were a Lordship, held by the Douglasses in the 15th century (along with Ewesdale and Eskdale), with a Bailie appointed to administer the lands. When the area was laid waste by the English in 1514 it was described as ‘12 miles of Lienith, within the Middill Marche of Scotland, whereupon was 100 pleughes’. Another rental roll of 1541 (transcribed in the Exchequer Rolls as well as the Buccleuch Muniments) lists more than 140 farms and their values and tenants at that time, mostly Elliots in the north and Armstrongs in the south, with a few Nixons, Crozierers and others. An English record of 1592 describes that ‘the cheif surnames in Liddesdale standes upon Arnestroges and Elwoodes’ and ‘is the most offensive countrie against both West and Middle Marches’. The area was long a Lordship, possessed by the Soulises and Douglasses, and later the Earls of Bothwell, forfeited by Francis Stewart, Earl of Bothwell and passing to the Earls of Buccleuch.

Lilliard's Edge (li-lee-ardz-ej) n. farm by the A68, between Jedburgh and St. Boswells, with a nearby caravan park. Dere Street passes near here, and it is next to the site of the Battle of Ancrum Moor, as well as of the monument to ‘Lilliard’. The name is generally applied to the high point on the A68 here, which reaches 172 m (565 ft). Just off the road to the west is the Monteath Mausoleum, and a little further south lies the Lilliardsedge Park caravan park (the origin of the name is probably from the Old English personal name ‘Lil’ plus ‘geat’, meaning ‘the gate belonging to Lil’; it appears as ‘Lylzeartis Croce’ in 1548 and ‘Lilliartis Crosse’ in 1632; it is also written as one word, ‘Lilliardsedge’).

Lilliardsedge see Lilliarid's Edge

Lillico (li-lee-kō) n. Alexander (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Templehall and neighbouring farms. In 1786 he was herd at Templehallshiel, in 1788 was ‘late Herd in Templehallshiel now in Harrot Park’ and in 1790 was in Langburn. He is recorded as shepherd on the Wauchope estate according to both the 1797 Horse Tax and Dog Tax Rolls. His children included: James (b.1776); Isobel (b.1778); Andrew (b.1780); William (b.1782), a shepherd; Alexander (b.1784); Mary (b.1786); Helen (b.1788); Hugh (b.1790); and Douglas (b.1794), also a shepherd. Alexander (18th/19th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish, probably son of Alexander. His children included: Betty (b.1808); Alexander (b.1810); John (b.1813); Andrew (b.1815); James (b.1817); and Walter (b.1819), who was a butcher in Liliesleaf. Alexander (19th C.) resident of Liliesleaf Parish. His wife was Isobella Scott. Their children included Alexander (b.1838).

Lilliard (li-lee-ard) n. the Maiden Lilliard of Maxton who supposedly saw her lover killed at Ancrum Moor and waded in to avenge him, being killed in the process — ‘... And when her legs were cuttit off She fought upon her stumps’. A small monument commemorates her supposed grave, about 400 yards east of the A68, near the line of Dere Street. Unfortunately it seems very unlikely that she ever existed, since the place name predates the battle, the monument is essentially a replacement for the earlier ‘Lilliard’s Cross’ and the lines appear to be cribbed from ‘Chevy Chase’, but it’s a good story nevertheless.

Lilliard’s Cross (li-lee-arz-kros) n. former wayside marker at Lilliard’s Edge. The name dates back to at least the 12th century, and was still in use in the 16th (it is ‘Lillyat Cros’ in 1378 and ‘Lylzeartis Croce’ in 1547/8).

Lilliard’s Edge (li-lee-arz-ej) n. farm by the A68, between Jedburgh and St. Boswells, with a nearby caravan park. Dere Street passes near here, and it is next to the site of the Battle of Ancrum Moor, as well as of the monument to ‘Lilliard’. The name is generally applied to the high point on the A68 here, which reaches 172 m (565 ft). Lillico (li-lee-kō) n. Alexander (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Templehall and neighbouring farms. In 1786 he was herd at Templehallshiel, in 1788 was ‘late Herd in Templehallshiel now in Harrot Park’ and in 1790 was in Langburn. He is recorded as shepherd on the Wauchope estate according to both the 1797 Horse Tax and Dog Tax Rolls. His children included: James (b.1776); Isobel (b.1778); Andrew (b.1780); William (b.1782), a shepherd; Alexander (b.1784); Mary (b.1786); Helen (b.1788); Hugh (b.1790); and Douglas (b.1794), also a shepherd. Alexander (18th/19th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish, probably son of Alexander. His children included: Betty (b.1808); Alexander (b.1810); John (b.1813); Andrew (b.1815); James (b.1817); and Walter (b.1819), who was a butcher in Liliesleaf. Alexander (19th C.) resident of Liliesleaf Parish. His wife was Isobella Scott. Their children included Alexander (b.1838). Alexander (19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. His wife was Isabel Grieve. Their children included: Christian (b.1842); John (b.1844); William (b.1845); Margaret (b.1848); and Alexander (b.1849). In 1851 and 1861 his widow was living at Dykecrofts. Andrew (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1623 as tenant farmer of lands near Bedrule, along with Thomas Turnbull, ‘indweller in Newton’. Andrew (17th/18th C.) married Janet Turnbull in Kirkton in 1721. It seems likely that the same Andrew married Isobel Briggs in Kirkton in 1735. His children, baptised in Kirkton, probably included Isobel (b.1722), Thomas (b.1729), Janet (b.1745) and Andrew (b.1748). Perhaps the same Andrew was living at Stobs in 1736 and 1741 and had children baptised in Cavers Parish, including John (b.1736), Marion (b.1739) and Gilbert (b.1741). Douglas (b.1794) son of Alexander, he was born in Hobkirk Parish. He became a shepherd at Wauchope and lived at Hawklaw. In 1820 he married Elizabeth (‘Betty’), daughter of John Taylor, farmer at Unthank in Rulewater. Their children were: Alexander (b.1821); John (b.1822); James (b.1824); Douglas (b.1825); Isabel (b.1828); Robert (b.1831); Elizabeth (b.1834); and Mary (b.1837). George (1704/5–39) shoemaker at Blackburnfoot in Castleton Parish. His children Thomas and 2 others died in infancy. They are buried in Ettleton Cemetery. Hugh (18th/19th C.) resident of Southdean Parish. He married Helen Telfer in 1817, the married being recorded in both Southdean and Hobkirk Parishes. His children included Alexander (b.1818). James (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish. His daughter Isabell was baptised in 1693. James (18th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. He married Marion Collier in 1733 and his children included William (b.1734) and Christian (b.1736). James (18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His son Andrew was baptised in 1747. James (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Elizabeth Grieve in 1765. James (1815/6–99) son of William and Margaret Nichol who lived in at least Cavers and Castleton Parishes. There appears to be no record of his baptism. He worked as a farm labourer at Riddletonhill near Maxton. In 1841, along with his brother Robert, he emigrated to Canada, settling in Gloucester Township, Ontario. He returned to Scotland, married Jane Bell in Crailing Parish in 1844 and emigrated permanently in 1845, bringing his mother and sister Janet. He purchased land along with his brother, this being called Century Farm (now part of the Industrial Park on Stevenage Drive in Ottawa. His children were Margaret, William, Andrew, Elizabeth, James, Robert, Isabella, Duncan and Sarah Jane. He was for a long time Superintendent of the East Gloucestor Presbyterian Church. John (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. He is probably the John who married Janet Wright in Bedrule in 1691. James (b.1697) and John (b.1697), baptised in Bedrule, were probably his children. John (17th/18th C.) married Mary Young in 1705, the marriage being proclaimed in Bedrule and Minto Parishes. Probably the same John had several children baptised in Bedrule: Isabell (b.1706); Margaret (b.1708); Andrew (b.1711); Mary (b.1714); Robert (b.1716); and Isabell (again, b.1722). John (17th/18th C.) married Helen Mather in Bedrule in 1729. John (18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His children included Bessie (b.1727), Janet (b.1730), Marion (b.1732), Thomas (b.1736), Margaret (b.1738) and Walter (b.1743). John (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Margaret Scott and their children included Margaret (b.1768) and Isabell (again, b.1722). John (18th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. His daughter Agnes was baptised in 1777. John (d.1808) Hawick resident. He married Helen Reid, who died one day after him. He could be the John who witnessed a baptism for Walter Scott at Whitfield in Wilton Parish in 1772. John (19th C.) Hawick resident, member of the East Bank Kirk. He married Margaret Symington in Wilton in 1807 and their children included: Thomas (1807–62), who died in Kelso; and Andrew (1809–c.73), who died in Nenthorn. John (19th C.) Hawick resident. He married Margaret Young and their son Robert was baptised in 1853. Robert (17th C.) married Agnes ‘Willieton’ in Hawick in 1791. Robert (1818/9–76) son of William and Margaret Nichol who lived in at least Cavers and Castleton Parishes. There appears to be no record of his baptism. He worked as a farm labourer at Riddletonhill near Maxton. In 1841, along with his brother James, he emigrated to Canada, other family members following later. He settled in Gloucester Township, Ontario, where he and his brother purchased a farm; he also worked as a stone mason. He married Christina Kinmond and his children were Jane, Margaret, Isabella, Elisabeth, William, John, Jessie, Robert and Christina. Thomas (17th C.) listed on the Hearth Tax roll for Bedrule Parish in 1694. Probably the same Thomas married Janet Wright in Bedrule in 1691. His children, baptised in Bedrule, included Robert (b.1695) and Margaret (b.1700). Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isobel Thomson and their daughter Janet was baptised in 1722. Perhaps the same Thomas had children William (b.1715) and Isabel (b.1719) baptised in Cavers. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Minto Parish.
He married Betty Shortreed and their children included Peggy (b.1788) and George (b.1790). Thomas (b.1831/2) from Berwick-on-Tweed, he was a railway engine driver. In 1861 he was living on Wilton Terrace. His wife was Agnes and their children included William and Thomas. Walter (17th C.) recorded on the Hearth Tax list for Bedrule Parish in 1694. He may be closely related to John and Thomas, who are also listed. Walter (18th C.) married Margaret Turnbull in Bedrule in 1730. Walter (b.1819) born in Hobkirk Parish, he was a butcher in Lilliesleaf, probably on the north side. He was listed in Slater’s 1852 directory. His wife was Eliza Davidson (from Mertoun) and their children included: Agnes; Alexander (b.1849); Jane (b.1851); and William (b.1853). William (1652/3–1720) tenant in West Lees. His wife, Janet Turnbull, died in 1719, aged 55. They are buried in Bedrule kirkyard. He is probably the William listed in the 1694 Hearth Tax records under the Laird of Newton’s farms in Bedrule Parish. He may be the William who married Isabel Rutherford in Bedrule in 1691, and whose children included Walter (b.1691), Thomas (b.1693), Walter (again, b.1696), James (b.1698), William (b.1702), John (b.1705) and Bessie (b.1708). William (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He could be the son of William Lillico born in Abbotrule in 1665. He was herd at the Flex in 1700 and in 1709. He married Isobel Rutherford in Bedrule in 1691. Their children included: Andrew (b.1691); Margaret (b.1700); William (b.1702); James (b.1703); Agnes (b.1705); and Isobel (b.1709). The witnesses in 1700 were William and Francis Henderson, smiths at the Flex and in 1709 were James Gray in Whitlaw and William Henderson, younger in Flex. William (18th C.) married Jean Ferguson in Bedrule in 1756. William (18th C.) married Elspeth Beattie in Castleton in 1763. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His children included Marion (b.1766), Janet (b.1770), Sarah (b.1772), an unnamed child (b.1774) and William (b.1776). He is probably the William who married Jean Aitchison in Hobkirk Parish in 1770 (but then must have had an earlier wife also). William (d.c.1832) resident of Castleton, Cavers and Bedrule Parishes. He was living at Bedrule Mill in about 1829. His wife was Margaret Nichol, the couple being members of this family in the Hawick area for centuries. Helen Lillico was wife of Walter Turnbull of Bedrule around 1600, and there were Lillicos farming in Bedrule Parish from at least the late 17th century.

Lillico’s (li-lee-köz) n. tobaccocon’s shop at 3 High Street in the 20th century. The property was previously a bicycle shop. Note that there have been members of this family in the Hawick area for centuries. Helen Lillico was wife of Walter Turnbull of Bedrule around 1600, and there were Lillicos farming in Bedrule Parish from at least the late 17th century.

Lillie (li-lee) n. Andrew (18th/19th C.) recorded as Blakehope in Castleton Parish on the 1797 Dog Tax Rolls.

Lillielaw Park (li-lee-law-pawrk) n. former name for a piece of land in Minto Parish. It was ‘Lillilaw park’ in 1779, when valued at £72 19s 8d and liferented by Robert Trotter of Bush. It lay to the north-west of the Minto-to-Jedburgh road, bounded by Craigend farm, Cleuchhead farm, Spout Burn Park, the Minto-to-Jedburgh road and Minto Glen garden. It was still listed in the Land Tax Rolls of 1811. A cottage called ‘Lillylaw’ is still marked there on modern maps.

Lilliesleaf (li-leez-leaf, lilz-lee) n. village about 8 miles north of Hawick, and also the name of the associated parish, part of Roxburghshire. The village was once known as ‘Easter Lilliesleaf’, to Lilliesleaf

The village consists largely of a single street, and was the scene of several skirmishes with the dragoons. John 'ski-ich' and Alexander Alemoor are recorded there in 1502. A charter of 1595/6 lists men granted land within the village being Walter Riddell of that Ilk, William Riddell of Bewlie, Archibald Douglas in Friarshaw, William Riddell in Greatlaw, Alexander Hogg, Thomas Young, William Smail, John Hogg, Thomas Bairnsfather, James Hill, James Henderson, Alexander Smail, Adam Smail, William Robson, William Middlemas, William Douglas and John Redford. The feuars lands were valued at £1283 15s (exclusive of Walter Scott of Chapel's share) in the 1643 county valuation. Additionally in 1643 Walter Scott held lands valued at £200, Walter Riddell was portioner of '20 soums' valued at £60 and 4 acres at £26, and Alexander Hood held £10. The feuars lands were valued at £800 in 1678. In 1694 the residents recorded there were Andrew Davidson, William Leithhead, Andrew Riddell, Andrew Gray, Thomas Smail, David Gray, Alexander Smail, James Leithhead, Thomas Marshall, William Mason, Robert Leithhead, Walter Davidson, James Riddell, James Redford, James Hill, John Scott and William Henderson, along with merchant John Smail, smith John Wright, cooper John Glendinning and wrights Walter Leithhead, John Smail and James Leithhead. The 1797 Horse Tax Rolls records the horse owners there as John Cochrane, John Anderson, Andrew Redford, John Muir, Robert Stirling, Andrew Riddell, James Lunn, William Grieve, John Hislop, John Kid, James Stirling, Thomas Chisholme, John Scott, James Hogg and James Easton. In the 19th century there were weavers there working for Hawick manufacturers. The village consists largely of a single street, and has many 18th and 19th century buildings. The present church was built in 1771, with later additions, and the graveyard contains the remains of the Riddells of that Ilk. A war memorial, made of Dodington stone and designed by J.P. Alison, was erected after WWI. A schoolhouse was built in 1822 as well as the 'Currie School' for girls in 1860, and the village still has its own primary school. The Common of Lilliesleaf was divided among the feuars and heritors in 1701/2, and only a few acres remained by the early 19th century. There is a multi-purpose building, Currie Memorial Hall. The Plough Inn and the Cross Keys are the local pubs, although there were 4 public houses in 1834. The village was the very first destination for a Ride-out in 1891. It became a regular location for many years, ending in 1984, but revived again in 2004 and 2005 – ‘And where around lang Lilliesleaf With lavish hand is flung A wealth of grace more dear to me Than aught that ere was sung’ [FL], ‘Drown the echo of your grief In the joy of Lilliesleaf’ [WL] (the origin is probably ‘Lil’s cliff’ or ‘slope’, with the Old English personal name ‘Lil’ or ‘Lilla’; it is first recorded as ‘Lillescliva’ about 1120, ‘Lillisclive’ and ‘Lyllesclefe’ in about 1150, ‘Lilisclive’ in 1156, ‘Lillesclive’ in 1170, then in forms such as ‘Lelescleif’, ‘Lellescleif’, ‘Lellesleif’, ‘Liliesleif’, ‘Liliesleif’, ‘Liliesclefe’, ‘Liliesclefe’, ‘Lilisclive’, ‘Liliescliva’, ‘Lillescliva’, ‘Lillesclef’, ‘Lillesclef’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’, ‘Liliescleif’ etc., until the modern spelling appears in 1770; Blaeu’s map of 1654 shows ‘E. Liliesley’ and ‘K. of Lilsly’, while Adair’s map c. 1688 shows ‘Lilislie Kirk’; note that the traditional local pronunciation ‘li-lee’ recalls former spellings). Lilliesleaf (li-leez-leef) n. farm in Rivonia on the outskirts of Johannesburg, presumably named after the local village. It hit the headlines in 1963 when it was raided by South African police and a number of ANC leaders were captured. The house had been the group’s hide-out for about 2 years. Nelson Mandela himself was captured separately (at Howick!) in the KwaZulu-Natal Midlands and the whole group were put on trial, leading to ‘Rivonia’ and ‘Lilliesleaf Farm’ becoming internationally synonymous with the suppression of black resistance in South Africa. In 1991, after his release from prison, Mandela spent some time scouring the suburbs for the farmhouse and finally located it. In 2001 the Lilliesleaf Trust was set up to turn the farmhouse to turn the site into a museum and conference centre.

Lilliesleaf (li-leez-leef) n. Adam (13th C.) witness to a grant of lands at Cresswell in Haseendean. This was probably in the late 1220s.
His name is given as ‘Ada de Lillesclive’. It is unclear how he might have been related to Stephen or other nearly contemporary men with the same designation. Alexander (12th/13th C.) son of Waltheof. He witnessed a grant in the period 1185–1215 by Geoffrey the cook of Whittington to the hospital of Jerusalem at Torphichen. He also witnessed the confirmation of this grant by Patrick Riddell and another grant of lands in Whittington by Patrick (who was thus surely related). He further witnessed the grant of lands in Haddington by William of Lilliesleaf to Melrose Abbey, also in 1185–1215. Probably the same Alexander was the father of this same William, who was mentioned in other charters for Walter of Riddell and Adam of Durham in the early 1200s. Geoffrey (12th/13th C.) son of Waltheof and brother of Alexander. His name is also written ‘Gaufri’. In about 1200 he granted 3 oxgangs of lands in Whittington to Melrose Abbey. This was confirmed by Patrick of Ryedale and then Eustace of Vescy in the early 13th century. There were also separate confirmations of grants to Melrose Abbey of 4 oxgangs of land in Whittington and then 13 acres and half a parcel of land in Whittington in the period 1195–1207. In the period 1185–1215 he witnessed a grant for William of Lilliesleaf. It seems likely that the designation ‘of Lilliesleaf’ (and the connection to Whittington) meant that he was directly related to the Riddells of that Ilk. John (12th/13th C.) Rector of Lilliesleaf in the late part of the 12th century and until at least 1204. He was recorded as ‘Master’ in the period 1201–05 when he witnessed a grant of lands in Clifton in Roxburghshire to Melrose Abbey. Sometime in the period 1182–96 he settled a dispute over the teinds of the lands in Roxburghshire previously belonging to Ulkill Wallace. He was also probably the ‘Master J., Rector of Lilliesleaf’, referred to in a papal letter of 1204. He could be the John, brother of Simon, Parson of Lilliesleaf, who witnessed the renewal of the gift of Hassendean Church in the period 1204–07. He may have effectively taken the surname of Lilliesleaf from his church. Stephen, who held the churches of Borthwick and Nenthorn, may have been his son. He may be the same as John of Huntingdon, who was Clerk of Bishop Jocelin of Glasgow. It is also possible he was son or other close relative of Walter of Lilliesleaf, recorded about 25 years earlier. John (13th C.) recorded as ‘Johan de Lillesclif’ in the county of Roxburgh when he signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296. It seems reasonable to assume that he was related to the earlier John, Rector of Lilliesleaf. His seal showed an 8-rayed figure and the name ‘SIOHIS D’LELISCL’. He is probably the ‘Johanne, de Lilloscleyf’ recorded in a charter of Sprouston in 1320/1. John (13th C.) recorded as ‘Johan de Lillisclyue’ in the county of Peebles when he signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296. It is possible that this was the same man as the John in Roxburghshire, if his name is entered twice. Richard (15th C.) recorded as ‘de Lyllicoscleue’ in 1436/7, when he resigned the lands of Lilliesleaf to his superior ‘Mungo de Redale’ (Riddell probably). Simon (12th/13th C.) Rector of Lilliesleaf. Sometime in the period 1204–07 he witnessed a charter establishing the Church of Hassendean. His brother John was also a witness, and it is possible he was the man who was formerly the Rector of Lilliesleaf. They may have been part of the Riddell family, who were the superiors of the lands of Lilliesleaf at that time. Stephen (12th/13th C.) recorded as ‘master, clerk, persona’ in 1204 when he witnessed an agreement between the Bishop of St. Andrews, Durham Cathedral and Coldingham; he was there ‘Stephano de Lillescl’ . He was also witness to a document relating to Soutra Hospital in around the 1220s. He is there recorded as ‘Stephano de Lilliscleve’. This may be the same man who held the churches of Borthwick (in Mid-Lothian) and Nenthorn, and who was possibly son of John of Lilliesleaf. He does not appear to have held the church of Lilliesleaf himself. His name occurs no fewer than 42 times in the early 13th century, but disappears by 1227. Stephen (13th/14th C.) mason, listed in an account of wages paid at Linlithgow Castle in 1302. It seems likely he was related to the earlier Stephen. Thomas (d.1222) Parson of Lilliesleaf, recorded in 1222. He succeeded as Archdeacon of Glasgow, but died the same year. Walter (12th C.) Chaplain and Clerk who witnessed the confirmation of the church of Loquhariot in Midlothian in the period 1147–51. In about 1162 he witnessed a grant of the Church of Linton, where he is ‘Galtero’. In a document of 1177/8 regarding a dispute involving Kelso Abbey it seems clear he was a clerk of Jocelin, Bishop of Glasgow. He was not Chaplain of Lilliesleaf, but surely took his designation from there. Waltheof (12th C.) father of Alexander and Geoffrey, also written ‘Waldeve’. He is mentioned in a charter of around 1200. ‘Waltheof’ could be the same as ‘Walter’, and it seems likely (given the connection with Lilliesleaf and Whittington) that he was part of the family of Riddell of that Ilk. William (12th/13th C.) recorded in the period 1185–1215 when he granted lands in Haddington to Melrose Abbey. His name is recorded as ‘Wilhelmus de Lillesclif’. Witnesses included Alexander and Geoffrey, sons of Walthef of Lilliesleaf, who were presumably related to him. His seal bore a monk-like figure holding a crosier and the words ‘SIGILLUM WILLELMII’. William (13th C.) son of Alexander, recorded as witness to a charter for Walter of Riddell in the early 1200s. He is also mentioned in a document in the period 1214–49 when Matilda Corbet resigned her lands in Lilliesleaf ‘except the land of William son of Alexander’. He also witnessed the confirmation of the gift of lands in West Lilliesleaf to Melrose Abbey in about the same period.

Lilliesleaf Burgher Kirk (li-leez-leef-bur-gur-kirk) n. former church in Lilliesleaf. In 1804 some of the parishioners wanted William Campbell’s son to replace him as Lilliesleaf Parish minister, but the Duke of Roxburghe appointed James Stalker (who had been Chaplain to the Royal Forces at Fort George, and to whom the Duke owed an obligation). This led about 70 families to secede and form a Relief congregation. However, a dispute with the Relief Synod over the appointment of their first minister led to them seceding from that organisation and becoming a Burgher congregation. Their secession church was built in the village by 1809. There was also trouble over the appointment of the second minister, and hence a gap of several years. The congregation eventually became part of the United Free Presbyterian Church about 1900 (along with the other secession churches), and was united with Ashkirk Free Kirk in 1909. A roll of the ministers is: James Colquhoun 1808–14; Patrick Bradley 1817–41; William Kiddy 1843–49; John Ballantyne 1851–54; William Young 1857–74; Alexander Paterson 1875–96; George Minto 1897–1908; Peter Alison 1909–25; John H. Ogilvie 1926–28.

Lilliesleaf Kirk (li-leez-leef-kirk) n. church in Lilliesleaf, at the eastern side of the village, serving the surrounding parish. There are records of a church at least as early as 1116. Sometime between 1114 and 1147 there is a grant from there to Uchtred the priest, confirmed about 1160. In the 1170s and 1180s there were several documents from Popes confirming the church as a ‘mensal’ church of the Bishop of Glasgow. In 1190 the Parson is recorded claiming lands at Bowden, and about that time the parson is recorded as ‘J.’ when there was a dispute settled with the Abbot of Kelso. In 1220 the parson was ‘Master Stephen’, according to a document of the Priory of St. Andrews. The church belonged to Glasgow Diocese until the time of the Reformation, with the connection recorded at least as early as 1160. The earlier church was located in the middle of the modern graveyard, and was thatched. The church was described as ‘St Mungo’s chapel of Lilleslef’ in 1546 and ‘S. Mungo Chapel’ in 1562; hence it was either dedicated to St. Mungo (or Kentigern) originally or re-dedicated to him later. The present church was rebuilt in 1771, during the ministry of William Campbell (whose daughter married the Hawick minister Robert Gillan). It was erected to the north of the former church. The choir of the older church was turned into the burial aisle of the Riddells of Riddell, along with the Riddells of Musesee and the Stewarts of Hermiston. A manse was built in 1821, with glebe lands of about 11 acres. Tax was paid on 17 windows at the former manse in 1748. The new church was extended in 1883, and had a nave and square bell-tower added in 1910, under Rev. Arthur Pollock Sym. A triple-arched apse was the added, to designs by J.P. Alison in 1909. It also has a stained glass by W. Wilson. In 1916 a stone panel with an incised sun-dial was added, probably originally from the older church. The church contains a red sandstone font, which may be as old as the 14th century; at some point it must have been rolled down to the churchyard, and was not moved back up until 1883, when it was built into a wall, and 30 years later moved into the new apse. There was also a Relief (or Burgher) church set up in the village in the early years of the 19th century. There were formerly additional chapels in the Parish at Chapel (the site later called Chapel Farm), Hermiston and Riddell (near Riddell Mill). The parish was linked with Ashkirk Free Kirk in 1909. A roll of the ministers of the Parish is: Uchtred c.1160; Walter, Chaplain 1174; J[ohn], Rector c.1190; Idol, Chaplain c.1201; J[ohn], Rector 1204; Simon, Rector c.1206; Stephen c.1220s; Thomas, Parson 1222; William of Rutherford, Parson 1296; Robert Turnbull, Rector c.1460–80; John Brown, from 1480; Thomas Riddell, Clerk until 1514; George Riddell, Clerk 1514–22; John Riddell, Clerk from 1522; Thomas Duncanson 1568–75; Archibald Simson 1575–82; Thomas Wilkie 1588–c.1638; William Wilkie 1640–c.74;
Lilliesleaf Library

Lilliesleaf Library (li-leez-leef-Il-bru-ree) n. library established in about 1818 in Lilliesleaf. It was stocked with books that had been donated or purchased by the fees of subscribers.

Lilliesleaf Limited (li-leez-leef-li-mi'-eed) n. company set up recently by Sir Walter John Buchanan Riddell, Baronet of Riddell.

Lilliesleaf Mill (li-leez-leef-mil) n. former corn mill in Lilliesleaf Parish, probably an alternative name for one of the mills near there, most likely Riddell Mill. In about 1530 William Scott in Ashkirk sold the rights to half of the mill for £40 Scots to his brother Walter. John Riddell was there in 1580. It was confirmed to the Riddells of that Ilk in 1595/6. The Earl of Roxburghe was superior in 1643, when the lands were valued at £104; however, it was also listed is part of the possessions of Sir Walter Riddell, valued at £172 in 1643, with a feu duty of £5 and mill teinds (held by the Duke of Roxburghe) at £104. Walter Riddell paid the land tax on ‘Lilliesleaf and for the mylne thereof’ in 1678, when the total value was £407 15s, the mill itself being valued at £167. 2 cottage-lands there were inherited by Andrew Riddell of Haining in 1696. It is ‘Lillas-leaff-mill’ in 1684 when Richard Turner was tenant. John Haliburton was there in 1694. The lands were still valued at £104 in 1788 and owned by the Duke of Roxburghe. James Crawford was tenant in 1787, James Hogg in 1797 and James Lambert in 1825 (it is ‘the mylne of Lyllisle’ in 1580 and ‘Lilliesleafmynyn’ in 1694).

Lilliesleaf Moor (li-leez-leef-moor) n. area to the south-west of Lilliesleaf village. A spot about 31/2 miles from the centre of the village was used for conventicles in the 17th century. It is said that the dragoons came upon the field meeting one Sunday in about 1676, but meeting resistance from the attendees, they fled. It may be that this was the local common, which was divided up among neighbouring farms. Parts of the lands there, once belonging to Chapel and Easter Lilliesleaf farms, were owned by Col. Edgar Hunter of Linthill and acquired by the Riddells of that Ilk (also written ‘Muir’).

Lilliesleaf Moss (li-leez-leef-mos) n. boggy area to the south of the east end of Lilliesleaf village, known locally as simply ‘The Moss’.

Lilliesleaf Pairish (li-leez-leef-pa-reesh) n. parish in northern Roxburghshire. The parish was historically bounded by Selkirk, Bowden, Ancrum, Minto, Wilton and Ashkirk. The Parish had a church from at least 1116 and this belonged to the See of Glasgow until just before the Reformation. It was formally removed from Glasgow’s control in an act of 1641. Part of the lands were granted by David I to the monks of Kelso Abbey about 1160. A charter of Pope Eugenius in 1440 revokes the union of the church there (union with what is unclear), then another charter of union by Pope Sixtus IV in 1479. Presumably the lands originally formed an estate. Robert ‘de Lylliscleue’ is recorded resigning the lands to ‘Mungo de Redale’ in 1436/7. In 1643 the total value of the Parish was recorded as £8325 18s 4d; the ‘Parsonage Teinds of the parish’ were listed as £1397, with ‘Stipend’ of £333 6s 8d. However, the teinds of the Parish were separately listed at £94 (perhaps sterling) in 1643, when they were held by the Duke of Roxburghe. In 1649 the land and crops of the Parish were valued at about £7700. In 1678 the total rents were valued at £8265 18s 4d, including the Kirk lands and teinds valued at £1257 13s 4d (and owned by the Earl of Roxburghe). The moors were frequently used for ‘field conventicles’ in the 17th century. The patronage of the Parish Kirk went to the Kers of Roxburghe after the Reformation. It is stated in 1834 that older residents could remember when there were 14 towers in the Parish. At the end of the 18th century there were 17 heritors, 630 inhabitants, 14 weavers, 13 joiners, 2 coopers, 11 tailors, and 4 licensed houses. There are Parish registers dating from 1737 (those from back to 1648 apparently became damp and decayed). A book ‘The Parish of Lilliesleaf’ was written by Rev. Arthur Pollock Sym in 1913, while Rev. James McKenzie wrote articles for the Transactions in the 1940s.

Lilliesleaf Schuil (li-leez-leef-skil) n. school in Lilliesleaf, existing since at least the early 17th century. Patrick Nichol was recorded as schoolmaster there in 1634. There were more than 40 pupils in the 1830s. The master there over 1805–50 was George Scott, and in the 1860s was James W. Mackay. There was a school-house built in about the 1820s. The present building was constructed in 1962 and extended in the 1990s. The pupils from the modern primary school attend Selkirk High School.

lilt (lilt, lil‘) v., poet. to sing cheerfully, to trill a tune without singing the words, figuratively applied to birds, running water etc. — ‘As arm in arm we walk’d alang. The mavis lilted up his sang’ [JoHa], ‘...thaye crye owt for joy, thaye lilt alsua an’ sing’ [HSR], ‘The mavis, lintie and laverock lilt Their love lays in cadence sweet’ [TK], ‘May you ever, happy river, lilt your joyous song’ [WL], to trip, jog, skip, n. cheerful singing, lively song — ‘O blythe is the lilt o’ his ain mither tongue’ [WS], ‘Oh kindly is the Teviot tongue, Her lilt is aye sae bonny’ [RH].

Lilyoak (li-lee-sik) n., arch. lilac, Syringa vulgaris (applied to the shrub or the flower).

Lily o the valley (li-lee-o-thu-vaw-lee) n. Convallaria majalis, native flowering plant with large green leaves and small, white, bell-shaped flowers. It is traditionally worn at the ‘Kirkin’ of the Cornet. The origin of this custom is unclear, but since the Kirkin itself dates only to the 1880s, there is no reason to believe that the wearing of this flower is an ancient custom. It is also known as ‘Our Lady’s Tears’, with a connection to Mary and hence St. Mary’s Kirk. In religious paintings it symbolised humility.

Lilyot’s Cross (li-yits-kros) n. place near Muirhouselaw in Maxton Parish, where March Days were held in the 14th century to sort out Border feuds. Its name is the origin of the ‘Maiden Lilliard’ legend.

Limekilnedge (lim-kiln-aj) n. area near the highest section of the road to Newcastleton, which was formerly part of the drove road to Liddesdale, important for the coal from Plashetts that was brought over by pony. The summit, with a triangulation pillar, reaches 430 m (1182 ft). The name derives from the former lime-workings there, sometimes called ‘Stobs Limery’, with quarries and some ruined kilns still visible. James Ashcroft was a lime burner there in 1841, Andrew Elliot was based there in the 1850s and William McDonald in 1861. In the early 1860s there were a large number of labourers (plus support people and family members) living in huts there, while working on the nearby tunnel; 71 people are listed on the 1861 census. It was described as a village in an 1868 directory — ‘Frae Limekilnedge to Teviot The rowin hills sae green ...’ [WL], ‘...And lang or the birds leave the hedge, I’ll stride owre the Limekilnedge’ [WL] (also sometimes ‘the Limekilnedge’: it is marked as ‘Lymkill hedge fells’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

Limekilnsyke (lim-kiln-sik) n. former cottage near Langburnshiel in Rulewater.

Limekilnwud (lim-kiln-wud) n. former lands in Jedforest, probably near Limekilnsyke. It is listed as ‘Lymekylwod’ along with Ferniehirst in the Exchequer Rolls of 1538 and 1539. ‘Edward Ollyver of Lymkylwodd’ is listed among Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII in 1544.

the Limes (li-miz) n. Victorian house formerly overlooking Wellfield, now on Raeson Park, also once known as ‘Viewfield’. It was the home of the Blenkhorns in the 1880s, and later of William Boyd Sime and Robert G. Maxwell. There is some confusion over whether this was also a former name for Sillerbuthall House.

lime-stane (lim-stän) n. lime-stone — ‘But when a fermer pits doon a load o lime-stane in a field, then I gie up a’ thegither ...’ [DH].

Limie Sike (li-mee-sik) n. small stream that rises near the Nine Stane Rig and flows to the south-east to join Roughley Burn.

Limiecleuch see Lymiccleuch

Limie Sike (li-mee-sik) n. small stream that joins the south side of the Borthwick Water to the west of Ellrig farm.

lim (lim) n., arch. a lame person, cripple — ‘...A’d naether bumberland, brizz, bate, nor blusht-bit ti play the limm an gar iz humple or turn lameter’ [ECS], ‘Ti play the limm = to mar; destroy; spol’ [ECS] (also written ‘limm’).
limber  (lim-bur)  adj.  lithe  –  ‘Nor  was  A  tewd  or  mauchless,  but  limber  an  lither’ [ECS],  supple,  pliant  –  ‘Often  used  when  referring  to  boots,  when  it  signifies  pliable  in  the  sense  of  yielding,  giving  comfort’ [ECS],  (the  b  is  sounded;  noted  by  E.C.  Smith,  suggesting  it  was  more  prevalent  locally  than  in  standard  English).

limmer  (li-mur)  n.,  arch.  a  lowly  fellow,  rascal,  scoundrel,  rogue  –  ‘But  what  gard  thou  steal  the  laird’s  Jock’s  horse,  Fala,  &c.  And  limmer,  what  gard  thou  steal  him,  quo’  he’  [CPM],  ‘. . .  Till  oot  again  the  loupin’  limmer’  [JBS],  ‘Did  ye  ever  see  sic  a  limmer?’  [WNK],  ‘His  een  grew  bricht,  and  his  senses  dimmer,  And  noucht  wad  please  till  the  saucy  limmer  . . .  ’ [WL]  (from  French).

Lindean  (lin-deen)  n.  village  to  the  north  of  Selkirk,  being  about  the  largest  village  between  Selkirk  and  Melrose.  It  was  a  former  station  on  the  Selkirk  branch  line  of  the  Waverley  Line,  which  ran  from  1856–64.  The  original  church  was  set  up  there  about  1119  by  7  monks  from  Tiron,  who  were  later  moved  to  found  Kelso  Abbey  in  1128.  This  could  be  the  ‘Lynnde’  in  the  Barony  of  ‘Bolden’  (i.e.  Bowden)  recorded  in  1541  when  the  tenants  included  George,  William,  John  and  Thomas  ‘Elwand’.

the  Lindens  (thy-lin-deen)  n.  Hawick  Linden,  a  ‘junior’  rugby  team,  formed  in  1921,  and  playing  in  the  Borders  League.  In  1963  they  joined  with  the  Trades  in  renting  facilities  at  the  Volunteer  Park.  Their  strip  consists  of  a  royal  blue  shirt  and  socks.  A  history  ‘Roots  and  Branches’  was  written  by  B.  Russell  in  1997.

Linden  Terrace  (lin-deen-te-rais,  -din-)  n.  street  at  the  top  of  Linden  Crescent,  built  in  1892  and  named  after  Linden  Park.

Lindisfarne  (lin-diz-fawrn)  n.  also  known  as  Holy  Island,  the  cradle  of  early  Christianity  in  north-eastern  England,  established  by  St.  Aidan,  St.  Cuthbert  and  St.  Wilfred  in  the  7th  century.  It  can  be  reached  by  foot  at  low  tide,  and  contains  building  work  dating  from  every  century  since  at  least  the  11th.  Wilton  (‘Wiltuna’)  is  probably  first  mentioned  about  843  in  a  deed  of  Egred,  Bishop  of  Lindisfarne.  The  whole  of  Teviotdale  appears  to  have  been  attached  to  the  Priory’s  see  until  transferred  to  Durham,  perhaps  in  the  middle  of  the  11th  century.

Lindisfarne  (lin-diz-fawrn)  n.  large  house  on  the  left  of  Stirches  Road,  formerly  a  residence  of  the  Innes  family,  now  split  into  2  flats.  It  was  built  in  the  latter  part  of  the  19th  century,  with  architect  John  Guthrie.

Lindsay  (lin-zee)  n.  Alexander  of  Dunrod  (15th  C.)  held  lands  of  Tofts  in  1478,  from  the  superior  Archibald,  Earl  of  Angus.  This  may  have  been  the  same  as  the  lands  in  Kirkton  Parish,  although  this  is  unclear.  Andrew  (14th/15th  C.)  son  of  William  of  the  Byres  and  an  unknown  mother  (he  was  probably  illegitimate).  He  is  probably  the  Andrew  who  was  granted  the  lands  of  Stouslie  and  Groundistone  by  his  father  William  in  an  undated  charter,  probably  around  1390.  David  (d.1490)  son  of  John,  he  was  2nd  Lord  of  the  Byres.  In  1484  he  was  Baron  of  Chamberlain  Newton  when  he  granted  Over  and  Nether  Newhall  (later  called  Burnhead  and  Burnfoot)  to  James  Scott  of  Kirkurd.  In  1488  he  witnessed  the  charter  for  the  Barony  of  Brauxholme.  He  married  Janet  Ramsey,  but  died  without  issue.  He  was  succeeded  as  Lord  Lindsay  by  his  brother  John.  His  seal  bore  a  horizontal  stripe  with  3  stars.  James  (14th  C.)  granted  the  lands  of  Chamberlain  Newton  to  William  de  Lindsay  in  about  1380.  He  was  presumably  Baron  of  these lands at that time, although it is unclear which James he might have been, and how he was related to William. It is possible he was the Lord of Crawford, who witnessed the grant of Drumlanrig to William Douglas in the period 1384-88. James (d.bef. 1488) Rector of Hawick, perhaps from 1447, when it was made a canonry and prebend of the Collegiate Church of Bothwell (St. Mary’s was described as the ‘Church of Hawwyc’). He was appointed by William, Earl of Douglas and Avendale, and described as his kinsman (3 separate Lindseys of Crawford had married into the Douglas family in the previous century). In 1470 he held the Rectory of Benholm (in St. Andrews Diocese) and swapped it with Gilbert Kennedy for the Canonry of Bothwell and Rectory of Hawick. There was also a dispute in 1470 over whether he really held an M.A. In 1476 it is stated that he was preparing to resign the benefices of Bothwell and Hawick and John Scott requested that he be given them by the Pope (although that does not appear to have happened). In 1480 he was Canon of the Collegiate Church of Bothwell and Prebendary of Hawick when he supplicated to the Pope to be allowed to hold 2 incompatible dignities. He was later Dean of Glasgow, taking over from Thomas Vaus in the mid-1460s. He may be the James of ‘Colbanton’, Rector of Douglas, secretary to the Earl of Douglas, who witnessed a charter granted by the Earl to William Cranston in 1443. He is probably the ‘James Lindisay, canon of Glasgow’ who witnessed a notorial instrument in 1446/7 made at Newark in which Oswald Abernethy proclaimed himself a bishop beneath a canopy, with 2 shields, a fish and a bird, with the words ‘S’ JOHIS DEI GRA. EPI. GLASGUEN. AD CAS.’ John of Dunrod (14th C.) son of Sir James of Craigie. He owned the Barony of Langnewton. In 1360 he granted the lands of Langnewton to William Cochrane of that Ilk. John (d.1482) Lord Lindsay of the Byres, son of Sir William of Abercorn and the Byres. In about 1415 (after the death of his father) he had a charter for the Barony of Byres and other lands, which included Chamberlain Newton. He is recorded as Baron of Chamberlain Newton in 1444 in a charter for Borthwickshiel according to the Barony of Borthwickshields and in 1468 he is recorded granting the lands of ‘Stowiwill’ (i.e. Stouslie) to John Turnbull. In 1471 the Lords decreed that Thomas Turnbull ‘of Faullyshe’ should pay for 3 years of the ‘male of the lands of Chaumerlane Newtome’. Also in 1471 he had a precept of sasine for lands in Borthwickshiel. He was High Justiciar of Scotland North of the Forth. He married Agnes, daughter of Robert Stewart, 1st Lord Lorn. He was succeeded in turn by his sons David, John and Patrick. His children included: David, 2nd Lord; John, 3rd Lord; Patrick, 4th Lord; Margaret, who married Walter Stewart, 1st Lord Innermeath and secondly married Henry Wardlaw (Baron of Wilton); Christian, who firstly married John, Master of Seton and secondly married Robert Cunningham, 2nd Earl of Glencairn (who was Baron of Hassetdean); and Mariot, who married John Hay, 1st Lord Hay of Yester. He must have lived to be quite old. John of Wauchope (d.1505) from the ancient Dumfriesshire family, probably the 12th Laird. He was witness to a sasine for George Douglas, Master of Angus in 1499. He held the lands of Fiddleton and others prior to them being sold about 1506. In 1505 he was hanged at Dumfries for the murder of Bartholomew Glendinning and his brother Simon. Bartholomew was the local Sheriff on official business to ‘poinde’ a third of the lands at the insistance of Margaret, widow of his father, John Lindsay. Thereafter his goods and lands were forfeited, although Wauchope was recovered by the family shortly afterwards. The lands in Ewesdale appear to have included Meikledale, Arkleton, Terrona, Flask, Howgill, Glendivan, Sorbie, Burngrains, Bush, Bliss and Wrae. John (15th/16th C.) listed in a letter of remission of 1510 for assisting rebels. He is named along with David Scott of Galalaw, plus John and Walter Scott. John (17th C.) among the men declared as fugitives in 1684 for refusing to conform to Episcopalianism. He was a tenant in ‘Spittal-lands’. Patrick (1566–1644) son of John, related to the Lindseys of Edzell in Angus. He was minister of Guthrie near Arbroath, and then St. Vigeans. He attended several General Assemblies, and was a strong supporter of the episcopalian views of James VI. He became Bishop of Ross in 1613 and then Archbishop of Glasgow in 1633. He must have temporarily held the superiority of lands in Minto, since in 1634 he gave a charter of confirmation for Barnhills to William Bennet. However, in 1638 he was disposed for urging his presbyters to use the ‘New Service Book’, and although ill he escaped to England and died in poverty in York. He was the last Bishop until the Restoration. Sir Simon of Arthuret (13th/14th C.) son of Sir John, Lord Chamberlain, who was the first of the Lindseys to be granted lands in Wauchopedale. He is recorded in English documents of 1278/9 and 1281/2. He was appointed Captain of Eskdale by Edward I in 1298. His brother Sir Philip had fought with Edward against the Scots, but went over to Bruce’s side at Bannockburn. He himself was powerful on the English side, being effectively Warden of the Western Marches. In 1300 he was appointed as Keeper of the late John Wake’s lands of Liddel and Hermitage, separately referred to as ‘the fortresses of Lydel and Eremitage-Soules’ and ‘the castle of Hermitage, the mote of Lydel, and the lands of the valley of Lydel both in England and Scotland belonging to the late John Wake; this probably refers to the early castles of Liddel Strength and Hermitage. But he must only have held this position for a few years. He became a prisoner after Bannockburn and forfeited all his lands etc. However, his son Sir John received a charter of Wauchope from the King in 1321. His descendants held the lands until the end of the 17th century, and claimed to be the oldest representatives of the Lindsay Clan. Sir William (14th C.) granted lands including those of Borthwickshiel in the 4th year of the reign of Robert II (i.e. c.1375), the lands having been resigned by Laurence Abernethy. It is unclear which William he was, possibly William of Abercorn and the Byres, or William of Rosie and Logie. It is also unclear if the family ever had a direct connection with the Borthwick valley. In the 10th year of Robert II there was a confirming charter from James of Lindsay (presumably a relative) to him for the lands of Chamberlain Newton. Sir William of the Byres (d.1414) son of Sir William and Christiana Mure. He was granted lands in the Barony of Chamberlain Newton, including Stoulsie and Groundistone, by King David II ‘through forfeiture of certain lieges’. In an undated charter (probably around 1390, based on the witnesses) he granted Stoulsie and part of Groundistone to his son Andrew, while part had previously been infested to William Gourlay. He was also recorded as superior of the lands of Borthwickshielis. He married Christiana, daughter of Sir William Keith. He was succeeded by his son John, who was 1st Lord Lindsay of the Byres. William of Garmilton (d.bef. 1468) resigned the lands of ‘Stowislee’ (i.e. Stouslie) in the Barony of Chamberlain Newton to John Turnbull. His relative John Lord of the Byres was Baron of Chamberlain Newton at the time. William (18th C.) cooper in Hawick. In 1724 he married Agnes Armstrong, who was also from Hawick. Their children included Adam (b.1728) and William (b.1732). Rev. William (b.1876) born in Coatbridge, he graduated in 1901 and became assistant minister at Shettleston and South Leith. He then became minister of St. John’s in Hawick 1906 and was translated to Newbattle in 1913. He was speaker at the 1908 Colour Bussing (formerly also spelled ‘Lindesay’, ‘Lyndesay’, ‘Lyndeseye’, etc.).

Lindsay Grieve’s (lin-zez-greevz) n. butcher’s shop at 29 High Street, with prize-winning haggis. Lindsay’s Corner (lin-zez-kör-nur) n. blind corner in Denholm, on the way into the village from Hawick. A shop there was run by the Lindsay family for most of the 20th century, first as a bakers and then a grocers. The business also used to have a van, which drove around the rural areas, this being particularly during WWII. Although the shop was sold in the 1990s, the popular name is still used.

line (lin) n. a note, authorization – ‘A got a line frae the doctor’, ‘here’s ma bookie’s line’.

Lineart Moss (li-nur-mos) n. boggy area on Hawick Common near Pilmuir farm, also called ‘St. Leonards Moss’. It was mentioned in descriptions of the Common in the dispositions given in 1767, where it is also referred to as ‘the Lineart’ (one name is presumably a corruption of the other).
lineen (li-nee)n., arch. a lining, an inside cover, 'A guid lineen = a satisfying meal' [ECS].
linen (li-nee)n. a cloth made from thread obtained from the fibres of the flax plant. In the 18th century and before, it was common for everyone to have their own small plot of flax or 'lint', which they would 'swingle' and 'heckle' to produce linen thread to weave into clothing. Linen weaving was formerly known at Hassendean, Northhouse, Newbigging, Hawick Shiel and Denholm, among other places. There was also some linen industry in Hawick itself, with a weaving shop manufacturing linen checks from about the middle of the 18th century. A little later there was a factory making 'inkle' (or linen tapes), before hosiery took over. The cloth came in either the rawer green form, or was bleached and sold particularly at St. Boswells Fair. The last weavers of linen in the Borders were still active up until about the 1830s in the St. Boswells area (see also lining).

Linfit (lin-fi)n. former school in Yarrow Water, situated near the church in the settlement of Yarrow. The school had a good reputation and had many boarders in the early 1800s, with as many as 100 pupils (as describe by Rev. James Russell). This included Christian Scott from Todshawhaugh and Clement, Tom Brown from the Tower Inn in Hawick and the 'Dandie Dinmont' (i.e. Davidson) family from Liddesdale. The teacher who made the school so well-known was James Scott, who served there 1784–1818. He took over from Alexander ('Sandy') Wilson.

ling (ling)n., poet. heather – 'Ho! For the blades of Harden. Ho! for the pikes that cross. Ho! For the king of lance and ling { A Scott on the point of a sword.}

linglet (ling-ul)pp., adj., arch. hanging in a clinging way – 'The linglet tails o' er skirt' [GW].

Linglie (ling-lee)n. former farm over the Ettrick to the north of Selkirk and the name of the road there, as well as a nearby hill containing a linear earthwork. It was long owned by the Burgh of Selkirk. Robert Scott was tenant there in 1708 (note that it may sometimes be confused with Singlie).

Linhope (li-nup, lin-hop)n. farm between Teviothead and Mosspaul, once owned by William Aitchison, who was long involved in local farmers groups. It was listed along with Frostylee and Phaup in the possessions of the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1653, 1661 and in the marriage contract of Anne Scott of Buccleuch in 1663; these were united with lands in Wilton and others into 'the tenement of Blackgraine'. However, it appears to have been in the Barony of Cavers when that superiority was inherited by Sir William Douglas in 1687 and by his brother Archibald in 1698. James Grieve was tenant of the Duchess of Buccleuch there in 1694. It was surveyed in 1718 when it covered 2669 acres and was bounded by Phaup, Skelfhill, Gorrenberry, Billhope, Carewoodrig, Burnfoot in Ewes, Eweslees, Lymiecleuch and Binks. William Little was there in 1724. John Elliot was there in 1733. It was leased from the Buccleuch Estates to John Elliot (of Borthwickbrae) and Walter Grieve (of Branxholme Park) in 1744. James Dickson was there in 1786. William Aitchison was recorded as farmer there in at least 1792–97, with William Grieve as a herd at the same time. William Little was shepherd there in 1861. The 'Horn Brig' lies just to the north, and on the hillsides near here can be seen the hollowed-out tracks of the old 'Read Roads'. It is also here that the route of the Mosspaul ride-out comes down the hill to meet the main road – '...braw, braw braes o' Linhope and lofty Mosspaul' [T], 'Little know you of our moss troopers' might; Linhope and Sorbie true, Tundhope and Milburn too, Gentle in manner, but lions in fight'[ES], 'The lark ascends from Linhope's verdant sward ...'[IWS] (the name derives from Old English 'hlynn hop', meaning 'the valley with the waterfall'; the name appears in 1604 as 'Lennop', 'Lindhope' in 1653, 'Lenhope' in 1661 and 1663, 'Linhope' in 1687, then 'Linhope', achieving its modern form by the end of the 17th century, but being 'Linehope' in 1718).

Linhope Braeheid (li-nup-brä-heed)n. former farmstead just south of Linhope, to the east of the A7. George Scott was shepherd there in 1851 and John Cairns in 1861.

Linhope Grain (li-nup-grän)n. former name for the small streams east of Linhope, which form the headwaters of the Frostlie Burn.
lining (li-ning) n., arch. linen, formerly used to make shirts and undergarments – ‘...28s. Scots for 3½ ells of sarking lyneing’ [BR1638] (many spelling variants exist; see also linen).

link (lingk) v., arch. to move with speed, skip, trip along, walk briskly – ‘A’ the day fu’ blithe and cheerie, I gaed linkin’ but and ben!’ [JT], ‘...And they a’ gang a’ linkin’ To seek their Hogmanay’ [JT], ‘In the bitter back end He will link down the glen ...’ [WL].

link (lingk) n., arch. a loop in a chain used for hanging a pot over a fire – ‘...hang the supper in the tailor’s link – That’s full twa feet aboon ilk burning spark, To keep the supper back, an’ keep the lown at wark’ [JR], a loop in a river or land enclosed by such loops – ‘All the links of the bonny Teviot and Sitterick’ [ES], ‘The wild green links o’ Liddidsdale’ [HSR], a loop in a figurative sense – ‘...and the lave o the followers are wee strung oot doon the links o the road’ [DH], v. to walk arm in arm – ‘...told her to stand there till he threshed Jock for daring to ‘link his lass’’ [HAST1890].

linkie (ling-kee) n., arch. a smart girl, lively young female, a roguish, untrustworthy or tricky person (usually a woman).

linkit (lingkee, -ki’) pp., arch. linked – ‘Aff to a weddin’ her kimmers hae gane: Ilk wi’ her laddie has linkit awa’’ [JJ].

links (lingks) n., pl., poet. fields, especially grassy lands near the sea – ‘...we fand it in the links o’ the wud’ [HSR], ‘Then leave the links and lanes beside the sea, And rove the pathless solitudes with me’ [HSR].

linky (ling-kee) adj., arch. deceitful, fickle (especially said of women).

Linlithgow (lin-lith-gö) n. town in West Lothian, between Edinburgh and Grangemouth, one of the 4 Scottish Burghs created by David I. They have been riding their marches since at least 1541. The festival is now held on the first Tuesday after the second Thursday in June, involves riding to Blackness, having a procession three times around the Cross, and has reciprocal ties with Lanark's festival. Population (1991) 11,866.

Linlithgow (lin-lith-gö) n. James (16th C.) listed as a ‘grief’ (i.e. grieve) in the 1574 last testament of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch, when he was owed for his fee. It is unclear whether or not be was local. William (15th/16th C.) listed in 1526 among the Borderers (led by the Homes and Walter Scott of Branxholme) pardoned for an attack on the Earl of Arran. His surname is given as ‘Linlithgow’.

Linlithgow measure (lin-lith-gö-me-shur) n., arch. standard for measuring the capacity of dry goods, based on a standard of the boll kept in Linlithgow. This was used in Scotland from 1661, with the standard being about 145 litres for wheat, beans and meal, but about 212 litres for barley, oats and malt.

linn (lin) n. a waterfall, pool at the foot of one – ‘And now young Keeldar reach’d the stream, Above the foamy lin; The Border lances round him gleam, And force the warrior in’ [JL], ‘The only tongue that they might hear Was the lyme’s deep murmuring fa’’ [JTe], ‘The rill is now a raging flood, And roars adown the craggy linn’ [JTe], ‘The wey waterfa’ or the fifty-feet linn’ [HSR], ‘The brown trout lay at the leap o’ the linn Oaring the stream with a lazy fin’ [WHO], ‘...Doon their ain romantic linns Is the farest spot o’ a’’ [TK], a steep ravine, narrow gorge – ‘Lyn, two opposite contiguous cliffs or heughs covered with brushwood’ [JaS], ‘...That forms the linn where hazels twine With woodbine and with thorn’ [JJW] (from Old English; also spelled ‘lin’, ‘lynn’ and ‘lynee’; the former meaning occurs in place names such as ‘Robert’s Linn’, ‘Hawkhass Linn’ and ‘Penton Linns’, while the latter occurs in e.g. the ‘Leap Linns’, ‘Lynnwood’).

lin-pin (lin-pin) n., arch. a linch-pin.

lint (lin, lint) n., arch. flax, a small plant with blue flowers, Linum usitatissimum, formerly grown for its fibrous stems, which were prepared to make linen. Used either as animal fodder or for flax prepared for spinning. Formerly it was much grown around Hawick, with even each hind having his own plot. In the early 19th century a ploughman in Hobkirk Parish received a cupful of lint seed as part of his payment in kind. The cultivation of the plants and preparation of the lint was once a very labour intensive operation, with the stalks lying ‘nine nights’ in a pond or pit of water, then using a ‘break’ (or ‘breek’) to split the fibres, followed by the ‘swingling’ – ‘...Two stones of lint £7’ [BR1639], ‘Item whatsomever person that steillis any of their neighbours peittis, turffis, green kail, corne, lint, hemp, ...’ [BR1640]. ‘A party is fined for steeping lint in Teviot at the yard foot’ [JW1702] (from Mediæval English, the word survives in lint (lin’, lint) n., arch. stale urine, ‘t i g e t h e r lint’ means to collect this typically for bleaching or some other factory use.

Lintalee (lin-tu-lee) n. house about a mile south of Jedburgh on the banks of the Jed Water and formerly in the Jed Forest. It was residence of Sir James Douglas from around 1316 when he was Warden of the Marches. It is also the site of a battle where Douglas’ men defeated those of the Earl of Arundel in the Spring of 1317. Some were ambushed using intertwined birch branches in a narrow pass, perhaps at the Willowford Burn, where Sir Thomas of Richmont was killed. Another English group under a priest named Ellis was discovered feasting near Lintalee itself and also defeated. The Englishmen who escaped with tales of defeat convinced Arundel to turn his huge army South again. The manor house there continued to be used by the Lords of Jedforest into the 15th century. In 1457 it was given for the use of Andrew Ker of Cessford, Bailie of the Lordship. William Ker was recorded there in 1494/5. It was valued at 26 shillings in 1538 and also 1541, when the tenant was Ralph Ker. It was owned by the Marquis of Douglas in 1643 and 1678, when valued at £160. In 1694 it ‘Mr Thomas Sheill’ was taxed for having 10 hearths at the house there; this seems likely to have been the same man who was minister at Roberton Kirk. John Turner paid tax for 21 windows there in 1748. Archibald Douglas of Douglas was recorded as owner in 1788 (also known as ‘Lintthaughlee’, it is ‘Lintole’ in 1457, ‘Lyntoumlee’ in 1493, ‘Lintole’ in 1517, ‘Lintool’ in 1539, ‘Lintole’ in 1541 and ‘Lintlauglie’ and ‘lintthaughlie’ in 1694; it is ‘Lynthalee’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Lintlauch’).

Lintbrake (lin-brak) n., arch. a flax-breaking instrument – ‘Lint-brake. An instrument used for breaking or softening flax, in place of the fluted rollers of the flax-mill, previous to the operation of rubbing and swingling, Teviotd.’ [JoJ] (cf. lint-breek).

Lintbreek (lin-breek) n., arch. an instrument for breaking or softening lint before swinging (also written ‘lint-break’; cf. breek and lint-brake).

Lintdub Knowes (lin-dub-nowz) n. hilly area just to the north of Harden House (the name is presumably from a marshy area where flax once grew).

Lintdykes (lin-diks) n. former place name in Lilliesleaf Parish, recorded as ‘Lintedikes’ in the early 13th century when it was part of a grant from Walter of Riddell to Melrose Abbey. The lands had previously been held in dowry by Matilda Corbet.

Lint-fever (lin-fee-vur) n., arch. former name for a condition that people sometimes got when they were first involved in ‘swingling’ lint – ‘The first attempt at swingling was often accompanied by an illness called the Lint-fever, supposed to be owing to the dust entering the nostrils and eyes’ [JAHM].

Linthaugh (lin-hawf) n. former name for an area near the river in Denholm, where flax was steeped in the 18th century. It probably refers to the flat piece of land lying to the west of the mouth of the Dean Burn (also ‘Lint Haughs’).

Linthaugh (lin-hawf) n. former farm on the north side of the Ale Water, roughly opposite Synton Mill (marked on Pont’s c.1590 map and Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Linthauch’).

Linthaughlee see Lintalee

Linthill (lin-hil) n. Victorian mansion between Lilliesleaf and Midlem, once home of the Homes. There is a walled garden nursery there. It may be that this was the same place once called Midlem Mill, with the main house rebuilt after having been sold by the Elliots in about 1756. The land was owned by Rev. William Hunter of Lilliesleaf in the early 18th century, when the part on the south side of the Ale, referred to as ‘Union Hall’, was united with Midlem Mill on the north side, the new estate being called Linthill, or ‘Linthills’. Dr. Hunter paid tax for 13 windows there in 1748. The estate may also at some point owned by the Kerrs of Cavers Carre. The estate was inherited through marriage by the Riddells of Camieston (a cadet line of the Riddells of that Ilk). The lands were valued at £171.10s in 1788, split between Union Hall (valued at £121.10s) and Ryechester and Quartersides (valued at £50). William Riddell sold it to William Currie in 1822, and Curries lived there through much of the 19th century. A plan of the estate from 1820 is in the National Archives – ‘And sweeter walks ane canna get Than walks by fair Linthill, Where murmuring soft the river sings To rose and daffodil’ [FL] (also written ‘Lint Hill’; it is ‘Lintheath’ on Roy’s c.1750 map).

Lintie (lin-ee, lin-tee) n. linnet, often used figuratively to suggest cheerfulness – ‘...he’s off to see if he can cage the lintie and bring her here’ [JEDM], ‘The hawk that built upon the rock, And the lintie in the shaw’ [HSR], ‘And the lintie in her mither’s throat, it’s cheerful’ music still, Has socht a nest in the yellow gorse beside the murmurin’ Till’ [JYH], ‘The mavis, lintie and leverock lilt . . . ’ [TK], ‘I hear the linties in the whins Where Ettrick rins’ [JBS].

Lintinhall (lin-tin-haw) n. lintinhall, former farmstead in roughly the same location as Stinty-knowe (marked on Stobie’s 1770 map, and given the similarity of names, possibly an error).

Lintobank (lin’-u-bawngk) n. former name for lands in Lilliesleaf Parish, near Riddell. Robert Wilson was recorded there in 1581/2. The name appears as ‘Lintobank tunc Riddell nuncupate’ in 1602 and appears to have replaced the earlier ‘Escetho’. In 1636 it was a 4-pound land when inherited by Sir Walter Riddell of that Ilk and was still a 4-pound land when inherited by Sir John Riddell in 1669 (it was ‘Lynthobank’ in 1581/2).

Linton (lin’-in, lin-in) n. village and parish in east Roxburghshire on the Kale Water, north of Morebattle, famous for its Norman Church and legendary ‘worm’ (which, sadly only dates to the 17th century). An account of the parish was written by A.O. Mackie and M.J.H. Robson in 1960 – ‘The wode Laird of Laristone Slew the worm of Worme’s Glen, And wan all Linton parochine’ [T] (the origin is probably Old English ‘lyn tun’, meaning the farm by the lake, since much of the Parish was formerly under water; formerly spelled ‘Lynoutoune’ and variants).

Linton (lin’-in) n. Adam (19th C.) cattle-dealer of Newton-muir. He was one of the earliest Trustees of Hawick Congregational (then Evangelical Union) Kirk, from about 1848. He may be the Adam who married Margaret Wood in Hawick in 1850. His wife Margaret and children Esther, Cecilia, John, George, Andrew and William are recorded at Newton Mains in 1851. Alexander (b.1818/9) born in Cavers Parish. In 1861 he was a shepherd at Alivygrain. His wife was Jane and their children included Beatrice, John, Walter, Sarah and Jane. Andrew (b.c.1785) shop-keeper on the High Street. He is listed as a grocer in Pigot’s 1837 directory and a meal-dealer in 1841. In 1841 he was living at about No. 29, with his wife Margaret and children Jessie and Walter. He married Margaret Michie and their children were: Jessie (b.c.1815); Adam (c.1820–79), stocking-maker in Hawick; and Walter (b.c.1827). James (18th C.) from Ettrick Parish. In 1728 he married Margaret, sister of John Elliot in Penchrise. John (b.c.1780) born at Kirkpatrick-Juxta in Dumfriesshire, he married Sarah, daughter of John Armstrong from Teviothead. He was a farm worker, probably shepherd, at Skelfhill, Whitriggs, Ramsaycleuch and Craikshiel, as well as probably Whitehillbrae and Pyat Knowe near Dodburn. He married Sarah, who was born in Teviothead, daughter of John Armstrong and Isabella Knox. Their children were: John (b.1805); Elizabeth (b.1807); Adam (b.1808); Helen (b.1810); George (b.1812); Andrew (b.1814); Jean (b.1816); Alexander (b.1818); Janet (b.1821); William (b.1822); and Robert (b.1825), who married Helen Stoddart and secondly Barbara Little Armstrong and emigrated. He and his wife were still alive in 1861, residing with their son Robert at West Cote. John (b.c.1815) recorded as a publican at about 7 Sandbed in 1841. He was an agricultural labourer at the same address in 1851. Joseph (18th C.) recorded in ‘Bouand . . . ’ (probably Bowanhill) in Cavers Parish. His son Adam was baptised there in 1727. Robert (b.1825) born at Craikshiel, son of farm worker John and Sarah Armstrong. He was shepherd at West Cote in 1861. He married Helen Stoddart, with whom he had 2 children, John and Adam. He secondly married Barbara Little Armstrong, daughter of Francis, who was shepherd at Henwoodie. They emigrated to Australia, where he managed sheep stations for James Glenny Wilson (from Hawick). They then moved to New Zealand, where they still have descendants. William (19th C.) shepherd at Millburn. He is listed there among heads of households in 1840 and 1841. William (b.1805/6) framesmith on the High Street according to Slater’s 1852 directory (where he is ‘Lanton’). In 1851 he was a ‘Woollen Power Loom Waver’ at 3 Bridge Street (perhaps the modern No. 20). His wife was Janet (from Chesters) and their children included Margaret, Agnes and Janet (also written ‘Lintoum’); note that this name is sometimes confused with Sinton in written records.

Linton’s Close (lin’-inz-klos) n. passageway in the mid-19th century, next to the current Bank of Scotland, 7 High Street, named after a one-time owner of the property (there could be confusion with Sinton’s Close, since 29 High Street is marked ‘Linton’ on Wood’s 1824 map).

Lithgow (lith-gow) n. Alexander (18th C.) recorded as ‘Mr’ in 1741 when he witnessed a baptism for worker William Graham in Hawick in 1741. He may have been son of Rev. Robert. Andrew (17th/18th C.) excise officer in Hawick. In 1716 he was rebuked by the Session for being involved in late night drunkenness at Thomas Huggan’s house. He apparently went to break up the fight between Huggan and William Oliver. He was witness to the ‘irregular marriage’ of fellow excise officer Thomas Hume of Hawick in 1718. Helen (17th/18th C.) sister of Rev. Robert of Ashkirk and daughter of Alexander of Drygrange. She is said to have married James Anderson (although this could be confusion with a later James Henderson) and had 3 children: Thomas; John; and Jean, who married George Thorburn, smith in the mid-1700s. However, he only paid the first installment, with the final settlement not taking place during the lifetime of the vendor. He sold it again to James Chisholme in 1793. Thomas Scott of Bonchester was factor for him for a while. In 1788 (and continued in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls) he is listed as owner of the ‘Easter Division of Stonedge and Howa’ (excluding the parts sold to Elliot of Woollee), as well as the Wester Division, his lands being valued at £1191 2s 10d in 1788 (and £1187 14s 5d in 1811). linsey-woolsey

in Ashkirk, whose grand-daughter married John Eckford, hosier in Hawick. Her nephew Hector Lithgow left a small fortune, which Eckford spent his life trying to prove a claim to. Rev. John (b.c.1620) son of Thomas, portioner at Redpath, Earlston and Isobel Haliburton. He moved from a charge in Ireland some time before 1646 to become minister at Ewes Kirk. In 1664 he refused to conform to Episcopacy and was deprived of his living. This happened ostentatiously, with the messenger delivering the Act of Suspension right after the Sunday sermon with the congregation still present. He continued to preach at conventicles and in 1682 was fined and sentenced to imprisonment on the Bass Rock. He was freed on the promise of leaving the country. He returned to Ewes in 1689 after the Revolution, was restored by Act of Parliament in 1690 and was also a member of the Assembly. He retired to Redpath in 1694. He married firstly Isobel Weir and secondly Isobel Scott, widow of James Johnstone of Larriston. He married Margaret Common, who was working for William Oliver. Archibald (17th C.) resident of Denholm, listed in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls as ‘Elder’, with ‘younger’ (presumably his son) listed separately. He was taxed for 2 hearths, suggesting that he may have been a smith or in a related trade. Litster (lit-stur) n. Henry (18th/19th C.) hind at Dykes. He married Margaret Rutherford in Ancrum in 1817 and their children included: Janet (b.1818); George (b.1820); and twins John and Henry (b.1822). The baptisms were performed before the Jedburgh Burgher Congregation and recorded in Cavers Parish.

litter (li-ur) n., arch. a carrier, particularly for bodies, probably a hand-barrow for carting the coffin – ‘…that in all time coming the Toun Litter when desired by any country people, they shall pay in to the Treasurer half a crown each time …’ [BR1722], ‘Received from mr Ogilbie of Tiendside for the litter . . . 1 10 0’ [BR1729], ‘Paid John Aitkin, cooper, for ye hooping of ye litter’ [BR1736].

Little (li', li-ul) n. Adam (1754/5–1808) died at Larriston. He married Margaret Common, who died in Newcastle in 1846, aged 95. Their children included: James (1794/5–1831); and 2 who died in infancy. They are buried in Ettleton Cemetery along with his sister Mary (1756/7–1816). Agnes (b.1821/2) from Berwickshire, she was a shopkeeper in Denholm in the 1850s. She lived on the Canongate. Andrew (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1623 as ‘Andro Lytle’ when Rowie Foster was found guilty of stealing a horse from the lands of Chapelhill. It is unclear if this was the local Chapelhill or another one. Andrew (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Moorfield. He is listed among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1835. Andrew (19th C.) listed in 1852 as carrier between Denholm and Selkirk once a week. Andrew (19th C.) shepherd at Gorenberry in the 1800s. His daughter Margaret married Alexander Turnbull, servant at Wolfelee. Ann (18th C.) cook at Dinlabyre in 1785, when she was working for William Oliver. Archibald (17th C.) resident of Denholm, listed in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls as ‘Elder’, with ‘younger’ (presumably his son) listed separately. He was taxed for 2 hearths, suggesting that he may have been a smith or in a related trade. Archibald (17th/18th C.) listed as ‘younger’ in Denholm on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. Archibald (17th/18th C.) ‘fowler’ in Hawick Parish. In 1720... he and smith William Young witnessed a baptism for Adam Brown ‘Headhous’. He is probably the Archibald, son to William in Hawick, who in 1716 married Agnes Learmonth from Kelso. They had a child Janet baptised in 1720. Archibald (b.1778/9) tailor in Denholm, listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. He married Barbara Jamieson (from Selkirk), and their children included: Margaret (b.1805); James (b.1808); John (b.1811); William (b.c.1815); Crichton (b.c.1820); and Betty (b.c.1825). He was still alive in 1851 and was listed in a directory of 1852. Catherine (d.1829) servant of Dr. Graham in Hawick. Charles (18th/19th C.) resident of London who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He probably had a local connection, and may have been related to William, also of London. Charles (19th C.) listed as a baker on the High Street in Slater’s 1852 directory. He was probably related to James, also a baker listed in 1852. Cuthbert (17th C.) tenant at Sandholm in Castleton Parish on the Hearth Tax records of 1694. Dr. ?? (19th C.) Doctor in Hawick in the 1800s, of whom a portrait exists. He was referred to in a report on the cholera outbreak of 1832. Francis (17th C.) resident at Mangerton according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. He must have been related to James, who was also listed there. G. (18th/19th C.) cooper in Castle ton. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. George (19th C.) draper in Denholm in the latter part of the 19th century. George (1869–1957) born in Hawick, son of John and Janet Ekron. In 1896 he married Margaret Turnbull Deans (d.1921). Their children were: James Ekron (1897–1917), who served with the Royal West Kent Regiment and was killed in action at Ypres; Marion Nichol Deans (b.1899); Janet (1903–82), married John Wallace and died in West Sussex; and George Francis (b.1914). Hamilton Borthwick ‘Hammy’ (1899–1960s) son of master tailor William and Annie Keir, he was born at 1 Weensland Road. He worked with the Hawick News, and joined the army in 1916, although under-age. He was wounded at the Somme, and received a discharge. He later set up his own printing business in Hawick. But he was best known as a singer, at the Common Riding, in the Hawick Operatic Society and around the Borders. He was official Common Riding Song Singer after 1918. He recorded ‘Meda’s Song’ and ‘O’ a’ the Airts’ on a 78 r.p.m. record. He moved his printing business to Langholm about 1945, but gave it up around 1952 to become a music teacher at Langholm Academy, retiring in 1964. He married Daisy Graham and they had one child, Helen. J. (18th/19th C.) listed at ‘junior’ at Clerkleap in 1821 when he subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’. James (17th C.) married Bessie Clerk in Roberton Parish in 1687. James (17th C.) resident at Mangerton according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. He must have been related to Francis, who was also listed there. It is possible the is the James ‘Little Milne in Mangertoun milne’ (with the extra ‘milne’ in error perhaps) whose will is recorded in 1683. James (18th C.) weaver in Hawick. He subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). James (18th/19th C.) farmer at Terrona according to both the 1797 Horse Tax and Dog Tax Rolls. James (b.c.1790) farmer in Denholm. In the 1841 census he is recorded around Leyden Road. His wife was Margaret and their children included Janet. He is probably the Denholm farmer recorded in 1815 among men accused of ‘mobbing and deforcing water bailiffs’, but acquitted. James (b.c.1800) farmer at Whitriggs. He married Agnes Blyth. James (1809/10–53) Hawick High Street baker, born in Cavers Parish. He is listed as a High Street baker on Pigot’s 1837 directory. In Slater’s 1852 directory he is listed along with Charles, another baker, who was probably a relative. He is recorded at about 42 High Street in 1841 and 1851. He married Helen Deans, who died in 1849, aged 37. They are buried in Wellogate Cemetery. Their children included Margaret, Janet, Agnes, Robert, Francis and Agnes (again). James (b.1809/10) stocking-maker in Denholm, probably living on Westside. Mrs. John (18th/19th C) recorded at Burnfoot in Ewesdale on the 1794 and 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. She was taxed for 2 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. She also paid the dog and clock taxes at Burnfoot in 1797. She was widow of John, who was listed there in 1792. Robert (17th C) local man who married Bessie Murray. Their children Margaret (b.1648) and James (b.1650) were baptised in Hawick and their daughter Malie in Ashkirk in 1652. The witnesses in 1648 were Thomas Shiel and William Grieve and in 1652 were James Hastie and John Armstrong. Robert (18th C) farmer in Yethouse in Liddesdale, recorded in 1748. Robert (1751/2–1823) died at Tinnisburn. He married Janet Murray, who died at ‘Rashill’ in 1830, aged 71. Their children included: Margaret (1792/3–1812); James (1795/6–1828), who died at Greens; and 2 children who died in infancy. Robert (1760/1–1802) died at Nether Larriston. His wife was Mary Scott and their children included: Isabella (1790/1–1808); and Thomas (1793/4–1820). They are buried in Ettleton Cemetery. Simon of Meikledale (14th/15th C) sometimes considered to be the first chief of his clan. In 1426 he had a charter confirmed by James I of an earlier grant by Robert, Duke of Albany. This was for the lands of ‘Senbigill’, ‘Meikiddale’, ‘Kirktoun’, ‘Sorbi’, ‘le Milnarland’, and ‘le Pullis’ in the barony of ‘Allarynock’ which had been resigned by Alexander Fraser of Ewesdale. He is thus be one of the earliest known Lairds in Ewesdale. Simon of Meikledale (16th C) descendant of the earlier Simon. In 1537 he had a charter of the lands of Meikledale in the valley of Ewes. The charter was witnessed by William Little, Burgess of Edinburgh and the following sasine by Andrew and Edward Little; these may have been relatives. Simon of Meikledale (16th C) presumably son or grandson of the previous Simon. He is recorded in the comprehensive remis- sion of 1585 for men of Dumfriesshire whose super- ior was Lord Maxwell (perhaps related to the raid on Stirling). He is listed as ‘Sim Litill, laird of Mekill, Daill’ and a large number of other Littles also appear on the list. Simon (b.1799/1800) from Westerkirk, son of Thomas, was educated at Kirkton and Edinburgh. He was Schoolmaster at Teviothead from 1818 (effectively succeeding Tom Jenkins). He also acted as Registrar for the area. He was still recorded at Teviothead School- house in 1861. His wife was Helen and their children included Betsy, William and Isobella. He is buried in Teviothead cemetery, along with an infant child who died in 1832 (as well as Betty Lit- tle, 2nd wife of David Scott from Thornhall). He was probably related to the Kirkton Schoolmas- ter. He was still alive in 1871. Simon (b.1842) born at Kirkton, son of Thomas, schoolmaster at Kirkton, with his mother being Margaret Turnbull. He was ordained minister of Ballantrae and died unmarried at Lanark Manse. Thomas (16th C) recorded in Langhope in 1579 when he was listed among the debtors to James Lidders- dale, Burgess of Selkirk. Thomas of Meikledale (16th/17th C) broke out of Selkirk jail in 1625, along with Robert Scott of Thirlestane, Gavin Elliot of Brugh and George Davidson of Kames. Thomas (d.1673) son of the Laird of Meikledale. His gravestone was once readable in Ewes Kirk- yard. Thomas (18th C) tenant in Rashiegrain. He married Isabel Beattie. Their children (bap- tised in Hawick Parish) included: Helen (b.1740); and Betty (b.1743). Thomas (d.1799) weaver in Hawick whose death is recorded. Thomas (b.1802/3) probably son of Thomas, he was mas- ter of Kirkton School from 1834. He was edu- cated at Kirkton and in Edinburgh. He was re- corded there in Pigot’s 1837 directory and re- mained schoolmaster until the 1860s. He also served as Registrar and Inspector of Poor for the Parish. In 1861 he presented the stone slab, which had been the stool of repentance from Kirkton Kirk, to the Museum. He may be the Thomas who subscribed to Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He married Margaret Turnbull and their children included: Thomas; William T.; Simon, who was minister of Ballantrae; and Isabella. Walter ‘Wat’ (16th C) tenant of Sir Walter Scott of Howpasley in the lands of Outersideig in 1569. Sir Walter acted as cautioner for his tenants at a meeting in Hawick, assuring that they would obey the laws of the Lord Regent. Walter (17th/18th C.) recorded as ‘servitor to Walter Laing clerk to ye Duchess of Buccleugh, (and servitor to ye sd Walter tenant of Park)’ in 1716 when he married Jenet Scoon (daughter to a deceased Scoon). He was recorded in (Branxholme) Park in 1719. His wife’s name was also recorded as ‘Mary’ and ‘Margaret’ (although this seems likely to all be the same couple), with children: Margaret (b.1717); Margaret (again, b.1719); Jean (b.1721); and an unnamed child (b.1725). The witnesses in 1719 were James Henry and Robert Scoon in Branxholme Town (who was probably related to his wife). Walter (18th C.) tenant in Denholm, recorded in 1745 and 1749. He married Janet Spinnie (or Spindie) and their children included: Ann (b.1743); Betty (b.1745); Agnes (b.1747); an unnamed child (b.1749); John (b.1752); and Isobel (b.1756). Walter (18th/19th C.) resident of London. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825, and hence probably had a local connection. Walter (19th C.) carrier in Newcastleton. In 1852 he was recorded running a weekly service to Nether-Oakshaw, presumably transporting coals from the mine there. William (15th C.) recorded in Thornycleuch in 1494/5 when his son-in-law John Scott was fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire in Selkirk. William (17th/18th C.) recorded as ‘of Tounhead’ when he leased half of ‘Tounhead’ to James Runcement, ‘now in Hassendean’. He is recorded in a bond of 1699 as ‘of Hassintounhead’ along with his wife Margaret Gray when he borrowed one thousand pounds from Henry Leck. In 1703 he sold the lands of Hassendean Townhead to Thomas Turnbull of Knowe and also borrowed money from James Gray of Nether Ancrum (which he seems to have had difficulty repaying). Henry Leck (tenant in ‘Stodrig’) tried to recover his debt in 1701/2 and this may have been done by 1710, since he recovered his tenancy rights to Hassendean Townhead. In 1705 a bill was sent to him by Gideon Scott of Highchester, via Bailie Robert Hardie of Hawick, then passed on to Thomas Turnbull of Knowe. Thomas of Knowe paid his teinds for Townhead in 1705, according to a discharge by Gideon Scott of Falnash (the Duchess’ Chamberlain). William (17th/18th C.) tenant in Side. He was listed there in the 1694 Hearth Tax records. In 1707 he was called before the Castleton Kirk Session for making a ‘penny wedding’. He ‘promised that he should not be troublesome about any such thing in future’ and was dismissed to pay a fine to the civil magistrate! William (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Gray and their children included: Janet (b.1709); Jean (b.1713); and John (b.1715). William (18th C.) resident at Linhope in 1725 when his daughter Margaret was baptised in Cavers Parish. William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Isobel Bunyan and their children included Margaret (b.1749) and probably William (b.1746). William (18th C.) tenant in Denholm in 1761. He is probably the William who married Isabel Scott and whose children, baptised in Cavers, included James (b.1756), William (b.1761) and Archibald (b.1769). William (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He was recorded as a ‘farrier’ (or perhaps ‘farmer’) in 1789 when he witnessed a baptism for Mark Sutherland. William (18th/19th C.) resident at Newcastleton, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He may be the William from Castleton who subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. William (18th/19th C.) resident of London who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He probably had a local connection, and may have been related to Charles, also of London. William (b.c.1790) born in Westerkirk, Dumfriesshire, when young he worked as a ploughman at a farm near Birneyknowe. In 1813 he assisted Capt. Walter Scott of Wauchope in catching a murderer (as recounted in Lang’s ‘Stories of the Border Marches’). Scott enlisted the ploughman’s help when he caught up with the 6-foot Irishman (called John Linnichen or Henry Maegraw) along this former high road from Hawick to Newcastle. He had attacked and robbed John Macdonald, a travelling merchant from Dumfriesshire who was apparently 101 years old. The chase ended on ‘High Tofts Hill’, the murderer was apprehended, walked back to Kirkton, then taken by cart to Hawick and on to Jedburgh for trial. William was apparently presented with a baton and excused from paying taxes for the rest of his life. He was later farmer for a while at Salenside. In 1841 he was living at Clerklands and in 1851 was a labourer at ‘Newtonmoor’ in Wilton Parish. He married Janet (b.c.1800), daughter of George Thorburn, farmer at Stonedge (and she apparently died aged 99). Their children included: Archibald; Jane; George; Janet; William; James; Andrew; Ann; and Catherine Ann, who Robert Scott, vet at Cauldmill. William (b.1776/7) mason in Denholm. In 1841 and 1851 he was living around the north end of Westside with his wife and adult children. His wife was Agnes (or ‘Nanny’) and their children included James, William, George, Robert, Charles and Bell. William (b.1783/4) born in Newbigging, he was a fleshers in Newcastleton in 1851 and on an 1852 directory. However, the same William, at about 15 South Hermitage Street, was listed in 1841 as a teacher. His wife was Elizabeth (or ‘Betty’) and they had a daughter, Elizabeth. William (18th/19th C.) mason at Holmfoot, probably near Newcastle. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. William (b.1800/1) from Westerkirk Parish, he was shepherd at Braediehope in the Hermitage valley in 1851. He may be the labourer William listed as a head of household in Castleton for the first time in 1838. William (b.1818/9) builder in Denholm, son of William. In 1861 he was living around Leyden Road. His wife was Jessie and their children included William and James. William (b.1817/8) shepherd at Stanishope. He married Margaret Greig and their children included William, Elizabeth, Margaret, John, Jane and Robert. He may be the W. Little recorded at Hawkhass in 1868. William (b.1817/8) stockmaking in Denholm, son of Archibald. In 1851 he was living at about Westgate and arund Sunnyside in 1861. He married Margaret Johnstone (from Falnash Mill) and their children included Archibald, John, James, Violet I. and Daniel C. He could be the William from Denholm who won 2 leaping events at the 1835 Common Riding Games. William (19th C.) schoolmaster at Kirkton roughly from the 1840s to the 1860s. His wife was called Mary. William (19th/20th C.) son of James of Carlsgill and Janet Keir. His mother was sister of William Keir of Whithaugh. He inherited Whithaugh from his uncle and sold it in 1924 (former pronunciation as in ‘Leitle’; also spelled ‘Little’, ‘Litill’, ‘Lit-till’, ‘Lytill’, ‘Lyttil’, ‘Lytte’, ‘Lyttle’, etc. in older records).

Little Aggie (li'-ul-aw-gee) n. nickname in use in the 19th century, ??.

Little Causey (li'-ul-kaw-zee) n. former name for part of the road up the Loan. It was here that Capt. Campbell was pelted with manure during the disputed Common Riding of 1809. The precise location is unclear.

Little Cavers (li'-ul-kaw-zee) n. small house on the side road between Honeyburn and Askybank. It has long been coloured pink, and may have once had a small hamlet around it. The name may come from the former name for Kirkton Parish, or have simply developed as an epithet for a hamlet near the main village of Cavers. In 1684 Adam Leyden, William Laidlaw and Andrew Riddell, 3 tenants of the farm there, were listed as fugitives for refusing to conform to Episcopalianism. It was the site for the parish school in the 18th century, as Denholm grew so a location was required between Denholm and Cavers (it is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

the little cloth (thu-li'-ul-kloth) n. the second-best funery cloth, in distinction to the main ‘mortcloth’ – ‘Pay’d for the Mortcloath and Little Cloath helping’ [PR].

Little Corbie Sike (li'-ul-kor-bee-sik) n. stream in upper Liddesdale, running roughly to the north to join the Aldery Sike and then Thoreshope Burn. It runs parallel to Muckle Corbie Sike.

Little Cote (li'-ul-kö) n. name for former farm near Littlecote Hill in Cavers Parish. Adam Huntly was tenant in 1694 and William Blyth in 1776. John Johnstone was there in 1791 and Robert Scott was farmer in 1851. The Armstrong brothers farmed it in the mid-20th century. The name was essentially replaced with the late Eastcote, although the earlier farm may have been to the south-west of the modern Eastcote. The earlier farm of ‘Muckle Cote’ may have been closer to the modern West Cote. There is a possible old enclosure on Littlecote Hill, which could be associated with the former farmstead – ‘Little Cot, Muckle Cot, Crook and the Trows, Worchart, Wormston and Cavers Knowes’ [T] (it was ‘Littlecoat’ in 1694 and ‘Lytte cote’ in 1776).

Little Dan (li'-ul-dawn) n. nickname of the 19th century – ‘Kinly Stick and Daaavid Garland, London Laidlaw and Little Dan, Johnny the Gover (in a far land), And Wat the Drummer leads the van’ [HI].

Little Dean (li'-ul-deen) n. former farm near Little Cavers, said to have been used for secret Covenanters’ sermons. It was situated near the plantation still known as Little Dean, which flanks the Honey Burn, just west of Denholm Dean.

L tiltedean (li'-ul-deen) n. former farmstead in Wilton Parish, located on the left-hand side of the road between Midshiels and Hassendeanburn. The Mather, Brydon and Milne families lived there in 1841 (marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map, it is ‘Litteden’ in 1841).

Littedean (li'-ul-deen) n. ruined 15th century tower in Maxton Parish overlooking the banks of the Tweed, once the home of the Kers. Duns Scotus may have been born here about 1265. The lands were possessed by Rutherturths in the 17th century. There is much local folklore about unpleasant occupiers and ghosts. Gen. Ker of Little Deans was ruined fighting a legal battle in the early years of the 19th century to establish his claim as heir to the Kers of Cessford and hence to the Dukedom of Roxburghs. The lands were later part of the estates of Lord Polwarth (the origin of the name is probably just Old English for ‘the little valley’; it is first recorded as ‘litildene’ in 1502; it is ‘Litildene’ in 1547, ‘Litildane’ in 1547/8, ‘Littil Dene’ in 1560, ‘Littill Dane’ in 1574, ‘Litilden’ in 1578/9, ‘Lytildane’ in 1582 and occurs as ‘Littilderne’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

Little Denner (li’ul-de-nur) n., arch. breakfast – ‘Little-dinner, A morsel taken in the morning before going to work, Teviotd.’[Jod].

Little Drinkstone (li’ul-drungk-stin) n. former name for lands near Drinkstone. In 1550/1 Robert, son and heir of Adam Scott of Nethermains of Hassenden was infefted by Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule in the ‘2½ merklands of Litill Dryngstoun’ in the Barony of Chamberlain Newton. There followed a letter of reversion by John Scott of Drinkstone in favour of Robert Scott ‘in Hassendenburn’ of the same lands on payment of £70 Scots in 1566. In 1606 Walter Scott of Alton was served heir to his father Adam’s lands of ‘Littill Dombstoun’ in the Barony of Chamberlain Newton, which is presumably a transcription error for Little Drinkstone.

the Little End (thu-li’ul-end) n. informal name for part of the old school on Orrock Place, where the younger children were taught.

Little France (li’ul-frans) n. name for an area between the Slitrig and the old railway line just north of Shankend farm. Aerial photography has identified the outlines of rig lines, a small enclosure and the foundations of former buildings (the origin is obscure; it is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Little Gledstane (li’ul-gled-stän) n. nickname for one of the local Gledstains family of Cocklaw Castle, who took part in the Raid of the Redeswire. This was probably James of Cocklaw, 12th of that ilk, the nickname presumably suggesting that he was short. There was also a field in Rulewater with the same name, but whether it was connected is uncertain – ‘The laird Watt did weil indeed, His friends stude stoutly by himself; With little Gladstane, gude in need, For Greitin kendna gude be ill’[T].

Little Gledstains (li’ul-gled-stänz) n. former name for some lands which were part of the Barony of Feu-Rule in the Rule valley. There is presumably some connection with the Gledstains family and perhaps with the local hero of the Raid of the Redeswire in particular, but no details are known. The lands lay between those of Hobsburn and Langraw (precisely where is uncertain, since these farms were once of considerable extent) and were said to have formerly been a Lairdship. It is possible that Adam Scott of ‘Gledstains’ recorded in 1581 was Laird there. Robert Elliot ‘in Gledstaines’ was removed from the lands by Sir Andrew Ker of Oxnam in 1610. The lands were part of the Stobs estate in the late 17th century, and were included in the contract where rental income went to the widow of Sir Gilbert Elliot and her surviving children. This is probably the ‘Gleestains’ where Thomas Oliver was farmer in 1758. The old house was still in existence in 1775, having thick walls and iron bars on the small windows; part of the building materials were incorporated into the garden house at Hobsburn (it is ‘Littiglaidstaines’ in 1562, ‘Little Gledstaines’ in 1677 and ‘Little Glaistanes’ in 1693).

the Little Gover (thu-li’ul-gu-ver) n. nickname, probably from the 19th century, and possibly related to Johnnie the Gever – ‘Sally Maclusky, Betty Johnny, Jamie Adams and Tammy Graham, The little Gever as smart as ony, Auld Mag Lamb and her penny krame’[HI].

Little Harden Burn (li’ul-haw-din-burn) n. small stream in Liddesdale, which rises on Harden Hill and joins Harden Burn to the east of old Castleton.

Little Hassendean (li’ul-haw-sin-deen) n. former name for Westerhouses in the Parish of Hassendean, so-called in 1582.

Little Hawick (li-tul-haw-wik) n. name sometimes used by the residents of Hawick, Minnesota for their township.

little-hoose (li’ul-hoos) n., arch. a toilet, water-closet.

little lee (li’ul-lee) n., poet. little peace – ‘Aft has he beat your slough-hounds back And set yourselves at little lee. Fala, &c.’[CPM].

the Little Maister (thu-li’ul-mäs-tur) n. nickname for a schoolmaster called Turnbull in the late 18th century.
the Little Muir (\textit{thu-li'-ul-newr}) \textit{n.} former name for a farmstead or area near Closses, at the edge of Hawick Moor. It was mentioned in 1766 in the description of 9 small pieces of land that were let in order to prevent encroachment on the Common by neighbouring tenants.

Little Newton (\textit{li'-ul-new'-in}) \textit{n.} probably part of the farm of Newton in Bedrule Parish. Adam Grahamslaw, son of the Laird of ‘litill newtoun’ is recorded in 1531/2. John Grahamslaw ‘of Littill Newton’ is recorded in 1572/3. William and George ‘Grimslay’, sons of Grahamslaw ‘of Littill Newtoun’ is recorded in for which they were pardoned in 1531/2. John Armstrong and Clement Crozier and their men, recorded in 1502. The farm was burned by Simon Grahamslaw, son of the Laird of ‘litill newtoun’ is of the farm of Newton in Bedrule Parish. Adam on the Common by neighbouring tenants. were let in order to try to prevent encroachment in the description of 9 small pieces of land that edge of Hawick Moor. It was mentioned in 1766 name for a farmstead or area near Closses, at the Little Park (\textit{li'-ul-pawrk}) \textit{n.} former name for lands in Liddesdale, probably the farm of Castleton Park, with the ‘Little’ used to distinguish it from the larger holding of Park (or ‘Copshaw Park’) to the south. William Scott was tenant there in 1694, according to the Horse Tax rolls, with Archibald Nixon also listed as a resident (it is ‘Littill park’ in 1694 and is marked on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Little Rulewud (\textit{li'-ul-rool-wud}) \textit{n.} former name for some lands near Denholm, possibly adjacent to those of Rulewud itself. It has also been suggested that it was an old name for Denholm Dean. In the reign of David I (1329–71) there is a Crown confirmation of these lands in the barony of Cavers to Thomas of Cranstoun. The lands probably once belonged to the family of Rule. This was confirmed again in about 1380, with the lands then being referred to as being ‘near Denum’. In 1458/9 the lands are among those for which Thomas Cranston of that Ilk had a discharge with Douglas of Cavers for rentals. The lands of ‘Littlrulwod, with tower thereof’ are listed among those in the Barony of Cavers in 1511 and regranted to Sir William Cranston of that Ilk in the following year and still held by John Cranston according to a discharge of 1574. The ‘40 shilling land of Roulwoode parva alias tower’ was passed from John, Lord Cranstoun to his nephew William in 1636. It was still in the Barony of Cavers when inherited by Sir William Douglas in 1687 and by his brother Archibald in 1698; it is described as having a wood and tower, called the lands of ‘Toure’, near the town of Denholm. In modern times the name has been given to a cottage to the east of Denholm.

Little Saut Haa (\textit{li'-ul-saw'-law, -sawlf'-hal}) \textit{n.} Little Salt Hall, house built above Langlands Road in 1937, near the former Salt Hall. It was designed by Kathleen Veitch and probably built for teacher William Redpath. It is a grade C listed building. The word ‘Little’ was later removed from the house’s name.

the Little Shop see the Wee Shop

Little Steil (\textit{li'-ul-steel}) \textit{n.} lands in Liddesdale, recorded on the 1541 rental roll as ‘Littlesteil’. They were valued at 6 shillings and tenanted by Bartholomew Nixon (possibly related to Stells or the Steel).

Little Sundi (\textit{li'-ul-sun-di}) \textit{n., arch.} the day before Communion Sunday, being a fast day, a fast day in general.

Little Tudhope Hill (\textit{li'-ul-tu-dup-hil}) \textit{n.} hill just to the north-west of Tudhope Hill, on the boundary between Rosburghshire and Dumfriesshire. It reaches a height of 483 m.

Little Warrington Sike (\textit{li'-ul-waw-rin'-in-sik}) \textit{n.} stream in Castleton Parish, which rises on Larriston Fells and joins Storff Sike and then Great Warrington Sike before running into Larriston Burn.

little wheel (\textit{li'-ul-wheel}) \textit{n., arch.} smaller type of spinning wheel, used in Hawick through the 18th and early 19th centuries for flax or hemp spinning – ‘There was presented by Mrs. Hogg, Crumhaugh-hill, a spinning wheel, i.e. the ‘Little Wheel’, formerly used for spinning lint’ [HAST1863] (cf. muckle wheel).

Little Whitthaugh (\textit{li'-ul-whi-tuf}) \textit{n.} small farm near Whithaugh, to the north-east of Newcastleton. Thomas Mather was tenant there in 1694.

Little Whitlaw (\textit{li'-ul-whi'-law}) \textit{n.} name of part of the farm at Whitalw, lying south of the Flex road, bordering on the old Common. It was next to ‘Meikle Whitlaw’, from which it was separated by the Flex (or Whitalw) Burn. It was long a tenanted farm owned by the Duke of Buccleuch. The farm was surveyed in 1718, along with other Buccleuch properties, covering 60 acres and being bounded by the Seltrig, Flex and Hawick Common, with no farmhouse at that time. It was leased (along with Meikle Whitlaw) to Francis Gledstains of Whitalw in 1692. The tenant at the beginning of the 19th century was James Elliot. The farmer there in 1841 and 1851 was James
Little Wrae Cleuch

Knox, when the farm covered 97 acres, and in the 1860s the farmer was James Shiel. The area of this earlier farm is the site of farm buildings of

Little Wrae Cleuch (li-úl-ráklooch) n. small stream in upper Liddesdale, rising on

Little Wullie Dunlop see Wullie Dunlop

Living Bards of the Border (li-fin-baudrz-ov-thú-bór-dur) n. book published in 1859 by James Watson of Jedburgh, which contains examples of many of the contemporary Hawick poets.

Livingston (li-víng-stin) n. Rev. James minister of Teviothead Kirk 1929–40, being assisted by James Hill in the last year.

Livingstone (li-víng-stin) n. Rev. John (1603–72) born in Monyabroch, Stirlingshire, son of Rev. William and Agnes. He preached in Ireland and then Galloway, before being appointed minister of Ancrum in 1648. He was one of the Commissioners to Charles I in 1650, perhaps in the party that travelled to Breda to offer him the Crown. He was appointed by Cromwell in 1654 to recommend ministers to vacant parishes. He attested to the character of the deceased Francis Earl of Buccleuch in 1654. After the Restoration he refused to accept episcopacy, was banished in 1663 and died in Holland. He wrote an autobiography (not published until 1754), as well as notes on some of his contemporaries, and worked on a translation of the bible into several languages. He was friends with other local ministers, including Rev. James Kerr at Abbotrule, Rev. John Scott at Oxnam, Rev. John Scott at Hawick and Rev. William Elliot at Yarrow. He also associated with Sir William Scott of Harden, Sir Gideon Scott of Highchesters, Sir Walter Riddell of that Ilk and several Pringle landowners, as well as Lady Stobs, Lady Newton and Mrs. Elliot of Craigend. He married Janet Fleming and had at least 15 children, although most died in infancy. His daughter Marion was born in Stranraer in 1642 and married Rev. John Scott of Hawick.
His time at Ancrum is recorded on a stone built into the wall of the Manse garden there. Mary Ann (19th C.) owner of the lands of Coldlaw and Tandlaw according to the Land Tax Rolls of about 1874. Her name is recorded as ‘Mrs. Mary Ann Livingstone or Finlay’. She was presumably the widow of someone called either Livingstone or Finlay, perhaps a descendant of Rev. Robert Scott of Coldhouse. William of Drumry (15th
C.) son of Sir Robert, from the Clydebank family. He held the half (probably the eastern half) Barony of Hassendean, according to a sasine of 1467. This was also stated in a ‘letter of reversion’ of 1470, in which Alexander Scott of Howpasley and Abington gave redemption money for Midshiels and Appletreehall; it is unclear when he first gained the barony. He was the Lord of Drumry fined in 1493 for non-presence (relating to his lands in Hassendean) at the Court of the Justiciary in Jedburgh. He resigned the barony to the King in 1493/4 and it then passed to Alexander, Lord Home. Also in 1493/4 he assigned (with the consent of his son Robert) 3 ‘letters of reversion’ to Alexander, Lord Home, these being for Midshiels, Appletreehall, East Mains and Clari-law. He probably married Euphemia, daughter of David Wemyss of that Ilk and was succeeded by his son Sir Robert.

Lizzie Campbell’s Spring (li-zee-kawm-bulz-spring) n. former water supply at ‘the Limes’ old house, later Raeson Park.

lizzie-rin-the-hedge (li-zee-rin-thú-haj) n., arch. goosegrass, cleavers, Galium aparine (also robin-rin-the-hedge: see sticky wullie).
‘Il (I, it) contr. will – ‘Ee’d better heide thae rock-boocks, or the bairns ‘Il kinsh thum’ [ECS], ‘…oo folk ‘Il bei touched an’ influenced in a maimer which ’Il bei unmistakable’ [BW1939] (often attached as a contraction to the previous word).

loadit (lód-deé, -di) adj. loaded, rich, well off.

loags (ló-gz) n., pl., arch. footless stockings, worn by labourers in the summer, as gaiters in wet weather or as protective sleeves by female mill-workers – ‘Worn to the leather were his clogs –
And on his legs a pair o’ loags’ [RDW].

loan (lö-n) n., arch. a lane, especially one leading to a meadow, in former times a strip of land between fields, left uncultivated for driving cattle homeward – ‘At Allanhaugh… the devil was seen regularly every Saturday evening, walking along the loan’ [EM1820], ‘In loan or steedin’ whene’er they saw her, Muckle Mou’d Meg was the name they’d caa her’ [WL], ‘At Allanhaugh, a small village (the vestiges of which only now remain) in the upper parts of Tiviotdale, the devil was seen regularly every Saturday evening, walking along the loan’ [Scots Mag. 1820].

the Loan (thú-lön) n. once the lane out to the pastures on the Common, being part of the Burgh lands, sandwiched between West Mains and East Mains and connecting the Town with the Common. It was known as the ‘Common Lone’ or ‘Lone’ up until about 1860. It became the main road through the town towards Carlisle, this not changing until the New Road was built in 1815. Both sides were first feued in 1792, this being the first extension of the Town beyond its ports (hence before this time the Loan was technically outside the Burgh limits). It was slowly built up with houses from then on, with further development of the upper West End through the 19th century. J.P. Alison designed Nos. 2 and 7 in 1901. Some houses were removed in 1939. There was much demolition and building work between 1957 and 1977, with reconstruction in 1974–77, allowing a clear view of the Moat and new access to Drumlanrig School – ‘Up the Loan we’ll drive like fire . . . ’[AB], ‘Down the Loan we come fu’ doucely . . . ’[AB], ‘. . . And doon the Loan like fire’[JT], ‘As Aw was gaun up Hawick Loan . . . ’[JSB], ‘For now o’ the Loan I used to ken There’s hardly a stamin’ stane’[DH].

loanheid (lon-head) n., arch. top end of a loan – ‘He may have taken in a piece of the loan-head by that dyke’[HAST1916].

the Loanhead (thu-lon-head) n. Loanhead, the former name for the area at the top of the Loan. Up until the early 20th century the area had many fields rented by farmers who had their barns and stables in the town. Farmers of the 19th century included the Hendersons of the Back Row, the Blakes of the Back Row, the Elliots of the Loan, the Waldies of the Green Wynd, the Andersons of the Green Wynd, the Patersons of the Loan, the Laidlows of the Loan, the Thorburns of the Loan, the Richardsons of the Loan, the Nichols of the Loan and the Hunters of Drumlanrig Place. The last farmers in the area were probably Dick Scott, (who kept pigs at the top on the right-hand side) and the Cavers family (who were there well into the 20th century). The area also had the covered stables in the town. Farmers of the 19th century rented by farmers who had their barns and Loanhill (lon-hil) n. lost place name near Branxholme, listed in the description of the half lands of Branxholme in 1420 when they were granted to Robert Scott of Rankiburn. The lands described include ‘half of the meadow of Lonnehyll’, with precise location uncertain, but perhaps somewhere to the west of Branxholme.

loanin (lo-nin) n., arch. a loan, lane between fields – ‘Ah! weel might there be heard a moaning, Throughout the land on ‘ilka loaning’’[AD], ‘The loanin’ up the hill – ay, ay! Far as the laigh march-line: It was the road we took the kye, When we were boys lang-syne’[ECB], ‘They met in the Kirkyard and loaning, Old burgesses loyal and true’[RSC], ‘The lang road that rins doon throwe Newton an bye the Dryburgh loaneen’[ECS] (also written ‘loaneen’).

the Loanin (thu-lo-nin) n. the Loaning, a street in Denholm, being the road out of town towards the fields to the south of the Hawick to Jedburgh road.

the Loanin Burn (thu-lo-nin-burn) n. stream in Denholm running alongside the Loaning.

the Loanside (thu-lo-sid) n. former name for lands lying adjacent to the Loan (also written ‘Loneside’).

Loan Toll (lon-tol) n. one of Hawick’s 4 toll houses, the building still existing with a commemorative plaque, opposite 25 Loan (near the gates of Mote Park). The building sticks out further into the road than those nearby, indicating its former purpose; the Loan was formerly the main road out of Hawick to the south. This is the first place the drums and fifes march to on the Thursday of Common Riding week, and is also on the route of the Cornet’s Walk after the Colour Bussing. It was also referred to as the ‘Turnpike Bar’.

Local Government Bill (lo-kal-gu-ver-min’-bil) n. important bill of 1929 which took away powers from smaller burgh councils (with a population under 20,000), yielding control to County Councils. Parish Councils and Education Authorities were dissolved, with education and welfare being controlled by the County. In Hawick there was much resistance to these changes, with the town losing control of its police force, public health and road maintenance. Roxburghshire County Council grew in power as a result.

loch (loch) n. lake, the nearest big example near Hawick is St. Mary’s Loch. But plenty of smaller bodies of water just outside the town are also called lochs, e.g. Leahead Loch, Mosshills Loch and Braxholme Loch.

Loch (loch) n. David of Overcarnbie (d.1780), General Inspector of Fisheries in Scotland and Inspector of the Woollen Manufacturers of Scotland. He was made an Honorary Burgess in 1777, presumably when passing through Hawick on the tour he made for the Board of Manufactures. He wrote ‘A Tour through most of the Trading Towns and Villages of Scotland’ in 1778. The book
Loch Green

Lochdail (loch-dāl) n. area to the north of Newmill Burn and south of Branxholme Easter Loch.

Loch Craig Heid (loch-krāg-heid) n. hill in the south-western part of the Borders, behind Loch Sken. It reaches a height of 801 m, and can be seen in the distance from many local vantage points.

Lochdail (loch-dāl) n. former name for lands near Hawick. They are mentioned among lost placenames by James Wilson in 1850, but their location is still unknown.

Lochgreen (loch-green) n. lands, formerly part of Essenside, bordering on Essenside Loch. This small area was annexed to Castleside in 1760 in exchange for lands nearer to Easter Essenside. This led to a dispute between the Cochrane of Ashkirk and the Elliots of Minto over rights to the marle in the Loch in the early 1800s.

Lochend (loch-ěnd) n. former name of farm near Kaimend, about a mile south-east of Hawick. It was just to the north of the small body of water opposite the road to the east of Kaimend, i.e. on the east side of the back road from Hummelknoves to Ormiston, and was also known as Ormiston Lochend. The farmer there in 1797 was John Clerk. In 1861 it was ‘Loughend’ with James Cavers and Alexander Lang and their families as residents. In the 1860s the farmere there was James Davidson (marked on Stobie’s 1770 map, between ‘Roxmount’ and ‘Ormistonmains’, and labelled ‘Ormiston Lochend’ on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Loch Hill (loch-hil) n. hill on the east side of the Ewes valley, between the farms of Glendivan and Hoghill. It reaches a height of 258 m and has a hill-fort at its summit, as well as a smaller enclosure to the west. The name presumably comes from the small body of water, which lies on high ground between the 2 archaeological features.

Lochmaben (loch-mā-bin) n. town west of Lockerbie in Annandale. It was a major Bruce seat in the 12th and 13th centuries and became a royal burgh in 1440. Lochmaben Castle was once the strongest fortress in the Borders, and covered 16 acres. The lands passed to the Murrays and then the Johnstones. Population 2,024 (1991).

Loch o the Lowes (loch-ō-thu-lōwz) n. body of water south of St. Mary’s Loch, originally part of it, but separated by deposits from the burns that flow into there. It is about 1 1/2 miles in circumference. This may originally have been the name of the whole lake, with the larger portion later taking the name of the chapel there.

Loch Park (loch-pawrk) n. area to the east of the High Street, once a small pond, but largely drained in 1835 because of the smell, to rid the area of its ‘pestilential vapours’. A curling rink was opened there in 1854 and used until 1866, when another pond was opened near St. Leonard’s. It was also used as a place for public demonstrations, e.g. in 1884 around 10,000 people rallied there in support of the Franchise Act. The area was used as an auction ring by Andrew Oliver & Son until 1883, when it was purchased by James Scott and David Rutherford, who continued sales there until the early 1900s. The land was then used for other purposes, becoming a railway maintenance yard in 1921, before being converted to an industrial park for... small businesses in 1968. Now the name tends to refer specifically to the industrial estate.

Loch Park Road (loch-pawrk-rőd) n. road running along the northern side of the Loch Park Industrial Estate, built in 1884, with the name deriving from the former pond. At the bottom of the street the road passed under a railway bridge, which was demolished in the early 1970s.

Loch Rig (loch-rig) n. ridge just to the south of Shielwood Loch.

Loch Sike (loch-sik) n. small stream that rises in Branxholme Easter Loch, running roughly south-east, through Loch Sike Plantation, to join the Newmill Burn and thence into the Teviot.

Loch Skeen (loch-skeen) n. loch high above the Grey Mare’s Tail, reached via a track along the Tail Burn (also sometimes ‘Skene’).

lock (lok) n. one of two positions in rugby, nos. 4 and 5, also known as the second row, who lock together the front row in the scrum. Such players are usually tall and have squashed ears.

Lock (lok) n. John (13th/14th C.) from somewhere in Roxburgshire. He swore fealty to Edward I in 1296, with his name being recorded as ‘Johan Lock’. His seal shows an 8-rayed figure and the words ‘SJOH’IS LOG’. He was also ‘Lok’ on the jury for the inquest into the inheritance of the half-barony of Wilton in 1303/4.

Lockerbie (lo-kur-bee) n. town near the Border in Dumfries & Galloway region, where the Dryfe Water meets the Annan. It had a nearby Roman camp at Birrenswark Hill. The town was founded in the early 18th century by the Johnstones, became a burgh in 1863, and was known for its lamb sales. It gave its name to the ‘Lockerbie Lick’, meaning a slashed face, during the times of feuding between the Johnstones and the Maxwells. Tragedy struck in 1988 when a terrorist bomb brought down a Pan-Am jet, killing all on-board and 11 people in the town. Population 3,982 (1991).

the Lockerbie lick (thu-lo-kur-bee-lik) n., arch. former term for the habit of the Johnstones of slashing their victims’ faces.

Lockhart (lok-har’) n. Allan Elliott (1803–78) 5th Laird of Borthwickbrae. Second (and oldest surviving) son of William Elliott, he was a lawyer and became Deputy Lieutenant of Selkirkshire and then Roxburgshire (in 1848). He was listed as a Commissioner in Selkirkshire in 1819, when still younger of Borthwickbrae. He was called to the Bar in 1824. He was listed at Borthwickbrae among the local gentry in Pigot’s 1837 directory, and mentioned as a major landowner in Hawick Parish in 1838. He was Selkirkshire M.P. 1846–61, was also involved in local education and agriculture and served as a Commissioner of Supply, Justice of the Peace and Tax Commissioner for Roxburghshire. In 1841 he was absent from Borthwickbrae, but his sister and 4 children were there, along with a governess and 6 other servants. In 1861 he presented a jar of reptiles to the Archaeological Society. In 1874 he was listed in the Land Tax Rolls as owner of Flex, as well as Wester Essenside and Leap Hill. In 1830 he married Charlotte (1809–88), 5th daughter of Sir David Dundas of Beechwood, and succeeded to the estates on the death of his father-in-law 2 years later. He had 12 children, including 5 sons who survived to adulthood: William (b.1833), who succeeded and married an Elliot of Wolfelee; David (1834–1903), who married Fanny Wood of Hutton and had 3 sons; Capt. Allan (b.1837), who married twice and had a daughter; Col. Robert Dundas (b.1841), who had 2 daughters; and Charles Walter (1850–94), who married a daughter of Mark Neville and died without issue. His daughters included: Matilda (1832–98); Marianne (b.c.1836); and Robina (1840–1924). He retired in 1861 and after the Death of Lord Polwarth was appointed Lord Lieutenant of Selkirkshire. George (d.1547) cleric who was Archdeacon of Teviotdale from about 1509 until 1533. The George ‘Herher’ referred to in 1509 is probably a transcription error for his name. He was elevated to Dean of Glasgow in 1533, and remained in that office until he died. Sir George (c.1630–89), Lord Carnwath, son of Sir James of Lee. He was a prominent Scottish advocate, who served as Dean of the Faculty of Advocates, Lord President of the Court of Session, Privy Counsellor and Commissioner to the Scottish Parliament for Lanarkshire. He married Philadelphia, daughter of Lord Wharton and was succeeded by his son George. He was murdered on Edinburgh High Street by the husband of a woman he had represented against him. In 1690 his son George was served heir to his lands around Jedhead in Southdean Parish. It is unclear how he acquired these in the first place. Sir George of Carnwath (1673–1731) son of Sir George. In 1690 he inherited his father’s annual rents of part of the Marquisate of Douglas in Jedforest, specifically 3 half steadings in Jedhead and half of 2 steads in ‘Campsheil-haugh’. He was a member of Parliament for the county of Edinburgh and one of the commissioners for arranging the union with England. He was a spy who brought to light the extent of bribery before the vote for the 1707 Union, leading to Burns line ‘bought and sold for English gold’. He was a Jacobite supporter and later a spy for Charles Stewart, having to flee the country for a year and dying in a duel 3 years later. Gilbert Elliott (1808–24) younger son of William of Borthwickbrae. He joined the Royal Navy and died onboard H.M.S. Diamond, which was captained by Lord Napier. John (18th C.) married Isabel Lillico in bedrule in 1724. John Elliott of Borthwickbrae (1796–1815). Eldest son of William, he was a Cornet in the Dragoons and was killed at Waterloo. Margaret ‘Peggy’ (18th C.) chambermaid at Cavers in 1791, when she worked for George Douglas. Mary Charlotte (1875–1965) daughter of Capt. William, 6th of Borthwickbrae and Dorothea Helen, daughter of Sir Walter Elliot of Wolfelee. Her father sold Borthwickbrae in 1884. Her 3 brothers died before their father and in 1907 she became head of the lines of both Borthwickbrae and Wolfelee. In 1899 she married Maj. R.H. Adams, but took the surname Elliott-Lockhart in 1907. She had a son, called Sir Allan Robert (b.1905) and a daughter Dorothy Cecil Bertram. Capt. Robert Elliott (19th C.) of Borthwickbrae, he served in the Royal Artillery. Stephen (15th C.) leased the Crown lands of Gilmanscleuch in 1486. Walter Elliott (b.1804) younger son of William. He worked for the East India Company. He married Mary, daughter of William Proctor and died in Madras without any children. Lt.-Col. William Elliott (1764–1832) 4th Laird of Borthwickbrae, eldest surviving son of John of Borthwickbrae and Margaret Laing. He appears to have lived at Orchard before succeeding to Borthwickbrae; he was described as ‘William Elliot Esq. in Orchard’ in the years 1790/1 and 1791/2 when he paid tax for having a female servant and 2 male servants, and also in 1790/1 and 1790/1 when he paid for owning a carriage. From 1792 he was ‘William Elliot of Borthwickbrae’ when he continued to pay the duty for 2 male servants and a carriage in Roberton Parish, with 3 servants in 1793 and 1794 and 1 in 1797. He was at Orchard on the Horse Tax Rolls for 1790–94, when he had up to 4 carriage horses, as well as being owner of 2 work horses in 1797. He also paid the dog tax in 1797. From 1795 he served as Colonel for the local troop of Yeomanry (volunteer cavalry, also known as the Roxburgh Fencible Dragoons), leading his men in repelling the French (who were supplying arms to Ireland) at Killala Bay in 1798. He was later appointed major commandant of the Roxburgh Gentlemen and Yeomanry Cavalry, and turned out with his regiment at the False Alarm of 1804. In 1821 he was appointed Lieut.-Col. of the Roxburghshire Yeomanry Cavalry. In 1802 he paid the Land Tax on Borthwickbrae, the west side of Howcleuch and Wester Alemoor. He was listed as a Commissioner for both Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire in 1805 and 1819. He was a member of the Jedforest Club from 1812. He was among the first to be listed on the ‘Donations' page for the Hawick Savings Bank in 1815. He was the eldest son of William and Margaret (b.1804), bap- tised at Edinburgh, but recorded in Roberton; John (1796–1815), who was killed at Waterloo; Margaret, who was at Borthwickbrae in 1841; Allan (b.1803), who succeeded; Walter, who died in Madras; William (b.1808), who became a Major; and Gilbert (1808–24), who died on H.M.S. Diamond. He died at Cleghorn. Capt. William Elliott (1833–1907) 6th Laird of Borthwickbrae, and 14th of Cleghorn in Lanark, eldest son of Allan. He served in the Cameronians and 74th Highlanders, retiring from service in 1868. He was then assistant Chief Constable of Lanarkshire before becoming Chamberlain for the Duke of Buccleuch at Buxholme, with responsibility for Selkirkshire and Teviotdale. He held this position from 1876 until 1892. He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1870. He was also Deputy Lieutenant for Selkirkshire and J.P. for Roxburghshire, as well as Selkirkshire and Lanarkshire. He was Chairman of the Managers of Hawick Cottage Hospital and President of the West Teviotdale Agricultural Society, as well as being on the committee for the Upper Teviotdale Fisheries Association. He became an Honorary Burgess of Hawick in 1881. In 1882 he was present (as Chamberlain) at the opening of the Dod Burn water works in Hawick. He was also proprietor of the lands at the Flex in the 1880s. He sold Borthwickbrae to Robert Noble in 1884 and for a time lived at Branxholme, but then moved to Cleghorn in Lanarkshire. He matriculated arms in 1893. In 1866 he married Dorothea Helen, eldest daughter of Sir Walter Elliot of Wolfelee. Their children were: Capt. Allan Ashton (1867–98), who died in Malta; Walter Blair (1870–95), who died unmarried; Mary Charlotte (b.1875), who succeeded as heir of the line; and Norman (b.1871), who died in infancy. He wrote about the history of Branxholme, including the associated Scotts of Buccleuch, for the Berwickshire Naturalists’ Club (sometimes ‘Lockhardt’), and often called ‘Eliott-Lockhart’, note also that it became ‘Elliott’ rather than ‘Elliot’).

Lockhart Place (lok-har’-plis) n. street in the Wellogate area, built in 1879 by Hawick Working Men’s Building and Investment Company, and named after the second William Eliott Lockhart. No. 9 is a grade C listed building.

Lockie (lo-kee) n. Alexander (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isabel Thomson and their children included Thomas (b.1769), Agnes (b.1772) and William (b.1777). The witnesses in 1772 were merchant John Oliver and wright James Aitkin. Andrew (17th C.) resident at Easter Essenside on the Hearth Tax roll in 1694. Probably the same Andrew married Isobel Harvie and had children, baptised in Ashkirk Parish, including John (b.1691) and Bessie (b.1693). James (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living in Denholm in 1720. He married Bessie Storie in 1719. Their children included: John (b.1720); Marion (b.1731) James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. His wife was Jean Scott. Their children included John (b.1768). James (18th C.) resident at Threephead in Roberton Parish. His name was written ‘Locie’ in 1771 when his twins James and William were baptised. Perhaps the same James was witness to a baptism in Wilton for Walter Scott at Whitfield in 1770. James (18th/19th C.) tailor in Denholm, listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. Janet (b.1798) daughter of mason William. She was still living at Borthwickbraehaugh in 1851, but described as a ‘Carrier’. Her son Walter Thomson was also there, as well as her nephew William Turnbull. Janet (b.c.1800) grocer recorded on the 1841 census for Wilton. She lived on Damside, which was perhaps the lower part of Wilton Path. Her children included Mary Hall, jessie, Betsy, John and William. By 1861 she appears to be on Dickson Street and with no occupation. John (13th/14th C.) recorded as ‘John Lok’ when he was on the inquisition of 1303/4 for inheritance of the half barony of Wilton. It seems reasonable to suppose that his named was Lockie and that he was a local man, like the others. John (17th C.) resident of Ashybank who was listed in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. William was also listed there and so probably related. John (18th C.) recorded at Denholm in 1725 when his daughter Helen was baptised in Cavers Parish. William (b.1722) and Christian (b.1727), baptised in Cavers, were probably also his children. John (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. In 1737 he witnessed a baptism for George Wallace, resident at Roughheugh. He married Elspeth Porteous in 1731 and their children included: James (b.1734); Anne (b.1736); and James (again, b.1740). It is possible he is the John who died in 1742, after whom the area of ‘Lockieshedge’ was named. John (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Mary Nichol and their children included William (b.1749). John (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Violet Laidlaw and their children included: Mary (b.1752); Janet (b.1754); Isobel (b.1757); and Violet (b.1759). His wife was probably the daughter of Adam Laidlaw and Helen Bell born in 1729. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Jane Stoddart and their children included Walter (b.1795), Margaret (b.1797) and Janet (b.1802). John (b.c.1773) resident of Sorbie in Ewesdale. In 1800 he married Jean, daughter of Thomas Dryden, blacksmith at St. Boswells. Their children were: Jean (b.1801); Catherine (b.1803), who married Robert Anderson from Langholm; Elizabeth (b.1805); Janet Church (b.1807); and James (b.1809). John (b.c.1800) gamekeeper living at Byreleeuaugh in Roberton Parish in 1841. By 1851 he was working in a factory in Galashields and in 1861 was a carter at Ladhope. His wife was Janet and their children included Alison, Margaret, Jessie, Marion, Isabella, Anne, Jane and Meriam. Patrick (17th C.) resident in Ashkirk listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. He is probably the ‘Pat’ who in 1691 witnessed a baptism for Andrew. He married Bessie Easton and their daughter Bessie was baptised in 1689. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1687 he married Margaret Waugh, as recorded in Roberton Parish. However, the marriage took place at Hassendean Kirk (perhaps one of the last there). He witnessed baptisms in Roberton
Lockie’s

Parish for George Collin in 1687 and for James Waugh in 1768. Probably the same Thomas was resident of ‘the netherend’ of Hasendean Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1715 he was a wright at Synton Parkhead. He married Helen Veitch and their children included Elizabeth (b.1715) and John (b.1717). Thomas (b.1814/5) born in Roberton Parish, he was a ‘game guard’ at Leahead on the 1851 census. In 1841 he had been visiting Hoscoteshiel, while his family were staying at Coldhouse. He could be the ‘Lockie o’ the Stinty Knowes’ mentioned in the poem ‘Hawick Immortals’. He married Margaret Hay and their children included William, Georgina, Catherine and James. William (17th C.) resident of Ashybank who was listed in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He was probably closely related to John, who was also listed there. William (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, living at ‘Whithaw’ (presumably Whitehaugh) in 1764. He married Janet Laidlaw and their children included John (b.1764), Walter (b.1767) and Rachel (b.1769). The witnesses in 1764 were Robert Ormiston and Thomas Scott. William (b.1772/3) mason at Borthwickbrae. He was living at Borthwickbrae Parkhead in 1798. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. In 1841 he was living at Borthwickbraehaugh. He married Margaret Cavers in 1795 and their children included: James (1796–1825), buried in Borthwick Waas, with the first part of the headstone unreadable; Janet (b.1798); John (b.1800); Jane (b.1802); Ann (b.1805); Isobella (b.1807); Thomas (b.1811); Euphemia (b.1813); William (1814/5–33), also buried in Borthwick Waas and Robert (b.1819). William (1788–1853) born at Stinty-Knowes, son of William and Jean Paterson. He was educated at Wilton and became schoolmaster at Stouslie in 1806, serving there for 37 years. He is listed as teacher at Stouslie among male heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1835–41. He was also known as a poet. A friend of ‘Clinty’, he wrote one of the Auld Brig poems. He also wrote ‘Farewell to Edinburgh’, a poem in celebration of the lighting of Hawick’s first gas lamps, and others, including annual odes on the Duke of Buccleuch’s birthday. He is also mentioned in a song from ‘Daft Jock Gray’, recorded in the book ‘Memoir of Robert Chambers’ (1872) – ‘There’s Lockie o’ the Stinty Knowes, There’s Nicol o’ Dick-neuk, And Bryson o’ the Priestrig, And Hall into the Heap’ [DJG]. He married Isabel Anderson (from Roberton) in Wilton Parish in 1808. In the 1841 census he is at Stouslie School with wife Isabella and children Jean (b.1808) and William (b.1814). He is still teachere there in 1851, but now living at Easter Longbaulk, with 3 grandchildren also in the house. He died at Longbaulk. William (19th C.) of William Lockie’s knitwear, founded in 1874, based on the Fore Raw and later at Riversdale Mills. He was a contributor to buying the Auld Mid Raw for demolition (sometimes written ‘Lockey’, ‘Locky’, ‘Lokie’, etc.).

Lockiesedge (lo-kee-zej) n. sometimes spelling of Lockieshedge.

Lockieshedge (lo-kee-hej, lo-kee-zej) n. area between Stirches Road and Mayfield, around the house with the same name. It was the eastern-most part of the area formerly known as ‘Roughheugh’ and the name applied to a large part of what is now Mayfield. It is first recorded as feued by Robert Langlands in two parts to John Biggar and to Robert and Mark Liddel of Whitehaugh in 1773. This second part passed to the Hart family in 1776. Apparently a beech hedge bordering the old road to Selkirk (Stirches Road) grew until the 18th century, where there are now buildings. Walter Scott was recorded living there in 1797. The 18th century high wall was demolished in 1970 when the road was realigned (named after the hedge and an early resident, John Lockie, who died in 1742; also written, presumably in error, ‘Lockiesedge’ and ‘Lockie’s Edge’).

Lockieshedge Hoose (lo-kee-hej-, lo-kee-zej-hoos) n. house in the area known as Lockieshedge, off Stirches Road, opposite Wellfield Road. Also known just as ‘Lockieshedge’ or sometimes ‘Lockiesedge’.

Lockie’s Mill (lo-kee-mill) n. William Lockie & Co., knitwear manufacturers of Riversdale Mills, founded in 1874. The company also had a small factory off Drumlanrig Square (on the Fore Raw) in the latter part of the 19th century, being a 3-storey building reached from No. 28. This now houses ‘Westfield Works’ at Nos. 27 and 28. The modern company focuses on luxury garments.

lockit (lo-kee’, -ki’) pp., arch. locked – ‘I’ll hae him lockit up for a scoundrel obtaining money by false pretences’ [JEDM], ‘…And the lilacs are lockit ticht I’ their maidenhead’ [DH].

Lodge 111 (loj-yin-u-lee-vin) n. Hawick Masonic Lodge, being Lodge St. John, No. 111. Affectionately known as ‘the three ones’. Its premises are at 33 Commercial Road, and were converted from the building of Innes, Chambers & Co., tweed merchants in 1923 (with designs by J.P. Alison). Prior to that their premises were located at Myreslawgreen. The Lodge started at least as early as 1768, when a charter gives its number as 141, this being altered later. Activity lapsed in the mid-19th century, but it was resuscitated in 1860 and has been active since then. This lodge helped to erect the Henry Scott Ridgeway Monument.

Lodge 424 (loj-fow-ur-too’ee-fow-ur) n. Lodge St. James, Border Union Royal Arch (B.U.R.A.), No. 424, being a branch of the Freemasons, with premises at 8 Union Street, built in 1893, to the designs of J.P. Alison. Before that it met every second Tuesday in Orrock Church Hall. It formed essentially out of disputes over the Volunteers, with mass resignations from the other Hawick Lodge in 1863, led by prominent townsmen such as George Hardie Fraser. The Lodge celebrates a Mid-Summer Festival of St. John. Latterly the club members have been meeting twice per month, from September to April. A history, written by James Edgar, was published in 1932.

Lodgegill (loj-gil) n. former farm on the Tarras Water, east of the Ewes valley. It was a seat of the Elliot family in the 17th and 18th centuries. Descendants of Anderson of Tushielaw were shepherds there in the 18th and 19th centuries. Robert Scott and family were living there in 1841 – ‘Callants, ride! what ails your rotten naigs? He’s making straight for Lodgegill and the craigs!’’ [HNo].

Lodgeknowe (loj-now) n. former farmstead in Cavers Parish. William Scott (servant at Coltersclee) was householder there in 1796. It is recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when John Lunn was farmer there (it is ‘Lodgeknow’ in 1796 and 1797).

Longueville

Longueville (long-vil) n. Thomas (d.c.1340) possible the earliest member of the Langlands family. One story is that he was a French Pirate, ‘the Red Rover’, who was captured attacking one of William Wallace’s ships, with the two becoming friends. A more likely story is that the family came across with William the Conqueror and settled in Scotland. It seems he was also known as ‘Thomas de Charteris’ after marrying the Charteris heiress and taking her name. It may have been that a branch of the family established themselves at Langlands and took that as their name. This early history is unclear, and further confused through the influence of historical romances such as ‘The Scottish Chiefs’ (1809) by Jane Porter, popularising earlier tales by the medieval balladeer Blind Harry. The family gained lands at Langlandshill in Peeblesshire, built the original Kinafauns Castle in Perthshire and also acquired local lands that would become the Langlands (i.e. Wilton) estate. Wallace is traditionally supposed to have visited the Langlands estate in 1297 and ‘tethered his charger to a thorn tree near the Castle Wall’.

The Longuevilles (thu-long-vilz, -long-gwuvee) n. originally Norman family, taking their name from a small town in Normandy. The Longuevilles, Earls of Buckingham, were the ancient lords, and there are several places still bearing the name in England. The family held lands in the Barony of Wilton from the early 13th century. There has also been the suggestion that this was the same family as ‘Langlands’, who are recorded as Barons of Wilton in the 15th century; this was the same family as `Langlands’, who are This early history is unclear, and further confused through the influence of historical romances such as ‘The Scottish Chiefs’ (1809) by Jane Porter, popularising earlier tales by the medieval balladeer Blind Harry. Lookup (loo-kup) n. Andrew (18th C.) writer (i.e. lawyer) and Provost of Jedburgh, who was made an Honorary Burgess of Hawick in 1776. Probably the same Andrew paid the window tax in Jedburgh in 1748. Thomas (1729/30–1811) forester for the Buccleuch estates in ‘Teviotdale-head’ in at least the period 1798–1807. He is probably the Thomas ‘Lukup’ recorded as ‘Groom and House Servant’ at Branxholme in 1778 and 1779 (working for William Ogilvie) and ‘House Servant’ in 1785 and 1786 (working for Adam Ogilvie). He may be the Thomas who married Alison Gill (or McGill) in 1771 and whose children included: Helen (b.1772); Christian (b.1775); and Robert (b.1783). The witnesses in 1772 were John Laurie (preacher at Caerlenrig) and John Kyle. He died at Branxholme and was buried at St. Mary’s. William (17th C.) listed as squire and servant to Walter Earl of Buccleuch. His surname is transcribed ‘Linkyve’, but it seems likely this was ‘Lookup’. He was listed in the deceased Earl’s inventory in 1633, when he was owed for work done at Branxholme and Hawick.

Lord Goldielands (lōrd-gōld-ee-lǐndz) n. subsidiary title used by the Scotts of Buccleuch, along with Earl of Deloraine and Viscount Hermitage. It was created in 1706 for Henry, 3rd son of James, 1st Duke of Buccleuch, and became extinct in 1807 when Henry Scott, 4th Earl of Deloraine, died.

Lord Heathfield see Gen. George Augustus Elliott

Lord Herries (lōrd-he-reez) n. hereditary title of the Herries and then Maxwell families, who owned the Barony of Feu-Rule until the mid-17th century (see Herries and Maxwell; written ‘Herris’ and variants).

Lord Harry’s Rant (lōrd-ha-reez-rawn’) n. song appearing in Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’, published in Hawick in 1784. It is said there to be about one of the Earls of Deloraine, and this may have been Henry Scott (1676–1730), 1st Earl of Deloraine, 2nd son of Ann, Duchess of Buccleuch. With the first lines being ‘Give ear to my frolicsome ditty, Of one that a wager did lay . . .’, it has been printed in several forms under different names, such as ‘The Rant’. It tells the story of a gentleman who made a bet that he could cross the city without saying anything to the night watchmen. But he is arrested by one, and only freed by the intercession of the Lord Mayor’s daughter.

Lord Lieutenant (lōrd-loo-te-nin’) n. official position in a county, originally set up in the late 18th century to be responsible for maintaining local law and order and calling out the militias in times of disturbance. It is a non-political position, the appointee being the Crown’s representative in the county, presenting medals on behalf of the Queen, organising royal visits, etc. They also have responsibility for the Territorial Army and Justices of the Peace. The position is typically held by a retired senior military officer, peer or business person. Lieutenants are among the few people allowed to fly the Lion Rampant.

Due to local government reorganisation the regions covered are no longer counties, but referred to as ‘lieutenancy areas’, the local one being ‘Roxburgh, Ettrick and Lauderdale’.

Lord Montague (lōrd-mou-tu-gew) n. title of Henry James Montagu Scott uncle and guardian to the young 5th Duke of Buccleuch, who was made an Honorary Burgess along with the Duke when they travelled through Hawick in 1821.

Lord o Buccleuch (lōrd-ō-bu-kloo) n. title used by the head of the Scotts, also known as Scott of Branxholme and Buccleuch. The 1st Lord of Buccleuch was Walter, ‘the Bold Buccleuch’, who was raised to the peerage in 1606 and died in 1611. His son Walter was 2nd Lord until elevated to an Earldom in 1619. However, several of the earlier chiefs were called ‘Lord’, this being formerly synonymous with ‘Laird’. There were at least 10 Lairds before ‘the Bold Buccleuch’, with the first to sit in the Scottish Parliament as Lord of Buccleuch being Sir David Scott, 7th Laird, in 1481.

Lord o Hawick (lōrd-ō-hlk) n. title of the Barons of Hawick, particular used of the Douglases, responsible for law enforcement around Hawick in the early 16th century.

Lord Olifer (lōrd-o-lee-vur) n. nickname for Robert Oliver in the 17th century, and his son, also Robert in the early 18th century, as well as for an earlier Oliver in Falside in Southdean Parish – ‘Lord Olifer embalmed in song, A stranger to fear, a foe to wrong; Like sturdy Hab, branched from your race, Your lineage royalty would grace’ [WNK].

Lord Neaves see Neaves, Charles

Lord Pei Huill (lōrd-pi-hul) n., arch. a snobbish person – ‘. . . the man with the airs and graces was inevitably ‘Lord Pei Huill’’ [WL].

Lord Polwarth (lōrd-pol-wurth) n. the present head of the Scotts of Harden is Henry Alexander Hepburne-Scott, 10th Lord Polwarth. The first local Lord Polwarth was Hugh Scott, 11th Baron of Harden.

The Lord’s Trei (thū-lōrdz-tri) n. former tree near the western side of the road shortly before coming to the Caa Knowe. Its position is indicated by a raised area in the field. This is probably an ancient burial cairn (about 33 ft in diameter) with an enclosure around it. It may be related to the Caa Knowe cairn, which is nearby. The date that the tree grew in the centre is not Lord Warden (lord-warden) n. official government position from the early 14th century until the Union of the Crowns in 1603, with responsibility for security of the lands around the Border. There were Lord Wardens of both Scotland and England, with the land split into West, Middle and East portions (sometimes just West and East), with Hawick lying in the Scottish Middle Marches. Sir James Douglas (‘The Black Douglas’) was the first recorded appointee on the Scottish side, in 1314. The Wardenship was hereditary with the Douglas family until forfeited in 1455. Afterwards there were usually 3 separate Scottish Wardens. The relevant Wardens for Hawick are approximately: Sir James Douglas, from 1314; Sir William Douglas, from 1343; Sir Archibald Douglas, 1364 and 1368–1400; Archibald 4th Earl of Douglas, from 1400; James 7th Earl of Douglas, sometime; William Douglas, 2nd Earl of Angus, from 1433; William, 8th Earl of Douglas, from 1450; William Douglas of Cluny, from 1464; James, Earl of Buchan, from 1479; Walter Ker of Cessford, from 1502; Ralph and Andrew Ker, from 1503; Alexander, 3rd Lord Hume, from 1510; Sir Robert Ker, from 1514; Sir Andrew Ker of Cessford, from 1515; Anthony Darcy, from 1516; Archibald Douglas, 6th Earl of Angus, from 1525; Sir Walter Ker of Cessford, from 1536; Sir Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst, from 1538; Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch, from 1550; James, Earl of Bothwell, from 1558; Sir Walter Ker of Cessford, from 1560; Earl of Angus (Archibald Douglas), from 1574; William Ker of Cessford, from 1583; Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst, from 1584; Earl of Arran (James Stewart), from 1584; William Ker of Cessford, from 1585; Duke of Lennox (Ludovic Stewart), from 1592; Sir Robert Ker c.1594–1603 (see also Warden).

lorimer (lo-ri-mur, -ree) n., arch. someone who makes metal parts for bridles and saddles, a saddler – ‘Decorns Thomas Oliver to content and pay to James Scott, lorimer, 3 half firlots of aits eitten by his guids and geir ...’ [BR1642].

Lorimer (lo-ri-mur) n. Sir Robert Stodart, R.S.A. (1864–1929) born in Edinburgh, he became a noted architect and promoter of the Arts and Crafts movement in Scotland. He designed the National War Memorial at Edinburgh Castle. Locally he was responsible for the design of the 1908 wooden chancel screen in St. Cuthbert’s, the 1897/8 renovation of Fatlips Castle, the clock tower in Gala Burgh Chambers and the War Memorial in Kelso.

Lorraine (lo-ri-n) n. Agnes (16th/17th C.) suggested to have been a daughter of Hector of Hardwod (although there is no evidence for this). She married Martin Elliot in 1618 she held the liferent of half a husbandland in Lilliesleaf and gifted the lands to her son and heir William Elliot. In 1625 she and William Elliot had a sasine of lands in Lilliesleaf. Agnes (18th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. In 1745 she was charged by the Kirk Session of fornication with Thomas Barry, on the birth of her unnamed child. She had to appear before the congregation in sackcloth no less than 11 times. Probably the same Agnes appears to have married Thomas Barrie in Kirkton Parish in 1748. Alexander (14th C.) said to have been taken prisoner at the Battle of Neville’s Cross. It has been suggested that he was a son of Eustace, but there is no definite evidence of their relationship. In 1359 he was granted custody of the lands of Richard of Kirkbride by Edward III, presumably for supporting the English King. It may be that he was the progenitor of the Berwickshire Lorraines (several named Alexander), who were Sheriff-Clerks in Duns in the 17th and 18th centuries there. Alexander (16th/17th C.) resident of Kelso Parish. In 1692 he and his wife Marion Rutherford had a son James baptised. Among the witnesses was George Lorraine, who was surely a relative. It seems likely he was descended from the earlier Alexander. An Alexander recorded in Edinburgh in 1621 may have been his son, as well as John, who was a writer in Duns and married a daughter of Sir Alexander Don. Alexander (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish and then gardener at Oakwood and Middleford. He was probably related to William and Robert, who were also in Ashkirk at the same time; they may all have been brothers and sons of George and Janet Fleming. His brother Robert (a gardener) witnessed the baptism in 1697 and probably the one in 1691 (which is hard to read) along with James ... He married Jean Ker and their children (several baptised in Selkirk) included: Jean (b.1691); Mary (b.1693); Margaret (b.1697); Lilias (b.1698); Elspeth (b.1700); and Margaret (again, b.1705). Archibald (17th/18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His son James was baptised in Bedrule in 1698. His name is recorded as ‘Archibald Lorring’. He may have been a son of Walter and Janet Shortreed. Beatrix (17th C.) recorded in 1643 in Ruletownhead in the valuation of Abbotrule Parish. Her lands were valued at £10. Edward (15th C.) Englishman who was the progenitor of the Barons of Kirkharle in Northumberland.
It is unclear what connection there was to the Roxburghshire Lorraines; however, the forename Edward was also known in that branch. He was said to have lands in the Durham area. In 1425 he married Johanna, daughter and heiress of William de Strother. He thus became owner of Kirkharle, and neighbouring lands, including the Northumbrian farm of Hawick. He was probably succeeded by his son Edward. Edward (15th/16th C.) possibly son of James. He may have been the uncle of Hector of Harwood, for whom he witnessed a sasine in 1531. The witnesses after him were William and Patrick. Edward (16th C.) son of John who held lands in Blainslie near Melrose. His name appears to be written ‘Lorne’. In 1579 he had sasine for lands in Blainslie as well as the reversion for the lands. Edward (d.c.1598) Laird of Harwood in the late 1500s, son of Hector, who he succeeded in 1573. In 1573 he was summoned to appear before the Privy Council, along with Sir Thomas Turnbull and others for their raid on the house of Robert Kerr of Woodhead; however, they were acquitted because Kerr had been assisting the fugitive Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst. He owned Hawthornside as well as Harwood, and also held the lands of Appotside (perhaps through marriage). In 1578/9 he was ‘guidsone’ (i.e. son-in-law) to Sir Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule, when he was among men required to be presented to the Privy Council, with John Johnstone of that Ilk as cautor, for the murder of Thomas Shiel. In 1580 he was ‘younger of Harwood’ when he was in a bond with the Turnbulls of Bedrule and Barhills to keep peace with the Turnbulls of Minto and others; at that point the Lorraines of Harwood were united with the Turnbulls of Bedrule and Barhills, and feuding with the Turnbulls of Minto, Wauchope, Bewlie and Hobsburn. In 1583 William Douglas of Cavers was cautor for him. He is probably the ‘Larde of Harret’ who signed a bond of assurance with the English Warden in 1584 (along with Gledstains, Elliots, Armstrongs and others). He was recorded in 1585 along with William Douglas of Cavers as cautors for John Douglas of Whitriggs. He and John Turnbull of Minto were cautors for ‘Hobbe Elliot, called Vicar’s Hobb’ in 1589. Also in 1589 James Langlands of that Ilk was cautor for him. About 1590 he was recorded among landed men in the Borders. He is probably the Edward who (along with Gilbert) signed a bond written by Sir John Forster to try to end family feuds on the Border in 1595/6. In 1580 he married Margaret, daughter of Sir Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule. He is said to have been an unassuming man, although his wife was the opposite. She apparently roused the ire of the Turnbull Clan, who laid waste to Harwood in the years 1598–1605. Hector and William, probably his sons or other close relatives, were slain, along with his wife’s servant. Flocks and herds were also carried off, as well as timber. The feud only ended when an appeal was made to the Earl of Angus. His son Hector succeeded him by 1599, while Edward and James were other surviving sons, and he may also have had sons William, Walter and Fergus. In 1606 his son James was declared a fugitive. Edward (16th/17th C.) younger son of Edward and Margaret Turnbull. He is mentioned several times as ‘Edward the younger of Harwood’. Edward of Harwood (b.c.1600) son of Hector, with his mother possibly being a daughter of Robert Elliot of Redheugh. His father was killed when he was quite young and his uncle James served as his tutor. He is recorded in an instrument of 1619 being required to marry Margaret Hamilton, sister to Francis Hamilton, who was heir of James Hamilton, formerly owner of lands in the Rule valley; this was under the instructions of his superior, Lord Hurricanes. In fact Margaret married Rev. William Weir, who became minister at Hobkirk; it may be that not fulfilling the marriage contract meant that Edward had to pay a fine to Lord Hurricanes. In 1630 he is recorded in a ‘contract of wadsett’ assigning the lands of Harwood and Hawthornside to William Weir, minister of Hobkirk; this followed the contract of 1598 when his father Hector had borrowed money from James Hamilton. In 1631 he granted sasine of Hartshaugh to Gilbert Elliot. Also in 1631 he had a precept of clare constat and sasine for Harwood and Hawthornside, granted by Andrew, Lord Jedburgh; this renewal confirms that he was great-grandson of Hector. In 1632 he and Rev. Weir were involved in another wadset of Harwood to Gilbert Elliot (son of ‘Gibbie wi the Gowden Gaertins’). In 1632 he had a sasine for Appotside, granted by Rev. William Weir, with the consent of Francis, son of James Hamilton, as well as for Tythehouse. In 1633 he had a wadset with Gilbert Elliot for the lands of Tythehouse. In 1637 he and Gilbert Elliot granted the lands of Harwood and Tythehouse to William, eldest son of Simon Elliot of the Binks. He had thus ended his family’s ownership of Harwood, but held onto the small farm of Appotside. In 1643 he is listed as owner of Appotside, valued at £200. He is probably the ‘Laird Lorran’ who led a group of 20 or so men who captured Royalist leader William Murray after the Battle of Philiphaugh. He is recorded as ‘of Apotsyd’ as witness to a contract of 1648 and again in 1649. He witnessed a marriage contract in 1652 for Robert Elliott and Margaret Riddell. In 1654 he is described as the ‘heritable proprietor’ when he and his eldest son Walter had a contract of ‘wadset’ with William Elliot of Harwood and the Binks for the lands of Appotside. In 1656 he resigned his lands of Appotside and Tythehouse in favour of William Elliot of Harwood; this was with the agreement of his wife, Maisie Elliot, and also mentions his eldest son, Walter. An additional contract reserves for him the ‘mill, multures, sequels, suckin, kilm, houses, mill-lands lying beyond the water dam on the south side’ of Appotside, along with pasture for a few animals. He signed his surname as ‘Lorran’. In 1659 he appears to be the tenant of Appotside Mill, along with Walter Riddell (tenant at Appotside), when the ‘liferent’ of the lands was given to Christine Grahamslaw (new wife of William Elliot of Harwood). In 1662 he was listed among the debtors to the deceased William Elliot of Harwood; Walter ‘in Whyttchaugh’ was also listed, and probably his son. In about 1663 the Land Tax Rolls record that he paid tax on £300 at Appotside. He married Maisie Elliot, who may have been from the Elliots of Stobs (his neighbours) or the Elliots of Reidheugh (his mother’s family). His eldest son Walter was perhaps the Walter who married Janet Shortreed and lived in Hawick Parish. He may also have had a daughter Alison, married to Robert Scott, whose daughter Elspeth was born in Kelso in 1635. He may also have had a younger son George, who had a daughter baptised in Hawick the same day as a daughter of Walter. He probably remained at Appotside until his death, ending his family’s association of about 250 years with the lands around Harwood. Eustace (d.bef. 1374) probably ancestor of the Lorraines of Harwood, his surname is given as ‘de Lorreyne’ and similar variants, while his forename is also ‘Eustachius’ and ‘Tassyn’. He was involved in events on both sides of the Border and is recorded between 1323 and 1374 (which is long enough that it is possible there were 2 generations here). It is not known when he was born or who his parents were. Although sometimes referred to as a knight, it is unclear which side of the Border this came from. He held land in Roxburghshire, including ‘Heroude’ (which is surely Harwood in Rulewater), as well as in Dumfriesshire (including ‘Coschogill’) and in Ayrshire.

In 1323 he was given safe passage to meet the Earl of Atholl in England, with the stipulation that he was not to go more than 10 leagues across the Border. In 1331 he was among men accused of illegally hunting on the Earl of Angus’ lands in Northumberland. In 1333 he was a Scotsman appointed by Edward III as one of the Commissioners to inquire into the valuation of Berwick. He was a Commissioner for the Treaty of Perth in 1335, having his Scottish lands restored at that time. About the same year he was among a few Scottish noblemen who swore fealty to Edward III and in 1336 was granted a pardon by the English King for crimes committed in Scotland. In 1340 he had remission (now from the Scottish King) for the killing of Robert Lauder, although no details of the incident are given. In 1343 he was given compensation by Edward III for lands lost in Scotland. He was also Warden of Roxburgh Castle (with Sir William Douglas as Governor at the same time) in 1346, when the Castle was surrendered to the English (specifically Henry Percy and Ralph Neville). He had a son (perhaps on the English side) captured at the Battle of Neville’s Cross (by Robert Bertram), for whom ransom was paid in 1347. He was ‘Eustacio Loreyn’ when he witnessed to a charter for Adam of Rule, for the lands of Altonburn, in about 1354. Around that time (and certainly by 1357) he forfeited his lands to Hugh Blair of that Ilk, presumably for acting against the Scottish King; the lands were confirmed to Hugh’s son James Blair in 1374. In 1357/8 he witnessed a charter of confirmation by John Copeland to John Ker for lands in Altonburn; at that point he was ‘of Chatto’. He was still ‘of Chatto’ in 1358 when he witnessed a charter for William of Blakedene, confirming lands of Molle and Altonburn to John Ker. He was probably related to James, recorded in the 1350s and 60s, including witnessing the 2 charters of 1357/8 and 1358 with him. It has been suggested that James (perhaps ancestor of the Harwood line), Alexander (perhaps ancestor of the Berwickshire line), Robert (perhaps ancestor of the Hummelknowes line) and William may all have been his sons, but there is no definitive evidence for any of these connections. Eustace (15th C.) recorded as a witness to a ratification of a gift of land in Edinburgh in 1457. He was surely a descendant of the earlier Eustace. Fergus (d.1616) murdered at ‘Gaithouslok’ (i.e. Gatehousecote) by Andrew and Cuthbert McDougal, tenants in Stonedge. They were apparently caught ‘with the bloodie hand’ and committed to Jedburgh Tolbooth in 1618. He was surely related to Walter, tenant in Gatehousecote, and it has been suggested that he might have been a younger son of Edward of Harwood. It is unclear where his forename came from, but there is a Fergus Turnbull recorded a century earlier. George (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk. His daughter Elspeth was baptised there in 1641, with his surname being recorded as ‘Lorne’. George (17th C.) described as ‘in Cavers’, along with William, in a Hawick magistrates court case of 1642, when Samuel Rutherford, servant of the Laird of Cavers, accused a large group of his drinking friends of stealing his wallet. George (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Anna (or perhaps Janet) Fleming and their children included John (b.1655). The baptism was witnessed by John Lister and Simon Adamson and was the same day as Walter’s daughter Isobel was baptised; this hints that he may have been Walter’s brother, and hence a younger son of Edward of Harwood. It has been suggested that he may also have had children Robert, William, Isobell and Alexander. George (17th C.) resident of Abbotrule Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Perhaps the same George was recorded in 1691 when he and another man were paid for mowing in the account book of Dame Magdalene Nicholson, widow of Sir Gilbert Elliott of Stobs. George (d.1720) servant of George Scott in Easter Groundiston. His children, baptised in Wilton Parish, included: John (b.1703); George (b.1706); Agnes (b.1709); and Janet (b.1714). The baptism in 1706 was done along with a son of John Lamb, with witnesses Adam Scott and Walter Scott. The 1706 baptism was done at Wilton Common, with witnesses James Irvine and Will Scott. The use of the Wilton ‘morthcloth’ for his funeral is recorded, and he was transcribed ‘in Coghall’ (probably ‘Boghall’). The death of ‘Agnes Lorran in Heap’ in 1735 was probably his daughter. It has been suggested that he may have been son of John and grandson of George and Janet Fleming. George (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Helen Nichol in 1727 and their children included Helen (b.1731). He may have been the son of George born in 1706 and the later George may have been his own son. George (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Isabel Hart in 1752. He may be the George who witnessed a baptism for John in 1755. He may be the George whose funeral is recorded in Wilton in 1770. He may have been son of the earlier George from Wilton. George (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Orchard in 1763 and 1765 (and hence surely related to John, who was also there at about the same time) and at Hummelknowes in 1772. His children included: Margaret (b.1763); Helen (b.1765); an unnamed son (b.1767); and John (b.1772). Gilbert ‘Gib’ (16th C.) probably son of Hector. He was listed in 1579 among Scotsmen accused by ‘the Laird of Pansoun, Englishman’ of raiding into England; he was stated there to be son of the Laird of Harwood. He was also on a list in 1579/80 of men charged to make recompense to Englishmen they had acted against; his cautioner then was the Laird of Bedrule. He is also recorded in 1583/4 when he was denounced along with Sir Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule and others for not appearing before the Privy Council. He is probably the Gilbert who (along with Edward) signed a bond written by Sir John Forster to try to end family feuds on the Border in 1595/6. He is probably the Gilbert, who along with Hector ‘Lorance’ (probably his brother) is recorded being fined for crimes against William Hall of Otterburn in 1596. He could be the ‘Gib Lorreyne’ listed along with ‘Archy Trumble’ in a complaint of a raid into England in 1597. In 1599 Hector Turnbull of Wauchope complained that he and Hector, ‘father-brothers of Hector Lorane of that Ilk’ were involved in the slaughter of David Turnbull, heir of Wauchope, and were declared rebels for failing to appear. He could be the ‘Gilbert Lorreyne of Hawdon’ recorded in 1601 when Richard Fenwick of Stanton accused him of stealing livestock from him. He may also be the Gib ‘of Apputtsyde’ recorded in 1601 along with Hector and John, as well as several Turnbulls, when they were accused of crimes by an Englishman. He is probably the ‘Gib Lorayne, called Auld Gib’ who was listed as a fugitive in 1605, along with ‘Jock’s John’ and many Armstrongs, Elliotis, Turnbulls, etc. He was listed again as a fugitive for failing to attend another Border Commissioners’ court in Jedburgh in 1606, along with his brother Hector; he was then ‘Gib Lorayne, called Old Gib’. This suggests that he may have had a son who was ‘Young Gib’. It has been suggested that he married a sister of William Scott of Tushielaw, but there is no evidence for this. Grizel (17th C.) resident of Gatehousecote listed in 1684 among people who failed to appear in Jedburgh when cited. The others included Margaret (who may have been her sister) and Andrew Shiel. They were probably Covenanting objectors. She was also listed in 1684 along with Margaret and Beatrix, possibly her sisters. It has been suggested she might have been daughter of Walter (but there is no proof for this). Hector (16th C.) owner of the lands of Harwood and Hawthornside according to a charter granted by William Lord Herries in 1531 (incorrectly noted as in one source as 1561). He was the grandson (and heir) of James and son of John. He may have been a minor when he succeeded his grandfather (his father presumably predeceasing his grandfather). He seems to have been the first Hector in his family, so perhaps his mother was a Turnbull (where this forename was known at the time, and with 2 Turnbulls witnessing the 1531 charter). It was stated that the earlier charters for the lands had been accidentally burned, and hence a new charter was given in 1531. The sasine for his lands was witnessed by Edward, William and Patrick, who may have been his uncles, or other near relatives. He is probably the ‘Ecto’ Lord of Harwode’ who had a bond of 1557 along with Turnbulls, Ellists and others, to present ‘Will Nyksone, called Gymmerhom’. He is probably the ‘Lard of Harwod’ listed in 1564 among Border lairds who were ordered to support the warden, Ker of Cessford. He was succeeded by his son Edward and probably also had sons Hector and Gilbert, and perhaps daughters Agnes and Marion. He probably died before 1573. In 1583/4 he was probably the Hector of Harwood on a list of Borderers ordered by the Privy Council to render their houses for the King’s use (making it somewhat unclear when he died). He is probably the Hector recorded on Monipennie’s list of Border Lairds in the 1590s (even although he was deceased by then). His son Edward is recorded in 1578/9 as ‘guidsone’ to Sir Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule, and hence his wife was probably sister of James and son of John. He may have been a minor when he succeeded his grandfather (his father presumably predeceasing his grandfather). He seems to have been the first Hector in his family, so perhaps his mother was a Turnbull (where this forename was known at the time, and with 2 Turnbulls witnessing the 1531 charter). It was stated that the earlier charters for the lands had been accidentally burned, and hence a new charter was given in 1531. The sasine for his lands was witnessed by Edward, William and Patrick, who may have been his uncles, or other near relatives. He is probably the ‘Ecto’ Lord of Harwode’ who had a bond of 1557 along with Turnbulls, Ellists and others, to present ‘Will Nyksone, called Gymmerhom’. He is probably the ‘Lard of Harwod’ listed in 1564 among Border lairds who were ordered to support the warden, Ker of Cessford. He was succeeded by his son Edward and probably also had sons Hector and Gilbert, and perhaps daughters Agnes and Marion. He probably died before 1573. In 1583/4 he was probably the Hector of Harwood on a list of Borderers ordered by the Privy Council to render their houses for the King’s use (making it somewhat unclear when he died). He is probably the Hector recorded on Monipennie’s list of Border Lairds in the 1590s (even although he was deceased by then). His son Edward is recorded in 1578/9 as ‘guidsone’ to Sir Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule, and hence his wife was probably sister of Turnbull of Bedrule. Hector (16th/17th C.) son of Hector of Harwood and brother of Edward and Gib. He is probably the Hector, who along with Gilbert ‘Lorance’ is recorded being fined for crimes against William Hall of Otterburn in 1596. In 1599 Hector Turnbull of Wauchope complained that he and Gilbert, ‘father-brothers of Hector Lorane of that Ilk’ were involved in the slaughter of David Turnbull, heir of Wauchope, and were declared rebels for failing to appear. He is probably the Hector of Apputtsyde’ listed in 1601 along with Gib and John, along with several Turnbulls, when they were accused of crimes by an Englishman. He was listed in 1606, along with his brother ‘Auld Gib’, among men declared as fugitives for not attending a Borders Commissioners’ court in Jedburgh. Hector (c.1582–1604) son of Edward and grandson of Hector. He was Laird of Harwood and was succeeded by his grandson Hector, probably son of his own son Edward. A contract of 1598 with James Hamilton describes a loan (of £1000) from Hamilton, and how he will inherit the lands of Harwood and Hawthornside, but with Hamilton receiving the lands if he defaulted on the loan. This was confirmed in a contract of 1600, where he was to be infested in the lands, with the loan from Hamilton now being almost £1200. In 1602 the wardship of his lands was granted to James Hamilton, as well as ‘the marriage of Hector Lorane, now of Harwode’ and the marriage of any other male heirs who might succeed later; he was still a minor at this point, since he was described as ‘apparent of Harwood’. Hamilton also had a charter for the lands of Tythhouse and Aputtside. It seems likely that in about 1602 he married a daughter of Robert Elliot of Redheugh and Marion Hamilton, who was the sister of James Hamilton (who held the rights of his marriage). However, his wife’s first name is not recorded and it is not known if she remarried after his early death. He was killed ‘with schotis of hagbutis and pistolettis’ as part of the feud between Lady Appotside (his mother, daughter of the Laird of Bedrule) and other local Turnbulls. After his death the lands of Harwood and Hawthornside reverted to the superior, William, Lord Herries, until taken temporarily by James Hamilton. He probably had a single child, Edward, who succeeded. Hector of Harwood (16th/17th C.) heir to his grandfather Hector. He is recorded in a deed of 1631 for the lands of Harwood and Hawthornside; William and Patrick were witnesses to the associated sasine. He was the last Lorraine Laird of Harwood, selling the lands, along with Tythhouse and Appotside to Simon Elliot of the Binks in 1637. He married a daughter of Robert Elliot, 16th of Redheugh, whose brother was William Elliot of Hartshaugh. Dr. Herbert James Bell (1852–1909) son of Rev. Joseph, minister of Tinwald and Caerlave-rock. He was great-great-grandson of William, servitor to John Scott of Gorrenberry, and hence was descended from the Lorraines of Harwood. He graduated from Edinburgh University, then spending 3 years in the U.S.A. before commencing in medical practice in England. He moved to Hawick in about 1889, taking over from Dr. Penman. He lived at 31 Bridge Street. He served as surgeon to the Mechanics’ Friendly Society and was medical officer to the Hawick Post Office. He was also a member of Hawick School Board, was an elder in Hawick Parish Church and served as President of Hawick R.F.C. He was a Unionist in politics and was President of the Hawick Constitutional Club. He once stood as a local councillor. He spent 1902 as a government medical officer on the Gold Coast in Africa. From 1903 he was medical officer for Stobs Camp. His wife was Janet Hewat (1861–1935), who communicated with George Tancred regarding the Lorraines of Harwood. Their children were: Joseph Currie (b.1886), who was also a doctor; Edith Dickson Bell (b.1887), who married David Bell and secondly H.S. Davidson; Janet Hewat (b.1889), born in Hawick, who married Charles MacLeod; Alice Mary Neilson (b.1891), also born in Hawick, who married Nicholas Vass; and Richard Hewat Bell (b.1894), also born in Hawick, who married Mary Gould. He is buried in Welloagate Cemetery. Hugh (13th C.) recorded in about the period 1210–22 when he and his wife Ada, daughter and heiress of Simon Fraser, renewed a charter to Kelso Abbey. This was for the church of Keith-Humbie in East Lothian. His name is given as ‘Hugo Lorens’, which is presumably ‘Lorraine’. However, it is unclear how he was related to other Lorraines. James (d.1346) said to have been a ‘Banneret’ who was killed at the Battle of Neville’s Cross. His name is given as ‘James Loreyn’. It is unclear if he was on the Scottish or English side, and how he might have been related to Eustace, who was Warden of Roxburgh Castle at that time. James (14th C.) witnessed in 1354 to a charter of Robert of Alton relating to the chantry at the Church of Roxburgh. He was also witness to the charter granting the lands of Altonburn to the Kers in 1357/8 and another granting them further lands in Sprouston in 1358. In 1357/8 he was granted an annuity of £20 by Edward III, for having lost most of his Scottish lands on account of supporting England, and this was repeated the following year. In 1357/8 he witnessed a charter for John Copeland and another in 1358 for William of Blakedene, both relating to the lands of Altonburn (and both also witnessed by Eustace). Also in 1358 he was granted the Barony of Caverton in Roxburghshire, and in 1361 received custody of the lands of Old Roxburgh, formerly belonging to the deceased Nicholas de Seymour. In 1365 he witnessed a quitclaim by Joan, wife of John of Copeland. In about 1370 he witnessed a grant of lands in Lessuden to Melrose Abbey. He is recorded as being ‘de Lorreyne’, ‘Loreyne’, ‘Loreyn’ and ‘Lorreyn’.

He was probably directly related to Eustace (perhaps his son or brother), who was recorded in the 1330s to 50s. One possibility is that he was son of Eustace and direct ancestor of the later Lorraines of Harwood. James (15th C.) recorded in 1454/5 when he attempted to recover the lands of Coschogill in the Regality of Drumlanrig from John Blair of Adamton. These had been in the hands of the Blairs since forfeited by Eustace about a century earlier. Given the court case to recover some of the family lands in Dunfriesshire, it seems clear that he was a direct descendant of Eustace, and either was already Laird of Harwood, or succeeded in recovering these lands at about the same time. Probably the same James was on an inquest held in Dumfries in 1451/2 regarding the lands of Sir James Douglas, and he was likely also the Lorraine who witnessed a land transfer to a Bailie of Dumfries in 1453. Perhaps the same James was a member of an inquest at Jedburgh Forest in 1439, relating to succession of the lands of John Douglas of Bonjedward. He was surely related to the nearly contemporary John of Harwood, perhaps his brother. James (15th/16th C.) mentioned in a charter of 1531 to his grandson Hector, by which time he was deceased. His son (and father of Hector of Harwood) may have been John. It has been suggested that he was son of John of Harwood, recorded in 1464/5, and descended from Eustace. He is recorded as ‘Jacobi lorane’ in 1494/5 when William Douglas of Cavers was fined for his non-appearance at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. Probably the same James ‘Loren of Herwod’ was part of an assize in 1507. He may have had sons John, Edward, William and Patrick (the latter 3 being witnesses to the sasine in 1531 for Hector, listed in this order); however, there are no documents to confirm any of this. Nevertheless, there is evidence that John was father of Hector, and hence presumably John was his son. James (16th C.) listed in 1547 among residents of ‘Overtoune of Blanslie’ near Melrose. His surname is given as ‘Lorne’, but it seems likely this was Lorraine. It is unclear how he would have been related to other Lorraines, but it has been suggested that he could have been a son of John of Harwood. He married Agnes Lamb and his son Edward had a ‘precept of clare constat’ for his father’s lands in Blainslie in about 1579. James of Appotside (16th/17th C.) 2nd son of Edward of Harwood and Margaret Turnbull. In 1598 he was implicated in the slaughter of David Turnbull of Wauchope near his house. This was no doubt part of the ongoing feud between the Turnbulls and Lorraines. Note that his younger brother William was killed by Turnbulls in 1600 and his older brother Hector in 1604. In 1605 he is recorded as ‘Jacobo Lorane fratri Hectoris Lorane de Harwode’ when he had remission for being involved in the murder of David Turnbull of Wauchope. In 1606 he was denounced for resisting a messenger that came to apprehend the fugitive William Turnbull of Braidhaugh. In 1606/7 he was recorded as brother of the deceased Hector of Harwood and ‘propinquior agnatus’ (i.e. closer relative) to Hector, on his father Edward’s side; he was thus appointed as tutor to his young nephew Edward. In 1607 Thomas Home, Burgess of Musselburgh was cautioned for him to appear before the Privy Council to answer the charges brought against him by Thomas Turnbull of Wauchope and Hector Turnbull of Barnhills, namely ‘for presenting bended pistolets to their breasts for their slaughter’. Also in 1607 he was son of Edward of Harwood when he petitioned the Privy Council, claiming that he never received the charge and hence did not appear to be warded in Edinburgh Tolbooth. He paid a fine, but it is unclear if he was imprisoned afterwards. In 1618/9 he was witness to a bond between Walter Turnbull of Bedrule and Adam Turnbull of the Townhead of Abbotrule. In 1619 there was a complaint that he had threatened William Ker (younger of Yair) with a hagbut when he was riding near the headwaters of Rule. He was denounced a rebel for failing to appear, but it is unclear whether or not he escaped punishment. There is no information about whether he married or had children. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Ancrum Parish. He had a marriage contract with Isobel Bairnfather in 1657, in which she has sasine of ‘ane nether hous and two rigs of arrable land in nether ancrem’. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Stiches who was given 10 shillings by Wilton Parish in 1704. He may be the person transcribed as ‘Jamnet Lorne’ (possibly at Easter Heap) who was given money the previous year. He was probably related to Patrick and William, who were recorded at Heap in 1650. James (17th/18th C.) recorded as ‘sometime in Cleithaugh’ in Southdean Parish. His daughter Bessie was baptised in Cavers Parish in 1708, with the child’s father engaging for the child in his absence. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was at ‘Coldfolds’ (probably Cawfaulks) in 1750, Broadlee in 1753 and Clarilaw in 1758. He married Bessie Scott and their children included: Samuel (b.1750); James (b.1753); and Betty (b.1758). The witnesses in 1750 were Thomas Riddell and James Simpson, in 1753 were James Dryden and James Martin and in 1758 were James Dryden and Andrew Blyth. He is probably the James who witnessed a baptism for John Rutherford in 1779. He could be the James who died in Wilton in 1811, with Betty dying in 1812. James (18th/19th C.) married Betty Scott in Wilton Parish in 1809. Jean (d.1769) resident of Doorpool. She is buried in Hobkirk Cemetery, with the funeral of William being recorded the same day. Dr. Joseph Currie (1886–1945) son of Hawick doctor Herbert. He graduated from Edinburgh University and was admitted to the Royal College of Surgeons. It is said that in 1907 he moved to become medical officer for the Burmah Oil Company in Rangoon. During WWI he served in the R.A.M.C. as a Lieutenant and then Captain. Afterwards he was a surgeon in Edinburgh. He married 3 times, to Margaret Kennedy, Alice Wilson and Margaret Young. He had a son Herbert Derrick Bell (1913–82), who played rugby for Scotland. John of Harwood (15th C.) member of the panel in 1464/5 that ruled on the inheritance of the Barony of Cavers by Archibald Douglas. He is listed as ‘John Lorane of Harwood’. He was probably a descendant of Eustace. He was surely closely related to the James who was recorded in 1454/5, perhaps his brother. He may have been father of James of Harwood and hence direct ancestor of later Loraines of Harwood. John of Lorraine (15th/16th C.) probably son of James and father of Hector. He is probably the John whose seal is recorded among Rutherford charters, showing a lion rampant and the words ‘S iohanes LORAN’. He is recorded in 1493 when the Sheriff, William Douglas of Cavers, was fined for failure to produce him at the Court of the Justiciary in Jedburgh (unless this was a different generation); he was again recorded in 1494/5 for failing to appear. Given that Hector was served heir to his grandfather James in 1531, he must have already been deceased by then. He was explicitly stated to have been father of Hector in the ‘Acta Dominorum’ for 1535/6, relating to a claim made against his son by James Wallace of ‘Cornell’, son and heir of Adam Wallace of Craigie. As well as a son Hector, he may have had children James (connected with Blainslie), John (perhaps father of ‘Jock’s John’) and Bessie (also in Blainslie, married to Michael Dickson) . John (16th C.) recorded in 1574 as owner of property in Jedburgh. It has been suggested that he might have been a son of John and hence brother of Hector of Harwood. He may have been father of ‘Jok’s Johnne’. John of Appotside (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1601 with Gib and Hector, along with several Turnbulls, when they were accused of crimes by an Englishman from Morpeth. Probably the same man was ‘Johne Lorayne, called ‘Jok’s Johnne’ in 1605, when listed as a fugitive, along with ‘Auld Gib’; he was recorded there as ‘Johne Lorayne, called Jok’s Johnne’. He was thus son of John, and surely descended from the Lorraines of Harwood (perhaps great-great-grandson of James of Harwood). John (17th C.) witness in Hawick in 1657 to the baptism of Beatrix, daughter of Walter and Janet Shortreed. He was presumably related to Walter. John (b.1655) son of George and Janet Fleming and probably descended from the Lorraines of Harwood. It has been suggested that he may have been father of many of the family members associated with Wilton, e.g. George, James and William. However, there is no documentary proof for this. John (17th C.) resident of Ruletownfoot according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. It is unclear how he was related to other Lorraines. John (17th/18th C.) servitor to John Scott of Ancrum. In 1712 he was attending the New North Kirk of Edinburgh when accused by the Ancrum Session of fornication with Agnes Cant; he was publicly rebuked in Ancrum in 1716. In 1714 he married Isabel Leithead in Lilliesleaf Parish and their son Thomas (b.1716) was baptised in Ancrum. It is unclear how he was related to other Lorraines. John (18th C.) resident of Kirkton and Cavers Parishes. He was in Upper Tofts in 1722, Berryfell in 1725 and Earlside in 1732. He married Margaret Glendinning in Kirkton Parish in 1722. Their children included: Jane (b.1725); and John (b.1732). He could be the John who witnessed a baptism for Walter in Wilton Parish in 1729. He may also have been father of Agnes, who had a child with Thomas Barrie in 1745. John (18th C.) resident of Netherhall in Wilton Parish. He married Helen Easton in 1751. Their children included: William (b.1752); Helen (b.1754); and John (b.1755). The witnesses in 1752 were Thomas Hay and Thomas Scott and in 1754 were William Lamb (suggesting that he may have been a son of Walter, who reciprocated in witnessing a baptism for William Lamb) and William Noble. The witness in 1755 was George, who was surely a close relative. In 1752 he and Janet Scott in Wiltonburn were accused of fornication by the Wilton Session, and made to pay fines. Perhaps the same John married Bessie Scott (from Kirkton Parish) in 1758 in Wilton Parish. He may be the John who witnessed a baptism for Robert Stewart in 1775. However, he may also be the John for whom the Wilton ‘mortcloth’ fee was paid in 1774. John (18th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. In 1748 he married Ann Mitchellill from Cavers. Further children baptised in Cavers Parish were probably also his: Christian (b.1758); Anne (b.1760); and Margaret (b.1769). In at least 1758–69 he was living in Orchard (and hence was surely related to George, who was in Orchard in 1763). He could be the John, son of John, born in 1732. He is probably the John who received poor relief in Kirkton in 1796. John (18th C.) married Margaret Hobkirk in Kirkton Parish in 1760. His surname is written ‘Lorn’ and ‘Loran’. He was at Acreknowe in 1761 and 1764, and Newmill in 1764 and 1768. His children included: Janet (b.1761), who may have had a child Walter with Robert Ballantyne in 1796 Jean (b.1764); John (b.1766); and Margaret (b.1768), who may have married Robert Anderson. He could be the ‘John Loran’ recorded in 1771 when he paid the Hawick Council for 3000 divots (presumably from Hawick Common); along with several other neighbouring farmers he paid a penny per 50 divots. He is probably the John who received poor relief in Kirkton in 1796. He could be the same as one of the other Johns. John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Helen Learmonth and the couple paid a fine to the Session for fornication. Their children included Benjamin (b.1769). The witnesses were Walter Irvine and John Murray. It seems likely he was related to Walter, who witnessed a baptism for Walter Irvine and Isobel Learmonth (probably related to his wife) in Wilton in 1765. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, possibly son of John and Helen Easton. He married Margaret Graham in 1778. He may be the John who died in Wilton Parish in 1806. Lady Margaret nee Turnbull (16th/17th C.) daughter of Sir Thomas of Bedrule and wife of Edward Lorraine, who was Laird of Harwood and Appotside. She may have been called ‘Lady Appotside’, and it is possible her husband gained these lands from her father through their marriage. She was said to be quite quarrelsome, particularly towards her own family, and suffered the wrath of Turnbull Clan, who laid waste to Harwood and Appotside, with matters coming to a head in 1598 and the years following. 200 cows were stolen, along with 600 sheep, 30 horses and ‘the haill in-sicht and plenissing’ of Harwood in 1598. The following year 30 cows and goods were taken from...

Appotside, which was also burned. And in the years 1599–1605 the woods at Appotside were cut down, including about 2200 trees. Her servant Lyall Brown was killed in 1598 along with William Lorraine in 1600 and Hector Lorraine of Harwood in 1604 (both probably her sons). Apparently she appealed to the Earl of Angus, who offered to repay her out of his own pocket. And although this never transpired, the feud came to an eventual end. She is probably the same Margaret who (along with her son James) brought a court action in 1609 against Andrew Hamilton for intruding on the lands of Tythehouse. Margaret (17th C.) listed as a midwife in 1676 among others of the Abbotrule area who were imprisoned in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh for being ‘most active and guilty of ane insolent ryot latly committed upon the person of Mr. George Baptie, minister, in the churchyard of Abbotrule’. This presumably means she objected to having an Episcopalian minister in her parish. The others listed included her daughter Anna Shiel, as well as Agnes and Bessie Shiel (probably related to her) and Elspeth Jackson. In 1684 she was listed at Gatehousecote among persons who failed to appear at court in Jedburgh; others included Andrew Shiel (surely related, and perhaps even her husband) and Grizel (perhaps her sister) there. She is further listed in 1684 along with Grizel and Beatrix (perhaps both her sisters). She may be the Margaret ‘in Graden Barronnie’ who refused to take ‘the oath of abjuratione’ in 1685. Her daughter Euphan was recorded in 1691 (as well as Jean, wife of William ‘Zeaman’, who could be another sister), when she was again referred to as a ‘mid- wyffe in Gettascot’. Probably the same Margaret was resident of Gatehousecote according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Marion (16th/7th C.) see Marion Turnbull Patrick (14th/15th C.) son and heir of Robert, who was Laird of ‘Homylknolle’ (i.e. Hummelknowes). In 1428/9 he resigned his lands into the hands of his overlord in favour of Janet Rutherford, ‘wyfe quhylem’ (probably ‘former wife’) of George Rutherford of Chatto, excepting his own liferent. He was described as her ‘eme’, meaning uncle (usually maternal); however, it has been suggested that she was a Rutherford of Edgerston. The reason was because she had helped him ‘wyn’ his lands of ‘Homylknolle’ and the indenture was signed at ‘Lynthaulche’ (probably Lintalee). This document is the earliest record of Hummelknowe, and the earliest connection of the Lorraines with the Hawick area. He has a seal that was ‘a lion pasant, guardant crowned’. It has been suggested that his children included sons James (juror in 1439), Robert (juror in 1440) and John (Master of Coldstream Priory); however, there is no evidence for this and it seems more likely that James was from the Harwood branch and John from the Berwickshire line. Patrick (16th C.) mentioned in the records of St. Andrews University. He matriculated in 1525, graduated in 1527 and became a licentiate in 1529. It is possible he is the same Patrick who witnessed the charter for Hector of Harwood in 1531, making him perhaps son of James and Hector’s uncle. He could be the same man as the clerk of Glasgow Diocese. Patrick (16th C.) clerk of the Diocese of Glasgow who drew up the sasine for Wolfelee and other lands for David Home of Wedderburn in 1550. Probably the same notary of the Glasgow Diocese wrote a sasine of 1559 relating to lands in Wilton. He may also be the Patrick who witnessed a sasine in 1531 relating to Hector Lorraine; this suggests he was related to Hector, perhaps being his uncle and hence son of James. Probably the same Patrick also witnessed a bond signed in 1546, for entering Elliots as prisoners at Ferniehirst. Patrick (17th C.) listed along with William on a list of Communicants at Easter Heap in 1650. They were probably related to the later Lorraines of Wilton. Robert (14th C.) recorded in 1361 as a juror on an inquest held at Roxburgh regarding the possessions of Sir William Dacre. It seems likely he was closely related to Eustace, perhaps a brother or son. One possibility is that he was a son of Eustace and direct ancestor of the Lorraines of Hummelknowes. Robert (15th C.) recorded on a ‘retour of inquest’ made in Hawick in 1424 (for deciding on the succession of lands in Hownam). He was also ‘Robyn Lorane, Lord of Homylknow’, whose son Patrick is recorded in an indenture of 1428/9. It seems likely that he was a descendant of Eustace, perhaps through his son Robert. It is possible that the same Robert was on a retour of inquest for the lands of Samuelston, held at Lauder in 1440.

Bailie Robert (15th C.) along with Simon of Routledge, he was Bailie recorded in a sasine of 1453, and hence one of the first 2 known Bailies of Hawick. It is possible he was the same man as the Robert recorded in the 1420s. Robert (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. His wife was Margaret Burn and their children included Beatrix (b.1688). The witnesses to the baptism were John Stuart and Robert Howden. It has been suggested that he was a son of George and

Janet Fleming, but it seems more likely that he was closely related to the other Ashkirk Lorraines. He may be the gardener Robert, who witnessed a baptism for his brother Alexander in Ashkirk in 1695. Robert (17th/18th C.) married Margaret Story in Cavers Parish in 1707. He may have been ‘in Tour’. It is possible that he was a son of Robert and Margaret Burn. Robert (18th C.) weaver in Weens. His son James was baptised in Hobkirk Parish in 1728. Roger (13th C.) witness to a confirmation of a gift of Ralph Maule to Newbattle Abbey sometime before 1231. In 1234 he was witness for the settlement of a dispute between the Chapter of Moray and Alan Durward. He is also recorded as a juror for Earl Patrick of Dunbar and Earl Walter Comyn of Menteith in about 1245. His surname is written ‘Lohereng’, ‘Lorang’ and ‘Loren’. It is possible he was an ancestor of the Scottish Lorraines, but there is no direct evidence of any connections. Walter (16th/17th C.) tenant in Gatehousecote. In 1619 he had a bond with ‘his good friend’ Adam Turnbull, tenant of Bunchester Townhead. Given the timing, it is possible that he was a younger son of Edward of Harwood and Margaret Turnbull. It is suggested that he may have been father of Margaret (wife of a Shiel), who is recorded in Gatehousecote in the 1670s to 90s, and perhaps also father of Grizel and Beatrix (who are recorded in Gatehousecote in the 1670s to 90s, and perhaps also father of Grizel and Beatrix (who are recorded in Bedrule). The witnesses to the 1655 baptism were John Scott (possibly of Gorrenberry) and Andrew Chisholme (possibly of Parkhill), while the witnesses in 1657 were John Scott and John Lorraine. Walter (17th C.) married Helen Scott in Ashkirk Parish in 1657. It is possible he was a son of Walter and grandson of Edward of Lorraine and Margaret Turnbull. It is possible that the Helen who married William Thomson in Selkirk in 1697 was his daughter. Walter (17th C.) probably son of Walter and Janet Shortreed. He is recorded in 1681 as ‘in Hardine’ (probably Harden) and his father of Bessie Riddell and William Wilson. If he was grandson of Edward of Harwood, then it is possible that his wife was related to the Riddells of Bewlie (who were associated with that family). Walter (18th C.) resident of Cavers. In 1714 he was in East Cavers and in at least 1717–24 in Denholm. His children included: Ann (b.1714); Thomas (b.1717); Margaret (b.1721); and George (b.1724). He may be the Walter who married Margaret Miller of Cauldmill in 1705. He may also be the ‘Walter Lorran in Kirktown’ whose son John (b.1706) was baptised in Cavers. It is unclear how he was related to other Lorraines. Walter (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He is recorded at Stirches in 1724, 1727 and 1729. He married Bessie Graham in 1722 and their children included: George (b.1724); William (b.1727), who may have married Margaret Hope in Dumfries in 1755; and Agnes (b.1729), who may have married John Armstrong in 1751 and could be the Agnes who died in 1781. The witnesses in 1724 were Walter Scott and John Scott and in 1727 were James Douglas and James Scott. John Lorraine (along with William Lamb) witnessed the baptism in 1729 and must have been a close relative. In 1727 he witnessed a baptism for William Lamb. He was surely related to other Wilton Lorraines. Walter (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He may be the Walter (b.1733), son of William and Helen Ovens. He married Margaret Smith in 1760 (apparently after the birth of their 1st daughter) and she died in Hawick in 1781. Their children included: Margaret (b.1759); and Mary (b.1764). The witnesses in 1764 were Walter Ballantyne and James Wilson. He could be the Walter who witnessed a baptism for James Irvine in Wilton Parish in 1765. He was probably the Walter who had a child die of smallpox in Hawick in 1775. He could be the deceased Walter whose daughter Margaret died in 1777. Walter (1742–1817) eldest son of William and Janet Clerk. His father came from Nether Tofts in Kirkton Parish. He was born at Barnglies in Dumfriesshire. He was a farmer at Oakwoodhill and married Mary, daughter of farmer Francis Currie. Their children included: William (1772–1842); Francis (1773–1815); John (1775–1849); Andrew (1778–87); James (1781–1804); Walter (1783–1872); Joseph (1785–1809); Margaret (1787–92); and Andrew (again, 1790–92). The family are buried at Kirkconnel. William (14th C.) gave a wadset to Alan Lauder in 1386 for his lands of ‘Lorymeslands’. This could be simply ‘Lorraine’s lands’ and were on the north side of the Lauder Water. He is recorded as ‘Wllm. of Loren of Swynstoun’. It is unclear how he might have been related to other contemporary Lorraines. He may have been a son or other close relative of Eustace, but given that the name ‘William’ was not common in the family immediately afterwards, it seems unlikely he was an ancestor of later local Lorraines. William (15th/16th C.) holder of the lands of Hanginside (i.e. what became Hawthornside) before being granted to Richard Hangingside (before 1488), apparently because he had transferred his allegiance to the English King. William (16th C.) witness to a sasine for Hector’s lands of Harwood and Hawthornside in 1531. He was thus probably related to Hector, perhaps being his uncle, which would make him a son of James. Edward was listed before him and Patrick after him (and were surely related). William (1586/7–1600) son of Edward and Margaret Turnbull. He was killed at the age of 13 in the woods of Lorraine. This was part of a feud between local Turnbills and his mother ‘Lady Appotside’. His elder brother Hector of Harwood was also killed 4 years later. William (17th C.) described as ‘in Cavers’, along with George, in a Hawick magistrates court case of 1642, when Samuel Rutherford accused a large group of his drinking friends of stealing his wallet. His name came before that of George. William (17th C.) listed along with Patrick on a list of Communicants at Easter Heap in 1650. They were probably related to the later Lorraines in Wilton. He may be the William who witnessed a baptism for Andrew Leiden in Hawick in 1640; the other witness was Simon Adamson, who also witnessed a baptism for George in 1655, suggesting he was related to George and Walter and hence potentially a son of Edward and Maisie Elliot. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He may have been a son of George and Janet Fleming. He married Dorothy Duncan and their children included Mary (b.1697), who was ‘begoten in fornication’. His wife may be the ‘Dorothea Lorrain’ who was given poor relief by Ashkirk Parish in 1713, 1714, 1715 and 1716 and was ‘in Sinton’ when buried in 1716. William (b.1682) son of Walter and Bessie Riddell, he was born in Hawick Parish. He was ‘servitor’ to John Scott of Gorrenberry, who held lands at Nether Tofts. In 1707 in Edinburgh he married Bessie Buchanan, widow of writer Robert ‘Cristall’; she was daughter of wright Duncan Buchanan and married her 1st husband in 1698. This suggests that he was spending some of his time in Edinburgh, where presumably his master also had a house. His son William was baptised in Kirkton in 1709, when he was recorded being in Nether Tofts. Margaret, baptised in Cavers Parish in 1721, was probably also his child. There were also other children baptised in Edinburgh: Elizabeth (b.1708); ‘Sibbillett’ (b.1709); Walter (b.1711); Bessie (b.1712); and Anne (b.1714). Most probably died in childhood and are buried in Edinburgh. He was later a stabler in the South West Parish of Edinburgh and: in 1718 married Katherine Paterson; in 1722 had bans proclaimed to marry Katherine Ogilvie; and in 1723 married Christian Kyle. William (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. In 1712 he was gardener in Whitlefield and in 1716 he may have been at Brieryards. In 1712 he married Elspeth (or Elizabeth) Brown from Robertson Parish, daughter of Robert Brown, from Kirkton Parish. Their children included John (b.1716). His wife could be the Elspeth Brown who was buried in Wilton in 1747.
He may have been a son of John and brother of George and Walter. William (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, recorded at Borthaugh in most of the baptismal entries 1723–36. However, he may have been at Newton in 1733. He married Helen Ovens and their children included: Walter (b.1723); Margaret (b.1725); Bessie (b.1727), who may have married Robert Wilson and died in 1778; Elizabeth (b.1729); Francis (b.1731); Walter (again, b.1733); and Helen (b.1736). The witnesses in 1725 and 1729 were George Bell and Walter Riddell, in 1727 were Robert Cowan and James ‘Beasly’, in 1731 were George Bell and John Scott, in 1733 were Patrick Scott and John Hume and in 1736 were Walter Riddell and Thomas Kerr. He may be the William whose death is recorded in Wilton in 1777. William (c.1707–90) son of William, he was baptised in Kirkton Parish in 1709. In 1740 he married Janet Clerk in Hawick; at that time he was still living at Nether Tofts. Soon afterwards he moved to Cadgillside farm at Chapelknowe near Canonbie, where his first son Walter (father of Dr. William) was born in 1742. Other children included: Janet (b.1744); Andrew (1746–1819); William (b.1749); John (1751–1829); James (1753–1822); and Margaret (1755–1833). His wife is recorded at Barnes when she had poor relief in 1889 and also several more times until her death in 1800. William (d.1769) resident of Doorpool. He is buried in Hobkirk Cemetery, with the funeral of Jean being recorded the same day. Dr. William (1772–1841) born at Chapelknowe near Canonbie, he was son of Walter and grandson of William, who was from Kirkton Parish. He was classics master at Selkirk Grammar School, then Rector of Jedburgh Grammar School and is described in the book ‘A Borders Schoolmaster’ (2000) by Audrey Mitchell. He was later Master at Glasgow High School. In 1803 he married Dorothea (or ‘Dora’), daughter of Thomas Scott of Bonchester. 3 of his sons were Doctors at Glasgow University (formerly spelled ‘Loran’, ‘Lorane’, ‘Lorain’, ‘Lorraine’, ‘Lorayne’, ‘Loreen’, ‘Loreyn’, ‘Loreyne’, ‘Lorn’, ‘Lorain’, ‘Lorrain’, ‘Lorrane’, ‘Lorren’, ‘Lorrence’, ‘Lorrin’, ‘Lorrion’, ‘Lorrone’, ‘Lowrran’, etc.).

the Lorraines (θlu-ɔɾ raːnəz) n. family that was once important in the Borders, particularly in Rulewater. The origin of the name is surely the region of Lorraine in north-eastern France, perhaps coming over to Britain at the time of William the Conqueror. The same French family from the Duchy of Lorraine provided a later connection with Scotland through Mary of Guise, who was daughter of Claude of Lorraine, becoming Queen Consort of James V and mother of Mary, Queen of Scots. It has also been claimed that the family is connected with the lands of Deloraine in the Ettrick valley. The early history is very unclear, as is the connection with the Barons of this name who inhabited part of Northumberland (including, confusingly, the farm of Hawick), specifically Kirkharle. Eustace, recorded in the 1330s to 50s, may have been an early ancestor of the Roxburgshire family. There were Lorraines at Hummelknoves near Hawick in the 15th century and Robert Lorraine was one of the earliest recorded Bailies of Hawick, in 1453. The Roxburgshire Lorraines held the lands of Harwood from at least the late 15th century until 1637. The name occurs several times among lists of men accused of mounting raids into England in the 16th century. The arms of Lorraine of Harwood are shown as 3 green laurel leaves on a silver background in 1542.

Lorraine Wud (lɔɾ-rən-wud) n. former name for a wood near Harwood or Appotside in the Rule valley, named after the family that once owned the land. It is recorded in 1606 that young William Lorraine was killed ‘within the wood of Lorane’ by a gang of Turnbulls, this being part of an ongoing feud with his mother Margaret, ‘Lady Appotside’, herself a Turnbull by birth.

lot (lo’) n., arch. an assessed contribution for a common purpose – ‘...that each inhabitant who pays not stent nor lott shall be lyable for the same price ...’[BR1722] (also written ‘lott’).

Lothian (lo-thee-in) n. general geographic name for the area around Edinburgh. Latterly it has included the counties of Linlithgow, Midlothian and Haddington, but it formerly applied to all the eastern part of the Lowlands, even including Roxburghshire.

Lothian (lo-thee-in) n. Joseph (18th C.) gardener in Hawick. He married Janet Scott and their children included: Joanna (b.1736); Peter (b.1738); and George (b.1742). The witnesses in 1738 were Walter Scott of Newton and Patrick Scott, younger of Alton, suggesting that his wife was related to these branches of the Scotts. The 1742 witnesses were merchant Charles Tudhope and mason James Harkness (formerly ‘Lowthian’).

Lothian an Border Horse (lo-thee-in-an-bor-dur-hors) n. local Territorial Yeomanry Regiment. It was generally for the wealthier volunteers who had their own horse. It grew out of the Royal Edinburgh Volunteer Light Dragoons, set up in 1797 (with Sir Walter Scott as its first quartermaster) and the East Lothian Yeomanry Cavalry, set up at the same time by the Duke of Buccleuch. The 2 merged in 1800 to form the Royal Midlothian Yeomanry Cavalry. It disbanded in 1838, but the 2 units reformed in the 1840s, and amalgamated again in 1879, and were renamed the Lothian and Border Horse in 1908. C Squadron was based in Hawick, with detachments in the main towns of Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire. Many men volunteered for sevice in this regiment during WWI. In 1921 armoured cars replaced horses and from 1924 it was associated with the 4th Royal Tank Regiment. It became the 1st and 2nd Lothians and Border Horse in 1939, and saw action in North Africa, France and Italy during WWII. In 1956 it was amalgamated with other regiments to form the Queen's Own Lowland Yeomanry and was again disbanded in 1967, although resurrected as the Scottish Yeomanry from 1992–99. ‘War Record of the 4th Battalion King’s Own Scottish Borderers and Lothian and Border Horse’ (1920) was written by W.S. Brown. Papers from the regiment are in the National Library of Scotland.

Lough (lowch) n. Andrew (15th/16th C.) resident of Selkirk. He is recorded in the Selkirk Protocol Books for 1535 when, along with several others, he was accused of taking grain from ‘le Schaw’ belonging to John Hall. In 1538 he had George Robson, John Robson, Walter Veitch, David Do[we?] and Walter Scott removed from his 20 merklands in Synton. Oliver (1826–1916) son of Walter, who was a carrier around Southdean. In 1848 he married Agnes, daughter of William Oliver (lind at Langraw). In 1851 they were living with his in-laws at Langraw Scaur. Around the late 1850s they emigrated to Nevada, U.S.A. His children included Walter (b.1848), William (b.1850), Betsey (b.1854) and Henry (b.1856). He died in Nebraska. Walter ‘Wattie’ (b.c.1785–1864) son of James and Christian Oliver, he was born in Jedburgh Parish. He was a carrier at Letham in Southdean Parish in 1841 and in 1851 was carrier and grocer at Gatehousecote. He was listed as ‘Formerly Carrier’ at Old Gatehousecote. He ran a cart to Liddesdale in the days before the railway. He married Elizabeth (Betty) Storie in 1819. Their children were: James (b.1820), who married Euphemia Telfer; George (b.1821); Isabella (b.1823), who married George Telfer; Oliver (b.1826), who emigrated to the U.S.A.; Walter (b.1829), who married Isabella Rutherford; Thomas (b.1832), who was a labourer at Highend in 1851; and Mary (b.1834), who married Andrew Smith. Most of his children were born in Oxnam Parish and some were christened at the Free Kirk in Jedburgh. He died in Hobkirk (formerly written ‘Louche’).

the Loupin Stane

the Loupin Stane (th-low-pin-stän) n. small-standing stone in an isolated area in Craik Forest, a little over a kilometer to the west-northwest from Wolfcleuchhead. The dimensions are 0.8 m long by 35 cm wide at the top, narrowing to a point, and just 5 cm thick. On one side are carved 2 heads and lettering, while on the other is inscribed ‘Wolfcleuchhead’. It is possible this is a mounting step from the steading of Wolfcleuchhead, moved to its present position at some point (see also lowpin-on stane).

the Loupin Stanes (th-low-pin-stänz) n. small stone circle near Eskdalemuir, not far from ‘the Girdle Stanes’. There are 12 stones in an oval about 18 m across, including 2 larger ones that provide the ‘entrance’. The popular name comes the story that locals used to try to leap between these two stones until someone’s leg was broken (although they are probably too far apart for this to be feasible).

lourd (loard) adv., poet. rather, liked { ‘I wad lourd have had a winding-sheet, And helped to put it ower his head, Ere he had been disgraced by the border Scot, When he ower Liddel his men did lead!’ [T].

louse see lowse

the Lousy Drain (thu-low-zee-drän) n. popular name for an open ditch in Hobkir Parish in the 19th century. It ran down from Kirknow farm through the Parish school playground, and served as an open sewer, which older boys would try to jump over.

lout (low) v., poet. to bend, stoop – ‘...Laigh doun I louted on my knees, An’ preed the Hunter’s pool’ [ECB], ‘The fairies wad hear, quo’ bonny Jeanye Roole, And wi’ louting my back is sair’ [JTe], ‘Lang syne it was, Thon souchin simmer’s day, Wi’ cloods that sailed Loutin to their shaddas’ [DH] (see also loot).

Lovat see Simon Fraser

Lovat Mill (lu-ví'-mil) n. factory of Teviotex at 15 Commercial Road.

Lovel (lu-vul) n. Agnes (13th/14th C.) listed in the Ragman Rolls of 1296 as ‘Agneys Louel ce fu la femme Henry del counte de Rokesburg’, so she was presumably the wife of an already deceased Henry. Maurice, Parson of ‘Little Cavers’, who also appears on the Roll, may be her son or other relative. It is possible she is the same as the Eva, widow of Henry, who is recorded in 1294. Asceline (d.1119) probably the ancestor of the Lovels. His father was likely to have been Robert de Breheraval, who held the castle of Ivery (or Yvery) in Normandy and came to England with William the Conqueror. He was a vassal of William de Breteuil and his surname was ‘Goello’ or ‘Goel’ (which is probably a variant of ‘Guelph’ or ‘Whelp’, i.e. the wolf-cub’, which became ‘Lupellus’ in the Latinised version of French-Norman). He may also have been known as ‘Gouel de Percheval’ and ‘Gouel de Yvery’, with his nickname ‘Lupus’ coming from his violent demeanour. Although he spent much of his life in Normandy, he held several estates in Somerset, as well as Titmarsh in Northamptonshire. He commanded Norman forces at the siege of Mante in 1087. He also had a lengthy series of sieges involving his liege, the Earl of Breteuil, from whom he eventually gained Ivery. It is said that he tortured the Earl of Breteuil, until he yielded and gave his daughter Isobel, along with a large dowry. He is said to have had 7 sons, including: Richard, who died before him; Robert, who succeeded, but only for a couple of years; William, who succeeded after Robert; John of Harptree, ancestor of the Barons of Harptree Gournay; and Roger, called ‘Balbus’ or ‘the Stutterer’ who was Lord of Grandisilva in Normandy. He also had a daughter, who married Radulfus Rufus. Baldwin (11th/12th C.) of Tintenhull, one of the earliest recorded Lovels. However, these early generations are confused, and it is unclear how he was related to the Lovels of Yvery. He probably succeeded his father Ralph in 1121 and was father of Ralph and possibly also Margaret (although she may have been Ralph’s wife). Henry (12th C.) possibly the Henry Lovel who was said to have been first given the Barony of Hawick, perhaps in the 1130s, and who is among those who encouraged King David to invade England in 1138. However, these generations are quite confused, and it is unclear whether he even existed.

Henry (d.c.1194) Lord Cary, son of Ralph and Margaret, or possibly 3rd son of William Gouel de Perceval, and hence brother of Ralph. He succeeded in about 1159. He may also have had a brother, Thomas. He was probably born at Castle Cary, but also held the Barony of Hawick, and is likely to have split his time between England and Scotland. He paid feudal fees in Somerset in 1162. During the time of Robert, Dean of Bath (i.e. before 1166) he had his gift to the Priory of Brunton confirmed. He also witnessed several other grants in Somerset in the latter part of the 12th century. He was ‘Henry Luvel’ in 1166 when he witnessed a charter by King William to Lovel

Robert de Brus. He is recorded as Baron of Hawick when he was a witness in 1166 and 1190. He was probably also the ‘henrici lupelli’ (i.e. Henry, Little Wolf) who is recorded in a charter (confirmed by Pope Lucius III in 1183, Pope Gregory VIII in 1187 and Pope Clement III in 1188) giving 2 oxgates of land at ‘Branchewilla’ (i.e. Branhxholme) to the canons of St. Andrews. This was witnessed by the first 3 clergymen known to be connected with Hawick. This same grant of 2 oxgates of land in Branhxholme to St. Andrews Priory in about 1175 was mentioned in a list of gifts in 1206, 1216, 1246 and 1248. In 1190 he was recorded in the Pipe Rolls for Dorset and Somerset. He married Alice de Cary, and his sons were Ralph (who died without issue) and Henry (who succeeded to the Barony of Hawick). Other children may have included Maurice and Richard, who exchanged these 2 oxgates for other nearby lands in about the 1190s. This Richard may have also succeeded the next Henry, and was therefore either his son or grandson. Henry (d.c.1216)

Lord Cary, probably younger son of Henry, he succeeded his brother Ralph, who died in 1207. In 1197 he was assessed for fees for the Norman army. In the period 1198–1202 he was appointed as attorney in a case by Ralph de Trubleville. In 1207 he settled a case brought by Matilda, his brother Ralph’s widow, over lands she claimed she had been given in dower; this included 1/3 of the family’s barony in Scotland (presumably Hawick), but she settled for the manor of ‘Humewic’ (i.e. Honeywick near Castle Cary), together with money and livestock. In 1208 he paid 300 marks for the livery of his lands, and still held some Somerset lands jointly with his mother Alice and sister-in-law Maud (the same as Matilda). In 1210 he paid King John to avoid going on the expedition to Ireland. He married Christiania and was succeeded by his brother (although some accounts say son) Richard. However this genealogy may be confused, and there may be another extra generation of Henrys and/or Richards. He may be the Henry who was among witnesses to a charter for Gilmerston in the Glasgow chartulary in the reign of William. His widow ‘Cristina’ secondly married Richard Cotel; in about 1222 she complained that Richard ‘Luvel’ (probably her brother-in-law, or possibly her son) had dispossessed her of some of her dower lands. In 1248 she complained again about being removed from her dower lands, and there was a complicated agreement over several lands, including ‘Honeywyk’ (i.e. Honeywick near Castle Cary). Henry (d.1262/3)

of Castle Cary and Hawick, 2nd son of Richard, his elder brother William dying before their father. He married Eve (or Eva), who died in 1294. They had sons Richard and Hugh, who both succeeded. They also had daughters Alicia (the elder) and Cristina (d.bef. 1264), who were both unmarried. Little else is known about him and it is unclear whether he played any direct role in the Hawick area. He may be the ‘Sir H.’ who witnessed an agreement in Somerset in 1256. In 1263 his son and heir Richard did homage to the English King and received his father’s lands. However in 1264 there was an inquest into the age of Richard’s brother Hugh, and whether he should be heir of ‘Kari Lowel’; his widow ‘Lady Eva Lovel’ is also mentioned. Also in 1264 his daughter Alicia brought a case against Hugh, complaining that he had tried to dispossess her from the lands that she and her deceased sister Cristina had been granted. His widow Eva is further referred to in 1294 when her lands and her son Hugh’s lands were given to the custody of John de Soulis. Hugh (d.c.1290) of Castle Cary and Hawick, brother of Richard and 2nd son of Henry. In 1264 there was an inquiry into his age, since his brother Richard had died, and so he succeeded to the barony of ‘Kari Lovel’ (i.e. Cary). Also in 1264 his sister Alicia accused him of dispossessing her of a manor in Sussex, given to her and her deceased sister Cristina; he was charged to allow his sister to keep her farm. He was recorded as Baron of Hawick in 1268. A 1268 plea against him for restoring a watercourse at Castle Cary mentions that his grandfather was Richard. A further case in 1268 involves his sister-in-law Cecilia and the land of ‘Wynkanton’. He was recorded as lord of ‘karycastel’ in the 1270s, in 1274 was ‘Sir Hugh’ of Cary when he made an agreement with the Prior of Bruton, and was ‘Hugone Luvel’ when he witnessed a grant for Bruton Priory. He married Eleanor (or ‘Alianors’) and their children were: Sir Richard, who succeeded in 1303 when still a minor, becoming Lord of Castle Cary and Baron of Hawick; and Olivia, who married John de Gournay. He was recorded in 1291 when his widow was directed not to re-marry without the King’s permission and John de Soulis was given custody of 2/3 of his lands until his heir reached majority. Additional lands and privileges of his (including the church of ‘Stoketone’) were granted to John de Soulis in 1292/3, and also in his lands were confirmed to John de Soulis, along with the lands which Eva Lovel (his mother) had held until his majority. Hugh (13th/14th C.) recorded in an English record of 1306 as a supporter of Robert the Bruce who had been sent to a prison. It is unclear how he was related to the other Lovels of the time. Sir James (c.1316–42) only son of Richard the first Lord of Castle Cary. He married Elizabeth or Isabel around 1328, but died before his father. Their children were Richard (who died young) and Muriel (who inherited the titles and married Nicholas Seymour). Sir William of Douglas had a crown charter of 1341 for all his forfeited lands in Eskdale and Ewesdale. In 1342 his widow is recorded having liferent of 2 manors in Somerset, which had been given to him by his father in 1328/9. Sir John (13th C.) recorded ‘as magistro Johanne Lovel’ on an assize in Cumberland in 1292, then in a court case in Newcastle in 1293, relating to affairs in Scotland. He was also recorded in the same way in 1296, in a document relating to equipping Edward I’s expedition into Scotland. He was certainly English, but it is unclear where he came from. He was also recorded as ‘the marshal’ who had come to pacify the dispute between the Welsh and English in Edinburgh. Lawrence (13th C.) recorded (probably early) in the period 1259–86 in a document relating to King Alexander at Lanark. He served as some kind of soldier. It is unclear how he was related to other Scottish Lovels. Margaret (d.bef. 1164) wife of Ralph. It is unknown what her maiden name was, but not impossible she was also a Lovel. She may have held the lands of Hawick after her husband’s death. Her son and heir was Henry. She secondly married Thomas of London (who also married Escina of Mow); with the consent of her sons Henry and Thomas she granted ‘Ughtredshaghe’ (probably Outerside) to Jedburgh Abbey at its foundation, as confirmed in about 1170. Maurice (13th C.) probably son of Henry. Along with Richard he exchanged these 2 oxgangs for other nearby lands in about the 1190s. He may be the Maurice who witnessed an undated grant by Richard, Lord of Cary, to the Priory of Bruton, with another witness being Henry, son of Richard. Maurice (13th C.) recorded as ‘Morice Louel, persone del Eglise de Petyt Cares, del counte de Rokesburgh’ (i.e. ‘parson of Little Cavers’) in the Ragman Rolls of 1296. In a list drawn up in 1777 he is transcribed as ‘Mauricius Lunel, Parsona ecclesiæ de Parva Caures’. The ‘Agneys Louel’, widow of Henry, who also appears on the Ragman Rolls may have been his mother. Note that there was another Maurice a generation or 2 earlier, probably brother of the Richard who died in 1253. Muriel (b.1331/2) daughter of James, who died in 1342, she succeeded her grandfather Sir Richard in 1351, probably becoming Baroness Lovel. It is unclear if she inherited the Barony of Hawick, although control of the lands was certainly no longer in Lovel hands by her time. She married Nicholas, Lord St. Maur. Ralph (d.c.1121) one of the earliest known Lovels. He held Castle Cary in 1107. He was probably the son of Walter de Douai, Baron Bampton, who held the Castle at the time of the Domesday Book. However, these early generations are very uncertain, and it is unclear how he may have been related to the other contemporary Lovels. He may have been succeeded by Baldwin. Ralph (d.c.1159) of Tintenhull and Castle Cary, son of William (although possibly related to the near contemporary Baldwin, since accounts of these generations are very uncertain). He may have been the first family member to adopt the surname ‘Lovel’, based on the family nickname ‘Lupellus’, meaning ‘Little Wolf’ (which was also applied to his brothers Henry and William). He appears to have also had the nickname ‘Simelt’. Along with his father he was part of the rebellion against King Stephen of England, and defended Castle Cary in a siege in 1152. He is said to have married a daughter of Henry de Novo Mercatu, from whom he received Dunkerton in Somerset. This wife could have been Margaret, who appears to have been the heiress of Hawick (and so possible the barony was part of her dower lands), and died before 1164; it is not impossible that she was the Margaret who secondly married Thomas de London. He was succeeded by Henry, who was probably his brother (or possibly his son). He may be the Ralph who restored the grant of lands to the Priory of Bruton that his father had taken away; this was witnessed by ‘Thoma Lupell’, who was surely a close relative. Ralph (d.c.1207) eldest son of Henry, from whom he succeeded, before in turn being succeeded in the Baronies of Castle Cary and Hawick by his brother Henry. His name is also recorded as ‘Rodolphi’. He married Maud (or Matilda), daughter of Henry de Newmarche. In 1207, after he had died without issue, ‘Matillidis’ claimed her dower lands and made a settlement with her brother-in-law Henry over rights to the manor of ‘Hunewic’ (probably ‘Honeywick’). In about 1222 his widow was married to Ralph Lebutter, when she and Christina (widow of Henry) complained that Richard had dispossessed them of... their inheritance, including some lands in Scotland. Richard (12th C.) of Castle Cary and Hawick, possibly son of Henry. He married Alice and their sons were William (who died young) and Henry. He is probably also the ‘Ricardi Lupelli domini de Hawic’ recorded in the Register of the Priory of St. Andrews in about the 1190s. There he exchanged 2 ‘bovates’ (i.e. ox-gates) of land between Whames and Whithope to the canons of St. Andrews, in exchange for lands in ‘Brancheshelm’ (i.e. Branxholme) which had been conferred by his father Henry. The boundaries of these lands are given, and are interesting in preserving several lost place names, namely ‘anesotd terre’, ‘chestris’, ‘farmop’, ‘langesideburne’ and ‘quikenne’. He may also be the ‘Richard Luvel, lord of Cary’ who confirmed a gift to the Priory of Bruton, and whose confirmation was witnessed by his son Henry, as well as Maurice (who could have been his brother). Note that there are several Richards, Henrys and Ralphs at about this time, and so the details of the family tree are hard to disentangle. Richard (d.1253) probably son of Henry, and brother of Ralph and Henry. However, given the length of time that elapsed, it is also possible he was son of an additional Richard, and hence grandson of Henry. He was probably the Richard ‘Luvel’ who was involved in a land transaction relating to Biddesham near Cary in 1203/4. He succeeded Henry in 1218, paying £100 for the livery of Cary and the other Somerset estates. In about 1222 he was described as tenant when there was a claim against him by Christina, widow of Henry. She had remarried to Richard Cotel, and claimed that he had dispossessed her of her dower lands of ‘Kary, Wreketon and Pidecumbe’, as well as other lands and rights. Also mentioned was Matilda, formerly wife of Ralph ‘Luvel’, and now wife of Ralph Lebutiler, who also held lands in inheritance. These disagreements included ‘the land which Richard Luvel held in Scotland’. In 1231 he had a charter for demesne lands of Cary and also witnessed another charter. He is further recorded in the 1230s and 40s regarding knights service. In about 1237 he gave agreement that the Priory of Bath should hold the rights to the church of Castle Cary, as granted by his father Henry. In 1248 Christina ‘Luvel’ (stated to have been the wife of his brother) complained again that he owes her money and dower lands, ‘as well in England as in Scotland’. A court case against him in 1255 was adjourned because he was deceased by then. He married Alice, whose surname is unknown. After she was widowed, her marriage was granted to William Berkeley, but he married someone else and so she then married Nicholas de Haversham. Their children included: William, who died before him; and Henry, who succeeded. Richard (d.1263/4) of Castle Cary and Hawick, eldest son of Henry. He succeeded his father, but died only a year or two later, and was in turn succeeded by his brother Hugh. He married Cecily (or Cecilia), whose surname is unknown; she was involved in a plea regarding her dower lands of ‘Wynkanton’ in 1268. He is recorded as ‘Richard Lupell’ in the Scottish Exchequer Rolls in the period 1264–66 as late owner of the Barony of Hawick. Richard (13th C.). His lands are referred to in 1278 by the Sheriff of Somerset and Dorset, and again in 1283. It is unclear who he was. Sir Richard (c.1283–1351) Lord Lovel, son of Hugh. He was born at Castle Cary and was custodian of the castles of Corfe and Purbeck. He succeeded his father in about 1291, while still a minor, his guardian being John de Soulis. In 1297 he swore to Edward I that he would serve him against France. He is listed in rolls of knights in 1298 and 1301 and found 2 men to serve Edward I in 1302. In about 1303 he achieved majority and took up his estates. In 1306 he received 10 marks for helping Edward against Robert the Bruce. He probably left Scotland soon afterwards, since Bronxholme (in the Barony of Hawick) was granted to Sir Henry Baliol in 1307, with a confirming charter in about 1321. Furthermore the Barony of Hawick was granted to the Earl of Strathearn (perhaps before 1329). In 1310 he received the Manor of ‘Wynfirthegle’ in exchange for his wife’s manor of Old Roxburgh. In 1318/9 he was ‘lord of Caricastel’ when he gave up his rights to some lands in favour of Montacute Priory, with his wife Muriel also being mentioned. He was also holder of the Barony of Hawick in one of the oldest existing records, when it was regranted by Edward III in 1347 (although at a similar time it was also granted to Maurice Murray by David II of Scotland). Sometime before 1310/1 he married Muriel (or Muriella), daughter and heir of John Soulis (his guardian) of Old Roxburgh. However, in 1316 he was given a charter of Sir John Soulis’ lands in Dumfries, as well as Old Roxburgh, but then Old Roxburgh was kept for the safety of Roxburgh Castle, and he was granted the Manor of Bradenach in Devon in exchange. In 1335 he had the castles of Corfe and Purbeck committed to him and his wife (Muriel Soulis). He was summoned to English Parliament in 1348 and 1350 as...
Lord Lovel. His children were: Joan, who married Sir John de Moels; James, who died before him and whose daughter Muriel succeeded, followed by her son Richard Seymour; and Eleanor, who married Roger Rouhaut of Aston Rowant. He is probably the Richard whose seal bore a lion rampant on a background of crosses. The failure of the male line here ended the direct succession of more than 2 centuries. Robert (d.1121) son of Ascelin Gouel de Percival and brother of William (at least in some accounts of the early Lovels). He probably inherited Castle Cary from his father in about 1119, but died soon afterwards. In 1119 he took up arms against Henry I, but negotiations, involving Radulfus Rufus (his brother-in-law) led him to switch allegiance to the King. He may be the ‘Robertus Lupellus’ who witnessed a gift to the canons of Bruton. He left no issue and was succeeded by his brother William. Roger (13th C.) son of Roger. In 1242 he and Richard de Dreycot confirmed a grant of lands to the Canons of Bruton; ‘Domino Ricardo Lupello’ was the first witness and hence probably a close relative. He is recorded as ‘Rogero Lupello’ when he witnessed an agreement with the Priory of Bruton in 1253. Probably the same Roger was also recorded in some other Somerset documents at about the same time. Thomas (15th C.) recorded in 1494/5 among men for whose murder William Clerk ‘apud ecclesiam foreste’ (i.e. at the Kirk of the Forest) had remission a the Justice-kirk. He may have been one of the last men of this surname in the region. William (d.c.1155) of Castle Cary, also described as Earl of Yvery and ‘Lupellus’, his surname may have been ‘Gouel de Perceval’, with ‘Lovell’ being first adopted by his son from the ‘Lupellus’ nickname. It is said that his nickname was the diminutive form of ‘Lupus’, which had been attached to his father. In some accounts of the early Lovels he is the son of Ascelin Gouel de Perceval and younger brother of Robert, from whom he succeeded; however, these early generation are very uncertain, and there is dispute among authorities. He held estates of Yvery in Normandy and Cary, Weston, Stawell, etc. in England. Spending more time in England than his father and grandfather, he may have built the first stone castle at Castle Cary. He fought for Waleran in a rebellion against Henry I about 1123, escaping imprisonment in 1124 and returning home in disguise, barefoot, having given the Seine ferryman his shoes. He supported Matilda against Stephen in the English civil war, resulting in Stephen besieging Castle Cary, taking it in 1138, but returning it on the promise not to support Matilda. The castle was again besieged in 1153, when William and his son Ralph reneged on this promise, but was saved by the arrival of the Earl of Gloucester’s force. He is probably the ‘Willelmus, qui cognominatur Lupellus’ who had a charter with the Abbey of St. Peter of Chartres in the early 12th century. He also confirmed a gift to the Priory of Bruton. It is unclear if he was also Baron of Hawick, or if the barony was first held by his son, or even if it was held by another family member during his lifetime. He married Auberie, sister of Waleran de Bellemont, Earl of Mellent (and related to the Kings of France). Their children may have included: Waleran, Baron de Yvery, whose descendants retained that Barony until the 15th century; Ralph, who succeeded to Castle Cary; Henry, who later succeeded; William of Titchmarsh and Minster Lovel, although this is disputed by some accounts; and Richard Perceval, ancestor of the Earls of Egmont. William (14th C.) said to have forfeited lands in Eskdale and Ewesdale in the reign of David II. These lands were granted to William, Lord Douglas, younger. He is probably the Sir William who was at ‘Haydenebrugge’ in 1327. However, it is unclear how he was related to James, who forfeited the same lands in 1341; it may be that the names were in error (also written ‘Lovell’, ‘Lowel’, ‘Lupellus’, ‘Luvel’, ‘Luvell, ‘Luvellus’, etc.).

Lovel Court (lu-vul-kôr’) n. street name for the courtyard developed behind Drumlanrig’s Tower when the area was renovated in the early 1990s. It had once been the stable area for the Tower Inn and a large building housing the Tower Garage (originally misspelled ‘Lovell’ on the street sign).

the Lovels ( thu-lu-vulz) n. family name of Norman nobility who were given lands around Hawick by David I in the 1120s or 30s. The family held the lands of Yvery in Normandy. They may have settled in Teviotdale in the previous reign of Alexander I. Their lands included Brauxholm, which they held until 1307. They built their castle, the Moat (or Motte), a wooden palisaded tower on a mound of earth, as a symbol of their lordship of the lands around Hawick. They later built a more substantial tower where Drumlanrig’s Tower now stands, as well as rebuilding St. Mary’s in stone. The Lovels held the patronage of the church in Hawick until 1355. The family also held lands elsewhere, particularly Castle Cary in Somersetshire (south of Bristol). Castle Cary was a Norman fortification, built at the foot of Lodge Hill, and held by the Lovels from perhaps 1107 until it was destroyed about 1155. The fortifications can still be seen above the town, including a mound where the castle stood (reminiscent of Hawick’s Moat). During the Wars of Independence their loyalties lay with the English and the family returned to Somerset. Their Hawick lands were forfeited by David II and given to Maurice Murray, later being passed to Archibald Douglas in the 15th century. The Lovels continued to hold lands in Somerset long after the castle there had been destroyed, and the town there is still called Castle Cary. The family name probably derives from an early member nicknamed ‘Lupellus’ (Little Wolf) which became ‘Lupel’ and then ‘Lovel’. Their arms were a gold background strewn with crosses, and with a blue lion rampant. The identification of Lovel of Hawick and Branholme with Lovel of Castle Cary was only made in about the 1870s by historian Joseph Bain. Note that there were other prominent branches of the family, e.g. the Lovels of Titchmarsh (or ‘Tichmarsh, in Northamptonshire), the Lovels of Minster Lovel (in Oxfordshire) and the Lovels of Balumbie (in Angus), but they may not all have been directly connected. There is a Lovel mentioned in the Scottish ballad ‘The Battle of Otterburn’ and a ballad called ‘Lord Lovel’ (about a knight who dies of sorrow after returning to hear of the death of his love) – ‘What shameful deed besmirched with guilt Attached to the Lovels’ name? What untold sin? – no mortal knows Except the monk who shrived the same’ [JCG].

In a rental roll of c.1376 the ‘Quartierium de Ludne’ is listed as one of the 4 main sections, including 29 farms, with total value of 18 pounds 11 shillings and 8 pence. Among the farms were Greenshiels, Oldshiels, Carryshiels, Hartsgarth, Langhaugh and Tofts, and the holders of lands were ‘Fethyng’, ‘Loumane’, ‘Willelmi filii Alani’, ‘Ricardie de Roule’ and ‘Willelmi del Syde’. It seems to have coincided with the west side of the Hermitage Water. However, the precise extent of the area, as well as the pronunciation and any connection with modern lands, is unknown.

Luff (luft) n. John George (1845/6–1918) local hotel proprietor. Born in Sussex, he came to Hawick about 1877 as a waiter in the Tower Hotel, where he developed a novel shorthand slate attached to his waiter’s tray. It is said that he spoke fluent French and Italian, having spent time on the Continent. He went into business on his own, later having the Central Hotel built, which he ran originally as a temperance hotel. He later offered to demolish the ‘Coffin End’ at his own expense if the Town would grant him a liquor licence; this request was denied, but after improving his hotel and being granted a licence, he did in fact have the wooden eye-sores removed and gifted the land to the Town. He was a vocal opponent of the Clubs of the Town and in general, claiming they were merely unlicensed drinking establishments; he published some pamphlets on this topic. He was a Councillor for Wilton Ward in the period 1901–04, being fond of novel schemes and for quoting aphorisms, and famous for speeches he gave from the Central Hotel balcony. On one such famous occasion he proposed a scheme to turn the Park into a pleasure park, with a huge artificial lake. He published ‘A system of mastering Pitman’s manual’ (1877), ‘Thoughts on clubs by a country cook’ (1899) and ‘The Income Tax Corrector (c.1910). His engraved shorthand Lunardi (loo-nar-dee) n. Vincent (1759–1806) balloonist, who made the first substantial flight in Britain, and was a household name in the late 18th century. He made several flights in Britain in the 1780s, including from Kelso and from Edinburgh. After launching from St. Andrews Churchyard, Glasgow on the 23rd November 1785 at 1.45 p.m. (with a crowd estimated at 100,000), he had an adventurous voyage, with the wind blowing him to the south-east. He tried to land on a hill near Dryhope (apparently thinking that St. Mary’s Loch might be an arm of the sea), where he lost his anchor, flag and some ropes, and was spotted by many local people. He eventually came down about 2 miles east of Alemoor at about 3.55, being fortuitously met by Mr. and Mrs. Chisholm of Stirches, who had shouted ‘Lunardi, come down’ at him. Mrs. Chisholm rode for about 3 miles in the balloon, with 2 shepherds holding the ropes. Then they brought him to Hawick and he spent the night at Stirches. The following day he was received by the Magistrates, entertained at a special dinner and afterwards given the freedom of the Town.

Lundie

Lundie (lun-dee) n. Allan (16th/17th C.) studied at St. Salvator’s College and graduated from St. Andrews University in 1586. He became Vicar at Lessuden (St. Boswells) in 1596. He was rebuked by the Presbytery in 1608 and again in 1610 for negligence and being ‘ane player at cairdis’, among other complaints. He was translated to Hassendean in 1610, but only stayed about a year before moving on to Channelkirk in 1611 (basically he had a choice, and while he preferred Hassendean, the Presbytery advised Channelkirk). He went to Hutton and Fishwick in 1614, demitted sometime before 1636, but was recorded as still alive in 1639. His descendants held land at Spittal (near Berwick) for several generations. He married Agnes Trottar and their son Walter was baptised in 1639. His descendants were James (next minister of Hutton), William, John, Andrew and Elizabeth. James (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1517 being given the wardship of the lands of the deceased Walter Scott of Howpasley, as well as rights over the marriage of his daughter. These were the superiority of lands forfeited after the execution of Alexander, Lord Home. In 1535 there was a reversion of his charter for the lands of ‘Apiltrehall, Mydschelis, Crawlawhill’ plus their mills, ‘Cotlaw, Butrig and Ouri and Nethir Manys of Hassindene’; the lands returned to George, Lord Home. He was probably related to the family of Lundie of that Ilk, but it is unclear if he played any other role locally.

William (18th C.) taylor in Ormiston, recorded in 1753 when his son William was baptised in Cavers Parish. William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Alison Scott and their son Archibald was baptised in 1772 (also spelled ‘Lundy’ etc.).

Lunn (lun) n. Andrew (18th C.) married Isabel Lillico in Bedrule in 1730. Derek son of Bill and Joyce, he is a local photographer, long-time member of Hawick Camera Club and Associate Member of the Royal Photographic Society. After receiving a camera as a 21st-birthday gift, he decided to turn his hobby into his profession. His work has included weddings and commercial commissions, but he is particularly known for portraits. His studio space has been at 49 North Bridge Street and then 10 Howgigate. He was named Scottish Portrait Photographer of the Year in 2002. With Ian Landles he mounted exhibitions with accompanying books: ‘Honest Men and Bright-eyed Daughters’ (1990); ‘Mair Honest Men...’ (1993); and ‘Son of Honest Men’ (2000). He also plays guitar and sings, being for several years in the band ‘3D’ and later drummer in ‘The Medicine Hat’. Donald (1931–2008) born on the Loan, he was an apprentice butcher with Scott & Telfer’s and started his own business on the Howgategate, famous for his tripe and haggis. He also played rugby for the Trades and served in the R.A.F. for 2 years He was Cornet in 1957 and was President of the Callants’, Mosstroopers’ and 1514 Clubs. He married Eileen and had a daughter Vivienne. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married to Janet Hobkirk and their son Walter was baptised in 1639. James (17th C.) weaver in Hawick. His son, also James, was a witness in 1666 to a case involving a fight in St. Mary’s Kirk between William Turnbull and James Chisholme. He could have been the James, married to Marion Brown, whose children, baptised in Hawick, included: Margaret (b.1644); James (b.1646); and Margaret (again, b.1648). The witnesses in 1648 were William Briggs and James Stewart. James (17th C.) weaver in Hawick listed among those who contributed funds for the new Kirk bell in 1693/4. He is probably the resident of the west-side of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. He seems likely to be son of the earlier weaver James. In 1707 he witnessed a baptism for weaver ‘Black’ John Swan. He may be the James, married to Marion Wilson, whose children born in Hawick included: Thomas (b.1671); Marion (b.1672); James (b.1680); Jane (b.1683), Thomas (again, b.1686); and Bessie (b.1689). The witnesses in 1680 were William Swan and William Bridges. Marion who married William Murray in Yarrow in 1701 may be his daughter. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Denholm. His unnamed child was baptised in 1705. Other children, who were probably his include Walter (b.1696), Janet (b.1699), Janet (again, b.1700) and James (b.1708). James (b.c.1705) resident of Hawick. He married Helen Rae (b.c.1711) and their children, baptised in Hawick, included: Katherine (b.1738); and Walter (b.1740). He may be the James, son of John, born in Hawick in 1705, or the son of James born in Cavers in 1708. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf, recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. James (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Earlside. Additionally he was taxed for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797. James (1769–1839) son of Walter and Betty Turnbull. He was born at Colterscleuch. Based on the births of his children he lived at Rough-hope, and elsewhere in the years in the band ‘3D’ and later drummer in ‘The Medicine Hat’. Donald (1931–2008) born on the Loan, he was an apprentice butcher with Scott & Telfer’s and started his own business on the Howgategate, famous for his tripe and haggis. Borthwick and upper Teviot valleys. He married Elizabeth Telford (c.1773–1845), who is buried at Teviothead. Their children included: Elizabeth (1796–1880), who married James Lough at Hoplawshiell; Mina (c.1799–1888), who married Henry Scott and died at Milsington; Joan (c.1801–80), who married William Scott; Walter (1803–73), who married Janet Grievie and died at Meadshaw; Janet (1806–79), who married William Beattie; and Grace, who married Robert Armstrong. Jean ‘Blind Jean’ (d.1778) Hawick resident whose death is recorded along with her nickname. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Clerk and their unnamed child was baptised in 1671. It seems likely that he was father of weaver John, as well as Helen, who married James Scott ‘Laird’. John (17th C.) married Isobel Young in Roberton in 1687. John (17th/18th C.) weaver in Hawick. He is probably the weaver who in 1700 (along with James Scott, Laird) witnessed a baptism for weaver ‘Black’ John Swan. He gave evidence in 1710 about a fight in St. Mary’s Kirk between 2 other weavers. He married Marion Wight in Hawick in 1701. Their children included: Marie (b.1701); Janet (b.1703); and James (b.1705). The witnesses in 1703 were James Scott ‘Laird’ and weaver Mungo Swan, and in 1705 were John Swan, James Scott ‘Westport’ and James Scott ‘Doctor’. It seems likely he was son of the earlier weaver John and the wife of James Scott ‘Laird’ was Helen Lunn, who may have been his sister. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Jean Rule and their children included: Bessie (b.1719); Jean (b.1722); and Isobel (b.1725). weaver in Hawick who gave evidence in 1710 about John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Mary Nisbet and their children included: James (b.1760); Walter (b.1763); and Charles (b.1764). John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Agnes McMillan and their children included: John (b.1762). John (18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His children included Betty (b.1759) and John (b.1761). John (18th/19th C.) farmer at Lodgeknow (in Cavers Parish), recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. John (1777–1861) son of Walter and Betty Turnbull. He was a labourer living in Newcastle. In 1841 he was at about 6 South Liddle Street, and in 1851 was with his son Robert at Eskdalemuir. He married Isabella Eckford, who came from Crailing. Their children included: Walter (1806–79), who was born in Hobkirk Parish, married Margaret Dalgleish and live in Selkirk; Agnes (1807–90), who married Francis Govenlock; George (b.1809); Elizabeth (1817–93), born in Kirkton Parish, married Archibald Hall and died in Langholm; and Robert (1817–56), who married Isabella Armstrong. He secondly married Nelly (d.1870), daughter of John Hotson. John (b.1802) son of James and Janet Reid. He was a woolen and linen draper in Lilliesleaf, recorded in Pigot’s 1837 directory. He was listed as a merchant in Lilliesleaf in 1841. In 1851 and 1861 he was recorded on the south side of Main Street. He lived with his mother Janet and sisters Margaret and Jean. He was probably unmarried when he died. His drapery business was carried on by James Hood, and in 1872 (after his death) was renamed John Lunn & Co. John (1812–71) from Lilliesleaf, he wrote occasional pieces for the local press. He could be the same man as the draper in Lilliesleaf. He chaired the Lilliesleaf centenary Burns Night. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Hawick. In 1689 he was fined by the Magistrates for the ‘exhorbitant’ wedding of his daughter to William Douglas. He was listed as a merchant among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. Probably the same Thomas ‘Lun’ was listed on the west-side of Hawick on the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. He may be the ‘T. Lun’ who was fined by the Bailies in 1675 ‘in not coming to the night watch when he was charged to do so’. He may be the Thomas, married to Margaret Armstrong, whose children baptised in Hawick included Marion (b.1672) and Alison (or perhaps ‘A son’, b.1675); the witnesses in 1675 were James Newbie and William Swan. He witnessed a baptism for Patrick Bridges in 1678, along with William Swan. Thomas (17th/18th C.) weaver in Hawick. In 1724 he appeared before the Session to apologise for defaming his fellow weaver William Scott. He was probably the Thomas born in Hawick in 1686 to James and Marion Wilson. Thomas (18th C.) weaver at Shuttlehaa near Teviothead. It is unclear how he was related to other local Lunns. He was married to the sister of James Swanson, who brought Tom Jenkins to the area; however, her name is not known. After Swanson died a few days after returning to Hawick, he looked after Jenkins, as well as Swanson’s illegitimate son James. Thomas (18th/19th C.) stocking manufacturer in Lilliesleaf, in partnership with James Sterling, as recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. Walter (17th C.) resident of Denholm on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. Walter (b.1740) baptised in Hawick Parish, son of James and Helen Rae. He lived at Colterscleuch. He married Betty Turnbull in Hawick in 1765. Their children included: Betty (b.1766), who married Archibald Scott; James (1769–1839), who married Elizabeth Telford; Walter (b.1773), who married Betty Hobkirk; John (1777–1861), who married Isabella Eckford and died in Newcastle; Robert (1782–1865), who married Elspeth (or Euphemia) Hope and died in Langholm; and Janet (1783–1862), who married John Sword and died at Easter Alemoor. Betty who was baptised in Cavers Parish in 1756 (unless this is an error) may also have been his child. Walter (18th C.) merchant in Hawick. He paid the horse tax in 1792–94 and the cart tax in 1797. He became bankrupt in 1799. In 1801 he is described as ‘Merchant or Travelling Packman, laterly residing in Hawick’ whose estate was sequestered and he was the subject of a petition by his trustee Hawick merchant John Nixon (this being written by Sir Walter Scott). Nixon opposed his request to be declared ‘cessio bonorum’, on the basis that he had in fact misled his creditors in various ways. In 1803 he was in Edinburgh Tolbooth, presumably the result of being a debtor. His wife was Elizabeth Hay (formerly wife of William Borthwick), daughter of Alexander Hay and Janet Smith. Walter (18th/19th C.) merchant in Hawick. He was born in Teviothead Parish in 1808. Walter (1803–73) son of James and Elizabeth Telford. He was born in Teviothead Parish and worked as a shepherd and agricultural labourer, living at Meadshaw in 1841, 1851 and 1861. In 1828 he married Janet, daughter of Walter Grieve and Margaret Glendinning; she died in 1883. Their children were: Isabella (1828–60), who married John Preston and died in Lilliesleaf; James (b.1830); Elizabeth (b.1834), who married John Murray; James (again, b.1836), who married Margaret Hunter; Agnes (1842–94); and Jane (1844–59). Walter (??–??) writer of the local poem ‘Thachts o Langsyne’. He may be the same as one of the other Walters. William (18th C.) resident at Mabonlaw in 1774 when his son John was baptised in Roberton Parish. Adam (b.1776) was probably also his child (formerly written ‘Lun’, ‘Lume’, etc.).

Lunon (lu-in) n. London, capital of England, once connected to Hawick by train – ‘Frae Lunon town an act they shaw, To summon men by dint o’ law’ [JR]. ‘...I wonder how the King an’ the fouk o’ Lunon allow sic things’ [RW] (spelled several ways).

Lurtin (lu-in) adj., arch. sprightly – ‘She’s a lurtin’ hizzy’ [GW].

Luppen (lu-pin) pp., adj., arch. leapt – ‘The flae’s luppen away’ [ECS], ‘That stirk’s luppen owre the yett’ [ECS], burst, split open – ‘A luppen cabbitch’ [GW], ‘Thae’s grand mee taathis; they’re aa luppen’ [ECS], ‘His beelin’ finger’s luppen’ [ECS] (this is the past participle form of lowp, with the past tense being lap or lowpit).

Luppen-oot (lu-pin-oot) adj., arch. flushed through blushing, broken out in a red rash – ‘A luppen-oot face (cf. flown-oot)’ [ECS].

Lurden (lu-din) n. farm in the former Hassendean Parish, just to the north of Knowetownhead (this is an old Scots word for ‘mean fellow, sluggard’).

Lurden Burn (lu-din-burn) n. small stream that rises near Clarlaw, passes Hassendeanburn farm and joins the Hassendean Burn at Lurden. A footbridge over the burn gives access to the farm.

Lurden Entry (lu-din-en-tree) n. former name for a track leading from Lurden and Knowetownhead to the B6359 just east of Horsleyhill. There was a railway bridge over the track here, and another bridge over the railway to the south.

Lurgie (lu-gee) n. nickname of Robert Wilson, deriving from the family home of Lurgiescleuch.

Lurgies Burn (lu-gee-burn) n. stream that runs into the Harwood Lake in the upper Rule valley. It is formed from Black Cleuch and the Freestone Cleuch.

Lurgiescleuch (lu-gee-clooch) n. farm on the track above Harwood, lying on the Lurgie Burn. It was the former home of Hawick historian Robert Wilson’s family (probably his grandfather), hence his nickname ‘Lurgie’. It once formed the eastern quarter of the lands of Fairnilee and was sold by William, Earl of Lothian in 1647 (along with Stanedge) to Sir Thomas Ker of Cavers. There was 1 hearth listed on the tax rolls at the end of the 17th century. John Wilson was there in 1786. James Dryden and Thomas Potts were there in 1821. Shepherd James Wilson and his family were there in 1861 and G. Pringle in 1868. An old road crosses from here to Langburnshiel in the Slitrig valley (it is 'Lurgiscleuch' in 1647 and 'Lurgiscleugh' in 1694 and 1786; the farm is marked 'Lurgyscleugh' on Stobie's 1770 map; the origin of the name is obscure).

Lurgies Rig (lur-geez-rig) n. ridge in the upper Slitrig valley, high above Lurgiescleuch and Lurgies Burn.

Lurgie’s Well (lur-geez-wel) n. popular name for a spring beside St. Leonard’s, named after Robert ‘Lurgie’ Wilson, from it being a favourite rendezvous of his. It is said that he fell asleep there and caught the chill that led to his death.

luskee (his-kee) n., poet. meaning uncertain – ‘In the upland way . . . the luskees there that busk the brae Are the bees that mak’ the honey’ [HSR].

Lustruther (in-stru-thur) n. farm and surrounding area in Southdean, just south of the main road between Cheeters and Southdean. Robert Oliver was tenant there about 1502. The Olivars farmed there for many generations, this being the same family as the Olivars of Dinlabyre, and said to have been descended from the Strynds branch. It has also been stated that around the 17th century the family made a fortune from driving Scottish cattle to markets in England, when that was illegal. It was described being 2 steadings valued at 50 shillings in the Exchequer Rolls in 1538 and 1539. In 1541 the tenants listed on the rental roll were William (‘the Lawyer’), Marion (his mother), John (‘Blackhead’), another John, Katherine, Marion, Janet and Robert Oliver; it was split into 4 parts, with total value 50s. A tower near here was burned by Dacre’s men (led by Sir John Radcliff) in late 1513 and by the English again in 1544; there is now no sign of the tower house, and the modern farmhouse bears the date 1777. William Oliver, Hob Oliver and John Oliver, younger, were all ‘of Lustroder’ when they were among Olivers swearing allegiance to Henry VIII in 1544. It is said that around the 17th century the Olivars of Lustruther made a fortune engaged in (illegally) driving cattle across the Border. David Turnbull, tenant there, was exiled for perjury in 1622. The tenants of the farm in 1669 were Agnes Shiel and William Oliver. Christian Oliver was recorded there in 1684. George Riddell was there in 1688, John Oliver in 1694, William Slatter in 1797 and James Fair around the 1820s. Above the plantation known as Lustruther Strip is a short linear earthwork, and in the same area there is a quarry, field boundaries and rig and furrow lines (the origin is probably Old English ‘hlose’ and Middle English ‘struther’, meaning ‘the pig-sty by the marsh; the name is first recorded in 1502 as ‘Lustruthir’, it is ‘Lurchootbrother’ in 1513, ‘Lustroder’ in 1538, ‘Lustrudir’ in 1539, ‘Lustroder’ and ‘Lustrodder’ in 1544, ‘Lwstruder’ in 1562, ‘Lustrrother’ in 1583, ‘Lustruhir’ in 1622 and ‘Lusteruther’ in 1694; it appears on Gordon’s c. 1650 map as ‘Listruther’ and on Blaen’s 1654 map as ‘Listruhtherr’).

lut (lu’, lut) v., poet. to let – ‘An’ he lut it fa’ in the middle o’ thair camp roon’ about thair bydin’-pieces’ [HSR], ‘The king sendet an’ lowset him; een the ruulir o’ the peeples, an’ lut him gae free’ [HSR] (cf. luirt and luit).

Lutherdale (loo-thur-dal) n. Andrew (15th C.) recorded as Rector of Abbotrule in 1476 when he supplicated to the Pope to be allowed to hold 2 benefices at once. His name appears as ‘Luderdel’. Probably the same Andrew was Abbot of Dryburgh from 1482–1508. He seems likely to be related to the Lairds of St. Mary’s Isle in Kirkudbrightshire, who appear to have moved there from the Roxburghshire and Berwickshire area in the mid-16th century. Andrew (15th/16th C.) recorded as ‘Andrea Luderdaill’ when he witnessed the baronial sasine for Hawick in 1511/2. This was alone with Robert (Chaplain) and James, who were presumably related. He also witnessed the sasine of 1514 for James Douglas of Drumlanrig. He may be the same as the earlier Andrew, or else was probably related to him. David (d.bef. 1486) recorded as Archdeacon of Teviotdale 1474–75. His is probably the ‘Duncan archd. of Glasgow’ mentioned in 1474. He appears as Archdeacon of Dunkeld 1475–79. He was also Canon of Dunblane and Rector of St. Ternan in Arbuthnott. He served as Comptroller (i.e. responsible for accounts) under James IV. James (15th/16th C.) probably related to Andrew and Robert, who also witnessed the 1511/2 sasine for the Barony of Hawick, the ceremony taking place at the Mote. It is possible he is the ‘James Liderdele, chaplainn native of Scotland’ recorded in Greenwich in the 1516 ‘Patent Rolls’ of Henry VIII. John (15th C.) notary in Edinburgh who witnessed a document relating to the lands of Kirkurd for the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1475/6. He is recorded as ‘Jhoanne Lutherdale’. Robert (15th/16th C.) first witness to the 1511/2 sasine for giving the Barony Lyall to Sir William Douglas of Drumlanrig. He is recorded as ‘domino Roberto Lutherdale, capellano’, so he was Chaplain, presumably of Hawick, and held a Masters degree. Andrew and James were also witnesses, and so probably brothers or sons. He also witnessed the sasine for the Barony in 1514, listed after Alexander Newton, ‘vicario de Hawik’. This suggests he had a subsidiary function to Newton, or was in charge of one of the smaller chapels within the Barony. Probably the same ‘domino Roberto Luthirdaile’ was listed in a Glasgow Diocese document in 1510. Thomas (15th C.) witness in 1432 to the sasine giving the Barony of Cavers and Sheriffdom of Roxburghshire to William Douglas; there his name is recorded as ‘Thoma Luderdaill’, and he is listed as a Burgess (presumably of Hawick) along with Simon Routledge. He was also ‘Thoma de Lutherdale’ in 1452 when he was among 4 Burgess of Hawick on the list of witnesses to the sasine granting the Barony of Hawick to William Douglas of Drumlanrig. He is recorded in an early Hawick sasine of 1453, where his name was written ‘Thomas of Lutherdale’. In 1455 he was ‘Thomas de Lutherdale’ when he witnessed a document at St. Mary’s relating to the lands of Whitchesters. And in 1456 he was one of the witnesses for another Whitchesters document, where he is listed as ‘Thoma de Lutherdale’ and one of the burgesses (of Hawick presumably) (also spelled ‘Luderdale’, ‘Luderdaill’, ‘Lutherdale’, etc.; this may be a variant of ‘Lauderdale’; cf. Liddersdale, which may be based on ‘Liddesdale’, but may in some cases be the same surname).

Lyall (Il-ul) n. Joseph C. (19th C.) registrar for Ewes Parish in at least the 1860s to 1880s. He also served as Session Clerk and Clerk to the School Board. Thomas ‘Tom’ (1940–2020) born in the Haig, son of lorry driver Tom and Ina Scott, he attended Trinity and the High School. He was known as a successful rugby player in the back row and as centre for the Y.M. and also played for Hawick R.C. He worked Turner & Rutherfords, Braemar and John Laing, ending up as knitting manager. He married Georgie Collins and they had children Julie, Kirsty and Kendra.

Lyand (Il-and) pres. part., arch. lying – ‘...with the pertinentis, liand within the baronie of Branshelme ...’ [SB1569], ‘...for the composition of hir teindis of Trowis, liand within the parrochin of Cauers’ [SB1574], ‘...of the said lands of Flex heritable pertaining to him liand contiguous with and to our Common of Havicke ...’ [BR1692], ‘...upon ane tenement of land of his in Hawick, lyand betwixt the land of James Brown on the north part ... ’ [JW] (also written ’liand’).

Lydgate (lid-ga) n. Adam (15th C.) recorded as ‘Adam de Lydgdat’ in 1453 when he witnessed a sasine at Miltsington. Several of the other witnesses were local men, but it is unclear where he was from.

Lyin money (Il-in-mu-nee) n., arch. unused money – ‘Lyin money or eidl (idle) money = unused capital, or money not invested in any business or enterprise, etc.’ [ECS].

Lyle (lll) n. Adam (16th C.) recorded in 1567 as ‘man and servand’ to David Turnbull of Wauchope. Turnbull was ordered to present him to answer charges of raiding into England. Agnes McDonald nee Robson, ‘Nan’, M.B.E. (1929–2010). Born and lived in Hawick all her life, she had several jobs, including librarian at Newmill. She was associated with many local clubs and charitable organisations, in particular with the Scouting movement along with husband Rob, for which she received an M.B.E. in 1988. She received many honours from the Scouts, including the Silver Wolf, serving as a leader for about 60 years. She gave a talk to the Archaeological Society on the history of Scouting in Hawick. She was also awarded the Paul Harris Fellowship by the Rotary Club and had a village school named after her in Kenya, following her work with the Borders Exploration Group. A memorial cairn was erected on Whitchesters Hill in 2011, with an associated walk. The top of the cairn is inscribed ‘Baden-Powell Do your best. Try and leave this world a little better than you found it’. Her children were Ruth, Joyce and Andrew. John (17th C.) possible name for resident near Leaugh in Castleton Parish according to the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. His name appears to be written ‘Leule’. John (18th/19th C.) John recorded as ‘John Lisle in Denholm’ in 1818 when his marriage to was Jean Turnbull was announced in Melrose Parish. Fr. John Stevenson (1850–c.1920) born in Derry, he served in the army, but becoming a convert to Catholicism, he abandoned a military career to train for the priesthood. He was ordained in 1889, became assistant at Falkirk and then served as Hawick’s priest 1892–1912. He was known as a quiet man, but always at the beck and call of his congregation. He personally taught the older pupils in the mornings and held a boy’s club after school. He oversaw the widening of the seatings within the chapel. In failing health, he was transferred to Peebles. Robert 2nd Lord Lyle (d.1497) son of Robert, 1st Lord. He was based in Renfrewshire. He served as ambassador to England from 1472. In 1482 he was charged with treasonable communication with James, 9th Earl of Douglas, but was acquitted. He gained some of the Earl of Angus’ lands in 1485. In 1488 he was assigned the lease of Sundhope in the Yarrow valley and gave up the lease on ‘Garlacleuch et Blakhous’. He was one of the Justiciars at the Circuit Court in Jedburgh in 1493 and in Jedburgh and Selkirk in 1494. He was involved with negotiations with James III before the Battle of Sauchieburn (where he was probably present) and afterwards when James IV was crowned, for whom he served as Royal Justiciar. He was succeeded by his son Robert. Robert S. ‘Rob’ (1921/2–91) brought up in Hawick, he worked with Hawick Hosiers Co., but then became an apprentice with Ingles the joiners. He served in the R.A.F. in WWII and later became a cabinet maker with Temples House Finishers. He then trained at Moray House and became a High School woodwork teacher for the next 30 years. While there he started the High School Pipe Band and was also a guidance teacher. He was also a founder member of the Trades rugby team. He was a piper with the Home Guard, Ex-Servicemen’s and Scout Pipe Bands (which he restarted in 1972). He was heavily involved with the Scout movement for most of his life, becoming Group Scout Leader for Hawick, Assistant District Commissioner for Roxburgh and Border Scout Mountain Adviser. He was awarded the Medal of Merit in 1972 and the Silver Acorn by the Chief Scout in 1980. In 1954 he married Nan Robson. Walter (16th C.) ‘exhorter’ of Southdean Parish in 1567. Perhaps the same Walter (although recorded as ‘Pyle’) was exhorter at Foulden in 1563; it is possible that ‘Foulden’ is an error for ‘Souden’. William (b.1796/7) from Melrose, he was a farm steward in the Hawick area. In 1851 he was living at ‘Pitt Cottage’, near Branxholme Braes. His wife was Helen, and they had children, John, Thomas, William, Margaret and Alexander. William (1833–1904) co-founder of Lyle & Scott’s. Born in Hawick, he initially travelled for William Laidlaw & Sons, then managed Wilson & Armstrong’s. Along with Walter Scott he founded Lyle & Scott as a hosiery manufacturers in 1874/5, running the company alone after Scott died in 1892. Not prominent in public life, nevertheless he was a manager of the Cottage Hospital and benefactor of the Jubilee Nursing Scheme, as well as being Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. He was an elder at St. Andrew’s Free Church and a staunch Liberal. A keen outdoor sportsman, he tenanted the Pilmuir shootings for many years. He was also a keen gardener, as attested by the grounds at his home, Kildowian. He married Agnes, daughter of weaver Charles Scott; she died in 1899, aged 68 and was a cousin of Sir James A.H. Murray (formerly written ‘Lisle’ and variants).

Lyle an Scott’s Brig (hil-in-skots-brig) n. footbridge across the Slitrig connecting the Back Braes to a footpath behind the Lyle & Scott’s factory on Liddesdale Road. It was built in about 1957 by an engineering company from Monmouth, under the instruction of Adam Balmer, chief engineer of the factory. There had previously been flat stepping stones there, which were useful when the river was low. With the expansion into Y-fronts the company built the bridge to assist its workers from the West-end (also sometimes called ‘the Backbrae Fitbrig’).

Lymiecleuch (li-mee-klooch) n. farm on the side road south-west of Teviothead. In 1670 it was purchased from William Elliott, younger of...
Lymiecleuch Burn

Stobs, by Simon Elliot of the Binks and Swinside, William Elliot of Unthank, and William’s son Adam. At that time it included the lands of Corriesike, Langbyre and Giddenscleuch. In 1678 it was valued at £1000 and part of the estate of Elliott of Stobs. The precise ownership in the late 17th century is complicated. Sir William Elliott of Stobs and William Elliot paid the land tax in 1678 for their halves of the lands, each valued at £500. Adam Elliot of Mosspeebie gained a charter of the lands in 1673, but lost them in 1687. In that year Sir William Elliott of Stobs, issued a charter to his brother John for these lands, but John did not gain possession until 1695. About 1695 William and Robert Elliot of Lymiecleuch and Penchrise were charged with theft by John Riddell of Haining; failing to appear, their surety, Gilbert Elliot of Stobs paid the fine, and after a further payment acquired both farms. Adam Elliot of Lymiecleuch was involved in a legal action with Anna Duchess of Buccleuch in the period 1698–1703. Adam Elliot was there in 1705, Walter Scott in 1708, James Telfer in 1717 and James Jardine in 1719. William Pott was there in 1727, Thomas Davidson was there in 1730 and John Rae in 1731. In 1788 James Elliot was farmer there in 1841 and John Clerk in 1868. It was used as a shooting lodge in the late 19th century. The hill above is called Limie Hill, and the Limie Sike joins the Limnieside near Canonbie, for oor tools, Jess McVeetie’s for rock bools.

Lynch’s (lin-cheez) n. toy shop on the north side of the High Street, at No. 19, in the latter part of the 20th century. Also known as ‘J. Lynch’ (pronounced J), ‘Miss Lynch’s’ and ‘Pairky Aathing’s’. It closed in 1989 — ‘Oo went ti Paisley’s for oor tools, Jess McVeetie’s for rock bools, Lynch’s hed a’ kinds o’ toys, Ellen Riddle hed her pies . . .’ [IWL].

Lyne (lin) n. farm marked on Gordon’s manuscript map c.1650 and Adair’s c. 1688 manuscript map of the Sherifdom of Ettrick Forest, between Milsington and Hosocate, on the north side of the Borthwick. This corresponds roughly to the position of Deanburnhaugh. It is probably the same place referred to in several charters and other documents along with Girnwood as ‘Greenwood and Lyne’. In 1488 the lands were leased by Robert Scott from Thomas Turnbull, later leased by the Lords of Home, and sold to the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1532/3. The lands were ratified to Anna, Duchess of Buccleuch in 1693. It seems likely this was associated with the waterfall at Girnwood Linn, to the west of the farm of Girnwood (it is ‘Lyne’ in 1488).

Lyne (lin) n. William (17th C.) tenant of Goldielands in 1642 when he is recorded as part of an accusation (probably unfounded) of theft in Hawick magistrates court. His wife was Margaret McDougall.

Lynn (lin) n. Richard (19th/20th C.) served as Burgh Foreman for Hawick. In that capacity he lived at 10 Slitrig Crescent. He is probably the ‘Dick’ whose son ran Swinton the builders in Hawick. It is said that just after the Boer War he came across another Hawick man in South Africa, while leaning out of a train window, and although they recognised each other, the train passed before they could talk.

Lynnlie (li-nee) n., ins. name sometimes used for someone from Lynnwood housing estate, usually used derogatorily.

Lynnwood see Lynnwud

Lynnwood (lin-wud) n. Lynnwood, an area in the south-west of Hawick, off the Newcastleton Road, on a flat piece of ground in a loop of the Slitrig. It became a council housing estate on the outskirts of town, built in 1933 and comprising Lynnwood Road and Lynnwood Crescent. Originally a pleasant enough residential area, it grew to be infamous, becoming synonymous with the least desirable elements within the town, the area being renamed Liddesdale in an attempt to reinvent the area. It fell into a state of disrepair and was largely demolished in 1980–81, being completely levelled in 1991 to make way for new housing. After a public vote the area was renamed Lynnwood again – ‘The plaintive sound is wafted on the gale, And Lynnwood’s sighs are heard to join the wail’ [WNK], ‘Oh Lynnwood guards the South approach, Drumlanrig holds the West . . .’ [NM], ‘Since Stephenson’s infernal din Came screamin’ doon frae Linwood Linn . . .’ [WP] (named for the ‘limn’, i.e. stream in a ravine, and wood that stood there; sometimes spelled with one ‘n’, and sometimes with an ‘i’).

Lynnwood Brig (lin-wud-brig) n. Lynnwood Bridge, name sometimes used for the bridge across the Slitrig to Lynnwood House. It may also refer to the bridge behind Lyle & Scott’s factory, connecting Liddesdale Road with the ‘Back Braes’. A footbridge near there, sometimes called ‘Nixon’s Brig’, was washed away in the 1846 flood.

Lynnwood Cauld (lin-wud-kawld) n. Lynnwood Cauld, the weir built upstream from Lynnwood, by Slitrig Viaduct, which once helped supply the water power for Lynnwood Mill. It was sometimes known as ‘Nixon’s Cauld’. It was partly swept away in the flood of 1846.

Lynnwood Crescent (lin-wud-kre-sin’) n. Lynnwood Crescent, street at the south east end of town, named after the nearby stream and wood, with the houses built in 1933. It was renamed Liddesdale Road in 1971 and by 1991 the houses have been demolished and the site cleared, with new housing appearing from 2001.

Lynnwood Hoose (lin-wud-hoos) n. Lynnwood House, built for William Nixon on the western bank of the Slitrig north of the ‘Scaur’. It is a large white house on the right-hand side of the road driving out of Hawick, and is now split into flats. It was certainly built before 1841 and William Nixon was still recorded there in 1868. Originally the house was reached via a drive that crossed a ford over the Slitrig, but in 1878 a bridge was erected and the gate lodge built, along with landscaping of the gardens. During WWII it was used as a hostel for women war workers.

Lynnwood Ludge (lin-wud-luj) n. gate house for Lynnwood House at 10 Liddesdale Road. It was probably built in 1878 at the same time as the bridge over the Slitrig to the main house. It is a single-storey house with a rectangular plan, but with overhanging eaves and an attic gable.

Lynnwood Mill (lin-wud-mil) n. Lynnwood Mill, hosiery mill at Lynnwood, built by John Nixon & Sons, with the first construction perhaps being as early as 1803. Before it was built the spun wool was sent to Galashiels for carding; but the new factory enabled the spinning and carding to be carried out in one place. The factory was probably extended during the days of William Nixon, and the 1858 Ordnance Survey map clearly shows the associated gasometer and ‘tenter fields’. The mill was sold to Laidlaws in 1864. There was a serious fire there in 1869, with rebuilding afterwards. It was a prominent factory throughout the 19th century, but closed at the beginning of the 20th. Water power was provided by a short lade, fed from Lynnwood Cauld. It was demolished in 1933 to make way for the Lynnwood housing scheme – ‘While fashion’d fair and wardly gear May charm whae’er they will, Gi’e me my ain, my bonnie Jean, – The lass o’ Lynwood Mill’ [JT] (also sometimes ‘Lynnwood Mills’).

Lynnwood Road (lin-wud-röd) n. Lynnwood Road, name given for the continuation of Slitrig Crescent, being the beginning of the B6399 leading to Newcastleton. The mill lade used to pass along the east side of the road, in front of all the houses there. The name was given when new houses were built in 1933, and came from the nearby stream and wood. It was renamed Liddesdale Road in 1971, had new houses built in 1973, and the houses at the southern end were demolished in 1982.

Lynnwood Wud (lin-wud-wud) n. name sometimes used for the wood above Lynnwood, or possibly for the wood that was formerly at Lynnwood before development.

Lynwud see Lynnwud

Lyons (ll-in) n. Andrew (b.1870) son of David. He married Margaret Drysdale and their children were: Nellie (d.1995), who worked at Braemar and was National President of the Baptist Church; Jessie, who married an Elder; Jane or Jean who worked in a hospital and married an Oliphant; and David, who worked in a spinning mill. He lived at about 29 High Street. His wife was Margaret and their children included Matthew, Andrew, William, Walter, Jean, Francis Dick, David and Elizabeth. David (b.1852) son of Robert. He was a wool frame-work knitter. He was a member of the Baptist Church. He was an amateur botanist. He also supported a campaign to stop employers paying wages in pubs. In 1869 he married Jane Cullen and their children were: Peter and William, who died in infancy; Andrew (1870–1940); Barbara Waters (1873–1959), who was hit by a motorbike when a child, and had to wear callipers; William Cullen (b.c.1876); Catherine Johnstone Taylor (1877–1965), who had a sweet shop on Bright Street; Janet Gray Cullen (1880–1919), who emigrated to Canada; Robert (1882–1923); James Cullen (1884–1964), who moved to Earlston, returning to Hawick after he retired; and David William Waters (b.1888), who worked at Braemar. David (b.1852) cousin of Martha. He was grocer at Deanburnhaugh and later foreman with George Hogg & Sons. He married Isabel Scott (b.1847) (19th C.) brother of James and Martha. He was a soldier. Dickie see Dickie Lyon, Isabel (b.c.1810) originally from England, she is listed in 1841 as a glover, living on 'Kirk Yard'. Rev. James (1849–1936) son of a Hawick stockingmaker, brother of David and Martha. He was a painter's apprentice who later went to America and then became a Methodist missionary in India. He was District Superintendent, M.E. Church Mission, Roorkee, U.P. India. Later he was Church of Scotland Acting Chaplain at Kotagiri, Madras. John (d.c.1423) was proposed as Archdeacon of Teviotdale in 1418. This was done by James I, while he was in captivity. Other men held the Archdeaconry at about the same time, however, he continued to retain some rights until his death. John (1431–1497) son of Patrick, he was 3rd Lord Glamis, succeeding his brother in 1486. He attended university, perhaps in Paris, and was appointed as Justiciar North of the Forth. He was one of the Justiciars at the Circuit Court in Jedburgh and Selkirk in 1494. He married Elizabeth Scrymgeour and was succeeded by his eldest son, John. Three other sons of his were killed at Flodden. Matthew (19th C.) Hawick stockingmaker, with a small shop near Hawick Mill. He apparently figured out how to make improvements so that silk and wool for men's coats could be made using the stocking frame. He was given £40 from the Board of Trade for this innovation. He sold a cloak to the Duchess of Buccleuch, then made one for the Duke of York, which used lamb's wool in a tartan pattern. This was exhibited in the Town Hall, following which the Duke ordered a second. He then made a cloak of blue silk and scarlet wool for King George IV and was at Dalkeith House when it was presented to him in 1822. There is a sketch of him by Alexander Michie. He could have been the Matthew, married to Janet Norrie, whose son Matthew was born in Hawick in 1796. The death of Matthew, son to stocking-maker Matthew, is recorded in Hawick in 1816. Richard (19th C.) resident of Hawick. In 1863 he presented to the Museum a Roman coin that was found when the Auld Brig was demolished in 1851. Robert (16th C.) recorded as 'fabro farraris' (i.e. horseshoe maker or blacksmith) in Hawick in a list of creditors of William Scott, younger of Buccleuch, in 1552. Robert (b.1850) married Joan Currie and had 8 children in Hawick. They were: Catherine (b.1873); Andrew (b.1875); William (b.1877); Jessie (b.1879); Daniel (b.1881); James (b.1885); Robert (b.1885), possibly a twin of James; and Mary (b.1890) (formerly spelled 'Lion'). Lyons (Il-inz) n. Deborah 'Debbie' singer with the Hawick Amateur Operatic Society and band 3D. In 2005 she was the first woman to sing at the Common Riding Dinner.

M' (muk) n. old written variant of 'Mac' or 'Mc', e.g. in 'Rev. John M'Rae, D.D.'.

ma (maw) adj. my - 'Where is ma cornet? Get mounted an' ride!' [JEDM], '...ma hoose upon the rock'[JEDM], 'And now that Ah've come tae the end o' ma sang ...'[WAP], 'For fate decreed that Hawick Among the hills should be ma hame'[IW], 'The true Objective Singular ma is now almost obsolete, except among old people, the plural 'us' being regularly used instead'[JAHM].

Ma Baa (maw-baw) n. nickname for Jackie Wright.

Maben (mä-ben) n. Ann nee Armstrong (b.1819) born in Southdean Parish, daughter of schoolmaster Thomas. In 1849 she became the 2nd wife of farmer James. She took over the running of Town-o-Rule farm after the death of her husband. In 1861 she was recorded there as farmer of 230 acres, employing 7 labourers. Her son William eventually took over the farm. Bryden minister of Castleton Parish from 1965. He was famously arrested for leading a protest against the closing of the Waverley Line, blocking the level crossing in Newcastle upon the last train. He was previously in the Orkneys, where he led a male voice choir, which released a record ‘Men of Orkney’. James (1817–58) farmer at Town-o-Rule, son of shepherd William and Jane Hall. He married Elizabeth Douglas in 1844 and in 1849 he married his 2nd wife, Anne Rutherford Armstrong. His children included: William, who later farmed at Town-o-Rule; Sarah; and Jane, who married William Whillans. Robert (19th/20th C.) coal merchant in Hawick. He retired in 1914 and the firm was continued by his sons Walter and Thomas. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He witnessed baptisms in 1656 for Patrick Redford and in 1661 for James Miller and Margaret Redford. He married Margaret Drummond and their children included John (b.1651), Helen (b.1657) and Thomas (b.1659). The witnesses in 1651 were George Walker and Robert (who was surely related). Thomas (19th/20th C.) pharmacist of 5 Oliver Place. He was a prominent member of the Hawick Pharmaceutical and Chemical Association. A fermented ginger beer bottle from his shop is in the Museum and his research notes are in the Heritage Hub. He was on the School Board for 4 years, serving as Chairman. He was associated with the Congregational Kirk in Hawick for about 20 years, being the 3rd to serve as Secretary. In 1899 he and his wife were presented with a gold watch and silver brushes by the Church and further gifts from the School Board when they left Hawick for Glasgow. He married a daughter of Rev. Dr. Adamson. Thomas (1862–1923) born in Jedburgh. He worked as a roadman and drove grocer’s van. He married Isabella Purves and their children included Thomas, Isabella, James (who emigrated to Vancouver around 1910), William (also emigrated to Vancouver), Agnes, Robert and Elizabeth. William (b.c.1845) son of James. He was farmer at Town-o-Rule. He was recorded as farmer there with his mother in 1868 (formerly ‘Mabane’, ‘Meben’ and variants).

Mable (mā-bul) n. James ‘Jamie’ (b.1805/6) born at Falside, he was a carrier, living at Smithfieldhaugh in Kirkton Parish. He carted over to the North Tyne every fortnight. He ran a cart between Hawick and Liddesdale before the railway. He was still recorded at Smithfieldhaugh in 1868. He married Agnes Moffat and their children included James, David and Mary. He was said to be ‘a man of large proportions and of austere countenance, invariably dressed in a square-crowned hat, corduroy trousers, and a huge double-breasted waistcoat with sleeves and flap pockets’. John (d.1951) married Elspeth, daughter of Barton Oliver. His children included Maggie Oliver (b.1903) who married and Anderson (also written ‘Mabel’).

Mabonlaw (mā-bin-law) n. farm above Harden, once part of the estate of the Scotts of Harden, it had more recently been available as a rental cottage. It stands near the Marchelyton Burn, and the hill above, presumably Mabon Law, reaches a height of 256 m and contains a fort, about 55 m by 25 m, with a single rampart and external ditches. It was part of the Harden estate from the 16th to 19th centuries, being valued in 1811 (along with ‘Highchesters Whinny Park’) at £312. In 1576 it was ‘infefted’ to Marion Scott (‘the Flower of Yarrow’) as part of the marriage agreement with Walter Scott (later ‘Auld Wat’) of Harden. There were 18 ‘communicants’ recorded there in 1650, namely Isobel Briggs, John Briggs, Helen Lunn, John White, Janet Turnbull, Bessie White, Robert Rule, Bessie Henderson, James Riddell, Janet Miller, John Wilson, Jean Scott, George Lawson, Margaret Wilson, James Telfer, Janet Easton, John Telfer and Jeanie Brand. John Thomson, was tenant there in 1684, when he was declared as a fugitive for attending field conventicles. The area was part of Wilton Parish until transferred to Roberton in 1690. It was included among lands inherited by Gideon Scott of Highchester from his father Walter, Earl of Tarras in 1694. There were 8 separate households listed there in 1694, including 3 Riddells. John Leithhead was recorded there in 1702. Thomas Anderson was there in 1710, James Wilson in 1710–23, Adam Hardie in at least 1711–1713, Walter Riddell and William Beattie in 1717, William Nichol in 1718–23, Janet Sweet in 1720, William Elliot in 1721–27, John Nichol in 1723, Thomas Turnbull in 1725 and Andrew Chisholme in 1728. It may have been sold by Walter Scott of Harden about 1754. The headlands with Todshaw were divided in 1757. James Hume was living there in 1757, Robert Turnbull in 1763–66, William Laidlaw in 1764–67 and Thomas Nichol in 1766, Walter Elliot in 1771, David Laidlaw in 1772, John Watson in 1773 and William Lunn in 1774. In 1779 it was among lands whose liferent was sold by Walter Scott of Harden to Charles Scott, younger of Woll. John Scott was living there in at least 1780–85, John Henderson in 1780, James Laidlaw was farmer here in 1794–97 and James Miller was also there in 1795. It was valued (along with Highchesters Mill and ‘Dunsbush’) at £463 9s in the late 18th century. Weaver James Miller was living there in 1800. William Rutherford and Walter Clerk were there with their families in 1841 and 1851. Walter Rutherford was shepherd there in 1861. In about 1874 it was listed among the properties of Lord Polwarth. The cottage there has latterly been let as a holiday property (note that older versions of the name are easy to confuse with Mervinslaw; formerly ‘Mabinlaw’ etc., it is ‘Mabenlaw’ in 1643, ‘Maybenlaw’ in 1648, ‘Mabinlaw’ and ‘Maybenlaw’ in 1694, ‘Mevinlaw’ in 1702, ‘Mabinlaw’ in 1710, ‘Mavin law’, and ‘Mavinla’ in 1713, ‘Mebinlaw’ in 1721, 1725 and 1728, ‘Mebonlaw’ in 1764 and 1772, ‘Mebonlay’ in 1774 and ‘Mawbonlaw’ and ‘Mebinlaw’ in 1780; it is ‘Mebinlaw’ on a 1650 parish map, Blaeu’s 1654 map marks ‘Mabinlaw’, while it is ‘Maibenlaw’ on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Mabonlaw Moss (mā-bin-law-mos) n. boggy area to the north of Mabonlaw.

Macbeth (muk-beth) n. (c.1005–57) King of Scotland from 1040. He was the grandson of Malcolm II and claimed the throne over Duncan I (another grandson), who died in battle against him. However, Duncan’s son Malcolm Canmore then fought for the throne, with the assistance of Siward, the Earl of Northumbria, and they captured the south of Scotland. He was then killed by Malcolm and the throne passed to his step-son Lulach.

MacCalman (mu-kawl-min) n. Rev. Ian B. minister of Minto Parish 1956–67. He had been an army Chaplain and his wife was from South Africa. During his time as minister a new manse was built on the Hassendean road.

Maccoll see McColl

MacDiarmid (muk-der-mi’) n. Hugh (1837–1901) real name Christopher Murray Grieve, born in Langholm, he was probably the most famous 20th century Scottish poet. With Hawick’s Francis George Scott and William Johnstone, he formed part of what was sometimes called a Scottish Renaissance in the 1930s. He wrote the poem ‘The Sauchs in the Reuch Heuch Hauch’ (i.e. the Roughheugh Haugh) inspired by a line of James Murray’s, with the poem being set to music by Francis George Scott. Scott was one of his close friends, and set many of his verses to music, as well as helping him to compile various writings into ‘A Drunk Man Looks at the Thistle’. A modern monument to him was erected on Whita Hill in 1988.

MacDonald (muk-do-muld) n. Archibald J.F. ‘Archie’ (1904–83) Liberal M.P. for Roxburgh & Selkirkshire 1950–51. He won with a large majority over Lord William Scott in a by-election, but the next year was defeated by C.E.M. Donaldson by only 829 votes. His name is often spelled ‘Macdonald’. James Ronald (1858–1937) born in St. Andrews, son of James and Catherine. He was educated at Madras College, St. Andrews University and Edinburgh University, where he graduated M.A. in 1880 and was licensed to preach in 1892. He became licentiate at Saughtree Kirk in 1892 and left in 1902 to become assistant and then minister at Eskdalemuir. He married Emily Sophia Nichols. Jessie Stoddart M. (d.2004) wrote ‘The Place-names of Roxburghshire’ (1991) which was started as a thesis project when she was a student and completed for a Transactions article and this book. It mainly focuses on names for which there is evidence before 1600 (and an addendum is lodged with the Borders Archive). She also wrote ‘Bowden Kirk, 1128–1978’ (1978 and 1994). She was a Headmistress at James Gillespie’s in Edinburgh, and retired to Bowden. John (b.1851/2) from Urry in Ross-shire, he was Superintendent of the Hawick Burgh Police force from about 1878 until 1902. He also acted as Sanitary Inspector, Public Prosecutor and Fire Master. In addition he was Captain of the Golf Club. He can be seen with the Fire Brigade in a photo of 1889. He used to ride at the head of the Common Riding Procession, and can be seen in the Gaylor film clip of 1899. Mr. ?? Police Superintendent in Hawick in the 1970s/80s??.

Robert (b.1817/8) from Muckhart in Perthshire, he was a grocer and wine merchant at about 6 Howegate in 1851. He was already a widower, with daughters Janet W. and Jane M. In Slater’s 1852 directory of Powderhall and Ormiston (19th C.), J.P., officer of the Scots Greys who were used to control riots surrounding elections in Roxburghshire in the 1830s. It is said that in 1836, when he was in Hawick to attend a dinner given for Lord Minto, the open carriage in which he was leaving with his family was followed for about a mile out of town, with a crowd pelting it with mud. He led the troop who were in Hawick to keep the peace at the election of 1837. He attacked the mob along with several special constables, losing his hat and being struck by a stone on the forehead in the doorway of 3 Sandbed. He also attended the 1839 banquet held at Branxholme to honour the Duke of Buccleuch. He subscribed to 4 copies of Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825, when he was already ‘of Ormiston’. He is listed on the 1837 electoral roll, having acquired Ormiston through marriage. He also held lands in Cavers Parish. He served as a Commissioner of Supply, Justice of the Peace and Tax Commissioner for Roxburghshire. He was also a Vice-President of the Edinburgh Border Counties Association. He owned Ormiston House just outside Hawick, and occupied it in the Autumn months (for hunting), with Provost Wilson occupying it for the rest of the year. His children included Alexander and John James, also listed as joint life-renters in 1835. His wife ‘Mrs. Margaret F. McDonald or Muir’ was listed as owner of Ormiston in about 1874.

Macdowall see McDougall

MacDowall (muk-dow-ul) n. Fergus (15th C.) held the benefice of Cavers Parish from about 1465. He was a direct appointee by the Pope, and not by the monks of Melrose that had made some previous appointments. He is probably the Fergus who witnessed a few charters in 1463 and perhaps the same ‘Fergusio Macdowell’ recorded on a charters for lands in Wigtown in 1508. Perhaps 2 men are conflated here: one Fergus, Lord Register and Rector of Wigtown, who was the 2nd son of Uchtred Macdowall, 7th of Garthland; and the other the son of Dungald, who is perhaps the same ‘Fergusio Macdowell’. He probably went round other Hawick’s WWI Roll of Honour. He died in Hawick. Donald (b.1856) from Inverness, he graduated M.A. from Glasgow University in 1878, M.B. from Edinburgh in 1884 and M.D. in 1886. He was at Chester-Le-Street and Ketteringham, before coming to the Hawick area. He lived in Denholm in the 1880s and 1890s. In 1887 he married Jessie, daughter of J.H. Mundell of Mundeville Park, Bournemouth. Their children included Donald Hamilton (d.1918), who fought with the Gordon Highlanders) and Marjorie S. John (18th C.) listed as footman at Borthwickbrae in 1792 and 1793, when he was working for William Elliot Lockhart. Rev. John (1824–73) born in Golspie, Sutherland, he studied at New College, Edinburgh 1850–54. He assisted at Rothesay and the Free New North Church in Edinburgh, was ordained at Kirkurd in Peeblesshire and became minister of Hawick Free Kirk (i.e. St. George’s) in 1865, having been called in 1864. He was apparently a great biblical scholar. In 1865 he married Rev. Wallace’s eldest daughter, Wilhelmmina Hepburn; however, she died of small-pox in 1869. He became ill in 1879 and was given 6 months leave, but died within a couple of months, leaving his only child Augustus Wallace (b.1867) an orphan. Mr. ?? (18th C.) dance-master who hired out part of the Hawick Town House in order to give lessons in 1794. He probably went round other Border towns.

MacGregor (muk-gre-gur) n. Alexander (19th C.) teacher at Saughtree school in the mid-1860s. He took over from James Telfer, who had been teacher there for almost 30 years. He is probably the same as Rev. Alexander, who graduated M.A. from Glasgow University in 1861, was ordained as minister of Haggs in 1865 and was at Inverkeithing and Rosyth from 1866. Augustus Wallace (W.S.) (1867–1937) son of Rev. John and grandson of the Rev. J.A. Wallace. He was employed by Purdom’s in Hawick for 16 years and was later a partner of Auld & MacDonald, W.S. He was a member of the Scottish Zoological Society and the Hawick Archaeological Society, and was also known as a stamp collector (jointly editing a catalogue on the Malay States). He also edited the book ‘Fifty Years of Lawn Tennis in Scotland’ (1927). It is said that he was more interested in tennis than employment, and was a notable player in his youth. He served as a Captain in the K.O.S.B. in WWI, although he was never posted abroad. He also helped execute Hawick’s WWI Roll of Honour. He died in Hawick.

Machell (ma-kel) n. Nicholas (19th C.) listed as a carrier’s agent on the Backdamgate in Pigot’s...
1837 directory. His carts went to Carlisle Edinburgh and parts of Lancashire from the Backdamgate every Monday and Thursday. He married Mary Hunter in Hawick in 1838. Although he is unrecorded after that, it may be that his surname was really ‘Maxwell’ or ‘Mitchell’, for example.

machine (mən-sheen) n., arch. a passenger vehicle, small carriage, motor car – ‘...an A ttlt at fiundin some machine ti serr ma ends’ [ECS].

MacIntyre (mə-kən-tər) n. Charles (18th C.) footman at Riddell in 1794, when he was working for Lady Riddell. Rev. Duncan (1883–1969) son of an Inverness Headmaster, he trained for the Episcopalian ministry, being ordained in 1910. He served as Curate in Hawick that same year before moving to Glasgow. He was later Rector in Dumfries and at Aberfeldy and Strathtay.

Mack (məwk) n. Adam (17th/18th C.) resident of Denholm, where he was recorded in 1718 and 1722. His children included: Jane (b.1718); and John (b.1722). Other children, baptised in Cavers, who could be his include Margaret (b.1707) and Adam (b.1711). Adam (18th C.) from Cavers Parish, he married Margaret Henderson in Robertson in 1749. John (b.1825) son of John and Mary Colledge. He was a grocer and mason in Denholm. He was recorded around Canongate in 1861. In 1850 in Hobkirk Parish he married Jane Bane, and their children included: Janet (b.1851); Mary (b.1853); Emily (b.1856): Agnes; and John (b.1861). In 1867 he secondly married married Euphemia Dickson (who was a widow of John Rutherford), and had a second family: Jane (b.1868); Catherine (b.1870); Robert Dickson (b.1871); and Grace (b.1873). She kept a shop in Denholm, which sold ‘taffy’, scones, etc. William (16th C.) listed as ‘William Mak’, along with 15 other people who occupied Newton in Bedrule in 1531 (it is unclear precisely what his surname was).

Mackay (mə-kə) n. Daniel Neil ‘Neil’ (1928–96) born at 10 Slitrig Crescent, where his father was Burgh Foreman, he was son of draper William Gibson. He was educated at Hawick High School and the Royal High School in Edinburgh and served with the Royal Signals in Sri Lanka. On returning to Hawick he ran the family draper’s shop in Croft Road, and later moved it to North Bridge Street, near the Baptist Opening. He was elected Town Councillor in 1969 and served the Town as Dean of Guild. He was also a Justice of the Peace and later a county councillor, as well as Vice-Chairman of Roxburgh District Council until 1980. He was additionally Chairman of Hawick Chamber of Trade and was an instigator for the twinning of Hawick with Bailleul. He was also a member of Lodge St. John 111. He was a keen writer, originating the ‘Janus’ column in the Hawick News. He also played piano and wrote the song ‘Home Burnfoot’. He was Town Councillor for Burnfoot Ward when he wrote the song, which won a contest set by Burnfoot Residents’ Association. He died at 5 Wilton Glebe and is buried in Wilton Cemetery. Rev. Donald (1817–75) son of Dr. George from Rafford, Moray, he studied in Aberdeen and Edinburgh. He was assistant at Drainie (Lossiemouth) and became a Free Kirk minister there in 1844. He resigned because of ill-health in 1852, but accepted a call to Newcastleton Free Kirk in 1856. He remained until 1860, when he moved to Rafford as his father’s successor. He married Sophia Wood in Dumfries in 1861, but they appear to have had no children. Rev. Donald from Dalrymple, he became minister at Burnfoot in 1966. Hugh Hawick’s deputy librarian for many years, and long-time committee member of the Archaeological Society. He moved to Hawick in 1974. He also served as Registrar and Inspector of Poor for the Parish.

Neil see Daniel Neil. William (19th C.) saddler recorded on Douglas Square in Newcastleton in the 1860s. He could be the same man as the Irish railway worker residing in the village in 1861 (also written ‘MacKay’).

Mackenzie (mə-ken-zee) n. Rev. Alexander (18th C.) minister from Edinburgh. He married Margaret, daughter of Dr. William Rutherford of Barnhills. His wife inherited 1/3 of Barnhills, and he purchased the other 2/3 from his sisters-in-law, Helen and Jean in the late 1730s. He also held lands at Auldstream. In 1749 Barnhills was sold to John Callender, W.S., then immediately to John Mackenzie (possibly a relative) of Devlin and then Rev. Walter Stewart, minister of Ashkirk. Elizabeth Toll-keeper and early member of Allars Kirk. Rev. George Omond (1893–1943) son of John and Janet Ormond, he was educated at George Watson’s and Edinburgh University. He was licensed in 1922, became assistant at Kirkintilloch and was translated from Methil to become minister of Minto Kirk in 1927.
Mackintosh

He demitted in 1935 and was admitted to Nicol- son Street Church, Edinburgh, in 1939. He mar- ried Isabella Jopp Spence and their children were: Ian Gordon (1916–80); Thomas Spence Seaforth (1917–23); George Fingal (1920–45), killed when his ship was torpedoed; Gilbert Onand (1921–2003); Kenneth Macbeth (1923–1992); and Ella Jean Christine (b.1926). James (d.1744) son of George, Earl of Cromarty. He was known as Lord Royston. He was one of the Commission- ers for letting the Duchess of Buccleuch’s lands in Scotland, serving in this capacity 1711–31. In 1725 the Hawick Kirk Session wrote to him asking for assistance with the many poor people in the Parish. There are many letters in existence from the Duchess to him, covering that time period. In about 1730 she wrote about several matters including thanking him ‘for buying that peaee of ground in Hanick. ‘Tis most convenient for me of anie thing belonging to that lillt howse’ (presum- ably referring to land adjacent to Drumlanrig’s Tower). Rev. Laurence (1816–69) son of Andrew of Greenburn. He studied at St. Andrews University 1831–9, and was a Probationer within Perth Presbytery for many years before being ordained as a minister. He was presented to Ashkirk Parish by Gilbert, Earl of Minto in 1843 after John Edmondston walked out with much of the congregation at the Disruption. He was deprived in 1854 and died unmarried in Crieff (see also McKenzie).

Mackintosh (ma-kin-tosh) n. Angus (19th C.) factor to the Earl of Minto in the 1860s. He thus served as Chairman of the Parochial Board. He lived at Minto Cleuchhead, but must have taken over from Ephraim Selby after 1861. mack-like (mawk-like) adj., arch. neat, tidy.

Macksid (mawk-sid) n. farm a little to the east of Hobkirk and Wolfelee, once part of the Barony of Abbotrule. Peter Turnbull is recorded there in 1502. It was acquired by Adam French from the monks of Jedburgh Abbey in 1569. The superiority was still with the Lordship of Jed- burgh in 1587. David Turnbull was there in 1611, Patrick Turnbull in 1618 and Lawrence Turnbull in 1622. It is probably the ‘Laird of Toft’s Turn- bull’s . . . side’ recorded in the 1643 county valuation, valued at £100; Gavin Turnbull was also there (with land valued at £24) and Janet Home was liferenter (with land valued at £50). It was among lands whose superiority was inherited by daughters of George Scott (brother of Sir Wal- ter of Whitslade) in 1670. The lands (or perhaps their superiority) were among those inherited by William Kerr of Abbotrule in 1680. Archibald Shiel was a tenant there in 1684 when listed as a fugitive for attending conventicles. John Turnbull and James Oliver were tenant there in 1694, with William Shiel, Margaret Dickson, William Scott and Thomas Turnbull all listed as cottars. It was sold by William Kerr of Abbotrule to William Elliot of Wolfelee in 1751, becoming part of the Wolfelee estate for the next century and a half. It was listed among the properties of Cornelius Elliot of Woollee in 1788 (in also 1811), with a value (along with Blackcleuchmouth) of £166 15s 4d. It was briefly lived in by James, the 3rd Laird of Wolfelee, while the main house was being built in the 1820s, and again by Mrs. Elliot of Wolfelee during renovations in 1862. There were Turnbuls there in early 17th century and the tenant was John Mair in the mid-17th century, John Sharp in the mid-18th century and Turnbuls again in the late 18th and early 19th centuries. The farm was quite extensive and for a fraction of the 19th century was let out as grassland. Robert Allan was farmer in 1868. Tenants in the late 19th and early 20th centuries were Mr. Clark and then Mr. Logan. There was also once probably a small threshing mill there, powered by water from a pond. There was also once a toll-bar on the road near here (also spelled ‘Maxside’ and vari- ants, it was ‘maxsyd’ in 1502, ‘Maxsyde’ in 1569, ‘Maxsyde’ in 1588, ‘M’syd’ in 1618, ‘Maksyde’ in 1626, ‘Machsyde’ in 1653, ‘Macksyid’ in 1670, ‘Mac-side’ in 1684, ‘Macksyde’ and ‘maxside’ in 1694 and ‘Maxside’ in 1797; it occurs on Gordon’s c. 1650 map as ‘Maxsyd’ and on Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Maxsyde’, although is marked too far north; the origin of the name is probably ‘the slope be- longing to Maccus’, from a variant of the person- alname Magnus, cf. ‘Maxpoffle’ and ‘Maxwell- heugh’ near Kelso).

Macksid Moss (mawk-sid-mos) n. former common near Macksid. Part of the land there was used for the manse of Wolfelee Free Kirk.

Macksideshaw (mawk-sid-shaw) n. former steadings near Macksid. Sir Gilbert Elliott of Stobs had a charter of the lands (along with Wells) in 1659. It was later part of the estate of Wolfelee (recorded in 1659 and 1730).

Macksid Toll Bar (mawk-sid-toł-bawr) n. former toll-house near Macksid, on the Wolfelee estate. There were Thomson’s there in the late 1800s.

MacLean

MacLean (mu-keln) n. Sorley (1911–96) Scottish poet, born on Raasay. He wrote extensively in Gaelic as well as English, had sympathy with far-left politics and served in the Army in North Africa during WWII. He came to Hawick in October 1939 to teach evacuees, and stayed until about the following June. During this period he wrote most of his renowned ‘Dain do Eimhir’ poems.

MacLeod (mu-k-lwd) n. Scott (1979– ) born in Hawick and educated at the High School, he played lock in rugby. He played basketball and golf at school, but joined the Trades at the age of 20. He then played for Hawick R.F.C. He joined the Border Reivers in 2002, but left to play for Welsh rugby team the Scarlets and then for Edinburgh Rugby, before moving to Japanese side Kobe Kobelco Steelers and then the Newcastle Falcons. He was first capped for Scotland in 2004 and has 24 caps, including 2 Calcutta Cup wins. He retired from playing in the 2015/6 season and started coaching (also MacLeod).

MacLeven (mu-k-len-vn) n. Elizabeth ‘Bessie’ (17th/18th C.) from Galloway, she settled at Gorrenberry in Castleton Parish. She was rebuked by the Session for providing a false ‘testimonial’, and explained how she had had a child out of wedlock and had to move.

Macmaster (mu-k-mv-stur) n. Rev. Robert (19th C.) listed as ‘M’Master’, minister of the Hawick Baptist Chapel on Allars Crescent in Slater’s 1852 directory. This is probably Baptist minister Robert Paton Macmaster (1830–95), who was born in Ayrshire, became a Baptist and wandered around preaching for a few years, before obtaining his first formal charge at Walsall in about 1853; he married Annie Robertson miller in Edinburgh in 1852, and was later at Coventry, Bristol, Bradford and Darlington. It seems likely that he spent only a short time in Hawick.

Macmillan (mu-k-niln) n. Hugh (20th C.) head gardener at Brauxholme in the mid-1900s.

Macmillan-Scott (mu-k-niln-sk) n. Arthur Francis of Howcleuch and Langlee (1854–1935) 2nd surviving son of Thomas. He was probably born at Harwood in Rulewater. He was educated at Harrow and was Captain in the 2nd Battalion Rifle Brigade and 5th Lancers. He later became a member of the Scottish Bar and then farmed sheep in Australia for a while. He was then involved in Toyubee Hall (the original ‘settlement house’ for the middle class to live and provide direct aid in poor neighbourhoods) in East London. He joined the Jedforest Club in 1896. He inherited Howcleuch and Langlee from his uncle Charles Scott. In 1899 he married Louisa Leslie Florence, daughter of Henry Strickland Bryant of the Education Department. As a Reserve he was sent to fight in the Boer War in 1900, becoming Captain and receiving the South African Medal. His wife joined him in South Africa for over a year. Katherine Jane née Roberts (d.1913) daughter of Capt. Browne Roberts of the East India Company, who was Sheriff of Calcutta. In 1844 she married the Laird of Wauchope, Thomas. She painted a sketch of Wauchope House in 1848. She had 3 sons and 3 daughters. Her name is also written ‘Catherine’. She lived at Wauchope after her husband’s death, and is recorded as proprietor there in a directory of 1868. She later moved to Pinnaclehill, near Kelso. Thomas, J.P. (1816–62) of Wauchope and Pinnaclehill, eldest son of Walter the 4th Laird. He was educated at Loretto, trained as a lawyer, apprenticed to Lawrence Davidson and Thomas Syme, and became Writer to the Signet in 1838. He joined the Jedforest Club in 1841. In 1844 he married Katherine Jane, daughter of Capt. Browne Roberts from Kent (who had been High Sheriff of Calcutta); his sister-in-law Margaret Amelia Roberts later married his brother Charles of Langlee. They lived in Edinburgh and then at Harwood House, where most of his family was born. Quiet in manner, it is said that the secluded country life suited him. He succeeded to Wauchope after the death of his father in 1857 and moved there. He also held part of Weensland that had previously belonged to Archibald Dickson. He assumed the Macmillan surname after inheriting his maternal grandfather’s estate of Shorthope. His children were: Walter, who died in infancy; another Walter, who succeeded; Arthur Francis; Edith Marion, who married Maj.-Gen. Frederick Edward Sotheby from Northamptonshire; Marion Maude, who died unmarried; and Katherine Margaret, died young after joining a sisterhood in England. Thomas Alexander Frederick (1881–c.1952) 7th Laird of Wauchope and Pinnaclehill, son of Walter. He was educated at Eton and trained as an English lawyer. He let Wauchope out for shooting. He sold it about 1936. He married Karen Anna Erichsen in 1912 and secondly in 1918 married Enid Cynthia Paine. His son was Walter Theodore Robin. Walter (1848–1901) 6th Laird of Wauchope and also of Pinnaclehill, son of Thomas. He was born in Edinburgh and educated at Harrow and Cambridge University. He became Lieutenant in the 6th Dragoons.
Macmorland

Guards and later served as Captain of the Scottish Borderers Militia, based in Dumfries. He had a new house built at Wauchope about 1875. Regarded as reserved like his father, he was fond of reading and also rode with the Blackmoorvale hounds. He was Justice of the Peace for Selkirkshire and Chairman of the Hobkirk School Board. He joined the Jedforest Club in 1869. In about 1874 he is recorded as owner of the estate of Wauchope. In 1888 he was the first County Councillor elected for Hobkirk Parish. He left Wauchope for Bournemouth due to failing health, and died there. In 1876 he married Antoinetta, eldest daughter of Theodore Henry Dury of Bonsall, Derbyshire. His children were: Thomas Arthur Frederick; and Cecille Margaret, who married Cmdr. James Tancred of the Royal Navy.

Macmorland (muk-mor-lind) n. John Peter (1839–93) son of Peterm minister of North Berwick, he was educated in Edinburgh, graduating with his B.D. in 1865. He was licensed by Dunbar Presbytery and became minister of Minto Kirk in 1865. He married Elizabeth Macdonald (who died in 1917), daughter of Eaglesfield Bradshaw Smith of Blackwood House and their only child was Elizabeth Philadelphia Macdonald. Dunbar Presbytery and became minister of Minto Kirk in 1865. He married Elizabeth Macdonald (who died in 1917), daughter of Eaglesfield Bradshaw Smith of Blackwood House and their only child was Elizabeth Philadelphia Macdonald Lockhart, who married William Higgin of Belfast. Alexander Galloway became his assistant and successor in 1878, and he died in Switzerland (also written ‘McMorland’).

Macmorrin (muk-rin) n. William (d.c.1408) cleric of Glasgow Diocese, whose name has variant spellings, such as ‘McMoyin’. He held the position of Archdeacon of Teviotdale sometime shortly before 1408. He may also have been Archdeacon of Glasgow in about 1403.

MacNee (muk-nee) n. Daniel (d.c.1860) preacher at Teviothead from 1847, probably until it became a new Parish in 1850. He then emigrated to Hamilton, Ontario, but later returned to Scotland and died in Edinburgh. George Fraser (1863–1905) born in Wilton, son of Robert and Jemima Fraser. He was a student teacher at Buccleuch School, before moving to Edinburgh where he became Secretary to the Church of Scotland Committee on Education. He was also Vice-President of the Edinburgh Borders Union, organising their Hawick nights. He may have written the article on Hawick Common Riding for the Edinburgh Despatch in 1891. He presented the Cornet with a new Sash in 1898 (on behalf of Terries in Edinburgh), and was a member of the Callants' and Archaeological Clubs. A keen walker of Border hills, he once walked from Hawick to Newcastle in a single day. He also walked Hadrian's Wall extensively and gave illustrated lectures on it. He was also a keen Volunteer, becoming Captain of College Company 4th Volunteer Battalion Royal Scots. He was said to be of a happy and generous disposition and have a boyish enthusiasm for his native town. He died in a shooting accident (his trigger apparently caught on a twig when he was shooting rabbits at Corstorphine) and was buried with military honours in the Wellogate. The MacNee Fountain was erected in his memory by public subscription.

the MacNee Fountain (tu-muk-nee-fown'-in) n. Ornate grey granite drinking fountain in Wilton Lodge Park, near Langlands Bridge. It was erected by public subscription in 1906 in memory of George Fraser MacNee.

MacNeill (muk-neel) n. Jessie (1853–1922) younger daughter of Bedrule Schoolmaster William. From 1882 she assisted her father as sewing mistress. After his death in 1893 she stayed on for a short time, but then became sick-nurse for a farmer in Southdean called Riddell. Late in life she married Denholm postman Hugh Rigby. William (1814–1893) from Tranent in East Lothian, son of David and Frances Fraser. He became teacher at Longniddry in 1844 and then was teacher at Cogsmill from 1849. A few years later he moved to Bedrule School, where he was schoolmaster for 38 years. He also served as Registrar for the Parish, as well as Session Clerk, Inspector of the Poor and Clerk of the School Board. In 1843 he married Helen Imrie (who died in 1878). Their children included: Mary (b.1844); David (b.1845); Frances (b.1847), who married Archibald Stewart; Alexander (b.1849); Helen (b.1851), who married William Cairns Robinson; Jessie (b.1853), who married Hugh J. Rigby of Denholm; and William (b.1857), who died in his teens. His wife worked as an assistant at Bedrule School, but after her death he was denied a request for an assistant. After he resigned and was reinstated, he was able to hire his daughter Jessie as a sewing mistress from 1882. He complained about the state of the schoolhouse in 1892 and retired later that year. The family are buried in Bedrule churchyard (also written ‘MacNeil’ and ‘McNeil’).

Macombie (ma-ko-nee) n. William (17th C.) resident of the former Hassendean Parish. He married Jean Burn in Roberton in 1685 and their children included: John (b.1685); Janet (b.1685); and James (b.1688). The witnesses in 1688 were MacQueen

John and James Martin. His surname could be a variant of 'McCombe'.

MacQueen (mə-kwən) n. Robert (1722–99) advocate of Edinburgh who acted as official council for Hawick in the action regarding the Division of the Common raised in 1767. In 1768 he gave his opinion that the case was unclear, stating that 'on the one hand, that the town hath considered themselves as proprietors of the Commonty . . . but, on the other hand, the Duke has brought a pretty strong proof that his tenants for time immemorial have been in use to pasture, and to cast peats, &c'. He was consulted again in 1774, by which time he was of the opinion that the neighbouring land owners had a claim and suggested that the Town should offer to concede 1/3 of the Common to save expense. He was known as a brilliant lawyer, who was coarse, heavy-drinking and extremely popular. He was afterwards Lord Braxfield, becoming infamous as a judge who was fond of savage punishments, e.g. sentencing reformer Thomas Muir to transportation. He was the original of R.L. Stevenson’s ‘Weir of Hermiston’ and the ‘Jolly Judge’ pub in Edinburgh was named after him. Rev. Richard Rose (b.1833) born at Braemar, he was a missionary involved with the Free Kirk in Hawick. He studied at Edinburgh University. He became the first ordained minister of the West Port Free Church in 1869, staying for only a few years. In 1870 he married Margaret Phillips, widow of brewer George Henry King. He left Hawick in 1872 to move to Dundee and then was translated to Knockando in 1875 (also spelled ‘McQueen’).

MacQuoid (mə-kwōd) n. Peter Craik (b.1895) born on the Isle of Wight and licensed to preach by Edinburgh Presbytery in 1921. Probably his first charge was as assistant in Hawick. He moved to become minister at Bothkennar in 1924 and went to Turriff in 1927.

MacRae (mək-rə) n. Rev. Dr. John (1815–92) native of Glasgow (born on Burns birthday), he was the son of James, a Glasgow shoemaker. He was educated at Glasgow University and licensed by that Presbytery. He succeeded Wallace as Minister of Hawick Parish at the Disruption of 1843 and remained for almost 50 years. He lived in the Manse on Buccleuch Road. He moved from St. Mary’s to the new Old Parish Church in 1844. His time as minister also saw the creation of the separate congregations of St. Mary’s and St. John’s. He was the instigator for the founding of the Industrial School (later Drumlanrig) and also served as an Orrock Trustee. He was one of the most scholarly preachers of his age, receiving an honorary Doctor of Divinity from Glasgow University in 1864. He also founded the Blantyre Mission in British Central Africa (now Malawi). A disagreement with his assistant (J.A. Birrell) in 1881 resulted in part of the congregation leaving to form Wellington Church. He was a highly respected figure in Hawick, projecting an air of old-time dignity (and argued against instrumental music as late as 1882). He laboured under a lameness of foot, and was supposed to have said ‘if it had not been for this I would have been a soldier’. He married Margaret, daughter of Archibald MacLachlan of Helensburgh (and she died childless in 1882). A memorial ward at the Cottage Hospital was erected in his memory, along with a tombstone in the Wellogate Cemetery, a memorial brass plaque in the Church, and communion cups from his congregation. His publications include ‘Sermons’ (published in Hawick, 1851), ‘Sermon for the National Fast’ (1854), ‘The Scripture Law of Marriage (Hawick, 1861 and 1862), ‘Sermon on the Completion of the Fortieth Year of his Ministry (Hawick, 1883), ‘Sermon on the Death of the Duke of Buccleuch and Queensberry’ (Hawick, 1884), ‘Sermon on the Death of H.R.H. Prince Leopold’ (Hawick, 1884), ‘Sermon on the Life and Character of General Gordon’ (Hawick, 1885), ‘Sermon on the Disestablishment and Religious Equality’ (Hawick, 1885), ‘Funeral Sermon on the Life and Character of the Rev. James Stewart, Minister of Wilton’ (Hawick, 1886) and ‘Sermon on the Life and Character of Her Gracious Majesty the Queen’ (Hawick, 1887) (also written ‘Macrae’).

MacRae’s Band (mək-rəz-bənd) n. popular name for a choir that started in the Parish Church in the mid-19th century when Rev. MacRae was Minister. They practised every Saturday night in the old Parish School in Orrock Place, and were later disbanded.

Mactaggart (mək-tər-gər) n. Bruce see W. Bruce. Ian C. (1900/1–1965) son of Robert and Mary Aikman, he was Cornet in 1928. Events at his year as Common Riding were recorded on a silent black and white film. He won the Medway Cup outright at the Common Riding Races of 1933, winning on Rufus for the third time (after victories in 1929 and 1932, and coming second in 1930 and 1931). In 1934 it was replaced by the Rufus Trophy and won by him on Rufus! In 1966 the Medway trophy was returned by his wife for competition. He was Callants'
Mactaggart’s

Club President in 1955. He was Managing Director of Mactaggart Brothers, wool merchants, seeing the firm in 1964. He served as chief executive officer for wool control in Scotland during WWII. He married Jessie S. Borland and they are both buried in Denholm. They had 2 daughters, Fiona and Ann. Robert Lamb Watson (1870–1949) son of Robert Lamb Watson and Mary Jane Alexander Main, and brother of William Alexander Main. He was born in Duddingston, Midlothian and became a manager at Pringle’s in Hawick. He married Mary Helen (‘Nellie’) Aikman. Their children were: James (d.1956); Ian (1900/1–65); and Mamie. He secondly married Hyndmer Hewatt, and their children included Arthur Crosbie (1918–42), who died at El Alamein. William Alexander Main (b.1886) born in Glasgow, son of Robert Lamb Watson (also the name of his brother) and Mary Jane Alexander Main. He was a businessman who established the skinworks Mactaggart Brothers. In 1903 he married Mary Jane Cooper, and their children included William Alexander and Mary Bryson. William Alexander, C.B.E., J.P. ‘Wullie’ or ‘Wullie Mac’ (1906–2002) born at Braeside, Weensland Road, son of William Alexander Main and Margaret Jane Cooper. He was educated in Melrose and at Sedbergh School. He took up rugby and first played for Hawick R.F.C. at 17. He was part of the team that won all the ‘seven’s’ in 1927. Instead of following in the family business he joined Pringle’s in 1925 as a trainee manager, becoming Director in 1932 and joint Managing Director (with Arthur Oddy) in 1933 at the age of only 27. In 1936 he convinced the other directors to change the name from ‘Robert Pringle & Sons’ to just ‘Pringles’ and to diversify into fashion knitwear. He served with the K.O.S.B. territorial battalion 1926–33 and was put in charge of the Hawick Air Training Corps in 1939, later serving with the R.A.M.C. in Europe. He became sole Managing Director in 1945, following the resignation of Oddy. He then led the company to enormous post-war success, becoming Chairman of the Board in 1960. He resigned as Managing Director in 1968, following the take-over by Dawson International, but he remained as Chairman until 1969. During his time in charge the workforce increased from 200 to 2,000 and the firm essentially cornered the worldwide market in fashion knitwear for golfers. He is said to have a very ‘hands-on’ approach to management, regularly walking on the shop-floor and talking individually to the workers. He received the C.B.E. in 1964 for services to industry. He was Cornet in 1930. He was also briefly on the Town Council, and involved with the Callants’ Club, Vertish Hill Sports and Buckleuch Hunt. He contributed funds to establish the Hawick Youth Centre, and he and his wife donated stained glass windows to Lilliesleaf Church. He was President of Hawick R.F.C. in 1972, its centenary year. He married his Cornet’s Lass Marjorie Laing Innes, and she died in 1998. The family settled at Bewlie. Their children were: Bruce; Alan; and Claire. W. Bruce (1933–) son of Wullie. He joined Pringle’s as a trainee in 1951, becoming a Director in 1964 and Managing Director in 1969. He was Cornet in 1954 and Acting Father in 1971 (to the son of his own Acting Father, John P. Martin). He married Sheila Tait and had 2 sons and 2 daughters.

Mactaggart’s (muk-taw-gurtz) n. skinworks, built on land off Albert Road, which had previously been the site of Albert Mills. The skinworks had also previously been off St. George’s Lane. It closed in the early 1970s, and was demolished to make way for a supermarket and housing built in 1977 – …Built where McTaggart’s men, Worked wi’ skins wi’ weary finges, When the wund blaws the right way, The smell still lingers’ [IWL].

Maggy Findy (mawg-ghee-fen-dee) n. nickname of Margaret Scott of Harden (this, or variants such as ‘Maggie Findy’, was used to refer to a self-reliant woman).

magic lantern (maw-jeek-lan-turn) n. former name for a slide projector, particularly with mounted glass slides, which became popular in Victorian times. ‘Magic lantern shows’ caused a sensation when they first appeared in the late 19th century, essentially a forerunner of the cinema. There are records of large turnouts for such shows in Hawick, and many slides from around 1900 survive in the Museum, most made by D. Gaylor.

Magistrate (maw-jis-trā’) n. formerly one of two officers, the Senior Magistrate and the Junior Magistrate, elected annually by the Burgesses to enforce laws with the town. The word was synonymous with ‘Bailie’ for most of Hawick’s recorded history. Typically each Magistrate would serve for 2 years (with the election in early October), first as Junior and then as Senior Magistrate, although there were exceptions to this. Because of the specific wording of Hawick’s Charter, the Magistrates exercise a jurisdiction similar to that of Magistrates in a Royal Burgh, and in former times they had a great amount of leeway in administering justice. In the 17th and 18th centuries there were often disputes over jurisdiction, with Hawick residents being forbidden from appealing to any other courts (i.e. the Baron Bailie or the Sheriff) than the Hawick Magistrates Court. During the 18th century it was common for the magistrates also to keep an inn where local disputes would be settled and much of the business of the Town carried out; there was criticism that they profitted from the Town’s business. Before there was a Provost, the Senior Magistrate was the highest elected official in town. After the reconstitution of the council in 1861 there were 4 magistrates. The Magistrates would sit on the bench to deal with local legal matters, although they were also Justices of the Peace only in fairly recent times. Their legal jurisdiction only extended to the Burgh boundaries (formerly synonymous with Bailie).

magistracie (maw-jis-tri-see) n., arch. the office of a magistrate, the magistrates collectively – ‘...conform to the ancient pratique of this burgh since the first ryse and beginning of magistracy within the same [BR1673], ‘...even to the committing of some ryott, abusing of Magistracie and almost to the effusion of blood’ [BR1706], ‘...that whosoever has a mind to set up for the Magistracy, and peuther for it, shall be put in the Bailies’ Leet without any objection’ [BR1756] (also written ‘magistracy’).

the Magna Charta (thu-nawg-na-chawr-ta) n. name sometimes formerly used for the Charter of 1357 granted by James Douglas of Drumlanrig to the inhabitants of the Burgh of Hawick.

Mag Nichol’s Trough (nawg-nil-kuiz-trof) n. popular name for a former public water supply near the head of the Loan. Also sometimes called ‘Jamie Nichol’s Trough’. There was also a private supply nearby that was used by the Nichols.

maidenhead (mä-din-heed) n., arch. maidenhood.

the Maidens (thu-mä-dinuz) n. the Maiden Paps, south of Hawick and prominent along the Newcastleton Road. Like several of the higher peaks in the area, these hills are formed fromigneous rocks. The heights of the 2 peaks are 510 m (1,677 ft) and 505 m (1,650 ft). Their double peaks are a distinctive feature of the skyline to the south (marked ‘Maiden paps hills’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

the Maiden Paps (thu-mä-din-pawps) n. another name for the Maidens – ‘It rows aboot, it trows aboot, Baith near and far awa’: Whiles it is on the Maiden’s Paps, And whiles on Ruberslaw’ [TCh] (it is ‘Maiden Paps’ on Stobie’s 1770 map).

the Maiden Way (thu-mä-din-wä) n. ancient road passing nearby to Hawick, believed to pre-date the Romans. There may be more than one road given this name. The local one passes through the head of Liddesdale and across the hills to the west of Dodburn, being used as a drove road until relatively recent times. This has been suggested as the northern extension of the road of the same name, which crosses the Pennines (being part of the Penine Way near Alston), passing near Newcastleton and on through the South Tyne valley. The ‘Thief’s Road’ may have followed a similar path (the origin is probably Old Welsh for ‘elevated’ rather than being related to the English word).

the Maids o Honour (thu-näd-o-on-ur) n. a group of single women selected by the Cornet’s Lass to assist at the Colour Bussing (and Overseas Night the evening before). They follow her in with the Flag, and pin ribbons on the Cornet’s supporters. Their role in the Colour Bussing and in decorating the Principals’ coats with ribbons goes back at least to the beginning of the 19th century. The number is fixed at 22, 10 selected by the Cornet and his Lass, 5 each by the Right-and Left-Hand Men and Lasses and 2 by the Acting Mother.

the Maid o Wudfit (thu-mäd-o-wud-fit) n. beauty of the Borthwick in the latter part of the 19th century, written of in 2 poems by Thomas Chapman, ‘Lizzie’ and ‘The Maid o’ Woodfit’ – ‘Out in the garden, with roses In blossom around her doth sit, The fair, matchless maiden o’ Teviot, Sweet Lizzie, the pride o’ Woodfit’ [TCh].

maig (mäg) n., arch. a hand, particularly a large ungainly one – ‘Hand aff yer maigs, man’ [JoJ], ‘Wi’ clenched mags and deep grey ferret een’ [JoHa], ‘Nor was there ony warden polis ti redd oot the bizz wui skeely maig’ [ECS], ‘He glaumed at it wi’ his muckle maigs’ [GW], ‘...rede thame owt o’ the maig o’ the wicket’ [HSR], v. to mug something, paw, over-handle – (also ‘meg’).

maigit (mä-gie, -gi) pp., arch. mugged, over-handled – ‘He’s maiget that bit flesh sae, that I’ll hae name o’[JoJ], ‘Rowe some broon paiper roond eer buik; it’ll aye keep eet threh geetin maigeet’ [ECS] (cf. muggit).

maigmaiden (mäg-mä-din) n., arch. a handmaiden – ‘...gie thy strencht until thy servent, an’ saufe the son o’ thy maigmayden’ [HSR].

mail (mäl) n., arch. a meal, repast, quantity of milk yielded by a cow at a single milking – ‘The cow’s mail’ [GW], ‘A guid mail’ [GW] (also written ‘mael’); Leyden has this meaning the rent of milk yielded by a cow at a single milking { (also `meg').

mail coaches operating between Carlisle and Edinburgh in the early-to-mid 1800s. This daily ser-cvice commenced in about 1807, enhancing the previous stage coach, which only ran 2 or 3 times a week. It is listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory, along with the other, the Sir Walter Scott. At that time it was leaving daily for Carlisle at midnight and for Edinburgh at 4 p.m.

former name for lands in Minto Parish, recorded in 1779, valued at £29 4s, and liferented by Lord Westhall. In 1811 it was ‘Mail Chester Park’ owned by Lord Minto. The lands were adjatent to Hawthorn Park, bounded by Kames farm,
the Grinding Burn, Minto Glebe, Hawdean Syke, Langlands, Noteman’s Shott, Quicksands, Hillend
Parks and Muir Parks.

Mailieshope (m̑al̑-leez-hö)p) n. former name for an area which runs east from the Wellogate Road, just before descending into the How of Mailieshope’ [JAHM].

Main (m̑an̑) n. Agnes (17th C.) listed among the poor living at Hassendean on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Andrew (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Whithope in 1722; Borthwickbrae in 1724 and Whithope in 1728.
In 1720 he married ‘Manny Whitt’ (presumably Many White), who was also from Roberton. He may also have married Janet Scott in Roberton in 1727. His children included: Janet (b.1722); John (b.1724); Hugh (b.1728); and James (b.1730).

Andrew (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish.
He was at Muselee in 1741. He is probably the Andrew who married Margaret Easton in Roberton in 1736. His children included: Margaret (b.1741); and Helen (b.1745). He is surely related to the earlier Andrew. Isobel (17th/18th C.)
recorded receiving money from Ashkirk Parish in 1727. James (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish, when it contained Hassendean. He was married in 1687, although his wife’s name is then blank. His wife was Isobel Martin and their daughter Bessie was baptised in 1688, with witnesses John Dodds and Adam Craig. Probably the same James married Helen Pott in Robert-on in 1689. He may also be the James whose son John was baptised in Robertson in 1702. He was baptised for Adam Craig and Isobel Main (surely a relative) in 1688. John *(18th
C.)* gardener in Ormiston. In 1728 in Cavers Parish he married Agnes Elliot. His children cluded Richard (b.1731) and Marion (b.1732).

Richard (17th/18th C.) resident of Earlside in 1708 when his son Thomas was baptised in Cavers Parish. Other children were: Agnes (b.1710) and James (b.1722). Richard (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He was at Kershope Mainchester

‘Easter’ in 1768 and Sundhope in 1770. Probably the same Richard was shepherd at Whittrope-foot, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He married Elizabeth Amos and their children included: William (b.1761); Helen (b.1763); Robert (b.1766); Mary (b.1768); and Jean (b.1770).

William (18th C.) a resident of Southdeanrig in 1724, 1726 and 1729. His children, baptised in Cavers Parish, included: James (b.1724); Agnes (b.1726); Richard (b.1729); and Isabel (b.1732) (also written ‘Maine’; see also Mein).

Mainchester (mään-ches-tur) n. Manchester, a city in north-western England, a major manufacturing centre since the 18th century – ‘Huz and Mainchester carried the Reform Bill’ [T].

Mainner (män-nur) n., t., arch. manure (note accent on 2nd syllable).

Mainetti’s (mi-ne-‘eez) n. plastics manufacturers, with a factory in Hawick since the mid-1990s. The original local factory was established in Jedburgh in 1979, followed by a small Hawick factory in 1992. A new Hawick factory was built in 1998/9 at Haughhead, on the site of the former Town Dump, and specializes in telecommunications ducting.

manner (män-nur) n., arch. manner – ‘...teh show their loyalty teh the Croon in nae uncertain mainner’ [BW1978], ‘...And the mild-mainnered mither’ [WL].

mains (mänz) n. the farm attached to an estate, cultivated for the use of the landowner, the ‘home farm’ (related to the ‘demesne’; the word occurs in several local place names).

Mains see Borthwick Mains

Mains (mänz) n. farm near old Castleton. There are enclosures, field boundaries and earthworks nearby, close to the old railway line. It is recorded in the ballad ‘Hobbie Noble’ that ‘Sim o’ the Mains’ was the betrayer of Hobbie. In the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale it is ‘Manys’, with value 10 shillings and 8 pence, and tenantied by Thomas Armstrong. A later Thomas Armstrong of ‘Maynes’ was recorded in 1590. ‘Gilbert Elliot of the Maynis’ is recorded in 1599. James Murray was there in 1682. Adam Murray and Quentin Crosier were there in 1694. George Irvine was farmer there in 1797, William Irving in 1821 and William Snowden in the 1860s – ‘At Kershope foot the tryste was set, Kershope of the liyè lee; And there was traitor Sim o’ the Mains, And with him a private companie’ [T] (marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map and Stobie’s 1770 map; it was presumably once the ‘home farm’ for the local baron).

the Mains (thu-mänz) n. former local name for Borthwick Mains.

Mains Haugh (mänz-hawch) n. former name for a piece of land in Minto Parish. It was ‘Main’s-haugh’ in 1779, valued at £21 17s 11d and still listed in the Land Tax Rolls of 1811.

Mainshiel Heid (män-shiel-heed) n. Mainshiel Head, hill on the north side of the Borthwick valley, to the west of Harden and south of Borthwickehils. It reaches a height of 258m, although an unnamed peak to the west rises to 274m. Harden Knowe is essentially its eastern spur.

Mains o Feu-Rule (mänz-ó-few-rol) n. former name for lands in the Barony of Feu-Rule, possibly the same as Hallrule. In 1632 Margaret and Isobella, sisters of Walter Turnbull of Rawflat were each served as ‘heirs portioner’ in a third part of the 10-pound land (of old extent) of ‘vil-lae et Maynes de Feualroull’. Also in 1632 Robert, son of Andrew Ker of Faldonside, inherited part of the ‘Maynes de Fewardaill alias Fewroule vo-catis Halroule cum molendino’.

the Mains o Wulton (thu-mänz-ó-wul’-in) n. another name for Wulton Mains.

Main Street (män-stree) n. street in Denholm that runs along the south side of the Green and is part of the A698. It is also called Eastgate. The houses were all white-washed until into the 20th century. It contains the Cross Keys Inn and the Fox and Hounds Inn and used to have several shops, including the Post Office and 2 butchers. The cobbles were removed in the 1930s. There were railings next to the Green from WWII until the 1960s.

maienteen (män-teen) v., arch. to maintain.

mair (mär) adj. more, larger in quantity, additional – ‘whae wants mair porridge?’, ‘hev ee got mair whisky?’, ‘But I wull houpe contin-wallie, an’ prayse thee mair an’ mair’ [HSR], ‘An A’d geet mair guid yeh way as the tother, bot I wull houpe contin-wallie’ [ECS], ‘...We didna try their lemonade. We had a drink – a drink – nae mair’ [DH], adv. more, to a greater extent – ‘let’s hear eet yince mair’, ‘...Quirky lairds nae mair divide it’ [JH], ‘To press yince mair the waster heather ...’ [RH], ‘...Four hunder Cornets, four hunder an’ mair’ [JEDM], ‘Ye sei, it’s a hard job to walk wi’ mair than yin at a time’ [DH], additionally, furthermore – ‘Decerns Andrew Deans, skinner, Kens weel the gossip o’ the place That mak’s him smile the mair’ [WFC], ‘Look aboot ye, was there ever Vista the gossip o’ the place That mak’s him smile the mair?’ [WL].

mair (mair) n., arch. a moor, broad area of open land, often high and containing boggy regions – ‘Where we roam o’er the hill, or tread heather mairs Or walk in the valley among scenes so rare’ [JCa] (the spelling and pronunciation are problematic, since muir is often written down although mair is meant; see also moor in place names).
the Mair (thu-mair) n. Hawick Moor, part of the Common, usually referring explicitly to the area containing St. Leonard’s race course. This is the location of the main social event of the Common Riding on the Friday and Saturday afternoons (since 1855 and 1868, respectively). Stalls, entertainments, beer tents etc. are in abundance. On Common Riding Friday the Cornet and his followers arrive at the back gate (towards Pil-muir) at about noon. The Cornet then rides round the course with the Flag, followed by the Right- and Left-Hand Men and Acting Father and then the other riders. The ‘Big Fower’ ride their horses back round the course to the Paddock and the Cornet climbs to the roof of the Committee Room, waving the Flag towards the hillside and then towards the Paddock side, before setting it there for the duration of the races. When he climbs down the Cornet, together with the Acting Father, are presented with riding crops by the Chief Guest. The race meeting then starts in earnest, with both the more serious ‘fallping’ races and the Cornet’s Races (which are only for supporters who have ridden that day). The betting is fiercest on the ‘Tradesmen’s Handicap’. Before the Cornet has even arrived there has in modern times been a relay race run between children from the primary schools in Hawick. The Cornet leaves the Mair on the Friday at about 4 p.m., exiting by the top gate. Most people usually stay there for much longer, however, and the ‘picnics’ go on until well into the night if the weather is good. The race meeting starts later on the Saturday. Admission was first charged in 1883. In 1919 no licensed tents were permitted – ‘We’ll a’ lie to the muir a-riding: Drum-lanrig gave it for providing’ [AB], ‘But while the Common-Riding’s on there’s never yin’ll care O’ joining Bonnie Chairlie’s flag They’ll a’ be at the Mair (mair) n. Adam (18th/19th C.) weaver in Newcastleton. He was listed among heads of households in 1835. He was surely related to Andrew. Alexander (1776–1842) carrier of Hawick, operating from Backdamgate. In the early 19th century his firm ran a service between Hawick and Galashiels every Tuesday, continuing on to Edinburgh and Leith, amongst other places. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He is listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory leaving for Edinburgh on Tuesdays and Fridays and returning on Wednesdays and Saturdays, as well as going to Glasgow on Wednesdays. In 1837 he is listed going to Galashiels and Edinburgh every Tuesday. At the 1837 election one of the Tory voters escaped the mob by hiding in his house, which was stated to be ‘by the Tower-dyke-side’. He is recorded as a carrier near the Crescent (possibly the Mill Path) in 1841. He was heavily involved with the Relief Kirk. He married Elizabeth, daughter of carrier William Wilson, who died in 1847 aged 67. Their children included: William (1809/10–47), innkeeper at Gala Bank; Ann (1812/13–46); John; Janet; and Elizabeth (b.1821/2), who died young. One of his daughters became Mrs. Drummond. Andrew (18th C.) wright in Town-o-Rule. Andrew (b.1794/5) from Newcastleton, he was listed as a weaver among heads of a households in 1835. By 1841 he was a hand-loom weaver in Hawick, living at Lockiesedge, then 5 Bourtree Place in 1851 and 5 O’Connell Street in 1851. His wife was Isabella and their children included Andrew Jr., Adam, Jane and Isabella. Gilbert (b.1785/6) born in Castleton Parish. He was an agricultural labourer living at Silverbuthall in 1841 and Wilton Roadhead in 1851. His wife was Margaret, and their children included William, Andrew, Walter, Francis, Thomas and Mary. James (d.1812) resident of Hobbirk Parish. His wife died in 1811 and he followed a year later. He could be the James, son of Andrew born in Hobbirk in 1743. James (b.c.1793) weaver in Wilton. He was listed among heads of households in 1840 and 1841 at Lockiesedge. He was also recorded at Lockiesedge on the 1841 census. His children included David, Catherine, Jane, Agnes, Mary and Margaret. John (17th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His wife was Margaret Scott and their son Thomas was baptised in Hawick Parish in 1673. The witnesses were Richard Elliot and Robert Scott. His name is written ‘Mayar’.

C.) recorded as resident at Stonedge on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. His name was listed as ‘John Maire Elder’, and the ‘younger’ John who was also there was probably his son. John (17th/18th C.) probably son of John, he was tenant farmer at Mackside. He may be the John ‘younger’ who was listed along with John ‘Elder’ at Stonedge in 1694. In 1704 (or perhaps a confirmation of the purchase of 1666) he purchased half the lands of Kirknowe from John Shiel. His son Richard married Janet, only daughter of John Shiel (and probably grand-daughter of the man he bought the land from). John (18th C.) paid the cart tax in Lilliesleaf Parish in 1785–91. Rev. John (1822–1902) born in Paisley, 3rd son of John. He was educated in Paisley and at Glasgow University and was licensed by Paisley Presbytery in 1845. Then in 1847 he was ordained as assistant and successor at Southdean, and remained there for well over a century. In 1887 he obtained a doctorate from Glasgow University. He married Agnes (who died in 1900), daughter of George Grant of Glasgow, who founded a bursary in her father’s name. His publications include ‘Memorial Sermon preached in the Old Parish Church of Southdean’ (1876), ‘Sermon on the Life and Character of Jane Grant’ (published in Hawick, 1883), ‘Sermon on the Life and Character of James Stewart, Min. of Wilton’ (Hawick, 1886), and ‘Pulpit Memorials of the Life and Character of the late Rev. John MacRae, D.D., Min. of Hawick (Hawick, 1892). There is a bronze plaque to his memory in Southdean Kirk. Richard (18th C.) significant parishioner of Hobkirk in the early 1700s, described as a ‘portioner’. He was son of John, who had purchased half of Kirknowe in Hobkirk Parish. He was recorded as possessor of part of Kirknowe and Kirkstile in 1745. With the permission of his wife Janet Shiel he sold the lands to William Elliot of Wolfelee in 1751. His daughters Jane and Magdalen later possessed a cottage at Kirkstile. Dr. Robert (1864–1902) born in Tarbolton, Ayrshire, son of Archibald and Anne Vass. He graduated M.B. and C.M. from Glasgow University in 1886. He came to Hawick in 1890 to assist Dr. Bannerman, later becoming a partner. He first followed the Cornet in 1891, along with several of the town’s other doctors. As well as being a popular doctor, he became a Councillor for North High Street Ward in 1894, serving on the Sanitary Committee and Lunacy Board. This led to him being Cornet in 1896, the only known non-Teri to hold that office. The explanation is that when a last minute Cornet needed to be found he was the only unmarried man on the Council, and was talked into accepting the position. Provost Barrie served as his Acting Father, and it appears that he did not serve as Right- or Left-Hand Man afterwards. He was a keen sportsman, being Captain of the Golf Club, and he was also involved with the Border Rifles and the Masons. He died at age 37 and is buried at Tarbolton. W. (18th/19th C.) teacher in Castleton. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. William (b.1823/4) blacksmith living on Ladylaw Place in 1851. In modern times the favourite day for weddings has been Saturday, but formerly the normal day was the Friday following the 3 proclamations made in church. The ceremony was often preceded by a feet-washing tradition before the hen party, which usually took place on the Tuesday before. Prior to about the mid-19th century marriages in Hawick took place at the Manse, rather than in the Kirk. ‘Irregular’ marriages were performed in front of witnesses and not by the parish minister; they were common in the 17th and 18th century among the religiously disenfranchised.

parish on the north side of the Tweed, between Dryburgh and Kelso. It contains the village of Mekerstoun, as well as Makerstoun House (the origin of the name is probably ‘Malcert’st fram’; it first appears in 1159 as ‘Malcarvaston’ and in a list from St. Andrews Priory about the same time as ‘Malkaruistun’; the ‘i’ disappeared in the 15th century; it is also written ‘Makerston’, ‘Makeirstoun’, ‘Makkarstoun’, ‘M’Carirstoun’ and other variants; it is ‘Machanstoun’ on Blaeu’s c.1654 map and ‘Maccarstoun’ on Roy’s 1750 map).

Makerstoun House (mawk-ur-stin-hoo) n.
house in the parish of Makerstoun, standing in extensive grounds above the Tweed between St. Boswells and Kelso. Originally a tower of the Corbetts was there, it was home to the Mc-Douglalls (or Mdkdougalls) of Makerstoun from 1374. A new house was built on the ruins of a tower destroyed by Hertford’s men in 1545, constructed in 1590, with extensive later renovations.
It was rebuilt in 1714 to designs by William Adam (father of Robert) and enlarged into a Victorian mansion in 1812, to plans of Archibald Elliot. The estate passed to Hay-McDougall, then to General Sir Thomas Brisbane, and then the Scotts of Gala, all through marriage. Sir Thomas Brisbane built an observatory in the grounds, where he carried out pioneering observations on magnetism. Although the house burned down in 1970, it was rebuilt to the original design by 1973. On the opposite side of the Teviot stands ‘The Law’, also known as ‘The Pleahill’, probably a Norman motte, where local courts were held.

Malcolm (mawl-kum) n. name of 4 Scottish Kings. Malcolm I (d.954) King of Alba (i.e. northern Scotland) from 943. He signed a treaty with Edward I of England, gaining Strath-clyde and Cumbria. He was never the monarch in the Scottish Borders. Malcolm II (d.1034) son of Kenneth III. He fought at the Battle of Carham, the outcome of which merged Strath-clyde with Alba, leading to the formation of modern Scotland. He was thus the first ‘Scottish’ monarch for the Hawick area. Malcolm III
(c.1031–93) eldest son of Duncan I, he was King from 1058. He was also known as Malcolm Canmore (‘of the large head’). After his father died he took refuge in England, later invading with the help of the noblemen of Southern Scotland and killed Lulach I. He made an alliance with England, and married St. Margaret. It is thought that during this time Middle English became the dominant language in the Scottish Lowlands. In 1072 he was forced to swear allegiance to William I of England, but in 1091 invaded Northumbria and besieged Durham. This attempt to control Northumbria failed when William II of England sent an army north. But he tried again in 1093, sieging Alnwick. However, he was killed there, along with his son Edward. He was succeeded by his younger brother Donald III. Malcolm IV
Malcolm (c.1141–65) grandson of David I, he succeeded to the throne in 1153. Sometimes referred to as ‘the Maiden’, he died unmarried in Jedburgh and was succeeded by William I. He founded Soutra Hospital in 1164. He also granted additional lands and rights to the monks of Jedburgh Abbey.

Malcolm (mawl-kum) n. George (1722–1803) son of Rev. Robert, minister of Ewes. His father was granted the farm of Burnfoot-in-Ewes and he helped his father to run it and succeeded to the farm. He also merged it with the neighbouring lands of Douglas. He married Margaret Paisley of Craig and had a family of 17. Among these were the ‘4 knights of Eskdale’, namely Col. Sir James, Adm. Sir Pulteney, Vice-Adm. Sir Charles and Gen. Sir John. Sir John (1769–1833) soldier and diplomat from a prominent family based at Burnfoot near Langholm, he and his 3 brothers being called the ‘Four Knights of Eskdale’. He entered the military at the age of 12. He served as Governor of Bombay, is buried in Westminster, and had a 100 ft obelisk built in his memory on Whita Hill above Langholm in 1835. In about 1805 he helped the ailing Dr. John Leyden to recover from illness in his home at Seringapatam. He inscribed some complementary lines of verse in Leyden’s ‘Scenes of Infancy’, to which Leyden reciprocated. John (19th C.) from Samuelston, he was schoolmaster at Hobkirk from 1857. He had a stove and a porch fitted to the schoolhouse. He taught through the transition from Parish to Board School. He was fitted to the schoolhouse. He taught through the section ‘Foresta’, with a value of 10 merks. It was probably in the Hermitage valley, and may possibly be a transcription error for Mosspatrick-hope.

maledy (maw-le-dee) adj., arch. in high spirits, elated – ‘Jock was duist maleddy! Hei had gotten a gless or twae’ [GW] (also ‘ma-laddy’).

Malie (mä-le) n. former female Christian name, possibly a diminutive of Mary.

Malveisin

Malveisin (mal-vä-sin) n. William (d.1238) probably from France, he was a royal clerk in Scotland in the 1180s, becoming Archdeacon of Lothian in 1193. Chancellor of Scotland in 1199 and Bishop of Glasgow in the same year. He thus held authority over the Hawick area, although it is unclear if his influence was ever significant. In 1202 he was translated to the bishopric of St. Andrews. It has also been suggested that he was author of an Arthurian romance. He is buried at St. Andrews and may have had a son called Arthur.

mangel (mawn-ul) v., n. mangle (note no hard g sound).
Mangerton Mill

when the Armstrongs refused to submit. The tower is now cared for by the Armstrong Clan Trust, and is situated about 300 m south of the modern farmhouse. To the west of the farm-house is Mangerton Mill, which lies on a lade built off the Liddel Water. The lands associated with the estate are listed on a rental roll of around 1376 in the charters of the Douglasses of Morton: Ragarth; Speteltoun; Mangerton; Mangertounholme; Greyens; Qwhythawlgh; Westburneflat; Pouterlamper; Dominium inferius; Haldyks; Poudercroft; Swayne Acre; Terra cis-soris; Dominium superioris; Hardenkaul; Tycoconsted; Maldsonsted; Milmore; Hungryflat; Mylncotis; Pratum aule; Flygh superior; Kelloley cum Mylneholme; Lanorowftanys; Terra Philippi de Fausyde cum Holdoun; Strypschedhen; Ricarden; Halyfyrsted; Hetryes; and Redehugh. Lands there were resigned by Thomas Armstrong of Mangerton in 1482, granted to David Scott of Buccleuch the same year (presumably as superior), and confirmed to Walter Scott of Branxholme in 1484/5. There was a further gift of nonentry of the lands to Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1550/1; they would pass fully to the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1629, when Francis Scott was granted `the castle, tower and fortalice thereof'. The `Laird of Mangerstain' paid tax on a value of £852 for `towresfeild', £100 for the `teind of lands', and £800 for her rents in Castleton. The `Laird of Mangerstain' paid tax on a value of £1280 in 1678. John Armstrong, James Little and Francis Little were listed there on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. The farm was valued at £1280 in 1707. The farm was surveyed in 1718, along with other properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch, when it extended to 349 acres, bounded by Sorbietrees, Liddel Water and Tweeden Burn. At that time it contained the farmstead of Blacksidelees, there was also a common off to the north-east and the map shows the old tower and a farmhouse just to its west, as well as the current farmhouse and mill. James Renwick was tenant in the mid-1700s. In 1788 the lands were still valued at £1280 and owned by the Duke of Buccleuch. Robert Hogg was farmer there in 1797 and Thomas Elliot in 1851 and 1861. The name `Meriantoun' (recorded in the 16th century) may be an alternative version of Mangerton – `I have Mangerton, Ogilvie, Raeburn, and Netherbie, Old Sim, of Whitram, and all his array. Come all Northumberland, Teesdale and Cumberland, Here at the Brecker Tower end shall the fray' [ES], `Now fare thee weel, sweet Mangerton! For I think again I'll ne'er thee see: I wad hae betrayed nae lad alive. For a' the gowd o' Christentie'[T] (the name occurs at least as early as 1376 as `Mangertoune' and is `Mangerton' in 1482, `Mayngerton' in 1530, `Mengertoun' in 1578/9, `Mangertoun' in 1581, `Majertoune' in 1584, `Mangerton' in 1632, `Maingertoun' in 1635 and 1644 and `Mengertoun' in 1644 and 1694; it appears clearly on Sandison’s c.1590 map, is `Mangertone' on the 1718 Buccleuch survey and `Mangertouane' on Stobie’s 1770 map; its origin is probably the Old English `mangera tun', meaning `farm of the merchants').

Mangerton Mill (män-jer-tin-mill) n. former mill near the farm of Mangerton. It is marked on the 1718 Buccleuch survey, and still clearly on the modern Ordnance Survey map, beside the mill lade at the curve in the Liddel there. James Armstrong was tenant there in 1611. James `Lit-tlemilkne' was tenant in 1683. Andrew Turnbull was miller there in the mid-18th century. Thomas Elliot was miller there in 1852 (it is `Mangertoun Myln' in 1611; it is `Mangertonmill' on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Mangertonholm (män-jer-tin-hōm) n. lands formerly attached to the estate of Mangerton. It is listed in a rental roll c.1376 as `Mangertounholme' and with a value of 13 shillings.

Mang Howes and Knowes (mawng-howz-in-nowz) n. prose piece written by Elliot Cowan Smith in 1914, around the time of his 23rd birthday. Its full title is `Mang Howes an Knowes, A Day’s Dander Throwe Border Waeter-Gates’, and it describes a journey from St. Boswells to Hawick. It was originally circulated among a few friends, but published in 1925, following Smith’s untimely death. It is a staggering piece of work, so replete with vernacular vocabulary that it is hard to read without the help of Smith’s article on the local dialect ‘Braid Hanick’.

manish (maw-nish, maw-neesh) v., arch. to manage – ‘Hoo did ye mannish?’ [HAST1868], ‘A canna manish that bairn ava’’ [GW].

Mannorhill (ma-nur-hil) n. farm on the north of the Tweed near Makerstoun (the origin of the name is simply ‘hill of the manor house’ and occurs at least as early as 1616).

Manor (ma-nur) n. parish of Peeblesshire, south-west of the town of Peebles, extending along the valley of the Manor Water from the Tweed towards Megget. It is also sometimes called Kirkton Manor. The barony was granted by Robert III to Sir William Inglis in 1396, as a reward for killing the English knight Thomas de Struthers at Rulehaugh. This was the same Inglis family who were barons of Branxholme. Sir William’s son John had a charter of the barony from Archibald, Earl of Douglas, who was already superior of the family’s lands in Roxburghshire. John Inglis of Manor swapped half of Branxholme for Murdiestoun with Robert Scott of Buccleuch in 1420. And in 1446 his son, Thomas Inglis of Manor, swapped the other half of Branxholme with Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch. The Inglis family sold their half to David Pringle of Smailshiel Mansefield in the late 1870s, with factories, housing and the sewage works built soon after. Eastfield Mills dominated the area in the late 19th century, with Blenkhorn, Richardson & Co. building most of the tenement blocks to provide convenient housing for their workers.

the Manse (thu-mawns) n. usually referring to Hawick Parish Manse, situated on Old Manse Road, and later to the new Manse built on Buccleuch Road in 1844 (renamed Parkview and more recently Dunira). A new manse was built on Old Manse Road in 1763, at a cost of £200. This was for a while the only house beyond the Old Parish Church along the New Road. The phrase is also used sometimes to refer to the homes of other local ministers (see also the Auld Manse).

Manse Brae (mans-brà) n. former popular name for the road at Denholm Townhead, where the Church manse was located (now Beechlands), i.e. part of the road from Hawick into Denholm. Also the name for the road (north) up to the Manse in Roberton, at the top of which the older church stood.

Manse Lane (mans-làn) n. name used for Old Manse Lane before about 1860.
Mansfield (manz-feeld) n. Ralph (1556–1633) from Yorkshire, he was appointed as a deputy warden by Ralph Evers, Lord Eure. He served as Captain of Harbottle and Keeper of Tynedale. There were complaints against him by other Englishmen in 1597, including his ‘extortions of 15 score head of cattle and 400 sheep – conveyance of Cesford to Topliff to buy a horse – caused 2 Englishmen to fight before Buccleuch at Hawick – till one was slain’. It is separately referred to as an incident of ‘carrying Englishmen into Scotland to combat before Bawcleugh, where the one murdered the other’. His response to the last accusation is that he took no men to Hawick, ‘but 2 English fugitives, some time of Redesdale, one accusing the other of crimes, did combat before Buccleuch’, and when he got there he tried to stop the fight. The true details of these events, and where exactly this fight may have taken place, are not known.

the Mansfield Bar (thu-manz-feeld-bawr) n. public house at 16 Mansfield Road.

Mansfield Brig (manz-feeld-brig) n. Mansfield Bridge, or Footbridge, across the Teviot connecting Mansfield Road with the end of Noble Place. It was suggested by a petition of 308 names in 1886 and funded by subscription. The original wooden footbridge was opened by provost Milligan in 1888, but washed away in 1938, being replaced in 1939. A completely new bridge was erected in 1986.

Mansfield Crescent (manz-feeld-kre-sin’) n. street built in 1887 on land that was formerly part of Wilton Manse Glebe.

Mansfield Gairdens (manz-feeld-gär-dinz) n. street in Mansfield, being a continuation of Mansfield Park, built around 1925, with additional houses added in 1972.

Mansfield Hoose (manz-feeld-hoos) n. originally Thornwood House, built in 1870/1 for auctioneer James Oliver. It was designed in a Greek Revival style by J.T. Rochead, with Italianate decor and splendid gardens. It retains much of the original ceiling plasterwork. Sold by the Olivers in 1936, it was owned by Lt.-Col. Mudue and by 1956 had become a hotel and night club, having several owners over the subsequent decades. In 1973 it was taken over by the Hawknesses, who changed the name to Mansfield Park Hotel. Later the McMannuses changed the name to Mansfield House Hotel. It was taken over by Ian and Sheila McKinnon in 1985 and renovated into Hawick’s premier hotel, with 12 unique bedrooms and set in 10 acres of land. In 2009 it was purchased by the Midgee Company. It has been a very popular site for wedding receptions (see also Thornwud Hoose).

Mansfield Industrial Estate (manz-feeld-in-dus-tree-ul-ce-stä’) n. area developed for knitwear and engineering businesses in 1976 on and around the site of the old Blenkhorn, Richardson tweed mill.

Mansfield Mills (manz-feeld-milz) n. name for knitwear mills on Mansfield road, which were built 1880–1929. Samuel Fingland, hosiery and glove manufacturer was there from around 1882. It may also have been associated with James Renwick & Co. From 1891 it house Turn & Rutherford’s, which closed around 1950. There was a fire there in 1955. Braemar moved in around 1969, replaced by Jaeger in the early 1970s. The building was partly converted into flats in the 1990s, with Clan Douglas moving into part of it in 1999.

Mansfield Mission Hut (manz-feeld-mi-shin-hu’) n. independent evangelical organisation established for women in the Mansfield area in 1937. It was separate from the Hawick Home Mission.

Mansfield Park (manz-feeld-pawrk) n. home of Hawick R.F.C. since 1888, times each season. A new pavilion was opened in 1919, a new stand in 1955 and floodlights in 1993 – ‘As I view life’s looking glass Where can any joy surpass The callants doon at Mansfield When they hold the final pass?’ [RMc].

Mansfield Park (manz-feeld-pawrk) n. street running parallel and to the north of Mansfield Road, becoming Mansfield Court at one end and Mansfield Gardens at the other. The original houses were built in 1890. The name was in use for the general area before it was feuded for factories and housing in the 1880s.

Mansfield Quoitin Club (manz-feeld-kwoi’in-klub) n. organisation for playing quoits, with ground in the Mansfield area. It existed in the late 19th century and first few years of the 20th.

Mansfield Reach (manz-feeld-reech) n. name sometimes used to describe the roughly straight part of the Teviot in the Mansfield area.

Mansholme Mills (mans-höm-nilz) n. 19th century woollen manufacturing mill off Mansfield Road behind Waverley Mills. The factory was associated with yarn spinning for a number of smaller firms, specifically James Taylor, Robert Grierson & Co., Dunsmore, Johnston & Co., and Tant & Anderson.

man-sworn (man-swörn) adj., arch. forsworn, lying deliberately, used as an insulting phrase – ‘… Thomas Olipher, cordiner, … for giving of un-reverent language to the bailies in face of court, and calling William Ruecastell man-sworn in face of court’ [BR1642].

manteen (man-teen) v., poet. to maintain – ‘I ken that the Lord wull mainteen the caus o’ the afflicket, and the richt o’ the puir’ [HSR].

Mantel Waas (mawn-tul-wawz) n. name use for a former ruin near Ancrum, around Nether Ancrum, to the east of the village. It was sometimes referred to as ‘Malton Walls’ (most likely in error, leading to a supposed association with the Knights of Malta), but ‘Mantel’ is how the locals referred to it, which means simply parapet walls. It was perhaps a palace of the Bishops of Glasgow, who held lands there, or otherwise remains of former fortifications at Ancrum. It was described at the end of the 18th century (by Dr. Somerville of Jedburgh) as being a parallelogram in plan, built of stone and lime, and having vaults under it. A high gable with a beautiful window as said to have stood until the mid-18th century and the last portion of the walls fell in about the mid-19th century. It was said that human bones were regularly unearthed there and in 1956 the remains of a statue were dug up nearby. A grave-stone inscribed ‘1607’ is built into a house in the area. Nothing can now be seen of this former construction today. There is a fanciful tradition that an underground passage led from this place to Timpendean Castle (also written ‘Mantle’; it is marked on Stobie’s 1770 map).

manuale (ma-new-al) adj., arch. written with the hand – ‘… be the hand of our louit familiar clerk, Maister Richard Lawson, clerk of our Justiciary, wnder his subscripioni manuale … ’ [SB1500].

Manuel

He married Isobel Hall and their children included Robert (b.1683). John (b.1806) master blacksmith in Lilliesleaf, son of William. His snitwy was on the north side of Main Street. He may never have married, being listed living with his sister as housekeeper in 1851. He was also recorded in Slater’s 1852 directory. John (1837/8–1900) Burgh Surveyor and Master of Works from 1874–1900. Born in Perth, son of Peter, the Clerk of Works in Edinburgh, and Agnes Wilson. He came to Hawick in 1874. He designed his own house Elmbank in Fenwick Park in 1884, with the access road called ‘Manuel’s Brae’ long afterwards. He also worked as an architect for Hawick Working Men’s Building & Investment Company, and designed several other buildings, including Howlands Mill. He was one of the founders of Hawick Golf Club, and also keen on bowling, curling and fishing. In addition he was a Mason and manager at East Bank Kirk, as well as being known as a fine bass singer. One of his regular duties was to oversee the erection of the ring and platforms at the Common Riding Games. He married music teacher Isabella (or Catherine) Hunter of North Berwick and their children were: Margaret Agnes (b.1877), who became an artist in New York; John (b.1879); Catherine Hunter (1881–1969), who died in Vancouver; Francis Eric (b.1886), who went to India, worked as a banker, and retired to the south coast of England; and Florence Wilson (1888–1971), who died in Kelowna, British Columbia. John and the 3 daughters all eventually emigrated to North America. There is a possibility that another son may have been Robert, who emigrated to America and named the Hawick in Minnesota (although there is no evidence to support this, and the timing does not work very well). His wife died on Christmas day in 1896 and was buried in Wilton Cemetery (the lay-out of which he must have been closely involved in). He became ill in 1900, with his son John taking over his duties temporarily. He died suddenly of a heart-attack and was also buried at Wilton. John (1879–1933) son of John, born at 25 North Bridge Street. He trained in Hawick under J.P. Alison as well as in Edinburgh, and worked in London. When his father became ill in 1900, he returned to Hawick to serve as interim Burgh Surveyor. But by 1904 he moved to Liverpool, then London, then Colwyn Bay in Wales. He exhibited designs and drawings at the R.S.A. in 1900 and 1901. He married Madeline, daughter of hardware merchant William Brown in 1908. After 1912 he emigrated to Canada (his 3 sisters following him there), where he contributed to the design of the Provincial Legislature in Winnipeg and the Labor Temple in Calgary. He was also resident architect at the Banff Springs Hotel. He died after falling from a 10th floor window at the Palliser Hotel in Calgary, and is buried there in the Burnsland Cemetery. Robert (17th/18th C.) possibly the son of George and Isobel Hall born in Hawick in 1683. He witnessed a baptism in Hawick Parish in 1705 for smith John Dryden. In the baptismal record of 1719 he is ‘in ye toun of Hawick’. He married Janet Tullie and their son John was baptised in 1719, with witnesses candlemaker John Scott and James Paterson ‘Duke’. Robert (17th/18th C.) recorded in 1719 being ‘in ye toun of Hawick’. In 1719 he married Agnes, daughter to Henry Gibson, fleshers in Melrose, and their son John was baptised in Hawick. Robert (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf. His son William was born in 1755. Robert (19th/20th C.) said to be son of John (although there is no evidence to support this). He became a railway manager in the U.S.A., and was responsible for the naming of Hawick, Minnesota (mis-typed `R. Manvel' in the 1905 history) as owner in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls. He may be his children (also spelled ‘Manual’ and earlier ‘Manwell’). Manuel’s Brae (mawn-welz-brä) n. former name for the road leading to the large houses that were built at Fenwick Park, off Weensland Road. It is the lower part of the street now known as Fenwick Park. The name came from John Manuel, who built ‘Elm Bank’.

manufacturing (ma-new-fak-choo- rin) n. manufacturing. Hawick’s production of goods grew slowly, until the rapid expansion of woollens in the early 19th century. In the earliest records there are examples of various tradesmen in the town, making items from wood, metal, leather, etc. There was also small-scale, largely domestic, production of linen and woollen garments. The trades were governed through 7 ‘incorporations’, namely weavers, shoemakers (or cordiners), skinners (and gloves), hammermen, fleshers (i.e. butchers), tailors and bakers (or baxters). A small factory making carpets appeared in Hawick in the 1750s, stocking frames were introduced in the 1770s, linen tape manufacturing started in the 1780s and yarn spinning commened in the early 1800s. In 1839 the Minister described people being employed ‘in the manufacture of thongs, gloves, candles, machinery, and in the tanning of leather and dressing of sheep skins’, although woollen manufacturing by far dominated.

Manvel see Manuel

Manvers (man-vurz) n. Robert de (13th/14th C.), given part of the estate of Chisholme by the English King Edward in 1317 (along with Ramulus de Home), although it was restored to John ‘de Chesholme’ 3 years later.

the Maori flag (thu-mow-ree-flawg) n. artefact donated to Hawick Museum in 1921 by artist Tom Scott. It had been captured by Crown forces in 1865 at the Battle of Omarihakeke. In 2015 there was a request to return the flag to New Zealand.

Mar (mawr) n. Margaret (d.c.1391) daughter of Donald, 8th Earl of Mar, and sister of Thomas, 9th Earl. She married William, 1st Earl of Douglas. Her husband died in 1384 and she secondly married Sir John Swinton of Swinton. Her son James inherited the titles of both Douglas and Marcus. However, she also seems to have been regarded as Countess of Mar in her own right, with that title going to her daughter Isabel. Thomas 9th (or 10th) Earl of Mar (c.1332–c.74) son of Donald, 8th Earl of Mar and Isabel Stewart, last of a line of ‘Mormaers’ of Mar (in Aberdeenshire), with no clear surname. Both Thomas Baliol and the Earl of Douglas are referred to as his brothers, but it seems this was likely to have meant step-brothers or brothers-in-law. He was apparently raised in England. He witnessed charters during the reigns of David II and Robert II and became High Chamberlain of Scotland. He also held many titles, particularly in northern Scotland, but also including the Barony of Cavers. He was certainly Lord of Cavers by 1357. In 1358 he witnessed the charter for the Barony of Hawick, granted to Sir Thomas Murray. He granted the lands of Denholm, Denholm Dean and ‘Ballelague’ to Thomas Cranston in an undated charter (confirmed decades later in 1441). The grant excepted his domain lands within the Barony of Cavers and his lands of Stobs. He granted Cavers to Thomas Baliol, in fee. In 1368 he granted the patronage and advowson of Cavers Kirk to Melrose Abbey. Also in 1368 he gave his consent to a grant by Thomas Baliol to William, Earl of Douglas, of Earlside in the Barony of Cavers. It is unclear exactly when he died, and it seems there was some confusion after his death about the inheritance of the Cavers lands and titles immediately afterwards; however, in an investigation into the status of the Kirk of Cavers in 1406 he is still referred to as the former Baron, with his confirming gift of the Kirk to Melrose Abbey cited. He married Margaret Graham, Countess of Menteith (and widow of John Murray) and later Margaret Stewart, Countess of Angus, elder daughter of Thomas, Earl of Angus. He had no heirs and his titles fell to his sister Margaret, Countess of Mar, who married William, 1st Earl of Douglas and Earl of Mar. The titles then passed to their daughter Isabella, Countess of Mar, and eventually to the Douglasses directly.

the March (thu-mawruch) n. the Marches, or a particular March (West, Middle or East) – ‘The March must feed her ravens . . . ’ [WHO].

Marchbank see Mairchbank

Marchmount (mawruch-moun) n. alternative name for Roxburgh Castle.

Marcus (mar-kis) n. Walter ‘Mr. Walter’ (20th C.) from Westphalia in Germany, he had to leave because of Nazi persecution and founded a fashion house in London. He lived in Hawick during the 1940s and 50s, being manager of the W. & O. Marcus factory on Commercial Road. He stayed with his wife Anne and daughter Helen at Wellogate Villa.

Marcus’s (mar-ki-seez) n. W. & O. Marcus, former dress-making factory on Commercial Road. The firm was founded by Walter and Otto Marcus (friends of Otto Weisz), and became one of the top 10 fashion houses in London. The Hawick factory operated from 1940 until 1965, managed by Frederica Rosenberger. During the London Blitz workers were brought up to work in Hawick. At the height of production it employed 180 workers. One of the reasons cited for closure was rising rail costs for transporting materials and finished goods to and from London. After the factory closed the building was used as the Scout Headquarters. The ladies garment tradition was carried on by ‘Alison Russell’ at Loch Park for about 20 years after Marcus’ closed. Another company, Simon Marcus, skirt manufacturers, was based at Loch Park 1979–93. The original building at 22 Commercial Road, also called ‘Wilglen Mill’ was demolished in the late 1990s.

Mare Sike (mär-sik) n. small stream that rises on the Horn and flows roughly south-west to join Frostlie Burn near the farm of Linhope.

Marfaux (mawr-faks) n. house on Wilton Path, named after WWI to commemorate the area in France where a family member had been killed. The Inglis and Scott families lived there around that time.

Margaret (mawr-gri) (1283–90) Queen of Scotland from 1286, she was known as ‘the Maid of Norway’. She was the great-grand-daughter of Alexander III and his only surviving descendant, being daughter of Eric II of Norway. Following the Treaty of Birgham (near Kelso), in which she was betrothed to Edward I’s son in return for assurance of Scottish independence, but with Edward as her ward, she was brought by ship from Norway, but died en route. This left Scotland without at least a dozen claimants to the throne, including Sir Nicholas de Soulis. Michael Scot is said to have helped bring her back to Scotland.

Margaret Scott (mawr-gri-skö) n. fictional daughter of the Laird of Branxholme in Sir Walter Scott’s ‘Lay of the Last Minstrel’. In the story she is in love with Henry of Cranston, who belongs to a family who are enemies of the Scotts, but through various twists they get married in the end. She is based upon a daughter of Sir Walter the Marina (mawr-ree-نى) n. picture house, bingo hall, pub and entertainment centre on Towerdykeside, previously known by many other names, including the Empire, the Kings, and the Odeon, having originally been the Exchange Hall. It was the last commercial cinema in Hawick, and stopped showing films in June 1985, when it became a bingo hall and then a night club. The last film showing was a double bill of ‘Revenge of the Nerds’ and ‘Bachelor Party’. The building burned down in 1992 and was largely demolished in 1998.

Marion’s Hob (mawr-ree-inz-hób) n. nickname for Robert Scott Bailie in 1612 and in the 1620s.

Marjoribanks (mawr-jo-ree-báwngks) n. John (16th C.) son of Philip, who was one of the first to use this surname. He was a younger brother of William (to whom he succeeded) and elder brother of Thomas (who represented Douglas of Cavers in 1541). He was a Guild Brother and Bailie in Edinburgh and served as Dean of Guild. He is probably the Burgess of Edinburgh of that name who in 1532 witnessed a sasine (recorded in Selkirk) for William Walker selling his tenement in Hawick to John Morlaw. Thomas of that Ilk (d.1557), son of Philip and brother of John. He was one of 10 advocates appointed as procurators nefore the Lords of Session. He served as Lord Provost of Edinburgh and later became Lord Clerk Reg-ister, with the title Lord Ratho. In 1541 he represented James Douglas of Cavers and his tenants in asking for reparations from Walter Scott of Branxholme for burning the farm of Whitriggs. Perhaps the same Thomas served as procurator for a case in Selkirk in 1533 regarding Sunder-landhall. Probably the same Thomas acted as agent in 1539 to receive a large number of sheep from Patrick Murray of Falahill and others, owed to the King and passed to Robert Scott of How-pasley and Ninian Anderson (formerly ‘Mairior-banks’ and variants).

Mark (mawrk) n. Adam (18th C.) resident of Crumhaugh. In 1724 he married Jean Goodfellow, who was from Roberton Parish, the marriage being recorded in both Hawick and Roberton. Andrew (17th C.) resident at Burnfoot in Ashkirk Parish on the Hearth Tax roll in 1694. He was probably related to Robert, who was also listed there. In 1690 he witnessed a baptism for John Hastie and in 1691 probably witnessed another for Robert. In 1694 he and Robert witnessed a baptism for James Deans. George (19th C.) farmer at Hassendeanburn in the 1860s. John (17th C.) resident the Hawick area. He witnessed a Robertson baptism for Andrew Fisher in 1681 and a Hawick baptism for William Haswell in 1688. Robert (17th C.) resident at Burnfoot in Ashkirk Parish on the Hearth Tax roll in 1694. In 1694 he and Andrew witnessed a baptism for James Deans. He married Janet Henderson and their children included Marion (b.1691) and Margaret *(b.1698). The witnesses in 1691 were Andrew [probably Mark] and Alexander [probably Wilson]. Simon (17th/18th C.) resident of the east-side of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. He is listed as ‘Simon Mack, carrier’ among those contributing to funds for the new Kirk bell in 1693/4. He married Isobel Young and their children, baptised in Hawick, included Isobel (b.1701), Robert (b.1702), Janet (b.1708) and Agnes (b.1713). Janet (b.1694) may also have been his child. The witnesses in 1708 were Bailie George Martin and smith James Scott. Simon (17th/18th C.) carrier in Hawick Parish. His name appears to be written ‘Merk’ in one records. He married Helen ‘Huison’ and their children included Anna (b.1719). The witnesses in 1719 were tailor James Turnbull and ‘Mr’ John Purdom. William (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1651 he witnessed a baptism for James Elliot. Probably the same William married Janet ‘Bran’ and had children Marion (b.1657) and Bessie *(b.1660). Agnes (b.1645) and Marion (b.1651), with no mother’s name given, were probably also his children. The witnesses in 1651 were James Elliot and George ‘dinre’. He may also have wit-nessed a baptism in 1656 for Walter Scott ‘called of Huntlie’ (also written ‘Marke’ and ‘Merk’).

the Marklair (Thu-mawr-klár) n. former farmstead in the upper reaches of the Borthwick valley. It is recorded in a document of 1650, about a mile further out than Howpasley and with 2 ‘communi-cants’ recorded. Adam Laidlaw was living there in 1716 and James Laidlaw in 1722. The lands were sold by the Scotts of Crumhaugh to the Duke of Buccleuch along with Howpasley about 1760. It is still shown as ‘Mark Lair’ near Mark Sike on the Ordnance Survey map, high above Howpasley, although there is now no sign of former habitation there *(it is ‘Marklear’ in 1716 and ‘Merklear’ in 1722 and transcribed ‘Maichlair’ in about 1760; it is ‘The marke Laire’ on a parish map of 1650 and the farm of ‘Mirk Luir’ is on Roy’s c.1750 map; ‘lair’ is either a boggy area or an area of shelter for sheep).

marl (maw-rul) n. lime-rich clay, used to neutralize acid soil. In the late 18th century opening up marl pits became a central element of agricultural improvement. Pits were developed on the Minto, Buccleuch and Harden estates, starting with Sir Gilbert Elliot opening a pit at Crow’s Moss in 1755 and marling 200 acres. Groundstone and Blackleuch (presumably at Teviothead) were also used. Broadlee Loch and Branxholme Loch were both drained to get at the marl on their bottoms, and not restored again until the mid-19th century – ‘There is also marle in different parts of the parish, which is used successfully on land in pasture, as well as in tillage’ [RRG] (also written ‘marle’).

marled (maw-ruld) adj., poet. mottled, woven with 2 colours – ‘O, gif I kenned but where ye baid, I’d send to you a marled plaid’ [BS] (also written ‘marlt’).

the Marl Loch (thu-maw-rul-loch) n. name used in the 19th century for Broadlee Loch, when it was drained to provide marl.

Marlsdie (ma-rul-sid) n. former name for lands in Hassendean Parish. It was included along with Hassendean in the 1718 survey of properties belonging to the Scotts of Buccleuch, presumably corresponding to the part to the north, around Marlsdie Hill.

Marlsdie Hill (ma-rul-sid-hil) n. small hill in Minto Parish, between Hassendean farm and Newlands. It reaches a height of 180 m.

marlt (maw-rul, -rult) adj., poet. mottled – ‘The mune she shines sae bright, Till a’ the yirth is marlt wi’ ‘The grymins o’ her licht’ [DH] (also written ‘marled’).

Marmion Road (mawr-mee-in-rodd) n. street between Weensland and the Orchard Road, reached by Fenwick Park and Weensgate Drive. The houses were built from 1966 and the street was named after the hero of Scott’s novel of the same name. It was a popular street for teachers for many years.

maroon (maw-roon) n., adj. a very unpleasant colour, being a sort of muddy purple, and almost unknown within Hawick.

The Marquis (thu-mawr-kwis) n. nickname for Andrew Miller in the late 19th century.

Marr (mawr) n. Edward (b.1825/6) from Selkirk, he was a tailor in Wilton. He was at Ladylaw Place in 1851, employing one apprentice, and was listed in Slater’s 1852 directory on Ladylaw Place. James (18th C.) recorded in 1788 as having purchased part of Knowesouth, which were by then in the hands of Thomas Ogilvie of Chesters. These lands were valued at £39 18s 1d.

marri (ma-ri) n. narrow – ‘hearing about the move ti Gala chilled is ti the marri’, ‘My saul sall be satisfis as wi’ marra an’ fatniss . . . ’ [HSR] (also written ‘marra’).

Marriott (maw-ree-i) n. Daniel ‘Reuben Watts’ or ‘Reuben Watt’ (1817–92) English stocking-maker, born in Ashover, Derbyshire, he came to Hawick in 1851. He worked diligently to promote improved public sanitation, conducting a voluminous correspondence with the newspapers, Town Council, and officials all the way up to the Home Secretary and even the Prince of Wales. He was considered a nuisance by many, complaining regularly about policing, municipal works etc. He married Mary Randle (nee Orr). After his son was killed during the Chase in 1868 he became staunchly opposed to the Common Riding. He also had sons Daniel and David. In 1861 he lived at 13 Back Row. He adopted the name ‘Reuben Watts’ in Hawick, particularly in his correspondence, and is buried at the Wellogate – ‘. . . While listening to its pleasing ripple Discus great matters municipal. And sanitary measures pat To satisfy even Reuben Watt’ [VW]. George (1859–68) son of Daniel, he was killed by a horse at the end of Drumlairig Place after rushing onto the road during the Wednesday morning Chase of 1868. This led the Council to ban galloping in the streets the following year – ‘Loan chase when a’ Hawick was grievin’, Wee George Marriott killed when leavin’ The Chennel quick, an’ horses hewed, The chase wad hev tae be reviewed’ [MB] (also written ‘Marriott’).

marrless (mar-les) adj., arch. unmatched, having no pair – ‘The dishes on the table war marrless (marrowless); the verril cups an saucers warna neebers’ [ECS] (also written ‘mar’less’; cf. marrowless).

marrow (ma-ro, -ri) n., arch., poet. a companion, match, partner, mate – ‘He raise, and rax’d him what he stude And bade him match him wi’ his marrows’ [CPM], v., arch., poet. to match, marry – ‘. . . Amang them aa there was nane to marrow Auld Harden’s leddy, the ‘Floore o’ Yarrow’’ [WL].

Mars (mawrz) n. Peter (b.1832/3) probably son of James and Elizabeth Birnie, he was a gardener at Dickson’s nurseries. His wife Margaret Murray (d.1864) is buried in Wellogate Cemetery, along with 2 children who died in infancy. He may have been related to an S. Mars, who had ground in St. Mary’s. It is also possible that ‘Tidy Mars’ was a relative. James (b.c.1800) agricultural labourer who lived on the Back Row. His wife was Elizabeth Birnie and their children included Margaret, Peter, Mary, John and James.

Marsden (mawrz-din) n. Philip ‘Phil’ (1931–2010) born in Yorkshire, he was a semi-professional football player with Wolverhampton Wanderers. He married Jean in Hawick in 1955, and the couple settled permanently in Hawick in 1963, where he worked in the construction industry, at the Hawick Community Workshop and lastly as custodian of Hermitage Castle. He was the first S.N.P. councillor in Hawick and became a Bailie and Justice of the Peace, as well as being involved in many of the Town’s clubs.

Marshall see Mershall

marte see mairt

Marten (mer’-in) n. Elliot H. (?–??) Scottish landscape painter, best known for his views of the Lake District, Sussex, Dorset and the Highlands. He exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1886, listing his home address as Hawick. He also exhibited in 1901.

Martin see Mertin

Martinii (mar’-tee-ne) n. John (15th/16th C.) Archdeacon of Teviotdale, succeeding William Elphinstone (senior). He resigned his rights some time before 1510, and may have served 1486–91.

Martinlee Sike (mer’-in-lee-si) n. stream in Southdean Parish, crossed by the A6088 shortly before the turn-off for Lethem. On the north side of the road there, between Steele Knowe and Crink Law, are the remains of a settlement, consisting of an oval enclosure about 30 m across (perhaps from the first millennium B.C.E.). A little further east, also on the north side of the road are further archaeological remains, comprising a roughly circular enclosure 14 m across and a hut circle 7 m in diameter. And further to the west of the stream are more field boundaries, a homestead site, 2 disused quarries and rig and furrow lines seen on aerial photographs. On the south side of the road there are the remains of 2 farmsteads, rig lines, cultivation terraces, small cairns and pens, surrounded by 2 large enclosures. Also on the south side of the road, but the other side of the stream is the remains of yet another homestead and hut platform. The age of all of these farmsteads is unknown, and there are no correspondong settlements on any old maps of the area. The forest there is known as Martinlee Plantation.

Mary Queen o Scots

Martinmas (mar-, mer-tin-mus) n. one of the Scottish quarter days, falling on 11th November. It was a Christian feast in commemoration of the death of St. Martin of Tours. It was formerly one of the main days used for the payment of annual rents. The land-holders of Hawick formerly had to pay the token rent to the Baron on this date, as well as on Whitsunday. The first Thursday after Martinmas was called ‘Term Thursdi’ and was once an important fair day in Hawick. In country areas the ‘mairt’ was killed about this day to be salted and stored for the winter – ‘...account promised be the said Adam Scott to him for his shonne fra Martinmas last to Whitsunday next’ [BR], ‘Yon gowd o’ Martinmas Cleeds timely daith. I mind o’ braw Whitsun lads: Green was their graith’ [DH].

Martin o Heuchhoose (mer’-in-o-hewh-hooz) n. nickname of Martin Elliot, one of 10 Liddesdale outlaws captured at Hawick market in October 1567.

Martin’s Brig see Mertin’s Brig

Martinshouse see Mertin’s House

Mart Street (mar’-stree’) n. road created in 1976–78 when the railway embankment was removed. It was laid out following part of the old line, and adjacent car parking was developed. The street was named after the nearby Auction Mart.

Mary o Guise (mā-ree-o-gee-z) n. (1515–60) daughter of Claude de Lorraine, duc de Guise, she married Louis d’Orléans, 2nd duc de Longueville, who died in 1537. She then married James V of Scotland and became Regent after his death in 1542. She stopped her daughter Mary (later Queen of Scots) being arranged into a marriage with Prince Edward of England, thereby initiating the ‘Rough Wooing’. In 1548 there is a letter in which she undertakes to support Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme in recognition of his ‘band of manrent’ to her. She later prosecuted Protestants in Scotland, with the aid of Archbishop Beaton, which helped accelerate the Scottish Reformation. Her death effectively brought an end to the Auld Alliance.

Mary Queen o Scots (mā-ree-kween-ō-skots) n. (1542–87) Mary Stuart (or Stewart) daughter of James V and Mary of Guise, born at Linlithgow, she became Queen of Scotland 6 days later. She was sent to France at age 6, and married Francis, which later made her Queen of France. She returned to Scotland in 1561, and after much political intrigue was forced to abdicate in favour of her son James in 1567. She went to England for support, but never met Elizabeth, instead being imprisoned for 19 years, becoming implicated in various Catholic plots, and finally being beheaded at Fotheringay. In Hawick she was significant for confirming (as required by law) Douglas’ Charter to Hawick in 1545, when she was just 2½! Attempts to have her wed Henry VIII’s son Edward led to the ‘Rough Wooing’ and the burning of Hawick along with much of the rest of the Borders. She stayed temporarily in Jedburgh, and famously rode from there to visit the wounded Earl of Bothwell at Hermitage Castle in 1566, returning the same night, possibly causing an illness that incapacitated her for weeks. It has been suggested that her route proceeded via Jedburgh Castle, the Dunkin, Swinnie Moor, Earlsdie, Coliforthill, Whitlaw, Flex, Priesthaugh and the Braildie Burn (the headwaters of which are still called the Queen’s Mire). Memorabilia can be seen at ‘Mary Queen of Scots House’ in Jedburgh and in Abbotsford.

Mary’s Well (mâ-reez-wel) n. former spring by the side of the road near Deneside, on the left-hand side while ascending the hill towards Hawthornside. It was described by Oliver of Langraw in 1870 as being ‘on the lower side of the turnpike road below Hawthornside’ and suggests a possible association with Mary Queen of Scots’ ride to Hermitage. Adam Turnbull of Deneside (said to be a Jacobite supporter in 1715) convinced Sir Gilbert Elliott of Stobs to preserve the Well as a roadside watering-place when he took over the lands. It disappeared some time before the mid-19th century, probably as a result of farm improvements (also called ‘Queen Mary’s Well’; the origin of the name is uncertain, and there may be confusion about the position, cf. St. Mary’s Well).

Maryswud (mâ-reez-wud) n. Maryswood, area south of the Hoscote Burn, north-east of Flake Hill. It is now within Craik Forest.

Mary the Bishop (mâ-ree-thu-bi-shup) n. nickname of Mary Clerk.

masel (maw-sel) pron. myself – ‘A was in masel an night’, ‘Aa hed to se for masel’. And it was shundert …’[DH], ‘…An’ aw said tae masel’, ‘By jings, but he’s richt’’[IJ] (mysel is less common).

masher (maw-shur) n., poet. a smasher, dandy – ‘The dressmaker masher wi’ scarcely a flaw …’[WAP] (not a common word).

mash (mawsh) v. to brew or steep (less common than mask).

mask (mawsk) v. to brew or steep, particularly tea – ‘did ee mask the tei yet’?, ‘…hed kinnelt a lunt an war thrang poatchin aboot an maskin tei’[ECS] (cf. the less common mash).

maskin (mas-kin) n., arch. a brewing – ‘…wi’ the maskins o’ peppermint leaves sweetened wi’ trycle …’[V&M].

maskis (mas-kis) n., poet. a mastiff – ‘The maskis will not move his tongue, But wag his tail, if she pass by’[JoHo]. ‘He turned himself to a maskys hounde, And the kerlynys to beagles keen …’[JTe] (suggested to be an error for Old Scots ‘mastis’).

mason (mä-sin) n. a mason (note the usual pronunciation with the second vowel swallowed).

Mason (mä-sin) n. John (b.c.1813/4) from Selkirk, he was a farm worker in Robertson Parish. In 1841 he was living at Rober- ton Woodfoot and in 1851 at Borthwickbrae Haugh. He married Margaret Shakleton in 1833 and their children included: Janet (b.1833); Thomas Hogg (b.1835); George (b.1837); James (b.1839); Christian (b.1841); John (b.1843); Elizabeth (b.1845); Margaret (b.1847); and William (b.1850). Patrick (15th C.) recorded as Rector of Minto Church in 1483. He made a request to the Pope that he be allowed to hold another benefice. Thomas (1824/5–94) farmer at Blackburn in Castleton Parish. In 1861 he is recorded as farmer of 800 acres, employing 2 shepherds. He was still at Blackburn in 1868. He married Janet Inglis (1827–1909), who was born and died at Blackburn. Their children included: James Inglis (1854–1904); Helen (1856–1933); Elizabeth Janet (1860–1932); Margaret (1864–1927); Thomas (1868–1911), ‘after 30 years of limitation, and suffering the prison of his body’. His wife also had children Jane and Alexander (Inglis) from a previous marriage. The family are buried in Ettleton Cemetery. William (17th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. His name is written ‘Mea- sone’.

the Masonic (thu-maw-so-neek) n. popular name for the Masonic Hall, referring to the former building at Myreslawgreen or the one on Union Street. There were dances organised at the Union Street hall during the 1930s, continuing during and after the War years for the benefit of troops stationed at Stobs, and often organised by Jocky Thomson.

the Masonic Hall

the Masonic Hall  (\textit{thy-maw-so-neck-hawl})

n. former Freemason’s building at Myreslawgreen until 1922, after which No. 111 moved to Commercial Road. The other Lodge, No. 424, has been on Union Street since 1893, and often held functions in its adjoining hall. The hall at Myreslawgreen had previously been the ‘Green Kirk’, and was later used for dances, when it was referred to as ‘the Rabble’.

the Masons  (\textit{thy-ma-sinz})

n. the Masonic Lodge, associated with the Free and Accepted Masons, an international fraternal and charitable organisation, founded on Christianity, with its own set of rituals, acting as a meeting place for men, for social enjoyment and mutual assistance. In Hawick there have been Masons since at least 1768 and there are two separate clubs: Lodge St. John, No. 111 on Commercial Road; and Lodge St. James, B.U.R.A, No. 424 on Union Street. The second was set up after a dispute arising in the first in 1863 connected with the Volunteers. These lodges have typically had a number of the town’s most prominent men as members. There was also in the late 19th century another chapter, ‘Border Union Royal Arch Chapter No. 89’ in Hawick. The Lodge of Melrose St. John claims to be the oldest in Scotland and celebrates with a torchlight procession each 27th December. In the 19th century the local Freemasons were conspicuous at opening ceremonies and processions, e.g. for laying the foundation stone for the Subscription Rooms in 1821 and the Exchange Buildings in 1865 and at the opening ceremony for the Dod Burn water supply in 1882 – ‘These only, through their power o’er thee, Are valueless or fraught with good; There’s but one upward path for me, That path through deeds of Brotherhood’ [JEDM].

massie  (\textit{maw-see})

adj., arch. haughty, bumptious, overly proud – ‘Never devaldin ti crack prood an massy about its bonnie bits an its history’ [ECS], ‘...lang or monie a massy jumpeet-up toon was buggen or thocht o’ [ECS], ‘...Eelct a trader ca’d John Kyle, Massy, in iz merchant style’ [MB], adv. haughtily, proudly – ‘...never devaldin ti crack prood an massy about its bonnie bits an its history’ [ECS], ‘But I’ll up throwe thir divots Afore him, massy, his lane, Ablow thon lee’in’ hunderwechts O’ marble stane!’ [DH] (also spelled ‘massy’).

Masson  (\textit{maw-sin})

n. William (20th C.) head forester on the Cavers estate. He lived with his family at the Overseer’s Cottage from about 1923 until the late 1940s. His wife was Nellie and their children were: Marjory, who married Johnnie Bryce and was postmistress at the Sandbed Post Office; Hellen, who married Allan Watt of Dovemount newsagent’s; and Ina, who married Thomas Brockie of Hawthornside farm.

massy see massie

Master Grain  (\textit{maw-stur-grän})

n. small stream in the headwaters of the Skelfhill Burn, rising between Millstone Edge and Langtae Hill. It is marked on a 1718 survey of Skelfhill farm.

Masterton  (\textit{maw-stur-tin})

n. Thomas (b.1828/9) from Edinburgh. He was a grocer and spirit dealer on the Sandbed, along with William Richard. The pair are listed in the 1851 census and as ‘Richmond & Masterton’ in Slater’s 1852 directory.

Mathane  (\textit{maw-thän})

n. Thomas (14th C.) recorded as ‘de Mathane’ when he was Archdeacon of Teviotdale in 1394. He is described as ‘teacher and schoolmaster’ of David, Earl of Carrick, eldest son of the King of Scotland, who petitioned for a benefice for him. It is unclear where he was from. Nothing else appears to be known about him.

Mather  (\textit{ma-dur})

n. Andrew of Lanton (16th C.) listed in 1549 among the associates of Walter Ker of Cessford who were accused of helping the English raid Goldielands and neighbouring farms. His name is recorded as ‘Andro Mader of Langtoun’. In 1553/4 he was ‘Andream Mader de Langtoun’ when he was on the panel for the inheritance of Walter Scott of Branxholme. He could be the ‘Andrew Meyther’ who signed a bond of assurance with Somerset at Kelso in 1547, along with many other Border lairds. Andrew (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. He probably farmed near Newton and was closely related to James, John and Margaret, who are listed separately.

Andrew (17th C.) recorded as ‘cottar’ at Rule-townfoot according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls.

Daniel  (1716/7–99) tenant farmer at Ashybank. He paid tax for having a saddle horse at Ashybank in the years 1789–97. He was recorded as owner of 10 farm horses and 1 saddle horse there on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He was additionally taxed for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797. He married Jean Chisholme, who died in 1795, Mather Mather (1826) farmer, who was tenant at Ashybank in the James (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish listed in 1643. It is possible that he is the same man as Rev. John. Andrew and Margaret. He may therefore be the family that gave its name to Mather's Close. Helen (17th C.) resident of Spittal-on-Rule on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. James (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1598 as schoolmaster at Longnewton. He is also recorded in deeds of 1608 and 1609 as schoolmaster at Bedrule. Probably the same James was schoolmaster at Jedburgh and Hundalee in 1610. James (17th C.) recorded as owner of lands at Lanton in the 1643 valuation rolls. He also held the lands called Turnbull’s lands in Jedburgh Parish. He was probably son or brother of John of Lanton, who is also listed in 1643. Probably the same James is recorded at Lanton in 1663. James (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. He probably farmed near Newton and was probably closely related to Andrew, John and Margaret. He may be the James recorded as owner of lands in Lanton valued at £580 in 1678 (and also lands in Ulston); at the same time William of Lanton held the bulk of the lands there, and so was probably his father or elder brother. James (1761/2-1826) farmer, who was tenant at Ashybank in the first quarter of the 19th century. He was son of Daniel, who farmed there before him. In 1813 made an offer to be tenant of Langburnshields, his success being announced after the Laird, James Elliot of Harwood, dined with all the prospective tenants in the Tower Inn in Hawick. A few years later he leased Hallrule farm. He married Rachel Ogilvie, who died in 1837, aged 71. Their son Daniel took over the farm, and they also had a daughter, Jessie. James (18th/19th C.) lived at Mosshouses, Dykeraw and Southdean. He married Janet Synton and their children included: John (b.1804); Peter (b.1805); Janet (b.1808); Agnes (b.1811); James (b.1812); Margaret; Ann, who married Matthew Henderson in Oxnam; and Cecilia, who married William Telfer in Jedburgh. James (c.1810–bef. 1857) gardener, grocer and spirit dealer in Wilton. He is listed in Pigot’s 1837 directory in Wilton, as grocer and spirit dealer. He is recorded among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1840, when he was a gardener at Damside. He was a gardener and spirit dealer at Damside on the 1841 census. By 1851 his widow was a vintner on Wilton Path and she was listed as grocer on Wilton Path in Slater’s 1852 directory, suggesting that he was already deceased by then. He was also a master gardener. He married Janet Lillico. Their children included: Andrew (b.1831); Robert (b.1834); Agnes (b.1835), who married Robert Weir and secondly Robert Cavers (in 1857, by which time he was deceased); and James (b.1839). His father may be the ‘Mr. Mather’ whose property is marked on Wood’s 1824 map along what became Baker Street. This may thus be the family that gave its name to Mather’s Close. Janet (b.1800/1) grocer listed on Wilton Path in 1851 and in Slater’s 1852 directory, as well as in 1861. She was married to James, who appears to have died at least by 1857. In 1861 she was living with her daughter Agnes Cavers (also a widow) and granddaughter Robina Cavers. Rev. John (d.bef. 1642) son of William of Lanton, he graduated from Edinburgh University in 1598. He became minister at Minto in 1601 and was translated to Hassendean in 1602. He was deposed in 1609 for ‘divers slanders (keeping licentious company, &c.)’. His widow is described as being destitute in 1642. Robert Collace was recorded as being Reader at Hassendean in 1606, so it may be that Collace was the actual preacher, while Mader simply held the living. John of Lanton (17th C.) recorded as owner of lands in Jedburgh Parish in 1643. It is possible he is the same man as Rev. John. Andrew and aged 72. Their son James succeeded as tenant of Ashybank. Daniel (1808–69) son of James, he was born at Ashybank. He took over from his father as tenant of Hallrule when he reached majority. Sometime during his tenancy of Hallrule a large cairn was removed, inside which was discovered an ‘urn’ (which has not survived). He was described as a big, powerful-looking man, with a slow, deep voice and possessed of an abundance of common sense. He lived in Rule Water for more than 50 years. He was responsible for ploughing Ruberslaw almost up to the crags (although this resulted in the removal of an ancient cairn). He was a keen horseman and rode with the Buccleuch Hunt. He also purchased land in Ireland and improved the farms there, although in 1855 he was shot in the back there, taking several months to recover, despite attempting to follow his assailant on horseback. He also had some pellets embedded in his forehead until his death. As a result of this purchase in Ireland he was referred to as ‘of Falty Park, Ballinasloe’. He was still recorded as farmer at Hallrule in 1868. He died unmarried and left his property to his sister’s son John Arres (who added his surname). John and James Arres erected a memorial to his memory (and including other family members) in Jedburgh Abbey cemetery. George (17th C.) tenant in ‘Langtoune’ (i.e. Lanton). The will of his wife Helen Brown is recorded in 1686. George (18th C.) dyker in Lanton. His wife ‘Isble Madder’ died in 1762, aged 39, and is buried in Bedrule kirkyard. Helen (17th C.) resident of Spittal-on-Rule on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. James (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1598 as schoolmaster at Longnewton. He is also recorded in deeds of 1608 and 1609 as schoolmaster at Bedrule. Probably the same James was schoolmaster at Jedburgh and Hundalee in 1610. James (17th C.) recorded as owner of lands at Lanton in the 1643 valuation rolls. He also held the lands called Turnbull’s lands in Jedburgh Parish. He was probably son or brother of John of Lanton, who is also listed in 1643. Probably the same James is recorded at Lanton in 1663. James (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. He probably farmed near Newton and was probably closely related to Andrew, John and Margaret. He may be the James recorded as owner of lands in Lanton valued at £580 in 1678 (and also lands in Ulston); at the same time William of Lanton held the bulk of the lands there, and so was probably his father or elder brother. James (1761/2–1826) farmer, who was tenant at Ashybank in the first quarter of the 19th century. He was son of Daniel, who farmed there before him. In 1813 made an offer to be tenant of Langburnshields, his success being announced after the Laird, James Elliot of Harwood, dined with all the prospective tenants in the Tower Inn in Hawick. A few years later he leased Hallrule farm. He married Rachel Ogilvie, who died in 1837, aged 71. Their son Daniel took over the farm, and they also had a daughter, Jessie. James (18th/19th C.) lived at Mosshouses, Dykeraw and Southdean. He married Janet Synton and their children included: John (b.1804); Peter (b.1805); Janet (b.1808); Agnes (b.1811); James (b.1812); Margaret; Ann, who married Matthew Henderson in Oxnam; and Cecilia, who married William Telfer in Jedburgh. James (c.1810–bef. 1857) gardener, grocer and spirit dealer in Wilton. He is listed in Pigot’s 1837 directory in Wilton, as grocer and spirit dealer. He is recorded among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1840, when he was a gardener at Damside. He was a gardener and spirit dealer at Damside on the 1841 census. He married Janet Lillico. Their children included: Andrew (b.1831); Robert (b.1834); Agnes (b.1835), who married Robert Weir and secondly Robert Cavers (in 1857, by which time he was deceased); and James (b.1839). His father may be the ‘Mr. Mather’ whose property is marked on Wood’s 1824 map along what became Baker Street. This may thus be the family that gave its name to Mather’s Close. Janet (b.1800/1) grocer listed on Wilton Path in 1851 and in Slater’s 1852 directory, as well as in 1861. She was married to James, who appears to have died at least by 1857. In 1861 she was living with her daughter Agnes Cavers (also a widow) and granddaughter Robina Cavers. Rev. John (d.bef. 1642) son of William of Lanton, he graduated from Edinburgh University in 1598. He became minister at Minto in 1601 and was translated to Hassendean in 1602. He was deposed in 1609 for ‘divers slanders (keeping licentious company, &c.).’ His widow is described as being destitute in 1642. Robert Collace was recorded as being Reader at Hassendean in 1606, so it may be that Collace was the actual preacher, while Mader simply held the living. John of Lanton (17th C.) recorded as owner of lands in Jedburgh Parish in 1643. It is possible he is the same man as Rev. John. Andrew and the recently deceased John, recorded as owners of lands in Lanton in 1788, were probably his descendants. John (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. He probably farmed near Newton and was related to Andrew, James and Margaret. John (18th C.) Town Piper in Hawick, probably around 1732–41. His surname is recorded as ‘Meader’. In 1732 he was recorded being paid for playing at the King’s Rantin. Margaret (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. She was probably widow of a farmer near Newton. Thomas (16th C.) listed among the occupiers of the lands of Newton in Bedrule in 1531. Thomas (17th C.) tenant at Little Whitthau in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Walter (18th/19th C.) son of Daniel and probably father of James. He farmed at Ashybank for 12 years up until 1802, which may have been when he died. William (16th/17th C.) recorded as ‘Willelmus Mader of Langtoun’ in 1569 when he was on the panel of inquest for Grizel Borthwick inheriting superiority of her father’s lands in Wilton. He is probably the William of Lanton whose son was Rev. John, minister of Minto. William (16th/17th C.) recorded as ‘William Mader of Langtoun’ in 1610 when he was listed on an inquest for lands in Rulewater. William of Lanton (17th C.) leased the lands of ‘Kaimes and the Hills’ from Walter Riddell of Minto in 1683. He paid the land tax in Jedburgh Parish in 1678, his lands of Lanton being valued at about £680; at the same time James (probably his son) had land valued at about £580. He was described as ‘in Longtoun’ in 1686/7 when Walter Scott, Earl of Tar- ras took him to court for non-payment of duties for the lands of ‘Kaimes and Minto hills’. But he sub-leased the same lands to Thomas Rutherford of Knowesouth in 1687. He is probably the William of Lanton recorded in 1707 with lands valued at about £650; at that time ‘J. and W. Madders portioners there’ had land valued at about £520. William (b.1806/7) tailor in Minto. He is recorded there in 1852. His children included Helen and Isabella. William (b.1857) son of Rachel Tait, born at Wauchope Waas. He took over the local carrier’s business from his grandfather William Tait in the mid-1880s. In 1884 he married Elspeth Scott from Twislehope and they had a daughter Margaret Jane. His wife became the local post-mistress (also formerly spelled ‘Mader’, ‘Madder’ and ‘Meader’).

Mather’s Close (maw-thurz-klós) n. former passageway off the High Street situated where Baker Street is now. It was once an area of severely over-crowded housing, with shops at the top, and only a narrow passageway connecting to the High Street. There was also a smithy near the top. The 1858 Ordnance Survey map shows a bridge over the mill lade at the bottom. The close was opened up into a street about 1868 when No. 75 High Street was rebuilt.

Matheson (maw-thees-in) n. James (17th/18th C.) smith at Kirkhope in at least the period 1698–1702. He married Agnes Coltart and their children included: Jean (b.1695); Walter (b.1698); and an unnamed child (b.1702). James (18th/19th C.) recorded as blacksmith in Ashkirk in Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories. His name is recorded as ‘Matthewson’. His wife may have been Mary, who was living with children John, Ann and Robert at Ashkirk Mill in 1841. John (b.1812/3) veterinary surgeon and blacksmith in Ashkirk. He may be son of James, who was blacksmith earlier in Ashkirk. He was at Ashkirk Mill in 1841 and was resident of the smithy also known as Crowkawe. In 1861 he was listed as ‘Landed Proprietor & Vetinary Surgeon, Farmer of 22 acres & Blacksmith’. In the Land Tax Rolls of about 1874 he was listed as owner of the lands in Lilliesleaf that had formerly belonged to Andrew Gray. He married Isabella Redford and their children included: Margaret (b.1843); Mary Anne (b.1845); and Isabella (b.1850). Peter (b.1816/7) gardener living at Borthwickshiel Cottage in 1841. In 1851 and 1861 he was gardener at Wolfelee. He married Agnes Gledstains in Peebles in 1838 and their children included: Helen; Louisa; Jane; Euphemia; Andrew (b.1844); Elizabeth (or ‘Betsy’, b.1844); Thomas (b.1847); Margaret E. (b.1849); James; and Robert (b.1857). Walter (18th C.) married Margaret Lillico in 1772, the marriage being proclaimed in Bedrule and Minto Parishes. Rev. William (1849–1913) training at Edinburgh Theological Hall, he was the last minister of the old Congregational Kirk in Hawick, replacing Rev. W.L. Walker, but only staying for part of 1877. The congregation had already dwindled, and probably those remaining joined the Evangelical Kirk, which later changed its name to become today’s Congregational Kirk. He was later minister at Stuartfield, Aberdeen and Cumnock, Ayrshire (sometimes written ‘Mathewson’ or ‘Matthewson’; see also Mathieson).
Mathieson’s

Mathieson’s (maw-thee-sin) n. bakers and confectioners on the west side of North Bridge Street through much of the 20th century.

Mathieson (maw-thee-sin) n. Alexander ‘Sandy’ (19th C.) brother of James. He was gardener at Weens, and together with his brother and John Halliday (‘the Rustic Bard’) founded the Hob Kirk Flower Show. In 1851 he and his nephew saw ‘a man walking in the sky’, i.e. a ‘Brocken spectre’ or mirage illusion of a man’s shadow, as reported by John Halliday. He could be the Alexander living at Borthwickshiel Cottage with gardener Peter in 1841. James (19th C.) brother of Sandy, he was gardener at Wauchope, and one of the founders of the Hob Kirk Flower Show. James (1825/6–1900) grandson of Sir Walter Scott’s coachman. He was a foreman at Weensland Mills. He married Charlotte Sinclair, who died in 1889, aged 62. Their children included Charlotte, Alison and Thomas (all of whom died young), as well as another Charlotte and William Sinclair (who was a confectioner and tobacconist). He is buried in Wellogate Cemetery.

John (17th/18th C.) tenant of lands at Bewlie along with James Shiel. They leased the Kirklands of Bewlie from Walter Scott of Whitfield in 1720. John (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. In 1770 he witnessed a baptism for Robert Cowan at Borthaugh, and another for James Turnbull at Borthaugh, and another for James Turnbull at Courthill. In 1772 he witnessed a baptism for Robert Cowan at Appletreehall and another for Thomas Turnbull at Damside. Robert (17th C.) resident of Ashnkirk Parish. He witnessed baptisms in 1651 for James Elliot and in 1652 for Thomas Fletcher and in 1661 for James Rathie and Isobel (who was likely related). He married Margaret Turnbull and their children included James (b.1659) and William (b.1660). Robert (18th C.) resident of Castleton. He is said to have married Elizabeth, daughter of William, who was a cooper and farmer at Dunlaby. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident at Newcastle, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He may be the Thomas, married to Margaret Plenderlieth whose children included Helen (b.1792), Isabel (b.1795), John (b.1797) and William (b.1798), baptised at Pathhead. W. (18th/19th C.) carter in Castleton. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. William Sinclair (1867–1932) son of James. For almost 40 years he was a confectioner and tobacconist at 16 Bridge Street. He married Annie Yule, who died in 1935, aged 64 (formerly written ‘Mathisoun’, ‘Matthison’, ‘Mathisoun’, etc.; see also Mathieson).

the Mauthaugh (thu-maw'-hawch) n. former name for an area in Hawick near the Slitrig, named after the malt kiln that was once there. It may be the same place that was later called ‘the Deid Haugh’ or ‘the Brewery Haugh’ (recorded in a sasine of 1728).

mautman (maw'-mawn) n., arch. a maltman, someone who makes malt, a brewer. Hawick had 3 of these recorded in the late 17th century – ‘The bailies adjudge Robert Inglis, maltman, to pay £30 to the town’s use, because he was not burdened with quartering the English army’ [BR1651], ‘William Hardie maltman and Christian Lookup both in Hawick were married April 3rd’ [PR1724].

Mautsteep see the Maut Steep

the Maut Steep (thu-maw'-steep) n. the ‘Malt Steep’, an area noted on old maps, north of Lockieshedge, which contained premises used for steeping barley and other grains in preparation for brewing. John Laing’s field there was one of the earliest to be divided into allotments in the mid 19th century. It was an address used in the 1841 census, with 2 families separate from those at Lockieshedge (also written as one word).

mavis (má-vis) n., poet. song thrush, Turdus philomelos – ‘Nor yet because the mavis sings his mellow morning glee Sae sweetly frae the branches o’ the auld aik tree’ [JoHa], ‘A mavis might pine at yer nose for a cherry ony day, ya guid for naething vagabond’ [JEDM], ‘...every blackbird, mavis and starling Jock saw ...’ [RM], ‘The mavis, lintie and laverock lilt Their love-mixtur, a mixture { `Hu-mour and faith weel blent thegither To match the maw kins fowlers. Maxpoffle (mawks-po-ful) n. Victorian red sandstone house near Bowden. It was built in the 1860s to replace a house constructed c.1810. The lands also contain the remains of a cylindrical dovecote, probably from the 17th century. ‘Adam de Maxpoffel’ swore fealty to Edward I in 1296 and was ‘Adam Makepoffel’ that same year when he had his lands in Roxburghshire restored to him. Rev. Andrew Duncanson of Maxton paid the land tax there in 1678 (the name derives from Old English ‘small piece of land belonging to Mac- cus, where Maccus is an Irish or Scandinavian form of Magnus, cf. Mackside; it is ‘Maxpople’ on Blaeu’s c.1654 map).

Maxside see Mackside

maxter (maks-tur) n., arch. a mixture – ‘Humour and faith weel blent thegither To match the maxter o’ the days’ [WL] (cf. the more common mixtur).

Maxton (maks-tin) n. village on the A699 between St. Boswells and Kelso, a former station on the Kelso Branch of the North British Railway, and a Parish bordering on St. Boswells and Roxburgh. Destroyed by Hertford’s men in 1545, it was made a Burgh of Barony in 1587, with the Ker’s the original landowners. The parish church is mid-18th century, with portions of an earlier building, and the Maxton Cross is on the former village green. A history of the Parish was published by Charles Denoon in 2000 (the origin is probably ‘the farm belonging to Maccus’ and first appears as ‘Mackestun’ in 1116).

Maxton Court (mawks-tin-kör) n. part of Stirches, adjacent to Oxnam Court, built in 1976 and named after the village.

Maxwell (maks-wul, -wel) n. Agnes (c.1534–94) 4th Lady of Herries. She was the only daughter and heir of William, 3rd Lord Herries. Her maiden name should probably be considered as ‘Herries’. She married John Maxwell, son of the 5th Lord Maxwell (after Maxwell had sought agreement from her guardian, the Earl of Arran, using 2,000 horsemen! Maxwell eventually became Lord Herries himself, but later suffered for his support of Mary Queen of Scots). They had 4 sons and 7 daughters, including William, who succeeded. She was the superior of part of the Barony of Feu-Rule (essentially Hobkirk Parish), inherited from her father. There was a major dispute with Sir John Kerr of Ferniehirst in 1561 and 1562 over the Barony, resulting in her lands being fixed at 1/3 of half of the Barony. Alex see Mowdie Maxwell. Alexander Harley of Portrack (1782–1853) Chamberlain to the Duke of Buccleuch for Eskdale and Liddesdale in the period 1833–51. He married Sarah Telfer Hyslop. Alexander (b.1895/6) originally from Lanarkshire, he was an itinerant pedlar in the Borders, specialising in small hardware items. He was a regular visitor to Newcastle and elsewhere. He carried a brass-bound wooden box on his back from which he sold cheap jewellery, pocket knives, shaving necessities, etc. He was said to resemble Father Christmas and wear a very tall hat. He was living at 5 High Street on the 1861 census, along with his son William, daughter Ellen and 2 grandchildren. His occupation was given as ‘Travelling Toy & Jewelry Mcht.’ Archibald of Liddelbank and Liverpool (19th C.) along with Thomas (probably his son) he was on the Borders Union Railway Committee for Liddesdale in the 1850s. Sir Aymer (d.1266) son of John, who was Chamberlain of Scotland. He was also Chamberlain, as well as Justiciar. His name was written ‘Eymer’ and other variants. Along with his father, he witnessed a charter for Melrose Abbey’s lands in Ettrick in 1235/6. He granted the lands of Todrig to Alexander de Synton in about 1260. He may be the same as the ‘Elmero de Maxwell’ who was ‘vicecomite’ (i.e. Sheriff) of Roxburghshire in about 1250 when he witnessed a deed of Lempitlaw to Soutra. He was removed by King Alexander from his Council, because of offences against England, in a document drawn up at Sprouston in 1255. Lands in Tynedale were delivered to him in 1260/1. He was recorded as the King’s Sheriff in 1262. He married Mary (or Maria) McGeachen of Mearns and was succeeded by his son Sir Herbert. Charles (b.c.1765) surgeon recorded at Riccarton in 1835. He was also there in 1841, along with 2 Janes, probably his wife and daughter. He probably married Jean Jardine and they had a daughter Mary in 1800. He may be the ‘Mr. C. Maxwell, surgeon’ in Jedburgh in 1821 when he subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’. He is probably the Dr. Maxwell who was on the Committee of the Proprietors of Castleton Library in 1832. George (16th C.) Hawick Merchant mentioned in the will of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1574. He is listed as being owed money for ‘merchandice and furnesing of the Lairdis seruandis’, however, it is unclear what sort of merchant he was. Perhaps the same George was listed in 1571 as one of 4 inhabitants of Hawick who entered themselves to remain in ward in Leith, with Sir William Ker of Caverton as cautioner. In 1572/3 the same men swore allegiance to the Crown and gave assurance that they would not help or reset Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst and others, with Sir James Douglas of Drumlanrig as cautioner. Gilbert (13th/14th C.) received the eastern half of the Barony of Wilton (with Henry Wardlaw being granted the other part) in 1306, presumably for helping Robert the Bruce in his struggle to achieve independence for Scotland. However, in 1342 he pledged the estate to the monks of Melrose Abbey for the payment of one silver penny at the festival of the nativity of St. John the Baptist, while holding the right for himself or his heirs to redeem the land for the payment of £40 sterling. It appears that the land was indeed redeemed, and was later forfeited and returned to the Crown. His seal bore a lion rampant with a saltire on top and the words ‘S’ GILBERTI DE MAXWELE’. Sir Herbert de (d.c.1206) Sheriff of Teviotdale as well as Dumfries. He is only the 2nd or 3rd recorded generation of Maxwells, but little is known about him. He witnessed the confirmation of the church of Hessendean to Paisley Abbey in the 1180s. He is recorded in a document relating to lands in Yorkshire in 1190/1. He had 3 sons: John, who was Sheriff of Roxburgh and Chamberlain of Scotland; Aymer; and Robert. The later Baron of Wilton, Gilbert, was probably a descendant of his. James (16th/17th C.) member of the court of James VI, who was rewarded in 1605, along with Robert Douglas, with the former Debatable Lands. These were erected into the Barony of Tartras. However, in 1607 the two men brought a case against many Armstrongs and others who had tried to prevent them from possessing the lands. In a second Act of 1609 the lands were granted to him alone. James (b.1808/9) from Kirkcaldy, he was a tinsmith in Hawick. He was on the Kirk Wynd in 1841 and on the Roond Close in 1851. His wife was Janet and they had children Robert, Isabella, Elizabeth (‘Betsy’), Agnes, Jane, Hannah and Mary Ann. John (d.1241) Chamberlain to King Alexander II, he also served as Sheriff of Berwick and Sheriff of Roxburgh. He was son of Herbert and brother of Aymer. He witnessed a charter between Gervase Avenel and Melrose Abbey in 1214. He is recorded as Sheriff of Roxburgh when he witnessed grants involving Kelso Abbey from at least 1214 and also and another in the period 1213–19 for Patrick of Whiton to Melrose Abbey. In 1215 he was among a few men sent by the King to the English court to attend to his affairs. In 1220 he witnessed a pledge by King Alexander to marry King Henry of England’s sister Joan, and in 1221 he witnessed the dowry charter for Joan of England, which included Jedburgh and Hassendean. He was also recorded as Sheriff in 1225 and 1226. As Chamberlain he is also named in many other documents in the 1220s and 1230s. He witnessed the charter granting lands in Ettrick to Melrose Abbey in 1235/6. He was succeeded by his son Aymer. John (d.1513) 4th Lord, son of John. He succeeded his father in 1486 and also then became Warden of the West Marches. He was recorded at the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh in 1502, when he was fined for non-appearance for his Roxburghshire lands of Maxwellfield. In 1508 he, along with William Douglas of Drumlanrig and their men attacked the Crichtons and others in Dumfries. He married Agnes, daughter of James Stewart, 1st Earl of Buchan. They had at least 8 children, including Robert, who succeeded. He was killed at Flodden. John (15th/16th C.) listed among the Borderers (led by the Homes and Walter Scott of Branxholme) pardoned in 1526 for an attack on the Earl of Arran. Sir John 4th Lord Herries of Terregles (c.1512–82/3) younger brother of Robert, 5th Lord of Maxwell. He served as Warden of the West Marches in 1552 and was reappointed in 1561. He was said to be a great supporter of Mary, Queen of Scots. He was listed (on the side of Sir Walter of Buccleuch) on the 1564/5 bond between the Scots and the Kerrs. The situation was sufficiently lawless in the West Marches that in 1565 the Privy Council laid out what would happen to his wife and children in the event that he should die performing his duties as Warden. In 1579 he made pledges to bring certain Armstrongs before the Privy Council, and also had a disagreement about ownership of lands with Christie Armstrong of ‘Barngleis’. He married Agnes Herries (daughter and heiress of William, 3rd Lord Herries), from whom he inherited his titles. He was succeeded by his son William, the 5th Lord. John 7th Lord Maxwell (1553–93) posthumously born 2nd son of Robert, the 5th Lord. He succeeded after his older brother Robert died aged 4. He and other Maxwells were sureties in 1569 for 5 Scotts of Ewesdale. In 1572 he was among the men who signed the return for James Douglas to the Barony of Hawick. He signed the ‘Band of Roxburgh’ in 1573. He was made Warden of the West Marches in the 1570s, although for a while the title was given to his rivals the Johnstones. He was recorded in the register of the Privy Council several times in the 1570s. He and Robert of Cowhill served as sureties for several Amrstrongs and others who were being held in ward. He temporarily received the Earldom of Morton, after the Regent Morton was executed in 1581. He was denounced as a rebel in 1581 for failing to present Armstrongs and Beatties to answer their rieving crimes. He was a strong supporter of the old Catholic religion and was involved with other Lords in struggles for power in Scotland. In 1585, for his good service to the King, he and his followers (a huge number named explicitly) had relief for all their crimes committed since 1569. However, in 1587 he was again out of favour with the King, and was plotting to help the Spanish Armada invade England. He was captured and imprisoned in Edinburgh, but released in 1589. He was again Warden of the West Marches 1590–92. He gathered allies in order to attack the Johnstones, the conflict taking place at Dryfe Sands near Lockerbie in December 1593. These allies included Drumlanrig, who, however, left the battle early with his men. On the Johnstone side were many Scotts, Elliots, Armstrongs, Chisholmes and others from the Hawick area. His force suffered a complete rout and he himself was killed, after being cornered and having his right hand cut off. A letter of ‘respite’ by James VI in 1594 lists about 160 men implicated in his slaughter, including many from Teviotdale and Liddesdale. 2 thorn trees ‘Maxwell’s Thorns’ were said to have been planted where he fell. He married Elizabeth, daughter of David Douglas, 7th Earl of Angus. He was succeeded by his son John. John 6th Lord Herries (1583–c.1627) son of William, 5th Lord of Herries. In 1604 he was served heir to his father William in the Barony of Feu-Rule, which was erected with other lands into the Barony of Herries. He married Elizabeth, daughter of John, 8th Lord Maxwell and was succeeded by his son John, 7th Lord Herries. John 8th Lord Maxwell (c.1585–1613) son of John, who was killed at Dryfe Sands. He was served heir to his father’s extensive properties in 1604, including farms in Ewesdale. He was a Catholic, like his father, and was imprisoned in 1601 for ‘favouring Popery’. He escaped Edinburgh Castle in 1602 and had 2 of the Johnstones killed, although there was supposedly a reconciliation in 1605. He challenged William Douglas of Lochleven to a duel over the Morton title, and was again imprisoned in Edinburgh in 1607. However, he once more escaped (although his fellow prisoner Sir James Macdonald was found hiding in a dung hill). Another meeting was arranged to attempted reconciliation with the Johnstones, at which he shot Sir James Johnstone in the back.

Tried in his absence in 1609 he fled to France, returned to Scotland in 1612, was captured and executed. The lands and titles he forfeited included the Lordship of the lower part of Ewesdale. He married the only sister of James, 2nd Marquis of Hamilton. His titles and lands were forfeited, but eventually reacquired by his brother Robert. His tale is told in the ballad ‘Lord Maxwell’s Good Night’. John 3rd Earl of Nithsdale, 7th Lord Herries (d.1677) son of John, 6th Lord Herries of Terregles, his mother being Elizabeth Maxwell, sister of Robert, 1st Earl of Nithsdale. He succeeded his great-grandfather’s brother Robert in 1670, as Lord of Maxwell, Eskdale and Carlisle. He was also superior of lands in Arkleton, Melkledale, Ewesdale, including Flask, Howgill, Glen divan, Burngrains, Wolfhope, Park, Terrona and Whitshiel. He married Elizabeth Gordon and was succeeded by his son, Robert, 4th Earl of Nithsdale. John of Broomholm (d.1806) son of William of Broomholm and Agnes Scott of Woll. He was one of the Commissioners appointed in the court case regarding the division of Hawick Common in 1767. He married Wilhelmmina Malcolm and was succeeded in turn by his sons George and David. John (b.1802/3) stockingmaker who was noted as one of those who helped during the cholera outbreak of 1849. He was the father of John. John (19th/20th C.) plumber and conductor of the Saxhorn Band. Mina (b.1798/9) recorded as ‘Ind.’ at the farm of Wrae in Ewesdale in the 1841 census. Mysie see Mysie Maxwell.

Peter (18th/19th C.) resident of Edinburgh. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825, and hence presumably had a local connection. Robert 4th Lord of Caerlaverock (d.1546) son of John, who was killed at Flodden. He was part of James V’s Royal Council, also serving as Extraordinary Lord of Session and High Admiral. In addition he was Warden of the West Marches and in 1526 was appointed as Justiciar. He was one of the Border chiefs imprisoned briefly in 1530 for failing to keep control of thieves. He was said to have been terrified of the power of Johnnie Armstrong and when James V had Armstrong hanged, he received a charter for his lands, signed by the King at Priesthaugh. In 1530/1 he was a surety for the entry of John, son of Walter Scott of Synton and William, son of Robert Scott in Allanhaugh. He served as interim Keeper of Hermitage in the 1530s while the Earl of Bothwell was imprisoned or exiled; in 1534 their is an entry in the Lord High Treasurer’s accounts to him ‘for keeping the House of Armytage and Rewling of the inhabitants of Liddesdale for ye space of seven months’ and another entry in 1540 for repairing the castle. He resigned the lands of Park in Ewesdale, for which David Armstrong had a charter in 1535. In 1537 he was granted the lands and possessions in Ewesdale previously belonging to Simon Armstrong of Whitehaugh. In 1540 Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch offered to take over the rule of Eskdale, Ewesdale and Wauchopechale if he would not take it. In 1541 an English letter claims he had met at Langholm with 2 Armstrongs, 2 Elliot and 2 Croziers, to encourage them to carry out raids on England. He was captured by the English at the Battle of Solway Moss in 1542. He married Janet, daughter of Sir William Douglas of Drumlanrig and secondly married Agnes, daughter of James Stewart, 1st Earl of Buchan. His children included: Margaret, who married Archibald Douglas, 6th Earl of Douglas; Robert, who succeeded; and Sir John, Lord Herries of Terregles. Robert 5th Lord of Caerlaverock (d.1552) son of Robert. He succeeded his father in the Barony of Caerlaverock and other lands in 1550. He also held several farms in Ewesdale and Eskdale. In 1545 he was ‘Master of Maxwell’ when listed among Border lairds who gave assurance to ‘have na intelligence with Ingland’. He married Beatrix, daughter of James Douglas, 3rd Earl of Morton. He was Warden of the West Marches from 1550 (but perhaps replacing his father as early as 1542) until his death. He was succeeded by his sons Robert and John. Robert 6th Lord of Caerlaverock (d.1554) son of Robert and Beatrix Douglas. He succeeded his father as an infant and died when still just 4, being in turn succeeded by his brother John. Robert 4th Earl of Nithsdale (1628–96) succeeded his father John in his many titles and lands. This included superiority of the farms of Nether Ewesdale. He married Lucy Douglas, daughter of William, 1st Marquess of Douglas. He was succeeded by his son William. Robert G. (1877/8–1916) older brother of William, founder and head of the woollen manufacturers Robert G. Maxwell & Co., based in Dovecot Street. He lived at the Limes on Raesong Park. He played for Hawick R.F.C. and was President of the South of Scotland Chamber of Commerce. He enlisted into the Seaforth Highlanders in 1914, became Captain and died during an advance on Kut, Mesopotamia. Stewart (b.c.1795) woollen hosier, living at ‘Wilton Lodge Park cottage’ in 1841. This was probably somewhere near the end of Langlands Road.

William (14th C.) holder of the (eastern) half barony of Wilton, and hence probably the heir of Gilbert. He appears to have redeemed the estate from the monks of Melrose Abbey and then forfeited it to the Crown, sometime around 1340. It was then granted to John, son of Margaret (surname not given). He is possibly the William, who along with his wife, was granted the lands of ‘Apiltrie’ by King Robert, after being forfeited by Thomas Carnoto (probably Charteris); this is likely to be Appletreehall, although there are other possibilities. William (1555–1604) 5th Lord Herries, son of Agnes Herries and Sir John Maxwell. He held part of the Barony of Feurule. In 1587 he served as Warden of the Western Marches. In 1597 he complained against Englishmen for stealing large amounts of livestock from his farms, as well as ransoming 4 of his servants. In 1602 he granted the wardship of Appotside and Tythehouse to James Hamilton and also the lands of Harwood and Hawthornside to him during the minority of Hector Lorraine. In 1603 he granted a marriage contract between Turnbells in Feurule. He married Catherine, daughter of Commendator Mark Kerr and was succeeded by his son John, 6th Lord Herries. Rev. William (1600–51) graduating from St. Andrews University in 1620, he was presented to Minto Parish at the end of 1624 and admitted there in 1625. He was the minister of Minto who signed the National Covenant in Hawick in 1638 (although his name was transcribed ‘Mr Wm. Murray (?)’. He preached at Bedrule in 1640, during the ceremony to admit Henry Elliot as the new minister there. He was presented to St. Mary’s Kirk of the Lowes in 1641, but the move did not happen, instead he remained at Minto until his death. He married Anna Inglis and was survived by his wife and 4 children. William 5th Earl of Nithsdale (1676–1744) succeeded his father Robert in his many titles and lands in 1696. In 1698 he was also served heir (perhaps just to reconfirm his rights) to the lands and titles of his ancestor Robert (great-grandfather of his father and older brother of John, Lord Herries, who was grandfather of John, Earl of Nithsdale, also his grandfather). This included superiority of the farms of Nether Ewesdale. His mother was Lucie Douglas, daughter of William, 1st Marquess of Douglas. He took part in the Jacobite rising of 1715, was captured and imprisoned in the Tower of London, but escaped by changing clothes with his wife’s maid. He fled to Rome, but lost all his titles and properties. William (18th C.) recorded in 1788 as owner of the lands in Lilliesleaf valued at £10. William (d.1916) brother of Robert G., and partner in the Dovecot Street manufacturing business. He was killed at the Somme (formerly spelled ‘Mackuswell’, ‘Maxwall’ and variants).

Maxwellheugh (maks-wul-hewch) n. hamlet just south of Kelso (the origin of the name is probably from the Old English personal name ‘Maccus’, along with ‘wiella hoh’ meaning ‘height beside the pool’; the name is first recorded as ‘Mackus well’ about 1200).

Maxwell’s (maks-wulz, -welz) n. former woollen manufacturer and cloth merchants, R.G. Maxwell & Co., located in the building in Dovecot Street which was converted into Horne Court. Both brothers Robert and William were killed in WWI, their combined wills being equivalent to well over £1 million today. The firm folded soon afterwards.

May Hirin Fair (muh-hi-rin-fear) n. formerly the main fair in Hawick for the hiring of farm workers etc., up until the latter part of the 19th century. The date was generally the 17th of May, but for many years it extended over 2 days, with the first day considered to be for the country people and the second for the townspeople. It was held at the Sandbed until 1815, with gypsies’ carts etc. filling the area and other ‘krames’ spilling up into the High Street. The North side of the street typically had gingerbread, nuts and other edible wares, while the South side was generally for shoes, wooden vessels, china, crystal, etc. These stalls were closely packed together all the way to the Town Hall. As well as being a festive fair there was also hiring of farm workers and servants and a cattle market. It was also the occasion for a parade around town by the Cornet and his supporters, headed by the drums and files, which was followed by a dance, without female partners. This tradition ended in the 1880s, by which time the Fair had also died out. It was effectively replaced with the modern stalls at the Mair and Shows on the Haugh during the Common Riding.

May o Gorrenberry (mu-o-gor-ren-bree) n. probably fictional beauty in John Leyden’s poem ‘Lord Soulis’. She was supposedly betrothed to the young heir to Branxholme – ‘O May she came, and May she gaed, By Goranberry green; And May she was the fairest maid That ever yet was seen’ [JL].

McCallum (mu-kaw-lum) n. Ann (b.1807/8) school mistress living on the Kirkwynd in 1841. She lived there with her mother Elizabeth Scott and her son James F. Edmondson. This suggested she had been born Scott, and married to a Mr. McCallum and also perhaps a Mr. Edmondson. She is on Buccleuch Street in Pigot’s 1837 directory, at Slitrig Bank in 1852 (but this is probably the same place as the Kirkwynd) and had moved to Myreslaw Green by 1861. Mr. ?? (d.1897) assistant to Mr. Dodds at Hawick Grammar School, where he taught the older boys around the 1860s. He then became Parish Schoolmaster at Kirkton and is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery.

McCann (mu-kan) n. George Auxiliary Minister at Selkirk, linked with Ashkirk, in the 1990s.

McCartney (mu-kawr’-nee) n. Rev. Alexander C. (1930–2009) raised in Ayrshire, he was educated at Cumnock Academy, trained as an engineer in Kilmarnock and became an engineering officer in the Merchant Marines. He later worked at Prestwick and the electricity board, but later in life trained for the ministry. He was assistant at Castlehill Church in Ayr, then minister at Kelty Parish in Fife from 1974. In 1985 he became minister of St. Mary’s Church (linked with Cavers and Kirkton). The link with Cavers and Kirkton was broken in 1988, and he remained as minister of St. Mary’s until 1987. He was keenly involved in local music, and took riding lessons so he could gain his Mosstroopers’ Badge. He was also a regular speaker at Burns suppers, and a football fan. From 1987 he was minister of Caputh, Cluny and Kincleven in Perthshire and retired in 1995. He and his wife Nancy then moved to Crail. They had a son Keith and daughter Elma. Robin Bruce ‘Bruce’ son of Robert, he was a chemistry teacher at Langholm Academy. While at Edinburgh University he was President of the Railway Society, and took part in the protests related to the closure of the Waverley Line in 1969. He wrote ‘The Railway to Langholm: An Illustrated Record’ (1991) and was co-compiler (with Brenda I. Morrison) of ‘The Ewes Valley’ (2000). Kenneth ‘Kenny’ (1953 –) played for Hawick R.F.C. in the 1970s and has refereed at all levels, including internationals in the 1990s. He is a fireman by trade. He was also Acting Father in 2000, has been a Scottish Borders Councillor and became Honorary Provost in 2005. Robert (1909–96) writer of ‘A Song O’ Hawick’. He was born in Wilton Dean, brought up in the Westend and lived later at Lockhart Place. The family originally came from the Langholm area and he was a cousin of the father of Kenny. He was a Kennedy-Dechan gold medallist at the High School in 1924. He spent the years of WWII with Montgomery’s 8th Army, but otherwise spent his working life as a solicitor’s clerk with Purdom’s. He was Treasurer of the Liberal Club for many years and was heavily involved in the P.S.A. Choir. He always enjoyed music and played the mouth organ. He spent his later life in Buccleuch Rest Home, where he started writing local verse. He recorded his ‘A Song O’ Hawick’on cassette tape, and it was transcribed by Ian Seeley in 1990. He died in the Cottage Hospital and was buried in the Wellogate.

McCaskie (mu-kaw-skee) n. Thomas owner of a hat factory in Under Damside in the mid-19th century. This was probably formerly the business premises of William Wilson’s. In 1821 he married Elizabeth Taylor (aunt of another Elizabeth Taylor, mother of David Hardie of Blenheim, Richardson), and she died in 1863, aged 70. They had a son George, who died aged 20. Their daughters Charlotte and Margaret ran a girl’s school in Bourtree Place for a while, but later emigrated to Australia.

McClymont (nu-ki-min’) n. Rev. James (1809–86) Denholm Minister, born at Dalmellington in Ayrshire. He was educated at Glasgow University and the Divinity Hall in Edinburgh, became minister at Birdhopes Craig in Northumberland, then was assistant in Ayrshire and was ordained in 1837. However, he left the Established Church to join the Free Church, and was called to Carsphairn and Dalmellington, but was not settled there. He was translated to New Hampstead in London in 1846 and then became minister at Denholm Free Kirk 1847–86, one of the longest serving ministers there. For the last few years he was assisted by Thomas Pitt. He married three times, one wife being Mary Roxburgh, with whom he had a son, James Roxburgh. His last wife was Elizabeth Rutherford Turnbull. Their children were: Andrew Colville (b.1872); John Campbell (b.1874); William ‘Willie’ (b.1876); Anna Marion (b.1877); and Alexander Watson ‘Alec’ (b.1879), who was a United Free Church minister. His last child was born when he was 70 years old. He died in Edinburgh.

McColl (mu-köl) n. Rev. Alexander Munn (1831–66) born in Liverpool, only son of Alexander, a sailor from Greenock, he was educated at Glasgow University. He was ordained as minister of Cavers in 1854 and remained there until his death. He married Jane Carbery, daughter of William Elliot of Hawick. She later married advocate David Duncan and died in 1893 (also written ‘Maccoll’ and ‘M’Coll’).

McCombe (mu-köm) n. Jake (1930– ) Hawick man who won the European and World Freestyle Archery Championships in 1971. He worked in a number of jobs, ending up as a Hoover repair man.

McConnell (mu-ko-nul) n. Brian (1950/1– ) brother of David, he played centre forward in football. Both brothers excelled at swimming and represented Scotland in water polo. They first played football for a team in Denholm, moving to Hawick United Colts and then the senior team. They were also part of a successful five-aside team and both moved to play for Selkirk. He later played for Hawick Royal Albert (including in their Scottish Qualifying Cup-winning team). He then returned to Hawick United and finished his playing days at Hawick Legion at the age of 48.

David (1951/2– ) brother of Brian, he initially played football at full-back, but was best remembered as a goalkeeper. After a defeat to Montrose in the Scottish Cup in 1974 he was asked to play in a trial for St. Mirren reserves, followed by a trial in goal for the first team against Rangers. He was signed by Alex Ferguson for St. Mirren and stayed for a season. He then played for Berwick Rangers, had to quit because of injury, but returned to play for Hawick Royal Albert before coaching Hawick Legion. Rev. Robert minister of Roberton Kirk 1966–83. He was also responsible for Teviothead Common Riding that year. He was also one of the founder members of the Border Horse Racing Association.

McCrone (mu-krön) n. Senga (19??– ) born in Kilmarnock, she worked in Bantel, and became a successful lawn bowler, winning the Silver medal in Singles at the 1986 Commonwealth Games, as well as 3 World Championships.

McTurk (mu-kurk) n. Andrew (15th/16th C.) attorney appointed as the agent of James Douglas of Drumlanrig in the sasine giving him the Barony of Hawick in 1514. It is unclear whether he was local or from Dumfriesshire (written ‘Makturk’).

McCullough (mu-kul-loch) n. Francis ‘Frank’ (b.1879/80) pedlar who was charged with murder at the Howegate and High Street in 1906. Rev. William Cupples (1867–1939) born in Aghadoey, County Down, he was educated in Belfast and was licensed to preach by Banbridge Presbytery in 1892. He was ordained at Mullingar in 1895 and translated to St. Margaret’s, Hawick, in 1905. He demitted his charge in 1935 and died in London. He married Marion (who died in 1934), daughter of Richard Jones, and their children were William Donald Hamilton (who worked for the B.B.C.) and Richard Denis Miller.

McDonald (mu-kul-nul) n. Alexander (b.1811/2) tailor on the Cross Wynd, listed in Pigot’s 1837 directory. He was still on the Cross Wynd in 1841, but by 1851 he was on the Howegate (at about No. 15). In 1851 and on Slater’s 1852 directory he is recorded as ‘Tailor & Pawnbroker’. He wife was Isabella and their children included Esther, John, Elizabeth E. and Isobel. Colin (b.1814/5) from Glen Urquhart in Inverness-shire, he was recorded in the 1861 census as ‘Railway Manager’ at Shankendshiel. He lived there with his wife Janet and son Peter. He could be the ‘Mr. MacDonald’ who operated the Turf Hotel at Shankend and some other sod-built pubs to serve the navvies working on the Hawick to Carlisle railway line. James (19th/20th C.) referred to as ‘Pastor’ and ‘the Kilwinning Martyr’, he was a fraudulent anti-Catholic preacher. He started a Protestant Guild in Hawick in about 1913, but was arrested for deserting his family in Hamilton. There were wild scenes in Hawick when he tried to return, caused by an antagonistic crowd, outnumbering his supporters. He was later fined for drunkennes in Hawick. Robert (b.c.1780) born in Wigtown, he was a tailor at the Sandbed, recorded on Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. In 1841 he was living on the...

Back Row with wife Elizabeth and children Joan, Flora, Elizabeth, Jane, Anne and Margaret. In 1851 he was on the Kilnpath, with his daughters Flora, Jane and Ann. Robert (19th/20th C.) proprietor of a restaurant at the Station Buildings. A photograph taken in the 1920s shows him outside his business. William (b.1807/8) from Knockando in Invernesshire, he was a lime-burner at Limekilnedge. He was recorded there in 1861. His wife was Jane and their children included William and Ann (see also MacDonald).

McDonald’s (muk-do-nuldz) n. former restaurant at the Station Buildings, run by Robert McDonald. It did a roaring business in the heyday of the railway, serving breakfasts, teas and dinners. McDonald and staff can be seen outside the business premises in a photograph of the 1920s. The location was later the Station Launderette and the Shugonda Balti House.

the McDonald Shelter (thu-muk-do-nuld-shel-tur) n. public shelter constructed on the Station side of the North Bridge in 1959, constructed of concrete slabs, with public toilets attached. Construction was made possible through a bequest of the McDonald family (related to Swintons). It was demolished around 2000 during construction of the Waverley Bridge.

McDougall (muk-doo-gul) n. Andrew (15th/16th C.) son of Dungal. He was listed as son and heir of his father in 1477/8, in the lands of Makerstoun and Yetholm. He is ‘And. Makdow fellow de Makearstoun’ in 1490/1 when he witnessed a charter for Patrick Hepburn, Earl of Bothwell. He witnessed a confirming charter for the Barony of Wilton (for John Scott) in 1494. He had a confirming charter for the Barony of Yetholm in 1495. He witnessed a charter for Adam Hepburne of Craigs in 1505 and another for Patrick Hepburn, Earl of Bothwell, in 1506/7. In 1510 he and about 20 of his associates were charged with robbing and harassing Katherine Hoppringle (perhaps the widow of his father), depriving her of the lands to which she was legally entitled. He married Elizabeth daughter of Patrick Hepburn, 1st Lord of Hailes. He was probably father of Thomas (who married Janet Scott of Howpasley in about 1532), William (who is said to have succeeded, although this may be confused), Elizabeth (who married Andrew Haig of Bemersyde) and Maragret (who married Gavin Elliot). Andrew (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1616 as tenant in Stonedge along with Cuthbert when they were caught ‘with the bloody hand’ for the murder of Fergus Lorraine in Gatehousecote. He is recorded as ‘Andro McDowall in Stainledge’. It seems likely he and Cuthbert (probably his brother) were hanged for the murder in 1618. Cuthbert (16th/17th C.) listed along with Andrew in 1616 when they were caught red-handed for the murder of Fergus Lorraine. The pair were committed to Jedburgh Tolbooth in 1618 and although the outcome is not recorded, they were probably hanged. Dungal of Makerstoun (15th C.) had a sasine for an 80 merk land in 1461. He was part of the panel of 1464/5 which ruled on the dispute between William Douglas of Drualanrig and Alexander Gledstaines over the lands of Kirkton Mains and the Flex. He had a confirming charter for the lands of Makerstoun and Yetholm in 1477/8. He witnessed a charter for Robert Ramsay of Cockpen in 1485/6. He was probably son of Duncan, father of Andrew and brother of Barbara, who married Gilbert Haig of Bemersyde. George (16th/17th C.) probably son of Thomas and Margaret Home. He signed the ‘Confessions of Faith’ in Hawick in 1638, his name being recorded as ‘G. Makdougall of Makrarstoun’. He may be the McDougall who represented Roxburghshire in Parliament in 1625. He appears to have been succeeded by Sir William, presumably his son. Henry ‘Harry’ (17th C.) probably son of Sir William of Makerstoun. In 1658 he was among 20 ‘gentlemen and heritors’ of Roxburghshire who signed a commission to oppose payment requested from the county. He was one of the Commissioners for Roxburghshire (i.e. an M.P.), appointed in 1665, 1678 and 1681. He was a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire in 1685. He was probably son of Sir William of Makerstoun. His wife was Barbara and there was a ratification of Thomas as his heir in 1670. John (19th C.) law clerk in Hawick in the 1860s. Robert (17th C.) listed among the ‘Deficients in Hauick Parich’ in the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. Robert (18th/19th C.) cartwright on the Round Close, listed in Pigot’s 1837 directory. Thomas (15th/16th C.) recorded being in Makerstoun in 1502. Along with William Ormiston, in the same place, he was absent from the indictments given at Jedburgh, although the crimes are not recorded. His name is given as Thomas makdowell. Thomas of Makerstoun (16th C.) recorded in a marriage contract of 1532 with Janet Scott of Howpasley. He is probably the Thomas ‘McDuell’ who witnessed a document in Selkirk in 1533. He witnessed a document in Selkirk between the Kers of Mersington and Shaws in 1534. He is recorded in 1537 among Kers and others who were accused of burning Cunzierton and killing 2 men called Hall. He is also listed in 1549 among the associates of Walter Ker of Cessford who were accused of helping the English in raids upon the farms of Sir Walter Scott of Brunxholme; Alexander of ‘Stedrik’ is also listed and probably closely related. In 1551 he signed the ‘Auld Band of Roxburgh’. In 1560 he was named (as guarantor on the Ker side) on the bond to settle the feud between the Kers and the Rutherfords. He is probably the Thomas listed in 1569 among the lairds who signed a bond to keep peace on the Border. Thomas (d.1604) son of William. His sister Elizabeth married Andrew Haig of Bemersyde. He is probably the Laird of Makerstoun who served in Parliament as a minor baron in 1507. He married Margaret, daughter of Sir George Home of Wetherburn. He was succeeded by his son James, who was in turn succeeded by his grandson Sir William. He also had a daughter Eupheme (or Mary), who married Richard Lauder. Sir William (17th C.) probably grandson of Thomas, with the name of his father perhaps being George. He or his father represented Roxburghshire in Parliament in 1625. About 1625 he also married Margaret, daughter of Walter (‘Auld Wat’) Scott of Harden with Wat’s 2nd wife Margaret Edgar. His children included: Henry, who succeeded; and Anne Isabel, who married Walter Scott of Raeburn. William (18th C.) miller at Spittal. His son David was baptised in Cavers Parish in 1725 (also ‘MacDougal’, ‘Makdougal’, ‘Mckdougall’, and variants; formerly interchangeable with MacDowall, Macadowall, Mckdowell, McDowell, etc.).

McEwen (muk-yoo-win) n. Rev. James (1831–1924) from Kirkcudbright, he graduated M.A. from Glasgow University in 1852. He was ordained as minister of Ford in 1856. In 1862 he was translated to become minister of the East Bank Church. He introduced hymn singing, as opposed to the traditional unaccompanied psalms, led by the precentor. He remained until 1873, when he moved to Sydney Place, Glasgow. In 1858 he married Jane Blackwood (1839–71), who died at East Back Manse, and is buried in the Wellogate. In 1873 he secondly married Margaret (b.1851), daughter of engineer John Melrose, and she died in 1937, aged 87. His children were: Jane (1861–90); Thomas (1863–1937), who was born in Hawick; William; Sir John Blackwood (1868–1948), also born in Hawick; George Cavet (b.1871); Katherine; Marion Cavet (1875–1961); Jessie Seath (b.1877); Helen Melrose (b.1879); and Sydney Melrose (b.1881). He was described as ‘of thin, wiry make, nimble in mind and body, he seemed to be endowed with a tireless energy’. A photograph of him exist. Sir John Blackwood (1868–1948) composer and college head. He was born in Hawick at the East Bank Manse, son of Rev. James and Jane Blackwood. At age 17 St. John’s Kirk appointed him as organist and choirmaster. He graduated from Glasgow University in 1888, then studied music, while being employed as choirmaster. Afterwards he attended the Royal Academy of Music in London, returning to Scotland in 1895, but being invited back to the Royal Academy 3 years later as a professor of harmony and composition. He was a prominent member of the Philharmonic Society, as well as a founder member and first Honorary Secretary of the Society of British Composers. He became Principal of the Royal Academy of Music in 1924, holding this position until 1936. He produced a significant body of music, particularly chamber music. The first public performance of his work was in 1894. Probably his best-known piece is the ‘Solway Symphony’, composed in 1911, first performed in 1922, and performed for the first time (at least the first movement) in Hawick in 2014. It was the first piece by a British composer to be recorded on the HMV label. His music is described as ‘post-Wagnerian’, with influences from Scottish folk traditions. He wrote a large amount of chamber music, including 17 string quartets and 7 violin sonatas. He also wrote orchestral music, including settings of 3 Border Ballads. In 1913 he suffered some sort of personal crisis, which led him to focus on chamber music thereafter. He received an honorary degree from Oxford in 1926 and Glasgow in 1933 and was knighted in 1931. He had left-wing political views, set out in pamphlets such as ‘Abolish Money’ and ‘Total Democracy’. In 1902 he married Hedwig Ethel, daughter of naval architect Henry Alwyn Bevan Cole; they had no children. The Provost of Hawick sent him a congratulatory note on his 80th birthday. He died at his home in London and left a large legacy for the promotion of new Scottish chamber music. Most of his manuscripts are held at Glasgow University. An exhibition and concert to celebrate his music were organised in Hawick in 2013 (also written ‘McEwan’).

the estate of Douglas of Cavers by the 1678 valuation). He is recorded as minister of Cavers in a Hawick Burgh records entry of 1644. Also in 1644 he reported to the Presbytery about 2 men at Fastcastle (in Bedrule Parish) who refused to sign the Covenant. He remained Cavers minister minister until 1647, when succeeded by James Douglas. He preached to a visitation of Cavers in 1645 when there is a record that he was 100 years old (although this scarcely seems credible, given that he graduated in 1593). He married Lilias Bartane (or Bartoun, who died in 1671) and their

Peter was baptised in Cavers Parish in 1784.

Robert (b.c.1840) shoemaker in Hawick, listed on the Howegate in 1837 and on the 1841 census.
His wife was Janet and they had children William, Robert, Jane and Anne. Tib (18th/19th C.) probably Isabel or Elizabeth, she was a resident of Cavers Parish. In her old age she was quite bent, and reputed by local people to be a witch. One day she was caught by Thomas Turnbull stealing harvested oats from his farm at East Middle, and he turned her off his land. However, a deputation of reapers from Denholm came to complain to him that they would all be cursed.

McGarrity (muk-ga-ri’-ee) n. Rev. Robert Forsyth (1869–1933) born in Armadale in West Lothian, he was a minister at Carlin and then ton. Rev. Francis (1588/9–1664) licensed by the Presbytery of Jedburgh in 1611, he obtained half the living of Borthwick from the minister of Wilton (William Clerk) in 1612. It is unclear for how long he may have preached there, but he became minister of Kirkmichael in 1620. He married Elizabeth McMoran, who died in 1670 at 93 years old. Their children were Margaret and Marion (who married William Herreis of Harthwaite). John (18th C.) tenant farmer at Hassendean Townhead. In 1725 the schoolmaster of Minto, Walter Turnbull, raised ‘letters of horning and poining’ against him, presumably to try to recover a debt. Rev. Walter (d.1651) possibly related to Sir James Douglas of Cavers, whose children with his 2nd wife (a daughter of Sir James McGill) are said to have taken the surname McGill. He was probably born too early to have been a son of Sir James Douglas, and so may have been his brother-in-law or similar. He gradu-nated from St. Andrews University in 1593. He is recorded as minister and vicar of Cavers in 1603 when he gave the ‘tack of the teinds’ to Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme, and again in 1607. He held the parsonage and vicarage of Kirkton from 1606, as well as the parsonage of Cavers (although

McKinnen (mu-ki-nin) n. Hugh (b.1782/3) from Dumfriesshire, he was a stocking-maker in Hawick. In 1841 and 1851 he was living at Roadhead in Wilton. He married Isabella (‘Tibbie’) Aitken, maternal aunt of the writer Thomas Carlyle. His children were: Alexander; Angus; Mary Ann, who married James Jamieson; Sarah, who married George Turnbull; and Marion (d.1844), who died of consumption. There are mentions of some members of the family in the letters of Thomas Carlyle, with the name sometimes being spelled ‘McKinnow’. James ‘Jim’ (1931/2-) road sweeper for the Council and horse-racing enthusiast. He was Cornet’s groom for over 15 years.

McLagan (nuk-law-gin) n. Thomas Burns (1875–1965) native of Ladybank in Fife, he came to Hawick in 1895 as a postal sorting clerk, eventually becoming overseer. He was a Town Councillor for North High Street Ward from 1938 until 1955, being appointed Dean of Guild in 1939, Junior Bailie in 1940 and serving as Provost 1940–45. Because of the War years, he is the only Provost to have never officiated at a Common Riding. He was Convenor of the County Health and Welfare Committee, a member of the Archaeological Society and an elder in St. John’s Church. As Provost he gave the V.J. Day address to the town from the balcony of the Council Chambers in 1945. Married to Elizabeth Grierson of Hawick, he had no family, and shunned publicity. Later he became Postmaster at Keith and Head Postmaster at Forfar, before retiring back to Hawick. McLagan Drive was named after him.

McLagan Drive (nuk-law-gin-driv) n. part of Burnfoot, built in 1949, extended in 1963 and named after Provost Thomas B. McLagan. Several of the houses were redeveloped by Eildon Housing.

McLaren (nuk-law-rin) n. William Pollock ‘Bill’, M.B.E. (1923–2010) born and brought up in Hawick, he attended Trinity and the High School, and was commissioned with the Royal Artillery in WWII. A bout of T.B. ended his rugby playing career early, but he taught rugby to primary school boys until 1987. He worked with the Hawick Express, later becoming well known as a radio and TV commentator, and has also written or edited several books on rugby, for example ‘100 Years of Hawick Rugby’ (1972), and narrated TV programmes and videos on the Borders. He was awarded an M.B.E. for services to rugby in 1979, followed by an O.B.E. in 1995 and a C.B.E. in 2003. He finally retired from rugby commenting in 2002. His autobiography ‘The Voice of Rugby’ was published in 2004. McLaren Court is named after him. A memorial bust was unveiled in Wilton Lodge Park in 2012, sculpted by Rory Maciver, and inscribed ‘The Voice of Rugby’. He can be heard recounting rugby memories on on ‘Sounds of the Borders’ (2012).

McLaren Court (nuk-law-rin-kör’) n. part of the Meadows, built in 1964, refurbished later as luxury flats, and named after rugby commentator Bill McLaren.

McLellan (mu-klleen n. Ebenezer (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish, probably the son of Peter born in Forgandenny, Perthshire in 1769. He married Jane Turnbull in 1794; she may have been the eldest daughter of Thomas Turnbull and Beatrix Ruecastle. They had a son, Peter (b.1796). Even although his name is transcribed as ‘Melenan’ in the parish records, it seems likely he was a McLellan. He is probably also the Ebenezer who later married Janet Wilson and whose children (baptised in Hawick Parish) included: John (b.1805); and James (b.1809), with the surname recorded as ‘Mcleland’. Patrick (17th C.) gardener listed among those contributing to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He witnessed baptisms in 1700 for tailor Alexander Hissop, in 1704 for thatcher John Shiel and for John Turnbull ‘owe’ to Rev. James Ker and in 1705 for workman John Douglas. He is probably the Patrick, married to Marion Scoon, who had an unnamed son baptised in Hawick in 1683. He is probably also the Patrick whose children baptised in Hawick included Mary (b.1701) and Patrick (b.1703). Peter (18th/19th C.) resident of London. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He was probably the son of Ebenezer and Jane Turnbull born in Hawick in 1796 (formerly ‘Maclelan’ and ‘Melenan’).

McLennan (mu-kleen n. Rev. Findlay (18th C.) minister of Kelso Qualified Chapel 1750–7. He carried out Episcopalian services in Hawick around this time, probably in a building on Kirk Wynd. The Hawick Parish register in the 1770s records an earlier baptism: “Mira Gladstains Daughter of John Gladstains of Whitlaw baptized by the Rev. Mr. Finley Mcleanen Minister of the Episcopal Congregation of Hawick before these witnesses Mr. Robert Scott Whitslade Surgeon in Hawick & John and James Gladstains both of Hawick in November 1753”. There are men of the same name recorded in Ross & Cromarty in the later 18th century. She worked in Pringle’s, and has been a Girl Guide leader most of her life, becoming a District Commissioner, and for which she was awarded the B.E.M. Dr. Donald J.A. (c.1828–1903) born in the Hebrides, educated at Edinburgh University, he came to Denholm in 1849 to assist with the cholera outbreak. After the last case in Denholm he moved to help in the Hawick cholera outbreak, when 141 people died in the parish. He was a partner of Hawick’s Dr. John Douglas (following the death of Robert Douglas, the former partner and brother of Dr. Douglas). He became joint Medical Officer of the Parish in 1851 (in connection with the Poorhouse), Medical Officer in 1856, Medical Officer for the Burgh in 1868 and local Police Surgeon in 1896. He also acted as medical officer for several other local organisations, including being Honorary Medical Officer for the Cottage Hospital. He later practised in partnership with Dr. Barrie. In all, he was a doctor in the town for more than 50 years. He was an active member of the Con Club, a leader in the efforts to establish public swimming baths in Hawick, and a founder member of the Hawick Bowling Club and Hawick Billiards Club. His business premises were at 7 Bucleuch Street. His caricature from 1856 appears in the book ‘Noctes Hawickiana’. He is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. Hugh F., O.B.E. (1932–2014) rugby prop forward, born and bred in the town. He supposedly played his first junior rugby game at 17, when walking past the ground and asked to join in when one of the players was ill. He played for Hawick R.F.C. 1949–62, and was capped forty consecutive times 1954–62. He played 14 times for the Barbarians and toured with the British Lions. He was awarded the O.B.E. in 1962 for services to rugby and was President of Hawick R.F.C. 1983–85. He ran a plasterer’s business and sports shop. He is listed at the Dean among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1835. He married Mary Douglas, daughter of Hugh and Agnes Laidlaw of Hawick. She may be the Mrs. McMorran who had a cottage built for her on land at Loch Park about 1879. James (19th C.) spinner in Wilton and Hawick. He is listed among heads of households at the Dean in 1835 and in the Village in Hawick in 1840 and 1841 (there are various spellings, including ‘McMorren’).

McNairn (muk-närn) n. George S. (19th C.) son of John of Edinburgh. He was librarian in Hawick and later at Motherwell Public Library. John (19th C.) father of John, he lived in Edinburgh, but developed strong connections with Hawick. For Thomas Laidlaw of Sillerbuthall he painted a view of Hawick from the West Braid Road about 1870, useful as a record of the growth of the Town. The painting was acquired by the trustees of Sheriff Anderson and presented to the Magistrates and Council, and is now in the Museum collection. He was married twice, secondly to Christina, daughter of William Somerville. He had 8 children, including John (of the Hawick News), George S. (librarian) and Arthur Stuart (secretary of the Evangelical Union of South America). John (1856–1925) co-founder of the Hawick News, with James Vair, and co-publisher of ‘Pictures from the Past of Auld Hawick’ (1911) with J.J. Vernon, ‘Hawick and the Great War, 1914–1919’ (1920) with Vair and several other books. He was born in Edinburgh, son of a painter, and moved to Hawick in 1871, working on the Hawick Advertiser. He took sole control of the Hawick News in 1908, passing it on to his family when he died, and is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery.

McNicoll (muk-nil) n. Rev. Donald (19th/20th C.) from Clydebank, he was minister at Hawick Baptist Kirk from 1903. He took over after a roughly 1 1/2 year long vacancy. He was said to be a powerful preacher, and attracted many new young people to the Church. During his time a balcony was added to the church and a new baptistry introduced. In 1907 he moved to Edinburgh to become the first minister of the Baptist Church in Gorgie. In 1910 he moved to South Australia. He returned to Hawick in 1916 as Chaplain for visiting Australian troops.

McPhail (muk-fail) n. Rev. Archibald Connell (1827–1907) born in Southend, Campbeltown, son of Dougal (or Dugald) and Margaret Connell, his grandfather being a tenant farmer on Mull and his middle name coming from a maternal uncle who made a fortune in Tobago. He was educated at Dalintobar and Edinburgh University. He was licensed by Kintyre Presbytery and became a missionary at Crofthead in Whithburn Parish. He was ordained as minister at Quarter Chapel in Hamilton Parish 1862, translated to Beath, Fife in 1870 and then became minister of Hobkirk in 1876, where he remained until his death. He married Mary Georgina, daughter of Dr. George Welsh (a medical missionary in India), who was widow of Capt. Robert Roy. His wife died in 1900. Their only daughter Georgina Louisa married Walter Turnbull, farmer at Hartshaugh. He is buried in Hobkirk Kirkyard.

McRobbie (muk-ro-bee) n. Peter (1943– ) born in Hawick, son of shopkeeper William and Mary Fleming, who was a writer. His family emigrated to the U.S. when he was a child and he grew up in Milford, Connecticut. He studied Theatre at Yale University and served in the U.S. Army. He moved to New York to pursue an acting career, supporting himself in advertising before finding success in the mid-1970s. He became a professional actor, appearing in stage productions, as well as on screen. He may be best known as a regular on the television show 'Law & Order' and for playing Jake Gyllenhaal’s father in ‘Brokeback Mountain’, as well as Maggie Gyllenhaal’s father in ‘World Trade Center’. He married Charlotte Bova in 1977 and they have 2 children, Oliver and Andrew.

McRobbie (muk-ro-bur’) n. Rev. John (b.1794/5–1876) born at Kirkbean in Kirkcudbrightshire, he was the last minister of Denholm Congregational Kirk. He trained at Glasgow Theological Hall and was minister at Ellon 1828–34, Falkirk 1834–36, Grangemouth 1836–38 and Cambuslang 1838–46, before coming to Denholm in 1846. He remained as minister until 1876. He also ran the Free Library in Denholm in the 1850s. In 1831 he married Catherine Copland, from Glasgow, and she was a teacher. They lived at Deanburn Cottage in 1851 and on Westgate in 1861. Mary McRobbie, listed as infant school teacher in Denholm in 1852, was probably his daughter.

McVittie (muk-vi’-ee, -vee’) n. George (17th C.) recorded in the Town Book for 1655. He was absolved from the claim brought against him by John Scott ‘pethar’ for 6 or so boots taken from his stall in Hawick. He is probably the George who witnessed a baptism for Robert Scott of Glack in Hawick in 1680. James (19th C.) minor poet who wrote under the pseudonym ‘Eskdale’. Jess (19th C.) seller of tripe, toffee and other wares in the later 19th century and early 20th. Her shop was at the corner of Drumlanrig Square and the Kirk Wynd. Meadshaw (meed-shaw) n. farm on the north side of the Borthwick valley just past Philip. It has sometimes been marked ‘Meadowshawn’ on maps. There were 5 ‘communicants’ recorded there in 1650, namely James Todd, Jean Scott,
Meadshaw Rig

Walter Beattie, James Chisholme and Janet Baptie. There was a skirmish between Royalist and Commonwealth forces near here in 1653 (perhaps the last military conflict near Hawick). It was part of Wilton Parish until Robertson was formed in 1689/90. Robert Scott was there in 1702 and Walter Stoddart in 1710. It was surveyed in 1718 along with other Scott of Buccleuch properties; at that time the farm covered 344, ‘but very inconvenient it being long and narrow’, bounded by the Borthwick Water, Craik, Henwoodie common and Outersiderig. It was rented from the Buccleuch estates by William Ogilvie in 1723. Cooper James Scott was living there in 1753. Robert Beattie was there in 1766, James Laidlaw in 1780-86 and John Nichol in 1792. It was valued along with Craik and Whinniecleuch in 1785 and 1803. James Douglas was shepherd there in the early 1800s. Walter Lawson, Walter Lunn and their families were there in 1841. About 500 m to the west, near the northern bank of the Borthwick, are the remains of a settlement, roughly circular, about 45 m in diameter. To the north-east of this settlement is another circular enclosure, probably an old sheepfold (formerly also written ‘Midshaw’, ‘Meidshaw’, etc.; it appears to be ‘Meitsheills’ in 1650, ‘Mitchaw’ in 1690, ‘Mitcha’ in 1702, ‘meanshaw’ in 1710 and ‘Midshaw’ in 1785; it is marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Meadshaw’, on Stobie’s 1770 map as ‘Milshaw’ and on Ainslie’s 1773 map as ‘Midshaw’).

Meadshaw Rig (meed-shaw-rig) n. ridge on the south side of the Borthwick valley, south of Eildrig farm, lying between Mid Hill and Rashy Hill. Note that it is a couple of kilometres from the farm of Meadshaw. There is a linear earthwork there.

the Mechanics’ Institute (thu-me-kaw-neeks-in-sti-choo) n. organisation active in Hawick in the mid-19th century, which ran lectures to promote general knowledge among the working class. There were many ‘Mechanics’ Institutes’ set up in other towns in this period. It ran a library on O’Connell Street. It may have been the same as the I.O.U.S. Mechanics Friendly Society.

Meda (mee-da) n. the scout in the play ‘The Gutterbludes’, described as ‘A Veteran Canadian Pioneer, originally named ‘The Medicine Man’ by the Mohicans, of Scottish Descent’.

Meda’s Song (mee-duz-sawng) n. song written for the play ‘The Gutterbludes’ in 1905, with words by J.E.D. Murray and music by Adam Grant. It is about an Indian scout (Meda) who is really an exiled Teri in disguise, with the role first performed by W.F. Crosby. It is also sometimes called ‘The Song of Meda’. It was first published in 1905 as part of the song sheet for ‘The Gutterbludes’, but the 3rd verse was not published until 1913 (in an edition by Adam Grant, published in memory of his daughter Nan), so it is unclear if this verse was included in the original. A version was recorded by Hamilton B. Little on a 78 r.p.m. record in the 1930s. Grant’s simple accompaniment was embellished by Adie Ingles for the 1957 song book. It was changed again by Ian Seeley for the 2001 edition of ‘The Hawick Songs’, making it again chordal, but more modern. It is a powerful song, and retains its popularity. Despite having no chorus, the audience typically join in gradually as the song progresses, until all are singing by the end.

Medlicott (med-leek-o) n. Capt. Walter Sandfield (1879–1970) son of Henry Edmondstone and Kate D’Oyley Gale. He was an officer in the Northumberlnd Hussars. He married Lavender Mary Pease. Later in life he lived at Old Fodderlee, where he died, aged 90.

the Medway Cup (thu-med-wa-kup) n. the Medway Challenge Cup, competed for at the Common Riding races, presented by Oliver Kennedy in 1927, when it replaced the Branhxholm Stakes. Kennedy moved to Southend to set up his own knitwear company, using ‘Medway’ as his trade name (because the factory looked across the Thames Estuary to where it is joined by the River Medway). The cup was won by Marjorie Haddon on Rufus on Common Riding Saturday of 1927. Cornet Ian Mactaggart, also riding Rufus, won it in 1929, was second in 1930 and 1931 and won again in 1932 and 1933, getting it outright following his 3 victories. However, the cup was given back for competition again in 1966 by the widow of ex-Cornet Ian Mactaggart. The Kennedy family continues to provide sponsorship for the race.

meenisters (mee-nis-turz) n., pl. ministers, being appointed to each parish in the post-Reformation Church of Scotland, as well as other related churches. They also served as Moderators for their parish Sessions. The Hawick minister lived in the Manse, which for centuries was on Old Manse Lane. In the 18th century the Hawick minister enjoyed the privilege of cutting peat and turf on the Common and of grazing on the Common any horses, cows or sheep that he possessed; he also received a ‘teaid’ for any newborns to the Town’s livestock, 4d for a lamb, 1s for a calf and 1s 8d for a foal. Parish ministers of Hawick can be traced back for several centuries, although the early days are actual duties to the parish. The first Hawick clergymen on record are Henry, ‘persona’ (i.e. Parson), and Algar and William, both ‘capellano’ (i.e. Chaplain) in about 1183. Then comes William (‘Willo Clerico de haaic’), probably the same man 4 more times in the next decade or 2, followed by ‘Maurice, Parson of Hawick’ in 1235. Then there is Radolphus (or Ralph) in the 1260s and Richard de Witton in 1296. There then follows several Rectors who held the ‘benefice’ of the church of Hawick, although probably never visited the town, and may have had a curate performing the pastoral duties. The roll afterwards is: Robert de Ormesby in 1297; Richard de Clare for a few years up until perhaps 1311; an unnamed appointee of Edward II in 1319; Gerhard Kereti, from about 1346–53; John of Hawick, from 1355/6; John Fleming (possibly the same as the previous Rector) until some time before 1363; John Leche, from before 1363 until at least 1378; John Cromdale, probably after 1378; William Turnbull, from before 1431; James Lindsay, Rector from 1447, Prebendarry from 1470; Thomas Falconer, Chaplain in 1452; Hugh de Douglas noted in 1460; Gilbert Kennedy, Prebendarry until 1470; Alexander Murray at least 1476–82; John Preston, Parson in 1481; James Merchiston in the years around 1504; Robert Lutherdale, Chaplain in at least 1511–2–14; Alexander Newton, Vicar in 1514; William Cunningham, Parson in 1519/20; John Hardie, Chaplain in 1519/20; John Scott, Vicar in at least 1528–39/40; John Hepburn, Rector in 1532; Pate Witelow around 1532; and John Scott, Rector from 1536. John Young was burned in his tower in 1548. George Hepburn was Parson around 1559, probably the last before the Reformation. John Sandilands was recorded as Rector in 1554 and 1558, and after the Reformation was Parson, probably from 1563 until 1583. John Spottiswood was also recorded as a Rector in 1558 (so there were apparently 2 men sharing this benefice). William Fowler held the post of Parson from 1585 until 1601. However, Henry Scott was Reader in 1574–79, while William Auchmowtie was Minister for Hawick, Wilton, Kirkton, Hassendean and Cavers (at the same time) from 1575 until at least 1591, i.e. he was the actual minister during the time of at least a couple of Parsons and Readers. The charge was vacant in 1599 (and possibly for several years around that time). We then have the post-Reformation bona fide parish Ministers: Thomas Abernethy, from 1601 until about 1610; Adam Scott 1612–c.24; Robert Cunningham 1625–56; John Scott 1657–62; and Alexander Kinnear about 1663–67. John Langlands was the last Episcopalian, appointed in 1667 and deprived in 1689. There was then a vacancy for about 2 years in the confusing times after the Revolution. The following is a list thereafter: Alexander Orrock 1691–1711; Robert Cunningham 1712–22; Charles Telfer 1723–31; William Somerville 1732–57; James Laurie 1757–83; Thomas Sharp 1784–89; Robert Gillan 1789–1800; James Arkle 1800–23; John Cochrane 1823–32; John A. Wallace 1833–43; John MacRae 1843–92; David Cathels 1892–1925; John A.G. Thomson 1925–??; David L. Wright 1972–86.

the Meenister’s Pool (thu-nee-nis-turz-pool) n. popular name around the 19th century for a fishing pool (in many parishes) frequented by the local minister.

meenite (mee-ni’) n. a minute – ‘this’ll only lest a few meenites’, ‘A’ll be wi ee in a wee meenite’, ‘Jist gie’s a meenit and Aw’ll gaun wi’ a jug masel’ . . . ’ [JEDM], ‘Ah dinna ken what happened, yin meenit oo were on a bus tae Blackpool, and the next . . . ‘ [JCo], ‘I stared at it for half a meenit, then howked a hole and pit him in it’ [TD], ‘I’d never ken o’ a meenit’s peace When I heard them roar and cheer’ [DH], ‘Everything maun be dune to the verra meenit’ [DH], ‘Yin thing that makes oo spacial is oo speak in oor ain way, Juist listen for a meenite an ee’ll can dae eet tae’ [IWL], ‘. . . hei left threi meenites afore the end missin the only goal . . . ’ [IWL] (also spelled ‘meenit’ and ‘meenute’; cf. the more obscure meenint).

the Meikle Brig (thu-meik-kul-brig) n. former name for Hawick’s main bridge, perhaps suggesting there was a second one, as also indicated by other records of the early 18th century. The Session books of 1722 state that 2 elders are to collect money ‘from ye west side of ye town to ye Bridge’ and the next ‘from ye Meekle bridge to Win. Dickson’s house’. This is suggestive of 2 separate bridges across the Slitrig, this being the popular name for the larger one, but this is far from certain. It may be that the ‘Meikle Brig’ was the ‘Auld Brig’ (not perhaps so old back then), with the other being a bridge over the Slitrig mill lade.

Meikle Cavers (meik-kul-kā-vurz) n. former name for ‘Cavers Magna’, i.e. the main Parish of Cavers, recorded in an instrument of 1404/5 and a papal bull of 1419.

Meikledale (meik-kul-dāl) n. farm near where the Meikledale Burn joins the Ewes Water on the A7, about 5 miles south of Mosspaul. The lands there were long the seat of the Littles, from before 1426 when Simon Little had an earlier grant confirmed. They were described as a 20-merk land in 1550, when inherited by Robert, Lord Maxwell, by John, Lord Maxwell in 1604, by Robert, Lord Maxwell in 1619, by John, Earl of Nithsdale in 1670 and by William, Earl of Nithsdale in 1696. They were then owned by the Elliots. The farm was valued at £900 in 1671 when Adam Elliot was owner. When inherited by Adam’s son William in 1682 the farm (together with Meikledalehope) was described as a 19-merk land of old extent. William Scott of Rowanburn (a descendant of the Scotts of Thirlestane) acquired it in 1733 and sold it to William Laing (Chamberlain to the Duke of Buccleuch in 1750). Thomas Beattie was then the tenant, and wrote a diary, which survives. He was still there until at least 1797. Mr. Laing sold it to William Elliot Lockhart of Borthwickbrae, his nephew. The tenant in 1841 and until at least the 1860s was John Common. An ancient standing stone, the ‘Grey Wether’ stood in front of the house. There are remains of an ancient settlement just to the north-east, and another further up the Burn at Riogfoot. There was also formerly a mill there (sometimes ‘Muckledale’; it is ‘Meikldale’ in 1426, ‘Meikldail’ in 1550, ‘Meikldail’ in 1569 and ‘Muckledal’ in 1785; it is ‘Meikldale’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map and ‘Muckledale’ on Crawford’s 1804 map).

Meikledale Burn (meik-kul-dāl-burn) n. major stream that rises at Faw Side and Rashiegrain Height (on the boundary between Roxburghshire and Dumfriesshire) and joins the Ewes Water near the farm of Meikledale. There are signs of a rectangular platform near the head of the burn and signs of a settlement further down.

Meikledale Haugh (meik-kul-dāl-hawch) n. cottage near Meikledale. There were Jacksons and Douglasses there in 1841.

Meikledalehope (meik-kul-dāl-hōp) n. former lands near Meikledale. This could be the ‘mekil-hop’ where Simon Scott was recorded in 1494/5. The lands were inherited along with Meikledale by William Elliot in 1682 (it is ‘Meikledailhope’ in 1682).

the Meikle Door (thu-meik-kul-dōr) n. former name for the main, large entrance to St. Mary’s Kirk, situated at the west end. This is in the pre-1763 Kirk – ‘Falnash, Bailies Ruecastle and Graham to stand att the meikle Kirk door’ [PR1718].

Meikle Whitlaw (meik-kul-whi-law) n. former name for a farm at Whitlaw, to the north of the Flex road, opposite ‘Little Whitlaw’. The 2 former farms were separated by the Flex Burn. The farm was surveyed in 1718, along with other properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch, at that time covering 188 acres and being bounded by the Slitrig, Little Whitlaw and Hawick Common, with the farmhouse at the south end, on the Flex Burn. The old boundary of the Common came to a point there, with the boundary line running through one of the farm buildings; this was the house of Janet Martin at the time of the 1767 description of the Common. At the Riding of the Marches a cut sod was placed on the roof and the Flag passed over it also (presumably by the Cornet). The farm was formerly owned by the Gladstains, then became a tenanted farm belonging to the Duke of Buccleuch. There is a record of a band of English and Scottish thieves stealing cattle from John Gladstanes’ byre there in 1580 and being followed by a band of Gladstains and Scotts; on their return through Liddesdale they were ambushed by Armstrongs and others and Walter, brother of James Gladstains of Cocklaw was killed. In 1692 Francis Gladstains renewed his lease, which he held by right through ‘gentleman service’. In the 1750s there was a dispute... over the apportionment of the ′cess′ between these lands and the Flex. ′Mickle and Little Whitlaws′ were valued together at £152 2s 7d in 1811, when owned by the Duke of Buccleuch. The farmer in the mid-19th century was William Knox; he was said to have succeeded 2 of his uncles, who became tenants in about 1746 (although it was probably later), succeeding John Gledstains. The site of the former farm buildings is now the main part of Flex farm (also known as ′Muckle Whitlaw′; it is ′Meke Quhitelaw′ in 1580 and ′Meikle Whittlawes′ in 1718).

Mein (meen) n. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen Huntly and their son Andrew was baptised in 1797. The witnesses were Robert Tinlin and James Rae. James (b.c.1800) born in Stow, he was farmer at Weensland Farmhouse in 1851 and 1861. His wife was Janet and they had a son James. James (19th C.) boot and shoemaker in Lilliesleaf, listed in Pigot’s 1837 directory. His widow Isabella Mitchell, and daughters Williamina and Jane, are recorded on Mian Street in Lillieleaf in 1851. James (b.c.1810) framework knitter. He lived on the High Street in 1841 and at Kirkgate in 1851. His wife was Elizabeth (′Betsy′), and they had children James, Eliza and Adam. He may be the ′Mensie Mein′ who is mentioned in ′Hawick Immortals′ – ′Peggy Duncan and Jenny Din, Nellie Herkness and Mensie Mein; The Wilton Priest wi’ his coat o’ skin, Staney Stewart and Candy Jean [HI]. John (17th C.) tenant in Barnes in 1684, when his servant Thomas Yellowlee was declared a fugitive for being a Covenanter. Robert (17th C.) mason who worked at Branxholme, his surname being written ′Mean′. He was listed in the inventory of the deceased Earl of Buccleuch in 1633 being owed £87 3s 4d for his work at Branxholme. Robert (17th/18th C.) mason originally from Melrose Parish. In 1723 he witnessed a baptism in hawick Parish for workman Adam Tudhope. In 1716 in Hawick he married Agnes, daughter of the deceased James Chisholme. Their children (baptised in Hawick) included: Agnes (b.1724); and Richard (b.1731). Thomas (b.1821/2) farmer at Broomhills in Southdean in the 1860s. He was living with his mother Elizabeth at Southdean Glebe in 1841 and was at Broom farm by 1851. In 1861 he was farmer of 220 acres at Broomhills, employing 7 people. He married Elizabeth or Betsy Smith in Hobkirk Parish in 1855. He must have been related to the Meins of Hunthill and Ormiston (formerly written ′Mean′ and variants; see also Main).

melder *(mel-dur) n., arch. a quantity of corn that is ground at one time, one customer’s load of corn – ′After a godly, gospel melder O′ young first-time communicants′ [JoHa], ′… that he would send him a boll of meal out of a melder he had just got from the mill' [WNK].

melddrop (mel-drop) n., arch. a drop of mucus on the end of someone’s nose, the drop at the end of an icicle — ‘Dight the meldrop frae my nose, and I’ll wear the midges frae yours’ = do me a favour, and I will repay it: a common phrase among the peasantry in Rxb.’ [JoJ].

the Melgund (thu-mel-gind) n. the Melgund Bar at 11 Melgund Place, taking its name from the spring that once stood near there. Also sometimes called the ‘Melgund Pump’. It closed in 2004, but reopened briefly in 2006, turning into a bar and Indian restaurant in 2008.

the Melgund Brig (thu-mel-gind-brig) n. popular name sometimes used for the road bridge over the railway at the corner of Melgund Place and Broughton Place.

Melgund Glen (mel-gind-glen) n. house near Denholm, belonging to the Earl of Minto. It lies between Hassendean Bank and Minto village, on the Grinding Burn. It was probably designed by W.H. Playfair in 1827 and was used as the Manse for Minto Parish. Some old field boundaries are visible to the north-west.

Melgund Place (mel-gind-pis) n. street running between the tops of Broughton Place and O’Connell Street, with original houses built in 1837 (the street name is already used in Pigot’s 1837 directory). It was named after a title borne by the heir to the Earldom of Minto, being an area in Forfarshire. J.P. Alison deigned the tenement at No. 1.

the Melgund Pump (thu-mel-gind-pump) n. popular name for the Melgund Bar at 11 Melgund Place. Originally it was the name of a spring at the corner of Melgund Place and O’Connell Street, demolished in 1881. It was also known as ‘Stenton’s Pump’.

mell (mel) n., arch. a mallet, particularly a wooden one, a heavy hammer — ‘He fell! — and instant every arm With weapon rude was rear’d — And pick, and mell, and causeway stone, With Ringan’s brains were smeared’ [JTE], ‘You’ll find it’s smell, To bear misfortune’s iron mell’ [JoHa], club used to kill fish once they have been caught — ‘Scannin the sleek-back’t Cauld; dichtin a mell … ’ [DH], mallet as presented to the last in a race, booby-prize — ‘Given James Cowan for ribbons to the race, mell, and calk … ’ [BR1724], ‘Dunion, wui its muckle mell heed, is buirdly billie ti Ruberslaw’ [ECS], v., arch. to use a mallet, hammer, beat — ‘For guidsake, saty, nae mair sic tales be telling, Else, faith, I dread ye’ll bring on us a melling’ [JoHa].

the Mell (thu-mel) n. nickname in use around the 19th century — ‘Black Andra’ and the Birsin’ Badger, Tammy Roberton, Deevil Bell; The Blue Laird and the Gallopin’ Cadger, Baillie Birsleton and the Mell’ [HI], meld (meld) adj., arch. mild — ‘It’s a melled day’ [GW] (the same word occurs in Northumberland).

Mellerstain (me-lur-stain) n. Georgian manor house, near Gordon in Berwickshire. Built in the 18th century by William and Robert Adam for the Bailie family, it was originally called Whitesyde, and is now open to the public. Its landscape was laid out in the 1720s and 30s, further developed by Reginald Blomfield around 1900 into an outstanding example of a planned estate. The Hundy Mundy folly to the south, with a wooded area, is now used for natural burials.
mell-heid (mel-heed) n., arch. the head of a hammer, and large, hard head — ‘Dunion, wui its muckle mell heed, is buirdly billie ti Ruberslaw’ [ECS], a dunderhead, numbskull — ‘A muckle mell-heed!’ [ECS].
mell-heidit (mel-heed-ee’ , -i’) adj., arch. having a large head, thick-headed, hard-headed — ‘… A mell-heedit lubbert’ [ECS].

Mellorshope (me-lurz-hop) n. house on the Hermitage Water, near Dinlees.
melly (me-lee) n., arch. cloth that is a mixture of colours — ‘… for art and part of theft and concealment … six ells of melly, twenty-four ells of white cloth … ’ [RBA1537].

Melrose (mel-roz) n. town built at the foot of the Eildons in the Tweed valley, birthplace of rugby sevens. St. Aidan founded a monastery here in the 7th century, being succeeded by St. Boswell and St. Cuthbert, with the present abbey founded around 1136. The town became a Burgh of Barony in 1609. The 15th century Commendator’s House, repaired 1645 Market Cross, and Priorwood Gardens are other attractions. At one time called Fordel, it was well known for producing linens until the late 18th century, and also known as the former home of ‘Coltart’s Candy’. Melrose was a station on the Waverley Line, but Melrose is now primarily a residential and retirement community. Considered ‘posh’ by other Borderers, it is rarely the best-loved among the other towns – ‘The dastards of Melrose and Galashiels weavers! They pulled out our badge, and became our deceivers’ [JH]. Melrose Festival Week was inaugurated in 1938, led by the Melrosian and the Festival Queen, and has some events in the grounds of Melrose Abbey. The local song has some great words – ‘It’s oor ain toon, It’s the best toon That ever there be: Here’s tae Melrose, gem o’ Scotland, The toon o’ the free’. The town has also given rise to a surname. Population (1991) 2,270 (the origin is possibly the Old British ‘mael’ and Old Welsh ‘rhos’, meaning ‘bare or cropped moor’, although the Gaelic ‘ros’ for ‘promontory’ has also been suggested; the name was probably transferred from Old Melrose where the Abbey was first sited; certainly the name has nothing to do with the rose, despite its appearance on the town’s coat of arms; the name first appears as ‘Mailros’ about 700 and had varied spellings until the 17th century).

Melrose (mel-röz) n. Adam (d.1222) referred to as ‘Adam of Melrose’, where he became Abbot in 1207. His origins are a mystery. In 1213 he became Bishop of Caithness, and was consecrated in May 1214. In the following month he dedicated the church of St. Mary in Hawick. This is presumably because he had previously been Abbot of Melrose, and would have been something he did before returning to Caithness. In 1218 he was one of the Bishops who visited the Pope to reverse the excommunication imposed upon the whole Kingdom of Scotland. He was burned to death in his kitchen at Halkirk by a mob of infuriated farmers after he had increased the tax. Adam (1817/8–74) another of the engineering family, of whom a portrait exists. He married Agnes, daughter of plumber and slater Walter Grieve, and she died in 1891, aged 75. Their children included: Janet, who married James Davidson, who worked for Patons, spinners in Alloa; Helen (b.1844); Agnes; another Agnes; Walter (b.1849); Maggie (b.1853); Lizzie; Isabella; and Jemima. He is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. Helen (19th C.) listed as milliner or dressmaker in Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1854 he was at 5 Brougham Place and at 14 Slitrig Crescent in 1861. He donated a communion cup from the Green Kirk to the Museum. He married Catherine Easton. Their children were: Eliza (b.1841); James (b.1843); Helen Hardie (b.1845); William (b.1847); Margaret (b.1850); John (b.1853), who became Hawick Provost; and Catherine (b.1855). John, C.B.E. (b.1853) son of John and Cathering Easton. He was born in Berwick. He was a Town Councillor for Slitrig Ward until 1867. He was Chairman of Hawick Gas Light Co., and member of the Parochial Board. He was also on the original Hawick Bowling Club committee in 1854. In 1851 he was at 5 Brougham Place and at 14 Slitrig Crescent in 1861. He donated a communion cup from the Green Kirk to the Museum. He married Catherine Easton. Their children were: Eliza (b.1841); James (b.1843); Helen Hardie (b.1845); William (b.1847); Margaret (b.1850); John (b.1853), who became Hawick Provost; and Catherine (b.c.1855). John, C.B.E. (b.1853) son of John and Cathering Easton. He grew up in Hawick, where he was taught for a while by James Murray. He ran the engineering company James Melrose & Sons. He was on Hawick Town Council for Teviot Ward from 1898 and was soon elected a Magistrate, then was Provost 1902–1919, being Hawick’s longest serving Provost. He was said to be a man of few words, but an untiring public servant. A large number of improvements were carried out to Slitrig Crescent. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He is listed as a millwright and machine maker at ‘Woodyard’ on Pigot’s 1825/6 directory, and was still there on the 1841 census. The firm produced much of the machinery for woollen mills in the South of Scotland. He is recorded as a joint proprietor with his son James in the 1837 electoral roll. In 1837 he was listed simply on the High Street. He is said to have invented the piecing machine (for joining the ‘rovings’ in preparation for spinning) in Hawick in 1844, which was adopted throughout Scotland, as well as in England, and as far afield as Russia. In 1851 he was at 1 High Street (although clearly the east end of the High Street was meant) and ‘Jas. Melrose & Son, millwrights, East end’ is listed in Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1808 he married Helen (or ‘Nelly’) Hardie in Eccles, Berwickshire. Their children included: Elizabeth (b.1810); and John (b.1815). He was still alive in 1851. James (d.1862) from Hawick, he became foreman of the Keysham Steam Factory in Devonport. He married Janet Easton, who died in Hawick in 1886. He is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. John (15th C.) recorded in 1493 as tenant in ‘quithalch’, when he was allowed to ‘compone’ for stealing cows from the Frisells near Peebles. It is unclear which of the Whitaugh or Whitehaugh he lived at, but his surety was Robert Scott of Whitchester. John (c.1815–89) son of James, he ran the family engineering firm. He was born in Berwick. He was a Town Councillor for Slitrig Ward until 1867. He was Chairman of Hawick Gas Light Co., and member of the Parochial Board. He was also on the original Hawick Bowling Club committee in 1854. In 1851 he was at 5 Brougham Place and at 14 Slitrig Crescent in 1861. He donated a communion cup from the Green Kirk to the Museum. He married Catherine Easton. Their children were: Eliza (b.1841); James (b.1843); Helen Hardie (b.1845); William (b.1847); Margaret (b.1850); John (b.1853), who became Hawick Provost; and Catherine (b.c.1855). John, C.B.E. (b.1853) son of John and Cathering Easton. He grew up in Hawick, where he was taught for a while by James Murray. He ran the engineering company James Melrose & Sons. He was on Hawick Town Council for Teviot Ward from 1898 and was soon elected a Magistrate, then was Provost 1902–1919, being Hawick’s longest serving Provost. He was said to be a man of few words, but an untiring public servant. A large number of improvements were carried out.
Melrose Abbey

Melrose see Skirmish Field

Melrose Abbey (mel-röz-aw-bee) n. abbey in the town of Melrose, founded by David I around 1136, with Cistercian (also known as ‘white’) monks. This followed an earlier monastery built at Old Melrose, in a loop of the Tweed, about 2½ miles downriver. It was founded around 650 by St. Aidan, with St. Boisil and St. Cuthbert also Priors there. This building was burned in 839, slowly fell into decay and was abandoned by the 11th century. The new abbey was dedicated to St. Mary and was headed by an Abbot. The town of Melrose grew up around the Abbey. The ‘Chronicle of Melrose’ is a historical record compiled by the monks, covering the period 731–1264, and including the consecration of St. Mary’s in Hawick in 1214. The Abbey held the right of patronage of Hassendean Parish from the late 12th century until the Reformation. They also held extensive pieces of land throughout the Borders, including a large chunk of Ettrick (according to a charter of around 1235) and Ringwood, an area in southern Cavers Parish, as first recorded in 1360. Their lands were erected into a free regality in 1358. Around the same time there was confirmation of the Abbey’s right to the annual rents from the sheriff courts and justice courts of Roxburghshire. Walter Scott of Branxholme was appointed Bailie of their lands in 1519, confirmed in 1524/5; this included ‘Melrosland, Ettrikheid, Rodonaland, Eskdalmuir, Ringwoodfield, Est Tevidall and Vgynys’. The Abbey was frequently damaged during Border skirmishes, being burned in 1322, when Abbot Peebles was slain by Edward II’s men. Robert the Bruce gave a huge sum for its rebuilding. Lands gifted to the Abbey about that time included some in the Borthwick valley. Burned again in 1385, it was rebuilt in the 15th century, and burned again in 1545. Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme apparently dismantled much of it in 1569 (according to a court case of 1573), claiming he had carried off the materials to save them from the English. The abbey was finally destroyed in the Reformation, and the lands were administered by a Commendator. After many changes of hands the lands (including the Kirks of Hassendean and Cavers) were formally resigned in 1794. Their lands were erected into a free regality in 1358. After many changes of hands the lands (including the Kirks of Hassendean and Cavers) were formally resigned in 1609, becoming part of the Lordship of Melrose. The parish kirk was constructed over the nave in 1618. Thomas Hamilton became Earl of Melrose and gained the lands of the Abbey in 1619, and later they passed to the Scotts of Buccleuch. Records of the Regality of Melrose, pertaining to the former Abbey’s lands preserve some important local information. The Abbey was built in red sandstone, including fine tracery, with much intricate carving surviving. It was extensively restored in 1822, at the expense of the Duke of Buccleuch, under the supervision of Sir Walter Scott. Alexander II is buried here, as well as allegedly the heart of Robert the Bruce, after being carried back from the Crusades. More local connections include that St. Cuthbert is said to have...
Melrose Court

started his career at Melrose Abbey, George Fairneylaw, a messenger from the Abbey is meant to have been killed by Roger Langlands at Stirches in 1493 (possibly true, although Fairneylaw was a cleric of the Diocese of Glasgow), and the monks are supposed to have first built the shelter at Mosspaul (although there is no evidence to support this, they did own land in the neighbourhood). The abbey is now open to the public, as well as the adjacent Commendator’s House – ‘Deserted Melrose! oft with holy dread I trace thy ruins mouldering o’er the dead; While, as the fragments fall, wild fancy hears The solemn steps of old departed years’ [JL].

Melrose Court (mel-rōz-kōr’) n. part of Stirches, built in 1968 and named after Provost John Melrose.

Melroselands (mel-rōzlawndz) n. lands held by Melrose Abbey in the 15th and 16th centuries. It is unclear exactly the extent of these lands, and whether they always meant the same thing. Along with Ettrick, Rodono, Eskdalemuir, Ringwoodfield and East Teviotdale, they formed a set of lands to which Sir David Scott of Branxholme and his son Robert were appointed as bailies in 1484. Gilbert Leighton and Robert Cairncross were recorded as tenants in 1493. The appointment was hereditary, with Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch was appointed to the same office in 1519, Sir Walter succeeding his grandfather in 1564 and the next Sir Walter succeeding his father in 1574 (it is ‘Melroselands’ in 1519, ‘Melrosland’ in 1524 and ‘Melrosland’ in 1553/4).

Melrose’s (mel-rō-zeez) n. local engineering firm, founded in 1815 as James Melrose & Sons, starting in Broughton Place and moving to Slitrig Crescent. They supplied many of the local textile mills, e.g. the new pit wheel for Wilton Mills in 1829, the first steam engine built in Hawick, for Langlands Mill in 1831, and the first ‘piecing machine’ in Hawick in 1844. They furnished the mills at the Glebe, Riversdale and Teviotdale. They also occupied the Teviotside Foundry on the east side of Commercial Road from the late 19th century. At their height the company was supplying factories from the England Midlands to far north of Scotland. The National Archives of Scotland have papers dating from 1867, while the Scottish Borders Archive has some engineering plans from about 1863-1910.

Melrose’s (mel-rō-zeez) n. butcher’s shop also run as a hostelry by Mrs. Melrose in the early 19th century. It was located at the eastern side of the Tower.

Melrosian (me-rōz-ee-in) n. someone from Melrose, also the name of the principal of the Melrose festival.

melt (mel-tith) n., arch. the spawn of a male fish, milt.

meltith (mel’t) n., arch. the milt, male reproductive gland of a fish, arch., poet. a meal, food, sustenance – ‘Thaye sall be ane melteth for the tods’ [HSR], ‘... an’ that was ay when ye gaed him a gude meltith – a nicht’s hudgin’ an’ a pickle meal away wi’ him in the mornin’’ [BCM1880].

Melville (mel-vil) n. David (1660–1728) 3rd son of George, Earl of Melville. He became 3rd Earl of Leven in 1681. He came over to Scotland with the army of William of Orange in 1688. Along with his father, he helped deal with the affairs in Scotland for Anna, Duchess of Buccleuch, who was half-sister of his mother. There are several letters in existence from her to him in the period 1696-1702. Holding several high offices, he was appointed a Commissioner for the Union in 1706, was a Representative Peer 1707–10, but dismissed from all offices in 1712.

George (1636–1707) 4th Lord and 1st Earl of Melville. He was an advisor of the young Duchess of Buccleuch, taking care of her affairs in Scotland. Accused in the ‘Rye House Plot’ of 1683, he fled to Holland. He returned to Scotland after the Revolution and became Secretary of State for Scotland. He and his son continued to deal with the estates of the Duchess, but after her return to Scotland in 1701 she started to suspect that they had worked in their own interest, and the legal disputes took until 1711 to resolve. He is portrayed as Henry Morton in Sir Walter Scott’s ‘Old Mortality’. He married Catherine, only daughter of Lady Margaret Leslie and her 1st husband, Lord Balgonie; she was a step-sister of the Duchess of Buccleuch. He was succeeded by his son David, who was also Earl of Leven.

James of Halhill (d.bef. 1714) son of Sir James of Halhill and Burntisland. His great-grandfather, also Sir James, was author of the ‘Memoirs of His Own Life’. In 1694 he served as a Commissioner for assessing the rentals for the Duchess of Buccleuch. In 1696 John Scott of Synton and Sir Francis Scott of Thirlestane had a bond with him. Rev. John (17th C.) from the Mearns, he graduated from Aberdeen in 1667. He became minister at Ewes Kirk in about 1682. However, he was deprived in 1689 for refusing to give up Episcopalianism.

mem (mem) n., arch. ma’am, madam – ‘I dinna ken how much whisky they took, mem, but they’ve drucken sax gang o’ watter!” [V&M], ‘Deed, then, mem’, said she, ‘I won’t hire with that condition; for I wadna gie the crack i’ the kirkyaird after, for a’ the rest o’ the service’ [WIS].

Members o Parliament (mem-burz-ə-par-li-min’ n. Members of Parliament, elected by voters in a constituency to represent them in the House of Commons. This system grew out of conventions of the minor barons, which started about the 15th century, but without specifically representing a region. From the 16th century counties had representatives to the Scottish Parliament, called Commissioners; there were 2 of these at a time throughout the 17th century, with an additional 2 appointed in 1690, and the last term being 1702–07. The families of Douglas of Cavers, Pringle of Stichell, Elliott of Stobs, Elliot of Minto, McDougall of Makerstoun, Scott of Langshaw, Ker of Greenhead, Scott of Ancrum, Riddell of that Ilk, Bennet of Grubet, Scott of Woll, Scott of Gala and Elliot of Headshaw all represented the county. A surviving document of 1628 describes how the Sheriff was unable to get anyone to agree to be a Commissioner, even after 4 meetings! For the Parliament of 1621 the Commissioners were the Sheriff himself (Sir William Douglas of Cavers) and (Andrew) Riddell of that Ilk, while for the 1633 Parliament it was again the Sheriff and (perhaps Walter) Riddell of that Ilk. The appointment of Commissioners to the Parliamets of Charles and William during the chaotic 17th centuries is hard to track, and it may be that men were appointed in place of others (hence the list below may not be accurate in this period). The first Westminster Member of Parliament for Roxburghshire was in 1708. Before 1832 there were very few local electors, for example the number in Hawick was only 2 or 3 out of the 143 voters in the county of Roxburghshire in 1812. Hawick people were extremely active in pushing for electoral reform and the extension of political franchise. After the 1868 Representation of the People (Scotland) Act, a new constituency, the Hawick (or Border) Burghs was set up, including the boundaries of Hawick, Galashiels and Selkirk. Hawick’s M.P. was thus separate from that of Roxburghshire until this seat was dissolved in 1918. The constituency was called ‘ Roxburgh & Selkirk’ 1918–55, then merged into ‘Roxburgh, Selkirk & Peebles’ 1955–83, became ‘Roxburgh and Berwickshire’ 1983–2005 and is now Berwickshire, Roxburgh & Selkirk. A list of Hawick’s M.P.s. is: Thomas McDougall of Makerstoun 1597; Sir John Ker of Hirsel 1605, 1607; Sir William Cranston 1608; Sir William Douglas of Cavers 1612, 1617, 1621, 1628–33, 1639–40, 1644, 1645–46, 1650; Andrew Riddell of that Ilk 1617, 1621; John Haliburton of Muirhouselaw 1625; Sir William McDougall of Makerstoun 1625; Sir Walter Riddell of that Ilk 1628–33, 1646–47, 1650; Sir James Kerr of Hundalee and Crailing 1630; John Rutherford of Hunthill 1630; Sir Walter Riddell of that Ilk 1633; Robert Pringle of Stichill 1639–41; William Elliott of Stobs 1640–41, 1643, 1645–47, 1650–51; Sir Thomas Ker of Cavers 1643–44, 1648–49; Sir John Ker of Lochtoun 1644; Sir Andrew Ker of Greenhead 1645, 1648–49; William Kerr of Newton 1646–47, 1656–58; Gideon Scott of Highchester 1650; Sir Andrew Ker of Greenhead 1658–59, 1669–74; Sir Archibald Douglas of Cavers 1661–63; Sir Gilbert Elliott of Stobs 1661–63, 1667, 1669–74; John Scott of Langshaw 1665; Henry McDougall 1665, 1678, 1681; Robert Pringle of Stichill 1678, 1681–82; Sir William Ker of Greenhead 1685–86, 1702–07, 1707–08; Sir Patrick Scott of Longnewton and Ancrum 1685–93; Sir William Elliott of Stobs 1689–93; Sir William Douglas of Cavers 1690–98; Sir John Riddell of that Ilk 1690–1700; John Scott of Woll 1693–1702; William Bennet of Grubet 1693–1702, 1702–07, 1707–08; James Scott of Gala 1698–1702; Archibald Douglas of Cavers 1700–02, 1702–07; Sir Gilbert Elliott of Minto 1702–07; Sir Gilbert Elliott of Stobs 1708–15; William Douglas of Cavers 1715–22; Sir Gilbert Elliott of Minto 1722–26; Sir Gilbert Elliott of Stobs 1726–27; William Douglas of Cavers 1727–34; John Rutherford of Edgerston 1734–42; William Douglas of Cavers 1742–47, Walter Scott 1747–65; Sir Gilbert Elliott of Minto 1765–77; Sir Gilbert Elliott (later Earl of Minto) 1777–84; Sir George Douglas of Springwood Park 1784–1806; John Rutherford of Edgerston 1806–12; Gilbert Elliot-Murray-Kynynmound (later Earl of Minto) 1812–14; Sir Alexander Don of Newton 1814–26; Henry Francis Hepburne-Scott (later Lord Polwarth) 1826–32; George Elliot (Captain R.N.) 1832–35; Lord John Douglas Montagu-Douglas-Scott 1835–37; John Edmund Elliot of Belses 1837–41; Francis Scott of Mertoun House 1841–47; John Edmund Elliot of Belses 1847–59; Sir William Scott of Ancrum 1859–68; George Otto Trevelyan 1868–86; Alexander Lain Brown 1886–92; Thomas Shaw 1892–1909; Sir John Nicholson Barran 1909–18; Robert Munro (later Baron Alness) 1918–22; Sir Thomas Henderson 1922–23; Walter John Montagu-Douglas Scott (later Duke of Buccleuch)
Mem Dyce

memorial (me-mo-rul) n., poet. a memorial – ‘...an thy memorall, O Lord, throwewot a’ ganerations’ [HSR].

The Memory Bank (thu-me-mu-rec-bawngk) n. the Scottish Borders’ Memory Bank was set up as a Millennium project to collect and record memories of life in the Borders, started in 1998 and co-ordinated by Wendy Ball. Several Hawick citizens have been taped and transcribed.

menage (nu-naj) n., arch. a benefit club of neighbours or workers, particularly a scheme, generally among women in the 19th and early 20th centuries, where those joining paid a fixed amount every week (plus perhaps a small commission going to the treasurer for managing the fund) for 20 weeks and a draw was made to distribute the total each week. In the late 1800s the contribution might be 1 shilling, with the £1 total given out randomly each week. The practice may still be carried out in mills today, with larger sums involved, and sometimes individuals arranging to be near the beginning or end of the draw – ‘...joining a menage’ was as stupid a thing as going to the pawnbroker ...’ [JTu] (from French; noted by E.C. Smith, but already a thing of the past by then; cf. teedly).

mend (mend) v., arch. to fully recover from an illness or injury (different meaning from standard English; noted by E.C. Smith; see also mends).

mender (men-dur) n. a person who makes minor repairs to the stitching of garments in the knitwear industry after being found by a ‘looker’. Good practitioners of this art are ‘invisible menders’.

mendit (men-dee’,-di’) pp. mended – ‘The hurlie at ei mendaeet the trams o’ [ECS].

mends (mendsz) n., pl., arch. recovery, healing – ‘On the way o mends = to be convalescent; progressing towards recovery of health’ [ECS] (cf. mend).

meng (meng) v. to smell, stink, pong, arch. to mix among filth. n. a smell, stink, n., arch. human excrement (also ming).

meng (meng) v., arch. to mix things among filth.

Menie (me-neee) n. diminutive of the name ‘Williamina’ – ‘O where is tinnie Hewe? O where is little Lenne? And where is bonny Lu? And Menie o’ the glenne?’ [JTe].

menna see menni

menment (men-en’) n., arch. a minnow – ‘Christopher North’ uses baggie-mennon, an approximate combination of two Hawick terms. Ramsay has mennin’ [ECS] (also written ‘mennant’ and ‘mennet’).

menni (me-ni, -na, -nu) contr. mustn’t, must not, may not – ‘ee menni dae’d’, ‘Yow yins that’s keinda perjink menna be ugget at iz for aa this’ [ECS], ‘An’ wei menna forget that in the vast majority o’ the tenements in the toon the kitchen had tae ser’ as the bedroom as weel’ [BW1938] (also written ‘menna’: cf. mauni).

men’s baa (menz-baw) n., arch. handball game formerly played in Hawick on the Monday preceding the game in Jedburgh (held on ‘Eastern’s-E’en’, i.e. Shrove Tuesday, or the day before Lent). It was distinguished from the ‘callants’ baa’, which was played on the preceeding Saturday.

mense (mens) n., arch., poet. manners, decorum, respectability, honour, dignity, hospitality – ‘That wuman hes-naether sense nor mense’ [ECS], ‘Never heed! oo’l heh baih oor meat an oor mense (said when a cordial invitation has been declined)’ [ECS], ‘For she had baked a crumpie cake and butter scones, for mense’s sake, To entertain her lodger’ [HSR], ‘Then, lick my chops, I thought that the Auld Testament had muckle mense ...’ [DH], ‘‘Hei’s a gleg callant; ee heh muckle mense o’ the meal when she makes the par-’ [WL], ‘...A hantle o’ mense to oor dull heids send’ [WL], credit, sense of pride – ‘For Bosells hes muckle mense o er Green!’ [ECS], ‘Her familly hae muckle mense o’ her’ [GW], someone who is a credit, respect – ‘She’s the mense o’ the familly’ [GW], ‘Hei’s a gleg callant; ee heh muckle mense o um’ [ECS], reward, recompense – ‘...And a’ the prayers the poor fool pray’d, I wish I had a mense for my ain three ky. Fala, &c.’ [CPM].

mensefi (mens-f) adj., arch. mannerly, hospitable, generous, sensible – ‘We mourn the loss o’ mensefu’ John; Yet greet in vain since he is gone: A blyther lad ne’er buir a drone ...’ [CPM], ‘When we went to tea, we got something before we partook of’ [RJR], ‘But mind ye, she maa be mensefu o’ the meal when she makes the par-ritch’ [JEDM], ‘A was verrih mensefi at tei-time: A duist tuik yeh cup’ [ECS], ‘A’d lippent on o that wanchancy motor as the maist mensifiey way o wumnin threeth Jethart ti Haaick’ [ECS] (also spelled ‘mensefu’, etc.).

(mense-lis) adj., arch. unman-nerly, ill-bred, boorish – ‘A duist hyit jairgin things, an that menseless road-injun fair garrd mei girkil’ [ECS], indecent, improper.

Menslaws  (mens-lawz, -les) n. farm just north of Spittal-on-Rule, near where the Rule Water joins the Teviot. There was once a quarry there, which supplied stone to Hawick, among other place. It may be the ‘menskles’ where Gilbert Law had grain stolen by Adam Grahamslaw, according to a case of 1502. It is probably the ‘Menses’ listed among the lands of the Stobs estate purchased by Gilbert Elliott from his half sisters in about 1608. In 1623 the lands were granted to the Kers of Cavers-Carre and later the farm at ‘Menseless Pathhead’ was part of the Cavers estate. It was among lands owned by Sir Thomas Ker in 1643, valued at £357. It was among lands inherited by John, son of John Kerr of West Nisbet in 1684. William Brown was there in 1687. Also in 1687 5 acres of land there were listed among lands inherited by Sir William Douglas of Cavers and by his brother Archibald in 1698. James Riddell was recorded there in 1745. Before 1786 the farm was owned by William Black, his lands being stated in 1788 to have been valued at £263 16s 3d, including the 2 husbandlands at the ‘waulk-mill’. The farm then passed to the Bells; William Bell had a new house built there about this time and was recorded as owner of 5 horses there in 1797. In the 1811 Land Tax Rolls it was recorded being owned by Robert Bell, and valued at £264. Land steward Mark Turnbull was there in 1851. In 1860, a year after the death of George Bell, it was sold to Thomas Cockburn, then owned briefly by a Mr. Turnbull, before being bought by Robert Cunningham, Chamberlain to the Duke of Buccleuch. Thomas Riddell was there in the 1860s. The tenants of the house in the early 20th century were 2 sisters called Peter. There was once a quarry there, supplying stone for buildings in Hawick and Jedburgh. A burial cist was found there, north of the farm, at the edge of the Teviot flood plain; 2 boys discovered it in 1960, James Wallace and Michael Turnbull, and it was excavated by the Hawick Archaeological Society the following year, revealing an adult and juvenile skeleton and triangular lint point. The remains are in the Museum (sometimes ‘Mainslaws’, the name is probably from the Old English ‘gemernes leah’, meaning ‘common property’, or possibly ‘menseless’, meaning untidy or uncleared land; it first appears transcribed as ‘menskles’ in 1502, then is ‘Mensles’ in 1516 and 1571, with ‘Menslawis’ soon after, although it is still ‘Mensles’ in 1623, ‘Menslin’ in 1643, ‘Menslie’ and ‘Menseless’ in 1678, ‘Menslie’ in 1687 and 1698, ‘Mensless’ in 1761 and 1797 and ‘Mainslaws or Mensless’ in 1811; Sir James Murray refers to it as ‘Menzies Laws’ in 1888; it is ‘Mensles’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map and incorrectly appears as ‘Mansles’ on Stobie’s 1770 map).

men-swnorn  (men-sworn) pp., adj. forsworn, perjured – ‘...and calling the council’s officers men-swnorn lowns, was fined £10 Scots’ [BR1657].

mentionat  (men-shin-a’) pp., arch. mentioned, referred to – ‘...as if ther wer ane particular paper granted by us and ilk ane of us to the effect above mentionat’ [BR1692], ‘...to prove that the said Andrew came down the Bedell’s stair att the above mentionat silent hours of ye night’ [PR1718], ‘...the said William Whaton, ridinge in ye manner above mentionat’ [PR1718].

mer  (mer) v., arch. to mar, injure, to stay the course of (a ball, hoop etc. that has gotten out of control), to stop or block the way (of sheep or cattle) – ‘Beide yow there an merr thir paips soomin doon the gitter’ [ECS], ‘Eee sood heh merrd the bool; it’s rowld owre fer’ [ECS], to steer a ‘yoke-a-tulie’ with the feet – ‘A gaird maun be gey skeely at merrin’ [GW], ‘Sic a byordnar grand bit for a sledge-sky or a yoke-a-tullie! By!! The gaird wad need ti bei richt an skeely at the merreen’ [ECS] (also written ‘merr’; from Mediaeval English).

mer-browed  (mer-browd) adj., arch. having eye-brows that meet in the middle – ‘...he had only got as far as the old toll-house when he observed a mer-browed man coming in his direction’ [RM].

mercat  (mer-ki’, mer-ka’) n. market, historically Hawick’s main markets were held on Thursdays – ‘the mercat’s now on Seturdus’, ‘Item, that all flescheris present the halie flesh slaine by them at the mercat place ...’ [BR1640], ‘...and having caused proclaim her several tymes ... at the mercat crosse of Hawicke in time of mercait day’ [BR1641], ‘...rin the merket gairden and dairy at Cavers’ [IWL], ‘...Better, daur-say, Brocht, factory-fresh (sei telly) til eer hame, twe wader miles, than frae some mercat-krame ...’ [DH]. In the 18th century Hawick had a flesh-market, butter-market, meal-market, salt-market and horse-market. The Thursday market took place in the lower part of the Town House, with all sorts of farm produce sold. In general the market area was around the Cross until the late 18th century, with 80–120 stalls extending along the High Street, selling everything from housewares and food to meat and coal. The sheep market was recorded being at the Sandbed in 1700. The general market moved to the Sandbed for a few decades, and shifted to the Tower Knowe in 1815 with the construction of the New Road. It was stated in 1839 that the number of carts coming to the town for a market day was about 170. The cattle market (and hiring fair), a right of the Duke of Buccleuch, took place in early November until the end of the 19th century. The Auction Mart, at what is now Mart Street, dominated the sale of livestock through the late 19th and much of the 20th centuries. In the 20th century the Saturday market was held near the Auction Mart and is now in the Big Haugh – ‘To fair or merket she walked alone, At best, the lasie was unco plain’ [WL] (also spelled ‘merket’, etc.; cf. mairket, mairt and mert).

the Mercat Cross (thu-mer-ki’-kros) n. Market Cross, denoting the place at which markets were held, formerly the site of Hawick’s cross. It was also sometimes referred to as the ‘flesh-market cross’. In Hawick this was near the Town Hall, at the junction of the roads to Edinburgh, Jedburgh, Newcastle and Carlisle. It is referred to in 1514 as ‘crucem foralem’ when part of the ceremony for giving Sir James Douglas of Drumlanrig the Barony of Hawick was carried out there. It was extant in 1542, when a proclamation was read from it, and presumably there earlier. In 1545 it is among the market crosses to which a proclamation about Sir Walter Scott of Bransholme was to be attached. There is a record in 1715 (when it is referred to as the ‘common mercat cros’) that it was to be repaired and several other records of it being mended from about 1724 on. During the 18th century it is recorded that a proclamation was made there on the day of the Common Riding, describing what parts of the Common were to be used for cutting peats and for making ‘bakes’, etc. It was demolished in 1762 during road improvements, the shaft and capital apparently being sold off for 11/6. The removal took 2 labourers 2 full days. The base of the Cross was inverted, sunk into the pavement nearby, had an iron ring attached, and until about 1781 was used for bull-baiting and for displaying criminals as a public spectacle. It was then removed to near the Teviot, where it was used for tying skins to be washed in the river. The stone was rescued when Teviot Road was built in about 1860 and moved to the Museum at Orrock Place and later to the Buccleuch Memorial. William N. Kennedy wrote an article on the Cross in 1863, stating that the base was made of Whitrope Burn sandstone. In 1927 the Cross was reconstructed beside the Museum, using a modern shaft and a capital (perhaps 17th century, probably the one discovered at Abbey Sike in Castleton). However, the capital was moved inside after the Cross was vandalised in 1985. A plaque (placed around 1946) marks its original position near the bottom of the Cross Wynd, which was named for it. Here also the proclamation to the Burgesses is made by the Burgh Officer, warning them all to attend the Riding of the Marches or pay a hefty fine. For centuries this advertisement for the Common Riding has been called out on the Thursday here. In former times the Burgess Roll was also called here on the Friday before the Riding of the Marches. Other notices would be fixed to the Cross in former times, e.g. lists of those accused of being Covenanters in the late 17th century, and the ‘Chevalier’ was proclaimed here in 1715.

In addition the town stocks were once located next to the Cross – ‘...the said Adam Gowanlock brought the said meir to the mercat-crose of Hawick the said day to be apprised ...’ [BR], ‘...in respect it was publicly done at the mercatt cross, in presence and in the hearing of divers famous witnesses’ [BR1685] (note that Market Crosses were rarely ‘cross-shaped’, usually consisting of a shaft crowned with a carved emblem as capital; it is unclear what was carved on the capital of Hawick’s original Cross).

describing what parts of the Common were to be used for cutting peats and for making ‘bakes’, etc. It was demolished in 1762 during road improvements, the shaft and capital apparently being sold off for 11/6. The removal took 2 labourers 2 full days. The base of the Cross was inverted, sunk into the pavement nearby, had an iron ring attached, and until about 1781 was used for bull-baiting and for displaying criminals as a public spectacle. It was then removed to near the Teviot, where it was used for tying skins to be washed in the river. the Mercat Gait (thu-mer-ki’-gai’ ) n. former name for a road in Ashkirk. It is recorded in 1580 that it was on the west and north sides of Wollaugh.

Mercat Place (mer-ki’-plis) n. Market Place, name used for a while in the 19th century for an area including Tower Knowe and Drumlanrig Bridge over the Slitrig, which was used as a market place. It is so labelled on Wood’s 1824 map and also used in Slater’s 1852 directory.

Mercer (mer-sur) n. Janet nee Reid (b.1799/1800) from Hawick, she was a wool sorter living at about 7 Allars Bank in 1841. She listed as a coffee-house keeper on the Cross Wynd in 1851, living with her grandchild Mary E., as well as 5 lodgers and a female servant. She may be the Jane who had worked as a servant with the merchant (mer-chind) n., arch. a merchant, shopkeeper, trader, itinerant salesman – ‘Item, that ilk merchant that buys cuntrie gier with trone wecht ...’ [BR1640], ‘The hail council having taken into their consideration the wrong and abuse committed by the merchands and others of the burgh of Hawick ...’ [BR1662], ‘...for cutting of William Elliot, merchant, with ane sword in ye head’ [BR1669], ‘...and voted Thomas Hardie, merchant, to be ensigne and to carry the colour’ [BR1706], ‘...John Young, merchant in the toon for his disorderlie and irregular marriage ...’ [BR1706].

merchant (mer-chin’) n. formerly a shopkeeper and member of the merchants’ incorporation in the Town, now used as a suffix to denote someone who is overly fond of a particular activity – ‘hei’s a right patter-merchant that yin’.

Merchant (mer-chin’) n. nickname for William Oliver in the 16th century.

merchants (mer-chints) n. the shopkeepers and traders of Hawick collectively. They were not one of the 7 ‘incorporated trades’ in the Burgh, but must have had some kind of status as a body. In 1687 the ‘Incorporation of Merchants’ bought ‘ane Holland brasen trone’ (i.e. brass weight) to be used as a new standard in Hawick, and also arranged for ‘ane elwand’ (i.e. measuring rod) made of iron to be made the same length as the standard one in Jedburgh.

Merchelton Burn (merch-li-tin-burn) n. stream that rises on Harden Moss and flows roughly southwards past the farm of Mabonlaw to join the Harden Burn south of Harden Glen. Part of it is labelled White Cleugh on the Ordnance Survey maps (the name suggests it marked a boundary at one time; it is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

the Merchinburn (thu-mer-chin-burn) n. Merchingburn, former name for a stream in Liddesdale, where it is recorded that Walter de Bolbeke established a hermitage dedicated to St. Mary to pray for the souls of him and his wife Sybilla. This was probably the original Hermitage Chapel, which led to the stream being later known as the Hermitage Water. The hermit was called William ‘de Mercheleye’, and the date is unknown, but must have been before 1206. The second monk from Kelso was called Roger, and he was granted land beside ‘Heleychesters’ (probably in Temple Healey) some time before 1229 (the name suggests a boundary between properties, but it is unknown what these may have been; the name does not appear on any map, and was completely superseded by ‘Hermitage’).

Merchinlee (mer-chin-lee) n. former name for lands on the Hermitage Water. William ‘de Mercheleye’ was granted a hermitage there by Walter de Bolbeke some time before 1206, this probably being the original Hermitage Chapel. It was set up for 2 monks from Kelso Abbey, the other being ‘Roger monk of Merchingley’ who was later granted 26 acres of land beside Heleychesters (probably in Temple Healey) by Hugh de Balian, some time before 1229. The lands are described as ‘from the Merchingburn on the one side, by a circuit from the Tile Ford on to the Ford where the Stanesden Burn (possibly the Roughley Burn) descends to the Merchingburn’ (also written ‘Merchelea’).

Merchiston (mer-chi-, -chum-stin) n. James (d.c.1527) recorded as Rector of Hawick in 1504. 2 years earlier he is recorded receiving payment from the court of James IV for a young horse brought by him from Flanders. He was listed as a Chaplain of Glasgow Diocese in 1505, although the parish is not named. He also appears to have received more senior appointments in the Diocese in 1511. In 1512 he was designated Provost of the Collegiate Church of Corstorphine and lived on Edinburgh High Street, so probably ceased to be associated with Hawick before then. Also in 1512 he was one of the Auditors of the Treasurer’s Accounts. His name appears in various Edinburgh deeds in the period 1512–18 (also written ‘Mer-chamonst’, ‘Merchainston’, etc.).

mercif | (mer-see-fi) adj., arch. merciful, temperate (of weather) – ‘The weather on the Friday had been mercifeh bit a dump Seterdai hed cut the attendance at the Sports’ [BW1974] (also written ‘mercifeh’).

mercy | (mer-see) interj. goodness, dear – ‘mercy mei’, ‘The lasses, eh mercy, A’ cannae stert now ’ [??]. ‘Mercy, here’s a caperin’ Irishman. This is no’ the man for mei onyway’ [JEDM].

mere | (meer) n., arch. a mare, female horse – ‘...either in his nichbour’s corn, meadow, or hay nit gers, sal pay for ilk hors or meir 40 shillings ...’ [BR1640], ’Weel, sin’ that time the sheep has nonit gers, sal pay for ilk hors or meir 40 shillings ...

merle | (merlu) n., poet. the blackbird, Turdus merula – ‘Where the merle from his liquid throat Can melodize the dean’ [JTe], ’I have seen the merle, when we robbed her nest, Haunting the hazel in hopeless quest ...’ [WHO], ’The soun’ o’ her mirth is the merle’s clear singin’, Bewitchin’, the saft smiles that dimple her mou’’ [WL].

merred | (me-ruld) adj., arch. mottled, parti-coloured (also merl).

Merlin | (mer-lin) n. semi-mythical poet-warrior of the 6th century, referred to as ‘Merlinus Caledonensis’ (‘Merlin of Caledonia’) and ‘Myryddin Wylt’ (‘Merlin the Wild’) in several Old Welsh and later sources. He is the most important prototype for Merlin of the Arthurian legends. He is said to have been born at Cærwerthevin (perhaps Carnworth) and was present at the Battle of Arderydd (probably Arthuret or possibly Ettrick) in 573, where he killed his own nephew, driving him mad and into seclusion in the forests of southern Scotland. He was said to have been buried at Drumelz in Tweeddale. Geoffrey of Monmouth around 1150 wrote about his supposed life and prophecies. John Leyden included notes on him in ‘Scenes of Infancy’ – ‘Such strains the harp of haunted Merlin threw, When from his dreams the mountain-sprites withdrew’ [JL].

Merlin Dean | (mer-lin-deen) n. wooded stream that rises on the eastern slopes of Black Law in Bedrule Parish, joining the Greypeel Burn and eventually flowing into the Jed Water.
Merlin’s Cleuch

Merlin’s Cleuch (mer-linz-klooch) n. probable name of a small stream on Penchrise farm (mentioned in Robert Grieve’s diary in 1861).

merlt (mer-rult, -rult) adj., arch. mottled, mixed up in colour (also merled and merly).

merly (mer-lee) adj., arch. mottled, particoloured – ‘the plantins and pleughed rigs dinkin’ its merlie-merkit braes’ [ECS], ‘A merly sheep, hen, cat, etc.’ [GW] (also spelled ‘merlie’; cf. merlt).

merly-merkit (*mer-lee-mer-ko’, -ki’) adj., arch. having mottled markings, particoloured, describing land with alternating patches of grassland and ploughed land – ‘Ruberslaw’s mighty noal, wi’ plewed rigs an planteens { reed-land an land and ploughed land { `Ruberslaw’s michty braes’ [ECS].

merr see mer

merrer (me-rur) n., arch. someone who steers the course of farm animals, the ‘gaird’ in a ‘yoke-a-tullie’ – ‘A guid (or skeely) merrer’ [GW] (cf. mer).

merry dancers (me-ree dan-surz) n., pl., arch. heat haze, the effects of turbulence in the air on a hot day, described by J. Jamieson as ‘The exhalations from the earth in a warm day, as seen flickering in the atmosphere, Roxb.’.

Merry Knowes (me-ree-nowz) n. hilly area just to the north-east of Whitslade farm, to the south of Whitslade Hill. A local version of the ballad ‘Ewe-buchts’ (or ‘The Broom o’ Cowdenknowes’) states that they are part of Whitslade – ‘Come round about the Merry-Knowes, my Marion, For Whitslade is lying lee’ [T] (also written ‘Merry-Knowes’).

Merrylaw (me-ree-law) n. farm along the road leading south-west from Teviothead, lying close to the source of the Teviot, on the south side. It was home of a branch of the Scotts and also Turnbuls, who were tenants at Falnash. The earliest known owners were Elliots, holding the lands of their feudal superiors the Douglasses. It appears to have been joined with Carlenrig in the valuation of 1678, but was separated in 1788 when valued at £133 6s 8d. It was ‘Mirrilaw’ owned by the Elliots of Stobs at the end of the 17th century. However, it appears to have been in the Barony of Cavers when Sir William Douglas succeeded as Baron in 1687. It was among lands inherited by Sir William Eliott from his father in 1692. About 1694 ‘William Scott in Merrylaw’ was tenant of Eliott of Stobs. Walter Scott of Merrylaw was renting part of Whithope in 1698 and he was an elder of Roberton Kirk in the early 1700s. David Scott was there in at least 1708–24, James Murray in 1724, John Laidlaw in 1749 and John Telfer in 1755. William Goodfellow was tenant there in at least 1784–90. William Scott of Merrylaw was minister at Kirkpatrick-Juxta. Walter Scott of Merrylaw was a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire in 1809. He was probably the Scott of Merrylaw who was listed as owner in 1788 (and still listed in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls). William Goodfellow was tenant there for about 50 years in the late 1700s and early 1800s. James Dryden (d.1820) was shepherd there. There were Hopes there in 1841. It was owned by Turnbuls in the mid-to-late 19th century and bought by the Strang-Steel family about 1920. The Martins farmed there in the early 1900s and the Tullies were there from 1935 until the mid-1960s. The farm lay within Cavers Parish until the formation of Teviothead Parish in 1850. The lands are now mainly planted with trees – ‘Maps . . . skurled wi’ odd scales o’ troot Frae Merrylaw to Meggat . . . ’ [DH] (first occurring in 1380, it is transcribed ‘Murlaw’ in 1687, ‘Merrilaw’ in 1692 and 1694, ‘Mirrielaw’ in 1698, ‘Merriela’ in 1708, 1709 and 1713, ‘Mirrilaw’ in 1724, ‘Mirrilaw’ in 1730 and ‘Mirrilaw’ in 1749; the origin of the first part of the name is obscure, but probably connected with Merry Naze and Merrypath Rig).

Merry Naze (me-ree-näz) n. hill lying to the south of Lairhope farm, west of Falnash, and not far from Tanlaw Naze. It is probably the lands called ‘Murynese’ in the Barony of Hawick, which were explicitly listed among the lands held ‘in property’ by the Baron in 1511, and among the lands inherited along with the Barony in 1572. There was once a farm near here, home to the son of Elliot of Falnash in 1562. Archibald Elliot ‘of Murrineis’ was recorded in 1598. In 1627 the farm was estimated to ‘pay 40 lb. in stok, and 8 merk in tyeynd. The ‘maynes lands’ there are listed among the lands for which Anna, Duchess of Buccleuch was superior in 1686. The lands were sold by Thomas Scott of Falnash to Henry, Duke of Buccleuch around 1760 (marked ‘Murrinees’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map; it is probably ‘Murynese’ and ‘Mureynese’ in 1511, ‘Muryynes’ in 1514, ‘Merynes’ in 1562, ‘Muryneis’ in 1572, ‘Murrinies’ in 1615, ‘Mirkynies’ in 1627, ‘Muirienies’ in 1686 and ‘Merynees’ about 1700; the first element of the name could be Middle English ‘mirrie’ for merry, but may have another origin in common with Merrylaw and Merrypath Rig, while the second element is Middle English ‘nese’, being a projecting nose of land).

Merrypath Rig (me-ree-pawth-rig) n. ridge between Merrylaw and Eves Doors, the summit reaching a height of 382 m. There is a linear earthwork, about 150 m long, which is crossed by the course of the old road from Eweslees to Caerlenrig (it is marked ‘Meddop petth’ in Blaeu’s 1654 atlas).

the Merse (thu-mers) n. Eastern Border country, generally corresponding to Berwickshire, or a slightly larger area including the entire plain of the Tweed. It is usually synonymous with the slightly larger area including the entire plain of the Tweed. It is usually synonymous with the Scottish East March – ‘A Merse mist alang the Tweed, In a harvest mournin’s guid indeed’ [T], ‘Roxburgh huddles her shattered shell In the folds of her mossy plaid; Gazing at ease o’er the Mershall (mer-shul)n., v. marshal. At the Common Riding the Marshals are experienced riders appointed to check that the road is clear for the Chase, ensure the safety of the riders on Rideouts, etc.

Mershall (mer-shul) n. (Marshall) Alfred (19th C.) married Margaret, daughter of Thomas Murray and Mary Scott. His wife was younger sister of Sir James ‘Dictionary’ Murray. Their children included Mary Isabella G. ‘Isa’ (c.1880–1961) daughter of Alfred and Margaret Murray. Her mother was a sister of James ‘Dictionary’ Murray. She was a teacher at Drunlanrig School for about 25 years. She was also a keen member of the Hawick Liberal Association. She was the oldest member of the Archaeological Society at the time of her death. She lived at 6 Elm Grove. She died in hospital at Melrose. Robert (b.1826/7) from Scone in Perthshire, he was a builder in Hawick, with the firm Marshall & Ballantyne. They were responsible for the renovations to St. Mary’s Kirk in 1863. He donated an old coin he found there to the Museum. In 1861 he was living at Ladylaw Place with his wife Ann and children John, Robert, Frances Elizabeth Ann, James Young and Jessie Young. Stuart (1863–4) born and bred in Hawick he became a local Councillor and was Honorary Provost 2013–17. He has also been involved with Escape Youth Cafe, the Hawick Flood Group and many other local organisations. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. William (16th/17th C.) resident of Riddell. In 1621 James Scott, indweller in Selkirk, was summoned to appear before the Lords of Council and Session for stealing his horse. William (19th C.) partner with John in the local builders firm. He was probably John’s son. He made donations to the Museum in the 1860s (also formerly ‘Marsel’, ‘Mercel’, ‘Marchall’, ‘Mersall’, ‘Mersel’, and ‘Mersell’).

Mershall’s (mer-shulz) n. John Marshall & Sons, a large local building firm, significant in the latter part of the 19th and early part of the 20th centuries. They were responsible for the Teviot Bridge (1865), Henry Scott Riddell Memorial (1874), Lyle & Scott’s factory (1874/5), Town...

Hall (1884–86), and the Brown Fountain (1910). Their yards were on the west side of Commercial Road and before that on Slitrig Crescent. They also had an interest in the Blaxter Quarry in Northumberland.

Mershall’s Close (mer-shulz-kli:os) n. Marshall’s Close, a passageway at 20 High Street in the mid-19th century. It was located to the west of the Crown Hotel, between 2 small shops, and named after the tobacconist’s run by Katie Marshall.

mert (mer’) n., arch. a market (cf. mercat, mairket and mairst).

Mertin see Merton

Mertimes (mer-tee-mes) n. former version of Martinmas – ‘...for the Witsounday and Mertymes male of the landis of Lempetlaw …’ [SB1574] (also formerly Mertinmes).

Mertin (mer’-in, mar-tin) n. (Marten or Martin) A. (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. Adam (17th C.) one of 3 men fined in 1642 for their animals eating the oats of Gilbert Watt, the Town Clerk. He is probably the same ‘Adam Mairtene’ who was one of the men who appraised horses in Hawick for the Covenantant army in 1644. He could be the Adam, married to Margaret Gordon, whose children baptised in Hawick included James (b.1634), Agnes (b.1642), Janet (b.1644) and Helen (b.1647), or the Adam, married to Margaret Weens, whose daughter Bessie was baptised in 1648. Perhaps he is the Adam who (along with Alexander) witnessed a baptism for James. He could be the Adam who witnessed a baptism in 1671 for Margaret (perhaps his daughter) and William Renwick. Adam (17th C.) carrier in Hawick recorded in 1673 on the list of men named in the trial for the so-called riot at St. Jude’s Fair. Perhaps the same Adam married Anna Henderson in Roberton (actually Hassendean) in 1687 and had a daughter Margaret baptised in 1688; the baptismal witnesses were John Martin and Thomas Henderson (who were probably related to him and his wife). Andrew (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1716 he married Margaret Martin, both being described as ‘servants in Goldielands’. Andrew (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was recorded at Clarilaw in 1724 and 1727. In 1737 he witnessed baptism for James Dryden and for Robert Easton, who both lived at Clarilaw. He married Margaret Crozier and their children included: John (b.1717); Janet (b.1720); Marion (b.1722); James (b.1724); and James (again, b.1727). The witnesses in 1724 were Thomas Irvine and William Easton and in 1727 were James Blyth and W. Graham. Elliot H. (19th C.) artist living in Hawick in the latter part of the 19th century, running the Hawick School of Art on Wilton Hill. Elizabeth ‘Bessie’ (17th C.) listed ‘eist the water’ among those paying the Hearth Tax in Hawick in 1694. Bailie George (17th/18th C.) merchant of Hawick. He witnessed a baptism in 1700 for gardener Gideon Gardner (and was there ‘merchant’, but not recorded as Bailie). He was listed as Bailie (although this probably meant ex-Bailie) when he witnessed baptisms in 1702 for tailor John Scott, for Bailie Walter Graham and for merchant Patrick Angus. He also witnessed baptisms in 1703 for herd James Glendinning, in 1704 for merchant Michael Scott, for merchant William Dickson and for John Turnbull (‘oye’ to Rev. James Ker), in 1705 for merchant William Oliver and for Bailie Walter Graham, in 1706 for workman John Shiel, for shoemaker Robert Oliver, for Walter Paterson in Burnflat, for workman John Renwick and for Robert Rutherford, in 1707 for smith George Scott and Thomas Gledstains, in 1708 for David Young and for John Rae, in 1709 for merchant William Dickson, for baker Adam Richardson and for weaver William Hill, in 1712 for John Chisholme ‘Laird’, and in 1714 for weaver George Wight. Based on all of this, it seems likely he served as an Elder in the Kirk. The witnesses to his daughter’s baptism in 1704 were Glover John Hart and merchant Thomas Waugh. He was the person who purchased the new Flag in 1707 (now the oldest one in existence) in Edinburgh, at a cost of £10 14s. He was still on the Town Council in 1707 (when a fine was imposed on the 2 acting Bailies). He was an ex-Bailie on the Council when the bond was granted (dated 1710, but recorded in the Town Book in 1711) to provide money for the Master of the new Grammar School. He witnessed further baptisms for John Ekron in 1716 and 1723, for workman William Inglis and for shoemaker Walter Lethem in 1721, for carrier John Tait and for John Fairgrieve in 1726, for merchant Robert Howison in 1730, and for Robert Aitken in 1731. His first wife was Grizel Oliver and their children included: Christian (b.1701); George (b.1702); Bessie (b.1704); Anna (b.1706); Helen (b.1708); Janet (b.1709); Thomas (b.1712); and Jean (b.1714). The witnesses in 1701 were Glover John Hart and Bailie Walter Graham, in 1702 were Bailie Patrick Richardson and Glover Hohn Hart, in 1704 were Glover John Hart and in 1688. James Macomie in the Hassendean part of Roberton Parish in 1688 along with John witnessed a baptism for William Macomie in the Hassendean part of Roberton Parish. He is probably the James who (along with James) witnessed a baptism for William Macomie in the Hassendean part of Roberton Parish in 1688 and who may also have been father of Malie, baptised in 1677, and who may also have been father of Malie, baptised in 1677 (with no mother’s name given, but witnesses John Richardson and Patrick Scoon). James (17th C.) recorded at Appletreehall in 1682 when one of his children was baptised in Robertson Parish. He married Marion Liddersdale and their children included James (b.1682). The witnesses were Walter Scott and Walter Armstrong. He is probably the James who (along with John) witnessed a baptism for William Macomie in the Hassendean part of Robertson Parish in 1688. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Janet Lamb in 1752. He is probably the James who witnessed a baptism for Thomas Douglas at Clarilaw in 1772. Janet (18th C.) resident of a house on the farm of Muckle Whitlaw. It was described in 1767 in the description of the perambulation of the Common, this being a house where the boundary passed over. Johan (19th/20th C.) granddaughter of tailor Robert. She was known as a poet and painter. John (15th/16th C.) recorded as ‘John Martyn in Branxholme’ in the Register of the Privy Seal of 1504 when he received remission for his crimes. This seems to have been connected with the crimes of William Scott ‘in Hawick’ and John Scott ‘in Wilton’, who received pardons a few years earlier. He is probably an ancestor of the same local family after whom ‘Mertin’s Brig’ is named. John (16th C.) tenant at Branxholme Town in 1574, as described in the last testament of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme. He is listed as ‘Johne Martene in Banxholme toune’. He is surely related to the John who was tenant in the same place half a century later. John (16th/17th C.) described as ‘Jon Mairtene in Branxholme tome’ in 1623 when he (and 3 other local men, from Chapelhill, Priesthaugh and Craik) were surety for “Hob Cowane in Ailemure’. John (17th C.) resident of Robertson Parish, when it contained Hassendean. His name appears to be written ‘Mortine’ (and hence could also be ‘Morton’). He married Agnes Porteous and their children included: Marie (b.1679); and Bessie (b.1681). The witnesses in 1681 were Adam Sanderson and John Martin (who may have been his father). He is probably the John who (along with James) witnessed a baptism for William Macomie in the Hassendean part of Robertson Parish in 1688 and who witnessed a baptism for Adam in 1688. John (17th C.) listed at Crumhaugh among ‘The poor in Hauick Paroch’ on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He could be the John who was married to Margaret Elliot, and whose children baptised in Hawick Parish included Charles (b.1675), Helen (b.1682), Walter (b.1685) and Andrew (b.1688). He could be the John who witnessed a baptism for tailor John Wilson in 1680. John (19th C.) owner of the farm of Firth in about 1874, according to the Land Tax Rolls. John P. baker who was Cornet in 1938. He served as Acting Father to Bruce Mactaggart in 1954. Mactaggart was in turn Acting Father to his son Drew. Margaret (17th C.) resident of ‘Barnknow’. In 1680 she was found guilty of attempting to steal a pair of shoes from a Selkirk stall-owner at Hawick Market. She was sentenced to be ‘punished in her person and goods’. Mrs. ?? (18th/19th C.) recorded at Minto House on the subscription list for Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. She was presumably a house-keeper or governess. Robert (16th/17th C.) surety for ‘Hob Cowane in Ailnure’ in the Circuit Court records of 1623, along with John Martin (presumably a relative), Simon Wilson (in Priesthaugh) and William Cowan (in Craik). Robert (b.1821/2) from Jedburgh, he was a tailor who lived at Howdenburn. He was there in 1851, when he employed 1 man, and was also there in Slater’s 1852 directory. He married Mary Hunter, daughter of ‘Kittlin Soup’ and their children included Margaret, James, Mary and Thomas. They were grand-parents of local poet and painter Johan Miller. Simon (16th C.) holder of 2 partieces of land on the north side of the public street according to Hawick’s 1537 Charter. Thomas (15th/16th C.) tenant in part of the lands of Fulton in Bedrule Parish in 1619. He is recorded as ‘Thomas Martene in Fultoun’. Thomas (16th C.) witness to a 1622 sasine of Allan Deans in Hawick. His name is recorded as ‘Thomas Mairteine in Hawick’. Rev. Thomas (1754/4–1812) licensed by Peebles Presbytery in 1789, he was presented to Castleton Parish in 1790 and ordained as minister there the following year. However, after less than 4 months he was translated to Langholm; there is no record of the reason for this. He died in Edinburgh where he was attending the General Assembly. He wrote a description of Langholm Parish for Sinclair’s Statistical Account. Thomas (b.c.1813/4) born in Canonbie, he was a cooper in Newcastleton. He was listed among heads of households for the first time in 1838. He was listed in Pigot’s 1837 directory and Slater’s 1852 directory. He continued as a cooper until the 1850s. He lived at about 2 South Hermitage Street. He married Janet Udale and their children included: Anne (b.1836); Isabella (b.1837); William (b.1839); and Robert (b.1841). Rev. Walter (c.1631–76) graduating from Edinburgh University in 1651, he is recorded as schoolmaster in Hawick in 1657, his surname then spelled ‘Martaine’. In that year Robert Howitson was ordered to pay him ‘19 merkis Scots for byegane quarter wages due to him for teaching of his sons in the schole several quarters bygane’; this suggests that he had been a teacher in Hawick for at least a couple of years previously. He was again recorded in 1665, as ‘Mairteen’. Later that year he was recommended to be licensed to preach, and he became minister of Abbotrule in mid-1666. Since he was an Episcopalian replacement for the exiled former Covenanting minister, it is unclear if he was popular in his parish. He was responsible for reporting a Covenanter from his congregation to the authorities, resulting in the man being sentenced to conscription as a soldier, and instead paying a £100 alternative fine. A ‘gift of his bastardy’ was given by the King to his widow Barbara Skinner (or Kinnear) in 1676. Walter (17th C.) resident of Coliforthill on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Walter (17th C.) tenant in the Flex. He witnessed a baptism for Robert Stoddart (in Flex), along with William Henderson (also in Flex) in 1674. He is probably the Walter whose wife Margaret Scott’s will is recorded in 1687. Their children included Thomas (b.1673) and an unnamed son (b.1675). He may have been father of the later Walter in the Flex (or else he had a second marriage late in life). Walter (17th/18th C.) tenant in the Flex. He is so recorded in 1700, although his name is listed as ‘Walleam’, which is likely an error. He is probably the Walter who witnessed a baptism for wright John Dalgleish in 1700. He married Agnes Nixon and their children included: William (b.1700); Walter (b.1702); and Margaret (b.1705). The witnesses in 1700 were Francis Gledstains of Whitlaw and William Nixon and in 1705 were William and Francis Henderson, smiths at the Flex and Francis Paterson, also at the Flex. Walter (17th/18th C.) resident of Alton Croft in 1700. He was recorded there as tenant in 1702. His wife was Margaret Glendinning and their children included: Margaret (b.1700); John (b.1702); Esther (b.1704); Helen (b.1707); James (b.1710); and Janet (b.1714). The witnesses in 1700 were gardener James Faksyde and Walter Scott in Goldielands and in 1702 were Andrew Riddell in Goldielands and Walter Riddell in Allanhaugh Mill. It is unclear how he might have been related to the Walter who was at the Flex at the same time (but they were clearly distinct, with their children being baptised on the same day in 1700). Walter (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Jane Leyden and their children included: Euphan (b.1777); Samuel (b.1784); and Betty (b.1786). The witnesses were the Associate Congregation. Perhaps the same Walter was recorded at Broomhill in Hawick Parish on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. William (15th C.) tenant in Whitchester who is mentioned in 1493. Jock Elliot (from Caverton) had remission for several crimes, including stealing 3 sheep from him. It seems likely that he was related to the later Martins of the area. William ‘Willie’ (16th/17th C.) tenant in Branxholme in 1628 when he was on a list of men accused by the Earl of Buccleuch of chopping down his trees at Todshawhaugh or Trinitylands. William (17th C.) resident of Roberton Parish, or probably the Hassendean part. He married Bessie Turnbull and their children included: Andrew (b.1680); James (b.1682); and Margaret (b.1687). The witnesses...

Mertin

in 1687 were William Young and Thomas Caldwell. In 1683 he witnessed a baptism for Adam Craig. William (17th/18th C.) recorded being ‘servant in Winningtoun ridge’ in 1719 when he married Margaret Douglas, daughter of a carrier in Hawick. He was in ‘Rige’, i.e. Winningtounrig when his son William was baptised in Kirkton Parish in 1720. He is probably not the same man as William, resident of Over Southfield. William (17th/18th C.) farm servant at Over Southfield. He was ‘servitor in over Southfield’ in 1713 and recorded still living at Over Southfield in 1720. He was also recorded as servant to John Goodfellow in Over Southfield in 1712 when he married Helen Nichol from Hawick Parish. His wife may have been the daughter of William Nichol and Janet Gray baptised in Hawick in 1688. Their children (also baptised in Hawick) included: Walter (b.1713); John (b.1718); Walter (b.1720); Janet (b.1722); and Robert (b.1723). Janet (b.1714) and William (b.1716) were probably also his children. The witnesses in 1713 were John and William Goodfellow in Over Southfield and in 1720 were Walter Scott and William Goodfellow. William (17th/18th C.) recorded at Parkhill in 1722 when his daughter Janet was baptised in Robertson Parish. It is possible this was somehow a second baptism for the daughter of William and Helen Nichol. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Jean ‘Clemison’. Their unnamed child died in Hawick in 1816 and their daughter Isabella was baptised in 1824. Rev. William Stewart (1793/4–1857) from Crawford in Lanarkshire, he was educated at Edinburgh University and licensed by Jedburgh Presbytery in 1823. He became minister of Kirkton in 1834, where he remained until his death. He wrote a description of the Parish for the New Statistical Account in 1838; it is the shortest of the local entries. He could regularly ride over the hill to take services at Cogsmill Schoolhouse. He lived at the Parish Manse with a servant and never married (early spellings include ‘Mair-teen’, ‘Mairten’, ‘Mairtene’, ‘Marteine’, ‘Marten’, ‘Martene’, ‘Martine’, ‘Martyne’, ‘Mertean’, ‘Merten’, ‘Mertene’, ‘Merton’, ‘Mertyn’, etc.).

Merton (mer-ton) n. Christian name, Scots form of Martin (also Mairtin).

Mertinmas (mer'-in-mis) n. another name for Martinmas – ‘Dedicat til a man (syne deid) wha speired: ‘Hev ee been writin ony hairy poetry, lately?’ Mertinmas. 1969 [DH] (also formerly Mertimes).

Mertin's Sym (mer'-inz-sim) n. nickname of Simon Elliot of Philhope, son of Martin of Braidlie.

Mertoun House (mer'-inz-hoos) n. Martin's House, a farmhouse near Martin's Bridge, marking the end of the Goldielands-Langbaurk section of the road south, before the New Road was built in 1815. The farmers recorded there in 1797 were William Scott and John Scott. John Scott was farmer there in 1841 and William Fulton in 1851. The front elevation of the house is towards the hill, since the main road used to pass there – ‘Martin-House’s hint side is now its fore side, and the real auld front is roond aboot at the back’ [V&M] (also written as one word, its origin is uncertain, since no ‘Martin’ is recorded there, so a connection with house-martins has been suggested).

Mertin’s Brig (mer'-inz-brig) n. Martin's Bridge, over the Teviot just south of town, marking the beginning of the B711 road to the Borthwick, and named for its proximity to Martin's House. It was built in 1826, providing a more direct route to the Borthwick valley from Hawick. It is a popular end-point for walks. In the field to the west of here, linear field markings have been seen in aerial photographs, probably old field boundaries or ditches – ‘Doon by mony a knowe and knoll, Branksholme, Martin’s Brig, the Toll, …’ [TK].

Mertin’s Sym (mer'-inz-sim) n. nickname of Simon Elliot of Philhope, son of Martin of Braidlie.

Merton (mer-ton) n. John (13th/14th C.) Archdeacon of Teviotdale from 1395. He exchanged this position with Gilbert Mousewald before 1404. He is referred to as ‘de Merton’.

Mertoun (mer-toon) n. parish in the southwest part of Berwickshire, divided by the Tweed from Melrose, St. Boswells and Maxton. It contains Mertoun House, Bemersyde and Dryburgh Abbey. The Scotts of Harden formerly possessed the Barony of Mertoun.

Mertoun Hoose (mer'-in-, mer-toon-hoos) n. mansion house on the Tweed near St. Boswells, built in the early 18th century by Sir William Bruce for the Scotts of Harden. Sir William Scott of Harden acquired Old Mertoun House (still existing) around 1649, and the second Sir William made it the main family seat (with his brother Sir Gideon of Highchester taking up residence at Harden itself). The family moved back to Harden in 1912. A former house was burned by Hertford’s men in 1545. Mertoun Kirk, dating from 1658 stands on the estate, with the churchyard containing the burial vault of the Scotts of Harden.

The gardens are open to the public, and contain a dovecote dating from 1576 (it was formerly ‘Merton’ and variants).

mervellous (mer-ve-lis n., poet. marvellous – ‘Shaw thy mervellous loein-kindniss . . . ’[HSR], ‘Ca’ til mind his mervellous warks that he has dune . . . ’[HSR].

mervil (mer-vil) adj., arch. inactive in both body and mind (noted by J. Jamieson).

Mervinslaw (mer-vinz-law) n. farm in the north-east part of Southdean Parish, off the western side of the A68. The modern farm is to the west of Camptown, off the side road that leads to Roughlee and Falside. The older farm was probably further south, nearer to the ruined peel tower. Jedforest Deer and Farm Park is on Mervinslaw Estate. It may be the ‘Schewringlen’ (with various spelling transcriptions) given in the founding charter of Jedburgh Abbey in the mid-12th century, when one third of the lands were gifted to the Abbey by Christina, wife of Gervase Riddell. The estate was once part of the fee by the office of Bailie of the Regality of Jedforest. Robert Waugh was tenant there around 1500. The ruins of the pele there have dimensions about 8 m x 4 m, within walls almost 2 m thick, and probably date to the late 16th century. It was described as the 8 steadings, valued at £1 10 in the Exchequer Rolls in 1538 and 1539. James Oliver, William Oliver, Margaret Oliver (his mother), Marion Craighill, James Craighill (her son), David Stobs, Elizabeth Hunter, John Wedderburn, William Oliver (alias ‘Merchant’) and James Waugh were listed as tenants there in 1541; it was split into 7 separate steadings, with total yearly payments of £1 6s 3d.

It is possible that ‘William Ollyver of Myrleslaw’ and ‘Ranyon Ollyver of the same’, included in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII, may have been from here. The tenants in 1669 were John ‘Wach’, Thomas ‘Olipher’, Mrs. ‘McFeisoon’, James ‘fforsett’, John ‘Waderburn’, ‘Ritchart’ and John Curles and James ‘Olipher’. The will of John Aitken in Mervinslaw is recorded in 1683. Robert Oliver was there in 1685. In 1694 the residents were Thomas Miller, John Hill, Thomas Walker, Thomas Curle, Margaret Waugh and Margaret Young, as well as Jean Frissell listed among the poor of the Parish. Robert Davidson was there in 1790–92. In 1797 William Turnbull, Charles Scott and John Scott were there, with Thomas Thomson at ‘Marvenslaw Mains’. Adam Buckham was shepherd there in 1797. Thomas Scott was farmer there in the mid-19th century. The land was purchased by John Lang in 1923. Jack Waterstones was the occupier in the mid-20th century. The hill ‘Mervins Law’ reaches 255 m (836 ft) to the south of the farm. Near where the Peel Burn meets the Jed Water the 1863 Ordnance Survey map shows a building and some enclosures. A medieval sword pommel found there is in the National Museum of Antiquities (it is probably the ‘Xernwingeslawe’ or ‘Hernwingeslawe’ listed in the 1165 charter of Jedburgh Abbey as being opposite the chapel at Old Jeddart; it is ‘mervynnis law’ in 1502, ‘Mervynslaw’ in 1538, ‘Merwinslaw’ in 1539, ‘Mervennislaw’ and ‘Mervenislaw’ in 1541, ‘Mervlinslaw’ in 1571/2, ‘Mervingslaw’ in 1582, ‘Mervingslaw’ in 1669, ‘mervinsla’ in 1704 and ‘Marvenslaw’ and ‘Marvenslaw’ in 1797; Blaeu’s c.1654 map shows the tower at ‘Mervinslaw’, as well as farms at ‘Nuik’, ‘Banck’ and ‘Hauch’ to the south; note that there was once a farmstead of the same name in Wilton Parish).

Mervinslaw (mer-vinz-law) n. former farmstead in Wilton Parish, lying near the hill Mervins Law, once part of the estates of the Scotts of Whitehaugh. There is a record of it being sold by Roger Langlands of Wilton to William Inglis of Langlandshill in 1512. It was to be held for one penny ‘blench-ferm’, payable yearly at Pentecost in Wilton Church. There were 7 ‘communicants’ recorded there in 1650, namely William Miller, Marion Langlands, Helen Miller, Robert Hogg, William Gotterson, Christian Morton and Margaret Gotterson. John Riddell was cottar there in 1694. Walter Cavers was there in 1697, Francis Scott in 1704, William Graham in 1705 and Helen Hislop in 1707. In 1709 Andrew Marshall was tenant, John Scott was tailor there and John Rule was shepherd. Francis Elliot was living there in 1721 and James Noble in 1751 (it may sometimes be confused with the farm of the same name in Southdean Parish and Mabonlaw in Wilton Parish; it is ‘Mervynslaw’ in 1512, ‘Mavinslau’ in 1707 and ‘Marvenslau’ in 1709; it is marked ‘Marvin’s Law’ on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Mervins Law (mer-vinz-law) n. hill a couple of miles west of Hawick, between Whitehaugh and Calaburn farms. The farm of ‘Mervins Law’ was once near there (it is marked ‘Marvin’s Law’ on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Mervinslaw Toor (mer-vinz-law-toor) n. ruined, but well-preserved, 16th century peel tower, about 5 miles south of Jedburgh on the Peel Burn. It is quite far south of the modern Mervinslaw farm, on the southern slopes of Mervin’s Law.
Mervinswud

It still has 2 stories and a garret, and measures about 8 m by 6.5 m. Each storey is one unvaulted room, and the top level must have been reached by an internal ladder. Below is a D-shaped excavation of some sort and on the surrounding slopes are the remains of 3 separate buildings.

Mervinswud (mer-vinz-wud) n. former lands in Jedforest, listed in a rental roll of 1541, next to Mervinslaw. William Hunter was tenant and the lands paid 12s 6d yearly (‘Mervenmiswod’ in 1541).

mese (mees) v., arch. to mellow, mature fruit by forcing (noted by J. Jamieson; also written ‘meise’).

mess (mes) n., arch. a quantity of food set on the table, a portion of food given to a guest, food or meal served to a group of people together – ‘Frugal temperance urged no cesses, Birthday rates nor bailsies’ messes’ [JH].

messager (me-su-jer) n., arch. a messenger, officer who delivers official letters – ‘...as an messenger quha saill assur zo of the performance of quhatsumeuwer was concludit ...’ [SB1584].

messages (me-su-jeez) n., pl. errands, shopping – ‘A’m away ti get the messages then’, ‘Wull ee gaun a message for iz hen, an I’ll gie a buttered scone’ [BB], ‘When ee came back wi’ the messages It’s washed the dirtiest clout ...’ [AY], ‘At first things went just fine, In fact they were quite jolly, Hawick folk got raised throwe time Ti pittin’ their messages in a trolley’ [IW], ‘Hawick women don’t go shopping, for the messages they gaun ...’ [IW] (almost always plural).

Messer (me-sur) n. George (18th C.) house servant and groom at Woll in 1791, when he was working for Charles Scott. James (b.1820/1) from Crailing, he was a cooper in Hawick. In 1851 he was living at about 16 Buccleuch Street, and he was listed at Teviot Square in Slater’s 1852 directory. His wife was Jane and their children included Elizabeth and William. William (b.1794/5) from Nenthorn, he was a cooper and wheelwright in Denholm. He is recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory and was still working there in 1861. His premises were probably on Eastgate. His wife was Mary.

messin (me-sin) n., poet. a small pet dog, a lap dog – ‘Ye messins a’ o’er muirs an’ dales, Ye pointin’ dogs that snuff the vales’ [JR].

Mess John (mes-jön) n., poet. jocular name for a minister – ‘Mess John’s invited o’er to say the grace, And mirth and glee appears in ev’ry face’ [CPM].

met (met) n., arch. measurement, standard unit – ‘...and twa firlots malt gud and sufficient stuf ...viz. of the met of the burcht of Jedburgh’ [SPB1579], v. to measure, ‘to met the belt’ referred to a supposed divining practice of witches – ‘...and that scho mett the belt for secke persons affirming if the belt crape [crept] in thair is danger of death if it crap not in thair is no danger’ [SPB1628].

metaphysics (me-ta-fee-ziks) n., poet. metaphysics – ‘When the yin that’s listenin’ doesna ken what the yin that’s talkin’ means; and when the yin that’s talkin’ doesna ken what he means himself’ ...that’s metaphysics!’ [DH].

Metcalfe (met-kawf) n. John, M.B.E., from Hawick, he was Chairman of the Borders branch of the Multiple Sclerosis Society. He held the Borders position for 13 years, retiring in 2003, and was Scottish Chairman 1994–97. He received the M.B.E. for sevices to the Multiple Sclerosis Society in 2003.

metheglin (me-the-glin) n., poet. a spicy mead – ‘Then drink the pure metheglin of the bee, The heath’s brown juice, and live or perish free!’ [JL].

metter (me-tur) n., arch. high-spirited, ardent, mettlesome – ‘The Cornet and his merry men On mettled steeds are prancin’’[JT], ‘The heroes are marshalled, the mettled steeds are bounding’[JT], ‘...That glorious chase on mettled steeds By lads wha aye were free’ [WL], ‘His mettled wife, inured to strife ...’ [MG].

Mettlin Well (met-lin-wel) n. spring between the farms of Netherraw, Greenhouse and Rapelaw. There was an agreement for its use between the neighbouring farms in 1909.

Mey see Maye

Meyrle (mä-rul) n. lost place name near Branxholme, mentioned in the 1420 description when half the lands of Branxholme were granted to Robert Scott of Rankilburn. The description includes ‘the half of the lands of the Meyrle, and the two cottage lands on the west side of the said river of Branchsemell in the barony of Hawick’. The precise location is uncertain, since even the ‘river’ mentioned is ambiguous, although perhaps the stream running through Branxholme Glen is meant (note that the pronunciation is unclear).

mibbe (mi-bee) adv. maybe, perhaps – ‘there’s mibbe twae or threi better yins’, ‘A’ll mibbe mibbies (mi-bee) adv. maybe, perhaps – ‘Mibees oo should look closer at Mother Nature’ [We] (also spelled ‘mibees’; cf. the older mibbies).

Michael (mi-kul) n. (11th/12th C.) probably of Cumbrian origin, he was nominated as Bishop of Glasgow by David, brother of King Alexander of Scotland. His consecration by Archbishop Thomas of York was sometime between 1109 and 1114. He filled a position that had been vacant for a long time. However, it is unclear if he ever played a significant role in the Diocese, or ever visited Teviotdale.

Michael Graham’s (mi-kul-grā-unz) n. cobbler’s shop on Silver Street through much of the 20th century – ‘... Pies and peas at Bruciana’s and tuckets at Michael Graham’s ...’ [AY].

Michaelmas (mi-kal-mis) n. important date in the calendar of former centuries, being a feast day of the Archangel Michael, held on the 29th of September. Around the 16th century, this was one of the 3 times a year that the head courts would meet annually, specifically the 1st Tuesday after Michaelmas. It was once the date on which Hawick’s Bailies were annually selected – ‘... payable at Michellmess nixt, for the use and behoove of the said towne’ [BR1707], ‘In the Michaelmas moonlight, weird and tall The watchman stood on the peel tower wall’ [WHO].

Michie (mi-chee) n. Alastair (1921-2008) eldest son of Ann Redpath, he was born in France, but moved to Hawick with his family in 1934. He attended the High School and received a scholarship to study architecture at the Edinburgh College of Art. However, war intervened, and he became an R.A.F. pilot, later working as an illustrator and graphic designer. He became a self-taught painter and sculptor at the age of 40, after seeing an exhibition of American abstract expressionists. He lived in Dorset and married Hazel Greenham and secondly Sally Greasley. The Hawick Museum has at least one of his paintings. Alexander (b.1764) probably son of John, who was the first Michie of Old Northhouse. His eldest son was John. Alexander (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Betty Potts in 1797. He was probably father of Alexander and Robert of the Archiological Society. Alexander (18th/19th C.) slubber with William Wilson. In 1797 he was sent to Galashiels for 10 months to learn the trade and he returned to be the first slubber in Hawick. He could be the spinner of that name who went to America, and when he returned in the 1840s there was a big celebration in the Fleece Inn, hosted by the Hawick Instrumental Band in which he had formerly played. Alexander (b.1788/9) originally from Aberdeen, he was a gardener in Hawick. He is recorded at about 59 High Street in 1841 and 1851 (when he was a widower). Margaret, who was an unmarried seamstress in an adjacent house, was probably related. Alexander (b.c.1795) mason who lived at Branxholme Bridgend in 1841. He may have been brother of William and Robert. His wife was Jean and he probably had a daughter Jean, who married Robert Archibald. Alexander (1813–1886) brother of Robert, he was also a spinner in Hawick. He was living on the Cross Wynd in 1841, with the family of millwright Gideon Scott. In 1851 he was listed on Orrock Place as a master skinner, employing 3 men. He must have been partner with another Skinner, since ‘Scott & Michie’ is listed at Teviot Square in Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1861 he was at 4 Orrock Place as a master skinner employing 5 men. He may later have moved to Galashiels. He was a founder member of the Hawick Archaelogical Society, being the fourth official member. He acted as Museum Curator for the Archiological Society in the early 1860s. He also wrote some anonymous poetry, such as ‘Auld Moat’s Address’, before he left Hawick in 1864 to live in Galashiels. As a youth he was a great athlete, regularly appearing at the Innerleithen and Mangerton games, excelling at running, leaping, hammer-throwing and ‘hitch-and-kick’. He may have been the same Alexander who served as first Treasurer for the Congregational Kirk. Later in life he wrote regularly in the local press about reminiscences of the Common Riding and related themes. He also wrote the introduction for the 1886 edition of Common Riding songs. He is supposed to have only missed a single Common Riding in his life. Much of the credit for the revival of the Common Riding in the 1880s is due to his letter-writing and powers of persuasion. As a result, he was invited as a special guest to all the events of 1886. Some of his articles on Hawick characters, printed in the Transactions, later appeared in Robert Murray’s book. He is probably the Alex recorded owning part of the former lands of Patrick Cunningham in about 1874. In 1845 he married Isabella Scott, who was a dressmaker. Their children included: James Cockburn (b.1846), who died young; Jessie Sibbald (b.1847); Elizabeth Pott (b.1851); Walter Francis Scott (b.1855); Susan Mary (b.1859); and Gideon Scott (b.1862), presumably named after the former millwright. A photograph of him exists. He also appears in a portrait (painted by John Guthrie) along with his brother Robert and William N. Kennedy. Bailie Alexander (b.1832) son of currier Robert. He was a Magistrate in Hawick, and should not be confused with the other contemporary Alexander, who was his uncle. He also served as Vice-President of the Archaological Society. He left for South Africa in 1879, with Frank Hogg first publicly singing ‘I Like Auld Hawick’ at his farewell dinner. He lived at Maraisburg, Transvaal. Andrew Rodgie (1806/7–54) builder in Hawick. He was one of the ‘Brigend Michies’, this family being raised in the Green Kirk, hence his middle name (and the fact that birth records are scarce for these Michies). It is said by James Haining that he had brothers Robert (a mason), John (building foreman in Edinburgh) and Hugh (of Laing, Michie & Graham), but Hugh seems more likely to have been his nephew; it is also unclear who their father might have been. He was listed on the Loan in Pigot’s 1837 directory and Slater’s 1852 directory. He lived 19 Loan, according to the 1841 and 1851 censuses. In 1851 he is recorded as a master mason, employing 20 men, 4 apprentices and 8 labourers. His firm constructed the Old Parish Church and several other important buildings of the mid-19th century. His wife was Mary, and they had a daughter, Betsey. His nephew Adam Laidlaw carried on the business after his death. Andrew Smith (1844–1936) son of skinner Robert, he was born in Hawick. He worked for the National Bank of Scotland in Hawick and was transferred to Edinburgh in 1862, then London in 1866. In 1874 he moved to the Royal Bank of Scotland, being recruited as Deputy Manager in London. In 1889 he became sub-cashier in the bank’s Glasgow office and a year later was Cashier there. He retired in 1910, returning to London. He is buried at Rowledge in Surrey. He married Jessie Fraser in 1872 and they had children Arthur, Charles and Agnes. He published many articles on banking and revised James William Gilbart’s work ‘The history, principles and practice of banking’. Bruce raised in Hawick, he played in the baritone horn section of the Saxhorn Band. He trained in medicine, but continued to perform as a multi-instrumentalist woodwind player, based in Perthshire. He has played with The Walktalls, Martin Stephenson and Delta Mainline. Christopher Young (b.1829) born in Cavers Parish, son of John and Betty Young. It is said that as a child he was chased by the Devil in the form of a pig. He worked as a forester to the Countess of Seafield and contributed to the Transactions of the Highland and Agricultural Society. He was apparently offered the position of Factor at Balmoral, but declined. He wrote ‘The Larch: A Practical Treatise on Its Culture and General Management’ (1882 and 1885), as well as ‘Practice of Forestry’ (1888). David (19th/20th C.) apprentice with chemist John Craig, he became manager of the lemonade works, then partner, and sole owner from 1919. David A.R. (b.1928) youngest son of James and Anne Redpath. He became an artist, like his brother Alastair. He was born in France, but moved to Hawick with his family in 1934, attending St. Mary’s and the High School. He was an instructor in the Royal Artillery Signals Training Regiment, then studied at the Edinburgh College of Art. After travelling to Italy, he started on an art career that has included one-man exhibitions and prizes, being known for both oils and watercolours. He worked as a teacher at the Edinburgh College of Art, later becoming Head of the School of Drawing and later Vice-President. He was Common Riding Chief Guest in 1989 and had an exhibition at the Scott Gallery in 2009. He was awarded the O.B.E. in 1997 and is a member of the Royal Scottish Academy. George (18th/19th C.) agricultural worker, probably son of Alexander, from Slatehills. He married Margaret Turnbull and their daughter Jane married Thomas Rutherford, from Slatehills. He may have had a brother called John, who was the first of the Michies of Old North-house. Hugh (18th/19th C.) farmer recorded at ‘Goldielands Bridge End’ in 1797. He was part of the family that farmed in that area for many generations. He may be the Hugh who married Margaret Telfer in Hawick Parish in 1787. Hugh (1830–91) said to be brother of Andrew Rodgie, Robert and John. However, he seems more likely to be son of mason Robert. He was partner in tweed merchants’ Laing, Michie & Graham. Later he opened a newsagent’s shop at 2 High Street, with the help of his daughter Margaret. He married Christina Dobson, from the wood merchants of Leith; she died at the age of 85. Their children include: Robert (b.1863), emigrated to Australia; Margaret Allan (1865–1932); George Dobson (b.1866); John Stewart (b.1869), tweed designer in Huddersfield, who retired to Folkestone; and Agnes Dobson (b.1873). John (18th C.) probably the first of the Michie’s of...
Northhouse. He may have been father of Alexander and brother of Hugh of Slatehills. John (18th C.) married Margaret Shiel in Roberton Parish in 1739. John (18th/19th C.) weaver of Old Northhouse. He may have been son of the earlier John and father of the later John. He could be the John who married Mary Douglas in Hawick Parish in 1790. He was one of the Volunteers who responded to the ‘False Alarm’ in 1804; when he went off with his gun his daughter is meant to have said ‘Shoot iz ‘eersel’, father; ye’ll dae it cannier than the Frainch’. He had at least 2 daughters: Janet, who married Adam Easton, farmer at Overhall; and Margaret (1805/6–87), who married warehouseman Thomas Anderson. John (1788/9–1861) weaver at Old Northhouse in 1841. In 1851 he is recorded there as an ex-weaver, along with his wife, both as paupers at that time. He married Elizabeth (or ‘Betty’) Young, recorded in Cavers and Kirkton Parishes in 1821; she died in Denholm in 1864, aged 78. Their children included: Jessey (1821–46); Isabel (b.1824); William (b.1826); Christopher Young (b.1829); Robert (b.1832); and Mary Ann (b.1835). He could be the John Michie of Hawick who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. John (b.c.1800) spinner in Wilton. He is listed among heads of households in 1835 at Dowemount and in 1840 and 1841 at Kirkstyle. He was also an Elder of Wilton Kirk. His wife was Jane and their children included Robert, Eliza and John. John (19th C.) probably brother of masons Andrew Rodgie and Robert. He became a foreman with builders Messeres. Colville of Edinburgh. John (1813–70) clerk in the Relief Kirk Session. John (19th C.) of the Victoria Tavern, Hobart, listed as a subscriber to the Common Riding in 1888 and 1889. Robert (b.c.1805) mason journeyman, living at Branxholme Bridgend in 1841. He was brother of William, who farmed there. He may also have been brother of Andrew Rodgie. He probably married Agnes Ann Smith and had children including Hugh (b.c.1831), Walter (b.c.1833), Elizabeth (b.c.1834) and John (b.c.1837). Robert (1807–1875) brother of Alexander (later of Galashiels), and probably son of Alexander and Betty Pott. He was a founder member of the Hawick Archaeological Society, being its second official member. He was a currier by trade, and was listed as such on the High Street in Pigot’s 1837 directory. He was also a currier on O’Connell Street in the 1841 and 1851 censuses, and appears in Slater’s 1852 directory, where he was a currier and leather cutter, as well as a tanner and skinner. In 1851 he was listed at 11 O’Connell Street (originally No. 6), as an employer of 1 journeyman and 2 apprentices. In 1861 he was at 6 O’Connell Street, master currier and tanner, employing 3 men and 1 boy. He gave a lecture on ‘Local Antiquities’ in 1856 (immediately after a lecture on Archaeology by George Webster), this being only the second lecture given at the Society’s meetings. He also gave a lecture on local hill forts in December of 1856 and one on Trimontium in February 1857. A great sportsman in his youth, he won the wrestling contest at the St. Ronan’s games at Innerleithen in 1831, as well as winning the ‘light ball’ event (probably throwing). At the Common Riding Games of 1834 he won the ‘ball throw’ event. He was also on the Town Council. In the 1850s he was on the Railway Committee for Hawick District. He was one of the first Deacons of the Evangelical Union (later Congregational) Kirk, as well as one of the first Trustees. He was also one of the earliest members of the Hawick Total Abstinence Society, and well known for giving speeches on this subject, always in local dialect. He married Agnes Elizabeth (or Ann) Smith in Wilton Parish in 1830. Their children included: Grace (b.1830); Alexander (b.1832); Elizabeth (b.1834); Joanna (b.1836) and Joana (b.1838), who both died young; Thomas (b.1842); Andrew Smith (b.1841); Andrew Smith (again, b.1844); and Robert (b.1848). He appeared in a portrait (painted by John Guthrie) along with his brother Alexander and William N. Kennedy. A portrait of him alone was presented to the Archaeological Society by his son A.S. Michie on the occasion of the 1906 jubilee – ‘Guid Robbie Michie, noble man, First o’ the speechifyin’ clan’ [RDW]. Robert (b.1810/1) born in Cavers Parish, he was a shepherd in the Hawick area. He may be the Robert who was an agricultural labourer at Whitchesters in 1841. He is listed at Minto Kaims in 1851 and Hayside (in Wilton Parish) in 1861. His wife was Helen (from Minto) and their children included John, James, Janet, Mary, Rachel, Robert, Helen and Thomas. Robert (b.1832/3) born in Wilton Parish, probably son of spinner John. He was miller at Newstead near Melrose. His wife was Agnes and their children included John, William and Isabella. Robert (19th C.) first Captain of Hawick R.F.C., from 1873 for 4 years. Walter (1753/4–1816) undertaker in Edinburgh. He died in Hawick. William (1792–1885) from Old Northhouse. He emigrated to Canada, settling in Esquesing, Ontario, where he farmed and had a saw-mill. His wife was Margaret, and their children included: Thomas (1824–1901); Mary (1834–1902); Robert (b.1837); Alexander (1843–93); Ellen (1850–1901); George (1851–1918); Elizabeth (1853–1901); and William (b.1854). He died in Esquesing, aged 92½. William (1797/8–1862) farmer at Branxholme Bridge. In 1841 the family were living at ‘Branxholme braes’, which may have been the same as Scatterpenny. In 1851 and 1861 he was at Branxholme Bridge, farming 16 acres and employing one man. He married Isabella. They had 9 daughters, including: Margaret who became Mrs. Welsh; Wilhelmina (or ‘Mina’), who married baker John Campbell; Elizabeth (or ‘Betty’); and Alexandrina. He is buried in old Wilton Cemetery.

Michie’s (mich-eez) n. Robert Michie & Son, Tanner’s business in Hawick in the mid-to-late 19th century. They were situated on Buccleuch Street, by the River Teviot. In 1871 the firm estimated that it tanned 1,270 hides, producing over 21,000 pounds of leather.

Michie’s Brig (mich-eez-brig) n. Another name for the Branxholme Bridge, across the Teviot at Branxholme Bridge, named after the family which lived there for generations and who became builders in the early 19th century.

Michie’s Well (mich-eez-wel) n. A former public water supply about half-way up Drumlanrig Square, above the Mid Row, also known as ‘Porteous’ Well.

How mickle hev ee?’ [JEDM], ‘We’l laird her doon’ wi mickle care,’ And cairrit on tae Eskdalemuir’ [DH] (not often used in Hawick; cf. muckle).

Mickle (mi-kul) n. William Julius (1734–88) born in Langholm, 3rd son of the Parish minister, changing his name from ‘Meikle’. He was educated in Langholm and then at Edinburgh High School and went into the brewing trade followed by some of his family. In 1762 he published ‘Prov-idence and other poems’, then went to London to try for a literary career, eventually becoming a corrector for the Clarendon Press in Oxford. This he gave up to translate Camoens’ ‘Lusiad’ (from the Portuguese), taking 4 years and being published in 1775. His ballad ‘Cummor Hall’ is supposed to have inspired Sir Walter Scott’s ‘Ke-nilworth’. He also travelled to Portugal with the Navy, returning fairly wealthy and married Mary Tomkiness. As a poet he was very versatile, writing both short and long pieces, including the Scottish patriotic song ‘There’s Nae Luck Aboot the Hoose’.

Mid Broadlee (mid-bröød-lee) n. formerly part of the farm of Broadlee. In 1650 the ‘communicants’ recorded there were John Clerk, Malie Shiel, Alexander Scott and Agnes Scott.

Midburn (mid-burn) n. farm in Hobkirk Parish, between Hawthornside and Highend. It was also known as ‘Africa’. The L-shaped barns probably date from the mid-18th century. James Renwick was there in 1790 and John Common was tenant in 1797. It was farmed by the Turnbulls through the 19th century, from about 1823. Thomas Turnbull was there in 1868. There was also once a small threshing mill there, powered by water from a pond (it is ‘Midburn’ in 1790 and marked ‘Midburn’ on Stobie’s 1770 map.

midden (mi-din, -den, -deen) n. literally the house waste heap or dunghill, but applied to mean any dirty or untidy place – ‘yon house was a right midden’. Middens in Hawick were common at the front of every house, often under the forestairs. They were forbidden by Council rules in 1749, but mostly not removed until around 1800. The last to remain were those in the Sandbed, Kirk Wynd and Green Wynd (the owners paying a small rent to the Burgh to keep their middens), which were removed following a petition in 1810 – ‘He raecies up in the puir owt o’ the dust, an’ lyfts up the needie owt o’ the midden’ [HSR]. ‘A stinkin’ midden, a scartin’ hen – There’s sma’ choice there ‘tween craws and men’ [DH], ‘...Like a struttin’ cock on the midden heap’ [WL] (also ‘middling’ and variants).

middest (mi-dist) n., arch. middle, midst, centre – ‘...in offering to beat up and break of the door of the dwelling houss ...in the midstest of the night’ [BR].

middle (mi-dul) v., arch. to meddle, bother – ‘Dunion ...is bughty billie ti Ruberslaw, an’ there the perr stand ...leike as they war glun-shin an shuirrin doon at aabodie that wad middle thum’ [ECS].

Middle (mi-dul) n. former name for lands that were incorporated into the Wells estate near Bedrule. Along with ‘Holm’ they may have been part of the lands called Dykes. They are listed (along with Fowlerslands and Holm) in the 1511 charter of the Douglasses of Cavers, along with the ‘corn mill and walk mill’ (that was later called Doveshaughmill). The lands were at one time partly in the Parish of Kirkton, but in the Barony of Cavers (on the west side of the Rule Water).

In earlier times it may have been in the Barony of Feu-Rule. In 1634 James Stewart of Nether Horsburgh was served heir to his father Robert Stewart in his lands of ‘Helme et Middill’, with grain mill and fuller’s mill called ‘Dowishauch’, comprising a 3 merk land in the Barony of Cavers. It was still in the Barony of Cavers when inherited by Sir William Douglas in 1687 and his brother Archibald in 1698, and still listed along with ‘Helme’ as having a corn mill and waulk mill attached. James Dryden was there in 1736. It is unclear whether these lands were associated with East Middle (it is ‘Middill’ and ‘Myddill’ in 1511 and ‘Midle’ in 1698; the origin of the name is probably from being the centre of the in-byre land of an estate).

Middle (mi-dul) n. lands in Cavers Parish, later divided into East Middle and West Middle. William Douglas was there in 1720 when he had a daughter baptised in Kirktoun Parish (the origin probably comes from being farmlands central to the estate, as opposed to the out-byre land).

Middleburn (mi-dul-burn) n. former name for Midburn.

the Middle Loft (thu-mi-dul-loft) n. former balcony in St. Mary’s Kirk, built in 1684 by James Thorbrand. In 1685 William Laing and Walter Scott (presumably Bailies at the time) were paid back the 100 marks Scots that it had cost to construct. This balcony was lost when the church was rebuilt around 1763. It was also known as ‘the Steeple Loft’. The 2 front seats were formally assigned to the Bailies in 1707 (although this is a little confusing, since the ‘Bailies’ Loft’ was a separate balcony). The Council paid 200 merks Scots for the timber work to fix it in 1708, the money being raised by assessing the Burgess. It was one of two balconies that were entered from the steeple side, the higher one being the ‘High Loft’ – ‘John Turnbull, mason, to collect ye Midle and Wester Lofts’ [PR1718].

Middle Mains (mi-dul-mān) n. former name for part of the demesne lands of Hassendean (see Hassendeane Mains).

Middle Mairches (mi-dul-mār-cheez) n. the Middle Marches, generally referring to an area running from the Cheviots to the Kershope Burn. The Scottish Middle March consisted essentially of Roxburghshire (including Liddesdale), Selkirkshire and Peebleshire, with judicial centre in Jedburgh, and the Wardens being the Kers or Kerrs for much of the time. The English Middle March consisted of Coquetdale, Redesdale and Tynedale.
Together they saw the worst of the lawlessness of rieving times.

Middlemas

at least 1468, and presumably related to William, who was Ranger before him. He is surely the Thomas, cousin of Robert Scott of Haining, to whom Scott granted the lands of ‘Grevistoun and Gillishauoch’ in Peeblesshire in 1476. He is recorded ‘in Ploro’, in 1494/5 (probably related to the area of Plora near Innerleithen). That year there was remission to Alexander, son of Andrew Turnbull of Dryden, for resetting the thefts of Adam Howiston and Robert Jackson. This included the slaughter of his wife and 2 sons, as well as 11 horses, 44 cows and a long list of items. This list is unique in its detailed specification of valuable goods belonging to a minor (but relatively wealthy laird) at the end of the 1400s. Also in 1494/5 John Scott of Erncleuch was allowed to ‘compone’ for his part in several crimes, including bringing in thieves and ‘traitors of Leven’ to slaughter his wife and two ‘offspring’, Ninian and John. He was probably the same as Thomas, chief of the Middlemas clan, who acquired Ploro in 1497. Thomas (16th C.) listed in 1541 among Scotsmen accused of being responsible for the deaths of Englishmen. He was said to have slain Quentin Watson. Thomas ‘Tammy Mid’ (20th C.) metal merchant of the mid-20th century, running the business at 55 High Street, which was very successful during the War years. He was also known for his large feet, which meant he wore excessively patched hand-made boots. Walter (17th C.) recorded at Raperlaw in Lilliesleaf Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He paid tax on 2 hearths and was probably related to James, who was also listed there. William (14th/15th C.) Vicar of Selkirk. In 1425 he was granted the office of Master of the Ward of Yarrow by Archibald, Earl of Douglas, confirmed by James I in the following year; his nephew George was also named in the charter as his successor in the office. In 1436 he was recorded in a charter related to St. Andrews Kirk in Peebles. William (15th C.) Master Ranger of Yarrow Ward from at least 1456 until 1460. He was succeeded in this office by Thomas, who was therefore probably his son. William (15th/16th C.) along with David Hoppringle, Walter Scott of Howpasley and George Hepburn, he held the lands of Boonraw, which passed to Robert Scott of Stiches in 1504/5. Perhaps the same William is recorded in 1502 when Robert Scott in Syntun and William Scott in Fenwick were fined for failing to enter him in the itinerant court at Jedburgh. William (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1527 as a witness in Selkirk for a transaction involving land in Lilliesleaf. William of Lilliesleaf (16th C.) recorded as ‘Middilmest in Lilliseleif’ in 1563 when he ‘wadset’ his lands at the ‘Hungrie Hills’ and other lands near Lilliesleaf Kirk to Walter Riddell of that Ilk. In the same year he was ‘William Myddilmest in Lisle Freirschaw’ when he rented some land to John Redford, this being ‘Coit acre’ and a rig of land lying in ‘Myddilis’ (perhaps suggesting a connection with his name). Probably the same William is recorded in 1562 when he let an acre of land in fields of the town of Lilliesleaf to Hohn Hislop. He is probably the William ‘Middelmest of Lillisle’ recorded in 1580 when he admitted John Donaldson as tenant to 6 acres of land in the town of Lilliesleaf, for yearly payments of 24 pounds; these lands were at ‘Portus Croft Heid’. He may be the William, son of the deceased John of Lilliesleaf recorded in 1580/1 when he received sasine for 4 husbandlands in Lillieleaf. In 1581 he witnessed a transaction between William Scott in Burnfoot and Scott’s future wife Janet, daughter of William Scott in Huntly. Also in 1581 he witnessed an agreement involving the lifierent of Blindhaugh and Castleside with the Scotts in Blindhaugh. Probably the same William is recorded in 1581/2 when ‘one quarter of the half husbandland’ of his steading held by John Smail was given to Smail’s mother as part of a marriage contract. He is also recorded as ‘Middilnest of Leilsle’ in 1583/4 when he received half of the meadow of Belses. And in 1589 he was involved in an action with Walter Riddell over the ‘Treincersgait’. He may be the same William described in 1595/6 as ‘officiario baronie de Lillislei’ (probably meaning the Baron Bailie) when he was granted the 5-pound land of Bewlie and 7 husbandlands and 2 cottage-lands within Lilliesleaf. William of Chapel (16th/17th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish, probably son of the earlier William. He was ‘William Middemest of Lilliesle Chapel’ when he was ordered captured along with Hector Turnbull of Bewlie, for the slaughter of Thomas Ker of Crailing in 1601. This was a result of a skirmish in Jedburgh, when about 30 Turnbuls from the Minto area entered Jedburgh seeking Ker, this being part of an ongoing feud between the families. He had a brother John, who was killed in Jedburgh on that day in 1601. He was declared a rebel in 1604, along with his son James, for the murder of Thomas Ker of Crailing in that skirmish in Jedburgh in 1601. Thomas Turnbull of Minto acted as cautionier. He could be the Laird of ‘Chapel-Middelmess’ whose wife was a daughter of Walter Scott of Syntun and Whitslade (according to Scott of Satchells). He is probably the William ‘Middlemost of the Chapel’ whose servant Willie Scot was apprehended as a fugitive in Dysart in 1610. William of Chapel (17th C.) son of William of Chapel. He was served heir to his father in 1622 in the lands of Raperlaw. He may be the ‘William Midl DMAA of Lillisleif Chappell’ recorded as a juror in the 1622 and 1623 Commissioners’ Courts. He is probably the ‘goodman of the chapel’ recorded in 1628 when his son James was said to have been cured by Isobel ‘Howetsone’, who was accused of witchcraft. William (17th C.) son of James of Raperlaw and Anna Scott. In 1661 his guardian John Middlemales was involved in a discharge of claims with his mother and her new husband Thomas Riddell William (b.1833/4) from Earlston, he was son of John, a woollen carder in Wilton. He was a shopkeeper on Wilton Place according to Slater’s 1852 directory and in the 1851 census (when only 17 years old). By 1861 he was working as a woollen spinner and living with his mother and other family members at 10 Slitrig Crescent (formerly spelled ‘Medelmeste’, ‘Midelmast’, ‘Middelmast’, ‘Middlemest’, ‘Middlemost’, ‘Middlesteid’, ‘Middelmaste’, ‘Middlelmas’, ‘Myddilmast’, ‘Myddilmost’, etc.).

the Middle Shires (thu-mi-dui-shirz) n. name sometimes used for the Borders area (on both sides) after the Union of the Crowns in 1603.

Middlesteid (mi-dui-steeeds) n. Middlestead, farm in Selkirk Parish, east of Oakwood Mill. Lands of the farm bordered on the Parish of Ashkirk. It is probably the ‘Middlestead of Falside’ granted to James Scott of Kirkurd in 1490. John Scott of Middlestead was listed by Scott of Satchells among the men who were on the raid to rescue Kinmont Willie in 1596. Archibald, son of Gilbert Elliott of Stobs (‘Gibbie wi the Gowden Gartins’), inherited the lands in 1637. There were Plummers there from about the mid-17th century and Scott-Plummers in the 19th century. Robert Preacher was tenant in 1719.

Midgap see Midgehope

Midgard (mid-gawrd) n. farm situated between Cavers and Cavers Mains. Mason Archibald Minto was there in 1767. The mother of the Laird of Cavers was recorded there in 1868.

Midgehope (mi-jup??) n. farm in the Ettrick valley, just south of Ettick village. It was owned by Melrose Abbey in 1415 when neighbouring lands were swapped with Scott of Ranksburn for the lands of Bellendean. Simon Scott was recorded there in 1494/5. It was part of the lands owned by Melrose Abbey until about the Reformation. Along with Thirlestane, it was raided by a large group of Amstrongs in 1543, taking 200 cows, 20 horses and 4 or 5 prisoners. There were Littles there in 1573. In the late 16th century William Scott of Midgehope was 2nd son of William of Tushielaw, and ancestor of the Scotts of Horsleyhill. Gilbert Elliott of Stobs held the reversion of half the lands, resigning this to Walter Scott of Tushielaw in 1620. The lands were still part of the Lordship of Melrose in 1670. Charles Scott of Woll owned the lands in 1785. In the late 18th century John Scott of Midgehope was a son of William of Woll and father of William of Teviot Bank. Andrew Henderson was owner in 1803 – ‘Gae war the laids of Thirlstone, Gemmcleugh, and Newburn fair, With Tushielaw, and Midgehope, in armour to appear’ [WSB] (called ‘Midgap’ by Scott of Satchells; it is ‘Mighhope’ and ‘Migehope’ in 1415, ‘mygchop’ in 1494/5, ‘Migehope’ in 1564 and ‘Megeloop’ in 1573; ‘Midgehoop’ is marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

midgie (mi-jee) n. a midge – ‘A caa stop scratchin this midgie bite’.

Mid Grain (mid-grän) n. small stream that rises on Whitegrain Fell and flows north-east to join Singdean Burn (it is marked on the 1718 Bucleuch survey).

Mid Hill (mid-hil) n. hill in the Slitrig Water, to the east of Stobs Woodfoot. On a shelf near the summit is a hill-fort, approximately 75 m by 40 m, but largely destroyed by later occupation by a settlement and quarrying. It consists of inner and outer ramparts, and contains several hut circles associated with the settlement. Just south-east of the fort are the remains of a linear earthwork, traceable about 140 m, but probably once longer.

Mid Hill (mid-hil) n. hill on the southern side of the Borthwick valley, just to the south-east of Eilrig farm, and reaching a height of 317 m.

Mid Hill (mid-hil) n. hill on the northern side of the Borthwick valley, near the head of Borthwickbrae Burn. It lies between Byrelee Hill and Easter Hill and reaches a height of 368 m.

Mid Hill (mid-hil) n. hill in upper Liddesdale, lying on the west side of Cliffhope Burn near...
Mid Hill

Singdean. It reaches a height of 434 m (it appears to be marked on the 1718 Buccleuch survey as ‘Middle’).

Mid Hill (mid-hil) n. hill in the very upper part of the Hermitage valley, south-west of Twislehope Hope. It reaches a height of 436 m.

Midholm (mi-dum) n. former name for Midlem, particularly used to refer to its Secessionist congregation in the 18th century.

Midlem (mid-lum) n. hamlet north of Hawick and about 4½ miles east of Selkirk. It has an old rectangular lay-out, with the smithy in the middle of the village green. It was once a linen manufacturing centre, and a village of some importance. It lies on the Midlem Burn, which joins the Ale Water. The village is mentioned in 1119 in connection with Selkirk Abbey and remained in monastic hands for 450 years, with the Knights Templar apparently also having some land there. The village also had possibly the first Seccession church in Scotland, built in 1746, and closed in 1938, with some Hawick area families travelling all the way there for services; there are baptismal records covering the period 1743–1919 (with some gaps). The top end of the village offers a magnificent view of Ruberslaw. In 1535 Robert Scott of Allanhaugh was tried (and found not guilty) of leading men from Liddesdale to there, stealing 100 cows and 20 horses. J. Walter Elliot wrote ‘The Story of Midlem and the Midlem Pail’ (the origin is Old English ‘middel ham’, meaning simply ‘middle homestead’; it first occurs as ‘Middelham’ about 1120, is ‘Mydlem’ in 1535 and only gains its modern spelling by the 17th century; it occurs on Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Midlummn’).

Midlem Mill (mid-lum-mil) n. farm with a mill, situated near the village of Midlem. John Lillie and James Lawson are recorded there in 1493. It was latater a seat of a branch of the Ellots. The first Laird, in the mid-17th century, was Gavin Elliott, also of Grange (son of ‘Gibbie wi the Gowden Gairters’ and ancestor of the Earls of Minto), followed by Robert, another Robert and finally Gavin. Robert Elliott paid tax on his lands there valued at about £400 in 1678. Lady Elliot paid tax on 19 windows in 1753. The estate was sold off to clear debts in about 1756. It was sold to Prof. George Stewart in 1773. Robert Scott was farmer there in 1797 and Thomas Weir in the 1860s. It is said that the house was rebuilt and named Linthill (also spelled ‘Middlemilne’, ‘Midlemilne’, ‘Midlem-miln’, ‘Midlemmiln’, ‘Mildemmyne’, ‘Mildamylne’; it is ‘Midlaymilne’ in Hawick Burgh records of 1734).

Mid Liddle Street (mid-li-dul-stee) n. street in Newcastleton, lying along the west side of the Liddel (or Liddle) Water, between North Liddle Street and South Liddle Street.

Midlothian (mid-lo-the-in) n. county sharing a small common border with the north of Roxburghshire.

midnicht (mid-night) n. midnight – ‘...At dark midnight, on passers-by, ’Twill through the hedgerows keek’ [TCh], ‘There’s a silence in the cobbled wynds, and smell the midnicht air’ [JYH], ‘For aa A pat a warm pig i the bed, it was midnicht or A cam a-heat’ [ECS].

Midquarter (mid-kwar’-ur) n. former farm in Abbotrule Parish. It was advertised for lease in 1785, along with others on the Abbotrule estate. ‘Doorpool, Midquarter, (including the Easter Park) and a small possession, part of the Farm occupied by George Minto’ was listed on the Land Tax Rolls of 1811, owned by Charles Kerr of Abbotrule and valued at about £210 (it is marked on Stobie’s 1770 map).

the Midraw see the Mid Raw

the Mid Raw (thu-mid-raw) n. row of pended, thatched tenements which stood in the centre of what is now Drumlanrig Square, between the Fore and Back Raws. The original construction may date back to around the 16th century. It exists in several photographs, including one during its demolition, showing the arched lower floor. A public well, originating at the Sclidder Springs, stood at the bottom. The gable end at the top held a large notice board. It was the location for some of the densest and poorest housing conditions in Hawick, with no sanitation and some rooms still having clay floors. It is estimated that there were 110 people living in 10 separate houses. By the latter part of the 19th century they had become very dilapidated and the building was demolished in 1884, after being purchased by public subscription and gifted to the Town (since the Council had no powers to declare houses unfit for habitation). A Commemorative plaque was placed on a nearby house. In 1910 the site was turned into an ornamental garden with fountain and the Brown Clock in the centre of the Square, designed by J.P. Alison. Some of the stone was used to build the wall along the roadside at Pipleheugh (since rebuilt), and a wooden cup in the Museum was made by James Thomson from a salvaged beam. A few fragments of the former Pipleheugh wall were incorporated into the James Thomson statue base. A photograph was taken shortly before the demolition – ‘Though the Moat itsel’ may Midroughlee

(mid-rowgh-lee) n. former name for a steading in Jedforest. It was recorded along with Wester Roughlee and Roughleeneuk in 1538 and 1539, valued at 30 shillings (it is ‘Mydroughleis’) in 1538 and 1539; see Roughlee.

mids (midz) n., arch. the middle, middle of, midst – ‘...he sall set the thornis within his awin bounds, and his nichbour’s within the mids ... ’ [BR1640], ‘In the myds o’’ [JAHM], ‘Thre the mids o thir verra busses ... ’ [ECS], ‘I’ the mids o’ Lammies fair’ [GW], a middle course, medium example, compromise – ‘There’s a guid mids! Bit A daarsay there’s a selly bit aboot uz aa ... ’ [ECS].

Midshaw see Meadshaw

Midshiels (mid-shedlz) n. farm near the Teviot about 2 miles north-east of Hawick, just north of Briery Yards, nestled between the Teviot and the old railway line. A mound nearby is said to be the site of a cottage that was covered over when the residents had the plague; this may be the same as the round cairn, planted with trees, which is about 300 m north-west of the house (on the opposite side of the road, near the railway, marked ‘Tumulus’ on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map) and about 25 m in diameter. There is also an ancient standing stone, just to the north-east of the cairn; this is about 2.3 m high, 4-sided and more than 2 m around at the base. Aerial photography has revealed signs of an enclosure in the field to the north of the house. Redemption money was paid for the lands (along with Appletreehall) by Alexander Scott of Howpasley and Abington in 1470. Superiority of the lands (along with Appletreehall and parts of Hassendean) were forfeited after the execution of Alexander, Lord Home in 1516, passing to James Lundie, but returning to George, Lord Home, probably in 1522. Robert Scott of Howpasley and his wife Isobel Murray had a charter of the lands in 1536, when they were part of the barony of Hassendean, with superior being Alexander, Lord Home. It was probably owned (along with Appletreehall) by Walter Scott of Howpasley before that. It passed to Sir Walter Scott of Birkenside in 1578/9 and then his son Walter Scott of Howpasley in 1588. In 1611 it was confirmed to Philip Scott of Dryhope by the superior Alexander Cranston of Mordiston. Walter Scott of Midshiels was recorded in 1628. It was a tenanted farm of the Scotts of Buccleuch from at least the late 17th century. Some women from here were supposedly involved in the dispute over the removal of Hassendean Kirk’s roof to Roberton in the late 17th century. It was part of the lands of Walter Scott of Chamberlain Newton in 1678. The Laird of Newton (probably Francis Scott) was living there in 1694, when he paid tax for having 7 hearths. Walter Scott of Crumhaugh was living there in 1722 and 1724, Robert Turnbull and Richard Turnbull in 1729 and William Turnbull and Robert Turnbull in 1733–36. Gideon Scott was there in 1747. Rebecca Scott paid the window tax on 16 windows there in 1748. Capt. John Douglas of Cavers purchased the estate from the Scotts of Crumhaugh in the mid-1700s. After his death in 1786 it was inherited by the son of his cousin, who was Archibald Douglas of Adderstone. Archibald Douglas owned the farm by 1788 (and still recorded that way in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls), when it was valued at £235. It was later the home of miller John White. The Douglasses sold the land to William Turnbull of Fenwick in 1852, who sold it in 1896 to Rutherford Shielis. The level area in front of the house was used on several occasions for reviewing the Border Mounted Rifles. The road to Hawick passing near here was improved in 1775. The house is a grade B listed building – ‘And there were three wives in Midshiels, And three in Bridieyairds; And they’re awa to the Kirk o Hassendean, And left baith wheel and cairs’ [T] (it is marked on Gordon’s c. 1650 map and Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Midsheils’, on the 1718 Buccleuch survey as ‘Meadsheills’ and on Stobie’s 1770 map as ‘Meidshiels’; it was recorded as ‘Mydshchelis’ in 1535 and 1536, ‘mideischelis’ in 1561/2, ‘MIDSHEELS’ in 1628, ‘MIDSEHELLES’ in 1681, ‘Meidsheils’ in 1678, ‘Meitchels’ in 1694, ‘Meatsheils’ in 1711, ‘Mitchels’ in 1724, ‘medshiels’ in 1729, ‘Meetshiels’ in 1821 and ‘Midsheils’ in 1841).

Midsidheshaw (mid-síd-shaw) n. former lands in the Rule valley, described a a ‘pendicle’ of ‘Woollie’ (i.e. Wolfelee) in 1659 (it is possible this is an error for ‘Macksidheshaw’).

Mid Sike (mid-sik) n. small stream on the north side of the Borthwick valley. It joins the Hoscote Burn just below Black Sike.

Midsummer (mid-su-mur) n. formerly in Scotland this was June 24th, sometimes used as a term day – ‘...geifand a penny of the wsuale mone of Scotland at the Fest of Nativete of Sant Jhone the Baptist, callit Mydsomer ... ’ [SB1500].

Midsummer Fair (mid-su-mur-far) n. former fair taking place at various dates in the Summer in Hawick. In 1670 it happened on 24th June, actually close to the middle of Summer. However, it was on 5th July in the 18th century. It was moved to 17th July (the day before the St. Boswells Fair) in 1799. It was set up as a fair and market for cattle, wool and linen goods, and ceased around the middle of the 19th century.

Milbank (mīl-aŋk) n. Sir Frederick Acclom (1820-98) of Well (near Ripon), M.P. and famous sportsman of his times. He holds one of the records for the most grouse shot in a single day (2,070 in a party with 6 guns in 1872). He took part in a celebrated early cricket match at Borthwickbrae in the 1840s, and at the return game on the Upper Haugh drove the ball from the Upper Haugh into the Under Haugh. He was recorded in a directory of 1852 living at Borthwickbrae. Along with his wife he presented a silver chalice, pattern and wine flagon to St. Cuthbert’s Kirk.

Milburn see Millburn

mile (mil) n. mile, note that the singular form is often used for the plural — ‘Selkirk is eleven mile away’, ‘how mony meile? (= how many miles?)’ [ECS].

mile (mil) n., arch. wild celery, Apium graveolens (noted by J. Jamieson).

mile (mil) n., arch. a fluke, parasite found on the intestines and livers of sheep (noted by J. Jamieson).

Miles (milz) n. Francis (b.1705) son of Richard. In 1725 he witnessed a baptism for ‘periewig-maker’ Robert (surely a relative, perhaps his brother). In 1723 in Hawick he married Isabel Phaup or ‘Phape’. Their children included: Margaret (b.1723); Jean (b.1724); Thomas (b.1726); Robert (b.1728); Gideon (b.1730); William (b.1737); and Francis (b.1740). The witnesses in 1730 were Richard and Robert (probably his father and other relative). Francis (18th C.) Hawick resident who married Mary Hair. Their children included Isobel (b.1743). He could be the same man as the barber, if he married twice. Francis (18th C.) married Margaret Riddell in Hawick in 1758. He could be the barber of that name who witnessed a baptism for Andrew Scott and Ann ‘Doeg’ in 1758. He could be the Francis who witnessed a baptism for wig-maker Robert in 1766. James (19th C.) married Isabella Hessel in Hawick in 1869. Their son Adam may have drowned in a pool near the Flex. Mr. (16th C.) recorded in Hawick in 1579. James Burn, indweller in Selkirk, owed him 5 half firlots of meal. His forename is not recorded. Richard (17th/18th C.) wig-maker in Hawick. In 1697 someone was convicted of stealing ‘ane laced pinner’ from his wife. In 1709 he witnessed a baptism for Adam Brown, ‘Head-house younger’. In 1714 he witnessed a baptism for Robert (who was surely closely related). He may be the same Richard who married Agnes Lindsay in Hawick in 1705 and whose children included: Francis (b.1705), also a wigmaker; and Richard (b.1707). Robert (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Martha Bell and their son Richard was baptised in 1714. The witnesses in 1714 were Richard (who was surely either his father or brother) and John Nordell. Robert (17th/18th C.) recorded as ‘periewig-maker’ in Hawick in 1725. Also in 1725 he was ‘wigmaker’ when he witnessed a baptism for shoemaker Walter Scott. He married Jean Cook in Hawick in 1715. Their children included: Mary (b.1716); Isobella (b.1718); Agnes (b.1719); Margaret (b.1721); Janet (b.1723); and Robert (b.1725). The witnesses in 1725 were Francis (who was surely related) and John Scott ‘White-gates’. Robert (18th C.) wig-maker in Hawick. He married Rachel Nichol (perhaps this was the 2nd marriage of the wigmaker Robert who had married Jean Cook). Their children included Mary (b.1737). The witnesses to her baptism were merchant William Oliver junior and Kirk Officer John Telfer. Robert (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His children included: Elizabeth (b.1758); Margaret (b.1760); and an unnamed child (b.1762). Robert (18th C.) wig-maker in Hawick, who married Ann Elliot. Their children included: William (b.1764); Catherine (b.1766); William (again, b.1768); and Robert (b.1775). The witnesses in 1764 were Francis and John (with the surnames hard to read) and in 1766 were Francis Miles (surely a close relative) and Archibald Elliot. He could be the Robert whose daughter Agnes died in Hawick in 1777. He could be son of the earlier wig-maker of the same name (or he married twice with a big gap). Robert (18th/19th C.) married Agnes Aitkin in Hawick in 1805. Robert (d.1805) local barber, son of Francis. His children included: James, who married Isabella Hessel; and unnamed children who died in 1805 and 1808 – Robert Miles the barber, and Michael up the stair, Willie Tully makes the wigs, and Jenny buys the hair [T]. Robert (b.1812/3) stocking-maker living on O’Connell Street in 1841 and in Wilton Kirkstyle in 1851. He married Janet Branwell. Their children included: Robert (b.1836): John; Euphemia; James; David; and Agnes. His older sister Elizabeth also lived with him. He could be the Robert who died in 1877. Robert (b.1836) son of Robert, he worked as a fuller in Wilton. In 1851 he was living on Langlands Bank. He married Ann Stewart and their children included Agnes and Robert. William (18th C.) resident of Hawick. He subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). He could be the William born to Robert and Ann Elliot in Hawick in 1768 (also formerly written ‘Myles’).
Milestan Peth

Milestan Peth (mil-stän-peth) n. former name for a path between Ashybank and Honeyburn. The path went to the south from the main Hawick-Denholm road (A698), crossing a small hill that was removed to straighten the road. It is now by-passed by the modern course of the main road. There was once a ford across the Teviot at the foot of the path. It is now marked on the Ordnance Survey map through the name of the wood alongside the A698 near there. The name derived from a milestone that was once on the road near there, marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map, showing 4 miles to Hawick and 16 miles to Kelso.

Miles (mil-stänz) n., pl. formerly, numbered markers by the side of a road, set out at intervals of 1 mile. Wood’s 1824 map show a mile stone near the present position of the Horse.

the Military Hospital (thu-mi-li’-n-ree-hospi’-ul) n. hospital in Hawick for treating wounded soldiers during WWI. It was also known as ‘Hawick War Hospital’, where?? Patients were banned from visiting licensed premises.

the Militia (thu-mi-li-sha) n. an army distinct from the professional army, being the forerunner of today’s Territorial Army. The history of the militia goes back for hundreds of years, although locally it is relevant only in the 17th to 19th centuries. In Hawick the term was applied to one of a number of partly voluntary forces, although technically distinct from the Volunteers and the Yeomanry. There are records of court cases involving ‘his Majesty’s Militia’ from the 1660s, when money was raised and men were selected to serve by ballot; in 1688 2 men were fined for fleeing the Town when they were recruiting and in 1694 2 men were admitted as Honorary Burgess for serving ‘as militia hired men for the said town’. In 1796 a law was passed proscribing that each community should provide men or pay £25 each, which Hawick did for its quota of 3. Schoolmasters were meant to provide lists of all men between 18 and 35, those serving to be chosen by ballot (although there were many reasons for exceptions). Initially such forces were under the command of the Lord Lieutenants of each county. Men had to commit to a certain number of days of service (21 days annually) over 5 years, during which they could be called up in times of need. Militia units were very active in the late 18th century, with the threat of French invasion. Hawick was the rallying place for the upper troop of Roxburghshire Yeomanry, while the early 19th century saw the Roxburgh Militia active. The 1st Regiment Roxburghshire Militia was established in 1810 and based at Jedburgh, with the 2nd Regiment based at Kelso. The men in these units were drawn by ballot (between the ages of 18 and 30), served for 4 years, and were not allowed to find substitutes. The would only train within the county, unless invasion or rebellion broke out. There is a record of messages being posted at schoolhouses in Selkirkshire in 1813, describing the balloting process. The Dumfries Militia, which was more like a semi-professional unit, recruited in Hawick in the early part of the 19th century.

the Milk Drum (thu-milk-drum) n. former popular name for the hospitality offered to the Drums and Fifes on the Friday morning around 7 a.m. The tradition is said to have started when Mrs. Hardie, proprietor of the dairy, offered one of the ailing members of the band some fresh milk in 1871. It was continued by Hardie’s and then the Brown family (at what point rum may have been added is not known!).

milk (mil-kee’, -ki’) pp. milked – ‘When bonne Jeany Roole she milket the yowes I’ the buchte aboon the lynne . . .’[JTe].

Milkwettie Willie’s Thorn (milk-swee’-wi-leez-thöorn) n. ancient thorn bush at Newmill, associated with the ballad ‘Rattlin Roarin Willie’ (see also Sweet Milk).

milk-the-kye (milk-thu-ki) n., arch. the dock weed in its seed-bearing stage.

mill (mil) n. a factory, building containing manufacturing machines, particularly referring to a knitwear factory. ‘The mill’ is a familiar name for one of the main town factories. The first factories in Hawick appeared in the late 18th century, for the manufacture of linen tapes and carpets. Spinning and weaving then moved from being domestic operations, to being organised in large factories. Through the 19th century these dominated employment in the Town. Working conditions were poor to start with; it is recorded in the 1830s that the standard working week was 6 a.m. to 7 p.m., Monday to Saturday, with night shifts coming in at about that time. Women were employed as well as men, but traditionally in different jobs, and with children working as ‘piecers’ from about the age of 9. In earlier times the word referred exclusively to a corn mill, which in older records would be ‘miln’ – ‘...Mind, aw’m gettin’ the hang o’ it And next year, for the mill aw’ll maybe no yearn’ [AY], ‘There’s a little town that’s nestling ‘mid the glory of the hills, Where the smoke goes rising slowly from the busy, scattered mills’ [WFC].

Mill (mil) n. John (18th C.) butler at Cavers in 1785, when he was working for Capt. John Douglas.

the Mill Acre (thu-mil-ā-kur) n. former name for a triangle of land north of Wellington Street, bounded by Wilton Path and Langlands Road (presumably once connected with Roughheugh Mill).

Mill Acre (mil-ā-kur) n. former name for lands associated with Belses Mill. They were included among lands served to Sir Thomas Ker of Cavers Kerr in 1678, after the death of his son Andrew (it is ‘Myln aiker’ in 1678 and ‘Milnaiker’ in 1684).

Millbank (mil-bawngk) n. another name for the Mill Path. It may also have been the name of the hosiery factory built there for Robert Ewen and later part of Hogg’s Mill. Houses in this area were removed to make way for the railway to Carlisle in about 1860 (‘Mill Bank Street’ is recorded in the 1851 census).

Millbank Hoose (mil-bawngk) n. house on the Mill Path, once the residence of Provost and manufacturer Robert Ewen.

Millburn (mil-burn) n. former lands located roughly where Hermitage village is. In 1718 it was included along with Over Closs and several other farmsteads in the survey of properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch. In 1839 in the New Statistical Survey it was reported that the Nine Stane Rig within the bounds of this farm. A flint found near here is in Hawick Museum – ‘Now, wae be to thee, Armstrong o’ Millburn! And O an ill death may’s thou dee! Through thee we have lost brave Lairistan, But his equal thou wilt never be’ [ES] (also written ‘Milburne’; it is marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Milburne’, on the Buccleuch survey as ‘Millburne’ and is probably the ‘Milholme’ of Sandison’s c.1590 map).

Millburnholm (mil-burn-hōm) n. former farm where the Whitrope Burn meets the Hermitage Water, at the modern location of Hermitage village. This was probably the farm of ‘Jame of Milbourne home’ (most likely an Elliot) recorded in 1587/8. William Henderson was tenant there in 1694. It was included along with Over Closs, Millburn and several adjacent farmsteads when surveyed for the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1718. The former farmhouse was visited by Sir Walter Scott and Robert Shortreed in 1792, and was at that time the last of the old style cottages in the district. It was a single storey at one end, with an extra storey at the other end, and with tiny windows looking through the thatched roof. Willie Elliot was farmer there at that time, and still recorded in 1797. Robert Elliot was farmer there in 1821 and 1841. There is a linear earthwork there, running east from the B6399 at least to the next stream, possibly all the way to the Roughley Burn (it is ‘Milburnholm’ in 1694, ‘Milburnholm’ in 1797 and ‘Millburn Holm’ in 1821; it is ‘Milneburnholm’ and ‘Millburnholm’ on the 1718 Buccleuch survey and is on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Mill Cornet (mil-kör-ni) n. a mock Cornet selected in one of the local knitwear factories. Usually it was the youngest apprentice, and in the larger mills there were also Cornet’s Lasses, as well as Right- and Left-Hand Men and their Lasses, with those selected being the youngest 3 male and female employees. They would wear the same jackets and hats each year, and the party would go round the various ‘flats’, entertaining the workforce. The practice took place from at least the 1920s, including Braemar, Hawick Cashmere, John Laing’s, Johnstone’s, Lyle & Scott’s, Pesco’s, Pringle’s, Turner & Rutherford’s and Woodcock’s. The tradition largely died out in the 1970s, but is still continued by a few companies.

Millcote (mil-ko) n. lands in Liddesdale recorded on a rental roll from about 1376, and associated with the Mangerton estate. They are listed as ‘Mylncotis’ and with a value of 10 shillings.

mill-door (mil-dör) n., arch. entrance to a mill – ‘Saying ‘She has a mouth like (or as big as) a mill-door (= one very large and gaping)’ [GW].

the Millennium Nature Trail (thu-mil-lēn-ee-um-nā-chur-trāil) n. nature trail laid out in Wilton Lodge Park around 2000. There is an accompanying leaflet that describes the trail, which starts from the Museum.

the Millennium Stane (thu-mi-len-ee-um-stān) n. commemorative standing stone placed on the Miller’s Knowes in 2000, inscribed – ‘Look back on Bonnie Teviotside, and Hawick Among miller  (mi-lur)  n.  person  who  runs  a  corn  mill,  having  a  special  status  within  a  barony – ‘Ee’ve  the  cheek  o’  (or  as  muckle  impetence  as)  the  miller’s  horse’ [GW], ‘ti droon  the  miller’  meant  to  add  too  much  water  to  dough,  liquor,  etc.  (see  also  millers).

Miller  (mi-lur)  n.  Adam  (17th  C.)  resident  of  Ashkirk  Parish.  He  witnessed  a  baptism  for  Walter  in  1690  and  for  Francis  in  1691  (possibly  his  sons).  Adam  (18th  C.)  resident  of  Cavers  Parish.  He  was  at  Cauldmill  in  1723.  His  children  included:  James  (b.1721);  and  Adam  (b.1723).  Adam  (18th  C.)  resident  of  Wilton  Parish.  He  was  at  Appletreethall  in  1724.  He  married  Elspeth  ‘moor’  and  their  children  included  Bessie  (b.1724),  with  witnesses  John  and  Walter  Scott.  Adam  (b.c.1753)  originally  from  Robertson  Parish,  he  was  living  in  Denholm  in  1788,  1793,  1798  and  1800.  He  is  recorded  as  ‘independent’  on  the  1841  Hawick  census,  somewhere  on  Buccleuch  Street.  He  may  be  the  ‘Mr.  Miller’  marked  on  Buccleuch  Street  on  Wood’s  1824  map.  He  married  Rachel  Scott  in  Crailling  Parish  in  1784.  Their  children  included  (the  first  2  baptised  in  Crailling  and  the  rest  in  Robertson  Parish):  William  (b.1786),  baptised  in  Crailling;  Adam  (b.1788),  Thomas  (b.1790)  and  John  (b.1793),  baptised  in  Cavers;  and  an  unnamed  child  (b.1792),  Alexander  (b.1796),  Charles  (b.1798),  twins  Janet  and  Elizabeth  (b.1800),  and  Robert  (b.1803),  baptised  in  Robertson.  John  (b.c.1801)  may  have  been  another  child.  Alexander  (18th  C.)  owner  of  lands  in  Ruecastle  in  Bedrule  Parish.  In  1643  his  lands  were  valued  at  £27.  His  son  was  probably  William,  who  owned  the  same  lands  in  1678.  Alexander  (18th  C.)  shepherd  at  ‘...head’  in  Wilton  Parish,  according  to  his  headstone.  He  married  Marion  Smith,  who  died  in  1769,  aged  59,  and  is  buried  in  Wilton  Old  Cemetery.  Alexander  (18th/19th  C.)  farmer  at  Grieknowe  in  1786.  His  children  baptised  in  Kirktoun  Parish  included:  Mary  (b.1783);  William  (b.1786);  and  John  (b.1787).  Alexander  (18th/19th  C.)  farmer  at  Teindside  Bridge,  recorded  on  the  1797  Horse  Tax  Rolls.  Alexander  (1867–1947)  from  Aytoun  in  Berwickshire,  he  served  as  Stationmaster  at  several  locations,  including  Hawick  in  about  1915.  Andrew  (18th/19th  C.)  resident  of  North  Shields.  He  subscribed  to  Robert  Wilson’s  ‘History  of  Hawick’  in  1825.  He  must  have  had  a  local  connection.  Andrew  ‘The  Marquis’  (19th/20th  C.)  son  of  a  coal  agent  in  Hawick.  There  is  a  story  told  of  him  pulling  Peter  Laidlaw’s  leg  by  recounting  a  dream  in  which  he  was  in  Hell  and  the  Devil  tells  him  to  get  off  his  seat,  saying  ‘Ee’ve  nae  richt  there;  it’s  reserved  for  Peter  Laidlaw’.  Charles  (18th  C.)  weaver  in  Hawick  Parish.  In  1757  he  witnessed  a  baptism  for  carrier  Thomas  Black.  In  1760  he  witnessed  baptisms  for  weaver  David  (who  was  surely  related  to  him)  and  John  Scott.  He  married  Ann  Blaikie  and  their  daughter  Ann  was  baptised  in  Hawick  in  1758.  He  may  be  the  Charles  whose  unnamed  child  died  in  Hawick  in  1787  and  whose  son  David  died  in  1808.  He  is  probably  the  Charles,  father-in-law  to  stocking-maker  Thomas  Scott,  whose  death  is  recorded  in  Hawick  in  1816  (in  which  case  Isabel  was  his  daughter).  He  could  be  the  son  of  John  and  Helen  Paterson  born  in  Hawick  in  1723.  Charles  (18th  C.)  resident  at  Chapelhill  in  1775  when  his  daughter  Margaret  was  baptised  in  Robertson  Parish.  Christian  (18th/19th  C.)  proprietor  of  a  public  house  on  Silver  Street,  recorded  in  Pigot’s  1825/6  directory.  She  is  probably  the  Christian  at  ‘Slitrige  Bridge’  and  described  as  ‘independent’  on  the  1841  census.  She  could  be  the  Christian,  daughter  of  James  and  Christian  Wintrope,  who  was  born  in  Hawick  in  1785.  David  (17th/18th  C.)  tailor  in  Hawick.  In  1705  he  witnessed  a  baptism  for  workman  John  Douglas.  Probably  the  same  David  witnessed  a  baptism  for  James  Thomson  in  Weensland  in  1704.  David  (17th/18th  C.)  resident  of  Wilton  Parish.  In  1705  he  was  perhaps  in  Burngrove  (the  entry  is  hard  to  read)  when  his  daughter  Jean  was  baptised.  William  Miller  and  Adam  Scott  were  witnesses.  He  may  be  the  David  who  married  Bessie  Scott  and  whose  son  Walter  was  baptised  in  Wilton  in  1695.  David  (17th/18th  C.)  weaver  in  Hawick.  He  is  recorded  as  witness  to  several  baptisms  in  1702,  1704,  1705,  1706,  1708,  1709  and  1712.  He  thus  seems  likely  to  have  either  been  an  elder  of  the  Kirk  or  held  an  office  within  the  Incorporation  of  Weavers.  He  is  probably  the  David  who  witnessed  baptisms  for  Walter  White  in  1712  and  1731.  In  1719  he  witnessed  a  baptism  for  James  Dickson,  the  other  witness  being  Adam  Winthrope,  who  was  born  in  Hawick  in  1785.  David  (17th/18th  C.)  tailor  in  Hawick.  In  1705  he  witnessed  a  baptism  for  workman  John  Douglas.  Probably  the  same  David  witnessed  a  baptism  for  James  Thomson  in  Weensland  in  1704.  David  (17th/18th  C.)  resident  of  Wilton  Parish.  In  1705  he  was  perhaps  in  Burngrove  (the  entry  is  hard  to  read)  when  his  daughter  Jean  was  baptised.  William  Miller  and  Adam  Scott  were  witnesses.  He  may  be  the  David  who  married  Bessie  Scott  and  whose  son  Walter  was  baptised  in  Wilton  in  1695.  David  (17th/18th  C.)  weaver  in  Hawick.  He  is  recorded  as  witness  to  several  baptisms  in  1702,  1704,  1705,  1706,  1708,  1709  and  1712.  He  thus  seems  likely  to  have  either  been  an  elder  of  the  Kirk  or  held  an  office  within  the  Incorporation  of  Weavers.  He  is  probably  the  David  who  witnessed  baptisms  for  Walter  White  in  1712  and  1731.  In  1719  he  witnessed  a  baptism  for  James  Dickson,  the  other  witness  being  weaver  William  (who  was  surely  related).  His  son  John  was  baptised  in  Hawick  in  1700,  with  witnesses  Walter  Turnbull  and  Patrick  Richardson.  He  is  probably  the  David  who  was  fined  in  1716  for  calling  Isobel  Anderson  a  liar  in  court.  He  is  probably  the  David  who  witnessed  baptisms  in  1718  for  shoemaker  John  Gardner  and for John Scott ‘Whitegates’. He and John (perhaps his son) were witnesses to a baptism for William Gledstains in 1721. David (18th C.) Weaver in Hawick. He may have been son of the earlier David. In 1723 he married Margaret, daughter of the deceased Walter Armstrong in Weensland. Their children included: Margaret (b.1724); and David (b.1728). The witnesses in 1728 were William Tudhope and weaver John (probably his brother). David (18th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. His children included: William (b.1733); and Helen (b.1736). David (18th C.) Weaver in Hawick, perhaps related to the earlier David. He may be the David, son of David and Margaret Armstrong, baptised in Hawick in 1728. He married Helen Wright in 1756 and their children included: Jean (b.1757); John (b.1760); Helen (b.1761); and Robert (b.1763). Weaver Charles Miller witnessed the 1760 baptism and was surely related. He could be the weaver David whose death is recorded in 1810 when he ‘Drowned himself in Slitrigg’. He could be the David whose son Francis died in 1781. David (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Scott and their children included: Isabel (b.1772); John (b.1773); John (again, b.1773); David (b.1778); and William (b.1782). The witnesses in 1772 were the whole congregation. He is probably the David who (along with weaver Robert Douglas) in 1774 witnessed a baptism for weaver Archibald Douglas; the next baptismal entry was for his own child in 1773, with the witnesses being weavers Robert and Archibald Douglas. David (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1798 he married Agnes Scott, who was also from Hawick. David (18th/19th C.) tailor in Newcastle. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825, and hence must have had a local connection. David (b.1795) son of Thomas. He emigrated to America in 1817, settling in Bovina, New York. In 1817 he married Nancy, daughter of Scotsman John Thomson. His 2nd wife was Isabella, daughter of Bailie ‘Tammy’ Turnbull. Their daughter Isabella Wilson married John Robertson Hoy. Many letters survive, sent to him from his family members in the Borthwick valley. Elizabeth (17th C.) recorded in 1695 when she was convicted of theft in Hawick. She was banished ‘out of the Ports of the town’, with the Burgh Officers announcing that no one should harbour or reset her. Elizabeth ‘Bessie’ (d.1720) recorded being in Wiltonburn when her funeral took place in Wilton Parish. She may have been related to Robert, who was blacksmith at Borthaugh. Francis (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Helen Turnbull and their children included: Adam (b.1685); Helen (b.1700); Thomas (b.1703); Walter (b.1706); and Sarah (b.1708). In 1691 he was married to ‘Bessie’ Turnbull (probably an error) when his daughter Isobel was baptised, with witnesses Adam Miller and James Neil. George (1777/8–1849) Sawyer in Hawick, son of Janet Kedie, who died in 1832, aged 75. In 1841 he was resident at about 71 High Street and recorded as ‘independent’. He was living with his sister Isabel (who died in 1841, aged 50), as well as a servant, Janet Hume. He could be the Miller who gave his name to the adjacent close. He is buried in St. Mary’s.

George (b.1829/30) born in Ancrum Parish. He was a flour miller living on the Cross Wynd in 1851. In 1850 he married Jane, daughter of Archibald Hobkirk from Jedburgh and their children included Robert. James (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1661 he witnessed a baptism for Patrick Redford. He married Margaret Redford in 1656 and their children included Isobel (b.1657), Robert (b.1659) and Thomas (b.1661). The witnesses in 1661 were Thomas Maben and James Wallace. James (17th/18th C.) weaver living at Slaidhills. In 1717 he married Bessie Wilson in Hawick. James (17th/18th C.) proprietor of the main inn in Denholm in 1745, when the Highlander army passed through. The officers apparently stayed at the inn. It is said that a servant stole the pay-bag of the army, but it was returned after there was a threat to burn down the village. James (b.c.1725) gardener, one of the 6 representative Burgesses appointed to perambulate and define the boundaries of the Burgh’s land in 1767, during court proceedings for the division of the Common. He could be the James who married Jean Gledstains in Wilton in 1741 and had children in Wilton and Melrose. James (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Northhouseshaugh in 1772 when his daughter Mary was baptised. James (18th C.) writer (i.e. lawyer) in Hawick who subscribed to 2 copies of Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). He is probably the James paid by the Council in 1771 for ‘making poor’s list’. He may be the James who married Christian Wintrope (probably sister of the writer James) in 1772, with children: Thomas (1774–1819), also a writer in Hawick; Jane (b.1775), who married Joseph Peacock; James (b.1777); Andrew (b.1779); Margaret (b.1781); and Christian (b.1785). James (18th
Miller

C. resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Howcleuch in 1774 and Parkhill in 1785. His children included John (b.1774) and James (b.1785). James (18th C.) weaver in Roberton Parish. He married Mary Stavert in 1790 and was recorded at ‘Eskdalesyke’. He was living at Harden in 1793 and Mabonlaw in 1800. His children included: Thomas (b.1790); Mary (b.1791); Margaret (b.1793); William (b.1795); Jane (b.1797); and John (b.1800). James (18th/19th C.) labourer at Northhouse. He witnessed a declaration made in 1816 about the birth of William Ker in 1779. He was probably related to Ker’s mother Janet Miller, perhaps her brother. James (1763/4–1835) resident of Deanburnhaugh. In 1795 he was recorded at Mabonlaw. He married Mary Stavert, who died in 1839, aged 77. Their children included: Thomas (b.1790); Mary (b.1791); William (b.1795); and Jane (b.1797). He and his wife are buried in Old Wilton Cemetery. James (18th/19th C.) grocer, spirit dealer, wine merchant and seedsman in Hawick. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He is recorded at Bridge End in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory and on the Sandbed in 1837, but does not appear on the 1841 census. He is probably the James who married Margaret Turnbull, and whose children included: Alexander (b.1801), possibly the Alexander of Dundee who also subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’; Elizabeth (b.1803); Thomas (b.1805); Isobel (b.1807); Andrew (b.1808); James (b.1814); and William (b.1818). He may be the ‘servant’ of William Oliver (‘Auld Cash’) who witnessed his will in 1808. James (b.1795/6) from Wilton Parish, he was a joiner in Denholm. He was listed as a wright in directories of 1837 and 1852. In 1861 he was on Main Street. His wife was Margaret and they had a son, John. James (19th C.) Chief Magistrate in the early 1830s. John (16th C.) recorded in Whithope in 1580, with his surname appearing as ‘Myllar’. He witnessed a transaction in Selkirk between John Scott in Whithope and Robert Scott of Haining. Johan G.D. (20th C.) grand-daughter of Robert Martin and Mary Hunter. She published the local poetry collection ‘Fallen Leaves’ about 1950. John (17th C.) resident of Easter Cavers who was listed in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. His name was written ‘Millner’. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Woodburn in 1716, 1718 and 1721. His children included: Walter (b.1714); John (b.1716); William (b.1718); Alexander (b.1721); and Bessie (b.1724). John (18th C.) weaver in Hawick. He was probably son of weaver David. He is probably the John who witnessed a baptism for weaver William in 1715. In 1721 he and David (both weavers) witnessed a baptism for William Gledstains. In 1728 he witnessed a baptism for weaver David, who may have been his brother. He could be the John who married Helen Margaret Paterson, with children Charles (b.1723), John (b.1727), Jean (b.1730) and David (b.1732). John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen Scott and their children included Margaret (b.1725). John (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was recorded at Roughheugh in 1724, Burnhead in 1726 and Appletreehall in 1729. In 1724 he witnessed a baptism for John Scott at Brieryhill and in 1726 another for Archibald Scott, fellow resident at Burnhead. In 1723 he married Christian Taylor and their children (baptised in Wilton Parish) included: William (b.1724); Margaret (b.1726); and Margaret (again, b.1729). The witnesses in 1724 were John Scott and David Taylor, in 1726 were John Scott and John Dryden and in 1729 were James and John Dryden. John (d.1790) cooper in Hawick. He may have been son of carrier Thomas. In 1767 he witnessed a baptism for Robert Rutherford. He married Isobel Simpson in Wilton in 1743 and they had children: Thomas (b.1744); Mary (b.1746); Jane (b.1757); and Caleb (b.1760). The witnesses in 1757 probably included Hector Blaikie. His death is recorded in 1790, where he is ‘cooper father to Thomas’. He may be the John whose wife’s death is recorded in Hawick in 1771. John (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Parkhill in 1741 and Howcleuch in 1743. His children included: Margaret (b.1741), John (b.1743), James (b.1746), William (b.1747) and Walter (b.1749). John (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was recorded at Groundistone in 1751 and Leaheads in 1759. He married Helen Scott in 1741 and their children included: Jean (b.1743); Isabel (b.1745); William (b.1749); Anne (b.1751); Jane (b.1754); Helen (b.1754); and John (b.1759). The witnesses in 1751 were John and Robert Scott and in 1759 were Rev. James Simpson and Mr. John Chisholme (probably of Stirches). John (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Helen Scott and their children included Janet (b.1751) and Jane (b.1754). John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen Davidson and their children included: Mary and Thomas (b.1775); and Betty (b.1778). John (b.c.1770) joiner in Roberton. He was listed at ‘Roberton Woodfoot’ in 1841, living with his daughters Helen and Ann. He was probably brother of Thomas and uncle of the later carpenter John, who moved to Traquair. He is probably the John, son of James, born in Roberton in 1768. John (1797–1874) born at Deanburnhaugh, son of Thomas. He was a wright or carpenter, and later served as factor at Traquair. In his younger days he worked for David Murray and then for architect Archibald Elliot, who made designs for the Haining and other local houses. By 1841 he was living at Avenuehead, near Traquair House. He may have worked on the construction of the building at St. Ronan’s Well. In 1822 he married Jean (or Jane, d.1879), daughter of Robert Aimers from Galashiels. His children included Jane, Robert, Agnes, John and Mary. He died at Traquair. Miller Street in Innerleithen was named after him. John (18th/19th C.) tailor on the High Street, listed in Pigot’s 1837 directory. He appears to be absent from the 1841 census, but the apprentice tailors William and Walter, living on the Howegate, may be his sons. John (b.c.1815) agricultural labourer. In 1841 he was living at Todshwanghaih Cottages. His wife was Mary and their children included Robert, Margaret, Jessie and Elizabeth. He may have been brother of Robert, who was also at Todshwanghaih. John (1822/3–1854) Hawick shoemaker. He married Mary Scott, and she died in 1892, aged 74. Their children were Susanah (who died in infancy), Agnes Scott, Mary and Mary (who married William Hills). He is buried in Wellogate Cemetery. John ‘Blimed Johnnie Miller’ (1832/3–1904) spent a while in Hawick Blind Asylum, but ran away back to Teviothead, where he spent the rest of his life. He was said to have known the countryside of Teviothead Parish extremely well, was gifted with a great memory, and also played the fiddle. Bailie John (19th/20th C.) councillor and Bailie in the latter part of the 19th century. He spoke at the 1899 Colour Bussing and was one of the first guests at the Callants’ Club dinner. Rev. John S. (20th C.) minister at St. Andrew’s Kirk 1954–59. He was the last minister. Kate (18th/19th C.) proprietor of a lodging house in Hawick. The death of an ‘Irish Pedlar’ is recorded there in 1815. Robert (17th C.) recorded on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls as blacksmith at Borthaugh. He is probably the Robert who in 1698 was caun-ter to Robert Scott, farmer at Wiltonburn. In 1700 he witnessed a baptism for William Riddell (from Wilton). He may be the shepherd in Wiltonburn recorded in 1708. Children who are probably his include: Bessie (1707–1720), from Wiltonburn; Margaret (b.1708); and Bessie (again, b.1712). Perhaps his wife was Margaret (or Isobel) Waugh, with other children baptised in Wilton Parish being John (b.1694) and Bessie (b.1699). Robert (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Northhouse in 1747. He married Helen Scott and their children included Jane (b.1747), William (b.1749) and Isabel (b.1751). Robert (d.bef. 1798) wright in Hawick. His son Robert was a carter and died in 1798. He could be the deceased Robert whose wife Betty Ekron died in Hawick in 1790. Robert (d.1798) son of wright Robert. He paid the cart tax in Haw-ick in the period 1785–91. He was a carrier in Hawick, listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. His descendant could be the ‘Mr. Miller’ whose property is shown on Buccleuch Street on Wood’s 1824 map. He is probably the carrier Robert who married Jean Conquerer in 1753 and whose children included Mary (b.1756), Margaret (b.1760) and Thomas (b.1763). Tailor Robert Paterson was witness to the 1760 baptism. Robert (18th C.) married Mary Elliot. Their daughter Mary was baptised in Hawick Parish in 1777. Their children included: Agnes (b.1790); Agnes (again, b.1792); Robert (b.1794); Beatrice (b.1796); Henrietta (b.1798); Walter (b.1800); and James Scott (b.1803). The witnesses in 1798 were James Scott, Elder (who may have been related to his wife), and William Hodge, gardener at Borthwickshils. Robert (b.c.1785) tenant at Belses Mill. He was recorded in Pigot’s 1837 directory and on the 1841 census. His wife was Susan and their children included James, Robert, Thomas, George and Watson. Robert (d.1822) school- master at Roberton. He is said to have died very suddenly. Robert (b.c.1790) hand-loom weaver who lived on the Loan, at about No. 24. He was recorded as a spinner in Hawick when he sub-scribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. His wife was Catherine and their children included Margaret, Robert, Elizabeth and Harriet (who married John Richardson). He was still alive in 1857 when he certified the death of a grand-child, Andrew Richardson Sir Ronald Andrew Baird (1937–) born and educated in Edinburgh, he trained as a chartered accountant and worked in London and the Midlands before returning to Scotland in 1968 to join Dawson International. He became a Director in 1976 and from 1982-95 he was Chairman and Chief Executive, helping Dawson to become one of Scotland’s leading companies, with Pringle’s being one of its main assets. However, this period also saw the decline of Pringle’s and knitwear in Hawick generally. In 1995 he was effectively forced to resign after poor performance by Dawson, and his hefty compensation package caused some protest at the time. He was Chairman of the Scottish Textile Association 1992-5. He was Chief Guest at the 1993 Common Riding. He received the C.B.E. in 1975 and a knighthood in 1993. Mr. ?? stationmaster of Hawick Station in the early 20th century. Simon (17th C.) resident at Hawick Shiel in 1694, according to the Hearth Tax rolls. He was also there in 1704 when he witnessed a baptism for Robert Scott, resident there. He and Walter Scott were described as tenants in Hawick Shiel in 1706 when they witnessed a baptism for James Davidson, also tenant in Hawick Shiel. He was joint tenant of Hawick Shiel (along with Walter Scott) in about 1710, as attested in evidence given regarding the state of Hawick’s Common in 1767. In 1716 he (and Walter Nixon, also at Hawick Shiel) witnessed a baptism for James Borthwick, shepherd at Hawick Shiel. He may be the Simon, married to a Murray, who had an unnamed child baptised in Hawick Parish in 1683. Thomas (17th C.) listed as tenant at Mervinslaw in Wilton Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He may be the Thomas married to an Easton whose son John was baptised in Wilton in 1697. The witnesses were Robert and William Scott. Thomas (17th C.) joint tenant along with John ‘Bue’ in Timbersidemill according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. They were recorded as having ‘an kiln betuixt thm’. Thomas (17th/18th C.) married Marion Hobkirk in Cavers Parish in 1708. He may be the Thomas who was at Ormiston in 1709 when his son William was baptised and at Hummelknowes in 1717 when his son John was baptised in Cavers. William (b.1709), Margaret (b.1712), Marion (b.1714), John (b.1717), Robert (b.1719) and Janet (b.1721) are probably also his children. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Grizel Graham and their daughter Agnes was baptised in 1745. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Murray and their children included: Janet (b.1745); Janet (again, b.1747); William (b.1749); John (b.1751); Thomas (b.1753); Robert (b.1755); Jane (b.1760); James (b.1762); and Francis (b.1765). He could be the gardener Thomas who witnessed a baptism in 1761 for shoemaker John Oliver. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Agnes Elliot and their children included Elizabeth (b.1771), William (b.1774) and Robert (b.1777). Thomas (18th/19th C.) carrier operating between Hawick and Kelso. He paid the cart tax in Hawick in 1785-88. He was a carrier recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls for Hawick. He subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). He was surely related to Robert, who was also a carrier. He may be the Thomas, married to Agnes Smith, whose children (baptised in Hawick) included: John (b.1775); Agnes (b.1777); James (b.1781); and James (again, b.1784). The witnesses in 1781 were shoemaker Charles Wilson and tailor Walter Pringle. He may be the Thomas who witnessed a baptism for Robert Grieve in 1763 and another for Robert Lamb in 1781. An unnamed child of his died in Hawick in 1787. He is probably the Thomas whose father John died in Hawick in 1790; if so he was probably born in 1744. Thomas (d.1794) Kirk Officer whose death is recorded in Hawick. He was Kirk Officer when he witnessed baptisms in 1784 for shoemaker James Cheap, in 1786 for John Stewart and (along with shoemaker George Gardner) for shoemaker John Wiens, in 1788 for watchmaker John Stewart, and in about 1789 for John Lamb. He may be the same as one of the other Thomasess. Thomas (18th/19th C.) gardener in Hawick. His unnamed child died in 1808. Thomas (1774–1819) son of writer James. He was a ‘writer’ in 1799 when he witnessed baptisms for Joseph Peacock and Jean (his sister) in 1799, 1801, 1805, 1806 and 1808. He is probably the Thomas of Hawick recorded in a document in Selkirk in 1807. He is recorded as a writer when he died in Hawick. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of London. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825, and hence must have had a local connection. Thomas (d.bef. 1835) resident of Deanburnhaugh, probably a tenant farmer. His father was probably James and his brother John, joiner at Robertson. He was recorded living at Highchesters in 1801. He was Beadle at Roberton Kirk. In 1791 he married Agnes Laidlaw in Hawick, the pair both recorded being from Hawick Parish. In 1812 he secondly married Isabella Scott in Roberton. His children, baptised in Robertson Parish, included: William (b.1791), who emigrated to Bovina, New York; David (b.1795), who also emigrated to Bovina; John (b.1797), who was factor at Traquair; Christina ('Cirsty', b.1799), who moved to Bovina and married James Fletcher from Ettrick; and Berry Shaw (b.1801), named after the local minister, who joined his brothers. He lost an eye to a cow’s horn in about 1822. Thomas (18th/19th C.) tailor at ‘Parkhouses’ (i.e. Packhooses) in Wilton Parish in 1841. His wife was Mary. Walter (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Isobel Wood in 1689 and their daughter Jean was baptised in 1690. The witnesses were Adam Miller and Andrew Riddell. Walter (17th C.) weaver at Lochburnfoot according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Walter (17th C.) resident at Wester Heap according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. He may be the Walter who witnessed a baptism for Walter Cavers in Mervinslaw in 1697. Walter (17th C.) listed as tenant at Outsinside among the ‘deficient’ on the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. Walter (18th C.) resident at Parkhill in 1743 when his daughter Bessie was baptised in Robertson Parish in 1743. He is probably the Walter who was at ‘Haugh’ in 1757 when his daughter Beatrix was baptised in Robertson. Other children born in Robertson who may have been his include William (b.1738), Isobel (b.1741), Margaret (b.1747), James (b.1749) and Mary (b.1754). Walter (18th/19th C.) saddler recorded in Denholm in 1837. William (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish. In 1663 and 1678 he is recorded paying the land tax on £27. He is probably son of Alexander, who owned the same lands in 1643. William (17th/18th C.) married Isobel Allan in Wilton in 1702. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Todshaw. His son William was baptised in Robertson Parish in 1703 William (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. His wife was Agnes and they had an unnamed daughter baptised in 1708. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. In 1711 he was at Easter Groundistone when his daughter Helen was baptised. He could be the William who married Bessie (or Jean) Murray and had children Agnes (b.1716) and Jean (b.1719) baptised in Wilton. William (17th/18th C.) Hawick resident, who, along with Adam Kerr, was rebuked in 1713 for riding on stilts on the Sabbath ‘thereby causing crowds of bairns to follow them’. William (17th/18th C.) resident in Hardenburnfoot in 1717, 1720, 1722, 1724 and 1727. His children included: Robert (b.1717); Thomas (b.1720); James (b.1722); Helen (b.1724); and Janet (b.1727). He is probably the William who married Margaret Neil in 1715 or the William who married Janet Wilson in 1716. Other children, baptised in Robertson Parish, may include Marion (b.1719) and Isobel (b.1729). William (17th/18th C.) weaver in Hawick. In 1705 he witnessed a baptism for gardener Thomas Boyd and in 1725 another for tailor Robert Chisholme. He was recorded as ‘weaver att ye east end of Hawick’ in 1715. In 1719 he witnessed a baptism for James Dickson, the other witness being weaver David (who was surely related). Also in 1719 he servant William Scott got married in Hawick. He married Marion Huntly and their children included: Bessie (b.1712); Mary (b.1715); Janet (b.1718); and David (b.1721). The witnesses in 1712 were Bailie James Scott and merchant Thomas Hardie and in 1715 were John (surely a relative, perhaps a brother) and Bailie James Scott. William (17th/18th C.) Hawick resident who married Anna Hope. Their children included: Robert (b.1711); Margaret (b.1714); Margaret (again, b.1717); and Janet (b.1720). William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was in Denholm in 1738. His children included: Janet (b.1723); Margaret (b.1733); Thomas (b.1735); and Charles (b.1738). William (18th C.) resident at Woodburn in 1772 when his son Walter was baptised in Robertson Parish. He could be the same as the William recorded at Whithope in 1774 when his son George was baptised and at Highchesters in 1781 when his son James was baptised. He could be the William who married Janet Kedie in Robertson in 1769. Other children were probably Agnes (b.1770), John (b.1776), Thomas (b.1777) and William (b.1779). William (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was living at Wiltonburn in 1786 and 1789. Perhaps the same William married Betty Watson in 1785 and was living at Threepheads in 1795 and 1798. His children probably included Robert (b.1786), Andrew (b.1789), Jane (b.1792), James Hay (b.1795) and Thomas (b.1798). William (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1794 he married Ann Routledge, who was also from Hawick. William (18th/19th C.) farmer at Shielswood, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. William (18th/19th C.) farmer at Bowanhill Roadside, listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. William (b.1770) overseer at a woollen factory, living on Wilton Damside in 1841. He is probably the William living at Rougueugh in 1835, when listed among heads of households on Wilton Parish. He could be the William, spinner, who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. William Millers (18th/19th C.) member of Hawick Curling Club in 1812. This could be the same man as William the painter. William (b.1782/3) painter and glazier on the High Street, recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. He was on the short-list for Cornet in 1817. He could be the ‘Mr. Miller’ whose property is marked on Wood’s 1824 map at about 69 High Street, giving its name to Miller’s Close. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. In Pigot’s 1837 directory he was a painter on the Howegate. In 1841 he was living at the Sandbed with wife Margaret and children James and William. He married Margaret, daughter of Slater Robert Elliot, and their children included: William (b.1836); Janet (b.1839); Jane (b.1841); Robert (b.1845); Margaret (b.1850); He may have been the William born to David and Margaret Scott in Hawick in 1782. William (d.bef. 1840) wright in Hawick. He married Helen (‘Nelly’) Buckham, and she died in 1840. They had a son James who died in 1808, another James (b.1810), as well as John (1805/6–23). William (1791–1870) eldest son of Thomas, he was probably born at Deanburn-haugh. He was a farm labourer at Milsington and lived at Easter Parkhill and Muselee (where he was tenant farmer for a while). In 1819 he married Elizabeth Scott, from Milsington. In 1825 he married Isabel (1802–82), daughter of Michael Dickson and Jane Jardine. The family emigrated to America in 1831, settling in Bovina, New York. Their first 3 children were born in Robertson Parish and the rest in America. Their children were: Thomas (1826–1911); Michael (1828–1915); William (1830–1912); David (b.1832), who died young; Walter (1835–1908); Berry Shaw (1837–1906); Janet (1839–70); and Gilbert Dickson (1843–1931). Photographs of him and his wife exist. William (b.c.1810) blacksmith on the Sandbed. His wife was Helen and their children included Mary, Thomas, Janet, Margaret and Walter. William (b.1811/2) tailor on Orrock Place in 1851 and at 21 Howegate in 1861. He was listed as a tailor on ‘Teviot square’ in Slater’s 1852 directory. His wife was Margaret and their children included Margaret, Mary, Sarah, Elizabeth, John and Walter Alexander. William ‘Willie’ (19th C.) one of 3 men who instigated the Hawick Home Mission in 1872. He was the first President when the Mission was formally founded in the next year. Either he or a later William was leader of the Hawick Home Mission choir for 25 years in the early part of the 20th century. Rev. William Carrick (1858–1915) born in Glasgow, son of Andrew and Margaret Carrick. He was educated at the Church of Scotland Normal School and Glasgow University, and licensed to preach in 1881. He became assistant at St. George’s, Paisley and was ordained at Howood Chapel in 1883. He was first Minister of the new Wellington Church in 1886 and first minister of the newly created St. Margaret’s Parish in 1896. He was a guest at the 1890 Colour Bussing. He was translated to Yetholm in 1898. He married Margaret Walker, daughter of Thomas McQueen in 1887, and she died in 1894. He secondly married Johanna, daughter of John Bonthron in 1901. His children included William Bonthron Carrick and John Bonthron (formerly spelled ‘Millar’ and ‘Milner’).

Millers (mi-lurz) n. people in charge of corn mills. In Hawick the mill was at the Mill Port, moving to the Mill Path in the late 18th century, and the miller had grazing rights and grew corn at the Miller’s Knowes. Hawick’s millers have included: John Dempster in 1622; William Paterson 1680s; Walter Elliot, at least 1709–1714 Robert Elliot 1720s; James Scott 1750s; Adam Scott in 1774; John Ainslie late 1700s; John Oliver 1820s to 1840s; and John Young Scott mid-1800s.

The Miller’s (thu-mi-lurz) n. the Miller’s Knowes, a hilly area between Weensland Road and the Orchard Road, reached via the iron gate and path off Weensland Road, or from the Braid Road. It is named after the miller of the old Hawick corn mill, who for centuries grew corn and had grazing rights there. The area was made notorious after a man called John Webster committed suicide in the old quarry there in 1748. It has been a public park since 1892, part being purchased from the Duke of Buccleuch in 1920, and the rest gifted in 1930. It is now officially known as Miller’s Knowes Park, and offers spectacular views of the town, and is also used by children for sledging and sliding, as well as dog walkers and others. The Independent Broadcasting Authority leased part of the summit for 60 years for a microwave transmitter in 1962 (used as a relay for the Selkirk transmitter), and a BMX track was constructed in 1985 (but closed in the late 1990s due to continual bad weather). It is also home to a playground, the Millennium Stone and nearby memorial seat (to Frank T. Scott). It was once properly known as ‘Gala Law Knowes’ – ‘Sae lassies braw an’ callants a’ Where better mak’ your vows, Than where the hill o’erlooks the tooo – The bonnie Miller’s Knowes’ [WFC].
Miller’s Close

Miller’s Close (mi-lurz-klös) n. popular 19th century name for a passageway located at 69 High Street. It was named after someone by the name of Miller, whose property is marked on Wood’s 1824 map. Local historian Robert Murray’s family lived there (also written ‘Millar’s Close’).

the miller’s horse (tıu-mi-lurz-hors) n., arch. proverbially cheeky animal – ‘Ee’ve the cheek o’ (or as muckle impetance as) the miller’s horse’ [GW].

the Miller’s Knowes (tıu-mi-lurz-nowz) n. full name of the Miller’s – ‘And so it was in Hawick town, Nearby the Miller’s Knowes, We pledged our troth together there, With all a lover’s vows’ [WFC], ‘Some summer day we’ll gang To wander through the verdant howes, And greet dear Memories amang The gentle, windin’ Millers Knowes’ [WP].

the Miller’s Knowes Steps (tıu-mi-lurz-nowz-steps) n. informal name for public stair-case connecting Orchard Terrace with the Braid Road, much used by people walking in the Miller’s Knowes or Target Hills areas.

Millfield Plain (mil-feild-plän) n. land-locked valley near Wooler in Northumberland, between the Tweed and Till rivers, close to the final battle site of Flodden Field. It was once the base of a prehistoric lake, and traditionally associated with King Arthur. It was also the scene of a minor battle in August 1513. Lord Home’s raiding party was ambushed by Sir William Bulmer’s men, resulting in heavy losses for the Scots. This event is also referred to as ‘the Ill Raid’ and was a forerunner for Flodden about a month later. It is also associated with the battle of Homildon Hill and a much earlier Saxon battlefield – ‘. . . Not all the snow on Millfield Plain Could make those white blades white again!’ [WHO] (the name is probably p-Celtic in origin).

Millholm (mi-lūm) n. place marked as ‘Miholme’ on Sandison’s c.1590 map of the Debatable Land. It appears to be near the modern Hermitage village, and is probably the same place as Millburn. It may be the ‘mylnholme’ where Walter Turnbull is recorded as tenant in 1694 (but is hard to distinguish from Millholm, which is further to the south).

Millholm (mi-lūm-kros) n. former lands in Liddesdale, located near the Millholm Cross, south of Newcastleton. In 1541 it was recorded as ‘Mylneholme’ and in the hands of the Laird of Mangerton. There was a Walter Scott there in about 1622. In 1632 the farm here, along with Ettleton, was possessed by David Goldie and James Mitchelson. Andrew Wilson was there in 1685. It is described in a survey carried out for the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1718, when it consisted of 1553 acres, and was bounded by Gillfoot, the Lidded Water, Side, Tarras, Copshaw Park and Blackburn. The farmhouse is in approximately the modern place, with cornland between it and the river, and adjacent small fields belonging to Greens and Mangerton farms. A symbol near the farmhouse could be meant to indicate the Millholm Cross, but there is no sign of Ettleton Cemetery on the 1718 map. The farmer there in the mid-18th century was Walter Scott. James Ingles was tenant in the early 19th century. The name may simply be the ‘home mill’ for the local laird (also called ‘Milnholm’; it is ‘Mylnholm’ in 1622, ‘Mylneholmes’ in 1632, ‘Mylne-holm’ in 1685 and ‘Milneholme’ in 1718; it is marked on Stobie’s 1770 map).

the Millholm Cross (tıu-mi-lūm-kros) n. ancient carved cross just south of Newcastleton, on the west side of the Canonbie road. It probably commemorates Alexander Armstrong, Laird of Mangerton, who was killed in 1320 and his body laid here while his clansmen rested on their way to Ettleton churchyard. The original part of the cross is about 10 feet high, including the base, and it has a modern top. The shaft has the letters ‘MA’ and ‘AA’, together with a carved sword. The Armstrong Clan Trust erected a nearby plaque. It is said to have been used as a local meeting place, where transactions were carried out, servants hired and feuds settled. Probably the farm here is the ‘Mylneholmes’, with a value of 15 shillings, recorded on a rental roll of c.1376 – ‘The Cross at Millholm, which perpetuates the name Of gallant Lord Mangerton, peerless in fame’ [DA] (also called ‘Milnholm Cross’).

Millhoose (mi-hoos) n. former lands in Liddesdale, recorded in a rental roll c.1376. They are listed there as ‘Milnhouse’, with a value of 5 shillings and 9 pence. In a rental roll of 1541 they are worth 15 shillings and leased to Thomas Armstrong, probably of Mangerton (it is ‘Mylhoues’ in 1541).

Mill House (mi-hoos) n. 2-storey house attached to the former Corn Mill on the Mill Path, also known as ‘Hawick Mill House’ or ‘the Mill House’. It was rebuilt 1862–3. It has a central pilastered door-piece and a simple elegance of construction. It is a grade C listed building.

Milligan (mi-lee-gin) n. Charles (19th/20th C.) son of William, and nephew of Provost Robert. He married Jane Beattie, whose mother was a...
Nichol of Craik and also related to Provost Renwick's grandmother. He learned the upholstery trade from his uncle and started his own business. This was carried on as Milligan Brothers by his sons Robert and John. Christopher 'Kit' (?–??) wrote 'Riccarton Junction: memories of my life in this railway village' (1994). He was born in the village and lived there until the railway closed, when he moved to Hawick. At the site of the Riccarton Junction North signal box an information panel has been erected in his memory. George (1775–1855) from Watten in Caithness, he was a joiner, cabinet-maker and undertaker in Hawick. He was father of Provost Robert, William (farmer in Denholm) and Sophia (who married Andrew Park and emigrated to America in 1857). He was an elder in the Relief Kirk. He was listed as a joiner and cabinet-maker on Moncrieff's Close (an old name for 'Tannage Close') in Pigot's 1837 directory. He was living on Tannage Close in 1841 and in 1851 he was a lodger with clockmaker John Graham. He married Jane Paterson, sister of 'Pawkie Paiteirson', who died in 1839, aged 54 (she had previously had a child with Frenchman M. Cabourne). He died suddenly stepping into a train carriage at Hawick station the morning after the Winter Fair. Together with his son Robert, the pair ran the family cabinet-maker's for about 75 years. George Halberdier 1885–96. He worked for the Council and was officially a 'District Officer'. He was thus the main Halberdier, who would organise the venues, etc., as well as reading the Proclamation and delivering the letter to the Cornet Elect. John (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1612 as 'Johnne Amullickyn, in Cruiks'. Along with Ninian Armstrong (son of Thomas) he was found guilty of helping John, Lord Maxwell, who was on the run for murder and treason. His farm was near Langholm, possibly the Crooks next to Westerkirk. He was sentenced to be hanged in Edinburgh. Rev. Robert (1836–88) son of Dumfries hosiery manufacturer William, he studied at Edinburgh University and New College. He was ordained as 2nd minister of Wolfelee Free Kirk in 1863. He was quite evangelical in style, had a large bible class and introduced hymn singing to Wolfelee. He and his family contributed significantly to the fund for the new church building. It is said that he also laboured at the Free Church mission in Hawick and made designs for the new Free Church in Newcastleton. He left Wolfelee in 1871 for the Chalmers Territorial Church in Dundee. He married Mary Spiers from Glasgow in 1863, and she died in 1906. Their children were: Jane (b.1865), born in Hobkirk, married Robert White in Lancashire; Amelia Baxter (b.1867), born in Hockirk, married Carl Ludwig Arter from Zurich and settled in Tehran; Phebe (b.1869), born in Hobkirk, married Rev. Frederick Arthur Taylor; and William (b.1874), born in Dundee, who was either a businessman in Tehran or moved to Alberta, Canada. He drowned while bathing at Montrose while on holiday with his family, on the eve of celebrating 25 years in the ministry. Robert (1821–1892) born on Common Riding morning, his mother was a sister of 'Pawkie Paterson. He became a cabinet-maker and undertaker and was well-known for his repartee as an auctioneer. In 1851 he was listed as a joiner on Moncrieff's Close. His later business premises were at 80 High Street, where the Liberal Club was later built. The house was set back and the yard in front was used for furniture sales. He was a Councillor for over 30 years, mainly for South High Street Ward, becoming a Magistrate (possibly for longer than anyone else), then acting-Provost in 1875, beating Edward Wilson by a single vote in the 1884 Council election and being Provost 1887–90. He was sometimes referred to as 'the Bailyeh'. As a Councillor he was known to be blunt and outspoken. He had virtually no formal education and it is said that he rather gloried in this fact. Wilton Lodge Park was acquired during his Provostship. He was a keen Common Riding supporter, being Chairman of the Race Committee and he was the Provost referred to in J.E.D. Murray's 'Nicht Afore the Morn'. He was a School Board member, Parochial Board member, keen bowler (being on the founding committee of Hawick Bowling Club), Vice-President of the Curling Club, and a Conservative, although little involved in party politics. He was presented with a gold watch on his retirement as Provost. He married Margaret Hunter, daughter of the landlord of the Black Bull, and she died in 1856, aged 34. Their children were George and Robert, who died in infancy, Barbara Scott, Margaret, Mary (who married John Henderson) and Jane (who married John Little). He secondly married Margaret, daughter of John Smith, and she died in 1897, aged 70. Their children were Robert (also an auctioneer) and Janet. He is buried in the Wellogate, and his portrait hangs in the Town Hall (painted by Frank Wood in 1890, and said to have perhaps been damaged by a halberd!). Robert (1851/2–1931) son of William and nephew of Provost Robert. He became a cycle and motor mechanic and was known... as a cheerful individual, who had great technical and creative skill, but less business acumen. He built a 1½ horse power motor quadrocycle, which was essentially an early motor car. He also built many other mechanical devices, and was a keen early promoter of pneumatic tyres. He went into partnership with William Laidlaw and later with Alexander Bell, the firm Milligan & Bell being successful through most of the 20th century. Robert (1865–1906) son of Provost Robert and Margaret Smith. He carried on the auctioneering business after his father’s death, but it gradually petered out. He married Grace Bilby and their son Robert fought in WWI in the Canadian forces. Sandy born and raised in Denholm, he worked in textile engineering design, but in 1993 became a full-time artist. He specialises in Border landscapes using pastels. William (16th C.) Vicar of Kirkton Parish. He is recorded in 1545 as ‘Amuligane’. Nothing else appears to be known about him. William (19th C.) brother of Provost Robert, he was a farmer near Denholm. He married a Scott of Milsington and his children included: Charles, who became an upholsterer; and Robert, a bicycle and motor engineer (also written ‘Millican’).

Milligan’s Peth (mi-lee-ginz-peth) n. name sometimes used in the late 19th century for Brougham Place, after the cabinet-making business of Robert Milligan, which was at the foot of the street.

Millingwud Fell (mi-lin-wud-fel) n. Millingwood Fell, also formerly known as Millenwood Fell, a high hill in the west of Castleton Parish, near the source of the Hermitage Water. It reaches a height of 517 m, with the somewhat higher Scawd Bank just to the south (it appears to be ‘Millin Wod Fell’ on the 1718 Buccleuch survey, is ‘Mellenwood Fell’ on Stobie’s 1770 map and is ‘Millenwood-fell’ in the New Statistical Account).

Mill Shot (mil-sho’) n. former name for lands near Newton in Bedrule Parish, recorded in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls. It is listed as ‘Colver Field, or Mill Shot’.

Millport Toor (mil-pör’-toor) n. former building on Mill Port. It may be the tower in Hawick ‘between the bridges’ owned by the Scots of Whitchesters in the early 16th century. This may Millmoor (mil-moor) n. lands in Liddesdale once attached to the estate of Mangerton. In a c.1376 rental roll they are listed as ‘Milnmore’ with a value of 2 shillings.

the Mill Peth (thu-mil-peth) n. Mill Path, a short street running from Slitrig Crescent to Wellogate Brae, named after Hawick Corn Mill and formerly known as Kiln Path. The original houses were constructed in 1849 and the county police station was once on this street. The lower part, including the old Salvation Army Hall, was demolished in 1968 to make way for new housing for elderly people. The Song Singing ceremony takes place here on the Friday of the Common Riding. The Cornet and mounted supporters are led up the Cross Wynd by the Drums and Fifes and at the top of the Mill Path the Cornet dismounts, thanking the riders as they pass. Then the Principles, Provost and Bailies walk down to the foot of the street for the Proclamation and the Song Singing. This takes place on a specially constructed platform on the north side (corner with Allars Crescent), which replaced the former site, the roof of Tibbie the Fiddler’s Cottage on the opposite side of the street. No 3 and the Corn Mill are listed buildings – ‘Owre the Mill Path swells the chorus, Flag and ribbons waving o’er us’ [RK].

Millport see Mill Port

Mill Pool (mil-pool) n. pool in the Teviot near Lanton Mill. The weir there was called ‘Lanton Cauld’.

Mill Port (mil-pör’) n. short piece of road along the side of the Slitrig, entered by steps opposite the Tower. It was originally the site of a gateway near the old Corn Mill, which was partly washed away in the flood of 1767 and the remains demolished. The ‘undermost house of the Miln Port’ was also carried away in the flood. The steps down from the High Street date at least from the early 19th century. It once contained a number of poor lodging-houses, being the site of a murder (resulting in Hawick’s last hanging) in 1814. A thatched row of tenements, one with an outside staircase, was demolished in the 1860s (it is ‘milneport’ in 1708).

Mill Shot (mil-sho’) n. former name for lands near Newton in Bedrule Parish, recorded in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls. It is listed as ‘Colver Field, or Mill Shot’.

Millport Toor (mil-pör’-toor) n. former building on Mill Port. It may be the tower in Hawick ‘between the bridges’ owned by the Scots of Whitchesters in the early 16th century. This may be the same place once called the Lieutenant’s Tower and referred to as ‘the Peill’ in 1656. In a description of the great flood of 1767 it was said that the ‘Old Milnport Tower is undermined and the walls rent’. It was probably demolished after that. There is a legend that it was connected by an underground passage to Drumlanrig’s Tower.

Millrig-quarter (mill-ryg-kwar-tur) n. former name for lands in Belses. They were included among lands served to Sir Thomas Ker of Cavers Kerr in 1678, after the death of his son Andrew, and in 1684 when inherited by Sir Thomas’ nephew John. In 1684 it was described as 7 husbandlands of land (it is listed as ‘Mylnrigquarter’ in 1678 and ‘Milnerig quarter’ in 1684).

Millrig Sike (mil-rig-sik) n. former name for lands in Belses, described in 1684 as 3 husbandlands in Belses ‘cum rivola vocata the Milnerig Sike’. The lands were presumably by a small stream or perhaps the mill lade.

mill-rynd (mil-rynd) n., arch. the iron structure supporting the upper stone in a corn mill, a coin with an impression like the image of such – ‘...being £11 money of this realme thereintil, being three 4 merk peices coneyst (i.e. coined) with the milne rynd ...’ [BR1642].

mills (milz) n., pl. corn mills, i.e. buildings used for grinding grains into flour or meal, formerly crucial parts of the feudal structure, with each barony having its own mill where the tenant farmers had to have their produce ground for a fee. These reached their peak probably in the 17th century, and then began to disappear, although 10 local ones are still listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. Eventually some of them were converted into textile mills. They were almost always water powered, although in earlier times they would have been hand-mills, and animal-driven mills also existed. The following were probably all local mills: Hawick Mill; Allanhaugh Mill; Aircrum Mill; Appotside Mill; Ashkirk Mill; Bedrule Mill; Belses Mill; Boosmill (on Ale); Borthaugh Mill; Bucleuch Mill; Burnfit Mill; Cauld Mill; Chisholme Mill; Cogsmill; Craik Mill; Crawhill Mill; Dean Mill; Denum Mill; Dobburn Mill; Doveshaw Mill; Fahlash Mill; Hallrule Mill; Hartshaw Mill; Harwood Mill; Haussendean Mill; Heidshaw Mill; Highchesters Mill; Hobsburn Mill; Howcleuch Mill; Hummelknowe Mill; Larriston Mill; Lilliesleaf Mill; Midlem Mill; Minto Mill; Newmill on Teviot; Newmill on Slitrig; Newton Mill (Bedrule); Philhope Mill; Raesknowe Mill; Riccarton Mill; Riddell Mill; Roughheugh/Langlands/Wulton Mill; Ruletownhead Mill; Scauw Mill/Timberside Mill; Soothdale Mill; Spittal Mill; Synton Mill; Trow Mill; Weensland Mill; Wester Mill (Wilton); Whitehaugh Mill (Liddesdale); Whithope Mill (Borthwick); Winton Mill; and Woollee Mill (Rule). There were also small mills on some farms, powered by water from ponds. In Rulewater, for example, these were at Abbotrule, Bedrule, Billerwell, Cleuchhead, Doorpool, Easter Fodderlee, Gatehousecote, Greenriver, Hallrule, Hawthorne-side, Mackside, Midburn, Ruletownhead, Towno-Rule, Tythehouse, Wester Fodderlee and Westerhouses.

Mills (milz) n. George (b.1812/3) from Edinburgh, he was a coach painter living on the Back Row in 1851. His wife was Ann and their children included Jane, Margaret, James and David.

Henry (18th C.) listed as postillion at Cavers in 1791, when he was working for George Douglas. He could be related to the butler John ‘Mill’, who was working at Cavers a few years earlier. James (19th C.) hid at Midshiels. He is listed among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1835 and 1840.

Millside (mil-sid) n. former name for a place near Hawick. John Cook was living there in 1767. It is unclear where this might have been, but perhaps an alternative name for the Mill Path.

Millstone Edge (mil-stan-ej) n. Millstone Edge, hill roughly between Linyhope farm and Caulcleuch Head, to the north of Tuddhope Hill. It reaches a height of 567 m.

Millstone Edge (mil-stan-ej) n. Millstone Edge, hill in southern Roxburghshire, lying on the border with Dumfriesshire, north-west of Newcastleton, just south of Roan Fell. It reaches a height of 561 m and has a triangulation pillar on another slight summit to the south. There are many cairns in the area. The hill got its name from the quarry on the eastern side, where blanks for millstones were cut, one good discarded example being visible there today (there is a well-known place of the same name in the Derbyshire Peak District).

Millstone Sike (mil-stan-sik) n. small stream in Southdean Parish on the right side of the A6088 just before Lethem. It flows into the Carter Burn. The reason for the name is unknown. But there are several quarry holes on both sides of the stream, which have been used to excavate the outcrops of sandstone found here.

mill-steep (miln-steep) n., arch. a lever fixed to the machinery of a corn-mill, by which the millstones may be moved relative to each other (noted by J. Jamieson).

mill-yins (miln-yinz) n., pl. factory workers – ‘The mills war skailin an the mill-yins war toavin hyinn’ [ECS].

Milmoe (miln-mo) n. alternative name of the lands held by William Scott in Lees in the 16th century, and later by the Scotts of Lees and Bumhead. The 1788 county valuation and the Land Tax Rolls of 1811 lists ‘Mowmaw, or Millmae, commonly called Lees’, valued at £52 (the name is probably related to ‘Wester and East Moormaw’, an old name for West and East Lees; see also Moormaw).

Milmoe’s (miln-mo) n. former pawnshop in the Sandbed, remembered in the song ‘Kinly Stick’ – ‘… Streicht to the pawnshop that’s kept by Milmoe’ [WE].

miln (miln) n., arch. a mill, usually for grinding corn, and typically water-powered. As part of the feudal system every barony or estate would have at least one mill, with the tenants kept in a system of multure, i.e. they were obliged to have their corn and other grains ground there, and would pay part of the grains as a tax. Burghs and abbey would have their own separate mills. Hawick is known to have had one since at least 1412 – ‘Heir lyis ane honest man, Johne Deonis, qyha vas tenant kyndlie of Havik Miln’ (from Old English, surviving longer in place names than in speech).

Milne (miln) n. Alexander ‘Wat’ (16th C.) tenant of Sir Walter Scott of HowPasley in the lands of Outersideig in 1569. Sir Walter acted as cautioner for his tenants at a meeting in Hawick, assuring that they would obey the laws of the Lord Regent. His surname is recorded as ‘Myln’. Henry ‘Henry the Hadda Man’ (19th C.) fishmonger at 5 High Street.

Milne-Home (miln-hem) n. John Hepburn (1876–1963) factor for the Buccleuch estates from about 1920. He married Mary Elliot.
Milsingtonhaugh

covered 1259 acres and was bounded by Borthwickbrae, the Borthwick Water, Hoscote, Henwoodie common and Bellendean. James Leithead was recorded there in 1717–25, John Dickson in 1720, John Wight in 1725, James Elliot in 1756, Andrew Goodfellow in 1764 and William Scott in 1797. In the 1788 county valuation the lands here, along with Girnwood, were valued at £1305 13s 4d. From 1831 Milsington was tenanted by Charles Scott, cousin of Sir Walter the writer. In 1841 there were about 20 people living around the farm estate, as well as those in the principal farmhouse. The main road through the Borthwick used to pass directly in front of the farmhouse. A side road leaves from near here to join the Teviot valley at Branhomle Bridgegden. A massive Roman bronze leg of a man on horseback was found there in 1820, possibly part of the loot from some southern town, and now in the Scottish National Museum; collected with it was a brass base (with an inscribed ‘L’) of what may have been a statue of Victory, perhaps also found at Milsington. There is a local tradition of buried treasure at Pot Syke, which may be where these items were found (first recorded as ‘Milsallistoun’ in 1363, it was ‘Mylsintoun’ in 1451, ‘Milsaintoun’ in 1453, ‘Mylsintoune’ in 1492, ‘Mylsintoun’ in 1502, ‘Milsyntoun’ in 1553/4, ‘Mylsintoun’ in 1574 and 1640, ‘Milsingtonwe’ in 1652, ‘Milsingtonwe’ in 1718, ‘Milsingtonwe’ in 1764 and 1771 and ‘Milsintoun’ in 1717; there are many other spelling variants, including ‘Milsintoume’, etc.; it is ‘Milsingtonwe’ on a 1650 parish map and Blaen’s 1654 map shows it as ‘N. Milsintoun’ and ‘O. Milsintoun’, while Jenner & Hollar’s c. 1644 map and Vischer’s 1689 map of Scotland have it as ‘Milsintoun’ and Adair’s c. 1688 manuscript appears to show ‘Wilsington’; the name probably derives from ‘Macelsuithan’s farm’, where ‘Macelsuithan’ or ‘Myslan’ is a personal name introduced by the Norwegians from Ireland).

Milsingtonhaugh  (mil-sin-toon-hawch)  n. former farmstead near Milsington. It is recorded in 1790 as ‘Milsington Haugh’, when John Anderson paid the cart tax there and in 1797, when Robert Oliver was farmer there. Walter Scott was living there in at least 1793–95.

Milsington Hill  (mil-sing-tin-hil, mil-sin-toon-hil)  n. hill just to the west of Milsington farm in the Borthwick valley. It has two peaks, both reaching to 263 m. The western one contains the remains of an earthwork, about 85 m across; it consists of a bank and ditch, best preserved at the south corner.

Milsingtonshankfit  (mil-sin-tin-shawngk-fi)  n. former cottage in the Borthwick valley, situated at the beginning of the road to Milsington farmhouse (it is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Milsingtonshiel  (mil-sin-toon-sheel)  n. former farmstead near Milsington. It may be the same place sometimes called ‘Whaupshaw’. James Hinton was there in at least 1716–22, James Scott in 1717–23, Walter Henderson in 1726, Walter Scott in 1741 and Thomas Rae in 1762–71. Farm worker John Pringle and family were there in 1841 (it is ‘Milsingtonsheils’ in 1716, ‘Milsingtonsheils’ in 1721, ‘Milsington Sheil’ in 1741 and ‘Milsingtontownshiel’ in 1771).

Milestone Path  (mil-, mil-stan-pawth)  n. hill between Ashybank and Honeyburn on the A698, and also the name for a field and wood there. This was presumably once part of the original route between Hawick and Denholm, before the lower route was built for coaches. The oak wood was partly removed when the course of the main road was changed in the late 20th century, but was replanted.

Milton  (mil-tin)  n. possibly a former alternative name for Rawflat.

Milton  (mil-tin)  n. village in Dumfries & Galloway (actually one of several with this name) off the A74 south of Moffat, built on the site of a large Roman fort established around the year 80. There is a possible military road from there to the fort near Aikwood Tower.

Minti (min’i, min-ti) n. Minto, a village, former estate and parish about 6 miles north-east of Hawick and 1½ miles north of Denholm. In 1383 it was included in a lists of lands from which rentals were paid to the Ward of Roxburgh Castle. The village was burned in a raid about 1490. It was burned again by the Earl of Hertford’s men in 1545, including ‘Mynto Crag, Mynto town, Mynto place, West Mynto, the Crag End’. Some of the old village can still be made out, but the present one was laid out by William Playfair for the 2nd Earl of Minto in the early 19th century. The move was arranged so that the village could not be directly seen from Minto House. It contains the William Playfair 1830/1 gothic-style church, renovated in 1934, as well as the Thomas Clapperton War Memorial. Nearby is the demolished Minto House, with grounds containing the remains of an old Norman Church with an ancient burial ground, as well as an 18-hole golf course. The estate was owned by the Turnbulls from at least 1329, although at least part of the barony was granted to the Stewarts of Jedworth in 1390, and then disputed in the next century. James Langlands appears to have held half the rights to the markets there in 1476. In 1501 William Turnbull had a sasine for 2/3 of the lands, with Alexander Stewart having a sasine for the other 1/3. The half baronies were held by the Turnbulls and Stewarts until the early 17th century. John Turnbull of Minto was a significant leader of the Turnbulls in the late 16th century. In 1643 the lands owned by Turnbull of Minto were valued at £2006 13s 4d and consisted of 'Minto, town, mains, mill, kaims, with teinds and pertinents'; there was also £102 of land owned by Turnbull of Tofts and the lands of Craigend and Deanfoot, owned by Gilbert Elliott and valued at £660. In 1678 the estate of the Laird of Minto was valued at £2008 13s 4d. Craigend and Deanfoot were sold to Gilbert Elliott of Craigend in about 1640 and later combined with part of Minto, which continued to pass to Eliottis until sold by Gilbert Elliott in 1687. The rest of the lands passed to the Scotts of Harwood in 1673, then Walter Riddell from Edinburgh in 1676, briefly Thomas Rutherford and eventually the Scotts of Harden in 1691, with Gideon Scott of Highchester having a confirming charter for the Barony in 1695. At this time the village became a Burgh of Barony, and the existing Common is also mentioned. Markets were to be held on Wednesdays and fairs on 14th June and 14th November. The lands were sold to the Eliotts in 1703. In 1707 the whole Barony was valued at £2768 13s 4d. In the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls the residents listed were Robert Brown, John Dickson, William Turnbull (smith), James Oliver and (another) William Turnbull. In 1811 the 'Barony (being the whole of the old Parish) of Minto' was valued at about £2800; the full Parish at that time was valued at £5163. An ancient bronze axe was found nearby about 1888 and is now in the National Museum of Scotland. A spindle whorl from here is in Hawick Museum. Note that there are now several Mintos elsewhere in the world, all ultimately deriving from this small area (but many via the Earls of Minto). The village also gave rise to a surname – 'In lines of crystal shine the wandering rills Down the green slopes of Minto’s sun-bright hills' [JL] (the name probably derives from the Old Welsh for a hill, plus 'how' for a hollow, or Old English 'holm', also meaning hill; it is recorded from very early times, with the 'd' changing to a 't' by 1150, when it is 'Munetov' and 1166, when it is 'Minethov'; it is thereafter 'Minthov', etc., with the middle 'h' disappearing by the end of the 14th century; it was formerly often written 'Mynto'; it is 'Mynetowe' in 1296, 'Myntehowe' in 1380, 'Mentov' in 1383, 'Mynotou' and 'Mynotow' in 1390, 'Mintow' in c.1400, 'Mynow' in 1461, 'Mynotto' in 1491/2, 'mynto' in 1493, 'Myneto' in 1501 and 'Mynto' in 1508, 1511, 1516, 1528, 1535, 1548, 1553/4 and 1576; 'Mintotour', 'Mintocraig' and 'Minto K.' are marked on Blaeu's 1654 map).
a tenement in 1541 to his younger son John and another tenement in favour of his 2nd son James in 1545. He may be the David ‘elder’ who was involved in a transaction with David, smith, in 1541. He is probably the deceased David whose son John inherited his property in Selkirk in 1542/3. David (15th/16th C.) smith recorded in Selkirk in 1541. He was son and heir of the deceased James. David (17th C.) resident at Doecluech according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. David (17th/18th C.) carrier in Hawick. He is probably the ‘Dauied Mintoe’ recorded in the Hawick Town Book of 1731; he was paid for 3 lod of claye for the well, 5s. 6d. Scots’. He was recorded as a carrier when he witnessed baptisms for Walter Scott in Crumhaugh in 1708, for wright John Pringle in 1709, for wright John Pringle in 1716, and for ‘Tenent in Hawick’ David Wilson in 1721. He married Janet Glendinning and their children included: Margaret (b.1691), who probably married William Riddell in 1714; John (b.1700); Walter (b.1701); Beatrix (b.1703); David (b.1706); Robert (b.1708); and David (again, b.1713). The witnesses in 1700 were Bailie Walter Graham and weaver James Wight, in 1706 were ‘vintner’ Francis Elliot and weaver Robert Wight, and in 1713 were Bailie (of the Regality) Walter Elliot and ex-Bailie Robert Ruescastle. David (17th/18th C.) recorded in a bond in Selkirk in 1721 with Walter. He is also recorded in Selkirk in 1726, when he was paid for building bridges, renovating the mill dam and other construction work. In 1727 he was paid for working on the school in Selkirk, in 1730 for further wright work, in 1745 for mason work, in 1749 for work on bridges, in 1752 for work on the school and well, in 1753 for work on the Town House and for further work in 1761. David (18th C.) responsible for dealing with (i.e. moving on) crippled beggars for the Hawick Kirk Session in the early-to-mid 1700s. He could be the David, married to Janet Glendinning, whose son Walter was born in 1701. David (18th C.) tenant in Fairnilee Bridgend. In 1763 he represented some residents of Midlem in a case in Selkirk. Perhaps the same David is recorded in a receipt in Selkirk in 1758. Francis (17th/18th C.) thatcher in Selkirk, recorded in 1708. Perhaps the same Francis was a wright recorded in Selkirk (along with John) in 1727 and recorded in a receipt in 1732. Francis (18th C.) wright in Selkirk. He was paid in 1762 for supplying timber for the Corn Mill in Selkirk and had a complaint against him in 1774. Gavin (b.1841) born in Wilton Parish, son of William and Rebecca Pow. He was a blacksmith in Ashkirk, later moving to the Carlisle area. In 1861 he was at Blacklee, Hobkirk, working with blacksmith William Pow. In 1866 he married Elizabeth Telfer in Ashkirk Parish. Their children included Margaret (b.1867), William (b.1869), James Simpson (b.1872), Andrew (b.1874), Rebecca (b.c.1880), Elizabeth (b.c.1885) and Charlotte (b.c.1885). George (17th C.) listed on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls for Hassendean Parish. He paid tax for a kiln, as well as a hearth, suggesting he was a tradesman of some sort. Although unclear, he may have been at Burnfoot in Wilton. He could be the George who married Isobel Lorraine in Ashkirk in 1688, and who had a son Thomas (b.1689) baptised in Ashkirk; the witnesses to the baptism were William Minto and Andrew Fletcher. It seems likely he was an ancestor of the George recorded in 1731. George (18th C.) mason in Hassendean, probably a descendant of the earlier George who lived in Hassendean. He was a direct ancestor of the later minister at Lilliesleaf of the same name and also of more than half of the Mintos living in Roxburghshire in the 19th century. In Minto Parish in 1731 he married Agnes (b.1712), daughter of Archibald Forrest of Huntlaw. Their children included: Archibald (b.1732), who was baptised in Minto Parish and was also a mason; Andrew (b.1734), baptised in Ancrum Parish; John (b.1737), who married Margaret Scott in 1764 and may have moved away from the Borders; and twins George and William (b.1740), who may have died in infancy. Their 4 younger children were baptised in Ancrum Parish. George (18th C.) tenant farmer at Langside. In 1752 he married Barbara, daughter of Mark Chisholme and Barbara Benet. He later lived at Rueltownhead, which had been owned by his in-laws. His children, baptised in Southdean Parish, included: Markie (b.1755), named after her grandfather, who married William Bell of Menslaws; and William (b.1756), who was an officer in the Royal Marines. George (18th C.) married Isabel Sharp in Bedrule Parish in 1782. He is probably different from the George who had children in Southdean Parish (although this is unclear). William (b.1794) and Margaret (b.1796), baptised in Bedrule Parish, were probably his children. George (b.1759) son of Andrew and Janet Oliver. He is probably the George who got married in Southdean Parish in 1787 (perhaps to Mary Moscrop). Probably the same George had the following children baptised in Southdean Parish: Betty (b.1788); Janet

John mentioned. paid for repair work in Selkirk in about 1745 and related to Thomas. Probably the same John was recorded in Selkirk in 1727, John Garet was baptised in Ashkirk in 1687. married to Isobel Sword, whose daughter Margaret for Andrew Raither. He is probably the John, Scott, for William Scott and Margaret Scott and others in 1694 for James Scott and Janet witnessed a baptism in 1690 for William Scott Essenside on the Hearth Tax roll in 1694. He and probably his son, while Janet may have been `younger' is also recorded in 1579, 1580 and 1581, He is probably the Burgess John who made a financial bond in Selkirk in 1580. John and 1581. He is probably the Burgess John who made a financial bond in Selkirk in 1580. John `younger' is also recorded in 1579, 1580 and 1581, and probably his son, while Janet may have been his daughter. John (17th C.) recorded in 1672 when his `arable lands and crofts' in Selkirk are mentioned. John (17th C.) resident at Easter Essenside on the Hearth Tax roll in 1694. He witnessed a baptism in 1690 for William Scott and others in 1694 for James Scott and Janet Scott, for William Scott and Margaret Scott and for Andrew Raither. He is probably the John, married to Isobel Sword, whose daughter Margaret was baptised in Ashkirk in 1687. John (17th/18th C.) wright recorded in Selkirk in 1727, along with Francis. They were probably both related to Thomas. Probably the same John was paid for repair work in Selkirk in about 1745 and for making up tables of weights in 1762 and 1767. He signed an admission to the Hammermen’s Incorporation in 1758. John (18th C.) recorded as master of the English School in Selkirk in at least 1752-72. Perhaps his widow may have been the ‘Bell Minto’ who wrote to the Burgh of Selkirk in 1784. John (b.c.1816) farmworker in Castleton. In 1841 he was an agricultural labourer at about 29 South Hermitage Street, but by 1851 was shepherd at Broadlie Burnfoot. He married Elizabeth (or ‘Betty’) Little and their children included Jean (b.c.1835), Elspeth (‘Eppy’, b.c.1837), William (b.c.1839), Margaret (b.c.1843) and Helen (b.c.1851). John (18th/19th C.) mason in Hawick. The death of his infant son is recorded in 1823. John Dalgleish (1826-1908) son of Andrew and Jane (or Janet) Dalgleish. In the 1850s he was one of 2 executors (along with Dr. Adam Elliot of Goldielands) for arranging the ‘Coutard Fund’, bequeathed by John and William Dalgleish to help the poor of Hobkirk Parish. Mrs. ?? (19th C.) of the East End Toll Bar, an early member of Allars Kirk. Robert (17th C.) resident of Minto Craigend who appears in the Hearth Tax records of 1694. Robert (18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. In 1738 he witnessed a baptism for fellow shoemaker William Riddell. Robert ‘My Lord Minto’ (d.1776) Hawick resident whose death is recorded with an unusual nickname. He could be the Robert who married Betty (or Agnes) Paterson and had children Janet (b.1736), Margaret (b.1739) and Agnes (b.1743). Alternatively he could be the Robert who married Margaret Scott in 1742 and whose children included Agnes (b.1743). Robert (b.1781) baptised in Southdean Parish, younger son of Archibald and Margaret Turnbull. He married Isabella Bicket and they had 3 children baptised in Bowden Parish: Janet (b.1805); Archibald (b.1806); and William Bicket (b.1812). Robert (19th C.) son of the farmer of Abbotrule Glebe. He became a ship’s steward, voyaging across the Atlantic, but he returned to help on the farm. He married Mary Telfer (daughter of the tenant of Roundabouts), and they lived at Kelso, Whittlee Toll, Dykeraw and Wolfelee Glen. He was a handyman on Wolfelee estate before being appointed gamekeeper and moving into the new lodge there. After retiring he moved to Mackside old Toll Bar. He lived to the age of about 80, as did his wife. Their children were George, Euphemia, Ellen, Mary and Jessie (who married Robert Tinlin). Roger (12th C.) witness to a charter of Ranulph de Soulis about 1150. He is recorded as ‘of Munetov’, along with Simon his brother. In 1166 he was ‘Roger de Munethov’ when he was witness to a grant by King William to Robert de Brus. Thomas (15th C.) tenant of Minto Common. In 1494/5 James Davidson in Raperlaw was charged with several crimes, including stealing a black ox from him. Thomas (15th/16th C.) Burgess of Selkirk. In 1527 he is recorded resigning his tenement of land to his wife Elizabeth Notman, as well as regining an annual rent of the tenement of David (who was surely a relative). The nearby tenement of David was also mentioned in 1527. In the same year he witnessed a document in Selkirk. He was owner of a rig of land in Selkirk in 1530/1. He is still recorded as owner of a tenement in 1531 and 1534. In 1532 he was ‘elder’ when he witnessed a sasine in Selkirk and also resigned a tenement to Thomas ‘younger’ (presumably his son). In 1535 he was one of the ‘landmaires’ chosen to ‘rid the boundis’ of Selkirk Common. In 1536 he resigned his tenement in Selkirk to his heir John; David was a witness, and hence probably related. His son and heir John is recorded in about 1541 assigning a yard in Selkirk. Thomas (d.bef. 1539) resident of Selkirk, perhaps son of the earlier Thomas. He is recorded in 1539 when a transaction involving tenants in Ashkirk and Falside was done in his house. Later in 1539 he was deceased when his wife Marion Minto and son James rented part of Ladyland to John Brydon. In 1543 his wife was recorded as Marion Burnet, with his son and heir being John and James another son. Thomas (16th C.) recorded representing someone in a court case in Selkirk in 1561. He is probably the Thomas ‘elder’ who was a Burgess of Selkirk in 1581 when he had an agreement involving his wife ‘Bigie’ Murray and son Thomas. He is probably also the Thomas who rig in Selkirk is mentioned in 1581. Thomas (16th C.) probably son of Thomas. He was recorded as ‘younger’ when he was a witness in Selkirk in 1580 and 1580/1. In 1581 he was warned to appear to receive redemption money at Selkirk Kirk. Also in 1581 he was involved in an agreement with his father Thomas, involving a loan and the transfer of land in Selkirk and another agreement over the purchase of a horse. He is probably the Burgess of Selkirk who witnessed another transaction in 1581. Thomas (17th/18th C.) wright in Selkirk. He is recorded in 1727 when he was paid for mending the Selkirk Tollbooth. Also in 1727, along with William Scott, he received money for ‘work at the milhs, bridges, mealmarket and house’ in Selkirk. Wrights Francis and John are also mentioned in 1727 and surely related. In 1729 he provided a bell for the top of Selkirk Schoolhouse. He was involved in a case for recovering a debt in 1737. In 1741 and 1742 he carried out other ‘builder work’ and ‘smithy work’ for the Burgh of Selkirk. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Minto Parish. His children included Janet (b.1726), William (b.1730), Agnes (b.1732), John (b.1734) and Thomas (b.1738). Thomas (19th C.) coach driver who was an early member of Alars Kirk. He is described as a ‘chaise driver’ in 1829, when one of his children died. Walter (17th C.) resident of Minto Parish who appears in the Hearth Tax records of 1694. He may be related to James, who is also listed. Walter (17th C.) listed at Highchesters on the Hearth Tax records of 1694. He paid tax for 3 hearths, suggesting he was either a significant tenant or a tradesman of some sort. Walter (17th/18th C.) recorded in Selkirk in 1719 when he and his son Andrew were charged with assault. Perhaps the same Walter was recorded in a bond in Selkirk in 1721 with David. William of Minto (15th C.) notary in 1431 for the ‘instrument’ transferring the lands of Heap between the Langlands and the Scotts. He is recorded as ‘Willelmus de Mynтов presbyter Glasguensis diocesis’. William (15th C.) resident of Minto. In 1493 Walter and Adam Turnbull in Hornshole were able to ‘compone’ for several crimes, including the theft of a cow from him. He was probably related to John who was also ‘in mynto’ at the same time. William (18th C.) resident of Minto Parish. He married Agnes Scott in 1726 and his son William was baptised in 1727. Lt.-Col. William (1756–1827) born at Ruletownhead, son of George and Barbara Chisholme, he was christened in Southdean Parish. He served in the Royal Marine Artillery. Joining as a Lieutenant in 1779, he became Captain in 1796 and Major in 1801. He was wounded 3 separate times, once in 1783 while fighting the French frigate Sybille on board the British Magicienne, and another time in 1801 when in a battalion attached to the Army at Aboukir in Egypt. He later served in the Royal Marines Artillery and retired in 1826. In 1812 he married Grace Little, but they had no children. William (b.1788) born in Southdean Parish, son of Andrew and Betty ‘Boal’. He was a mason living at Forkins in the 1841 to 1861 censuses. In 1815 he married Janet Oliver (from Castleton) and their children included: George (b.1819); Betty (b.1822); Jessy (b.1824); John (b.1827); Helen (b.1829);

Archibald (b.1831); Robert (b.1833); Margaret (b.1835); Peter (b.1837); Agnes (b.1840); and James (b.1840). Andrew (b.1817), who worked at Weens and was ploughman at Cleughhead Cottages, was probably also his son. William (b.c.1801) born in Southdean Parish, he was a labourer living at Doorpool in 1841, Birneyknowe in 1851 and Cleughhead Cottages in 1861. He was surely related to the name of the same name, who was his near neighbour, as well as Andrew, who also lived at Cleughhead. His wife was Mary and their children included Margaret, Agnes, Archibald, James, Robert Robina and Janet. He was already widowed by 1861. He may be the William, son of Agnes (or Nanny), baptised in Southdean Parish in 1802. William (b.1812) born in Castleton, son of William and Margaret Elliot. In 1841 and 1851 he was a labourer living at Borthaugh Cottages. In 1861 he was ‘General Servant Ploughman’, living at Highchester Cottage in Robertson Parish. He married Rebecca Pow and their children included: William (b.1835); Andrew (b.1838); Gavin (b.1841); Mary (b.1843); William Bruce (b.c.1845); George (b.1847); Margaret (b.1850); and James O. (b.1853). William (b.c.1815) born in Southdean Parish, he was a farm labourer. In 1851 he was visiting William Scott, farm servant at Silverbuthall. William (b.1834/5) from Langholm, he was blacksmith at Hewsbridge in Castleton Parish in 1861. He was recorded as resident at Steele Road in 1868. His wife was Jessie. William (19th C.) elder of Newcastleon U.P. Kirk in the latter part of the 19th century. William (19th/20th C.) proprietor of a cab business on Oliver Crescent around 1900. He married Ellen, daughter of James Grieve, tailor at Boucherse Bridge (formerly written ‘Mintoe’ and other variants).

Minti Bank (min’-i-bangk) n. former name for lands in Minto Parish that were part of Deanfoot. It probably corresponds to the place labelled ‘Deanfoot Bank’ on modern maps (it is ‘Mintobank’ in 1780).

Minti Brae (min’-i-brä) n. name sometimes used for the road north of Denholm leading to Minto, particularly the part across the river. There was a saw mill here in the 19th century.

Minti Cleuchheid (min’-i-kloo-ch-beed) n. Minto Cleuchhead, farmstead recorded in the late 17th and early 18th centuries when it was farmed by the Turnbulls. Stepeh Turnbull was there in 1692. The house there was a home of the Earl of Minto’s family in the 20th century (also written ‘Cleughhead’ etc.).

Minti Craefit (min’-i-kraw-fi’) n. Minto Craefoot, former name for an area at the foot of the Crags. A story is told (in the 1820 Edinburgh Magazine and repeated in 1914 in ‘Highways and Byways in the Border’) of a mother from here having her infant swapped for a changeling by the fairies. The minister of Bedrule (Rev. Borland) was called and administered a brew of boiled foxgloves (i.e. digitalis!) to the infant, and locked it in a barn for the night, after which it apparently returned to be ‘as healthy and cheerful as it formerly was’.

Minti Crags (min’-i-krawggz) n. Minto Crags, a prominent rocky outcrop overlooking the Teviot valley, just north-east of Minto village. The crags can be seen in a sketch of 1790, before the plantations of the 1st Earl of Minto covered them. They reach 224 m (729 ft) and have Fatlips Castle perched on the steep side, and Barnhills Bed below. Additionally there is some evidence for a fort in the region to the north and northeast of Fatlips; the ramparts were probably built to take advantage of the natural rock outcrops, and have been partly obliterated by quarrelling and planting – ‘On Minto-crags the moon-beams glint, Where Barnhill hew’d his bed of flint’ [SWS], ‘... at the fer seide o Teiot’s floery vale, Mintih Craigs (haappet an rowed in their leafy maud) brenit raise ther skerrrs’ [ECS] (also sometimes ‘Craigs’).

Minti Craig see min’-i-krag n. former fortified house at Minto. ‘Mynto Crag’ was burned by the Earl of Hertford’s men in 1545. In 1550 it is listed as the limit of the half of the Middle Marches to which Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme was appointed Warden. The farm there was known by the same name and owned by the Turnbulls in the 17th century. It may be the same as the place called ‘Minti Craigend’ and was formerly part of the farm of Minto Mill (it is labelled to the east of Minto Kirk, on Gordon’s c. 1650 map and Blaeu’s 1654 map; it is ‘Mynto Crage’ in 1550 and ‘the Cragie of Mynto’ in 1656).

Minti Craigend see min’-i-krag-end n. former name for a farmstead near Minto Crags, and also called simply Craigend. Note that the lands called ‘Minti Craig’ were probably adjacent, but distinct. Gilbert and William Johnstone, Simon Leitch, Margaret Ord and Thomas Young were there in 1502. Thomas Porteous, who was a pointed Warden. The farm there was known by the same name and owned by the Turnbulls in the 17th century. It may be the same as the place called ‘Minti Craigend’ and was formerly part of the farm of Minto Mill (it is labelled to the east of Minto Kirk, on Gordon’s c. 1650 map and Blaeu’s 1654 map; it is ‘Mynto Crage’ in 1550 and ‘the Cragie of Mynto’ in 1656).
Minti Craigs

Walter Renwick, John Stavert, Thomas Wilkie and Robert Young were there in 1694

Minti East Ludge (min’-i-eest-luj) n. former lodge house for Minto estate, situated to the south of Minti Crags.

Minti Gairdens (min’-i-gär-dinz) n. road in Denholm off the Canongate, with private housing built in the 1970s.

Minti Glen (min’-i-glen) n. narrow valley around a stream passing from Minto to the Teviot, and also the name of a farm there. The glen was once laid out with walks, as part of the Minto estate and contained many planted trees, including some of the first larches to be imported into Scotland. The small lake near its head was artificially created in 1735 as part of the landscaping for Minto House.

Minti Golf Club (min’-i-golf-klub) n. golf club that runs a course near Minto village, established in 1928. It is the closest course other than the Vertish and is 5,393 yards, par 69.

Minti Hills (min’-i-hilz) n. Minto Hills, better known as the the Mintis, which are easily seen from points around Hawick. The southern peak reaches a height of 276 m (905 ft), with a triangulation pillar on top, while the northern hill is 253 m (837 ft) and topped by a cairn. This was also the name of a farm, which is recorded in 1779 being valued at £365 2d. In the Land Tax Rolls of about 1811 it was owned by Lord Minto and liferented by the late Lord Westhall – ‘While the Minto Hills in their verdure seen Seem reflecting the light frae their mantle green’ [TC], ‘Now, the ‘ern-horse’ rins roond ahint the Mintih Hills …’ [ECS] (the word ‘Minto’ probably derives from the Old Welsh for hill, ‘mynydd’ together with the Old English for hill, ‘hoh’, and hence ‘Minto Hills’ means the same thing thrice!).

Minti Hoose (min’-i-hoos) n. Minto House, former seat of the Elliots of Minto for 2 centuries. Existing from the 16th century, the house was charged for having 8 hearths in 1694, and 46 windows in 1748. It was substantially remodelled 1738–43 to a V-plan by William Adam, and essentially completed in 1809–14 by Archibald Elliot (from Ancrum). The ‘ Lands round Minto House’ were valued at £72 17s 6d in 1788 and in 1811 (with the garden and nursery, and several other pieces of land listed separately). The house was altered again in 1837 by William Playfair and terraced gardens were landscaped by Sir Robert Lorimer in the period 1894–1906. In the early 19th century the village was moved so that it could not be seen from the windows of the mansion; the exact choice of location for the house has been considered puzzling, and may have been related to this. It was 4 storeys in height and the top floor contained a sort of museum, showing artefacts related to the family. A watercolour sketch of the house exists from 1792. After being abandoned by the Elliot family, the house was used in the War effort, then rented to serve as the location of a private girl’s school, Craigmount School from 1952 until 1962. The school then purchased the house, but went into liquidation in 1966 and the house became derelict. In 1972 Viscount Melgund (later Earl of Minto) outbid another purchaser and immediately applied for permission to demolish this listed building, which was finally given by the County Council. It was partially demolished in 1973, becoming a roofless shell, and there followed lengthy debate about its fate. There was a plan in 1991 to dismantle the remaining walls and ship them to Japan, stone by stone, although costs proved prohibitive. Demolition re-started in 1992, including burning of internal timbers, despite being relisted category ‘A’, and there is now little left. This episode is sometimes referred to as the ‘Minto Debacle’, and influenced subsequent policies on preserving historical buildings in Scotland. The grounds contain the remains of a Norman church and burial enclosure, as well as the golf course. There were other buildings associated with the mansion and school, including a residential building, stable (later gymnasium), cottage (used for laundry) and dairy.

Minti Kames (min’-i-käms) n. Minto Kames, farm just north of the Minto Hills, adjacent to the old railway line. It is probably the ‘Place of Camys’ referred to in 1502, when Peter Turnbull and other Turnbull outlaws were accused of stealing oxen, cows, horses and mares from John Grahamslaw there. John Young ‘in the Cames’ in Minto Parish was hanged for murder in 1580. ‘Dand’ Davidson in ‘Kames’ is recorded in 1580/1. David Davidson ‘of the Kaims’ was recorded in 1601 when he was maimed in Jedburgh in a fight than was part of the feud between the Turnbulls of the Minto area and the Kers. ‘Kaines and Minto hills’ were owned by Scott of Harden and farmed by William Mather in the late 17th century. William Douglas was ‘late tenant’ in 1743. In 1779 the lands were part of the Minto estate, valued at £219 2d and liferented by Sir John Dalrymple. The farm was owned by Lord Minto according to the 1811 Land Tax Roll. John Thorburn was farmer there in 1797 when he had 12
Minti Kirk

Minti Kirk (min’-i-kirk) n. Minto Parish Church, the present one replacing a much earlier building, dating back to at least 1275. This is when the Rectory is listed on Bagimont’s Roll, with a value of 4 s. 4 d. The remains of this Norman Church, on the grounds of the Minto estate, contain a burial enclosure with some ancient stones and a set of iron neck-rings set in the doorway. There are many gravestones from the 17th and 18th centuries, and part of a child’s stone coffin, probably from the 13th or 14th century. ‘Serlo’ was parson there when he witnessed a grant by daughter of the Baron of Minto in the period 1230–60. William Woodburn may have been a Parson there who signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296. The church was mentioned in ratifications of other churches being connected to Melrose Abbey in 1315. There is a curious charter of Edward III in 1374, which states that the church was then in the diocese of Lincoln. The old church was demolished in 1831, and it is said that at that time a collection of about 400 small silver coins (from the 13th and 14th century) were discovered. The current Gothic-style church was constructed 1830–31 by William Playfair, and built on the road through the village. When built, there was a private gallery for the family of the Earl of Minto. It has a square tower, contains an organ presented by the Countess of Minto in 1880 and was renovated in 1934. The standard of the Blues and Royals Household Cavalry Regiment was laid there in 2004 in memory of Alexander Tweedie, the first Borderer to be killed in the Iraq conflict. Nearby is the Thomas Clapperton War Memorial. The Manse was built at the same time in a Tuscan villa style, and later called Melgund Glen (an earlier Manse was taxed for 18 windows in 1748). When the new church was built the old churchyard was converted into a garden on the Minto estate, much admired in the 19th century. The church was linked with Ancrum 1968–76 and then with Denholm and Bedrule in 1976. In 2003 it was linked, along with Denholm and Bedrule, into a wider area called Ruberslaw, which was then extended to include Hobkirk and Southdean. The oldest surviving communion token is a large lead oblong shape, bearing the letters ‘M.K.’ and probably from the 17th century. In 1838 the minister describes 2 artefacts founds nearby, which may date to the period of monastic connection: a large silver hoop, inscribed ‘IHESUS NA’ (possibly Jesus of Nazareth) and cross shapes; and an ancient copper seal inscribed ‘S ADEN PASTOREL’, along with a primitive lamb. A roll of the ministry is: Serlo, mid-13th C.; William Woodburn, 1296; John Blackadder, Rector in 1463; Patrick Mason, Rector in 1483; George Panter, Rector from 1512; Walter Stewart, Rector at least 1542–44; John Turnbull, Clerk 1559; David Turnbull, 1569; William McGowen, Parson 1574–76 (and perhaps to 1585); Edward Dickson, Reader 1576–78; Robert Hamilton, Reader 1579; Patrick Bishop 1589–90: John Mather 1601–02; James Johnstone 1607–08; Adam Scott 1608–12; Samuel Cockburn 1609–c.24; William Wishart, assistant 1613–18; William Maxwell 1625–51; James Ainslie 1652–62; Francis Scott 1664–78; James Kirkwood 1679–81; William Wishart 1682–90; James Ainslie 1690–1702; Walter Ainslie 1698–1700; John Ritchie 1703–44; George Kay, assistant 1741–43; George Bruce 1745–66; Thomas Somerville 1767–73; William Burn 1774–1826; David Aitken 1827–64; J.P. Macmorland 1865–93; Alexander Galloway 1878–1926; George O. Mackenzie 1927–35; John Pollock 1936–56; Ian B. MacCalman 1956–67; Peter B. Gunn 1968–76; James F. Falconer 1976–77; John T. Stuart 1978–84; Moira Herkes 1985–88; Thomas Preston 1989–92.

Minti Manse

Minti Manse (min’-i-mawns) n. former manse for the Parish of Minto. The Manse was taxed for having 5 hearths in 1694 and 18 windows in 1748. A new site for the Manse was selected in 1772 and the building erected in 1773 for the incoming minister, Rev. William Burn. Lady Minto referred to it as a ‘long, low, ugly building, which it was necessary to conceal as much as possible’, and hence it was surrounded by trees. A new Manse was built 1827–9 in a Tuscan villa style, at the same time as other improvements were made to.
Minti Mill (min’-i-mil) n. former farm near Minto, site of the local corn mill. William Brown was tenant there in 1684. This was an earlier name for lands that were included in 1779 along with Craigend in the part of Minto liferented to Sir John Stewart of Allanshaws. It is possible that this was essentially the same location as the earlier farm of Minto Mill. The 1811 Land Tax Rolls lists ‘Mill Banks’, ‘Mill Haugh’ and related lands lying near to Craigend.

Minti Muir Parks (min’-i-newr-pawrks) n. former name for a set of lands in Minto Parish. In 1779 they were liferented to Sir John Dalrymple when valued at £127 15s 1d. They were listed separately from Minto Muir and described as ‘four inclosures’ bounded by the farm of Minto Hills, the road from Hassendean to Troweihill, the road from Lilliesleaf to Jedburgh, the lands of Crowsmoss and Walrigpark, the road from Hawick to St. Boswell’s, the farm of Newlands and the lands of Hassendean. In 1811 the lands were owned by Lord Minto.

Minti North Ludge (min’-i-north-luj) n. former lodge house for Minto estate, situated at a turn in the road, between Hillend and Standhill. The adjacent plantation is called the North Lodge Strip. One roofed building, an unroofed building and an enclosure are marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map.

Minti Pairish (min’-i-pa-reesh) n. small parish of Minto, consisting of the villages of Minto and Hassendean and adjacent areas, being bordered by Lilliesleaf, Ancrum, Bedrule, Cavers and Wilton Parishes and part of Selkirkshire. It once coincided with the boundaries of the Barony of Minto, but later included a large part of the suppressed parish of Hassendean. The topography is dominated by the Minto Hills and Minto Crags. In 1643 the lands were valued at £2768 13s 4d and there were only 5 owners: John Turnbull, William Turnbull and Elizabeth Elliot for Minto; Turnbull of Tofts; and Gilbert Elliot for Craigend and Deanfoot. In 1649 the land and crops of the Parish were valued at about £2400. In 1663 the land tax on more than £2100 was paid by the Laird of Minto (probably still John Turnbull) and £660 by Gilbert Elliot. The value was the same in 1688, when the entire Parish was owned by 2 Gilbert Elliot, one being the Laird of Minto and the other the Laird of Craigend. In the mid-19th century the parish had a reputation for having no paupers, no toll-bars and no public houses. In 1838 the minister wrote that education was eroding the local language and that ‘it is not improbable, that, ere long, the ancient dialect of the district, which has several interesting peculiarities, may become, in a great measure, extinct.’ The existing parish registers begin in 1703, and are fairly complete for births. However, no register of deaths was kept until more recent times, and marriages were only recorded through the reading of the banns, with some significant gaps.

Minti Place (min’-i-plis) n. Minto Place, a street in the Wellogate on the opposite side of the street from Glebe View. It was built in 1875 by Hawick Working Men’s Building and Investment Company and named after Gilbert John Elliot-Murray-Kynynmound, 4th Earl of Minto. The upper houses were originally named Glebe Terrace until 1882.

Minti pump (min’-i-pump) n. water pump at the main road junction in Minto village. It dates from about 1860 and was restored in 2020.

the Minti Road (th-min’-röd) n. street in Denholm leading out of the village towards Minto, being part of the B6405.

the Mintis (tha-min’-iz, min-tiz) n. the Minto Hills, twin hills near Minto, a distinctive feature of the landscape north-east of Hawick. The hills are formed of igneous rocks, like many of the higher peaks in the area; it is believed that they are the eroded remains of a paired volcanic vent. The southern hill has a triangulation marker and reaches 276 m, the other reaches 253 m and is topped by a cairn. The summit of the southern hill has the faint remains of a former fort, about 120 m by 75 m in size, with an entrance on the west side. The cairn on the summit of the north hill is about 10 m in diameter, flat-topped, and has some large kerb-stones around it. Around the lower slopes of the hills are extensive remains of rig, terraces and other signs of earlier cultivation – ‘The scenes round Denholm, they are rich indeed; With Minto hills and crags what can compare? And Ruberslaw, whose high majestic head Towers upward, like the lark, till lost in air’ [TCh] (see also Minti Hills).

Minti Schuil (min’-i-skil) n. schoolhouse in Minto, serving the surrounding area. It was probably established in the early 17th century. John Davidson was recorded as schoolmaster there in 1616 and James Learmonth in 1624 and 1625. Walter Elliot was schoolmaster there in the 1720s and early 1730s. A Mr. Watson was master until about 1784 and George Scott from around then until the 1820s. They were followed by William
the Minti Stakes

Grant, who gave the school a strong reputation, with several students boarding there from outside the Parish. Mr. Wyile took over as schoolmaster about 1840 and John R. Hamilton was teacher in the 1850s and 60s. The teacher normally served as Clerk to the Heritors and Session Clerk for the Parish. In the early 19th century there was also a small school teaching younger children and instructing girls in sewing. The Borders Archive has School Board documents for 1873–1916, registers for 1915–63 and log books for 1874–1963.

the Minti Stakes (th-min’-i-stāks) n. former Friday Common Riding race, started at least as early as the 1880s.

the Minti Stane (th-min’-i-stān) n. inscribed stone on the Minto estate, coming from near the town of Malang in East Java, also called the Sangguran Stone. It was carved in the year 982, and carries a long inscription to the Javanese King Sri Maharaja Rakai Pangkaja Dyah Wawa Sri Wijaya-alokanamottungga. It was collected in 1812 by Sir Stamford Raffles and given as a gift to Lord Minto, who had it sent to his home in Scotland.

Minti Toon (min’-i-toon) n. former name for an area in Minto Parish, presumably around the old home farm of the Baron. It is listed among the lands of ‘Minto Townhead’ that were liferented by Rev. Robert Elliot from 1779.

Minti Toonheid (min’-i-toon-heed) n. farm at the northern end of Minto village. In the early 19th century it was farmed by the Turnbulls, with William Turnbull there in the 1860s. Robert Watson was farmer in the early 20th century. In 1779 Rev. William Elliot (brother of the Laird of Minto) was granted liferent of these lands. They are described as consisting of South Croft, North Croft, Quickands Park, Notman’s Shot, Langlands, Templecrofts, Howden, Whitfield, West South Croft, Minto Town and the green of Minto, ‘which pieces of ground were some time ago known by the name of Minto Townhead’. The lands were valued at £461 1s 10d. The boundaries of the lands were the Minto-to-Hawick road, Minto Glebe, the march ‘which runs through Howden syke’, the foot of Minto Hill, Hildends Park, Towledge Park, Cow Park and the lawn around Minto House.

Minti Toor (min’-i-toor, -tow-ur) n. another name for Fatlips Castle.

Mitchel (mi-chul) n. Hugh (18th/19th C.) wood merchant of Fisherton (Musselburgh), who was made an Honorary Burgess in 1813. He was probably the ‘Hugh Mitchell, Burntisland’ who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. James (17th/18th C.) tailor in Hawick. His unnamed child died in 1811. He is probably the same James who married Ann Murray in Wilton in 1805, and whose children included: Jean (b.1808); and Thomas (b.1809).

James (17th C.) resident of Ewes Parish. He married Jean Beattie and their children included: Janet (b.1756); Thomas (b.1758); Jean (b.1760); and James (b.1763). The witnesses in 1758 were Andrew Lamb and John Elliot. John (18th/19th C.) gardener at Liddel Bank in 1797, when he was working for William Oliver. Robert ‘Bob’ (b.1780/1) Hawick’s first milkman, operating from Southfield, formerly ostler of the Tower Hotel. On one famous occasion, in a snowstorm in 1831, he brought back the Carlisle mail on foot after abandoning his horse at Teviothead. Thomas (16th C.) one of the men who in 1530 swore that William Scott of Harden did not owe more than a merk to the deceased Stephen Lauder. William (17th/18th C.) baxter in Hawick. In 1721 he witnessed a baptism for merchant Andrew Turnbull. He could be the William who married Marion Laidlaw in Hawick in 1718. William (18th C.) resident of Denholm in 1780. Probably the same William was recorded as miller at Denholm Mill in 1785. His children, baptised in Cavers Parish, included William (b.1780) and James (b.1785) (also Mitchell).

Mitchell (mi-chul) n. Alexander (b.1828/9) born in Selkirk, he was a butcher on Silver Street. He is listed on Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1851 he was at about 4 Silver Street and in 1861 he was on the Round Close. Probably the same Alexander was President of the Common Riding (Race) Committee in 1856, when the Cornet elected by the Council refused to accept the offer. He married Margaret Laidlaw. Their children included: Isabella (b.c.1851); Violet (b.c.1853); William (b.1856); Agnes (b.1859); Margaret Anderson (b.1860); Alexander (b.1862); and Janet Laidlaw (b.1864). Andrew (19th C.) tailor on the Howeagate, listed in Slater’s 1852 directory. Charles (19th C.) listed as miller at New Mill on Slitrig in Slater’s 1852 directory. George (d.1957) Director of Pringle’s of Scotland from 1937. Henry (b.1825/6) son of tailor James, he himself was a tailor at 8 Howeagate. He was at 8 Howeagate in 1861 until at least 1881. He married Anne Millington and their children included Anne, Margaret, James, Thomas, Henry (b.1856), Robert (b.1858), Mary (b.1860), David (b.1864), Agnes (b.1863), George (b.1867), Agnes (again, b.1870) and George (again, b.1872). Henry (d.1960) joined Craig’s Aerated Waters in the 1920, becoming manager. In 1948 he put in an offer for the firm, but was outbid by the Scottish Co-operative Wholesale Society. However, he remained as manager until his death. His son, also Henry, then carried on as manager. Henry son of Henry. Like his father he worked for what had been Craig’s Aerated Waters at 22 Buccleuch Street. He took over as manager in 1960, but production of sodas ceased soon after. James (c.1785–1850) tailor on the High Street, listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories. He was listed as a member of Allars Kirk in 1829. He married Ann Murray (b.1788) in Wilton in 1805. In 1841 he was living on the High Street (about No. 12) with his wife and 3 children. He must have been deceased by 1851, when his wife was living with his son. His children were: Anna (b.c.1820); Henry (b.1825/6), a tailor on the Howeagate; and James (b.1830), who emigrated to Canada. He could be the James, son of William, born in Cavers Parish in 1785. James (18th/19th C.) listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory as running an eating house on the Howeagate. James (1830–1914) born in Hawick, son of High Street tailor James. He was employed as a weaver, and still living with his brother and mother on the Howeagate in 1851. He emigrated to Canada in 1854, arriving in Galt, then moving to Guelph before moving to Manitoba, settling in Arrow River in 1882. He homesteaded, also serving as ferryman across the Assiniboine River. He invented a new kind of lifeboat, patented in 1898 and exhibited in Europe in 1909 (when he also returned for a visit to Hawick). He married Janet Bell Waugh (1836–1920), who came from Moffat and they had several children. John (1810/11–81) real name of the man who inspired ‘Heather Jock’ in the song ‘Kinky Stick’. He was a native of Hexham, who came to Hawick at age 16;
it is said that he walked all the way in order to find work. He was well known in Town for the next 50 years. He was a wrestler and runner in his youth. He worked in the hosiery industry, but mainly made a living at poaching, as well as by gathering cresses, labouring, etc. He was also in the Grenadier Guards for a while, but deserted. In 1841 he was living at 4 Silver Street, then around Punch Bowl Close in 1851, and is listed as a railway labourer on Dickson Street. He was living at 9 Kirk Wynd in 1871. It seems that he became a wanderer, collecting moss and sleeping rough (hence his nickname). Adie Ingles suggests that he may have spent some time in Australia, and returned whistling the tune of ‘Click Go the Shears’, but there is no evidence to support this. In 1874 he was rescued from the Teviot ‘having been inbibing of his favourite beverage rather freely. In 1841 he married Elizabeth Lamb in Hawick. Their children included Adam, Janet, Benjamin, John and James. He died of tetanus in Jethart Jail – ‘Crane-like he watched the purling streams, And for a crust would gather bones; Of statute laws he’s broken more Than ere he broke of hard whin stones’ [TCh]. Peter (17th/18th C.) mason in Hawick. He witnessed baptisms in 1710 for carrier David Wilson and for younger carrier William Aitken. In 1705 in Edinburgh he married Agnes Guild, servant to merchant and Burgess of Edinburgh, David Weems; his name is recorded there as ‘Patrick’. Their children included: Anna (b.1706); James (b.1708); John (b.1708); and Jean (b.1712). The witnesses in 1706 were masons John Napier and John Turnbull, in 1708 were merchant Walter Weens and mason John Napier and in 1712 were masons John Turnbull and Nichol Turnbull. Rev. Robert (1826–93) from Auchterarder, he probably attended Edinburgh University. He came to Hawick as a guest preacher at the Evangelical Union (later Congregational) Church towards the end of 1849, a few weeks later accepted the ‘call’ to the church, and was inducted early in 1850. He preached 3 sermons every Sunday, as well as in the open air on street corners and around the countryside. He also carried out a vigorous correspondence about evangelism in the Hawick Advertiser. He turned down one call to another church, but left suddenly in 1864 to become assistant to Dr. Morrison at Dundas Street Church, Glasgow. He was later minister at Queen’s Park, Manchester, St. John’s Wood Terrace, Middlesex, Chorton-cum-Hardy, Lancashire, Elgin Brook, Hertfordshire and Nelson Street, Greenock. Robert (1848–1928) born in Kinross, Perthshire, he spent his early years in Gala, ran away from home at age 14 and was a glazier’s apprentice in Edinburgh. He began a glaziers business in Hawick in about 1873, and certainly by 1875: this would become the longest established glazing business in Scotland. He was a Councillor for North High Street Ward from 1884, was a Magistrate for 9 years, Provost 1896–1902, and returned to the Council 1919–23. He was also appointed Honorary Sheriff-Substitute of Roxburghshire. His Provostship saw the erection of the Public Library, re-laying of the pavements and the letting of the Haugh as a show-ground at the Common Riding. He was an early advocate for electric lighting, Chairman of the Hawick School Board and a Common Riding supporter. Liberal in politics, he was a Mason and an Orrock Church elder. His business on Oliver Crescent can be seen in a photograph from the early 1900s. The glazing business was continued by his son Alexander. He is buried in Wilton Cemetery (formerly ‘Mitchil’ etc.; see also Mitchell). Mitchellhill (mi-chul-hil) n. Alexander (18th C.) resident of Hawick who married Nancy Harkness. Their son Thomas was baptised in 1747. He may be the Alexander recorded as owner of 2 work horses, along with George, in Hawick on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He is probably the deceased Alexander whose son George died in 1822, aged 76. Alexander ‘Sandy’ (b.1771) son of George and Margaret Noble. He was a local character of the early 1800s, described as ‘the smuggler’, possibly the local labourer who died in 1850. A story is told about him and his father (or possibly an Alexander Mitchell, rather than Mitchellhill), resting in a hay-loft near the Carter Bar Toll. They hid their smuggled gin when they saw the excisemen coming, but then in the dark fought with each other, his father biting his leg, saying ‘A’ve left the marks o’ ma teeth on yin o’ their legs at ony rate!’ and him replying ‘It was me ye bate, faither! Was aw no guigame no te squeel?’ He is recorded on the Fore Raw 1841, along with wife Agnes. He married Agnes Scott and their children included George (b.1807) and Mary (d.1808). Andrew (1818–78) son of Thomas and Janet Thompson, he was born in Castleton Parish. He was an innkeeper in Newcastle. In 1851 he was innkeeper at about 45 North Hermitage Street. In 1861 he is recorded as ‘Proprietor of Houses’ at about 8 North Hermitage Street. He was on the Town Committee of Management. In 1857 he married Agnes, daughter of farmer William Kyle. Their children included: William (1859–1938), a mason; Thomas (b.1857); and Janet (1865–77). George (18th/19th C.) paid the cart tax roll in Hawick in 1791. He was listed in Hawick along with Alexander as owners of 2 work horses on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He may be the George who married Margaret Noble (who died in 1808) and whose children included: Alexander (b.1771); James (b.1773); and Mary (b.1777). He is probably the George, son of the deceased Alexander, who died in 1822, aged 76. Henry (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1690 he witnessed a baptism for Andrew Scott. He married Isabel Robson and their children included John (b.1689). He may have witnessed a baptism in 1691 for Robert. Henry (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Craikshiel in 1726 when his daughter Janet was baptised. Henry (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Woodburn in 1757. His children included: Margaret (b.1748); John (b.1750); Janet (b.1752); Janet (b.1754); Helen (b.1757); and William (b.1760). Henry (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He was at West Burnfoot in 1744. He married Margaret Thomson and their children included: Isabel (b.1744); William (b.1746); Thomas (b.1749); Henry (b.1750); Catherine (b.1753); and Helen (b.1755). J. (18th/19th C.) resident of Castle-ton who subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. He was probably closely related to Robert, who also subscribed. James (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1776 he married Margaret Scott, who was from Jedburgh Parish. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick. 2 unnamed children of his died in 1810. James (b.1809) son of Thomas and Janet Thomson. He was innkeeper of the Black Bull on North Hermitage Street in Newcastleton in 1851, living with his sister Jane and Brother Andrew. He was also listed there in 1852. Jane (b.1815) daughter of Thomas and Janet Thom-son and brother of James. She married William Nichol, but was already a widow by 1851. She had children Mary Anne, Thomas and Betty. She was living with her innkeeper brother on North Hermitage Street in Newcastleton in 1951, but by 1861 was innkeeper herself. Her inn was at about 45 North Hermitage Street, and called the Black Bull. Jenny (18th/19th C.) recorded in the story of the disputed Common Riding of 1809. A bucketful of material from her byre was used to pelt Captain Campbell and others of the ‘royalist’ party as they rode up the Loan. She was presumably the wife of a man with fields up the Loan. John (16th C.) notary in 1528 to an agreement between James Murray of Falahill and Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch, signed at Selkirk. Other witnesses included the Vicars of Selkirk and Hawick. Probably the same ‘sir John’ witnessed a document in 1530 for Robert Turnbull of Philiphaugh and was recorded as a chaplain when he witnessed a document related to an action against Patrick Murray of Falahill. He was recorded as ‘sir’ in 1532 when he held a temen-ent in Selkirk and in 1535 when he witnessed a document for Walter Scott of Roberton. He also witnessed an agreement in 1536 between Richard Bothwell, Parson of Ashkirk, and Simon Short-reed, Vicar of Ashkirk. In 1539 he was notary for an instrument among Scotts, relating to the illegitimacy of Thomas, son to Adam Scott. In 1540 he witnessed an agreement between Katherine Scott of Colifort and John Cranston of that Ilk. John (18th C.) resident at Penchrise. He probably married Janet Blaikie in Cavers Parish in 1734. His son John was baptised in 1734. Robert (17th C.) resident in Ashkirk Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. He mar-ried Margaret Allan and their children included Thomas (b.1691) and Robert (b.1696). The wit-nesses in 1691 were hard to read (perhaps Thomas and Henry Mitchellhill). Robert (d.bef. 1766) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Girn-wood in 1757 and Eilrig in 1764. His widow was recorded at Chisholne in 1766 when his last child was born posthumously. His children in-cluded Isobel (b.1755), William (b.1757), Robert (b.1759), Thomas (b.1761), James (b.1764) and John (b.1766). Robert (1782/3–1858) from Selkirk, he was a farmer and carter in New-castleton. He was probably the Mitchellhill listed as ‘R., Castle-ton’ who subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. He was listed as a carter in Newcastleton among heads of households in 1835–41. In 1841 and 1851 he was on Douglas Square. He emigrated to Galt, Ontario, where he died. He married Marg-aret Murray, who died in 1882, aged 94. Their children included: Thomas (1810/1–24); Robert (1818/9–42); Jane (b.1823/4); July; and Marg-aret (1830/1–43). Robert (b.1787/8) from Jed-burgh, he was an agricultural labourer in Den-holm in 1841. By 1851 he was listed as a pensioner at ‘Guide Post’ cottages at Spittal-on-Rule. His wife was Margaret and their children included: Mary (b.1831/2); Isabel (b.1834/5); Robert (b.c.1836); William (b.1837/8); and Mitchell’s Ford

Agnes (b.1840/1). Thomas (d. bef. 1841) proprietor of the Black Bull in Newcastle on Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories. He was also listed as an innkeeper in Newcastle among heads of households in 1835. He married Janet Thomson and their children included: James (b.1809); Mary (b.1811); William (b.c.1812), a farm labourer; Jane (b.1815), who married William Nichol and later ran the inn; and Andrew (b.c.1820), who was running the inn in 1841. William (17th/18th C.) recorded as servitor to William Ogilvie in Branxholme. In 1719 he was recorded as ‘workman in Branxholmstown’. He married ‘Marion’ Laird in Hawick in 1718; she was recorded as ‘servitrix to James Griebe in Todshawhaugh. Their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1720, with witnesses Robert Scott (tenant in Branxholme Town) and William Thomson (in Newmill). His wife is recorded as ‘Helen’ in the baptismal records for their children: Robert (b.1719); Thomas (b.1725); Jean (b.1727); Agnes (b.1729); and William (b.1739). The witnesses in 1719 were William Cunningham and ‘servant’ Walter Scott. William (18th/19th C.) working man from the Newmill area, who set up a Sunday School there along with James Ruickbie. He could be related to the earlier William from Branxholme Town. He is probably the William who witnessed a baptism in 1774 for James Easton from Branxholme and in 1773 and 1776 for Thomas Rutherford from Branxholme. He may be the William who married Helen Murray and whose children included Agnes (b.1775), Helen (b.1777) and Margaret Helen (b.1781). The witnesses in 1777 were the whole congregation. William (1859–1938) son of Andrew and Agnes Kyle, he was born in Castleton. He worked as a mason. He married Isabella Bell and their son William (1898–1918) died of wounds in France (also written ‘Mitchellhill’ and ‘Mitchellhill’; sometimes formerly recorded as just ‘Mitchell’).

pton, he graduated from Edinburgh University in 1605 and became minister at Hassendean in 1611. He was translated to Bathans (Yester) in 1613 and was a member of the Assembly in 1618. He married Eupham Borthwick (who died in 1627) and their children were John, Margaret, William and James. James (17th C.) joint tenant with David Goldie of the farms of Ettleton and Millhol in Liddesdale in 1632. Thomas (17th C.) listed on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls as resident of the lands of Castleton. Thomas (d.bef. 1696) probably farmer in the lower Borthwick valley. In 1696 his widow, a Riddell whose first name is not given, was renting half of the farm of Wiltonburn from the Duchess of Buccleuch. Her cautioner was Robert Scott (also farmer at Wiltonburn), suggesting a close relationship. Note that in 1694 1/3 of Wiltonburn was being rented by Bessie Scott, widow of James Riddell, who seems likely to have been related to his wife. William (17th C.) resident at Roan in Castleton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694 (also spelled ‘Michelsone’, ‘Mitchelson’ and ‘Mitchel-}

Mithag (mi-thag) n. Alan of Hartwoodburn (16th C.) recorded in 1539/40 when he had a commission from the Dean of Jedburgh regarding a slander brought against him about stealing and eating some sheep. The list of friends who would support him included Thomas Elliot, Mark Ker in Kippenlaw, William Scott in Hartwoodnyres, Walter Scott in Headshaw, Thomas Lauder, John Chisholme, David Todrig, Ninian Brydon and David Mithag. There were several other men with this same surname in Selkirk at that time (the pronunciation is unclear).

Modrell (mod-rel) n. Mungo (17th C.) recorded among the poor of Hassendean Parish in 1694, when he was at Hassendeanbank. His surname could be a transcription error for some more familiar name.

Moffat (mo-fi) n. town about 40 miles to the west of Hawick, in the south-eastern part of Dumfries & Galloway. Receiving Burgh of Barony status only in 1648, it developed as a market town on the main west-coast routes to Glasgow and Edinburgh. Centrepiece of the town is the magnificent Moffat Ram statue. The nearby sulphurous spring was popular for its purported health benefits in the 18th and 19th centuries. Population 2,342 (1991) – ‘’Tweem Moffat hills and lofty Cheviot’’ [JH].

Moffat (mo-fi) n. Adam (17th C.) piper who was rebuked by Ashkirk Session in 1638 for ‘pypping at bridals’. He was ordered to appear at the Kirk door wrapped in sheets, with bare feet and legs, and ‘effer the pepil wes in, to go to the place of repentance, and so to continue Sabbathlie inductor their wills’. Arthur (b.1803/4) from Tundergarth, he was farmer at Leabaugh Cottage in Castleton Parish. In 1861 he is recorded there as farmer of 6 acres. His wife was Janet and their children included Jane, Walter, Janet, Margaret, James and Helen Agnes. David (16th C.) recorded in Synton in 1581 when he was witness to an agreement between Margaret, widow of William Scott of Burnfoot and her son William. George (18th C.) listed as footman at Synton in 1792, when he was working for Charles Riddell. George (18th/19th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. In 1789 he married Isabella Synton in 1792, when he was working for Char ime. James (15th/16th C.) recorded at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1502 when the Coroner, William Cranston, was fined for failing to arrest him. His name is given as ‘Jacobo moffet’ in Holydean or Nisbet. James (17th C.) leased part of the farm of Todshawhill from the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1693. James (1720/1–1779) son of James, from whom he took over as tenant of Howpasley farm. In 1744 he moved to Garwald in Dumfriesshire, rented from the Duke of Buccleuch. He also farmed at Meikleholm for a while. He married Margaret Borthwick (1732/3–1806). His children included: John (1772–1823), who took over as farmer at Garwald; William (1773–1847), who farmed at Mosspeoble and Craik; and Margaret (1762/3–1855), who married Rev. Dr. William Brown of Eskdalenuir, and died in Hawick. James (1811–76) elder son of William. He and his brother James helped their father farm at Craik, as well as Garwald over in Dumfriesshire. John (1677/8–1728) tenant at Howpasley. He was said to be descended from Thomas, who received a grant of lands in Meggat in the 14th century. He was recorded at Howpasley in the baptismal records of most of his children in Roberton Parish. He married Helen Borthwick (1677/8–1754). He was succeeded at Howpasley by his son James (1721–79, baptised in Roberton) and had 7 other children, including Janet, Mary and Euphemia (1708/9–97). Other children baptised in Roberton who were probably his include Margaret (b.1716), Elspeth (b.1718), Margaret (again, b.1721) and Bettie (b.1722). He was buried at Watcarrick Churchyard. John (1813–82) son of William. He helped his father and brother James farm at Craik and Garwald. He was still tenant farmer at Craik in the 1870s. He married Anne Laidlaw (d.1915) and their children included: William (1864–1932); James (d.1941), who married Janet Robina Brydon; and Anne (d.1853). John (1859) born at Old Hoprig, Westerkirk, in 1887 he married Elizabeth McNees. Their children included: John (b.1883), born in Canonbie; Mary (b.1889), born in Hawick; Peter (1890–1968), born at Branxholme Park; Janet (b.1892), born at Branxholme Park; and Margaret (b.1894), born in Hawick. His wife may be the Elizabeth McInnes who wrote the poem ‘‘A Legend of Hawick’’. Nicholas (d.1270) Archdeacon of Teviotdale in the period 1245–70, referred to as being ‘de Moffat’. He witnessed a charter for Soutra Hospital in 1255. He was bishop-elect of Glasgow twice, the first time (1259) travelling to Rome, but failing to be consecrated (probably because of political infighting among his travelling companions) and the second time (1268–70) because he died before consecration. He was buried at Tyningham, East Lothian. Robert (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Janet Tait, who was from Yarrow Parish. Their children included John (b.1654) and Janet (b.1656). The witnesses in 1656 were ‘John ...’ and ‘Robert ...’. Robert of Hermiston (18th C.) recorded as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1761. It is unclear where he came from, or how long he owned these local lands. William (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Craikhope in 1723, 1726, 1728 and 1736. His children included: Helen (b.1723); Helen (again, b.1726); Margaret (b.1728); Mary (b.1730); John (b.1736); and William (b.1741). William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Deanfoot

He became tenant at Mosspeebie in 1800 and then Craik in 1817. He was joint tenant there with his sons John and James from 1833. In addition he ran the farm at the death of his older brother John in 1823. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He married Jane Grieve. His sons James (1811–76) and John (1813–82) continued to farm after him. He also had 1 other son and 6 daughters. William (1864–1932) born at Craik farm, he took over Garwald when he reached the age of 21. He became known as a sheep judge, as well as a pursuer of country sports. In 1911 he bought the farm of Georgefield and Glendinning, and later purchased the farm of Garwald, which the family had long tenanted. He married Alison Gray and their children included: John (b.1892), who sold Georgefield and Glendinning in 1947; Mary; Anne; and Alexander Gray (b.1905), who sold Garwald in 1950 (also formerly ‘Moffet’).

Moffat Well (mo-řwel) n. sulphurous spring near Moffat, once believed to have healing powers. There are notices in Hawick’s 18th century parish records of disbursements to help sick people travel there. It was discovered in 1633 and access improved in 1758. It was a draw for visitors until the 1920s.

moggans (mo-ginz) n., pl., arch. the legs (noted by J. Jamieson).

Moinnet (moi-net) n. James (15th C.) witness to the charter of 1494 in which James of Kirkurd granted the lands of Galalaw to his son David. It is unclear whether his surname has a modern equivalent.

moistify (moi-stı-II) v., poet. to moisten – ‘Where ye will get a whisky soss To moistify your middle’ [JR].

mole-catcher (möl-kaw-chur) n., arch. someone earning their living from catching moles. From medieval times until the mid-20th century this was a common occupation in rural areas. There were at least a couple employed in Denholm alone around 1900.

mole-heid (möl-heed) n., arch. a mole-head, dolt, stupid person – ‘Dogsrabbit it, what’s keept ye, ye lazy molehead?’ [WNK], ‘Hae dune, ye molehead, Wilton Kirk’s comin’ over Teiot Brig’ [RM].

Moll (mol) n. horse owned by William Nixon, and rode by him when he was Cornet in 1813. It was also known as ‘Molly’. In later years it was often seen with Nixon’s groom, Willie Bulloch, who doted over it. The pair were painted together by Adam Brown.

Molle (mol, mow) n. former parish, forming what is now the southernmost part of Morebattle, which was united with Morebattle in the 17th century. It was owned by Eschina de Londonis (or de Molle) in the mid-12th century, and part of it was gifted to Kelso Abbey around 1190. Some of the lands there were also held by the Lovel family. The lands were also briefly owned by Adam of Rule, through his wife Johanna. They later passed to the Kers. Liulf, son of Uchtred, Lord of Mow, was a witness to the charter of about 1120 founding Selkirk Abbey. The Molle family married into the families of Avenel, Maleverer, de Lincoln, de Vesci, Scott and others, and tracing their lineage is difficult. The names Mow Hope, Mow Kirk (granted before 1152 to Kelso Abbey by Uchtred son of Liulf) and Mow Stell are lost, but it survives in Mowhaugh on the Bowmont Water. Members of the eponymous family crop up in local documents, e.g. ‘William Mow in Mow-maynis’ was part of inquest for lands in Rulewater in 1610 (also spelled ‘Mow’ and variants; the name probably comes from the Old Welsh ‘mael’ for ‘bare hill’, and is first recorded in the mid-12th century).

Molle (mol) n. Anselm (12th C.) formerly of Whiton, he gained part of the lands at Molle, granted in a charter during the reign of William I (probably 1170–90), which was witnessed by Roger, son of ‘John de Hawic’, as well as Robert of Wiltom and Adam of Ashkirk; this was one of the first mentions of anyone who came from Hawick. His son Richard was also a witness. In about 1193 he granted lands of Molle (or Mow) to Kelso Abbey and later had a dispute with Kelso Abbey over teinds at Molle. His relationship with Eschina is unclear (it may be that they held different parts of the lands of Molle and were unrelated). His name may also have been written ‘Ansold’. His wife was Agnes. His daughter Isolda married Alexander and had a part of Molle in the early 1200s, while his main heiress was Matilda, who married Richard de Lincoln. He was ancestor of the family of Mow of that ilk. Eschina also ‘Eschyne’ (12th/13th C.) daughter of Thomas de Londonis (who held the office of Doorward under William the Lion, and his ancestors took the name of Dorward) and Eschelyn (daughter of Uchtred de Molle), she was also known as ‘Eschina de Londonis’. In some accounts her father is given as Uchtred, son of Liulf. She was born in Roxburghshire and held lands at Huntlaw and Molle on the Bowmont Water. She may have first married Robert ‘de Croc’. She married Walter Fitz Alan, 1st High Steward of Scotland, who held ‘Mow’ about 1160, as well as lands at Hassendean and at Renfrew; he died in 1177. She had a charter of Molle in 1186. Around 1190 she gifted part of Molle to Kelso Abbey. She lastly married Henry ‘de Mow’, the 2 settling a dispute with Kelso Abbey about 1200 and still later is described as a widow. Alan, her son with Walter, succeeded to most of his father’s lands, as well as the office of Steward of Scotland. With Henry she had 4 daughters: Margaret (buried at Paisley Abbey, where she had given land); Eschina; Avicia (or Alicia), who probably married Richard Scott, ancestor of the Scotts of Buccleuch; and Cecilia, who married Simon Mauleverer and had a charter of Molle in about 1250. Isolda (13th C.) daughter of Anselm and younger sister of Matilda. She married Alexander (son of William, son of Edgar) and they had a daughter, Christina, who married Almer Scott of Mow, who may have been related to Richard Scott of Mow. Uchtred (12th C.) son of Liulf. He granted the Church of Molle (present day Morebattle) to Kelso Abbey in the mid-1100s. He perambulated the boundaries himself, along with Aldred, the Dean of Teviotdale. He may have been the father of Eschina (earlier written ‘de Molle’ and variants).

mollets (mo-lits) n., pl., arch. fantastic airs (noted by J. Jamieson; (cf. mollops).

molligrumphs (mo-lee-grumfs) n., arch. a fit of bad temper, suit fit – ‘She’s taen the molligrumphs’ [GW] (also nulligrumphs).
mollop (mo-llop) v., arch. to toss the head disdainfully, indulge in antics.

Monaghan (mo-nu-hin) n. Fr. James (1814/5–52) born in County Monaghan, Ireland, he served as Hawick’s first Catholic clergyman since before the Reformation, being the priest at S.S. Mary & David’s 1846–47. He held morning services every other Sunday, as well as lectures in the evening. He also preached in alternate weeks at a temporary chapel in St. Boswells, as well as ministering to Catholics in in Jedburgh and Kelso. This being a strain on his health, he was transferred to Dumfries and then Edinburgh, where he died suddenly.

Monanday (mu-nin-dá, mò-nin-dà) n., arch. Monday – ‘As Aw was gaun up Hawick Loan Yeh Monanday at morn …’ [JSB] (cf. the more modern Mondi; derived from the Anglo-Saxon).

Moncrieff (mon-kreef) n. David (1771–1834) youngest son of Annan minister William and Ann Hardie. His brother William Hardie was minister at Annan after their father. He was proprietor of properties in Moncrieff’s Close from 1812, and made an Honorary Burgess in 1818 for benevolence to the poor. His property is marked on Wood’s 1824 map at about No. 63 High Street. It is unclear what the family’s original connection was to Hawick, but it could possibly be through his mother Ann Hardie (who died in 1821, aged 86). It is said that he was a great benefactor of the poor and unfortunate, and gave many contributions anonymously. He also befriended and helped Tom Jenkins, offering money so he could continue bidding on a Greek dictionary in an auction in Hawick, and later writing him a letter of reference. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. His brother married Jean Laidlaw, who died at Falnash, and was probably daughter of Robert Laidlaw, farmer there; their daughter (his niece) Mary married Rev. Robert Shaw of Ewes (and earlier preacher at Teviotdale). He was described as having a round face, which was ruddy and cheerful, stout on person, always clad in black, with matching breeches and silk stockings, and carried a gold-headed cane. He appears to have married Helen Webster, and they had a daughter, Margaret. His curling stone (inscribed with his name) is in the Museum. John (d.1697), W.S. acted as agent to the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1696, for the rentals around Brauxholme. Margaret (1800) daughter of David, grand-daughter of Rev. William of Annan, and niece of Marion. She presented a cloth for the communion table at Hawick Free Kirk. She lived with her aunt at 63 High Street. Marion (1768–1862) daughter of Rev. William of Annan, and brother of David. She lived at 63 High Street. She was known as a charitable contributor to many causes in Hawick. One story is told of how she was asked to donate to some particular scheme, the organisation of which had taken 4 years, during which time she saved a pound note in her bible, so that she would be sure to have it on hand when the minister called. She was listed as ‘Miss Moncrieff’ among the local gentry in Pigot’s 1837 directory. She presented a communion token mold to the new Hawick Free Kirk in the early 1840s. Her niece Margaret is also recorded presenting a cloth for the communion table. She is probably the ‘Miss Marion’ involved in a bond with Robert Kerr Elliot of Harwood in 1845. In later age she and her niece were referred to as the ‘Misses Moncrieff’ (e.g. in Slater’s 1852 directory, when they are listed among the local gentry). She also lived for a while with her grand-nieces Anne Janet and Marion Shaw. She died in Hawick at the age of 94 – ‘There’s Bailie Nixon, merchant, The Miss Moncrieffs and a’, And if ye gang some farther east, Ye’ll come to Willie Ha’’ [DJG].

Moncrieff’s Close (mon-kriefs-klos) n. name in use for Tannage Close in the early 19th century, from a family who used to live at the top on the east side, at No. 63 High Street (to confuse matters, the 1858 Ordnance Survey map marks only the top of the street as Moncrieff’s Close, with the bottom labelled as Tannage Close).

Mondi (mun-di) n. Monday (also spelled ‘Mondhi’; cf. the older Monanday).

the Mondi (thu-mun-di) n. sometimes used to refer to the Monday of Common Riding Week. This day has the first of the morning Chases, with the horses leaving the Backdamgate at 6.30 a.m.

monimental (mo-nee-men-’al) adj., arch. monumental, drunk – ‘He was fair monimental’ [GW] (see monumental).

Monipennie (mu-nee-pe-nee) n. John (16th/17th C.) Scottish chronicler and compiler. His ‘Certeine matters concerning the realme of Scotland, composed together’ (c.1594, 1603) contained ‘The names of the principall clannes, and surnames of the borderers not landed’ (although both ‘landed’ and ‘not landed’ are included). This represents a valuable listing of the important men in each family at the end of the 16th century, and includes Olivers, Armstrongs, Elliots, Nixons, Crozier, Scotts, etc. He also lists ‘The names of the barons, lairds, and chiefe gentlemen in euerie sherifdome’. Although first published about 1594, the list appears to have been compiled somewhat earlier.

the Monkey (thu-mung-kee) n. nickname in use in the 19th century. It was used for the proprietor of the Ewe and Lamb, and perhaps for others before him.

the Monkeyman’s (thu-mung-kee-munz) n. former popular name for the hill where Weensgate Drive and Marmion Road are now located, once used by Hawick’s youth for sledding in the winter.

the Monkeys (thu-mung-kee) n. popular name for the Ewe and Lamb bar in Orrock Place.
This apparently arose from a former proprietor, Mr. Carruthers, father of the 1933 Cornet’s Lass, who was nicknamed ‘Monkey Carruthers’, and hence regularly spoke about ‘gaun ti the Monkey’s’.

Monkland (\textit{mungk-lind}) \textbf{n.} former name for the Monk’s Croft.

the Monk’s Croft (\textit{thu-mungks-kroft}) \textbf{n.} former farm adjacent to the farmhouse at Hassendeanbank. The rents belonged to Melrose Abbey, as part of the agreement going back to the 12th century. In the time of William the Lion it was restricted to the pasturage of 200 ewes, 16 oxen and 4 cows. It was listed in 1582 among lands for which Robert Elliot of Horsleyhill demanded the charters of his father from the widow of Sir Walter Ker of Cessford It was referred to as ‘a half merk land in Clarelaw called Mounkland’ in about 1620 when Walter Scott had a charter from the Commendator of Melrose. The land became part of Minto Parish when Hassendean was suppressed in 1690. The lands were referred to as ‘Monks meadow’ in the 1692 rental lists of the Duches of Buccleuch in Hassendean, when they were ‘evicted by the minister for his glebe’. William Elliot and John Elliot were there in 1694. It was farmed by the Dicksons of Hassendeanburn in the 18th century. The name presumably derives from an association with the monks of Melrose Abbey and the former tower nearby (also written ‘Monkscroft’; it was ‘Munkscroft’ in 1694; it is presumably the farm adjacent to Knowetownhead, labelled ‘Mountcroft’ on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Monk’s Flats (\textit{mungks-flawts}) \textbf{n.} former name for lands in Hassendean Parish, recorded as ‘Monkesflattes’ in a charter around the late 1220s. It is likely to be the same as the Monk’s Croft.

Monk’s Meadow (\textit{mungks-me-d\textsc{o}}) \textbf{n.} another name for Monk’s Croft, mentioned in 1692.

the Monk’s Toor (\textit{thu-mungks-toor, -tow\textsc{u}r}) \textbf{n.} the Monk’s Tower, former name for the tower at Hassendean, so called because of the local connection with Melrose Abbey. It was set up as a ‘hospital’ for pilgrims journeying to Melrose Abbey, perhaps as early as the reign of William I. The land was granted by Melrose Abbey to Sir Walter Scott of Branzholme and his wife Janet Beaton, as confirmed by royal charter in 1574. It is referred to at that time as ‘the tower called Hassendenetour or Monkstour’. A branch of Scotts lived there for at least the next several decades. In 1580 a transaction involving Robert Scott of Alton was witnessed there; it was then referred to as ‘the monk tour’. Scott of Satchells lists ‘John Scott of Monks-tower, brother to old William Scott of Altoun’ as one of the supporters of Buccleuch around the late 16th century. The 1634 service of heirs for Scott of Buccleuch lists the fortalice called ‘Hassenden-tour alias Monkstour’ among their possessions and it is so recorded in the service of heirs for Mary of Buccleuch in 1653 and for Anne in 1661. The ‘tower and fortalice called Hassendene tower, alias Monkstower’ is recorded in 1693 in the ratification of the charter to James Scott, Earl of Dalkeith, as heir to his mother. Its site is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map, by the road to the south of Hassendean farm.

Monk’s Pond (\textit{mungks-pond}) \textbf{n.} name for area between Bedrule and Ruecastle. Presumably there was once a pond there, perhaps with a connection to Jedburgh Abbey.

the Monk’s Well (\textit{thu-mungks-wel}) \textbf{n.} spring located near the old Wheel Kirk.

Monmouth (\textit{mon-mooth, -mowth}) \textbf{n.} familiar name for the Duke of Monmouth and Buccleuch, James Scott nee Crofts.

Monograptus riccartonensis (\textit{mo-nö-grap-tus-ri-kar-tin-en-sis}) \textbf{n.} species of graptolite fossil, identified by Charles Lapworth in 1876 in rocks from the ‘Riccarton Beds’ at Elliotfield. It is named for the locality of Riccarton.

monster (\textit{mon-stur}) \textbf{n.}, arch. an abnormally large child – ‘An overgrown or unnaturally large child is so called in Hawick. The word carries with it the impression of stupidity as well as hugeness’ [ECS].

Montagu-Douglas-Scott (\textit{mon-ta-gew-dug-lis-sko’}) \textbf{n.} \textbf{George William} (1866–1947) 3rd son of William Henry, 6th Duke of Buccleuch and younger brother of John Charles, the 7th Duke. He was Captain in the 10th Hussars and fought in the Boer War. He was Deputy Lieutenant of Roxburghshire and J.P. in Roxburghshire. In WWI he was Lieut.-Col. in the Border Horse Yeomanry. He received the O.B.E. in 1919. In 1903 he married Elizabeth Emily Manners, daughter of the Duke of Rutland. Their children were: Phylis Anne, Jeanetta Ruth; Marjorie Katherine; Lt.-Col. John Henry; and Lt.-Col. Claud Everard Walter. \textbf{Henry John} (1832–1905) 2nd son of Walter Francis, 5th Duke of Buccleuch. He was usually referred to as ‘Lord Henry’, and was created 1st Baron Montagu of Beaulieu. He was M.P. for Selkirkshire 1861–68 and for South Hampshire 1868–84. He was also Captain of the Midlothian Yeomanry and served as a Justice of the Peace in Roxburghshire. He was also Patron of the Liddesdale Curling Club. In 1865 he married Cecily Susan, 2nd daughter of John Stuart-Wortley-Mackenzie, 2nd Lord Wharncliffe. Their children were: John Walter Edward (b.1866), who married Cecil Victoria Constance Kerr, daughter of 9th Marquess of Lothian, and secondly Alice Pearl Crake; Robert Henry (b.1867), who married Alice Fisher; Rachel Cecily (b.1868), who married Henry William, Lord Forster; and James Francis (b.1873), who died young. John Douglas (1809-60) Lord Scott, son of Charles, 4th Duke and younger brother of Walter the 5th Duke of Buccleuch. He inherited the estate of Dunchurch near Rugby. He entered the Grenadier Guards in 1827, becoming Lieutenant and Captain in 1831 and retiring in 1833. He was also a member of the Jedforest Club. A Tory in politics, he was said to be dashing in appearance and having a greatcommand of language. He stood as a candidate in the 1832 post-Reform Act election in Roxburghshire, but was defeated by Capt. George Elliot. After voting himself in Hawick in 1832 he claimed he was attacked by a mob, who tried to pull him from his horse and was struck on the cheek by a rock; those on the other side of the story claimed that the incident started when his servant struck at the people around him on leaving the Tower Inn. He was also in Hawick for the 1835 election, when there were near riots around the Tower Knowe; in this election he defeated Capt. George Elliot of Minto by 76 votes (and there was much accusation of ‘faggot’ voters at the time). He remained M.P. until 1837, but thereafter was never induced to stand again. He was also known as a keen sportsman, yachtsman, angler and hunter. In 1836 he married Alicia Anne, elder daughter of John Spottiswoode; she composed the tune for ‘Annie Laurie’ as well as other songs, and died in 1900. He had no children. He is buried at Dunchurch, Warwickshire, where his wife designed a sun-dial in his memory. Verses were written about him standing in the 1832 election – ‘...And shall we then give the dear freedom we’ve won To vapourising bullies like booby Lord John?’

John Charles (1864–1935) 2nd son of William, the 6th Duke. He trained for the Navy, passing his entrance examination at the age of 12, and served for several years at sea, reaching the rank of Lieutenant. However, his naval career was cut short by the accidental death of his elder brother Walter Henry in 1886, when he became Earl of Dalkeith. He became the 7th Duke of Buccleuch on the death of his father in 1914. He was Conservative M.P. for Roxburghshire 1895–1906 while Earl of Dalkeith. He was Deputy Lieutenant of Roxburgh 1915–35 and also served as a J.P. for Selkirkshire and Roxburghshire. He was also Captain General of the Royal Company of Archers and Honorary Colonel in the Royal Artillery (Territorial Army). He was Lord Clerk Register for Scotland 1926–35. He joined the Jedforest Club in 1889. He was also Honorary President of the Hawick & Wilton Cricket Club and of Hawick R.F.C. He was made an Honorary Burgess in 1904 when the Library was opened, and was present at the unveiling of the Horse Monument in 1914. He also gave the Playing Fields to the Town in 1933. In 1893 he married Margaret Alice Bridgeman, 2nd daughter of Viscount Newport. Their children were: Margaret Ida, who married Adm. Sir Geoffrey Alan Brooke Hawkins; Walter John, who succeeded; Lt.-Col. William Walter, who married Rachel Douglas-Home, daughter of the 13th Earl of Home; Sybil Anne, who married Charles Bathurst Hele Phipps; Alice Christabel, who married Henry William Frederick Albert Windsor, 1st Duke of Gloucester (and son of George V) and lived to be 102; Mary Theresa, who married David George Brownlow Cecil, Marquess of Exeter; Angela Christine Rose, who married Vice-Adm. Sir Peter Dawnday; and George Francis John, who married Mary Wina Mannin Bishop. He died at Bowhill and was buried at Dalkeith. Richard Walter John (1954– ) 10th Duke of Buccleuch, succeeding on the death of his father in 2007. He long managed the Buccleuch estates as the Earl of Dalkeith. He was also Regimental Trustee of the K.O.S.B., and has been involved in several television and arts bodies. He married Lady Elizabeth Kerr (daughter of the Marquess of Lothian) and their children are: Walter; Lord Charles; and Lady Amabel. Walter Francis (1806–1884) 5th Duke of Buccleuch and 7th Duke of Queensberry, son of Charles Montagu-Scott. He was born at Dalkeith House and succeeded when he was 13. He was the Honorable Walter Francis Montagu until the death of his elder brother, then had the title of Lord Whitchester until his father became Duke after which he was the Earl of Dalkeith. He was a Commissioner of Selkirkshire (as the Earl of Dalkeith) in 1819. He succeeded to the Buccleuch titles on the death of his father in 1819. His guardian was his uncle, Lord Montagu, and he was sent to Eton to be educated, but had to leave due to ill-health. He later attended St. John’s College, Cambridge. He was made an Honorary Burgess when passing through Hawick.
Montagu-Douglas-Scott

for the first time in 1821. In 1822 he was host to George IV at Dalkeith House for a fortnight (and repeated this for Queen Victoria in 1842). Celebrations for his coming of age (in 1827) were somewhat tempered by the recent death of his grandmother, Duchess Elizabeth. He subscribed to 3 copies of Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. In 1827 there was a great celebration in Hawick, with an ox roasted at the Tower Knowe, distributed to all comers, along with 500 loaves and a hogshead of ale, with the Town illuminated along with fireworks and a beacon at Crumhaugh-hill. He was made Lord Lieutenant of Midlothian in 1828 and Roxburghshire in 1841. In 1829 he took his seat in the House of Lords as the Earl of Doncaster, and was a staunch Conservative in politics. However, in later years he changed his position and became a supporter of the repeal of the Corn Laws. He had Granton Harbour built in 1835. In 1838 he became Captain-General of the Royal Company of Archers. In 1839 there was a banquet held at Branxholme to celebrate his return from a long trip to Europe. A pavilion in the style of a baronial hall was erected on the Castle green (by Smith of Darnick), able to seat about 1,000 people; the chairman of the event was James Grieve of Branxholme Braes and above the chair was a buck’s head with the word ‘Bellen-den’ in gold lettering. Sometimes referred to as ‘the Good Duke Walter’, among his gifts to the town were Hawick Old Parish Church, the repair of St. Mary’s, St. Cuthbert’s Episcopal Church, parsonage and school, Buccleuch School, school-house and grounds, St. Mary’s School, the sites for the Corn Exchange, Cottage Hospital and the Industrial (Drumlanrig) School, and facilities for the Allan and Dod water works. He performed the turning on ceremonies for both the Allan and Dod supplies. He also remitted customs that were traditionally levied by the Baron, cancelled a debt owed to him by the Road Trust, leased land to the Hawick Working Men’s Building Society, gave fields to the Bowling and Cricket Clubs at minimal rent. He served as a Commissioner of Supply and Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. He became a Privy Councillor in 1842 and Lord Privy Seal in 1842–46 in Sir Robert Peel’s administration, and was also President of the Council, as well as being ‘Gold Stick’ in 2 coronations. He regularly attended the House of Lords, but seldom spoke. He was Colonel of the Edinburgh Militia, the ‘Duke’s Canaries’. He was also President of the Highland Agricultural Society, the Society of Antiquaries, the Architectural Society of Scotland and the British Association as well as Chancellor of Glasgow University, Vice-President of the Royal Institution for the Encouragement of the Fine Arts and leading member of the Board of Trustees for Manufactures. He was heavily involved in agricultural improvements, and headed the subscription list for enlarging Edinburgh university. He received honorary degrees from Glasgow, Edinburgh and Cambridge Universities. As a member of the Bannatyne Club he funded the publication of the ‘Chartulary of Melrose’ in 1837. In the 1850s he wrote to the tenants of his farms, urging them to preserve any monuments of antiquity. A dinner was held in his honour in Edinburgh in 1878 on the occasion of his jubilee as landlord, with an illuminated address being signed by 700 tenants. His statue stands in front of St. Giles Kirk in Edinburgh, with a decorated pedestal showing scenes from the history of his family. The Buccleuch Memorial was erected in his honour, Duke Street was named after him, and a portrait of him by Knighton Warren (commissioned by the Council) hangs in the Town Hall. In 1829 he married Lady Charlotte Anne Thynne, youngest daughter of Thomas, 2nd Marquis of Bath, who was Mistress of the Robes to Queen Victoria; she died in 1895, aged 84. Their children were: William Henry Walter (b.1831), who succeeded as 6th Duke; Henry John (b.1832); Walter Charles (b.1834), Captain of the 15th Hussars, who married Anna Maria, daughter of Sir William Edmund Cradock Hartopp; Francis Robert (b.1837), who died aged 2; Charles Thomas (b.1839), Admiral in the Royal Navy; Victoria Alexandrina (b.1844), who married the Marquess of Lothian and secondly married Bertram Talbot; Margaret Elizabeth (b.1846), who married Donald Cameron of Lochiel; and Mary Charlotte (b.1851), who married Walter Rodolph Trefusis. He died at Bowhill after being Duke for an unprecedented 65 years, and was buried at Dalkeith. Walter Francis John ‘Johnnie’ (1923–2007) 9th Duke of Buccleuch, son of Walter John, he attended Eton and served in the Navy during WWII. He then studied agriculture and forestry at Oxford and became Director of the Buccleuch Estates in 1949. He served as a Roxburghshire County Councillor 1958–60. He was Conservative M.P. for Edinburgh North, 1960–73, as Earl of Dalkeith. He was also Captain in the Royal Company of Archers, Lord Lieutenant of Roxburgh, Ettrick & Lauderdale, President of the Royal Highland and Agricultural Society for Scotland and served on committees for many benevolent organisations, including advocating for those with disabilities. In 1971 he injured his spine in a hunting accident, and was then confined to a wheelchair. In 1973 he succeeded to the Buccleuch titles on the death of his father. He was then in the House of Lords until the removal of hereditary peers in 1999. He was made a Knight of the Thistle in 1978, and changed his surname back to simply ‘Scott’. He married Jane McNeill of Colonsay in 1953 (she had been a famous model) and they had 4 children: Richard, who succeeded; Lord William, who married Hafize Berrin Torolsan; Lady Charlotte-Anne, who married Count Bernard de Castellane; and Lord Damian, who married Elizabeth Powis. He was the biggest landowner in the U.K. (about 400 square miles), and owned many great art treasures (including da Vinci’s ‘Madonna and the Yarnwinder’, stolen from Drumlanrig Castle in 2003). He died at Bowhill and his funeral was held at Melrose Abbey.
Montagu-Douglas-Scott

Walter Henry (1861–1886) eldest son of William Henry, 6th Duke of Buccleuch. He had the title Lord Eskdale. He died from a gun accident when stalking deer near Achnacarry, and so the Dukedom was eventually inherited by his younger brother John Charles.

Walter John (1894–1973) son of John Charles, he became the 8th Duke of Buccleuch in 1935. He was educated at Eton and Christ Church College, Oxford. He was a soldier, politician, farmer and banker, as well as Lord Steward of Her Majesty’s Household and Chancellor of the Order of the Thistle. He was Commanding Officer of the 4th Battalion K.O.S.B. 1923–30. He was M.P. for Roxburgh and Selkirk Counties 1929–35 (while Lord Dalkeith) and was made an Honorary Burgess of Hawick in 1933. He was also Lord Lieutenant for Roxburghshire from 1932 and Lieut.-Gen. of the Royal Company of Archers. He served as a Commissioner of Supply and Justic of the Peace in Roxburghshire. In 1901 he was made a Privy Councillor. He also opened the Museum in Wilton Lodge in 1910 and was presented with a golden key in commemoration of his recent golden wedding. In 1859 he married Louisa Jane Hamilton, 3rd daughter of James, Duke of Abercorn; she was Mistress of the Robes to Queen Victoria and Queen Alexandra. Their children were: Walter Henry, Lord Eskdale, who died in a shooting accident aged 25; John Charles, who succeeded; George William, Captain in the 10th Hussars, who married Elizabeth Emily Manners, youngest daughter of the Duke of Rutland; Henry Francis, Major in the Royal Scots, who died unmarried; Herbert Andrew, Captain in the Irish Guards, who planted the British flag at Pretoria, and married Marie Josephine, daughter of James Edwards; Francis George, Aide-de-Camp to the Viceroy of India and married Eileen Nina Sibell Elliot-Murray-Kynynmound, daughter of the 4th Earl of Minto; Katherine Mary, married Major Thomas Brand, eldest son of Viscount Hampden; and Constance Anne, who married Douglas Halyburton, son of the 1st Earl Cairns.

Lord William Walter (1896–1958) son of John Charles, the 7th Duke of Buccleuch and brother of Walter John, the 8th Duke. He was educated at Eton and Sandhurst. He was Captain in the 10th Hussars, received the Military Cross in 1919 and was Aide-de-Camp to the Governor-General of Canada 1925–26. He was also admitted to the Royal Company of Archers. He was Conservative M.P. for Roxburghshire & Selkirkshire 1935–1950, losing to Liberal A.J.F. MacDonald. In the 1930s he was connected with Sir Oswald Mosley’s ‘January Club’ and British Union of Fascists. He is also referred to as Lt. Col. Scott. He married Lady Rachel Douglas-Home, daughter of the 13th Earl of Home and they had 5 children: Margaret Elizabeth; Frances Henrietta; Rosemary Alice; Jean Louise; and Walter William. He lived at Eildon Hall, St. Boswells. (the name is also sometimes un-hyphenated and occasionally spelled ‘Montague’).

Montagu-Scott (mon-ta-gew-sko’) n. Charles William Henry (1772–1819) eldest surviving son of Henry Scott of Buccleuch and Lady Elizabeth Monatagu. He was called the Earl of Dalkeith during his father’s lifetime. Educated at Eton, he was an English M.P. for Marlborough, Ludgershall, St. Michaels and Marlborough (again) in the years 1793–1807. He was called to the House of Lords as Baron Tynedale in 1807 and became the 4th Duke of Buccleuch and 6th of Queensberry in 1812. He was Lord Lieutenant of Selkirkshire 1794–1819 and Dumfriesshire 1810–19, as well as Colonel Commandant of the Dumfries Militia. He joined the Jedforest Club in 1813. He was also President of the Pitt Club of Scotland, Governor of the Royal Bank and President of the Highland Society. He provided assistance to both Sir Walter Scott and the Ettrick Shepherd (to whom he gave free tenure of the farm of Altrieve), and had the ‘Lay of the Last Minstrel’ dedicated to him. He was on the subscription list for Jamieson’s Scots dictionary in 1808. He was present at the ‘Carterhaugh Baa’ in 1815. He repaired Drumlanrig Castle and generally improved the Queensberry estates. However, Robert Wilson describes how he was reluctant to grant feus for woollen mill development on his property around Hawick. It is said that he led a relatively quiet and religious life, managing his estates rather than spending time in London. In 1795 he married Harriet Katherine Townshend, 4th daughter of Thomas, Viscount Sydney; she died in 1814. He was succeeded by his eldest son Walter Francis (1806–84), when the surname Montagu-Douglas-Scott began to be used. His other children were: Anne Elizabeth (1796–1844), who died unmarried, aged 47; George Henry (1798–1808), Lord Scott, who died of measles while a schoolboy at Eton; Charlotte Albinia (1799–1828), who married James Thomas, 4th Earl of Courtown, and died in Rome; Isabella Mary (1800–29), who married Peregrine Francis Cost; Katherine Frances (1803–14), who died aged 10; John Douglas (1809–60), who was M.P. for Roxburghshire; Margaret Harriet (1811–46), who married Charles Viscount Marsham, who was later Earl of Romney; and Harriet Janet Sarah (1814–70), who married Rev. Edward Moore, Honorary Canon of Canterbury Cathedral. In ill-health for at least 6 years, he died in Lisbon, where he had gone for his health, and is buried at Warkton. Henry James see Henry James Scott (the surnames are confusing during this generation).

Montagu-Scottion (mon-ta-gew-stree’) n. street in Newcastle on North Hermitage Street, opposite Whitchester Street.

Montbenger (mont-beng-gur) n. lands in the upper Yarrow valley, near where the B709 meets the A708. These were Crown lands in the latter part of the 15th century, held by the Crichtons of Cranston Riddell in the early 16th century. It was owned by the Scotts of Buccleuch in the 16th and 17th centuries. William Elliot of Horsleyhill claimed he was owed ‘mails’ for his steadying at the Easter part there in 1575/6. There were Scotts there in the 17th century (also written ‘Mountbenger’; it is ‘Mountbergeris’ in 1456, ‘Montbengear’ in 1468, ‘Monbrenearis’ in 1471, ‘Montberberis Estir et Westir’ in 1502, ‘Montbergar Wester’ and ‘Montbergar Eister’ in 1541, ‘Montbergeare, Estir and Westir’ in 1542, ‘Ester and Wester Montbenger’ in 1550, Montbernger Eistr’ in 1575/6, ‘Eister et Wester Montberringeris’ in 1634 and ‘Easter and Wester Montbengeris’ in 1663).

Monteath (mon-teeth) n. Miss (19th/20th C.) of St. Boswells. She rode on Common Riding Friday in 1914, perhaps the first woman to do this.

Monteath Mausoleum (mon-teeth-maw-zole-em) n. mausoleum just west of Lilliard’s Edge, built in a domed Byzantine style with decorations reminiscent of India. It is the tomb of Gen. Sir Thomas Monteath Douglas (of Stonebyres, Lanarkshire), who had a distinguished military career in the early 19th century, spending much of his time in India. It was designed by the Edinburgh architects Peddie & Kinnear and erected in 1864 by Harkness, stonemasons of Hawick, under the supervision of Sir Thomas himself (with the lions carved by Alex Pirnie). The general took up residence there in 1868.

Monteviot Hoose (mon-teev-yi’-hoos) n. stately home about 2 miles south of Jedburgh. The lands there were held by the Earl of Lothian in 1678. The mansion was created from a farm-house around 1740, with much later alteration.

The lands were described in 1788 as ‘Spittal, now called Mount Teviot’. The house was lived in by Adm. John Elliot, then the Kerrs, and is now the seat of the Marquess of Lothian. The landscaping of the estate is on a grand scale compared with the modest size of the house – ‘Here stands Mountiviot, opening to the eye A second paradise for rural sweets . . .’[JR] (the name first appears as ‘Teviotmount’ in 1665, although the area was formerly known as ‘Ancrum Spittal’).

Montgomery (mont-gu-mu-ree) n. George (18th C.) witnessed a baptism in Hawick for surgeon Walter Scott in 1731. George (b.1824/5) shoemaker in Hawick. In 1861 he was a boarder with Walter Ballantyne at 7 Back Row, and was employing 3 men. His wife was Elizabeth and their children included George, Elizabeth, John and Walter. George (d.1835) cooper of the Kirk Wynd, recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. James (1721–1803) born in Peeblesshire, he was appointed Sheriff there at age 27, then served as M.P. for Dumfriesshire and for Peeblesshire before becoming Solicitor General and then Lord Advocate. He was often called upon as a legal arbitrator, and in that role he was asked for his opinion on Hawick’s rights to the Common in 1765, driven by the Town’s intention to put the land to better use. His opinion at that time was that the Common belonged jointly to the successors to the partitaces named in the Charter of 1537 and ‘neither the Duke of Buccleuch as superior, nor the Burgesses who have neither houses nor lands, are entitled to any share in the division’. After the Council decided to let parts of the Common adjacent to the neighbouring lands, he was again asked his opinion in 1766. This time his opinion had changed somewhat and he suggested that the Duke’s tenants may have a right of pasturage on the Common, and he recommended formal arbitration to resolve the issue. He appears to have given no weight at all to the annual marking of the boundaries of the Common by the Burgesses of Hawick. He was in fact later the issuer of the decision to give 30% of the Common Moor to Buccleuch and other neighbouring landowners; this despite the fact that he was a close friend of the Duke of Buccleuch (working in Parliament to pass the Bank of Ayr bill, which directly affected both the Buccleuch and Queensberry estates), and hence could hardly be considered to be impartial. In 1777 he was appointed Chief Baron of the Exchequer. In 1778 the Magistrates of Hawick presented him with a carpet, stating that he ‘did not know that any carpets of such size, without a seam, had been made in this country’. He purchased Stanhope in Peeblesshire and was said to be enthusiastic about agricultural improvement. He retired in 1801 as Baronet of Stobo. James (18th C.) recorded at Humleknows in 1780. He married Isabel Douglas and their children included George (b.1780). James (b.c.1805) recorded as a horse-keeper on the Fore Row in 1841. His wife was Sarah, and their children included Mary, James, Agnes and Elizabeth. James (19th/20th C.) local cricketer, having the highest batting average for the Hawick and Wilton club in the 13 years from 1886 until 1898. He also scored 43 in a match for Roxburgh County against an M.C.C. visiting side in 1895. Janet (18th/19th C.) grocer on the Howegate, listed in Pigot’s 1837 directory. John (b.1814/5) shoemaker who lived at ‘Kirkgate’ (i.e. St. Mary’s Place) according to the 1851 census. He is probably the John listed as a shopkeeper on Needle Street in Slater’s 1852 directory. His wife was Isabel and their children included Agnes, Elizabeth, Janet and Ann H. His wife may have been Isabel Cairns, recorded as a school mistress in 1841. His first wife Agnes Smith died in 1840. Robert (16th C.) minister at Stirling, he was appointed as titular Archbishop of Glasgow in 1581, even although he had opposed episcopalianism. However, these were troubled times, his appointment was disputed, there were violent clashes at Glasgow Cathedral and he was deprived in 1585. He was later minister in Ayrshire. William Augustus (1872–1948) born in Hawick, he studied piano, organ and music theory, graduating with a B. Mus. from Durham in 1897. He was organist and choirmaster in Gainsborough Parish in England and emigrated to Canada in 1913. There he was organist and choirmaster in Sherbrooke, Calgary and Halifax. He published more than 100 musical compositions, including works for voice, organ, piano and violin (also spelled ‘Montgomerie’ and ‘Montgomery’).

In the 1860s he and his father Robert are recorded together as millwrights. He married Elizabeth Turnbull, and their children included: Jane; Robert; and Elizabeth O. James (18th/19th C.) millwright in Lilliesleaf, as recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. John (16th C.) probably name for a tenant or similar associates of James Douglas of Cavers recorded in 1541. His name appears to be ‘Johnn mudy’. Robert (18th C.) resident of Rigg (i.e. Caerlenrig) in 1731 when his son William was baptised in Cavers Parish. Robert (b.1789) from Lilliesleaf Parish, son of James, he was millwright in Denholm. He is recorded in 1837 and in 1841 was probably on Leyden Road. His wife was Elizabeth Oliver, and their children included: James; Elizabeth; George; Jenny; Alison; Margaret; Robert; and Mary. He was still alive in 1861, and recorded around Leyden Road. Thomas (b.1790) son of James, he was a millwright on Main Street in Lilliesleaf, recorded in Pigot’s 1837 directory. In Slater’s 1852 directory he was listed as a millwright and wright in Lilliesleaf. In 1831 he married Agnes Burn. Their children included: William; Jessie; Jane; Agnes; George; Thomas; Helen; Robert; and John. He died before 1861, when his widow was recorded as head of the household (also spelled ‘Muddie’ and ‘Mudie’).
Moodlaw (mool-law) n. small Loch and steading at the head of the streams that feed the Rankle Burn, lying just over the border into Dumfries and Galloway. The boundary of Hawick Parish once extended almost this far. Robert Turnbull was recorded there in 1494/5. In the 19th century the lake was divided among the parishes of Robertson, Eskdalemuir and Ettrick, with the counties of Roxburghshire, Selkirkshire and Dumfriesshire meeting in the middle.

His wife lived the last few years of her life with her son James at Bonchester Bridge, and was buried in Castleton in 1907. Alexander (18th C.) married Marion Miller in Wilton Parish. In 1724 he witnessed a baptism for Robert Riddell in East Burnfoot. He was himself recorded at Easter Burnfoot in 1723. In 1724 and 1727 he was recorded at Appletreehall and in 1727 he was also witness to a baptism for William Scott in Newton. Their children included: Margaret (b.1718); Adam (b.1721); John (b.1723); Alexander (b.1724); and Elspeth (b.1727). The witnesses in 1724 were Walter and John Scott and in 1727 were James and John Dryden. Alexander (18th C.) married Mary Brown in Wilton Parish. Their children included: George (b.1739); James (b.1745); George (again, b.1748); and Adam (b.1750). James (18th/19th C.) servant, labourer and hind at Dingleton. He was listed among male heads of households 1835–41. He emigrated to America in 1841. James (b.1837) son of Adam and Janet Elliot, he was born at the Knowe in Castleton Parish. He moved to Rulewater, to take over from his son James as carrier in that district. He then succeeded Thomas Smail as carter at Wolfelee. In 1863 he married Jane, daughter of Robert Thomson and sister of Andrew, who was shepherd at Wigg. Their children included: Margaret (b.1863); Janet (b.1865); Adam (b.1867), hind at Bonchester; Robina Thomson (b.1869); Mary Ann (b.1871); Jane (b.1873); James, who was carter in Rulewater for about 5 years; Andrew Thomson (b.1881); and Matthew, who worked with his father. John (17th C.) servant to Walter Scott of Westport. In 1679 Janet Henderson was cited by the Council for publicly accusing him of ‘stealing of ane pair of plaiding hose off some thorns’. Rev. John (19th/20th C.) from Alloa, he was minister at Hawick Baptist Church 1919–22. He arrived just after the manse was built. He was involved in open air sermons and the ‘no-licence’ movement. He was afterwards minister at Bridgeton and then Buckie. Michael (1965–) born in Northern Ireland, son of a Chaplain in the Army. The family moved to the Borders in 1981 when Rev. William H. became minister of Anerum, Jedburgh Old Parish and Edgerston. He attended Edinburgh University and worked as a researcher for Archy Kirkwood. He then worked as a chartered accountant before taking over as Liberal M.P. for Tweeddale, Ettrick & Lauderdale from David Steel in 1997. After boundary changes he was elected M.P. for the new Berwickshire, Roxburgh & Selkirk seat in 2005. Re-elected in 2010 he became Secretary of State for Scotland (also written ‘Mour’, ‘More’ and ‘Mour’; the name may have formerly been the same as Muir).

Moormaw (moor-maw) n. former farm in Hassendean Parish, later called ‘Lees’, with ‘West Lees’ still existing. Charters for the Easter and Wester parts was granted by John Scott of Burnhead to John Scott, Vicar of Hawick in 1535 and 1539. And in 1544 East Moormaw was sold by John Scott, Vicar of Hawick back to John Scott of Burnhead. However, in 1606 William Scott in Catslack was served heir to these lands of his great-grand-uncle, John Scott, Vicar of Hawick; at that point Easter Moormaw was a ‘40 shilling land’. It is recorded being occupied by a branch of the Scott family in 1660. It is probably the place where Walter Scott of Catslack paid the land tax on £52 in 1663 and John Scott of Catslack in 1678. It seems possible it is the ‘milmuine’ in Hassendean Parish, where Andrew Donald and Thomas Sanderson were located at the time of the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. It is the ‘Mowmaw, or Millmae, commonly called Lees’ owned by William Scott of Burnhead and valued at £52 according to the Land Tax Rolls of 1811 (also written ‘Muremaw’; it is ‘Murmawe’ in 1544 and transcribed ‘Eister Mirmawok’ in 1607; see also Milna).

Moorsom (moor-sum) n. Jermyn (d.1951) married Pamela Irene Milborne-Swinnerton-Pilkington and lived at Hyndlee. His brother, Raisley Stuart (1892–1981) was involved with the Bloomsbury set between the Wars.

Morebattle (mör-baw’-ul) n. village in the eastern Borders, on the Kale Water. There are several ancient encampments near here, as well as the reconstructed 16th century Corbet Tower. A fire in the Manse there destroyed the pre-1708 records of the entire Synod of Merse and Teviotdale (the origin is probably Old English for ‘building by the lake’, since a lake near there was only drained in the 19th century; the name first appears in about 1120 as ‘Mereboda’).

Morlaw (mor-law, -lō) n. Duncan (15th C.) witness to Hawick’s earliest known sasine in 1453. His name is written ‘Morlay’. It is reasonable to think that he was an ancestor of the later Morlaws in Hawick. Isobel (17th C.) recorded in Hawick in 1641. She was ordered to pay money that she owed Helen Deans as her fee for a period in the previous year, ‘but assosilzed fra her hois and schone’. Presumably Deans was a servant of hers. Janet (17th C.) resident of Dean Mill recorded in a 1650 list of communicants (recorded as ‘Jannet Morling’). She may have been one of the last descendants of John to have the family name. James (16th C.) recorded as witness to a Hawick sasine of 1558, where his name is recorded as ‘Morlaw’. It is easy to imagine that he was son of John from the 1537 Charter. John (16th C.) recorded in the Selkirk Protocol Books of 1530/1 when he purchased rigs from William and Adam Ker in Shaws. In 1532 he purchased from William Walker a croft and a tenement in Hawick. He was recorded as being ‘John Morlawe of Todschawe’, suggesting that he owned the lands of Todshaw in the Borthwick valley. His tenement was at the Tower Knowe, described as being ‘on the north side of the king’s street between the tenement of Alexander Paslaw on the east, the Slytryk water on the west and north and the said king’s street.

on the south’, while the croft ‘lies on the east side of the Slytryk water with the Teviot water on the north and the tenement of James Blair on the west’. The croft is surely what became known as Morlaw’s Croft (and so the ‘east’ in the Selkirk record must be an error for ‘west’). Perhaps the same John is recorded in 1532/3 when he purchased rigs in Selkirk from John Scott. He purchased further land in Selkirk from the Kers of Shaws in 1534 and also complained that they owed him 2 bolls of flour. In 1535 he bought a tenement in Selkirk from Alan ‘Mithag’. He is also mentioned in the 1537 charter as being the holder of 3 participates on the north side of the main street in Hawick, with his surname written ‘Morlo’. He was still recorded as owner of a tenement in ‘Peilgait’ in Selkirk in 1543. Thomas (16th C.) owner of a tenement on the main street in Selkirk in 1528. In 1530 he gained a rig of land near Selkirk and in 1531 another tenement, according to the Protocol Books. In 1538 he purchased a small piece of land from his lands of Haining. In 1539 he was one of the tenants who Thomas Scott warned to remove themselves from his lands of Haining. However, in 1540 he had sasine for an eighth part of East Haining. In 1542/3 he purchased a tenement in Selkirk and further lands in 1544 (also spelled ‘Morlaw’, ‘Morlawe’, ‘Morlo’, ‘Morolawe’, etc.; this may be the same surname as the modern ‘Morland’/‘Moreland’ or Morley).

Morlaw’s Croft (mor-laz-kroft) n. area of around 2 acres lying to the west of what became Orrock Place. The name was in use in the 18th century, but by the 19th century became referred to as ‘the Back o the Yairds’. An item in the Selkirk Protocol Books for 1532 records how the croft was sold to John ‘Morlawe’ of Todshaw by William Walker, nephew and heir of John Walker. It is described as being ‘on the east [which must be an error for ‘west’] side of the Teviot water with the Teviot water on the north and the tenement of James Blair on the west’.

Mormons (mor-minz) n., pl. members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, founded in the U.S.A. in the 1820s. Among their activities are sending young men (and now occasionally women) on two year missions, isolated from friends and family, to try to make converts. There was apparently a mormon from Salt Lake City living off Denholm Main Street in the years around 1900. Missionaries have been showing up in Hawick since ??.

Morn (mörn) n. tomorrow is generally referred to as the morn – ‘let’s gaun oot the morn night’, ‘It’s duist an off-pit o teime hevin ti gaun there the morn’ [ECS].

Morneen see mornin

mornin (mör-uen, -ni) n. morning – ‘how er ee this mornin’?, ‘she’s still in mornin this mornin’, ‘A’l’ll cry in as A gaun bye the morn’s mornin’ [ECS] (also spelled ‘morneen’ and most commonly pronounced with een; the time after this but before noon is often called the forenin).

Morpeth (mor-peth) n. town in Northumberland on the Wansbeck River, an important market centre, with a bridge built by Thomas Telford, and an interesting old clock tower. Morpeth Castle was once the seat of the Lords Dacre, Wardens of the Marches. It was also the site of a Covenanters’ siege of 1644. It has celebrated the Morpeth Gathering in April since 1968, with the ‘Border Cavalcade’ commemorating Lord Greystoke’s return from Otterburn in 1388. Population 14,400.

Morren (mo-rin) n. John (1863–1950) born in Auchindoir in Aberdeenshire, in 1902 he moved from Aberdeen City Police to be Superintendent of the Hawick Burgh force. He lived at Glenview on Orhcrad Terrace. He remained as Chief Constable until 1909, taking over as Chief Constable of the Berwickshire, Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire Constabularies. He retired in 1933 and moved back to Aberdeen. He was awarded the King George V Coronation (Scottish Police) Medal, as well as the O.B.E. He can be seen in a photographic portrait in full uniform, with remarkable moustache.

Morrishaa (mo-ris-haw) n. Morrishall, former farmstead in Wilton Parish, between Wilton Dean and Whitehaugh, near Brieryhill, lying beside the modern Whitehaugh Road. John Morton and family were there in at least 1835–1851. It was probably deserted in the 1850s and derelict soon after. It was also known as ‘Murrayshall’ (it is marked on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Morrison (mo-ree-sin) n. Alexander (17th/18th C.) son of Robert, baker in Edinburg, his mother being a Home. In 1693 he was served heir portioner, along with James Dickson and John Shoreswood, in the Barony of Home, inherited from Jean, daughter of John Home. This included superiority over lands in Hassendean, and explicitly Appletreehall, as well as the lands of Redfordgreen, Drycleuchlea, Huntly and Hartwoodburn. James (15th/16th C.) recorded as a fugitive in 1502, this being for the murder of John and James Jackson. William Douglas of Cavers dealt with his escheated goods. Rev. James Morrison Cottage (1732–1824) born in Perth and Kinross, he was licensed by the Associate Presbytery of Earlston in 1756 and in the same year ordained as minister at Norham (just across the Border). He was Clerk of the Anti-Burgher Synod and Presbytery for more than 50 years. He is one of the people claimed to have started the first Sunday School, this being in 1756 or 1757. It is recorded that in 1766 he was in Hawick to perform a baptism for Robert Brown and Agnes Scott, members of the Anti-Burgher congregation, who did not yet have a local minister of their own. It thus appears that he may have been a temporary preacher at the Green Kirk, before John Young arrived. He is buried at Norham. James (1816–93) evangelical preacher who was one of the founders of the Evangelical Union, after being ousted from the Synod of the United Secession Church in 1841. His first visit to the Borders was to preach in Hawick and Denholm in a December of the mid-1840s. On one Sunday he preached at the old Cameronian Chapel in Denholm, then in the open air at the Tower Knowe to a crowd of 700–800, and finally in the Subscription Rooms (with the seats removed) to perhaps 1,000. This was part of the impetus for forming Hawick Congregational Kirk in 1848. He returned in early 1849 to formally induct Alexander Duff as the first E.U. minister in Hawick and later to open the new church. James (b.1829/30) from Lanark, he was head gardener at Wauchope in the 1860s. His wife was Helen and their children included John, Anne H. and Elizabeth. John (b.1822/3) head gardener at Weens in the 1860s. From Lanark, he was probably younger brother of James, gardener at Wauchope. His wife was Mary and they had a daughter Mary J.D. Robert (18th C.) merchant in Hawick. He was described as late Bailie in 1735 in the deposition where the widow of Robert Scott of Farnash sold her property on the Howegate to Patrick Hardie. William (16th C.) tailor who was owed money according to the last testament of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1574. It is unclear if he was from the Hawick area or Edinburgh. William (19th C.) earthenware and glass dealer on Needle Street, listed in Slater’s 1852 directory. He could be the William listed in the 1851 census as a boot closer from Edinburgh, living as a lodger on the Round Close. William, J.P. (1839–92) born in Craig Madderty, Perthshire, he became a detective with the Leith Constabulary, then came to Hawick around 1865. He acted as Super-intendent of Police and Procurator-Fiscal for the Burgh for 11 years, as well as being Firemaster and managing the Hawick Advertiser from 1876–90. His company was printer, publisher, book-seller and stationer at 3 High Street. He was on the Town Council for at least a dozen years, serving as a Bailie for most of that time, and being a candidate for Provost. For several years he provided the refreshments for the riders at Myrselawgreen on the Friday of the Common Riding. He was the first Bailie to carry the Flag at the Chase in 1887 when that practice was revived (and the Provost of the day could not ride). However, in 1890 he galloped round the course with the Flag, to the cheers of the crowd, but the decision of the Common Riding organisers, since it was against all tradition. He was also Chairman of the Parochial Board, as well as being involved with the School Board, the Gas Company board, the Hawick Bowling Club, the Masons and the Common Riding. He was a Liberal in politics and was a candidate for Provost in 1890. He left Hawick suddenly in 1890 and died accidentally near Seattle (U.S.A.) a year and a half later. His wife was Margaret Gregg, who wrote some poetry under the pseudonym ‘M.G.M.’ He lived at Morrison Cottage, which gave its name to Morrison Place. Mrs. William nee Gregg (1834–98) wife of Bailie Morrison, whom she married in Leith in 1862. They had 6 children in Hawick. She wrote poetry in the local papers and in ‘Modern Scottish Poets’ using the initials M.G.M. She died at 3 Morrison Place. William (1863–1911) only child of Bailie William to reach adulthood. He grew up in Hawick, became a printer with his father, emigrated to Australia in 1883 and became the New South Wales Government Printer.

Morrison Cottage (mo-ree-sin-ko-‘eej) n. house built by William Morrison on what became known as Morrison Place, and still exists there.

Morrison Place (mo-ree-sin-plis) n. originally part of the ‘Green Wynd’ it was named in 1883 after Morrison Cottage, built by William Morrison there. The street was popularly known in the 19th century as Hospital Brae. It is likely that it runs along part of what was known as the ‘Common Vennel at Myrselawgreen’ at the time of the 1537 Charter.

Morrison’s (mo-ree-sinzas) n. W. Morrison & Co., printers, publishers, stationers, booksellers and bookbinders at 3 High Street in the latter part of the 19th century. It was run by William Morrison, joined by his son, also William. The company’s ‘Business Directory’ came out in at least the year 1890.
Morris Clyde (mor-ris-kild) n. pen-name for the writer of the poem ‘The Hawick Gathering Cry’.

mort (mornt) n., arch. the skin of a sheep that has died a natural death – ‘Mort-woo, Wool of such skins’ [JoJ] (also ‘murt’).
mort-cloth (mor-t-kloth) n., arch. a black velvet pall placed over coffins on their way to the cemetery. The Hawick Parish one was hired out by the kirk session, the money used to help the poor of the Parish. Deaths were often recorded in the ledgers as ‘mort-cloth’ hires. The Hawick Parish ‘mort-cloth’ was used from at least 1712, and in 1720 a new one was provided by William Elliot of London (who was born at Southfield); this being of Genoan velvet and much finer than the Dutch velvet it replaced. The new cloth was kept by one of the elders (Bailie Ruecastle in 1721). There are also records of a 2nd (presumably the older velvet one, sometimes called ‘the little cloth’) and even 3rd cloth (possibly just of cheap black material) being rented for lesser fees. Its use was widely debated in the mid-19th century, it fell into disfavour by the 1860s and is said to have been last used for Tibbie Leithead in 1870. The fee was 18 shillings Scots for those in the town and 20 shillings for the country part of the parish. There was also one in use in Wilton Parish. Other mortcloths owned by incorporated trades were in use until 1721, with a ‘memorial’ against the use of private mort-cloths issued in 1726 – ‘Wm Dickson gave in account of ye profites of ye 2 mortcloths . . .’ [PR1724], ‘This day a man in the Hungreymill was buried wearing the Mortcloath payed’ [Ash], ‘O, have ye heard the news of late, That things have come to sic a state, The fouk o’ Hawick are talking great Against our bonnie mortcloth, Some say it is a gross abuse, Some say they’ll it nae langer use, And some they will not pay the dues O’ hiring out our mortcloth’ [TP] (also spelled as one word ‘mortcloth’).

mortify (mor-ti-II) v., arch. to bequeath in perpetuity, particularly when given to a public body – ‘I hereby mortifie and dispone to the said Paroch of Hawick all and haill the Soume of Nine thousand Merks Scots money to ly as ane mortified fund’ [PR], ‘. . . who are to bestow the money mortified by the late Mr Alexander Orrok, our minister here . . .’ [PR1714] (Scots Law term).

mortification (mor-ti-f-kä-shin) n., arch. property or money bequeathed to charity – ‘And by the said mortification her Grace is patron of both for presenting the schoolmaster when vacant . . .’ [PR1714].

Morton mortifier (mor-ti-II-ur) n., arch. one who mortifies, person who bequeathes something to a public body – ‘They in the highlands gote the best part thereof according to the desire of the mortifier’ [PR715].

Mortimer (mor'-i-mur, -ee-) n. Rev. Cyrus M. minister of Robertson from 1930–54. He started the first troop of Boy Scouts in Robertson Parish.
Mary. Robert (b.1778/9) from Dalkeith, he was a farmer and gardener living at Damhead in 1841. In 1851 he was at Upper Damside. He is listed as a gardener in Slater’s 1852 directory. His wife was Catherine and their children included William, Catherine and John. Rev. Thomas ‘Tom’ (1919–2013) born in Kilmarnock, he studied Arts at Glasgow University and trained for the ministry there. He was ordained as minister of West Port Kirk in 1945 and remained until 1951. He then moved to St. Nicholas’ Church in Cardonald, and in 1947 was translated to Stonelaw, Rutherglen, where he was minister until he retired in 1986. In 1978–79 he was Moderator of the Glasgow Presbytery. His wife was Netta. William (16th C.) holder of a particulate of land on the north side of the public street according to Hawick’s 1537 Charter (in earlier times this is easily confused with Mertin).

tmort-safe (mor'-säf) n., arch. a device for preventing a coffin from being stolen, often an iron cage that could be locked over a grave. They were prevalent in the late 18th and early 19th centuries. A padlock from a device used at Cavers was one of the men who appeared to answer the charges. Perhaps the same James is witness to a sasine of 1610 involving the Scotts and the Turnbults and land on the Kirkwynd. John (17th C.) Burgess of Jedburgh. Along with Alexander Kirkton (Provost of Jedburgh) he was joint owner of Nether Bonchester until selling it to Walter Scott in 1653. He was referred to as ‘younger’, suggesting his father was also John. Patrick (15th C.) notary for Hawick’s earliest known sasine in 1453, where he is described as ‘bachelor in decrees, priest, Glasgow diocese’. He was also the notary for the 1452 sasine in which William Douglas of Drumlaurig was regranted the Barony of Hawick; he is there ‘Patricius Moscrop, presbyter Glasguensis diocesis, bacallarius in decrecis’. He was notary for the sasine carried out at Milings ton in 1453. He was also notary for a legal instrument (relating to lands in Eckford) which was witnessed in the house of John Walche (presumably Waugh) in Hawick in 1454. He was notary for a document relating to the lands of Whitchester, signed at St. Mary’s Kirk in 1455, and the associated notorial instrument made at Branxholme the following year. He could be the Patrick who had a sasine for ‘Glennysland’ in Roxburghshire in 1461. Probably the same man was witness in 1478 to a document granting rights in Selkirk to David Scott, younger of Branxholme. Robert (16th C.) recorded in 1580 as servant to Adam in Riddell when he witnessed an agreement between James Riddell in Maxton and John Riddell in Newton Mill. Robert (17th C.) resident of ‘Dodburne in Kirkton Parioch’ according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. William ‘Will’ (16th C.) one of the men indicted in 1552 for involvement in the murder of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme and Buccleuch. He is recorded as ‘Ville Moscope in Jedburgh’. William (17th C.) resident of Cavers Parish, his children were baptised in Hawick Parish. He probably lived in the country area towards Teviothead. He married Marion Rae and their children included: Margaret (b.1670); Isobel (b.1672); Janet (b.1676); and an unnamed son (b.1686). The witnesses in 1676 were schoolmaster Er John Purdom and James Elliot (also formerly ‘Moscip’ and ‘Moscopre’).

moss (mos) n. marshy land, bog, morass, moorland, usually high up and sometimes applied to an area used for cutting peats and turfs – ‘He’s guided them o’er moss and muir, O’er hill and houp, and mony ae down’[T]. How swift they flew! no eye could view Their track on heath or hill; Yet swift across both moor and moss, St. Clair did follow still’ [JL]. ‘...Of the snort of the nags as they toil at the steep; Of the suck of the hoofs when the moss rides deep’ [WHO], rough grass that grows on moorland, especially Eriophorum vaginatum, the hare-tail cotton grass, and related species – ‘The plant, called the moss, rises before any other in the spring, affords excellent nourishment, and is carefully sought after by the flocks’ [RAB] (the word occurs locally in place names, such as Adderstonelee Moss, Barnes Moss, Berry Moss, Bitchlaw Moss, Blackgarn Moss, Blind Moss, Boghall Moss, Broadlee Moss, Buckstane Moss, Burnside Moss, Cartshaw Moss, Caver’s Moss, Craw’s Moss, Crookedhaugh Moss, Dinley moss, Dunhog moss, Ewen’s moss, Fluther Moss, Gillfitt moss, Greenside moss, Hallmoss, Harden moss, Haremoss, Hawick moss, Hillsland moss, Kames moss, Kippielaw moss, Lineart moss, Lionfield moss, Long moss, Mabonlaw moss, Mackside moss, Malcolm’s moss, Mossbrae, Mossburnford, Mosshills Loch, Mosshouses, Moss knowe, Mosspark Rig, Mosspatrick, Mosspaul, Mosspeebill, Mossy knowe, Picmaw moss, Redmoss, Riddelshiel moss, Robertson moss, Rotten moss, Ruins moss, Slatehill moss, Staneeford moss, St. Leonard’s moss, Swarf moss, Synth moss, Tandlaw moss, Tarras moss, Tocher lodge moss, Weaver’s moss, Whitchesters moss, Whithope moss, Winnington moss, Woolaw moss and Wulliestruther moss; see also mosses).

the Moss (θu-mos) n. popular name for the area of wetlands to the south of Lilliesleaf village, also known as Lilliesleaf Moss.

Moss (mos) n. John (17th/18th c.) maltman in Hawick. In 1746 he witnessed a baptism in Hawick for merchant Andrew Ekron. In 1724 he married Bessie Richardson, who was also from the Town of Hawick. Their children included Helen (b.1725) and Janet (b.1738). The 1725 baptism was witnessed by Robert Ruecastle and Henry Orrock. In 1725 he witnessed a baptism for carrier Thomas Porteous and in 1743 he witnessed a baptism for James Oliver, tenant in Earlsdie.

mossbluiter (mos-blı’-ur) n., arch. the bittern, Botaurus stellaris, the common snipe, Capella gallinago – ‘...cultivating wastes, where the whaup and mossbluiter are heard, or where the wild fowls of heaven are destined to reside’ [RW] (also bog-bluter and sometimes heather-bleat, from the noise made by the snipe’s tail feathers during courtship, or the booming call of the male bittern).

Mossbrae (mos-brä) n. placename in Roberton Parish. Robert Murray’s ‘Hawick Songs and Song Writers’, when it is suggested that Sir Walter Scott may have conducted the Wordsworths here in 1803.

Mosshouses (mos-hoos-ceez) n. Mosshouses, former cottages on the farm of Mackside that were lived in during the 18th and early 19th centuries, but were already gone by the beginning of the 20th.
Moss Knowe

Moss Knowe (mos-now) n. hill to the south-east of Shielswood Loch, being a shallow hill reaching a height of 299 m.

Mossman (mos-mun) n. Alan (16th C.) Burgess of Edinburgh, recorded in a charter of 1531/2 receiving the lands of Borthaugh and its mill from Roger Langlands. His acquisition of the land was involved in an agreement with Lawson of Highriggs, perhaps settling a debt of John Scott of Borthaugh. Later that year, however, he sold Borthaugh, Commonside and Dryden to Walter Scott of Branxholme and his wife Janet Kerr.

James (17th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. In about 1678 he was fined 1000 merks for attending conventicles, this being a larger sum than the other 6 or 7 people who were fined at the same time. He was probably imprisoned on the Bass Rock, and after his fine was unpaid he was probably transported. However, it is possible was among the men who escaped from their ship in London. James (18th C.) early hosiery manufacturer in Hawick. There is a record of 1791 (from the Board of Trustees for Manufactures) of him receiving £10 towards purchasing a frame for making ribbed stockings, and a few years later he received money for a twisting mill. In 1790 and 1792 he witnessed baptisms for skinner James Renwick. He is probably the stock-maker whose unnamed child is recorded dying in 1805 and whose unnamed child and grandchild are recorded dying in 1808. He is probably the merchant James whose son James died in Hawick in 1816. He may be the James who married Janet Renwick in 1783, and whose children (baptised in Hawick) included Elizabeth (b.1784) and Adam (b.1785). The witnesses in 1784 were flesher Gideon Renwick and shoemaker William Renwick (who were surely related to his wife).

James (18th/19th C.) fishing tackle maker of the Howegate, recorded in Pigot's 1825/6 directory.

Margaret (18th C.) cook at Branxholme in 1785, when she was working for Adam Ogilvie.

Mosspark Rig (mos-pawrk-rig) n. area of moorland on the west side of the Hermitage Water near Leaugh. There is an ancient enclosure near the river there, and another close to the confluence with the Thief Sike.

Mosspatrick (mos-paw-trik) n. former name for an area roughly between the heads of the Allan Water and the Braildie Burn off Hermitage. This may correspond to the 'Queen's Mire' on modern maps (it is recorded in Douglas of Cavers papers in the 15th century and is 'M'Patrick' in 1516; 'Mosspatrickhope swire' is marked on Stobie's 1770 map).

Mosspatrickhope (mos-paw-trik-hop) n. former house at Mosspatrick, once a home of the Elliot family. It is probably the 'Mal Patrikhope' which was granted by William Douglas, Earl of Angus top Archibald Douglas of Cavers in 1428, along with Braildie and 'Le Schewis', and granted to a William Douglas of Cavers in 1470, with sar-side given in 1472. It is transcribed as 'Makpatrikhoipe' in the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale, when it was valued at 10 merks and had William Elliot as tenant. Later in the 16th century it was still tenanted by men called William Elliot. It was owned by the Scotts of Buccleuch by 1632 (it is 'Mal Patrikhope' in 1428, 'Mawpatrichop' in 1816, 'Mawpatrikhope' in 1470, 'Mawpatrikhope' in 1472, 'Mospatrichhop' in 1581 and ranscribed 'Makpatrikhoipe' in 1632; 'Moss patrick hoopswyire' and 'Mospatrick hopswyire' appear on separate sheets of Blaen's 1654 map).

Mossaul (mos-pawl) n. hotel on the A7 near the highest (853 ft) point of the road, on the watershed on the way to Langholm, and very close to the boundary of the Scottish Borders with Dumfries and Galloway. A shelter has existed here for hundreds of years; it has been suggested that this was perhaps established by the monks of Melrose Abbey, and although there is no evidence for this suggestion, they did own the neighbouring lands of Penangushope and others (in Ringwoodfield to the north). Lawrence Elliot was there in 1494/5. It was listed among the lands in Ewesdale held by Alexander, Lord Home in 1509/10. In 1525 the lands were among those in Ewesdale resigned by Simon Armstrong to his superior George, Lord Home; this was carried out at Kelso Abbey (suggesting this Abbey held control over Ewesdale Parish). This transfer of the superiority back to the Homes was confirmed in 1535 when the King revoked the preceding charter. It is probably the 'Mossaulf' listed in 1663 among the lands owned by the Scotts of Buccleuch in the Lordship of Ewesdale. The inn is first definitively recorded in 1767 (by Dr. Carlyle of Inveresk), but could be much older. It became an important stopping point for mail coaches and carters when the road was improved in the mid-18th century. In the early days it is said to have been occasionally used by debtors trying to nip over the county border to escape either the Roxburghshire or Dumfriesshire authorities. John Scott is recorded living there in 1779 and 1782 and was explicitly listed as innkeeper there in 1788. James Ruickbie wrote a poem after seeing the improvements made to the buildings in the early years of the 19th century. Robert Govenlock was landlord for 45 years until 1861. The hotel was much improved, with a large stabling area to the west, consisting of as many as 42 stalls, where the coaches horses were exchanged. It was a very busy place for several decades. However, with the building of the Hawick-Carlisle railway the hotel fell into disuse, its licence lapsing in 1865, and the building becoming derelict in the latter part of the 19th century. There were tall poles lining the road at intervals, which were used to guide the coaches through snow drifts; some were still in place in the early 20th century. The inn was resuscitated in 1900 through a private company of local gentlemen, largely to cater for cycling enthusiasts, the land being leased on good terms for use as a wayside hostelry. The more modern building was smaller than its predecessor. A bowling green was also added for a while on the western side and a 6-hole golf course was also opened. It is also the location of the Mosspaul ride out of 24 miles over rough moorland. This first took place in 1901, and is traditionally 2 weeks before Common Riding weekend. The Mosstroopers’ Club erected a memorial cairn for the Saxhorn Band leads the Mosstroopers safe in frae the Black Burn is also called the Mosspaul Burn as it runs to the south to join the Ewes Water.

the Mosspaul Club (thu-mos-pawl-klub) n. former organization composed of the Directors of the committee that raised funds for the rebuilding of Mosspaul Hotel, plus some of their friends. It was in some loose sense a continuation of the earlier Wisp Club. It was formed in 1900 and held an annual outing and dinner at the hotel. Dr. McLeod was the first President. The dinners were interrupted by WWI, and although it met again after the war, it petered out a few years later.

Mosspaulgreen (mos-pawl-green) n. area near Mosspaul. John Lawson was living there in 1755. It was one end of the ‘Mosspaulgreen to Haremoss’ Turnpike road, improved about 1770, being the Roxburghshire part of what became the A7 (it is ‘Mosspalgreen’ in 1755).

Mosspaul Hotel (mos-pawl-ho-tel) n. name sometimes used for the hotel at Mosspaul, formerly called the ‘Mosspaul Inn’.

Mosspeeble (mos-pee-bul) n. farm on the A7 between Mosspaul and Langholm, just south of Unthank. Like other parts of Ewesdale, the superiority was held by the Homes in the early 16th century. Adam Scott was a farmer there in 1585. The lands were listed in 1663 among those owned by the Scotts of Buccleuch in the Lordship of Ewesdale. It was surveyed along with other Scott of Buccleuch properties in 1718, when it was combined with ‘Byereleughwater’, consisting of 1592 acres, bounded by Tarra, lands of the Laird of Arkleton and Unthank. Robert Aitchison was there in at least the period 1785—97. In 1800 it was leased by William Moffat. Alexander Borthwick was farmer in 1841 and Capt. Stewart in the 1860s. There are remains of an ancient settlement south-east of the farmhouse (it appears on Gordon’s c. 1650 maps as ‘Mospeel’ and ‘Mospepill’ and Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Mosspeels’; it is ‘Mospeule’ in 1506, ‘Mospeble’ in 1509/10, ‘Mospall’ in 1525, ‘Mospeule’ in 1535 and ‘Mispaul’ in 1782).

Mosspaul Bothy (mos-pawl-bo-thee) n. house at Mosspaul, behind the hotel. It was rebuilt fairly recently, on the site of a former building, which local tradition says was itself on the site of the ancient wayside hostel dedicated to St. Paul (for which there is no evidence of course).

Mosspaul Burn (mos-pawl-burn) n. stream that flows to the west to join the Black Burn and Lang Grain near Mosspaul. The upper part rises on Carlin Tooth and flows through Penangus Hope, forming part of the boundary between Roxburghshire and Dunfriesshire. Note that the name is probably of Cumbric origin, meaning ‘field of the tents’.

Mosspeeble Cottage (mos-pee-bul-ko'-eej) n. former cottage near Mosspeeble farm in the Ewes valley. John Murray and 3 others were living there in 1841.

Moss Place (mos-plis) n. small street in Newcastleton, off Moss Road.
Moss Road (mos-rød) n. street in Newcastle-ton, off North Hermitage Street, opposite Henry Street.
Moss Toor (mos-toor) n. placename near Hawick, recorded in 1582. Robert Weens ‘in Mostoure’ witnessed an agreement in Hawick for Alan Deans and Alexander Weens.
Moss Toor (mos-toor, -tow-ur) n. ruined 15th century tower near Eckford, which could only be approached through the march from a causeway on the north side. It was destroyed in 1523, rebuilt and burned by Sir Ralph Evers men in 1544.
mosstroop (mos-troop) v., arch. to freeboot, rieve – ‘Whitslade is slumbering undisturbed and down in Harden Glen The tall trees murmur in their dreams of Wat’s mosstrooping men’ [WHO].
mosstrooper (mos-troo-pur) n. one of a band of raiders operating on the boggy moorland of the Borders around the 17th century, a marauder – ‘By moor and moss and river, To the swish of that haunt of swathed grass And burnside reeds aquerin, The dead mosstroopers pass’ [RSC].
Mosstrooper (mos-troo-pur) n. member of the Ancient Order of Mosstroopers. Membership con-ists of those who have ridden to Moss paul and back on the annual ride-out.
the Mosstroopers’ Club (thu-mos-troop-purs-klub) n. club formed of members of the Ancient Order of Mosstroopers. It existed from probably 1901, when there was a ride-out to the newly opened Moss paul Hotel, with the riders being entertained there by the directors. There was originally a ‘secret’ initiation ceremony, with new members smearing the sign of ‘the Hawick cross’ on their foreheads. It was ‘reconstituted’ following the suggestion of J.E.D. Murray at a meeting in 1920. One of the main aims was to encourage mounted supporters to follow the Cornet. The first club President was T.G. Winning in 1920 and since then there has been a new President each year. The Club motto is ‘Aye Defend’, their song is ‘The Mosstrooper’s Song’, and the Club badge was designed by J.E.D. Murray, with his own favourite horse’s head making the main part of the design. Badges were presented to some women in the period 1920–31, with this ceasing after a female rider broke her leg. The Club’s tie was designed in 1951, and is moss green with red and yellow stripes. A junior tie was designed in 1995. Perhaps the main event in the Clubs’ caledar is the Smoker for the Cornet, held on the evening of the Moss paul Rideout. The Club also holds an annual ball (since 1920), Burns night (since 1949), organises race meetings, gymkhanas and other events, and regularly contributes to causes that preserve the town’s traditions. A CD was released under the Club’s auspices in 2013.
The Mosstrooper’s Song (thu-mos-troop-purs-sawng) n. song composed by Adam Colledge, with words by J.E.D. Murray, written in 1928 and published in 1931, with the subtitle ‘Four Hundred Horsemen’. It was officially adopted as the anthem of the Mosstroopers’ Club in 1937. The tune bears a similarity to Costa’s ‘March of the Israelites’. It has remained popular despite having a different chorus for each verse.
Adam Ingles changed the accompaniment for the 1957 song book, which probably added to its popularity. It was slightly altered again by Ian Seeley for the 2001 song anthology.
the Mosstroopers’ Stakes (thu-mos-troop-purs-stëks) n. race during the Common Riding.
Mossy Knowe (mo-see-now) n. standing on the south side of the Teviot, where the North-house Burn joins. William Murray was joiner there in the early 19th century. Widow Mary Murray and her family were there in 1841. This area is also know as ‘Change Hoose’. The name derives from the enclosure about 500 yards further up the River. This is a low earthen bank, much eroded, covering an area about 300 ft by 200 ft with a gap in the north-east (it is Moozieknowe’ in 1841).
mote (mô) n. a mound of earth, especially one from a former Norman castle (noted by J.
Jamieson).
mote (moût) n. a small thing, crumb, small person.
the Mote (thu-mô) n. Norman built earth-work, once topped by a defensive wooden tower, 312 feet (95 m) round at its base (about 30 m diameter) and 25–30 feet (about 8 m) high. It is situated in Mote Park, roughly behind 23 Loan.
In the 19th century it was conjectured to be associated with Druids, sun-worship and human sacrifice, and was also believed to be a burial mound.
It was also traditionally said to have been a place of justice (as first stated by Robert Wilson). An archaeological investigation by Dr. Alexander O.
Curle in 1912 revealed an ancient ditch and several artefacts (now in the Museum) of Norman date, clearing up any doubt about its origin; this included pottery shards, a bone needle and a coin of Henry II. It was probably a fairly standard ‘mote and bailey’ construction (as should always have been clear, given the name), with the bailey to the north-east, enclosed in a wooden palisade. This was the seat of the Lovels and possibly Douglasses until they moved to where Drumlanrig’s Tower is now. It is likely that the location

had legal significance long after the wooden structure on the top was gone. In 1484 the sasine for the Barony of Hawick was granted ‘at the principal messuage of the barony of Hawick, called the Mote’, and the same phrase was repeated in 1514; this suggests that the site (whether or not there was still a building there) was at that point recognised as the Baron’s legal headquarters. Lands in that area were once held by a branch of the Scotts, with William ‘in the Mott’ being one of the 24 ‘pensioners’ of Buccleuch mentioned by Scott of Satchells. The Mote is now in the centre of a park and has a staircase (38 steps) and seat on top. Each Common Riding the Cornet and other Principals sing ‘Teribus’ on the top of the Mote to greet the Saturday dawn (although in 1896 this visit was shifted to 13.00 a.m.); this tradition is shown in a photograph from 1911. It may be that the Mote once formed a more important part of the Common Riding events, since in about 1710 Rev. Robert Cunningham wrote in his poem that this ‘artful Mount’ was where the natives ‘acted all their games of May’ – ‘It first be torn not by the plough The ancient bonny green Moat-Knowe; For sair I fear it, too, maun fall, Though reared by hands Druidical’ [AD], ‘Is it natural or artificial?’ asked a stranger at a little boy. ‘It’s neither of the two; it’s just the moat’ [RJT], ‘We’ve a Moat, which down the ages, Witnessed many a deed of fame’ [TC], ‘And the Moat’s there, and the Haugh’s there, And the auld soul-stirring songs’ [WL], ‘The green auld Mote stands sentinel The echo o’ St. Mary’s bell Still rings oot owre hill and dell In Hawick ma Border hame’ [IWL] (often spelled ‘Moat’, leading to some confusion when written ‘mou’), ‘The rubies gang to mak her witchin mou ...’ [WL], ‘Ne’er judge you a lass by the shape o’ her mou’ [DJ] (also spelled ‘moo’, ‘mow’ and ‘mou’); cf. Muckle Mou’d Meg: the common Teviotdale pronunciation is mou, even when written ‘mou’).

motey breid (moʊ-tee-breed) n., poet. a curranty loaf – ‘Motey bread right plenty’ [JoHo].

Mother Riley’s (muθ-rɪl-ri-lez) n. former popular name of the Bourtree Place fish and chip shop, named for the older Mrs. Shiel, after the popular films of the 1930s and 40s – ‘Headin Weensland way, in Bourtree Place an auld freend speaks sae kindly, Great haggis puddins, chips and fish served up by ‘Mother Riley’’[??].

mottie (moʊ̈-ce, moʊ̈-tee) n., arch. a peg acting as the target in quoits.

mou (mow, moo) n., arch., poet. mouth – ‘...And boomed against the milkye waye, Afore it closed its mou’’ [JTe], ‘The rubies gang to mak her witchin mou ...’ [WL], ‘Ne’er judge you a lass by the shape o’ her mou’’ [DJ] (also spelled ‘moo’, ‘mow’ and ‘mou’); cf. Muckle Mou’d Meg: the common Teviotdale pronunciation is mou, even when written ‘mou’).

moud see mowd

moud (mowdl) n., poet. soil, earth of a graveyard – ‘I’ll fight wi’ the bodie an’ cangle, Till I get him laid i’ the mou’d’ [JoHa] (cf. mools and muil).

Mouly Sike (mow-lee-sik) n. small stream off the north side of the Black Burn in Liddesdale.

mount (mown’) v., arch. to adorn, trim (also munt).

Mount (mown’) n. former farmstead where Perrryshiel Sike meets the Whitrope Burn, just south of Whitropefoot. This is probably where Gilbert Elliot ‘at Mount’ (son of William of Penchrise) lived around 1700. William Barton was shepherd there around 1840. In 1851 road labourer Andrew Elliot and family were there, in 1861 William Beattie’s family and in 1868 John Kyle (marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

mountain dew (mown’-in-joo) n., arch. homourous name for whisky, often referring to the illicitly distilled sort – ‘...might partake of pot-luck with him, taste his maut and mountain dew ...’ [RW], ‘... They’re penurious and few, If they tried my Mountain Dew They would tipple on the sly, says John George Luff’ [JCG].

mountain wine (mown’-in-win) n., arch. phrase used in the 18th and early 19th centuries for a white (or Malaga) table wine.

Mountbenger (mown’-beng-gur) n. farm in the Yarrow valley, near the Gordon Arms, where the Mountbenger Burn meets the Yarrow Water. Mountbenger Law, to the north, reaches a height of 543 m. It was formerly Crown land, leased to the Crichtons in the late 15th century. John Chisholme was there in 1579 and John Hislop in 1581 (‘Estir Munbergeris’ and ‘Westir Munbergeris’ are recorded in 1489, ‘Montberger’ in 1492 and ‘Munbarnger’ in 1579; ‘West Munbernger’ and ‘East Munberger’ are on the 1718 Buccleuch survey).
Mount Common

Mount Common (mown’-ko-min) n. lands in the Ettrick valley, by the Tima Water. Mountcommon Hill reaches a height of 462 m. The lands were owned by the Crown from about 1456. The lands were let at ‘half ferme’ to David Scott (probably of Buccleuch) in 1459. They were described as a land of 2 steadings in 1488, namely Deephope and Gamescleuch. They were let to Alexander Scott and David Scott in 1469. It remained Crown property until at least 1502. In 1541 it was ‘Montcolmane, alias Deipherope’, when occupied by William Scott, paying £10 yearly. It was once part of the parish of Rankilburn. It has long been part of the Buccleuch estates (it is ‘Moncolmone, alias Deipherope’, when occupied by David Scott (1469). It remained Crown property until at least 1502. Mount Hawick (mownt-ha-wik) n. hill in Western Australia, south-west of the town of Halls Creek. It was named on April 27th 1894 by David W. Carnegie (1871–1900, youngest son of the Earl of Southesk), as described in his book ‘Spinifex and Sand, A Narrative of Five Years’ Pioneering and Exploration in Western Australia’ (1898). Carnegie’s journey across Western Australia is described as one of the last great explorations of the Australian wilderness. He named it after his prospecting partner Lord Percy Douglas (who was also Lord Douglas of Hawick). Carnegie died in Nigeria as a result of being shot with a poisoned arrow. Mount Hawick is approximately at Latitude 18°54′ South, Longitude 127°1′ East (there is also a separate ‘Hawick Hill’ in Western Australia).

the Mountin Sang (thu-mown’-in-sawng) n. name sometimes used for the ‘Auld Sang’, particularly as sung at the Tower Knowe when the Cornet and supporters mount their horses for the marching of the Common on the Friday. The singing is led by the official ‘Sang Singer’. Until 1921 it was sung from a window of a room at the Tower, while from 1922 it has been performed on the steps outside.

the muckle leet (thu-mu-kul-leet) n. phrase used in the 18th and early 19th centuries for the list of acquaintances named by the friends listed by the Cornet. This formed the longer list of people formally invited to the Common Riding festivities – ‘There was the Cornet’s leets, enumerating his own circle of acquaintances, and there was the ‘muckle leet’, prepared by the Cornet in consultation with his immediate associates’ [WSR].

Muckle Michael (mu-kul-muI-kul) n. nickname for Michael Anderson of Denholm.

Muckle Mou’d Meg (mu-kul-mood-, -mowd-meg) n. actually Agnes Murray, daughter of the Laird of Elibank, apparently hard to marry off because of her appearance, she eventually married Sir William Scott of Harden in a choice between her and the galloways. Details of the real marriage are preserved in 2 separate contracts, separated by a few months in 1611. The romanticised story is told in the ballad, one version of which is Hogg’s ‘The Fray at Elibank’. Wullie Landles also wrote a long poem based on the story – ‘In loan or steedin’ whene’er they saw her, Muckle Mou’d Meg was the name they’d caa her’ [WL], ‘What Am A ti dae, mun, what Am A ti dae? Abe either got ti mairry Meg or face the hingin tree. Was ever man gien sic a choice, doon through a history? What Am A ti dae, mun, what Am a ti dae?’ [IWL].

Muckle Swine Cleuch (mu-kul-swin-klooch) n. stream that rises on Needs Law and flows westwards to join the Caddrourn Burn near Singdean. Cathide Sike is a small side stream. Little Swine Cleuch lies just to the south (it is marked ‘Swines Cleuch’ on the 1718 Buccleuch survey).

Muckle Thwarter Gill (mu-kul-thwar’-ur-gil) n. stream in eastern Liddesdale, rising on Thwartergill Head and running southwards to join the Kershop Burn to the west of Scotch Kershop.

muckle ti mean (mu-kul-ti-meen) adj., arch. much to be pitied, to be greatly sympathised with – ‘Folk are muckle ti mean that beide on aither seide o the Mairches atween twae prood an towty countries ’at canna grei an are aye cuissén-oot’ [ECS], ‘Even my douce auld neebor The Moat Looks muckle to mean and lane’ [DH], ‘The poor o the parish are muckle to mean In a but or a ben they dwell by their lane’ [RF] (noted by E.C. Smith).

muckle wheel (mu-kul-wheel) n., arch. simple design for a spinning wheel popular in the 18th century. In the earliest form there was a large, wooden fly-wheel, which was propelled by a shove of the hand, with the operator walking backwards to draw out the yarn, the length of which was then wound on a spindle and the process repeated. Later a drive belt linked the small spindle to the large wheel, which was still typically driven by hand until foot treadles came in much later. This was the first machine to be widely used in the beginnings of the knitwear industry in Hawick, and was common in homes into the 19th century. It was effectively replaced by the ‘spinning jenny’ – ‘...a small trade in yarns spun by women on the ‘muckle’ wheel ...’ [WSR] (also known as the ‘meikle wheel’; cf. little wheel).

Mudie (mu-dee) n. James C. (19th C.) teacher of the Academy based at the Subscription Rooms in the mid-19th century. He was later joined by James Brand, but apparently a clash of personalities led Brand to leave and start his own school. The school was known as ‘Hawick High Mudie’s monkeys

School’ and was in competition with the public ‘Buccleuch School’ across the street. It ran until around 1874. He eventually wound up the school and left Hawick, possibly because of the competition from ‘Brand’s Schuil’. He also served as Session Clerk for Hawick Free Kirk 1866–74. In about 1874 he was recorded owning part of the former lands of Patrick Cunningham in Hawick (see also Moodie).

Mudie’s monkeys (mum-deez-mung-keeze) n., pl. former nickname for pupils at the Subscription Rooms Academy, taught by Mr. Mudie, and used as a taunt by pupils from the Grammar School (‘Dodds’s whulps’).

muil (mil, mil) n., arch. mould, earth, especially on a grave (cf. muils and mools).

muil in wi (mil-in-wi) v., arch. to seek intimate acquaintance with, especially by insinuation – ‘Ti muill in wui = to insinuate or wheedle one’s friendship or companionship upon another’ [ECS].

muiller (mi-lur) v., arch. to crumble, moulder away, cause to crumble – ‘Ti muiller bread’ [GW], ‘Frost muillers the clogs’[GW] (noted by E.C. Smith).

muillery (mi-lu-ree) adj., arch. crumbly.

muillin (mi-lin) n., arch. a crumb – ‘There was a gey little hote o muilleens left for Lazarus!’ [ECS], ‘A herbour for auld muillins O’ lang-forgotten pieces . . .’ [DH] (also spelled ‘muileen’).

muils (milz) n., pl., arch. earth of a graveyard – ‘Let this beide as a merk o the respeck o the wretter . . . ti yin that may the muils lie licht on; the auld ye-h-teime keeper o Jethart Aibbey!’ [ECS] (cf. mools).

muin (muin, min, moon) n., arch. the Moon – ‘A duil mirk nicht an’ nae muin’ [??], ‘In a far Scots moor ’neath the siller mune, A plover’s cry in the cluds abune . . .’ [JYH], ‘Wi’ awe-struck face, the startled mune Stood still an’ glowered’ [WP], ‘Through the hert o’ the hills, By the licht o’ the stars and the mune’ [WL], ‘The mune she shines sae bright, Till a’ the yirth is marlt wi’ The gyrmns o’ her licht’ [DH], ‘. . . wi a last gledge at St. Mary’s clock keekin owre the ruifs like a sma local moon’ [DH], a month – ‘He wad sit a muin’[GW] (also spelled ‘mune’ and pronounced with a variety of vowel sounds).

muir (mür, mewr, moor, mår) n. moor, moorland, unenclosed upland – ‘The said day the bay-lyeas and towne Counsell did appoynt and ordaine the meiths and marches of the Common muire, moss and pasturage to be ridden . . .’ [BR1712], ‘. . . Yer haunts nae mair she will molest, On muir or mead’ [JH], ‘I met a man ootbye the muir; He watcht a rabbit in a snare’ [DH] (note that the word is now most often pronounced mair, while the older pronunciation was mür or a deep vowel combining i and ã; it is not always clear which pronunciation is meant when it is written ‘muir’).

the Muir (thu-mür, mewr, moor, mår) n. Hawick Moor (see also the Mair).

the Muir (thu-mür, mewr) n. former name for lands in Liddesdale, recorded as ‘The Mure’ in the 1541 rental roll. The precise location is uncertain, but they are listed between Brighouse and Heuchhouse, with a value of 5 shillings and 4 pence.

Muir (mewr) n. Sir Adam of Rowallan (14th C.) son of William. He married Janet Muir, from the Pokellie side of the family. His children included: Adam, who succeeded; Sir Reginald, who was Chamberlain of Scotland; and Elizabeth, who married King Robert II. Sir Adam of Rowallan (d.1399) son of Sir Adam. He married Janet, daughter of John Danielson of that Ilk. He was succeeded by Archibald and probably also had daughters Jean and Elizabeth. Alexander (17th
C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Margaret Thomson and their children included Bessie (b.1678) and Agnes (b.1680) and an unnamed child (b.1687). The witnesses in 1680 were Walter Paisley and Dand Gray (based on which, he probably lived at Weensland). He could be the Alexander who received money from the Wilton poor box in 1705. Sir Archibald of Rowallan (d.1298) son of Sir Gilchrist. He probably held lands in upper Teviotdale, like his father. He married Margaret, daughter of Sir John Montgomery. He was succeeded by his son William and also had daughters Jean and Margaret. He died in battle near Berwick. Archibald of Rowallan (d.1426) son of Sir Adam. He probably held the lands of Commonside, Dryden and Harwood, like generations of his family before. He married Euphame, daughter of Kennedy of Dumnuir. His eldest son John died before him and he was succeeded by his grandson John, who died at Flodden. Sir Gilchrist (d.c.1280) possibly son of Sir Adam. He was said to have gained the family seat of Rowallan Castle through marrying Isabel, daughter and heir of Walter Comyn. However, another version (in the 17th century family history by Sir William Muir) states that he was dispossessed by Comyn until Alexander III raised a sufficient force to eject the Comyns and re-establish him at Rowallan. He fought at the Battle of Largs. He was succeeded by Sir Archibald of Rowallan. He was also said by his 17th century descendant to have acquired lands in Roxburghshire through his marriage to Isabel Comyn, specifically ‘Cumin-side, draden and harwoods’; these are surely the lands of Commonside, Dryden and Harwood in upper Teviotdale. Support for the connection with the Comyns comes from part of the family shield of the Muirs of Rowallan being that of the Comyns. His family were still associated with the lands of Commonside, Dryden and Over Harwood until the early 16th century. Gordon (159– ) son of Bob and Jean, he attended the High School and then trained as a graphic designer in London and New Mexico. He worked for a while as a woodblock artist in Tokyo and in 1984 was a founding partner of Border Image. Along with his old school friend Doug Veitch, he brought the Zimbabwean band the Bhundu Boys to Britain in 1986. He then managed them on a year long tour, which was pivotal in the World Music movement of the time. As a sculptor he has several pieces in public spaces, e.g. ‘Alex the Goose and Friend’ and ‘Leap of Faith’ in Belfast, a set of pieces in Coatbridge and memorials to the men who died building the Forth Bridge. James (17th C.) resident of Woll in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll. His surname is written as ‘Muere’. Jean (193– ) schoolteacher and long-time Cavers resident, author of ‘Cavers: a keek in the window’ (2000). She married Acting Father Bob, and has been involved with the Archeological Society. She also wrote ‘Airchie Oliver’s a Hunder and a Half’ and co-wrote ‘Airchie Oliver’s Birthday Cairds’ with Jim Coltman. In 2015, she and her husband and son wrote an article about the leaders of the Scottish Renaissance, MacDiarmid and Johnstone being friends of the family. John of Rowallan (d.1513) grandson of Robert and son of John and Elizabeth Stewart. In 1508 he was directed by the Privy Council to grant ‘warrandice’ to George Scott of Whames (grandson of Stephen Scott of Muirhouse) in the lands of Dryden, Commonside and Over Harwood. In 1510/1 George Scott wrote a letter of acquittance, stating that he (John) had paid him (George) the £40 and 14 merks owed for these lands. He may thus be the last Muir of Rowallan to have been associated with lands in upper Teviotdale. He married Margaret, 3rd daughter of Archibald Boyd of Bonshaw; they had 4 sons (including Mungo, who succeeded) and 4 daughters. He was killed at Flodden. His great-great-grandson was a poet and politician, who wrote a family history. John (d.1579) Rector of Ashkirk from about the time of the Reformation. He is recorded as holding the parsonage of Ashkirk Parish until his demission in 1570, when it was presented to John Hamilton; he is there recorded as ‘John Murie’. He was deprived in 1573 for failing to subscribe to articles of religion. He is presumably the same ‘Sir John Muir’ who died in 1579 when the vicarage of Ashkirk was given to Thomas Cranstoun. John (17th C.) recorded as being in Weensland in 1687 when his daughter Helen was baptised in Hawick Parish. His wife was Isobel Blyth and the witnesses were James Gray and James Miller. He could be the resident of the west-side of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. It is possible he is the John ‘mure’ who witnessed (along with Walter Paisley) the baptism in Roberton Parish of a ‘bastard child’ of Adam Scott of Burnfoot in 1686. John (17th C.) carrier listed among those who subscribed to the fund for the new Kirk bell in Hawick in 1693/4. He could be the same as the John who was in Weensland. John (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Greenbank in 1785, 1786 and 1788, with his surname recorded as ‘Moor’. He married Esther Turnbull in 1784 and their children included: Nelly (b.1785); James (b.1786); and John (b.1788). He may be the 70-year old recorded at Dearnburnhaugh in the 1841 census, living with Janet (probably his daughter), and Walter Nichol (who later married Janet). John (18th/19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf, recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Robert of Rowallan (d.1504) from near Kilmours in Ayrshire, he was nicknamed ‘the Rud’. He held the lands of Dryden, Commonside and Over Harwood in 1462 as security for a loan to Stephen Scott of Muiirhouse. He paid 200 merks for these lands, the document being signed in Edinburgh (presumably where he lived). His name is written ‘Robertus Mure de Rowallane’. In 1477 he gave a discharge to Robert Scott of ‘Dogheadauch’ for the balance of the loan. It seems unlikely he ever lived in upper Teviotdale, but his family had been associated with these lands from the 13th century. He married Margaret Newton, daughter of the Laird of Mitchellhill. They had 4 sons (including John, who succeeded) and a daughter. In 1508 his grandson John was directed by the Privy Council to grant ‘warrandice’ to George Scott in the same lands. Rev. Robert (1832–1882) from Ayr, he became minister at Holm of Balfron and then minister of Allars Church from 1864. He is said to have been of saintly character and with a very liberal outlook. He suffered from ill-health for several years and died in office, leaving a 9 month vacancy at Allars. He wrote ‘The Perpetuity of Christian Friendship’ in Logan’s ‘Words of Comfort’ and contributed articles to ‘Forward’. He married Susan, daughter of Dundee Merchant William Duncan. They had 4 daughters and 1 son: one daughter wrote short stories; one was a classical scholar; Anne Davidson, who became a well-known watercolour artist; and Sir Robert. Sir Robert, F.R.S. (1864–1959) son of Rev. Robert, he was born at Balfron, Stirlingshire, but his father became minister at Hawick shortly after he was born. He spent 16 years growing up in Hawick. He was educated at Hawick Grammar School and Teviot Grove Academy and then Edinburgh University. He chose to follow a career in pathology, first working in Edinburgh, then being offered the Chair of Pathology at St. Andrews and then he was Professor of Pathology at the University of Glasgow 1899–1936. He served on the Medical Research Council and many other bodies related with cancer and disease. During WWI he had a position overseeing hospitals in Scotland. He became a Fellow of the Royal Society in 1911, had a royal medal in 1929, was knighted in 1934 and received the Lister Medal in 1936. He was also a member of the Royal Society of Edinburgh. He returned to Hawick in 1926 as the Callants’ Club guest. He was said to have a shy and aloof character, but delighted in deflating pompous colleagues. He never married, but in later life live with 2 of his sisters in Edinburgh. At the age of almost 90 he flew to Australia to visit his eldest sister. He died in Edinburgh. His ‘Manual of Bacteriology’ (1897) went through several editions, and his ‘Textbook of Pathology’ (1924) was extremely successful. Robert ’Bob’ (1930–) local vet, who was Acting Father in 1975. He was the first Acting Father to accompany the ‘Big Threi’ to the Coble on the Saturday. He served as President of the Callants’ Club. In 2020 he featured in a video for the song ‘The Grey’, written by his son Gordon. He is married to Jean and father of Gordon, John and Janet. William of Rowallan (13th/14th C.) son of Sir Archibald. He probably owned the lands in upper Teviotdale that were first held by his grandfather. He married a daughter of William Lindsay of Craigie and was succeeded by Sir Adam (formerly written ‘Mure’ and sometimes ‘Moor’).

muir-band (mewr-bawnd n., arch. a hard layer of sand and clay below the topsoil, impervious to water, and believed to hinder the full exploitation of the land – ‘...there exits, not much below the surface, a stiff, dense and sterile clay, which denies all passage to moisture, as well as to the roots of plants ...commonly denominated ‘muir-band’ ...’ [RJE] (also muir-bund).

muir-bund (mewr-bund n., arch. a layer of hard subsoil, adj. having a hard layer (of clay, etc.) beneath the turf – ‘Underlaid by a ‘moor-band’ or a ‘moorband pan’’ [GW] (also muir-band).

muir-burn (mewr-burn n., arch. a controlled burning of moorland to encourage new growth – ‘...How grand the scene yon russet down discloses, While far the withering heaths with moor-burn blaze!’ [JL].

the Muir Burn (thu-muir-, mair-burn n. stream that joins the Liddel at the very southernmost point of Castleton Parish. It forms part of the boundary between Roxburghshire and Dumfriesshire. The area has many signs of ancient use, including rig and furrow field markings, enclosures, a former lime quarry and workings, and several burnt mounds. Additionally there is the site of a chapel, on the east bank of the stream, but over the Dumfriesshire line. The chapel remains measure about 12.5 m by 5 m, with a doorway on the south side. The hill there is still known as Chapel Knowe. This is probably the ‘lands of Mureburne’ listed among the Dumfriesshire possessions of the Scotts of Buccleuch possessed in the 1663 marriage contract of Anne, Countess of Buccleuch (it is ‘Mire burn’ in 1718, ‘Mare Burn’ on Stobie’s 1770 map and ‘The Mareburn’ in 1821).

muir-cheeper (mewr-chee-pur) n., arch. the meadow pipit, Anthus pratensis (also moss-cheeper and titlin).

muircock (mewr-, mär-kok) n. a male red grouse – ‘Where the muircock cries its burley Owre the heather plaided braes’ [WL].

Muir Ferm (mewr-ferm) n. former name for Pilmuir farm.

Muirferm (mewr-ferm) n. former name for a farmstead in Wilton Parish. It is recorded as ‘Moofarm’ on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, with James Grieve the farmer there. It is unclear where this was, but presumably distinct from Muirfield.

Muirfield (mewr-feeld) n. area between Groundstone and Hassendean. The lands and farm were formerly part of Hassendean Common, which was divided in the late 18th century. William Douglas was recorded there in 1772 and John Oliver in 1791. George Bell was farmer there in 1797. Andrew Little was shepherd there in 1835. Labourer Adam Brydon was there in 1841. A drove road used to pass over here, between Hassendean Common and Groundstone. To the north-east are signs of rig and furrow cultivation (also called ‘Moorfield’, so marked on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Muirfield (mewr-feeld) n. former name for lands in Abbotrule. It is recorded in the 1678 valuation roll as ‘Muirfield acres (Abbotrule)’ when Charles Kerr held the teinds.

muirfowl (mewr-fowl) n., arch. the red grouse, Lagopus scoticus – ‘The muirfowl a’ they kennis her well, The maukin oft she gar’d them squeal’ [JH].

Muirheid (mewr-heed) n. (Muirhead) Andrew see Andrew de Durisdeer. George (15th/16th C.) son and heir of Robert of Windyhill in Dumfriesshire. He appears to have had a dispute with Douglas of Cavers over the £10 lands of Denholm Mains. He was recorded in 1490 as ‘Master George Mureheide’ when he granted a charter of lands within Denholm and Cavers. He gave sasine of these lands to William Douglas of Cavers in 1491/2. He was said to be a ‘familiar servitor’ of the King and was probably related to Master Richard ‘Murehead’ who was Lord Clerk Register and Secretary. He married Anabelle Grierson, with whom he is recorded in a charter for Windyhills in 1506/7. Robert (15th C.) recorded in 1479 when James Alemoor of that Ilk and John Turnbull ‘in the Fithe’ were ordered to pay rentals to him for his lands in Cavers Parish. Additionally William Douglas of Cavers did not appear when called to pay the £25 owed for the mails of these same lands. In 1490 his son and heir George had a charter from James IV for lands in ‘the dominal lands of Denhame, and ten-pound land lying in the town and territory of Caveris.’ He is recorded as being of ‘Windhilless’, which is probably the village of Windhills near Closeburn, Dumfriesshire. Witnesses to the document were Bishop Robert Muirhead of Glasgow and Dean Richard Muirhead of Glasgow, who were presumably relatives. Rev. Robert (1706/7–84) minister of Southdean Parish from 1756 until his death. He married Elizabeth Ainslie in 1779, and she died in 1800.

Muirhouse (mewr-woos) n. Muirhouse, former name for lands in the barony of Crichton and county of Roxburghshire. The lands were owned by a branch of the Scotts in the 15th century. The name is lost, and the precise location is uncertain (but somewhere near Pathhead). Stephen Scott had a charter of Muirhouse in 1450 and a sasine in 1463; he appears to be the same man who was also ‘of Wilton’ as well as other lands, and was a son of Robert Scott of Rankleburn. Muirhouse was inherited by Stephen’s son Robert, who had a sasine in 1464, then there was a dispute over inheritance by Robert’s son George (also of Borthaugh), with a counter-claim by Patrick, Earl of Bothwell. George Scott must have won this case, since his son John had a confirmation in these lands in 1526/7 (note that there are many other places of the same name, including one near Lilliardsedge, another near Dyfesdale in Dumfriesshire and at least 6 others in Midlothian; it is ‘Murhaus’ in 1464 and ‘Myrhouss’ in 1505).

Muirhooselaw (mewr-woos-law) n. Muirhooselaw, place name south of Maxton, being essentially the same place as Ancrum Moor and Lilliard’s Edge, and hence sometimes referred to as the site of the Battle of Ancrum Moor in 1545. A trial of 1502 describes how 4 Henrisons were taken from their farm there by rievers and ransomed to the English. It is recorded being leased from Thomas Hamilton to John Haliburton in the 17th century. Haliburton of Muirhouselaw gave evidence at the trial of George Turnbull of Belses in 1603. Many of the buildings of the estate are in a picturesque pink-red sandstone (the name ‘Muirhouse’, now lost, deriving from the Old English ‘mor hus’, meaning ‘house on the moor’, first appears about 1200, while this name first appears in 1529 as ‘Murrieslaw’ and is ‘Moreislaw’ in 1603; it is ‘Muirsslaw’ on Blaeu’s c.1654 map).

Muirknowe (moor-, mewr-, muir-now) n. former name for lands in the Barony of Riddell. According to the services of heirs in 1636 and 1669 they corresponded to part of the lands of West Lilliesleaf (it is ‘Muiricnow’ in 1636 and ‘Muiricnow’ in 1669).

Munro (mun-ro) Adam (b.1834) son of William, he continued the rope-making business of his father. In 1861 he was still living with his parents and siblings at 1 Bourtree Place. He married Christina Govenlock and their children included: Mary (b.1871); and William Alexander (b.1873), who was a chemist. Daniel (b.1831/2) from Ireland, he was appointed Superintendent of the Roxburghshire Constabulary by the new Town Council in 1861. In the 1861 census he was living on Jedburgh High Street with his wife Elizabeth and children Janet, Archibald, Helen and Daniel. He was given an increased police force to improve law and order on the streets of Hawick. However, he was dismissed in 1867 and charged with breach of trust and embezzlement. Eliza (b.1829/30) daughter of Congregational minister and rope-maker William. She was mistress of the Infants’ School on Buccleuch Street in 1852. John (17th C.) listed among the subscribers for the new Kirk bell in 1693/4. He is probably the John, married to Isobel Henderson, whose children born in Hawick included: Helen (b.1680); William (b.1683); and Agnes (b.1687). Robert (1868–1955) born in Alness, he was educated at Aberdeen Grammar School and Edinburgh University. Admitted to the Scottish Bar in 1893, he became King’s Counsel in 1910. He was Liberal M.P. for Wick 1910–18 and Liberal M.P. for Roxburgh and Selkirk after 1918–22, the first such M.P. after the Border Burghs constituency was dissolved. He was Privy Counsellor from 1913 and Lord Advocate 1913–16, before becoming Secretary of State for Scotland 1916–22. He later became Lord Alness, Chief Justice Clerk. He was created Baron Alness on his retirement from the bench in 1933. He was later Lord-in-Waiting to King George VI and awarded the Grand Cross of the Order of the British Empire. He opened the War Memorial in the Park at a special ceremony in 1920. Rev. William (1798/9–1883) rope-maker from Berwick who became Congregational Church minister for around 40 years. In Pigot’s 1825/6 directory he was a rope and twine maker and flax dresser on the High Street. He witnessed a baptism for weaver Charles Scott in 1826. He became King’s Counsel in 1810. He was Liberal M.P. after the Border Burghs constituency was dissolved. He was Privy Counsellor from 1913 and Lord Advocate 1913–16, before becoming Secretary of State for Scotland 1916–22. He later became Lord Alness, Chief Justice Clerk. He was created Baron Alness on his retirement from the bench in 1933. He was later Lord-in-Waiting to King George VI and awarded the Grand Cross of the Order of the British Empire. He opened the War Memorial in the Park at a special ceremony in 1920. Rev. William (1798/9–1883) rope-maker from Berwick who became Congregational Church minister for around 40 years. In Pigot’s 1825/6 directory he was a rope and twine maker and flax dresser on the High Street. He witnessed a baptism for weaver Charles Scott in 1826. He appears to have first become minister of the newly (re-)formed congregation in 1836, which faltered for several years, with a 2nd splinter Church also forming in 1842. In Pigot’s 1837 directory he was a rope-maker at the East Port and in the 1841 census he was at ‘Eastend’ and still a rope-maker. By 1851 he was at 1 Bourtree Place and minister of the ‘Cong. Union Chapel’. In Slater’s 1852 directory he was still listed as a roper-maker, and separately as minister of the Independent Chapel on Melgund Place. In 1847 he invited John Rutherford of Kelso to preach at a series of prayer meetings in Hawick, which took place in the Spring of 1848, ultimately lasted for 7 weeks, and led to the founding of the Evangelical Union Kirk in Hawick (the present Congregational Kirk). However, some dispute led to him to withdraw his support from this ‘mission’, hence the forming of the E.U. Kirk, separate from his own. He was Chairman of the Parochial Board for 20 years and active in public service. He was also first Vice-President of the Hawick Total Abstinence Society. He was noted for courageously visiting the sick and dying during the 1849 cholera epidemic, as a result of which he had a public funeral. He was succeeded as minister in 1873 by Rev. W.L. Walker, by which time the congregation must have been dwindling. He is probably the William Munro who is recorded in about 1874 as owner of the ‘particate lands’ that had earlier been owned by Robert Herkness. He married Alison, daughter of Yeddie Small. Their children included: Alexander (b.1826); Eliza (b.1830), who was an infant teacher; Adam (b.1834), who continued the rope-making business; Agnes (b.c.1837); Alison (b.c.1839); Margaret (‘Maggie’, b.c.1842); William Alexander (b.c.1844); Charles (b.c.1847); Mary (b.c.1850); and an unnamed son who died in 1840. He may also have had a son John who, along with 2 other Hawick men, was in a tweed manufacturing partnership in Cork (but there may be confusion over the name). A portrait of him exists. He is buried in Wellogate Cemetery (with ropemaker symbols). William Alexander (b.c.1845) son of Rev. William. He was a clerk at Thomas Purdon & Sons. He was connected with Allars Kirk for its last 5 decades, being Session Clerk. He was described as being ‘notable for his fine appearance’ (also written ‘Monroe’).

Munsie (mun-see) n., arch. someone deserving contempt, a monstrosity, fright, sight, spectacle – ‘... an aamaist the whole road-end cam oot-her-oot ti waal an glower at the unordnar munsie’ [ECS] (from French ‘monsieur’; mainly from the Scottish North-east).

In 1851 she was a milliner, living with her sisters Margaret and Jane. Agnes (1829–1916) daughter of Andrew of Spittal Tower. She married railway guard James Lambert and later kept a washhouse at 29 Wellogate Place. Her daughter Helen kept up the wash-house. Alexander (15th C.) recorded in 1428/9 when he gave a sasine at the command of Archibald, Earl of Douglas, of the Barony of Hawick to William Douglas of Drumlanrig. He may have been an officer or bailie for the Barony or Earl, or possibly he held the rights of the Barony while the heir to Drumlanrig was a minor. He is probably the ‘Sandris of murray’ on an assize for lands in Bemersyde in 1425. He is also probably the ‘Alexandrum de Murrase’ who was on the inquest for the lands of Eilrig in 1426. Probably the same ‘Alexandro de Murray’ witnessed the 1431 document transferring Heap from the Langlands’ to the Scots; in his attestation to the same transfer he is ‘Alysander off Murray off Cranstoun’. In 1443 he is ‘Alexander ‘de Moravia’ of Cranston when witness to a charter for William Cranston of Crailing. Alexander (d.bef. 1485) Rector of Hawick. He was 2nd son of John of Philiphaugh, brother of Patrick of Falahill and uncle of John, ‘the Outlaw Murray’. As a cleric, he was sometimes referred to as ‘Master’. He was mentioned regularly in the Exchequer Rolls from at least 1460, being King’s Receiver and then Clerk of the Chancery from 1465. He was Clerk and Director of the Chancery of Scotland in 1477. He was also one of the Auditors of the Exchequer and a Canon of Moray from at least 1464. His name appears between 1476 and 1482 as Rector of Hawick. In 1476/7 he was listed as Rector of Hawick and Director of the Chancery when he has a charter for lands in Berwick. In 1479 he brought an action against David Scott of Buccleuch for the sum of 44 pounds of tax belonging to the church, but collected by Scott; there is no record of how this was resolved. Also in 1479 he was assigned the ‘grassum’ for part of the lands of ‘Warmwod’ in Ettrick Ward. He was listed as ‘rector de Hawik’ when he witnessed a charter for James Hunter, Rector of Cranston. In 1482 he was also recorded as Rector of ‘Petty and Brachly’ when witness to an Inverness-shire document (along with the Rector of Ettrick Forest and others). About 1484 he appears to have himself been ‘rector of The Forest’ (i.e. Yarrow Kirk), and was still Director of the Chancery. His brother William is mentioned in 1485, by which time he was deceased. In 1536/7 it is written that John Scott took over as Vicar of Hawick following the death of Alexander Murray; however, this must either be an error or a later man of the same name. Alexander of Orchard (16th C.) recorded in 1575/6 making a complainant regarding ‘mails’ for Elibank. It is unclear how he was related to other Murrays, but he was surely connected with the Murrays of Blackbarony. Alexander (d.1682) son and heir of Sir Robert of Priestfeild. In 1672 he was served heir to his father’s lands in Hawick. This was explicitly the annual rent of 600 merks for the 20 husbandlands of lands in the east of the Town of Hawick and 8 husbandlands of land in the west of Hawick. It is unclear where these lands were, why they were owned by Murrays, and what happened to them. He married Janet, daughter of James Rocheid of Inverleith. He appears to have himself been ‘rector of The Forest’ (i.e. Yarrow Kirk), and was still Director of the Chancery. His brother William is mentioned in 1485, by which time he was deceased. It is unclear where these lands were, why they were owned by Murrays, and what happened to them. He married Janet, daughter of James Rocheid of Inverleith. He was succeeded by his son Sir Alexander of Melgum (1682–1713), who married Grizel, daughter of Patrick Kynymound of that Ilk. Alexander (b.c.1790) from Brownmuir in Selkirkshire, he was a cattle dealer in Lilliesleaf. He lived with his brothers William (a teacher) and Walter (an agricultural labourer) on the Loan in 1841 and on the south side of Main Street in 1851 and 1861. His wife was Janet and their children included Thomas, Jessie, Margaret and John W. He was still alive in 1861, although a widower. Alexander Davidson (1840–1907) son of Thomas, clothier in Denholm and Hawick, with his mother being Mary Scott, daughter of Charles Scott, Hawick linen manufacturer. He was younger brother of Sir J.A.H. He was an apprentice at the Hawick Advertiser and was local correspondent for the Southern Reporter. He was a prominent member of the Hawick Mutual Improvement Society. He left Hawick in 1862 to become editor of the Peebleshire Advertiser. He later was editor of the Fife Journal and Dumfries Courier, before becoming editor of the Newcastle Daily Journal, a position he held for 37 years. He married Elizabeth Stuart Honeyman of Cupar, and she died in 1926, aged 81. They had 7 children. He published a story ‘Charnwood; or, lost, found and faithful!’ in 1876, set in the Borders in the mid-19th century, and a novel ‘The Barringtons’ in 1908. Andrew of Blackbarony (16th C.) son of John, who was Burgess of Edinburgh, and died at Fledden. He was a great-grandson of John of Philiphaugh. There was a ‘retour of service’ for him to inherit his father’s lands in 1513/4, with a special dispensation because of his age. In 1541 he claimed the tenancy of the Crown lands of the wester side of ‘Warmwod’, ‘alias Quhitehauch Braa’ (in Ettrick), then occupied by Walter Scott in Synton; he also claimed Priesthope in Ettrick and Glenypet in Yarrow. He was one of the 4 ‘curators’ of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch. In 1564/5 he was listed (on the Buccleuch side) on the bond between the Scotts and the Kers, and his support was also mentioned in the 1568/9 bond. He firstly married Elizabeth, daughter and heiress of William Lockhart, and had a daughter Marion, who married James Pringle of Whytbank. He secondly married Grizel Beaton, widow of Sir William Scott of Kirkurd, and was thus Sir Walter’s step-father. Their children were: Sir John of Blackbarony; Andrew; Sir Gideon of Elibank; William of Dunerne and Newton; Elizabeth, who married James Bothwick of Newbyres and Sir Thomas Hamilton of Priestfeild; and Agnes, who married her cousin Patrick Murray of Falahill, but was mentioned in a potential marriage contract in 1568/9, part of the resolution of the feud between the Kers and the Scotts. Andrew (17th C.) possibly the father of Andrew of Spittal Tower. He is said to have come from the Braemar area, and refusing to join the force under his superior, the Earl of Mar, he was forced to flee south, where he joined a troop of horsemen under Douglas of Cavers. Andrew (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1648 he witnessed a baptism for Walter Douglas. He married Margaret Scoon and their children included Adam (b.1643), Helen (b.1646) and Isobel (b.1654). His wife’s name was recorded as Janet in 1646. Andrew (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Jane Anderson and their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1671. The witnesses were John Elliot and William Gray. Andrew (17th C.) tenant in Kirkdean in Castleton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. Andrew ‘The Hazel Dog o the Toor’ (1715–77) second son of John and brother of John (and ancestor of Sir James A.H.). He carried on running the farm tenanted by his father, Spittal
Murray

Tower. He is recorded as gardener at Tower in 1753 when one of his children was baptised. He married Elizabeth (or ‘Betty’) Spottiswoode, who came from an old Melrose family (her sister Isobel married James Hood of Dryburgh, ancestor of the Hoods of Lilliesleaf). Their children, baptised in Cavers Parish, were: Elizabeth (b.1747), who emigrated to Canada; Isobel (b.1751); Andrew (b.1753); William (b.1754); Jane (b.1756); John (b.1758); Helen; James (b.1764); Agnes (b.1767); and Mary (1770/1–1845). Andrew (18th C.) resident of Wiltown Parish. He married Betty Inglis and their children included: Thomas (b.1775); and Andrew (b.1777). He may be the spinner whose child died in Hawick in 1809. Andrew (1753–94) eldest son of Andrew and Elizabeth Spottiswood. He was a tenant farmer, with farms leased from the Dicksons of Hassendeanburn, first Westerhouses and then Newton. He was also tenant at Spittal Tower, like his father. In 1791 he was recorded at ‘Spittalhall’ when one of his children was baptised in Wiltown Parish. In 1789 he married Isabella Henderson of Bonchester and she died in 1841/2 (although she was still living with her son William in Hawick in 1841). There is a story about him finding a box of gold when ploughing the fields at Westerhouses. He is supposed to have said to his wife ‘I am just going to shave and take it down to the Burn’, and then he delivered it to Mr. Dickson, who rewarded him with a year’s free rent. His children were: Andrew (1781–1848), who emigrated to Australia; Jean, who died young; James, who married a Wintrop of Hawick and was Sir J.A.H.’s grandfather; William (b.1789), stockmaker and merchant of Hawick; Elizabeth (or ‘Betsy’), who married whip-maker Michael Ogilvy; Jane (b.1791), who married William Clerk; and John (b.1793), who died young. Several of his children were christened in Wiltown Parish. Andrew (1781–1848) eldest child of Andrew of Spittal Tower. He was an agricultural labourer in Oxnam Parish. He married Isabella Cranston (whose sister was the grandmother of Cogsmill teacher Andrew Oliver); she died in 1832, aged 48 and is buried at Oxnam. After his wife’s death he emigrated with his family to Australia. Their children included: Robert (1811–92), who married Jane Blair and was buried at ‘Haning’ near Bendemeer, New South Wales; Margaret Ann (1813–39), who died on the voyage to Australia; Andrew (1815–46), who became ship’s master and was lost at sea; Isabella (1817–98); William (1819–76), who died at sea; Elizabeth (1821–77); and Jane (b.1824). He died near Melbourne. Andrew (b.c.1783) farmer at Old Castleton in 1821 when he subscribed to William Scott’s ‘ Beauties of the Border’. He was also listed there in 1841. His wife was Janet and their children included George and John. Andrew (1819/20–1907) born in Kirkton Parish, he moved to Hobkirk Parish with his father, who was a hind at Ruletownhead. In 1851 he was an agricultural labourer at Hallrule Mill and in 1861 was a ploughman at Kirknowe. In 1857 he married Betsy, the eldest daughter of the miller at Hallrule, James Laidlaw; she died in 1906. Both he and his wife died at Forkins and are buried at Hobkirk. Their children were: Isabella (b.1857), who died aged 5; and William (b.1858). Andrew (b.1821/2) son of William and brother of William and John. In the 1840s he opened a school in a room at the top of Baker Street. He later left for college, and the school was continued by his brother John, moving to the old East Bank Kirk. He returned later to assist his brother William in running the much larger school, which moved to 8 Kirkgate (i.e. St. Mary’s Place). They were living at 7 Kirkgate in 1861, presumably next to the school. This eventually became St. Mary’s and ultimately Trinity. Andrew (1823–82) son of weaver and merchant William. He was a frameworker in Hawick. In 1851 he was living on Nichol’s Close and in 1851 at 3 Back Row. He married Isabella Brown and their children included Jane, Helen, William and John. Anne (1694–1737) daughter of Bennet, Laird of Chesters, she married her cousin John Murray, who was the Duke of Buccleuch’s tenant at Unthank, and died in 1728. In 1734 she moved to Hawick, where she died. Her son James (b.1713) emigrated to North Carolina in 1735, and is an ancestor of Franklin D. Roosevelt. Sir Archibald of Blackbarony (d.bef. 1634) son of Sir John. He was knighted by James VI when he was young, and was made a Baronet of Nova Scotia in 1628. He married Margaret Maule, a descendant of the house of Panmure. Their children were: Sir Alexander, 2nd Baronet; Walter of Halmire; Robert, ancestor of the Murrays of Murray’s Hall; Margaret, who married Sir John Hope; Bethia, who married William Forbes of Craigevor and secondly Sir Alexander Forbes of Tolquhonie; Helen, who married Sir John Carstairs; and Elizabeth, who married William Scott of Mangerston. Archibald (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1719 he was heir at Hislop. He married Bessie Black and their daughter Bessie was baptised in 1719, with witnesses ‘Mr’ Thomas Hume in Commonside, Robert Scott, tenant in Falnash and Archibald Scott in Hislop. Archibald (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living in Denholm in 1733 when he married Betty Little. Archibald (b.1744) was probably his son. Archibald (18th/19th C.) tailor in Denholm, listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when he owned 2 horses. He was probably related to James (grandfather of Sir James A.H.), a tailor in Hawick, who learned his trade in Denholm. Charles (18th C.) workman in Hawick Parish. He married Isabel Dryden and their children included: Isobel (b.1770); Robert (b.1772); Charles (b.1776); and Daniel (b.1778). Charles Oliver (1842–1923) son of Thomas and Mary Scott, he was born in Denholm. Brother of Sir James, he was known as an engraver. He worked as a clerk in a woolen factory in Hawick until the age of 21. He then attended the Edinburgh School of Design, working by day as a lithographer. He was Gold and Silver Medalist at the Royal Scottish Academy School. He settled in London in 1868, being on the staff of ‘Punch and Judy’. In London he became an engraver and was a founder member of the Royal Society of Painter Etchers. He first exhibited his plates in the Royal Academy Exhibition in 1878. He also worked on some local projects, including the reproduction of Tom Scott’s ‘Return to Hawick’, and some original etchings of Hawick, for example images of the old Town Hall and St. Mary’s Kirk. There is also a well-known picture of Sir Walter Scott’s Tomb at Dryburgh Abbey. He married Elizabeth Wilson, daughter of Archibald Campbell from Glasgow and they had 7 children. He died in Craydon. Christina nee Winthrop (18th/19th C.) daughter of Hawick writer (i.e. lawyer) Thomas. She married a Mr. Stewart and became widowed. A story is told of how she met her new husband James Murray. Apparently she dreamt she was walking in her father’s garden at the Wheathole and there met a man she did not recognise, but later saw him in East Bank Kirk (built on the site of the garden), later was introduced to him and eventually they were married. David (b.1704) son of David, he was born in Eves Parish. He lived at Whisgills farm in Castleton Parish. He married Elizabeth Murray (b.1716). Their children included: Elizabeth; Jean, who married Andrew Kyle; Agnes (b.1740); David (b.1743); John (b.1746); William Easton (b.1749); and Thomas (b.1754). David (1768/9–1841) son of James and Anne Dalrymple. He was a joiner at Teindside and perhaps in the Borthwick valley. His wife Mary Anderson died in 1819, aged 43. In 1820 he secondly married Mary Wilson, daughter of a Hawick blacksmith. The Murray family living at Mossyknowe in 1841 are probably his widow Mary and children James (a journeyman joiner), Henry, David and John. David (1791/2–1815) son of Thomas, tenant at Whisgills. He was described as ‘six feet six inches high; and to a majestic and well-proportioned person, he joined the mildest dispositions of mind’. He died aged 23. David (1832/3–83) son of James, he was tenant at Whisgills, like his father. He married Elizabeth Robson, who died in 1896, aged 54. Their children included Jessie Temple (1877/8–1938) and probably James who also farmed at Whisgills. They are buried at Etottle. David (1870/1–1911) youngest son of William, teacher at St. Mary’s School. He trained as a doctor at Edinburgh University and became assistant to Dr. James Brydon in the Sandbed. He later married Dr. Barydon’s daughter Mary. He then worked in Dumbarton and Edinburgh, but returned to Hawick as partner to Dr. Brydon about 1901. He carried on for a few years after Brydon’s death in 1905, later taking on Dr. Samuel Davidson as a new partner, but dying himself not long after, aged only 40. He left 2 daughters. E. Judith local art teacher. In 2009, along with Lesley Fraser, she produced the booklet ‘Hawick Common Riding, An Illustrated Guide’, as well as the children’s version ‘The Kidz Guide’, distributed to senior primary pupils. ‘My First Common Riding Book’, aimed at nursery and primary school children followed. Elizabeth ‘Bessie’ (17th C.) resident of North Synton in 1694 when she was listed on the Hearth Tax roll among ‘ye poor’. Elliot (18th/19th C.) married Violet Elliot in 1805 in Southdean, and she died at Bonchester. Their children included Charlotte (who married Adam Bell from Camp-town), Charles (who worked at Wolfelee), Walter (farm servant, who died at Old Jethart) and John (servant at Wauchope and hedger for Minto estate). Elliot (b.c.1840) from Hobkirk Parish. He took over as blacksmith at Chesters from his uncle John Waugh in the early 1870s. He remained as blacksmith for more than 30 years, so that between him, his uncle and his uncle’s father (Robert), they had been blacksmiths at Chesters for about 95 years. Francis (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen Scoon and their children included: Janet (b.1670); Margaret (b.1674); and Marie (b.1675). The witnesses in 1674 were John Murray and John Scoon (who may have been fathers or brothers of the couple).
He could be the Francis born in 1643 to Alaeexander and ‘Manie’ Scott. Frank James (d.1943) younger brother of J.E.D. He was a plumber, like his father. He married Mary Dickie, and had 2 children, John Archibald Campbell (who worked in hosiery) and Mary Margaret. Gavin P. (19th/20th C.) 4th man to serve as Secretary for the Congregational Kirk. George (17th C.) weaver at Whitehaugh in Wilton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. George (18th/19th C.) farmer at Castleton, recorded along with John on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. John’s name came first and so was presumably his elder brother or father. George (b.1803/4) from Castleton Parish, he was shepherd at Ruthwell in 1861. He probably took over as shepherd there from his father, and was likely brother of Andrew. His wife was Jane and she had a son John Hume from a previous marriage. They had a daughter Jane. George (b.c.1810) grocer on the Howegate, probably at No. 16. He later worked as a mason’s labourer. He married Helen Tully and their children included Agnes, George, Janet and David. George (b.1806/7) from Castleton Parish, he was a shoemaker journeyman in Hawick. He was living at about 43 High Street in 1841 and on the Kirkwynd in 1851. His wife was Sarah and their children included Helen and Ann. George (19th C.) shepherd of Allanhaughmill. From about 1848 he was one of the first Trustees of Hawick Congregational (then Evangelical) Kirk. He could be the agricultural labourer listed at Haysike in 1841, with wife Margaret and children John, Thomas and Helen. George Oliver (b.1857) younger son of local historian Robert. In 1863 he presented to the Museum an amulet found in the Glebe allotments. He provided a horn mull (or perhaps the snuff) for the Snuffing in 1889. He became a doctor in Tunnel City, Wisconsin. He married Sarah Johnstone and their children were Robert Oliver and Agnes Ariska. George Malcolm C.B.E. (1937/8–) educated at Hawick High School, he qualified as a Fellow of the Faculty of Actuaries in 1961. He was a Director of the Scottish Life Assurance Company and President of the Faculty of Actuaries 1994–96. He was awarded a C.B.E. in 1995. He has been President of the Callants’ Club and Hawick R.F.C., as well as honorary secretary of Edinburgh Borderers R.F.C. and involved with the Scottish Sports Council, the General Teaching Council of Scotland and Craiglockhart College. Sir Gideon of Elbank (d.1621) 3rd son of Sir Andrew of Blackbarony. His mother was Grizel Beaton, widow of Sir William Scott of Kirkurd, and thus he was half-brother to Sir Walter Scott, 10th Laird of Buccleuch. Sir Walter owed him ‘males’ for the lands of Glenpyet in his last testament of 1574. In 1594 he was ‘Jedion Murray of Glenpint’ among the 180 or so followers of Sir James Johnstone who had a ‘respite’ for their role at Dryfe Sands the year before. He may have been educated for the church and was ‘chantour’ of Aberdeen. In 1590 along with John of Blackbarony, Patrick of Falahill and other Murays he was put under caution not to harm Robert Scott of Haining and James Scott, ‘callit Mekle Jame Eister’. He is probably the ‘Mr. Gedioun Murray’ who witnessed a document in Edinburgh for Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1591. In about 1591 he killed a man called Aitchison. In 1592, along with Walter Scott of Goldielands, he was given a commission to ‘demolish the houses and fortalices of Harden and Dryhoip’, because of Walter Scott of Harden’s involvement in the Falkland Raid. He is probably the ‘Jedion Murray of Glenpint’ listed among the supporters of Sir James Johnstone at Dryfe Sands in 1593 and about the same time he was ‘of Glenpyt’ when he was surety for William Scott of Hartwood myres and Walter Scott of Stirkslaws. In 1594 he was ‘Mr. Gedeon Murray of Glenpytte’ when he witnessed a document for the Duke of Lennox and also witnessed a bond of ‘manrent’ for the Beatties to Sir Walter Scott, signed in Hawick in 1595. In 1595 the King confirmed a charter granting him ‘Elebank, or Eleburne, in the forest and Lordship of Ettrick’. In 1596/7 Sir Walter of Buccleuch granted him the lands of Criichton, this being signed in Hawick. He was Provost of Crichton, this patronage later going to the Earl of Buccleuch. In 1598 he acted as commissioner to Sir Walter Scott in a contract with the Homes of Wedderburn regarding the lands of Whitsome, and witnessed a charter at Bransholme in 1599. In 1598/9 he resigned the lands of Easter and Wester Deloraine and Carterhaugh to Sir Walter Scott of Bransholme. In 1599 he witnessed the bonds (signed at Bransholme) between Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch and the Armstrongs and Ellios of Liddesdale. In 1602 he and his brother John were responsible for removing Scott of Hundlehope and others from lands belonging to Stewart of Traquair, and he was also surety for Robert Scott of Thirlestane. He was still witnessing documents for Scott of Buccleuch in 1603. In 1604 he and other Murrays had a caution not to harm the Stewarts of Traquair and elsewhere. He was knighted in 1605 and appointed as one of the 5 Scottish Commissioners given responsibility to ruthlessly carry out the pacification of the Borders. In 1606 he added lands of Langshaw (in Ewbank Water) and Whytbank (in Selkirkshire) to his estates. In 1607 he was mentioned in a Melrose document relating to the lands of Langshaw (where he is ‘Jedean’) and is referred to in relation to Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch as ‘beard full sister and brother bairnes’). In 1608 he was appointed to ensure that the Presbytery of Jedburgh elected ‘a constant moderator’, against the wishes of the ministers. In 1608 (although the date may be suspect) he received the teinds of Hawick Kirk in a ‘tack’ by Rev. William Fowler, with the consent of Lord Scott of Buccleuch. This was to last for his lifetime and then 19 more years. In 1610 he became a Privy Councillor and Comptroller and was named to the Commission for keeping peace in Selkirkshire. He served on the Judiciary Court in Jedburgh in 1611. He represented Selkirkshire in Parliament in 1612. In 1613 he was appointed Treasurer Depute and created Lord Elibank. He was 'Treasurer for the Justice who prosecuted the Earl of Orkney in 1615. He made preparations for the Royal visit to Scotland in 1617. He appears to have been a willing instrument of the King in imposing Episcopacy on the Scottish people. In 1621 he was accused of abusing his office by Sir James Stewart of Orkney, and it is suggested that he may have poisoned himself over the disgrace. He married Margaret, daughter of Dionis Pentland. He was succeeded by his son Sir Patrick, 1st Lord Elibank of Ettrick Forest, while Walter was another son. A marriage contract of 1611 exists between his daughter Agnes (‘Muckle Mou’d Meg’) and William Scott of Harden – ‘The Laird o’ Elibank, ee to ee Wi’ Wat o’ Harden could never see’ [WL].

Gideon (1772/3–1839) resident of Colterscleuch Toll. He married Margaret Oliver (1778/9–1843). They are buried at Teviothead. Gordon F. (20th C.) Town Hall Legal Assistant 1958–60 and Deputy Town Clerk 1960–62. Graeme (d.2000) well known reciter, brother of Philip. Harold James Ruthven (1868–1955) son of Sir James A.H. He was known as an educationalist, inspector of schools, chess historian and champion of left-handedness. He wrote an article ‘The Family of Sir James Murray’ in the 1928 Archaeological Society Transactions and a biographical sketch of his father’s life in the 1934 Transactions. He also provided family-related notes to James Haining for his monumental inscriptions. Helen (b.c.1780) grocer in Newcastle-on-Tyne, listed in 1837. In 1841 she was at about 2 Langholm Street. Henry (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He was married to Ann Bell and they had several children baptised at Netherraw and Upper Raw. Their children included Adam (b.1795), Robert (b.1797), Betty (b.1799), James (b.1802), Margaret (b.1806) and George (b.1806). James of Bowhill (d.1513) recorded in about 1529 in the Selkirk Protocol Books. He was said to have ‘died under the banner of our deceased supreme lord king James IV’ when his only daughter and heir Isabel gave the south part of Bowhill to her uncle, Michael Scott of Aikwood, and Michael’s son William. Also in 1529 his daughter granted her lands of the west side of Kershope to Michael Scott. This suggests that he had married a sister of Michael Scott of Aikwood. He was probably related to the deceased Thomas of Bowhill recorded in 1539. James of Falaud (d.c.1529) elder son of John ‘the Outlaw’. His sisters Elizabeth, Isabel and Janet married Sir James Douglas of Cavers, Robert Scott of Howpasley and Sir Robert Stewart of Minto, respectively. He held several lands in Selkirkshire and also Peeblesshire. In 1519/20 he resigned ‘Eldinghop’ (in Yarrow) to Walter Scott of Branxholme. He was on an inquest in Jedburgh in 1523. In 1524/5 he was one of those who promised to help keep order with the newly appointed Warden and Lieutenant of the Borders, the Earl of Angus. He is probably the James recorded in 1526 as Sheriff of Selkirkshire. In 1527 he had an agreement with Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme to end their feud; he agreed to forgive the Scotts and their allies for all former killings and spoliation in return for 500 merks Scots, and he also agreed to end his dispute over the lands of Kirkurd. In 1528 he agreed to deliver up all charters etc. relating to Kirkurd and give up any claim to the lands. Also in 1528 he resigned his lands of Lewenshope to his wife. He married Margaret Home and/or a daughter of Sir John Cranston and was succeeded by his son Patrick in 1530. James (16th C.) tenant in Sundhope in the Yarrow Valley. He was recorded in 1539/40 as ‘layman of the diocese of Glasgow when he was decreed to be within the 4th grade of consanguinity with Marion, daughter of Adam Dalgleish of Deuchar. James (16th C.) tenant of Swinstead in Kirkton Parish. In 1581 he was ‘in Swynsteds’ along with Hector Jardine when they (along with several Elliots) witnessed the sasine for Gavin Gledstains inheriting Stobs from his deceased brother George Gledstains. Sir James
Murray Murray

Murray may be the James who witnessed a baptism in 1690 for Walter Wilson and for Thomas Smith. He may be the James who married Helen Nivison and whose son Robert was baptised in 1690, with witnesses Thomas Nivison and Walter Coltar. James (17th C.) herd at Broadhaugh on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. James (17th C.) listed as resident at Outerside on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. James (17th C.) listed at Newbigging among ‘The poor in Hauick Paroch’ on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He married Mary Nichol in Robertson in 1702. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was recorded as a gardener in Clarilaw in 1711. James (b.1713) may also have been his child. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Denholm. His daughter Isabel was baptised in 1709. Isabel (b.1701) and Archibald (b.1704), baptised in Cavers, may also have been his children. James (17th/18th C.) resident at Merrylaw. In 1724 his daughter Bessie was baptised in Cavers Parish. Other children, baptised in Cavers, who were probably his, include Bessie (b.1713), Ann (b.1715) and Ann (again, b.1719). James (17th/18th C.) weaver in Wilton Parish. He was at Burnhead in 1709 and at Newton in 1711. His children included: Jean (b.1709); and William (b.1711). He could be the James who married Elspeth (or Janet) Turnbull in Wilton in 1707. He could also be the James, married to Marion Turnbull, whose son Andrew was baptised in Wilton in 1716 or the James, married to Agnes Brown, whose son James was baptised in 1716. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Craikshiel in 1718 and Craik in 1720. He probably married Bessie Dickson in Robertson in 1717 and their children included: Bessie (b.1718); and an an unnamed son (b.1720). James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Janet Blacker in 1728. James (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living at Dykes in 1730 and 1738. His children included Isabel (b.1730) and Adam (b.1738). He may be the James who married Mary (or Marion) Rutherford in 1726, the marriage being recorded in Bedrule and Hobkirk parishes. James (1713–81) born at Unthank in the Eves valley, son of James and Ann Bennet. His father died in 1728 and in 1732 the lease of Unthank and Fiddleton were taken by Robert Elliot of Fenwick and Walter Scott (his cousin, farmer at Commonside and uncle of Sir Walter Scott the writer). He then became a merchant’s apprentice in London, and emigrated to North Carolina (it is said in 1735, although this is impossibly early, since his wife was only born in 1724), while his mother moved to Hawick in 1734 (where she died). He married his cousin Barbara, daughter of Andrew Bennet of Chesters; probably the same Barbara’s ‘bride money’ was paid in Ancrum Parish in 1744. Their children were: Elizabeth (1758); Archibald, John, Jean and two children who died in infancy. Elizabeth married Edward Hutchinson Robbins, their daughter Annie Jean Robbins married Joseph Lyman, whose daughter Catherine Robbins Lyman married Warem Delano and had a daughter Sara (or Sallie) Delano, who was the mother of U.S. President Franklin Delano Roosevelt. James himself was exiled after the American Revolution, being loyal to King George, and dying in Halifax, Nova Scotia. Some of his correspondence (including a brief account of a visit to Hawick) was published in ‘Letters of James Murray, Loyalist’ (1901). James (1716/7–92) resident of Teindside. He married Anne Dalrymple, who died at Teindside in 1809, aged 80. Their children included: William, James, Nelly, Elizabeth (or ‘Betty’, 1758) and Anne (b.1766), who probably all died young; David (1768/9–1841), joiner; and John, who also died at Teindside at the age of 70. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at Burnfoot in 1747 and 1751. He married Helen ‘Hoom’ (i.e. Hume) and their children included: Margaret (b.1746); John (b.1747); Janet (b.1749); and William (b.1751). The witnesses in 1747 were Walter Scott and James Dryden and in 1751 were Robert and John Scott. James (18th C.) resident at Borthwickbrae in 1743 and 1753. His children, baptised in Robertson Parish, probably included Helen (b.1743), Robert (b.1745), Thomas (b.1747), Bessie (b.1749), Ann (b.1751), Walter (b.1753) and James (b.1755) were probably also his children. He is probably the wright in Mains (presumably Borthwick Mains) who died in 1775 and is buried in Robertson Cemetery, along with his wife Anne ‘Rickeltoun’ (d.1797). James (b.1741) 2nd son of John, farmer at Spittal-on-Rule. He trained for the ministry and became minister at the Presbyterian Church in Harbottle. James (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His children included: William (b.1768); James (b.1773); and William (b.1778). James (18th C.) resident of Eves Parish. In 1783 he was at ‘Drummondshall’. He married Mararet Scott and their children included: Elizabeth (b.1783); Janet (b.1787); Margaret (b.1795); and William (b.1797). The witnesses in 1783 were John and James Carruthers. James ‘Jamie’ (b.c.1755) probably from Ettrick, although possibly the James, son of James, born in Robertson Parish in 1755. His story of encountering a ghost at the Bishop’s Stone (on Woll Rig) in about 1775 was recounted to someone in 1831 who wrote about it in the Border Counties’ Magazine in 1880 (reprinted in 1904). He married Jean Rae In Yarrow in 1810; she had worked as a servant at Headshaw. Their children included: Jean (b.1811); and William (b.1815). James (1756/7–1827) joiner at Borthwickbrae, probably the son of James born in 1755. He is recorded as owner of a horse at Borthwickbrae Burnfoot in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He is buried in Robertson Cemetery. His children included: William (1802/3–27). He may be the same as the James who lived at Borthwick Mains. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was living at Borthwick Mains in 1788 and 1792 and Borthwick Burnfoot in 1798. He married Ann Turnbull in Robertson in 1787 and their children included: Betty (b.1788); James (b.1790); Walter (b.1792); and an unnamed son (b.1798). James of Philiphaugh (1769–1852) 3rd son of John. In 1809 he married Mary Dale, daughter of Henry Hughes. They had 3 sons and a daughter, and he was succeeded by the eldest son, John. James (b.c.1775) born in Yarrow Parish, perhaps son of John. He worked as a soldier, being listed as Private and then Corporal in the Dumfriesshire Militia. He married Mary Scott in Canongate, Edinburgh in 1803; his wife was daughter of miller Robert Scott (perhaps miller at Roughheugh) and born in Wilton Parish. His children (born and baptised in Musselburgh, Dalkeith and Wilton, but all registered in Wilton) were: John (b.1806); Robert (b.1808); and James (b.1810). There was also an earlier son, whose name is unknown. The baptism of James in 1810 was witnessed by John Thomline and George Wallace. He may have later had children: Christina (b.1824/5); Thomas (b.1812/3); Andrew (b.1826/7); Mary (b.1827/8); and Helen (b.1829/30). The family were living at ‘Nixon’s Mill’ (probably Lynnwood Cottages) in 1841, where he was a wool spinner. They were in Dumfries in 1851, where he as working as ‘Under Carder Master Wool’. James (18th/19th C.) resident of London who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He presumably had a local connection. James (18th/19th C.) mason in Newcastleton, listed among heads of households in 1835. James (1785–1843) from the Spittal family, he was 3rd child of Andrew who farmed Westerhouses and Newton. He was paternal grandfather of ‘Dictionary’ James. In about 1806 he married (with a curious story of her seeing him in a dream before she knew him) Christina, daughter of Thomas Wintrope, who was a writer in Hawick. He became a tailor, learning his trade in Denholm and later having a shop at 67 High Street (which became the Co-op grocers). He was listed as a High Street tailor in Pigot’s 1837 directory. He was long an elder of the East Bank Secession Church, having been one of the original subscribers, receiving money in exchange for bonds (which through some irregularity were all later taken by his grandson Andrew, leaving the rest of his grand-children with nothing). His children were: Isabella, who married Hawick shoemaker William Somerville; Andrew, tailor in Morebattle, who married Minnie Buglass; Thomas, father of Sir James A.H.; Elizabeth, who died young; Stewart, a roper with Munro’s, who married Isabella Anderson; James, a tailor in Hawick who married Isabella Mabon; and Elizabeth, who married stockingmaker Andrew Hood. In 1841 he was listed as a tailor on the High Street, living along with ‘Cathrine’ (possibly his wife Christian, otherwise a sister), and children James and Betty, as well as another James (probably a grandson).

James (1789–1853) youngest child of John and Mary Cleuch and grandson of John, farmer at Spittal-on-Rule. He was father of Gen. Sir John Murray. He was educated at Denholm, Minto and Jedburgh schools and Edinburgh University. He studied to be a minister, but due to a speech defect he had to give up his ambition (which apparently was not an impediment to becoming a teacher!). He ran a private school in Hawick for several years before being appointed schoolmaster of Hawick Grammar School in 1821 (perhaps as assistant from 1818). He was appointed as Session Clerk in 1821, and as such was the last to carry on the practice of reading the scriptures in church between the morning and evening services. However, he kept only sporadic records in the Session books. He was the first teacher at the new United Schools, when the Parish and Grammar Schools merged in 1825. His favourite saying when punishing pupils was ‘I’ll trim ye!’ He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He gave up as session clerk in 1850, but was headmaster right up until his death in the first few days of 1853. In a directory of 1852 he is listed as Porochial Schoolmaster on Teviot Square. He married Margaret (1790–1851), eldest daughter of Thomas Irvine, farmer at Wauknell, Eskdale; her brother was Maj.-Gen. Sir Archibald Irvine. They had at least 3 children: John Irvine (b.1826), who became a General; Elizabeth, who married Col. Ryall, but died of cholera and had no surviving children; and Thomas Irvine, who died in infancy. He is buried in St. Mary’s churchyard. James (1796/7–1871) son of Thomas and Janet Ingles, he was tenant farmer at Whisgills in Castleton Parish. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. In 1861 he was recorded as farmer of 700 acres, employing 3 men. He married Elizabeth (or ‘Betty’) Scott, who died in 1874, aged 78. Their children included: Elizabeth; Thomas (1806/7–58), tenant in Burnmouth; Betty (1817–24); David (1832/3–83), also tenant at Whisgills; Agnes (1832/3–80); Jane; Janet, who married John Irving; John; and Mary, who married Adam Scott. They are mostly buried in Etterton Cemetery. James (b.1810) son of James and Mary Scott. His father was a soldier, and he was born and baptised in Wilton. He worked as a handloom weaver. In 1841 he was living on Punchbowl Close, was at 5 Teviot Crescent in 1851 and was on Mather’s Close in 1861. He married Isabella Howison and their children included: David (b.1833/4); Robert (b.1835); William (b.1836/7); Isabella (b.1839/40), who must have died young; James (b.1846/7); Jane (or Ann, b.1848/9); Isabella (again, b.1850/1) and Helen (b.1853/4).

James (b.1810/1) born in Wilton, was a shoemaker in Hawick. He was on the Kirk Wynd in 1841 and at 25 Loan in 1851 and 1861. His wife was Catherine and their children were John, Robert, Helen, Walter, Andrew and Mary. He may be the James, son of John and Mary Scott, baptised in Wilton in 1810. James (1812–75) from Coldstream, he was a blacksmith with premises on Brougham Place. The location was afterwards used by Gould the framersmith. He married Christian, who died in 1896, aged 82. Their children included several who did not reach adulthood, plus Isabella and another daughter who married William Taylor of Ashybank. James (19th C.) founder of J. Murray & Sons, plumbers and slaters of Hawick. He was an elder in Allars Kirk. Sir James Augustus Henry ‘Dictionary Murray’ (1837–1915) born in Denholm, in the Crown Inn on Main Street. He was eldest son of Thomas Murray (clothier in Denholm and later Hawick, from the Spittal Tower family) and Mary Scott (also of Hawick, daughter of Charles Scott, linen manufacturer, and from the Boonraw family), and was a distant relative of the Hawick schoolmaster who was also James Murray. His middle names were added only after he went to Hawick and discovered that some people had more than one Christian name. He developed an early interest in botany, geology and astronomy, as well as languages. He was educated at Cavers, Denholm and Minto schools, attending school only between the ages of 6 and 14 1/2. By the time he left school he had already studied Latin, French, German, Italian and classical Greek. He became a Junior Assistant Master at the United Schools of Hawick in 1854 at age 17. 3 years later he was made headmaster of a new private school in Hawick, the Subscription Academy. He was apparently keen on taking his pupils on excursions to study local botany, geology, etc. He was a founder member of the Archaeological Society in 1856 (when he was still only 19 years old), being the third official member and its first Secretary, as well as contributing many articles (51 in all) on a huge range of topics; he was also the last surviving founder member of the Society. In the early years of the Society, he talked at a large fraction of meetings, covering botany, geology, archaeological artefacts, local history, ‘Two Days’ Ramble up the Slitrig and down the Liddell’, etc. He made a 5-foot long map of ‘Scotland under the Romans’, which he talked about at one of the first meetings of 1856. He wrote a series of articles in the Hawick Advertiser in the 1850s, describing the botany of the area. He also presented the Museum with a cabinet of insects he had collected. In Hawick he was also involved with politics as well as the Total Abstinence Society. He had many talents, for example his sketch of Leyden’s birthplace was used as the frontispiece for the 1858 collection of Leyden’s works. In 1863 he made stencil copies of the stones describing Walter Scott of Goldielands, which were uncovered in St. Mary’s Kirk. He was a member of the Congregational Kirk in Denholm. In 1862 he married Maggie Isabella Sarah Scott (1834–65) in Belfast; she was an infant teacher and daughter of a Hawick clerk. They soon moved to London for his wife’s health, where nevertheless she died in 1865 (of consumption, aged 31), and their infant daughter Anne Marie Gretchen the year before (buried in the Wellogate Cemetery). There he worked for the Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China in Threadneedle Street. He obtained a reader’s ticket for the British Museum and resumed his interest in languages, soon meeting several philologists who lived in the London area. In 1867 he married Ada Agnes Ruthven (1845–1936), with Alexander Graham Bell as the best man. In 1870 he was appointed schoolmaster at Mill Hill School, north-west of London and lived in a nearby house called ‘Sunnyside’; he regarded his time there as the happiest of his life (apart from when he was in Hawick of course). He completed ‘The Dialect of the Southern Counties of Scotland’ (1873), the first systematic study of any dialect, and gave papers at meetings of the Philological Society. Contributing more seriously to philological study, he produced editions of ‘The Minor Poems of Sir David Lindsay’ (1871), ‘The Complaynt of Scotland’ (1872) with an extensive introduction and glossary and ‘Romance and prophecies of Thomas of Erceldoune’ (1875), again with notes. He obtained a B.A. from London University in 1873 and an honorary LL.D. from Edinburgh University in 1874. He became President of the Philological Society in 1878 and around 1879 he took over as editor of the ‘New English Dictionary on Historical Principles’ (to become the Oxford English Dictionary). An undertaking of gargantuan proportions, he died before it was completed, although the work was finished under his organisation and inspiration. Much of the work was carried out in a glorified shed in his garden, referred to as the ‘Scriptorium’. After the second volume was published he moved with his family to Oxford to work full time on the dictionary in a new Scriptorium in the garden of 78 Banbury Road, renamed Sunnyside. Apart from the occasional family holiday he worked tirelessly on the dictionary. He was made an Honorary Burgess of Hawick in 1906, when he was also at the presentation of the Provost’s Chain event, on the 50th anniversary of the Archaeological Society. He had 10 surviving children, all of whom were given Anglo-Saxon first names and middle names given after relatives, including: Harold James Ruthven, who wrote an influential history of chess, as well as providing an article on him for the Archaeological Transactions; and Sir Oswyn, who became Secretary to the Admiralty. He received a knighthood in 1908, as well as honorary degrees from 9 universities. He died of heart failure following a year of illness, in which he completed the volume ‘Trink to Turndown’ on schedule. He is buried at Wolvercote Cemetery near Oxford. A plaque marking his birthplace is in Denholm, and another in Hawick, where he lived on Bourtree Place. The definitive biography is ‘Caught in the Web of Words’ (1977) by his grand-daughter K.M. Elisabeth Murray, and he is also the ‘Professor’ (although he never held that title) in Simon Winchester’s ‘The Professor and the Madman’ (1998, 2004).

British title ‘The Surgeon of Crowthorne’). His contribution to the systematization of language is immense. All major dictionary projects that came later have followed the principles he laid out. Words from the Hawick area are well represented in his original volumes (but unlike modern dictionaries, he left out all words considered obscene in his day). James (b.1860) son of Robert and Elizabeth Hunter, he was born in Hawick. He moved to Edinburgh, where he worked as a baker, and later the family lived in Kelso. He married Jane McMichan. James (1874/5–1965) farmer in Whisgills, descended from the earlier Murrays of Whisgills farm. His wife Mary Janet Elliot died in 1908, aged 32. His 2nd wife Margaret Brown died in 1956, aged 76. They are buried in Ettleton Cemetery. Dr. James (1875/6–1920) doctor in Allendale, he died in Newcastle. His wife Elizabeth Jane Murray came from Whisgills, and died in 1963; she secondly married William B. Paterson of Rutherglen. They are buried at Ettleton. Janet (b.1820/1) grocer on Wilton Place, listed in Slater’s 1852 directory. She was wife of John, tailor at the Sandbed. In 1851 she was a widow at Wilton Place, with her children John, Elizabeth and William. In 1861 she was at Dovemount with John and William. Her maiden name may have been Wilson. Joan (14th C.) daughter of Sir Maurice, Earl of Strathearn, who was also Baron of Hawick. Through her father she inherited the Barony of Hawick, which then passed to her husband, Sir Thomas of Bothwell. There is some confusion here over multiple Joannas, but it seems likely that it was not her, but her daughter, who married Archibald, 3rd Earl of Douglas. It seems that she was promised to Douglas, but may have died in the plague that ravaged Britain in 1362 (and probably also killed her husband a year or so earlier). Douglas seems to have instead married the daughter, also Joan. Joan or ‘Joanna’ (d.aft. 1401) probably daughter of Sir Thomas Murray of Bothwell. However, she is often confused with her mother, Joan, who was daughter of Sir Maurice, Earl of Strathearn (and in fact the evidence that there were 2 separate women is not clear). She appears to have been the heiress of the Bothwell titles (including the Barony of Hawick), and after the death of her mother she married Archibald Douglas, ‘the Grim’, 3rd Earl of Douglas; however, she would have been quite young when this happened. The Hawick Barony then passed to the Douglases. John (15th C.) witness in 1431 to the transfer of the lands of Heap between the Langlands’ and the Scotts. All of the other men who wrote special testaments were local lairds, including Alexander Murray, who must have been a near relation. He was recorded as ‘Jhone off Murray’ and could have been John of Falahill. John of Philiphaugh (d.1477) descendant of Roger de Moravia. He had a charter of the lands of Philiphaugh in 1461. This included the lands of Harehead, Hangingshaw and Lewishope. In 1462 he was appointed Herd-keeper to Queen Mary of Gueldres. He was also Keeper of Newark Castle in the 1460s. He had the lease of Lewenshope and Hangingshaw from 1471 and in 1480 the lease was passed to his son Patrick. In 1475 he was keeper of the King’s property at Bowhill. His sons included: Patrick of Falahill, the eldest, who succeeded; William in Sundhope; and another, whose son John was Burgess in Edinburgh and progenitor of the Murrays of Blackbarony. John (d.c.1485) brother of Ninian. Along with his brother he leased the Crown lands of Kershope on the Ettrick in 1485. In the following year the lease passed to his widow Elizabeth Sinclair, and son Thomas. He was stated to have been killed when his property was devastated by traitors and rebels. John (d.bef. 1494) resident of the Kershope area. In 1494/5 Steven Turnbull, brother of the Laird of Whithope, had remission for his slaughter. Turnbull was also cited for other crimes, including bringing in ‘traitors of Leven’ for the pillaging and burning of Kershope and the theft of 80 cows from the tenants there. John of Falahill (d.1510) eldest son of Patrick of Philiphaugh and Falahill. He was nephew of Alexander who was Rector of Hawick and was probably the closest historical person to ‘the Outlaw Murray’ of the ballad. In 1488 he was joint tenant with his father in the Crown lands of Lewenshop and Hangingshaw, and later with his son John. In 1489/90 he had a charter for lands in Peeblesshire. He was Ranger of Yarrow Ward until 1489, when he had the lease of Tinnis for his fee. In 1491 he was ‘procurator’ for Alexander Lord Home in an instrument granting Home tenancy in the lands of Harden. He is probably the John who acted as surety for several people at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1493. He is probably the John ‘de hangitschaw’ whose brother Thomas served as a surety at the Justice-aire in Selkirk in 1494/5 and who himself served as surety for John Scott in Tushielaw. Also in 1494/5 it is recorded that he had livestock stolen from Newark by Robert Scott of Deloraine. He is also recorded being ‘de hangitschaw’ in the accounts for the Selkirk Justice-aire of 1494/5, when he was pledge for John Wilson in Hartwoodmyre. He was owner of Westerhouses in Hassendean Parish, receiving the lands ‘under reversion’ (i.e. on non-payment of a loan) from Alexander, Lord Home. In 1497 he had a charter for Cranston-Riddell. In 1499 he had a ‘tack’ of lands with David Hoppringle of ‘the Tynees’. Also in 1499 he was assigned the lands of ‘Levinishop’ and Hangingshaw in Yarrow, along with his son John (which may be an error). About the same time he gave his permission for Walter Scott to take the lease of Haining. In 1500 Walter Scott of Branxholme was recorded as assignee of him and Ninian (probably a brother or other close relative), when goods of Philip Turnbull of Whithope were recovered as part of 19 score merks that he owed them; this was for the damage done to their lands of Kerhope. He was Depute Sheriff of Selkirkshire in 1501. In 1501/2 he was witness to another bond of reversion for the lands of Harden, also involving Alexander, Lord Home. In 1502–09 he had the lease of the Crown lands of Hangingshaw, Lewenshope and Harehead. In 1502 his farms at Fastheugh and Hangingshaw were raided by Philip Turnbull in Whithope and David Turnbull in Carlinpool. In 1502/3 at Galashiel he infefted Queen Margaret in the lands of the Forest. In 1506/7 he was one of the men to whom Walter Scott of Howpasley, tutor to the Laird of Buccleuch, had to give in his accounts. In 1507/8 he had a letter of obligation with Robert Scott of Whitchesters, involving a loan, with the tower in Hawick ‘between the bridges’ as security. He was appointed as High Sheriff of Selkirkshire, which the King had to humiliatingly give him according to the ballad. He was Sheriff of Selkirkshire in 1508 in a charter for lands in Selkirk and in 1509 in the document where Adam Hepburn inherited the lands of Alemoor. In 1508 he had a charter for Falahill and Whitlawland and in 1509 had a charter for the lands of Peel Hill. In 1510/1 he and his wife had a charter for the lands of Cranston-Riddell. He married Janet Forrester and later Margaret, daughter of Patrick Hepburn. His children were: James, who succeeded; William, ancestor of the Romanno, Stanhope and Cloney branches; John, who was recorded in the Exchequer Rolls in 1507/8; Patrick, who had a charter for Broadmeadows in 1510; Elizabeth, who married Sir James Douglas, 5th Laird of Cavers; Isabel, who married Robert Scott of Howpasley; and Janet, who married Sir Robert Stewart of Minto. Tradition attributes his death to Scott of Buccleuch or perhaps Scott of Haining at a little mount below Newark Castle. However, he was actually killed by Andrew Ker of Gateshaw and Thomas, brother of Philip Scott of Headshaw, according to cases at Jedburgh Justice-aire in 1510. John (15th/16th C.) son of John of Falahill. In 1507/8 he leased the Crown lands of Hangingshaw, Lewenshope and Harehead. He was recorded as son and heir of John of Falahill in 1509 and still leasing Crown lands in 1513. He may have been the Sheriff in Selkirkshire recorded at the Justice- aire at Selkirk in 1510. At that court he was among men found guilty of burning some of the wood in Ettrick Forest. He is probably the John of Falahill who had a charter for the lands of Bold and Philiphaugh in 1512. John of Blackbarony (d.1513) Burgess of Edinburgh, he was grandson of John of Philiphaugh, his father’s name being unknown. He may be the John of ‘blac barony et domino de hennerland’ who was surety at the Justice- aire held in Peebles in 1498. He was recorded in the Exchequer Rolls of the early years of the 16th century as Chamberlain of Ballincrief and ‘custumar’ of Haddington. In 1505/6 he was an assignee of the executors of William in Sundhope, his uncle. He is probably the John junior who was allowed the ‘fermes’ of Winterburgh in 1506 and Carterhaugh in 1507. In 1507 he had a charter of the Barony of Blackbarony or Hatton. He is probably the ‘Master John Murray of Blackbarony’ who in 1510/1 was granted the lands of Briery Yards, in the Barony of Hassendean, which had been forfeited by Cuthbert Cunningham, Earl of Glencairn. In 1511 he had a charter for lands in Edinburgh and Haddington and in 1512 and 1513 other charters for lands in Selkirkshire and elsewhere. In 1503/4 he married Isobel, daughter of Richard Happer. They had 2 daughters, and a son, Andrew of Blackbarony. He died at Flodden. John ‘Jock’ (16th C.) tenant of Gavin of Elliot of Falnash in 1569. Elliot acted as cautioner for his tenants at a meeting in Hawick, assuring that they would obey the laws of the Lord Regent. Sir John of Blackbarony (16th/17th C.) son of Andrew. He was knighted by James VI at Stirling upon announcing to the King the birth of his eldest son, Henry, Prince of Wales. In 1575/6 he was a complainant regarding ‘mails’ for ‘Glenpoit and Preischoip’ (this being Glenpyet in the Yarrow valley). In 1580 he was named in a transaction in Selkirk. In 1581/2 he acted as cautioner for Robert of Aikwood. In 1586 he is recorded as one of the ‘curators’ of the young Walter Scott of Buccleuch. He may be the John who witnessed a bond of ‘manrent’ in Hawick in 1595, between the Beatties and Sir Walter of Branxholme (Gideon Murray, his brother, was also a witness). In 1607 he was in dispute with the Burgh of Selkirk. In 1610 he was appointed keeper of the rolls for the Justices of the Peace in Peeblesshire. He married Margaret, daughter of Sir Alexander Hamilton. Their children were: Andrew, who died before his father; Sir Archibald, who succeeded; Sir John of Raveling; Col. Walter of Pilmore; Alexander; Patrick; William; Margaret, who married Sir Robert Halket of Pitfirrane; Agnes, who married Sir John Riddell of that Ilk; Elizabeth, who married Sir Robert Ker, 1st Earl of Ancrum; Grizel, who married Sir William Douglas of Casbogle; Christian, who married Sir William Veitch of Dawyk; Isabel, who married Patrick Scott of Thirlestane; and possibly another daughter who married William Scott of Magerton. Sir John of Falahill and Philiphaugh (d.c.1640) son of Patrick of Falahill, was the first of the family designated ‘of Philiphaugh’. He had a charter of 1584, as heir to his father and also held lands at Hangingshaw and Traquair. He was probably the ‘Johnne Murray, sone to the Sherreff of Selkirk’ who was among Borderers cited for non-appearance in 1578/9. He was probably the ‘younger in Philophaucht’ recorded in Selkirk in 1581. He is probably the John in Philiphaugh who witnessed a transaction in Selkirk in 1582. He was served heir to his father in 1601 in the lands of Philiphaugh, as well as the office of Sheriff of Selkirkshire. He represented Selkirkshire (or ‘the Forest’) in the Parliament of 1612. In 1614, on behalf of his wife, he paid money to the Donaldsons of Broadmeadows. In 1620 he had a precept of sasine for Broadmeadows. In 1622 and 1623 he was on the Commission for keeping peace on the Border. In 1623 a man was found guilty of stealing an ox from his servitor, John Murray, from the lands of ‘Low, otherwise called the Catclughe’. He had a charter of 1624 involving lands in the Barony of Buccleuch. In 1624 he and his heir James gave sasine of Broadmeadows to Andrew, son of William Scott in Fauldshe. He married Janet, daughter of Sir William Scott of Ardross (or perhaps Sir William of Harden) and secondly married Helen (or Isabel), daughter of Sir James Pringle of Galashields. His children included: Sir James of Balincrief, his eldest son, who married Anne, daughter of Sir Thomas Craig of Riccarton and whose son succeeded to Philiphaugh; Gideon, aide-de-camp to Charles I, who died in service; Joan, a daughter who married John Shaw; Grezel; John of Ashiestiel; William, who died fighting for the King; David, who also died the same way; Helen, who married Scott of Broadmeadows; Elizabeth, who married Mr. Knox; and Isabel. He was succeeded by his grandson, Sir John. Sir John (d.1640) 1st Earl of Annandale, son of Sir Charles of Cockpool and Margaret Somerville. His siblings included: Sir James of Cockpool, who married Janet, daughter of Sir William Douglas of Drumlanrig, but died without an heir; Sir Richard, whom he eventually succeeded; Jean, who married John Maxwell of Kirkhouse; and another sister, who married Robert Elliot of Redheugh. In 1616 and 1624 he sent a letter to Walter Scott, Lord of Buccleuch, expressing his support and essentially apologising for raids against Buccleuch and into England. He was a great favourite of Charles I and acquired a huge estate. Among his lands and rights were the 5-pound land of the Chapel lands of Caerlerrig, which his son James inherited in 1641. He was created Earl of Annandale in 1624/5 and acquired vast estates. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Shaw. He was succeeded as 2nd Earl by his son James, who died without issue and the title became extinct. Sir John of Ravelrig (17th C.) 3rd son of Sir John of Blackbarony. He was granted lands in Belses by William, Earl of Lothian in 1634. He was one of the overseers of the tutors of the children of Walter, Earl of Buccleuch, who died in 1633. John (17th C.) tenant in Woll when he signed the ‘Confessions of Faith’ in Hawick in 1638. It is unclear how he was related to other Murrays. John (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Margaret Redford and their children included: Francis (b.1690); Adam (b.1692); Elizabeth (b.1694); Jean (b.1696); and Anna (b.1699). The witnesses in 1690 were Francis (perhaps his father or brother) and William Dunlop. He may be related to the earlier tenant in Woll. Sir John of Philiphaugh (d.1676) son of Sir James, he succeeded his grandfather Sir John. He was heritable Sheriff of Selkirkshire. In 1646 he was recorded as a judge for trying people in Selkirkshire and Roxburghshire. In 1643, 1646 and 1649 he was on the Committee of War for Selkirkshire and was Convenor in 1644. He joined with Graham’s force in 1646 and claimed for damages he sustained against Montrose in 1649. In 1648 he was one of the prominent men named on a Commission to suppress the thieves on the Border. He is probably the ‘John morray of . . . ’ who witnessed a baptism in Ashkirk in 1656 for Thomas Scott of Whitslade. He was M.P. for Selkirkshire from 1661. He married Anne, daughter of Sir Archibald Douglas of Cavers and secondly married Margaret, widow of John Trotter of Charterhall and daughter of Sir John Scott of Scotstarvet. His children were: Sir James, who succeeded; John of Bowhill; Col. William; Archibald, Thomas and Lewis, who died young; Anne, who married Alexander Pringle of Whytbank and later Robert Rutherford of Bowland; Janet; Rachel; Elizabeth; and Jean, who died young. In 1688 his wife was served heir to their daughter Jean. John (17th C.) married Marian Lillico in Bedrule in 1694. John (17th C.) resident at Wester Heap according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. John (17th C.) resident at Easter Highchesters according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. John of Bowhill (c.1667–1714) younger son of Sir John of Philiphaugh and brother of Sir James. He was a Senator in the College of Justice. He served as representative to Parliament for Selkirk 1689–1702 and for Selkirkshire 1703–07. In 1704 he was a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire and for Selkirkshire. He was a great supporter of the Union, and was briefly part of the first Parliament of Great Britain until he became Lord Bowhill in 1707. He owned the estate of Bowhill (temporarily out of the hands of the Scotts) and built the house there in 1708. He married Margaret, daughter of Sir John Scott of Ancrum and their children included John (farmer at Unthank). He was succeeded in the lands of Bowhill by his nephew Lieut.-Col. James. There was an elegy written on his death. John (1669/70–1749) gardener at Spittal Tower, who was a direct ancestor of ‘Dictionary’ Murray. He came from Hobkirk Parish, renting the garden haugh and enclosure at Spittal Tower in about 1712. His father may have been Andrew, but that is uncertain. He is recorded as gardener at ‘Tower’ in 1715. In 1701 he married Isobel Turnbull (from Bedrule), who died in 1746, aged 67. They had 7 children (several baptised in Cavers Parish): John (1709–72), the eldest son, with several later generations having the same name; Margaret, eldest daughter, married James Veitch, and her grand-daughter married Castleton Schoolmaster William Scott; Jean, who died in infancy; Agnes (b.1713); Andrew (b.1715); James (b.1720), who also died in infancy; and Mary (b.1724). They are buried in Bedrule churchyard. John (1677–1728) born at Unthank, son of John (from the Philiphaugh family) and Margaret Scott of Ancrum. He leased the farms of Unthank and Fiddleton from the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1722. His son James resigned the lands to Robert Elliot of Fenwick and Walter Scott (farmer at Commonside) in 1733. He married his cousin Ann, daughter of Archibald Bennet of Chesters (near Ancrum) in 1712 and their children were: James (b.1713); Archibald (b.1715); Barbara (b.1717); Anna (or Anna, b.1719); John (b.1721, who became a doctor in Norwich); Andrew (b.1723); William (b.1724); Elizabeth (b.1726); and Andrew (b.1728). John (17th/18th C.) tailor in Howcleuch. In 1712 in Hawick Parish, he married Marion Paterson, who was ‘servitrix to Walter Griev’ in Braxholme Park. Their son William was baptised in Hawick in 1719. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Hoscoe in 1712 when his daughter Bessie was baptised in Robertson Parish and in 1719 when his son John was baptised. He may also be the John resident at Outerside in 1715 when his son James was baptised and in 1717 when his son William was baptised. Other John (17th/18th C.) resident of Chisholme Mill in 1720 when his son Robert was baptised. Other John (17th/18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. Helen (b.1723) may also be his child. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Whithope in 1718 when his daughter Mary was baptised and in 1721 when his twins Walter and Helen were baptised in Robertson. John of Philiphaugh (d.1753) son of Sir James. He was heritable Sheriff of Selkirk. He was M.P. for Linlithgow 1725–34 and for Selkirkshire from 1734 until his death. In 1737 he was involved in a bon with a tenant in Philiphaugh. In 1711 he married Eleanor, daughter of Lord Basil Hamilton, and she died in 1783. Their children were: Basil, who died young; John, who was also M.P. for the Linlithgow Burghs; Charles, who died unmarried; James, who succeeded his brother; Janet, who married Mr. Dennis of Jamaica; Eleanor, who married Sir James Nasmyth of Posso; Mary, who married John Macqueen of Jamaica and possibly also Sir Alexander Don, 4th Baronet of Newton; and Margaret, who married Capt. Baugh. John (1709–72) eldest son of John and brother of Andrew. He was the grandfather of the Hawick Rector James Murray, and great-grandfather of Gen. Sir John Murray. He became tenant farmer at Spittal-on-Rule in 1730. He shared the tenancy with the Veitches and the Bunyans, his part including the orchard (hence he was referred to as ‘Gardener in Toure’). He was recorded as gardener at Spittal or at Tower when his children were baptised.
in Cavers Parish. He married Jean Henderson in 1734 at Newton in Bedrule, and she died in 1786, aged 72. Their children (baptised in Cavers Parish) were: John (b.1735), who was also tenant at Spittal and married Mary Cleuch; James (b.1741), who became Presbyterian minister at Harbottle; Isabel (b.1744), married Mr. Thomson, farmer at Netherraw; Archibald; Andrew (b.1747), whose grandson was editor of the Kelso Mail; Jean (or Jenny, b.1755), lived at Harbottle, then at Hawick; Betty, married James Veitch; Margaret (b.1757); and William (b.1759), who had sons Veitch and John. The baptism of Andrew appears to have been recorded twice in 1747. He is buried in Bedrule kirkyard along with most of his family. John (18th C.) resident of Ewesdale. He married Betty Park and their children included: James (b.1753), born in Langholm; and Margaret (b.1759), baptised in Ewes, who probably married Adam Jardine. John of Philiphaugh (d.1800) 2nd son of John of Philiphaugh. He owned the lands of Todshaw in 1757 when its head lands were divided from those of Mabonlaw. He was also involved in a dispute with Henry, Duke of Buccleuch over teinds for Todshaw in the period 1745–70. He was M.P. for Linlithgow Burghs 1754–61. He was recorded as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire in 1761. He was listed on the roll of electors for Roxburghshire in 1780. He paid the land tax for his lands of Philiphaugh in 1785. He was also listed among the voters of Selkirkshire in 1788. He sold a large part of the estate of Philiphaugh to John Johnstone of Alva (brother of William Johnstone Pulteney). He married a Philiphaugh to John Johnstone of Alva (brother in 1788. He sold a large part of the estate of William Johnstone Pulteney). He married a Philiphaugh to John Johnstone of Alva (brother in 1788. He sold a large part of the estate of William. He was also listed among the voters of Selkirkshire. He died unmarried and was succeeded by his brother James. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was listed in 1805 and 1819 as a Commissioner for Selkirkshire. He died unmarried and was succeeded by his brother James. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish, probably son of Robert and Marion Crozier. He was a feuar of Newcastleton, as well as being a farmer and blacksmith, probably on North Hermitage Street. He married Anne Jardine (1802/3–57), who came from Gretna and was significantly younger than him. Their children included: Robert, who was a carter, and emigrated to Ontario; Walter; Marion; John, a blacksmith, who also emigrated to Ontario; James (1834/5–1908); Jennie; and Matthew. He and his wife are buried at Etterston cemetery. John (1780–1845) son of John and Mary Cleuch. He farmed at Denholm Townfoot and later at Camptown, where he died. He married Isabella Veitch. Their children were: John; Thomas; Robert; George; William; Agnes; Veitch; James; Walter; and Hugh. The children all emigrated to Australia, where they settled on the Murray River. He is buried in Bedrule kirkyard. John (1806–90) born in Wilton Parish, son of James and Mary Scott. He trained as a clothier and tailor. He was recorded on the High Street in Pigot’s 1837 directory. On the 1841 census he was listed at about No. 1 Sandbed, with wife Janet and children John, Elizabeth and a new-born (William). In Hawick he married Janet (b.1818), daughter of William Williamson and Elspeth Turnbull. Family history states that in about 1851 he emigrated to Canada with his wife and sons James, John Scott and Robert. His wife was said to have died on the Horse Tax Rolls of 1788–91. He is probably son of David and was succeeded as farmer by his brother Thomas. He appears not to have had any children and is buried along with his brother’s family at Etterston. John (18th C.) listed as house servant and groom at Stirches in 1785 and 1786, when he was working for Gilbert Chisholme. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was fined in 1785 for his ‘irregular marriage’. Perhaps he is the John whose daughter Betty was baptised in 1787. John of Philiphaugh (d.1830) son of John. He was listed in 1805 and 1819 as a Commissioner for Selkirkshire. He died unmarried and was succeeded by his brother James. John (18th/19th C.) farmer at Huntlyhill (in Bedrule Parish), recorded as owner of 3 horses on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. John (18th/19th C.) farmer at Castleton, recorded along with George on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. John (18th/19th C.) linen and woollen draper in Newcastleton, listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. He is probably the Castleton merchant of the same name who subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. John (1777/8–1851) born in Castleton Parish, probably son of Robert and Marion Crozier. He was a feuar of Newcastleton, as well as being a farmer and blacksmith, probably on North Hermitage Street. He married Anne Jardine (1802/3–57), who came from Gretna and was significantly younger than him. Their children included: Robert, who was a carter, and emigrated to Ontario; Walter; Marion; John, a blacksmith, who also emigrated to Ontario; James (1834/5–1908); Jennie; and Matthew. He and his wife are buried at Etterston cemetery. John (1780–1845) son of John and Mary Cleuch. He farmed at Denholm Townfoot and later at Camptown, where he died. He married Isabella Veitch. Their children were: John; Thomas; Robert; George; William; Agnes; Veitch; James; Walter; and Hugh. The children all emigrated to Australia, where they settled on the Murray River. He is buried in Bedrule kirkyard. John (1806–90) born in Wilton Parish, son of James and Mary Scott. He trained as a clothier and tailor. He was recorded on the High Street in Pigot’s 1837 directory. On the 1841 census he was listed at about No. 1 Sandbed, with wife Janet and children John, Elizabeth and a new-born (William). In Hawick he married Janet (b.1818), daughter of William Williamson and Elspeth Turnbull. Family history states that in about 1851 he emigrated to Canada with his wife and sons James, John Scott and Robert. His wife was said to have died on the voyage, and he settled down as a farmer, purchasing land in Euphrasia Township, Ontario, in 1855. By 1851 his widow was a grocer on Wilton Place. In 1861 she was at Dovemount (probably about No. 2 Princes Street) and the census says ‘surname Willison deleted’. It is possible there were 2 different Johns being confounded here, but more likely is that some of the information is incorrect, and that his wife returned to Hawick after they emigrated. John (b.1807/8) born in Castleton Parish, son of Thomas and Janet Ingles. He became farmer at Wolfelee. In 1851 he was farmer of 145 arable acres and 3000 acres of pasture, employing 5 people. He married Helen (or Ellen), daughter of Thomas Stavert; she died in 1852, aged 59. Their children included: Thomas (1845–61); John (d.1855); Archibald Stavert (b.1849), who emigrated to Australia; and Helen Stavert (b.1852), who died in infancy. The family are buried at Ettleton. John (1814/5–92) son of William (teacher in the Canonbie area) and Helen Bell. He himself became a teacher in Langholm. He came to Hawick in the late 1840s to run the school at the head of Baker Street, which had been started by his brother Andrew. The school grew, and moved to the old East Bank Kirk. He is listed as teacher at a school in the East End in 1852. He was assisted by his younger brother William, who eventually ran the school that would become St. Mary’s and ultimately Trinity. He himself left to become schoolmaster at Longnewton and eventually at Caverton Mill, near Kelso. He married Jane Richardson, who died in 1915, aged 84. Their children included Graham, who was a tobacconist at 17 High Street, and Nellie, a milliner who retired to Denholm. John (1815/6–88) born in Hobkirk Parish, he was 3rd son of Elliot. He worked as a servant at Wauchope for 19 years, then worked as a hedger at Minto and spent his last 15 years of employment as farm steward at Dimpleknoive. In 1849 he was among the original congregation of Wolfelee Free Kirk. In 1861 he was Land Steward, living at Wauchope Cottages. He married Helen, daughter of Robert Waugh, Chesters blacksmith in 1839. They had 4 sons and 2 daughters, including: Robert, carpenter at Blacklee who married Margaret Jackson; John; William, who worked as a successful wool broker in Melbourne, then went to Japan; Violet; and a daughter, possibly Elizabeth, who married Hawick grocer Mr. Brydon. He died at St. Boswells. John (1815/6–83) father of J.E.D., he was a Slater and plumber in Hawick. He had a brother, James. His wife was Margaret Dodd (daughter of the chief drummer with the Drums and Fifes), who died in 1902, aged 78. In 1841 he was living with Margaret on O’Connell Street. The family later lived at 2 Union Street. Their other children were: Isabella A., who married teacher James Brand; Robert, who was a commercial traveller in London; Alison, who married Rev. John Gordon; and Frank James; along with Isabella, Robert, Alison, Margaret and Alison Scott, who all died young. He is buried in Wellogate Cemetery. John of Philiphua (1817–82) eldest son of James. He was Deputy Lieutenant and J.P. in Selkirkshire. In 1840 he married Rose Mary, heiress of William Andrew Nesbitt. Their children were: John Forbes Pringle Nesbitt, who succeeded; James (b.1845), who married Mary Russell; and Jesse Rose Mary, who married Sir William Lewis Salisbury Trelawny. Gen. Sir John Irvine, K.C.B., V.C. (1826–1902) son of James, the Hawick schoolmaster, and Margaret Irvine from Eskdale. He was 3rd cousin of Sir James A.H. He was born in Hawick and must have grown up in the town. He joined the East India Company at the age of 16 and was sent out to Calcutta in 1842. He was appointed to the 71st Native Infantry later in 1842, and rose through the ranks of the Bengal army, eventually becoming commander of the Indian army. He received a medal during the Punjab Campaign of 1848/9, was mentioned in dispatches and wounded at the Battle of Alighur in 1857, commanded a brigade of horsemen at Kutchlia Ghaut in 1858 and then on the Nepal frontier, receiving another medal. In 1865/6 he was on the Bhootan Expedition, for which he received another medal. He became Lieut.-Col. in 1866, Col. in 1868, Maj.-Gen. in 1882, Lieut.-Gen. in 1887 and Gen. in 1891. He received the K.C.B. on the Queen’s Golden Jubilee in 1897. He retired to Kensington. In 1854 he married Wilhelmina Stanley (d.1912), daughter of Col. Duncan Archibald Malcolm; he was son of Thomas Malcolm, who was brother of the 4 knights of Burnfoot. They had 6 children: Lieut. Archibald Ross, who served in Afghanistan, but died of cholera at the age of 24; Duncan, who died in childhood; Minnie, who married Maj. Wright; Caroline, who married T.W. Rawlings; Mary Stewart, who worked with the Salvation Army, being sent out to South Africa in the Boer War and France and Belgium in WWI, being awarded an O.B.E.; and Agnes Meade, who married Capt. Woolcombe of the K.O.S.B. John (b.1829/30) farmer at Upper Burnmouth in Castleton Parish. In 1861 he was farming 400 acres and employing 3 men. He lived with his sister Agnes. He could be the John who was on the Town Committee of Management in Newcastleton in the 1860s. He subscribed to David Anderson’s book of verse in 1868. John Scott (1835–1904) son of John and Janet Williamson. He was born in Hawick, and in about 1851 he sailed to Canada with his father and maternal grandfather, William Williamson. They settled in Erphusia Township, Grey County, Ontario, where he farmed. He married Jane Quinton and they had 8 children. John, J.P. (1835/6–1911) from the Annan area, he became a draper in Hawick (at 31 High Street) and later actuary for Hawick Savings Bank. He also served as a Town Councillor and was Burgh Treasurer in the 1880s. He was Treasurer of the Working Men’s Building & Investment Society and possibly the same John Murray was an early committee member of Hawick R.F.C. His sister Janet married Hawick teacher William Murray (probably her second cousin). He married Elspeth Ferguson, who died in 1929, aged 86. Their children included John (who died in Vancouver), Peter Wilson (of the bullion department in a London bank) and Elizabeth (who married Abraham P. Hindle). John Edward Dodd ‘Jed’ (1858–1936) son of Slater and plumber John. He was writer of the words for many Hawick songs, particularly ‘The Mosstroopers’ Song’, ‘Clinty’s Song’, ‘The Wail of Flodden’, ‘Meda’s Song’ and the ‘Invocation’. He also wrote poems such as ‘Hornshole’ (published when he was 14), ‘Oor Gutterblude’, ‘The Reekey Howe’ (also known as ‘Naething New’, composed for the 1889 Dinner) and ‘Lest We Forget’. In addition there were several comedic plays, and musical plays written with Adam Grant, including ‘Turning Back the Clock’, ‘The Caddie’s Ghost’ (1894), ‘The Tramp’ (1896), ‘The Witch o’ the Wisp Hill’ (1901), ‘Kirsty o’ Cocklaw Castle’ (1904) and ‘The Gutterbludes’ (1905); only for the last 2 do scripts survive. Additionally he wrote many of the words for the ‘Quater-Centenary Pageant’, acting as Pageant Master. Born at 57 High Street, he apprenticed with John Wield, druggist, but had his health damaged by chemicals. He then left Hawick to pursue work in the chemist’s, grocery and insurance trades, returning to Hawick in 1886 when he started his photographic business. His studio was first where the Post Office was later built (at the corner of Bridge Street and Croft Road), moving to 43 Bridge Street in 1902 (designed by J.P. Alison, who lived next door). This became one of Hawick’s foremost photography businesses, closing in 1972. An ardent supporter of the Common Riding, his return to Hawick coincided with the rejuvenation of the ceremonial aspects, and he quickly became involved. J.E.D. was Cornet in 1890 (when he recited a specially-composed poem) and Acting Father no less than 4 times (the last time at the age of 67). He helped inaugurate the annual Cornet’s dinner in 1895, ordered the Curds and Cream for almost half a century and acted as marshal for many years. He was a founder member of the Callants’ Club in 1903. During WWI he personally rode the marches each Common Riding day, against the wishes of the Council and the Callants’ Club. In 1920 he suggested the founding of the Mosstroopers’ Club, and his horse was the model for the badge. In addition he was involved with the local Amateur Operatic Society (doing their stage make-up until the year of his death) and succeeded James Thomson as Bard of Masonic Lodge 424. He became an honorary life member of the golf club after the success of ‘the Caddie’s Ghost’ at their 1894 fund-raiser. He was also a great walker and lover of the outdoors, publishing a book entitled ‘Over the Rolling Stones by One of Them’. He additionally wrote an introductory article for James Edgar’s ‘Hawick Songs and Recitations’ (1892). He was also known as painter, particularly of animals. He married Margaret ‘Daisy’ Young (daughter of a Sandbed baker), who had been his Lass, and they had one child, Melgund. The Museum mounted an exhibition devoted to his life in the late 1990s. A portrait of his favourite horse ‘Oakwood Daisy’ is in the Museum, along with an inkwell made from the foot of another, called ‘Ben’. There is also a painting of his, ‘Mrs. Reid, with Betsy the Cow, Pilmuir’. He is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery in an unmarked grave, although a plaque was unveiled there in 1990. The J.E.D. Murray Memorial Challenge Trophy was first presented at the 1938 Common Riding race meeting. A plaque was unveiled at 57 High Street in 2006 and the Mosstroopers’ Club held a celebration in 2008 to mark the 150th anniversary of his birth. Katherine Maud Elisabeth (1909–98) granddaughter of James A.H. In 1977 she published a biography of her grandfather entitled ‘Caught in the web of words: James A.H. Murray and the Oxford English dictionary’. Kevin police office from Hawick. He became a Superintendent of the Lothian and Borders force and had responsibility.
Murray Murray

for security at the 2014 Commonwealth Games. Malcolm, C.B.E. (1938–) born in Hawick and raised at 12 Loan, he turned down the chance to study science at Edinburgh University, instead joining the Scottish Life Assurance Company. By the time he retired in 1999 he was Chief Executive and Director. He served as President of the Insurance Society of Edinburgh and the Faculty of Actuaries. Always a keen sports enthusiast, he playing for Hawick Trades and Edinburgh Borders and was Hawick R.F.C. President in 2002–04. He has also been a longtime member of Hawick Golf Club. He was Chief Guest of the Common Riding in 2011 and has served as Callants’ Club President. Margaret (1629/30–1707) wife of William Craw. After her husband died in 1671 she took over his share of the tenancy of Braxholmetown farm. This she did until at least 1677, with her son James later taking over. She is buried in Borthwick Waas Cemetery. Margaret (b.1820/1) draper, grocer and post-mistress in Newcastle in the 1850s and 60s. She lived on South Hermitage Street with her twin sister Jane (who was a hat-maker), and another sister Agnes (also a milliner). Her business was listed as ‘Margaret Murray & Co.’ in Slater’s 1852 directory. She was probably related to the earlier draper, John. Mary (18th/19th C.) resident at Newcastle, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Matthew (d.1840) son of John and Ann Jardine, he was born in Castleton. He worked as a farm servant, general labourer and stone quarrier. In 1866 he married Jane (b.1837) daughter of William Kyle and Robina Cavers. Their children were: John (b.1867); William (b.1868); Anna Jane (b.1870); and Thomas (b.1872). Sir Maurice ‘de Moravia’ (d.1346) Earl of Strathearn. Born in Drumsargard, Cambuslang, Lanarkshire, he was probably eldest son of Sir John of Drumsargard and an unknown mother. His step-mother was Mary, daughter of Malise, 7th Earl of Strathearn. He may have fought at Halidon Hill in 1333, and is recorded as Sheriff of Lanark in 1334. He was granted the Barony of Sprouston in an undated charter of David II. At about the same time he was also granted the ward of Walter Cumming of Rowallan in the Barony of Hawick (although it is unclear what exactly this means). He was granted Braxholme by David II after it was forfeited by John Baliol; this may have been around 1333, when he would still have been quite young. There is a suggestion that he was granted Braxholme (and perhaps Hawick) as early as 1329 (although this is unclear). He supported Andrew Murray (guardian for David II) in his rejection of English peace terms in the late 1330s and became a favourite of David II when he returned from France in 1341. He had custody of Stirling Castle in 1342. In that same year he had a grant from David II of the Barony of Hawick and Braxholme (possibly a regranting), as well as Sprouston and Strathaven in Lanarkshire. This was probably to try to curb the power of Robert the Steward in Clydesdale and William Douglas of Liddesdale (both out of favour with the Crown). He was granted the Earldom of Strathearn in 1343. In 1344 he was one of the cautioners for the followers of Alexander Ramsay, who had been murdered by William Douglas. He witnessed many royal charters in the early 1340s. He was created a Justiciar, and would undoubtedly have become more powerful still had he not been killed at the Battle of Neville’s Cross. Robert the Steward would later claim the Earldom of Strathearn for himself. In 1339 he married Joan (or Joanna) of Menteith, daughter of Wallace’s betrayer. She was widow of Malise Murray (his own step-grandfather) and of John Campbell, Earl of Atholl. After his death his widow married William, Earl of Sutherland. He may have had an illegitimate son Maurice and also appears to have had a son William. His daughter Joan (or Joanna, who might instead have been his granddaughter, or his wife’s daughter with the Earl of Sutherland) married Sir Thomas Murray of Bothwell, and later she (or more likely her daughter of the same name) married Archibald Douglas ‘the Grim’, passing on the Hawick Barony to the Douglasses. Ninian (15th/16th C.) possessor of the lands of Kershope in Ettrick. He and his brother John leased the lands in the mid-1480s, but they were attacked and their property destroyed, with John being killed in about 1485. He and his son John were given the lease of these Crown lands in 1490. In 1494/5 Lawrence Rutherford in Oakwood had remission for stealing sheep from him at Kershope. He was still leasing half of Kershope in 1502. In 1500 Walter Scott of Braxholm was recorded as assignee of him and John of Falahill in recovering money that Philip Turnbull of Whithope owed them for the damage done to their lands. Probably the same Ninian was on the 1509 panel for Adam Hepburn inheriting the lands of Alemoor. Thomas is listed after him, and possibly a relative. Sir Oswyn (1873–1936) born at Mill Hill, London, he was a son of Sir James A.H. He went into the Civil Service and became Secretary to the Admiralty 1917–36. His wife

Lady Mildred wrote a biography of him. Patrick of Falahill (d.c.1492) son of John. He acquired land near Philiphaugh in about 1477. He had a sasine for the lands of ‘Pringillisand’ and ‘Listerland’ in Selkirkshire in 1477. From 1477 he was granted the lease of Lewenshope and Hangingshaw, which had been in the hands of his father. In 1479 he gave his seal to an obligation involving the Kers of Cessford. In 1484 and again in 1488 he and his son John had the lease of Lewenshope and Hangingshaw. Around 1485–90 he was also tenant of Bowhill along with his brother Peter. His children included: John, ‘the Outlaw Murray’; Thomas, mentioned as brother of John in 1494/5; and Margaret. Patrick of Falahill (d.1580) son of James of Falahill and grandson of ‘the Outlaw Murray’. He held the office of hereditary Sheriff of Selkirkshire. He also held the lands of Philiphaugh, according to a charter of 1528. In 1530 he was served heir to his father James in the customs and duties of Selkirk, as well as the Sheriffship. However, there was a dispute in that year, with John Scott, Vicar of Hawick, producing royal letters breaking the privilege office of Sheriff that he held; Alexander Tait of Pirn was procurator for a counter-claim that the letters did not discharge him from being Sheriff. In 1531 he owed teind sheaves for his lands of Hangingshaw. In 1533/4 in Selkirk he had a bond with William Stewart of Traquair. In 1534 he required William Douglas of Bonjedward to appear at his court. In 1535 he declared that his forebears and tenants had always kept their herds on Selkirk Common. In 1536 the Bailies of Selkirk complained that he had come to the common ‘with a multitude of men in violent oppression with swords, staffs and cudgels’ and taken away cattle belonging to one of the Bailies; he declared that he had only come to the common with his servants to peaceably pasture his own cattle. In 1536/7 he complained about others encroaching on his ‘friend’ Thomas, who had farmed at Easter Bowhill for 40 years. He was ‘of Hangitschaw’ in 1541 when recorded as owner of the lands of Lewenshope and Hangingshaw in Yarrow, as well as ‘Hairheid’ in Ettrick. In 1547/8 he was listed among the supporters of Sir Walter Scott of Branhonme in a bond along with the Kerrs. In 1564/5 he was one of the witnesses to the bond between the Kerrs and the Scotts. In 1569 he was among the lairds who signed a bond to keep peace on the Border. In 1576 there was an agreement with the Burgh of Selkirk restoring him to his lands. He married Margaret, daughter of John, Lord Fleming, secondly married a daughter of Lord Borthwick and thirdly married Elizabeth Ormiston, who was a widow. His eldest son was James, who married Margaret, daughter of William Stewart of Traquair, and whose son Patrick succeeded. His son Malcolm is recorded in 1573. He also had a daughter, Catherine, who married James Somerville of Cambusnethan. Conflicting with the usual genealogy, in 1579 his son and heir Patrick is recorded in a transaction in Selkirk. Patrick of Falahill (d.1601) grandson of Patrick of Falahill. He is probably the Patrick ‘of Fawlayhill’ who in 1580 witnessed was named in a transaction in Selkirk and witnessed several others. In 1581 he had an arrangement with Robert Scott of Haining over the ‘feu maill’ of Haining. He may be the Patrick ‘ooy and heir’ to the deceased Patrick of Falahill who in 1581/2 granted a sasine to Adam Scott of Bonnington. In about 1588 he was appointed as one of the Parliamentary Commissioners for Selkirk and Peebles. He is listed on the 1590 ‘Roll of the Clans’. He married Agnes, daughter of Sir Andrew Murray of Blackbarony, and secondly married Marian, daughter of Sir Lewis Bellendon. His children were: Sir John, who succeeded; Patrick, who held lands in Annandale, and was with Robert Scott, younger of Haining, when he attacked Selkirk Mill in 1608; James, a merchant in Edinburgh; Isabel, who married John Abernethy, Bishop of Caithness; Margaret, who married Ralph Kerr of Primside and Greenhead; Elizabeth, who married Robert Scott of Haining; and Jean, who married John Scott of Tushielaw. Sir Patrick of Lainshaw (16th/17th C.) represented Selkirkshire in Parliament in 1617. His Lairdship was later called Langshaw. It is possible he was the same man as Sir Patrick of Elibank. Sir Patrick of Elibank (d.1649) son of Sir Gideon. He was served as heir to his father in 1621. He was Keeper of Caerlaverock Castle. He was involved in a feud with James Cranston in about 1610. In 1621 he succeeded to his father’s lands of Langshaw in Melrose Parish. He was also infested in lands by the Commandator of Melrose in about 1621. In 1622 he was involved in a ‘wadset’ with Walter, Earl of Buccleuch, over the lands of Blackgrain in the Lordship of Ettrick. He married no less than 5 times. He was M.P. for Haddington Constabulary 1628–33 and 1640–41. He was created a Baronet of Nova Scotia and then elevated to the peerage as Lord Elibank. He was succeeded in 1650 by his son Patrick, 2nd Lord Elibank. Sir Patrick of Deuchar (1625/6–89) son of James, who was 3rd son of Patrick of Falahill, with his mother being Berthia Maule, of the Pannure family. His brothers were Sir James of Skirling and Sir Robert of Priestfield. He was M.P. for Selkirkshire in 1665, 1667 and 1669–74. He was appointed as a Justice of the Peace for Selkirkshire in 1663 and as a Commissioner of Supply for Selkirkshire in 1685. He was probably the Patrick who had a dispute with the Burgh of Selkirk over Common land in 1665. He paid the land tax in Selkirkshire in 1678 and is recorded representing Henry Hislop in a discharge in 1684 with the Bailie of Selkirk. He may have married Euphan, daughter of James Baird. Patrick of Cherrytrees (18th C.) eldest son of James of Cherrytrees. He was admitted as an Advocate in 1751 and was Sheriff of Roxburghshire from 1769. He served as Sheriff-Depute of Roxburghshire in 1780 and was on the roll of electors for the county. He was probably succeeded by George of Cherrytrees, who owned the lands in Yetholm Parish in 1788. Richard (b.1818/9) farmer and innkeeper in Newcastleton. In 1861 he was on Douglas Square, farming 40 acres. In the 1860s he was listed as proprietor of the Crown Inn on Douglas Square (perhaps at the same location). His wife was Jane and their children included Mary, Robert and Jane.

Sir Robert of Priestfield (d.1672) 2nd son of James of Skirling and grandson of Patrick of Falahill. He was brother of Sir Patrick of Deuchar and grandfather of Sir James of Skirling and grandson of Patrick of Falahill. The son of Patrick and Margaret Nicolson of Skirling was probably the Sir James of Skirling recorded in the rolls of the Burgh of Selkirk in 1665, 1667 and 1669–74. He was appointed as a Justice of the Peace for Selkirkshire in 1663 and as a Commissioner of Supply for Selkirkshire in 1685. He was probably the Patrick who had a dispute with the Burgh of Selkirk over Common land in 1665. He paid the land tax in Selkirkshire in 1678 and is recorded representing Henry Hislop in a discharge in 1684 with the Bailie of Selkirk. He may have married Euphan, daughter of James Baird. Patrick of Cherrytrees (18th C.) eldest son of James of Cherrytrees. He was admitted as an Advocate in 1751 and was Sheriff of Roxburghshire from 1769. He served as Sheriff-Depute of Roxburghshire in 1780 and was on the roll of electors for the county. He was probably succeeded by George of Cherrytrees, who owned the lands in Yetholm Parish in 1788. Richard (b.1818/9) farmer and innkeeper in Newcastleton. In 1861 he was on Douglas Square, farming 40 acres. In the 1860s he was listed as proprietor of the Crown Inn on Douglas Square (perhaps at the same location). His wife was Jane and their children included Mary, Robert and Jane.

Robert (17th C.) resident at Todshawhaugh according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Robert (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish recorded at Borthwickbrae in 1718 and 1721. He may be the Robert who married Bessie Learmonth in Roberton in 1714. His children probably included: James (b.1715); William (b.1718); Robert (b.1721); and Margaret (b.1723). Robert (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was recorded at Ormiston in 1755. He married Elspeth Grieve and their children included John (b.1752) and Walter (b.1755). William (b.1756) and August (b.1765), also baptised in Cavers, were probably his children. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish, perhaps related to the earlier Robert in Ormiston. He was recorded at Sunnyside in 1795. Probably the same Robert was farmer at Ormiston Mains, listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as owner of 3 horses. His children included Mary (b.1795) and Walter (b.1798). He may be the Robert who married Betty Pott and whose children, baptised in Cavers Parish, included Robert (b.1805) and Adam (b.1806). Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton, who lived at Pathead and then Toftsholm. He was probably the smith in Newcastleton, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as owner of 2 horses. He was one of the first feuars to commence building in Newcastleton. He married twice, his 2nd wife being Marion Crozier. Their children were: John (b.c.1777), who was a blacksmith; Marion (b.1781), who married mason John Nichol; Robert (1784–1859), who married Nellie Scott; Margaret (1788–1882), who married Robert Mitchellhill, and emigrated to Galt, Ontario; and Jane (b.1790), who probably died young. His first wife may have been Margaret Nichol, who died at Millholm in 1774, aged 31, and is buried at Ettleton. Robert (b.1780s) father of plumber John (who was father of J.E.D.) and James. He married Alison Erskine Scott. Robert (1784–1859) nail-maker in Newcastleton, listed in Pigot’s 1837 directory and Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1841 he was at about 47 North Hermitage Street. He was probably son of Robert and Marion Crozier. He married Helen (or ‘Nellie’?) Scott, who died in 1874, aged 83. Their children included: Robert (1813/4–56); Marion (b.1816); Archibald (1817–44); John; James; Thomas (1827/8–47); and Jean (1831/2–51). They are mostly buried in Ettleton Cemetery. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Elizabeth Pott and their children included Richardson (b.1812). Robert (18th/19th C.) baker in Newcastleton. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. He is also listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories. He does not appear in the 1841 census. Robert (b.c.1810) foreman at Weensland Mills. He was living there in 1841, along with Jessie, probably his wife. Robert (b.1821/2) shepherd at Old Castleton in 1851 and 1861. He is still recorded there in 1868. His wife was Rachel, and their children included Janet, Marion and Jane. Robert (1831–1901)

lee in Hobkirk Parish. In 1868 he married Mar-Allars Crescent in the latter part of his life. In 1882, living mainly in Galt, and returned to Hawick in 1892. He became a contributor to the local press, where he sometimes wrote under the pen-name ‘B.O.B.’, giving us ‘The Reckoning’ for example. However, he was a strong advocate for total abstinence. He was a Councillor 1868/9, supporter of the allotments, the Working Men’s Building Society and the Co-operative Society. He wrote several books of local interest, including ‘The Gypsies of the Borders’ (1875), ‘Hawick Songs and Song Writers’ (1881, 1889, 1897) and ‘Hawick Characters’ (1901), both of which ran to several editions (both were originally published in serial form in the local press, with ‘Hawick Characters’ collecting many articles originally written by others). His ‘History of Hawick, from Earliest Times to 1832’ (1901) is a treasure-trove of anectdotal information. It was followed by ‘Hisory of Hawick, from 1832’ issued by the publisher in 1902 from notes that he left. He also wrote ‘The gypsies of the border’ (1875). He lived at Allars Crescent in the latter part of his life. In 1853 he married Agnes, daughter of George ‘Pie’ Olivers, who died in 1901, aged 72; when they ried he was living in Brougham Place. Their sons were William (a merchant in Aberdeen) and George Oliver (a doctor in Wisconsin). A memoial stone was erected in the Wellogate Cemetery by his friends and members of the Archological Society, containing the motto ‘Leal to the Border’. A portrait of him was painted by Frank Wood in 1897, in the Museum. Robert (19th C.) son of John. He was a carpenter at Black-lee in Hobkirk Parish. In 1868 he married Margaret Jackson, from Crookholm, Canonbie. Their children were John (chemist and druggist), James (also a carpenter, died age 27) and Margaret (who married Thomas Smith). Robert (b.1835) son of John and Isabella Howison. He was a frame-worker in Hawick, living at 50 High Street in 1861.
He married Elizabeth Hunter, who was from Earl-ston. His children included James (b.1860), who became a baker in Edinburgh. Robert (b.1856) elder brother of J.E.D. He was a commercial trav-} eller in London and had eight children. Roger (d.1330) son of Archibald, he is one of the earliest known ancestors of the local Murrays. He was recorded as being ‘de Moravia’. In 1321 he was granted the lands of Fala by James, Lord Douglas. The Murrays of Falahill, Philiphaugh and Blackbarony are all descended from him. Roger (15th/16th C.) leased half the lands of Sundhope in the Yarrow valley in the period 1487–99. The other half went to William, who was his brother. The pair appear to have had their farm raided several times, e.g. by Robert Turnbull in Castlehill (near Branxholme), who was charged with stealing 15 score sheep from Sundhope. He leased half of Windydoors in 1502 as well as half of Sundhope with Thomas (who was surely another relative). Possibly the same Roger was ‘in old age, deprived of strength’ whose land had been ‘despoiled by thieves’ who in 1532/3 sold his Selkirk tenement and rigs to his younger son James. Sarah (1744–1811) of Kensington, who wrote a travel guide ‘A companion, and useful guide to the beauties of Scotland . . .’ published in 1799. She visited Hawick in 1785, her short account including the following: ‘Some young lads passing through the churchyard at Hawick whilst I was in it, with dogs and some strange looking ings on their backs, I inquired what they were going to do with them, but their language to me was as Arabic. On my shaking my head as a token of not understanding them, they began screaming in the highest note of their voices, taking me, I suppose, for a deaf woman: and at last we separated, laughing at our inability of understanding each other’. Sir Thomas of Bothwell (d.1361) son of Sir Andrew. The identity of his mother seems to be unknown. He succeeded to his father’s estates after the death of his elder brother John. In 1351 he was a hostage in England, in place of David II. He returned to Scotland in 1352 and was knighted by the following year. He was involved in negotiations for the release of David, and was involved with the Treaty of Berwick in 1357. He appears to have returned as a prisoner to England in 1358, and although he may have returned to Scotland again, he was back a prisoner in London in 1359. He married Joan (or Joanna) Moray, daughter of Sir Maurice of Strathearn, who had been Baron of Hawick. He was granted the Barony (along with that of Sprouston) in a 1358 charter of David II. However, this may have been a re-granting, since it seems likely he gained the Barony through marriage to the daughter of the previous Baron. He was described in 1358 as ‘panitario nostro Socie’ (i.e. pantler of Scotland). He probably died of the plague in London. Although it is often stated that his widow later married Archibald, Earl of Douglas, it seems more likely that Douglas married his daughter (and heiress), who was also called Joan. Through her the Barony of Hawick passed to the Douglasses. Thomas (16th C.) recorded ‘in Newhall’ in 1531/2 when he was part of an inquest to rule on a land arrangement in Selkirk. He was probably tenant at Newhall on the Ale Water. Thomas of Bowhill (d.bef. 1539) recorded in 1536/7 when Patrick of Philiphaugh complained on his behalf about others farming at Easter Bowhill. It was stated that he had occupied those lands for 40 years. He is also recorded in 1539 in the Selkirk Protocol Books when his widow Christian Murray sold her part of North Bowhill to Robert Ker, Burgess of Edinburgh. His son and heir had a dispute over the lands of South Bowhill. He was probably related to James of Bowhill, who died at Flodden. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Eves Parish. In 1761 he married Margaret Riddell, who was from Hawick. Their children included: Thomas (b.1762); Walter (b.1762); Gideon (b.1765); John (b.1765); George (b.1767); and Margaret (b.1771). Thomas (1754–1834) son of David and Elizabeth. He was farmer at Whisgills in Castleton Parish, perhaps taking over from his brother John. He was recorded on the 1792–97 Horse Tax Rolls. He was also taxed for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797. He was still farmer there in the 1830s. He married Janet Inglis, who was from Millholm, with her maternal grandparents being Brydons from Ettrick; she died in 1852, aged 84. They had many children, including 7 daughters who grew to adulthood and all married: Jean (b.1783), married Rev. John Law of the Newcastleton Burgher Kirk; Agnes (b.1784), who married Walter Armstrong, ‘the auld merchant’ in Newcastleton; Elizabeth (b.1788), who died young; David (1791/2–1815), who was very tall; Elizabeth (again, 1794–1845), who married Peter Oliver; James (b.1792), who also farmed at Whisgills; Mary (b.1804), who married Robert Elliot in Hermitage; Thomas (b.1796); Julie (b.c.1799); John (b.1803), who died young; and John (again, b.1806), who also died young. One of his daughters agreed to marriage after dreaming about her dress being snagged by her husband-to-be as he was angling. Margaret (1799/1800–61), who married shepherd John Scott, may also have been his daughter. The family are buried in Ettleton Cemetery (and the dates on the headstone do not all match the birth years from the parish records). Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of Borthwickbrae. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘ Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. Thomas (b.1794/5) labourer in Roberton Parish. In 1841 and 1851 he was at Roberton Glebefoot, described in 1851 as a ‘Road Contractor’. His wife was Margaret and their children included Beatrix, Jessie, Walter, William, Robert and Thomas. He was probably the son of William baptised in Roberton in 1794. Thomas (d.1842) labourer at Upperraw and Whiteknowe. He was listed as male head of his family in 1835–41. Thomas, L.L.D. (1792–1872) of Edinburgh, was made an Honorary Burgess in 1836 after delivering a series of lectures in the town on ‘the Science of Political Economy’. He wrote several books on varied subjects. Thomas (1806/7–58) son of James, who farmed at Whisgills. He was tenant farmer at Burnmouth. Thomas (1811–73) father of Sir James A.H. Born in Denholm, he had a clothiers business in Hawick. His father was James (descended from the Murrays of Spittal Tower), and his mother Christina Winthrope (whose father was a ‘writer’ in Hawick). He became a journeyman tailor, travelling the north of England and witnessing the opening of the Liverpool and Manchester Railway in 1829. He eventually returned in 1835 and settled in Denholm, since Hawick had too many tailors at the time. However, he moved into Hawick in 1858, his house and business being at 6 Bourtree Place. He was for a while a member of the old Town Council. In 1835 he married Mary (1803–88), 6th child of Hawick linen manufacturer Charles Scott. They had 5 children, all born in Denholm: James (1837–1915), lexicographer extraordinaire; Charles, who died young; Alexander Davidson, newspaper editor; Charles Oliver, engraver; and Margaret Scott, who married Alfred Marshall, and later lived with her mother at 10 Wellogate Place. Thomas (19th C.) resident of Kirndean in Castleton Parish in 1868. Walter (17th C.) resident of Dryden in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll among ‘ye poor’. Probably the same Walter is recorded in 1691 having a daughter Margaret baptised, with no mother’s name given. The witnesses were John and Andrew Riddell. Walter (17th C.) resident at Stobicote according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Walter (1693/4–1719) buried at Borthwick Waas. His gravestone is adjacent to that of James and others associated with Teindside. Walter (18th C.) farmer who was replaced by Abraham Armstrong as tenant of the Duke of Buccleuch in about 1796. This was probably at Shankend farm. Walter (18th/19th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was recorded at Borthwick Mains in 1792 and 1795 and at Greenbank in 1798. He married Margaret Laidlaw in 1791 and their children included: James (b.1793); Margaret (b.1795); and Thomas (b.1798). Walter (b.c.1795) stockmaking, giving his name, for a time, to Murray Place, although he only owned property in the area from 1814 for less than two years. He inherited 66 High Street (and the area behind 66 and 68, which became Murray Place) from a relative William Turnbull, tailor, in 1814, and sold it to Robert Leyden in 1816. His wife was Elizabeth and their children included Margaret. Walter (b.c.1800) mason on the Kirk Wynd in 1841. His wife was Euphemia, and they also has a daughter called Euphemia. Walter (19th C.) Church Officer of Hawick Free Kirk 1874--87. William (15th C.) leased half the lands of Sundhope in the Yarrow valley from the Crown in the period 1487--99. His son John was also mentioned in 1492. His brother Roger leased the other half of Sundhope. In 1494/5 he had 30 oxen and cows, a horse and goods stolen by David Turnbull, son of the Laird of Whithope. There were still Murrays at Sundhope in the late-17th century. William of Romanno (d.c.1560) son of William of Shillinglaw. He was listed among the Borders men who followed the Homes in an attack on the Earl of Arran, for which they had remission in 1526. His brother Alexander was also listed. He married Joneta, heiress of John Romanno of that Ilk. His children included: William, who succeeded; John; James; Christian, who married William Cockburn of Henderland; and Marion, who married Thomas Dudingstoun of Southease. William (16th C.) recorded in Sundhope in 1581 when he witnessed a transaction in Selkirk. William (d.c.1633) acted as Chamberlain to the Scotts of Buccleuch for part of the rents in Branzholme and Wilton in the period 1631--33. In the period 1633-37 his wife Isobel Wilson performed the duty in his place. William (17th C.) servitor to Francis, Earl of Buccleuch, recorded in 1646 when he witnessed a document relating to lands in Edinburgh. William (17th C.) recorded as ‘in Templehall’ when he witnessed a sasine relating to Harwood lands in 1664. William (17th/18th C.) wright in Hawick. In 1716 he witnessed a baptism for weaver Robert Wight. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at Burnhead in 1724. He married Janet Scott and their children included: John (b.1717); Jean (b.1720); Robert (b.1722); and Walter (b.1724). The witnesses in 1724 were John and Walter Scott (who may have been related to his wife). William (18th C.) resident of the Dykes in Cavers Parish in 1724 and 1731. His children, baptised in Cavers, included William (b.1724), Margaret (b.1728) and Elizabeth (b.1731). William (b.1740s) younger son of John, farmer at Spittal-on-Rule. He had 2 sons: Veitch, who was a builder, working on Ancrum Bridge; and John. William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His son James was baptised in 1786. William ‘Wullie on the Windy Sole’ (d.bef. 1805) resident of Hawick. He married Margaret Todd in Hawick in 1794. His nickname ‘Wille on the windowsole’ is recorded when his child died in 1787 and when his wife died in 1805. It seems likely that what is meant is the modern ‘window-sill’, but it is still unclear why he might have had this nickname. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He is recorded at Scarnook in 1786, 1788 and 1794. He may be the William who married Beatrice Scott in Robertson in 1786. His children, baptised in Robertson, included: James (b.1786); Walter (b.1788); Beatrice (b.1790); Robert (b.1792); and twins Thomas and William (b.1794). William (1771/2--1833) schoolmaster in Canonbie, who died in Langholm. He married Helen Byers, who died in 1866, aged 70. Their sons Andrew, John and William were teachers in Hawick. Their other children were Fanny (who died aged 95), John (teacher at Caverton Mill, near Kelso), Thomas (who also married a Helen Byers), James and Janet. William (b.1787/8) from Brownmuir in Selkirkshire, he was teacher at a school in Lilliesleaf. He ran his own school (separate from the Parochial School), which was probably on the Loan in the village. His was probably the ‘adventure school’ described in the New Statistical Account (1840) as teaching ‘English reading, writing, and arithmetic, the latter only tolerably well, the former two in the most vulgar manner’. It went on to say that the ‘teacher has no education superior to a common labourer, and refuses to apply for further education’: if not strictly accurate, this suggests strong disagreement with the minister, who probably wrote the account. He was recorded as teacher at Lilliesleaf in Pigot’s 1837 directory and Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1841 and 1851 he was living with his brothers Alexander and Walter. In 1861 he was on Main Street with his brother Alexander and his family. William (1789–1872) 3rd son of Andrew of Spittal Tower. He was a stocking-maker in Hawick. In 1841 he was living on Miller’s Close off the High Street, in 1851 was on Brougham Place and in 1861 he was a grocer and china merchant at 75 High Street. In 1822 he married Helen, daughter of Robert Biggar, and she died in 1871, aged 77. Their children were: Andrew (1823–82), who married Isabella Brown; Jane (b.1825), who married John Marchbank; Elizabeth (b.1827), who married Andrew Smith of Dalkeith; Agnes (b.1830); Robert (b.1832); Isabella (b.1834), who married James Lambert and kept a wash-house; Helen (b.1836), who married Andrew Lambert; and William (b.1839), who married Margaret Anderson and later Mary Ann Hope. William (b.1792/3) from Traquair, he was a farmer at Haughhead in Ashkirk Parish. In 1851 he was farmer there of 8 acres and in 1861 he was at ‘Nook Haugh’ farming 10 acres. He was still recorded there in 1868. His wife was Philia Oliver and their children included Mary and Philia. His sister-in-law Janet Oliver (from Ashkirk) was living with the family in 1861. William (1794–1875) son of William and Beatrix Scott, he was born in Robertson Parish. In 1841 he was at Scarnook with his mother. In 1851 and 1861 he was a retired shepherd living with his daughter and son-in-law at Scarnook. His first wife (according to the gravestone) may have been Helen Grieve, who died in 1822, aged 20. He had sons William (d.1819), who died in infancy, and James (d.1841), who died in an accident at the age of 5. His daughter Helen married carrier John Elliot. He died at Scawrend and was buried in Robertson Cemetery. William (b.1802/3) from Castleton, he was a joiner in Teviothead. He married Betty Young. Their children included: John (b.1829); Elizabeth (b.1831); Thomas (1835–68), who died in an accident in Manchester; Douglas (b.1839); and James (b.1843). He is buried at Teviothead. William (c.1805–bef. 1851) woollen spinner in Hawick. He was living on the Loan in 1841 and his widow was there in 1851. He married Agnes Stevenson and their children included George, Thomas, Adam, William, Agnes and Robert. William (b.1812/3) shepherd at Blackcleugh, Teviothead Parish. He is recorded there in 1851 with his wife Janet and children Thomas, Andrew, George, William, Margaret, Walter and Elizabeth. Dr. William (1813/4–65) surgeon in Newcastle, brother of Margaret, Jane and Agnes. He was listed as a surgeon on Pigot’s 1837 directory and Slater’s 1852 directory. He collected antiquities from the district, having the last hand-cuffs used in the village, as well as the supposed key from Mangerton Tower and a brass mortar-gun from Hermitage. He presented Liddesdale fossils and other items to the Hawick Archaeological Society. He was listed as a surgeon in Newcastle in the 1850s when he was on the Borders Union Railway Committee for Liddesdale. When it was decided that the Liddesdale route would be taken for the railway, he rode his gig to the head of the Liddel with flags flying, to announce the good news to the district. In 1861 he was at about 48 South Hermitage Street, and listed as a surgeon, but blind. In 1843 he married Agnes, daughter of Thomas Scott, a Newcastleton innkeeper. Their children included Isabel, Elizabeth Janet and Mary. Isabel and Mary emigrated to Elmira, Illinois. He is buried at Ettleton Cemetery. William (b.1814/15) tailor on the High Street. He was listed in Pigot’s 1837 directory. In 1841 he was living at about 6 High Street with his wife Margaret and daughter, also Margaret. In 1851 he was a widower in a lodging house on Walter’s Wynd. William (1831/2–1906) Hawick teacher for over 50 years. Son of William, he was born at Broomieknowe, Canonbie. He came to Hawick in 1850, to help run the school started by his brother Andrew at the top of Baker Street, and continued by his other brother John. The school had moved to the old East Bank Kirk, then to the foot of the close at 9 High Street and then to 8 Kirkgate (i.e. St. Mary’s Place). He was hired as a teacher at St. Mary’s School in 1864 and became the first Headmaster at Trinity in 1876. He was also on the Town Council for 5 years and served as Session Clerk for St. Mary’s. When he retired in 1903 he built Carradoyne in Fenwick Park, where he died. He married Janet Murray, eldest sister of J.P. John (and probably his second cousin). Their children included: William, who worked at the Commercial Bank in Hawick, moved to England and retired to Langholm; John, an architect in Liverpool; David (who was assistant to Dr. James Brydon in the Sandbed; and Elizabeth Carruthers, who married Rev. Stewart Burns. William (19th C.) married Jane Dodd Hobkirk in Hawick in 1858. William (1838/9–1916) youngest son of William and brother of poet and historian Robert. He married Margaret, daughter of Alexander Anderson and she died in 1877, aged 33. Their children were William (printer in Costa Rica), Isabella (who married August Louis Roye from Detroit), Andrew (a chemist in Costa Rica who married twice) and 3 children who died young. He later remarried to Mary Ann Hope. He was said to be a striking personality (in contrast to his brother Robert), with a tall stature and a long flowing beard in later years. In 1908 he was elected librarian of the St. Andrew's Society of Detroit. Soon after he returned to Hawick and became an active member of the Archæological Society, being joint secretary in 1910 and 1911 and writing some articles. William (b.1855) eldest son of local historian Robert. He became a merchant in Aberdeen. He married Georgina Scott and later Catherine Hosie. His children were Margaret, Agnes Oliver, Jane Stewart, Helen Georgina, Janet Brown and Robert. William (19th/20th C.) gardener at Borthwick-shiel. His grandmother was a sister of Walter Scott (‘Wat o the Knowe’). He was a Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. William (d.1915) son of William and Margaret Anderson, he was descended from the Spittal Tower Murrays and was nephew of local historian Robert. He became a printer in Costa Rica and married Agnes MacNair. His younger brother Andrew was a chemist in Costa Rica and married his sister-in-law Margaret MacNair (in earliest times interchangeable with ‘Moray’, and became ‘Moravia’, ‘Moravie’, etc. when written in Latin; other spellings include ‘Murra’ and ‘Murry’).

Murray Bros (nu-ri-bru-thurz) n. D. & R. Murray, knitwear warehouse and retail business. It was established in 1960, based in Tower Mill, expanding with shops in Haddington, Kelso and Penrith. It later moved to the former Orrock Church. In 2004 the business switched to trading solely in china and giftware and closed in 2007, following the retirement of Ronnie Murray.

Murray Place (nu-ri-plis) n. lost street name, being the area behind 66 and 68 High Street, named after Walter Murray, stockingmaker who was there for only about 2 years from 1814. The new houses there were built in the early 1860s and for a few years referred to as Albert Place, but Murray Place by the 1868/9 Valuation roll. The name was dropped altogether in 1968 as it became simply the lower part of O’Connell Street.

Museum (mwa-ri-plis) n. street in Denholm, between Douglas Drive and the Ashloaning, where 10 new houses were built in the 1950s.

the Murrays (thi-nu-ri-z) n. Scottish family, probably all originating from an ancient line connected with the area of Moray or Moravia in the north-east of Scotland. The most important Lairdship locally was that of the Murrays of Falahill and Philiphaugh, descended from Archibald, who signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296. In the 16th century these Murrays were involved in many Feuds, as well as in the struggles against the English. There were long Murrays in Rulewater and in Hawick there were several important families (most of which are directly related), which gave us lexicographer Sir James A.H. Murray, local historian Robert Murray, songwriter J.E.D. Murray and others.

Murray’s Temperance Hotel (mu-ri-teem-pu-ri-n-boo-tel) n. teetotal establishment at 15 High Street in the late 19th century.

Myrt (mu-ri) n., arch. the skin of a sheep that has died naturally – ‘Ane myrt lamb skin [is stated to be hardly worth two shillings Scots]’ [BR1700], ‘Myrt, A lamb-skin before castration-time, Teviotd.’ [JoJ] (also ‘mort’).

Murther (mu-thurr) n., arch., poet. murder – ‘but when he heard ane crying murther he straightway went up to make riddance and to allay tumult’ [PR1716], ‘Thaye sley the widaw an’ the fremet, an’ nurther the faetherliss’ [HSR] (older version of the word murder).

Muselee (mnewz, -maez, muz-le) n. farm across the Borthwick river from Dearnburnhaugh, below Broaddlee. It was in Hawick Parish until 1689/90 when Roberton was formed. The Muselee Burn joins the Borthwick here, and the 276 m Muselee Hill is above. A narrow lane between 2 dykes to the left of the house is part of an old drove road, with cattle passing from the west through here and over to Teviothead and on to English markets. Alexander Scott ‘in Mouslaw’, recorded in 1501, could have been tenant here. Adam Murray is recorded there in 1502. The lands were owned by a branch of the Riddells from at least 1618 and passed to the niece of Charles Riddell of Muselee in 1849 when he died unmarried. In 1627 it was valued along with Woodburn as paying ‘120 lb., vicarage 20 lb’. Archibald Elliot of Muselee, ‘a common a notorious thief and fugitive’ was tried in 1628. There were 4 ‘communicants’ recorded there in 1650, namely Thomas Laidlaw, Malie Wilson, Robert Laidlaw and James Laidlaw. John Riddell paid the land tax on £100 in Hawick Parish in 1663 and 1678 (probably for Muselee, which was in Hawick Parish at that time). George Heatley was there in at least 1732–34 and Andrew Main in 1741. By 1788 (and still continued in 1811) the owner was Charles Riddell and the value was unchanged. John Scott was living there in 1792 and Thomas Grieve is recorded as farmer there in 1797. About the same time John Laidlaw was shepherd there. William Aitkin was farmer there in 1841. Robert Brown was farmer in the 1860s Capt. George Hutton Riddell was the owner in about 1874. (also formerly spelled ‘Mooslie’, ‘Muislie’, ‘Muslie’, ‘Muisla’ and variants; it is ‘muselee’ in 1502, ‘Mouslie’ in 1616, ‘Mewsie’ in 1628, ‘Museley’ in 1653, ‘Muislie’ in 1663, ‘Muslie’ in 1682, ‘Mooslie’ in 1690, ‘Muisle’ in 1678 and 1695, ‘Musely’ in 1719, ‘Mewsie’ in 1761, ‘Muisly’ in 1732, ‘Mooselee’ in 1797 and ‘Muslie’ in 1841; it is marked on a 1650 parish map as ‘Mooselie’, on Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Meusly’ and is absent from Stobie’s 1770 map and Ainslie’s 1821 map; the name may be from Old English ‘mos-lea’ meaning ‘fodder lea’.
Muselee Burn

Muselee Burn (mewz-lee-burn) n. stream that runs into the Borthwick Water roughly from the south-east, joining near Muselee. It forms part of the probable boundary line of the Catrail, with a section of the linear earthwork ending near the stream, about 300 m north of Broadlee Loch. It then runs in a south-easterly direction to connect with the headwaters of the Teindside Burn.

Muselee Hill (mewz-lee-hil) n. hill to the south-east of Muselee farm in the Borthwick valley, reaching a height of 276 m. A linear earthwork runs for about 500 m from Muselee Burn to the east, across the southern slopes of this hill, ending in the headwaters of the Wood Burn. It is presumably an old agricultural boundary.

Muselee Drive (mewz-lee-driv) n. short street in Lilliesleaf, running to the north at the west side of the village, usually written ‘Muselee Drive’.

Muselee Sike (mewz-lee-sik) n. small stream on the south side of the Borthwick valley, between Muselee and Woodburn. It is distinct from Muselee Burn, which lies to the west.

the Museum (tha-mew-zee-um) n. Hawick’s museum is located in Wilton Lodge, it houses a permanent display of knitwear and hosiery history, as well as other local artefacts, paintings, natural history and achaeology. Many more items of local interest are in storage than can be displayed at one time. It grew out of the collection of the Archaeological Society, which first opened to the public in premises at the east end of the High Street in 1858. It can be seen upstairs in the property of Milligan’s (site of the Liberal Club) in an 1858 photo. A steady stream of artefacts were donated to the Society over its first few decades, and were on public display initially only for a few hours on Saturday evenings. There was a catalogue published for the 1866 exhibition given in connection with the Archaeological Society. The collection moved to the old Grammar School building and then the Buccleuch Memorial, where at least one photograph exists showing the collection packed into the available space. In 1906 it was offered to the Town Council, under the condition that Wilton Lodge be converted into use as a Museum. This followed in 1910, when it was opened by the Duke of Buccleuch (who was given an ornate golden key to mark the occasion, and was the first person to sign the visitor’s book). J.P. Alison drew up the original plans for converting the house into a museum. Extensive renovations were carried out in 1959 to showcase the local exhibits, and in 1975 the Scott Gallery extension was added. In 1984 the Museum became the headquarters for the Roxburgh District Museums Service. In early 2007 a new lift was added and other renovations carried out. In 2017 the trust ‘Live Borders’ took over the running of the Museum.

Musgrave (muz-græv) n. Sir John (c.1450–c.1515) Englishman who was important on the Marches around 1500. In 1502 Adam Turnbull ‘in Hornishole, now in Chalmerlane-Newtoune’ had a remission for several crimes, including ‘the treasonable in-bringing’ of him to the ‘Burning of Selkirk and Hereschip, and Stoutreif of goods therein’. He was probably son of Sir Thomas and younger brother of Sir Richard. He was knighted after the Battle of Stoke Field. He was Sheriff of Cumberland from 1489 and Constable of Bewcastle (along with his son Thomas) from 1493. He married Joan, daughter of John Crackenthorpe and secondly Margaret (or Dorothy), sister of John Dudley. He may also be the same Sir John whose wife was an inspiration for some of William Dunbar’s poetry. Sir John of Bewcastle (16th C.) son of Sir William and an unknown mistress. He was also known as ‘Jack a Musgrave’ and was leader of English raiding parties, serving as Captain of Bewcastle. In 1541 he complained that his houses had been burned by Liddesdale men. In 1542 he and 40 men ‘brent

Musselburgh

Musselburgh (mu-sul-bu-ru) n. town in the Lothians, about 6 miles east of Edinburgh. Created a burgh of barony in the early 14th century, it was originally called Eskmouth and nicknamed ‘the Honest Toun’, supposedly after the Regent, Lord Randolph, took shelter there and no one gave away his place of concealment to the English. It is well known to Hawick folk for having a Commonwealth Riding, held in late July. The principals are the Honest Lad and Lass, and are elected by open vote of the ‘Honest Toun’s Association’. The festival really began in 1936, building on the ancient riding of the marches ceremony and partly inspired by Hawick Common Riding. The main song is ‘Come all ye Honest Lads and Lasses’. Population (1991) 20,630 – For Musselburgh was a Burgh, When Edinburgh was nane, And Musselburgh will be a Burgh, When Edinburgh’s gone’.

Myredykes (mür-diks) n. former farm in Castleton Parish on the road to Kielder, at the head of the Liddel. It is ‘Myredyks’ among lands in upper Liddesdale that belonged to Jedburgh Abbey, as listed in the early 17th century. It was owned by the Scotts of Buccleuch by 1623. It was surveyed for the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1718, when it covered 306 acres and was bounded by Peel, the Border, Hudshouse and Thorlieshope; the farmhouse appears to be shown on the east bank of the Peel Burn rather than the west. William Elliot farmed there in the late 18th century. Thomas Elliot, Archibald Scott and their families lived there in 1851 and Thomas Murray’s family in 1861. In the late 19th century John Elliot in Flatt carried on the lease after the death of his uncle John Scott-Elliott. The property is now under forest. There was once a railway bridge over the road there. A flanged axe-head found there is in the National Museum of Antiquities (also written ‘Meerdykes’, it is ‘Meirdyksis’ in 1623 and ‘Myredykes’ in 1718).

Myre-quarter (miIr-kwar-tur) n. former name for lands in Belses. In 1580/1 they were wadset by ‘Dand’ Davidson to Walter Turnbull of Bewlie for an annual rent of 5 bolls of grain; they were at that time a ‘5 poundland’. They were included among lands served to Sir Thomas Ker of Cavers Kerr in 1678, after the death of his son Andrew. In 1874 it was part of the estate of Belses owned by Sir George Douglas of Springwood Park (it is ‘Myre quarter’ in 1580/1 and ‘Myre Quarter’ in 1678).

Myres (mīrz) n. former name for lands in Lillyleafe. In 1528 John Scott ‘in Myrris or Vest Manes in Lillescliff’ received payment for 3 pieces of land, summing to £40. In 1531 John Scott ‘of Myrris’ assigned to his cousin Walter Scott, tutor of Haining, these lands, which he rented from the Archbishop of Glasgow. This was confirmed in 1530/1, where John’s lands were described as ‘that fourth part of the lands of Myris with pertinent lying on the west of the place of Myris’, Walter to pay John £14. In 1595/6 Walter Riddell of that ilk held the lands of ‘West-Maynis alias Dunstane or Myris’, suggesting this was the same place as West Mains and Dunstane.

Myreslaw Court (mīrz-hu-kör) n. sheltered housing complex built at Myreslaw Green in 1973, adjacent to St. Margaret’s Home. It is on the site of the former ‘Green Kirk’ (later used concerts, church events and as a warehouse) and also the house where the Cornet traditionally stopped for a stirrup cup on the way down from the Mair. It was the first purpose-built sheltered housing unit in Scotland, and used as a model by other local authorities (also written as one word).

Myreslaw Green (mīrz-hu-green, mīs-hu-green) n. part of the town Common in the West End. In 1740 it was used to pasture animals employed on building the Teviot Brig, and the Council ordered that no turf should be cut from there. It was first feued in part in 1766, for the Anti-Burgher meeting house and manse, and not immediately affected by the Division of 1777. Originally a pasture with only one building (the Green Kirk built in 1767), it was developed over the subsequent few decades. The area once included what is now Drumlanrig Place to Myreslawgreen and formed the western boundary of the Burgh. The ‘common vennel at Myreslawgreen’ referred to in the 1537 charter probably ran from Morrison Place to Coble Pool Lane (now on the High School grounds). When this area is reached by the riders coming back from the Moor on the Friday of the Common Riding, they are served refreshments, or ‘a guid cauld calker’, a tradition possibly began by ‘Rodgie o the Green’. This was continued for about 70 years in the 20th century by the Misses McCallum. ‘Myreslaw Green’ appeared as a street name from at least 1824, and is now mainly used to the single street, which was originally part of Green Wynd. But it is also used more generally to mean that broad area of the West End surrounding the former green, including many streets named after leading Liberal reformers of Victorian times. The street used to contain the West-end branch of the Co-op (the word itself is a mixture of Old English and Norse meaning ‘green swamp’ or ‘marshy grassland’; there are many earlier spellings; it is marked ‘Myres Law Green’ on Wood’s 1824 map).

the Myreslawgreen Mairches (thu-miślu-green-mär-cheez) n. name formerly used for the boundaries ridden by the Common Riding cavalcade around the Myreslawgreen area, on their return from the Moor.

Myreslaw Hoose (mīrz-hu-hoos) n. name used for the residence of William Morrison in the latter part of the 19th century, later becoming part of Morrison Place.

Napier (næ-pur, -pee-ur) n. Andrew (18th C.) mason of Hawick Parish. In 1747 he witnessed a baptism in Hawick for George Richardson. He married Margaret Graham and they had a son John baptised in Hawick in 1739. His other children included: John (b.1744); and Jean (b.1745). He may be the son of John baptised in Hawick in 1710. He could be the Andrew whose sister Janet died in Hawick in 1778. Basii (1877–1900) eldest son of Mark and grandson of Lord Napier. He was Lieutenant with the 3rd Battalion, Imperial Yeomanry. He died during the South African War and is listed on the Hawick Boer War Memorial.

Francis (1705–73) 6th Lord Napier of Merchiston and 3rd Baronet of Thirlestane. He was only son of Sir William Scott of Thirlestane and Elizabeth Brisbane, Mistress of Napier. He changed his name from Scott to Napier when he inherited his mother’s titles. He married Henrietta, daughter of Charles Hope, Earl of Hopetoun and secondly Henrietta Maria, daughter of George Johnston of Dublin. His children were: William, who succeeded; Charles of Merchiston Hall; Lieut.-Col. Francis of the Marines; John, who died unmarried; Mark; George; James, who died young; Patrick, Naval Captain; James John; Stewart; Henrietta, who married William, 12th Lord Ross; Hester, who married Alexander Johnson of Carnsalloch; and Mary, who also died young. Francis (1758–1823) of Thirlestane, 7th Baron Napier, 8th Lord Merchiston, often referred to as ‘Lord Francis Napier’. He was only son of William and grandson of Francis Scott. His family were descendants of the Scotts of Thirlestane (in Ettrick), who were in turn cadets of the Scotts of Buccleuch. He was an army officer who surrendered to Gen. Gates at Saratoga in 1777. Returning to Britain he continued in the Army, laid the foundation stone for Edinburgh University’s ‘Old College’ in 1789, was confirmed to the House of Lords in 1790, became Lord-Lieutenant of Selkirkshire and was also Lord High Commissioner of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland. In 1784 he married Maria Margaret, eldest daughter of Lieut.-Gen. Sir John Clavering, Thirlestane House (in the Ettrick valley) being too small, around 1790 he moved his home to Langlands, renaming the house Wilton Lodge. He paid tax on 5 female servants at Wilton Lodge in 1789 and 1790 and 3 in 1791, as well as 5 male servants in 1790, 3 in 1791–94 and 4 in 1797. He was taxed for owning a carriage at Wilton Lodge in the period 1789–95 and horses in the period 1789–94. He subscribed to John Learmont’s book of poetry in 1791. He had some local involvement in politics, being the head of the group promoting war against France in those years, and chairing an influential anti-reform meeting in Hawick in 1792. In 1793 he headed the pro-war side of a public meeting held in Hawick to discuss the possibility of war with France. In 1797 he was recorded as owner of 2 work horses and 3 carriage or saddle horses at Wilton Lodge on the Horse Tax Rolls; he also paid tax on 3 non-working dogs in the same year. In about 1799 he was among the local men who contributed money to support the war against France. He was noted locally for his dress style. He still owned Thirlestane and other lands in Ettrick and...

John (17th/18th C.) mason in Hawick. His name is written 'Neper' in 1705 and 1706 when he witnessed baptisms (sometimes for fellow masons). In 1708 he witnessed a baptism for fellow mason Peter Mitchell and also for 'younger' carrier William Aitken. He is 'Naper' when he witnessed baptisms for William Aitken in 1710 and for weaver Andrew Jardine in 1713. He also witnessed a baptism in Hawick in 1716 for cooper John Turnbull. He was recorded as 'merchant' in his child's baptismal record of 1718. He married Mary Graham in Hawick in 1705 and their children included Anna (b.1706), Walter (b.1707), Janet (b.1708), Andrew (b.1710), Isobell (b.1712), Agnes (b.1713), Margaret (b.1716), Agnes (again, b.1718), Katherine (b.1720), James (b.1723) and John (b.1729). The witnesses in 1718 were gardener Walter Turnbull and Beadle John Scott. Mark Francis (1852–1919) 3rd son of Sir Francis, 10th Lord Baron Napier of Merchiston and 1st Baron of Ettrick (and Viceroy of India), and great-grandson of the Lord Napier who stayed at Wilton Lodge. He stood unsuccessfully against Unionist Arthur Ralph Douglas Elliot in the 1886 Roxburghshire election, but defeated him to become Liberal M.P. in 1892. He was defeated in the 1895 election by the Conservative Earl of Dalkeith. In 1878 he married Emily Jones. Their children were: Basil, killed in action in South Africa; Claude Inverness; and Philip Henry. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. His children included: Marion (b.1694); and John (b.1696). The witnesses in 1696 were William and John Cavers. William (d.1775) 7th Baron Napier, eldest son of Francis. He was a Liet.-Col. in the Army and Deputy-Adjutant General of the forces in Scotland. He married Mainie, daughter of Charles, 8th Lord Cathcart and was succeeded by his only son Francis (also formerly spelled 'Naper', 'Neper' and 'Naprie').

nether (ne-thur) adj. under, lower, particularly lower-situated of 2 houses or farms (now particularly in place names, e.g. Nethrraw, Nether Bouchester, Netherhall, Nether Kirk and Nether Tofts).
Nether Ancrum

Nether Ancrum (ne-thur-awng-krum) n. former name for what is now the village of Ancrum, with ‘Over Ancrum’ being across the river. The lands were held by ‘David Ancrum’ and a set of feuars in 1643 and valued at £944. It was later owned by Ogilvie of Chesters. In 1788 it was split between 8 separate owners, as well as ‘Feuars of Nether Ancrum’ (it is ‘Nether Ancrum’ in 1548/9).

Nether Belses (ne-thur-bel-seez) n. Nether Belses, former name for part of Belses.

Nether Bonchester (ne-thur-bon-ches-tur) n. former farm, just below where the modern Bonchester farm is located, over the bridge at the base of Bonchester Hill. John Turnbull (called ‘Case’) was tenant there in 1494/5. In 1569 it was among the lands purchased from Jedburgh Abbey by Adam French, and is listed ‘with the woddis of the sami’n. In 1587 it was again ‘with woods’, along with Over Bonchester, among the lands of the Lordship of Jedburgh. In 1606 the tenant is recorded as Mark Turnbull. It was purchased by Walter Scott in 1632 from Alexander Kirkton (Provost of Jedburgh) and John Moscrop (Burgess of Jedburgh). It was then owned by a branch of the Scotts until sold by his great-grandson in the mid-1700s. It was valued at £180 Scots in 1643, 1663 and 1678 (although there seem to be errors in some records). Thomas Scott, brother of Walter, became the 2nd Scott Laird in 1653. Thomas was succeeded by his son Walter Scott in 1680, and he was recorded as Laird there on the 1694 Hearth Tax records. In 1707 it was owned by William Scott and valued at £180. In 1733 Walter Scott was succeeded by his son, also Walter. He was in turn succeeded by his son Thomas who sold the farm to William Oliver of Weens and Dinlabyre in 1779. Wright John Rule was there in 1788. In 1788 it was still valued at £180. The farm was sold along with Weens to Robert Nutter Campbell in 1793, and in 1796 he sold them to Adm. Thomas Pringle. Francis Renwick was tenant there in 1797. By 1811 the farm (or part of it) was owned by Thomas Cleghorn and valued at £31 4s 8d. The farm had a nursery garden that once supplied trees to other properties in the area. The old house was in a hollow below the present farmhouse’s garden. It was a simple 2-storey building, taken down in the 1780s and part of it still standing around the 1830s. The doors and parts of the flooring were re-used on a cottage at Bridge-end (marked on Stobie’s 1770 map; it is ‘Nethir Bonechester’ in 1494/5, ‘nethir Bunchester’ in 1569, ‘Neddir Bonechest’ in 1581, ‘Neither bondchester’ in 1678, ‘netherboonchester’ in 1694, ‘Nether Buonchester’ in 1761, ‘Netherboonchester’ in 1788 and ‘Nether Boonster’ in 1797).

Netherby (ne-thur-bee) n. village just over the Border into Cumbria, off the A7. Held by the Grahams in rieving days, Netherby Hall was built around an older tower in the mid-18th century – ‘So boldly he enter’d the Netherby Hall, Among bride’s-men, and kinsmen, and brothers and all’ [SWS].

Nethercroft (ne-thur-kroft) n. another name for Northcroft, recorded in the 19th century. There may have been some confusion with Netherhall.

Nether Croft (ne-thur-kroft) n. former name for lands in the upper Teviot valley somewhere near Dryden, Teindside, etc. The name is recorded as ‘Nether Croft’ in 1686 among the lands of the Duchess of Buccleuch then occupied by Robert Grieve in Commonside.

Nether Dykeraw (ne-thur-dik-raw) n. former farmstead near Dykeraw in Southdean Parish. James, Michael, John, Adam and Robert Oliver were tenants there in 1541, paying 25s yearly. David Oliver was there in 1694. James Hargrave was shepherd there in 1797 (it is ‘Nethir Dykraw’ in 1541 and ‘nether dykra’ in 1694).

Nether Ewes (ne-thur-yooz) n. former name for the lower part of Ewesdale, served by the Nether Kirk.

Nether Foulwud (ne-thur-fowl-wud) n. Nether Foulwood, former name for lands in Liddesdale, situated near where Foulwood Sike meets the Liddel Water, between Mangerton and D’mainholm. Over Foulwood was further up the stream. It is recorded as ‘Foulwood inferior’ on the rental roll of c.1376 and valued at 10 shillings. In a rental roll of 1541 ‘Nethir Foulwood’ was leased to Simon Armstrong (probably of Tinnisburn) and still valued at 10 shillings. It became the modern farm of Gillside.

Nether Galalaw (ne-thue-ga-lu-law) n. former name for lands near Galalaw. It is unclear if this was part of the main farm, or a name for an adjacent farm. In 1534 Gavin Elliot sold the 40-shilling lands there to William Scott, the sealing of the letter of reversion being done at Hadsendean Kirk and recorded in the Selkirk Protocol Books (it is ‘Neder Gallelaw’ in 1534).

Netherhaa (ne-thur-haw, -hal) n. Netherhall, former farmstead at the western end of Wilton Park, below ‘Overhaa’ (or ‘Everhaa’), and on the eastern side of where the Wilton Burn meets the Teviot. This was once the back entrance to Langlands estate, and presumably owned by the Laird of Langlands. However, there is now no sign of a house there and it seems likely it was demolished when the Town took over Wilton Park. Thomas Irvine was there in 1726–29 and John Scott in 1747. It is possible this is the ‘Nethercroft’, acquired from Langlands’ recorded on the Land Tax Rolls of 1811, with Mrs. Shortreed as owner. A small mill lade is shown off the Wilton Burn, running past the farm, on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map. William Henderson was ‘Overseeer of Parks’ there in 1851 (it is unclear whether the name is as old as ‘Overhaa’ or whether it was named later; it is marked on Stobie’s 1770 map and still on the Ordnance Survey map of 1904).

Netherhaa Burn
(ne-thur-haw-burn) n. another name for the Wilton Burn at the south end of the Park.

Nether Harden
(ne-thur-hawr-din) n. former name for lands near Harden, and once part of the barony of Chamberlain Newton, which were resigned by Simon Scott of Fenwick to William Scott of Harden in 1540. The land seems to have been finally conveyed in 1556.

Nether Harden

Nether Harwud
(nethur-har-wud) n. former name for lands at Harwood on Teviot. It is listed among the lands held ‘in tenancy’ by the Baron of Hawick in 1511, 1572, 1594 and 1615, along with ‘Over Harwood’ (it is ‘Nether Harwodd’ in 1511, ‘Nethir Harwood’ in 1572, ‘Nethair Harwoid’ in 1594 and ‘Nathir Harewood’ in 1615).

Nether Hawthornside
(ne-thur-haw-thörn-sid) n. former farm near Hawthornside, called ‘Denesyle’ in earlier times. It is described as being on the left-hand side going up Hawthornside Brae (which would confusingly place it on the other side of Hawthornside than the Dean Burn). It once contained some of the best land now incorporated into Hawthornside, and the Lairds were Turnbuls for several generations.

Nether Kirk
(ne-thur-kirk) n. former common name for the church in the Ewes valley next to the A7 between Arkleton and Sorbie, in an area once called ‘Kirkton’. It is distinguished from the ‘Ower Kirk o Ewes’, which is a few miles further up the valley near Uthank, and served the lower part of the valley, referred to as ‘Nether Ewes’. The original church was dedicated to St. Cuthbert and attached to Melrose Abbey. There are many records relating to incumbents of the church from the end of the 13th century. ‘Robert fitz Rauf person de l'Eglise de Saint Cuthbert de Ewytesdale’ signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296. Roger Kirkpatrick was Rector there in 1556. The patronage of the Kirk was long held by the Maxwells. The position of the church, as well as the minister’s house and glebe, were shown on the 1718 survey of properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch. It was a relatively rudimentary structure, with a thatched roof; an entry in the session records describes how a young couple had to pay penance in the Kirk and also had to gather heather for the roof. A new church was built on the site of the old in 1866/7. The graveyard contains many old tombstones of the local families of Aitchison, Armstrong, Beatrice, Borthwick, Jackson, Little, Rutherford and Scott. The family gravestone of the Malcolms of Burnfoot records the names of 3 of the 4 Knights of Eskdale, and the western side contains the burial place of the Scott-Elliots.

Nether Larriston
(ne-thur-law-ree-stin) n. former tower-house at Larriston, situated near the modern farmhouse. It is unclear exactly where it was located. It is marked as ‘Nether Lareston’ on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls (it is ‘Nather Lareistounis’ in about 1624).

Nether Mains of Hassendean

Nether Newhaa
(ne-thur-new-haw) n. Nether Newhall, an older name for Burnfoot, once part of the Barony of Chamberlain Newton. The name was used in the late 15th century for the Lairdship held by a branch of the Scotts, later called Scott of Burnfoot. In 1484 the lands were granted to James Scott of Kirkurd by David Lindsay of the Byres, Baron of Chamberlain Newton and Newhall; it was held of the superior for the token fee of a silver penny at the Feast of Pentecost. In 1494 James Scott granted ‘le Nether MANES de Newhall’ to his son David, along with Galalaw; this was explicitly the west part, above the common road, valued at 3 merks. ‘Over et Nather Newhalls’ are still referred to when the lands were inherited in 1585 and similarly in 1667. The lands were sold by Adam of Burnfoot and Gavin Plummer to the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1712, when they are described as ‘Nether Newhall, otherwise called Burnfoot, with the mille, mille lands, multures, sucken, knaveship and sequels thereof within the paroch of Hassandean, Barony of Chamberlain Newton and Sheriffdom of Roxburgh'. Over Newhall was probably the same as Burnhead (it is 'Nethir Newhall' in 1494, 'Nethir Newhall' in 1532, 'Nether Newhallis' in 1609 and 'Nether Newhales' in 1667).

Netherraw (ne-thu-raw) n. farm and hamlet between Minto and Lilliesleaf. William Thomson was farmer there in 1797 when it is 'Netherrow'. James Henderson was there in the 1860s. William Cranston was farmer there in the early 20th century.

Netherraw (ne-thu-raw) n. farm on the Hermitage Water, by the B6399, near the junction with the road from Steele Road. The house must have been there from at least the 16th century, and was distinguished from 'Over' or 'Upper Raw'. It is probably the place transcribed as 'Neirland' in 1632, when possessed by Francis Beattie. William Scott was tenant in 1694 and Adam Armstrong was also recorded there. George 'Hotson' was tenant in the early 1700s. It was surveyed for the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1718, when it extended to 141 acres, bounded by Toftholm, the Hermitage Water, lands of the Laird of Hoscate and Over Raw. The farmhouse at that time was roughly in the same location as the modern building and the farm is described as 'indifferent good land much damniﬁed with the water'. David Jackson was farmer there in 1797, Walter Scott in 1835, Matthew Elliot in 1851 and Walter Scott in 1861. It was a home of the Elliots until the last farmer, Matthew Elliot died in 1877, when the old buildings were demolished. Some of the land was planted, becoming the Nether Raw Plantation, and the rest was attached to Harts-garth farm. The current house is modern ('Rha' is marked near there on Gordon's c. 1650 map and 'Raa' on Visscher's 1689 map, while Blaeu's 1654 map shows both 'N. Ra' and 'O. raa' and Stobie's 1770 map has 'Upperra' and 'Netherraw'; it is Netherrow in 1797).

Netherraw Cottages (ne-thu-raw-k-o'-ee-jeez) n. houses by the side of the road between Netherraw and Longhaugh. There was a blacksmith's marked there on the 1862 Ordnance Survey map.

Nether Riccarton see Riccarton

Nether Soothfield (ne-thu-sooth-field) n. previously the lower farm at Southfield, now the site of the main farm. It lay just outside the old boundaries of the Common. The land was long owned by the Duke of Buccleuch and was contained within the Lordship of Whitchesters. It was surveyed in 1718 along with other properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch, consisting of 145 acres, bounded by Hawick Common, Hawickshiel, Stobico and Over Southfield. It was mentioned in a Hawick Parish evaluation in 1627, and then said to be 'of that same nature' as 'Upper Southfield'. Robert Scott was recorded there in 1628 and John Elliot of Brugh was recorded as tenant in at least the period 1690–1704. Gilbert Elliot was there in at least 1700–04. Walter and James Scott were tenants in at least 1709–18. Walter and 2 James Scotts were there in 1713. John Elliot was cooper there in 1726. George Telfer was herd there in 1740 (it is 'Neathersouthfeild' in 1628, 'Nether Southfield' in 1690 and 'nether southfeild' in 1694).

Nether Steele (ne-thu-stee) n. former name for part of the farm of the Steele.

Nether Tofts (ne-thu-tofts) n. farm near Kirkton, north-east of Upper Tofts. It was once part of the Cavers estate. Its lands are on the lower slopes of Ruberslaw. Adam Turnbull was there in 1682 and John Douglas in 1694, along with Andrew Blyth. The lands were inherited by William, son of Thomas Turnbull of Tofts in 1695. James Turnbull, Robert Scott and John Douglas were there in the early 1700s. Francis Scott of Gorrenberry was also there in the early 1700s. John Leyden (father of the poet and linguist) was there in the late 1770s and 80s. William Scott was there in 1787. Walter Blyth was farmer there in at least 1794–97 and Robert Bulman in the 1860s. It was referred to as 'Low Tofts' in 1868 when G. Bulman was farmer there. Robert Glendinning collected several artefacts that were ploughed up there, including flake scrapers and flakes, 3 spindles whorls, 4 stone axe-heads and a bronze axe-head, some of which are in the Royal Museum of Scotland (it is ‘Nethertafts’ in 1694).

Nether Wheel (ne-thu-wheel) n. former lands near the Wheel Kirk in upper Liddesdale. It is listed as ‘Nether Wheel’, along with ‘Kirk Wheeland’ and other lands in Liddesdale owned by the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1663 (see the Wheel Kirk).

Nether Whisgills (ne-thu-whis-gilz) n. former name for part of the lands of Whisgills. William Oliver was there in 1694. The farm was surveyed for the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1718, when it consisted of 528 acres. It was bounded by the Muir Burn, Upper Millstead, Reidmoss, Over Whisgills, Tinnis, Bankhead, Shipshields and Gillfoot.
Nether Whitlaw

Nether Whitlaw (ne-thur-whil’law) n. farm to the south of Lindean village, a couple of miles north-west of Selkirk, adjacent to Over Whitlaw. It should not be confused with the farm of Whitlaw just south of Hawick. It was owned by the Kers of Faldonside in the late 16th and early 17th centuries. There were Porteous there in the 19th century.

Nether Woollee (ne-thur-woo-lee) n. former name for part of the lands of ‘Woollee’ (or Wolfelee) in use from the 15th to 18th centuries (it is ‘Nether Wolle’ in 1479 and 1515, ‘Nether Woulee’ in 1522, ‘Nether Woolie’ in 1525 and ‘Natherwoolley’ in 1627).

Netherwud (ne-thur-wud) n. Netherwood, large house on Sunnyhill, on the private drive that is a continuation of Roadhead. It was built in the 19th century for the Laings, being home to Thomas and his family. J.P. Alison was responsible for alterations in the early years of the 20th century. It may have been used as a boys’ home at the end of WWII and is now split into flats.

nettle-yirnest (ne’-ul-yir-nist) adj., arch. dead earnest – ‘...thae thocht...gar iz bang up blee...the again an buckle tu in nettle-yirnist!’ [ECS] (from ‘in ettle earnest’; cf. ettleearnest).

Neville (ne-vul) n. Sir John (c.1341–88) 3rd Lord of Raby, son of Ralph. He was probably joint Warden of the English West and East Marches 1380–88, along with the Percys. He married Maud Percy and was succeeded by Henry, who became the 1st Earl of Westmorland. He died before his father, although his son Ralph became 2nd Earl of Westmorland. Sir John (1387–1420) son of Ralph, 1st Earl of Westmorland, and half-brother of Richard, 1st Earl of Salisbury. He was Warden of the English West Marches for a few years until his death. Ralph (c.1291–1367) 2nd Baron Neville de Raby, son of Ralph. He was Joint Warden General of the English Marches (along with Henry, 2nd Baron Percy) from 1334. He was probably the ‘Sir Ranulph’ who was in possession of the Castle and manor of Hermitage shortly after the Battle of Durham in 1346, resigning them to Edward III about 1352. In 1354 he, along with Henry Percy, was appointed as a commissioner to deal with Elizabeth, widow of Sir William Douglas, former Keeper of Hermitage. He married Alice, daughter of Sir Hugh de Audley and was succeeded by his son Sir John. He also had a son who was Archbishop of York and daughters who married into the Clifford, Dacre, Percy and Scrope families. His youngest daughter Margaret married Henry Percy and was mother of ‘Hotspur’.

Ralph (c.1364–1425) 1st Earl of Westmorland, son of John and Maud Percy. He was probably Warden of the English West Marches along with Thomas de Clifford from about 1388. He married his cousin Margaret, daughter of Sir Hugh Stafford (with whom he had 9 children) and then Joan Beaufort, daughter of the 1st Duke of Lancaster (with whom he had another 14 children. He is the inspiration for the character ‘Westmorland’ in Shakespeare’s ‘Henry V’, and it has even been claimed that his great-great-grandson wrote Shakespeare’s plays. Richard (1400–60) 5th Earl of Salisbury, eldest son of Ralph, Earl of Westmorland. About 1420 he became Warden of the English West March (succeeding his eldest half-brother John). He remained Warden until 1424, when he was involved in negotiations for the release of James I. About 1433 he was again Warden of the West Marches, also took over the East Marches and Captains of Berwick in 1434, but resigned in the next year. His family had regular conflicts with the Percy’s and supported Richard, Duke of York (his brother-in-law). He married Alice Montacute, heiress of the Earl of Salisbury. He is the inspiration for the character ‘Westmorland’ in Shakespeare’s plays. Richard ‘the Kingmaker’. He was captured after the Battle of Wakefield and beheaded. Richard ‘the Kingmaker’ (1428–71) Earl of Warwick and Salisbury, eldest son of Richard, the 5th Earl. He was a great Yorkist supporter in the Wars of the Roses. He was Warden of the English East Marches from about 1453, perhaps along with his father initially (since he must only have been 15!). In 1464 his forces burned Jedburgh. He helped Edward IV to gain the English Crown, but later switched his allegiance to put Henry VI back on the throne. He was killed by Edward IV’s forces at the Battle of Barnet.
Neville’s Cross

(Ne-vulz-kros) n. battle of 1346, in which the Scottish army under King David were routed at Durham by a smaller English army under York, Percy and Neville. On their way south the Scottish army recaptured Liddel Castle. Durham was attacked as a diversionary tactic to help the French. A relic of St. Cuthbert’s is supposed to have helped the English victory and King David II was captured while fleeing. The Scots division under Sir William Douglas suffered particularly disastrously. Sir Michael Scott of Rankilburn and Maurice Murray (then Baron of Hawick) were killed there, while Robert Chisholme of Chisholme and Sir William Douglas (Knight of Liddesdale), as well as the King and about 50 other Barons, were taken prisoner. Afterwards the English army took possession of the Border territory and Hermitage and Roxburgh Castles surrendered, with several locals swearing (temporary) fealty to the English King. The name of the battle derives from the stone cross erected by Lord Neville in commemoration (destroyed in 1589). It is also known as the Battle of Durham.

Nevy (Ne-vee) n., arch. a nephew – ‘The uncle turned red, and the nevy turned blue,’ Then they looked at each other, these good men and true’ [JCG].

Nevysintonsteed (Ne-vee-sin-in-steed) n. former name for lands in Liddesdale, recorded in 1541 as ‘Nevtsintounsteid’. It is unclear where these lands were or what the name meant (although the ‘nevy’ part may refer to a nephew).

New (New) adv. newly, recently, just – ‘The bairns new oot o the skuil for leave … [ECS] (more common than in standard English; see also i the new).

Newall (New-al) n. Broughton (b.1818/9) born in Hawick, he was a frame-worker. In 1851 he lived around the Crown Close and in 1861 on Factory Close. He married Mary Whillans (sister of ‘Kinly Stick’) and their children included Mary, Agnes, Margaret, Robert, Richard, Jane and James. He is probably the ‘Auld Broughton’ mentioned in the poem ‘Hawick Immortals’. Richard (1850–1918) son of Broughton and Mary Whillans. The family lived at Orrock Place when he was young. He was ‘boatswain Newall, who was up aloft’ in William Easton’s song ‘The Anvil Crew’. Ironically he drowned in the Teviot, where he must have cavorted as a youth. Robert (b.1788/9) from St. Michael’s in Dumfriesshire, he was a grocer and spirit dealer on the Howegate, listed in Pigot’s 1837 directory. He was at about 12 Howegate in 1841. His public house is mentioned as existing during the cholera outbreak of 1832. By 1851 he was a frame-worker living at the Village. His wife was Agnes and their children included: Robert; Thomas, who married Margaret Kersall; and Margaret, who married William Gemmell. Thomas (b.1813/4) from Dumfries, son of Robert. He was a frameworker in Hawick. In 1861 he was living at 23 Loan. In 1852 he married Margaret Kersall (also written ‘Newell’).

New Appletreehaa (new-aw-, -a-pul-tree-haw, -hawl) n. New Appletreehall, name used for an area near to Appletreehall in the late 18th century. It is recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when the residents there who owned work horses were John Reid, James Scott and James Crawford.

Newark Castle (Ne-urk-kaw-sul) n. ruin west of Selkirk, on a mound above the Yarrow, now within the estate of Bowhill. It was formerly called ‘Cathmurlie’ and had adjacent lands called ‘Old Wark’. The existing tower was built in 1423 by Archibald, Earl of Douglas and was used as a residence of the Earls until about 1446. It passed to the crown as the royal hunting seat of Ettrick Forest in 1455. John Murray was custodian in the late 15th century and Scott of Buccleuch was appointed Captain and Keeper in 1542. Several nearby farms were given by the Crown to the keeper of the castle. It was taken in a siege by Lord Grey (with the support of the Kers) in 1547, with 4 of Sir Walter Scotts servants and a woman being slain. Sir Walter Scott was appointed Captain and Keeper of the Castle in 1565/6. Over 100 of the Philiphaugh prisoners were slaughtered in its courtyard in 1645, and Cromwell’s troops occupied it in 1650 after the Battle of Dunbar. It was one of the places where dragoons were posted in about 1676, so that they could scour the local countryside for people attending illegal field conventicles. For a while it was the home of Anne, Countess of Buccleuch, and is in Scott’s ‘Lay of the Last Minstrel’. But it was unroofed during the minority of Henry, 3rd Duke of Buccleuch, and preserved from decay during the time of Walter, the 5th Duke – ‘He pass’d where Newark’s stately tower Looks out from Yarrow’s birchen bower’ [SWS], ‘…And sudden he saw at his shoulder stand The walls of Newark, grey towered and grand’ [WHO] (it is ‘Neuwerk’ in 1446/7 and ‘the Castell of Newwerk’ in 1547/8; it is marked ‘Cast. of Newwoork’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map).
Newbattle (new-baw-ul) n. Roger (13th C.) recorded in a charter of Walter of Riddell as owner of neighbouring lands in Lilliesleaf.

Newbattle Viaduct (new-baw-ul-vI-a-duct) n. longest viaduct on the Waverley Line, over the River South Esk, near the town of Newbattle, having 22 arches and being almost one third of a mile long (also known as ‘Lothianbridge’).

Newbie (new-bee) n. James (15th/16th C.) local clerk and priest. He held the benefice of Cavers Parish from about 1500. He was vicar there in 1501/2 when he was notary for a document relating to the lands of Feu-Rule. He is probably the same priest of Glasgow Diocese who was notary for the 1512 sasine transferring Harden from Walter Scott to his brother William. He also notarised the 1514 sasine of the Barony of Hawick, where he is recorded as ‘Jacobus Newbe, presbiter Glasguensis diocesis’. In 1523 he was notary for a document relating to the lands of the Trows. Either the same or a different ‘Jacobo Newby’ was witness to a sasine for Douglas of Cavers in 1550. He may also be the ‘James Nwby, messinger’, who was implicated in the murder of Sir Walter Scott of Bucleuch in 1552 along with James Douglas of Cavers and several Kers; according to the indictment when the group were crossing the Rule he said to the people there ‘Hard ze ony tythennis of the Lard of Bukclucht; he is put in vard, and will never cumme furth’.

James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish who married Isobel Scott. Their son Samuel was baptised in 1635. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish who married Agnes Turnbull. Their children included Thomas (b.1654) and James (b.1655). James (17th/18th C.) Sheriff-Officer in a record of 1684, when he gave evidence at the trial of Alexander Home, portioner of Home, one of the Covenanters leaders who besieged Drumlanrig’s Tower. He was also listed as ‘officer to the sheriff’ among contributors to the new Kirk bell in 1693/4. He was probably the James recorded in the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694 among those ‘Payed but not listed in Hauick Toun’; he was probably from the west side. Presumably the same James was described as ‘portioner of Hawick’ in an Edinburgh marriage record of 1719, when his daughter Helen married Alexander Thomson, merchant in Edinburgh. He may be the James who was born in Hawick in 1655, with parents James and Agnes Turnbull. He is probably the James who married Margaret Gillespie, whose children included Robert (b.1671), with the witnesses being Mr. John Purdom and James Thorbrand. He could be the James who witnessed a baptism for Thomas Lunn in Hawick Parish in 1675, another for James Baptie in 1678 and one more for John Scott in Barn Knowe in 1680. Samuel (17th C.) ordered by the Council in 1658 to pay 4 merks for ‘both-meall’ (i.e. booth rent) until Whitsunday. He was on the list of Hawick men named in the 1673 trial following the so-called riot at St. Jude’s Fair. Probably the same Samuel was fined in 1676 for assaulting masons Andrew Turnbull and Andrew Wilson and ‘for casting downe the mason work at his own hand without ane complaint first made to the bailyes thereof’; presumably he did not approve of the building work that they were doing for him! He is probably the Samuel born in 1635 to James and Isobell Scott. He could also be the Samuel who married Bessie Wilson and had a son Samuel in 1676. Thomas (d.1602) Reader at Hassendean Kirk 1576–80. He was presented to the vicarage of the Parish on the demitting of Thomas Weston in October 1576 and is recorded demitting this in 1595. Hence it appears he held part of the benefice of the Parish for at least 15 years after he was Reader there. Another record states that John Madder (or Mather) was presented to Hassendean on his death in 1602, so he may have held some of the benefice even longer. In 1580 he witnessed a transaction for Robert Scott of Alton, done at the Monk’s Tower. In 1582, along with Sir Thomas Ker (of Roxburgh Parish), Archibald Simson (of Lilliesleaf), John Scott (of Southdean), James Scott (of Ashkirk) and John McClellan (of Kirkandrews) were deprived for ‘abusing the sacraments’. Then they were excommunicated in 1588 for continuing with the offence (which is unspecified, but may suggest that the men had been Catholic priests before the Reformation) and in 1590 ordered never to abuse the sacraments under pain of death. They were made to stand for 2 hours at the Market Cross of Edinburgh with a paper on their foreheads proclaiming their crime. Samuel (17th C.) merchant in Hawick. In 1669 he was found guilty of assaulting merchant William Elliot, cutting him ‘with ane sword in ye head’ and for ‘strycking and wounding of him in his face with ane brydle’. He may be the Samuel who was born in Hawick in 1635, son of James and Isobell Scott. He is probably the Samuel who was married to Bessie Wilson, with son Samuel born in 1676. Thomas (17th C.) recorded in 1684 when he witnessed the financial document relating to the building of the ‘Steeple Loft’ in St. Mary’s. He is described there as ‘servant’, although it is unclear what this means (also Newbiggin

(formerly written ‘Neubie’, ‘Newby’, ‘Newbe’ and ‘Nwby’).

Newbiggin (new-bi-gin) n. Newbigging, former farmstead that lay between Whitchesters and Southfield, bordering on the Common. It was later the shepherd’s cottage for Whitchesters. The location can still be clearly made out, directly to the south of Whitchesters farm and east of the hill-fort. It was mentioned among the farms burned by the English in 1533. It was long a tenanted farm belonging to the Duke of Buccleuch, being contained within the Lordship of Whitchesters. James Scott was tenant there in 1627. The farm was surveyed in 1718 along with other Buccleuch properties, and at that time consisted of 111 acres, bounded by Whitchesters, Hawick Common, Over Southfield and Raesknowe. In at least the period 1690–98 the farm was leased to Robert Scott, James Davidson and Margaret Davidson. The householders listed in 1694 were Robert Scott, James Davidson and John Hogg (weaver), with Margaret Davidson and James Murray also listed there among ‘the poor’. James Davidson was still tenant in at least 1702–18. Weaver William Hood was living there in 1704. Walter Scott was joint tenant there in at least 1708–36. John Wilson was tailor there in 1708. Robert Scott was tenant in about 1710 and Andrew Davidson was also there. In 1711 John Wilson was tailor there and Robert Davidson was also living there. James Davidson was there in 1720. Walter Scott was there in about the 1750s and 1760s. Walter Scott and John Rutherford farmed here in 1797 and William Scott was living there. James Davidson was still tenant in at least 1708–36. John Wilson was tailor there in 1708. Robert Scott was tenant in about 1710 and Andrew Davidson was also there. In 1711 John Wilson was tailor there and Robert Davidson was also living there. James Davidson was there in 1720. Walter Scott was there in about the 1750s and 1760s. Walter Scott and John Rutherford farmed here in 1797 and William Scott was labourer there in 1841. It is said that residents of the farm were formerly weavers. Its buildings were already shown as ruined on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map. There is a spring near the old farmstead and the remains of a fort on the hill to the west. The fort must once have been quite extensive, measuring perhaps 90 m by 135 m, but has been partly obliterated due to ploughing, except on the steeper south and south-east sides. Its defences consist of 3 banks of piled rubble and there may be signs of 2 scooped huts on the knoll, which has been heavily quarried. There are also Newbiggings in Oxnam Parish and near Lauder, and several others elsewhere in Scotland (it must have been a ‘new biggin’ at some point; it is ‘Newbiggyns’ in 1533 and ‘Neubigging’, ‘neubiging’ in 1694 and ‘Newbeggeng’ in 1718; it appears as ‘Newbrug’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map and ‘New Beggen’ on the 1718 Buccleuch survey).

Newbiggin (new-bi-gin) n. Newbigging, a farm that lay between Horsleyhill and Knowtownhead, once part of the Middle Mains of Hassendean. In the 1550s there was a dispute over these lands between the children of Gavin Elliot of Horsleyhill by his first wife and those by his second wife. It was listed in 1582 among lands for which Robert Elliot of Horsleyhill demanded the charters of his father from the widow of Sir Walter Ker of Cessford. It may be the Newbigging listed as part of the Stobs estate purchased by Gilbert Elliott from his half sisters in about 1608. Like much of the area, it became part of Minto Parish when Hassendean was suppressed in 1690. The disused quarry of that name is still marked on Ordnance Survey maps (the farm is marked on Stobie’s 1770 map and may have been incorrectly transcribed ‘Howbigging’ in 1690).

Newbiggin (new-bi-gin) n. house at No. 9 Lockhart Place, which is a grade C listed building.

Newbiggin (new-bi-gin) n. Sir William (1782–1852) surgeon in Edinburgh, based at 18 St. Andrew’s Square. He gave evidence at the trial of Burke and Hare and became President of the Royal College of Surgeons. In 1825 he subscribed to 2 copies of Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’, and so it is possible he had some connection with the town. William ‘Willie’, took over as landlord of the Mosspaul Inn in 1962.

Newbiggin Burn (new-bi-gin-burn) n. stream rising near the old Newbigging farm and flowing roughly south-west to join the Allan Water (marked ‘Newbigging Hope’ and ‘North Burn’ on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

the New Brig (thu-new-brig) n. original name for the North Bridge, built in 1832. It was usually referred to as the ‘Station Brig’ after the railway was completed in 1849.

Newburgh (new-bu-ru) n. farm in the upper Ettrick valley, once home of the Scotts of Newburgh – ‘Gae warn the lads of Thirlstone, Gemsleugh, and Newburgh { `Gae warn the lads of Thirlstone, Gemsleugh, and Newburgh fair, With Tushielaw, and Midgelhope, in armour to appear’ [WSB].

new-calfit (new-kaw-fee) adj., arch. having just calved ‘...ynye new calfit ky, with thair followaris, price of the pece ourheid, five pundis’ [SB1574].

Newcastle (new-kaw-sul) n. city in the north-east of England, approximately 62 miles south-east of Hawick, reached via the Carter Bar and A68. The city was the site of the interchange between Douglas and Percy that led to the Battle of Otterburn in 1388. It was also captured in 1640 by Montrose’s Covenanter army, which included the Teviotdale Regiment under the Earl of Lothian. It was occupied for about a year, during which time there is a record in the Hawick Town Book of James Scott, former Bailie gathering contributions for the soldiers there. It was occupied again 1644–47, when Buccleuch was involved in the siege. Several Newcastle merchants (probably coal merchants) were made Honorary Burgessess of Hawick in the 18th century. The city was once connected to Hawick by rail via the Riccarton-Hexham line. The old road towards Newcastle was, until the 1830s, up the Cross Wynd and over the hills, part of which can still be traced through the open country. Until the early 1800s the road through Rulewater went from Hawthorns to Forkins, via Highend, and then up Blacklee Brae to join the modern road towards Chesters – ‘To Newcastell when that they came, The Douglas cry’d on hyght: ‘Harry Percy, an thou bidest within, Come to the field, and fight!’ [T] (note the accent on the first syllable).

Newcastleton (new-kaw-sul’-in) n. village 20 miles south-west of Hawick in the southern corner of Roxburghshire. It was effectively a replacement for the older settlement of Castleton, which lies further up the Liddell. The site was formerly the farms of Copshaw and the flat land was said to have been used for ‘Horse coursing’, with crowds from both sides of the Border coming to watch the races. This planned village was founded in 1793 by the 3rd Duke of Buccleuch, and laid out according to the design of Mr. Keir of Whitehaugh. The lay-out is a series of criss-crossed streets around 3 main squares. Its main purpose was as a handloom weaving centre, close to the Border and on the Liddel Water. The first settler was said to be from the Hermitage area and lived in a turf hut while the village was being built. Many early residents were weavers, other tradesmen and retired shepherds. Clog-making was also prominent, and the wearing of clogs in the village was common for much longer than elsewhere. Leases of holdings were originally for 99 years, with each householder responsible for erecting their own house. Each feuar also had 2 acres of land attached (later extended to 4 acres per 2 storey house and 2 acres for cottages), as well as a garden of 1/8 acre, and the right to graze a cow on the hill. The management was by 3 elected bailies, one retiring each year. The 99 year leases led to much dispute in 1892 and subsequent improvements to the village. Most householders chose to convert their holdings into feus for purchase and feu-duty. The church (later St. John’s) was built in 1782 (before the new village), with additions in 1891, but only became the parish church in the 1950s. There was a separate Free Kirk, built in 1853 on Langholm Street, a Secession (later United Presbyterian) Kirk built 1801–04 at the Townfoot (now the Heritage Centre) and an Evangelical Union Kirk built in 1850 on South Hermitage Street (and now a private dwelling). There was a subscription library already by 1839. There has always been a school here, but secondary school pupils have been bussed to Hawick since 1962 (and before that some of them took the train). A memorial statue of a K.O.S.B. soldier was erected after WWII. The village has the Liddesdale Heritage Centre, a local history museum. There was a weekly market starting in about 1837 and 2 annual fairs for the selling of sheep. The village formerly hosted 3 hiring days, when servants were hired in the area, and much activity took place, these being in April, May and November. The Holm Show is the annual fair in August, popularised in the song ‘Copshawholm Fair’, and has been running since 1893, while the Newcastleton Traditional Music Festival in July has been running since 1970. The Horse Tax Rolls of 1797 list the owners of horses in the village as James Oliver, James Aitchison, John Beattie, Robert Thomson, James Elliot, Thomas Mathieson, Thomas Dodgson, William Kyle, William Little, John Smith, Andrew Rutherford, Mary Murray, George Dalgleish, Robert Murray, William Beattie, George Scott, John Leyden, Charles Grieve, William Winlaw, James Fell and Thomas Hall. The official name of the village was originally just ‘Castle- ton’, but the modern name appeared by the early 1800s. The village is also known as ‘Copshaw’, ‘Copshawholm’ or ‘the Holm’. William Hall wrote ‘Newcastleton: A Border Village’ (1905). Population (1991) 813 – ‘Newcastleton was the last o’ the battles And the curtain began tae descend … ’ [AY] (it is ‘New Castleton’ in 1797, with the first recorded appearance as one word being in the Kelso Mail of 1808).

Newcastleton Burgher Kirk (new-kaw-sul’-in-bur-gur-kirk) n. church established in Castleton Parish in the 1750s, originally called the Liddesdale Burgher Kirk or Copshawholm Kirk. Its origin lay in the secession movement of the time, which locally came to a head with the unpopular appointment of Simon Haliburton as Castleton Parish Minister. Their first meeting was under the ‘venerable oak’ near Snaberlee. The Edinburgh Anti-Burgher Presbytery was petitioned in 1751 and provided an occasional preacher, then the Edinburgh Burgher Presbytery was approached in 1753. Early preachers included John Brown (later at Haddington) and Archibald Hall (later Torphichen). A building was constructed on the banks of the Liddel at Geilbraehead about then. It was made of rubble with a thatched roof and earth floor. James Wylie was called, but declined, William Ronaldson also ended up elsewhere, and the apparently rebellious James Mitchell was also found wanting. So the first minister was James Fletcher, and not until 1762. Although a remarkable man, he was not a successful minister and the congregation was in decline by the 1790s. However, the name was changed to the Associate Kirk of Newcastleton in 1804, with a new building erected in the village there 1801–4. This was the first church built in the new village and usually referred to as the ‘Toonfit Kirk’, since the site was a former garden at the foot of the village. A Manse was also built at this time. A harmonium was donated to the church in the mid-1800s by Mrs. Tod, daughter of Rev. John Law. After the Secession churches merged it became known as Newcastleton United Presbyterian Kirk. However, further dissent led to the formation of the Free Church in Newcastleton, as well as the Congregational Church. It was renovated along with the Manse in 1875. With the merge of the secession churches with the Church of Scotland in 1929 the church became locally known as ‘the South Church’ (to distinguish it from ‘the Park Church’ and ‘Castleton Kirk’). From 1930 the charge was combined with that of the Park Church. A roll of the ministry is: James Fletcher 1762–1801; William Smart, ‘probationer’ 1802; Walter Dunlop 1804–10; John Law 1812–28; John Black 1829–79; James Snadden 1880–c.1929; George Lithgow Wilson 1930–40.

Newcastleton Congregational Kirk

Newcastleton Free Kirk

n. Free Church in Newcastleton, founded in 1850. Unlike other Free Churches, this was started following a dispute in the United Presbyterian Church, not the Church of Scotland. It started to meet in the ballroom of the Crown Inn. The first building was constructed in 1853 on Langholm Street (from plans made by Rev. J.B. Johnstone of Wolfelee). It burned down in 1891, but was rebuilt 2 years later. It was also sometimes called Newcastleton North United Free Church. The Free Church Manse was at 13 Douglas Square, built in 1857. It was taken over by the Church of Scotland in 1909. After the merge of the United Presbyterian Church in 1929 it became locally known as ‘the Park Church’, to distinguish it from ‘the South Church’ and ‘Castleton Church’. After Rev. Lowe retired as minister in 1934, the charge was merged with that of the South Church. In 1949 the building was turned into a village hall, with an extension built in 1956; it was named after Rev. Alexander Lowe, the last full-time minister of the church. The National Archives have records for the period 1850–1946. A roll of the ministry is: David Mackay 1856–60; Neil Shaw Ure, M.A. 1861–75; John Smith 1876–98; Alexander Lowe 1898–1834.

Newcastleton Golf Course

n. golf course outside Newcastleton, on Holm Hill. It is known for its views over the Liddesdale valley, as well as for its small greens. The club was founded in 1894. There are the remains of a settlement on a terrace south of Charles Sike, in an area of rough ground.

Newcastleton Kirk

n. parish church of Castleton on Montagu Street (see Castleton Kirk).

Newcastleton Schuil

n. school in the village of Newcastleton, on Montagu Street. Since 1962 senior pupils have been bussed to Hawick High School. The old schoolhouse adjoins the Parish Church, and has had a lintel inserted into the north gable, which bears the date 1621. Ebenezer Wells was schoolmaster.
Newcastleton Station

there in the early 1800s, Alexander Fisher in at least the period 1825–52, John Brown in the 1860s and Andrew Hobkirk in the 1940s. School log books for 1875–1921 are in the Borders Archive.

Newcastleton Station (new-kaw-sul-‘in-stä-shin) n. former station on the Waverley Line in Newcastleton. It was situation on Langholm Street and included a signal box, footbridge, level-crossing and station-master’s house. All that survives is this last building, which has been converted into a private house.

the New Cut (thu-new-ku’) n. popular local name for the cutting made to improve the main road (which became the A7) at Newmill in the early 19th century.

New Eer (new-eer) n., arch. New Year – ‘…Weel – at least till the New Eer!’ [RM], ‘Dawvit’s been oot o’ woark thre the New Eer; he was putten away thre the mill’ [ECS], adj. relating to the New Year – ‘Whiles risin’ in a freshet o’ New ‘Eer snaw …’ [DH] (often with the definite article; see also Hogmanany).

Newell see Newall

Newell Chemicals (new-ul-ke-mee-kulz) n. chemical factory supplying dyes and other products to the textile industry. It was based in a former hosiery factory at 7 Allars Bank, and also referred to as Newtrew Works.

new-fangelt (new-fawng-ul’) adj. new-fangled, novel – ‘is that yin o they new-fangelt hurdie-gurdies?’, ‘Whan bagpipes new-fangl’d lugs had tir’d, They’d sneer, then he, like ane insp’r’d … ’ [CPM], ‘New fangled decivils never heed them, Folk never prizer things thay need them’ [WNK], ‘He couldna fash new-fangled things Wi all their fall-di-doo’ [WFC] (note the lack of a hard g; also spelled ‘new-fanged’ as in English).

Newfield (new-feeld) n. name for an area to the south-east of Hummelnawes, containing Newfield Hill (which reaches a height of 237 m) and Newfield Plantation. There was formerly a farmstead there, which is marked on Stobie’s 1770 map. Samuel Irvine was there in 1763 and is recorded as farmer there in 1797. Walter Irvine is recorded there in 1815.

Newhaa (new-haw) n. Newhall, farm on the north bank of the Ale Water, just east of Cavers Carre. This could be where Thomas Murray was in 1530/1. John Scott was farmer there in the 1860s (it is marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

Newhaa (new-haw) n. Newhall, former farmstead in Hobkirk Parish, between Harwood and Lurgiescleugh. This could be the Newhall in the family lived there in 1841 and George Thomson farmed 156 acres there in 1851. There is an ancient earthwork about 200 m to the north-west of the farm. It lies on a ridge and consists of a bank and ditch enclosing an area about 30 m by 40 m, best preserved on the south-west and with a road through the middle (the name first appears in the 1690s).

Newland (new-lind) n. former lands in Liddesdale, recorded in the 1541 rental roll, with a value of 18 pence, and vacant at that time. The precise location if unknown, but judging by where it appears in the list, it must have been close to Copshaw (confusingly it is also listed near the end of the document, with no value). It is possible it is the same as Newlands on the Hermitage Water.

Newlands (new-lindz) n. farm and surrounding area on the road between Hassendean and Lilliesleaf, adjacent to Huntlaw. It was inherited by Ralph ‘de Neulandis’ from his deceased father William in 1440. It was formerly in Hassendean parish, but moved to Minto in 1690. Walter Davidson was tenant there in 1632 when he had a feu-contract with Thomas, Lord Binning. David Scott in Newlands is recorded in 1643 as having a feu-contract with Thomas, Lord Binning. David Davidson was tenant there in 1632 when he had a feu-contract with Thomas, Lord Binning. David Scott in Newlands is recorded in 1643 as owner of lands in Belses. It was farmed by Davids in most of the 17th century. David Davidson of Newlands paid tax on £200 of land in 1663. The Marquess of Douglas paid the land tax on £80 there in 1678. Andrew Lamb was a tenant there in 1684 when he was listed among local men declared as fugitives for attending conventicles. William Halliwell was there in 1694. By 1788 it was owned by Sir Gilbert Elliot of Minto. Thomas Laidlaw was farmer there in 1797 and William Nichol in the mid-19th century, Robert Thomson and Thomas Whillans was there in 1729. Robert Thomson was miller in 1841. The weir for the mill was damaged in the 1846 flood. Charles Mitchell was farmer in 1852. Thomas Turnbull in the 1850s and 60s, John Richardson in the late 19th century, Robert Turnbull around 1900, followed by his son Walter Turnbull. The Curds and Cream (meaning the Common Riding Friday ‘Hut’) was there in 1856. Cottages to the south are sometimes referred to as ‘Newmills’.

Newlands Burn (new-lindz-burn) n. stream that rises near Hassendean Common, running past Huntlaw and Newlands farms to join the Huntlaw Burn.

New Licht (new-light) adj., arch. relating to the more liberal faction within the Scottish Presbyterian Church, particularly among the Secessionists, those from the Burgher and Anti-Burgher sides combining into the United Secession Church in 1820 – ‘They thocht to gie the Deil a fricht Wi’ hau ding up the torch ‘New Licht’ .’. [DA].

New Mains (new-manz) n. former name for a farm in Cavers Parish. William Douglas was there in 1716.

New Mill (new-mill) n. farm a few miles south of Hawick on the Slitrig, once the site of a corn-mill on the river. It is sometimes called ‘Newmill on Slitrig’ to distinguish it from Newmill on Teviot. There is a ford here, which was once used as part of a drove road. William Turnbull was miller in 1666. Lancelot Aitchison was tenant in 1694. Hugh Elliot was smith there in 1672. William Whillans was there in 1729. Robert Thomson was there in the 1780s. Robert Thomson and Thomas Borthwick were there in 1797. James Reid was miller in 1841. The weir for the mill was damaged in the 1846 flood. Charles Mitchell was farmer in 1852. Thomas Turnbull in the 1850s and 60s, John Richardson in the late 19th century, Robert Turnbull around 1900, followed by his son Walter Turnbull. The Curds and Cream (meaning the Common Riding Friday ‘Hut’) was there in 1856. Cottages to the south are sometimes referred to as ‘Newmill Cottages’ or ‘Railway Cottages’ (sometimes ‘Newmill’ or ‘Newmills’; it is ‘Newmyln’ of Slitrig’ in 1666, ‘Neumilne’ in 1694 and ‘Newmiln’ in 1797).

Newmill (new-mill) n. village about 4 miles south-west of Hawick on the A7. Sometimes called Newmill-on-Teviot to distinguish it from the ‘New Mill’ in the Slitrig valley. It was formerly a farm attached to the corn mill. The farm was surveyed in 1718 along with other properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch, when it comprised 6 acres, with the mill lade clearly shown. In 1694 shooting lodge in the early 20th century. Newlands Plantation is just to the east.
those listed there with hearths in their homes were Robert Thomson (with 2 kilns), John Dryden (blacksmith) and Alexander Riddell (miller). John Dryden was smith there in at least 1694–1702. Robert Thomson was tenant there in at least 1702–23. William Thomson, both ‘older’ and ‘younger’, were recorded there in the 1710s. James Dryden was smith there in at least 1718–25. Thomas Elliot was there in 1771. James Scott was there in 1791 and Thomas Borthwick is recorded as the farmer in 1797. The village grew up around the mill on the river, which was still in active use in 1825/6 (according to Pigot’s directory), when the miller was Alexander Borthwick. It was converted into a sawmill in the later 19th century. For a while it the village had its own school, which was established in 1804, also used as a community hall and contains a WWI memorial plaque. The village also had its own library from at least the 1830s. In the 1840s the village consisted of a row of thatched houses (the end one being the school), together with the blacksmiths and a few other houses on the other side of the road. The 1841 census lists 13 households. A new building was constructed for the school later, converted into Newmill Country Inn. The Home Mission met regularly in the village from about the 1890s until 1926. The remains of Allanhaugh Tower can be reached via a footbridge and there are also older earthworks near the Teviot further upriver, although largely obliterated by cultivation. A significant cutting was made in the early 19th century to improve the main road, this being referred to as ‘the New Cut’ (the name presumably comes from this being the replacement corn mill, probably for Allanhaugh Mill; it is ‘new-milne’ in 1694, ‘newmiln’ in 1700, ‘Newmilne’ in 1702, 1712 and 1716 and ‘Newmiln’ in 1797).

Newmill Burn (new-nil-burn) n. stream that flows from Branxholme Wester Loch to reach the Teviot near Newmill, with Vales Burn joining the Teviot just upriver.

Newmill Damfit see Damfit

Newmill Haa (new-nil-haw) n. village hall in Newmill-on-Teviot.

Newmill on Sli’treg (new-nil-on-sli’-reeg) n. name sometimes used for New Mill to distinguish it from Newmill on Teviot.

Newmill Schuil (new-nil-skil) n. former small school in Newmill. It was established by the heritors of Hawick Parish in 1804. There were 40 pupils there in 1837. David Laidlaw was schoolmaster from 1837.

the New Road (thu-new-rød) n. despite not being new for almost 200 hundred years, the name is still in use! It was built in 1815 and fully opened in 1816 as the new turnpike road from the Sandbed to Goldielands and on to Carlisle or the Borthwick, alongside the Teviot. It replaced the old road that went via the Loan, the Lumback and Martinshouse. The toll bar (Wester Toll) was situated outside the present High School. To provide access from the Sandbed, some houses between the Howegate and Orrock Place were demolished. The first part, along which houses were built, was named Buccleuch Street in 1815, while the remaining part within the town boundaries was named Buccleuch Road in 1905 – ‘How micht I come to the auld toon Sall I the New Road spurn, And glink the taps o’ the lang lums Frae the brow o’ Howdenburn?’ [WL].

the New Statistical Account (thu-new-sta-tis-tee-kul-a-kownt) n. the ‘New Statistical Account of Scotland’, published 1834–45 as a follow-up to the original (sometimes called ‘Old’) ‘Statistical Account of Scotland’ (1791–92). It was a description of each parish in the nation, largely written by the local ministers, but also drawing upon the knowledge of schoolmasters and doctors. Roxburghshire is covered in the 3rd volume, with the entries mostly written in 1834–7 and published in 1841. It represents a valuable snapshot at that period, as well as providing many anecdotal pieces of information that are not otherwise recorded.

Newstead (new-steed, -sted) n. former farmstead in Wilton Parish, just to the east of Newton. An old quarry and a well are marked just to the north on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map. William Taylor was farmer there in 1841 and William Pringle in 1851.

Newstead (new-steed, -sted) n. village about a mile east of Melrose, which is the site of a large Roman fort, also called Trimontium, and houses the Trimontium Museum. An iron meteorite was found here in 1827 (sometimes ‘Newsteads’; the origin of the name is probably just Old English for ‘the new place’ and is first recorded about 1540).

Newstead (new-steed, -sted) n. cottage to the south of the road near Old Castleton, near Byreholm.

Newton (new’- , ni’-in) n. farm on the A7 on the Heights just to the north of Hawick, usually known as the Nitton. This is essentially the same place known as ‘Chamberlain Newton’ from early times. The ‘Chamberlain’ probably comes from Walter Berkeley, an owner in the late 12th century who was Chamberlain of Scotland.
to William the Lion. The ‘new’ part of the name thus comes from even earlier than this! The grant of the lands to Berkeley by William the Lion was some time in the period 1173–82. The lands later passed to the Grundy family, who probably gave their name to Groundistone. Robert Grundy ‘de Newton’ swore fealty to Edward I in 1296. There were Scotts of Newton recorded in the 16th to 18th centuries. Cottars living there in 1694 were Hector Shiel, John Taylor and Janet Brown. William Lamb was living there in 1688. Thomas Nichol was recorded there in 1721, William Scott in 1727, John Scott in 1733 and Walter of Newton in 1738. Robert Smith was farmer there in the 1760s. George Haliburton is recorded as farmer there in 1797. The owner recorded in 1811 was William Irvine, when it was valued at £238. John Oliver was a retired farmer there in 1841 and Janet Irvine farmed 383 acres there in 1851. Walter Scott was farmer in the 1860s (the name probably derives from Old English ‘niw tun’, meaning ‘the new farm’; it was ‘Neutun’ in the 1170s, and was also sometimes ‘Newtoun’, ‘Newtoun’ or ‘Newton’; see also Chamberlain Newton).

Newton (new‘-n, ni‘-in) n. former farm in the Slitrig valley just to the west of Stobs. Newton Cottage is still marked on the Ordnance Surveys map. Newton Hill to the south-west has some settlements on it. In 1622 the lands of Over and Nether Swinstead were among those sold by Robert Elliot of Redheugh to Gilbert Eliott of Stobs; they were described as ‘commonly called the lands of Hilend Barnes and Newton‘, suggesting that Newton was once part of Swinstead. James Best, John Hislop and Adam Hislop were there in 1694. William Scott and John Beattie and George Pott were there in the early 1700s. For a few years until 1779 it was farmed (along with Whitehillbrae) by James Sibbald, who later became a publisher in Edinburgh. In 1779 it was valued (along with Whitehillbrae) at £455 7s 4d, being an extensive farm on the Eliott of Stobs estate. John Riddell was farmer there in at least 1786–89 and George Riddell was also there in 1787. William Cochrane was there in 1791–94. Francis Aitkin is recorded as farmer there in 1797. Along with Whitehillbrae it was still valued at about £450 in 1813 (marked ‘Newtoun’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map, it is ‘Neutoun’ in 1694).

Newton (new‘-in) n. hamlet and farm on the right bank of the Teviot, on the A698 about midway between Denholm and Cleikum Inn, part of the Parish of Bedrule. It was referred to as the ‘ten pound’ land in the 16th century when owned by Grahamslaw of Newton. Adam Grahamslaw had sasine for the lands in 1504. Adam Grahamslaw of Newton had a charter for the lands in 1531 and John Grahamslaw sold them to Robert Kerr of Ancrum and Woodhead (who married his daughter Helen) in 1586. The ‘procuratory of resignation’ of 1531 records the names of the 16 tenants on the lands at that time. It was listed among the farms burned by the Earl of Hertford’s men in 1545. There was a feud between the Grahamslaws of Little Newton and Turnbulls in Rulewater in the early years of the 17th century. This resulted in the 1601 death of 6 Grahamslaw brothers, probably all sons of John Grahamslaw of Newton. The farm at that time belonged to Robert Kerr and his wife Helen Grahamslaw, sister of the murdered men. The Kerrs of Newton held the lands through the 17th century. When inherited by William Kerr of Newton in 1639 the farm was described as recently built and the lands were valued at 12 pounds, 6 shillings and 40 pence. The Laird of Newton’s lands, including the mill, were valued at £853 6s 8d in 1643, 1663 and 1678. The farms of the Laird of Newton featured prominently in the Hearth Tax list for Bedrule Parish at the end of the 17th century. The neighbouring farm of Stirkriegg was incorporated into it, around the end of the 18th century. Adam Chisholme of Newton is recorded in 1690. John Borthwick was tenant there until about 1698. Mrs. Helen Chisholme is recorded paying the tax for 17 windows there in 1748 and Dr. Andrew Wilson was taxed for 16 windows in 1753. The farm was bought by Thomas Elliot Ogilvie in about the mid-1780s and sold by William Ogilvie of Chesters to Thomas Scott of Peel in 1833. Peter Brown was tenant there in the late 18th century. There were no signs of the former peel house by the end of the 18th century, although ‘beautiful avenues of venerable trees’ remained. The farm once had a corn or threshing mill, which at the end of the 18th century was ‘scarcely discernible’ because of floods. There was later a saw mill there, powered through a mill pond to the south. The mansion house was demolished sometime before 1845 and a new house built. The Robson-Scott family lived here from the mid-19th century and it was inherited from them by a cousin, Robert Lang. The farm was sold in 1982, with the 1100 acres being broken up. The former tower house here is marked by a stony mound in a field between the main part of Newton farm and the A698. A ‘perforated stone macehead’ found here is in Hawick Museum, as well as 2 other worked stones, one hemispherical and one conical, and also a 13th century bronze skilet, which was ploughed up in 1964. The Laird of these lands (probably Kerr) is referred to in a version of the ballad ‘Raid of the Redeswire’ – ‘Gude Ederstane was not to lack, Wi’ Kirktoon, Newton, noblemen’ (the name derives simply from the Old English for ‘new farm’; it is ‘Newtoun’ in 1531, ‘Nutone’ in 1548/9, ‘Newtoun de Baddralle’ in 1586, ‘Nuttoun’ in 1642 and ‘Newtoun’ in 1643; it is ‘Neutoun’ on Blaen’s 1654 map).

Newton (new'-in) n. Alexander (15th C.) recorded as ‘Alexandrum de Newtowne’ in 1426 when he was on the inquest for inheritance of the lands of Elrig, along with many other local men. In 1429/30 he was on the ‘revoir’ panel for the lands of Caverton. Probably the same man was among the witnesses for the transfer of Heap from the Langlands to the Scotts, carried out at St. Mary’s in Hawick in 1431. Alexander (15th/16th C.) Vicar of Hawick, listed as first witness to the sasine giving the Barony of Hawick to James Douglas of Drumlanrig in 1514. He was recorded there as ‘Alexandro Newton vicario de Hawik’, immediately followed by ‘Roberto Luderdale cappellano’. So he was clearly the ‘Vicar’ (presumably meaning he held the vicarage teinds), with ‘Luderdale’ being an additional Chaplain of some sort. He was probably replaced by William Cunningham, recorded as Parson in 1519/20.

Archibald of that Ilk (15th C.) on a ‘revoir’ panel in 1446/7 for Ker of Altonburn. He was also a member of the 1456 panel that acquitted Andrew Ker of Altonburn of helping the English burn lands around Jedburgh. He was mentioned in the Exchequer Rolls of 1455 in relation to the Barony of Cessford. He was also a member of the panel that decided on the disputed lands of Kirkton Mains and the Flex in 1464/5; he is recorded there as ‘Archibald Neuton of that ilke’. Fenwick (19th C.) draper from Falstone in Northumberland, in business with his brother Robert. He sold his wares from a travelling cart, being a frequent visitor to Liddesdale before the era of the motor car. He can be seen as an old man with his horse and cart in a photograph from 1890. George (d.c.1500) probably tenant at Synton. He was killed along with George Cavers during a raid on Synton, when 180 cows, 20 horses and other goods were stolen by David Scott, called ‘Lady’, tenant in Stirches. Scott had a remission for these crimes in 1502. James (15th C.) Rector of Bedrule, recorded in 1468 in a document for the Homes of that Ilk. He is also recorded as Rector of ‘Bothrule’ (i.e. Bedrule) in 1479 in connection with an altar to St. Kentigern (or St. Mungo) dedicated in Jedburgh Kirk (i.e. the Abbey) to which he allowed ‘10 merks’ from annual rent of 2 tenements in Jedburgh. Presumably the same man was witness to a document in 1478 outlining rights of David Scott of Branzholme within Selkirk; he is referred to there as ‘dean of Tevadale’. Probably the same man is also recorded as Dean of Teviotdale in 1488/9 in a document where the priest of Hassendean renounces fees to the Abbot of Melrose. He was still Rector of Bedrule and ‘commis-sario Thevidalie’ in 1492/3 when he witnessed the confirmation of Rutherford and Wells to James Rutherford. James of Dalcoive (15th/16th C.) probably son of Archibald, who he succeeded in 1481. He is referred to as ‘of Dalcoiv’ in 1487 when he sold the lands of Boonraw to Robert, son of Walter Scott of Headshaw. In 1494 he was on the panel for the inheritance of Synton by Alexander Erskine; he was listed as ‘Jacobum Newtoun de Dawcfoe’. In 1504/5 probably the same James ‘of Dalcoif’ had a letter of ‘procuratory’ to his superiors, Patrick Earl of Bothwell, to sell the lands of Boonraw from David Hoppringle, Walter Scott of Howpasley, George Hepburn and William Middlemas to Robert Scott of Stirches. In 1505 he was mentioned as former owner of Boonraw in a charter to Robert Scott of Stirches. He was probably succeeded by another James of Dalcoive. The family also owned lands at Newton in Lauderdale. James (15th/16th C.) apparently tenant of Synton when Adam Turnbull of Hornshole was accused of stealing 200 cows and 80 horses there in 1502. He also acted as surety for Turnbull in his remission for several crimes. He could have been the same man as James of Dalcoive. Janet (15th/16th C.) wife of Adam Ker in ‘St. Helen’s Shaw’. In 1537 she had the tenants of James Ker of Mersington and others removed from her lands of Dalcoive, Newton and Cessford Mains. She is also recorded in 1539/40 as ‘lady of Dalcoif’ (i.e. Dalcoive). Along with her (presumably second) husband Adam Ker, she had to give up the non-entries of lands in Town Yetholm to Gilbert Ker of Primside and his mother Marion Pringle. As heiress of Dalcoiv (in Berwickshire) she inherited the lands in 1539 and resigned them to her son Thomas Ker in 1543. Thomas (15th C.) recorded in 1494/5 as ‘frater vicarius de Selkirk’, i.e. brother of the Vicar of Selkirk. He was fined...
Newton Don

for non-appearance at the Justice-aire (formerly spelled ‘Newtoun’, ‘Newtoune’, etc.).

Newton Don (new'-in-don) n. mansion near Neenthorn, north-west of Kelso, built 1817–20 by Robert Smirke in neo-classical style for Sir Alexander Don, 6th Baronet. The original landscaping and furnishings were quite elaborate. The estate was much diminished to pay off Sir Alexander’s debts and the rest sold in 1847 to Charles Balfour. The estate was connected with the Norman family of Morvile, then Newtons, Hepburns, Kers and others, before being acquired by Alexander Don in the mid-17th century, the name then changing to Newton Don.

Newtonhaugh (new'-in-hawch) n. former name for lands in Bedrule Parish, presumably a flat piece of land between Newton and the Teviot. It is recorded in 1666 that Thomas Rutherford was served heir to these lands, which had belonged to his father, John of Knowesouth.

Newton Hill (new'-in-hil) n. small hill between Stobs and Barnes Loch, being the north-eastern spur of White Knowe. There are the remains of two ancient settlements there. The western one measured about 100 m by 50 m and contains signs of at least 11 hut circles. However, it has been disturbed when the ground was used for military training. The eastern site is about 60 m by 40 m and is a fortified settlement, with some interior hut circles, and is still quite well preserved. There are also 2 linear earthworks crossing near the summit, from south-east to north-west. Alexander Michie first described these, suggesting a boundary connection with Gibby’s Cleuch; it is unclear how old they are, or whether they represent separate phases of construction over an extended period.

Newton Hill (new'-in-hil) n. small hill near the farm of Newton in Bedrule Parish. It was also the name for a piece of land that was part of Newton in Bedrule Parish, according to the Land Tax Rolls of 1811.

Newton Mains (new-tin-mânz) n. former farmstead adjacent to Newton farm in Wilton Parish. William Elliot and his family lived there in 1841, while the Lintons were there in 1851 (also written ‘Newtonmains’).

Newton Mill (new-tin-mil) n. former mill in Bedrule Parish, associated with the lands of Newton. This was once a corn mill, which at the end of the 18th century was ‘scarcely discernible’ because of floods. It was later the location for a saw mill, powered through a mill pond to the south. The mill was among the lands held by the Laird of Newton in 1643, valued at £133 6s 8d and was owned by Thomas Ogilvie of Chesters in 1788.

Newton Moor (new-tin-moor) n. former name for the moor near Newton in Bedrule Parish. In about 1795 it is recorded that the minister of Bedrule had the right to cast 2 ‘darg of turf annually’ here.

Newton Muir (new-tin-mewr) n. former farmstead in Wilton Parish, probably on Groundistone Heights. Agricultural labourer Thomas Hume and family were there in 1841, and it was abandoned in the 1850s.

Newton Pond (new-tin-pound) n. pond to the south of Newton farm in Bedrule Parish. It was formerly used to drive a threshing mill on the farm. Another pond to the southwest is labelled ‘Newton Pond’ on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map, and is now ‘Monks Pond’ on maps. There was once a tradition that it was originally built as a fish pond by the monks of Jedburgh Abbey. The 1837 article in the New Statistical Account suggests it was fed by the Lady’s Well, but this seems to be confounding the pond with the Ladies’ Well much further down the Ruecastle Burn, near Knowesouth.

Newton Toor (new-tin-toor) n. former tower near Ruecastle in Bedrule parish, burned by Hertford’s men in 1545. This is presumably an early version of the house at Newton.

Newton Wud (new-tin-wud) n. name for wood near Newton in Bedrule Parish, recorded in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls.

Newtown (new-town) n. another name for Newtown St. Boswells.

Newtown Mill (new-town-mil) n. name for Newmill in the 16th century (also ‘Newtonne Milne’ and other variants; this may be the ‘Newtown’ marked on de Wit’s c. 1680 map of Scotland, although that geography is confused and the one above Stobs may also be meant).

Newtown St. Boswells (new-town-sin'-bozulz) n. town situated on the Bowden Burn, and dating from at least 1654 (so not so new!). It really developed as a railway town on the Waverley Line and as a market centre close to St. Boswells’ Green. The modern Roxburghshire County Council offices were built here in 1966–68. From 1975–1996 this was the administrative centre for the Borders Regional Council, and is now the centre for the Scottish Borders Council. Population (1991) 1,108.

New Westgate Haa

New Westgate Haa (new-west-gā’-haw) n. house in Denholm, marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map at the north end of the Canongate.

New Woll (new-wol) n. farm south-west of the original Woll. It is marked on Ainslie’s 1773 map, and so has been ‘new’ for a while now. The house is part of the golf course, and is rentable as self-catering accommodation. Francis Scott was tenant there in 1731, William Fowler was there in 1788 and John Sprot was there at the end of the 18th century (it is ‘New Woll’ in 1731 and ‘New-wool’ in 1788).

the New Yairds (thū-new-yârdz) n. name used in Denholm for the plots of lands feued around the Green after being augmented in 1836. These comprised the original 8½ acres of the ‘auld yairds’, plus the new approximately 6 acres, split among 60 people. Some feuks were subdivided, and 2 were appropriated for the school and schoolmaster’s house and to the road to H assendean.

New Year (new-yeer) n. a sum of money given to children at the New Year, or a drink offered to a visitor at the beginning of the year – ‘...But this time aw’ll shake ee quite rigid Aw wad like a visitor at the beginning of the year – ’ [JTe], ‘...meir 40 shillings meaw, or haynit gers, sal pay for ilk hors or meir 40 shillings ...’ [BR1640], ‘...with power to his said nichbour that aught the ground where-upon it standis, to cast downe the said dyck, and tak it away’ [BR1640].

neyr (när) adj., arch. near, especially applied to kinship – ‘The said Arche Armstrang is my neyr cowsein, and my wyfis brother sone’ [SB1587] (cf. ner).

nez (nez) n., poet. the nose – ‘But aye he helde his heid asyde; And aye his nez did squeeze ...’ [JTe] (used jocularly).

-ni (ni, nu, na) adv. not, generally as part of a contraction, such as ‘canni’, ‘hevni’, ‘wunni’ (this is -næe in much of the rest of Scotland, and sometimes spelled that way locally, even when the ni pronunciation is usually meant; H.S. Riddell uses ‘na’).

nibbie (ni-bee) n., arch. a walking stick or shepherd’s crook, usually made from a natural branch – ‘Gin I get haud o’ my nibbie, I’se reese your riggin for ye’ [JoJ], ‘Two or three shepherds had to leave their places and use their nibbies unmercifully ...’ [RJR], ‘...an’ the auld brute struck the puir naturel wi’ his nibbie, and sic a crack’ [JEDM], ‘A’ve ma bigcoat an ma nibbie an a guid perr o tacketty shuin, so it mae rain at, for ochts A care!’ [ECS], ‘...marching in front of the Saxhorn Band, waving his ’nibbie’ like a pipe-major’ [JTu], ‘...and I’d nothing to do but grab a nibbie or loup on a bike and see them for myself’ [DH].

nibble (ni-bul) v., arch. to fidget, fiddle with the fingers, n., arch. a bargain, stroke of luck – ‘...an A gien um a thrirpy-bit. Sic a nibble for um!’ [ECS], ‘Look sic a nibble A’ve gotten!’ [ECS].

nibody (ni-bi-dee, ni-bo-dee) n. nobody – ‘nibody kens where they er ony mair’ (note that the ‘o’ tends not to be pronounced; cf. naebody).

nichbour (ni-bur) n., arch. neighbour, fellow townsman – ‘...either in his nichbour’s corn, meadow, or haynit gers, sal pay for ilk hors or meir 40 shillings ...’ [BR1640], ‘...with power to his said nichbour that aught the ground where-upon it standis, to cast downe the said dyck, and tak it away’ [BR1640].

nichbourheid (ni-bur-heed) n., arch. neighbourhood – ‘Item, that ilk nichbour big his heid with uthers, for uphawlding of nichbourheid with uthers ...’ [BR1640].

Nichol (ni-kul, ni-kol) n. Adam (15th/16th C.) listed at the 1493 Justice-aire in Jedburgh when William Douglas of Cavers was fined for his non-appearance. He was most likely the ‘Ade Nichol in dennum’ who was cited again at the Justice-aire in 1494/5. He may have been closely related to James in Denholm, who was also recorded in 1493 and 1494/5. Probably the same Adam was one of the bailies appointed by James Douglas of Cavers in 1512 in order to give rasine of the lands of Denholm to William Cranston; his name appears to be given as ‘Ade Nichol’. Adam (d.1626) resident of Cavers Parish. A headstone in the old kirkyard commemorates the death of him and his wife Margaret Smith on the same day. Adam (17th/18th C.) resident of Denholm on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. Perhaps the same resident of Denholm married Janet Turnbull in 1708. Their children included probably half of these: John (b.1708); Margaret (b.1708); Margaret (b.1710); James (b.1711); Bessie (b.1712); Jane (b.1714); Adam (b.1714); Andrew (b.1716); John (b.1716); William (b.1717); Adam (b.1719); Jane (b.1719);
Nichol (b.1721); Isabel (b.1724). Adam (18th C.) prehaps son of the earlier Adam. He was resident in Denholm in 1741 and 1742. His children, baptised in Cavers Parish, included: John (b.1741); and Robert (b.1742). Adam (18th/19th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Borthwickbrae Parkhead in 1793. He married Jane Scoon in Roberton in 1792 and their children included James (b.1793) and Beatrix (b.1796). Probably the same Adam was recorded as owner of a horse at Greenbank in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Adam (b.1769/70) farmer at Tandlaw in Wilton Parish. He was already a widower by 1841. In 1851 he was farming 200 acres, with the farm being run by his son John. Adam (b.1800/1) born in Newcastleton, he lived in Roberton Parish. He was recorded as an agricultural labourer at Deanburnhaugh in 1841 and a shepherd at Milsington Shankfoot in 1851 and 1861. He married Betty Graham (from Cumberland) and their children included: Helen; Walter; Thomas; Andrew; Jane; James; and Robert. Adam (1818/19/70) mason in Newcastle ton, son of John. His wife was Jessie Rutherford, who died in 1891, aged 71. They are buried at Ettleton. Adam (b.1825/6/78) son of Robert and Isabella Glendinning, he was born in Castleton Parish. He lived at Dryden with his parents and was shepherd at Pinglehole in 1861. He married Esther, daughter of William Hardie and Violet Douglas. Their children included: Violet (1859–1931), who married farmer William Steele; Isabella (1861–78); Christian (1864–89); Margaret (1865–1930), who married Michael Anderson Grieve; Elizabeth (1868–1937), who worked as a nurse; and Robert (1869–1937), draper who moved to Fulham. Agnes (17th C.) tenant at Binks in 1694 according to the Hearth Tax rolls. Alexander (18th C.) resident at Threephead in 1775 when his son Walter was baptised in Roberton Parish. Alexander (18th/19th C.) cooper who was listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls for Hawick. He married Mary Robson, and she died in 1787. Their children included: James (b.1777); Margaret (b.1773), baptised in Wilton; James (again, b.1785); and Jane (b.1785). He may be the Alexander who married Margaret Gledstains in 1788. His son Walter died in 1801. Andrew (17th C.) tenant at Synton Mill, at the same time as Thomas. They are mentioned in a session record in Ashkirk in 1635. Andrew (18th C.) farmer in Minto Parish. In 1780 he was listed as holding part of Minto Hills farm ‘in tack’, the other part being held by Thomas Thomson. Andrew (18th C.) tenant in Blackhall. In 1758 he was among parishioners in Hobkirk Parish who were asked to provide broom for thatching the roof of the kirk. Andrew (19th C.) farmer at Trow Knowes. He had a house built at Myreslawgreen in about 1879. Charles (b.1818/9) from Perth, he was a plasterer in Wilton. In Slater’s 1852 directory he was listed on Wilton Path. In 1851 he is recorded as a master plasterer on Ladylaw Place, employing 8 men. His wife was Isabella and their children included Isabella and Christian. Christopher (19th/20th C.) grocery assistant in Hawick who was known for his efforts at poetry, much of it privately published in pamphlet form. He has been described as Hawick’s answer to William McGonagal. An example of his verse is: ‘We started off for Edinburgh By the twenty-past-ten train: When we got into the city It was pouring down with rain’. Elizabeth ‘Betty’ (d.1787) housekeeper for merchant William Oliver (i.e. ‘Auld Cash’). She died in Hawick. Elizabeth (18th C.) cook at Braxholme in 1785, when she was working for Adam Ogilvie. Francis (18th C.) resident of Abbotrule Parish in 1724 when he married Margaret Wilson in Roberton Parish. Isobel (b.1726), baptised in Hobkirk Parish, may have been their daughter. Francis (18th C.) resident of Harwood Mill. His son John was baptised in Hobkirk Parish in 1738. He could be the Francis who married Margaret Rae in 1732 and whose other children included Thomas (b.1740). He may be the same man as the Francis who earlier married Margaret Wilson. Francis (b.c.1775) labourer at Tweedbank. He is listed among male heads of households in 1835–41. George (16th C.) recorded in the Exchequer Rolls of 1540 as the King’s shepherd in Bellendean. He was paid £3 6s 8d for 5 bolls of grain. George (16th C.) recorded in the will of Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1574, when he was tenant farmer at Bellendean. He could be related to Simon and William who farmed at Buccleuch. George (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen Hislop. Their children included William (b.1650) and Jean (b.1652). The witnesses in 1652 were John Clerk and Adam Hislop (probably a relative of his wife). George (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Bessie Elliot and their son James was baptised in 1671. George (17th C.) resident at Sundhope in Castleton Parish according to the Hearth Tax.
records of 1694. George (17th C.) resident at Hawick Shiel in 1694, according to the Hearth Tax rolls. He is probably the George, married to Bessie Elliot, whose children born in Hawick Parish included: James (b.1671); Bessie (b.1673); and William (b.1681). George (1675/6–1841) tenant farmer at Philhope, probably son of John, tenant in Craik. In 1841 he was recorded there with his wife, 4 children, a labourer and 2 female servants. In 1820 (late in life) he married Ann Burnet, who died in 1879, aged 79. Their children included: John (1820–70), who died at Philhope; Isabella (b.1822); James (b.1823); and William (1826–1902), also died at Philhope. He is buried in Borthwick Waas and may have been son of John (1717/8–92), who is in the adjacent burial plot. George ‘Geordie’ (d.1874) resident of the Rule valley. He carried the post from Bournemouth to Chesters, but gave up in 1873 due to ill-health. He died at the Causeyfoot. Helen (17th/18th C.) resident of Greenholm in Castleton Parish. In 1699 she was reported to the Session for blasphemy, specifically saying ‘the Lord had broken His promise’ for giving them such a bad harvest; she had to ‘stand in sackcloth one day publicly upon the place of repentance’. Ian ‘Moose’, Cornet in 1984, he has also been 1514 Club President. His son Ross was Cornet in 2012. J. (18th/19th C.) hosier in Castleton. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. James (15th C.) listed at the 1493 Justice-aire in Jedburgh when William Douglas of Cavers was fined for his non-appearance. He was recorded being ‘in denu’, which probably meant Denholm. He may have been related to Adam, who was also listed in 1493. He was also cited at the Justice- aire in 1494/5. He may have been closely related to Adam in Denholm, who was also recorded in 1493 and 1494/5. James (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Helen Anderson and their children included: Janet (b.1651); and James (b.1656). William (b.1653), son of James and Helen ‘Paterson’ was probably a child of the same couple. The witnesses in 1651 were William Anderson and Simon Nichol (who were probably related to him and his wife) and in 1656 were Walter and Robert Nichol. James (17th C.) leased the farm of Todshawhill in 1671. He may be the witness (along with Robert) for a baptism for James Richardson at Howcleuch in 1683. Perhaps the same James was resident of Broadhaugh on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. James (17th/18th C.) living at Easter Essenside in 1710 when his son James was baptised in Roberton Parish. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Turn in Kirkton Parish. His son Adam was baptised in 1720. James (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Chapelhill in 1732. His unnamed child was baptised in 1732. Other children included William (b.1730), Agnes (b.1734) and James (b.1735). He may be the James who married Margaret in 1729. James (1715/6–76) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Mary Scott, who died in 1776, aged 45. Their children included Elizabeth Mary (d.1776), Robert (d.1782) and Archibald (d.1779). He and his wife died at Shaws and are buried in Castleton. James ‘Pistols’ (d.1778) married Margaret Scott, who died in Hawick in 1778. Their children, baptised in Wilton Parish, included: Jane (b.1736); Mary (b.1740); and Thomas (b.1743). He died in 1778, a few months before his wife, with his nickname given in the Parish record. James (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Martha Hislop (or ‘Hazelhop’) and their daughter Janet was baptised in 1762. The witnesses were Robert Laidlaw in Fahnash and James ‘Collur’. James (18th C.) recorded at Outerside in 1762 when his son John was baptised and at Outerside in 1765 when his son George was baptised. He is probably different from the James recorded at Chapelhill in 1765. James (18th C.) recorded at Chapelhill in 1764 and 1765 when his son John and daughter Jean were baptised in Robertson Parish. He could be the James recorded at Highchesters in 1772 when his daughter Jean was baptised in Robertson Parish. He could be the James (d.1792) commemorated at Borthwick Waas. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. In 1770 he is recorded living at Branxholme Woodfoot. He married Helen Turnbull in 1760. Their children, baptised in Wilton, included: Mary (b.1761); James (b.1763); and Helen (b.1770). The witnesses in 1770 were Thomas Scott and Andrew Turner. Perhaps the same James was listed at Muirside in Wilton Parish in 1791 when he paid the Cart Tax. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Wilton and Hawick Parishes. He married Christian Hart and their children included: Betty (b.1767), baptised in Wilton; and James (b.1772) and Janet (b.1775), baptised in Hawick. The witnesses in 1772 were James Murray and James Hart. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Elizabeth Renwick in 1787. James (1791–1875) born in Lilliesleaf, son of John. He was an agricultural labourer in Robertson Parish. In 1841 and 1851 he was living with his family at Borthwickshiels Lodge, and in 1861 they were living at 4 Orrock Place. He married Elizabeth (1794–1881), daughter of John Cavers and Elizabeth Hislop; she died at Craik. Their children were: Elizabeth (b.1813); Janet (b.1815); Margaret (b.1817); Jane (1820–63), who married William Renwick and died in Hawick; Christian (b.1822); Joan (b.1824); John (b.1827); Barbara Pott (b.1829); Walter (b.1831); Williamina (or ‘Mina’, b.1833), who married George Nichol; and Jemima (b.1836). He died at ‘Wheathaugh’ and was buried at Borthwick Waas. James (18th/19th C.) baker of Hawick, recorded as owner of a horse in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He also paid the dog tax in 1797. James (1787–1866) carter in Newcastleton. In 1851 and 1861 he was at about 26 Langholm Street. He ran a cart to Langholm twice a week in the 1850s. His wife was Elizabeth (or ‘Betty’) Burnet from Hawick, who died in 1861, aged 73. Their children included: Mary; John (1809/10–16); William (1811/2–43), who married Janet Mitchellhill; and James (1814/5–83), who married Jane Murray. He could be the labourer in Newcastleton recorded as head of household in 1835. James (b.c.1790) farmer on the Loan. He is recorded on the 1841 census at about No. 53, living with no family and 2 servants. James (b.c.1795) shoemaker in Newcastleton recorded in Pigot’s 1837 directory. He was at about 12 South Hermitage Street in 1841. James (b.1815/6) postman in Newcastleton in the 1860s. He took over from Jean Elliot, ‘Lucie Lass’. He lived on South Hermitage Street. He made deliveries along the Liddel and Hermitage Waters on alternate days, going at least as far as Saughtree and Dinlees (with children attending the smaller schools being used to carry letters further afield). He was recorded as a labourer in 1851, living at about 3 Langholm Street. In 1861 he was ‘Post Messenger’ on South Hermitage Street. He married Jane Murray and their children included Mina (b.1843) and Mary Ann (b.1845). James (d.1860s) farmer in Hawick. He married firstly Jean Michie (d.1838) and secondly Margaret Scott (d.1870). He died at the age of 75 and was buried in St. Mary’s kirkyard. James ‘Jamie’ (d.1903) devoted supporter of the Saxhorn Band for almost 40 years. Although he had no musical ability himself he carried the music chest, which he described as playing the ‘Tin Box’. He worked for over 30 years in Elliot’s stocking-shop – ‘Eppy Sootie and Wullie Pairk, Geordie the Buck and Higgins Phill, Jamie Nichol the Hawick band clairk, The Duddy Laird and Shallow Bill’ [HI]. Janetus (19th C.) carter in Castleton. In 1832 he acknowledged that he was father of Betty Paisley’s child. His forename seems unusual. John (16th/17th C.) described as ‘Johne Nicoll in Craikhoip’ in 1622 and 1623 when he was caution for Will Elliot in Huntlaw. John (17th C.) resident of Denholm on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. Either he is listed twice or there were 2 men with the same name at that time. John (17th C.) resident of Spittal-on-Rule on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. John (17th C.) listed as cottar at Whitfield in Wilton Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He must surely related to Robert, who was also listed there. John (17th/18th C.) resident in Alemoor in 1712 when his son Walter was baptised in Roberton Parish. Other children who could be his include James (b.1705), Janet (b.1705) and Thomas (b.1714). John (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1709 he was servant to Robert Thomson in Newmill. He married Margaret Scott in Hawick in 1708 and their children included: Robert (b.1709); and James (b.1710). The witnesses in 1709 were Walter Nixon, tenant in Hawick Shiel and merchant Walter Oliver. It is possible he is the same John who was later at Allanhaugh Mill. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He was living at Lairhope in 1705 and was herd there in 1711. He married Esther Armstrong in Hawick in 1704 and their children included Janet (b.1705) and James (b.1711). The witnesses in 1711 were ‘the two James Grieves tenants in Commound’ (and hence the child may have been named after them). John (17th/18th C.) resident in Branxholme Town in 1717 when his son Walter was baptised in Roberton Parish. It is unclear why the baptism did not happen in Hawick, but 3 other baptisms of people from Branxholme Town happened on the same day. He may be the John who married Bessie Wilson in Hawick in 1708. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Parkhill in 1717 and 1727. His children included Janet (b.1717) and Andrew (b.1727). Perhaps the same John was at Mabonlaw in 1723. He may be the John in Eilrig who in 1716 in Hawick Parish married Brench, daughter of James Scott, herd in Falnash. John (17th/18th C.) resident in Commonbrae in 1720. He married Janet Nichol and their children, baptised in Hawick, included: Margaret (b.1720); Janet (b.1724). The witnesses were John Chisholme, preacher at Caerlennig and Robert Scott, tenant in Falnash. John (17th/18th C.) tenant in Allanhaugh Mill. He was recorded in 1718 as both ‘workman in Allanhaugh miln’ and ‘servant in Newbigging’, when one of his children was baptised in Hawick. He may be the John whose children baptised in Hawick Parish included William (b.1716) and Walter (b.1718). The witnesses in 1718 were James Davidson and Walter Scott, both tenants in Newbigging. His son William was created a Burgess of Hawick in 1737, suggesting that this may be when he reached the age of majority (consistent with birth in 1716). John (17th/18th C.) resident of Denholm. His daughter Janet was baptised in Cavers in 1722. Several other children, baptised in Cavers around the same time, may be his. John (18th C.) resident at Priesthaugh in 1726 and 1728. His children, baptised in Cavers Parish, include: Janet (b.1726); and Margaret (b.1728). Perhaps the same John was in Brugh in 1733 when his son William was baptised in Cavers Parish. John (18th C.) servant in Hawick. Along with ex-Bailie Walter Graham he witnessed a baptism for carrier George Richardson in Hawick in 1741. He may have been a servant of Bailie Graham. John (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Eilrig in 1735 when his son John was baptised. John (1717/8–92) tenant in Craik. He married Elizabeth Scott, who died in 1815, aged 88. Their children included: William (1759/60–1807), 2nd son; John (1762–87), 3rd son; twins Betty and Margaret (b.1764); George (b.1766), probably the farmer at Philhope; and Margaret (again, b.1768). He could be the John whose daughter Margaret died in Hawick in 1781. His daughter Elizabeth may have married Adam Scott (from Ettrick) in 1795. John (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He married Mary Dickson in 1761 and their son John was born in 1762. He may be the same man as the father of George (b.1764), who lived at Broadlee. He was clearly separate from the contemporary John who lived at Craik. John (18th C.) barber and candlemaker in Hawick. In 1756 he married Mary Turnbull and she died in Hawick in 1787. Their children included: Robert (b.1757); and Michael (b.1760). The 1757 baptism was witnessed by Bailie Robert Howison and tobacconist William (who was surely a relation). John (18th C.) baker in Hawick. It is said that when coming back to Hawick from Kelso with a neighbour, they decided to have a race to reach the toll-bar at Spittal-on-Rule. His horse could not take the bend and leaped over the parapet of the Rule Water bridge there. However, since the river was in flood they both escaped injury and he was rescued by the miller, to continue on his journey later the same day. An inscription ‘J.N. and his Horse’s leap’ was carved on the bridge. John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1768 his child John with Elizabeth Noble was baptised, the couple being labelled as ‘Fornicaters’ and the witnesses being shoemaker Robert Elliot and smith Robert Young. John (1746/7–1819) weaver in Newcastle. He married Mary Ogilvie, who died in 1795, aged 45. Their children included: Alexander, who died aged 12; John Little, who died in infancy; Walter (1798/9–1818); and John (1790/1–1817). The family are buried in Ettleton Cemetery. John (1762–1839) son of John, he was baptised in Robertson Parish. He was shepherd at Broadmeadows. In 1792 he was living at Meadshaw. In Robertson Parish in 1790 he married Janet Brydon, who was from Ettrick Parish; she died in 1798, aged 30. Their children included: Isobel (b.1791); and John (b.1792). He died at Todshawhill and is buried at Borthwick Waas, along with his wife and mother Mary Dixon (1731/2–1807). He is probably the John, son of John, baptised in Robertson Parish in 1762. John (1764/5–1842) tenant at ‘Carretrigg’ (i.e. Carewoodrig). He married Jane Jardine, who died at Ewesopelee in 1851, aged 70. Their children included: Walter (1804/5–30); and Elizabeth (1812/3–28). They are buried at Ettleton. He was probably son of John and Margaret Ingles, who are buried alongside his family. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as farmer at Woodburn Mill in Robertson Parish, when he owned 2 horses. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. His children included: James (1791–1875), farm worker in Robertson Parish; an unnamed daughter (b.1792); and Christian (b.1794). He is probably the John (1761/2–1828), tenant in Whinfield, who is buried at Borthwick Waas (adjacent to James, who was hence likely to be his son). He could be the John son of Walter and Betty Stoddart baptised in Hawick in 1761. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as farmer at Woodburn Mill, when he owned 2 horses. He was living at Woodburn in 1800. He married Janet Cessford and their children included: John (b.1796); Betty (b.1798); William (b.1800); George (b.1802); and Janet (b.1805). John (b.c.1765) from England, he was a boot and shoe maker in Newcastle. He was listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. In 1841 he was living with labourer Walter (probably his son) in the village. He may be the John who subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821.

John (1775/6–1867) from Kirkandrews, he was a mason in Newcastleton. He is recorded by Pigot in 1825/6 and 1837 as a Newcastleton mason, as well as in Slater’s 1852 directory. He and William Crozier were the masons who worked on the Holm Bridge. In at least 1841–61 he was on North Hermitage Street. He married Marion Murray, who died in 1868, aged 87. Their children included: Robert; John (1814/5–78), who married Mary Dodd; James; Adam (1818/19–70) mason in Newcastleton; Thomas; and Margaret. He is buried at Ettleton along with some of his family. John (18th/19th C.) carter in Castleton Parish. He was listed as ‘John, jun. carter, Castleton’ when he subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821; this suggests that his father was also John. He may be closely related to James, who was also a carter in Newcastleton at about the same time. John (b.1792/3) born in Roberton Parish, he was shepherd at Billhope in Castleton Parish in 1841. In 1851 he was shepherd at Blackhall in Ewesdale and he was listed as a cadger and carrier at Raesknowe in 1861. He married Margaret Hobkirk, who was born in Ashkirk Parish. His children included: John (1818–83), baptised in Roberton; and Thomas (1826/7–46). His 2 sons are buried in Borthwick Waas. John (1801/2–89) feuar in Newcastleton Townfoot. In 1861 he was living at about 34 South Hermitage Street. He was probably the John who was on the Border Union Railway Committee for Newcastleton in the 1850s, and recorded as Newcastleton Town Clerk in the 1860s. He married Mary Elliot, who died in 1879, aged 71. Their children included: Helen; Elizabeth D.; Agnes; John (1845–1904), who died at Leeds; and Wilhelmina (‘Mina’, 1850/1–1926), who married a Tait and is buried at Ponteland. He and his wife kept a family register for the period 1802–54. John Pringle (1804/5–59) born at Huntly Hill, near Brechin, eldest of 7 children of John, farmer from Northumberland, and Jane Forbes from Aberdeenshire. He studied Mathematics and Physics at King’s College, Aberdeen, trained as a minister at St. Mary’s College (St. Andrews), but then turned to education. His first teaching job was at Duns. He came to Hawick in the early 1820s to teach in a school for practical education. He was master of the English (i.e. Parish) School from 1821 until the end of 1823. Here he was apparently inspired to follow an interest in astronomy by millwright Gideon Scott, and they watched a transit of Mercury in a garden at Allars Bank (probably in 1832, so he must have returned to Hawick specially for the event). He left Hawick, becoming editor of the ‘Fife Herald’, Headmaster of Cupar Academy and Rector of Montrose Academy, before becoming Regius Professor of Astronomy at Glasgow University in 1836. He was listed in Cupar in 1825 when he subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’. He regularly gave lectures on astronomy, chemistry and geology. In 1831 he married Jane Tullis (1809–50), daughter of a Cupar printer. Their eldest child John, became a Professor and writer and their youngest, Agnes, married William Jack, Professor of Mathematics at Glasgow. In 1853 he secondly married the prominent anti-slavery campaigner and reformer Elizabeth Pease, against the objections of her friends and Quaker family. He was a lifelong radical in politics, arguing for universal education. He was asked to stand as a Liberal candidate for Glasgow, and the Hungarian patriot Louis Kosuth stayed with him when he toured Britain. Although he published only 2 scientific papers (both on the Moon), he lectured extensively and published many popular books. He wrote the influential ‘Views of the architecture of the heavens: in a series of letters to a lady’ (1839) and ‘Cyclopaedia of the Physical Sciences’ (1857), among other works. He was an inspiring teacher and gave popular public lectures, even travelling to the U.S.A., where he apparently influenced Edgar Allen Poe. He also returned to Hawick to give a popular lecture on Astronomy and was effusive in his praise for his former friend and inspiration, Gideon Scott. He popularised the ‘nebular hypothesis’ for the formation of the Solar System in books such as ‘Phenomena and order of the solar system’ (1838), and was the first to suggest a photographic study of sunspots. He is buried in the Grange cemetery, Edinburgh. There is a commemorative window to him at Bute Hall in Glasgow. John (b.1805/6) born in Robertson Parish, son of Adam, he was farmer at Tandlaw. In 1841 and 1851 he was helping his father at Tandlaw. In 1861 he was tenant at Tandlaw, farming 200 acres and employing 5 people. He was unmarried, but living with a housekeeper and 2 servants. Perhaps the same John was farmer at Coldhouse, listed among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1835. John (b.1814/5) mason in Newcastleton, probably son of John. In 1861 he was on North Hermitage Street. His wife was Mary and their children included James, Margaret, John and Marion. John (b.1815/6) born in Ewesdale, he was shepherd at Evesleeshope. His wife was Mary and their children included John. In 1851 he was Nichol Nichol (19th/20th C.) son of Provost John and brother to John Scott is buried in Wellogate Cemetery. A portrait of him hangs in the Town Hall and he is likely the town's most successful tanning and wool merchants, succeeding to the business of Andrew Ewen in Slitrig Crescent. In 1851 he was living with his parents at Billhope. In 1861 he was at 1 Slitrig Crescent and listed as a skinner employing 12 people. He was also a farmer. He entered the Council in 1867 for Slitrig Ward and was elected a Magistrate in 1869, then became Provost 1871–74. During his Provostship Commercial Road was developed and there was the stockmaker's strike of 1872/3. He was presented with some inscribed silver plate on his retirement, and returned to the Council in 1878/9. He was a keen Common Riding supporter, chairing the Race Committee, and being a Steward at the Races. He was also Chairman of the first School Board of Hawick, as well as being a local curler and bowler. He married Janet W. Scott (one of the ‘Whack’ Scotts), who died in 1855, aged 24. He later married Annie, daughter of butcher George Davies. Their children were William Scott (who became Provost), John, Margaret Scott (who married solicitor James Barrie), and 2 children who died in infancy. A portrait of him hangs in the Town Hall and he is buried in Wellogate Cemetery. John Scott (19th/20th C.) son of Provost John and brother to Provost William Scott. He worked in the hosiery business in Leicester, joined London Scottish as a private, rose to commissioned rank and was awarded the Military Cross for leading his men in a bayonet charge at Mons. He probably married Florence Crane from Leicester. Margaret (b.1794/5) draper in Newcastleton, recorded in Pigot’s 1837 directory and Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1851 and 1861 she was on Stopford Street, already a widow. She had sons John and William. Mark (19th C.) third official Common Riding singer of Hogg’s ‘Teribus’. Patrick (16th C.) recorded in Phillhope in 1579 when he witnessed the transfer of Rough-hope and Phillhope from John Turnbull to Martin Elliot. Patrick (17th C.) recorded in a deed of 1634 as schoolmaster at Lilliesleaf. He is the first teacher on record there. It is possible that the same Patrick was witness in 1651 in Ashkirk Parish. Patrick (17th C.) resident at Roan in Castleton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. Robert (15th C.) resident of Hartwood. In 1494/5 Walter Rutherford in Phaup was allowed to compone for several crimes, including stealing sheep from him and John Fletcher. Robert (d.1699) resident of the Teviothead area whose gravestone is there. His wife Bessie died in 1701. The names of James Nichol and Marian Scott, also engraved on the same stone, are probably his parents (assuming that they survived him). Robert (17th C.) listed as resident at Whitfield in Wilton Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. John, who was also listed as a cotter there, was surely a relative. Robert (17th/18th C.) married Blanch Borthwick in 1703, both being from Hawick Parish. Robert (17th/18th C.) resident of Weensland. In 1718 he married Janet Paterson in Wilton and their children included: William (b.1719), baptised in Wilton; and Francis (b.1722), John (b.1724) and Isabel (b.1726), baptised in Hawick. The witnesses in 1726 were Henry Orrock and Dand Gray. Robert (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Bowanhill in 1726 when one of his children was baptised. Probably the same Robert was tenant in Bowanhill in 1720 when he married Isobel, daughter to the deceased Robert Thomson. Their children likely included Robert (b.1724), James (b.1726) and James (again, b.1732). Robert (1774/5–1852) born in Yarrow, he was an agricultural labourer in Deanburnhaugh. He married Catherine (or ‘Ketty’) Wilson (1781/2–1853). Their children included: Jane (b.1806); and Robert...

Andrew 'Ronnie' (1960–2015) rugby player and leader of the Drums and Fifes. Son of Bill and Lydia and brother of Phil, Ian and Lindsay, he was educated at Wilton and Hawick High School and worked as a plasterer and builder. A keen rugby player at school, he went on to play prop forward over 200 times for the Linden and was a regular for the Greens in the 1980s and 1990s, playing 180 games. He also represented the South of Scotland and was capped for the Scotland 'B' team in 1985. A great supporter of the Common Riding, he was a member of the Drums and Fifes for 39 years, including being leader for 20 years. He also served as Chairman of the Common Riding Committee 2007–10, as well as President of the Callants' Club and 1514 Club. He married Lynn Frost in 1981 and they had a son, also Ronnie. Known affectionately as ‘Big Ronnie’, the nickname applied to the size of his heart as much as to the stature of the man himself. A tree and ornamental tree-guard were unveiled in his memory on the Kirkwynd in 2016. Simon (16th C.) tenant of the lands of Buccleuch in 1574, recorded in the last testament of Sir Walter Scott of Bruxholme. William was also listed as tenant there, and they were probably both related to George, who was tenant at Bellendean. Simon ‘Syme’ (16th/17th C.) tenant of ‘Fairmyleis’ recorded in 1623. Michael Birnie in the same place was found guilty of stealing 30 sheep from there, belonging to him and his son William, along with Walter Scott of Todrig and his son Walter Scott. He volunteered for the R.A.F. in WWII, returning to run his father’s business until 1990, driving coaches to rural areas around Hawick, as well as trips further afield. For decades the firm brought schoolchildren from outlying villages to Hawick High School. He married Jean Douglas. In 1955 tragedy struck, when 2 of their children, Peelbraehope according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Thomas (17th C.) listed as resident at Outerside on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at Newton in 1721. He married Janet Nichol in 1704 and their children included: Helen (b.1717); Mary (b.1719); and John and Robert (b.1721). Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was living at B uncleuch Shields in 1720, Howleuch in 1722, Deanburnhaugh in 1725 and Bellendean in 1728. His children included: John (b.1720); Francis (b.1722); Jean (b.1725); and Robert (b.1728). Thomas (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Mabonlaw in 1766. He married Betty Sinton in Robertson in 1765. His children included Alison (b.1766). Thomas (18th/19th C.) cooper in Newcastleton, listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. Thomas (19th C.) married Janet Laidlaw in Wilton in 1826. Thomas (1820/1-98) grocer and merchant in Newcastleton. He was at about 16 Douglas Square in 1851 and on North Hermitage Street in 1861. He could be the same as the baker recorded on Douglas Square in the 1860s. He married Julia Mitchellill, who died in 1888, aged 63. Their children included: Margaret; Robert; Mary (1855/6-97); William; and Thomas (1863/4-98), who died at Portobello. In later life he lived at Brieryhill Cottage, where he died. He is buried in Ettleton Cemetery. Thomas (b.1820/1) carter on North Hermitage Street in 1851. His wife was Jane and their children included Helen and Mary.

Walter (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Bessie Hislop and their son James was baptised in 1654. The witnesses were George Dickson and James (who was probably related). Walter (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1656 he (along with Robert) witnessed a baptism for James (who was surely related). He may be the Walter who married Malie Nichol and whose daughter Bessie was baptised in 1650. He might also be the Walter who married Helen ‘Bleck’ and had children Jean (b.1661) and Francis (b.1662). The witnesses in 1661 were George Walker and James Vogan. Walter (17th C.) resident at Northhouse according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Walter (18th C.) resident in Robertson Parish. He was at Howcleuch in 1718 and 1721. Probably the same Walter was at Eilrig in 1732 when his daughter Margaret was baptised. Children, baptised in Robertson, who may be his include William (b.1715), Walter (b.1718), Margaret (b.1719), Agnes (b.1721) and Walter (b.1723). Janet (b.1744), Mary (b.1746), John (b.1748) and Robert (b.1750) may be the children of a later marriage or another Walter. Walter (18th C.) resident in Earlside in 1726 when his son Thomas was baptised in Cavers. Walter (18th C.) resident in Ormiston in 1730 and Deanbrae in 1733. Other children (baptised in Cavers) may have included Magdalen (b.1730), Margaret (b.1733), Mary (b.1735), Walter (b.1738), William (b.1740), John (b.1743), Adam (b.1745) and Alexander (b.1747). Walter (18th C.) resident in Todrig Mill in 1763 when his son Robert was baptised in Robertson Parish. Walter (18th/19th C.) wright in Hawick. He married Betty Wilson, who died in 1819. Their children included: Margaret (b.1770); Walter (b.1772); Jane (b.1772); Jane (again, b.1775); Margaret (again, b.1776); Betty (b.1777); an unnamed son (b.1779); Joan (b.1780); Mary (b.1783); and John (b.1783). He may have been witness to a baptism in 1783 for Francis Cairns. Dr. Walter (1785-1858) son of William, he was born in Castleton Parish. His father was one of the first feuars to build in Newcastleton. He was the first mathematics teacher at Edinburgh High School. He is described by Thomas Carlyle, and in a letter from his sister Jane Carlyle. Walter (1816/7-84) shepherd in Robertson Parish, born in Castleton. In 1871 he was shepherd at Broadlee. In 1840 he married Janet, daughter of John Muir (or Moore), who died at Branxholme Braes in 1888, aged 83. Their children included: Janet (1841/2-52), who died at Tushielaw; Robert (b.1843); John (1844/5-52), who also died at Tushielaw; and Walter (1847-1878), who died at Broadlee. In 1841 he was living at Deanburnhaugh with his wife and father-in-law and in 1851 and 1861 he was a shepherd at Crookwelcome in Ettrick Parish. The family are buried in Borthwick Waas. Walter (b.1830/1) carrier in Hawick. In 1861 he was living at 4 Orrock Place with his wife Mary and daughter Jessie. William (16th C.) tenant at Buccleuch, listed in the last testament of Sir Walter of Branxholme in 1574, along with Simon also in Buccleuch, as well as George in Bellendean. William (17th C.) tenant in ‘Carritridge’ (probably Carewoodrig). Along with William Elliot (also in ‘Carritridge’) and several other men from the upper Borthwick and Teviotdale, he was charged in 1685 with being a Covenanter. However, all the men took the ‘Test’ and promised not to frequent conventicles. He could be the William who witnessed a baptism for William Nixon in Hawick Parish in 1678. William (17th C.) herd in Boonraw, recorded when one of his children was baptised in Roberton Parish. He married Margaret Brown, and their children included: Bessie and Agnes (b.1679); Thomas (b.1680); and Margaret (b.1682). The witnesses in 1682 were Walter Scott and Walter Sanderson. He himself witnessed a baptism for Robert Storie in Roberton parish in 1686. Perhaps the same William leased part of the farm of Todshawhill from the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1693. Either he or a later William in Boorraw married Janet ‘Whirk’ and had a daughter Janet baptised in 1696; the witnesses were Robert Storie and Robert Ormiston. William (17th C.) resident of North Sinton in 1694 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll there. William (17th C.) resident of Easter Cavers who was listed in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. William (17th C.) listed as tenant at Brighouse in Castleton Parish on the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. William (17th C.) listed at ‘vaills’ (i.e. Valesburn) among ‘The poor in Hauick Par- ioch’ on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Newton on Sлитrig. In 1709 he married Janet Paterson in Kirkton Parish. William (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was recorded at Mabonlaw in 1718, 1721 and 1723. His children included: James (b.1718); Bessie (b.1721); and Marion (b.1723). He could be the ‘barn man’ who witnessed a baptism in Hawick in 1718 for John Dickson, workman in Branzholme. William (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Susan Lauder and their son William was baptised in 1726. The witnesses were Walter And Adam Scott. William (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, living at Stouslie in 1735 and 1737. In 1735 he witnessed a baptism for James Dryden, resident of Clarilaw. He married Mary Ormiston and their children included James (b.1735) and Robert (b.1737). The witnesses in 1735 were William Scott and Thomas Irvine and in 1737 were Thomas Scott and George Graham. William (18th C.) shepherd at Teindsie in 1740. He married Janet Scott and their children included Helen (b.1740). He is probably the William who married Janet Scott in Wilton Parish in 1730. William (b.1742) may also have been his child. The witnesses in 1740 were Walter Scott at Commonside and Thomas Elliot at Har- wood. William (18th C.) son of John, tenant in Allanhaugh Mill. He was admitted as a Burgess of Hawick in 1737. He could be the William born in Hawick Parish in 1716. William (18th C.) workman in Hawick Parish. He married Janet Turnbull and their daughter Janet was baptised in 1742. The witnesses were carrier James Wilson and shoemaker Thomas Scott. William (18th C.) merchant who purchased 23 High Street from Robert Scott in 1753, and is probably responsible for the ‘All Was Others …’ plaque. He could be the William, tobacconist, who was Cornet in 1748. He is probably the tobacconist William who witnessed a baptism for John in 1757. He could be the William who married Janet Blaikie in Wilton Parish in 1756 and had children (bap- tised in Hawick), including: William (b.1758); James (b.1761); and Janet (b.1764). The wit- nesses in 1761 were Hector Blaikie (surely re- lated to his wife) and John Knox and in 1764 were ‘Mr John Laurie student’ and Alexander Bunyan, officer (suggesting either that he was strongly involved with the Kirk, or that he could not find other witnesses). William (18th C.) recorded at Highchesters in 1763 when his daughter Ann was baptised in Roberton Parish. William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish, recorded at Langside in 1769. His children included Jean (b.1769), Nelly (b.1778), James (b.1784), Thomas (b.1784) and Margaret (b.1786). William (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Phil- hopeshiel in 1780 when his daughter Mary was baptised. William (18th C.) recorded as a car- rier in 1767 when he witnessed a baptism for shoe- maker Thomas Waugh. He could be the same as one of the other Williams. William (d.c.1795) part of a Hawick family popularly known as ‘Ern- pistols’. Originally a baker (or perhaps a tai- lor), he became bankrupt at the end of the 18th century and moved to London as a journeymen. It is said that when delivering bread there, a wealthy lady was struck by him, started up conversation, and offered to pay for a commis- sion for him in the Navy. He is also said to have returned to Hawick on one occasion, when people marvelled at how he looked in uniform, and to have died later at the Nile. It is said that he was uncle of William Nichol, who was ‘Willie Brewed a Peck o’ Maut’ in the song by Burns. It is possible he was the ‘Pistols’ whose daughter Manie died in Hawick in 1800. William ‘Sweet William’ (d.1798) Hawick man whose death is recorded in the Parish register. Note that a separate William, husband of Isabel Brown, was recorded dying in the same month. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isobel Brown in 1781 and she died in 1798. William (18th/19th C.) recorded as farmer at ‘Gibsnose’ (in Wilton) on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Probably the same William is listed at Pathhead when he paid the cart tax.
Nichol’s

in 1790 and 1791. He is probably the William, recorded at ‘Roadside’ in 1791, who married Janet Elliot and had children Janet (b.1787) and William (b.1791). William (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He was one of the first feuars to build in Newcastle. He married Mary Murray. Their children included: Jean (b.1782); Margaret (b.1784); Walter (b.1785), who became mathematics teacher at the Edinburgh High School; and Helen (b.1789). William (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1794 he married Betty ‘Weems’, also from Hawick. Their son John was baptised in 1795. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1796 he married Mina Laidlaw, also from Hawick. William (18th/19th C.) father of Provost John. He lived at 56 High Street. His premises are marked on Wood’s 1824 map. His wife Mary was listed as ‘Proprietor of houses’ in 1851. His other children included Elizabeth (who married printer James Dalgleish) and Wilhelmina (who married Bailie John Briggs). William (18th/19th C.) stocking manufacturer in Denholm recorded in Pigot’s 1837 directory. He was probably related to Robert, who was also listed as a stocking maker. William (1788/9–1838) weaver in Newcastle. He married Margaret Nichol, who died in 1872, aged 78. Their children included: John (1832/3–1915), who married Margaret Beattie. They are buried in Ettleton Cemetery. William (b.1790/1) farm overseer at Thorlieshope in 1841 and 1851. His wife was Janet and their children included James and Mary. William (b.1791/2) from Wilton Parish, he was farmer at Newlands in Minto Parish. He was recorded there in 1841, 1851 and 1861, farming 200 acres. His wife was Beatrice and their children included William, Janet, Jane, Beatrix, Christian, Adam, James, John, Francis, Robert and George. William (b.c.1795) farmer at Newlands in Minto Parish. He was recorded there in 1841. His wife was Beatrix and their children included William, Janet, Jane, Beatrix, Christian, Adam, James, John, Francis and Robert. He married Elizabeth (‘Bessie’) Davidson Nichol in 1873 and she died in 1898, aged 56. He secondly married Elizabeth Jane Scott, who died in 1955, aged 87. Their children included William (1874–8). They are buried at Ettleton. William Scott (1876–1932) oldest son of Provost John, he had early business training with Laing & Barrie, solicitors, then he worked in the offices of the Edinburgh Town Clerk. He also farmed at Acreknowe and Winnington Rig and later Girnwood in the Borthwick valley (which he inherited from his aunt Hannah Davies). He was secretary of the West Teviotdale Agricultural Society, involved in other agricultural activities and a Liberal in politics. He was councillor for Wilton Ward from 1923, and Provost 1928–31. He fought the changes brought about by the Local Government Bill of 1929, but then became Vice-Convener of Roxburghshire County Council. He was also a keen Common Riding supporter, being Chairman of the General and Ceremonial Committees. In 1923 he married Marjorie Morris of London. He resigned from public life for health reasons, and died in an Edinburgh nursing home, his ashes being buried at Girnwood (formerly spelled ‘Nicall’, ‘Niccol’, ‘Nicoll’, ‘Nichole’, ‘Nicol’, ‘Nicoll’, ‘Nicholl’, ‘Nickel’, ‘Nickell’, ‘Nickoll’, ‘Nycholl’, etc.).

nicknames (nik-nai^n) n., pl. familiar names, sometimes shortened forms, and often descriptive in some way. At early times the only name would be what we would recognise today as a nickname, and many of these would give rise to later Christian names and surnames. However, later nicknames became almost a necessity, since so many people had the same surnames and Christian names. In 1839 the Hawick minister remarked on the particular local habit of ‘distinguish[ing] individuals by other than the names that properly belong to them’, pointing out how the same names run in families, how the common usage of such nicknames sometimes meant that the real name might be unknown to their neighbours, and also pointing out that the names were used in the register of deaths. William Norman Kennedy described the local propensity for nicknames in 1863: ‘some of these names exhibit internal evidence of a personal peculiarity or defect, some arose from indulgence in a particular vice or the manifestation of a rare virtue, some from a social trait or a habitual phraseology...some were named after birds of evil omen, as well as forest animals of fierce and implacable nature. Some had an appellation descriptive of bodily agility or inferring a mental qualification...some being humorous, some sensual, and others indecent. On the other hand, many of these nicknames were titular, and took their rise from the place of abode of the party named'. There are nicknames recorded very early in the area around Hawick, including: 'Daft John' in 1491/2; 'Casy', 'Gaberlunzie', 'Gyde' and 'Tassy' in 1493; 'Blinnd John', 'Case', 'Corvus', 'Crackspear', 'King', 'Siders', 'Slitrig', 'Smith' and 'Young Rider' in 1494/5; 'Crackspear', 'the King' and 'Young Rider' in 1500; 'Bellit Robin', 'Blue John', 'the Lady', 'Nae Guid Priest', 'Taburner' and 'Waitschold' in 1502; 'the Prince' in 1510; 'Blackhead', 'Braid Christopher', 'Geordie Go Wi Him', 'Laird', 'Lang Roger', 'the Lawyer', 'Little Roger', 'Merchant', 'Nelly's Jock', 'Reid Andro', 'the Sheriff' and 'White Sark' in 1541; 'Helen's Hob' and 'Hob's John' in 1561; 'Elder Will' in 1561/2; 'Wait Aboot Um' and 'the Clerk' in 1562; 'Airchie Keen', 'Airchie's Will', 'Blue Tom', 'Clement's Hob', 'the Floor', 'Isoliel's Robin', 'Mirk Hob' and 'Vicar's Rob' in 1567; 'Achire Fyre the Braes', 'Achire's Hob', 'Achire's Will', 'Achire the Piat', 'Cock's Clem', 'the Cowdais', 'David Carlin', 'Elder Will the Tod', 'the Feid', 'Gavin's Jock', 'Gret Legs', 'Grey Will', 'Hob Mirk', 'Hob the Lady', 'John the Braid', 'the Laird's Jock', 'Mark's Andro', 'Martin's Gib', 'Meggat's Ade', 'Mungo's Arthur', 'Ninian's Geordie', 'Part's Dand', 'the Porter of Ewes Doors', 'Reid Hob Elliot', 'Reid Sim', 'Sweet Milk', 'Tom the Stour', 'Will's Andro' and 'Will Cock's Hob' in 1569; 'Philip's Jock' in 1571; 'Clement's Hob', 'Cock's Clem', 'Dobson', 'Jock's Tom', 'Kate's Adie', 'Kate's Jock', 'Law's Jock', 'Law's Richie', 'Law's Tom', 'Maget's Adie', 'Mark's Airchie', 'Mill', 'Mirk Hob', 'Posssets', 'the Pyet', and 'Vicar's Hob' in 1574; 'Achire Keen', 'the Cleg', 'Clement's Hob' 'Cowdais', 'Elder Will', 'Jock the Gyde', 'Mirk Hob', 'Reid Adie', 'Scott's Hob' and 'Vicar's Hob' in 1576; 'Hob's Jock', 'Jamie's Hob', 'Rowie's John', 'Sim's Airchie' and 'Scott's Hob's Gavin' in 1581; 'Wat's Jock' in 1581 and 1585; 'Fyre the Braes', 'Richie's Martin', 'Curst Hobbie', 'Half Lugs', 'Grey Willie', 'Scots Hobbie', 'Grey Will's Jamie', 'Hob's Hobbie' and 'the Clerk', all Liddesdale Elliot's in 1583; 'the Laird's Jock', 'the Laird's John', 'the Laird's Tom', 'the Laird's Rowie', 'Sim's Tom', 'the Lady's Andrew', 'Gaudie', 'Hector's Willie', 'Hector's Tom', 'the Gatwarde', 'Carhau', 'Tom's Abie', 'Eckie's Richie', 'Sandy's Christie', 'Sandy's Ringan', 'Sandy's Airchie', 'Sandy's Forge', 'Castle', 'Walls' and 'Skinabake', all Liddesdale Armstrongs in 1583; 'Reid Wullie' and 'the Tinkler' in 1585; 'the Tod' in 1586; 'the Tinkler', 'the Breadie', 'Little Peek' and 'the Lover' in 1587; 'Alexander's Airchie', 'Bessie's Wife's Richie', 'the Carlin', 'Fiddler's Hob', 'Fyre the Braes', 'Gib's Airchie', 'Jamie's Geordie', 'John o the Score', 'the Laird's Jock', 'Martin's Airchie', 'Nebless Clem', 'Reid Mertin', 'Robin's Will', 'Rowie's Tom', 'Scot's Hob's Jock', 'Sim's Tom', 'Wilcox' and 'Will's Airchie' in 1587/8; 'Adie's John', 'Airchie's Jamie', 'Bangtaill', 'Bullie', 'the Bungle', 'the Carlin', 'the Child', 'the Clash', 'Cowfowl', 'Cowshaws', 'Cuddie's Davie', 'Cull the Spade', 'Great Legs', 'Half Lug', 'Hector's Ringan', 'Henheild', 'Hob's Davie', 'Hob the Laird', 'Ill-droofed Geordie', 'Ill-willed Will', 'John o the Score', 'Kate's Adam', 'Lang John', 'Martin's Airchie', 'Martin's Clemie', 'Martin's Dand', 'Martin's Gib', 'the Pleg', 'Quintin's Airchie', 'Reid Neb', 'Ringan's Will', 'Sim's Tom', 'the Tailor', 'Will the Lad' and 'Will's Airchie' in 1590; 'Buggerback', 'the Clash', 'Dog-pintle', 'Gledd Larrinston', 'Ill-droofed Geordie', 'Muckie Willie' and 'the Troche' in 1595; Ekie 'Braid Belt', 'Braid Sword', 'Kinnmont Willie', 'Sim's Airchie' and 'Tod' in 1596; 'Burnt Hand' and 'White Lips' in 1597; 'Allie's Geordie', 'Auld Gib', 'Bide Him Jock', 'Blackheid', 'Cauldfit', 'Dand's Gib', 'Eckie's Ninian', 'Hauflug', 'Heidheid', 'Hob's Ringan', 'Jock's John', 'Laurie's Jock's Willie', 'Michael's Tom', 'the Murt', 'Murtie', 'Powdie', 'Gled Will', 'Sim's Airchie', 'Sim's Hob', 'Tator', 'Workman's Andro' and 'Wower's Andro' in 1605; 'Lang Sandie' in 1606; 'Wat's Jock' and 'Jock's Wattie' in 1610; 'Gleyit Archie', 'the Murt' and 'the Lord' in 1611; 'Hob the Lonkie', 'Jock the Deacon', 'Marion's Hob', 'Nimble' and 'Step Stately' in 1612; 'Marion's Geordie', 'Jock the Sucker' and 'Bonnie Johnnie' in 1616; 'the Cumnin Craftsman' and 'Geordie's Hobie' in 1621; 'Paten's Willie', 'Bauld Jock', 'Archie's Geordie' and 'Marion's Hob' in 1622; 'the Corbie' and 'the Wran' in 1627; 'Nurse' being perhaps the first female example in 1641; 'Gray' in 1642; 'Clerk' in 1643; 'Sowtail' in 1644; 'Lord Olifer' in 1651; 'Clack' in 1663; 'Reid Wat' in 1673; 'Pedee' in 1679; 'Soldier', 'Laird', 'Greina', 'Herd', 'Pope

He married Janet Aitken and their daughter Janet was baptised in 1741, with witnesses dyker William Elliot and carrier William Aitken. His wife may be the daughter of William Aitken, baptised in 1708. Perhaps the same James ‘Nimmo’ also married Helen Hardie and had a son Andrew (b.1759).

Nimrod (nim-rod) n. nickname in use around the early 19th century. It was also the name of the black stallion ridden by the Laird of Langlands for about 25 years in the 18th century, especially during his ceremonial marking of the boundary between Langlands estate and the Burgh of Hawick.

nine-pins ( nin-pin) n., arch. former name for skittles, a game played by some people in Hawick in the 18th and early 19th centuries.
the Ninestane Rig (\textit{thu-ni\textasciitilde{}n-st\textasciitilde{}n-ri\textasciitilde{}g}) \textit{n.} hill off the Newcastleton road, near Whitropefoot, site of a circle of standing stones. The circle is about 290 yards south of the summit. There are nine stones, two of which are large (about 6 feet and 4 feet, respectively) while the others are broken into stumps. The layout is slightly oval, measuring 23 feet by 21 feet. It is believed to be early Bronze Age. It was possibly the location for the ballad ‘Barthram’s Dirge’ and is also by tradition where Lord Soulis was boiled alive in lead. On the south side of the ridge, half a mile from the stone circle, are the remains of a settlement, composed of 2 enclosures. Note there is also a ‘Nine Stane Rig’ in the Lammermuirs – ‘They shot him dead at the Nine-Stane Rig, Beside the Headless Cross, And they left him lying in his blood, Upon the moor and moss’ [T], ‘They bore him down with lances bright, But never a wound or scar had he; With hempen bands they bound him tight, Both hands and feet on the Nine-stane lee’ [JL], ‘The Nine-stanes, his kimmers, Can snirk at his game, But Cauldcleuch and Gritmuir Think black-burnan shame’ [DH] (it is also a ‘Nine Stane Rig’ in the Lammermuirs {\textit{n.}} name for the field on Hawick Common to the right of the road near the top of the Ninestane Rig). There are several places named ‘Nine Stones’ elsewhere in Scotland and England).

the \textit{95 Bus} (\textit{thu-ni\textasciitilde{}n-e\textasciitilde{}e-fl\textasciitilde{}v-bus}) \textit{n.} the number of the Edinburgh to Carlisle bus service, which provides Hawick’s main public transport link with nearby cities. The number may have been chosen because it is approximately the distance between the 2 cities. The service has more recently been called the ‘X95’.

Nine-well Park (n\textit{\textasciitilde{}n-wel-pawrk}) \textit{n.} field south of the Stonedge farmhouse in the Rule valley. It was so-called because it contains nine separate springs, which were said to never fail.

Ninian Hawick (nin-ee-in-hoik) \textit{n.} musical group based in Minneapolis, presumably near the township of Hawick, featuring John Crozier and friends. They have released one EP titled ‘Steep Steps’, in 1998, including the single ‘Scottish Rite Temple Stomp’ (apparently pronounced almost like it looks, ‘hoik’).

Nisbet (niz-bi’) n. small town off the A698 about 3 miles north-east of Jedburgh, and also a former station on the Jedburgh Railway of the Kelso Branch of the North British Railway. Here the Scots beat the English in a battle of 1355. Hertford’s men razed ‘Nether Nesebett’ and ‘Over Nesbet’ in 1545. There is little sign of the former parish church. Samuel Rutherford, Professor of Divinity was born here in 1600 (also written ‘Nes-bit’ and other variants; the origin of the name is probably from Middle English ‘nesebit’, meaning ‘the nose bit’, after the local topography; it first occurs about 1150 as ‘Nesbet’; note that Nisbet House is near Duns).

Nisbet (niz-bi’) n. Henry (b.1833) son of William and Margaret Young. He was listed as a tailor when he joined the Royal Artillery in 1852. He became a Chelsea Pensioner in 1873. James (1785–1854) religious publisher of London, who was father-in-law of Rev. W.A. Wallace. He was a native of Kelso, and one of the principal subscribers to the erection of Kelso North Church. His publishing company, James Nisbet & Co. published most of the books of R.M. Ballantyne, who was related to the Ballantynes of Kelso. He gave 2 flagons, 8 communion cups, 4 plates and a baptismal basin to the new Free Kirk in Hawick. The cups were in continual use until 1924 and the basin was later set in a carved font. John of Nisbetfield (17th/18th C.) lawyer, who was married to Agnes Riddell, and thus assumed the lands of Bewlie. He and John Riddell of Muselee were assigned a new loft in Lillieslea Kirn in 1707. He and his wife gave Bewlie (or perhaps half of it) to Walter Scott of Whitfield in 1713, since he had married their only daughter Agnes. Half of Bewlie was leased by him to Thomas Riddell in 1716. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Cogsmill in Kirkton Parish. His children included Ann (b.1721), Robert (b.1723), Janet (b.1726) and James (b.1729). Thomas (17th/18th C.) herd in Headshaw. He married Agnes Dalgleish and their children, baptised in Kirk in 1707. He was at Berryfell in 1733 when he married Beatrix Scott. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1791 he married Elizabeth Sharp, who was also from Hawick Parish. William (b.c.1795) resident of Hawick Parish, originally from Crailing. He married Elizabeth Young and their children included: Elizabeth (b.1817); Helen (b.1819); Christian (or Catherine, b.1821); William (b.1823); Robert (b.1824); Walter (b.1827); Beatrix (b.1829); Richard (b.1831); Henry (b.1833); James (b.1835); and Margaret (b.1837). He is probably the William who was one of the 6 elders of Hawick Parish who left in 1843 to form Hawick Free Kirk. He could be the same William who was one of the men in the vanguard of the Hawick band at the Carthaugh Baa in 1815, and whose recollections formed part of Robert Murray’s 1863 article on James Hogg.

Walter (1906/7–2010) born in Hawick, he served in the K.O.S.B. during WWII and then became a banker. He moved to Lanark in 1970, reorganising that town’s banks, and becoming a councillor after retirement. He was also involved in developing New Lanark. William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Berryfell in 1733 when he married Beatrix Scott. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1791 he married Elizabeth Sharp, who was also from Hawick Parish. (also spelled ‘naethin’ and other variants; cf. ni-

Nitshiel Sike (ni-shel-sik) n. stream on the north side of the Borthwick valley, running past the cottage at Outerside in a roughly eastern direction. Outerside Rig is the hill between this stream and the Hoscoat Burn. About half-way between Outerside and the Borthwick it has been suggested that a possible bridge mound could be related to the Roman road suggested to pass up the Borthwick valley.

the Nitton (thu-ni-in) n. Newton, a farm at the Heights, just north of Hawick. It may have belonged to ‘Robert Grundi de Neuton’ in the late 13th century and was later referred to as ‘Chamberlain Newton’. The original name came from it being granted to Walter de Berkeley, Chamberlain to William the Lion in the late 12th century.
The lands were part of Hassendean Parish until that was suppressed in 1690. It was still listed as ‘Newton, or Chamberlain Newton’ in 1788 and 1811. There have been Scotts at the farm for many generations (sometimes spelled ‘Ni’ton’ and other variants; the name first occurs as ‘Cham-berlayne neuteon’ in 1259, as ‘Neuton’ in the late 13th century, and commonly as ‘Chamberlain Newton’ until the 17th century).

Nitton Muir (ni-in-mewr) n. former farmstead near Newton, precise location uncertain.
The Hume family were living there in 1841. It was abandoned around the 1850s.

Niven (ni-vin) n. George (b.1792/3) from Lib-erton, he was a tanner in Hawick. He was living at about 2 Backdangate in 1841, but in 1851 was with his nephew Walter Scott in Langholm.
He was probably the first person in Hawick to receive a full baptism according to the new evangelical principles of what would become the Baptist Kirk. The baptism was performed by Rev. James Blair in the mill lade off Slitrig Crescent in 1844.
niver

His wife was Margaret and their children included Robert and William. Thomas (18th/19th C.) carter in Byreholm in Castleton Parish. He was listed among heads of households in 1835.

niver see nivver

Nivet (ni-vi') n. Henry (19th C.) married Helen Dryden in 1852. Their children (baptised in Hawick Parish) included: Helen (b.1855); Elizabeth (b.1869); and George (b.1871). He could be the ostler from Hawick who was living in Selkirk in 1851. Henry ‘Harry’, M.B.E. (?— ) born in Hawick, he worked in the knitwear industry, then at the Henderson Tech., becoming Principal in 1975 and was awarded the M.B.E. in 1979. He was also involved with the Archæological Society, Harriers, Camera Club and other local societies (also written ‘Evitt’).

Nivison (ni-vee-sin) n. Alexander (18th C.) recorded in 1765 when he witnessed a baptism for Adam Leyden in Hawick. Rev. Alexander (1786–1861) 3rd son of Abraham, minister of Middlebie, he was educated at Edinburgh University and licensed by the Presbytery of Dalkeith in 1811. He became for a time a teacher of oriental languages, and had the opportunity to become a Chaplain in Calcutta, but preferred to stay at home, and so switched positions with James Brown. Thus he was presented to Roberton Parish in mid-1825 and ordained there in 1826. He was recorded at the Manse on the 1841 census, when his brothers Richard and William (both also ministers) were staying with him. He demitted in 1844, when he decided to give up being a minister, and he died in Edinburgh. He married Christina Thomson (d.1849) of Montrose and their children were: Elizabeth Broun (1826—97 of Edinburgh); David Thomson (1834—67), who died in Calcutta; Christina (1835—51); and Euphemia Duncan (1838—1925), married William Stuart Sutherland of Edinburgh. He wrote a description of the Parish for the ‘New Statistical Account’ in 1834. John (18th C.) resident at Chapelhill in 1743 and 1752 when his children were baptised in Roberton Parish. His name appears to be written ‘Nievison’ in 1743. His children included: Thomas (b.1743); Bessie (b.1746); and John (b.1752). Thomas (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1690 he witnessed a baptism for Helen (who was surely related to him) and James Murray. Probably the same Thomas was herd in Langhope in 1697 when he married Bessie Murray, who was also from Ashkirk Parish. Their children included Janet (b.1702), John (b.1709) and William (b.1715). William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Earlside in 1727. His children included Agnes (b.1719) and John (b.1727) (also written ‘Nevison’, ‘Nevison’ and ‘Nievison’).

nivver (ni-vur) adv. never – ‘he’ll nivver change’, ‘it’s nivver ower late’, ‘made report this day that they nivir trysted with the like emergence before them tabled . . . ’ [PR1714], ‘If ye tak it tae hert then ye’ll nivver gang wrang’ [WAP], ‘This is nae place for a Border man to gaun aboot. Niver a brae to pech up ower Niver a view’ [DH], ‘It niver happened dinnae fear ye, Petition signed by ilka Teri’ [MB], also used ironically – ‘ee’re never ready at last, ir ee?’, ‘never! A deh believe eet’, used emphatically, not at all – ‘Never sic a thing in oor heeds’, he replied’ [BCM1880] (note pronunciation; also spelled ‘niver’ and ‘never’ as in English).

nixin (niks-in) n., arch. a game in which ginger-bread cakes are arranged on pieces of wood and the player pays to throw a stick, keeping any cakes that he knocks down (noted by J. Jamieson).

Nixon (nik-sin) n. Adam (16th C.) probably name of ‘Eddy of Larestonburne’, who is listed along with John in 1590. The and other Nixons were named in a complaint them by the tenant of Birdoswald about a raid made on his livestock in 1588. Agnes (18th C.) recorded in a disposition given in 1767 as being one of the cottars of Hawick Shiel who were responsible for making ‘bakes’ on the Common, in violation of the orders of the Hawick Town Council. Alexander (15th/16th C.) listed as being ‘in the Brighous’ in 1516 when a number of Nixons and other men of Liddesdale received remisison for their crimes. He may have been related to Henry in Larriston, William in Ficht and William in Steel. Alexander (16th C.) recorded as one of the tenants of Brighouse, along with 2 Williams, on the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale. He could be the same man as Alexander ‘of Stelle’ who is recorded (right after William, younger of Brighouse) on a 1544 list of Scotsmen who gave their support to the English King. Alexander (16th C.) recorded at Larriston in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was listed right after Quentin ‘of Lawrellstane’, and was probably also related to George, Jeffrey, John and Hector.
who were also listed in the same place. Alexander (16th/17th C.) recorded as ‘Ekkie Nixsoun in Dyk’ in 1611, among Liddesdale men who failed to appear at court in Jedburgh. Andrew ‘Dand’ (16th C.) mentioned in an English letter of 1542 as ‘Dond Nyxson, Scottes man afores to Edinbourgh’ from whom news came of events in Scotland. It is unclear how he was related to other Nixons. Andrew ‘Dand’ (16th C.) recorded in 1581 as ‘Dand Nixson of Kewly’. He is listed along with many Armstrongs and Elliots of Liddesdale who complained to the Privy Council about crimes committed by the Scotts and their allies. His lands were probably those of Killoley, near Dinlabyre, and he was likely related to Hob, who was recorded being from there in 1590. Andrew ‘Dandy’ (16th C.) recorded as ‘Dande Nixon’ at Brighouse, right after Ringan in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was probably related to William, William, younger and George, who were also listed at Brighouse in 1544. Archibald (15th C.) recorded in the proceedings for the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh in 1494/5. Hector Lauder, brother of the Laird of Todrig, has remission for several crimes, including bringing in him and Robert (suggesting they were closely related) to take part in raids, perhaps on Whittlawhouse. Archibald ‘Aircie’ (16th C.) recorded at the Steele in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He may be related to other Nixons at the Steele in 1544, Barth, Archie, Thomas and Alexander. He may be the ‘Arschie Nixon’ who, along with Ninian Armstrong, had a bond in 1548 to enter 2 Fosters as prisoners at Ferniehirst. Archibald ‘Aircie’ of the Steele (16th C.) signed the bond of assurance with the English Wardens in 1584, his name appearing along with Harry of the Steele and Edward of Dinlabyre. His name is recorded as ‘Arche Nickson of the Steill’. Archibald ‘Cow-fowl’ (16th C.) recorded as ‘Arche Nixon Cow-fowl’ in 1590 when, along with Elliots of the Steele and others, he was accused of stealing cattle and horses from England. He was also named in a second accusation of 1590 along with William Elliot of Heuchhouse, Clement Nixon ‘Clash’ and others. Also in 1590 he was listed along with several Elliots and Shiels, who in 1590 were accused of attacking the farm of Dotland a couple of years earlier. Additionally he was named in 1590 along with Clement ‘the Clash’, as well as Elliots, Shiels and others who were accused by the tenants of Woodhall of stealing from them. He could be the ‘Arche Nickson’ recorded in 1590, accused of being on a raid of Elliots, Nixons and others who raided into England in 1588. He was recorded in 1595 when the Lord of Gilsland complained about raids into England; he is listed there as ‘Arch Nixson alias Cowfowle’, but it is unclear what his nickname might have meant. John of Larristonburn and Clement ‘the Clash’ are also listed and hence perhaps related. It is possible that he is the same man as Archie of the Steele. Archibald (17th C.) resident at Little Park in Castle- ton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. Bartholomew (16th C.) listed as one of the tenants of the lands of ‘Cleirlandis, Robsteid, Thomscotsteid, Cranswat, Gusbank, Hurklebuss’ in the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale. He may be the same Bartholomew who was tenant of ‘Stellis within the Dyk’, listed first, along with Thomas and Jeffrey. He may also be the same Bartholomew who was tenant of ‘Littlestell’ in the 1541 rental roll. He was ‘Barte Nixon of Stelle’ in 1544 when listed among Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII, and was probably related to the other Nixons listed there, namely Archie, Thomas and Alexander. ‘Wille Nixon Barte son’, also listed in 1544 may have been his son. Clement ‘Clem’ (16th C.) recorded as ‘Clemme Nixsoun in the Esscheis’ in the register of the Privy Council in 1581. He was a servant and dependant of Robert Elliot of Redheugh, and had been taken prisoner by Lance Armstrong of Whithaugh, because Elliot had refused to make him answerable to the Warden for various crimes. In 1581/2 he was ‘Clemme Nixsoun, callit of the Hye Asches’ when accused of leading a band who stole 6 cows from a farm at Huntly; his son John was also listed, and he is said to have sold one cow to a merchant from Jedburgh called Milligan, who confessed, and they were declared rebels. It is unclear where ‘the Asches’ was. Perhaps the same ‘Clemey’ was recorded among Nixons and Ellits complained about by the English Warden regarding a raid in 1588. Clement ‘the Clash’ (16th/17th C.) servant of William Elliot of Larriston. In 1590 he was named along with Archibald ‘Cow-fowle’, as well as Elliots, Shiels and others, of stealing from the tenants of Woodhall; his nickname is recorded there as ‘Cleshe’. He was further accused in 1590 among Elliots and others said to have stolen from the ‘Hewrde’ family, maiming and taking prisoner Christopher ‘of the Whithall’; he is there ‘Clemye Nixon the Clashe’. Also in 1590 he was ‘Clemy Nixon the Clashe’ on a list of Elliots, Croziers, Nixons and others accused of rieving from William Robson of ‘Allerweshe’.
In 1595 he was among Nixons and Elliots complained about by the Lord of Gilsland for a raid on ‘Haslegyll’; he is there recorded as ‘Clemett Nyxson alias the Clashe’. John, ‘Gleed Larriston’ was also listed as a servant of the Laird of Larriston, and so they may have been related. In 1595 he was also complained about for two other raids, along with Archie ‘alias Cowfowle’, John of Larristonburn, Jenkin and others. There is a further record of a complaint by the English against ‘Clemmy the clashe’ in 1597. His nickname may have referred to being a gossip. Clement ‘Clem the Croon’ (16th C.) listed among Border chiefs by Monipennie in his compilation published about 1594 (but compiled earlier). His name is given as ‘Clene Nikson, called the Crune’ and in 1580 as ‘Clemmme of the Crune’. His son Quentin is recorded in the 1570s and 1580s. Edward (16th C.) listed along with George as tenant of ‘the Dyke’ in Liddesdale in 1541. Both he and George are also recorded on a list of Nixons, Olivers, Croziers and others, who gave their support to the English Crown in 1544. Edward of Dinlabyre (17th C.) listed in 1579/80 among men accused of raiding into England. He is recorded as ‘Eduarde Nicsoun, Laird of Dunlywyir’, with his caution being John Carmichael, younger of that Ilk. In 1584 he signed the bond of assurance with the English Wardens, his name appearing along with Harry and Airchie of the Steele. Fergus (16th C.) recorded at the Dykes in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. His name is given as ‘Fargaris Willie of Kirkleheade’ is named among men accused of rieving in 1592 (with no surname listed): given the rareness of the name, this could be his son. Probably the same ‘Fergus Nyxson’ was listed along with ‘Hob’ and others in 1541, on an accusation of raiding Gilsland and killing Englishman Dandy Wigholm. Gavin (16th/17th C.) listed among men declared as fugitives for not appearing at a court in Hawick in 1605. He was also cited for not appearing at another court in Peebles later in 1605. He was ‘in Burnefute’, which was probably the place in Eskdale. Gavin (17th C.) tenant in Graystanehaugh in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Geoffrey (16th C.) recorded among many men from Liddesdale who did not appear at the Justice-aiire in 1494/5. His name was listed as ‘gofredi nyksun’, and John was right before him. George (16th C.) recorded first on a list of Nixon tenants of Killoley on the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale. The others were John, Clement and Andrew, who may have been related. He could be the same man as ‘Georg Nyxon of Larestane’ listed first among Nixon in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. George (16th C.) listed along with Edward as tenant of ‘the Dyke’ in Liddesdale in 1541. He may be the same as the tenant of the lands of Killoley. Both he and Edward are also recorded in 1544, swearing allegiance to Henry VIII. George (16th C.) recorded at Brighouse in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was probably related to William, William, younger and Ringan and Dandy, who were also listed at Brighouse in 1544. George ‘Geordie’ (16th C.) recorded among Nixons and Elliots who were complained about by the English Warden in 1590 regarding a raid in 1588. His son Henry was also listed. He could be the ‘Geordie Nixon of the Larestoune burne’ listed along with ‘Hob’ of Killoley, Hob’s brother Jenkin, John (servant to Martin Elliot), as well as Croziers and Shiels accused in 1590 of stealing from the tenants of ‘Lynubrigges’. Given this list, it seems unlikely he is the same man as ‘Ill-drooned Geordie’, father of Hob and Jenkin. George ‘Ill-drooned Geordie’ (16th C.) recorded at Killoley in 1588 when there was a complaint by Englishmen about a raid made on his livestock. His son ‘Jenkin’ is also listed; and since Jenkin was brother of ‘Hob’, then he was also father of Robert of Killoley. He is probably descended from the George associated with Killoley in the 1540s. He is recorded in 1590 among a group of Elliots and others accused of taking livestock and goods from Over Warden in England. He is the ‘yll drowned Georde’ and ‘halfe drowned Geord’ recorded in 1595 along with Jenkin and other Nixons, Elliots and others when there were complaints made about raids into England. He may be the George who signed a bond written by Sir John Forster to try to end family feuds on the Border in 1595/6. It is unclear what his nickname meant. Hector (16th C.) listed as ‘Ec-tor’ of ‘Lawrellstane’ (probably Larriston) in 1544 when his son John swore allegiance to the English King. Several other men were also listed at Larriston, and so probably related, including George, Quentin and Jeffrey. Henry (15th/16th C.) recorded as ‘Henry Nicsoun in Larishop’ in a document of 1500 listing men who gave pledges to Patrick, Earl of Bothwell. This may have been Lairhope near Teviothead. Golfrid and Edward are also listed there, so they may be his brothers or sons. Perhaps the same Henry, son of
Nixon

John, is also recorded among a large list of men of Liddesdale who did not appear at the Justice- aire in 1494/5. Henry ‘Crackspear’ (15th/16th C.) recorded among many men from Liddesdale who did not appear at the Justice- aire in 1494/5. There he is listed as ‘henrici nykson craksper’. He is also listed among a large number of men from Liddesdale and elsewhere who pledged good behaviour to Patrick, Earl of Bothwell in 1500; he is recorded as ‘Henry Nicsoun, Crakspere’, separate from Henry ‘in Larishop’. He may be the same ‘Henry Niksone’ and ‘Nixsone’ listed in 1510 in the Register of the Privy Seal among men associated with Robert Elliot of Redheugh, required to come before the King to promise to keep order, and then obtaining a respite for their crimes. William ‘Nixson’ is also listed there. Henry (15th/16th C.) named in a respite of 1515/6 along with Robert Elliot of Redheugh, William Elliot of Larriston, James Forster in Greenhaugh, Adam Crozier and others. He is also recorded as ‘in Larestanys’ in 1516 when he had a respite from the Privy Council for all of his crimes; also listed were several other men, including William ‘in Flych’ and William ‘in Stele’, another Henry and Alexander ‘in the Brighous’. The respite applied to all other Nixons, except Robert and William, ‘brother sister sound to Johne Elwald’. It is likely that most of these men were closely related. He could be the same as one of the other contemporary Henrys. Henry (16th C.) listed in the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale, along with William, as tenant of ‘Kylsfurd’ (i.e. Killford). This William could be ‘Grey Wil of the Kyll Fyrd’ who is recorded in 1563, suggesting that he might be William’s father. Another Henry (or the same one) is listed as tenant of Stripshelden, along with David. Henry ‘Harry’ of Howden (16th C.) recorded in the 1581 Register of the Privy Seal. His name appears with several Armstrongs and Elliots of Liddesdale who were accusing the Scotts of various crimes. He could be the same as one of the other contemporary Henrys. He is probably related to the earlier William of Howden. Henry (16th C.) recorded in 1584 as ‘Herrie Nixson’ who was ‘of the Steill’, along with Archie. The pair signed an assurance with the English Wardens, along with Edward of Dinalbye, to whom they were presumably related. Henry ‘George’s Harry’ (16th C.) listed as one of 3 Nixons among the Border chiefs compiled by Monipennie sometime before 1594. He is recorded as ‘Georgis Harie Nikson’. Probably the same ‘Henrie Nickson sonne to Geordy’ was recorded among Nixons and Elliots complained about by the English Wardens in 1590 regarding a raid in 1588; he is there ‘Henrie Nickson sonne to Geordy’. He may be the Henry who signed a bond written by Sir John Forster to try to end family feuds on the Border in 1595/6. Henry (16th C.) recorded in 1597 when there was a complaint against him, along with Robert Elliot of Thorlreshope, Hob Armstrong and Alexander Armstrong, for a raid on ‘Ellinghamerigge’ in England. He was referred to as being ‘of Killforde’, but Scott of Buccleuch argued ‘that there is not such a persone’ (although there was a man of that name at Kilford 5 decades earlier). He may have got off for giving the wrong name or address! Jeffrey (16th C.) tenant of ‘Stellis’, along with Bartholomew and Thomas, on the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale. He is listed in 1544 as ‘Jeffaray’, brother of Thomas ‘of Stell’, on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. Jeffrey (16th C.) recorded at ‘Lawrellstedde’ (probably Larriston) in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was probably related to George, Alexander, Quentin, John and Hector, who were also listed at Larriston. Jenkin (16th C.) recorded in 1544 on a list of Nixons, Olivers, Croziers and others, who gave assurances to the English King. He was recorded as ‘Jenkyne Nixson of Stanesheld’ (i.e. Staneshiel) and was probably related to John, who was also listed in the same place. He may be the English fugitive Jenkin recorded being reset by ‘Reid’ Simon Armstrong. Jenkin (16th C.) son of George of Killoley and brother of Robert. He is mentioned in a complaint in 1590 about a raid into England made by Nixons and Elliots in 1588. Probably the same ‘Ginkyne’ was accused in 1590 (along with Elliots and Shiels) of stealing from Roland Walker. In 1590 he was listed along with his brother ‘Hob’ of Killoley along with other Nixons, Croziers and Shiels, accused of stealing from the Wilkinsons of ‘Lyn brigges’. He is recorded being ‘of Kelleley’ and was presumably related to the earlier Nixons from there. The other Nixons named in 1590 were his brother Hob and Geordie of Larriston Burn. He is probably the Jenkin recorded in 1590 on a list of Elliots, Croziers, Nixons and others accused of riev- ing from William Robson of ‘Allerweshe’. Probably the same ‘Jenken Nyckson son to George’ was listed in 1595 among Nixsons, Elliots and others complained about for raids into England. In one raid he is listed along with George ‘yll drowned Georde’, who may have been related and in another he and John are both ‘of Lareston’. John
Nixon

(15th C.) recorded in 1494/5 among Liddesdale men who failed to appear at the Justice-aire in 1494/5. Perhaps the same John’s son Henry was also listed. John (16th C.) son of Matthew, ‘callid ‘no good clarke’’. He was listed in 1541 among Scotsmen accused of burning the corn of William Carnaby at Halton. He may be the same as one of the other Johns. John (16th C.) tenant of ‘Hesseldale’ according to the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale. Perhaps the same John was joint tenant of Heuchhouseshill in 1541. John (16th C.) recorded at Killoley in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He is listed as ‘John Nyxson of Kellel’, and was probably related to William, who is also recorded at the same place. He is probably the John recorded at Killoley in a rental roll of 1541. John (16th C.) recorded at Flicht in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was probably related to Matthew and ‘Perswill’, who were also there in 1544. John (16th C.) resident at ‘Stanesheldes’ (i.e. Staneshiel) recorded in 1544 on a list of Nixons, Oliviers, Croziers and others, who gave assurances to the English King. He was probably related to Jenkin, who was also listed in the same place. John (16th C.) recorded in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was listed as being ‘of Coulegayte’, which could have been Claygate. John (16th C.) listed in a 1544 bond of support for the English King, signed by Nixons, Oliviers, Croziers and others. His name is given as ‘John Nixson of Lawrellstanes, Ector sone’, and hence presumably Hector was his father. John (16th C.) listed among those implicated in the ambush of Scots and Gledstains at Whitaugh in 1580. His name is given as ‘Johnne Nixson, callit Halyden’, although the meaning of the nickname is unclear. He must have been a supporter of Lancie Armstrong of Jedburgh. John (16th C.) son of Clem ‘callit of the Hye Asches’. In 1581/2 the pair were among men accused of stealing cattle from a farm at Huntly; he was declared a rebel after not appearing to answer the charge. He is recorded as ‘laird of the High eshes’ and also ‘of the Higheshies’ in 1595, listed along with his brother (who is unnamed) among men of Liddesdale and upper Teviotdale accused of raids into England. He is probably the John ‘of Eshes’ who was demanded by the English Commissioners as one of the hostages to be taken as a pledge for other Liddesdale men in 1597. He was further ‘of the Eshes’ in 1597 among men for whom the English Warden demanded pledges. John (16th C.) recorded being of Kilford in 1590 when there was a complaint that he and some Elliots had stolen in ‘playne dayelight, thir hirdes’ and 24 head of cattle from people on the English side in 1588. He may be the John recorded in 1590 among Elliots of the Steele, the Park, Binks, and others, accused of a raid into England. John of Larriston Burn (16th C.) recorded as being ‘of Larestoun’ in Monipennie’s list of Border chiefs published around 1594 (but probably compiled several years earlier). He was recorded as ‘John Nyckson of Lareston burne’ as a raider into England in 1589/90. He and ‘Eddy of Larestonburne’ are also recorded in 1590 when there was a complaint against them by the tenant of Birdoswald about a raid made on his livestock in 1588. He was ‘of Lareston’ in 1590 among a group of Elliots and others accused of taking livestock and goods from Over Warden in England. In 1595 he was ‘alias Larestoneburne, guyde and purpose maker’ and ‘of Lareston bre’ when complained about by the Lord of Gilsland regarding 2 raids into England. He could be the John ‘in Larestoun’ who was convicted and executed in Jedburgh in 1611. John ‘Gleed Larriston’ (16th/17th C.) servant of William Elliot of Larriston. His nickname is recorded as ‘gleed Lareston’. In 1595 he was among Nixons and Elliots complained about by the Lord of Gilsland for a raid on ‘Haslegyll’. Clement ‘the Clash’ was also a servant of the Laird of Larriston, and so they may have been related; the pair were each accused of raids on England in 1597. He may also be the John accused of 2 further raids in 1595, one with ‘yll drowned Georde’ and another with Jenkin of Larriston. He may have been the same as one of the nearly contemporary Johns associated with Larriston. His nickname presumably referred to a squint. John (16th/17th C.) tenant in Riccarton. In 1611 John Moscrop, Burgess of Jedburgh, acted as cautioner for him in Jedburgh Court. John (16th/17th C.) tenant at Burnmouth. In 1624 Adie and Will Usher were convicted of stealing his sheep. John (16th/17th C.) recorded as tenant in Lawshill in 1623. Rowie Foster stole sheep from ‘Callshiels’ owned by him and Gavin Elliot ‘callit of ye Schawis’. John (17th C.) tenant at Larriston Rig in Castleton Parish on the Hearth Tax records of 1694. Bailie John (c.1757–1812) Bailie and manufacturer. He came to Hawick in 1774, being an apprentice with William Irvine, linen draper. In 1779 he was recorded as Irvine’s apprentice when the pair witnessed a baptism in Cavers Parish. He was one of the first large-scale hosiery employers, taking over from John Hardie around 1780. The original partnership was with William Irvine, George Noble and Thomas Sanson, but Sanson left the same year, and a few years later he was the sole partner. He paid the Shop Tax in Hawick in 1785. In 1786 it is recorded that he was running 8 frames, and started manufacturing ribbed stockings, and in 1795 he already had 12 frames. The firm spun the yarn as well as knitting the hosiery. His premises were on the High Street, where the Victoria Hotel was later built; he lived on the top flat, with the spinning jennies and warehouse below. Around 1793, along with Bailie Simpson, he presented the bible that used to sit at the end of the Magistrates’ row in St. Mary’s Kirk (and moved to the Old Parish). He is probably the merchant of that name who subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). He was recorded as a manufacturer in Hawick on the 1790–91 and 1794 Horse Tax Rolls. He paid the dog tax in 1797. Around 1799 he was one of the locals contributing money for the war with France. He was involved in the years 1799–1803 with a court case against merchant Walter Lunn, who was declared bankrupt. He started the early construction phase of what became Lynnwood Mills around 1803 or 1804, and there carding and spinning were carried out. In 1811 he was an Ensign in the 1st Regiment Roxburghshire Militia. He married Mary, daughter of William Grieve tenant of Southfield, in Hawick in 1782. Their children included: John (b.1783); Mary (1784–88); William (1785–1871), who succeeded to the hosiery firm; Joseph (1790–1842); and an unnamed daughter. The witnesses in 1783 and 1784 were Bailie John Elliot and Robert Grieve (perhaps his wife’s brother). He is probably the John whose eldest daughter Agnes married Robert Jardine in Hawick in 1811. John (18th/19th C.) probably eldest son of manufacturer John. He was listed in London when he subscribed for 2 copies of Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. Joseph (1790–1842) younger son of manufacturer John. He was a partner with his brother William. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. In 1841 he was living on Walter’s Wynd with John (probably his son) and a female servant. When he died his brother was left as sole partner in the family firm. Rev. J.W. (19th/20th C.) Rector of Wetheral, Carlisle, who was appointed to help out with St. Cuthbert’s in Hawick during the vacancy in 1910–11. Martin (16th C.) possessor of ‘Hieflycht’ (i.e. High Flicht) in 1541. He was probably related to other local Nixons. Matthew ‘Nae Guid Clerk’ (16th C.) mentioned in 1541 when his son John was listed among Scotsmen accused of burning the corn of William Carnaby at Halton. His name is given as ‘Matho, callid ‘no good clarke’’, but it is unclear exactly what this meant (however, compare ‘Nae Guid Priest’, which was a nickname for an earlier Oliver). He may be the same as one of the other Matthews. Matthew (16th C.) tenant of Hightrees Cleuch according to the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale. He may have been related to John, who leased the neighbouring lands of ‘Hesseldale’. He is probably the ‘Mathewe Nixon of Hetherclewes’ listed in 1544, among Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. Matthew (16th C.) recorded at Flicht in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was probably related to John and ‘Perswill’ who were was also there in 1544. ‘Pate Nixson Mathewe son’, also listed in 1544 may have been his son, as well as William, Pate’s brother. Mrs. ?? (19th C.) local lady who left a bequest called ‘Mrs. Nixon’s Bounty Fund’, to be distributed to poor women in Hawick and Wilton. It was administered by the ministers of Hawick and St. George’s and the Provost of Hawick, and still had a value of £2300 in 1939. She was presumably wife of one of the local manufacturers. Ninian ‘Ringan’ (16th C.) recorded as ‘Renyon Nyxson of Brigehows’ in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was probably related to William, William, younger, George and Dandy, who were also listed at Brighouse in 1544. Probably the same Ninian witnessed a bond in 1548 when some Elliots had a bond to enter Robert Crozier as a prisoner. Patrick ‘Pate’ (16th C.) recorded in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was listed as ‘Pate Nixon Mathewe son’ and could have been son of Matthew of Hightreescleuch. His brother William is also listed in 1544. Patrick ‘Pate’ (16th C.) son of Quentin, he is recorded at Larriston in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. His name was given as ‘Patten Nixon of the same, Qwinten sone’. He was probably related to George, Alexander, Jeffrey, John and Hector, who were also listed in the same place. Patrick (17th/18th C.) gardener in Hawick who witnessed a baptism in 1702. Percival (16th C.) recorded in 1544 as ‘Perswill Nixon, Fleight’ on a list of Nixons, Olivers, Croziers and others who gave their support to the English Crown. He was probably related to John and Matthew, who were also listed at Flight in 1544. Quentin (16th C.)

recorded at Larriston in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. His name was given as ‘Qwinten Nixon of Lawrellstane’. He was probably related to George, Alexander, Jeffrey, John and Hector, who were also listed in the same place. His son Pate is also listed. Quentin (16th C.) son of ‘Clemmie the Crwne’ or ‘Clem the Crune’. In 1578 he was held by George Buchanan of the ilk, on a pledge of good behaviour to the King. In 1580 he was held in ward by the Earl of Lennox in Dumbarton Castle and later that year stated to be warded in Edinburgh Castle. In 1580/1 he was sentenced to imprisonment for theft, along with several Armstrongs and Elliots of Liddesdale. Christie son of Quentin was recorded in 1585 in a long list of men of Dumfriesshire receiving remission for past crimes. Robert (15th C.) recorded in the proceedings for the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh in 1494/5. Hector Lauder, brother of the Laird of Todrig, has remission for several crimes, including bringing in him and Archibald (suggesting they were closely related) to take part in raids. Robert (15th/16th C.) listed along with William as ‘brother, sister soums to John Elwald’ in 1516. They are given as exceptions to the Nixons who had remission for their crimes, suggesting that what ever they were accused of was more serious. It is unclear which John Elliot was their uncle. Robert ‘Hob’ (16th C.) recorded in 1541 along with Fergus and others accused of raiding Gilsland and killing Englishman Dandy Wigholm. It is unclear where he came from. Robert ‘Hob’ of Killoley (16th C.) brother of Jenkin and probably son of George, ‘Ill-drooned Geordie’. He was named in 1590 among several Nixons, Croziers, Shiels and others, accused of stealing from the Wilkinsonsons of ‘Lynbrigges’. He is recorded being ‘of Kelleley’ and was presumably related to the earlier Nixons from there. The other Nixons named in 1590 were his brother Jenkin and Geordie of Larriston Burn (who was therefore presumably distinct from his father). Robert ‘Scabbit Hob’ (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1623 when he was accused of stealing sheep from ‘Rosie’ and her tenants of Mangerton. He was acquitted of the first cited theft, but found guilty of the second and ordered to be hanged. Robert (17th/18th C.) resident of Dodburn. He married Janet Riddell and their children included Janet (b.1705) and Gideon (b.1723). The witnesses in 1705 were William Henderson in the Flex and Walter Grieve in Branxholme Park. He is probably the Robert who witnessed a baptism for James Scott in Stobicote in 1720. Roland ‘Rowie’ (16th/17th C.) tenant in Brighousecleuchhead in 1622 when he promised to appear before the Justice Court to answer charges against him. Thomas (16th C.) tenant of ‘Stellis’ in Liddesdale in 1541, along with Bartholomew and Jeffrey, who were presumably related. He is also listed in 1544, along with his brother Jeffrey, plus ‘Barte’ and ‘Arche’, among Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. Thomas (16th C.) recorded at the Dyke in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. ‘Fargathe Nixon’ was also listed there, and so presumably a close relative. Walter (17th/18th C.) Elder of Hawick Kirk who lived at Hawick Shiel. He is probably the Walter who witnessed a baptism for John Irvine in Hawick Shiel in 1706. He was listed as tenant in Hawick Shiel when he witnessed baptisms for William Gledstains, for James Borthwick and for Robert Tudhope (servant to Falnash) in 1708 and for Walter Scott in Hawick Shiel, for John Nichol in Newmill in 1709, for John Turnbull (herd in Whitchesters) in 1710 and for William Hislop, his servant in Hawick Shiel. In 1716 he (and Simon Miller, also at Hawick Shiel) witnessed a baptism for James Borthwick, shepherd at Hawick Shiel. In 1717 he was appointed to collect monies from ‘Hawickshiel, the two Southfields, Allan Haugh milne, Newbigging, and Raes-knowes’, suggesting he may have lived in this area. He was still an elder the following year. He witnessed baptisms in 1718 (along with Walter Scott, both recorded as tenants in Hawick Shiel) for Matthew Charlton, in 1720 for William Hill (weaver at the Flex), in 1721 for 2 men called John Scott in Hawickshiel, as well as William Hislop, in 1723 and 1725 for Robert Scott in Hawick Shiel and also in 1725 for John Scott in Allanhaugh Mill and blacksmith James Gledstains. He may be the Walter who married Janet Riddell and whose son William was baptised in Hawick in 1708. William (14th C.) owner of lands in ‘Ermildon’ (i.e. somewhere around Arnton Fell) in Liddesdale, according to a c.1376 rental roll. The list includes ‘Locus Willemi Nycson’, valued at 21 shillings. William (15th C.) recorded among many men from Liddesdale who did not appear at the Justice-aire in 1494/5. William (15th/16th C.) recorded as ‘in Flycht’ in 1516 when he received remission for his crimes from the Privy Council, along with several other Nixons and others. It seems likely he was related to Henry in Larriston, William in the Steel and Alexander in the Brighouse. William (15th/16th C.) listed as ‘in the Stele’ in 1516.
among Nixons and other Liddesdale men who received remission for their crimes from the Privy Council. William (15th/16th C.) recorded along with Robert as ‘brother, sister souns to Johnne Elwald’ in 1516 when several Nixons, except for them, were given respite for their crimes. It is unclear which John Elliot was their uncle. William (16th C.) name of 2 separate men who, along with Alexander, were tenants of Brighouse in the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale. He is also ‘William Nixon of Brighows’ in 1544 when he was on a list of Scotsmen who gave their support to the English Crown; William, younger (presumably his son) was also listed, as well as George, Ringan and Dandy. William (16th C.) recorded at Howden in Liddesdale in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. William (16th C.) listed at Dinlabyre in 1544 among Nixons, Olivers, Croziers and others who gave their support to the English Crown. William (16th C.) listed at Killoley in 1544, on a list of Scotsmen swearing allegiance to Henry VIII. He is recorded as ‘William Nixon of Kellele’. He was probably related to John, listed at the same place in 1544 and Hob recorded there in 1590. William (16th C.) son of William of Brighouse. He was recorded as ‘William Nixon younger of Brighows’ in 1544 along a list of Nixons, Croziers, Olivers and others who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. His father William was also listed there. William ‘Willie’ (16th C.) recorded in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was listed as ‘Wille Nixon Barte son’ and could have been son of Bartholomew of the Steele. William (16th C.) listed in 1544 on a list of Nixons, Olivers, Croziers and others who swore allegiance to the English Crown. He was listed as brother of ‘Pate’, who was son of Mathewe, possibly of Hightreescleuch. William ‘Clement’s Will’ (16th C.) presumably son of Clement, he was known as a thief. In 1557 a bond was signed between Thomas Turnbull of Hartshaugh, George Rutherford of Grange, Adam Turnbull of Woollee and Adam Turnbull of Billerwell to capture him and present him at the ‘airn yetts’ of Ferniehirst. There is another bond of 1557 (where he is ‘Clemmatis Will’) among several Armstrongs to present him at Ferniehirst. And a third bond by Hector Armstrong and others (including Archibald of the Steel) to present him to John Kerr of Ferniehirst in 1556 on the back of which is a bond by Hector Lorraine of Harwood to present ‘Will Nyksone, called Gymmerhom’, who could be the same man. William ‘Grey Will’ (16th C.) recorded as ‘Grey Will of the Kyll Fuird’. In 1563 Gavin Elliot of Ram-siegill and others from Liddesdale entered into a bond with Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst to bring him in. He could be the William who was listed after Henry as being tenant of Kilford in 1541. Either he or a different William is also listed as tenant of Howden. He could be the same ‘Gray Wil’ listed among Border chiefs (along with Johnne of the Park) in Monipennie’s c.1594 compilation. William (16th C.) listed as ‘alias Kneates, of Highessches’ in 1597 among 5 Scotsmen delivered to the English Deputy Warden by Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch at Copshawholm. It is unclear where ‘Highessches’ might have been. William (17th/18th C.) farmer at Branxholme Town in 1691, when there were 5 tenants recorded there. He was recorded as tenant in Castlehill in 1692. He could be the William, married to Janet Scott, whose son William was baptised in Hawick Parish in 1678, along with an unnamed son in 1673. The witnesses in 1678 were John Ker and William Nichol. He may be the William who witnessed a baptism for William Martin in the Flex in 1700 and probably the William recorded in Stobicote in 1707 who witnessed a baptism (along with Robert Thomas in Newmill) for Walter Wilson in Castlehill. William (18th/19th C.) farmer at Lymiecleuch, listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. William (18th/19th C.) clerk with manufacturer John; however, it is unclear if he was related. In 1799 he was selected by ballot to serve on the Roxburghshire Militia. William (1785–1871) hosiery manufacturer, son of John and Mary Grieve. Born in Hawick, he moved to Nottingham, from where he was made an Honorary Burgess of Hawick in 1806, after sending a new silk Cornet’s Sash (it is possible that up until then the Cornets simply wore their best clothes, with no formal uniform). Returning to Hawick he worked in Nixon’s and was himself elected as Cornet in 1813. He used to ride a white horse known popularly as ‘Nixon’s mare’. He also acted as paymaster for the prisoners of war who were in Hawick 1812–14. The main manufacturing premises were at 52 High Street (marked on Wood’s 1824 map), before Lynnwood Mill was built. The firm was still listed as ‘John Nixon & Sons’ in Pigot’s 1837 directory, even although his father had died in 1812; it manufactured woolens as well as hosiery. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He laid the foundation stone for the Free Church, was one of its first Trustees as well as serving as a deacon. He later built Lynnwood House (where he is recorded in 1841) and was generally active in public life. In 1851 he is recorded as master wool-spinner, employing 115 people. In the 1860s he served as Vice-President of the local division of the Evangelical Alliance. He was also a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire. He married Jane, daughter of John Elliot of Binks in 1814, and she died in 1877; the couple had no children. The marriage certificate of 1849 shows his wife's name to be Jane Elliot Graham (so it is unclear if this was a 2nd wife). He was in partnership for a while with Joseph, his brother. Later he was the sole proprietor of the firm of Nixon's and restricted himself to the preparation of yarn, with hosiery passing to the form of Nixon & McKie. A portrait of him exists. He donated 2 Adam Brown portraits to the Museum. He was involved in the "Lang Stand Oot" and later with the development of a carrier on a broad frame, which led to a lowering of prices and wages. Hence, through the 1820s he was unpopular among the local stocking-makers, his effigy being carried through the town at one point, with an accompanying song - "O, but ye're a loon, Willie! O, but ye're a loon! Ye brought the Shirra in a chaise To pull our wages doon" [T] (formerly written 'Nexsone', 'Nicksone', 'Nikon', 'Nikson', 'Nixsoun', 'Nixyne', 'Nyckson', 'Nykson', 'Niksoun', 'Niksoune', 'Nixson', 'Nicksone', 'Nicon', 'Neyst', 'Neext', etc.).

Nixon's (nik-sinz) n. Messrs. John Nixon & Sons, stocking-makers, with their main mill at Lynnwood, built in the early 1800s. The weir built to divert water into the mill lade at Lynnwood was usually referred to as 'Nixon's Cauld'. John Nixon started as a hosiery manufacturer in 1780, spinning as well as knitting. The firm introduced more advanced hosiery machinery to Hawick in 1805. John Nixon died in 1812 and the firm was then run by his sons William and Joseph. Improvements to production in the early 1820s led to a lowering of wages for workers, which was an important part of the 'Lang Stand Oot' strike of 1822/3. William and Joseph Nixon were the partners in 1829, when they were given a grant from the Board of Trustees for Manufactures for spinning machinery. In 1837 the firm was listed on the High Street, still as 'John Nixon & Sons'; this was probably where the Victoria Hotel was later located. In 1842 Joseph Nixon died and his brother William was left as sole partner. He then went into partnership with William McKie, and the company was called Nixon & McKie; it was listed as such on Walter's Wynd in Slater's 1852 directory. The Lynnwood factory was sold to Thomas Laidlaw in 1864. They also built the factory on Walter's Wynd that was bought by Pringle's in 1869 and renamed Rodono.

Nixon's Brig (nik-sinz-brig) n. former name for a small, wooden footbridge near Nixon's Mill at Lynnwood. It was washed away in the flood of 1846, part of it ending up lodged between the Tower Hotel and waulk mills and another part washed up on the Tower Knowe.

Nixon's Cauld (nik-sinz-kawld) n. name sometimes used for Lynnwud Cauld.

Nixon’s Mare (nik-sinz-mär) n. white mare called Molly, which was owned by William Nixon, manufacturer, who was Cornet in 1813. The horse was loaned to a few subsequent Cornets, and is seen in a portrait by Adam Brown.

niuxt (nikst) adj., adv. next - 'The said day the Baylyeas and Counsell appoynted the Comone to ryd upon Fryday nixt, the first day of June' [BR1705], '...thereof they appointed their meeting to be on Thursday nixt, the 3 day of May' [PR1711], '...should be put out of ye toun and not to reside therein till Whitsunday nixt' [PR1715] (note the pronunciation, even when spelled 'next'; a colloquial difference with standard English is that, e.g. if this is Saturday, then 'nixt Mondi' is 9 days away, while 'this Mondi' is in 2 days; cf. the less common neext and older neist).

no bad (nō-bawd) adj. quite good, excellent - 'yon taiblet's no bad, issen eet?', '...which is no bad, but a long way tae catch up on Andra Ballantyne'[CT].

Noble (nō-bul) n. Alexander (14th C.) owner of lands in 'Ermildon' (i.e. somewhere around Anrton Fell) in Liddesdale according to a c.1376 rental roll. 'Locus Ellie Nobill' is listed there with a value of 6 shillings. Andrew (b.c.1810) hostler, recorded at about 21 High Street in 1841. By 1851 he was widowed and a frame-worker, living on Walter’s Wynd and in 1861 he was a railway labourer at 77 High Street. His wife was Margaret and their children included Betty, Mary, John, Helen and Joan. Arthur (1864–95) son of Robert Noble, who gave his name to Arthur Street. George (18th C.) merchant in Hawick. He subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). He may be the George, son of William and Margaret Pringle, born in Hawick in 1740. He married Jane Scott and their children included William (b.1771), Agnes (b.1775) and Walter (b.1777). His wife ‘Jean’ died in Hawick in 1778. Henry (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living at Priesthaughshiel in 1781 when his daughter Janet was baptised. James (17th C.) listed at Whithope among ‘The poor in Hauick Parioch’ on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He may be the James, married to Janet Murray, whose children, baptised in Hawick Parish included Walter (b.1682) and probably Helen (b.1684). James (17th C.) resident of Robertson Parish, when it still contained Hassendean. He was recorded in Parkhill in 1687 when his son James was baptised, with witnesses John Noble (surely a close relative) and Robert Learmonth. He may be the James who married Jean Thomson in Robertson Parish in 1687. James (17th C.) recorded as resident at Borthwickshiels in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. It is listed under the farms of the Earl of Tarras in Hassendean Parish. James (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. In 1728 he was in Robertson itself and in 1735 at Borthwickbrae. He married Isobel Ker in Robertson in 1727. Their children included: Agnes (b.1728); Walter (b.1730); twins Isobel and Janet (b.1733); and Mary (b.1735). He was living at Chisholme in 1733. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Isabel Ker and their son James was baptised in 1744. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, living at Mervinslaw in 1751. He married Marion Young and their son Adam was baptised in 1751, with witnesses Robert Scott and Walter Irvine. Rev. James (1836–1883) born in Perthshire, son of Rev. James and Margaret Crow. He was educated at Edinburgh University, licensed to preach by Perth Presbytery in 1859 and became assistant at St. Stephen’s in Edinburgh in 1861. However, later that year he was translated to be minister of Castleton Parish. He served as Chaplain to the Liddesdale Curling Club. In 1879 he attended the celebration for his colleague Rev. John Black of the Associate Kirk in Newcastleton. He died unmarried. James (1851/2–81) son of Andrew, contractor in Coldstream. He drowned in Hawick, and is buried in the family plot in Lennel. John (16th C.) tenant of Castleton. He was translated to be minister of the Associate Kirk in Newcastleton. He died the celebration for his colleague Rev. John Black Liddesdale Curling Club. In 1879 he attended later that year he was translated to be minister of at St. Stephen’s in Edinburgh in 1861. However, perhaps based on ‘Hobbe Noble’, who was living ‘hrd by the howse of Bewcastell’ according to a 1583 letter of Thomas Musgrave. He could be the Robert Noble who died on his farm at Parkhead in 1620 (and hence was not hanged at Carlisle). Robert (17th C.) tailor in Effieldge. In 1684 he was listed among men declared as fugitives for attending field conventicles.
Noble Place

Herohill and Borthwickbrae, he was from Biggar, coming to Hawick as a warehouseman and traveller for Dicksons & Laings. He became a junior partner in Richardson, Noble & Co. (established 1871), which built Glebe Mills in 1877. He founded Robert Noble & Co. in 1880 after Robert Richardson died. He was active in public life through being a J.P., President of the South of Scotland Chamber of Commerce and being associated with the School Board, the Cottage Hospital, the Gas Company, the Teviotdale Dairy and the Constitutional Club. He bought Borthwickbrae from William Elliott Lockhart about 1884. About 1895 he gave land around Borthwick Waas Cemetery for a shrubbery, and kept it up at his expense (along with the Grieve sisters). He married Isabella Armstrong in 1860, and their children included Arthur. The Trinity area adjacent to Glebe Mills was developed largely through his efforts, and Noble Place is named after him. He also left money for the Hawick Technical College.

Walter (17th C.) among the men declared as fugitives in 1684 for refusing to conform to Episcopalianism. He was tenant in Effledge. However, it is possible this was confusion with Robert, tailor in Effledge. Walter (17th C.) listed as resident at Harden in Wilton Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Walter (17th/18th C.) living at Castleside in 1710 when his daughter Christian was baptised in Roberton Parish. He is probably the Walter who married Isobel Cuthbertson and whose son Robert was baptised in Ashkirk in 1706. William (17th C.) servant to Walter Earl of Buccleuch. He was listed in the deceased Earl’s inventory in 1633, when he was owed for his annual fee. It is unclear if he was a servant at Branxholme or in Edinburgh or elsewhere. William (18th C.) workman in Hawick. He married Margaret Pringle and their children included: Janet (b.1738); George (b.1740); and James (b.1743). The witnesses in 1743 were cooper John Aitken and ‘Officer’ Thomas Sword. William (18th C.) resident of Denholm in 1772. His children included John (b.1772). William (18th C.) gardener at Burnhead in 1793, when he was working for William Scott. He could be the William who witnessed a baptism for John Lorraine in 1754 (formerly ‘Nobill’, ‘Nouble’, ‘Nowble’ and variants).

Noble Place (nō-bal-plis) n. street in the Trinity area near the Glebe Mills, built around 1885 and named after Robert Noble. It was essentially built to provide convenient accommodation for workers at Glebe Mills.

Noble’s (nō-balz) n. knitwear firm of Robert Noble & Co., founded in 1872 and at Glebe Mills from 1877. The company dwindled after WWII, but survived until 1962, when it merged with other companies (Walter Thorburn of Peebles and George Roberts of Selkirk), with Glebe Mills being taken over by Pringle’s. However, even the new merged company only lasted a few years. Papers relating to the firm exist, covering the period 1879–1959.

nocht (nocht) pron., arch. nothing, naught – ‘Thou sellist thy fowk for naucht …’ [HSR], ‘…but A’d a thousand rather be sair hackin’ treis than hing aboot like this daein’ nocht’ [JEDM], ‘He was daein’ nocht ava’ [GW], ‘…They are a’ set at nocht by the eicht o’clock bell’ [JJ], ‘There’s nocht without trouble, Ye mauna complain’ [GWe], ‘…The hauffin kens that the world’s sweet And there’s nocht wrang’ [WL], ‘In wordly goods he’s truly blест, For he has nocht a thief wad steal’ [WP], ‘It’s nocht like what it used to be I doot I’ getting auld …’ [DH], ‘…And, Lord, I am thankfu’ there’s nocht oot o’ place’ [DJ], adv., arch. not – ‘I am sorye that ye should nocht have rested your selffs a night with me as I luked ye should have done in yowr vaye and return toardis his Majestic’ [SB1597], ‘I will dosyre yow to spare me and nocht to trubill your self and me farder’ [SPB1629], ‘…to be pait to them in case the horse come nocht back again, or be lost’ [BR1644], n., arch. a mean or insignificant person, cipher (also written ‘naucht’; cf. nowt, nowts, nithing and nihin).

nochts (nochts) pron., pl., arch. nothing – ‘If he were asked ‘What to do’, [he answered] ‘Nochts ava.’’ [HAST1868], ‘There was nochts left o the nearest-hand loch bit paddis, fishes stankin for braith, an glet’ [ECS] (cf. nocht and nowts).

Noctes Hawickianæ (nok-teez-hIk-ee-an-ā) n. book published at the end of 1859, containing caricatures and sketches describing the adventures of a theatrical troupe who spent 9 days performing in the Subscription Rooms in Hawick a few weeks earlier. The sub-title was ‘Ye Drama on ye Borders. Being ye feates and adventures of a dramatic companie, what they did, and how they did it, with ye folks they met, and how they met them, and exhibiting ye effects in modern Athens of a very distant explosion, and who were affected thereby, illustrated in upwards of one hundred humorous sketches, embracing portraits of ye Dramatis Personae, from photographs by Treuftitt Brothers, and veritable likenesses of other parties from Nature’. The pseudonymous authors were Charles K. Tynte and Austin Burns. The illustrations were actually by Keeley Halswelle (with the assistance of Burns Bryson). The book is now rather rare. It contains a couple of sketches of Hawick streets in 1856, as well as a view including Goldielands Tower and caricatures of a few Hawick residents of the time.

No Kiddin (no-ki-din) n. popular music band based in Hawick in the late 1970s. They consisted of Kenneth Stoddart (keyboards and synthesiser), Stevie Turnbull (lead/rhythm guitar), Paul Desport (lead singer), Jim Inglis (bass guitar) and Derek Lunn (drums).

nolt (nŏlt, nŏl’) n., pl. arch. cattle – ‘Item, whatsoever person or personnes that has thair hors, meiris, or nolt of any sort, out of ane house in Hawick . . .’ [BR1640], ‘. . . the great inconvenience that follows by Burgesses who live not in the town, their putting horse, nolt and sheep to the Common . . .’ [BR1720], ‘. . . had no right, title, interest, clame of right, property, or possession to the said Comonnty, nor privilege of pasturing yruupon with horse, nolt, or other cattle . . .’ [BR1734], ‘. . . at riding the Common teary the riders were in use to hound and drive out of the Common all the horse, nolt, and sheep belonging to the tenants on the confines of the Common . . .’ [C&L1767], a bullock, single head of cattle – ‘A cow £22; a nolt £7’ [BR1638] (cf. nought).

Nolt-lair (nŏl’-lăr) n. former lands in Liddesdale, adjacent to Yethouse. It is written as ‘Nol-лаres’ in 1632, among lands possessed by Hab Henderson, and including Hightrees, Burnmouth, Dawstonburn and Prickinghaugh. It is probably the ‘Noltlawis’ recorded in 1611 when Hob, son to Jamie Henderson there, was listed for non-appearance in court at Jedburgh. In the 1718 survey of Scott of Buccleuch properties, it was ‘Noutlares’ and combined with Yethouse to cover 70 acres.

Nolt-lair (nŏl’-lăr) n. lands that were part of Lilliesleaf Common. Along with Stotfield, it was described in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls that it was feued by John Scott in Bewlie Mains.

nominat (no-ni-na’, -ni’) v., arch. to nominate, name – ‘. . . and nominat James Scott, called of Westport, to be Corronett for that yeare’ [BR1705], pp. nominated, named – ‘. . . the elders after nominet were ordered to collect ye money for propagating Christian knowledge in ye High-lands and Northern Islands’ [PR1717], ‘And recommend it to those whom they shall nominet for that effect, to take advice in the first place of the Honourable Laird of Cavers’ [PR1724] (also spelled ‘nominate’).

non-entry (non-en-tree) n., arch. failure to enter possession of a property, amount due for payment on this occurrence, failure to appear in court – ‘. . . Robert Scott of Alanehauch, his airis and assignas ane or ma, the nonentreis, mailies, ferries and dewties of all and hail the landis and lordship of Quhitchester . . .’ [SB1569].

noo (nū) adv., arch., poet. now – ‘Noo, aw was nae wey feard . . .’ [BCM1880], ‘Keep up yer credit, Ye’re somebody noo’ [GWe], ‘Noo a’ is richt, the day is bricht’ [RH], ‘The simmers fled, she’s waitin still, Nae woer nou comes near’ [WL], ‘When the Fair day comes roun’ In the times we ken noo . . .’ [WL], ‘And noo ilka day she ca’s in while I wark . . .’ [DJ] (not particularly Hawick, where the word is ‘now’ or in some contexts nìh; also spelled ‘nou’).

Nook Haugh (nook-hawch) n. farm in Ashkirk Parish. It was listed in the 1861 census and was probably the same as Haughheid.

noost (noost) n., arch. the action of a horse’s teeth in grinding its food, v. to chew food, particularly said of a horse (noted by J. Jamieson).

noozle (nū-zul) v., arch. to press, squeeze (noted by J. Jamieson; also nuizle).

nor (nor) conj., arch. nor (used in various forms where modern English would have ‘or’ or other words) – ‘I, myn aieris nor assignais, nor nane vthir in myn nor thair namins, sal nor may in any time ask, raise nor clame ony mair of the said nyne hundreth merkis . . .’ [SB1470], than (usually after comparisons) – ‘. . . and gif it be mair nor £20, and within £40, thirteen shillings and four Norris (no-ris) n. William (18th C.) resident of Denholm in 1780 and 1781. His children, baptised in Cavers Parish, included: Jean (b.1780); and Margaret (b.1781).

Northbank (nor-, north-bawngk) n. former farmstead and ruined 16th century peel tower in Southdean Parish. It is located between Steele Knowe and White Hill, to the east of the hamlets of Chesters and Southdean. The tower is about 5 m by 4 m and is ruined down to a single storey. Adjacent to the tower is an enclosure 23 m square, and there are signs of 2 other turf-walled buildings to the south-west; these are probably the remains of an earlier steading. The previous name for the farm may have been ‘the Banks’. There are modern sheep-shelters there. The surrounding area has old rig lines, covering at least 22 hectares, enclosed by boundary banks and ditches. The more recent farmstead is about 500 m west of the ruined peel tower. It was valued at 22 shillings in 1538 and 1539. ‘Belle’, Thomas and ‘Bennete’ Laidlaw were tenants there in 1541, paying 22s yearly. The tenant of the farm there in 1669 was ‘Lancellot Laidlie’. Robert Laidlaw and George Oliver, each with one hearth, are recorded there in 1694, as well as ‘Culbert whilands’ (it is already ‘Northbank’ in 1538, and is ‘Norbank’ in 1669 and ‘Norbanck’ in 1694; it is marked ‘Norbanck’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map, but it not marked on Roy’s or Stobie’s 18th century maps).

North Berryfell (north-be-ree-fel) n. farmstead on the east side of the Slitrig and more than a kilometre from Berryfell farm (which is sometimes called ‘South Berryfell’ to distinguish it). William Oliver was there in 1841. James Brunton was farmer in the 1860s, A. Jackson in 1868 and then Drydens until at least the early 1900s. The farmer there in 1872, Mr. Dryden, uncovered an ancient cairn, where pieces of pottery were found, as well as the top stone of a quern nearby. The farmhouse is now a ruin.

North Bridge Street (north-brij-stree) n. road leading to North Bridge, connecting the High Street (or Oliver Place) with Dovemount Place. Before the road was developed the general area had been in use as nurseries by Dickson’s. The name appeared around 1832, with the first house built in 1845. The southern end is just the opposite side of the street from Oliver Place. The middle section used to contain the houses and surgeries of many of the town’s doctors. No. 16

Normand (nor-mund) n. John (13th/14th C.) first man listed on the inquisition of 1303/4 into the inheritance of William Charteris’ half barony of Wilton. Most of the men are clearly local, and the inquest was held at Roxburgh. His name is written ‘Normaund’. He also swore fealty to Edward I in 1296 as ‘Normaunt’, with a seal showing a lion rampant on a 6-leaved flower and the legend ‘SIOH’. . . BVRGES’ DE BERWT’, although he was from Roxburghshire.
North Bridge Street Mill and 39 were designed by J.P. Alison in 1895, as well as a hotel on the street at about the same time. The northern end was built largely in 1899–1900, with Nos. 41–49 designed by J.P. Alison. The Art Nouveau inspired Nos. 43 (J.E.D. Murray’s studio) and 45 (Alison’s own house and office) are particularly noteworthy. Nos. 2, 4, 6 and 41 are grade C listed buildings, while 43, 45, 47 and 49 are grade B (also sometimes referred to as ‘Bridge Street’; named because it is the road to the North Bridge).

North Bridge Street Mill (north-bri'-stree'-mil) n. former woollen mill situated to the south of the Teviot near North Bridge Stree. It is recorded in 1872, but it is unclear precisely where it was.

North Brig (north-brig) n. North Bridge, being the bridge over the Teviot at the end of North Bridge Street, built in 1832 by John & Thomas Smith of Darnick. It was originally called the New Brig, to distinguish it from the Teviot Bridge in the west part of the town, and was funded by the Turnpike Trustees, since it allowed for a much easier route to the North. In 1882 it needed to be widened, the corrugated iron parapets being removed and the pavement width added to each arch. This work was carried out by Scott & Thomson’s. Originally it had 4 arches, with 2 allowing carts to pass at the riverside. These were filled in when the river banks were later built up to street level. Stone steps also once led up from the water-side to Bridge Street near the present Library (shown on the 1858 Ordnance Survey map), and another set by the railway, while a steep brae led from near the Buccleuch Memorial to the haugh where Duke Street was later built. In 2000 the bridge was closed to road traffic when the Waverley Bridge was opened to carry the main south-bound A7. It is a grade C listed building (called ‘the New Brig’ until the railway arrived in 1849, then more often referred to as ‘the Station Brig’).

North British Railway (north-bri'-eesh-ral-wi) n. company that built the railway line south from Edinburgh, reaching Hawick in 1849, and then succeeded, amid bitter political rivalry, to extend the line to Carlisle, completing what would be known as the Waverley Line in 1862.

North Burn (north-burn) n. stream flowing into the Allan Water from the north-east. It rises on Chester Knowe near the former farmstead of Newbigging and flows roughly south-west. It is also sometimes known as Newbiggin Burn.

Northcote Street (north-ko'-stree’) n. street between Dovestone Street and Laidlaw Terrace, built around 1884 and named after Sir Stafford Henry Northcote (1818–87), who was Chancellor of the Exchequer and Foreign Secretary (the fact that it is north of Dovestone Street can’t be a coincidence though!). The former joinery sheds of Archie Aimers on the south side were replaced in the 1980s by a small grassy area for the use of parents and small children.

Northcroft (north-kroft) n. former name for a farm lying between Stiches House and the Heap Hills. William Rutherford was recordede there in 1752. It was once part of the Langlands estate, but sold off around 1780. In 1788 it was valued at £20 and owned by Mrs. Shortreed, and she was still listed as owner in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls. James Black was farmer there in 1841 and the owner by about 1874 was John James Scott Chisholme. It was sometimes referred to as ‘Nethercroft’ (marked on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Northcroft (north-kroft) n. former farmstead in the upper Teviot valley, above Commonside on Blaen’s 1654 map. It may be the place of that name referred to in a 1581 complaint when Ellliots there were molested by Scotts and others. It was part of the lands associated with Commonside that were already occupied by Gilbert Elliot (brother of Robert of Redheugh) in 1591 when leased to him by Sir Walter Scott of Bransholm. It was leased to Gilbert Elliot (now of Kirkton) again in 1603, when it was described as a 20-shilling land (it is ‘Norcroft’ in 1603.

North Croft Park (north-kroft-pawrk) n. former name for lands in Minto Parish. It is listed in 1779 when included among lands whose liferent had been granted to Rev. Robert Elliot. They are still listed in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls, along with ‘Quarter of Whitefield House’, valued at £52 2s 9d.

the North Crofts (thu-north-krofts) n. former name for an area of Denholm, corresponding to roughly the part later developed as Riverside Drive. It is said that in about 1860 Mr. LAIdlaw was digging there when he came upon several stone cists containing human skeletons (also sometimes ‘North Croft’).

North Greenholm (north-green-höm) n. former farmstead to the north of the main farm of Greenholm in Liddesdale. It is marked on the 1859 Ordnance Survey map, just east of Leahaugh Cottage.

North Hermitage Street (north-her-mi'-eej-stree’) n. part of the main B6357 through Northhouse

Newcastleton, lying to the north of Douglas Square. The British Legion Hall is at No. 3.

Northhouse (north-hoos) n. Northhouse, farm off the A7 between Newmill and Teviothead, near where the main road crosses the Teviot. The nearby side road goes up the Northhouse Burn to Old Northhouse (which is also referred to as just Northhouse). This was once part of the lands of Ringwoodfield. It was formerly home of a local branch of the Scotts and became part of the Buccleuch estates. John Scott was tenant there in 1498 and had 20 cows stolen by John Dalgleish and others in about 1510. In 1524, when Sir Walter Scott of Brauxholme was regranted the office of Bailie of the lands of Melrose Abbey, he was given this farm and that of Thrilstane for his fee. In 1540 the King's shepherd William Henderson is recorded being paid for oats there. Archibald Elliot of Falnash was recorded being there in 1547. In 1553/4 the lands were still held in fee (along with Thrilstane) for the office of bailiery; they were together valued at £20 Scots at that time. William Scott of Bowden rented lands there from Melrose Abbey in about 1557 for £5. The lands are listed among those inherited by Sir Walter Scott in 1574. Scott of Satchells lists Walter of Northhouse as the first of the 24 ‘pensioners of Buccleuch’, and says he was the first Scott of Northhouse. Robert Scott was tenant there in 1607. ‘Will’ Scott of Northhouse was declared a rebel in 1608 after failing to answer to charges that he had raided Stobs, stealing the writs and charters for ransom. Another tenant, Archibald Scott is recorded in 1619. It was still listed as part of Ringwoodfield in the Lordship of Melrose in 1634, 1653, 1661 and 1663. 5 people were listed there in the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694, with 7 hearths being recorded. Archibald Gledstains was tenant there in at least 1696–98 (he was recorded as ‘Mr’, suggesting he may have been the teacher or similar). Thomas Scott was living there in 1702. It was included in the survey of Buccleuch properties in 1718, when it covered 1678 acres and was bounded by the River Teviot, Braidhaugh, Doecleuch, Skelfhill, Phaup and Southdeanrig. William Coltart was there in 1726. Thomas Elliot was renting the farm in the period 1745–48 and Robert Miller in 1747. Walter Irvine lived there around the 1760s. In at least the period 1791–97 the tenant was Thomas Scott. John Fenwick farmed there in the 1860s. In the early 20th century there were Amoses there. There was once a suggestion to divert the Hawick-Carlisle railway from there to Wilton Lodge. An ancient axe-head (perhaps bronze) found there was donated to the Museum in 1861, but subsequently disappeared (see also Auld Northhouse; the origin of the name is surely literal, and is also sometimes ‘Northhouses’; it appears from about 1500 as ‘Northous’, is ‘Northhous’ in 1498 and 1660, ‘Norththous’ in 1524, ‘Nort- hous’ in 1540, ‘Northhows’ in 1547, ‘Northhous’ in 1553/4, ‘Northous’ in 1557, 1564, 1619 and 1663 and ‘Northhous’ in 1661; it is already ‘Northhouse’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

Northhouse Brig (north-hoos-brig) n. road bridge over the Teviot on the A7, near where the Northhouse Burn joins the River.

Northhouse Burn (north-hoos-burn) n. stream that joins the Teviot from the south, near Northhouse. It forms part of the probable boundary line of the Catrail.

Northhouse Chaipiel (north-hoos-char-pul) n. former chapel at Old Northhouse. Its location is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map, although there are now no physical signs of it. It is said that there were burials in the attached graveyard until 1792, and several stones have been subsequently unearthed in the area. The graveyard is marked in 1863 on both side of the stream, which is called the Chapel Burn.

Northhouse Cottages (north-hoos-ko’-ee’jeez) n., pl. cottages at Northhouse, where the side road to the Allan Water (south from the A7) crosses the Northhouse Burn. A building that is no longer there is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map.

Northhousehaugh (north-hoos-hawch) n. former name for the flat ground by the Northhouse Burn, probably at ‘Auld Northhouse’, where the small church was built. There was once a farmstead, near where the Catrail crossed the burn. James Miller was there in 1772.

North Ludge see Minit North Ludge

Northope Burn (nor-thup-burn) n. stream that rises north of Craik Cross Hill, in a set of sikes called March Sike, Corse Grain, Rashie Grain and Laird’s Cleuch Sike, and becomes one of the streams feeding the head of the Borthwick Water.

Northope Haugh (nor-thup-hawch) n. farmstead in flat ground by the Northope Burn, just to the west of Howpasley, in the upper Borthwick valley. About 250 m to the east are the remains of a large enclosure, with 2 smaller enclosures within it. And about 60 m to the south-west are another 2 small circular enclosures. The age of these features is not known. This was probably the farm of ‘Noirhop’ listed along with Craikhope in the 1627 valuation of Hawick Parish; together they were estimated at ‘100 lb., vicarage 16 lb’. It was also listed along with Craikhope on a draft map of the Borthwick in 1650, having 8 ‘communicants’ between them.

North Port (north-pər) n. former entrance to the town at the top of Walter’s Wynd, between 47 and 49 High Street. This was the start of the road towards the North from the old town. A plaque was placed at 51 High Street by the Callants’ Club in 1964.

North Stewart Place (north-stew-ur-plis) n. original name for the street joining East and West Stewart Places, which were all named after Rev. James Stewart and part of the area popularly known as Stewartfield. It is now part of East Stewart Place.

North Synton (north-sin-ˈin) n. farm to the east of Ashkirk, but on the north side of the Ale valley, distinct from the other Synton (or Sinton) farms on the south side. It may have been part of the same estate as South Synton in early times, but is separate from at least as early as 1407. In that year Archibald, Earl of Douglas, granted the lands to Barnaby Veitch of Dawyck. Alexander Veitch was recorded as owner in 1502. David Thomson was there in 1581/2. In 1601 it was described as having a ‘tower and fortalice’ and being an annexed part of the Barony of Dawyck. It was held by the Veitch family until 1641, when largely sold to Francis Scott of South Synton, except for Clerklands. In 1643 it was owned by Francis Scott of Synton, with the west side valued at £208 and the east side valued at £338. It was fully annexed to South Synton again in 1675. The ‘laird of North sintoun’ (who appears to have been Rev. Robert Cunningham) paid the land tax there on £600 in 1678; at the same time Francis Scott of Synton was the owner of Essenside, valued at £365. Francis Cunningham of North Synton is recorded in 1690 and his sister Maria was served as heir to his 50-shilling land there in 1691. Dr. Gideon Elliot (son of the tenant in Borthwickshiel and descended from the Elliots of Horsleyhill) became Laird through marriage to Margaret Cunningham in 1691. The main house was taxed for having 7 hearths in 1694, and there were 9 people further assessed for having a hearth (William and George Easton, George Scott, George Tait, James and John Veitch, Thomas Cochran and William Nichol), as well as 8 poor people (Bessie Murray, Isobel Turnbull, Isobel Dryden, Jean Foster, Jean Elliot, John Fraiter, Janet Veitch and Margaret Dunlop). Thomas Aitchison was a cottar there in 1698, when William Telfer was also living there. Robert Scott was a cottar there in 1719. Robert Hunter was tenant in 1737. Charles Scott lived there in the 1790s. James King was farmer there in 1797. The value was the same in 1707. £600 It was listed being owned by John Pringle of Clifton in 1788 (and still recorded this way in 1811), when valued along with Birkwood at £600. In the 1830s the lands were owned by Robert Pringle of Clifton. Andrew Riddell was farmer there in the 1860s, followed by John Riddell. The farmhouse was remodelled in the late 17th century, but contains parts of a 16th century building (the oblong part oriented east-west). The north-west extension and porch are modern. The house is 3 storeys on the south, but 2 on the north. The oldest part may have been built for James Veitch, who succeeded to the lands in 1536. The vaulted basement is still well preserved. There is also a ‘bun-shaped quern’ beside the east gable and a carved sandstone block built into the south gable. About 200 m north-west of the farmhouse are the remains of a hillfort, visible in aerial photographs. About 450 m to the north-west are signs of rig-and-furrow cultivation. About 600 m to the north is an old enclosure, with nearby rig lines. And just south of the road, a little to the east of the farm, are signs of another settlement (its approximate location is marked as ‘Sintoun’ on Gordon’s c. 1650 map and as ‘North Sintoun’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map; it is ‘Northswentoun’ in 1475, ‘Northsytoun’ in 1497, ‘Northsintone’ in 1525, ‘Norcht Sontyn’ in 1531, ‘North Syntone’ in 1609 and 1691 and ‘Northsintone’ in 1704).

North Toll Bar (north-təl-bər) n. another name for Dovemount Toll.

North Toon-o-Rule (north-toon-ə-rool) n. North Town-o’-Rule, name for a cottage at the north side of Town-o-Rule farm, the same as the cottage known locally as Drythropple and renamed Heathfield for a while. This is where the poet John Halliday was living in 1851, as well as carrier John Gray and his family.

the North Tyne (θu-north-ˈtın) n. river that rises near Kielder Water, being one of the major river valleys of the English Middle March and joining the South Tyne near Hexham – ‘Then seeking the south that held his shrine, Heard the low hills echo ‘To Tyne! To Tyne!’ [WHO].
Northumbria

Northumbria (nor-thum-bree-a) n. ancient Kingdom of north-eastern England, also including parts of southern Scotland for centuries, and now the general name given to the English north-east. The kingdom was established around the year 600, including Bernicia (roughly from the Forth to the Tees) and Deira (roughly the Tees to the Humber). The name derived from being north of the Humber. Hawick would have been part of the Kingdom of Northumbria until the Battle of Carham in 1018.

Northumbrian (nor-thum-bree-in) adj. relating to present-day Northumberland or ancient Northumbria, n. the language spoken in Northumbria. This was originally one of Brythonic or ‘p-Celtic’ languages, most closely related to Old Welsh. In periods after about the 6th or 7th century the word is used to describe the early form of Anglian spoken throughout the Kingdom of Northumbria and that developed into Scots and in particular the Hawick dialect. Essentially the same form of p-Celtic is sometimes called ‘Cumbriac’.

Northville (north-vil) n. private house at 25 North Bridge Street, which later became the Kings Hotel. The property behind it on Union Street was once the site of Teviot Grove Academy. The house was for a few years the home of the Blenkhorns.

Norville (nor-vil) n. John (17th/18th C.) wig-maker from Greyfriars Parish in Edinburgh. In 1714 he produced a testimonial to Hawick Session from his previous parish attesting that he had made ‘his publike repentance for his scandal’ and could baptise his child. Alos in 1714 he was witness in Hawick to a baptism for Robert Miles. His son Robert was baptised in Hawick in 1716 (also written ‘Norvell’).

Norwud (nor-wud) n. Norwood, house on Sunnyhill, built for mill owner Peter Scott in 1904. It was designed by J.P. Alison in an Arts & Crafts style. It has an entrance porch and a first-floor balcony at the rear. Fashion parades from Pesco’s used to take place on the lawns of the terraced garden. The Scott family stayed there until 1964, and latterly it has been the home of the Paterson-Browns. It is a grade B listed building. The name is also used more generally for the area around Norwood itself. The ‘Norwood Trophy’ was gifted by Peter Scott and competed for among local bowling clubs.

Norwud Trophy (thu-nor-wud-trö-fee) n. local bowling trophy, donated by manufacturer Peter Scott and named after his residence. It was presented after the earlier Beechwood Trophy was won outright by the Buccleuch Bowling Club in 1912.

nosey wundi (nö-zee-wun-di) n. an ‘inquisitive glass’, an angled mirror mounted outside a window to allow a view along the street without leaning out. Also referred to as ‘keekin’ or ‘peepin’ glasses. They were introduced by John Guthrie around 1898, when he made one for his house at 61 High Street, after seeing similar devices on buildings in narrow streets on the continent. They soon began to appear all over Hawick, and even spread to some neighbouring towns. Although they existed to a lesser extent elsewhere, they were peculiarly popular locally. Since the height of their popularity they have disappeared one by one. A census of 1989 revealed a total of 51 in Hawick, distributed amongst the Loan, Buccleuch Street, the Sandbed, Silver Street, the Howegate, Kirkstyle, the High Street, Oliver Place, Bourtree Place, Bourtree Terrace, Bridge Street, Croft Road, Laidlaw Terrace, Dowmoun Place and Princes Street.

Oak leaves (ök-leevz) n., pl. symbolic adornment worn at certain times during the Common Riding, fancifully imagined to harken back to Druidic times. After the Cornet’s Breakfast on the Friday morning sprigs of oak leaves are given to the guests and worn for the remainder of the day. The Drums and Fifes wear them prominently in their hats. Before the mid-19th century, the Cornet and his guests used to march to the Haugh after the dinner to dance the Reel, each bearing an oak twig on his hat and breast. The wearing of ‘chaplets of oak . . .’ by the young men was reported to be an old custom by James Wilson in 1850. The practice of wearing oak leaves discontinued after 1855, but was revived in 1886. and has been a part of the Common Riding ever since. The origin is mysterious, and there are many theories, from pagan symbolism to a relationship with trees near Hornshole – 'What means that youthful band so gay, With oaken boughs in trim array, With frequent shout, and loud hurray, Drum, fife, and fiddle?' [WiS], ‘... An’ wear an oak leaf in ma coat, An’ join in the sang’ [IJ], ‘Ne’er picked a callant that was prooder Tae weer oaken leaf on shoade’ [MB].

nication in local churches, an important event in the community calendar. In Hawick it took place about the harvest season until the beginning of the 19th century, when complaints by farmers had it moved to the last Sunday in June. The Wednesday before Communion was Sacramental Fast Day, when all work was suspended and there were 2 services. There was also a service on the Saturday, being the day of preparation, and often 2 more services on the following Monday. The Communion itself was on the Sunday and typically lasted from 8 a.m. until about 6 p.m., with a short break for rest and refreshments, and 4 or 5... different ministers officiating. The length of the services declined through the 19th century.

O’Connell Street (o-ko-nul-stree’ n. built around 1837 and named after Irish statesman and reformer Donald O’Connell (1775–1847). A pended house known as ‘the Rambler’s’ was demolished to make the gap in the south side of the High Street. The street has always had a kink in the middle. The upper part of the south side was demolished after WWII, with further buildings being replaced by a garden and car park in 1972. In 1968 Murray Place was incorporated into the street. It is home to a medical centre, previously the Congregational Church, and a fitness centre, which was previously the local British Legion branch. The Drums and Fifes march up here and over to Brougham Place on ‘the Nicht Afore the Morn’.

the October Tryst (thu-ok-to-bur-trist, -trist n. former cattle and horse market, happening on the third Tuesday in October from 1780. It was well known as a market for Highland kyloes and held around the foot of the Vertish Hill or Thorterdykes. By the latter part of the 19th century it had become only a horse market.

o’d (od, od) contr. of it, often treated as a single word – ‘Ah’m seek o’d’, ‘A’ll hev nane o’d’, ‘there’s nae need o’d’, ‘the worst o’ aye es ...’, ‘ee deh ken the hauf o’d’, ‘A’m gettin’ aboot sick o’d, this Canadian wunter’s a coushed’[JEDM], ‘The Borderers lang syne geh theirsels an awfhi leife o’d’[ECS], ‘It’s oot o sicht; oo canna sei ocht o’d’[ECS], ‘... bit it disneh say whuther the punters or the bookies cam oot o’d best’[BW1974], ‘... but his mother talked um oot o’d and in-steid hei became a painter and decorator’[IWL], ‘...there’s a wee medicinal refreshment at the end o’d ...’[CT], ‘...Aw can kindeh mind o’d still’[RM] (cf. the less common o’t).

the Oddfellis (thu-o-fel-lez) n. the Scottish Order of Oddfellows Loyal Border League, a mutual aid society. A local branch, Lodge ‘Loyal Border’, No. 5 Waverley District existed in Hawick in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. They met in the Buccleuch Hotel for a while, and the insurance money would be collected weekly from the house of each member. Another lodge was started in Denholm in 1843 and named after John Leyden.

Oddfellis’ Haa (o-fel-lis-haw) n. Oddfellows’ Hall, also known as the Oddfellows Arms. It was a public house at the foot of O’Connell Street, on the east side (Murray Place for a while) in the mid-19th century. The proprietor in the earlier years was Thomas Scott. The building became the Central Tea Rooms and later the Legion.

odds (odoz) n., arch. difference, disparity – ‘A didna ken a grain o’ odds o’ld for aa A hedna seen’t thre hens-whan’ [ECS] (often followed by the preposition ‘o’ meaning ‘in’ here; see also what’s the odds).

Oddy (odo) n. Arthur taken on as trainee manager at Hawick knitwear manufacturers Pringle’s in 1924. Along with William MacTaggart, who joined a year later, the pair became Directors in 1932 and Managing Directors a year later, managing the firm through the mid-20th century. He resigned in 1945, leaving MacTaggart as sole Managing Director.

the Odeon (thoo-o-dee-in) n. name for the Exchange Buildings when it became part of the Odeon cinema chain in the mid-20th century.

Ode to Hawick (ood-too-hilk) n. title of probably the first known example of a poem written to celebrate Hawick, penned by Rev. Robert Cunningham in 1710.

Odin (odo) n. supreme Norse deity, god of wisdom, art, culture and the dead, traditionally thought of as one of the gods in the Hawick battle cry ‘Teribus ye Teri-Odin’ – ‘Scotia felt thine ire, O Odin! On the bloody field of Flodden’ [JH], ‘The Common-Riding is at hand, That festival sae great and grand, And ower Auld Hawick waves Odin’s wand The nicht afore the morn’ [JMS] (although the myth persists, there is no historical evidence to believe that Norse gods were ever worshipped in the Borders, and the connection between Hawick and Thor and Odin may well be traced to the Victorian attempts to decipher the ‘Teribus’ slogan, perhaps inspired by Hogg’s rhyming of ‘Odin’ with ‘Flodden’).

o’ee (oi) contr. of you – ‘wull the per o’ee carry this?’ (pronounced as a single diphthong and treated like one word).

offendit (o-fen-dee’, -di’) pp., adj. offended – ‘…sal pay £10 to the bailies, by satisfaction to the partie offendit, and sal lie aucht days in the stockis …’[BR1640], ‘…and it appeared to be offendit, for it left the house and gaed away down the burn side’ [LHTB], ‘Ye tell him that he’s looking weel, His soul is fair offendit …’[WP].

offerit (o-fe-ree’, -ri’) pp., adj. offered – ‘…gift ony persone or personis allegis or acclames ony rycht of the said tenement of land offerit to the said bailie to fynd caution …’[SPB1579].

offi (o-fi) prep. off of, from off, usually used where ‘of’ would be sufficient in standard English – ‘A’ll no tell ee again ti git offi there’, also used where ‘from’ would be standard English – ‘whae did ee git that offi?’ (see also off).

office-hoose (o-fees-hoos) n., arch. an out-house, workshop, outbuilding in which manual work is carried out – ‘…liberty to cast, win, and carry off from Hawick Muir divots for covering part of the office houses at Branksholm …’[BR1765].

officer (o-fe-syr) n. an official of the Burgh, Court, Church, Presbytery, etc., whose duties include keeping order at meetings and delivering messages – ‘Item, whatsoever person that sal defforce the officer in execution of his office …’[BR1640], ‘The town officers to wait upon ye Queer door during ye Service’ [PR1718], ‘…the presbytery officer, after threess oyses, ored all persons …to give in their reasons …why Mr Cunningham may not be admitted and thay day fixed minister of the parish of Hawick’[PR1712], ‘They were overtaken by the Presbytery officer on horseback, who was a character in his way. He was wont to be called in, after the ordinary Presbytery dinners, to have a glass of beer, and drink the healths of members all round, addressing them by their Latin names, and the clerk as ‘Brother officer’ [RJR].

off-luif (of-lif, -loof) adv., arch. off-hand, at once, straightforward, on the spur of the moment, extemporize – ‘An’ hers [heart], jerrynit ult his off-loof patter, Gaes topsy-turvy, ne’er a whit its better’ [JoHa], ‘Jethart Castle! A body was need ti ken’d off leike as Wattie Laidlaw kenned eet, for ti tell owre, off-luif, aa its dambrod-checkeet story’ [ECS], ‘Off-luif, ei made twae wrang shots anent the teime it wad set oot . . .’ [ECS] (also written ‘offluif’ and ‘off-loof’).

off o (of-o) adv. off of, from – ‘take yer eibis off o the table’ . . . pookin ‘cheese-an-breed’ off o the hedges ti nattle a’ [ECS], ‘Gie’s a sheive off-o that laif’ [ECS], used especially to denote familial relationship – ‘. . . she was off o that kind’ [CoH] (also ‘off-o’, ‘off o’, ‘off-ov’, etc.; cf. offi).

off-pit (of-pi’-o-tim) n., arch. an excuse, pretext for delay, diversion – ‘It was duist an offpit! A ken ‘im owre weel!’ [GW], a makeshift, hasty meal { ‘A wesh at the kitchen sink there the morn’ [ECS].}

off’t (oft) contr. of it – ‘The leader of the train got oft, A crackit croon to claw’ [JT] (also spelled ‘off’t’).

Ogilvie (o-gul-vee, -bee) n. Adam (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He witnessed baptisms in 1656 for Archibald Stewart and in 1661 for Patrick Redford, for John Tudhope, for James E . . . (along with John Tudhope) and for William Stewart. Adam (17th C.) tenant in Bramsholme. His wife Jean Chisholme’s will is recorded in 1684. The fact that he was at Bramsholme suggests a connection between this family and the Scotts of Buccleuch a generation earlier than when there were Ogilvie Chamberlains. He may have been brother of William and perhaps Gideon. He was also surely related to Andrew and James, who were tenants in Bramsholme farms in the 1690s. He witnessed a baptism for James Baptie in 1678 and another for Patrick Scoon in 1685. Adam of Hartwoodmyres (17th/18th C.) only son of William and Elizabeth Turnbull. He was Chamberlain to the Duchess of Buccleuch. He was probably the ‘younger of Hartwoodmyres’ who was one of the original members of the ‘Honest Country Club’ in 1711. In 1708 he married Jean Erskine of Dryburgh, and she died at an advanced age in 1761. Their children included: Margaret (b.1709), who married William Elliot of Wofflefe in 1732; Elizabeth (b.1711); William of Hartwoodmyres (b.1712); James (b.1714), who may have died young; Katherine (b.1718), born in Hawick Parish, who married Walter Grieve, tenant at Bramsholme Park; and Isabel (b.1720). He may be the unnamed son of William and Elizabeth Turnbull born in Hawick Parish in 1684. Adam of Hartwoodmyres (1745/6-1809) son of William and Elizabeth Elliot. He may also have been referred to as ‘of Chesters’. He was an advocate and was made an Honorary Burgess of Hawick in 1775. He helped form the Hawick Farmers’ Club in 1776. He served as an executor for Henry Elliot of Peel, who died in 1780. He paid the land tax on about £460 for Hartwoodmyres in 1785. He served as Chamberlain to the Duke of

of new (ov-new) adv., arch. afresh, anew – ‘. . . and casting of the great bell of new again (when it was rent and of new founded in 1693) . . .' [BR1694].

Buccleuch, taking over from William (his father) in 1787. He was living at Braxholme in 1785–88 when he paid a tax for 2 female servants, increasing to 3 in 1789 and 1790 and 2 again in 1791. He also paid tax on 2 male servants at Braxholme from at least 1785, and 1 in 1788–94. He was recorded at Braxholme on the Carriage Tax Rolls for 1794/5 and 1797/8, as well as farmer there in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls and for having 4 carriage or saddle horses. He was listed among the voters of Roxburghshire in 1788, where his vote is described as ‘partle a liferent vote from Cornelius Elliot, W.S., his brother-in-law’; if this is true then there has been confusion over the identity of his wife. He was also recorded as a voter in Selkirkshire in 1788. In 1791 he witnessed the baptism of one of Lord Napier’s children at Wilton Lodge. He subscribed to John Learmont’s book of poetry in 1791. He paid the Horse Tax at Braxholme in 1785–97, when he had up to 4 horses. In around 1802 he paid about £460 in land tax on Hartwoodmyres. He was listed as a Commissioner for Selkirkshire in 1805. He was a trustee for the estate of William Oliver ‘Auld Cash’. In 1806 he consulted with the Council about the appointment of Hawick’s next schoolmaster. He married Anne Renata, daughter of Gavin Elliot of Midlem Mill in 1787; they had a large family. In 1808 he was on the subscription list for Jamieson’s Scots dictionary. He appears to have served as Chamberlain until around 1808, after which his trustees are referred to, suggesting he died around then. He died at Braxholme.

Adam (18th/19th C.) resident of Greens in Liddesdale. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821, along with ‘L., mason’ (probably ‘Little’), to whom he was surely related. Alexander (17th/18th C.) resident of Braxholme. He may have been son of James (who was also a resident of Braxholme). In 1705 he witnessed a baptism for William Oliver, ‘servitor’ in Todshawhaugh. He married Isobel Halliday in Hawick in 1707. Their daughter Isobel was baptised in 1708, with witnesses William Elliot in the Sandbed and Henry Orrock. Alexander (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Esther Douglas and their children included: Isobel (b.1735); and William (b.1737). Alexander (1715/6–71) resident of the Greens in Castleton Parish. His wife was Elizabeth Little, who died in 1793, aged 56. Their children included William (1768/9–1818), who died at Greens. They are buried in Ettleton Cemetery. Andrew of Newlands (17th/18th C.) recorded as a householder at Braxholme on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. In 1696 and 1697 he leased a third of the farm of Braxholme Mains. James, who also leased a third, must have been a close relative, and he was surely also related to Adam, recorded in Braxholme in 1684. How these Ogilvies were related to the later Chamberlains at Braxholme is unclear; however, it is possible he is son of James, who was also a householder in Braxholme (and died in 1706). Probably the same Andrew witnessed baptisms in 1704 for William Scott in Braxholme, in 1708 for James Scott ‘Laird’ and in 1713 for Thomas Anderson in Braxholme Town. He was also recorded in 1719 in a declaration regarding the commonty between Wauchope and Templehall. In 1719 he was in Braxholme when his servant William Hume got married to Helen Govenlock (servant to William, also at Braxholme). He was father of William, and the pair witnessed a baptism for John Cavers (herd in Braxholme) in 1711. He also witnessed some of the births of the children of William Ogilvie in Hawick, presumably his son. He may be the Andrew who witnessed a baptism for James Henderson in Hawick in 1730. It is unclear if his lands of Newlands were those in Lilliesleaf or Castleton. Andrew (18th C.) recorded in 1754 when the Town Council paid for cords to bind him, as well as paying for him to be watched. He was presumably imprisoned for some crime. Rev. Andrew (1731–1805) son of William and Martha Laing, who were from Hawick. He was the 14th child, his father being tenant at Broadhaugh. He was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of Langholm in 1758 and ordained by the Dissenting Church of Newcastle at the Groatmarker Meeting-house. He became minister at Linton in 1781. He married Agnes Lomax from Newcastle in 1767 and she died in 1808. Their children were: Eleanor; Jane; Margaret; William; Joseph; and John. He wrote about the Parish of Linton for Sinclair’s Statistical Account. David of Brieryyards (1726–c.83) probably son of William. He paid the window tax for Brieryyards in 1748. His daughter Martha married Thomas Turnbull in 1757 and he witnessed baptisms for the couple in 1758 and 1759. He was added to the voters’ roll for Roxburghshire in 1780. He was involved in a court case against Capt. John Douglas of Cavers. He was probably the Ogilvie of ‘Bririeyards’ listed among the Commissioners for Roxburghshire in 1761. Brieryyards passed to the Turnbulls (through his daughter) in 1783, suggesting that he was deceased by then. George (d.1807) listed as ‘Messenger’ in Hawick on the 1794 and 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. His death is recorded in the Scots Magazine, where he is also ‘messenger’, presumably meaning he was some kind of agent, possibly a ‘messenger-at-arms’, a lawyer appointed to execute summonses. He is probably the George who witnessed a baptism in Hawick in 1794 for James Scott and Isabel Hogg. He was probably the George who was married to Margaret Learmonth and who had several children born in Hawick: Janet (b.1780); Thomas (b.1781); John (b.1783); Alexander (b.1785); Michael (b.1788); Mary (b.1790); Margaret (b.1792); and George (b.1794). Gideon (17th C.) one of the earliest known members of this Roxburghshire family. In 1656 he married Susannah Scott of Harden (probably daughter of Sir William Scott). Their son William was the first Laird of Hartwoodmyres. Henry (18th/19th C.) recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory as proprietor of Hartwoodmyres. He was a Commissioner of Selkirkshire in 1819. James (d.1706) indweller in Branxholme. In 1694 he was recorded as a householder at Branxholme on the Hearth Tax rolls. In 1696 and 1697 he leased a third of the farm of Branxholme Mains. Andrew, who also leased a third, must have been a close relative (perhaps his son) and he was surely also related to Adam, recorded in Branxholme in 1684. He is probably the James who (along with Francis Scott in Branxholme) witnessed a baptism for Walter Chisholme in 1684. He is probably the James who witnessed a baptism for a Grieve in 1698. In 1700 James Scott in Stob coke was fined for ‘forestalling of the public market’ by buying a lamb from his servant and then selling it to a butcher. In 1702 he witnessed baptisms for John Scott (also in Branxholme), for Gilbert Elliot in Nether Southfield and for James Laidlaw (in Branxholme Town). In 1704 he was ‘tenant of Branocholm’ when he witnessed a baptism for Walter Wilson. He received the lands of Hosocate ‘in liferent’ in 1705 from William Scott of Harden. He married Jane Elliot and their son was William, possibly the William born in Hawick around 1670. He witnessed a couple of baptisms in 1701, including one for Bailie Walter Elliot. His daughter Jane died in 1701 (when he gave money to the Parish). Other children were Adam, Andrew (probably the resident of Branxholme) and Alexander. He is probably the James who rented quarter of the farm of Borthaugh in at least the period 1690–98. James (18th C.) saddler in Hawick. He subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). John (b.1794/5) born in Cavers Parish, he was farmer at Cooms in Ewes Parish. He was there in 1841, 1851 and 1861. He married Jane Common and their children included Janet, Margaret, William, John, Adam, Robert and Sibella. Rev. John H. (19th/20th C.) minister of Lilliesleaf Free Kirk 1926–28, probably its last years. Little (1793/1862) stone mason at the Greens in Castleton Parish. He married Jane Little, who died in 1879, aged 81. Their children included: Margaret (1819/20–40); Jane or Janet (1825/6–46); Elizabeth (1826/7–47); Mary (b.c.1827); William (1828/9–1900); Rabina (b.c.1839); Margaret (again, 1842/3–81); and Joan Black (1845/6–1913). He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821, and was probably son of Adam from there, who also subscribed. Michael (18th/19th C.) local whip-maker. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Andrew Murray. His sons were John and Andrew, who died in infancy. He could be the spinner Michael whose child died in Hawick in 1815. Mr. ?? of Teindside (18th C.). Recorded as ‘Mr Ogilbie of Tiendside’ in 1729 when he rented the Hawick ‘litter’ for a funeral. He may have been William or one of the other local Ogilvies. Robert (17th C.) witness in 1632 for the reversion document for Harwood by Edward Lorraine. Robert (18th C.) overseer for the early spinning company set up in Hawick by a group of local gentlemen. He was in this position for only a couple of years from about 1741. He could be the Robert who in 1720 married Jean, daughter of Robert Ruecastle. Robert (18th/19th C.) farmer at Broadhaugh (and others), recorded on the Horse Tax Rolls of 1785–94. He was also owner of 5 farm horses on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He was additionally taxed for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797. Thomas (17th/18th C.) 2nd son of William of Hartwood. In 1705 he acted as factor for the young Margaret, daughter of the deceased John Scott of Synton. He may have been son of the 1st Laird of Hartwoodmyres and younger brother of Adam. Thomas Elliot ‘Tom’ of Chesters (1751–1831) 2nd son of William of Hartwoodmyres and Elizabeth Elliot, he was born in Ashkirk Parish. He joined the Madras civil service at the age of 19, becoming paymaster at Vellore, which was under siege in the early 1780s. He retired in 1786 and bought Crailing, then sold it the next year so he could purchase Chesters from the Bennet family. There he had a mansion designed by local architect William Elliot, the construction being completed in 1790. While it was being built he lived at Gala House. In 1788 he owned Chesters and associated lands (valued at £965 2s 3d), Lanton Mill and associated lands (valued at £93 9s 5d), as well as the farm of Newton (valued at £853 6s 8d) on the opposite side of the Teviot from Chesters, plus associated teinds. In 1788 he was mentioned as about to be added to the list of voters in Roxburghshire. He was at Chesters in 1791 when he subscribed to John Learmont’s book of poetry. In 1791 he also witnessed the baptism of one of Lord Napier’s children at Wilton Lodge. He was taxed for owning a carriage in the 1780s and 90s and had 5 female and 4 male servants at Gala House in 1788 and 2 female servants in 1789. By 1790 he was at Chesters, and he had 7 or 8 servants there until at least 1797. He also paid tax for having 4 horses at Chesters in the period 1790–97. He was additionally taxed for having 4 non-working dogs in 1797. He paid the land tax at Chesters and Lanton in 1811, as well as for lands around Newton in Bedrule Parish valued at about £850. He was listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805 and 1819, both times along with his son William. He joined the Roxburghshire Gentlemen and Yeomanry Cavalry and served as Deputy Lieutenant for Roxburghshire. He is listed as proprietor of Chesters on Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. He was a friend of the writer Sir Walter Scott. In 1782 he married Hannah (1753–1833), 2nd daughter of Robert Dashwood and widow of Dr. Pasley. Their children were: Elizabeth (b.1783); William (b.1785), Chamberlain to Buccleuch; Adam (1792–1872), who married Letitia Keys Spence; George, who died young; Margaret (b.1795); and Jane, who married Donald Horne of Stirkoke. He may be the Thomas ‘Esq’ for whom a child’s baptism appears to be recorded in Hawick in 1786, but crossed out. One of his daughters was probably the inspiration for the tune ‘Miss Ogilvie of Chesters Waltz’, published around 1810. Thomas Elliot of Chesters (1821–1896) eldest son of William and Alexina Falconer. He served as a Commissioner of Supply and Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. He married Hope, only daughter of Henry Reeve. His widow took possession of the estate after his death. William (17th C.) married to Elspeth Turnbull. Their unnamed child was baptised in Hawick in 1684. William of Hartwoodmyres (d.1716) son of Gideon and Susannah Scott of Harden. He was progenitor of the Chesters branch of the family. He could be the William who had discharges with the treasurer of Selkirk in 1683 and 1684. He is probably the William who leased the farm of Todshawhill from the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1691 and who was listed there on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls, paying tax on 2 hearths. He was in Todshawhill in 1695 when he contributed £100 to the Darien Scheme. He was again listed as tenant of Todshawhill in 1696. He purchased Hartwoodmyres in 1694 and in 1705 bought Brieryyards from the Scotts. In 1695 he was a Commissioner of Supply for Selkirkshire. He is probably the Laird of Hartwoodmyres who witnessed a baptism for John Chisholme of Stiches in 1708. He also witnessed a baptism in 1709 for Francis Scott of Newton. He married Elizabeth Turnbull of Tofts and had one son, Adam. William (17th/18th C.) resident in Craik, where he is recorded in at least the period 1713–27. In 1713 he witnessed a baptism for Walter Scott of Merrylaw. His children, baptised in Roberton Parish, probably included: Andrew (b.1714); Edwart (b.1716); William (b.1716); Alexander (b.1717); Robert (b.1720); Adam (b.1721); an unnamed child (b.1726); and William (again, b.1727). William (c.1670–1755) possibly son of James and Jane Elliot. He was tenant farmer at Broadhaugh. In 1715 he married Martha Laing (c.1680–1735); she was daughter of Bailie William Laing. Most of their children were baptised in Hawick. Their children included: James (b.1716); William (b.1718), probably father of the farmer at Broadhaugh and Whiterope; Jean (b.1720); Walter (b.1721); Janet (b.c.1722), who married John Potts in Castleton; Adam (b.1724); Edward (b.c.1725) died young; David (b.1726) of Brieryyards; Robert (b.c.1727); Alexander (b.c.1728); Martha (1728/9–1825), who married Thomas Turnbull in Hawick and died aged 96; Betsy (c.1730–52); Andrew (b.1731), minister at Linton; and Margaret (b.1735). The witnesses in 1718 were William Laing, ‘lait Bailie of Hawick’ (probably his father-in-law) and John Watson, Clerk (to the Regality). It is possible he is the same man as William of Hosocate. William of Hosocate (18th C.) probably son of Andrew. The pair witnessed a baptism for John Cavers, herd in Branxholme, in 1711 and for Thomas Anderson in Branxholme Town in 1713. In 1718 he is recorded in a baptism being ‘of Dolieridge [perhaps Delorraine], tenant in Branxholm’. In 1718 he was in Branxholme when his servant William Mitchellhill was married. In 1719 he was in Branxholme when his servants Helen Govenlock married William Hume (servant to Andrew, also at Branxholme) and Margaret Grieve married Walter Bowie. He was one of the Commissioners appointed to oversee the construction of the Teviot Bridge in Hawick. He is probably the William ‘in Branxholm of Hahope’ (this being indecipherable, and possible Hoscote is meant) recorded renting from the Duke of Buccleuch in Cavers Parish in 1723; he also rented Meadshaw that same year. In 1731 he obtained the tenancy of Whitchesters from Robert Scott of Falnash. In 1735 he leased Branxholme Park and part of Branxholme Mains from the Scotts of Buccleuch. He also rented Branxholme Park and other properties in 1737. He was one of 4 men to propose building a stillhouse and brewery in 1738, for which Robert Elliot of Fenwick was leased land by the Duke of Buccleuch the following year; this may have become Hawick’s first distillery and brewery on Slitrig Crescent. He witnessed baptisms in 1738 for a daughter of Town Clerk James Weir and for merchant Andrew Riddell. There is a document of 1739 regarding a dispute between him and Walter Scott of Harden over the lands of Hoscote. His daughter Jean was baptised in Robertson Parish in 1728. He may be the same man as the William recorded at Craik in at least 1714–17. It is possible he is the same William as the tenant in Broadhaugh. William of Hartwoodmyres (b.1712) son of Adam and Jean Erskine. In 1741 he was one of the witnesses to the baptism of Walter Scott, last of Crumhaugh. He was Bailie to the Regality of Jedforest and attached baronies, i.e. appointed as factor to the Duke of Douglas for properties in the Southdean area, as well as elsewhere. He is probably the William recorded in Selkirk in receipts ‘for supply’ in 1742 and ‘for burgh cess’ in 1745. In 1745 he was visited by members of Prince Charlie’s army on their way to England, and forced to pay a ‘tax’. He was Chamberlain to the Duke of Buccleuch from at least 1756 until about 1786, when he was replaced by Adam (probably his son). He acted as Chamberlain for Melrose, Ettrick Forest, Hassendean and Burnfoot. In 1757 he witnessed a baptism for his brother-in-law Walter Grieve, tenant in Branxholme Park. He was recorded as a Commissioner for Selkirkshire in 1761. He appears to have resided at Branxholme from about 1767, the first Chamberlain to do so. In 1778 and 1779 he paid tax for having a male servant at Branxholme. In 1745 he married Elizabeth, daughter of William Elliot (who bought Wolfelee). Their children were: Adam (d.1809), also Chamberlain, who died at Branxholme; Thomas Elliot (b.1751); William, who served with the Royal Navy and died in Antigua; and probably Jane (1758–1802), who married Maj. Gen. William Balfour. There are portraits of him and his wife. He (or another William) may also have married a daughter of John Laing of Westerkirk. William (d.1777) younger son of William, Chamberlain at Branxholme. He entered the Royal Navy in 1775 and died of fever in Antigua. William (1768/9–1818) probably son of Alexander and Elizabeth Little. He was farmer at Greens in Castleton Parish. He is recorded there on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as owner of 2 horses. His children included: Elizabeth (Betty, 1796/7–1870), who married Peter Hope; and probably Little (1793/4–1862), stonemason. William ‘Willie’ (1785–1876), J.P., Laird of Chesters, eldest son of Thomas Elliot and Hannah Dashwood. He was born in India, educated at Edinburgh High School, and then trained as an advocate (although he never practised). He became 2nd Lieutenant in the western troop of Roxburghshire Yeomanry in 1803 (although he missed the ‘False Alarm’, being in Edinburgh at college). He was still ‘junior of Chesters’ when listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805 and 1819. Before he succeeded to Chesters he lived at Ettrickbank, where it said that Burke and Hare would stop by in 1818 with fresh fish on their wagon (which would later convey a corpse back to Edinburgh). He succeeded to Chesters in 1831 and sold the farm of Newton to Thomas Scott of Peel in 1833. He was Chamberlain to the Duke of Buccleuch at least 1836–76 (replacing Major Riddell of Museslee), dealing with business around Hawick, as well as Teviothead, Jedburgh, Selkirk, Eckford and St. Boswells. He thus continued the tradition of his uncle and grandfather. He was the Chamberlain who was living at Branxholme around 1840 when the castle was renovated. A letter from him protesting about the content of Rev. J.A. Wallace’s sermon in Hawick in 1841 is in the National Archives, as well as further letters relating to the siting of the Free Kirk. He was recorded at Branxholme in the 1841 census, along with a dozen servants. He was still there in 1851, back at Chesters House by 1861, but recorded there as Chamberlain in 1868. He was also Deputy-Lieutenant (from 1827), Commissioner of Supply, Justice of the Peace, Tax Commissioner and member of the Police Board.

the Ogilvie Cairn

for Roxburghshire. He is said to have been a persuasive canvasser (on the Conservative side) during the elections after the passing of the Reform Bill. He was an original member of the Jedforest Club and was the first President of the Angling Club set up in Hawick in 1858 (but which later folded). He was listed as owner of Chesters and other lands in the Land Tax Rolls of about 1874. In 1818 he married Alexina, daughter of Alexander Falconer of Woodcot, East Lothian, and she died in 1884 at an advanced age. They had a large family, including Thomas Elliot (who succeeded), William F. (Bengal Army), Alexander, George, Frank and Alexina. He died at Chesters at the age of 91. William (d.1830) said to be brother of Andrew, minister of Linton, and related to the Chesters family. He was probably actually nephew of Rev. Andrew and hence grandson of William, tenant at Broadhaugh. He is probably the William who farmed at Broadhaugh himself. ‘Mr Wm. Ogilvie, Broadhaugh’ is listed among the subscribers to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. William (18th/19th C.) possibly son of Robert, who was farmer at Broadhaugh in 1797. He farmed at Whitrrope as well as Broadhaugh. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beautifuls of the Border’ in 1821. In 1825 he married Janet Byers, who died in 1888, aged 84. Their son was William Robert (b.1827). William Robert (b.1827) son of William and Janet Byers. He farmed at Broadhaugh and Whitrrope. He was listed at Broadhaugh in 1866. On the 1851 census he employed 20 labourers, and they had 2 household servants. William Henry ‘Will’ (1869–1963) poet, who wrote many popular Border poems, including ‘The Road to Robertson’, ‘The Raiders’, ‘Ho! For the Bades of Harden’ and ‘The Barefoot Maid’. He was born at Holefield farm near Kelso, where his father George was a reasonably well-off tenant farmer, 3 past generations of his family having served as Chamberlains to the Duke of Buccleuch. He was the eldest boy in a family of 8 and was educated at Kelso Grammar School by a governess, at Prep School in Yorkshire, and at Fettes College. He spent 1889–1901 in Australia working as a drover and breaker of wild horses, and there his poems of the outback life are well-known. He worked at Belalie Station in Queensland and Maroupe Station in South Australia and became a friend of Harry ‘Breaker’ Morant. He briefly lived in America (with an appointment to the Department of Agricultural Literature in State College, Iowa), and returned to Britain in 1905. He later became a journalist in Edinburgh and was Chair of Agricultural Journalism at Iowa University for 2 years. He returned to the Borders and married Madge Scott-Anderson of Ettricks拯救 in 1908. They raised their son and daughter at Bowden and then moved to Kirklea in Ashkirk, where he spent the rest of his life. He visited Hawick often, for example as Callants’ Club guest in 1910. He was also a Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. He wrote for various newspapers and magazines as well as publishing 16 books of verse and 4 volumes of prose, and was appointed official Bard to the Buccleuch Hunt. ‘My Life in the Open’ (1908) is an early autobiography, while ‘Whaup O’ the Rede’ (1909) is an epic poem of over 100 pages, and ‘The Land We Love’ (1910) is a collection. Many of his local poems collected in ‘The Border Poems of Will H. Ogilvie’ (1959, 1993). His ashes were scattered on the ‘Hill Road to Robertson’. Scocha set his poem ‘The Land We Love’ to music in 2004, and used it as the title for their second album. A cairn was erected in his honour in 1993 on the road between Ashkirk and Robertson, with a memorial plaque (sculpted by Bill Landles) and a replica at Bourke in Australia. After being vandalised, a replacement plaque will be placed at Harden. 2019 marked his 150th anniversary, with an exhibition in the Museum, publication of a reproduction version of ‘Whaup o’ the Rede’, the unveiling of the new cairn and a memorial service in Ashkirk Kirk – ‘Your cairn looks down on Ale Water’s vale and the bonny Lins to Hawk’s Nest, Whitslade and Blawearie where the hill road rins’ [GM] (formerly written ‘Ogilvy’, etc. and sometimes ‘Ogilbie’ or ‘Ogilby’).

O Grade (ò-gràd) n. Ordinary Grade, the basic level of the Scottish Certificate of Education in one of a number of subjects, generally taken in the 4th year of High School, and effectively replaced in 1986 with the Standard Grade. Also used to denote a pass in a particular subject – ‘hei hed O Grade wudwork an techy drawin’.

Oily Tam (oi-lee-tawm) n. nickname in use in the early 19th century.
oith (oith) n., arch. an oath – ‘...the foresaid witnesses depones upon their conscience and the oith that they have made’ [Ash1635].

Old see Auld

Old (öld) n. Rev. Thomas (1682/3–1737) graduating from Edinburgh University in 1705, he became Chaplain to Archibald Douglas of Cavers. He was licensed to preach by Selkirk Presbytery in 1715 and was ordained at Legerwood in 1717. He married Margaret, daughter of John Fullarton of Auchenhay and their only child was Jane, who married Alexander Fall.

Old Mill Town (old-mill-town) n. also sometimes known as ‘Auld Mill Toon’, a song about Hawick, written by David Finnie in 2001. It appeared on the 2002 CD of his band ‘3D’. It has been sung by Finnie and Debbie Lyons at Common Riding functions regularly since. Originally scored for guitar, it was arranged for piano by Ian Seeley. Although clearly about our Town, the word ‘Hawick’ does not appear in the lyrics. The words appear in the 2009 re-edition of the song book.

the Old Statistical Account (thu-old-sta-tis-teek-a-kownt) n. published as ‘The Statistical Account of Scotland’ in 1791–92, it became known as the ‘Old’ or (sometimes ‘First’) ‘Statistical Account’ after the appearance of the ‘New Statistical Account’ in 1834–45. The work was the result of questionnaires sent by Sir John Sinclair of Ullbster to over 900 parish ministers, with 160 questions covering geography, population, agriculture, industry and other topics. The individual parish reports, written by the local ministers, offer an invaluable (although clearly biased) picture of Scotland before the changes wrought by the Industrial Revolution. A ‘Third Statistical Account’ was started in the 1950s, with Roxburghshire being the last volume, published in 1992.

Oldsteson (öld-ste-sin) n. former farmstead, probably in the upper Jed valley near Roughlee. The tenants there in 1669 were Cuthbert, William and James Robson and David Hall.

Olifer see Oliver

Oliphant (o-lee-vur) n. Adam (d.1746) he was ordained as minister of Glenbuchat in Aberdeenshire in 1718. In 1721 he was one of the preachers who filled in at St. Mary’s Kirk when the incumbent was ill; his name was recorded there as ‘Oifer’. In 1721 he married Margaret, daughter of Bailie Martin of Hawick and she died in 1755. Their children included James (merchant in Edinburgh), Samuel, John, Ann and Margaret. Lawrence (c.1434–98), eldest son of Sir John of Aberdalgie, he was 1st Lord Oliphant. He was one of the Justiciars at the Circuit Court in Jedburgh in 1493. Margaret Oliphant Wilson (1828–97) Scottish novelist who usually wrote as ‘Mrs. Oliphant’. Born near Musselburgh, daughter of Francis W. Wilson and Margaret Oliphant. She married her cousin Frank Wilson Oliphant. Her husband died of consumption and she had to support her 3 surviving children through her writing. She wrote mainly historical fiction, including ‘Lilliesleaf: Being a Concluding Series of Passages in the Life of Mrs. Margaret Maitland’ (1855), which used the name of the local village, but had no other connection with it.

Olifer see Oliver

Oliver (o-lee-vur, -fur) n. Abraham (17th/18th C.) recorded at Smallicleughfoot on the 1696 Hearth Tax Rolls. He may thus have been related to the famous ‘Ringan’. Adam ‘Ade’ (15th C.) tenant at Nether Dykeraw in 1541, along with James, Michael, John and Robert. Adam ‘Ade’ (16th C.) listed as tenant at ‘Rowntrehil’ in 1541 along with Marion and John, paying 11 shillings. Several other Oliveres (John, Robert and Robert ‘the schireff”) were tenants in the other parts of the farm and may be related. Adam (16th C.) listed at Hyndhaughhead among Scotsmen who pledged loyalty to the English Crown in 1544. His name comes after ‘Dande’, in the same place, and so he was probably the son or younger brother. Adam ‘Adie’ (16th/17th C.) son of ‘Dand the Lover’. The pair were listed among Scots and other local men who were accused in 1590 of a raid into England 3 years earlier. His name is recorded as ‘Eddie’, which was often an English transcription for ‘Adie’. Probably the same man was listed as ‘Ady Olipher called the Luther’ when he was declared a fugitive in 1605. Adam (17th C.) recorded in a rental roll of 1669 along with Robert Laidlaw. It is unclear where they were tenants, but perhaps Northbank or Slack.

Adam (d.1808) gardener in the ‘East end of the Town’. He died in Hawick. Adam (1774/5–1848) farmer at Chapel in Lilliesleaf. He married Mary Hall, who was from Bowden and died in 1856.
aged 65. Their children included: Adam (b.1803); Andrew (c.1810–92); Anne (d.1899), who married Thomas Turnbull; Mary (b.c.1820); and Thomas (b.c.1822). His children were mostly born in Jedburgh Parish. His wife was a widow at Chapel (recorded aged 77) on the 1851 census for Lilliesleaf. He and his wife are buried in the graveyard at Jedburgh Abbey. Adam (1803–77) eldest son of Adam, farmer at Chapel in Lilliesleaf Parish. In 1841 he was a gardener in Jedburgh. He married Elizabeth Cumming. Their children Adam, Thomas and William emigrated to Australia. Adam (1825/6–86) born in Langholm Parish, son of Robert and Elizabeth Little. He was a joiner on North Hermitage Street in Newcastleton. He was probably the Adam who was an elder of Newcastleton U.P. Kirk in the latter part of the 19th century. He married Marion Murray, who died in 1895, aged 68. Their children included: Robert (1847–49); David, who died in infancy; Margaret (1851/2–67); Helen (1853/4–90); John; Elizabeth; and Ann. Adam (b.1869) from Eccles Tofts, Berwickshire, son of William. He worked as coachman for several people in Berwickshire and around Kelso, before moving to Weens around 1900. He married Helen Hunter and had 3 sons. Agnes (17th C.) resident of Spittal-on-Rule on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. Agnes (17th C.) blacksmith at Chesters according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. She was probably related to other Olivers listed there, namely 2 Johns and 2 Thomases. Agnes (b.1780/1) born in Ettrick Parish, she was a widow who lived at 12 Buccleuch Street. It is unclear who her husband was, but clearly a prominent local man, since she is listed as ‘Ind.’ and ‘House Proprietress’ in the censuses. She was already a widow on the 1841 census and lived until at least 90, since she was still on Buccleuch Street in 1871. In Slater’s 1852 directory she is listed among the local gentry. In about 1874 she was recorded owning part of the former lands of Patrick Cunningham in Hawick. Alexander ‘Sandy’ (15th C.) recorded in 1502. George Douglas, Master of Angus, was fined for failure to prove the arrest of his son Thomas, called ‘Waitschoed’. Alexander (16th C.) tenant in part of Westerhouses in 1541. The tenants in the larger part of the farm were Nicholas and Margaret. Alexander (16th C.) recorded at Westerhouses among men complained about by the English Warden for a raid into England in 1587. He is probably a descendant of the earlier Alexander in Westerhouses. Alexander (18th/19th C.) listed as secretary of the Conservative Reading Room in Pigot’s 1837 directory. Alexander (b.1804) born in Ashkirk Parish, son of John and Anne Niel. He was a miller in the Hawick area. He was at Hallrule in 1841 and Synton Mill in 1851. By 1861 he was toll-keeper at Ashkirk Toll Bar, and was then a widower. He married Jane Scott (from Selkirk) in Hobkirish Parish in 1831 and their children included: Agnes (b.c.1832); John (b.c.1834); Robert (b.c.1836); James (b.1838); Adam (b.1839); William (b.1843); Alexander (b.1845), who probably died in infancy; and Walter (b.1848). Rev. Alexander (b.1827) born at Jedhead, Southdean Parish, son of Thomas and Jane Baptie. He was educated at Mowhaugh School in Bowmont valley, at Yarrow School and at Edinburgh and Glasgow Universities, where he won multiple prizes. In 1854 he became assistant minister of the East U.P. Kirk in Galashiels, moving to Regent Place Church, Glasgow in 1865. He was associated with the Temperance movement and the Liberation Society and published many articles and books. He received a D.D. from Edinburgh University in 1888 and was Moderator of the U.P. Synod in 1894. Andrew (16th C.) tenant at Kilnsyke according to a 1541 rental roll of Jedforest. Andrew (16th C.) tenant at Whiteside in 1541, along with Patrick, Gilbert and John. Perhaps the same ‘Dand’ in Whiteside was pledge for his son and brothers in 1571. He was also one of the leaders of the Olivars for whom the Turnbull and Rutherford chiefs served as pledges in the same year. He was surely related to David, who was recorded as tenant in Whiteside in 1571/2, along with his unnamed brother. His name appears again in 1572/3, along with Olivars and others from Southdean, with Sir Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule and Richard Rutherford of Edgerston as cautioners. Andrew ‘Dand’ (16th C.) recorded in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He is named as ‘Dande Ollyver of Hyndrawghthede’, which was presumably Hyndhaughhead. Andrew ‘Dandy’ (16th C.) listed at Falside among Scotsmen who pledged loyalty to the English Crown in 1544. His name is listed right after Ringan in the same place, and hence they are surely related. Andrew ‘Dand’, ‘the Lover’ (16th C.) listed among men complained about in 1590 by the English Warden for a raid into England in 1587. The others mentioned were local Scotts, as well as a Laidlaw, a Sharp, a Rutherford and a Hall. His son ‘Eddie’ (which probably means ‘Adie’, i.e.
Adam) was also on the list in 1590. It is unclear how they were related to other Olivers. Andrew ‘Lang ANDro’ (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1611 along with Hob of ‘Heidfauldis’ when they refused to pay tithes to the Minister of Jedburgh. Andrew ‘Dan’ (16th/17th C.) tenant in Clarilee in 1610 when Adam Robson was found guilty of stealing a cow from him. Andrew (16th/17th C.) called ‘of Thorterwood’ in Jedforest. He was deceased in 1657 when his grandson inherited his lands in Jedburgh. Andrew ‘Dand’ (17th C.) lived with his son Thomas at West Falside in Southdean Parish about 1640. Andrew (17th C.) tenant in Sneepdykes according to a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. Andrew (17th C.) grandson of Andrew ‘called of Thorterwode’. He inherited his grandfather’s lands in Jedburgh in 1657, ratified by the Earl of Lothian in 1677. Andrew (17th C.) cordiner in Darnickian Melrose. He is recorded in the proceedings of the Melrose Regality Court in 1660. Given the shoemaking trade, there is a possible connection with the Olivers in Hawick. Andrew (17th C.) tenant of Bairnkie. In 1684 his son Andrew was among those listed as fugitives for being a Covenanter. Andrew (either him or his son), along with Richard and Robert, also in Bairnkie (and perhaps also his sons) were listed among those who refused to take the Oath of Allegiance in 1684. He was recorded at ‘barnkin’ in 1690 when listed among people owing money to the deceased Mark Turnbull and Bessie Kerr. He was also listed at Bairnkie on the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. Andrew (17th C.) resident at Slacks in Southdean Parish according to the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694, when he possessed 3 hearths. Andrew ‘Dand’ (17th C.) resident at Roughlee according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. Andrew (17th C.) ‘cottar’ at Hallrule who was listed among the poor in Hob Kirk Parish in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Andrew ‘Dand’ (17th C.) recorded along with Steven as a tenant at Falside on the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls, when they paid tax on 2 hearths. There was a separate Steven also listed, as well as John, plus Thomas and his sons; presumably some of these Oliverse were closely related. Andrew (17th/18th C.) resident at Swinnie. His wife Janet Learmonth (1691/2–1736) was recorded on a tombstone in Abbotrule Kirkyard, along with Isabel (d.1756), possibly his daughter. Andrew ‘Dand’ (18th C.) tenant at Falside in Southdean Parish around 1740, along with Thomas and William. He may be the same Andrew who was tenant at Alton and Adderstoneshiel with William (possibly his brother) in the 1760s. He may be the ‘Dand’ who had the following children christened in Southdean parish: Janet in 1739; unnamed in 1741; and Agnes in 1744. He may be related to the earlier Dand who was recorded at Falside. Andrew (18th C.) tenant in ‘Rigg’ in Cavers Parish when he paid the window tax in 1748. He was probably at Caerlenrig. However, it is unclear how he was related to other Olivers. Andrew (18th C.) tenant at Unthank in Hob Kirk Parish. He farmed there after about 1757, when Unthank was sold by Thomas Scott to William Elliot of Wolfelee. Andrew (18th C.) listed at ‘Fodderlee-birks’ in the subscription list for Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). He may be the same as one of the contemporary Andrews. Andrew (b.c.1765) farmer at Westerhouses in Southdean Parish. His wife was Elizabeth. He was an Elder in the Relief Kirk in Jedburgh. He and his wife travelled there for services in a ‘noddy’. His children included Elizabeth and Janet. He may be the Andrew recorded at Doorpool in the 1794 Horse Tax Rolls. Andrew (b.c.1770) cooper at Kirk Style in Hob Kirk Parish. His wife was Ann. Andrew (d.1811) from Jedburgh, he was the keeper of the Carter Bar Toll. His death is recorded in Hawick. Andrew (18th/19th C.) licensed grocer at 4 High Street. He married Elizabeth (b.1774), 6th child of Walter Purdom. Their children included: Agnes (b.1806); and Andrew (b.1808), a tobacconist at 42 High Street. He may be the ‘Oliver’ whose premises are shown at about No. 42 on Wood’s 1824 map. Andrew (18th/19th C.) eldest son of William of Langraw. As a boy he was taught by James Sanson (archetype for ‘Dominie Sampson’). He was a successful wool stapler and cloth manufacturer in Huddersfield. He inherited Langraw in 1812, having to pay off some debts. It is said that when the Hare Cairn was dismantled he sent the carved cist slab to Abbotsford. He was listed as Andrew of Langraw in Pigot’s 1837 directory. In 1803 he married Jean (or Jane), daughter of Thomas Scott, who farmed at Woollee; she was a first cousin of the writer Sir Walter Scott. He was succeeded by his son William. Andrew ‘Rolly’ (1793–1857) Auctioneer and lawyer, father of James, and founder of Andrew Oliver & Son when he came to Hawick in 1817. He was son of James and Isabel Elliot, born at Marlefield Hope, Eckford. He had a brother William, who was a grain-works managed in Berwick and another brother George, who was a baker in London. He was an apprentice solicitor in Kelso, then worked in Annan, before moving to Hawick. He characteristically always wore a tall, white, felt hat, with a broad, black band. He started the auction mart system in 1847, probably the first of its kind in Britain. He became a member of the Hawick Curling Club in 1819 and was Clerk of the club for many years. He was described as a ‘writer’ when he subscribed to William Scott’s ‘ Beauties of the Border’ in 1821 and Robert Wilson’s ‘ History of Hawick’ in 1825. He is recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory as a writer and ‘ messenger’ on the High Street. His premises at that time were probably one of the 3 places on the High Street marked ‘ Oliver’ on Wood’s 1824 map. In Pigot’s 1837 directory he was listed as an auctioneer on the Sandbed, as well as a ‘ Messenger at Arms’ and writer. In 1852 he was listed at Bridge House as a messenger at arms and ‘ Andrew Oliver & Son’ are listed as writers. He was at the Sandbed in 1841 (probably already in Bridge House) and listed as a writer and auctioneer. By 1851 he was explicitly at Bridge House. In 1852 his company is listed as coal agents at the Station for the Marquis of Lothian’s coal fields, as well as insurance agents for Sun. In Coldstream he married Catherine Brown, who died in 1867, aged 72. Their children included: Jane (b.1815); and James (b.1817), also a local lawyer, accountant and auctioneer. He is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. Andrew (b.1806/7) from Kirkton, he was a tobacconist at 42 High Street. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘ History of Hawick’ in 1825. He was tenant of Denholm Mill. In 1841 he was living at Denholm Mill, but was also a supporter of the Common Riding and patron of racing, hunting and other sports. He lived at Thornwood, died there and is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. A memorial clock to him overlooked the principal ring in the Auction Mart. He became a director of Blenheim, Richardson & Co. in 1909. Oliver Park was named after him. Andrew (1856–1938) 2nd son of Robert and Violet Rodger, he was born at Dinlabyre in Castleton Parish. He became an apprentice blacksmith in Greenlaw, spent some time in Ireland and then was blacksmith at Al lanton, Berwickshire for almost 50 years. Andrew (1885/6–1937) died at Falside and is buried in Southdean cemetery. Anne (b.1811/12) from Langholm, she was son of John, tailor in New castleton. In 1861 she was recorded as ‘ feuar’ at about 15 Hermitage Street, living alone. She may be the Anne who was juvenile librarian in the Parish in the 1860s. Archibald (16th C.) recorded as tenant of half of the lands of ‘ Greithill’ in Jedforest in 1541. Archibald of Bush (d.1843) 2nd son of William of Dinlabyre. He is probably the Archibald, son of William, who became a surgeon-apothecary’s apprentice in Edinburgh in 1799. He joined the 4th Bengal Native Infantry. By 1815 he was made Captain, then became deputy paymaster at Benares and retired at the rank of Major. He possessed Bush (also called ‘ Overton Bush’) near to Edgerston. He became a member of the Jedforest Club in 1826. He married Anne, daughter of Col. John Anderson. They had no children and Bush eventually went to his nephew William, son of his brother John. There are portraits of him and his wife by Sir John Watson Gordon. Archibald (b.c.1790) son of James, he was born in Bedrule Parish and was tenant farmer at Denholm Mill. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘ History of Hawick’ in 1825. He was tenant of Denholm Mill according to Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories. In 1841 he was living at Denholm Mill, but was deceased by 1851. He married Ann Laing and she died in 1857. Their children included: James (b.1820); Agnes (b.1821); Elizabeth (b.1823); Helen (b.1825); Ann (b.1827); Alison (b.1829); Margaret (‘ Maggie’, b.1831); Joanne (b.1833); and John Laing (b.1836). Several of his daughters worked in Hawick as milliners and dressmakers. He was surely related to John, who was also at Denholm Mill in 1825. Arthur (1927/8–2006) worked at Craik Forest, then as a hand-knitter at Deanbrae Mill. He was a keen walker and angler, as well as Common Riding supporter. A stalwart of the Teviotdale Harriers, he joined in 1947, served as President, and in 200 received a trophy for 50 years as a running member. He was well known throughout the Town for his generous spirit. He married Lillian and had children John, Andrew, Margaret and Susan. Barton (b.1835) son of Castleton shepherd George. He may also have been called ‘Angus Barton’, after the local minister. In 1861 he was an agricultural labourer at Bairnkine in Southern Parish and he later farmed at the Dodllins. He married Jessie Murray and their children included Catherine (b.1860), George (b.1862), William (b.1864), James (b.1866), Adam (b.1869), Betsy (b.1871), who married John Mable), Margaret (b.1873), Jessie (b.1876), Jane (b.1879) and David (b.1880). Charles (16th C.) tenant at Slacks in 1541, paying 11 shillings yearly. Thomas and John were tenants in the other part of Slacks. His name is recorded as ‘Carolo Olivere’. Charles son of Robert, he followed his father by working at Lyle & Scott’s, eventually becoming Managing Director. He arranged a partnership with Christian Dior in 1954. He was a Captain during WWI, being awarded the Military Cross. He married Maisie, daughter of baker Thomas Brydon. He lived at Bucklands. Christian (17th C.) listed ‘in Lustruther’ among people declared to be rebels for refusing to take the Oath of Allegiance in 1684. It is unclear if this was a man or a woman. David (d.c.1170) recorded as ‘Oliard’, he was King David I’s godson. He was probably of Norman descent, and had brothers who remained in England. If related to other Olivers (and not the Oliphants), then he is probably the first known ancestor of that family. He served with King Stephen’s army at Winchester in 1141, against his godfather. But when King David escaped he helped him return to Scotland, for which he was granted lands at Smailholm and Crailling, as well as the Barony of Bothwell. Around 1150 he witnessed the grant of the Church of Molle to Kelso Abbey. He granted the tithe of Crailling Mill to the monks of Jedburgh Abbey about 1162, and he also made grants to Dryburgh and Soutra. In 1165 he was Justiciar of Lothian (perhaps the first on record), meaning he exerted authority from the Tweed to the Firth of Forth. He may have married a daughter of Berengar Engaine, who previously held Crailling. He had 5 sons, David (who succeeded), William, Walter, Philip and Fulco (or ‘Fulk’, Parson of Smailholm). David (d.c.1190s) succeeded his father David ‘Oliard’ (although these generations are confused). He had at least 2 sons: Walter, who married a daughter of the Earl of Strathearn and succeeded his father; and David, who married Johannah, heiress of Calder. Thus both sons moved further North, where the name was softened to ‘Oliphant’. David (13th C.) son of Walter, from whom he inherited lands in Roxburghshire at Crailling and Smailholm. He is recorded along with Walter in a charter of Soutra Hospital in 1273. He married Devorguille (whose surname is not given), but died without an heir. Their Border lands went to his sister, who had married Walter of Moray. His wife could be the ‘Devorguilla Olyfart’ who was involved in a lawsuit with Dervorgulla de Baliol in 1289. David ‘Nae Guid Priest’ (d.c.1502) resident of Strynds, which was near Westerhouses in the Rule valley, later called Strange. In 1502 he had remission for being involved in a series of raids, with Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst serving as surety, this included: stealing 12 oxen and cows from Sir David Home at Lammermuir; associating with rebels Thomas and Andrew Grahamslaw; stealing a horse from John Douglas in Jedburgh; stealing 3 horses from a farm at Nisbet; and stealing 20 sheep from George Douglas in Trows. He is recorded there as ‘Dauid oliver in le stryndis, vocatis david na gud preist’, but it is unclear how he got this odd nickname. Presumably he is the David (with no nickname given) also recorded the same year along with Robert ‘in stryndis’ producing a remission for stealing a total of 101 sheep from William Ker at ‘Dernewik-mure’. He was also allowed to pay a fine for his part in stealing sheep from ‘Jedworthel, Rowcastell, Langtoune, and Bethroull’; this was along with Robert and John (brother of Ingram). Also that year he was allowed to pay a fine for a further theft (of a long, detailed list of items) from Martin Wood in Whitfield, this being along with ‘Long John’ and ‘Little John’. Again Ker of Dolphinston and Kerr of Ferniehirst were sureties. Additionally in 1502, along with John son of Gilbert ‘in kilciewis’, he was allowed to compone for stealing 19 sheep and a cow from Maton and six sheep from Muirhouselaw; Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst was his surety. Probably the same David, brother of John son of Gilbert, in Strange, was also recorded in 1502 when they were allowed to compone for stealing a horse and a pot from Ednam. He was recorded further in 1502 as ‘na gude clerk’

when he and John ‘in le stryndis’ were allowed to compone for crimes committed against Gilbert Lamb at Jedburgh, including seriously wounding him; Andrew Kerr was surety. Additionally in 1502 along with Ingram and John in Strange, he had remission for stealing oxen from Ancrum, as well as sheep, a cow and other items from Maxton; after failing to ‘fynde sufficient souerties’ he was sentenced to hanging, along with Robert, Martin and Matthew, all from Strynds (these were probably a mixture of brothers and nephews). All 4 were subsequently captured, and assuming the execution took place, this marks the end for this once powerful rieving branch of the Olivers. In 1505 Robert Oliver, ‘Rob with the Dog’ was given remission for previously intercommuning with him and John ‘Cadger’; his nickname is there recorded as ‘Na-gude-Preist’.

David of ‘Hyndhewche’ (16th C.) recorded in 1557 as the ‘taker’ of John Kerr of Ferniehirst. He was presumably an officer of the Warden, and based at Hyndhaugh in Southdean Parish. Probably the same man is listed as tenant of ‘Hyndhancheild’, i.e. Hindhaughhead in Monipennie’s list of the Border Clans published in about 1594 (but probably earlier). In 1583 William Fencwick of Wallington (near Otterburn) complained that he and 200 others raided his farm, taking cattle, horses and 16 prisoners; this appears to have been a raid into England to recover cattle and other goods stolen from them earlier.

David (16th C.) recorded in 1571/2 as tenant in Whiteside, when John Rutherford of Huntill was surety for him and his brother. Although his brother’s name is not given, this may be ‘Dand’, who was also recorded in Whiteside at about the same time. David (17th C.) recorded as one of the tenants in Falside in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. David (17th C.) recorded as tenant in Southdean in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. He was probably related to James and Thomas, who were also listed as tenants there. David (17th C.) resident of Nether Dykeraw according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. David (17th/18th C.) one of the Olivers of Falside in Southdean Parish, who left there in 1747. He may be the same man as the David recorded at Falside in 1669, or alternatively was a descendant of his. He was tenant farmer at Abbotrule Townfoot. He may have been father of some of Thomas, Dand and William, who were tenants at Falside around 1740. David (b.1829–bef. 1909) labourer in Newcastleton, son of George and Elspeth Murray. He worked as a railway surfaceman. He was at 37 South Hermitage Street in 1861. In 1853 he married Margaret Pott (b.1833) in Hobkirk Parish; she was daughter of Robert Pott and Mary Armstrong. Their children, baptised in Castleton Parish, included: Mary (b.1853); George (b.1855); Robert (b.1857); James (b.1860); Andrew (b.1862); John (b.1864); James (b.1867); and Margaret (b.1873). David Councillor in Newcastleton, representing the village on the County Council in the mid-20th century. He lived on South Hermitage Street. He acted as first Chairman of the village hall committee. Douglas (b.1871) of Hassendeanbank, son of James Oliver and Jane Rutherford. He attended Mill Hill School (where James Murray had taught) and served in the Army during WWI. He entered the family Auctioneering business in 1887 and was sole proprietor by 1918. He was also Secretary of the Curling Club. He was Chairman of the Hawick Heritable Investment Bank and Chairman of the managers of the Cottage Hospital. He served in the Boer War. In 1904 he married Sybil Brown from Galashiels and their children were: Florence Murray (b.c.1905); Muriel Rutherford (b.c.1907); Elsie Margery (b.c.1910); and James Kenneth Murray (‘Ken’, 1914–99). Ebeneser (b.1718) son of James, the Cavers schoolmaster, he was born in Cavers Parish. He was the 3rd generation of his family to be schoolmaster in Cavers. He was certainly there in the 1760s. He was married to Janet Brown, and their children included: John (b.1750); and James (b.1753). In 1762 he had a child born called James. It is possible that his son John was the schoolmaster in Castleton whose son Ebenezer was born in 1778. Ebenezer (18th/19th C.) recorded as watch and clockmaker in Denholm, on Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. He is probably the Ebenezer married to Betty Scott, whose children (born in Cavers Parish) included: John (b.1802), probably a weaver in Hawick with an eldest son also called Ebenezer; James (b.1804); Betty (b.1807); Margaret (b.1809); Thomas (b.1811); and Ebenezer (b.1814). He was surely descended from the earlier schoolmaster. Ebenezer (19th C.) Secretary of the Denholm Horticultural Society in the 1860s. Edward (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 being ‘in Jedforest’, although no more specific designation is given. At the Justice-aire in Jedburgh, the Coroner (William Cranston) was fined for failing to arrest him. Edward (16th C.) tenant at ‘Stryndis’ (i.e. Strange) in a rental roll of 1541. His name is listed as ‘Eduardo Olivero’. He was probably related to other Olivers of Strange.
Edward (16th C.) recorded as being ‘of Lymkylwodd’ in 1544, in a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to England. His lands were somewhere in Jedforest, like the other Olivers listed. Elizabeth ‘Bessie’ (17th C.) listed along with Robert in Bank, on a list of people who refused to take the Oath of Allegiance in 1684 and were declared rebels. Robert was probably her husband. She was among a relatively small number of women who were prosecuted for being Covenanters. Elliot (b.1854) eldest son of lawyer James. He became a partner in the family firm Geo & Jas. Oliver. However, he retired early because of problems with his eyesight. Francis (1749–1829) tenant farmer of Heap. He was one of the founders of the Relief Church in Hawick. He died in Hawick. Francis (19th C.) flesher in Newcastleton. He was listed as male head of his family in 1835 and 1836 and as a carter in 1837. Frederick Scott (1864–1934) born in Edinburgh, son of merchant John Scott Oliver. He became a prominent politician, particularly as a Unionist. In 1915 he purchased the estate of Edgerston from William Edward Oliver (who was not a relation). He married his cousin Katharine Augusta McLaren. Gavin (16th C.) tenant farmer at ‘West Houses’ (possibly Wester Houses in the Rule valley). He is recorded in a bond of 1562 along with William, tenant at Lustruther, who may have been a relative. The 2 of them had to enter Robert Robson, called ‘Foul Mouth’ to John Kerr of Ferniehirst. Geoffrey (15th C.) father of Matthew. His son was recorded at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1493 when he was fined for non-appearance, along with other Olivers. George (16th C.) recorded as ‘Gorge Ollyver of Whitside’ in a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Whiteside, and hence probably related. The 2 of them had to enter Robert Robson, called ‘Foul Mouth’ to John Kerr of Ferniehirst. George (16th C.) tenant in ‘Clarely’ listed along with 2 other Oliver chiefs in Monipennie’s list published around 1594 (but probably from earlier). This was the farm of Clarilee, lying roughly between Hyndhaughhead and Roughlee. George (16th C.) recorded in Chesters in 1571, when he was one of the 3 main leaders of the Olivers for whom Sir Thomas Turnbull, John Turnbull of Minto, Richard Rutherford of Edgerston and John Rutherford, younger of Huntill, served as pledges. He was listed again in 1572/3 along with other Olivers, as well as William Kirkton of Stewartfield, with Sir Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule and Richard Rutherford of Edgerston as their cautioners; this appears to have been in relation to Kerr of Ferniehirst being declared a fugitive and all his former supporters swearing allegiance to the Crown. George (17th C.) recorded in 1669 as tenant in ‘Slacks’, along with William, who was surely a close relative. John was also listed as tenant there. He witnessed the baptism of a daughter of John Ker of Shaw at Southdean Kirk in 1681. George (17th C.) recorded as one of the tenants in ‘Townheid’ (near Chesters) in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. George (d.c.1685) tenant in Swinie when his will was recorded in 1685. He was surely related to Thomas, who was at Swinnie at the same time. George (17th C.) brother of Thomas of Ashtrees. In 1691 he wounded Robert Rutherford, Minister of Ancrum, following an attempt to disrupt the service there. This was presumably still fall-out from the days of persecution of the Covenanters. George (17th C.) resident of Northbank according to the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. George (17th C.) resident of Strange in Southdean Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. He was surely related to John who was also listed there in 1694, as well as James recorded there in 1689. George (17th C.) recorded at Woodhouse on the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. George (17th/18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. In 1699, along with shoemaker Robert (presumably a relative, perhaps his brother), he witnessed a baptism for cooper John Turnbull. He was shoemaker in 1712 when he witnessed a baptism for cook James Wright. He married Jean ‘Betic’ (i.e. Beattie). Their children included: Janet (b.1701); Isobel (b.1701); Margaret (b.1703); Grizel (b.1705); and Agnes (b.1708). The witnesses in 1703 included Robert and in 1705 were carrier John ‘Atkin’ and Henry Orrock. Bessie (b.1696) may also have been his daughter. It is unclear how he was related to the later shoemaker George. He could be the George who witnessed baptisms for the other George in 1726, 1728 and 1731. He is probably the George ‘Senior Shoemaker’ who witnessed a baptism for tailor Thomas Kay in 1739. George (18th C.) Hawick shoemaker; said to be from the Dykeraw Olivers, he may have been son of Robert and Agnes Atkins (or Atkin). He may be the George who witnessed a baptism for shoemaker Robert (and Bessie Blackhall) in Hawick in 1730. He is described as ‘senior’ in 1740, so he probably had a son George at that time. In 1721 he married Margaret, eldest daughter of John Aitkin. Their children included: Robert (b.1722); John (b.1724); Agnes (or Annie, b.1726), who married George Douglas, from the Timpendean branch; George (b.1728); James (b.1729); Margaret (b.1731); William (b.1733); Isobel (b.1736); Walter (b.1738); and Bessy (b.1745). The witnesses in 1726 were George and Robert Oliver, in 1728 were George and Walter (presumably near relatives), in 1731 were George (again) and John Telfer (perhaps the Beadle), and in 1745 were weaver Andrew Jerdon and mason Adam Turnbull. In 1725, along with cooper John Aitkin (perhaps his father-in-law), he witnessed a birth for miller John Henderson. He is probably the shoemaker George who witnessed baptisms for shoemaker Robert in 1757 and 1765, suggesting that this Robert (of Burnflat) was his son. He may be the George recorded in 1788 as owner of Burnflat (although that may indicate that he had purchased the land earlier, and may well have been deceased by then). George (c.1770–1837) son of William and Jean Nichol, he was born at Blinkbonny. He worked as a shepherd in Castleton Parish, but emigrated to the U.S.A. (with his whole family, except for the eldest son George) and died at Mishawaka, Indiana only a couple of years later. He married Elizabeth Irving and their children included: George (b.1803); John (b.1807); Andrew (b.1809); Jane Grey (b.1810); Dorothy Irwin (b.1815); Robert (b.1817); William Irving (b.1821); and James (b.1825), who became famous for improving the plough. George (18th/19th C.) flesher in Newcastleton. He is listed among heads of households in 1835 and 1836. He was surely related to Francis, also a butcher in Newcastleton. George (b.c.1795) mason in Hawick. He is listed among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1835–41. In 1835 he was at Dovemount, at Stellhouse in 1840 (the address changed to ‘Toll Bar Hawick’) and at the Toll Bar in 1841. He was living at the Western Toll Bar on the 1841 census, with wife Mina and children William, Isabel, Margaret and James. George ‘Pie Oliver’ or ‘Pies’ (c.1800–47) baker on the Howeagate, at about No. 19. He may have been son of William ‘Little Cash’. His wife made pies at 19 Howeagate, which presumably gave the nickname for the family. He married Janet or ‘Nannie’ Brown (from Selkirk), who died in 1881, aged 87. Their children included: William (b.1822); Thomas (b.1824); Catherine; Agnes (c.1828–1901), who married Robert Murray; Janet; George; and Robert. The three brothers who were stockmakers, George, ‘Jock the Hoist’ and William, may have been his sons. He may have been related to James, who was an earlier baker in Hawick. His wife was working as a washer-woman on the Back Row in 1851. It is also unclear whether he could be the George ‘of Burnflat’ who was recorded as a heritor in 1854 (after his death); he seems likely to be the George recorded as owner of Burnflat on the 1811 Land Tax Rolls. George (1803–72) eldest surviving son of Town Clerk John. He was Cornet in 1824. He trained as a lawyer, and in 1831 went into partnership with his father as a ‘writer’ and bank agent. In 1837 he is listed along with his father as agent for the Commercial Bank. In 1841 he was living on Buccleuch Street and was there in 1851, recorded as ‘Procurator in Sheriff Court of Roxburgh Shire’. The firm was thus ‘John and George Oliver’, but became ‘Geo. & Jas. Oliver’ on the death of John in 1849, when his younger brother became a partner. He was local agent for the Duke of Buccleuch, as well as being political agent for the Conservative Party in Hawick and Liddesdale. He was mentioned as one of the local ‘fictitious voters’ in an investigation of 1837 (along with John and Robert Anderson they bought property in Selkirkshire, apparently in order to gain the ability to vote there). He had a prominent role in the Hawick to Carlisle railway extension. He was probably the George ‘of Burnflat’ who was recorded as a heritor in 1854; he seems likely to be the George recorded as owner of Burnflat on the 1811 Land Tax Rolls (his son John inheriting these lands from him). He became tenant at Borthaugh in 1860. He served as a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire. He was also one of the Orrock Trustees and served as Chairman of the Parochial Board for Kirkton Parish. He married Margaret, daughter of John Lindsay of Almericcloss (Forfarshire) at Arbroath in 1843. Their children were: Margaret Spink (b.1844); Jane (b.1846); Mary (b.1848), who married Surg.-Gen. Peter Stephenson Turnbull, descendant of the Bedrule Turnbulls; John (b.1850), also a Hawick lawyer; Jane (b.1852); Christian (b.1854), who married David Turnbull of Fenwick and Brieryyards; George Lindsay (b.1857), farmer, who spent time in New Zealand; and James Lindsay (b.1860), who also spent time in New Zealand with his brother. A portrait of him exists. His wife’s portrait, by Atkinson Horsburgh, is in the Museum, painted in 1883. George (b.1803) son of Liddesdale shepherd George and Elizabeth Irving. His brother James was the manufacturer of ‘Oliver’s Chilled Plough’ in South Bend, Indiana. He was the only one of his brothers not to emigrate to America. He was shepherd at Gatehousecote and elsewhere. He married Elspeth Murray. Their children included: William (b.1827), who became Steward at Gatehousecote; David (b.1829), who lived at the family home in Newcastleton; Elizabeth (b.1831), who married Adam Crozier; James Binnie (b.1834), who probably died young; and Barton (b.1835), who farmed at ‘the Dodlys’ near Hawick. George (c.1820–1900) son of John and Agnes Rutherford. He was born in Scotland, probably near Hawick. He moved to the Galt, Ontario area with his father and family. He married Elizabeth Turnbull (d.1868) and their children included John, James, Andrew, William, Thomas, Elizaebth, George, Agnes, Agnes (again) and Robert. Most of his family moved to Carberry, Manitoba, being among the first settlers there. George Lindsay (b.1857) son of Hawick lawyer George. He went to New Zealand and bought property there with his brother James. However, he returned to farm at Whitehaugh (near Newcastleton) and later lived in Hawick. George Currie Stenhouse (1900–73) born in Glasgow, from a Borders branch of the Olivers. His family moved to Hawick and in the 1920s he decided to emigrate to Canada. He worked as a herd in New Liskeard, Ontario, but travelled extensively while looking for work. On a return trip to Hawick he met Anne Murray (1895–1977) and she followed him back to Canada where they were married in 1931. The couple returned to Hawick in 1936. Gilbert (15th C.) father of Robert, James and William. His sons were separately fined at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1493, for non-appearance to answer for unspecified crimes. He could be the same Gilbert who (along with John ‘benkis’) had 2 cows stolen by Philip Waugh in Jedburgh, with Waugh having remission in 1494/5. Perhaps the same Gilbert is mentioned in 1502 when his son John in ‘stryndis’ had remission for stealing a horse and a sword from Smallholm. Gilbert (16th C.) tenant at Whiteside in Jedforest in 1541, along with Patrick, Andrew and John. Gilbert (16th C.) tenant at Hindhaughead in 1541 along with his mother Margaret. They paid 25 shillings yearly. Gilbert (16th C.) tenant at Over Dykeraw in 1541. He was probably related to other nearby Olivers, e.g. the tenants at Nether Dykeraw. Gilbert ‘Gib’ (16th C.) recorded in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He is named as ‘Gybe Ollyver of the Dykis’. His lands may have been the Dykes in Bedrule, or perhaps more likely is Dykeraw in Southdean (given the family connection and forename). Gilbert (17th/18th C.) farmer at Dykeraw, recorded in a list of tenants in Jedforest in 1669. He was probably son of Robert, also listed there. He married a Douglas and their son was James, baptised in Southdean Parish in 1694. He was ancestor of George and James of the Hawick legal firm. Gilbert (18th C.) recorded as ‘farmer in Hawick’ who was deceased in 1754 when his daughter Ann married Andrew Ford in Edinburgh (or this may have been the Ann, daughter of Gilbert and Janet Turnbull, born in Hawick in 1738). He may have been born in Jedburgh Parish in 1712. Gilbert (18th C.) workman and carrier in Hawick Parish. In 1768 he witnessed a baptism in Hawick for Walter Stevenson and Janet Oliver (probably his daughter). He is also probably the carrier Gilbert who witnessed a baptism for Francis Aitkin and Anne Oliver (likely his daughter) in Hawick in 1766. He married Janet Turnbull and their children included: Anne (b.1738); Janet (b.1741); Helen (b.1744); and Robert (b.1746). The 1741 baptism was witnessed by merchant John Ruecastle and ‘Officer’ John Telfer and the 1746 one by Bailie Robert Scott and merchant William Oliver. Gilbert (18th/19th C.) resident at Chester’s (Southdean) according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He is listed right after Thomas, who may be a relation. Helen nee Elliot (18th C.) only child of William Elliot of Myredykes. In 1797 she married ironmonger James Oliver in Hawick. Her first children were born in Hawick, and then the family moved to Borthwickbrae Burnfoot, where her husband became tenant farmer. A story is recounted of how when she was married she brought a collie dog from Myredykes, and every sheep clipping season the animal would disappear from Hawick for a few days, since it had set off to help round up the sheep. In 1851 she was recorded as an ‘Annuitant’ living at Almoor Cottage with her unmarried daughters Rachel, Eliza and Isabella, as well as 2 servants. Helen (b.1825) from Cavers Parish, son of Archibald. She was the eldest of 4 sisters who were living at about 61 High Street in 1851 and working as milliners and dressmakers. She was listed with her sister Ann in Slater’s 1852 directory. Henry (16th C.) recorded in 1601 as the deceased ‘Henrie Olyphyer’. He had been killed by Thomas Kerr and his servant George Gladner, who were denounced as rebels for the crime. This pair were later killed by a group of Turnbuls and others in Jedburgh. Henry (b.1806) agricultural labourer and shepherd in Southdean Parish, son of William, who was hind to the Laird of Langraw. In 1841 he was at Abbotrule farm and was farm steward at West Fodderlee in 1851 and 1861. In 1840 in Southdean he married Isabella Renwick from Morebattle; she died at Burnflit in 1895, aged 87. Their children were: Isabella (b.1841), who married Thomas Welsh; Robert (b.1843), a marine engineer who was lost at sea; Helen (again, b.1851); and Helen (again, b.1851). Ingram (15th C.) recorded as ‘chairleis’ in 1493 when he was fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. His residence could be associated with Charlie’s Hill or Charlie’s Knowe in Southdean Parish. He may be the same Ingram against whom premeditated crimes were committed in Jedburgh by William Kirkton in Kirkton, according to the 1494/5 Justice-aire. He could be the Ingram for whom George Douglas Master of Angus was fined for failing to arrest (along with Thomas ‘Waitschod’ and James). Ingram (15th/16th C.) son of Robert in Strange and brother of John. In 1494/5 he was listed among 8 Olivers and a Shiel when they had remission for communing with the English. He could be the same man as Ingram in ‘chairleis’. In 1502, along with his brother John, and David ‘Nae Guid Preist’, he had remission for stealing oxen from Ancrum, as well as sheep, a cow and other items from Maxton; he was there recorded being ‘in le stryn-dis’ and his surety was Mark Ker of Primside Loch. Also in 1502 his brother John was allowed to compone for stealing 2 oxen from Jedburgh with him, as well as other thefts (without him). Ingram (16th C.) farmer at Harwoodtown. ‘Ingrem Ofleris barne and zaird’ (i.e. ‘barn and yard’) are listed in the 1562 Baronial dispute over lands in Feu-Rule, being assigned to Agnes Herries as superior. Presumably the same ‘Ingra’ was listed as ‘man and servand’ of Thomas Turnbull of Harwoodtown (brother of David Turnbull of Wauchope) in 1567, when his master was ordered to present him to answer charges related to raids into England. Isabel (b.c.1800) grocer on the High Street in Pigot’s 1837 directory. In 1841 she was at about 30 High Street. Isobel (17th C.) listed at Dykeraw among the poor of Southdean Parish in the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. James (15th C.) assigned the lease of the Crown lands of Garlawcleuch in the Yarrow valley in 1489 along with his son John. It is unclear how he might have been related to other Olivers. James (15th C.) son of Gilbert. He is recorded in 1493 when he was fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. His brother Robert was also fined at the same time, as well as Matthew son of Geoffrey, Robert brother of Matthew and Martin brother of Robert. William, son of Gilbert, was also fined, and probably his brother too. He was also recorded in 1494/5 among 8 Olivers and a Shiel (connected with Strange) who had remission for communing with the English; he was there stated to be brother of Robert, who was son of Gilbert, and also brother of William. He could be the James for whom George Douglas Master of Angus was fined for failing to arrest (along with Thomas ‘Waitschod’ and Ingram). James (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 as ‘burgess’ (presumably of Jedburgh, or else a nickname) at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. Along with Robert in Lustruther, Robert (nephew of David) and Robert Waugh in Mervinslaw, he had a remission for a raid on ‘Kelshop’, which resulted in the slaughter of Robert Brig and Adam ‘Barnisfader’; his surety was Ralph Ker of Primside Loch. It seems likely he was related to the Olivers of Strynds. James (15th/6th C.) son of Gilbert in ‘stryndis’. In 1502 he and his brother John had remission for a series of crimes: stealing an ox from Ancrum; stealing 2 cows from Jedburgh; and treason. His surety was Robert Douglas, uncle of the Laird of Bonjedward. Also in 1502, along with brothers Matthew and Martin, he was allowed to compone for stealing 200 sheep from the tenants of Jedburgh, Ruecastle, Lanton and Bedrule; his surety was again Robert Douglas. James ‘the Prince’ (15th/6th C.) charged at the 1510 Court of the Justiciary in Jedburgh. His crimes included theft of sheep from various people. James (16th C.) recorded as tenant in Mervinslaw in a rental roll of 1541, along with William, Margaret and William alias ‘Merchant’. His steading was valued at 25s. James (16th C.) tenant at Waterside in 1541, along with Marion Young and Robert Young. It seems likely that they were related somehow. They paid 22 shillings yearly. James (16th C.) tenant at Nether Dykeraw in 1541, along with Michael, John, Adam and Robert. His name was given first, suggesting that he was the senior family member. James (16th C.) admitted as ‘perpetual vicar’ of Castleton in 1559. It is unclear how long he remained. James (d.1573) recorded as ‘somtyme servandis to Blak Ormistoune’ when he was convicted and hanged along with William Donald. Their crimes included stealing livestock and burning the corn of Sir Andrew Kerr. It is unclear if he had direct local connections.
James (17th C.) monk at Jedburgh Abbey in the period 1542–81. He held the title of Prior of Canonbie in the 1570s, but probably continued to reside in Jedburgh. He is recorded in 1573 as ‘Dene James Oliver Pryour of Cannaby’ in a case before the Privy Council regarding some lands in Canonbie. It is unclear where he came from.

James (17th C.) schoolmaster in Cavers Parish. He is said to have accompanied the ‘Guid Leddy Cavers’ to conventicles on Ruberslaw and at Haggburn. His son James took over as schoolmaster at Cavers. He is also said to have kept a personal narrative of his experiences attending secret Covenanter sermons and escaping from the dragoons, stories that were passed down in his family for several generations. His son James was schoolmaster after him. James (17th C.) recorded as tenant of ‘Souden’ i.e. Southdean in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. James (17th C.) recorded as tenant of Hyndhaughhead in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. James (17th C.) tenant in Ashtrees.

He is recorded in 1684 when his son Thomas was listed as a Covenanter fugitive. He himself refused to take the oath and was banished to Jamaica. James (17th C.) recorded as ‘of Stryndis’ (i.e. Strange) in 1689 when he complained that the Parish Minister had not read out the Articules of Estate or prayed for William and Mary. He was probably related to George and James who were recorded at Strange in 1694. James (17th C.) cottar at Rulletonfoot according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. James (17th C.) resident of Over Dykeraw according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. James (17th/18th C.) schoolmaster in Cavers Parish, son of James, who had been schoolmaster before him. It was said that he was a very strict and pious man. He would spend an hour each evening in the old church, reading scriptures by candle-light. He gave his sons names from the Bible: Ebenezer, who succeeded as schoolmaster; Samuel (b.1702), who became schoolmaster in Hobkirk Parish; and Nathaniel. Douglas of Cavers ordered that he be buried in the church, ‘for a man who had haunted it so much when alive deserved to sleep his last slumber under its roof’. He was presumably Session Clerk for Cavers, as well as Schoolmaster, and responsible for the entries in the Parish register. He probably taught his son to write, since essentially the same hand can be seen in the baptismal records from at least the 1690s until the 1760s. James ‘Jafra the Piper’ (17th/18th C.) formerly resident of Kirkton Parish, he was in Hawick in the early 1700s. His nickname was also given as ‘Jafray’. In 1717 he was summoned to Hawick Kirk Session for abusing William Riddell on the street, and asked to supply testimonials from his former parish. Later that year he was called to task again for ‘a relapse in drunkenness and rambling in ye streets occasioning the school boyes to follow after him through the toun’. And later that year, after not presenting the requested testimonials was given a final ultimatum, after which he would be handed to the Magistrates. It seems that they did not continue in ‘extruding him out of ye toun’ at this time. He was probably the same James, ‘toun officer’ who was rebuked in 1718 for playing (presumably the pipes) in front of William Whaton, who rode through the town ‘in a military posture’ for some kind of bet; he stated he was ‘urged and pressed by the scholars to play before William’. In 1719 he was again rebuked ‘for his indecent carriage in his drunkenness’, specifically for ‘rambling in his drunkenness and troubling the minister in his chamber’, again being given a last chance to reform his behaviour. He married Agnes Telfer in England (presumably a quick wedding) in 1720. This ‘irregular marriage on the English side’ may have been the last straw, since the Session then went over the records of his past mis-deeds and sent a ‘memorial’ to the Magistrates adding that ‘if they concurred not with ye Session the minister would make address to another judge to extrude him and to divest him of his service through the toun’. He appears to have been Hawick’s Town Piper for at least 1717–20 and was replaced by Robert Fowler about 1721. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living at Ashybank in 1709, 1716 and 1718. His children included Elizabeth (b.1709), Thomas (b.1716) and Agnes (b.1718). The later tenant in Ashybank, with the same name, was perhaps related. James (b.1694) son of Gilbert, and probably grandson of Robert, farmer at Dykeraw. He was born in Southdean Parish and was a carrier, later becoming tenant farmer at Earlside. He married Bessie Douglas in 1722 and their children were: James (b.c.1723), who died in infancy; and Isabella (b.c.1725), who married James Learmonth in Bedrule. In 1729 he secondly married Margaret, daughter of James Douglas of the Trows, who owned (or had the tenancy of perhaps) the farm of Earlside. He was by then in Hawick Parish, where he was recorded as ‘workman’; in 1743 and 1746 he was listed as a carrier in Hawick, and he presumably took over the farm at Earlside shortly afterwards. He is probably the James, senior, who witnessed baptisms in 1767, as well as in 1771 for merchant John (his son) and in 1772 for merchant James (also his son). He may be the James who witnessed a baptism for wheelwright James Aitkin and Mary (perhaps his daughter) in 1772. He may be the ‘James Oliver, sen. merchant’ in Hawick who subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784), along with his son James. With Margaret Douglas he had 5 sons and 4 daughters, all baptised in Hawick Parish, including: Betsy (b.1730); James (b.1732), ironmonger in Hawick; Mary (b.1734); Agnes (b.1738); Christian (1738–1804); John (b.1740), merchant in Hawick; Robert (b.1743), who probably became a surgeon in North Berwick; and Gideon (b.1746). The witnesses in 1743 were shoemaker Robert (who may therefore have been a relative) and maltman John Moss and in 1746 were ex-Bailie Robert Howison and carrier John Scott. James (18th C.). Married to Agnes Telfer, their son Robert was born in Hawick in 1724. James (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was tenant in Ashybank in 1755. He married Isabel Walker and their children included Elspeth (b.1751), Betty (b.1753) and Isabel (b.1755). Other children, baptised in Cavers Parish, who may be his, included John (b.1745), Helen (b.1746), James (b.1747) and John (b.1757). He may be a descendant of the earlier James at Ashybank. James (1732–1820) 2nd son of James of Earlsdie and Margaret Douglas. It is said that when Prince Charlie’s army passed through Hawick in 1745 his father sent him into the country with his horse for safety. He was Cornet in 1764. He had an ironmonger’s business near ‘the Cross’ in Hawick and became tenant of the Duke of Buccleuch’s farm at Crumhaugh Hill. In 1767 and 1777 he was witness for baptisms for merchant John (his brother). He is probably the merchant who in 1779 (although the date is uncertain) witnessed a baptism for shoemaker Robert (perhaps a relative) and Helen Scott. He is recorded as a merchant in 1781 and is probably the James who paid the Shop Tax in Hawick in 1785. He was Bailie several times in the period 1790–1810. He married Christian, daughter of Robert Elliot of Caerlenrig. They had 5 sons and 3 daughters, including: James (b.1766); Robert (b.c.1769); John (b.1770), who became a lawyer and Town Clerk; William (b.1772); Christian (b.c.1773), who may have married John Sibbald in Edinburgh in 1792; Thomas (b.1775); Margaret (b.1777); and Mary (b.1781), who probably married Bailie Thomas Turnbull. For the 1766 baptism he was recorded as a merchant and the witnesses were John and Francis Elliot (his wife’s brothers). In 1772 the witnesses were Francis Elliot (again) and James senior (probably his father) and in 1777 were the whole congregation. He could be the James whose child was buried in Hawick in 1772. He is buried at St. Mary’s. Note that there is some confusion in that another James was born to his parents in 1740, which is assumed to be an error for John. James (18th C.) tenant at Ashybank, probably son of the previous James who was there. He was recorded at Ashybank in 1778 when his son James was baptised in Cavers Parish. He was also recorded at Haughhead when several of his children’s baptisms were later recorded together, specifically Isabel (or ‘Tibby’, b.1784), Jean (b.1786) and John (b.1789) were probably also his children. James (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was living at Rough-hope in 1785 when his son William was baptised. He is probably the James who married Isabel Scott and had other children, mostly baptised in Roberton Parish, namely: Isabel (b.1783); Nelly (b.1790); John (b.1792); and James (b.1799), baptised in Ashkirk. James (18th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish. His children included: John (b.1780); James (b.1784); Peggy (b.1786); Archibald (b.1789); George (b.1792); and Robert (b.1795). His defeat (in his 89th year) is recorded in the Edinburgh Magazine. James (18th C.) tanner who was Cornet in 1782. The Council banned the carrying of pistols at the Common Riding that year, but he would have none of it, and they were not finally dispensed with until 1784. He lived at 23 High Street, the ‘All Was Others’ house, which is shown belonging to ‘Oliver’ on Wood’s 1824 map. James (b.1766) son of ironmonger James, and descended from the Dykeraw family. He farmed at Borthwickbrae Burnfoot. He is probably the James who subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784), along with James ‘sen. merchant’, who was probably his father. It is possible he was the merchant called James who was listed in Hawick in the 1791–97 Horse Tax Rolls. In 1797 in Hawick he married Helen (b.1777), only child of William Elliot of Myredykes in Castleton Parish. Their children included: Rachel (b.1799); James (b.1801), who continued to farm Borthwickbrae Burnfoot; Christian (b.1803); Helen (b.1804); Margaret (b.1806); Mary (b.1809); Elizabeth (b.1815); Mary (b.1817); William Elliot (b.1819), who spent some time in Australia; and Isabel (b.1821). Other children may have been Jane and Mina. The first few children were born in Hawick Parish and the rest in Roberton. James (1754/5–1839) merchant in Newcastleton. He was recorded at Newcastleton on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when he owned 2 horses. He married Jane Armstrong, who died in 1814, aged 53. Their children included: Peter (1789/90–1845), also a merchant; Adam (1798/9–1816); and 2 who died in infancy. They are buried in Ettrickton Cemetery. James (18th/19th C.) recorded as farmer at Kirkton, on the Horse Tax Rolls of 1797. Thomas is listed before him and so possibly related. He also paid the dog tax at Kirkton in 1797. James (18th/19th C.) farmer at Hermiston in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls for Lilliesleaf Parish, when he owned 8 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Minto, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. James (1765–1840s) baker in Hawick, son of Robert and Isabel ‘Kenmure’. He was Cornet in 1784. It was said that he continued to carry pistols at the Common riding, although it had been decreed to discontinue the practice the previous year. However, when his brother-in-law William Wilson was Cornet in 1786, the pistols were finally abandoned. He is probably the baker James who (along with Robert of Burnflat, his father) witnessed a baptism in 1789 for James Farquhar and Margaret (perhaps his sister). He is probably the baker (and Bailie) called Oliver who was one of the first members of the Curling Club in 1803. He helped compile a ‘New Valuation of Houses and Gardens in the Town of Hawick’ in 1814. He was listed in the 1808 will of William (‘Auld Cash’) as his second cousin. He was probably the James appointed Chief Magistrate of Hawick in 1818. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825, when he is listed as being ‘of Burnflat’. In 1789 he married Ann, daughter of Walter Wilson, but they had no family, and she died in 1809. Probably the same baker James married Elizabeth Purdom. Their children included: Elizabeth (b.1818); Isobel (b.1820), who became Mrs. McIntosh; Robert William (1822–49), also a baker; Agnes (b.1823), who married blacksmith James Bowie; and William James (b.1824), also a baker. The family were living at about 43 High Street in 1841, and his wife was a widow there in 1851 (and listed as ‘landed proprietrix’). In 1809 he was recorded being ‘in Birselton’. He is probably the James who was also referred to as being ‘of Burnflat’; this is how he is listed among the major landowners of Hawick Parish in 1839. According to James Wilson he described Burnflat as ‘ane nourice fee’ (i.e. the wages given to a wet-nurse, although it is unclear what that meant). James (18th/19th C.) from Westshiels in Southdean Parish. He married Jane Bruce, who was from Jedburgh. Their son William was baptised in Byrness in 1812. James (18th/19th C.) Treasurer of the Burgh of Hawick recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. He may be the same James who was a member of the Curling Club in 1812. He may also be the James who is recorded on Wood’s 1824 map as owner of property at the east end of Langlands Road and also along the east side of Roadhead. James (1801–80) son of James, he also became tenant at Borthwickbrae Burnfoot. He was listed on the 1834 electoral roll as a joint proprietor. He was one of the Tory supporters who received ‘Tully’s Mill’ at the 1837 election. He apparently withstood the mob longer than anyone else, getting loose 3 times before finally being thrown into the Slitrig (4 men were later found guilty of rioting). However, he later wrote to Bailie Wilson, thanking him for the loan of some clothes, and stating that he ‘felt only a little stiff, and that he was a few slight bruises’. He was at Borthwickbrae Burnfoot in 1841 and in 1851 was listed as tenant there, farming about 1200 acres and employing 4 labourers. He farmed at Howparley from 1858, was farming 3800 acres there, and employed 9 people: he was still recorded there in 1868. In 1842 he married Dorothea (or Dorothy, d.1891), daughter of William Moffat, farmer at Garwald, Eskdalemuir. His children included: James (b.1844); William Moffat (1846–1910), the eldest surviving son; Jane (1848–1918); Helen Elliot (b.1850); John (b.1852); and Thomas (b.1854). His younger sons went abroad. James (b.1804/5) stockingmaker in Denholm, probably on Eastgate. In the 1860s he was listed as a stocking-maker in Denholm, suggesting he had his own business. His wife was ‘Barbary’ and their children included George and Barbara. There is an obelisk to their memory at Borthwick Waas. James (1814–1900) 4th surviving son of Hawick lawyer and Town Clerk John. He trained as a lawyer himself and was partner in the firm of George & James Oliver with his older brother. In 1841 he was living on Buccleuch Street with his father and siblings, and was described as a clerk. He could be the James who was ‘sub-distributor’ in the stamp office on Buccleuch Street in Pigot’s 1837 directory. He was living at Teviot Lodge in 1861. In the mid-1800s he was recorded as owner of parts of Roughheugh that had previously belonged to John and William Thomline, Adam and George Easton and James Hart. He had Mayfield House built on land that he inherited from his father. He was a Town Councillor, serving as Chairman of Wilton Parochial Board, Wilton Landward School Board and Wilton Heritors’ Committee. In 1852 he married Thomasina Pott (1830–80), sister of Gideon Pott of Knowesouth and daughter of George and Jane Elliot. Their children were: Elliot (b.1854), who was a partner with Geo. & Jas. Oliver for a while, but retired and left the district; Jane Pott (b.1858), who married John Elliot of Binks; Christian Watson (b.1860), buried at Ainzahatta, Spain; James John (b.1864), partner in the legal firm; Elizabeth Murray (b.1866), also buried at Ainzahatta; as well as George (b.1860), Mary Georgina (b.1866) and Thomas (b.1868), who all died young. He retired about 1893 and is buried in the Welloagate Cemetery. Papers from roughly 1895–1919 are in the Borders Archive.

James Rutherford (1817–1905) Auctioneer and Livestock Salesman of Bridge House and later Thornwood, only son of Andrew. He trained as a lawyer, and then joined his father’s auctioneering business. He was a leading figure in the town in Victorian times, being a Town Councillor, Magistrate, J.P. (from 1888), Chairman of Hawick Heritable Investment Bank, Governor of Hawick Savings Bank (1890–94), Secretary and Treasurer of the West Teviotdale Agricultural Society (1842–1905), founder member, Honorary Secretary and Treasurer of the Teviotdale Farmers’ Club (1859–1905), President of the Border Burghs’ Conservative Association (1878–92), President of the Archeological Society (1883–88). He was also a member of the Curling Club from 1844, being Secretary for several years, and the first Secretary of the Hawick Bowling Club. He was also Senior Magistrate 1857–58, resigning during the dispute over the railway line. He offered a site on Bridge Street for the new Evangelical Union (later Congregational) Church, but the congregation declined the offer at the time. He is said to have formed the Teviotdale Farmers’ Club after being black-balled from joining the other one (presumably the Agricultural society, formed earlier by Douglas of Cavers). He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1852. He had the splendid Thornwood House built and is believed to have been owner of the first car in Hawick (a photograph shows him with a chauffeur and another man-servant in the grounds of Thornwood). Oliver Crescent and Oliver Place are named after him; his monogram ‘JRO’ is above 2 of the dormer windows at No. 3 Oliver Place, and the carved head above the entrance may be his likeness. In about 1874 he is listed as owner of the parts of Weensland and the ‘particicate’ lands of Hawick that had previously been held by James Dickson, as well as part of Roughheugh (earlier owned by James Knox). In 1849 he married Jane Rutherford (1828–55), daughter of builder Robert, and she died of typhus fever (after having 3 children). He secondly married his first wife’s niece, also Jane Rutherford (‘Mrs. Oliver’, the local historian), and they had 7 further children. His family included: Jane (1850–1910), who married Robert Inch; Andrew (b.1853), who died in infancy; Andrew Rutherford (b.1855), auctioneer; Alice Mary (b.1861), eldest daughter by his 2nd wife, who married Dr. John R. Hamilton; James (b.1863), also died in infancy; Cather-ine Brown (1864–1930), who married manufactur-er Robert Innes and secondly married teacher H.H. Llewellyn; Evaleen (1866–1934), who mar-ried Spencer Waterfall from Sheffield; Blanche Ada (b.1868), who married Dr. Drummond from Liverpool; William (1869–1919), a solicitor; and Douglas (b.1871). At least one portrait of him exists. He is buried in the Welloagate Cemetery.

James (b.1819/20) farmer at Denholm Mill, son of Archibald. He is recorded there in 1851, and was miller on a directory of 1852. He married Mary Hall and their children included Archibald.

James (1823–1908) born in Newcastleton, son of shepherd George and Elizabeth Irving. In 1835 he emigrated to New York with 2 other brothers, to join their brother John, while the last brother, George, stayed in Liddesdale. They moved to a farm in Lagrange County, Indiana, where his fa-ther died in 1837 (the ‘sick year’). The family moved to Mishawaka and he attended school, but had to leave to support his mother and siblings. He first worked as a ditch-digger, then a cooper, before starting in a grist mill then an iron company. He eventually went into business for himself, making ploughs. He hit upon a novel manu-facturing process and patented a ‘chilled steel plough’ (where the cooling method made the cut-ting surface superior). The Oliver Chilled Plow Works became one of the largest in the U.S.A., and was a standard tool of pioneer farmers. At its height the company employed 2000 people and the factory covered 27 acres of covered space, making 200,000 ploughs a year. He was a great benefactor of the town of South Bend, building a hotel (called the Oliver Hotel) and an opera house. The town presented him with a gold cup inscribed with the word ‘Copshawholm’, which his son used as the name for his new house there in 1900. He married Susan Dozy in 1844, and she died in 1902. They had 2 children, Joseph (who carried on the business) and Josephine (who married the secretary of the company). When he died his fortune was nearly £15,000,000, making him one of the richest ever Borderers at that time. James (b.1824) son of James, who was a baker in Hawick. He worked as a journeyman baker. He was recorded in Hawick in 1855, but may then have moved to Langholm. He married Mary Murray, who was from Langholm. Their children included: Alexander (c.1854–1934), born in Langholm, who emigrated to Tasmania and taught for 40 years at the Penguin State School; Agnes (b.1855), who was born in Hawick and married George King; Jack; Ralph; and Frank. James Walter (b.1840) born in Wilton Parish, son of George and Wilhelmina (or ‘Mina’) Telfer. The family emigrated to Canada in 1844 and he eventually became a surgeon in Niagara Falls. James (b.1844) son of James and Dorothy Moffat, he was born in Roberton Parish. He married Martha Pollard and their children included: Dorothy Moffat, who married William Baxter and another man named Gilbert; William James, who married Nora Estelle Brown; and Jana E., who married William Johnston. Members of the family lived later in Western Australia. Rev. James (1845–1918) born in Teviothead, son of John and Helen Sibbald. He was educated at Newmill and then at Hawick Grammar School. He graduated from Edinburgh University in 1863 and spent 2 years as an assistant teacher to Anthony Dodds at Buccleuch School (being succeeded by J.A.H. Murray). He was assistant minister at Selkirk and Bedrule and then at Nelston before being ordained as minister at Tweedmouth in 1870 and moving to St. James’, Portobello in 1880. He was President of the Edinburgh Border Counties Association and represented them at the 1906 Jubilee celebration for the Hawick Archaeological Society. He was said to be a great orator. He married Elizabeth Young of Howford. James (d.bef. 1917) from Newcastleton, he was an apprentice draper in Hawick. He was said to have had a lifelong interest in Hawick and in dramatics. James Lindsay (1860–93) youngest son of Hawick lawyer George. He bought some property in New Zealand with his brother George Lindsay. However, he suffered from ill-health and returned to Scotland. He married Agnes Ellen (‘Nellie’), daughter of Peter Pennycook of New Hall. He took over running the farm at Greenriver (i.e. Hobsburn) for his ill mother-in-law’s brother Henry Elliot. He hunted regularly with the Jedforest Hunt, although he eventually lost the use of one arm. He had one son, Harry. He died at Greenriver and is buried in Hobkirk kirkyard. His wife and mother-in-law moved to Scarborough after his death. James John (b.1864) younger son of lawyer James, he worked in the family firm of Geo. & Jas. Oliver. In 1914, on the death of his cousin John Oliver of Lynnwood, he became senior partner in the firm. He also lived at Mayfield after his father died. He was a keen member of the Teviotdale Cycling Club and the Hawick Golf Club (where he was Captain for 2 years and Treasurer for 10 years). He was a founder member of the Border Club, and the last surviving original member. He was also Chairman of the Hawick Constitutional Club. He served as a Lay Elector, Church Warden and Treasurer (for over 50 years) for St. Cuthbert’s Kirk. During WWI he was a Special Constable and became Sheriff-Substitute of Roxburghshire in 1930. He retired at the age of 82, owing to failing eyesight. In 1894 he married Robina Pennycook Scott and their children were Edith Agnes Scott (‘Nancy’, who married Harry Usher of Courtilll), Thomasina (who married Victor Henry Wells-Cole), James Scott (also W.S.) and Tommy Scott. He is buried at St. Cuthbert’s. James Scott, W.S. (20th C.) son of James John, he was also a partner in Geo. & Jas. Oliver. James Kenneth Murray, O.B.E., ‘Ken’ (1914–99) auctioneer and successful horse-trainer who lived at Hassendeanbank. He was the son of Douglas and great-grandaughter of Andrew. As an amateur jockey he won many races, including the Scottish Grand National of 1950 on ‘Sanvina’. As a trainer he had nearly 1,000 winners, including 5 Scottish Grand National winners, and in 3 separate seasons he had 56 winners. He is also the only trainer to have had a horse come second 3 times in the Grand National, ‘Wynburgh’. He was founding Chairman of the National Trainers Federation and was largely responsible for the renaissance of the Doncaster Bloodstock Horse Sales. He was also sometimes known as the ‘Benign Bishop’ after one of his horses (or perhaps the other way around). He gave a speech at the Friday Hut in 1992. He married Joan Innes and they had children Susan (who married William Forster) and Douglas Stuart. He secondly married Rhona Wilkinson. A biography ‘The Benign
