as tacksman (i.e. tenant) there on the 1841 census. His wife was Mary and their children included: Mary; Robert; Jane; Janet; and Elizabeth. Walter (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was recorded in Denholm in 1773 and 1775. His children included Margaret (b.1773) and Archibald (b.1775). William (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Pott and their children included Marion (b.1636), Isabel (b.1639), Janet (b.1642), Janet (again, b.1646) and John (b.1650). William (17th C.) tenant for the Duchess of Buccleuch in Phaup on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. William (17th/18th C.) servant to Francis Scott, miller at Wester Burnfoot, he lived at Leaheads in Wilton Parish. He is recorded there in 1707 (and having lately come to the area) when he was called to report to the Kirk Session. He was also at Leaheads in 1708 and in 1711. His children, baptised in Wilton, probably included: John (b.1708); William (b.1711); and Archibald (b.1713). Perhaps the same William had a second marriage in Wilton in 1718 (with no wife’s name recorded). William (17th/18th C.) tenant in Over Southfield along with his father John in about 1710. This was attested in evidence given regarding the state of Hawick’s Common in 1767. In 1713 he and his father John ‘in over Southfield’ witnessed a baptism for William Martin (who was their farm servant). He is probably the William who in 1720 witnessed a baptism for William Martin in Over Southfield. He may be the William who married Helen (or Bessie) Gledstains in 1711, the marriage being recorded in both Hawick and Kirkton Parishes. Probably the same William married Agnes Wright and is recorded in Hilliesland in 1719. His children, baptised in Hawick Parish, probably included: John (b.1714), Robert (b.1715), Marie (b.1716), James (b.1716) and Margaret (b.1719). The witnesses in 1719 were merchant William Dickson and gardener James Falsyde. William (1692/3–1740) son of Archibald, who came from Cumberland to Teviothead, with his mother being a Scott. He was tenant farmer at Adderstonlee. He also had half the farm of Bowanhill, Teviothead, with Archibald Elliot having the other half. He married Isobel Scott (1697–1773) at Skelfhill (listed in Cavers Parish records); she is recorded releasing the lands of Bowanhill in 1744. Their children were: Archibald; Andrew, who died at sea; Isabel; John, wine merchant in London and later Berwick; Robert, whose son William emigrated to Ontario; Hugh, who died young; and William, farmer at Merrylaw. He is buried with his wife in Teviothead cemetery. William (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was recorded in Boghall in 1727 and Heap in 1733. He married Agnes Wight. Their children included: Agnes (b.1727); Bessie (b.1728); Esther (b.1731); Robert (b.1733); and William (b.1735). The witnesses in 1727 were Robert and Francis Scott and in 1733 were Robert Easton and Thomas Scott. William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish, recorded in Hummelknowes. His children included: John (b.1762); Robert (b.1764); Janet (b.1766); William (b.1767); Christian (b.1769); Betty (b.1771); Jean (b.1778); Nelly (b.1778); and Margaret (b.1781). He is separate from William, tenant in Merrylaw (but may have been related to him). William (1738–1821) son of William and Isobel Scott. He was tenant at Merrylaw for about 50 years. He is recorded there in at least 1788–90. He was also at Merrylaw on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls and was additionally taxed for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797. In 1773 he married Rachel (1747–1809), daughter of John Easton, from the Damside family in Hawick. Their children were: Euphan, or ‘Euphy’, who went to London and married John Smith; Elspeth (b.1778); Isobel (b.1778), who married Adam Scott in Westerkirk; Rachel (b.1780), who married Thomas Proudfoot, shepherd at Headshaw; William (b.1782), stocking-maker in Hawick; Margaret (b.1784), who married shepherd William Helm; John (b.1788), who died young; and Robert (b.1790), who married Elizabeth Kedzie. He is buried with his wife in Teviothead cemetery. William (1782–1849) son of William, farmer at Merrylaw and Rachel Easton. He was a stocking-maker in Wilton, listed at Damside among heads of households in 1840. He was on Lower Damside on the 1841 census. He married Helen Cumming in Jedburgh in 1830. Their children were: William, who married Isabella Amour Own and was Schoolmaster in Haddington; John Cumming, bookseller and local historian; Rachel Easton, who married John B. Miles; and Jessie, who died young. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. He married Margaret Dodds and their children included Jessy (b.1808), John (b.1809) and Thomas (b.1811). William (b.1799/1800) born in Robertson Parish. In 1841 he was an agricultural labourer, in 1851 was a ‘Roadmaker’ and in 1861 was farmer, all at Curcarwood in Yarrow. His wife was Isabella and their children included Mary, Janet, Andrew, John, James, George and William. William (1806–90) son of Hugh and Goodyear (good-yeer) n. Hedley John (1886–1918) teacher and army officer, born in Newfoundland, Canada. He enlisted in 1916 and spent several months in Britain in 1917. He received the Military Cross for gallantry, survived the Battle of Amiens, but was killed by a sniper. When he died he was engaged to Betsy Turnbull who was from Hawick. He became well known for the poignant letter to his mother, which was published and much read in Armistice and Memorial services.

Gordon (gor-din) n. town and parish on the western side of Berwickshire. There was once a branch line of the Berwickshire Railway here. The ‘de Gordon’ family took their name from the associated barony. It is also the name of the surrounding parish. Greenknowe Tower is nearby.

Gordon (gor-din) n. Alexander (d.1575) brother of George, 4th Earl of Huntly, and nephew of James IV. He was a servant of the Queen Dowager, Mary Queen of Scots. He married Joan Perrie (or Pirrie), who died in 1793. They had no surviving children. Alexander (18th/19th C.) weaver in Hawick. The death of his child is recorded in 1815. Andrew (17th C.) resident of Abbotrule Parish. As a Covenanter he had to flee the region. He was captured in Bewcastle and, along with Robert Cameron, was banished to America. Rev. Charles (c.1656–1710) from Aberdeenshire, brother of John, the Provost of Aberdeen. He graduated from Aberdeen University in 1676 and became minister at Campvere in 1686. He returned to Scotland to answer calls to Dumfries and Dalmeny, the latter of which he took up in 1691. He was presented to Ashkirk Parish at the end of 1694 and became minister there the following year. He was offered the Chair of Divinity at Aberdeen University in 1697/8, and the Assembly suggested to translate him in 1698, but he refused to accept it. He was described as ‘a learned and holy man of uncommon integrity’. In 1690 he married Rosina Campbell, daughter of the minister of Dumfries. Their surviving children included 2 sons, George and James, and a daughter, Christian. They had children in Edinburgh, including George (b.1691). Their children, baptised in Ashkirk, included: Alexander (b.1697); Rosina (b.1698); Isobel (b.1700); Margaret (b.1701); Daniel (b.1702); Janet (b.1703); Jean (b.1704); John (b.1705); James (b.1707); and Anne (b.1708). Gorrenberry Cottage several farms in upper Teviotdale had chopped down many of his trees there. John, illegitimate son of Walter, 1st Earl of Buccleuch was given the lands in 1629. John Scott held the lands in 1643, when they were valued at £1600; they still had the same value in 1678 and 1707. A payment for the ringing of the bells of Hawick Kirk for 'Gorenberie's boril' is recorded in 1722. The lands were sold by John Scott of Gorrenberry to Henry, Duke of Buccleuch in about 1760. In 1788 the lands were still valued at £1600 and owned by the Duke of Buccleuch. Robert Laidlaw was farmer there in 1792–97. Michael Anderson was farmer there in the 1820s to 40s, James Anderson was shepherd in 1835 and David Anderson farmer in 1851. William Hislop was farmer in 1868. The motto of the Gorrenberry Scotts was ‘Sperandum’. There was once a tower here, but its precise location is unknown. According to Jeffrey this earlier house was located to the west of the present farm, closer to Bught Shank; however, the rectangular mound there may have been a farmstead. Tradition connects the place with a brownie, called ‘the Cowie’, and John Leyden also invented the beauty ‘May of Goranberry’ – ‘O May she came, and May she gaed, By Goranberry tower; And who was it but cruel Lord Soulis That carried her from her bower?’ [JL] (also spelled ‘Gorranberry’). ‘Gorre’ is not known Sheriff of Roxburghshire, and perhaps the first known person holding such an office anywhere in Scotland. He may have been son of Uhtred, who was son of Ulfkill. He owned the lands of Nether Crailing and his grant of the Chapel of Crailing was confirmed in about 1150 (probably after he was deceased). He was also listed as Sheriff when he gave a ploughgate of land in Crailing around the foundation of Jedburgh Abbey, as confirmed in later charters. He is mentioned in the charter for the foundation of Selkirk Abbey around 1120, when he was ‘Cospatrico vicecomite’. He also witnessed a grant to Durham Cathedral around 1126 and witnessed another grant to the church attached to Roxburgh Castle about the same time. There were several other contemporary men of the same forename, and it is not known to what later family he may have been related. One suggestion is that he is the same as Gospatric of Swinton, brother of Colban. Given that he was Sheriff of Roxburghshire, he was probably related to John, son of Orm, who held the same office later in the 12th century.

Gospel Haa (gos-pul-haw) n. former name for a building on Rueccaughter farm (presumably a locular term, from a resemblance to a place of worship).

got (go, gö) pp. had, especially as a teacher or similar – ‘A got Ned for Maths’, got called, was named – ‘hei aye got ‘Faggy’ when hei was younger’.

go ti Hawick (gó-ti-hlk) interj. mild oath, used to express disbelief or dismay (euphemism for ‘go to Hell’).

gotten (go’-in, go-tin) pp. got – ‘...or thance A micht never heh gotten off the bit aa day’ [ECS] (this participle form is more common than in standard English).
Gotterson (go-tur-sin, go’-ur-sin) n. George (16th C.) listed among associates of Sir James Douglas of Cavers in a court case of 1541. There were also 2 Johns listed, who were probably related to him. John (16th C.) name of 2 men recorded in 1541 on a list of tenants and other associates of James Douglas of Cavers when he complained about his farm of Whitriggs being burned by Walter Scott of Branxholm. They were probably related to George, who was also listed. John (17th C.) listed at Old Jedburgh among the poor of Southdean Parish in the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. Matthew writer of ‘The Callant’, this probably being James Smail from Jedburgh, and not a pen-name for J.E.D. Murray as once suggested. Thomas (18th C.) resident of theRobertton and Ashkirk areas. He could be the Thomas, son of William, baptised in Roberton in 1713. He married Agnes Murray. Their children included: William (b.1746), baptised in Roberton; and Thomas (b.1748), baptised in Ashkirk. Walter (18th/19th C.) resident of the Lilliesleaf area. He married Violet Laidlaw. Their son William was born in Lilliesleaf Parish in 1800 and baptised in Maxton. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Chapeltown in 1710. His surname is recorded in 1710 and 1713 as ‘Guthrison’. His children included: Agnes (b.1703); Helen (b.1705); James (b.1710); and Thomas (b.1713). William ‘Wullie’ (b.c.1770) writer of ‘The Silver Lake’. Once when he refused to accept a new tenant on the grounds that there were bugs in his furniture, the Bailie asked him if there were no bugs already at his inn and he replied ‘Aw dinna mean to say anything of the kind. Aw’ve ower mony already, and aw dinna want ony mair!’ He was known for his skill at currying horses and cows and volunteered as a driver in the local Militia in 1803. He was mentioned in a story told about beggar John Brown, occurring about 1820. He was a farmer living alone on the Back Row on the 1841 census; Mary, who lived next door, was about the right age to be his daughter. He married Janet Irvine in 1794, the marriages being recorded in both Bedrule and Ancrum Parishes. Their children (baptised in Wilton) included: Mary (b.1795); and Thomas (b.1797). When asked why he turned up to his wife’s funeral in blue, rather than the traditional black, he replied ‘Aw got her in blue and aw’ll pairt wi’r in blue’. His ‘Sunday ootsteeks’ were donated to the Museum collection in 1863 – ‘Weel he wad ken Wull Gotterson Wi’ his strampin’ ootsteek shoon’[DH] (formerly spelled ‘Gotterson’, ‘Gottersoun’ and other variants, as well as ‘Guthrison’).

Gotterson’s Innery (go’-ur-sinz-i-nu-ree) n. inn kept by Wullie Gotterson in the Back Row, where the Stag’s Head is now. Martin Dechan grew up there.

Gotterson’s Knowes (go’-ur-sinz-nowz) n. former name for the area around a small farm on the summit by Crumhaughhill, farmed by Wullie Gotterson, and containing the Watch Knowe.

Gouinlock (goo-in-lok) n. Walter (1855–1907), J.P., born in Ashkirk, son of John. He was educated at Selkirk Grammar School. His father moved to Traquair Knowe in 1869, and he himself managed that farm for 20 years. He was also a cattle breeder. He was heavily involved in the Parish Council and School Board in Innerleithen. He married and had a son and a daughter (see also Govenlock).

Gould (goold) n. John (1780/1–1857) Hawick framesmith and frameworker, originally from Glasgow. He was involved in an 1834 improvement of the broad stocking frame, whereby two stockings could be made at once. He moved into the basement of 7 Brougham Place when blacksmith Murray vacated his smithy. By 1837 he was listed as a framesmith on the Round Close and by 1851 he was employing 4 men and 2 boys there. He was listed as a framesmith on the Round Close in Slater’s 1852 directory. He married Elizabeth Taylor. His children included: Alex, whose wife Isabella Smith, sister-in-law Janet Smith and child John all died of cholera at Allars Crescent; William, who also worked as a framesmith; and Elizabeth. He is buried in Wellowgate Cemetery (also written ‘Gold’ and ‘Goold’).

Gourlay (goor-lee) n. Adam (13th/14th C.) recorded in the Ragman Rolls of 1296 paying homage to Edward I of England. His location is only given as Roxburghshire. However, he (along with Alan de Gourlay) served on a jury in 1303/4 to decide on the succession to Sir Thomas Chartres, Baron of Wilton. So it seems reasonable to suppose that he held lands fairly locally. Other men of the same surname who also paid homage to Edward I in 1296 were from Edinburgh, Berwickshire and Forfarshire. He could be the ‘Ede Gurlay’ whose lands of Rutherford and Maxton were granted by Robert the Bruce to John de Lindsay in 1321. Rev. Adam (1800–81) born at Chesters, near Ancrum, son of James and Margaret Redford. He graduated from Edinburgh University and was licensed to preach by Jedburgh Presbytery in 1825. He became assistant minister at Bedrule and at Lilliesleaf. In 1842 he was presented as minister of Lilliesleaf by James Henry Robert, Duke of Roxburghe. He was Clerk of the Presbytery in 1843 and Clerk of the Synod in 1853. In Slater’s 1852 directory his name appears as ‘Gourlay’. He married Margaret Campbell Baxter (1813–1900), daughter of his predecessor. Their children were: James (1836–99), insurance clerk; Anne Campbell (1837–85), married George Alexander, farmer; David Baxter (1839–1913), farmer; Margaret Redford (1846–1925); Maria Nicolina (1848–93); Adamina Harriet (1852–1924); Adam (1854–88), banker; and Jane Charles Russell Currie (b.1856), married Walter Robert Brodie. Alan (13th/14th C.) served along with Adam on the jury to decide on who inherited the Barony of Wilton in 1303/4. He is recorded as ‘Alain de Gourlay’ and was probably the man transcribed as ‘Aleyn Gurnay’ on the Ragman Rolls of 1296, where his seal shows a squirrel feeding within two interlaced squares, with the name ‘S’ALANI GORLEY’. Archibald (14th C.) father of John, who was served heir to the lands of Rulewood in 1387. Since John, son of Henry had been granted the lands in 1380, as confirmed in 1390, there may be confusion with dates. These charters are held by the Stewarts of Traquair. Arnulf (15th C.) witness to a sasine for the lands of Denholm Mains in 1465/6, when he is recorded as ‘Arnulf Gurlay’. He is probably the ‘Arnald Gorlay’ who was part of an action (along with several other Border lairds) registered with Parliament by John, Lord Somerville in 1476. He is probably the ‘Arnou’ who married Katherine, daughter and heiress of Alexander Inglis, and hence inherited lands near Branzholme. John of Rulewood was probably his son or grandson. David B. (b.1838/9) farmer at Bewlie Hill. He was listed there in 1861, farming 184 acres and employing 8 people. He was there with his brother James. He was also recorded there in a directory of 1868. Henry (14th C.) granted the lands of Rulewood to his son John in 1380. In 1390 the grant was confirmed by Malcolm of Drummond, Lord of Mar and Garrioch, who was Baron of Cavers. James (15th C.) recorded as ‘Jacobum Gurlaw’ when he was on the inquest panel for the inheritance of the Barony of Hawick in 1484. John was also on the panel. John (15th C.) recorded in 1432 as a witness to the instrument of sasine giving the Barony of Cavers and Sheriffland of Roxburghshire to William Douglas. He was also on the ‘retour of inquest’ for Ker of Altonburn in 1438. He must have been related to the later John of Rulewood and Arnulf. John (15th C.) on the panel for James Douglas of Drumlanrig inheriting the Barony of Hawick in 1484. James was also on the panel. He may be the same as John of Rulewood. John of Rulewood (15th/16th C.) holder of the lands of ‘Kyrktoun’ in the Barony of Branzholme. He was named on an inquest in 1497/8 (as John Gourlay of Roulwood) and was probably also the John on the inquest for succession to the Home lands in 1506. He is probably the ‘Jhon Gourlay’ who was among the men chosen to value the lands of Whithope in 1500. In 1508 he was ‘Johannem Gourlay in Roulwoide’ on the panel for Adam Hepburne inheriting the Lordship of Liddesdale. He was probably the John ‘Gourlaw’ who was on the panel to decide on the inheritance of the Barony of Cavers in 1509. In 1509 he was granted the lands of Rulewood by William, Lord Herries of Terregles. He was already deceased in 1521 when the lands passed to his son John. He was probably son or grandson of Arnulf. John (16th C.) son of John of Rulewood. He is recorded in a sasine of 1521 granted by Walter Scott of Branzholme, for the ‘6 merkland of Kyrktoun’ in the Barony of Branzholme. These lands had passed to the family through ‘Arnou Gourlau’ who married Katherine, daughter and heiress of Alexander Inglis. In 1525 he was served heir to the lands of Rulewood. In 1528 he was probably the John listed among supporters of Archibald Douglas, Earl of Angus who were called to appear before the King. He is also ‘John Gourlaw of Roulwod’ in 1533 when part of an inquest at Jedburgh. He may be the John of Rulewood who had a contract with William Turnbull in Hassendeanbank in 1540 (probably not 1640 as recorded in one source). Robert (16th C.) recorded in 1541 on a list of tenants and other associates of James Douglas of Cavers when he complained about his farm of Whitriggs being burned by Walter Scott of Branzholme. Robert (16th C.) recorded in Hawick in 1582 when he witnessed an agreement in Hawick for Alan Deans and Alexander Weens.

Gourlay Bog (goor-lee-bog) n. former name for lands in Bedrule. In the c.1795 Old Statistical Account it is recorded that there was ‘a small common near the church called Gourlay Bog, on which the minister of Bedrule was also in use to pasture’. The common was divided some time in the 18th century. It was ‘Gourlaybog’ in 1801, when listed as part of the estates (valued at £14) bought by William Elliot of Wells (presumably related to a former owner called Gourlay).

Govan (go-vin) n. Joseph (18th C.) recorded as ‘indweller in Hawick’ in 1751 when he had a libel case for non-payment of a bill in Selkirk. However, there was also a complaint against him in 1751 by William Hall from Selkirk, claiming that he had been beaten in his own house and had his furniture damaged by him. He is probably the Joseph who married Margaret Dunn and whose children (baptised in Hawick), included: Mary (b.1756); and Joseph (b.1759). Joseph (d.1816) resident of Hawick. He married Elizabeth Laidlaw in 1771 and their daughter Christian was baptised in Hawick in 1772. The witnesses were John Hume and John Grieve. His wife died in 1816, when his surname was given as ‘Gibbons’. He witnessed a baptism for Thomas Rae in 1778. Lawrence of Cardrono (14th C.) Sheriff of Peebleshire in 1358/9 and probably longer. He was recorded as Warden of Roxburgh in 1373, when King Robert II granted him 100 shillings for ward of the Castle of Roxburgh; the money came out of the rents of Whitchesters, Adderstone, Wilton, Chamberlain Newton and Minto.

William of Hermiston (18th/19th C.) he was a glazier in Edinburgh, but was listed as a voter in Roxburghshire in 1788. He owned the lands of both Wester Hermiston and Easter Hermiston in 1788. He was further listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805 and 1819. In the Land Tax Rolls of 1811 he was listed as owner of Easter Hermiston (whose 2 parts had previously belonged to ‘Sinton’ and ‘Johnson’) as well as Wester Hermiston. He was still owner of Hermiston in 1817 (also written ‘Govan’ and ‘Govan’).

Govenlock (go-vin-lok, go-in-lok) n. Adam ‘Adie’ (16th C.) recorded in Eilrig in 1586/7 among Borderers accused of crimes who had failed to appear in court and were given one more chance to find sureties. Adam (17th C.) local man, referred to as ‘in Hoiit’ in 1641 when he claimed a white mare that he had found on his lands. Probably the same Adam was witness in 1651 to a baptism in Hawick for James Scott and Mary Davidson and another in 1656 for Archibald Paterson. Adam (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Manie Beattie and their son Adam was baptised in 1661, with witnesses James Sinton and John Gray. Adam (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Northhouse. He was recorded paying tax on 2 non-working dogs in 1797. Adam (b.c.1780) farmer at Childknowe in Lilliesleaf Parish, recorded in 1841. Adam (b.c.1795) born in Cavers Parish. He was a wool spinner, living on Fore Row in Wilton Dean in 1841. In 1851 his address was ‘Front Row No. 2’. He lived there with his brother William and niece Isabella Scott and her family. Andrew (17th C.) married to ‘Menie Bettie’, their son Adam was baptised in Ashkirk Parish in 1661. Andrew (17th/18th C.) married ‘Grizell Hadden’ in Ashkirk in 1691. Andrew (17th/18th C.) married Bessie Chisholme in Roberton Parish in 1704. Andrew (18th C.) married to Isabel Porteous. His children baptised in Ashkirk Parish included Christian (b.1745), Adam (b.1747) and John (b.1750). Andrew (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. His son James was baptised in 1754. Andrew (18th C.) married to Margaret Riddell. Their children baptised in Hawick Parish included Margaret (b.1763), Agnes (b.1765), Janet (b.1767), Jane (b.1770) and Andrew (b.1773). The witnesses in 1773 were William and James, with the surnames unreadable. Andrew (b.1789) eldest son of Robert. He married Elizabeth Kidd. He emigrated to Canada (like his brother William), settling at Stratford, Ontario. Among his descendants are Jennie Kidd Trout (Canada’s first licensed female medical practitioner) and John...
Gowanlock (of the Frog Lake Massacre). Andrew (19th C.) married Grace Scott in Wilton in 1846. Andrew (1788/9–1877) born in Yarrow Parish. In 1861 he was ‘Retired Farmer Fundholder’ at Birkwood on Ashkirk Parish. He was recorded as farmer at Calaburn in 1868. He married Beanston Broomfield. Their children included: James (b.1720); Elspeth (b.1716); Helen (b.1718); and Isobel (again, b.1714); Thomas (b.1715); John (b.1716); Walter (b.1711); Walter (again, b.1713); Walter (b.1705); Andrew (b.1707); Helen (b.1709); William (b.1711); Walter (again, b.1713); Walter (again, b.1714); Thomas (b.1715); John (b.1716); Elspeth (b.1716); Helen (b.1718); and Isobel (b.1720). James (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He married Mary Grieve from Bowden and their children were: Christina (1846–1920); Walter (b.1848), who died young; Mary (b.1849); Jessie (1851–1938); Walter (1855–1907), who succeeded as tenant of Traquair Knowe; and Isabella (b.1857), who married Walter Sturrock from New Belses. In 1869 he became tenant of Traquair Knowe and of Andrew. He was tenant in Calaburn. His children included Adam (1775/6–1847), who died at Childknow. They are buried in Borthwick Waas. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Sutherland who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He is probably related to the local Govenlocks. James ‘Jamie’ (b.c.1820) son of Robert, he also worked as one of the mail-coach drivers in the mid-1800s. In 1843 he was listed as a ‘Horse keeper’ when he gave evidence regarding the overturning of the coach ‘Defiant’. He was a lodger at the Crown Inn for the 1851 census. He married Minnie (or Elizabeth) Beattie, and their children were Thomas (who married Christina Shankie) and Margaret (who married Thomas McVittie). John (16th/17th C.) acted as caution (along with several others) for Mungo Scott from Castleside in 1623. He is described as ‘in Heidshaw’. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Malie Nichol and John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Jean Glendinning and their son Thomas was baptised in 1645. Their daughter Margaret was born in 1648. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was recorded at Applethreekhill in 1706. His children included: John (b.1702); Bessie (b.1703); William (b.1706); and Janet (b.1708). John (18th C.) married Margaret Renalson in Wilton Parish in 1745. John (c.1755–1819) recorded as innkeeper of ‘Harriot House’ (probably ‘Heriot House’ on what became the A7). He was the father of Robert (innkeeper of Mosspaul), married Isabella Scott in 1780 and had earlier been a shepherd at Phaup in Selkirkshire. He could be the John who was a shepherd at Hislop in 1797, according to the Dog Tax Rolls (and recorded as ‘James’ on the Horse Tax Rolls). John (18th/19th C.) married Janet Forrest in Roberton Parish in 1835. John (1815–1904) born at Greenhill in Ashkirk Parish, where his father was farmer. He was a cousin of the poet Thomas Aird. He succeeded his father as tenant at Greenhill, and then was tenant at Ashkirktown. In 1841 he was farmer at Haremoss in Ashkirk, living with his brother Walter and mother Mary. In 1851 and 1861 he was at Ashkirktown. In 1869 he moved to the farm of Traquair Knowe. He married Mary Grieve from Bowden and their children were: Christina (1846–1920); Walter (b.1848), who died young; Mary (b.1849); Jessie (1851–1938); Walter (1855–1907), who succeeded as tenant of Traquair Knowe; and Isabella (b.1857), who married Walter Sturrock from New Belses. In 1869 he became tenant of Traquair Knowe and... remained there until his death. He was an elder of the original Secession Church at Midlem for 65 years. He attended the inaugural St. Ronan’s Border Games in 1827. He and his wife celebrated their golden wedding anniversary in 1902. His name was usually spelled ‘Gouinlock’. He is buried at Traquair. John (b.1817/8) born in Teviothead Parish, he was listed as farmer’s son and farm manager at Blackhall in Ewesdale in 1861. He married Isabella Nichol, and their children included: Annie Burnet (1846/7–1926), who married William Vincent Shaw; Robert; Margaret (1854/5–1921); George Nichol (1856–64); Isabella Nichol (1859/60–1935); and John (b.1864). John (b.c.1828) son of Robert. He ran Mosspaul after his father’s death, probably up until it closed. He then resumed work as a coach driver. He (or another John) was also the proprietor of the Subscription Rooms in the early-to-mid-1800s. He married Isabella Nichol in 1864 and she died in 1884. His daughter was Margaret Ruickbie Govenlock who married William Turnbull Riddle Graham and was mother of the 1902 Cornet. John Nichol (19th/20th C.) married Nelly Scott in Robertson Parish in 1904. Margaret nee Ruickbie (1792–1863) daughter of James Ruickbie, she married Robert, landlord of the Moss paul Inn. She was born somewhere near Lilliesleaf. She was apparently widely known for her hospitality and kindness, and was quite tall. At Mosspaul she was often to be found in a seat by the open fireplace in the kitchen. Not very widely travelled, she was once quizzed about how far she had been when she replied ‘Hoots, aye, aw was yince at Denholm’. Her children were Margaret, Elizabeth, James, Robert, John and Helen. She was buried at Teviothead. Patrick (16th C.) recorded in 1586/7 among Borderers accused of crimes who had failed to appear in court and were given one more chance to find sureties. He is listed as ‘Paitt Gavinnlok in Qhyn-incleuch’, which could be Whinney Cleuch in the Borthwick valley. Robert (17th C.) married to Isobel Cowan, his son Adam was baptised in Hawick Parish in 1651. Robert (18th C.) married Agnes ‘Wholence’ in Robertson in 1726, both being from that Parish. He was recorded at Todshawhaugh in 1727, perhaps Harden in 1732 (it is hard to read) and Parkhill in 1734 and 1742. His children, baptised in Robertson, included Andrew (b.1727), Margaret (b.1730), Jean (b.1732), John (b.1734), John (again, b.1738), Bessie (b.1740), Robert (b.1742) and Agnes (b.1744). Robert (18th C.) married Isabel Park in Robertson Parish in 1747. Robert (18th C.) recorded as ‘present tacksman at Crosslee Toll Bar’ in 1785 when he was involved in a dispute over a bill in Selkirk. He may be related to the other Govenlocks who were toll-keepers. Robert (1762–1825) lived in Hobkirk and Southdean Parishes. He is probably the Robert who was married in Southdean Parish in 1787 (no wife’s name given). He married Betty, daughter of John Oliver and Isabella Scott of Hawick. Their children were Andrew (b.1789), James (b.1791), Robert (b.1794), Jennet (b.1795), William (b.1798) and Walter (b.1802). Robert (18th/19th C.) married Janet Hogg in Kirkton and Hawick Parishes in 1800. Robert ‘Gloomy Wunter’ (1787/8–1861) son of John (a shepherd at Phaup and later inn-keeper) and Isabella Scott. He was landlord of the Moss paul Inn for about 45 years, from 1816. His tenure there saw many improvements to the hotel, although the coming of the railway led to its later closure. He also worked as a guard on the Edinburgh to Carlisle mail coach. He was said to have a commanding appearance and distinctive personality. He was additionally one of the founder members of the Wisp Club, and the first Treasurer. In 1821 he subscribed for 6 copies to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ and in 1825 he did the same things for Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’. He was listed at Mosspaul in the 1841 census. In 1811 he married Margaret, daughter of James Ruickbie. They had several children, including: Margaret, who married Mark Turnbull; James, who married Minnie Beattie; Elizabeth, who married gamekeeper Alexander Robertson; Robert; John, who married Isabella Nichol, and was grandfather of Cornet William N. Graham; and Helen (1831/2–74). He died shortly before the last coach run from Hawick to Carlisle. There is a portrait of him in the Museum, by an unknown artist. He could be the Robert to whom a debt was due according to a record in Selkirk in 1814, when he was Selkirk Toll. Robert (b.1821/2) son of Robert. He was farmer at Teindside and also involved with the Archaeological Society in the late 1800s. In 1861 he was farmer of about 4000 acres at Teindside, employing 12 people. He took part in the last ceremonial running of the stage-coach from Hawick in 1862. He was still recorded at Teindside in 1868. He was probably also the tenant farmer at Wolfecleuchhead recorded in the 1870s. He probably died unmarried. Robert (19th C.) married Margaret Scott in Wilton in 1847. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He was married to Helen Turnbull and their children included William (b.1672). Thomas (18th C.) married Helen Douglas in Wilton Parish in 1749. He was living at Roberton Burnfoot in 1752. His children, baptised in Roberton Parish, include Christian (b.1751) and Helen (b.1752). Thomas (18th/19th C.) married to Betty Oliver. Their children baptised in Ashkirk Parish included Thomas (b.1814), John (b.1820) and William (b.1822), a farm labourer at St. Boswells. Thomas (18th/19th C.) innkeeper in Jedburgh, recorded in a letter in Selkirk in 1826. Thomas (1841/2-1923) born at Mossopaul, son of James. He was a blacksmith in Stow. He married Christina Shankie. He was killed by a runaway horse. Walter (18th/19th C.) married Mary Armstrong in Wilton Parish in 1810. Walter (19th C.) married to Mary Tait, their son Robert was baptised in Southdean Parish in 1828. Walter (1812/3-57) farmer at Dryden near Ashkirk. He was living at Haremoss with his older brother John and mother Mary in 1841. In 1851 he was farmer at Greenhill of 80 arable acres and 520 acres of hill-land, employing 7 people. In 1848 he married Jessie Redford (from Lilliesleaf) and they had daughters Isabella S. (b.1849/50), Mary A. (b.1850/1), Jessie (b.1856) and Margaret Walteria (b.1857). In 1861 his widow was a ‘Farmeress’ of 600 acres at Greenhill, employing 8 people. William (16th C.) recorded in 1586/7 among Borderers accused of crimes who had failed to appear in court and were given one more chance to find sureties. He may be related to Adie in Eilrig and Patie in Whitney Cleuch, who are also on the same list. William (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1651 he witnessed a baptism for John Renwick. He could be the William whose account is recorded in Selkirk in 1660. William Paterson (1789/90-1856) born in Cavers Parish. He was a shepherd, and was recorded living with his brother Adam in Wilton Dean in 1851. William (1798-1888) born at Chesters, son of Robert. He worked as a day labourer in Rule Water. In 1842 he emigrated with his family to Bruce County, Ontario, Canada. In 1824 he married Christian (1801-91), daughter of William Laidlaw and Helen Douglas. Their children were: Robert (1825–1906), who married Jane Armstrong and lived at Brant: Helen (1827–1906), who married and had 1 daughter; Elizabeth Oliver (1829–1907), who married James Rowand, one of the first pioneer residents of Saugeen, Ontario and M.P. for West Bruce, Ontario; Christian (b.1831) unmarried; William (b.1833), born at Yethouse, who married Jane Shanks; Andrew (b.1834), who married Betsy Laidlaw; James (b.1836), who married Mary Hendry; Janet (b.1838), who married Archibald Armstrong and had 6 children; Walter Douglas (b.1839), married Mary Rogan; and John, born in Canada, married Janet Stewart. All except the last child were born in Hob Kirk Parish. The family emigrated to Ontario in 1842, where he purchased some land near Brampton, Ontario. They then moved to the Saugeen area in 1851, arriving there by crossing the Saugeen River on a raft, before there were any roads. His offspring are still living in Canada. He died aged 90, when he had about 120 living descendants. William (18th/19th C.) married Anne Crozer in Wilton in 1842 (also spelled ‘Gavinlock’, ‘Goinlock’, ‘Gouinlock’, ‘Gowanlock’, ‘Govinlock’, ‘Govanlock’, ‘Gowanlocke’, ‘Gowanlock’, ‘Gwenlock’, ‘Gwenloke’, ‘Gowinlock’, etc.).

gover (go-vur) n., arch. someone who wanders about aimlessly – Also in ‘Johnie the gover’ so nicknamed because his father frequently used the word ‘gove’ [GW] (see also the Gover).

the Gover (tu-go-vur) n. nickname in use in the mid-19th century – He told me where they [the poachers] had gone to, and that the ‘Gover’ was one of them [HAd1869] (from gover).

gow (gow) n., arch. taste, often applied to a bad taste experienced in indigestion – ‘...e.g., that which a cake develops which has been baked with inferior butter’ [ECS], ‘...A neive-fu saut to tang its gow’ [WL] (from French; this is ‘goo’ elsewhere in Scotland).

Gow (gow) n. Alexander (1785/6-1836) resident of Roberton Parish. He married Margaret Pringle (possibly daughter of Andrew Pringle, farmer at Orchard), who was born in Ashkirk Parish and died at Old Borthaugh in 1872, aged 79. His widow and children Thomas and Anne were at Roberton Woodfoot in 1841 and at Borthaugh Cottages in 1851. His widow was visiting their daughter Ann’s family in Dovemount Street at the time of the 1861 census. Their children included: Janet (1815-82), who married James Turnbull and died in Paisley; Thomas (1817/8-92), who died at Apple tree hall; and Ann (b.1821/2), who married Alexander Wemyss. He died at Philhope Burnfoot and the family are buried at Borthwick Waas. It is also possible that he was the Alexander, married to Margaret Barry, whose daughter Margaret was baptised in gowan (gow-in) n. the daisy, Bellis perennis, but sometimes another small yellow or white flower – ‘It’s no’ because the gowans braw are bonne ’roond its ruit . . . ’[JoHa], ‘The gowan’s fair when fu’ o’ dew, as morning lights the lea . . . ’[JoHa], ‘And where’s the place o’ rest? Gowans (gow-inz) n. James (1836–1917) lived in Hawick much of his life, but died in Glasgow. He married Isabella Scott Purvis, who died in 1898, aged 55. Their children were: James, who was a schoolmaster in the Outer Hebrides and then in Edinburgh, as well as a fruit grower in British Columbia; George, who had a school in South Africa; another son who was a plumber; Katie, who married Dr. James P.A. Wilson; and Bella. John (17th C.) listed as resident at Harden in Wilton Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. His name is recorded as ‘Gouans’. John (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. In 1720 he was at Robertson Burnfoot, in 1722 at Mains, in 1727 at Parkhill, in 1733 at Mains, in 1735 at Parkhill and in 1743 at Robertson Burnfoot. He married Rachel Main (also from Roberton) in 1719. The following children born in Roberton Parish are probably his (although some may be a separate family): Margaret (b.1720); Isobel (b.1722); Rachel (b.1724); John (b.1727); William (b.1730); Isobel (b.1733); Bettie (b.1735); Agnes (b.1741): John (again, b.1743); and Adam (b.1747). It seems likely he was descended from the earlier John. He is probably the John who married Rachel Main in Roberton Parish in 1719. Joseph (17th C.) listed among the poor living at Hassendean on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls (also written ‘Gouans’).

gowany (gow-in-ee) adv., arch. covered with gowans – ‘Clear rins the burnie, an’ a’ nature’s glowie’, Array’d in her riches o’ gowany green’[JoHa] (cf. gowaned).

gowsty (gow-stee) adj., arch. ghostly, eerie, dreary, gusty, tempestuous – ‘A gowsty day’ [JoJ], ‘And touting lound i’ the lum top, The gowsty wynd did roar’ [JTe], ‘...yeh gowsty nicht (wui a wund fit ti blaw doors oot at wundihs) a turbleent woare as the ordnar dang doon the firrst Peinel-hench Moniment’ [ECS] (also written ‘goustic’; cf. goosty).

G.R. (jee-aur) n. pen-name for William G. Robertson, columnist for the Hawick News, covering rugby etc. in the mid-20th century.

graaf (grawf) n., arch. a grave – ‘for loeie is strang als death; jelaeis crewil als the graff’ [HSR], ‘Thou, O Lord, hest brung up my saul frae the graffe ...’ [HSR] (also written ‘graaff’ and ‘grafic’).

Gracie (grä-see) n. Bryce (b.1837) born in Troqueer, near Dumfries. He came to Hawick in the 1870s to work in the hosiery industry. He married Elizabeth Carter and their children were: Agnes (b.1857), who married John Scott; John (b.1859), who married Isabella Scott in Hawick; Isabella (b.1861), who was a midwife who married John Aitkin; Alexander (b.1863); Elizabeth (1865–1953), who married John Brotchie Brown; Mary (b.1867), who married John Alfred Scarborough in Wilton; Bryce (b.1869), who married Rachel Cairns in Hawick; William James (b.1871); Janet (b.1873), who married Archibald Aimers; Jessie (b.1876), who married John Stanton; and Margaret (b.1880), who died in infancy.
Graden

The youngest 3 children were born in Hawick. Bryce (1892–1939) son of William and grandson of the earlier Bryce. He was a tailor in Hawick. He served during WWI. He later emigrated to California. William James (1871–1937) born in Maxwelltown, just before his family moved to Hawick. He married Isabella Richardson (1872–1932). Their children were: Mary (b.1895), who died in infancy; William Paul (1897–1917); and Bryce (1892–1939), tailor.

Graden (grä-din) n. former lands and tower in the northern part of Linton Parish. It was home of a branch of the Ker family. The tower was demolished in the mid-18th century. There is another place of the same name near Coldstream in Berwickshire.

Graham (grä-um) n. Adam (19th/20th C.) undertaker in Hawick. His firm also ran taxis and rented out charabancs, based at 20 Drumlanrig Square. They transported soldiers between Stobs and Hawick. He hired his nephew David Peacock as a motor engineer and driver. The bus part of the company was taken over by S.M.T. in 1935. Alexander (19th C.) along with John, presumably his brother or son, he was listed in Pigot’s 1837 directory as an ironmonger on the High Street. Andrew ‘Little Andro’ (16th C.) recorded in 1580/1 along with ‘Reid Andro’ Armstrong. A man in Selkirk complained that if the Bailies there had apprehended the 2 men and subsequently released them, then the Bailies would be responsible if he came to harm. He was recorded in 1586/7 as ‘Andro Grahame, callit Little Andro’, among Borderers accused of crimes who had failed to appear in court and were given one more chance to find sureties; his brother Ninian is also listed. Andrew (b.1784/5) born in Canonbie, he was a draper at 3 Sandbed. He was listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He was Junior Magistrate in the 1820s, recorded in 1828 when the Slitrig (Drumlanrig) Bridge was extended. In 1851 he was a retired draper on Teviot Square, and was listed among the local gentry on a directory of 1852. In Leith in 1821 he married Christian, youngest daughter of John Nixon. Their children included: George (b.1824): Mary (b.1826); Jane Elliot (b.1827); and John (b.1830). Charles (18th/19th C.) described as ‘Yeomanry Trumper’ in 1882 when the death of his infant son is recorded. He presumably played the trumpet for the local volunteers. David (17th C.) tenant in Raesknowe. He rented part of the farm of Raesknowe from the Duchess of Buccleuch in at least the period 1690–98. He was also resident at Raesknowe according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. In 1700 he witnessed a baptism for Robert Gledstains in Raesknowe. He could be the David, married to Marion Bell, whose children born in Hawick Parish included: twins Bessie and William (b.1671); Robert (b.1675); and Archibald (b.1678). The witnesses in 1671 were John Elliot and John Bell (probably related to his wife). In 1682 he witnessed a baptism for Walter Bell, who was also a tenant at Raesknowe. David (1677/8–1718) preacher at Teviothead ‘chapel of ease’ in 1715, when the church was started for people in the outlying parts of Cavers and Wilton Parishes. This is probably the same as the minister of Langholm from 1705, who was translated to Kirkmahoe in 1716 and died 2 years later. He may have simply travelled from Langholm to Teviothead periodically. He is already recorded in 1714 as ‘preacher in ye meeting house in Carlangeridge Chapel’ when recorded as substitute for Hawick’s absent minister. David (b.1807/8) from Selkirk, he was a grocer in Lilliesleaf, listed in Pigot’s 1852 directory. In 1851 he is recorded on the north side of Main Street. His wife was Mary and their children included John and Mary. Rev. David J. (1955– ) son of Frank, who worked for the Post Office, and Jean Dodds. He grew up in Hawick, moving with his family to the Glasgow area in 1963. He was lecturer in Biblical Studies at Glasgow Bible College and served as assistant minister at several congregations before being ordained in 1982. In 1998 he became minister of the linked charges of Dirleton Kirk, Dirleton and Abbey Church, North Berwick. Mrs. Elizabeth (19th C.) recorded as owner of part of Howlands, along with Mrs. Agnes Bowie, in the mid-1800s. It is unclear who her husband might have been. Fergus (15th C.) recorded in 1456/7 as witness to the sasine for Ewesdale passing from Robert of Ewesdale to George Douglas, 4th Earl of Angus. He may have been related to Robert of Ewesdale. His name is written ‘Ferguse the Grame’. George (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at Lees in 1747. He married Elizabeth Noble and their children included Helen (b.1744) and Agnes (b.1747). The witnesses in 1747 were James Dryden and Adam Armstrong. He may be the George who in 1737 witnessed a baptism for William Nichol, who lived at Stouslie. George (d.bef. 1790) resident of Hawick. His daughter Helen died in 1790. He could be the George who married Helen Fletcher in Wilton in 1754.
George Rome (b.1835) son of John, farmer at Hollows Mill, near Canonbie. His older brother Simon trained as a draper in Hawick, with his younger brother John also in the same business, and their older sister Mary having married Hawick draper Walter Armstrong. In 1861 he was a draper’s assistant with Wood, Graham & Co., 6 Tower Knowe. From 1871 he moved to live with his mother’s family, the Dicksons. Hugh (1906–) from Stirling, he played as prop forward in rugby. He was capped 25 times for Scotland and also played professionally in both rugby union and rugby league teams. He coached the Scottish national team forwards, later being coach for Gala R.F.C. In the period 2017–20 he was coach for Hawick, being credited for turning the ‘Great Escape’ and turning around the team’s fortunes.

Hugh ‘Hughie the Graeme’ (16th C.) subject of a Border ballad, it is unclear if he was a historical figure or not. The story is that the Bishop of Carlisle seduced Graeme’s wife, and so he carried out a raid in which he stole the Bishop’s finest mare, was then captured by Lord Scroope and hanged at Carlisle Castle. There are several different versions – ‘Here Johnie Armstrong, take thou my sword, That is made o’ the metal sae fine; And when thou comest tae the English side, Remember the death of Hughie the Graeme’? [T].

Hutchin ‘Richie’s Hutchin’ (16th/17th C.) Englishman who was declared an outlaw for the murder of Thomas Graham (son of ‘Richie’s Will’) and John ‘Orfeur’ around the end of the 16th century. He was also indicted in England for helping Scott of Buccleuch in the rescue of Kinmont Willie in 1596 from Carlisle Castle (being ‘the third man that entered the same’), as well as for theft and raiding (particularly during the ‘Ill Week’) and for speaking against the Queen and King. His brothers William (‘Mickle Willie’), George (‘Richie’s Geordie’), William (alias ‘Carlisle’) and Richard (alias ‘Lenox’) were also convicted. In about 1605 he obtained remission for helping in the capture of ‘Sandy’s Ringan’ Armstrong. There are also mentions of ‘Young Hutchin’ around 1606, who may have been his son. He is probably the ‘Hutchon Grame’ listed in a letter from Captain Musgrave in 1583, listing his children as Andrew, Robbie, Arthur and Richie. James (17th C.) footman to Walter, Earl of Buccleuch. He was listed in the deceased Earl’s inventory in 1633, when he was owed for his annual fee. James (1612–50) Marquess of Montrose. He was a leader of the Covenanters after 1639, leading the army (including the Teviotdale Regiment) which invaded England and captured Newcastle in 1640. He opposed the Solemn League and Covenant and became the main leader of Royalist forces in Scotland from 1644, including at the Battle of Auldearn, where several local Gladstains and Douglasses fell. However, his men were massacred at Philiphaugh in 1645. He fled to Norway, but was later made Captain-General of Scotland by Charles II. Landing in the Orkneys in 1650 he raised a small army, but was betrayed and handed over to the Covenanters. He was hanged in Edinburgh, his head fixed on a spike and his body quartered and distributed among the Scottish cities. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen Goodfellow and their children included: Helen (b.1677); an unnamed child (b.1683); and Christian (b.1686). In 1687 he witnessed a baptism for Robert Cook. In 1689 he was recorded ‘in Altoncrofts’ when he (along with Robert Cook) witnessed the baptism of an illegitimate child for Walter Scott of Altoncroft. James (17th/18th C.) married Janet Scott in 1706. The marriage was proclaimed in Wilton in July and in Cavers in August. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, living at Clarilaw in 1737. He married Bessie Lamb and their children included Walter (b.1737) and John (b.1739). The witnesses in 1737 were John and James Dryden. James (18th C.) resident of Falnash. His wife was Jane Graham and their children included Mary (b.1757) and Betty (b.1758). The witnesses in 1757 were the whole congregation. Sir James R.G. of Netherby (1792–1861) eldest son of Sir James, the first Baronet of Netherby Hall in Cumberland. He served as 1st Lord of the Admiralty. He was M.P. for several different parts of England, including Carlisle 1826–29 and East Cumberland 1830–37. He switched from being a Whig to a Tory in 1835. In 1838 he proposed a motion in the House of Commons to disqualify Hawick from being a polling station for future elections after the Radicals had been harassing Tory supporters at elections. The motion was defeated by only 22 votes. He was present at the banquet held at Branxholme in 1839 in honour of the Duke of Buccleuch. James (1838–97) son of coal-agent William and Janet Turnbull. He was a frame-worker in Hawick. However, he also started his own small hosiery manufacturers ‘James Graham & Son’ (according to his obituary). In 1866 he married Ann Little, daughter of James Kennedy. Their children included: Elizabeth Patterson (b.1866); William (b.1868); James Kennedy (b.1870); Janet (b.1871); Walter
Graham

Warwick (b. 1872); and John (b. 1874). James (19th C.) farmer at Braidlie on the Hermitage Water. He is recorded there in 1868. He won cattle prizes in agricultural shows. His daughter Ann Twentyman married Dr. David Somerville Doughty in 1891. James E. ‘Jimmie’ Cornet in 1933, worked as a dyer. He assisted Bill Brydon as Left-Hand Man again after WWII. Jane ‘Jean’ (b. 1785) grocer on Broughton Place in 1841 and the Round Close in 1851. Her children included: John (b. 1807/8), a frameworker, born in Hawick; Thomas (b. 1815), a watchmaker, born in England; and Elizabeth (b. 1816/7), also born in England. She could be the Jean listed as a grocer on Silver Street in Pigot’s 1837 directory. It is unclear who her husband was. Jean Cunninghame (??– ) Lady Polwarth, who wrote ‘Sailor’s daughter: 1928–1946’ (1993). Sir John of Abercorn (d. 1337) said to have been granted the Soulsis family lands in Liddesdale around the time of Robert the Bruce. He had a son, also Sir John, who died without issue. His heiress (perhaps Mary, Margaret or Elizabeth) may have married Sir William Douglas, the Knight of Liddesdale, to whom Liddesdale passed. However, this is all unclear. John (15th/16th C.) probably from Liddesdale. In 1497 he was one of the witnesses for a document dealing with the lands of Robert Elliot of Redheugh. He could be he John, brother of Matthew who was listed in the Exchequer Rolls among men of the area around Hawick who were fined in 1501. That John was brother of Matthew in Howpasley, who was surety for himself at the Justice- aire in 1502 and was fined for non-appearance. John (16th C.) witness in 1550 to a lease granted by the curators of the young James Cranston to his mother Janet Beaton, who was wife of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme. He is listed as ‘Johnne the Grahame’. Probably the same John witnessed a bond in 1548 when some Elliots had a bond to enter Robert Crozier as a prisoner. John ‘Jock’ (16th/17th C.) son of Rob. In 1594/5 he was offered as a pledge for William of Larriston, but was deemed to ‘not worth the sum’. John (17th C.) recorded as tenant in Whithaugh Mill in 1642 he is on a long list of Border ‘notorious criminals, thieves and ressetters of theft’ who were to be captured and tried. John of Claverhouse (1648–89) soldier, from a family who were staunchly loyal to the throne. He was ‘Bonnie Dundee’ to those who considered him a hero and ‘Bluidy Clavers’ to his detractors; his reputation has certainly been coloured by propaganda. The song ‘Bonnie Dundee’ was popularised by Sir Walter Scott. He served in France and Holland, returning to Scotland in 1677, where he rose through the ranks, eventually becoming a member of the Privy Council. He was employed by Charles II to enforce Episcopacy upon Scotland, and to persecute the Covenanters, being given special powers as head of a military commission to seek out conventicles. One of the first such expeditions was to Galashiels in 1679, where a field meeting was held by Thomas Wilkie perhaps (although there are several men of similar name) deposed minister of Lilliesleaf. In 1681 he passed through Hawick, Selkirk, Buccleuch, Craik and Wolfcleuchhead with his dragoons, in search of conventicles. George Deans refused to take him to Galashiels, defying the Bailies. His troop mustered in Hawick in 1685 and he wrote a letter from Torliefshope in the same year. Later he was made Viscount Dundee and became a Jacobite supporter, and raised the standard of James in the north. He married Jean Cochrane, from a Presbyterian family. He was killed at the Battle of Killiecrankie. John (17th C.) servant in Newton, probably the one in Bedrule. He was recorded there in 1684 on a list of Covenanters fugitives, among men from the Southdean area. John (17th/18th C.) merchant in Hawick, son of merchant Walter. He is probably the John born to Walter and Janet Briggs in 1688. He was among the group of young men who were fined in 1706 for being involved in the disturbances at the Common Riding that year, including carrying their own flag and defying the Bailies. He and James Scott (‘of Westport’) were briefly imprisoned and then fined, with his father Walter, as well as Francis Elliot, acting as their cautioners. In 1709 he was recorded as a merchant when he witnessed a baptism for Robert Porteous. Also in 1709 he married Helen Culbertson ‘in Saltpreston’. Their children included Helen (b. 1711). John (17th/18th C.) tenant in Raesknowe. In 1704 he was witness to a baptism for Robert Tudhope, who also lived at Raesknowe. He was there in about 1710, as attested in evidence given regarding the state of Hawick’s Common in 1767. He could be the same John as the later tenant in Allanhaugh Mill. John (17th/18th C.) merchant in Hawick. He was recorded as a merchant in 1711 when he witnessed a baptism for Walter Paterson of Burnflat. In 1720 after not appearing on 3 occasions at Hawick Kirk for some sin, he was threatened with excommunication. Eventually he ‘satisfied in sackcloth’ 11 times before he was ‘received into the society of the kirk as a lively member thereof’. It is possible he is the son of merchant Walter, who was part of the rebel party at the Common Riding of 1706. John (17th/18th C.) tenant in Allanhaugh Mill. He is probably the John who in 1725 witnessed a baptism for William Riddell. He married Margaret Helm in 1724; she was also from Hawick Parish. Their children included: Christian (b.1725); and David (b.1728).

The 1725 baptism was witnessed by John Scott in Over Southfield and Andrew Turnbull in Drydenburn; on the same day he witnessed a baptism for Andrew Turnbull. He may be the John who hired the Hawick Parish mortcloth in 1759. John (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Philhopehill in 1774 and Broadlee in 1785 and 1793. He may be son of the Thomas recorded at Philhope a generation or so earlier. He married Jane Gray in Robertson in 1773 and their children included: Thomas (b.1774), perhaps the man recorded on the Horse Tax Rolls in 1794; Janet (b.1783); John (b.1785); and an unnamed child (b.1793). John (18th/19th C.) brewer of Hawick who was one of the first members of the Curling Club (so recorded in 1812). He may have been related to (or feebly the same as) the later proprietor of the Holland House.

John (b.c.1770) innkeeper and spirit dealer at Dovemount. He is thus recorded in 1841, when he was living with Anne (probably his daughter) and another Anne (probably his grand-daughter). His inn was one of the earliest buildings in the Dovemount area. John (b.1785/6) from Langholm, he was a clockmaker in Hawick. In 1841 he was listed at about 17 High Street, and in 1851 and 1861 was at No. 29. In 1842 he was in jail in Dumfries. He was listed as a clockmaker on the High Street in Slater’s 1852 directory; note that there was also a separate ‘Jonathan’ who was a clockmaker in Hawick at the same time. His wife was Margaret. He had grand-daughters Margaret Taggart and Margaret Bell. He may be the ‘Mr. Graham, clockmaker’, who donated coins to the Museum in 1857. John (b.1791/2) farmer at Hollows Mill near Canonbie. He married Elizabeth Dickson. They had 4 sons and 4 daughters: Mary (b.1827), who married Walter Armstrong, draper in Hawick; Robert (b.1828); Sybella Rome (b.1828, twin of Robert); Helen (b.1830); Margaret (b.1831); Simon Dickson (b.1833); George Rome (b.1835); and John (b.1838). His sons Simon and John became drapers in Hawick (with George being a draper’s assistant there), establishing Wood, Graham & Co., at the Tower Knowe in the 1850s, and then forming S. & J. Graham, silk merchants, in London in 1860 or 1861. John (b.1792/3) from England, he was a grocer and meal-dealer in Newcastle-on. In 1851 he was at about 46 North Heritage Street, and he was recorded on a directory of 1852. He may be the same John who ran a weekly cart to Brampton and another to Hawick (returning from the Bull & Butcher in Hawick on Thursdays). His wife was Jane and their children included Richard and Jane. John (b.1831) proprietor of ‘Graham’s Hotel’ at 6 Back Row from 1869. He was son of coal agent William and Janet Turnbull. The family were at 8 Back Row in 1871 and 1881. In 1852 he married Helen Riddle (b.1831). Their children included: Isabella Richardson Riddle (b.1852); William Turnbull Riddle (b.1853), who married Margaret Govenlock; John (b.1855), who moved to Dublin as a coach painter; George Turnbull (b.1857), who died young; James Melrose (b.1868); Walter (1860–64); Thomas (b.1862), who married Isabella Haldane and joined the Black Watch; Martin (b.1864): Helen (or ‘Nellie’, b.1865), married John Murray; Agnes (b.1867), who died young; Walter (again, b.1868), who emigrated to America; George Turnbull (b.1869), also emigrated to America; Mary Christie (b.1872); Agnes Martin (b.1873); and Jessie Isabella (b.1875). John (b.1837/8) youngest son of John, farmer at Hollows Mill near Canonbie. The family had been farmers and millers on the Esk and Liddel since the time of Mary Queen of Scots. He probably moved to Hawick to apprentice as a draper, and in about 1860/1 with his brother John he founded S. & J. Graham, silk merchants of London. After 1875 (the Collie Failure) he became traveller on the Continent for Wilsons & Glennys. Retiring in 1892, he lived at Huntingstile, Grasmere, and then in France, where he died at Mentone. He married Jane Murray Wilson, daughter of Hawick Provost George Wilson and his brother Simon married his wife’s cousin, Annie, daughter of John G. Wilson of Ladylaw. Their children were: Walter (b.1868); Elizabeth Richardson Dickson (b.1870); Katherine Glenny (b.1871); Madge (b.1875); Michael George (b.1879); and Jean (d.1936), who married artist Frank Bramley. John Hart (19th/20th C.) undertaker in Hawick. He was the partner in the firm J. & A. Graham, which also hired out cars and charbancs, based at 20 Drumlanrig Square. The firm was dissolved when he retired in 1914, with Adam continuing. John ‘Jock the Dog’ (?– ) larger than life Hawick man, known for tales of his huge appetite. He has worked in the mills. Jonathan (b.1802/3) from Langholm, he was a master watch and clockmaker at about 32 High Street. Note that there was another clockmaker called ‘John’ in Hawick at the same time. They are both listed in Slater’s 1852 directory. His wife was Jane and their children included Thomas and Jane. Joseph (b.c.1790) tailor living at Ryeleahead, at the southern end of Castleton Parish, in 1841. His wife was Elizabeth and their children included John, Robert, Ann and Jane. Mandy (??– ) one of two women who attempted to join Ride-outs in 1996. Matthew (15th/16th C.) tenant in Howpasley. His brother John was recorded at the Justice-aire in 1502, when he was fined for non-appearance. Probably the same John was listed in the Exchequer Rolls in 1501 among mostly local men who had been fined, with his brother John’s name appearing after his. Matthew (15th/16th C.) recorded at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1502; he was stated to have once been in Branxholme and now in Hislop, was surety for himself and was fined for non-appearance. It seems unlikely that he was the same man as Matthew in Howpasley (whose brother was recorded at the Justice-aire shortly after him). Matthew (18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His wife was Nelly Oliver and they had a son Matthew (b.1783). He may be the Matthew who was a subscriber to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). Ninian (16th C.) recorded in 1586/7 when he is recoded with his brother ‘Little Andro’, among Borderers accused of crimes who had failed to appear in court and were given one more chance to find sureties. Patrick (17th C.) recorded in the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694 among those ‘Payed but not listed in Hauick Town’. He was probably from the west side. Robert of Ewesdale (15th C.) recorded in 1456 when his former hereditably held lands of Ewesdale were granted by King James II to George Douglas, 4th Earl of Angus. In another charter of 1456 he was of Auldmontrose and ‘uncle by the father’s side’ of George Douglas, Earl of Angus; his lands of Ewesdale were swapped with the Earl’s lands of ‘Strathechty’ in Forfarshire). In 1457 the Earl of Angus granted lands of ‘Widdyrryshalch’ to his uncle Robert Graham of Auld Montrose, who was probably also him. Robert (15th C.) witness to a charter of 1489, signed at the monastery of Paisley. Robert (17th C.) listed among the ‘Cottars in Hassanden’ on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He could be the Robert who witnessed baptisms in Roberton for James Thomson in 1680 and for both Robert Scott and Thomas Graham in 1681. Robert (17th/18th C.) resident in Raesknowe. In 1708 he witnessed a baptism for Walter Craw in Branxholme Town. He may be the Robert, son of David, baptised in 1675. Robert (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, living at Lees in 1729. In 1735 he witnessed a baptism for James Dryden, resident of Clarilaw. In 1726 he married Jean Henderson, the marriage being proclaimed in Wilton and Minto Parishes. Their children included William (b.1727), Agnes (b.1729), Robert (b.1737) and Alison (b.1743). The witnesses in 1729 were John Scott and John Dryden. Robert (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Helen (or ‘Nelly’) Simpson and their children included Margaret (b.1779) and Robert (b.1780). Robert (b.1801/2) joiner on the Cross Wynd. In 1841 he was living there, but had moved to 1 High Street by 1851. His wife was Margaret and their children included John, Thomas, Isabella, Margaret, William, Alexander and Janet. Robert (b.1814/5) carter living at 69 High Street in 1861. His wife was Margaret and their children included Jean (who married William McDougall), Elizabeth, Thomas, John Robert, George and James. Robert M. (b.1880) born in Hawick, he moved to Edinburgh in about 1898, where he was a tailor. An accident in his youth prevented him from achieving his sporting ambitions, although he remained an enthusiastic supporter of sports, particularly rugby. Simon ‘Sim’ (16th C.) recorded as ‘Sym of Logane’ in 1590 when part of a complaint against several Armstrongs and others by Alexander Jardine of Applegirth. Others listed include Kinmont Willie and Sandy’s Ringan Armstrong. Simon Dickson (b.1833) from Canonbie, son of farmer John and Elizabeth Dickson. He moved to Hawick to become an apprentice with draper Walter Armstrong at the Tower Knowe. Walter was his brother-in-law, having married Mary Graham in Hawick. Along with William Wood he formed the drapers firm Wood, Graham & Co., Tower Knowe. Then in 1860/1 he and his brother John founded S. & J. Graham, silk merchants, London. He married Annie, daughter of John G. Wilson of Ladylaw. She was a cousin of his brother John’s wife, Jane Murray Wilson. His caricature appears in the book ‘Noctes Hawickianæ’. Thomas (15th C.) witness to a charter signed at ‘Wester Torban’ in 1450, relating to lands in the Edinburgh area. Perhaps the same Thomas was a Bailie of Linlithgow in a charter of 1487. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Philliopeshiel in 1743 and Philhope in 1762. He married Elspeth Reid in 1742. his children, baptised in Robertson, recorded as Bailie (or ex-Bailie) in 1701, 1702, merchant who was a Bailie in the 1690s, and also the Black Watch. Bailie Walter (d.1918), John and Thomas all served in WWI in His wife was Isabella. His sons James Haldane He served for 25 years in the Black Watch and proprietors of the Holland House, like his father. A portrait of him ex-

Johnny, Jamie Adams and Tammy Graham, The mentioned in these lines – 'Sally Maclusky, Betty Johnny, Jamie Adams and Tammy Graham, The little Gover as smart as ony, Auld Mag Lamb and her penny krame’ [HI]. A portrait of him exists. Thomas (1861/2–1935) son of John, he was a blacksmith and engraver on Buccleuch Street in 1837 directory. In the 1841 census he was living at Brougham Place with grocer Jane Graham, possibly his mother (if the name was wrong). He was at about 16 High Street in 1851 and appears on the High Street in Slater’s 1852 directory. He married Margaret Scott in 1829. William Hill in 1709. His ‘servitrix’ Isobel Beattie got married in 1709. He is probably the Walter who in 1712 (along with Walter Elliot) witnessed a baptism for William Gledstains. In 1706 his son John was among the young men fined for the disturbances at the Common Riding that year; he was there described as a merchant and ex-Bailie and acted as cautioner for the accused men. This John was probably the son of Walter and Janet Briggs born in Hawick in 1688, meaning that his wife would have been Janet Briggs. Perhaps the same Walter, merchant, is recorded as becoming a Burgess of Edinburgh in 1706, by right of his father Archibald, merchant, being a Burgess there. He was still on the Town Council in 1707 (when his first was imposed on the 2 acting Bailies). He was an ex-Bailie when the bond was granted by the Council (dated 1710, but recorded in the Town Book in 1711) to provide money for the Master of the new Grammar School. Probably the same Walter is recorded as an elder of Hawick Parish in 1711. He may also be the Bailie Graham whose daughter Elizabeth married Thomas Huggan of Hawick in an ‘irregular marriage’ in Longtown. He is likely to be the Bailie Graham who was an elder of the Kirk, appointed in 1717 for collecting monies ‘westward from the bridge to the foot of the play la’, suggesting that he lived around this area; he was similarly appointed in 1722. In the 1718 survey of the lands of the Duchess of Buccleuch he is stated to be owner of a small piece of land within the East Mains of Hawick, extending to 2 acres and 12 perches. A great falling out with Bailie Ruecastle (one of the sitting Magistrates) in 1718 had to be resolved by the intervention of the Session and the Minister; he was at that time a councillor, and is said to have accused Ruecastle of ‘Sacrilege, Thift’ and other transgressions, the nature of which are unclear. He witnessed baptisms for weaver James Weens in 1730, for thatcher Gideon Scott in 1740 and for carrier George Richardson in 1741. He married Janet Bridges (or Briggs) and their children included John, Margaret (b.1692), Janet (b.1695), Archibald (b.1701), Jean (b.1702), Anna (b.1705) and Walter (b.1707). His wife’s name is recorded in 1702 as ‘Bessie’. The witnesses in 1702 were Bailie George Martin and innkeeper Francis Elliot, and in 1705 were Bailie George Martin and baker John Whillans. Janet, who married Walter Tudhope in Hawick in 1722, may have been his daughter. Walter (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living in Denholm in 1716. He probably married Margaret Lockie in Cavers in 1708. His children included Helen (b.1708), Margaret (b.1710), William (b.1712), James (b.1714) and Walter (b.1716). Walter (17th/18th C.) resident of Efflidge. His children baptised in Kirkton Parish included Malie (b.1718) and Mary (b.1720). Dr. Walter (1762–1829) Hawick doctor of the early 1800s, born in Arthuret, Cumberland, son of Walter and Mary Johnson. He may have had a brother, Andrew, who was a doctor in Dalkeith. His premises were in Buccleuch Street. In about 1799 he was one of the local men contributing to support the war against France. He was probably the Dr. Graham with whom Sir Andrew Smith served an apprenticeship. He was one of the doctors called in the trial for the murder case of 1814, resulting in Hawick’s last hanging. He is recorded as Walter ‘sen.’ at Buccleuch Street on Pigot’s 1825/6 directory and his house is marked on Wood’s 1824 map. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. A portrait of him exists. He married Margaret Scott in Westerkirk in 1787, and their children (born in Arthuret, Cumberland) were: Mary (b.1790); Walter (b.1792), who was also a doctor in Hawick; and James (d.1799), who died in Hawick. Dr. Walter (c.1792–1858) son of Walter and Margaret Scott, he was born in Arthuret, Cumberland, and became a doctor in Hawick, like his father. His premises were on Buccleuch Street, probably at No. 10. He is recorded as Walter ‘jun. M.D.’ on Pigot’s 1825/6 directory, and his house is marked on Wood’s 1824 map. In Pigot’s 1837 directory he was a physician on Buccleuch Street. He gave evidence in 1844 regarding the poor laws in Scotland, describing how diseases could spread unchecked in the Town’s poorest lodging houses, where itinerant workers stayed. In Slater’s 1852 directory ‘Graham & Thompson’ are listed as physicians on Buccleuch Street; he must therefore have been in partnership with George William Thomson. In 1857 he donated copper coins to the Museum. Later in life he lived at Borthaugh. In 1831 in Kelso he married Alison Brown, who was from Eskdalemuir. Their children included: Walter (b.1832); Margaret Moffat (b.1834); Mary Elizabeth (b.1842), who married William Rodgie; and William Brown (b.1843). By 1861 his widow was living at Borthaugh along with her sisters Janet Brown and Margaret Scott, as well as 3 of their children. He died at Borthaugh. An obituary was written by Dr. John Douglas. William ‘William of the Mote’ (16th C.) prominent member of the family who lived at ‘the Mote’, otherwise known as Liddel Strength, on the English side near where the Liddel joins the Esk. He should not be confused with William Scott of the Mote in Hawick. He is ‘William of the Mote’ in a letter by Lord Scrope in 1601, accusing him of resetting some of those responsible for killing Sir John Carmichael. William ‘Richie’s Will’ (16th C.) 2nd son of Richard of Netherby. He is mentioned by Lord Scrope in 1595/6, when Scott of Buccleuch was said to have been on a raid with him. In 1596 he complained about a raid on his lands by the Lairds of Edgerton and Bedrule, with 20 men stealing 24 horses and £100 of goods. In 1594/5 it is written that ‘Hobbie of the Belsies turned ‘man’ to Richies Will’ and was to be entered to trial by the Wardens. He was also said to have been among Englishmen who (along with several other Grahams) met with Scott of Buccleuch before the rescue of Kinmont Willie in 1596. He first married a daughter of Armstrong of Mangerton and secondly married a daughter of Robert Elliot, 15th of Redheugh. He had at least 9 sons. In 1605 ‘Ritchie’s Hutchin’ was found guilty of his son Thomas. Rev. William (d.aft. 1638) graduated from the University of St. Andrews in 1611. He is recorded as minister at Ewes Kirk from 1627. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at Mervinslaw in 1705. His children probably included William (b.1704) and Thomas (b.1705). William (17th/18th C.) married Margaret Nichol in Wilton Parish in 1720. William (18th C.) worked in Hawick. He is recorded as a ‘Day labourer’ in 1746. He married Isobel Nichol and their children included: Margaret (b.1741); and Margaret (again, b.1746). The witnesses in 1741 were Mr. Alexander Lithgow and writer Andrew Haliburton and in 1746 were merchant Robert Oliver and John Telfer.

William (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Euphan Redford and their children included: Ann (b.1754); and Janet (b.1758). William (18th/19th C.) farmer at Borthwickshields, recorded on the 1790–97 Horse Tax Rolls as owner of 5 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. He also paid the dog tax at Borthwickshields in 1797. He subscribed to Andrew Scott’s book of poetry, printed in Kelso in 1811. He could be the ‘Mr William Graham’ from Roberton Parish who in Roberton in 1791 married Agnes Turnbull, from Minto Parish. Agnes (b.1792), baptised in Roberton, was probably their daughter. William (18th/19th C.) resident at Rigfoot in Ewesdale. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. William (18th/19th C.) resident at ‘Holstaine’ who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. It is unclear how he might have been related to other Grahams. William (18th/19th C.) labourer at Harden in Castleton Parish. He is listed among male heads of households in 1835, when he had just left for America. William (b.1795/6) from England, he was farmer at Lawston in southern Castleton Parish. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. He was recorded as head of his household in 1840 and 1841. In 1851 he was farming 500 acres and employing 8 labourers. His wife was Mary and their children included Mary, Thomas, Elizabeth, Robert, John, William, Christopher, James and Ann. William (b.1809) born at Fairnilee haugh (or Fairnilehaugh) near Yair in Selkirkshire, he was a coal agent in Hawick. In 1841 he was on the Howgate working as an agricultural labourer. In 1851 he was living at ‘Leafy House’ (probably Ivy House) on Weensland Road and working as a mason’s labourer. He was recorded as ‘Carman’ (i.e. coach-driver) in 1861, when he was living on Weensland Road. In 1829 in Stow he married Janet, daughter of Hawick shoemaker James Turnbull. Their children included: Margaret (b.1829), who married John Combe; John (b.1831), who was proprietor of ‘Graham’s Hotel’ in Hawick; Agnes (or Ann, b.1835), who married Robert Halliday; James (b.1838), who married Ann Little Kennedy; Janet Turnbull (b.1841), who married baker William McCallum; and Helen (b.1844), who married Robert Jardine. He could be the William, son of John and Ann Dixon, born in Selkirkshire in 1803. Sgt. William (19th C.) veteran soldier who served in the Crimean War and the Indian Mutiny. He probably lived in Hawick. He can be seen in an early photograph, in the uniform of the 4th Roxburghshire Volunteers. William Turnbull Riddle (b.1853) eldest son of John and Helen Riddle. In 1875 he married Margaret Ruickbie Govenlock, descendant of James Ruickbie. Their son William Nichol was Cornet in 1902. The family lived at 14 Howe gate. William Nichol (b.1881) Cornet in 1902 and one of the founder members of the Callants’ Club. He played for Hawick R.F.C. and worked as a plumber. His father was William Turnbull Riddle and his mother was Margaret Ruickbie Govenlock, great-grand-daughter of poet James Ruickbie (also spelled ‘Graeme’ and formerly ‘Ghram’, ‘Ghrame’, ‘Grahm’, ‘Grame’, ‘Grayme’, etc.).

the Grahams (θu-grāmz, grā-umz) n. family with origins in Midlothian, with a cadet branch moving to Eskdale in the late 14th century and becoming a large clan in northern Cumbria. They were a powerful force in that area, holding at least 13 towers, until the early 17th century when they were targeted by the Earl of Cumberland and others in an attempt to pacify the Borders. They were a scourge of the English wardens, with a reputation for riding with the Scots when it suited them. 150 of the family were rounded up in about 1605 and mostly executed or deported to Ireland or to fight in the wars in Holland. The clan motto is ‘Ne oublie’ (forget not) and the crest shows a falcon killing a stork – ‘For it’s hey the Graems! and Ho the Graems! The gallant Graems are a’ frien’s to me; And if I had them a’ here this nicht, Ane foot o’ ground I never wad flee!’ [T] (also spelled ‘Gaeme’ and other variants).

Graham’s Close (grā-umz-klö̂s) n. former name for a passageway near the foot of the Howgate. The name was used in the 18th century. Immediately below here is where a large hole opened up during the great flood of 1767.

Graham’s Hotel (grā-umz-hō̂-tel) n. hostel run by John Graham from 1869 at 6 Back Row. It was where the inaugural meeting of the Hawick Burns Club took place in 1878. In 1885 it was renamed Holland House.

Grahamslaw (grā-umz-law) n. area to the north-east of Eckford, the hill there containing 9 caves. The lands were owned by the family of Grahamslaw of that Ilk, with ‘Johan de Grimmeslawe’ signing the Ragman Rolls in 1296 and Christian ‘Grymislaw’ resigning the lands into the hands of the King in 1429. The Barony was long held by the Crichtons of that Ilk. The lands were granted by William Crichton of that Ilk to Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1436/7, with a Grahamslaw

‘precept’ in 1439, and are described as ‘8 husbandlands’ in 1528/9 when still owned by Walter Scott of Branxholme. A separate ‘6 husbandlands’ called ‘Portarlis Landis’ or ‘Porterlandis’ are also mentioned as a Scott possession in 1517, 1553/4, 1574, 1634, 1653, 1661 and 1663. In 1454 an ‘instrument’ dealing with ‘Burrell lands’ in Eckford (witnessed in John Waugh’s tenement in Hawick) describes how Robert ‘of Grimslaw’ was the former laird. A precept of sasine in 1500 grants the lands to Walter Scott of Branxholme. The former estate there contains a beehive-shaped dovecote (the origin is probably ‘Grim’s hill’, combining the Old English ‘hlaw’ with Old Norse ‘Grimr’), where this was a nickname for Odin, perhaps relating to the caves; the name appears as ‘Grymislaw’ in 1429, ‘Grymyslaw’ in 1500, ‘Grimmislaw’ and ‘Grymmislaw’ in 1574 and ‘Greameslaw’ in 1663.

Grahamslaw (gra-unz-, grimz-law) n. Adam (15th/16th C.) had sasine for the lands of Newton in Bedrule Parish in 1504, with his name given as ‘Ade Grenislaw’. Probably the same Adam was a member of the panel for deciding on the inheritance of the Barony of Cavers by James Douglas in 1509; his surname is given there as ‘Grymislaw’. He may have been father of the later Adam of Newton. It is possible he is the Adam, brother of Thomas (heir of John of Newton) who came in the King’s will in 1494/5 for the theft of 60 sheep from Stouslie. He was already deceased in 1530/1 when his widow Agnes Davidson and heir Elizabeth received money from their cousin Ralph Davidson for a third of ‘Chames’ within the Lordship of Minto. James was granted the non-entry of ‘Chames’ in 1531, by William Turnbull of Minto. Adam of Newton (16th C.) probably the Adam, son of the Laird of Little Newton, who had remission for crimes in 1502. This was for the theft of a cow from Craigend, sheep and geese from Rutherford of Longnewton, geese from John Gledstains, pigs from Spittal, sheaves of barley from George Rutherford, grain from Menslaws and for common theft before his previous 1488 remission. He was one of the Border Lairds who submitted to James V in 1530 to keep better order. He resigned his lands of Newton (in Bedrule Parish) to the King in 1531, then gained a crown charter to the lands, along with his wife in the same year. He married Janet Rutherford and was succeeded by his son John. He is also mentioned in a sasine of 1585 (by which time he was deceased). Andrew (15th/16th C.) probably related to Thomas, the 2 being named in a case involving David Oliver ‘in Stryndis’ in 1502. Oliver was charged with resetting them, as well as assisting them in raiding farms. His surname is given as ‘grymislaw’. Christian of that Ilk (14th/15th C.) resigned the lands of Grahamslaw in a letter of 1429, as recorded in an ‘instrument of transumpt’ requested by Stephen Scott of Castelaw in 1445. Her name is written ‘Cristiane de Grimsislaw’. George (16th C.) brother of Harry and nephew of Henry. George, daughter of John of Newton. Her father sold the family lands to Robert Ker in 1586 and she married him around the same time. Her 6 brothers were killed by a group of Turnbulls before 1586, the trial being in 1604. She had a daughter who married John Scott of Huntly. She owed her son-in-law ‘for his tochergood’ and eventually arranged to pay him in the form of an ‘assignation’ of 1000 merks owed to her by Walter Turnbull of Rawflat. However, she then arranged to enter his house on the pretext of visiting her daughter, and removed the papers while the residents were at church, taking off on horseback. John Scott caught up with her at Scott of Syn- ton’s house, where she denied that she had the paper and later tore it up and ‘kaist the revin assignaimnt unto the said complener with such disgracefull and vickyiid speicheis as wes moist unseameing in the persone of a moder to so kynd and loveing a sone’. She was let off with a rebuke by the Privy Council. She was also recorded (as ‘Helen Graneslaw’) in a decree of rebellion with William Douglas in 1604. Henry ‘Harry’ of Little Newton (d.bef. 1606) recorded in 1606 when his sons William and George were held by the Hawick Bailies for the murder of Robert Turnbull of Hallrule. They were then transferred to Edinburgh Tolbooth at the direction of the Lords of the Privy Council, and there was a complaint that the family of the murdered man wanted to ruin them and keep them in prison forever, rather than prosecute them. James (15th/16th C.) recorded in ‘Camys’ (probably Minto Kames) in 1502 when Archibald Douglas in Effledge had remission for stealing barley from him. Additionally both Archibald and William Douglas in Effledge had remission for stealing 48 sheep from him. John was also recorded in ‘Camys’ in 1502 and surely related, as was probably the later James of the same place. James (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1531 when he was granted the non-entry of the 10 merkland of ‘Chames’ by William Turnbull of Minto and his son William. These are the same lands that Adam formerly held (with his widow Agnes Davidson recorded receiving money for the lands in 1530/1); it seems likely that Adam was therefore a close relation. John of Newton (15th/16th C.) witnessed to the ‘retour’ for the Kers in the lands of Borthwickshiel in 1471. He was also a member of the panel for Walter Scott inheriting Branxholme and Buccleuch in 1492. In 1493 he had remission for being with Alexander, former Duke of Albany. In 1494/5 Thomas, brother of Lord Cranston, had remission for the (unspecified) crime done to him at Denholm. He is recorded in 1498 along with Adam, when he had remission for comming with ‘the traitouris if Levin, Ruthirfurdis, and Turnebullis’. In 1500 he was one of the men selected to value the lands of Whithope. In 1501 he was mentioned in the Exchequer Rolls in relation to the administration of some fines in Roxburghshire. He may be the ‘Johannem Grimyslaw’ who in 1482 was on the panel for Elizabeth Cunningham inheriting the lands of Appletreehall and the eastern part of Hassendean. His son Thomas was listed in 1492/3 when he witnessed the confirmation of Rutherford and Wells to James Rutherford. John (15th/16th C.) tenant at ‘the Place of Camys’, probably Minto Kames. In 1502 Peter Turnbull in Bochumster had remission for several crimes, including stealing 40 cows and 5 horses from his farm, with the help of some rebel Turnbulls. James was also recorded in ‘Camys’ in 1502 and surely related. John of Newton (16th/17th C.) son and heir of Adam. He could be the John who had a sasine for Newton in 1541/2. He could be the ‘Johnne Grymmislaw’ who signed the bond to act against Borders thieves in 1571/2. He also swore allegiance to the Crown in 1572/3, with William Ker of Caverton as his surety. In 1586 he sold Newton to Robert Kerr of Ancrum (later Newton), who married his daughter Helen. He is probably the ‘Johne Grimeslaw of Littill Newtoun’ who was among the men accused of helping the English raid lands belonging to Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme in 1548. He is probably the same ‘Johnne Grameslaw of Littill Newtoun’ whose 6 sons William, James, Robert, John, Andrew and Thomas were said to have been killed by a group of Turnbulls from Stanedge, Barnhills and Minto. In 1589 John Turnbull of Minto and Walter Turnbull of Bedrule were cited for resetting a group of Turnbulls and Douglass who were in 1586 denounced as rebels for the murders of ‘Johnne Grymmislaw, younger of Newton, William, James, Andro, Robter and Thomas Grymmislawis, brothers and sons of Johnne Grymmisla of Newtoun’; the trial for restitution did not take place until 1604. John (d.c.1586) son and heir of John of Newton. Along with his brothers and uncles William, James, Andrew, Robert and Thomas, all servants of Thomas Kerr of Craelinghall, he were killed by a group of Turnbulls, Douglasses and Davisonis from the Minto area. Specifically the men declared rebels in 1586 for the murders were William Douglas (son of William of Cavars), James Douglas (son of John of Whirriggs), Hector Turnbull in Barnhills and his brother George, William Douglas (son of the Laird of Earlsdse), Robert Turnbull (son of Sir Thomas of Bedrule), Robert Turnbull (‘tutor of Barnhills) and his brothers Hector and Gavin, plus ‘certain other rebels’. In 1610 a commission was appointed by the Privy Council to apprehend the accused, since they had still not found caution for the crimes. His sister, Helen Grahamslaw, Lady Newton (who had married Robert Kerr), was mentioned as one of the pursuers in the case, as well as Robert Kerr of Newton ‘as sister’s son’. Robert (14th/15th C.) lord of the ‘Burrell lands’ in Eckford Parish, as described in a document of 1454 signed in John Waugh’s tenement in Hawick. He was succeeded by his only daughter Helen, who married Simon Burrell and was succeeded by their only daughter Janet, whose John Burrell resigned the lands in 1448. He may be the ‘Roberto gynlaw’ listed in a document for lands in Morebattle in 1445. Thomas of Newton (15th C.) member of the 1464/5 panel to rule on the inheritance of the Barony of Cavars by Archibald Douglas and also the panel to decide on the disputed lands of Kirktoun Mains and Flex. He was thus a prominent Roxburghshire landowner of the time and is listed as ‘Tommas Grymmslaw of Newtoune’. Thomas (15th C.) son and heir of John of Newton. In 1492/3 he witnessed the confirmation of Rutherford and Wells to James Rutherford. He is probably the Thomas of Newton, ‘Junior’, who was surety for William Falside in Ancrum at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1494/5. Also in 1494/5 he was ‘Junior dominus de newtoun’ when he and his brother Adam came in the King’s will for stealing 60 sheep from Walter Scott of Hovasley and Walter Turnbull of Stouslie, from the lands of Stouslie; these sheep appeared to belong to the King. His goods were escheated and his sureties were John Rutherford of Edgerston and Ralph Ker. Thomas (15th/16th C.) accomplice of David Oliver ‘in Stryndis’ (probably Strange in Rulewater), recorded in a remission Oliver had in 1502. Along with Andrew he was involved in ‘theftuous deeds’ and was already ‘at the horn’.

Perhaps this same Thomas was included among Rutherfords and others who were declared rebels in 1498 for the murder of Patrick Hepburn. He was also mentioned in 1502 when Alexander Laidlaw was convicted of associating with him and the Rutherfords, as well as when John Fawlaw in Littlelean had remission for associating with him and William Rutherford in Maxton was convicted of associating with him. He was also listed along with Gilbert Rutherford and Thomas Scott as rebels who Robert Rutherford had remission for associating with. He may be the same man as the son of John of Newton. Walter (17th C.)
recorded as schoolmaster at Tushielaw in a deed of 1629. William (15th C.) witness to the sasine for the Kers in the lands of Borthwickshiel and Harden Wood in 1471. In 1488/9 he witnessed an agreement between the Vicar of Hassendean and the Abbot of Melrose. Probably the same William had remission (along with Simon Glendinning) in 1493 for common theft happening before the time of his current remission. He is recorded as being ‘at the kirk of Hassindene’ in 1493 when he had remission for helping some men of Tynedale to steal cattle, sheep, horses and goods from Minto; Walter Scott of Howpasley served as surety for him.
In 1494 he was ‘William Grymyslaw’ when he was a witness for the transfer of lands in the Barony of Hassendean (formerly spelled ‘Grymslaw’, ‘Grimslaw’, ‘Grymislaw’, ‘Grymmisla’, ‘Grymmis-law’, ‘Grymslaw’, ‘Grymislaw’, etc.).

grain (grān) v., arch. to groan – ‘I’ll sigh, an’ whinge, an’ cant, an’ grane, An’ mak the godly unco fain’ [JR], ‘...Young first-time communicants, A’ greenin’, grainin’, to be saunts’ [JoHa], ‘The muse is like to spleet her jaws, Wi’ gauntin’, cants, A’ greenin’, grainin’, to be saunts’ [JoHa],
‘But wi’ a deep and hollow grane,
They fill him fou o’ hol-granes T’ express his dismal pleasures’ [WP] (also spelled ‘grane’, grean’, etc.).

grain (grān) n., arch. a branch of a stream or valley – ‘The clouds sail doon Teviotdale Owe every hope and grain, The road and river wanly glint And the hills are derr wi’ rain’ [DH] (used as a suffix in some local place names, e.g. Aland in the name of several small streams in the

Ely Grain, Fauch Grain, Hare Grain, Lang Grain, Linhope Grain, Master Grain, Mid Grain, Ralph-tree Grain, Rashie Grain, Rough Grain, Saugh-tree Grain, Stock Grain and Todhunter Grain; the word came from Old Norse through Middle English).

grainy (grān-u-ree) n., arch. a granary – ‘It wis in what we ca’d the granary the part o the steedlin where they kept the grain. The sheaves wis built intae round stacks outside and thatched, an the granary wis empty’ [TH].

Grainfit (grān-fī) n. Grainfoot, former farmstead on the Tinnis Burn in Castleton Parish.
Archibald Beatie was there in the 1770s. Walter Armstrong lived there in the late 1700s. On Stobie’s 1770 map it is marked to the east of Reid-moss. It may have been at the foot of Todhunter Grain.

Grain Hill (grān-hil) n. hill in the north part of Ashkirk Parish, on the right-hand side of the Woll Rig road, with Wollrig Grain passing nearby. The farm of ‘Greenshilk’ recorded in 1797 in Ashkirk Parish was probably near there.

grainin (grān-in) adj., arch. groaning, grumbling, complaining – ‘At the grey grainin’ ranks
o’ poles that leaned...’ [DH].

graip (grāp) n., arch. an iron-pronged fork used for gardening or farming – ‘We Wullie, the cowherd, sae hardy and crouse, He raise, seiz’d a grip, and syne made for the house’ [JoHa], ‘...as he just went out with graip and creel to his father’s tata field...’ [RM], ‘Wull ee gie’e a len o eer graip (farm or garden pronged-fork)’ [ECS].

graith (grāth) n. stuff, material for a particular purpose – ‘Gar a the graith gang to the

the Grammar Schuil

Hawick Grammar School, founded in 1710, following a meeting of the Parish Heritors organised by Rev. Alexander Orrock, and bolstered through the Orrock Bequest of 1711 (hence the confusion about the date of its foundation). There was probably a school from about the time of the Reformation, but it may not have had a continuous existence. Andrew Sword was recorded as schoolmaster in c.1592 and in 1616, William Hay in 1606 and Adam Scott in 1622. In the Parish valuation of 1627 it is stated that there ‘is no provision for ane schole, bot thair is verie great necessitie for a schole’. James Carmure was recorded as schoolmaster in 1631. However, it is unclear how well supported education was in the town through the rest of the 17th century and before there had long been calls to establish such a school. The Burgess taxes were in 1710 (probably for the first time), to support this school and its master. It existed alongside the Parish School (often called the English School), which was for elementary education, with lessons in English. The Grammar School was a secondary school for the wealthier classes, which to begin with would have charged fees and had lessons in Latin. The first schoolmaster was James Innes. It is unclear where the school started, since the land at Orrock Place was obtained (from Andrew Rodger) only about 1724. At that time it contained 2 ruined houses, plus sheds and a yard. The school seems to have been rebuilt from these buildings soon after 1724. But a new building was completed on the site in 1732, constructed by John Turnbull, mason, and Walter Scott, wright. This building was damaged in the 1767 flood. The school used the Town Hall as overflow from 1821, and the schoolhouse in Orrock Place was abandoned in some years as being too small. By 1825 the school was run by a Rector with 2 assistants. The school was rebuilt in 1825-26, designed by Smith of Darnick, when it was merged (actually a joint master was appointed in 1824) with the Parish School to become the United Schools. In 1839 it was written that the subjects taught were reading, writing, arithmetic, geography, mathematics, Latin, Greek and French. A new room was added to the school in 1846, but then it still only contained 4 rooms.
grampus

It was then in use until Buccleuch School (now Hawick High School) was built in 1860. The old building became the property of the Duke of Buccleuch, but was given to the Archeological Society as a Museum from 1862–86. Thereafter it was sold as a joiners workshop (Walter Scott & Son), and then became Chisholme Antiques, etc. It still exists beside the old Orrock Church, with high-silled windows suggesting its earlier function. The head boy of the school used to carry its flag during the Common Riding, the practice ending in 1777; the 1744 flag is preserved in the Museum.

grampus (grawm-pis) n., arch. an ignoramus, fool (noted by J. Jamieson).

grand (grawnd) adj. great, fine, splendid – ‘that’s a grand hat ee’ve on’, ‘Now there’s a new coat feenished! Is it no grand?’ [JEDM], ‘...a grocer body gaun eis yirrints, gien zis the wee-wurn hail: ‘It’s a grand-day!’ [ECS], ‘...A gaed an got masel cleaned an spruisht wui a grand swaibble’ [IWL], ‘There was na graun new blouses but a nice laddie tae’ [MB], ‘The fremmit freends pairties’ [HEx1919], ‘...eis no only a grand singer but a nice laddie tae’ [MB], ‘The fremmit freends ye neeber there Are neeber-like and grand’ [WL].

grand-dowter (grawnd-dow-tur) n. a granddaughter – ‘Ma great-grandfather’s sister was mairried ti Robbie Burns’s granddowter’s husband’s brother which makes mei a tremendous close relation ti oor National Bard’ [IWL].

grander (grawn-dur) adj. finer, more splendid – ‘Though there may be grander toons Still a Teri hert aye turns Tae the Teviot and the bonnie Border burns’ [RMc].

grandest (grawnd-dist) adj. greatest, finest – ‘that’s the grandest hing’, ‘Man it’s the grandest place aw’ve ever seen And no a bit like Hawick’ [AY], ‘And Jess McVeeite offered, up the Wynd, The grandest sticky taffee in the toun’ [WL], ‘For in yon Bridge Street queue A got the grandest blether, Wi’ freends like Robbie Knox And Henry’s fither’ [IWL].

grandfither (grawnd-fith-ur) n. grandfather – ‘Gie me a guid-gaun grandfither clock’ [DH], ‘...Pop’s grandfither George and his brother Billy were Cornets’ [IWL], ‘Well, ma fither an ma grandfither were baimth in it, it seemed a natural progression’ [IA] (also written ‘grandfather’).

the Grand Mairch (thu-grawnd-märch) n. traditional march at the Common Riding Ball, led off by the Cornet and his Lass.

Grange see Grange

Grange (gränj) n. area just to the west of Chesters, south-east of Ancrum. ‘Chesters’ Grange’ and ‘Grange Banks’ are shown on today’s Ordnance Survey maps. Perhaps the lands were formerly separated into east and west; if so Adam Thomson was recorded at the east part in 1494/5. Lands there valued at about £1460 were owned by Rev. William Bennet in 1643, and another part owned by Gavin Elliot, valued at £260. In 1678 part was owned by William Elliot of Grange, valued at about £350. Mr. Hair paid tax for 13 windows there in 1753. The farm there was developed around 1790 by Thomas Ogilvie, who had purchased Chesters a few years before. Richard Hair was owner in 1788 and Henry Hair is recorded as farmer there in 1797. The 1811 Land Tax Rolls listed ‘Part of the Lands of Grange, formerly possessed by John Elliot’, valued at £108 (‘Gronge’/’Grange’ are marked on Bales’ 1654 map).

Grange (gränj) n. former name for lands in Ringwoodfield, somewhere near Northhouse or Teviothead. Around 1557 Simon Scott of ‘Fernili’ and Archibald Elliot of Gorrenberry rented these lands, along with Bowanhill, from the monks of Melrose. The name is recorded as ‘Grangia alias Stanyhetoun’ and the value was £4. In 1564 it was recorded simply as ‘Grange’. It is possible that this was a grange of the Abbey, located perhaps near Stany Hill. This could be the Grange in Castleton Parish listed in 1797 when John Turnbull was there.

Grange (gränj) n. Robert (13th/14th C.) referred to as ‘de la Graunge’ when he swore fealty to Edward I in 1296. His lands could have been the Grange near Ancrum, or possibly the one at Abbotrule. He was on a jury an inquest for the inheritance of Wilton and other lands of William de Chartres in 1303/4.

the Grange (thu-gränj) n. former farm in the Barony of Abbotrule, just to the north of the main house. The lands transferred to Southdean Parish and later to Hobkirk Parish. Thomas Rutherford was recorded there in 1494/5. It was among the lands purchased by Adam French from the monks of Jedburgh in 1569 and later passed to the Kers. ‘Dand’ Rutherford of Grange was recorded in 1581/2. The lands (with mill) were recorded as part of the Lordship of Jedburgh in 1587. In 1629 Walter Scott, son of William, who was son of Walter of Todrig, was served heir to the lands; they were at that time described as ‘a 32 shilling land of old extent’. It was among lands whose superiority was inherited by Bessie and Anna, daughters of George Scott (brother of Sir Walter of Whitslade) in 1670, when it was described as also having a mill. Rev. James Ker, minister of Abbotrule, was also Laird of Grange in the mid-to-late 17th century; he preached a field conventicle in the house in 1679, with about 500 people listening from the lawn outside. In 1680 it was listed among lands whose superiority was held by the Kerrs of Abbotrule. In 1707 ‘Grange’s lands’ were held by ‘Airs of R. Watson’ and valued at £43; it is marked on Stobie’s 1770 map and was ‘Grainge’ in 1670 and 1680).

Grant (gráhn’, grawn’t) n. Adam (1859–1938) composer of the music for several Hawick songs and compiler of others. Born in St. Andrews, he spent his early years in Edinburgh, and at the age of 12 was apprenticed as an organ builder and piano tuner. He came to Hawick at 19 to be organist at St. Cuthbert’s. He moved to St. John’s in 1991 and remained there until 1936, serving the same church for 45 years. He also set himself up as a piano tutor and tuner and in 1882 opened a shop (which he shared with 3 other businesses at No. 2 High Street), selling sheet music. He moved to larger premises at 10 North Bridge Street in 1885, and lived above the shop. This became the main musical business in Hawick, selling instruments as well as music (and later gramophone records), and acting as a booking agent, as well as publisher of local music. He was official Common-Riding accompanist for more than 40 years (at least 1896 until 1937), and Callants’ Club accompanist for over 30 years. He also wrote non-Hawick music, sometimes under the name ‘Rosenberg’. He also helped James Sinton with the musical part of his Hawick-related bibliography. His music shop finally closed in 1933. He was also a keen Volunteer, served as Captain of the Teviotdale Amateur Cycling Club and was a member of the Archeological Society and Golf Club. A member of Lodge St. John 111, he was Grand Organist to the Provincial Grand Chapter of Roxburgh, Selkirk and Peebles. His musical output included composition or significant arrangement of ‘Up wi’ Auld Hawick’, ‘Hawick’, ‘Oor Ain Auld Toon’, ‘The Avail Crew’, ‘Clinty’s Song’, ‘Bonnie Teviotdale’, ‘Meda’s Song’, ‘Invocation’ and ‘The Wail of Flodden’. He also provided arrangement and acted as publisher for many others. His most serious piece of piano music was ‘The Branxholm Waltz’ and he also wrote music for plays in collaboration with J.E.D. Murray, specifically ‘The Witch o’ The Wisp Hill’, ‘The Caddie’s Ghost’, ‘Kirsty o’ Cocklaw Castle’, ‘Turning Back the Clock’ and ‘The Gutterbludes’, as well as the Quater-Centenary Pageant. He probably contributed more than anyone else to Hawick’s musical heritage, his publication of compilations of local songs perhaps being his lasting legacy, since this saved many songs and popularised others. He married Bessie Briggs Hall and their son Adam R. carried on the family business. His daughter Agnes Wight Hall (‘Nan’) died in 1912, aged 25. There is a commemorative plaque for him at 2 High Street, the site of his first music shop, designed by Willie Landles, and unveiled in 1999. He is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery, and since he lived to a good age and fell on hard times, there were apparently only 35 mourners at his funeral; however, traffic was stopped on the High Street at the unveiling of the plaque. Adam Rutherford (1883–1952) son of Adam, he carried on the family music business. In 1948 he arranged the music for ‘The Fairest Spot o’ A’’, piecing together the music from his memory and some notes left by his father and Tom Ker. He also resurrected Ker’s song ‘Where Slinrig and Teviot Meet’ in 1949. He was organist at Southdean Kirk and then Bedrule Kirk. He also ran a dance orchestra. He married into the Wallace family who farmed at Roundabouts and they moved to Hillview, Southdean. He worked in the music shop until it closed in 1938. Afterwards he continued to be accompanist at Common Riding and other events in Hawick. He took ill suddenly when attending a Glasgow Hawick Association meeting and died a few days later. Andrew farmer at Riddell, descendant of the Sprots. In 2015 he presented a talk to the Archeological Society on the history of the Riddell estate. Derrick (??– ) Hawick born and bred, he worked in the knitwear industry, and was known for his abilities on the rugby field. He first played for Hawick R.F.C. at age 16. He went on to gain 14 caps and to play for the Lions, then coach for Hawick, the South and Scotland. George (17th/18th C.) factor to Douglas of Cavers in the early-to-mid 18th century. Probably the same George was the Duke of Buccleuch's Chamberlain for Ettrick Forest, Hassendean, Burnfoot and Melrose at least in the period 1748–56. He was factor for Scott of Harden 1734–55 and was also factor to Francis Scott of Gorrenberry when Adderstone was purchased in 1750. George (18th/19th C.) surgeon in the Royal Navy. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825 and must have had a local connection. George (18th C.) factor of Cavers estate. He was appointed Sheriff-Depute of Roxburghshire by Archibald Douglas in 1742. He may be the 'Mr. Grant', factor to Douglas of Cavers, recorded in the Hawick Session book of 1723. John Alexander William (1886–1959) born in Inverness, he was an architect in Edinburgh. His firm, J.A.W. Grant, continued after his death. They were responsible for much of the local authority housing developments in Hawick, including Burnfoot, Howdenbank and Silverbuthall. John (18th C.) factor to Archibald Douglas of Cavers, he was made an Honorary Burgess in 1751 (presumably related to George). He is listed among the subscribers to the reprinted Buchanan's 'History of Scotland' (1752). Dr. John (1823–76) from Knockando in Moray, he was a 5th generation descendant of Patrick, 2nd son of James, Laird of Grant. He served as a doctor in Hawick, and was listed as a physician on the High Street in Slater's 1852 directory. In 1851 he was listed as a general practitioner, living at about 21 High Street, with an 'M.D's Messenger' and a servant. For most of his time in Hawick he lived at the top of Walter's Wynd, 47 High Street. He was listed there in 1861, with his housekeeper and stable boy. He was well known for keeping otter hounds, horses and other animals in the back of the property in the mid-19th century. The Border Magazine of 1904 contains a grizzly account of 'A Day on Teviot with the Otter Hounds' which he led in 1863, with his dogs ('Caledonia', 'Royal', 'Ringwood' and 'Pibroch') chasing an otter from Burnfoot to Spittal, and his young hound 'Bobby' being brought in to dispatch the otter. Another account published in 1904 described a hunt on the Ale Water, when he succeeded in a long-held ambition to personally capture an otter alive, but not without being seriously bitten. John (19th C.) worked at Wells sawmill around the 1850s. Robert (17th/18th C.) recorded as tenant of 'Ashkirkmiiln' in 1714 when his son James became a wright's apprentice in Edinburgh. Thomas (18th C.) house servant at Teviotbank in 1793, when he was working for David Simpson. Rev. William (1811–53) born in Jedburgh, son of Lewis of the Auchernack family, and Isabella Veitch of Inchbonny. His father was a saddler in Jedburgh and his sister Isabella married James Guthrie, Hawick plumber and slater. He was educated at George Watson's Hospital and Edinburgh University and became a schoolmaster at Minto, probably in the 1820s. Under his direction it is said that the school achieved a very high reputation, with several boarders coming there from outside the Parish. He was still recorded as master at Minto in Pigot's 1837 directory. He was licensed by Jedburgh Presbytery and ordained as assistant at Cavers in May 1840, taking over as minister from James Strachan only a month or so later. He was then minister of Cavers until his death. He remained with the establishment after the Disruption, although part of his congregation left to form the Denholm Free Kirk in the autumn of 1843. In 1847 he and his wife were hosts to Jane Elgee, an Irish Nationalist who would be mother of Oscar Wilde. In his day the Sunday service started at noon (to allow the country folk to see to their animals before setting out), lasted for 2 hours, with a break and then another 2 hours. Like all ministers of the time, he was known for rebuking the congregation. In later life he had a long white beard. In 1840 he married Jane, daughter of James Dickson of Mauricewood. Their son William (1849–1911) became a wealthy timber merchant in Leith (and was Master of the Merchant Company of Edinburgh 1905–07), and his this William's son also became minister of Cavers. Their other children were: Isabella (1841–1904), who married the minister of Coldness; Lewis (b.1842), who died young; Lewis (1844–1916), Kirkcaldy engineer; Jane Dickson (1846–1924), who married Robert Michael Ballantyne, children's author; and James (1849–1911), who became a doctor and died in Tasmania. He died of cholera after visiting sick parishioners. His name is recorded on the family gravestone in Jedburgh Abbey cemetery. Rev. William Kenneth 'Ken' (1883–1971) minister of Cavers 1924–54, before it merged with Kirkton. He was the son of William and Eliza Mary Usher of Edinburgh (daughter of brewer Thomas), and grandson of Rev. William Grant who had been minister of Cavers himself. He was educated at George Watson's College and Edinburgh University, where he graduated M.A. in 1905. He was licensed to preach by Edinburgh Presbytery in 1908 and became assistant at St. Bernard’s in Edinburgh. He was then minister at Edrom and of the ‘Second Charge’ of St. Andrew’s from 1916. In 1918 he was Chaplain to the Forces serving in Salonika. In 1924 he was translated to Cavers Parish. He married Evelyn Maud Mary Urquhart in 1914 and they had one son, Alan (1916–2010).

grap (grap) pp., arch. gripped – ‘An ilk lad grap the lass that he liked the best, An’ they took the road hame by theirsel’s, man’ [JoHa], ‘But she …roared and grap, an’ grap ma airms’ [HAST1868], ‘…She grap at it, muttering, I should ha’e had mair, But yet I will tak’ it at Copshawholm Fair’ [AD] (also written ‘graap’; this is the past tense form, while grappen is the past participle).

grape (grap) v., poet. to grope – ‘But it slip’t away frae him, none kens how or where, And he looked, and graped, and wonder sair’ [JoHa], ‘…And belike they graped whaur they couldna see, And the nits were sweir to faa’ [WL] (also spelled ‘grap’; cf. greap).

the Grapes (thu-grâps) n. the Grapes Inn, previously at 16 Buccleuch Street, which was the main centre in Hawick for the carrying trade, before the coming of the railway. It once had a private well, which others were sometimes allowed to use. The inn was erected by a carrier named John Hargreaves, after he acquired the property in 1820. John Beck was the proprietor in 1825, John Hargreaves, after he acquired the property to use. The inn was erected by a carrier named Robert Hobkirk in 1837 and Margaret Best in 1841 and they had children Clive Roger, Colin William and John Alexander.

Graps Close (grâps-klâs) n. also known as Grapes Inn Close, the pend between 16 and 18 Buccleuch Street, named after the Grapes Inn, which once occupied that area. The name continued in use long after the inn itself closed. The Drums and Fifes march out to here on the Thursday night, since it is close to the site of one of the town’s toils. It is also on the route of the Cornet’s Walk.

Grapes Hotel (grâps-hû-tel) n. hotel in Newcastle at 16 Douglas Square, also known as the Grapes Inn and just ‘the Grapes’. Jane Kyle was proprietor there on Pigot’s 1825 directory and still in 1851 and in Slater’s 1852 directory. John Elliot was inn-keeper in the 1860s.

grat (gra’, grat) pp., arch. cried, wept – ‘But Willie was stricken over the head, And thro’ the knapsac the sword has gane; And Harden grat for very rage, When Willie on the grund lay slane’ [T], ‘When Meggie grat, an’ vow’d that she Wad rather seen the gaunters I’ the stell that day’ [JoHa], ‘The cook o’ the kitchen, sae greasy an’ fat, She got sic a fright that she blubber’d and grat’ [JoHa], ‘But she …roared and grat, an’ grap ma airms’[HAST1868], ‘When I grat an’ chestenet my saul wi’ fastin’ …’[HSR], ‘Bie the rivirs o’ Babylon, ther we sate down: yis we grat when we rememberit Zion’ [HSR], ‘…she fair grat when she saw a volunteer part from his sweet-heart’ [RM], ‘It girned at the red, and grat at the blue …’[DH] (also written ‘graat’; this is a past tense form, cf. the more common gret and the past participle grutten).

gratifi (grâ’-fi, -fe) adj. grateful – ‘she’s gratifi for an’ the support she’s hed’, ‘…But dinna be pridefu’, but gratifu’ To ken ye’ve been keepit frae wrang’ [FL], ‘A’ve aye been awfih gratefih And a’ ma life A will That A bide here in the toon that lies ablow the Vertish Hill’ [IW] (also spelled ‘gratifi’ and gratefu’).

the Gravelly Haugh (thu-graw-vu-lee-hawv) n. former descriptive name for an area on the south side of the Slitrig near Lynnwood, where the old Common boundary briefly crossed to the other side of the river. This could be what was meant in an entry from the Parish Records of the early 18th century – ‘To a poore lad’s cofine yit dyed in the Gravelly, £2’.

gravit (graw-vi’) n., arch. a scarf, especially a warm woollen one – ‘pit yer gravit on’, ‘…Till they’ve a’ gotten gravats made oot o’ gude rope’ [UB] (also spelled ‘gravat’; accent on the 2nd syllable).

graw (graw) v. to grow – ‘Gala graws on ee after a while, a bit like cancer’, ‘…for which yin year heid’ d ti graw a beard …’ [IW] (cf. the more common growave).

grawn (grawn) pp. grown – ‘The wand’in Burnfoot path is grawn’, Lang by the river’s side … ’ [WFC] (also spelled ‘gраun’).
Gray (grā) n. Agnes (17th C.) resident of Headshaw Mill in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when she was listed on the Hearth Tax roll among ‘ye poor’. Andrew ‘Dand’ (16th C.) leased part of the lands of Raperlaw in 1564, along with George Gray and Thomas Allan. He was probably related to George, as well as to William, who leased another part of Raperlaw. Andrew ‘Dandie’ (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Margaret ‘frater’ (perhaps Fraser) and their son John was baptised in 1651. The witnesses were Andrew Scott and John (who was probably related). Andrew (17th C.) resident in Lilliesleaf according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. His is probably an ancestor of the later Andrew who owned lands in Lilliesleaf. Andrew ‘Dand’ (17th C.) resident of Roberton Parish, specifically the Hassendean part. In 1680 when he witnessed a baptism for Alexander Muir, along with Walter Paisley. He married Isobel Ormiston in 1679 and their children included: Helen (b.1780), baptised in Hawick; and Bessie (b.1685) and Isobel (b.1688), baptised in Roberton. The witnesses in 1688 were Robert and George Ormiston (perhaps brothers to his wife). He may be the same man as the later Dand in Weensland, or else perhaps his father. Andrew ‘Dand’ (17th/18th C.) resident of Whitlaw and later tenant in Weensland. Note that his forename is sometimes transcribed as ‘David’ rather than ‘Dand’. He must have been closely related to James, who was in Whitlaw at the same time. He was tenant in Whitlaw in 1702 when he witnessed a baptism for James Colwort, also in Whitlaw. He was recorded in Whitlaw in 1706 along with James (presumably his father or brother) when they witnessed a baptism for Robert Cairns in Whitlaw. He was also in Whitlaw in 1708 when one of his children was baptised in Hawick, in 1709 when he witnessed baptisms for Adam Scott in Kirtton, for Walter Scott in Hawick Shiel, for Walter Scott in Nether Southfield and for William Gledstains at Whitlaw (both along with James), in 1711 for John Scott ‘Wyndhead’, and in 1713 for James Craw in Brauxholme Town. He was listed as an Elder in 1713. He was recorded as tenant at Weensland in 1718 and also in 1723 when he was considered as an elder of Hawick Kirk. He was also tenant in Weensland in 1719 when his servant William Stoddart got married. He was also so labelled in 1725 when he witnessed baptisms for carrier Thomas Porteous, for William Hislop and for tenant Robert Scott. In 1726 he witnessed baptisms for carrier John Tait and for Robert Nichol in Weensland. He was described as tenant in Weensland in 1728 when his daughter Margaret married Walter Scott from Hawick-shiel. He married Janet Buckham (or ‘Buchan’, from Bedrule Parish) in Hawick in 1706 and their children included: Margaret (b.1708); James (b.1710); John (b.1712); Francis (b.1714); Beatrice (b.1716); George (b.1718); Mary (b.1721); and Janet (b.1723). The witnesses in 1708 were Andrew Riddell in Goldielands, and gardener James Falsyde, in 1718 was ‘Mr’ James Innes and in 1721 were Bailies Walter Purdom and James Scott. He was in Weensland in 1720 when (along with merchant John Johnston) he witnessed a baptism for workman William Stoddart. He may be the Dand who witnessed a baptism for James in Whitlaw in 1728 and another (the same day) for John Anderson. He could be the Dand whose daughter Margaret married Walter Scott in 1728. Andrew (18th C.) recorded in Hawick in 1764 when he was paid for ‘the wind-pointer, fen, and hands, in church steeple’. He was presumably a clockmaker or other merchant. Perhaps the same Andrew in Cavers Parish married Helen Glendinning in Hawick Parish in 1762 and had a daughter Helen (b.1770). He may be the Andrew who witnessed a baptism in Hawick for Thomas Welsh in 1797. Andrew (18th C.) recorded in 1788 as owner of lands in Lilliesleaf (valued at £86 13s 4d). He could be the Andrew from whom the Riddells of that Ilk purchased the lands of ‘Hoglair-burn’ in Lilliesleaf Parish, according to the 1813 Tax Rolls. He was probably a descendant of the earlier Andrew from Lilliesleaf. Andrew (18th/19th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. In 1788 in Cavers he married Christian Hunter. Andrew (18th/19th C.) resident of London who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He presumably had a local connection. Andrew (19th C.) noted local jumper from Hawick, also associated with the early years of Hawick Baa. He won the running hop-step-and-leap at the St. Ronan’s Games in 1830. At the Saturday Games of the 1834 Common Riding he won the ‘running high leap’ and the ‘hop, step and leap’, bringing to 23 his total of local prizes. He is probably the handloom weaver of that name living with the Crosier family at about 30 Loan in 1841. Andrew (b.1784/5) resident of Lilliesleaf. He was probably the Andrew...
Gray

who is recorded as owner of ‘Hungry-hills, Four Rigs and Tenement and Yard in Lilliesleaf’ according to the 1811 Land Tax Rolls. He was listed as an agricultural labourer in 1841 and as a ‘Landed Proprietor (of 7 acres)’ on Main Street in 1851. His wife was Jean from Gretna. Their children included: James; Catherine; and Isabella (b.1831), who wrote poetry under the pseudonym ‘Free Lance’. Charles (18th/19th C.) first (and only) minister of the Independent Kirk in Hawick. He arrived in November 1805, having previously been a stone mason, and being trained by the Haldane’s in Edinburgh. After only a few years he apparently became more of a convert to baptismist views than much of his congregation, leading to the entire church folding by 1813. He left Hawick, since there were not enough baptist followers to support him at that time. David (17th C.) resident in Lilliesleaf according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. David (17th C.) resident at Stouslie according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Dand see Andrew Gray, ‘Dand’. Duncan (15th C.) witness to Hawick’s earliest known sasine in 1453, where he is described as an esquire. Presumably the same Duncan ‘Graye’ was also witness to a charter of William Douglas of Cavers in 1450, in which James was also a witness. Francis (18th C.) resident of Weensland. He married Isobel Douglas and their children, baptised in Hawick Parish, included: Janet (b.1759); an unnamed child (b.1761); and Robert (b.1762). The witnesses in 1761 were Bailie Robert Howison of Orchard and ‘student’ John Laurie, and in 1762 were John Laurie (again) and George Gray (who was probably related). Francis ‘Frank’ (1839–1922) from Yeadon in Yorkshire, where he was bandmaster from the age of 17. He came to Hawick in 1860 with his brother Barnabas, to work as a weaver. In 1861 they were lodging at 21 High Street. He was made bandmaster for the local detachment of the Border Rifles, and remained in this position for 43 years. Since the volunteers had no instruments, he travelled to Edinburgh with Capt. Chisholme of Stitches to purchase them. He can be seen in an early photograph and is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. George (16th C.) leased part of the lands of Raperlaw in 1564, along with Andrew Gray and Thomas Allan. He was probably related to Andrew, as well as to William, who leased another part of Raperlaw. George (17th C.) recorded as being in ‘Ruperlaw’ (probably Raperlaw, but possibly Ruberslaw) in 1684 when his servant George Young was listed as a fugitive for refusing to conform to Episcopalianism. George (18th C.) resident of Weensland. In 1762 he witnessed a baptism for Francis in Weensland (who was surely related). He is recorded being in ‘Wiensland’ in 1764 when his son’s baptism was witnessed by gardener James Scott and Walter Scott (probably related to his wife). He was also listed being in Weensland in 1766 when baptismal witnesses were Adam Scott and William Elliot. He married Helen Scott in 1756 and their children included: Margaret (b.1758); David (b.1759); John (b.1762); James (b.1764); Esther (b.1766); George (b.1769); and Francis (b.1771). He could be the miller who in 1757 witnessed a baptism for miller Alexander Heatley. George (18th C.) recorded in Wiltonburn in 1794 when he was in dispute with Basil Wood (in Dangerfield) according to a document in Selkirk. George (d.1808) merchant in Hawick, son of James, who was from Ashieburn. He was listed as a merchant on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He died in Hawick. George (19th C.) resident of ‘Peathouses’, i.e. Burnhead Cottages, in 1857, when he donated coins to the Archaeological Society. He was surely related to William, who was listed as a lambswool stocking maker at ‘Parkhouses’ on the 1851 and 1861 censuses. George (1910–93), born in Hawick, he started work with Walter Wilson’s and was a ‘Bevin Boy’ during WWII. He then worked on the railway before becoming a personnel officer with Turner & Rutherfords. He was a member of the Labour Party, was on the Town Council 1955–61 and served as a Bailie. He was also a keen amateur dramatist and singer. Gilbert (18th/19th C.) gardener in Hawick. The death of his daughter Janet is recorded in 1810. Cardinal Gordon Joseph (1910–93), born in Leith, son of mechanical engineer Francis William. He was ordained as a priest in Edinburgh in 1935, then assisted his uncle, who was priest at St. Andrews, while taking a degree there. In 1941 he was appointed priest of S.S. Mary & David’s in Hawick, and remained there until 1947. One of his tasks was to put together the centenary booklet. During the War years he also served nearby German and Italian prisoners of war. He also became Dean of the Borders and served on the Roxburgh education committee. He left to become Rector at St. Mary’s College, Blairs (near Aberdeen) and became Archbishop of St. Andrews and Edinburgh in 1951 (at only the age of 40). He founded St. Andrew’s College, Drygrange in 1953. He was made a Cardinal in 1969, the first Scottish Cardinal since the Reformation. He returned to Hawick to open St. Margaret’s School in 1965 and to be principal guest of the 1974 Common Riding. He retired in 1985 and died in Edinburgh. Helen (18th/19th C.) grocer at the Mid Row in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. Isabella Anderson (1831–1909) resident of Lilliesleaf, daughter of Andrew and Jean Gray. She worked as a dressmaker. She wrote pseudonymously using the name ‘Free Lance’. Her volume ‘Border Rhymes’ was published in Hawick in 1899. It contains a mixture of English and local dialect poems, many with a religious flavour. James (15th C.) local man recorded in 1432 when he witnessed the sasine giving the Barony of Cavers and Sheriffdom of Roxburghshire to William Douglas. Also listed was John, who was surely related. He may be the same James who witnessed a charter for William Douglas of Cavers in 1450, along with Duncan, who may have been related. And he is probably the James listed as deputy to Sir Archibald Douglas of Cavers in 1455 and Sheriff-Depute of Roxburghshire in 1456 when he gave sasine of Ewesdale at ‘Mallo’.

James (17th C.) son of William. In 1676 he was ‘of Lislie’ (probably Lilliesleaf) when he and his mother Isobel Turnbull had discharges with the Burgh of Selkirk. His brother John is recorded in 1678.

James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Murray and their children included: Dand (b.1676); Helen (b.1679); and Marion (b.1684). The witnesses in 1684 were Walter Paisley and William Taylor. In 1685 he witnessed a baptism for William Taylor.

James (17th C.) resident of Birkwood in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll there. He is probably the James, married to Bessie Dunlop, whose children included Agnes (b.1688), Eupham (b.1689), Robert (b.1691), William (b.1693), Janet (b.1696), Walter (b.1701), Janet (again, b.1703) and an unnamed son (b.1707). The witnesses in 1690 were William (probably his father or brother) and James Henderson. In 1691 he (and James Dunlop) witnessed a baptism for William Dunlop. Probably the same James was listed among those collecting money for the Parish in 1724.

James (17th/18th C.) tenant in Whitlaw. He was an elder of Hawick Kirk. He could be the James who witnessed a baptism in 1687. He was recorded as tenant in Whitlaw in 1703, 1706, 1707, 1709 and 1713. He witnessed baptisms in 1703 for James Gledstains in Whithaugh, in 1704 for Robert Cairns (tailor in Whitlaw), in 1706 for James Irvine, tenant in Hawick Shiel, for Robert Cairns in Whitlaw (along with Dand, presumably his son or brother) and for weaver Thomas Anderson, in 1707 for weaver Andrew Jardine and William Gledstains, workman in Whitlaw, in 1708 for Thomas Penman and James Borthwick, in 1709 for William Lillico (herd at the Flex), for Walter Scott in Nether Southfield and for William Gledstains at Whithait (both along with Dand), and in 1713 for James Crow in Branxholme Town (when he was listed as an Elder). Probably the same James was in Whitchesters in 1708 when he witnessed another baptism. In 1717 (along with John Scott, candlemaker) he was appointed to collect monies from ‘Whitla, Whitleaugh, Flexes, and Burnflat’, and in 1718 he was described as ‘in Whitta’ and already quite aged. He must have been closely related to Dand, who was also in Whithlaw.

James (17th/18th C.) tenant farmer at Whitlaw. In Hawick in 1727 he married Helen Eliott, daughter of Walter in Brugh. Their children included: James (b.1728); and an unnamed son (b.1730). It seems likely he was son (or grandson) of the earlier James, who was elder of Hawick Kirk and related to David who was in Whithlaw in 1702. The witnesses to the 1728 baptism were David Gray and John Scott.

James (18th C.) resident of the Hawick area. He married Jean Lamb and their children included: Agnes (b.1745), baptised in Wilton; and John (b.1765), baptised in Hawick. The witnesses in 1765 were Walter Scott and William Robertson. He may be the James Grae’ who hired the Hawick Parish mortcloth in 1758.

James (18th C.) resident of the Allars area. He was already deceased in 1805 when the death of his son James is recorded. James ‘Jamie’ (b.c.1793) Hawick man who was born crippled. He famously told a story about meeting the lame Sir Walter Scott at the head of the Loan as a boy. He could be the weaver ‘James Grey’ recorded at about 41 Loan on the 1841 census. James (d.bef. 1808) from Ashieburn. The death of his son, merchant George, is recorded in Hawick in 1808. Janet (17th C.) recorded among the poor of Hassendean Parish in 1694, when she was at Horsleyhill. John (15th C.) recorded as one of the ‘nobles’ on the witness list for the 1432 sasine for William Douglas being given the Barony of Cavers and Sheriffdom of Roxburghshire. It took place at Cavers house and the other men were all local. He must have been related to James Gray, who is also listed. John ‘Wi Yin Ei’ (16th C.) servant to the young Laird.
of Mangerton. He was listed in 1541 among Scotsmen accused of burning the corn of William Carnaby at Halton. His nickname is recorded as ‘with one eye’, presumably meaning that he has an injury to one eye. He could be one of ‘John Gray the elder, John Gray yonger’, who were listed in 1541 among Scotsmen accused of the murder of Englishmen during several raids along with Armstrongs, Fosters and others. John (16th C.) recorded in 1582 as witness to a sasine in Hawick, involving James Jack. John (17th C.) described as ‘in Lillie’ (i.e. Lilliesleaf) in 1632 when, along with 3 other men, he feued Westburns from Thomas Hamilton, Lord Binning. In 1642 his son, also John, married Janet, daughter of William Wood in Raperlaw. John (17th C.) son of John, tenant in Lilliesleaf. In 1642 he married Janet, daughter of William Wood in Raperlaw. The couple received lands belonging to Wood in Lessuden and near Barnhills. They sold the lands in Lessuden to Walter Scott of Raeburn in 1671. John (17th C.) recorded in Ashkirk in 1661 when he witnessed a baptism for Andrew Govenlock. Perhaps the same resident in Ashkirk Parish was listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. John (17th C.) recorded in 1678 as son of the deceased William, indweller in Lilliesleaf. In that year his tutors Andrew Riddell and Andrew Davidson had a discharge over annual rents with the treasurer of Selkirk. His brother James is also recorded in 1676. In 1683 Andrew Riddell is describes as his uncle. John (17th C.) recorded at Raperlaw in Lilliesleaf Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He may be related to the earlier Johns from Lilliesleaf. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish, he was a weaver in Langton. He married Margaret Cumming and their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1717 and their children included Margaret (b.1701), Elspeth (b.1702), Alexander (b.1704), Thomas (b.1706), John (b.1708), Patrick (b.1713) and Margaret (b.1717). John (18th C.) weaver in Hawick. He married Helen Paterson and their children included Thomas (b.1735), John (b.1739) and Walter (b.1744). The witnesses in 1744 were merchant John Ruecastle and shoemaker John Scott. He is probably the weaver of that name who witnessed a baptism for weaver David Miller. John (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Mary Laidlaw and their children included: Thomas (b.1771). John (18th C.) listed as groom at Borthwickbrae in 1793, when he was working for William Elliot Lockhart. He could be the John who married Agnes Scott (from Hawick) in Robertson Parish in 1789 and was living at Harden in 1793. Their children included Thomas (b.1790), John (b.1792) and James (b.1793). John (18th/19th C.) farmer at Wiltounburn Epps, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when he owned 2 work horses. John (18th/19th C.) farmer at Ashkirk Bridgend, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. John (18th/19th C.) farmer at Heuchhouse in Castleton Parish, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. It is possible he was the Mr. Gray of Castleton who He subscribed to John Learmont’s book of poetry in 1791. John ‘Daff Jock’, ‘Jock the Ladle’ (1776/7–1837) wandering beggar and simpleton, who travelled around Roxburghshire, Selkirkshire and Peebleshire in the early-to-mid 1800s. A native of Ettrick, he later moved to Selkirk with his packman father, Johnnie. He was also referred to as ‘Daff Jock Gray of Gilman-sleuch’. His nickname ‘the Ladle’ came from a version of ‘And he played upon a ladle . . . ’ that he used to sing, along with a ladle as prop. He was also known for imitating ministers and for bawdy songs. He would make up his own songs by throwing together rhymes from elsewhere. He usually wore knee-breeches, bright red garters, enormous buttons and a tall hat. He is mentioned in William Chambers ‘Memoir of Robert Chambers’. One of his songs was a popular one with the chorus ‘Rob Rodger, he ca’s up the rear, And Caleb beats the drum’ [RM], with a different version in the Chambers book, with chorus ‘And the ladle he’s but young, And the laddie he’s but young, And Robbie Scott ca’s up the rear, And Caleb beats the drum’ [DJG]. He would mimic the older local preachers and was sometimes disruptive during services. He was also known for singing bawdy songs. He also sang rhyming couples of Wullie Cray’s, and verses attributed to him refer to people and places around Wilton and Hassendean, as well as other places. He was said to be the inspiration for ‘Davie Gallatley’ in Sir Walter Scott’s novel ‘Waverley’. A portrait of him was painted by William Smellie Watson. He is said to have been very attached to his father, and took to bed after his father’s death, dying within a week. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Margaret Collier in 1796. Their children included: James (b.1796); Jane (b.1802); and Christian (b.1802). The witnesses in 1796 were the whole Associate Congregation. John (18th/19th C.) stocking-maker in Hawick. His son Andrew died in 1805. John (b.1790/1) born in Crailing, he was a carrier and grocer in Hobkirk Parish. In 1851 he was living at ‘North Town O’ Rule’, which is the cottage known locally as ‘Drythropple’. His neighbour was the poet John Halliday. His wife was Isabella and their children included Andrew, Eliza and Agnes. John ‘Jock’ (1812–83) born in Wilton, he lived in the West-end and was known as a cheerful simpleton. He stayed at the Corner of the Green Wynd and the Loan with his sister Lizzie and her husband James Anderson, and helped his brother-in-law with his dairy. He was a common sight on the streets, driving a donkey cart and having a pet starling. He later became bald, apparently as the result of a hair tonic, and is buried in the Wellogate – ‘Jock, the cuddie’s tail’s off’ [RM]. John Y. (19th/20th C.) left money to establish the John Y. Gray Prize Fund at the High School. Katherine (16th C.) recorded in 1538 when she had the sheep of Thomas and George Lauder removed and placed her own livestock there. This was done legally in front of Thomas Scott in Todrig and others. In 1540 she was among the tenants who were warned to remove themselves from Todrig when Alexander Lauder succeeded to the lands. She may be the same woman as Katherine Lauder recorded in 1538. She may also be the Katherine, wife of Herbert Maxwell, recorded in 1540, related to the lands of Haining. Margaret (17th/18th C.) Hawick resident, recorded in 1720 being made to stand ‘upon the usual place of repentence in sackcloth’ in St. Mary’s Kirk for 7 Sundays. This was for ‘her sin of drunkenness and baseness’. Patrick (c.1518–84) 4th Lord Gray, Sheriff of Angus, he was nephew of 3rd Lord Gray. He played an important role in the Borders during the Rough Wooing, when he sided with the English. He was captured at the Battle of Solway Moss in 1542 and pledged himself to Edward VI in 1547. He led a party in 1547/8, along with many Kers and others to burn Ale Water, then Yarrow and Ettrick, then Hawick, together with the valleys of the Teviot, Slitrig and Borthwick, particularly the lands of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme and his friends. In 1548 he was captured by French troops and narrowly avoided execution. He was again taken prisoner by the English at the Raid of Swinton in 1562. He married firstly Marion Ogilvie and secondly Margaret, daughter of Walter Ker of Cessford. He was succeeded by his eldest son Patrick. Peter (18th/19th C.) carrier recorded as owner of a horse in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls for Hawick. He is probably the Peter from Wilton who married Jane Leithead in Roberton in 1790. Their daughter Agnes was baptised in Wilton in 1802. Robert (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Margaret Redford in 1722 and their children included Agnes (b.1723), James (b.1725) and Bessie (b.1729). It seems likely he and his wife were related to Helen Gray and William Redford, respectively, who had children a little earlier in Ashkirk Parish. Robert (19th/20th C.) baker at 10 High Street around the 1890s. Thomas (16th C.) probably from Liddesdale, he was listed in 1535 among a number of Armstrongs and others who were denounced as rebels for stealing cattle and taking prisoners from Craik. Ninian Gray, servant to John Forester ‘Shake Buckler’ is also listed, and so may have been a relative. Thomas (16th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf. He held a tenement there from the Bishop of Glasgow and in 1563 leased it to his neighbour Thomas Small for 19 years. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Robertson Parish, probably the part corresponding to Hassendean. He married Alison Riddell and their children included: Agnes (b.1680); Walter (b.1681); Christian (b.1684); Agnes (again, b.1688); and Agnes (again, b.1690). The witnesses in 1681 were Walter Riddell (probably related to his wife) and Alexander . . . (perhaps Riddell) and in 1688 were Walter Riddell and Robert Hume. He is probably the Thomas Gray who witnessed baptisms in Robertson Parish for Robert Scott in 1681 and for Rev. Francis Scott in 1684 and 1688. Thomas of Townhead (17th C.) had an ‘instrument’ brought against him, along with Rev. Francis Scott in 1689, by 2 of the Hassendean heritors. This suggests that he was associated with Hassendean Kirk and also refused to give up Episcopalianism. He may be the same Thomas who has an ‘instrument’ in his favour in 1675 ‘on the appearance of his wife, Bessie Scott, within the parish Kirk of Hassindene’. He paid the land tax on £214 for lands previous held by Scott of Alton and ‘Now called Know Townhead’ in 1678. In 1692 he ‘peyed formerly for the viccorage of Hassindreane alias Tounhead’. He was recorded at Hassendean Townhead on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls, when he was taxed for 2 hearths. In the 1811 Land Tax Rolls there is a record of ‘Thomas Gray of Alton’s Lands, now called Know Townhead’; it is unclear where his lands of Alton were. Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident of ‘Crackuooll’ (or Cracknooll’) in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll. He could be the Thomas, married to Helen Scott, who was recorded as a weaver at Shielwoodhaugh in 1709; their children included John (b.1705), Helen (b.1707) and Robert (b.1709). Perhaps the same
Thomas was listed in 1724 and 1727 among those collecting money for the Parish, suggesting he was a Kirk Elder. Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1714 he witnessed (along with Thomas Huntly) a baptism for John Little. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Isabel Scott and their children included: Thomas (b.1757); and Isabel (b.1758). The witnesses in 1757 were the whole congregation and in 1758 were Walter Wilson and Francis Paterson. Thomas (18th/19th C.) first definitively known proprietor of the Mosspaul Inn. He is thus recorded on an 1803 list of members of the 1st Battalion of the Roxburghshire Volunteers. He was probably landlord at Mosspaul until 1816. He was a friend of James Ruickbie, who wrote a poem about the improvements that had been carried out at the hotel – ‘Tam, the storm baith loud and fierce is, Ever since I left Mosspaul, Yet accept my two-three verses, Now I’m in a tint ta scrawl’ [JR]. William ‘Will’ (16th C.) leased part of the lands of Raperlaw in 1564, along with William Redford. This was specifically the quarter belonging to George Turnbull. He was probably related to Andrew and George, who leased other parts. William (d.bef. 1676) recorded in 1676 being ‘of Lislie’ (probably Lilliesleaf) when his widow Isobel Turnbull had a discharge with the treasurer of Selkirk. This was probably for some annual rent, with his son James also recorded in the same year. His son John is also recorded in 1678. William (17th C.) resident at Castleside near Branzholme according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. In 1694 he was recorded as the Duchess of Buccleuch’s tenant of the farm of Castleside. He may be the William who witnessed a baptism for Andrew Murray in 1671. William (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He witnessed a baptism for James Thomson in 1680. William (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, recorded at Clarilaw in 1738. He is probably the William who in 1737 witnessed a baptism for Robert Easton, who lived at Clarilaw. He married Grisel Nixon and their children included Bessie (b.1727), Margaret (b.1730), Helen (b.1732), Andrew (b.1735) and Patrick (b.1738). The witnesses in 1738 were James Dryden and William Anderson. William (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Isobel Scott in 1745 and their children included: Thomas (b.1763); Helen, Isabel and Margaret (b.1765); and Isabel (b.1769). William (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was living at Harden in 1787. He married Helen (or ‘Nelly’) Smith and their children included: Thomas (b.1779) and John (b.1781), baptised in Wilton; and William (b.1787) and James (b.1791), baptised in Roberton. William (18th/19th C.) farmer at Craggs in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls for Lilliesleaf Parish, when he owned 3 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. He also paid the dog tax at Craggs in 1797. William (b.1796/7) born in Ancrum Parish, he was farmer at Ormiston in the 1860s, having previously lived in Channelkirk. In 1861 he was farmer of 210 acres at Ormiston and employing 7 people. His wife was Marion and their children included John, Janet, Violet, Christina and Marion (sometimes written ‘Grey’).

Gray Coat (grä-kö’ n. hill south of Dodburn Filters and to the east of Priesthaugh. It contains the remains of several different homesteads and earthworks and its southern slopes are crossed by the Catrail. To the north-east of the summit is an ancient cairn, about 6 m in diameter, but surrounded by 3 grass-covered banks; it is said to resemble the Rounds of Tivla (in the Shetlands), and probably a Bronze Age burial mound. The homestead is on the northern slopes, measuring 47 m by 37 m, perhaps defined by a twin palisade and with a house about 50 m diameter house inside. There are signs of cord rig on the northern and southern sides of the summit, as well as the souther-eastern slopes. Close to the summit are the remains of a settlement surrounded by a wall about 105 m by 60 m, with entrances in the south-west and north-east. The interior contains evidence of at least 8 houses. On the south-eastern side, beside the grassy track, are the remains of a small pele-house, possibly Peedibrae or Dodrig. The pele-house was 8 m by 4 m, with some rybats discovered in an excavation. To the south-east and north-west of these ruins are the foundations of 2 other buildings.

gray-daylicht (grä-dä-light) n., arch. dawn, the light of dawn – ‘…wan the slogan waekent the waller an sterteet the fray i the gray-daylicht’ [ECS].

Gray Hill (grä-hiil) n. hill above Old Northhouse, reaching a height of 317 m and with a triangulation pillar on top. There are 2 ancient settlements on its slopes, as well as a portion of the Catrail on the other side of the road. On the far eastern slopes there is an area of rig-and-furrow cultivation.

graylin (grä-lin) n. grayling, Thymallus thymalus, a fish with a small mouth and large dorsal fin, introduced locally from the south of England to a

greap (greet) pp., poet. groped – ‘There isna in’t, for thrice I’ve greapit: O greatest curse, that e’er for man was sew’d or shapit, ’S an empty purse’ [JoHa].

the Great Bell (thu-grä bel) n. term used to refer to the new bell of St. Mary’s, recast in 1694 after ‘it was rent, anno 1693, and was of new founded’. A subscription was taken around the Parish, and an Act of the Bailies and Council was passed stipulating that only the families of those who had contributed (at least 12 shillings) were entitled to use the bell to announce burials, with the same restriction applying to the hand or ‘Deed’ bell. These ‘Havers of the Bell’ still had to pay a small fee for its use, however. The list contains 180 names, including some identifying information (occupations, nicknames, etc.), and hence is an invaluable record of Hawick’s wealthier citizens at the end of the 17th century. In 1718 the Bailie Depute contributed ‘as much oak as was ane axtree to the great church bell’, meaning it got a new ‘axle-tree’ to swing on. In 1723 it was ordained that anyone who contributed to the rebuilding of the bellhouse should have the same rights as those listed in 1694. The bell was taken down (and presumably replaced again) in 1747 when work was done on the steeple. Repairs to the old bell contributed to the Town’s debts mentioned in 1612. The bell was replaced by a new one in 1763, when the Kirk was rebuilt. The new bell weighed 560 pounds and the exchange was arranged through ex-Bailie Thomas Turnbull in London.

the Great Border Games (thu-grä bôr-durr-gänz) n. name used in the mid-19th century for the Games on the Saturday of the Common Riding, held at the Haugh.

the Great Flid (thu-grä ëlid) n. popular name for the flood of the Slitrig in 1767, also known as ‘Hawick Flood’ or ‘Hawick Spate’. This occurred on 5th August 1767, beginning about 4 p.m., and lasting until after 6 p.m. There was no great rainfall in Hawick and the flood only affected the Slitrig, with the Teviot above Hawick being easily fordable that day. The Slitrig rose 22 feet (about 6.5 m) above its normal level, as many as 15 houses were swept away, along with the Corn Mill, the garden wall of the Manse and the Parish school room. The smaller arch (at the east end) and part of the northern parapet of the Auld Brig were also swept away, and from there 2 men, trapped by the rushing waters, were carried off and drowned. Mrs. Aitkin narrowly escaped by crawling over a ladder laid between upper windows across the waters rushing down Silver Street, before the house was carried away. Four people trying to save belongings from Eckron’s house were swept down to the Sandbed and rescued there. Two other men were rescued after climbing on top of the kiln. A servant girl waded into her master’s house to rescue the £300 in gold that he had there, only to be carried away, and she narrowly escaped drowning, being cast onto a green downriver, still clutching the bag of money. It is also said that the flood carried off most of the records of the ‘Town’s incorporated trades. The waters poured up the Backdamgate and filled the closes along both sides of the High Street as far as the Cross Wynd. Part of the Tower was undermined and in danger of falling. The flood was probably exacerbated by the arches of the Auld Brig becoming blocked with debris. There is a tradition that it started when a shepherd threw a stone into a loch at Winburgh Hill, disturbing the fairy folk! It is also stated to have been started by ‘the fall of a Water-spout’ (whatever that means!). The Hawick minister, Rev. Laurie gathered some parishioners together in the kirkyard to pray during the flood, afterwards claiming to have helped abate the waters; although apparently the flood had already much receded by then. Another incident later recounted is that a baby was carried off in its cradle, but rescued without injury; similarly, it is said that a bedstead was carried off with a cat on it, which landed safely on a sandbank in the Common Haugh. It is also said that a Hawick shoemaker, who was several miles further down the Teviot and, unaware of the flood, noticed a board on the river bank, and discovered it was his own shop sign and that James Aitkin, returning from Kelso, noticed some of his own merchandise washed up on the haugh at Menslaws. There are several accounts of the events in Hawick that day, the most detailed being by Town Clerk John Gledstains. The loss Great Legs  (grä’-legz)  n. nickname of Adam Laidlaw and also Robert Elliot.

Greatmoor  (grä’-moor)  n. hill about 10 miles south of Hawick, between the Maidens and Cauldcleuch and reaching 599 m (1,964 ft). It is marked on the Ordnance Survey maps as ‘Greatmoor Hill’. The summit contains a large man-made cairn as well as a triangulation pillar – ‘Her hair, the raven’s glossiest hue, That skims o’er Greatmoor’s top sae high’ [JoHa], ‘Was there never a maid on Ettrick side Who waved to her love on his last long ride? Came never a steed over Greatmoor moss With the corpse of his rider bound across?’ [WHO], ‘... Then Greatmoor and Windburgh against a purple sky’ [WHO], ‘Penchrise and Gritmuir, Ruberslaw, dark wi’waist-high heather, And the slant, green, edge o’ the Cairter Bar’ [DH]. Also the name of another hill just west of Skelfhill Pen, reaching a height of 481 m (formerly written ‘Gritmoor’; it is marked on Blaeu’s c.1654 map as ‘Gritt moore’, a little further south of its real location and is ‘Greatmoor Hill’ on Stobie’s 1770 map).

great pipe  (grä’-pip)  n., arch. the Highland bagpipe – ‘The town’s piper, for his nicht revelling, on going on the fair nicht playing with the great pipe thro the hail town, is fined £100 Scots’ [BR].

the Great Riot  (thu-grä’-ri’i)  n. popular name for a public disturbance at the Boswells Fair of 1849. A young shepherd was killed by a railway navvy, and the suspect escaped from the police. The dragoons were called in, finding someone (probably innocent) to hang for the murder.

great teind  (grä’-tind)  n., arch. the tithe due from grain – ‘All thir 51 lands adjacent to ye toune are estimat to pay nyne scoir 15 bolls in stok, 49 bolls in great teynd, laik ane firlot, and 20 lbs of vicargage’ [PR1627].

the Great War  (thu-grä’-wawr)  n. the First World War, WWI, in which there were almost 1,000,000 dead on the Allied side, with over 3,000,000 casualties. Around 1,000 local men lost their lives between 1914 and 1918, i.e. about one for each day of the war. The K.O.S.B. were involved in the Gallipoli campaign of 1915, and there more than 120 men of Hawick and district died (over half on a single day). For Hawick it was also a time when the Stobs army camp was a significant part of local life. Soldiers were billeted in Hawick, and trained in several open spaces around the town. Women were employed on knitting frames, a job previously reserved for men, and many tweed manufacturers turned to filling military orders. The Common Riding was cancelled for the years 1914–18, with the Council resolving to do nothing while the war continued. However, J.E.D. Murray rode the marches on his own, and the Common Riding of 1919 was a special occasion. In 1918 the Common Riding Week-end was used for Red Cross benefit events and the Vertish Hill Sports were held on the Saturday. 19th July 1919 was declared ‘Peace Day’ with bonfires lit around Britain. The Vertish Hill Sports were held on that day, with about 2,800 children each being given a bag of cakes. On 30th August that year there was a ‘Welcome Home’ parade in Hawick, starting at the Drill Hall and continuing to the Volunteer Park, where there was a fete and sports day. The Hawick War Memorial was erected in 1921 next to the Museum, and there are other memorials in many of the local villages. A book ‘Hawick and the Great War, A Pictorial Record’ was published in 1919 and...
Great Warrington Sike

a history, ‘All These Fine Fellows’, was written by Derek Robertson in 1999.

Great Warrington Sike (grä'-waw-rin'-in-sik) n. stream in Castleton Parish, which rises on Larriston Fells and joins Storff Sike and then runs into Larriston Burn. There is a boundary bank and old enclosures near where it joins Storff Sike. Little Warrington Sike is to the north.

greazy (greez-ee) adj. greasy – ‘A’m away ti a greazy spot’ (i.e. very hot and sweaty; note the pronunciation).
greazy-binnder (greez-ee-bin-dur) n. properly called a linker, a worker in the knitwear industry who joined up the fronts and backs (across the shoulders) and sleeves of garments before they were washed (note the pronunciation).

Greazy Lizzy’s (greez-ee-li-zzeez) n. nickname sometimes used for the chip shop otherwise known as Telio’s.

the Green (thu-green) n. name used to refer to Myreslawgreen – ‘Aw was born at the ‘Green’ and she was brocht up at the Kirkstyle’ [JEDM].

the Green (thu-green) n. former short form for the Green Kirk – ‘. . . the East-bank assemblage was inferior to that of the Green, both as regards the number of adherents and means at their disposal . . . ’ [WNK].

Greena (green-u) n. former fortified house in the lower Liddel valley, south of Greena Hill, southwest of Kershope. It is located on the west side of the Liddel Water, roughly opposite the remains of Stonehouse Tower. From the remains it probably measured about 10 m by 7 m, and there is also evidence for 2 adjacent buildings in an enclosure. The name was probably ‘Greenhauhgh’ in earlier times. It is probably the lands owned by Richard ‘de Grenehough’ recorded in an English record of 1281/2. James in Greenaugh is mentioned in 1510 and 1515/6. In 1541 the lands of Greenheughshaw were valued at 30 shillings and tenanted by John Forester. ‘Will o Greena’ was a well-known resident, possibly an Armstrong, who was killed in a duel with Foster of Stanegarthside, the site said to be marked with a stone. Will Foster of Greena is recorded in 1583 (and could be the same man). John Foster, son of ‘Meikle Rowie of Greenhawghe’ is recorded in 1583. A map dated 1590 shows a tower of ‘Lard o’ Jockes Greencaghe’ near the confluence of the Tennis Burn with the Liddel Water. There could have been two separate farms of Over Greena and Nether Greena. Robbie Armstrong and James ‘Dittone’ were there in 1623, as well as Abie Foster. It is probably the ‘Porterleyne Greina’ possessed by Archibald Douglas in 1632; he was some kind of servant of William, Earl of Angus, and his lands were inherited by his daughter Margaret in 1634. William, brother to the deceased James Foster in Greena is listed as a wanted thief in 1642. Also in 1642 John Douglas of Gervald was granted the lands of ‘Greina’ and others. Sir William Douglas of Cavers was owner in 1643 when the lands were valued at £420. ‘Harie forrester’ paid the land tax (on £420) there in 1678. The residents there in 1694 were James Steel, James Robison, Greenbank Plantin (green-bawngk-plawn'-in) n. plantation just to the east of Greenbank Toll.

Greenbank Toll (green-bawngk-tōl) n. former toll house at the sharp bend in the B711 about a mile west of Robertson. It was built in 1826 as an annex to the existing farmhouse when the new B711 was developed as a toll road. The small hatch for operating the tollbar can still be seen. A pond behind (to the north of) the house fed a former threshing mill and sawmill there. It is marked on the map as ‘Greenbank’ and was known locally as ‘Greenbanks’. The farm was once part of the Borthwickbrae estate. With a plantation about 300 m to the west is a circular mound, about 22 m in diameter, which may be a burial cairn.

Greenbraeheids (green-brā-heeds) n. Greenbraeheads, a farm in the Slitrig valley just south of Hawick, reached over the Hummelknowes Bridge, or via a track off the top of Welloagate Brae. Robert Shiel and John Cairns were tenants there in 1797. James, John and Robert Shiel were farmers there in 1841 – ‘...While Greenbrahead (in older times Priestsround) To meet Crowbyres send the signal down’ [WNK].

Greenbraeheids Brig (green-brā-heeds-brig) n. another name for Hummelknowes Brig.

Green Burn (green-burn) n. stream to the west of Newcastleton, behind Kirk Hill. It runs south, joining Black Grain and flowing into the Tinnis Burn. The old farmstead of Greenburn lies along its banks, as well as grouse butts and old sheepfolds nearby. To the east are the remains of 2 luts.

the Green Cafe (thu-green-kaw-fee) n. cafe that stood at 80 High Street, at the bottom of Brougham Place, leading to the nickname for that street. It was established in 1838, and existed until around 1999. Latterly it has been painted red, and was for a while a confectioner’s shop.

the Green Cafe Brae (thu-green-kaw-fee-brā) n. popular name for Brougham Place, also known as ‘the Cafe Brae’.

the Green Cafe Brig (thu-green-kaw-fee-brig) n. occasional name for the road bridge across the former railway at the top of Brougham Place.

Green Cleuch (green-klooech) n. small stream on the south side of the Hermitage Water, between Gorenberry and Twislehope.

green coat (green-kō') n. the long-tailed dress jacket in deep green, traditionally worn by the Principals during the Common Riding. The origin of this tradition is unknown. In the late 19th century it was stated that the form of the trousers had changed, but the green coat had long been used. The first record of a Cornet being fitted for a suit was in 1815, but it is unclear if this was green. Ex-Cornet’s traditionally don their old jackets each year at the Dinner and Ball, the only other time it is worn being at the Moststroopers’ ball – ‘. . . privileged ti weere baiith the green jersey and the green coat’ [IWL].

green cow (green-kow) n., arch. a recently calved cow (from the freshness of its milk).

Greenend Sidin (green-end-si-din) n. siding on the Waverley Line by Greenend farm, between Belses and St. Boswells stations.

Greenfield (green-field) n. Marion (16th C.) recorded in 1541 on a list of tenants and other associates of James Douglas of Cavers when he complained about his farm of Whitriggs being burned by Walter Scott of Branxholme. Her name appears as ‘old marion grenefield’. She was probably related to Thomas and William, who were also listed. John (b.1834/5) from Berwick, he was a teacher at Cavers School in the 1860s. He also served as Kirk Treasurer and Session Clerk. In 1861 he was a boarder, living at 20 Buccleuch Street in Hawick. Thomas (16th C.) recorded on a list of associates of Douglas of Cavers in 1541.

the Green Gairdens (thu-green-gair-dinz) n. popular name in the 19th century for the area near Myreslawgreen before it was developed for the Convent and other buildings.

the Green Gress (thu-green-gres) n. the Green Grass, being an old West End name for the Loaning or Tryst ground. This was 1 acre and 34 poles in area and extended to both sides of what is now Rosebank Road. It was much used as a leisure area by West Enders, and as a gathering place for youths, leading to its other popular name the Sweerin Green.

Greenhaugh (green-hawch) n. lands in southern Liddesdale, probably an older name for Greena.

Greenheads Terrace (green-headz-te-ris) n. Greenheads Terrace, street built in 1938 in the West End, named for being at the ‘head of the green’.

Greenhill (green-hill) n. farm to the north of North Synton, now known as Dryden Greenhill. Robert Scott of Greenhill was recorded as witness to a baptism in Hawick in 1685. Mrs. Govenlock was recorded as farmer there in 1868.

Greenhill (green-hill) n. Rev. Charles Kinnear (1817–86) born at Cash, Strathmiglo, Fife, son of Charles Kinnear and Christian Baxter. He graduated from St. Andrews in 1840 and was ordained to Garelochhead in 1844. The following year he was translated to Roberton Parish, where he was minister until his death. In 1851 nd 1861 he was recorded at the Roberton Manse, living with his mother Christiana and sister Margaret, as well as 3 servants. He married Isabella, daughter of Horatius Blair of Glasgow, and she died in 1907. He wrote ‘Sermon on the Death of Allan Eliott Lockhart of Borthwickbrae’ (published in Hawick, 1878).

Greenholm (green-hoom) n. farm in Liddesdale, on the east side of the Hermitage valley near Snaberlee, opposite Redheugh. South Greenholm is marked on today’s Ordnance Survey map, with North Greenholm gone. Aerial photography has shown rig lines and an enclosure to the northeast. It should not be confused with the land of ‘Greena’ further to the south (where the Tinnis Burn meets the Liddel Water). It may be the ‘Grenhowe’ recorded in 1365 when Edward III bestowed protection on John Thirlwall and his tenants there and in Roughley, and also the ‘Grenehow’, valued at 20 merks, in Liddesdale recorded in a rental list for Douglas of Morton in the 1370s. It was owned by Eliot of Redheugh in at least the late 15th and early 16th centuries. It was one of 3 farms that Scott of Buccleuch claimed Eliot of Redheugh had falsely added to his charter; however, it was still owned by the Elliots in 1637. It was one of 3 farms given by the last Robert Eliot of Redheugh to his daughter Esther in about the 1640s. ‘Gulenflatt & Greelhoome’ is listed on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls, with Francis Elliot, Arthur Beattie and Archibald Armstrong recorded there. It was owned by William Manderson according to the 1788 county valuation and the Land Tax Rolls of 1811, and valued (along with Leahaugh) at £136 15s 8d. Walter Elliot was farmer there in 1840. William Dodd of Greenholm lived in Newcastleton in the 1860s and John Routledge was farmer there in 1868 (marked ‘Greinhoome’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map and also on Stobie’s 1770 map; it may be ‘Greenholles’ in 1612, ‘grenehoilis’ in 1613, ‘Greinholes’ in 1624, ‘Greinhoillis’ in 1637 and ‘Greenhollis’ in 1675).

Greenhoose (green-hoose) n. Greenhouse, farm between Hassendean and Belses. It was once in Minto Parish, being part of the Hassendeamburn estate. However, in most records it was in Lilliesleaf Parish and was part of the lands of Raperlaw in the 1643 Land Tax Rolls, owned by Turnbulls and Davidson's. In 1678 it was partly owned by Ralph Davidson of Greenhouse (valued at £104) and part by Andrew Davidson (valued at £65). John Stewart and Walter Davidson were recorded there in 1694. Andrew Davidson paid tax for 13 windows there in 1748. In 1769 it was bought by Walter Turnbull of Firth from Andrew Davidson. In 1788 it was recorded as belonging to Robert Laidlaw in Kingledoors, valued at £210 5s 6d. In 1797 James Turnbull was farmer there, when it was listed on the Horse Tax Rolls for Lilliesleaf Parish. In 1811 it is recorded that 'Part of Davidson of Greenhouse’s Lands in Lilliesleaf' had been acquired by Edgar Hunter and was then owned by William Riddell of Camieston; at the same time, Ralph Davidson's part was valued at £104 and Andrew Davidson's part at £65, both owned by Robert Laidlaw in Kingledoors, as well as part of Davidson's lands valued at about £37. Alexander Horsburgh was there in the 1860s.

the Green Hut (thu-green-hu') n. name given to several small shops in Hawick over the years, particularly one near the top of the Loan on the right (once a chip shop, now closed), one built off Weensland Road near the top of Trinity Steps (also once a chip shop, and still flourishing as a convenience store), and one that sold ice-cream and other refreshments up the Park. Some of them have also been known as the 'Wee Shop'. The general grocer's on Weensland Road was run by the Whillans family in the mid-20th century and by Hunter & Logan in the latter part of the 20th century.

green jersey (green-zer-zee) n. the dark green shirt worn by Hawick Rugby club since 1885 and considered a badge of honour.

green kail (green-kail) n. the curly variety of kail, Brassica oleracea acephala, kail generally – 'Item, whatsoever person that steillis any of their neighbours petitis, turffis, green-kail, corn . . . .' [BR1640], ' . . . or steillis their neighbours peats, green kail, or other goods, under the pain of fining . . . .' [BR1696], 'There's naething i' Hielants but green kail and leeks, And lang-leggit Hielantsmen wantin' the breeks; Wantin' the breeks, and withoot hose or shoon, They'll a' get the breeks when Jamie comes hame', 'I do not mean the best of you to want meal a week ot twa, you have plenty of gonyell and green kail . . . .' [WSB].

Greenklowe Toor (green-now-toor, -tow-ur) n. ruined 16th tower just west of Gordon, between Earlston and Greenlaw. The area was originally home of the Gordons, with the L-shaped tower built in 1581 by the Setons and later sold to the Pringles. It has a famous clock-wise spiral staircase to give advantage to defenders.

Greenlawgreen (green-law-green) n. site of a suicidal advance during the Battle of Arras in May 1917. 6th Battalion K.O.S.B. managed to advance, but were cut off. Few made it back alive and at least 14 local men are buried in unknown graves.

Green Lane (green-læn) n. street behind the old Parish Church location, above Buccleuch Street, named after the Green Wynd (Beaconsfield Terrace) which it leads off.

Greenlaw (green-law) n. town on the Blackadder Water, built in the 17th century and functioning as the county town of Berwickshire for 207 years until 1903. The Market Cross and Kirk are the oldest structures, with Hume Castle nearby. The last public hanging in Scotland took place here in 1834. The town contains the restored New Palace Theatre, home of the National Institute for Theatre Organ Studies, and the old Town Hall, built in a Greek Revivalist style in 1829. A polished jade axe-head found near here in about 1840 is a rare example of this type of neolithic artefact in Scotland. ‘An Old Berwickshire Town: History of the Town and Parish of Greenlaw, From the Earliest Times to the Present Day’ (1905) was written by Robert Gibson. Population (1991) 589 (the origin of the name is simply ‘green mound’).

Greenlaw (green-law) n. John (14th/15th C.) attendant of James Gladstone of Cocklaw (Ormiston) who is said to have defied the Percys when they besieged the tower in 1403. He declared that he would give up the tower if not relieved by 1st August. But before then, the English army had already moved south towards Shrewsbury. He is depicted as the owner of the castle in Wilson’s ‘Tales of the Borders’. John (16th C.) presented to Wilton Kirk in 1549, following the death of Peter Langlands (also written ‘Girnelaw’, ‘Grenelaw’, etc.).

Green Law (green-law) n. hill in the southern part of Southern Parish, reaching a height of 368 m. It is north of the much higher Carlin Tooth, and now lies within Wauchope Forest. The ridge to the north-east is called Tamshiel Rig, and has the remains of an Iron Age fort. To the north-west, near what was called Coblaw Plantation are the remains of a settlement, consisting of an enclosure and foundations of 2 buildings. The site has been mutilated by forestry activity. To the west of this settlement was an old cairn, about 10 m across, now destroyed by a forestry road.

green-lintie (green-lintie) n., arch. the green-finch, Chloris chloris (also greenie).

green meat (green-mee) n., arch. vegetables in general, green ones in particular – ‘…in Scotland the tyranny of the kail-pot has so firm a hold on the national stomach, that our countrymen can scarcely understand any ‘green meat’ which will not submit to the all-receiving domestic crucible’ [JAHM].

Greenriver (gree-ri-vur) n. house and lands just west of Bonchester, formerly called Hobsburn and recently reverted to the original name. The 3-storey T-plan house was built about 1770, probably incorporating an older house of the early 1600s. The house was the main mansion of the Stonedge estate in the 18th century. It was renamed by James Chisholme after his Jamaiccan plantation in about 1793. He is recorded there on the Horse Tax Rolls of 1797, when he owned 3 horses. The Elliot family lived there in the 19th century. Robert Kerr Elliot is said to have left in a hurry in 1835 (when his father died) after being told by a builder that the house was unsafe; it still stands to this day. After that it was let out as rooms, and tenanted by Henry Elliot in the mid-1800s. The farm was tenanted by James Armstrong around 1900 (it is ‘Green River’ in 1797).

Greens (greenz) n. farm just south of Newcastleton and north of Mangerton, on the same side of the Liddel. It is probably the ‘Grenys’ listed as a 3-shilling land in c.1376 rentals around Mangerton among the charters of the Douglasses of Morton. In 1541 it was valued at 10 shillings, with tenant Thomas Armstrong, ‘the Bul’. ‘Abie’ Armstrong from there was hung for murdering a blind man on Ancrum Bridge in 1623. Andrew Crozier ‘Jeans Andro’ was also there in 1623. It was possessed by Jock and Ninian Armstrong in 1632. In 1667 Walter Lorraine was tenant there, and also Walter Lorraine (possibly son of the previous Walter) in 1682. Hugh Beattie was tenant in 1682. In 1694 William Armstrong was tenant, with Simon Armstrong also listed there. It was surveyed in 1718 along with other properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch; at that time it consisted of 164 acres, bounded by a common to the east, Tweeden Burn to the south, the Liddel Water to the west and the lands of the Laird of Whithaugh to the north. The farm also had 22 acres of land on the other side of the Liddel Water, bounding on Millholm and it shared a common of 116 acres with the farms of Yethouse and Chingills. Robert Thomson was there in the early 18th century, followed by William Thomson. William Ogilvie was farmer there in 1797. William Scott was farmer in the first half of the 19th century. Little Ogilvie was stone mason there in 1851 (note that this is easily confused with Greena near Kershope; it was ‘Grenys’ in 1541, ‘Greins’ in 1623, ‘Greesness’ in 1632 and ‘Greins’ in 1667 and 1694; it is the Greens (thu-greenz) n. popular name for Hawick R.F.C. after the dark green jerseys they have worn since 1885. Also used to refer to Mansfield Park as a location or the team’s clubrooms – ‘...Lost your bonnet, and a’ that was left o’ your voice, As the Greens got the wumin’ try’ [DH].

Greenshields (green-sheeldz) n. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Agnes Deans and their children included: Janet (b.1684); and James (b.1687). Along with Stephen (who was quartermaster of the weavers) he witnessed a baptism in 1685 for John Scott and Jane Bell. James (17th C.) tenant in Birneyknow. He was recorded in 1684 on a long list of people declared as fugitives for refusing to conform to Episcopalianism. His name is recorded as ‘Greenshields’. He was probably related to the Covenanter John. James (17th C.) resident at Stobicote according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. James (17th C.) listed among those who subscribed to the fund for the new Kirk bell in Hawick in 1693/4. He was a resident of the west-side of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. He is probably the Steven recorded in 1687 when he was fined, along with a group of other men (including Steven, to whom he was surely related), for clandestinely removing their sheep from the Town’s flock, without paying the Town Herd. He was listed as a weaver among those contributing to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. In 1694 he was ‘Steivan Greinsheils’ among those on the west-side of Hawick who paid the Hearth Tax. He is probably the Steven, son of Thomas and Janet Scott, who was born in Hawick in 1647. He is probably the Steven, married to Bessie Bridges, whose son Thomas was born in 1683, and perhaps also the Steven, married to a Rule, whose daughter Janet was baptised in 1687. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Isobel Smith and their children included: William (b.1640). Thomas (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Janet Scott and their children included Robert (b.1643); Steven (b.1647); and George (b.1651). Walter was one of the witnesses in 1647, and surely related. Thomas (17th/18th C.) weaver in Hawick. He is probably the son of Steven who was born in 1683. He is recorded as ‘Greenshells’ in 1714 when he (with John Swan as cautioner) pleaded with the Session to allow his weak child to be baptised, although he and his wife were ‘under scandal’. In 1720 he witnessed baptisms for weaver James Scott and (with weaver James Scott) for weaver John Stevenson. He married Janet Scott and their children (baptised in Hawick Parish) included Robert (b.1714). The witnesses in 1714 were shoemakers John Scott and William Riddell. Perhaps the same weaver Thomas also married Bessie Telfer (from Hobkirk Parish) in Hawick in 1724. Walter (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Bessie Elliot and their children included Isobel (b.1646); and Robert (b.1649). William (b.1652) may also have been his son. Walter (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isobel Scott and their children included: John (b.1653); Bessie (b.1655); and Janet (b.1657). Walter (17th/18th C.) weaver in Branxholme Town. He married Bessie Mitchellhill and their daughter Margaret was baptised in Hawick in 1703, with witnesses tailor Walter Gledstains and weaver Robert in Hawick (who was surely related). William (17th C.) resident of Ormiston (although it is unclear if this was the local one or not). His testament was recorded in 1687. William (17th/18th C.) weaver in Hawick. In 1710 he was fined for fighting with William Hill (another weaver) in St. Mary’s Kirk. They apparently scuffled before the service (probably over seating) then struck at each other during the sermon. He could be the William whose daughter Marion was baptised in Hawick in 1692 (also written ‘Greensheils’, ‘Greenshills’, ‘Greensiels’, ‘Greensheils’, ‘Greenshills’, ‘Greenshells’, ‘Greensheills’, ‘Greenshells’, ‘Greensheils’ and variants).
Greenshiels

Greenshiels (green-sheels) n. former lands in Castleton Parish, south-west of Foulshiels and west of Redheugh. It was listed on a rental roll of c.1376 in the ‘Quarterium de Ludne’. Thomas Armstrong was tenant there in 1535 when he was denounced as a rebel along with other Armstrongs. There are remains of a farmstead and related structures on both sides of the banks of Greenshiels Sike. There are old boundary dykes defining the lands, including a field system and some rig lines. The farmstead consisted of at least 4 separate buildings, plus turf huts. The farm appears to have been abandoned during the 17th century. Further up the burn, on the eastern side there are 3 shieling-huts and an enclosure (it is ‘Greneschelis’ in c.1376 and 1535 and marked ‘Greensheils’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map; note that it is easy to confused with Greens, south of Newcastleton).

Greenshill (greenz-hill) n. farm in Ashkirk Parish, recorded on the 1797 Horse Rolls, when James Johnstone was farmer. It is probably related to Grain Hill.

Greenside (green-sid) n. house on Main Street in Denholm, which held the Post Office in the 20th century, until 1966.

(b.c.1844) manufacturer who resided at Howlands. He was Acting Father in 1891. He married Euphemia Cranston. Their eldest daughter Mary married Dr. George Bannerman. Another daughter, Jessie, married William Oliver of Thornwood. Robert (1811–86) born in England, probably son of Luke and Betty of Rochdale. He was a textile designer and manufacturer in Hawick, partner in Greenwood, Watt & Co., with factory at Howland Mills. He came to Hawick in about 1833 (perhaps after making the acquaintance of John Wilson, who went to the Rochdale area to learn the trade of flannel weaving), later setting up his own business at Weensland Mill. He was said to be one of the first people to introduce power-looms to the mills of Hawick. He was also the first to use looms with ‘rising boxes’ (it is said that he solved one of the mechanical difficulties through the inspiration of a dream). In 1841 and 1851 he was recorded on the census as a woollen power-loom weaver, living at Weensland Mill Houses. He married Mary McBurnie, who was born in Cavers Parish. They had 9 children, including: Ann; Janet, who was mother of composer Francis George Scott; Elizabeth; Mary, who married Andrew Hall; Luke, tweed manufacturer; Grace; Jane Maria, mother of painter William Johnstone; Isabella (b.1855); and Robert Thomas (b.1858), draper. Robert (19th/20th C.) commission agent in Hawick. He lived at Roach Villa. He married a Furness (whose brother Robert Furness married Margaret, daughter of George Scott, mill furnisher).

Greenwud, Watt & Co. (green-wud, waw’-in-kō) n. Messrs. Greenwood, Watt & Co., tweed manufacturers. This partnership built Teviotdale Mills (Commercial Road) in 1877 and extended to build Howlands Mill on Victoria Road in the early 1880s. They moved out of Teviotdale Mills in 1888, and suffered during the manufacturing decline in the 1910s, eventually selling Howlands Mill to Sime, Williamson & Co.

Gavin Nixon was tenant there in 1694. It was surveyed in 1718, along with other properties owned by the Scotts of Buccleuch, when it covered 120 acres, bounded by Toftholm and Dinlees Graystone Wood is recorded there on the modern Ordnance Survey map, but there is no sign of the house shown on the 1718 map (it is ‘Graystonhaugh’ in 1694; it is marked on Blaeu’s c.1654 map as ‘Graistounhauch’ and ‘Graystanhaugh’, on the 1718 Buccleuch survey as ‘Graystonhaugh’ and on Stobie’s 1770 map as ‘Graystanhaugh’).

Greystane Hill (grä-stän-hil) n. hill on the south side of the Hermitage Water, south-east of Dinlees. The east side has an old building and a quarry, while the south-eastern flank has an ancien cairn and a standing stone. The farm of Greystanehaugh was once near there.

Greystane Wud (grä-stän-wud) n. wooded area on the south side of the Hermitage Water, where the farm of Greystanehaugh was located (its is ‘Graystone Wood’ on the 1859 Ordnance Survey map).

greywacke (grä-wawk) n. a type of coarse, dark grey sandstone containing grains of quartz and feldspar together with shale and other rock fragments. It was predominantly laid down in the Silurian Era, about 400 million years ago. It is the dominant rock of the Southern Uplands, and was formerly much used as a local building material (from the German ‘Grauwacke’).

the Grey Wether (thu-grä-wë-thur) n. standing stone near the farm of Meikledale in the Ewes valley. The stone has fallen over, but is still visible.

grief (gree-fe) pp., arch. grieved – ‘Fortie yeers lang was I greifet wi’ this gomanization . . . ’ [HSR], ‘I saw the transgressers, an’ was greifet; becaus thaye keepetna thy wurd’ [HSR] (there are spelling variations).

He was listed as a High Street baker in Slater’s 1852 directory. He married Margaret Scott. Their children included: Agnes Scott (b.1865); Robert (b.1867); Elizabeth Wilson (b.1870); and Jessie Beatrice (b.1872). Elizabeth Wilson (b.1870) daughter of Andrew, farmer of Whitchesters. She lived at Whitchesters. She was author of several books for young people, mainly with a Scottish or religious theme, including: ‘Children’s Tales from Scottish Ballads’ (1906, reprinted several times); ‘Scotland’ (1907); ‘Vivian’s Lesson’ (1907, with Hilda Cowham); ‘The Children’s Book of Celtic Stories’ (1908); ‘The Children’s Book of English Ministers’ (1909); ‘The Scottish Fairy Book’ (1910); ‘Life of St. Paul for Young People’ (1911); ‘Sir Walter Scott’ (1913); ‘The Book of Edinburgh for Young People’ (1914); and ‘Our Scottish Heritage: a Simple History of the Scottish Church’ (1917). George (b.1794/5) born in St. Boswells, he was a tea dealer at Howdenburn in 1861. He married Elizabeth Baker. They had a son Andrew (b.1827). John (18th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Isabel Tinlin in 1758 and their children included: Ann (b.1760); Andrew (b.1766); and John (b.1772), who married Margaret Wight. The witnesses in 1766 were weaver Robert Tinlin (possibly his brother-in-law) and James Taylor. He may be the John, son of Andrew and Margaret Scott who was born in Bowden in 1733. John (18th/19th C.) son of John and Isabel Tinlin. In 1799 he married Margaret Wight in Ettrick Parish. Their children included Walter, Isabel, John, Effie, Andrew and Charles P. Robert (17th C.) tenant in ‘Clairlaw’ (presumably Clarilaw, but probably the one in Bowden Parish). He is recorded in 1684 when his servant William Roberton was among the Roxburghshire men on a list of fugitive Covenanters. He may be the tenant of Clarilaw called Grieve who married Isabel, daughter of John Sibbald of Bowden Parish. There were many Grieisons in Bowden Parish at this time. Robert (1759/60–1825) tenant of Whittlaw. He married Agnes Scott. Their children included: Robert (d.1819), who was a baker in Hawick. He is buried at Bowden. Robert (1791–1849) baker at 10 High Street. His widow died in 1857. He later farmed at Whitchesters (John Campbell taking over the bakery) and was known for being a great dog lover, especially of Dandie Dinmonts. He was a teetotaller and member of the Evangelical Union Church. He is listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories for Hawick. He is on the 1841 census with his wife Elizabeth (1800–57). Their children included: Andrew, who farmed at Whitchesters; Beatrice or Beatrice, who married manufacturer Thomas Laidlaw; and John. Robert (b.1809) christened in Kirkton and possibly born in Hawick, he was son of William and Helen Small, brother of Adam. He married Janet, daughter of James Usher, S.S.C., granddaughter of John of Toffield. They emigrated to Canada where he was a farmer and teacher. He was the first teacher in Leith, Ontario and in the 1850s was a Magistrate in Sydenham Township. He called his own farm in Ontario Effledge. It was said that he resembled portraits of the Duke of Wellington. He died without children. Robert (19th C.) son of Robert. He was baker at 10 High Street, before taking over Whitchesters farm in 1861. Thomas (b.1827) son of William, the tenant farmer at Effedge. He was cousin of the farmers at Whitchesters and his sister Elizabeth married builder Robert Hobkirk. He farmed at Effledge in the 1860s and then at Braidhaugh in the Rule valley. In 1868 he was recorded as farmer at Braidhaugh along with Walter Telfer. He later lived at ‘the Birks’ in Hawick and became a sales agent for Cunningham and Company. He married a daughter of farmer John Telfer and they had a daughter who married. William (18th C.) farmer at Whitmuir according to the 1789–1791 Horse Tax Rolls. William (b.1785/6) born in Ashkirk Parish, he was tenant farmer at Effledge in at least the 1840s and 50s. In 1851 he was recorded as farmer there of 250 acres, employing 5 labourers. He probably married Helen (‘Nelly’) Small in Ancrum Parish in 1808. In 1825 he married (probably secondly) Elizabeth (‘Betty’) Little. His children included: Robert (b.1809); William; Helen (b.1826); Thomas (b.1827), who took over as farmer at Effledge; Elizabeth (b.1830); Margaret (b.1834); Agnes; Isabella (b.1836); Isabel (b.1839); Margaret (b.1841). Grieve (greev) n., arch. a farm manager or overseer.

Grieve (greev) n. Adam (16th C.) listed as ‘Adam Greife serwand in the brewhouse’ in the 1574 last testament of Sir Walter Scott. It is unclear whether he was from the Hawick area, like many others recorded there. Agnes nee Hardie (b.1815/6) resident at Hermitage Schoolhouse. She married farm worker John, and they were living at Brox in 1841. She was already a widow by 1851, and listed as a grocer in 1861. Her children included John, Agnes, Adam and Thomas. Alexander (1826–68) born in Jedburgh, son of Michael and Rachel Scott. He married Elizabeth Young Rutherford, daughter of Barbara Potts Young and possibly a Mr. Rutherford; she died in 1914, aged 77. The couple lived in Hawick for several years, then moved to Jedburgh, where he was foreman at Allars Mill. He was mill foreman living at Ladhope (near Galashiels) when he died. Their children were: Barbara (1853–1927), who died unmarried; Rachel (b.1855), who married railway guard James Mathieson; Michael (b.1858); Elizabeth (b.1861), who married stone mason James Russell; and Alexander (1868–26). His widow moved back to Hawick. Alexander (1868–1926) born in Hawick, he was son of Galashiels mill foreman Alexander and Elizabeth Young. He was born after his father’s early death. His uncle was Walter from Hawick. He was an actuary with the Hawick Savings Bank.
and manager of the Hawick Heritable Investment Bank, Ltd. He died unmarried and left several gits to the town. Andrew (b.1821/2) seed merchant in the Cross Wynd in 1851. His wife was Janet and their children included James. Archibald (16th/17th C.) resident of Caerlenrig in 1618. Walter Scott of Buccleuch complained that he had cut down 60 alder trees from his lands of Gorrenberry, with other men from upper Teviotdale (including Robert in Lymiecleuch) also being accused of stealing timber. He was ordered by the Privy Council to pay the Laird of Buccleuch £40. Archibald (c.1775–1852) son of Walter and Janet Grieve. His father farmed at Easter Alemoor, Hangingshaw and also Perthshire, where he was born. He married Agnes Stephenson in Yarrow Parish in 1811. He died in Ohio, U.S.A. Arthur Charles (1876–93) 3rd son of Charles John of Branxholme Park. He served as a midshipman in the Royal Navy. He was on the H.M.S. Victoria off Tripoli when it collided with H.M.S. Camperdown during manoeuvres. Only 202 of the 718 men were rescued, and he himself drowned, with his older brother William Herbert on the nearby ‘Nile’ witnessing the whole thing. He and his brother have a memorial plaque in St. Cuthbert’s Church. Charles (18th/19th C.) resident at Newcastleton, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. He could be the labourer who married Margaret Oliver and whose son William died in 1872. Charles John (1841–1915) farmer at Branxholme Park, like his father. His twin brother James Alexander died at a young age. He was son of William and Eliza Anne Gordon. He received an LL.B. from Cambridge University in 1866. He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1878. He was a church warden at St. Cuthbert’s and became a member of the Jedforest Club in 1898. In 1870 he married Elizabeth (1842–1914), 2nd daughter of Charles Al- leyne Willing. Their children were: Amy Francis (b.1871); James Wyndham Alleyne (1872–1939); Mary Evelyn (1873–1923); William Herbert (1874–1908), who died in a naval explosion in Queensferry; Arthur Charles (1875–93), who went down with the flag-ship ‘Victoria’ aged 17; Betha Helen (1877–1937); Marion Catherine (b.1878); Christina (1879–1945); Dorothy Forster (b.1881); Charles Walter (1882–1929); Alexander Norman (1884–1920); Margaret Bruce (b.1885); and Nigel Gordon (b.1889). Charles Walter (1882–1929) farmer of Branxholme Park, son of Charles John, he was educated at Glenalmond School. He was President of Teviotdale Farmers’ Club and served in WWI as Squadron Sergeant-Major in the Lothians and Borders Horse. He was also a Church Warden at St. Cuthbert’s. He later lived at Westerdykes. He married a daughter of Thomas Anderson Laing. He was Acting Father in 1919, the first Common Riding after the war. Christian née Brydon (1784/5–1854) from Ettrick Parish, she married Walter J. of Langwell. After his death she moved into Hawick. In 1851 she was an ‘Anmitant’ living at about 12 Buccleuch Street, and in Slater’s 1852 directory she is listed among the local gentry there. Christopher (18th/19th C.) resident at Slaidhills in about 1822. His son William was born in Teviotdale Parish in 1804. Christopher Murray real name of Hugh Mac-Diarmid. David (1788–1856) son of shepherd Robert and brother of Hawick slater Walter. He was born when his parents were living at Greensidehall. In 1820 he married Maragret Murray in Selkirk. He had his own Slater’s and glazier’s business in Selkirk. He died of cancer of the ear and was buried at Ashkirk. Elliot (c.1777–1858) born in Forthingall, Perth son of local farmer Walter and Janet Grieve. He was thus related to both the Colterscleuch and Deanburnhaugh branches of the family. He farmed at Huntly in Yarrow. In 1826 he married Harriet Turnbull (d.1857), recorded in Yarrow Parish; she died in 1857, aged 67. Their children included: Walter (b.1828/9); and Janet (of Jessie, 1832–77), who married Robert Grieve, tenant in Over Huntly. He was at Lower Huntly in 1841 and Outer Huntly in 1851. He died at Over Huntly and is buried at Borthwick Waas, where the gravestone appeared to say he died in 1852, aged 75. Elliot (c.1784–1874) son of John and Elizabeth Paisley. Their children were born in Castleton parish, some of them at Blinkbonny. He married Janet Elliot (c.1777–1825) and their children were: Elizabeth (Lizzie, 1812–1907), who married Edward Dun; John (1806–38); Janet (1808–1906), who married Ninian Elliot; Sameul (b.1808), who probably died young; William Elliot (1810–80); Christian (or Catherine, b.1814), who married George Laidlaw; and Elliot (b.1816) and Ninian (b.1818), who died in infancy. The family emigrated to Canada, and lived in Westminster Township, Middlesex County, Ontario. He secondly married Jane Baty. George of Easter Swanshiel (b.1731) buried in Hobkirk kirkyard. He probably acquired his farm from the Turnbulls who had owned it earlier, perhaps through being related. The session register Grieve says his funeral had use of the ‘new plush moar-cloth’. He was succeeded by James, probably his brother. George (1779–1841) eldest son of John and Isabella Turnbull. His father farmed at Craik and Hoscote. He was christened in Robertson Parish. He inherited Craik, as well as Outerside and Meadshaw. He is recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as owner of 3 work horses at ‘Creak’, as well as 1 saddle horse. He also paid the dog tax at Craik in 1797. He farmed along with his brother Walter until the collapse of the wool market around 1817. He is also said to have farmed as Creich in Sutherland, but it is unclear if this is an error for ‘Craik’. He moved to Edinburgh and in 1832 emigrated to Quebec, Canada with his family. In about 1809 he married Minto (b.1790), daughter of William Bell and Markie Minto. His children were: Marky Minto (1810–46), who married Charles M. Murray; Isabella (1812–1901), who married John William Schneider; Jessie (b.1814); John, who died young after wandering off in the winter; William Bell (1818–85), who married Elizabeth Fairbairn; and another John (b.1820), who married Nancy Sweet. He is buried in Montreal. George (1805/6–49) toll-keeper at Hawick’s Eastern Toll at the time of the 1841 census, moving to the North (or Doivement) Toll Bar later. He married Margaret Lambert in 1828, and she was the sole toll-keeper by the 1851 census. Their children included William (b.1831), James (b.1833), Isabella (b.1835) and Jane (b.c.1838). He was probably the George born to William and Jean Manuel in Lilliesleaf Parish in 1801. George (b.1818/9) from Ettrick Parish, he was farmer at West Buccleuch. He was listed as a ‘Stock Farmer’ there in 1861. In 1868 he was recorded as farmer at Buccleuch and Ramsceleuch. George (1868–1960) son of James, farmer at West Buccleuch, where he himself was farmer later. He was born in Innerleithen and his mother was Christina Glendinning. He married Violet Glendinning, who died at Drinkstone farm in 1962, aged 76. They had daughters Williamena Mary Forster and Jean. He is buried at Ettrick. Gideon (18th C.) son of Walter in Colterscleuch. He married Isabel Laidlaw. Their children were: Walter (b.1742); and Margaret (b.1744). He may be the Gideon, son of Walter, who was one of 2 young men carried off from the Auld Brig during the great flood of 1767. Hugh (18th C.) ‘gauger’ or exciseman in Hawick. In a baptismal record of 1789 he is recorded as ‘Officer of Excise’. His son William died in Hawick in 1797. He is probably the Hugh who witnessed a baptism for Joseph Henderson in 1794. He married Helen Walker and their children, mostly baptised in Hawick, included: Margaret (b.1779); Elizabeth (b.1780), baptised in Kelso; John (b.1787); Walter (b.1789); James (b.1791); and Helen (b.1796). In 1789 the witnesses were tanner John Elliot and merchant James Dickson. Isabella née Laidlaw (1764–1857) daughter of David Laidlaw from Highchesters. In 1785 she married Robert, shepherd at Harden, Heap, Todshaw, Greensidehall, etc. She had at least 7 children and died aged almost 93. James (16th C.) possibly from the Selkirk area. Along with Patrick Murray of Falahill and ‘Sanders’ Murray, he owed payment to the King, which in 1539 resulted in these 3 men giving 289 sheep to Robert Scott of Howpaseley and Ninian Anderson. described about 1580 as factor to the Countess of James (16th C.) described about 1580 as factor to the Countess of Bothwell, i.e. Margaret Douglas, widow of Walter Scott of Branxholme. This may have been at Milsington. He is said to have been the ancestor of Walter, first known Grieve tenant of Branxholme Park, as well as the Grieves who farmed Commonside. It is unclear if he was an original ‘grieve’, however, a family tradition says that the local family was descended from the McGregor Clan. James (d.bef. 1621) recorded as ‘in Bowmanhill’, which may be ‘Bowanhill’ near Teviothead. He was foreman of the jury in 1612 which heard the case involving the death of Jock Elliot while imprisoned in the steeple of Hawick Kirk. His son William inherited his lands of Brotherton in 1619, when he was ‘in Bowinhill’. He was deceased by 1621 when his son William complained that Sir Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst had broken an agreement with his father and owed him £40. James (17th C.) married Margaret Laidlaw in 1648. Their son James was born the following year, and could have been James of Commonside. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Beatrix Gledstains and their son John was born in 1670. James (17th C.) tenant in Hyndhope (but it is unclear which one). The will of his wife Isobel Anderson is recorded in 1681. James (17th C.) tenant in Buccleuch farm. In about 1785 he was summoned before the Circuit Court in Peebles for being a Covenanter. Threatened with the loss of his farm and livelihood he weakened and agreed to take ‘the Test’. However, later a group of Covenanters met secretly near his farm, as a result of which he was arrested and fined 12,000 merks. After the Revolution he returned as tenant at Buccleuch and Colterscleuch. In 1722 he could be the James monside (c.1694–1772) eldest son of Walter in James in Branxholme Park (her son). He was Laird before him. However, he only held the lands for a couple of years after his brother. He is buried in Hobkirk kirkyard. After his death Easter Swanshie was sold and annexed to Wolfelee. James (17th/18th C.) tenant in ‘Ridge’, i.e. Caerlenrig. He married Janet Wilson and their daughter Helen was baptised in 1720.

He could be the same as one of the other Jameses. James (1684–1781) son of Walter and Blanche Borthwick. Like his father, he was tenant farmer at Branxholme Park, as well as Todshawhaugh. He is probably the James who is recorded being in arrears for the rent of Todshawhaugh in the period 1712–18. The ‘servitrix’ to his children, Dorothy MacVittie, was married in 1721. In 1734 he is probably the James who witnessed the baptism of Gilbert Elliot (his grandson) in Hawick.

He is recorded as tenant at Todshawhaugh in 1735. He re-leased Todshawhaugh from the Buccleuch Estates in 1744, but was recorded being in arrears shortly afterwards. He is recorded in a farming record of Robert Elliot (in Hermitage) in 1749. In 1751 he was renting ‘Whelmes’ as well as Todshawhaugh. There are letters of his to Scott of Harden in the 1760s in the National Archives. He was probably the James in ‘Branxholm-Park’ listed as a subscriber to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784), presumably signing up years before it was published. He married Helen, daughter of John Laing of Westerkirk. His children included: Walter (1710–99), the eldest son, who succeeded as tenant in Branxholme Park: Robert (1725–83), who married Jean Curle: William (1726–86), tenant in Southfield; James (1737–73), who married Janet, daughter of William Scott of Woll; Jane, who married Capt. John Elliot of Southfield and Brugh: Anne (b.1721); Margaret; and Fanny. The James (b.1726), son of James in Todshawhaugh, baptised in Roberton Parish, also seems likely to be his child (even if the dates clash with those of other children). He and several of his family are buried at Borthwick Waas. His wife is probably the ‘Mrs Grieve Todziehaugh’ who witnessed a baptism in 1757 for a child of Walter in Branxholme Park (her son). James in Commonside (c.1694–1772) eldest son of Walter in Colterscleuch. In 1722 he could be the James of Commonside who, along with Robert Elliot of Caerlenrig and Robert Scott of Skelfhill petitioned the Presbytery for a preacher and meeting house in their district. In 1722 he married Helen (1702–84), daughter of Gilbert Elliot of Brugh and Agnes Turnbull; she died at Broadlee in 1784, aged 84, and is buried at Borthwick Waas. As well as Commonside, he also farmed at Soudenrig and Over Huntly. In 1723 he was at Soudenrig and in 1724 was recorded being in Braidhaugh. He was at Southdeanrig again in 1726, 1733 and 1735. The following children (baptised in Cavers Parish) are probably mostly his: Helen (b.1720); Janet, who died young; Isabel (b.1723); twins Robert (b.1724) and William (b.1724); Walter (again, b.1725); Agnes (b.1726); Gilbert (b.1728); James (b.1729); William (again, b.1729); Walter (b.1729); William (again, b.1731); Walter (again, b.1733); John (b.1735); Janet (again, 1737–1816), who married Walter Grieve, son of Robert in Deanburnhaugh; Thomas (b.1739); William (again, b.1741); Margaret (b.1743); and possibly an unnamed son (b.1743). He is buried in Borthwick Waas cemetery, where the headstone said he was 78 years old. His children James (d.1751, transcribed as 2 years old, but it would make more sense if this was 22) and Agnes are also commemorated on the same stone, as well as John and ‘brethren and 1 sister died while children’.

Dr. James (1703–63) son of tenant farmer James (possibly called ‘Wester James’) and Janet Elliot, he was born in Hawick Parish. He also had an older sister, Elspeth (b.1701), who married William Grieve, and whose daughter Joan married Dr. James Mounsey. It is unclear how he was related to other local branches of the Grieve family, but it is possible they were descended from Grieves in Commonside. Note that secondary sources describing his life are often contradictory. He studied medicine at Edinburgh University, graduating with an M.D. in 1733. His first position was in Russia, as a doctor at the Kazan and Siberian factories. By 1744 he was physician to the St. Petersburg land hospital, as well as to a guard’s hospital. In 1743 he married Elizabeth Tamesz (1725–58), said to be either Dutch or German. He then became St. Petersburg city physician, Deputy Director of the Russian Medical Chancery and physician to Empress Elizabeth, before transferring to Moscow as its city physician. In 1751 he was elected a Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians in Edinburgh. He returned to Britain in 1757 to arrange the education of his son James Tamesz (1744–87), practised medicine in London, but returned to Russia in 1761. He then appears to have been working for John Hobart, Earl of Buckinghamshire, the British Ambassador. He is said to have received a snuff-box inscribed ‘Presented by the Empress Catherine to her body physician James Grieve’ in French. He translated ‘The History of Kantschatka, and the Kurilski Islands’ (1764, facsimile editions 1963 and 1973). His only son, James Tamesz inherited his mother’s fortune, became a Moscow businessman, purchased property in Scotland and Surrey and is buried at Bath Abbey. He himself died in Moscow, although some sources suggest he was the physician at Charterhouse Square who died there in 1773. James (1713/14–1801) gardener at Newton. He is buried in Bedrule kirkyard. James (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Easter Alemoor in 1765 when his son Robert was baptised. He could be the James who married Jean Scott in Roberton in 1762. James (1737–73) son of James and brother of Walter, tenant at Branxholme Park. In 1771 he married Janet, daughter of William Scott of Woll. There is a James and Janet Scott to whom several children were born in Yarrow in the 1770s and 1780s; if this is him, then he died after 1790. He is probably the ‘Junior’ who witnessed a baptism for William in Southfield (presumably his brother) in 1763. James (18th C.) married Margaret Halliday in Hawick Parish in 1770. James (18th C.) recorded in Harden in 1772 when his son James was baptised. Probably the same man is described as ‘the now deceased Mr. James Grieve’ in 1773 when his son William was baptised. He could be the same as one of the other Jameses. James (1751–1838) son of Walter, from whom he succeeded as tenant of Branxholme Park. He is probably the ‘James Grieve, Hawick’ who subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784), with his grandfather James in Branxholme Park listed separately. He subscribed to John Learmont’s book of poetry in 1791. He is probably the James recorded at Todshawhaugh on the 1787–92 Horse Tax Rolls, as well as at Branxholme Park in 1788 and 1782–94. He is recorded in 1797 as tenant at Branxholme Park, with 11 farm horses. He farmed on a large scale, also being tenant of Riccarton, Braidlie and Sundhope (in Liddesdale), Todshawhaugh and Harden (on the Borthwick), Buccleuch (in Ettrick) and Smale (in Northumberland). He was one of the trustees for the estate of William Oliver ‘Auld Cash’ (who died in 1808). Extracts from his diary were published in the Transactions in 1950. In 1821 he made some notes relating to the characters in the song ‘The Bonnie Lass o’ Branxholm’. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. In the 1832 electoral roll he was listed as a joint tenant (with William) of the Duke of Buccleuch’s lands at Branxholme Park. He is said to have told his son that in the past Branxholme was so heavily wooded that a man could ride on a white horse from Todshawhaugh to the Castle Hill without anyone being able to see the horse. He married Agnes Hall (and not Ann Sibbald, who married his cousin James), and she died in 1836. Their children were: William Oliver, tenant in Branxholme Park; and Thomas of Skelfhill. Note that he should not be confused with his cousin James, who farmed at Branxholme Braes at about the same time. James (18th C.) postillion (i.e. carriage driver) at Cavers in 1786, when he was working for George Douglas. James (18th C.) recorded at Howpasley in 1787 when his daughter Janet was baptised in Roberton Parish. He is probably the same as one of the other Jameses. James (18th/19th C.) farmer at ‘Moorfarm’ (in Wilton Parish) according to the Horse Tax Rolls of 1797. James (b.1763) son of William, farmer in Southfield. He was tenant at Roan in Castleton Parish, being recorded there on the 1788–97 Horse Tax Rolls, and in 1797 when he owned 4 farm horses. He was also taxed for having a greyhound in 1797. He was also said to be of ‘Roanead’. In 1795 his child ‘Elliot’, with Isabel ‘Whotson’, was baptised in Castleton; the mother may be the woman of the same name who was the 2nd wife of Robert Jardine, farmer at Harwood on Teviot. James (c.1771–1862) son of Walter, farmer at Easter Alemoor, Hangingshaw, etc. In 1803 he married Janet Brodie in Yarrow. Their children included Jessie, who married Dr. William Buchan Lorraine (who was born in Selkirk). James, J.P. (1773–1855) son of Robert, farmer at Stonedge, and Jean Curle. He was grandson of James, tenant in Todshawhaugh and Branxholme Park, and cousin of James who was contemporary tenant in Branxholme Park. He himself was farmer at Branxholme Braes. He is probably the James who was renting Branxholme Town and Castlehill farms in 1792 and who was renting Branxholme Town in the period 1834–43. He was recorded at Flex on the Horse Tax Rolls of 1792–94. In 1797 he is recorded in the Farm Horse Tax list as tenant of Branxholme Braes and Flex, with 7 horses for farm use. He also paid tax in 1797 on 3 non-working dogs. He was one of the trustees for the estate of William Oliver ‘Auld Cash’ (who died in 1808). He was among the first to be listed on the ‘Donations’ page for the Hawick Savings Bank in 1815. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘ Beauties of the Border’ in 1821 and Robert Wilson’s ‘ History of Hawick’ in 1825. In 1841 he is listed with 2 servants and in 1851 he was farmer of 2790 acres, with 10 farm labourers and 6 servants in his house. In 1797 he married Ann Sibbald (1779/90–1840); she may have been daughter of John Sibbald, younger of Pinnacle. Their children were: Ann (1798/9–1832); Jean (1801–22); Robert (1802–94); John (1803–92); William (1805–61), who worked in Liverpool; James (1807–62); Charlotte (1810–27); Margaret (c.1806–62), who died in Canada; Walter (b.1814/5); and Charles (1815–8). He and his wife are buried at Borthwick Waas. James (b.1775/6) farmer at Wollrig. In 1861 he was there farming 480 acres and employing 4 labourers. His wife was Margaret and their children included James, Jane and Helen. James (d.1859) shepherd at Birneyknope. He married Janet Renwick, who was sister of Benjie, a well-known mole-catcher and poacher. Their children included: Thomas (b.1820); James (b.1821), tailor at Bonchester Bridge; and Robert (b.1836/7). He and his wife later rented a cottage on Gatehousecote farm (where they are recorded in 1851) and both died in the same year at a farm at Hawthorn-side. James (1807–62) born in Hawick Parish, son of James, farmer in Branxholme Braes and Ann Sibbald. He became a doctor in Dumfries. He married Charlotte Sylvester Train. Their children were James and William (partners in Bullock Brothers in Rangoon), Henry Stewart and Arthur Sibbald. James (b.c.1817) born in Bowden. He was a farm worker at Midholm, then Howden, moving to Borthwickbrae Burnfoot, where 2 of his children were born. In 1861 he was farmer of 600 acres, employing 5 people, at Borthwickbrae Burnfoot. He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1873. He married Margaret Tullie, and their children were Mary Scott, James (who married Margaret Robb), Christian, George, John and Margaret Douglas. James (b.1810/1) resident of Castleton Parish. He was a ‘ Male Servant’ in Castleton village in 1841, a ‘Labourer’ there in 1851 and an agricultural labourer living on Doncaster Street in Newcastleton in 1861. He married Janet Ingles and their children included: Walter (b.1838); Elizabeth (b.1840); William (b.1842); Walter (b.1844); Thomas (b.1847); and Thomas (again, b.1849). James (b.1817/8) agricultural labourer in Castleton Parish, originally from Langholm. He was living at about 11 South Hermitage Street in Newcastleton in 1851 and at 2 South Liddell Street in 1861. He married Margaret Scott and their children included: John (b.1840); Jessie (b.1841); Jane (b.1844); Isabella (b.1846); Elizabeth (b.1848); Helen (b.1850); Alexander (b.1852); Agnes (b.1854); Mary (b.1856/7); and Margaret (b.1859/60). James (1821–1900) son of James, shepherd at Birneyknope, he was born in Cavers Parish. He was an apprentice tailor in Hawick with Mr. Mitchell, working with him 1837–46. He was a journeyman tailor in Newcastleton and elsewhere, settling down as a tailor at Bonchester Bridge about the time he got married. It is said that about this time he resolved to become a teetotaller and struggled to overcome his earlier craving for drink. He was appointed to the Hobkirk Parish Council when it was first formed, and remained on it until his death. He also served as officer to the Hobkirk Heritors. He married Helen (or ‘ Ellen’) Hall in Hobkirk in 1852; she was daughter of a shepherd at Gatehousecote. They had 7 daughters and 1 son: Helen (or ‘Ellen’, b.1852), who married W. Minto, cab proprietor in Hawick; Janet (b.1855), who married Walter Turnbull, carpenter in Bonchester Bridge; Isabella (b.1858), who married T. McGowan; Margaret (b.1860), a dressmaker, who worked for the Post Office; Mary Telfer (b.1863), who died young; Wilhelmina Elliot (b.1865), married Thomas Hogg from Selkirk; Agnes Rutherford (b.1868), married A. Bruce from Musselburgh; and James (b.1871), who was also a tailor. James (1833/4–1904) farmer at West Buccleuch. He married Christina Glendinning, daughter of Archibald and Violet Beattie. Their son Thomas died in the South African War in 1902. They also had daughters Agnes Margaret and Violet and sons William (who farmed at Stobswood, near Duns), George (who also farmed West Buccleuch) and Andrew (of Flass, Westruther). James (c.1843–80) only son of Robert and grandson of James, farmer in Branxholme Braes. He married Mary Turnbull (c.1846–90). Their children were: Thomas, who died young; Robert (1865–1920); and Mary Turnbull Pott (d.1903). James Wyndham Alleyne (1872–1939) eldest son of Charles John, farmer at Branxholme Park. He was born in Roberton Parish. He served with the Indian Forestry Service. In 1938 he was fined 10 shillings after his dog ‘arrested itself’ by walking into the police station, after being picked up
Grieve

2 times earlier for not having a collar and tag. He lived at Beechwood Beech, Alton, Hants. He firstly, in 1910, married Ishabel MacLeod Mac-Donald (from Skye, 1882–1913), who died in Calcutta. He secondly, in 1931, married Marjorie Patmore. There were no surviving children from either marriage. Jane Little nee Hay (b.1825/6) daughter of Robert Hay and Ann Little. She married Robert Grieve (d.1853), who was a solicitor’s clerk. She took over the running of the Crown Inn in 1848 after the deaths of her father and then her mother. She continued there after the death of her husband, moving later to a smaller hotel at 8 Bridge Street, where she lived with her daughter Annie Little. In 1863 she presented the Museum with a toddler ladle that had been used at the Common Riding dinner for 130 years. She appears to have gone bankrupt in 1864, her assets being sequestrated. Janet (17th C.) resident of Colterscleuch on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. Janet (17th C.) listed at Lairhope among ‘The poor in Hauick Paroch’ on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Janet (17th C.) recorded among the poor of Hassendean Parish in 1694, when she was at Horsleyhill. Joan (b.1738) daughter of William and sister of Dr. John, she was born in Ha-wick. She was also known as Joanna. She was sent to live with her uncle, Dr. James, in Russia (although some sources mistakenly suggest she was his daughter). In 1754 she married Dr. James Mounsey (1710–73), who was a surgeon in Russia, became known as a naturalist and was elected to the Royal Society. Her husband returned to Scotland in 1762, buying the estate of Rammerscales in Dumfriesshire (and being one of the first to raise crops of rhubarb there). He long believed that the agents of Empress Catherine were out to get him, and is said to have faked his own death. His last Russian descendant died during the siege of Leningrad in 1942 (although these may be from an earlier family of his). She remarried after his death. John (15th C.) recorded at Ferniehirst in 1494/5. John Her-vey in Fairnilee had remission for several crimes, including stealing 30 sheep from him. His name is written ‘Johanne greiff’. John (17th C.) mar-ried ‘Jenet Inglish’. Their son James was born in Hawick in 1644. This could have been James of Commonside, although there are other possi-bilities. John (17th C.) tenant in Eilrig. He is recorded being ‘in Eleridge’ in the baptismal record of 1680, when the witnesses were James Hutton and Walter Grieve. His will is recorded in 1684. He was surely related to Robert, who was at Eilrig at the same time. He married Mar-garet Scott and their children, baptised in Hawick Parish, included: Margaret (b.1680); and Walter (b.1682). The witnesses in 1682 were Robert and Walter Grieve (who were surely relatives). John (17th/18th C.) tenant of Crurie near Es-kdalemuir. He married Helen, daughter of Wal-ter Grieve in Colterscleuch, who was said to be his cousin. He was thus presumably directly related to the Grieves of the Branxholme and Borthwick areas. His son Walter farmed at Airswood, and he had another son, John, from whom de-scended farmers at Deloraine and Bowhill. John (b.c.1741) son of Walter and Janet Anderson. He lived in Castleton Parish, specifically at Park, where most of his children were born. In 1767 he married Elizabeth Alexandra (b.1741), daughter of Walter Paisley and Margaret Dalgleish. Their children included: Margaret (b.1768), who may have married John Kyle; Mary (b.1769); Walter (b.1772), who married Eleanor Elliot and probably moved to Ontario; Janet (b.1774), who married James Elliot; James (b.1774); William (1777–1824), who married Mary Elliot; Jean (b.1779), who married James Beattie; John (1781–1850), who died in Westminster Township, Ontario; and Elliot (1784–1874), who emigrated to Ontario. Dr. John (1744–1805) probably born in Hawick, son of William Grieve and Elspeth (or Elizabeth) Grieve (who appear to have been married 24 years before he was born). His mother’s brother was Dr. James, physician in Russia and he was a good friend of Dr. James’ only son, James Tamesz (who would have been his cousin). His sister Joan (b.1738) married physician and naturalist James Mounsey (who served the Russian royal family, but returned to Scotland after Tsar Peter III’s death, and convinced that agents were out to get him, faked his own funeral). He studied at Edin-burgh and Glasgow Universities and in the period 1778–83 served as a military doctor at Voronezh in Russia. He then returned to Britain because of his health. He had a broad interest in sci-ence, publishing a paper in the first volume of the Transactions of the Royal Society of Edinburgh on fermented mare’s milk. He practised medicine in London, and was elected to 15 separate medi- cal, scientific and antiquarian societies, including the Royal Society. He returned to Russia with his family in 1798, acting as court physician to Em-peror Paul I. He (and 2 other Scots) performed the autopsy on Paul’s body after his assassina-tion in 1801. He was then physician to the fam-ily of Emperor Alexander I. In 1792 he married
Grieve

Rebecca Kinnersley (1771–1811). Their daughter Eliza Emma married Guy Lennox Prendergast and they had at least one other child, Maria Augusta. He died of a stroke in St. Petersburg and was buried there. John (d.bef. 1791) resident of Hawick who married Helen Thomson in 1769. Their children included: Walter (b.1770); Agnes (b.1773); and John (b.1784). His son Walter died in Hawick in 1791. John (18th C.) married Helen Cathrae. Their children Janet (b.1775) and Alexander (or perhaps Alexandra, b.1778) were baptised in Hawick Parish. John (1754–95) from Westerkirk in Dumfriesshire, son of Walter and Jean Pott. His grandmother was from the Grieves of the Branxholme area. Sometime about 1780 he and his cousin George Stavert inherited the lands of Hoscote from their uncle George Pott, and he also inherited Craik. He lived at Craik and sold his share of Hoscote to his cousin Adam Stavert in 1781. In the baptismal records for 1781 and 1785 he is described as ‘Mr. Grieve of Hoscot att Craik’. However, he appears to have still been tenant farmer at Hoscote in 1785 and paid the land tax there in that year. He was again ‘Mr. John Grieve in Craick’ in 1787. He was farmer at Craik according to the 1787–94 Horse Tax Rolls. In Roberton in 1778 he married Isabella or ‘Bell’ (1757–1835), daughter of Walter Turnbull and Dorothea Chisholme; she was born at Firth and died at Meadshaw. Their children were: Margaret (b.1777); George (1779–1841), who was a schoolmaster; Walter J. (1781–1861); Dolly (1783–1806); Jane (1785–1835), who married William Moffat of Garwald; John (b.1787), who died in infancy; and Isabella (c.1789–c.1831), who married David Ballantyne. He died at Craik and is buried along with several family members, commemorated on the same gravestone as the Potts of Hoscote. John (18th C.) married Isabel Pott in Hawick Parish in 1785. John (18th C.) farmer at Hartwoodmyres according to the Horse Tax Rolls of 1785–91. In 1787 his servant Jean Dunlop was mentioned in a legal case in Selkirk. John (18th C.) wright in Hawick. His wife Isobel Little died in Hawick in 1799. His son William died in 1798 and an unnamed child in 1805. In 1809 his son John died in Hawick Parish; either he or his son was ‘lang John’. John (18th/19th C.) from Stow, he married Janet Stavert in Roberton Parish in 1791. Their children included James (b.1795) and Mary (b.1796), baptised in Selkirk. John (18th/19th C.) farmer at Blackbumfoot in Castleton Parish, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He could be the John from Castleton who subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. John (b.c.1770) son of Robert, who farmed at Easter Alemoor and elsewhere. He had a twin brother Walter. He married Helen Watson in 1812 and Helen Grieve in 1822. He lived in Edinburgh. His children were: Jessie (b.1814); Walter (b.1816); John (b.1819); Helen; Thomas; and Robert. John (b.1775/6) corn dealer who lived at Gledsness. He was there from at least the 1820s. He was probably the John at Colterscleugh who subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. He was recorded there on the 1841 census. He married Jean Hume and their children included: Robert (b.1819); Peter (b.1821); John (b.1823); Walter (b.1827), Betsy (b.1829); William; Isabella; Jean; and Mary. Most of his children were born in Cavers Parish. John (1800–80) wright of (Stobs) Woodfoot, son of shepherd Robert and brother of Walter. In 1841 and 1851 he was at Birkwood Foot (presumably Stobs Woodfoot) and was described in 1851 as a master carpenter. Along with his son Robert he started a coach-building business in Havelock Street. He was a member of Allars Kirk in Hawick. He married Elizabeth Glendinning in 1820 and after her death married Janet, daughter of James Cranston and Margaret Mitchellhill, in 1838. Together they had 14 children, many of whom lived long lives in the Hawick area. They were: Isabella, who married Kirkton joiner Andrew Scott; Agnes; Robert; who married Elizabeth Turnbull in Hobkirk; Helen; Elizabeth (‘Betsy’ or ‘Betty’), who married John Lewis and later John Fleming, both joiners, and later in life had a grocer’s shop on the Howegate; Margaret, who married James Christie in Hawick; John, who died of consumption; Catherine, who possibly married David Ballantyne in Hawick; James; Walter, emigrated to Victoria, Australia, married Elizabeth miller and lived to the age of 91; Helen or ‘Ellen’, named after her recently deceased half-sister, married gamekeeper Thomas Simpson; and William, who was a joiner in Havelock Street, but died aged 23; David, also a joiner in Havelock Street, died aged 22; and Christina, who died in infancy. John (1803–92) 2nd son of James, farmer at Branhholme Braes. He was farm overseer at Howpasley. He married Mary (b.1804), daughter of Adam Glendinning. Their children were: Elizabeth (1827–96), who married William Beattie; James (b.1828), who married Mary Brown; Ann (b.1832); Robert (1833–1913), who emigrated to New Zealand; Margaret (b.1846/7); William (b.1839/40); John (b.1841);
Adam (b.1845); Charlotte Mary Ann (b.1848); and Helen (b.1851). Katherine (1837–1916) daughter of Thomas and Marion Margaret Dickson. She helped plan the planting of shrubs at the Borthwick Waas cemetery, along with their sister Marion. She married David Ballantyne in Hawick in 1853. Lindsay local butcher. He started in 1960, running his shop at 29 High Street since 1988. In 1992 he was Scottish Champion maker of haggis and in 2020 was given a royal appointment. Margaret (b.1810/11) born in Galashiels, she was married to George, toll-keeper at the Eastern Toll in Hawick at the 1841 census. Her husband died in 1849 and by the 1851 census she was toll-keeper at Wilton Place North Bar. She lived there with her daughters Isabella and Jane and servant Betsy Waugh. She could have been the Margaret Lambert who married George Grieve in Lilliesleaf in 1828. Marion Fisher (1831–1921) daughter of Thomas, farmer at Skelfhill, and Marion Margaret Dickson. Along with her sister Katherine and Robert Noble of Borthwickbrae, she planned the shrubbery around Borthwick Waas Cemetery in 1895. She also left money in her will for the upkeep of the cemetery. She could be the Miss Grieve of Skelfhill who donated Roman artefacts from Cologne to the Museum in 1863, in addition to a shrike. Michael (b.1779/80) wool-spinner in Hawick. He married Rachel Scott, and she died in 1851, aged 64. Their children included: Janet (b.c.1814), who married shoemaker Peter Fairbairn; Elizabeth (c.1815–88), who died in Hawick Poorhouse; Walter (b.c.1816), who married Mary Oliver; John (b.c.1817), also a woolen spinner; Rachel (b.c.1822); Mary (b.c.1824–56), who died unmarried; Alexander (b.1826), mill foreman in Galashiels; Margaret (b.1829), who probably died young; and Christina (b.1830), who married tailor William Milner. Michael (c.1842–1912) son of Walter. He left Hawick in 1874 to work in hosiery manufacturing in Leicester and retired to Queensbrough. He married Isabella Scott in Hawick in 1866. Their children were: Walter (b.1867); Maggie Scott (b.1869); Thomas Scott, who became senior partner of T. Grieve & Co., Ltd., hosiery latch needle manufacturers of Leicester, inventing the fashioning needle; Adam (b.1872); William Helm (b.1874); Mary (b.1875); Janet (b.1877); Herbert (b.1878); Isabella (b.1879); Agnes (b.1882); and John (b.1886). Michael Anderson (1858–1919) son of Adam and Jane Anderson, he was a joiner in Newcastleton. In 1887 he married Margaret (1865–1930), daughter of Adam Nichol and Esther Hardie. Their children were Adam Nichol (b.1887) and Christina (b.1891). Nancy (18th/19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. In 1801 her illegitimate daughter Nancy (born the previous year) was baptised in Cavers, the father being Robert Bain, servant at Tower farm. Norman William (1852–1936) youngest son of William Oliver, farmer at Branxholme Park, from his 2nd marriage with Sarah (or Elisa) Clarke (nee Wagstaff). He was ‘formerly of Eskdale and Liddesdale’, then was on the boards of several tea and rubber companies in what was at that time Ceylon, but was living in East Grinstead in 1891. He compiled some information about his family history in 1893. In the years before WWI he appears to have taken the shootings in several Borders farms, namely East and West Buccleuch, East and West Deloraine and Whitehillshiels. He married Charlotte Adelaide, daughter of George Hamilton Verity. Their children were William Robert, Christina Verite, Ruth Marion and Elsie Wagstaff. He died at West Heath in Surrey and is commemorated at Borthwick Waas Cemetery. Norman W. (19th/20th C.) said to be a native of Hawick and rugby internationalist, who trained as a doctor and moved to New Zealand. In 1928 he gave £2,000 for a maternity home in Hawick, to be named after Earl Haig. It is possible this is confusion between Norman William Grieve and James Norman Grieve Davidson. Peter (18th C.) miller at Headshaw Mill. He married Margaret Thomson and their children, baptised in Ashkirk Parish, included: Elizabeth (b.1740); William (b.1742); Margaret (b.1745); and Margaret (agin, b.1747). iMargaret (b.1745); Robert (16th/17th C.) farmer in 1609 when he was one of a large number of tenants of Sir Robert Scott of Thirlestane and others who were bound not to reset Walter Scott of Headshaw and others. It is unclear where he was farmer, or if he was the same as Robert in Commonsde. Robert (16th/17th C.) resident of Lymiecleuch in 1618. Walter Scott of Buccleuch complained that he had cut down 16 alder trees from his lands of Gorenberry, with other men from upper Teviotdale (including Archibald in Caerlervrig) also being accused of stealing timber. Not appearing before the Privy Council, he was denounced as a rebel. Robert (17th C.) described as ‘in Commonsde’ in 1632 when he and several others feued the lands of Westbarns from Thomas Hamilton, Lord Binning. He may have been father of Walter in Branxholme Park and William in Commonsde. Robert (17th C.) tenant in Commonsde. In the 1686 confirmation of lands...
to Anne, Duchess of Buccleuch, it is described how the lands of Wester Winds were ‘sometimes possesst’ by him, and he also occupied Dryden, Easter Winds, Commonside, Nether Croft and Hoghill. He was presumably related to the earlier Robert in Commonside. Robert (17th C.) tenant in Eilrig. His will is recorded in 1686. He was surely related to John, who was there at the same time. He may be the Robert who (along with Walter) witnessed a baptism for John in Hawick Parish in 1682. Robert (17th C.) tenant in Teindside, whose testament was listed at Peebles Commissariat in 1686. He may be the Robert who (along with Thomas Borthwick, suggesting the countryside south of the Town) witnessed a baptism for Robert Laidlaw in Hawick Parish in 1676. Robert (17th/18th C.) recorded in Fenwick in 1725 when he witnessed a baptism in Hawick with Walter Dalgleish, wright in Alton Croft. Robert (c.1690–1782) tenant in Deanburnhaugh. It is unclear how he was related to the other local Grieves. It is possible his father was James. His children were: James; Walter (d.1822) of Over Huntly; and Janet (b.1737). He died at Alemoor. Robert (18th C.) recorded in Glenkerry in Ettrick Parish in 1724 when he married Jean ‘Bleak’ from Fenwick in Hawick Parish. Robert (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. In 1749 he married Jean Hutton, who was from Cavers. His children (baptised in Robertson, but with no mothers’ name given) probably included Jean (b.1751) and William (b.1758). Robert (1725–85) son of James, farmer in Todshawhaugh and Branxholme Park. He was tenant farmer at Stonedge. It is possible he was the Robert who witnessed a Hawick baptism for William Grieve in Southfield (perhaps his brother). He may be the resident of Leith who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. Robert (d.1814) shepherd at Harden, Heap, Todshaw, Greensidehall and elsewhere. In 1785 he married Isabella, daughter of David Laidlaw from Highchesters; she died in 1857, aged 92. Their children were: Walter (b.1786), baptised in Robertson, who was a successful slater and plumber in Hawick; Robert (b.1790), also a shepherd; Margaret (b.1792), born at Heap; Isabel (b.1794), born at Todshaw, who married shepherd Robert Anderson; David (b.1788), born at Greensidehall; Agnes, who married slater William Scott; and John, who was a wright at Stobs Woodfoot. He died at Alton and was buried in Wilton Kirkyard. Robert (1790–1862) 2nd son of shepherd Robert. He also worked as a shepherd. He married Janet, daughter of Robert Glendinning and Isabella Murray in Yarrow in 1817 (although she had been born in Hobkirke Parish). Their children included Robert, who married Margaret Allan and then Sarah Cunningham and died in Hawick Poorhouse. In 1861 he was recorded as an agricultural labourer at Old Belses, with wife Janet and children Jean, Margaret and David. Robert (19th C.) Clerk of the Course at the Common Riding Races in the 1840s. He may be the same as one of the other local Roberts. Robert (b.1801/2) shepherd at Slaidhills, above Teindside. He had earlier lived in Bedrule Parish. In 1861 he was a retired shepherd, living at Elliotsfield. His wife was Elizabeth (‘Betty’) and their children included Margaret (b.1827), John (b.1832), Ann H., Esther, Walter, Archibald, Elizabeth and Margaret (again).
By 1861 he was a retired shepherd living with his wife at Elliotfield. He could have been the Robert who married Elizabeth Cavers in 1822/3. Robert (1802–85) eldest son of James, farmer at Branxholme Braes. He farmed at Whitchesters and later took over from Branxholme Braes. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He is recorded at Whitchesters in 1841 and 1851 (when he farmed 1000 acres and empleny 9 labourers) and at Branxholme Braes in 1861 (when he farmed 1200 acres and employed 8 men) and 1868. In 1833 he married Mary Pott (1804–94). Their only child was James (c.1843–80), who married Mary Turnbull. Robert (1818/9–1853) of the Crown Inn in Hawick. Born at Tievot-head. He trained as a solicitor’s clerk, but was recorded as keeper of the Crown Inn in 1851 and in Slaters’ 1852 directory. He married Janet Hay, daughter of the former proprietor of the Crown. Their children included: Robert Hay; and Ann Little, who was a governess. He died aged about 34 and his wife carried on at the Crown Hotel until 1866. Robert (1818–72) son of Walter John, farmer at Southfield. He spent about 12 years in Australia, returning to Scotland about 1851. He took over as tenant of Southfield when his father died in 1861. In 1863 he married Christina Gray (1844–80). Their children were: Walter John (1865–1948), who also farmed Southfield; William Gray (b.1866), who emigrated to Denver, Colorado; Robert Elliot (b.1868), who went to New Zealand; John Wright (b.1869), who also went to New Zealand; and James Christian (b.1872), also New Zealand. It appears there were no descendants of the 3 brothers who went to the southern hemisphere. The family are commemorated at Borthwick Waas. Robert (1826–1907) son of John, elder in Allars Kirk for 50 years, and grandson of Robert, who lived at several farms in Wilton. His mother was Elizabeth Glendinning, and he was born in Wilton. He worked for several years as an estate steward for Sir William Elliott of Stobs and Wells. He was recorded as land steward at Stobs Cottage in 1861. Along with his father he then started a coach-building business in Havelock Street in 1867. In 1853 he married Elizabeth (‘Betty’), daughter of James Turnbull, who may have been farmer at Billerwell (and died in 1858, aged 85), and she died in 1861, aged 34. In 1865 he secondly married Isabella Ballantyne in Hawick. His children were: Margaret (b.1854/5); John (b.1859), who married Wilhelmina Balmer and secondly Mary Gavin; Henry; Robert Ballantyne; William Henry; Annie Mary Jane; Annie Mary Jane (again); and Elizabeth, ‘Lizzie’. He kept a diary (from 1857 to 1865, when he was working on the Stobs estate), which has been transcribed by one of his descendants. Robert (1825/6–1900) born in Bowden, he was farmer at Huntly in Kirkhope Parish (including land in Ashkirk Parish) from 1857. He took over the tenancy from Elliot Grieve, and married Elliot’s daughter Jessie (also known as Janet). He was at Over Huntly in the 1860s and 70s and recorded at ‘Outer Huntly’ in 1861. His children included James (eldest son, who died at Carbon, Alberta), Henry (died at Saltcoats, Saskatoon), Elliot (died at Tweedmouth), Walter (4th son, who died aged 12), John Robert (youngest son, who died young) and Christina (joint tenant in Over Huntly until 1921). The family are commemorated on a gravestone in Borthwick Waas. Robert (1865–1920) only surviving son of James, farmed at Whitchesters and Branxholme Braes. His children included: James; and Robert Archibald Vivian (1907–42), who was killed in action in the Middle East. Robert (1868–1945) younger son of Robert, tenant in Southfield. He married Isabella Lillies, and had no descendants. Robert (1901–77) son of Walter John, farmer at Southfield. He took over the tenancy when his father retired in 1937. His son Walter carried on with the farm until 1988, by which time the same family had held the tenancy for more than 230 years. Robert Archibald Vivian ‘Vivian’ (1907–42) son of Robert and grandson of James, farmer at Branxholme Braes. He played rugby for Hawick and was Cornet in 1929. He was a Lieutenant in the Gordon Highlanders and was killed in action at El Alamein. He married Nora, youngest daughter of Charles James Glenny. He is commemorated at Borthwick Waas. Thomas ‘Tom’ (16th C.) one of the tenants of Sir Walter Scott of Howpasley in the lands of Outersideig in 1569. Sir Walter acted as cautioner for them in Hawick, that they would obey the laws of the Lord Regent. His name was recorded as ‘Thome Greiff’ and he was probably related to Will, who was also listed. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Wigg in Hobkirk Parish when his daughter Helen was baptised in 1788. He is probably the Thomas who married Helen Stevenson in Hawick in 1774. Their other children included: Thomas (b.1778), baptised in Hawick; Betty (b.1782), also baptised in Hawick; and John Stevenson (b.1790), baptised in Hobkirk. He may be the Thomas who in 1772 witnessed a baptism in Hawick for William Scott and Janet Dryden. Thomas (1738/9–1828) farmer.
at Glendinning and at Muselee. He is recorded at Muselee on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls and also paid the dog tax there in 1797. He is probably the Thomas who (along with Charles Scott at Commonside) witnessed a baptism for Archibald Elliott in 1782. He married Jane, daughter of James Stevenson and Jane Scott; she died at Muselee in 1797, aged 43. He himself died at Glendinning and they are commemorated on a gravestone in Borthwick Waas. He may be the James, son of James, baptised in 1739 in Cavers Parish, probably son of James in Commonside. John Stevenson Grieve, baptised in Hobkirk in 1790, may have been his son. Thomas (1797-1848) farmer at Branxholme Park and later tenant at Skelfhill. He was the younger son of James, farmer at Branxholme Park, and brother of William Oliver. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He was wealthy enough to be employing a governess in 1841. In Hawick in 1822 he married Marion Margaret, youngest daughter of Archibald Dickson of Hosebyres, and she died in 1860, aged 56. Their children were: James (1825-44); Archibald (1827-1921); William (1829-35); Thomas (1834-79; who was a sailor and died in 1863. Walter Grieve, baptised in Hobkirk in 1790, possibly son of James in Commonside. John Stevenson Grieve, baptised in Hobkirk in 1790, may have been his son. Thomas (1797-1848) farmer at Branxholme Park and later tenant at Skelfhill. He was the younger son of James, farmer at Branxholme Park, and brother of William Oliver. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He was wealthy enough to be employing a governess in 1841. In Hawick in 1822 he married Marion Margaret, youngest daughter of Archibald Dickson of Hosebyres, and she died in 1860, aged 56. Their children were: James (1825-44); Archibald (1827-1921); William (1829-35); Thomas (1834-79), who was a sailor and died at Valparaïso; Walter (1836-82); Katherine (1837-1916), who married David Ballantyne in Hawick; John Scott (1840-93); and Margaret (1843-1903). Thomas Gordon (b.1844) 3rd son of William Oliver, tenant of Branxholme Park. He was a Lieutenant in the 6th Dragoon Guards. He married Fanny Strickland and their children were: Marion Alison and Lillian de Alvarada. He could be the Thomas who presented photographs of an Australian chief to the Museum in 1863. Thomas (1873-1902) born in Innerleithen, son of James. His father was later farmer at West Buccleuch. He was killed at Bloemfontein in the Boer War, and his name is commemorated on the Hawick Boer War Memorial. Walter (1646-1721) possibly son of Robert and descendant of the James recorded about 1580. He was also likely to have been brother of William, tenant in Commonside. He was tenant of Branxholme Park, signing the lease in 1691. He was recorded as a householder at Branxholme Park on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls, when he was taxed for 2 hearths. He was ‘in Park’ when he witnessed baptisms in 1705 for Robert Nixon in Dodburn, in 1708 for James Laidlaw, a cottar in Branxholme Park, in 1709 for Robert Laidlaw in Haregrain and in 1713 for Walter Scott of Merrylaw (whose wife Margaret Grieve may have been related to him) and for John Elliot in Goldielands. He married Blanche (or ‘Blench’, 1661-1716), daughter of William Borthwick of Reashaw. Their children included: James (1684-1781), tenant of Branxholme Park and Todshawhaugh; Margaret (b.1671); Robert (b.1676); and 3 unnamed children christened in the 1670s. Walter in Colterscleuch may also have been a son. The witnesses in 1676 were William Grieve (perhaps his brother) and John Bell. He was buried at Borthwick Waas, along with his wife and descendants. He may be the Walter who witnessed baptisms for John Blake in 1674 and for John in Eilrig (probably a relative) in 1680 and 1682. Walter (d.1688) son of William in Commonside and brother of James, who was also tenant there. He died along with his son William and daughter Jean, all within a few months of each other, and are buried at Borthwick Waas. His will is recorded in 1688. Walter (c.1670-1710) farmer in Colterscleuch. He was said to be brother of James, tenant in Branxholme Park, and hence a son of Walter (they are commemorated together at Borthwick Waas). In 1708 he was described as ‘tenant in Colterschuch in Cavers parish’ when his son was baptised in Hawick. His wife was probably Katherine Ogilvie (d.1759). His children were: James (b.c.1694), tenant in Commonside and Over Huntly; Walter, who married Janet Anderson from Tushielaw; William (perhaps the William baptised in Hawick in 1698), who had at least 1 son; Hugh (b.1708), baptised in Hawick, who is said to have had a son; Gideon, who married Isabel Laidlaw; and at least one daughter, possibly Helen, who married John Grieve of Crurie, said to be a cousin. The witnesses in 1708 were Walter Scott in Crumhaugh and William Clerk in Southdeanrig. Walter (17th/18th C.) recorded at Hoscote in 1721 when his son Robert was baptised. It is unclear how he is related to other Grieves. Walter (b.c.1700) son of Walter in Colterscleuch. In 1727 he married Janet Anderson from the Tushielaw family. Their children were: John (b.1728); Walter (b.1730); Michael (b.1732); Christian (b.1734); Margaret (b.1736); and James (b.1740). Walter (d.1781) recorded as ‘Kirk Officer’ when he died in Hawick Parish in 1781. He may be the same as one of the other Walters. Walter (1710–99) son of James. Like his father he was tenant of the Duke of Buccleuch at Branxholme Park. He was recorded renting Branxholme Park from at least 1745. Along with John Elliot (younger of Borthwickbrae) he leased the lands of Linhope from the Buccleuch estates in 1744. He paid the window tax for Branxholme Park in 1748. He was involved in loans with the Elliots of Harwood in the 1750s. He may be the Walter who in 1765 witnessed a baptism for William in Southfield (probably his brother). He was made an Honorary Burgess in 1777. He rented Todshawhaugh and Whames in 1792. He held the lease for Todshawhaugh, where he was recorded in 1796 when there was a bond between William Elliot of Harwood and others with him. He was also farmer at Todshawhaugh on the 1789–97 Horse Tax Rolls. He owned 1 saddle horse and 3 farm horses in 1797, as well as paying the dog tax in 1797. His first wife was Katherine (1718–59), daughter of Adam Ogilvie of Hartwoodmyres, and the couple had children relatively late in life. He secondly married Magdaline, daughter of William Elliot of Borthwickbrae. His surviving children were: James (1751–1838), the only son; Helen (or Eleanor), who married Alexander Scott of Synton; Margaret (1755–86), who married John Balfour in Pilrig; Catherine (1757–86), who married William Sibbald of South Leith; and Jane (1762–87). The witnesses to the 1757 appear to be Mrs. Ogilvie of Hartwoodmyres (probably his mother-in-law) and Mrs. Grieve of Todshawhaugh (probably his mother James). He died at Todshawhaugh. Walter (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Murray, and their children included James (b.1744). Walter (c.1724–90) son of John, farmer in Crurie. He may have been born in Moffat and was farmer at Crooks and Airdwood, also in Dumfriesshire. He also worked as an architect. In 1744 in Robertson Parish he married Jean (1727–77), daughter of Adam Pott and Betty Elliot. The marriage was in 1744, with his wife’s sister Betty marrying Thomas Stavert at the same time. Their children were: John and Elizabeth, who died in infancy; Adam (b.1748), who may also have died young; Helen (1750–63); Nathaniel (b.1751), also died in infancy; John (1754–95), who was Laird (or perhaps tenant) of Hoscate and Craik; Betty (b.1756); Helen (b.1764); and Nathaniel (again, b.1770). Walter (1736/7–1822) son of Robert in Deanburnhaugh. He farmed at Hungryhill, Easter Alemoor and Hangingshaw, and also spent time in Perthshire. In Robertson in 1762 he married Janet Grieve (1737–1816), daughter of James in Commonsde. Their children were: Robert (1762/3–87), who died unmarried; twins Walter and John (b.c.1770); James (c.1771–1862); Archibald Campbell (b.c.1775); Elliot (c.1777–1858), who married Harriet Turnbull and was tenant at Over Huntly; and Jannet (1779–1858), who married Andrew Aitchison. He died at Over Huntly and was buried at Borthwick Waas. Walter (b.1767) farmer at Southfield, son of William and Mary Elliot. He is easily confused with the slightly later Walter John of Southfield (and the marriages are very similar, so they may be confused in family histories). He is recorded on the 1790–91 Horse Tax Rolls at Southfield. He is probably the Walter recorded as tenant at Howpasley in 1794 and 1797, as owner of 3 horses, and who also paid the dog tax at Howpasley in 1797. He is probably also the Walter who died unmarried in 1801. Walter (c.1770–1851) son of Walter and Janet Grieve. He was thus descended from Grieves in Colterscleuch and Deanburnhaugh. He was born at Broadlee in the Borthwick and had a twin brother John. He farmed at Craiglands in Dumfriesshire. He married Janet Campbell Veitch (who was christened in Lilliesleaf) and had 9 children: Robert (b.1797), who married Janet Murray; Elizabeth (b.1798), who married John Hogg; Jannet (b.1800), who married Andrew Watherston; Helen (b.1803), who married Francis Scott; Margaret (b.1805), who married David Brydon; John (b.1808), who married Mary Burns; Jane (b.1811), who died young; Walter (b.1813), who was also born at Broadlee, emigrated to Queensland and married Ann Gordon; and James (b.1818), who was born at Hartwoodmyres. Walter (b.1781) son of John and Isabella Turnbull. He is sometimes referred to as ‘Walter J.’ and is easy to confuse with Walter John. His father farmed at Hoscate and Craik, and he was born at Hoscate. He is referred to as being of Langwell. He married Christian Brydon. His wife is recorded as ‘Annuitant’ at about 12 Buccleuch Street in 1851 and is listed among the local gentry in a directory of 1852. He may thus be the ‘Mr. Grieve’ whose property is shown on Wood’s 1824 map at about No. 12 Buccleuch Street. His children included: Isabella; and Helen. Walter (18th/19th C.) described as ‘late of Langwell’ on his gravestone in Borthwick Waas Cemetery. He married Christian Brydon, who died in Hawick in 1854, aged 70. Walter (d.bef. 1800) resident of Hawick Parish. The death of his son William, a tailor, is recorded in 1800. Walter ‘Wat’ (1786–1856) slater of 23 Buccleuch Street, son of Robert (a shepherd in Roberton) and Isabella Laidlaw. He learned his trade with Thomas Cathrae, and started his own plumbing and slating business about 1805. He is listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 and

1837 directories and Slater’s 1852 directory as a Slater and glazier. He married Janet Scott in Wilton, and she died in 1821, aged 27. Their only surviving child was Agnes, who married engineer Adam Melrose. He later married Agnes Scott of Milvington, who died in 1865, aged 80. On the 1841 census he was living on Buccleuch Street with wife Agnes and daughter Agnes. A portrait of him exists. Walter (1787–1861) farmer at Southfield and Hawick Shiel. Born in Hobkirk Parish, he was son of Robert. However, he was surely related to the earlier Walter of Southfield. He was one of the founder members of the Wisp Club in 1826. He was probably the ‘W.J. Oliver’ to whom John Halliday dedicated his poem ‘Address to my purse, on finding it empty’ in 1847. In 1861 he was farming 650 acres at Southfield and employed 3 men. He married Christian (1786–1880), daughter of William Elliot and Margaret Anderson from Winningtonrig; this was in Cavers Parish in 1812. Their children were: Margaret (1813–19); Jean or Jane (1814–81), who married builder James Harkness; Mary Christian (1816–45), who died unmarried; Robert (1818–72), who also tenanted Southfield; Wilmina or Wilhelmina (1820–78), who married draper James Turnbull; Agnes (1822–48), who married Walter Purdom and died at Ormiston; William (1824–78), who emigrated to Keppel, Ontario, Canada; and Helen Margaret (1826–85), who died in Hawick, unmarried. He is buried at Borthwick Waas, along with several of his family. Walter (b.1805/6) agricultural labourer at Hallrule Porter Lodge according to the 1841 census. His wife was Jean and their children Robert, Helen, John, James and Isabella. Walter (1813–96) son of Walter, he was born at Broadlee in the Borthwick valley and christened in Ashkirk Parish. He emigrated to Queensland, Australia, where he married Ann Gordon and had 10 children. Walter (19th C.) plumber of W. Grieve & Son, 20 Buccleuch Street. Although he was no relation of the Walter Grieve of the plumbers and slaters business at 23 Buccleuch Street, he nevertheless worked for the older Walter and eventually took over the business. He may be the Walter recorded in about 1875 owning part of the former lands of Patrick Cunningham in Hawick. Walter (c.1816–48) probably son of Michael and Rachel Scott. He was a wool-spinner in Hawick. In 1841 he married Mary Oliver, who died in 1902, aged 82. His wife was sister of William Oliver, the blind fiddler. Their children were: Michael (b.c.1842), who worked in hosiery manufacturing in Leicester, and had a son Thomas who invented a fashioning needle; Adam (b.c.1845), who was a mason in Edinburgh; and Agnes (b.c.1847), who married Crimean War veteran Andrew Butler. Walter (b.1827) born in Teviothead Parish, son of John and Jean Hume. He was a plumber, Slater and glazier in Hawick. In 1861 he was living at 5 Slitrig Bank with his widowed mother (then called ‘Janet’), and he was then an employer of 8 men and 3 boys. He married Elizabeth Rogers and their children included: Mary (b.1862); John (b.1864); Walter Thomas (b.1865), who was Cornet in 1895; George Glen Rogers (b.1868); William Rogers (b.1871); and Jane Hume Rogers (b.1873). Walter (b.1838) son of James and Janet Inglis. He lived at Southfield, where most of his children were born. In 1864 he married Joanna Jardine (b.1846). Their children included: James (b.1867); Abraham (b.1868); one (b.1872); Janet (b.1874); Isabella (b.1878); Christina (b.1881); and Adam (b.1884). Walter John (1865–1948) son of Robert and Christina Gray. He took over the tenancy of Southfield while still a minor after the deaths of his father in 1872 and mother in 1880. He was known locally as a keen cyclist in the early days of that sport. He served as factor to the Duke of Buccleuch at Bowhill about 1902–12, living at Carterhaugh. He was a member of the Hawick Archaeological Society and local farming organisations. He married Isabella Elizabeth (1873/4–1953), daughter of Andrew Easton of Todrig, and secondly married Jane Scott in 1900. Their children were: Robert Elliot (b.1901), who took over the tenancy of Southfield; Jane Scott (1903–77); and Christina Gray (1904–70). He retired in 1937 and died at 29 Orchard Terrace. Walter Thomas (b.1865) son of Walter and Elizabeth Rogers. He was a plumber and served as Cornet in 1895. He was the first Cornet to be presented with the Cornet’s Medal by the Provost. William ‘Will’ (16th C.) one of the tenants of Sir Walter Scott of Howpastley in the lands of Outersideig in 1560. Sir Walter acted as cautioner for them in Hawick, that they would obey the laws of the Lord Regent. He was probably related to Thomas, who was also listed. William (1631/2–1701) tenant in Commonside. He was presumably related to other local Grieves. He was listed as tenant (along with James, as well as John Waugh) at Commondise on the 1694 Hearth Tax records. He may have been brother of Walter, tenant in Braune-holme Park; he may be the William who witnessed a baptism for Walter in 1676. His children included: Walter, who had 2 children William and Jean who died with him in 1688; and James, who succeeded as tenant in Commonside. He is buried in Borthwick Waas. William (17th C.) resident at Broadlee in Ashkirk Parish, recorded on the Hearth Tax roll in 1694. William (17th C.) shepherd at Priesthaugh in 1694 according to the Hearth Tax rolls. William (17th/18th C.) probably descended from the Grieves in Commonside. In 1720 in Hawick he married Elspeth (or Elizabeth), daughter of ‘Wester James’ Grieve; she may have been his cousin. Their children included: Robert (b.1728); William (b.1731); another William (b.1733); Joan (b.1738), who married Dr. James Mounsey; and John (b.1744). He may be the former tenant of Allanhaugh Mill described as being deceased in 1767. William (1707–1800) son of James, farmer at Commonside. He was tenant at Colterscleuch and Southfield. He was at Colterscleuch from at least 1741. In 1744 he is recorded as tenant of Colterscleuch and Westcoterig, along with Gideon Grieve, leasing from the Bucleuch Estates. Shortly after that he moved to Southfield. He was probably the tenant in Nether Southfield for whom James Rutherford was shepherd. In 1757 he was tenant at Southfield, and was found (along with other neighbouring tenant farmers) to be making ‘bakes’ at Black Grain Moss, against the explicit orders of the Town Council. As a result a group led by Bailie Robert Scott mustered in Hawick at 4 a.m. and went up to the Common, to break up the peats. He paid the Horse Tax at Southfield in 1785–89. He married Betty Grieve (1708/9–85). Their children included: Walter (b.1733); Hugh (b.1738); Robert (b.1741), who also tenanted Southfield; Mary (1744–89), who married Alexander Baptie, tenant in Southdean; and James (b.1748). He was 93 when he died and is buried in Borthwick Waas. William (18th C.) recorded getting married in Wilton Parish in 1730, but with no wife’s name recorded. He may be the William who witnessed a baptism in 1729 for William Nichol, also resident at Stouslie. William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His children included Robert (b.1741), Mary (b.1744) and James (b.1748). William (1726–86) 2nd son of James, tenant of Branholeme Park and Todshawhaugh. He was involved in a bond with Henry Elliot of Harwood in 1759. He was himself tenant farmer at Southfield, recorded there as early as 1759. It is also possible that he was one of the 2 William Grieves who tenanted Allanhaugh Mill in the early-to-mid 18th century. In 1751 he married Margaret Mary, daughter of Robert Elliot of Caerlenrig (who later farmed at Winnington Rig). Their children were: Jean (1757–1810); Isabel (b.1759), who married John Kedie in Hawick in 1785; Mary (1760–91), who married hosier John Nixon in Hawick in 1782; Ann (1761–1834), who married Rev. John Laurie in Hawick in 1786; James (b.1763), tenant in Roan; Christian or Catherine (1763–83), who may have married John Elliot farmer at Millburn, in Hawick in 1783; Robert (b.1764), who worked as a merchant in Leith; Helen; Tibbie, who married teacher Christopher Armstrong; Margaret (b.1765), who may also have married an Armstrong; Walter (1767–1801), who married Christina Elliot and continued to farm at Southfield as well as at Howpasley; Janet (b.1768), who married William Robertson, carpet manufacturer in Hawick in 1789; and William (b.1772). The witnesses in 1757 were Robert Elliot in Winningtonrig (his father-in-law) and Thomas Elliot in Stobicote, in 1759 were ‘Mr’ Robert Elliot (again) and Robert Grieve (perhaps his brother), in 1763 were Robert Elliot, ‘Ridge’ (his father-in-law) and James Grieve ‘Junior’ (probably his brother), in 1764 were ‘Mr Robert Elliot’ (presumably his father-in-law again) and William Elliot, ‘Winnington ridge’ and in 1765 were Robert Elliot (again) and Walter (probable his brother). He may be the ‘William Grieve, Hawick’ who subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). William (18th C.) recorded at Priesthaugh in 1761 when his unnamed child was baptised in Cavers Parish. He could be the same as one of the other Williams. William (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Isabella Grieve and their children included James (b.1765), Charles (b.1767), John (b.1769) and Helen (b.1771). William (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Jane Ruecastle and their children included Jane (b.1761), Walter (b.1763), John (b.1766), Walter (b.1770) and Ann (b.1772). William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His children included Janet (b.1777) and Hannah (b.1778). William (d.1800) tailor in Hawick, son of Walter. He married Henrietta Scott in Hawick in 1784, and she died in 1809. His son Walter died in Hawick in 1797. William (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Linhope, recorded as owner of a horse on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. It is unclear how he was related to other local Grieves. William (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Phaup, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls.
He is presumably not the same man as the shepherd at Linhope, who is listed separately. Additionally he was taxed for having 2 non-working dogs at 'Phaap' in 1797. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf, recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. William (18th/19th C.) tenant at Henwoodie in the 1820s and 30s. William Oliver (1796–1875) son of James and Agnes Hall. He succeeded his father as tenant farmer of Branxholme Park, East Buccleuch and Sundhope. He was President of the Teviotdale Farmers’ Club and was heavily involved in all local agricultural matters, being known as a great breeder of hill stock. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He became a member of the Jedforest Club in 1839. He was a member of the Photographic Society of Scotland from 1855. He served as a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire. In 1840 in Elgin he married Eliza Ann (1821–46), daughter of Charles Gordon. They had 3 sons (twins James and Charles, plus Thomas) and 1 daughter. In 1851 he is listed as farmer of 4000 acres, employing 20 farm workers and with 5 servant in his house. He was still farmer at Branxholme Park in 1868. He was listed in the Land Tax Rolls of about 1874 as owner of Dinlabyre and Greena. In 1851 he secondly married Sarah Clarke (nee Wagstaff), daughter of James of Bibly, and they had 1 son. He thirdly married Mary Gordon, from Heckington. His children included: twins James Alexander (1841–46) and Charles John (1841–1915); Christina Mary (b.1843), who married Wheatley Robertson of the Indian Army; Thomas Gordon (b.1844); and Norman William (1852–1936). William (b.1797/8) joiner and cartwright in Newcastleton. He was probably at about 2 Walter Street in 1861. His wife was Mary and their children included Elliot (a daughter), Charles, Walter and Robert. William (b.c.1804) married Margaret Dalgleish in 1837. His son Robert was born at Ettrick, moved to Queensland in 1883 and still has descendants there. William (1805–51) younger son of James, tenant in Branxholme Braes, and descended from the Grievses of Branxholme Park. He was born in Hawick and became a grocer on the High Street. He is probably the grocer and spirit dealer living on Silver Street in 1841. In 1851 he was living at about 6 High Street. He is listed as a High Street grocer in Slater’s 1852 directory, and may also be the corn dealer listed there, as well as the William recorded on the High Street serving as insurance agent for National and seedman. Additionally he may have been the William serving as ‘sub-distributor of stamps’ at the Stamp and Tax Office on the High Street. In 1840 he married Christian (or Christina) Graham (1814–88). They had a son, James (b.1841). He and his wife are commemorated on the family gravestone in Borthwick Waas. William (1818–85) son of George and Minto Bell. He was probably born at Craik, where his father farmed. However, the family moved to Edinburgh and then emigrated to Canada in 1832. In 1846 he bought land in Richmond township in Ontario and operated a tavern at Grieve’s Corners, which still bears the family name. He married Eliza Fairbairn and their children were Esther, George, Robert, Minto, Georgina and William. William (1825–78) younger son of Walter John, farmer at Southfield. He emigrated to Canada in the early 1850s, married Agnes Fairbairn from Berwickshire and had a large family. William (1829–82) 3rd son of Thomas and Marion Dickson. He took over the farm of Skelfhill after his father’s death, also having tenancy of Stobicote. He was known for being a judge of Cheviot sheep and was President of the Teviotdale Farmers’ Club. He was at Skelfhill in 1861, farming 3084 acres and employing 12 people, with his brother Walter also farming 2000 acres and employing 3 people. His sisters Catherine and Margaret were also living there, as well as 6 domestic and farm servants. He died unmarried. William Gray (1866–1914) younger son of Robert, tenant in Southfield. He emigrated to Denver, Colorado. He married Lilliam Kirschbaum and they had 1 daughter and 3 sons. William Herbert (1874–1908) 2nd son of Charles John of Branxholme Park. He was a Lieutenant in the Royal Navy. In 1893 he was on board the ‘Nile’ off Tripoli, when he witnessed the collision that caused the sinking of H.M.S. Victoria, with the loss of hundreds of lives, including his brother Arthur. Later he himself was killed in another naval disaster, this time involving an explosion in Queensferry. There is a memorial brass to him and his brother in St. Cuthbert’s Church (formerly written ‘Greave’, ‘Greaves’, ‘Greiff’, ‘Grieve’, ‘Greiff’, ‘Grieve’, ‘Growe’ and variants).

the Grieve (thu-greev) n. name of a place in the lower Ewes valley which was used by the people of the Langholm area for drowning witches. Its precise location is uncertain, but possibly at the confluence of the Ewes with the Esk.

Grieve’s (greevz) n. plumbers firm formerly located between the Roman Catholic Chapel and Green Wynd. They had a private water pump there in the mid-19th century. Also the name of a coach-builders in Havelock Street in the 19th century.

(grie-vee-is) adj., arch. grievous – ‘His waves ar alwayes greifious; thy juudgemints ar fer aboone owt o’ his sicht’ [HSR] (note the extra syllable).

Griffith (gri-fith) n. Sir Richard Waldie (1850–1933) officer in charge of the Border Rifles. He was educated at Jesus College, Cambridge and served with the 2nd Dragoon Guards, retiring with the rank of Captain. He succeeded to the baronetcy and family estates near Kelso on the death of his father in 1889. In 1891 he became Colonel of the local volunteer regiment, the Border Rifles. Under his command the Border Rifles became the 4th battalion of the K.O.S.B., with him as Honorary Colonel. He was Chairman of the Roxburghshire Unionist Association, Chairman of the Tweed Commission and a member of the Border Union Agricultural Society. He stood unsuccessfully in the 1906 general election for Roxburghshire. However he served as a member of Roxburghshire County Council and was also a J.P. He was Lord-Lieutenant for Roxburghshire, as well as being a Brigadier in the Royal Company of Archers. A keen sportsman, he was known as a rower at university, later as a curler, yachtsman and particularly as a breeder of racehorses. He made his fortune through mines in Bohemia and lived for a while in Australia. He married 3 times, but had no children. He wrote the foreword to the book ‘With the Border Volunteers to Pretoria’.

Griffiths (gri-fiths) n. Nigel (1955– ) politician. Son of a High School English teacher, he was educated there, as well as at Edinburgh University. He became Edinburgh councillor 1980–87 and Labour M.P. for South Edinburgh from 1987, being at one time Opposition Whip and spokesperson on Trade and Industry.

grime (gr-im) v., arch. to sprinkle, fleck – ‘The sun was na up, but the moon was down, It was the grimming of a new fa’n snaw, Jamie Telfer has run ten myles a-foot, Between the Dodhead and the Stobs’s Ha’’ [T], n. a flake, particularly of soot (also written ‘gryme’, ‘greim’, etc.).

grimin (gri-min, -meen) n., arch. a sprinkling – ‘Old people invariably talked of ... a grymin o’ snaw’ [HAST1902], ‘The sunny blinks, keekin throwe atween the leafs, spurtelt the road wui greimeens o licht’ [ECS], ‘The mune she shines sae bricht, Till a’ the yirth is marlt wi’ The grymins o’ her licht’ [DH] (also written ‘grymins’).

de the Grindin Burn (thu-grin-din-burn) n. the Grinding Burn, a stream that follows the Minto to Denholm road and joins the Teviot just beyond Denholm. In 1780 ‘Grinden Burn’ is listed as part of the southern boundary of the lands of Hawthorn Park and Mailchester Park (the origin of the name is probably Old English ‘grene dun’, meaning ‘the stream running from the green hill’, named after the Mintos; it is clearly shown on Pont’s 1590s manuscript map, and may be labelled ‘Grindoun’, this being interpreted as the name given to the hills; Blaen’s 1654 map intriguing shows it linking to the Jordan Burn, hence linking the Aie and Teviot valleys directly!; it is ‘Grydone Burn’ in c.1537; James Murray calls it ‘Grindon Burn’ in 1863).

Grindin Hills (grin-din-burn) n. possible former name for the Minto Hills. Pont’s manuscript map from the 1590s indicates the word ‘Grindoun’ with ‘hills’ written below. This was transferred to Blaen’s 1654 published map as ‘Grindoun h.’, hence leading to some speculation that the hills gave their name to the Grinding Burn running below them. However, this name for the hills is otherwise unknown, and it seems unlikely that the Mintos ever had this alternative name, with the origin simply being misinterpretation of what was written by Pont.

Grindstane Law (grind-stän-law) n. hill near the head of the Kale Water, just on the Scottish side of the Border, reaching a height of 468 m. It was near here in 1598 where one of the last skirmishes occurred between the Scottish and English. Accounts differ as to the numbers involved, with the group of Scotsmen being from 60 to 200 and the English group perhaps being as large as 400. The Scots claimed they were simply out hunting, going into England on 1st August and again the following day, after which they retired to dinner ‘Grindisdam law in Scotland’. They were then chased by the larger English party (led by Woodrington and Fenwick), as far as Plenderleigh, with fighting occurring ‘neir ane pairt callit Knowpark’. Some Scotsmen were killed, including Andrew Rutherford, brother of the Laird of Hindalee, Robert Pringle, servant to the Laird of Bonjedward and James Robson, servant to the Laird of Greenhead. The Laird of Bonjedward was also injured and several prisoners were taken, including the younger men of Bonjedward, Hunthill and Greenhead, the Lairds of Tower and Billerwell, 2 Burgess of Jedburgh and others, the total being as many as 12. The English also took about 50 horses. The prisoners were released, but had to appear to answer charges a few days later. The English claimed the Scots were out raiding, or at least cutting and stealing wood (which may well have been true), nevertheless, the English pursuit of the Scots was ferocious (although common for the times).

grip at (grip-i’t) v., arch. to grab at, attempt to seize – ‘...with ane buit to carrie the staff or standard in, and offered to grippit at and carie the said Colour’ [BR1706].

the Griplin (thu-grip-now) n. name for an area either in or bordering on Hawick Common Moor, the precise position being now uncertain. It was mentioned in 1766 in the description of 9 small pieces of land that were let in order to try to prevent encroachment on the Common by neighbouring tenants. John Scott was living there in 1784. Alexander Miller was recorded on a farm there when his son William was baptised in Kirkton Parish in 1786.

Grundi see Grundy

Grundistone (grundi-stin) n. Grundis- tone, former farm to the west of the A7 at ‘the Heights’. The name probably relates to the ‘de Grundi’ family, who are recorded in the area in the early 1200s. An undated charter (probably around 1390) in which ‘the five merk lands in the town of Grundiston’ are granted by William Lindsay of the Byres to his son Andrew. Easter and Wester Grundistone were known as homes of the Scotts in the 16th century. In the 16th century it was part of the Barony of Chamber- lain Newton. In 1535 the King revoked a for- mer charter, and so the superiority passed from Patrick, Earl of Bothwell to George, Lord Home. In 1580/1 an agreement was made there regarding a dispute between George Scott of Synton and Walter Scott of Stiches over Synton Mill. Later the lands became part of the Buccleuch es- tates. The farms of Easter and Wester Grundis- tone and Drinkstone (along with Drinkstone and perhaps other lands) were valued at £2440 in 1643. William Taylor was tenant there in 1635 and Hector Turnbull in 1683. ‘The two Grundi- stones’ were transferred from Hassendean Parish to Wilton in 1690. Adam Glendinning was there in 1698. There was a dispute over the boundaries with Synton and Ashkirk around 1707. George Scott was recorded there in 1724, Robert Scott in 1725–29, George Stewart in 1729, John Miller in 1751 and Robert Waugh in 1759. ‘Easter and Wester Grundiston and Drinkston’ were valued together at £2440 in 1778 and owned by the Duke of Buccleuch. There was a marl pit there around 1800. Janet Scott (probably a widow) was head of the household there in 1841, and William Potts was farmer in 1851. There is a tra- dition (described by James Wilson) that an an- cient stone there bore the inscription ‘Remem- ber to pray’, but this had not existed in living memory by the mid-1800s, if indeed it was ever more than a fantasy (the name is first recorded in 1380 as ‘Grundistoun’; it is ‘Grundiston’ about 1390, ‘Grandiston’ and ‘Groundiston’ in 1525, ‘Grundiston’ in 1526/7 and 1551, ‘Groundeston’ in 1535, ‘Grundingston’ in 1580/1, ‘Grundis- tone’ in 1635, ‘Grundiston’ in 1643, ‘Grundes- tone’ in 1683, ‘Grundeston’ in 1698, ‘Easter and Wester Grundistounes’ in 1707, ‘Grundi- stone’ in 1725, ‘Grandiston’ in 1744, ‘Grundison’ in 1759 and ‘Grundestone’ in 1841; the origin is possibly ‘Grundi’s farm’ with the Middle English personal name Grundi, and may refer to ‘Robert Grundi de Neuton’ who signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296 and his ancestors).

Grundistone Heights

John (d.bef. 1490) tenant of the lands of ‘Luthre’ in Fife in 1490. His widow was also recorded, as well as his father James. Margaret (15th C.) recorded in 1470 as wife of Robert de Foret, when he had a charter for the lands of Foret in Fife. She was presumably related to David and Thomas. Thomas of Kingsk (15th/16th C.) son of David, as recorded in a charter of 1481 when he was granted lands in Fife. He was Bailie in Cupar and also referred to as ‘custumar’. He is recorded in several charters in the period 1495–1513, signed in Edinburgh or Fife, with his name spelled ‘Grundistoun’, ‘Grundistoun’ and variants. His wife was Isobel Seton. Probably the same ‘Thoma Grundystoun’ was witness to the charters made by Lord Lindsay of the Byres to James Scott of Kirkurd in 1484 for the lands of Over and Nether Newhall in the Barony of Chamberlain Newton. The charters were made in Edinburgh, so he may not have had a direct connection with the Hawick area; it may be a coincidence that his surname is the same as the neighbouring lands of Grundistone. Walter of Glaslie (15th/16th C.) witnessed a charter in 1504/5 for Thomas of Kingsk, to whom he was presumably related (also written ‘Grundiston’).

Grundistone Heights (grun-dee-stin-bit) n. Grundistone Heights, the area of high ground adjacent to the A7 north of Hawick, more commonly known as ‘the Heights’. The highest point on the road is 942 ft, and marks the boundary between Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire. The view from here, particularly south to the Cheviot Hills is magnificent. A former drove road used to cross the main road near here (marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map), passing over Bewlie Moor and Chapel Moor on its way to the Borthwick valley. It has been claimed that a similar route shows evidence of having been a Roman road, with traces between here and Woolaw, connecting Raeburnfoot with Newstead, via Craik Cross and Harelaw; however, this is not firmly established.

Grundistone Edge (grun-dee-stin-iej) n. former name for Grundistone Heights (the name is used by James A.H. Murray in the 1863 Transactions).

grunds (grundz) n., pl., arch. the bottom, last bit, dregs, sediment – ‘The callant was bebbin a taan oot ov a bottle, an whummin’ti geet the verril grunds’ [ECS].

grundstane (grund-stän) n., arch. a grindstone.

Grundy (grun-dee) n. Adam (13th/14th C.) recorded as ‘Adam Grundy’ on the 1303/4 inquest for the half barony of Wilton. It seems likely that he was related to Robert and held lands near Grundistone. Benedict (12th/13th C.) father of Robert, who witnessed a charter in Hassendean in about the 1220s. His name is given as ‘Benedicto Grundi’. He is the earliest known member of the family who gave their name to Grundistone. Robert (13th C.) son of Benedict. He witnessed a charter for Christina of Hassendean in the period 1214–49, probably the late 1220s. His name is given as ‘Roberto filius eius’ after that of his father Benedict. He was probably father or grandfather of the later Robert. Robert ‘de Neuton’ (13th C.) mentioned in 1291–96, he may have been the owner of what became ‘Grundistone’, with ‘Neuton’ presumably being the neighbouring farm now called ‘the Nitton’. He signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296 and on the attached seal, which may bear a rose, his name is ‘S’ROBERTI GRVNDY’.

gruntle (grun-tul) n., arch. the snout of a pig or other large mammal – ‘The stinkan brockke wi’ his lang lank lyske, Shotte up his gruntle to or other large mammal’ [GRVNDY].

gruntin (grunt-in) n., arch. a piglet – ‘They caused all the swine, gruntlings, and asses about the town to exert their harmonious voices .....’ [EM1820].

grup (grup) v., arch. to grip, seize, pp., poet. gripped – ‘... But it gied a joyfu’ cry, And grup ahaud o’ the green yin’ [DH].

gruppen (gru-pin) pp., arch. gripped, seized – ‘The frost’s gruppen the ferm grund Wi’ a ticht hand .... ’ [WL] (this is the past participle of ‘grip’, with the past tense being grap).

gruppen an liftit (gru-pin-an-lif-tee, -ti) pp., arch. arrested and run in, apprehended – ‘Tam’s gruppen an’ liftit’ [GW] (noted by E.C. Smith).

He served an engineering apprenticeship with Wilson & Glenny, then joined the K.O.S.B., becoming a motorcycle dispatcher for the Royal Engineering Signals in WWI. After the war he entered a partnership with brother Archie in the family motor engineering firm. He started winning Scottish speed events from about 1926, and then began an astonishing run at the Isle of Man T.T. races, where for 10 years he only ever finished first or second. He rode for several companies, but became best known as a rider for Norton, which dominated the European circuits in the early to mid-1930s. He set many world records over 50 km to 100 mile distances. His final record included finishing first 30 times out of 50 placings. He died following a crash at the 1937 German Grand Prix at the Sachsenring in Hohenstein-Ernstthal. His body was given a military escort out of Germany and his funeral in Hawick was attended by thousands. Memorials were erected on the Isle of Man (at ‘the Cutting’) and in Saxony. He was buried at the Wellogate, and a bronze statue, by Thomas Clapperton was erected in Wilton Lodge Park in 1939. A plaque was placed in 2011 at Tannage Close, near to his former workplace. A book ‘Jimmie Guthrie (1897–1937): Hawick’s Racing Legend’ by John Rogerson and Gordon Small was published in 1997, and the Museum contains much memorabilia of his life and achievements. A new book ‘Jimmy G.’ by Paul Guthrie was published in 2019. John (18th/19th C.) from Selkirk, in 1796 he married Margaret Whitley from Hawick. Their son John was baptised in Selkirk in 1796. John (1832–1903) local businessman and architect. Born in Jedburgh, he came to Hawick when his father founded the slating and plumbing firm James Guthrie & Sons in the 1850s. He took over running this firm with his 2 brothers, but also trained as an architect. He supervised the feuing of Sunnyhill and designed Linden Park, the Buccleuch Memorial, houses for the Working Men’s Building & Investment Company, and many villas, including Deanfield, Hazeldine, Lindesfarne, Langlands, Westwood and Woodnorton (originally Craigmore). He was heavily involved with the Archaeological Society, being a founding member and later President, and was also involved with the Buccleuch Memorial Institute. In 1861 he presented to the Museum part of a quern from Deanburnhaugh. He was also a painter and art lover, and contributed travel accounts to the local press. He painted a view of the High Street from the East End in 1858, another in 1893, one called ‘View of Rachel Anderson’s House, High Street’ and a view of the Auld Brig painted in 1869. He also painted a portrait of William Norman Kennedy, Alexander Michie and Robert Michie (3 of the founders of the Archaeological Society). Another example is a portrait of Thomas Brown. He designed the decorations and paintings for the centenary Burns night in the Commercial Inn and spoke there on ‘Burns the Pioneer’. He is also credited with bringing the ‘nosey wundis’ to Hawick, after he saw similar devices on a tour of the continent and built one for his house at 61 High Street. He married Elizabeth Purdom Borthwick, who died in 1908, aged 67. He is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. William Grant (b.1843) son of plumber James. He was a local naturalist, who noted species of insects, mosses etc. in the area around Hawick. His name was usually written ‘W. Grant’ (also formerly ‘Gutrie’ and ‘Guthery’).

Guthrie Drive (guth-ree-driv) n. road bracketing the north of Stiches, built in 1977 and named after Jimmie Guthrie.

the Guthrie Memorial (thu-guth-ree-mem-o-ree-ul) n. bronze statue in Wilton Lodge Park, erected by public subscription in 1939 to commemorate Jimmie Guthrie. The statue was sculpted by Thomas Clapperton. There is film of the unveiling ceremony. There is also a memorial on an S-bend of the A18 on the Isle of Man, where he retired from his last TT Race, usually called ‘Guthrie’s Memorial’. A further memorial in Germany, at the site of his fatal crash, is called ‘Guthrie’s Stone’.

Guthrie’s Close (guth-reez-klös) n. mid-19th century name for a passageway off the High Street, probably referring to Tannage Close, and named after the plumber and slater’s business of James Guthrie, which was at the west side (No. 61 High Street). This was later the site of A. & J. Guthrie Motor Engineers, the same family as motorbike champion Jimmy Guthrie.

The Gutterbludes (thu-gi’er-blidz) n. musical play about local characters written by J.E.D. Murray and Adam Grant, and subtitled ‘Hawick Callants Abroad and at Hame’. It was performed in the Town Hall on December 30th 1905, and January 1st–3rd 1906 and revived in 2000 and 2005 by the Two Rivers Theatre Company. The play is described as ‘A Drama of Hawick in 1835 in two acts and four scenes’, these being: ‘Teri Lodge’, a shanty (interior) in the Toronto forest; ‘The Haugh’ at Hawick Common-Riding; ‘Round the Ramparts’; and ‘The Auld Mid Raw’, Cow Jean’s lodging house. The play introduced the well-loved ‘Meda’s Song’ and ‘Clinty’s Song’, and also included ‘The Buccaneers’ (the Old Sailor’s Song), ‘The Funny Old Fellow’ (Maxwell’s Song), ‘D’ye think I’m an Irishman’ (Danny’s Song), ‘Oor Gutterblude’ (Cow Jean’s Oration) and ‘Westward Ho!’ The script is one of only 2 of Jed Murray’s plays to survive. It was preserved by his son Melgund, given to Jim Peacock, and then a new production organised by Jean Wintropem in 2000, with incidental music and some new pieces arranged by Ian Seely (also spelled ‘The Gutterbluids’ etc.).

guttie (gu’-ee) n. a paunchy person, adj. corpulent, pot-bellied – ‘The auldest was a gutty blade, A thriving Grocer to his trade’ [RDW] (also written ‘gutty’).

Guttriehaa (gu-tree-haw) n. near Hawick??.

Guy (gI) n. George (20th C.) bandmaster of the Saxhorn Band. In 1935 he arranged several Hawick songs for the band, including ‘The Border Queen’ and the polka from ‘The Witch o’ the Wisp Hill’. Many Hawick songs are included in his ‘Memoirs of Hawick’ brass arrangement, with the tunes being faithful to the versions published by Adam Grant, with some additional thematic material added.

Guyslands (gliz-lundz) n. former name for Orchard. It occurs as ‘Gilisland’ (possibly in error) in a list of lands within the Barony of Cavers in 1509/10 (referring to charters from the time of King David) and is ‘Gyislandis’ in a charter for Douglas of Cavers in 1511. Variants of the name occur until the late 17th century and it was still in the Barony of Cavers when inherited by Sir William Douglas in 1687 (it is possible these lands were related to ‘Guy de Dennum’; it is transcribed ‘Gaeslands’ in 1687 and wrongly as ‘Embslands’ in 1698).

g’way (gu-wä) contr., arch. go away – ‘G’way ee greet gogglin’ gowk, ee’r Mr. Spunk eersel!’ [JEDM], ‘Gae’way! g’way = go away!’ [ECS] (see also gae’-way and ‘way).

gypsies (jip-seez) n., pl. people living a nomadic lifestyle, who originally came from northern India around the 14th century and are spread around the world in small groups, maintaining the Romany language and some elements of their traditional culture. Also called ‘travelling people’, ‘tinkers’, etc., although sometimes a distinction is made between genuine gypsies and travellers of more recent Irish origin. Local gypsy families include the Blyths, Douglases and Youngs, and they are recorded as settling in the Yetholm area since the 16th century. The Yetholm royal family was the Faas, with one of the earliest being Johnne Faa, then King Patrick Faa and Queen
Jean Gordon being well known in the 17th century, and the last of the family being Queen Esther Faa Blyth who died in 1883. They also traditionally gathered at St. Boswells Fair and other local fairs. There has long been animosity against them, e.g. there was an order in 1573 that all 'vagabound and counterfaitit people calland thame selfis Egyptianians' were to be banished from the Borders. Ashkirk Session ordained in 1643 that 'no person shall reset any Egyptians, and if they insist on staying, then to come and tell the Minister, and he, with the assistance of the gentleman that he shall choose, shall go and out them out of the Parish'. In the years following the Act of Parliament of 1609 there were several groups (mostly of the name Faa) who were found guilty of being 'Egyptianians' and hanged in Edinburgh. In 1674 William Hall and his family were banished from Hawick for attacking the Bailie and for being 'vagabond Egyptians'. In Jedburgh in 1704 11 men were found guilty of being 'Egyptians' and transported to America, while a woman was scourged through the town and then nailed to a post by her ear for half an hour. In Hawick they have been regular visitors for centuries, often setting up on the Haugh. Some of their words have entered into the Borders vocabulary. There was a large battle between groups from Lochmaben and Yetholm at Hawick Winter Fair in the early 18th century (as recounted by Robert Wilson).

It apparently started over possession of a young lady, and was finally broken up by the Burgh officers. 2 of the combatants died of their wounds while several others were put in the stocks or sent to Jedburgh Jail – ‘…The Gypsies frae Yetholm then topped up the lot Bie chucken some Hindi words intae the pot’ [WaE] (the name derives from a romantic notion that they originated in Egypt).

Hab o Hawick (hwb-o-hIk) n. nickname for Robert Oliver, as dramatised by Capt. Erskine of Dryburgh in 1829 in the play ‘James V; or, hack

the Warlike Days of Hab o' Hawick', published in 1830 by John Anderson, Edinburgh. The basic story was first set out in Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick'. Erskine's version is a fanciful one, with Hab being rich and daring. An old chair in the Museum is said to have belonged to Hab – 'Tell your master that here sits Hab o' Hawick at his ain fireside and a fig for King James and a' his kin!' [RW], 'Hab, honest man! how oft thy feet Hae paced me o'er frae Silver Street' [AD], 'There's Drumlanrig first av'a Jamie Thamson ('Auld Mid Raw'), Balbirnie, Inglis, Hogg an' a', Hab o' Hawick' [TK].

Haddon (haw-dun) n. village to the east of Sprouston and Kelso, in the extreme north-east of Roxburghshire. The Elliots of Wells held the Barony from at least 1729, and it was later part of the possessions of the Elliots of Stobs, then the Elliots of Wells. Hadden Rigg, the site of a 1542 battle of the Scots and the English is adjacent (also written 'Haddon'), the origin of the name is probably the Old English 'haga dun', meaning 'the hill with the fenced enclosure', and hence it has something in common with Hawick; the name is first recorded as 'Hawedun' around 1200.

Haddon (haw-dun) n. Bernard (12th/13th C.) nephew of Bernard, who was son of Brian, Lord of Hadden. He made grants to Soutra Hospital and Kelso Abbey in the late 1100s. He is recorded as Sheriff of Roxburgh in about 1203 (as 'Bernardo de Hawedane') and again in 1227/8. In 1223/4 he is recorded being allowed to commute his responsibilities as ward of Roxburgh Castle, and John Maxwell was listed as Sheriff at that time. In 1246 a perambulation of knights from both sides of the Border was arranged for the disputed lands between him and the canons of Carham. He had a son, also Bernard.

Hadden Rigg (haw-dun-rig) n. site near Kelso of a battle in 1542, where the Scottish forces of the Earl of Huntly routed those of Sir Robert Bowes and the Earl of Angus (also spelled 'Haddon' and 'Rig').
due to marry Robert Howison, the banns having even been read. Their marriage was an irregular one in 1772, the coupled being rebuked by the Hawick Kirk Session and later by the Selkirk Session. He was also rebuked for having a child with Helen Hunter from Philiphaugh Mill. He lived with Christian Ruecastle in Selkirk, then Edinburgh (where their sons John and Andrew were baptised in 1784 and 1785, respectively) and finally Paisley (where they had an unnamed daughter). Their children who were baptised in Selkirk were: Betty (b.1772); Betty (again, b.1773); James (b.1775); James (again, b.1778); Walter (b.1780), who returned to Hawick and married Agnes Goodfellow, niece of the Bailie; Margaret (b.1782); and Henry (b.1783). His grandfather may be the Andrew (1818–94) son of Walter and Agnes Goodfellow. He was a manufacturer and farmer of the 19th century. In 1841 he was recorded on the Back Row. He started with a stocking shop up the Loan, but moved his family to Honeyburn in 1848 (where several generations of the family subsequently stayed). In 1861 he was farmer of 205 acres there, and employed 9 labourers. He became a Councillor and Bailie in Hawick (being on the ‘Eternal Cooncil’) and served on the first Roxburghshire County Council, where he was known for only speaking English when forced to! In later life he became a farmer at Honeyburn. He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1857. He married Anne, daughter of John White the manufacturer. Their children included: Walter (b.1841); Isabella; John; Agnes G.; Ann (or Annie), who married Rev. Robert Borland; and Andrew (b.1863), who was Cornet in 1891. He may be the ‘John Hadden’ listed in 1852 as a farmer in Denholm. Andrew Douglas ‘Douglas’ (1886–1952) son of Walter and brother of Ross, he was a partner in the family law firm. He became Cornet in 1910, and was heavily involved with the Callants’ Club, being President in 1928, and Treasurer and Secretary for about 40 years. He married Jane Martin and their children included Walter Andrew, Jean Douglas and Agnes. Andrew, O.B.E. (1904–93) son of Andrew and May Laing Brown. He was farmer at Honeyburn and also a solicitor. He moved his firm, Andrew Haddon to 3 Oliver Place and went into partnership with David Crowe as Andrew Haddon & Crowe, solicitors. He was Burgh Prosecutor for Hawick prior to Reorganisation in 1974, was a member of the first Borders Regional Council, was involved with local Liberal election campaigns and was awarded the O.B.E. for political and public service. He was also involved (with his father Andrew) in Teviotdale Dairy and the Milk Marketing Board and was an elder in Denholm Kirk. He married Dorothy Blanche Hall. Dr. David Alexander Ross ‘Ross’ (1890–1978) son of Walter and brother of Douglas, he was a long time doctor in Hawick at 19 Buccleuch Street. He was born in Hawick and educated at Fettes and Edinburgh University, graduating in 1913 and gaining his M.D. in 1919. In WWI he went to France with the 9th Royal Scots, being wounded and becoming Regimental Medical Officer. He later served with the 19th Field Ambulance and 14th General Hospital and was awarded the Military Cross. Back in Hawick, he went into partnership with Dr. Barrie and continued in that practice for 46 years. He travelled far and wide to visit his patients, in the early days by motorbike. He was involved with ex-servicemen’s associations and the Red Cross and served as police surgeon and doctor to local factories. He was a member of the Borders Hospital Board for 19 years and took a keen interest in the Hawick Cottage Hospital. He had a son and 3 daughters. James (1719–45) son of Andrew, he was a fleshers in Selkirk. He and his mother Janet Turner were involved in a dispute in Selkirk in 1737, the fleshers were accused of trying to break him out of jail and he was also accused of fighting with others near the churchyard. He married Margaret Hall and their children included: Helen (b.1741); Andrew (b.1742), who married Christian Ruecastle from Hawick; and Janet (b.1745). His widow later married John Dunn and ran the County Hotel in Selkirk. Janet (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick. In 1706 she was one of the people (presumably living near St. Mary’s) who were disturbed.
Haddon an Turnbull

at night by a group who were involved in drunken revelry. They delivered to her house a cripple that they had picked up from another house. John (19th C.) farmer in Cavers or Minto Parishes. He is recorded in a directory of 1852, with his surname given as ‘Hadden’. Dr. John (1845–1920s) doctor from Denholm, son of Andrew and brother of Walter and Andrew. He was born in the West End and educated at Minto school and Edinburgh University, where he was not allowed to graduate as an M.A because he was too young, so he went on to win most of the prizes in medicine. He practised for many years as a dietician in Manchester. He also travelled the world, some of his journals being published in the Hawick News. He lived for a while in Canonbie (the house now being a hotel). He became known as an eccentric, with peculiar views on diet, such as suggesting that patients cut out their favourite foods and go on 24 hour fasts. He even suggested that a man could live on 2 gooseberries a day (but this may have been a joke)! He had the Text House built for him on Main Street in Denholm. He also bought up some properties and left them to be let rent-free to elderly residents of the village. Marjorie (1905–95) daughter of Andrew and sister of Andrew. She won the Medway Challenge Cup (Cornet’s Race) riding ‘Rufus’ on Common Riding Saturday 1927, being possibly the first lady rider seen on Hawick racecourse. She was Cornet’s Lass in 1926 and married Donald Laing of Balcary. Walter (1780–1826) son of Andrew from Selkirk and father of Andrew. He was one of the early manufacturers in Hawick, his stocking-shop being where the Baptist Church was later located. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He was also a skilled cabinet-maker and was apparently killed while felling a tree. He married Agnes (b.1784), daughter of wright John Goodfellow. It is said that her family did not approve of him and she was sent to Manchester for a couple of years, but married him on her return. They had one son, Andrew (b.1818), who carried on with a stocking-shop on the Fore Raw, but became tenant of Honeyburn in 1848. His wife Agnes gave up the stocking-shop in 1855, when the property became the West Port Mission; she also kept house for their grandson Walter. He was killed by a falling tree. Walter (18th/19th C.) grocer and spirit dealer on the Fore Row, recorded on Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. His house is marked on Wood’s 1824 map, near the top left side of Drumlanrig Square. Walter (1841–1907) solicitor and banker. Born in the West-End, his father was Andrew of Honeyburn and his brothers were John and Andrew. He attended Minto School along with J.A.H. Murray. He apprenticed with Thomas Purdom, received further legal training in Edinburgh and returned to Hawick in 1864. He worked for the partnership Kirk & Haddon, with the partnership of Haddon & Turnbull (with Thomas Turnbull) starting in 1880. In his early days, his grandmother Agnes (nee Goodfellow) kept house for him. He acted as Police Treasurer and Collector for the Burgh from 1864 until his death. He was also agent for the Royal Bank of Scotland and associated with Kirkton and Lilliesleaf School Boards. He was Secretary of Hawick Working Men’s Building & Investment Co. from 1878. In addition he acted as clerk or secretary for a large number of other local concerns, including the Exchange Buildings and the Upper Teviotdale Fisheries Association, and also as factor of Cavers estate. He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1880. He was assessor for Hawick for a number of years, and Sheriff-Clerk Depute until about 1895. He was a member of the Hawick District Committee of Roxburgh County Council, and of Cavers Parish Council, a Director of Teviotdale Dairy Company and a member of the Border Mounted Rifles. He was an enthusiastic Common Riding supporter and Acting Father for J.E.D. Murray in 1890. In politics he was a Liberal Unionist. He married a daughter of Provost Ross of Dingwall. He built the house at Colisdunn and also acquired the estate of Firth near Lilliesleaf. His son Douglas continued the family legal tradition, while Ross was a long-time doctor in Hawick (formerly written ‘Hadden’, ‘Haddin’, ‘Hadon’ and ‘Haldon’).

Hadrian’s Waa (hā-dree-inz-waw) n. Hadrian’s Wall, ordered to be built by Roman Emperor Hadrian in the year 122, taking 6 years to complete. It snakes its way across England from the Tyne to the Solway, with many forts, temples and now museums along the way. It is 73 miles long and was up to 5 metres high, although only a few good sections remain. Colloquially it is used as a way of referring to the Border, although in fact is far south of the modern boundary. Nevertheless, its existence probably had a lasting influence on Border history.

hag see hagg

hag (hawg) v., poet. to chop wood – ‘Our banes ar skatteret at the mooth o’ the graffe, as whan aegs an’ cleeves wud apon the yirth’ [HSR].

Hagawic (ha-ga-wik) n. possible original name for Hawick, being the Old English for ‘hedged town’ – ‘...Naught but a hamlet amongst the hills. ‘Haga-wic’ was its name in that day’ [JWTH].

hag-berry (hawg-be-ree) n., arch. the fruit of the bird-cherry, Prunus padus (also hackberry).

Hagburn (hawg-burn) n. a deep wooded glen on the western slopes of Ruberslaw, one of the places where Covenanting ministers are said to have preached in secret. Robert Tait was tenant at a farmstead there in 1684, when he was declared as a fugitive for attending conventicles. Denholm Dean effectively rises near here. There is a place of the same name in Melrose Parish.

hagbut (hawg-butt) n., arch. a harquebus, an early, long-barrelled hand-gun, with the but bent down to help in taking aim, also a soldier armed with such a weapon – ‘Gae fetch, gae fetch my hagbutts five’, With flashing eye he said ...’ [JTe], ‘...put a number of Hagbutts (men armed with hand guns) into Hawick’ [RM].

hagg (hawg) n., arch. a hedge, a ledge of turf or earth overhanging the side of a stream, a turf-clad projecting river bank – ‘Few could wend their way along the brack haggs of the Teviot as well as he (Blinnd Wull)’ [RM], ‘Where the hounds run troopin is a tired fox stooping By the haggs at her water’s edge; When the dew lies soaking, there’s a brown toad croaking To her song in the marshy sedge’ [WL], ‘Thinks I, ‘The troots maun leeve on air, That haunt the hags up Eskdalemuir’ Fishers? – hech’ [DH], a piece of soft bog, quagmire – ‘...and boggy ground... The Hag is computed to be at least eight...rood in circumference...’ [GT], ‘On Cauldcleugh’s wild hags roun’ the coome o’ the steep’ [HSR], ‘With staff on high, he waves an arch adieu, Clears a peat-rood in circumference...’ [WP], ‘The Thieves Road, and a route owre the hags o’ The Roan Scarit in wi’ a pencil’ [DH] (also spelled ‘hag’; cf. haggie and brae-hag).

Haggawick (haw-gaw-wik) n. possible early Saxon name for Hawick, meaning ‘settlement hedged around with hills’ (see also Hagawie).

haggie (haw-gee) n., arch. a small hagg – ‘...And wondered wha my bouk wad find, Deep laired within some mossy haggie’ [JT].

Haggie (haw-gee) n. William (16th C.) recorded in 1581 as ‘Willehmu Nag hatoryus publicus’ when he wrote a ‘letter of slains’ in Hawick. This was for Robert and James Scott, forgiving a group of other Scots from Allanhaugh and Over Southfield in the murder of their brother George. He was probably a cleric of Glasgow, and may have been a minister at one of the local churches. It is possible that his surname was ‘Haig’ or ‘Heggie’.

Haggiehaugh (haw-gee-hawch) n. former farmstead in the Liddel valley, just north of the present Larriston farm. It was known in earlier times as Larriston Rig. Charles Edward Stewart’s marched this way in 1745, and he spent the night there. John Oliver paid tax on 38 windows there in 1748 (suggesting that at that time the name was used for the main farmhouse of Larriston). The lands were purchased in 1790 by Maj.-Gen. William Elliot from William Oliver of Dinlabyre for £1,900 sterling, and joined to those of Larriston. Elliot had 6 horses there according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. James Rutherford was there in 1801. The 1811 Land Tax Rolls lists ‘Lariston-rig, now called Haggiehaugh’ among the properties of George Scott-Elliot of Larriston (marked on Stobie’s 1770 map as ‘Haggiehaugh’; it is ‘Haggishaa’ and ‘Haggyhaugh’ in 1797 and 1821; not to be confused with Haggishaa).

haggis (haw-gees, -gis) n. a traditional Scottish winter dish. Hawick butcher Lindsay Grieve was the 1992 Scottish Champion haggis maker – ‘A good fat haggies, if purse can spare it; If not, he’s forced to be content, And to observe an annual lent’ [JR], ‘An’ that’s as true as I’m a Scot, A redshank, Norland haggis eater’ [JoHa], ‘Last thocht o’a haggis (glow’in a’ roond, while bein’ ‘addressed’ at a Burns Supper’) [DH] (also written ‘haggies’).

Haggishaa (haw-gees-haw) n. area around the foot of the Vertish Hill, also known as Burnflat, being the edge of the Common. The Common Riding cavalcade used to ride this way, up until 1803, when the Cornet was thrown from his horse and injured, recovering in a house there. Until 1991 there was a row of dilapidated cottages here, one being the birthplace of ‘Old Mortality’. They were demolished following a fire. The same area was fancifully said to be home of a Michael Paiterson, who entertained the local priests to dinner twice a year, on one occasion the haggis being so large that its skewer pin was used to mend the Corn Mill, inspiring Robert Burns lines ‘Your pin wad help ti mend a mill In time o’ need’ (R.E. Scott wrote about this in the Burns Chronicle of 1964). Walter Scott of Haggishaugh was recorded as owner of part of Burnflat in about 1874 – At the Haggisha’ we rank up, Weaver Will’s auld bonnet clank up’ [AB] (there are several spellings, including ‘Hangmanshaa’; it appears to be ‘Hagushall’ on Stobie’s 1770 map; the name probably derives from Old English or Old Scots for ‘a copse of bushes’, although more fanciful origins, sometimes involving haggis, have also been suggested; note that ‘Haggiehaugh’ was an old name for Larriston in Liddesdale).

Haggishaa Brae (haw-gees-haw-brä) n. name formerly given to Burnflat Brae. In former times it was when the Procession reached here that the Riding of the Marches really began.

Haichwik (hāch-wik) n. transcription of ‘Hawick’ from a charter of 1494 relating to Teindside and Harwood.

haick (hāk, hāk) n. a garment worn in Morocco, consisting of a large piece of cotton, wool or silk cloth (a variant of ‘haik’, not to be confused with a town in the Borders).

Haick (hāk) n. another former spelling for Hawick (recorded as such in a Church of Scotland register of 1586, on Pont’s manuscript of the 1590s, Robert Gordon’s map of the Clyde and Tweed basins, c. 1636–52, Blaeu’s map of 1654 and Nicolaes Visscher’s map of 1689; following Pont it is often written ‘Ha¨ıck’.

haiflin (haif-lin) n., poet. a halfling, stripling, young lad – ‘When lowsed at een be it hairst or plooin’, The thought o’ the haiflin turns to wooin’”[WL] (also hauflin).

Haig (hag) n. Adam (17th C.) tenant in Belses. His wife was Isobel, heir of James Riddell, portioner of Lilliesleaf. Andrew (17th C.) listed as ‘cottar’ at Abbotrule Townhead in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Anthony (17th/18th C.) resident of Maxton Parish. In 1706 he was recorded as ‘sevitour to Mr Edgar minister of Maxton’. In 1706 he was acting as a bailiff for the deed, or was the resident of Hawick who married Margaret Brown and they had a son John. David. He could be the stockingmaker Anthony whose son Thomas died in 1819. He is probably the resident of Hawick who married Margaret Gibson in 1759 and had children including: Janet (b.1761); David (b.1763); William (b.1765); Margaret (b.1766); Jane (b.1767); Isobel (b.1770); David (again, b.1772); Janet (again, b.1774); and Margaret (b.1776). All these children were baptised in Hawick, but the 1770 one was also recorded in Wilton, with witnesses William Simpson and Gavin Wallace. The 1772 witnesses were David Haig (his father) and John Brown (perhaps an uncle) and the 1774 witnesses were the whole congregation. Anthony (b.1812/3) provision merchant on the High Street, at about No. 17 in 1851. He was listed in Slater’s 1852 directory. He presented at least 3 papers to the Archaeological Society in its first few years, on topics like ‘Mediæval History’. His wife was Isabella and their children included Thomas, George, Anthony, Margaret, John, Charles and William. He moved to Philadelphia and in 1863 made a donation to the Museum, when he is described as ‘an old member of the Society’. Anthony (b.1823/4) weaver in Hawick. He was living at 52 Loan in 1861. His wife was Euphemia and they had a son John. David (18th C.) weaver in Hawick. He married Margaret Brown and their children included: Anthony (b.1736); Isobel (b.1738); Margaret (b.1741); and James (b.1744). The witnesses in 1741 were wright James Roger and baker John Kedie. He is probably the David who (along with John Brown) witnessed a baptism in 1772 for Anthony (probably his son). Earl

Douglas (1861–1928) soldier, born in Edinburgh. He worked his way through the ranks, seving in the Sudan, in the Boer War and in India. He was the youngest Major-General of his time and became Director of Military Training at the War Office in 1906. He established a general staff and a territorial army and organised the British Expeditionary Force. In WWI he commanded forces in France and Belgium, becoming Commander-in-Chief of the B.E.F. in December 1915. Although successful, his tactics at Somme and Passchendaele have been much debated. After his retirement in 1921 he devoted his efforts to the Royal British Legion. He was made Earl Haig in 1919 and given £100,000 by a ‘grateful nation’. He became Baron Haig in 1921. In Hawick he was made an Honorary Burgess in 1925 when he attended the Callants’ Club dinner. The Haig Maternity Hospital was named after him in 1930 and Douglas Haig Court in 1976. Bemersyde House near St. Boswells, was bought for him by the Government in 1921, and he was also given £100,000 by a ‘grateful public’. James (17th C.) recorded as ‘cottar’ at Hartshaugh according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. James (18th/19th C.) grocer and spirit dealer on the High Street, recorded on Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. His name is listed as ‘Haigh’. James (19th/20th C.) local sportsman who played scrum-half for the Greens, hockey at international level, was Scottish 10-mile champion 3 years in a row. In 1904 he was a member of the 4-man Scottish cycling team at the British Empire Championships. He worked as a painter and decorator. He was bugler for the Boy Scouts, seen in photographs of the 1910 visit by Beden-Powell. He may be the James born in Hawick in 1879. James (20th C.) Hawick man who executed the 1939–45 Roll of Honour for local soldiers who fell in WWII, displayed in the Museum. The design was the same as for the WWI Roll. He may be the same man as the painter and decorator. John (18th C.) recorded in a Hawick sasine of 1764 as ‘John Haig, in Whitfield, bailie in that part’. He may have been acting as a bailiff for the deed, or was a Hawick Baillie. Patrick (15th C.) part of a ‘re-tour of inquest’ held in Hawick in 1424 to decide on the inheritance of part of the Barony of Hownam. His name is recorded as ‘Hage’, and most of the other men were local lairds. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Christian Scott and their children included Anthony (b.1811), Charles (b.1814), Margaret (b.1816), John (b.1818), Christian (b.1820), Mary (b.1823), Thomas (b.1826), Walter (b.1828) and Jane (b.1832). William (16th C.) apparent name of the notary in 1582 for a sasine in Hawick, involving James Jack, preserved in the Walter Mason Collection. His surname is recorded as ‘Hagye’ (formerly ‘Hague’, ‘Haige’ and variants).

the Haig (θu-häɡ) n. Haig Maternity Home, attached to the Springbank Clinic on Princes Street, and built in 1930, through the generosity of Norman W. Grieve. It was developed by the Town Council and handed over to the County. The labour and public wards were on the ground floor, with the nursery on the first floor. It was officially renamed the Haig Maternity Hospital when taken over by the N.H.S. in 1948. It delivered about 12,000 babies in Hawick from 1931 until 1988 when the B.G.H. was opened. The last baby born there was Claire White. The buildings were sold off for private housing in the mid-1990s. A history of the Haig was written by Dr. Suttie in 1999 (also sometimes called ‘the Home’).

haigle (hā-gul) v., arch. to carry, haul, trudge, struggle forward – ‘Everly, whan A haiggle on alang streets chowky wui chuds o shairny stoor … ’[ECS], ‘Now ee must hev litten’t faa, nih! haiglin thae poaks an that nhibbie an umbrellih an thing’[ECS].

haigled (hā-guld) adj., pp. harassed, harried.

Haig Maternity Clinic (hā-g-mu-ter-n-i’-ee-kl-il-neek) n. another name for the Haig.

Haig Maternity Home (hā-g-mu-ter-n-i’-ee-hōm) n. original official name for the Haig, where most Teries were born from the 1930s to the 1980s.

the Haigs (θu-hāɡz) n. family that appeared in the Borders in the 12th century, being based at Bemersyde, near St. Boswells, from 1412. Claims of origins of the family going back to Pictish Kings are fantasy and their origins are Norman, like other Scottish feudal landowners. The local family died out in 1857, but Bemersyde estate was gifted to Field-Marshal Earl Haig by the nation, and is still held by his family (derived from the old English ‘haga’, which is probably the same root as in ‘Hawick’).

hain (hān) v., poet., arch. to preserve, protect, cherish, store – ‘My hun’gring heart will constant yearn For scenes that hain the past’[JEDM], ‘A hained that view an taen the guid o’d as lang’s yer’[JH], ‘Tam: What did ye hain Efter a life’s work For a maister’s gain?’[DH], ‘I made my hert a hedger’s glove Tae hain integrity, Nor tae the sma’ derk maister’s gain?’[DH], ‘But aye in hert o’ ilka chiel Is hained the neuk orly pass away’[JYH], ‘If we hain not our glorious heritage, if its mem’ry pass away . . . ’[JYH], ‘What were your arles, Tam: What did ye hain Efter a life’s work For a maister’s gain?’[DH], ‘I made my hert a hedger’s glove Tae hain integrity, Nor tae the sma’ derk thorns o’ love A moment’s thocht did gie’[DH], ‘But aye in hert o’ ilka chiel Is hained the neuk maist deair’[WL], to enclose a field to preserve it for pasture or hay, to use economically, take sparingly – ‘Hain the scones’[GW], ‘Hain eer shuin, bairns; leather’s deair’[GW], to spare oneself trouble – ‘Ee may hain eersel’ the trouble’[GW] (from Old Norse).

hainch (hānch) n., arch. the haunch – ‘Jist as the terror reached my hainch, I jumpit high an’ grabb’d d a brainch’[WP], a jerking throw of a stone, a limp in one’s walk, a leg-up (to a horse), a help-up with a heavy object, v. to throw a stone.
haincher
by swinging down the hand as far as the thigh, to walk with a limp.

haincher (hān-chur) n., arch. one who throws
a stone by ‘hainching’ – ‘Jock’s a guid haincher, but Tam’s a better hawker’ [GW] (see hainch).

hainchil (hān-chil) v., arch. to jerk the haunches, walk with a limp (also henchil).

the Hainin (thu-hān-in) n. the Haining, a house dating from 1794, in a walled estate on
Some of the decoration is by Archibald Elliot and the statuary by Canova. It served as a military headquarters during WWII, and partly burned down in 1944. The lakeside setting is impressive, and the grounds contain the site of Selkirk Castle on Peel Hill, as well as the stable block, former bear and wolf enclosures and the remains of a lectern-shaped dovecot. The estate was once granted to the Constable of Selkirk Castle. It was part of the Crown lands in Ettrick Forest from about 1456 until about 1507. It later became the home of a branch of the Scotts, said by Scott of Satchells to be descended from the Scotts of Hassendean. They held the lands from at least 1477.
Robert Scott of the Haining witnessed several local charters in the late 15th century. It appears to have been held by the Murrays of Philiphaugh (recorded in 1491), before passing back to the Scotts in 1492. Sheep were stolen from Robert Scott there in 1494/5. John Murray gave permission in about 1499 for John Scott (and his son John) to hold the lease. John Scott had a charter for the lands in 1507, when it was described as a land of 7 pounds and 2 shillings of old extent.
Thomas Scott of Haining held a sasine for the lands in 1538. Walter Scott was tenant there in 1541, paying £24 yearly. Andrew Riddell bought it from the Scotts in about 1625. John Lang-lands, minister of Wilton, had a sasine of lands there in 1664. In 1678 the lands were valued at about £2000. Early in the 18th century the estate was bought for the Pringles of Clifton. In 1785 the lands were valued at about £1440. In 1842 it passed to John Pringle’s sister, Margaret Vio-et, and her husband Archibald Pringle Douglas of Adderstone and Midshielis. The grounds once held exotic animals, including a bear and a large monkey; the monkey shivered in cold weather, leading to the local phrase ‘Clitterin’ to death, like the Hainin’ Puggy’ – ‘Ca’ up young Hob, of Gilmins cleugh, Oakwood, and the Bowhill, Brave Hartwood, and Middlestead, and Hainen’s valiant Will’ [WSB] (it is ‘Hanyng’ in 1456, ‘Hayning’ in 1464/5, ‘Hanyng’ in 1489, ‘Hanyng’ in 1494, ‘hanyng’ in 1494/5, ‘Hanyne’ in 1504, ‘Hanyng’ in 1507, ‘the Hanyng’ in 1526, ‘Haining’in 1531/2, ‘Hanyng’ in 1542 and 1564, ‘Haning’ in 1564, ‘Hayning’ in 1567, ‘Hanyeing’ in 1576/7, ‘Haning’ in 1585 and 1599, ‘Hayneing’ in 1646 and ‘hayneing’ in 1678; it is ‘Haning’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map; the name may derive from being the ‘hanit’ or enclosed part of the ancient forest).

Haining (hān-in) n. James (19th C.) proprietor of the Hawick Advertiser, taking over from James Dalgleish about 6 months after the newspaper started. He took Dalgleish back as a partner when he returned to Hawick in 1857, but bought him out in 1870 after disagreement about taking his son William Dalgleish into partnership.
He then sold the paper to William Morrison in 1876. His premises were at 9 High Street. He married Agnes Robson, and James H. was their son. A portrait exists of him. James Halliday (1870–1946) son of James and Agnes Robson. He was long involved with the Archaeological Society, he was Treasurer 1907–11, Assistant Secreta-tary 1917–18, Joint Secretary 1920–25 and 1929, Secretary 1930–35 and Vice-President 1936. He wrote many articles for the Transactions. His series of monumental inscriptions in Hawick’s cemeteries, with extensive notes, are an extraordinary achievement, leaving a huge legacy of local family history. He married Isabella Christina, daughter of coal merchant Thomas Rutherford.

hainit (hā-ni’, -ni’) pp., arch. preserved, set aside, protected by an enclosure, refrained – ‘...either in his nickbour’s corn, meadow, or haynit gers, sal pay for ilk hors or meir 40 shillings
...’ [BR1640], ‘Item, that na persone nor person-nis scheir medowis, balkis, or haynit gers thifteouslie ...’ [BR1640] ‘...lo, I haena hainet my lips, O Lord, thou kennis’ [HSR] also written ‘haynit’.

Hair (hār) n. Ralph (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1623 as being ‘in Wodburne’, which may have been the lands in the Borthwick valley. He was accused of stealing 17 sheep from George Chisholme of Woodburn, but was acquitted (also written ‘Haire’).

haim (hām) n., v. harm – ‘Did ee haim yer airm when ee heard the alairm?’ (cf. the more common herm).

hairo (hār-o) n., arch. a hero (cf. hyrra.

Haits Hill (hāts-hil) n. hill to the south of Cogsmill, reaching a height of 279 m. A field there is known as ‘the Haits’ or ‘Hates’.

haiver see haver

halbord (hal-burd, ber’) n. a pike fitted with an axe-head, a weapon consisting of an axe-head and steel spike, or other arrangement of several sharp edges, mounted on a long pole, used in the 15th and 16th centuries.

Those carried by the Burgh Officers at the Common Riding are traditionally said to be exact copies of those taken from the English at Hornshole; James Wilson in ‘Annals of Hawick’ states that there were people then living (around 1850) who claimed to have seen the original halberds. In 1908 the artist Tom Scott donated an old halberd head that he said belonged to Hawick – ‘Her line o’ males shall pass away Wi’ the halbert, brand and spear ...’ [T], ‘Paid Robert Tinlin for mending his halbard, ...0 0 6’ [BR1771], ‘...Hauberk and Halberd in gallant array’ [JT]. ‘When drum and fife went through the town On Common Riding morn, Wi’ deadly halberts in the van, By burgh beagles borne’ [??], ‘Here is the glitter of halbert, There the bright flash of a spear: Caught in the spell of the Border, Shades of her story appear’ [WL], ‘Stout tower and halberd and sword thwart the thieving invader ...’[IWS] (from Old French, also spelled ‘halbert’).

halberdier (hal-bur-deer) n. a soldier armed with a halberd, a guard carrying a halberd as a sign of his duty – ‘See how the Saxon plumes bob in the sky – Yeoman and carbineer, Billman and halberdier, Fierce is the foray, and far is the cry’ [ES], ‘The halberdiers wi’ buttons clear, Like sunbeams brightly glancin’’ [JT].

the Halberdier (thu-hal-burd-er) n. one of two official at the Common Riding who carry halberds. One of them delivers the Council’s invitation to the Cornet-elect, receiving a new shilling in return. They also perform other official duties during the Common Riding, such as reading the Proclamations and leading various processions, such as the Drums and Fifes on the Thursday night. It is unclear when halberdiers began to lead these processions, but there are records in the early 19th century, and by the end of the century the present traditions were well established. They were originally Burgh Officers, appointed by the Council along with the town drummer and piper (or fifer), and would lead the parades in front of the musicians. Earlier records suggest that they received payment for decorating their coats at Common Riding time. In 1712 cloth was ordered to make 4 coats ‘for the tuo officers, pyper, and Halberdiers

 HALBERDIER (hal-burd-eer) n. the men who have carried the halberds during the Common Riding generally perform the duty for many years, and in former times also served as town criers and policemen. Tracking them over the centuries is complicated by their changing roles, being sometimes ‘Burgh Officer’, ‘bellman’ or just ‘officer’. A partial list includes: ‘Jok Scott, bellman in Hawik’ in 1610; Walter Stewart and James Kinnaird in 1638; Wull ‘the Bellman’ Scott, late 1600s; John Stewart until about 1696; Alexander Scott from 1696; Alexander Young, at least 1696–1707; James Oliver, recorded in 1718; James Cowan, recorded in 1723; John Stewart, recorded in 1723 and around 1743; Francis Turnbull, from 1734 until at least 1767; ‘Wull Leppie’, early 1800s; Rob ‘the Naig’ Tinlin, until about 1815; Sandy Bryson, from at least 1815; Caleb Rutherford, 1820s; John ‘Tufty’ Wilson, 1830s; William Turnbull, 1820s to 1840s; Tom Wells, 1850s; Thomas ‘Tam-a-Linkin’ Turnbull till about 1860; James Smith, 1860s; Michael Wintrope, from 1860s; Fraser Richardson, late 1800s; Tom Cook, 1880s; Walter Lawson, 1880s; Missrs. Beattie and Harkness, around 1899; John Waldie, early 1900s; Robert Naylor 1928–57; Alec Dobbie 1929–58; Bill Allan 1958–84; ‘Dimmer’ Anderson 1959–2008; George Milligan 1985–96; Robert Payne 1997–2019; ‘Eck’ Barclay 2009–; Keith Douglas-Hogg 2020– (also called Burgh Officer).

Halbert Noble (hal-ber-no-bul) n. pseudonym used by a Newcastle poet. His 1861 poem ‘The Last Dandie Dinmont’ appeared at the end of David Anderson’s collection of his own poems.

Haldane (hawl-dän) n. James (18th C.) Hawick resident. His occupation in 1775 is ‘Stocking weaver’ (perhaps the first time this is recorded in the Hawick Parish Records). He married Helen Bryson in 1774. Their children included: Helen (b.1775); Ann (b.1778); and James (b.1781). The witnesses in 1775 were the present Bailie Andrew Scott and shoemaker John Scott. An unnamed child of his died in 1776. He is probably the ‘James Halden’ who is stated to have had 2 stocking frames in Hawick in an account of local industry written by David Loch in about 1777. James Alexander (1768–1851) younger brother of Robert, he had a naval career, but left to pursue an evangelical calling. Along with his brother and possibly John Aikman and Rowland Hill, he visited Hawick in 1798. It is said that they ‘preached from a heap of stones—the debris of the old Tower of Hawick’, which could have been the demolished Garrison at the bottom of the Howegate. The men they inspired in Hawick became known as ‘Haldanites’ and within a few years had started the congregation that met in the Tabernacle. James (b.c.1790) born at Chanelkirk, he was miller at Riddell Mill. In 1851 he was recorded as farmer of 60 acres, employing 2 labourers. He was listed as miller at Riddell Mill in Slater’s 1852 directory. His wife Helen was from Selkirk. His children included: William; James, corn merchant in Hawick; Helen; Euphemia; and Janet. James (1823/4–98) born at Standhill farm where his father worked before moving to Riddell Mill. He came to Hawick where he set up as a corn merchant at 4 Howegate, building up the business as the railway opened to Carlisle. He ran the farm at Sinton Parkhead for a while, while his nephew ran the business. Overall he ran his corn merchant’s for about 40 years. It is said he was a very strong man, who could carry a sack of oats under each arm, and once assisted the police by literally ‘lifting’ the culprit to the police station. He was an elder in Allars Kirk, a Liberal in politics and a keen bowler. In 1851 he married Isabella Aitken (who died in 1894, aged 60). Their children included James, Agnes (who married butcher John Davies), Isabella (who married Thomas Graham), Lizzie (who married Peter Rutherford, farmer of Clifton Hill), Jessie, Phemie, Ellen (who died aged 23), Annie Aitken (who died aged 22) and 2...
Johns (who both died young). He was buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. James (19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Isabella Laidlaw and their children included Agnes (b.1860) and William (b.1862). James (1857/8–1930) son of corn merchant James. He was a simpleton with a 'palley' arm, who assisted his father. He also used to regularly drop in on Robert Purdon, Town Clerk, until presented with a bill for his time! James (1840/1–1884) nephew of corn merchant James, he helped run the business. He married Elizabeth Jackson (who died in 1913, aged 75). Their children were Bella, Lizzie and Jane. John (16th C.) mentioned as one of those excepted in the 1564/5 bond between the Scotts and the Kerrs. His name is recorded as 'Johne Haldene of the Ilk'. In 1569 he was a surety along with Rutherfords, for Robert Ker of Lochtour. Also in 1569 he was among the lairds who signed a bond to keep peace on the Border. John (18th C.) mason of Galashiels, who possibly worked on the Slitrig Bridge and was made an Honorary Mason of Galashiels, who possibly worked on Edinburgh (also written 'Halden').

He helped fund the construction of the Tabernacle on the Kirk Wynd, officially opened in 1789, as sometimes stated) led to the formation of the Congregational and Baptist Kirks. The preaching meetings of him and his brother in Hawick in 1798 (and not 1789, as sometimes stated) led to the formation of the Independent Church and the later construction of the Tabernacle on the Kirk Wynd, this being effectively the seed for the later formation of the Congregational and Baptist Kirks. He helped fund the construction of the Tabernacle in Hawick and supported Mr. Paton, who was the first preacher of the new Hawick congregation. The first (and only) permanent minister of the Independent Kirk in Hawick, Charles Gray, was trained at the Haldane brothers' academy in Edinburgh (also written 'Halden').

Haldin (hal-din) pp., arch. held – ‘...of the said lands of Quhitchester to be haldin of the said William and his aieris in myn or thair defaltsis' [SB1470] (cf. the later hauden).

Hale (häl) adj., arch. whole, entire, complete – ‘...publicly whipped and scourged thro the haille toune ...’ [BR1697], ‘...and after that a stent to be made through the haille town ...’ [BR1644], ‘...in name and bahalfe of the haille toune and communitie thereof ...’ [BR1684], ‘...at the presence o’ the Lord o’ the haille virth’ [HSR], ‘But the bonniest lass o’ the hale ricmatic ...’ [WAP], ‘...if not the haille inhabitants of the burgh ...’ [RW], ‘And gin I’d to wale but the yin, free the hail slidderin’ heap ...’ [DH], healthy, unhurt, sound – ‘On till the derkeneen rowed its hap roon deed and dei-in, an gaard the lyyil yins devall an take a barley’ [ECS], adv., arch. wholly, completely – ‘And with this lade I’ve sprawl’d and foughten Hail ten lang mile’ [JoHa], n., arch. the whole, entirety – ‘Oo’ve gaen wui the whole o thon sheivs o bannih’ [ECS], v., arch. to heal, make whole – ‘Hælin’ a kinkind o’ ailment’ [HSR] (also spelled ‘hail’ and ‘haill’; cf. the rarer hyale and hyill).

Half Moon Yard. Previous to the existence of the Half Moon Hotel used to be, off the south side of the street, a gin of Colour Bussing of 1881. Although the inn is long gone, the adjacent passageway is still known as the Half Moon Yard. Previous to the existence of the hotel there was a pended house on the site (also written ‘Hauf’).

Half Moon Hotel (thu-hawf-moon-hotel) n. hotel and pub situated at 64 High Street, which held popular dances in its ballroom in the 19th century. Common Riding events were often held there. The ballroom was also regularly used for weddings and other events, and held the Episcopal school and church meetings from about 1847–50. In the early part of that century the hotel was known simply as ‘Mrs. Inglis’ and was a favoured place for factory workers to meet on Saturdays to have their pay distributed. It was taken over by Anthony Boiston, who changed the name. It is recorded as the Cornet’s headquarters, where the Flag was displayed from the Thursday night of 1875 and as the location for the more informal Colour Bussing of 1881. Although the inn is long gone, the adjacent passageway is still known as Half Moon Yard. Previous to the existence of the hotel there was a pended house on the site (also written ‘Hauf’).

Half Moon Yaard (hawf-moon-yärd) n. passageway off O’Connell Street, behind where the Half Moon Hotel used to be, off the south side of the street. There was a blacksmith’s there, which closed in the late 1950s.

Halfpenny (hawf-pe-nee) n. Cameron ‘Cam’ (1964– ) moved to Hawick from Glasgow with his parents at the age of 3. He attended Wilton and Hawick High Schools. He left Hawick in 1982 to attend college in Wales, later living in Australia and the Bahamas and returning to Scotland in 1994. He has lectured in social science and business research, developed curriculum and exam materials, contributed to research on dyslexia, and has written for BBC TV and Radio Scotland. He was also Poet in Residence for Queen of the South. In 2016 he wrote ‘A hlice’s Adventures in Wunderlant’, a translation of Lewis Carroll’s book into Borders dialect. Colin (1966/7–) younger brother of Graham and Davie, all of them being local football players. He played for Hawick United, Hawick Waverley, Hawick Royal Albert, Peebles Rovers, Selkirk and Coldstream. David ‘Davie’ (1963/4–) played football for Hawick Hotspur, Hawick Waverley and Hawick United. After recovering from a broken leg he played for Hawick Royal Albert, Peebles Rovers, Coldstream and Lauder. He was also managed of the Albert for 1/2 seasons. Graham (1960/1–) older brother of Davie and Colin. He played for Hawick Hotspur, Legion Rovers, the Waverley, Hawick Royal Albert, Hawick Legion and Hawick United. He was player-manager of the Albert at the age of 23. After 6 seasons there, he also managed at Selkirk and Coldstream.
Haliburton

Haliburton (ha-lee-bur’-in) n. Agnes ‘Nanny’ (18th C.) housemaid at Stobs in 1789 when she was working for Sir Francis Eliott. Andrew of Muirhouselaw (16th C.) son of John, whom he succeeded, his brother George dying before that. He is recorded in 1581 when he paid Walter in Ancrum for the lease of lands in Ancrum Spittal for 19 years. This included land on the ‘Westside of the hill callit Paynyleuchet’. His wife Helen Pringle also gave her consent to an annual rent of grain to Walter Haliburton. He married a daughter of John Pringle of Galashiels. They had 3 sons and a daughter Jean, who married Steven Douglas of Timpendean. Andrew (17th C.) resident of Hawick. His wife was Helen Brown and they had an unnamed son in 1670. Andrew, W.S. (1673–1738) 3rd son of Thomas of Newmains, Berwickshire. He served as factor to Scott of Harden in at least the years 1711–24. He was probably the Andrew, ‘writer in Edinburgh’ who acted for William Eliott of Harwood in at least the period 1705–08. In 1700 he married Marion, 2nd daughter of Robert Eliott of Midlem Mill. Probably the same writer Andrew witnessed a baptism in Hawick in 1741, suggesting that the death year of 1738 is incorrect. David of Mertoun (16th C.) son of William and younger brother of Walter. In 1504 he married Euphane, daughter of the Laird of Gledstains, and whose marriage required permission from the Cardinal on account of them being too closely related. He was assigned by his father the teind sheaves of Mertoun and all the tacks of the Abbacy of Dryburgh. He is listed in 1549 among the associates of Walter Ker of Cessford who were accused of helping the English in raids upon the farms of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme, including Goldielands and others near Hawick. He had sons Walter, Thomas, James, Archibald and Henry. George of Pinnacle (16th/17th C.) married Dorothy, who was probably a daughter of Gavin Elliott of Stobs. In 1608 his wife was one of the heirs of Stobs who complained about a raid by the Scotts of Northhouse and others. In 1617 he was among a list of Border Lairds denounced as rebels for not appearing before the Privy Council. This was because he had failed to pay Rev. Walter Scott of Castleton as assignee to Gilbert Elliott of Stobs. In 1619 he was among a group of more than 100 men under John Ker of Langnewton who Sir Andrew Ker of Oxnam complained had broken up and stolen turfs cut for his use on Oxnam Moor. In 1620 there was a complain against him by John of Muirhouselaw for not removing himself and his family from Pinnacle; his wife ‘Dorathie Ellote’ and their sons George, John and Robert, are also mentioned. He is probably the George referred to as ‘called of Pendicle’ in 1621 when, along with his son George, John Ker of Langnewton and others, they were accused of attacking John of Muirhouselaw and associates; despite having the same surname, he appears to have been feuding with the Haliburtons of Muirhouselaw. Along with some of his associates he was declared a rebel in 1621. George (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Agnes Gledstains and their children included Janet (b.1635) and Henry (b.1640). Walter (b.1642), with the mother’s name given as ‘Manie Gledstains’, was probably also his son. George (17th/18th C.) Burgess of Hawick, recorded in 1694 when he had to pay his Burgess fee, suggesting that he had just become a full member of one of the Trades. Probably the same George was a wright who married Margaret Scott. Their children included: Walter (b.1703); Benjamin (b.1704); and probably Mary (b.1701), Bessie (b.1707) and Henry (b.1708). The witnesses in 1704 were carrier Andrew Clerk and merchant Adam Turnbull. He may be the George who is recorded supplying liquor to Wells House in the second quarter of the 18th century. George (18th C.) local merchant who took possession of the lands of Dovemount in 1770 from Robert Langlands and subsequently sold off various parts. He is recorded at Dovemount in a baptismal record of 1780. He is listed as ‘George Hallyburton, Dovemount’ when he subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’, (1784). He could be the George whose house near Hawick Mill was severely damaged in the flood of 1767. In 1788 he is recorded as owner of ‘William Tudhope’s lands, purchased from Langlands’ in Wilton Parish, valued at £25; this is probably Dovemount. In the 1811 Land Tax records he is listed as owner of Dovemount (although he may have already been deceased), ‘acquired from Langlands’. Later in the 19th century the lands were owned by Thomas Laidlaw. He married Betty Wilson in in 1766 and their children included: Isobel (b.1767), baptised in Hawick; and Andrew (b.1771), James (b.1772), Robert (b.1774), Jean (b.1776), John (b.1778) and Thomas (b.1780), baptised in Wilton. The witnesses in 1780 were Dr. James Wilson and Bailie John Wilson (who were surely related to his wife). He is probably the George whose daughter Jean died in Hawick in 1797. George (18th/19th C.) farmer at Newton in Wilton Parish, recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Henry of Muirhouselaw (14th/15th C.) descendental of the Lords of Halyburton. In 1407 he was granted the lands of Muirhouselaw in Berwickshire by Archibald, Earl of Angus. His son married the heiress of Mertoun, so that his grandson William became the first Haliburton of Mertoun. Henry (17th C.) wright of Hawick, listed among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He is listed as ‘Hendrie Hallaburtone’, living on the west-side of Hawick on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He is probably the Henry who had a son Henry in Hawick in 1696. He may be the Henry who witnessed a baptism for John Beattie in Hawick Parish in 1676. Henry (18th C.) wright in Hawick, probably related to the earlier wright. He married Jean (or Janet) Deans and their children included: George (b.1740); George (again, b.1742); James (b.1744); Thomas (b.1747); and Henry (b.1759). The witnesses in 1742 were merchant John Cavers and baker Robert Scott and in 1747 were saddler Francis Ruecastle and carrier John Ruecastle. Henry (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Helen Henderson and was at Roughley in 1778 when their son John was baptised. They may also be the parents of Malie (b.1792), baptised in Roberton Parish. John of Muirhouselaw (17th C.) possibly son of Adam of Muirhouselaw. In 1617 he was among Border Lairds who renewed their bond for keeping the peace. In 1620 he complained that George of Pinnacle and his family were still at large despite a ‘horning’ for not removing themselves from his lands of Pinnacle. In 1621 there was a complaint that he was attacked at Pinnacle by supporters of Ker of Langnewton; his 2nd son ‘Mr’ Andrew and Robert Buckholm in Belses Mill are also mentioned. He was also later attacked along with his sons John, Andrew and George and his 'sister sone' was recorded being the Laird of Fairnington. He also complained to the Privy Council that the men who attacked him were still at large. He held lands in the Baronlyes of Belses and Pinnacle according to the tax roll for the Abbacy of Jedburgh in 1626. He was probably the Laird of ‘Morislaw’ who represented Roxburghshire in Parliament in 1625. He may be the same John who was on the ‘retour’ for Ker of Cessford in 1600, and who had a charter for Friarshall in 1606. He was one of the minor barons of Roxburghshire convened to try to elect representatives to Parliament in 1628. He held lands in Maxton Parish in 1643. He may be the John of Muirhouselaw who married Margaret, daughter and heiress of David Boswell of Bowhill. His son John (b.1634) succeeded to Muirhouselaw, as well as to Bowhill. John (1634–1704) son of John and Margaret Boswell. He probably also held land at Belses. He married Jean (d.1703), daughter of Mark Pringle of Clifton and had sons John (who succeeded) and Patrick (who became Dean of Guild in Edinburgh). John (17th C.) resident of Minto Craigend who appears in the Hearth Tax records of 1694. He is listed as owner of 4 hearths along with William Cunningham, but it is unclear who they were or why they were listed together. It is possible he was the same John of Muirhouselaw. John (17th C.) tenant in Lilliesleaf Mill according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1717 he married Isobel Lermouth, who was from Selkirk. Their children included Margaret (b.1718). John of Howcleuch (d.1750s) doctor from Jedburgh. In 1714 he married Christian, daughter of Simon Elliot of Swinhoe, becoming Lord Howcleuch. He became Laird of Howcleuch and also owned Borthwick Mains, these perhaps being inherited through his wife. His son Simon became minister of Newcastleton. His daughter Margaret died in Hawick in 1798. He may have been sister of Mary, who married Gideon Elliot of Harwood-on-Teviot; he is probably the ‘Doctor Hallyburton’ who witnessed a baptism for Mary and her husband in Hawick in 1719. John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1767 he married Margaret.
Turnbull, who was also from Hawick. Nichol (16th C.) recorded in Pinnacle in 1581 when he witnessed a transaction between Walter in Ancrum and Andrew of Muirhouselaw. Rev. Simon (1720–1797) son of John, a doctor in Jedburgh, and Christian Elliot of Swinside. He was educated at Edinburgh University and licensed by the Presbytery of Dalkeith in 1745. In 1749 he was presented to Castleton Parish by the Duke of Buccleuch and became minister there in 1751. The delay was because of an objection by Sir Gilbert Elliot of Minto, one of the Lords of Session at the time, in part because he used notes while preaching. Regarding using notes, the Presbytery stated that ‘there was no law of the Church against that, and that it was practised by several ministers of the best character’. However, the objections appeared to run deeper than this, since he also had threatening letters sent to him and was insulted by a mob in Castleton, with 3 men and 1 woman imprisoned in Edinburgh for riotous conduct following the reading of his appointment; the congregation objected to having no say in the appointment of their minister and locked up the church and filled the lock with stones. Some of the members of his church left in 1751 to start a secession church (later to become the Newcastle United Presbyterian Church). He employed a preacher to help him in 1759 and later an assistant minister, John Campbell. In 1762 he was presented to Ashkirk Parish by Sir Gilbert Elliot, and ordained there in 1763, apparently to the great delight of the Castleton parishioners. There is no record of whether he was as popular at Ashkirk! However, he did have the new church built for him there in 1791. He inherited the lands of Howcleuch and Borthwick Mains from his father, but in 1755 sold them to Walter Scott, farmer at Commonside. In 1779 he was granted liferent of Headshaw (valued at £260) and the west and north-west parts of Shielshwood (valued at £149 14s 2d). This grant of lands was just so that he could be added to the Roxburghshire voters’ roll; in 1788 he was listed under ‘Votes of Sir Gilbert Elliot’ among the voters of Roxburghshire. He was recorded at Ashkirk in the 1785–91 Horse Tax Rolls. 1794/5 he was listed in the Carriage Tax Rolls. He held the superiority of part of Headshaw in life-rent. He was described as ‘simple-minded’ (by Rev. Russell of Ettrick). During his bachelor days his housekeeper was his sister Peggy. He became senile in his old age. He married Elizabeth, 2nd daughter of Robert Elliot of Midlem Mill (and probably widow of Charles Paterson of Drygrange) in 1749. Their children included: Katherine; John, who was a Captain with the East India Company, died in India and was the last male representative of the family of Newmains and Mertoun; and Robert and Thomas, who both died young. ‘Miss Halliburton sister to Mr. Haliburton Ashkirk’ whose death is recorded in Hawick in 1798, was his sister. He wrote a description of the Parish for Sinclair’s Statistical Account. Thomas of Muirhouselaw (1692–1716) son of John and grandson of John and Jean Pringle. In 1708 he married Elizabeth, 2nd daughter of George Rutherford of Fairnington. He was killed by his brother-in-law George Rutherford in a fight which flared up over a boundary dispute. His cousin George (Lord Provost of Edinburgh) married his widow and succeeded to Muirhouselaw. Thomas (18th/19th C.) carrier in Hawick. In 1791 he paid the cart tax in Hawick. He was owner of 2 work horses according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He may be the Thomas, whose father-in-law James Deans died in 1794. Thomas (18th/19th C.) helped compile a ‘New Valuation of Houses and Gardens in the Town of Hawick’ in 1814. He could be the Thomas, farmer at Tushielaw, who, along with James (also farmer there) was listed in the 1835 electoral roll as joint proprietor of a house in Hawick. He witnessed a bond between Turnbulls at Caerlenrig in 1505. Walter (16th C.) tenant in Ancrum. In 1581 he was son of the deceased Walter when he received payment from Andrew of Muirhouselaw for the lease of land in Ancrum Spittal and also land ‘on the the Westside of the hill callit Paynyelheucht or Downaldsknow’. This suggests an early version of ‘Penielheugh’ that is closer to the local pronunciation than the modern spelling would indicate. Several other Haliburtons acted as witnesses, namely George in Dryburgh, Nichol in Pinnacle and John in St. Boswell’s, as well as George Buckham at Belses Mill. Walter (17th/18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He is recorded at Borthwickbrae in 1714, Eilrig in 1718 and Philhope in 1721. In 1703 he married ‘Maly Eliot’ from Hawick Parish. Their children included: Margaret (b.1709); Andrew (b.1712); Isobel (b.1714); Mary (b.1718); and Janet (b.1721). William of Mertoun (15th C.) became the first Haliburton of Mertoun through his mother Isabelle de Mertoun. He had sons: Walter, who succeeded to Mertoun; David, who succeeded to...
Halliburton’s Wynd

Haliburton’s Wynd (ha-lee-bur’-in-z-wind) n. another name for Walter’s Wynd, in use in the 18th and perhaps 19th centuries.

Halidon Hill (ha-li-din-hil) n. battle in 1333, the site being about 2 miles north-west of Berwick. It followed Edward III deciding to take back the port from the Scots. The siege of Berwick lasted months, with Edwards men ravaging the Scottish Borders while they waited. To relieve the siege Lord Archibald Douglas finally led his forces to engage the English at Halidon Hill, the Scots becoming bogged down and being slaughtered by English archers. Part of the English force was commanded by Edward Baliol. The other Scots commanders were Robert Stewart (the future king) and John Randolph, 3rd Earl of Moray. English casualties were light, but the Scots lost thousands of men, including the Guardian, at least 5 other Earls and perhaps 90 knights. Sir Michael Scott of Rankilburn was one of the few local men who survived. It is said that the battle was proceeded by hand to hand combat involving Turnbull of Rule and Sir Robert Benhale, with Turnbull being slain. A block of stone was placed there in 1933 by the Berwickshire Naturalists’ Club.

haliness (ha-lee-nis) n., poet. holiness – ‘. . . worship the Lord in the beutie o’ haliness’ [HSR], ‘Sing untill the Lord, O ye saunts o’ his, an’ gie thanks at the remembreance o’ his haliniss’ [HSR] (also written ‘haliness’).

Halifax (haw-lee-fawks) n. type of British bomber that crashed near Craik village in 1944, killing all 8 crew members. A memorial plaque in Craik commemorates the event.

Halket (hal-ki’) n. John (c.1780–1828) studied at St. Andrews University 1794–8 and Edinburgh University 1801/2. He spent some time as a tutor in the family of George Douglas of Cavers. He was licensed by Jedburgh Presbytery and was minister at Coupar from 1807 until he died.

Hall (hal, haw) n. Agnes (18th C.) chambermaid at Cavers in 1785, when she was working for Capt. John Douglas. Agnes (b.1799/1800) widow of Thomas. She was a draper in Newcastle from at least 1837 until the 1860s. She had children George, Thomas and John. They lived at about 35 North Hermitage Street. Andrew (18th/19th C.) farmer recorded at Heap on both the 1797 Horse Tax and Dog Tax Rolls. He owned 8 horses, and so must have had a fair sized farm, and he also had a greyhound. He could be the Andrew, married to Betty Laidlaw, whose son Benjamin was baptised in Wilton in 1809. Andrew (b.1822/3) born in Edrom, he was a farmer at Horsleyhill. He is recorded there in 1861 as farmer of 395 acres, employing 10 people. His wife was Helen and their children included Anna and Margaret L. Andrew (19th/20th C.) son of Benjamin and Margaret Wilson, he was a tweed foreman. He married Mary, daughter of Robert Greenwood. Benjamin (b.1809/10) spinner at Nixon’s Mill. He was living at Lynwood in 1841 and 1851. He married Margaret, daughter of spinner Robert Wilson. Their children included Jessie, Betsy, Andrew, Isabel, Robert and Benjamin. Charles (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Ann Currer and their daughter Jane was baptised in 1759. In 1758 he hired the Hawick Parish mortcloth. David (17th C.) recorded as tenant of ‘Oldston’ in a 1609 rental roll of Jedforest. It is unclear precisely where this farm was, but probably near Roughlee. David (1826/7–86) from Batley in Yorkshire, he settled in Hawick in 1849 to work in the woollen trade. He became the best local cricket batsman, inspiring the game within Hawick. He helped as instructor for the Hawick team when it formed in 1849. His brother Joseph came to Hawick later. He worked as a woollen waste merchant for about 30 years. In Slater’s 1852 directory he is listed as a partner with Joseph as an earthenware and glass dealer, as well as rag dealers, on Backdamgate (incorrectly listed as ‘Hill’). The brothers were lodgers on the Cross Wynd in 1851, working as wool dealers, employing 4 women and 2 boys. He was at 15 Backdamgate in 1861 and later lived at Hopehill. He may be the David listed as owner of ‘Part of Roughlee in about 1874, acquired from Langlands’, which had been owned by Hector Blakie according to the 1811 Land Tax Rolls. He married Mary Day, who remarried George White of Dudley, and died in 1904, aged 72. Their children were Rowland Carr and Lucy (who married Dr. Adam Frederick Hunter Dryden and emigrated to the U.S.A.) as well as several children who did not survive past infancy. He is buried in Wellogate Cemetery. George (17th C.) Hawick resident. In 1679 he was convicted of ‘ane blood’ on Robert Scott, and ordered to pay him 5 shillings Scots per day on account that his arm was swollen and he could not reap. Rev. George (c.1680–1740) son of Robert and grandson of the famous Covenant-ter Henry of Haughhead. He graduated from Edinburgh University in 1699, became Chaplain to the Laird of Torsonce (near Stow), was licensed by the Presbytery of Earlston in 1706, and became Chaplain to Thomas, Earl of Haddington. He was ordained as minister of Abbotrule in 1714 and remained there until translated to Linton in 1728. He was also presented to Lochmaben in 1722, but appears not to have gone there. He preached in Hawick at least once, in 1721. He is recorded in 1726 along with Alexander Horsburgh of that Ilk in a bond with Robert Pringle, writer in Edinburgh. And in 1733 part of a debt to Alexander Horsburgh of that Ilk was repaid. But a court action by John Horsburgh of that Ilk followed in 1735, presumably to recover the rest of the loan. In 1716 in Edinburgh he married Emelia (d.1768), daughter of Andrew Duncan in Scone. Their children were Patrick, Gilbert and Jean (who married Colin Campbell in Edinburgh). He published ‘Practical Sermons on several subjects’ (1732). George (18th/19th C.) married Elizabeth Oliver in Hawick in 1792, both being from Hawick Parish. Their children included: Thomas (b.1793), said to have been a sailor in the American War of 1812; and Agnes (b.1800), who married Jacob Evans and died in Philadelphia in 1884. It is claimed in some genealogies that he was born in Duns in 1763, also had children John (b.1796) and George (b.1798), both born in Duns, and emigrated to Philadelphia, dying of yellow fever shortly afterwards; however, it seems possible that two completely different Georges are being conflated here. It seems reasonable to assume that his wife was daughter of John Oliver and Agnes Ekron (based on his daughter Agnes’ descendants in America having possession of Agnes Akron’s book of the catechism), but any connection to Halls from Duns is much less clear. George (b.1789/90) born in Northumberland, he was a sheep and cattle dealer in Hawick. He was listed as a Castleton drover in 1821 when he subscribed to William Scott’s ‘ Beauties of the Border’. He was on the Borders Union Railway Committee for Liddesdale in the 1850s. In 1841, 1851 and 1861 he was living at about 19 Douglas Square. His first wife was Sarah and he secondly married Christina, daughter of joiner John Douglas; she worked as an assistant post-mistress in Castletonon. His children included Helen and John. George (b.1821/2) from Jedburgh, he was shepherd at Ruletownhead in 1861. His wife was Elizabeth and their children included Andrew, Arcilla, Helen and James. George (1822/3–90) fish monger, game and poultry dealer in Hawick. His business at 40 High St. was established in 1866 and later moved to No. 66. In 1861 he was a forester at Bowmont Forest Cottages, and so must have moved to Hawick after that. His shop can be seen in a photograph of 1903, probably shortly after it moved to these new premises. He married Agnes Wright, and she died in Leeds in 1908, aged 83. His children included Cecilia, John, Betsy Briggs, Margaret, John Wright, Alison and Robert. He is buried at Oxnam. Gilbert (15th C.) witness to a sasine of 1469 for the lands of Wolfelee for Home of Wedderburn. Robert was listed before him and so presumably related. Gilbert (1771–1842) son of William and Isobel Best, he was born in Wilton Parish. He is recorded as ‘Ind.’ at Greensidehall Cottage in 1841. He was probably a retired farmer from that area. He married Agnes Robertson, who died at Ashkirk in 1835, aged 65. He died at Greensidehall and was buried in Old Wilton Cemetery. Henry of Haughhead (d.1680) son of Hobbie, he owned land on the Kale Water in Eckford Parish. He was known as a man of strong religious principles, leaving his local church in 1651 and attending Ancrum instead. He refused to accept Episcopacy and took refuge over the Border. As a Covenanting elder, the local meeting place for field conventicles was on his lands, and it was here that Richard Cameron obtained his license to preach. He was said to be a close friend of Ringan Oliver of Smailcleuchfoot. He was an officer in the forces at Drumclog and Bothwell Bridge. After this battle he escaped to the Netherlands, returning after a few months, but being involved in an altercation at South Queensferry, he received a serious headwound, was captured and died on the way to Edinburgh. He had a son Robert, whose son George was minister at Abbotrule. Isabella ‘Tibbie o Wigg’ (19th C.) married George Scott, shepherd at Hardlee and Hyndlee. One of her sons was Overhall farmer James. James (d.1570s) described as ‘in Wollie’ (presumably Wolfelee) when Will Robson ‘in Rrotchewmylne’ was charged with his murder. Robson failed to appear and so his surety, James Langlands of that Ilk, was ordered to pay 20 merks to his daughter Malie. James (16th C.) recorded as resident at Essenside when acting as a cautioner for William Scott in Burnfoot on Ale in 1581. James (16th C.) recorded in 1590 when accused by the English Warden of being part of a raid into England 3 years earlier. John Scott ‘the Tinkler’ led the group of what was claimed to be 500 men on a day-long foray. He had sons Jamie and Hob, who are listed with him in an accusation of 1590 for a raid on ‘Wartoun’. His son ‘Jamy Hall of Heavisyde, younger’ is recorded in another complaints of 1590. They may have been descended from William and David, who were recorded as tenants in Heavyside in 1494/5. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Burnmouth. In 1699 he was sent by the Castleton Session to Leith to obtain ‘twelve flagons of claret wine, and bring it for the sacrament’. James (1719/20–88) ‘dweller at Gatehaughscot’ according to his gravestone in Bedrule kirkyard. He married Agnes Thomson, who died in 1786, aged 71. Their son died in Bedrule in 1794, aged 32, and was married to Margaret McKenzie. James (18th/19th C.) recorded as a labourer at Foulbrae in 1800 when his son John was baptised in Cavers Parish. It is unclear where Foulbrae was. James (b.1819/20) born in Morebattle Parish, he was a shepherd at Fairloans in Bedrule Parish in 1861. He married Helen Hobkirk and their children included Margaret, Helen and James. Janet (b.1774/5) listed as ‘Ind.’ in the 1841 census at Exes Old Toll Bar. She was living with Mary, who was probably her daughter, and had other residents in the house, probably lodgers. In 1851 she was listed as a widow at the Old Tollbar. Jean (18th/19th C.) local character, brought up at Dodburn, she later lived at ‘the Yett’, near Hawick Moor. She had a reputation as a witch, with many stories told of her apparent powers. She was certainly an imposing woman, with masculine features, a hirple and a strong personality. John (15th C.) witness in 1436 to a sasine for the lands of Wolfelee and Wolfehopelee. The other men listed were all from relatively nearby, including Thomas, who was presumably related. John (16th C.) one of the King’s shepherds, who, along with John Hope, had sheep stolen from him by a group of Armstrongs and others in 1535. This was at ‘Braidlee in the Forest’, which was probably the farm in the Borthwick valley. The same 2 men were recorded in the Exchequer Rolls of 1540 in ‘Braidie and Filop’ when they were paid £6 13s 4d for 10 bolls of grain. John (16th C.) tenant of ‘Newbegyne’ who was witness in 1557 to the bond in which Turnbuls and others promised to bring William Nixon to Sir John Kerr of Ferniehirst. The others involved were from Rulewater and neighbouring areas, and so this was probably a local Newbegynning, but perhaps the one near Oxnam. He may be the same John ‘of Newbiging thelder’ listed first in 1544 among Halls who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. John ‘Jock’ (16th C.) tenant of Sir Walter Scott of Howpasley in the lands of Outersideig in 1569. Sir Walter acted as cautioner for his tenants at a meeting in Hawick, assuring that they would obey the laws of the Lord Regent. John (17th C.) servant of Andrew Turnbull, who was tenant at Wolfelee Mill. In 1684 he appeared on a long list of men declared as fugitives for religious non-conformity. John (17th C.) resident at Greena in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. John (18th C.) shepherd at Carewoodrig. His wife Mary Elliot died in 1784 and is buried in Teviothead cemetery. He may have been son of Robert (d.1789), also buried there. John (18th C.) married Violet Laidlaw in Wilton Parish in 1773. Their children included Isabel (b.1775) and Violet (b.1777). John (b.1814/5) born in Hawick, he was a wool spinner. In 1861 he was living at 3 West Port (but he does not appear to have been in the Hawick area in 1841 or 1851). His cousin Annie Ekrion was also living with him in 1861 (although the relationship between them is not clear). He married Henrietta (or ‘Henny’) Hume in 1840; she was from Selkirk. John (b.1817/1) born in Morebattle, he was a shepherd at Spittal-on-Rule in 1851. His wife was Alison and their children included James. John (19th C.) from Hawick, he is recorded winning 2 leaping events at the 1835 Common Riding Games. Joseph (b.1829/30) from England, he was younger brother of David, and came to Hawick later. The pair set themselves up as woollen and rag dealers on Buckdamgate. In 1851 they were employing 4 women and 2 boys and they were listed as rag dealers in Slater’s 1852 directory. Kitty (18th/19th C.) originally from Northumberland, she lived at Fairloans near the head of the Kale. She recited for James Telfer (the poetic schoolmaster of Saughtree) a version of the ballad ‘The Death of Parcy Reed’, which he transcribed and presented to Sir Walter Scott and was published in ‘Local Historian’s Table Book’ in 1844. She said that ‘she never liked to sing the verses, as she knew them to be perfectly true, and consequently could not bear to think there had been, of her own surname, such wretches as the betrayers of Parcy Reed’. Malie (16th C.) only lawful daughter of James in Woolle. She was given 20 merks in compensation by James Langlands of that Ilk, when William Robson failed to appear to answer to the charge of murdering her father. Rev. Mercer (1855–1927) born in Galashiels, 5th son of builder John and Isabella Matthew. He attended St. Andrews and Edinburgh Universities and was licensed by Selkirk Presbytery. He became assistant at St. Mark’s in Dundee and was ordained minister at Careston, Forfarshire in 1886. The next year he was translated to Robertson Parish where he was minister until his death, although he was assisted by Æneas McInnes from 1894. Peter (1847–1928) printer and reporter, he was brother of Anthony, who modelled for the ‘Golden Boy’ on the dome of Edinburgh University’s Old College, and was a great athlete in his youth. He worked for a while for the Hawick Advertiser and later had a florist’s shop in Edinburgh. Robert (15th C.) witness to the 1469 and 1479 sasines for Wolfelee. Gilbert was listed after him in 1469 and probably a close relative. Robert ‘Hob’ (16th C.) tenant of the farms of Simon Elliot in Dod Burn, listed on a bond of security signed in Hawick in 1569. Robert (1692/3–1789) probably shepherd at Carewoodrig, where he died. He was recorded in Priesthaugh in 1724 when he married Janet Scott, who died at Linhope in 1738. Their children (mostly baptised in Cavers) probably included: Margaret (b.1725); John (b.1727), probably shepherd at Carewoodrig; an unnamed child (b.1729), baptised in Hawick; and Mary (b.1731). He lived to the age of 96. Robert (18th C.) recorded as ‘Robt. Ha, Dodburn’ in 1771 when he paid the Hawick Council for 3000 divots (presumably from Hawick Common). Along with several other neighbouring farmers he paid a penny per 50 divots. Robert (18th/19th C.) farmer at West Mains (in Cavers Parish), recorded on the 1794 and 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He was owner of 7 farm horses and 1 saddle horse in 1797. Robert (19th C.) saddler at 6 High Street along with Thomas, probably in about the 1870s. George Davies took over the business from him. Robert (19th/20th C.) son of Benjamin and Margaret Wilson. He was foreman at William Laidlaw & Son’s. Thomas (15th C.) recorded as ‘Thome de Hall’ in 1436 when he witnessed a sasine for the lands of Wolfelee and Wolfehopelee. John is also listed, and so probably related. The other men listed were all from relatively nearby. Thomas (15th/16th C.) recorded as ‘Thomas Haw’ when he was on the panel which met at Cavers to decide on inheritance of certain Elliot lands in 1497/8. Thomas of Thorlieshope (18th C.) recorded as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1761. It is unclear how long he held the lands of Thorlieshope or where he was from. Thomas (18th C.) farmer at High Tofts in Kirkton Parish according to the 1794 Horse Tax Rolls. Thomas (18th/19th C.) farmer at Silverbuthall, according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Thomas (d.1837) Newcastle linen and woollen draper and spirit dealer listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. He may be the same Thomas, resident of Newcastle, who was recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax rolls. He married Agnes Inglis, who died in 1865, aged 65. His widow was a draper on North Hermitage Street from at least 1841 until the 1860s. His children included George, Thomas and John. Thomas (b.1793) son of George and Elizabeth Oliver, he was born in Hawick. It is said that he was emigrated to America, became a sailor, was captured by the British in the War of 1812 and died in Dartmoor Prison. Thomas (b.1799/1800) carter in Denholm from at least 1841. In 1851 he was listed as a coal agent, living at Hassendean Station House, and in 1861 was a carter somewhere near Leyden Road in Denholm. His wife was Isabella, from Kirkton Parish. He had daughter Jane (or ‘Jeany’) and Helen. Thomas (19th C.) Precentor in Cavers Parish Kirk. He also ran a singing class associated with the Kirk. In 1893, when the organ was installed, he was presented with a marble clock for his many years of service and was organist for several years afterwards. Walter (17th/18th C.) from Jedburgh, he married Agnes Easton in Wilton in 1713. His wife was from Heap, daughter of William Easton. Walter (1778–1863) warehouseman of Brougham Place who was one of the founders of the Relief (Allars) Kirk. In 1841 he was recorded at about 13 Brougham Place, living with his wife Agnes and children Mary and Ann. William (16th C.) recorded in 1549 as ‘Williame Haw’ when he was a resident of Whames and listed among the men complaining about their farms being ravaged in the previous year by a group of Englishmen, assisted by Kers and others. William (17th C.) recorded in Hawick in 1674 when he and his family were banished from the Town for running at the Bailie with a sword and threatening to shoot him, ‘and because they are vagabond Egyptians’. He could be the William who married Janet Aitchison and whose children baptised in Hawick included Bessie (b.1652), John (b.1654) and James (b.1657). The witnesses in 1652 were William Briggs and Robert Ruecastle and in 1654 were David Beattie and William

Brown. William (17th/18th C.) married Helen Anderson in Kirkton Parish in 1709. William (b.1679/80) shepherd in lands adjacent to Hawick Common. He was shepherd at Winnington Rig for 24 years, then 2 years later moved to Langflat, where he worked for 8 years, until about 1751, thereafter living at Dodburn and Acreknowe. He gave evidence in 1767 regarding the previous use of the Common, and was a widower at that time. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His children Anna (b.1719), Thomas (b.1721), Robert (b.1723), Walter (b.1724) and James (b.1732) were baptised in Kirkton Parish and Gilbert (b.1733) in Cavers Parish. In 1719 and 1721 he was recorded being ‘in Rige’ (perhaps Winningtonrig, but more likely Caerlenrig) and was herd in Ashybank in 1733. It is possible he is the same man as the shepherd on lands near Hawick Common. William (18th C.) tenant in Hyndhope in Oxnam Parish. He paid the window tax there in 1748. In 1730 he married Cecile, younger daughter of William Elliot of Tholorieshope and Ove. William (1733/4–1803) married Isabel Best in Wilton Parish in 1770. Their children included: Gilbert (b.1771); Agnes (b.1776); and Magdalen (b.1779). He died at Damhead and is buried in Old Wilton Cemetery. William (18th C.) married Janet Ker. Their son Robert was baptised in Hawick Parish in 1778. The witnesses were John Ker (presumably a relative of his wife) and James Douglas. He may be the flesher whose housekeeper’s death is recorded in Hawick in 1799. William (d.1854) student of divinity and assistant teacher at the Academy in the Subscription Rooms who drowned in the Borthwick on the Friday of the Common Riding. William, J.P. (19th/20th C.) foreman dyer in Hawick. He was a Director of the Working Men’s Building Society, Chairman of the School Board and later of the School Management Committee, as well as a prominent local Liberal politician. He was also President of the Hawick Co-op in the 1880s and involved with the I.O.U.S. Mechanics. He was Sunday School Superintendent at St. George’s Kirk 1895–1908. William, M.I.C.E. (19th/20th C.) writer of ‘Liddesdale, Roxburghshire’ (1903), ‘Newcastleton, Roxburghshire: a border village’ (1905) and ‘Border village (Roxburghshire): a plea for the people: with some remarks on the Liddle and Solway fisheries’ (1907). Probably the same William left money for the William Hall Day School Prize Fund in Newcastleton (formerly written ‘Haw’).

Halldykes (hal-diks) n. former lands attached to the estate of Mangerton. They are recorded as ‘Haldykes’ in a rental roll c.1376, with value 6 shillings and 8 pence.

Halley (ha-lee) n. Richard (19th/20th C.) became Librarian in Hawick in 1906, succeeding George McNairn, for whom he had been assistant.

Halliburton (haw-lee-bur’in) n. Henry (d.1832) cattle-dealer in Hawick. He was Cornet in 1807 and was also selected as the ‘rebel’ Cornet of 1809 (the dispute being at least partly because the Council selected someone from the east side of the Slitrig), but declined for (unspecified) domestic reasons. However, he still played an important part in the Common Riding that year, being describes as ‘fearless, and, at the same time, a fear-inspiring man’, who rode to the front of the ‘rebel’ cavalcade as it re-entered the Town, swinging his whip to clear a path. He was the first person to die of cholera in the outbreak of early 1832. He contracted the disease while taking his stock to market in Morpeth and died a few days later in Hawick, on 18th January. His brother James and nephew Thomas both contracted cholera, but recovered. However, a neighbour, John Murray died 9 days after him, and several other neighbours followed. He lived on the Back Row, adjacent to Rob Young the blacksmiths. The field marked ‘Mr. Halliburton’ behind the Back Row on Wood’s 1824 map was probably his. James (b.1782/3) cattle dealer from Hawick, brother of Henry. He contracted cholera from his brother, who was the first person to die in the Hawick outbreak of early 1832. However, he and his son Thomas both recovered. He later lived at Hopehouse in Ettrick Parish. He had another son, James He may be the James in Hawick who subscribed to 10 copies of Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. James (b.1792/3) from Jedburgh, he was a shoemaker in Denholm. He is recorded as a shoemaker in Denholm in 1837 and in 1841 was at about the Canongate. In 1833 he married Mary (1804–72) daughter of Thomas Colledge. Their children included: Janet (b.1835); James (b.1837); Jean (b.1839); Thomas (b.1842); Agnes (b.1845); and Grace (b.1850). By 1851 he was ‘Proprietor of Houses’ at 10 Bongate in Jedburgh. He could be the James who was listed as a Steward at the Common Riding Races of 1836 (see also Haliburton).
Halliburton (ha-lee-bur'-in) n. name given to the westernmost field on Hawick Common, west of the racecourse, lying between the fields called Jennie Stott and Devil’s Shin.

Halliday (haw-li-, -lee- di) n. Agnes Davidson see Agnes Davidson Hamilton. Andrew (18th C.) resident of Southdean. His children included Andrew (b.1769) and Jean (b.1772). Barbara (b.1827/8) daughter of James and Helen Gledstains, born in Cavers Parish. She was sister of the poet John. In 1841 she was living with her mother at Hawickshiels and in 1851 she was a cook at Hallrule House. She may be the Barbara who married George Scott in Hobkirk in 1851; they were living at Stitchilhill in Castleton in 1861. David (b.c.1823) from Coldingham, he was an agricultural labourer in Wilton Parish. In 1851 he was living at ‘Dykenook No. 2’ with his wife Betsy (from Castleton) and son David. Francis (18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His daughter Janet was baptised in 1779. George (16th C.) recorded in 1579 as owner of a tenement in Hawick. This was a piece of land on the north side of the High Street, adjacent to the tenement of David, brother to Walter Scott in Chamberlain Newton. The same tenement was owned by John in 1560. George (18th/19th C.) married Margaret Robson in Southdean in 1809. George (19th C.) resident of the Hawick area. He married Mary Chisholme in East Bank Kirk in 1818. Their children (most born in Wilton and some baptised at the East Bank Kirk), included: Andrew (b.1823/3); Walter (b.1827/8); Isobel (b.1830); John (b.1833); and Agnes (b.1836/7). His widow Mary and 5 children were living at 1 Brougham Place in 1851. Helen nee Gledstains (1796/7–1866) mother of poet John. In 1841 she was recorded at Hawickshiels with Barbara, probably her daughter. She was ‘independent’ at that time, suggesting that she was a widow, with enough money to live on. By 1851 she was at Easter Langbaulk (where John also lived for a while), with her grandson James (born in Langholm and working as a stable-boy in Bowden in 1861, although it is unclear who his parents were). In 1861 she was a pauper (formerly farm servant) at Myreslawgreen. It is said that her son John inherited from her a love of Scottish ballads. She died at Myreslawgreen, with another son Walter being a witness to her death certificate. James (17th C.) flesher in Hawick.

He was recorded in 1692 ‘for publicly selling up and down the town ane carcass of swyne which was leprous, and consequently dangerous to be made use of’. He was listed among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He could be the James listed as a resident of Hawick ‘useth the water’ on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He witnessed a baptism for baker Adam Richardson in 1709. He may be the James who married Margaret Dickson, and whose children baptised in Hawick included: William (b.1669); Agnes (b.1671); Margaret (b.1675); and Isobel (b.1681). The witnesses in 1675 were Robert Wright and John Tinline. James (17th/18th C.) married Agnes Cessford in Bedrule Parish in 1691. John (b.1693), baptised in Bedrule, was probably their son. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish. He married Helen Turnbull in 1709 and his son Thomas was baptised in 1710. He was probably related to John, who also had children baptised in Bedrule. James (17th/18th C.) married Janet Scott in 1714, the marriage being recorded in both Hawick and Bedrule Parishes. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Whithope in 1716 when his daughter Margaret was baptised. James (18th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish. He married Janet Dodds in 1758 and his son John was baptised in 1761. He may have been related to the earlier James who lived in Bedrule. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Irvine in 1795. Their son John was baptised in 1796 (with the mother’s name transcribed as Margaret ‘Heron’). James (18th/19th C.) resident of Birkwoodfoot in Kirkton Parish. In 1817 he married Helen Gledstains, who was from Hawick Parish. Their children included: John (b.1821), writer of ‘Bonnie Teviotdale’; Walter (b.1823/4); and Barbara (b.c.1825). He probably lived at Hawickshiels, where his son John was born. On his wife’s death certificate he is listed as ‘Road Labourer’ and on his son John’s he is listed as a blacksmith. James (b.c.1825) born in Kirkton or Cavers Parish, he was a local ploughman. He married Elizabeth Hogg (from Ashkirk) in Hawick in 1847. In 1851 the couple were living in Lilliesleaf and in 1861 at Branxholme Cottage. He may have been father of George (b.1855), born in Lilliesleaf. It is possible he was closely related to poet John. Janet (18th C.) wife of Robert Scott of Scotsbank. She was recorded several times in her own right in Selkirk documents and was already a widow by 1719. She was ‘Lady Scotsbank’ in 1724 when a man was sentenced for breaking her garden. She was still alive in 1734. John (16th C.) recorded in 1560 as owner of a tenement on the north side of the High Street, to the west of the one owned by John Short. By 1679 this same tenement was owned by George, who was surely either his son or brother. John (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. His wife was ‘Ellisoun’ and their son Adam was baptised in 1656. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish. He married Helen Turnbull in 1714 and their children included: Anne (b.1715); James (b.1715); Alexander (b.1718); John (b.1720); and Archibald (b.1729). He was surely related to James, who lived in Bedrule at the same time. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. He married Janet Renwick and their children included: Jean (b.1778); and Robert (b.1781). John (1804/5–65) son of Robert and Mary Stewart, he was a Sawyer in Jedburgh, originally from Eccles. In 1826 he married Alison Thomson and their son John was a blacksmith in Hawick. It seems reasonable to guess that he was related to the Hawick poet of the same name. John (1821–1902) born at Hawickshiels, a few miles south of Hawick. His parents were James and Helen Gledstains and he appears to have had siblings Barbara and Walter. He was writer of the song ‘Bonnie Teviotdale’, as well as many poems, collected in the book ‘The Rustic Bard’. He only had about 2 years of formal schooling and at the age of 10 was hired as an assistant shepherd by one of the local farmers. He was recorded as a labourer at Skelfhill stables in 1841. Sometime before 1845 he moved to Longbaulk (probably at the bottom end of the ‘Lumback’) where he lived for a few years before moving to Hobkirk in 1849, where he worked as a hedger, ditcher, harvester, etc. He lived for a while at Drythropple, and developed a reputation as a skilled horticulturalist. Along with Sandy and James Mathieson (gardeners at Weens and Wauchope, respectively), he founded the Hobkirk Flower Show. In 1851 he reported to a local newspaper a story of the appearance of a ‘Brocken spectre’ (i.e. mirage of a shadow); at that point he was living at ‘North Town of Rule’. In 1854 he moved to Bridge of Allan (a different one from where he grew up!), where he was a landscape gardener and florist. He was also said to be an expert angler. He published ‘The Rustic Bard: or, A voice from the People’ (1847) when living at Longbaulk; this book of verse contains many pieces in local dialect, which are invaluable early published examples of the language. Other contributions include a poem in praise of Henry Scott Riddell, an ‘Epistle to W.D’ (whose first name was ‘Wattic’), a description of the collection of curiosities of Andrew Jamieson and verses to William Oliver of Hallrule. He also features in Dr. Rodgers’ ‘Scottish Minstrel’ (1856). In 1859 he donated a silver coin of Alexander II to the Archaeological Society. It is unclear whether he had any local connections after this date, although he will always be remembered for ‘Bonnie Teviotdale’. He married Margaret Carruthers in 1847, the marriage being listed in both Hawick and Hobkirk Parishes (she is probably the ‘Peggy’ in his poems ‘O! Dinna Be Wae, Peggie’, ‘’Tis Not Her Eyes So Beaming Black’ and ‘The Gloamin’ Stars O’er Whithop Hill’); she was daughter of William Carruthers and Agnes Davidson. He is recorded living with her at North Town o’ Rule in 1851. They had a daughter Agnes Davidson in Hobkirk Parish in 1851/2; she married Thomas Hamilton in Logie in 1873, had 3 children (George William Hamilton, Margaret Carruthers Hamilton and John Halliday Hamilton), died in 1908 and is buried in Logie. He is probably the man mentioned at the centenary celebrations for Burns in Bridge of Allan in 1859 when ‘a song, composed for the occasion by Mr. John Halliday, and entitled ‘The Scottish Folk’, was sung by Mr. Dow of Keirfield’. He was certainly in Bridge of Allan in 1861, was a lodging house keeper and vintner at ‘Allan Vale’ in 1866 and in 1871 was a hotel keeper at the Lady of the Lake Hotel. Also in 1871 he was recorded as secretary of the Workman’s Club and Reading Room in Bridge of Allan and in 1872 he was ‘a keen angler’ of Bridge of Allan when he gave evidence in a legal case involving disputes over fishing for parr. In the 1881 census he was recorded as a nurseryman living with his daughter and her family at Springfield Cottage in Bridge of Allan. He is also recorded as proprietor of the ‘Lady of the Lake’ in a Bridge of Allan directory in 1870. His wife died in 1877 and he moved to Stirling in 1893, where he stayed with relatives in the Castle Hotel (now housing the gift shop of the Castle). He was said to have maintained a ‘vigorouos and hearty old age, his interest in literature, especially poetry, being unabated’. He died in Stirling, being listed as a ‘Hotelkeeper’ on his death certificate, and is buried at Logie. Biographies of him are included in Rogers’ ‘The Modern Scottish Minstrel’ (1856) and Goodfellow’s ‘Border Biography’ (1890). George Watson gave a talk on him to the Archaeological Society in 1917. John (b.1835/6) blacksmith in Hawick, son of John and Alison Thomson. His father was a sawyer in Jedburgh. In 1861 he was a 'Coachwork Journeymen' blacksmith living at 1 Brougham Place (home of other Hallidays, who must have been related) when he married Janet, daughter of postman Archibald Douglas and Barbara Scott. They were married in the Free Kirk, with witnesses Andrew Telfer and Thomas Morrison. His children included: William; Barbara (b.1855), who married James Waldie; Mary (b.1864); John (b.1867); Alison (b.1869); and Archibald (b.1871). The family were living on Teviot Crescent in 1871 and Oliver Crescent in 1883. John (b.1832/3) from Coldingham, in 1861 he was a ploughman at Westerhouses. His wife was Agnes and their children included Agnes and Isabella. Peter (19th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His children included Jant (b.1760), Robert (b.1762) (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He married Isabella. He was recorded being in Jedburgh Jail in 1832.

Robert (18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His children included Jant (b.1760), Robert (b.1762) and William (b.1767). He could be the Robert whose marriage to Bettie Bell is recorded in Kirk and William (b.1767). He was 8 years old when the Robert who married to Bettie Bell is recorded in Kirkton in 1753. Robert (18th/19th C.) chaise-driver at Teviotbank in 1797, when he was working for David Simpson. He may be the Robert who married Mary Dickson in Minto Parish in 1788.

Robert (19th C.) from Langholm, he was a handoom weaver in Hawick. In 1861 he was living on Ladylaw Place with his wife Ann and children Janet, William and Elizabeth. Thomas (17th C.) recorded in 1689 when he witnessed a baptism in Hawick Parish for Adam Elliot and Margaret Halliday (who was probably related). Thomas (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He married Beatrix Elliot in 1743 and his daughter Helen was baptised in 1746. Thomas (18th/19th C.) married Mary Scott in Bedrule in 1817. Walter (b.1823/4) born at Southfield, he was son of James and Helen Gledstains and hence brother of the poet John. In 1841 he was a labourer at Huttlerburn farm in Yarrow, in 1851 was working with John Matheson at Ashkirk Smithy and in 1861 he was a journeyman blacksmith in Jedburgh. He married Margaret Oliver and they had a daughter Helen (b.1858). He was witness on his mother Helen’s death certificate in Hawick in 1866 and was then living at 5 Abbey Close, Jedburgh. It is possible he was father of James (b.1845/6 in Langholm), recorded as grandson of Helen, living with her at Easter Longbaulk in 1851. Walter (b.1825/6) son of George and Mary Chisholme. In 1854 in Hawick he married Mary, daughter of market-gardener Thomas Leathead. Their children included Mary M.C. (b.c.1854), Barbara (b.c.1856) and George (b.c.1858). In 1861 he was living at Myreslawgreen with his father-in-law and his own family. He was recorded as a market gardener of Myreslawgreen when his daughter Isabella was involved in a paternity suit with mason William Tait in 1880. William (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Aitchison and their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1724. William (b.c.1768) hemp roper maker on the Back Row, recorded in 1841. His wife was Janet, and their daughter Margaret was also there. Margaret probably married Job Gadd in Hawick in 1854 and was living with her mother Janet on the Loan in 1861. William (19th/20th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Jane Wilson and their children were William, George and Frank. William 'Will Ha' (1917–85) son of William and brother of Frank and George. He was captured in France and spent much of the WWII in prisoner of war camps in Germany and Poland. Most of his working life was spent in Braemar, where he had a reputation for being a fast knitter and was on the social committee. He was also a member of the Legion and golfed at the Verish. His children were Sandy and Jean (also written ‘Haldyay’, ‘Halleday’, ‘Halladay’, ‘Hallyday’, ‘Hallyday’, ‘Hallyday’, ‘Hallyday’, ‘Holyday’, etc.).

hallin (haw-lin) n., poet. a cottage, dwelling, inner wall between door and fireplace – ‘Hallans, sleekit owre wi’ plaster, Glintin’ a’ as white as snaw. Worthy o’ its noble maister, Kitchen, passage, rooms, an’ a’ ‘ [JR], ‘There’s few hearts to pity the wee coverin’ form That sits at your hallin a bield frae the storm’ [JT], ‘Men bound together in run-rig commonty And in the old unity of hall and hallan, tholing together . . . ’ [DH] (also spelled ‘hallan’).

hallin-shaker (haw-lin-shā-kur) n., arch. a beggar, tramp, sorry creature – ‘A met a doiterin, duddy, auld hallanshaker as A lampeet doon that lang brae’ [ECS] (literally a partition-shaker).

Halliwell (haw-lee-wel) n. James (17th C.) gardener at Whitehaugh in Wilton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. His name is written ‘Helliwell’. He is probably the James ‘helliwall’ who witnessed a baptism for William Telfer in Stirches in 1683 and another for George Scott in 1687. Janet (17th C.) recorded in 1676 when she was fined along with Isabel Stuart for fighting over the placement of their market stalls. Her surname is given as ‘Holywell’. William (17th C.) resident at Newlands on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls for Hassendean Parish.
Hallmoss

His name is written ‘Halliull’. He was probably related to James. William (17th/18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. He married Mary Watson and their children, baptised in Hawick Parish, included: George (b.1704); and Isobel (b.1708). The 1704 baptism was witnessed by fellow shoemaker George Allan and weaver John Swan and the 1708 baptism by Robert and George Allan (also written ‘Halwell’ and ‘Holywell’).

Hallmoss (hal-mos) n. boggy area between Drinkstone Hill and the main A7, just north of Groundstone farm. The nearby wood is called Hallmoss Plantation. There has been a claim that part of a Roman road was visible here, as well as an ancient enclosure of some sort.

hallow (ha-low) v., arch. to halloo, make a loud call of derision – ‘...by cryeing themselves and hounding others to cry publickly and loudly to hallow out at windows and too hout the baylyeas when passing by’ [BR1706].

Hallrule (haw-, hawl-rool) n. hamlet about 8 miles east of Hawick, between Bonchester and Bedrule. It was formerly a major estate of Hobkirk Parish. Much of the land of the farm there had been the Common of the barony of Feu-Rule and the farm may also have been known as the Mains of Feu-Rule. James White was a resident there in 1493. The lands are recorded being held by George Turnbull in 1493 and 1502, and in 1516 the tenants were Robert, William and Thomas Turnbull. The town there was burned by the Marquis of Dorset’s men in 1523 and the tower burned by the English in 1545. The lands passed from Archibald Douglas, Earl of Angus to Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst in 1581. In the late 16th and early 17th centuries the Laird of half the lands was George Turnbull, and through his daughter Isobel they appear to have passed to the Turnbuls of Barnhills. Hector Turnbull of Barnhill was decaired a rebel and lost his lands to Alexander, Lord Home before 1602. In that year a gang of Armstrongs and Eliotts attacked the farm, killed the shepherd John Wilson, and drove off about 120 sheep. It may be among the lands in Feu-Rule granted to Gilbert Elliott by Andrew Kerr, Lord Jedburgh in 1629. It is said that the Eliotts of Stobs gained the lands through some underhand method. The ‘town’ is mentioned in 1632 along with the Mains of Feu-Rule ‘alias Fewroule vocatis Halroule’ when the superiority was inherited by Robert, son of Andrew Ker of Faldonside. In 1649 parts of the Barony of Feu-Rule were erected into the Barony of Hallrule, and held by William Elliott of Stobs in the mid-17th century. By 1678 Elliott of Stobs owned lands there valued at £2142, and were merged with 2 pieces of land of Hawthornside valued at £211. The farms of ‘Over and Nether Hallrule with mill thereof’ are listed among the properties of Sir William Elliott of Stobs in the late 17th century. The farm was still in the Barony of Cavers when that was inherited by Sir William Douglas in 1687, when transcribed ‘Dowalrowl’, and by his brother Archibald in 1698, when transcribed ‘Dewallroul’. William Buckham was there in 1694, paying for 4 hearths, while George Brown and Walter Brown were also householders on the lands (and 3 other poor householders were additionally listed). In 1709 the Barony of Hallrule was transcribed as consisting of ‘Helme, midle with mill, Hungingside, Burrel [probably Billerwell], Roulweens [perhaps Bedrule and Weens], Hathersyde, Seaweholhous, Pleulandhill, Bonhouse, Appdsyde with mill, Harrot with mill, Tithous with 4 parts of Riddmaburne’. In 1725 Sir Gilbert Elliott of Stobs gave the east side (valued at £414) to his son John. In 1779 the Barony had been broken down into parts, including: ‘Inner-Hallrule, consisting of six inclosures’, valued at £493 17s 8d; ‘Over-Hallrule’, valued at £832 12s 5d; ‘Mill and mill lands of Hallrule’, valued at £136 9s 10d; Billerwell; and Hawthornside. Andrew Currie and then George Currie were tenants there in the 18th century, as well as Barries. William Scott was there in 1788. In the 1788 county valuation the farm (including Billerwell) was valued at £2144 16s 8d and owned by Sir Francis Elliott of Stobs. The farm was sold to John Wilson in about 1803, and he had the modern house built there. The farms of Inner and Outer Hallrule are described in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls, with the part to the west belonging to Sir William Elliott (valued at £428 11s 6d) and the part to the east belonging to John Wilson of Hallrule (valued at £404 11d). John Wilson’s part lay ‘on the north-side of the public road to Weens, bounded by Billerwell march on the east; by the top of Ruberslaw, where march stones are placed, on the nort; by the said public road on the south, and on the west, forty-four yards west from the west-side of the gate next Hallrule, leading to Town-o’-Rule in a straight line to the top of Ruberslaw, passing close by the Clump of Firs, the east fence of which is the march’. Wilson also owned 5 of the 6 enclosures of Inner Hallrule (valued at £427 4s 2d), purchasing them from...
Sir William Elliot and disposing the north-east one to Thomas Cleghorn of Weens. James and then Daniel Mather were tenants from the early 1800s; Daniel had a large cairn removed, inside of which was found an ‘urn’ with a herringbone-pattern (now lost). The mansion there was occupied by Peter Pennycook in the 1860s and was a home of the Ushers of Norton and Wells. There was also once probably a small threshing mill there, powered by water from a pond. The farm contains part of Ruberslaw, and 2 Roman coins were once found here. The former farmhouse had a couple of good rooms in it known as ‘the Laird’s Rooms’, where the Elliots would stay sometimes when they visited the farm. There is a tradition that Lord Heathfield was born there during one such visit. The farm is fairly well-wooded and contains a walled garden, as well as a new pond (formerly written ‘Haroull’, etc., it is ‘Haw of Roul’ in 1484/5, ‘aula de Roul’ in 1493, ‘Aula de Rule’ in 1494/5, ‘Hawroull’ in 1502, ‘Hawroull’ in 1508, ‘Fewhawroull’ in 1511, ‘Halroule’ in 1516, ‘Hawrowle’ in 1526, ‘Hawroull’ in 1527, ‘Hallrewell’ in 1557, ‘Halroule’ in 1561, ‘Halroule’ in 1562, ‘Hawroull’ in 1574, ‘Hawroull’ in 1576, ‘Hawroull’ and ‘Halroule’ in 1581, ‘Hawroull’ in 1581/2, ‘Halroule’ in 1595, ‘Hall Roull’ in 1602, ‘Hawroull’ in 1603, ‘Hawroull’ and ‘Halroull’ in 1606, ‘Halroul’ in 1686, ‘Halroull’ and ‘Harroull’ in 1694 and ‘Harule’ in 1760 and 1797; it is ‘Hall of Roull’ on Gordon’s c. 1650 map and ‘Hall of Roull’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map; it has its modern spelling by Stobie’s 1770 map).

Hallrule Common (hawl-rool-ko-min) n. former name for lands in the southern part of the farm of Hallrule. It is recorded in a charter of 1606 when Hobsburn and Weens were sold to John Scott. It marked the northern boundary of these lands, and is stated to be ‘the lands called the Common of Halroule’.

Hallrule Mill (hawl-rool-mil) n. former corn mill and farm at Hallrule, long tenanted by the Turnbulls. The mill lands (and ¼th of the marts) were assigned to Agnes Herries, following the Baronial dispute over Feu-Rule in 1562. In 1574 it was recorded that the whole of the Barony of Feu-Rule ‘is thirlit to the mylne’. The mill passed to Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst in 1581. The earliest named tenant on record is ‘Walter Aumous’ in 1685. ‘Walter Almes’ was still there in 1694, when he paid tax on 3 hearths ‘for himself and cottar’. In the following centuries it was often let along with the farm of Hallrule. It was owned by the Elliots of Stobs in the 18th and early 19th centuries. In 1779 it was valued at £136 9s 10d.

Hall’s (hawlz) n. fishmonger’s shop next to the Town Hall in the mid-20th century, which also used to have game hanging on hooks outside the windows.

Hally Well (haw-lee-wel-hil) n. former spring to the south-east of Hallywell Hill, between Newton and Groundistone Heights on the A7. Francis Well is right beside the road, further south (it is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Hallywell Hill (haw-lee-wel-hil) n. small hill just to the east of the A7 after the turn for Boonraw. The name comes from the nearby spring, although any connection to anything holy is unknown.

Halswelle (hals-wel) n. Keeley (1831–91) English artist. He was known for book illustrations and later as an oil painter. He lived in Edinburgh in about the period 1854–63. In 1856 he came to Hawick as part of a theatre troupe, designing the sets and also taking part as a performer for their 9-day engagement. Under the pseudonym Charles K. Tynte he prepared a series of sketches based on the troupe’s time in Hawick, which was published as ‘Notes Hawickianæ’.

Haltwhistle (hawl-whi-sul) n. town in north-eastern Cumbria, important in rieving days, having several existing towers and strongholds. It was a seat of the Ridley family.

haly (hā-lee) adj., arch. holy – ‘...that on the Wednesdays next after the Fesst off the Imencion off the Haly Cros ...’ [SB1431], ‘...And nane dare charge wi’ imperfections, The haly band’ [JR], ‘...That I met a gallant companee To the haly kirk repairing’ [JTe], ‘But for a’ this hae I sete my King apon my haly hill o’ Zion’ [HSR], ‘For our haint sail rejoyce in him, becaus we hae trustet in his haly name’ [HSR], ‘Yer haunts nae mair she will molest, On muir or mead The Haly Word her skin hast drest, For now she’s dead’ [JH] (also hally).
Halyfirsteed

Halyfirsteed (ha-lee-fir-steed) n. lands in Liddesdale once attached to the estate of Mangerston. They are recorded in about 1376 on a rental roll, listed as ‘Halyfyrsted’ and with a value of 20 shillings and 4 pence.

hame (hām) n. home – ‘ee’ll eat mei oot o hoose an hame!’; ...sal, vpoun that awine expens, rains and bring haim ane dispensatioun fra the Court of Rome ...’ [SB1519], ‘And where’s the place o’ rest? Hamework (hám-wurk) n. homework – ‘...Henry finally gittin sent hame ti Howahill wi homework frae the teacher!’ [IHS].

Hamilton (hawn-ul-tin) n. Agnes Davidson nee Halliday (1851/2–1908) only known child of local poet John Halliday and his wife Margaret Carruthers. She was born in Hobkirk Parish and moved with her parents to Bridge of Allan just a couple of years later. She married Thomas Hamilton in Logie in 1873; he was born in 1841 in Lesmahagow and in 1881 was recorded as a ‘Commercial Traveller (Wine)’. Their children were: George William (1874–1930); Margaret Carruthers (1877–97); and John Halliday (1879–83). Her husband probably died in the 1880s. She was living with her father in Bridge of Allan in 1861 and in 1871 when he was a hotel keeper at the Lady of the Lake Hotel there. In 1881 she was living with her family at Springfield Cottage in Bridge of Allan. They moved to Stirling in 1893 and in 1897 she is recorded living on the Esplanade there, probably working at Stirling Castle Hotel, where Thomas Low was proprietor; she herself was proprietor in directories of 1903 and 1907. This building now houses the gift shop of the Castle. She is buried in Logie Parish Cemetery. Andrew (d.bef. 1637) probably son of Andrew of St. John’s Chapel and grandson of James of St. John’s Chapel and Sprouston. He was described as ‘in Harret’ (i.e. Harwood in 1365.
the Rule valley) in 1609 when Margaret Turnbull brought a court action against him for intrusion onto the lands of Tythefhouse. He was also witness to the succession of his Francis (probably his cousin) and served as his ‘curator’. Capt. Archibald C. (1881–1915) son of Dr. John R. and brother of Dr. James O. He worked in Burma and was killed at Gallipoli. Charles (c.1650–85) 5th Earl of Haddington, son of John. He was served heir to his father in 1670 in many lands, including those once belonging to Melrose Abbey. The local lands were Hassendeanbank, Brieryyards, Clerkcroft, Cresswell, Hornshole and Crook, as well as Rodono, Thirlstane and others in Ettrick. He also held the feu duties of Friarshaw, as well as owning most of the lands in Melrose Parish and others in Maxton and Lessuden according to the Land Tax Rolls of 1678. Della nee Oliver (1938/9–2016) she was Cornet’s Lass to Billy Cavers in 1949 and was Diamond Jubilee Lass in 2009. She married Dr. Rory and they lived at Bucklands. She had children Peter and Susan. Elizabeth (1758–1816) born in Belfast of Scottish parents, she became a writer, particularly of essays. She is best known for her novel ‘The Cottagers of Glenburnie’ (1808), which is seen as a forerunner of the ‘Kailyard’ style. It was supposedly based around Wilton Dean, and written during a visit with James Anderson in Wilton Lodge. Francis (16th/17th C.) son of James of St. John’s Chapel, from whom he succeeded to the lands of Appotside and Tythefhouse in the Rule valley in 1610. In 1630 he granted a sasine of Appotside and Tythefhouse to the minister William Weir, who was his brother-in-law. He is recorded as a witness to the 1632 sale of Harwood to Gilbert Elliot by Edward Lorraine and Rev. William Weir and gave his permission for the sale of Appotside and Tythefhouse to Edward Lorraine. He could be the ‘Mr. Francis Hamilton’ who wrote to Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1624 regarding the plot by Robert Elliot to murder Scott; he was clearly a friend of John Murray (the Earl of Annandale), Elliot’s brother-in-law, and stated that Elliot should be saved for the sake of Murray. He may have moved to Baillieborough in Ireland. Rev. Gavin James (1777–1837) son of Gavin from Blackwood, Douglas. He was licensed by the Presbytery of Lanark in 1799 and ordained as minister at Harbottle in Northumberland in 1809. He was presented to Ashkirk Parish in late 1810 (by Lady Minto and her son Gilbert Elliot, Commissioners of Lord Minto, who was in Bengal) and became the new minister there in 1811. He served as Presbytery Clerk. In 1809 he was preparing essays on agricultural topics, under the patronage of the Board of Agriculture, but this never appeared in publication. He had a debt to Mr. Pringle, in letters preserved in the Walter Mason Collection in 1814 and 1815. There is an existing letter from him in 1823, regarding Captain Napier’s commission to the General Assembly. He compiled the entry on Ashkirk Parish for the ‘New Statistical Account of Scotland’; this was prepared for publication by Walter Todd, since he died before it was due to appear. He suffered from ill health and had an assistant for the last 5 years. In 1809 at Hawick Manse (suggesting a previous connection with the area) he married Mary, only daughter of James Walker of Antigua, and they had children. Their daughter Joanna married Thomas Thorburn. Helen (20th C.) Hawick’s first female plumber, working for the Gas Company in the 1940s. James (c.1415–79) son of James of Cadzow. He was closely connected with the Douglases. He became 1st Lord Hamilton in 1445. In 1471/2 he presented the marriage contract between Archibald, Earl of Angus, and Sir David Scott of Buccleuch. He leased the lands of Craig Douglas in 1459, Winterburgh, Altrieve and Berrybush in Yarrow in 1469 and Craig Douglas in 1478. He married Euphemia Graham, widow of Archibald, 5th Earl of Douglas. He was thus step-father of William, 6th Earl of Douglas and Margaret, the ‘Fair Maid of Galloway’. He secondly married Mary, daughter of King James II. He was succeeded by his son James, 1st Earl of Arran. James (c.1475–1529) Earl of Arran, son of James, 1st Lord Hamilton. He helped negotiate the marriage James IV with Margaret Tudor and was created Earl of Arran on their wedding day. He was appointed Lieutenant General of Scotland, and commanded the Scottish fleet in 1513. He opposed Archibald Douglas, Earl of Angus in the power struggles during the minority of King James V, and was defeated by Angus’ men in the ‘Clese the Causeway’ riot in Edinburgh in 1520. In 1522 he became Lieutenant of the South. Sometime before 1526 there was an attempt to capture him, made by a force headed by George, Lord Home, and David Home of Wedderburn. This force included about 160 Borderers, many of them Scots, Turnbulls, Pringles, etc., and all of whom received remission for their crimes; the list is useful in containing family relationships among some local families. He eventually received the lands of Bothwell from the forfeited estates of the Earl of Angus. He was listed in 1526/7 among prominent men charged by James V not to attack the lands of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme, John Cranston of that Ilk and Walter Scott of Synton while those men were in ‘respite’ for the charge of treason. He firstly married Elizabeth, daughter of Alexander, 2nd Lord Home; this wedding was annulled when it was discovered that his wife’s first husband had still been alive. He secondly married Janet, daughter of David Bethune of Creich. He was succeeded as 2nd Earl of Arran by his son James and also had many other children, including Joanna (who married Alexander Cunningham, 5th Earl of Glencairn) and at least 14 who were illegitimate. There were several called after him: Sir James of Finnart, Lord of Session; James, Bishop of Argyle and Lismore; and James of St. John’s Chapel and Sprouston, whose daughter Marion married Robert Elliot of Redheugh. James (c.1516–75) 2nd Earl of Arran, son of James, 1st Earl. He was next in line to the throne after James V’s only child, Mary Queen of Scots and was Regent of Scotland during Mary’s minority. He became a Catholic and consented to the marriage of Mary to the French Dauphin, this leading to the Rough Wooing. He may have been present at the Battle of Ancrum Moor in 1545. He remained involved in Scottish politics, until 1565 when he moved to France, but returned to imprisonment in Scotland in 1569. He married Margaret, daughter of James Douglas, 3rd Earl of Morton. He was succeeded by his son James, who he tried at one point to marry to Elizabeth I of England and to Queen Mary. James (d.1580) illegitimate son of James, 1st Earl of Arran and brother of John, Archbishop of St. Andrews. He was nominated as Archbishop of Glasgow in 1547, but rejected the following year, largely due to his illegitimacy. Hence he was almost Hawick’s Archbishop. However, he later received papal dispensation and was appointed Bishop of Argyll. He later became a Protestant. James of St. John’s Chapel and Sprouston (d.1585) younger illegitimate son of James, 1st Earl of Arran. He married Marie, daughter of Patrick Hepburn of Fainington. His children included: John of St. John’s Chapel (d.1587), who married a Cairncross of Colmslie; Patrick (d.1598); James of Harwood (d.c.1610); Andrew of St. John’s Chapel; Thomas of Telslone; and also probably Alexander, Marion, Margaret, Nicholas and Jane. James (d.c.1610) son of James of St. John’s Chapel and Sprouston. He was sometimes referred to as being ‘of Harwood’. A contract of 1598 with Hector Lorraine describes how he loaned money to the Loraines, with the reversion of Harwood and Appotside residing with him. The amount was increased to almost £1200 by 1600. By 1602 he had a feu charter of the lands of Tythehouse and Appotside, as well as having confirmation from the superior, William Maxwell, Lord Herries, that he held the right of marriage of Hector Lorraine, as well as the reversion of Harwood and Hawthornside. He probably arranged the marriage between Hector Lorraine and his niece, daughter of Robert Elliot of Redheugh and his sister Marion Hamilton. However, the Loraines were unable to repay the ‘wadset’ to him, and the lands legally changed hands some time in the early 17th century, confirmed by a disposition of 1630 and ‘charter of alienation’ in 1632 (where he is referred to as the ‘deceased James Hamilton of Harwood’). His son Francis inherited Appotside and Tythehouse from him in 1610. In 1619 it is recorded that Edward Lorraine was required to marry Margaret Hamilton, sister to his heir Francis. He married Jean, sister of William Cairncross of Colmslie; she was sister of his brother John’s wife. His children included: Francis of Harwood; Andrew of Killenover, Donegal; Jean, who married James Chisholm of Gornewood and secondly Patrick Kincaid of Edinburgh; a daughter who married John Ballyboe of Mulenard; John; and William. James (17th C.) Hawick resident, mentioned in a court case of 1673. He was found guilty of cutting the ‘goune-tail’ of John Scott’s wife. He could be the James who was married to Bessie Scott, and whose son Robert was born in Hawick in 1673 (with witnesses William Paterson and William Laing). James (b.c.1800) stocking-maker of the West End. He may be the man of that name who was listed among people to have contracted cholera, but recovered, in 1832. In 1841 he was at about 17 Loan with his wife Jean and their children Robert, Charles, James, John, Ann, Margaret and Thomas. Dr. James Oliver ‘Oliver’ (1886–1938) son of John R. and father of Rory. He graduated from Edinburgh University in 1908. In Hawick he went into partnership with his father and continued the practice after his death. He joined the R.A.M.C. Reserve of Officers in 1910 and served with them when war broke out. He was in charge of No. 4 Ambulance Train, B.E.F., France when he was discharged due to ill-health in 1917. He then became Commandant of the Hawick Military Hospital. He was a keen rugby supporter and was President of Hawick R.F.C. in 1914. He was also one of the early local car owners. In 1919 he moved to the South of England, performing bacteriological research in Bournemouth. He then took up a position in the Barbados and travelled extensively. In 1916 he married Sara Chisholm (who died in 1938). Their son Rory was also a doctor in Hawick. He died at his home in Edinburgh at the age of 52, effectively as a result of his war disability. He is buried in the Wellowgate Cemetery. Jean (16th/17th C.) daughter of John of St. John’s Chapel and sister of Marion and Margaret, who jointly inherited the Lordship of Winnington in 1610. The lands consisted of Winningtonhall and mill there, Swinstead, Over and Nether Kirkwoodhead, Brandside and Horselee, as well as some land in Jedburgh. She married Walter Bellenden, brother of the Laird of Auchmull. John of St. John’s Chapel (d.1587) son of James of St. John’s Chapel and Sprouston. He married Margaret Cairncross, sister of the Laird of Cohnsilie, and secondly married Margaret Nichol. His daughters and co-heiresses were Margaret, Marion and Jean, who are mentioned in 1593, by which time he was deceased. In 1610 his 3 daughters inherited the lands of Winnington as heirs to their great-grandfather Patrick Hepburn. Their names were listed as ‘Maria’, ‘Jeanna’ and ‘Margareta’ and the lands consisted specifically of Winningtonhall and mill there, Swinstead, Over and Nether Kirkwoodhead, Brandside and Horselee. Rev. John (16th C.) minister at Ashkirk from 1570, being presented to the parsonage on the death of John Murie. He was thus the first parish minister after the Reformation. John Scott was recorded as Reader in 1574, but they may have overlapped. John (1626–69) 4th Earl of Haddington, younger brother of Thomas, 3rd Earl, whom he succeeded in 1645. He also had the titles of Lord Byres and Binnington succeeded to the superiority of lands previously held by Melrose Abbey, including Hadsendeanbank, Brieryyards, Clerkcroft, Cresswell, etc. In 1655 he must have held the superiority of the Barony of Hadsendean when he gave a ‘precept of clare constat’ to Thomas Turnbull for the lands of Cockerheugh. He is probably the Earl of Haddington recorded paying tax in Lilliesleaf Parish in about 1663. He married Christian, daughter of John Lindsay, 17th Earl of Crawford. He was succeeded by his son Charles. John Rankine (b.1822/3) born in Bathgate, he was teacher at Minto School in the 1850s and 1860s. One of his pupils was James ‘Dictionary’ Murray. He was listed there on Slater’s 1852 directory. He also served as Heritors’ Clerk, Session Clerk, Kirk Treasurer, Registrar and Inspector of Poor for the Parish. In 1851 his sister Margaret was acting as housekeeper. In 1854 he married Jane Tait, eldest daughter of Alexander Robertson. Their children included Isabella, Robert and Alexander R. Dr. John Rogerson (d.1916) born in Dumfriesshire, he was grandfather of Rory. He was a local doctor who was the main instigator for the setting up of the Cottage Hospital. He lived at Elm House, which he had built for him. He was also known for showing Irish Terriers, and was President of the Ornithological Society. He was Chairman of the Scottish Committee of the British Medical Association when war broke out in 1914, and helped coordinate medical services in Scotland during WWI. J.C. Goodfellow dedicated his 1911 collection of verses to him. He married Alice Mary, eldest daughter of the second marriage of James Oliver of Thornwood. Their sons were: Archibald (1881–1915), who died at Gallipoli; and Dr. James Oliver (b.1886), who continued his practice. Margaret (16th/17th C.) daughter of John of St. John’s Chapel and grand-daughter of James. She was sister of Marion and Jean, who jointly inherited the Lordship of Winnington on 1610. She married Robert Home of Carronsyde. Marion (d.1619) daughter of John of St. John’s Chapel and sister of Jean and Margaret. Her name is transcribed as ‘Mania Hammiltoune’ in 1610 when she and her sisters inherited their great-grandfather Patrick Hepburn’s Lordship of Winnington. Patrick (17th C.) recorded in 1651 when he witnessed a baptism for Robert Scott of Hawwood in Hawick. Richard (15th C.) listed as a witness to the sasine for the lands of Kirkton Mains and Flex in 1464/5. His name is recorded as ‘Ricardo Hammiltoune’. Robert (16th C.) recorded as Reader at Minto in 1579. Dr. Roderick ‘Rory’ (1920–1999) born in Torquay, both his father and grandfather being Hawick doctors, he was a doctor himself in Hawick for 38 years. He served on the Town Council from 1966, the Regional Council from 1975 and the District Council from 1985–88. Sometimes referred to as “Rory the Tory”, he was known for his magnanimous gestures (e.g. opening a local swimming gala by jumping in fully clothed). He also wrote the ‘Golfer’s Guide to Wee Places’ (1980). He married Della Oliver. Steven (1982/3– ) motor racing engineer from Hawick. He attended St. Margaret’s and the High School, then completed a computer science degree at St. Andrew’s University. He later earned... a Masters degree in engineering, eventually moving into the world of Formula-1 racing, where he worked for Ferrari in 2012, Mercedes 2013–17 and Force India from 2018, later called Racing Point F1 and then Aston Martin. Sir Thomas ‘Tam o the Cowgate’ (1563–1637) son of Thomas of Priestfield, he was a lawyer in Edinburgh who served as an Avocate, Senator of the College of Justice, Lord President of the Court of Session, Lord Clerk Register, Principle Secretary of State and Lord Privy Seal. In 1612, as Lord Advocate, he obtained a decree before the Lords of Council and Session against people in the Hawick area who had charged more than 10 percent interest. Also in 1612, when he was Lord Clerk Register, he made an index of royal charters and other ancient Scottish documents. This was described in 1798 in a book edited by William Robertson and usually referred to as ‘Robertson’s Index’. Since many of these charters were lost, the index forms an invaluable record of early Scottish history. He became Lord of Session as Lord Duncairn, was raised to the peerage as Lord Binning in 1616, then created Earl of Melrose in 1619 and finally 1st Earl of Haddington in 1627. He gained the superiority of lands that had been held by Melrose Abbey (and latterly by John Ramsay, Earl of Holderness), including those in upper Teviotdale. He is recorded in a charter of 1619 granting the lands of ‘Hornshoill’ to Thomas, 2nd son of Thomas Turnbull of Minto. In 1621 the Earl of Buccleuch resigned the lands in Ringwoodfield to him. He also held lands in Belses that he leased in 1632 and that same year he feued Firth to Hector Turnbull and also feued lands in Ruecastle and Raperlaw. He probably sold the superiority of Melrose to the Scotts of Buccleuch. He married Margaret, daughter of James Borthwick of Newbyres and secondly Margaret Foulis and was succeeded by his son Thomas. Thomas Lord Binning (1600–40) son of 1st Earl of Haddington, he became 2nd Earl. This included inheriting his father’s lands in Roxburghshire and elsewhere, including superiority of lands formerly held by Melrose Abbey. There is a charter of Charles I to him for lands in the Borders, including ‘Hassendenbank, Brieryards, Clerkcroft, Kerswell and Hornshoile. He is listed as owner of most of the lands in Melrose Parish in 1643. He also held feu-duty for Riddell and Friarshaw in Lilliesleaf Parish. William (19th/20th C.) resident of Earlsdie. In 1906 he and his wife contributed to the fudn for renovating Kirkton Kirk. W.F. (20th C.) Burgh Surveyor in the 1940s.

handiconeive (hawn-dee-ko-niv) adv., arch. conjointly, with joint action and sharing, especially in a secretive enterprise – ‘We’se gae handiconeive about’ [JoJ].

Hand Sike (hawnnd-sik) n. small stream in Liddesdale, adjacent to the farm of Mangerton.

Handyside (hawn-dee-sid) n. William (17th C.) listed as resident at Mabonlaw on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. His name, written ‘Handiside’, is not common in the region.

hang (hawng) n. euphemism for ‘hell’ – ‘... A henni seen the forecast for the next ride-oots bit A hope ti hang hei gits nice weather’ [We] (note that this is never hing).

hang (hawng) pp., arch. hung – ‘...an, ferrer up...hang another caal, leike a bruch roond a muin’ [ECS] (also written ‘haang’; this was once a past tense for hing, with the past participle being ‘hungh’, as in English).

Hangany (haung-ga-na) n., arch. last day of the year, Hogmanany, also a gift given to children on this day – ‘As long as Allars House existed, the bairns got their ‘hanganay’ every Old Year’s Day’ [JTu] (also written ‘Hanginay’; cf. Hogmanay and Hangmanay).

Hangerhope (hawng-ur-hop) n. former farmstead situated on the slopes of Whiteacres Hill, to the south-east of Kaimend. The ruin is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map. Hangerhope Plantation is marked on current maps.

Hangingshaw (hawn-dee-shaw) n. site of 15th century house in the Yarrow valley, near Yarrowford, stronghold of ‘the Outlaw Murray’. These were Crown lands in the late 15th century. These were Crown lands in the late 15th century, leased by John and Patrick Murray. The lands remained with the Murray family for about 300 years. It was raided by ‘traitors of Leven’ brought in by Philip Turnbull in Whithope and David Turnbull with the Murray family for about 300 years. It was raided by ‘traitors of Leven’ brought in by Philip Turnbull in Whithope and David Turnbull Hangingshaw (in hanginay) n. hill in the upper Ale valley, to the west of Borthwickshiel. It reaches a height of 319 m. There are signs of an unenclosed settlement on the southern slopes. There is an old enclosure on the western side. Gilbert ‘de Hanguydeschawe’ in the county of Roxburgh, who swore fealty to Edward I in 1296 may have been connected with these lands (there is a hill of the same name near Wodan Law in Hownam Parish).

Hangingshaw Hill (hawnng-in-shaw-hil) n. former name for Hawthornside or perhaps adjacent or overlapping lands, in use in the 16th century. The lands were given to Richard of Hangingshaw after William Lorraine transferred his allegiance to the English King. ‘Jock o the Park’ Elliot held the lands in the late 16th century. The existence of a tower house there is suggested by the Peel Knowe just north-west of Hawthornside, and it is said that stone from the tower was used to build the new farmhouse. Gilbert Elliott of Stobs received a charter of the lands from the King in 1621 and his son William was served as his heir to the lands in 1645. In early times the farm may have been part of the Barony of Feu-Rule. It was incorporated into the Barony of Hallrule in 1649 (when both ‘Hangingshaw’ and ‘Hathernsyde’ were listed). Douglass of Cavers held the superiority until at least 1698. William Elliott of Stobs was served heir to his father in the lands of ‘Hanganyde’ in 1645 and it was listed in the late 17th century among the Elliott of Stobs properties in the Barony of Feu-Rule. It must have been soon after that the modern name of ‘Hawthornside’ was adopted. The land appears to have given rise to a surname (or vice versa), since the land was owned by Hangingshaw of that Ilk, but only for about half a century. This surname may have later been confounded with Handyside. The naming situation is more complicated, however, since the Hanganside family existed earlier, owning lands at Newton

Hangingside

Tradition states that the custom of the Murrays was to make visitors drink an intoxicating amount of ale from the ‘Hangingshaw Ladle’ – ‘Auld Juden he strayed by the side of a river, When the watcher on Hanginshaw-law loud did cry, – Ho, Juden, take care! or ye’re ruined for ever, The bungle of Aekwood has thrice sounded high’ [ES] (it is ‘Hangandschaw’ in 1456, 1468, 1484, 1494 and 1501, ‘Hangingschaw’ in 1502, ‘Hangandschau’ in 1507 and 1527 and, ‘Hangynschaw’ in 1535 and ‘Hangitschaw’ in 1541; it is ‘Hanginshaw’ on Blaue’s 1654 map; there are places of the same name elsewhere, e.g. opposite Heriot).

Hangingside

Don from the late 14th century (it was ‘Hangansyde’ in 1621 and ‘Hanginsyde’ in 1687 and 1698). Hangingside (hawng-in-süd) n. Adam (15th C.) recorded as ‘Adam de Hangaldside’ in 1426 when he was an inquest for Walter Scott of Rankilburn inheriting his father’s lands of Eilrig. A man of the same name was recorded as a monk of Melrose Abbey in Scott of Buccleuch document of 1519 and 1524. Alexander of that Ilk (16th C.) son of Richard. There was a confirmation in 1563 of a charter from his father of a third of the lands of Little Newton in Lauderdale to her and her husband Alexander Weddell. In 1595 his heirs were Helen and Barbara, presumably his daughters. He may thus have been the last in the male line. Alexander (16th/17th C.) probably son of John. He was a skinner in Edinburgh. In 1617 he married Margaret Symington in Edinburgh. Helen (16th/17th C.) probably daughter of Alexander of that Ilk. She and her sister Barbara, were ‘heirs portioner’ of Alexander. In 1595 they resigned the lands of Little Newton in Lauderdale to her and her husband Alexander Weddell. And in a crown charter of 1598 the 2 sisters resigned the lands of Hangansyde (probably the same as Hawthornside) to Alexander ‘Woddell’. She still held Little Newton in 1615, along with her 2nd husband Alexander McDowall. She also had a son, Alexander. John (d.bef. 1604) referred to as ‘in Nydrie Marchell’ in 1596 when his son John became a baker’s apprentice in Edinburgh, and his son Alexander became a skinner’s apprentice in 1604. Patrick (15th C.) recorded as witness to a sasine (of the lands of ‘Silwynislandis’) in 1436. He is referred to as ‘Patrick Hangatsyde’. Richard (14th C.) recorded in 1388 when he gave Kaimflat in the territory of Little Newton (in Lauderdale) to Kelso Abbey, for masses to be said for the soul of his superiors, William and James of Douglas. It seems that he held lands in the eastern part of what would be called Newton. Probably the same Richard was Bailie of the Earls of Douglas in the Barony of Dunbar, as recorded in 1420. Richard (15th/16th C.) granted the lands of ‘Hangetsyd’ (i.e. what would become Hawthornside) by James, Earl of Douglas. Since this was granted by James, Earl of Douglas, it was probably before 1488. The transfer may have been because William Lorraine had been the former owner and transferred his allegiance to England. There was a sasine confirming the lands to his son Richard in 1543. He is probably the ‘Ric. de Hangansyde, scutifero’ who witnessed a charter in 1432. Richard of that Ilk (16th C.) son of Richard. There was a sasine in his name for the lands of Hangingside in 1543. He was recorded among Border Lairds paying homage to the Duke of Somerset in about 1547. He was a juror for a retour in 1558. It appears he may have sold the lands to Jock Elliot of the Park in 1562, except that they were still held by his descendants Helen and Barbara in 1598. He is recorded as ‘Richard Hangitsyde of Littilnewtoun’ when he was part of a panel of 1562, deciding on a dispute in the Barony of Feu-Rule. In 1563 there is a confirmation of his charter to his son Alexander of a third part of the lands of Little Newton. Robert (17th C.) merchant in Edinburgh. George son of William (and presumably a relative) is recorded becoming his apprentice in 1643. Probably the same Robert married Agnes Garden in Edinburgh in 1642 and remarried in 1644 to Catherine Kinbli. Walter (16th/17th C.) cordiner in Edinburgh. In 1618 he married Alison Ewieson. William (15th C.) witness to a charter in 1432, along with several Wardlaws and others. William (15th C.) recorded as ‘Willel-mus Hangitsyde’ in a Glasgow Diocese record of 1494. He could have been related to the earlier William. William (16th C.) recorded in Hartwoodburn in 1581 when he promised to repay money he owed to James Fairgrieve in Carterhaugh. William (17th C.) merchant in Kelso. In 1643 his son George became a merchant’s apprentice to Robert in Edinburgh, who was presumably relative. (written ‘Hanganside’, ‘Hangansyde’, ‘Hangetsyde’, ‘Hanginsyde’, etc.).

Hangmanay (hawng-mun-ä) n., arch. the last day of the year (also Hanganay and Hogmanay).

Hangman’s Acre (hawng-munz-ä-kur) n. former name for lands in Liddesdale, of uncertain location, but probably near Castleton or Riccarton. It is recorded in the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale as ‘Hangmanis Aiker’, with value 30 pence and tenanted by Thomas Armstrong (it is possible that it is related to Hagiehaugh).

Hangmanshaa (hawng-munz-haw) n. sometimes variant of Haggisha. hangrel (hawng-grul) n., arch. a butcher’s hook for hanging a carcass, a gambrel, structure in a stable for hanging riding gear.

hankit (hawng-kee’, -ki’) pp. entangled, caught – ‘ma breeks er hankit on the wyre’.

Hankumshaugh (hawng-kumz-hawch) n. farm in the Slitrig valley, opposite the foot of the Flex Brae. Crops were swept away from there in the flood of 1846. It is referred to as ‘Hankholm Haugh’ in 1890. It is probably the same as Hummelknoweshauha.

hanlawhile (han-la-whil) n., arch. a short time, little while – ‘He wunna bide still a hanlawhile’ [GW].

Hannah (haw-but) n. William (b.c.1810) clogger in Hawick. In Pigot’s 1837 directory he is listed on Silver Street. In 1841 he was recorded at about No. 23 High Street. In 1836 he married Catherine McMorrine and their children included Nicholas, William and Walter. An unnamed child of his died in 1840.

hapshackle (hawp-shaw-kul) v., arch. to hobble (a horse), strap together the legs of an animal to prevent it straying.

har (hawr) v., arch. heard, did hear – ‘This eez the saicant sic column, A’ve haar’ tell ...’ [ECS] (also written ‘haar’ [ECS].

Harang see Herring

Harbottle Castle (hawr-bo-ul-kaw-sul) n. ruined castle on the Coquet River near Holystone village in Northumberland. First built by the Umfraville family in the 12th century, it was an important centre of power in the English Middle March. It was taken by Robert the Bruce in 1318, passed into the hands of Henry IV, and was ruined by the 17th century.

hard (hard) pp., arch. heard – ‘...wi’ some murder ance committed there. Aw hae hard sin’ syne that it was a Papish priest or bishop ...’ [BCM1880].

harden (har-din) n., arch. a coarse, grey cloth, sack-cloth, originally made from ‘hards’, adj., arch. made of course, grey, woollen cloth – ‘wi a bit harden seck roond um’, ‘Yon kitchen lass at Wulton Ludge Litts bonny in her harden daible’ [DH] (this is probably also confused with hodden and was formerly shortened to harn).

Harden (har-din) n. Harden House and the area surrounding it. This could be the Harden in Roxburghshire that was possessed by ‘Johan de Harden’ when he swore fealty to Edward I in 1296. The estate was owned by a branch of the Turnbulls in the 15th century, at least as early as 1431, and was resigned to the Baron of Wilton in 1468. In 1482 it was granted to John, son of Walter Turnbull of Harden, the symbolic payment being one silver penny at the principle manor of Wilton on the feast of the Nativity. By 1491 the ‘superiority’ of the lands lay with John Scott, Baron of the half Barony of Wilton, and the tenancy was given by the King to Alexander, Lord Home. This remained the case until 1501/2 when he had a ‘bond of reversion’ to Robert Scott of Stiches for £100 Scots for the lands of Harden. In 1506 it was part of the lands inherited by Alexander Home, at that time ‘was valued at 10 merks, in time of peace at 5 merks and held of the Earl of Bothwell as baron of the half barony of Wilton for one penny blesch’, but at that time also said to be ‘held for ward and relief’. It was confirmed to Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme in 1516 when Home’s estates were forfeited, but George, Lord Home had most of these reinstated in 1522, with the charter from Patrick, Earl of Bothwell to Walter Scott of Branxholme being revoked by the King in 1535. The Homes retained the superiority of the lands until well into the 16th century. In 1559 (perhaps 1550) Alexander Lord Home sold to William Scott of Todrig and his son Walter the lands of Harden, with tower, mains, etc., except for an acre of lands on the east side. The old house was destroyed around 1590, and the new one dates from the 17th century, with later additions. Tradition says that a child was brought here from England by mistake, wrapped among the plunder of a raid, and raised by a daughter of the Laird; he is claimed as the author of many of the Border ballads. There were 21 ‘communicants’ recorded there in 1650, namely Gideon Scott, Margaret Hamilton, William Fisher, William Riddell, Gilbert Gray, Thomas Gray, William Knox, James Scott, John Murray, Jean Shiel, Helen Scott, Margaret Wright, Alison Fairgrieve, Euphan Davidson, James, Scott, Thomas Govenlock, Chistian Govenlock, Janet Currer, Bessie Rule, Helen Scott and William Govenlock. In the 17th century there were separate farms at West Harden and East Harden (also called ‘Easter’ and ‘Wester’). The area was part of Wilton Parish until Robertson was formed in 1689/90. In 1694 there were 4 separate households recorded there (as well as the main house itself). The farm was still occupied by several households in the early 18th century. John Ker, Walter Noble and William Stewart were recorded there in 1694, Thomas Hunter in 1716 and Andrew Chisholme in 1721. Part was sold to the Buccleuch estates in 1727. James Hume was living there in 1752, James Cavers in the 1760s, James Watson in 1771, John Hobkirk in 1784, Robert Grieve and Robert Laidlaw in 1786, William Gray in 1787, John Turnbull in 1787–94, John Scott in 1788–89, James Miller in 1793, James Crow in 1798–1800 and Thomas Jackson in 1798. In 1788 it was valued along with West Highchesters at £486 6s 8d and in 1811 it was valued at £463 9s (along with Highesters Mill and Dunbush). Thomas Graham was farmer there in 1841 and 1851. A spindle whorl from the area was in Tom Scott’s collection, and a flint arrow-head was also found there – ‘As I came over the Harden hill A whaup on Harden (har-din) n. area to the east of Castleton, once with a tower house. ‘Hardenbank’ is listed on the 1541 rental roll for Liddesdale. ‘Seme Ellot of Harden’ is listed among the Elliot of Braidlie in 1583. Sandy Armstrong was there in 1623 and ‘Neather Harden’ was possessed by Sandy Armstrong and ‘Will in the Mylne’ in 1632. David Stark was tenant there in 1694, with George Scott also listed as a resident. Abraham Watson was farmer there in 1797. James Knox was there in 1868. It was still indicated on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map, but is now marked only as Harden Moss, Harden Burn and Harden Hill (further to the south-east). The location suggested for the former house is at the edge of a plantation on the left-hand side of the B6357 between Florida and Old Castleton. Confusingly, it appears to be combined with Highhouse, Hightrees, Howden and Burnmouth on the 1718 survey of properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch, although these other farmsteads are not very close in location, and so this may be an error (the tower is indicated on Gordon’s c. 1650 map, while Blaeu’s 1654 map shows ‘O. Hardenn’ and ‘N. Hardenn’). Hardenbank (har-din-bawngk) n. former name for lands in Liddesdale, recorded in the 1541 rental roll, and presumably part of Harden. At that time they were valued at 1 merk and tenanted by John Armstrong.

Harden Brig (har-din-brig) n. small stone road-bridge across the Harden Burn on the B711 Borthwick Road.

Harden Burn (har-din-burn) n. stream that joins the Borthwick just below Harden.

Harden Burn (har-din-burn) n. stream in Liddesdale, rising near the Border and running roughly westward to join the Liddel opposite the farm of Mains. It contains some waterfalls and was traditionally said to be the haunt of fairy folk.

Hardenburn (har-din-burn) n. place in Lilliesleaf Parish, where?? – ‘We’ve wandered up by Hardenburn, And to the muckle tree, Or through the fairy-haunted glen And ower the daised lea’ [FL].

Hardenburnfit (har-din-burnfit) n. former farmstead near the foot of the Harden Burn in Robertson Parish. It is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map near where the Merchelyton burn joins the Harden Burn. It is ‘Hardon burn’ in 1710 when James Scott was there. William Miller lived there in at least 1717–27. Robert Gledstains was there in 1753, Michael Johnston and Walter Coltant in 1771 and Thomas Stavert in 1781–84. Peter Deans and family were there in 1841 (it was ‘Harden burnfoot’ in 1720 and ‘Harden burnfoot’ in 1781).

Harden Cottage (har-din-ko’-cej) n. former cottage near Harden. Mason William Clerk and family were living there in 1841 and 1851.

Harden Gill (har-din-gil) n. small stream in upper Liddesdale, on the south side of the valley, between old Castleton and Mains, and distinct from Harden Burn, which lies a little further north.

Harden Glen (har-din-glen) n. deep ravine in front of Harden House, where the riving Scotts are said to have hidden stolen cattle, sometimes also called the ‘Beef Tub’. An early sketch was made by J.C. Schetky in 1808. Flakes of flint were found here in about 1938 – ‘And if your heart’s a Border heart, look down to Harden Glen, And hear the blue hills ringing with the restless hoofs again’ [WHO], ‘Can you see them in the moonlight as they ride thro’ Harden Glen, Spurred and booted, wild and fearless, to invade the English fen?’ [GHB], ‘High over Borthwick’s mountain flood; His wood embosomed mansion stood; In the dark glen, so deep below The herds of plundered England low’ [SWS].
Harden Glen Cottage

n. cottage near the cattle grid on the side road along the Harden Burn.

Harden Hill (har-din-hil) n. hill between Castleton village and Black Knowe in Liddesdale. It reaches a height of 288 m and has the Harden Burn to the north and Harden Moss to its north-west.

Hardenhoo (har-din-hoo) n. house marked on Blaeu's 1654 map in Liddesdale near the modern Hartsgarth. The notation on the map may indicate an abbreviation, perhaps for 'Hardenholm'. It is probably the same as 'Hardenkaul' listed on a rental roll c.1376 as being a 15-shilling land attached to Mangerton estate.

Harden Hoose (har-din-hoos) n. ancient seat of the Scotts, about 3 miles west of Hawick, home of Lord and Lady Polwarth, and famous as the former home of Border rievers such as Auld Wat of Harden. It is set dramatically above a deep ravine of a stream which joins the Borthwick, ideal for hiding stolen cattle, and planted with a surrounding woodland. The Scotts gained Harden from Lord Home in 1501. The earliest residence there was further down at 'Auld Harden' (although it is unclear whether this was the tower destroyed near the end of the 16th century or another). The present house dates from about 1630, with extensions around 1680–90, but may incorporate parts of an earlier one that was destroyed about 1592 (possibly by Walter Scott of Goldielands, following a royal order, because of Walter Scott of Harden's part in the Falkland Raid). There were also major renovations to the north side in the 19th century. The earliest house was oblong, with 2 storeys and an attic, extended to the south in the 1680s. The house has a steep roof with dormers and thick walls. In 1694 the house is listed as having 17 hearths. There is also a 17th century sundial from Dryburgh House just to the east, about 4 feet high and with a square dial-stone. To the west is a bowling green, which may date from the 17th century. The building became a farmhouse from the 18th century, while the seat of the Scotts of Harden was at Mertoun, and it fell into disrepair in the early 19th century, before being restored. However, the family returned in 1913, after major renovations and some alterations were made. It was the location of some Common Riding Ride-outs in the 1930s. Hawick Museum has the lock from the garret door of the house, as well as a door knocker. Other artefacts associated with the house include a powder flask engraved 'Judean Scoot of Heychesters', a set of spurs and a bugle horn scratched with many letters. A family tree of the Scotts, drawn up by Sir Walter Scott, is displayed in the house. The arms of Scott of Harden is a variant on that of Buccleuch, with 2 stars and a crescent, supported by 2 mermaids. Their motto is 'Reparabit Cornua Phoebe', usually translated as 'There will be moonlight again', referring to the habits of reiving days – 'Ho! For the blades of Harden! Ho! For the driven kye' [WHO], 'Tell of danger, warn the ranger, Harden rides again' [WL].

Harden Knowe (har-din-now) n. hill to the west and north of Harden House containing an ancient earthwork. It is the eastern spur of Mainshiel Head. The lands of Harden Knowes were in dispute in 1739 between Walter Scott of Harden and Pringle of Whitbank. The earthwork is situated on the high western side of the ravine, about 200 m from Harden House. It measures about 65 m by 50 m, and consists of 3 sides, with the ravine completing the rectangle. There are no traces of internal buildings, but the plan would suggest a mediaeval date. It has been obliterated to some extent by ploughing and is now partly covered by trees.

Hardenlees (har-din-leez) n. former lands in Liddesdale, recorded in the c.1376 rental roll as 'Hardenlys', with a value of 6 shillings and 8 pence. It is listed under the 'Foresta' section, which is to the north, and probably associated with Harden near Castleton (see Harden).

Harden Mains (har-din-mänz) n. farm just north of Oxnam (with no direct connection with the more local Harden). It was owned by the Rutherfords of Ruecastle and Knowesouth in the 17th century.

Harden Moss (har-din-mos) n. marshy region containing a small body of water to the north of Harden House and just south of Smasha Hill.

Harden Moss (har-din-mos) n. hilly region to the south-east of old Castleton, with Harden Hill further to the south-east.

Harden Place (har-din-plis) n. part of the Howdenbank development, built in 1967 and named after Harden House.

Harden Wud (har-din-wud) n. former lands that were part of the estate of Borthwickshiel. In 1445 'Henry of Wod chaplane' leased his tenantry of these lands to Andrew Ker of Altonburn. The lands were valued at 20 shillings per year. In 1471 these lands, along with Borthwickshiel were passed to Walter, heir of Andrew Ker of Cessford. It is unclear precisely where the lands were, but

hard gaun (hawrd-gawn) adj. tough going, arduous, demanding – ‘...which eez hard gaun on the Setterday morning o Hawick Common Ridin ...’ [CT].

Hardie (haw-dee) n. Adam (17th/18th C.) recorded at Mabonlaw in 1711 and 1713. His children included: James (b.1709), baptised in Wilton; Thomas (b.1711), baptised in Wilton; and Adam (b.1713), baptised in Roberton. Perhaps the same Adam had a son James (b.1720) baptised in Minto. Agnes ‘the Crocodile’ (d.1776) Hawick resident whose death is recorded with this unusual nickname. She could be the Agnes born to Patrick and Agnes Hardie in 1720 or the Agnes born to James and Janet Little in 1722. David (19th C.) farmer at Priesthaugh. He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1870. He could be the David who was farmer at Sorbie in 1861. David T. (19th/20th C.) secretary at Blenkhorn, Richardson & Co., Ltd. He served as Treasurer of Hawick Free Kirk 1889–95. His mother was Elizabeth Taylor. George (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen Crozier and their children included Andrew (b.1671). George (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Marion Renwick and their children included Margaret (b.1686). George (d.bef. 1721) tenant in Acreknowe. He is listed there on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. In 1721 his widow Elspeth Reid married smith John Scott. George (b.c.1785) hosiery manufacturer in Denholm. At one time he employed 20 workers. He was listed as a stocking maker in Pigot’s 1837 directory. In 1841 he was living on Westside with his wife Nelly. He appears to have been dead by 1851. George (b.c.1790) stockingmaker in Hawick. He is probably the George who was listed in trial papers in 1823 and whose family requested to be on the Hawick Poor Roll in 1827 when he was in prison. In 1841 he was living on the Kirk Wynd with his family in 1851 and 1861 was a widower there. His wife was Isabel (from Cavers Parish) and their children included: Agnes, who married a Thomson; Helen; Robert; Isabel; James; Alison; and Elizabeth. George C. (b.1822/3) farm labourer. In 1851 he was living at Woll Cottages and in 1861 at Dearlyburn. His wife was Elizabeth Riddle and their children included: Agnes; Catherine; Margaret; Robert; and Thomas. Henry (17th/18th C.) merchant of Hawick. He was listed ‘eist the water’ among those paying the Hearth Tax in Hawick in 1694. He is probably the ‘Harie’ who was listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick ‘eist the water’ in 1694. In 1702 he was fined for being found drinking during the time of the Sunday sermon at George Renwick’s inn. He may be the Henry who was married to Isobell Newbie, or Grizell Young. He is probably the Henry who witnessed a baptism for James Hardie in 1682 (with Walter Hardie as the other witness). Perhaps the same Henry (along with William, possibly his brother) was recorded in 1683 when he was among a group of men fined for throwing stones across the Teviot at night; they were fined for causing injury and ordered to pay for the clothes being bleached there that they damaged. Isabel (17th C.) daughter of cooper Robert. In 1683 she was struck by stones thrown across the Teviot by a group of men, wounding her, when she and Elspeth Scott (servant to Bailie Scott of Ormiston) were watching linen clothing that was being bleached there. James (15th C.) listed among the Roxburghshire men who had re- mission in 1488/9 from James IV for their support of the previous King, especially on the battlefield at Stirling. Most of the men appear to have been closely associated with Douglas of Cavers. James (17th C.) Hawick Councillor in 1668. Perhaps the same James is listed among those contributing to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He was also listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick ‘eist the water’ in 1694. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Bessie Hardie and their children included: Walter (b.1682); William (b.1684); Henry (b.1685); James (b.1687); and John (b.1689). The witnesses in 1682 were Walter Hardie and Henry Hardie, who may be related to him and his wife. James (17th C.) listed among the ‘Cottars in Hassanden’ on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He is surely related to the ‘John Hardis’, who is also listed there. James (17th/18th C.) described as ‘at ye Wester Kirk-style’ in 1723 when the Hawick Session gave him money ‘to buy a beast for carrieing heather, lead- ing of fuel, and carrieing to anie who would em- ploy him’ to help him support his wife and sev- eral small children. Probably the same James ‘Heardye’ was paid by the Council in 1739 for ‘liding 600 difeits to tolboothe’ (i.e. transporting 600 divots for the roof of the Tolboth). It is pos- sible he is the same James as the pedlar described by Robert Wilson. He could be the James, mar- ried to Janet Little, whose children baptised in Hawick included Agnes (b.1722), Mary (b.1724) and Janet (b.1727). James (18th C.) weaver in Cavers Parish. His children included: Agnes (b.1724); Alison (b.1725); Hugh (b.1727); Isabel (b.1729); and Agnes (again, b.1731). James (18th C.) merchant in Hawick Parish. In 1746 (along with flesher Robert) he witnessed a baptism for weaver Joseph Carruthers and Bessy Hardie. It seems likely he was related to both Robert and Bessy. James (18th C.) pedlar from Hawick. It is said (by Robert Wilson) that he was involved in the riot at the Winter Fair when the Commissioners of the Duke of Buccleuch tried to extract a duty. He apparently felled 5 Sheriff Officers with an oak club, which was afterwards held as a family relic. At the end of the scuffle he apparently shattered the sword of the leading Officer, and this was later recounted in a song (which does not survive). He may be the ‘Hardie’ recorded being paid by the Council in 1767 along with ‘Tinlin’ for watching the Auld Brig during that flood. A deceased James is described as a labouring man in Hawick in 1774 when his daughter Elizabeth married James Little in Edinburgh; whether this is the same man is unclear. A James, son of William and Bessie Scott was born in Hawick in 1720. James (18th/19th C.) farmer at ‘Doverford’ in Southdean Parish, according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. James (d.1808) weaver in Hawick, son of Robert. He married Betty Waugh in 1754 and their children included: John (b.1757); Helen (b.1760); John (again, b.1761); and Barbara (b.1764). The witnesses in 1757 were the same as those for another on the same day.

James (b.1803) son of Rev. Thomas Samuel and grand-nephew of Rev. Charters of Wilton. He was listed as a surgeon living at Wilton Manse in 1825 when he subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’. James (b.1805/6) shoemaker in Hawick. He was listed on the Kirk Wynd in Pigot’s 1837 directory and also on the 1841, living with his mother Jean. His wife was also Jean, and she died before 1851. Their children were Helen and Elizabeth. In 1851 he married Helen Kersel, who was from Jedburgh. By 1861 he was at 16 Buccleuch Street. James (b.1813–91) born at Bridgehouse, Castleton, son of William and Violet Douglas. He was an agricultural labourer, living at Hartsgarth Burnside in 1851 and on South Liddel Street in Newcastleton in 1861. He may be the James who was elder of Newcastleton U.P. Kirk in the latter part of the 19th century. In 1841 he married Jane (1814–97), daughter of Andrew Thomson and Janet Scott. Their children included: Janet (b.1841); Violet (b.1843), who married William Cowan; Helen (b.1845), who had a son, James; Elizabeth Margaret (1848–57); William (b.1850); and Andrew (1853–1902), who married Jane Murray and worked as a groom and caretaker in Northumberland.

James (b.1827/8) recorded as farm overseer at Deanbrae in 1851. James (d.1874) Church Officer for Hawick Free Kirk from 1855 until his death. He may be the James whose version of ‘Pawkie Paiterson’ was recorded in 1873 in Frank Hogg’s Transactions article on old songs. John (15th/16th C.) Chaplin of Hawick, who was witness to the 1519/20 marriage contract between Sir Walter Scott of Brauxholme and James Gledstains. He is recorded as ‘Schir Johnne Hardy, chaplane’ and was listed after the Chaplain, William Cunningham. Since he was designated ‘sir’, he must not have had a Masters degree, and was presumably an assistant to Cunningham. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet ‘Inglish’ (probably Inglis) and their children included: William (b.1650); John (b.1653); and Jean (b.1656). The witnesses in 1656 were William and Adam Elliot. John (17th C.) maltman in Hawick. In 1666 his servant George Irvine was fined for cutting divots at Myreslawgreen. He was recorded as a maltman in 1673 on the list of men named in the trial for the so-called riot at St. Jude’s Fair. He could be the John who witnessed a baptism for John Simpson in 1673. John (17th C.) farmer of lands adjacent to Southfield. In 1677 John Scott at Southfield was fined ‘for abusse the marches of Hawicke marching betuixt’ his lands and Southfield. He is mentioned in the Burgh Records in 1686 when 2 new marchers of the boundaries within the town were appointed; he was stated to have been a former marcher, along with William Purdom and William Paisley. He may be the same John who was resident on the west-side of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694, paying tax for 3 hearths. He may be the John whose son was the ‘younger’ recorded in the 1690s. He is probably the John who witnessed a baptism for John Elliot of Brugh in 1675. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Agnes Brown and their children included William (b.1672) and Agnes (b.1675). John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Wright and their children included Margaret (b.1673), Helen (b.1674), Isobel (b.1677), Marion (b.1679), Jane (b.1685) and Agnes (b.1686). John (b.1690) may also have been his child. John (17th/18th C.) recorded as a ‘student’ in 1680 when he witnessed a baptism for William Hardie. John John (1668/9–1731) carrier in Hawick, son of carrier Walter. In 1693 he was fined for ‘ane most egregious ryott commit by him upon the Sabbathday on Steven Greenshiells’ by pushing him out of his seat in the Loft of St. Mary’s, as well as pulling on his bonnet. He was recorded as a carrier when he witnessed baptisms in 1707 for fellow carrier William Aitken, younger, in 1708 for Robert Lamb (along with carrier James Aitken) and in 1718 for carrier William Aitken. He was listed as a ‘Tenent’ in 1725. He married Isabel Aitken, who died in 1739, aged 53; she was probably the eldest daughter of carrier William Aitken. Their children included: Bessie (b.1707); Margaret (b.1709); Agnes (b.1712); Helen (b.1713); Robert (b.1719); William (b.1722); John (b.1725); and 2 unnamed children (according to the gravestone). The witnesses in 1709 were John and William Gardner, in 1712 were merchant William Gardner and James Aitken ‘duke younger’ and in 1725 were mason Andrew Turnbull (married to Margaret Aitken) and tenant James Richardson (married Bessie Aitken). The family are buried in St. Mary’s along with the family of Bailie Robert, who must have been closely related (perhaps his brother). John (17th/18th C.) ‘younger, maltman’ in Hawick, on the 1693/4 subscribers’ list for the new Kirk bell. He was ‘John Hardie younger’ of the west-side of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. Since he was John younger, he was probably son of the maltman John recorded in the 1660s and 70s. He may have been the John Hardie, junior, maltman, who was uncle of Mary, wife of William Wilson (‘Whusky Wullie’), and hence had an only daughter, Agnes. He was ‘maltman’ in 1718 when he witnessed a baptism for flesher George Renwick. John (b.1679) son of Patrick and Janet Scott. He was a tailor in Hawick. Probably the same John was involved in some financial dealings with Walter Ruecastle in 1693, in connection with which Ruecastle assaulted the Bailie of Regality, William Scott. In 1706 he married Isobel, daughter of William Aitkin. Along with his new father-in-law he was fined for holding a ‘super-numery marriage’, i.e. having more guests than allowed by law. In fact the guests included the 2 Bailies, the Town Clerk, Scott of Horsleyhill and Dr. Scott. His children probably included: Bessie (b.1707); Agnes (b.1712); Helen (b.1713), who could be the Helen whose son Samuel was born in 1738, with ‘Father Dead’, or the Helen married to shoemaker Andrew Scott; Agnes (again, b.1716); Robert (b.1719); and William (b.c.1722). In the record for the 1707 baptism he is stated to be brother to ‘Bailie Hardie’, which presumably meant Robert; the witnesses were tailor James Cowan and James ‘Duke’ Aitken. He may be the merchant who (along with mealmaker William, who was probably related) witnessed a baptism for fisher John Chain in Hawick in 1703. John (17th/18th C.) merchant in Hawick. He was on the short-list of candidates for Cornet in 1710 and 1711, but was not elected. He is recorded as merchant of Hawick in 1712 when he married Helen Cowan, servant to Widow Bell in Edinburgh. He was fined by the Hawick Bailies for his ‘irregular marriage’, which was performed in the Canongate by ‘W. Selkirke’; this may have been William Selkirk, who was ousted in 1690 for being an Episcopalian, suggesting that either the bride or groom (or both) subscribed to this church. There are several Johns born in Hawick in the relevant period who could have been him, e.g. son of James and Jane in 1683, son of James and Bessie in 1689 or son of John in 1690. John (18th C.) married Margaret Scott in Kirkton Parish in 1716. Bailie John (1722–1800) councillor and manufacturer. He was grandson of Bailie Robert, although it is unclear who his parents were. It is also said that he had a brother nicknamed ‘Whether or No’. He is probably the weaver John who witnessed a baptism for gardener Alexander Donald in Hawick in 1757. He introduced stocking frames to Hawick in 1771, bringing 4 of them back from a business trip to Glasgow, and setting them up at 37 High Street (the screw of the first one in use is in the Museum’s collection). This is usually considered as the beginning of hosiery manufacturing in the town. As a result Hardie is sometimes referred to as ‘Father of the Hawick Knitwear Industry’, although he only worked in the hosiery business for a few years. However, it is said that people taught in his stocking-shop were transplanted to Wooler, Kelso, Jedburgh, Langholm, Melrose, Selkirk and elsewhere. There is a single example of his business records in the Museum. He was listed as a merchant when he witnessed baptisms in 1766 for Adam Pott and in 1767 for George Waldie. In 1769 he was appointed to the commission to discuss the Common with representatives of the Duke of Buccleuch. He was later accused of accepting a bribe in order to facilitate the Division of the Common. In 1771 he was paid by the Council for a bottle of wine when he carried out business with agents of the Duke of Buccleuch. In a description of Hawick's trade in about 1777 he is said to have had 4 frames for making stockings, with James Halden being the only other stocking manufacturer in Town, with 2 frames. He made on average 2400 pairs of stockings per year, but gave up ‘in consequence of family distress’, with John Nixon effectively taking over from him. In 1781, 1785, 1787 and 1789 he witnessed baptisms for William Roger. He is probably the John who paid the Horse Tax in Hawick most years in the period 1785–92 (listed as ‘Merchant’ some years). In 1787 and 1789–91 he paid tax for having a female servant. He owned land in several places around the town, for example being described as ‘portioner of Weensland’ in 1787; he was listed as owner of land valued at £36 5s 8d (purchased from the Scotts of Horsleyhill) in 1788 and still listed as owner in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls (although deceased by then); this land was later split between Mrs. Watson of Wilton Bank and Thomas Lindsay Watson. He was Bailie almost continuously from 1771–1800, being chosen more often as Magistrate than anyone else of his time (although at the end of 1772 and in 1774 he was ‘late Bailie’). In 1790 he stopped the rebel Cornet’s cavalcade from going out past the West Port (immortalised in the unofficial ‘shairny paidle’ verse of ‘Teribus’), felling the first of the rebel cavalcade. This allowed the elected Cornet and his party to proceed unmolested to the Moor, and hence the Common Riding passed without violence. He was known for his quick temper and for his upstanding and fearless manner. It is said that boys used to detour around the Cross so as to avoid his castigation as he leaned over his shop half-door. A story is told (by Robert Wilson) of how he was instructed by his doctor to go to Berwick to bathe in the sea a dozen or so times, which he did over only a couple of days, returning to his shop 3 days later and saying to his physician ‘And did ye imagine, Doctor, that I was to stay in Berwick ten or twal days? – ye ken that was impossible’. Another story tells how he surprised a supposedly dumb ‘spaeman’ in order to make him cry out and expose himself as a swindler; he was thereafter said to be able to make the dumb speak! Part of the dialogue from one of his court cases is preserved. He married Janet Elliot, and she died in 1760, aged 34. Their children included Margaret (b.1757). He secondly, in 1762, married Rebecca, daughter of George Swan; she died in 1809, aged 68. He had further children, including: John (b.1763); Rebecca (b.1764); Janet (b.1765); George (b.1766); Robert (b.1767); Rebecca (again, b.1768); John (again, 1769–82); Janet (again, b.1772); George Ann (perhaps 2 separate children, b.1774); and William (b.1776). It is worth noting that his wife had her first 7 babies at roughly yearly intervals, which is an unusually high rate. The witnesses in 1763 were James Henderson and William Elliot, in 1764 were George Swan (probably his father-in-law) and Church Officer Alexander Bune-van, in 1772 were Bailie (probably William again) Elliot and George Turnbull (perhaps his brother-in-law), and in 1774 were John Scott of Whitehaugh and George Turnbull (again). He was sitting Bailie in 1777 when he witnessed a baptism for George Turnbull and Isobel Hardie (perhaps his daughter) and another for Betty Hardie (perhaps also his daughter) and a man called Little. He witnessed a baptism for John Crosbie and Janet Hardie (probably his daughter) in 1796. The family gravestone records that 16 children in all are interred there (presumably they mostly died young). He is buried in St. Mary’s Cemetery, and in 1933 the Callants’ Club erected a bronze plaque at 37 High Street (near the Cross), where he lived. He was the last local male descendant of a long line of Hardies. John (18th/19th C.) listed along with Robert as a carrier in Hawick on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He had 5 work horses. Both he and Robert paid the cart tax in Hawick in 1785–1791. An unnamed child of his died in 1808 and his son John in 1809. He is probably the John, who married Helen Scott in 1751, and whose children included: James (b.1759); Elizabeth (b.1761); John (b.1763); and an unnamed child (b.1768). The witnesses in 1763 were Robert Hardie (perhaps his brother) and George Scott (probably related to his wife), and in 1768 were carrier Thomas Thomson and weaver George Turnbull. John (18th/19th C.) boot and shoe maker in Newcastle, listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories. In 1841 he was at about 22 North Hermitage Street. His wife was Agnes and they had a son, Robert. By 1851 he was receiving parish relief. John (1815–91) son of William and Violet Douglas. He was teacher at the small school at Burnmouth, south of Newcastle in the 1860s. He married Mary Fleming, who died in 1850, aged 28. John Mungo Wilson (1920–98) descendant of Bailie Robert, he presented the Drums and Fifes with 3 new drums in 1980 in commemoration of his great-grandfather Oliver’s Cornetship 150 years earlier. He was presented with one of the old drums in return. He worked in the oil industry, and was a life member of the Archaeological Society. Margaret (17th C.) resident of Headshaw in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when she was listed on the Hearth Tax roll among ‘ye poor’. Margaret Hunter (1801–44) daughter of Rev. Thomas Samuel and grand-niece of Rev. Charters of Wilton. She was ‘Miss Hardie, Wilton Manse’ in 1825 when she subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’. She married Rev. Joseph Thomson of Ednam. Mary (1717–96) wife of William Wilson, ‘Whusky Wullie’ (1713–91). She was one of 8 children, her siblings being: Janet (b.1712); Robert (b.1714); John (b.1719); Agnes (b.1720); John (again, b.1723); Christian (b.1725); and Janet (again, b.1729). When she married in 1737 she may have been the only surviving child. Her uncle was John, junior, maltman, and she was distantly related to Bailie John Hardie. Oliver (b.1800/1) Cornet in 1830, he lived at the foot of the Kirk Wynd and farmed at the Wellogate. He was also a church warden at St. Cuthbert’s. His wife was Margaret and their children included Mary, James and Robert. He was probably related to shoemaker James, who lived next door. Oliver (19th/20th C.) grocer on Silver Street, along with his brother Thomas Mason. They acquired the business of James Laing after his death. Along with his brother ‘T.M.’ they presented a new set of drums and fifes to the town in 1930, in commemoration of their grandfather’s Cornetship of 1830. He lived at 10 Wilton Hill Terrace. He served as a Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. Patrick (15th C.) resident of Linton. In 1493, along with James in Grahamslaw, he had remission for several crimes, including theft of 60 sheep from Wilton and arson there, as well as theft of 2 oxen from Robert Elliot. His surety was Andrew, son of Kirk Ker. Patrick (15th/16th C.) recorded as ‘Patrick Harde’ as a witness to a charter of David Scott of Hassendean in 1510/11. Patrick (17th C.) carrier in Hawick listed among those who subscribed to the fund for the new Kirk bell in Hawick in 1693/4. He may be the same resident of the west-side of Hawick recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. Parish. He married Janet Scott, who was served in 1667 as heir to her great-grandfather, Patrick Scott, surgeon in Hawick. Their children included: Robert (b.1670), who probably died young; Robert (1672–c.1738), carrier in Hawick; James (b.1675); John (b.1679); and Patrick (b.1682), cordiner in Hawick. It is said that the only sons who survived were Robert and Patrick (but this cannot be true if tailor John was also his son). Patrick (1682–c.1755) son of Patrick and Janet Scott. He was a cordiner (also referred to as shoemaker) in Hawick. His brother Robert was a carrier (but this may be meant for ‘cordiner’) in Hawick and died in about 1738. In 1735 he purchased a property on the west side of the Howe gate that had previously belonged to Robert Scott of Falnash. In 1743 he witnessed a baptism for carrier John Simpson. In Wilton in 1711 he married Agnes Hardie, only daughter of maltman John; it is unclear if they were cousins or otherwise distantly related. Their only surviving child was Mary (1717–96), who married William Wilson, ‘Whusky Wullie’, Burgh Procurator Fiscals. They also had children Janet (b.1712), Robert (b.1714), John (b.1719), Agnes (b.1720), John (again, b.1723), Christian (b.1725) and Janet (b.1729). The witnesses in 1712 were fleshers Robert and George Renwick and in 1725 were Robert Hardie (probably his brother) and James Simpson. Richard (17th C.) wright recorded as ‘Ritchie Hardie’ in 1644 when he was one of the men who appraised horses in Hawick for the Covenanters army. He is probably the Richard, married to Margaret Leyden, whose daughter Isobel was baptised in Hawick in 1636. Richard (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish, probably the son of Samuel baptised in 1731. He married Jean Beattie in 1756. Their children included: Helen (b.1760); Janet (b.1762); Betty (b.1766); Janet (again, b.1770); and Jane (b.1772–81). The witnesses in 1766 were smiths James and Robert Beattie (who were surely related to his wife) and in 1772 were the whole congregation. Robert (17th C.) cooper in Hawick. In 1683 his daughter Isabel was injured when she was watching linen clothing that were bleaching and a group of men threw stones across the Teviot. Robert (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Riddell and their children included: Margaret (b.1670); Bessie (b.1676); and Agnes (b.1681). The witnesses in 1767 were Walter Purdom and James Scott (perhaps the Bailies with those names). He is probably the Robert who witnessed a baptism for James Brydon in 1676 and another for John Glennie and Janet Riddell in 1678. He may be the Robert who was fined in 1657 for insulting Walter Purdom and James Thorbrand, Hawick’s Commissioners in Kelso, as well as calling the Burgh Officers ‘men-sworn lownes’. Bailie Robert (1661/2–1718) Hawick...
Hardie

merchant, who was Magistrate in at least 1701 and 1702. In 1699 he and Patrick Richardson petitioned for Hawick to be relieved from the ‘freedom of trade’ tax. In 1702 he and George Martin were listed as Bailies when they witnessed a baptism for tailor John Scott. In 1703 he and his wife were rebuked by the Kirk Session for making a disturbance at the wedding of his wife’s brother William Oliver (to Christian Hart). In 1704 he witnessed baptisms for tailor John Scott and for baxter Walter Boyd. He is recorded in 1705 as intermediary in a disputed bill between Gideon Scott of Highchester, William Little of Hassendean Townhead and Thomas Turnbull of Knowe. He was Senior Bailie in 1706 when the Cornet-Elect (Thomas Hardie, presumably not a close relative) refused to carry the decrepit flag; he took over the duties, carrying it out of town, while the Junior Bailie carried it back, and they appointed others to carry it at the Moor. Also in 1706 he was severely insulted by John Binnie, previous Bailie, who was then fined and barred from being on the Council in future. In 1707 his brother John had a child baptised; this suggests he was son of Patrick. He was still on the Town Council in 1707 (when a fine was imposed on the 2 acting Bailies) and was Bailie at the 1709 Common Riding. Along with Bailie James Burn he witnessed a baptism in 1709 for wigmaker John Scott. In 1710 he was stated to be one of the men given a key to the Charter Chest. He was also one of the Bailies in 1710, when the weavers resolved to settle their arguments over seating order in their loft in St. Mary’s. He was an ex-Bailie when the bond was granted by the Council (dated 1710, but recorded in the Town Book in 1711) to provide money for the Master of the new Grammar School. He witnessed further baptisms for shoemaker Robert Porteous in 1711 and for Town Herd Adam Hobkirk and for John Chisholme ‘Laird’ and for candlemaker George Turnbull and for shoemaker Robert Porteous in 1713. He was described as ‘present Bailie’ in a marriage record in Edinburgh in 1716. He is probably the Robert who was listed ‘eist the water’ in Hawick in the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694 and the merchant listed among those who subscribed to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He married Margaret Oliver, who was sister of merchant William Oliver, and related to ‘Auld Cash’; one of their grandsons was Bailie John. Their children included: Walter (b.1689); Margaret, who married baker Robert Simpson in Edinburgh in 1716; John (b.1701); Marion (b.1703); Archibald (b.1704); Elizabeth (b.1706); Alison (b.1707); Christian (b.1709); and Ann (b.1711). His wife apparently died in 1719, aged 61 (but this would surely have made her too old to have still been having children in 1711). The witnesses in 1689 were schoolmaster John Purdom and Walter Hume, in 1706 were Bailie John Binnie and baxter John Whillans and in 1709 were merchant William Oliver and baxter John Whillans. He was buried in St. Mary’s, where the family tombstone has been kept. Robert (17th/18th C.) cordiner in Hawick. He could be the son of Patrick baptised in 1672, if ‘carrier’ is an error for ‘cordiner’. In 1702 he was fined for being in drinke, and rambling under cloud of night, in company with ane vagabond woman’. A couple of months later he was fined again for ‘going through the town, under the cloud of might, being in drinke, disguised in women’s apparell, qby he terrified and a frighted sevear persons’. He is probably the son of Patrick and only brother of cordiner Patrick, who died in about 1738 without issue. He may be the Robert recorded in 1698 when court proceedings were continued against him, while it was established whether the arrest was made by ‘the town or re-gall officer’. He is probably the ‘tenent’ Robert who witnessed a baptism in 1725 for shoemaker Patrick (probably his brother). He could be the Robert whose daughter Mary married Michael Jolly in 1728. He is probably the shoemaker who married Barbara Brown and whose children, baptised in Hawick, included Gideon (b.1703); the baptismal witnesses were merchant Walter Oliver and glover John Hart. Robert (17th/18th C.) married Janet Armstrong in 1703, both being from Hawick Parish. He could be the same as one of the other Roberts. Robert (17th/18th C.) cooper in Hawick. He may be related to the earlier cooper of the same name. In 1712 he witnessed a baptism for weaver George Wight. Robert (17th/18th C.) fleshers in Hawick. In 1725 he witnessed a baptism for shoemaker Adam Kersel. In 1746 (along with merchant James) he witnessed a baptism for weaver Joseph Carruthers and Bessie Hardie; it seems likely that he was related to both James and Bessie. In 1721 he married Isobel, daughter of gardener John Tait. Their children included: Isobell (b.1723), who probably married carrier Thomas Thomson; Robert (b.1725); John (b.1726); Barbara (b.1728); James (b.1730); and Janet (b.1735). The witnesses in 1723 were weavers Andrew Jardine and Robert Turnbull and in 1726 were mason John Turnbull and weaver Andrew Jardine. In 1759 he witnessed a baptism for Thomas Thomson and Isabel Hardie (probably his daughter). Robert (18th C.) listed as a house servant at Midshiel in 1791, when he was working for Archibald Douglas. Robert (18th/19th C.) listed along with John as a carrier in Hawick on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. The same 2 men paid the cart tax in Hawick in 1785–91. They may have both been sons of the earlier flesher Robert. His daughter Nellie died in 1819. They are probably the Robert and John (in that order) who witnessed baptisms for John Douglas and Isobel Hardie (perhaps his daughter) in 1793 and 1795. He may be the Robert who witnessed a baptism for John in 1763. He could be the Robert who married Christian Lyon in Kirkton Parish in 1749 and whose children (baptised in Hawick) included Agnes (b.1756), Robert (b.1759), James (b.1761) and Robert (again, b.1765). Robert (d.bef. 1808) Hawick resident. His son James was a weaver whose death is recorded in Hawick in 1808. He could be the Robert who, along with James, witnessed a baptism for William in 1764. Robert (b.1791/2) farmer at Sorbie in Ewesdale. He was there in 1841 and 1851. His wife was Helen and their children included David (who was later overseer of the farm), Henry, Margaret, Walter, James, Janet, Isabella, Robert and John. Robert (d.bef. 1809) flesher in Hawick, possibly son of the earlier Robert. In 1809 his son William died. Rev. Dr. Robert (1808–37) born in Hawick, son of farmer John. He attended St. Andrews University 1822–3, then Glasgow and Edinburgh Universities. He became Professor of Rhetoric at Anderson’s College, Glasgow. He is probably the same Rev. Robert, LL.D. whose letter written on a voyage from Glasgow to Georgetown in 1837 has been published and is in the National Archives. He was appointed minister of St. Catherine’s, British Guiana, but must have died shortly afterwards. A portrait of him exists. Samuel (18th C.) resident of Hawick. He subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). He could be the Samuel baptised in Hawick in 1738, son of Helen. Thomas (17th C.) married Bessie Runciman in Roberton Parish in 1687, probably in the former Hassendean Parish. She was probably sister of Helen and Walter, who were married shortly before her in Roberton. In 1687 he witnessed a baptism for Walter Runciman (probably his brother-in-law). Thomas (17th C.) resident of Ashbybank who was listed in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Thomas (17th/18th C.) merchant in Hawick. He is listed as a merchant among those who subscribed to the fund for the new Kirk bell in Hawick in 1693/4. He (or perhaps his son) was probably the Thomas who was elected Cornet in 1706, but refused to carry the flag due to its decrepit condition. This led to near riots, with the Bailies taking over the responsibility, and the Council supplying a new flag for the following year. He was fined ten groats for his absence from the Common Riding and £20 for refusing to carry the Colour. He witnessed baptisms in 1707 for wigmaker Richard Miles, in 1711 for workman Adam Sanderson, in 1712 for William Miller and in 1714 for James Dickson. He is probably the Thomas who was an elder of Hawick Kirk, recorded in 1717 being appointed to collect monies from ‘Hillhousland, Weensland, and Weensland mille’, suggesting he lived in this area. He is probably the Thomas who witnessed a baptism for shoemaker John Gardner in 1718. In 1722 he was still an Elder, assigned to collect monies from the east end of the Town. He witnessed a baptism for workman James Dickson in 1723. He could be the Thomas, described as tenant in Hawick, who married Jean Irwin (or ‘Virran’), and whose children baptised in Hawick included: Helen (b.1712); Janet (b.1715); James (b.1718); Bessie (b.1721); and Barbara (b.1725), who was born posthumously. The witnesses in 1725 were Robert Huntly and Bailie Walter Purdom. Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident of Calfield in Wilton Parish. His son Thomas was baptised in 1709. Rev. Dr. Thomas Samuel (d.1810) son of James of the Customs House in Leith, and nephew of Dr. Charters of Wilton (his mother being Jean). He was educated at Edinburgh University, was licensed by the Presbytery of Edinburgh in 1794 and ordained in 1796 as the Chaplain to the 7th Fencibles. He was presented to Ashkirk Parish in late 1797 by Sir Gilbert Elliot of Minto and became minister at Ashkirk in 1798. He obtained a doctorate from Edinburgh University in 1805. He was described as knowledgeable, compassionate, charitable and modest. His voice was apparently rather feeble, but he was nevertheless said to be ‘in the first class of Scottish preachers’. He could be the Rev. Hardie who witnessed baptisms in Hawick in 1797 and 1803. He was recorded making efforts to distribute cheap grain to parishioners in 1799. In 1800 he married Jean Colville (who died in 1816), daughter of the minister of Ormiston. Their children included: Margaret Hunter (1801–44), who married Rev. Joseph Thomson of Ednam, previously of Teviothead; James (b.1803); Jane Charters (1805–21);
and Thomas Samuel (b.1810). In 1805 in Hawick he published a collection of exercises for schools, ‘Extracts for the use of parish schools’, which ran to 3 editions. His ‘Sermons’ were also published in Hawick in 1811 (edited by his uncle, Dr. Charters), and a manuscript copy was presented to the Museum by John Scott of Rodono in 1863. Walter see Wat Hardie. Walter (17th C.) described in 1686 as a ‘ traveller’ (i.e. a ‘carrier’) when he was fined for ‘speaking reprochfullie of the Minister of the toune before William Layng one of the present ‘Baylyes’. This was Rev. John Langlands, who was an Episcopalian, this being just before the Revolution. His son John was fined in 1693 for fighting in the Kirk. His wife was probably Janet Grieve, and their son John was baptised in Hawick in 1671. He may be the Walter who was listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick ‘eist the water’ in 1694. He may be the Walter who Falnash (probably Gideon Scott) confessed to striking in 1677, when he was punished by the Hawick Bailies. He is probably also the Walter for was fined in 1678 for saying that Walter Scott of West Port ‘would be hanged’. He may be the Walter who witnessed a baptism for James Hardie in 1682. Walter (17th/18th C.) wright in Hawick. In 1709 he witnessed a baptism for wright John Pringle. William (17th C.) described as a ‘cowpar’ (i.e. cooper) in a case in the Burgh Court of 1642 when he was fined, along with James Tudhope and Adam Martin on account of their livestock eating Gilbert Watt’s oats. He may be the William who married Bessie Scott in Hawick in 1638 and whose children included Thomas (b.1638). However, there are several alternative Williams at about the same time, e.g.: married to Malie Inglis, daughter Bessie baptised in 1641; married to Janet, daughter Isobel born in 1648 and sons William and James born in 1654 and 1657; married to Manie Leyden, daughter Helen born in 1648; or married to Helen Rennaldson, sons John and George born in 1644 and 1651. William (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish who married Janet Hardie. Their children included: Isobel (b.1648); William (b.1654); and James (b.1657). William (17th C.) ‘tacksman of the customs’ for the Earl of Queensberry in Hawick in 1673. That year there was a major disturbance when the agents of the Early tried to ‘ride the fair’, with him being imprisoned in the Tolbooth. The Hawick Bailies claimed that he had tried to extract ‘more than the usual custom’ from the market and refused to discuss this with them. William (17th C.) listed among the ‘Deficients in Hawick Parich’ in 1694. He appears to be at ‘The Tour of Hawick’. Perhaps the same William (along with Henry, perhaps his brother) is recorded in 1683 when he was among a group of men fined for throwing stones across the Teviot at night, injuring a couple of women who were watching their linens, and damaging the clothes being bleached there by James Brydon. William (17th/18th C.) mealmaker in Hawick. He was probably a member of the Hawick Council; in 1701 he was one of those appointed to collect the ‘stent’ in the area ‘east the wa- ter’. Presumably the same William is described as ‘mealmaker’ in 1703 when (along with merchant John) he witnessed a baptism for John Chain and in 1705 when he was appointed to collect another ‘stent’ for putting lead on the steeple of St. Mary’s. He could have been one of the farmers of the West-end. He could be the William who married Janet Scroggie and whose daughter Isobel was baptised in 1680 (with student John as one of the witnesses). He may be the same William mentioned in a case of 1685 when William Purdom was charged with abusing him and one of the Bailies. He may be the William, son of John and ‘Jenet Inglish’ born in Hawick in 1654 (their second son of that name) or the William born to James and Isobel Huntly in 1657. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Acreknowe. His daughter Janet was baptised in Kirkton Parish in 1718. William (17th/18th C.) maltman in Hawick. In 1724 he married Christian lookup, who was also from Hawick. William (18th C.) carrier in Hawick. In 1760 he witnessed a baptism for blacksmith Robert Young. He could also be the William who witnessed a baptism in 1777 for Betty Hardie and a man named Little; Bailie John Hardie was the other witness, suggesting they were brothers or some other close relation. William (18th/19th C.) Hawick butcher. He is listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, before carriers Robert and John, and so may have been closely related. He married Janet Scott in 1763 and their daughter Agnes was baptised in 1764. The witnesses were Robert and James, who were surely closely related. He could be the William ‘Caddan’ (the meaning of which is unclear) who died in 1809, son of flesher Robert. He could be the William, son of John, who was born in about 1722 and had brothers Robert and John. William (1779–1861) son of Thomas and Esther Armstrong, he was an agricultural labourer in Castle- ton Parish. He was listed among heads of house- holds 1835–41, living at Brighouse and Dinlabyre;
there was also a younger William in the Parish at that time, at Hudshouse. In 1851 he was at about 9 Doncaster Street in Newcastle. He married Violet, daughter of James Douglas, who died in 1856, aged 69. Their children included: Thomas (b.1811); James (1813–91), also a labourer in Castleton; John (1815–91), schoolmaster; Walter (1817–82), a labourer in Newcastle; Christian (b.1819), who died young; Esther (b.1822), who died in infancy; Elizabeth (or Betty, 1822–1900), who married William Telfer, grocer in Edinburgh; Christian (1826–54); William (1829–1916), who moved to Edinburgh; Kitty, who married Walter Ketchin; Esther (b.1831); and Matthew (b.1834). He died at Burnmouth Schoolhouse, where his son John was teacher. William (1829–1916) son of William and Violet Douglas, he was born in Castleton Parish. He moved to Edinburgh and worked as a railway porter. In 1870 he married Mary Knox and their children were Isabella and Violet (often spelled ‘Hardy’ in older records).

Hardie’s Byre (hawr-deez-b -ur) n. barn once near the top of the Loan, where the Hardie family farmed – ‘Up the Loan they went like fire, Till they came to Hardie’s byre ... ’[T].

Hardie’s Hill (hawr-deez-hil) n. hilly area near Crowbyres, named after the Hardie family who farmed there for generations. It reaches a height of 211m and has a triangulation pillar. It is sometimes known in the plural as ‘Hardie’s Hills’. The hollow (presumably to the south-west of the summit) was said to be where Hawick’s inhabitants hid when the English attacked the town. It was sometimes called ‘Auld Hawick’ (although how much this idea was invented in the era of Victorian romance is unclear). Its slopes were the scene of the ceremonial sod-cutting for the Hawick-Carlisle railway in 1859. A stone ball was found there in the Museum – ‘... O’ Hardie’s high and rugged hill An auld historic spot’ [GD], ‘’Tis sweet to see the gloamin’ grey Creep o’er the grassy fell, And mark the sunbeams gowden ray Light up old Hardie’s Hill’ [JT], ‘Here Hardie’s Hills in rugged beauty rise, With knowes and hollows interspersed between ... ’[JCG], ‘And saw the sun o’ Easter Heeze up and lowe until It kinned til a burnin’ buss The thorns on Hardie’s Hill’ [DH].

An hard up means oo erni weel, An no jusit short o cash’ [IWL] (also written ‘hard-up’; not usually used to indicate lack of money, E.C. Smith describes it as ‘a misleading idiom’).

hard-up gentry (hawrd-up-jen-tree) n., arch. the poor upper class – ‘Hard-up gentry = impe- cunious snobs’ [ECS].

Hardway (hawrd-wä) n. former name for lands in the Ewes valley. It is listed among the lands in Ewesdale held by Alexander, Lord Home in 1506 and 1509/10. It is recorded along with Mosspaul, Fiddleton and other lands in 1535 when superiority of parts of Ewesdale were confirmed to George, Lord Home. It is also listed as part of the Lordship of Ewesdale in about 1610. The lands were listed as ‘Hordway’ in 1663 among those owned by the Scots of Buccleuch in the Lordship of Ewesdale (it is ‘Hardvy’ in 1506).

Hardy see Harding

the Hare Cairn (thu-här-kärm) n. former ancient cairn which stood on the farm of Hyndlee in the headwaters of the Rule, now deep within the forest. It was close to the Wheel Causeway, near the shepherd’s cottage that was built later, the area called Swirefoot. The cairn was quite extensive, and said to have covered about an eighth of an acre. It was dismantled to build some sheppfolds and walls, and there was already no sign of it by 1859, although 2 burial cists were found beneath it. It is said that there was a slab bearing a carving of a leaf-shaped sword and cavities, which was sent to Abbotsford (also called ‘Haer Cairn’).

the Hare an Hoonds (thu-här-an-hoonds) n. hostelry at 60 High Street in the mid-19th century.
Harecairn Sike

Harecairn Sike (hār-rān-sīk) n. small stream in the southern part of Hobkirk Parish, which runs into the Hyndlee Burn. Near the head of the burn used to be Hare Cairn. The Ordnance Survey Name Book (in 1859) notes that although no trace of it survived, 2 cists had been found there. It lay on the path of part of an old road identified with the Wheel Causeway.

Hare Cleuch (hār-klooch) n. small stream to the west of Penchrise farm. There was a rifle range near here for Stobs Camp.

Harecleuchheid (hār-klooch-head) n. Harecleuchhead, former farmstead between Troutlawford and Penchrise, near the head of the Hare Cleuch. Labourer Thomas Douglas and family were there in 1841 and Edward Burton was shepherd there in 1861. A drove road used to pass near here (it is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Hare Grain (hār-grān) n. small stream that rise on Pike Hill and flows roughly to the east to join the Lairhope Burn to the west of Lairhope.

Haregrain (hār-grān) n. former farmstead on the Hare Grain, to the north of Hislop, near the boundary between Teviothead and Roberton Parishes. Robert Laidlaw was there in 1709. When Margaret Scott married William Scott (in Hislop) in Hawick in 1728, she was said to be from ‘Hairgrain’. By 1788 it was valued along with Falsash at £804, part of the properties of the Duke of Buccleuch. The value was still the same in 1811. Hairgrain Edge is the south-eastern extension of Pike Hill near there (it is ‘Hairgrain’ in 1788.

Hareheid Hill (hār-heed-hill) n. Harehead Hill, north of Philiphaugh. It reaches a height of 324 m and contains a triangulation pillar.

Hare Hill (hār-hill) n. hill to the east of the B6399 just after Berryfell farm, being the southwestern spur of Berryfell Hill. On its western slopes, crossed by the road, are 2 linear earthworks of fairly narrow proportions. One of them may have had a drainage function, leading down into Carlin Hole. The area to the north is known as Little Hare Hill.

Harehope Sike (hā-rup-sīk) n. small stream that rises between Threep Head and Esdale Law and runs roughly northwards to join the Ale Water.

Harekamb (hār-kawn) n. former name for lands in the southern part of Lilliesleaf Parish. In the early 13th century a piece of Walter of Riddell’s demesne lands below there were among those granted to Melrose Abbey. It is unclear how to pronounce the name, or what its modern equivalent might be (although it might be connected with Harelaw and Kames).

Harelaw (hār-law) n. farm between Lilliesleaf and Hassendean. A drove road used to pass here on its way to Groundistone and the Borthwick. This may also have shared part of its route with a Roman road, probably connecting Newstead with Raeburnfoot (although this is more speculative). James Turnbull was farmer there in 1851.

Harelaw (hār-law) n. name of an area right on the Border, east of Canonbie, site of the tower of Hector Armstrong in the late 16th century. There were also Grahams in this area in the 16th century. ‘Andro Armstrong, callant Lang Andro, in the Hairlaw’ is recorded in 1578/9. There was also a mill there. ‘Harlaw’ and ‘Harlawwood’ are listed among the Dumfriesshire possessions of the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1663 (also ‘Hairlaw’, it is ‘Hairlave’ in 1583 and ‘Harlaw’ in 1663).

Harelawcleuch (hawr-law-klooch) n. name for a former farm in Jedforest. It is described as 3 steadings valued at £3 6 shillings in 1538 and 1539. In the Exchequer Rolls the comptroller was allowed the ‘fermes’ from ‘Harlaclewch Vestir’ for the year of 1538. In 1541 Patrick Laidlaw, John Oliver and Richard Oliver were tenants in part of the farm, paying 33s 4d and John Laidlaw tenant in the other part, paying 11s 6d (it is ‘Hairlawcleuch’ in 1538 and 1539 and ‘Harlawcleuch’ in 1541).

Haremoss (hār-mos) n. the end of the main turnpike road through Hawick in the late 18th and early 19th centuries, established by the Scots-Dyke to Haremoss Road Act of 1764 (published 1770). It is on the A7 between Ashkirk and Selkirk, and marks the boundary of Roxburghshire with Selkirkshire. James Ruickbie was a toll-keeper here for a while. Haremoss Loch is on the right-hand side of the A7, and the area is known as Hare and Dunhog Moss Nature Reserve. Severel arrow-heads, flint scrapers and other prehistoric implements have been found in the area – ‘Where ye will get a whisky soss To moistify your middle, For now nae langer at Haremoss You’ll hear auld Ruickbie’s fiddle. By night or day’ [JR] (also written ‘Hare-moss’).

the headwaters is a sheepfold, as well as another old enclosure, visible on aerial photographs.

Harestanes (här-stänz) n. Regional Countryside Centre off the A68 near Ancrum. The mediæval hospital known as Ancrum Spittal stood nearby, and was burned in 1545. The farm was developed as the Home Farm of Monteviot Estate in the early 19th century, with the present farmhouse being built in 1877, and converted to a visitor centre and craft workshops in 1979–80. It provides a centre for wildlife interpretation and a starting point for several nearby walks (the name is reputedly from ancient standing stones that once existed here).

Hargrave (haw-grāv) n. James (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Nether Dykeraw according to the 1797 Dog Tax Rolls. James (1798–1865) born at Chesters (in Southdean), son of Joseph and Jane Melrose. He was educated at the old school at Stouslie and also at Gala Academy. Upon graduation he was a schoolmaster himself at Midlem for a couple of years. In 1819 he emigrated to join other family members in Quebec, Canada and worked as a fur-trader for the Hudson’s Bay Company for over 40 years. He started as a clerk in 1821 and finished as Chief Factor at the isolated York factory in Rupert’s Land (in modern Manitoba) on Hudson Bay, retiring to Ontario. He married Letitia Mactavish and their children included Joseph James, Letitia Lockhart, Mary Jane and Dugal John. Much early correspondence of his still survives, some published in ‘The Hargrave Correspondence’ (1938) and others in ‘The Letters of Letitia Hargrave’ (1947).

Hargreaves (har-greevz) n. John (18th/19th C.) carrier who purchased premises at 16 Buccleuch Street in 1820, developing stables and a warehouse there. The property is labelled ‘Mr. Hargreave’ on Wood’s 1824 map, and would later become the Grapes Inn. He is listed in 1825/6 as a carrier who purchased premises at 16 Buccleuch Street, and would later become the “M Mathers Close.” In 1849 he married Joan Kersel, from Jedburgh. Their children included Robert, Adam and Joseph. In 1861 the family were living on the High Street, and he was a frameworker in Hawick. In about 1830 he was responsible for transporting 4 steam-powered looms from Manchester to Hawick. He is listed in Pigot’s 1837 register with service to Carlisle, Edinburgh and the English north-west on Tuesdays and Fridays. He is probably the John whose heirs are recorded owning part of the former lands of Patrick Cunningham in Hawick in about 1874.

Hargreaves (har-greevz) n. firm of carriers in the 19th century. Before the coming of the railway, their wagon passed through Hawick twice a week each way, carrying goods between Edinburgh and London. They brought the first 4 power looms to Hawick from Manchester in 1830, the trip taking 3 weeks. They are listed as ‘John Hargreaves, agent Walter Jardine’ in Pigot’s 1825 directory.

Harrison (har-par) n. John (17th C.) tenant in Fenwick who in 1684 appeared before the Privy Council for being a Covenant and was banished. This was along with William Laing.

Harterhill (har-par-hil) n. former name for lands in the Barony of Cavers that were part of the lands belonging to the ‘hospitaile de Rowle’ (i.e. Spittal-on-Rule). An acre of arable land there was granted to Archibald Elliot in Gorrenberry (probably the same as Archibald of Faldon) by James Douglas of Cavers in 1554, along with the advowson of the chapel at Caerlenrig. In a following letter of reversion, Elliot agreed to pay 86 pounds Scots for the holding the land and patronage for 13 years. This acre was said to be ‘super lie Harparhill’ and be then occupied by William Storie. It is unclear whether the land was near Spittal-on-Rule or near Caerlenrig or elsewhere.

Harrison (haw-re-sin) n. John (19th C.) resident of Teviothead Parish. In 1858 he married Joanna, daughter of Henry Elliot, tenant in Colterscleuch. Their children were: Ettie (b.1860); Margaret Charlton (b.1865–1935); John (b.1867); Henry (b.1869); Janette (b.1873); Walter at Lockiesedge.

Harry o Burnheid (haw-re-ö-burn-heed) n. nickname of Henry Paterson.

Harry’s Well (haw-rez-wel) n. popular name for a well at Burnhead, so named because ‘Harry o Burnheid’ used to sit there.

Hart (har/, her/) n. Adam (17th/18th C.) married Jean Armstrong in Wilton in 1704. Their son Adam was baptised in 1704. Perhaps Bessie (b.1707) and Isabel (b.1710), baptised in Cavers Parish, were also his children. Adam (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. In 1733 he was in Deanbrae and in 1737 in Ormiston. He married Bessie Robson in Wilton in 1731. His children included: Christine (b.1733); George (b.1737); and James (b.1740). Adam (18th C.) married Mary Helm in Cavers Parish in 1752. Adam (18th C.) witnessed a baptism for James Dalgleish (resident of Goldielands) in 1778. Perhaps the same Adam witnessed a baptism in Hawick in 1772 for James Nichol and Christian Hart. He could be the Adam who married Janet Hislop in Wilton in 1770, with children Jean (b.1771) and Bessie (b.1774). Perhaps the same Adam married Margaret Tait in Wilton in 1775. Adam (b.1774) son of James and Helen Riddell, he was born in Wilton Parish. In 1841 he was farmer at ‘Lower Lockies hedge’. He married Alison Turnbull in 1800. Their children included: James (b.1801), weaver; Walter (b.1805), also a weaver; Adam (b.1808); John (b.1813), coal merchant; and Helen (b.1816/7), who kept house for her unmarried brothers James and Walter at Lockiesedge. Adam (b.1808) son of Adam and Alison Turnbull. He was living at Greensidehall in 1851, with his wife Isabella and children Adam, William and Isabella. Adam (19th C.) Cornet in 1863 and Acting Father in 1889. He worked as a carter. He was a Town Councillor and strong supporter of the Common Riding and was Master of Ceremonies at Common Riding events through the 1890s. He was one of the Councillors who turned out at Common Ridings from the late 1880s, encouraging others to do the same. He can be seen riding near the head of the Procession in the 1899 film clip. He may be the Adam of Lockieshedge whose son George Turnbull was killed in the Boer War in 1900. In 1898 he was involved in a dispute with the Hawick Police Commissioners over payment for work at Wilton Hill and Bridge Street, which was settled in the Court of Session. Later that year he was fined for threatening the Burgh Surveyor John Manuel on the Street, complaining that he had ruined him. Andrew (17th C.) maltman in Hawick listed among those contributing to funds for the new Kirk bell in 1693/4. He is probably the Andrew listed ‘eist the water’ among those paying the Hearth Tax in Hawick in 1694. He may be the Andrew who married Margaret Yule in Jedburgh in 1679 and whose children, born in Hawick, included: George (b.1681); Andrew (b.1684); and James (b.1686). The witnesses in 1684 were William Douglas and Robert Scott. He witnessed a baptism for William Taylor in 1682. Andrew (17th/18th C.) maltman in Hawick. He is probably son of the earlier Andrew (unless the same man married for a second time late in life). In 1723 he married Agnes Rule, who was also from Hawick Parish. Fr. Dominic (?–??) priest at S.S. Mary & David’s 1930–38. He oversaw the opening of the new Halls shortly after he arrived. He was transferred to Lochgelly. George (17th C.) blacksmith in Minto Parish who appears in the Hearth Tax records of 1694. George (18th/19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish who married Janet Stewart in 1752. Their children included: Isabel (b.1753); James (b.1754); George (b.1756); Janet (b.1758); William (b.1760); Isabel (b.1763); and Mary (b.1765). Probably the same George witnessed baptisms for George Scott in 1747, for James Beattie and William Telfer (both in Borthaugh) in 1758 and for William Riddell in 1759. George (18th/19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish who married Margaret Elliot in 1771. John (b.1758) was probably his son. George (18th/19th C.) recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as farmer at East Highchesters, when he owned 2 horses. He was also recorded living at Highchesters in 1799. He married Helen Knox in Hawick Parish in 1785 and had children George (b.1787), Jean (b.1788), James (b.1789), Janet (b.1792), Nelly (b.1794), Isobel (b.1796), Elizabeth (b.1798), George (b.1799) and George (again, b.1800). The first 6 children were baptised in Wilton Parish and the others in Hawick and Roberton. George (18th/19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish who married Agnes Stot. Their son John was baptised in 1778. He may be the father of an unnamed son (b.1779) and Thomas (b.1787). George (b.1800) born in Roberton Parish, son of George and Helen Knox. He was probably related to the earlier George and William who were at Highchesters. He was farmer at Highchesters in 1841, was shepherd at the Malt Steep in Wilton in 1851 and was ‘Farm Steward, Game Keeper & Shepherd’ at Pilrig in 1861. His wife was Jane (from Dundee) and their children included: John; Isabel; George; and William. Hector McBean (1890–1972) born in Hawick, he played for Hawick Waverley Rugby Club and became a teacher. He served in the K.O.S.B. during WWI. He spent 27 years teaching Latin and coaching American football at Greenwich Country Day School in Connecticut, U.S.A. (from its foundation). Here he was said to be very popular with his pupils and was apparently the most inspirational teacher President George Bush (Senior) ever had! He retired back to the Hawick area in 1952, living at Midlem, Lilliesleaf, Hawick and finally North Berwick. He taught Latin at Hawick High School for a couple of years and became active in St. Cuthbert’s Kirk. He wrote ‘St. Cuthbert’s Scottish Episcopal Church, Hawick, A Centenary Chronicle, 1858–1958’. It is unclear if he was related to Rev. James William Tasker Hart. James (17th/18th C.) tenant at Appletreehall. He married Isobel Moore in 1703 and their daughter Isobel was baptised in 1705. George (b.1709) was probably also his son. In 1711 he was recorded as tenant in Easter Burnfoot when his daughter Jean was baptised. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Helen (or ‘Nelly’) Riddell and their children included: Adam (b.1774); John (b.1776); James (b.1779); Jean (b.1781); and Betty (b.1784). James ‘Hart of Harts’ (c.1753–1818) farmer at Wilton Burn. It is said that at the age of 25 he stood 6 feet 3 inches tall, weighted 33 stones and was the strongest man in Scotland. He may be the son of George and Janet Stuart, born in Wilton in 1754, with siblings George, William, Isabel, Mary and another brother. He is probably the James recorded as owner of part of Roughheugh (valued at £10 6s 8d) in 1788, and still recorded there in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Martha Elliot and their children included James (b.1785). Rev. James William Tasker (19th/20th C.) rector of St. Cuthbert’s 1892–1903. He had been minister at Barnes (Surrey), Teddington (Middlesex), St. Paul’s (Bristol), St. George’s (Bristol), Leckhampton (Gloucester) and St. Paul’s (Swindon), but exchanged with Rev. Douglas Powell.

He wrote ‘The Autobiography of Judas Iscariot, A Character Study’ (1884). Jason great-great-grandson of Adam, Cornet in 1863. He followed the Cornet as a youth. He became a professional jockey and has had over 500 winners. He lives in Yorkshire. Jean (17th/18th C.) Hawick resident who possibly kept a boarding house, or took in orphans perhaps. In 1725 she was given money and grain for keeping Bettie Hay and someone else with the surname Jolly. She could be the Jean who was married to William Bruntfield and had 6 children baptised in Hawick Parish in the period 1712-21. John (17th/18th C.) glover and innkeeper in Hawick. He was listed among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He witnessed baptisms in 1696 for William Swan, in 1699 for James ‘Colwort’ in Whitlaw, in 1700 for gardener Gideon Gardner and for flesher Thomas Wilson, in 1701 for tailor William Scott, merchant George Martin and James Grieve from Wilton, in 1702 for James Robson’s illegitimate child and for Bailie George Martin, in 1703 for shoemaker Robert Hardie, in 1704 for tailor Robert Wilson and for shoemaker Robert Allan, and in 1705 for Walter Scott in Hawick Shiel. In 1702, along with ex-Bailie John Binnie and merchant Patrick Angus, he was fined for drinking after the ringing of the 10 o’clock bell. In 1702 he complained about 25 people (including the 2 Bailies), being illegally involved with dealing in foreign cloth, woollen garments etc.; his name is written ‘Heart’. Also in 1702 he witnessed a couple of baptisms in Hawick. In 1703 he was fined for the ‘penny-bridal’ at the wedding of his daughter Christian to William Oliver; he was also temporarily removed as an Elder. In 1704 he witnessed baptisms for Bailie George Martin and for tailor Thomas Wilson. He may be the John whose daughter Mary married James Weens in Hawick in 1717. He could be the John listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick ‘eist the water’ in 1694. John (b.1813) son of Adam and Alison Turnbull. He was listed among heads of households in 1840 and 1841 as a ploughman at Silverbuthall. He was listed as an agricultural labourer at Silverbuthall in 1841 and 1851 and a coal merchant at Lockiesedge in 1861. His wife was Betsy and their children included Margaret, Adam, Alison T. and James K. William (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, living at Whitfield in 1790. He married Margaret (or ‘Peggy’) Scott and their children included: Christian (b.1788); Janet (b.1790); Margaret (b.1792); and Mary (b.1796). William (18th/19th C.) resident of Highchester. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821 along with ‘G. Hart, Haychesters’. He could be the William, son of George and Janet Stewart born in Wilton Parish in 1760 and the William married to Margaret Scott, whose children born in Wilton included Mary Christian (b.1788), Margaret (b.1792) and Mary (b.1796). He may also have had a son George born in Cavers Parish in 1802, William ‘Billy’ (20th C.) known for singing ‘The Mosstrooper’s Song’ and ‘The Callant’. He sings the former song on ‘Songs of Hawick, Volume Two’ (also formerly written ‘Heart’ and ‘Hert’).

Hartop (har-top) n. Benny (1936/7– ) well-known in Hawick for his success on both the cricket and rugby fields. He grew up in Green Terrace and apprenticed at Woodcock’s. He played cricket in the Parks League, later joining the Hawick & Wilton club and becoming Captain. The team won the Border League in 1964 and the Border Knockout Cup in 1967. He also played football as a wing-half for the Legion (later serving as Captain), as well as for the Albert. His sons are Benny and Graeme. Benny son of Benny and elder brother of Graeme. He played for Hawick & Wilton Cricket Club, holding a club record of scoring 204 not out in 1984. He also played football for the Legion. Graeme Thomas (1964– ) son of Benny, he was born in Hawick, and educated at the High School. He trained as an accountant and in 1994 became Managing Director of Scottish Widows Bank. He wrote the words for ‘The Best O’ A’ when still in school, with teacher James Letham setting it to music.

Hartrigge (hart-rig) n. farm about a mile north-east of Jedburgh. It was owned by the Kirktons of Stewartfield in the early 17th century, passed to Francis Scott of Mangerton and then to Capt. James Stewart of Stewartfield, when the name was changed. Thereafter it passed to the Davidsongs and the Millers and Lord Campbell (nephew of the minister of Ancrum) had a new mansion built there in the 19th century. The 1788 county valuation lists 24 parcels of lands composing ‘the Estate now known by the name of Stewartfield, but was formerly called Hartrig, Thirs-side, and the lands in Ulston’, together valued at £1077 6s. James Elliot of Wolfelee was living Harts there in 1837. In the latter part of the 19th century it was owned by Lord Stratheden and Campbell. Much of the original planted landscape survives, although with modern intrusions (also written ‘Hartrig’); the origin is probably from Old English ‘heorot’ and Old Norse ‘hyrygge’, meaning ‘the river frequented by stags’; this name appeared in 1730, having previously been known as ‘Stewartfield’ and once the property of the steward of Jedburgh Abbey).

Harts (harts) n. former lands in Liddesdale, valued at 12 shillings in a rental roll of c.1376. It seems likely this was related to Hartsgarth and Hartside, which are also listed.

Hartsgarth (harts-gawrth) n. farm on the Hartsgarth Burn, between Hermitage and Newcastleton. It occurs in a rental roll of c.1376, with a value of 3 shillings. It was home to a branch of the Elliots in the late 16th and early 17th centuries. There was formerly a tower-house there, but its precise location is unknown (although marked next to the modern farmhouse on the 1862 Ordnance Survey map). Jeffrey suggests that 3 large stones from the old house were built into the garden gate at Redheugh. It was granted to Robert Elliot of Redheugh by Archibald Douglas, Earl of Angus in 1479. ‘Rowie Croser in Harthskarthburnfute’ is recorded in 1611. In about 1622 the wadset of the farm was purchased by William (for 3,800 merks), brother of Robert Elliot of Redheugh. Through marriage to his niece the lands became owned by James Elliot, 6th son of Gibbie of Stobs by 1639. Rowie Crozier was tenant there in 1622 and 1623. It is traditionally said that Margaret Kidd lived there, providing several illegitimate children to Elliot of Larriston, including perhaps ‘Gibbie wi the Gowden Garters’. The lands were valued (along with Langhaugh) at £466 13s 4d in 1678. Robert Elliot of Larriston became bankrupt and sold the lands to Christopher Irving of Binks in 1688. Irving’s daughter married Adam Beattie who became the next Laird. It was sold by Adam Beattie to John Oliver of Dinlabyre in about 1700, and sold by William Oliver to William Sharp in 1773, who was there until at least 1789; he was recorded as owner in the 1788 county valuation and in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls, when it was valued (along with Langhaugh) at about £466 13s 4d. John Douglas was farmer there in 1797 and James Douglas was shepherd. The Beatties were owners in the early 19th century. John Barrie was farmer there in 1868. South of the farm was formerly the steadying of Hartsgarthburnside.

Hartsgarth Fell, to the west, and on the border with Dumfriesshire, reaches a height of 551 m (the name probably derives from Old English ‘heorot’ and Old Norse ‘skarth’, meaning ‘stag’s pass’; it first occurs as ‘Hyrtsigarth’ around 1376 and is ‘hartsgarth et le faulde’ in 1479, is ‘Hartstarth’ in 1557, ‘Harskarth’ in 1583, ‘Hartstarth’ in 1584, ‘Hartscarth’ in 1586, ‘Hartscairn’ in about 1590, ‘harietisgirth’ in 1613, ‘Hartigarth’ in 1618, ‘Hartgarthe’ in about 1624, ‘Hartisgarth’ in 1637, ‘Hartiscarthe’ in 1642, ‘Harts-carth’ in about 1720 and ‘Hargath’ in 1797; it appears as ‘Herskerth’ on Sandison’s c.1590 map and ‘Harsketth’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map and has its modern spelling on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Hartsgarth Burn (harts-gawrth-burn) n. stream in Liddesdale. It rises in a number of smaller streams, including the Routing Burn, Back Sike, Green Sike, Trough Sike and Cuttit Sike on Dinley Moss, Hartsgarth Fell and Roan Fell, on the border off Roxburghshire with Dumfriesshire. It runs down past Hartsgarth to join the Hermitage Water at Leahaugh. There are many old sheepfolds, shepherd’s bothies and cairns in the higher parts, as well as theformer steadying of Hatsgarthburnside just south of Hartsgarth.

Hartsgarthburnside (harts-gawrth-burnsiid) n. former farmstead on the opposite bank of Hartsgarth Burn from the main farm of Hartsgarth. John Elliot and family lived there in 1835 (marked on the 1862 Ordnance Survey map).

Hartshaugh (harts-ach) n. farm just south of Bonchester, on the opposite side of the Rule Water from Hobkirk Kirk. It used to have an adjacent have a corn mill. In 1569 the superiority was acquired by Adam French from the monks of Jedburgh Abbey, along with several other lands, and this passed to Alexander Lord Home in 1587. It was once part of the Barony of Abbotrule, but later became part of the Wolfelee estate. Thomas Turnbull, son of Eckie, was recorded there in 1579. A branch of the Turnbulls held charters for the lands from at least 1604, but had been ‘kindly tenants’ of Jedburgh Abbey there for many generations before; this same branch also owned Wester Swanshiel until 1778. Hector Turnbull, Adam Turnbull and William Rutherford were there in 1619. Lyle Turnbull was there in 1623. Gilbert Elliott acquired the land through ‘non-entry’ in 1630 and it was owned by William Elliot (formerly of Rigg and Hartsgarth) from about 1640. Lawrie Turnbull was owner in 1643, when it was valued at £15 (although Gilbert
Hartshaugh Mill

Elliott of Craigend and Hartshaugh also owned lands in Abbotrule valued at £65, so perhaps the whole farm was valued at £80. It was among lands whose superiority was inherited by daughters of George Scott (brother of Sir Walter of Whitslade) in 1670. It was again farmed by Turnbulls in the 17th century. In 1694 Walter Riddell was tenant there, with Andrew Dodds the blacksmith and James Haig, Andrew Turnbull, Adam Scott and John ‘Hinge’ also resident there. Later ownership passed to the Elphinstones, with William Elphinstone being recorded as owner in 1707, when it was valued £60 (including the mill and mill lands). It was sold to William Kerr of Abbotrule in 1713. In the 18th century there was an annual horse race on a haugh near here. It was part of the lands sold off by William Kerr of Abbotrule in 1751. In 1788 it was part of the estate of Cornelius Elliot of Wolfelee and valued (along with Hartshaugh Mill) at £60. 2 spindle whorls from the farm are in Hawick Museum (spelled ‘Hartishauach’ in 1567, ‘Hairtsischauch’ in 1588 and also ‘Hartishauch’, ‘Hartisheuch’, ‘Hartishauche’, ‘Harticshaughe’, ‘Hartishauche’, ‘Hart’s-haugh’, ‘Harty’s-haugh’, ‘Hartshaughe’, ‘Heartshauge’, etc.; it is marked as ‘Hartshauch’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map and has the modern spelling by Stobie’s 1770 map; the name presumably derives from deer).

Hartshaugh Mill (hert-suf-mil) n. former separate farm just south of Hartshaugh, containing a corn mill. The extensive mill lade (marked on Stobie’s 1770 map and the 1863 Ordnance Survey map) had its cauld about half way between Forkins and the mill. Adam Turnbull was there in 1623. William Elfinstone was tenant there in 1694. Janet Wilkie from there died in 1760. Thomas Smith was tenant in 1788 and 1797 and is still listed as miller there in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. It was listed among the properties of Cornelius Elliot of Wolfelee in 1788 (and still in 1811): along with the mill lands, Braidhaugh, Mackside and Blackcleughmouth it was valued at £355 2s. John Short was listed as miller there in 1837 and 1852. James Laidlaw was farmer there in the 1860s and a Mr. Waugh about the 1780s. Part of the lands of Unthank were incorporated within the farm around the early 19th century. The lands were once part of the Barony of Abbotrule, and were sold by William Kerr of Abbotrule to William Elliot of Wolfelee in 1751. Behind the stable door used to hang a perforated stone, used as a charm to stop witches from using horses at night (sometimes written ‘Hartisheugh’; it is ‘Hartshauche Mill’ in 1623, ‘hartschaugh milne’ in 1681, ‘hartshaughmilne’ in 1694, ‘Hartshaughmiln’ in 1751 and ‘Hartsheughmiln’ in 1797).

Hartside (hart-síd) n. former farm in Liddesdale, to the north of Cleuchhead. Hartside Sike is still on the map there. It may be related to the lands of ‘Hyrtilstede’ listed on a c.1376 rental roll (marked on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Hartside Sike (hart-síd-sík) n. stream in Liddesdale, rising on the southern slopes of Arnton Fell and running roughly south-easterly to join the Liddel Water to the east of Steelroadd-end.

Hartsteed (harts-steel) n. former lands in the upper Liddesdale valley, recorded on a rental roll of c.1376, under the section called ‘Ermyldoune’. They are listed as ‘Hyrtilstede’, with a value of 2 shillings. It is possible this is the same place as Hartsgarth or associated with Hartside Sike, which flows east off Arnton Fell. ‘Hyrtystede et Persynostedete’ are listed under the ‘Quarterium de Ludne’ in the same c.1376 rental roll, with a valued of 5 shillings.

Hartwud (har’, her’-wud) n. former name for lands between Ashkirk and Selkirk. They are mentioned in a list of lands forfeited by the Earl of Douglas to the Crown in 1455. They were split into 3 steadings, the ‘Eststede’, ‘Mydlistede’ and ‘Weststede’ of ‘Hertwode’. The ‘stede of Hartwod’ was leased by the Crown to Archibald Douglas, 5th Earl of Angus, in 1483. The western part was leased by William Turnbull in 1479 and 1486, and this seems to have been what was later called Hartwoodburn. Probably the same William ‘White’ Turnbull is recorded there in 1494/5 when the farm was burned. The steadings were leased to the Earl of Bothwell, Rutherfords and Homes at the end of the 15th century and remained Crown property until at least 1502. Robert Nichol and John Fletcher had sheep stolen from there according to a record in 1494/5. Lawrence Rutherford was recorded being now there in 1502. The Middlestead was tenanted by Andrew Ker of Greenhead in 1541 (it is ‘harty’wod’ in 1494/5, ‘Hertwod’ in 1502 and ‘Hartwod’ in 1541; ‘Hairtwod’ and ‘Hartwood B.’ are marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

Hartwoodburn (har’, her’-wud-burn) n. Hartwoodburn, farm off to the left of the A7 just before Selkirk. It was formerly a home of a branch of the Scotts and thirled to Oakwood. It is perhaps the Eaststead of Hartwood mentioned in the latter part of the 15th century. William Turnbull leased these Crown lands in 1479. In 1502 it is recorded that Walter Scott had 100 sheep stolen... from there. It was feued to Alexander, Lord Home, in 1510. In 1531 Philip Scott of Headshaw held the lands in tack from Queen Margaret, and assigned the lands to his 2nd son Robert on his death. Alan Mithag was there in 1539/40. The lands were occupied by Walter Scott in Headshaw in 1541, paying £26 yearly. William Hangingside was there in 1581. In 1621 it was still valued at £26. In 1627 a band of Scotts, from Whithaugh, Headshaw, Huntly and elsewhere harassed the tenant of the Earl of Home there. The lands were valued at £416 13s 4d in 1678. Lands there were held by the Homes when inherited by 3 heirs partitioners in 1693. It was owned by John Pringle of Clifton in 1785, when valued at £208. James Laidlaw was tenant there in 1785. It was owned by Mrk Pringle of Clifton in 1802 and still valued at £208 (it is ‘Hartwodburne’ in 1468, 1474 and 1542, ‘hartwod burne’ in 1502, ‘Hartvodburn’ in 1531 and ‘Hartwoodburne’ in 1621 and 1678).

Hartwudmyres (har’-wud-mriz) n. Hartwoodmyres, farm on the road over Woll Rig towards the Ettrick valley. John Wilson was recorded as tenant there in 1494/5. It was seat of a branch (or branches) of the Scotts from at least 1539/40 until 1695. Elizabeth Stewart held the lands in 1512. Thomas Scott in Aikwood (on behalf of other tenants there) paid £10 Scots to the Crown for occupying the lands here. William Scott was tenant there in 1539/40. In 1541 the tenancy was claimed by John Home of Cowdenknowes. Walter Scott, younger of Tushielaw, was there in the 1570s. A family called Clerk were there in 1581. Scott of Hartwoodmyres held lands valued at £26 13s 4d in Wilton Parish in 1643. A 10-merk land (of old extent) there was inherited by Sir William Scott of Harden in 1676. The lands were valued at £566 13s 4d in 1678. Later it was home to the Ogilvies. John Griewe was there in 1785–91 and Archibald Park 1792–97. It was valued at about £460 in 1785 and 1802. In the mid-to-late 19th century it was farmed by brothers Richard, William and John Elliot. A Roman fort and site of a Roman camp are between here and Oakwood (it is marked ‘Hartwoodmyrs’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map and ‘heartwoofmyrs’ on Adair’s c. 1688 map; it is ‘hartwoodmyris’ in 1494/5, ‘Hertwoodmyris’ in 1512, ‘le Hartwood myris’ in 1533/4, ‘Hartwood Myris’ in 1541, ‘Hartvodnmyris’ in 1562, ‘Hartwodmyris’ in 1573, ‘Hartwoodmyres’ in 1578/9, ‘Hartwodmyris’ in 1581 and 1592, ‘Hartwoodmyris’ in 1602, ‘Hartwodmyres’ in 1612, ‘Hertwoodmyres’ in 1618, ‘Hartwodmyre’ in 1628, ‘Hartwoodmyers’ in 1638, ‘Hartwoodmyre’ in 1648 and ‘Hartwodmyres’ in 1692).

Harvey (hawr-vee) n. Andrew (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. His son George was baptised in 1747. Andrew (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. His son George was baptised in 1790. Hugh (1841–1914) station master at Belses 1874–1906. In 1864 he married Margaret Burns, who died in 1915. Their children Margaret (‘Love’) and Nellie both continued to work at the station after their father retired. The family also ran a gig as a taxi service. After he retired he moved to Firview above the station. He is buried at Ancrum Kirkyard. Documents relating to this time have been published in ‘Backtrack’ magazine. James (18th C.) tenant in Unionhall. He is recorded in 1731 when he had a libel case for debt against Walter Henderson in Selkirk. Robert (b.1819/20) born in Hawick, he was a farm-worker in Roberton Parish. In 1851 he was living at Highchesters Cottages and in 1861 was a ploughman at Roberton Glebefoot. He married Barbara Deans in 1845 and their children included Andrew, Margaret, Mary, Jane, Helen, Agnes, Janet, Robina Deans (b.1855) and Robert (b.1856). Rev. Thomas (c.1645–1717) graduating from Glasgow University in 1665, he was a minister in Ireland for 13 years, and then spent some time in England. He attended the first meeting of the Synod of Lothian in 1687 after the ‘Toleration’ and became the first post-Revolution minister at Abbotrule in 1689 (although it is unclear in these troubled times when he actually took over from Robert Spottiswood, since it is also claimed that Abbotrule was one of the few local parishes where the minister was not ‘outed’). It is also unclear exactly how many years he remained, since it is recorded that that James Ker was formally reappointed in 1690, but was probably too elderly to take up the position; he may have assisted Ker for some time. In 1692 he was translated to Auchterderran in Fife, but suspended in 1699 for profaning the Lord’s Day. He then went to Ireland and settled at Donoch, near Londonderry. He married a daughter of this same James Ker Thomas (b.c.1800) tailor at Kippielaw in Wilton Parish. He was listed there among heads of households in 1840 and 1841. He was also recorded there in 1841, along with his wife Agnes and children James, Andrew, Agnes, William and Thomas (also spelled ‘Harvie’ and ‘Hervey’).

Harwick (har-wik) n. city in Pennsylvania, U.S.A., village in Cambridgeshire, name of small towns elsewhere in the world and also sometimes a surname (not to be confused with a similar, but more illustrious word).

Harwud (har-wud, har-wood, haw-ri’) n. Harwood, a seat of the Elliots, near the head of the Rule Water, locally known as ‘Harrot’. The lands were said to be among those (along with Commonside and Dryden) gained by the Muirs of Rowallan through marriage with an heiress of the Comyns in about 1260; there is no original document to confirm this, but it is stated in a 17th century family history by poet and politician Sir William Muir. This has long been a major estate of Hobkirk Parish, existing since before the Reformation. It was held by Eustace of Lorrain in the early part of the 14th century, being forfeited to the Blairs of that Ilk some time before 1357. However, the Lorraines were restored to the lands at some point, certainly by the middle of the 15th century. ‘John Lorane of Harwod’ is recorded in 1464/5, and the lands continued to be held by the Lorraines until the early 17th century. The farm was burned by the English in 1542. The estate was attacked over a period of years by some of the Turnbuls, part of a feud between Lady Margaret Lorraine (nee Turnbull) and some of the rest of her Clan. Edward Lorraine had sold the lands partly in wadset to Rev. William Weir and then in 1632 the pair had a further wadset to Gilbert Elliott, with the reversion of the lands to Edward Lorraine (for 6500 merks) if he repaid the amount within 5 years. However, in 1637 it was sold outright to William ‘Ellot’, son of Simon of the Binks, who became the first Elliot Laird of Harwood. The Cranstons were superiors around this time, with those rights passing to the Elliotts of Stobs. It was ‘Harrot, or Harwood’ in 1643, when valued at £433 6s 8d and owned by Simon Elliott. ‘Harrat with mill thereof’ was listed among the properties of Sir William Elliott of Stobs in the Barony of Feu-Rule in the late 17th century. It was valued at £633 6s 8d in 1678 (including what used to be Appotside). Francis and Thomas Elliott were recorded there in 1746 and Walter Heatley in 1765. Henry Elliott paid tax for 14 windows there in 1748. By 1788 it was ‘Harwood, or Harrot’, valued at £433 6s 8d. It is said that one of the early Elliot Lairds were engaged in (illegally) driving cattle across the Border. J.P. Alison designed servants quarters as an addition to the house in 1906. The 8th Elliot Laird sold the estate to William Elliot (from Lanarkshire) in 1924, and it later passed to his son, Walter, who was an M.P. and cabinet minister. His wife would become Baroness Katharine Elliot of Harwood.

5 flints discovered there are in Hawick Museum, as well as a piece of green pottery. There are several other places of the same name, including those in the Teviot and Slitrig valleys (the origin of the name is probably just ‘hare’s wood’; it is ‘Harwod’ in 1464/5, ‘Harwode’ in 1562 and 1631, ‘Harrat’ in 1598, 1648 and 1649, ‘Harwoid’ in 1606, ‘Harrit’ in 1643, ‘Harret’ in 1655, ‘Harrett’ in 1678, ‘Hared’ and ‘Harit’ in 1694, ‘Harrit’ in 1699, ‘Harrot’ in 1700, ‘Harrote’ in 1728, ‘Harriot’ in 1748 and ‘Harrot’ in 1797; it is marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Harewood’, with ‘Woode of Harewood’ just to the north, however, it is ‘Harrot’ on Stobie’s 1770 map, reflecting the contemporary pronunciation).

Harwud (har-wud) n. Harwood, area in the upper Slitrig valley containing Harwood Knowe (crossed to the south by the Catrail) and Harwood Burn, which runs north to join the Langside Burn and then the Slitrig. Remains of an 18th–19th century farmstead were investigated in the mid-1980s before the area was ploughed for forestry.

Harwud see Harwud on Teviot

Harwud (har-wud, har-wood) n. William (15th C.) Chaplain who witnessed an instrument for lands in Morebattle relating to Melrose Abbey in 1444. He also witnessed another instrument for the Abbey in 1445.

Harwud Burn (har-wud-burn) n. Harwood Burn, stream that passes Harwood (in Hobkirk Parish) to join the Rule Water at Forkins (marked ‘Harrot Burn’ on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Harwud Burn (har-wud-burn) n. Harwood Burn, stream in the upper Slitrig valley. It rises with the King’s Sike and Drowning Sike and joins Langside Burn between Stanishope and Shankend. The Catrail crosses its headwaters. The farm of the same name was owned by the Elliots of Stobs at the end of the 17th century, e.g. being listed in the Land Tax Rolls for 1678 and inherited by Sir William Elliott in 1692 (it is ‘Harrotnburn’ in 1678 and ‘Herrotburn’ in 1692).

Harwud Cottage (har-wud-ko’-ej) n. Harwood Cottage, former house on the Harwood Burn, to the south-west of the main estate in Hobkirk Parish (marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Harwude (haw-wud) n. former name for a stream recorded in the royal charter for the lands of Whitslade in about 1170. It is referred to as ‘rivulo de Harwude’, but the identification with a modern location is unclear (the pronunciation is uncertain, but it is assumed that this is the same word as the other local ‘Harwoods’).
Harwudhill

Harwudhill (har-wud-hil) n. Harwoodhill, lands that were once owned by the Scotts of Crumhaugh, and possibly the Scotts of How-pasley before that. This was presumably land near Harwood-on-Teviot. It is listed among lands in the Barony of Hawick held ‘in tenandry’ by the Baron in 1511, 1572, 1594, 1615 and again in 1686, where it is ‘sometimes called Lant’. Patrick Scott and Adam Scott were both recorded there in 1502. There is a sasine of 1722 giving these lands and others ‘in liferent’ to Beatrix Scott, wife of Walter Scott of Crumhaugh (in 1502 it is ‘Hardwodhill’ and ‘harrothill’, in 1572 and 1594 is ‘Hardwodhill’ and is ‘Hartwodhill’ in 1511).

Harwud Hoose (har-wud-hoos) n. Harwood House, in Rule Water. The old house was built in the 17th century and had 1665 carved over its lintel. In the 1694 Hearth Tax roll, 7 hearths were listed at ‘Harits hous and office houses’. The new house was built in 1834/5 for Maj. William Elliot. The stables were altered by Dick, Peddie & MacKay in 1901 (see also Harwud).

Harwud Knowe (har-wud-now) n. Harwood Knowe, hill in the headwaters of the Slatrig Water, to the east of the Harwood Burn, between Shank-end and the Maidens. It reaches a height of 333 m. There may have been a farmstead near here, with James Elliot in ‘Harrotknow’ being recorded in Hobkirk Parish in 1760 and John Elliot in 1775 and 1780.

Harwud Lake (har-wud-läk) n. pond to the south-west of Harwood House in Hobkirk Parish. It was part of the former mill lade system.

Harwud Mill (har-wud-mill) n. Harwood Mill, farm and former corn mill in Hobkirk Parish, just south of Forkins, on the Harwood Burn. It was the same mill that is known as ‘Appotside Mill’ in the 17th century. It was the location for the ‘hail’ for the ‘uppies’ in the game of Hobkirk Baa in the 19th century. The Hearth Tax rolls lists 4 hearths there in 1694. Walter Turnbull was tenant there in 1797. It is listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory, with Walter Cavers as the miller. James Smith was farmer there in 1868 (also written ‘Harwoordmill’, it is ‘Haratmilne’ in 1694 and ‘Harrotmeln’ in 1797; it is marked ‘Harrot Mill’ on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Harwud on Teviot *(har-wud-, har-ri’-öö-tee-vee-i’) n. farm on the west bank of the Teviot, south of Newmill. Called ‘Harwood on Teviot’ to distinguish it from Harwood in the Rule valley (as well as Harwood in the Slatrig valley, and others throughout the U.K.). It was once split into ‘Nether Harwood’ and ‘Over Harwood’. The lands were owned by the Abernethy family from at least 1393 until 1494, passing then to Patrick, Earl of Bothwell. In 1580 it was held by Margaret Douglas, Countess of Bothwell in liferent, and in heritage by her son Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch; they complained about a gang of about 18 Elliots attacking the farm and stealing 40 cows and oxen and leaving 14 lying dead, all at the instigation of Martin Elliot of Braidie. It is possible this was the home of ‘Martine Elliott, callit the Blak Baird, in Harwode’, recorded in 1586/7. It was the seat of a branch of the Scotts in the 17th and 18th centuries (formerly at Broadhaugh and descended from the Scotts of Newark). The arms of the Scotts of Harwood has a band with 2 crescents and a star on the background of an oak tree, and motto ‘Ardenter Amo’. The lands were listed in 1634, 1653, 1661 and 1663 among those held by the Scotts of Buccleuch. Walter Scott of Harwood is recorded on the 1678 Land Tax Rolls; along with Falnash it was valued at £1550 13s 4d. In 1681 Thomas, son of Thomas Crawford, merchant in Edinburgh, was served heir to the lands of Over and Nether Harwood. William Forester is listed there among the poor of Hawick Parish in 1694. James Stevenson was tenant there in at least 1705–08, with the lands owned by Adam Elliot of Arkleton. The estate was sold by Robert Scott of Harwood to Henry, Duke of Buccleuch in about 1738. By 1788 it was valued at £440. William Gladstone was farmer there in 1797, when he is recorded having 3 work horses. In 1811 it was valued at £440 as part of the properties of the Duke of Buccleuch. John Beattie was farmer there in the 1860s. There are also several others Harwoods in Britain (it appears as ‘Harwode’ in 1393, ‘Harwod’ in 1435, ‘Harewode’ in 1446/7, ‘Herwod’ in 1477, ‘Herwode’ in 1494, ‘Harwode’ in 1510/1, ‘Harrett’ in 1581/2 and ‘Harwode’ in 1634 and 1652; it is marked ‘Harwood’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map and ‘Herrot’ on the 1718 Buccleuch survey).

Harwud Park (har-wud-pawrk) n. former shepherd’s cottage near Harwood. It was ‘Harrot Park’ in 1788 when Alexander Lillico was herd there.

Harwud Rig (har-wud-rig) n. ridge to the north of Skelfhill Pen, reaching a height of 393 m.

Harwudsikefit

Harwudsikefit (har-wud-, ha-ri’sik-fi’) n. Harwood Sikefoot, former farmed at the foot of the Harwood Sike, in Teviothead Parish. James Miller lived there in about 1680. James Elliot is recorded as farmer there in 1797, and several of his children died there. Shepherd William Oliver was there in 1851 (also written ‘Harwoodsikefoot’).

Harwudtoon (har-wud-toon, haw-ri’-toon) n. Harwoodtown, a former farm and settlement adjacent to Harwood in the Rule valley. Thomas Turnbull was from there in 1567. It was owned by Hector Turnbull of Stanedge in 1609 and Andrew Turnbull in 1610. The old houses there were pulled down by Henry Elliot, who was Laird in the latter part of the 18th century. There is now no sign there was once a hamlet there (it is ‘Harwoodtown’ and ‘Harwodtoun’ in 1562 and 1567, and ‘Harrrottoun’ about 1605).

hash (hawsh) v., arch. to cut, particularly with a scythe, slice, hack, chop, slash – ‘...and how horribly the bogs were hashed ...’ [HSR], to fatigue a person, overtire oneself – ‘It’s been a gey hashin’ day for iz at the herst, A’m muittit oot an’ fair platchin’’ [GW].

hash (hawsh) n. a mess, a clumsy failure – ‘hei made a right hash o eet’, a confused mass, a confused crowd of people, a haver, blether, person clumsy in speech, general term of contempt – ‘He’s a wundy hash’ [GW], ‘Ye muckle, careless, thoughtless, thriftless hash, To spend yer siller ’He’s a wundy hash’ [GW], ‘Ye muckle, careless, thoughtless, thriftless hash, To spend yer siller’ [G]

the Hassely Cleuch (theu-ha-suu-lee-clooch) n. former cottage in the west corner of Stonedge farm. ‘Hobbie’ Elliot lived there in the late 18th century.

Hassendean (has-in-deen) n. hamlet and surrounding district about 6 miles north-east of Hawick at the foot of Minto hills, and once the site of the first station north of Hawick on the Waverley Line. This was also once a separate parish, having a link with the monks of Melrose Abbey from early times. After decades of debate over the distant parts of the Parish (particularly those in the Borthwick valley, with a new church built there in 1658), the Parish was supressed in 1689, with the area redistributed among to Minto, Roberton and Wilton. There are stories of near riots during the de-roofing of the Kirk in 1690. The Barony of Hassendean was presumably once a single estate, but became 2 separate parts, with the western and eastern half baronies having separate Barons.

Walter Fitz Alan was granted land there by Malcolm IV about 1155. A ploughgate of land here was given to Paisley Priory in the 1180s by Alan Stewart (son of Walter). The lands were included in a dowry granted to Joan of England (sister of the English King) when she married King Alexander in 1221. In 1304/5 there is a record of the rentals from the farms there, ‘by the hands of Sir Alexander de Balliol’. In about 1320 James Cunningham was granted lands there by Robert the Bruce, this being the eastern half barony, and the Cunninghams held the superiority of these lands for perhaps 300 years. Bruce also granted lands there to Sir James Douglas in 1320 (perhaps the other half of the barony). Lands there were temporarily given to Henry Percy in 1334 (although the English never really had control over southern Scotland) and in 1341/2 the 'vills of Jeddeworth, Bonjedworth, and Hassyndene' were granted to Henry Percy. There were further mentions by the English King in 1356, 1397 and 1408. William Livingstone of Drumry was baron of 'Lang Hassendean' (presumably the eastern half barony) in a document of 1470 and it passed to Alexander, Lord Home in 1493/4. In 1482 Elizabeth Cunningham inherited the eastern part from her father; it was 'then waste', but valued at £10 Scots in times of peace and was held of the superior the Lord of Kilmaurs (another Cunningham). In 1493 a man was charged with bringing Englishmen to the area where they stole 100 cows, as many sheep and other gear. Walter Taylor was recorded there in 1493 and Matthew Turnbull in 1494/5. It is recorded that Alexander Lord Home was owner of lands there in 1502. The area was long a seat of the Scotts of Hassendean, the first being David in the mid-15th century, and Sir Alexander Scott of Hassendean reported to have fallen at Flodden. This branch of the Scotts held the lands until about the end of the 17th century (when the lands became part of the Buccleuch estates); their motto was 'Trusty and True'. The lands were burned by the Earl of Hertford's men in 1545 (and recorded by the English as 'Hessington'). The superiority of the lands was confirmed to Alexander, Lord Home in 1509/10 and James, Earl of Home in 1621. The Laird of Hassendean was listed among 'Landit Men' of Scotland in about 1590. Hassendean Moor was said to be a place for Covenanter meetings around 1680. In 1718 the farm of 'Hasindeane & Marlside' was part of the estates of the Scotts of Buccleuch, covering 583 acres ('besides two pieces of land which are intermixed with it') and bounded by Kames, Minto, Hassendeanbank, Knowe, Townhead, Horsleyhill, Hassendean Common, Newlands and Huntlaw. The farmhouses (together with trees) are shown clustered about the modern location, on the eastern side of the Hassendean Burn, with a corn mill also there. The central estate of Hassendean was at some point split into Hassendean-bank, Hassendean-burn and Teviot-bank. It was home of Dickson's nurseries from 1728 until the early 19th century. The tenant farmers were the Turnbuls through the 18th century. Robert Dickson is recorded owning 8 horses there in 1797 and Adam Turnbull was a farmer there at the same time. The lands were listed in the 1788 county valuation and the Land Tax Rolls of 1811 as owned by the Duke of Buccleuch and valued at £533 6s 8d. The Shiel family farmed there in the early-to-mid 19th century. It is also famous from the ballad 'Jock o' Hazeldean' and the tune 'Hazeldean' – '...They are a' away to Hassendean burn, And left both wheel and cards'[T], 'Hassendean came without a call, The antientest House among them all'[CWS], '...Then came Alton; And the wives of Briddiewards, They're a' away to Hassendean, And left their woo and cards'[CWS] (it occurs in the late 12th century as 'Atstanesdene', 'Hadestandena', 'Hastensden' and 'Hatstanesdene'; many different spellings are known in earlier records, e.g. 'Assindane', 'Astenesdene', 'Essenden', 'Halsyndene', 'Hasanden', 'Hasendane', 'Hassingden', 'Hasindane', 'Hassingden', 'Hassandeane', 'Hassendeane', 'Hassendein', 'Hassendain', 'Hassendane', 'Hassindean', 'Hassenden', 'Hassendene', 'Hassindan', 'Hassindane', 'Hassindean', 'Hassinde', 'Hassindein', 'Hassinden', 'Hassindene', 'Hassindin', 'Hassindine', 'Hassingdane', 'Hassingdeane', 'Hassingden', 'Hassingdon', 'Hassington', 'Hassynadan', 'Hassynyden' and 'Hassynede', with the modern spelling not gaining prominence until the 18th century; it is marked on Gordon's c. 1650 map, de Wit's c. 1680 map as 'Hasinden' and Visscher's 1689 map as 'Hasindein'; Blaeu's 1654 map shows 'Hasindein Tour', 'Burnfoote', 'K. of Hasindein' and 'Banck'; the origin of the name is probably from the Old English personal name 'Heathustan' plus 'denu' for valley). Hassendean (has-in-deen) n. sometime version of 'Hassington' in Eccles Parish, Berwickshire, long owned by the Broomfield family. Probably this version of the name derives from an error, but makes for possible confusion with the local Hassendean. Hassendean (has-in-deen) n. Adam (12th C.) recorded as 'Ada de Astenesdene' in about the 1220s when Chistina, daughter of his son William granted lands of Cresswell to Hugh the brewer. The document therefore gives us 3 generations of this local family. Christina (12th/13th C.) daughter of William, who was son of Adam. Some time in the periof 1214–49, probably the late 1220s, she granted her lands of Cresswell to Hugh, brewer of Hassendean. It is possible this was the same as the later Cresswell family. Elias (12th C.) witnessed a charter some time in the period 1153–82 for Waltheof, son of Cospatrick for lands in West Lothian. His name is given as ‘Helia de Hadestandena’. Richard (12th C.) recorded as ‘Richard dean of Hassendean’, within the Diocese of Glasgow, as witness to several charters in the period between about 1175 and 1195. Probably the same person is Richard ‘de Hassendean’ about 1170 and referred to as Chaplain in Hassendean when listed as previous possessor of a ploughgate of land in Hassendean when it was gifted to Paisley Abbey by King William in the period 1179–90. He is probably the ‘Radulpho decano de hastindene’ who witnessed the grant of lands in Whitton to Melrose Abbey in the late 12th century (as stated in a confirmation of 1454, with ‘Ralph’ perhaps being a simple error). He was Dean of Teviotdale in documents of the late 1170s and early 1180s. His name occurs at least 10 times. He is probably the ‘R., Archdeacon’ (an error for ‘Dean’) in a now missing charter (originally in the period 1183–91) in which Robert the Bruce confirmed the grant of lands in Whitton to Melrose Abbey. Robert (15th C.) tenant of the Mains of ‘Bothkenner’ in Stirlingshire in 1492. Thomas (13th/14th C.) Warden of the Monastery of Kelso. He is recorded in about 1330 as ‘Domino Thoma de Hassynden’ when he witnessed a charter relating to the Church of Roxburgh. Walter (16th C.) listed in the 1574 last testament of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme. He is recorded as ‘Walter Hassindan’ and owed about £13 for some service, possibly as a factor or similar, like Walter Scott of Hassendean and others who are named. His name was presumably related to the former parish. William (12th/13th C.) son of Adam. Around the 1220s his daughter Christina granted lands of Cresswell (in Hassendean Parish) to Hugh, the brewer of Hassendean.

Hassendean Bake (has-in-deen-bäk) n. recorded in a 1536 charter when William Scott of Hassendean granted ‘two husbandlands in demesne lands in le Easter Hassenden …inter le merche bake ex occidentali et le passage gait ex orentali inter turrem de Hassindene et dicti le Hassindene bake’. It is possible that this is simply an early variant of Hassendeanbank.

Hassendeanbank (has-in-deen-bawngk) n. farm at Hassendean, previously part of the lands of the Barony of Hassendean, along with Hassendeanburn and Teviotbank. It is recorded at least as early as 1409 when lands there were confirmed to John Turnbull, son of Adam of Whithope. In 1432 William Turnbull was Laird there. In 1492 Walter Turnbull of Gargunnock gave a charter of the lands to Andrew Douglas and in that same year Cuthbert Cunningham had sasine for superiority of the lands. Walter’s daughters Margaret and Janet had a sasine in 1501. William Cunningham of Kilmours was recorded as superior in 1502. In 1510 William and Thomas Elphinston (probably the Chancellor of Scotland and his son) received the rights of the land through ‘non-entry’, and Thomas married Elizabethe Turnbull, heir of half the lands, for which they had a charter in 1512. David and Robert Turnbull were tenants in 1516. Andrew Ker of Cessford had a sasine in 1519, and his son Walter Ker in 1531 (granted by William Cunningham, Laird of Glencairn), again in 1543, and confirmed in 1576. Isabel, wife of Walter Ker of Cessford complained in 1563 that Thomas and John Young were occupying her quarter of the lands without paying her ‘maill ferme mail or entress’. Meanwhile William Turnbull held a piece of the land in 1536 (probably Cockerheugh), and in 1540 reference is made to the deceased John Turnbull of Hassendeanbank. The farm was burned by the Earl of Hertford’s men in 1545. George Turnbull from here was recorded in 1573. Robert Ker, 1st Earl of Roxburgh, inherited the lands in 1610. Thomas Turnbull was infefted in these lands by the Comendator of Melrose in about 1622; they were valued at 13s 4d at that time. In the 17th century the superiority was held by the Hamiltons, Earls of Haddington, along with other lands previously possessed by Melrose Abbey. By 1643 the lands were held by the Earl of Roxburgh (as also recorded in 1678, 1684 and 1694) and valued at £550. Lands here were still listed as being part of the Lordship of Melrose in 1680 (a vestige of the connection with Melrose Abbey). Sir William Douglas of Cavers inherited 6 acres of land here in 1687, followed by his brother Archibald in 1698. William Redford was tenant in 1688. The lands passed to Minto Parish in 1690. Adam Young was there in at least 1690–94. Additinally John Redford, William Turnbull and Richard Turnbull were there in 1694, with Margaret Renwick, Janet Henderson and Mungo ‘Modrell’ listed among the poor. James Turnbull was there in 1785. The Duke of Roxburgh (perhaps just as superior) exchanged his lands here with those of George Douglas of Cavers at Denholm Haugh in 1797. It was listed under the Duke of Roxburghe in the county valuation of 1788 and the Land Tax Rolls of 1811, and the Earl of Minto in about 1874, with a value of £550. The Dickson family held the estate through most of the 18th and 19th centuries and Hassendeanburn had nurseries nearby. Andrew Bruce was farmer there in 1797, when he owned 12 horses. Ephraim Selby was farmer there until the 1860s, when his son Robert too over. Col. Archibald Dickson had the house rebuilt in the late 1870s. Latterly it was the home of Ken Oliver. The course of the Teviot used to change after floods and ice-storms, and sometimes in the 18th century would pass by the foot of Hassendeanbank brae. To the north-west lie the faint remains of a double-ditched settlement, about 160 m by 75 m, with another possible settlement adjacent. To the south, by the Teviot, are cropmarks indicating a roughly oval fort, 60 m by 30 m, and there is also an old enclosure just south of the farm (also written ‘Hassendean Bank’; this is probably what is labelled ‘Banck’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map on the opposite side of the Hassendean Burn from the Kirk; it is ‘hassyndene bank’ in 1409, ‘Hassindenbank’ in about 1410, ‘Hasindenbank’ in 1432, ‘Hassendenbank’ in 1492, ‘hassindeane bank’ in 1502, ‘Hassindenbank’ in 1510, ‘Hassindanebank’ in 1512, ‘Hassendeanbank’ in 1516, ‘Bank-hessington’ in 1545, ‘Hassinbank’ in 1573, ‘Hassindanebank’ in 1579, ‘Hassindenbank’ in 1634, ‘Hassendeanbank’ in 1684, ‘Hassindanebank’ in 1607, ‘Hassendenbank’ in about 1622 and 1640, ‘Hassindinbank’ in 1670 and ‘Hassendeanebank’ in 1680).

Hassendeanburn (has-in-deen-burn) n. farm and estate at Hassendean, previously part of the lands of the Barony of Hassendean, on the north bank of the Teviot, about 3½ miles from Hawick. James Redford was recorded there in 1579. Robert Scott of Alton held lands there in 1580, with William Taylor, David Young and John Swan all living there; Scott of Alan wadset the lands of ‘Over Maines of Hassindaneburne’ in 1580. Hector Turnbull was there in 1581. Gavin Elliot from here was murdered in about 1618, probably by Hector Turnbull in Clarilaw. John Hope and James Shiel were listed there among the poor of Hassendean Parish in 1694. It was home of the Dicksons who made the area famous for establishing the first and largest nursery and seeds business in Britain, starting in 1729 and expanding to Hawick by 1766 (and being the progenitor for nurseries in Edinburgh, Chester and Perth). Archibald Dickson was there in the 1780s. Christian Dickson was living there in 1861 and George Mack was farmer later in the 1860s. A new house was constructed in 1876, with designs by Wardrop and Reid and there were alterations in the 1890s to designs by J.P. Alison. Hawick Provost Robert Fraser Watson lived there in later life. At one time the house contained the writing desk of Napoleon Bonaparte, purchased by Watson. The mansion was demolished in the 1950s, but some of the trees planted in the area may survive from the days of the Dicksons. There is still a farm there. Just south of the farm buildings there is a road bridge over the railway (it is ‘Hassendenburn’ in 1566, ‘Hassindaneburne’ in 1579 and 1581, ‘Hassindane burne’ in 1580 and ‘Hasandenburne’ in 1694; it is probably what is marked ‘Burnfoote’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map, between the Kirk and Tower of Hassendean).

Hassendean Burn (has-in-deen-burn) n. stream that passes through the former Parish of Hassendean. It effectively rises on the eastern slopes of Drinkstone Hill, running roughly to the east and being joined by the Dearly Burn and Huntlaw Burn. It turns roughly south at Hassendean village, with a rail bridge over it at a culvert, then joining the Teviot near Hassendeanburn.

Hassendean Burnfit (has-in-deen-burn-fi) n. former name for lands near where the Hassendeanburn meets the Teviot, presumably lower down than Hassendeanburn farm itself. This is probably the ‘Burnfoot’ listed in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls for Hassendean Parish, with John Veitch and William Liddell listed there among the poor of the Parish. It may be the ‘Burnfoote’ marked near to Hassendean on Blaeu’s 1654 map.

Hassendean Common (has-in-deen-ko-min) n. former Common of Hassendean Parish, to the west of Hassendean. It bordered on the lands of Wester Groundistone, Drinkstone and Clarilaw. Its division was discussed at least as early as 1757, when it was part of the Parishes of Minto and Wilton. It was divided in 1763 and subsequently enclosed into fields (a detailed map exists from 1762), at the instigation of the Buccleuch estates; an action was brought in 1762 against Henry, Duke of Buccleuch by Capt. John Douglas of Midshiel, John Chisholme of Stirches, Thomas Turnbull of Knowe and others. As well as those men William Scott of Burnhead also received a share. The name survives in the farm in that area. A drove road used to cross it.

Hassendean Court (has-in-deen-kör) n. part of Stirches, off Hazelwood Road, built in 1975 and named after the Hassendean district.

Hassendean Hill (has-in-deen-hil) n. small hill between Horsleyhill and Hassendean farms. It reaches a height of 171 m.

Hassendean Kirk (has-in-deen-kirk) n. church of the ancient parish of Hassendean. It originally belonged to the Bishop of Glasgow, being granted by David I, confirmed in 1170. However, it was granted by the Bishop of Glasgow to Melrose Abbey, for the sustenance for poor pilgrims coming to Melrose, as confirmed in about 1195, 1206, 1220 and 1231/2. It was dedicated to St. Mungo (or Kentigern) in the reign of William the Lion and then in 1193/4 patronage was given to the monks of Melrose Abbey, who built a house there, the Monk’s Tower, as a hospital for wayfarers and pilgrims. In 1315 the profits from the church were re-assigned to Melrose Abbey, with a confirmation in 1326. In 1488 the Vicar was bound not to interfere with the Abbey’s right to the ‘erde silver of the quer’, i.e. the money charged for burials in the kirk choir. William Grahamslaw was recorded being ‘apud ecclesiam de hassinden’ in 1493, suggesting that he was farmer of lands there. Melrose Abbey held the church essentially until the Reformation; there was still a rental for the ‘kirkland of Hassinden’ recorded in about 1564. These kirklands were probably the ‘Hassindenkirk’ farmed by John Turnbull of Hassendeanbank in 1564. The patronage of the church and rentals were granted to Walter, Earl of Buccleuch in about 1560, and went to William, Earl of Morton in 1608. The churchyard there must have held local burials for many centuries. In 1670 it was declared that Turnbull of Knowe owned the burial place within the bell house. There were still marriages taking place there in 1687. The parish was suppressed in 1689 and the church roof removed to Roberton, amid scenes of great hostility in 1690 (not in 1687, as suggested by the verse). This followed several decades of uncertainty over the status of the parish. A crowd gathered to try to prevent the unroofing, and the first man to climb a ladder was said to have been killed falling after being struck by a stone. Sheriff Douglas was called and was supposedly cursed by an old woman. There was also said to have been a scuffle near Hornshole, with the church bell thrown in the river (and either left there or retrieved to be the bell for Roberton). The historical record of events indicate that it was indeed a serious riot and that workmen were injured (but not killed), with several of the heritors accused of instigating the riot. The last incumbent was Francis Scott, who was removed in 1689 after the Revolution; other local ministers filled in for a few years, the last being Samuel Johnstone in 1693 (perhaps preceded by James Borland). The ruined church can be seen in a sketch of 1788 (by Adam de Cardonnel, based on a drawing by Archibald Rutherford in 1776), showing decorated arches. It was largely swept away, along with some of the graveyard, in a flood of the Teviot in January 1796 (or possibly 1795), the destruction completed by the 1806 flood, so that now no sign of it remains. The exposed coffins and headstones of the Ogilvies were removed to Ashkirk kirkyard. The site of the church is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map, and since the Teviot has changed its course somewhat, the location now corresponds to a bank on the south side. Several pieces of sculpted stone, said to have been from the church, were discovered in the rock garden of Teviot Bank, including a ‘cresset’ (mediaeval lamp stand) described in 1918. There is additionally part of a carved tombstone built into the garden wall at Minto House. And a piece of sculpted stone, the capital of an Ionic wall pillar, was found in a field beside Roberton Kirk in 1963, which may also be a piece of the old Kirk at Hassendean. The old bell in Roberton Kirk, inscribed ‘For the Tolbuith of Melrose – 1649’ may have hung at Hassendean for a while before being removed to Roberton, and possibly being thrown into Hornshole by angry parishioners according to tradition. It is recorded in 1716 that the widow of the last minister gave some church items to Roberton Parish, namely a large bible, pulpit cloth, pewter vessels and session books. There is an existing communion token that is plain and square, bearing the letters ‘H.K.’ A roll of the ministers is: Richard, Dean around 1170s to 1190s; William, Vicar around 1280; John Aikenhead, Vicar in 1474; David ‘Hugonis’, Vicar in 1478; probably John Cavers in the 1480s; Walter Douglas in at least 1488/9–1500; John Duncan, Vicar until 1538; George Scott, Vicar from 1539; Kentigern Reid, 1539; John Duncan (again), Vicar until 1544; John Anderson, Vicar from 1544; Patrick Crawford, Chaplain in 1549; Thomas Weston, Vicar c.1568–76; William Auchmowtie (Minister, along with several neighbouring parishes), from 1574; John Scott, Reader in 1575; Thomas Newbie, Reader 1576–82; John Bonar 1594–c.95; Simon Scott, from 1595; John Mather 1602–09; Robert Collace, Reader in 1606; Allan Lundie 1610–11; James Mitchelson 1611–13; Alexander Forrest 1613–58; William Mushet 1664–78; Francis Scott 1678–89 – ‘It was in the year o’ aught-y-sev’n Highchethers ca’d oot a’ his men To meet the Shirra of Tividale At the Kirk o’ Hassendean’ [T] (‘K. of Hasindein’ is marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

Hassendean Kirk

Hassendean Kirk (has-in-deen-kirk) n. former name for lands associated with the church of Hassendean. ‘William Trumbill of Hassindane Kirk’ is recorded in 1553/4. It is ‘Hassindenkirk’ in 1564 when John Turnbull of Hassendeanebank complained that he had 80 sheep stolen from there. These lands were formerly associated with Melrose Abbey.

Hassendean Ladylands (has-in-deen-læ-deelandz) n. another name for Ladyland.

Hassendean Mains (has-in-deen-mänz) n. former name for a farm in Hassendean Parish, presumably being the ‘home farm’ for the Baron of Hassendean. A charter of 1516 records Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme gaining the lands of ‘Nether Mains of Hassendean’ and the ‘Mains of Hassendean’ from the forfeiture Alexander, Lord Home. In 1535 there was a revocation of a charter James Lundy had for ‘Ouir and Nethir Manys of Hassindene’, and also a charter Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme had for ‘Estir Manys of Hassendene’. In 1550/1 Robert, son and heir of Adam Scott of ‘Nethirmanis of Hassinden’ is recorded being infested in the lands of Little Drinkstone (this is probably the same as Adam and Robert Scott of Clariaw and Alton). The ‘Middle Mains’ and the ‘East Mains’ were described in the 16th century. The Middle Mains was granted to Gavin Elliot by Alexander, Lord Home (superior of Hassendean) in 1555, along with Horsleyhill. This may be the ‘Hassinden-manis’ where Robert Dickson was recorded in 1591. In 1616 the ‘Middle Mains of Hassendean’ was sold by the Earl of Home to Gilbert Elliot of Stobs. The Earl of Tarras held the lands in 1694, when the residents recorded there were George Scott, Walter Riddell, Margaret Riddell, Thomas Turnbull, Walter Turnbull, Robert Learmonth and Robert Brown, with James Grieve listed among the poor.

Hassendean Mill (has-in-deen-nil) n. former corn mill at Hassendean farm. It is clearly marked, on the east side of the Hassendean Burn, on the 1718 Buccleuch survey. The mill dam and mill lade are marked on the 1841 Ordnance Survey map. It is recorded being repaired in 1744 and in 1752 its ‘cauld and dam’ suffered great damage from a flood in July.

the Hassendean Oak (thu-has-in-deen-ok) n. outstanding example of an ancient oak tree (Quercus petraea) near Hassendean. It has a short, squat trunk, with an extensive crown, suggesting it was once pollarded. The trunk has a circumference of about 20 ft (194 cm) and it reaches a height of 26 m.

Hassendean Parish

Hassendean Parish (has-in-deen-pa-reesh) n. old parish of Hassendean, centred around the farms of Hassendean, but extending into the modern Wilton area, and also containing a detached part in the Borthwick valley. It existed from at least 1155, when Malcolm IV granted the land to Walter, son of Alan the Steward. The chapel belonged to the monks of Melrose from the end of the 12th century, when they were given its lands and tithes in order to build a hospital for pilgrims to Melrose. This building was referred to as the Monk’s Tower, and the lands connected with it were called the Monk’s Croft. The church itself was situated near where the Hassendean Burn meets the Teviot. The main part of the Parish was burned along with much of Teviotdale by Hertfords men in 1545. The Cunningham’s were superiors of the eastern half Barony from the early 14th century, for about 300 years. In 1598 some of the ‘non-entries’ in the Barony were gifted to the Diocese of St. Andrews by James IV. By the 17th century most of the land was owned by Scott of Buccleuch. In 1643 the total valuation of the lands in the Parish was £6326 and in 1678 was £7704. The Parish teinds were valued at £232 6s 8d in 1643; this valuation continued in 1707 and in 1788, when transferred to Wilton, and still held by the Scotts of Buccleuch. In 1649 the land and crops of the Parish were valued at about £4200 in Roxburghshire and £1200 in Selkirkshire. In 1678 the rents in the parish were valued at £7793 10s 8d in Roxburghshire and £1133 6s 8d in Selkirkshire. The Parish long had an isolated part in the Borthwick valley, roughly between the Harden and Roberton Burns; this part may have been served by the chapel at Chapelhill (just across the Borthwick), with a priest supplied by the Parish, and lasting until about the Reformation. A series of petitions and inquiries finally led to the whole of Hassendean being joined to the newly created Roberton Parish in 1658, but reinstated in 1666, only to be finally suppressed in 1689 and redistributed to Minto, Roberton and Wilton. Most of the lands went to Minto, while the vicarange tids etc. were given to the new parish of Roberton. The church roof was removed to Roberton in 1690 amid scenes of violence, resulting in a workman being killed and apparently a curse being placed on the Douglass of Cavers. The graveyard continued to be used until partially swept away in a Teviot flood of 1796, which also removed the remaining ruins of the old church. A register of births and marriages from the parish has been preserved, covering the period 1679–89 and included within the records of Roberton Parish.

Hassendean Pond (has-in-deen-pönd) n. pond at Hassendean, probably formerly used for curling. The 1812 minutes of Hawick Curling Club notes that ‘R. Wilson bet Jas. Millar that the Dove Mount Well is 20 feet higher than Hassendean Pond. R.W. lost. Thereafter Millar bet Wilson that the Dove Mount Well is no higher than Hassendean Pond, but Mr Thomson (who decided the former bet offhand) could not decide this without a great deal of trouble’.

Hassendean Schuil (has-in-deen-skil) n. former school in Hassendean Parish. The only known schoomaster there is Robert Collace, recorded in 1613 and 1631.

Hassendean Station (has-in-deen-stā-shin) n. railway station on the Waverley Line situated at Hassendean. This was the main station for the area around Denholm, and the first station on the line to the north of Hawick. The station still has a footbridge connecting the platforms, while the main station building has been renovated for domestic use. The section of railway nearby had a couple of railway bridges and a road bridge. A cart ran every day between Denholm and the Station in the latter part of the 19th and early 20th centuries.

Hassendean Toon (has-in-deen-toon) n. former farm, probably an alternative name for the main farm at Hassendean itself, which was also referred to as ‘Toonheid’ or ‘Knowetoonheid’. Like much of the area the lands there became part of Minto Parish in 1690 (it is ‘Hassysdane toune’ in 1548/9).

Hassendean Toor (has-in-deen-too, -tow-ur) n. former tower in Hassendean, also known as ‘the Monk’s Tower’. It is referred to as the ‘Castle of Hassendene’ in a charter of about 1537. It could be the same as the ‘tower and fortalice’ at Easter Hassendean, mentioned in a sasine of 1532. It passed from Melrose Abbey to the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1546/7. It is referred to in a confirming charter of 1574 as ‘Hassideane alias Munkis Tower’, 1653 as ‘Hasendene-tour alias Munckisture’ and similarly in 1661. In 1663 ‘all and haill the toure and fortalice callit Hassendean Tour alias Monckis Tour, with the barne, yairdis, ginnallis, meidowis, croftis, housis, and bigingis thairof’ is listed among the possessions of the Scotts of Buccleuch. ‘Scott of Satchells refers to ‘John Scot of Monks-tower, brother to old William Scot of Altoun’. The Ordnance Survey Name Book of 1862 describes that the remains were removed about 15 years earlier and the stones used to build the farmhouse at Hassendean.

Hassington (has-ing-tin) n. hamlet in Eccles Parish, Berwickshire, with Hassington West Mains and Hassington East Mains nearby. There were Dicksons here in the late 16th and early 17th centuries and with variable spellings, this makes it easy to confuse with the later Dicksons of Hassendean.

haste (hāst) v., arch. to hasten, make haste – ‘...he has seen the Town’s Herd scare and haste them out of the way with his dogs’ [C&L1767].

Hastie (hās-tee) n. James (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1752 he witnessed a baptism for Robert Little. He married Margaret Cairns and their daughter Janet was baptised in 1650.

John (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. His daughter Margaret was baptised in 1690, with witnesses Walter Scott and Andrew Mark. John (c.1680–c.1730) member of a family that had been pipers in Jedburgh for generations. His death was lamented in a poem published in Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784), but dating from decades earlier. It was also reprinted by John Leyden in ‘The Complaynt of Scotland’, referring to it as ‘this excellent Dirge, which elucidates so much the manners of the Border Pipers’. From the poem we learn that he was also a fiddler; it ends with ‘Here lies dear John, whase pipe and drone, And fiddl aft has made us glad; Whase cheerfu’ face our feasrts did grace – A sweet and merry lad’. He was said to be a player of the Lowland bagpipe (rather than a bellows-driven pipe of the Northumberland form) and to be the first piper to introduce several tunes that became common among Teviotdale pipers. He was succeeded in about 1731 by his nephew Robin (or Robert), who was last of the Hasties to be piper in Jedburgh. Robert (16th C.) acted as factor in Lilliesleaf in 1562. Probably the same lawyer also acted for Isabel, Lasy Ker of Cessford in the same year. In 1560, along with John, he held lands in Maxpoffle and in 1562 is described being in Bowden. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Jean Gledstains and their children included Alexander (b.1646). Thomas (17th C.) resident of Hummelknowes on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls (formerly written ‘Haistic’ and variants).

Hastings (hās-tinz) n. Sir Robert (13th/14th C.) Englishman who was Sheriff or Constable of Roxburgh at least 1298–1304. In 1302 he, along with Sir Alexander Baliol was appointed to superintend the construction of a fortress in Selkirk. In 1301 he pursued some men who had stolen cattle from England, and along with Sir Hugh de Audley and others captured the 12 men, including 2 of the appellation ‘del Hepe’. This was part of an agreement between himself, his brother Sir Richard and Sir Hugh de Audley for pursuing robbers in Roxburghshire. Also in 1301 he wrote to King Edward describing actions that had been taken against John de Soulis. In 1301/2 he was one of 2 men appointed by Edward I to oversee the construction of a new castle at Selkirk. In 1303/4 he was Sheriff at the inquest to decide on the inheritance of the half barony of Wilton.

Warren (1732–1818) East India Company civil servant who went on to become Governor-General of India, but was impeached for corruption (although acquitted on his return to Britain). After his trial he stayed at the Mossapaul Inn and visited Hawick as a guest of James Anderson at Wilton. His trial he stayed at the Mossapaul Inn and visited Hawick as a guest of James Anderson at Wilton.

hats (hawts) n., pl. fashionable headwear has changed over the ages. In the 17th and 18th centuries the ‘blue bonnet’ was most common, with only wealthier citizens wearing three-cornered hats and the like. In 1716 the public raffle of a hat was the cause for a large late-night meeting, which degenerated into a drunken brawl. The manufacture of hats in Hawick started in the 1780s, but only lasted a few years. It was revived in the 1820s by 2 of the Wilson brothers (James and William) who were very successful, but moved the business to London after only a few years.

hatter (ha’-ur) v. to bother, trouble, vex, worry – ‘Deh hatter yer self’, ‘ee’re lookin awfi hattered’, ‘Wi’ the porridge stick nabb'd frae a sair-hatted mother’ [??], work in a laborious or careless way – ‘A heh thatchots ti fa back on . . . . what A hatter on, maist deived an daivert an donnert wui the rammellin dumner o a eend- on biz’ [ECS], n. bother, trouble, difficulty, struggle, fluster – ‘what a hatter he'i's hevin ti climm they stair’, ‘it’s ower much o a hatter’, ‘Sic a hatter! hattert (ha’-ur’) pp., arch. troubled, hassled, wearied with worry or overwork – ‘He was awfully hatter’r wi’ thae by-hoors’ [GW] (also ‘hattered’, see hatter).
the Hattery (thu-ha’-u-ree, -ha-tu-ree) n. former hat manufacturers situated near the bottom of the east side of Wilton Path in the early years of the 19th century. It can be seen on Andrew Kennedy’s painting of the 1846 Common Riding Races and on the 1810 sketch of Wilton (although it is unclear which building it is precisely). The house behind it was referred to as ‘Naeplace’. This is probably the same business that was run by James Wilson in the latter part of the 18th century. It may also have been taken over by Mr. McCaskie, came from Edinburgh in about 1815 and was in about 1820 purchased by manufacturer William Wilson William, for his sons William and James Wilson (no direct relation to the earlier Hawick). This business wound up in about 1824 when James Wilson moved to join his brother in London.

Hatton (ha-tin) n. Tim (1958/9–) born in London, he studied engineering at Loughborough University. He trained for the ministry late in life and was historic church building officer for the Diocese of Manchester. Haughheid the Haucheid’ recorded in 1526 may be the earliest known resident (unless this was a different Haughhead). The land there was owned by the Douglases of Cavers. James Oliver was there in 1778. George Douglas of Cavers was recorded in 1788 and 1811 as owner of ‘Part of Weensland, called Haughhead’ (which was valued at £27 6s 8d). The house near the junction of the A698 and A6088 is Haughhead House, and for a long time has been the northern extremity of Hawick Parish. The road over to Bonchester (and on to the Carter Bar) was only opened around 1830. The flat area at the big bend in the A698 was formerly the Town Dump, before being developed as the Mainetti factory in 1999. There are places of the same name in Synton and in Eckford Parish, once a seat of the Scots – ‘…Or dun where the croinin’ Teviot Slips quietly by Haughheid?’ [WL] (marked on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Haughheid (hawchurch-head) n. farm to the west of North Synton, located between the B6400 and the Ale Water. William Murray was farmer there in the 1850s and 60s. It was probably same place called ‘Nook Haugh’ (it is marked on Ainslie’s 1850s map).

Havelock Street (hav-lok-stree’) n. street in Wilton, named in 1864, previously part of the road being called Dovemount. It was also referred to as Sawmill Street in the 1859 Ordnance Survey map. The top of the street used to end with the entrance to Silverbuthall (or ‘Sillerbithall’) estate, with the gate lodge for the estate still being there at No. 23. The name comes from Sir Henry Havelock (1795–1857), an army general who fought in Asia, who had an enormous state funeral and after whom streets in most large towns were named (as well as giving his name to the cloth covering worn over a cap to protect the back of the neck from the sun) – ‘... Its streets tae me are golden paved, Frae Havelock Street tae Haggis Ha’’ [JRE].

haver (ha-vur) v. to talk nonsense, babble – ‘stop yer haverin’, – ‘Or folks will be haiverin’ There’s some lad ye like ... ’ [GWe], ‘Daft Jamie was a well known lad, He wouldna harm a fly, He wandered through the streets at night And havered tae the sky’ [Sco]. n. nonsense, gossip, piece of nonsense – ‘He’d mony a queer, funny haver, But neither a cow nor a yowe’ [JoHa], ‘There’s deil a heid o’ your braw beas’ missin’, Gie owre your havers, sit doon and listen!’ [WL], someone who habitually talks nonsense – ‘ee can be a right haver sometimes’ (also spelled ‘haiver’: origin uncertain).

Hawick (hlk, hoik) n. oor ain auld toon, population (1991) 15,812, at the confluence of the River Teviot and the Slitrig Water, in the old county of Roxburghshire, where it is the largest town. It is one of the furthest towns from the sea (about 69 km) in Scotland. One of Scotland’s leading textile centres, it is also famous for its Common Riding, rugby, and long tradition of civic independence. It is first recorded in the 12th century, and built up around the Tower and St. Mary’s Church. It has been a Burgh of Barony since some time in the 15th century, with the earliest existing Charter being from Sir James Douglas in 1537. It was burned by the English in 1418, 1548 and 1565, and the inhabitants burned it themselves in 1570 so as to not to provide food or shelter to the invaders. Almost all records before the 1630s were lost through incursions of ‘Englishmen and thieves’ – ‘Up wi’ Hawick, its rights and common ....’ [AB], ‘...That while we hold in memory the warrior days of old, Hawick’s trade shall prosper more and more, her sons be more extolled’ [JEDM], ‘But this I ken for certain chaur – A day frae Hawick’s a day wasted’ [DH], ‘...And Hawick there in the middle, The centre o’ them a’’ [WL] (through the 12th and 13th centuries there are spellings like ‘Hawhic’, ‘Hawyk’, etc., which continued until the 17th century, with the modern spelling first appearing in the early 14th century; the origin of the name is uncertain, with ‘hedged houses’ from the Old English ‘hag wic’ being the most popular, although there are no early enough examples with the ‘g’ to prove this, and other ideas, such as ‘town on the low pasture’ or ‘high dwelling’ have also been suggested).

Hawick (haw-wik, hoik) n. the other one, population 536, in Kandiyohi County, Minnesota, U.S.A., Zip code 56246. It is on the Burlington Northern Railroad and MN highway 23, close to the city of Willmar (and coincidentally to the slightly larger town of Melrose) and 68 miles from Minneapolis. The site was first settled in 1857, officially incorporated in 1866 and named ‘Roseville’. A station was built there when the St. Cloud and Willmar branch of what was the ‘St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba Railway’ reached the town in 1886. The station was originally named ‘Russell’, but said to have been renamed Hawick by railway manager Robert Manuel (son of a Hawick Burgh Surveyor) when it was realised there was another Russell elsewhere. There is a separate Roseville nearer to Minneapolis, and the name ‘Hawick’ stuck for this little township. The usual pronunciation is of course different, with the w pronounced and the accent on the first syllable (note that details of the naming are unclear, it is unclear who exactly Robert Manuel was, and there is a separate story of a Norwegian name ‘Harvig’ which became Hawick).

Hawick (haw-wik) n. the third one, a deserted medieval village in Northumberland, near where Hawick Farm and Hawick Crags are on the modern Ordnance Survey maps. In the 12th century the village of Hawick was part of the Lordship of Bolbec, and held by the Lords of Bolam in the 13th century. Thomas of Woodstock, 6th and youngest son of Edward III of England, was created Duke of Gloucester there by his brother Richard II in 1385 on an expedition to Scotland. There is reference to a ‘Bastell House’ there in the third one, a deserted medieval village in Northumberland, near where Hawick Farm and Hawick Crags are on the modern Ordnance Survey maps. In the 12th century the village of Hawick was part of the Lordship of Bolbec, and held by the Lords of Bolam in the 13th century. Thomas of Woodstock, 6th and youngest son of Edward III of England, was created Duke of Gloucester there by his brother Richard II in 1385 on an expedition to Scotland. There is reference to a ‘Bastell House’ there in 1541 and a record of 1584 that 4 ‘decays’ had taken place since 1535, although it is unclear precisely what this refers to. It is absent from the hearth tax list of 1666, there are only 6 families recorded there in 1734 and 4 buildings in a map of 1769. The township was transferred from Kirkharlie to Kirkwhelpington parish in 1847, by which time it must have been already little more than a farm. Much of the earlier earthworks have been put under the plough, but the boundaries of the former village can still partially be seen in ridge and furrow. The nearby Chapel Hill probably contained the chapel near its summit; St. Katherin’s chapel at Hawick is recorded in the monuments of 1575, 1580, 1586. In 1575 he was ‘of Stratsa’ in the Register of the Privy Seal when one of those listed as having been falsely accused by Lord Robert Stewart, tyrannical Earl of Orkney and Shetland. In 1578 he was a debtor to the burgesses of Dysart. Then in 1590, along with his brother Daniel and others, he was accused of attacking Robert Cheyne of Ury, who was Bailie of ‘Tingwall’ and had come to Zetland to hear a case brought against him by ‘ane pure wedow, callit Marione Johnesdochter’; not appearing before the Privy Council, he was denounced as a rebel. He is also mentioned in a charter of 1613, although that may be his son. Andrew Hugh (1905–62) son of Gideon Anderson Smith and Jane Hawick (so he took his mother’s name). He was born at Leith and married Barbara Nicolson Malcolmson. He is buried at Knab Side Cemetery, Lerwick. Anderina Ibsister (1891–1963) daughter of Thomas and Anderina Smith. She is buried at Hissland. Andrew (1832–1909) born at Tingon, Sullon, Gilbert (b.1863–1941) born at Tingon, Sullon, Rosenberg’, which was a pseudonym for Adam Grant. It was then sung regularly at Colour Bussings, and there is a suggestion that the tune may have changed, with the modern one first sung at the 1910 Colour Bussing by George Scott. It was popular with singers John Campbell and Robert T. Roddan.

Hawick (ha-wik) n. A.P. (20th C.) Guizer Jarl in the 1921 Shetland Up-Helly-Aa festival, so a ‘Hawick’ man has been the Shetland Cornet (in a festival that, incidentally, is only about 200 years old). Andrew of ‘Skatsta’ (16th/17th C.) possibly son of Victor, he is recorded in Shetland documents of 1575, 1580, 1586. In 1575 he was ‘of Stratsa’ in the Register of the Privy Seal when one of those listed as having been falsely accused by Lord Robert Stewart, tyrannical Earl of Orkney and Shetland. In 1578 he was a debtor to the burgesses of Dysart. Then in 1590, along with his brother Daniel and others, he was accused of attacking Robert Cheyne of Ury, who was Bailie of ‘Tingwall’ and had come to Zetland to hear a case brought against him by ‘ane pure wedow, callit Marione Johnesdochter’; not appearing before the Privy Council, he was denounced as a rebel. He is also mentioned in a charter of 1613, although that may be his son. Andrew Hugh (1905–62) son of Gideon Anderson Smith and Jane Hawick (so he took his mother’s name). He was born at Leith and married Barbara Nicolson Malcolmson. He is buried at Knab Side Cemetery, Lerwick. Anderina Ibsister (1891–1963) daughter of Thomas and Anderina Smith. She is buried at Hissland. Andrew (1832–1909) born at Tingon, Sullon, Gilbert (b.1863–1941) born at Tingon, Sullon, Northmavine. He married Barbara Henderson Tulloch in 1892. Isabella Ann ‘Bella’ (1910–90) musically talented Shetland woman, whose married name was Hunter. She restarted the Lerwick Girl Guides, arranged musicals and operettas and gave Scottish country dancing lessons.

A book of reminiscences of her life was written by Ann Hill in 1993. James (17th C.) Jedburgh resident, who is recorded having several children christened there in the 1640s and 1650s, including James in 1647, who was probably the eldest son and father of a later generation of Jedburgh Hawicks. It is unclear whether he was related to the Shetland branch, or descended from one of the earlier ‘de Hawick’s. James Cheyne (1855–1927) born at Houbans, Northmavine in Shetland. He married Margaret Henderson. James (1893–1976) son of Thomas and Anderina Smith. He was born at Nibon and is buried at Hillswick. Jane (1858–1931) born at Gruna, Gunmister, Northmavine. She married Gideon Anderson Smith and is buried at Mid Yell. John (13th C.) recorded in the Boldon Book of 1183, a listing of the Bishop of Durham’s lands. Under the village of Whickham he is ‘John Hawyk’, holding 2 cottages and 6 acres. John (16th C.) recorded as witness to a transaction in Selkirk in 1545. John (d.1568) servitor to John Gledstains, who was Senator of the College of Justice. A record of his testament is recorded in Edinburgh in 1568/9. John (18th C.) married Isobell Scollay in Delting in 1753. Katherine (16th/17th C.) of the Shetland family. She married Laurence Sinclair of Ustaness (who was born in 1575). Her husband was found guilty in 1602 of being part of the murder of Mathew Sinclair of Ness (a cousin of some sort) and was denounced as a rebel in 1611 for failing to appear. Their children were William, Robert and Matthew. Kenneth Arthur (??– ) computer scientist. He obtained his Ph.D. from Edinburgh in 1991 and held positions at the Edinburgh University Parallel Computing Centre, the Northeast Parallel Architectures Centre in Syracuse, New York, the University of Adelaide, (where he worked with Hawick-born David Wallace), and as Chair of Computer Science at the University of Wales, Bangor. He was Professor and Chair of Computer Science in the Institute of Information and Mathematical Science at Massey University, New Zealand from 2003. Since 2013 he has been Professor at the Digital Centre, University of Hull. Margaret (13th/14th C.) from Northumberland, she was admitted as a taxpayer in London in 1309/10, where she is referred to as ‘Margareta Hawyk, no doubt a widow’. Margaret (15th C.) first recorded in 1428 as a nun at Neasham, in the Parish of Hurworth on the Rivert Tees. She was elected as Prioress there in 1429, her surname being written as ‘Hawyk’. In 1436 the Bishop of Durham ordered an investigation into whether the rules and morals of the nunnery were being kept up. A further commission in 1437 found several defects and excesses and this led to her resignation as Prioress. However, she was allowed to remain there, with the use of a private room. There is no information about how she was related to anyone else of the same surname. Margaret (17th/18th C.) of the ‘Scatsta’ family, she married Alexander Dunbar of Hardwell, probably in the early 1700s. Margaret Robb (1928–97) daughter of Robert Laurence. She was a primary school teacher. She married Gerald Kingsley Greening. Matthew (d.1645) one of the earliest members of the Shetland family, he was tenant in Southladie in Yell. One of his children had the curious name ‘Matches’. His wife was Ingagarth Gregorinsdochter, and died in 1648. Robert (d.c.1587) Burgess of Dumfries whose testament is recorded in Edinburgh in 1587. Robert (d.1648) tenant in Firth in Delting. His testament is recorded in Shetland. Robert (18th C.) married Margaret Scollay in Delting in 1757. Thus he probably married his brother’s sister-in-law. Robert Lawrence (1898–1963) born in Lerwick in the Shetland Isles, son of a fishing skipper. He served in WWI and in 1931 emigrated to New Zealand, where he was a rubber factory worker, chauffeur, grocery assistant and farmer. He married Elizabeth Halcrow in Lerwick in 1926. Their daughter was Patricia Margaret Robb. Vincent (16th C.) first of the Shetland Hawicks of whom we have record. He is mentioned in a deed of 1573 (in the Melby charter chest) as ‘umqle Vincentius Hawick of Scatstay’, so he was presumably already dead by then. His family members are also listed there, namely Robert, Andrew, Daniel, Matthew, Bartholomew, James, Thomas, John, Christian, Samuel, Margaret, Catherine, Janet, Agnes, Elspeth, and Sarah. This Andrew may well be the same as the one noted above. Whether Vincent was the original settler from the Hawick area is unknown (‘Hawick’ is fairly rare as a surname, but ‘K.A. Hawick’ comes up frequently in web-based searches, because of his computing connection; see the Hawicks and de Hawick).
the Hawick-Acklington Dyke

Street in 1857. Murray started as Headmaster there when he was only 19. The building had formerly been the Subscription Rooms, and at a school there had been known as ‘the Subscription School’. It moved to a building a few doors down, which had previously been the Quaker Meeting House and also a temporary cholera hospital. It closed in 1866 a few years after Murray had moved to London, and the building was demolished in 1868.

Hawick Albion (hIk-aWln-bee-in) n. rugby team for 12 to 16 year olds. Their strip is a green and white quartered shirt, with green socks, or sometimes a plain green shirt. They play at Mansfield Park, next to the Hawick R.F.C. ground.

Hawick Amateur Operatic Society (hIk-am-ee’-ur-o-pe-raw’-eek-su-sl-i’-ee) n. musical organisation founded in 1910, with the first performance being H.M.S. Pinafore in 1911. It has mounted an annual musical production most years since then. Ian Seeley wrote a history of the society in 2010, ‘On With the Show’.

Hawick Amateur Swimming Club (hIk-am-ee’-ur-soo-min-klub) n. swimming club based in Hawick, established shortly after the Corporation Baths were gifted to the town by the owners of Wilson & Glenny in 1912. It was also known as the Hawick Amateur Swimming Association. Local swimmers Ronnie Murphy, Tom Robson and Brian McConnell has particular success in the 1950s and 60s. The Club disbanded when ‘the Baths’ closed in 1982, but re-established in 1995 by Alison Bruce and Jean Amos, now based in the Teviotdale Leisure Centre.

Hawick Among the Hills (hIk-u-mung-thu-hilz) n. song written by John Inglis in the 1870s to the tune of ‘Scotland Yet’, and dedicated to James Winthrop (his friend who had emigrated to Canada). It is recorded being sung by Inglis himself at a farewell function for a Mr. Routledge in 1878. New music was written by William Inglis Robson in 1887, perhaps influenced by Balfe’s ‘Killarney’. It was first sung at the 1887 Colour Cussing (in the Council Chambers) by Nellie Anderson and then at the 1889 Colour Bussing by Miss McGregor. Addie Ingles changed the arrangement, removing some of the more ornamental Victorian parts. The original second verse is now rarely sung.

Hawick an Area (hIk-an-ää-ree-a) n. Ordnance Survey Pathfinder map number 485, 1:25,000 scale, useful for detailed roads around Hawick.

Hawick an Border Car Club (hIk-an-bör-dur-kawr-klub) n. main local automobile racing club. Its aims are to further the interest of motoring and motor sport, including organising events and promoting competitions.

Hawick an Borders Motorbike Club (hIk-an-bör-durz-mo’-ur-bik-klub) n. Hawick & Borders Motorcycle Club, which organises the annual Jimmie Guthrie Memorial Run of old motorbikes at Denholm Green, started in 1962. Often shortened to ‘Hawick & Borders M.C.C.’.

Hawick an Buccleuch Boolin Club (hIk-an-bu-kloo-boo-lin-klub) n. erroneous name sometimes given for a local bowling club. There are neighbouring, but separate, Hawick and Buccleuch Clubs.

Hawick and its Old Memories (hIk-and-its-old-me-ño-reez) n. book compiled by James Wilson and published in 1858 as an addendum to his ‘Annals of Hawick’ (1850). It is also known as ‘Memories of Hawick’. It contains additional notices of the Town, further extracts from the Burgh Records, transcripts from the Parish Records and Treasurer’s Book, and extensive appendices. These include early documents relating to the Town, as well as biographical information on several prominent residents of Hawick and neighbourhood. These include several items published for the first time, e.g. the genealogy of the Douglases of Cavers.

Hawick an Eskdale (hIk-an-esk-däl) n. Ordnance Survey Landranger map number 79, 1:50,000 scale. This is the most common map of the roads around Hawick, although in fact Hawick is awkwardly placed in the north-east corner.

Hawick an Wulton Cricket Club (hlk-an-wul’-in-kri-ki’-klub) n. Hawick’s cricket club, playing in the Border League, with grounds and clubhouse at Buccleuch Park since 1860. Cricket was introduced to Hawick around 1844, with several teams being formed in 1849. Hawick & Wilton formed by later amalgamation and was the only one to survive. The original members of the Hawick and Wilton club were John Scott, William Dryden, Thomas Scott, John Waugh, Martin Pott, William Ainslie, William Howieson, James Scott, William Turner, Charles Paisley, Robert and Dandy Mather, James Fiddes and George Wilson (secretary), all of whom lived in Wilton. They played on the Upper Haugh and then the Under Haugh, and practised at Galalaw, before being gifted Buccleuch Park by the Duke of Buccleuch. It was this club that introduced the ‘handling code’ in 1872, after they had purposed a football to keep the players fit in the winter months, this leading to the formation of Hawick R.F.C. A pavilion was built, along with new fencing, following a 3 day ‘Charles Dickens’ bazaar in 1889. The ground was developed in the 1970s, with a new brick pavilion built to replace the wooden one. The team is amateur, but has often had a single professional player.

Hawick an Wulton Fitbaa Club (hlk-an-wul’-in-fâ’-baw-klub) n. rugby football club connected with Hawick and Wilton Cricket Club. It was formed separately from ‘Hawick Football Club’ in 1885 and folded in 1890. For a few years there were these two teams existing, as well as St. Cuthbert’s. They played their matches on the cricket field.

Hawick Archaeological Society (hlk-ar-kee-u-lo-jee-kul-su-sl-i’-ee) n. Hawick’s club devoted to local history, founded in 1856, organising lectures, outings, and publishing the annual ‘Transactions’ since 1863. The Society was officially started on 16th September 1856, with the founders including William Norman Kennedy, Robert Michie, J.A.H. Murray, Alexander Michie, James Thom, George Webster and Robert Murray. The first lectures were given on 27th September 1856 by George Webster and Robert Michie and the first of the regular monthly meetings was on 8th October that year. The basic organisation of monthly meetings and an annual outing was quickly established. However, the Society was reconstituted in 1888 after meetings had lapsed for a couple of years (there were no meetings in 1886 and 1887, and only a few in 1888 and 1889, partly because the Society was engaged in moving its collection to the new Museum in the Buccleuch Memorial). It celebrated its jubilee in 1906, with the freedom of the Burgh given to J.A.H. Murray at a banquet attended by 260 people. It received its own coat of arms in 1992. Objects of interest were donated to the Society at regular monthly meetings, resulting in the need to rent premises to store them, with the first Museum being opened in 1858 at the eastern end of the High Street. After several moves the society offered its collection to the Town Council on the condition that Wilton Lodge be converted to a Museum, the move happening in 1910. Monthly lectures have been organised annually since the club began, with the season now concentrating on the winter months, and talks usually held in the Town Hall on Tuesday evenings. The society has done a great deal to preserve and commemorate the history of the Hawick area.

Hawick Art Club (hlk-ar’-klub) n. the main art organisation in Hawick since being established in 1930. The Club holds weekly meetings, as well as regular art tutorials and talks. It also holds an annual open art competition. The Club at one time held an extensive collection of local paintings, which were handed over to the Council, eventually finding a home in the Scott Gallery. An earlier organisation, called the Hawick Fine Art Association, held an exhibition in 1883 and in 1884/5.

Hawick Athletic Club (hlk-awth-le’-eek-klub) n. name used around the 1940s for the boxing club run by Frank Finney at Stonefield.

Hawick Baa (hlk-baw) n. handball game, played on the day before the game in Jedburgh (which was on Shrove Tuesday), or in earlier years the Monday after Shrove Tuesday, the last time being in 1939. Hawick’s game is probably not as ancient as that of Jedburgh, or even those of Denholm and Hobkirk. Although its origin is unclear, it took place regularly until about 1780, and then restarted in 1842. In the intervening years Hawick players used to attend the Denholm and Hobkirk games. The first ‘baa’ of 1842 was ‘hailed’ by John Gilroy. In 1893 it apparently was played a week early due to an error in Oliver & Boyd’s Almanac. The game ran annually, with a break during WWI until 1919, and then continued until the outbreak of WWII, and was not revived afterwards. The main game was known as the ‘men’s baa’, with the ‘callents’ baa’ played on the Saturday before. It took place mainly in and around Commercial Road and the Teviot, with much activity in the river itself. The two sides were the West Enders and the East Enders. In the 18th century there were battles between the ‘Eastla’ and ‘Westla’ gangs, mainly youths under about 16 that formed into regiments, with drums, flags, halberds, clubs, etc., in the 2 or 3 weeks before Eastern’s Eve. The hails in the 1840s were the toll-bar at the Haugh end of Commercial Road, and opposite Dickson & Laings, where the town boundary crossed the river (the area between these hails being open ground at that time). By the 1850s the hails were moved to the Coble Cauld and the arches of the railway bridge over the Teviot. Balls were sponsored, often by local businesses, with about 6 or 7 per year, each having a prize or money going to the hailer. One ball in 1866 took 3 hours, but normally balls were much shorter. One year the game reached the Sandbed, with players scrambling over a roof, and in 1902 much of the activity took place on the frozen Teviot. Many injuries were noted, and there may also have been one or two drownings. One of the balls is in the Museum.

Hawick bake (hlk-bæk) n., arch. an occasional name for a sort of hard-baked scone seasoned with all-spice – ‘There’s a sugar bool an taffy, tipenny pies, curney scones an’ Hawick bakes . . .’ [JEDM] (possibly named in competition with ‘Selkirk banni’).

Hawick Balls (hlk-bawlz) n. local confection, consisting of a ball-shaped boiled sweet with a mint flavour. It was said to have been invented by ‘Bonnie Aggie Lamb’ and manufactured by Hills since around 1900. The recipe was later bought by Smiths and then by Buchanan’s of Scotland, based in Greenock – ‘Sookin a Hawick Ball as A gaun throwe Gala . . .’ [IWL] (note, typically pronounced bawlz not bawz).

Hawick Benefit Building Society (hlk-be-ni-fi’-bil-din-su-sl-i’-ee) n. mutual improvement society in Hawick, which probably did not last very long. The National Archives have some records from 1851.

Hawick Bicycle Club (hlk-bi-see-kul-klub) n. cycling club formed in Hawick in 1881, eventually becoming Hawick Cycling Club.

Hawick Biliard Club (hlk-bi-lee-urd-klub) n. club set up in 1877, based in a building erected at the corner of Beaconsfield Terrace and Green Lane, also known as the Teviotdale Club.

Hawick Boolin Club (hlk-boo-lin-klub, -bō-lin-klub) n. lawn bowling organisation, formed in 1854, and possibly the oldest bowling club in the Borders. There were 42 original members when it was founded, and the first President was John Laing. The club green was originally at Allars Crescent (before the houses were built there) and then between North Bridge Street and Bourtree Place (where the Baptist Church was built). The club organised the first Border open tournament in 1872. The green and clubrooms are on Buccleuch Street to the west of the Old Parish Church, the site being granted by the Duke of Buccleuch in 1873, and opened the following summer. The Duke was gifted with a pair of gold-mounted bowls by the Hawick and Buccleuch clubs in 1882. J.P. Alison designed a new pavilion, built in mock-timbered style in 1892. A special 150th anniversary badge was produced in 2004.

Hawick Brae (hlk-bri) n. local name for the steep hill that rises from Bonniehill in the direction of Hawick.

the Hawick Burghs (thu-hlk-bu-ruz) n. parliamentary constituency, created after the Representation of the People (Scotland) Act of 1868, which lowered franchise and redistributed seats. It was composed of Hawick, Selkirk and Galashiels, being separate from the counties of Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire. George Trevelyan was the first M.P. in 1868, and the constituency was dissolved in 1918. The M.P.s who won elections were as follows: 1868 G.O. Trevelyan; 1869 (bye-election) G.O. Trevelyan; 1874 G.O. Trevelyan; 1880 G.O. Trevelyan; 1882 (bye-election) G.O. Trevelyan; 1885 G.O. Trevelyan; 1886 (bye-election) G.O. Trevelyan; 1886 A.L. Brown; 1892 T. Shaw; 1894 (bye-election) T. Shaw; 1909 Sir J.N. Barran; ?? (sometimes also called ‘the Border Burghs’).

Hawick Buskers (hlk-bus-kurz) n. group of local retirees who play old-time music.

The Hawick Callant see The Callant

Hawick Camera Club (hlk-kaw-mu-ru-klub) n. amateur photographic association within Hawick, with clubrooms at 78 High Street. They co-sponsored the publication of Hawick as it was and have been involved with the annual ‘Hawick in Pictures’. The club’s first meeting was at 1 O’Connell Street in 1873.

Hawick Carpet Company (hlk-kawr-pi’-kum-pi-ne) n. former main carpet factory in Hawick, operating in Orrock Place 1752–1806.
Hawick Cashmere Company

Hawick Cashmere Company (hIk-kash-meer-kum-pi-n-eek) n. knitwear company based at Trinity Mills, also known as ‘Hawico’. It was essentially a rebranding of Hawick Hosiery Co. in 1990.

Hawick Castle (hIk-kaw-sul) n. motte and bailey castle built by the Lovels in the early 12th century on high ground above the town. At first it was probably a wooden tower and palisade. The site was abandoned by the mid-16th century, in favour of the Tower, and now only the ‘Mote’ remains.

Hawick Cemetery (hIk-see-mi-ree) n. former name for the Wellogate Cemetery.

Hawick Characters (hIk-kaw-reck-turz) n. book edited and published by Robert Murray in 1901. It contains short chapters on several ‘weel-kent’ people from Hawick’s streets around the early 19th century. Although the idea was no doubt Murray’s, in fact most of the entries were much from much earlier articles for the Archaeological Society written by William Norman Kennedy. Illustrations were based on Adam Brown paintings or were provided by T.H. Laidlaw. A second series of characters was presented in 1910.

Hawick Chess Congress (hIk-ches-kong-gres) n. annual chess meeting held in Hawick since 1992 (with a gap in 1997), first organised by Stephen Palmer-Douglas and Jim Taylor.

Hawick Choral Society (hIk-kor-ul-su-sl-ee) n. organisation which staged choral performances, formed perhaps around 1860 and lasting for several decades. Charles Taylor was conductor around the 1870s. It was also known as the Hawick Choral Union. It was reconstituted in the years immediately after WWII, but did not last long.

Hawick Christmas Parade (hIk-kris-mis-pu-rad) n. community-based parade, started in 1986 by the Everlyn and Gilbert Sangster. It consists of floats walking groups and Santa, running between Mart Street and the Big Haugh. Money raised is donated to local charities and youth organisations.

Hawick Clothin Society (hIk-klo-thin-su-sl-i-n-ee) n. former organisation in Hawick, which distributed clothing to poor women in the Parish. It was set up in 1821 and managed by a committee of ladies.

Hawick Colporteur Mission (hIk-kol-por-tur-mi-shin) n. local evangelical mission, lasting at least through the 1860s to 1880s, run by Adam Scott.

Hawick Common, 1846

Hawick Common Ridin’ (hIk-ko-min-ri-din) n. booklet first published by the Callants’ Club in 1983, written by Ron Taylor, but with input from a large number of people. Although originally meant for school children, it is the definitive description of the Common Riding tradition. It was revised in 1998 by Frank Scott.

Hawick Common Riding (hIk-ko-min-ri-ding) n. booklet published in 2009, full title ‘Hawick Common Riding, An Illustrated Guide’. It was written by Lesley Fraser and Judith Murray. A ‘Kidz Guide’ was also produced at the same time, telling the story of the Common Riding from the point of view of Rupert the horse.

The Hawick Common Riding (thn-hIk-ko-min-ri-ding) n. 78 r.p.m. recording released by the Beltona label in the 1930s. It features a medley of Hawick songs in 2 parts. The songs covered are ‘The Border Queen’, ‘Up wi’ Auld Hawick’, ‘Clinty’, ‘I Like Auld Hawick the Best’, ‘Pawkie PaIterson’, ‘Bonnie Teviotdale’ and ?? This is probably the first time these songs had been recorded. The singer was ‘Allan Ramsey’, probably a pseudonym for James Dalgleish. Accompaniment is by a small band, including strings.

Hawick Common Ridin, 1846 (hIk-ko-min-rin-i-teen-for-ee-siks) n. painting by Andrew Kennedy, being the earliest known visual representation of the festival. It is a view from near the foot of Walter’s Wynd showing the Cornet and the Right- and Left-Hand Men crossing the Teviot on horseback near Laidlaw’s Cauld, while the games are in progress on the Under Haugh (i.e. Commercial Road area), with stalls, tents and a stand erected for spectators. It also shows the sparse houses in Wilton at that time. The painting now hangs in the Museum. The painting was restored in 2014.
Hawick Community Hospital

Hawick Cyclin Club (hIk-si-klin-klub) n. Hawick Cycling Club, which formed in 1881 as the Hawick Amateur Bicycle Club, becoming the Hawick Amateur Bicycle Club in 1889 and then adopting its present name in 1901. The inaugural meeting was held in the Crown Hotel. The Teviotdale Amateur Bicycle Club already existed, and it is now not known why a second organisation was started. Members on penny farthings can be seen outside Wilton Lodge in a photograph from 1881. Through the 1880s the club existed alongside the slightly older Teviotdale Amateur Bicycle Club, and there were some competitive events held between the 2 organisations. In the late 19th century the club’s uniform consisted of grey outfits with maroon caps. A ladies section was formed in 1898. In 1901 a team was raised by James Haig (apparently annoyed at no Terrie being picked for Scotland), which challenged and beat a rest of Scotland team. The membership hit a peak of 176 in the early 1900s, but then interest began to wane. The club folded in 1911, but reformed under new rules in 1925, at a meeting chaired by W.P. Gaylor. Disputes over Sunday runs led to many members resigning, with the issue being resolved with an annual run that included attendance at a church service. Grass track races were popular in the 1920s and 30s, with R. Scott winning the Scottish half-mile title in 1927. Activities of the club were suspended during WWII. Nan Robson became the first female club captain in 1954. The club was sponsored by Bantel from 1981 until the mid-1990s. Members compete in races as well as riding in leisure events, and has produced several successful competitive cyclists. The clubrooms have been in Teviot Crescent since 1982. A history of the club from 1881–2010 was published in 2020, written by Denis Devlin.

Hawick Eventide Hames

been taken by the Hawickers at the Battle of Flodden Field, ‘...now Hawickers can communicate in a few minutes with almost any part of the world’ [Wis].

Hawick Eventide Hames (hIk-ee-vin-tid-hämz) n. Hawick & District Eventides Homes, Ltd., an organisation that runs Weens House as an elderly care facility.

Hawick Exchange Company (hIk-eks-chanj-kum-pi-nee) n. company formed to raise money to construct the Exchange Buildings. It was formed in 1861 and dissolved in 1881, and its records are in the National Archive.

the Hawick Exiles Club (thu-hIk-ek-silz-khub) n. club that thrived in the Manchester area in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. It grew out of the large number of Teris who were drawn to that area by textile work. The club met in ‘the Crown’ in Salford, with the first Chairman being John Smith.

the Hawick Express (thu-hIk-eks-pres) n. weekly newspaper, established in October 1870 by James Dalgleish as the ‘Hawick Express and Scottish Border News’. For many years John Rule was editor and part proprietor, then Mr. Craw took over the business, followed by James Edgar, who was editor as well as proprietor. It was originally priced at 1 penny, and in competition with the Advertiser. It merged with the Advertiser in 1915 to become the ‘Hawick Express & Advertiser and Roxburghshire Gazette’, then the ‘Hawick Express and Roxburghshire Advertiser’ from 1930 and simply the ‘Hawick Express’ from 1964. It finally merged into the ‘Southern Reporter’ in 1983.

Hawick Farm (ha-wik-farm) n. farm in Northumberland, near Great Bavington. There was a deserted mediæval village near here called ‘Hawick’.

Hawick Farm (hIk-ferm) n. name formerly given to a farm on Hawick Moor. This was where the Town Herd lived in the mid-19th century, and is so called on the 1851 census (probably the same as Hawickmoor).

Hawick Farmers’ Club (hIk-fer-nurz-khub) n. local agricultural body, existing from 1776 (although perhaps existing informally shortly before then) until 1868. It was possibly the earliest farmers’ club in Scotland (although the ‘Honest Country Club’ was a sort of short-lived nearby predecessor). The founders were Adam Ogilvie, Rev. James Erskine (Robertson), John Lawrie (Hawick), James Wilson (Hawick) and William Turnbull of Burnfoot, who was the first President. It formed for ‘the improvement of farming’, meeting on the first Thursday (i.e. market day) of each month, and discussing many topics. The membership soon expanded, being 25–60 in its first 50 years. The Club established the corn market in 1778 (occurring from noon until 1 p.m. at the Cross on market days). It was also largely responsible for starting an annual fair at Rink in October of 1779, which became the biggest fair for the sale of draft ewes and ‘wedders’ in the South of Scotland. The Hawick hiring fair on the 1st, and 3rd Thursdays of April was recommended by the Club and started on the 3rd Thursday in April 1780. The October cattle Tryst was also suggested by the Club and started in 1785. There was ploughing contests organised by the Club for several years, as well as prizes for the best livestock (until 1814 when this was superseded by the prizes of the Border Agricultural Society). The Club recommended starting a market for cattle and horses on the May Fair day in 1826. It was also instrumental in planning the Corn Exchange in Hawick during the 1850s. The organisational was generally important in representing local farmers for almost a century, and was effectively superseded by the Teviotdale Farmers Club, which formed in 1859. Lists of members and minute books from 1776 are in the Scottish Borders Archive (also known as the ‘Hawick Farmer Club’).

Hawick Film an Video Group (hIk-fil-am-vi-dee-a-groop) n. established in 1964 as Hawick Film Group, it meets fortnightly in Croft Road, putting on film shows and organising competitions. They were responsible for the film ‘Sons of Heroes’ shortly after forming, and several more recent local videos.

Hawick Fitbaa Club (hIk-fi’-baw-khub) n. name used in the 19th and early 20th centuries for what would become Hawick R.F.C.

Hawick Framework Knitters Association (hIk-främ-work-mu’-urrz-aw-sö-soe-ah-shin) n. Hawick’s first legal labour organisation, set up in 1840. It was also known as the Hawick Stockingmakers’ Association and may have been the same as (or allied with) the Hawick Hosiery Trade Society.

Hawick Free Kirk (hIk-free-kirk) n. original name for the Free or Protestong Church, founded in Hawick in 1843, following the Disruption. The church was erected in 1844 in Free Church (later St. George’s) Lane and changed its name formally from ‘Hawick Free Church’ to ‘St. George’s United Free Church’ in 1900. The last sermon in the old building was in August 1914, and the new larger church was opened in 1916. The church is now known as ‘Teviot Kirk’.

Hawick Free Press (hlk-free-pres) n. local newspaper, published 1897–1908 by William Henderson. It was an advertising and news sheet, published free every Wednesday.

Hawick Freendly Society (hlk-freend-lees-slu-st-l-i'-nee) n. mutual aid society existing in Hawick from the late 18th century, probably about 1779. George Caw printed their rules in 1791. It formed to provide a fund for sick and injured workers, and along with a second similar society it was dissolved by its members some time before 1838. Another such society was set up in 1802 and was also dissolved by 1838.

Hawick fri Wulton Lodge, 1800 (hlk-fri-wul'-in-loj-i'-teen-hum-dur) n. usual title given to what is probably the first picture of Hawick, hanging in the Museum. It is a water-colour by an unknown artist, being a view from about the gates of the Avenue looking towards the town. It is also referred to as ‘Hawick Old Bridge and Cobble Pool in 1800’.

Hawickgate (hlk-ga') n. former name for an area in Jedburgh. In 1643 the ‘feued acres of Jedburghside and Hawickgate’ were valued at £10 per acre for a total of £620. By the late 18th century the teinds of the lands were held by Douglas of Adderstone. The bulk of the lands (still valued at £220 along with Jedburghside) were owned by the ‘Acerers of Jedburghside and Hawickgate’ in 1788; at the same time Thomas Waugh of Hawkburn held 13 acres in Hawickgate that had belonged to the Marquis of Lothian (valued at £130), 6 acres in Jedburghside and Hawickgate that had belonged to James Riddell (valued at £60) and 2½ acres in Jedburghside and Hawickgate that had belonged to James Chisholme (valued at £25). The name is also recorded in 1804 in a set of surveying exercises, the title being ‘Fernibrae and Brown’s lands at Hawickgate’. It is written ‘Hawick-gate’ in the 1813 Land Tax Rolls for Jedburgh Parish, when Archibald Douglas of Adderstone had part of the teinds there; additionally Thomas Waugh paid tax on 2½ acres there that had belonged to James Chisholme and 6 acres that had belonged to James Riddell (presumably the name comes from being on the road out of Jedburgh towards Hawick).

Hawick gill (hlk-jil) n., arch. a somewhat jocular term for half an imperial pint, i.e. twice the size of a standard gill. It occurs in the traditional song (printed in Ramsay’s collection of 1724) often called ‘Andro and his Cutty Gun’ – ‘Blyth, blyth, blyth, was she, Blyth was she but and ben; Weel she lo’ed a Hawick gill, And leugh to see a tappit-hen’ (this being a quart jug), the verse also being referred to in a note in Sir Walter Scott’s ‘Guy Mannering’. Note that the same song appeared in Robert Burns’ ‘Merry Muses of Caledonia’ in a bawdier version, without the reference to Hawick. The phrase occurs in Scott’s ‘Carle, Now the King’s Come’, written in 1822 – ‘A Hawick gill of mountain dew, Heised up Auld Reekie’s heart, I trow’ [SWS]. The lines ‘Come, hostess, bring’s a Hawick gill, An’ to his health I’ll fill’ are from 1813, ‘If her ye’d gien a Hawick gill, She might been leal’ from about the same time and ‘Bring’s a Hawick gill, An’ here’s to Hawick’s bonnie lassies!’ in 1859. The phrase was certainly known in the Edinburgh area, but it is unclear if it was in common use outside poetry, and there are no physical examples of the measure known in Hawick. However, this entry appears in the Hawick Treasurer’s books – ‘Mor payed at traying ye wine – 2 double gilles, 12s.’ in 1732. This suggests that the measure was in use locally, even of the phrase was not. Despite this, it certainly entered the vocabulary of later local poets – ‘Ye’er sides are retcht an’ I’m gey ill, Come let us hae a Hawick gill For auld lang syne, or aib-lins twa, This air is damp an’ unco raw’ [WNK], ‘...gie um a gude Hawick gill; it’ll dae um nae herm’ [JEDM], ‘The auld Miser has cost me three guid Hawick gills already this mornin’ and he’s no fu’ yet’ [JEDM], ‘Then Fenwick, bring’s a Hawick gill, An’ here’s to Hawick’s bonnie lassies!’ [GWe], ‘A Hawick gill was in my e’e, – My heart as light as ony feather, – When warm wi’ love and barley bree, I crossed the moor amang the heather’ [JT].

Hawick Gas Light Company (hlk-gaws-li'-kum-pi-ne) n. private company set up to provide gas lighting (and later gas for cooking and heating). Founded in 1830, with 12 directors, it only became part of Scottish Gas in 1948. The company installed gas lights in the main streets in 1831. Its main premises were at the southern corner of Commercial Road and Bath Street until about 1882, when they moved to Mansfield Road.

Hawick Girls’ Patriotic Club (hlk-gir-ulz-pa'-ree-o'-eeek-klub) n. organisation founded in 1915 in Hawick to organise fund-raising events during WWI.

Hawick Glebe (hlk-glee-eb) n. area formerly owned by the Parish Church, from which the minister could receive additional income. The location of the lands changed over time, as the Town developed. In 1447 a description of the parish states that the vicar has ‘for his mansion four acres of arable land of its ecclesiastical glebe’. In about 1738 it is described that there were 7 acres, and these were situated off the Loan, to the west of Myreslawgreen. These lands were later exchanged for land where Slinrig Crescent was built, and then exchanged again for land in the Wellogate. It is marked on Wood’s map of 1824 around the area of Wellogate Place. In 1839 it was stated to consist of about 16 acres and was let at an annual rent of £62.

Hawick Golf Club (hIk-golf-klub) n. founded in 1877 by Robert Purdom, John Manuel and Charles Taylor, it was fully formed by early the following year, with a committee of 7. The Club received permission from the Town Council to use part of the Vertish Hill, provided no damage was done. General Scott of Hoscote was the first Honorary Captain, with ex-Provost R.F. Watson the Captain, and Robert Purdom the Secretary and Treasurer. It was the first such club in the Borders. The Ladies Club was started at least as early as 1893. The course is on the Vertish Hill, being part of the Common, rented from the Council, but maintained by the club. There were originally 11 holes, with one more added in 1879 and the last 6 completed by 1894. The first Clubhouse was a house at the foot of Burnflat Brae adapted for use about 1880. The present Clubhouse was built in 1894/5, on land gifted by the Duke of Buccleuch, and with funds from a bazaar, which included the performance of J.E.D. Murray’s ‘The Caddie’s Ghost’. The design of the clubhouse was by J.P. Alison and is described as both Swiss style and Tudoresque. It was extensively refurbished in 1996. The course has 18 holes, is 5,933 yards, par 68 (5,239 yards, par 69 for the ladies course), and with stunning views from several holes. The following is a list of the holes in order: Road; Thorntree; Nipknowes; Well; Terrace; Hunter; St. Leonards; Quarry; Alcohol; Whitlaw; High; The Corner; Herds; Wood; Gallery; Pit; Burgess; and Home. The course record is 61 and the longest hole is the 7th. Famous golfers to have played there include Tony Jacklin and Nick Faldo in 1989. An early history was published by James Barrie in 1898 – ‘I have climbed the Loan a hundred times On the way to Vertish Hill; The caddies I’ve met by St. Mary’s chimes, And engaged them with right goodwill, But now. alas! ’tis a hope that is past, The game’s a perfect bore; The strain on my brain can no longer last – I’ll never play golf any more’ [RGD].

Hawick High Schuil

Hawick Group (hIk-groop) n. name sometimes given by geologists to particular Silurian shales of the Southern Uplands accretionary terrane, found near Hawick. It is of particular interest because of the so-called Llandovery-Wenlock extinction event, involving graptolites, as described by the work of Charles Lapworth.

Hawick Guide (hIk-gid) n. ‘Hawick Guide: Directory and Yearbook’ published by James Edgar in the early 1900s. As well as being a tourist guide, it contained private addresses of local gentlemen, farmers and societies, as well as a death roll.

Hawick Harlequins see the Quins

Hawick Heritable Investment Bank (hIk-her-it-a-bul-in-vest-min’-bawng) n. local bank that was a limited company, founded in 1876. J. Murray was the agent in the 1880s. It lasted into the early 20th century and some records are in the National Archive. It may have merged with the Standard Property Investment Co. of Edinburgh in the mid-1930s.

Hawick herts (hIk-hertz) n., pl. name sometimes given to a distinctive quilting motif popular in Hawick in the early part of the 20th century. These hearts, with spiky leaves inside, were quite distinctive (and perhaps inspired by the Douglas heart on the Burgh coat of arms). Other characteristics of quilts made locally around that time are thistles and gowans, with clamshell infills. At least 20 such quilts have been identified, mostly made for church sales of work. The most prominent local quilter was Janet Pow.

Hawick High Schuil (hIk-hl-skil) n. Hawick’s secondary school, on Buccleuch Road. Also the name of a private tutor’s school that was in the Subscription Rooms at 13 Buccleuch Street, in the second half of the 19th century, when the present High School was still named the Buccleuch School. This private school lasted until about 1874. The first appearance of ‘Hawick High School’ as a secondary school was when it was started by the School Board as a fee-paying school for senior students, following a petition by ratepayers. It was situated in roughly 1874–76 in the Masonic Hall at Myreslawgreen. It was effectively replaced by Teviot Grove Academy, which became the senior part of Buccleuch School (although based at the east end of town). This became ‘Buccleuch Higher Grade School’ in 1908, and eventually ‘Hawick High School’ in 1915. A web-site listing illustrious former pupils was started as a school project in about 2011. There Hawick Home Mission (hlk-höm-mi-shin) n. evangelical group set up in 1873, inter-denominational, but intimately related with the Baptist Church. The instigators were John Beattie, Willie Miller and Tammie Bell, who convinced the gospellers J.G. Scroggie and W.D. Dunn to come to the town from Galashiels at the end of 1872. They carried on gatherings for 17 weeks. A meeting was then held, overseen by Lord Polwarth, which resulted in the founding of the Mission, with 46 members enrolled and Willie Miller as the first President. 2,000 people attended a ‘camp meeting’ at Netherhall, with Scroggie and Dunn in attendance. In 1873 and for many years afterwards, Lord Polwarth invited the members to spend Common Riding Saturday at Mertoun House; later the venue was changed to Harden Glen. The organisation strongly opposed the Common Riding. In 1879 the Mission agreed to contribute to the Baptist Church’s appointment of a new pastor. There was also a choir formed. The group purchased and converted Oliver’s former auction house in Bourtree Terrace in 1883. The main services were on Sunday evenings and were packed during their most popular period. Meetings were also held in a house on Baker Street, on the Miller’s Knowes in the summer, at Drumlanrig Home, and in some of the surrounding hamlets, particularly Newmill. In 1887 there was disagreement over the rules and most of the committee resigned, to be replaced by a new committee. They also ran services for the troops out at Stobs. The organisation was also involved with the Christian Endeavour youth movement. Originally having members who were also in other local congregations, by 1907 it was effectively a church in its own right; however, numbers were by then starting to decline from the high of 210 members. In 1923 a building at the corner of Allars Crescent and tje Mill Path (formerly used as the Teviotdale Rifle Corps drill hall) was converted to be the Home Mission Building and used by the Salvation Army. A Superintendent (i.e. resident pastor), Mr. Conneley, was appointed in 1928, but stayed only a few months. After WWII there were also open air meetings at the Horse. In 1952 the Mission started to celebrate Communion, it joined the Fellowship of Independent Evangelical Churches in 1955 and appointed P.D. Chisnell to be Superintendent in 1957. In 1963 they withdrew from the F.E.I.C., sold off their main hall in 1967, sold more in 1974, and allowed Youth With A Mission to use their space in 1977. Some former members eventually joined the Y.W.A.M. offshoot, the Abundant Life Church. In 1985 the Mission finally closed, handing over its remaining property and records to the Baptist Church across the street.

Hawick Horse (hlk-hors) n. Hawick Horse Racing Association, a body that organises local ‘flapping’ meetings. It has its origins in the decision to break away from the National Hunt and Jockey Club Rules for the Common Riding races of 1883. Local races have been run under a variety of rules since then. The Border Horse Racing Association was set up in 1972 with founding members Donald Fairgrieve (Gala), Charles McCrerie and Murray Richardson. When many of the Border towns broke away from the B.H.R.A. in 1987 the H.H.R.A. or ‘Hawick Horse’ was formed.

Hawickhorst (ha-vik-horst) n. surname originating in Germany, dating to the 13th century, with descendants in the U.S.A. and elsewhere. It is unrelated to our town, probably being a corruption of the German ‘Habicht horst’ meaning ‘hawk’s nest’.

Hawick Horticultural Society (hlk-hor-tee-kul-tew-rul-su-l'i'-ee) n. local gardening society, founded in 1849, shortly after Hawick’s first allotments were started. John Forbes was President for many years. Highlights of the society’s calendar were the twice yearly shows. It survived until the 1970s.

Hawick Hosiery (hlk-hö-shu-ree) n. hosiery company, which later became a knitwear manufacturers, with factory at Trinity Mills on Earl and Duke Streets. The company began in 1874 and ran for over a century until about 1990, effectively transforming into Hawick Cashmere Company Ltd.

Hawick Hosiery Manufacturers Association (hlk-hö-shu-ree-maw-new-fak-churrz-aw-sö-see-a-shin) n. business organisation representing the interests of local knitwear manufacturers, formed at a meeting in 1909, with 9 companies represented. It was constituted as ‘Hawick Hosiery Manufacturers’ Association’ a year later, with 7 more companies joining. It started as effectively a cartel for fixing prices (i.e. to avoid local companies undercutting each other) and evolved to focus more on setting wages. In 1966 the word ‘Hosiery’ was replaced with ‘Knitwear’. The Association disbanded in 1999.

Hawick Hosiery Trade Society (hilk-hō-shu-rec-trād-su-slī-i-ce) n. former workers’ organisation in Hawick. It was formed out of the disputes between employers and employees, relating to wages and working conditions. In about 1868 a new arbitration body, formed of 9 employers and 9 workers was formed, and this resolved to abolish the Society, except in its purely charitable role.

Hawick Hosts (hlk-hōsts) n. local tourism guides, consisting of blue-jacketed hosts out on the streets to assist tourists in the summer months since 1998. The original idea came from Scottish Enterprise Borders, but its implementation involved the Scottish Borders Council, Scottish Borders Tourist Board, Hawick Chamber of Trade and local businesses. It is now organised by the Hawick Welcome Initiative. The Hosts welcome visitors at the main car parks and pedestrian areas, handing out brochures and encouraging them to ‘stop, shop and explore’.

Hawick hug (hlk-hug) n., arch. a tight embrace in wrestling, mentioned in Wilson’s ‘Tales of the Borders’ – ‘He therefore threw his arms round the back of his opponent … with the intention of giving him a ‘Hawick hug’, but he found he could not join his hands together so as to effect his purpose, and his strength could not accomplish it’ (probably related to the ‘Cornish hug’, but the connection with Hawick is uncertain.

Hawickify (hlk-kee-fl) v. to make something more Hawick-based, particularly to convert to Hawick dialect – ‘… it’s been on the back burner a’ this time waitin on iz gettin roon ti hevin a go at Hawickified eet’ [IWL], ‘This is an Edinburgh sang, bit oo’ve Hawickified eet’ [DC].

Hawick Immortals (hlk-i-mor-ulz) n. poem published privately some time in the early 20th century (and at least before 1959), listing many Hawick nicknames of the past. It is anonymous, and the writer takes pains in an introduction to explain that no offence is meant, and in no case is the nickname associated with the actual name of the person. It may have been written by R. Jamieson. Most of the nicknames come from a period around the mid-19th century.

Hawick in Bygone Days (hlk-in-bli-gōn-dāz) n. book written by James Turnbull in 1927, when he was in his 70s. It contains many stories of his youth and a description of essentially every shop in the town in the 1850s and 60s.

Hawick Inkle Company (thu-hlk-ing-kul-kum-pi-ne) n. ‘inkle’ loom weaving company that existed from at least 1782. In that year it leased from the Burgh part of the Common Haugh, as well as the Easter Common Haugh (now Teviot Crescent) and Myreslawgreen, to use as bleachfields; in fact that part of the Under Haugh became known as the Bleachfield. The partners in the company were Dickson, Turnbull and Robertson, 2 of whom were also involved in carpet manufacturing. It is stated (by James Wilson) that the Duke of Buccleuch gave land ‘with a water-fall, for an inkle manufactory, and for bleaching; but this trade, after thriving for a good many years, was discontinued’. However, it is unclear if the same company was referred to here, and if so if it was the land in Wilton. There is a record (from the Board of Trustees for Manufactures) of aid being given to Dickson, Turnbull and Robertson in 1765 and in 1785. The company bought the Rough Haugh waulk mill from John and William Thomline (dyers and finishers) in 1797. The company did not last long into the 1800s, and inkle manufacturing in general was only important in Hawick for a few decades.

Hawick in Scene an Song (hlk-in-seen-an-sawng) n. video created by Madge Elliot and Cameron Robson in 2002, with support from Hawick Tourist Association and Hawick Millennium Group. It features film scenes from 1999-2001, along with Hawick songs performed by local singers.

Hawick Instrumental Band (hlk-in-stru-men-ul-bawnd) n. forerunner of the Saxhorn Band, it was active in Hawick in the middle part of the 19th century, before the Saxhorn Band was formed in 1855.

Hawick in the 20th Century (hlk-in-thu-too-ee-th-sen-chu-re) n. publication of the Callants’ Club in 2004, representing several aspects of the town during the first hundred years of the history of the Club.

Hawick Invicta (hlk-in-vik-ta) n. junior football team based in Hawick, which existed somewhere around the years 1922–24.
Hawick Island

Hawick Island (ha-wik-lind) n. small island in Montague Sound, Western Australia. This is one Hawick that is not far from the sea! Its approximate location is Latitude 14°20' South, Longitude 125°22' East.

Hawick Jail (hIk-jääl) n. the town prison. This was formerly in the Tolbooth and then the old Town House. There it was apparently partly below ground, about 16 ft by 12 ft, and apparently not too hard to escape from! Because of this, people were sometimes imprisoned in the steeple of St. Mary’s. The jail was referred to as ‘the Thiefs’ Hole’ or ‘the Rogues’ Hole’ or ‘the Saut Box’. In 1778 it was described in the Town book as the ‘loathsome, wretched Jail of Hawick’. Towards the end of the 18th century it was described as being partly used as a blacksmith’s shop and sometimes as a prison, where men were held for a night or two before being sent to the county prison; it was also too cold in the winter for the Magistrates to meet in the upstairs room, and so they would meet in an inn. The county jail was in Jedburgh, and was often used for local prisoners, because of the inadequacy of the cell in Hawick. A new jail was built on Allars Bank (later Nos. 5 and 6), perhaps around 1840. This was overseen by Michael Anderson, until the Police Act came in, about 1861. A register for 1844–62 has been published by Graham Maxwell.

Hawick Jock (hIk-jok) n. nickname for a character from the 19th century – ‘Goold Ballantyne and auld Hawick Jock, Wattie Moudie, Jock Gray and a’; Jenny’s Penny wi’ plaid o’ check, Betty Revel and auld Jean Law’ [HI].

Hawick Kirk (hIk-kirk) n. usually referring to St. Mary’s, which was for many centuries the parish church of Hawick. The first mention of a church in Hawick is in 1183, when ‘Henry the parson’ was witness to a charter. The church was dedicated to St. Mary in 1214. The ‘Auld Pairish Kirk’ was the parish church of Hawick in the period 1844–1987.

Hawick Knitwear (hIk-ni’-wär) n. local knitwear company, based on Liddesdale Road, with a history dating back to 1874. At one point it employed more than 200 people. The company went into administration in 2016, but was partly purchased by a Hong Kong based business soon afterwards.

Hawick Knitwear Manufacturer’s Association (hIk-ni’-wär-maw-new-fawk-churrz-aw-so-see-a-shin) n. local employer’s association. They conceded to a guaranteed 4 day working week following the general mill strike of 1972. The association wound up in 1999, with Ray Chlopas as the last Director/Secretary.

Hawick Lasses (hIk-law-seez) n. reel composed by Robert Pringle.

Hawick Lau (ha-wik-low) n. (1974– ) Hong Kong actor and singer, with Chinese name Lau Hoi Wai. For a teenage heart-throb, his English stage name seems somewhat peculiar to say the least. He grew up in Hong Kong, but also spent some time at High School in Canada. His TV roles include the series ‘Virtues of Harmony’ and his albums are ‘A Boy’s Story’ (1998) in Cantonese, and ‘La La La’ (2000) in Mandarin.

Hawick Linden see the Linden

Hawick Literary an Scientific Institution (hIk-li’-er-an-sI-in-ti-feek-ins-ti-chew-shin) n. early discussion society, disbanded in January 1856 and effectively replaced by the Archaeological Society in September of that year. A separate Literary Society was formed around 1860, being run by Adam Paterson and meeting in the back room of Ellen Riddle’s shop at 24 High Street. In the late 19th century there were several Literary Associations connected with the various churches in Hawick. The ‘Hawick and District Literary Society’ organised lectures well into the 20th century.

Hawick Loan (hIk-lo) n. name formerly used for the Loan – ‘As Aw was gaun up Hawick Loan . . . ’ [JSB], ‘And my heart is up the Hawick Loan, on the trail that exiles ken . . . ’ [JYH].

Hawick Loanin (hIk-lo-nin) n. the tryst ground at Thorterdykes, also known as the Green Gress, site of an annual horse fair in the Autumn (for a while the third Tuesday in October), as well as other public activities before it was built on.

Hawick marle (hIk-maw-rul) n., arch. name occasionally given to a sort of clay once used for whitening fireplaces, doorsteps etc., also called haa-clay.

Hawick Manse see the Auld Manse

Hawick Mary (hIk-ma-ree) n. nickname for a resident of Jedburgh in the early part of the 19th century. It was said that she was ‘not too strict in regard to morals’, and ‘was sometimes called on by the Rev. Andrew Bonar in the usual discharge of his ministerial duty' [HAST1873]. She may have kept a boarding house, where Wull Ainslie stayed. Her full name is unrecorded.

Hawick Medico Relief Society (hIk-me-dee-kö-ree-leaf-su-sl-i'-ee) n. benevolent society in Hawick in the early 19th century. It was a medical insurance club, led by Robert ‘Lurgie’ Wilson. It arranged for payment of the members’ medical bills, with a monthly contribution. It is described as still existing in 1839.

Hawick Military Association (hIk-mi-li-ti-ree-aw-sô-see-ä-shin) n. local Volunteer unit, which commenced in 1798 after the perceived threat from the French army of the Revolution. It was formally disbanded in early 1801 (perhaps to have a new grant to put it on a firmer footing) and re-embodied later in 1801. However, it was disbanded again in 1802 after the Treaty of Amiens. The original name, ‘The Volunteer Loyal Armed Association of Infantry, was quickly abandoned. The Captain Commandant was Gilbert Chisholme of Striches. A ceremonial standard, presented to the Volunteers in 1799 (by Mrs. Chisholme) is in the Museum. The men presented Chisholme with a silver cup in 1802 when they disbanded. They consisted of about 60 men, and were the main volunteer infantry corps at the time (with the Roxburghshire Yeomanry being the local Cavalry unit). They had a highly decorative uniform, consisting of scarlet coats with long swallow-tails, green facings and lapels, together with black stock and white frills, white waistcoat and breeches, short black gaiters and heavy cross-belts of white leather with a brass badge in the centre bearing the words ‘Hawick Volunteers’, as well as 62 brass buttons, and a tall bear-skin shako with a white feather plume and white epaulettes. The men also would all have had powdered hair at that time. Another volunteer unit, the Light Company of the Roxburgh Volunteers, formed in 1803 after war broke out again with France. The Roxburghshire Local Militia was formed in 1809, with the 1st Regiment based in Jedburgh and the 2nd Regiment based in Kelso.

Hawick Mill (hIk-miI) n. the old town corn mill, once the property of the Baron of Hawick, with a fraction of the grain going to the superior according to the ancient feudal system. There is mention of a mill in Hawick as early as 1412. The valuation of the Parish in 1627 describes ‘the Myll land, estimat to pay 3 boles in stok, and 3 firlotts teyn’d’. The 1686 ratification of the Barony of Hawick to Anne, Duchess of Buccleuch includes ‘all and heal the Milne of Hawick, with the milne lands, multures, sucken, knaveship, and pertinents of the samen whatsoever’. The land at the Miller’s Knowes was once farmed by the miller. Originally the mill was in the Mill Port, with the lade going through Backdamgate, behind the Tower and crossing under the Tower Knowe. There is a record of repairs in 1744. This mill was partly washed away in the 1767 flood, and demolished soon afterwards. The new mill was built in the early 1800s on the Mill Path and had associated fields in the Wellogate area; it was powered by 2 water wheels, using Slitrig Dam. ‘Husband Lands of Hawick with Mill and Customs’ was valued at £2626 13s 4d in 1707, when part of the holdings of the Scots of Buccleuch, and still valued at the same amount in 1811. Wood’s 1824 map shows a corn mill on Backdamgate and a flour mill on Mill Path. The Mill Path buildings survive and were renovated as flats in 2002 – ‘The miller o’ Hawick Mill fed mei Wi’ mony a kind o’ corn’ [JSB].

Hawick Mill Hoose see Mill Hoose

the Hawick Missal Fragment (thu-hIk-mi-sul-frawg-min’) n. name often used to describe a section of a mediæval missal, discovered in the Heritage Hub in 2009. Dating from around the 1180s, the 4-page fragment was found within uncatalogued papers originally from the family of Rutherford of Knowesouth. It was intensively studied by Dr. Matthew Cheung Salisbury of Oxford University. It was first sung in Oxford and inspired musical events held at the Abbeys of Jedburgh, Kelso and Melrose, as well as Glasgow Cathedral, including compositions by Sean Dougherty, Michael Nyman, Grayston Ives and Goldie.

Hawickmoor (hIk-moor, mewr) n. former cottage on Hawick Common, the site lying in the field known as Upper Acreknowe, which is to the south-west of the Reservoir. It was written ‘Hawick Muir’ in 1841, when the tenants were James Cairns and his sons James and William. The younger James was there in 1851 when it was called ‘Hawick Farm’ and was ‘Town Herd in 1861 when it was ‘Hawick Moor, Herd’s House’. There is now no evidence of former habitation at the site (it is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map, south of Pilmuir Rig and is marked on J.P. Alison’s map of the Common in 1777).

Hawick Moss (hIk-mos) n. name given specifically to the boggy area around the old curling pond, opposite the entrance road to St. Leonard’s, and to the field to the west of there, the ‘Moss
Hawick Mossbrow

Brow', i.e. to the left of the road, after the Nip Knowes, on the way to the racecourse. The name is sometimes also applied to a wider area – ‘... It’s aw gaed into Hawick Moss, An’ ‘twas like to swally mei’ [JSB].

Hawick Mossbrow (hIk-mos-brow) n. top of the hill near the original race-course gate. The name was explicitly used for the field there, lying to the left of the road after the crossroads on the way to the racecourse. This was essentially the centre of the old Common – ‘Take a glass o’ cheerin’ whisky, Then down o’er Hawick Moss-brow fu’ frisky’ [AB] (also ‘Hawick Moss-brow’ and ‘Hawick Moss Brow’).

Hawick Moss Plantin (hIk-mos-plawn’-in) n. tree plantation west of the road between St. Leonards farm and Williestruther cottage. It contains the former curling pond and the site of a cottage.

Hawick Muir (hIk-moor, mewr) n. another name for the Mair. Also sometimes the address formerly given to tenants of various farmsteads on the Moor, or particularly to the former cottage to the south-west of Acreknowe Reservoir.

Hawick Music Club (hIk-mew-zek-klub) n. club based in Hawick that organises classical music concerts. It was founded in 1951.

Hawick Mutual Improvement Society (hIk-mew-chew-ul-im-proov-min’-su-sl-i’-ee) n. local improvement society existing around the end of the 19th century, peaking around the 1870s. It was also called the ‘Hawick Young Men’s Mutual Improvement Society’.

the Hawick News (thu-hIk-newz) n. newspaper founded in 1882 by printers John McNairn and James Vair. It was the first local paper to cost only a halfpenny. It was originally published weekly on Fridays, and quickly rose to be the highest circulation local paper. The original premises were at 24 High Street, later moving its offices to the Crown Close, and the printing works to Loch Park. John McNairn junior took over the business in 1925, joined by brother Robert, with the grandson Robert (Bobby) taking over in 1946. The full title was ‘Hawick News and Border Chronicle’ until 1953 when it became the ‘Hawick News and Scottish Border Chronicle’. It was the first Borders newspaper to have news instead of advertising on the cover, one of the first to use illustrations, and moved from the broadsheet to smaller format in 1980. It was taken over by Scottish Borders Press in 1998, then became part of the Tweeddale Press Group in 2000, which is part of the larger Johnston Press, which was in turn acquired by the Scotsman Group in 2006. The Loch Park print works closed around 2000, and from then it was printed in Newcastle. Jason Marshall became editor in 2007. However, he left in 2016 as it decreased its original content.

the Hawick Newsletter (thu-hIk-newz-le’-ur) n. newspaper published by Robert Black for a short period in about 1846. It mainly consisted of material extracted from the Galashiels publication the ‘Border Watch’.

the Hawick Observer (thu-hIk-ob-zer-vur) n. newspaper with full name ‘the Hawick Observer and Scottish Border Intelligencer’. Published by J.D. Kennedy in 1842, it was Hawick’s first newspaper. It consisted of a quarto sheet of 8 pages, and its circulation quickly rose to 2,000. However, it only ran for 6 issues, being stopped by legal issues of the time, restricting publication and taxation of newspapers.

Hawick Oil Refinery (hIk-ui-ul-ree-f-fi-m-ree) n. former business operating briefly in the mid-19th century near where the Burns Club is now situated, adjacent to the gas works. It was started by John Wield from Blacketlees, Annan in about 1866, producing paraffin for lighting and heating, probably using coal or shale. Wield was bankrupt by 1868 and all of the physical plant sold off.

Hawick on the Net (hIk-on-thu-ne’) n. one of the first Hawick-based web-sites, set up in 1999 by David Henderson.

Hawick Orchestral and Choral Society (hIk-or-kes-trul-in-k-rul-su-sl-i’-ee) n. local musical organisation, also known as Hawick Amateur Orchestral Society. It held its first concert in 1891, conducted by Walter Fiddes-Wilson, and the programme included ‘Rend Your Hearts’ by Hawick’s own Joshua Taylor. The orchestra performed at the Overseas Night in at least 1939.

Hawick Ornithological Society (hIk-or-ni-tho-jeek-kul-su-sl-i’-ee) n. local bird-watching club, existing in the latter part of the 19th century.

Hawick Pairish (hIk-pa-reesh) n. Parish of Hawick, approximately 16 miles long and 4½ miles wide. It lies south of the river Teviot from Wilton Parish, which also lies within the modern town of Hawick, the detailed boundary between the two parishes being complicated (with Orrock Place previously lying in Wilton and the Common Haugh, including Albert Mills, Commercial Road etc., previously being in Hawick). From early times the parish was associated with the Diocese of Glasgow, and had by far the highest value of all the Rectories in the Deaconry.
of Teviotdale (e.g. £16 in 1275 and £14 12s in 1376). The Parish Kirk was St. Mary’s until 1844, when the title moved to the Old Parish Church on Buccleuch Street, reverting again to St. Mary’s in 1887. The Parish borders on the parishes of Roberton, Wilton, Cavers, Kirkton and Teviothead. The narrowest part is roughly opposite Bucklands, and the widest part at the western extremity, stretching from near Southfield to near Chapelhill. At one time it reached all the way to the border with Dumiesshire, including Stock Hill and Whithope Edge, and going almost to Moodlaw Loch when it still contained parts of Roberton. The Parish once extended all the way to Craikhope, Wolfcleuchhead and Howpsley, but lost most of the Borthwick valley to Roberton Parish in 1682. It also extended all the way to Mosspaul until Teviothead Parish was created in 1850. The northern corner has long been near where the B6399 meets the A698 around Haughhead. A valuation of the lands in the Parish was made in 1627, when there were about 800 comminants. In 1649 the land and crops of the Parish were valued at about £15,500 (with an extra £400 in the Sheriffdom of Selkirkshire); in 1678 the rents were valued at £15,545 10s in Roxburghshire and £460 in Selkirkshire. The first description of the Parish with any detail is around 1738, and describes how, besides the Burgh, it contained 31 ‘steads or hamlets’ and 1800 ‘catechisable persons’, 2/3 being in the town itself. The Parish is described again in the 2 ‘Statistical Surveys’ of Scotland (firstly by Rev. R. Gillan in 1793) and there is a further description of the parish from a gazetteer of 1868. In 1873 the land was valued at £1,159 11s, but the real rent was about £2900 sterling. J.J. Vernon wrote ‘Parish and Kirk of Hawick’ in 1900. Heritors records exist for the period 1710–1934, and financial records for the Parish begin in 1724. The register of births starts in 1634 and is fairly complete, except for gaps in 1657–69 and 1747–56. The marriage register covers 1699–1730, 1751–1800 and from 1834 on. The death register was started in 1755. The population of the Parish was estimated to be about 2700 in 1755, 1928 in 1791 and 3688 in 1811. It remained fairly stable until the beginning of the 19th century and then exploded, doubling in the first 40 years of that century and being about 8700 by 1861, with the vast majority in the town itself.

Hawick Pairish Cooncil (Hlk-pá-reesh-koon-sul) n. the Parish Council and Poorhouse Committee, which in 1894 took over much of the work of administering local welfare, which had previously been carried out by the Parochial Board.

the Hawick Partnership (thu-hlk-pär’-nur-ship) n. organisation set up in 2001 as a community-led partnership to support the local economy, improve the fabric and appearance of the Town and build local confidence and pride.

Hawick Racecourse (hlk-ras-kors) n. also known as ‘St. Leonard’s Park’, it was built at Hawick Moor for the Common Riding races, being first used in 1854. At about 240 m it may be one of the highest race courses in the country.

Hawick Radicals (hlk-raw-dee-kulz) n., pl. Hawick was once famous for revolutionary political zeal, particularly in the late 18th and early 19th century, when there was great excitement about the revolution in France and about the possibility of increasing political franchise through the Reform Bill. The leading ‘blackneb’ of the late 18th century was Dr. Freeman, whose main disciple was Robert ‘Lurgie’ Wilson. Many Hawick Liberals were prominent in discussions in the early 19th century, and important organisers of the local Reformers included James Edgar and James Duncan. The 5 elections of the time were focal points for political demonstration, namely those of 1831, 1832, 1835, 1837 and 1841. In 1831 about 1,000 workers from Hawick (including ‘Wat the Drummer’) marched to Jedburgh to protest the election, their numbers being swelled at Denholm, Spittal and Jedburgh to about 2,000. Local accounts have them being loud and boisterous, but orderly, while other accounts state that they jostled the carriage of Sir Walter Scott and were nearly riotous. An engraving of the ‘Election Riot at Hawick’ is in Cassell’s ‘Illustrated History of England’, showing a pitched battle on the Auld Brig during one of the elections of the 1830s. A troop of dragoons was called out to Hawick during the elections of both 1835 and 1841. Each side claimed unfairness by the other, the Liberal-supporters of Hawick claiming that the Sheriff and County Officers were all Tory supporters (underscored when the Sheriff read the Riot Act from the window of the Conservative Party committee room in the Tower Hotel!), while the Bailies and Constables of Hawick were said (although this is disputed) to have publicly sported the blue ribbons of the Whigs. Treatment of Tory supporters was often quite rough in these times, particularly in 1837, when ‘winging’ and ‘Tully’s Mill’ were common. This led to 4 men being imprisoned after an enquiry by a special commission, as well as a motion in the House of Commons to disenfranchise the Hawick voters, which was defeated by only 26 votes! These episodes left Conservative vs. Liberal politics at a high level of animosity for many decades. The debate over whether the railway line should proceed via Langholm or Newcastleton turned effectively into a political contest between the Tories and the Whigs. There was also great commotion at the election of 1880, with youths daubing passers-by with coloured dye-stuff. In 1884 there was a huge demonstration in favour of extending the household franchise from the Burghs to the counties – with the slogan ‘In ’84 I’m found as true As I was found in ’32’. The march was said to be a mile long and a crowd of about 10,000 gathered at Loch Park to hear speeches. This radicalism was considered to have its roots in the Borderer’s spirit of independence – ‘That changed as the form or the time may be, Hawick may be brave, Hawick may be free’ [JoR], ‘So bad was the conduct of the Hawick Radicals alleged to have been at this particular election … ’ [JTu].

Hawick Rangers (hlk-ran-jurz) n. one of the earliest Association Football teams in Hawick, doing well for several seasons in the late 19th century.

Hawick Reading Room (hlk-ree-ding-room) n. reading room listed at the Tower Knowe in 1837, with Charles Williamson as Secretary (note that the Conservative Reading Room was separate).

Hawick Reivers (hlk-ree-vurz) n. song written by Ian Seeley in 1995. It was dedicated to J. Elliot Renwick who had arranged for previous songs of Seeley’s to be published at the Buccleuch Printers. It was recorded by Elliot Goldie and first sung in public by Iain Scott at the Callants’ Club ‘New Book’ concert in 2002.
Hawick R.F.C.

Hawick R.F.C. (hIк-ar-ef-see) n. Hawick Rugby Football Club, popularly known as ‘the Greens’, formed by members of Hawick and Wilton Cricket Club in 1873. They initially played at Buccleuch Park, moving to the Volunteer Park in 1885 and to Mansfield Park in 1888. The club was the only one in Scotland to play the visiting New Zealanders in 1889. The original strip consisted of blue and white striped jerseys and stockings, with navy shorts and caps; the dark green jerseys were adopted in 1885. A victory at Gala gave Hawick the Border championship in 1893, and an away victory over Watsonians in 1994 was seen as a turning point for the team. Hawick won its first Scottish Championship in 1896, beating Watsonians at home. They also won the very first Border League in 1901–02. The team has been consistently among the leaders in Scottish rugby since the War, and has maintained a place in Division One of the Scottish championship since it began in 1972. They have won that league 12 times, as well as the Scottish Cup twice (1995–6 and 2001–2). ‘Fifty years' football in Hawick, 1873–1923’ was published in 1923, ‘100 Years of Hawick Rugby’ in 1972, ‘The Green Machine: 125 years of Hawick Rugby’ in 1998, and ‘Glimpses of Green’ in 2002.

Hawick Robbers (hoik-ro-burz) n. football team that played up the Park in the mid-20th century.

Hawick Royal Albert (hoik-roi-ul-al-bur’) n. Hawick Royal Albert Football Club, an Association football team that plays in the East of Scotland League. It formed in 1946 as a splinter from the main Hawick team before the war, the Railway Sports Club. The founding meeting took place in the old Labour Party rooms above the Queen’s Head, with the main instigators being William Bunton and Harry Wear, and the funds started with the raffling of half a dozen eggs. The name comes from a Larkhall team that Bunton and Hayck. One called Scott was forced to flee the Hawick area in the 16th century, probably for rieving or political reasons. A deed of 1573 (in the Melby charter chest) refers to ‘umqle Vincentius Hawick of Scatstay’ (now called ‘Scatsta’). The Christian names of this Vincent’s family include Robert, Andrew, Daniel, Matthew, Bartholomew, James, Thomas, John, Christian, Samuel, Margaret, Catherine, Janet, Agnes, Elspeth, and Sarah. There is also a record in the parish of Dysart of an Andrew Hawick of Zetland. There are also people of this surname in Jedburgh in the 17th and 18th centuries, but it is unclear if they were related to the Shetland branch. In addition to people with ‘Hawick’ as their actual surname, there are also a number of examples in the 12th to early 16th centuries of the appellation ‘de Hawick’ or sometimes ‘of Hawick’ (see de Hawick).

Hawick Savins Bank (hIк-sä-vinz-bawngk) n. another name for the Hawick Bank for the Savings of Industry, also known as the Savins Bank. It was the forerunner of the Trustee Savings Bank in Hawick, claiming continual existence since 1815 (or perhaps 1814). From 1835 it was officially called the National Security Savings Bank of Hawick and was for a while located at 2 Oliver Place. The purpose-built construction at 11 High Street replaced an old house there with small windows, containing a booksellers and drapers, and was opened in 1915, to designs by J.P. Alison (echoing the classical style of the other High Street banks). Minute books and other records covering 1815–1971 are stored at Glasgow University. A plaque on the building commemorates the history of the bank.

Hawick Schuil Board (hIk-skil-bôrd) n. Hawick School Board, set up in 1873 to oversee education in the Burgh, which it did for about 50 years before responsibility was taken over by the Council.

Hawick Schuil o Airts (hIk-skil-ô-ärts) n. Hawick School of Arts, established following a public meeting in May 1824 instigated by James Douglas of Cavers. It was opened in August 1824 by Mr. Wilson of the Edinburgh School of Arts (which became Heriot-Watt). This was probably Hawick’s first adult educational organisation, holding regular classes and lectures in arts and sciences over the following years. It led to the establishment of the Buccleuch Memorial.

Hawick Scientific an Philosophical Sociery (hIk-sI-i-ti-feek-an-fi-la-so-fee-kul-su-slI-i-ee) n. organisation of the latter part of the 19th century.

Hawick Scout Pipe Band (hIk-skow-pip-bawnd) n. pipe band associated with the Hawick Boy Scouts. The band are believed to be leading recruits in a photograph taken at the Station in 1914 and the first recorded mention of the ‘Hawick Boy Scout Pipe Band’ was in 1917. It was reformed in 1936 by Willie Johnstone. In 1953 the band adopted the Sutherland tartan (in honour of District Commissioner Norman J. Sutherland). The band regularly plays on Remembrance Day, as well as local agricultural shows, the Summer Festival, the Christmas Parade, Burnfoot Carnival, at the Vertish Hill Sports and at the Denholm and Mosspaul Ride-outs. Pipe Majors have included Jock Laidlaw, Jock Rae, John Robson, Charlie Turnbull and Michael Bruce. The band meets in Union Street and is open to children and adults.

Hawick Sheriff Court (hIk-she-rif-kôr’) n. sheriff court that met in Hawick (rather than Jedburgh) during the middle part of the 20th century. Records for the court from 1838–1975 are in the National Archives.

Hawickshiel (hIk-sheel) n. farmstead between Earlston and Lauder, located to the south of Nether Blainslie. There were formerly several cottages there. It lies close to the course of the Southern Upland Way. It is recorded in records of Melrose Abbey, and other than the name, had no connection with Hawick.

Hawick Shiel (hIk-sheel) n. former farm on the Allan Water, to the south of Southfield, at one point a small but thriving village. It was bounded on the west by the Allan Water and on the east approximately by the Dodburn road. It lay just beyond the boundary of the old Common and was a tenanted farm long owned by the Duke of Buccleuch. It was surveyed in 1718 along with other properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch, consisting of 124 acres, bounded by Hawick Common, Dodburn, Stobicote and Nether Southfield. Nothing remains of the main cottage, although its location is close to where the corners of 4 fields meet, about 300 m west of the Troutlawford. Its site is recorded in several old maps. In 1718 the house is marked on the north side of the Gate Burn, about midway between the road and the Allan. The location of this farm, lying beyond the 18th century boundaries of the Common, but with the name ‘Hawick Shiel’, may support the idea (as suggested by Craig & Laing) that the Hawick Common originally extended over an even larger area. The farm was also sometimes referred to as ‘Hawickshielsgate’. It is said that some residents of the village were formerly weavers. The lands here are probably those referred to as ‘Uverhawikshelis’ and ‘Netherhawikshelis’ in a ‘letter of reversion’ of 1482 between Robert Scott of Haining and David Scott of Branholme. It was described in a 1627 parish valuation as being similar in value to Upper and Nether Southfield, producing 4 lbs. in vicarage teinds. Robert Thomson was recorded as tenant there in 1679 and James Davidson in 1687 and 1698. The householders recorded in 1694 were James Stinson, George Nichol, John Jackson (weaver), James Craw, Simon Miller, James Scott, William Douglas, Robert Riddell, John Irvine, James Davidson, William Henderson and William Rodger (shepherd). Archibald Glendinning and Robert Stevenson were tenants there in 1702. Robert Scott, Simon Miller and Walter Scott were living there in 1704. John Irvine was tenant in at least 1704–06. James Davidson was tenant in 1706 and Simon Miller in at least 1706–16. Walter Scott was tenant in at least 1706–18 and Walter Nixon in 1708–23. James Borthwick was shepherd there in 1716. In 1721 the tenant was John Scott, another John Scott also lived there and John Laidlaw was tailor there. Robert Scott was weaver there in 1723. Perhaps a different Walter Scott was there in 1728–41. John Scott was still tenant in 1738, James Hume in 1743 and Patrick Hume in 1757. John Ker was blacksmith there in at least the period 1758–60. James Anderson ‘in Hawickshead’ was recorded

Hawick Sings (hlk-singz) n. local talent night taking place weekly during the summer months. It was started around 2000 in Thorterdykes, and has been located in several other places since, including the Burns Club and the Bandstand. The name is also sometimes used to refer to the concert organised by the 1514 Club, started by Bert Armstrong, Henry Douglas, Davie Gibb and Adie Ingles, the first event being in Trinity Kirk Hall.

the Hawick Songs (hlk-sawngz) n. book of words and music, published by the Callants’ Club in 1957, revised and enlarged in 2001 and again in 2009. This anthology grew out of the compilation of songs published by Adam Grant before WWI. The 1957 collection was largely the work of Adie Ingles, who changed some of the original keys of the songs and altered (usually simplifying) many accompaniments. Some of these changes were controversial at the time. The set of words published in booklet form at the same time was familiarly known as the ‘Reid Book’ and the 1978 version as the ‘Blue Book’. The 2001 edition, largely the work of Ian Seeley, who led the editorial committee, includes several new songs, but only a few changes to the older ones; it was dedicated to Frank T. Scott. A reprint of the booklet in 2009 included words to 2 newer songs. A fully new edition in 2019 included 8 new songs; it was dedicated to Bert Armstrong and Ian Seeley.

Hawick Telegraph (hlk-te-la-grawf) n. newspaper, published by W. Morrison & Co. in the latter 19th century. It was launched in 1882 at a cost of a halfpenny in direct competition with the Hawick News, but was never as successful. It was incorporated into the Standard, Border Times and Hawick Telegraph which was printed 1887–90.

Hawick Teviotdale (hlk-tee-viˈdäл) n. cricket club formed in 1850 when the Hawick team amalgamated with the immigrant English cricketers. They won a game in Selkirk in 1851, probably the first game played by a Hawick team in another town. Thomas Rawlinson played for them as a professional in the late 1850s.

Hawick Toonheid (hlk-toon-heed) n. former name used for St. Leonard’s farm. It is recorded on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map, but it is unclear how widespread its use was.

Hawick Toon Trail (hlk-toon-träl) n. project funded by the Scottish Borders Council, the Scottish Borders Tourist Board and the European Regional Development Fund, which laid out a series of historic trails in 1998/9. The trail is in 3 sections and covers approximately 6.5 km (4.5 miles). There is a leaflet guide together with information panels at the old Exchange car park and numbered plaques attached to buildings at points along the trail.

the Hawick Torch (thu-hlk-torch) n. Hawick version of the 2012 Olympic torch, made by jeweller Hamish Smith after learning that the official torch would miss the Town on its journey through the south of Scotland. It was used as a focal point for several events in Hawicks ‘Year of Sport’, including the parade of about 3,000 schoolchildren down the High Street to the Opening Ceremony in the Volunteer Park.

Hawick Total Abstinence Society (hlk-tōˈæl-awb-stin-ins-su-cl-iˈ-ee) n. organisation founded in Hawick in 1838, which was part of the Temperance Movement that was then sweeping the nation. The first abstinence society in Hawick was formed in 1832 (or perhaps 1835), but this new society had members swear off all intoxicating beverages. Over 300 members had taken the pledge in the first week, following the preaching of a Mr. Mason, methodist from England, this causing much consternation in the town. Their soirees, usually held in the Subscription Rooms, were popular events through the latter half of the 19th century, with lectures, speeches and tea service. The New Year soiree of 1865 attracted over 1,000 people. There was also a Juvenile branch of the society, which met in Miss Riddle’s rooms.

Haddan. It heard appeals for avoiding conscription based on various criteria.

Hawick Turnpike (hIk-turn-pik) n. name for the toll road through Hawick, used in the late 18th century. The specific road went from Moss-paulgreen to Haremoss (i.e. the Dumfriesshire Border to just outside Selkirk) and was part of what became the A7. Papers relating to the road, over the period 1762–69 are in the National Archives of Scotland.

Hawick United (hIk-yoo-ui’-eed) n. local football team, formed in 1962 by players from Hawick Royal Albert reserves. Six weeks later they had already formed their 2nd team, Hawick United Colts.

the Hawick Volunteer Corps (thu-hIk-vo-lun-teer-kor) n. Volunteer unit formed in 1861 after a group resigned from the newly formed Upper Teviotdale Rifle Corps in a dispute over the appointment of officers. It was the 5th corps in Roxburghshire and had Provost George Wilson as Captain. The Corps disbanded in 1863 after an unfortunate argument that led to Bailie George Hardie Fraser being removed as Lieutenant.

Hawick Volunteers (hIk-vo-lun-teerz) n. song written by James Thomson in 1860 and sung to the tune of ‘The Red Cross Banner’ (possibly composed by Sydney Nelson in about 1841), although later re-arranged for the song by Adie In-gles. It was composed in connection with the vol-unteer company of soldiers, of the same name, org-anised in 1860 to meet the perceived threat from France. The song was written for George Hardie Fraser and first sung by him at a function held for the Volunteers in Dangerfield Mill. It was the first ‘new’ Hawick song for about 40 years, since James Hogg’s setting of ‘Teribus’. The song is also known by the title ‘The Rifle Volunteers’. It appears on the 2006 CD ‘Hawick and Teviotdale in Song and Poetry’, sung by Michael Aitken.

Hawick Woollen Manufacturin (hIk-wurr-wu-lun-ma-new-fak-tewr-in) n. Hawick Woollen Manufacturing Co. Ltd., operated in the old Hunter and Young factory on Commercial Road from about 1922. The firm went into liquidation in 1925.

Hawick Workers’ Mill (hIk-wurr-kurz-mil) n. woollen factory set up as a workers’ collective to supply gloves, hats and scarves for the republican effort fighting Fascism in Spain, as well as a commercial concern to support to help with local unemployment. It was set up in late 1936 when local members of the National Unemployed Workers’ Movement took over a disused mill on Mans-field Road to produce clothing for anti-Fascist forces in Spain, as proposed earlier by Council-lor Willie Stoddart. Production started in early 1937, with some national fund-raising to subsidise the work, as well as private orders later, and the workforce grew to 20. However, the end of the Civil War and the harsh economics at the start of WWII led to its closure in 1939. An article was written on the subject by Don Watson in 1999.

Hawick Wullie (hIk-wu-lee) n. (18th C.) nickname of a simple-minded character who was born in Hawick, but used to frequent the court house in Kelso in the latter part of the 18th century. He is described in William Jerdan’s autobiogra-phy and is said to have been the original of Sir Walter Scott’s ‘Goose Gibby’ (also referred to as ‘Wullie Hawick’).

Hawick Workin Men’s Buildin an Investment Co. (hlk-wur-kin-men-zil-din-an-in-vest-min’-kun-pi-nee) n. company formed in 1864, to build better houses for the working classes, and to encourage home ownership. Originally a ‘society’, it became a limited company and assumed this name in 1888. The President for a long time was David Pringle, with Walter Haddon as Secretary for almost 30 years. This building society did much to improve living conditions in the town in the later part of the 19th century, particularly through developing the Terraces in the Wellogate. The streets built there include Dalkeith Place, Elm Grove, Ettrick Terrace, Glebe View, Lockhart Place, Minto Place, Park Street, Park Terrace, Rinkvale Cottages, Waverley Cottages, Wavelerly Terrace, Wellogate Place and Yarrow Terrace. The society provided more than 300 houses and about 100 cottages to its members. The Library has a book of rules from the company and the National Archive has records covering 1888–1981.

Hawicky (hl-kee) adj. relating to Hawick, redolent of the traditions or language of Hawick – ‘Yon story be Elliot Cowan Smith is aboot is hawicky ee can git’ (note that this essentially rhymes with ‘psyche’).

Hawick Y.M. see the Y.M.

Hawico (hl-ko) n. name used by Hawick Cashmere Company.

Hawk (hlk) n. another of the known early spelling variants of Hawick. It is recorded, for example, in the charter of 1446 for Branzholme and neighbouring lands and recorded in the Jedburgh Justice-aire of 1510, in the charter to Douglas of Drumlanrig in 1511 and in the Register of the Privy Seal in 1535. The spelling was common throughout the 16th century. It is also on Mercator’s map of 1595 (where it is intriguingly marked right on top of the Slitrig, slightly south of the confluence with the Teviot) and is also spelled this way on Coronelli’s 1696 map.

Hawike (hlk) n. one more of the early spellings of Hawick, e.g. in the regranting of the Barony in 1459, and in an English letter of 1544 when it is said that ‘the warden of the West Marches shuld burne Hawike’.

Hawikuh (hu-wee-ko) n. ancient native American pueblo near Zuni, New Mexico, which was excavated 1917–23. It was the location of the Battle of Hawikuh at Cibola in 1540 (only 26 years after Hornshole!), being the first battle between native peoples and Europeans (led by Coronado) in the Southwestern United States.

Hawk see hack

the Hawk (thu-hawk) n. nickname of Walter Scott of Witslade.

Hawkthraw (hawk-a-throw) n., arch. a country carpenter or other wright (noted by J. Jamieson).

Hawk Burn (hawk-burn) n. small stream rising on the western slopes of Ruberslaw and flowing into the Dean Burn, to eventually join the Teviot. In the woods near the head of the stream is a ‘burnt mound’.

Hawkhass (hak-haws) n. former farm about 10 miles south of Hawick, in the headwaters of the Langside Burn, roughly between Priesthaugh and Whitrope. William Hobkirk was there in 1779–80. W. Little was there in 1868. It is now a ruin – ‘...And o’er high hill, and hollow glen, Round Liddle-head, and Penchrise-pen, The Carter, Windbrough, and Hawkhouse, The dark cluds wad themsel’s amass’ [AD] (also written ‘Hackhass’, ‘Hawk Hass’, ‘Hawkhouse’, etc., it is ‘Hawkhouse’ in 1779; it is marked on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Hawkhass Linn (hak-haws-lin) n. waterfall in the upper part of the Langside Burn in the Slitrig valley, to the east of the farmstead of Hawkhass. There is an earthwork here, on a narrow promontory between the Fore and Mid Burns, with ramparts and ditches blocking the main approach from the south-west. Although the age is unknown, it has been suggested it is medieval.

Hawk Hill (hak-hil) n. hill to the west of the Maidens, near the farmstead of Hawkhass. It reaches a height of 439 m.

Hawklaw (hak-law) n. area to the east of Wburgh Hill, now in Wauchope Forest, about 15 miles from Hawick. There is Hawklaw Plantation, Hawklaw Bog, the farmstead of Hawklawtongues and the former cottage Hawklawshope. Douglas Lillico lived there in the 1820s. John Wilson was shepherd there in the mid-1800s. Bob Hobkirk (the fiddler) was the last tenant there.

Hawklawtongues (hak-law-tungz) n. former farmstead and shepherd’s cottage in the headwaters of the Wauchope Burn, to the west of Wigg Knowe. It was also known as Wauchope-head. In 1811 it was ‘Hawkleytonkeysh’ when listed among the lands owned by Walter Scott of Wauchope.
Hawthornrig

William Elliot may have been shepherd there in the mid-18th century. George Scott and family were there in 1841 (it is 'Hawclay' in 1841).

Hawthornside

Hawthorn (haw-thorn) n. steadying on the Glenkinnon Burn, between the Yarrow and Tweed valleys, to the south-west of Ashiestiel. In 1541 the lands were 'occupit with the kingis gudis and the mail thairof pait be his hirdis, extending to £30'. The farm was claimed in feu by William Scott (of Kirkurd), 2nd son of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch (it is 'Hawtherne' in 1541).

Hawthornside

Hawthornside (haw-thorn-sid) n. former lands belonging to Thomas Turnbull in 1643 may have been part of Hawthornside. There were certainly Turnbells of Hawthornside for several generations; William Turnbull was there in 1612, Robert and William Turnbull in 1682 and Adam Turnbull in 1688. Archibald Douglas paid the land tax on £171 there in 1678 and Adam Turnbull for £40. John Reid and Thomas Reid were listed as residents there in 1694. The lands there were valued at £610 9s 7d in 1779. Archibald Douglas paid the land tax on £171, £40 and £171, respectively, and part of the estate of Sir Francis Elliott of Stobes. Thomas Scott was there in 1788–91 and George Scott was tenant there in 1792–97. In 1811 the farm was valued at £610 9s 7d and owned by Sir William Elliott of Stobs. Robert and Walter Barrie were there in the 1860s and Mrs. Renwick in 1868. The nearby Peelknowe probably indicates that there was once a peel tower there; this may be what was burned by the English in 1545. The farmhouse is said to have been built using its stones, including some large door rybats (one of which was removed to a builders’ yard in Hawick in the 19th century). There may also have been a mill on the lands. The farm is 'Hathornesyde' on Blaeu's 1654 map, and has the modern spelling by Stobie’s 1770 map).

Hawthornside Hill to the west reaches 935 ft (287 m) and has a triangulation pillar. There was an observation post near here during WWII; remnants of the VHF 'fixer station' also survive on the hill. A pear-shaped stone with a hole through it, which was found on the farm, is in the Museum (formerly written 'Halthornside', 'Hathornside' and variants; it is 'Hawthornside' in 1561, 'Hathornside' in 1562, 'Halthornside' in 1562, 'Halthornside' in 1602, 'Halthornside' in 1612, 'Hawthornside' in 1630, 'Halthornside' in 1645, 'hathourside' in 1678, 'Halthornside' in 1682, 'Haltthornside' in 1682, 'Halthornside' in 1688, 'Hatranside' in 1694 and 'Halthornside' in 1797; it is 'Hathornside' on Blaeu’s 1654 map, and has the modern spelling by Stobie's 1770 map).

Hawthornside Brae

name sometimes given to the steep road leading past Hawthornside into Bonchester, part of the A6088.

high ground through which the A6088 passes near Hawthornside farm, reaching a height of 254 m (834 ft) (also 'Hawthornside Height').

Hawthornside Hill (haw-thorn-sid-hill) n. hill to the south-west of Hawthornside farm, between Birneyknowe and Midburn. It reaches a height of 287 m and contains a triangulation pillar. A large cross-shaped mark on the ground there is the remains of a former plantation.

Hawyc (ha-wik) n. another early variant of the spelling of Hawick, recorded in 1431 in a letter of 'attestation' for William Turnbull, Parson of Hawick and in a Glasgow Diocese document of about 1447.

Hawyck (ha-wik) n. spelling for Hawick on Gordon's manuscript map of Ettrick Forest and adjoining provinces, c.1650. It is 'Hawyk' on the 1570 'Theatrum orbis terrarum' of Ortelius.

Hawycke (ha-wik) n. spelling variant used in an English document of 1544/5, when it was said that they should 'doo summe exploye abowte Hawycke, or summe other place where he maye doo most annoyance'.

Hawyk (ha-wik) n. one of the more common early spellings of Hawick, appearing in records of 1279–80 mentioning 'Geoffrey de Hawyk' and many other times in records of the 13th–15th centuries. It is the spelling given in the Ragman Rolls of 1296, the spelling in the 1393 charter for Teindside and Harwood, as well as the c.1406 charter of the Barony of Hawick to Sir William Douglas of Drumlanrig and the 1484 and 1511/2 sasines for the Barony. The spelling was fairly common in the 16th century. Abraham Ortelius' c. 1580 spelling variant used in 'Theatrum orbis terrarum' of Ortelius.

Hawyke (ha-wik) n. spelling recorded in the confirming charter of Douglas of Drumlanrig in 1412, well as in letters of 1543/4 and 1565, and the bond for suppressing thieves in 1569.

Hay (hā) n. Alexander (16th C.) tenant of one of the farms of Midshiels, Appletreehall, Broadlee, Cottlaw or 'Burnside' in 1562/3 when Lord Alexander Home tried to remove his 'pretended tenants'. It is possible that the same Alexander was notary public for the 'Band of Teviotdale' in 1564 and for the retour of 1574, where the young Sir Walter Scott of Branhomie was served heir to his great-grandfather. Rev. Alexander James (d.1957) born in Aberdeen, he was educated at Edinburgh University and Theological College. He served as Episcopalian minister in Glasgow, becoming Rector at St. John the Evangelist in Glasgow. He moved to St. Cuthbert's Kirk in Hawick 1911–55. His incumbency spanned both World Wars, and he was heavily involved in the life of the Town during these troubled times. Along with his wife he took on the extra duties of teaching the School during WWI and for several years afterwards. He also served as Chaplain at Stobs Camp 1911–45. He was appointed Canon of St. Mary’s Cathedral in Edinburgh in 1937 and served as Diocesan Inspector of School in Edinburgh. After he retired he became Honorary Canon attached to St. Mary’s Cathedral. His son Charles was also an Episcopalian minister and Canon. He is buried in St. Cuthbert’s churchyard. Andrew, W.S. (17th C.) ‘writer’ (i.e. lawyer) who purchased the estate of Whitehaugh from Robert Scott of Headshaw’s son in 1623. He in turn sold it to Walter Scott of St. Leonards in 1656. He also bought Headshaw, Dryden, Crawknowe and Clewes in 1623. He drew up an important document in Hawick in 1641, dealing with succession to the Thirlestane estates. He is probably the clerk of the same name mentioned in the charter for the lands of Goldielands in 1620. He is probably the same man as Andrew of Haytoun, son of John of Kingsmeadows, Peeblesshire, who signed the Acts of the Writers of the Signet in 1612 and died in about 1655. Ann nee Little (1795–48) born in Langholm, daughter of flesher John and Jean Armstrong. She married Robert, who kept the Crown Inn on the High Street. She was publican there in Pigot’s 1837 directory. She was listed as publican at the Crown in the 1841 census, living with her children Jane and Thomas. Beatrix (18th/19th C.) daughter of Rev. James of Roberton. In 1825 she was on the subscription list for Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’. She married John Jamieson. Rev. Charles (1910/11–89) son of the minister at St. Cuthbert’s Church. He was born in Glasgow, but raised in Hawick and educated at the High School, where he was head boy and captain of the rugby team. He also turned out for Hawick R.F.C. a few times. He studied at Edinburgh and Cambridge and was inducted as a minister in 1934. He assisted as Whitley Bay, taught in the Royal Grammar School, and had appointments at Windermere, Newcastle, Healy and Heddon-on-the-Wall. He was appointed Honorary Canon of Newcastle Cathedral in 1970 and Rector of Glendale in 1973 and retired to Wooler.
in 1980. He was heavily involved with rugby, particularly at school level, as well as the Scouting movement and school camps. He had 1 son and 4 daughters. James (d.1609) 7th Lord Hay of Yester, brother of William, 6th Lord. He was Sheriff of Peeblesshire. In 1607 he gave a charter to Walter Scott of Todrig. He married Margaret, daughter of Mark Kerr, 1st Earl of Lothian. His children included: Sir William; Margaret; and John, 8th Lord of Yester and 1st Earl of Tweeddale. Rev. James (1751/2–1825) a native of Banffshire, he graduated from King’s College Aberdeen in 1772. He became minister of Ettrick in 1785, but was translated to Kirkton later the same year and then to Roberton in 1786. He paid the Horse Tax at Roberton in 1789–97. He retired in 1801 because of his health, and was assisted by William Berry Shaw. But his health improved, and he resumed again as minister in 1812, serving until his death. In 1785 he married Arabella Douglas (who died in 1793), daughter of the minister of Jedburgh. Their children were: Beatrix, who married John Jamieson; William (b.1787); Janet; and John (b.1791). He wrote a description of Roberton Parish for Sinclair’s Statistical Account of 1794. James (b.c.1780) mason journeyman listed at ‘Allers’ on the 1841 census. He probably lived on the Mill Path. His wife Janet came from Kirkton Parish, and was a widow in 1851. Their children included James, Ann and Rachel. He may be the mason of the same name listed on Teviot Crescent in Pigot’s 1837 directory. He is probably the mason James, whose child died in Hawick in 1808. James (1846–1918) from Hawick, he moved to Edinburgh and was a noted amateur photographer. There is a photograph taken in the early 1900s showing him with his son and grandson, both also called James. He died at Burgrennan, Dumfries and Galloway.

James ‘Jim’ (1964–) son of Jim, who played for the Greens. He was educated at Drumlanrig and the High School, he was a keen rugby player. He played hooker for the High School, then briefly for the Wanderers, before joining the Linden. He first played for Hawick R.F.C. at the age of 16, getting into the team more regularly when Colin Deans retired. He played for the South and toured with Scotland several times, gaining a single cap in 1995. He also played for the Barbarians and signed a professional contract with the Border Reivers. He coached at Preston, Gala and Edinburgh, then at Hawick 2004–08. He runs Jim Hay Estate Agents. John (d.1508) 1st Lord Hay of Yester, son of Sir David of Locherworth and Sheriff of Peebles. He was on the 1492 inquest deciding on who should inherit the lands of Richard Rutherford. In 1501 he was recorded in the Exchequer Rolls in relation to fines for James Scott in Hassendean. He married Mary, daughter of John, 9th Lord of the Byres (who was Baron of Chamberlain Newton). In 1468 he remarried Elizabeth, daughter of Sir George Cunningham of Belton, and through her inherited several local lands. This included Appletreehall, Easter Hassendean and Todrig. He was succeeded by his 2nd son John, 2nd Lord Yester, who died at Flodden. Other children included: Sir Thomas, who married Elizabeth, daughter of Alexander, Lord Home; Isabel, who married Sir Walter Ker of Cessford; George of Menzion; Isabella, who married Sir Robert Lauder of the Bass; and Margaret, who married William, 3rd Lord Borthwick. He may be the ‘Johanni Haw’ mentioned in the last will of Sir David Scott of Branxholme. John (d.1513) 2nd Lord of Yester, son of the 1st Lord. In 1511/2 he had a charter for the lands of Todrig in Selkirkshire and other lands in Peeblesshire. In 1512 he granted the lands of Todrig ‘with the manor and dwelling house thereto and pertinent lying in the said barony of Olivercastell’ to Stephen Lauder. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Robert Crighton of Sanquhar and was succeeded by his eldest son, also John. He was killed at Flodden. John (d.bef. 1543) 3rd Lord of Yester, son of Sir John, 2nd Lord, who died at Flodden. In 1530 he was one of the Border Lairds who submitted to James V to keep better order. And he also ‘came in the King’s will’ for his brother (also) John allowing thieves Adam Nixon and Robert Elliot to go free. A charter of 1532 grants him the lands of Easter Hassendean ‘with tower and fortalice thereof’, as heir to his grandmother Elizabeth Cunningham. In 1539 he is recorded as superior of the lands of Todrig when they were inherited by Alexander Lauder. He married Elizabeth Douglas, daughter of George, Master of Angus, and secondly married a Dickson of Smithfield. He was succeeded by his son John. John (d.1557) 4th Lord Hay of Yester, son of John. In 1553 he issued a charter that refers to William Scott of Harden and his wife Elizabeth Ker. He was probably superior for some local lands. He fought at the Battle of Pinkie in 1547, was taken prisoner and held in the Tower of London for 3 years. In 1650 he was named one of the overseers of the tutors for the children of Francis, Earl of Buccleuch. He was succeeded by his eldest son, William. His seal showed a quartered shield, with Gifford and Fraser, together with the Hay coat of arms, a crest on a helmet, with a goat’s head and the words ‘S’[IN]US DE [YES]TER QUARRTU’. John (b.1595) 8th Lord Hay of Yester, son of James, who he succeeded in 1610. In 1619 appointed as a Commissioner for Tweeddale, for dealing with idle and incorrigible persons. In 1635 he gave a charter of the lands of Todrig to Thomas Scott and his wife. He was made 1st Earl of Tweeddale in 1640. He was succeeded by John, 1st Marquess of Tweeddale, who married Jane, daughter of the 1st Earl of Buccleuch. John (b.1626) 1st Marquess of Tweeddale, son of John, 8th Lord Yester. In 1666 he gave a charter for Todrig, showing that he was still superior for some local lands. He switched allegiance several times during the Civil War, and served as Lord President of the Scottish Council and Extraordinary Lord of Session under Charles II. He was later Lord Chancellor of Scotland. In 1654 he acted along of Session under Charles II. He was later Lord of the Scottish Council and Extraordinary Lord of Session under Charles II. He was later Lord Chancellor of Scotland.

Hayck (hilk) n. spelling for Hawick on Nicolas Sanson’s c. 1665 map of Scotland, as well as Frederik de Wit’s c. 1680 map and Vincenzo Coronelli’s 1689 map.

Haycorse (hi-körs) n. former name for an area near Branxholme, precise location uncertain. There was once a ford across the river near here, where the road from the Borthwick valley crossed to join the main road into Hawick via Haysike and Crumhaughhill (‘Hay’ here is probably ‘high’ and ‘corse’ could be ‘cross’, with a connection to Chapelhill).

Haye (hi) n. hay – ‘When a’ the rest’s set tae the haye . . . ’[JSB], ‘We'll suin wun the hai-ee wui this graand dryn wund’[ECS], ‘. . . And mony a wainch in hey tummel’[DH] (also spelled ‘hey’; note that there are variations in the diphthong, going from ‘a-ee’ to ‘u-ee’).

Hayick (hi-ik) n. occasional surname, not to be confused with a town in the Borders.

Hayknowe (hi-now) n. former cottage near the river close to Harwood-on-Teviot. John Scott, Adam Kyle and their families lived there in 1841, with residents being William Robson and Henry Jackson in 1851. It is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map, on the west side of the road just north of Teindside Cottage. The name was still in use in the early 20th century – ‘Yeddie Kyle o’ Hayknowe, who can han’le the bow, Was trysted to play on the fiddle’[JoHa] (also written ‘Hayknow’).

Haynit see hainit

Hayside (hi-sid) n. old steading on the south side of Drinkstone Hill. John Cavers and his family were living there in 1841, as well as the McGregors. Robert Michie was shepherd there in 1861. It has long been a ruin (marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map; it is ‘Highside’ on the 1841 census).

Haysike see Heysike

Hazelbanksteed (hā-zul-bawngk-steed) n. former lands in the upper part of Liddesdale, listed in a rental roll of c.1376 as part of the ‘Ermyledoune’ section. The lands are recorded as ‘Hesylbanksted’ and with a value of 13 shillings and 4 pence. They could be connected with Hazelyside, to the west.
Hazeldean (hā-zul-deen) n. romanticised name for Hassendean. It may have first been used by John Leyden and is also connected with Sir Walter Scott’s ballad ‘Jock o’ Hazeldean’. However, the beginning of this song was based on the much older ‘John of Hazelgreen’, and hence the word was essentially invented by Scott for his version. It is also the name of one of the tunes traditionally played by the Drums and Fifes, which is a Strath-spey reel in A Major. Note that it is different from the ballad ‘Jock o’ Hazeldean’ – ‘…By which a mouldering pile is faintly seen, The old deserted church of Hazel-dean, Where slept my fathers in their natal clay, Till Teviot’s waters roll’d their bones away’ [JL], ‘…To fade, unbles’d, since on the church-yard green Its lord o’erthrew the spires of Hazel-dean’ [JL], ‘In Hawick twinkled many a light, Behind him soon they set in night; And soon he spurred his courser keen Beneath the tower of Hazeldean’ [SWS] (a note by Sir Walter Scott claims that Hassendean is a corruption of this older name, although there is no evidence to support this).

the Hazel Dog o the Toor (thu-hā-zul-dög-ō-thu-toor) n. nickname for Andrew Murray of Spittal Tower.

Hazelhope (hā-zul-hōp, hiz-lup) another name for Hislop farm and surrounding area.

Hazelwud House (hā-zul-wud-hoos) n. Hazelwood House, a large Victorian villa in the Stirches area, designed by John Guthrie and named after the hazel trees that used to stand there. It gave its name to Hazelwood Road, Lane and Court. The Laidlaw family lived there in the late 19th and early 20th centuries.

Hazelwud Court (hā-zul-wud-kōr’) n. Hazelwood Court, part of Stirches off Hazelwood Road, built in 1974 and named after Hazelwood House.

Hazelwud Lane (hā-zul-wud-lān) n. Hazelwood Lane, small lane in Stirches beside Hazelwood Court.

Hazelwud Road (hā-zul-wud-rōd) n. Hazelwood Road, a street originally giving access to the Anderson Sanatorium from Stirches Road, now connecting Stirches Road with a large part of the housing estate. It was named after Hazelwood House.

the Hazely Cleugh (thu-hā-zu-lee-klooch) n. small stream on the north side of Berryfell Hill, which eventually joins the Cogsmill Burn and the Slitrig.

Hazel Hirst (hā-zu-lee-hurst) n. area to the north of Berryfell Hill, east of Black Bog and west of Stonedge Hill (see Hasliehirst).

Hazel Muir (hā-zu-lee-mewr) n. former name for land in Liddesdale, south of Kirkdean, between Powet Sike and Harden Burn (it is marked ‘Eizallie Muir’ on the 1859 Ordnance Survey map).

Hazelyside (hā-zu-lee-sid) n. farmstead in the hills about 4 miles north of Newcastleton, with Hazelyside Rig above reaching 328 m. The shepherd’s cottage is till roofed, and stands inside a field system, including a large area of rig, shieling-huts, a sheepfold and a bothy. There are also the remains of 2 shieling huts on a terrace about half-way up Hazelyside Rig, possibly the farm of ‘Estirhesilyside’ listed in rental records of c.1376 (valued at 5 merks) and 1541. ‘Westirhesilyside’ is also listed there (with a value of 24 shillings), and was presumably to the west. To the south of the shepherd’s cottage there are 2 water-filled holes that are probably bomb craters, presumably from army practice (the origin is simply the Old English for ‘slope with hazels’; it first occurs in 1376 and is ‘Islysyde’ in 1624).

Hazelyside Hill (hā-zu-lee-sid-hil) n. hill in Castleton Parish, a mile or so to the west of Newcastleton. There is no obvious relationship with the farm of Hazelyside and the hill Hazelyside Rig, which are a few miles further north. On the eastern slope there are the remains of a cottage, at least 8 huts, a kiln, a quarry and sheepfolds and enclosures.

Hazel Sike (hā-zu-lee-sīk) n. small stream in Craik Forest, which feeds Cralkhope Burn, to the west of Comb. There are old enclosures there.

the Health Centre (thu-heith-sen’-ur) n. centre for health care in Hawick, built on Teviot Road in 1989 on part of the site of the former Rodono Mill. The architects were Scott & McIntosh.

Heap (heep) n. former name for the estate that included Easter Heap (roughly Siverbuthall) and Wester Heap (East Whitehaugh). It was also known as ‘the Heaps’ and spelled ‘Heip’ or ‘Hepe’. The older spelling is preserved in Heip Hill House on Greensidehall Road. In the 17th century it is also referred to as ‘Hoip’ and ‘Keip’. Adam ‘de Hep’ and Robert Waigh ‘de Hep’ signed the Ragan Rollis in 1296. In 1431 (sometimes erroneously written as 1413) James Langlands gave Heap

Heritable possession of the lands of Heap to Walter Scott and his heirs. They had previously belonged to Robert of Hepe. The document of 1431 (among the Buccleuch papers) is one of the oldest pieces of local writing in Scots (rather than Latin). In 1451 (confirmed in 1453) the lands were swapped by Sir Walter Scott for those at Milsington owned by John of Langlands. Walter Scott of Heap was recorded in the 1490s, and may be the same as Walter Scott of Whitehaugh. In 1534 the Laird was John Waugh and another John Waugh was there in 1580. The Scotts of Heap also held teinds of lands in Ashkirk Parish (which were still mentioned in 1788, when in the hands of Elliot of Minto). For centuries the eastern lands were part of the Langlands estate. Andrew Scott was tenant in 1628. In 1643 Mrs. Donaldson was liferenter of ‘an merk land of Heap’, but by 1678 this piece of land was owned by the Langlands of that Ilk. The combined farms of Easter and Wester Heap had 47 communicants recorded in 1650 (with surnames Aitchison, Aitken, Almond, Brydon, Davidson, Easton, Elliot, Fletcher, Fowler, Gray, Johnstone, Larmouth, Lorraine, Mitchell, Percival, Rule, Scott, Sheen, Stevinson, Stewart, Waugh, Welsh and White). In 1694 the tenants were John Waugh, William Anderson and William Scott, with William Easton also resident there. In 1711 tailor John Cairns, shepherd William Aitkin and weaver William Stewart were all there. It is marked on a 1718 survey of Buccleuch properties, indicated being to the south of Stouslie. John Blyth was tenant there in 1719. James Easton was there in 1725, William Sanderson in 1727, William Easton and William Goodfellow in 1733, Thomas Scott in 1751, John Russell in 1772 and George Ainslie in 1780. Andrew Hall was tenant there in 1797, along with William Jackson. Robert Oliver was farmer in 1841 (the origin of the name is uncertain, perhaps being simply ‘a heap’ or from the Old English ‘heah hop’, meaning ‘high valley’; the name first occurs as ‘Hep’ in 1296 and is ‘Hepe’ in 1451, ‘Hepe’ in 1492, ‘Heep’ in 1494, ‘Hoip’ in 1616, ‘the Haip’ in 1628 and ‘Hepe’ in 1727; it is incorrectly marked ‘Heane’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map, while ‘Heape’ is also marked over the Teviot, roughly near West Cote).

Heap (heep) n. Adam (13th C.) signatory of the Ragman Rolls in 1296. He is recorded as ‘Adam de Hep ... del counte de Rokesburgh’, and he is the first named on one particular document. His seal shows what is possibly a rose bush with the words ‘S’ADE DE HEPE’. This is probably Heap in Wilton Parish (and not ‘Hepburn’, as has been suggested), although it is unclear what surname his descendants might have had. Robert ‘Walgh de Hepe’ also swore fealty to Edward at the same time, so they may have held the east and west portions separately. His seal is attached to the Ragman Rolls, perhaps showing a rose-bush. Henry (13th/14th C.) recorded as ‘Henry del Hepe’ in 1301 when he was the first named of a group of 12 ‘common and notorious thieves’ who were captured by Hugh de Audley, the Sheriff of Roxburgh, Sir Alexander Baliol and others at ‘the moor of Alkirk’ in Roxburghshire; it is unclear where this was, but it is possibly Ashkirk. The others named were ‘Thomas le fitz Margarete’ and ‘John del Hepe’. The cattle and other goods they had taken from England were taken back, and they were imprisoned in England. John (13th/14th C.) one of a group of men captured in a wood near ‘Alkirk’ in 1301 and taken to either Berwick or Bamburgh Castle. He was probably related to Henry ‘del Hepe’, who was also captured. Robert (15th C.) recorded as ‘Robertus de Hepe’ in 1427 when he was on the inquest panel for the inheritance of the Barony of Hawick by William Douglas of Drumlanrig. He no longer held the lands of Heap in 1431 when they passed to the Scotts, but he was one of the witnesses to the document.

the Heap (thu-heep) n. former house on the Heap estate, to the west of Stiches Road, which disappeared about the end of the 19th century.

Heap Burnfit (heep-burn-fi’) n. former farmstead in Wilton Parish, presumably at the foot of the Heap Hills. James Smith is recorded living there in 1725.

the Heap Cross (thu-heep-kros) n. monument said to have been placed in Stiches (at Crosshall) to mark the murder of George Fairneylaw, sometimes referred to as Abbot of Melrose (although he was a cleric attached to Glasgow Cathedral). It was demolished sometime after the middle of the 18th century, with the stone trough that formed its base being destroyed later. The remains of the cross (if it ever existed) became lost; it has been suggested that they form part of the reconstructed Market Cross by the Museum (although that cross head is the one found at Abbey Sike in Castleton). A more mundane suggestion for its purpose is that it was a mediæval wayside cross, pre-dating the murder. It was supposed to have borne the inscription: ‘This is the place where Langlands slew The holy priest of Melrose: And Langlands shall be of that ilk nae mair When time...

Heathfield (heeth-feeld) n. temporary name for the shepherd's cottage on Town-o-Rule farm, just north of Weensmoor, otherwise known as 'Drythropple'. The name change was attempted about 1850 by Sir William Eliott, is marked as such on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map and continues on modern maps, but the name was never adopted by the locals.

Heathfield Cottage (heeth-feeld-ko'-ceej) n. cottage in the north-eastern part of Cavers Parish, just to the south of the Dykes and north of Blawerie. It is not located particularly close to the cottage formerly known as Heathfield, and so the connection with the name is unclear.
Heatley

Heatley (heat-lee) n. A. (18th/19th C.) resident at Gillside, probably in Castleton Parish. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. Alexander (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. His children included Mary (b.1709) and Isobel (b.1712). Alexander (18th C.) miller in Hawick Parish. He married Jean Turnbull and their daughter Isabel was baptised in 1757, with witnesses miller George Gray and workman Adam Douglas. Alexander (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Woodburn in 1767 and Borthwickbrae Burnfoot in 1772 when his son John was born. His children, baptised in Robertson Parish, included: John (b.1767); Betty (b.1768); Andrew (b.1769); Agnes (b.1770); and John (b.1772). Alexander (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. He married Christian Robson and their son Alexander was baptised in 1778. Alexander (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Isobel Leyden in 1790. Alexander (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish, perhaps son of the earlier Alexander. Heelandman (hee-lind-mun) n., arch. a highlander.

Heelandman’s Grave (thu-hee-lind-munz-grav) n. name of a site on Hudshouse Rig in upper Liddesdale, said to be the burial sire of a Highlander of the Jacobite army who died there in 1745. One version of the story says that he gorged on sheep that the soldiers killed, and another version says he died as a result of boiling the mutton in a pot that previously contained tar.

Heeland Show (thu-hee-lind-sho) n. the Royal Highland and Agricultural Show was held in Hawick in 1914, lasting 4 days in July, about a month after the ‘Town’s Quater-Centenary celebrations. It was staged in Wilton Lodge Park, with 37 acres of the Park given over to the Show, including building a temporary bridge to connect with the ‘Playing Fields’ across the Teviot. Local farmers took many of the sheep prizes. The first 2 days had good weather, but it rained almost continuously on the last 2 days. Since 1960 the Show has had a permanent home at Ingliston, and so it will never visit Hawick again.

Hegarty (he-gur’-ee, -gur-tee) n. Brian (1950–) son of John; he was educated at Trinity and the High School. He played rugby for the P.S.A. and the Y.M., before joining the back row of Hawick R.F.C. at the age of 17. The team won 6 league

Heidshaw (heed-shaw) n. Heidshaw, farm just north of Ashkirk, near Headshaw Loch, once home of a branch of the Scotts and later of the Elliots. There are Shortreeds recorded there in the 15th century. The Scotts owned the lands from at least 1484/5 and held them for about the next 150 years, with Robert Scott of Headshaw selling the lands to Andrew Hay in 1623. John Thomson and Richard Brown are recorded there in 1580. In 1581 a group of Elliots complained to the Privy Council of ‘cumand by the yett of Eidschaw, in their lefell bissyness’ when they were attacked by Walter Scott and his servants, one of the Elliots having his hand cut off in the fight. George ‘Vauch’ was there in 1586/7. The Laird of ‘Eidschaw’ was listed among ‘Landit Men’ of Scotland in about 1590. In 1623 Alexander Steven was recorded as master of a school there. Andrew Allan, John Govenlock and James ‘Coutart’ were there in 1623. They were purchased in 1629 by John Scott of Yorkston, 2nd son of George, 12th Laird of Synton. In 1643 the lands of Headshaw, ‘Crawknows, and Cleuches’ were valued together at £760 10s; at the same time the Duke of Lennox held the feu-duties, valued at £18 5s. William Scott of Headshaw paid tax on £10/28 for the estate on the 1663 Land Tax Rolls and £1160 18s 4d in 1678. The main house is listed with 6 hearths on the Hearth Tax roll of 1694, with the estate having 6 tenants listed, as well as 6 of ‘ye poor’. When the last male heir, John Scott of Headshaw, died in 1691, then the heiress was his sister Mary, who had married Patrick Porteous, Burgess of Peebles. Mary Scott and her husband sold the lands to Sir Gilbert Elliot of Minto in 1696, and they were erected into a Barony about 1698, with ratification to Sir Gilbert and his son Gilbert in 1705, and then combined into Sir Gilbert’s Barony of Minto and Craignend. George Walker was smith there in 1698. James Redford was tenant there in 1703 and John Scott was cottar in 1715. Tax was paid on 18 windows there in 1748.

William Scott was recorded there in 1773 and William Simpson was farmer in at least the period 1785–97. In 1779 it was liferented by George Pott, except for parts liferented by Dr. William Elliot (roughly the southern part, valued at £116 19s 6d) and Rev. Simon Haliburton (parts to the west and north-west, valued at £149 14s 2d); the total was valued at £870 (including additional teinds). In 1780 the lands of Dryden and Clews (within the Barony of Headshaw) liferented to Elliot were Heidshaw Loch

Heidshaw Loch (heed-shaw-loch) n. Headshaw Loch, small body of water just to the north-west of Headshaw farm, near Ashkirk. It is 17 acres in extent, and is stocked with rainbow trout for fishing.

Heidshaw Mill (heed-shaw-mill) n. Headshaw Mill, former corn mill situated on the Headshaw Burn south of the present Headshaw farm and just north of Ashkirk. It was owned by the Scotts of Headshaw, until probably sold to the Elliots of Minto in 1696 along with rest of the estate. William Scott was there in 1640. John Riddell was there in 1694 when he was ‘deficient’ on the Hearth Tax roll, and there were 3 other poor people listed there (presumably without a hearth). George Smail was cottar there in 1717. Peter Grieve was miller there in 1745. James Glendinning was farmer in 1797 (separate from Ashkirk Mill, which was on the Ale Water); it is written ‘Heidshawmynhe’ in 1694 ‘Headshawmyln’ in 1717 and is ‘Headshawmill’ by 1770; it is marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Ittsha Mill’.

heidstane (heed-stān) n. a headstone – ‘...on a battlefields tour led be Derek Robertson and masel fifty Hawick folk sought out his headstane ...’ [IWL], ‘So if you should unearth ma banes Among Bedrule headstanes ...’ [IHS].

Heiton (hee’-in) n. straggling village between Jedburgh and Kelso, on the A698. It formerly had 2 ale houses, and was in the 18th and 19th centuries the main stopping place for travellers between the 2 towns. Population 140 (1991). ‘The High Toun on the Hill’ (1985) by Ian Abernethy is a local history (the name is first recorded in 1152 and its origin is probably the Old English ‘heah tun’, meaning ‘the high farm’).

Heiton (hee’-in) n. Andrew (16th C.) recorded in 1586/7 as ‘Andro Hietoun, sunytyme undir the Laird of Bedroull’, among Borderers accused of crimes who had failed to appear in court and were given one more chance to find sureties. Andrew (16th/17th C.) servant ’in the Nutoun’ recorded in 1606. This was in relation to an action between the Grahams of Little Newton and Turnbulls in Rulewater, and hence this is likely to have been the Newton near Bedrule. It is possible he is the same man as the Andrew recorded 20 years earlier.

Helcaldenburne see Hellcaddrounburne

Helen Kid’s Curse (he-lin-kidz-kurs) n. traditionally Liddesdale story about Helen (or Maggie) Kid (or Kidd), daughter of one of the retainers of Elliot of Larriston. The young Elliot fell in love with her, but the marriage was against the wishes of his family, particularly the female members, who lured his intended on some pretence and had her poisoned. As she lay dying she cursed the family to remain unloved, either single or miserable in marriage.

Helen’s Plantin (he-linz-plawn’-in) n. wooded area to the north-west of the location of the farm at Synton.

Hellcaddrounburn (hel-kaw-drin-burn) n. former farm in upper Liddesdale, somewhere on the Caddron Burn. The ‘Helcadron burne’ is recorded on Sandison’s c.1590 map of the Debatable Land, branching off the main river in the upper Liddel valley. It is ‘Hellcaddrounburne’ in 1632, when listed among the Earl of Buccleuch’s lands in Liddesdale. It could be related to ‘Holclardrumhill’, which is recorded in 1628.

Helles Memorial (he-lis-un-mo-ree-ul) n. main British and Commonwealth war memorial at the end of the Gallipoli Peninsula in Turkey. It serves as a memorial for the entire Gallipoli campaign and place of commemoration particularly for those who have no known grave. Almost 21,000 names are listed on the walls surrounding the 30 m obelisk. It was unveiled in 1924 and the Burgh of Hawick sent a marble plaque in 1926, which can still be seen on the grounds (the only town specifically to do so).

Hellmoor (hel-moor) n. Loch of about 60 acres, stocked for fishing, off the B711 west of Roberton and north of Alemoor. Before the damming of Alemoor, this was the larger of the lakes in Roberton Parish. A local legend has it that the Devil lived here, and created the Catrail – ‘He was litte as the willow whose wands in spring Dance to the tune that the winds have taught her, His hair was black as the corbie’s wing, His dark eyes deep as the Hellmuir water’ [WHO] (also called ‘Hellmuir’; it is probably the body of water labelled ‘Hardemoore L.’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map and ‘hardmoor Loch’ on Adair’s c. 1688 map).

Hell’s Hole (heiz-höl) n. former name for a pool in the Catleec Burn in Rulewater, marked on a map of 1772. It appears to have been adjacent to the ‘Boglehole Haugh’. The area is still marked on the modern Ordnance Survey maps.

Helm (helm) n. former name for lands in the Barony of Cavers, whose location is not known. It could be the ‘helmys’ where Matthew Elliot was recorded in 1494/5 as being former tenant. It was listed in the 1511 confirmation of the Barony to James Douglas, along with Middle, when they are described as having a corn mill and a waulk mill attached. It is probably the ‘Helme, midle with mill’ that was incorporated into the Barony of Hallrule in 1649. It was still in the Barony of Cavers when inherited by Sir William Douglas in 1687 and by his brother Archibald in 1698 (it is ‘le Helm’ in 1511 and ‘Helme’ in 1687).

Helm (he-lum, helm) n. George (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish, who in 1651 witnessed a baptism for James and another in 1652 for John Shiel. Perhaps the same George had a son William baptised in Robertson Parish. George (17th C.) resident of Dryden in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll. He appears along with James, to whom he was presumably related. He married Marion Dicks and they had an unnamed child baptised in 1694. George (18th C.) cottar in Ashkirk Mill. He married Helen Chatto and their children included James (b.1755), John (b.1756), Janet (b.1760) and Margaret (b.1762). George (18th/19th C.) recorded in 1800, 1803 and 1805 when he witnessed baptisms in Hawick for John Tait. He married Janet Grieve and their children included Isabel (b.1801), Janet (b.1803), Robert (b.1805), Mary (b.1807) and John (b.1810). James (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Mary Brown and their children included Agnes (b.1751). George (b.1646), with no mother’s name given, is probably also his child. The witnesses in 1651 were George (surely related) and Robert ‘freir’. James (17th C.) listed at Dryden in Ashkirk Parish on the Hearth Tax roll of 1694. George was also listed and their name was written ‘Helme’. James (b.c.1812) farm worker living at Borthwick Mains in 1841. In 1851 he was living at Hassendean. He married Hannah Hewitson in Hawick in 1838 and their children (baptised in Jedburgh) included: George (b.1838); Robert (b.1840); Jane (or ‘Jean’, b.1843); and William (b.1845). He may be the James, son of Thomas, baptised in Hobkirk Parish in 1810. John (18th/19th C.) listed as coachman at Wilton Lodge in 1791–97, when he was working for Lord Napier. His surname appears to be ‘Helem’ in 1791. Probably the same John married Janet Anderson and had the following children baptised in Hawick: Mary (b.1791); Thomas (b.1796); William (b.1799); and Agnes (b.1802). The witnesses in 1802 were Thomas Glendinning and James Veitch. Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident of Outerside. He married Margaret Renwick in Robertson in 1702 and their children included: Agnes (b.1704); William (b.1705); John (b.1706); Margaret (b.1709); Margaret (again, b.1713); and John (b.1715). Thomas ‘Tom’ (b.c.1886) from Hawick, son of James and Jane Ogilvie. He was a professional rugby league player. He was a forward for Oldham, and also played for Great Britain. His 1910 cap for the Australian tour is in the Museum. William (17th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He married Isobel Renwick and their children included: Margaret (b.1683); and Janet (b.1684). William (b.1688) was probably also his child. In 1687 he witnessed a baptism for William Cairncross. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Borthaugh, recorded in 1729. He married Margaret Falside in Hawick in 1715. Their children included Thomas (b.1726) and Thomas (again, b.1729). The witnesses in 1729 were William and Robert Scott. William (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1723 he was a servant at Over Southfield when he married Mary, daughter of the deceased Walter Riddell (‘sometimes in Allan-haugh mill’). Their children included: an unknown child (b.1725); Agnes (b.1727); George (b.1731); and James (b.1739). The witnesses in 1731 were William Reid (probably the tenant in Raesknowe) and John Telfer. He may be the William who in 1773 witnessed a baptism for John Scoon and Rachel Riddell. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Margaret Easton and their children included William (b.1796). William (1781–1868) son of William and Helen Huggan. Described as a ‘residenter’ in Hawick, he was one of the 18 founders of the Relief (Allars) Church. In 1841 was an agricultural labourer living at Newmill on Teviot and by 1851 described as a former agricultural labourer. He married Margaret Graham (1778/9–1858) from Canonbie. Their children included: Isabella (1805/6–1856); Helen (1809/10–75); and Robina (1814/5–1858). The family are buried in Borthwick Waas; the William buried next to them is probably his father. William (b.c.1780) born in Hobkirk Parish, he was a shepherd at Shiplaw Corse in 1851. His wife Margaret was from Cavers Parish. He could be the agricultural labourer listed with Margaret at Linnfoots in Tweedsmuir in the 1841 census. He could also be the William who paid tax for having 3 non-working dogs at Birneyknowe in 1797. William (b.1811/2) shepherd at Birney Knowe. He may have been son of the shepherd at Shiplaw Corse. His wife was Margaret and their children included Margaret, William, Alexander, Robert, John, Janet, Mary and Helmburn

Thomas (also written ‘Helam’, ‘Helem’, ‘Helme’ and ‘Hehme’).

Helmburn (helm-burn) n. farm just south of Ettrickbridge. William Cranston of that Ilk had sheep stolen from there sometime before 1502. It was part of the estate of Scott of Harden until about 1746 (marked ‘Elmeburn’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

Hendawick (hen-du-wik) n. name given in 1918 to the aeroplane funded by War Bonds raised by the employees of James Henderson & Co.

Henderland (hen-dur-lind) n. settlement on the Megget Water just west of St. Mary’s Loch. William Cockburn had a sasine for the lands in 1457. Henderland Tower was here, where James V is said to have had Cockburn of Henderland hanged on his own tower door, as celebrated in the ballad ‘The Border Widow’s Lament’: in fact Cockburn was hanged in Edinburgh in 1530 as an example to other thieves (also formerly ‘Hinderland’, ‘Hendirland’, ‘Henryland’, etc.).

Henderson (hen-dur-sin) n. Adam (17th/18th C.) tenant in Side. In 1706 his 2 servants, Robert Elliot and John Robson, were rebuked by the Castleton Kirk Session for fighting on the Sabbath. Adam (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living at Orchard in 1717. He probably married Margaret Gledstains in 1706 and had children: Elspeth (b.1707); Margaret (b.1709); James (b.1712); Helen (b.1714); and James (again, b.1717). Adam (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His children included: Margaret (b.1736); Marion (b.1741); and Walter (b.1744). Adam (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish, recorded at Crook in 1773 when his son James was baptised. Adam (18th C.) groom at Synton in 1778, when he was working for Alexander Scott. It is possible he was the coach-drive of the same name (no location given) who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. Adam (d.bef. 1811) weaver in Hawick. His son James was a smith who died in Hawick in 1811. He could be the Adam whose children, baptised in Cavers Parish, included James (b.1773).

Adam (18th/19th C.) member of the East Bank Kirk. He married Margaret (or ‘Peggy’) Cairns and their children included Jean (b.1818), Margaret (b.1820), Mary (b.1822), Margaret (again, b.1823), Elizabeth Lillico (b.1827) and Thomas...

(b.1828). Perhaps the same Adam also married Margaret Govan and had a son Adam baptised in 1831. Ainslie (1979– ) born in Edinburgh and grew up in Denholm. He was in a local band called ‘Sunshine’. He was an unsuccessful contestant (coming 4th) in the first season of the TV show ‘Fame Academy’, but went on to have a hit single ‘Keep Me A Secret’ in 2003. He released an album ‘Growing Flowers By Candlelight’ in 2006. However, failing to find further success in music, he trained in animation, receiving a BAFTA New Talent Award in 2012. In 2013 he won a BAFTA as co-writer of ‘The Making of Longbird’. Andrew (16th C.) listed in 1580 among those implicated in the ambush of Scotts and Gledstains at Whithaugh. In 1581/2 he was described as servant to Lancie Armstrong of Whithaugh and named in connection with accusations of raids on farms around Hawick. He was declared a rebel after not appearing to answer the charge. Perhaps the same Andrew was listed in a complaint about a raid into England in 1595, along with John of Hoghill, ‘Auld Wat’ Scott of Harden, Armstrongs and Elliotts. Andrew (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1661 he (along with John) witnessed a baptism for George and he also witnessed a baptism for James Rathie. He married Margaret Rathie and their children included James (b.1656) and Janet (b.1660). Andrew (17th C.) married Jean Runciman and their daughter Isobel was baptised in 1686. This was in the Hassendean part of Roberton Parish, although his entry is labelled ‘in Ancrom P.’ Andrew (18th C.) farmer in Todshawhill recorded in 1771. He could be the Andrew, married to Betty Thomson, whose children included: William (b.1763), baptised in Ashkirk; Margaret (b.1766), baptised in Hawick; and John (b.1771), baptised in Roberton. Archibald (16th/17th C.) servant to the Laird of Mangerton. In 1606 he was accused, along with Ninian Armstrong of Tweeden and ‘Fair Airchie’ Armstrong, of the murder of Andrew Smith and cutting the nose off Thomas Tweedie. Archibald ‘Airchie’ or ‘Watshed’ (16th/17th C.) accused at the 1622 Circuit Court of stealing 4 sheep belonging to Mungo Dalgleish in Wininning Rig. He was found guilty and sentence to be hanged. It is unclear where he came from. His nickname may refer to an old word for a kind of cloth, which was often blue. Archibald ‘Airchie’ (16th/17th C.) tenant at Riccartonfoot along with John Robinson around Hallowe’en 1623 when they had sheep stolen by Adie and Will Usher. Archibald (17th C.) recorded as ‘in Kirktoine’ in a Hawick magistrates court case of 1642, when he was listed among men accused of stealing the wallet of a servant of the Laird of Cavers. Archibald (17th C.) tenant in Dinley in Castleton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. Archibald (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Parkhill in 1742 and Eilrig in 1743. Bettie (b.1742), Margaret (b.1743), Adam (b.1744) and John (b.1745) were probably all his children. He is probably the Archibald, recorded at ‘Eskdiell syke House’ in 1753 when his son Archibald was baptised in Roberton. Archibald (18th C.) married Mary Little in 1743, as recorded in Robertson Parish. He was recorded at Binks in 1749 when his daughter Jane was baptised in Cavers Parish. He later had children baptised in Hawick, including: Mary (b.1759); Walter (b.1760); and Thomas (b.1764). He is probably the Archibald who witnessed a baptism (along with Walter Burn) for John Scott in Hawick in 1765. He is probably also the Archibald who hired the Hawick mortcloth in 1760. Archibald (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Janet Sanderson and their children included Helen (b.1749). Bessie (17th C.) wife of Cuthbert, who was a butcher in Hawick. She has the distinction of being the first person recorded in the Town Book (in 1638) being sentenced to the stocks, 48 hours in this case, for stealing peats from Bailie William Scott. She also afterwards had to stand at the Mercat Cross with the peats on her shoulders and a sign declaring her crime. Archibald (18th/19th C.) member of the East Bank Kirk. He married Jean Thomson and their daughter Jean was baptised in 1822. Christian (b.1770) listed as ‘Independent’ and living with 2 female servants at the East end of Hawick in the 1841 census. She was probably the widow of someone wealthy enough to provide for her. Cuddy (16th C.) recorded in 1566 among men who were to be entered with the Warden of the Middle Marches. He is listed along with Simon Oliver and Mathew Douglas, and was to be entered by John Rutherford of Huntillus. His first name may have been short for ‘Cuthbert’ or otherwise could be a nickname. Cuthbert (17th C.) ‘fleshour’ in Hawick recorded in 1638. His wife Bessie was accused of stealing peat from Bailie William Scott. Daniel (19th C.) proprietor of the Bonchester Bridge Inn. He was also a grocer there. He had a sister who married John Malcolm, schoolmaster at Hobkirk. Dandy (19th C.) one of the first 2 Hawick natives (the other being Jim Fiddes) to play cricket in town, after returning from working in England. He was apparently small and knock-kneed and played at short-stop. His proper name may have been Andrew. David of Wester Essenside (18th C.) recorded as ‘Henderson’ among the Commissioners for Roxburghshire in 1761. He was probably son of Matthew, who was owner of Wester Essenside in 1758. David, J.P. (1826–87) younger son of Robert. He was tenant of the Gatehousecote farm on the Abbotrule estate, owned by his father. He eventually inherited Abbotrule from his brother John, and was listed there in 1868. In about 1874 he was recorded as owner of Gatehousecote, Wester Foderlee, Doorpool and Midquarter, as well as parts of the lands of Grange, Rueltownhead, ‘Bossithill’ and Burnkinford, which had previously been possessed by Charles Kerr of Abbotrule. Additionally, he owned lands in Jedburgh Parish. Like his brothers, he was keen on hunting and kept a stable of horses. He was also said to be very shy of female company. He was a member of the Jedforest Club and served as a Commissioner of Supply and Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. He died unmarried and was buried at Ashkirk kirkyard. The estate was left to his cousin James Cunningham. Elizabeth (d.1797) recorded as ‘a widow died in Silverstreet’. It is possible she is the Elizabeth who married James Storie in Bedrule in 1755 (perhaps the same James who died earlier in the year in Hawick). Francis (17th/18th C.) smith who lived at the Flex. Along with William, also smith at the Flex, he witnessed a baptism in 1700 for William Lillico, herd at the Flex. He is recorded in 1702 as the son of Thomas, smith at the Flex, who fixed the clock in 1701. In that year the Council agreed that he should be hired to keep the clock (in St. Mary’s) in good working order, with an annual payment of £10 in arrears for his father’s salary, suggesting he was deceased by then. Francis (1798–1835) son of Joseph and Isabel Tudhope. He was brother of ship-maker John and Nancy, who married shoe-maker Richard Wilson. He was a stocking-maker in Hawick and later joined the 76th Regiment of Infantry. He died in Dominica, West Indies. He may also have used the name ‘Hardy’. Francis ‘Frank’ (1820–1900) born in Lynwood, son of John and Elizabeth Mortlock. He is said to have gone off to the gold rush and returned with sufficient wealth to set up his sons in business. In 1851 he was a wool spinner at 9 Teviot Crescent and in 1861 was living on Havelock Street. In 1878 he served as Acting Father to his son John. He married Agnes Aitkin (from an old Hawick family) in Wilton Parish in 1842. Their children included: John, took over the business of grocer and merchant George T. Pringle; Elizabeth; Christina Scott; Louisa; Jane; and James Aitkin (b.1859), who was Cornet. He died at 5 Loan. Francis (b.1894) son of James Aitkin and Margaret Parker. He served in the Lothians & Border Horse. He was Cornet in 1922. He had a grocer’s business on Buccleuch Street and lived at Langbaulk farm. He was Jubilee Cornet in 1972. George (16th C.) recorded in the Exchequer Rolls of 1540 as the King’s shepherd in the lands of Brugh. He was paid £3 6s 8d for 5 bolls of grain. He was surely related to William and Richard who were recorded in neighbouring lands that were all part of Ringwoodfield. George (16th/17th C.) tenant in Wimmington. In 1607 he was accused of leading a group of men who cut down trees on the lands of Birkwood belonging to Robert Elliot of Redheugh. The claim was that in 1605 they had cut down 100 birches, 300 alders, 300 hazels and 400 willows. However, he was acquitted, the as announced by ‘the Assyse, be the mouth of Johnne Gledstanes of Wiminningoulaw’ (who could hardly have been impartial!). George (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. His children included James (b.1632) and George (again, b.1734). George (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Janet Shiel and their children included John (b.1650), Andrew (b.1652) and William (b.1661). The witnesses in 1650 were John and James (who were surely relatives), in 1652 were John (again) and John Wilson, and in 1661 were John and Andrew. George (17th C.) schoolmaster at Hobkirk, recorded in a discharge of 1657 for his fee for ‘service at the kirk.
Henderson of Hopkirk’. He must have served as Clerk for the Parish, since he wrote up discharges for the vicarage teinds. He also served as Reader at the Kirk. He served until at least 1660. George (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. He probably farmed near Newton and was related to smith James. George (17th/18th C.) recorded being paid out of the Wilton poor box in 1705. George (18th C.) hand-loom weaver who lived at Kilknowe in Hobkirk Parish. As well as blankets, he also wove a coarse tweed cloth, which was much used locally. His grandson George lived at Weens West Lodge. George (18th/19th C.) recorded as ‘Geo Wat [or War] Henderson’ on his inscribed curling stone, which is in the Museum. It is unclear who this gentleman was, but he was presumably local. George (b.c.1803) mason who lived in the Round Close. He was listed among heads of households in Wilton Kirk in 1840 and 1841. His wife was Helen and their children included George, William and John. George (18th/19th C.) farmer at Bush in Ewesdale in at least the period 1794–97 according to the Horse Tax Rolls. He was recorded as ‘George Henderson Esq’. He also paid the dog and clock taxes in 1797. Helen (17th C.) listed as cottar at ‘Bridiholl’ (probably also paid the dog and clock taxes in 1797. Helen (18th/17th C.) recorded in 1652 of Orchard on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. James (16th/17th C.) resident of Bedrule Newton, who is buried in Bedrule churchyard. His wife may have been Elizabeth Dodds (who died in 1705, aged 27), wife of Scott of Coldhouse. He was imprisoned in the Tolbooth and then his father (resident in ‘Langsyntowne’) tried to break him out of jail; they were charged with fighting with more than 20 people in this incident. James (17th C.) resident at Wester Burnfoot in Ashkirk Parish on the Hearth Tax roll in 1694. He is recorded as herd in Burnfoot in 1698 when his daughter Christian was baptised in Ashkirk (with no mother’s name given). He may be the same James who married Janet Laing and had children Andrew (b.1689) and John (b.1696) baptised in Ashkirk. He could be the James who witnessed a baptism in Ashkirk for James Gray in 1689. James (17th C.) resident of Orchard on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. James (1655/6–1728) smith at Bedrule Newton, who is buried in Bedrule churchyard. His wife may have been Elizabeth Dodds (who died in 1705, aged 27), wife of Scott of Coldhouse. He was imprisoned in the Tolbooth and then his father (resident in ‘Langsyntowne’) tried to break him out of jail; they were charged with fighting with more than 20 people in this incident. James (17th C.) resident at Wester Burnfoot in Ashkirk Parish on the Hearth Tax roll in 1694. He is recorded as herd in Burnfoot in 1698 when his daughter Christian was baptised in Ashkirk (with no mother’s name given). He may be the same James who married Janet Laing and had children Andrew (b.1689) and John (b.1696) baptised in Ashkirk. He could be the James who witnessed a baptism in Ashkirk for James Gray in 1689. James (17th C.) resident of Orchard on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. James (1655/6–1728) smith at Bedrule Newton, who is buried in Bedrule churchyard. His wife may have been Elizabeth Dodds (who died in 1705, aged 27), wife of Scott of Coldhouse. He was imprisoned in the Tolbooth and then his father (resident in ‘Langsyntowne’) tried to break him out of jail; they were charged with fighting with more than 20 people in this incident.

60s. James (17th/18th C.) carrier in Hawick. He married Elizabeth Lumsden. Their son John was baptised in 1720, with witnesses merchant Robert Robson and smith Thomas Huntly. Note that there are several contemporary men of the same name, who are difficult to distinguish. James (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Esther Riddell and their children included Bessie (b.1724). James (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Rae and their children included: Elizabeth (b.1726); Walter (b.1728); and Jean (b.1730). Elizabeth (b.1738), with the mother’s name give as ‘Helen’ Rae, was probably also his child. The witnesses in 1730 were Andrew Ogilvie and John Tait. James (18th C.) carter in Hawick. He witnessed baptisms for Robert Young and Margaret Henderson (probably his sister) in 1757, 1762 and 1766. He is probably the James who witnessed a baptism for merchant John Hardie in 1763. He also witnessed a baptism in 1766 for William Richardson and Isobel Henderson (probably his daughter) and in 1767 (along with merchant John Hardie) for George Waldie and Betty Henderson (perhaps another daughter). He may be the James whose name is recorded as part of the invoice for a new church bell for Hawick (coming from London) in 1763. Probably the same James married Bessy Hardie and had children Isobel (b.1733), Walter (b.1739), John (b.1741), James (b.1743), Betty (b.1745) and Marion (b.1756). In 1745 his wife is recorded as ‘Hardie or Aitkin’ and her death is recorded in Hawick in 1781. James (18th C.) possibly the son of Robert, baptised in Kirkton Parish in 1733, and part of the family of farmers and carters who later lived at 53 High Street. He may be the James whose children, baptised in Kirkton Parish, included: Robert (b.1757); Thomas (b.1758); James (b.1760); Margaret (b.1762); Janet (b.1764); George (b.1765); and Rebecca (b.1765). Rev. James (1761–1840) born in Jedburgh, he trained as a tailor, but changed course and re-educated himself for the ministry in the Burgher secession church. He became minister of the East End (Burgher) Church in 1791, following several years without a minister, and at least 2 other men being called unsuccessfully. His own ‘call’ was signed by 214 of the congregation in that year, and he had also been called to Airdrie and Kirkintilloch. Known as an enthusiastic and effective preacher in his early days, after several years he suffered some kind of fever, which gave him relapses during which his physical and mental faculties failed him. It is said that in later years his longer sermons thereby suffered from a lack of clarity. However, his running commentary on the metrical psalms remained popular. He was said to have preached against people attending the Carterhaugh Baa in 1815. He was noted for establishing some of the earliest Sunday Schools around 1817 (although Hawick had 2 as early as 1786), and also a Thursday afternoon bible class, which attracted students from a wide area. His Sunday School was open to all denominations, and was the sole source of education for many local children. He was described as a popular preacher, held in awe by his congregation. He was also one of the first members of Hawick Curling Club. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He gave a speech at the 1832 celebratory dinner for the Reform Bill, held on the Haugh. He served as minister for almost half a century, but was eventually talked into finding an assistant, since his sermons were by then seen by some as old-fashioned. There is also a reference to a ‘constitutional malady’ which prevented him from fully carrying out his work, and so in 1833 Adam Thomson was appointed as his assistant and successor. He then suffered from a stroke and was nearly paralysed for the last year of his life. A portrait of him exists, and a communion token of 1791 is stamped with his initials. James (d.1808) listed as ‘Craigie’ in 1808 when his son John is recorded dying in Hawick Parish. James (18th/19th C.) farmer at Doreshaughmill according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. James (d.1811) smith in Hawick, son of weaver Adam. He could be the James, son of Adam, baptised in Cavers in 1773. James, W.S. (18th/19th C.) lawyer in Jedburgh. He was clerk to the Justices of the Peace for Roxburghshire and was one of the original members of the Jed- forest Club. He was recorded as a freeholder in the Michaelmas Head-Court of Jedburgh in 1811. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. In 1804 he married Jane, daughter of William Cruickshank; she was immortalised as ‘Rosebud’ in some lines by the poet Burns. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Winpinrig. He subscribed to Andrew Scott’s book of poetry, printed in Kelso in 1811. James (b.1784) son of Walter and Janet Armstrong. He lived at the pend at 53 High Street. He was a carrier operating between Hawick and Kelso, listed in Pigot’s 1825 directory. He travelled every Tuesday and Friday to Kelso, returning on Wednesdays and Saturdays. In 1837 he was still listed travelling to Kelso every Tuesday and Friday. In 1837 he James Henderson was one of the Tory supporters who was said to have had his coat torn off his back at the election in Hawick. He was also a Hilliesland ‘Laird’ and was recorded as a farmer, living at about 53 High Street, on the 1841 census. He married Janet, 3rd surviving child of linen manufacturer Charles Scott (and he was thus an uncle of Sir James Murray). His business was located at ‘the Pend’, 53 High Street (probably the last pended house on the High Street itself), which in those days had no shop in front. His property is shown on Wood’s 1824 map. His children were: Margaret (b.1819), who married Hawick jailor Michael Anderson; Walter (1821–91), ‘Wattie Ernyetts’, farmer; an unnamed infant (d.1823); Charles (b.1825); Janet (b.1827); James (b.c.1830), who emigrated to Canada; John (b.c.1832), who was in the 72nd Highlanders and married Jane Johnstone; and George (b.1842), who became an estate agent in New York. He is presumably the same carrier who was Cornet in 1815, and whose expenses are discussed in detail in an article for the Transactions by Mr. Winning. James (18th/19th C.) listed in Pigot’s 1837 directory as a slater and glazier on the High Street. Probably the same James is also listed as a plumber. He was probably also a partner in Chesser & Henderson, who were listed as slaters, plumbers and glaziers in 1852. He may be the same man as one of the contemporary Jameses. James (b.c.1804) greengrocer in Hawick, born in Kirkton Parish. In 1841 he was living on the Round Close, with occupation given as ‘Post’. By 1851 he was a greengrocer on the Cross Wynd. His wife was Mary, from Bedrule. Their children included George, Peter, Margaret,James and Euphemia. James (b.1815/6) farmer at Netherraw in Lilliesleaf Parish. He was record there in 1861, farming 295 acres and employing 6 people. He could be the farmer at Minto Kames who became a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland in 1863. He married Elizabeth Minto and their children included Janet D. and Robert. James (b.1834/5) baker in Hawick, son of greengrocer James. In 1861 he was at 9 Cross Wynd. His wife was Ann and their children included Mary and Margaret. He is probably the James who was one of the main people to start the Hawick Dramatic Club. James (1840–1901) hosiery manufacturer. He was in partnership with A.P. Innes from 1868, and built Victoria Mills on Victoria Road in 1875. The firms split in 1885, when James Henderson & Co. took over the front part of Victoria Mills and focussed on the retail market. He was one of the earliest members of the Golf Club Committee in 1878 and later Club Captain. He lived at Woodside and was father of Sir Thomas. He was heavily involved in Hawick Free Kirk, presiding over the jubilee celebrations in 1893 and giving gas lamps for outside the front door in 1900, as well as being an elder and Sunday School teacher. He is probably the James who married Elizabeth Jane Cruickshank in Edinburgh in 1869. The James Henderson Memorial Building was opened at the Hawick Cottage Hospital in 1933, paid for with funds from his son Sir Thomas and named in his memory. Bailie James Aitkin (1859–1916) son of Francis and Agnes Aitkin. He was a Councillor and Bailie in Hawick. He was Cornet in 1878 when he was listed as being a grocer. His own father Francis served as his Acting Father. He did duty as Left-Hand Man both in 1880 and 1881. He was Acting Father in 1899 (for his nephew, the year of the first film clips of the Common Riding) and also in 1908. In 1892 he married Margaret, daughter of Roger Parker, gamekeeper at Brauxholme. Their children included: Francis (b.1894), grocer; and James Aitken (b.1905), Provost. James (d.1924) son of farmer Walter. He farmed at Broadhaugh and Wilton Burn. He married Margaret Cleghorn, who died in 1904, aged 45, and later married Jane Turnbull Beattie, daughter of the farmer at Todshawhaugh. His children (by the second marriage) were Margaret Turnbull (who married a Moffat solicitor), Walter (who became a doctor) and John Beattie (who was a farmer). James (19th/20th C.) younger son of carrier James. He emigrated to be a farmer near Vancouver, Canada. His children were James and Margaret (who married Isaac Miller and had a family of 8). James Aitkin, J.P. (1905–93) son of Bailie James. He was a licensed grocer at 5 Loan, and later farmer at Crumelknowes. He produced aerater waters, as well as his own ale and stout. He was on Hawick Town Council from 1949 for Slitrig Ward, then Provost for 1962–68, and was also an Honorary Sheriff Substitute. He was first selected as Provost in 1958, but declined, feeling that he did not have enough support. In 1968 he lost the Provostship after Davey Atkinson was selected by lot, and he resigned from the Council 3 days later. He was a keen Common Riding supporter, being President of the Mosstroopers’ Club and Acting Father in 1949. He orchestrated the visit to Hawick by the Queen and Duke of Edinburgh, and fought against the closure of the Waverley Line. Several improvements happened during his term as Provost, including construction of the Coble Cauld and salmon run, and council housing at Burnfoot, Silverbuthall and the Loan. He also worked to diversify the local economy by encouraging new companies to come to the Town, such as Bantel and Slumberdown. He was known as a very private man. He married Jean Norman and they had 3 sons. He sold his farm in 1977, moving to London, then Hampshire, then Tarraby (near Carlisle), and finally Kirkintilloch. Henderson Road was named after him.

Sir James son of Sir Thomas, he opened the new Henderson Technical College on Commercial Road in 1971. Jane (19th/20th C.) first organist at St. George’s Kirk when instrumental music was introduced there in 1910. Janet (17th C.) recorded in 1679 when she was cited by the Council for publicly accusing John Moore (servant of Walter Scott of Westport) of ‘stealing of ane pair of plaizing hose of some thorns, which she could not make out’. Janet (17th C.) recorded among the poor of Hassendean Parish in 1694, when she was at Hassendeanbank. Jean (17th/18th C.) resident at Brox in Castleton Parish. In 1699 she was rebuked by the Kirk Session for cutting kale at the Roan garden on the Sabbath. Jenkin (16th C.) listed among Borderers by Monipennie in about the 1580s. He is recorded as ‘Jenkyne Henderson in Kartley’ in the section under Liddesdale, and listed along with Ringan Henderson (possibly from Caddroun Burn). It is unclear where ‘Kartley’ may have been. John (16th C.) recorded in 1541 on a list of tenants and other associates of James Douglas of Cavers when he complained about his farm of Whitriggs being burned by Walter Scott of Branxholme. John (d.1564) convicted and hanged for sheep-stealing and related crimes. Also hung for the same crimes were Hob Scott ‘callit of Colyfurd’, John Scott ‘the Clerk’ and Mark Elliot ‘callit of the Hill’. His own name is recorded as ‘callit Johne the False’, meaning a forger. It is unclear where precisely he came from. John ‘Jock’ (16th C.) recorded in 1562 as a tenant in Grett Law. Robert Hastie acting as factor in Lilliesleaf acknowledged receipt of the teinds from him and other tenants of ‘Grett Law’ and Clerklands. His name is listed as ‘Jok Hendersone’. John (16th C.) recorded as a ‘foular’ in the 1574 last testament of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme. He was probably from Hawick, given that those he was listed beside were Hawick merchants. He was owed £8 ‘for wyld foulis’. John (16th C.) recorded as ‘John Henderson of Hethersheils’ in 1584 when he signed the bond of assurance between men of Liddesdale and the English Warden. It is unclear where he was from, but his name appears along with the Gledstains from around Hawick. John of the Hoghill (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1595 among men complained about by the Lord of Gilsland for raids into England. His name is listed after ‘Auld Wat’ of Harden (for 2 separate raids) and along with Elliots of Falnash and Burnhead, as well as Andrew Henderson and Armstrongs. His lands were likely to be Hoghill in upper Teviotdale. He may be one of the 2 Johns who signed a bond written by Sir John Forster to try to end family feuds on the Border in 1595/6. John (16th/17th C.) cordiner of Hawick, accused by the Lord Advocate in 1612, along with many others, of over-charging interest on loans. John ‘Jock’ (16th/17th C.) tenant in Whitchesters recorded in 1628 when he was on a list of men accused by the Earl of Buccleuch of chopping down his trees at Todshawshaugh or Trinitylands. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish who married Helen Forrest. Their children included: William (b.1646); Bessie (b.1650); and Malie (b.1656). The witnesses in 1656 were Walter Bell and John Bell. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish who married Bessie Goodfellow. Their children included: Helen (b.1636); Margaret (b.1638); Janet (b.1640); and Bessie (b.1643). John (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He witnessed baptisms in 1650, 1652 and 1661 for George (who was probably a close relative), in 1656 for Archibald Stewart, and in 1661 (along with Robert) for William Stewart and Marion (probably another relative). John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish who married Elizabeth Brown. Their children included: William (b.1671); Margaret (b.1674); and James (b.1675). John (17th C.) living at Stouslie according to a baptismal record of 1682. He married Janet Atkine and their children included William (b.1682). The witnesses were William Atkinson (perhaps father of his wife) and Charles Wood. John (17th C.) listed as tenant at Whitfield in Wilton Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He paid tax on 2 hearths. John (17th/18th C.) servant to Thomas Pringle (although it is unclear who this was). His children, baptised in Kirkton Parish, included: John (b.1716); Magdalen (b.1720); and Janet (b.1723). John (18th C.) recorded in Stobs in 1726 and 1730 when his sons Adam and James were baptised in Cavers Parish. Other children, baptised in Cavers, who may be his, include John (b.1719) and Agnes (b.1721). John (18th C.) resident of Denholm, recorded in 1726 when his daughter Jane was baptised in Cavers Parish. John (18th C.) miller in Hawick. He married Mary Cowan. Their children included: Isobel (b.1725); Helen (b.1727); and Mary (b.1729). The 1725 baptism was witnessed by shoemaker George Oliver and cooper John Aitkin. John (18th C.) resident at Todrigg in 1764 when his daughter Jean was baptised in Robertson Parish. Perhaps the same John was recorded at Todrig on the 1791–94 Horse Tax Rolls. He may be the John who married Jean Learmonth in Roberton in 1761. John (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Borthwickbrae in 1773 and 1775, at Mabonlaw in 1780, at Hoscote in 1781, 1785 and 1787 and at Outerside in 1788. His children (although it is possible there are 2 families here) included Janet (b.1773), twins Joan and Agnes (b.1775), William (b.1777), Nelly (b.1780), Helen (b.1781), Janet (b.1785). Walter (b.1787) and Isabel (b.1788). He is probably either the John who married Bessie Glendinning in Roberton in 1767 or the Robert who married Helen Cowan in Roberton in 1768. John (18th C.) resident of Crumhaugh. He subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ in 1784. John (18th C.) carrier in Hawick around the 1760s. He married Betty Scott. He may have been the father of carrier James. He could be the John whose daughter’s death is recorded in Hawick in 1787. John (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living at Pyetknow in 1787 when his son Robert was baptised. Archibald (b.1782) and James (b.1790) were probably also his children. John (b.c.1778) farmer recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls at Longbalk. In 1841 he is at Longbalk’ along with Margaret, probably his daughter. John (18th/19th C.) from Minto Parish, in 1791 he married Betty Stavert from Cavers Parish. Their children included: John (b.1801), baptised in Bowden; and Christian (b.1809), baptised in Lilliesleaf and Maxton. John (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Penchrise. He was taxed for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797. John (18th/19th C.) listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls for Hawick. His occupation is not stated, but he owned 2 horses. He could be the carter whose child is recorded being buried in Hawick in 1829. John (18th/19th C.) farmer at Turlenbrae in 1797, according to the Horse Tax Rolls, when he owned 2 horses. The farm was in Wilton Parish, probably near Coldhouse. He could be the John who married Betty Laidlaw in Wilton in 1802. John (18th/19th C.) from the Berwick area. He married Betty Gray, who died at Woll in 1798 and he then remarried. His children (baptised in Galashiels) included: John Gray (b.1757), surgeon with the East India Company; Margaret (b.1759); Robert (b.1760), who became Laird of Abbotrule; Mary (b.1762); Agnes (b.1764); Jane (b.1766); Charlotte (b.1768); and Elizabeth (b.1770). His son John Gray purchased the farm of Chapelhope (near St. Mary’s loch) for him. John (18th/19th C.) labourer in Hawick. In 1799 he was selected to serve in the Militia, but failed to appear and was later considered to be a deserter, with a reward of 1 guinea for his apprehension. John Gray (1757–1814) born in Galashiels, he was brought up at Brownmuir farm near Berwick, son of John and Betty Gray. He joined the East India Company as a surgeon in 1778, and was based in Bengal. In 1813 he became a member of the Medical Board, which came with a large salary. He was buried overseas with military honours, and left a sum of more than £80,000 to his family back in Scotland. His father John died in about 1816, and most of the money went to his brother Robert (who purchased Abbotrule). John (1789–1863) born at Lynnwood, he became a factory manager. In 1841 he was living on Damside and working as a spinner. In 1861 he was a wool carder in Wooler. In 1809 he married Elizabeth (’Betsy’) Mortlock (b.1789), who was from London. Their children included: William (b.1810); Francis (b.1820); Jane (b.1824); Thomas (b.1826); and John. He secondly married Jane Harkness. He died at Wooler and his wife died the following day. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1822 he married Margaret Michie, who was also from Hawick. John (19th C.) member of the East Bank Kirk. He married Betty Robson and their children included Walter (b.1831) and Andrew (b.1833). John Gray (1820–61) son of Robert, from whom he inherited Abbotrule. He had previously farmed Ruletownhead. In 1851 he was still living with his elderly father, and several siblings, at Abbotrule House, and listed as farmer of 500 acres, employing 12 men and 8 women. He was a keen hunter and kept his own pack of harriers. He was said to be the most sociable of the Henderson brothers William, Robert and David. He was also a member of the Jedforest Club. He had an accident one day near Cavers Lodge while driving with his carriage to Hawick, when the carriage went over the parapet, leading to the death of both horses, although he and his driver were thrown clear. About 1854 he sold the farm of Chapelhope (by St. Mary's Loch) to John Scott, W.S. John (19th C.) licensed grocer of 3 Drumlanrig Square. He married Mary, daughter of Provost Robert Milligan. John Graham (b.c.1865) supposed tweed manufacturer in Hawick, who appears to have been something of a con-man. He claimed his factory was at ‘Weensforth’. He made a splash at the 1893 World’s Fair, presenting himself as a Hawick tweed manufacturer. He lectured in the Town Hall after returning from this trip. In 1899 he was convicted of fraud in Aberdeen, having advertised his tweeds in a Dundee newspaper, but simply collected money sent to him (at his Hawick address) and never delivered the goods. He was arrested in Glasgow and found to have carried out this fraudulent scheme throughout Britain, with Hawick’s Chief Constable Macdonald speaking at the trial about all the complaints against him. He may have had premises in part of Weensland Mill, and a warehouse on Dovestone Street. He was the ‘J. Graham Henderson’, tweed manufacturer of Hawick, who was subject of 2 separate poems by notorious poet William McGonagall. Joseph (18th/19th C.) Hawick resident, who married Isabel Tudhope in 1794. Their children included: Betty (b.1794); Agnes (b.1796), who married shoemaker Richard Wilson; Francis (1798–1835), who died in the West Indies; Josina (b.1801); and John, who became ship-builder in Liverpool and then Stockport. The witnesses in 1794 were Hugh Grieve and John Tudhope. The witnesses in 1798 and 1801 were John and Walter Tudhope. He is probably the Joseph recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls for Hawick; the record states that ‘Joseph Henderson & Co.’ owned 2 horses. Matthew (15th/16th C.) listed in 1510 among the associates of Robert Elliot of Redheugh who received respite from the Privy Council for their crimes. He is listed as ‘Matho Henderson’ and ‘Hendersoun’. John is also listed, so presumably a brother or son. Matthew (16th C.) Hawick resident who had 2 particulars of land confirmed to him on the south side of the public street in the 1537 Charter. This is probably the same land known as ‘Matthew Henderson’s Croft’, later called Nichol’s Croft and now known as the Village. Matthew of Tumnochside (18th C.) owner of Wester Essenside, recorded in 1758 when the boundaries with his neighbour George Pott of Todrig were straightened. David (recorded there in 1761) was probably his son. Ninian ‘Ringan’ (16th C.) recorded as ‘Rinzian Henderson in Armil-tonburne’ on Monipennie’s list of Borderers in the 1580s. He is listed under Liddesdale, and so his lands were either ‘Hel-caldenburne’ (probably the Caddroun Burn) or perhaps Arkleton in Ewesdale. Richard (16th C.) recorded in the Exchequer Rolls for 1540 as shepherd to the King in the lands of Westcotterg, Southcotterg and ‘Bolburg’. These were surely part of the lands of Ringwoodfield. He was paid £7 10s for 11 bolls and 1 firlot of oats. He was probably closely related to William, who was the King’s shepherd at ‘Northous, Stobbe-Tait, et Cokburn’ and George, who was at Brugh. Robert ‘Cheese-wame’ (16th C.) one of a group of Armstrongs and others involved in a raid in which the farm of Howpasley was burned and 60 cattle stolen from it in 1535. His name is given as ‘Robert Hendersonne alias Cheys-wame’, presumably meaning ‘cheese-belly’. Robert ‘Hab’ or ‘Hob’ (17th C.) listed in 1611 as son of Jamie in ‘Noltlawis’ when he was cited for non-appearance at court in Jedburgh. He was also listed in 1632 as possessor of lands in Liddesdale. These were ‘Noltlares’, Hightrees, Burnmouth, Dawsontonburn and Prickinghaugh. Presumably the same ‘Hab’ is also listed as possessor of the lands of Todscleuch, Fairside, Tailside and Cleuchside (probably all close to the modern Steellow-end). Robert (16th/17th C.) resident of Penchrise in 1618. Walter Scott of Buccleuch complained that he had cut down 24 alder trees from his lands of Gorrenberry, with other men from upper Teviotdale also being accused of stealing timber. He was absolved of the crime, after denying it on oath. Robert (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He witnessed a baptism in 1661 (along with Robert) for William Stewart and Marion (probably a relative). Robert (17th C.) resident of Headshaw in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll among ‘ye poor’. Robert (17th C.) tenant in Shaws in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Robert (17th/18th C.) workman in Hawick. He married Jean Falside and their children included Robert (b.1701), Margaret (b.1703) and Marion (b.1706). The witnesses in 1701 were carrier William Aitken and tailor Alexander Hislop, in 1703 were Bailie Patrick Richardson and merchant Patrick Angus and in 1706 were Robert Thomson from Newmill and Andrew Ridell from Goldielands. Robert (17th/18th C.) servant of Rev. Robert Cunningham. In 1714 he witnessed a baptism for John Ekron. Robert (17th/18th C.) recorded being in Hilliesland in

of Briery Yards according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He could be the Thomas who married Isobel Sanderson in 1687 in Roberton Parish. He could be the Thomas whose son Robert was baptised in Hawick in 1692. Thomas (17th/18th C.) smith at the Flex. In 1701 he made a contract with the Hawick Council to fix the kirk clock, which had 'stood dumb and mute for about twelve yeirs tyme', this job taking about a year to complete. In 1706 another smith, Francis was charged with keeping the clock in working order; this may well have been his son. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, he was at Clarilaw in 1724, 1727 and 1729. He could be related to the earlier Thomas at Clarilaw. He married Jean Synton in 1713. Their children included: Elspeth (b.1719); John (b.1722); Jean (b.1724); Margaret (b.1727); and Margaret (again, b.1729). His wife's name is transcribed 'Sintoun', 'Syston', 'Wintoun' and 'Wintown'. The witnesses in 1724 were John and Walter Scott and in 1729 were John Scott and John Dryden. Thomas (18th/19th C.) farmer at Ashkirk Mill, recorded as owner of 2 horses on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He could be the Thomas recorded in a letter of 1814, preserved in the Walter Mason Collection. Thomas (b.1782/3) saddler on the High Street, listed in Pigot's 1825/6 and 1837 directories and Slater's 1852 directory. He was living with his sister Janet at about 10 High Street in 1841. In 1851 he was retired on the Cross Wynd, living with his sister, together with niece Janet Turnbull and nephew William Douglas. Thomas P. (18th/19th C.) evangelist from the Baptist Union. He visited Hawick in 1845 and 1846, during which 3 people were baptised. Soon after this there was a meeting to discuss the formation of proper church in Hawick. Thomas W. 'Waugh' (b.1817/8) son of Robert and Janet Broomfield. He was listed in Pigot's 1837 directory and Slater's 1852 directory as a baker in Lilliesleaf, and referred to as 'Waugh Henderson'. He probably lived on the south side of Main Street. His wife Mary was from Crailing. Their children included Robert, Jessie and John. Sir Thomas, J.P. (1874–1951) of Langlands. Son of James and Elizabeth Jane Cruickshank. He was Member of Parliament for Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire for 1922/23, and a partner in the company that later became Braemar. He was Chairman of Hawick's War Bonds fund-raising committee during WWI. He was also on Hawick Town Council and was Honorary Sheriff-Substitute for Roxburghshire. He was donor of the original Henderson Technical College (opened in 1928) as well as the Henderson Memorial X-Ray Department at the Cottage Hospital (named in honour of his father). He also funded an extension to the Library in 1939. He also served as President of the South of Scotland Chamber of Commerce. He was made an Honorary Burgess in 1933, and was also President of the Coalition Liberal Association. Along with Mrs. George Scott of Langlee, he gifted a glass screen to St. George's Kirk, and he later gifted collection plates and then the new Manse at Broomieknowe. His workers sometimes referred to him as 'the Wheenge'. In 1900 he married Helen Scott Thyne; they had 2 sons and 1 daughter. Thomas 'Tom' (1941–2002) from Selkirk, he was a Director of Turnbull the Dyers in Hawick, retiring in 1998. He became a Selkirk Town Councillor in 1973 and was Provost there from 1979 to 1997. He was a local rugby and cricket enthusiast, and supported charities with fund-raising walks. He died while walking the Mich Moor. Walter (16th/17th C.) resident of the Lilliesleaf area. He gave evidence at the 1628 trial for witchcraft of Isobel Howison. He stated that he came to the house of Mungo Young in Lilliesleaf, whose wife Meg Smail was being examined by Howison, and since he was afraid at this sight, he turned back. Walter (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Agnes Forrest and their children included: John (b.1677); William (b.1680); and Walter (b.1683). Walter (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Craw and their children included Bessie (b.1682), Janet (b.1685) and James (b.1688). The witnesses to the 1682 baptism were Robert Cunningham and John Hardie, listed as ‘students’. He could be the Walter who witnessed a baptism for tailor John Wilson in 1678. Walter (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. Walter (17th/18th C.) resident of Ormiston in 1708 when his son Adam was baptised in Cavers Parish. Other children included: James (b.1706); Bessie (b.1711); and Marion (b.1715). Walter (17th/18th C.) ‘casayer’, i.e. a road-layer, being the only one in Hawick in his day. He was listed among those who subscribed to the fund for the new Kirk bell in Hawick in 1693/4. He was probably the Walter recorded in the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694 among those ‘Payed but not listed in Haunick Toun’, from the west side. He became a Burgess in 1695, paying his fee by ‘cassaing the meikle gutter stone cas’. He could be the Walter married to Janet Craw or the Walter married to Agnes Forest. Walter (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish.
He married Margaret Laidlaw and their daughter Janet was baptised in 1720. The witnesses in 1720 were William, son to Rev. Cunningham, and Walter Scott, the minister’s servant. Walter (17th/18th C.) tenant in Hawick. He married Margaret Tudhope and their children included Walter (b.1718) and Bessie (b.1723). The witnesses in 1723 were wright Robert Scott and John Scott ‘Wyndhead’. Walter (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Milsingtonshiel in 1726 when his son John was baptised. Walter (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Stobicote in 1729 when his daughter Helen (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Stobicote in 1729 when his daughter Helen was baptised. Walter (18th C.) carrier in Hawick. In 1761 and 1766 he witnessed baptisms for Bailie Walter Ruecastle, who may have been his brother-in-law. Walter married Margaret, probably daughter of Bailie John Ruecastle. Their children included: John (b.1744); Walter (b.1746); John (b.1757); Margaret (b.1761); Beatrix (b.1763); and Adam (b.1768). The witnesses in 1757 were Bailie James Scott and Walter Ruescastle (his brother-in-law). Walter (18th C.) merchant of Hawick Parish. He married Agnes Scott and their children included Margaret (b.1771) and Alice (b.1772). The witnesses in 1771 were Andrew Scott (probably related to his wife) and another Walter (probably a cousin or other relative) and in 1772 were merchant Andrew Scott and another Walter Henderson. He is probably the merchant Walter who witnessed a baptism for Archibald Paterson in 1775. Walter (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Armstrong and their children included Janet (b.1780), Betty (b.1782), James (b.1784) and unnamed (b.1786). He could be the Walter who had an unnamed child baptised in 1789. He could be the Walter who witnessed a baptism for merchant Walter in 1772. Walter (d.1799) son of James, he was an ‘Eggler’ in Hawick. His death is recorded in Hawick, when he was recorded as son to the deceased James. Walter (18th/19th C.) paid the cart tax in Hawick in 1785–91 (although in 1790 his name was given as ‘William’). He was also recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls for Hawick, where he had 2 work horses. He could be the father of James, and farmer at 53 High Street. Walter ‘Wattie Ernyetts’ (1820–91) eldest son of carrier and farmer James. He also lived at 53 High Street. He is probably the farmer listed on the High Street in Slater’s 1852 directory. He married Margaret Scoon, who died in 1898, aged 77. Their children were: Elizabeth, who married butcher William Nisbet; James, farmer at Broadhaugh and Wilton Burn; Janet, who married tweed merchant Mark Currie, and gifted the Chinese Shelter to the Town; Agnes, who married bank manager William Park; and Margaret. Waugh see Thomas W. William (16th C.) recorded in the Exchequer Rolls for 1540 as shepherd to the King in the lands of ‘Northous, Stobbe-Tait, et Cokburn’. These were surely part of the lands of Ringwoodfield. He was paid £10 for 50 bolls of oats. He was probably closely related to Richard, who was the King’s shepherd at Westcoterig, Southcoterig and ‘Bolburg’ and George who was at Brugh. William ‘Will’ (16th C.) tenant of Simon Elliot in Dod Burn, listed in a bond of security signed in Hawick in 1569. His name is given as ‘Will Hendirsoun’. It is not inconceivable that he was an ancestor of the ‘Rattlin Roarin Willie’. He could be the same man as the King’s shepherd recorded in 1540. William ‘Will’ (16th/17th C.) listed among Liddesdale men who did not appear at court in Jedburgh in 1611. He was listed as ‘callit Harrisluord’, but it is unclear where he was from or what his nickname meant. William (d.1627) ‘parichoner’ in Priesthaugh, reputedly a noted local balladmaker and brawler. He supposedly slew Robert Rule in a duel near Allanhaugh, as immortalised in the ballad ‘Rattlin Roarin Willie’. In fact he killed William Elliot, who was nicknamed ‘Sweet Milk’, and may have come from the Rule valley. The Presbytery records describe how he was called to appear on several Sundays and eventually excommunicated for the murder. It is said that he hid after the murder, but reappeared at Jedburgh Rood Fair and was seized in Oxnam Water by Gilbert Elliott of Stobs and young Elliot of Falnash, being subsequently executed. William (17th C.) tenant in Flex, recorded in 1674 when he witnessed a baptism for Robert Stoddart, also in Flex. He is probably the father of the William in Flex recorded 3 decades later. William (17th C.) tenant in Millburnholm in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. William (17th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. He is listed among the ‘deficients’ of the Parish. William (17th C.) resident at Hawick Shiel in 1694, according to the Hearth Tax rolls. He may be the William whose daughter Anna married Robert Thomson in 1700. His is probably the William who witnessed a baptism for James Davidson (in Hawick Shiel) in 1698. William (17th/18th C.) smith at the Flex. He was ‘younger in Flex’ in 1707 and 1708, suggesting that his father was also William. Along with Francis, also smith at the Flex (and perhaps his brother), he witnessed a baptism in 1700 for William Lillico, herd at the Flex. He also witnessed baptisms in Hawick in 1700 for Walter Paterson of Burnflat, in 1702 for Robert Scott in Goldielands, for smith George Scott, for merchant Thomas Hotson, for Robert Stevenson in Hawick Shiel and for others, in 1704 for Robert Cairns (tailor in Whitlaw), for Robert Scott, tenant in the Flex and for George Scott (along with Francis), smith in Hawick, in 1705 (along with Francis Paterson) for Walter Martin, tenant in the Flex, for Robert Nickson in Dodburn and in 1706 for Walter Paterson in Burnflat and for Adam Scott in Kirkton in 1709. He is probably the William, ‘younger’ at the Flex who witnessed a baptism for William Lillico, herd at the flex, in 1709. He may also be the William who witnessed a baptism for Town Herd Mungo Armstrong in 1720. He married Janet Turnbull and their children included: William (b.1707); Margaret (b.1708); and Francis (b.1709). The witnesses in 1707 were Francis Paterson (tenant in Flex) and Walter Scott in Crunbaugh, in 1708 were Francis Paterson and Robert Stoddart in the Flex and in 1709 were John Gledstains of Whitlaw and Archibald Paterson ‘Casier’. Perhaps the same William is recorded as a smith in Denholm in 1710 when he complained to the Sheriff of Teviotdale that the Burgh of Hawick owed him £10 for payment of salary owed to his father Francis for keeping the clock of St. Mary’s in working order; he was made a Burgess of Hawick in lieu of payment. William (17th/18th C.) recorded in Acreknowe when he had children baptised in Kirkton Parish. He appears to be distinct from William, smith at the Flex. His children included Andrew (b.1708), Walter (b.1710), Janet (b.1715) and Isobel (b.1722). William (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at Stoulslie in 1706 when his son John was baptised. He could be the same man as the resident of Clari-law. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Clari-law. His servant George Easton had a child baptised in Wilton Parish in 1709. His daughter Isobel was baptised in Wilton Parish in 1704. He is probably the William who in 1704 witnessed baptisms for Archibald Riddell in Borthaugh and for Robert Elliot in Galalaw. He could be the William recorded as an elder of Wilton Parish in 1711. William (17th/18th C.) miller in Synton Mill. He married Mary Elliot and their children included Isobel (b.1715). William (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Telfer and their daughter Manie was baptised in 1717. William (17th/18th C.) carrier in Hawick. In 1719 he was recorded as ‘workman’. In 1719 he married Elizabeth Lumsden, who was also from Hawick. Their children included William (b.1719), Helen (b.1723), Adam (b.1725) and Jean (b.1727). The witnesses in 1725 were Francis Ruecastle and smith John Scott. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Best and their son William was baptised in 1722. William (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1787 he married Isabel Dryden, who was also from Hawick. William (b.1780/1) born in Cavers Parish, he was farm overseer at Netherhall. He is recorded there in 1841 and in 1851 was listed as Overseer of Parks. He married Betty Hope (from Southdean) and their children, baptised in the East Bank Kirk, included: Adam (b.1805); Elizabeth (‘Betty’, b.1808); Thomas (b.1810); John (b.1812); William (b.1815); an unnamed child (b.1817); Alexander (b.1822); and Isabel (b.1826). William (b.c.1805) carter at Wilton Pathhead. He was living there in 1841, along with his wife Margaret and children Agnes, Jane, William, Euphemia and John. He could be the same William as the coach-driver who was an early member of Allars Kirk. William (19th C.) coach-driver who was an early member of Allars Kirk. William Scott, W.S. (1821–59) 2nd son of Robert of Abbotrule. He trained as a lawyer, being apprenticed to William Charles Balderston and John Scott. He became Writer to the Signet in 1845. He died unmarried. William (19th/20th C.) publisher of the ‘Hawick Free Press’ (formerly spelled ‘Hendersons’, ‘Hendersonne’, ‘Hendersonne’, ‘Hendireson’, etc., as well as sometimes ‘Henrison’ and similar).

Henderson Gairden (thu-hen-dur-singär-dun) n. public flower beds and seating area next to the bowling greens on Buccleuch Street. It was converted from the former Quoiting Club pitches.

Henderson Memorial (thu-hen-dur-sin-me-mō-ree-ul) n. the James Henderson Memorial X-ray building at the Cottage Hospital, which was opened in 1933 through the generosity of Sir Thomas and Lady Henderson, and named after Sir Thomas’ father. It was designed by local architects Alison & Hobkirk.

Henderson Road (hen-dur-sin-rōd) n. part of Burnfoot, a short street connecting Galalaw Road with Appletreehall Road, built in 1960 and named after Provost James Henderson.
the Hendersons

the Hendersons (thu-hen-dur-sinz) n. family that ran a dairy in the 19th century, living in the Back Row, farming fields up the Loan and having grazing rights at Wilton Lodge.

Henderson’s (hen-dur-sinz) n. James Henderson & Co. Ltd., hosiery manufacturers of the late 19th and early 20th centuries, occupying the front part of Victoria Mills and focussing on the retail side of the market. Their line of underwear used the trade name ‘Hendawick’. The firm split from Innes, Henderson & Co. in 1885, and reamalgamated again in 1920. J.P. Alison design a yarn store for the company in 1902. Balance sheets from the company exist from 1896 and the Museum has minutes and other papers from 1920–46. This was also the name of a grocer’s shop in the Sandbed in the mid-20th century and later a travel agent’s at 18 High Street.

Henderson’s Close see Henderson’s Pend

the Henderson Shelter (thu-hen-dur-sin-shel-tur) n. official name for the Chinese Shelter.

Henderson’s Knowe (hen-dur-sinz-now) n. former name for the farm of Bowanhill at Teviothead, also known simply as ‘the Knowe’. It is located on the right-hand side of the A7 just before the turn-off for Teviothead Church. The older farm of Bowanhill was on the hill on the left-hand side of the A7. John Noble ‘of Hendersonisknow’ was recorded in 1590. Walter Elliot was there in 1778. Thomas Hume farmed there in the 1820s and Walter Scott was farmer in 1841 (the name presumably comes from a former resident called Henderson, who must have lived there before the late 16th century).

Henderson’s Pend (hen-dur-sinz-pend) n. also known as Henderson’s Close, a passageway off the High Street that was removed around 1860, probably to the north-east of Walter’s Wynd. The ancient ‘bاستel-house’ there was once owned by Walter Henderson.

the Henderson Tech (thu-hen-dur-sin-tek) n. Henderson Technical College, built in 1926 on Buccleuch Road through the benificence of Sir Thomas Henderson, and used for further education in technology, science and art. It was formally opened in 1928, when the High School, rebuilt after the devastating fire 3 years earlier, was also reopened. Taken over as part of the High School, a new building was opened in 1971 on Commercial Road, used for vocational and other educational courses. In 1984 it became part of the Borders Colleges of Further Education and was known as the Henderson Building. This closed in 2009 and was replaced with a smaller building on Buccleuch Road (below the old Cottage Hospital). The 1971 building was demolished in 2010 to make way for a supermarket. The original Henderson building is part of the High School, used for Art and Business Studies.

Hendersyde (hen-dur-skil) n. area in Ednam Parish, just to the north-east of Kelso, containing the village Hendersyde Park, the farm of the same name and a large estate, once the seat of the Waldie family. The mansion was built in 1803 (the origin of the name may be ‘Henry’s slope’ and is not recorded until the early 18th century).

Hendry (hen-dree) n. Adam (17th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was living at Harden Anna in 1720 and 1723. He is probably the James who married Margaret Scott in Robertson in 1718. His children included: John (b.1720); James (b.1721); and William (b.1723). John (17th/18th C.) resident of Todrig in 1710 and 1714. His children, baptised in Robertson Parish, included Bessie (b.1710) and Margaret (b.1714).

Hendry (17th/18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was living at Harden Anna in 1720 and 1723. He is probably the James who married Margaret Scott in Robertson in 1718. His children included: John (b.1720); James (b.1721); and William (b.1723).

John (17th/18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish, included Bessie (b.1710) and Margaret (b.1714). Probably the same John married Agnes Riddell in Wilton in 1708 and their children baptised there included Anna (b.1709), Helen (b.1716) and John (b.1719). With Agnes Riddell he also had a daughter Janet (b.1712), baptised in Selkirk.

John (17th/18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish, included Bessie (b.1710) and Margaret (b.1714). Probably the same John married Agnes Riddell in Wilton in 1708 and their children baptised there included Anna (b.1709), Helen (b.1716) and John (b.1719). With Agnes Riddell he also had a daughter Janet (b.1712), baptised in Selkirk.

Hendry (17th C.) resident of Robertson Parish, included Bessie (b.1710) and Margaret (b.1714). Probably the same John married Agnes Riddell in Wilton in 1708 and their children baptised there included Anna (b.1709), Helen (b.1716) and John (b.1719). With Agnes Riddell he also had a daughter Janet (b.1712), baptised in Selkirk.

Hendy (17th C.) resident of Robertson Parish, included Bessie (b.1710) and Margaret (b.1714). Probably the same John married Agnes Riddell in Wilton in 1708 and their children baptised there included Anna (b.1709), Helen (b.1716) and John (b.1719). With Agnes Riddell he also had a daughter Janet (b.1712), baptised in Selkirk.
Henraught

unnamed child (b.1771), Jean (b.1775), Thomas (b.1777), Helen (b.1777), Anne (b.1779) and Margaret (b.1784). William (18th C.) resident of Sourthdean Parish. His children included Thomas (b.1764), Margaret (b.1766), William (b.1768), William (again, b.1772), Robert (b.1775), and Betty (b.1782) and Janet (b.1787). William (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. His son George was baptised in 1785. William (d.1815) cooper and merchant in Denholm. He was probably related to the earlier William. His death is recorded in Hawick in 1815. William (18th/19th C.) grocer and earthenware dealer on the High Street, listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. William (19th C.) resident of Minto Parish. He married James (b.1834) and Margaret (b.1835) (also written ‘Hendery’).

Henraugh (hen-hawch) n. former farmstead near Braxholme Park. In 1672 it was leased along with Braxholme Mains and Park to Walter Scott of Harwood. In 1673 it was referred to as ‘with the Steill and Henraugh’ when Braxholme Muir and Park were leased along with it.

hen-hertit (hen-her-tee’, -ti’) adj., arch. chicken-hearted, cowardly – ‘Hei’d little need be hen-hertit that hed ti beer the ramstam onfaa . . . ’[ECS].

Henlawshiel (hen-law-sheel) n. former cottage between Nether Tofts and the A6088, on the former farm of Upper Tofts. John Whillans lived there in at least 1769–74. This was where John Leyden spent his youth. The Leyden family moved there in about 1776, Leyden’s father being a shepherd and then overseer. It can be seen in a sketch of 1817 by T.J. Scott (from the Scots Magazine). The house was of very simple construction, and no sign of it survives. A roadside granite obelisk marks its site near Nether Tofts, on the side road off the A6088 from Hawthornside Heights. This marker was placed there in 1895. A polished stone axe found there is in the Museum – ‘At night-time by the hamely hearth O’ theekit Henlawshiel He’d hear sic tales o’ Border plays That garr’d his een to reed’ [WL].

Henrison (hen-ree-sin) n. Archibald (15th C.) recorded among many men from Liddesdale who did not appear at the Justice- aire in 1494/5. He is probably related to Gilbert, David and William, who are also listed along with him. David (15th C.) one of the men who did not attend the Justice- aire in Jedburgh in 1494/5. The Lord of Liddesdale and Captain of Hermitage were fined. Quentin, Archibald, Gilbert and William were also listed. Perhaps the same David was killed at Maxton Kirk, with John Fawlaw in Liddlean having remission for his murder. Gilbert (15th C.) listed along with Archibald, David and William, among men of Liddesdale who failed to appear at the Justice- aire in 1494/5. Henry (16th C.) recorded as tenant in Burnmouth in Liddesdale in 1541, along with James. James (16th C.) listed among the tenants of Newton in Bedrule in 1531. He may be related to some of Archibald, Gilbert, David and William, who are recorded in 1494/5. James (16th C.) listed in the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale, along with Henry, as tenant of Burnmouth. Henry was presumably his brother or son. John (15th C.) listed as ‘John Henryson’ among the Roxburghshire men who had remission in 1488/9 from James IV for their support of the previous King, especially on the battlefield at Stirling. Most of the men appear to have been closely associated with Douglas of Cavers. Perhaps the same John in Lintalee is recorded in 1493 when Patrick Hall in Newbigging has remission for his murder; he may have been related to Thomas ‘dwelling in Jedforest’ who is also mentioned in 1493. John (16th C.) tenant of Saughtree listed, after Robert, in the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale. Ninian (16th C.) one of the tenants of the lands of ‘Falset’ listed in the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale. Robert and 2 Williams were also listed. Since the same place was tenantated
Henry (hen-ree) n. parson (‘persona’) recorded as witness to a land transaction confirmed by Pope Lucius III in 1183, where Henry Lovel gave lands at Branxholme to the canons of St. Andrews. 2 chaplains, Algar and William, were also witnesses. These are the 3 first known clergy men associated with Hawick, although whether any of them may have lived locally is unknown.

Henry (hen-ree) n. name of 8 Kings of England.
Henry I (c.1068–1135) 4th son of William I, the Conqueror, he was the first English King after the Norman Conquest. He married Edith, daughter of Malcolm II of Scotland. Henry II (1133–89) first English Plantagenet King, he was nephew of David I, who knighted him at Carlisle in 1149. He occupied Southern Scotland following a decisive victory at Alnwick. In 1157 he forced William ‘the Lion’ to yield the title of Earl of Northumbria. Henry III (1207–72) son of John ‘Lackland’, he reigned from 1216. Although he was considered a failure personally, England flourished under his reign. In 1237 he signed the Treaty of York along with Alexander II, this possibly happening at Cavers. It was also signed by Hugh de Baliol (among others), who may have been Laird of Cavers at the time. His sister Joanna married Alexander II of Scotland and his daughter Margaret married Alexander III.
Henry IV (1367–1413) King of England from 1399, he was son of John of Gaunt and grandson of Edward III. In 1400 his army entered Scotland and declarations of his feudal superiority were read at market crosses of Kelso, Dryburgh and Jedburgh. He spent much of his reign suppressing rebellions, such as that led by Henry ‘Hotspur’ in 1403 (effectively begun at Cocklaw near Hawick). In 1405 he claimed the town castle and territory of Jedburgh as his personal property. He suffered from a serious skin condition (possibly leprosy) as well as acute attacks of some unspecified form. Henry VIII (1491–1547) King of England from 1509 until his death. He was son of Henry VII and 2nd monarch of the Tudor dynasty. As a young Duke of York he was made English Lord Warden General about 1495. His reign included the time of Flodden, and it was his troops that razed Hawick and surrounding towns during the Rough Wooing of 1544/45. Famous for his 6 wives, he died grossly overweight, suffering from gout and possibly from syphilis – ‘Tell King Henry! Reach him speedy, Men of Hawick, though poor and needy’ [RSC], ‘We saw King Henry’s raiders, We had until the dawn to turn the tide of battle, And show Hawick stands alone’ [GLG].

Henry (hen-ree) n. George (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was recorded at Dykes in 1736 when his son Thomas was baptised. Isobel (17th/18th C.) wife of James Turnbull, candlemaker. She acted as a teacher for poor children in Hawick Parish, recorded in the Session records of 1721. And in 1724 she was allowed ‘eightpence a quarter to teach poor children’. James (17th C.) recorded in 1673 on the list of men named in the trial for the so-called riot at St. Jude’s Fair. He may be the James, married to Elizabeth Elliot, whose children included: an unnamed child (b.1671); and Bessie (b.1679). The witnesses in 1671 were John Henry Mullens (Hen-ree-mu-linz) n. Hawick resident of the 1900s. Whether this was his proper name or a nickname is unclear – ‘Wagga Wagga and Jocky Sling, Rumpie Laidlaw and Rob the Laird, Jocky Tencocks and Wullie the King, Henry Mullens and Hope the Gaird’ [HI] (also written ‘Hendry’; see also Hendry).

Henry of Cranstoun (Hen-ree-ov-kran-stin) n. character in Sir Walter Scott’s ‘Lay of the Last Minstrel’, presumably inspired by the Cranstons of 16th century Denholm (and perhaps by Henry Cranstoun who married Margaret Wauchope around 1653). In the poem he finally succeeds in marrying Margaret Scott, although their families are sworn enemies. A stained glass representation of him was made for Silverbuthall. He was listed as a grocer in Pigot’s 1837 directory and Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1852 he also ran a cart to Edinburgh from Lilliesleaf. In 1861 he was listed on the north side of Main Street, but was not there in 1851 (also written ‘Hendry’ and ‘Henrie’; see also Hendry).

the Henry Scott Riddell Cairn (th-hen-ree-skoi-ri-duel-kairn) n. monument at Dryden Fell on the farm of Commonside to commemorate the poet Henry Scott Riddell. It was erected in 1874 by John Marshall & Co. of Hawick, funded by the Archeological Society and Lodge 111. It is 50 ft (13 m) high and 50 ft round the base. It has been visited annually by Lodge 111 and Edinburgh Lodge 36 since 1908. It was repaired in 1926 and renovated in 1999. Its plaque reads ‘Sleep on, gentle bard, for though silent for ever, Thy harp in the hall of the chieftain is hung; No tune from the memory of mankind shall sever The tales that it told, and the strains that it sung’.

Henry’s hurl (hen-reez-hu-ruil) n., arch. a great hurry – ‘A hurried job was often given ‘Henry’s hurl’, though who the Henry was I am not able to say’ [WL].

Henry Street (Hen-ree-stree) n. street in Newcastleton, off North Hermitage Street, opposite Moss Road (presumably named after Henry Scott, 3rd Duke of Buccleuch).

Henry the Hadda Man (Hen-ree-thu-hu-duh-mon) n. nickname for Henry Milne (see hadda).

Henry the Woflin (Hen-ree-thu-wool-ling) n. nickname probably referring to Henry Lovel.

Hensmaid (henz-mee) n. nickname for one of the men called Robert Scott in mid-1800s Hawick.

Hens Nest (henz-nest) n. popular name for a house built in the Village by Adam Irvine of Breweryhouses and his wife Henny around 1824–28, the name deriving from a remark by Irvine that he was building a ‘nest for oor Henny’. The name was also used for the whole of the Village area for many decades. The house itself was officially named ‘Woodlands’, although the nickname was preferentially used. James, Eliza and Robert Hogg (children of the author of ‘Teribus’) were living there in 1851.

Hent-tae (hen-tä) adj. pigeon-toed, having toes pointing inward.

Hent-tees (hen-täz) n., arch. a species of crow-foot, Ranunculus acris or Ranunculus repens (also known as ‘craw-tees’).

Hinton (hin-’in) n. James (17th/18th C.) resident in Milstonshiel in 1716 and 1717. His children, baptised in Robertson Parish, included Helen (b.1716), Adam (b.1717) and Jean (b.1722) (formerly written ‘Henton’).

Henwuddie (Hen-wu-dee) n. Henwoodie, former herd’s cottage, situated behind Girnwood in the upper Borthwick valley. An area is referred to as ‘Henwoodie common’ on the 1718 survey of Buccleuch properties, while Henwoodie itself was listed as part of the farm of Bellendean. Robert Inglis was recorded there in 1728 and William Sinton in 1764–66. James Grieve was tenant there in the years around 1800, when it was united with East Buccleuch. William Grieve was tenant there in the 1820s and 30s. Francis Armstrong and family lived there in 1841. The ruin was still standing until about 1970 (it is marked ‘Henwoody’ on Ainslie’s 1773 map; the same name is used for a place on Oxnam Water, which was the place of rendezvous for the Cranstouns).

Hepburn (hep-burn) n. Adam (15th C.) brother of the Master of Hailes. He was leasing the Crown lands of Altrieve, but yielded them up to James and John Alemoor in 1488. He is probably the Adam, brother of Patrick, Earl of Bothwell, who witnessed a resignation of lands by Haig of Bemersyde in 1490. Adam (c.1492–1513) 2nd Earl of Bothwell, son of Patrick. He succeeded to his father’s titles and lands in 1508, these including the Lordship of Liddesdale and Castle of Hermitage, as well as all the associated churches and benefices, and some lands in Longnewton and Ancrum (Sandyestanes). He held the patronage of Hawick Parish, and several of his relatives are recorded in connection with Hawick Kirk. He also held the Barony of Chamberlain Newton and the half Barony of Wilton. The ‘retour’ and sasine relating to him in 1508 have many local lairds as witnesses. In 1505 he obtained a ‘precept’ for lands, including ‘Elmer’ (Alemoor, confirmed in 1509), and in 1511 there was a confirming charter for lands, including some local areas, such as Wester Alemoor, as well as the Baronies of Wilton and Chamberlain Newton. He may have been appointed Warden General of the Scottish Marches about 1513. He also served as Lord High Admiral of Scotland. He married Agnes Stewart, illegitimate daughter of James, Earl of Buchan (she had also already had an illegitimate daughter with James IV, and went on to marry 3 more times) and was succeeded by his son Patrick. He died at Flodden along with at least 2 uncles and a brother-in-law. George (15th/16th C.) along with David Hoppringle, Walter Scott of Howpasley and William Middlemas, he held lands at Boonraw, which passed to Robert Scott of Stirches in 1504/5. Probably the same ‘George Hepburne’ witnessed the charter of Boonraw granted to Robert Scott of Stirches by Patrick, Earl of Bothwell in 1505. George (16th C.) recorded as Parson of Hawick about 1560 or earlier. He is mentioned in 1562 when the General Assembly ‘ordained the Superintendent of the Lothians to summoun’ him ‘to answer such things as should be laid to his charge’; this probably indicates that he was not conforming to the changes brought through the Reformation. He was described as a kinsman of the patron (at that time James, the 4th Earl), and hence probably appointed to the ‘living’ of Hawick without actually ministering to the congregation. Although the precise dates are unknown, he must have been the last incumbent before the Reformation. Note that there was a minister of the same name, son of Patrick of Waughton, who was recorded at Prestonhaugh from 1562, dying in 1585: this parish was also known as ‘Hauch’ and hence easily confused with Hawick. e.g. ‘George Hepburne, parson of Hauch’ is recorded in an inventory for the Earl of Bothwell in 1563/4. James (16th C.) priest mentioned in the Hawick Charter of 1537, along with several others. He is designated ‘Mr.’, indicating that he already had his ‘M.A.’ degree. He was one of the owners who was obliged to pay annual rents to James Blair. He was probably a distant relative of the Earl of Bothwell, and possibly one of the 2 kinsmen mentioned in a letter of Dacre’s in 1532 as going from Hawick to help protect Hermitage Castle. He may be the ‘Sir James Hepburne, chaplain’ who was witness to a discharge relating to Scott lands by Patrick Earl of Bothwell in 1528/9. James 4th Earl of Bothwell (c.1536–78) son of Patrick, he was usually referred to as simply ‘Bothwell’. The family had owned lands in Liddesdale since 1492, and he was served heir to his father in 1556. He was made Lieutenant of the Scottish Marches (unusually all 3 of them) in 1558 and took over Hermitage Castle. He was allied with Mary, Queen of Scots, and the Catholic cause. In 1559 he was charged (along with Ker of Cessford and Lethington) with keeping peace on the Border. In 1560 he was appointed as one of 7 commissioners to prepare for the Queen’s return from France. Accused of plotting against the Queen’s brother Lord James Stewart (the Earl Moray), he was imprisoned in 1562, escaped from Edinburgh Castle, hid at Hermitage and escaped to France, where he remained for 3 years. On his return (after Mary had split with her brother) he rose in favour and regained control of Liddesdale and the Wardenship of the Marches. In 1563/4 there was an inventory of reversions for his lands belonging to his relative Jane Hepburn, widow of George Home of Wedderburn. He was present in the palace on the night when Rizzio was murdered, apparently escaping through a window. He married Jean Gordon, daughter of the Earl of Huntly in 1566, but the marriage lasted barely a year. Also in 1566 he tried to suppress the Border clans, summoning the leaders of the Elliots to Hermitage, and holding them there; but Jock Elliot of the Park...

failed to appear, and so he rode out to find him. He was seriously wounded in attempting to capture Jock Elliot, apparently being hit in the head, body and hand with a short sword, and almost not getting access to Hermitage when his servants carried him back there. Mary Queen of Scots visited him 8 days later, while he lay wounded in Hermitage Castle on her famous ride from Jedburgh that year. He married her the following year, having participated in the murder of her previous husband, Lord Darnley. In 1567 he gave a charter of East Craik to John Cockburn of Ormiston, returning lands that had been forfeited to Walter Scott of Buccleuch. He soon became unpopular with other Scottish nobles and was forced to flee, being captured off Norway, where he was imprisoned, partly because of breaking an engagement (or perhaps marriage under local law) to a Norwegian lady in 1559. He was imprisoned in Dragsholm Castle in Denmark, chained to a pillar under appalling conditions, where he died insane. His body was exhumed in 1858 and was said to be ‘Bothwell’s Mummy’ that was exhibited in the Edinburgh Wax Museum. He was succeeded by his nephew Francis Stewart – ‘Fierce Bothwell I vanquished clean, Gar’d troopers an’ fitmen flee; By my faith I dumfoondert the Queen, An’ wha daur meddle wi’ me?’ [T]. John (16th C.) priest of Hawick, recorded in the 1537 Charter, along with James Hepburn and 4 others. From his designation ‘Mr.’ it is likely he already had his ‘M.A.’ and was a fully qualified priest, although his status in Hawick is unknown. He may also have been one of the 2 kinsmen of the Earl of Bothwell mentioned in connection with Hawick in 1532. Also in 1532 he was referred to in the Selkirk Protocol Books as the ‘pretended rector of Hawyk’; Sir Walter Scott (probably of Buccleuch) and Robert Scott (it is unclear who this was) complained that he had tried to have them excommunicated after they failed to pay ‘certain teind sheaves’ in what they called a ‘false writ’ and referred to him as ‘false rector of Hawyk’. In the 1540 Exchequer Rolls he was recorded receiving payment for the teind-lambs and wool. It is also possible he was the John, brother of Sir Patrick of Waughton who was accused (along with his brothers Adam and Alexander and other Hepburns) of the murder of Gilbert Wauchope in 1534/5. And in 1526 he could be the ‘Mr John Hepburne’ who had a remission along with Sir Patrick of Waughton, John of West Fortoun, William of Crag, Patrick Whitalw of that Ilk and others for assisting David Home of Wedderburn. He may be the ‘Johanne Hepburne’ who witnessed a sasine for Scott of Branxholme in 1500 and witnessed the sasine for Adam inheriting the Lordship of Liddesdale in 1508. John (d.bef.1561) Archdeacon of Teviotdale from 1544, when the office was resigned by John Lauder. However, Lauder retained most of the benefices until 1551. It is possible this was the same man who had earlier been a priest in Hawick. Patrick (d.1483) 1st Lord of Hailes, son of Adam of Hailes. His mother was Janet, daughter of Sir William Borthwick. He had brothers William and George. His main lands were in Lanarkshire, but he also held lands in Berwickshire. He was a Conservator of the truces with England in 1449, 1451–7 and 1459. He was also the last Scottish Keeper of Berwick Castle. He was predeceased by his son Adam and succeeded by his grandson Patrick, who became the 1st Earl of Bothwell. His daughter Euphemia married Andrew McDougall of Makersston. Patrick (bef. 1466–1508) 1st Earl of Bothwell, son of Adam and Helen Home. He was also Lord Hailes, Sheriff of Berwick, fought against James III at Sauchieburn, and rose to great power under James IV. He gained considerable power on the death of James III and crowning of the young James IV, including having control over Lothian and the Merse (jointly with Alexander Home). He was Master of the King’s Household, Custodian of Edinburgh Castle, Sheriff-Principal of Edinburgh and Haddington and Admiral of the Kingdom. He had a Crown Charter for the Lordships of Crichton and Bothwell in 1488, and the Bothwell title was raised into an Earldom later the same year. He was Warden of the Western Marches 1489–1503. He leased the Crown lands of the Eaststead of Hartwood in 1490. In 1491 he gained leases of the Crown lands of Deloraine, Warleshope and Eldlinhope, following the death of Sir David Scott of Buccleuch. He also held a great deal of land, and essentially exchanged Bothwell Castle with Hermitage in 1491/2 (after the Douglasses of Angus were forced to resign the Lordship of Liddesdale). He does not seem to have resided for any length of time at Hermitage or had much personal involvement in the district. In 1493 he was surety for many Elliots and others who were involved in cases at the Itinerant Court of the Judiciary held in Liddesdale. In 1494/5 he was the Lord of Liddesdale who was fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh for many men of Liddesdale, in particular Elliots, Armstronggs, Wigholmgs and Croziergs.
Also in 1494/5 David, son of James Scott in Hassendean, obtained remission for stealing livestock several times from his farms. In 1498 he was fined at a Justice-aire held in Jedburgh as pledge for men dwelling in Liddesdale. In 1500 there is a record in the Register of the Privy Seal of the pledges he received for good behaviour for a large number (56) of Borderers; the list is valuable for naming many early members of the Armstrong, Crozier, Elliot, Nixon and Turnbull families in particular. In 1493 and 1494 he was fined for not appearing at the Judiciary Court as Lord of Liddesdale, and in 1494/5 he was fined for not appearing as surety for 85 Borderers whose conduct he was responsible for. There were similar fines in the 1490s, which the King forgave him on account of his good service. In 1494 he gained the lands of Teindside and Harwood. He had the patronage of Hawick Church, presumably through its connection with the Collegiate Church of Bothwell at that time. In 1494/5 David, son of James Scott in Hassendean, had remission for stealing cows, oxen and horses from him. In 1500 he gave a precept of saisine to Walter Scott of Branxholme for the lands of Grahamslaw; he was there described as Lord of Hailies and Crichton. He was involved with the treaty of marriage of James IV with Margaret Tudor of England in 1501. In 1501 he was granted ward of the lands of Branxholme, Eckford and Lanton. In 1502 he was fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh to ‘give suit’ for his lands of Wilton; it is unclear how much earlier he gained the western half-Barony of Wilton. In 1504 he had a gift of the lands and barony of Kirkurd through non-entry following the death of David Scott of Buccleuch. In 1504 he was superior who infefted Walter Scott of Buccleuch in his father’s lands in Annandale. He is recorded as Baron of Chamberlain Newton in 1504/5 and of the half Barony of Wilton in 1506. In 1505/6 he argued that George, son of Robert Scott of Whames had no legal right to inherit his father’s lands of Muirhouse. He married Janet Douglas and later Margaret Gordon. His children were: Janet, who married George Seton; Adam, who succeeded as 2nd Earl; Patrick, who married Nichola Home; William of Rollanston; John, Bishop of Brechin; and Margaret, married Archibald Douglas, 6th Earl of Angus. Patrick of Bolton (c.1494–1576) Sheriff of Haddingtonshire and Master of Hailies, he was the 2nd son of Patrick, the 1st Earl of Bothwell. He served as one of the tutors during his nephew Patrick’s minority. He was appointed to govern Liddesdale during this time, but was not generally present there; after complaints were made, and the tutors threatened with action, he travelled to Hermitage in 1518 and sent back a report to the Bishop on the wild state of the Borders at that time. He stated that he had pledged ‘for the Elwandes of Reidleugh and their band like as I had before and for the Ellots of the other gang of Gorremberry, except so many as win in Teviotdale’. Around 1540 he was involved in a dispute with Margaret Haliburton over lands in Dirleton. He married Nichola, daughter of Alexander Lord Home, and was succeeded by his son Patrick of Fairnington. Patrick (1512–56) 3rd Earl of Bothwell, son of Adam. He was also Lord of Hailies and Crichton and served as the King’s Lieutenant. He was a minor for many years after succeeding to his father’s titles and estates after Flodden. His tutors were his uncle Patrick, Master of Hailes (later Sheriff of Haddingtonshire) as well as other relatives who were Prior of St. Andrews and Bishop of Moray; his uncle (as next in line) probably served as governor of Liddesdale during his minority. He may have held the patronage of Hawick Church, like previous Earls of Bothwell. In 1525/6 he appears to be superior (perhaps Baron) of the lands of Stouslie, Groundistone and Harden, when he granted the tenancy to George, Lord Home (this is confirmed in 1538, and in another document with date probably incorrectly transcribed as 1552). The transfer of ‘Truslye’ (probably Stouslie) and ‘Groundeston’ in Chamberlain Newton were confirmed passing from him to George, Lord Home in 1535 when previous charters relating to Home lands were revoked; and he was still superior of Stouslie, Groundistone and Harden when Alexander, 5th Lord Home inherited in 1551. In 1528/9 he gave a discharge for ‘non-entries’ of lands held by Walter Scott of Branxholme and several other Scotts. In 1529 he entered a bond to keep the peace in his Lordship of Liddesdale. But he was imprisoned for about 6 months in 1530 when there was no real improvement, following the execution of the Lairds of Henderland and Tushielaw. This encouraged him into a potentially treasonous correspondence with the English in 1531 and 1532; the Earl of Northumberland describes a secret meeting between them, and 3 of his attendants in 1531, in which he promised 1000 gentlemen and 6000 commoners to serve on the English side. This led to further imprisonment (all of this activity up to 1532, makes it seem unlikely he was really born in 1512). However, he must have been partially rehabilitated, since he was granted lands near Lilliesleaf in 1534. But had to resign his estates in 1538, seeking exile and only returning to Scotland following the King’s death in 1542. In 1543 he signed the ‘Secret Bond’ with Cardinal Beaton, resisting English influence over the young Queen Mary. In 1544 he and Lord Home headed a force that made some attempt to defend Edinburgh against the English invaders under the Earl of Hertford. In about 1540 Sir Walter Scott of Branzholme promised that if the King allowed him to return to Hermitage, then Scott would help him keep peace on the Border, ‘to oist, birc, sla and distroy ilk XV dayis’ until any of te King’s enemies give sufficient pledges. Another scheme (in about 1547) to yield up Hermitage to the English and marry the Duchess of Suffolk in return, were foiled, causing him to seek exile again, where he remained until pardoned by Mary of Guise in 1554. He again acted as Lieutenant of the Scottish Marches. In 1556 he was involved in expeditions against the Armstrongs, accompanied by the Laird of Drumlanrig, but ‘the banditti had the advantage in two encounters’. He married Agnes Sinclair and their children were: James, the 4th Earl; Jane, who married John Stewart, Lord Darnley, and twice later; and Margaret. Patrick of Fairnington (c.1517–c.45) son of Patrick of Hailes and Boltoun. He was Sheriff of Lothian. He probably held the lands of the Lordship of Winnington, since in 1610 they were inherited by his great-granddaughters Marion, Jean and Margaret Hamilton. He married Agnes, daughter of George Hoppringle of St. John’s Chapel. Their only child was Marion, who married James Hamilton of Sprouston (who took the designation ‘of St. John’s Chapel’), whose sons included John Hamilton, father of Marion, Jean and Margaret. Robert (15th C.) recorded as ‘Robert of Hepburn’ in 1424 when he was part of a ‘retour of inquest’ held in Hawick to decide on the inheritance of part of the Barony of Hownam. Most of the other men were quite local. Sir Robert of Alderston (16th C.) recorded in 1587 as Lieutenant of his Majesty’s Guard, stationed in the West Marches to keep order there. They were attacked by a group of rebels, including Christie and Andrew of Langholm (probably Armstrongs). Probably the same man was implicated in forcibly taking away the daughter of a Burgess of Edinburgh in 1600. In 1608 he was charged with going into the ‘West cuntrie’ to apprehend the rebels Ninian and William Elliot, resulting in one of his men being shot. William (15th C.) member of the panel of 1456 which acquitted Andrew Ker of Altonburn of the charge of helping the English to burn lands around Jedburgh. His name is recorded as ‘Wylam of Hepburne’. He was also witness to a charter for Ker of Altonburn in 1443 (also spelled ‘Hepburne’, ‘Hebborne’, etc., in earlier records).

Hepburne-Scott (hep-burn-sko’) n. Andrew (147–) only son of Henry, he became the 11th Lord Polwarth and Laird of Harden. In 1971 he married Anna, daughter of Maj. John Feville Henry Surtees. Their children are: William Henry, Master of Polwarth (b.1971); Robert Mungo (b.1974); Georgina May (b.1979); and Caroline Rose (b.1983). Elsa Margaret (d.1961) daughter of David Berry Hart, a prominent Edinburgh gynaecologist. She married Robert (1873–1950), brother of Lord Polworth. She was living at 9 West Stewart Place in 1939 and served as a Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. Francis (1806–84), youngest son of the 6th Lord Polwarth, and brother of the 7th Lord Polwarth, Henry Francis, who was Roxburghshire M.P. 1826–32. He was trained a barrister and was also a J.P. in Roxburghshire. When he visited Hawick in the lead up to the election of 1835 it is said that his group were surrounded by a mob, who jostled and spat on them, and they had to seek refuge in the Tower Hotel. He himself stood again in the 1837 county election, but lost to John Elliot of Minto, contesting the election results (unsuccessfully) partly because of the riots in Hawick. However, he was successfully elected 1841–47 in Roxburghshire and was M.P. for Berwickshire 1847–63. From the Scots of Harden, he himself was usually referred to as ‘of Mertoun House’. He was a member of the Jedforest Club. In 1835 he married Julia Frances Laura, last surviving child of Rev. Charles Boulbee and Laura, sister and heir of George, 4th Earl of Egremont. Their children were: Georgina Laura; and Frances Margaret Julia, who married Joseph William Baxendale. Henry Francis of Harden, 7th Lord Polwarth (1800–67) son of Hugh, the 6th Lord. He was listed as a Commissioner of Selkirkshire in 1819, when still younger of Harden. He was appointed Deputy Lieutenant of Roxburghshire in 1826. As well as Harden and other estates, he inherited Mabonlaw and Highchesters in 1843. He was Tory M.P. for Roxburghshire from 1826, being re-elected in 1831 by 57 votes to 14 against Sir William Eliott of Stobs in the last election under the pre-Reform system (with a vote at a meeting of the freeholders of the county). During that election about 1,000 Hawick men marched to Jedburgh to demonstrate. He was also selected to be one of Scotland’s Representative Peers in Parliament 1843–67. In 1845 he was appointed Sheriff Principal of Selkirkshire and in 1861 he became Lieut.-Col. in the Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire Rifle Volunteer Corps. He also served as a Commissioner of Supply, Justice of the Peace and member of the Police and Prison Boards for Roxburghshire. He was also Lord-Lieutenant of Selkirkshire and a Lord-in-waiting to the Queen. He was known as a great student of agricultural matters and a prize breeder of Leicester sheep. He was also a member of the Jedforest Club. He was an elder of the Church of Scotland and several times a member of the General Assembly. In 1835 he married Georgina, daughter of George Baillie of Jerviswood and Mellerstain, who was sister of the Earl of Haddington; she died in 1859. His children were: Walter Hugh Hepburne-Scott, who succeeded; Henry Robert, who married Ada Douglas-Home; Mary Lilias; Helen Georgina; Katherine; and Harriet Frances, who married Cmdr. Henry Baillie-Hamilton. He is also sometimes referred to with just the surname ‘Scott’, although his son was very definitely Hepburne-Scott; he can also be confused with his brother Francis, who was Roxburghshire M.P. 1841–47. Henry Alexander 10th Lord Polwarth and Baron of Harden (1916–2005), son of Walter Thomas. He was Deputy-Lieutenant of Roxburghshire from 1962, Vice-Lord-Lieutenant of the Borders Region from 1975, and member of the Royal Company of Archers. Educated at Eton and King’s College, Cambridge, he served in WWII as Captain of the Lothians and Border Horse. He succeeded his grandfather in 1944, since his father had died 2 years earlier. He was selected as one of Scotland’s 12 representative Peers in Parliament 1945–63. Qualified as a Chartered Accountant, he served as Governor of the Bank of Scotland, Chairman and President of the Scottish Council for Development and Industry, Minister of State for the Scottish Office, Chairman of the Scottish National Orchestra, Chancellor of Aberdeen University, and on the Board of Directors of many companies. He married Caroline Margaret Hay of Marlefield and they had one son (Andrew, who succeeded) and secondly married Jean, daughter of Adm. Sir Angus Graham of Gartmore and Ardroch. Walter George 13th (or 15th) Laird of Harden and 9th Lord Polwarth (1864–1944), son of Walter Hugh. He was Deputy Lieutenant of the counties of Haddington, Berwick, Selkirk and Roxburgh. He also served as a Justice of the Peace. He was Lieutenant-Colonel in the Territorial force and Hon. Colonel in the 8th Battalion Royal Scots. He was selected to be one of Scotland’s Representative Peers in Parliament 1929–44. In 1888 he married Edith Frances, eldest daughter of Sir Thomas Fowell Buxton. Their children were: Walter Thomas (1890–1942); Alexander Noel (b.1892), killed in WWI; Patrick John (b.1899); Helen Victoria; Margaret Mary; Edith Christian; Grizel Frances Katherine. He was succeeded by his grandson Henry Alexander. Walter Hugh 12th (or 14th) Laird of Harden and 8th Lord Polwarth (1838–1920). He was son of Henry Francis Scott (M.P. for Roxburghshire) and Georgina Baillie. He adopted the extra surname ‘Hepburne’ after the estates of the Hepburnes of Humbie descended to him. He also assumed chieftanship of the Scotts (owing to the failure of the direct male line on the death of Francis 2nd Earl of Buccleuch). He inherited Bewlie Mains in 1860 and Mabonlaw and Highchers in 1868. He also held estates in the parishes of Maxton, Merton, St. Boswells, Smalholm, Kirkhope and Selkirk. He was Lord-Lieutenant of Selkirkshire and Deputy Lieutenant of Roxburghshire. He was Convenor of Roxburghshire County Council and served as a Justice of the Peace in the county. He was also selected as one of Scotland’s Representative Peers in Parliament 1882–1900. He was Captain in the Roxburgh Rifle Volunteers from 1868. In 1873 he presided over a meeting to set up the Hawick Home Mission, and for many years invited the members to spend Common Riding Saturday at Mertoun House. In 1863 he married his cousin Lady Mary Gordon, daughter of George, 5th Earl of Aberdeen. In 1915 he secondly married Katherine Grizel Baillie (a cousin), daughter of the Canon of York. His children were: Walter George, who succeeded: Henry James (b.1866); George (b.1871); Robert (1873–1950); Charles Francis (b.1874); Georgina Mary; Lilias; Mary Harriet; Grisel Katherine; and Katherine Grace. Walter Thomas (1890–1942) Master of Polwarth, eldest son of Walter George, 9th Baron Polwarth and also Laird of Harden. He was a Captain in the Lothian and Border Horse Yeomanry, and also Commanding Officer of the local battalion of the Home Guard. He served as a Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. In 1914 he married Elspeth Glencairn Campbell, daughter of the Bishop of Hepburne-Scott

Glasgow. Their children included: Henry Alexander (b.1916), who succeeded his grandfather; and Francis Michael (b.1920).

Hepe see Heap

er (her, hur) pron. her – ‘She wad speak the hint legs off a cuddy, her’ [WL] (often added for emphasis after a phrase; note usual pronunciation with a long e vowel, and that sometimes the h is dropped).

Herbert see Herbert de Selkirk

Herbertson (her-burt-sin) n. Andrew (18th/19th C.) farmer at Hungryhill in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls for Lilliesleaf Parish, when he owned 2 horses. William (19th C.) mar-rried Mary Stoddart in 1837, the marriage being recorded in both Castleton and Southdean Parishes.

herbour (her-bur) n. a harbour – ‘A harbour for auld muillins O’ lang-forgotten pieces . . . ’ [DH],
v. to harbour – ‘. . . there was that mony beggars that the toon got a bad name for herborung thum a . . . ’ [BW1961].

Hercus (her-kis) n. James Logie (1846/7– 1885) writer of the words of ‘Hawick’. Born in Kirkwall (Hercus or ‘Harcus’ is a fairly common name there), he may have worked as a house painter with his father. He was listed in the Kirkwall censuses of 1851 and 1861. He was living in Stockbridge in 1868 when he married Joan Jamieson Laidlaw. Their children included
James Mack, John, Margaret Jamieson and William Laidlaw. In 1871 he was working as a clerk in Glasgow. There is no evidence he ever lived in Hawick, and no clue why he produced his poem of that name. Other poems he wrote with a local connection were ‘Minto Crags’ and ‘Dr. John Leyden’. His work was collected in ‘Songs of the Borderland and other Verses’ (1888). In 1898 Adam Grant (using the pseudonym ‘M. Rosenberg’) set ‘Hawick’ to music. He died at the age of 38 in Glasgow and was buried in Morebattle.

Herd (hird) n. nickname of John Scott in the early 18th century.

Herd (herd) n. Walter (17th C.) tenant in Hermitage in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Walter (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Eilrig in 1710 when his son Walter was baptised. He is probably the Walter who married Bessie Grieve in Roberton in 1708. William (d.1679) from Ashkirk Parish. He is recorded as one of the men banish to America in 1679 for being a Covenanter, and dying at Moul Head of Deerness, in Orkney, when their ship wrecked and they were ordered shut up beneath the hatches. William (17th C.)
resident in Dykecroft in Castleton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694.

herdit (her-dde’, -di’) pp. herded – ‘The hills where he herdit are bonnie and green, The hiirsel he tendit is white i’ the glen’ [JoHa] (also hirdit).

the Herd’s House (thu-herdz-hoos) n. popular name for a former shepherd’s cottage located on Hawick Moor, probably near Pilmuir Rig. It may be the ‘herd’s house’ recorded when payments were made for building it in the Town Tresurer’s book of 1755, and which cost £4 12 0 when paid for in 1766. It was the location for the ‘Curds and Cream’ (meaning the Friday morning ‘Hut’) in the years 1872–76 (probably the same place as Hawickmoor).

hereaway (heer-a-wā) adv., arch. her, hereabouts, in this neighbourhood – ‘I can tell you about the vera last fairy that ever was seen here-away’ [LHTB], ‘Thay’re scheiran’ aa roond heir-away,’ reaping is going on all around in this direction’ [JAHM].

hereaway-thereaway (heer-a-wā-ther-a-wā)
adv., arch.ither and thither, here and there – ‘The bairns ran hereaway-thereaway’ [GW].

herefore (heer-for) adv., arch. therefore, on this account, in payment of this – ‘. . . owr wil is heir-for, and we charg zou stratlie, and commandis that ze incontinent . . . ’ [SB1500].

hereship (heer-ship) n., arch. an armed raid, especially for carrying off cattle etc., e.g. ‘William Grymyslaw, at the Kirk of Hassindene’ is accused of helping the English of Tynedale in a ‘Hereship’ in 1493.

Heriot (her-ee-i’) n. small town on the A7 and former station on the Waverley Line, about 30 miles north of Hawick.

Heriot (her-ee-i’) n. Archibald (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 as Captain of Acrum. He was surety at the Justice-aire for Robert Taylor, once in Longnewton, then in Sansystanes. He was fined later for failing to enter Robert Taylor. Archibald (16th C.) Rector of the Parish of Kirkton.
He resigned the Rectory in 1550, when it was presented to William Cranston. James (15th/16th C.) appointed Rector of Ashkirk in 1505. This was about the same time that Richard Bothwell came Prebendar, so presumably he was actually the minister. He probably only lasted a couples of years, since William Watson is described as the late Vicar in 1508. James (b.1825/6) from Legerwood in Berwickshire, he was a coachman, living at Howdenburn in 1851. By 1861 he had moved to Coldstream. His wife was Agnes and their children included Walter, John Stavert, William T. and Margaret (see also Herriot).

Herriot Hoose (he-ree-i’-hoos) n. Herriot House, former toll-house on the road to Edinburgh, located shortly after the road crossed the Herriot Water, later a post office. John Govenlock was innkeeper there, probably in the late 18th century (also spelled ‘Herriot’).

heritage (her-i’-eej) n., arch. property ‘...for our hole house of Readhewghe, men and servants dwelling on our heritage and steading within Liddesdale and Tevidale ...’ [CBP1584].

the Heritage Hub (thin-her-i’-eej-hub) n. home of the Scottish Borders Archive (covering Berwickshire, Peebleshire, Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire) and Local History Centre, based in the renovated Exchange Buildings from 2007.

heritor (her-i’-ur, her-i’-tor) n., arch. a landowner in a parish, responsible for the financial burdens of the parish, as well as having some collective responsibilities for appointments, but without the power of the local feudal baron. Heritors were jointly liable (in proportion to the value of their land) for paying the schoolmaster and similar public burdens. In some documents heritors would be distinguished from tenants by being referred to ‘of’ their residence, rather than ‘in’. It was the practice at least until the mid-18th century for the minister to pay respects to each heritor in order of precedence, each man rising to bow. The heritors were allocated particular seats in the Kirk, as recorded for example on a register of 1683, with the seating being ‘in the body of the church below the lofts’. Hawick Parish Heritors records exist for the period 1710–1934.

herken (her-kin) v. to harken – ‘Herken untill the voyce o’ my crye ...’ [HSR], ‘Herken, O doughter, an’ considdir, an inclaine thine eer ...’[HSR], ‘Expected mei tae herken tae tidin’s hei hed brung ...’ [MB].

Herkes (hur-kes) n. Rev. Moira first local female minister. She was minister at Denholm and Bedrule, linked with Minto, 1985–88. She then went to Prestongrange Church, in 1998 went to St. Andrew’s-Erskine Parish Church, Dunfermline, and later moved to Gardner Memorial Church, Brechin. She was also assistant at Dunblane Cathedral in 1996 at the time of the school shootings.

Herkness (herk-nis) n. (Harkness) Adam (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Isobel Ruther ford and their daughter Isobel was baptised in 1731. He could be the son of John baptised in 1707. Adam (18th C.) married Isobel Porteous in Hobkirk in 1761. Their children, baptised in the Associate Congregation in Jedburgh, included: Andrew (b.1762); Helen (b.1764); Walter (b.1767); and William (b.1772). Andrew (18th C.) resident of Denholm. His children, baptised in Cavers, included: John (b.1703); and Esther (b.1704). Andrew (17th/18th C.) married Helen Hobkirk in Bedrule Parish in 1717. Andrew (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, recorded at Clarilaw in 1727 and 1729. He married Helen Hunity in Cavers Parish in 1715. Their children (baptised in Wilton) included: Helen (b.1727); and Helen (again, b.1729). The witnesses in 1727 were John and Francis Scott and in 1729 were William Douglas and Robert Liddell. Andrew (b.1829/30) labourer of 9 Loan who was charged with the culpable homicide of Elizabeth Young (of the same address) in 1888. George (17th C.) resident of Acreknowe on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Hannah ‘Nellie’ (d.1849) daughter of Nellie Paterson, who was a sister of Robert. She was thus the niece of ‘Pawkie’ Paterson, as immortalised in the verse of the song; however, there is some confusion over whether ‘Nellie’ was ‘Pawky’s’ sister or niece, since Robert’s father Archibald was also ‘Pawkie’, and additionally she had a sister, who was also Helen (and hence ‘Nellie’). She married Charles Gray Laidlaw and lived up the Loan. She was also mentioned in ‘Hawick Immortals’ – ‘Peggy Duncan and Jenny Din, Nellie Herkness and Mensie Mein; The Wilton Priest wi’ his coat o’ skin, Staney Stewart and Candy Jean’[HI]. Helen (b.c.1795) tollkeeper at the North Toll Bar in 1841. It is possible that she was the Helen, daughter of Robert, born in Hawick about 1803/4. James (17th C.) tenant on the Cavers estate. In 1684 he was among a group of tenants who complained at having to pay a year’s rent as part of the authorities attempts to extract the fines imposed on ‘the Guid Liddy Cavers’ for being a Covenanter supporter. He could be the James listed at Kirkton on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. James (17th C.) recorded ‘in Woritch’ when his will was listed in 1686. If this is ‘Orchard’, then he could be the same as the tenant from Cavers recorded in 1684. James (18th C.) resident of Minto Parish. His son Robert was baptised in 1731. Perhaps the same James had a daughter Marion baptised in Bedrule Parish in 1735. James (18th C.) mason in Hawick. In 1742 he witnessed a baptism in Hawick for Joseph Lothian. He married Betty
Herkness

Dickson in 1730 and their children included: Helen (b.1737); James (b.1740); Betty (b.1742); and William (b.1746). The witnesses in 1742 were mason David Laing and wright Thomas Winthrope. James (1740–1823) mason at the West Port, son of mason James and Betty Dickson. His son was Thomas, mason in Hawick. He may be the James who (along with Robert) in 1771 witnessed a baptism in Hawick for John Scott and Helen (perhaps his sister or other close relative). James (18th C.) resident of Southdean Parish. His son James was baptised in 1771. James (1816–1903) son of Thomas and Helen Scott, he was born in Hawick and became a well-known local builder. He lived later at 13 Allars Crescent. He is listed as a builder on Allars Crescent in Slater’s 1852 directory, being recorded in 1861 as employer of 30 men and 6 boys. Some of his best work can be seen at the banks his firm built at 4 Tower Knowe and 12 High Street. In 1847 he married Jane, daughter of Walter John Grieve, tenant in Southfield, and she died in 1881. Their children included: Christian (Kitty) Agnes (b.c.1851), who married Glasgow traveller John Anderson; and James (b.1855). James (b.c.1818) son of Thomas and Helen Paterson. He was a stockingmaker in Hawick. He was living with his mother Helen at the West Port in 1841. He appears to have been in Jedburgh Jail in 1843, 1849 and 1859. In 1851 he was a boarder with George and Agnes (related to him through marriage) Robson on the Kirkwynd, where his is described as a widower. He probably had children Helen (b.c.1846) and Thomas (b.c.1848). In 1861 he was a boarder with Jean McDonald at 5 Mid Raw. He married Martha Gadd in 1851 and she died in 1902. Their children included: Job (b.c.1852), who was Sheriff Officer; Edward (b.c.1853); Catherine (b.1855); Hannah (b.1856), who probably died in infancy; James (b.1857); Elizabeth (b.1860); John (b.1862); Archibald (b.1865); and Mary (b.1868). Job (b.c.1852) Sheriff Officer who lived at Wilton Dean. His paternal grandmother was the sister of ‘Pawkie’ Paterson. In 1881 he was listed as a Prison Keeper. In 1872 he married Agnes Jardine in Wilton Parish. Their daughter Elizabeth was born in 1873. John (17th C.) married Margaret Aitchison in Bedrule in 1693. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Orchard on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He was probably related to William, who was also listed there. He may be the John whose daughter Margaret was baptised in Hawick in 1693. He may also be the John who was living at Borthwickhaugh in 1707 when his son Adam was baptised in Wilton; he was surely related to William who was tenant in Borthwickhaugh. John (17th/18th C.) recorded at Winningtonrig in the early 1700s. His children baptised in Kirkton Parish included Lancelot (b.1708) and Janet (b.1710). Perhaps the same John also had children baptised in Cavers: Jean (b.1694); Helen (b.1697); Margaret (b.1700); and an unnamed child (b.1703). John (18th C.) resident of Southdean Parish. His son John was baptised in 1771. Robert (d.bef. 1813) resident of Hawick. In 1811 his heirs are recorded as owners of ‘Part of Particot Lands of Hawick’. These lands were later owned by William Munro. He could be the Robert who married Agnes Small in Hawick in 1771. He could also be the mason whose child died in 1790. Thomas ‘Tam’ (1787–1855) born in Middlebie, Annan, son of Thomas and Hannah Murray. He was a spinner in Hawick. In 1841 his wife Helen and son James were at West Port (while he must have been absent). He was living at 7 Loan (probably the same place) in 1851 and described as ‘Pauper (road labourer)’. He married Helen, daughter of Archibald Paterson and sister of Robert ‘Pawkie‘; either she or her daughter was the ‘Nelly Herkness’ of the song. Their children were: Helen (b.1803/4); Archibald (b.1806/7); Hannah (1807–55); James (b.1820/1), who married Martha Gadd; Betsy, who died aged 6; and Edward, who died aged 12. He died just a month after his wife. Thomas (b.c.1787) mason recorded at ‘New Glebe’ in 1841. This was likely at Rockvale on Liddesdale Road. In 1851 he was at ‘Rockville’ (i.e. Rockvale) and listed as a farmer of 16 acres. He was probably the mason who was recorded on the short-list for Cornet in 1817. He married Helen Scott. Their children included: James (b.1816), also a builder; Gideon (b.1820); John (b.1825); Elizabeth (b.1827); Agnes (b.1830); and Helen (b.1832). He may be the Thomas who was buried at St. Mary’s in 1858. Walter (17th C.) resident of Spittal-on-Rule on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. William (17th C.) resident of Orchard on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He was surely related to John. William (17th C.) tenant in Borthwaugh in Wilton Parish. In 1716 his daughter Janet married George, youngest son of shoemaker Andrew Porteous. He may be the William who in 1726 witnessed a baptism for Walter Scott in Commonside. William (17th/18th C.) tenant in Borthwickhaugh. His children, baptised in Wilton Parish, included: Helen (b.1709); and Mary (b.1712). William (18th C.) resident of Hermiston

Hawick Parish. In 1728 he married Isobel ‘Blake’ in Cavers Parish. Their daughter Jean was baptised in Wilton Parish in 1730. William (18th C.) tenant of Birkhill farm, just south of Billerwell. He had a daughter called Marion, who visited Prince Charlie’s camp when the army spent the night nearby, and apparently made a fool of herself trying to follow them as far as Wauchope Rigg, until brought back by her friends William (19th/20th C.) assistant Burgh Officer from 1893. (also written ‘Hearkness’, ‘Herkennesse’ and ‘Herkness’).

herlin (her-lin) n., arch. an immature sea-trout – ’Whiles hei saw a herlin soon, And whiles killt a troot – Niver o’ his awnership Had hei a meenit’s doot’ [DH].

Herman Law (her-min-law) n. hill south of St. Mary’s Loch, reaching 614 m. The Town possesses a Tom Scott painting of the area.

Hermiston (her-mee-stin) n. farm just south of Riddell in Lilliesleaf Parish. It is probably where ‘Alex’ de Hirmannist’ was from, witness of a document for lands in Lilliesleaf in the early 13th century. Probably from the same family was ‘Alisaundre de Hirdemaneston’, who swore fealty to Edward I in 1296. The Stewarts of Hermiston have a burial aisle in Lilliesleaf kirkyard. It should not be confused with (although the name has the same origin as) ‘Herdmantoun’, near the site of Herriot-Watt University in Edinburgh; that was the location for R.L. Stevenson’s unfinished novel ‘The Weir of Hermiston’, and home of the Sinclairs, who nevertheless have some location connections. The one in Lilliesleaf Parish may be the place where Quentin Crozier was recorded in 1494/5. It was farmed by Adam Rutherford and was raided and burned about 1502 by David Scott, called ‘Lady, in Stirkshawis’, along with several Englishmen. Adam Scott of Hermiston was on inquest panels in 1494 and 1509 and also a witness to a document for the Scotts of Branxholme in 1500. John Scott was also recorded there in 1502, as well as John Glendinning and William Waugh. Patrick Johnstone inherited half the lands from his father Quentin in 1510. Walter Scott of Robertson sold ‘all the stane houss callit the peill and cloiss with the [toure?] and the pertinenchis of the samyn’ to Michael Scott of Aikwood in 1536. In 1538 Thomas Scott in Todrig received half of the lands (except the tower and 2 acres) from Michael Scott of Aikwood to fulfil a debt of service. In 1563 the lands were leased by John, son of George Ker of Faldonside, to John Johnstone, David Tudhope, John Fletcher and John Murray. In 1580 John Johnstone of Hermiston gave sasine of 3 husbandlands there, with houses, etc., to Patrick Johnstone. Andrew Scott was portioner there in 1638. In 1643 Robert Scott of Whitslade held lands there valued at £156 (Wester Hermiston), while Andrew Scott and William Johnstone held lands valued at £130 (Easter Hermiston). In 1663 the lands were owned by Andrew Scott and William Johnstone. In 1678 Thomas Scott of Whitslade, John Scott of Synton and John Johnstone were the owners. James and George Davidson and Robert Cairns were there in 1694. The Western and Eastern parts were combined by 1743. George Johnstone sold his part of Hermiston to James Shortreed in 1758, these lands being valued at £260. Robert Moffat and Francis Blaikie were (at least formally) part owners in 1761. George Brydon was tenant in 1762. Capt. (later Adm.) John Elliot owned 3 husband-lands there, purchased from James Shortreed in 1778. James Trotter was farmer there 1787–88. William Govan was owner in 1788, having purchased both the Easter (formerly belonging half each to ‘Sinton’ and ‘Johnson’) and Wester parts. John Chisholme was there in 1789. John Stewart was owner in the mid-19th century and Andrew Stewart later (the origin is probably Old English ‘hierde mann tun’, meaning ‘the herdsman’s farm’; it first appears as ‘Hirdmannestoun’ from about 1165, is ‘Hirdemaneston’ in 1296, ‘Hirdmanstoun’ in 1494, ‘hirdmanstoun’ in 1494/5, ‘Hirdmanstoune’ and ‘hirdmanstoun’ in 1502, ‘Hyrdmanstoun’ in 1510, ‘Hirdmanstoun’ in 1536, ‘Hirdmanstoun’ in 1563, ‘Hyrdmestoun’ in 1580 and 1581 and ‘Hermieston’ in 1797; it is still ‘Hermiston’ on Gordon’s c. 1650 map and ‘Herdistoun’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map, but ‘Easter Hermiston’ and ‘Wester Hermiston’ are on Ainslie’s 1773 map).

Hermiston (her-mee-stin) n. Alexander (12th/13th C.) recorded as ‘Alex’ de hirdmanestoun’ when he was witness to a grant by Hugh de Normanville to Melrose Abbey in the period 1200–02. He is also listed as ‘Alex’ de Hirmannist’ in the period 1214–49, when he witnessed the sale of lands in West Lilliesleaf to Melrose Abbey. Alexander (13th C.) recorded as ‘Alisaundre de Hirdemaneston’ in Roxburghshire in 1296 when he swore fealty to Edward I in 1296.
Hermiston Burn

He was ‘Alexander of Hirdmanstone’ when he was on a jury in 1305. His lands were probably Hermiston in Lilliesleaf Parish, and it seems likely he was a descendant of the earlier Alexander.

Hermiston Burn (her-mee-stin-burn) n. stream that flows to the east of Satchells and the west of Hermiston farm, running northward to join the Ale Water.

Hermitage (her-mi’-cej, her-mi-täj, ern-tij) n. popular name for Hermitage Castle and also the name of the nearby hamlet at the confluence of the Whitrope Burn with the Hermitage Water. The local pronunciation was formerly ‘Erntage’. There was once a schoolhouse here, now a craft shop. The farm around the Castle was owned by William Elliot in 1632. Walter Herd was tenant in 1694, with William Armstrong also recorded there. To the east of the Castle there are the ruins of a farmstead, which is depicted on a 1718 estate plan, as well as several turf-walled stock enclosures. In the 1718 survey the farm covered 548 acres, bounded by Millburnholm, Toftholm, Greyestonehaugh, Dinlees and Rispylaw, with a part on the south side of the Hermitage Water. Walter Elliot is recorded as farmer there in 1794–97, Robert Elliot in 1841 and 1851, and Walter Elliot in 1861. Also in the area around Green Sike there are remains of boundary dykes, rig lines and a mill-lade running to the north of the farm buildings. A charter of 1508 refers to the castle, fortalice and manor of Hermitage – ‘...Rush from brown ruins, scarr’d with age, That frown o’er haunted Hermitage: Where, long by spells mysterious bound, They pace their round, with lifeless smile, And shake, with restless foot, the guilty pile, Till sink the mouldering towers beneath the burden’d ground’ [JL] – ‘Hermitage wistfully lifts her head, Where the mists on the lone moors fall: Ferniehurst, lulled by the crooning of Jed, Lies wrapped in her sylvan shawl’ [WL] (the origin of the name is probably via the Old French ‘ermitage’, there being a local tradition that a hermit’s cell existed here before the castle was built; the name dates back to at least the mid-14th century, with the castle first referred to in 1244; it is ‘Terram vocatum l’Ermytage’ in 1352, ‘Hermitiaig’ and ‘Hermitagis’ in 1508, ‘Armytage’ in about 1540, ‘Armytage’ in 1583, ‘Armetage’ in 1594 and 1632 and ‘Armitage’ in 1653).

Hermitage Brig (her-mi’-cej-brig) n. two-arched road bridge over the Hermitage Water, built by Smith of Darnick for the Duke of Buccleuch in 1832.

Hermitage Briggend (her-mi’-cej-brig-end) n. Hermitage Bridgend, cottages near Hermitage Bridge. In 1861 the families of blacksmith Walter Beattie and shepherd Peter Robson were there.

Hermitage Castle (her-mi’-cej-law-sul) n. one of the best preserved strongholds in the Borders, located on the Hermitage Water north of Newcastleton. Replacing an earlier castle at Castleton, it was probably originally built by Sir Nicholas de Soulis around 1240 (the first record of it is 1244), and was held by that family until about 1320. However, during the invasion of Scotland by Edward I the castle was held by Sir Simon Lindsay, who was directed to repair ‘the walls, houses, and others in said castle’. It has also been suggested that it was first built by the Comyns, or even by the earlier Bolbeck family, but this is less clear. The oldest surviving parts date from the early-to-mid 14th century. There were 4 main building periods, the current shape taking form in the 3rd period, around 1400, with the final major phase being the oblong wing on the south-west corner, and a continuous wooden hoarding below the battlements. The blocking up of all but the southern entrance happened later. It was retaken from the English by Sir William Douglas (the Knight of Liddesdale) in 1338, and probably had the corner towers built soon after. Douglas had Ramsay starved to death there in 1342 after capturing him in Hawick. The Castle was taken by the English after the Battle of Durham in 1346, but was recovered in the late 1350s. It was further extended by the Douglas in the 14th and 15th centuries. The large 13 × 22 m keep has been in existence since about 1388. Small square towers may have been added about 1400 and the extra wing and wooden superstructure about a century later. The Castle also has extensive fortified earthworks, including a large enclosure to the west and north, which may be the remains of a settlement. To the west the defences are bounded by Lady’s Sike and to the east by Castle Sike (streams that have been partly diverted). An old wall further out called the White Dyke was probably the boundary of the deer park. The castle passed from the Black Douglas to the Red Douglases, although with complications because the Lord of Liddesdale sometimes appointed a separate Keeper of Hermitage. It was later given to the Hepburns of Bothwell (exchanged by Patrick Hepburn in 1492 for Bothwell Castle on the Clyde). The castle appears to have played little role during the troubling times of the early 16th century, but Boswell continued to govern it. Hence Mary Queen of Scots famous ride there to visit the wounded Earl of Bothwell in 1566. Bothwell's estates were forfeited to the Crown in 1567, although granted to his nephew Francis Stewart in 1587, from whom they passed to his stepson, Walter Scott of Buccleuch, and remained with the Scotts of Buccleuch for more than 3 centuries. It is last referred to as an active castle in 1612, when 'Roger Scott, capitaine of the Airmitage' is recorded in a Hawick court case. 'The castell, toure, and fortalice of Hermitage with friere forest and regalitie thairof' are listed among the possessions of the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1653, 1661 and 1663. Abandoned in the middle of the 17th century, it is shown in an 1802 sketch by Williams, another by H. Weber and a third by William Scott from Newcastle. In order to preserve the stonework, it was much restored around 1820 by the Duke of Buccleuch, although it is uncertain how much this changed the castle's appearance. It was taken over by Historic Scotland in 1930. Several artefacts have been found here, including a silver ring with a Douglas heart, which was worn by Sir Walter Scott. There is a tradition of a gold ring being unearthed by a mole, suggested to be the lost signet ring of Mary, Queen of Scots; another story says the gold ring bore the words 'In Broderlie Amite'. There have been a few Common Riding Ride-outs to here, probably being the longest ride. Some of the old iron work is in the Museum (e.g. a door handle, donated in 1900, a door key and an old mini-cannon). As well as the adjacent chapel, there are many surrounding earthworks and the defensive ditches of the Castle, suggestive of field systems and enclosures. Since its ruin the castle has been a place of mystery and dark legend. It was said by locals to have sunk into the ground due to the weight of the guilt of the blood spilled there, with 30 feet being toppled, 30 feet sinking down, and 30 feet left standing. Stories of the deeds of Souls and other former residents also abound – 'As we gaze on its massive walls and tread its courts, what a host of apparitions leave their enchanted stations in the cells of memory, and pass in motley array before the mental vision!' [JAHM], 'The Castle of Hermitage, mould'ring and grey, Where Souls and Douglas held merciless sway' [DA]. 'I'll keek throwe the mist to an age O' glamourie roun' Hermitage' [WL] (it is 'Armetage', 'Armitage', 'Ermitage', 'Ermtag', 'Ermtage', 'Ermytage', etc. in the 14th to 16th centuries, e.g. 'Castell of the Ermitage' in 1469/70, 'castruo de Hermitaigh' in 1508, 'castrum de Armitage' in 1541, 'Harmytage Castle' in 1584 and 'castro de Armitage' in 1634).
Heron Viaduct

in the 1850s and 60s. Agnes Grieve was running a grocer’s shop in the schoolhouse in 1861. The building is now a private house and now shop. The Borders Archive has registers for 1873–1952 and log books for 1937–52.

Heron Viaduct (her-mi'-eej-vI-a-dukt) n. former railway viaduct across the Hermitage Water, just before it joins the Liddel Water. It has been demolished.

Heron Witter (her-mi'-eej-wi'-ur) n. minor river that passes near Hermitage Castle to join the Liddel Water. ‘Cout o Kielder’ is supposed to have been drowned in a pool of the river near the Castle around 1290. It may originally have been called the ‘Merchingburn’ with its name changed to that of the Castle in the mid-13th century (it appears to be incorrectly labelled ‘Riddall flu.’, presumably in confusion with the ‘Liddel’, on Sandison’s c.1590 map).

Hermless (herm-lis) adj. harmless – ‘Shairly mush-huntin is yin o the maist hermless sports gaun’ [DH].

Herns (hernz) n., pl., arch. brains – ‘. . . E’en sail amang the sleepless sterns, Aye, steal their rays, to grace yer herns Wi’ heavenly light’ [JoHa], ‘Wui breezes threth the Border hills ti blaw away the ooder an the speeder-wobs threth a body’s herns’ [ECS], ‘. . . an rowl owre an owre amang ma herns are fit ti gar aa the trauchles an the fashes gan’ [ECS].

Hernshiels (hern-sheelz) n. former farmstead near Greenshiels in Castleton Parish.

Heron (he-rin) n. Sir George of Chipchase (d.1575) son of Sir John. He was Keeper of Tynedale and Redesdale. In 1542 he led a group of Tynedale and Redesdale men in an attack on the Teviot, where they burned Abbotrule and Harwood, taking 3 prisoners, 140 head of cattle, 240 sheep and 30 horses. In the same year, he and 3 of his brothers led a raid into Teviotdale, burning Dolphinston and taking cattle and 11 prisoners. He was accused of March treason in 1543 (perhaps to do with ransoming prisoners). He and Sir John Forster (the English Warden of the Middle March) supported the Regent Moray on attacks on Liddesdale in 1569. He was probably the ‘Sir John Hinrome of Shipsyde house’ who is named in the manuscript version of the ballad ‘The Raid of the Reidswire’. He was killed in the fray in July 1575. Robert Fraser of Overton was accused by John Edmonson of that Ilk of stealing 3 horses belonging to him; but in 1575 a number of local men gave evidence that Fraser was not guilty. James (18th/19th C.) farmer at Honeytown and other farms in Cavers Parish, recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He owned 6 horses at that time and his surname is recorded as ‘Herron’. Sir John of Chipchase (d.1562) son of John, he was Keeper of Tynedale and Redesdale. In 1541 he led a group of Tynedale men on a retaliatory raid into Liddesdale, burning Thoreshope, as well as 13 other houses. He wrote that he was concerned about starting a deadly feud if reprisals were taken in Liddesdale and that he feared betrayal by the Tynedale and Redesdale men. He led other raids into Scotland in 1542, but was taken prisoner by a servant of the Laird of Edmonson and held near Edinburgh. He and his son George were accused of ‘March treason’ (i.e. collaborating with the Scots) in 1543, but were not convicted. He married Jane daughter of Sir Nicholas Ridley. He was succeeded by his son Sir George. Another son, Roger, was taken prisoner by the Elliots and Croziers of Liddesdale in 1556.

Heronhaa (her-in-haw) n. Heronhall, a cottage near Southfield that was the birthplace of Sir Andrew Smith. It was located about 100 m to the east of the road south through Hawick’s Common, after the turn-off for Southfield and just before the Troutlawford. Although nothing can now be seen of the building, it was excavated by the Archaeological Society in 1968 and a commemorative cairn built by the roadside (on the opposite side) to mark it. In 1856 it was recorded that about 50 years earlier a large cairn was removed from here, requiring 600 cart-loads of stones, and in which a ‘cist-vaen’ with bones of a ‘primeval giant’ and a piece of flint were found; it is unclear if this is the same as the cairn removed from the Auld Caa Knowe at about the same time.

Heron Hill (her-in-hil) n. hilly area south of Weensland, where the right of way from Orchard Road to Ormiston Parkhead passes. It has been suggested that herons may have been bred here for use as prey in falconry. It reaches a height of 239 m (it is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Heronhill Crescent (her-in-hil-kre-fin) n. loop on the grounds of the old Heronhill estate, built in 1948. Some of the early concrete Cruden-type buildings were rebuilt in 1983.
Heronhill Hoose

Heronhill Hoose (her-in-hil-hoos) n. house and estate off Weensland Road, built in 1864/5 for George Wilson, first provost of Hawick, and prominent mill owner. The Italianate design was by Glasgow-based architect John T. Rochead. The land had previously been part of the farm of Orchard. James Wilson was recorded there in 1868 and the land was valued at £57 in about 1874. The house was later the town residence of Robert Noble of Borthwickbrae. During and after WWII it was used as a private girls school, called St. Helens. It also saw use by knitwear companies Ann Howard, Lyle & Scott and John Spencer, after modern extensions on the ground floor. Along with the surrounding estate, it was purchased by the Council for development after the War. Most of the land was cleared and bungalows built there. The house itself was in poor condition for some time and the upper floor was destroyed in a fire. The rest of the building survived for many years, but was demolished in 2005. Now only the Gate Lodge on Weensland Road survives.

Heronhill Lodge (her-in-hil-luj) n. gatehouse for the former villa at Heronhill. It is situated at 152 Weensland Road. It was built in 1865 to designs by Jont Thomas Rochead, at the same time as the main house, with an extension in the mid-20th century. It is a single-storey, octagonal plan lodge house, built in an Italianate style, with prominent ornamental stacks. It is a grade C listed building.

Heronhill Pond (her-in-hil-pönd) n. name of the pond on the hill behind Heronhill House, reputedly so-called because of the herons that used to nest there. This was formerly a wetland, which was dammed to create a pond for the villa built there.

Heronhill Schuil (her-in-hil-skil) n. private school based at Heronhill House in the mid- to late 20th century. It was moved from St. Helen’s, Bridge of Allan.

Heronhill Terrace (her-in-hil-te-ris) n. housing built in 1866, previously called part of Weensland Road, renamed in 1875 after Heronhill House. The area was demolished and grassed over in 1966.

Heron-Maxwell (he-rin-maks-wul, -wel) n. Edward of Teviotbank (1821–90) youngest child of Sir John Heron-Maxwell of Springkell in Dumfriesshire. He spent time in Ceylon. In 1847 he married Elizabeth Ellen, only daughter of Col. William Henry Stopford-Blair of Penninghame, Wigtownshire. He may have adopted the surname ‘Heron-Maxwell-Blair’ when he succeeded to the lands of his father-in-law. He purchased Teviot Bank in 1860, and thereafter lived in Roxburghshire. He was recorded there in a directory of 1868. He was one of the original members of the Border Mounted Rifles and was a Justice of the Peace in Roxburghshire. He was also a Deputy-Lieutenant of Dumfriesshire. He is listed as owner of the lands of Knowe in Minto Parish in about 1874. His children included: John Shaw; Capt. William Henry Stopford; Elizabeth Ellen; Mira; and Louisa Susan Marlborough. John Shaw of Teviot Bank (1850–99) eldest son of Edward. He served with the 14th Hussars and retired in 1880. He became a member of the Jedforest Club in 1889. He was succeeded by his brother William H.S.

herons (he-rin-, hern-shoo, -shewch) n., arch. a heron – ‘The hernseugh fisht the swawin’ pule In blew days and grey, And niver cam’ a thing ava To gliff the lad away’ [DH] (there are spelling variants cf. huirn).

Heron Wud (he-rin-wud) n. wood in the Rule valley, just south of the location of Wells house. There is an earthwork about 360 ft south of the house, in the north-west part of the wood, with a stream running through it. There are at least 3 banks associated with the structure, but its full size is hard to tell because of cultivation.

the Hero o Quebec (thu-hee-rö-ö-kwe-bek) n. local nickname for Henry Scott.

the Hero’s Grave (thu-hee-röz-grav) n. former name for the Caa Knowe, also called ‘the Giant’s Grave’. A cairn long stood there, being removed about 1809 or 1811. A crude stone coffin was said to have been unearthed, about 6 to 8 feet from the surface. As described in the New Statistical Account in 1839 this enclosed ‘a human skull, with several bones of more than ordinary size’. Hence it was perhaps the burial mound of some ancient chieftain, and selected as the site of the calling of the Burgess Roll for this reason. On the other hand, it may have been simply one example of a Bronze Age burial cist and associated mound, which happened to be near the southern extremity of the Common. A bronze spearhead found near here was once in the Museum, but may have been lost. ‘26 artefacts of flint and other forms of chalcedony possibly found near the Giant’s Grave on Southfield farm’ were also once catalogued in the Museum’s collection (see also the Auld Caa Knowe).

herp (herp) v. to harp, play the harp, dwell on – ‘stop herpin on aboot eet, an A might gie yin’, Herr Cut

Herrings the Herriers (Herr Cut hersel)

Herring (12th/13th C.) daughter of ‘Adam Harang of Meinichoch’, which is probably Minto. In the reign of Alexander II she granted ‘to God, St. Mary, St. Benedict and the port of Melrose, for the sustenance of poor pilgrims arriving there . . . that toft in the town of Borthwick next the house of Hugh Selechirch, and those 2 1/2 acres of land and meadow in the territory of Borthwick, which, in her widowhood, she had given to Robert Poydras for his homage and service, remitting the annual rent Robert had been in the habit of paying, to wit – a pair of white gloves.’ Whether she held these lands through her dead husband or from her own family is unclear, and nothing else is known about her. The date is also unknown, but probably in the period 1230–60. It seems likely that this is the Borthwick near Hawick rather than the one in Mid-Lothian.

Herriot (he-ree-i’) n. John (b.1820/1) from Greenlaw, he was innkeeper at the Black Bull on the Sandbed. He was there in 1851, and listed as vintner there in Slater’s 1852 directory. His wife was Euphemia, and their children included Euphemia and John. By 1861 his wife was a widow, listed herself as innkeeper of the Black Bull (see also Heriot).

the Herth Tax (thu-herth-tawks) n. tax imposed on fireplaces in 1690 and collected over the subsequent years. The amount charged was 14 shillings per hearth (a hefty sum for the less well-off) and was levied to support the army. Because it was based on fireplaces in houses, it was essentially a tax on family units. The poor did not have to pay (but were in some cases listed by name), as well as hospitals being exempt. The list of those responsible for the tax, drawn up in Roxburghshire in 1694 (although probably representing the state of the parishes a year or so earlier), is an invaluable record of the residents in the county at that time. It is the closest thing we have to a census at the end of the 17th century.

hert-hungry (her`-hung-u-ree) adj., arch. ravenous, famished – ‘No that A was hert-hungry nih, aether; or thance A micht heh been gaun pookin ‘cheese-an-breed’ off the hedges ti nattle at’ [ECS], ‘A’m fair heart-hungry; A could eat the deil an’ sup his mother!’ [GW].

hertit (her`-tee’, her`-ti`) pp., adj. hearted, usually in compound adjectives – ‘hei’s awfi chicken-hertit him’, ‘A feelin-hertet yallah-yorle ... ’ [ECS], ‘...Ma warm-hertet Treasure, O, wad A lo’e yow mair’ [WFC], ‘Hei was a kind-hertet sowl, weel likeet in the toon, an prood o’ bein a guit-terblade’ [BW1978], arch. ‘ti be hertit’ is to be winded or knocked out by a blow (also spelled ‘hertet’ and ‘hertet’).

the Hert o Hawick (thu-her`-ô-hIk) n. the Heart of Hawick Townscape Heritage Initiative, an urban regeneration project for the centre of Hawick in the early years of the 21st century, partly funded by the Heritage Lottery Fund. Projects included redevelopment of Tower Mills, the construction of the James Thomson Bridge and development of the area around Drumlanrig’s Tower and the old Exchange Buildings – ‘We are the heart of Hawick, We are the heart of Hawick, It’s in our body, it’s in our soul, These are feel-ings we can’t control, ‘Cos we are the heart of Hawick’ [GLG].

Herts o Liddesdale (herts-ô-li-diz-dâl) n. football club established in Newcastleton in 1880. For their 125th anniversary they arranged a match with Heart of Midlothian. The club ceased playing in 2015, but resumed in 2021.

hertsome (her`-, hert-sum) adj., arch., poet. heart-warming, encouraging, cheerful, hearty – ‘I’m proud to think yer a credit To the guides ye’ve had sae lang – That cheered yer journey through life Wi’ mony a hertsome sang’ [FL], ‘I took my gate in the cool nicht air, And quaelty breathed oat a hertsome prayer ... ’ [WL].

hes (hes) n., arch. a harvest – ‘The hervest sun shines through the trees An’ lichtens the stooks an’ the stan’in corn . . . ’ [FGS], . . . The hervest’s won and the feck haec had their fill’ [WL], the time of harvest – ‘A fine herest monrin’ saw me take the coach frae Auld Reekie . . . ’ [JEDM], n. arch.

Hesseldale (he-sul-dai) n. former lands in Liddesdale, listed on the 1541 rental roll, valued at 12 shillings and tenanted by John Nixon. The precise location is unclear, but it is listed among other lands that are in the general area of Larriston.

Hessel’s Close (he-sul-klos) n. former name for a passageway at 25 High Street, named for the baker and whip-makers there.

hessel (he-sel), hesnel (he-s-nel) contr. hasn’t, has not – ‘he hesnel got a leg ti stand on’ (hasnel is also occasionally used).

Hessel (he-sel) n. Charles (1788–1859) born in England, he was a whip and thong-maker of the High Street, as well as a baker. He was recorded on the High Street in Pigot’s 1837 directory. In 1841 he was at about No. 25. In 1851 he was listed as a whip-maker and master baker, employing 4 men and 2 boys. He was also listed as both baker and whip-maker in Slater’s 1852 directory. He was a member of Allars Kirk and served as Preses of the Relief Kirk Session. He married Isabel (or Isabella) Kennedy, daughter of Margaret (from Cavers): she died in Stirling in 1873.

Their children included: Thomas (b.1822); Margaret (b.1823), who probably died young; James (b.1825), who married Elizabeth Milligan in 1848; Charles (b.1827), who married Margaret Kersel in 1853; Elizabeth (b.1829), who married John Todd in 1849; Francis Ralph Oliver (b.1832); John Harrison (b.1834); and William Dickson (b.1839). Members of his family later moved to Stirling.

Charles (1827–60) son of Charles, the whip-maker. He was a tinsmith in Hawick. In 1853 he married Margaret (c.1826–96), daughter of Adam Kersel. Their children were: Isabella, who married James Miles; Elizabeth, who married Charles Hogg; and Charles (b.1859), who died in infancy. Charles (b.1851/2) son of baker James, and grandson of Charles the whip-maker. He was probably the Common Riding ‘Sang Singer’, being recorded leading the singing of the ‘Old Song’ in 1881. He was probably the Charles from Hawick recorded winning a sack race for teenagers at the 1869 Border Games. James (b.1825/6) baker in Hawick. In 1861 he was a journeyman baker living in a back house at 29 High Street. He married Elizabeth Milligan and their children included Margaret (b.c.1850) and Charles (b.c.1852). John (b.1833/4) secretary of the Artisans Reading Room on Market Place, according to Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1851 he was a writer’s apprentice clerk, living with his brother-in-law John Todd, at Lynnwood (also spelled ‘Hassell’, ‘Hazell’ and ‘Hessell’; cf. Haswell).

hesselton (he-sel-ton) adv. – ‘is that hes shirt ee’ve on?’ (also eis and heis).

hesni (hez-, hes-ni) contr. hasn’t, has not – ‘he hesni got a leg ti stand on’ (hasni is also occasionally used).

Hesseldale (he-sul-dai) n. former lands in Liddesdale, listed on the 1541 rental roll, valued at 12 shillings and tenanted by John Nixon. The precise location is unclear, but it is listed among other lands that are in the general area of Larriston.

Hessel’s Close (he-sul-klos) n. former name for a passageway at 25 High Street, named for the baker and whip-makers there.

hessen (he-zin, he-sin) contr. hasn’t, has not (short form of hesn’t).

hesn’t (he-zin’) contr. hasn’t, has not – ‘she hesn’t she!’ (sometimes shortened to hessen; this form is used interrogatively and occurs before the noun, cf. hesni).

hest (hest) v., poet. hast – ‘..behald, thou art fair; thou hast dows’ eyne’ [HSR], ‘..for thou hest liftet me up, an’ hestna made mine enimies til rejoyce over me’ [HSR].

hes’t (hest) contr. has it – ‘hes’t the same colour is the other yin?’.

het see hit

heth (heth) v., poet. hath – ‘For thou artna ane God that heth pleusur in wicketness’ [HSR], ‘An’ he heth putten an new sang intill my mouth …’ [HSR].

hetter (he’ur) adj., arch. hotter – ‘…Mind and gie him nae hetter kail Than ye can sup yersel’ [FL].

het up (he’-up) adv. heated up, worked up – ‘deh git si het up aboot eet’.

heuch (hewch, chewch) n., arch. a precipitous slope, steep hill, bank, crag, precipice – ‘…And at the brae aboon the heuch The clerk sat down to ca’ the rows’ [CPM], ‘The lands, baith hill and heuch Belang a’ to the guid Buccleuch’ [HSR], ‘…And we hurried ower haugh and heuch Wi’ the pick o’ the country side’ [TK] (also written ‘heugh’; note the variation in the pronunciation of the beginning consonant; the word is found in several local placenames, e.g. Cockerheugh, Heuchhoose, Pipewellheugh, Reidheugh and Roughheugh).

Heuchhoose (hewch-hoos) n. Heuchhose, former lands in the Liddel valley, roughly opposite Dinlabyre, near the modern Steele Road. It is probably the place listed as ‘Hoghouse’, with a value of 15 shillings, on a rental roll of Liddesdale around 1376. It was a seat of a branch of the Elliots in the early 16th century. In 1541 the tenant was William Elliot, and it was still valued at 15 shillings. Martin Elliot of Heuchhouse was among the thieves captured at Hawick in 1567 and drowned. ‘Johnne Elliot’ of Heuchhouse is recorded in 1570, ‘Rid Marteine of the Heuchhous’ is recorded in 1579/80, Hob Elliot of Heuchhouse in 1583, Martin and John Elliot ‘of the Hewghewhose’ in 1584, John Elliot in 1586, Will Elliott ‘of the Hewghewhose’ in 1590 and ‘Johne Elliot of the Heuchhous’ in 1611. Over Heuchhouse was possessed by Gavin Elliot in 1632. John Gray was farmer there in 1797 (it is ‘Heuchous’ in 1516, 1541 and 1567, ‘Heuchhous’ in 1576/7, ‘Heughhouse’ in 1581, ‘Haugh-house’ in the 1580s, ‘Heuchous’ in 1586, ‘Hewghhouse’ in 1595 and ‘Hookhouse’ in 1797).

Heuchhoosehill (hewch-hoos-hil) n. lands in Liddesdale, near to Heuchhouse on the opposite bank of the Liddel from Dinlabyre. It is valued at 15 shillings in 1541 and tenanted by John ‘Kellee’ and John Nixon. It is probably the ‘Heuchhousbrae’ inherited by William Elliot of Dinlabyre in 1667 (and apparently again in 1691 as ‘Houghousebrae’) from his great-grandfather William of Hartsgarth. It is possible this is the same as the modern Hews Hill (it is ‘Heuchhoushill’ in 1541; ‘Heuchkoushil’ appears on Blaeu’s c.1651 map, between Brighouse and Tailleycleuch).

Heugh Heid (hewch-heed) n. former farmstead in southern Liddesdale, just south of Tinnis Burn, to the west of Under Burnmouth. It is sometimes also recorded as ‘Haughhead’. Archibald and James Armstrong were there in 1697 when they were summoned by the Kirk Session to answer charges of not observing the Sabbath. Archibald Armstrong was tenant farmer until about 1757. There were Kyles there in 1794 and 1797. According to William Scott (in the 1821 ‘Beauties of the Border’) the farm stood on a rocky precipice, and the farmer there lost his stock to a bad winter, tumbling them off a high rock, after which he told a cattle-dealer that the had ‘met with a Mr. Linn, who has taken all I had at one price’ (it is marked ‘Heughhead’ on Stobie’s 1770 map and is shown on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map; it is listed as ‘Heugheads’ in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls).

Hewisbridge  see Hewbsbridge

Hewitson  (hew-it-sin) n. Agnes ‘Nancy Whutson’, ‘Auld Nancy’ (1810/1-88) familiar sight in Hawick of the mid-19th century, along with her donkey ‘Jess’. She was daughter of John, a mole-catcher, and Agnes Reid. A resident of Wilton, she was unmarried and worked much of her life as a coal carter. With her little cart she supplied coal to the working classes in small loads. Ill health forced her to give up her trade a few years before her death. George (17th C.) resident at Side in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. His surname is written ‘Houtsone’. John (b.c.1780) born in England, he was a mole-catcher in Wilton, living at Dowmont. He married Agnes (or Jane), sister of Wull Reid, bedlar at Wilton. His children included: Agnes was later known as ‘Auld Nancy’; Jane; Archibald, who worked as a Skinner; and John. John (b.1812/3) born in Kirkton Parish, he was educated in Wilton School. He became schoolmaster at Clarilaw in about 1839. He is listed as teacher at Clarilaw among heads of households in 1840 and 1841 and also on the 1841 census. By 1851 he had moved to be schoolmaster at Hadden in Sprouston Parish. His wife was Martha and their children included Eliza, William, Janet O. and Martha. Manie (17th C.) listed among the poor living at Hassendean on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Her surname was written ‘Houtsone’.

Robert (17th C.) recorded as ‘Howitson’ in 1657, when he was ordained to pay Hawick schoolmaster for past wages ‘for teaching of his sons in the schole several quarters byegane’. He must have been a relatively prominent man in the Parish, to be able to afford such fees (see also Howison and Whutson).

Hewitt  (hew-i') n. Rev. George Burrill (20th C.) attended Cheshunt College, he became minister at Elmwood Avenue, Warrington in 1939. He was minister of the Hawick Congregational Kirk from 1942. He wrote ‘1848–1948 – Hawick Congregational Church – Centenary Commemoration’ in 1948.

Hewsbridge  (hevs-brij) n. cottages and area around a bridge over the Liddel Water just to the south of Steeleroad-end. A new bridge was built there in the late 19th century, to replace the dangerous older one. The area to the west of the river is called Hews Hill or Hewis Hill and could be associated with the older ‘Heuchhouse’. It is possible this is the place recorded in 1632 as ‘Hoillis in the gait with the pertinents perteaning to Robert Ellot of Dinlaybe’. Robert Douglas was farmer at ‘Huisbridgend’ in 1851 and William Minto was blacksmith there in the 1860s (also ‘Hewisbridge’, it is ‘Hewessbridge’ in 1821).

Hewson  (hew-sin) n. Rev. J. (19th C.) 3rd official pastor of Hawick Baptist Kirk. He served for the years 1871–74. He is probably the Mr. Hewson who served at Coatbridge 1875–78.

Hexham  (heks-um) n. town in Tynedale in Northumberland with a nearby Priory. It once constituted its own shire and was an important administrative centre in the English Middle March. The Moothall is the ancient palace of the Hexham Abbey

Bishops of Hexham, first built around 1100, rebuilt in the 14th century. The town also contains the Border History Museum. It was formerly connected with Hawick (via Riccarton) through the Border Counties Railway Line. It was a band of men from this area who were ambushed at Hornshole in 1514. Population 11,300. The town was formerly used in exclamations, such as ‘Gang ti Hexham!’ which meant the same as go to blazes.

Hexham Abbey (hek-sum-aw-bee) n. Abbey at Hexham, the Priory of St. Andrew, dating mainly from about 1170–1250, being built on a site that held a church since 674. It is now the Parish Church of St. Andrew, with ancient arms being a yellow saltire on a blue background. Lord Dacre was Bailiff of Hexham and some of his men were known to be involved in raids on the Scottish Borderland land in 1514. It is believed it was their flag that was captured at Hornshole. The Hawick Provost took part in the consecration of the new nave of Hexham Priory in 1908, with the Hawick Flag loaned for the procession (and of which there is a photograph). A copy of the Hawick flag was presented to Hexham Abbey by the Callant’s Club in 1914, and a replacement presented by the Provost in 1972 – ‘And I watch the Hawick flag was presented to Hexham Abbey (and of which there is a photograph). A copy of the flag loaned for the procession (and of which there is a photograph).’

Hexham-birnie (heks-um-bir-nee) n. a very remote place, ‘Hei leev’d in Hexham-birnie’ was part of a once popular rhyme (cf. ti Hexham).

Hextilda (heks-til-da) n. (12th C.) daughter of Bethoc and Uchtred FitzWaldeve. She was grand-daughter of King Donald III. Through her mother she inherited the Barony of Bedrule, among other lands. She married Malcolm, 2nd Earl of Atholl and was thereafter known as Countess of Atholl. In about 1145 she secondly married Richard Comyn, Earl of Buchan. Her son William inherited the Barony of Bedrule. Note that ‘Huwe de Hextildespeh’, from Roxburghshire, signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296, and may have been owner of lands named after her. In the 1150s her husband Richard Comyn gifted the Church of West Linton to Kelso Abbey; there she is listed as Countess of Atholl, with her son Odinel Comyn and Roger, Parson of Rule as witnesses. In about 1170 she gave her consent to a gift of land in West Lothian and in the mid-1180s witnessed the gift of a church in Perthshire.

hey (hi) v., arch. to hie, hasten – ‘She hey’d alang be burn an’ brac’ [GW], ‘The nowt hey’d oot owre the fell’ [GW].

hey-how see heigh-howe

Heylands (hi-lindz) n. fomer name for lands in upper Liddesdale, recorded on a rental roll of c.1376, in the area then known as Ernildon. The lands are recorded as ‘Heylandys’, with a value of 15 shillings.

hey-ma-nannie (hi-ma-naw-nee) n., arch. a very quick thing, especially in the phrase ‘Hei ran off like hey-ma-nannie’.

Heysike (hi-sik) n. Haysike, a farm and cluster of houses on the side road off the A7 about 3 miles south of Hawick. It takes its name from the stream that joins the Teviot near there – ‘So for toonty fowre year horse-drawn traps wad clim Heysike, the Flex and the Nipknowes, bringin teams frae neebourin clubs . . .’ [IW] (‘Hey’ here is probably ‘high’, as in ‘Highchesters’ and the nearby ‘Haycorse’ and ‘Hayknowe’).

Hey Sike (hi-sik) n. stream running into the Teviot, from the east, at Haysike. The head of the stream lies on the boundary of the Common – ‘. . .from whence the march runs eastward along the march with Alton Crofts to the march with Gowdieknowes at the Hay Syke head, and thence east by the march dyke betwixt Gowdieknowes and the Common to the march with Crumhaugh’ [C&L1767] (also written ‘Hay Sike’ and ‘Hay Syke’).

Hey Sike (hi-sik) n. Hay Sike, small stream that forms part of the headwaters of the Rankle Burn, to the west of Wolfcleuchhead. It once formed part of the distant boundary of Roberton Parish (it is marked ‘Haysike’ on Ainslie’s 1773 map).

Heysike Hoose (hi-sik-hoos) n. large house at Haysike.

Hietreis see Hightreis

Higgins (hi-ginz) n. Fr. Peter (?-?) priest at S.S. Mary & David’s 1956–86. He was instrumental in founding the new chapel at Burnfoot, holding evening services there. He retired in 1986.

Higgins Phill (hi-ginz-fil) n. local nickname, probably of the 19th century – ‘Eppy Sootie and Wullie Pairk, Geordie the Buck and Higgins Phill, Jamie Nichol the Hawick band clarck, The Duddy Laird and Shallow Bill’ [HI].

Higgs (higz) n. Sir John (1923–86) studied agriculture at Cambridge University and went on to be a lecturer at Reading and Fellow in Oxford. He was President of the British Agricultural History Society and Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries. He purchased the farm of Arkleton in Ewesdale and in 1977 established the Arkleton Trust to promote agriculture and rural development.

Highcheste see Highchesters

Highchesters (hI-, hi, hâ-ches-turz) n. farm along the Borthwick, opposite Todshawhaugh. The earliest known resident was ‘Bellit’ Andrew Turnbull in 1503. It was afterwards the seat of the Scotts of Highcheste, who are the direct ancestors of the Scotts of Harden and was sometimes used as the dower house for Harden. In the 17th century it consisted of the separate West Highchesters and East Highchesters, with the former being the main estate. There were 21 ‘communicants’ recorded there in 1650 (with surnames Adam, Allan, Brash, Brown, Cowan, Gavin, Gledstains, Heatlie, Napier, Noble, Renwick, Riddell, Robson, Scott, White and Wilson). The lands were transferred from Wilton Parish to Robertson in 1690. There were 4 separate households listed there in 1694. There are records of 1700–04 of a dispute over ‘Haychester’s loft’ in Wilton Kirk, the right of these sightings having passed to Robertson Kirk. At Robertson in 1701 the Laird’s seats consisted of 9 1/2 feet either side of the East end. The lands were associated with the Harden estates in the 18th and 19th centuries. James Learmonth, Adam Scott, Robert Neil iamd James Laidlaw were recorded there in 1710, James Robson in 1711, Robert Riddell in 1716–22, Adam Glendinning and John Wilson in 1718, Robert Scott and William Beatie in 1720, James Scott in 1721, William Scott in 1721–23, Walter Turnbull in 1723–24, William Hume in 1725, James Scott in 1727 and William Brown in 1731. George Tait was living there in 1742, Robert Scott in 1743, James Stot in 1753, Alexander Scott in 1756, Andrew Watson in 1757, James Hume in 1762, William Scott in 1763–66, David Laidlaw in 1764, John Scott in 1766, William Miller in 1781, Robert Hobkirk in 1781–86, James Hobkirk in 1784, Walter Scott in 1786, Peter Waldie in 1795–98 and James Turnbull is recorded as tenant in 1797. In 1788 the lands were recorded along with Harden and Dunbush valued at £486 6s 8d. Thomas Miller lived there in 1801, William Hart in 1821, George Hart in 1841 and Robert Brydon was farm steward there in 1868. A perforated stone disc from here is in the Museum (also written ‘Highcheste’ and formerly ‘Haychesters’, ‘hochchesters’, etc.; the name occurs in 1502 as ‘hawchesteris’, is ‘haychesteris’ in 1503, ‘Haychesteris’ in 1643, ‘Hiecheste’ and ‘Heychester’ in 1648, ‘Haycheste’ in 1650, ‘Heigh Chester’ in 1657, and ‘Haychester’
Highchesters Cottages

and ‘Haychasters’ in 1694, ‘Haychesters’ in 1710, was regularly ‘Heychester’ in the 17th century and becomes the modern form by the late 18th century; it is ‘Eister & Wester Heychesters’ on a parish map of 1650, ‘Haychester’ in de Wit’s c. 1680 map, while Blaeu’s 1654 map shows ‘W. Haychester’ and ‘E. Haychester’ and it is ‘High Chesters’ on Ainslie’s 1773 map; the origin is probably Old English ‘haga ceaster’, meaning ‘the fort with the hedge around it’, with the connection to the nearby hill-fort; ‘Underchesteris’ is recorded in 1482, perhaps suggesting that the lands were split into ‘Under’ and ‘High’ chesters at that time.

Highchesters Cottages (hl-ches-turz-ko’-ee-jeez) n. former name for cottages on the right hand side of the Borthwick road, before coming to the main farm of Highchesters (marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Highchesters Hill (hl-ches-turz-hil) n. hill of the Borthwick valley, just above Highchesters, reaching 258 m and containing a hill-fort at its southern end. It measures about 70 m by 50 m and has 3 fragmentary ramparts, with the entrance probably at the north-east. It is described as a ridge fort, and may be from the early Iron Age.

Highchesters Loft (hl-ches-turz-loft) n. gallery in the older Wilton Kirk, the sittings on which were owned by the Laird of Highchesters, i.e. Scott of Harden. After 1690 the right was transferred to the new Roberton Kirk, but disputed by Highchesters, since some of his property remained in Wilton. The former heritors of Has sendean complained in the period 1700–04 that they wanted sittings in this loft or would not pay for repairs. This old building was finally replaced in the 1760s. It is unclear whether the loft received a new popular name before its demise.

Highchesters Mill (hl-ches-turz-mill) n. mill attached to the Highchesters estate, mentioned in 1732. It was on the south side of the main road just after the Highchesters farmhouse, and once had a mill lade, connecting across the loop in the Borthwick Water there. Robert Thomson was there in 1733. John Hume was living there in 1748, John Scott was tenant there in at least 1762–72 and John Haldane was tenant in the 1850s. In 1788 and in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls it is listed along with Harden and Dunbush, as part of the estate of Walter Scott of Harden. The farmer there in 1841 was Peter Penny cuik and there were also Deans and others there (it is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

high doh (hl-dō) n. extreme agitation – ‘she was up ti high doh wi aa the weddin plans’.

Highend (hl-end) n. farm in Hob kirk Parish on the side road between Hawthornside and Forkins. The main road from Hawick to Newcastle used to pass this way before the early 1800s when the new road via Bonchester Bridge was made. It was once a small cottage containing two rooms, which was used as a public house, and had another small adjacent cottage called ‘the Highend of Langraw’. The last proprietor of the inn was Robert Douglas. Around 1778 the attached lands were combined with those of Little Gledstains and the Sneep and farmed by John Common. Mrs. Taylor was recorded there in at least 1841–68.

Higher (hl-ur) n. advanced level of the Scottish Certificate of Education, taken in a number of subjects, usually in the 5th year of High School.

Not as advanced as the English A Level, but Scottish students generally take a wider range of subjects – ‘she failed her Higher Latin, bit got threi O Grades’.

Highflicht (hl-flicht) n. former lands in Liddesdale, recorded in 1541, and presumably part of the lands of Flicht.

high heid yin (hl-heed-yin) n. a leader, person in authority, big cheese – ‘... teh Amairic where hei met a lot o’ the high heid yins at the White Hoose’ [BW].

Highhoos (hl-hoos) n. former farmstead in Liddesdale. It appears to be combined with Hightrees, Howden, Harden and Burmounth on the 1718 survey of properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch. It may correspond to the farmhouse shown on the map at about the location of Upper Larriston. It is possible this is the ‘Hie-Eshies’ inherited among other Liddesdale lands in 1667 by William Elliot of Dinlabyre, and transcribed ‘Hydashes’ in 1691.

Highland see Heeland

Highlee (hl-lee) n. former farmstead near Highlee Hill, south of Lustruther in Southdean Parish. John Oliver was tenant there in 1669 and William Oliver in 1694 (it is ‘Hielie’ in 1669 and ‘heylie’ in 1694).

Highlee Hill (hl-lee-hil) n. hill in Southdean Parish, lying to the south-west of Lustruther and east of Wolfelee, reaching a height of 307 m. The gentle peak lies in an open area of moorland, and contains the remains of an ancient settlement, perhaps Iron Age. It is about 60 m across, and has been denuded by cultivation and quarrying. There are also old sheepfolds, boundary dykes, enclosures, lazy beds and rig and furrow lines in the High Level

the area. A track across the hill towards Lustreuth may be one of the alternative routes of the Wheel Causeway.

the High Level (\textit{thu-hi-le-vul}) \textit{n.} pub at 11 Green Terrace, since at least the late 19th century, sometimes called ‘the Level’.

the High Loft (\textit{thu-hi-loft}) \textit{n.} former balcony in St. Mary’s Kirk, before it was rebuilt about 1763. It was also known as ‘the Common Loft’, and sometimes referred to as ‘the Rowly-Powly Loft’, suggesting that it was not very stable. It was one of two such lofts reached from the steepel side, the lower one being called ‘the Middle Loft’ or ‘the Steeple Loft’.

High Mangerton (\textit{hi-män-jer-tin}) \textit{n.} former name for part of what was once Mangerton farm, presumably the higher part. In the 1718 survey of Scott of Buccleuch properties it was included as part of Sorbietrees.

the High Plantin (\textit{thu-hi-plawn’-zin}) \textit{n.} popular name for a plantation near Wilton Dean, probably the one above Overhall Road, joining the high part of Whitehaugh Road. This wood contains an ancient earthwork, about 300 × 170 feet, at the south-west end of the plantation, much disturbed by quarrying.

the High Road (\textit{thu-hi-röd}) \textit{n.} popular local name for the road leading north-east out of Roberton, up the B711 and through the Borthwickbrae estate to join ‘the Low Road’ at Borthwickbrae Burnfit.

High Sate (\textit{hi-sä’}) \textit{n.} High Seat, hill between the Teviot and Borthwick valleys, between Communsden Moor and Broadlee Moss, north of Dryden Fell and south of Broadlee Loch. It reaches a height of 347 m.

the High Schuil (\textit{thu-hi-skil}) \textit{n.} Hawick High School, on the north side of Buccleuch Road, Nos. 26–28. It was originally started as the Buccleuch Public School in 1860 to replace the Grammar School, which had been founded in 1710, and merged with the parish school in 1824. The new School Board took over responsibility for it in 1872 and there were enlargements soon afterwards. After major renovations in 1908 (with designs by Joseph Blaikie) the name was changed to Buccleuch Higher Grade School, and became ‘Hawick High School’ in 1915. There was a serious fire there in 1925, with pupils being taught in church halls until the school was reopened in 1928. The architect for the new building was John Alexander Carfrae. Note that the High School was not free for everyone until about WWII. The land of Teviot Lodge was gifted to the school in 1933, with science buildings and gymnasium built there around 1960. The Extension building, the new Technical building, the Games Hall and the Dining Block were all built in the 1970s. There were extensive modernisations in the 1990s, at a cost of around £6 million, including new link corridors, Library, Music and Special Educational Needs Department. The buildings have multiplied and it is now the largest secondary school in the Scottish Borders, with about 1,000 pupils. School Inspectors’ Reports for 1915–39 are in the National Archives, as are Leaving Exam results 1940–45.

Highsideles (\textit{hi-süd-leez}) \textit{n.} possible name of a farmstead near Teviothead, near Falnash and Lainhope (marked ‘Hiesyldy’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

the High Street (\textit{thu-hi-stree’}) \textit{n.} the main public road or highway through the centre of Hawick, once forming a large fraction of the inhabited part of the town. Earlier names include the ‘public striet’, ‘the hei gate’, ‘the common gait’, ‘the King’s High Street’ and ‘the common Heigh Street’, with the modern name appearing by the end of the 18th century. The street has seen many changes, being renovated in 1715 and repaved in 1721, and having the gates removed in the latter part of the 18th century. It was repaved (along with the Howegate etc.) in the late 1780s, and many of the outside staircases were removed in 1791. In the late 18th century almost all the houses were still roofed with either thatch or turf. Lighting appeared first in the 1830s and the granite setts were only lifted in 1962. Some of the last thatched houses (roughly opposite the Town Hall, and sticking out into the pavement) were demolished in 1879. The street was made one-way in 2007. House numbering probably happened in Hawick first on the High Street, but not formally until the mid-19th century; there were no numbers given in the first census of 1841, while the numbering in the 1851 census started at the other end of the Street and without the odd/even split! The sides are normally referred to as the ‘north’ and ‘south’ sides, even although they are closer to being ‘west’ and ‘east’. In the 1537 there were 80 ‘particates’ on the south side and 48 on the north side. The north (or west) side has odd numbers, while the south (or east) side has even numbers. One of the earliest surviving buildings is the pended house at No. 51, while Nos. 24–26 are late 18th century, and parts of many early houses surely survive within the mainly 19th century buildings. The Town Hall dominates the centre of the Street, built 1884–86 to replace an earlier ‘Town House’ and even earlier Tolbooth. The centre of the street is the foot of the Cross Wynd where the Market Cross stood until 1762. The bulk of the buildings date from the second half of the 19th century, with several of the particularly elaborate ones being originally built to be banks. Prominent unifying design features are the eaves course linking the upper windows, as well as the continuous hoodmoulds above the first floor windows: the original designer of these features is unknown. The High Street remains the focus for shopping and other activity in the town, and is usually referred to simply as ‘the Street’. A bronze ring-brooch from around 1400 was found in 1956 during building work at No. 48. Many of the buildings on the High Street are listed (it is ‘Heigh Street of Hawicke’ in 1688).

High Tofts (hi-tofts) n. former name for Upper Tofts.

High Tofts Quarry (hi-tofts-kwa-ree) n. former quarry near the farm of Upper Tofts. It was around here that geologist David Milne-Home used to illustrate his theory of lava filling up a crack in the rock, to explain the basaltic dyke crossing part of Roxburghshire.

Hightreis (hi-trëz) n. Hightrees, former name for lands in Liddesdale, connected with Mangerston estate. They are listed on a rental roll of c.1376 as ‘Hetryes’ associated with Mangerton, with a value of 18 shillings, and also as ‘Hetreis’ associated with Ermildon, with a value of 15 shillings; this suggests the lands were in 2 parts. On the 1541 rental roll ‘The Hie Treis’ were valued at 16 shillings, with tenants Robert and David Elliot. ‘Neather Hietreis’ was listed among the farms possessed by Gavin Elliot in 1632 and ‘Hietreip’ (presumably a transcription error) among the possessions of Hab Henderson. It is probably the same place as ‘Hietreis’ marked on Blaeu’s c.1654 map west of Thoralshope. It is presumably the same as the farm of ‘Hightree’, where there were Armstrongs in the 18th century. It was presumably close to Hightrees Cleuch. It was combined with Highhouse, Howden, Harden and Burnmouth on the 1718 survey of properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch, although its precise location is not shown.

Hightreis Cleuch (hi-trëz-klooch) n. former lands in Liddesdale, recorded as ‘Hietrecrelechis’ on the 1541 rental roll. The tenant was Matthew Nixon and they were valued at 15 shillings. It is probably the ‘Hetherclewes’ listed in 1544, when Matthew Nixon from there was among Scotsmen giving support to the English Crown. In 1586 it is described as ‘the fyftene schilling land of Hietric Clewis’ when occupied by Martin Elliot of Braidlie and re-leased to him by Francis, Earl of Bothwell.

Hi-I-Obby (hi-I-o-bee) n. nickname of Robert Aitken – ‘Anon Jock Bewlie shuffles by, And Hi hobbles ahint pell-mell; There’s Jamie Jolly watchin’ a skly, And Daft Jamie ringin’ St. Mary’s bell [HI] (there are various spellings).

Hill (hil) n. former farmstead in Jedforest, probably near Mervinslaw and Cleithaugh. Thomas Oliver was the tenant there in 1669.

Hill (hil) n. David (1755–1836) carrier who lived at the Mid Raw. He ran his cart to the Newcastleton area once a week. He is mentioned in the poem ‘At Easter’ by David Hill (his descendant). He married Agnes Waugh, who died in 1832, aged 75. Their children included: Isabel (1776–1832), baptised in Southdean Parish; and Thomas (1787–1824), baptised in Ancrum Parish, who was a minister in Montreal. He and his family are buried at St. Mary’s. He was surely related to James (son of Thomas) who was a carrier from at least 1841. David Octavius (18th/19th C.) described as a ‘Supervisor’ in Hawick in 1815. He married Elizabeth Scott and their son Alexander was born in 1815, the witnesses being excise officer Robert Turnbull and his wife, Ann Scott. David Octavius (1802–70) painter and pioneering photographer. His enormous painting of the Disruption of 1843, the First General Assembly of the Free Church of Scotland, is well-known, and its execution introduced him to Robert Adamson and the technique of photography. The pair established a partnership that revolutionised photography as an artistic medium. In 1835 he painted a landscape view of Hawick, taken from around Wilton Hill. David ‘Davie’ (1911–1977) prolific local poet, born in the Westend, and educated at Drumlanrig and the High School. He worked in advertising for one of the local mills, then volunteered for the R.A.F., returning after the War to work in the family firm making Hawick Balls. He befriended poet Hugh MacDiarmid, and contributed regularly to the Hawick News and Hawick Express. He wrote the well known poems ‘The Vertish’, ‘Shundert’, ‘The Spetchman’s Sang’, ‘Robbie Dye’, ‘The Bleach’, and many more, as well as some fiction and a play, ‘The Sow’s Lug’. A short-story, ‘Thirty Six Hours’, about a young soldier from the Borders, was published in 1944 and he had several pieces broadcast on the radio. He was a founder member of the Camera Club and active in the Callants’ Club and Archaeological Society. A collection of his poetry finally appeared in 2011, called ‘Ain Gait’, on the 100th anniversary of his birth. He married Robertina (‘Ina’) Scott Morrison, from Langholm. They had a son, David Andrew and a daughter Christine Morrison. David ‘Dave’ (1931–2020) Born in Hawick, he grew up in O’Connell Street, Lothian Street and Weensland Park. He played the pipes with the Hawick Scout Pipe Band and played rugby for the Harlequins, later serving as President and Match Secretary. He worked as an electrician and did National Service in the R.A.F. Starting from the age of 19 he made 70 appearances for Hawick R.F.C., usually as full back. At the age of 26 he became a referee on the Border League circuit and was linesman for a Scotland international match in 1964. He married Molly Hardie in 1954 and they had children Derek, Karen and David. They lived in Leishman Place, later moving to Girvan, where he worked as an electrical engineer, and he retired to Jedburgh. George (17th C.) resident of Robertson Parish, when it contained Hassendean. He married Janet Jackson and their daughter Jean was baptised in 1687, with witnesses Thomas Henderson and George Ormiston. James (16th/17th C.) granted a half husbandland of land in Lilliesleaf in 1595/6. James (17th C.) resident at Newhouse in Lilliesleaf Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. James (17th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish, recorded in 1797 as tenant in Burnfoot. He married Bessie Helm and their children included Janet (b.1797). James (18th C.) gardener at Knowesouth in 1778 and 1779, when he was working for Thomas Rutherford. James (b.1799/1800) born in Hobkirk Parish, he was a carpenter at Borthwickbrae Cottages. His wife was Margaret and their children included Euphemia, David, John, Margaret, William, Mary, George and Helen. He may be the James, son of Peter, baptised in Hob Kirk in 1796. Rev. James minister of Teviothead Kirk 1940–63. During his first year he acted as junior minister to James Livingston. James (b.1816) son of Thomas, he was a carrier on the Mid Row. He is recorded there in 1841, with wife Agnes and children David and Jane. In Pigot’s 1837 directory he is recorded running a weekly service between Newcastleton and Hawick, leaving from the Mid Row every Tuesday. In 1851 his wife was a widow, living at about 7 Mid Row with her mother and siblings. He married Agnes, daughter of cabinet-maker John Scott. Their children were David (ancestor of the Hawick Balls family), Jane, Jemima and Robert. John (16th/17th C.) listed after several Armstrong of the house of Whithaugh in a 1601 list of men who were said by the English to be outlaws under the Laird of Buccleuch. He thus presumably lived in Liddesdale and was an associate of the Armstongs. John (17th C.) listed as tenant at Mervinslaw in Wilton Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Rev. Rowland (1744–1833) English evangelist, who did much to establish Sunday Schools in Scotland, against the will of the established church. He visited Scotland in 1798 and described a Hawick funeral in his diary. Sir Rowland (1795–1879) English educator and postal reformer. He invented a rotary printing press and developed a system of pre-paid penny postage that revolutionised communications, and for which Hawick made him an Honorary Burgess in 1844. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident at Hassendeanburn. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. Thomas (b.1774/5) from Langholm, he was a saddler on the High Street. He is listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories and Slater’s 1852 directory. His shop was at about No. 28 in 1851. He married Mary Nichol and their children included Robert, James (b.1816) and Annie. Thomas (1787–1824) baptised in Ancrum Parish, he was son of David, who was a carrier in Hawick. He was ordained in 1818 as minister of the Burgher congregation in Glenluce. However, there was soon a dispute over his behaviour, ending with him being rebuked by his Presbytery and he demitted in 1820. He then spent some time in Hawick, before appealing to the Burgher Synod in 1822 to be reinstated. This was agreed to about a year later. He then emigrated to Canada, acting as assistant to Rev. Easton in Montreal, where he died suddenly. William (17th C.) cottar at Appletreehall according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He could be the William who witnessed a Hassendean baptism for Robert Ormiston and Marion Hill (who may have been his daughter). William (17th/18th C.) weaver in Hawick Parish. In 1710 he was found guilty of ‘egregious ryotts’ in St. Mary’s Kirk. The witnesses saw him ‘stryke twyce Wm. Greenshiels with ane staff and thereafter Wm. Greenshiels stroke at him with his bonnet’, during the reading of the scriptures. He was recorded as ‘weaver in Flex’ in 1720. He married Janet Sanderson and their children included John (b.1709) and Thomas (b.1720). The witnesses in 1709 were Bailies Walter Graham and George Martin and in 1720 were Town Clerk Walter Gledstains and Walter Nixon in Hawick. William ‘Bill’ (1941–) born in Hawick, he was educated at Trinity, Burnfoot and the High School. In Hawick he was in the Cycling Club and the Saxhorn Band. Moving to Edinburgh in 1959, he worked in local government and education. He formed a folk trio there with Tom Smith and Jean Brooks, called The Caern, with him on vocals, banjo and guitar. They released ‘Introducing The Caern, a Collection of Scotch Folk’ in 1969 (which included a version of ‘Kinly Stick’), as well as ‘Irish Folk Favourites’ (1971) and ‘Welcome to Ireland’ with The Bards (1997). They toured with Jimmy Shand and appeared on television. As a solo artist he recorded ‘Miscellaneous Dross’ (1974) and ‘Bill Hill’s Police Record’ (1978). Several of his songs, such as ‘The Portree Kid’, ‘The Scottish Holiday’ and ‘The Sunday Driver’ were regularly in the repertoire of bands such as the Corries. He presented ‘Folkspun’ on Radio Forth for a couple of years and has been a popular after dinner speaker as well as Edinburgh tour guide.

the Hill (θu-hil) n. former name for lands in Liddesdale, seat of a branch of the Elliots. ‘Joanni de lie Hill’ is recorded in 1541, Mark callit of the Hill’ in 1564, and Archie and Jock of the Hill in the 1580s. They were related to the Elliots of Ramsiegill according to the letter of 1583 from the English wardens. Archie Elliot ‘in the Hill’ is recorded in 1586 and Archie Elliot of the Hill and ‘Johe Ellot of the Hill’ in 1611. It is listed among the lands in Liddesdale held by Gilbert Elliott of Stobs in 1632 (and listed among rentals of Kelso Abbey). It is unclear where this place was located, but one possibility is that it is the same as Laws Hill, which was formerly the lands of Laws.

Hill Burn (hil-burn) n. small stream in Minto Parish, rising on the west side of the Minto Hills and running south to join the Grinding Burn. There are remains of rig and furrow lines on both sides of the burn (marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Hillend (hil-end) n. former name for lands near Commonside in upper Teviotdale. In 1591 these lands, along with Commonside, Northcroft and ‘Stoghill’ were already occupied by Gilbert Elliot when leased to him by Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch.

Hillend Drive (hil-end-driv) n. part of Burnfoot, built in 1953, with gap sites filled in around 1963. It was named after ‘Hillend Plantin’, a popular name for the plantation there. During WWII the area was trenched for army training.

Hillend Parks (hil-end-pawrks) n. former name for lands on Minto estate. It was listed in 1779 and 1811 along with Coach Park, with a value of £72 17s 6d. Several small pieces are also listed as ‘House and Yard at Hill-end’, suggesting that there were cottages there. It was also listed in 1779 as ‘Hill-ends-park’ in a description of the boundaries of Minto Townhead.

Hillend Plantin (hil-end-plawn’-in) n. local pronunciation of ‘Hillend Plantation’, formerly on Burnfoot farm, lying on a small hillock east of the main road, between Burnfoot Road and the Appletreehall road.

hill-forts (hil-forts) n., pl. archaeological sites generally composed of ramparts and ditches around an enclosure, often with signs of buildings on the insides. Usually they have not been excavated, and so the designation is based on morphology only. They date back to the Iron Age, peaking not long before Roman occupation, although some may have been inhabited as far back as the Bronze Age and some well into the Middle Ages. The smallest probably contained a single dwelling, while the largest housed whole communities, although whether they were used permanently or only during periods of perceived danger is unknown. The bulk of them are near the summits of hills, which peaked up above the forests in the valleys below. There are more than 300 such sites identified in the Scottish Borders and over 100 in Roxburghshire alone, with many more designated as ‘earthworks’, ‘settlements’ or ‘enclosures’. The hills around Hawick, particularly to the south, have many of these fortified settlements. The Slitrig valley alone has had about a dozen identified, the first list of 13 being made by Sir James Murray in 1863.

Hill Heid (hil-heed) n. hill in the region east of where the Teviot and the Allan meet. There are the remains of a fort between here and the old farmstead of Newbigging.

Hillheid (hil-heed) n. Hillhead, farm to the east of Lilliesleaf, between Chapel farm and Crags farm. John Young was farmer there in 1841 and Robert and John Smail in the 1850s and 60s. A nearby enclosure was excavated in 1998, discovering it to be a complicated multi-epoch settlement, including evidence of habitation in the Iron Age and Roman times.

the Hillhead (thu-hil-heed) n. local name for the area around Denholmhill. In the late 19th century it was said to be still possible to see stones that had been placed there to mark individual Denholm Fear’s portions of the Common – ‘... and the ridge between Denholm and Ruberslaw known as the Hillhead (where this rock is quarried as road metal)’ [JAHM].

Hillheid House (hil-heed-hoos) n. Victorian villa in Hawick, designed by John Thomas Roc-head in 1863. It may have been given a different name.

Hillhouse (hil-hoos) n. Hillhouse, farmstead in Liddesdale, to the east of Newcastleton, on the Tweedan Burn. A tower is marked on Blaeu’s c.1654 map, and it may correspond to the position of ‘Louselaw’ on Stobie’s 1770 map; it is said that the foundations existed in 1795 and the location was pointed out to the Ordnance Survey in 1858. This site (where no solid evidence has been found) is in the forest of Hillhouse Wood near Castle Hill. This may be the main house shown on the farm on the 1718 survey of properties of the Scotts of Bucelleuch, on Gall Silke to the east of Dykecrofts Cottage on modern maps. In 1718 the farm was combined with Baxtongill, consisting of 383 acres, bounded by Potterlam port, Whithaugh, Nolt-lair and Chingills. The southern boundary was the Tweedan Burn and Whithaugh Burn was to the north. It also shared a common of 37 acres with Potterlamport. William Scott, was described as ‘in Hillhous’ in 1528 when he was one of the arbitrators for deciding on succession to the Borthaugh lands. Ninian Teviot ‘of the Hillhous’ was among Liddesdale men accused of stealing horses from near Hexham in 1579. Hector Armstrong ‘of the Hillhouse’ was accused of rieving in 1587/8. ‘Hob of Whithawghes’ son to John Eamont of Hillhouse’ (presumably an Armstrong) is recorded in 1590. This is probably the ‘Hillhous’ where Thomas Crozier was in 1623. Gavin Elliot of Hillhouse is one of 3 men who were meant to have planned the murder of Walter Scott of Bucelleuch in a foiled plot of 1624, part of a feud between the Eliots and the Scotts. Elizabeth Elliott, daughter of ‘Gibbie wi the Gowden Garters’ married John Turnbull of Minto in 1641, and after her husband died lived at Hillhouse. ‘Geordie Rackesse of the Hillhouse’ is recorded as a cattle thief in about 1645. William, son of Robert Elliot of Redhough, was tenant there in the late 18th century. It may also have been known as Tweedbank (formerly ‘Hillhouse’ and variants such as ‘Halhouse’ and ‘Hilhous’; it is indicated near the head of what looks like the Tweedan Burn on Pont’s original 1608 map; it may be that some of the references are to other places with the same name).

Hillhouse Park (hil-hoos) n. Hillhouse, cottage on the former Minto estate, situated to the east of the old churchyard. In 1788 (and repeated in the Land Tax Rolls of 1811) ‘Hillhouse park’ was valued at £32 15s 10d.

Hillhouse Wud (hil-hoos-wud) n. Hillhouse Wood, plantation near the farm of Hillhouse in Liddesdale. It is marked on the 1718 survey of properties of the Scotts of Bucelleuch, shown on the north side of the Tweedan Burn, and still shown in essentially the same place on modern maps.

Hillieside (hi-lee-sid) n. former lands in Liddesdale, recorded in the 1541 rental roll as ‘He liesyde’. The lands were valued at 5 merks and were vacant at that time. It is unclear exactly where these lands were.

Hilliesland (hil-ceez-lind) n. home of a branch of the Gladstains family in the 17th and 18th centuries. The proprietors were Town Clerks for about 110 years, with only short intervals. It was once a separate hamlet, with several cottages, although there is now no sign of its former population. In 1627 it was described as a land ‘paying 12 bolls, estimat to 8 in stok, 2 in teynd’ annually. The land corresponds roughly to the area immediately west of Kained farm, i.e. the land beyond what would be called the Wellogate. Walter Gledstains of Hilliesland paid the land tax on £66 13s 4d in 1643 and John Gledstains in 1678. Thomas Scott was servant there in 1684. It is shown in a survey of the lands belonging to the Duchess of Bucelleuch in 1718, as an enclave within the East Mains of Hawick, covering 37 acres, including the modern Mosshills Loch on the north and extending to the Wellogate Brae on the south. The main house was situated near Hilliesland Moss (or Loch, a marshy area to the north of Ewen’s Loch),

and the garden wall was still visible in the early 19th century. It is said that until about the mid-18th century the Laird’s herd was pastured along with the Hawick Town Herd (presumably because the Laird was a Burgess of Hawick, owning several houses in the Town). George Johnston was tenant there in 1709. The land was later owned by the Duke of Buccleuch, and up until the early 20th century had fields rented by farmers, known jocularly as ‘Hilliesland Lairds’, who had their barns and stables in town. In 1788 it was ‘Haly’s land, or Hill’s land’ when valued at £66 13s 4d as part of the properties of the Duke of Buccleuch. It still had the same value in 1811 – ‘I see again each knowe and knoll, Each memory spot, each gable end, Frae Lynnwood doon tae Horns-Hole – Frae Stirches ower tae Hilliesland’ [HI] (also written ‘Halsysland’, ‘Hillhouse’land’, etc., it is ‘Hillsland’ in 1627, ‘Hillieslands’ in 1678, ‘Hill-house-land’ in 1684, ‘hillhouses’land’ in 1685, and ‘Hillhouse’land in 1708 and 1717; it is probably the ‘Gallaslande’ mentioned by the English in 1548/9).

the Hilliesland Lairds (thu-hil-eez-lind-lairdz) n. former nickname for a group of minor landowners in the area above the Wellogate. This included the Aitkens of the Kirk Wynd, the Kyles, the Purdoms and the Hendersons. Some of the local ‘Laird’ nicknames may have been epithets applied to men who had such lands (see also bonnet-laird).

Hilliesland Loch (hil-eez-lind-loch) n. small body of water out beyond the Wellogate Brae by Kaimend, formerly referring to a lake which is now filled in, which lay on the town side of the Kaimend Hills, north of the smaller Ewen’s Loch. It still has a farm track running along its south side, and a boundary following the contours along its irregular north side. It was used as a skating pond in the latter part of the 19th century, at a nominal rent from the Duke of Buccleuch, and earlier had been used for curling matches (it is clearly marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map as ‘Hillsland Loch’).

the Hillock (thu-hil-ok) n. former name for an area on the Wells estate. As factor of the estate, Archibald Jerdan described how timber cut from the Hillock’ was sold. It is unclear exactly where this was.

Hill Park (hil-pawrk) n. name for the field on Hawick Common, between St. Leonard’s and Flex farms, bounded by Golf Course Park and Flex Lodge Park.

Hill Pond (hil-pənd) n. small pond east of Bedrule, near the northern boundary of Southdean Parish. It drains into Fulton Burn. To its east is a linear earthwork, which could be part of a boundary line linking streams between the Rule and Jed Waters (like another feature crossing the north of Black Law); its age is unknown.

the Hill Road to Roberton (thu-hil-röd-ti-ro-bur-in) n. road from Ashkirk over towards Roberton, connecting the Ale valley with the Borthwick valley, made famous in Will Ogilvie’s poem of the same name – ‘The hill road to Roberton, Ale Water at our feet, And grey hills and blue hills that melt away and meet, With cotton-flowers that wave to us and lone whaups that call, And over all the Border mist – the soft mist over all’ [WHO].

Hills (hilz) n. George (d.1931) son of William and Mary Miller. He wrote ‘Amor Patrizie and other verses’, published by W. & J. Kennedy in 1929. William (19th/20th C.) saddler of 4 Oliver Place. He married Mary, daughter of shoemaker John Miller. Their children were Agnes, Mary and George.

Hillshaugh (hilz-hawch) n. former farm in Hobkirk Parish, just north of Tythehouse. It was the residence of the Dalkeith family through much of the 18th and all of the 19th centuries. James Scott was there in 1786, mason Alexander Dalglish in 1790 and George Adamson is recorded as tenant there in 1797 (marked on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Hillside (hil-sid) n. former name for a private school in the latter part of the 19th century run by Miss A. Scott, possibly the same as Heron Hill.

Hillslap (hilz-slawp) n. ‘L-plan’ tower 2 miles west of Melrose, where the Allan Water joins the Tweed, built around 1585, but ruined until restored in the 1980s as a home (during which excavations were also carried out). It has been suggested it was the model for Sir Walter Scott’s ‘Glendearg’ (in ‘the Monastery’), to which its name was changed, and has also known been known as ‘Calfhill’. The original Laird was Nichol Cairncross, from a family that also owned land near Belsey. It is very close to Colmslie and Langshaw towers.

Hill Terrace (hil-te-ris) n. original name for Wilton Hill Terrace when built in 1879, renamed in 1882.

Hillum (hi-lum) n. William (13th/14th C.) Archdeacon of Teviotdale, known as ‘de Hillum’. He was appointed by Edward II in 1312 and nothing else is known about him.
Hiltson (hilt-sin) n. Robert (15th/16th C.) listed among the Borderers (led by the Homes and Walter Scott of Branxholme) pardoned in 1526 for an attack on the Earl of Arran. His surname is recorded as ‘Hiltson’, although it is unclear if it corresponds to a different modern name. Thomas is listed right after him and so surely related.

Thomas (15th/16th C.) one of the men given remission in 1526 for their part in attacking the Earl of Arran. He must be related to Robert.

Hilly Linn (hi-lee-lin) n. waterfall in Southdean Parish, on the Shaw Burn, which flows into the Jed Water. Near the falls are the remains of a small tower (11.5 m x 7 m) and 3 farmsteads, probably the settlement of Blackchester; some of the turf remains appear to predate the tower. There are also other archaeological remains in the surrounding area, which was clearly once more populous than today, with Northbank Tower to the south, a tower and possible chapel at Lethem, etc.

Hilson (hil-sin) n. Gavin (1788–1847) son of William and Miss Anderson of Teviotbank. He was born in St. Boswells Parish, attended Edinburgh University and became a surgeon in Jedburgh. He was Assistant-Surgeon with the 4th Dragoons, serving in the Peninsular War and tending to the wounded at Waterloo. In 1825 he subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’. He married Elizabeth Pringle, eldest daughter of Peter Brown of Rawflatt. Only 2 of his 5 sons survived past childhood, one being Archibald Hamilton, who served in the Army Medical Department in India. He died suddenly after performing an operation on a farmer at Upper Tofts. He was presumably from the family of woollen manufacturers in Jedburgh. James Lindsay (1855–1928) Jedburgh local historian who wrote many articles about Border history in the early part of the 20th century.

the Hilton (thu-hil-in) n. former name for lands in ‘Wester Hassendean’ (i.e. Hassendean), as transcribed from a document of 1588, where Robert Douglas of Nether Hassendean and ‘Robert Scot there’ were ordered to turn over to the Lords of Council and Session all documents related to this place. The location of these lands is unknown.

Hilton (hilt-sin) n. Robert (15th/16th C.) listed among the Borderers (led by the Homes and Walter Scott of Branxholme) pardoned in 1526 for an attack on the Earl of Arran. His surname is recorded as ‘Hilsoun’, although it is unclear if it corresponds to a different modern name. Thomas is listed right after him and so surely related.

himpSEL (him-sel) pron. himself – ‘Lor’, luck! wha’s that sittin’ by himsel’, All heedless o’ the bizz and fyke aroon’ him’ [JoHa], ‘Then Heather he did quafl the half-gill to himsel’ . . . ‘ [WE], ‘Nor wot I, if to hear me mourn, Sir Walter e’en wad hae himsel’ Forborne to blaw his forest-horn, And wag his hazel cudgel well’ [AD], ‘Syne aff frae his shouter’ll tummie his pack, As he gets himsel’ settin doon’ [WL] (also ‘imself and unself).

hinder (hind) n., arch. a farm worker, peasant, skilled labourer on a farm, particularly a man in charge of ploughing, usually married and supplied with a cottage. In 1836 in Hobbirk Parish it is stated that a hind was paid through ‘A free house worth probably £2; 10 bolls oats; 2 do. barley; 1 do. of pease; 4 carts of coals; 1000 yards of potatoes, a capful of lint-seed or a bushel of barley sown, the master ploughing and manuring the ground’. The details may have varied between parishes and among farmers, but this was probably a fairly typical arrangement for the time – ‘Now married men forget their wives, An’ hinds forget their horses’ [JoHa], ‘Past spinster, spouse, and relict, Past flesher, wabster, hind . . .’ [DH], v. to work as a hind (also formerly ‘lynd’; from Old English).

hindberry (hind-be-re) n., poet. the wild raspberry, Rubus idæus – ‘An’ baund wi’ hindberries fрае the syke, I lap an’ ran a turn Alang the divots on the dyke, Doon to the Tweeden burn’ [ECB].

hindin (hind-in) n., arch. the act of being a hind – ‘Jock’s hindin’’ [GW], ‘He’s at the hindin’’ [GW].

Hindemers (hin-de-murz) n. James (16th C.) listed as a servant to Clement Crozier on a document giving the names of local Olivers, Nixons, Croziers and Halls who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. It is unclear whether his surname may be mis-transcribed.

hinder (hin-dur) adj. behind, further to the rear – ‘. . . A fox that sits upon its hinder quarters’ [JT], ‘God gar us look to the hinder end O’ oor earthly day or the sun descend’ [WL] (also the less common hinner).

hing (hing) n. thing – ‘look it that hing ower there’, ‘a hinger’s a hing for hingin hings up’, ‘...whae wuz a giant in aw hings, except in his unassumin size – Adie Ingles’ [IHS], ‘...Oneway, a was oan about the computer hing the bairn was playin’’ [We].

Hinge (hijn) n. John (17th C.) cotter at Hartshaugh in Abbotrule Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. His surname may be a misinterpretation of some other name.

hingin (hing-in) n. a haging, act of hanging, a piece of drapery, curtain – ‘Item, in ventailles and domelilles, with hinginges, tapestrie, silver plaite, and abuilzementes of the said noble Erle ...’ [SB1633], adj., arch. haging (down or on), lying on a slope or hill-side – ‘A hingin’ field’ [GW], overcast and showery.

hingins (hing-inz) n., pl. hangings. Hawick’s last public execution was a haging in the Common Haugh in 1814. John Gibson had murdered his wife in Mill Port. The trial was in Jedburgh, and in the jail there the convicted man wrote a pamphlet about the evils of drink. Executions typically took place close to the scene of the crime, the site chosen in 1814 being near the old tollhouse at the Haugh. The prisoner was brought from Jedburgh, stopped at the Town Hall to meet with the local clergy and was escorted by a troop of the yeomanry cavalry. A large crowd gathered at the Haugh, which joined in a hymn and prayer. The prisoner addressed the crowd, warning them of excessive drink, and was then hung on a gibbet. It is likely that many more hangings took place in Jedburgh, the county town than in Hawick. A hangman is recorded in Selkirk in 1743. It is unclear if someone in Hawick held such a position.

hingubeed (hing-u-beed) n. a thingumabob, what’s-it-called (cf. hingubby, thingubby and thingubeed).

hirds (hirdz) n., pl. shepherds, herdsmen. It is estimated that at one point perhaps as much as a quarter of the able-bodied men in the Borders worked as shepherds. This fraction decreased dramatically when fences and dykes were built at the end of the 17th century. Before the 20th century the occupation was usually hereditary, and shepherds’ families were often better educated that those of most farm servants; Tancred suggests this is because they were descended from younger sons of Lairds. The size of a flock in the Border hills was typically around 40, with free cottage and peats as well as a quantity of grains given in exchange for the labour. Until the mid-19th century the blue bonnet and plaid were widely worn.

hire (hir) v., arch. to season food with richer ingredients, add butter, cream or other rich ingredients – ‘Thae scones ir weel heirit; A pat a guid fairkeesheen o butter inti thum’ [ECS] (also written ‘heir’ and variants).

hirin (hi-rin) n., arch. a baking with rich ingredients.

hirin fair (hī-rin-fār) n. a fair or market held for the purpose of engaging farm servants and labourers, but also as a focus for general entertainments. These were traditionally around the Whitsunday and Martinmas ‘term days’, corresponding to the May and November Hiring Fairs in Hawick. The practice was formally abolished in Scotland in 1939—‘Reels and schottisches till the reid sun’s sinkin’, Syne in the cool nicht air, Lads and lasses in their pairs gang linkin’ Hame frae the Hiring Fair’ [WL].

hirple (hir-pul) v. to hobble, limp — ‘there hei is hirpling along the Street as usual’, ‘…puss had ‘hirpled thrice withershins round house, and then suddenly made a spring to the riggin …’ [EM1820], ‘This self-same chuckie had been nought uncommon, But joost a hirplin, hoddlin, namely woman’ [JoHa], ‘When hoary Eild comes hirplin’ roon’, And death’s cold wintry breezes blow …’ [JoHa], ‘A was nae hippet heipalt, hirplin on …’ [EC], ‘…For hers was a spirit proud and high, And free as the Rule that hirpled by’ [WHO], ‘When waabbit, He revives my spunk, And helps the hirplin lame’ [WL], ‘He hirpled slowly to his rest, Nae luck when he was born’ [WFC], ‘…The wanin’ mune Came hirplin’ through the cloudy frieze High, high abune’ [WP].

hirsel (hir-sul) n. a flock (particularly of sheep) — ‘…depones he gave way to the hirsel under the charge of their Herd because it was a weighty hirsel or a meikle hirsel, and he (the Deponent) had no will to maig or mix his charge with the Hawick hirsel’ [C&L1767], ‘…Oor hirsels gane, past a’ repairin’, Lambs lie thick as new netted hirrin’’ [JoHa], ‘But now a sau tear dims ilk look I let fa’ On the hill an’ the hirsel, sin Willie’s awa’ [JoHa], ‘Acquant me … wi’ whare thou mak’s thy hirsel til rest at nun’ [HSR], ‘Like ane hirsel o’ sheepe ye led the peeple …’ [HSR], ‘…and this system of management went on under the sagacious and pawkie herd until the minister’s wife had a scattered hirsel of sixteen ewes’ [WNK], ‘Children revels on the levels Where my hirsels graze’ [WL], land allotted to a shepherd, area of pasture under control of one shepherd – ‘The bleat o’ sheep on hirsels green …’ [WL], v., arch. to arrange in a flock – ‘Store-farming has been improved. Summer hirseling is given up, and ewe-milking done away’ [RJS].

the Hirsel (thu-hir-sul) n. country residence of Lord Home, near Coldstream, dating from the 17th century, but with many alterations. The grounds are open to the public, and contain the lake (constructed in 1786), as well as an extensive collection of well-preserved estate buildings, lodges, gates, bridges and follies (including a dovecote). Just to the north-west is the best-preserved motte hill in Berwickshire—‘…Shall ever hommage with thee lay, – The Hirsel yet for me! Elysian spot! while lasts a string, My lyre I’ll tune to thee’ [AS] (also spelled ‘Hirsell’).

his (hiz) possessive arch. formerly used in place of the possessive, in a peculiar sentence structure — ‘…William Douglas was onlawed and ammercate for ane exhorbitant mariage wt. Thomas Lune his daughter …’ [BR1689], ‘…while the sd. bayleea was sittand in William Elliot his hous …’ [1693] (see also eis, heis, hes).

Hislop (hiz-, hūz-lōp) n. farm at the end of where the Falnash road branches off at Teviothead. It was formerly also called ‘Hazelhope’ and is on the Hazelhope Burn and at the foot of Hazelhope Hill. In the earliest documents it is recorded separately as Easter and Wester Hislop, e.g. in a list of the lands that the Baron of Hawick held ‘in tenandry’ in 1511, 1572, 1594 and 1615. Matthew Graham is recorded there in 1502. James Nichol was there in 1618. In 1624 the lands were purchased from the Earl of Douglas by Robert Elliot of Falnash. In a 1627 Hawick Parish valuation it is stated to have ‘no corn growing thereon; estimat in stok to 100 lb., in teynd to 16’. In 1647 Archibald Elliot of Falnash was served heir to his father’s 10 merk land there. The lands were owned by the Scotts of Crumhaugh from 1674. The Easter and Wester farms were among those inherited by Sir Francis Scott of Thirlestane from his brother Walter in 1695. William Hislop was there in 1698. By 1707 it was valued along with Ramsaycleuch at £549 4s. Michael Anderson of Tushielaw owned the lands of Hislops, Easter and Wester in the early 18th century, passing them in 1714 to his son, also Michael. Archibald Scott was tenant in at least 1709–11. By 1788 it was owned by Mrs. Anderson of Tushielaw. The herds recorded there in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls were John Scott and John (or perhaps James) Govenlock. In 1811 the lands were valued along with Ramsaycleuch-burn at £549 4s, when owned by the Andersons...

of Tushielaw. B.T.G. Anderson was recorded as owner in about 1874. A coin from the reign of Alexander III was unearthed from there in the 19th century, along with several others said (in 1839) to have been found there, with a couple in the possession of John Grieve of Branxholme Braes. It is possible that the place gave rise to the surname, but this is unknown – ‘The lasses o’ Lin’op are braw, An’ them o’ Mosspaul they are bonnie; There’s Haz’lop an’ Fa’nash an’ a’, Aul’ Commonside yields na to mony’ [JoHa] (the name first appeared in 1502 as ‘hesliop’, is ‘Heslyhope’ and ‘Heslihop’ in 1511, ‘Hislehoip’ in 1547, ‘Heslyhope’ in 1572, ‘Hessilhoip’ in 1594, ‘Heissilhoip’ in 1615, ‘Heisl’op in 1618, ‘Heislope’ in 1627 and 1674, ‘Hissilhoipes’ in 1647, ‘Heislopes’ in 1695 and ‘Heslop’ in 1761; the origin is Old English ‘haesel hop’, meaning ‘the valley of the hazels’).

Hislop (hiz-lup, hiz-lomp) n. Adam (16th C.) recorded in 1581/2 as former occupier of lands in Ashkirk that James, son of John Scott in Kirkhouses leased from Walter Scott in Ashkirk. Adam (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Marion Elliot and their children included Margaret (b.1649), Jean (b.1650) and Thomas (b.1652). Perhaps the same Adam witnessed a baptism in Hawick for George Nichol and Helen Hislop. Adam (17th C.) resident at Newton (near Stobs) in 1694 according to the Hearth Tax rolls. He is listed right after John, and hence presumably related. Adam (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1690 he witnessed a baptism for Thomas Scott and Jean Hislop (perhaps his daughter or sister). Alexander (17th/18th C.) tailor and Burgess in Hawick. In 1684 he had a charter of disposition for a piece of land in the East Mains of Hawick, which he gained from Patrick Cunningham. He dispossed this to his wife Bessie Ruecastle in 1688. He was listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick ‘eist the water’ in 1694. He was probably a member of the Hawick Council and in 1701 was one of those appointed to collect the ‘stent’ money ‘east the water’. He is probably the Alexander who witnessed a baptism for Walter Purdom in 1676 and another for John Aitkin in 1699. He is recorded as a tailor when he witnessed a baptism for Robert Henderson in Hawick in 1701 and another for James Laidlaw (in Branxholme Town) in 1702. In 1711 he (along with fellow tailor William Gledstains) witnessed a baptism for carrier William Rae. His children, baptised in Hawick Parish, included: Robert (b.1670); and Bessie (b.1672). He may be the Alexander who in 1676, along with Adam Young, was found guilty of using a ‘half-pecke ane inch short or thereby’.

Hislop (hiz-lup, hiz-lomp) n. Adam (17th/18th C.) tailor in Hawick, probably son of the earlier Alexander. He married Alison McLellan and their son John was baptised in 1705. These other children baptised in Hawick Parish were probably also his: Marion (b.1694); Janet (b.1696); Margaret (b.1697); Alison (b.1700); Marion (again, b.1703); and James (b.1707). The witnesses in 1700 were Patrick McLellan, merchant Walter Oliver and Henry Orrock, and in 1705 were Burgh Officer Alexander Scott and tailor James Turnbull. Alexander (17th/18th C.) weaver in Hawick Parish. In 1709 he married Christian Wright, who was ‘in whita’. Their son John was baptised in Hawick in 1710. Alexander (17th/18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was living at Howcleuch in 1710. His children included: John (b.1702); Margaret (b.1703); Helen (b.1705); and Margaret (again, b.1710). Andrew (16th/17th C.) resident of Binks in 1618. Walter Scott of Buccleuch complained that he had cut down 120 alder trees from his lands of Gorrenberry, with other men from upper Teviotdale also being accused of stealing timber. Not appearing before the Privy Council, he was denounced as a rebel. Andrew (17th/18th C.) shepherd at Headshaw. He married Isobel Brown and their son John was baptised in Ashkirk in 1703. Andrew (17th/18th C.) resident of Chisholme. His daughter Isabel was baptised in Robertson parish in 1703. He could be the Andrew whose daughter Jean married William Scott in Selkirk in 1726. Andrew James (19th/20th C.) lived at 60 High Street. He served as a Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. Archibald (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1501/2 as ‘Archibald Heslihop, vtherwais callit Schir Suythe’ when he had resettled some Rutherfords, who were rebels at the time. It is unclear where he was from. A.J. (19th/20th C.) Bailie who was involved with setting up the P.S.A. rugby team.

Christian (17th C.) cottar in Midlem. In about 1684 she was on a list of Covenantanter fugitives. Christopher (b.c.1795) farmer at Teviouthaugh in 1841. His wife was Ann and their children included Peter, George and Christopher. Rev. David (c.1833–1904) born in Leadhills, he graduated B.A. from Glasgow University in 1858, then attended the Glasgow Evangelical Union Hall, becoming Evangelical Union minister at Montrose and then Leith. He served as minister at the Evangelical Union Church (later the Congregational Church) in Hawick in the late 19th century. He was the first officially E.U. minister to preach there, visiting for about 5 Sundays in 1858, and turning down a ‘call’ to Hawick the following year. In 1862 he became minister in Leith, and accepted a new call from Hawick in 1864, following Robert Mitchell’s sudden departure. He remained until 1902, increasing the membership to 400. Since some of the congregation came from far afield, he would travel out to Bedrule, Ettrick, etc. in a gig. In his day Sundays consisted of a Morning Fellowship, followed by 2 sermons, the Sabbath School in the afternoon and an evening bible class. He was seriously ill for the first half of 1880, but recovered. He was friendly with Rev. Dr. Macrae and other Established Kirk ministers, unlike some of his E.U. predecessors. He became ill again in 1902, and a trip to the Canary Islands being of little help, he resigned that year and was made Honorary Pastor. Following his death 2 years later, a memorial plaque was placed on the east side of the former apse of the church. His brother Robert, minister in Glasgow, married Susan, daughter of Walter Wilson of Orchard. He appears to have married Jane Borthwick Holdway and their children included: Isabell C. (b.c.1864); Christina Grace (b.1871), born in Hawick; and David (b.1873), born in Hawick. Elizabeth ‘Bessie’ nee Ruecastle (17th C.) wife of tailor Alexander. In 1688 her husband transferred a croft of land in East Mains to her. She could be the Elizabeth who was born to Robert Ruecastle and Janet Scott in Hawick in 1650. Emma nee Elliot (d.1866) daughter of Hugh Elliot, her uncle was the 1st Earl of Minto. She is recorded as ‘Mrs. Hislop, Minto-House in 1825 when she subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’. She married Sir Thomas, Baronet Hislop. Her daughter Emma Eleanor Elizabeth (b.1824) married William Hugh Elliot-Murray-Kynynmound, 3rd Earl of Minto (with the couple being first cousins). George (16th C.) farmer at Town-o-Rule. His dwelling house and yard are listed in the Baronial dispute over Feu-Rule in 1562. George (16th C.) listed at Swinside among men accused of raiding a farm in England in 1587. ‘Dande Heslopp’ was also listed. He was also accused of raiding another farm in 1588. George (b.1801/2) carter at Hassendeanburn in 1861. He married Margaret Notman in Minto in 1842 and their children included Jane and Elizabeth. Helen (17th/18th C.) recorded at Mervisnawl in the Wilton session book for 1707. She confessed to being ‘with Child’, the father being an Oliver, servant to the Laird of Langlands, who had fled the area. James (17th C.) resident of Colterscleuch on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. James (17th/18th C.) resident at Lairhope in 1698 when his son William was baptised. The witnesses were William (whose own child had been baptised the day before) and James Laidlaw. James (b.c.1795) from England, he worked as a ‘Lime quarry man’ at Larriston Rigg. In 1841 he was living there with his wife Mary and children John, James and Annie. James (b.1831/2) baker on the High Street. He was tried in 1857 for the murder of his wife Isabella on the High Street. James ‘the Gallopin Chairger’ (d.1902) cadger (i.e. carrier) who moved to Hawick and lived beside the ‘Cadger’s Well’ for about 40 years. He regularly carried his goods to Riccarton. His nickname came from the snail-like pace of his working horse. Janet (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when she was listed on the Hearth Tax roll among ‘ye poor’. John ‘Jock’ (16th C.) recorded in 1562 when he leased an acre of land in Lilliesleaf from William Middlemas. John (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married ‘Malli Hesti’ and their daughter Janet was baptised in 1654. John (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Bessie Turnbull and their son Robert was baptised in 1656. The witnesses were George Turnbull (probably related to his wife) and John Scott. Perhaps the same John married Isobel Veitch and also had a daughter Agnes baptised in 1661, with witnesses Walter Coltart and Thomas (who was probably related to his wife). John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen ‘Lazon’ and their son Robert was baptised in 1681. John (17th C.) resident at Newton (near Stobs) in 1694 according to the Hearth Tax rolls. He was presumably related to the Adam who was also listed there. John (17th C.) resident at Chapelhill according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. John (18th C.) shepherd at Gorrenberry in about 1750. He must have been related to Walter and Jean, who were hired about the same time, and also Jean. John (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Broadlee in 1767, Deanburnhaugh in 1769 and 1772 and Woodburn in 1774. His children, baptised in Roberton Parish, included Margaret (b.1767), Agnes (b.1769), John (b.1772) and William (b.1774). John (18th/19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf, recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He is probably the resident of Lilliesleaf who married Margaret Turnbull. In 1790 his wife and daughter ‘Edgar’ were involved in a dispute with James Anderson, younger weaver in Lilliesleaf. John (b.c.1772) hosier manufacturer and draper on the High Street. He is recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory and John & Co. is listed in the 1837 and 1852 directories. He is probably the John from Hawick who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He was listed among a group of 10 men who had been denied their claim to be on the electoral roll in Selkirkshire on the basis of joint life-rent there. In 1841 he was at about 15 High Street and described as ‘Independent’; he lived there with Helen, probably his wife, along with 2 servants and 2 draper’s apprentices. John (18th/19th C.) resident of London who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He probably had a local connection. John (b.1797/8) shepherd at Knowehead near Newcastleton in the 1850s. He was listed among heads of households in Castleton Parish in 1836–41. His wife was Helen and their children included Isabella, Robert, Mary, Margaret and William. He was probably dead by 1861, when his son Robert was shepherd at Knowehead near Newcastleton. John (b.1804/5) originally from Selkirk, he was a grocer and spirit dealer at about 60 High Street. In 1841 he was a ‘Woollen Stocking dresser’ on the High Street (at about No. 47) and was at No. 60 as a grocer in 1851. He is listed in Slater’s 1852 directory. He married Jane Cairns and their children included: James (b.1831); William (b.1833); Isabella (b.1836); John (b.1838); Thomas (b.1840); Jane (b.c.1842); and Margaret (b.1846). John (19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1839 he married Helen Davidson, who was from Jedburgh. John (b.c.1817) cabinet-maker living on Needle Street in 1841. His wife was Mary and they had a son, Robert. Martha (b.c.1775) baker, recorded at about 21 Howegate in 1841. She was presumably widow of the former head of the family. Their children included James and Betty. Mary (18th C.) cook at Stobs in 1785 and 1786, when she was working for Sir Francis Elliott. Presumably the same person is listed as ‘Nanny Hyslop’ in 1789 and 1791, still cook at Stobs. Nicholas (15th C.) witness to the document of 1488 in which Greenwood gave the Lyne. The Lyne were leased by Sir Thomas Turnbull of London who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’. It was signed at Branxholme. He is recorded as ‘domino Symone Heslihop capellano’ and appears after the Rector of Southdean; he was this a chaplain, but of which parish is unclear. Thomas (15th/16th C.) recorded as ‘Thoma Hesleop’ in 1501 when he witnessed a document relating to the lands of Lairs for the Douglases of Drumlanrig. Thomas (b.1784/5) born in Ancrum Parish, he was a farm worker at Barnkine in Southdean Parish. In 1841 he was an agricultural labourer there and was a ploughman there in 1851. His wife was Mary and their children included Margaret, Helen, William... and Robert. Thomas (b.c.1805) cotton hand-loom weaver living on the Fore Row in 1841. His wife was Helen and their children included Agnes and John. Thomas (b.1806/7) born in Cavers Parish, he was a clockmaker in Hawick. He was living on the Fore Raw in 1851 and was listed as a clockmaker on ‘Front row’ in Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1861 he was at 8 Fore Row. His wife was Ellen, from Perthshire, and their children included James and Jean Walter (16th C.) recorded living in Clerklands (presumably in Lilliesleaf Parish) when he witnessed a transaction in Selkirk in 1543. Walter (18th C.) shepherd hired at Gorrenberry in about 1750. Walter (b.1800/1) born in Lilliesleaf Parish, he was a labourer and roadman in Castleton Parish. He is listed among heads of households in 1835–41, when he was living at ‘Stanhillburnfoot’ and Brighouse. His wife was Agnes and their children included Ninian, Betty, Anne, John, Margaret, Mary, Walter, William and Jemima. The family emigrated to America in 1842. Walter (b.1800/1) born in Lilliesleaf Parish, he was farm steward at Deanbrae in Cavers Parish in 1861. William (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502. He was presented by the Lord of Buccleuch at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh as his ‘suitor’ for the lands of Braznholme. William (17th/18th C.) tenant in Hislop. His son William was baptised in 1698. Archibald and John Scott were witnesses. He himself witnessed a baptism for James in Lairhope on the following day. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Janet Kedie and their children included Isobel (b.1691), Adam (b.1693) and Agnes (b.1696). Mallie (b.1695), with no mother’s name given, was probably also his child. The witnesses in 1691 were John Kedie and Andrew Kedie. He is probably also the servant at ‘Langtoune’ recorded in 1698 along with his wife Janet Kedie, when their daughter Elspeth was baptised in Ashkirk. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1712 he was recorded as ‘servitor to Walter Nickson in Hawicksheels’. He later lived at Over Southfield. In 1719 he was ‘servant in Allan haugh mill’. He may be the William who witnessed a baptism for William Reid, tenant in Raeskneowe, in 1719. He was described as a ‘workman’ in 1721. He married Agnes ‘Lateth’ (or ‘Lauder’) in Hawick Parish in 1711. Their children included: William (b.1712); Christian (b.1716); John (b.1719); Robert (b.1721); Bessie (b.1724); and Margaret (b.1725). The witnesses in 1712 were Walter Nixon and Walter Scott, both tenants in Hawick Shiel, in 1719 were William Reid and weaver John Scott, and in 1721 were Walter Nixon and James Griewe. William (18th/19th C.) recorded in 1808, 1810 and 1812 as witness to baptisms in Hawick for Andrew Turnbull and Margaret (probably his daughter or sister). He was probably a merchant. William (b.1800/1) originally from Esedale, he was farmer at Raperlaw in Lilliesleaf Parish. He was at Raperlaw in 1841 and in 1851 was farming 150 acres there, and employing 3 people. He married Isobel Tillie (who was from Bowden) and their children included Mary (b.1825), Walter (b.1828), John, William, Robert, James, Elizabeth and Isabella. William (18th/19th C.) labourer at Old Castleton. He was recorded among heads of households in the Parish for the first time in 1837, when he was a roadman from Oakeshaw Toll, England. He was listed at Old Castleton in 1840 and 1841. He emigrated to America about that time. William (b.1809/10) originally from Selkirk, he was a framer in Hawick. He was living on the Back Row in 1841 and on Allars Crescent in 1851. His wife was Beattie (from Aberdeen) and their children included Jane, Margaret, Thomas, ‘Lowis’, William and Margaret (again). William (b.1809/10) agricultural labourer in the Hermitage area. In 1841 he was at Florida (or Dykeraw). In 1861 he was living at Old Dykercrofts, but in 1868 was listed as farmer at Gorrenberry. His wife was Mary. William (b.1820/1) son of Thomas, he was born in Minto Parish. In 1841 he was a joiner and in 1851 a carpenter, living with his parents at Barnkine. He married Janet Sprot. William (b.c.1835) from Lilliesleaf Parish, he was farmer at Harwood on Teviot. In 1881 he was farming 750 acres at Harwood and employing 5 people. He was still there in 1901 (formerly spelled ‘Heaslope’, ‘Heislop’, ‘Heislope’, ‘Hesliop’, ‘Heslop’, ‘Hislope’, ‘Hyslip’, ‘Hyslop’, ‘Hyslope’, etc.).

History of Hawick (his-tu-rec-ov-hlk) n. book written by Robert Wilson in 1825, with full title ‘A sketch of the history of Hawick: including some account of the manners and character of the inhabitants, with occasional observations: to which is subjoined a short essay, in reply to Doctor Chalmers on pauperism and the poor-laws’. This was the first published history of the town. The second edition, published in 1841 was entitled ‘The history of Hawick: including some account of the inhabitants with occasional observations, to which is appended a short memoir of the author’. These works are the first history of our town, with historical anecdotes interspersed with a series of discussions on the political issues of the day. The note-book containing what would become the book was started on 21st November 1822, headed ‘Amusements of Leisure Hours, by Robert Wilson’; he was 50 years old at the time. Wilson was firmly a Liberal, and many of his views are strikingly modern, as well as being both articulate and refreshingly humorous. He wrote against the greed of lawyers, saying ‘...the capacity of lawyers, who in these days sucked like the horse-leech, the vitals of their clients ...’! He also expressed regret that 3/10 of Hawick’s Common had been lost in the Division (during the minority of the Duke), and hoped that the House of Buccleuch would one day restore the part of the Common its lawyers had taken. The book also includes the first printed version of several now familiar local stories, no doubt colouring their later retellings. This includes the Hornshole incident (which curiously does not mention the name of Hornshole) and the story of ‘Hab o Hawick’. An appendix contained the first published translation (by Town Clerk Walter Gledstains) of the 1537 Charter. The book received a glowing review in the Scotsman, and the editor, Charles Maclaren came to Hawick to seek out Wilson, arriving on Common Riding Saturday, and having to find him in ti the village: ‘...That they said when they sorted oot whae wad be ‘hit’ [??], ‘We danced around whae’er was ‘hit’ To sangs we still can sing’ [WL] (in usage until quite recently).

hit (hit, hi’) pron., arch. it, used emphatically – ‘...Hit doon, mei abune’ [JEDM], ‘...stuid Black Law; an ahint hit, Ruberslaw’s mighty noal’ [ECS], ‘That’s hit exactly!’ [GW], also ‘it’ in a game of tag – ‘Ie ee hit?’ ‘Na, Jock’s hit’ [GW], ‘...That they said when they sorted oot whae they’ve got a right cheek, hivn’t they?’ (note pronunciation; often spelled ‘hiv’).

hivn’t (hi-vin’) contr. haven’t, have not – ‘they’ve got a right cheek, hivn’t they?’ (hevn’t and huvn’t are also possible, but less common, and note that this form always precedes the noun, cf. henni).

hivvy (hi-vee) adj. heavy – ‘ee deh hev yin thit’s hivvy, hiv ee?’, ‘...as ane hivie lade the a ower hivie for me’ [HSG], ‘Duist at the gangeen-in ti the village ...the muckle great, big hivvy motor-laarie cam snorkin an dannar in by’ [ECS], ‘...My hert’s a hivvy stane, Drinkin’ this dram, alane’ [DH], n. a type of beer, common in Scotland, slightly weaker and lighter than export, similar to bitter in England – ‘is that half-pint hivvy?’ (note pronunciation; often spelled as in English).

Hiwick (hi-vik) n. river in Papua New Guinea, not to be confused with a town on the other side of the world.

Hizzy (hi-zee) n. nickname of Robert Steven Hislop.
Hjalf Hjalfsen

Hjalf Hjalfsen (hyal-fa-hyalf-sin) n. fictional Norse chieftan who is imagined buried under the Mote in J.W.T. Hart’s early 20th century poem ‘The Birth of the Moat’—‘...How Hjalfja Hjalfesn, leading his men, Brain-pierced there by an arrow, fell’ [JWTH].

Hk (hik) n. common abbreviation for Hawick.

Hoakert (hô-kur) pp., arch. crouched, bent down—‘...hed hoakert doon on ti ma hunkers till A gethert back ma braith’ [ECS] (cf. hocker).

Hoach see hoch

Hoatch see hotch

Hob (hôb) n. former short form of Robert (cf. Hab).

Hob Collinwud (hôb-ko-lin-wud) n. the four of hearts—‘Hob Collinwood. The name given to the four of hearts at whist, Teviotdale’ [JoJ].

Hobbie Elliot’s Toor (ho-bee-e’lits-toor) n. early name for Burnheid Toor.

Hobbie Noble (ho-bee-nô-nul) n. border ballad that first appeared in print in ‘Caw’s Poetical Museum’, published in Hawick in 1784. The origin of the manuscript was probably John Elliot of Redheugh. The hero of the poem is one Robert Noble, although it is unclear if he was based on a real person. He was an Englishman who had been banished and was residing with the Armstrongs of Liddesdale. ‘Sim o the Mains’ (a Scottish traitor) persuades him to go on a raid to England, and then tells the ‘land-sergeant’ there about his coming, so that he is captured. Brought back to Carlisle Hobbie refuses to confess, saying he would rather be a prisoner than a traitor—‘Now Hobie was an English man, And born into Boyle dale; But his misdeeds they were sae great, They banish’d him to Liddesdale. Fala, &c.’ [CPM], ‘The laird’s Jock ane, the laird’s Wat twa; Oh! Hobie Noble thou ane maun be, They coat is blue, thou has been true, Since England banish’d thee to me’ [CPM].

Hobbieshowe (ho-beez-how) n. former name for a deep gorge where the Hawa and Sneebs Burns meet in Hobkirke Parish.

Hobble (ho-bul) v., poet. to rock, wobble, bob up and down—‘And they hobbled and lap with their gyseth shins, And daunced on the clammy floore ...’ [JTe], ‘Come awa’, my little lambie, Toddle tentie, come to me; Weel ye like to get a hobble On yer auld grandfaither’s knee’ [TCh] (this meaning is obscure in standard English).

Hobhouse (hob-hoos) n. John Cam 1786–1869) 1st Lord Broughton. Known as a great radical politician in his younger days, he was M.P. for Westminster and a friend of Lord Byron. In 1823 and again in 1824 he spent several days staying at Chisholme, the home of Charles Chisholme, the brother-in-law of his friend Edward Ellice. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825.

Hobkirk (hôb-kirk, hôp-kirk) n. village about 7 miles south-east of Hawick, and about 3/4 of a mile up the Rule Water from Bonchester. It still has a traditional ‘Baa’ game. It is also the name for the surrounding parish, which includes Bonchester, and which originally belonged to the canons of Jedburgh Abbey. It is essentially the same as the Barony of Feu-Rule, recorded until the mid-16th century (the name was first recorded in 1220 as ‘Hoppchirk’, and became ‘Hopkirk’, ‘Hopkirk’ or ‘Hopes kirk’ through the 16th and 17th centuries, becoming corrupted to ‘Habkirk’, ‘Habskirk’, and finally ‘Hobkirk’ in the 18th century; it is marked ‘K. of Hoppkirck’ on Blaue’s 1654 map; the origin is probably Old English for ‘church in the valley’, or possibly Old Norse for ‘shelter church’).

Hobkirk (hôb-kirk) n. Adam (17th/18th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish. He married Rebecca Turnbull in 1694. His daughter Janet was baptised in 1695. Adam (17th/18th C.) shepherd in Hawick Parish. In 1713 he was described as ‘tounerhd in Hawick’, meaning that he served as the Town Herd. He was also shepherd for Thomas Kedie in Over Southfield and at Whitlaw. He married Bessie Laidlaw in Hawick in 1712 (when described as ‘herd in Whita’); she was ‘servitrix to Bailie Burn’. Their children included: John (b.1713); Robert (b.1715); and Agnes (b.1717). The witnesses in 1713 were Bailies James Burn and Robert Hardie. Perhaps the same Adam also married Margaret Laidlaw (unless this is the same woman and the name is an error) and had a daughter Margaret (b.1719). It is also possible that he was the James whose children baptised in Roberton Parish included James (b.1721), when he was at Parkhill. He was probably the shepherd recorded at Hummelknowes when his daughter Janet was baptised in Cavers Parish in 1723. It is also possible he was the Hobkirk (with no forename given) who was at Alderybar in 1727 when his daughter Elizabeth was baptised in Cavers. Adam (1744/5–1809) probably from the Hawick area, he was a merchant in London and Jamaica. He was probably the Adam recorded returning to Kingston, Jamaica in 1774 and was in partnership with a Mr. Moore in 1779/80. His wife is recorded important goods for her shop in Kingston in 1779 and 1780, and also for posting a reward for the return of a runaway slave. He is recorded several times in Jamaica in the 1780s and up to 1794. He is likely to be the Adam from London who was made an Honorary Burgess of Hawick in 1784. He is probably the Adam of 34 Hart Street, Bloomsbury, who took out fire insurance in 1786 and the Adam recorded renting property belonging to the Duke of Bedford in St. Giles in the Fields and in Bloomsbury, in the years 1786–1809. His wife was Mary (surname not recorded), who died in Cheltenham in 1825, aged 70. Their children included: Adam (c.1780–1853), who died in France; Samuel (c.1784–1853); William (c.1785–1825), who was in the Dragoons and died when washed overboard from a ship returning from Jamaica; and Mary (b.1789–c.1794). Note that he is easy to confuse with another Adam from London, son of William and Letitia, whose siblings had essentially the same names. His will of 1809 gives most of his estate to his wife, but also some to his sister Margaret (through William Scott of Hawick) and brother Walter. His address in 1809 was Gower Street, St. Giles in the Fields. He was buried at Westminster. His family later fought over his estate, including his property in Jamaica. Adam (d.1829) probably born in Cavers Parish, he may have been the son of John born in 1750. He is said to have worked at Abbotrule, Grange and other estates. He married Jane Scott in Robertson Parish in 1787. Their children included: John (b.1788), christened in Hawick Parish, who emigrated to America; Archibald (1790–1867), christened in Southdean Parish; Mary (b.1792), who married Thomas Scott; and Adam (b.1795), who also emigrated to the U.S.A. He died at Todlaw farm, near Jedburgh. Adam (1795–1864) younger son of Adam. In 1823 he married Elizabeth Ferguson (who died in 1871), the marriage recorded in Wilton and Southdean Parishes. In 1830 he emigrated to U.S.A., along with his wife and daughters Jane and Isabel. They had 3 more daughters in America, as well as a son, Adam A. Adam (b.1802) born in Ashkirk Parish, son of Thomas. He was a shepherd at Kirkhope, Selkirkshire. He married Margaret Elliot in 1835 and their children included: Jane (b.c.1836); Thomas (b.c.1837); Jessie (b.c.1840); William (b.1841); John (b.1844); Elizabeth (b.1846); Mary (b.1848); Andrew (b.1850); Margaret (b.c.1853); and Robert (b.1856). Allan became Director of Pringle of Scotland in 1964. Andrew (15th C.) resident of Eckford. He is recorded in the Justiceaire held in Jedburgh in 1493, when 2 men had remission for stealing from him, with Robert Scott of Whitchester acting as his surety. Andrew (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His children included: Margaret (b.1742); and Margaret (again, b.1743). Andrew (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Isabel Andison in Hawick Parish in 1759 and their children included: Isabel (b.1759); and William (b.1761). Andrew (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Cook in 1773 and their son John was baptised in 1774. Andrew (b.1786/7) born in Cavers Parish, he was a shepherd in Yarrow Parish. He was at Eldenhope in 1841 and Hartleap in 1851 and 1861. His wife was Jane and their children included John and Thomas. Andrew (b.1820) son of James, he was born in Denholm. In 1861 he was a woollen framework knitter in Lanton. He married Isabella Daniel in Bedrule Parish in 1861, and their children included: James (b.1867); and Andrew (b.1870). Andrew (b.1822/3) born in Denholm, son of James and Jane Scott. In 1861 he was a woollen framework knitter in the village of Lanton, living with his sisters Margaret and Isabel and his nephew William. Andrew Borthwick (1885–1977) born in Hawick, son of Thomas and Mary Miller. He served in the Navy and died in Mitcham, Victoria, Australia. Andrew Moss (20th C.) probably son of James and born in Cavers Parish. He was Headmaster of Newcastleton School in the 1940s and was first Secretary of the village hall committee. Archibald (b.1790) born in Southdean Parish, son of Adam and Jane Scott. In 1841 he was a farmer at Todlaw in Jedburgh Parish and in 1851 and 1861 he was a grocer in Jedburgh. He married Elizabeth (or ‘Betty’ or ‘Eliza’) Millar in 1823 in Jedburgh. Their children included Adam, Christian, Jean (who married George Miller in Hawick), Mary, Eliza and Martha. Christina nee Scott (b.1792/3) born in Melrose, she was a grocer at 41 High Street, recorded in 1861. George (16th C.) recorded in 1541 on a list of tenants and other associates of James Douglas of Cavers when he complained about his farm of Whitriggs being burned by Walter Scott of Branxholme. He may have been related to John, who was also named. George (18th C.) resident of Appletreehall. He married Betty Lorraine and they had a son George (b.1789), baptised in Wilton. George (b.1789) born in Wilton Parish, probably son of George, he was an agricultural labourer.

In 1851 he was living at Darnick Vale near Abbotsford and was a widower in Darnick village in 1861. His wife was Margaret and they had a son George. He is probably the George who married Margaret Davidson in Wilton Parish in 1817. George (1805–1881) son of Thomas and Janet Nichol, he was born in Ashkirk Parish and worked as an agricultural labourer and shepherd at Stobico. He is recorded there on the 1841 to 1861 censuses. In 1838 he married Elizabeth (‘Betty’) Scott in Castleton; she came from Eves and died in 1898, aged 88. Their children (baptised at Teviothead) were: Thomas (b.1838), who was a ploughman at Hermiston in 1861; Jane (b.1839); William (b.1841), also a shepherd; Janet (b.1843); Margaret (b.1845); Eliza (b.1847); George (b.1852); and Elizabeth (‘Betsy’, b.1855). He died at Stobicote. George (19th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. His wife was Mina Nichol and their children included Margaret (b.1834); she was probably the wife of Tom Heatley who died at Hartshaugh Mill in 1898, aged 64. George (1816–77) 4th child of William and Agnes Laidlaw, born at Highchests. He was brother of James, farmer at Broadhaugh and Robert, builder. He was Cornet in 1843. He was a baker in Hawick and afterwards corn merchant in Backdamgate. He is probably the George who sang at the centenary Burns night in 1859. In 1841 and 1851 he was living on Teviot Square, probably about 3 Sandbed. In 1861 he was at ‘Crescentfoot’, i.e. Backdamgate, and was at Backdamgate on a register of 1866. In Slater’s 1852 census he was listed as a corn merchant on Teviot Square. He is probably also the George who farmed at Broadhaugh. He helped found St. Andrew’s Free Church and was an active member of the Parochial Board, with a particular interest in the administration of the Poor Law. In 1849 he married Jessie (1828–1913), daughter of cabinet-maker Walter Wilson, but they had no interest in the administration of the Poor Law. In 1852 census he was listed as a corn merchant on Teviot Square. He is probably articled to J.P. Alison. From the early 1920s he was in partnership with Alison, with the firm of Alison & Hobkirk lasting until 1959, the business eventually turning into Aitken & Turnbull. Other building designs attributed to him included Council Housing on Renwick Terrace and at Rosebank, Bemersyd House, Rutherford Lodge, Allars Kirk and Hall, the Pavillion, Blackfriars Kirk in Jedburgh, the Relief Kirk in Kelso, Hawick Cottage Hospital, Selkirk Gas Company, Taddie’s Cafe and Billiard Saloon, 4 Wellington Street, Langton Mill Farm near Duns, Drumlanrig’s Tower renovations and Burnfoot Parish Kirk. James (15th/16th C.) one of the Bailies appointed in 1512 by James Douglas of Cavers to give sasine to William Cranston in the lands of Denholm. His name is recorded as ‘Jaco Hopkirk’. James (16th C.) occupier of land in Denholm in 1535, along with William Davison and Archibald Turnbull. These lands were inherited by Janet Scott, widow of Walter Scott. James (16th C.) recorded as Vicar of Carrington (or Kerrington) Parish in Midlothian in 1549. He is an early example of someone bearing this surname. He must have converted to the new religion, since his name appears as Reader of the same Church in 1574. James (d.1679) from Cavers Parish. He was among the 200 men who died on ‘the Crown of London’ when it shipwrecked off the Orkneys and the captain refused to unlock the hatches to let the prisoners save themselves. The ship was transporting Covenanters to America after their capture at Bothwell Bridge. James (17th/18th C.) recorded being ‘in Burnflat’ in 1705 and as ‘casier coater to Walter Paterson’ in Burnflat in 1708. He was presumably a road-layer living in a cottage on Paterson’s land at the time. He married Helen Paterson, who was called Isabel in the 1702 marriage record in Cavers Parish; she was probably related to the Patersons of Burnflat. Their children (baptised in Hawick) included Margaret (b.1705) and John (b.1708). The witnesses in 1705 were Walter and Archibald Paterson and in 1708 were Walter Paterson of Burnflat, Archibald Paterson, ‘Casier’ and Francis Paterson in Flex. James (18th C.) married Isobel Murray in Roberton Parish in 1751. James (18th C.) married Janet Black in Hobkirk Parish in 1764. She was daughter of William Black. James (18th C.) married Janet Hogg in 1777, the marriage being recorded in Wilton and Ashkirk Parishes. James (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Highchests in 1784 when recorded as ‘junior’ (suggesting he was son of James. His children included: Nelly (b.1783); and Nelly (again, b.1784). He may be the same James who married John (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish, he was at Whitchesters in 1714. In 1731 he witnessed a baptism for James Glendinning (who also lived at Whitchesters). He married Agnes (or Janet) Hunter in Bedrule Parish in 1712 and their children included James (b.1714), Margaret (b.1717) and an unnamed son (b.1720). The 1714 was ‘att ye examina[ti]o[n in Newbigging before witnesses Walter Scott and James Davidson, tenants in Newbigging. John (18th C.) married Helen Robertson in Cavers Parish in 1739. He may have been father of James (b.1744), George (b.1746) and Adam (b.1750). Perhaps the same John was a ‘Casway layer’ in Ormiston in 1761, who married Ann Wright and had children (baptised in Cavers Parish): an unnamed son (b.1753); Helen (b.1755); John (b.1757); Walter (b.1759); Marion (b.1761); and William (b.1763). John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His son Robert (b.1786) with Janet Bryson was recorded in Hawick as what appears to be ‘For.’ (suggesting they were unmarried). The witnesses were Robert (perhaps his father or brother) and Robert Turnbull. John (18th C.) gardener at Timpendean in 1778, when he was working for Archibald Douglas. John (18th C.) married Isabel Scott in Hawick Parish in 1774. Their children included James (b.1784) and Janet (b.1787), both born in Roberton. He was recorded living at Harden in 1784 and Harden Anna in 1787. He could be the John who witnessed a baptism for Robert Scott, farmer in Whitchesters, in 1766. He may also be the John who married Isabel Waugh in 1789, the marriage being recorded in Hawick and Cavers Parishes. John (b.1787) from Roberton, probably son of John and Isabel Scott. He was a framework knitter on the Back Row in 1841, on the Kirk Wynd in 1851 and at 22 Howegate (probably now 1 Loan) in 1861. His wife was Helen (or ‘Ellen’) and they had a grandson John Green. John (1788–1852) son of Adam and Jane Scott, he was baptised in Hawick Parish. He lived in Southdean Parish, but in 1835 he followed his younger brother Adam out to America, settling in New York state. He married Christian Rid dell in 1829 in Hobkirk Parish and she died in 1875, aged 81. Their children included: Janet (b.1830), who probably died in infancy; Adam (b.1832); Jane (b.1834); and Isabella (b.1838). John (b.c.1805) agricultural worker in Southdean Parish. He was living at Falside in 1841. He married Margaret, and their children included Agnes (b.c.1827), Margaret (b.c.1833), Esther (b.c.1835) and John (b.c.1838). George, who was at Falside in 1851, was probably also his son. John (1809–89) born in Galashiel, he was a joiner and cabinet-maker on Allars Bank and on Allars Crescent. He was listed in Slater’s 1852 directory. He married Jane Borthwick (probably daughter of the Newmill miller), who died in 1884, aged 74. Their children included William, Jane, Thomas and John (who died young). His sons carried on the joiners firm of W. & T. Hobkirk. John (b.1813) born in Wilton Parish, probably son of Robert. In 1841 he was living on Buccleuch Street and listed as a District Police Officer. He was a knitter at 10 Teviot Crescent in 1851 and was a gardener living at 29 High Street in 1861. He married Margaret Smith from England in 1832. Their children included Elizabeth, Jane (b.c.1835), Eliza and Robert (b.c.1850). John (b.1819/20) from Jedburgh, he was a machine-cleaner in a wool factory, living at the Sandbed. In 1851 he was at Buccleuch Street, with his older brother William also living with his family. In 1861 he was at ‘10 Sand Bed, Back House No 1’. His wife was Isabella, and their children included William. He is probably the John who married Isobel Fulton in Wilton Parish in 1847. John (19th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He married Jane Pringle in 1862 and their daughter Sarah was baptised in the same year. John (19th C.) married Beatrice Cunningham Mowbray in Wilton Parish in 1871. John (1836–1911) born in Hawick, son of Robert and Margaret Roxburgh. He worked as a teacher of music and a tailor in Douglas, Lanarkshire. Later he was postmaster there. In 1860 in Hawick he married Margaret Eliza, daughter of William Martin. Their children included: Mary MacDonald (b.1861), born in Hawick; Margaret (b.1863), who married George Hogg, gardener at Buckland, also born in Hawick; Janet Nesbit (b.1865); Elizabeth Charteris (b.1867); Robert (b.1869), who died young; William Martin (1870–1946); John Roxburgh (b.1872); Mina Beatrice (1877–1967); and Flora (b.1879). John (d.1941) said to have been son of William and grandson of William, he was Chairman of Weensland Spinning Mills. He was Chairman of Hawick Parochial Board in the 1880s and was also as a Justice of the Peace. He served as Treasurer at St. George’s Kirk 1914–21 and there is a memorial lectern to him and his wife in St. George’s. He was President of the Callant’s Club in 1923. In later life he lived at Ladylaw. He married Robina Hogg, who died in 1939. They are buried in Wilton Cemetery.

Matthew (15th C.) recorded in 1494/5 when he served as surety for Henry Turnbull in Uinhank, as well as for himself. He was fined for non-appearance. Robert (18th C.) resident of Roberton. He married Marion Nichol and their children included Margaret (b.1739). Robert (b.1715) son of Adam. He was shepherd on several farms around Hawick in the 18th century, specifically Over Southfield, Goldielands, Flex and Whittlaw. He was Hawick Town Herd roughly 1752–57. He may thus have been the Herd from whom a new house was built in 1755 and who in 1756 was given a shilling by the Council ‘when his child was almost burnt to death’. He gave evidence in 1767 in relation to the use of the Common; he was at that time married and living in Hawick. Robert (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Highchesters in 1781 and 1786. He married Jane Crozier in 1778, the marriage being recorded in Roberton and Ashkirk Parishes. Their children included: James (b.1779); William (b.1781); John (b.1782); and Margaret (b.1786). He was surely related to James, who was at Highchesters at the same time. He may be the Robert who witnessed a baptism in Hawick in 1786 for John. Robert (18th/19th C.) married Margaret Laidlaw in Cavers Parish in 1800. Robert (18th/19th C.) probably son of John and Janet Bryson. He married Margaret Blaikie in Wilton in 1812. Their children included: John (b.1813); Jean (b.1815); Robert (b.1817); Joseph (b.1819), who moved to the United States; Anna (b.1821); and William (b.1822). In 1841 his wife and 3 children were living with Hector Blaikie (probably his brother-in-law) at Howdenburn, and so he was presumably deceased. His wife, son Jospeh and 2 other children emigrated in 1842. He is probably the proprietor of the Grapes Inn, listed in Pigot’s 1837 directory. Robert (c.1801–72) son of James and Jane Scott, who came from Roberton. He lived in Newcastleton, where he worked as a labourer, including at the Stitchellhill Linery. He was listed as labourer in Newcastleton among heads of households in 1835. He was recorded as a farm worker who was living at Cleithaugh in Southdean Parish in 1841. In 1861 he was living on Douglas Square. He married Mary Armstrong from Canonbie, who was listed in the 1841 census as ‘Wife of R. Hobkirk, Q’man’. Their children included: Jean (or Jane, b.1822), who married Richard Murray; William, who was a gardener in Lancashire; Robert (b.1833); and Agnes (b.1838). Their children probably also included Janet, Walter, Helen, Mary and Margret.
Robert (1801–61) born in Ancrum, son of Walter and Beatrice Dunlop. He worked as a coal merchant in Hawick and lived at 69 High Street. In 1841 he was listed as a gardener at Slitrig Cottage, was a coal salesman on the High Street (around the Crown Close) in 1851 and by 1861 he was a gardener at about 69 High Street. In 1830 he married Margaret, daughter of John Roxburgh from Ancrum. Their children included: Janet (b.1831); Walter (b.1834); John Roxburgh (b.1836), who moved to Douglas, Lanarkshire; Robert Roxburgh (b.1838); and Robert (again, b.1842). He died in Hawick. His widow is recorded applying for poor relief in 1866 and 1867.

Robert (b.1808/9) born in Ashkirk Parish. He was a shepherd at Berrybush in 1851. In 1861 he was listed as a former shepherd, living at Huntlaw Cottages in Minto Parish, along with his brother Thomas, who was a cattle dealer, and his niece Janet (from Teviothead). Robert (1809–1911) mason of William Hobkirk & Sons, eldest son of William and Agnes Laidlaw. He was baptised at East Highcester in Roberton Parish, and was brother of George and James. He was an early Trustee of St. George's Kirk. He was living at 10 Teviot Crescent in 1851 and listed as a builder on Teviot Crescent in Slater's 1852 directory. In 1861 he was a mason at Hope Hill Cottage in Wilton Parish. He later moved to Southburn, Tundergarth. He married Elizabeth Grierson in 1849 in Kirkton; she was sister of Thomas Grierson, farmer at Effledge. His children were: Elizabeth 'Bessie' (b.1851); William (b.1852); Robert (b.1853); Agnes (b.1855), who married Alexander Scott, farmer at Kinminghall; Margaret (b.1857), who married Provost Edward Wilson; Wilhelmina (b.1859); Georgina Isabella Grierson (b.c.1863), who later married the same Alexander Scott; and Jemima (b.c.1865). He later moved to Southburn, Tundergarth. He married Elizabeth Grierson in 1849 in Kirkton; she was sister of Thomas Grierson, farmer at Effledge. His children were: Elizabeth 'Bessie' (b.1851); William (b.1852); Robert (b.1853); Agnes (b.1855), who married Alexander Scott, farmer at Kinminghall; Margaret (b.1857), who married Provost Edward Wilson; Wilhelmina (b.1859); Georgina Isabella Grierson (b.c.1863), who later married the same Alexander Scott; and Jemima (b.c.1865). He later moved to Southburn, Dumfriesshire and may have died at Tundergarth. Robert (b.1815/6) from Ancrum, he was a shoemaker in Hawick. He lived on the High Street (probably near No. 55) in 1851. He married Margaret Turnbull in 1841 and their children included Jane J.D., William, Janet and Margaret. Robert (19th C.) married Annie Hogarth in Hawick in 1875. Robert William ‘Bob’ (1921–2002) fiddler, born in Westerkirk. His father (William Smith) played the bagpipes and his mother (Mary Janet Black) played the melodeon. He took up the fiddle at the age of 14, and played his first dance at 16. He worked as a herdsman at Colterscleuchshiel (near Teviothead), then Hawklaw (near Bochester). In later life he worked at Dodburn Filters, which gave him more free time to pursue his music. In 1950 he married Elizabeth (Lily) Margaret Beck. He played for the Teviotdale Valley Dance Band and the Roger Dobson Scottish Dance Band. He was a founder member of the Borders Strathspey and Reel Society. He performed his folk fiddle music widely, being Scottish Fiddle Champion three times and featured on the albums ‘The Borders – songs and dances of the English-Scottish Border’ (1960) and ‘Border Fiddlers’ (released 2000, from much earlier recordings). A tune he wrote, sometimes used by morris dancers in the English North-west is called ‘Robbie Hobkirk’s Polka’. Following a serious car accident and a stroke, he has limited use of his left-hand side, but recovered enough to keep playing until his last days. After his death there was a celebratory session in the Horse and Hounds, with a memorial concert the following year at Thorterdykes. Thomas (d.1568) yeoman of Gateshead, County Durham. He is an early example of someone bearing this surname, and may be related to many later Hobkirks of the Newcastle area. His daughter Katherine was recorded being of Laystoffe, Suffolk. His daughter Agnes was married to Anthony Bell, a sailor. In 1573 there was a deed between the 2 sisters relating to his lands in Gateshead. John who died in the same place in 1573 was surely related. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish who married Bessie Cessford in Bedrule in 1694. Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident of Denholm on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. Perhaps the same Thomas in Denholm married Margaret Scott in Cavers Parish in 1708 and was recorded in Denholm in 1716. His children included: Bessie (b.1709); James (b.1711); Janet (b.1713); Margaret (b.1716); Thomas (b.1718); and James (again, b.1721). Thomas (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He married Janet Cathrae in 1724. He was at Northwick Mains in 1725 when their daughter Margaret was baptised. It is possible he was the same man as Thomas from Cavers. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Ormiston in 1730 when his son William was baptised. Thomas (1716–81) born in Glasgow, he lived in Dalkeith, purchasing Dalbeth estate in about 1754 after making his fortune as a tobacco merchant in the West Indies. He married Elizabeth Smellie in 1744 and their children were Mary, Barbara, Elizabeth, James, Francis, Elizabeth, Mary (again), Margaret, Thomas, Francis (again), and Mary (once more). In 1774 he matriculated arms, probably the first of his surname to do so. He was 5th and only surviving son of Francis and Mary Paterson, and said to be great-great-grandson of a John ‘Hopkirck’, who came from Germany. His connection to the Hobkirk area is unknown. Thomas (b.c.1717–67) born in Scotland, he lived in London. It is possible he was the Thomas, son of Thomas, baptised in Cavers Parish in 1718. He firstly married Elizabeth Parry in 1748 in St. George, Mayfair. Their children were: Walter (b.1750); Margaret (b.1751); and Thomas (b.1753). He secondly married Eleanor Pegus in 1760 in St. Martin in the Fields. Their children included: Jane Eleanor (b.1761); Ann (b.1762); John Peter (b.1763); and Jane Dorothy (b.1765). He was buried at St. Paul’s Church, Covent Garden. Thomas (18th/19th C.) nurseryman in Hawick. He married Isabel Scott in in 1793, the marriage being recorded in Jedburgh and Maxton Parishes. Their children (baptised in Hawick) included: James (b.1795); and Robert (b.1797). The family are buried in Old Wilton Kirkyard. Also buried there is his sister, Janet (d.1826), who was from Southdean. In 1841 he was an agricultural labourer at Whinfield. In 1851 and 1861 he was a shepherd at Synton Mill. Their children included: Margaret (b.1794); William (b.1795); John (b.1797); Janet (b.1799); Adam (b.1802), shepherd at Kirkhope; George (b.1805), shepherd at Stobicote; Robert (b.1808); and Thomas (b.1813), shepherd at Dykes. Thomas (b.1813) son of Thomas, he was born in Ashkirk Parish. In 1841 and 1851 he was a shepherd at Dykes in Cavers Parish. Thomas (19th C.) married Janet Jackson in Castleton Parish in 1865. Perhaps the same Thomas married Mary Jackson in Teviothead Parish in 1869. Thomas (1847/8–1930) son of John, he ran the joiners firm W. & T. Hobkirk with his brother William. He lived on Orchard Terrace and was an office-bearer for St. George’s Kirk for 57 years. In 1871 in Wilton Parish he married Margaret (or Mary), daughter of Robert Miller and Anne Scott. Their children included: John (b.1872); George M. (1884–1970), local architect; and Andrew Borthwick (1885–1977), who died in Australia. Thomas (b.1879), who served in the Navy, may also have been his son. Walter (17th C.) attorney in Hawick. In 1688 he represented Bessie Ruecastle, wife of Alexander Hislop in a land transfer with her husband. Walter (18th C.) married Agnes Cessford in Bedrule Parish in 1707. Their children included: William (b.1707); Adam (b.1709); James (b.1710); Walter (b.1712); Margaret (b.1713), perhaps the Margaret who married John Cessford in 1748; and William (again, b.1715). Walter (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Ester Dryden and their children included Margaret (b.1743). He may be the Walter whose son Adam was baptised in Robertson Parish in 1739. Walter (18th C.) married Jean Millar in Hawick Parish in 1757. Walter (18th C.) married to Betty Dickson. Their children included: Walter (b.1761), baptised in Hawick Parish; James (b.1764), born in Duns; and William (b.1766), also born in Duns. Walter (b.1761) born in Hawick Parish, son of Walter and Betty Dickson. He lived in Ancrum Parish, where he may have been a gardener. He married Beatrice Dunlop in 1793 in Ancrum and their children included: William (b.1797); Helen (b.1799); Robert (1801–61), who died in Hawick; Walter (b.1804); and George (b.1806). Walter (b.c.1815) living in Lilliesleaf in 1841, probably on Main Street. His wife was Mary. Walter (c.1829–69) born in Hawick, he emigrated to Australia. He was a shopkeeper, butcher and publican in North Adelaide, Campbelltown and Port Augusta. In 1852 in Jedburgh he married Alice or Alison Rae. He emigrated to South Australia in 1854, along with Alison (probably his wife), Elizabeth (b.1838, perhaps his sister), Margaret and Robert. The passage was horrific, with cholera killing many on board. William (15th C.) recorded in 1494/5 when George Shiel in Bedrule had remission for stealing a sheep of his from Bedrule. William James (d.1679) laird of land in Hobkirk parish, and one of the earlier people to bear that surname (actually written ‘Hopkirk’). He was a covenanting supporter who was imprisoned after the Battle of Bothwell Brig. Later sentenced to transportation to the American Colonies, he was drowned when the transportation ship wrecked off Moul Head in the Orkneys. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living in Denholm in 1702. His children included Thomas (b.1702). William (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His children included Andrew (b.1715). He could be the ‘Coater’ who (along with John Wilson, tenant in Branxholme Town) witnessed a baptism for John Scott. William (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Jean Brewhouse and their son Alexander was baptised in 1724. William (18th C.) resident of London, he was landlord of the ‘George’ in Enfield in the 1770s. In 1772 he married Letitia Hawes and their children (mostly baptised at St. Andrews Church, Enfield) were: Adam (b.1774); Alicia (b.1775); Sarah (b.1777); Mary (b.1778); William (b.1779); Henry (b.1781); and Samuel (b.1783). Given the similarity of names, it seems likely he was related to the older Adam who lived in London at that time, was also connected with Jamaica, and probably came from the Hawick area. William (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Longside in Cavers Parish. He was recorded at Hawkness in 1779 and 1780. He was taxed at Langside for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797. His children, baptised in Cavers Parish, included: Thomas (b.1767); William (b.1770); George (b.1771); John (b.1773); Jean (b.1775); Mary (b.1779); Betty (b.1780); and Rachel (b.1782). William (18th/19th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Janet Riddell and their daughter Isabel was baptised in 1811. William (1781–1859) probably son of Robert, he was christened at Roberton. He was a mason, and was the founder of the Hawick builders firm William Hobkirk & Sons. In 1809 in Wilton Parish he married Agnes Laidlaw (1790–1873). Their children (mostly baptised in Roberton) were: Robert (1809–1911), also a mason; William (1811–70), baker; Margaret (1813–61), who married Adam Beattie, millmaster in Edinburgh; George (1816–70); James (1819–1904); Adam (1822–c.70); John (1825–76), who married Margaret Leishman and died in Edinburgh; and Thomas (b.1829), who died in infancy. In 1841 he was a mason living at Ashkirk Mill, with his wife and sons Robert, James and Thomas, while the rest of the family were at the Sandbed. In 1851 he and his family were living in Peebles. William (b.1810/1) from Jedburgh, he was a handloom weaver in Hawick. In 1841 he was living with the family of his brother John on Buccleuch Street. William (1811–c.70) son of William and Agnes Laidlaw, who were from Roberton. He was a baker on the Sandbed. He was recorded there in 1841 with his brothers George (also a baker), Adam (a joiner’s apprentice) and John (baker’s apprentice), as well as sister Margaret. He and his brother George were also corn merchants for at least 25 years. He gave evidence to the Commission into the law of ‘hypothec’ in 1865, stating that he had been a corn merchant in Hawick for 10 years and Edinburgh for 15 years, buying grain from Prussian and Danish ports.

He is probably the brother of James of Broadhaugh and hence the William who wrote poetry for local papers, including a piece celebrating the Duke of Buccleuch reaching majority in 1852, entitled ‘Long Live Good Buccleuch’ (attributed to George Hobkirk in one source). He died at Teviothead. William (b.1815/6) born in Cavers Parish. In 1861 he was a labourer at ‘Spittal Guidepost’. His wife was Janet from Castleton, and she had a son, Walter Little, by a previous husband. He may be the William who married Janet Smith in Castleton Parish in 1865. William (b.1818/9) from Selkirkshire. In 1861 he was a shepherd at Peelbraehope. His wife was Mary (or Marion) and their children included: Mary (b.1845), born at Craik; and Andrew (b.c.1849). William (19th C.) married Marky Scott in Hawick Parish in 1843. Their Children included: Margaret Bell (b.1846), baptised in Hawick; and Andrew (b.1849), baptised in Eskdalemuir. He may be the shepherd from Yarrow who was at Kiddomhill in Eskdalemuir in 1851. William (19th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. His wife was Marion Laidlaw and their children included: Mary (b.1845). William (1841–1913) shepherd at Borthwickshiel and later at Edgerston. He was probably son of George, shepherd at Stobicote. He is probably the shepherd of that name living at Skelfhill in 1861. In 1865 at Hummelknowes Mill he married Janet Smith, and she died in 1906. Their children were: James (b.1864), baptised in Bedrule; George (b.1866); Ellen (b.1867); William Smith (1871–1942), baptised in Southdean Parish, who also worked on local farms; George (again, b.1872); Thomas (b.1874); and Helen (b.1876). He died in Hawick. William (1841–1913) Hawick mason and joiner who was involved with Hawick Free Kirk. He was son of John and Jane Borthwick. He ran the joiners firm W. & T. Hobkirk with his brother Thomas. He married Jean Brown and later Margaret, daughter of Archibald Johnstone Donaldson, oil extractor. William Smith (1871–1942) son of George and Janet Smith, he was born at Letham in Southdean Parish. Based on the birthplaces of his children, he must have worked on Eilrig farm and at Elgill farm, Westerkirk, probably as a shepherd. In 1908 he married Mary Janet Black. Their children were: Agnes (‘Nan’, b.1909); Janet (‘Jenny’, b.1914); and Robert (‘Bob’) William (b.1921). He died at Hawklaw, near Bonchester, and was buried in the Wellogate Cemetery (also spelled ‘Habkirk’, ‘Hapkirk’, ‘Hopekirk’, ‘Hopekirke’, ‘Hopkirk’, etc. in earlier records).
Hobkirk Baa

Hobkirk Baa (hob-kirk-baw) n. handball game still played in the village of Hobkirk, also sometimes called ‘Bonchester Baa’. The ball is traditionally thrown up on the site of the old church (and in earlier times was thrown over the building). There are 3 halls for each side: for the ‘doonies’ they are at Hawthornside, at Abbotrule and behind the Horse and Hounds; for the ‘uppies’ they are at the Forkins, at Wolfelee and at Highend. In earlier times they were about a mile from the kirkyard, at Harwood Mill for the uppies and Hobsburn for the doonies. Additional halls at Abbotrule House and Drythropple were added in the 1840s (apparently because the Stewart brothers had been so successful in preventing the ball getting up the water to the single hail).

The event is traditionally held on the first Monday after the New Moon after Candlemas, before Denholm Baa. In early times it was traditional for the ball to be thrown over the church before daylight and for some participants to climb up to ring the bells. Stalls were set up on gravestones in the churchyard, selling nicknacks, snacks and liquor. The heritors tried to suppress the gathering in 1803, but failed. In modern times each ball is sponsored by local people and businesses.

Hobkirk Glebe (hob-kirk-gleeb) n. lands once attached to Hobkirk Kirk. They were referred to as ‘all and haill the old Glebe of Hobkirk’ in 1757 when sold by Thomas Scott of Stanedge to William Elliot of Wolfelee. These could be the same as the lands of ‘Hobkirkmanse’, listed as being farmed by Andrew Ormiston and James Turnbull as the lands of ‘Hobkirkmanse’, listed as being farmed by Andrew Ormiston and James Turnbull on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls.

Hobkirk Kirk (hob-kirk-kirk) n. church of Hobkirk parish, built in the narrowest part of the Rule valley. It dates back to at least the 12th century, and at early times belonged to Jedburgh Abbey. In 1220 the vicarage was valued at 10 merks, with the vicar being obliged to give the canons half a stone of wax annually at the feast of St. James (as part of an agreement between Jedburgh Abbey and the Diocese of Glasgow). Jedburgh Abbey continued to receive benefits from the church until the time of the Reformation, when the teneinds (from Wells, West Lees, Billerwell, Hallrule, Town o’ Rule, Hobsburn, Weens, Gledstains, Howa, Stonedge, Appotside, Hawthornside and Wauchope) amounted to 1 chalder, 3 bolls of barley and 1 chalder, 6 bolls of meal. The present church, with its great square tower dates from only 1862–69, with David Rhind as architect, and was restored in 1914. It incorporates parts of the older church of 1690–92, demolished in 1862, which was plain and heather-thatched, with a clay floor 2 steps below the churchyard, and no ornamentation (and can be seen in an old sketch). A bell and belfry were added in 1741, the bell (inscribed with that date) and belfry roof being later moved to Weens House. The old church was re-thatched in 1742 and 1758. It was substantially repaired in 1777 after the suppression of Abbotrule Kirk: the roof was slated and a new aisle was built to hold the new worshippers from Abbotrule. It was again repaired in the 1840s with the floor repaired (but a mass of human remains was found just below the surface and reinterred. There is also some existing carved stonework from an earlier 12th century chapel (one piece engraved with the date 1211), which was situated on the rising ground to the north-east of the churchyard and was probably the original ‘Ecllesia de Roule’; three carved capitals are described in 1904. They were recorvered from Weens House in 1937, along with others from a nearby cottage in 1950, and are now in the present church, with a decorated quoin later positioned in the churchyard. A baptismal font stone was said to have been on Cowdie’s Knowe before being moved to Weens garden. The eastern gable of the early church was incorporated into the newer (17th century) one and the chancel converted into an aisle for the Elliots of Harwood. It has also been suggested (by Jeffrey) that the earliest church was at Town o’ Rule. The previous minister’s house was repaired in 1659 and the Manse was listed as ‘waste’ in 1694, so that no tax was paid on its 5 hearths. Tax was paid on 17 windows for the manse in 1748. The current Manse dates from 1770. The glebe lands constituted about 15 acres, augmented by 24 acres from Abbotrule. The kirkyard was enclose by a wall in about the 1820s, before that being regularly used for games and displaying goods during Hobkirk Baa. It is said that an ancient stone kist was once discovered when digging a grave near the site of the old church, and a large quern was unearthed when digging foundations for an aisle for the Wauchope family. Prominent sites in the kirkyard are devoted to the Elliots of Harwood, and the families of Wauchope and Weens. The church was without a minister for about 5 years following the ‘Revolution’ of 1689. There was also formerly a Free Kirk established near Wolfelee serving those who ‘came out’ of Hobkirk and Southdean Parishes in 1843. The Parish was linked with Southdean in 1973, united with Southdean and linked with Cavers and Kirkton 1988–96, and then in 2004...

Hobkirk Pairish (hob-kirk-pa-reesh) n. parish about 7 miles south-east of Hawick, containing Bongie, Bridge and Hobkirk villages. It runs along the Rule Water from the watershed with Liddesdale in the south to the boundary with Bedrule Parish in the north, being about 11 miles long and 3 miles wide. It was bounded by Bedrule, Cavers, Kirkton, Southdean and Castleton. The parish was mentioned as early as 1220 and before the Reformation consisted of the estates of Wells, West Lees, Billerwell, Hallrule, Town o’ Rule, Weens, Hobbsburn, Hawthornside, Gledstains, Unthank, Appotside, Howa, Stanedge, Harwood and Wauchope. The old Barony of Feu-Rule may have originally corresponded with the boundaries of the Parish of Hobkirk. In the county valuation of 1643, the lands of the Parish were valued at £8542 10s. In 1649 the land and crops of the Parish were valued at about £7600 and in 1678 the lands were valued at £542 13s 4d. It was extended by having part of Abbotrule annexed to it in 1777. The original church probably dates from the early 13th century. It was replaced by a second church, completed in 1693 and used until 1862. The present church, partially incorporating the older one, was built in 1869, and restored in 1914. The proprietors of the parish were for a long time the Turnbuls and many Elliots of Harwood are also buried in the churchyard. The parish has given rise to a surname. A History of the parish and surrounding area is given in George Tancred’s ‘Rulewater and its People’ (1907). Records of baptisms and marriages begin in 1726. The Borders Archive has Parish records for 1846–1930.

Hobkirk Schuil (hob-kirk-skiil) n. school in Hobkirk Parish, existing from at least the early 17th century. Tancred describes its state in the 1840s, being a small cottage lying below Kirknowe, with one room for the schoolmaster and another for the scholars. The floor was of clay, the benches narrow, the lighting poor, the only heat from the fireplace, and no sanitary facilities. A new building was erected shortly afterwards and is shown on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map to the south of the Kirk. There were 60 pupils there in the 1830s. Thomas Young was schoolmaster in 1616. William Rutherford in 1616 and 1618, James Arbuthnott in 1619, George Henderson in 1657, William Clerk in 1681, Andrew Watson in 1693, Sam Oliver 1726–50, William Armstrong 1751–1808, William Turnbull 1821–46, Thomas Shiel probably until 1856 (when he died), John Malcolm from 1857 and Thomas Culbertson from 1886. The Borders Archive has school board minute books for 1873–1919. There was also once a school for girls, situated at Cleuch Head, and established by Mrs. Elliot of Wolfelee.

Hobkirkstile (hob-kirk-stil) n. another name for Kirkstile in Hobkirk Parish (it is so marked on Stobie’s 1770 map; also spelled ‘Hobkirk-style’). Hob o Alton (hob-å-awl’-in) n. nickname for Robert Scott, Bailie of 1612. Hob o Thorlinsope (hob-å-thor-linz-höp) n. nickname of Robert Elliot, one of the Liddesdale thieves apprehended in Hawick in October 1567. Hobsburn (hobz-burn) n. mansion house near Bongie, dating to the 17th century and now run as a small guest house. The house is on the stream called Hobs Burn, which joins the Rule Water at Bonchester Bridge. The lands there were once a Lairdship within the Barony of Feu-Rule. ‘Hogg’ Shiel was recorded there in 1494/5. Robert Turnbull was there in 1562 and his house was already called ‘the auld hous’ at that time. Walter Turnbull ‘of Hoppisburne’ is recorded in 1568, and was Laird in 1574 when he had to appear before the Regent and Lords of Secret Council for building his own mill there; this may have been a small threshing mill, powered by water from a pond. Probably the same Walter Turnbull of Hobsburn was cautioned by the Privy Council in 1580 and was only ‘called of Hobsburn’ (suggesting he had lost his lands there) when listed among criminals in 1586/7. Thomas Turnbull is recorded there in 1589 and 1590. James Turnbull ‘of Hoppisburne’ servitor to Sir Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst is recorded about 1601. The lands were sold in 1606 by Thomas Turnbull, younger of Hobscurn, to John Scott, brother of Walter Scott of Allanmphant. The lands of ‘Hoppisburn and Weydus’ are there described as being between Hallrule on the east, Rouchlaw Sike on the west, Nether Bonchester on the south and Hall-rule Common on the north. The house itself may date to around 1600, and is said to be the oldest house in Hobkirk Parish. It was used as a dower-house by the widow of Sir Gilbert Elliott in the late 17th century. In 1691 it was sold to Thomas Inglis. James Turnbull was tenant there in 1694. The estate was formerly an important one in Hobkirk Parish, recorded before the Reformation, and at one time extended as far as to include the lands of Midburn. The lands later became part of the Stonedge estate, with ‘Hobsburn’ being the name used for the main house there in the 18th century. The name was changed to ‘Greenriver’ around 1793 by James Chisholme, after his Jamaican plantation, but reverted back to the original later. Along the south side of the stream, to the east of the house, lies an ancient earthwork, called Duncan’s Hole. The bridge there was washed away in the flood of 1846. The ‘Kail-pot (or Kitchen)’ of the farm was the location for the ‘hail’ for the ‘dooies’ in the game of Hobkirk Baa in the 19th century (recorded at least as early as 1652, it was formerly written ‘Hoppsburne’, ‘Hoppisburne’, etc., being ‘Hopisburne’ in 1594/5, ‘Hoppsburne’ in 1657, ‘Hopisburne’ in 1657, ‘Hopisburne’ in 1574, ‘Hoppsburne’ and ‘Hopisburne’ in 1580, ‘Hoppsburne’ in 1582 and 1606, ‘Hopisburne’ and ‘Hoppsburne’ in 1586, ‘Hoppsburne’ and ‘Hoppsburne’ in 1590, ‘Hoppsburne’ in 1652, ‘Hobisburne’ in 1677 and ‘Hobscurne’ in 1694; the name probably derives from the stream there).

Hob’s Burn (hobz-burn) n. stream that runs roughly east to join the Rule Water at Bonchester Bridge. Hawthornside Burn and Mid Burn join it further up (labelled ‘Hopps B.’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

Hobsburn Yett (hobz-burn-ye) n. former place name in Hobkirk Parish. It is recorded as ‘Hoppisburne Zett’ in the 1562 document relating to the Baronial dispute over lands in Fru-Rule. It probably lay to the east of Hobbsurn, near the haugh and what is now the village of Bonchester Bridge.

Hob’s Knowe (hobz-now) n. hill between Craik village and Buccleuch, directly between Black Rig and Deep Slack, reaching a height of 366 m. There is a disused quarry there (it is unclear who the ‘Hob’ might be).

Hob the Lonkie (hob-thun-long-kee) n. nickname for Robert Scott, recorded in 1612. It is possible the name was actually ‘Lolkie’, meaning ‘blessed’.

hoc (hoch) n., arch. hock, joint in the hind leg of an animal, back of the knee, ‘to cruck a hoch’ means to bend the knees in order to sit or kneel – ‘A cruiket ma hoach an clappeet masel doon a meenint on ov a foggie bank’ [ECS] (also written ‘hoach’; cf. hough).

hockert (ho-kur) v., arch. to crouch in a sitting position, crouch over a fire for warmth (cf. hoakert).

hockey (ho-kee) n. game played with sticks and a small ball, popular as a girls school sport in the latter part of the 20th century. The sport has been popular with both sexes in the last few years of the 19th century and in the early 20th, with matches played in the Park. Hawick’s particular claim to fame in the world of field hockey is that Ivan Laing scored the first goal in the Olympics in 1908.

hockey (ho-kee) interj., arch. used as an emphatic declaration, sometimes ‘By hocky!’.

Hoddam (ho-dam) n. Adam (13th/14th C.) swore fealty to Edward I in 1296, when he is recorded as being ‘de Hodolm’. His seal showed a squirrel (or perhaps lion rampant) with the words ‘S’ADE DE HODVME’. He is recorded as ‘Adam de Hodholme’ in the early 1300s when he resigned lands in the Borthwick valley. This included Kirk Borthwick and Hoscott. The lands that he had formerly held in Kirk Borthwick were granted to William Barbour in about 1321. He was presumably associated with Hoddam (or ‘Hoddom’) in Dumfriesshire, later a seat of the Maxwells. The Borthwick lands were then granted to William Barbour by Robert the Bruce. He was presumably a supporter of the opponents of the Bruce. Robert of Hoddam, from Roxburghshire, who also signed the Ragman Rolls of 1296, was surely a relative.

hodden (ho-din) n., poet. a coarse, grey, homespun, woolen cloth – ‘Hey! thou that wears the mony-colour’d wig. An’ hates to look on Namely hoddin grey’ [JoHa], ‘The blanked blue or hoddin...

grey, which the outer garments of our forefathers displayed ...' [RW], '... To be coosily clad in the cooress o' hoddern grays' [WL], 'Hither and yont thro' the hoddern mist Rise the merks o' her classic story ...' [WL] (also spelled 'hoddin' and familiar from Burns; the cloth was naturally grey from a combination of wool from white and black sheep; possibly related to harden).

hodder (ho-du-r') pp., arch. hobbled - '... An' pass the time till a' get hodddert hame'[JoHa].

hodder (ho-du-d) v., arch. to walk with a hobble or waddle - 'This self-same chuckie had been nought uncommon, But joost a hirplin, hoddlin, hanely woman'[JoHa].

Hoddeswuddie (ho-du-l-wu-dee) n. Hoddeswoodie, former farm on the lands of Hobsburn. It lay on the roadside near Boucherster Bridge and was still thatched in the mid-1800s. In the early 1700s Rev. Nichol Edgar is supposed to have convinced a ghost to stop haunting Hobkirk churchyard and instead walk a straight line between here and Howaburn; this was recounted by George Tancred, and may have been the subject of a lost ghost story of John Leyden, entitled 'Hoddeswoodee Haugh'. James Turnbull was there in 1786 and James Douglas in 1790 (also written 'Hoodleswoodie', it is 'Hoddeswoody' in 1786).

Hodge (hoj) n. John (16th C.) recorded in Standhill in 1580 when he had a contract for his daughter Elizabeth to marry James, son of James Sharp in Langnewton. William (17th/18th C.) Baxter in Hawick. He witnessed baptisms in 1707 for merchant 'Black Walter' Scott, in 1708 for fellow baxter Walter Boyd, in 1709 for merchant Michael Scott and for merchant William Craig, in 1711 for shoemaker Robert Porteous, in 1713 for carrier Walter Deans, in 1714 for candlemaker John Scott, and in 1721 for merchant Andrew Turnbull. He is probably the William whose children included Robert (b.1695). William (18th/19th C.) gardener at Borthwicksheils. He witnessed a baptism for Roberton Schoolmaster Robert Miller in 1798.

hodgel (ho-jul) n., arch. a kind of dumpling, made of oatmeal (a 'yitmeal hodgel') or flour, apples or other ingredients, a stodgy piece of food – 'A nice hodgel o' dumplin' '[GW], a stout, clumsy person – 'Or gin we haena swords an' spears, To stick an' slash the vap'rin' hodgels'[JoHa] (also hodiel).

Hodgins (ho-jinz) n. William 'Billy' Hawick middle distance runner. He set a new record for the 880 yards in 1956 and was 6 times winner of the British half-mile championship. At the Common Riding games the 800 m race is competed for the Billy Hodgins Challenge Cup.

Hodgson (hoj-sin) n. Rev. James (19th C.) pastor at Hawick Baptist Kirk 1896–97. He edited 'Grace and Truth', the local church newsletter. There was friction during his incumbency, and he resigned, but was convinced to return. However, 30 members of the congregation formed their own group, meeting on Union Street. He therefore stepped down for good, and it took great effort to reunite the congregation and appoint his successor. Richard (1812–77) Borderer and M.P. for Devonport. He was Chairman of the North British Railway when it was selected to extend their Edinburgh line through Hawick to Carlisle, but was forced to resign in the late 1860s amid financial irregularities. At the sod-cutting ceremony in 1859 he was made an Honorary Burgess of Hawick; his wife turned the first sod. He may also have been called Thomas - 'High o'er the rest, Tam Hodgson stood - High, like a farmer's cock – And loudly crowed, till all his band Re-echoed what he spoke'[T].

hodiel (ho-deel) n., poet. a dumpling made of oatmeal, fat and seasoning, or sometimes with flour, apples, etc. – 'Dumplins, hodiel, weel made up Wi' suet, spice'[JoHo] (cf. hodgel).

hodrod (hod-rod) n., arch. a confused collection of things, conglomeration – 'A perfec' hodrod o' stuff lyin' in ablow the bed'[GW].

Hoffman presser (hof-num-pre-sur) n. job in the knitwear industry, someone who operates a Hoffman presser. This was the first generally available steam presser.

Hogarth

Hogarth (hö-garth) n. James (b.1879) born in Galashiels, he was educated at Melrose School. In 1895 he became an apprentice gardener at Newton Don, then moved to Culdees Castle, worked in Lord Powerscourt's gardens near Dublin and was then at Perthshire and Midlothian, before taking up employment at Weens in 1903. At Hallrule in 1903 he married Bessie Thomson (b.1878), whose parents were in Mackside Tollhouse. Paul (1959– ) wing forward for Hawick R.F.C. He first played for Burnfoot Bandits, later playing for the High School team, the P.S.A. and the Y.M. He represented Hawick R.F.C. from 1977/8 and won...
6 league winners’ medals with the Greens. He also appeared for the South team, was Captain of the Scotland B side and played for the Scottish Border Club team in the Hong Kong Sevens in 1982. He moved to Edinburgh, where he ended his rugby-playing days with the Accies. In 1990 he set up his own landscape gardening firm, The Paul Hogarth Company, which has offices in the U.K. and Ireland and has won awards for its work. He has collaborated on projects with his old schoolfriend Gordon Muir; in 2020 the pair re-designed the landscaping around the Hornshole Monument. Living in Dollar, he married Lesley Wells (also from Hawick) and had a son Tom and daughter Charlie. Robert (1785–1860) born in Channelkirk, Berwickshire, he was son of Robert and Mary Scott. His father was said to be an early grower of turnip and is credited with the introduction of the potato at Carfrae in about 1780. His brother George was a lawyer, newspaper editor and music critic in Edinburgh, friend of Sir Walter Scott and father of Catherine, who married Charles Dickens. He was tenant farmer at Newton in Bedrule Parish, where most of his children were born. He later farmed at Scremerston in Northumberland. He married Elizabeth Purves (who died in 1825) and their children included: Margaret (b.1811), who married Patrick Clay Grieve; Mary Scott (1813–76), who died unmarried; Christina (b.1825), who married John Ballantyne. Robert and Peter died in the wreck of the Royal Charter off Anglesey. He died at Tweedmouth. T.A. (19th/20th C.) Secretary at Hawick Baptist Church 1901–13.

hogg-back gravestone (hög-bawk-gräv-stån) n. a gravestone from the 9th–11th century, perhaps a relic of pre-Christian traditions, with a Viking influence. They are named for their appearance, reminiscent of a hog’s back, but in fact representing the roof of a house. There are local examples from Bedrule (built into the church porch), Ancrum churchyard and Nisbet (where there were 3, the best of which is preserved in Hawick Museum).

hogg (hög) n. a young sheep, after weaning but before its first shearing – ‘Item nyne hoggis in syntoun price of the pece ourheid 13s 4d’ [SPB1579], ‘...£11 Scots for some malt, ane yow, and twa hoggis’[BR1638], ‘For either gimmer, hogg, or croak, By George, I’ll g’ye a cowin’’ [JoHa], ‘...stock wethers hogs unclipt, 12s. 9d.; ditto ewe hogs unclipt, 14s. 2d.; ewe hogs sold at market, 11s. 3d.’[RGJH], ‘Our helper, workmate, slave and friend, you are the one we have to send to gather ewe and hogg’[TD] (also written ‘hog’: the word is used in several place names, e.g. Hog Gill, Hoghill and Hog Knowe; the dominative is hog-gie).

Hogg (hög, hog) n. Adam (16th C.) recorded in 1579 among those owed money by the deceased James Liddersdale, Burgess of Selkirk. Adam (b.1709/10) shepherd in Newbigging for 10 years, for 6 years at Alton Croft and then was at Tod-shawbaugh. He gave evidence at the court case for the division of the Common in 1767. He was probably the Adam, son of James, born in Hawick in 1710. He could be the Adam who was at Slaidhills in 1743 and who married Jean Elliot, with children: Helen (b.1739); Janet (b.1743); and James (b.1747). The witnesses in 1743 were Robert Elliot and Patrick Hume, tenants in Slaidhills. Adam ‘Satch’ (20th C.) art teacher at Hawick High School. Agnes (18th C.) cook at Woll in 1785, when she was working for Charles Scott. Agnes (1824/5–1902) daughter of James of ‘Teribus’ fame. She married stocking-maker Adam Laing and their children were: Jane (b.c.1845), who married James Renwick; James (c.1847–1909), grocer; Euphemia (c.1851–1918), who lived at Marfield and died unmarried; Eliza (b.c.1853), who married William Pitcairn, Headmaster of Buccleuch School; Agnes (1855–1910) who married manufacturer Francis Elliot Wilson; Adam (b.1858), who died young; Christina Grey (b.1861), who married Alfred Warr, minister of Rosneath, and had 2 sons who were well-known clerics, Alfred Ernest Warr and Charles Laing Warr; and Jessie D. (b.1864), who married manufacturer Francis Elliot Wilson.

Rev. Alexander (d.c.1619) graduating from St. Andrews University in 1601, he received testimonials from the Presbytery of Hamilton, and became minister at Ashkirk in 1611. A dispute with ‘the gudewife of Sintoun’ (probably the widow of Walter Scott of Synton) in 1615 led to her taking communion at both Hassendean and Lilliesleaf Kirks, which resulted in a rebuke for both those ministers. Presumably this arose out of a difference of opinion on church matters between this lady (as one of the parish heritors) and her minister. He was minister until 1619 and died before March of the following year. He married Agnes.
Scott (who later married James Scott of Whitelaw). Their children included: Jean, who married Robert, son of Robert Scott of Chesterhouse; and Elizabeth. Alexander (17th C.) probably schoolmaster of Bedrule (according to a gravestone of his widow Margaret in the churchyard there). Alexander (d.c.1687) resident in ‘Newtoun’ whose will if recorded in 1687. It is unclear which Newton this might have been, although certainly in Roxburgh, Selkirk or Peebles counties. Alexander (18th/19th C.) listed operating as a carrier, along with John Brown, in Pigot’s 1825 directory. They left from Denholm to Edinburgh every Monday fortnight. Amos see John Amos Andrew ‘Dand’ (16th C.) witness in 1550 to a lease granted by the curators of the young James Cranston to his mother Janet Beaton, who was wife of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme. It was witnessed at Bransholme, and so he was probably a local man. Andrew (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Margaret ‘Hessilop’ (i.e. Hilop) and their children included John (b.1657). Andrew (18th C.) recorded at Threephead in 1781, 1785 and 1787. His children, baptised in Roberton parish, included: Jane (b.1781); Euphan (b.1783); Nelly (b.1785); and Andrew (b.1787). He could be the Andrew, son of James, baptised in Roberton in 1747. Andrew (b.1802/3) born in Lilliesleaf Parish, he was educated in Selkirk and Edinburgh. He may be the son of James born in Lilliesleaf in 1798 and was surely related to John, the poet at Roadhead. He was schoolmaster in Roberton in the 1820s and early 1830s and helped prepare the description of Roberton Parish (written by the minister) for publication in the New Statistical Account of Scotland in 1841. A letter of 1828 in the Walter Mason Collection discusses ‘payment by War Office of his Militia account’. In 1833 he moved to be schoolmaster in Wilton, where he is recorded several times in the period 1835–41. He lived there with his sister Mary, described as ‘housekeeper’, and Elizabeth, who was probably a younger sister. He prepared a description of the Parish for the New Statistical Account (1834), where he is described as ‘formerly schoolmaster of Roberton, now schoolmaster of Wilton’. In 1851 he was Inspector of Poor in Wilton, living on Wilton Place and was listed as ‘collector of poor rates, Wilton place’ in Slater’s 1852 directory. Charles ‘Charlie’ or ‘the Mumper’ (?–) grandfather of Jake Irvine, he played forward for Hawick R.F.C., worked on the railway and was known for his pawkly humour. Elizabeth ‘Bessie’ (17th/18th C.) recorded being paid out of the Wilton poor box in 1705. Elizabeth ‘Betty’ (1938/9– ) local woman who was raised on a farm, she worked at Drumtoune and Barrie’s and lives in Denholm. She wrote a memoir ‘Echos: The Memoirs of a Country Woman’, a novel ‘Web of Intrigues’ (2008) and several books of poetry. Francis (b.1798) son of William and Jane White, he was an agricultural labourer from Ashkirk Parish. He was listed at Drinkstone among heads of households in 1840 and 1841. On the 1841 census he was living at Drinkstone Cottage, at Castleside in 1851 and at Woll Lodge in 1861. He married Margaret Scott and their children were: William (b.1822); Charles (b.1824); Elizabeth, ‘Betty’ (b.1824); Jane (b.1828); Christian (b.1831); Margaret (b.c.1835); Anne (b.c.1838); and Francis, ‘Frank’ (b.1840), the Hawick song writer. Francis ‘Frank’ (1840–1880) son of Francis and Margaret Scott, he was born at Drinkstone Cottage. His father was a farm worker, who moved back to the Ashkirk area. In 1851 they were at Castleside and in 1861 he was a lodger with his brother Charles at 16 Buccleuch Street. He later lived at 1 Allars Bank. He became a solicitor’s clerk with George & James Oliver in Hawick. He was writer of ‘I like Auld Hawick’, which is his only known poetical work, contributed to the magazine of the Hawick Literary Society in 1867. He acknowledged himself as writer 10 years later when he sang it at a dinner for the departure of Bailie Michie. He was active in the Conservative Association, being the joint Secretary and Treasurer. He was also instrumental in setting up a Public Library, a keen member of the Congregational Church, the Good Templar movement and other improvement societies. He became a member of the Archaeological Society in 1865, was Treasurer for 12 years, and contributed some papers to the Transactions (e.g. one about ‘Some Old Songs, with Local Allusions’). He became ill and died suddenly in the Exchange Hall. He is buried in Wilton Cemetery, and Frank Place was named after him. A portrait of him exists. George (16th C.) recorded being in Wester Lilliesleaf in 1580 when he witnessed a transaction in Selkirk. George (d.c.1687) shepherd in Sundhope when his will was recorded in 1687. It is unclear which Sundhope this was. George (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. One of the oldest surviving headstones in the old kirkyard commemorates his wife Margaret Leyden, who died in 1695 and another wife, Janet Elliot, who died in 1705. George (17th/18th C.) miller in Hawick.
Parish. He married Mary Hogg in 1725. Their children included: Alexander (b.1726); Janet (b.1727); and Ann (b.1730). The witnesses in 1727 were Benjamin ‘Th...’ and John Scott and in 1730 were George and Robert Scott. George (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1762 he married Mary Armstrong who was from Minto Parish. George (18th C.) shepherd on the farm of Whitlaw. His house was described in the perambulation of the Common carried out in 1767, and lay within the boundaries of the Common. He was probably related to James, recorded at Whitlaw in 1766. George (c.1792–1850s) mason who lived at Bramble Hall. He firstly married Margaret Forsyth in Cavers in 1815, and she died in 1832. Their children included: Elizabeth (b.1823); William (b.1824); Thomas (b.1826); and George (b.1831). In 1836 he secondly married Mary Pearson from Castleton. Their children were: Helen (b.c.1838); Alexander (b.c.1841); Adam (b.c.1843); Joseph (1845–1903); James (b.c.1848); and Andrew (b.c.1850). He is recorded on the Back Row on the 1841 census. George (b.1795/6) farmer at Barebacklaw in Ashkirk Parish. He was there in 1861, listed as farmer of 28 acres. His wife was Isabella, and thy had a son James. George (1817–74) originally manager at William Watson’s, he took over the hosiery branch at Underdamside in 1863, forming George Hogg & Sons. He married Elizabeth Cavers, who died in 1880, aged 61. They had 9 children, including: George (b.1840), partner in the family firm; and Helen Wilson (b.1841–95), who married George Redhead; Robert (b.1847/8), 3rd son, also a manufacturer; Adam (b.1850), who died young; Elizabeth (b.1852); Andrew White (b.1854); and Margaret Ker (b.1857). A portrait of him exists and he is buried in Wilton Cemetery. His sister Christian married baker Andrew White. George (b.1816/7) son of William, farmer at Cavers Knowes. He took over the farm from his father, running it along with his younger brother Robert. George, J.P. (1840–1900) eldest son of George. In 1874 he became partner (along with his brother Edward) in the family firm of George Hogg & Sons, hosiery manufacturers, which then moved to Millbank. He was a councillor from 1886 for Teviot Ward, a Bailie from 1888, Provost 1890–93 and returned to the Council in 1898. A keen bowler, Mason and cricket supporter, he was also a member of Hawick Parish Council and Poorhouse Committee. He married Agnes Paterson of Melrose (who died in 1928, aged 81) and is buried in Wilton Cemetery. George (b.1862) born at Woll Gate in Ashkirk Parish. He was gardener at Bucklands. In 1891 (in Lanarkshire) he married Margaret Hobkirk (1863–1938) from Hawick. Their children were William, John, Annie, Selby and George (all born in Wilton Parish). George (b.c.1870) from Newcastleton. He apprenticed with a blacksmith, but showed a literary interest. In 1886, at about the age of 16, he produced a monthly newspaper, entitled ‘Hogg’s Journal and Newcastleton Review’. In all 5 issues were published (in Hawick by Vair & McNairn). Harry (20th C.) Beadle at Cavers Kirk around the 1950s. He was known for being short-tempered with the minister being late for Sunday services (which in those days were held at both Cavers and Kirkton churches), waiting with his watch and when the minister arrived slamming the pulpit and vestry doors and going home! James (15th C.) recorded as witness to a sasine for the lands of Denholm Mains in 1465/6. Perhaps the same James was on the ‘retoar’ panel for on the retour for deciding on ownership of the East Mains of Hawick in 1437 and another for the Kers of Altonburn in 1446/7. James (d bef. 1527) owner of 2 husbandlands within the town of Lilliesleaf, rented from the Bishop of Glasgow. In 1527 his heir and brother John gained the lands. James (17th C.) resident at Horselee in Cavers Parish in 1694 according to the Hearth Tax rolls. James (17th C.) rented quarter of the farm of Wiberton from the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1690. He is also listed as resident at Wiberton on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls; Walter, who was listed after him, was surely related. James (17th/18th C.) recorded as servitor to Walter Scott in Crumhaugh in 1709 when he married Margaret Scott (also of Hawick Parish). Their children included: Adam (b.1710); Walter (b.1714); and Isabella (b.1716). James (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He married Euphan Elliot in Eskdalemuir in 1725. He was living at Howpasley in 1726. His children, baptised in Robertson Parish, probably included: an unnamed child (b.1726); James (b.1730); and John (b.1735). If he remarried, then Andrew (b.1747), baptised in Robertson, may also be his son. James (18th C.) resident of Burnflatt. He married Mary Rutherford in Hawick Parish in 1764 and had a daughter Isabel in 1764. James (18th C.) resident of Whitlaw. He was probably related to George, who was recorded as shepherd at Whitlaw in 1767. He married Christian Hood in Hawick in 1764. His wife was also from Hawick.

and their children included: Agnes (b.1766); Walter (b.1768); and George (b.1773). The witnesses in 1766 were the whole congregation. James (d.1782) cooper in Hawick. His death is recorded in 1782. It is possible he was the father of James, writer of ‘Teribus’, whose father is said to have died when he was an infant. He could be the James who married Mary Rutherford in Hawick in 1763 or the James who married Christian Hood in 1764. Mary Rutherford died in Hawick in 1808, with her deceased husband referred to there as ‘Cudy’. James (18th/19th C.) stocking-maker in Hawick. His wife Lizzy Thomline died in 1816 and an unnamed twin of his died a week later. It is not impossible that this is the same man as the author of ‘Teribus’, if he was married twice. Alternatively, he could be the ‘workman’ James recorded in 1779 when he witnessed a baptism for carrier Gideon Scott. James (18th C.) wright in Hawick Parish. In 1772 he married Jane Dawson and their children included: Elizabeth (b.1773); Janet (b.1777); William (b.1779), who served in the army; Adam (b.1782); John (b.1784); Isabel (b.1787); and Susan (b.1787). The witnesses in 1779 were John Kyle and Robert Thomson. James (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He married Helen Wilkie in 1789, who was also from Roberton. Their children included Thomas (b.1792). James (1770–1835) poet and novelist, called the ‘Ettrick Shepherd’, not to be confused with his more famous namesake and contemporary from Hawick! Locally he was referred as ‘Jamie the Poeter’. From a common upbringing, it is said that he never fit in well with polite society, and lived most of his life in the Borders. He was born at Ettrick Hall, in a cottage that was demolished in 1847. His father Robert was a shepherd who lived to about 90, and his mother was Margaret Laidlaw, who was a great teller of tales and singer of songs. He spent a total of 2 periods of about 3 months at school, worked as a cowherd, then at age 16 got a job in Peebleshire, moving to Yarrow in 1790, where he had use of his employer’s library, and started to write verses from 1796. He took lease of the farm at Ettrick House in 1800, soon after publishing his first poem, with a collection ‘Scottish Pastorals, Poems, Songs, etc., mostly written in the dialect of the South’ in 1801. He met Sir Walter Scott and became friends with Allan Cunningham. Finding no success in farming, he moved to Edinburgh, where he attempted to pursue a literary career, while continuing odd agricultural jobs. Success came with the publication of ‘The Queen’s Wake’ in 1813, followed by life rent of Altrive (in the Yarrow valley) being given to him by the Duke of Buccleuch in 1815. He continued to publish verse and works of fiction, his poem ‘Kilmeny’ and novel ‘Confessions of a Justified Sinner’ were literary landmarks. At age 50 he married Margaret Phillips from Annandale, and they had one son. He was a frequent visitor to Hawick, particularly for fairs and Common Ridings, and was a friend of James Ruickbie. A poem ‘Round About Hawick’ appears in the tale ‘The Souters of Selkirk’ and the Punch-Bowl public house features in another story. There is a statue of him at St. Mary’s Loch (unveiled in 1860) and a memorial at Ettrick Hall where he was born – ‘Beside the lone St. Mary They have raised to him a pile, – ’Mid the haunts of elf and fairy, The scenes he loved so well’ [JT], ‘And next the name of Et-trick’s Bard I saw; Sons of the desert – nature’s darling child! Say, shepherd, from what sources didst thou draw They strains so sweetly beautiful and mild?’ [JTe]. James (18th/19th C.) tenant of Lilliesleaf Mill, recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. James (c.1780–1838) writer of the familiar version of ‘Teribus’. We have no record of the date (or even year) of his birth. Born in Hawick, his father died in infancy, and he was hired as a shepherd at Wisphill at age 9 or 10, becoming a stocking-maker’s apprentice 2 or 3 years later. He became an avid reader and was a member of the Anti-Burgher (Green Kirk) congregation (probably the reason why his children’s births are not in the Hawick Parish records). He also repaired and made several improvements to the stocking frames, and was once jailed for labour organisation. ‘An Address to the Inhabitants of Hawick’ (1809) was his first poetical production; it seems that the actions of the Council regarding changes to the Common Riding, and appointment of a Cornet, in opposition to the wishes of the inhabitants of the West-end, fired him up into becoming an ardent Common Riding supporter. His version of ‘Teribus’ was developed soon afterwards, the final version being published in 1819, along with ‘Flodden Field’, its pre-quel. He wrote an additional verse for the tri-centenary of 1814. He also wrote a poem on the Carterhaugh Baa, and another on the death of Rob Reid of the Roadhead’s dog Flora, but nothing else survives. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He was said to be short in stature; in an argument with Robert ‘Lurgie’ Wilson, Lurgie said ‘Ye’re a big man to be sae little’, to which he replied ‘An’ ye’re a little man to be sae big’. He married Ebenezer (which in those days could be a woman’s name) M. Porteous in 1817 in Wilton Parish, and she died in 1846, aged 58. She was living on Green Wynd in 1841 with children James, Euphemia, Eliza and Robert. Their children included: Euphemia (b.c.1819), who may have married a Mr. Henry; James (b.1821/2); Eliza (b.1823/4), who married Andrew Ramsay of the Queen’s Bodyguard, who was later clerk at the Tower of London; Agnes (b.1824/5), who married stockmaker Adam Laing; Robert (1827/8–1913), also a frame-worker; and possibly Margaret, who married John Gilroy. In 1851 3 of his children were living together at ‘Hensnest’ in the Village. A commemorative plaque was unveiled at 14 Loan on the night of Common Riding Thursday 1900 (by his grand-daughter Miss Hogg), although the date of his death given there disagrees with what is in the register of deaths. The parish register notes ‘James Hog Stockmaker (Poet) (died suddenly)’. He was buried in Wilton Old Cemetery, where his gravestone was refurbished in 2008—‘So long as Hawick upon the Teviot stands—Long as the Common Riding is in vogue—So long your song, sung by her jovial bands, Shall still immortalize the name of Hogg’ [JR]. James (b.1801/2) agricultural labourer who was living at Todshawhill Cottages in 1841. In 1851 he was at ‘Old Easter Essenside’ and in 1861 at Netheraw Cottage in Lilliesleaf Parish. In 1827 he married Margaret Robson in Roberton Parish. Their children (mostly baptised in Kirkton Parish) included: Agnes (b.c.1833); Thomas (b.1835); James (b.1837); and Alexander (b.c.1839); Walter S. (b.c.1841); and Margaret (b.c.1846). Either he or perhaps his father could have been the James, resident of ‘Todjahill’ in 1821 when he subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’. James (b.1801) from Lilliesleaf, son of James and Mary Hendeson. His brother John was a mason and he also had siblings Jane and Robert. He was farmer at Crumhaughill. He is recorded there in 1841 and 1851, when he farmed 126 acres and employed 3 men. By 1861 he farmed 75 acres and he was still recorded there in 1868. His wife was Agnes and their children included: James and William. James (b.1821/2) son of James Hogg of ‘Teribus’ fame. He worked as a framework knitter. He was said to have considerable literary abilities. He was also interested in local history, being an early member of the Archæological Society (No. 21 on the membership list). In 1851 he was living at ‘Hensnest’ in the Village, with his siblings Eliza and Robert. In 1861 he was at 5 Slitrig Bank. He married Jessie Douglas (from Bellie in Morayshire, 1833–1913) in Ancrum in 1860. Their children included Jeannie (1861—1954) and Euphemia (1865–1937). He died at 6 Dalkeith Place. James (19th C.) grocer in Hawick. His shop was at 9 High Street, and was the oldest licensed grocer’s in town in the late 1800s, with the old building demolished about 1900. Probably the same establishment can be seen in an 1899 photograph at 28 High Street.

James (b.1870/1) Stationmaster in Hawick. He married Elizabeth M. Reid, who died in 1945, aged 67. He is buried in Wilton Cemetery. John (15th/16th C.) brother and heir of James. In 1527 he took over his brother’s rental of 2 husbandlands within the town of Lilliesleaf, rented from the Bishop of Glasgow. This was for ‘his service as serjeant’. John (16th C.) recorded in Todrig in 1580 when he was listed as a debtor to John Hall, webster in Selkirk. In 1581/2 he witnessed a transaction for Walter Scott of Todrig. John (16th/17th C.) granted 2 cottage-lands in Lilliesleaf in 1595/6. John (17th C.) weaver in Bonjedburgh recorded in 1684 on a list of Covenantant fugitives. John (17th C.) resident at Newbigging in Hawick Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He is listed as ‘webster there’. John (d.1822) son of a Lilliesleaf schoolmaster. He moved to Hawick, and became a weaver at Roadhead, where he published his volume of verse ‘Poems on Different Subjects’ (1806). This contains many poems in dialect, whose lines have been used as early examples in dictionaries. He was also known for his penmanship, and may have worked for a while as a teacher. He was a good friend of James Ruckbie, and he appears in Wilson’s ‘Tales of the Borders’. He married Beatrice Stuart. Their children include John Amos, one of the founders of Hawick Co-op. He was buried in Old Wilton Churchyard. He may have been son of Andrew and Helen Archibald, born in Lilliesleaf in 1764 (and baptised there in 1765). John (18th/19th C.) resident of Mangerton. He was there in 1821 when he subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’. He was probably related to Robert, who was at Mangerton in 1797. John (b.1792/3) born in Ashkirk Parish. He was shepherd at Forkins in 1861. His wife was Helen, from Roberton. John Amos (1795–1882) son of the poet John, he was born in Lilliesleaf. He was a stockmaker in Hawick and locally was very influential in liberal politics, particularly the Chartist movement, being the first Secretary following its formation in 1838. This led to him being one of the founders of the Hawick Co-operative Society in 1839. In 1841, 1851 and 1861 he was living at 1 Kirkwynd. His wife was Agnes and their children included Margaret, John, Joan, Christian, Agnes and Helen. He was grandfather of John Gilroy the bookseller, through his daughter Margaret.

Rev. John (d.1877) from Hawick, he was associated with Allars Kirk and ordained as a minister in 1846 at Dumfries Townhead. However, he resigned over financial uncertainty in 1850. He travelled to Canada, becoming a minister in Hamilton, Ontario, moving to Detroit in 1859, and by 1861 had become a Church of Scotland minister in Guelph. He obtained a Doctorate of Divinity in 1870. He married Jane McMillan (also from Scotland) in Detroit. A photograph of him exists. John (b.1828/9) born in Roberton Parish, he was a butcher in Hawick at 71 High Street. His wife was Mary Black, who died in 1877, aged 44. Their children included: Janet (1860–1942); and Elizabeth Mary (b.1867), who died in infancy. John (1831–1908) local artist. His paintings of 'Wilton Lodge' and 'Teviot Bridge' are in the Museum.

John (20th C.) farmer at Headshaw. He had a lease for the farm of Headshaw from the Earl of Minto in 1936. John G. ‘Hoggy’ (1957/8– ) played for the Trades and 160 times for Hawick R.F.C. as a full back. He later became a rugby referee. He was Cornet in 1983. His sons Stuart and Graham both play rugby. He worked as a manager for Johnstons of Elgin in Hawick and retired in 2020. He became Chairman of the Common Riding Committee in 2019 and President of the Callants’ Club in 2020. Joseph (1845–1903) son of George from Hawick and Mary Pearson from Castleton. He worked as a French Polisher. In 1864 he married Margaret, daughter of William Laidlaw in Hawick. They had 15 children and the family emigrated to the U.S.A. in 1894, settling in Philadelphia. Their children were: George (b.1864) who died young; Christina (1866–1919), married John Leithead; George (1869–95); Mary (1871–74), died young; William (b.1873), died young; Robert (1874–1917); Mary (b.1875), died young; William Laidlaw (1876–1944); Alexander (1878–1901); Daniel (b.1880); Margaret L. (b.1882); Joseph (b.1884); Rachel Laidlaw (b.1887), died young; Mary (1890–1909); and James (b.1891), died young. Robert (15th/16th C.) witness to the 1508 sasine where Adam Hepburn inherited his father’s Lordship of Liddesdale. Walter was listed just before him, and so probably related. Most of the men were local, but it is unclear how they may be related to other Hoggs. Robert (17th C.) resident in Weensland. He married Margaret Anderson and their daughter Bessie was baptised in 1688. The witnesses were Bailies William Laing and Robert Wright. Robert (18th/19th C.) farmer at Mangerton, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as owner of 6 horses. He was probably related to John, who was recorded there in 1821. Robert (1786/7–1857) coachman at Edgerston, son of Robert. He married Isabella Murray, who died in 1860, aged 71. Their children included: Robert (1817/8–53); and Elisabeth, who died aged 13. They are buried in Bedrule kirkyard. Robert (1827/8–1913) younger son of James, author of ‘Teribus’. He worked for 30 years for hosiery manufacturers Renwick & Co, this being run by the husband of his niece, Jeanie Laing. Robert (1854/5–96) coachman in Hawick. He married Mary McBain, who died in 1933, aged 92. They are buried in Wilton Cemetery. Stuart (1992– ) son of John, who was Cornet and played for Hawick R.F.C., he attended Trinity and Hawick High Schools. He played back for the Wanderers and the P.S.A. before being selected for Hawick R.F.C. himself, later signing as a professional for Glasgow Warriors and joining Exeter Chiefs in 2019 (where he was part of the 2020 Champions Cup winning team). He was first capped for Scotland in 2012, when still a teenager. He now has more than 80 caps for Scotland, was named player of the tournament in the 2016 and 2017 Six Nations competitions and served as Captain in 2020/1. He was Captain during Scotland’s 2021 victory in the Calcutta Cup, the first victory at Twickenham for 38 years. In 2021 he became the most capped full back in world rugby. He also toured with the British and Irish Lions in 2013, 2017 and 2021. Thomas (17th C.) shepherd at ‘Chisholme and Widburne’ in Wilton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. Thomas (18th/19th C.) farmer at Bowanhill Roadside (near Teviothead), listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Thomas (18th/19th C.) saddler who was one of the first members of Hawick Curling Club. He may be the same as the carter whose daughter Betty died in 1810. Thomas (d.1824) resident of Newmill-on-Teviot when his death was recorded in Hawick. Thomas (18th/19th C.) stocking-maker in Hawick. His unnamed child died in 1816. He may be the Thomas who married Isabel Stavert and had children Walter (b.1785) and Thomas (b.1787). Thomas (1791–1882) born in Yarrow, he was an agricultural labourer at Borthaugh. In 1841 he was living at Borthaugh Cottages and was at Cottage No. 2 in 1851. He may be the Thomas who was a shepherd at Hartwoodburn Cottage in 1861. He married Jane Scoon (1795–1847). Their children (mostly baptised in the East Bank Kirk) included: Thomas (b.1817), died in infancy; Janet (1818–43), who married William Bell; Isabella (1820–98), who married Thomas Murray; Euphemia (1823–46); Thomas (again, 1827–46); Julian (b.c.1827); Margaret (1829–1902), who married Simon Gordon and died on Staten Island; and Robert (1832–1904), who died in Rhode Island.

Thomas ‘Tom’ (1934–) local councillor and Honorary Provost 1996–99. Walter (15th/16th C.) listed as a witness to the sasine of 1508 in which Adam Hepburn inherited Liddesdale and other lands previously belonging to his father, Patrick, Earl of Bothwell. Robert is listed after him, and so they may have been related. Walter (16th C.) listed among those named on the side of the Kers in the 1568/9 bond between the Kers and the Scotts. This was to resolve the long-running feud, including apologising in Melrose Abbey for the murder of the earlier Sir Walter in 1552. This suggests that he may have been involved in that murder on Edinburgh High Street.

Walter (17th C.) listed as resident at Wiltonburn on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. James, who was listed after him, was surely related. Walter (18th C.) recorded as ‘servant’ (along with John Elliot) in 1742 when they witnessed a baptism in Hawick for herd Walter Laidlaw. Perhaps the same Walter was at Ormiston in 1728 when he married Janet Main and in Skelfhill in 1729 when one of his daughter Agnes was baptised in Cavers Parish. James (b.1730), baptised in Robertson, may also have been his child. Walter (18th C.) recorded in 1772 when his child Isabel with Janet Crozier was baptised in Hawick Parish. The baptism is labelled ‘For.’, making it clear that the couple were unmarried. It was witnessed by James (surely a relative, but there are several contemporary men of that name) and Walter Wilson (perhaps ‘Haunless Wat’). Walter (18th/19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living at Teindside Bridge in 1779, 1781, 1783 and 1784. Probably the same Walter was recorded at Teindsideburn according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. His children included: Walter (b.1779); Janet (b.1781); Thomas (b.1783); and Thomas (b.1784). Perhaps the same Walter, married to Cecilia Huggan, had additional children Betty (b.1785) and George (b.1787) in Hawick Parish. Walter (b.1777/8) born in Ashkirk Parish, he was frame-worker in Hawick. He married Euphemia (or Euphan) Hardie in Wilton Parish in 1815. Their children included: George (b.1817); Christina (b.c.1819), who married Andrew White; and Robert (b.1819/20), who worked as a woolen finisher. In 1851 he was living with his daughter Christina and her family on Wilton Path.

Walter (1784/5–1826) died at Falnash Mill. He is buried at Teviothead along with his son Thomas. He is probably the son of Thomas and Isabel Stavert born in 1785. Walter (18th/19th C.) resident at ‘Bridgend’ when he paid the cart tax in Cavers Parish in 1791. He may also be the Hawick carrier who owned 2 horses according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Walter (19th C.) ploughman to Mr. Pringle at Hyndlee farm. He was a member of the original congregation of Wolfelee Free Church. Walter (19th C.) married Mary Jane Hobkirk in Hawick in 1874. William (15th C.) witness to the sasine of 1464/5 in which William Douglas of Drumlanrig was given the lands of Kirktown Mains and Flex. He is recorded as ‘Wilelmo Hog’, and most of the other appear to have been local. William (17th C.) recorded on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls at Borthaugh. William (17th C.) resident at Easter Highchesters according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. William (17th/18th C.) married Isobel Laidlaw in Wilton in 1714. Their children included: William (b.1715); Isobel (b.1717); and Isobel (again, b.1720). William (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Agnes Hardie and their children, baptised in Wilton, included John (b.1722) and James (b.1724). The witnesses in 1722 were James Hardie (perhaps his father-in-law) and John Scott. Probably the same couple also had children baptised in Melrose: Andrew (b.1727); George (b.1729); Jean (b.1732); and Agnes (b.1734). William (17th/18th C.) resident of Dodhead in Yarrow Parish. In 1720 he married Margaret, daughter of James Anderson, tenant in Ramsaycleuch. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was in Denholm...
in 1719 when he married Ann Douglas and also in 1722. His children probably included: Margaret (b.1721); and an unnamed son (b.1722). Andrew (b.1743), also baptised in Cavers, may also have been his son. William (18th/19th C.) joiner and cabinet maker on the High Street, recorded on Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. He is probably the wright of that name whose daughter Janet died in Hawick in 1797 and the wright of that name whose wife ‘Beanie’ Crawford died in 1805. He may also be the wright whose wife Margaret and daughter Margaret Elliot both died in 1809. He witnessed a baptism for Andrew Turnbull in 1808. William (b.1745/5) from Roxburgh Parish, he was tenant farmer at Cavers Knowes. In 1861 he is recorded there as farmer of 183 acres. His wife was Margaret and their children included George and Robert (who both carried on the farm), together with Andrew, Margaret, Ellen and Marie. William (b.1779) born in Hawick Parish, son of James and Jane Dawson. He lived at Roberton Woodfoot. He is recorded there as an army pensioner in 1841 and ‘Chelsea Pensioner’ in 1851, along with his sister Elizabeth. In 1819 he married Helen Oliver in Robertson Parish and she was deceased by 1851. William (b.1857) son of George and Mary. He lived at 3 Back Row and enlisted with the Royal Scots in 1881. William C. ‘Bill’ (1898–1969) son of Robert and Helen Oliver in Roberton Parish and she was deceased by 1851. William (b.1857) son of George and Mary. He lived at 3 Back Row and enlisted with the Royal Scots in 1881. William (b.1745/5) from Roxburgh Parish, he was tenant farmer at Cavers Knowes. In 1861 he is recorded there as farmer of 183 acres. His wife was Margaret and their children included George and Robert (who both carried on the farm), together with Andrew, Margaret, Ellen and Marie. William (b.1779) born in Hawick Parish, son of James and Jane Dawson. He lived at Roberton Woodfoot. He is recorded there as an army pensioner in 1841 and ‘Chelsea Pensioner’ in 1851, along with his sister Elizabeth. In 1819 he married Helen Oliver in Robertson Parish and she was deceased by 1851. William (b.1857) son of George and Mary. He lived at 3 Back Row and enlisted with the Royal Scots in 1881. William C. ‘Bill’ (1898–1969) son of Robert and Helen Wilson, he was born in Hawick. In 1933 he married Isabella (‘Bella’, 1899–1935), daughter of John Ekron. They had a daughter Brenda (b.1934), who married Wilson Clark. He died in Hawick (also spelled ‘Hog’, ‘Hoge’ and ‘Hogge’ in early documents).

hogg an score (hög-in-skör) n., arch. one extra for every 20 sheep purchased – ‘Hog and score. A phrase formerly used in buying sheep of any description, one being allowed in addition to every score; a cled score, Teviotdale’ [JoJ].

hogg an tatti (hög-in-taw’i) n., arch. a dish involving sheep that died naturally, along with potatoes and other ingredients – ‘Hog and Tatoe. It is customary with those who have store-farms to salt the ‘fa’en meat,’ (i.e. the sheep that have died of ‘the sickness,’) for the use of the servants through the winter. This is stewed with onions, salt, pepper and potatoes; whence the name, Teviotdale’ [JoJ].

hoggie (hô-gee) n., arch. a young sheep – ‘...doddy an stirs an queys an stots an gimmers an hoggies an grumphies an guissies’ [ECS] (diminutive of hogg).

hogg in hairst (hög-in-härst) n., arch. a young sheep that is marked at the end of harvest, when it has ceased to be a lamb – ‘A lamb is smeared at the end of Harvest when it is denominated a hog; hence the phrase harvest-hog. After being smeared the second time, a ewe-hog is denominated a gimmer, and a wedder-hog a dymond’ [JL].

Hog Gill (hög-gil) n. stream in the hills to the west of Newcastleton. It rises on Roan Fell Flow and runs through Hog Gill Bog to join the Black Burn, with a waterfall known as Hog Gill Spout just before that. There are old sheepfolds and a shepherd’s bothy nearby (the name is probably related to young sheep).

Hogg’s Journal (högz-jur-nal) n. monthly newspaper printed by Vair & McNairn in Hawick for George Hogg of Newcastleton. It ran for five issues in 1886. It’s full title was ‘Hogg’s Journal and Newcastleton Review’. It was said that Hogg was only about 16 years old at this time.

Hogg’s Mill (högz-nil) n. originally in Underdamside and part of William Watson & Sons, it was taken over by George Hogg in 1863 as a hosiery factory; Hogg had previously been manager of the hosiery side at Watson’s. This factory had much earlier been the ‘Inkle House’ and also known as Roughheugh Waulk Mill. Around 1885 George Hogg’s company moved to an area between the Mill Path and the railway. This factory may have formerly been the premises of Robert Ewen, and took up the entire site between the railway line and Mill Path. The taller block was built on the north side of the property in 1887; this was an imposing Victorian building, with large windows, ornamental corbels near the rood level and an ogee-headed gable on the side facing the road. The factory became derelict in the 1980s, burned down in 1999 and was demolished a year later. An in-house history was written for the centenary ‘The House of Hogg of Hawick, 1855–1955’.

Hoghill (hög-hil) n. former farmstead above Teindside and Commonside, marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map. It is listed in 1686 among the lands of Anna Duchess of Buccleuch, which were occupied by Robert Grieve in Commonside. It is probably the place where John Henderson ‘of the Hoghill’ came from in 1595.

Hoghill (hög-hil) n. farm on the east side of the Ewes valley (and A7 road) between Sorbie and Wrae. It is probably the same as the place formerly known as ‘Howgill’. There are remains of a settlement to the north-east of the farmhouse (it is marked on Crawford’s 1804 map).

Hog Knowe (hög-now) n. hill to the south of the B711 just before reaching Clearburn Loch.

Hoglair-burn (hög-lern) n. former name for a farm in Lilliesleaf Parish. In the 1811 Land Tax Rolls it was recorded among the properties of the Riddells of that Ilk, having been purchased from Andrew Gray. It was valued at £15 11s 9d. It is unclear where it was located.

Hogmanay (hög-man-äy) n. New Year’s Eve. Note that before 1600 the New Year in Scotland started on March 25th (long preceding the change in England, which happened in 1752). It was traditional for children to go around local mansions singing for cakes, thus it was also called ‘Cake Day’. Another country custom was to remove gates on this day to let the New Year in. It was also a custom in the early 19th century for local youths to gather up all the carts they could and lock them together across the High Street, blocking the street; the origin of this prank is uncertain – ‘Frae ilka door they’re jinkin’ To hail the happy day And they a’ gang a’ linkin’ To seek their Hogmanay’ [JT] (from Old French; see also Hanganay, Hangmanay and the New Eer).

Hogs n., pl. work that piecers would enter in their daily pay book, even although they would not actually finish within the following day, this being generally considered a bad practice and sometimes known as ‘working a deid horse’.

Hogsdale (högzh-däl) n. former name for lands in Liddesdale, recorded in 1541 as ‘Hogisdale’, with value 6 shillings and 8 pence. The location is uncertain.

Hog’s Haugh (hög-hawch) n. former name for a flat area of land on the northern side of the Ale Water between Castleside and Burnfoot (marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Hogshiel (hög-sheel) n. former name for lands in Liddesdale, recorded in 1541 as ‘Hogischeill’, with annual value of 6 shillings and 8 pence. It is uncertain where this was located.

Hogson (hög-sin) n. Gilbert (15th C.) listed as ‘suitor’ for Riddell of Lilliesleaf and Whiton at the Justice- aire in Jedburgh in 1493. His surname is recorded as ‘Hoigsone’.

Hoilhoose (höl-loos) n. Hoilhouse former lands in Hobkirk Parish, once part of the Barony of Feu-Rule and part of the dispute over superiority of the Barony in 1562. It is unclear where these lands were located, but they were adjacent to Hawthornside Wood and Little Gledstains, probably to the east of these lands. There is a place of the same name near Moffat, as well as others elsewhere in Scotland (written ‘Hoilhous’, it presumably means ‘house in the hollows’).

hoise (höiz) n., arch. a hoist, heave – ‘Gie’d a hoise’ [GW] v., arch. to hoist, heave – ‘For aa that the sun, hoisin itsel i the lift overeed . . .’ [ECS], ‘A patriarch-leike body, – heed-bared, an airm hoised as ei hailed the Musies’ [ECS] (also written ‘hoize’; cf. heeze).

Holcalcadrounburn (hol-kal-drüm-hil) n. possible place name near Hawick. It is recorded in 1628 when ‘James Scot in Holcalcadrounburn’ is among men accused by the Earl of Buccleuch of chopping down trees on his lands at Todshawhaugh and Trinitylands. It occurs in the petition after men from Galalaw and Heap, but it is unclear where this place could have been, or if it was transcribed correctly. It may be related to the farm of Hellcadrounburn, which was somewhere near the Caddroun Burn in upper Liddesdale.

holden (höl-din) pp., arch. held – ‘. . . the granting of which … the said Laird of Gladstaines, will be holden and reput as ane piece of singular kyndness done to him . . .’ [BR1704], ‘. . . for ane supernumerie marriage of the sd. John Hardie upon Isobell Aitkine, daughter to the sd. William Aitkine, houlden in his owne house . . .’ [BR1706] (see also hauden and haulden).

hole (höl) v., poet. to disappear from view – ‘The ryising moone like saffron grewe, And holed ahint a cloude’ [JTe].

the Hole in the Waa (thu-höl-in-thu-waw) n. popular name for a close next to the Stag’s Head bar on Drumlanrig Square, or the house next to it (the south corner of which contained the hinges for the West Port). This house contained an inn in the early 19th century. John Inglis was born there in 1838.

the Hole o the Burn (thu-höl-ë-thu-burn) n. former name for a piece of land beside Denholm Kirk, which was also a right of way around the church. It was so-called because a stream flows under there and was usually covered by a flagstone.

Holiday (ho-li-di) n. Christopher (1707/8–47) son of John. He was returning home to Ewesdale from Carlisle and near Longtown was attacked by Adam Graham, who shot him in the back and beat him with his own staff. He is buried in Ewes Kirkyard.

Holland (ho-lind) n., arch. a kind of linen made in Holland, or cloth made in a similar style –
Holland Hoose

‘...for 10 ells of sheets woven in the Holland reid, 5 groats the ell’ [BR1695].

Holland Hoose (ho-lind-hoos) n. pub at 4 Drumlanrig Square, established in 1885, formerly being ‘Graham’s Hotel’, with proprietor John Graham. The name is possibly in connection with the Earl of Holland, who was a well known literary patron of his day; however, it has also been suggested to be connected with Dutch wool merchants who once lodged there. Thomas Graham was publican later. It closed in the 1990s and the building is now a beauty parlour, after renovations in the early 2000s (also sometimes ‘the Holland Hoose’).

Holliday (ho-li-di) n. John (1858/9–1945) tenant farmer in Demainholm. He married Jane Elliot, who died in 1922, aged 44. Their children included: Margaret Jane (1917–9); Mary Evelyn (1916–7); and Elizabeth Jane (1920–1). He died at Caulside House. They are buried in Ettleton Cemetery.

the Hollies (thu-ho-leez) n. house in Denholm on the Wynd.

hollin (ho-lin) n., poet. holly, the holly tree – ‘Alone in greenwood must I roam, Hollin, green hollin; A shade of green leaves is my home, Birk and green hollin’ [JDC].

Hollin (ho-lin) n. John (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 when Walter Scott of Buccleuch presented him at the Justice-aire in Selkirk as suitor for his land of Buccleuch. His name is recorded as ‘Johannem holyne’.

the Hollow Burn (thu-ho-lō-burn) n. another name for the Flex Burn around Whittlaw. It is so named (along with ‘the How Burn’) in the 1767 description of Hawick Common. It may be that the name was only applied to the lower part of the stream, between the point where Whittlaw Slap joined and the mouth at the Slitrig. James Wilson describes it as lying between Meikle Whittlaw and Little Whittlaw.

the Hollows (thu-ho-lōz) n. former lands just north of Canonbie, by the A7. This was essentially the same place as ‘Gilnockie’, where the Armstrongs once had a tower (or 2 towers). The restored tower there is now called ‘Gilnockie Tower’, although Hollows Tower was quite distinct, with the original Gilnockie being just on the other side of the River Esk. It seems likely this is the place meant by ‘Hoilhous’ in records of Armstrongs of the 16th and early 17th centuries. In 1588 it is probably the ‘Hoilhous’ listed among houses ordered by the King to be cast down by his Lieutenant on the Border, on account to being the home of rebels. The Scotts of Buccleuch possessed the lands there according to the 1663 marriage contract of Anne, Countess of Buccleuch. It was a hamlet in the 18th and 19th centuries, with a blacksmith and half a dozen other houses (it is ‘Hoilhous’ in 1622 and ‘Halhous’ in 1663; it is marked ‘ye Hollas’ on Sandison’s c.1590 map and ‘Hoolhus’ on Gordon’s c.1650 manuscript map).

holm (hōm) n. a stretch of low-lying grassland, usually by a river, a meadow, a’haugh’ (see also hown).

Holm (hōm) n. former name for lands near Bedrule, adjacent to Middle, both also being formerly known as Dykes. The farm may once have been part of the Barony of Feu-Rule. It is listed along with Middle in the 1511 charter of the Douglases of Cavers. This land was once part of the Wells estate (it is ‘Helm’ in 1511 and 1634 and ‘Holme’ in 1738).

the Holm (thu-hōm) n. familiar name for Newcastleton, a shortened form of Copshawholm, so called because it was built on the ‘holm’ (i.e. low, flat land) occupied by some former holdings called Copshaw. The name could correspond to the lands of ‘Holme’ which were recorded in the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale, with a value of 12 pence and no tenant – ‘‘The Holm’...a teacher came here, an he’d been here months an he said ‘it must be a very big orphanage at Newcastleton’ [IWL].

Holm Brig (hōm-brig) n. bridge over the Liddel Water at the south end of Newcastleton. It was built in 1823 by local builders William Crozier and John Nichol.

Holmdows (hōm-dowz) n. former name for lands in Liddesdale, recorded in 1541 as ‘Holme-dows’ and stated to have no tenant. It is unclear where these lands were.

Holmfitt (hōm-fi) n. Holmfoot, farm in Castleton Parish, situated near the south end of Newcastleton. It may be another name for ‘Townfoot’. William Little was a mason there in 1821. George Underwood was there in 1868.

Holm Hill (hōm-hil) n. hill just to the west of Newcastleton. It was formerly the site of the Common attached to the village, where the householders would pasture their cattle, and where each residence was assigned 2 acres of land. It now hosts the 9-hole Newcastleton Golf Course. In 2020 an area of 750 acres there was purchased from the Bucleuch Estates by Newcastleton and District Community Trust.

Holm Sike (hōm-sīk) n. small stream that joins Whithope Sike near the farm of Whithope, to form Howford Sike and run north to join the Borthwick Water (marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map; it is possible that the name is connected to Whames).

Holshiell (hol-shiell) n. probable place name in Liddesdale, recorded as 'Holschel' in a rental roll of c.1376, in the 'Quarterium de Ludne'.

holsie-jolsie (hōl-see-jōl-see) n., arch. a confused mass of different sorts of food, as in pigswill (a Teviotdale example of rhyming reduplication; noted by J. Jamieson).

Holstruther (hol-strū-thur) n. lost place name near Branxholme. It is recorded in the description of the half barony of Branxholme in the charter of 1420 where it was granted to the Scotts of Bucleuch. The lands lay ‘on the west side of the Syke, running down from the kirkland’, suggesting perhaps a connection with the former chapel between the Newmill Burn and Chapelhill farm (‘struther’ refers to a marshy area, as in ‘Wulliestruther’ and ‘Buckstruther’).

holt (ōl’) n., poet. a wood, stretch of wooded land – ‘And they flew oure sea, and the flew oure land, Oure mountain, holt, and town ...’ [JTe].

the Holt (θu-hōl’) n. former cottage on the lands of Harwood-on-Teviot, also known as Hott.

Holydean (hō-, hā-lee-deen) n. ruined castle, once the home of the Kers, about a mile west of Bowden. It was built in 1530 and largely demolished around 1760, with the remaining part incorporated into the farmhouse. An adjacent gable contains Hobby Ker's Well and there are also the remains of an ancient chapel nearby. There was also an ancient deer park here, and there are some old ash and birch probably surviving from this period. The lands were among those in the original grant to the monks of Kelkirk by David I (the origin of the name is probably Old English ‘halig demu’, meaning ‘holy valley’; it first occurs as ‘Olyden’ in 1385, then in Abbey charters frequently as ‘halyden’ or ‘halydene’ until the 17th century; it is Cas of Halydem’ on Blaen’s c.1654 map and ‘Holly Dean’ on Roy’s c.1750 map).

Holywell Rig (hō-lee-wel-rig) n. ridge to the south of Priesthaugh farm, between the Skelfhill and Priesthaugh Burns. It reaches a height of 428 m. The name is surely connected with the spring at Priesthaugh, which was supposed to have healing powers and was a site of pilgrimage at least until the early 17th century. The northern slopes have signs of cultivation terraces and a linear earthwork.

Home (hōm) n. Alexander (d.c.1460) 1st Lord Home, son of Sir Alexander and Jean Hay. He was one of the signatories of the Border laws document drawn up in 1449. He married Margaret, daughter of Alexander Montgomery, and secondly married Marion, daughter of John Lauder. His children were: David; Nicholas; Sir Thomas; Ellen, who married Adam Hepburn, Master of Hailes and secondly Alexander, 3rd Lord Erskine; Alexander, Master of Home, whose son Alexander succeeded; John, Prior of Coldingham; Katherine, who married John Sinclair and then Archibald Douglas; George of Ayton; and Sir Patrick of Fastcastle. His son Alexander was assigned the farm of Aikwood in 1492. Alexander (d.1506) 2nd Lord Home, son of Alexander, Master of Home and Agnes Hepburn. He was grandson of the 1st Lord Home, whom he succeeded about 1461. In 1464 he was on an inquest regarding the inheritance of the lands of Swinton. He fought against James III and gained considerable power after the crowning of the young James IV. In 1484 he was recorded as grandson of Alexander, Lord Home, when he had a precept for infesting Andrew Ker in the lands of Crailing and Hownan. He became a Privy Counsellor in 1488 and was Warden of the East Marches 1489–96. He was also made Great Chamberlain of Scotland in 1488, and the offices of several wardships were transferred to him, e.g. he became Bailie of Ettrick Forest, Keeper of Newark Castle and Ranger of the Ward of Yarrow; he had the lease of Tinnis for his fee from 1488 until 1496, with his son Alexander mentioned in 1492. He also had the lease of Kirkhope. In 1490 he was named in a document for the Haigs of Bemersyde. In 1491 he and his son Alexander were mentioned in relation to the lands of ‘Aikwod et Huntlie’. He also leased Gilmanscleuch in 1492. In 1492/3 King James IV granted him the lands of ‘Grenewod’ (in the Borthwick valley), which had formerly belonged to Sir Thomas Turnbull. In 1493/4 he gained superiority over Appletreehall from Elizabeth Cunningham and lands and the Barony of Hassendean from William Livingstone of Drumry. In 1499 he witnessed an indenture between the Royal Treasurer and George Douglas, Master of Angus, for keeping order on the Border. He served as Comptroller and Ranger for Ettrick Forest, and is recorded many times in the Exchequer Rolls around 1500 regarding payments for lands in Ettrick. In 1501 he was granted relief for the 40-pound lands of Chamberlain Newton. In a 1501/2 bond of reversion, he promised to pay Robert Scott of Stiches £100 Scots for the lands of Harden. In 1502 he was fined for non-appearance to ‘give suit’ for his lands of Hassendean, Appletreehall, Broxfield and Crailing at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. In 1502 (as superior of the lands) he granted Appletreehall to Walter Scott of Howpasley. Also in 1502 he was also surety for William Scott in Broadmeadows. He received the rental of Carterhaugh as Keeper of Newark Castle in the period 1503–07. He served as Great Chamberlain of Scotland. He firstly married Isabel Douglas and secondly Nichola (sometimes written ‘Nicholas’), daughter of Sir George Ker of Samuelston (and step-daughter of Marion Sinclair, who was widow of George of Wedderburn). His children included: Alexander, who succeeded as 3rd Lord, but was executed; George, who succeeded his brother as 4th Lord; John, Abbot of Jedburgh; Patrick: William, executed the day after his brother Alexander; Andrew, who feued the lands of Cacrabank and Corsecleuch in 1510; David, Prior of Coldingham, who was murdered; Elizabeth, who was Lady Samuelson in 1542; Marion, who married John, Earl of Crawford, who died at Flodden; and Nichola, who married Andrew, 2nd Lord Herries and later Patrick Hepburn of Bolton. Alexander (d.1516) 3rd Lord Home, eldest son of Alexander, 2nd Lord. In 1490 he was appointed, jointly with his father, as Bailie of Ettrick and Keeper of Newark Castle. He leased Tinnis in Yarrow along with his father in 1492, as well as Aikwood, ‘Douglasrag, Quithop, Duchir and Tynnes’. In 1493/4, when he was still ‘Master of Home’ he was inflected in the lands of Hoscote, which had formerly belonged to Robert Turnbull. He succeeded his father in 1506, the lands including Greenwood (Girnwood), Lyne, Stouslie, Groundstone and Harden in Roxburghshire, as well as Ewesdale and extensive lands in Berwickshire. He had a confirming charter of his lands in 1509/10, including the Barony of Hassendean and lands of Appletreehall and Ewesdale, as well as many other properties. Like his father, he was Receiver of the accounts for Ettrick Forest, starting in 1507. In 1510 he feued the lands of Oakwood, Redfordgreen, Hartwoodburn, Huntly, Altrieve, etc. In 1511 he was among the witnesses to the charter granting the Barony of Hawick to Sir William Douglas of Drumlanrig. In 1512/3 he bought Broadlee (in the Borthwick valley) from Sir William Douglas of Drumlanrig. He was Lord Warden General of the Marches from 1510 until about 1513. He commanded part of the Scottish force at Flodden, leading the vanguard with Alexander Gordon, Earl of Huntly and routing the force of Sir Edmund Howard, but coming under criticism for remaining inactive afterwards. However, he was executed for treason because of his support for the Earl of Angus in trying to control the young King James V, while his brother William, Prior of Coldingham, was assassinated by the Hepburns. Sir Anthony Darcy (or ‘De la Bastie’) was made Warden in his place, and all of this led to Darcy being killed by Sir David Home of Wedderburn. In 1516 a large number of Turnbulls and others had remission from the King for treasonably helping him and his brothers. His estates were forfeited, which led to Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme gaining Harden, Hoscote and lands in Hassendean (although many of his lands were restored by Parliament to his brother George in 1522). His lands in Ewesdale went to Robert, Lord Maxwell. His lands of Aikwood (which he had presumably let to Robert Scott in Aikwood) reverted to the Crown and were in 1517 feud to Robert’s son Michael Scott. After the execution, his head (and his brother William’s) was fixed to the Edinburgh Tolbooth, but forcibly removed by his brother George and buried in 1520. He married Agnes, daughter of James Stewart, Earl of Buchan and secondly married Katharine Stirling. He was succeeded by his brother George. His daughter Janet married John Hamilton and succeeded to the lands of Samuelton. Alexander (d.1575) 5th Lord Home, son of George, 4th Lord and Margaret Haliburton. He was appointed Warden of the East Marches in 1550. In 1551 he had a ‘retour’ for his father’s lands, which included Stouslie, Groundstone, Harden, Broadlee, Hoscote and Girnwood, as well as lands in Berwickshire and elsewhere. In 1555/6 he had a ‘precept of sasine’ for Hoscote and also summoned William Scott in Harden to appear at Melrose Abbey to receive the sum of £40 Scots as redemption of these lands. He was appointed Warden of the Eastern Marches in 1557 and reappointed in 1561. In 1559 there is a ‘let-ter of reversion’ between him and William Scott of Todrig (and Harden) and his son Walter; although he had sold them his lands of Harden, they agreed to resign them to him on payment of 160 merks. In 1562 he was appointed Warden and Keeper of the Lordship of Liddesdale. He was among the prominent men of the nation who signed the document declaring James as Monarch (in place of Mary) in 1567. In 1567 he had a
Alexander, 1st Earl Home. Alexander Patrick, Lord Gray. He was succeeded by his son Alexander, 1st Earl Home. Alexander (c.1567–1619) 6th Baron Home and 1st Earl Home, son of Alexander, the 5th Lord, whom he succeeded in 1575. Among the titles he inherited was Baron of Hassendean, including the lands of Appletrehall. He was also Warden of the East Marches. In 1587 Andrew Home, Commendator of Jedburgh infested him in the Lordship of Jedburgh, which included Ruecastle, Abbotrule, Bonchester and other parts of Rulewater. In 1589 there was a charge to him and the Earl of Bothwell to keep peace with each other during the King’s absence. In 1590 he was among Border landlords and heads of families ordered to find caution for the conduct of their dependents. In 1590/1 he was named in a case brought against the Scottish Wardens. In 1594 he had a Commission, along with Sir Robert Ker and Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme, to raise all men between the ages of 16 and 60 to fight against the Earl of Bothwell and his followers. He was Warden of the East March in 1600 when listed among leaders ordered to appear before the Privy Council to give advice about peace on the Border. In 1601 he was cautioner for Thomas Rutherford of Hunthill. In 1601 he was warned by James Cunningham, Earl of Glencairn to remove himself from lands in the Barony of Hassendean and in 1612 he was summoned to produce all his documents relating to lands in Hassendean. In 1602 he had given the escheat of goods and liferents of Hector Turnbull of Barnhill, and complained that a gang of Armstrongs and Elliots had attacked his farm of Hallrule. He was appointed Lieutenant and Justiciar over all the Scottish Marches in 1603. In 1610 he complained to the Privy Council about a large number of Armstrongs and others for not paying their teinds. In 1611 he was served heir to his grandfather George, Baron Home. In 1616 he sold the lands of Middle Mains of Hassendean and Wester Hassendean (or Horsleyhill) to Gilbert Elliott of Stobs. In 1618 he was listed among commissioners appointed to keep law and order in Teviotdale. His testament of 1616 survives. He married Christian, daughter of William Douglas, 5th Earl of Morton and secondly Mary Sutton, daughter of Lord Dudley. He was succeeded by his son James and then by a cousin, also James. After the death of James his heirs were his daughters Margaret (Countess of Moray) and Anne (Lady Maitland), who were the superiors of some local lands, including Harden. He had a natural son, William, who was Provost of Dunglas. Alexander (d.1682) portioner of Home, he was a Covenant-ter supporter. Along with Thomas Turnbull of Standhill, he led the men who besieged Drumlanrig’s Tower in Hawick in 1679. At his trial in 1682, James Newbie, Sheriff-Officer in Hawick, described that he was ‘riding on a bay horse or mare, and that he had pistols before his saddle, and cloak lined with red’, while another witness said he also had a black velvet cape; he was also said to have black hair, and so in court had his wig removed to check. He led about 100 rebels, who broke into the tower and took away the arms the following day. He was found guilty at the trial in 1682 and was hung in Edinburgh for his crimes.

Andrew (16th C.) 2nd son of George, 4th Lord Home, he was Commendator of Jedburgh. ‘Mait-ter Johne Hume son to the Abbot of Jedburgh’ is recorded in 1547, and was presumably his son. In 1561 he was among men who were to appear before the Privy Council to present criminals. In 1567 he sold many of the abbeys lands (including Abbotrule) to Adam French and his wife Margaret. In 1569 he was one of the sureties for George Rutherford of Grange and John Turnbull in Abbotrule. In 1583/4 he granted half the meadow of Belses to Walter Turnbull of Bewlie and the other half to William Middlemas of Lilliesleaf. He is probably the ‘Abbat of Jedburgh’ listed in 1586 among leaders in upper Teviotdale in a document by King James VI instructing his Lieutenant on the Border. He was probably the Commendator of Jedburgh who in 1590 was listed among Border landlords and heads of families ordered to find caution for the conduct of their dependents. Sir David of Wedderburn (d.1467) 2nd son of Sir Alexander of Home and Dunglas, and younger brother of Alexander of that Ilk. He was armour-bearer to William Douglas, 2nd Earl of Angus, who granted him the lands of Wedderburn in 1413 (confirmed by James I in 1431), as well as Hutton in 1415/6. He witnessed a charter for the Earl of Douglas in 1433/4, Archibald, Earl of Douglas also granted him Wolfelee and Wolfeleehope in 1436 (with associated sa-sine), confirmed in 1464, along with Stonedge. He was thus the 1st Home Laird of ‘Wollee’, (i.e. Wolfelee). He was made Bailie of Coldingham Priory in 1442. In 1443 he witnessed a charter for the lands of Hownam. It is said that his older brother, Alexander, went to France in his place, dying at the battle of Verneuil. He had a discharge to Sir Alexander of that Ilk (probably his nephew) in 1464. He married Alice de Wedderburn, from whom he may have gained his main titles. He had 2 sons, David and Alexander, his elder son predeceasing him, so he was succeeded by his grandson, George. Given that he is recorded over a period of 50 years, he either lived to a very old age, or else there are 2 generations here. David (15th C.) elder son of Sir David of Wedderburn. He witnessed a charter for the lands of Hownam in 1443, along with his father and several other Homes. He is probably the David who was one of the signatories of the Border laws document drawn up in 1449. He married Elizabeth Carmichael, who died in 1495. He predeceased his father and his son George was served as heir to the lands still vested in his mother when she died. Sir David of Wedderburn (d.1513) eldest son George, he was also 3rd Laird of ‘Woollee’ (i.e. Wolfelee). His father passed on the lands of Wolfelee to him in 1474, retaining ‘liferent’ for himself. In that same year he also had a saisine for the lands of Wedderburn. In 1479 he had a saisine for the lands of Over Wolfelee, Nether Wolfelee and Wolfehopelee. Also in 1479 he had saisine for half of the lands of Polwarth, resigned by his mother, Mariota Sinclair. He succeeded his father in most of his lands following his death in 1497. Also in 1497 he had respite as head of 100 or so men for burning lands of William Wallace of Craigie. In 1501/2 he had remission, along with others for the murder of ‘John Lowdonna’. In 1502 he succeeded to his father’s lands of Morriston, Peilrig and others. He is probably the Sir David who had 20 oxen and cows stolen from his lands at Lammermuir by David Oliver in Strange, as recorded in 1502. In 1505 he leased lands in the barony of Upsettlington, in 1506 had saisine for ‘Hetschaw’ in Lauderdale and in 1507 inherited his father’s lands of Jardinefield. Along with his brother John he witnessed a document for Melrose Abbey, regarding land in Leith, in 1510. He married Isabella (also known as Elizabeth), daughter of David Hoppringle of Smailholm and had 8 sons. 7 sons (known as ‘The Seven Spears of Wedderburn’) accompanied him to Flodden, where he was slain along with his eldest son, George. The traditional story is that their surviving retainers carried them from the battlefield wrapped in the Wedderburn banner. Tradition also says that the same banner was used in 1650 at the Battle of Dunbar, when another Sir David and his son George were slain. His children were: George, who was killed at Flodden; David, who succeeded; Alexander of Manderstoun; John, who married Beatrix, heiress of Andrew Blackadder of that Ilk; Robert, who married Margaret, other heiress of Blackadder of that Ilk; Andrew, Parson of Lauder; Patrick, progenitor of the Homes of Broomhouse; probably Bartholomew; Margaret, who married John Swinton of that Ilk; Isabella, who married William Cockburn; Mariota, who married James Towers of Innerleithen. His wife is probably the ‘Elizabeth Hoppringle lady of Polvort’ who witnessed a document for David Pringle of Galashiels and Smailholm (her brother) in 1529 and a record of 1551 states that his wife ‘Elizabeth Hoppringle’ died 5 years earlier, when certain lands were inherited by his grandson, also David. His seal showed a lion rampant, together with a crest on a helmet, with a boar’s head. David of Wedderburn (d.1524) 2nd son of Sir David, he succeeded to the estates when his father and elder brother were killed at Flodden. He thus became 4th Laird of ‘Woollee’ (i.e. Wolfelee). In 1510 he had the rental from his father of the lands of ‘Myldestled of Windidurris alias Blackhauch’ in Ettrick Forest. He had sasines for inheriting his father’s lands in 1513/4 and 1514, and in 1515 had saisine for Over and Nether Wolfelee and Wolfehopelee. In 1516 he had saisine for Coldingham and lands in Ayton. He helped the Earl of Angus (his brother-in-law) retain control over the young James V. In 1517 he received half of the lands of Manderstoun, which had belonged to the executed Alexander, Lord Home. In 1517, in revenge for the deaths of his cousins Alexander, Lord Home and William, Prior of Coldingham, he killed Sir Anthony Darcy (or ‘De la Bastie’), the newly appointed Warden of the Marches, who had been installed at Home Castle by the Regent Albany. Later making peace with Albany, he helped with the siege of Wark Castle, being rewarded with a gold chain by James V. In 1522 his possessions were all restored, and he had saisine for the Hirsel, with the Lordship of Dunbar. Included was a new saisine for Wolfelee and Wolfehopelee. There are letters preserved from 1523 between him and the John, Duke of Albany, Regent of Scotland. When the Earl of Angus was forced to flee to England he also fell out of favour. He married Alison Douglas, widow of Robert Blackadder (also killed at Flodden) and sister of Archibald, 6th Earl of Angus; she survived until at least 1543, as documents relating to her lands and teinds show. In 1535 she was involved in a land dispute with John Rutherford of Hunthill. He was killed in a conflict with the English, leaving 3 young sons (including George and David, who both succeeded, the other being John, killed by the English in Coldingham Tower in 1542) and 3 young daughters. Shortly before his death he appears to have been involved in a conflict with the forces of the Earl of Arran (Lieutenant to the King) in Edinburgh and later at Stirling; the force included his relative George, Lord of Home, as well as Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch, and about 160 Borderers, who received remission in 1526. Sir David of Wedderburn (d.1574) 2nd son of David, he succeeded his brother George in 1547, also becoming 6th Laird of ‘Wollee’ (i.e. Wolfelee) and ‘Wolhoplee’. He was a supporter of Queen Mary and of Bothwell, and also of the young King James VI. He had sasine for Wolfelee in 1550. In 1551 he inherited his brother’s lands of ‘Myddilsteid and Wynddydurris or Blackhauch’ in Ettrick Forest. In 1552 he had a contract with his sister-in-law Joan Hepburn over rents of Wedderburn and other lands, as well as a tack with the Parson of Whitsome. In 1553 he had a contract for lands in Ayton and in 1554 a letter of reversion for Middledestad and Blackhaugh. In 1561 he was among Border Lairds who appeared before the Queen to give names of those guilty of theft. There were documents relating to Whitsome in 1560, 1562 and 1571. There was a further instrument for Blackhaugh in 1563. In 1564 he had a gift of the duties from the family lands since his brother’s death. He was put in ward in Galloway, this being changed to Edinburgh and then waived in 1566. Also in 1566 he refused to sign the Roxburghshire ‘General Band’ of 1561, stating that he lived in the Merse and was not guilty of the crimes committed by the men of Teviotdale. In 1567 he was commanded to present several Turnbulls and Olivers to answer to accusations associated with raids into England. He had discharges for fees on lands of Coldingham and in Renfrewshire in 1572/3. He married Mariota Johnstone, daughter of the Laird of Elphinstone, and she died in 1564. He secondly married Margaret Ker, widow of Pringle of Whytbank. His children included: George, who succeeded to the estates; David of Godscoft, who became a historian, writing a family history in Latin, as well as a history of the house of Douglas; James, Parson of Hilton; John, who is said to have died from the effects of over-studying, and was declared a rebel for the murder of George Home, sometime of Spott; Isabel, who married John Haldane of Glenneagles; Margaret, who married David Home of the Law; Julian (or Juliane) who married Sir John Ker of the Hirsell, but divorced him, secondly marrying James Hoppringle of Whitelaw; and Janet, who married William Cockburn of Langton; and an illegitimate son, Patrick. Unlike many generations of his ancestors he actually died in his bed in comparatively old age. George of Wedderburn (d.1497) eldest son of David and grandson of Sir David of Wedderburn, whom he succeeded in 1467. He also became the 2nd Laird of Woollee (i.e. Wolfelee), with a sasine in 1469. He had a charter for lands in Bonkle in 1470. In 1473/4 he is recorded componing with the King in order to infest his son and heir in his lands. In 1474 he resigned the lands of Wolfelee into the hands of Archibald Douglas, Earl of Angus, to be infesting in his son David, reserving ‘liferent’ to himself and a ‘terce’ for his wife. In 1476 he bought the lands of Jardinefield from John Jardine of Applegirth and also lands in Duns. In 1477 he had a pension for serving as Keeper of Berwick Castle. In 1478 he had sasine for the ‘Plewnland’ in Berwickshire and a charter for lands previously belonging to ‘Richard of Edynount’. In 1478/9 he had a contract for his sister Sibill to marry Henry Haftle of Mellerstain. He gained the lands of ‘Moricetone’ in Lauderdale in 1490 and a sasine for Coldingham in 1495. He was charged to enter James Currer at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1494/5. He had a ‘retour of service’ for inheriting his father’s lands in Berwickshire in 1495, which had been held by his mother Elizabeth Carnichael, who died in that year. In 1496 he and his wife had a sasine for ‘Hetschaw’ in Lauderdale. He had a brother, Patrick, who was progenitor of the Homes of Polwarth. It is said that he and his brother fell in love with the 2 daughters and heirs of John St. Clair (or Sinclair) of Herdmanstoun (their mother being Catherine, sister of Alexander, Lord Home), and had to forcibly extract them from their uncle’s clutches at Hermandstoun Castle. He married Mariota (or Marion), while his brother married Margaret and they split the lands between them. He had 2 sons, David (who succeeded) and John (who appears to be a cleric when recorded in 1510). He was killed in an engagement with the English. His widow secondly married George Ker of Sammuelston. George (d.1513) eldest son of Sir David of Wedderburn. He was one of 7 brothers, known as ‘The Seven Spears of Wedderburn’. He was killed along with his father at Flodden. It is said that as the heir he was encouraged by his family to leave the field, but on the way home he stopped off at Coldstream Priory, where the Princess, Isabella Pringle, convinced him to return to the Battle and his doom. His brother David succeeded to Wedderburn and other lands, including Wolfelee. George 4th Lord Home (d.1549) son of Alexander, 2nd Lord, he succeeded from his brother Alexander, 3rd Lord Home, who was beheaded in 1516. Another brother was John, Abbot of Jedburgh. In 1520 he rode to Edinburgh with a large force, removed the heads of his brothers from the Tolbooth and held a funeral and banquet in their honour. Many of the family lands (or the superiority over those lands, including kirk patronage, etc.) were restored to him by an Act of Parliament in 1522 (and confirmed by a reversion of previous charters issued by the King in 1535). This included parts of Broadlee, Harden, Groundistone and Stouslie (or at least the tenancies of these lands, rather than the superiority). Specifically he was appointed as tenant of William Turnbull of Minto’s lands of Greenwood (or Girnwood) in 1522, in place of his brother. In about 1524 he and David Home of Wedderburn were considered as rebels when a force of about 160 Borderers met with them in Edinburgh and went to Stirling to try to confront the Earl of Arran (presumably in support of the Earl of Angus); remission was given to Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme and others in 1526. In 1525 Simon Armstrong had a ‘letter of reversion’ with him for lands in Ewesdale, including Mosspaul, Fiddleton and Unthank; he must have been the superior of Ewesdale at this time. In 1525 he had a ‘precept of sasine’ from Patrick, Earl of Bothwell, for lands of Stouslie, Groundistone and Harden (this being for the superiority), confirmed in a ‘precept of clare constat’ with date transcribed as 1552 (but probably 1525 is meant). In 1525 he had another precept for lands in Boncle, together with Wolfelee and Wolfehopelee. He had a ‘bond of manrent’ with Archibald Douglas, 6th Earl of Angus, in 1526. In 1528 he granted the upper part of Ewesdale to Ninian and David Armstrong, and they had a bond of ‘manrent’, pledging to serve him. He was appointed a Royal Lieutenant for keeping peace on the Border in 1529. In 1530 he was one of the Border chiefs imprisoned by James V for failing to keep thieves and other ‘broken men’ in order. In 1535 he gave a confirming charter of Harden to William Scott, as well as a letter of reversion to him for the lands of Harden and Hoscote. In 1540 William Scott of Harden gave the lands of Nether Harden to Simon Scott of Fenwick ‘until George, lord Home, redeems them’. In 1543 he signed the ‘Secret Bond’ with Cardinal Beaton, resisting English influence over the young Queen Mary. He served as Warden of the East Marches in 1543. In 1544 he and the Earl of Bothwell headed a force that made some attempt to defend Edinburgh against the English invaders under the Earl of Hertford. In 1546 he was appointed for a year as Warden of the Merse and East Marches. He married Mariota, daughter of Patrick Haliburton, Lord of Dirleton. His children included Alexander (5th Lord, who married Margaret Ker of Cessford), Andrew (Abbott of Jedburgh) and Margaret (who married Sir Alexander Erskine of Grogar). He died after being thrown from his horse in a skirmish the day before the Battle of Pinkie. George of Wedderburn (1515/6–47) eldest son of David, he was also 5th Laird of ‘Woollee’ (i.e. Wolfelee). He succeeded to his father’s lands and titles in 1524 at age 9. And he had sasines for most of the lands in the next few years. In 1528 he received a confirming charter of the family estates from James V, including for Wolfelee. During his minority the estates were managed by his uncle, Alexander of Manderston, and after reaching majority he was for a while confined to Blackness Castle (where he had 2 illegitimate sons, David and George, to a daughter of the Captain of the Castle). In 1540 his mother had an assignation for the lands of Hutton from the Earl of Glencairn, to go to him after her death. In 1541 he claimed a feu of Blackhaugh in Tweed. In 1542 he had a new arrangement for renting Blackhaugh in Ettrick Forest. In 1545/6 he had a gift from Queen Mary of the lands of Morriston in Berwickshire and also a sasine for Easter Polwarth. He married Joan (or Jean), daughter of Sir Patrick Hepburn of Waughton and had 3 children, his only legitimate son John predeceasing him (although he also had a ‘natural’ son, David). He died at the Battle of Pinkie and was succeeded by his brother David. His wife remarried to John Hamilton of ‘Ryisholm’. Her husband was killed by a group of Turnbuls from Belses, who were declared rebels in 1580; however, she also accused her nephew, also George of Wedderburn, of harassing her and her servants. Sir George of Wedderburn (1552–1616) eldest son of David, he was also 7th Laird of ‘Woollee’ (i.e. Wolfelee), confirmed in a sasine of 1564. He was born at Elphinstone and was a sick child, but grew rapidly in his youth. Until the age of 7 his teacher was John Knox. His father gave him lands in Berwickshire in 1566/7. He succeeded his father in 1574, including the lands in Berwickshire, as well as ‘Wolley and Wolhopley’. In 1574/5 he had sasine for Wedderbrun, Hutton, Jardinefield and the Hirsel. Also in 1574/5 he had a discharge for part of the dowry for his sister Isabel and in 1576 he had a financial agreement with his step-mother Margaret Ker. Also in 1576 he was surety for some Haitlies. In 1578/9 there was a discharge for teinds of Whitsome and in 1579 a decree involving the lands of Upsettlington. In 1578 he was appointed Warden of the East Marches and also served as Comptroller of the Royal Household for King James VI. Because of his position the documents relating to him are extensive. There are several preserved letters between him and the King regarding Border matters. In 1579/80 he was involved in a bond with Sir John Forster, Warden of English East March. In 1580 he had the ‘escheat’ of Eckie Turnbull of Belsey and John Young in ‘Camys’, who were convicted of the murder of John Hamilton of Cumnock; however, he was also accused by Hamilton’s widow (Jean Hepburn, Lady Wedderburn, who was his aunt) of harassing her over a longer period. Also in 1580 he had an agreement with the Commendator of Pluscarden. In 1581 William Lord Hay of Yester was caution for him not disturbing ‘Jehane Hepburne, Lady Wedderburne’. In 1581 he was relieved of ward beyond the River ‘Erne’ and in 1584 of his ward in Castle Doune. In 1584 he and his supporters had permission from the King to return home from the first Raid of Stirling. He gave a charter of ‘Kynmerghame’ to William Brown in 1585. In 1586 he had sasine of the Tweed fishing around Upsettlington, and another sasine for half of Polwarth. He had an acquittance of a financial arrangement with Archibald Douglas, Earl of Angus in 1586. He was further relieved of ward in 1586. In about 1588 he was appointed as one of the Parliamentary Commissioners for Berwickshire. In 1589 his brother John was granted Godscroft and other lands and also his brother James was granted teinds of Hilton and Otterburn. In 1590/1 he was cautioner for Alexander Lord Home in a case brought against the Scottish Wardens. In 1591 he made an agreement with his relatives John and David Home over the lands of Hilton. In 1593 he and his brothers supported a letter of ‘Lawburrows’ for his sister Julian against her former husband Sir John Ker of the Hirsel and his family, not to molest her in her liferent of the lands of Littledean. He served in the Scottish Parliament in the period 1590–1605, as a minor Baron and also representing Berwickshire. His testaments of 1590 and 1596 are preserved. In 1596/7 he was a Border Commissioner for dealing with the English. In 1598 he was involved in a contract with Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme (dated at Edinburgh and at Hawick) regarding Patrick Hepburn and the lands of Whitsome. In 1597/8 he had a contract from Robert Logan of Restalrig for Hutton, Bonniton, Berwick Castle and other lands in Berwickshire formerly belonging to Sir George Ogilvie of Dunlugas. In 1597 Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch wrote to him from Hawick regarding relations with England, presumably as a result of the capture of Kinmont Willie the year before. His account books as Comptroller of the Royal Household from 1597 and 1598 give details of daily consumption and where the Court was located. In 1599 his ‘escheat goods’ in the regularities of Jedforest, Bonkle and Bothwell were given to John Simson of Dryburnford due to a debt. In 1601 he had sasine for the lands of Whitsome and in that year many of his tenants complained they were in arrears because of the ‘barrenness of the haill grund and landis in this cuntrey’ for the past 3 years. In 1602 he purchased lands in the Parish of Duns. In 1603 he and John of Cowdenknowes were sureties for John, heir of Blackadder; his brothers James and John were also mentioned. At about the same time he and his brother James are listed among many Homes and others who were ordered to appear at Edinburgh Tolbooth to be on an assize. Apparently as a result of debts incurred while serving as Royal Comptroller he had to sell some of his estates, including Woollee, which he sold to Sir William Cranston in 1605; this severed a 170 year connection between the family and the Rule valley. In 1608 he was asked to appear before the Privy Council for not repaying a debt of several years earlier. There were still disputes over fees for his time as Comptroller up until he died. In 1577/8 he married Jean Haldane, sister of John Haldane of Gleneagles. His children were: David, who succeeded, married Margaret Home, widow of Sir Mark Ker of Littledean, and was Sheriff of Berwick, but died at Dunbar along with his own son George (like their ancestors at Flodden); Anna, who married James Stirling of Keir; Isabel, who married George Home of Manderstoun; Elizabeth, who married Walter Ker of Fawdonside; Margaret, who married Hugh, Lord Loudoun and Archibald Stewart of Ardgowan; Mary, who married James Dundas of Arniston; and Beatrice, who married John Dickinson, minister at Kells. George (c.1556–1611) 3rd son of Sir Alexander of Manderston, he became the 1st Earl of Dunbar. In his last decade he was extremely important in Scotland, being the chief advisor to James VI in Scotland. In 1606 he was made sole Commissioner on the Scottish side for keeping peace on the Border. He did this by ruthlessly pursuing alleged thieves, often having them convicted and executed with no real trial. He is said to have had 140 men executed soon after taking office and later had 5 of the leaders in Liddesdale executed, as well as 14 others. This was one of the last blows that broke the Elliot and Armstrong clans, causing many of those left to disperse. He also had the names of fugitives posted on market crosses, the list running to 262 names; many were in the West March, but there were 24 Elliots and about 40 Armstrongs. James (16th C.) one of the men indicted in 1552 for involvement in the murder of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme and Buccleuch. He was listed as ‘James Hwme’ along with ‘Wille Hwme in Fawnis’ and others. James (c.1607–33) 2nd Earl of Home, served heir to his father Alexander in 1621, including the lands and Barony of Hassendean, containing Appletreehall, as well as Redfordgreen, Drycleuchshiel, Hyndhope, Whithope, Fawodscheill’, Huntly, Altrieve, Cacrabank, Hartwoodburn and Coreseleuch. He was granted the ‘teinds and spiritualities of the Abbey of Jedburgh’ in 1621, which included lands in Rulewater; he resigned the superiority of these lands to Sir John Ker of Jedburgh in 1624. In 1630 he paid the agreed 8,000 merks to Gilbert Elliot of Stobs for the resignation of the lands of Middle Mains of Hassendean and Wester Hassendean (also called Horsleyhill). He married twice, but had no children, and was succeeded by a distant cousin, James. His sister Margaret was served as heir to some of his lands in 1633. James (d.1666) 3rd Earl of Home, son of James of Whiterigg, descended from the 2nd son of Alexander, heir of the 1st Lord Home. His mother was Lady Anne, daughter of George Home, Earl of Dunbar. Before he succeeded to the Earldom he was known as ‘of Cowdenknowes’. He was served heir to his father and to his grandfather in 1633. He married Jean Douglas, daughter of William, 8th Earl of Morton. His sons Alexander, James and Charles were all Earls in turn. Janet (17th C.) recorded in 1643 as liferenter in ‘...side’ in Abbotrule Parish. This was probably Mackside, with her land being valued at £50. She was probably widow or mother of a previous landowner there. John (b.1487) younger son of Sir Alexander, Lord Home. He became Abbot of Jedburgh. In 1530 he was ordered by the King (along with Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme and John Edmondson of that ilk) to desist in their dispute over the lands of Ednam. In 1531 he introduced the charter for Hector Lorraine inheriting Harwood and Hawthornside. He was probably the ‘Mr. Jhon Home’ who granted lands in upper Liddesdale to Scott of Harden, these being ‘Over and Nether Clifhoupis, Quhytekirk and Quhyteland, Ermscleuch and Abbotisykes’. In 1543 he signed the ‘Secret Bond’ with Cardinal Beaton, resisting English influence over the young Queen Mary. Sir John of Cowdenknowes (d bef. 1573) probably son of Mungo, who died at Flodden. They were descended from the 1st Lord Home. In 1530/1 he was witness to Sir Walter Scott of Braxholme being granted the hereditary office of Bailie of Melrose Abbey. In 1541 he was tenant of Hartwoodmyres. He was the first man named in the indictment for Kers and others for the murder of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme on Edinburgh High Street in 1552. He was said to be ‘ane strykar of the said Valter with zour awin handis’, to have cried out to Cessford ‘Streik, tretour, and straik for thi faderis saik’ and afterwards to have stated ‘Ly thair, with my malison, for I had lewor gang by thi graif, nor thi dure’. He and his bairns were named in the 1564/5 bond between the Kers and the Scotts. He married Margaret, daughter of Sir Andrew Ker of Cessford (whose death was blamed on the Scotts). In 1524 Andrew Ker resigned lands in Smalholm to the couple. He was succeeded by his son Sir James. Rev. John (c.1630–90) graduating from Edinburgh University in 1650, he was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of Dalkeith in 1658 and by the Bishop of Edinburgh in 1662. Probably in about 1664 he became Episcopalian minister at Ewes. However, he was deprived in 1681 for not taking ‘the Test’. He married Ann, daughter of David Livingstone of Dunipace. He died in Edinburgh. Katherine (15th C.) daughter of Sir Alexander, 1st Lord Home. She firstly married John Sinclair and secondly married Archibald Douglas. In 1479 she requested a copy to be made of a charter for Polwarth, with her procurator being Thomas Pitt, Rector of Abbotrule. Margaret (d.1683) daughter of Alexander, Earl of Home and brother of James. In 1627 she married James Stewart, 4th Earl of Moray and had 9 children. In 1633 she was served heir to some of her brother’s lands, including Redfordgreen, Drycleuchshiel, Hyndhope, Whithope, ‘Fawodscheill’, Huntly, Altrieve, Cacrabank, Hartwoodburn and Coreseleuch. Patrick (d.1478).
cleric who became Archdeacon of Teviotdale after William Croyser was deprived in 1441. However, he was in dispute for a while with Walter Blair. He was Archdeacon from 1443 (when he is recorded as a witness), but did not settle the claims with Blair until 1446. In 1451 he lost the office to Croyser again, but regained local possessions a couple of years later and was fully recognised as Archdeacon when Croyser died about 1461. He resigned on a pension in 1472, and was still referred to as Archdeacon when abroad in 1474. He died in Sutri, Italy. His seal had a shield with the 1st and 4th quarters showing 3 papingoes (i.e. parrots) for Pepdic, and the 2nd and 3rd showing a lion rampant, for Home.

Sir Patrick of Polwarth (d.1503) 2nd son of Sir David, he was Comptroller of Scotland in the period 1499–1502. His name appears many times in the Exchequer Rolls for that period. He leased the lands of Aikwood in 1490. In about 1500 he acted as bailie for George Ker of Samuelston in a land deal involving John Ker, as well as Alexander Lord Home and Nichola Ker. In 1499 he was named in a document for the Haigs of Berwickshire. It was restored to John de Cheseholme.

Ranulphus (d.1369) 1st Baronet of Home Law. He is recorded as ‘Wille’ (16th C.) indicted in 1552 for the murder of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholm on Edinburgh High Street. He is recorded as ‘Wille Hwme in Fawnis’ (probably Fawny's in Berwickshire) and listed along with James, the Laird of Cowdenknowes and other Homes (written ‘de Hum’ and variants in the earliest documents, as well as ‘Hume’, ‘Howme’, ‘Hwme’, ‘Hwume’, etc.; see also Hume).

the Homes (thu-hewmz) n. leading family of the Eastern March (roughly Berwickshire) during the 14th to 17th centuries, who have continued to have local influence until the present. They are said to be derived from the Earls of Dunbar and Northumbria. They traditionally had many lairds, rather than a single powerful chief. Home Castle lay just south of Greenlaw, while recent Earls of Home have lived at the Hirsel near Coldstream. Major lands of the family included Ayton, Coldingham, Eyemouth, Fastcastle, Lamberdon and Paxton. In the 15th to 17th centuries the...

Lords and Earls of Home held lands and superiority of lands much more local to Hawick, including Appletreehall, Broadlee, Chamberlain Newton, Girnwood, Groundstone, Harden, Hassendale, Hoscote, Midshiels, Stouslie and Wolfelee. In addition the Homes of Wedderburn also held superiority over lands in Rulewater. Old manuscripts of the Earls of Home are described in a volume by William Fraser in 1891, while those of the Homes of Wedderburn were published in 1902 – ‘Lord Hume he has summoned Tweed, Ettrick, and Yarrow; Tweed, Ettrick, and Yarrow obeyed his call’ [JH] (also sometimes ‘Hume’).

Homildon Hill (ho-mul-din-hil) n. battle of 1402, north-west of Wooler, in which Henry ‘Hotspur’ Percy defeated and captured Earl Archibald Douglas and inflicted heavy losses on the Scots. Henry IV gave Percy little credit for this victory, and claimed the ransom money for himself. However, he did bestow all of Teviotdale on Sir Henry Percy. These events led to the siege of Cocklaw Castle (at Ormiston) the following year, when Percy was to be further upset at Henry’s lack of support, leading to the revolt against Henry (also called ‘Humbleton Hill’).

The Honest Country Club (thu-o-nist-kun’-ree-klub) n. club formed by local gentleman farmers in 1711, which only lasted until 1716, although it served as a sort of predecessor for the Hawick Farmers’ Club and the Teviotdale Farmers’ Club and Wisp Club much later. The founding members were John Pringle of Haining, Walter Scott of Woll, William Plummer of Middlestead, Andrew Pringle in Haining, Philip Scott in Oakwood, Andrew Waugh of Shaw and Adam Ogilvie, younger of Hartwoodmyres. 6 other members were admitted in 1712–14. The minute books exist in the National Archives, with the last entry reading ‘this day the club did not meet the whole members being more concerned, the storme being so great to preserve their sheep from sterveying then for clubbing’.

Honest Men and Bright-Eyed Daughters (o-nist-men-in-bri’-id-dow’-urz) n. book created by Ian Lundies and Derek Lunn, published in 1991 to accompany an exhibition in the Scott Gallery. It consists of photographs and ‘pen portraits’ (in dialect) of ‘fifty o’ Hawick’s weel kent faces’. It was followed by the sequels ‘Mair Honest Men’ (1993) and ‘Son of Honest Men’ (2000).

Honeyburn (hu-nee-burn) n. farm just before Denholm. It is believed that the church lands of Denholm mentioned in the 14th century were located here, and the house still has a cross on the west gable. It may be that the monks of Melrose Abbey had an apiary here. The farm was formerly part of the Cavers estate. A tenant there in 1684, Robert Tait, was declared as a fugitive for being a Covenantant. The current house is certainly old, was once thatched and has internal walls with an interesting construction. Andrew Haddon moved there in 1848 and several generations of Haddons were there subsequently. The road from Hawick to Denholm used to pass to the south of here (also called ‘Honeyloon’ and similar; it was ‘Hunyburn’ in 1684).

Honey Burn (hu-nee-burn) n. stream that joins the Teviot from the south near Honeyburn farm. It was formerly called ‘Staney Burn’.

Honeyman (hu-nee-mum) n. David (19th C.) head gamekeeper on the Cavers estate. On one occasion he was beaten up by a gang of Hawick poachers who had come to find the assistant keeper, John Sibbald.

Honeytoon (hu-nee-toon) n. Honeytown, former name for the farm and hamlet at Honeyburn. The farmer there in 1797 was James Heron and James Turnbull was a retired farmer there in 1841 (it is so labelled on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Honorary Burgess (on-ur-ur-ce-bur-jis) n. person who is admitted to the Burgess role gratis, rather than paying for the privilege. They continued to be appointed in Hawick long after there were no formal Burgesses, usually the honour being given to people who were not resident in the area. This honorific title carries no specific rights in the modern era, but formerly was equivalent to an ordinary Burgess, without the need to pay a fee. It is equivalent to the ‘freedom of the Burgh’ or being made a ‘freeman’ in other towns. One of the first entries in the Town Book is for Robert Wright, shoemaker in Easter Burnfoot, who was admitted in 1690 ‘in respect it is the custom of all towns, that the Provost or other Magistrates have the liberty to create 2 or 3 Burgesses gratis’. In 1694 2 men were admitted for having served for the Town in the Militia. Formerly the Bailies would sometimes make a local a Burgess for free. However, in 1718 it was decreed that no Bailie should thereafter create ‘any person burgess gratis, except it be some gentleman or other stranger, upon and for onerous causes’. The past list includes the following: 1734 Robert Scott of Horsleyhill; 1735 John Scott ‘wool comber’;

1736 Archibald Stevenson; 1740 William Adams and Francis Gatton; 1746 Charles Scott; 1748 Francis Scott (Earl of Dalkeith); 1749 Charles Johnstone; 1750 James Atkinson, John Chisholm, Mark Maugham, Michael Hoyes, William Robertson and John Elliot; 1751 John Dick; 1753 William Kirk; 1755 John Ramsay; 1760 Anthony Barclay and Robert Elliot; 1767 Lawrence Porteous; 1775 Adam Ogilvie; 1776 Andrew Lookup, William Robertson, John Haldane and James Wood; 1777 Thomas Scott, David Loch, Walter Grieve, Joseph Davidson and John Smith; 1778 Lieut. John Douglas and John Scott; 1779 Charles McKenzie; 1784 Adam Hobkirk; 1785 Vincent Lunardi; 1802 Lt.-Col. William Dickson, Capt. Archibald Campbell and Capt. McQuarrie; 1803 Lieut. Thomas Oliver; 1806 William Nixon; 1813 Hugh Mitchel; 1814 James Anderson and Charles Chisholme; 1818 James Grieve and David Moncrieff; 1819 Prince Leopold of the Belgians; 1821 Walter Montague Douglas Scott (Duke of Buccleuch) and Lord Montague; 1823 Edward Ellice, William Lockhart and Charles Riddell; 1825 James Douglas, Gilbert Elliot (Earl of Minto) and Sir William Elliott; 1828 Walter Scott and John Corse Scott; 1830 Dr. Robert Douglas; 1833 Capt. George Elliot; 1834 Henry Brougham (Lord Brougham and Vaux); 1834 Archibald Douglas; 1836 Thomas Murray; 1837 John Elliot; 1838 Dr. Andrew Smith; 1840 Lord John Russell; 1844 Richard Cobden and Rowland Hill; 1856 Louis Kossuth and Gen. Sir James Simpson; 1859 Richard Hodgson and James Wilson; 1881 William Elliott Lockhart; 1885 William Scott (Duke of Buccleuch); 1898 Gilbert Elliot Murray Kynynmound (Earl of Minto); 1904 Andrew Carnegie, Thomas Shaw and John Montague Douglas Scott (Earl of Dalkeith); 1906 James Murray; 1910 Lt. Gen. Baden-Powell; 1925 Earl Haig and David Cathels; 1933 Lord Dalkeith, Walter Elliot and Sir Thomas Henderson; 1970 David Atkinson; 1971 Chay Blyth; and 1974 the K.O.S.B.

Honorary Provost (on-ur-ur-ee-pro-vist) n. term used to refer to the Provost during the Common Riding ceremonies after the reorganisation of 1974 meant that Hawick no longer had civic head. The Honorary Provost is selected by the local councillors, chairs the Provost’s Council, acts in the role of Provost during the Common Riding and represents the Town at other town’s festivals. The Provost’s monogram is used as a decoration in the Town Hall during the Common Riding events. Perhaps the most important duty is the statement to congratulate the Cornet’s Lass on bussing the Flag and then asking the Cornet ‘to ride the meiths and marches of the commonty of Hawick according to ancient custom then having done so return the Flag to the Provost’s Council Chambers on Saturday unsullied and unstained’ (see also the Provost).

Hood (hood) n. Alexander (17th C.) tenant in Lilliesleaf. He held land valued at £10 in 1643 and is still recorded on the Land Tax Rolls in 1678. These lands were later owned by William Redford. Alexander (18th C.) resident of Bowden Parish. In 1730 he married Ann Dickson in Cavers Parish. Andrew (18th/19th C.) resident of Minto Parish. In 1798 he married Janet Martin, who was from Hawick. Andrew (1815–69) stockmaking of Sillerbithall. He married Elizabeth Murray (1819–1905) and was thus an uncle of Sir James A.H. Their children were James (hosier foreman with Elder & Watson of Strathaven), John (tweed manager), Elizabeth, Betsy and Christian. He was living on Bourtree Place in 1851. F. Murray (19th/20th C.) known locally as a singer. G.B.W. (19th C.) tweed manufacturer of Wilson & Glenny’s. George (18th C.) tenant in Cauld Faulds according to the 1694.
Hearth Tax records, where his surname is written ‘Hude’. He is probably the George, married to Agnes Armstrong, whose children baptised in Roberton Parish included John (b.1679), William (b.1682), George (b.1685) and Margaret (b.1687). The witnesses in 1682 were James Johnstone and Walter Armstrong and in 1687 were Robert Turnbull and John Noble. George (17th C.) cottar at Horsleyhill according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. James (17th/18th C.) weaver in Whitchesters. In 1723 he married Margaret Hood, who was from Hobkirk Parish. He is probably the James whose son William was baptised in Kirkton in 1734. James (18th C.) wright of Dryburgh. He married Isobel Spottiswoode (sister of ‘The Hazel Dog o the Toor’) who lived 1718–1809. His descendants included the Hoods who were drapers in Lilliesleaf, as well as G.B.W. James (b.1813/4) brother of Andrew, he was a thatcher and slater. In 1841 he lived with his mother, Helen, and siblings, on Walter’s Wynd. By 1851 he was married to Janet and living at the Kirkstyle. His children included John, Betty, Charles and Janet. J.L. (?) local knitwear manufacturer. He became a partner with Walter Scott Barrie and James Scoon, then co-founded Scoon & Hood, tweed manufacturers, Teviotdale Mills. John (17th C.) resident at Hassendean Townhead according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. John (18th C.) recorded as herd at Hummelknowes in 1727 when an unnamed child of his was baptised in Cavers Parish. John (19th C.) resident of Hawick. His son Walter became a merchant Burgess in Glasgow in 1845. John Murray (20th C.) son of James, he became editor of the Hawick Express, coming there after working for the Manchester Guardian. He was known as a stickler for precision. Joseph (18th C.) tailor in Hawick. In 1761 he witnessed a baptism for gardener John Ainslie. He married Janet Inglis and their son George was baptised in 1756. Robert (17th C.) listed as ‘Rot. Hod’ in 1689 when he was fined by the Hawick Magistrates for an irregular marriage with Margaret Armstrong. He was described as a ‘passenger’, suggesting that he was not from Hawick. The couple eloped to England, but were harshly fined ‘their haill moveable goods and gear’ and ‘banished the toune in all tyme to come’. Rev. Thomas Neilson (1922–82) born in Coatbridge, he became a structural engineer and draughtsman, but re-trained for the ministry, thus following the path of his twin brother, James. He was licensed at Hamilton and served as assistant in Airdrie and Stonehouse. In 1967 he became minister at St. George’s West in Hawick, which was to be his only charge. He died after collapsing in the Church of Scotland Bookshop in Edinburgh. He married Margaret in 1957 and had no children. William (17th/18th C.) weaver in Newbigging and then in Nether Southfield. He married Margaret Stevenson and their children baptised in Hawick Parish included: William (b.1701); Robert (b.1704); Agnes (b.1708); and Robert (again, b.1710). The witnesses in 1704 were John and Gilbert Elliot in Nether Southfield and in 1708 were Robert Scott in Newbigging and Walter Scott, tenant in Nether Southfield. He witnessed a baptism for James Davidson (in Hawick Shiel) in 1698. William (17th/18th C.) employee of Pringle of Roughheugh Mill, working as a waulker. In 1723 he was recorded ‘att the large kirk door in sackcloth betwixt the second and third bells’ and was rebuked for adultery with Isobel Lethen. It appeared that the onus was on this couple to prove the death of Isobel’s husband, Benjamin Taylor. However, the required proclamation at Leith pier probably involved too much expense, so he appeared in sackcloth for 6 Sundays, and Isobel for no less than 11 Sundays, plus his employer paid a fine on his behalf. The couple’s sn Joseph was baptised in 1723, with him recorded as ‘walker’. The witnesses were Walter Kay and tailor John Scott. William (b.1701) son of William, he was born in Hawick Parish and was a weaver in Hawick Shiel. He was at Whitchesters for 6 years before spending the period from about 1727 at Hawick Shiel. He is probably the weaver William who witnessed a baptism for James Hume in Hawick Shiel in 1743. In 1757 he was one of the residents of farms neighbouring on the Common who had their ‘bakes’ at Blackgrain Moss broken up on the orders of the Town Council and were fined. In 1767 he gave evidence relating to the use of the Common; at that time he was still married. William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Ashbank in 1725 when his son Robert was baptised. the Hoose o Refuge (thu-hoos-ö-re-fewj) n. former name for the old house at the top of the Green Wynd, at one time the Nag’s Heid. It was used as the town’s poor house, providing a nicht’s shelter and porridge in the morning for the destitute and itinerant people. Thomas Wells was Keeper of the House in 1851. It is listed on the Loan in Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1881 it existed at 4 Loan, adjacent to the Combination Poorhouse, and presumably had a somewhat complementary role, as a last resort refuge for the travelling unemployed. James Smith, house painter (and ex-Cornet) was the keeper at that time. Its functions were presumably taken over later by the Combination Poorhouse.

the Hoose o Refuge (thu-hoos-ö-re-fewj) n. former house behind Denholm Kirk. It was used as an overflow jail and had a water barrel in front which was often utilised for sobering up drunks.

hoose-room (hoos-room) n. house-room, accommodation in a house, lodging – ‘. . .the sma Conventicle o’ hens that bide, This nicht o’ Februar thaw, Hoose-room at Haggis-ha’ [DH].

Hooses (hoo-seez) n., pl. groupings of pupils at the High School for the purposes of competitive sports. The 4 houses were Bransholme, Cavers, Harden and Minto, with specific colours for each. These designations were used through most of the 20th century, but have recently been replaced with less historical names.

hoosewife (hoos-wif) n. a housewife – ‘The hoosewife, the minister, the followers They fought the shutdoon tae the end’ [AY].

Hoot aye, there’s plenty, Neddie’s on the brace’ [JoHa], ‘Huff’d are ye? hoot na; come this way a wee, For here’s a scene, I trow, ye’ll like to see’ [JoHa] (cf. hoots and the locally much more common howt and howts).

hoots (hoots) interj. exclamation of annoyance or disagreement – ‘Hoots, gae way wi’ ye Mr. Spunk, ye maun let me stand ma hand on this suspicious occasion’ [JEDM] (rare locally, cf. howts).

hope (hop, hup, whup) n. a small upland valley, hollow enclosed at one end, now mainly in place names – ‘Thus the proper name Hope, signifying a particular kind of glen, they pronounce as if written whupp . . .’ [RAC]. It is particularly common in the Borders, e.g. in Hobkirk, most often at the end of the name, when it is often shortened, e.g. Kershope, Phaup (Fawhope), Hislop (Hazelhope) and Philip (Phillhope). Double uses of ‘hope’ include Dryhope-hope and Lewenshope-hope in Yarrow and Twisletonhope Hope in Liddesdale – ‘No sound could be heard in hope or glen To tell that his world was a world of men . . .’ [WHO], ‘The clouds sail doon Teviotdale Owre every hope and grain, The road and river wanly glint And the hills are derk wi’ rain’ [DH].

published in 1878. Alexander is the son of a Hawick man who had made good in Australia and sent his son back to Scotland to learn about sheep farming etc. George (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish who married Margaret Martin. His children included Bessie (b.1645) and Helen (b.1648). The witnesses in 1648 were James Stewart and William (who was probably a relative). Horatio Nelson Trafalgar (b.1807) eldest child of William and Jane Scott. He was presumably named in honour of Nelson’s victory and death at the battle a year or so before he was born. He was a clerk in Hawick and subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. It is unclear what happened to him, but he may be confused with a man of a similar name who emigrated to Prince Edward Island. James (18th C.) resident of Mackside in Southdean Parish. In 1764 and 1767 he had unnamed sons baptised. Probably the same James had these other children baptised in Southdean: Margaret (b.1752); Robert (b.1753); and James (b.1755). James (18th/19th C.) linen draper in Hawick. He was listed as a member of Allars Kirk in 1829. John (16th C.) one of the King’s shepherds, who, along with John Hall, had sheep stolen from him by a group of Armstrongs and others in 1535. This was at ‘Braidlee in the Forest’, which was probably the farm in the Borthwick valley. The same 2 men were recorded in the Exchequer Rolls of 1540 in ‘Braidlie and Filop’ when they were paid £6 13s 4d for 10 bolls of grain. John (17th C.) resident of Roberton Parish, the part associated with Hassendean. He witnessed baptisms for Walter Gledstains in 1681, for Walter Crinklaw in 1686, for Adam Sanderson in 1687 and for John Scott in Appletreehall and for Hector Shiel in 1688. He married Barbara Graham and their children included: William (b.1681); Marie (b.1686); and Elizabeth (b.1689). The witnesses in 1681 were Robert Thomson and Adam Sanderson and in 1686 were William and James Redford. John (17th C.) recorded among the poor of Hassendean Parish in 1689, when he was at Hassendeanburn. John (1671/2–1748) gardener at Wells. He ‘lived in a thatched cottage with his wife, keeping a cow and poultry, and from time to time supplying the mansion with their produce’. The estate factor Archibald Jordan describes that the plate of the house (i.e. silver cutlery, etc.) was in his care. He married Betty Samuel, who died in 1742, aged 76. Their children included: James (1698/9–1769); and Margaret (1708/9–86), who married Robert Scott, gardener at Wells. He is buried in Bedrule kirkyard. John ‘Johnnie the Whup’ (b.c.1785). From the family that gave its name to the lands of Hopehill, off Wilton Crescent. He is probably the John, married to Mary, who lived at ‘Roadside’ in 1841, and is described as an ‘Independent Gentleman’ in the census. John ‘Hopie’ (1941/2–) Cornet in 1963 and Acting Father in 1998. His Cornet’s Lass was Lilian Young. He was Master of Ceremonies at the Common Riding for many years. He also served as Chairman of the Hawick Community Council. He was Jubilee Cornet in 2013 and played the part of the Hexham standard-bearer in the Big Return in 2014. Matthew (1764–95) probably son of John, born in Langholm. He was a merchant in Hawick. He subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). He married Jane Potts in Hawick in 1781 and their children included: Walter (b.1782); Robert (b.1785); Helen (b.1787); and Janet (b.1789). The witnesses in 1789 were George Fairlie and Robert Scott. His first wife appears to have died in 1789 and he secondly married Elizabeth Hill and had 5 more children in Langholm. His death is recorded in Hawick. Mona born in Hawick, but raised on Stornaway, she started working in Hawick’s Registrar’s Office in 1981 and retired 29 years later. She married local knitwear firm owner Eric. Mungo (17th C.) described as ‘in Hassendean Know’ in a list of landowners and tenants of Hassendean Parish in 1666. He may be the ‘Hope in Hassingeaneburne’ who is listed on a tax document for the Lordship of Melrose in 1700. Peter (19th/20th C.) early trainer of Hawick R.F.C. Robert (17th/18th C.) wright in Ashkirk Parish. In 1723 his daughter Isobel married John Riggs, printer in Edinburgh. Dr. Robert (1812–78) born in Morebattle, son of Robert and Joan Culbertson. He graduated M.D. from Edinburgh University in 1834, winning a surgery prize. He came to Hawick as assistant to Dr. John Douglas. He may have set up on his own, since in Pigot’s 1837 directory he is listed separately as a surgeon on the High Street. In 1838 he emigrated to New South Wales, practicing at Narellan, and then moving to live near his brothers. Together they established flour mills, farmed sheep and supplied goods to miners during the gold rush. They were early viticulturists in the Geelong district. He also served in the Victorian Legislative Council. He married Catherine Elizabeth Hassell. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Mary Reid and their son John was born in 1767. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Hawick who married Margaret Napier in 1767. Their children included: Andrew (b.1770); and Agnes (b.1773). He is probably the Thomas whose child died in 1773. Thomas (18th C.) resident of ‘New Harrot’ in Hobkirk Parish in 1788 when his daughter Euphie was baptised. Perhaps the same Thomas was the tenant at Langraw in Hobkirk Parish, listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Thomas (18th/19th C.) owner of the land at Hopehill, as marked on Wood’s 1824 map. His 2nd wife was Elizabeth Ingles. William (17th C.) farmer at Branxholme Town in 1671, when there were 7 tenants recorded there. His name also appears in connection with Branxholme Town in 1675 and 1677. He could be the William, married to Bessie Martin (also a surname from that area) whose daughter Helen was born in 1646; this same William probably witnessed a baptism for George in 1648. He is probably the William ‘in Bransome’ whose will is recorded in 1684. William (17th/18th C.) gardener in Hawick. In 1721 his daughter Margaret married shoemaker William Tait. William (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Pringle and their children included Janet (b.1744). William (18th/19th C.) mail-guard in Hawick. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He could be the William who married Jane Scott and whose children, baptised in Hawick, included: Horatio Nelson Trafalgar (b.1807); Harriot Ormond (b.1808); Mary Ann (b.1810); Henry Charles (b.1812); William Todd (b.1814); Samuel Todd (b.1817); Jane (b.1819); and Wilhelmina Amelia (b.1822), who married James Blenkinsop. His son Thomas died in 1819. William ‘Willy’ (b.1788/9) from Ancrum, he was a draper and grocer in Denholm. His shop was probably on Sunnyside. In Slater’s 1852 directory he was listed as a linen draper. In 1851 he was living with his niece Margaret as house-keeper. He used to travel around the neighbouring valleys (including Rulewater) with a covered cart containing his wares. He died unmarried (formerly written ‘Hop’).
Hopeheid

Hopeheid (höp-heed) n. Hopehead, former name for lands near Larriston Rig. They were purchased (perhaps under ‘wadsett’) from Robert Elliot of Larriston along with Larriston Rig by John Elliot of Thortieshope in 1675 and there was a further wadsett in 1697 with Robert, son of the previous Robert Elliot. It is unclear exactly where these lands were located.

Hopehill (höp-hill) n. house on the land adjacent to Hope Park, off Wilton Crescent, which was named by the Hope family who once lived there. It was later the home of wool merchant David Law, Rev. Robert Mitchell and Provost Melrose. It is also referred to as ‘Hopehill Cottage’ and is now run as a guest house.

Hopehouse (höp-hous) n. Hopehouse, farm in the Ettrick valley between Tushielaw and Thirlestane. The Cranstons of tat Ilk are recorded in connection to these lands in 1581. It was owned by the Scotts of Thirlestane in 1609 when the tenants were Thomas Hislop, Robert Paterson and Robert Cowan. In about 1622 it is described as a ‘pendicle’ of Thirlestane (it is ‘Hoiphous’ in 1609 and 1622).

Hope-Johnstone (höp-jon-stin) n. Capt. Wentworth William ‘Wenty’ (1848–1910) famous British gentleman jockey, who rode his first flat race at Hawick in the 1860s, borrowing boots and breeches for the occasion, and apparently hearing the starter and his brother trying to fix the race! Later in his career he twice won 5 races in one afternoon.

Hopekirk (höp-kirk) n. former name for Hobkirk, in use before the 18th century.

Hope Park (höp-pawrk) n. former name for an area in Wilton which became the upper end of the west side of Wilton Crescent. It was named by a family called Hope who lived there in the late 18th and early 19th centuries.

Hope Sike (höp-sik) n. stream that rises near Hare Hill, passes the farmstead of Pleaknowe, joining Stewart’s Cleuch and running not the Slitrig from the east.

Hope the Gaird (höp-thu-gård) n. one of the guards (the other well-known one being Dougal) on the Royal Mail coach, which passed through Hawick in the early part of the 19th century. His first name is unrecorded. They had a livery of scarlet and gold, and were armed with blunderbuss and pistols – ‘Wagga Wagga and Jocky Sling, Rumpie Laidlaw and Rob the Laird, Jocky Tennocks and Wullie the King, Henry Mullens and Hope the Gaird’ [HI], ‘With hats in hand, and three loud cheers, Hope the guard first started, And drank is Royal Highness health, All in good order parted’ [BY].

Hopkirk see Hobkirk

Hopper (ho-pur) n. Thomas H. (b.1816/7) from England, he was a druggist at 3 High Street in the 1841, 1851 and 1861 censuses. His wife was Williamina and their children included Christina W., Georgeina E., Thomas and Elizabeth.

hoppergaw (ho-purgaw) v. arch. to sew seeds unevenly, so that the plants grow in patches (noted by J. Jamieson).
Hoppringle (ho-pring-ull) n. farmstead on the Toddle Burn, to the east of the A7 north of Fountainhall, which was the original home of the Pringle family (the derivation is something like ‘small enclosed valley of the round hill’, although an earlier romantic theory suggested it meant ‘son of the pilgrim’).

Hoppringle see Pringle

Hopsburn see Hobbsburn

hork (hork) v., poet. to scrape, dig – ‘The muse is like to spleet her jaws ... But horking howks ’mang epita’s, Sin’ Davie’s dead’ [JoHa].

the horn (thu-horn) n., arch. trumpet used figuratively to declare someone an outlaw, to be declared ‘rebel at the horn’ or ‘at the King’s horn’ is to be outlawed (from the former practice of the King’s herald giving 3 blasts on his horn at the Cross of Edinburgh to pronounce the person an outlaw).

the Horn (thu-horn) n. ridge on the east side of the A7 just before coming to Linhope farm. It is essentially the southern extension of Meg’s Hill, and is flanked by Frostlie Burn and Mare Sike.

the Horn Brig (thu-horn-brig) n. bridge that the A7 takes over the Frostlie Burn just north of Linhope. So named because the stage-coach guard used to sound his trumpet on the approach to Linhope farm. The bridge has been modernised from the original.

Horne (horn) n. Donald, W.S. (1787–1870) 2nd son of John of Stirkoke. He trained as a lawyer, being apprenticed to his uncle, John Home of Stirkoke, Caithness. He became Writer to the Signet in 1813. He was a keen volunteer in Edinburgh. He acted as Edinburgh agent for the Duke of Buccleuch in the 1830s. He held strongly Conservative political views and was involved in electoral struggles in the years after the passing of the Reform Bill. Before the 1835 election he purchased property in the Borders, splitting into £10 lots and registering people from Edinburgh and elsewhere as ‘faggot voters’. As a result he was not entirely popular among Hawick folk, and someone mistaken for him was beaten by the mob at the election. In 1837 it is said that the mob waiting around the Tower Knowe the night before the election threatened to kill him when he arrived (although his name is confusingly given as ‘David’ in some of the records). His offices in Edinburgh were in Sir Walter Scott’s former house. He became a member of the Jedforest Club in 1836. Later in life he grew deaf and at the Jedforest Club he got up to return his thanks when mishearing a toast to ‘the donor of the horn’. In 1821 he married Jane, daughter of Thomas Elliot Ogilvie of Chesters, and she died 13 years later. They had 3 sons, James being the eldest and father of Lord Horne – ‘There’s honest Horne, a man o’ zeal, He’d face the verra diel, Mak’s MUSHROOMS spring in ilka biel’, To help the cause’ [RDW]. Julie ‘Jules’ (1963–) local writer, born in Hawick and living near Kelso. Her writings have appeared in several anthologies, as well as on the radio and in theatrical performances. She was joint winner of the Robert Louis Stevenson Award in 2002, worked as Associate Playwright for Playwrights’ Studio Scotland in the Borders, was attached as a writer to the National Theatre of Scotland and has taught creative writing at the Open University. Writer of many short plays, her first full-length play ‘Gorgeous Avatar’ was performed at Edinburgh’s Traverse Theatre in 2006 and her play ‘Allotment’ won a Scotsman Fringe First in 2011. She published the books ‘Nanovels, Five-minute Flash Fiction’ in 2015 and ‘Wrapped Town’ in 2016. Neil High School Rector 1993–2006. Peter (b.1938/9) proprietor of Deans & Simpson, stationers in Hawick. He and his wife Margaret Neal retired in 2020, having worked there for more than 40 years. Robert (d.bef. 1690) tenant in Acreknowe. The will of his widow Janet Veitch is recorded in 1690.

Horne Court (horn-kör’) n. former factory and warehouse at 13 Dovecote Street, converted into flats in 1984 and named after W. Horne & Son, the North Bridge Street furnishers who owned the warehouse for many years. It had earlier been owned by Laidlaw’s and by R.G. Maxwell & Co., cloth merchants.

Horne’s Pool (hornz-pool) n. place on the Teviot near Hawick mentioned in Sir Walter Scott’s journal as ‘a scene of deep and solemn retirement ... from its having been a daily haunt of a contemplative schoolmaster known to him in his youth’. Scott stopped here with the Wordsworths in 1803. It is surely Hornshole, since it lay between Denholm and Hawick, and here ‘a stone bridge crossed the water at a deep and still place’ according to Dorothy Wordsworth. However, Scott’s story of a former schoolmaster of named Horne is belied by the name of the place going back to at least the 15th century.

the Hornet (thu-hör-ni’) n. joke version of the Cornet, selected on the Saturday night, formerly at the ‘Greetin Denner’. He is carried around by the other supporters, using a broom instead of a flag.
Horn Hill

Horn Hill (hörn-hil) n. one of the hills to the south of the ‘Hill Road to Roberton’, just by the side of the road, south-west of Shielswood Loch.

hornie (hör-née) n., arch. a small horn, diminutive term for a horned animal, the devil, especially in the phrase ‘auld hornie’.

hornie-holes (hör-née-hólz) n., arch. a game similar to ‘cat and bat’, played by 4 people, involving a stick and a hole – ‘Hornie-holes. A game in which four play, a principal and an assistant on each side. A. stands with his assistant at one hole, and throws what is called a cat (a piece of stick, and frequently a sheep’s horn) with the design of making it alight into another hole at some distance at which B. stands, with his assistant, to drive it aside with a rod resembling a walking-stick, Teviotdale’ [JoJ].

Hornie Robbie (hör-née-ro-bee) n. nickname of an old Hawick character – ‘Baith auld and young are mixed I trow – Rob Lurgie lingers wi’ the lave, Caleb and Clinty seem cronies now Wi’ Hornie Robbie and Cannie Dave’ [HI].

hornin (hör-nín) n., arch. the process of putting someone ‘to the horn’ – ‘. . . be deluvryng of the lordis of Counsale, of horning, poinding and warding, the ane without preiudice of the vther . . . ’ [SB1599].

Hornshole (hörnz-höl) n. site about 2 miles down the Teviot from Hawick, where the river narrows into a deep, dark pool. The name originally applied to a farm on the north side of the river, but is now associated with a small piece of land on the south side of the bridge. Here tradition says that a band of Hawick youths routed a party of English marauding soldiers in 1514, bringing back their flag triumphantly to Hawick. Although it does seem likely to have happened, there is little evidence of historical value relating to the events of that skirmish, or for fixing precisely where it occurred. Nevertheless several speculative accounts of the battle have been written. The first mention of the events in print occurs in Balbirnie’s ‘Auld Sang’, which simply states ‘By Teviotside they took this Colour, A dear memorial of their valour’; this dates from around 1800. Hogg’s slightly later song, published in 1819, devotes about half of the verses to these events, including an explicit mention of Hornshole, ‘Nigh where Teviot falls sonorous, Into Hornshole dashing furious, Lay their foes with spoil encumbered: Quite secure, even sent’nels slumbered’. However, the first detailed account to be published in prose (in Robert Wilson’s 1825 ‘History of Hawick’) refers to the site of the skirmish as ‘the Trows’ rather than the more specific ‘Hornshole’ (this making sense in the days before the bridge). That account (originating with Scott of Burnhead) tells how the Magistrates decided to resist the marauding English group, sending out about 200 people from Hawick, who massacred the roughly 40-strong English force. There is, of course, no evidence to support these numbers, and most likely there were far fewer people involved. And whether it was at the Trows or Hornshole, there is no reason to doubt the basics of the tradition. However, given that existence of the ‘chase’ of former days from the Boglieburns (said to re-enact the return with the Flag), it seems likely that the action took place on the south side of the river (consistent with the Trows, or near Hornshole Pool, but not consistent with being on the lands of Hornshole itself). The traditional date of the riding of the marches suggests that the event took place near the end of May, although the letter from Dacre describing English raids was written in mid-May and the full moon (when raids often took place was around the 8th of May in the old-style calendar). In the 15th and 16th centuries the name ‘Hornshole’ was definitely used for a farm on the northern/western side of the Teviot, in Hassendean (later Wilton) Parish. There are many variants of the name, including ‘Horne’s Pool’ (probably erroneously) by Dorothy Wordsworth and ‘Hornshiel’ (in the 17th century). The conflict is said to have taken place on a piece of flat land on the southern side of the river, perhaps near where the monument was erected in 1901 – hence it was perhaps more likely to be at ‘the Trows’ (Cavers side) rather than ‘Hornshole’ (Wilton side), although the name may have been used to apply to the pool in the river, rather than the lands on one of the banks. James Turnbull of Hornshole was witness to a document for the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1456. Adam and Walter Turnbull in Hornshole were allowed to ‘compone’ for other crimes in 1493. William Douglas of ‘hornyshole’ is recorded in 1494, being surety for Simon and Matthew Routledge, tenants in the Trows. James Turnbull was tenant there in 1501, Adam Turnbull in 1502 and John Turnbull in 1516. The lands were granted to Thomas, 2nd son of Thomas Turnbull of Minto in 1619. In 1643 the lands were valued at £100 and owned by Rev. John Turnbull of Makerstoun. In the 1663 valuation the owner was William Turnbull. In the 17th century the superiority was held by the Hamiltons, Earls of Haddington, along with other lands previously possessed by Melrose.
Hornshole

Abbey. The lands were still part of the Lordship of Melrose in 1670. In 1678 the lands were valued along with Brieryards (in Hassendean Parish) at £360. The bell from Hassendean Church is supposed to have been thrown into the Teviot there during the dispute with Roberton in 1690. At this time the lands were transferred from the suppressed Hassendean Parish to Wilton. John Scott was tenant there in 1694, while Janet Young was listed among the poor. Walter Riddell was living there in 1737. The Brieryards mansion house overlooks the pool in the river here, and a bridge was built in 1774. In 1788 the lands were owned by Turnbull of Fenwick (along with Briery Yards). The Cornet’s Lass lays a wreath at the monument after the Kirkin on the Sunday before the Common Riding; before 1977 they did this after the Colour Bussing – ‘Nigh where Teviot falls sonorous, Into Hornshole dashing furious’ [JH].

The flag for which our fathers died At Hornshole Bridge shall stand, That trusty valour through the land . . . ’ [JLH].

Hornshole Monument (hörnz-hól-mo-new-min’). n. monument erected in 1901, on a small piece of land near Hornshole, gifted by Capt. Palmer-Douglas of Cavers, and paid for with money left over from the ‘Return to Hawick’ painting subscriptions. It was unveiled (by Bailie Lawson’s daughter) on the Saturday before Common Riding week, with Mrs. Oliver of Thornwood giving an address and Jed Murray writing a special poem for the occasion. The opening is recorded in a photograph. It is a fairly plain stone monument, 11 feet 3 inches high, sculpted by Robert Robson and inscribed with the phrase ‘1514 Lest we forget’. In 1977 a plaque was added, reading ‘In this vicinity in 1514, the year after the Battle of Flodden, youths from Hawick routed a band of marauding English soldiery and captured their flag’. The monument was replaced by a copy in 2014, along with a new plaque. After the entire site was gifted to the people of Hawick, it was re landscaped in 2020/1, with designs by Paul Hogarth and Gordon Muir; time capsules were buried under the new set of 28 oak bollards. On the Sunday before the Common Riding, after the Kirkin ceremony, the Cornet’s Lass lays a wreath here. And after the ride-out on the Saturday before the Common Riding, the Principals stop here, singing ‘Teribus’ and standing in their stirrups.

Hornshole Pool (hörnz-hól-pool) n. pool in the Teviot at Hornshole – ‘...Stirring the ripples on Hornshole Pool Where Dacre woke to his day of dule’ [JYH] (it seems reasonable to suppose that the land on the north side of the river got its name partly from the ‘hole’ in the Teviot here, and then this name was transferred back to the pool).

Hornshole Rocks (hörnz-hól-roks) n. rocks in the Teviot, marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map just to the east of Trowmill, significantly upriver from Hornshole itself.
the Hornshole Stakes

Horny Robbie

(hör-nee-ro-bee) n. nickname for Robert Howieson.

Horsburgh

(hors-bu-ru) n. Alexander of that Ilk (1536–91) son of John and Christian Rutherford. His lands were in Peeblesshire. In 1581 he gave sasine of Wester Horsburgh to Andrew, son of Walter Riddell of that Ilk, in the name of his sister Janet Riddell, reserving for himself the different of a croft of land; he and his son William witnessed the transaction. In 1588/9 he served as cautioner for John Turnbull of Minto. He married Christian, daughter of William Stewart, 2nd Laird of Traquair and was succeeded by his son Alexander. Alexander of that Ilk (c.1555–1620) son of Alexander. He had sasine for Horsburgh in 1581. He served as Depute Sheriff of Peeblesshire. In 1592 he was cautioner for the good behaviour of Andrew Riddell of that Ilk and John Turnbull of Minto. In 1598 he and Andrew Riddell were cautioners for James Pringle of Galashiels not to carry hagbuts and James Pringle was cautioner for him to to harm a Burgess of Edinburgh. In 1581 he married Jean, daughter of Walter Riddell of that Ilk and she died before 1623. There were complaints that the family did not attend communion and a specific accusation in 1603 that his wife was not attending church; however, it was reported that ‘ze Lady Horsburt was diseasit & yr-fore could not conveinently conforme to hir housband promes’. This was presumably all part of the religious schisms of the times. His brother William slew the son of the minister, James Douglas, and the whole family had a feud with the ministers allies, the Lairds of Haldane and Gledstains. Also in 1603 he was one of the sureties for Thomas Ker of Cavers. In 1604 he was surety for the whole town of Peebles. He was succeeded by his son Alexander, although he was known for his beligerence, even attacking his own brothers. Alexander of that Ilk (1753–1829) son of John and Elizabeth Rutherford. In 1778 he married Violet (d.1834), daughter of Thomas Turnbull of Knowe, the marriage taking place at Knowe and being proclaimed in Innerleithen. Through his wife he came into possession of the lands of the Turnbuls of Knowe. in 1834. He was served heir to to Pirn and Horsburgh in 1779 and to ‘Tounheid of Hassendean’ in 1787. In 1788 he was listed under ‘Votes of Rutherford of Edgerston’ among the voters of Roxburghshire. He was involved with Thomas Turnbull (his brother-in-law) in dispositions regarding lands at Hassendean Common in 1789. His children (baptised in Innerleithen) included: John (b.1779), who died young; Susan (1780), who married Walter Scott of Raeburn; Elizabeth (b.1781); Jean (b.1782); Charlotte (b.1784); Violet (b.1785); Thomas (b.1787), who succeeded, but died unmarried; Alexander (b.1788); Samuel Mitchelson (b.1789); and Mary Nisbet (b.1791). Alexander (b.1825/6) farmer at Greenhouse in Lilliesleaf Parish. In 1861 he was farmer of 158 acres there, employing 5 people. He was still recorded there in 1868. Elizabeth ‘Bessie’ (17th/18th C.) recorded receiving money from Ashkirk Parish in 1727. John of that Ilk (1704–74) from the family based around Peebles and Innerleithen and who would eventually inherit the estates of Turnbull of Knowe. He was involved with a court action and ‘letters of horning and poinding’ against Rev. George Hall of Abbotsrule in 1735, to recover a loan. There was a similar action against Thomas Watson, Clerk of the Regality of Hawick in 1757. He was recorded as a Commissioner for Peeblesshire in 1761. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Rutherford of Edgerston and that Ilk and was succeeded by his son Alexander, who married Violet, daughter of Thomas Turnbull of Knowe. John (18th C.) local thatcher. In 1758 he was hired to thatch the roof of Hobkirk Kirk with broom. William (b.1800/1) born in Cavers Parish, he worked on farms in Roberton Parish. He was farmer at Hoscuteshiel in 1841, ‘Drainer’ at Howpasley in 1851 and agricultural labourer at Old Howpasley in 1861. He married Mary Jackson, and their children included: Janet (b.c.1833); Walter (b.1835); James (b.1838); Elizabeth (b.1840); William (b.1842); and Adam (b.1845).

the Horse

(thur-hors) n. the equestrian statue standing at the east end of the High Street, erected by public subscription in 1914, and properly known as the 1514 Memorial. Despite being colloquially called ‘the Horse’, it is of course the rider and the flag that are of most significance. It is a life-size bronze statue, on a stone plinth, designed by William Beattie (his plaster model of 1913 being in the Museum), cast by J.W. Singer & Sons. It was unveiled by Lady Sybil Scott (daughter of the Duke of Buccleuch) on the afternoon before the Colour Bussing in 1914, as part of the Quater-centenary celebrations (and the unveiling ceremony was filmed). The inscriptions were completed by Thomas Beattie in 1921. It the Horse an Hoonds

also now gives its name to the open street area surrounding it, which was previously known as Central Square. Since 1923 it has been publicly bedecked with blue and gold ribbons by the Cornet after the Colour Bussing ceremony (filmed at least as early as 1929). The horse that modelled the statue was well-known for being able to keep still, but apparently a bucket was used to rest its front foot on! The face of the rider was apparently modelled on that of A.H. Drummond, Cornet of 1888. The monument was moved slightly in 2003 as part of traffic re-routing, and had an extra base added. A ‘time-capsule’ from 1914 was discovered, and another was buried there in 2005. In 2004 the plinth was removed from the base to try to curb vandalism problems. In 2014 the memorial was cleaned (funded by the Mostroopers’ Club and supervised by Beltane Studies), revealing details that had not been seen for many decades, including fringes on the flag and the sculptor’s signature. The inscription on the base reads ‘Merses Profundo Pulchrior Evenit’, which is from Horace Odes, 4.4.65, and translates literally as ‘Plunged in the depths, he emerges more magnificent’, paraphrased perhaps as ‘You can’t keep a good man down!’ (here ‘Merses’ may also be a play on the Merse). It is a grade A listed building. There are some existing photographs of the construction process – ‘...And the Horse is there, and the Callant Wi’ the brave flag held high’ [WL], ‘Now Hawick’s aye chowked wi’ cars, and the plan that wad relieve eet, Means hevin’ ti high’ [WL]. ‘Now Hawick’s aye chowked wi’ cars, and the plan that wad relieve eet, Means hevin’ ti high’, ‘Mrs. Scott the bestcloath wt the hors clos for her husband, Mr. Scot of Harwood, £1 16s’ [PR], ‘Mrs. Scott the bestcloath wt the hors clos for her husband, Mr. Scot of Harwood, £1 16s’ [PR] (cf. mort-cloth).

Horselee (hors-lee) n. former farmstead in the Slitrig valley on the opposite side of the river from Newmill-on-Slitrig, lying near the Horsley Burn. At the Reformation it was part of the Lordship of Winnington, being listed among the lands owned by the Hamiltons in 1610. It was among the lands of Winnington purchased by Gilbert Elliott of Stobs from Robert Elliot of Redheugh in 1622. It was listed among the lands owned by the Elliotts of Stobs in 1657 and still part of the Barony in the late 17th century. It was among lands whose superiority was inherited by daughters of George Scott (brother of Sir Walter of Whitslade) in 1670. James Hogg, Walter Cavers and James Reid were there in 1797. It was still recorded among the local men fined for attending conventicles. Francis Aitkin was there in 1789–90. Michael and John Broad are recorded as farmers there in 1797. It was still recorded among the farms of Elliott of Stobs in 1813, when still valued at £136 12s 3d in 1788 when disjoined from other parts of the Stobs estate. The farm may be the ruin and enclosure marked in the area on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map, but of which no sign remains; it is listed as the site of a hill-fort in 1863. Robert Turnbull was there in 1862. In 1684 the tenant (William Armstrong) was among the local men fined for attending conventicles. Francis Aitkin was there in 1789–90. Michael and John Broad are recorded as farmers there in 1797. It was still recorded among the farms of Elliott of Stobs in 1813, when still valued at £136 (marked on Stobie’s 1770 map; also spelled ‘Horslee’, ‘Horseley’, ‘Horselie’ and ‘Horsley’; it is ‘Horslie’ in 1610, 1657 and 1694, ‘Horse-lie’ in 1684 and ‘Horsly’ in 1720; the origin of the name is obscure; there is no obvious connection with Horsleyhill, except that closely related Ellsors/Eliotts once owned both).

Horsemanford (hors-mun-ford) n. farmstead in the Hermitage valley, just south-east of Gorrenberry. Robert Knox and his family lived there in the Hermitage valley, just south-east of Gorrenberry. Robert Knox and his family lived there in 1682. In 1684 the tenant (William Armstrong) was among the local men fined for attending conventicles. Francis Aitkin was there in 1789–90. Horsleyhill (hors-pawrk) n. former name for lands near Newton in Bedrule Parish, recorded in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls. Probably the lands of the same name were those listed as part of the Bonjedward estate in 1707.

the Horse Pool (thu-hors-pool) n. pool in the Teviot at the bend near Teinside Cottage (also written 'the Horsepool'; perhaps this was a place where horses could be washed).

the Horse Tax Rolls (thu-hors-tawks-rölz) n. farm horse tax rolls, listing the names of owners of work horses, the register taken in 1797 and 1798. It forms a useful list of the farmers and merchants in and around Hawick at the end of the 18th century.

the Horsewaerd (thu-hors-wärd) n. former name for a piece of land in Minto Parish. In 1683 a piece of land in Craigend, called ‘lie Grassland’ is mentioned being in the ward of ‘Horsewaerd’. A dyke there is mentioned in the 1695 charter to Gideon Scott of Highchester when describing how it bordered a piece of land at Minto Mains, with Craigend house at the other end. Among the lands inherited by Sir Gilbert Elliot of Minto in 1778 was ‘the inclosure called Horsewaerd’.

Horsleyhill (hors-lee-hil) n. farm and area around it, about 3 miles north-east of Hawick, between Clarilaw and Hassendean. The estate seems to have been owned by a branch of the Scotts in the 15th century, and was inherited through marriage by the Elliots about 1555. Gavin Elliot was listed as a tenant there in 1551, and was probably great-grandson of Robert Scott of Horsleyhill (whose daughter and heir married William Elliot of Larriston). In 1555 Alexander, Lord Home (superior of Hassendean) granted a charter, on wadset and reversion, to Gavin Elliot. However, there was some kind of local dispute between the Elliots and the Scotts, culminating in the murder in 1564 of David Scott of Hassendean, with the Horsleyhill Elliots playing a leading role, and several of them being executed as a result. In 1616 it was also called ‘Wester Hassendean, with tower, fortalice, etc.’ when it was sold by the Earl of Home to Gilbert Elliott of Stobs. It was sold by the 7th Elliot Laird to Elliott of Stobs in the mid-17th century and passed again to the Scotts. ‘Mar. Scott, guidewife of Hosliehill’ is recorded as owner of lands valued at £637 in 1643. William Scott was Laird in 1663 and Robert Scott in 1678, when the land was still valued at £637. William Collin was living there in 1682 and John Renwick in 1688. The Scotts of Horsleyhill were a prominent local family, who had a house at the top of Walters Wynd, still partly surviving at 51 High Street; ‘The Laird of Horslihill’ was taxed for 4 heaths in Hawick in 1694. The Scotts of Horsleyhill also held lands in the eastern part of Hawick (perhaps just to the north of the Little Haugh) until sold to Walter Purdom in the early 18th century, as well as land in Weensland and elsewhere. The lands became part of Minto Parish after Hassendean was suppressed in 1690. Householders (probably tenants) on the farm in 1694 were John Noble, John Turnbull and Thomas Knox. Others listed among the cottars and poor there were George Knox, Bessie Turnbull, William ‘Culling’, Agnes Knox, George Hood, William Aitken, Robert Scott, John Knox and Janet Gray. The road was improved around 1773 to connect to the Turnpike road at ‘the Nitton’. By 1788 the land had been split into the ‘North-end of Horsliehill’ (owned by Robert Dickson, valued at £382) and ‘South-end of ditto’ (owned by Archibald Dickson, valued at £255). ‘Messrs Ainslies’ were farmers there in 1797, according to the Horse Tax Rolls. It was listed in the Land Tax Rolls of 1811, when the south part was owned by Robert Dickson (valued at £255), while the north part was owned by Archibald Dickson’s heirs (valued at £382). Andrew Hall was there in 1861. There was presumably once a peel tower there, but there was already no sign of it by 1845. In the early-to-mid 20th century the farm at Horsleyhill was known as a local dairy farm. In 1991 a group of 56 Edwardian coins was found in a field there – ‘He turned him now from Teviotside, And, guided by the tinkling rill, Northward the dark ascent did ride, And gained the moor at Horsliehill’ [SWS] (also spelled ‘Horsliehill’, ‘Horsley Hill’ and other variants; it is ‘Horsliehill’ in 1561/2, 1563 and 1564, ‘Horslihill’ in 1573, ‘Horsliehill’ in 1581, ‘Horshehill’ in 1604, ‘Horsliehill’ in 1605 and 1678, ‘horslihill’ in 1682, ‘Horslawhill’ in 1688, ‘Horslihill’ in 1690, ‘Horsleiwll’ in 1797 and ‘Horsley-hill’ in 1811; it is marked on Blaen’s 1654 map and is ‘Huslawhill’ on the 1718 Buccleuch survey; the origin is uncertain, although some connection with horses seems obvious).

Horsleyhill Cottages (hors-lee-hil-ko’-ee-jeez) n. collection of cottages to the south of Horsleyhill Port

Horsleyhill, essentially the same as the place formerly called Westerhouses. The Deans family were joiners there in the 19th century.

Horsleyhill Port (hors-lee-hil-pör) n. former name for the North Port at Walter’s Wynd, or for the street itself.

Horsleyhill’s Wynd (hors-lee-hilz-wïnd) n. former name for Walter’s Wynd, until the mid-18th century. It was named for the town house of the Scotts of Horsleyhill, which was at the top of the street. Fixing of ‘the port in Horslee Hills Wynd’ is recorded in 1704.

Hoscote (hos-ko‘) n. estate in the Borthwick valley, about 6 miles from Hawick, with the entrance gates and lodge on the main road at Deanburnhaugh. ‘Wautier de Holcote’, who swore fealty to Edward I in 1296 could have been an early owner (if this is a transcription error). The lands were resigned by ‘Adam of Hodholme’ in the early 14th century and bestowed upon William Barbour by Robert the Bruce. It then appears to have been part of the holdings of the Scotts of Buccleuch and Rankleburn, but in 1410 was probably the ‘Thoftcotys’ (or ‘Hostcotys’) granted to Sir William of Borthwick on resignation by Robert Scott. It was recorded being west of Milsington in 1451. The lands were resigned by Robert Turnbull of Hoscote into the hands of their superior William Lord Borthwick and then conferred upon Alexander Master of Home in 1493/4. David Turnbull was recorded there in 1494/5. The Laird was fined in 1502 for failing to give suit for his lands at the Justice-aire held in Selkirk; however, the name of the Laird is not recorded. The lands were gained by Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme in 1516 through forfeiture of Alexander, Lord Home. It was recorded being west of Milsington in 1451. In 1643 Sir William Scott of Harden was served heir to his great-grandfather William’s 40-shilling land there, and then the land was inherited by Sir William Scott in 1676. There were 14 ‘communants’ recorded there in 1650, namely John Elliot, William Scott, Janet Elliot, Francis Scott, Margaret Clerk, Bessie Scott, Robert Elliot, Agnes Scott, John Govenlock, Joan Glendinning, Adam Glendinning, Marion Andrew, William Davidson and Bessie Davidson. Walter Chisholme was there in at least 1703–10, Robert Fletcher in 1710 John ‘Huotson’ and Thomas Cairns in 1711–16, John Cathrae and John Murray in 1712 and 1718, Adam Dalgleish in 1718, Thomas Cairns and Walter Grieve in 1721 and Simon Nichol in 1725. It was long a seat of the Scotts and was tenanted by the Ogilvies (Chamberlains to the Duke’s of Buccleuch) in the early 18th century. On the 1718 survey of properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch, some lands in Liddesdale (between Foulshiels and Netherrow, around Hartgarth) were shown belonging to the Laird of Hoscote. In about 1723 Hoscote was sold to Adam Pott, and on his death passed to his son George. On George Pott’s death it was split between his nephews John Grieve and George Stavert, and later was entirely acquired by George’s brother Adam Stavert. The estate was in the parish of Wilton until Robertson was formed in 1689. It is also in the part of the Borthwick valley that was once in Selkirkshire.

John Henderson was recorded there in 1781–87 and Robert Brown in 1792. The teinds of Roberton, Howcleuch and Hoscote were valued at £33 6s 8d in 1785 and 1802, while John Grieve paid the land tax on £200 in 1785 and Adam Stavert in 1802. The present house was built in 1858 and is situated in a 600 acre estate. There is a photograph of the house and estate in 1893. It is now used for corporate meetings and other functions, sleeping 17 (also spelled ‘Hoscoat’ well into the 19th century, as well as ‘Housecoates’, etc. earlier; the name first appears in 1451 as ‘lee Hostcotis’, and is transcribed as ‘Thoscot’ in 1493/4, ‘hogscotis’ in 1494/5, ‘host cotte’ in 1502, ‘Hoscot’

hosiery (hō-shu-ree) n. stockings, stocking making. Knitting socks was once an important domestic activity. The industry began in Hawick with the introduction of the first 4 stocking frames by John Hardie in 1771, building upon the successful carpet and inkle manufacturing. In a description of Hawick’s trade in about 1777 (by David loch) it was stated that Hardie had 14 frames and James Halden had 2. Hosiery manufacturing was soon expanded by John Nixon, around 1780, along with other firms shortly afterwards. Originally the industry was based on linen and worsted, but after about 1785 it moved over to lambswool. In 1791 it is reported that there were 12 frames in Hawick, that the trade employed 14 men and 41 women, and that 4099 pairs of stockings were produced. A Hawick Hosiers banner, with painted date 1797, may be one of the oldest existing trades society banners in Britain. By 1800 there were 22 men employed in the trade, with an average wage of 8 shillings and 4 pence. In 1824 there were 8 mills with 20 sets of machines, and in 1826 it was stated there were 500–600 stocking frames in the Town. Broad frames were first introduced in 1827, allowing shirts and underwear to be more easily made. In the early days the frames were in houses or small stocking-shops, with children assisting with winding etc. Usually the frames were each located by a window, since the work needed good light, and the machines were operated by the use of foot treadles, with the workers sitting on high stools. By 1837 there were 14 mills with 40–50 sets of machines, employing about 200 people. Firms expanded rapidly and quickly branched out into woollen underclothing generally. The move to larger factories came with the advent of power-driven frames in the early 19th century. It is said that in the 1840s 2,000 of Scotland’s 2,600 knitting frames were located in the Borders, and more than half of those were in Hawick, producing more than a million pairs of stockings per year. By the mid-19th century Hawick was the centre of Scotland’s hosiery industry. Around that time workers commonly had a 60 hour work week and were paid fortnightly, with few holidays. hotels (hō-telz) n., pl. Hawick has had many hotels through the years, although many establishments that called themselves ‘hotel’ or ‘inn’ were probably simply pubs. There was also a fashion for Temperance Hotels in the last half of the 19th century. A list of genuine hotels might include: Bridge Hoose Hotel; the Buccleuch Hotel; the Central Hotel; the Croon Hotel; the Elm Hoose Hotel; the Imperial Hotel; the Kings Hotel; Kirklands; the Mansfield Hoose Hotel; the Station Hotel; the Toor Hotel; the Victoria Hotel; the Washington Hotel.

Hotson (hot-sin) n. George (1651/2–1728) tenant in Netherraw. His children included John (1702/3–47). He could be the George, son of William Hotson and Jean Scott, born in Hawick Parish in 1645. John (17th C.) resident at Wester Heap according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. His surname is written as ‘Hotsone’. Robert (19th/20th C.) farmer at Effledge. In 1906 he contributed to the fund for the renovation of Kirkton Kirk. Thomas (17th/18th C.) merchant in Hawick. He married Jean Elliot and their children included: William (b.1702); and John (b.1704). Janet (b.1707) and James (b.1711), baptised in Hawick with no mother’s name given, are probably also his children. The witnesses in 1702 were John Elliot in Nether Southfield and William Henderson in Flex. Walter (17th C.) resident at Barnes in 1694 according to the Hearth Tax rolls. It is unclear if his surname may be a variant of some more common name. He could be the Walter, son of Robert and Isabell Davidson born in Hawick Parish in 1653. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Acreknowe in Kirkton Parish. His children included Janet (b.1719) and Walter (b.1721) (the surname is perhaps a variant of Howison or Whutson).

Hotspur (hot-spur) n. nickname of Henry Percy.

hott (hot, ho’) n., arch. a small heap of soil or manure – ‘Going over to Hawick Shielles they found that — Scott, tenant there, had ploghd. up ane march corner hott standing upon the north side of said Common’ [BR1717], ‘... there were little mounds, ‘hotts’ or hillocks of old turf’ [C&L], ‘... there was a gey little hott o muilleens left for Lazarus!’ [ECS], ‘In aulder times, When she was young, A’ she need jouk War’ hotts o’ dung’ [DH], v., arch. to heap together, make into a pile – ‘... he hotts up guids an’ geer, an’ kensna wha sall gether thane’ [HSR] (also spelled ‘hot’ and ‘hote’).

Hott (hot, ho’) n. former farm above Harwood, between Slaidhill and Branhxholme Muir, containing Hott Hill. It was listed as ‘the Hott’ in the Hawick Parish valuation of 1627, estimated to pay ‘in stok 50 merks, in teynd 10 merks’. William Davidson was tenant there in 1702. George Wilson was recorded there in 1722 and Walter Little was herd there in 1725. It is shown on the 1718 survey of properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch, although it was not owned by them at that time. Walter Cavers was the herd there in 1797 (it is probably the place marked ‘Nutt’ on Blaeu’s c.1654 map; a building at ‘Hott’ is marked on Stobie’s 1770 map).

hotter (ho’-ur, ho-tur) v., arch., poet. to bump around, move in a jerky way, walk unsteadily, bump around (as on a cart), to simmer – ‘Twa oors to boil, a wee to hotter, And there’s a broth, Hott Hill (hot-hil) n. hill to the west of Newmill, and just south-east of Branxholme Wester Loch, height 312 m. Another unnamed peak to the west reaches a height of 326 m. The former farmstead of ‘the Holt’ on Harwood estate is surely connected.

hot trod (hot-trod) n. a hot pursuit in rieving days, referring to the law allowing people who had been robbed to raise support within a fixed time, to mount a legal pursuit to recover their property. They could cross the Border if necessary, with the leader brandishing a piece of burning turf on a lance as a symbol (this gave rise to the phrase ‘hot to trot’). Rules for reprisals in this manner were outlined, for example, in a treaty of 1549, although it is suspected that the laws were simply used to justify rieving.

In the 1800s a bronze pot was found in a drain and a battle-axe in an adjoining field (recorded as as ‘Hova’ in the earliest documents, e.g. in 1567, it is ‘Howe’ in 1606 and 1677; it is ‘Howa’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map, although it is unclear precisely to which farm this refers).

Howabank (how-aw-bungk) n. former farm in Hobkirk Parish, once part of the more extensive farm of Howa and later incorporated into the estate of Hobsburn. Rev. Nichol Edgar is supposed to have convinced a ghost, which had been haunting Hokirk churchyard, to instead walk a straight line between here and Hoddleswoodie.

Howacre (how-ä-kur) n. former name for lands in Lilliesleaf Parish, once owned by the Riddells of that Ilk. It is listed in the service of heirs for Sir John Riddell in 1669, the description being ‘an acre of land at the east end of the town of Lilliesleaf, called Howaiker’.

Howahill (how-uh-hil) n. farm south-west of Bunchester, once part of the estate of ‘Howa’. It is now the main farm in this area, where there were formerly several separate steadings. Walter Deans was tenant there in the mid-18th century and is son Thomas Deans was farmer there in 1797. Walter Taylor was farmer in the 1860s and Robert Elder in the early 1900s (the area is recorded as as ‘Hova’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map, while the modern farm location is on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Howard (how-urd) n. John (1726–90) English prison reformer. He spent 2 nights in Hawick in 1565. In 1606 George Turnbull there was involved with raiding Appotside and Harwood. Gavin Turnbull in Howa is also recorded in 1606 as part of a feud between Turnbuls and the Grahamslaws of Newton. The main house was located on a dry hill with a spring at its foot, not far from the present farm of Howahill; by the 19th century there was already no sign of the original house, except for a stand of ash trees. By the 17th century it was part of the extensive Stobs estate. It then became part of the Stonedge estate, being sold to Adam Scott in the early 18th century. In the 1800s a bronze pot was found in a drain and a battle-axe in an adjoining field (recorded as as ‘Hova’ in the earliest documents, e.g. in 1567, it is ‘Howe’ in 1606 and 1677; it is ‘Howa’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map, although it is unclear precisely to which farm this refers).
Howarth

the late 18th century (as described by Robert Wilson). Sent away from the Black Bull, he stayed at the King’s Head (run by Nelly Dickson) and attended the East-end (Burgher) meeting house (which was then without a permanent minister), and apparently gave largely to the collection. He may also have attended Dr. Young’s church service (although this could be confusion). His ideas on improving prison conditions were not taken up until the 19th century, with Jethart Jail being one of the best preserved examples of a ‘Howard Reform Prison’. Thomas Earl of Surr ey (1473–1554), son of Thomas, he was also 3rd Duke of Norfolk, and known locally as ‘Surrey’. He married Anne Plantagenet, becoming brother-in-law to Henry VII. He fought at Flodden and became Earl of Surrey in 1514, when his father was made Duke of Norfolk. He then led devastating raids on the Scottish Borders, including the burning of Jedburgh in 1523, which he described in a detailed letter. He became a great survivor in the treacherous court of Henry VIII (who married one of his nieces) and unusually for the time, he died of old age. His tomb, bearing his efigy, is in Framlingham Church – ‘Shall proud Surrey; shall yon Howards, Tell the king they fought with cowards?’ [JH]. Thomas 4th Duke of Norfolk (1536–72), grandson of Thomas the 3rd Duke, he commanded English forces in Scotland in 1559–60. He had several marriages, including one to Lord Dacre’s widow. He also proposed marriage to Mary Queen of Scots, was later involved in plots within England and was executed for treason.

Howarth (how-urth) n. Robert (b.1794/5) from Rochdale, he was a grocer near the top of the Back Row, listed on the 1851 census. In Slater’s 1852 directory he was listed as a ‘broker’. His wife was Catherine and they had sons James and George.

Howashiell (how-u-sheel) n. former farm in Hobkirk Parish, roughly between Midburn and Highend. It was rented by John Turnbull in the late 18th century (marked on Stobie’s 1770 map; also referred to as ‘Howashieills’).

how be (how-bee) prep., arch. how would it do to, what about – ‘How be yow clippin the gress the teime A’m sawin the seed?’ [ECS], ‘Where wull oo gang? Oh, how be guen owre owre ti Stobs an back be the Crescent?’ [ECS] (local idiom, cf. what be).

Howburn (how-burn) n. George (16th C.) listed among people who were owed money by William Scott, younger of Branxholme, when he died in 1552. He was owed the relatively large sum of 4 pounds and 4 shillings. He was probably related to James who is recorded in 1537. John (15th/16th C.) resident of Wester Belses. In 1502 he was absent from the court in Jedburgh when summoned by the sergeant. He may have been related to Thomas, who had remission in the same year for resetting Thomas Rutherford at Rutherford. John (16th C.) listed in Hawick’s 1537 charter as a holder of one particate of land on the south side of the High Street. Patrick (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Bessie Grierson and their son James was baptised in 1651. The witnesses were Lawrence Scott and William Telfer (also written ‘Houburn’ and ‘Howburne’).

Howcleuch (how-klooech) n. farm on the left just after Robertson, on the B711. It was owned by a branch of the Scotts from at least the early 16th century. In 1535 Walter Scott of Robertson sold it to his brother Stephen Scott, and Stephen’s son John. Lands there called ‘Slak et Westsyde de Howcleuch’ were described in 1621 as pertinents to the lands of Borthwickbrae. It was owned by the Scotts of Harden from at least 1643. There were 12 ‘communicants’ recorded there in 1650, namely Andrew Wilson, Janet Fletcher, William ‘Howatsonne’, Margaret Telfer, John Armstrong, Margaret Ballantyne, Adam Little, John Wilson, Simon Wilson, Mary Scott, Walter Hobkirk and Janet Fenwick. James Richardson was there in 1683. It was mentioned in the Hearth Tax records of 1694. A mill there is referred to in the late 17th century. The lands were part of a legal dispute between Gideon Scott of Highchester and Walter Scott of Woll in the early years of the 18th century. William Scott was there in at least 1710–12, Alexander Hislop in 1710, John Stevenson in 1716 and Robert Learmonth in 1717. John Murray was tailor there in 1712. It was sold by Scott of Harden in 1719 and then owned by the Haliburtons (of Jedburgh), perhaps through marriage to the Elliots of Swinside. John Stevenson and Walter Nichol were there in at least 1718–21, Thomas Nichol in 1722, John Anderson in 1725, Walter Turnbull in 1727, Walter Park in 1728, John Hune and John Riddell in 1731, John Pringle in 1733, William Richardson in 1734, George Heatley in 1736, William Laidlaw in 1742, Francis Scott in 1743–57, John Miller in 1743 and Andrew Davidson in 1752. In 1755 it was bought by Walter Scott, farmer at Commonside, and direct descendant of Walter of Goldielands. It then passed to his 2nd son Charles. James Scott was recorded there in 1756, Francis Scott and Robert Elliot in 1757, Walter Deans in 1762–74, James Thomson in 1764, Robert Chisholme in 1767 John Miller in 1774 and Walter Wilson in 1788. ‘Mr. Grieve’ is recorded as owner of 2 horses there on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. The teinds of Roberton, Howcleuch and Hoscote were valued at £33 6s 8d in 1785 and 1802, and possessed by the Duke of Buccleuch, while Walter Scott (in 1875) and Charles Scott (in 1802) of Wauchope paid the land tax on £133 6s 8d. At the same time William Elliot of Borthwickbrea owned ‘West side of Howcleugh’. Thomas Irving was there in 1821. It was farmed by the Elliots in the 19th century. There is a walled enclosure for the Scotts of Howcleuch in Roberton Cemetery (the name first appears as ‘Howcleugh’ in 1533; it is also spelled ‘Houcleugh’, ‘Howcleuche’, ‘Howcleugh’, etc.; it is marked on a parish map of 1650, Blaau’s 1654 map records ‘W. Houdeuch’ and ‘E. Houdeuch’, presumably transcription errors, while Adair’s c. 1688 map shows ‘Howcleugh’; the origin is probably Old English ‘hoh cloh’, meaning ‘the ravine by the height’).

Howcleuch Burn (how-klooch-burn) n. stream that passes Howcleuch and joins the Borthwick Water near Borthwickbrea Cottages (it is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map as ‘How Cleuch’).

Howcleuchshiel (how-klooch-sheel) n. farm beyond Howcleuch, at the end of the ‘Hill Road to Roberton’. The residents in 1841 were mason Francis Govenlock and labourer David Storie and their families. There is a stone horse trough at the roadside. The spring flowing into it was used as a source of drinking water well into the 20th century (it is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

How Dean (how-deen) n. tree-lined stream between Melgund Glen farm and Minto village. It runs south into the Grinding Burn. In 1780 it is recorded that ‘Hawdean Syke’ formed part of the eastern boundary of the lands of Hawthorn Park and Mailchester Park; also ‘Howden syke’ was listed as part of the boundary of the lands of Minto Townhead.

Howden (how-din, how-den) n. wooded hollow through which the Howden Burn flows, on the north side of Hawick. There are many other Howden’s in Britain and several others in the Borders, e.g. a farm a little west of Selkirk and another just south-east of Jedburgh (from Old English ‘wooded hollow’).

Howden (how-din) n. former tower in Liddesdale, on the east side of the valley a little north of Larriston. The stream there is still known as Howden Cleuch, but there is no evidence of the site of the house. In the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale it is valued at 15 shillings, and tenanted by William Nixon, who was also recorded in 1544. ‘Hary Niksoun of Howden’ is recorded in 1581. ‘Dinlabyre and his lands, Lareistoun, Howdoun, and Sheipshelden’ are recorded in 1632, when possessed (probably meaning tenanted) by Robert Pringle. It was combined with Highhouse, Hightrees, Harden and Burnmouth on the 1718 survey of properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch (it is ‘Holden’ in 1541 and ‘Hawden’ in 1544; it is ‘Houdenn’ on Blaau’s c.1654 map, and marked on Gordon’s c. 1650 map and de Wit’s c. 1680 map of Scotland as ‘Houden’).

Howden (how-din) n. former name for land in Minto Parish. It is listed in the 1779 and 1811 Land Tax Rolls along with ‘Quarter of Whitefield’, valued at £47 11s 3d. It was among lands whose liferent had been granted to Rev. Robert Elliot in 1779.

Howden (ho-, how-din) n. David (1811–73) born in Hawick, he married Alice Hunter Chalmers in 1841 and farmed at Churnside. He emigrated to New Zealand in 1848 as a ploughman-manager and their son John was born on the voyage. He is credited with ploughing the first furrow at Dunedin (with his plough in the museum there). He was first Chairman of the school committee at Green Island Bush, and in recognition of his early services to education the name of School Street was changed to Howden Street in 1953. The couple had 8 children in all. John (18th C.) recorded as butler at Minto House in 1788, when he was working for Sir Gilbert Elliot. He was listed as butler and gamekeeper in 1794 and was still butler there in 1797 (also written ‘Houden’).

Howdenbank (how-din-bawngk) n. name sometimes used for the Anderson Sanatorium, built in 1911 on land overlooking the Howden Burn (at the eastern end of what is now Silverbuthall) on the site of a more modest earlier sanatorium. The whole area was also known by the same name.

Howdenbank (how-din-bawngk) n. street built in 1965 as the eastern addition to the Silverbuthall scheme. It was named after the nearby Howden Burn.
Howdenburn (how-din-burn) n. name for the area around the Howden Burn, also known as Howden. This was long one of the routes to Selkirk. The name was used in the 19th century for the northern end of Wilton Hill. There were 18 households with that address on the 1851 census – ‘...large crowds lined the Howdenburn road and the skirts of Galalaw Hill, to meet the musicians’ [RM], ‘How might I come to the auld toun? Sall I the New Road spurn, And glint the tops of the long lums Frae the brow o’ Howdenburn’ [WL] (also written ‘Howdenburn’, ‘Houden burn’, etc.).

the Howden Burn (thu-how-din-burn) n. stream that is the lower part of Stirches Burn, flowing alongside Howdenbank and the A7, in the northern outskirts of Hawick, thereafter running underground to join the Teviot – ‘My thochts northerns outskirts of Hawick, thereafter running – Frae Haggis-Ha’ tae Howden Burn under-ground to join the Teviot – ‘My thochts northerns outskirts of Hawick, thereafter running’ [HI].

Howden Cleuch (how-din-klooch) n. stream that flows roughly north-west to join the Teviot opposite the farm of Teinside. To the north of the stream are the remains of an earthwork, now almost obliterated by ploughing.

Howden Cleuch (how-din-klooch) n. small stream in Liddesdale, on the east side of the Liddel about mid-way between Burnmouth and Larriston.

howdie (how-dee) n., arch. a local woman who acts as unofficial midwife. She was traditionally also in charge of cutting the whole cheese which was given for luck after birth, up until the 19th century.

howdie-fee (how-dee-fee) n., arch. a small amount of money traditionally given to a child at birth, up until the 19th century. It was also in charge of cutting the whole cheese which was given for luck after birth, up until the 19th century.

howe (how) n., arch. a hollow lying depression, a low lying area, often surrounded by hills, a valley, glen – ‘...An’ we hae dannert i’ the howes where flowers were ever fair’[JoHa], ‘Hei was awantine threth eis weel-leikit Aibbye doon i the howe’[ECS], ‘And grassy howes, and fairy knowses – The playground of the Callant’[MG], ‘Yet sweet Tee’otdade to me Wi’ its howes and haughs an’ a’ ... ’[TK], ‘Old tales of glamour, love and glee Lurk ’mong our heights and howes ... ’[JT], ‘Or step I by howe or hill-pass Or come I the High Road through, The leaf hands haud oot a welcome, The sib herts still beat true’[WL], ‘Is their crack o’ simmer ploys: story baths, Hotchin and croonin in howes i the grund ... ’[DH], ‘And then a lover’s hill, and the courting of a lass in the heathery howe’[DH], the middle or depths of something – ‘In the howe o’ the year’[JAHM], ‘the howe o the nicht’ meant between about midnight and 3 a.m., ‘the howe o the wunter’ was from November to January, adj., arch. empty – ‘...And read a solemn litanye, With a voice baiethe sture and howe’[JTTe], hungry, starved – ‘In A gaed ti fill ma empy keite, for my certies! A was howe!’[ECS] (once pronounced with a longer ō-oo diphthong; the word also appears in several place names, e.g. Howcleuch, Howden, Howford, Howlands, HowPasley and Hobbieshowe).

hove (how) v., arch. to hoe – ‘The lad that howes the Lum-Back neeps Rcht cheerily he plies his paidle’[DH], n., arch. a hoe – ‘...Wi’ blunt auld fingers calloused frae the howe’[DH].

Howdykes (how-diks) n. name for lands in Liddesdale, recorded in 1541 as ‘Howdykis’, with a value of 18 pence, and with no tenant at that time. It is unclear where these lands were located.

the Howe Ford (thu-how-ford) n. former name for the ford near the modern Parkdail, which was used to cross the Teviot to reach the Borthwick valley. The name derived from it being the lowest crossing point in the area.

the Howgate (thu-how-ga’) n. one of the oldest streets in Hawick, leading up from the Sandbed to the Loan, which was formerly the course of the main road to Carlisle. There was once a minor gate at the bottom, leading to Silver Street and the Auld Brig. There also used to be a public well at the foot of the street on the south side. The spelling was ‘Howgate’ until the latter part of the 19th century. It was extensively and sympathetically redeveloped in the period 1980–85, by Aitken & Turnbull, beginning with the east side, and is part of Hawick’s conservation area, this work winning several awards. At the back of 7A is an inscription with the letters ‘DA’ in a square and the date 1855. In about 1931 a stone cross was discovered under old plaster of No. 15, perhaps associated with a right-of-way to St. Mary’s along Needle Street. The house visible at the back of No. 18 is surely one of the oldest in Hawick. 10 pottery and clay pipe fragments found in developers’ trenches are in the Museum. No. 2 housed Pete Gow’s greengrocer’s shop in the mid-20th century and Murray the grocer was at No. 20. Much of the street is grade C listed (the origin has been suggested to be related to the Mote, but more likely is Old English for ‘way to the hollow’).
Howgate

Howgate (how-gā’) n. former name for a triangular piece of land bounded by Galalaw (Miller’s) Knowes, Orchard Road and an old dyke. The name is the same as the other Howgate, and appeared in valuation rolls until the early 20th century (also probably from Old English; sometimes formerly written ‘Howgates’ and ‘Howgate’).

Howgates (how-gāts) n. another variant of Howgate, being part of Hawick Mill lands.

Howford (how-ford) n. farm near Ettrickbridge, once a home of part of the Scott family. It was formerly referred to as the middle steadling of Langhope (perhaps referring to the Langhope ove the hill towards the Ale Water). John Scott and Thomas Tweedhope are recorded in 1494/5 having some of their sheep stolen from there. In 1510 the feu passed from Sir William Cranston to Alexander Scott. Alexander Scott held the 6-pound lands there in 1512. The lands were claimed by Robert Scott in 1541, paying £25. Robert Scott of Howford is listed by Scott of Satchells as one of the 24 ‘Pensioners’ of Buccleuch, and was said to have been given the lands of ‘Cowdhouse’ (i.e. Coldhouse) for his service. Walter Scott of ‘Howfuird’ married Marie, sister of Robert Scott of Hartwoodmyres in 1615. Thomas Inglis (member of Ashkirk Kirk) lived there in 1762. James Murray was tenant at Howford Mill in the early 19th century. There is another Howford near Traquair — ‘Warn Dryhope, and Catslack, Howford, and Huntlee free, Whitslade, Todrigg, and Sallenside, the morn to wait on me’ [WSB], ‘... A song to the pebbles to speed their way, And the sorrel horse went stiff of his wound As he climbed the steep of the Howford brae ...’ [WHO] (also formerly written ‘Howford’, ‘Howfuirde’, ‘Howfurde’, etc.; it appears to be marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Noufurd’).

Howford Haugh (how-ford-hawch) n. former name for the ground on the south side of the Coble Pool, i.e. roughly the present location of the High School.

Howford Sike (how-ford-sik) n. stream on the south side of the Borthwick valley near Whithope farm. The smaller streams of Whithope Sike and Holm Sike join to form it near Whithope (marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Howgate see Howgate

Howgill (how-gil) n. former name for lands in the Ewes valley, possibly at the modern Hoghill. There were Armstrongs there in the 16th century. Along with Flask and Glendivan it was described as a 10-merk land in 1550, when inherited by Robert, Lord Maxwell, by John, Lord Maxwell in 1604, by Robert, Lord Maxwell in 1619, and still held by John, Earl of Nithsdale in 1670 and William, Earl of Nithsdale in 1696. It is listed as part of the lands of Ewesdale about 1610. It is listed among the Dumfriesshire possessions of the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1653, 1661 and 1663. It was surveyed along with other Scott of Buccleuch properties in 1718, when it consisted of 476 acres, bounded by lands of the Laird of Cooms, Flask, Over Wrae and Glendivan. Adam Jardine was there in 1783. There were Jacksons and Lewises there in 1841 and A. Stevenson was farmer in the 1860s (it is probably the ‘Howgilsyd’ recorded in 1841). On me’ [WSB], ‘... A song to the pebbles to speed their way, And the sorrel horse went stiff of his wound As he climbed the steep of the Howford brae ...’ [WHO] (also formerly written ‘Howford’, ‘Howfuirde’, ‘Howfurde’, etc.; it appears to be marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Noufurd’).

Howick

Howick (ho-wik) n. often confused with Hawick, it is a small village in Northumberland, east of Alnwick, famous for being the site of Howick Hall. This was the home of Charles Grey of Howick, who was variously Earl, Baron and Viscount (as well as British Prime Minister and the man for whom the tea blend is named), a later Earl (who was Secretary for the Colonies) and other Lord Howicks down to recent times. Several towns were named after them, including settlements near Auckland, New Zealand, in Ontario, Canada and in Natal, South Africa. There subscribed to 26 copies (one of the largest num-bers), and may have been a relative. He may be the Adam who married Janet Storie in 1775, and she died in 1787; their children included Robert (b.1780). He could also be the Adam whose wife

Janet Walker died in Hawick in 1822, aged 62.
It is possible he was the same as the writer of music Adam ‘Howieson’. Adam (b.c.1845) son of frame-worker John and Jane Cavers. He was a stockingmaker with Innes & Henderson, who apparently first raised the suggestion that the Burgh should purchase Wilton Lodge. In 1867 he married Jean Welsh. David (d.1628) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Margaret Henry

Border country as a fiddler. However, little concrete is known about him. He is also said to have composed some tunes, and may be the same as ‘Adam Howieson’, or else his son. W.N. Kennedy (writing in 1863) states that he was half brother of John Pringle, also known locally as a fiddler and composer. However, James Wilson mentions him briefly in 1858, stating that he was grandfather and teacher of John Pringle. This means that the period of his life is not known with any certainty. He was said to have died at a relatively young age, his step-father (or perhaps father) saying, as the coffin was lowered, ‘Here lies the master of music’. He may have been related to William ‘Whaton’, who was recorded as a fiddler in Hawick in 1712 and 1718, and also to Robert ‘Whitson’, who was recorded as a fiddler in Hawick in 1744. John (19th C.) frame-worker in Hawick Parish. In 1841 he was living with his family on the Kirk Wynd and in 1851 was living on the Back Row with his wife and 5 children. He married Jane Cavers and their children included: Isabella (b.1831/2); Robert (b.1834); Elizabeth (b.1835); Robert (again, b.1838); Jane (b.1841); John (b.1843); and Adam (b.1854/5). John (19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was a frame-worker and widower living at ‘Under Hope Park’ in 1841. His children included: Robert (b.1838/9); John (b.1843/4); and Adam (b.1845/6). Robert (18th C.) see Robert Whutson. Bailie Robert of Orchard (18th C.) merchant in Hawick. In 1730 he is ‘Robin Huisone Mrt’ when one of his own children was baptised, and is probably the ‘Robert Huison’ who witnessed a baptism for another man of the same name in 1730. He is probably the Bailie Howieson recorded in 1731. He purchased a bible for the Magistrates in 1734. In 1738 he is ‘Baillie Robt. Howieson of Oarchyard’ when he witnessed a baptism for Francis Gray from Weensland. He was referred to as late Bailie in 1763 (in connection with the Town borrowing to pay for the new bell). He could be the Robert who is recorded paying for use of the Parish ‘mortcloth’ in 1773. He married Margaret Elliot and their children included: Agnes (b.1724), who married Rev. George Dickson; Walter (b.1727); and Elizabeth (b.1730), who married Robert Scott, from the Scotts of Falnash. The witnesses in 1730 were Robert Elliot ‘Taxman’ and Bailie Martin. After his death Orchard went to his grandson William Dickson. Robert (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. The banns were read in about 1772 for him to marry Christian Ruecastle, but she eloped with Andrew Haddon from Selkirk. About a decade later he married Christian’s sister Barbara Ruecastle, but she eloped with Andrew Haddon from Selkirk. About a decade later he married Christian’s sister Barbara Ruecastle and their children included: John (b.1783); and Elizabeth (b.1785). Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isabel Coltart and their children included: John (b.1804); Janet (b.1806); Margaret (b.1808); Margaret (again, b.1810); Isabel (b.1812); and Elizabeth (b.1814). His wife could be the widow Isabella, who was a seamstress living on the Loan in 1851. Thomas (17th C.) ‘workman’ listed among those who subscribed to the fund for the new Kirk bell in Hawick in 1693/4. Thomas (d.1714) merchant in Hawick. In 1699 he was fined for ‘forestalling’ barley from Lady Newton and from ‘Gladstanes’. He was recorded as Thomas ‘Huison’ or ‘hutson’ whose children baptised in Hawick included: Thomas (b.1692); James (b.1700); William (b.1702); John...
(b.1704); and Walter (b.1709). The witnesses in 1700 were Thomas Elliot in Hummelknowes and Robert Huntlie and in 1702 were John Elliot in Nether Southfield and John Scott, tenant in Brauxholmie. His was a merchant in Hawick with surname ‘Hoatson’ in 1713 when his marriage with Janet Miller was proclaimed in Wilton Parish. He may be the Thomas who married Jean Elliot and whose children Walter (b.1709) and James (b.1711) were baptised in Hawick. He may also be the merchant Thomas ‘Huison’ who married Margaret Scott and who was ‘latelie dead’ in 1715 when his widow presented their son Thomas for baptism ‘in her dwelling houes’; the witnesses were Thomas, son to flesher Thomas Wilson and Beadle Walter Scott. Walter (17th C.) baker listed among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He could be the Walter ‘Huison’ whose children baptised in Hawick included: an unnamed daughter (b.1690); Robert (b.1692); and Charles (b.1697). William (18th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. His children included: Jean (b.1726); Ann (b.1728); Euphan (b.1728); Isobel (b.1730); and Thomas (b.1733). He could be the William who was at Ormiston in 1723 when his son William was baptised in Cavers Parish; this may be the later mason in Hawick. William (d.bef. 1797) mason in Hawick. In 1764 he was witness to a baptism for James Bucham and Jane Howison (who was probably his sister). He married Helen Renwick from Harwood in Hobkirk Parish in 1760; she died in 1782. Their children, baptised in Hawick, included: Margaret (b.1761); Jane (b.1764); Elizabeth (b.1765); Ann (b.1770); and Helen (b.1778), probably the ‘Nelly’ who died in 1797. His wife’s name is given as ‘Jane’ in 1761. The witnesses in 1765 were the whole congregation. William (b.1820/1) frame-worker in Hawick. In 1861 he was living on the Loan. His wife was Isabella Duncan and their children included: George (b.1864/5); and Janet (b.1857/8). William (b.1831/2) fuller who was living in Weensland in 1861. His wife was Agnes and their children included Jane (b.1859/60) (see also Howieson; formerly spelled ‘Howatson’, ‘Huison’ and variants).

Howlands (how-lindz) n. former name for part of the Langlands estate, extending between Roadhead and roughly Wilton Path, and south of Langlands Road. Originally feued from George Langlands to David Knox in 1741, it stayed with the Knox family for several generations subsequently. Part of the land, where Wilton Grove was built, was feued to John Ormiston in 1764. ‘Howlands inclosure’ was valued at £13 16s in 1788 and owned by Archibald Ormiston (and still recorded that way in 1811). The lands then passed to the Cathrae family and later were recorded being owned by Mrs. Elizabeth Graham and Mrs. Agnes Bowie. The land further to the east was once called Easter Howlands. The name survives in Howlands Terrace and also a house at Norwood (the name derived presumably from being relatively low lying).

Howlands (how-lindz) n. an alternative name for Newlands, as recorded on the ‘Decreet Demolishing the kirk of Hassendean’ and establishing which parts went to neighbouring parishes’ (although possibly a transcription error).

Howlands Hoose (how-lindz-hoos) n. former name for house on Wilton Path. It is listed as the residence of the Knox family in the 1851 census. They farmed lands off Langlands Road.

Howlands Mill (how-lindz-mill) n. former name for the main knitwear factory at the western end of Victoria Road. It was built for Greenwood, Watt & Co. in the 1880s, and designed by John Manuel. It originally contained 78 looms, but had enough space for as many as 300 looms in three large bays, and was powered by steam from the outset. There was an extension in the early 1900s on the site of some former cottages. It was sold in 1911 to Sime, Williamson & Co., who changed the name to Dean Mills. Later it became part of Innes-Henderson and finally Braemar. The mill was demolished in 2004 to make way for the new hospital, with the tower being the first to go, in the midst of attempts to save it. Some of the stone was used for the bases of the Steve Hislop statues in Hawick and the Isle of Man (also sometimes plural ‘Mills’).

Howlands Nursery (how-lindz-nur-su-ree) n. former plant nursery on Victoria Road, preserved in a photograph of 1885. Turnbull’s factory was built on the site soon afterwards.

Howlands Terrace (how-lindz-te-ris) n. street off Wellington Road, built in 1890 and called after a former name for the area.

Howlet (how-li’) n. former farmstead in Liddesdale, near Saughtree. It is recorded as ‘Howletcruik’ in the 1541 rental roll after Saughtree. The farm was valued at 30 pence and tenanted by Thomas Henrison. It is associated with the farms of Saughtree and Pinglehole on the 1718 map of Scott of Buccleuch properties, when it is ‘Houlet’.

howm (howm) n., poet. a low-lying stretch of grassland, a ‘haugh’ – ‘They ran their horse on the Langholm howm, And brak their spears wi’ melkide main . . . ’[CPM] (also holm).

How Meadow (how-me-di) n. former name for a small farm between the farms of Castlehill and Chapelhill, a little to the north of Newmill on Teviot. From the Buccleuch properties survey of 1718 it was the upper part of Castleside, and had no farmhouse of its own. It had ‘Reggs’ on its west and Chapelhill around its north and east, and consisted of 35 acres, with the Newmill Burn cutting through the middle. On modern maps it lay roughly between Newmill Burn Plantation and Loch Sike Plantation.

Hownam (hoo-, how-num) n. village in the eastern Borders, where the Hownam Burn meets the Kale Water. Lands there were once held by the Rule family, resigned by the 4 heiresses Marjory, Isabella, Janet and Ellen in 1443. It has a church built around 1600, but extensively renovated in 1752 and 1840. The church was gifted to Jedburgh Abbey at the end of the 12th century. The parish is supposedly the birth-place of the legendary figures ‘Rab the Ranter’ and ‘the Flying Tailor’. The ‘Hownam Rings’ and the ‘Shearers’ are nearby ancient stone arrangements, and there are also several hill-forts and cultivation terraces in the area. Hownam Law, an outlier of the Cheviots, reaches a height of 449 m (1472 ft) and contains the remains of one of the highest hill-forts in Scotland. This is also the name of the surrounding Parish of south-eastern Roxburghshire, bordering on the Cheviots and England. The Roman road Dere Street passes through the parish, which also contains the fort at Pennymuir – ‘The mist is deep on Hownam Law, And Cheviot sits within the cloud, The drenching rain it still does fa’; ’The howling gusts are lang and loud’[JTe], (also spelled ‘Houmnam’; the origin of the name is uncertain, since there are different early variants including ‘Hunedon’ and ‘Humnum’ occurring from the late 13th century).

Hownam (hoo-, how-num) n. Robert (17th C.) resident of Woll in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll (also written ‘Hounam’).

howp (howp) n., arch. hope – ‘For thou art my howpe, O Lord God . . . ’[HSR], v. ‘. . . he sall refreschen an’ mak’ strang your haurt, a’ ye that houpe in the Lord’[HSR] (also written ‘houpe’).

Howpasley (how-pas-lee, hups-lee) n. farm at the end of the Borthwick road, just after the turn-off for Craik and about 7½ miles beyond Roberton. Until 1689/90, when the Parish of Roberton was formed, it was part of Hawick Parish. In the 15th century the lands were held by the Stewarts of Dalswinton and Garlies, who resigned them in 1468. In 1467/8 James III granted the lands to Alexander Scott of Abington (probably a younger son of Walter Scott of Kirkurd and Buccleuch), after they were resigned by Alexander, son and heir of William Stewart of Dalswinton. Walter Scott of Howpasley and Robert Scott of Howpasley were both recorded in the 1490s. Robert Jackson was recorded there in 1494/5. Matthew Graham was there in 1502. In 1511 the lands were listed among those held ‘in tenandry’ by the Baron of Hawick, Douglas of Drumlanrig. The old tower near here was burned by Dacre’s men (and ‘twenty-eight score sheep and other gear’ taken) in late 1513. It probably stood just to the east of the steadings of Old Howpasley, about a kilometer further up the Howpasley Burn. In 1535 the farm was burned and raided by a group of Armstrongs and others from Liddesdale. The lands continued to be listed among those held ‘in tenandry’ by the Baron of Hawick in 1559 and 1572. The Laird of ‘Howpaislott’ was listed among ‘Landit Men’ of Scotland in about 1590. Sometime in the late 16th century Sir James Douglas of Drumlanrig took the lands for himself, infuriating the widow Lady Scott of Howpasley, who held a meeting in Hawick in 1615 and organised a group of men to slaughter all of Douglas’ sheep. The lands are still listed among those held by the Baron of Hawick in 1615. In a parish valuation of 1627 it is ‘in stok estimat to 300 merks, vicarage 32 lb’. There were 7 ‘communicants’ recorded there in 1650, namely Thomas Nichol, Margaret Scott, Bessie Graham, John Scott, James Nichol, Margaret ‘Cobban’, Bessie ‘Lyntoune’, Margaret Graham and Helen Nichol. The Covenanter Andrew Hislop is meant to have been sheltered here in 1683 before Claverhouse’s soldiers caught up with him and shot him. William Telfer and Thomas Pott were tenants there in 1685. From 1674 and for the first half of the 18th century it was owned by the Scotts of Crumhaugh, then sold to the Duke of Buccleuch about 1760. However, at least part was among those inherited by Sir Francis Scott of Thirlestane from his brother Walter in 1695. William Telfer and Thomas Pott, from there, were in 1685 accused of being Covenanter supporters. Walter Scott and Adam Laidlaw were there in 1703. By 1707 the lands were valued at £722 3s 4d. John Cunningham was there in 1711, Thomas Bell in 1712, John Moffat in at least 1716–21, Archibald Scott in 1718, William Pringle in 1721–23, William Park in 1725 and James Hogg in 1726. John Pringle was there in 1761–61, William Pringle in 1761–67, John Telfer and Walter Wilson in 1766, William Oliver in 1772, Walter Paterson in 1780, Adam Pringle in 1781, John Rutherford in 1786, James Grieve in 1787 and William Angus in 1789. Walter Grieve was farmer there in 1797 and James Oliver from 1858. In 1788 and 1811 the farm was still valued at £722 3s 4d and owned by the Duke of Buccleuch. One of the routes from Langholm to Selkirk used to pass here (before about the mid-18th century), coming from Teviothead and travelling up the Borthwick valley. A drove road also used to connect the upper Borthwick valley with Eskdalemuir via this area. There was a small school near here from the mid-19th century until 1947. A green track leads along the Howpasley Burn to ‘Auld Howpasley’ and the shepherd’s cottage at Howpasleyhope – ‘... Howpasley, he sent out his brother, And Allan-haugh sent out another’ [CSW] (the name appears as ‘Hewpaslot’ in 1485, with several spelling variants thereafter, including ‘Holpaslot’, ‘Houpaslay’, ‘Houpaslet’, ‘Houpaslot’, ‘Houpasley’, ‘Howpasley’, ‘Howpaislett’, ‘Howpaisley’, ‘Howpaislatt’, ‘Howpaislop’, ‘Howpaslott’, ‘Howpaslait’, ‘Howpaslat’, ‘Howpasla’, ‘Howpaslaw’, ‘Howpashate’, ‘Howpashatt’, ‘Howpashay’, ‘Howpaslatt’, ‘Howpasholet’, ‘Howpasleth’, ‘Howpashlocht’, ‘Howpashlot’, ‘Howpashloth’, ‘Howpashlott’ and ‘Howpasy’, with the modern form appearing by the late 17th century; it appears as ‘Houppaslet’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map, ‘Houpaslett’ on de Wit’s c. 1680 map of Scotland, ‘Houpaslett’ on Visscher’s 1689 map and ‘Houpsaslee’ on Ainslie’s 1773 map; the origin of the name is probably Old English ‘holh pæth slæd’, meaning ‘the valley with the sunken path’.

Howpasley Burn (how-pas-lee-burn) n. stream that rises near Stock Hill and runs north to become part of the Borthwick near Craik village. Smaller streams that feed it include Stock Grain, Ladshaw Sike, Gavel Sike, Foul Cleugh, Mark Sike, Whiteholm Sike, Bloody Sike, Cat Cleugh, Hedley Burn, Rut Sike and Loans Cleuch.

Howpasley Comb (how-pas-lee-koon) n. former shepherd’s cottage on Comb Sike, far to the south-west of Howpasley, just to the south of Craikhope, (see also Combe).

Howpasleyhope (how-pas-lee-hop) n. former shepherd’s cottage up the Howpasley Burn from the modern Howpasley. This marked the furthest limits of habitation of the old boundaries of Hawick Parish.

Howpasley Schuil (how-pas-lee-skil) n. former school near Howpasley, located just on the left after the turn for Craik village. It was provided by the Duke of Buccleuch for his tenants in that area, sometime before 1873. In that year it was presented to Roberton Parish. It was thereafter used as a school and also for occasional church services and as a Sunday school until 1947, when the pupils and teacher, Mr. Dodds, were transferred to Roberton. The Borders Archive has registers and log books for 1875–1947.

Howpslaslot see Howpsalay.

howpit (how-pee’, -pi’) pp., poet. hoped – ‘... for I hae houpet in thy juidgemints’ [HSR].

huddler see huther

hmuddit (hu-dal) pp. huddled – ‘But here presents itself another view – Elders an’ lawyers huddlt’a through ither’ [JoHa].

Hudshoose (hudz-hoos) n. Hudshouse, area to the north-east of Saughtree, between the Dawson Burn and the Liddel, marked on the maps now as Hudshouse Rig. In the 1541 rental roll for Liddesdale the lands are valued at 20 shillings and with Philip Crozier as tenant. It is among lands in upper Liddesdale which were once held by Jedburgh Abbey. ‘Francie Batie’ was there in 1611 and Hob Glendinning in 1622. In a listing of lands in the Lordship of Liddesdale in 1632 occurs ‘Steid forenent the Hirdhous, Hundhous, possedit be the Erle of Buccleuiche’; this surely relates to these lands, although the precise location of the Stead and Hirdhouse are not clear. The farm was owned by Elliot’s in the late 17th and early 18th centuries. James Turnbull was tenant there in 1694, and other householders were John Forester and John Armstrong. It was surveyed in 1718, along with other properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch, when it was a long piece of land in the north-east/south-west direction, covering 1820 acres, bounded by Myreplyes, Peel,
Hudshoose Rig

Throilshope, Dawstonburn and Singdean. There were 2 houses marked on the farm un 1718, one by the Liddel, near the site marked ‘Tower (remains of)’ on modern maps, and the other close to Myredykes farmhouse. Robert Pott was tenant there in the mid-1700s. John Turnbull was there in 1821. Archibald Scott, William Hardie and their families were there in 1841. Matthew Elliot and family were there in 1851 and it appears to have been abandoned soon after. The New Statistical Account reports in 1839 the existence of 2 circular earthworks on the farm. The remains of a farmstead and probable tower are located to the south of Hudshouse Rig on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map, between the Liddel Water and the side road from Saughtree to Kielder. A report from 1896 (and a visit by the Berwickshire Naturalists’ Club in 1889) suggests that there are remains of 3 British camps on the southern slopes of Dawston and Hudshouse Rig, but there is no evidence for this today. On the crest to the southeast are the remains of an old cairn by a sheepfold. It is said that the Highlanders crossed here in 1745, one of them dying as a result of gorging on mutton (the origin is probably from the Old English personal name ‘Hud’; it is ‘Hudishous’ in 1541, ‘Hundishous’ in 1611, ‘Huddishous’ in 1622 and 1637 and ‘Heeds-house’ in 1839; it is marked on Gordon’s c. 1650 map as ‘Hudshous’, Blaen’s 1654 map as ‘Hudshouse’ and also ‘Hudshouse’ on Stobie’s 1770 map; there is another Hudshouse on Gordon’s c. 1650 map as ‘Hudshous’, Blaen’s 1654 map as ‘Hudshouse’ and also ‘Hudshouse’ on Stobie’s 1770 map; there is another Hudshouse near Dent in Yorkshire).

Hudshoose Rig (hudz-hoos-rig) n. ridge of land between the Dawston Burn and the Liddel Water. Essentially the same area is known as Dawston Rig. On the north side, the old road passes a little up the rig, to the east of the modern B6357. On the south side, near where the Caddroun Burn joins the Liddel are the remains of a settlement, consisting of two ‘round-abouts’, as well as a linear earthwork, once believed to be associated with the Catrail (it is marked ‘Daston Ridge’ on the 1718 Bucclenuch survey).

Hudson (hud-sin) n. Adam (b.1794/5) from Westerkirk, he was a shoemaker in Deanburnhaugh. He was recorded there in the censuses of 1841, 1851 and 1861 (when he was listed as sub-postmaster). He married Euphemia Scott and their children included: Janet (b.1817); Thomas (b.c.1820); William (b.c.1826); Nancy (b.c.1827); Mary (b.c.1830); and Euphemia (b.c.1827).

Hud-stane (hud-stān) n., arch. a stone placed transversely to strengthen a hearth – ‘Hud-stane, a flag-stone set on edge as a back to a fire on the hearth, Dumfr. Teviotd.’ [JoJ].

Hue an cry (hew-an-crI) n., arch. the pursuit of a suspected riever, announced by public proclamation, with a legal obligation on others to follow the pursuit. This was part of the Border Law, as laid down in the 15th and 16th centuries, and its use at that time led to the modern meaning of the phrase (from Middle English).

Huggan (hu-gin) n. Adam (1855–1904) son of Robert and Janet Cumming, he was a tobacconist at 17 high Street. He married Mary Sinton, who was sister of Thomas Sinton, skinner, and she died in 1906. George (b.1809) born in Jedburgh, son of John and Ann Mortimer. He was a framework knitter in Hawick. His wife was Isabella Marshall, and their children were: Jessie (b.c.1837); Agnes (b.c.1839); Thomas (b.1842); William (b.c.1845); James (b.c.1847); and Fanny (b.c.1850). George (c.1824–95) son of Thomas and Katherine Swan from Jedburgh, and brother of Thomas. He moved to Hawick and was a frameworker. In 1846 he married Jemima Rae in Hawick; she was daughter of John and Margaret Cumming. They lived at 7 Back Row in 1851 and 1861. Their children were: Margaret, who married James Wilson; Thomas, who married Mary Stringer; Catherine; George (b.1855); James (b.1858), who married Elizabeth Richardson; Jemima (b.1860); John (b.1863), who married Isabelle Turner; and Andrew Swan (b.1869). Jared ‘Jed’ (1939/40– ) brought up in Dickson Street, he attended Wilton and the High School. He served with the R.A.M.C. for National Service, then worked for Pringle’s, William Lockie and Barrie’s. He played rugby for the Y.M. (including as part of the team that won 13 sevens in a row), and played for Hawick R.F.C. in the 1959/60 season. He was Cornet in 1960 and followed for 50 years. He also won the Tradesman’s Handicap 5 times. He married his Lass, Irene Wylie (originally from Rosyth), who worked as a hairdresser and auxiliary nurse. In 2020 they were the Diamond Jubilee Principals. The couple have 2 children, Iain (Acting Father in 2012) and Stuart. John (18th/19th C.) farmer at Earlside, recorded on the 1792–97 Horse Tax Rolls. He was owner of 6 farm horses in 1797. He was additionally taxed for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797. He may be the John whose death is recorded in Hobkirk Parish in 1817, with his wife a year later. John (1914–89) writer of music for John Fuirbairn’s poem ‘The Exile’s Dream’. Born at 8 Wellogate Place, his father, also John, was a frame worker, who died of wounds in 1918.
Huggan’s Park

and his mother was Isabella Carstairs Clark. He was brought up on Galdstone Street and Mansfield Road. He worked for Innes, Henderson & Co. after leaving school, but had a love of music, learning from local church organists, gaining the L.R.A.M. and L.T.C.L. diplomas, and becoming organist at St. John’s. He attended teacher training at Moray House 1836–37, then left to become music master at Buckie, Banffshire, before joining the R.A.F. in 1940. After the War he became Principal Teacher of Music at Galashiels Academy, and remained there until retirement in 1974. He taught piano in Roxburghshire for 2 more years, then moving to Edinburgh. In 1957, as an exile living in Gala at that time, he objected to the song being included in the Hawick Songs ‘Red Book’, insisting that it was no good! But his family gave permission for inclusion in the later ‘Blue Book’, allowing it to reach a wider audience. He died at Edinburgh Royal Infirmary. Robert (b.1811) from Jedburgh, son of John and Ann Mortimer. He was a frameworker in Hawick, like his brother George. His wife was Janet Cumming (or Common), and children included: John (b.c.1845); James (b.c.1850); and Adam (1855). They were living on Walter’s Wynd in 1851. Thomas (17th/18th C.) Hawick resident. In 1713 he was convicted of ‘irregular marriage’ in the existing Session records. He married Elizabeth (‘Bessie’), daughter of Bailie Graham in Longtown in England in 1713; this may have been an elopement. In the following year he was allowed to baptise his child, following a rebuke before the pulpit. In 1716 several people were reprimanded for late night drunkenness and a fight at his house, the meeting connected with the fact that he ‘had disposed ane hatt to a public raffle’. He probably started the fight with William Oliver in the house of Isobel Gledstains. Thomas (18th/19th C.) saddlemaker in Hawick. In 1796 he married Janet Tait. Their son John (b.1797) was baptised in Hawick Parish, with the witnesses being George Caverhill and William Wilson. He witnessed a baptism for William Easton in 1795. Thomas (b.1785) born in Jedburgh, son of William and Elizabeth Turnbull. He married Katherine (or Catherine) Swan and the family moved to Hawick, where he was a ‘woollen hand loom weaver journeyman’. Their children (baptised in the Associate Kirk in Jedburgh) included: George; Thomas (b.1826); John (b.1828); Christian Catherine (b.1831); and James (b.1833). They lived on the Back Row in 1841. Thomas (1825/6–1901) from Jedburgh, son of Thomas and Katherine Swan. He came to Hawick and worked as a stockingmaker. In 1846 he married Elizabeth Stevenson, a cousin of carrier Andrew Stevenson, and she died in 1887, aged 63. Their children were: Margaret Janet and another Janet, who all died young; Thomas (b.1857), who died in Rhode Island; Isabella (b.c.1849); Robert (b.1862), who died in Selkirk; Christina; Elizabeth (Betsy) Stevenson (b.c.1851), who married Walter Thorburn; and William (b.1864); a 3rd Janet (b.1866); and Margaret (b.1868). In 1861 they were living at 46 Loan. William ‘in Wauchope’ (17th C.) recorded in the 1641 Town Book as an appraiser for a horse. It is unclear which Wauchope he may have been tenant for. He may be the William who married Bessie Wright and whose daughter Bessie was baptised in Hawick in 1644. William (b.1816/7) from Jedburgh, he was a frameworker in Hawick. His wife was Janet (b.c.1810), and their children included: Thomas (b.1842); Margaret (b.c.1844); John (b.c.1846); and Christina or ‘Kirsty’ (b.c.1850). They were living on the Loan in 1851 and at 1 Back Row in 1861 (formerly spelled ‘Huggon’, ‘Huggens’, ‘Hugon’ and variants).

Huggan’s Park  (hu-ginz-pawrk) n. name for an area of Standhill farm. It was said that a Covenanter hid himself in the broom that grew there when he was pursued by the dragoons, probably around 1680.

huggery- muggery  (hu-gu-ree-mu-gu-ree) adj., arch. disorderly, dishevelled, in disarray, topsy-turvy — ‘Imagin iz: . . . rufflt claes, creest an huggery- muggery [ECS], ‘. . . a boy with dishevelled hair, unwashed face and tattered clothes, altogether a huggery-muggery, lazy-looking lout’ [JHH], adv. in a confused and disorderly state (an example of ‘rhyming reduplication’).

Hugh  (hew) n. (d.1199) also known as ‘Hugo de Roxburgh’ he was a Chancellor of Scotland. He was elected Bishop of Glasgow, succeeding Jocelin, but may have died before he was consecrated. He is buried in Jedburgh Abbey.

Humbleton Hill see Homildon Hill

Hume (hewm, hoom) n. Adam (18th/19th C.) builder on Buccleuch Street, recorded on Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. He had an unnamed son who died in 1819. Both he and Robert are listed as masons in Hawick, when they subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821, along with mason ‘J. Hume’. George (17th/18th C.) recorded in 1797 as ‘Georg Hoom collector of his Majesties customs att Alisone bank’ in Cummertrees Parish (in Annandale). He married Janet Scott, who was from Ashkirk Parish. George (1783–1857) son of Ashkirk toll-keeper Robert and Jane Elliot, he was baptised in Eildon, Northumberland. He was a shepherd and died in Yetholm Parish. His wife was Elizabeth Hall. Isabel (d.1829) listed as ‘tranty’ when she was buried in Hawick. She was the second of the 2 sisters known as ‘the Tranties’, with Marjory dying in about 1814. They kept a boarding house and were known to be intelligent above their station (which is what the word ‘tranty’ meant). She may be the ‘Isobel’, daughter of Walter and Helen Dryden, baptised in Hawick Parish in 1742. J. (18th/19th C.) listed as a mason in Hawick when he subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. He was surely related to Adam and Robert, masons who also subscribed to the book. James (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. His daughter Margaret was baptised in 1648. Perhaps he was the James of Ashkirk Mill recorded in a bond of 1673. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen Paterson and they had an unnamed son baptised in 1686. James (17th C.) tenant in ‘Shappelhill’ in 1684, when his wife Margaret Scott’s will is recorded. He was probably tenant at Chapelhill and either the same man as the James who died around 1720, or else a close relative. He is probably the James who witnessed a baptism for Patrick Scoon in 1685. His children included: Margaret (b.1679); and an unnamed son (b.1683). He may be the James in Chapelhill who paid for the use of the Wilton ‘mortcloth’ for his wife in 1705. James (d.bef. 1723) leased the farm of Chapelhill in at least the period 1690–98. He was resident at Todshawhill according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. In 1698 he acted as cautioner for Robert, who rented part of the farm of Borthaugh. Probably the same James was in arrears for rent at Chapelhill in 1711 ‘carried for his brother’, and was also in arrears in the period 1712–18. In 1715 he was unable to pay the debt from the deceased Robert (presumably the same brother), and caution was offered by Thomas (who must have been another relative). He was recorded at Chapelhill in 1718 and 1720 when children of his were baptised in Robertson Parish. His children, baptised in Robertson Parish, probably included: Margaret (b.1713); James (b.1715); Helen (b.1718); and Isobel (b.1720). In 1723 he was deceased when his widow Janet Hill and son James became tenants of Chapelhill. His widow may be the same Janet Hill who married Walter Hume in 1724. James (18th C.) leased the farm of Chapelhill from the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1735. Walter acted as cautioner, and so was presumably an older relative. He was possibly the son of James, who was the former tenant of Chapelhill. James (18th C.) resident of Whitlaw. In 1743 he witnessed a baptism for James Reid, tenant in the Flex. James (18th C.) resident of Hawick Shiel. He is thus described in a baptismal record of 1743, probably to distinguish him from James ‘in Whitlaw’, who is recorded on the same page. He married Agnes Scott and their children included: Jean (b.1741); John (b.1743); and John (again, b.1745). The witnesses in 1743 were weaver William Hood and ‘Officer’ John Telfer. He could be the deceased James whose daughter Jean died in Hawick in 1787. James (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. Probably the same James was at Harden in 1752, Mabonlaw in 1757 and Highchesters in 1762. His children may have included (although there are possibly 2 families here) Ann (b.1749), John (b.1750), James (b.1751), William (b.1752), Walter (b.1753), Walter (b.1754), Christian (b.1756), Peggy (b.1757) and Janet (b.1759). James (18th C.) resident at ‘Mains’ (presumably Borthwick Mains) in 1762 when his daughter Agnes was baptised. He may be the James who was fined in Robertson Parish in 1763 for an ‘irregular marriage’. James (d.bef. 1795) farmer at Chapelhill. He was tenant at Chapelhill in 1763 when a son Walter was born. He is recorded still renting Chapelhill from the Duke of Buccleuch in 1792, but by 1795 he was deceased and the farm was taken over by his son James. He could be the ‘S...Tenant Hume’ (perhaps married to Martha, the entry is hard to read) whose daughter Katherine was baptised in Hawick in 1784, with witnesses merchant James Ekron and Postmaster James Inglis. James (18th/19th C.) farmer at Chapelhill. He took over from his father in about 1795, when Hume Hume 1767 were Robert and Walter (probably his father b.1781); and John (b.1783). The witnesses in (again, b.1776); Janet (b.1778); Adam (again, Margaret (b.1772); Adam (b.1774); Margaret (b.1759). He is surely related to the children included: Robert (b.1767); Helen (b.1770); Joseph Govan. He married Isabel Armstrong in 1731 when his son Walter was baptised. He was a Captain in the 2nd Dragoon Guards, schoolmaster at Hobkirk (perhaps his father-in-law) and Robert (again). John (18th C.) resident at Greenbank recorded in 1773 when his son Patrick was baptised in Roberton Parish. It is possible that Margaret (b.1776), Margaret (again, b.1777) and Nelly (b.1779) were also his children. John (18th/19th C.) farmer at Thornyhaugh (in Teviothead Parish). He is recorded there in 1781, 1783, 1785 and 1785 and also listed there on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. His children, baptised in Cavers Parish, included: William (b.1781); John (b.1783); Ann (b.1785); and Peter (b.1795). John (18th/19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, living at Whitehaugh in 1797. He married Elizabeth (or ‘Betty’) Elliot in 1794 and their children included: Helen (b.1795); John Scott (b.1797); and Jean (b.1803). John (18th/19th C.) member of Hawick Curling Club in 1812. John, W.S. (1758–1831) eldest son of George, Town Clerk of Leith. He gained the lands of Clerklands in Ashkirk Parish in 1826. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He married Beatrix Liddel and their children included: John (b.1806); Robert (b.1808); Margaret (b.1809); William (b.1812); and James (b.1813). John (b.1797) son of Robert and Elizabeth Stewart, he was grocer and spirit dealer in the West End. He is listed on the Back Row in Pigot’s 1837 directory and on the Mid Raw in 1841. By 1851 his wife was a widow living on the Kirkwynd. He married Margaret (b.1803), daughter of grocer Walter Scott. Their children included: Isabel (b.1824); Elizabeth (or ‘Betty’, b.1826), who married John Gladstone; Janet (b.1829); Mary (b.1831); Robert (b.1834); Christian (or ‘Kirsten’, b.1835); Margaret (b.1836), who probably died young; Walter (b.1838); and Sarah Scoon (b.1841). John (b.1828/9) from Langholm, he was farmer at Gledsnest in Teviothead. In 1861 he was farming 18 acres there, and he was still recorded there in 1868. His wife was Janet and their children included William Ellen D., Andrew, Walter and John. John (19th/20th C.) hatter, glover, hosier and shirtmaker of 8 Oliver Place. He can be seen outside his shop in a 1901 photograph. Joseph of Ninewells (1757–1838) son of John and Agnes Carre, who was only daughter of Robert Ker of Cavers Carre. His uncle was the celebrated the philosopher and historian, David. He was a Captain in the 2nd Dragoon Guards, but retired to his family estate. He was patron of Bedrule Parish in the late 18th century, presumably a right that was inherited through his mother. He died unmarried. Joseph (1777–1855) Tory M.P. for the Borders constituency in 1812, born in Montrose. He trained as a doctor before turning to politics, eventually becoming a radical, campaigning for universal suffrage and religious freedom, moving to the Whigs and shifting to a Middlesex seat. Marjory (d.c.1814) one of the ‘Tranties’ along with her sister Isabel. These 2 unmarried sisters kept a boarding house and were said to be ‘more intelligent than their neighbours in a similar humble condition of life’. She may be the ‘Margaret’, daughter of Walter and Helen Dryden, baptised in Hawick Parish in 1738. Mary (20th C.) proprietor of a grocer’s shop at No. 3 Mansfield Road in the mid-1900s. Patrick see Patrick Home. Patrick (17th C.) resident at ‘Chisholme and Widburne’ according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. He had 2 kilns there and paid tax for 3 hearths. He was probably the Patrick who served as cautioner for his brother Robert, who leased part of Borthaugh in 1690; the two were also renting part of Borthaugh in 1691 and 1692, and he was cautioner again in 1694. It seems likely that he and his brother Robert were blacksmiths. Patrick (18th C.) resident of Salenside. He is recorded in 1731 when he had a libel case for debt against William Tunno in Selkirk. Patrick (18th C.) recorded at ‘Callendriderigg’ (presumably Caerlenrig) in 1726 when he married Helen Scott in Cavers Parish. Other children, baptised in Cavers, who may be his include: Magdalen (b.1730); Margaret (b.1733); Mary (b.1735); Walter (b.1738); William (b.1740); John (b.1743); Adam (b.1745); and Alexander (b.1747). Patrick (18th C.) farmer in Hawick Shiel. In 1757 he was tenant there, and was found (along with other neighbouring tenant farmers) to be making ‘bakes’ at Black Grain Moss, against the explicit orders of the Town Council. As a result a group led by Bailie Robert Scott mustered in Hawick at 4 a.m. and went up to the Common, to break up the peats. He may be the tenant at Slaidhills (along with Robert Elliot) in 1743 who witnessed a baptism for Adam Hogg. He may be the same as the tenant of Todshaw. Patrick (18th C.) tenant in Todshaw. His daughter Helen was born in 1755. He is probably related to James, who farmed at Chapelhill. Peter (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Betty Scott and their children included an unnamed child (b.1790). Peter (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Helm and their children included Peter (b.1784), John (b.1788) and James (b.1791). Peter (18th/19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living at Thornhaugh in 1795 and at Bowanhill in 1797. He could be the Peter who married Betty Dinwoodie, and whose children, baptised in Cavers, included Peter (b.1795), Ann (b.1797), Jean (b.1800), Peggy (b.1805), Peter (again, b.1810) and Peter (again, b.1815). Peter (18th/19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Janet Davidson and their children included James (b.1811), Isabel (b.1813) and Peter (b.1815). Robert (17th C.) leased quarter of the farm of Borthaugh in 1690, with his brother Patrick acting as cautioner. In 1691 and 1692 both he and Patrick were the farmers of ¼ together, and in 1694 he held ¼ himself again, this continuing until at least 1698. In 1696 his cautioner was James, who was hence surely related. He is recorded on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls at Borthaugh; he was listed ‘with tuo kilns’, suggesting he was a smith or other artisan. It seems likely he was blacksmith at Borthaugh. Robert (18th C.) tenant along with Walter at Chapelhill in 1725. Robert (18th C.) mason in Hawick Parish. He is probably the Robert who in 1767 and 1774, along with Walter (probably his son) witnessed baptisms for mason John (probably also his son) and witnessed further baptisms for John in 1772 and 1776. He married Margaret Scott and their children included: John (b.1738); Christian (b.1739); Margaret (b.1743); Agnes (b.1745); and Walter (b.1747). The witnesses in 1747 were Robert Scott (probably the Bailie) and Andrew Turnbull (but it is unreadable which one). Robert (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Katherine Govenlock and their son William was baptised in 1759. Robert (b.1740) son of Walter and Helen Dryden. He was a toll-keeper, living in Ashkirk and then at Elsdon in Northumberland. He married Jane Elliot (b.1743) in Hawick in 1769. Their children included: William (b.1771), baptised in Hawick; Robert (b.1774); Thomas (b.1775); James (b.1779); George (b.1783), shepherd; and Walter (b.1787). Three of his children were baptised in Ashkirk Parish and the last 2 in Elsdon. Robert (18th/19th C.) mason in Hawick. He married Elizabeth (‘Betty’) Stewart in 1793 and she died in 1797. Their children included: Mary (b.1795); and John (b.1797), grocer in the West End. Robert (d.1840) builder on the Fore Row, recorded on Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. He was probably related to Adam, who was a builder...
Robert Thomson. His daughter Mary married postman William (b.1874); Thomas (b.1867); Thomas (b.1870); Janet (b.1872); and master at Drumlanrig; Robert (b.1865); Jane (b.1861); Walter (b.1862), who became Head-gate. Robert (b.1834) frameworker in Hawick, son of grocer John. In 1851 he was still living with his mother on the Kirkwynd and in 1861 he was at 28 High Street. He married Isabella Elliot in 1856 and their children included: John (b.1855); Margaret (b.1856); Isabella (b.1859); Archibald (b.1861); Walter (b.1862), who became Head-master at Drumlanrig; Robert (b.1865); Jane (b.1867); Thomas (b.1870); Janet (b.1872); and William (b.1874). Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident at Commonside and elder of Hawick Parish. In 1715 he gave in the money that had been ‘mortified’ by James Grieve (farmer at Commonside) for the poor of the Parish, particularly those from the ‘highlands’. In 1717 he was assigned the duties of collecting money from Harwood, Teindside and Commonside, suggesting that he lived in this area. Presumably the same Thomas was described in 1718 as ‘officer of the Excise in Hawick’ when he was hauled up by the Session for his ‘irregular marriage’ to Jean, daughter of Andrew Brown, wright in Kelso. The marriage was carried out by John Middleton and witnessed by other excise agents, Thomas Burden and Andrew Lithgow. In 1719 his servant Isobel Laidlaw married John Blyth, tenant in Heap. Thomas (17th/18th C.) described as ‘Mr’ and ‘provisioner’ in 1713 when he witnessed a baptism for John Scott, herd in Drydenburn. This presumably meant that he was a young preacher (before being ordained) working at the chapel in Teviothead. In 1714 he was ‘preacher’ when he witnessed a baptism for Robert Laidlaw, herd in Commonside. He was ‘Mr Thomas Hume in Comonside’ in 1719 when he witnessed a baptism for Archibald Murray, herd in Hislop. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Agnes Scott and their children included: Williamina (b.1804); William (b.1806); Elizabeth (b.1808); Mary (b.1810); Isabel Aitchson (b.1812); James (b.1815); and Barbara (b.1819). He may be the resident at Henderson’s Knowe when he subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. Thomas Arthur (19th/20th C.) step-son of letter-carrier Robert Thomson. He was an apprentice gardener at Weens, then moving to Wells, Hunthill and Wolfelee. He married Margaret Oliver, daughter of the Bedrule blacksmith, and they had 3 sons and 2 daughters. Thomas ‘Tom’ (20th C.) employee of Turnbull & Sons, Slitrig Crescent. During WWII he was Head Warden in Hawick. Walter (17th C.) listed as ‘broken and fled’ at Borthaugh among the ‘deficient’ on the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. He may be the Walter, married to a Scott (forename not recorded) whose daughter Margaret was baptised in Wilton in 1694. He is probably the Walter who witnessed a baptism for merchant Robert Hardie in 1689. Walter (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish, recorded at Chapelhill. His son Thomas was baptised in 1718, with witnesses the older and younger William Thoms-sons from Newmill. He is probably the Walter, living at Chapelhill, whose funeral is recorded in Wilton Parish in 1720. Walter (17th/18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish, recorded at Parkhill in 1713 and Mains in 1720 and 1723. These are probably all his children (baptised in Roberton): Robert (b.1709); William (b.1711); William (again, b.1713); Margaret (b.1714); John (b.1715); William (b.1720); and Beatie (b.1723). It is possible that he is the same as the Walter who married Margaret Scott in Hawick. Walter (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1707 he married Margaret (or Marjorie) Scott, who was step-daughter of Robert Thomson in Newmill. Their son Walter (b.1728) was baptised in Hawick Parish, with witnesses probably (but hard to read) the Laird of Harwood and Walter Hume. Walter (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Janet Hill in Robertson Parish in 1724, the marriage also being proclaimed in Ashkirk Parish. It seems likely that his wife was the same Janet Hill whose husband James had been farmer at Chapelhill. It is unclear how closely related he might have been to his wife’s first husband. Walter (17th/18th C.) married Bessie Goodfellow in Robertson Parish in 1724. Note that there was another marriage of a Walter in the same Parish at almost the same time. This Walter lived in Robertson Parish, and may be the tenant in Chapelhill. Walter (17th/18th C.) rented the farm of Chapelhill along with Robert in 1725. He also acted as cautioner for James in 1735, who rented Chapelhill.
He was presumably a close (but older) relative of James. Walter (18th C.) carrier at Brantholme Town. He married Helen Dryden and their children (baptised in Hawick Parish) included: Margaret (b.1738); Robert (b.1740), who probably married Jane Elliot; Isobel (b.1742); and Helen (b.1744). It may be that his daughters Margaret and Isobel were the sisters known as ‘the Tranties’. The witnesses in 1740 were blacksmiths James Dryden, elder and younger, from Newmill (who were surely related to his wife) and in 1742 were Robert and Walter Scoon, tenants in Brantholme Town. Note that in 1742 his name is recorded incorrectly as ‘Wm’. Walter (b.1748) and James (b.1750) may also have been his sons. Walter (18th C.) married Isabel Elliot in Roberton Parish in 1745. Walter (18th C.) married Isabel Wright in Kirkton Parish in 1749. Their unnamed son was baptised in 1749. Walter (18th C.) married Janet Graham in 1755, the marriage being recorded in both Hawick and Roberton Parishes. Their children, baptised in in Wilton Parish, included: Walter (b.1758); and Margaret (b.1761). Walter (18th/19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living at Cavers itself in 1794. His children included Betty (b.1794). Walter (18th/19th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was living at Whitleff (in Wilton Parish) in 1799, when recorded as ‘Mr Walter Hume’. He married Mary Beattie in Roberton in 1796 and their children (baptised in Roberton) included: James (b.1797); Adam (b.1799); and Christian (b.1802). He could be the farmer at Woodburn in Roberton Parish according to the Horse Tax Rolls of 1789–94. Walter (b.c.1810) drover living at Chapelhill in 1841. His wife was Agnes and their children included Walter, John, James and Jane. He was surely related to James, who was farmer at Chapelhill at the same time. Walter edited ‘Fifty years’ football in Hawick, 1873–1923’ (1923). He was an early member of the committee of Hawick R.F.C. Walter (b.1862) Headmaster of Trinity School. He was son of Robert, and grandson of Mary (or Margaret) Scott, who was a daughter of grocer Walter Scott. He was also known as a singer. William (17th/18th C.) from Roberton Parish, in 1701 he married Jane Beattie in Westerkirk Parish. William (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Margaret Miller. Their children included Helen (b.1721), Janet (b.1723) and John (b.1728). William (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He was a servant of Andrew Ogilvie at Brantholme in 1719 when he married Helen Govenlock (servant to William Ogilvie, also at Brantholme). He may be the ‘servant to Crumhaugh’ who was recorded as a fornicator with Isobel Govenlock in Hawick in 1720. Perhaps the same William was recorded at Chapelhill in 1723 and Highchesters in 1725. His children, baptised in Roberton Parish, included James (b.1723) and Sarah (b.1725). William (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Jane Lamb and their children included Jane (b.1762). William (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Jane Helen Aitken in 1766. Their children included Robert (b.1767). William (b.1810/1) born in Roberton Parish, probably from the Chapelhill family. He may be the William living with farmer James (perhaps his brother) at Chapelhill in 1841. In 1851 he was innkeeper at ‘Tushielaw Inn’ and was already widowed by that time (also spelled ‘Hoom’ and ‘Hoome’; see also Home).
Hummelknowes Mill

Hummelknowes Mill (hu-mul-nowz-mil) n. former corn-mill at Hummelknowes. Thomas Scott was miller there in 1642. In 1684 the tenant, James Scott, was among the men fined for attending conventicles. Robert Elliot was miller there in 1694. James Elliot was tenant in 1700 and through the early 18th century. Robert Cairns was living there in at least 1709–15 and Robert Elliot in 1720–35. John Scott was miller there in at least 1755–61. It was tenanted by Scotts for more than a century, the last miller being Walter Scott, who left in 1855. John Scott is recorded as tenant there on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, as well as Walter Glendinning. The weir was damaged in the 1846 flood. John Scott was listed as miller there in 1852 (also referred to as ‘Humble Knowe Mill’ and other variants, it is ‘Hummelknowe Miln’ in 1642, ‘humbleknowmilne’ in 1700, ‘Hummelknow mille’ in 1715 and ‘Humbleknow miln’ in 1797; a mill is marked there on the east bank of the Slitrig on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

Hummelknowes (hu-mul-nowz) n. farm by the Slitrig just outside Hawick, reached over the Hummelknowes Bridge. It appears to have been owned by Robert Lorraine in 1428/9, when his son Patrick resigned the lands in favour of his niece Janet Rutherford. It was burned in 1547/8 by the English, when referred to it as ‘Hoble Knowes’. There were Croziers there in 1569 when a bond of security was signed by ‘Clame Crosar having been his tenant there. It was among the farms owned by the Gledstains of that Ilk in 1643. It was tenanted by Gledstains of that Ilk in 1643. ‘Hummelknowes’ in 1642, “humbleknowmilne” in 1700, ‘Hummelknow mille’ in 1715 and ‘Humbleknow miln’ in 1797: a mill is marked there on the east bank of the Slitrig on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

Hummelknowes Brig (hu-mul-nowz-brig) n. bridge over the Slitrig, just off the B6399 leading to Ormiston etc. It is sometimes known as ‘Lover’s Lane Brig’ or ‘Greenbraeheids Brig’. It was opened by Princess Christian in 1869, and hence formerly referred to as the ‘Princess Christian Bridge’.

Hummelknoweshaugh (hu-mul-nowz-hawgh) n. farmstead on the left-hand side of the B6399 Newcastleton Road opposite the Flex road-end. The area of land between the main road and the river was formerly known as ‘Whitlaw Haugh’. The farm was also known as ‘Hankimshaugh’ or ‘Hankumshaugh’. James Montgomery was there in 1780. Mason Robert Scott lived there in 1841 and Walter Paterson was recorded there in 1861 and 1868 (also written ‘Hummelknoweheugh’, ‘Hummelknowe Haugh’ and ‘Humbleknowhaugh’, it was ‘Hummelknowhaugh’ in 1780).

Hummel Side (hu-mul-sid) n. hill in the upper Allemoor. It reaches a height of 312 m.

humble (hu-mul) adj. humble, v. to humble – ‘He crunches down an hummles himsel’, that the pur maye fa’ bie his strang anes’ [HSR], ‘Wha hummels himsel’ til behald the things that ar in heaveen an’ in the yirth’ [HSR].

humol (hu-mol) n., arch. perhaps a local name for the hemlock stem – ‘The stem [of hemlock] is generally hollow and fistular, and some of them are used as blow-tubes for shooting arrows, as school-boys use ‘humols’ in our own country’ [HAST1866] (cf. humlock).

humph (humf) n. curvature of the spine, hunch, hump-back – ‘that jaiket makes ee look like ee’ve got a humph’, ‘His skin was wuzzen’d, unfizzen’d, and broon, He’d a humph on his back as big as Paddy’s balloon’ [JoHa], the act of carrying a heavy load – ‘it was an awfi humph up yon hill’, ‘Ti come up yin’s humph = to take it into Hundalee (hum-du-lee) n. farm about a mile south of Jedburgh, off the A68. It was long the seat of the Rutherford of Hundalee. There was a corn mill there at one time. In about the 1490s a group of Kers were indicted for oppressing the tenants, ‘casting thame out of their housis and landlis’. It was listed in 1538 among lands in Jed- forest that had passed to the Crown, but the lands were ‘claimed by the laird thereof’; at that time it was valued at £10. The Laird of ‘Hundalee’ was listed among ‘Landit Men’ of Scotland in about 1590. There were schoolmasters recorded there in the early 17th century. The nearby ‘scour’ on the Jed once held an ancient cave, which collapsed some time around 1880 (the origin is probably from Old English ‘hound hol leah’, meaning ‘hound-hill-wood’; it first occurs as ‘Hundwaley’ in the 1450 return for the Barony of Hawick; it is ‘Hundole’ in 1464, ‘Hundwelie’ in 1464/5, ‘hund- loole’ in 1494/5, ‘Hundole’ and ‘Hindole’ in 1502, ‘Hundelle’ in 1504, ‘Hundolee’ in 1525 and 1526, ‘Hundolee’ and ‘Hundoley’ in 1538, ‘Hundley’ in 1541, ‘Hundeley’ in 1551, ‘Hundie’ in 1549, 1553/4, ‘Hundole’ in 1553, ‘Hundalie’ in 1560, ‘Hundalee’ in 1564 and ‘Hundolie’ and ‘Hundoley’ in 1569; it is ‘Hundalie’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

hunder (hun-dur) n. hundred – ‘if A’velt ee yince, A’velt ee humders o’ times’, ‘. . . nor clame ony mair of the said nyne hundreth merkis bot alane’ry fyev hundir merkis’[SB1470], ‘We looked down the other side, And saw come breasting owr the brae, And George Fister was their guide, Full fifteen hunder men and mae’[CPM], ‘. . . thou, O Solomon, maun hae ane thousand’, an’ thea that keepe the frute o’t twa hunder’[HSR], ‘And the auld Moat, That’s seen humders o Common Ridings . . .’[DH], ‘. . . hei played the piano at humders o’ Common Ridin’s an’ thoonsands o’ Huts’[IWL], ‘Four hunder horseman in yeh treekit line’[JEDM], ‘His only trust was in his heels; He thocht a half a hunder deils . . .’[FL], ‘Her father, Bob, says she’s a stunner That’s sure in 1500. There were schoolmasters recorded there in the early 17th century. The nearby ‘scour’ on the Jed once held an ancient cave, which collapsed some time around 1880 (the origin is probably from Old English ‘hound hol leah’, meaning ‘hound-hill-wood’; it first occurs as ‘Hundwaley’ in the 1450 return for the Barony of Hawick; it is ‘Hundole’ in 1464, ‘Hundwelie’ in 1464/5, ‘hund- loole’ in 1494/5, ‘Hundole’ and ‘Hindole’ in 1502, ‘Hundelle’ in 1504, ‘Hundolee’ in 1525 and 1526, ‘Hundolee’ and ‘Hundoley’ in 1538, ‘Hundley’ in 1541, ‘Hundeley’ in 1551, ‘Hundie’ in 1549, 1553/4, ‘Hundole’ in 1553, ‘Hundalie’ in 1560, ‘Hundalee’ in 1564 and ‘Hundolie’ and ‘Hundoley’ in 1569; it is ‘Hundalie’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

the Hunder Stair see the Hunder Steps

the Hunder Steps (thu-hun-dur-steps) n. also known as the ‘Hundred Steps’ (or ‘Stairs’), and previously as ‘Jacob’s Ladder’. It is a stair- way leading from the top of Wilton Path down to Bath Street. It is indicated in Wood’s 1824 map as a path, still as a path in 1850, as steps in 1859 and in 1867, and well established by the 1898 Ordnance Survey map. It never had 100 steps, the number varying with time, but currently being about 95, although there are still arguments about this! It was closed in 2002 following safety concerns, but reopened later that year after refurbishment. Although most of the surrounding buildings have been demolished, the stairs themselves survive, now starting from the back of the Sainsbury’s car park. However, the ownership of the land has been a matter of debate. The coat of arms in the wall at the foot of the steps was hundred (hun-durt, -durt) adj., n. hundredth (cf. the more common hunderth).

hunderth (hun-durth) adj., n. hundredth – ‘The 1514 Memorial was commissioned by the fowre-hunderth anniversary o the incident that took place the year after the battle o Flodden’ [IWL], ‘What cood be mairi appropriate on that form’s hunderth birthday’ [BW1978] (also hundert).

hunderweight (hun-dur-wi) n. hundredweight.

hunderwecht (hun-dur-wecht) n., arch. hundredweight – ‘But I’ll up throwe thir divots Afore him, massy, his lane, Ablow thon lee’in’ hunderwechts O’ marble stane!’ [DH].

hundie-gowk (hun-dee-gowk) n. a person sent on a fool’s errand on 1st April (also huntigowk).

Hundlecleugh (hun-dul-klooch) n. former name for lands in Cavers Parish. In 1716, quarter of these lands, called Curriescleugh, were bought by Walter Scott (uncle of Walter of Crumhaugh) from Walter Scott of West Port. The precise location of the lands is unclear.

hundreth (hun-drith) n., arch. a hundred – ‘...the soume of twa hundreth meriks of vsuale mone of Scotland ...’ [SB1470], ‘...written at Hawik the penult day of Januar, in the yeir of God one thousand fyf hundreth thre score ane yeir’ [RBA1561], ‘First, anent the scool ther wad be ane hundreth pundis allowed for the maintaining of a scool in this large toune’ [PR1627], ‘...their releiffe of two hundreth meriks payd out by them as the pryce for building of the steiple loft ...’ [BR1685], ‘Summa totalis is Fourre hundred and Fyve bolls of victwall and Fourre hunreth and twenty Eight keans’ [Buc1690], hundreds – ‘...the true liberties and privileges of the sd. burgh enjoyed for some hundreth of years by-gane ...’ [BR1706].

Hunewic (hun-wik) n. mentioned in a charter granted by the English King John to Henry Lovel in 1208. This is probably ‘Honeywick’ near Castle Cary in Somerset and not a variant of Hawick.

hunger (hung-ur) n. hunger – ‘...Wund, hung’r, cauld, and strength’s declension?’ [JoHa] (note there is no hard g sound).

Hungerflat (hung-ur-flaw) n. lands in Liddesdale, listed in a rental roll of around 1376. It is recorded as ‘Hungyrflat’ and with a value of 40 pence (G. Watson suggests that the name came from poor land with soil that required much manure).
the Hunner Stairs

the Hunner Stairs (θu-hu-nur-stārz) n. another name for the Hunder Steps.

Hunsdon (hunz-din) n. Lord Hunsdon was the title of Henry Carey.

Hunt (hun’) n. Henry (19th C.) came to Hawick from England as a stockmacker. He later took over the licensed grocers in O’Connell Street which had formerly been Thomas Bell’s. He married Agnes Waugh in 1845 and had at least one child, Henry David.

Hunter (hun’-ur) n. Adam ‘Ade’ (16th C.) brother of Matthew, who was ‘John Crosyer kynsmen’.

Other descendants are still farming in the Hunters Corners area. Andrew Galloway (c.1809–82) from Denholm, he trained as a chemist and wrote some articles for the Encyclopædia. He founded the Glasgow business A.G. Hunter & Co., who were ‘Hat and Forage cap Manufacturers to the Queen, Prince consort and Royal Family’.

Hunter included George (b.1770/1), born at Appletreehall and baptised in Wilton (by the minister of the Jedburgh Relief Kirk). Thomas Blyth and James Dryden (who lived at Clarilaw and Appletreehall) were witnesses at the baptism. Andrew William (1810–60) son of George with his first wife Margaret Laidlaw. He was the first person to be baptised in the new Relief Kirk congregation in Hawick, this happening on the Haugh, since the church did not yet have its own premises. He married Elizabeth MacLean in Jedburgh in 1831 and their children included: Elizabeth (1832–1914); Margaret (1834–1908); Jane (1837–71); George (1839–1913); Andrew (1841–42); Andrew (1843–1921); Thomas (1845–1942); William Andrew (1848–1913); Agnes (1851–1937); and Jessie (1853–1926). He lived in Preston for a while, where some of his children were born. He emigrated to Canada in 1842, one of his sons dying on the voyage. The family settled in Beverley Township near Hamilton, Ontario. The area was later known as ‘Hunters Corners’. He died in a horrific sawmill accident. His son Thomas started an insurance brokerage business, which still exists.

Other descendants are still farming in the Hunters Corners area. Andrew Galloway (c.1809–82) from Denholm, he trained as a chemist and wrote some articles for the Encyclopædia. He founded the Glasgow business A.G. Hunter & Co., who were ‘Hat and Forage cap Manufacturers to the Queen, Prince Consort and Royal Family’. He married Isabella, daughter of Hawick manufacturer William Wilson and their children included: Thomas C. (b.1833); Andrew George (b.1838); Sir William Wilson Hunter (b.1840); and John James (b.1842). He may be the Andrew, son of George, who was born in Cavers Parish in 1802. He died at Deneburn in Denholm. Charles (b.1806/7) from Lochmaben, he was a frame-worker in Hawick. For many years he was President of the Chartist Association, formed in Hawick in 1838. He married to Anne Carswell (or Kersel), and their children, baptised in Hawick Parish, included: Janet (b.1831); Margaret (b.1833); James (b.1836); John (b.c.1838); and Feargus O’Connor (b.c.1840), presumably named after the Irish Chartist leader. In 1841 and 1851 the family were living on the Loan and in 1861 were at No. 26 (probably now 24). Col. Edgar (d.1807) son of Dr. William and grandson of Rev. William of Lilliesleaf. He already held Midlem Mill by 1788 and also lands in Lilliesleaf Parish, specifically Chapel (valued at £390), ‘W. Scot’s acres’ (valued at £200), Porcous Croft (valued at £78), Childknow (formerly part of Raperlaw, owned by James Middlemas, valued at £82 12 2), part of Greenhouse (valued at £16 3s), Union Hall (valued at £121 10s), additional lands that had formerly belonged to the feuars of Lilliesleaf (valued at £10 6s 8d) and associated teinds (valued at £92 7s 2d). Together his lands in Lilliesleaf Parish were valued at almost £1000, making him the second largest landowner (after Riddell of that Ilk). He was also at Midlem Mill in 1797 when taxed for having a non-working dog. He was an officer with the 19th Dragoons, being placed on half pay in 1805. He was the owner of the estate of Linthill (including Midlem Mill and Union Hall). He was listed there as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805. He also acquired several smaller pieces of land in Lilliesleaf Parish, including Bewlie Hill, Kirklands of Bewlie, part of Chapel, Porteous Croft, Childknow, and those previously owned by Davidson of Greenhouse, William Leithead and William Redford. He was killed after falling from his horse and died unmarried. His estate being inherited by his cousin, William Riddell of Camieston, with part of Lilliesleaf Moor being acquired by Sir John Buchanan Riddell of that Ilk. Elizabeth (16th C.) recorded as tenant in Mervinslaw in a rental roll of 1541. Her steadings was valued at 12s 6d. She was probably related to William, who was tenant at Mervinswood. George (18th C.) resident of Selkirk. In 1789 he had an account with the treasurer there for mason work. George (b.c.1760) resident of ‘Pityhouses’, i.e. Burnhead Cottages. It seems likely he is the son of John and Ann Whillans who was baptised in Wilton Parish in 1757. He was listed as a mason at ‘Pityhouses’ in 1840 among heads of households in Wilton Parish. In the 1841 census he was listed as ‘Ind.’ (and age 80) at Pityhouses, suggesting perhaps that he was retired by then (but wealthy enough that he was not a pauper). Given the location, he may have been related to the George who was a publican in Hawick. He may be the George (no other information given) who subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). He is probably the resident of Wilton Parish whose wife was Margaret Cairns, and whose son John was born in 1785. He seems likely to be the ‘Mr. Hunter’, mason at Peatihouses, who built the bridge over the Dean Burn at Denholm that washed away in 1806, and was father of John, inkeeper of the Black Bull. He may be related to the mason George who was recorded performing work in Selkirk in the 1770s and 80s. George (1770–1857) born at Appletreehall, son of Andrew and Hannah Laing. He may be the George who is recorded as owner of 2 horses at Appletreehall on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He worked in Denholm as a tailor, and was a ‘portioner’ there. He knew the poet John Leyden, and made his clothes for him. He was later the proprietor of the Fleece Inn in Hawick. In 1808 he catered the dinner arranged at the top of Ruberslaw where the Lairds of Cavers and Wells were to settle a boundary issue. A storm began and the party had to decamp the tent and retire to a barn, and when the cart jolted on the way down he is said to have uttered ‘The deli’s in the man’ about the carter, the closest he ever came to cursing! He was recorded at the Fleece Inn in Pigot’s directories of 1825/6 and 1837. He took over from James Kennedy (of the Ordnance Arms) as superintendent of the weigh-house in Hawick, and served until the weigh-house was closed. He was one of the founders of the Relief (Allars) Kirk, and early meetings of the church Managers took place on his premises. He was recorded on the High Street in 1841. It was said that old parishioners of Cavers used to frequent his inn in Hawick. He married Margaret Laidlaw in Cavers Parish in 1801, and she died in 1821. Their only surviving child was Andrew William (1810–50), who was a millwright, living in Jedburgh, then Preston for a couple of years, before emigrating to Canada in 1842. He secondly married Agnes, daughter of Thomas Laidlaw and Janet Davidson and she died in 1864. Their children included: Thomas Laidlaw (1823–97), who was an engineer in Gateshead; Margaret (b.1826), who may have married a Turnbull; George (b.1826), probably a twin of Margaret, who moved to Edinburgh; Janet Davidson (1828), who married James Dunlop and went to London; Hannah Laing (b.1830), who married Samuel Barnes; and Agnes (b.1833), who died in infancy. He later moved to the Roond Close, where he died. In 1851 he is listed at the Round Close as ‘Formerly a Tailor (a pauper)’. He was buried at St. Mary’s. Rev. George (1829–1881) born in Earlston, son of James and Margaret Waugh, he was educated at Earlston and Edinburgh University. He was licensed by Earlston Presbytery in 1852 and became assistant at Linton and at St. Mary’s in Hawick. He was ordained as minister of Kirkton in 1857 and remained until his death. He married Ann Elizabeth Favey. George (1840/1–1916) from Minto Parish, he was son of farm-worker Andrew and Helen. He became teacher at Ringford near Kirkcudbright. He wrote an article on the history of the Parish of Tongland. His wife was Euphemia, and their children included John and Andrew. James (15th C.) recorded as ‘Jacobo Huntar’ in 1453 when he witnessed a sasine at Milsington. Several of the other witnesses were local men, but it is unclear where he was from. James (15th/16th C.) recorded among the Borders men who were pardoned in 1526 for an attack on the Earl of Arran. Steven is listed right after him and so probably a close relative. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. His wife was Rachel Lockie. Their children included William (b.1803). James (1821–92) eldest son of Thomas ‘Kittlin Soup’. He was cashier at Watson’s, Dangerfield Mills and later a commission agent. He was also a manager of East Bank Church. He married Helen Young, who died in 1897, aged 71. Their children were: Thomas, who married a Coutts of Selkirk; Robert, mill manager and local poet; John Young, photographer; Beatrice, who married Thomas Hunter; Margaret D., who married Alexander Bonthorn Patrick; and Jane, who married printer William Clegg Shaw. James Young (1877–1937) son of Robert, he became Headmaster of Cellardyke School in Fife and should not be confused with his uncle John Young Hunter. He was born at 4 Brougham Place and educated at Buccleuch School. He attended the Free Church Training College in Edinburgh and in 1899 became an assistant teacher at Drumlanrig School. He graduated M.A. from Edinburgh University in 1900 and held positions in Dalbeattie and St. Andrews. He became headmaster at Lundin Links and then at Cellardyke. He wrote a biographical sketch of his father for the Transactions. He wrote several poems of a local flavour, including ‘Hawick Lasses – 1514’ (set to music much later by David Gibb), ‘The Heart’s Hame of the Callant’, ‘June Fever’, ‘The Ca’-Knowe’, ‘Follow the Flag!’ and ‘Sing me a Song, a Hawick Song’. He wrote ‘Heart’s Hame o’ the Callant’ was written for the Colour Bussing of 1899, and recited it himself. For many years, until about a decade before his death, he contributed a Hawick-based poem to the Hawick Express every Common Riding, including ‘Hawick Lasses – 1514’. He died in Crieff in his sleep and is buried in the Western Cemetery, St. Andrews. Jess nee Johnstone (19th/20th C.) one of the 5 sisters who lived to be over 80 and whose photo hangs in the Museum. She stayed at the Toll-house above the Dunk, and was called ‘Jess o the Toll’. John (d.bef. 1535) brother of Robert. In Selkirk in 1535 Walter Scott of Robertson asked for clemency from Robert Hunter for his murder. John (16th C.) tenant of the farm of Justicelee according to the rental roll of Jedforest in 1541. William and Alexander were joint tenants. John (17th C.) rented quarter of the farm of Wiltonburn from the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1690; this was along with his brother Thomas. He is also listed as resident at Wiltonburn on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. John (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, living at Appletreehall in 1764. In 1755 in Minto Parish he married Ann Whillans (or ‘Whollance’), probably daughter of William Whillans and Janet Stothart. Their children included: George (b.1757), possibly the mason of Packhouses; Jean (b.1759); Margaret (b.1762); Rachel (b.1764), who married Peter Kyle; and William (b.1767). The witnesses in 1764 were James dryden and Alexander Smith. He was probably related to Walter (married in Wilton in 1767) and Andrew, resident of Appletreehall. John (18th C.) groom at Cavers in 1786, when he was working for George Douglas. Probably the same John was a house servant at Midshiels in 1788, working for Archibald Douglas. John (d.bef. 1837) proprietor of the Black Bull Inn at the Sandbed, recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. He is probably the John from Hawick who subscribed to William Scott’s ‘ Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. He married Mary Oliver, who was from Kirkton Parish. Their children included: Francis (b.1813); Mary (b.1816); Margaret (b.1821), who married Provost Robert Millogan; and John (b.c.1823). In 1837 his wife Mary was listed as vintner at the Black Bull, and so he was presumably deceased; in 1841 she was running a pub on the Round Close, and she was listed as a former innkeeper there on the 1851 census. He was said to be son of a mason from Peathouses, perhaps George. John (1824–1905) cabinet-maker of John Hunter & Sons. He was said by James Haining to be son of a mason who came from the North and lived at Peathouses; however, this may be confusion with John of the Black Bull. About 1879 he had 4 villas built on land at Wilton Hill, and lived in one himself, ‘Olive Bank’. Hunter Terrace there was named after his son Robert. He was associated with the Hawick Baa game in its early years. He was said to have brought together his brother-in-law, Robert Richardson, with Robert Noble, to form the partnership Richardson, Noble & Co. He married Esther, daughter of spinner John Richardson. Their sons were Robert and George (manager at Abbots Mill, Galashiels). John Young ‘J.Y.’ (1850–1903) photographer, born in Hawick, son of commission agent James and brother of poet Robert. He trained in photography with John Aitken in the Arcade. He started his own business on North Bridge Street in the 1870s, then moved to 59 High Street in 1888. Following his father's death in 1893 he also became a commission agent. He was the first Chairman of the Common Riding Ceremonial Committee from 1887, with the Committee being established at a meeting in his photographic studio in April of that year. In those early days the Chairman was probably the most important member of the committee. He was also Honorary Secretary for some years, until James Edgar was appointed in 1900. Through his efforts (and those of a few others) the Common Riding revamped its traditional ceremonies and dramatically increased in popularity. He also acted as judge at the Common Riding Races. He was personally in charge of arrangements for the Colour Bussing for about 15 years and resigned from the Ceremonial Committee in 1895. He was also heavily involved with running the Saxhorn Band, and with other musical associations in the town. In addition he was an active member of the Mutual Improvement Society, the Parliamentary Debating Society, the East Bank Literary Society, the Ornithological Society and Lodge 111. He was one of the originators of the Con Club, and also helped start the working men's flower shows. He followed cricket and keenly played bowls, being Hawick & Wilton President. Although he became lame, he was seen around town in later years on his tricycle (and is probably in the c.1890 photograph of the 'Coffin End'). He is buried in Wellogate Cemetery. (Note that the poems signed 'James Y. Hunter' were written by his nephew). Martin (16th C.) son of Matthew, who was 'John Crosyer kynsman'. They were listed, along with two brothers of Matthew, Ade and Pate, in a 1544 list of local men who gave allegiance to Henry VIII. They may have been the same Hunter family connected with Wiltonburn. Mary nee Oliver (b.1781/2) born in Kirkton Parish, she married innkeeper John. Her husband was proprietor of the Black Bull at the Sandbed. However, she was listed as proprietor herself in Pigot’s 1837 directory, and so he was presumably decease. In 1841 she was running a pub on the Round Close, and living with her son John and daughter Margaret. The pub could have been the Royal Oak. She was still alive in 1851. Matthew (16th C.) cousin of John Crozier who is listed in 1541 among Scotsmen accused of burning the corn of William Carnaby at Halton. Matthew, son of John Crozier was also mentioned, although the precise family relationship is unclear. Presumably the same man was ‘Matthew Hunter John Crosyer kynsman’ listed in 1544 among Croziers and others who swore allegiance to Henry VIII; his brothers Ade and Pate, and son Martin, are also mentioned. He may be the same as the resident of Wiltonburn in 1549. Matthew (16th C.) resident of Wiltonburn, recorded in 1549 as ‘Matho Hunter’ among a list of tenants and servants of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme who complained about the Kers raiding their farms. He was probably related to his neighbour, Patrick. He may be the same man as the cousin of John Crozier. Patrick (16th C.) tenant at Wilton Green resident, recorded in 1549 when tenants and servants of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme complained about their farms being burned by a group of Englishmen and Kers in the previous year. It seems likely he was related to Matthew, who lived at Wiltonburn at the same time. He could be the ‘Patte’, brother of Matthew, ‘John Crosyer kynsman’, who was listed among local men who swore allegiance to Henry VIII in 1544; another brother listed was Ade, as well as Matthew’s son Martin. Robert (16th C.) resident of the Selkirk area. In 1535 Walter Scott of Robertson came to Selkirk to seek clemency for his part in the ‘violent killing’ of his brother John. He accepted the apology (and payment presumably), promising not to pursue Walter Scott any further over the matter. Robert (18th C.) tenant in North Synton. In 1737 he was recorded in a court case in Selkirk with merchant John Tudhope and perhaps in another case in 1742. He is probably the Robert who married Helen Scott, and whose children, baptised in Ashkirk, included Helen (b.1741), John (b.1743), Kirsten (b.1745), Walter (b.1747) and Helen (b.1749). He may be the Robert, son of Thomas and Helen Shortreed who was baptised in Ashkirk in 1701. Robert (d.1816) resident of Hawick. In 1788 he married Mary Welsh, who died in 1823, aged 72. His death is registered in Hawick. Robert (1819–53) grocer at 16 Howegate, son of Thomas ‘Kittlin Soup’. He was born at Chesters, but lived almost all his life in Hawick. In 1841 he was grocer and spirit dealer on the Mid Raw and in 1851 was on the Howegate. In 1852 he is listed as a grocer on Silver Street. He married Jane Fleming, who died in 1883, aged 63. Their only child was Sir Thomas (b.1850), Edinburgh Town Clerk. He is buried in Wellogate Cemetery. Robert (1854–1905) writer of poems such as ‘An Auld Man’s Common Riding’, ‘Hawick Common Riding’, ‘Oor Ain Kailyaird’ (sent to Robert Murray in Canada), and ‘The Teri Test’, as well as the words for the song ‘Oor Bonnie Border Toon’. Born in Hawick, he was son of James and brother of J.Y. and Thomas. On leaving school he worked for William Watson’s as a power loom tuner, and spent some time working in Banff and Carlisle. He then became a cashier at Wilson & Glenny’s and was managed there for 25 years. He was an ardent Temperance supporter, elder of East Bank Church, Sunday School teacher and President of the local Band of Hope. He was also Masonic Bard (for Lodge 111) and won second prize in a poetry competition for the Burns statue dedication in Dumfries. He married Margaret Douglas Turnbull, who died in 1919, aged 63. Their son James Young also composed local poetry, and wrote a biographical sketch of his father for the Archaological Society Transactions. He died in 13 Beaconsfield Terrace and is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery, where his refurbished gravestone was unveiled at a special ceremony in 2005. Robert R. (1856–1938) son of cabinet-maker John, he moved into the hosiery trade, setting up Hunter & Co., Abbostford Mills, Galashiels, along with his brother George and partner Thomas Ovens. He later established Inverteviot, Hawick. Hunter Terrace was named after him. Steven (15th/16th C.) listed as ‘Stevin Hunter’ in 1526 among the Borderers (led by the Homes and Walter Scott of Branxholme) pardoned for an attack on the Earl of Arran. He is listed right after James, who was presumably related. Thomas (16th C.) listed as ‘Hountar’ in 1534 when he was a witness at Hassendean Kirk for the sealing of a letter of reversion when Gavin Elliot sold the lands of Nether Galalaw to William Scott. It is unclear if he was from Hawick, Hassendean or Selkirk (in whose Protocol Books the record appeared). Thomas (17th C.) servant to Walter Earl of Bucleuch. He was listed in the deceased Earl’s inventory in 1633, when he was owed for his annual fee. It is unclear if he was a servant at Branxholme or in Edinburgh or elsewhere Thomas (17th C.) brother of John. In 1690 the pair were joint tenants of part of Wiltownburn farm. Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish, recorded as tenant in ‘Langtoune’ in 1697 and tenant in Dimpleknowe in 1709. He married Helen Shortreed and their children included: John (b.1697); Robert (b.1701); ‘Betrech’ (b.1703); James (b.1706); Thomas (b.1709); and Thomas (again, b.1713). Perhaps the same Thomas was living at Harden in 1716 when his son Walter was baptised in Robertson Parish. He could be the Thomas recorded in a ‘lybell’ in Selkirk in 1719. Thomas (b.1777/8) from Glenholm in Peeblesshire, he was a farm worker at Branxholme. In 1841 he was a servant at Branxholme Park and in 1851 he was a house servant at Branxholme Woodfoot. His wife was Elizabeth and their children included Janet and Grizel (or Grace). Thomas ‘Kittlin Soup’ (b.1789) born in Ancrum Parish, son of John. He was a farm labourer around Hawick and then farmer himself. He had several fields up the Loan and also kept cows. In 1815 he married Margaret Dodds, and they lived at Alton, then Haysike (where they were in 1841 and 1851), as well as Chesters, before moving to Drumlanrig Place (by 1861). Their children were: John (b.1817), who went to Australia; Robert (b.1819), grocer; James, commission agent (1821–92); Margaret (b.1823), who married Alexander Purdom; Mary (b.1825), who married tailor Robert Martin; Agnes (b.1828), who married clogger John Jackson; and Jeanie (b.1830), whose husband Elliot Cowan carried on the farming activities of his father-in-law. He was grandfather of local poet Robert and photographer J.Y. Thomas (b.1799/1800) from Earlston, he was a hand-loom weaver in Hawick. In 1841 he was living on the Round Close, and in 1851 at Slitrig Cottage. His wife was Mary, and their children included Magdalen, Elizabeth, Margaret, John and Thomas. Sir Thomas (1850–1919) native of Hawick, son of Robert the grocer and cousin of Robert the poet and James. He was educated for a while by J.A.H. Murray, and trained under Thomas Purdom, the Hawick Town Clerk. He received a first prize in Scots Law at Edinburgh University, became W.S and Notary Public in 1893 and in 1895 became Town Clerk of Edinburgh. He was also Deputy Lieutenant for the county, and heavily involved in the affairs of his local church. Provost William Scott Nichol worked in his offices for a time and he was Callants’ Club guest in 1913. Thomas (19th/20th C.) eldest son of James, brother of Robert (the local poet) and John Young. He was hosiery manufacturer with Hunter & Young of Commercial Road. The firm operated from about 1885 until 1914. He married a Miss Coutts of Selkirk. Their sons were James Young, who worked with the Royal Bank of Scotland in Edinburgh and William Coutts, who farmed near Ancrium and married Isabella, daughter of George Davidson. Thomas (19th/20th C.) commission agent, known for his geniality, who lived at 9 Carnarvon Street. He married Beatrice Hunter, daughter of commission agent James. Walter (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Margaret Johnson in 1767. William (16th C.) recorded as ‘William Huntare’ among a list of the occupiers of the lands of Newton in Bedrule in 1531. William (16th C.) recorded as tenant in Mervinswood in a rental roll of 1541. Elizabeth Hunter was one of the tenants at Mervinslaw and hence probably related. William (16th C.) tenant of the farm of Justicelee according to the rental roll of Jedforest in 1541. Alexander and John were joint tenants, but his name occurs first, suggesting he may have been the senior one. William ‘Will’ (16th C.) tenant of Gavin of Elliot of Falnash in 1569. Elliot acted as cautioner for his tenants at a meeting in Hawick, assuring that they would obey the laws of the Lord Regent. His name is recorded as ‘Will Hunter’. William (16th C.) recorded in Hermiston in 1580 when he witnessed a transaction involving the Johnstones of Hermiston Rev. William (1657–1736) minister at Lilliesleaf. He graduated from Edinburgh University in 1693, was licensed by Kelso Presbytery in 1694 and was ordained at Lilliesleaf in 1695. He was a friend of Thomas Boston. He was termed one of the ‘twelve apostles’ for being one of a group of a dozen ministers who gave a petition to the General Assembly in 1721 against an Act that had condemned ‘the Marrow of Modern Divinity’. He was referred to as ‘of Union Hall’, since he acquired lands there (part of the Linthill estate in Lilliesleaf Parish). It was probably because of him that a dissenting petition, presented to the General Assembly in 1732, was signed at Raperlaw. He married Alison, daughter of James Hogg, minister of Carnock, and later married Margaret Potts. His children included: Alison, who married Adam Milne, minister of Melrose; William, a doctor, who acquired the Linthill estate and passed it to his son Col. Edgar Hunter; and Margaret of Courthill, who married Thomas Riddell of Cumnister, 3rd son of the 4th Baronet of Riddell. Dr. William (d.1781) son of Rev. William. He inherited the farm of Linthill in Lillesleaf Parish. These lands included those separately called Union Hall, Ryechester and Quartersides, as well as part of Greenhouse. He paid the window tax there in 1748. He was recorded as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1761. Part of the lands of Child-Know were sold by him to Robert Dickson of Huntlaw. In 1780 he was approved to be added to the voters’ roll for Roxburghshire; in 1788 he is stated to be about to be enrolled on the list of Roxburghshire voters, but was already deceased, with his heir living abroad at that time. He married Margaret Edgar (who died in 1792) and their children included: Col. Edgar, who inherited Linthill; William; and 2 daughters. William (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. His wife was Janet Wait and their children included: Walter (b.1784); and Agnes (b.1786). William (1836–1920) hedger at Linthill in Lilliesleaf Parish. He was son of George (an agricultural labourer in Melrose Parish) and Alison Cockburn and was born in Lauder Parish. He later moved to Hawick, where he was a park-keeper and lived at 14 Linden Terrace. He married Margaret Paxton, daughter of a cabinet-maker in Nairn. Their children were: Margaret (b.1869); Alison Isabella (b.1873); William (1874–95); Mary Jane (‘Jean’, b.1877); and Alexander (1882–1952), who married Catherine Elliot. Sir William Wilson (1840–1900) possibly born in Hawick, he was son of Andrew G. and Isabella Wilson and grandson of William Wilson, manufacturer. He was educated in Glasgow, graduating from the University in 1860. He led the open competition for the Indian Civil Service in 1861 and went out to Bengal in 1862. He was author of several books on the history of India, beginning with ‘The Annals of Rural Bengal’ (1868), which ran to 6 editions. He also wrote ‘A Comparative Dictionary of the Non-Aryan Languages of India and High Asia’ (1868) and ‘Orissa’ (1872). He wrote an influential government report on Indian Muslims in 1871 and was selected to lead a statistical survey of the whole of India, ‘The Imperial Gazetteer’, on which he worked for 12 years. Additionally the report of the Commission in Education, over which he presided, revolutionised education in India. He served as Vice-Chancellor of the University of Calcutta in 1886 and retired from active service in 1887 (when he was knighted). He then lived in Edinburgh and Oxford, where he devoted himself to working on a history of India, and contributed a weekly article on Indian affairs for the Times. He wrote several other books, including short biographies on ‘The Rulers of India’ (1875), ‘Bombay, 1885 to 1890’ (1892), ‘The Old Missionary’ (1895) and ‘The Thackerays in India’ (1897). He received honorary degrees from Glasgow, Oxford and Cambridge. In 1863 he married Jessie Murray and they had 2 sons. He died of influenza, having only managed to publish one volume of his planned history (with one more following posthumously). He was buried in Cumnor, near Oxford. William Hunter an Young’s

John ‘Big Billy’ (1934–2016) Hawick and Scotland rugby player, playing as a lock. He played rugby at the High School, then the P.S.A. and Linden. He first played for Hawick R.F.C. in 1952 and eventually became team Captain. He was a regular member of the South of Scotland side and received the first of his 7 Scotland caps in 1964. He also played for the Barbarians. He worked at the skinyards and was manager at Hawick Abattoir, before setting up his own boarding and breeding kennels. He also played golf and showed prize-winning canaries. He married Helen and had children Alan, Derek and Stuart. William ‘Billy’ (1945/6– ) son of Tom, he worked as an engineer at Pringle’s and was also known as a bookmaker. He ran the Little Shop on Weensland Road for 13 years. He married Doreen (formerly written ‘Huntar’ and ‘Huntare’).

Hunter an Young’s (hun’-ur-an-yungz) n. hosiery manufacturing firm of Thomas Hunter and William Young, operating on Commercial Road from about 1885 until around 1914. Their factory was in a building at 22 Commercial Road. The building was afterwards occupied by Hawick Woollen Manufacturing Co. Ltd. 1922–25 and Wilglen Hosiery Ltd. from 1925 until the 1930s. The building was L-shaped, and the main part was used by the Hawick Scouts as their headquarters. The part used by the Scouts was demolished in 2000, with the part at the back left standing.

Hunter Holes (hun’-ur-hölz) n. area near the head of the Dirthope Burn in the upper Borthwick valley, on the north-eastern side of Crib Law. Now part of Craik Forest, a bike trail goes through the area.

the Hunter Lounge (thu-hun’-ur-lownj) n. part of the Burns Club, named after Tom Hunter who was Secretary for 19 years.

Hunter’s Hill (hun’-ur-hil) n. hill in Liddesdale, to the east of Castleton. It reaches over 200 m and has Queen o’ Fairies’ Hole on its south-west side.

Hunter’s Pool (hun’-ur-pool) n. popular name for a pool somewhere to the south of Newcastleton – ‘...Laigh doui I louted on my knees, An’ preed the Hunter’s pool’ [ECB].

the Hunter’s Sweepstakes (thu-hun’-ur-sweep-stiks) n. race formerly held on both days at the Common Riding. It was only for horses that rode in one of the local hunts. It is recorded in 1875 over 2 miles on the Friday, with another race over the same distance on the Saturday.

Huntershill (hun’-urz-hil) n. former name for lands in the Barony of Winnington, once owned by the Eliotts of Stobs. It is recorded at the end of the 17th century, but its precise location is uncertain. It is probably the half merkland of ‘Huntliehass’ listed among properties inherited by Sir William Elliott of Stobs in 1692.

Huntford (hun’-ford) n. farm on the A68, just north of the Carter Bar and junction with the A6088. The are signs of an old stock enclosure there.

Hunthill (hun’-hil) n. farm just to the south-east of Jedburgh, formerly a seat of the Rutherfords. It was formerly also known as ‘Scraisburg’ or Scraesburgh. It seems that the land held by the Douglases of Cavers in the 17th century was a different place, even although it had the same name. It was one of the places where dragoons were posted in about 1676, so that they could scour the local countryside for people attending illegal field conventicles. The house dates from around 1800, replacing an earlier tower-house. The entrance gate has lions rampant on the piers. It was owned by the Bells of Hunthill and then the Meins of Hunthill in the 19th century – ‘Boonjeddart, Hundlie, and Hunthill, Thir three they laid weil on at last’ [CPM].

Hunthill (hun’-hil) n. former farm in Cavers Parish, although probably the same as lands adjacent to Hunthill near Jedburgh (just in a different parish for historical reasons). Some of the lands there (or perhaps just the superiority) belonged to the Douglasses of Cavers in the 17th century. It is recorded in a document of 1581 relating to Dou-glases of Crook. It was owned by the Gledstains of Dod in the 17th century, and seems likely to correspond to the ‘Gledstane’s Lands’ that were once part of the Barony of Scraesburgh (which was an old name for Hunthill), mentioned as properties of the Gledstains in the 15th and 16th centuries. In 1676 Abraham Gledstains of Hunthill was served heir to these lands of his grandfather Walter Gled-stains of Dod; at that point they were described being in the Abbacy of Jedburgh and Parish of Cavers. There is an inventory from 1775 in the papers of the Douglasses of Cavers. In 1788 it was owned by the Duke of Buccleuch and valued at £50. ‘Hunthill, formerly Scott of Horselyhill’s’ is recorded in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls among the properties of George Douglas of Cavers, when it was valued at £50. Perhaps the same Hunthill (or part of it) was included in a valuation of the lands of Elliott of Stobs in 1779 and 1811.
Hunthill

Hunthill (hun'-hil) n. former name for lands that were part of Acreknowe farm. In 1788 the ‘Remainder of Acre-know, Hunthill and Abbot’s-acre’ were valued at £151 2s 11d. On the 1811 Land Tax Rolls the ‘Remainder of Acre-know, Hunthill, and Abbot-acre’ were owned by Sir William Elliott of Stobs and still valued at £151. It is possible this is the same as part of the lands of Hunthill near Jedburgh.

Huntigowk see huntigowk

Huntigowk (hun'-ee-gowk, hunt-ee-gowk, hunt-thu-gowk) n. an April Fool trick, fool’s errand, to ‘make someone huntigowk’ is to play an April Fool’s trick on them – ‘First an’ saicont o’ April, Hunt the gowk another mile’ [GW] (aditionally spelled ‘hun-tie gowk’, hunt-the-gowk, ‘hunty gowk’, etc.; also huntie-gowk).

Huntingdon (hun-ting-din) n. Alexander (12th/13th C.) granted the land called ‘Schotteschales’ (probably Satchells) in Lilliesleaf Parish in the period 1202–07. The grant was by the Bishop of Glasgow for his homage and service, including that of his father.

Huntnow (hun'-now) n. former farm that was once part of Bonjedward estate, listed in 1707. In 1678 it is recorded in Bedrule Parish, owned by Andrew Ker of Wells and valued at £66 13s 4d (plus teinds). It was still recorded this way in 1788 (and continued in 1811), when owned by William Elliot of Wells.

Huntlaw (hun'-law, hunt-law) n. farm on the B6359, just west of Hassendean and about 5 miles north of Hawick. In about the 1180s one ploughgate of land here was granted by King William to Paisley Priory; the land had previously been held by Richard the Chaplain and Walter Stewart, son of Alan. This land was still confirmed to Paisley Priory by James II in 1451/2. In 1643 the lands were listed as part of Hassendean Parish, valued at £66 13s 4d and owned by ‘Martin ... of Huntlaw’, with the surname not listed. A 10-shilling land there was owned by Rev. Alexander Forrest, minister of Hassendean, and inherited by his son William in 1665. Alexander Forrest paid the land tax on £66 13s 4d there in 1678. Adam Inglis was living there in 1682. In 1690 Huntlaw became part of Minto Parish, after Hassendean was suppressed. James Wilson was recorded there in 1694. It was formerly one of the homes of the Dicksons. In 1811 it was owned by the heirs of Archibald Dickson and valued at £66 13s 4d. Thomas Drawhill was farmer there in the 1860s (also ‘Houndlaw’, ‘Huntla’ and other variants in earlier documents).

Huntly

Huntlaw (hun'-law) n. Ann (18th C.) housemaid at Cavers in 1789 when she was working for George Douglas. Her name appears on the female servant roll as ‘Huntla’.

Hunt Law (hun'-law) n. small hill to the west of Commonside farm, off the right-hand side of the A7 (travelling from Hawick). It reaches a height of 296 m. Running from here to Dryden, to the south, is a linear earthwork, stretching about 3/4 of a mile. It seems similar to the nearby Catrail. It was probably a boundary ditch for lands lying between the Back and Dryden Burns. It is possible that this area is associated with the lands of ‘Huntlehassoun’, which are listed among those in the Barony of Cavers owned by the Eliotts of Stobs at the end of the 17th century.

Huntly (hun'-lee) n. area west of Woll Rig, consisting of Huntly Rig, Outer Huntly (also called Over Huntly), Inner Huntly, etc. Although formally part of Yarrow Parish, the residents there were historically often members of Ashkirk Kirk. Robert ‘de Huntleigh’ signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296, and may have been associated. The farm there was owned by the King from at least 1456. In 1478 it was leased to John, son of Sir Thomas Turnbull. William Turnbull was recorded there in 1494/5. Lands there remained Crown property until at least 1541. Michael Scott of Aikwood was tenant of half the lands there in 1541, the other half being occupied by Walter Scott in Synton, together paying £22. It was burned by the English in 1543, and at that time was a property of the Laird of Buccleuch. Part of the lands were held by the Countess of Bothwell in 1581/2 when a band of Nixons and others stole 6 cows from there. It was an estate possessed by the Scotts in the 16th century and earlier part of the 17th century. William Scott and James Telfer are recorded there in 1579 when there was a dispute with neighbouring tenant in Huttlburn, who took a horse from there, claiming it was pastured over the march dyke. Scott of Satchells says that Outer Huntly was held by Robert Scott of Langhope for his service to the house of Buccleuch. It was valued at £22 when included among lands whose superiority was held by the Earl of Home. John Scott of Huntly succeeded his father James in 1638, and Walter Scott of Huntly is recorded in 1644. A Laidlaw was herd there in 1715 and Robert Fletcher was tenant in 1717. The lands were owned by the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1663 and when ‘Outer Huntlie’ was surveyed in 1718. However part was held by the Homes when inherited by 3 heirs portioners in 1693. In 1802 Outer Huntly was valued at £313 and Inner Huntly at £14, when they were part of the Buccleuch estates; Hugh Scott of Harden also paid tax on £126 for his part of Inner Huntly. Robert Grieve was there in the 1860s and 70s – ‘Warn Dryhope, and Catsackle, Howford, and Huntlee free, Whitslade, Toddrig, and Sallenside, the morn to wait on me’ [WSB] (it is recorded in the late 12th century as ‘Huntlie’) and later often spelled ‘Huntlee’ or ‘Hantlie’; it is ‘Huntlee’ in 1456, ‘Hunte’ in 1471, ‘Huntlee’ in 1477 and 1541, ‘Huntlie’ in 1581/2, ‘Huntley’ and ‘Hundley’ in 1608, ‘Huntlie’ in 1621 and ‘Huntlies’ in 1663; it is marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Huntley’.

Huntly (hunt-lee) n. Adam (17th C.) tenant in Little Cote who was listed in the 1694 Horse Tax rolls. He may be the Adam whose children, baptised in Cavers Parish, included Isabel (b.1695), Margaret (b.1700), Margaret (again, b.1702) and Marion (b.1705). Isobel (b.1708) and Bessie (b.1710) may also be his children. Adam (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. In 1715 and 1723 he was living at Ormiston. He probably married Marion Haddon in 1713. His children included Jane (b.1714), Adam (b.1715), Isobel (b.1717), Walter (b.1720) and William (b.1723). Adam (18th C.) recorded in 1746 when he was paid ‘for going two rounds to the country in quest of baggage horses to the military’. This was during a period where soldiers were billeted in Hawick. He was probably a carter, and likely an ancestor of the later carter Adam. He may be the Adam who hired the Hawick mortcloth in 1760. Adam ‘Yeddie’ (18th/19th C.) carter whose cart doubled as the Steward’s stand at the Common Riding Races. James (17th C.) listed among those who subscribed to the fund for the new Kirk bell in Hawick in 1693/4. He is probably the resident of the east-side of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living at Whitriggs in 1720. He probably married Bessie Nichol in Cavers in 1706. Their children included: Isabel (b.1708); Robert (b.1710); William (b.1712); James (b.1715); James (again, b.1717); and Bessie (b.1720) John (17th C.) resident of Orchard on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at Langlands in 1724. In that year he witnessed baptisms for James Ormiston and flesher Thomas Waugh. In 1715 he witnessed a baptism for merchant Thomas Howison. He is probably the Robert whose children included: Helen (b.1693), baptised in Hawick; and Margaret (b.1695), Robert (b.1697), Marion (b.1699) and Janet (b.1701), baptised in Cavers. Perhaps the same Robert was recorded as ‘servitor to Mr Cunningham’ in 1712 when he witnessed a baptism in Hawick for William Crozier (weaver in Clarilaw). Possibly the same Robert witnessed a baptism in Hawick for Thomas Hardie in 1725. Robert (18th C.) farmer at Dryden in Ashkirk Parish according to the 1794 Horse Tax Rolls. Thomas (17th/18th C.) smith in Hawick. He witnessed baptisms in 1714 for William Bulloch, in 1714 for John Little, in 1720 for carrier James Henderson, and in 1743 for carrier William Gledstaines. He may be the ‘Tho: hontlie’ who witnessed a baptism for John Hendry in Wilton in 1721. He married Bessie Huntly in 1709, the marriage being recorded in Hawick and Cavers Parishes. Their children were: Robert (b.1710); Adam (b.1711); Helen (b.1714); John (b.1715); Janet (b.1718); Robert (again, b.1720); Thomas (b.1723); Bessie (b.1726); and Thomas (again, b.1729). The witnesses in 1711 were carrier James Simpson and flesher Thomas Waugh, in 1714 were Walter Laing and flesher George Renwick. In 1720 were merchants Michael Scott and Robert Robson. Thomas (b.1693/4) tenant in Closses. He was servant to carrier Robert Robson in 1715 and then spent 35 years as tenant in Closses, ending in 1764. He was a widower living in Newbigging in 1767 when he gave evidence at the court case for the division of the married Margaret Scott. Their children included: Adam (b.1722); and Margaret (b.1724). The witnesses in 1724 were John and Walter Scott. It is possible he is the same John who was previously married to Bessie Nichol. Margaret (17th C.) resident of Cavers who was listed in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Robert (13th C.) recorded as being ‘de Hanteleye’ when he swore fealty to Edward I in 1296. His seal bore a ‘vesica’ with interlacing and the name ‘S’ROBERTI DE HVNTOLET’. His lands were probably either at Huntly, north of Ashkirk, or at Hundalee, south of Jedburgh. Robert (17th C.) resident of Roberston Parish. He married Marion Turnbull and their children included: Isobel (b.1679); Robert (b.1681); and John (b.1685). The witnesses in 1681 were Walter and Robert Scott. Robert (17th C.) resident of Ormiston on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He is surely related to Walter who was also listed there. In 1700 he witnessed a baptism for merchant Thomas Howison. He is probably the Robert whose children included: Helen (b.1693), baptised in Hawick; and Margaret (b.1695), Robert (b.1697), Marion (b.1699) and Janet (b.1701), baptised in Cavers. Perhaps the same Robert was recorded as ‘servitor to Mr Cunningham’ in 1712 when he witnessed a baptism in Hawick for William Crozier (weaver in Clarilaw). Possibly the same Robert witnessed a baptism in Hawick for Thomas Hardie in 1725. Robert (18th C.) farmer at Dryden in Ashkirk Parish according to the 1794 Horse Tax Rolls. Thomas (17th/18th C.) smith in Hawick. He witnessed baptisms in 1714 for William Bulloch, in 1714 for John Little, in 1720 for carrier James Henderson, and in 1743 for carrier William Gledstaines. He may be the ‘Tho: hontlie’ who witnessed a baptism for John Hendry in Wilton in 1721. He married Bessie Huntly in 1709, the marriage being recorded in Hawick and Cavers Parishes. Their children were: Robert (b.1710); Adam (b.1711); Helen (b.1714); John (b.1715); Janet (b.1718); Robert (again, b.1720); Thomas (b.1723); Bessie (b.1726); and Thomas (again, b.1729). Common. Thomas (18th C.) tailor in Hawick Parish. He married Mary (or ‘Marriion’) Thomson in 1759 and their children included Thomas (b.1760), Agnes (b.1762), James (b.1764), Robert (b.1767) and Adam (b.1771). The witnesses in 1760 and 1762 were the whole congregation. He is probably the Thomas who witnessed a baptism for cabinetmaker George Scott in 1776. Thomas (18th C.) weaver in Denholm, recorded in 1781 and 1785. His children, baptised in cavers Parish, probably included Janet (b.1781), Nelly (b.1782), Elspeth (b.1785) and Nelly (again, b.1790). Walter (17th C.) resident of Ormiston on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living in Denholm in 1717 and 1723. He is probably the William who married Margaret Blyth in Cavers in 1709. His children included: Bessie (b.1710); Marion (b.1712); Adam (b.1714); Margaret (b.1717); Helen (b.1720); Ann (b.1723); and Janet (b.1729).

Huntlyburn (hunt-lee-burn) n. house southwest of Melrose, which was called Toftfield until bought and improved by Sir Walter Scott in 1817. Part of the estate was used to build the Borders General Hospital in the late 1980s.

Huntlyburn (hunt-lee-burn) n. former name for lands in Jedforest, whose location is unclear, recorded as ‘Huntlawburn’ in 1538 and 1539. It was among lands that passed from the Douglases to the Crown in about 1537, with Walter Scott of Buccleuch accused of occupying the farm at that time. It may have been close to Blackburn, which was also listed, It is possible that it is Huntlaw Burn.

Huntly Covert (hunt-lee-kövar’) n. plantation wrapping around Huntly Rig. There is a triangulation pillar to the north-east of there, reaching a height of 353 m.

Huntly Hill (hunt-lee-hil) n. hill between Huntly Rig and Inner Huntly, with Hutlerburn Loch to the south. It reaches a height of 352 m. A hill to the east, sometimes called Huntly Covert, contains a triangulation pillar.

Huntlyhill (hunt-lee-hil) n. former farm in the Rule valley, once part of the Wells estate. It may have been the same as ‘Rulewood’. In 1615 the Stewart of Traquair complained about Walter Turnbull of Bedrule and others not removing themselves from his lands there, and they were denounced as rebels. In 1619 John Stewart of Traquair accused a large group of Turnbuls of cutting down a large quantity of timber from his lands there, taking away 24 horse-loads. John Murray is recorded as farmer there in 1797 (also written ‘Huntlehill’, it is ‘Huntlethill’ in 1797).

of songs and toasts and good-natured male camaraderie. Tickets for the Friday event (available in limited numbers to non-riders) are always highly sought after. After the Hut there is the traditional singing of ‘Teribus’ in front of the farm-house. The Friday morning ‘Hut’ is where the Curds and Cream repast occurs, ordered from a local farmhouse at the Thursday evening Chase the week before. This is recorded as being held at Whitchesters in 1846, Newmill on Slitrig in 1856, Crumhaughhill in 1860, the ‘Herd’s House’ 1872–76, Pilmuir 1882, St. Leonard’s 1883–1900, Pilmuir 1901–11 and at St. Leonards from 1912 until now. In earlier times a marquee was erected at St. Leonard’s. The building itself was constructed at St. Leonard’s in 1924 (following a wet Common Riding the previous year, when the tent was blown away!) and extended in 1964. Exactly when the full schedule of entertainment became a feature of these events is unclear, but now tickets are a highly sought after commodity. It usual for many people to listen outside to the entertainment – ‘It’s a’ happenin again, the great occasion is here but it a’ sterted this morning wi that ‘tremendous grand Hut’ ‘[GM], ‘The world hez mony wonderful venues, the Hollywood Bowl, the Sydney Opera House, the Albert Hall in London, the Volunteer Hall in Galashiels but nane o thum can touch the Hut’ [IWL], ‘And as long as St. Leonard’s Hut shall stand That trusty valour through the land Shall tell the story proud and grand Of Hawick on the Border’ [IWL], ‘Unlike other farm sheds, the Hut is not for agricultural purposes’ [BEL].

hutch (buch) n., arch. an embankment built to hinder water from washing away the soil (noted by J. Jamieson).

Hutch’s Riverside (hu-churz-ri-vur-sid) n. former name for a small piece of land in Minto Parish. It was listed in 1779, with a value of £1 16s 6d, and still listed in the Land Tax Rolls of 1811. In 1780 it was said to belong to Thomas Kennedy (although also said to be included in the lands of Deanfoot liferent to Robert Trotter), with a rent of 10s.

Hutchin Brae (hu-chin-brä) n. name given to an area to the east of old Cavers house, and west of West Middle, on a side road leading to the south.

Hutchison (hu-chee-sin) n. Thomas (17th C.) carrier on the west-side of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. Thomas Oliver ‘Tom’ (1931–98) educated at Hawick High School, he was in the Border Schoolboys team in 1949.

He studied science at St. Andrews University. He joined I.C.I., becoming a manager of the plastics division, and joining the Board of Directors in 1985. He was President of the Association of Plastics Manufacturers in Europe 1980–82, Deputy-Governor of the Bank of Scotland, Deputy Chairman of Cadbury Schweppes and on several other boards. His wife was Frances and they had 3 sons. He lived in the London area and had a house in Normandy, but stayed close to his Scottish roots (also ‘Hutchisone’).

huther (hu-thur) v., arch. to heap together, over-clothe – ‘The bairn’s fair hudder’ wi’ claes’ [GW] (also spelled ‘hudder’; cf. hudder).

Hutlerburn (hut-lur-burn) n. farm on the south side of the Ettrick valley about a mile east of Ettrickbridge (it is ‘Huthralburne’ in 1579; it is probably what is marked ‘Hontyr’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

hutten (hu'-in) pp. – ‘he was hutten wi a muckle stane’, ‘...for thou nest hutten a’ mine enemies apon the cheikbane’ [HSR].

Hutton (hu'-thun) n. Adam (17th C.) resident at Sundhope in Castleton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. His surname was written ‘Houtone’, and must have been closely related to Robert, who was also listed in the same place. It is unclear if the modern equivalent of his name was ‘Hutton’, ‘Howitson’, ‘Whutson’, or something else. Adam (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen Veitch in 1761 and they had twins Isobel and Elizabeth (b.1762). The witnesses were Walter Scott, Commodore and Thomas Bunyan, Teindsay. Alasdair, O.B.E. (??− ) Conservative Member of the European Parliament for South of Scotland 1979–89. He was on the Scottish Borders Council since 2002 for Kelso Central, where he has been Convenor. He is also known as a broadcaster and has been the narrator for the Edinburgh Military Tattoo for many years. He reads about John Buchan on ‘Sounds of the Borders’ (2012). Alexander (17th C.) listed as resident at Outerside on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. John, who was also listed there, was surely related. Alexander (17th/18th C.) tenant in Slaidhills. He married Christian Simpson in 1706 and their children included: Andrew (b.1707); and Helen (b.1709). Note that he is (presumably incorrectly) ‘Adam’ in one baptismal record. Perhaps the same Alexander had a child Jean baptised in Wilton Parish in 1694. George (18th/19th C.) resident at ‘Apple-tree-Hall’ in 1811 when he was on the subscription list for Andrew Scott’s book of poetry, printed in Kelso. Rev. George (d.c.1868) born at Cannieston in Howden Parish. His parents were members of the Secession Kirk in Lilliesleaf. He was educated at Edinburgh University and then taught at several schools. He entered the Divinity Hall of the Secession Church in 1826 and in 1831 he was inducted as the 3rd minister at the Anti-Burgher Kirk of Linlithgow, East. He retired in 1863 because of ill-health and moved to Greenock for the last 5 years of his life. He married twice, having 3 sons and 1 daughter. Henry (18th/19th C.) farmer at Kershope, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. His surname is listed as ‘Hutson’. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen Scott and their children included: John (b.1645); and Helen (b.1653). James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1680 he witnessed a baptism for John Grieve in Eilrig. James (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1775 he married Janet Black and their children included: James (b.1776); James (again, 1777–81); Thomas (1779–81); and Janet (b.1781), who probably married Adam Kersel in Kirkton. Perhaps the same James was in Ormiston in 1784 when his son James was baptised in pavers Church. John (17th C.) listed as resident at Outerside on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Alexander, who was also listed there, was surely related. John (b.1819/20) from Ewes, he was a master clogger at 4 Howegate in 1861. His wife was Agnes and they has a son Alexander; his wife’s children from a previous marriage were Jane and Robertann Laurie. John Elliot ‘Elliot’ (1942/3– ) son of butcher Billy. He was Cornet in 1968, riding his thoroughbred ‘Shish Kebab’. In 1970 he married Liz Telfer and their children are Brian and Jacqueline. The couple is probably the shepherd at Peel called Hutton from whom William Oliver of Langraw collected many Border ballads. Ronald son of Jimmy and nephew of Billy, he attended Wilton and the High School, he worked in the family butcher’s shops on the Howegate and in Bourtree Place. He retired in 2003. In 2013 he married Liz Telfer and their children are Brian and Jacqueline. The couple celebrated their golden wedding anniversary in 2020. William (16th C.) resident of Borthaugh, recorded in 1549 when tenants and servants of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme complained about their farms being burned by a group of Englishmen and Kers in the previous year. He could be the same as ‘Willie’ who is recorded in the last testament of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme, signed in Hawick in 1574; he was left ‘threttie or fourtie pundis, as it sall pleis to his said spous and vther freindis, and he to serve his wyf befoir ony vtheris’. William (d.c.1683) shepherd in ‘Tuishope’ in 1683 when his will was recorder in Peebles Commissariat. This could have been Twislehope. William (b.1794/5) shepherd at Thorlieshope in 1861. He married his housekeeper Jemima Scott in 1863 (formerly written ‘Hutoun’).

hyimly (hyim-lee) adv., arch. homely – ‘Aa yow yins that’s ooreet ... an yirns to sid-doon in ov a hyimnly bit awat threin as the strowen an the catter-battereen – ee sood gan an stop at Ancrum!’ [ECS] (cf. namely).

hyit (hyi, hyit) n., arch. a small piece, whit, iota – ‘No (or noit) a hyid left!’ [GW], ‘Deil a hyit have A!’ [GW] (cf. haet).

Hymers (hI-murz) n. Alexander (17th C.) resident of Easter Burnfoot according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Edward (b.1802/3) born in Hobkirk Parish, he was farmer at Ashtrees in Southdean Parish in the 1860s. He was also at Billerwell in the 1850s. In 1861 he was farming 272 acres at Ashtrees, and employing 7 people. His wife was Margaret, and their children included Helen (who married Robert Cavers) and probably Mary (who married AndrewOrmiston). His name was recorded as ‘Hindmarsh’ in an 1868 directory. William (18th/19th C.) from St. John Lee in Northumberland, he moved to Hobkirk Parish and lived for a while at Limekilnedge and later moved to Jedburgh. His first wife was Hannah and his second wife was Eleanor Plummer, from Southdean Parish. Their children included: Mary (b.1800); Edward (b.1802), the 1st son; Robert (b.1803); Anthony (b.1805); William (b.1808), 4th son; and Jane (b.1810).

Hyndhaughheid (hI-murz) n. Hindhaughhead, former fortified house in Southdean Parish in the upper Jed valley, roughly between Falside and Whiteside. It was situated on the south side of the Jed Water, and there are still clear remains there. The tower was 6.2 m by 4.3 m and had an enclosure to the south-east. There are also signs of a smaller building to the east, and another larger one to the north (presumably part of the farm). To the north-east of the tower are also the remains of an old kiln. It was one of the towers burned by Dacre’s men in late 1513, specifically a force including Nicholas Harrington, Nicholas Ridley, Thomas Middleton and George Skelton. It was valued at 22 shillings in the Exchequer Rolls of 1538 and 1539. Margaret Oliver and her son Gilbert were there in 1541, paying 25s yearly. Dand and Adam Oliver from there were among Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII in 1544 (but may have switched sides at the Battle of Ancrum Moor). This may explain why it was burned (again) in 1544, by a forced led by ‘Mr. Clefforth and Besforth’. David Oliver of ‘Hyndhewche’ is recorded in 1557 and David ‘in Hynchanchheid’ in 1597 was one of the Oliver chiefs. James Oliver was the tenant there in 1669, and at the time of the Hearth Tax (1690s) it was occupied by Lady Shaw (although who she might be is unclear). There were also Kers there in the late 17th century. The farm appears to have been abandoned by the mid-19th century. An area to the west contained rig and furrow, as well as old stock enclosures and sheepfolds, but all have been destroyed by cultivation. Note that Slack’s Tower and Clesslee Tower were quite close by (it is ‘Hyndhalgehede’ in 1513, ‘Hyndhauchheid’ in 1538, ‘Hyndhauchheid’ in 1538, ‘Hyndawgheid’ and ‘Hyndrawghthede’ in 1544, ‘Hynochheid’ in 1538, ‘Hyndhauchheid’ in 1510, and ‘Hindhope’ in 1510 and ‘Hindyhope’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map, but on the wrong side of the Jed, and is ‘Hindhaughhead’ as ‘Hyndheuchheed’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map, but on the wrong side of the Jed, and is ‘Hindhaughhead’ as ‘Hyndheuchheed’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map). Hyndhope (hin-dup, hind-hop) n. farm in the Ettrick valley roughly opposite Singlie, with ‘Old Hyndhope’ further uphill to the south. It was one of the 3 steadings of Redford held by the Crown in the 5th century and feuded to Alexander, Lord Home in 1510. In 1541 Walter Scott in Haining claimed the tenancy, paying £15 13s 4d yearly. 1644 Katherine Kendell, widow of John Young, brought a case before parliament to force Walter Scott of Buccleuch being accused of occupying the lands. In 1541 the farm was valued at 25s, with half tenanted by George Turnbull in Billerwell and half by Adam Rutherford in Grange. This could one of the farms tenanted by John Oliver according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. A supposed encounter there between an old shepherd and some of the fairy folk is recounted in ‘The local historian’s table book’ in 1844. The tenant there in the late 18th and early 19th centuries, James Davidson, was partly the original for Sir Walter Scott’s ‘Dandie Dinmont’. Robert Laidlaw was there in at least 1785–88 and Thomas 1789–91. Andrew Scott was there in 1821. Later the farmer was David Pringle of Torquhan, succeeded in 1889 by Mr. Thornton. The stream forms the extreme south-eastern portion of the Rule valley is Hyndlie Burn. A cairn called the Hare Cairn once stood near the shepherd’s cottage by the Wheel Causeway (note the pronunciation stresses the first syllable; also spelled ‘Hindlie’, it is already ‘Hyndlie’ in 1538, is ‘Hynlie’ in 1539 and 1541 and ‘hyndla’ in 1694; it is ‘Hyndlie’ on Stobie’s 1770 map). Hyndlie (hind-lee) n. farm and hamlet on the ‘Note o the Gate’ road, south of Wolfelee, in the headwaters of the Rule valley. The lands there were an old possession of the Douglases. As part of Jedforest, the farm passed from Archibald Douglas, Earl of Angus, to the Crown in about 1537, with Walter Scott of Buccleuch being accused of occupying the lands. In 1541 the farm was valued at 25s, with half tenanted by George Turnbull in Billerwell and half by Adam Rutherford in Grange. A cairn called the Hare Cairn once stood near the shepherd’s cottage by the Wheel Causeway (note the pronunciation stresses the first syllable; also spelled ‘Hindlie’, it is already ‘Hyndlie’ in 1538, is ‘Hynlie’ in 1539 and 1541 and ‘hyndla’ in 1694; it is ‘Hyndlie’ on Stobie’s 1770 map). Hyndhope (hin-dup, hind-hop) n. farm in the Ettrick valley roughly opposite Singlie, with ‘Old Hyndhope’ further uphill to the south. It was one of the 3 steadings of Redford held by the Crown in the 5th century and feuded to Alexander, Lord Home in 1510. In 1541 Walter Scott in Haining claimed the tenancy, paying £15 13s 4d yearly. 1644 Katherine Kendell, widow of John Young, brought a case before parliament to force Walter Scott of Huntly to eject him from the lands and provide her with the duties of this farm. Several men from there were declared rebels in 1619 for cutting wood on Scott of Satchells lands at Dodhead. It became the property of Rev. Alexander Cunningham about the 1660s, and was sold to James Mercer of Scotsbank around the 1720s. Thomas Elliot farmed there in the mid-19th century and Gideon Scott in the 1860s (also spelled ‘Hindhope’, it is ‘Hyndhop’ in 1510 and ‘Hindhop’ in 1542; it is marked ‘Hyndelhoop’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map, along with the burn, ‘Hyndhoope B.’ and is ‘Hindehope’ on the 1718 Buccleuch survey; there is another farm of the same name in Oxnam Parish). Hyndhope (hin-dup, hind-hop) n. former lands in the Barony of Plenderleith, Oxnam Parish. They belonged to Andrew of Rule, passing through his 4 co-heiresses to Andrew Ker of Altonburn in 1545/5. The Davidsos were tenant farmers here in the 18th and 19th centuries including James, ‘Dandie Dinmont’. There were Halls there in the 18th century. William Oliver was farmer there in the early 19th century and Thomas Elliot later in the 19th century (easily confused with the farm of the same name in the Ettrick valley; written ‘Hindhope’ on modern maps). Hyndhope (hin-dup, hind-hop) n. farm in the Ettrick valley roughly opposite Singlie, with ‘Old Hyndhope’ further uphill to the south. It was one of the 3 steadings of Redford held by the Crown in the 5th century and feuded to Alexander, Lord Home in 1510. idle (i-dul) adj., arch. at a loss for work, having little to do – ‘Oo’ve naething adae the day – oo’re eidl (idle) for woaf at the mill’ [ECS].

-ie (ee) suffix usually denoting a diminutive form, sometimes used familiarly or affectionately, also used with adjectives to indicate a strong quality, or forming a noun from an adjective (‘-y’ is more common in standard English, and is also in use, although less common).

Ilderton (il-dur-tin) n. Edward (14th/15th C.) English Keeper of Jedburgh Castle about 1400. He was succeeded by his son Edward.

ile (i, i-ul) n., arch. an aisle, wing of a church – ‘Given to Thos. Lunn for an letter taking to Jedburgh concerning the yle’ [PR] (also spelled ‘yle’ and variants; see also aisle).

I Like Auld Hawick (I-lık-awld-hlk) n. song written by Frank Hogg with music by Mrs. Euphemia Dumbreck, being one of the few Hawick songs well suited to the female voice. The words were written in 1867 for the Hawick Literary Society magazine. The music was written probably around 1876, perhaps in response to a request in the Hawick Express in 1875 when reprinting the words. It is the only one of the older Hawick songs with the tune (or words) written by a woman. The song was probably first performed in public at a farwell dinner by Hogg himself in 1879, and first sung at the Colour Bussing by R. Paterson in 1887. It is the only poetical work of Hogg’s that is known. The full poem contained 7 verses, but today only the first, second and last verses are usually sung. The tune was rearranged by Adam Grant around 1930, with the publication dedicated to ex-Provost James Renwick.

I Like Auld Hawick the Best (I-lık-awld-hlk-thu-best) n. song with words and music by Tom Ker, arranged by Adam Grant (although originally credited to ‘M. Rosenberg’). Grant considered this to be his best musical arrangement of a Hawick song. It was first sung at the 1900 Colour Bussing by Robert T. Paterson and at 23 other Colour Bussings before WWII. It has a different chorus for each verse, often confusing the audience. The words may have been influenced by Jeffrey’s ‘Mary of Argyle’. Ker also wrote a second version of this song, which is never sung. For the last decades of the 20th century and the first decade of the 21st this was regularly performed by Viv Sharp.

the Ill Raid (thu-il-rād) n. retaliatory raid of August 1513 in which Lord Alexander Home led thousands of men into England. Slowed by their booty, they were ambushed at Milfield Plain (north of Wooler) by a much smaller force of Sir William Bulmer. Several hundred Scots were killed or captured in this incident, which also led to the battle at Flodden.

Ill Rob (il-rōb) n. nickname for Robert Elliot of Ramsiegill (presumably this is ‘ill’ in the sense of harmful or vicious).

ill-scrapit (il-skrā-pee', -pi') adj., arch. unrefined, particularly in the phrase ‘ill-scrapit tongue’ meaning lacking in courtesy, foulmouthed – ‘...and woe betide those who offended her. They got to run the gauntlet of her ill-scrapit tongue whenever she met them’ [RJT].

the Ill Week (thu-il-week) n. period immediately after the death of Elizabeth I of England in 1603, when there was much looting and burning throughout the Borders. It is also sometimes referred to as the ‘Busy Week’. There was a belief that until the new monarch was proclaimed, the rule of law was suspended, and hence families of the Border (particularly the west marches) determined to settle old scores. Raids were of such an intensity for several days that the period was given its name. There were serious reprisals by King James afterwards, particularly against the Grahams, but also Armstrongs, Croziers, Elliots, Irvings, etc.

ill-wull (il-wul) v., arch. to hate, wish evil upon – ‘A that illwull me whuspir thee’[i]gther agayne me . . . ’ [HSR], to envy – ‘...the flichterin burdies daibbelt an dookeet; an A fair ill-wulled thum o ther plowtreen and ther swattereen’ [ECS], n., arch. envy.

ill-wusher (il-wu-shur) n., arch. term applied in the 18th and 19th centuries to someone suspected of having supernatural powers, particularly the ability to lay curses – ‘...generally go under the softer, though still suspicious, character of being uncannie or ill wishers’ [EM1820].

im (im) v. am, used for emphasis – ‘im A gaun is weel?’, ‘ee might no be, bit A im’, ‘Hev a great Common Ridin. A’ gaun ti. A already im’ [IWL], ‘As a local historian the longer A live the mair conscious A im o how little A ken’ [IWL] (note also em and um, as well as occasionally the English ‘am’).

the Image Garden (thu-i-meej-går-din) n. former name for a private school and its gardens. It was situated in the Langlands/Sunnyhill area, and can be seen on the 1846 painting of the Common Riding Races. It may have been the same building that was also known as ‘Wilton Cottage’. The school was run by Agnes, daughter of Wilton Schoolmaster James Turnbull and her mother, Margaret, and was presumably a school for girls. The name came from the statuettes and carvings in the school grounds. The land there may have previously been owned by ‘Auld Cash’, and then his assistant Francis Ballantyne – ‘The ‘Image Garden’ wi’ some parks, Were soon our decent, honest Clerk’s’ [RDW], ‘Ladylaw, the F.C. Manse and the Image Garden . . . ’ [V&M].

impurity (im-pew-ri-ce) n. former euphemism for the sin of fornication. Until well into the 18th century ferreting out fornicators was the business of the Kirk Session, who investigated all pieces of parish gossip. Offenders were made to stand on the 'pillar' or 'stool of repentance', often for three Sundays in a row, sometimes longer. Wealthier parishioners could escape this public exhibition by paying a hefty fine.

Imrie (im-ree) n. Carswell educated at Hawick High School, he worked for Welch's accountants. He was Cornet in 1966, the only one to be kirked at Burnfoot Church. He acted as Secretary of both the Mostroopers' Club and Ex-Cornets and Ex-Acting Fathers Association for 10 years.

[WNK], '... e.g., small quantities of hay which have fallen from the ricks when these have been moved or 'in'd' [ECS] (cf. i; in older documents someone described as 'in' a place, as opposed to 'of' or 'at', usually meant they were a tenant).

-in (in) suffix present participial ending, ubiquitous for verbs in Scots generally, a particular local use involved changing word order - 'She hed a bairn cairryin (i.e., She was carrying a baby). The dog hed a blind man leedin be a cheen (i.e. the dog was doing the leading)' [ECS] (sometimes written 'in', although the 'g' is actually missing entirely, rather than neglected; note that -een was formerly used for participial noun form, i.e. 'hei was weshin claes' versus 'she was daein the wesheen').

Ina (i-nu) n. familiar short form for female Christian names where the first part is a male name, e.g. Georgina, Williamina or Christina.

the Inauguration Cup (thu-i-naw-gew-rish-kup) n. trophy for the Hound Trail, first run at the 1904 Common Riding and discontinued after 1905. However, the event was revived for 6.30 a.m. on Common Riding Saturday in 2014.

incontinent (in-kon-ti-nen’t) adv., arch. immediately, without delay – ‘…to the said Walter incontinent after that the sickirnes be fund for payment of the said sowme …’ [SB1527].

incorporation (in-kor-pu-rā-shin) n. an incorporated body, specifically one of the trades guilds given a ‘Seal of Cause’ by the Town Council. Their purpose was to regulate trade within the town, improving standards, imposing fines, etc. They had Burgess rights and duties and only Burgesses were allowed to be members of the trades from 1694. Each Trade had specific seats assigned to them in the gallery of St. Mary’s Kirk. They were also officially recognised by the Council (and each appointed 2 councillors from 1739), having jurisdiction over their members and all matters relating to that trade within the Burgh.

Their officials were called quartermasters or deacons of trade, and in 1749 it was decided that the quartermasters should be appointed before Michaelmas each year. In 1781 it was fixed by a ruling from the Court of Session that each of the 7 trades would elect 2 quartermasters on the Thursday before the election of the Bailies in October, these men to sit on the Council for the next year, with no one being allowed to serve for more than 2 years successively (and each incorporation being responsible for electing a substitute in the event of the death of a quartermaster). By about 1810 there were apparently only about 60 members in total of the town’s incorporations. They also had a monopoly on their trade within the Burgh until about 1846. Members of the trades remained on the Council until it was reorganised in 1861, although by then the organisations were already on the wane. The 7 incorporations in Hawick were the weavers, shoemakers (or cordiners), skinner (and glovers), hammermen, fleshers, tailors and bakers (or baxters). At one point the shoemakers and cordiners may have been separate incorporations, and the status of the merchants is unclear (since they are referred to as an ‘Incorporation’ in 1687). It is said that many of the records of the incorporations were carried off in the flood of 1767; however, some minute books of the hammermen, weavers and tailors are preserved in the Museum – ‘There presently are, and shall henceforth continue, seven Incorporations within the said burgh, viz., Weavers, Tailors, Hammermen, Skinners, Fleshers, Shoemakers, and Baxters’ [RW], ‘…the two present bayleys of the Burgh of Hawick for themselves and in name and behalfe of the towe counsell and incorporatione thereof …’ [BR1701].

indent (in-den’t) v., arch. to enter into a contract, record by an indenture – ‘…and lies indented of sick condicions quhike in noe wise we were myndit to break …’ [CBP1595].

the Independent Kirk (thu-in-dee-pen-din’-kirk) n. evangelical church that was founded in 1798 after visits to the town by preachers James and Robert Haldane, John Aikman and Rowland Hill. The efforts were continued later by Mr. Paton (later of St. Andrews) and Mr. Arthur (later of Dalkeith). Among the original members were William Thorburn, William Laidlaw, Peter Taylor, Robert Leithead, Mr. Johnstone and David

Dick. They originally met in a barn in the Backbraes and built the Tabernacle and nearby manse on the Kirkwynd in 1805 (with assistance provided by the Haldane brothers). Charles Gray was brought to Hawick as the first and only permanent minister. The congregation rose to about 150, which was the capacity of the Tabernacle. However, it had many difficulties and disappeared entirely in 1813, although it effectively led to the Congregational and Baptist Kirks in Hawick. Charles Gray accepted Baptist principles (like his patrons the Haldane brothers), leading to most of his congregation abandoning him. He subsequently left Hawick, since the number of Baptists was too small to support him. However, some carried on, to form the Hawick Baptist Church later, while others continued to worship as Independents, later becoming the Congregational Kirk. The Independent Kirk was still recorded in Pigot’s 1837 directory, but with no minister listed. In 1839 it was described that there were only 18 members, who met in a school-room. In Slater’s 1852 directory Rev. William Munro is listed for the Independent Chapel on Melgund Place, separate from the Congregational Chapel on O’Connell Street.

indiction (in-dik-shn) n., arch. a 15 year cycle used as a way of reckoning the year in medieval times, also used to refer to the specific year within the cycle – ‘...the said yeir, month, day, hour, and place that is, Indiction and Pape before specifyt’ [JW1558] (still recorded in Hawick in a sasine of 1558).

Alexander (b.c.1850). He also had daughters Isabella (b.c.1846) and aged 50. They are buried in Ettleton Cemetery. His son Alexander died in St. Boswell’s in 1902, 1800 acres of moor, with 3 labourers on the farm. Blackburn in 1851, farming 11 arable acres and in Blackburn, son of James. He is recorded at Alexander is hard to read). James Hume and John Elder (although the entry was baptised in Hawick in 1791, with witnesses Margaret McLaren; Agnes Brydon (b.1773); Janet (b.1767), who married Thomas Murray; William (b.1769), who married Elizabeth Ballantyne; Alexander (b.1771), who married Margaret McLaren; Agnes Brydon (b.1773); and John (b.1781), who married Isabella Ballantyne. He is buried at Ettleton, next to ‘Inglis’ families of Newcastleston. James (b.1762), who took over as tenant of Blackburn; Elizabeth (b.1765), who married Archibald Scott; Janet (b.1767), who married Thomas Murray; William (b.1769), who married Elizabeth Ballantyne; Alexander (b.1771), who married Margaret McLaren; Agnes Brydon (b.1773); and John (b.1781), who married Isabella Ballantyne. He is buried at Ettleton, next to ‘Inglis’ families of Newcastleston. James (b.1760/1–1845) brother of W.S.A. and George. He had a picture-framing business, and also became a house decorator, based at 10 High Street and then Burlington House, North Bridge Street. His brother William (W.S.A.) also worked for the business. George Scott (1874–1952) son of Alexander and Agnes Scott. He was brother of Alexander and W.S.A. After studying at the Royal College of Art in London and became a painter and lithographer in Leicester. He was Principal of the Leicester College of Art. He had works exhibited at the Royal Academy and the Royal Scottish Academy. He painted a view of Haggishaa, as well as ‘Goldielands and the Teviot from Overhall’, ‘Scotch Fir near Wilton Dean’ and ‘Sunrise near Scarborough’, which are in the Museum. J. (18th/19th C.) resident of Bowanhill in 1821 when he subscribed to William Scott’s ‘ Beauties of the Border’. James (17th C.) resident of Cavers who was listed in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. James (1705–94) born in Ewesdale, he was tenant farmer in Millholm in Castleton Parish. When the Duke of Buccleuch took over Millholm he was moved to be tenant of Blackburn. He married Janet Anderson, who died in 1760, aged 50. He secondly married Agnes Brydon, who died in 1807, aged 71. Their children included: James (b.1762), who took over as tenant of Blackburn; Elizabeth (b.1765), who married Archibald Scott; Janet (b.1767), who married Thomas Murray; William (b.1769), who married Elizabeth Ballantyne; Alexander (b.1771), who married Margaret McLaren; Agnes Brydon (b.1773); and John (b.1781), who married Isabella Ballantyne. He is buried at Ettleton, next to ‘Inglis’ families of Newcastleston. James (18th/19th C.) carrier, operating between Hawick and Berwick, according to Pigot’s 1825 directory. James (1760/1–1845) farmer at Blackburn, to the north-west of Newcastleston. He is recorded there on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls and still there in 1841. He married Mary Elliot, who died in 1816, aged 55. He secondly married Isabella (or ‘Bella’) Oliver, who died in 1872, aged 87. They are buried in Ettleton Cemetery, along with 4 of his children, who died in infancy or were stillborn. His son Alexander (b.1822/3) succeeded as farmer at Blackburn, and he also had a daughter Janet (b.c.1827). John (18th/19th C.) baker on the Howegate, recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. His unnamed child died in 1808. Mrs. S.A. local artist who made a coloured sketch of a print by James Dalgleish, ‘High Street Hawick 1839’. William (b.1815/6) born in Lyne Parish, Peeblesshire, he was a shepherd. In 1841 he was at Foulage, Peeblesshire, but in 1851 and 1861 was shepherd at Whaupshaw in the Borthwick valley. Later he may have been shepherd at Priestsquhair. His wife was Agnes Fleming, from Drumelzier. Their children included: James (b.1842); Thomas (b.c.1844); Catherine (b.c.1847); Christian (b.c.1839); Agnes (b.c.1856), who probably married William Bell, who farmed at Langraw; and Jane (b.c.1858).

William Scott Andison ‘W.S.A.’ (c.1880–c.1950) local artist, brother of Alexander and George. His parents were Alexander and Agnes Scott. His paintings are usually signed ‘W.S.A.I.’ or sometimes ‘W.I.’ He was an apprentice with Francis Scott, painter and decorator at 26 High Street, later moving to work in his brother Alex’s business. Tom Scott was a major influence on him as a young artist, and one can see similarities in their watercolour styles. He painted many scenes of long gone parts of Hawick, including a picture of the ‘Auld Mid Raw’, about 1880, which is in the Museum, inside of which was found a ‘secret’ painting of Needle Street. He made a well-known sketch of St. Mary’s from the Kirkstyle in 1909 and the Museum also has ‘The End of the Wood’. He had 23 paintings exhibited at the Royal Scottish Academy. He also worked as a photographer, based on the High Street with his brother Alex and then at Burlington House, 25 North Bridge Street. A bachelor all his days, he lived at 9 Lothian Street, and died at a hospital in Melrose (see also Inglis).

Ingleside (ing-gul-sid) n. villa built on Buccleuch Road around 1903 for Robert L. Mactaggart, designed by J.P. Alison. It is a grade C listed building.

Inglis (ing-ulz -gulz) n. Adam (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Thorbrand and their children included John (b.1642), Janet (b.1644), William (b.1646) and Janet (again, b.1649). His surname is recorded as ‘Inglish’. Adam (17th C.) listed among the deficient of Hassendean Parish in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He was at Wester Grundistone, ‘Adam Inglish there out of the shire’. He could be the Adam ‘in huntla’ (presumably Huntlaw), married to Margaret Minto, whose daughter Margaret was baptised in Roberton Parish in 1682, with witnesses Walter Knox and Thomas Wilkie.

Alexander (15th C.) from the Manor family, he must have still held some lands near Branxholme. In 1461 the lands of ‘Kirktone and Toftis’ in the Lordship of Branxholme were confirmed to his daughter and heir Katherine, wife of ‘Arnou Gourlau’. He may be the same Alexander ‘de Tarvate’ who witnessed a document for the Douglases in 1457 and who witnessed a charter in 1475/6.

Alexander (15th C.) proposed as Archdeacon of Teviotdale in 1471, after the resignation of Patrick Hume. However, he appears not to have taken up the office. It is possible he is the same Alexander who became Dean of Dunkeld in 1477 and Archdeacon of St. Andrews in 1480.

Alexander (15th C.) son and heir of Alexander of West Tarvet. He witnessed the charter of Over Newhall, granted by David Lindsay of the Byres to James Scott of Kirkurd in 1484. In 1487/8 he had a charter for Tarvet and in 1489 had a charter for other lands in Fife, along with his wife Janet Durham. Probably the same Alexander of Tarvet is also recorded as witness to a charter in 1508 and had a grant of lands in 1513.

Alexander (18th C.) recorded in 1791 when his son Alexander was baptised in Hawick. The entry is hard to read, but his wife may have been Margaret Elder, with John Elder as one of the witnesses. Alexander (1877–1964) nephew of John, to whom he was apprenticed. He then became articled to J.P. Alison, rising to an assistant there in 1896. He moved briefly to a firm in Edinburgh, but returned in 1901 when his uncle died and he inherited the joinery business. He developed an ‘Arts & Crafts’ design style. He worked on several major projects as J.P. Alison’s assistant, including the Con Club, Liberal Club and Stirches House. He also designed the Fever Hospital at Burnfoot (1902), cottages on the Cavers estate, the Stewart Memorial in St. Andrew’s Kirk, additions to the Cottage Hospital and the Golf Clubrooms, Newcastleton Hospital (c.1905), Hawick Slaughterhouse (1907), additions to Anderson Sanitorium, Turnbull’s Dyeworks office block (1911), Hawick Swimming Pool (1912) and alterations to Woñedee House (1913). He established a building construction course in Hawick, which was taken over by the School Board. In 1950 he became partner with his assistant Charles F.J. Turnbull. He wrote an article for the Transactions on the old Southdean Kirk. He married Jane Miller Cooper. Andrew (b.1806/7) born in Southdean Parish, he was a joiner at Deanbrae Cottages in Cavers Parish. He married Jane Nichol and their children included: John; James;
Andrew; and Thomas. William, who was also a joiner at Deanbrae, was probably his brother. His firm may be the A. Inglis & Son who were responsible for joinery at Lyle & Scott’s factory in 1874/5. Andrew (19th/20th C.) resident of Nether Tofts. In 1906 he contributed to the fund for the renovation of Kirkton Kirk. Archibald (17th C.) son of Richard, he succeeded his father as minister of Douglas in 1654 and moved to Moffat in 1660. He was commissioned by the Synod of Dumfries to that of Lothian and Tweeddale regarding union. He was also named as a minister who refused to conform to Episcopacy in 1662, although there is no evidence to support this, since he was clearly an Episcopalian minister afterwards. About 1663 he moved to Westerkirk, was translated to Lochmaben in 1667 and then became minister at Ashkirk in 1675. It is unclear whether he served Ashkirk in the period 1679–85, when the previous Presbyterian minister, Robert Cunningham was reinstated. In any case he was moved to the Parsonage of Glasgow in 1685. He became Rector of Glasgow University in 1686, but had to flee at the Revolution in 1689. In 1694 he became Rector of Killybegs and Raphoe in Donegal, Ireland. David (18th/19th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. In 1789 he married Marion Stoddart (or possibly Stavert). Their children (baptised in Yarrow Parish) included: James (b.1790); Margaret (b.1792); and Agnes (b.1795). Francis (b.1804/5–83) son of William and Elizabeth Ballantyne. He was a grocer in Newcastle-on, listed in 1837 and 1852. In the 1851 census he is recorded as a labourer, at about 9 North Hermitage Street. His wife was Janet Scott and their children included: William; Jane (b.1830), who married Robert Lunn; Elisa; Andrew; and Archibald. George (15th C.) appointed one of the procurators for Thomas Armstrong of Mangerton in 1482 when he resigned Mangerton to his superior in order for these lands to pass to David Scott of Branholme. His name is recorded as ‘Georgium Inglis’. Harold ‘Harry’ (17th C.) servant of Sir Robert Scott of Thirlestane. In 1623 he compile an inventory of the titles and deeds in the Thirlestane charter chest. James (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Jean Laidlaw and their children included Janet (b.1694). The witnesses were John Cant and James Brown. James (17th C.) son of James of East Craigie and Isobel Heriot. He was Chamberlain to the Earl of Minto, recorded in a bond of 1673. James (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Woodburn in 1731 when his daughter Helen was baptised. He is probably the James who married Helen Beattie in Roberton in 1730. James (1723–1806) schoolmaster in Hawick, son of Walter and Margaret Wilson, he was born in Hawick. He was father of Town Clerk James, local prankster ‘Wat’ and Hawick’s postmistress, Joanna. He was Hawick Parish Schoolmaster for a long period. He was master during the flood of 1677, when the school on Slitrig Bank was washed away. In fact he was teacher at ‘the English Schuil’ from 1756 until his death, a period of about 50 years. Apparently before his death and in several years following, his ex-pupils would meet for dinner at the Cross Keys Inn to celebrate his birthday. In 1758 he was paid 3 shillings for teaching a poor boy from Cavers Parish. Complaints about his low salary were responded to with an increase in 1768. He is recorded as serving as postmaster in 1772 and also in 1789, so he must have held this position for at least that period. He also served as Session Clerk, Precentor and Reader for the Parish, as well as Heritor’s Clerk. He was presumably the man who wrote the register of baptisms etc. In 1768 he witnessed a baptism for writer (and Town Clerk) John Gledstains (who was his brother-in-law), when he is recorded as ‘English Schoolmaster’; in the same year Gledstains and surgeon James Wilson witnessed a baptism for him, and in 1775 he and James Wilson witnessed a baptism for John Gledstains. In 1767 he witnessed a baptism for Robert Balmer. He was ‘Postmr’ in 1784 when he witnessed a baptism for what appears to be a Hume, and separately (on the same page) ‘Session Clerk’ when he witnessed a baptism for miller John Scott. He was witness for baptisms of 2 children of John Goodfellow and Janet Deans in 1784 and 1786 and for William Jackson and Jamet Miller in 1788 and 1791. He was recorded (by himself!) as Postmaster in 1789 when he witnessed a baptism for what appears to be a Hume, and separately (on the same page) ‘Session Clerk’ when he witnessed a baptism for miller John Scott. He was witness for baptisms of 2 children of John Goodfellow and Janet Deans in 1784 and 1786 and for William Jackson and Jamet Miller in 1788 and 1791. He was recorded (by himself!) as Postmaster in 1789 when he witnessed a baptism for shoemaker Peter Wilson and was probably the Postmaster who witnessed a baptism for Town Clerk James (his son) in 1792. He married Joan (or Joanna) Gledstains in 1757 and she died in 1795. He may be the James from Hawick recorded in 3 letters to a Selkirk lawyer in 1791. Their children included: James (b.1757); James (again, b.1759), Town Clerk; Elizabeth (b.1760); Walter (b.1762); Joanna (b.1766), postmistress; Agnes (b.1768); and John (b.1770), who was a baker. James (1759–c.1820s) son of James and Joanna Gledstains, he was nephew of Town Clerk John Gledstains and was Town Clerk himself 1790–1810. He subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’

In 1835–40 and then labourer in 1841; he may be the James recorded as grocer in Newcastleton in Pigot’s 1837 directory, along with Francis who was also a grocer. James (18th/19th C.) resident of London who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He probably had a local connection and could have been related to Thomas, who also subscribed. James (1802/3–95) mason in Newcastleton, son of John and Isobel Ballantyne. In 1841 he was living at 5 South Hermitage Street and in 1851 and 1861 was a ‘Stone Dyke Builder’ on South Hermitage Street. In 1825 he married Isobel (d.1892), daughter of Adam Glendinning. Their children included Elizabeth (1825–1908); Isabella (b.1827); Caroline (b.1829); John (b.1831); Margaret (1833–1921), who married John Scott; Adam (b.1835); Francis (1837–1922); William (b.1839); Alexander (Sansy, 1841–1917); Thomas (1843–74), who died in East India; Charlotte (b.1845); Robert (1847–1913); and James (b.1851), who married Isabel Edgar. They are buried in Ettleton. James (b.1816/7) from Ancrum, he was a joiner in Hawick. In 1851 he was living on the Back Row. In 1861 he was listed as a journeyman cabinet-maker at Myrstlawgreen. His wife was Mary and their children included Elizabeth, John, Robert, James T. and Andrew. James (b.c.1820) spinner, living at the Crescent in Hawick. He was listed in 1841 among heads of households for Wilton Kirk. He was probably eldest son of James and Margaret Thorburn. James (19th C.) miller at Spittal-on-Rule in the 1860s. James (1842–88) son of James, who was shepherd at Whaupshaw up the Borthwick. He worked as a shepherd and later as a cattle dealer, dairymen and butcher. In 1868 in Teviothead Parish he married Eliza (b.1847), daughter of shepherd James Elliot and Mary Nichol. Their children were: Mary Jane (b.1869); William (b.1870); Agnes (b.1873); James (b.1876); John (b.1878); and Walter (b.1880). He died in Hawick. Joanna ‘Miss Inglis’ (b.1766) postmistress until 1809, sister of ‘Wat’ and James (since she was never referred to as her first name, she could have been a different child of James and Joanna Gledstains). She apparently succeeded in the position from a letter carrier named Tinlin who could neither read nor write. John of Manor (15th C.) son of Sir William of Manor. He had a charter confirming him in his father’s lands of Manor from the superior Archibald, Earl of Douglas. In 1420 he exchanged half of Branxholme with Sir Robert Scott of Murdostoun, as confirmed in a ‘letter of transumpt’ in 1431. Thus... began the long association of the Scotts of Buccleuch with Branxholme and the area immediately to the south of Hawick. In 1431 he was also witness to the document transferring the lands of Heap from James Langlands of that Ilk to Walter Scott of Buccleuch. His wife was Janet. He was succeeded by his son Thomas, to whom he and his wife resigned their lands of Branxholme etc. in 1435. Sometime before this (the charter is undated) he granted the lands of ‘Kyrktoune and Toftis’ in the Barony of Hawick to his uncle Sir Simon, this being witnessed by his brother Robert, Sir Thomas, Keeper of Castle Douglas and William of Manorhead (surely near relatives), as well as Robert Scott of Muthockstone and ‘James of Ra’, Burgess of Selkirk. John (15th C.) Rector of Southdean recorded in 1471 as witness to a charter granted by Archibald Douglas, Earl of Angus, to Robert Graham of Fintree. He is listed as ‘D. Joh. Inglis rectore de Soudone’. Another John was also listed as a witness, and so may have been related. John ‘Johnnie’ or ‘Step Stately’ (16th/17th C.) Hawick man recorded in 1612 along with several others for charging too high an interested on loaned money. His name is missing from the original list, but included as ‘Johnne Ings, callit Step Staftlie’ in the list of those found guilty. He appeared to answer the charge, and hence presumably paid a fine and was released. Rev. John (d.1743) minister of Southdean. He was licensed by Selkirk Presbytery in 1711 and ordained at Southdean in 1718. He preached at least once in Hawick, in 1721. In 1736 John Oliver became his assistant. When he died (unmarried) he left a library of 119 volumes to his successors. John (18th C.) resident at Broadlee when his son John was baptised in Robertson Parish in 1743. This son could be the John listed at Borthwickbrae in the 1770s. Other children of his may have been: Bessie (b.1745); James (b.1748); William (b.1750); and possibly Margaret (b.1755), who may have married John Davidson. He is probably the John (1704/5–1780) in ‘Elbridg’ (most likely Eilrig) who is buried in Borthwick Waas along with his children Elizabeth (1745/6–75) and James (1747/8–80). John (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Borthwickbrae Burnfoot in 1771 and Borthwickbrae in 1773. His children included: John (b.1771); Elizabeth (b.1773), who may be the ‘Lilias’ who married George Scott of Wilton in 1789; Margaret (b.1776); and Robert (b.1779). He could be the John, son of John, born at Broadlee in 1743. John (1770–1832) son of teacher James, he was a baker in Hawick. His death in Hawick is recorded in 1832. John (b.c.1775) wright at Deanbrae. He was living at Deanbrae Bar in 1841. His wife was Elspeth and their children included in William, James and Thomas. He may be the resident of Cavers who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. John (1797/8–1861) descended from the Walter Gledstains who was Town Clerk of Hawick. He worked as a framework knitter in Hawick. In 1838 he married Mary Blakie, and she died in 1861 aged 62. He was father of John the local writer and museum curator. He was recorded as a handloom weaver on the Loan in 1841 and 1851. In 1861 he was a ‘Chelsea Pensioner’ and frameworker at 2 Loan. His children were: Joan, who married Robert Whalley in Lancashire and emigrated to Australia; John (1838–1928); and Martha (or ‘Matty’, b.c.1840). He could be the John from Hawick who subscribed to William Scott’s ‘ Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. John (b.1805/6) farmer at 2 Loan. He was probably son of William. In 1861 he was farmer there and living with his wife Helen, children Beatrice and William, and sister Agnes. John (b.1829/30) carter at 78 High Street. He was recorded as ‘Farmer of 10 acres & Carter’ there in 1861, living with his mother Jessie (from Crailing) and his cousin James Taylor. John (19th C.) member of the committee for Hawick Baptist Church around 1880. John (1838–1928) writer of the words for songs ‘The Banner Blue’ and ‘Hawick Among the Hills’, as well as ‘Bonny Brieryhill’ and many other poems contained in the book ‘The Borderland and other poems’ (1879 and 1907). Born in Hawick (in the ‘Hole in the Waa’ on Drumlanrig Square), he was son of John (a ‘woollen journeyman’, descended from the Gledstains of Cocklaw) and Mary Blakie. It is said that his 2 grandfathers were schoolmaster in Hawick and the last Coble Pool ferryman (although other information suggests they were baker John Inglis and Peter, not Hector Bleakie, so perhaps these were his great-grandfathers). He worked in the tweed industry for Wilson & Armstrong. In 1872 he moved to Guelph, Ontario with his young family, and there worked for a hosiery... firm, which was co-owned by David McCrae (father of poet John McCrae, famous for the WWI poem ‘In Flanders Field’); he wrote several poems while living in Guelph. However, after only 2 years (apparently after suffering a bereavement) the family returned to Hawick and he worked as foreman for Wilson & Glenny. His poem ‘Borderland’ was first published in Guelph in 1875. After retiring he became curator of the Museum, setting out the exhibits after the move from the Buccleuch Memorial to Wilton Lodge, and continuing for the rest of his life. He was a Volunteer, where he was known as a good marksman, was a Director of the Hawick Working Men’s Building & Investment Co., and also involved with the Border Bards’ Association and the Foresters. He was an elder of Wilton Church and a lifelong abstainer. He married Ellen (or Helen) D. Rodger, who died in 1907, aged 65. They had 6 children: John (1864–1935), who married Isabella Turnbull; Andrew, who was a trooper with the Imperial Yeomanry, killed at Bethlehem, South Africa in 1900; Robert (1868–1933); William; Mary Ellen (1882–1971), who married George Storie; and Elizabeth, who died in infancy in Canada in 1872. He died in his 91st year at Wilton Lodge and is buried in Wellogate Cemetery. His photograph is in the Museum. John (1864–1935) eldest son of John the poet. He married Isabella Turnbull and their children were John, Maggie, William and Douglas Rodger (1899–1989). John (20th C.) Superintendent of Wilton Lodge Park. He was in charge when Hawick won the Britain in Bloom award in 1992. Katherine (15th C.) daughter and heir of Alexander. She married ‘Arnou’ Gourlay. In 1461 she inherited the lands of ‘Kirktoone and Toftis’ in the Lordship of Brunxholme according to a sasine given by Walter Scott of Brunxholme. Lillias (18th C.) chambermaid at Borthwickbrae in 1785, when she was working for John Elliot. She married George Scott in Robertson Parish in 1789. She was ‘Lillie’ in 1790 when their son Robert was baptised in Wilton and ‘Lillies Englis’ in 1793 when their daughter Sophia was baptised (perhaps named after the daughter of Lord Napier, who was born at Wilton Lodge in 1791). She was probably a maid at Wilton Lodge in the 1790s, working for Lady Napier. In 1799 she went to Yair House to attend Lady Pringle, and stayed there to have her own children, 5 days after Charlotte Pringle was born at Yair. These were the twins, named Francis Napier Scott (after Lord Napier) and Alexander Pringle Scott (after the Laird of Whytbank and Yair); on the baptism record her name appears as ‘Elanor’. She may be the same woman as ‘Elizabeth’ who was baptised in Robertson Parish in 1773, daughter of John Inglis. Marion (17th C.) recorded in the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694 among those ‘Payed but not listed in Hauick Toun’. Mrs. ?? (18th C.) recorded in the description of the flood of 1767, when 2 houses to the east of hers were swept away, this being somewhere near Towerdykeside. She may have kept an inn or similar. Patrick (15th C.) part of a ‘retour of inquest’ held in Hawick in 1424 to decide on the inheritance of part of the Barony of Hownam. Most of the other men were quite local. He was ‘Patricium Inglise’ in 1427 on the ‘retour’ for the Barony of Hawick. Robert (17th C.) maltman in Hawick. In about 1651 he was judged by the Bailies to pay ‘£30 to the town’s use, because he was not burdened with quartering the English army in February and March last’. Robert (17th/18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Redfordgreen in 1723 and Henwoodie in 1728. He married Bessie Thomson in Robertson in 1727 and their children Henry (b.1728). Francis (b.1723) may also have been his child. Robert (19th C.) tenant farmer at Wolfehopelee. He married Joan, daughter of William Elliot, who was shepherd at Wauchope. Sir Simon (15th C.) uncle of John of Manor and Brunxholme, and hence probably brother of Sir William. He was granted the lands of ‘Kyrktoune and Toftis’ in the Barony of Hawick by his nephew John; the charter is undated, but must have been before John resigned the lands to his son Thomas in 1435. Other witnesses include Sir Thomas, Keeper and Bailie of Castle Douglas, and William of Manorhead, Laird of Langholm, as well as Robert Scott of Murthochstone. Simon (15th C.) recorded as ‘dominus Symoni Ynglis’ in the will of Sir David Scott of Brunxholme, when he was bequeathed 40 shillings. He was probably a minister of one of the local churches. Thomas of Manor (15th C.) son of John of Brunxholme and Murdostoum. He had a charter of the lands of ‘Brankishelme, Goldilandis, Quitlaw, Quitrig, Todschawhillis, Harwood and Kirkton tofts’ given by the Earl of Douglas in 1435 (having been resigned by his father and mother). In 1446 he exchanged the second half of Brunxholme and other lands in the Barony of Hawick (Todshawhill, Todshawhaugh, Goldielands, Whitlaw and Whitrig) for lands in Lanarkshire (Murdostoum and Hartwood) with Sir Walter Scott, thereby effectively ending the local influence of the Inglis family; in this charter he is recorded as ‘Thomas Ingelis de Mennar, dominus de Brankishame’. In 1449 he was ‘Thoma Ynglis de Murthowstoun’ when he witnessed the charter of renunciation of Lochurd and Kirkurd by Walter Scott of Buccleuch. He was married twice, his son William succeeding to Murdostoun, while John was given the lands of Manorhead. As well as John, sons with his second wife, Christian, included Oswald and Gavin. Thomas (15th/16th C.) perhaps a descendant of Thomas of Branxholme. In 1530, with his permission, his wife Christian sold her lands of Philhope to William Brydon, Vicar of Auld Roxburgh. James Scott, Burgess of Selkirk, acted as her procurator and the ‘instruments’ were sought at the house of Janet Porteous wife of another Brydon in Selkirk. Thomas (17th C.) surgeon-apothecary in Kelso. In 1691 he and his wife Margaret Scott had a bond with Gilbert Elliott of Stonedge for the lands of Hobsburn. This was continued in a document on 1693, but discharged in 1694 when payment was made by Henry Elliot of Harwood. Given the habits of the times, either he or his wife could have been related to Elliott. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish, he lived at Howford. He married Helen Stoddart and their children included Isabel (b.1762). Thomas (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was living at Borthwick Burnfoot in 1787. He married Nelly Turner in Robertson in 1784 and their children included Robert (b.1787) and James (b.1791). Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of London who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He probably had a local connection and could have been related to James, who also subscribed. Walter (d bef. 1777) resident of the Hawick area. The death of his son John is recorded in 1777. He could be the Walter ‘Engliss’ whose son John was baptised in Kirkton in 1728. Walter ‘Wat’ (1762–c.1830) candlemaker with a shop at 2 Tower Knowe. He was son of James and Joanna Gledstains and brother of Thomas, the Town Clerk. He was a lover of practical jokes, sticking coins to the pavement, and once cooking his dog for some guests. He once tricked the exciseman with a keg of water hidden in the pool by the Auld Brig (while the keg of smuggled gin they were looking for was hidden in a friend’s house, although in the end the friend kept the gin, knowing he could not complain to anyone). He is probably the Walter who witnessed a baptism for William Duncan in 1793. In 1796 he was involved in a prank about revolution breaking out in Hawick, which was believed enough to appear as a story in the British Chronicle in Kelso, and this ultimately led to the Kelso Mail appearing after the Chronicle went defunct. He was listed as a merchant in Hawick in 1797 when he paid the dog tax – ‘For mischief and for planning plots Y’er have a’ en muckle pride; Ye keep yer neighbours a’ in fear, Yer faults they winna hide. Y’er have made fun o’ other folk, At that ye never fail; Ye play yer pranks on young and auld, Ye made the Kelso Mail’ [BY], ‘Auld Rob Young o’ the Back Raw’s there, Biddy the Hawker’s sellin’ preens; Wat Inglis is at his tricks yince mair, And there’s baith Jock and Sandy Weens’ [HI]. Walter (19th C.) schoolmaster of St. Cuthbert’s School for a short period in 1893/4, between Mr. Turnbull and Mr. Gillis. Sir William (d.c.1420) probably brother of Sir Simon and also related to Sir Thomas, who was Keeper of Castle Douglas and William of Manorhead, who was Laird of Langholm. He was the first of the Inglis of Murdostoun, who had a family home at Branxholme. During a foray in 1395 he answered the challenge of the English champion Thomas Struthers (or Strother) and killed him in single combat at Rulehaugh. This was witnessed by Archibald, Earl of Douglas and Henry Percy, Earl of Northumberland, the two Wardens of the Marches. Another version of events describes how his men surrounded Jedburgh Castle, scaled the walls with ladders and attacked Struthers (who was custodian of the Castle). They were forced to flee when the English soldiers returned from the town, and he was then challenged to combat by Struthers for breaking his oath to observe a truce. In 1396 King Robert III granted him the barony of Manor, south-west of Peebles, in recognition of this deed (all of that barony except the lands of Hundelshope, which belonged to William of Gledstains, ancestor of the local Gledstains family). He was succeeded by his son John, while another son was Robert and his grandson was Thomas. William of Murdostoun (15th/16th C.) son of Thomas. In at least the period 1485–92 he leased the lands of Glenpyet in the Yarrow valley. It is possible that the same William was recorded as tenant of Phaup (in the Ettrick valley) in 1494/5 when he was able to compose for stealing sheep and associating with ‘traitors of Leven’. Probably the same William ‘Ynglis’ obtained remission from the King at the Justice- aire in Selkirk in 1494/5. William (15th/16th C.) of Langlandshill (in Peeblesshire). He had a sasine for Langlandshill in about 1500 and may have been related to the family of Murdostoun. He was recorded at the Justice- aire in Peebles in 1502. He witnessed
Inglis

In 1506/7, Inglis was granted a charter for lands in Peeblesshire. In 1512 he was given lands at Mervinslaw by Roger Langlands of Wilton for 1 penny ‘blech farm’, payable at Pentecost in Wilton Kirk. He may therefore have been a relative of the Langlands family also. His brother David was also a witness to this charter. Also in 1512 he had a respite, along with John Symonton of that Ilk for making counterfeit money. William (15th/16th C.) listed among the Borderers (led by the Homes and Walter Scott of Bransholme) pardoned in 1526 for an attack on the Earl of Arran. William (16th C.) recorded in Synton Parkhead in 1581 when he witnessed a transaction between John Scott in Kirkhouses and Walter Scott in Ashkirk. William (16th/17th C.) resident of Hawick who was among those cited by the Privy Council in 1612 for charging interest of more than 10 percent. He appeared to answer the charge. William (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Janet Preacher and their children included William (b.1661). William (17th C.) servant to William Lowis in Catslack-knew in 1684 he was on a list of Covenantan fugitives. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was in Roberton itself in 1710, 1713 and 1718. His children included: Margaret (b.1706); Robert (b.1710); John (b.1713); and James (b.1718). William (17th/18th C.) workman in Hawick Parish. He was recorded as ‘servant in Crumhaugh’ in 1719. He married Margaret Wilson and their children included: Elizabeth (b.1719); William (b.1721); and James (b.1723). The witnesses in 1721 William Cunningham and ‘servant’ Walter Scott and in 1721 were Walter Scott of Crumhaugh and Baille George Martin. William (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. In 1763 he married Helen Murray, from the same parish. William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Earlside in 1772. His children included Mary (b.1772) and Janet (b.1774). William (18th C.) resident of Appotside Moor when his children were baptised in Hobkir Parish in 1786 and 1788. His children included Robert (b.1778), John (b.1780), William (b.1782), Walter (b.1784) Isabel (b.1786); and Betty (b.1788). William (b.1769) born at Minholm, son of John and Agnes Brydon. He lived in Castleton Parish. He could be the William from Castleton who subscribed to William Scott’s ‘ Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. He married Elizabeth (1776–1860), daughter of Francis Ballantyne, who was born at Whithaughburn. Their children included: Francis, who married Janet Scott; James, who married Helen Robson; Agnes, who married Thomas Hall; Elizabeth, who married William Hardie; Robert (d.1892), who married Elizabeth Hall; and Janet, who married James Grieve. William (b.c.1780) from Stow Parish, he was farmer at Salenside. He was recorded there in 1841 and 1851. He married Betsy Harvey, from St. Boswell’s. His children included Helen, Margaret, William, James and Jane. He was probably also son of John who farmed at Salensisde Lodge. William (18th/19th C.) farmer at Bonchester recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. William (1796/7–1851) merchant in Hawick, who was Cornet in 1827. He was proprietor of the inn and attached ballroom at 64 High Street, which was later known as the Half-Moon Hotel. The well near there also popularly bore his name. His property is marked there on Wood’s 1824 map, and also the well on the street. In 1837 and 1841 he was on the High Street and listed as a grocer. He was still listed as a vintner on the High Street in Slater’s 1852 directory, although he was deceased by then. Late in life (in 1846) he married Jessie Best, who kept a hotel at 16 Buccleuch Street with her widowed mother (Margaret Best, nee Rae). Their son William was also Cornet. His wife must have survived him, since the inn also became known as ‘Mrs. Inglis’. She later moved to 78 High Street. William (1802/3–85) born in Yarrow Parish, he was farmer at Salensisde in Ashkirk Parish. In 1861 he was farming 80 acres there and living with his son William. It is unclear how he was related to the William recorded earlier at Salensisde. He is buried in Ashkirk Cemetery. William (1818/9–1885) quarryman in Newcastle. In 1861 he was living at about 7 North Hermitage Street. He married Marion Murray, who died in 1887, aged 71. Their children included: Helen (1845/6–54); Robert (1848/9–75); James (1849/50–75); and Robina (1833/4–98). They are buried in Ettleton Cemetery. William (19th C.) wool merchant of Wellogate Bank. He took an early photograph of the old Town House of Hawick, also showing the Cross Well. He was for a long time a staunch member of Hawick Free Kirk, being an elder and Clerk of the Deacon’s Court. However, he resigned in 1887 after objecting to the minister allowing a parade of volunteers in the church, but withdrew his resignation after huge consternation among the congregation. He was also known for being a staunch Temperance supporter and long operated the ‘magic lantern’ at meetings of the Sunday School and...
Inglis’

Band of Hope. He married Jessie Blaikie (daughter of saddler George), who died in 1905, aged 75. William (1840/1–81) joiner in Newcastle-ton. He married Margaret Currie, who died in 1880, aged 33. Their children included James (1873–1883). He may be the William recorded at Stitchelhill Limery in 1841. William (b.1848/9) son of Cornet William of the Half-Moon Hotel and Jessie Best. He was Cornet himself in 1868. He attended school in Kirkton, perhaps where his mother’s family had come from. By 1881 he was proprietor of the Half-Moon Inn. William (1847/8–1909) builder in Newcastle-ton, son of Peter. He married Mary Dickie, who died in 1914, aged 76. Their children included: John (1871/2–1908); Mina (1875/6), who married Robert M. Sibbald; and Jessie (1877/8–1913). They are buried at Ettleton. William (19th/20th C.) farmer at Doorpool. He was owner in the early 20th century, when the farm was valued at about £210 (formerly ‘Englis’, ‘Inglsche’, ‘Inglish’, ‘Ingliyshe’, ‘Inglis’ and variants; see also Ingles).

Inglis’ Hotel (ing-ulz-, ing-gul-zees-hô-tel) n. former temperance hotel on Teviotside Terrace.

Inglis’ Well (ing-gulz-wel) n. former water supply somewhere around O’Connell Street.

Ingram (ing-grum) n. (d.1174) of unknown origin, he had brothers Simon and William and was also known as ‘Engueran’, ‘Engelram’ and other variants. He was Archdeacon of Teviotdale from around 1160, and served as Chancellor of Scotland under Malcolm IV 1161–64. He was then elected Bishop of Glasgow and consecrated by the Pope in France. He authorised the opening of the tomb of St. Waltheof. He witnessed the renewal of the grant of Ringwood to Melrose Abbey in the late 1160s. In 1166 he was ‘Engelram’ when he witnessed a charter by King William to Robert de Brus. In 1170 he was confirmed in the church of Ashkirk by Pope Alexander III.

Ingramsways (ing-grum-swáz) n. place name marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map between Over and Nether Steele in Liddesdale. It is transcribed as ‘Ingrasswall’ on the 1718 survey of lands of the Scotts of Buccleuch, when combined with Nether and Over Steele, along with other small farmsteads.

ingun see ingan

inhabitant (in-haw-bi-tant) pp., adj., arch. inhabiting, indwelling – ‘to proceed and goe before through the haill towne, the baylyeas, towne Counsell, and other honest inhabitant burgesses, contrair to all former ancient practice’ [BR1706].

inhalation (in-ha-là-shin) interj. voiced intake of breath used to express agreement or sympathy, perhaps more common in women than men.

inkle (ing-kul) n. linen tape woven on a narrow loom and typically used for trimmings. The industry was important in Hawick for a few decades, starting in 1782 or 1783 – ‘The inkle manufacture was begun in the year 1783’ [RRG], ‘‘. . . the lasses o’ the Inkle House factory dancing round it’’ [AM] (also spelled ‘inclè’).

the Inkle Hoose Factory (thu-ing-kul-hoos-fawk-tu-ree) n. another name for the Hawick Inkle Company built in Under Damside, off the present-day Commercial Road. It is probably the same structure known as the Roughheugh Waulk Mill (adjacent to the Roughheugh Corn Mill). The building was leased in 1797 by William Wilson to manufacture hosiery, and was still known as ‘the Inkle House’ long after the manufacturing of linen had ceased in Hawick. The building continued to be used by the partnership of Wilson & Watson, and when they split in 1818 it went to William Watson & Sons, who continued to use it as a stocking shop. In about 1863 this part of the business was taken over by George Hogg (also written ‘Incle’).
Inlack (in-lak) n., arch. deficit, shortage – ‘Decerns Andrew Deans, skinner, to content and pay to Walter Robson ... for the inlack of wool sold to him’ [BR1642], v., poet. to lack, want – connected to Outer Grey Hill and together they form part of Drinkstone hill.

Inner Hallrule (i-nur-ruhool) n. former name for part of the farm of Hallrule, in distinction to Outer Hallrule. In 1779 ‘Inner-Hallrule, consisting of six inclosures’ was valued at £493 17s 8d.
Inner Hill (in-ur-hill) n. small hill between Northhouse and Old Northhouse, reaching a height of 309 m.
Innerleithen (in-nur-lee-thin) n. large village in Peeblesshire at the confluence of the Tweed and the Leithen Water. An important knitwear centre since the setting up of Alexander Brodie’s Caer-lee Mill in 1788. It grew further when its medicinal spring was publicised by Sir Walter Scott in ‘St. Ronan’s Well’. It has held the annual Cleikum Ceremony in which St. Ronan drives out the devil, as well as a Standard Bearer leading a procession through town and up Caerlee Hill.
Robert Smail’s Printing Works is operated as a procession through town and up Caerlee Hill.

James Innes (i-nis) n. Alexander Pringle (1837– 89) born at Robin’s Nest Cottage, Yair, he was a manufacturer of A.P. Innes & Co, which became White’s of Hawick. He formed a partnership with James Henderson in 1868, which split again in 1885, when he took over the rear part of Victoria Mills and concentrated on the wholesale market. He was President of the Hawick Total Abstinence Society in the 1880s and he talked at the 1884 franchise rally held at Loch park. He married Agnes Laing and their children included: Alison Mackay (b.1863); Mary Jane (b.1865); William (b.1867); Charlotte (b.1868);
Agnes (b.1870); William Anderson (b.1871); and Hannah (b.1874). He died at his home, The Firs on Sunnyhill. Alexander Kedie (1855–1938) son of John and Mary Kedie, and older brother of Robert. He was born in Glasgow, but came to Hawick in the 1870s. He was a woolen merchant in the partnership Innes, Stevenson & Co. until

Minister at Mertoun in Berwickshire. He married James, minister of Yester; and Anne. James (b.1756/7) from Kelso, he was schoolmaster in Bedrule from 1799. He is recorded on Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories. In 1841 he was still schoolmaster, but already in his 80s, with his son William acting as assistant schoolmaster.
He was still living with his son William and still recorded as schoolmaster in Slater’s 1852 directory. Lieut. James Brydon (1891–1915) son of
Innes’

He was educated on the continent and fluent in French, German and Italian. He travelled in Europe on behalf of his father’s firm, Innes, Chambers & Co. He served with 1/4th K.O.S.B. and was seriously wounded during the charge of 12th July 1915 and found by his cousin W.K. Innes. He asked his cousin to cut off his arm and give him a cigarette; then he died, still cheering on his men. His memorial headstone in Wellogate Cemetery has his image carved into it. He left £1000 to be distributed to the poor of Hawick at Christmas. John (d.1679) from Castleton Parish. He was among the 200 men who died on ‘the Crown of London’ when it shipwrecked off the Orkneys and the captain refused to unlock the hatches to let the prisoners save themselves. The ship was transporting Covenanters to America after their capture at Bothwell Bridge. It is said that ‘they were taken prisoners, stripped almost naked, and treated more like beasts than human beings’. John (c.1817–70) silk merchant in Glasgow. He spent time in Hawick in the 1850s and in 1854 married Mary, daughter of Robert Kedie from Hawick. Their children were: Alexander Kedie (b.1855), who lived at Lindisfarne in Hawick; Robert Kedie (b.1858), draper and manufacturer in Hawick; John William (b.1860); and Jessie (b.1862). Robert Kedie (1858–95) born in Glasgow, son of Hawick parents John and Mary Kedie. He was nephew of William Kedie. He returned to Hawick in 1879 as a manufacturer, becoming partner in William Kedie & Co., along with Blenkhorn and Richardson. His hobby was apparently breeding ‘Dandie Dinmonts’. He was Captain in the Border Rifles (volunteers) in the late 19th century. He married Catherine Brown Oliver, daughter of James Oliver and Jane Rutherford. They lived at the Old Manse and later at Wilton Bank. They had an only child, William Kedie (1893–1958). In poor health for a couple of years, he died at age 35. He had a military style funeral and his grave in the Wellogate Cemetery is marked with a sandstone obelisk. After his death his wife remarried, to Herbert Higham Llewellyn and died in Harrogate. William G. (b.1805/6) son of James, schoolmaster at Bedrule. In 1841 he was assistant schoolmaster at Bedrule. He became teacher at Nisbet, and in 1851 he was recorded at Nisbet Schoolhouse as teacher of English, Mathematics and Latin. He married Mary and their children included Agnes, Jane, Mary, Alexander, Eliza and Alison. Maj. William Anderson (b.1872) son of manufacturer Alexander. He was Cornet in 1892 and Callants’ Club President in 1914. He lived at the Firs and ran the family firm A.P. Innes & Co. He also served as President of the South of Scotland Chamber of Commerce. He was heavily involved with the Volunteers, was honorary recruiting officer in WWI and was often referred to as ‘the Major’. He also served as a Justice of the Peace. William Kedie (1893–1958) son of Robert and Catherine Oliver, he was born at Wilton Bank. He was educated at Cambridge, his degree being interrupted by WWI. He served with the K.O.S.B. and received the D.S.O. In 1915 he married Ivy Edith Baxter, and in 1925 he secondly married Hilda Voisey Middleton. His children included: Kathleen Betty (b.1916); Robin Frederick (b.1920); Vivian Voisey; Charles Ian; Kedie; James Alexander Kedie (b.1932); Gilliam Marie; and William (b.1935). He died at West Hartlepool.

Innes’ (i-ni-seez) n. former name applied to one of the factories run by Innes, sometimes in partnership with others, particularly the warehouse operation of A.P. Innes & Co. at Howlands.

Innes, Chambers & Co. (i-nis-cham-burz-in-kō) n. tweed manufacturers of the early 20th century. Alexander Kedie Innes became sole partner and the main factory was at 33 Commercial Road. It was badly damaged by fire in 1920 and the site purchased by the Masons in 1921 to build their new Lodge.

Innes-Henderson (i-nis-hen-dur-sin) n. Innes, Henderson & Co. Ltd., Hawick knitwear company, with their main mill on Victoria Road. The firm started in 1868 in what was basically a cottage at Wilton Grove. They built Victoria Mills on Victoria Road in 1875. In 1885 the firm split, with Henderson supplying the retail trade and using the front building, and Innes dealing with the wholesale trade from a 3-storey building behind. The firms of A.P. Innes & Co. and James Henderson & Co. operated separately until merging again in 1920 (although the exact relationship between them during the intervening years is complicated). Around this time they had the largest hosiery mill in Hawick, employing about 1100 workers. They also had a small factory on Commercial Road for a while. They supplied specially designed knitted underwear for Eric Shipton’s Everest expedition. The firm manufactured knitted goods bearing the Braemar label, and later changed their name to match. The firm finally went out of business in 1973. Records covering the period 1896–1973 exist, with the Museum having some 20th century papers.
Innes-Ker

Innes-Ker (i-nis-ker) n. George Victor Robert John 9th Duke of Roxburgh, 'Bobbo' (1913–74), son of Henry John and Mary Goelet. He was heavily involved with local politics and became who was Convenor of Roxburgh District Council. He was married Lady Mary Evelyn Hungerford Crewe-Milnes in 1935, they were divorced in 1953 and he remarried Margaret Elizabeth McConnell. His children were Guy David (who succeeded as 10th Duke) and Robert Anthony. Guy David (1954– ) 10th Duke of Roxburgh, son of ‘Bobbo’. He married Jane Meriel Grosvenor and Virginia Mary Wynn-Williams. He lives at Floors Castle. Henry John (1876–1932) 8th Duke of Roxburgh, son of James Henry Robert. He was Lord Lieutenant of Roxburghshire and Lieutenant of the Royal Company of Archers. He served with the Household Cavalry in the Boer War and was severely wounded in WWI. He married Mary Goelet and was succeeded by George Victor Robert John. Sir James Norcliffe (1736–1823) eldest surviving son of Sir Henry Innes and Anne Drummond Grant. He was descended from Lady Innes, 3rd daughter of Harry, Lord Ker, son of the 1st Earl of Roxburgh. He served as an officer in the Army in his youth. Following the death of his distant cousin William, 7th Lord Bellenden, 4th Duke of Roxburgh, there was 7 years of legal battle, and he eventually became 5th Duke of Roxburgh after a pronouncement by the House of Lords. He then adopted the name Innes-Ker. He was one of the Scottish Representative Peers in Parliament 1818–20. He was also a member of the Jedforest Club. He married Mary Wray (with whom he is said to have had nothing in common) and then Harriet Charlewood when he was 71. His only son James succeeded. A portrait of him and his wife was painted by Henry Raeburn and hangs in Floors Castle. James Henry Robert (1816–79) 6th Duke of Roxburgh, son of James Norcliffe. He served as a Commissioner of Supply and Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. He married Susanna Stephanie, only child of Sir Charles Delbiac (and she was niece of George Cleghorn of Weens). Their children were: Susan Harriet; Charlotte Isabella; James Henry Robert, who succeeded; and Charles John. He died at Genoa. James Henry Robert 7th Duke of Roxburgh (1839–92) son of James Henry Robert, the 6th Duke and Susanna Stephenia Delbiac, Lady of the Bedchamber. He was born at Floors Castle. He was M.P. for Roxburghshire 1870–74, while Marquess of Bowmont. In 1874 he was defeated by Sir George Henry Scott-Douglas by only 26 votes. He was also a member of the Jedforest Club. He became Duke of Roxburgh in 1879 and thereafter lived at Floors Castle. He was Lord-Lieutenant for Roxburghshire, Chairman of the River Tweed Commissioners and patron of the Border Union Agricultural Society. He also served as a Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. A document exists in which he recounts his memories of the rebellion of 1745 and the Seven Years War. He married Lady Anne Emily Spencer-Churchill and was succeeded by Henry John. He was buried at Kelso Abbey (see also Ker).

invisible mender (in-vi-zul-men-dur) n.  epithet for a mender in the knitwear industry the results of whose work are nearly impossible to detect.

Invocation (in-vok-shin) n.  song written by J.E.D. Murray and Adam Grant as a finale to the 1914 Pageant. It was sung by a huge chorus, accompanied by the Saxhorn Band on the 2 nights of the quater-centenary celebrations, and published by Grant in 1915. The music is now played by the Saxhorn Band during the handing back of the Flag on the Saturday of the Common Riding, and the words are rarely heard. The tune may have been influenced by the German hymn ‘Nun Danket alle Gott’. It is also sometimes called ‘Hail Great and Glorious Power!’, because of the line in the song. The words are now seldom sung, although they were resurrected for the 2004 Callants’ Club centenary commemoration service (often incorrectly or dialectally ‘The Invocation’).

the I.O.G.T. (thu-I-o-jee-tee) n.  the Institute of Good Templars, an international organisation founded in 1851, promoting total abstinence from alcohol. The organisation arrived in Hawick around 1870 and soon 5 Hawick lodges were formed: the Scottish Border Beacon; the Teviotdale; the Rose of Teviotdale; the Slitrig; and the Ever Watchful. They each held weekly meetings. The first survived the longest, and two others were formed later in the 19th century: the Hope of Hawick; and the Jubilee. They had a hall down the Round Close, refered to as ‘the I.O.G.T. Hall’ or ‘Temlar’s Hall’, which was also used by many other groups, e.g. the Brethren and the Saxhorn Band.

I.O.U.S. Mechanics (I-ew-ess-me-kawn-eeks) n.  Friendly Society, active in the latter part of the 19th century, with separate Teviotdale and Hawick (No. 4) Lodges. It may have been set up around 1845 and lasted until at least 1888. The Teviotdale Lodge met in the Temperan Hall on the first Monday of the month. The National Archives have some undated records.

ir (ir)  v. are – ‘ir ee gaun?’, ‘Whae ir oo and Whaer oo ir, Facts a’ Callants should Ken’ [JEDM], ‘Is yours a fardin’ tae? Ah then, ma gingerbreed men’s a ha’penny, but here ee irr’ [JEDM], ‘. . . where the public toilets ir now’ [IWL], ‘Some folk ir juist born fortunate . . . ’ [IWL] (also spelled ‘irr’; er and ur are also used).

ir ee (ir-ee)  interj., arch. will you please, if you’re willing – ‘. . . used exclusively after a request in the sense of ‘if you please’. The word willing or agreeable might almost be taken as being understood to follow the pronoun. Thus a Hawick bairn might say: ‘Mother, gie’s a peecce, ir ee?’ [ECS], ‘Gie’s a yin, ir ee?’ [ECS], ‘Faither, tak’ us teh sei the Greens (the local Rugby team) this efternune, ir ee?’ [1947].

Ireland (Ir-lind)  n.  Thomas (17th C.) recorded in the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694 among those “Payed but not listed in Hauick Town”.

Ireland (Ir-lindz)  n.  John of that Ilk (15th C.) holder of lands in Wilton, which were commonly known as ‘Irelandis landis’. In 1454 he gave a charter of these lands to David, son and heir of Walter Scott of Kirkurd; he is recorded as ‘Johannes de Irelandys de eodem’. The family were mainly based in Stirlingshire and Perthshire; it is unclear whether he ever actually resided in Wilton, and if so where he moved to afterwards.

He is recorded as witness to a charter for William Hay in 1450, signed at Perth. And either he or his father was mentioned in a charter of 1424 for lands in Perth. It has been remarked that the families of Inglis, Irelands and Scott all owned adjacent lands in the 15th century, i.e. names associated with England, Ireland and Scotland.

Irelands-lands (Ir-linds-lawndz) n. common name for lands in the western half-Barony of Wilton, which were granted by John Irelands of that Ilk to David Scott in 1454, with the superior being Henry Wardlaw, Baron of Wilton. The lands were to be held of the Baron for the yearly fee, if asked, of one pair of spurs and one pound of cucumbers! It is unclear where these lands were. Presumably the name came from the connection with the Irelands family, and was replaced with another name (or the former name).

the Irish (thu-I-ree-sh) n. people from Ireland. It is said that in about 1806 there was only one native of Ireland living in Hawick, who ‘when teazed by boys, was accustomed to threaten to tear their limbs from their bodies’. Many more arrived to work in the knitwear industry during the 19th century, boosting the congregation of the Catholic Chapel. Lots of labourers who worked on railway construction in the 1840s to 1860s were from Ireland.

Irn Brew (I-ri-n, ern-broo) n. orange-coloured carbonated soft drink, popular in Scotland, also known as ‘Irn Bru’. Socoa wrote a song about it in 2011 – ‘Irn Bru, Irn Bru, Built ye up, when ye grew, Its the only thing to do, Drink, Irn Bru, Irn Bru, Irn Bru [Sco].

irni (ir-ni) contr. aren’t, are not – ‘they irni the same ony mair’, ‘...But, tell the truth, the legs irna the same Nowadays. Weel, sin’ auld-age wunna hide’ [DH], ‘...awfih vexed that the Miss Lindsays irni pairt o the supper pairty’ [IWL], ‘...Pairish Kirk is hooses now Folk irni the same somehow’ [IWL] (also written ‘irna’; usually used after the noun, cf. irn’t).

irn’t (i-ri-n) contr. aren’t, are not – ‘Hawick folk ir better than Gala folk, irn’t they?’ (note that this form usually precedes the noun or pronoun, cf. irni).

the Iron Age (thu-I-ri-nį, -ern-) n. period of development following the Bronze Age, characterised by the spread of iron tools and weapons, beginning around the 8th century B.C.E. New settlers arrived in the Borders around the 1st century B.C.E. and took over from the former Bronze Age residents. Tribes speaking Brythonic were already well established by the time of the Roman occupation (about 70 C.E.). Most of the examples of forts, settlements, homesteads and earthworks that pepper our local hills are from the Iron Age. A particularly good example is on Whitescastle Hill, between Chapelhill farm and Branxholme Loch.

Iron Castle (I-rin-kaw-sul) n. ancient earthwork in Southdean Parish, just to the east of Westerhouses. It occupies the top of a small knoll just to the south of Ironcastle Sike. It is about 75 m by 30 m and has been partially obliterated by a plantation. It seems likely to be an Iron Age settlement.

irregular mairriage (i-re-gew-lur-mā-reec) n., arch. term used to describe a marriage taking place outwith the church, often by poor people, and sometimes simply involving a pledge before witnesses. Discovery of such an arrangement often resulted in a fine imposed on the couple by the Kirk Session, as well as attempts to identify the person who performed the marriage and the witnesses present, so they could also be fined or imprisoned. However, these arrangements continued in any case, presumably some being elopements, some simply to save money, and others because of religious differences. When discovered, any children produced by the union would be refused baptism until amends had been made by the couple.

irreverend (i-re-vu-rind) adj., arch. irreverent – ‘James Scott, called Pedee, is fined for ane great disobedience to the bailies ... , but gave them opprobrious and irreverend language, and sicklie this day ... ’ [BR1679].

Irving (ir-vin, ā-ri-n) n. Adam (b.1791/2) brewer at Whisky Houses in Hawick. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He is listed there on Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories. In 1841 he is listed as a brewer at Whiskyhouses, living with his wife Henrietta and children Jessie, Mary, Alison, John, Adam, Henrietta and Andrew. His assets were sequestered in 1842. The witnesses in 1747 were Walter and Thomas Scott. Probably the same Andrew witnessed a baptism in 1727 for Walter Scott at Wiltonburn and another in 1751 for Hector Blaikie at Boathouse. Andrew (1786–1870) son of Walter and Janet Smith, was baptised in Hawick Parish. He was an actuary with the National Security Savings Bank and grocer at 26 High Street. He also served as Heritors’ Clerk for the Parish of Hawick. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He is listed as a grocer on Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories, in Slater’s 1852 directory and on the 1841 census. In Pigot’s 1837 directory and Slater’s 1852 directory he was treasurer of the Savings’ Bank on the High Street. In 1851 he was listed as a grocer, Treasurer to the Saving’s Bank and Heritor’s Clerk. In 1852 he was also agent for the Aberdeen insurance company. He was an elder and session clerk for the West End Church. He was given the ‘Gledstane Bible’ by William Smith (‘Wull the Cutler’), who may have been a relative of his mother. He married May Roger, and their children included: Walter (b.1820); William (b.1822); tweed manufacturer and merchant; Margery D. (b.1823); Janet (or ‘Jessie’), (b.1825); Alexander James (b.1828); Mary (b.1832); and Adam (b.1836). Archibald (18th C.) resident of Hawick and Wilton Parishes. Elizabeth (18th C.) housemaid at Minto in 1791, when she was working for Sir Gilbert Elliot. George (17th C.) servitor to maltman John Hardie. In 1666 he was fined by the Magistrates for cutting divots at Myreslawgreen, even although his master had directed him to go to ‘the thorter dikes’. George (18th/19th C.) farmer at Mains (near Castleton), recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He is probably related to William ‘Irving’ who was at Mains in 1821. He is recorded there in 1777. He married Jane Armstrong and their children included: Mabel (b.1775); Dolly (b.1777); Dorothy (b.1778); William (b.1781); Elizabeth (b.1782); William (again, b.1784); and John (b.1788). Jake see John R. James of Cleuchhead (16th/17th C.) servant of Lord Cranston, he was recorded in 1610 when Robert Elliot of Falnash was cautioner for him. This was for answering the charge of wounding John, son of Adam ‘Haliday in Lure’. His name is given as ‘James Irwing of Cleuchheidis’. Given the identity of his cautioner, it seems likely his home was at Cleuchhead in Liddesdale. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isobel Liddell and their children included: William (b.1681); James (b.1682); and Robert (b.1684). In 1684 he witnessed baptisms for John Beattie and for John (who was surely related). Perhaps the same James secondly married Isobel Learmonth and had a son James Andrew in 1765. The witnesses to this baptism were Andrew Irvine and Walter Lorraine. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. His wife was Isabel Learmonth and their son James Andrew was baptised in 1765. James (d.bef. 1797) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife Marion Blyth died in Hawick in 1797. James Stewart ‘Jamie’ (1820–91) descendant of ‘Staney Stewart’ (whom he was named after), a familiar character on the streets of Hawick, in the 19th century. Born in Hawick he was a simpleton, harmless when sober, but often drunk in his younger days. He spent 4 years in Melrose Asylum, after which publicans were ordered to refuse to serve him. He was known for his amazing memory and a fear of the army. Janet (b.c.1788) recorded as farmer at Newton in Wilton parish in 1851. She farmed 383 acres and employed 1 labourer. In 1841 she was living in the household of John Oliver, who was probably a retired farmer at Newton. Jean nee Kennedy, M.B.E. (1876–1962) pharmacist who was the first female president of the Royal Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain. She was daughter of bookseller Walter Phillips and Jane Law. She was an apprentice in Hawick with chemist Thomas Maben. She move to Glasgow where she worked at the Glasgow Apothecaries Company and the Glasgow Royal Infirmary. She married chemist Peter Irvine and assisted him in running 2 pharmacies in Galasgow. The couple worked in London during WWI and she became responsible for the pricing of subscriptions in the south-east for 35 years. She was made an M.B.E. in 1928 for ‘meritorious service in connection with the National Insurance Scheme’. She was first woman to be president of the health insurance staff of Whitley Council, then of the Insurance Committee Officers Association for England and Wales and the National Association of Women Pharmacists. In 1937 she became only the third woman member of the Royal Pharmaceutical Society and became its first woman President in 1947. Her portrait (by Norman Hepple) hangs in the Pharmaceutical Society headquarters. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Aitkin and their children included Margaret and Janet, baptised together in 1684. The witnesses were James (surely a relative) and Walter Henderson. He may be the same man as the resident of Hawick Shiel. John (17th/18th C.) resident at Hawick Shiel in 1694, according to the Hearth Tax rolls. He is recorded as tenant in Hawick Shiel when his children were baptised in 1704 and 1706. His children included: James (b.1704); and Margaret (b.1706). The witnesses in 1704 were James Gray in Whitlaw and gardener James Falsyde and in 1706 were Walter Nixon and Walter Scott in Hawick Shiel. He may also have been father of Walter (b.1696). John (18th C.) tenant in the Flex in 1741. He married Bessie Scott in Wilton in 1739. Their daughter Helen was baptised in 1741, with witnesses John Cavers and John Goodfellow, both at the Flex. John (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was at Lees in 1759. He married Agnes Scott and their children, baptised in Wilton, included Thomas (b.1754), Robert (b.1755), Betty (b.1757), James (b.1759) and Walter (b.1761). The witnesses in 1759 were James Dryden and Robert Scott. John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Agnes Scott and their children, baptised in Hawick, included James (b.1759), Walter (b.1761), Agnes (b.1763), Walter (again, b.1765), Margaret (b.1767), Helen (b.1769) and John (b.1772). It is possible they are the same as the couple of the same name who previously had children in Wilton (although the overlap in 1759 seems to make that doubtful). John (18th/19th C.) resident at Teindisdeslope in 1797, when he was taxed for having 3 horses. John (b.c.1817) from Southdean Parish, he was farm steward at Common-side in 1851. His wife was Margaret and they had a daughter Helen. John R. ‘Jake’ (1940–) local Liberal councillor and Honorary Provost 1982–88. He wrote ‘The Westenders’ (1990). Peter educated at Hawick High School, he wrote ‘Scotland the Best’. He has been involved in the organisation of many arts festivals and events in Scotland. Reginald (d.c.1267) served as the 2nd Archdeacon of Teviotdale from 1242. In 1245 he moved to become Archdeacon of Glasgow. He died before 1268. Robert (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Janet Telfer and their children included: Margaret (b.1764); William (b.1766); and James (b.1773). Robert (18th C.) recorded as tenant of the land of Nut Bank in Minto Parish in 1780. Robert (18th C.) paid the cart tax in Wilton Parish in 1789. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of London who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He probably had a local connection. Samuel (18th C.) schoolmaster in Wilton during at least the 1760s. In 1767 he married Elizabeth, daughter of Rev. Robert Riccarton. He may be the same as Samuel in Newfield. Samuel (18th C.) farmer at Newfield, near Hummelnknowes, brother of Walter, who lived at Northhouse. He was part of the group that founded the Green Kirk in 1763. He owned 2 horses at Newfield according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident of Ormiston in Cavers Parish. His children included: Andrew (b.1701), who married Bessie Turnbull in Minto in 1723; Thomas (b.1703); Isabel (b.1706); James (b.1708); William (b.1710); and John (b.1713). He may also be the Thomas whose children baptised in Minto Parish included: Alison and Bessie (b.1715); Walter (b.1717); Samuel (b.1719); Helen (b.1721); and Adam (b.1724). Thomas (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was at Langlands in 1722 and was at Netherhall in 1726 and 1729. He witnessed baptisms in 1724 for Andrew Martin at Clarilaw and for James Young at West Burnfoot, in 1728 for John Blyth at Stiches, in 1729 for James Easton at Alton and in 1735 for William Nichol in Stouslie. He married Margaret Scott in 1718 and their children included: Walter (b.1719); Thomas (b.1722); John (b.1726); and Adam (b.1729). The witnesses in 1722 were John Scott and John Wilson and in 1726 were Adam
Irvine and Turnbull's

Scott and John Irvine and in 1729 were John Scott and John 'Dryon'. Thomas of Newton (18th C.) recorded in the 1786 Horse Tax Rolls in Wilton Parish. He and William witnessed a baptism for William Hoo in Newton in 1770. Walter (18th C.) factor for the Langlands estate. He ran the estates after the death of George Langlands and before Robert was served heir in 1758. He is probably the Walter who married Helen Scott in Wilton in 1736. His children included: David (b.1737); Mainie (b.1739); and Margaret (b.1745). In 1745 he was recorded as a gardener, and the witnesses to the baptism in Hawick were merchant James Douglas and Andrew Turnbull senior. He is probably the Walter who witnessed a baptism for James Noble, resident of Mervinslaw, in 1751. His name is also written 'Irvin'. Walter (18th C.) resident of Northhouse. His brother Samuel was at Newfield. They were part of the founding group of seceders, who met in Hawick in 1763, leading to the establishment of the Green Kirk. He was recorded at Northhouse on the 1786-90 Horse Tax Rolls. Walter (18th/19th C.) recorded as owner of part of Weensland in 1788. His land there was valued at £18 1s 8d and had probably been purchased from the Scotts of Horsleyhill. He was still owner according to the 1811 Land Tax Rolls. He was surely related to William, who had owned part of Weensland earlier. He is probably also the Walter who paid the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls for Hawick. He may be the Walter who married Janet Smith in 1785 and whose children, baptised in Hawick Parish, included Andrew (b.1786), Robert (b.1788), Alison (b.1790) and Adam (b.1792). Walter (18th/19th C.) resident of Newfield. His wife 'Ailey' Thomson died in Hawick in 1815. He was probably son of Samuel or Walter. Walter (18th/19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Isabel Tinnin and their children included James Blair Ken (b.1821) and John (b.1823). Walter Scott (19th C.) frameworker and Cornet of 1886. He returned from America in 1887 to take up his duties as Right-Hand Man, a long journey in those days. He was honoured with a special reception, where he was presented with a gold medal and watch. He was unable to repeat the feat as Left-Hand Man, however. William (18th C.) linen draper who was Bailie in the 1770s. He was recorded as a merchant in 1779 when he acted as a witness (along with his apprentice John Nixon) for a baptism in Cavers Parish. Probably the same William was listed on the Horse Tax Rolls for Hawick in 1785. He is probably the William recorded in 1788 as former owner of 2 parts of Weensland (having purchased this from Scott of Horsleyhill) valued at £23 19s 6d and £23 8s 10d, and by 1788 owned by William Dickson of Orchard. He is probably also the William who owned the farm of Newton (valued at £238) in 1788; if so he and Thomas witnessed a baptism for William Hoo in Newton in 1770. He is also mentioned as a former owner of part of Weensland in the Land Tax Rolls of about 1811. He may be the Bailie who witnessed a baptism for merchant James Scott in 1796. William (b.c.1765) farmer at Glendivan in the Ewes valley. His wife was Henrietta and their children included John (who took over the farm), Archibald, Isabella, Jessy, Eliza, William and Robert. His wife was a widow by 1851. William (b.c.1785) listed as 'Ind.' on the 1841 census, when he was living at about 54 High Street. William of Newton (18th/19th C.) recorded as owner of Chamberlain Newton in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls. He was a subscriber to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He was listed as a Commissioner of Roxburghshire in 1819. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Glasgow who subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He probably had a local connection. William (b.1793/4) farmer at Cavers Mains, listed in 1841. In 1861 he was there farming 186 acres. He married Mary H. Elliot, probably daughter of John, who lived at Shiplaw Corse. William (1824-93) son of Andrew of the Savings Bank. He was a manufacturer in partnership with 'Alie' Laing in the latter part of the 19th century, the warehouse at 26 High Street giving its name to 'Irvine's Close'. He was a local leader in politics and social reform in the 19th century. He was involved in the Hawick press and also wrote some poetry. For a while he also lived at 67 High Street. He presented a couple of Roman coins to the Museum in 1863 (the former pronunciation was ï-rin; previously written 'Irvin', 'Irwin', 'Irvine', 'Urvin' and variants; see also Irving).

Irvine and Turnbull's (ir-vin-in-turn-bulz) n. tobacconists on the Howegate, recorded in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. This was a partnership between William Turnbull and one of the Irvines, possibly Andrew.

Irving (ir-vin) n. Archibald 'Bauldie' (19th C.) farmer at Shirencleuch. Christopher of Binks, 'Kick-ma-leerie' (17th C.) said to have been a fiddler, it is unclear where he originated from. It is also unclear why he got his nickname (since it has 2 somewhat different meanings). He became fairly wealthy and was a local landowner of the mid-to-late 1600s. He bought Binks from Simon Elliot of the Binks and is recorded there in the 1678 Land Tax Rolls, paying tax on the value of £300. He is also recorded in 1678 as owner of part of the former estate of Elliot of Larriston in Castelton Parish, valued at £700. By about 1688 he had bought all of Over and Nether Larriston, Greenholm, Redheugh, Hartsgarth, Langhaugh and Gullenflat from Robert Elliot of Larriston, who died bankrupt. His children were: wife of Adam Beattie, to whom he gave Hartsgarth, Langhaugh, Greenholm and Redheugh in Liddesdale; and Mary, wife of Adam Elliot, who got Catlowdie in Cumberland. The lands of Binks passed to John, 3rd son of John Elliot of Thorlleshope. David (1778–1860) born in Langholm, son of Janetus and Helen Little. He was educated at Langholm Grammar School and privately there and then at Edinburgh University. He was intended for the Church, but devoted his life to literature. His first publication was ‘The Life of Robert Ferguson, with a critique on his works’ (1799), followed by ‘Lives of Scottish Authors’ (1801), ‘Elements of English Composition’ (1801, running to 12 editions), ‘The Lives of the Scottish Poets’ (1804) and ‘Memoirs of the Life and Writings of George Buchanan’ (1807, 1817). He obtained an honorary doctorate from Aberdeen in 1808. He married Ann Margaret Anderson in 1810, but she died 2 years later. He secondly married his cousin Janet Laing. In 1820 he was appointed principal librarian of the Faculty of Advocates, Edinburgh. He published extensively on topics of Scottish literature, editing volumes for the Ballantyne and Maitland Clubs, and contributing to the Encyclopedia Britannica. Later works include ‘An Introduction to the Study of the Civil Law’ (1837), the 2 volume ‘Lives of Scottish Writers’ (1839) and ‘History of Scottish Poetry’, published posthumously. Edward ‘Reid’ (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1591 when he is accused of joining a group of Elliots of the Hill and others in stealing from the tenants of Scaleby. He is recorded as ‘redd’ Edward Urwen. He may be the ‘Edward Irving of Boneschaw’ listed in 1586 among ‘principalis of the brokin men of the west marche’ in a document by King James VI instructing his Lieutenant on the Border. Perhaps the same man is Edward ‘of Beraldrone’ listed among men ordered in 1588 to appear before the Warden in Dumfries. George ‘Geordie’
Irwin

Howcleuch in 1821 when he subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’. William ‘Willie’ (16th C.) recorded as ‘Willie Irwing’, servant to John’s Christie Armstrong, when accused of being part of a gang of Armstrongs and others who raided the farms of Montbenger, Deuchar and Whitehope in 1582. He may be the ‘Willie Irwing of Graithnayhill’ listed in 1586 among ‘principalis of the brokin men of the west marche’ in a document by King James VI instructing his Lieutenant on the Border. William ‘Willie Kang’ (16th C.) listed in 1590 along with Armstrongs and others who were accused of rieving from Bewcastle. He was also ‘Willie Kange’ when accused in 1592 by Taylors on the English side of stealing livestock and goods; other Irvings listed were Geordie, Ritchie and Tom of Rowanburn. He is also complained about in 1596, among Scotsmen accused of leading raids into England. His name is given as ‘Willie Yrwen ‘Kange’ and one of the ‘Kanges’ along with Geordie (probably his brother) in a complaint about a second raid. Associates on these and other raids included Armstrong of the Hollows, Jamie Elliot called ‘Tod’ and other Armstrongs and Elliots of southern Liddesdale. He and other Irvings were probably the ‘Willie Kange and his brethren’ who were said to have been involved in the rescue of Kilmont Willie in 1596. His brother David was listed in 1605 among men of Eskdale, Ewesdale, etc., declared fugitives at a court in Peebles. It is unclear what the nickname meant. William (18th/19th C.) resident at Mains (probably in Castleton Parish) in 1821 when he subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. He was probably related to the George ‘Irvine’ who was at Mains in 1797. William (18th/19th C.) portrait painter in Longtown. In the Carlisle Exhibition of 1824 he exhibited these paintings: ‘W. Brown Esq. Hawick’; ‘Alexander Brown, Esq. Orchard’; ‘Mrs Dixon, Hassendeaneburn’; and ‘A Dixon, Hassendeaneburn’. He died aged 60. He was listed as a portrait painter in London in 1821 when he subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’; he must have been related to John, a painter in Longtown who also subscribed to the book. William S. (19th C.) teacher in Hawick. He was President of the Hawick Branch of the Educational Institute of Scotland and Vice-President of the Scientific and Philosophical Society in the late 1800s. He also acted as Clerk to the Deacon’s Court of Hawick Free Kirk from 1887. In 1889 he left to become Headmaster of Westerkirk School (formerly written ‘Irwine’, ‘Irwing’, ‘Urvin’, ‘Urwin’ and variants; see also Irvine).

Jackson (jawk-sin) n. A. (18th/19th C.) mason in Castleton in 1821 when subscribed to William Scott’s ‘ Beauties of the Border’. Adam (b.1763) born at ‘Howpathy’, which may be Howpasley, he was a shepherd at Redmoss in Castleton Parish. He was a keen hunter and known as ‘The Hunter King of Liddesdale’ and is said to have served as inspiration for part of Sir Walter Scott’s ‘Guy Mannering’. He is probably the Adam, shepherd at Fairloans, listed among heads of households in 1835–41. He married Helen Crozier. Their children included: William (1792–1819), who served at Waterloo; James (1795–1809); Adam (1797/8–1834); John, also shepherd at Redmoss; Helen (b.c.1800); Thomas (b.c.1800), who married Isabella Hislop and emigrated to the U.S.A., settling in Elmira, Illinois; Walter (1803–89), shepherd at Broadlee; and David (1806–94). Adam (b.1806/7) born in Roberton Parish, he was shepherd at Roughley in Castleton Parish. He is probably the Adam listed for the first time as a head of household at Toftholm in 1837 and still there in 1841. His wife was Margaret and their children included Jane. Adam (b.1816/7) son of James and Elizabeth Murray, he was born in Ewesdale. He worked as a farm labourer in Teviothead Parish. In 1861 he was at Commonbrae. He married Mary Martin and their children included Walter, Mary, Andrew, Isabella and Eliza. He died at Changehouse. Adam J. (1836–1922) son of shepherd Simon. He was born in the Ewes valley. He became a shepherd at the age of 12, but emigrated to America when he was 20. In 1856 he settled in Vienna, Delaware County, New York, where he farmed with his brother. He married Francis C. Smith. He was the last survivor of a family of 11 siblings. Alexander (b.def. 1858) resident of Lilliesleaf. In 1579/80 his son Thomas renounced his 2 half husbandlands in Lilliesleaf to Walter Riddell of that Ilk. David (18th/19th C.) farmer at Netherraw in Castleton Parish, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. David (1806–94) youngest son of shepherd Adam. He was shepherd at Fairloans and other places in Liddesdale. He was listed as head of household at Fairloans in 1835–40 and labourer at ‘Thorliesburnfoot’ in 1841. He married Jessie Dickson. Their children included: Adam (b.1832); Janet Jardine (b.1834); Michael (b.1836); Helen (b.1837); Isabel (b.1840); and Thomas. Elizabeth (b.1774/5) from Langholm, she was a widow living at ‘Poor’s houses’ in Ewesdale in 1851. She is described as a tailor’s widow and was probably related to Margaret. Elliot (b.1851) son of David, labourer at Thorlieshope, and Janet Moffat. He was a Police Constable in Jedburgh. In 1871 he married Helen Murray, who was a servant at Flatt. He was a subscriber to David Anderson’s poetry book in 1868. Elspeth (17th C.) listed as a midwife in 1676 among others of the Abbotrule area who were imprisoned in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh for attacking the minister, George Baptie. This presumably means she objected to having an Episcopalian minister in her parish. Gordon, M.B.E. (1952 –) born in the Haig, educated at St. Mary’s, Trinity and Hawick High Schools, he was an apprentice joiner with Brydons and worked for a while for Jock Oliver’s parcel delivery service. He joined the ambulance service in 1979 and has also worked with several charities, including being Chairman of the Border Holiday Group (arranging holidays for people with physical and mental learning difficulties). In 2011 he received the M.B.E. for his work with the Scottish Ambulance Service and Border Holiday Group. He has been President of the Mosstroopers’ Club and on the Vertish Hill Sports Committee, as well as Session Clerk at Cavers Kirk. He was Acting Father in 2010 and Common Riding Chief Guest in 2019. James (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Janet Paterson and their daughter Isobel was baptised in 1688. James (17th C.) cottar in Dimplesnour in Ashkirk Parish. In 1698 his daughter Janet married James Rule, herald in Whitslade. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Stobice, recorded in 1717 and 1728. His children included: John (b.1717), baptised in Robertson; and David (b.1728), baptised in Cavers. James (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Sundhope in Castleton Parish, recorded on both the 1792 Horse Tax and Dog Tax Rolls. He was probably related to the James recorded being hired at Braefilda in 1750. James (1756/7–1837) shepherd at Arkleton, son of John and Margaret Tait. In 1788 he married Elspeth Armstrong, and she died in 1815, aged 60. Their children included: John (b.1787); James (b.1789); Walter (1791–1803); Simon (b.1793), who was a labourer at Arkleton; and Mary (b.1795). The family are buried at Ewes Kirkyard. James (1763/4–1838) shepherd at Howpasley. He married Margaret Elliot (1762/3–1800). Their children included William and 2 who died in infancy. He secondly married Janet Brydon (1771/2–1850), who died at Roughley. Their son James was born in 1804, and also lived at Howpasley. James (1783–1871) son of John and Helen Lidlaw. He was ploughman at Arkleton in 1841 and 1851. By 1861 he was living at Sandyhaugh and described as ‘Formerly Ploughman’. He married Elizabeth Murray, and she appears to have already been deceased by 1841. Their children included: David (1810–71), who died at Meikledale Haugh; James (1811–70), who died at Tythehouse, Hockirk; Robert (b.1813); Adam (1815–90), who died at Changehouse, Teviothead; Helen (b.1817); Henry (1819–94), who died at Torwoodlee; Mary (b.c.1827); and Isabella (b.c.1827). James (b.1799/1800) born in Castleton Parish. He was a game-watcher at Clerkleap in 1841. He was then living with his sister Eliza and daughter Jane. James (b.1804) son of James and Janet Brydon. Like his father, he was an agricultural labourer at Howpasley. He was recorded as ‘Howpasley New’ in 1841, with his widowed mother living with his family. In 1851 he was a retired shepherd living at about 34 North Hermitage Street in Newcastle. In 1833 he married Esther Hardie (from Castleton Parish) and their children included Nancy, James, John, Janet, Esther and Adam (b.1846). James (b.1829/30) son of Simon and Mary Jardine. He was a shepherd at Arkletonshiel in 1851. He was then living with his sister Elspeth and brother Adam. He was married by 1861, his wife being Margaret, and their children including Simon, John and James. He could be the James recorded as farmer at Arkleton in 1868. James (b.1829/30) born in Kirkton Parish, he was a shepherd at Borthwickshiels in 1861. His wife was Janet and their children included Adam, Francis, John Elliot and Margaret. John (d.bef. 1502) resident probably of the Holydean or Nisbet areas, who was killed along with James. At the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh in 1502 there is mention of several men being declared fugitives for their parts in these murders, the surnames including Jack, Morrison, Ruffy, Smith, Thorbrand and Weir. Additionally John Coltart in Rutherford was beheaded for the crime. The details of the events that led to these murders are not recorded. Since John’s name was given first, he was presumably either father or elder brother of James. John (16th/17th C.) Burgess of Selkirk who was recorded as ‘knokkeiper’ (i.e. clock-keeper) in 1608. John, brother of Walter Scott of Woll, and his half-brother John Turnbull came to his house and wounded him, apparently on being ‘hounded out’ by Robert Scott of Haining. The 2 were apprehended by the Bailies of Selkirk, whereupon a group of other Scotts and their followers (from Thirlestane, Bowhill, Synton and other places) rescued the pair. The exact nature of the dispute is now obscure. John (17th C.) miller of Appotside Mill, witness to a sasine of 1632. He is also recorded as ‘Johnne Jacksowme’ in 1637 when his son William witnessed a sasine in Hobkirk Parish. John (17th C.) ‘webster’ at Hawick Shiel in 1694, according to the Hearth Tax rolls. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. His children included: Elizabeth (b.1703); and Margaret (b.1705). John (17th/18th C.) recorded at Todshaw in 1711 when his son William was baptised in Robertson Parish. John (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. In 1750 he married Bessie Elliot, who was from Hawick Parish. Their children included Catherine (b.1752). John (18th C.) resident at Phillippines in 1763 when his daughter Janet was baptised in Robertson Parish. He is probably the John who married Margaret Tait and had children, baptised in Robertson Parish, including: Margaret (b.1744); Bessie (b.1747); James (b.1748); John (b.1750); Bessie (b.1752); Robert (b.1753); Walter (b.1755); Isobel (b.1758) and Helen (b.1760). In 1753 the record says ‘the mother of the child being sponser’, suggesting that he was not from Robertson, but his wife was. John (18th C.) resident of Ewes Parish.
Jackson

He married Margaret Tait (probably in 1754) and their children, baptised in Ewes, included Bessie (b.1755), James (b.1757), Beatrice (b.1758), Margaret (b.1769) and Simon (b.1760). It is unclear if he could be the same as the Roberton John, whose wife’s name was the same. John (1719/20–80) shepherd at Arkletonshiel. He married Margaret Tait, who died in 1794, aged 63. Their children included James (b.1756/7), who was also shepherd at Arkleton. John (1787–1870) son of James and Elspeth Armstrong. He was at least the 3rd generation of his family to be shepherds in Ewesdale. At the age of 23 he married Betty Oliver (1789–1870), who was literally from across the road. They had 16 children, born in Castleton Parish: Walter (1811–92); Peter (1813–91); James (1814–95); George (b.c.1815); Jennet (1816–97); John (1818–95); Elspeth (1820–85); Jane Jardine (1821–1907); Mary (b.c.1822); Charles Maxwell (1824–77); Barton (1826–53); Adam (1828–1908); Simon (1829–95); Betty (1831–90); Margaret (1831–1914); and Ellen (or Helen, 1833–89). Around 1838 he emigrated to America, most of his family joining him in 1840, settling in Andes, Delaware County, New York. John (18th/19th C.) resident of ‘Hardon’ (probably Harden in Castleton Parish) in 1821 when he subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’. He may be the shepherd John who was at Riccarton in 1835. John (b.1790s) son of Adam and Helen Crozier. Like his father he was shepherd at Redmoss in Castleton Parish. He was there in 1835 (while another John was shepherd at Riccarton) and still lived there among Parish heads of households in 1841. He married Helen Moore and their children were: William (b.1821); Elizabeth (b.1825); Helen (b.1827), married William Glendinning; Adam (b.1829); James (b.1831); Walter (b.1833); Agnes (b.1835); John (b.1838); David (b.1841); and Thomas (b.1843). John (b.1801/2) born in Jedburgh Parish, he was a farmer at Bush in Ewesdale. In 1861 he was at Ewes, farming 2035 acres and employing 6 people. His wife was Eleanor H. and their children included Thomas L. John (1815/6–76) clogger in Hawick, from Langholm, he was born in Ewesdale. He is listed as a clog-maker on the High Street in Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1861 he was listed at 9 Howegate. He married Agnes Hunter (born in Wilton), who died in 1912, aged 83; she was described as a ‘vigorous woman, belonging to the family of grocers etc.’ Their children were Simon (who married a daughter of ‘Danny o the Dean’), Margaret (who died young), Thomas, Robert, Thomas (again), Mary (who emigrated to Australia with her mother, but died aged 16) and John (mill cashier). He is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. John (d.1909) son of John, he was known as a somewhat simple individual. He worked as cashier with A.P. Innes & Co. and with William Lockie’s. He was Clerk of the Deacon’s Court at St. George’s Kirk in the early 1900s. Margaret (b.1791/2) shopkeeper at ‘Poor’s houses’ in Ewesdale. She is listed there in 1851, when she was unmarried. She was probably related to Elizabeth. Patrick (15th C.) listed in 1463/4 among the men who were rewarded by the King for assisting in the capture of John Douglas of Balveny, probably part of the force led by Scott of Buccleuch. He is recorded as ‘Philippus Jakson’. The other men were Scotts, Turnbulls, a Gledstains, a Langlands, a Dalgleish etc., and so he is probably local. Robert (15th/16th C.) tenant in Howpasley. He is recorded in 1494/5 at the Justice-airé in Jedburgh when he was surety for himself and fined for not appearing. He could also be the Robert who was recorded in 1494/5 along with Adam Howatson, when Alexander Turnbull, son of Andrew Turnbull of Dryden, had remission for the crime of resetting them. Perhaps the same Robert is listed in the Exchequer Rolls in 1501 among mostly local men who had been fined. His name is given as ‘Robertas Jakson’. The other 15 men listed were mostly from the area immediately around Hawick. Perhaps the same ‘Roberti Jakson’ was also listed in 1501 among 10 men (mostly Turnbulls) whose fines were remitted. Probably the same Robert was described as tenant in Wolfdeuchhead in 1502 when he had remission for bringing in ‘traitors of Leven’ to steal cattle and goods from Ninian Murray at Kershope, with John Turnbull of Dryden as his surety. He was described being ‘with the Laird of Howpasley’ at the same court in Jedburgh in 1502 when he had remission for stealing cattle and other goods from Kershope. Robert ‘Hob’ (16th C.) tenant of Sir Walter Scott of Howpasley in the lands of Outersideig in 1569. Sir Walter acted as cautioner for his tenants at a meeting in Hawick, assuring that they would obey the laws of the Lord Regent. Robert (b.1832/3) shepherd at Wester Alemoor. His wife was Janet and their children included Janet and Adam. He made coin donations to the Museum. Simon (1793–1855) son of James and Elspeth Armstrong, he was a farm worker at Arkleton. He was living at Arkleton Cottage in 1841. He married Mary Jardine and their children included: Betty (b.1819); Elspeth (1822–74), who went out to America to join her brothers; Walter (b.1827); John (b.1825); James (b.1829); Simon (b.1831); William: Adam J. (1836–1922), who emigrated to New York state; and Thomas. He died at Dorniegill. Simon (b.1852) son of John, he lived at 9 Howeagate. He married Margaret Stewart, daughter of ‘Danny o the Dean’, and was known as an ardent Liberal.

Thomas (d.bef. 1580) son of Alexander, resident of Lilliesleaf. In 1579/80 he renounced his 2½ husbandlands in Lilliesleaf to Walter Riddell of that Ilk. This is because he ‘now dwells in England and is in service there and cannot, therefore, occupy the said roum’. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish who married Marion Dalgleish. Their children included: John (b.1645); and Agnes (b.1650). probably the same Thomas witnessed a baptism in 1651 for Robert Elliot.

Thomas (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Bellendale in 1764. He married Isobel Thomson in Roberton in 1752. His children included Margaret (b.1758) and Richard (b.1760) and Peggy (b.1764). Patrick (b.1754), baptised in Yarrow, may also be his son. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was living at Harden in 1798. He married Mary Veitch in Cavers in 1782. Their children included: John (b.1798), baptised in Roberton. Thomas (b.c.1810) farm worker living at Broadlee in Roberton Parish in 1841. His wife was Harriet and their children included James, Robert, Janet, Thomas, Adam and John. Thomas (b.1810/1) from Westerkirk, he was farmer at Shankend in 1851. He was unmarried and living with his nieces Jeanie and Elizabeth Corbet at that time. In 1861 he was a carrier visiting Ormiston Lochend at the time of the census. Thomas (19th/20th C.) one of the survivors of the Gallipoli Campaign, who visited the region in a group of Hawick veterans in 1965. Walter (15th C.) witness in 1456 to a document relating to the lands of Whitchesters, witnessed at Branxholme for Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch. He is recorded as ‘Walterus Jakson’. The document probably refers to the return for John of St. Michael a few years earlier.

Walter (18th C.) hid at Falnash. In 1740 he witnessed a baptism for Archibald Elliot, cottar at Falnash. He married Barbara Scott in Cavers Parish in 1731. Their children baptised in Hawick Parish included: John (b.1734); Isobel (b.1737); and Betty (b.1739). The witnesses to the 1737 baptism were Walter Wilson (servant to Walter Scott in Commonsides) and John Teller (Kirk Officer).

Walter (18th/19th C.) resident of Riccarton in 1821 when he subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’. Walter (1803–89) younger son of Adam and Helen Crozier. He was a shepherd like his father. He worked at Braidlie and elsewhere in Liddesdale. He may be the Walter, shepherd at Larriston, recorded in 1835–40. He married Nicholas Hislop. Their children were: Jean (b.1825); Elizabeth (b.1827), who married James Edgar, grocer in Castleton; Jean (again, b.1829); Isabella (b.1831); Janet (b.1835); David (b.1837); Margaret (b.1839); William (b.1842); Jamina; and Thomasina. His children were born at North Greenholm, Cleuchhead, Redmoss, Larriston Rigg and Larriston House. William (17th C.) son of John. He was tenant at Appotside Mill in 1637 when he witnessed a sasine. William (18th C.) married Agnes Lillico in Hawick in 1722. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Jane Miller in 1787 and their children included: Isabel (b.1788); Janet (b.1791); and Joan (b.1793). The witnesses in 1788 and 1791 were Postmaster James Inglis and Thomas Miller (surely related to his wife), and in 1793 were butcher George Deans and Thomas Wallace. William (18th/19th C.) married Janet Laidlaw in Wilton Parish in 1817. William (18th/19th C.) weaver in Newcastle.

He is listed among heads of households in 1835. William (19th C.) resident of Dinlabyre in 1868. William (b.1808/9) from Castleton, he was groom at Greenriver in Hobkirk Parish in 1861. William (b.1823/4) shepherd at Riccarton in the 1860s. He was possibly son of John, shepherd at Redmoss. His wife was Isabella and their children included christin, John, James and Robert T. (formerly spelled ‘Jacksone’, ‘Jakson’, ‘Jaksone’, ‘Jaksonn’, etc.).

Jack startles a stovy (jawk-star-tulz-a-stö-vee) n., arch. saying among shepherds when the hill-tops appear to undulate in the heat, heat haze.

The Jacobites (thu-ja-kō-bits) n. followers of the Stuarts in the 18th century, particularly during the two rebellions of 1715 and 1745. There were local Jacobite sympathisers, but support was not widespread in the Borders. Zerubabel Haig of Bemersyde was possibly the only local nobleman to support the Jacobites, while Elliot of Minto and others were in favour of King George. However, 16 men from Teviotdale joined the Jacobite force at Jedburgh. In mid-October 1715 about 200 horsemen under Lord Kenmure...
Jacob’s Ledder

and Mr. Foster passed through Hawick, where they proclaimed ‘the Chevalier’ King James VIII; the Hawick Session records state ‘No sermon, in regard of ye tumult occasioned by a numerous multitude in arms against King George and his government’. It is also said that they ransacked Stobs for the armoury that they heard was there. Robert Patten’s ‘History of the Rebellion’ describes Hawick as ‘a small poor Market-Town belonging to the Duchess of Buccleuch at whose House the English Lords with their Relations, and Mr. Forster took up their Quarters’. Jacobite divisions then met at Kelso and there was much debate about what course to follow. About 2 weeks later James’ Highland host, commanded by Lord Derwentwater and his brother Charles Radcliffe, marched south, coming to Hawick from Jedburgh. Some officers, including Derwentwater, Radcliffe and Kenmure, were quartered in the Tower, while the Highland host were encamped on the Moor. There was a near mutiny there, with the Highlanders refusing to march into England, preferring to fight the enemy on Scottish ground. They spent the night of October 29th at Hawick, and that night there was a false alarm raised, with speculation that it was a ruse to test the Highlanders. The next day the soldiers marched on to Langholm and were later convinced to cross into England. The Session book records succinctly ‘No Sermon, Kenmure, Englishes and Highlanders in ye town’. There are several other entries in the Session records of official days of thanksgiving or praying for the success of the King’s armies and such like. The country was generally in an unstable state at this time, the Hawick Minister saying in 1716 that ‘the reason was that he had not sooner begun to catechize, the countrie was in a tumult occasioned by manie rising of arms against ye present government of our sovereign, King George’. Adam Turnbull of Denesyde (near Hawthornside) was also said to be a Stuart supporter and convinced to give up his family lands and flee in 1715. During the 1745 rebellion the people of Hawick appear to have offered essentially no support; however, there were probably individuals who supported the Jacobite cause, as in the case against a Selkirk shoemaker in 1743 for ‘drinking the Pretender’s health’. Part of a force under Lord Balmerino, along with cavalry, spent the night in Hawick in November of that year, while ‘Bonnie Prince Charlie’ stayed at Larriston. Robert Wilson tells several stories about 1745 which are probably confused with events of 1715, for example that Walter Gledstains of Whitlaw was an officer under the Prince, and that a lady from Hawick followed the Prince all the way to Carlisle, but refused to be given an audience. An old man called Charles Stewart residing in Hawick Parish at the end of the 18th century was said to have been an illegitimate son of Bonnie Prince Charlie; however, many people were called Charles around that time. There is also a tale (no doubt largely fictional!) of a Hawick man who acted as guide when the army passed through in 1745, meeting with Lord Lovat, and later becoming a barber in Newcastle, where he slit the throat of one of the main testifiers against Lovat. A butter dish, said to have been used when Bonnie Prince Charlie dined at Newmill (although that seems doubtful) was presented to the Museum in 1856. Another story tells of a detachment of the Jacobite army camping near Spittal-on-Rule and after having their paymaster’s money-bag stolen the Highlanders threatened to burn Denholm, after which the money was returned. When some of the Highlanders marched up the Rule valley towards Carlisle they enlisted Sam Oliver, the Hobkirk schoolmaster to be their guide through Liddesdale. When a small part of Charlie’s army passed through Castleton they carried off a beehive belonging to a weaver from there; after failing to get it back he is said to have proclaimed ‘Let them go, (with a jeer), I have furnished the Prince a larger number, in full armour, with several months’ provision, than the greatest chieftan in the Highlands’ – ‘Well six full months and mair went by The Prince was then in hiding He’d rued the day he didna’ bide and sie Hawick’s Common-Riding’ [T].

jambstane (jawm-stän) n., arch. a stone part of a doorway – ‘I took my rung that I had flung Ayont the auld jambstane …’ [WaD].
James (jämz) n. name of 7 Stuart (or Stewart) Kings of Scotland, including 2 Kings of the United Kingdom. James I (1394–1437) King from 1406, although in name only until 1424. He had been sent away from Scotland to avoid his uncle the Duke of Albany, but was captured by the English and spent 18 years in effective captivity. He returned to Scotland and led the killing of Albany’s relatives. There was dispute over his rights to the throne, leading to him being killed in a plot involving the Earl of Atholl (Albany’s brother), possibly in a blocked up sewer at Blackfriars Monastery. In 1412, while captive at Croydon, he granted a confirming charter of the lands of Hawick (as well as Drumlanrig and Selkirk) to William Douglas of Drumlanrig; the charter was written in his own hand and still survives. James II (1430–60) King from 1437–60, he was crowned at Kelso Abbey. After the death of the Regent, the 5th Earl Douglas, he schemed to have other Douglas’ killed, and personally killed the Black Douglas at a state dinner. His defeat of the Douglas forces at the Battle of Arkinholm in 1455 led to the weakening of the strength of the House of Douglas, including their power in Teviotdale, which shifted to the Scotts. He became heavily involved in military conflicts with England, but brought peace and prosperity to the Nation for a short time. He also moved the capital from Perth to Edinburgh. He married Mary of Gueldres. He granted John Langlands the half Barony of Wilton in 1451. He died when a cannon exploded during the siege of Roxburgh castle, and it is said that a holly bush later marked the

James III (c.1452–88) King from 1460. Born the Duke of Rothesay, he was apparently not a popular King and was also reportedly bisexual. He was crowned at Kelso Abbey a week after his father died. During his minority he was under the control of the Boyd family. In 1464 he granted lands to Walter Scott of Buccleuch and Kirkurd in gratitude for services to himself and his father. He married Margaret of Denmark, receiving the Orkneys and Shetlands as a dowry. There were ongoing feuds with his 2 brothers and with other noblemen. An army was raised against him at the Battle of Sauchieburn, in which his own son fought against him. He was killed immediately afterwards by an opponent disguised as a priest. Just a few days before his death he regranted the Barony of Cavers to William Douglas, after Douglas had promised to be faithful to the King and to defend him ‘against all that live or die shall’. James IV (1473–1513) King from 1488, he was involved in the Battle of Sauchieburn against his father James III. He is regarded as an effective and popular ruler. In an attempt to make peace with Henry VII he married Margaret Tudor in 1503, celebrated in poetry as the union of the thistle and the rose (and taking place at Galashiels Market Cross). He also visited Eskdale in 1503. In 1510 he visited Rulewater to suppress some outlaws there; he is supposed to have publicly humiliated a group of about 200 Turnbulls at Spittal-on-Rule, hanging perhaps 20 of them. He removed Douglas’s lands of Hawick in 1510, but re-granted them in the 1511 charter, which contained the ‘burgh of barony’ status for Hawick. When Henry VIII invaded France he was thrown into a new conflict with England. He led the Scots at Flodden and was killed there – ‘Royal James still urged the battle, Though forewarned it would be fatal’ [JH], ‘The fatal arrow Breathless laid the royal hero; Round him youths and warriors hoary, Ended their career of glory’ [T]. James V (1512–42) King from 1513, when only 18 months old. During his minority the country was ruled by his mother and then by the Duke of Albany. Later his step-father, the Earl of Angus, tried to wield power. In 1526 Sir Walter Scott of Branzholme and Sir James Douglas of Drumlanrig (and Hawick) attempted to rescue him from the control of Angus near Melrose. He visited Jedburgh in both 1526 and 1529. In 1530 he put together an army from the loyal Lairds and marched on the Borders to try to suppress the worst of the ‘Theives and lymmaris’. This led to the execution of William Cockburn of Henderland and Adam Scott of Tushielaw. He also had Johnnie Armstrong and several of his supporters hanged at Caerlaverock in a manner, which was considered grossly unfair at the time, giving rise to a ballad. He was traditionally associated with Hawick through the ‘Hab o Hawick’ episode, when he is said to have stayed at Drumlanrig’s Tower. In fact in that 1530 expedition (as traced in the ‘Household Books’) it is known that he stayed at Caerlaverock and then at Allan Water (signing a charter at Priesthaugh), and probably got no closer to Hawick before moving through Ewesdale. However, an English letter suggests that he passed through Hawick in November 1542, en route to the fateful battle at Solway Moss (although Scottish accounts say that he stayed at Lochmaben Castle). He married Madeleine of France, and later Mary of Guise. He died at Falkland Palace, after the Scots defeat at Solway Moss, apparently out of a lack of will to live. He was succeeded by his infant daughter Mary (‘Queen of Scots’). His illegitimate sons included: James, ‘the Regent Moray’; James, Commendator of Melrose and Kelso; Robert, Prior of Whithorn; Robert, Earl of Orkney; Adam Prior of Charter House; and John, Lord Darnley, Commendator of Coldingham. James VI (1566–1625) King of Scotland from 1567. In 1570 his army gathered at Hawick for a ‘Raid’. In 1592, Francis Earl of Bothwell and others tried to capture him at Falkland, this leading to a number of Border Lairds being denounced as rebels, including Walter Scott of Harden and Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst. He became James I of England in 1603. He was son of Mary and Lord Darnley, and was raised as a Presbyterian. He was never a very popular ruler in England, but only briefly returned to Scotland once after being crowned in London. After assuming the English throne he turned some of his attention to the Borders, setting up a commission in 1605, which appointed Sir William Cranston to ‘tame’ the Borders on the Scottish side. This spread terror across the Borders, including a huge number of hangings and forced emigrations, and led to great hardship for many local clans. However, it also led to the region becoming much more peaceful, with the ‘Marches’ now being referred to as the ‘Middle Shires’. In 1617 he visited Cavers house on his way to Edinburgh. Known as one of the most intellectual Kings, he fostered culture in Britain and authorised the popular English translation of the Bible. He married Anne of Denmark and was succeeded by their son Charles – ‘A tale of bygone days I sing, When James the Sixth was Scotia’s king: Oft then the Borderland did ring With sounds of sternest strife "[JCG]. James VII (1633–1701) King from 1685–89. Younger brother of Charles II, he was Duke of York for much of his life, and converted to Catholicism while in exile in France. This led to his unpopularity throughout most of Britain. He made attendance at conventicles a treasonous act, but had to include tolerance to Protestant dissenters in his laws of tolerance to Catholics, allowing Presbyterian ministers to return to their parishes in 1686. He is also known for having New York named after him, as well as for being heavily involved with the slave trade. The Duke of Monmouth (and Buccleuch), Charles II’s illegitimate son tried to seize the throne from him and was executed in 1685. In 1688 he was ousted in the 'Glorious Revolution' by the Protestant William of Orange, husband of his daughter Mary. Ministers who continued to pray for him (rather than to William and Mary) were deprived from their parishes. He died in exile in France, continuing to claim his right to the throne. His son James Francis Edward Stuart ('the Old Pretender') took up the Jacobite cause to regain the crown for the Stuarts.

Jameson (jäm-sin) n. George (19th/20th C.) son of Christopher and Agnes Scott, from Branxton Moor (near Flodden Field), Northumberland. He was gamekeeper at Ancrum, then Chisholme and became gamekeeper at Wolfelee in 1893. In 1877 he married Agnes Hislop. James (18th C.) surgeon of Kelso who was involved in the sale of Adderstone by Francis Scott of Gorrenberry to Capt. John Douglas, brother to the Laird of Cavers in 1750. Rev. William (c.1593–1661) educated at Edinburgh University, he was admitted as a minister at Peebles in 1617, and became minister at Langnewton. In 1621 he complained about John Ker of Langnewton and others for violently interfering with grain that was impounded for his use. In 1631 he complained that several Kers from around Ancrum, Douglas of Timpedean and others took his teinds. He was one of 51 ministers who signed a Protest for the Liberties of the Kirk’. In 1638 he signed the National Covenant, probably in Hawick. In 1640 he was translated to Jedburgh, but had to take on an assistant in 1658. He took part in 7 General Assemblies. His son John was minister at Eccles (ass also Jamieson).

the James Thomson Brig (thu-jäinz-ton-sin-brig) n. modern footbridge linking Teviot Road with Commercial Road, from near the bottom of Mill Port to the back of the Burns Club. It was built in 2005 and named after local poet James Thomson.

the James Thomson Statue (thu-jäinz-ton-sin-staw’-yoo) n. commemorative bronze statue, sculpted by Bill Landles, with some involvement by Iain Scott. It was unveiled in 2006, beside the bridge named after the local poet. It depicts Thomson seated at his writing desk and incorporates 4 tablets with some of his best-known verses, oriented in relevant directions, while above ‘mony a costly wreath’s been twined Ti grace his honest brow’. A smaller plaque dedicates the work to Anne Redpath. A few stones built into the plinth came from the Auld Mid Raw. Thomson himself is facing ‘Where Sli trìg dances doon the glen to join the Teviot waters’.

Jamie (jä-mee) n. diminutive or hypocorism for ‘James’ (also ‘Jimmie’/'Jimmy’ as well as the former ‘Jememie’).

Jamie Adams (jä-mee-aw-dumz) n. Hawick character, probably of the 19th century. He could be the James Adams from England who was a road labourer living in Hawick in 1851 – ‘Sally Machusky, Betty Johnny, Jamie Adams and Tammy Graham, The little Gover as smart as ony, Auld Mag Lamb and her penny krame’ [HI].

Jamie Cant (jä-mee-kawnt) n. nickname of James Broon.

Jamie Jolly (jä-mee-jo-lee) n. local nickname, probably from the 19th century – ‘Anon Jock Bowlie shuffles by, And Hie Hi hobbles ahint pell-mell; There’s Jamie Jolly watchin’ a skly, And Daft Jamie ringin’ St. Mary’s bell’ [HI].

Jamie Nichol’s Trough (jä-mee-ni-kulz-trof) n. alternative name for Mag Nichol’s Trough.

Jamieson (jä-mee-sin) n. Andrew (b.c.1800) innkeeper in Denholm who was locally well-known for his collection of historical artefacts. He was listed as a vintner in Denholm in Pigot’s 1837 directory. His personal museum is described in a poem by John Halliday, published in 1847, ‘Epistle to Naturalists and Antiquarians’, which was ‘written on viewing a collection of antiquities, preserved beasts, birds, reptiles &c., belonging to Mr Andrew Jamieson, Innkeeper, Denholm’. He married Helen Beattie in 1825 and their children included: Agnes; Margaret; Helen; and Isabella – ‘I’ve tell’t ye a’ o’ Jamie’s hame, Sae gang an’

see: Weed is he worthy o’ his fame, An’ three times three’ [JoHa]. Andrew (b.1827/8) shoemaker in Denholm. His wife was Helen and they had a daughter Isabella. Archibald (b.c.1800) watchman at a woollen factory. He was listed as a labourer at Wilton Dean among heads of households in 1835. In 1841 he was living at Wilton Road with his wife Isobel and their children Gideon, John, Archibald, Margaret and Agnes. Rev. Henry M. ‘Harry’ minister of Lilliesleaf Kirk, linked with Ashkirk, 1969–76. James (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll among ‘ye poor’. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. His daughter Bessie was baptised in 1702. In 1704 he witnessed a baptism for Robert Elliot in Galalaw. James (b.1817/8) from Cavers Parish, he was a stocking-maker in Hawick. In 1861 he was living at Roadhead with his wife Mary Ann. James (1838–bef. 1905) born in Hawick, among his childhood friends were John Inglis and James Winthrope. From a relatively poor family, he received little schooling, but from an early age had an aptitude for drawing and reading. At about 14 he became an apprentice with James Tait, druggist, and his employer encouraged him to pursue his literary interests. At one point he took down the words of ‘The Sunflower’, the only known surviving poem of Dr. John Douglas, allowing it to be later printed in the Hawick Advertiser. He became a member of the Hawick Mutual Improvement Society in 1858, reading his first paper there that year, and remaining associated with that society until he left Hawick. His first poem ‘Home Sickness’, was published in the Hawick Advertiser in 1856, and he made frequent contribution there afterwards. 3 of his verses appeared in James Watson’s ‘Living Bards of the Border’ (1859). He is probably best known for his poem ‘The Aicht o’clock Bell’, about the ringing of the curfew bells in Hawick. His poem ‘Eventide in Teviotdale’ received a prize when it was published in ‘The Key’. He intended to publish a volume of his poetry, but this never appeared. He had several temporary positions in Hawick, then left the Town permanently in 1861 to train as an engraver with James R. Hope in Edinburgh. He then worked with Mould & Todd, where he renewed his acquaintanceship with the engraver C.O. Murray (brother of ‘Dictionary’ Murray). Apart from a short stint in Bradford he remained in Edinburgh until about 1888 when he moved to Aberdeen. James (1919/20–60) born in Hawick, he worked in the Post Office and joined the Royal Corps of Signals in 1939. In 1948 he was appointed Assistant Controller of Posts in the Federated Malay States, staying there until 1959 and then moving to Western Australia. His wife, Margaret Stewart Tweedie operated a store and post office there until her death in 1973, aged 60. Their children included J. Jardin (b.1943) and Kay (b.1952). Rev. Dr. John (1759–1838) Scottish lexicographer. Son of a Glasgow minister, he became a theology student at age 14 and a minister at 20. He started at Colmonell in Ayrshire and was Anti-Burgher minister at Nicholson Street in Edinburgh from 1797, accepting the call that John Young turned down in order to stay in Hawick. He helped to re-unite the Burgher and Anti-Burgher secession churches. He was a keen antiquarian, with a particular interest in language. His ‘Etymological Dictionary of the Scottish Language’ (1808) was a unique work for its time, using illustration from both old and modern Scots. The Supplement, which appeared in 1825 had the assistance of people from all over Scotland; there are many descriptions therein of Teviotdale words and idioms, which are otherwise unrecorded (these are usually noted as either ‘Roxb.’ or ‘Teviotd.’). One person who helped him directly was Mrs. Patrick, the eldest daughter of Rev. Young of the Green Kirk in Hawick. Others in the Roxburghshire area included Thomas Wilkie from Innerleithen, James Fair of Langlee, the Shortreeds of Jedburgh, James Hogg (the Trick Shepherd) and Hogg’s nephew Robert. He laid the essential groundwork for what would become the Scottish National Dictionary. He was a keen angler and later in life spent time every summer fishing on the Tweed and its tributaries. John (b.c.1790) shoemaker in Denholm, listed in Pigot’s 1837 directory. In 1841 he was on Main Street with his wife Janet Laidlaw and children James, Catherine, William, John, Andrew and Peter (also written ‘Jamisone’ and variants; cf. Jameson).

Jamieson’s Croft (jä-mee-sinz-kroft) n. former croft near Hawick, the name being used long after the farmstead itself was gone. It is mentioned by James Wilson in 1850 and J.J. Vernon in 1900, but the precise location is uncertain.

Jamie Tackets (jä-mee-taw-kits) n. nickname for a Hawick character of the early 19th century, known for his smuggling – ‘Wullie the Pailde, Gleid Rob, Knackets, Balmer the Bugler, Bobby Trott, Pies Oliver, and Jamie Tackets, Don Pedro, Pether Hill, Waulk Scott’ [HI], ‘There’s Jamie Tackets o’ Hawick, And other two also,
Jamie the Poeter

Jamie Tamson (ja-mee-tam-sin) n. familiar name for James Thomson.

Jamie Telfer (ja-mee-tel-fur) n. ‘Jamie Telfer o’ the Fair Dodheid’, ballad telling of the Captain of Newcastle stealing the cattle of Jamie Telfer of Dodhead, who then goes to raise the fray. It is best known from the version in Sir Walter Scott’s ‘Minstrelsy’, where Telfer roused the Scotts, who rode off in pursuit, killing all the English and capturing their cattle, but leading to the death of Willie Scott. In another version (sometimes referred to as the Sharp manuscript and entitled ‘…i’ the Fair Dodhead’) it is the Elliots who are roused and the Scotts who refuse to help Telfer. There is much circumstantial evidence that Sir Walter changed the words to switch the Scott and Elliot roles, thereby mangling the geographical sense of the ballad; he is thus attacked in an essay by Col. Elliot. The existence of multiple versions is one of the reasons why the location of ‘the Fair Dodheid’ is uncertain. In the pro-Elliot version it is likely to be the former farmstead in the Ettrick valley near Singlie, while in the pro-Scott version it would make more sense if it was in the Dod Burn valley, although there is no evidence there was ever a place there called Dodhead. Andrew Lang wrote a chapter on the ballad, defending Sir Walter Scott, and arguing that in the end it is a work of fiction, rather than history. Whatever the details of the original version or its historical accuracy, it remains one of the few Border ballads where some of the action takes place in the immediate neighbourhood of Hawick.

Jamie the Poeter (ja-mee-thu-poe-i’-ur) n. local nickname for James Hogg, the Ettrick Shepherd.

Jamie the Scaur (ja-mee-thu-skawr) n. local nickname, probably from the 19th century – ‘Dan Narry and Kit i’ the Bar, The Cud and Coulter and Five O’clock, Robbie Speedy and Jamie the Scaur, Andra Adamson and Porritch Jock’ [HI].

Jane Dice’s Kirn see Jenny Dice’s Kirn

jannie (ja-nee) n. a janitor, especially in a school – ‘…the tug-o-war team were trained be Jock Heggie the jannie’ [IWL].

Januar (ja-new-ar, jan-war) n., arch. January – ‘…writtin at Hawik the penult day of Januar’ [RBA1561], ‘…that the said Mr Blair did upon the twenty-third day of Januar immediatlie last baptism marry the said John Young upon the above designed Margaret Clerke …’ [PR1706], ‘Each ’eer, as Januar’ – end returns, Ilk yowe and stirkie waefu’ murns …’ [DH].

Janus (ja-nis) n. column in the Hawick News, typically stirring up local issues. It was originated by Neil Mackay, but written by several contributors over the years.

japperty-jee (jaw-pur’-ee-jee) n., arch. wreck and ruin – ‘It’s a’ ti japperty-jee’ [GW] (also ‘jaaperty-jee’).

jappit (jaw-pee’, -pi’) pp., arch. splashed, splattered – ‘…whan A’m owther geetin jaapet an splairgeat wui dirt, or dunsh wui folk’ [ECS], ‘Ma top-coat an ma breek-feet ir aa jaapet wui glaar’ [ECS] (also ‘jaupit’).

the Japs (thu-jawps) v., pl. occasional nickname for people from Selkirk (originating among rugby supporters, and said to have come from the appearance of some housing on the way into the town from Hawick).

jar (jawr) n., poet. disharmony, dispute – ‘For Border chieftains soon began To blow the coal of war; And over all fair Liddesdale, Spread robbery, blood, and jar’ [JTe].

Jardine (jar-, jer-, jawr-din, -deen) n. Adam (17th C.) tenant in ‘Heugh-head’, although it is unclear which Hengheid this might have been. He was mentioned in 1687 when the will of his wife Isobel ’Rickeltown’ is recorded. He may be the Adam who witnessed a baptism for William Gardner in Hawick in 1705 and the weaver who witnessed a baptism for weaver James Brown in the same year. He could be the Adam who married Helen Cook in Hawick in 1702 or the Adam who married Margaret Frazer in Hawick in 1706.

Adam (1758–1811) son of weaver Andrew and Betty Brown, he was a miller in Hawick Parish and may also have worked as a carter. He is recorded in 1790 as ‘Under Miller’ when an unnamed child of his died; this was on the same day as the child of miller John Scott, perhaps suggesting he was under-miller of Hawick Mill (and that the same disease took the lives of the new-born children). In 1794 he was a ‘workman’. He married Margaret (or ‘Peggy’, b.1759) Murray in 1783, in Ewes Parish and she died in Hawick in 1797. Their children included: Elizabeth (b.1783), born at Howgill in Ewes, who married Andrew Scott, from Morebattle; Andrew (d.1787); an unnamed child (d.1790); John (b.1789/90); Isobel (d.1794), who died in infancy; and Helen (c.1796–1860), who died in Morebattle, unmarried. In 1798 he secondly married Jane Graham, who may have died in 1806. The witnesses in 1783 were John and William Murray (surely related to his wife). He died in Hawick. Adam (18th/19th C.) married Jane Graham in Hawick in 1798. Adam (19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish, living at Bygate in 1841. He married Jean Watson and their children included: Abraham (b.1833); and Isabela (b.1838/9). Alexander (b.1801/2) from Glasgow, he was a stockmaker in Hawick. He was one of the first Deacons and first Trustees of the Evangelical Union (later Congregational) Kirk in Hawick, in the late 1840s. He is recorded at 7 Teviot Crescent in 1841, 1851 and 1861. His wife was Janet. Their children included Elizabeth, Jessie, John, Alexander Pringle, Thomas and Jean. Andrew (17th C.) tenant at Dykeraw. He was listed in 1684 among many people declared as fugitives for refusing to conform to Episcopalianism. Andrew (17th C.) resident of Adderstoneshiel listed among the ‘deficient’ on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Andrew (17th C.) resident of the west-side of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. He was listed as ‘Andrew Jirdin’ among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell fund in 1693/4. He is probably the Andrew ‘Girdin’ when he entered the Town Book in 1711 to provide money for the Master of the new Grammar School. He was paid for mending the beam for the weights and hour of the night. He may be the weaver who witnessed baptisms for butcher Robert Hardie in 1723 and 1726 and for shoemaker George Oliver in 1745. He married Helen Cook in Hawick in 1702 and their children included Janet (b.1703), Margaret (b.1705), Andrew (b.1707), James (b.1708), Beatrix (b.1709), Jean (b.1711), John (b.1713), James (b.1717), William (b.1717), Helen (b.1718), Christian (b.1719), Andrew (b.1721) and Elizabeth (b.1722). The witnesses in 1703 were weaver Jasper Richardson and gardener William Gardner, in 1707 were James Gray (tenant in Whitlaw) and weaver James Wight, in 1708 were weavers Thomas Briggs and John Oliver, in 1709 were John and Jasper Richardson, in 1711 were weaver Thomas Briggs and gardener William Gardner, in 1713 were William Gardner and John Napier, and in 1721 were weaver Robert Tinlin and shoemaker John Scott. Andrew (18th C.) weaver in Hawick. In 1706 he married Margaret Fraser. He may be the same as one of the other Andrews. Andrew (18th C.) Hawick resident, possibly Burgh Officer or joiner. In 1732 he was paid for mending the beam for the weights of the clock in St. Mary’s Kirk. And in 1735 the Bailies and Council elected him ‘to keep the toun clock sufficiently to his power under the penalty of forfeiting a year’s salary’. It is unclear if he is the same as one of the other Andrews. Andrew (18th C.) probably the Andrew, son of Andrew, baptised in 1721. He was a weaver in Hawick. He married Betty Brown, who died in Hawick in 1781. Their children included: Isobel (b.1743); Helen (b.1745); and Adam (b.1758). The witnesses in 1743 were baker John Kedie and wright James Roger and in 1745 were late Bailie John Scott and saddler Francis Ruecastle. Archibald Jardine (19th/20th C.) writer of ‘History of Hawick Baptist Church’ (1925), as well as a short history of Hawick Home Mission. Archibald (b.1891) son of James. He worked in his father’s tweed merchant’s on Croft Road, this later becoming a drapery business and moving to 8 Oliver Place. He started in the family business at age 14 and retired in 1962. He also served in the Artillery in WWI. Charles (b.1817/8) farmer at Riccarton. He was on the Borders Union Railway Committee for Liddesdale in the 1850s. In 1851 he was farmer at Riccarton, employing 4 labourers. He was still farmer there in 1861, but was unmarried. He was a generous subscriber to David Anderson book of verse in 1868 and was recorded as farmer at Riccarton in the same year. Probably the same Charles was recorded as a 20-year-old farmer at Dinlabyre in 1841. He may be the son of Walter baptised in Castleton in 1817. Gavin (d.bef. 1535) recorded as ‘umquhill Gawin Jardin’ when a charter was revoked involving the lands of Broadlee in the Borthwick to James Douglas of Drumlanrig, in favour of him. It is unclear whether his family was local. George (b.1838/9) tailor in Newcastleton. In 1861 he was living on Langholm Street with his mother Elizabeth Swan and his siblings Margaret A. and William. M. Gilbert (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He was at Dinlabyre in 1784 when one of his children was baptised. He is recorded as ‘Mr. Gilbert Jardin, Dinlabyre’ in 1786 when he subscribed to a theological book by a Carlisle author. He was recorded in the period 1789–92 in the Horse Tax Rolls at Dinlabyre with 1 horse. His surname was ‘Jerden’ in 1797 when described as a footman at Haggiehaugh in Castleton Parish, working for Col. William Elliot. He married Isabel Sharp (from Southdean) in 1765. Their children included: James (b.1766); Helen (b.1771); Janet (b.1773); Isabel (b.1782); and Gilbert (b.1784). Robert (b.c.1778), farmer at Harwood on Teviot, may also have been his son (based on his children’s names). Hector (16th C.) tenant of Swinstead in Kirkton Parish. In 1581 he was ‘in Swynsteids’ along with James Murray when they (along with several Elliots) witnessed the sasine for Gavin Gledstains inheriting Stobs from his deceased brother George Gledstains. Helen ‘Nelly’ (d.1816) resident of Hawick Parish. Her death, along with ‘Frenchmans Bastard Child’, is recorded in 1816. It is unclear whose daughter she was. Presumably the father of her child was a French prisoner of war. James (17th/18th C.) recorded in Lymiecleuch in 1719 when his daughter Jane was baptised in Cavers Parish. James (b.1727), William (b.1732) and James (again, b.1734), baptised in Cavers, are probably also his children. James (18th/19th C.) farmer at Arkleton in Ewesdale in 1785–97 according to the Horse Tax Rolls. He had 3 farm horses and a saddle horse. He also paid the dog and clock taxes in 1797. James (18th/19th C.) tenant farmer at Dinlabyre, recorded on the 1794–97 Horse Tax Rolls. His name there is spelled ‘Jardane’. He was also taxed for having 3 non-working dogs in 1797. He is probably the son of Gilbert, born in Castleton Parish in 1766. It is unclear if he was the same man as the farmer at Larriston. He may be the James recorded aged 81 in 1841, living in Castleton village with his 29-year-old daughter Janet. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Betty Jardine and their children included: Isobel (b.1801); Robert (b.1805); Janet (b.1806); Helen (b.1808); and Betty (b.1813). James (18th/19th C.) farmer recorded at Larriston on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when he owned 4 horses. He was also taxed for having 4 non-working dogs in 1797. He is also recorded at Larriston in 1794. He is probably related to other Jardines who farmed in Liddesdale and was probably succeeded by James. He may be the James of Larriston listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805. He may also be the James of Thorlieshope listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1819, along with his son Walter. James (19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Helen Irving and their children included Isabel (b.1833); Agnes (b.1835); and Elizabeth (b.1838). James (d.c.1810) tenant farmer at Wauchope. His sons were John and Walter. He had a bond with the Elliots of Harwood in 1763. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Janet Oliver and their children included Elizabeth (b.1814). James (18th/19th C.) keeper of a public house in Newcastleton, listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. He was also listed as an innkeeper in Newcastleton among male heads of households in 1835, and ‘late innkeeper’ 1837–41. James of Thorlieshope (1809/10–46) eldest son of Walter of Thorlieshope. He was tenant farmer at Arkleton, being listed there in 1841. His son-in-law was Dr. Charles Maxwell, who had the lease of the farm at Riccarton. He died at Arkleton and was buried in Castleton. James (b.1815/6) born in Ecclefchan, son of mason John and Agnes Halliday. He was a frameworker in Hawick. In 1841 he was living at the head of Silver Street, in Jardine

1851 at about 14 Loan and in 1861 at 5 Loan. Probably the same ‘hosier’ James was in Jedburgh Jail in 1868. He married Beatrix Laidlaw in Hawick in 1836. Their children included: Margaret (b.1837); Agnes (b.1839); and Walter Brown (b.1841). In 1848 he secondly married Elizabeth Rodden in Hawick. Their children John (b.1849), Agnes (b.1851) and Elizabeth (b.1853) were baptised at Hawick Free Kirk. His wife (previously married to a Ballantyne) also had children Margaret and Charles. James (19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1839 he married Janet Turnbull, who was also from Hawick. James (19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Isabella Beattie and their son James was baptised in 1846. James of Larriston (19th C.) recorded as a principal landowner in Castleton Parish in the 1850s and 60s. He purchased Larriston from as a principal landowner in Castleton Parish in 1846. James of Larriston (19th C.) recorded in Pigot’s 1837 directory and the Jardine of Thorlieshope on the Committee of the Proprietors of Castleton Library in 1832. James (1852–1927) local poet, who always signed ‘J.J. Weensland’. He was a native of Dumfriesshire, being born at Broadmeadow, Ecclefechan, son of George. He was orphaned at the age of 9, and at 13 went to work for a manufacturer in Lockerbie. Not long after he moved to Weensland, where he served an apprenticeship in a tweed warehouse. He was said to be a regular attendee of evening classes. Due to an injury he gave up work as a warehouseman and became a tweed merchant, based on Croft Road. He contributed poems regularly to the local press and lived most of his life in Hawick. He served as President of the Border Bards Association in 1881. He married Margaret, daughter of Archibald Campbell Turnbull and Mary Buchan, who came from Ancrum. She died in 1938. Their children were: Georgina; Bessie Jane; and Archibald, who took over the family tweed merchant’s. John of Applegirth (15th C.) witness to a document relating to Whitchesters for the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1456; it is possible this refers to him being witness to the retour of a few years earlier. He may be the same John of ‘Appelgarth’ who sold Jardinefield to George Home of Wedderburn in 1476. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Isabel Pott and their children included: Janet (b.1794); and William (b.1807). He may be the William recorded in 1841 as 80 years old and a lodger at the spa at Deadwater, run by William, who was probably his son. John (1789/90–1877) born in Hawick, he later lived in Langholm. He was son of Adam and Margaret Murray, as described on his death certificate. He was a shoemaker in Langholm in 1861 and was described as ‘Post Messenger’ in Langholm in 1871. In 1812 he married Janet (or Jane), daughter of Walter Scott and Margaret Kennedy; she was born in Ettrick Parish. Their children included Walter, William, Thomas and James. John (19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Margaret Graham and their children included William (b.1833), John of Thorlieshope (b.1811) son of Walter of Thorlieshope. He farmed at Arkleton from the time his brother James died in 1846. He is listed as ‘Esq., of Thorlieshope, Arkleton, Ewes’ in the 1850s when he was on the Borders Union Railway Committee for Liddesdale. He was also ‘of Thorlieshope’ in Slater’s 1852 directory. He also served as a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire. He was still of Thorlieshope in the 1860s. He is listed at Arkleton in 1861, farming 2000 acres and employing 1 labourer. He was listed as owner of Thorlieshope on the Land Tax Rolls of about 1874. He remained unmarried. His support of the Liddesdale route for the railway was unpopular in Langholm – ‘Has Jardine gane to mind his dogs An’ left the maps to minin’ rogues; He may invest in tups an’ hoggs, But mind I’ve said it, His cash will sink in Plashett’s bogs As fast’s he’s made it’ [BM1907]. John (19th C.) married Ellen French. Their son Thomas Welsh was baptised in Hawick Free Kirk in 1847. John (b.1813/4) tenant of Ruecastle farm in 1837, and listed on the 1841 census. In 1851 he was farmer of 300 acres, employing 7 labourers. Sir John (d.1919) M.P. for Roxburghshire 1906–18. He was succeeded as Baronet Jardine by his son John Eric Birdwood. Peter (b.1847) born at Langhaugh Walls on the Wauchope estate, his mother was daughter of Langburnshiels shepherd William Tait. He was educated at Hobkirk Parish school and started working on Wolfelee estate in his teens, eventually becoming the forester. In 1866 he married Margaret Armour of Ayrshire (from the same family as Robbie Burns’
They had a daughter Janet Barr, who married W. Stedman. Robert (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Janet Elliot and their children included Isabel (b.1766). Robert (b.1761/2) toll-keeper and spirit dealer at Ewes New Toll Bar in 1841. He was living there with Catherine, probably his wife. Robert (b.c.1778) farmer at Harwood on Teviot from at least 1815. He may have been a son of Gilbert and Isabel Sharp from Castleton (based on the forenames of his children). He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He was recorded as ‘Independent’ at Harwood in 1841, along with his children Agnes, Isabella and Gilbert. He married Agnes, eldest daughter of John Nixon, in Hawick in 1811; she was recorded as ‘Mrs Jardine Har-wood’ when she died in Hawick in 1815. Their children included: Agnes (c.1815–71), who was a wood’ when she died in Hawick in 1815. Their children were: Isabella (1822–59), who married W. Stedman. Robert (18th/19th C.) shoe-maker in Hawick. He subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ in 1784. William (19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. In 1841 he was ‘Keeper of the Spa’ at Fairloans ‘or Dead Water Well Spa’. In 1851 he was a game-watcher at Tweedenbank. He married Agnes Ingleis and their children included: John (b.1833); James (b.1837); Thomas (b.1840); and Isabella (b.1845). He may have been son of John, who was recorded as a lodger at the spa in 1841. His sister Elizabeth was living with him in 1851 (formerly synonymous with Jordan; also written ‘Girdin’, ‘Gyrden’, ‘Jardin’, ‘Jardon’, ‘Jerdon’, ‘Jirdin’, ‘Jordan’, etc.).

Jean (deen) n. Christian name common in Scotland, formerly the popular form for ‘Jane’ or ‘Joan’ (in the 18th and 19th centuries this was usually the name used, even when ‘Jane’ appeared on the birth register).

Jean Caleb (deen-ká-leb) n. nickname of Jean Rutherford.

Jean Cumming’s (deen-ku-minz, ki-minz) n. shop run by Jean Cumming (or ‘Kimming’), situated on the north side of the Howegate in the early 19th century. It was well known for selling a wide variety of ‘small-wares’, dealing with almost everything edible or useful. The shop was in an old pended house, and was reached by descending 2 steps. It had no window at the front, but had its door in halves, so the owner could lean out the top while talking with passers-by. The room at the back had a small window and was the ‘Widow Cumming’s’ house. The building was thatched until first slated in the early 1800s. The shop was taken over by Jean’s daughter Nannie. A right of way led to the back from Kennedy’s on the Sandbed, which would be walked annually (also known as ‘Jean Kimming’s’).

Jean the Ranter (deen-thu-rawn-tur) n. character in a poem written by Old Hobbie of Skelfhill. She kept an alehouse at Branxholme, and was said to indulge in witchcraft, making Capt. Maitland fall in love with her daughter ‘The Bonny Lass of Branksome’. Further information from James Grieve, tenant in Branxholme Park, suggested that she was Jane Scott and kept an inn at Scatterpenny. She was presumably a widow at the time of the song, which (if it describes historical events) appears to be set about the late 17th century. It is possible she was the Jean Scott listed as a householder on the 1694 Hearth Tax records.

jeck (jek) v., arch. to discard, disband, break up, jilt, give up – ‘When we got tired of some too well-hidden, the cry would go up. ‘Oot, oot, oot, the game’s jecket up!’ [HAST1958], ‘She jeckit ’im up again, the limmer!’ [GW], to dislocate a joint, throw out of place by jerking – ‘A’ve jecket ma cuite’ [ECS] (similar to ‘jack’ in English).

Jedburgh

Jedburgh  (jed-bu-ru) n. official name for Jethart (the name first occurs in relation to ‘Jedburgh Forest’ in the early 14th century, but this modern anglicised form was not applied to the town until a document of 1630; it occurs on Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Jedd-brugh’).

Jeddart Justice  see Jethart Justice

Jedfit  (jed-fi’t) n. Jedfoot, former station on the Jedburgh Railway of the Kelso Branch of the North British Railway. The nearby ‘Jedfit Brig’ is the main road bridge across the foot of the Jed on the A698 from Hawick to Kelso.

Jedforest  (jed-forist) n. another name for Jedburgh, or the area around Jedburgh, used for example by the rugby team. ‘Jedburgh Forest’ was a former barony and regality, which included Southdean Parish and other outlying lands. The Lordship of Jedforest was held by the Douglases (since at least 1324) and the Homes and came into the hands of the Crown in 1539, which resulted in a surviving rental roll of 1541, listing the tenants and values of about 40 farms. The lands were it valued at more than £4400 in 1811. The rugged terrain was used as cover by the Scots forces harassing the English garrison at Jedburgh Castle in the 1330s and 1340s.

The Jedforest Club  (thu-jed-forist-klub) n. club set up in 1810 to serve the gentlemen of the area around Jedburgh, probably inspired by the older Forest Club of the Ettrick valley. The founder was William, Earl of Ancram (later Earl of Lothian) along with 23 other men. The Club met quarterly at the Spread Eagle Inn in Jedburgh, with the membership limited to 40. The members originally had to dine in a green jacket, specially made from Cheviot wool, replaced later with blue jackets. In 1834 many of the Whig supporters left the club after the Chairman refused to drink the health of the sitting M.P. (who was a Whig).

The Jedforest Hounds  (thu-jed-forist-hou-n-dz) n. fox hunting group, formed in the mid-19th century in the Rulewater area. The lands were set aside for hunting by the Duke of Buccleuch and it attracted horsemen from a wide area, centred on Rulewater. The western boundary was the Allan Water, on the north the Teviot, on the east Dere Street and on the south the Border. Hounds have been kept at Abbotrule in recent times. The foxhounds were transferred from Baillie of Mellerstain to the Duke of Buccleuch in about 1827 and were the first ‘subscription’ pack in Roxburghshire. A new pack was put together in about 1885 by Charlie Sinclair, with the assistance of Captain Palmer-Douglas and others. Tom Scott Anderson was Master in about 1892–1903.

Jed Forest  (jed-forist) n. ancient forest around Jedburgh. The Capon Tree is supposed to be the sole survivor of the forest, although there are also still some old trees along the Jed Water in Southdean Parish. The lands there were formerly known as ‘Jedworth Forest’ and variants.

Jedheid  (jed-heed) n. Jedhead, area near the source of the Jed Water, in the southern part of Southdean Parish. The farm is one of those that passed from Archibald Douglas, Earl of Angus, to the Crown in about 1537, with Walter Scott of Buccleuch being accused of occupying the lands. David Laidlaw was tenant there in 1694. It was also ‘Jedheads’ in 1868 when J.H. Pringle was farmer there (it is ‘Jedheid’ in 1538 and 1539 and ‘Jedheads’ in 1694).

Jed Murray  (jed-mu-ri) n. familiar name of J.E.D. Murray.

Jed Murray’s Studio  (jed-mu-ri-z-stew-dee-ô) n. former photographer’s studio of J.E.D. Murray, on the east side of North Bridge Street. This was where his business moved from its previous premises located where the Post Office would later be built. Nos. 43 and 45 North Bridge Street were designed by J.P. Alison as a studio and house. They were built in an art nouveau style in 1899–1900, in red sandstone with interesting mosaic work and internal details. The ‘House’ and ‘Studio’ signs can still be read on the building. The Studio was in use until 1972, with the Border Club moving there in 1973.

The Jed Murray Trophy  (thu-jed-mu-ri-trô-fee) n. the J.E.D. Murray Memorial Challenge Trophy, a prize competed for at the Common Riding Races since 1938. It consists of a brass portrait of Murray in bas-relief on a circular wooden base, with small plaques to mark the winners.

Jedward Terrace  (jed-wurth-te-ris) n. street in Denholm, built in the 1930s.

Jedworth  (jed-wurth) n. older variant of Jethart – ‘Then, Jedworth!’ though they ancient choirs shall fade, And time lay bare each lofty colonnade, From the damp roof the massy sculptures die, And in their vaults they rifted arches lie’ [JL] (common before the 17th century, e.g. it is ‘Jedeworth’ in 1353/4, ‘Gedworth’ in 1456 and ‘Jedworcht’ in 1508).

Jeffrey (je-free) n. Alexander (1806–74) son of Alexander and Janet Smeaton, he was born near Bewlie. He worked at Lilliesleaf Mill as a boy, but was a keen reader and in 1825 entered the legal office of James Curle in Melrose and eventually in 1838 became a solicitor of the Roxburghshire Sheriff Court. He was said to be well known for taking on what seemed like hopeless defence cases. He was a strong proponent of the Reform Bill, although his idiosyncratic views kept him apart from the other local Reformers. Interested in all things related to the antiquities and customs of the Borders, he wrote ‘An Historical and Descriptive Account of Roxburghshire’ (1836) and ‘Guide to the Antiquities of the Border’ (1838). In 1855 he published the first volume of his work ‘The Histories and Antiquities of Roxburghshire and adjoining Districts’, which was followed by 3 other volumes. This forms a valuable early collection of information about the county, although it is occasionally inaccurate or wildly speculative. He also published a few other more modest works. His wife Katherine died in 1872 and he himself died following some kind of stroke suffered while at the Sheriff Court in Jedburgh. He is buried in Jedburgh Abbey kirkyard.

the Jehovahs (thu-je-hö-vuz) n. members of the Jehovah’s Witness movement, founded in the U.S.A. in the late 19th century, promoting active evangelism and preaching the imminent Second Coming. In Hawick the Kingdom Hall meeting house was on Bucceleuch Place, in the former Teviotdale Clubrooms, and they are now based at 18 Deloraine Court.

Jeistins’-haugh (jist-ins-hawch) n. former name for a flat piece of land by the Rule Water at Boucher. It is said to have been where local youths used to practice archery and jousting (also called the Justin Haugh).

Jemmie (je-mee) n. erstwhile diminutive form of James, later replaced by ‘Jamie’.

Jemmy-linkum-feedle (je-mee-ling-kum-feed-dul) n. a frivolous person – ‘These friblish characters which on the Border we call a ‘Jemmy-linkum-feedle’, too concocted to be pleased with natural feeling, too shallow to fathom his subject, and too vain to deny his reader the perusal of his most trifling and common-place remarks’ [JL].

Jen (jen) n. Christian name, often a familiar form of Jane or Janet.

Jenet (je-ni’) n. former version of the Christian name ‘Janet’, common into the 18th century (also written ‘Jennet’).

Jenkins (jeng-kinz) n. Daniel (b.1848) 3rd son of Tom, he was born in Mauritius. He was educated at Royal College, Mauritius and attended London University from 1865. He was a student of the Middle Temple in 1874 and called to the bar in 1883. He then became a prominent lawyer in Mauritius. He firstly married Amelia Keeley and secondly married Mary Louisa Payne. His children included Daniel Remy, William, Marie, Laura Amelia and Elsie. A small street in the western part of Port Louis is named after him. Thomas Joseph ‘Black Tom’ (c.1798–1859) probably Teviotdale’s first black resident. Born somewhere on the Guinea coast of west Africa (probably in the modern Sierra Leone or perhaps Liberia), he was possibly the son of a slave-trading chief called ‘King Cock-eye’ (because he was missing an eye). In 1803, in his 6th year, he was taken back to be educated in Britain by James Swanson (or Swanstone), who was from Hawick, son of a waiter at the Tower Hotel; unfortunately Swanson died a few days after returning from Africa. On the journey the young African became a favourite (and also the object of ridicule) of the sailors, and his first attempts to say the name of his sponsor apparently sounded like ‘Tom Jenkins’, which was then adopted as his own name (although there is an alternative explanation that the name may have been a variant on his African title). After a few weeks in England, Swanson brought him back to Hawick, but unfortunately died after only a few days. Tom spent the first couple of months at the Tower Hotel, where he was cared for by Mrs. Brown, wife of the proprietor. He then lived for a few years with Tom Lunn (Swanson’s brother-in-law) at ‘Shuttlehaa’ near Teviothead, learning English and particularly the local dialect. He thrived academically at the school in Teviothead, and was also the best dancer when that was taught. He was taken on as cow-herd and errand-boy for Mr. Pott of Caerlenrig and was then hired by Mr. Laidlaw of Falnash, helping on the farm and running errands to Hawick. He was further educated at an evening school in Hawick, eventually studying Greek and Latin (buying a Greek dictionary at auction in Hawick). Already being a student assistant at the school, at the age of about 20 he became schoolmaster at Teviothead; however the appointment had to be endorsed by the authorities. Although tested and approved by the local heritors (including the Hawick minister, Rev. Arkle), he was rejected by the Presbytery. So instead, an old smiddy was converted as an independent school for him to teach in (paid for by the Duke of Buccleuch and other heritors), from around 1815 until December 1818. It is said that he taught 5 days a week and on the 6th day would walk to Hawick to continue his own studies with the master of the Grammar School, Christopher Armstrong (and would also attend Hawick Kirk on the Sabbath). He was also supported in Hawick by David Moncrieff, who additionally helped get him an introduction (and funds) to take some courses at Edinburgh University (although he was perhaps only there for a month or two). He was also patronised by the Watsons of Hawick (the Quaker family of manufacturers). After this he resumed teaching in Teviothead, but was then recommended as a missionary by the Christian Knowledge Society. He said his last farewells to his male friends (and perhaps some female ones, since it was said that ‘he never was scorned wi’ a lass’). Hawick manufacturer William Watson wrote him a reference in 1818 for the British and Foreign School Society and that year he was enrolled in their teacher training college at Borough Road in London. While there he taught at a new school for poor children in Pimlico, which he helped to set up, and also taught at a school on Grafton St., Fitzrovia. In 1821 he was sent to Mauritius to be a teacher there. He never corresponded with his old friends in Hawick, so that it was generally believed locally that he had not survived the voyage to Mauritius. In fact he was a successful and respected teacher there for the next 37 years. He ran the ‘Model School’ in Port Louis and was involved in introducing several new teaching methods (e.g. singing lessons and the use of the creole dialect). He married (his wife’s name being Augustine Laurencia Jenkins) and had 4 children, who were born in the 1840s: Samuel Thomas; Thomas Lionel, who trained as a lawyer; Daniel, also a lawyer; and Mary. His later life is unclear, with a possibility that he returned to Sierra Leone and established a private school there. Certainly a man of that name is associated with Sierra Leone and his story (e.g. in the article ‘Early Religious Influences in Sierra Leone’) mixes up the 2 men; he was said to have first arrived in Freetown in 1815, ‘garbed fantastically in a Scotch kilt and having the new American flag above it’, then moving to Scotland where he attended ‘classes at Edinburgh University, acting as schoolmaster in a village near Berwick-upon-Tweed, volunteering for service with the Christian Knowledge Society, and becoming a missionary to Mauritius’. He was then said to have returned to Freetown, where he established a school in Wilberforce Street and was much in demand as an orator. In 1858 his name appears on a list of members of the Mercantile Association of the City of Freetown who petitioned for a change in the way the government was administered in Sierra Leone. It is unclear how many stories are compounded here and whether our Tom Jenkins ever returned to Sierra Leone. His local story was described in a posthumous W.N. Kennedy article in the Transactions of 1870, with further details in Rev. John Thomson’s ‘Alexander Hope: A Hawick Story’ (1878). His existence in Mauritius was already noted in the 1837 publication ‘Exemplary and Instructive Biography’ (updating an article on Tom published in Chambers’ Edinburgh Journal in 1832). M. Duffil wrote further Transactions article on this subject in 1990 and 1994. In 2003 a memorial plaque was unveiled at the old smiddy where he taught in Teviothead. Thomas ‘Tammy’ (19th C.) tramp who was a regular visitor to Liddesdale in the mid-19th century. He was a ‘dainty, canny body, who always carried a cat in his bosom’. Jenny Walker’s Brae (je-nee-waw-kurz-bræ) n. hill road somewhere in the Rule valley, probably a name for the road connecting the A698 with the Rule Water, between Denholm and Spittal.

Jipps (jïps) n. John (b.1841) son of John and Mary Seely, from Steeple Bumstead. He was coachman to Sir William Eliott of Stobs. He married Mary, daughter of Robert Amos of Rulewater. They later moved to London, where his wife died in 1870, leaving daughters Margaret and Mary (also written ‘Jipps’).

Jerdan (jer-diin) n. Archibald ‘Baldy’ (18th C.) brother of Alexander, a rich Newcastle merchant and banker. He served for a short period as factor to Sir Gilbert Eliott of Stobs, being recommended to Col. Elliot of Wells in 1726. He ran the estates there (Col. Elliot being almost always in London), and instigated much planting (including 10,000 young fir trees in one purchase from Dickson’s nurseries). For his efforts he was paid £12 per year, along with grass for his horse, and allowance for paper, ink and wax, as well as the use of a modest bedroom in the mansion house. In 1742 he surveyed the lands of East and West Mains of Hawick for the Scotts of Buccleuch, leading to their division. He paid the window tax for the Wells estate in 1753. He grew quite wealthy and purchased part of Bonjedward in 1751 (with more of the estate in 1767), followed by Haughhead (in Eckford Parish) and then Brockmoor in Warwicksire. However, he continued to serve as Wells factor for the next 2 Lairds, retiring in the late 1760s. He was probably the ‘Archibald Jerdan of Boon Jedburgh’ listed among the Commissioners for Roxburghshire in 1761. His only child was Jane, who married Thomas Caverhill and their son Archibald took the surname Jerdan as his heir. His rental book (covering the period 1728–60) was described in an article by A.O. Curie in 1908. His wife is probably the ‘Mrs. Jerdan’ who is listed paying tax in Jedburgh for having servants in her employ. Archibald of Bonjedward (c.1770s–1842) only son of Thomas Caverhill and Jane Jerdan (who died in 1780, aged 30). He succeeded as heir to his grandfather, taking Jerdan as his surname. He was taxed for having a female servant in 1785 and in 1788 was recorded as owner of Bonjedward and other lands in Jedburgh Parish, valued at more than £2400, as well as lands in Eckford Parish. His sister Jane married Rev. Peter Young of Jedburgh. He fought a legal case to keep the estate from another branch of the family. He was listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805 and 1819. He was one of the founder members of the Jedforest Club and in 1810 became Captain of the 1st Regiment of Roxburghshire Militia. He was recorded as a freeholder in the Michaelmas Head-Court of Jedburgh in 1811. He was said to be liberal in all things, but often came into financial difficulty, and had to sell off parts of his estate (in 1808 the estate was advertised for sale, entirely or in parts). He married Elizabeth Sarah Milner in 1808. They had 2 sons and 5 daughters. He and his wife died within a few days of each other, the local story at the time being that they had eaten something poisonous. He was succeeded by his son Thomas Caverhill Jerdan, who was a doctor with the East India Company, published ‘A Catalogue of the Birds of the Peninsular of India’ and sold Bonjedward to the Marquess of Lothian in 1845. His daughter Jane married John Elliot, son of William of Harwood. William (1782–1869) son of John and Agnes Stuart, he was born at ‘Lang Linkie’, Kelso, near where the Teviot joins then Tweed. His father served as Baron Bailie for Kelso (where the court was frequented by ‘Hawk Willie’), but died suddenly in 1796 when he himself was only 13. He took an interest in Border ballads and history from an early age. He spent time in Edinburgh, eventually moving permanently to London to pursue a writing career. He wrote extensively as an essayist, critic and poet, eventually becoming editor of the Sun newspaper and then the Literary Gazette (for 33 years). He also became famous for standing next to Prime Minister Perceval when he was assassinated in 1811, and being the first to grab the assassin. He helped found the Royal Society for Literature in 1826. After his retirement, in 1852/3 he published his autobiography and continued to write until well into his 80s (formerly spelled ‘Jer-dine’, ‘Jerdon’, etc.; see also Jardine).

jerkined  (jer-kind, jir-kind) adj., pp., arch. wearing a jerkin – ‘I see the Teviot redden to a sunrise long ago And the line of helmed and jerkined lads, asplash to the saddle bow’ [JYH].

Jerusalem  (je-roo-saw-hum) n. former name for a farm in Lilliesleaf Parish, also sometimes ‘New Jerusalem’. It probably corresponds to Friarsshawmuir. Andrew Cunningham was farmer of 150 acres there in 1851. John Hislop was farmer there in 1868.

Jess McVeetie’s  (jes-muk-vee’-eez) n. former shop at the corner of Drumlanrig Square and the Kirk Wynd – ‘Oo went ti Paisley’s for oor tools, Jess McVeetie’s for rock bools, Lynch’s hed a’ kinds o’ toys, Ellen Riddle hed her pies … ’ [JWL], Hawick bakes … ’ [JEDM], ‘And Jess McVeetie offered, up the Wynd, The grandest sticky taffee in the tong’ [WL].

Jess o the Toll  (jes-ô-thu-tôl) n. nickname of Jess Hunter (nee Johnstone).

Jethart  (je-thur’) n. Jedburgh, town 12 miles north-east of Hawick, lying on the Jed Water, which flows into the Teviot. The town is first recorded in 854 as ‘Gedwearde’ and is claimed to be the first parish in Scotland. It was a Royal Burgh since the 12th century and was a former county town of Roxburghshire. A church was noted here from as early as the 9th century, with a priory established by David I in 1118, and the abbey shortly afterwards. The castle was handed over to the English several times over the next century. The town was destroyed several times by the English, in 1410, 1416, 1464 and most notably in 1523 by the Earl of Surrey’s men. As well as the Abbey, a house of Carmelite friars was established in 1513. The town was long afterwards known for its pear orchards, presumably a vestige of the monk’s fruit gardens. The town was looted and burned by the English in 1544. In the 17th century it was said to be a centre for smuggling goods south of the Border, particularly malt and leather. Several early Kings of Scotland spent time there, including David I, Malcolm IV, William the Lion, Alexander II, Alexander III and Robert the Bruce, as well as Mary, Queen of Scots. The old bridge at the foot of the Canongate, dating from the 16th century, is probably similar to Hawick’s Auld Brig. The Public Hall was designed by J.P. Alison in 1900. There are several other notable historic buildings, including the Castlegate area, which was extensively repaired in the 1970s. And of course there is the Abbey and Castle. The town had a woollen factory from at least 1728, probably the first in the district. The town is also known for ‘Jethart Hand-baa’ played at Candelmas between the ‘uppies’ and the ‘doonies’, supposedly commemorating a defeat of the English at Ferniehurst Castle, when the Scots played with their cut off heads. Sir David Brewster (physicist), John Ainslie (cartographer) and Mary Somerville (mathematician) were born here, and the town also has connections with Mary Queen of Scots, Bonnie Prince Charlie and Sir Walter Scott. Just south of the town James Hutton discovered his ‘geologic angular in conformity’, which supported the idea that the earth is at least millions of years old. The brach railway to the town was completed in 1856. Jedburgh Callants Festival was inaugurated in 1947, and includes a ride-out to Redeswire, as well as a mounted procession to Ferniehurst Castle and to the Capon Tree, led by the Callant. Population (1991) 4,118 – ‘Dear Borderland! Blench na’ for fear! Oor Borderland, nac foe comes near! Stand firm and sure; for Jethart’s Here! Stand firm and sure; for Jethart’s Here!’ [T] (the origin of the name is ‘Jed worth’, i.e. Old English for ‘settlement by the Jed’, with ‘Jed’ perhaps being from a Celtic word for a wood; it first occurs as ‘Gedde wrda’ in 1139 and there are many variations of ‘Jedworth’ until the town officially became ‘Jedburgh’ in the 17th century; the old form survives in the local pronunciation; Teries usually talk about going ‘doon’ to Jethart, presumably because of the river).

Jethart Abbey  (je-thur’-aw-bee) n. Jedburgh Abbey, founded by David I for Augustinian monks in 1138, following the 1118 priory. This may have followed an earlier foundation by Egred, Bishop of Lindisfarne, perhaps in the 830s. An early chapel attached to the abbey was at Old Jeddart. It was dedicated to Mary (so that some local places called things like ‘Ladyland’ may be connected with the Abbey). The lands possessed by the Abbey from early times included...
Jethart Castle

Lanton, Nisbet, Crailing, Ulveston, Ancrum, ‘Al-neclive’ (unidentified part of Ancrum); ‘Rule Hervy’ (later called Abbotrule), Raperlaw (in Lilliesleaf Parish) and ‘Crumsethe’ (which could be Crumhaugh); many of these are listed in the 1165 charter of King William, confirming earlier grants by David I and others. Around 1280 Sir William of Soules granted the abbey lands near Castleton churchyard. It later gained lands at Winnington and Belses. Connected churches included most of those around Jedburgh, and also Hobkirk and Castleton. The Abbey contained altars to both St. Ninian and St. Mungo. The Abbey was never fully completed, being destroyed as many as nine times by the English, including by the Earl of Surrey’s men in 1523 and in 1545 by Hertford’s men. It was occupied by the English from 1547, the French took possession in 1548, fortifying it, but levelling some of the damaged parts. Note that this constant strife means that none of the records of the Abbey have survived. Although quite ruined since then, it is the most complete of the Border abbeys, with 3 tiers of arches, an 86 ft high transept tower, and a wheel window in the west gable. Part of the Abbey was used as a local place of worship until 1875. The Kerrs of Feniernhirst are buried here and there is also the Marquess of Lothian Memorial. Major excavations in the 1980s revealed a greater extent to the buildings and a new visitor centre was opened then. The Abbey held a great deal of land around the Borders, including superiority over the parishes of Abbotrule, Castleton and Hobkirk.

Jethart Castle (je-thur’-kaw-sul) n. Jedburgh Castle was ceded to the English under the Treaty of Falaise in 1174, but changed hands many times over the coming centuries. It was the location for the wedding feast of Alexander III in 1285, when it was said that a ghostly apparition warned of his impending death. In 1334 it was surrendered to the English by Edward Baliol and held by them for 75 years. It was destroyed by order of the Scottish Parliament in 1409, shortly after the town was recaptured. The destruction was supervised by ‘Robert de Hawyk’ a Burgess of Edinburgh. In the early 18th century it was the site of the town gallows, with construction on the old gaol beginning there in 1820, with architect Archibald Elliot. It also served as lunatic asylum and ‘bridewell’. This prison was also often referred to as ‘Jethart Castle’.

Jethart Castle Jail (je-thur’-kaw-sul-jail) n. former prison on the site of Jedburgh Castle, built 1820–23, and now housing a museum. It was designed by Archibald Elliot (from Ancrum) in 3 separate 2-storey blocks, the builder being Mr. Gillespie. This was the local county jail for Hawick in the 19th century, closing in 1886, and continuing in use as police cells until 1890. It is now the best preserved example of a Howard Reform Prison, considered modern in its day – ‘I’d rather lie in the belly o’ a whale Than spend a nicht in Jethart Gaol’ [T] (formerly spelled ‘Gaol’).

the Jethart Comb (thu-je-thur’kōm) n. the Jedburgh Comb, an ancient artefact found during excavations at the Abbey in 1984. It is an ornate 12th century comb, carved from walrus ivory and decorated with a griffin and a dragon. It was discovered along with the torso of a man (who appears to have been murdered) and other artefacts in a pit in the Abbey grounds, and is now on display there.

Jethart Greyfriars (je-thur’-grā-frI-urz) n. site of a former friary in Jedburgh, excavated in the 1980s and laid out as a garden in 1993. It was home to a group of Observant Franciscans from around 1500. Also known as ‘grey friars’ or ‘begging friars’, the order were extremely rigorous in following the rules institute by St. Francis, and led ascetic lives, going barefoot in their grey woolen robes. A superior of the convent called Home was involved in transmitting letters between Henry VIII and the young King James V. Adam Bell was a monk there, who wrote a history of Scotland up until the year 1535. The friary was burned by the English raids of 1523, 1544 and 1545, and probably never fully repaired before the Reformation.

Jethart Jail see Jethart Castle Jail

Jethart Jim (je-thur’-jim) n. nickname for a Hawick character of the mid-19th century, presumably with a Jedburgh connection – ‘Scot-tie Dottle and Reuben Watt, Dickie Lyon and Jethart Jim, Sam’l Lawrence and Wat the Cat, And Heather Jock baith gray and grim’ [HI].

Jethart Justice (je-thur’-jus-tis) n. popular name for the form of justice in use during the riving days, i.e. hang them first and ask questions later. Jedburgh was the judicial seat of the Scottish West March. The phrase dates back to the late 16th century and was also used figuratively – ‘...For hang’t! he sae wi’ plagury bust is, He’s fit eneugh for ‘Jethart justice’’ [JoHa] (also ‘Jeddart Justice’ etc.).

Jethart peirs (je-thur’-peerz) n., pl. pears grown in Jedburgh, long famed for its orchards, these being a vestige of the days when the monks grew fruit extensively. Many different varieties were grown, mostly derived from France, but some being Scottish variants. This included Achan, Bell-tounge, Bergamo, Bon-Chrétien, Buchanan, Cranstoun, Crawford, Douglas, Drummond, Fair Maid, Grey Goodwife, Honey, Lady Lamont, Longueville, Ludd, Mother Cob, Musk, Pitfirrane, Pound, Rob Hyal, Warden and Worry Carle. Pears were also grown in Melrose, and probably other local places with ecclesiastical connections.

Jethart Snails (je-thur’-snälz) n. dark peppermint sweets, made by the Miller family of Jedburgh, also called ‘Jasper’s Original Jethart Snails’. The recipe was handed down to Jasper Miller by a French Napoleonic prisoner of war.

Jethart staff (je-thur’-stawf) n. former type of weapon, consisting of a pole perhaps 7 to 8 feet long, topped with a long metal blade. It was also known as the Jedburgh or ‘Jeddart’ stave (and other variants). Its existence is recorded at least from 1513 and it was banned by the Scottish Parliament in 1516. It was also sometimes called the ‘Northern staff’, and the reason for its connection with Jedburgh is unknown, although it appears to have been only used in Scotland. Another weapon existed (also used in England) called the ‘Jethart axe’ (although this may have been invented by Sir Walter Scott), which was sometimes confused with the ‘staff’ (even in the arms of Jedburgh). The 2 may have also been known as the short staff and the long staff, and it is clear that the length and design varied.

J. Gebbie’s (ji-ge-beez) n. former shop at the corner of Wellington Street and Carnarvon Street during the 1940s and 1950s. It was known for selling just about everything.

Jobson (job-sin) n. George (b.1806/7) from England, he was farmer at Hummellknoes and coal-merchant in Hawick. In 1861 he was farming 344 acres there and employing 4 labourers. He was still recorded there in 1868. In 1866 he married Jane (‘Jeanie’) Dryden Blaikie (who died aged 82). He emigrated to America, and his father-in-law George Blaikie took over his business in Hawick. They had at least one child, George B.

Jocelin (jo-se-lin) n. (d.1199) probably from south-east Scotland, possibly from a Norman family, he entered Melrose Abbey about 1150. He had a brother called Elias. He became Prior and then Abbot of Melrose in 1170. He may have commissioned the writing of the Chronicle of Melrose. He also encouraged the cult of Waltheof, who emerged as a saint. In 1174 he was elected Bishop of Glasgow, but continued to exert influence back in Melrose. During his time Teviotdale was a Deanery under the jurisdiction of Glasgow, and hence he was Hawick’s Bishop. His rights to the churches of Liddesdale (as well as Ashkirk) were confirmed by 3 Popes in 1179, 1181 and 1186. He was also a powerful political figure of his time, being embroiled in the struggles over the Borderland. He mediated a dispute between Jedburgh and Dryburgh Abbeys and he witnessed many charters. As Bishop of Glasgow he gifted the church of Hassendean to Melrose Abbey. He also accompanied King William to England when he married Ermenegarde. He additionally helped establish Glasgow as burgh with significant privileges. He died at Melrose Abbey and was buried under the monks’ choir. His seal showed a full-length figure of a bishop, with one hand raised and then other holding a crozier, with the words ‘SIGILLUM JOCELINI GLASGUENSIS EPISCOPI’ (also written ‘Jocelyn’).

It was first printed in Hawick in Cav’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). Characters named in the ballad, as well as ‘Jock o the Side’ include the Laird of Mangerton, the Laird’s Jock, the Laird’s Wat and Hobbie Noble. The subject of the ballad was probably an Armstrong, nephew of the Laird of Mangerton, and is also mentioned in Maitland’s ‘Complaint Against the Thieves of Liddesdale’ – ‘Then they ha’ rid tae Liddesdale Just as fast as they could ride And when they cam’ tae Liddesdale They cast the chains frae Jock o’ the Side’ [T], ‘Jock’s ghost cam yammerin’ Yammerin doon Fu o indignation For on the site o his strang to’er They built a railway station . . .’ [DH].

Jock Paisley’s Dog (jok-payz-leez-dog) n. dog owned by Jock Paisley in the early 19th century. Because of the Combination Laws it was difficult to organise workers’ meetings at that time, leading to one meeting at the Little Haugh being officially chaired by this dog, and passing a resolution against manufacturer William Nixon.

John (jön’) n. (12th C.) son of Orm, whom he succeeded as Lord of Hownam. In about 1155 he and his father witnessed the charter granting the Church of Old Roxburgh to Glasgow Diocese. Sometime in then period 1164–70 he granted lands in Hownam to Melrose Abbey, as confirmed by his son William in around 1190; he perambulated the boundaries between his lands and the neighbouring lands of Whiton, Grubet, Clifton and Mow. He witnessed a grant to Kelso Abbey in about 1170. About 1175 he witnessed a grant of lands in Mow to Paisley Abbey by Eschina, wife of Walter, son of Alan the Steward and another charter to Melrose Abbey by Anselm of Whitton. He witnessed another charter by Waldeve, son of Gospatric, Earl of Dunbar to Helias, son of Huctred, who was cousin of both Waldeve and his own father Orm. He was also recorded as Sheriff of Roxburgh, one of the first known people to hold that office. However, it is not known how long he was Sheriff, and whether the office at that period just meant he had responsibility for Roxburgh Castle, or also for the county. He may have married the daughter and heiress of Robert de Landles, from whom he acquired lands in Berwickshire. His son and heir was William ‘de Landales’ and Hownam and his grandson was William deOrmiston, probably the first person to have that designation. His seal bore an armed knight on horseback, holding a sword and shield, and with the words ‘SIGILLUM JHNIS FILII ORM’.

John Broon’s Brae (jön-broonz-brä’) n. former name for the street linking the bottom of Dickson Street with Wilton Crescent.

John Laing’s (jön-laingz’) n. John Laing & Sons, hosiery manufacturers, established in 1830/1 (although this may have been as part of Dicksons & Laings, with the separate company formed in about 1851 after the death of John Laing’s father Alexander). In 1852 hosiery manufacturer John Laing is listed at Slitrig Bank. The premises at 8 and 9 Slitrig Crescent had previously been occupied by hosiery manufacturer Thomas Wilson. The firm introduced the first steam-driven frame to Hawick in 1858. In 1869 it is stated that the firm was the only one in Hawick producing ‘fashioned’ stockings, using merino wool and spun silk. It was reconstituted as ‘John Laing & Sons (Lanso) Ltd.’ in 1939. The company now specialises in cashmere knitwear.

The firm went into receivership in 2006, with the factory at 8–9 Slitrig Crescent closing. It was bought out by Dawson International and moved to a smaller operation within the Barrie’ factory at Burnfoot.
Johnman

Johnman (jōn-mun) n. Rev. William Andrew Patton (1837–1923) minister of Hawick Free Church (St. George’s) for a period of 43 years. A native of Blairingone (or Fossoyay) near Dollar, he was ordained at Darlington in 1865 and came to Hawick in 1880. Well read and interested in a wide range of topics, he wrote many articles for the Archaeological Society Transactions (e.g. about local wells, highways, bridges, pipers, etc.), served as President for many years, and was a keen collector of curios for the Museum. He is credited with re-invigorating the Society after a lull in its activities and falling off in membership in the 1880s. As well as articles from the Transactions appearing in pamphlet form, his 1892 memorial sermon to Rev. Dr. MacRae was published, and also a few other sermons. He was heavily involved in efforts to get the Buccleuch Memorial and the Cottage Hospital funded. He was said to have a great frankness of speech, sometimes to the point of embarrassment, and took up strong positions in opposition to several local issues. For example, he worked hard to have rabbit baiting stopped in the town. In addition he carried out in the local press a public argument with Provost Mitchell over gambling and drinking, and was an opponent of the excesses of the Common Riding. He also caused consternation among his congregation for allowing a parade of Volunteers in the church in 1887. He was a very keen traveller, and often gave lectures after his trips. In 1900 he was appointed first Moderator of the Hawick United Free Presbytery. Throughout his ministry he lived at St. George’s Manse on Wilton Path. He served until his death. There is a memorial to him in St. George’s, unveiled in late 1924, when Dr. Cathels gave a eulogy. He left money to establish an educational bursary.

Johnman’s Openin (jōn-munz-ō-pe-nīn) n. former name for St. George’s Lane.

John Millar’s (jōn-mi-lurz) n. grocer’s shop at the corner of Oliver Crescent and Croft Road. It existed from at least the 1950s and was one of the last old-style grocery shops to survive in the Town.

Johnnie Armstrong (jō-nee-aerm-strōŋ) n. ballad about John Airmstrong of Gilnoockie. It recounts how Armstrong, a noted Border riever, is summoned to meet the King, but is tricked and arrested along with his men. He pleads for his life, offering the King everything he can think of, but to no avail. The ballad is based on historical events, although liberty is taken with some details, e.g. it is set in Edinburgh, rather than at Caerlenrig. The tone of the ballad is essentially pro-Armstrong and against James V. It first saw print in Allan Ramsay’s collection ‘Ever Green’ (1724) and later appeared in Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784) and Scott’s ‘Minstrelsy’. Tradition says that it was recited for Ramsay’s collection by a 6th generation descendant of John of Gilnockie himself.

Johnnie Cossar (jō-nee-kō-sur) n., arch. a large pin.

Johnnie Graham’s Stane (jō-nee-grā-umz-strān) n. feature marked on the 1859 Ordnance Survey map, on the east side of the Whitrope Burn, just north of Hermitage village. There is nothing marked there on modern maps.

Johnnie Macmannus (jō-nee-ruk-maw-nīs) n. local nickname, probably from the 19th century – ‘Wicked Tammy and Tidy Mars, The Sap, Paul Laidlaw and Tory Tam; Tip-ma-Daisy hame frae the wars, Johnny Macmannus and Neddy Lamb’ [HI] (this was presumably not his real name).

Johnnie Nip-nebs (jō-nee-nip-nebζ) n. Jack Frost – ‘He coungers our kyloes, and causes our kebs, And a fearfu’ auld carl is Johnnie Nip-nebs’ [HSR], ‘Some ca’ him John nip-nebs, and some Johnie Frost, But we ken wha he is, and we ken to our cost’ [HSR] (also Jock Nip-nebs).

Johnnie the Gover (jō-nee-thu-gu-vur) n. nickname for John Scott, tweed designer.

Johnnie the Whup (jō-nee-thu-whup) n. nickname for Johnnie Hope (18th/19th C.) whose family gave their names to Hopehill and Hopepark – ‘Poogdye and Peedlum gang doon the toon, Sly Tammy and Kittlin’ Soup gang up; There’s Paddy Barratt and Jamie Broon, And there’s Dick Newall and Johnny Whup’ [HI].

Johnny and the Roccos (jō-nee-and-thu-ro-koz) n. rock ‘n’ roll band, led by Hawick-born Bob Fish. Formed in 1973, they became professional in 1973, recording their first album ‘Shakin’ all over’ in 1978, which was followed by six others, plus compilation albums etc. Particularly popular in Germany and Scandinavia, they have had a top ten hit in Norway.

John of Hawick (jōn-ov-hIk) n. priest of Glasgow and notary public, recorded in 1530. There is also an earlier Rector of Hawick Church from the mid-14th century, and several other men of the same designation, making it difficult to distinguish how many of them are distinct (see de Hawick).

John Oliver & Sons (jōn-o-lee-vur-in-sunz) n. relatively short-lived woollen manufacturers of the 1830s and 40s. The business was run by Hawick lawyer John Oliver and his sons Thomas and William (and perhaps others). Along with William Wilson & Sons they purchased the Weensland Corn Mill and adjoining land from Douglas of Cavers in about 1835. However, although Wilson built a new woollen factory there, the Oliver land remained largely undeveloped until Walter Wilson built Teviot Mill on it in the 1850s. Thomas and William Oliver were recoded as manufacturers at Dean Mill in 1837, however, within a decade or so they were both tenant farmers.

John Paiterson (jön-pä’-ur-sin, -pi‘-) n. title character of an old local song, or a short form used for the name of the song itself.

John Paiterson’s Meir Rides Fore-maist (jön-pi‘-ur-sin-mär-ridz-för-mäist) n. old local song, once second only in popularity to ‘Teribus’, also sometimes referred to as ‘John Paiterson’. It was discussed by William Norman Kennedy in an article in the 1863 Transactions. The song was published in an 1887 Hawick News article in connection with the revamped Common Riding, but was already a very old song. It is played by the Drums and Fifes at specific times during the Common Riding, particularly just before the Friday breakfast, as they walk from the Kirk Wynd to the Tower Knowe via Drumnlanrig Square and the Howegate. The words supposedly refer to a miller, Paiterson, who lived in the Hawick area and was known for the quality of his horses. He once entered a big race bare-back and with a straw-rope bridle, much to the hilarity of the on-lookers, but ended up winning. The King apparently wanted to buy the horse, but Paiterson instead gave it as a gift and composed the song in celebration. Another story claims that it relates to Sir John Paterson of Eccles, who rode a race on an old racecourse near Lilliard’s Edge. In fact the song is widely known (with slightly different words) throughout Britain and it has been suggested that it came from Ayreshire in the early 18th century, and related to the Patersons of Ballaird there. The tune has also been connected with a song referred to as ‘She’s yours, she’s yours, she’s nae mair oors’ which is about a race (bruise) for a bride’s handkerchief at a wedding. It is also known as (or extremely similar to) ‘The Horseman’s Port’, ‘The Black and the Brown’, ‘New Market’ and ‘The Cameronian Rant’. The song was part of the repertoire of Shetland fiddler John Sickle, was adapted by Martin Carthy in 1983 for the song ‘Fable in the Wings’ and has also been popular with some pipers.

Johns (jönz) n. William (15th C.) recorded as ‘Willelmi Johannis’ in 1436 when he witnessed a sasine for the lands of Wolfelee and Wolfehopelee. So he was probably related to the Lairds there. The other men listed were all from relatively nearby. It is possible his surname has some other modern equivalent.

Johnson (jon-sin) n. A.J. (20th C.) served as 6th Treasurer for the Congregational Kirk.

the Johnson-Marshall Report (thu-jon-sin-naur-shul-ree-pôr) n. local government planning report of 1967, which made recommendations for the future expansion of the Borders. This included a new community of 10,000 people in the St. Boswells area (which led to Tweedbank), but no strong priorities for Hawick.

John Spencer’s (jön-spen-surz) n. knitwear mill that occupied Heronhill House in the mid-20th century.

Johnston (jon-stin, -sin) n. Agnes (17th/18th C.) resident of Whitlaw, recorded in the Session books of 1723 when money was given to pay a woman for teaching her son. Alexander (18th/19th C.) footman at Orchard Cottage in 1797, when he was working for Robert Scott. Andrew (17th C.) resident of the Adderstone area on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He is listed ‘wt ane kilhe’, suggesting that he was a smith or similar artisan. David (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Christian Oliver and their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1731, with witnesses Walter Graham and Robert Rucastle. David (b.1817/8) from Newlands in Peebleshire, he was a heddle-maker on the Fore Row in 1851. His wife was Agnes, from Dumfries. He may be the same David who was listed as a shopkeeper on the Fore Row in Slater’s 1852 directory. David (1900–1982) writer of words for the songs ‘We’ll Follow oor Cornet’, and ‘My Borderland’, as well as ‘Hawick and me’ and several local poems, many included in the book ‘A Freen Among Freens’ (1974). He was born and educated in Kelso, worked as a gardener at Floors Castle and also lived in Gala, but married a Hawick girl and moved to the town. He worked as a handyman at Lyle & Scott’s Burnfoot factory and was for many years boilerman at the Victoria Laundry. He lived for much of his life in Burnfoot, hence he was sometimes referred to as as ‘the Burnfoot Bard’. He was a regular contributor of verse to the local press. His 2 well-known songs were collaborations with Adie Ingles. They also worked together on a song for the Burnfoot competition of 1970, and another, ‘Braw Border Queens’, survives in manuscript form. He moved away after the death of his wife, and lived near his son in Arbroath, where he died. He is buried in Wellogate Cemetery. Elizabeth G. ‘Isabella’ or ‘Isa’ (1910/1–1981) from Hawick, she worked as a nurse in Maternity Sevices in Edinburgh and Glasgow and retired back to Hawick in 1963. She was also a keen Guide. She wrote many poems published in the local press, including ‘Ablow the Kitchen Bed’, a number of them collected into ‘Pictures in the Fire’ (1967). Rev. George (b.1550/1) became minister at Foulden in 1572 and was transferred to Ancrum a few months later. In 1574 he also had charge of Old Roxburgh, Eckford, Bedrule and Abbotrule (although they may have had separate readers). He complained to the Assembly of 1578 that another man had been appointed to part of his benefice. He also attended the Assemblies of 1581 and 1589. He is recorded in 1585 refusing to subscribe to articles drawn up by Sir John Maitland. He was transferred to Crailing before 1586, but returned to Ancrum in 1588, although probably without any further connection with Abbotrule or Bedrule. In 1589/90 he was listed among ministers with a special commission in Roxburghshire for getting people to adhere to the Confessions of Faith. In 1608 he and 2 others refused to recognise the authority of a Visitor appointed by the Assembly. In 1620 he complained to the Privy Council about non-payment of dues from several people. He was deprived in 1622 for not conforming to the Articles of 1618, being declared a rebel and ordered to be imprisoned in Annadale; however, he lived until at least 1631. George (17th/18th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. In 1697 his daughter Isabella was baptised in Wilton. The witnesses were William Cavers and William Scott. George (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He was recorded as tenant in Hillshead in 1759. He married Anna Reid and their son John was baptised in 1734, with witnesses Walter Gledstains of Hilliesland and weaver James Wight. George (18th/19th C.) plasterer on the Howegate, recorded on Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. George ‘Copper Top’ (19th/20th C.) worker at Pesco’s, known for playing rugby for Hawick R.F.C. He first played for the Greens in 1902 and was Captain in the 1906/7 season. He was also a member of the 1912 team that won all 5 Borders Sevens tournaments for the first time. He also played for the South of Scotland. Graham (b.1869) heraldic painter to the Lyon Court. Along with W.R. Lawson he designed the 1914–19 Roll of Honour for Hawick Men who fell in WWI, which is displayed in the Museum. Isabella see Elizabeth G. James (17th C.) recorded as being ‘late servant to John Turnbull in Cavers’ in 1684 on a long list of men declared fugitives for refusing to take ‘the Test’. James (17th C.) listed as shepherd at Dean Mill on the Langlands estate in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. James (b.1871) born at Lochnaw, Wigtownshire, he became gamekeeper at Harwood (on Rule) around 1900. Rev. J.B. see Rev. James Barbour Johnstone. Jessie (b.1812/3) from Minto Parish, in the 1850s she was a teacher of sewing and English on Allars Crescent. John (16th C.) servant to Walter Scott of Headshaw. In 1583/4 he was among a number of men from the area who were denounced for failing to appear to give evidence in a case against the Turnbuls of Bedrule. His name is recorded as ‘Johnne Johnstoun’. Rev. John (16th C.) graduating from Edinburgh University in 1590, he became minister of Nisbet. He is recorded as also having Wilton in his care in 1594, but not in the following year when he held the charges of Abbotrule and Bedrule. He seemed to remain with this arrangement until 1599. He was translated to Longnewton in 1607. It is unclear what role, if any, he played in Wilton Parish. John (d.c.1682) tenant in Hawick, whose will is recorded in 1682. He could be the John the baptism (labelled ‘for- nic’) of whose son Robert with Malie Launder was recorded in 1680. John (17th C.) recorded among the poor of Hassendean Parish in 1694, when he was at Clarilaw. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Eilrig in 1712 when his son William was baptised in Roberton Parish. John (17th/18th C.) merchant in Hawick. In 1720 (along with David Gray in Weensland) he witnessed a baptism for workman William Stoddart. He married Isabel Anderson and their children included: Walter (b.1719); Agnes (b.1721); John (b.1723); Margaret (b.1726); and Jean (b.1730). The witnesses in 1721 were Robert ‘Lasten’ and James Gardner. John (18th C.) lived in Robertson Parish in 1734 when his unnamed child was baptised, with no residence given. He is probably the John who married Mary Scoon in Robertson in 1733. Perhaps the same John was at Whithope Mill in 1743 when his son Walter was baptised in Robertson Parish in 1743. John (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He married Marion Nichol in 1734. He is probably the John whose son John was baptised in 1734. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. In 1791 he married Margaret Brown, who was from Minto. John (c.1893–1949) Hawick Registrar. He died of a heart attack. Martin (16th/17th C.) referred to as ‘Martyne of the Mylne’ when he was fined along with several other men in 1609 for harassing and threatening Sir Robert Scott of Thirlestane. The others included Armstrongs of Liddesdale, although it is unclear where he was from. Michael (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Harden Burnfoot in 1771. His forename is sometimes written ‘Mitchel’. His children, baptised in Robertson, included: Charles (b.1753); Isobel (b.1755); Hugh (b.1759); and Janet (b.1771). P. (18th/19th C.) mail-guard in Hawick who subscribed to William Scott’s ‘ Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. Robert (d.bef. 1637) gardener at Branxholme for the Earl of Buccleuch. In 1637 his wife Mary (‘in Carlill’, presumably Carlisle) had a discharge for £96 Scots for her late husband’s fees during his time as gardener. Robert (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen Scott and their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1774. The witnesses were workman Robert Turnbull and shoemaker Robert Renwick. Prof. Thomas Lothian (1927–2009) born in Whittington, West Lothian, son of a railway signalman. When he was 1 year old his father was transferred to Newcastle whose he grew up. He attended Hawick High School, leaving in 1944 when he volunteered for the Royal Navy, later becoming an officer. He gained a place at Cambridge University, but chose to go to Edinburgh so he could stay close to Hawick, where he played rugby for the Trades and for Hawick R.F.C. After graduation he went to work with Professor Gunnar Myrdal and his wife Alva, and there learned Swedish, as well as learning about Manpower Economics. He returned to Edinburgh in 1955, where he was awarded a Ph.D. for his thesis on the Swedish Labour market. He lectured at Edinburgh University 1955–65 and became the founding Professor of Economics at Heriot-Watt, where he taught all first year Economics students in the years 1966–76. He also served on many government appointed boards and committees, e.g. the Scottish Economic Council 1977–91. In 1977 he was appointed as first Chairman of the Manpower Services Committee for Scotland. In 1981 he returned to Heriot-Watt as Principal and Vice-Chancellor. In 1983 he resolved the serious dispute between striking water workers and the Government. He worked to foster stronger ties between the university and industry. He also served as President of the Royal Society of Edinburgh 1993–96. He was Common Riding Chief Guest in 1995. He married Joan Fahmy in 1956 and they had 2 sons and 3 daughters. William (16th/17th C.) described as ‘servitour to Mari ones Hob’ (i.e. Robert Scott) in documents relating to a murder trial in 1612 (spelled ‘Jhonsoun’, ‘Johnnestoun’, ‘Johnstone’, ‘Johnstoun’, ‘Johnstown’, etc. in early documents; see also Johnstone).

Johnstone (jon-stin, -sin) n. Adam of that Ilk (d.1509) succeeded from his brother John in 1488. He wrote an agreement of ‘kindness’ towards each other with Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1501/2. He was recorded at the Justiciary Court in Dumfries in 1504, where his son James was surety for him and he was surety for other Johnstones. He was married to Marion Scott, aunt of Walter; she was widow of Archibald Caruthers of Mouswald. He was succeeded by his elder son James. Alex (19th/20th C.) plumber who served on the local Military Tribunal during WWI. Charles (18th C.) merchant of Newcastle who was made an Honorary Burgess in 1749. David (18th/19th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Wester Parkhill in 1799. He married Margaret Turnbull and their children included: Margaret (b.1791), baptised in Selkirk; and James (b.1799), baptised in Robertson. Gabriel (1698–1752) son of Rev. Samuel and Isobel Hall, he was born in Southdean Parish, where his father was minister. He studied at Edinburgh and St. Andrews Universities, then moved to London, where he wrote political articles for ‘The Craftsman’. In 1733 he was appointed Governor of North Carolina, where he held the position for 18 years, longer than any other Governor. Although unpopular with many, he managed to introduce several important reforms. He married (as her 4th husband) Penelope Goland, one of the wealthiest women in the province, and he secondly married Mrs. Frances Button. His children included Penelope, Henry, Carolina and Polly. He is buried at Eden House, near Edenton. Johnston County and Fort Johnston were named after him. George ‘Geordie’ (17th C.) from Essenside. In 1622 William Scott of Burnfoot (on Ale Water) was recorded having a bond of security for him. But in 1623, along with William Elliot of Bonjedward, he was convicted of stealing a horse belonging to Walter Scott of Burnfoot in Ale Water and hanged (probably in Jedburgh). He was ordered to be hanged. George (17th C.) recorded at Hermiston in Lilliesleaf Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He was surely related to James, who was also listed there and John who paid the land.
tax there in 1678. He could be the George who witnessed baptisms in Ashkirk in 1689 for John Turnbull and William Balmer. George (18th C.) owner of 3 husband-lands in Hermiston in Lilliesleaf Parish. He was presumably related to the earlier George. He sold the lands to James Shortreed of Easter Essenside in 1758. Gilbert (15th/16th C.) tenant at Minto Craigend. In 1502 David Scott (called ‘Lady’) in Stirkshaws had a remission for several crimes, including a raid on those lands. He specifically had 2 mares stolen from him. William (surely a relative) is also mentioned as being a tenant there. Herbert Benyon (19th/20th C.) of Barkers. He became a partner in Hawick knitwear firm Pringle’s in 1919. Hugh (b.1814/5) from Morton in Dumfriesshire, he was an assistant gamekeeper, living at Teinds Bridge in 1841 and 1851 and Newlands (in Castleton Parish) in 1861 and 1868. He married Hannah Anderson (or Andison) in Hawick Parish in 1839 and they had children: Jane (b.1840); Thomas (b.1843); Jessie (b.1845); Isabella (b.1847); William (b.1850); Hugh (b.1852); James (b.1855); and Robert Hannah (b.1859). He was probably father of the ‘5 Johnstone sisters’ whose photo of 1910 is in the Museum (suggesting he also had daughters Helen b.c.1833 and Violet): Mrs. Andrew Burnett [Helen] ofadderstonelee; Mrs. Reid; Mrs. Jess Hunter; Mrs. Little; and Mrs. Violet Tullie of Bowanhill. Sir James of Johnstone (c.1567–1608) son of Sir John. He was made Warden of the West Marches 1588–90 in place of Lord Maxwell, this being part of the struggle for power and feud between the 2 families. He was imprisoned in Edinburgh in 1592 (perhaps for assisting the Earl of Bothwell), but managed to escape. His men pillaged in Nithsdale, leading to pursuit by the Maxwells, who gathered a large force. He amassed his own supporters, and surprised the Maxwell’s and their force at Dryfe Sands in 1593, leading to the death of Lord Maxwell and many others. Among his own supporters were a number of men from Liddesdale and Teviotdale. He was declared a rebel, but gained respite from the King in 1594. He was made Warden of the West March in 1595, probably serving until 1598. But after failing to quell disturbances he was declared a rebel and imprisoned in 1599. But he was reappointed Warden again 1600–03. He married Sara Maxwell, daughter of Sir John, 4th Lord Herries of Terregles, and was succeeded by his son James, who married Margaret, daughter of Sir William Douglas, 1st Earl of Queensberry. James of Westerhall (d.1643) son of Sir James. He married Isabella, daughter of Sir William Scott of Harden and was succeeded by his son Sir James. Rev. James (d.1622) graduating from Edinburgh University in 1598, he became minister of Minto Parish in 1607. However, he was suspended later that year for being absent from 2 Synods and was deposed at the end of 1608 ‘on a confession of fornication’. In 1611 the Presbytery ‘all with ane voice givis consent and approbation to his admission to the holie office quhich and quher it sall pleas God to appoint him to serve’ and that year he became minister of Westerkirk. Sir James of Westerhall (d.1699) son of James and Isabella, daughter of Sir William Scott of Harden (or Walter Scott ‘Auld Wat’ of Harden); it has also been suggested that his wife’s name was Isabel. He was Chamberlain to Scott of Buccleuch for Eskdale in the 1670s and sat in Parliament for Dumfries 1689–99. He married Margaret, daughter of John Bannatyne of Corhouse. He was succeeded by his son Sir John, who was 1st Baronet, followed by his younger son Sir William. James (17th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was living at Clarilaw in 1682 (and hence was in the former Hassendean Parish). He married Bessie Turnbull and their children included: John (b.1679); and Robert (b.1682). The 1682 witnesses were John Armstrong and John Turnbull (probably related to his wife). In 1682 he also witnessed baptisms in Roberton for tailor Andrew Donald and for George Hood. James (17th C.) recorded at Hermiston in Lilliesleaf Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He paid tax for 2 hearths and was surely related to George, who was also listed there, as well as John, who paid the land tax there in 1678. He may be the James who witnessed a baptism in Ashkirk Parish for Thomas Knox in 1690. James Raymond of Alva (1768–1830) based in Clackmannanshire, he also held lands in Selkirkshire. In 1785 and 1802 he is recorded paying the Land Tax on Hangingshaw, Lewinshope, ‘Scadarig’, Wester Kershope, Sundhope, Hollandrig, ‘Sandbed of Sundhope’, Sundhopehead, Shaws, ‘Baillieslees’ and Helmburn. His name was used in a case involving a swindle over a game licence in 1828, preserved in the Walter Mason Collection. He was succeeded by his son James. James (18th/19th C.) farmer at Greenhill in Ashkirk Parish, recorded as owner of 2 farm horses and 1 saddle horse on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He was additionally taxed for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797. James of Alva (1801–88) son of James Raymond and Mary Elizabeth Cholmeley, he succeeded to the Alva estate in Clackmannanshire. He lived at Hangingshaw in Selkirkshire. He was listed among the landowners of Robertson Parish in 1841. He was M.P. for Clackmannanshire and Kinross 1851–57, and was a J.P. He was a Deputy Lieutenant of Selkirkshire. He firstly married Augusta Anne, daughter of Fletcher Norton, and secondly Sarah Mary, daughter of Lt.-Col. H.P. L'Estrange. His son Maj. James Henry L'Estrange lived at Hangingshaw. Rev. James Barbour (1815–85) 4th son of Walter and 2nd child with his 2nd wife Agnes Carlyle, he was born at Bridekirk near Annan. His elder half-brother John was an early photographer in Birmingham. He was educated in Maxwelltown and Dumfries and in 1835 went to Birmingham to work as a draughtsman in an architect's office. He turned to religion in 1838, ran the local Scots Church Sunday School, became a member of the Independent Chapel in 1843 and attended classes at the New College in Edinburgh from 1844. He was a missionary at Culross 1846–47 and was licensed by the Free Presbytery of Dunfermline in 1848. After short periods at Stanley and Gatehouse he was ordained as the first minister at Wolfelee Free Kirk in early 1849. He lived at Denholm, until the manse was built. He was also known as a painter. He described his encounter with a ‘will-o’-the-wisp’ somewhere in the Rule valley, on his way back from preaching at Crailing. He moved from Wolfelee to St. John’s, Warrington in 1862. He resigned in 1875 and settled in Glasgow, finally moving to Dumfries in 1878, and drifted back to the Established Church. In 1839 he married Mary Maiben, daughter of William, son of Robert Scott in Allanhaugh in 1530/1. In 1543 there was a ‘bond of manrent’ with him signed in Hawick by Nichol Graham ‘of Meskeswayne’. He married Elizabeth Jardine and secondly Nicola, daughter of Sir James Douglas of Drumlanrig. In 1545 he was among Border lairds who gave assurance to ‘have na intelligence with Ingland’. He served as a Commissioner to keep order on the Border in 1552. However, he and 2 of his sons were declared fugitives in 1564. He was succeeded by his grandson Sir John, since his son James died before him. John of Hermiston (16th C.) recorded in 1563 leasing part of the lands of Hermiston in Lilliesleaf Parish from John, son of George Ker of Faldonside. In 1564 he was ‘lard in Hirdmanstone’ when he had a marriage contract with Marion Wilson; ‘Jok Wilsone’ was one of the witnesses and probably related to his wife. He was ‘of Hyrdmestoun’ in 1580 when he gave sasine of lands and houses in Hermiston to his son Patricki and his son Patrick in turn gave sasine of lands in ‘rindail’ to his wife MarionWilson (who was presumably not Patrick’s mother, otherwise the document would have said so). His wife Margaret (or Marion) Wilson also promised not to dispone her possessions to anyone except his daughters Margaret and Marion. He was in 1580 ‘seik in body and hail in Mynd’ when he stated that he had never received any of the children’s part of the goods and gear of Christian, daughter of John Pringle ‘of Bow’ and therefore the document would have said so). His wife Margaret (or Marion) Wilson also promised not to dispone her possessions to anyone except his daughters Margaret and Marion. He was in 1580 ‘seik in body and hail in Mynd’ when he stated that he had never received any of the children’s part of the goods and gear of Christian, daughter of John Pringle ‘of Bow’ and therefore does not owe them anything (this suggests that he served as tutor for these children). John (16th C.) recorded in 1581 as resident at Essenside when acting as a cautions for William Scott in Burnfoot on Ale. Sir John Laird of Johnstone and Dumskeillie (c.1550–87) eldest son of James. He was one of the ‘curators’ for the young Robert Scott of Thirlestane in the 1570s. In 1571 he had a bond with other Johnstones, signed at Branxholme, where he must have been visiting at the time. In the 1574 last testament of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme he was still owed ‘for the rest of his tocher gud, ane thousand and foure hundredth merkis’; he was also named as an executor of the will. He was recorded as surety in 1573,

Johnstone (17th C.) recorded in ‘elmur’ (i.e. Alemoor) in 1661. He married Jean ‘Gaie’ and their daughter Janet was baptised in Ashkirk in 1661, with witnesses James and Walter Chisholm. John (17th C.) paid the land tax for part of Hermiston in 1678. The lands were half of Easter Hermiston, valued at £130. He may have been son of Walter, who paid the tax in 1663 and is surely related to George and James, who were recorded at Hermiston in 1694. John (17th/18th C.) married Margaret Hislop in 1702, his wife also being from Ashkirk. Their unnamed child was baptised in Ashkirk in 1716, when he was described as herd in ‘Brodlie’ (i.e. Broadlee in Ashkirk Parish). John (d.1794) brewer at Whisky Houses. He died in Hawick. John (18th/19th C.) listed at Little Cote in 1791 when he paid the cart tax. He was farmer at Eastcote (the same place) on the 1794 and 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He was recorded as owner of 4 farm horses and 1 saddle horse in 1797. He was also listed at Eastcote in 1795 when one of his children was baptised. His children included Bellow (b.1792) and Janet (b.1795). John of Alva (b.1734) son of Sir James of Westerhall and brother of Sir William Johnstone Pulteney. He bought a fraction of the Philiphaugh estate from John Murray in the late 1700s. In 1788 (and still stated that way in 1811) he is recorded as owner of Whitfield in Wilton Parish and Todshaw in Roberton Parish. He married Elizabeth Caroline, daughter of Col. Keene and was succeeded by his son James Raymond. John (19th C.) one of the 6 elders of Hawick Parish Kirk who left along with the minister to form Hawick Free Kirk during the Disruption of 1843. He served as Session Clerk 1855–61. Rev. Matthew Pool (b.1843) born near Annan, he studied in Edinburgh and was ordained at Symington in Ayrshire in 1869. He became minister of Hawick Free Kirk (i.e. St. George’s) 1873–79. He was involved in national and local Liberal politics, and had a particular interest in education. After Hawick he moved to the Free Middle Church, Greenock, despite a petition by the Hawick congregation for him to stay. In 1871 he married Jane B. Milligan. Patrick (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1510 when he inherited the half lands of Hermiston in Lilliesleaf from his father Quentin. He was probably ancestor of George and James, who were at Hermiston in the late 1600s. Patrick (16th C.) received sasine of 3 husbandlands of land in Hermiston from his father John of Hermiston in 1580. On the same day he gave sasine to Marion Wilson, his father’s wife, of half a husbandland in ‘rindaill’, at that time occupied by William Elliot. He was ‘in Hyrdmestoun’ in 1581 when he witnessed an arrangement where Katherine Scott, widow of Robert of Colifort, resigned her lands of Hundlehope to her son Thomas. Quentin (d.bef. 1510) father of Patrick. His son inherited the lands of Hermiston from him in 1510. Richard, O.B.E. (?– ) pupil at Trinity and the High School and keen local cricketer, he became Professor and Vice-Dean at Stirling University. He was awarded the O.B.E. in 2004 for services to language, having been Director of the Scottish Centre for Information on Language Teaching. Robert (d.1530) part of the family of Johnstone of that Ilk, he was known as a riever. He was killed by Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme ‘to gratiffie the King’ shortly after the Border raid that James V organised in 1530 to suppress the thieves on the Border. This led to a feud between the Scotts and the Johnstones. Robert (16th C.) recorded in 1537/8 at the Justiciary Court held by the Keeper of Liddesdale. He appears to be listed as Keeper of Hermitage at that time. Robert (16th C.) from ‘Kirkhelme’ (i.e. Kirkholm) in Annandale. In 1574 he purchased a tenement in Hawick from Thomas Short. In 1579 he sold the same tenement in Hawick to David, brother of Walter Scott in Chamberlain Newton. This piece of land was on the north side of the High Street, between the tenements of Simon Sanderson and George Halliday. The transaction was done in Selkirk, with his brother James in ‘Rammarhill’... as a witness. It is unclear how a man from Annandale came to hold lands in Hawick. Robert (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married a Scott and their son Robert was baptised in 1651. The witnesses were Thomas (who was surely related) and William Hall. Robert (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Jean Minto and their son John was baptised in 1689. The witnesses were Thomas Johnstone and John Minto (who were probably both related to the couple). Robert (19th C.) mason in Hawick in the mid-19th century. Robert (1821/2–96) born in Kelso, he worked in Hawick in the 1850s. He then moved to the Langholm area and returned to Hawick to be gardener at Brieryyards around 1870, moving later to Cleandor near Sutherland. He married Catherine Shine in 1850 and they had 9 children: Denis William; Margaret; Robert; Janet; Alison; Catherine Marion; Jane; Agnes; and Mary. Rev. Samuel (17th/18th C.) minister at Southdean. He graduated from Edinburgh University in 1677 and went to Southdean in 1690. That same year he was a member of the General Assembly. He was to have been translated to Oxnam in 1699, but instead went to Dundee. He was the last of the neighbouring parish ministers to preach at Hassendean in 1693. He married Isobel Hall, and one of their children was Gabriel, political writer and colonial governor. Simon ‘Syme’ (16th/17th C.) tenant in Foulshiels. In 1623 he entered James Graham in Moffat Water at the Commissioners’ Court. It is unclear if his lands were Foulshiels in Castleton or elsewhere. Thomas (15th C.) part of a ‘retour of inquest’ held in Hawick in 1424 to decide on the inheritance of part of the Barony of Hownam. Most of the other men were quite local. Perhaps the same Thomas was on the 1429/30 ‘retour’ panel for the lands of Caverton. Thomas (15th C.) bequeathed 20 shillings in the 1491/2 will of Sir David Scott of Branxholme. He is listed as ‘Thome Jhonsoun’. Thomas (16th C.) son and heir of ‘master’ James, Burgess of Selkirk. In 1534 there was a marriage contract between him and John Scott in Hawick. John Scott agreed to pay 80 merks as a dowry for the marriage of Janet, his daughter. Additionally after 1 year, the couple were to be vested in John’s house, then after paying 50 merks (‘in penneys and pennyworths’) were to receive sasine. The agreement was done in the room of William Brydon in Selkirk. Additionally, Janet Scott had sasine (in conjunct fee) for his tenement in Selkirk. However, later in 1534 Thomas, nephew of the deceased James (presumably cousin of this Thomas) had sasine for this same tenement; this Thomas is probably the son of Bailie Thomas who was given sasine of another tenement as heir of his grandfather Thomas in 1535/6. Also in 1534 he complained that some men had broken an arrangement over the carved bed that he held heritably, and at the same time John Mitchellhill admitted he possessed the best gown of the deceased ‘master James’. Thomas (16th C.) recorded in Selkirk in 1536 as son and heir of the deceased John, Burgess of Selkirk. He inherited 2 rigs that had belonged to his father and his grandfather Thomas. He also signed a tenement to James ‘Keine’. He is probably the Burgess, married to Helen Rutherford, recorded in 1543, when his wife received a tenement from him in liferent. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He witnessed baptisms in 1651 for Robert (who was surely related) and in 1652 for James Henderson. He married Helen Laidlaw and their children included Helen (b.1656) and Isabel (b.1658). The witnesses in 1656 were James Easton and Archibald Elliot. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Bessie Scott and their children included Helen (b.1657) and Janet (b.1659). William (15th/16th C.) tenant at Minto Craigend around 1502 when the farm was burned by a group of Armstrongs, Turnbulls and others, led by David Scott, called ‘Lady’, in Stirkshaws. His fellow tenant farmers were Thomas Young and his son, also Thomas, as well as Simon Leitch. His name is recorded as ‘Johnesone’ and Gilbert is also mentioned there. William (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Agnes Scott and their son George was baptised in 1661. William (17th C.) landowner in Lilliesleaf Parish. According to the 1663 Land Tax Rolls he paid tax on £130 for part of Hermiston (probably the part that had formerly belonged to Robert Scott of Whitslade). He is probably related to John, who paid the land tax there in 1678. William (17th C.) listed as resident at Brighouse in Castleton Parish on the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. William (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He was living at Huntly in 1727 when his son James was baptised Sir William (1729–1805) 2nd son of Sir James, 3rd Baronet of Westerhall and Barbara, oldest sister of Patrick Murray, 5th Lord Elibank. He was a lawyer in Edinburgh, and was a friend of Adam Smith and Robert Adam, as well as a patron of Thomas Telford. He served as an M.P. in 7 successive Parliaments. He married heiress Frances Pultney and changed his last name when he inherited extensive estates near Bath. It is said at one point that he was the wealthiest man in Britain. He was involved in the construction of the main road up the Ewes valley (now part of the A7), following an Act of Parliament of 1763. In 1788 he was listed among the voters of Selkirkshire, but ‘will scarcely swear’ (i.e., was unlikely to vote); his brother John was also a Selkirkshire voter, having purchased part of Philiphaugh. He was said to be extremely rich when he died. He had no sons and only one daughter, Henrietta, who became Countess of Bath and married her father’s cousin Sir James Murray, but had no children. William (18th/19th C.) farmer at Spittal, listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls when he owned 3 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. Additionally he was taxed for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797. His son was tenant at Tower. William (18th/19th C.) listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as ‘Junior’, when he was farmer at Tower with 3 horses. He is listed after the farmer at Spittal, who was presumably his father. William (b.1792/3) born in Canonbie, he was a road contractor, living at Campknoves in Ewesdale in 1841, 1851 and 1861. By 1861 he was listed as a ‘Wood Contractor and Farmer of 21 acres’. His wife was Isabella and their children included William (a gamekeeper), Elizabeth, Janet, Isabella and Helen. William (1853/4–1938) farmer at Greenhead (or Greenheads) and butcher in Denholm. As a youth he looked after the steam engine in Weensland Woollen Mill in Hawick, then working in the dyeing house for Robert Greenwood. He married Greenwood’s daughter at the age of 16, but unable to provide for he, went out to New Zealand, finding a permanent job as an engineer and dyer in Dunedin. His wife refused to join him (after 7 years absence) and he returned to the Borders, where he took over running the family farm and bought butcher’s shops in Denholm and Ancrum. After living for a few years in Denholm, the family moved to Greenhead in 1902. He married Jane Maria, daughter of Robert Greenwood; she died in 1942, aged 89. Their children were: Bessie S. Johnstone, who died aged 89; William (b.1897), well known artist; and Mary Jane Bonning had another daughter. He retired to Satchells farm near Ashkirk in 1960, later moving to Ettrick then near Crailing. He then had a late burst of creative output, with the help of the patronage of Hope Montagu Douglas Scott. He also published books, including ‘Creative Art in England’ (1938), ‘Child Art to Man Art’ (1941) and an autobiography, ‘Points in time’ (1980). He married Flora Macdonald of San Francisco, who was evacuated back to the U.S. in 1940, along with his daughter Elizabeth (b.1931). He later married Mary Jane Bonning had another daughter. He retired to Satchells farm near Ashkirk in 1960, later moving to Ettrick then near Crailing. He then had a late burst of creative output, with the help of the patronage of Hope Montagu Douglas Scott. He also in this period made a series of plaster reliefs with assistance from local plasterer George Turnbull. There are 2 short films about his life and art. He died at the Cottage Hospital in Hawick and is buried in Denholm. William ‘Bill’ nephew of Bill McLaren, he was educated at Hawick High School. He became a rugby commentator for BBC Radio Scotland. (see also Johnston; formerly also spelled ‘Johnstoun’ and variants).

John the Laird’s Lands (jón-thu-lár’dz-lawndz) n. name for former lands in Roxburghshire that were part of the holdings of James Douglas of Cavers according to the 1511 charter. They are there listed last, as ‘the twenty shilling lands called John the lardin lands’. They were still in the Barony of Cavers when inherited by Sir William Douglas in 1687, and still described as a 20-shilling land. There is no obvious clue as to their location or who John the Laird was.

John the Spunkman (jón-thu-spung-k-mum) n. nickname for a Hawick character of the early 19th century.

John the Turk (jón-thu-turk) n. nickname of hosiery employer John Scott in the early 19th century, also sometimes called ‘Jock the Turk’. It was apparently a name of long standing in that family, which led to their close in the High Street being known as ‘Turk’s Close’ (insulting association of Turkey with cruelty and thievocracy).

John the Turk’s (jón-thu-turks) n. popular name for a former pended house on the south side of the High Street, occupied by this family in the late 18th and early 19th centuries. It was later occupied by Mr. Wright.

the John Wright Band (thu-jón-r’-band) n. former locally based folk trio, composed of John Wright (who lived near Newcastleton), Kenny Speirs (who lived near Denholm) and Stewart Hardy (who lives further south). They became professional in 1996, toured regularly, released several CDs and split up in 2002. Their version of ‘Lock the Door Larriston’ features on ‘Sounds of the Borders’ (2012).

John Wulson’s (jón-wul-sinz) n. John Wilson & Sons, the sons being William and Frank, manufacturers of hosiery and Tweed at Ladylaw and Langlands mills from 1851–1875. It grew out of part of William Wilson & Sons, which was split up in 1851, with John continuing the Tweed, flannel and blanket trade, as well as the manufacturing of hosiery. The firm received a gold medal for goods shown at the Exhibition of 1851. In 1871 it was employing 190 people and producing almost 400,000 pounds of goods yearly.

Justice (jus-tis) n. Rev. Alexander (d.1611) he was presented to Dron before the middle of 1593 and translated to Ashkirk in 1604. The Presbytery admonished him in 1608, saying ‘that he is too passionate, and that he be more diligent in discipline’, and he was rebuked again in 1609 for being absent from the Presbytery for 4 days. He was ‘under disease’ in 1611 and ‘content to tak order anent providing his kirk at the sight of the mists. of Melrose, Earlston, and Stow’. He died shortly after this. He was married and his only son was Patrick.

justice aire (jus-tis-är) n. circuit court of the Crown. Through much of its history Scotland’s justice was administered in 2 regions, divided by the River Forth. Hawick lay in the southern region, sometimes also for this purpose called ‘Lothian’, presided over by the Justiciar for Lothian. Itinerant courts would be held twice a year, generally in the spring and the autumn, with Jedburgh being the usual location for cases relevant to Hawick (but aires were also sometimes held at Roxburgh and Melrose). The route was often from Jedburgh to Lauder, then Jedburgh, Selkirk, Peebles, Lanark, Dumfries, Kirkcudbright, Wigton, Ayr, Dumfarton and Stirling. Records still exist for such courts held in the periods 1493–1504 and 1507–1513, these being among the oldest local documents that give some detailed insight to life in the Borders. The court may have been effectively replaced by the Commissioners’ Court in the later 16th century.

Justicelee (jus-tis-lee) n. former lands in Jedforest, recorded in a rental roll of 1541. The tenants were William, Alexander and John Hunter, and the lands were valued at 18s 9d. It is unclear where these lands were, but they are listed after Rouchhirst and Old Jedburgh. It is ‘Justice-lies’ in 1684 when John Laidlaw from there was on a list of Covenantanter fugitives.

the Justin Haugh (thu-jus-tin-hawch) n. former name for lands in Hobkir Park, part of the farm of Nether Boucher and on the Weens estate. The name appears in a 1606 charter for Hobsburn and Weens, where it formed the southern boundary. It was said to be a level field, presumably near the river, and must form part of the modern village of Boucher Bridge. Tradition says that this haugh was once used for jousting matches, but there is no direct evidence for this (also written ‘Justinhaugh’, it is ‘the Justing hawche’ in 1606 and in 1887 Walter Deans calls it ‘Jeistings’-haugh’; the name is perhaps related to jousting; see also Jeistins’-haugh).

the Juvenile Total Abstinence Society (thu-jo-ri-nil-tö’-al-awb-stin-ins-su-cl-I’-ee) n. branch of the Hawick Total Abstinence Society aimed at discouraging the consumption of alcoholic drinks. The group met in Miss Riddle’s room on the High Street in the latter part of the 19th century.

Kaim (käm-end) n. farm, south of Ormiston, in the hills to the south east of Hawick. Part of the area was formerly also known as Hilliesland. James Ruthie was farmer there in 1797 and Robert Scott in 1841 until at least the 1860s (also written ‘Kaim End’, it is ‘Combend’ in 1811; note there is also a village called Kaimend in South Lanarkshire and a house in North Berwick; the name probably derives from ‘kaim’, which is old Scots for a comb or the ridge of a hill).

the Kaimend Hills ( thú-käm-end-hilz) n. hills to the east of Hawick. One of the peaks, Kaim Law, is 238 m high, lies to the west of Kaimend farm, contains a hill-fort, and was sometimes referred to as ‘the first Kaimend’. The other main peak, sometimes called ‘the second Kaimend’, is 275 m high, lies to the south of the farm, and is named Whiteacres Hill on modern maps.

Kaim Law (käm-law) n. the highest peak in the Kaimend Hills to the immediate south-east of Hawick, reaching a height of 238 m (777 ft). It has also been referred to as ‘the first Kaimend’ and has a well-defined hill-fort on its summit. This measured about 110 m by 30 m and had ramparts and ditches that are still easy to see. The entrance was probably to the south-west, and there are indications of oval lums inside. The fort at the nearby Castle Law is surely associated in some way.

Kedie (ke-dee) n. Adam (18th C.) elder of the Burgher congregation at the East-end Kirk. In 1791 he signed the call to James Henderson on behalf of the ‘seventy-six persons [who] could not with their own hands sign the call’. He may be the Adam, married to Margaret Stewart, whose children included: Betty (b.1772) and Janet (b.1784), baptised in Hawick; and Agnes (b.1774), George (b.1777), James (b.1779) and William (b.1781), baptised in Wilton. He is probably the Adam ‘Kedy’ who rented the Hawick mortcloth in 1772. Andrew (16th C.) recorded in Hermiston in 1580 when he witnessed a transaction involving the Johnstones of Hermiston Andrew (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. His daughter Margaret was baptised in 1630. This is probably the earliest local record of this family name. Andrew (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1691, along with William, he witnessed a baptism for William Hislop and Janet (perhaps his sister). His son William was baptised in 1691. Andrew (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. His children included Bessie (b.1740) and Andrew (b.1743). Daniel (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He was at North Synton in 1694 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll there. He is probably the Daniel who witnessed a baptism for John in Ashkirk in 1690. In 1709 he was tenant in Wester Burnfoot. He married Bessie Elliot in 1691 and their children included: Isobel (b.1692); Thomas (b.1694); Anna (b.1696); Bessie (b.1698); William (b.1701); John (b.1704); Mary (b.1707); and Jean (b.1709). The witnesses in 1694 were John and Andrew Riddell (who lived at Dryden). Daniel (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Janet Rennalson and their children included Isobel (b.1696). David (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Helen Turnbull in 1688 and their children included James (b.1696). It is possible that his name was ‘Dand’ rather than David. George (18th C.) Hawick resident. He was probably married to Agnes Elliot or Scott and had a son Adam in 1747, baptised in Hawick (whose grandson would become a prominent real estate developer in Chicago). He may be the George who had an unnamed son baptised in Jedburgh in 1740 and the George whose daughter Isobell was baptised in Southdean Parish in 1740. In 1763 he witnessed a baptism for Robert Grieve and Isabella Scott. Humphrey (16th C.) recorded in 1562 as a tenant in Clerklands. Robert Hastie acting as factor in Lilliesleaf acknowledged receipt of the teinds from him and other tenants of Greatlaws and ‘Clerklandes’. His name is listed as ‘Umphra Cadzou’ and he was probably related to William, who was also there, as well as Walter in Greatlaws. James (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1652 he witnessed a baptism for Robert Brown. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Isobel Telfer and their children included James (b.1716). James (17th/18th C.) listed in 1724 among the residents of Ashkirk Parish receiving poor money. James (18th C.) married Janet Currer in Ashkirk in 1742. James (b.1814/5) forester and factor at Abbotrule Grange. He presented a fossil to the Museum in 1863. His wife was Isabella and their children included Andrew, Elizabeth, William and Helen. James (19th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. He married Helen Elliot and their children included James (b.1840), Anne (b.1842), John (b.1845), Andrew (b.1847), Betty (b.1850) and William (b.1852). James (19th C.) blacksmith of the Fore Row in the latter part of the 1800s, succeeding from James Bowie. It was probably his nephew William who was killed in South Africa in 1899. John ‘Jock’ (16th C.) recorded in 1562 as a tenant in Greatlaws. Robert Hastie acting as factor in Lilliesleaf acknowledged receipt of the teinds from him and other tenants of ‘Grett Law’ and Clerklands. His name is listed as ‘Jok Cadzou’ and he was probably related to William and Humphrey, who were at Clerklands. John (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Janet Scott in 1689 and their children included: Isobel (b.1690); and William (b.1693). The witnesses in 1690 were George Scott and Daniel Kedie (probably related to the couple). In 1690 (along with Andrew), he witnessed a baptism for William Hislop and Janet (who may have been his sister). John (d.1786) baker, probably son of Thomas, who was said to have been a centenarian. He is probably the John who was Cornet in 1737. He is probably also the ‘baxter’ John, son of Thomas, who was made a Burgess in 1737. He witnessed baptism in 1741 for weaver David Haig, in 1742 for shoemaker Robert Wilson and in 1743 for weaver Andrew Jardine. He is probably the John who witnessed a baptism for merchant Adam Scott in 1765. He may be the ‘John Keidzly’, the entry into whose ‘stackyard, on the south or south-east side of the high road without the West Port of Hawick’ was described in 1767 as the starting point for the perambulation of the Common undertaken as part of the court case brought for its division; he also owned houses on the Loan just beyond there. In 1766 he witnessed a baptism for shoemaker James Brown. He is probably the John who was paid 1 shilling in 1783 for ‘liberty for the Dran in his Park for the Well’; this was presumably the pipe running down to the Kedie

Pant Well. He is probably the baker who in 1783 witnessed a baptism for shoemaker Peter Wilson and Joan (his daughter). He firstly married Betty Turnbull from Liddesdale, and their children included: Thomas (1743–1811), also a baker; and Janet (b.1745), who married Archibald Douglas. His second wife was Betty, daughter of wright John Pringle. Their children were: Betty (1754–82), who married David Kyle of Melrose; Joan (1756–1840), who married shoemaker Peter Wilson and had 14 children; John (1759–1826), also a baker; George (b.1763); and Mary (b.1765), who married George Rutherford, a Kelso farmer. The baptism in 1743 was witnessed by shoemaker Robert Oliver and William Oliver junior, the one in 1745 by John Ruecastle and William Scoon and the one in 1765 by Alexander Bunyan and James Brydon. The 1763 baptism of George was witnessed by his grandfather Thomas. He is said to have been 85 when he died, placing his birth in 1700/1, but it seems likely he was born later.

John (18th/19th C.) recorded in 1797 as farmer at ‘Slackhills’ in Hawick Parish. This is probably Slaidhills. He also paid the dog tax in 1797. He is probably the John whose daughter Isabella (b.1786/7) married Hawick tailor Walter Riddle. John (1759–1826) son of John and Betty Pringle. He was also a baker, but moved to London. In 1789 he witnessed a baptism for shoemaker Peter and Joan (his sister). In 1785 he married Isobel, 3rd daughter of William Grieve, farmer at Southfield, and she died in 1805. He later married Mary Anderson, who died in 1831. His children were: Mary (b.1789), who married soldier James Thomson; Elizabeth (b.1791), who married farmer Robert Goodfellow; Williamina (b.1793), who married a Mr. Clark and their son Robert became a bookseller in London; Isobel (b.1795), who married first a Fairbairn and then a Warland; Jacky (b.1799), who married a Mr. Notman; John (b.1800), who was a sailor; and Jean (b.1810), perhaps also known as Janet. He also had an unnamed child who died in Hawick in 1797. John (b.1804) son of Thomas and Mary Scoon. He is probably the tobacconist John who lived at 13 Howegate with shoemaker John Douglas and John’s wife Elizabeth, who was his sister. He was there at least from 1841 to 1861, and was unmarried. Robert (b.c.1759) probably a baker. He married Janet Adamson. Their children included: Robert (b.1790); Philip (b.1793); and Jannet (b.1795). Robert (1790–1869) Hawick baker of Silver Street, son of Robert and Janet Adamson. He was probably the Silver Street baker and spirit dealer listed on Pigot’s 1825/6 directory, and whose house, on the south-east side of the Auld Brig, is marked on Wood’s 1824 map. He was also listed as a Silver Street baker on Pigot’s 1837 directory and Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1841 his house was described as ‘Head of Silver St’ (presumably meaning at the corner with Kirkstyle). In 1861 he was described as a farmer of 8½ acres, living at 1 Kirkstyle. His wife was Janet Farsyth (and she died before 1861). Their children were: Thomas (b.1816), baker and Cornet; William (b.1818), draper; Janet (b.1820); Mary (b.1823), who married John Innes; Jane Charters (1826–1912); Joan (b.1838); and Janet (b.1842). A portrait of him exists with his wife and son William. Robert, J.P. (1844–1915) born in Hawick, son of Thomas and Mary Fraser. He lost both parents as a child and was raised by his uncle William. He was educated at Hawick Grammar School and the Episcopalian School in Hawick. He was an apprentice with his uncle, later joining the retail merchants Stewart & Macdonald in Glasgow, where he eventually became managing partner. He also served as Director of Glasgow Chamber of Commerce and as Director of the Glasgow Night Asylum for the Houseless, and was associated with the Trades’ House, Merchants’ House, Commercial Travellers’ Benefit Society, Glasgow Savings Bank, Athenæum and Western Infirmary. He married a daughter of William Forsyth and had 2 daughters and 1 son. Thomas (17th C.) married Isobel Donaldson in Ashkirk Parish in 1659. Their children included William (b.1660). Thomas (17th C.) resident of Dryden in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll. He witnessed a baptism in 1690 for Andrew Riddell (who may also have been at Dryden). In 1691 his son Thomas had a bond with James Haddon in Selkirk. Thomas (17th C.) son of Thomas in Dryden. In 1691 he had a bond recorded in Selkirk. He is probably the Thomas recorded as tenant in Dryden in 1717. He may be the same Thomas who married Janet Brown in 1705 and whose children baptised in Ashkirk Parish included Isobel (b.1708), William (b.1717) and Mary (b.1718); they also had a son ‘Ebenezer Kysly’ baptised in Hawick Parish in 1723. Thomas (c.1662–c.1763) farmer and then baker in Hawick. He is one of the earliest recorded members of the local family. He could be the Thomas ‘Kedzee’ who witnessed a baptism for Francis Scott of Alton in Wilton in 1722. He was admitted as a Burgess in 1728, with his name then recorded as ‘Cadzie’. His wife’s name is suggested to have been Betty Hitcher (although that surname is otherwise unrecorded locally), and also Fletcher (which seems more likely); she died before 1732. His children with Betty Fletcher were: Thomas, who died in infancy; John (said to be 85 when he died in 1876, but this may be incorrect), also a baker and made a Burgess in 1737, when he was probably also Cornet; Thomas again; another son; Isobel; Janet; Mary; and 2 other daughters, the 5th daughter being born in 1720. He was a witness to the baptism of his grandson George in early 1763 and it said that he died soon after in his hundredth year. Thomas (18th C.) tenant farmer in Over Southfield in the 1720s. Thomas (18th C.) son of Thomas and Betty Fletcher. He was a baker and is said to have also farmed at Borthwick in Midlothian and to have died in the prime of his life. His children included: Jane (b.1751), who married dyer Adam Scott. Thomas (1743–1811) baker of Hawick, son of baker John and his first wife Betty Turnbull. He could be the Thomas who was Cornet in 1766. In 1789 he witnessed a baptism for John Waldie. He was recorded (as ‘Kedzie’) as a baker on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He married Mary Scoon, who died in 1831. Their children included: John (b.1786); Janet (b.1787), their 2nd child, who married stockmaker John Pringle; Robert (b.1791); Betty (b.1798); and John (b.1804), probably the tobacconist on the Howegate. The witnesses in 1786 were weaver Archibald Douglas and shoemaker Peter Wilson. He died in Hawick, recorded there as son of deceased baker John. Thomas (b.1816) son of baker Robert. He was Cornet in 1836. He was a baker living with his father in 1841. He won the silver spurs for married men at the Common Riding races of 1843. He is probably the Hawick resident, married to Mary Fraser, whose children included: Joan (b.1838); Janet (b.1842); and Robert (b.1844). Walter (18th/19th C.) resident of Ashkirk and Lilliesleaf Parishes. He married Janet Anderson and their children included: ‘Tamisene’ (b.1805), baptised in Ashkirk; and Walter (b.1814). Walter (18th/19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. He married Isabella Martin and their children included Agnes (b.1830), Jessie (b.1831), Catherine (b.1835), William (b.1835) and John Sprot (b.1837). William (16th C.) recorded in 1562 as a tenant in Clerklands. Robert Hastie acting as factor in Lilliesleaf acknowledged receipt of the teinds from him and other tenants of Greatlaws and ‘Clerklands’. His name is listed as ‘William Cadzou’ and he was probably related to Humphrey, who was also there, as well as Walter in Greatlaws. William (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish who in 1651 witnessed a baptism for Walter Coltart and another in 1652 for Thomas Bell. William (17th C.) married Isobel Spottiswood in Ashkirk in 1652. Their children included Janet (b.1653) and Helen (b.1660). His surname is written ‘Caidyea’. William (17th C.) married Margaret Tait in Ashkirk in 1653. William (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. He married Bessie ‘Milha’ and his surname is given as ‘Kedsie’ in 1732 when his son Thomas was baptised in Makerstoun Parish. William (b.1805/6) born in Jedburgh, he was groom at Arkelton on the 1861 census. His wife was Mary and their children included James, John, Margaret, William and Andrew. His older children were born in Bedrule Parish. William (1818–80) Hawick draper, son of baker Robert. He served his apprenticeship with Charles Williamson and took over the business in partnership with Walter Armstrong when Williamson left for Australia in 1839. By 1853 he was running his own draper’s business at the Tower Knowe. He also ran a small tweed manufacturing business, William Kedie & Co., which was taken over by Innes, Blenkhorn and Richardson, who built Riversdale Mills around 1880. He was a Trustee and one of the first deacons of St. George’s Kirk and was involved in setting up the West End Mission. Despite being heavily involved with the Free Kirk, in 1850 he purchased the Old Mause from the established Kirk, and then lived there. In 1861 he was living on Old Manse Lane, with his sister Jane C. and niece Joan. He also raised his nephew, Robert. William (1879/80–99) nephew of Mr. Kedie, blacksmith of Drumlanrig Square. Born in Hawick, his family moved to Dundee when he was 7. He served with the 2nd Battalion, Black Watch, and was killed in action in the Boer War. He is listed on the Hawick Boer War Memorial (also spelled ‘Cadyea’, ‘Cadzie’, ‘Cadzou’, ‘Cadzow’, ‘Caidyea’, ‘Caidzow’, ‘Kaidye’, ‘Kaidyea’, ‘Kaidze’, ‘Kaidzie’, ‘Keddie’, ‘Keadzie’, ‘Kedslie’, ‘Kedyea’, ‘Kidsly’, etc. and formerly synonymous with Kedzie).
the Kedie Hoose (thu-ke-dee-hoo) n. popular name for the building where generations of Kedie’s lived, last occupied by Robert Kedie in the mid-19th century. It was a 2-storey thatched house located roughly where the spiral staircase of the Exchange Buildings was later built. An old building, it was full of ‘holes, boles and wee windows’. It had a baker’s shop on the ground floor, and in the early 19th century Mrs. Kedie kept an inn there. During the great flood of 1767 about a dozen people used a ladder across to the house to escape when trapped on the Auld Brig. It was said that the street ‘was stripped to the very rocks’ between here and Ekron’s houses. The house was said to have been the lodgings of theologian Thomas Chalmers. The house was demolished in 1863 to make way for the Exchange, but can be seen in a photograph of 1860. It was also known as ‘Kedie’s Gable’ and ‘the Brig-end’, and should not be confused with ‘Kedie’s Buildin’.

the Kedies (thu-ke-deez) n. local family of some importance in the 18th and 19th centuries, with the name also written ‘Kedzie’ and other variants. Isobel ‘Kedyea’ is recorded as mother in a Hawick birth record of 1650. A branch of the family lived in the same place for seven generations, on the west bank of the Slitrig, near the mill, known as the ‘Kedie Hoose’, before the tenement was torn down in 1863. The family were also sometimes referred to as the Old Manse Lane Kedie’s and produced 3 Cornets. The 20-mile long street Kedzie Avenue in Chicago (and its associated subway stations) is named after a descendant of this Hawick family. There were burghesses of Selkirk called ‘Cadow’ recorded in Selkirk in the early 16th century and people called ‘Kaidyea’ in Ashkirk in the 17th century (also sometimes ‘Keddie’, ‘Kedzie’ and other variants; the name may be related to Cadzow near Hamilton).

Kedie’s (ke-deez) n. William Kedie & Co., also known for a while as Kedie, Darling & Co. Ltd., Hawick woollen manufacturers of the latter part of the 19th century, with main factory at Riverdale Mills. William Kedie, a High Street draper, started his small tweed business in the mid-1800s, and when he died in 1880 it was taken over by his nephew Robert Innes, with Blenkhorn and Richardson as silent partners. Innes died in 1895, and when he died in 1880 it was taken over by his nephew Robert Innes, with Blenkhorn and Richardson as silent partners. Innes died in 1895, and Adam Darling became a partner in 1898. The firm went into increasing debt in the early 1900s and was incorporated into Blenkhorn, Richardson & Co. around 1910.

Kedie’s Buildin (ke-deez-bil-din) n. building at 7 Tower Knowe, near where the Kedie family had previously lived. It was built by Harkness the builders and is beside the steps to the Millport. The site was probably the location of the original Mill of Hawick. It is the first house on the North side of what was effectively the High Street, and was occupied by William Kedie, draper in the 1850s. The site was much later known as the Tower Cafe (also known as ‘Kedie’s Shop’ and not to be confused with ‘the Kedie Hoose’ on the other side of the Tower Knowe, or the Ruecastle Tenement formerly at 7 High Street).

Kedzie (ked-zee) n. Adam (1746–1818) son of George Francis and Agnes. In 1770 he married Margaret Stewart (1756–1820), recorded in Hawick and Castleton Parishes. Their children were: Elizabeth (1772–1850); Nancy (1774–1841); George (1777–1834); Christie Archibald (1778–1868); James (1779–1860); Margaret Hume (1780–1865); William (1781–1828); Margaret Telford (1792–1874); Janet (1783–1849); Isabel (1785–1881); Adam (1790–1820); Margaret, who died in infancy; and Mary (1797–1830). In 1795 he emigrated with his wife and eight children, staying in Bovina, Delaware County, New York, before moving to Stamford, Connecticut. His grandson John Hume Kedzie was an important real estate developer, with Kedzie Avenue in Chicago and Kedzie Street in Evanston named after him. Kedzie Avenue is a very long street running north/south through Chicago, with a subway station of the same name (spelling varies, e.g. ‘Keidzea’; see also Kedie).

Kedslie (kedz-lee) n. farm west of the A68 beyond Earlston, with a nearby hill of the same name (the origin of the name is probably from the Old English personal name ‘Cada’; it is first recorded in about 1200 as ‘Caddysleya’ and is ‘Kedsliedoors’ in 1643; it seems likely that there is a connection with the local Kedie/Kedzie/Kedzie family).

keek (keek) v. to peek, peep, glance, pry, look furtively – ‘she’s keekin oot her wundi’, ‘... Tae bei a keekin’ glass’ [JSB], ‘... Keilder (keel-dur) n. common misspelling of Kielder.

Keir (keer) n. William of Whithaugh (d.1818) possibly son of Thomas of Powisholm and Elizabeth Elliot, heiress of Whithaugh. He was Chamberlain for the Duke of Buccleuch for Eskdale and Liddesdale from perhaps 1772 to 1818. He lived at Milnholm, near Langholm, where he is recorded in the Horse Tax Rolls in the 1780s and the dog tax in 1797. In 1870 he advised the Duke that some people in Liddesdale were petitioning for land to create a village, which would become Newcastleton. He was in charge of the plans for the town’s layout. He subscribed to John Learmont’s book of poetry in 1791. He is probably the William ‘of Raniston’ listed as a Commissioner of Roxburghshire in 1819. His agricultural improvements were the focus of a 2004 Ph.D. thesis at Edinburgh University by Brian Bonnyman. He was succeeded as Chamberlain by James Davidson. Whithaugh seems to have been inherited by William, who was probably his nephew. However, it is unclear how many Williams there were. He died at Milnholm. William of Whithaugh (b.1810) son of Thomas and Eliza Elliot, was born at Langholm. He probably inherited Whithaugh from his grandfather. He acted as estate improver for the Duke of Buccleuch. He resided at Potholm, near Langholm until 1848. In 1851 he is recorded at Whithaugh in Castleton Parish, as farmer of over 2,000 acres and employing 18 labourers. He was at Whitehaugh in Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1861 he was still at Whithaugh, which is recorded as a house having 8 rooms with 1 or more windows. He was recorded as ‘Wm. Kerr’ at ‘Whithaugh’ in a directory of 1868. He was listed as owner of Whithaugh in the Land Tax Rolls of about 1874. He served as Chairman of the Parochial Board for Castleton. He was President of the Liddesdale Curling Club. He was also a breeder of prize cattle. His wife was Janet. He died without issue and Whithaugh was inherited by his nephew William Little.

Keith (keeth) n. Alexander of Belses (18th/19th C.) accountant in Edinburgh. He was recorded as owner of parts of Belses (purchased from Bennet of Chester) in Acrum Parish in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls. He was listed as a Commissioner of Roxburghshire in 1819. He presumably held some of the lands of Belses, but this may only have been for the purpose of voting. Sir Edward (c.1280–1346) son of Robert, who was Great Marischal of Scotland. He is probably the Edward mentioned in a letter from Edward I in about 1300, granting him licence to take any of the goods from ‘Monsire Guilliam de Galeys’ (i.e. William Wallace). His brother Sir Robert succeeded their father as Great Marischal and commanded the cavalry at Bannockburn. He is referred to as ‘de Kethe’ when, along with his wife Isabella de Synton, he claimed the Sheriffdom of Selkirk from Edward I in about 1305. Isabella was the sister of the previous Sheriff, Andrew de Synton, and heiress to the Synton estate. He had a confirming charter for his lands and offices from David II. He secondly married Christina (or Christian), daughter of Sir John Monteith, Lord of Annan; she secondly married Sir Robert Erskine of that Ilk. His children included: Sir William; John of Inverugie, who married Mariot de Chen; Catherine; and Janet (or Joneta), who married Sir Thomas Erskine. Jean (presumably Janet) is recorded as his heir in a charter of 1368. It is unclear whether he or any of his children played any role locally. But Joneta married an Erskine, suggesting that the Synton estates passed through her to that family. His seal is attached to the Declaration of Arbroath. He died at the Battle of Neville’s Cross. His seal was divided into 6 vertical regions and decorated with lozenges, with a diagonal stripe on top. Janet or ‘Joneta’ (c.1345–1415) youngest daughter of Edward and Christina Menteith. She was also great-grand-daughter of the 11th Earl of Mar (resulting in a long-standing claim of the Erskines to the Earldom of Mar). She married David de Barclay (in Selkirk), then David Hamilton of Cadzow and finally Sir Thomas Erskine. In 1368 she is described as ‘Jean Berclay, daughter and heir of deceased Sir Edward Keth, lord of Synton'. One of her sons was Robert, 1st Lord Erskine, who probably inherited the Synton estates from her.

Kelloe Plantin (ke-lə-plawn’-in) n. plantation to the west of Borthwickbrae.

Kelly (ke-lee) n. Fr. Daniel (d.1943) priest at S.S. Mary & David 1938–42. He came from the neighbouring parish of Selkirk. He was responsible for significant redecoration of the interior of the church, and cleaning of the exterior. He resigned his charge in 1941 due to ill-health, remaining as assistant for another year before retiring fully. Elizabeth see Ruecastle. Frederick (19th C.) highwayman, whose accomplices held up carts of drink and other goods around Langburshielis and Whitrope in the early 1860s. Fr. Thomas (1896–1963) born in County Leitrim, Ireland, he was ordained a priest in Glasgow in 1925 and served in Glasgow, Airdrie, Saltcoats, Glasgow (again), Newmains and Portobello before arriving in Hawick as Chaplain of St. Margaret’s Convent in 1961 (formerly spelled ‘Kellie’, etc.).

Kelly Cleuch (ke-lee-klooch) n. small stream in Liddesdale, rising on Rain’s Hill and flowing roughly westwards to join the Liddel Water between Hewis Bridge and Dinlabyre. It is probably associated with the former farm of Killoley.

kelpie (kel-pee) n., arch. a young mischievous person – ‘Fierce drove the storm, with sleet and rain. The waters rose and raged amain, And oft we heard the kelpy’s cry Amid the tempest’s melody’ [JTe].

Kelsae see Kelsi

Kelsi (kel-si) n. Kelso, 21 miles north-east of Hawick, built at the confluence of the Tweed and the Teviot. It was an abbey town from 1128 and traditionally a market town for farmers, artisans and particularly shoemakers. The lands of the village were granted to Kelso Abbey in 1343, and it became a Burgh of Barony in 1634. It was governed by the Baron Bailie (appointed by the Duke of Roxburgh) until well into the 19th century. The town was largely destroyed by fire in 1684, when it is said that 306 families lost their homes. It is renowned for its Georgian, Flemish-style Square, with a bull ring in the centre, plus the 1816 ionic-columned Town Hall, and 1761 Cross Keys. The first stone bridge of 1754 was an important crossing point for the Tweed (swept away 1797) and Rennie’s 1803 bridge was the model for the Waterloo Bridge. Kelso remains an agricultural centre, with tourism, fishing, a Race Course and light industry. Ednam House (built 1761), the Corn Exchange (1855) and the octagonal Parish Church (1771–73) are important historical buildings, and Floors Castle is just a mile to the west. The Turret House serves as a local museum. The route between Hawick and Kelso would have directly followed the Teviot for centuries; the improved road (essentially the A698) was completed in the late 18th century. Kelso Civic Week is in July and was inaugurated in 1937. It comprises the Kelso Laddie’s Reel, a ceremony at the Trysting Tree, commemorating the old Whipmen’s society, and ride-outs, including one to Yetholm. An older tradition is St. James Fair, formerly in August and now in September. ‘Guide to Kelso’ was published by J. & J.H. Rutherford in 1880. Population (1991) 5,989 – ‘Bosom’d in woods where mighty rivers run, Kelso’s fair vale expands before the sun; Its rising downs in vernal beauty swell, And fring’d with hazel winds each flowery dell’ [JL] (the name is from the Old English ‘calc hoh’, meaning ‘chalk hill’, or perhaps from Old Welsh ‘calch’ plus Old English, meaning ‘heel-shaped spur of land’; it first appears as ‘Calcho’, ‘Calcho’ and ‘Calkou’ in the 12th century; it is on Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Calso’; the local pronunciation ‘Kelsey’ appears in the 16th century; often also written ‘Kelsae’).

Kelsi Abbey (kel-si-aw-bee) n. Kelso Abbey, founded in 1128 by monks from Tiron, France, having been originally founded in Selkirk in 1113, with a charter by David I. The grants from David included lands in Lilliesleaf, as well as elsewhere around the Borders. It was dedicated to Mary and St. John in 1143 and the rights and lands of the monks were confirmed in a charter by Malcolm IV in 1159. It is the most ruined of the four Border abbeys, but was once the largest and wealthiest, having possessed the revenues of 33 parishes; it was not until about 1430 that its superiority was overtaken by St. Andrews. The founder was Prince Henry, son of David I, who is buried at Roxburgh. The infant James III was crowned at the Abbey in 1460 after his father was killed nearby. The last Abbot was James Stewart, illegitimate son of James V. It was burned in 1523 and then partly destroyed by a force of Spaniards in Hertford’s 1545 invasion, and burned again in 1547. Part of the Abbey was later used as a prison, and then as the parish church till 1771. Only the western section remains of a once much larger construction, with memorial additions for...

the Kelsi Chronicle (thu-kel-si-ko-nee-kul) n. the Kelsi Chronicle, founded in Kelso in 1783, it was the first newspaper published in the Borders. It was renamed the British Chronicle or Union Gazette in 1784, and was discontinued in 1803, but resumed again in 1832. Merging later with the Border Pioneer, Jedburgh Gazette, etc., it ran until 1932, eventually becoming part of the Southern Reporter. Because of its Liberal stance (in opposition to the Tory-backed Kelso Mail) it often covered newsworthy events in Hawick. It is also useful as a source of local death notices and obituaries, particularly before the first Hawick-based papers appeared.

Kelsi Junction (kel-si-jungk-shin) n. junction of the Waverley Line with the Kelso branch line, south of Newtown St. Boswells. This linked Hawick with Kelso and points towards Tweedmouth (1851–1964), as well as to Jedburgh via another branch (1851–1948).

d Kelsi Mail (thu-kel-si-mal) n. the Kelso Mail, or Roxburgh, Berwickshire and Northumberland Gazette, one of the earliest newspapers published in Roxburghshire. It started in 1797, and was one of only printed sources of local news for about 50 years, before the first Hawick newspapers started. It was founded by James Ballantyne (friend and later publisher of Sir Walter Scott) and was staunchly pro-Tory. The first Hawick agent was John Nixon. It ceased publication in 1945. The same company started publishing books (at the suggestion of Sir Walter Scott), moving to Edinburgh in 1802, and publishing many of Sir Walter’s novels.

Kelsi Wull (kel-si-wul) n. local nickname, probably from the 19th century – ‘Wullie Dunlap and Big Frank creep Past us, and Cashie’s near at hand; There’s Kelsi Wull and Wat the Sweep, And Wullie Gouldlands leadin’ the Band’ [HI] (presumably a William with a connection to Kelso).

Kemp (kemp) n. James (b.1822) son of William and Elizabeth Ketchin, he was an ironmonger in Galashiels. He is probably the Mr. Kemp of Gala who, in 1856, donated to the Hawick Archaeological Society a mastodon tooth and other fossils and rocks. John (19th C.) brewer of Hawick who was also an early member of Al-lars Kirk. It is possible he is the same man as the cooper. John (b.c.1790) from Melrose, he was a cooper in Hawick. He is listed in Pigot’s 1837 directory and recorded at about 16 High Street in 1841. In 1851 he was a widower around the Crown Close and in Slater’s 1852 directory he is a cooper on the High Street. In 1861 he was a widower at 4 Melgund Place (probably the modern No. 9). His wife was Margaret and their children included Helen, Catherine, Margaret and Jane. Rev. Joseph William (1872–1933) born in Hull, son of a policeman. His parents died when he was young, and he had minimal education. He attended night school, then the Bible Training Institute in Glasgow, where he was baptised. He became minister at Kelso Baptist Church in 1897 and moved to Hawick Baptist Church in Kemp’s Castle (kems-kaw-sul) n. popular name for the remains of a settlement near Blawearie. The hill there is essentially the northeastern spur of Borthwickshiel Horn, and reaches a height of 349 m. The main enclosure is an oval about 50 m by 40 m, defined by a bank with an outer quarry ditch. The entrance is on the east side and there are as many as 5 hut circles inside. Another fainter enclosure to the south-west measures about 90 m by 75 m and contains other hut circles. This may be an early iron age settlement. There are signs of cord rig on the eastern slopes (there are other Kemp’s Castles elsewhere).

Kemp’s Close (kems-klos) n. occasional name used in the mid-19th century for a passageway at 7 High Street, named after the cooper’s there.

Kennedy (ke-nu-dee) n. Alexander (17th C.) resident at Langflat (near Southfield) in 1694, according to the Hearth Tax rolls. Alexander (17th C.) resident of Riddell according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. He is listed among the ‘deficients’ of the Parish, but was charged tax for 2 hearths. Alexander Allan (19th/20th C.) manager of the Wells estate in Rulewater from 1885. He had previously been at the Earl of Seafield’s Strathspey estate. In 1877 he married Emma Groves from Gloucestershire. Andrew (b.1820/1) painter-decorator, who had a younger brother Robert. He was also known locally as an artist, painting ‘The Hawick Common-Riding of 1846’ which is in the Museum, along with portraits of some prominent Hawick men of his day, e.g. Tommy Roberton (which he donated to the Archaeological Society along with other items). He was also responsible for decorating the Victoria Bridge when it was first built. In 1841 he and his brother were recorded on the High Street (probably about No. 71). He lived near the Millport Steps, moved later to 12 Teviot Crescent (which became the Burns Club) and feued land at the foot of Baker Street. He is listed as a painter at Teviot Crescent in Slater’s 1852 directory. He was a Trustee of St. George’s Kirk. He married Elizabeth Morgan, and thier children included: Mary (b.1850); Elizabeth (b.1852); Robin (b.1854); Thomas; Margaret; and William H.G. David (1839–1907) born in Kilmarnock, he moved to Hawick in about 1861. He had a chemist’s shop on the High Street. In 1875 he found a large quantity of old coins while digging the foundations for a house on the High Street, these apparently having been deposited there in about 1555. In 1869 he married Helen Crichton, daughter of Gideon Ker. Their children were: Annie; Maggy; and Robert (b.1875), who took over the chemist’s shop. Gilbert (15th C.) Canon of the Collegiate Church of Bothwell and Prebendary of Hawick. In 1470 he swapped these benefits with James Lindsay for the Rectory of Benholm in St. Andrews Diocese. Rev. Hugh (1698–1764) born in Northern Ireland of Scottish parents, he graduated from Glasgow University in 1714 and became Chaplain to the Douglasses of Cavers. He was licensed by the Presbytery of Jedburgh in 1720 and became minister of Torthorwald in 1721. He was presented to Cavers by Archibald Douglas in 1722 and became minister in 1723. In 1730 he witnessed a baptism in Hawick for Robert Whinton. He served as Moderator of the Merse and Teviotdale Synod. An addition to Cavers Kirk, adjoining the Eliott Aisle bears the inscription ‘17M18K30’. He remained at Cavers Kirk until moved to the Scots Kirk in Rotterdam in 1737. There he translated into Dutch the works of several of the best-known Scottish and English theologians. He obtained a D.D. from Aberdeen in 1762 and was described as ‘one of the best pulpit-men in the kingdom’. He was said to be tall, slender and with an open face and ruddy complexion. He married Margaret Scott (d.1746), a sister of Walter Scott of Crumhaugh, and they had 13 children, including: Anne (b.1724), who married Alexander Livingstone, Provost of Aberdeen and merchant in Rotterdam; Archibald (b.1726); Hugh (b.1727); Charles (b.1729); Rachel (b.1730), who married William Fraser of Fraserfield; Walter (1732–77), who became a planter in Surinam; Robert (b.1735); William (1737–1782), who became Professor of Greek in Marischal College, Aberdeen; Beatrix, who married Capt. Bradshaw; and a son who died young. The 1726, 1729, 1732 and 1737 baptisms were carried out by John Douglas, minister at Kirkton. He published several sermons, some of them in Dutch, including ‘Sermon at opening of the Synod’ (1732), ‘Discourse concerning the Nature, Author, Means, and Manner of Conversion (1743), ‘Sermons in the Dutch Language’ (1748), ‘A short Account of the Rise and Progress of a remarkable Work of Grace in the United Netherlands’ (1752), as well as prefaces in other works. Several of his works were abridged in ‘Remains’ (1828) edited by John Brown of Whitburn. James (17th C.) smith living at Ashkirk Mill. In 1684 and 1685 he had a bond with Patrick Fletcher, Burgess of Selkirk. He was resident of Ashkirk Mill in 1693 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll there. He may be the James who witnessed baptisms in 1690 for William Veitch (also in Ashkirk Mill) and for William Donald. James (18th C.) chaise-driver at Teviotbank in 1794, when he was working for David Simpson. James (1771–1842)

imkeeper of the Ordnance Arms and Quarter-Master-Sergeant in the Royal Horse Artillery. He was probably the James born in Cavers Parish to James. He served as 'Preses' of the Relief Kirk Session. He was known locally as a veteran of Waterloo. He enlisted in 1790 and retired from the army in 1818, during which time he saw almost constant active duty, including in the Peninsular War and at Waterloo. He was present at Badajos, Torres Vedras, Salamanca, Cuidad Rodrigo and Vittoria. He was also part of the occupying army in Paris after Waterloo. He attained the highest grade of a non-commissioned soldier and apparently turned down a commission. He was known as one of the best artillerists in his regiment. After retiring he was miller at Spittal-on-Rule briefly, but then became landlord of the Ordnance Arms (which he presumably named), which was also known as the Cannon Inn, at 12 High Street. He is recorded there on Pigot's 1825/6 and 1837 directories and on the 1841 census. He also served as superintendent of the weigh-house in Hawick. He was listed as a member of Allars Kirk in 1829. His only child with his first wife was born in Ireland, probably while he was stationed there. He may also have lived for a while in Kelso, since that is where his son William Norman was born in 1821. He married twice, firstly to Sarah Damone (who died in 1812) and secondly to Lucille (or 'Angélique Lucilla') Hervieu. It is said that he met his second wife during the time he was in the occupying force in Paris, and that to begin with neither of them spoke a word of the other's language. His children included: James Damone (b.1807/8); Robert; William Norman (b.1821); Lucilla, who married Thomas Kedie Pringle; and Frederick (b.1825). James (b.1803/4) frame-work knitter in Hawick. He was on the Kirk Wynd in 1841, the Back Row in 1851 and Drumlanrig Place in 1861. He married Janet Bower in Wilton in 1830. Their children included: Catherine (b.1831); John (b.1834); and Ann (b.1836). He secondly married Isabella Stavert, and she died before 1861. Children by this second marriage included: Oliver (b.1839); Margaret (b.1841); Helen; James; Thomas; and Jane (b.1855). James Damone (1807/8–73) bookseller, bookbinder and printer of Sandbed and Teviot Square. He was son of James and Sarah Damone and brother of Robert and William Norman, and born in Athole Ireland (perhaps when his father was stationed there). He was a bookbinder's apprentice with Archibald Rutherford in Kelso, worked for a short time in Jedburgh and then in 1829 set up as a bookbinder, bookseller and stationer in Hawick. He also became a printer in 1836 and in 1842 he published 'The Hawick Observer and Scottish Border Intelligencer', the town's first newspaper. He also operated 'Kennedy's Circulating Library' in the 1830s to 1850s, being listed this way in Pigot's 1837 directory and Slater's 1852 directory. He was listed as a bookseller, stationer and bookbinder, as well as a printer, at the Sandbed, in Pigot's 1837 directory. In Slater's 1852 directory he was a bookseller, stationer and printer and also a book-binder. Additionally he acted as life insurance agent for the Association of Scotland. Many local books were published by his firm, including 'Upper Teviotdale and the Scotts of Buccleuch' (1887) and 'The Hawick Tradition of 1514' (1898). His first premises were on the other corner of the Sandbed, but he quickly moved over to No. 2. He was an elder of Hawick Parish for 25 years and a Town Councillor for 10 years. He also served as Burgh Treasurer. He married first Alison Rutherford and then Christian Lamb. He had at least 10 children, including: James; Francis Rutherford (b.1830); Alison; Sarah Damone; Priscilla; Anne; Charlotte Matilda; William Rutherford; Walter Phillips (b.1854), who ran the firm of W. & J. Kennedy, along with his brother; and John William (b.1857), who also ran the family business. He died suddenly at a Town Council meeting. At the time of his death he was the oldest shopkeeper and oldest member of the Kirk Session in Hawick. James (19th C.) listed as collector at the Town Steel-yard on the High Street, in Pigot's 1837 directory. James (b.1808/9) frame-worker in Hawick, living at 77 High Street in 1851 and 1861. His wife was Elizabeth (or 'Eliza') Pattison from Langholm. Their children included: John (b.1834); Matthew (b.1835); Ann Little (b.1839), who married James Graham; Mary (b.1836), who married James Elder; James A. (b.1841); Elizabeth Pattison, who married Richard Edmondson; and Jane H. James (b.1809/10) from Selkirk, he was a frame-worker in Hawick. In 1861 he was living at 3 O'Connell Street (perhaps the modern 13). He married Margaret, daughter of Walter Elliot and Euphemia Laidlaw. Their children included: Euphemia, James, Walter, Agnes, Janet, George, Margaret (b.1851), Elliot (b.1857) and Elizabeth (b.1861). James (b.1817/8) shepherd in Wilton Parish. In 1861 he was living with his wife Elizabeth Renwick and his mother-in-law at Lockiesedge. His children included Heriot S. and Elizabeth. He may be the same James living at Roadhead in 1851, with an earlier wife Mary, and working as a frame-work knitter. James Aitchison (19th C.) Hawick Bailie, father of Lieut.-Col. James. He was probably a butcher, living at Myreslaw Green. He appears to have married Isabella Ainslie in 1880, Mary Beattie in 1882 and Beatrice Robson in 1885. He may be the son of James and Elizabeth born around 1845. James D., M.B.E. (19th/20th C.) son of John William. He enlisted in WW1, becoming a sergeant in the K.O.S.B. He fought in Flanders, where his great-grandfather James had fought with Wellington. He later worked for the forestry service in West Africa. Lt. Col. James, D.S.O., M.C. (19th/20th C.), one of Hawick’s most illustrious soldiers. He enlisted in the Black Watch in 1904, serving in South Africa and India. He was sent to France in 1914, being awarded with the D.C.M. later that year, followed by the Military Cross in 1915. The next year saw him appointed as Lieutenant Colonel with the Welsh Regiment, and later received the D.S.O. In civilian life in Hawick he was associated with several service-men’s and sporting institutions. He was Acting Father in 1921 to Chap Landles. Rev. James A.T. (19th/20th C.) minister at St. Andrew’s Kirk 1915–21. James (20th C.) railway blacksmith who worked at Loch Park. He was known as a great singer. In 1950 he was the first person to sing ‘Auld Hawick, Where I Was Born’ in public. John (18th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Agnes Kennedy and their children included John (b.1780). John (18th C.) inn-keeper in Hawick. He married Ann Ward and their children included: George (b.1779); George (again, b.1784); and William (b.1786), born in 1785. The witnesses in 1779 were miller John Scott and Church Officer Walter Scott. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Minto. He subscribed to Andrew Scott’s book of poetry, printed in Kelso in 1811. John (18th/19th C.) formerly Pipe Major of the 75th Highlanders, he was appointed town piper in 1802, but only for about 1 year. He would play the pipes through the town nightly at 7 p.m. He was the last of Hawick’s official pipers. John (b.c.1780) stocking-maker living at about 48 High Street in 1841. His wife was Mary and their children were George, Margaret and Mary. He could be the native of Hawick who died in Galt, Ontario in 1855, aged 76, with his wife dying there in 1857, aged 73. John (b.c.1807) frameworker in Hawick. In 1841 he was on Kirkyard, in 1851 he was at about 12 Howegate and in 1861 was in the back house of 26 High Street. He married Mary Scott in 1831 and their children included Margaret, John, Robert, Janet, James (b.1838), George (b.1840), Mary, Thomas and Agnes. John (19th C.) married Mary Stothart in Hawick Parish in 1842. John (b.1834) shoemaker journeyman living at 14 Howegate in 1861. He was born in Hawick, son of James and Janet Bower. He married Helen Rutherford in Hawick in 1855. Their children included: James (b.1856), who probably died young; Helen (b.1857); William (b.1859); Janet (b.1861); John Bower (b.1863); Jane (b.1865); James (b.1866); Oliver (b.1868), who donated the Medway Cup; Thomas (b.1871); Catherine (b.1873); and Agnes (b.1874). John William (1857–1934) son of James Damone and brother of Walter Phillips, with whom he ran the firm W. & J. Kennedy. He became an expert on the history of the Borders and was said to have had a quiet disposition. He suggested and organised the erection of the Johnnie Armstrong commemorative stone at Teviothead, unveiled in 1897. He also contributed to the Transactions of the Archaeological Society and was a member of the Society for 59 years. During the period 1907–33 he served as either President or Vice-President. He helped James Sinton compile his bibliography of Hawick-related works. He married Annie Scott Edie, who died in 1940, aged 71. James D., M.B.E., was their son. They also had 3 daughters, Lucille and Peggy being long time workers in the family shop. John (d.1985) from the bookseller’s family. He rose to a prominent position within the Forestry Commission, which started awarding a trophy in his name to encourage multi-purpose woodlands. Oliver (19th C.) married Sarah Ann Henson. Their son Thomas Oliver was born in Hawick in 1874. He was probably the Oliver born to James and Isabella in Hawick in about 1839. Oliver (b.1868) son of John and Helen Rutherford, he was born in Hawick. He was a stocking-maker to trade, moving to Southend to set up his own company, and using ‘Medway’ as his trade name. He presented the Medway Cup in 1927, to be competed for at the Common Riding Races. A cousin on his mother’s side was Isla Coulton, nee Scott. He is probably the Oliver who either married Jane Beattie in Hawick in 1906, Isabella Hughes in 1911 or Euphemia Haldane Davies in 1916. Robert (1777/8–1860) blacksmith of Melgund Place. He was son of shepherd James and Janet Fulton and is buried in Wellogate Cemetery. Robert (d.1882) older brother of William Norman and younger half-brother of James Damone. He wrote some poetry, including ‘Plea for the Common Riding’, being a strong Common Riding supporter, despite being an exile. He also wrote an inauguration ode on the unveiling of Prince Albert’s Monument in Edinburgh and verses on the erection of the Bruce Statue in Stirling. He was a civil engineer who spent much of his life in India and retired to Edinburgh. He donated a large collection of Indian artefacts to the Museum in 1863, as well as a number of coins and hunting and fishing trophies from India. He was described as ‘one of the most munificent of the donors to whom the Museum has been indebted’. He would annually bring the old snuff horn of his brother’s over to Hawick for the Snuffling. Robert (1875–1948) son of David and Helen Crichton Ker. He took over his father’s chemist’s shop on the High Street. He sold the shop in 1910 and emigrated to Canada the following year. He married Annie Wilson Miller and their children were David, John and 2 daughters who died young. He returned to England in the 1940s. Thomas (17th/18th C.) smith in the Sandbed. In 1719 he is recorded in a discharge with the Burgh of Selkirk. He also had another discharge in 1727 and perhaps others in 1729, 1730, 1733 and 1736, as well as bringing a law suit against Alexander Scott for debt. It is unclear how he might have been related to other Hawick Kennedys. Thomas (18th C.) recorded as tenant of the land of Hutcher’s Riverside in Minto Parish in 1780. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. His wife was Margaret (or ‘Peggy’) Armstrong and their children included: Thomas (b.1808); John (b.1811); Alexander (b.1813); James (b.1815); James (again, b.1817); Mary (b.1819); Robert (b.1823); Margaret (b.1825); and Catherine (b.1828). Thomas (b.1805/6) from Fife, he was a coachbuilder. He lived on the Backdamgate in 1851, employing 5 men and was listed as a coach-maker there in Slater’s 1852 directory. His wife Ann was from Midlothian and they had children Thomas D. and Montague. Sir Thomas Lawrie ‘Jock’ (1928–2013) born in Hawick and educated at Hawick High School, he joined the R.A.F. in 1946 and became a pilot officer in 1949. In 1971 he was appointed Deputy Commandant of the R.A.F. Staff College, Bracknell. By 1979 he was Deputy Commander-in-Chief, R.A.F. Strike Command. He retired in 1986, with the rank of Air Chief Marshal. He also served as Deputy Lieutenant for Leicestershire and Lord Lieutenant of Rutland. He married Margaret Ann Parker and had a son and 2 daughters. Walter Phillips (1854–1913) son of James Damone and Christian Lamb. He learned about the book trade in Edinburgh, and ran the business W. & J. Kennedy with his brother John William. He was a teacher in the Science and Technology School in the late 19th century, who moved to be one of the teachers in the Buccleuch School. In 1874 he was one of two young men who raised a petition to get the School Board to support a mathematics class in the town. Eventually this led to a committee, independent of the School Board, which organised classes in science and art, which were later found a home in the Buccleuch Memorial. His contribution to technical and scientific education in the town was immense. He was also involved with the Archaeological Society. In addition he was a Volunteer for over 30 years, retiring with the rank of Major. He married Jane Law and secondly Emma Landlees. Jean (later Mrs. Irvine, b.1876), first woman President of the Royal Pharmaceutical Society, was his daughter. Dr. W.P. (b.1899) was his son. After his death former pupils subscribed to the establishment of the Kennedy-Dechan Prize in science and mathematics. Walter Phillips (1899–1983) son of Walter Phillips. He was born in Hawick and educated at the Buccleuch Memorial Institute and George Heriot’s. He graduated with a B.Sc. from Edinburgh University in 1920 and a Ph.D. in 1927. He became a doctor and for a while was Professor of Physiology at the Royal Medical College in Baghdad, then moving to the Ministry of Health in London. He was a Fellow of the Royal Society of Edinburgh. William (17th C.) listed among the ‘Deficients in Hauick Parich’ in 1694. He appears to be at ‘The mance of Hauick’ and is listed as ‘Wm Kemmitie in Park’ (although it is unclear where ‘Park’ might be). William (b.1790/1) born in Hawick, he was living at 7 O’Connell Street in 1841 and 1851. He was working as a woollen spinner. His wife was Margaret Leithead, but she died before 1851. Their children included William and Thomas. Probably the same William was living in Hawick when listed among heads of household in Wilton Kirk in 1835. William (b.1817/8) born in Wilton Parish, he was living at Allars Crescent in 1851 and on Dickson Street in 1861. His wife Jane was born ‘At Sea’. Their children included William, James, Catherine, Margaret, Barbara, Thomas and Jane. William Norman ‘Norman’ (1821–1865) son of veteran James and Lucille Hervieu, from France. He was christened in Kelso. He was younger brother of Robert and half-brother of James Damone. He trained as a book-binder, probably with his half-brother. He was Inspector of the Poor in Hawick for about 15 years, but succumbed to fever after visiting a sick pauper. He was a founder of the Archaeological Society, being its first official member, acting as Secretary 'pro tem' in the first months, then being the first Treasurer (personally paying for the publication of the initial reports) and a regular contributor to the early Transactions. Despite his life being cut short, he contributed no less than 48 papers, on a wide range of subjects. Essentially an early folklorist, his descriptions of Hawick characters (mostly presented at the Archaeological Society, but published after his death) formed the basis for Robert Murray's 'Hawick Characters'. They are an invaluable source of information about ordinary Hawick people in the late 18th and early 19th centuries, containing examples of local dialect and numerous funny stories! They formed part of what he referred to as 'The Local Ethnology of Hawick and Neighbourhood', suggesting that we might one day have seen the publication of a full-scale book. His writing shows a skill that stands out compared with most of his contemporaries, suffused with a strong empathy for his fellow humans, with liberal views that seem quite modern (e.g. in his comments about the African-born teacher Tom Jenkins). His liberal views seem sense of humanity. He was probably the Mr. Kennedy who donated to the Archaeological Society in 1856 'some very interesting fossil remains from the greywrack quarry at St. Mary’s head of Slitrig Crescent'. He was also one of the first (in 1858) to suggest the Catrail was a boundary connecting between streams rather than a defensive ditch. In addition, he performed early examinations of local hill-forts, and was elected a member of the Society of Antiquarians of Scotland. He was the first to compile a list of the ministers of Hawick Parish. He wrote some poetry, including 'Dialogue Anent the Auld Brig', another poem on the same subject (intended for the Auld Brig competition, but never entered) and others that appeared in the local press. In 1863 he presented to the Museum some items he had found while St. Mary’s Kirk was being renovated. He was a keen Common Riding supporter, and personally reinstated the ‘Snuffing’ tradition. He wrote a short history of Common Riding traditions, published posthumously from notes of a book he was working on. He had also been working on the Burgh records to trace the ‘Town’s history, and had extensive notes on the history of manufacturing in Hawick, all of which he was intending to compile into some kind of book. He became a friend of Rev. James Morton (author of ‘Monastic Annals of Teviotdale’ and editor of the John Leyden collection), and helped him with preparation of a supplement to Dr. Jamieson’s dictionary of the Scottish language. In 1851 he was living at Teviot Square with a servant, and in Slater’s 1852 directory he is listed as a shopkeeper at Teviot Square. He later lived at Stonefield Cottage, where he is listed in 1861. He married Matilda Cox, who was born in Ireland. Their children included: James Robert (b.1850); Charlotte Elizabeth (b.1851); Lucille Hervieu (b.1853); William Norman (b.1856); Robert (b.1857); John Ross (b.1861); and Matilda (b.1863). His portrait was painted by his brother Robert. He is also in another portrait (by John Guthrie) along with fellow Archaeological Society founders Alexander and Robert Michie, and there is an early photograph of him. His death came unexpectedly after he attended to a feverish woman in the West-end, not being able to find anyone else to help. He is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. William Norman ‘Willie’ (b.1856) son of William Norman. He dispensed the snuff at the Snuffing in the late 1800s and early 1900s. There is a photograph of him with the snuff mill in 1907. He may have been the proprietor of the Tower Hotel and married a daughter of Andrew Minto (formerly written ‘Kemney’, ‘Kenniday’, ‘Kennidie’, ‘Kenitie’, ‘Kennisie’ and variants).

the Kennedy-Dechan Prize (thu-ke-nu-dee-dee-kin-priz) n. science bursary prize fund at the High School, set up by in memory of Walter Phillips Kennedy and Martin Dechan about 1915. The initial fund was subscribed to by former pupils, raising over £1100, with later donations by the Callants’ Club. It was used to award gold medals to 3rd year High School pupils who excelled in science and mathematics. More recently the prize has been given to final year pupils. University prizes in these subjects, available for 3 years, were also originally awarded.

Kennedy’s (ke-nu-deez) n. W. & J. Kennedy, booksellers, bookbinders and stationers shop at 2 Sandbed. It was founded by James Damone Kennedy, then continued by his sons Walter and James. They also ran a circulating library around the 1830s. They published many local books, and were the town’s pre-eminent bookshop for decades. The business left the Kennedy family in the early 1960s, being run by Frances and Allan Hobkirk, but retaining the old name. It closed in 1971 after 142 years, following a compulsory purchase order by the council as part of the Howegate redevelopment scheme; however, the planned realignment of the property never materialised.
Kennedy’s

Ker (ker, kawr) n. Adam (15th C.) Clerk of Glasgow Diocese who was the notary for the document giving the Barony of Hawick to William Douglas, 2nd of Drumlanrig in 1428/9, following the death of William’s father. It is unclear if he was attached to a particular local church. Adam (15th C.) appointed as one of the bailies to Archibald Douglas, Earl of Angus, to give sasine of Wolfelee to David Home of Wedderburn in 1479. Adam (d.bef. 1489) owner of the lands of St. Helen Shaw in Selkirk, which were the eastern demesne lands there. In 1489 his son Thomas was retoured as heir to the lands of ‘Sant Elene Shaw’, including ‘le Kyrk croft’, ‘Caponland’ and ‘Gersland’, by Ralph Ker, bailie to George Douglas, Master of Angus. He is probably ancestor of the later Kers of Shaws. Adam (d.bef. 1579) only son and heir of William of Shaws. In 1528 he gave sasine of lands in Selkirk to John Scott and in 1530 he was recorded receiving yearly rent for lands in Selkirk. In 1530/1, with the consent of his father William, he gave sasine of lands in Selkirk to George Chapman and other lands to John Morlaw. In 1533 he and his father sold a tenement to John Brydon. He was in ‘Sanct Helyne Schawe’ in 1534 when he resigned an annual rent. In that same year he is recorded as heir of William and husband of Janet Newton when James of Mersington gave a letter of obligation to them at ‘the tower of St Helyne Schaw’. In 1540 he and his father resigned a tenement in Selkirk and along with his wife (“Janet Neutoum lady of Dalcoft’) had a transaction involving Little Newton in Lauderdale (with a further transaction for the same lands in 1552). He was recorded as a juror in 1541. He was involved in further transactions in Selkirk in 1543/4 and 1544. He married Janet Newton, who was heiress of the lands of Dalcove in Berwickshire. He was deceased by 1579 when his son Thomas had sasine for his daughter Elizabeth’s lands of ‘Sancthelingschaw’ with tower and other lands in Selkirk. Adam (b.1808/9–79) from the Hawick area. In about 1832 he emigrated to Galt in Ontario. In 1850 he was elected as Clerk and Treasurer, serving until 1858. He was then Mayor of Galt in the period 1868–74. Alexander (16th/17th C.) servant to John Ker of Langnewton, recorded in 1621. He was listed as ‘Willis Elchie’, so that his father must have been called William. Along with some of his associates he was declared a rebel in 1621. Alexander (d.1817) 2nd son of John. He was employed in the naval service of the East India Company, but retired due to bad health. He was ‘Alexander Carre brother-german to John Carre of Cavers’ on the 1780 roll of electors in Roxburghshire. He was also listed as a voter in Roxburghshire in 1788. He was taxed for having male servants in the 1780s. He succeeded to Cavers Carre and Hundailee on the death of his brother Capt. John in 1798. However, he was first listed on the Horse Tax Rolls at Cavers Carre in 1792. In 1800 he married Ann, eldest daughter of Robert Boswell, W.S. Immediately afterwards he had a new part of the house built at Cavers Carre. After getting into financial difficulties he sold Bedrule in 1801, part of this having been in the family since 1528.

Belses was also sold about the same time. He was a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805 (and still listed in 1819). He died without issue and Hundalee went to the Marquess of Lothian (as nearest male heir to Lord Jedburgh), while he left Cavers Carre to his sister Elizabeth. Her son William Riddell Carre later succeeded. Andrew of Cessford and Altonburn (d.1444) 2nd son of Henry, he was the first Ker to be designated 'of Cessford'. In 1420 he was witness to the charter for Branxholme, granted by William Inglis to Robert Scott. He may be the Andrew who was on a ‘retour of inquest’ made in Hawick in 1424 to decide on some lands in Hownam and another in 1427 to decide on inheritance of the Barony of Hawick. He was served heir to his brother Richard in 1428, although he is called ‘of Altonburn’ even before that. In 1429/30 he was on the ‘retour’ panel for the lands of Caverton. In 1430 he held the lands of Primside for loaning a sum of money to Andrew Rule (with some suggestion the date is really much earlier). However, in 1432 these lands were resigned by Andrew Rule to his son George, who had married Margaret Ker (his own daughter). In 1433/4 he had a charter of half the lands of Borthwickshiel from George Chrichton of Blackness. He is probably the Andrew who in 1437 was on the retour for deciding on ownership of the East Mains of Hawick. Also in 1437 he had a charter from William Earl of Douglas for the lands of Primside. He was probably the ‘Andree Ker’ who was a bailie of Sir William Chrichton of that Ilk in 1439, when Grahamslaw was infefted in Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch. In 1439/40 he acquired Primside outright from the daughters of Andrew Rule, and finally the lands of Plenderleith and Hindhope from the Rules in 1454/5 (although that was finalised by his son Andrew). In 1441 he and his son James had a ‘letter of reversum’ for the lands of Lempitlaw with Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch. He had a grant of the Mains of Hownam in 1443. He married a daughter of Sir William Douglas of Cavers and was succeeded by his son Andrew. Other children included: James, who had a charter of Primside in 1444 and may be the same man as James of Linton; Thomas, who also held lands in Primside and probably Gateshaw; and Margaret, who married George Rule of Primside. He was still alive in August 1444, and died close to Christmas that year. Andrew of Cessford and Altonburn (d.bef. 1484) son of Andrew, who he succeeded in 1445. He was probably the originator of the left-handed family tradition. He became prominent as a supporter of the Earl of Angus and was given lands in Jedforest. He was ‘younger’ in 1441 when he witnessed a charter for the lands of Cessford. It was either him or his father who was ‘Andro Ker lord of Awtounburne’ in 1445 when Henry Wood leased his tenantry of Harden Wood (within Borthwickshiel) to him. In 1446 he was ‘Andrea Ker de Awtounburne’ when he witnessed a charter between Inglis of Manor and Scott of Buccleuch. He witnessed a document for Oswald Abernethy, made before the Earl of Douglas in 1446/7, relating to the lands of Teindsay and Harwood. Also in 1446/7 there was a retour at Newark to decide that he was his father’s heir in the lands of Primside. In 1447 he was a witness to the charter of Margaret Cusing (wife of Simon Routledge, Hawick Burgess) to Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme. He was ‘Bailie in that part’ in a 1448 document whereby Stephen Scott gained the ‘Burrellands’ in Eckford. In 1450 he had a charter for lands in Stirlingshire. And he was Walter Scott of Buccleuch's Bailie in Eckford (along with Stephen Scott) in 1454. In 1453 he had a mutual bond of manrent with Sir Robert Colville. In 1456 he was accused of bringing Englishmen to burn Eckford, Craill, Grahamslaw and Jedburgh, but was acquitted. Also in 1456 he and his brother James were involved with collecting rents on the King’s lands in Ettrick Forest, for which he had the lease of the farms of Bowerhope and Ashiestiel. In 1457 he was made Bailie of the Lordship of Jedforest by George, Earl of Angus; in place of his seal the agreement used the seal of David Pringle of Pilnuir, since he ‘had no seal of his own present’. In the early 1460s he sided with Robert, Lord Boyd, in seizing power from the young King James III. In 1464 he was on the inquest for the inheritance of the Barony of Cavers and Sheriffship of Roxburgh (to Archibald Douglas) and also on the panel to decide on the disputed lands of Kirkton Mains and the Flex (between William Douglas of Drumlanrig and Alexander Gledstains). In 1468 he and his son Walter were involved in an arrangement with Sir Alexander Home of that Ilk, when they acted as procurators for Henry Wardlaw of Torrie (and Wilton). In 1469/70 he witnessed the granting of the Governorship of Hermitage to the Scotts of Buccleuch for the Earl of Angus. In 1470 he was a witness to another charter for the Douglasses of Cavers, and was one of the bailies appointed by the Earl of Angus to give sasine of these lands in 1472. In 1470/1 he was indicted for helping the English, bringing in the traitor James Douglas, involvement in the battle in which the Laird of Rutherford and others were captured, wounded or killed, helping Robert, Lord Boyd, in capturing the King for a period, and involvement in plotting to kill Andrew, Lord Avondale, Chancellor of Scotland: he appeared before a jury and was acquitted, with the decision witnessed by several Border Lairds. In 1471 his son and heir Walter took possession of the lands of Borthwickshiel and Harden Wood. Also in 1471 he had a debt relating to Crown lands. In 1475/6 he was witness to a document relating to Kirkurd for the Scotts of Buccleuch. In 1479 he received the ‘fermes’ (i.e. rental fees) of Jedburgh. He may be the Andrew who was infested in the lands of Crailing and Hownam by Alexander Home in 1484. He was said to have married a daughter of William Douglas of Cavers (although this may have been his father), and secondly married Margaret Tweedie (or perhaps Herries). His children included: Andrew, younger of Cessford, mentioned in 1464/5, who died before his father, and married Margaret; Walter of Caverton and Cessford, who succeeded; Thomas, who became the 1st Laird of Ferniehirst and is usually spelled ‘Kerr’; Robert, Abbot of Kelso; William of Yair and Bothill; Ralph of Primside Loch, also called ‘Radulpho’; and Margaret, who married Sir James Sandilands of Calder. James of Linton and George of Samuelston may also have been his sons (but both of these are open to debate). Andrew (d.bef. 1479) eldest son of Andrew of Cessford, but he died before his father. He is mentioned in 1464/5. He may have married a Hepburne, and after his death his wife married a Haliburton, Laird of Dirleton (she was probably the ‘Mariota’ who was wife of George, 4th Lord Haliburton of Dirleton). His only child was Margaret, who in 1479 renounced all claim to the Barony of Cessford in favour of her uncle Walter. Andrew of Gateshaw (15th/16th C.) perhaps son of James. In 1498 he was in dispute with the Abbot of Melrose over the ‘herezeld’ of his tenants. In 1510 he and Thomas, brother of Philip Scott of Headshaw, were accused of murdering John Murray of Falkhill. His sureties were his son Lancelot, along with James of Whitrig. Sir Andrew (d.1526) Laird of Cessford, son of Sir Robert (who died before he could succeed). In 1503 he had sasine for Cessford, ‘Huntleisland’, Auld Roxburgh, Altonburn, ‘Bordislandis’ and Castleside. In 1508/9 he had a charter for Auld Roxburgh and in 1511 a confirming charter for Cessford, Caverton (called ‘Rutherfurdislandis’), ‘Fetheringamyslandis’, Hownam, ‘Penniside’ and Smallholm. He served as Warden of the Middle Marches (possibly along with his brother Ralph) about 1503 and again in 1515. He probably fought at Flodden. In 1519 he had a charter of half the lands of Hassendean from William Elphinstone, Burgess of Edinburgh. In 1525 he was named on a bond for keeping peace on the Border. He was killed at the Battle of Skirmish Hill by James Elliot, a supporter of Scott of Buccleuch. This led to a feud between the Scotts and the Kers that lasted decades, and led to the murder of Sir Walter of Buccleuch on Edinburgh High Street in 1552. He married Agnes, daughter of Sir Patrick Crichton of Crichton Rid dell, and was succeeded by his son Sir Walter. His other children included: Mark, Commendator of Newbattle; Andrew, who married Marion Pringle; Catherine, who married Sir John Kerr of Ferniehirst; Margaret, who married Sir John Home of Cowdenknowes and was granted lands in Smallholm in 1524; and Isobel, who married Sir William Sinclair of Roslin. In 1524 his wife ‘Ann Cre[...]’ (either the same as Agnes Crichton, or a 2nd wife) resigned her lands in Selkirk. Andrew of Primside and Greenhead (d.bef. 1537) son of Ralph. He is probably the ‘Andreas ker filius Radulph’ who was part of a bond in 1498 to act upon men who were already fugitives. In 1519 he witnessed a document in Selkirk and was involved in another document in 1520. In 1526 he was listed among the large number of Borders (led by Walter Scott of Braxholme) who had remission for an attack on the Earl of Arran. He was ‘of Greenhead’ in 1527/8 when he agreed to appear at a tribunal in Selkirk. In that same year he and his wife Marion Pringle had a sasine for the lands in Maxwell Fields. In 1529/30 he was still ‘of Greenhead’ when he witnessed a pledge relating to crimes done against George of Linton (who may have been a relative). In 1530/1 he was witness to Sir Walter Scott of Braxholme being granted the hereditary office of Bailie of Melrose Abbey. Also in 1530/1 he had documents involving the lands of Softlaw. In 1531 he was an arbitrator for a feud between the Scotts and Veitches of Synton. In 1532 Robert Scott, tutor of Howpasley and George Scott of Blindhaugh agreed to pay him a fee for the marriage of Janet Scott of Howpasley to Thomas McDougall of Makerstoun. Also in 1532 he purchased the lands of Birkenside from Robert Scott of Howpasley. He witnessed a document in Selkirk between the Kers of Mersington and Shaws in 1534. In 1535 he was involved in a dispute with Thomas Ker in Yair; there he is ‘in Prumsydloucht at his dwelling place called...
Ker

Grenheid’, making it clear that Andrew of Primside and Andrew of Greenhead were the same person. In 1537 he ordered Walter Scott in Synton to leave certain of his lands. In 1538 he and his wife Marion Pringle were absolved from paying past fees on ‘Mablyrynflat’ to John Turnbull of Hassendean, with their son Gilbert to pay in future. He claimed tenancy of Broadmeadows in 1541. He also claimed tenancy of ‘Mydildisteid of Hartwod’, as well as ‘Blakmeidnes’, Bailielee and half of Phaup. He was said to be one of the men indicted in 1552 for the murder of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme (although already deceased by then). He married Marion Pringle and was succeeded by his son Gilbert of Primside; in 1536/7 his wife refused to act as his executor ‘because of the great dangers it will incur’ and in 1539/40 his wife and son obtained the non-entries from Janet Newton and Adam Ker. In 1544 his widow had an agreement with Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme that Scott would pay her for rents on her lands of Broadmeadows. His daughter Janet appointed John Douglas, Burgess in Edinburgh, as her procurator in 1533. Andrew of Graden (d.bef. 1563) younger son of Ker of Cessford. In 1528 he had a charter for Water Hoelaw, formerly belonging to Mark of Dolphinston. He was listed in 1561 among men who had to appear before the Queen to promise to keep peace on the Border. He married Helen Ker and was probably succeeded by Andrew. Andrew ‘Dand’ (16th C.) recorded ‘in Scheilstokbrayis’ in 1567 when Dame Janet Beaton, Lady Buccleuch, was ordered to present him. He was described as her ‘householdman and servant’. Sir Walter Ker of Cessford (and his son Thomas) were also instructed to present him, since he lived on their lands. He presumably lived at Shielstockbraes, in Morebattle Parish. He may have been succeeded by James. Andrew (d.c.1573) son of Andrew of Cessford and brother of Sir Walter of Cessford. In 1538 he was among a group of local Lairds accused of assisting ‘George Ruthirfurde, called Cokburne’ and ‘called Jock of ye Green’ Rutherford. In 1547/8 he was among the Kers who burned lands in Ale Water that belonged to Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme. In 1551 he was ‘broder to Cesfurde’ when he signed the ‘Auld Band of Roxburgh’. In 1553/4 he was one of the Ker pledges to keep good rule against both Scotland and England. Andrew of Linton (16th/17th C.) probably son of James and grandson of George. He is recorded in 1581 when his procurator warned Thomas Ker of Maisondieu (and his wife Isobel) to appear at Lindean Kirk to receive redemption money. He was involved in the slaughter of Robert Pringle, tutor of Blindlee, in about 1586. In 1590 Thomas of Cavers Carre was his surety not to harm Thomas of Mersington. In 1590/1 he was cautioner for William of Cessford not to reset Sir Robert (younger of Cessford), who was ‘at the horn’ for the murder of William of Ancrum. He is probably the Ker of Linton listed among Lairds who appeared before the Privy Council in 1591 to promise to support the Warden and who also subscribed to a bond of allegiance to the King against Bothwell, Home and others. In 1599 he and his son William gave a charter of lands in Duddingston to John, Burgess of Edinburgh. He was a juror on a retour in 1600. Probably the same Andrew signed the bond among Border Lairds for keeping the peace in 1602. In 1603 he was among Scotts and others, subordinates of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch, who ‘had been put to the horn’ for not paying feu mails for their lands to the Queen’s Chamberlain, with Robert of Haining not entering them in court. He married Katherine, sister of Sir Andrew of Greenhead and their children included: William, his heir in 1599; and George, who is probably the George who succeeded to Linton. Sir Andrew of Faldonside (d.1599) son of George of Faldonside and nephew of Sir Andrew of Cessford. His estate was on the Tweed, south-west of Galashiels. His curators were Andrew of Hirsel and Alexander, 5th Lord Home. He complained against Robert Kerr of Woodhead in 1564, resulting in Robert being warded in Edinburgh Tolbooth. He and his children were named in the 1564/5 bond between the Kers and the Scotts; his son and heir George was to marry Janet, sister to Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch, but the Kers did not fulfil this part. He was said to have held a pistol at the side of Mary, Queen of Scots in 1566, when she was forced to watch the murder of David Rizzio. In 1567 he was one of the sureties for entering Hob Elliot of Thorlidgeshope with the Regent Moray. He served as surety in 1569 for Lancie Armstrong of Whithaugh, as well as Hob Elliot (‘callit Sweit Mylk alias Greit Leggis’), and was also surety in 1571 and 1572 and then in 1573 for some Eliotts. In 1571/2 he signed the bond to act against Borders thieves and signed the ‘Band of Roxburgh’ in 1573. In 1572/3 he was surety for James Langlands of that Ilk and for William Douglas of Cavers; they were swearing that they would not help the Kerrs of Ferniehirst. In 1575 he was one of the arbitrators for the Pringles in their feud with the Eliotts. He is listed in Monipennie’s c.1594 compilation of Border lairds. In 1580 he was recorded as superior of the lands in Darnick for which John Scott was hereditary feuar. In 1581 the same John Scott owed him for ‘unpaid fermes’. He acted as Deputy Keeper of Liddesdale in the early 1580s. His brother John was listed among Border criminals in 1586/7. In 1589/90 he was listed as one of the leaders in Roxburghshire charged with seeing that people subscribed to the Confessions of Faith. In 1590/1 he was cautioner for William of Cessford not to reset Sir Robert (younger of Cessford), who was ‘at the horn’ for the murder of William of Ancrum. He is listed among Lairds who appeared before the Privy Council in 1591 to promise to support the Warden. Robertson, Lord Seton was his surety in 1592. In 1594 his eldest son George and another son Walter had bonds for not harming Thomas Falside of that Ilk and Patrick Livingstone of Saltcoats. In 1595 he was surety for Lancelot of Gateshaw not to harm Elizabeth Cranston, widow of Lancelot of Little Newton. In 1596/7 he was a Border Commissioner for dealing with the English. In 1598 he and his son and heir George were involved in a bond. He firstly married Elizabeth Johnstone of Elphinstone and in 1573 secondly married married Margaret Stewart, who was the widow of reformer John Knox and sister of the Regent, the Earl of Arran. He had 4 sons and 3 daughters, including: George, who succeeded; John, whose daughter Mary married William Elliot, Parson of Bedrule; and Margaret, who married Andrew Ker of Yair. In 1632 Robert, son of Andrew of Faldonside (either him or a later generation) succeeded to lands in Feu-Rule. In 1599 his widow Margaret Stewart and son George had a bond for Robert Falside of that Ilk not to harm them. Sir Andrew ‘Dand’ of the Hirsel and Littledean (d.1573) son of Mark of Dolphinstone and Littledean, and descended from the Kers of Cessford. He is probably the Andrew of Littledean who in 1539 witnessed a bond between Scotts regarding the illegitimacy of Thomas son of Adam Scott. He is probably also the ‘Dand’ of Littledean who in 1541 was accused along with Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch of being responsible for the death of an Englishman. He was said to have been granted the lands of Hirsel (in Berwickshire) in 1542 after being the first man to report to the King about the Scottish victory at Hadding Rig. Also in 1542 he made a raid into England, taking prisoner the Constable of Etal and others. In 1547 he and his son Walter of Dolphinstone were listed in the summons for those accused of murdering Darnley. He was Provost of Edinburgh 1548-50 and was knighted in 1552. He is probably the ‘Dand Ker’ who signed the ‘Auld Band of Roxburgh’ in 1551. He is ‘Andro Ker of Hirsell’ in 1552 when indicted for involvement in the murder of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch; his son Walter was also listed. In 1553/4 he was listed among Kers in an assurance not to harm the Scotts or their followers, as well as another bond by the Rutherfords not to harm the Kers. He may be the same as Sir Andrew of Littledean who was to satisfy George Rutherford in 1560 as part of resolving the feud create by the murder of George’s father, George Rutherford of Longnewton; he was also to ask forgiveness from Sir William Cranston ‘for being upon the ground quhair Sir Walter Scot of Bukclewch Knycyt was slaine’, this being Cranston’s uncle. He was among those required by the Queen in 1561 to appear in Jedburgh to answer for their failure to apprehend fugitives. In 1562 he was among the men who appeared before the Privy Council in a promise to end the feud between the Kers and the Scotts. He is mentioned as one of those excepted in the 1564/5 bond between the Scotts and the Kers. He signed the ‘Band of Teviotdale’ in 1565, but helped by the notary. In 1567 he was one of the sureties for entering Hob Elliot of Thorlieshope with the Regent Moray. In 1568/9 he was one of the main Kers to sign a contract with Sir Walter Scott of Branzholmie relating to the slaying of Sir Walter’s father in Edinburgh. They had to appear at the church of Melrose ‘to make homage for the said slaughter’ and his grandson John Kerr was to marry Elizabeth Murray, sister of Sir Walter (and if not, then another son was to marry another relative of Scott of Buccleuch); however, this does not appear to have happened. He may also be the ‘Andro Ker of Litilden’ who signed the bond for suppressing Border thieves in 1569. Also in 1569 he was surety for Sir William Ainslie and was ‘Sir Andro Ker of Hirsell Knycyt’ when a bond was made with John Edmondson of that Ilk. He is probably the ‘Andro Ker of Litildene knycyt’ who signed a bond to act against Borders thieves in 1571/2. He firstly married Margaret Cranston and secondly Euphame Wauchope of Niddrie Marshall, widow of John Edmondson of that Ilk. His children included; Walter of Littledean; and an illegitimate son James, who in 1604 held the teinds of Rutherford, Maxton and Littledean. His will from 1573 is recorded in Edinburgh. Sir Andrew of Caverton (d.bef. 1564) son of Sir Walter of Cessford. He was the heir.

to the Cessford titles and estates, but died before his father, and his brother William succeeded. He was one of the men named in 1552 for their involvement in the murder of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme. In 1562 he and his father (on behalf of their whole band) promised not to enter Ancrum. Also in 1562 he was listed among the men who appeared before the Privy Council in a promise to end the feud between the Kers and the Scotts. Additionally he witnessed a transaction in Selkirk in 1562. He may be the ‘Andro Ker of Hietoune’ (i.e. Heiton) who is mentioned as one of those excepted in the 1564/5 bond between the Scotts and the Kerrs. In 1556 he was contracted to marry Elizabeth, daughter of Sir James Douglas of Drumlanrig, but the marriage does not appear to have happened. He had 2 daughters (perhaps illegitimately), Grisel and Bessie, to whom his mother, Dame Isobel, served as ‘tutrix’ after his death. Andrew of Graden (16th C.) perhaps son of the earlier Andrew of Graden. He was named in 1590 along with ‘Gib Ellott son to Robin’, 2 servants of Robert of Redheugh and others who were accused of stealing horses from Middleton Hall in the previous year. He is recorded as ‘Andrew Karr alias the tutor of Gradoun reset by Robine Ellot’ (suggesting he was already declared a fugitive). It is unclear how he was related to other Kers of Graden. He is probably the ‘Andrew Carr Robin Ellot’s man’ recorded in a separate case in 1590 when a group of Elliots and others were accused of stealing from the ‘Hewrde’ family, as well as maiming and taking prisoner Christopher ‘of the Whithall’. Andrew of Newhall (16th/17th C.) probably son of Robert. His tutor was James Ormiston of that Ilk. He is recorded in 1591/2 when Sir Robert, younger of Cessford, was cautioner for a complaint against him by tenants in Langnewton. This seems to have been part of a long-running feud. In 1592 he was released from Blackness Castle, with Sir Robert promising to presented him to the court if requested; his brothers Robert and James are also mentioned being exiled. In 1595 Sir Robert was declared a rebel for failing to present him and the Earl of Morton continued to complain that there was no promise made to stop harassing his tenants in Longnewton. Andrew of Yair (16th/17th C.) son of William. He was succeeded by William and had other sons Andrew, Robert and Thomas. He was recorded in a transaction in Selkirk in 1582, involving James in Yair and others. Also in 1582 he warned James to accept redemption money from him for annual rents. In 1590 he was among Border landlords and heads of families ordered to find caution for the conduct of their dependents. In 1591/2 his cautioner was George Pringle of Blindlee that he would keep the peace. In 1602 there was a letter against him and his sons William (his heir), Andrew, Robert and Thomas telling him not to encroach on Selkirk Common. Also in 1602 he signed a bond among Border Lairds for keeping the peace. In 1607 he was ‘bailie in that part’ when he gave sasine for Broadmeadows. He was involved in a dispute over lands with the Burgh of Selkirk according to documents of the period 1611–15. The 1611 ‘Letter of Lawburrows’ from James orders him and his ‘men of Yair’ (many of whom are listed) to stop molesting the inhabitants of Selkirk; his sons Robert, Mark and John are also named. In 1612 another letter with the King’s seal suggests that Selkirk should refrain from riding the marches and he should refrain from pasturing animals on Selkirk Common. In 1617 he was among Border Lairds who renewed their bond for keeping the peace. He married Margaret Ker of Faldonside and had at least 4 sons and 6 daughters. Sir Andrew of Greenhead and Primside (d. bef. 1617) possibly son of Gilbert and grandson of the earlier Andrew of Greenhead and Primside. He was ‘Dand’ in 1576 when he and his father Gilbert of Primsideloch signed a ‘bond of manrent’ with Archibald, 8th Earl of Angus. He is recorded in 1586 when he was surety for John Rutherford of Hunthill and vice versa, the penalty being the large sum of £10,000; he was also surety for William Kerr of Ancrum and he was later denounced as a rebel for not appearing. In 1588 he was on a list of Borders ‘masters and landlords’ ordered to appear before the Privy Council; his brother Walter of Lochtour was also listed. He is probably the Laird of Greenhead listed among Borderers who appeared before the Privy Council in 1591 to promise to support the Warden of the Middle March. In 1593 John of ‘Lumphoy’ was cautioner for him not to reset associates of the Earl of Bothwell. He was denounced in 1597, along with Walter Scott of Todrig and Robert Scott of Bowhill, for not restoring teind sheaves to Mr. James Durham. He was juror on a retour in 1600. He was knighted in 1602 and served as Deputy Warden of the Middle March 1597–1602. In 1602 he was appointed ‘warden and justice of the Middle March’ during the absence of Robert, Lord of Roxburghe. Also in 1602... he was surety for Archibald, Bailie to Lord Roxburgh, and his son George, to answer for a murder. He married Alison, daughter of Gilbert Wauchope of Niddrie Marshall and was succeeded by his son Sir Andrew. Gilbert of Lochtour may have been his 2nd son and William of Greenhead may have been an illegitimate son who was naturalised in 1622. His daughter Alison married Ralph Ker of Dalcove. He was said to have had 7 sons, known as the ‘seven lads of Greenhead’. Andrew (16th/17th C.) brother of the ‘goodman of Quhytemure’ in 1618 when he was among men of the Selkirk area accused of illegally carrying guns. His brother was presumably tenant in Whitmuir. Andrew (16th/17th C.) served as Chamberlain to the Scots of Buccleuch in the period 1625–27. It is unclear whether he is one of the other contemporary Andrews. Andrew of Graden (17th C.) after the Battle of Philiphaugh in 1645 he spent 7 Sundays in sackcloth at his parish church as punishment for supporting the wrong side. In 1648 he in the army of the Engagement under Hamilton, with his sons Henry and Andrew. His sons included: Henry; and Andrew. Andrew of Linton (d.bef. 1688) son of Andrew of Linton, as recorded in a receipt of 1625. As a Kirk Elder, he was appointed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire to enforce the National Covenant in 1638. He was recorded in the Roxburghshire Valuation Roll for 1643; his valuation was £2043 6s 8d, and that of Lady Linton £1620. He was recorded as grantee in a deed of 1663 and as granter in another of 1673. He was probably succeeded by Henry (likely his son) who was recorded in the valuation of 1678. He married Elizabeth Home, recorded in a deed of 1673, who was a widow in her testament of 1688. Their children included: Henry, who succeeded; Jean, who married Sir James Cockburn of Ryslaw; William, ‘son of the Laird of Lintoune’, recorded in a deed of 1663; and George. Andrew (17th C.) tenant in Oakwood. Along with Robert Nelson in the same place and Robert Harvey in Broadmeadows, he was fined for non-conformity and forced to flee. This was probably around the 1670s. Sir Andrew of Cavers (1630–76) eldest son of Sir Thomas. He was ‘fiar thaird’ listed after his father in 1648 among the local men named on a Commission to suppress the thieves on the Border. He was probably the Andrew, son of Sir Thomas, who was on the Committee of War for Roxburghshire in 1649 and probably the Andrew ‘fiar of Caveris’ who witnessed a contract relating to Appotside in 1654. He succeeded to the lands of Bedrule, as well as others, having a deed under the Great Seal in 1649. He was appointed as a Justice of the Peace in 1663. He was still ‘fiar of Cavers’ in a deed of 1663. His lands were confirmed by Parliament in 1672 and included the Barony of Bedrule, as well as Ruecastle, Menslaws and others. He allowed Thomas Turnbull, chief of the Bedrule Turnbulls to stay at Bedrule Mill and part of the Mains until he found another home. However, he himself died without a male heir and the lands and titles reverted back to his father in 1678, before he was succeeded by his cousin John of West Nisbet. In 1652 he married Margaret, eldest daughter of Sir John Wauchope of Niddrie, and she died in 1661. The marriage contract gave his wife ‘ane annual rent of 3000 merks furthe of the barony of Bedroull, tenan-drie of Caverse, Milrig, and Peilquarters, Belches, Woodenis, and Pendicle Hill’. They had 4 daughters: Agnes, who married her cousin John Ker of West Nisbet; Anna, who married Mr. Murray of Deuchar; Margaret, who married Matthew Sinclair of Hermandston; and Jean, who married Sir Gilbert Elliot of Minto. In 1689 his daughters were served as heirs to him, his father Thomas and his son Thomas. Andrew of Wells (17th C.) local landowner of the mid-to-late 1600s. He was brother of Lord John of Locktour and owned lands in Rulewater, including Wells. He witnessed a baptism for Henry of Linton in 1671. He paid the land tax in 1678 for Huntknow in Bedrule Parish, valued at £66 13s 4d, as well as land valued at and £409 in Hobkirk Parish; he may also be ‘The walls’ who paid tax on £214 10s in Cavers Parish in the same year. In 1698 his lands were inherited by his daughter Joan and her husband John Murray of Ashiestiel and later owned by Thomas Rutherford of Wells. Sir Andrew of Greenhead (d.1665) served heir to his father Sir Andrew of Greenhead in 1617, he was created a Baronet in 1637. In 1612, when ‘younger of Greneheid’, he and his brother Thomas, were among a group of 60 or so men accused of aggressively coming to the lands of Hartwoodmyres. His lands in Selkirk are mentioned in 1629. In 1638 he was appointed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire to enforce subscription to the ‘Confessions of Faith’. He defended Smailholm Tower against a band of English musketeers in 1640. In 1641 he was a Commissioner for maintaining peace on the Border and was one of the Roxburghshire heritors who signed a letter to the Privy Council relating to the raising of levies for sending troops to Ireland. In 1642 he was named to a commission to try a large number of Borderers who had been declared fugitives. He owned land in Bowden, Kelso, Selkirk, Sprouston and Yetholm Parishes in 1643. In 1643, 1644, 1646 and 1649 he was on the Committee of War for Roxburghshire. He was also an M.P. for Roxburghshire in 1645 and 1648/9. In 1648 he was one of the prominent men named on a Commission to suppress the thieves in the counties of Roxburgh, Selkirk, Dumfries and Annandale. In 1649 he was on the Commission for the plantation of kirk.

He supported the Covenant and was imprisoned in Edinburgh and fined in 1662 after the Restoration. In 1654 he was one of the local men who signed an attestation about the ‘carriage and deportment of the deceased Francis Earl of Buccleuch’; this was part of efforts to have the fines reduced on the Buccleuch estate that had been imposed by Cromwell for the Earl supporting King Charles. In 1658 he was one of 2 commissioners sent by 20 ‘gentlemen and heritors’ of Roxburghshire to oppose payment requested from the county. Also in 1658 he was recorded in a dispute with the Burgh of Selkirk over rent.

In 1661 he sold the lands of Thirlestane, as well as Heiton Mains and Mill to James, brother of Sir William Scott of Harden. He owned a large amount of land in Kelso Parish according to the 1663 Land Tax Rolls. In 1634 he married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir William Scott of Harden and in 1664 he married Katherine, widow of David Carnegie of Craig, daughter of John, 1st Earl of Wemyss. His children included: Sir Andrew, who succeeded; Sir William, who succeeded his brother; and Gilbert, recorded in a deed of 1673.

Sir Andrew of Greenhead (d.bef. 1676) son of Sir Andrew of Greenhead. He was Parliamentary Commissioner (i.e. M.P.) for Roxburghshire in 1658/9 and 1669–74. In about 1675 he took part in the funeral procession of Jean Ker, Countess of Roxburgh. He appears to have had a marriage contract with Mary, Countess of Buccleuch (while she was only about 12), but this did not go ahead. He married Jean, daughter of Sir Alexander Don, 1st Baronet of Newton, and their children included: Elizabeth (b.1669); Andrew (b.1673); Jean (b.1673); and Jean (again, b.1674). However, he died without a surviving heir and was succeeded by his brother Sir William. The witnesses in 1673 birth were William and Gilbert, probably his brothers. After his death his widow married Sir Roger Hogg of Harcarse. Andrew of Littledean (17th C.) son of John of Littledean. He married a daughter of Sir James Dundas of Arniston, Governor of Berwick. His children included: Andrew, who succeeded; John of Blackburn in Berwickshire; and Mark of Blackburn.

Andrew (17th/18th C.) eldest son of Henry of Linton. His father sold off most of the family estates in 1699. However, he may have been left a small part of the off family lands by his father. He is probably who was meant by ‘Linton’s interest younger’ in the Hearth Tax rolls of the 1690s, with 12 houses listed below that. He was a grenadier and married Mary Culpeper. Andrew of Littledean (17th/18th C.) son of Andrew. In 1666 he married Isabel, daughter of John Rutherford of Edgerston. Around 1673 he registered arms. He was a Commissioner of Supply in 1704. He was succeeded by his son Walter. Andrew of Roughleenuk (d.bef. 1731) recorded as deceased in 1731 when his son Robert signed the marriage contract of William Elliot of Lodgellig and Jean Elliot of Harwood. Andrew (18th C.) married Jane Clapperton in Hawick in 1771. Their children included Andrew (b.1773). Andrew (b.c.1775) joiner in Minto. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He was recorded in a directory of 1852. His wife was ‘Effy’ according to the 1841 census. He was probably the Andrew who married Elspeth Turnbull and had children Thomas (b.1810), Mary (b.1810) and Euphry (b.1814). Andrew (18th/19th C.) married Agnes Laidlaw in Wilton in 1804. Their children included Margaret (b.1805), Jeany (b.1807) and Andrew (b.1811). Ann (b.1801/2) from Jedburgh, she was wife of grocer Gideon. She ran the grocer’s show on the Fore Row after her husband’s death. She is listed in the 1851 census as ‘mistress employing one woman’ (her niece Margaret Story) and in Slater’s 1852 directory as a grocer and spirit dealer on ‘Front Row’.

Archibald of Graden (17th/18th C.) perhaps son of Henry. He married Helenor, daughter of Sir James St. Clair of Roslin. His children include: Henry (b.1698). Catherine (16th C.) daughter of Sir Andrew Ker of Cessford. She married Sir John Kerr of Ferniehirst, who died in about 1562. In 1564 she complained to the Privy Council that officers of the Queen had removed her teind sheaves from Over Crailing. She produced a document from Andrew Home, Commendator of Jedburgh, granting her these teinds for 5 years. She also argued with her son Sir Thomas of Ferniehirst over her rights to these teinds. She is referred to as ‘Dame Kathrene Ker, Lady Pharnyhirst’ and signed ‘with my hand at the pen’. In 1566 her son Sir Thomas was ordered not to molest her or her other children and servants. George of Samuelston (15th C.) possibly son of Andrew of Cessford. In 1451 William, Earl of Douglas granted him a charter of Huttonhall, along with his 3 natural sons. He received a pension in 1477 for serving as Keeper of Berwick Castle. He firstly married Elizabeth Carmichael and secondly married Marion Sinclair, widow of George Home of Wedderburn. His children were: George, who married Maria St. Clair and died without issue; and Nichola, who became his heiress and married Alexander, Lord Home. George (15th/16th C.) Rector of Auld Roxburgh. He was let the farm of Fairnilee in 1501, his name appearing as ‘Master George’. James, son of his late brother, was also joint tenant of Fairnilee. He is probably the ‘Maistir George Ker’ who was among the men to whom to whom Walter Scott of Howpasley, tutor to the Laird of Buccleuch, had to give in his accounts in 1506/7 (the others including Ralph of Primside Loch). He could be the ‘Master George’ who was listed (along with Lawrence and his brother George) being indicted for oppressing the tenants of Handalee. He is probably the Rector of Morebattle and Prebendary of Glasgow who appointed Thomas Ker as Archdeacon of Teviotdale in 1514, and is recorded in many documents in the 1510s and 20s, preserved in the Selkirk Protocol Books. In 1523 he married Isabel, daughter of Lancelot and 20s, preserved in the Selkirk Protocol Books. In 1530 he was appointed as Archdeacon of Selkirk, along with Walter of Cessford and Mark of Littledean by Sir Walter Scott of raiding his lands at Newark and in the Borthwick valley, and also of burning Cunzierton and killing two Halls in 1537. George of Linton’s son and heir James was granted lands in Primsdie by Walter of Cessford in 1537. In 1538/9 he infefted his brother Robert in the lands of Easter Blakelaw. In 1539 George, son of Robert in Crooked Shaw (perhaps his brother) served as his bailie. In 1539/40 he witnessed a document relating to Lord John Borthwick and Walter Ker of Cessford in 1543. He is probably the Laird of Linton who was among those locals giving their pledges to England in 1544. He was witness to a bond of assurance in 1545. In 1546 he gave to his son and heir James some lands in Linton. In 1551 he signed the ‘Auld Band of Roxburgh’. He was one of the men indicted for involvement in the murder of Sir Walter Scott of Braxholme in 1552. In 1561 he was among Border Lairds who appeared before the Queen to give names of those guilty of theft. He was also listed among the men who appeared before the Privy Council in a promise to end the feud between the Kers and the Scotts in 1562. He and ‘his bairnis, his oyis and bruder bairnis’ were listed in the 1564/5 bond between the Kers and the Scotts. He may be the George of Linton who was accused (along with Walter of Cessford and Mark of Littledean) by Sir Walter Scott of raiding his lands at Newark and in the Borthwick valley, and also of burning Cunzierton and killing two Halls in 1537. George of Linton’s son and heir James was granted the hereditary office of Bailie of Melrose Abbey. In 1531 he was an arbitrator for a feud between the Scotts and Veitches of Synton. In 1531 he witnessed a document for Thomas in Yair and another for David Pringle of Smalholm in 1532. In 1534 he witnessed a transaction in Selkirk for John Waugh of Heap. He may be the same as George of Linton who was accused (along with John Waugh of Heap) of raiding his lands at Fairnilee (but if this was the same George, he must have lived to be very old). His son Robert witnessed a transaction in Selkirk in 1580 and Andrew of Linton (probably his grandson) was also mentioned then. He was predeceased by his son James and probably succeeded by his grandson Andrew of Linton. He also had a daughter, Margaret, who married James Pringle of Whytebank. He had additional sons, including David (d.1582), who was killed by one of the Kers of Littledean.
George of Nether Howden and Cavers (d.c.1560) 2nd son of Ralph of Primside. He was a nephew of Sir Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst and cousin of Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst. He was the 1st Ker of Cavers Carre, being granted the lands by the Commendator of Melrose and Kelso Abbeys in 1550 (probably his near relatives). He married Margaret Shaw of Sauchie. He was probably succeeded by Thomas, then George, then Sir Thomas, although these generations are uncertain. It is also unclear how his surname should be spelled. He could be the ‘Master George’ who 1541 was offered (along with his brother William) by Sir Andrew (Warden of the Middle Marches) as a pledge for the good behaviour of Teviotdale. His brother John was recorded as a witness in Selkirk in 1553. He may be the ‘master George Ker in Cavers’ recorded in a document for Sir Walter of Cessford in 1561. He is probably the George of Cavers who appeared before the Privy Council in a promise to end the feud between the Kers and the Scotts in 1562. George of Gateshaw (d.bef. 1566) son of Lancelot. He succeeded to his father’s lands in Selkirk in 1544 and then sold them. In 1544 he was of ‘Gaitschaw now living in Fastheucht’. Also in 1544 he was among Borderers who swore allegiance to the English. In 1545 he witnessed a sasine giving part of the lands of James Riddell (younger son of John of that Ilk) to his wife Janet Ker (who may have been related). He was one of the Kers who was involved in the burning of lands in Ale Water belonging to Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1547/8. He was ‘George Ker of Gaitschaw’ when he signed the ‘Auld Band of Roxburgh’ in 1551. In 1561 he was among Border Lairds who appeared before the Queen to give names of those guilty of theft (listed separately from George of Linton, showing that they were different men). In 1564 his brother Richard was one of the Kers who signed a bond with the Scotts, pledging not to attack each other. He was part of a contract with Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1569. He married Janet Edmondson and was probably succeeded by Richard, his brother. George of Faldonside (d.1553) son of Sir Robert of Caverton. He is recorded as advisor to Sir Walter of Cessford, his nephew. He was already deceased in 1563 when his son John leased his lands of Hermiston in Lilliesleaf Parish. He married Margaret Haliburton, co-heiress of Dirleton. His children included: Sir Andrew, who succeeded; Margaret, who married Robert Haig of Bemersyde; Richard; John, recorded in 1586/7 as brother of Andrew; and Isabel. George (16th C.) recorded as ‘sometime tutor of Gradane’ in 1580/1 when he sold some land near Melrose. George (16th C.) servant to the Warden, Sir Walter of Cessford. In 1581/2 he responded when Walter Scott came to Hermitage, on the track of a band that had raided Harwood on Teviot. Along with another servant and tracking dog, they followed the trail, but found too large a group of Elliots, who would not let them search for the stolen goods. George of Linton (16th/17th C.) probably son of Andrew of Linton and brother of William (who may have died before their father). He may be the George of Linton village who was recorded as a main actor in a performance of the folkloric ‘Robin Hood’ in 1610. He may be the George in Linton who in 1615 was sought for the murder of Robert, son of Thomas of Priorhall. His children included: William, who probably succeeded; and Jean, who married James Pringle of Galashiels. He may also be the Laird of Linton whose son James was a candidate for Professor of Philosophy in Edinburgh in 1611. George of Faldonside (d.1612) son of Andrew. He is recorded along with his father in 1598 in a bond not to harm certain neighbours. In the same year he was cautioner for his brothers William, John and James, he was also surety for Robert Haig of Bemersyde not to harm Ralph of Shaw and his brother Walter had a bond not to harm the Halliburtons, while the Halliburtons had a bond not to harm him or his 4 brothers. In 1599 there were assurances for him and his brother Walter not to harm James Stalker, writer in Edinburgh, and vice versa. He may have been father of Sir Walter, last of Faldonside. George of Cavers (16th/17th C.) son of Thomas of Cavers. He was recorded as son and heir of Thomas when he was signatory to a caution for the good behaviour of James Scott of Whithope in 1592. He signed the ‘General Band’ among Border Lairds as ‘appeirand of Caveris’ in 1602. He is probably the ‘son and apparent heir’ recorded in 1603 as surety in relief for Thomas of Cavers. He is recorded as ‘apparent of Cavers’ in 1615 when he became cautioner for William and Walter Middlemas, not to harm George Turnbull of Belses or his family or servants. Also in 1618 he was cautioner for his brother Robert not to harm John Ker of Langnewton. He was ‘fiar of Cavers’ in 1622 when he served as caution at the Justice Court and was ‘of Cavers’ when he served in the same capacity in 1623. In 1622 he was still heir apparent when appointed to assist Sir Andrew of Oxnam in keeping peace on the Border. He may not have lived long enough to succeed formally. In any case, his son Sir Thomas was served heir to his grandfather Thomas. Other sons included: John, who acquired West Nisbet; and Robert, who acquired Middlemases Walls. His son John may be the ‘brother to Caivers’ who in 1628/9 was part of the funeral procession for Andrew Kerr, Master of Jedburgh. Gideon (b.c.1776/7–1843) from England, he was a grocer and spirit dealer on the Fore Row, listed there in 1837 and 1841. His mother was Eleanor (1736–1819). He was recorded on the Fore Row there in 1841, along with wife Ann and 3 children. His first wife was Elizabeth (1767–1826). He secondly married Ann Storey, who died in 1875, aged 74. Their children were: Agnes (1833/4–51); John (1834/5–65), an engineer in the Navy; Robert (‘Bob’, 1838/9–64), who worked at the Auction Mart; and Helen C. (or ‘Nelly’, b.c.1842), who married chemist David Kennedy. His wife ran the shop after his death, selling the property in 1862. Early photographs exists of his wife and 3 children separately. He is buried in Hawick. It is possible he was the hosier named Gideon who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. Gilbert (16th C.) recorded in 1537 when he had sasine for the 20 merk land of ‘South Syntoun’ (i.e. Synton). This was done in Edinburgh, with witnesses at Synton including Thomas in Sunderlandhall and William, Rector of Auld Roxburgh. It is unclear if he is the same as Gilbert of Primside. Gilbert of Primside Loch and Greenhead (16th C.) son of Andrew of Greenhead and Primside, and grandson of Ralph. He was already ‘in Grenheid’ in 1536/7. ‘Gilbert Ker, young Laird of Grenheid’ was also among the men accused in 1537 of burning Cunzierton and killing 2 men called Hall. He was involved in land transactions in Selkirk in 1538; in one he was clearly recorded as son of Andrew and Marion Pringle when charged to pay the future ‘fermes’ on ‘Mabyllynuflat’ to John Turnbull of Hassendean. In 1539 he witnessed a document for William, Rector of Auld Roxburgh, along with James in Greenhead. It is possible he is the same Gilbert who was ‘alderman for the time’ for the town of Selkirk in 1539. In 1539/40, along with his mother Marion Pringle, he received the non-entry of lands in Town Yetholm from Janet Newton and her husband Adam Ker. In 1540 he witnessed William Brydon resigning the Vicarage of Auld Roxburgh in favour of Thomas, with with witnesses including George of Linton, Thomas in Sunderlandhall and Andrew in Auld Roxburgh. He witnessed a document relating to Lord John Borthwick and Walter Ker of Cessford in 1543. He was probably the Gilbert of Greenhead who was among the Kerrs accused of supporting the English at Pinkie in 1547/8, and the ‘lard of Grenheid’ who signed a bond of assurance with Somerset at Kelso in 1547, along with many other Border lairds. In 1551 he sold the lands of Bailielee (in Selkirkshire) and Caveling (in Cavers Parish) to Gavin Elliot (later of Horsleyhill). Also in 1551 he was ‘of Grenheid’ when he signed the ‘Auld Band of Roxburgh’. In 1553/4 he was listed (as ‘of Grenheid’) among Kerrs in an assurance not to harm the Scotts or their followers, as well as another bond by the Rutherfords not to harm the Kerrs. Around the late 1550s he was one of the men on the panel to resolve the conflict over the lands of Newbigging (in Hassendean) between the children of Gavin Elliot of Horsleyhill. In 1560 he was the first person named on the bond to settle the feud between the Kerrs and the Rutherfords. In 1561 he was among Border Lairds who appeared before the Queen to give names of those guilty of theft. He was recorded in 1563 as ‘of Primsydelock’ when he purchased the Mains of Spittal-on-Rule from William Douglas of Cavers. The witnesses include William, Commendator of Melrose and Mark, 2nd son of Robert, Burgess of Edinburgh (who were surely relatives). Also in 1563 he had a letter of reversion for the lands of Yetholm, ‘wadset’ to him, his wife Elizabeth ‘Admanstoun’ and their 3rd son Walter, by James, Earl Bothwell. He was one of the Kerrs who is listed as an exception in the bond to end the feud with the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1564/5. In 1567 he was one of the sureties for entering Hob Elliot of Thorlleshope with the Regent Moray. In 1569 he was one of the men to sign the bond to suppress thieves in the Border. Also in 1569, Sir Walter of Cessford was surety for him. In 1571/2 he signed the bond to act against Borders thieves. He was listed in the 1574 last testament of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme as surety for a bond of the late William Douglas of Cavers; other sureties were his son and heir Andrew, as well as the deceased William Ker of Yair. In 1575/6 he was a complainant regarding ‘mails’ for Braidmeadows and Middlestead. In 1576 he and his son ‘Dand’ had a ‘bond of manrent’ with Archibald, 8th Earl of Angus. His son Robert was recorded in 1581, promising to pay the minister of Selkirk. He received money for lands in Selkirk in 1581/2. In 1582/3 there was caution for him not attacking the tenants of James, Commendator of Melrose and others, with James Veitch of North Synton and John, younger of Littledean as his cautioners. He was among the Border Lairds summoned to appear before the Privy Council in 1583/4, along with his son Andrew. He is probably the Gilbert of Greenhead listed as a servitor of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch when he witnessed a document in Edinburgh in 1591. He may be the 'George Karr of Prumsyde myll' who was accused in 1590 of resetting riever Peter Oliver. He married Elizabeth Edmondson of that ilk and his children included: Sir Andrew, who succeeded; and Katherine, who married Andrew Ker of Linton. Other children may have included: Ralph of Broadmeadows; James of Middlemass Walls; Walter of Town Yetholm; and John of Raperlaw. A younger son of his was said to be Lancelot of Gateshaw and Crooked-shaws (but this is disputed). Gilbert of Lochtour (d.c.1635) possibly 2nd son of Andrew Ker of Primside-loch and Greenhead. He presumably received Lochtour (part of the estate of Primside-loch) from his father. He was listed as juror on a retour in 1600. He was appointed as one of the 2 executors to Gavin Eliott of Stobs, who died 1606/7. He married Gavin’s daughter Esther; his wife was one of the 3 heirs portioners to Stobs in 1607 and sold the lands to Gilbert Eliott (‘Gibbie wi the Gowden Garters’), her half-brother. He sold Bailielee to the same Gilbert Eliott in 1609 and in 1628 he sold him ‘Moiddlestaid and Blackmidding’ in Ettrick Forest, with the permission of his wife Esther Elliot and his son and heir John. In 1611 he and his son Robert had a charter of Town Yetholm. In 1612 Robert Scott of Hartwoodmyres complained that he and other Kers (including his brothers William and John) and others had ‘rave up and tillt over agane’ the fields and attacked the house at Hartwoodmyres; however, he was acquitted for lack of evidence. In 1622 he had a bond of caution with Robert Kerr of Ferniehirst. He was in a legal dispute with the Minister of Yetholm over teinds in 1623. Also in 1623 he was a curator for his grand-nephew James Kerr of Chatto. His children included: Robert, younger of Lochtour (d.1624); John, who succeeded; William, called ‘Mr.’ in 1616, suggesting he may have trained for the ministry; and Mark, recorded in 1616. Gilbert of Lochtour (d.1666) son of Sir John of Lochtour. He was heavily in debt when he succeeded. In 1651 he made an agreement to ell his estate to Sir John Wauchope (his mother’s 2nd husband), this being finalised in 1661. He married Jean, sister of Inglis of Elvieston and had children John and Rachel. Gilbert (17th C.) son of Sir Andrew of Greenhead and brother of Sir William. In Edinburgh in 1684 he married Sophia, daughter of Henry Ker of Linton. Henry (d.bef. 1399) son of John. He was Sheriff of Roxburgh in 1349. In about 1358 he witnessed a grant of the lands of Penangushope and Cauldcleuch to Melrose Abbey, by William, Earl of Douglas. He was collector of the contributions from the Sheriffdom of Roxburgh in the Exchequer Rolls from 1360. He is probably the ‘Henrico Kerre’ who witnessed the confirmation of the grant of the advowson of Cavers Kirk to Melrose Abbey by William, Earl of Douglas, in about 1360. He had a document for safe passage into England in 1363. His wife was Elizabeth St. Michael; after his death she resigned her lands of Whitchester (in Hawick Parish) to be granted to her second husband, Sir John Maxwell of Pollock. He was probably succeeded by his son Robert of Altonburn. Henry ‘Harry’ (d.1642/3) only surviving son of Sir Robert, 1st Earl of Roxburgh. He is probably the ‘Henrie, Lord Ker’ named in 1642 to a commission to try a large number of Borders fugitives. Since he died before his father and had no sons, the succession went to his sister’s husband, William Drummond. He married Margaret, daughter of William Hay, 10th Earl of Erroll. His daughter Margaret married Sir James Innes and his great-great grandson, Sir James Innes-Ker would later become 5th Duke of Roxburghe. Another daughter, Anna, married John, Lord Fleming. Col. Henry of Graden (17th C.) son of Andrew. He was ‘Captain Harrie’ in 1648, when he fought alongside his father and brother ‘Coronet Andrew’. He was a J.P. in Roxburghshire and persecuted Covenanters in the ‘Killing Times’, assisting Adam Uquhart, Laird of Meldrum. He is probably the man recorded as ‘Harrie, fiar of Graden’ in 2 deeds of 1663. He captured the Covenanters Archibald Riddell and Thomas Turnbull of Knowe near Selkirk in 1680. In 1688 part of his estate was claimed by Pringle of Crichton through wadset. He resettled the family across the valley at Wester Hoselaw, which was renamed Place-Graden or New Graden (and which the family had owned since 1528). He married Lilians, daughter of John Rutherford of Hunthill and sister of Robert, Lord Rutherford. His children included: Archibald. Henry of Linton (17th C.) probably son of Andrew. In 1674 he sold parts of Linton (including the Park) to Robert Pringle of Clifton; he sold much of the rest of Linton to Andrew Pringle of Clifton in 1699 (although bequeathing a small part to his children).
In about 1675 he carried the ‘great Mourning banner’ at the funeral of Jean Ker, Countess of Roxburghe. In 1678 he paid £1132 6s 8d on land tax in Linton Parish and is in the Roxburghshire Valuation records with the value £1431 6s 8d (which is considerably less than the value in 1643). His wife ‘The Ladie Lintoun’ was taxed for the teinds of Hadden in Sprouston Parish in 1678. He is probably the ‘Lintone Elder’ who paid the hearth tax on ‘his hous & offices houses & tuo kilnes’, for 8 hearths in all in the 1690s. He married Margaret, daughter and heiress of David Home of Harcarse. Their children included: Andrew, who succeeded and married Mary Culpeper; Christian, who married John Kerr of Frogden; Elizabeth, who married James Scott of Bowhill; Henry; James; Janet; Julian, who married Francis Armstrong of Whithaugh; Mary, who married Robert Scott, tenant in Park in Liddesdale; Sophia, who married Gilbert, brother to Sir William of Greenhead; and William (b.1671). The 1671 baptismal witnesses were William, Earl of Roxburghe, Andrew of Wells and Robert Pringle of Clifton. Henry of Graden (1698–1751) son of Archibald. He lost his father when he was young, was raised as a Catholic and was sent into the Spanish Service. In 1728 he moved to the Irish Regiment. He was part of the court proceedings for the succession of the Rutherfords in 1738 as ‘grand-nephew and heir of line to the last Lord Rutherford’. He took up arms again in 1745 as one of the few Border Lairds who joined the Jacobite army. He acted as Aide-de-Camp to Prince Charlie. In Staffordshire he captured the spy Captain Weir. He was captured and spent 2 years in prison in London; although sentenced to death, he was eventually pardoned and spent his last years soldiering in Spain again. Isabella (16th C.) daughter of Sir Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst, she married Sir William of Cessford. She was granted certain lands in her own right. In 1563 she complained that Thomas and John Young were occupying her quarter of Hassendeanbank without paying ‘mail ferne’. Her children included Sir Andrew (who succeeded to Cessford), William (who succeeded his brother), Thomas, Agnes, Isobel (who married John Rutherford of Hunthill) and Margaret (who married Alexander, 5th Lord Home). She also served as ‘tutrix’ for her grandchildren Grisel and Bessie. Isabella (d.1650) daughter of Sir Robert, 1st Earl of Roxburghe and brother of William, Master of Roxburghe. She married James Scurymgeour, 2nd Viscount of Dudhope. In 1634 she was served heir to one third of her brother William’s lands, including part of Alton near Hawick. Her sister Maria was served heir to a third part of the lands at the same time. James (15th C.) witness, along with several other local men, to the document giving the Barony of Hawick to William Douglas, 2nd of Drumlanrig in 1427; no designation is given, so it is unclear what family branch he belonged to, but he could have been related to Andrew, who was on the same panel. Probably the same James was on the ‘retour’ panel for the lands of Caverton in 1429/30. He may be the same ‘Jacobum Ker’ who was on the ‘retour’ for the next Douglas of Drumlanrig to inherit the Barony of Hawick in 1450. James (15th C.) son of Andrew and brother of Andrew of Altonburn and Cessford. He had a charter of Primside in 1444 and a charter for Bonnington in Linlithgow county in 1452. In 1456 he and his brother Andrew were involved with collecting rents on the King’s lands in Ettrick Forest. He could be the James who gave consent to his son’s entry for a debt to the Ranger of Ettrick Ward in 1471. It is possible he is the same man as James of Linton. James of Gateshaw (15th C.) perhaps son of Thomas. In 1471/2 there was a marriage contract between his daughter Margaret and John Home of Erilsitoun, Whitrig and Crailing. He may have been succeeded by Andrew. James of Linton (d.bef. 1509) 2nd son of Andrew of Altonburn and Cessford. His father was probably the Andrew of Altonburn who died before 1450, but it is possible he was son of the next Andrew (who died in about 1480). He was probably the first Ker of Linton, although it is unclear exactly when he gained the lands and from whom (although the lands were held by Thomas, Lord Somerville in 1426). In 1452 he appears to be recorded being brother of Andrew of Altonburn when the King granted him lands in Bonnington. He served as surety for some Border thieves in 1502, including the sons of William Elliot, known as ‘Hob the King’ and ‘Dand the Man’. He was also surety in 1502 for a man who had remission for a murder in Selkirk. He was succeeded by George, who is recorded as his son in 1509 and 1514. Robert of Crookedshaws may have been another son. His son George was tutor (in 1525) for George’s uncle John Liddell; this suggests his wife was a Liddell. James (16th C.) recorded in Whitemuir in 1531 when he witnessed an agreement between Scotts and Veitches regarding Synton. William in Whitmuirhall was also recorded in 1531 and may have been related. In 1541 he witnessed a document in Selkirk for Patrick Murray of Falahill. In 1542
he witnessed a document in Selkirk for Robert, Vicar of Lindean. He was probably an ancestor of the later James in Whitmuir. He witnessed a document relating to Lord John Borthwick and Walter Ker of Cessford in 1543. He may have been succeeded by a later James of Whitmuir. James of Mersington (16th C.) probably son of Thomas. He is recorded in the Selkirk Protocol Books in 1534 when he proclaimed a letter of obligation to the Kers in Shaws. His procurator, Thomas McDouglas went to ‘the tower of St Helyne Schaw’, pounded on the door and 3 times repeated the promises (which are not specified).

In 1541 he was involved in a dispute over lands with Alexander Pringle of ‘Craglethe’. He is also listed in 1549 among the associates of Walter Ker of Cessford who were accused of helping the English in raids upon the farms of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme. Ironically the same James of Mersington was one of the cautioners for Sir Walter when he was in ward within Edinburgh Castle in 1540/1. He was a juror on returns in 1550 and 1551. He married Janet Wauchope and had at least 6 sons and 1 daughter. His son and heir Thomas is recorded in 1557 and 1561. James of Fairmilee (16th C.) recorded in 1534 when he was witness to a letter of obligation between James of Mersington and the Kers in Shaws. In 1535 he was on an assize for a dispute involving Rutherfords and Homes. In 1540 he witnessed a document for the Kers of Linton and of Whitmuirhall another for the Pringles of Whitton. James (16th C.) recorded in Greenhead in 1539 when he witnessed a document for William, Rector of Auld Roxburgh. He is probably related to the other Kers of Greenhead, e.g. Gilbert of Primside, who was also a witness. James (16th C.) presented to the Vicarage of Ashkirk in 1550. He may have been Vicar at Linton in 1569. James (16th C.) son and heir of George of Linton. He had a charter as heir apparent of his father in 1537. However, he appears to have predeceased his father and his son Andrew succeeded to the Lairdship. James of Whitmuir (16th C.) perhaps son of the earlier James. He is recorded in the 1560 bond between the Kers and the Rutherfords. He signed ‘at the pen led by the notar’, meaning that he could not write himself. His lands appear to have been in Sprouston and not those near Selkirk. Perhaps the same James in ‘Qhittmuir witnessed a transactions for other Kers in Selkirk in 1581 and 1582. He could be the ‘Goodman of Qhittmuir’ who in 1590 he was among Border landlords and heads of families ordered to find caution for the conduct of their dependents. His son Ralph inherited the lands of Whitmuir in Sprouston Parish from him in 1603. James (16th C.) son of Thomas in Yair. He is recorded being in Yair in 1580 when he witnessed a transaction in Selkirk for the Turnbulls of Philiphaugh. In 1581 he received redemption money for an annual rent from Thomas of Sunderlandhall. Also in 1581 he had sasine for Catslack and Mountbenger. In 1582 he had a dispute with a messenger acting for Andrew of Yair. Also in 1582 he is recorded as lawful son of the deceased Thomas in Yair and brother of Robert when warned by Andrew of Yair to accept redemption money on his lands. He could be the James of Sunderlandhall recorded in a decree under the seal of Queen Mary, regarding a dispute over lands of Yair with the Burgh of Selkirk. James (16th C.) mentioned as Keeper of Hermitage Castle (under the Earl of Bothwell) in 1583. It is unclear whether he is the same as one of the other contemporary Jameses. James (16th C.) accused of leading a group to the lands of James Sinclair in Ewingston, where oxen were killed and 4 horses stolen. In 1586/7 Sinclair complained that the horses had been reset by John Scott of the Palace, servant to George Scott of Synton, with Scott of Synton declared as a rebel for not appearing in court. James of Lintalee (16th/17th C.) possibly son of Ralph. He is recorded in 1586 when Dan Mrosop was his surety to appear before the Privy Council and was denounced as a rebel for not appearing. He was listed in about 1590 among the landed men of the Borders. He was among Kers and others, dependents of Sir Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst, who in 1601 besieged and burned a house in Jedburgh, and were declared as rebels; his son William is also listed. He was juror in Oxnam in 1602. He was recorded as part of inquest into lands in Rulewater in 1610. In 1616 he was removed from Lintalee by William Douglas, Earl of Angus, with John Douglas made tenant there instead. His sons George and William and William’s son Thomas was recorded in the case heard by the Privy Council in 1617. Although he complained about unfair removal, it was found to be lawful. James of Bewlie (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1622, along with his son Walter and his servants Andrew Turnbull, Thomas Leithead, John Wight and Robert Winthorpe. There was a complaint by George of Newhall that they tried to find him to kill him, but instead attacked his servants and later attacked him with drawn weapons. Not appearing, they were all denounced.
James of Grange (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He was recorded as servant to the Laird of Whitslade in 1717. He married Margaret Scott and their children included Jean (b.1714), Andrew (b.1715) and Barbara (b.1717). James (1739/40–92) schoolmaster at Bedrule. He married Helen Turnbull, who died in Ancrum in 1812. Their daughter Jean died in in Lanton in 1803. They are buried in Bedrule cemetery. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He witnessed a baptism for Thomas Cairns (resident of Wiltonburn) in 1780. In 1777 he married Margaret (‘Peggy’) Cairns and their children included: Betty (b.1782); Walter (b.1785); Nelly (b.1789); and Betty (again, b.1792). An unnamed child (b.1779), baptised in Wilton, was probably also his. James (d.1794) gardener to Mr. Dickson, whose death is recorded in Hawick Parish. James (18th/19th C.) cooper of the High Street, recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. James (b.1812/3) from Kelso, he was headmaster at Drumlanrig, the ‘Ragged Schuil’, from about 1860. He married Margaret Macgregor in Kelso in 1855. Their children included: Tom (b.1856), who became a great Hawick Common Riding supporter; Margaret Clark (b.1860); Agnes (b.1862); Mary (b.1864); Elizabeth (b.1866); William Macgregor (b.1868); and James (b.1870). Janet (15th/16th C.) recorded at Whitmuir in 1502, along with James Elliot and John Lauder. The three had 7 cows stolen from them, with Adam Turnbull in Hornshole being given remission for the theft. Janet (b.c.1815) grocer and spirit dealer on the Kirkwynd. She is recorded there in 1841 with her infant children James and Alison. John ‘of the Forest of Selkirk’ (d.c.1360) the first known ancestor of the Kers of Cessford etc. He became the first Laird of Altonburn (or ‘Auldtoomburn’), acquiring the lands from John ‘of Coupland’ in 1357/8, with witnesses including William of Gedstains, William ‘de Roule’ and Alexander of Flex, just 3 years after the lands had been passed from Adam of Rule. About the same time he witnessed a grant for lands in Lessuden to Melrose Abbey. Robert Riddell of Riddell witnessed 2 charters to him in 1357 and 1358. He is probably the ‘John Kerre’ who was in 1363 granted custody of the Teviotdale lands of William Rutherford until William’s heir reached majority. He married Mariota (with unknown surname, but possibly daughter of John of Copeland) and was succeeded by their son Henry. John (15th C.) mentioned in the document of 1479 resigning the lands of Broadlee (in the Barony of Hawick) by Robert Turnbull to William Douglas of Drumlanrig. His name is recorded as ‘Johannem Ker’. Probably the same ‘Johanne Ker’ was witness to the sasine for the Barony of Hawick at the Mote in 1484. John (16th C.) son of George of Faldonside, and presumably therefore brother of Sir Andrew of Faldonside. In 1563 he leased his lands of Hermiston (in Lilliesleaf Parish) to 4 men. In 1586/7 he was ‘bruther to Andro Ker of Faudounsye’, among Borderers accused of crimes who had failed to appear in court and were given one more chance to find sureties. John (16th C.) 2nd son of Thomas of Kippielaw. In 1581 he renounced his rights to lands in Bowden to his father and mother Elizabeth, while his father and mother assigned to him the Kirklands of Bewlie, with 2 acres at the east end of Lilliesleaf. John of Raperlaw (16th C.) younger son of Gilbert Ker of Primsideloch. He was servitor to Lord Glamis 1585–86. In 1586 he and his wife Janet Gib had a Crown charter for lands in Raperlaw and ‘West Bernis’ in Roxburghshire. John (16th/17th C.) younger son of George of Cavers and brother of Thomas of Cavers. He was a burgess of Edinburgh. In 1603 he and other burgesses of Edinburgh served as sureties that Thomas, after being freed from ward in Edinburgh Castle, would pay his fines or re-enter. John (16th/17th C.) servant to John Ker of Langnewton, recorded in 1621. He is listed as ‘Thomes Johne’, so presumably his father was Thomas. Sir John of Littledean, the Hirsel and Jedburgh (d.bef. 1631) son of Walter of Littledean and grandson of Sir Andrew of the Hirsel. In the 1568/9 bond between the Kers and the Scotts he is named as the son and heir of Walter, and promised in marriage to Elizabeth Murray, sister to Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch, when ’he beis of perfyte age, fourtene zeiris outrun’; however, the marriage does not appear to have taken place. He was still son and heir of Walter of Littledean in 1588 when he was cautioner for brothers of Cockburn of that Ilk. In 1589 he promised to appear before the Privy Council. In about 1590 he was listed among the landed men of the Borders. In 1591 he and his brother Mark had a bond for not harming certain Homes. In 1593 there was a letter of ‘lawburrows’ against him, his father and brothers, brought by his ‘sometime spouse’ Juliane Home and members of her family, the Homes of Wedderburn, not to molest her in the liferent of Littledean. Also in 1593 there was an order for the Warden of the Marches and Sheriff of Roxburgh to apprehend him, since he was already excommunicated and denounced as a rebel, guilty of adultery and other crimes. A further complaint by the Homes of Wedderburn in 1593/4 accuses him of ‘double adultery’ for also enticing the wife of Hamilton of Innerwick to co-habit with him at Spylaw. In 1595 he was involved in a quarrel with Sir Robert of Cessford, who assaulted him in Edinburgh. He led a raid into England in 1597. In 1598 he had ‘Auld Wat’ of Harden declared a rebel for failure to pay him for profits coming from Borthwickshiels, ‘specified in a decree of removing’. In 1599 he tried to make Scott of Buccleuch answerable for Scott of Harden’s non-appearance, but this was unsupported by the courts, because it was a civil and not criminal matter. In 1600 Andrew of ‘Mylnerig’ was surety for him that he would keep the King’s peace. He may be the Sir John who signed a bond among Border Lairds in 1602. Also in 1602 he complained about Kers from the Morebattle area stealing livestock from his farms. He represented Roxburghshire in Parliament in 1605 and 1607. In 1608 he had a charter for the Barones of Maxton, Linton and Town Yetholm. He was named as a Commissioner for keeping peace in Roxburghshire in 1610 and in 1618 was appointed by the King as one of the commissioners for keeping law and order in Ewesdale and the Debatable Land. In 1611 he exchanged the Hirsel for the lands of Jedburgh Abbey and in 1624 was granted all of the lands of the Lordship of Jedburgh that had been resigned by James, Earl of Home; he was thereafter known as Lord Jedburgh, although this was later disallowed on the basis that the title lay with the Abbot of Jedburgh. In 1619 he had charters for the Lordship of Jedburgh and the lands of Nisbet. In 1621 he complained about being banned from intercommuning with his son John of Langnewton and was given permission to meet with him as the parties tried to settle their differences. Also in 1621 there was an Act of Parliament forbidding him from using the Jedburgh title and in 1622 he lost it for good to Sir Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst. In 1576 he married Juliane, 3rd daughter of David Home of Wedderburn, but she divorced him in 1589 and remarried James Hoppringle of Whitelaw. In 1589/90 he secondly married Margaret, daughter of Patrick Whitelaw of that Ilk (and divorced wife of Sir Alexander Hamilton of Innerwick); she died in torment in 1627 and was said to have practiced witchcraft. His relationship with the woman who became his 2nd wife was the reason for two divorces, and the legitimacy of progeny from this 2nd marriage would become part of the claim to the succession of the Dukes of Roxburghe made by Gen. Walter of Littledean more than 200 years later. His children with his first wife included: Sir Mark of Dophinston, who married Margaret, daughter of John Home of Cowdenknowes; Andrew (d.bef. 1618), whose 4 sisters of full blood were served as heirs portioner; Isobel, who married William Kerr of Linton; Agnes; and Christina. Children with his second wife were: John of Langnewton, who succeeded; William, who died without issue; Andrew of Morriston; James of Grange, who became minister at Abbotrule; possibly Robert, minister at Kelso and Linton; Alison, recorded in a discharge with Alexander, Earl of Home in 1611; and Esther, who married Sir Hugh Wallace of Craige. John of Barnhill (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1595 as holder of the infeftment and sasine of Barnhill. He complained that ‘Dandie Davidson, pretended tenant of the said lands’ and a gang of Davidssons and Turnbulls harassed his tenants and pastured their animals there. He is probably the same as one of the other Johns. John of Lochtour (d.1644) son of Gilbert, he succeeded since his elder brother died before their father. In 1624 he was served heir to his brother in the lands of Town Yetholm, Cherrytrees and Hayhope. He married Janet, co-heiress of George Falside of Cothroppill. His children included: Sir John, who succeeded; Andrew, who had sasine of Town Yetholm in 1639; and Margaret, who married Rev. Robert Know of Kelso. John of Langnewton and Littledean (16th/17th C.) son of Sir John of Littledean, the Hirsel and Jedburgh. He was known as ‘of Langnewton’ while his father was still alive. In 1618 Robert, son of Thomas Ker of Cavers Carre complained that he had sent his servant after him on horseback to attack him with a sword and pistol. He served as cautioner for his servant not to wear ‘hagbuts and pistolets’ and for him not to harm the family of Thomas Ker. In 1619 Sir Andrew of Oxnam complained that he and over 100 men came at night to Oxnam Moor to break up and steal the ‘grite number of turvis’ cut for Sir Andrew there; there was insufficient proof to convict any of them, but it was presumably part of some dispute over rights on common moors. In 1621 there was a complaint that he, along with several of his servants and associates, attacked John Haliburton of Muirhouselaw and others, killing one of their dogs, and later shot at Haliburton and his associates near Fairnington. He was declared a rebel, along with several associates. In 1621 his father, Sir John of Jedburgh complained that he had been unfairly barred from intercommuning with him, and was allowed to do so to help the parties resolve their disputes. In 1622 there was a complaint against him by Rev. William Jameson, that he had violently interfered with grain that had been impounded for the minister’s use. He was served heir to his father in 1631, with his legitimacy not being questioned, despite the potentially illegal marriage of his parents, because of the time that had passed. The name of his wife is unclear, but she could be the Margaret Ker, called ‘Old Lady Littledean’ who was charged at the court in Jedburgh in 1684 with not attending her parish church and was fined. His children were: Andrew, who succeeded; Jean, who married Sir John of Lochtour; and Esther, who married Sir Hugh Wallace of Craige. John (16th/17th C.) possibly a younger brother of Sir Andrew of Greenhead. He sat in Parliament for Selkirk 1617–30 and was on the Committee of War for Roxburghshire in 1649. Sir John of Lochtour (17th C.) son of John of Lochtour and grandson of Gilbert. He represented Roxburghshire in parliament in 1644 and his brother Sir Andrew was an M.P. in 1648. His sister Margaret married Robert Knox, minister of Kelso. Either he or his father signed the ‘Confessions of Faith’ in Hawick in 1638. In 1643 he is recorded as owner of most of the lands in Yetholm Parish. In 1648 he was one of the men named on a Commission to suppress the thieves on the Border. He was knighted by Charles II in 1651, but died soon afterwards. He appears to have deeply in debt through most of his time as Laird of Lochtour. In 1640 he married Jean, daughter of Sir Thomas Kerr of Redden (and she later married Sir John Wauchope of Niddrie, who inherited most of his lands). His children included: Gilbert (who succeeded); Thomas of Hayhope (d.1673), killed at Crookham in Northumberland; William of Cherrytrees and Newton; Margaret, who married Richard Learmonth of Whytlawhoue; and Jean, who married William Bennet of Grubbet. John of Garteshaw (d.c.1654) 9th Laird. He was heir to his great-grandfather, Lancelot of Gate- shaw. He was still a minor in 1635 when there was a marriage contract between him and ‘Cicill Ker, dochter naturall to ane noble erle, Robert, Erle of Roxburgh’. In 1644 he made a new infeftment of his lands to himself and his wife ‘in liferent’ and to his son Robert ‘in fee’. In 1645 he contributed supplies after the accidental burning of Kelso. He served as a Commissioner of War for Roxburghshire. His sons Robert, Andrew and Henry all featured in the funeral procession for the Countess of Roxburgh in 1675. John (17th C.) tenant in Middleknowes. He was witness to discharges for the teinds of Harwood and Appotside in 1655. For a further document of 1656, relating to the lands of Appotside, he was ‘baillie in that part’. John of West Nisbet (17th C.) son of George and brother of Sir Thomas of Cavers. He was recorded in a deed of 1663. He married Jean, daughter of Sir James Kerr of Crailing, who became Lord Jedburgh. His son John married his cousin Agnes Ker of Cavers. John (17th C.) gardener in ‘Knows’ (probably Hassendean Knowe, since he is named right after men from Hassendean). He is on the huge list in 1684 of men declared fugitives for being Covenanters. John of Grange (17th/18th C.) son of James of Grange, and grandson of the minister of Abbotrule. In 1689 he was served heir to his father’s sisters Isabel and Elizabeth, in the annual rent totalling £88 (corresponding to 2200 merks) of the lands of Grange in Abbotrule Parish. It is unclear if the family continued its ties with Abbotrule after this. John (17th C.) listed as resident at Harden in Wilton Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He could be the John who witnessed a baptism for William Nixon in Hawick Parish in 1678. John of Cavers Carre (d.1737) eldest son of John of West Nisbet and Jane Kerr of Crailing. In 1684 he inherited the Cavers Carre lands and titles from his uncle Sir Thomas. This included the Barony of Bedrule and lands in the Rule valley as well as lands in Belses, Raperlaw, Rawflat, Pinnacle and Firth. He may have adopted the spelling ‘Carre’ after he succeeded. He is recorded in several local bonds in the late 1600s with the Elliots of Harwood, Stanedge and others. He was also served heir to his uncle Robert (through his mother’s side), Lord Jedburgh, in 1693. This included annual rents from Appletreehall, as well as many lands around Jedburgh. He married his cousin Agnes, daughter of Sir Andrew Ker. Their children included: Robert, whose son Thomas succeeded to Cavers Carre; John, who succeeded his nephew Thomas and probably married a daughter of Sir Walter Riddell of Riddell; James; and Margaret, who married Sir Alexander Don in 1705. He secondly married Miss Home, daughter of Lord Kimmerghame and their children included: George, who became Lord Nisbet. John of Gateshaw (17th/18th C.) son of Robert. He was 11th and last Laird, selling the estate to Sir William Scott of Ancrum in 1749. His eldest son Robert was also involved in the sale. John (c.1680–1741) 1st Duke of Roxburghe. He was a younger son of Robert, succeeding to the earldom of Roxburghe on the death of his brother Robert in 1696. Among his possessions were those formerly held by the Archdeacon of Teviotdale, including the church lands of Lilliesleaf, the office of Bailie of Ancrum, Lilliesleaf and Ashkirk, plus the lands of Hassendeanbank, Cappitrig and Alton near Hawick. He contributed £200 to the Darien Scheme in 1695. He became Secretary of State for Scotland in 1704. He helped bring about the union with England, and was created Duke in 1707 (the last Scottish peerage created) in relation to this. He was one of Scotland’s Representative Peers in Parliament 1707–10. He was also Keeper of the Privy Seal of Scotland and again Secretary of State for Scotland in the British Parliament. However, he opposed Walpole in Parliament and was dismissed from office. In 1727 he was one of the pall-bearers for Sir Isaac Newton’s coffin in 1727 and also served as Deputy High Constable of Scotland at the Coronation of George II. He had the teinds of Hassendeanbank from Francis, 2nd Duke of Buccleuch in 1734, bought Cockerheugh from Walter Scott of Cockerheugh in 1737 and bought ‘Ladylands’ from Archibald Douglas of Cavers in 1739. In 1745 he had the family valuables taken to Caverton Mill for safety while the army of Prince Charles passed through Kelso. He was succeeded by his only son Robert. John of Cavers Carre (d.1746) 2nd son of John of Cavers and Nisbet and Agnes Ker. He was an advocate. In 1742 he succeeded to the Cavers Carre estate after the death of his nephew Thomas. He paid the window tax in Bowden Parish in 1748. He may have used the spelling ‘Carre’ for his surname. He married Elizabeth Monteith, heiress of Fox Hall. His children were: John, who succeeded; Robert, Captain in the Navy; Stair Campbell, army Captain; and Agnes. All of his children except John died unmarried. John Strother of Littledean (d.1779) son of Walter, who he succeeded in 1739. In 1746 he married Marion, daughter of James Pringle of Torwoodlee. He secondly married Jean, daughter of Harry Maule of Kelbie and widow of George, Lord Ramsay; she died in 1779. He thirdly married Frances, daughter of James Dean of Woodhouselee, widow of William Wishart (Principal of Edinburgh University) and of Dr. John Scott of Stewartfield. He was succeeded by his eldest son, Walter. John (d.1766) eldest son of John of Cavers, whom he succeeded to the estates of Cavers Carre and Hundalee. He paid the window tax in 1753. He and his son John were recorded among the Commissioners for Roxburghshire in 1761. He married Jane Reid and their children were: John, who succeeded; Alexander, in the East India Company’s naval service; Janet, who died young; and Elizabeth, who married William Riddell of Camiestown (and whose son Robert Riddell Carre would succeed to Cavers Carre). In 1763 he secondly married Jane, daughter of Sir Walter Riddell, 4th Baronet; she died in 1806. John (18th C.) smith at Hawickshields. He married Margaret Henderson and their children included Isobel (b.1758) and Thomas (b.1760). Witnesses to the 1760 baptism were Walter Scott and James Laidlaw. He witnessed a baptism for Thomas Scott in Hawickshields in 1766. John (1740–1804) 3rd Duke of Roxburghe, son of Robert, 2nd Duke, he was known as a great book collector. In 1797 he exchanged his lands at Hassendeanbank with those of George Douglas of Cavers at Denholm Haugh. It is said that he was attached to the oldest daughter of the Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, but was unable to marry her, since King George III married her younger sister. He remained unmarried. He was appointed Lord of the Bedchamber, Knight of the Thistle, Groom of the Stole and Knight of the Garter. He collected valuable and curious books, and the sale of his collection (of about 10,000 volumes) led to the establishment of the Roxburghe Club. In 1788 he was recorded as owner of large amounts of land in Roxburghshire, in Ancrum, Bowden, Eckford, Hownam, Kelso, Lindean, Lilliesleaf, Makerstoun, Maxton, Morebattle, Oxnam, Roxburgh, Selkirk and Sprouston Parishes. He sold his lands of Hassendeanbank to the Elliots of Minto in 1799. Probably the same John was listed on the 1811 Land Tax Rolls for Hundalee Mill and other lands. He had no surviving children and after his death there was a dispute over succession; he was eventually succeeded by a distant cousin, John Bellenden-Ker. Capt. John of Cavers Carre (d.1798) eldest son of John and Jane Reid. He was a Captain in the army. He was still ‘of Cavers junior’ when recorded as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1761. He succeeded after the death of his father in 1766, and retired from the army, living at Cavers Carre and at Hundalee. In 1777 he had much of the old house at Cavers Carre demolished, but did not manage to have it rebuilt. He was listed on the roll of electors for Roxburghshire in 1780. In 1788 he was listed as a voter in Roxburghshire (and supporter of the Conservatives). Also in 1788 he was recorded as owner of Cavers Carre and other lands in Bowden Parish, as well as Bedrule Mains, Bedrule Mill, Corsecleuch and Fulton in Bedrule Parish, Belses Mill in Ancrum Parish and other lands in Jedburgh Parish. He was taxed for having male servants (both within Jedburgh and outside, presumably at Hundalee) from 1778–97, the number varying from 4 to 1. He was a bachelor in 1785–91 when taxed for having a female servant; in 1789 he was paying the tax at Hundalee. He was also taxed for having horses in the period 1785–97, in some years in Jedburgh as well as in Bowden Parish. He was additionally taxed for having a non-working dog in 1797. He was Provost of Jedburgh and played a leading role in the politics of that burgh. He died unmarried and was succeeded by his brother Alexander. However, a child called John ‘to John Carre Esqr. of Cavers’ was baptised in Cavers Parish in 1784, and was probably his child (perhaps illegitimate). John Strother of Littledean (1757–95) son of Walter, who he succeeded in 1789. He was a Major in the Scots Greys, died unmarried and was succeeded by his brother Walter. John (1834/5–65) son of Gideon, who was a grocer and spirit dealer on the Fore Raw. He was born in Hawick and educated at Jedburgh Grammar School. He became an engineer with the Royal Navy. His ship H.M.S. Driver was wrecked off Bermuda in 1861, and then spent about a year on H.M.S. Racer off the coast of America during the Civil War. Partially deaf, he was invalided from the Navy, returning to 3 Bridge Street in 1863, but dying only 2 years later. An ‘ambrotype’ photograph exists of him in uniform and many letters from him to his family survive. Lancelot ‘Lance’ of Gateshaw (d.c.1543) son of Andrew. In 1510 he served as one of the sureties for his father, who was accused of murdering John Murray of Falahill. He was accused of 2 raids into England in 1515. In 1522 his tower at Gateshaw was burned by the English, perhaps in retaliation; he strengthened his pele and built ‘New Gateshaw’ nearby. He is recorded in documents of 1527, regarding tenements in Selkirk. Probably the same Lancelot is recorded in a land transaction in Selkirk in 1528 and as witness to others in 1529/30. In 1530 he was among Border lairds who came to Jedburgh to find surety for crimes for which they were responsible. In 1532 he had sasine for a piece of land in Selkirk and another for a tenement in 1533. He may be the Lancelot who wadset tenements in Selkirk in 1539. Also in 1539 he was infefted in the liferent of parts of Primside and Hownam. His brother ‘sir Peter’ acted as his attorney in 1539, when he paid rentals to William and Adam of Shaws. In 1541/2 he sold a tenement in Selkirk to Alexander Hall. He was a juror on a retour in 1542 and in the same year was in dispute with Mark of Dolphinston over the wardship of John Mow of that Ilk. In 1544 he was deceased when his heir was recorded as George of Gateshaw. He also had other sons, including Richard, who succeeded George. Lancelot ‘Lancie’ of Gateshaw (16th C.) probably son of Richard and grandson of the earlier Lancelot. He is recorded in 1587 when John Cockburn of Ormiston served as his cautioner. His brother ‘Markie’ was recorded in 1588 and 1588/9. Also in 1588 he was on a list of Borders ‘masters and landlords’ ordered to appear before the Privy Council. He is probably the Laird of Gateshaw listed among Borderers who appeared before the Privy Council in 1591 to promise to support the Warden of the Middle March. In 1595 Andrew of Falkonside was surety for him not to harm Elizabeth Cranston, widow of Lancelot of Little Newton. He was a juror on a retour in 1600. He was probably succeeded by James. Lancelot (d.bef. 1593) recorded being in Little Newton in 1593 when John in Broomlands of Kelso had surety not to harm his widow Elizabeth Cranston. At the same time his brother George and some Ainslies had surety for not harming his widow. In 1595 Andrew of Falkonside was surety for Lancelot of Gateshaw not to harm his widow. Maria (d.1650) daughter of Sir Robert, 1st Earl of Roxburgh and brother of William, Master of Roxburghe. She married James Haliburton of Pitcur and secondly married James Carnegie, 2nd Earl of Southesk. In 1634 she was served heir to her brother William in many lands around Kelso, Sprouston, Maxwellheugh, Midlem, Whitmuirhall, etc. Included in the list is a third part of the lands of ‘Altoun prope villam de Hawick’. Her sister Isobella was served heir to a third part of the lands at the same time. Mark of Dolphinston (d.1551) 2nd son of Walter of Cessford, younger brother of Sir Robert of Caverston. He was also referred to as ‘of Maxton and Littledean’. His sister married Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme. He owned Borthwickshiel in 1502 when it was burned by a group of Armstrongs from Liddesdale. Also in that year he was fined for failing to enter into court several men to answer for the murder of Robert Oliver: Andrew Turnbull in Bedrule; William Turnbull, brother of the Laird of Bedrule; John Turnbull, called ‘Blue John’; Andrew Turnbull; Alan Davidson, ‘Taboner’, John Turnbull in Jedburgh; John Turnbull in Wells; and Adam Turnbull in Wells. Furthermore, in 1502 he also served as surety for John Oliver (who had been involved in some raids around the Jedburgh and Rulewater areas), was also surety for Robert and Ingram Oliver (whose crimes were several raids and 2 murders), was fined for not entering several men (including an Ainslie and men from Auld Roxburgh and Caverston) into the court and was surety for Adam Grahamshall, son of the Laird of Little Newtown, as well as other men. In 1505 he had remission (along with 3 others) for crimes perpetrated upon John Rutherford and others. In 1507/8 he was witness to the document for Scott of Whitchesters relating to the tower ‘between the bridges’ in Hawick. In 1515 he headed a band of Kers and others who stole 200 cattle, 30 horses and took 40 prisoners from Redewater. In 1525 he was among the Border Barons who had a bond to assist the Earl of Angus. In 1530 he was one of the Border chiefs imprisoned by James V for failing to keep the ‘broken men’ and thieves in check. In 1530/1 he was witness to Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme being granted the hereditary office of Bailie of Melrose Abbey. In 1532 he was one of the local men appointed by the King to a commission to capture some Croziers, Elliot and Foresters for raiding Teviotdale. He is probably the Mark in Littledean recorded in 1534 along with his son Andrew; goods were seized at ‘erin heuch’, which belonged to his son and not to him. He was warded in Dundee in 1535. In 1539 he is recorded as the founder of the altar of the Holy Rood in Selkirk. In the early 1540s he served as a kind of deputy to the Warden of the Middle Marches, his name showing up many times in English letters. In 1542 he was said to have gone with his brother Dand and son Davie to Kelso Abbey and taken all of the King’s sheep that were there. He witnessed an agreement between Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme and William Cairncross of Colmston in 1544. In 1545 he was ‘Mark Kar of Littledean’ among lairds in Teviotdale who signed a bond to settle feuds. About 1547 he was among the Border Lairds who paid homage to the Duke of Somerset. He was among the Kerrs accused of supporting the English at the Battle of Pinkie. In 1549 he was one of the Kerrs (along with Walter of Cessford and George of Linton) accused by Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme of raiding his lands at Newark, as well as his lands in the lower Borthwick valley. In about 1501 he married Marjorie, daughter and heiress of John Ainslie of Dophinston. His children included: Sir Andrew of the Hirsel; John; Mr. Thomas; William, recorded in 1550; Robert, a natural son, legitimised in 1558; and Janet, who married John Haitley of Mellerstain. His direct descendant Maj.-Gen. Walter of Littledean lost a legal battle in 1812 to be declared the rightful heir to the Roxburghe titles.
