(1853/4–90); John; Elizabeth; and Ann. Adam (b.1869) from Eccles Tofts, Berwickshire, son of William. He worked as coachman for several people in Berwickshire and around Kelso, before moving to Weens around 1900. He married Helen Hunter and had 3 sons. Agnes (17th C.) resident of Spittal-on-Rule on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. Agnes (17th C.) blacksmith at Chesters according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. She was probably related to other Olivers listed there, namely 2 Johns and 2 Thomases. Agnes (b.1780/1) born in Ettrick Parish, she was a widow who lived at 12 Buccleuch Street. It is unclear who her husband was, but clearly a prominent local man, since she is listed as ‘Ind.’ and ‘House Proprietress’ in the censuses. She was already a widow on the 1841 census and lived until at least 90, since she was still on Buccleuch Street in 1871. In Slater’s 1852 directory she is listed among the local gentry. In about 1874 she was recorded owning part of the former lands of Patrick Cunningham in Hawick. Alexander ‘Sandy’ (15th C.) recorded in 1502. George Douglas, Master of Angus, was fined for failure to prove the arrest of his son Thomas, called ‘Wait-schol’. Alexander (16th C.) tenant in part of Westerhouses in 1541. The tenants in the larger part of the farm were Nicholas and Margaret. Alexander (16th C.) recorded at Westerhouses among men complained about by the English Warden for a raid into England in 1587. He is probably a descendant of the earlier Alexander in Westerhouses. Alexander (18th/19th C.) listed as secretary of the Conservative Reading Room in Pigot’s 1837 directory. Alexander (b.1804) born in Ashkirk Parish, son of John and Anne Niel. He was a miller in the Hawick area. He was at Hallrule in 1841 and Synton Mill in 1851. By 1861 he was toll-keeper at Ashkirk Toll Bar, and was then a widower. He married Jane Baptie. He was educated at Mowhaugh School in Bowmont valley, at Yarrow School and at Edinburgh and Glasgow Universities, where he won multiple prizes. In 1854 he became assistant minister of the East U.P. Kirk in Galashields, moving to Regent Place Church, Glasgow in 1865. He was associated with the Temperance movement and the Liberation Society and published many articles and books. He received a D.D. from Edinburgh University in 1888 and was Moderator of the U.P. Synod in 1894. Andrew (16th C.) tenant at Kilnsyke according to a 1541 rental roll of Jedforest. Andrew (16th C.) tenant at Whiteside in 1541, along with Patrick, Gilbert and John. Perhaps the same ‘Dand’ in Whiteside was pledge for his son and brothers in 1571. He was also one of the leaders of the Olivers for whom the Turnbull and Rutherford chiefs served as pledges in the same year. He was surely related to David, who was recorded as tenant in Whiteside in 1571/2, along with his unnamed brother. His name appears again in 1572/3, along with Olivers and others from Southdean, with Sir Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule and Richard Rutherford of Edgerston as causers. Andrew ‘Dand’ (16th C.) recorded in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He is named as ‘Dande Ollyver of Hyndrawghtede’, which was presumably Hyndhaughhead. Andrew ‘Dandy’ (16th C.) listed at Falside among Scotsmen who pledged loyalty to the English Crown in 1544. His name is listed right after Ringan in the same place, and hence they are surely related. Andrew ‘Dand’, ‘the Lover’ (16th C.) listed among men complained about in 1590 by the English Warden for a raid into England in 1587. The others mentioned were local Scotts, as well as a Laidlaw, a Sharp, a Rutherford and a Hall. His son ‘Eddie’ (which probable means ‘Adie’, i.e. Adam) was also on the list in 1590. It is unclear how they were related to other Olivers. Andrew ‘Lang Andro’ (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1611 along with Hob of ‘Heidfauldis’ when they refused to pay tithes to the Minister of Jedburgh. Andrew ‘Dan’ (16th/17th C.) tenant in Clarilee in 1610 when Adam Robson was found guilty of stealing a cow from him. Andrew (16th/17th C.) called ‘of Thorterwood’ in Jedforest. He was deceased in 1657 when his grandson inherited his lands in Jedburgh. Andrew ‘Dand’ (17th C.) lived with his son Thomas at West Falside in Southdean Parish about 1640. Andrew (17th C.) tenant in Sneepdykes according to a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. Andrew (17th C.) grandson of Andrew ‘called of Thorterwoode’. He inherited his grandfather’s lands in Jedburgh in 1657, ratified by the Earl of Lothian in 1677. Andrew (17th C.) cordiner in Darnick near Melrose. He is recorded in the proceedings of the Melrose Regality Court in 1660. Given the shoemaking trade, there is a possible connection with the Olivers in Hawick. Andrew (17th C.) tenant of Bairnkine. In 1684 his son Andrew was among those listed as fugitives for being a Covenanter. Andrew (either him or his son), along with Richard and Robert, also in Bairnkine (and perhaps also his sons) were listed among those who refused to take the Oath of Allegiance in 1684. He was recorded at ‘barnkin’ in 1690 when listed among people owing money to the deceased Mark Turnbull and Bessie Kerr. He was also listed at Bairnkine on the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. Andrew (17th C.) resident at Slacks in Southdean Parish according to the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694, when he possessed 3 hearths, Andrew ‘Dand’ (17th C.) resident at Roughlee according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. Andrew (17th C.) ‘cottar’ at Hallrule who was listed among the poor in Hobkirk Parish in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Andrew ‘Dand’ (17th C.) recorded along with Steven as a tenant at Falside on the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls, when they paid tax on 2 hearths. There was a separate Steven also listed, as well as John, plus Thomas and his sons; presumably some of these Oliverse were closely related. Andrew (17th/18th C.) resident at Swinnie. His wife Janet Learmonth (1691/2–1736) was recorded on a tombstone in Abbotrule Kirkyard, along with Isabel (d.1756), possibly his daughter. Andrew ‘Dand’ (18th C.) tenant at Falside in Southdean Parish around 1740, along with Thomas and William. He may be the same Andrew who was tenant at Alton and Adderstoneshiel with William (possibly his brother) in the 1760s. He may be the ‘Dand’ who had the following children christened in Southdean parish: Janet in 1739; unnamed in 1741; and Agnes in 1744. He may be related to the earlier Dand who was recorded at Falside. Andrew (18th C.) tenant in ‘Rigg’ in Cavers Parish when he paid the window tax in 1748. He was probably at Caerlenrig. However, it is unclear how he was related to other Oliveres. Andrew (18th C.) tenant at Uthank in Hobkirk Parish. He farmed there after about 1757, when Uthank was sold by Thomas Scott to William Elliot of Wolfelee. Andrew (18th C.) listed at ‘Fodderlee-birks’ in the subscription list for Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). He may be the same as one of the contemporary Andrews. Andrew (b.c.1765) farmer at Westerhouses in Southdean Parish. His wife was Elizabeth. He was an Elder in the Relief Kirk in Jedburgh. He and his wife travelled there for services in a ‘noddy’. His children included Elizabeth and Janet. He may be the Andrew recorded at Doorpool in the 1794 Horse Tax Rolls. Andrew (b.c.1770) cooper at Kirk Style in Hobkirk Parish. His wife was Ann. Andrew (d.1811) from Jedburgh, he was the keeper of the Carter Bar Toll. His death is recorded in Hawick. Andrew (18th/19th C.) licensed grocer at 4 High Street. He married Elizabeth (b.1774), 6th child of Walter Purdom. Their children included: Agnes (b.1806); and Andrew (b.1808), a tobacconist at 42 High Street. He may be the ‘Oliver’ whose premises are shown at about No. 42 on Wood’s 1824 map. Andrew (18th/19th C.) eldest son of William Langraw. As a boy he was taught by James Sanson (archetype for ‘Dominnie Sampson’). He was a successful wool stapler and cloth manufacturer in Huddersfield. He inherited Langraw in 1812, having to pay off some debts. It is said that when the Hare Cairn was dismantled he sent the carved cist slab to Abbotsford. He was listed as Andrew of Langraw in Pigot’s 1837 directory. In 1803 he married Jean (or Jane), daughter of Thomas Scott, who farmed at Woollee; she was a first cousin of the writer Sir Walter Scott. He was succeeded by his son William. Andrew ‘Rolly’ (1793–1857) auctioneer and lawyer, father of James, and founder of Andrew Oliver & Son when he came to Hawick in 1817. He was son of James and Isabel Elliot, born at Marlefield Hope, Eckford. He had a brother William, who was a grain-works manager in Berwick and another brother George, who was a baker in London. He was an apprentice solicitor in Kelso, then worked in Annan, before moving to Hawick. He characteristically always wore a tall, white, felt hat, with a broad, black band. He started the auction mart system in 1847, probably the first of its kind in Britain. He became a member of the Hawick Curling Club in 1819 and was Clerk of the club for many years. He was described as a ‘writer’ when he subscribed to William Scott’s ‘ Beauties of the Border’ in 1821 and Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He is recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory as a writer and ‘messenger’ on the High Street. His premises at that time were probably one of the 3 places on the High Street marked ‘Oliver’ on Wood’s 1824 map. There are several letters to him from the 1820s preserved in the Walter Mason Collection. In Pigot’s 1837 directory he was listed as an auctioneer on the Sandbed, as well as a ‘Messenger at Arms’ and writer. In 1852 he was listed at Bridge House as a messenger at arms and ‘Andrew Oliver & Son’ are listed as writers. He was at the Sandbed in 1841 (probably already in Oliver Bridge House) and listed as a writer and auctioneer. By 1851 he was explicitly at Bridge House. In 1852 his company is listed as coal agents at the Station for the Marquis of Lothian’s coal fields, as well as insurance agents for Sun. In Coldstream he married Catherine Brown, who died in 1867, aged 72. Their children included: Jane (b.1815); and James (b.1817), also a local lawyer, accountant and auctioneer. He is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. Andrew (b.1806/7) from Kirkton, he was a mason at ‘Parkhouses’ (i.e. Burnhead Cottages) in Tilwin Parish. He is listed among heads of households at Howdenburn in Tilwin Parish in 1835 and at ‘Pitlyhouses’ in 1840. His wife was Isabella Glendinning and their children included Isabella, James, Margaret, William and Andrew.

Andrew (b.1808) son of Andrew and Elizabeth Purdom. He was a tobacconist at 42 High Street. In 1841 he was living there with his mother and sister Margaret. His sister was his housekeeper in 1851, when he was employing 5 people. Andrew (b.1807/8) born in Jedburgh Parish, he was son of Adam and Mary Hall. Like his father he was farmer at Chapel in Lilliesleaf Parish. In 1861 he was farming 150 acres and employing 5 people. He and his brother Thomas were the ‘Messrs Oliver’ recorded at Chapel in 1868. They were unmarried and lived with their sister Mary. Andrew (19th C.) schoolmaster at Cogsmill and Denholm. His grandmother was a Cranston, sister of Andrew Murray’s wife. He was at Cogsmill around the 1880s. Andrew Rutherford (1855–1918) eldest son of James. He became partner in Andrew Oliver & Son, Auctioneers and Live Stock Salesmen in 1888. He was a respected figure in local agricultural circles, being Honorary Secretary of the West Teviotdale Agricultural Society and of the Teviotdale Farmers’ Club for many years. He was also a supporter of the Common Riding and patron of racing, hunting and other sports. He lived at Thornwood, died there and is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. A memorial clock to him overlooked the principal ring in the Auction Mart. He became a director of Blenheim, Richardson & Co. in 1909. Oliver Park was named after him. Andrew (1856–1938) 2nd son of Robert and Violet Rodger, he was born at Dinlabyre in Castleton Parish. He became an apprentice blacksmith in Greenlaw, spent some time in Ireland and then was blacksmith at Allanton, Berwickshire for almost 50 years. Andrew (1885/6–1937) died at Falside and is buried in Southdean cemetery. Anne (b.1811/12) from Langholm, she was son of John, tailor in Newcastleton. In 1861 she was recorded as ‘feuar’ at about 15 Hermitage Street, living alone. She may be the Anne who was juvenile librarian in the Parish in the 1860s. Archibald (16th C.) recorded as tenant of half of the lands ‘Greithil’ in Jedforest in 1541. Archibald of Bush (d.1843) 2nd son of William of Dinlabyre. He is probably the Archibald, son of William, who became a surgeon-apothecary’s apprentice in Edinburgh in 1799. He joined the 4th Bengal Native Infantry. By 1815 he was made Captain, then became deputy paymaster at Benares and retired at the rank of Major. He possessed Bush (also called ‘Overton Bush’) near to Edgerston. He became a member of the Jedforest Club in 1826. He married Anne, daughter of Col. John Anderson. They had no children and Bush eventually went to his nephew William, son of his brother John. There are portraits of him and his wife by Sir John Watson Gordon. Archibald (b.c.1790) son of James, he was born in Bedrule Parish and was tenant farmer at Denholm Mill. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He was tenant of Denholm Mill according to Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories. In 1841 he was living at Denholm Mill, but was deceased by 1851. He married Ann Laing and she died in 1857. Their children included: James (b.1820); Agnes (b.1821); Elizabeth (b.1823); Helen (b.1825); Ann (b.1827); Alison (b.1829); Margaret (‘Maggie’, b.1831); Joanne (b.1833); and John Laing (b.1836). Several of his daughters worked in Hawick as milliners and dressmakers. He was surely related to John, who was also at Denholm Mill in 1825. Arthur (1927/8–2006) worked at Craik Forest, then as a hand-knitter at Deanbrae Mill. He was a keen walker and angler, as well as Common Riding supporter. A stalwart of the Teviotdale Harriers, he joined in 1947, served as President, and in 200 received a trophy for 50 years as a running member. He was well known throughout the Town for his generous spirit. He married Lillian and had children John, Andrew, Margaret and Susan. Barton (b.1835) son of Castleton shepherd George. He may also have been called ‘Angus Barton’, after the local minister. In 1861 he was an agricultural labourer at Bairnkine in Southdean Parish and he later farmed at the Dodlins. He married Jessie Murray and their children included Catherine (b.1860), George (b.1862), William (b.1864), James (b.1866), Adam (b.1869), Betsy (b.1871, who married John Mable), Margaret (b.1873), Jessie (b.1876), Jane (b.1879) and...
David (b.1880). Charles (16th C.) tenant at Slacks in 1541, paying 11 shillings yearly. Thomas and John were tenants in the other part of Slacks. His name is recorded as ‘Carolo Oliverre’. Charles son of Robert, he followed his father by working at Lyle & Scott’s, eventually becoming Managing Director. He arranged a partnership with Christian Dior in 1954. He was a Captain during WWII, being awarded the Military Cross. He married Maisie, daughter of baker Thomas Brydon. He lived at Bucklands. Christian (17th C.) listed ‘in Lustruther’ among people declared to be rebels for refusing to take the Oath of Allegiance in 1684. It is unclear if this was a man or a woman. David (d.c.1170) recorded as ‘Olfard’, he was King David I’s godson. He was probably of Norman descent, and had brothers who remained in England. If related to other Olivers (and not the Oliphants), then he is probably the first known ancestor of that family. He served with King Stephen’s army at Winchester in 1141, against his godfather. But when King David escaped he helped him return to Scotland, for which he was granted lands at Smailholm and Craeling, as well as the Barony of Bothwell. Around 1150 he witnessed the grant of the Church of Molle to Kelso Abbey. He granted the tithe of Craeling Mill to the monks of Jedburgh Abbey about 1162, and also made grants to Dryburgh and Soutra. In 1165 he was Justiciar of Lothian (perhaps the first on record), meaning he exerted authority from the Tweed to the Firth of Forth. He may have married a daughter of Berengar Engaine, who previously held Craeling. He had 5 sons, David (who succeeded), William, Walter, Philip and Fulco (or ‘Fulk’, Parson of Smailholm). David (d.c.1190s) succeeded his father David ‘Olfard’ (although these generations are confused). He had at least 2 sons: Walter, who married a daughter of the Earl of Strathearn and succeeded his father; and David, who married Johannah, heiress of Calder. Thus both sons moved further North, where the name was softened to ‘Oliphant’. David (13th C.) son of Walter, from whom he inherited lands in Roxburghshire at Craeling and Smailholm. He is recorded along with Walter in a charter of Soutra Hospital in 1273. He married Devorguille (whose surname is not given), but died without an heir. Their Border lands went to his sister, who had married Walter of Moray. His wife could be the ‘Dervorguilla Olyfart’ who was involved in a lawsuit with Dervorguilla de Baliol in 1289. David ‘Nae Guid Priest’ (d.c.1502) resident of Strynds, which was near Westerhouses in the Rule valley, later called Strange. In 1502 he had remission for being involved in a series of raids, with Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst serving as surety, this included: stealing 12 oxen and cows from Sir David Home at Lammermuir; associating with rebels Thomas and Andrew Grahamslaw; stealing a horse from John Douglas in Jedburgh; stealing 3 horses from a farm at Nisbet; and stealing 20 sheep from George Douglas in Trows. He is recorded there as ‘Davud oliver in lestryndis, vocatis david na gud preist’, but it is unclear how he got this odd nickname. Presumably he is the David (with no nickname given) also recorded the same year along with Robert ‘in stryndis’ producing a remission for stealing a total of 101 sheep from William Ker at ‘Dernewik-mure’. He was also allowed to pay a fine for his part in stealing sheep from ‘Jedworthe, Rowcastell, Langtoune, and Bethroull’; this was along with Robert and John (brother of Ingram). Also that year he was allowed to pay a fine for a further theft (of a long, detailed list of items) from Martin Wood in Whitfield, this being along with ‘Long John’ and ‘Little John’. Again Ker of Dolphinston and Kerr of Ferniehirst were sureties. Additionally in 1502, along with John son of Gilbert ‘in kilclewis’, he was allowed to compone for stealing 19 sheep and a cow from Maton and six sheep from Muirhouselaw; Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst was his surety. Probably the same David, brother of John son of Gilbert, in Strange, was also recorded in 1502 when they were allowed to compone for stealing a horse and a pot from Ednam. He was recorded further in 1502 as ‘na gude clerk’ when he and John ‘in le stryndis’ were allowed to compone for crimes committed against Gilbert Lamb at Jedburgh, including seriously wounding him; Andrew Kerr was surety. Additionally in 1502 along with Ingram and John in Strange, he had remission for stealing oxen from Ancrum, as well as sheep, a cow and other items from Maxton; after failing to ‘fynde sufficient sureties’ he was sentenced to hanging, along with Robert, Martin and Matthew, all from Strynds (these were probably a mixture of brothers and nephews). All 4 were subsequently captured, and assuming the execution took place, this marks the end for this once powerful rieving branch of the Olivers. In 1505 Robert Oliver, ‘Rob with the Dog’ was given remission for previously intercommuning with him and John ‘Cadger’; his nickname is there recorded as ‘Na-gude-Preist’. David of ‘Hyndhewche’ (16th C.) recorded in by 1918. He was also Secretary of the Curling Committee.

David (16th C.) recorded in 1571/2 as tenant in Whiteside, when John Rutherford of Hunthill was surety for him and his brother. Although his brother’s name is not given, this may be ‘Dand’, who was also recorded in Whiteside at about the same time. David (17th C.) recorded as one of the tenants in Falside in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. David (17th C.) recorded as tenant in Southdean in a 1699 rental roll of Jedforest. He was probably related to James and Thomas, who were also listed as tenants there. David (17th C.) resident of Nether Dykeraw according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. David (17th/18th C.) one of the Olivers of Falside in Southdean Parish, who left there in 1747. He may be the same man as the David recorded at Falside in 1669, or alternatively was a descendant of his. He was tenant farmer at Abbotrule Townfoot. He may have been father of some of Thomas, Dand and William, who were tenants at Falside around 1740. David (b.1829–bef. 1909) labourer in Newcastleton, son of George and Elspeth Murray. He worked as a railway surfaceman. He was at 37 South Hermitage Street in 1861. In 1853 he married Margaret Pott (b.1833) in Hobkirk Parish; she was daughter of Robert Pott and Mary Armstrong. Their children, baptised in Castleton Parish, included: Mary (b.1853); George (b.1855); Robert (b.1857); James (b.1860); Andrew (b.1862); John (b.1864); James (b.1867); and Margaret (b.1873). David Councillor in Newcastleton, representing the village on the County Council in the mid-20th century. He lived on South Hermitage Street. He acted as first Chairman of the village hall committee. Douglas (b.1871) of Hassendeanbank, son of James Oliver and Jane Rutherford. He attended Mill Hill School (where James Murray had taught) and served in the Army during WWI. He entered the family Auctioneering business in 1887 and was sole proprietor by 1918. He was also Secretary of the Curling Club. He was Chairman of the Hawick Heritable Investment Bank and Chairman of the managers of the Cottage Hospital. He served in the Boer War. In 1904 he married Sybil Brown from Galashiels and their children were: Florence Murray (b.c.1905); Muriel Rutherford (b.c.1907); Elsie Margery (b.c.1910); and James Kenneth Murray (‘Ken’, 1914–99). Ebenezer (b.1718) son of James, the Cavers schoolmaster, he was born in Cavers Parish. He was the 3rd generation of his family to be schoolmaster in Cavers. He was certainly there in the 1760s. He was married to Janet Brown, and their children included: John (b.1750); and James (b.1753). In 1762 he had a child born called James. It is possible that his son John was the schoolmaster in Castleton whose son Ebenezer was born in 1778. Ebenezer (18th/19th C.) recorded as watch and clockmaker in Denholm, on Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. He is probably the Ebenezer married to Betty Scott, whose children (born in Cavers Parish) included: John (b.1802), probably a weaver in Hawick with an eldest son also called Ebenezer; James (b.1804); Betty (b.1807); Margaret (b.1809); Thomas (b.1811); and Ebenezer (b.1814). He was surely descended from the earlier schoolmaster. Ebenezer (19th C.) Secretary of the Denholm Horticultural Society in the 1860s. Edward (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 being ‘in Jedforest’, although no more specific designation is given. At the Justice-aire in Jedburgh, the Coroner (William Cranston) was fined for failing to arrest him. Edward (16th C.) tenant at ‘Stryndis’ (i.e. Strange) in a rental roll of 1541. His name is listed as ‘Eduardo Oliveri’. He was probably related to other Olivers of Strange. Edward (16th C.) recorded as being ‘of Lynkylywood’ in 1544, in a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to England. His lands were somewhere in Jedforest, like the other Olivers listed. Elizabeth ‘Bessie’ (17th C.) listed along with Robert in Bank, on a list of people who refused to take the Oath of Allegiance in 1684 and were declared rebels. Robert was probably her husband. She was among a relatively small number of women who were prosecuted for being Covenanters. Elliot (b.1854) eldest son of lawyer James. He became a partner in the family firm Geo & Jas. Oliver. However, he retired early because of problems with his eyesight. Francis (1749–1829) tenant farmer of Heap. He was one of the founders of the Relief Church in Hawick. He died in Hawick. Francis (19th C.) fisher in Newcastleton. He was listed as male head of his family in 1835 and 1836 and as a carter in 1837. Frederick Scott
Oliver Oliver
George at the same time. surely related to Thomas, who was at Swinnie when his will was recorded in 1685. He was Northbank according to the Hearth Tax rolls of George of the Covenanters. Rutherford, Minister of Ancrum, following an attempt to disrupt the service there. This was presumably still fall-out from the days of persecution for shoemaker John Turnbull. He was shoemaker in 1712 when he witnessed a baptism for cook James Wright. He married Jean ‘Betie’ (i.e. Beattie). Their children included: Janet (b.1701); Isobel (b.1701); Margaret (b.1703); Grizel (b.1705); and Agnes (b.1708). The witnesses in 1703 included Robert and in 1705 were carrier John ‘Atkin’ and Henry Orrock. Bessie (b.1696) may also have been his daughter. It is unclear how he was related to the later shoemaker George. He could be the George who witnessed baptisms for the other George in 1726, 1728 and 1731. He is probably the George ‘Senior Shoemaker’ who witnessed a baptism for tailor Thomas Kay in 1739. George (18th C.) Hawick shoemaker, said to be from the Dykeraw Olivers, he may have been son of Robert and Agnes Atkins (or Aitkin). He may be the George who witnessed a baptism for shoemaker Robert (and Bessie Blackhall) in Hawick in 1730. He is described as ‘senior’ in 1740, so he probably had a son George at that time. In 1721 he married Margaret, eldest daughter of John Aitkin. Their children included: Robert (b.1722); John (b.1724); Agnes (or Annie, b.1726), who married George Douglas, from the Timpendean branch; George (b.1728); James (b.1729); Margaret (b.1731); William (b.1733); Isobel (b.1736); Walter (b.1738); and Bessy (b.1745). The witnesses in 1726 were George and Robert Oliver, in 1728 were George and Walter (presumably near relatives), in 1731 were George (again) and John Telfer (perhaps the Beadle), and in 1745 were weaver Andrew Jardine and mason Adam Turnbull. In 1725, along with cooper John Aitkin (perhaps his father-in-law), he witnessed a birth for miller John Henderson. He is probably the shoemaker George who witnessed baptisms for shoemaker Robert in 1757 and 1765, suggesting that this Robert (of Burnflat) was his son. He may also be the George who witnessed a baptism for shoemaker John in 1757. He may be the George recorded in 1788 as owner of Burnflat (although that may indicate that he had purchased the land earlier, and may well have been deceased by then). George (17th C.) resident of Southdean Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. He was surely related to John who was also listed there in 1694, as well as James recorded there in 1689. George (17th C.) recorded at Woodhouse on the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. George (17th/18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. In 1699, along with shoemaker Robert (presumably a relative, perhaps his brother), he witnessed a baptism for cooper John Turnbull. He was shoemaker in 1712 when he witnessed a baptism for cook James Wright. He married Jean ‘Betie’ (i.e. Beattie). Their children included: Janet (b.1701); Isobel (b.1701); Margaret (b.1703); Grizel (b.1705); and Agnes (b.1708). The witnesses in 1703 included Robert and in 1705 were carrier John ‘Atkin’ and Henry Orrock. Bessie (b.1696) may also have been his daughter. It is unclear how he was related to the later shoemaker George. He could be the George who witnessed baptisms for the other George in 1726, 1728 and 1731. He is probably the George ‘Senior Shoemaker’ who witnessed a baptism for tailor Thomas Kay in 1739. George (18th C.) Hawick shoemaker, said to be from the Dykeraw Olivers, he may have been son of Robert and Agnes Atkins (or Aitkin). He may be the George who witnessed a baptism for shoemaker Robert (and Bessie Blackhall) in Hawick in 1730. He is described as ‘senior’ in 1740, so he probably had a son George at that time. In 1721 he married Margaret, eldest daughter of John Aitkin. Their children included: Robert (b.1722); John (b.1724); Agnes (or Annie, b.1726), who married George Douglas, from the Timpendean branch; George (b.1728); James (b.1729); Margaret (b.1731); William (b.1733); Isobel (b.1736); Walter (b.1738); and Bessy (b.1745). The witnesses in 1726 were George and Robert Oliver, in 1728 were George and Walter (presumably near relatives), in 1731 were George (again) and John Telfer (perhaps the Beadle), and in 1745 were weaver Andrew Jardine and mason Adam Turnbull. In 1725, along with cooper John Aitkin (perhaps his father-in-law), he witnessed a birth for miller John Henderson. He is probably the shoemaker George who witnessed baptisms for shoemaker Robert in 1757 and 1765, suggesting that this Robert (of Burnflat) was his son. He may also be the George who witnessed a baptism for shoemaker John in 1757. He may be the George recorded in 1788 as owner of Burnflat (although that may indicate that he had purchased the land earlier, and may well have been deceased by then). George (c.1770–1837)

son of William and Jean Nichol, he was born at Blinkbonny. He worked as a shepherd in Castleton Parish, but emigrated to the U.S.A. (with his whole family, except for the eldest son George) and died at Mishawaka, Indiana only a couple of years later. He married Elizabeth Irving and their children included: George (b.1803); John (b.1807); Andrew (b.1809); Jane Grey (b.1810); Dorothy Irwin (b.1815); Robert (b.1817); William Irving (b.1821); and James (b.1825), who became famous for improving the plough. George (18th/19th C.) recorded on the 1794 and 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as farmer at Dykeraw. He owned 3 farm horses and 1 saddle horse at that time. He also paid the dog tax at Dykeraw in the same year. George (18th/19th C.) flesher in Newcastleton. He is listed among heads of households in 1835 and 1836. He was surely related to Francis, also a butcher in Newcastleton. George (b.c.1795) mason in Hawick. He is listed among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1835–41. In 1835 he was at Dovemount, at Stellhouse in 1840 (the address changed to ‘Toll Bar Hawick’) and at the Toll Bar in 1841. He was living at the Western Toll Bar on the 1841 census, with wife Mina and children William, Isabel, Margaret and James. George ‘Pie Oliver’ or ‘Pies’ (c.1800–47) baker on the Howegate, at about No. 19. He may have been son of William ‘Little Cash’. His wife made pies at 19 Howegate, which presumably gave the nickname for the family. He married Janet or ‘Nannie’ Brown (from Selkirk), who died in 1881, aged 87. Their children included: William (b.1822); Thomas (b.1824); Catherine; Agnes (c.1828–1901), who married Robert Murray; Janet; George; and Robert. The three brothers who were stockmakers, George, ‘Jock the Hoist’ and William, may have been his sons. He may have been related to James, who was an earlier baker in Hawick. His wife was working as a washer-woman on the Back Row in 1851. It is also unclear whether he could be the George ‘of Burnflat’ who was recorded as a heritor in 1854 (after his death); he seems likely to be the George recorded as owner of Burnflat on the 1811 Land Tax Rolls. George (1803–72) eldest surviving son of Town Clerk John. He was Cornet in 1824. He trained as a lawyer, and in 1831 went into partnership with his father as a ‘writer’ and bank agent. In 1837 he is listed along with his father as agent for the Commercial Bank. In 1841 he was living on Bucceleh Street and was there in 1851, recorded as ‘Procurator in Sheriff Court of Roxburgh Shire’. The firm was thus ‘John and George Oliver’, but became ‘Geo. & Jas. Oliver’ on the death of John in 1849, when his younger brother became a partner. He was local agent for the Duke of Bucceleh, as well as being political agent for the Conservative Party in Hawick and Liddesdale. He was mentioned as one of the local ‘fictitious voters’ in an investigation of 1837 (along with John and Robert Anderson they bought property in Selkirkshire, apparently in order to gain the ability to vote there). He had a prominent role in the Hawick to Carlisle railway extension. He was probably the George ‘of Burnflat’ who was recorded as a heritor in 1854; he seems likely to be the George recorded as owner of Burnflat on the 1811 Land Tax Rolls (his son John inheriting these lands from him). He became tenant at Borthaugh in 1860. He served as a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire. He was also one of the Orrock Trustees and served as Chairman of the Parochial Board for Kirkton Parish. He married Margaret, daughter of John Lindsay of Almeriecloss (Forfarshire) at Arbroath in 1843. Their children were: Margaret Spink (b.1844); Jane (b.1846); Mary (b.1848), who married Surg.-Gen. Peter Stephenson Turnbull, descendant of the Bedrule Turnbulls; John (b.1850), also a Hawick lawyer; Jane (b.1852); Christian (b.1854), who married David Turnbull of Fenwick and Brieryyards; George Lindsay (b.1857), farmer, who spent time in New Zealand; and James Lindsay (b.1860), who also spent time in New Zealand with his brother. A portrait of him exists. His wife’s portrait, by Atkinson Horsburgh, is in the Museum, painted in 1883. George (b.1803) son of Liddesdale shepherd George and Elizabeth Irving. His brother James was the manufacturer of ‘Oliver’s Chilled Plough’ in South Bend, Indiana. He was the only one of his brothers not to emigrate to America. He was shepherd at Gatehousecote and elsewhere. He married Elspeth Murray. Their children included: William (b.1827), who became Steward at Gatehousecote; David (b.1829), who lived at the family home in Newcastleton; Elizabeth (b.1831), who married Adam Crozier; James Binnie (b.1834), who probably died young; and Barton (b.1835), who farmed at ‘the Dodlins’ near Hawick. George (c.1820–1900) son of John and Agnes Rutherford. He was born in Scotland, probably near Hawick. He moved to the Galt, Ontario area with his father and family. He married Elizabeth Turnbull (d.1868) and their children included John, James, Andrew, William, Thomas, Elizaebth, George, Agnes, Agnes (again) and Robert. Most of his family moved to Carberry, Manitoba, being among the first settlers there. George Lindsay (b.1857) son of Hawick lawyer George. He went to New Zealand and bought property there with his brother James. However, he returned to farm at Whitehaugh (near Newcastleton) and later lived in Hawick. George Currie Stenhouse (1900–73) born in Glasgow, from a Borders branch of the Oliver family. His family moved to Hawick and in the 1920s he decided to emigrate to Canada. He worked as a herd in New Liskeard, Ontario, but travelled extensively while looking for work. On a return trip to Hawick he met Anne Murray (1895–1977) and she followed him back to Canada where they were married in 1931. The couple returned to Hawick in 1936. Gilbert (15th C.) father of Robert, James and William. His sons were separately fined at the Justice- aire in Jedburgh in 1493, for non-appearance to answer for unspecified crimes. He could be the same Gilbert who (along with John ‘benkis’) had 2 cows stolen by Philip Waugh in Jedburgh, with Waugh having remission in 1494/5. Perhaps the same Gilbert is mentioned in 1502 when his son John in ‘stryndis’ had remission for stealing a horse and a sword from Smalholm. He may also be the Gilbert recorded in 1502, along with James Rutherford and a man called ‘Wobstar’, when Thomas Rutherford in the Grange had remission for resetting them and their stolen livestock. Gilbert (16th C.) tenant at Whiteside in Jedforest in 1541, along with Patrick, Andrew and John. Gilbert (16th C.) tenant at Hindhaughead in 1541 along with his mother Margaret. They paid 25 shillings yearly. Gilbert (16th C.) tenant at Over Dykeraw in 1541. He was probably related to other nearby Oliviers, e.g. the tenants at Nether Dykeraw. Gilbert ‘Gib’ (16th C.) recorded in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He is named as ‘Gybe Ollyver of the Dykis’. His lands may have been the Dykes in Bedrule, or perhaps more likely is Dykeraw in Southdean (given the family connection and forename). Gilbert (17th/18th C.) farmer at Dykeraw, recorded in a list of tenants in Jedforest in 1669. He was probably son of Robert, also listed there. He married a Douglas and their son was James, baptised in Southdean Parish in 1694. He was ancestor of George and James of the Hawick legal firm. Gilbert (18th C.) recorded as ‘farmer in Hawick’ who was deceased in 1754 when his daughter Ann married Andrew Ford in Edinburgh (or this may have been the Ann, daughter of Gilbert and Janet Turnbull, born in Hawick in 1738). He may have been born in Jedburgh Parish in 1712. Gilbert (18th C.) workman and carrier in Hawick Parish. In 1768 he witnessed a baptism in Hawick for Walter Stevenson and Janet Oliver (probably his daughter). He is also probably the carrier Gilbert who witnessed a baptism for Francis Aitkin and Anne Oliver (likely his daughter) in Hawick in 1766. He married Janet Turnbull and their children included: Anne (b.1738); Janet (b.1741); Helen (b.1744); and Robert (b.1746). The 1741 baptism was witnessed by merchant John Ruecastle and ‘Officer’ John Telfer and the 1746 one by Bailie Robert Scott and merchant William Oliver. Gilbert (18th/19th C.) resident at Chesters (Southdean) according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He is listed right after Thomas, who may be a relation. Helen nee Elliot (18th C.) only child of William Elliot of Myredykes. In 1797 she married ironmonger James Oliver in Hawick. Her first children were born in Hawick, and then the family moved to Borthwickbrae Burnfoot, where her husband became tenant farmer. A story is recounted of how when she was married she brought a collie dog from Myredykes, and every sheep clipping season the animal would disappear from Hawick for a few days, since it had set off to help round up the sheep. In 1851 she was recorded as an ‘Annuitant’ living at Alemoor Cottage with her unmarried daughters Rachel, Eliza and Isabella, as well as 2 servants. Helen (b.1825) from Cavers Parish, son of Archibald. She was the eldest of 4 sisters who were living at about 61 High Street in 1851 and working as milliners and dressmakers. She was listed with her sister Ann in Slater’s 1852 directory. Henry (16th C.) recorded in 1601 as the deceased ‘Henrie Olypher’. He had been killed by Thomas Kerr and his servant George Gladder, who were denounced as rebels for the crime. This pair were later killed by a group of Turnbulls and others in Jedburgh. Henry (b.1806) agricultural labourer and shepherd in Southdean Parish, son of William, who was hind to the Laird of Langraw. In 1841 he was at Abbotrule farm and was farm steward at West Fodderlee in 1851 and 1861. In 1840 in Southdean he married Isabella Renwick from Morebattle; she died at Burnflat in 1895, aged 87. Their children were: Isabella (b.1841), who married Thomas Welsh; Robert (b.1843), a marine engineer who was lost at sea; Helen (b.1846); and Helen (again, b.1851). Ingram (15th C.) recorded as ‘chairleis’ in 1493 when he was fined for non-appearance at the Justice- aire in Jedburgh. His residence could be associated with Charlie’s Hill or Charlie’s Knowe in Southdean Parish. He may be the same Ingram against whom premeditated crimes were committed in Jedburgh by William Kirkton in Kirkton, according to the 1494/5 Justiceaire. He could be the Ingram for whom George Douglas Master of Angus was fined for failing to arrest (along with Thomas ‘Waitschod’ and James). Ingram (15th/16th C.) son of Robert in Strange and brother of John. In 1494/5 he was listed among 8 Olivers and a Shiel when they had remission for commuting with the English. He could be the same man as Ingram in ‘chaireles’. In 1502, along with his brother John, and David ‘Nae Guid Preist’, he had remission for commuting ozen from Ancrum, as well as sheep, a cow and other items from Maxton; he was there recorded being ‘in le stryndis’ and his surety was Mark Ker of Dofljington. Also in 1502 his brother John was allowed to compone for stealing ozen from Jedburgh with him, as well as other thefts (without him). Ingram (16th C.) farmer at Harwoodtown. ‘Ingrem Olferis barne and zaird’ (i.e. ‘barn and yard’) are listed in the 1562 Baronial dispute over lands in Feu-Rule, being assigned to Agnes Herries as superior. Presumably the same ‘Ingra’ was listed as ‘man and servand’ of Thomas Turnbull of Harwoodtown (brother of David Turnbull of Waunchope) in 1567, when his master was ordered to present him to answer charges related to raids into England. Isabel (b.c.1800) grocer on the High Street in Pigot’s 1837 directory. In 1841 she was at about 30 High Street, living with wool-sorter Walter Wilson, who may have been a relative. Isobel (17th C.) listed at Dykeraw among the poor of Southdean Parish in the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls James (15th C.) assigned the lease of the Crown lands of Garlawcleuch in the Yarrow valley in 1489 along with his son John. It is unclear how he might have been related to other Olivers. James (15th C.) son of Gilbert. He is recorded in 1493 when he was fined for non-appearance at the Justice- aire in Jedburgh. His brother Robert was also fined at the same time, as well as Matthew son of Geoffrey, Robert brother of Matthew and Martin brother of Robert. William, son of Gilbert, was also fined, and probably his brother too. He was also recorded in 1494/5 among 8 Olivers and a Shiel (connected with Strange) who had remission for commuting with the English; he was there stated to be brother of Robert, who was son of Gilbert, and also brother of William. He could be the James for whom George Douglas Master of Angus was fined for failing to arrest (along with Thomas ‘Waitschod’ and Ingram). James (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 as ‘burgess’ (presumably of Jedburgh, or else a nickname) at the Justice- aire in Jedburgh. Along with Robert in Lustruther, Robert (nephew of David) and Robert Waugh in Mervinslaw, he had a remission for a raid on ‘Keleshop’, which resulted in the slaughter of Robert Brig and Adam ‘Barnisfader’; his surety was Ralph Ker of Primside Loch. It seems likely he was related to the Olivers of Strynds. James (15th/6th C.) son of Gilbert in ‘stryndis’. In 1502 he and his brother John had remission for a series of crimes: stealing an ox from Ancrum; stealing 2 cows from Jedburgh; and treason. His surety was Robert Douglas, uncle of the Laird of Bonjedward. Also in 1502, along with brothers Matthew and Martin, he was allowed to compone for stealing 200 sheep from the tenants of Jedburgh, Ruthcastle, Lanton and Bedrule; his surety was again Robert Douglas. James ‘the Prince’ (15th/16th C.) resident of Swinnie recorded in 1502 when George Douglas, Master of Angus was his surety. He failed to appear at the Justice Aire in Jedburgh and was to be fined at the next court. The same man was charged at the 1510 Court of the Justiciary in Jedburgh. His crimes included theft of sheep from various people. James (16th C.) recorded as tenant in Mervinslaw in a rental roll of 1541, along with William, Margaret and William alias ‘Merchant’. His steadings were valued at 25s. James (16th C.) tenant at Waterside in 1541, along with Marion Young and Robert Young. It seems likely that they were related somehow. They paid 22 shillings yearly. James (16th C.) tenant at Nether Dykeraw in 1541, along with Michael, John, Adam and Robert. His name was given first, suggesting that he was the senior family member. James (16th C.) admitted as ‘perpetual vicar’ of Castleton in 1559. It is unclear how long he remained. James (d.1573) recorded as ‘somtyme seruandis to BlakOrmistoone’ when he was convicted and hanged along with William Donald. Their crimes included stealing livestock and burning the corn of Sir Andrew Kerr. It is unclear if he had direct local connections. James (17th C.) monk at Jedburgh Abbey in the period 1542–81. He held the title of Prior of Canonbie in the 1570s, but probably continued to reside in Jedburgh. He is recorded in 1573 as ‘Dene James Oliver Pryour of Cannaby’ in a case before the Privy Council regarding some lands in Canonbie. It is unclear where he came from. James (17th C.) schoolmaster in Cavers Parish.
He is said to have accompanied the ‘Guid Leddy Cavers’ to conventicles on Ruberslaw and at Haddingburn. His son James took over as schoolmaster at Cavers. He is also said to have kept a personal narrative of his experiences attending secret Covenanter sermons and escaping from the dragoons, stories that were passed down in his family for several generations. His son James was schoolmaster after him. James (17th C.) recorded as tenant of ‘Souden’ i.e. Southdean in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. James (17th C.) recorded as tenant of Hyndhaughhead in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. James (17th C.) tenant in Ashtrees. He is recorded in 1684 when his son Thomas was listed as a Covenanter fugitive. He himself refused to take the oath and was banished to Jamaica. James (17th C.) recorded as ‘of Stryndis’ (i.e. Strange) in 1689 when he complained that the Parish Minister had not read out the Articles of Estate or prayed for William and Mary. He was probably related to George and James who were recorded at Strange in 1689. James (17th C.) cottar at Rutletownfoot according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. James (17th C.) resident of Over Dykeraw according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. James (17th/18th C.) schoolmaster in Cavers Parish, son of James, who had been schoolmaster before him. It was said that he was a very strict and pious man. He would spend an hour each evening in the old church, reading scriptures by candle-light. He gave his sons names from the Bible: Ebenezer, who succeeded as schoolmaster; Samuel (b.1702), who became schoolmaster in Hobkirk Parish; and Nathaniel. Douglas of Cavers ordered that he be buried in the church, ‘for a man who had haunted it so much when alive deserved to sleep his last shumber under its roof’. He was presumably Session Clerk for Cavers, as well as Schoolmaster, and responsible for the entries in the Parish register. He probably taught his son to write, since essentially the same hand can be seen in the baptismal records from at least the 1690s until the 1760s. James ‘Jafra the Piper’ (17th/18th C.) formerly resident of Kirkton Parish, he was in Hawick in the early 1700s. His nickname was also given as ‘Jafray’. In 1717 he was summoned to Hawick Kirk Session for abusing William Riddell on the street, and asked to supply testimonials from his former parish. Later that year he was called to task again for ‘a relapse in drunkenness and rambling in ye streets occasioning the school boyes to follow after him through the toun’. And later that year, after not presenting the requested testimonials was given a final ultimatum, after which he would be handed to the Magistrates. It seems that they did not continue in ‘extruding him out of ye toun’ at this time. He was probably the same James, ‘toun officer’ who was rebuked in 1718 for playing (presumably the pipes) in front of William Whaton, who rode through the town ‘in a military posture’ for some kind of bet; he stated he was ‘urged and pressed by the schollar to play before William’. In 1719 he was again rebuked ‘for his indecent carriage in his drunkenness’, specifically for ‘rambling in his drunkenness and troubling the minister in his chamber’, again being given a last chance to reform his behaviour. He married Agnes Telfer in England (presumably a quick wedding) in 1720. This ‘irregular marriage on the English side’ may have been the last straw, since the Session then went over the records of his past mis-deeds and sent a ‘memorial’ to the Magistrates adding that ‘if they concurred not with ye Session the minister would make address to another judge to extrude him and to divest him of his service through the toun’. He appears to have been Hawick’s Town Piper for at least 1717–20 and was replaced by Robert Fowler about 1721. James (17th/18th C.) resi dent of Cavers Parish. He was living at Ashybank in 1709, 1716 and 1718. His children included Elizabeth (b.1709), Thomas (b.1716) and Agnes (b.1718). The later tenant in Ashybank, with the same name, was perhaps related. James (b.1694) son of Gilbert, and probably grandson of Robert, farmer at Dykeraw. He was born in Southdean Parish and was a carrier, later becoming tenant farmer at Earlside. He married Bessie Douglas in 1722 and their children were: James (b.c.1723), who died in infancy; and Isabella (b.c.1725), who married James Learmonth in Bedrule. In 1729 he secondly married Margaret, daughter of James Douglas of the Trows, who owned (or had the tenancy of perhaps) the farm of Earlside. He was by then in Hawick Parish, where he was recorded as ‘workman’; in 1743 and 1746 he was listed as a carrier in Hawick, and he presumably took over the farm at Earlside shortly afterwards. He may be the carrier James who in Hawick in 1757 witnessed baptismes for wheelwright James Aitkin and Mary Oliver (probably a relative), as well as for gardener Alexander Donald. He is probably the James, senior, who witnessed baptisms in 1767, as well as in 1771 for merchant John (his son) and in 1772 for merchant James (also his son). He may be the James who witnessed a baptism for wheelwright James Aitkin.
and Mary (perhaps his daughter) in 1772. He may be the ‘James Oliver, sen. merchant’ in Hawick who subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784), along with his son James. With Margaret Douglas he had 5 sons and 4 daughters, all baptised in Hawick Parish, including: Betsy (b.1730); James (b.1732), ironmonger in Hawick; Mary (b.1734); Agnes (b.1738); Christian (1738–1804); John (b.1740), merchant in Hawick; Robert (b.1743), who probably became a surgeon in North Berwick; and Gideon (b.1746). The witnesses in 1743 were shoemaker Robert (who may therefore have been a relative) and maltman John Moss and in 1746 were ex-Bailie Robert Howison and carrier John Scott. James (18th C.). Married to Agnes Telfer, their son Robert was born in Hawick in 1724. James (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was tenant in Ashybank in 1755. He married Isabel Walker and their children included Elspeth (b.1751), Betty (b.1753) and Isabel (b.1755). Other children, baptised in Cavers Parish, who may be his, included John (b.1745), Helen (b.1746), James (b.1747) and John (b.1757). He may be a descendant of the earlier James at Ashybank. James (1732–1820) 2nd son of James of Earlsdie and Margaret Douglas. It is said that when Prince Charlie’s army passed through Hawick in 1745 his father sent him into the country with his horse for safety. He was Cornet in 1764. He had an ironmonger’s business near ‘the Cross’ in Hawick and became tenant of the Duke of Buccleuch’s farm at Crumhaugh Hill.

In 1677 and 1777 he was witness for baptisms for merchant John (his brother). He is probably the merchant who in 1779 (although the date is uncertain) witnessed a baptism for shoemaker Robert (perhaps a relative) and Helen Scott. He is recorded as a merchant in 1781 and is probably the James who paid the Shop Tax in Hawick in 1785. He was Bailie several times in the period 1790–1810. He married Christian, daughter of Robert Elliot of Caerlenrig. They had 5 sons and 3 daughters, including: James (b.1766); Robert (b.c.1769); John (b.1770), who became a lawyer and Town Clerk; William (b.1772); Christian (b.c.1773), who may have married John Sibbald in Edinburgh in 1792; Thomas (b.1775); Margaret (b.1777); and Mary (b.1781), who probably married Bailie Thomas Turnbull. For the 1766 baptism he was recorded as a merchant and the witnesses were John and Francis Elliot (his wife’s brothers). In 1772 the witnesses were Francis Elliot (again) and James senior (probably his father) and in 1777 were the whole congregation.

He could be the James whose child was buried in Hawick in 1772. He is buried at St. Mary’s. Note that there is some confusion in that another James was born to his parents in 1740, which is assumed to be an error for John. James (18th C.) tenant at Ashybank, probably son of the previous James who was there. He was recorded at Ashybank in 1778 when his son James was baptised in Cavers Parish. He was also recorded at Haughhead when several of his children’s baptisms were later recorded together, specifically Isabel (or ‘Tibby’, b.1784), Jean (b.1786) and John (b.1789) were probably also his children. James (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was living at Rough-hope in 1785 when his son William was baptised. He is probably the James who married Isabel Scott and had other children, mostly baptised in Robertson Parish, namely: Isabel (b.1783); Nelly (b.1790); John (b.1792); and James (b.1799), baptised in Ashkirk. James (18th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish. His children included: John (b.1780); James (b.1784); Peggy (b.1786); Archibald (b.1789); George (b.1792); and Robert (b.1795). His death (in his 89th year) is recorded in the Edinburgh Magazine. James (18th C.) tanner who was Cornet in 1782.

The Council banned the carrying of pistols at the Common Riding that year, but he would have none of it, and they were not finally dispensed with until 1784. He lived at 23 High Street, the ‘All Was Others’ house, which is shown belonging to ‘Oliver’ on Wood’s 1824 map. James (b.1766) son of ironmonger James, and descended from the Dykeraw family. He farmed at Borthwickbrae Burnfoot. He is probably the James who subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784), along with James ‘sen. merchant’, who was probably his father. It is possible he was the merchant called James who was listed in Hawick in the 1791–97 Horse Tax Rolls. In 1797 in Hawick he married Helen (b.1777), only child of William Elliot of Myredykes in Castleton Parish. Their children included: Rachel (b.1799); James (b.1801), who continued to farm Borthwickbrae Burnfoot; Christian (b.1803); Helen (b.1804); Margaret (b.1806); Mary (b.1809); Elizabeth (b.1815); Mary (b.1817); William Elliot (b.1819), who spent some time in Australia; and Isabel (b.1821). Other children may have been Jane and Mina. The first few children were born in Hawick Parish and the rest in Robertson. James (1754/5–1839) merchant in Newcastle on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when he owned 2 horses. He married Jane Armstrong, who died in 1814, aged 53. Their children included: Peter (1789/90-1845), also a merchant; Adam (1798/9-1816); and 2 who died in infancy. They are buried in Etterton Cemetery. James (18th/19th C.) recorded as farmer at Kirkton, on the Horse Tax Rolls of 1797. Thomas is listed before him and so possibly related. He also paid the dog tax at Kirkton in 1797. James (18th/19th C.) farmer at Hermiston in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls for Lilliesleaf Parish, when he owned 8 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Minto, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. James (1765–1840) baker in Hawick, son of Robert and Isabel 'Kenmur'. He was Cornet in 1784. It was said that he continued to carry pistols at the Common riding, although it had been decreed to discontinue the practice the previous year. However, when his brother-in-law William Wilson was Cornet in 1786, the pistols were finally abandoned. He is probably the baker James who (along with Robert of Burnflat, his father) witnessed a baptism on 1789 for James Farquhar and Margaret (perhaps his sister). He is probably the baker (and Bailie) called Oliver who was one of the first members of the Curling Club in 1803. He helped compile a 'New Valuation of Houses and Gardens in the 'Town of Hawick' in 1814. He was listed in the 1808 will of William ('Auld Cash') as his second cousin. He was probably the James appointed Chief Magistrate of Hawick in 1818. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825, when he is listed as being ‘of Burnflat’. In 1789 he married Ann, daughter of Walter Wilson, but they had no family, and she died in 1809. Probably the same baker James married Elizabeth Purdom. Their children included: Elizabeth (b.1818); Isobel (b.1820), who became Mrs. McIntosh; Robert William (1822–49), also a baker; Agnes (b.1823), who married blacksmith James Bowie; and William James (b.1824), also a baker. The family were living at about 43 High Street in 1841, and his wife was a widow there in 1851 (and listed as ‘landed proprietor’). In 1809 he was recorded being ‘in Birsleton’. He is probably the James who was also referred to as being ‘of Burnflat’; this is how he is listed among the major landowners of Hawick Parish in 1839. According to James Wilson he described Burnflat as ‘ane nourice fee’ (i.e. the wages given to a wet-nurse, although it is unclear what that meant). James (18th/19th C.) from Westshiels in Southdean Parish. He married Jane Bruce, who was from Jedburgh. Their son William was baptised in Byrness in 1812. James (18th/19th C.) Treasurer of the Burgh of Hawick recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. He may be the same James who was a member of the Curling Club in 1812. He may also be the James who is recorded on Wood’s 1824 map as owner of property at the east end of Langlands Road and also along the east side of Roadhead. James (1801–80) son of James, he also became tenant at Borthwickbrae Burnfoot. He was listed on the 1834 electoral roll as a joint proprietor. He was one of the Tory supporters who received ‘Tully’s Mill’ at the 1837 election. He apparently withstood the mob longer than anyone else, getting loose 3 times before finally being thrown into the Slitrig (4 men were later found guilty of rioting). However, he later wrote to Bailie Wilson, thanking him for the loan of some clothes, and stating that he ‘felt only a little stiff, and that he was a few slight bruises’. He was at Borthwickbrae Burnfoot in 1841 and in 1851 was listed as tenant there, farming about 1200 acres and employing 4 labourers. He farmed at Howpasley from 1858, was farming 3800 acres there, and employed 9 people; he was still recorded there in 1868. In 1842 he married Dorothea (or Dorothy, d.1891), daughter of William Moffat, farmer at Garwal, Eskdalemuir. His children included: James (b.1844); William Moffat (1846–1910), the eldest surviving son; Jane (1848–1918); Helen Elliot (b.1850); John (b.1852); and Thomas (b.1854). His younger sons went abroad. James (b.1804/5) stockmaking stockmaker in Denholm, probably on Eastgate. In the 1860s he was listed as a stocking-maker in Denholm, suggesting he had his own business. His wife was ‘Barbary’ and their children included George and Barbara. There is an obelisk to their memory at Borthwick Waas. James (1814–1900) 4th surviving son of Hawick lawyer and Town Clerk John. He trained as a lawyer himself and was partner in the firm of George & James Oliver with his older brother. In 1841 he was living on Buccleuch Street with his father and siblings, and was described as a clerk. He could be the James who was ‘sub-distributor’ in the stamp office on Buccleuch Street in Pigot’s 1837 directory. He was living at Teviot Lodge in 1861. In the mid-1800s he was recorded as owner of parts of Roughheugh that had previously belonged to John and William Thomline, Adam and George Easton and James Hart. He had Mayfield House built on land that he inherited from his father. He was a Town Councillor, serving as Chairman of Wilton Parochial Board,
Oliver

Wilton Landward School Board and Wilton Heriters’ Committee. In 1852 he married Thomasina Pott (1830–80), sister of Gideon Pott of Knowesouth and daughter of George and Jane Elliot. Their children were: Elliot (b.1854), who was a partner with Geo. & Jas. Oliver for a while, but retired and left the district; Jane Pott (b.1858), who married John Elliot of Binks; Christian Watson (b.1860), buried at Ainazzhata, Spain; James John (b.1864), partner in the legal firm; Elizabeth Murray (b.1866), also buried at Ainzzhata; as well as George (b.1860), Mary Georgina (b.1866) and Thomas (b.1868), who all died young. He retired about 1893 and is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. Papers from roughly 1895–1919 are in the Borders Archive. James Rutherford (1817–1905) Auctioneer and Livestock Salesman of Bridge House and later Thornwood, only son of Andrew. He trained as a lawyer, and then joined his father’s auctioneering business. He was a leading figure in the town in Victorian times, being a Town Councillor, Magistrate, J.P. (from 1888), Chairman of Hawick Heritable Investment Bank, Governor of Hawick Savings Bank (1890–94), Secretary and Treasurer of the West Teviotdale Agricultural Society (1842–1905), founder member, Honorary Secretary and Treasurer of the Teviotdale Farmers’ Club (1859–1905), President of the Border Burghs’ Conservative Association (1878–92), President of the Archeological Society (1883–88). He was also a member of the Curling Club from 1844, being Secretary for several years, and the first Secretary of the Hawick Bowling Club. He was also Senior Magistrate 1857–58, resigning during the dispute over the railway line. He offered a site on Bridge Street for the new Evangelical Union (later Congregational) Church, but the congregation declined the offer at the time. He is said to have formed the Teviotdale Farmers’ Club after being black-balled from joining the other one (presumably the Agricultural society, formed earlier by Douglas of Cavers). He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1852. He had the splendid Thornwood House built and is believed to have been owner of the first car in Hawick (a photograph shows him with a chauffeur and another man-servant in the grounds of Thornwood). Oliver Crescent and Oliver Place are named after him; his monogram ‘JRO’ is above 2 of the dormer windows at No. 3 Oliver Place, and the carved head above the entrance may be his likeness. In about 1874 he is listed as owner of the parts of Weensland and the ‘particulate’ lands of Hawick that had previously been held by James Dickson, as well as part of Roughheng (earlier owned by James Knox). In 1849 he married Jane Rutherford (1828–55), daughter of builder Robert, and she died of typhus fever (after having 3 children). He secondly married his first wife’s niece, also Jane Rutherford (‘Mrs. Oliver’, the local historian), and they had 7 further children. His family included: Jane (1850–1910), who married Robert Inch; Andrew (b.1853), who died in infancy; Andrew Rutherford (b.1855), auctioneer; Alice Mary (b.1861), eldest daughter by his 2nd wife, who married Dr. John R. Hamilton; James (b.1863), also died in infancy; Catherine Brown (1864–1930), who married manufacturer Robert Innes and secondly married teacher H.H. Llewellyn; Evaleen (1866–1934), who married Spencer Waterfall from Sheffield; Blanche Ada (b.1868), who married Dr. Drummond from Liverpool; William (1869–1919), a solicitor; and Douglas (b.1871). At least one portrait of him exists. He is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. James (b.1819/20) farmer at Denholm Mill, son of Archibald. He is recorded there in 1851, and was miller on a directory of 1852. He married Mary Hall and their children included Archibald. James (1823–1908) born in Newcastleton, son of shepherd George and Elizabeth Irving. In 1835 he emigrated to New York with 2 other brothers, to join their brother John, while the last brother, George, stayed in Liddesdale. They moved to a farm in Lagrange County, Indiana, where his father died in 1837 (the ‘sick year’). The family moved to Mishawaka and he attended school, but had to leave to support his mother and siblings. He first worked as a ditch-digger, then a cooper, before starting in a grist mill then an iron company. He eventually went into business for himself, making ploughs. He hit upon a novel manufacturing process and patented a ‘chilled steel plough’ (where the cooling method made the cutting surface superior). The Oliver Chilled Plow Works became one of the largest in the U.S.A., and was a standard tool of pioneer farmers. At its height the company employed 2000 people and the factory covered 27 acres of covered space, making 200,000 ploughs a year. He was a great benefactor of the town of South Bend, building a hotel (called the Oliver Hotel) and an opera house. The town presented him with a gold cup inscribed with the word ‘Cophawholm’, which his son used as the name for his new house there in 1900. He married Susan Doty in 1844, and she died in 1902. They had 2 children, Joseph Oliver (who carried on the business) and Josephine (who married the secretary of the company). When he died his fortune was nearly £15,000,000, making him one of the richest ever Borderers at that time. James (b.1824) son of James, who was a baker in Hawick. He worked as a journeyman baker. He was recorded in Hawick in 1855, but may then have moved to Langholm. He married Mary Murray, who was from Langholm. Their children included: Alexander (c.1854–1934), born in Langholm, who emigrated to Tasmania and taught for 40 years at the Penguin State School; Agnes (b.1855), who was born in Hawick and married George King; Jack; Ralph; and Frank. James Walter (b.1840) born in Wilton Parish, son of George and Wilhelmina (or ‘Mina’) Telfer. The family emigrated to Canada in 1844 and he eventually became a surgeon in Niagara Falls. James (b.1844) son of James and Dorothy Moffat, he was born in Roberton Parish. He married Martha Pollard and their children included: Dorothy Moffat, who married William Baxter and another man named Gilbert; William James, who married Nora Estelle Brown; and Jana E., who married William Johnston. Members of the family lived later in Western Australia. Rev. James (1845–1918) born in Teviothead, son of John and Helen Sibbald. He was educated at Newmill and then at Hawick Grammar School. He graduated from Edinburgh University in 1863 and spent 2 years as an assistant teacher to Anthony Dodds at Buccleuch School (being succeed by J.A.H. Murray). He was assistant minister at Selkirk and Bedrule and then at Nelstorn before being ordained as minister at Tweedmouth in 1870 and moving to St. James’, Portobello in 1880. He was President of the Edinburgh Border Counties Association and represented them at the 1906 Jubilee celebration for the Hawick Archological Society. He was said to be a great orator. He married Elizabeth Young of Howford. James (d.1917) from Newcastleton, he was an apprentice draper in Hawick. He was said to have had a lifelong interest in Hawick and in drama. James Lindsay (1860–93) youngest son of Hawick lawyer George. He bought some property in New Zealand with his brother George Lindsay. However, he suffered from ill-health and returned to Scotland. He married Agnes Ellen (‘Nellie’), daughter of Peter Pennycook of New Hall. He took over running the farm at Greenriver (i.e. Hobsburn) for his ill mother-in-law’s brother Henry Elliot. He hunted regularly with the Jedforest Hunt, although he eventually lost the use of one arm. He had one son, Harry. He died at Greenriver and is buried in Hobkirk kirkyard. His wife and mother-in-law moved to Scarborough after his death. James John (b.1864) younger son of lawyer James, he worked in the family firm of Geo. & Jas. Oliver. In 1914, on the death of his cousin John Oliver of Lynnwood, he became senior partner in the firm. He also lived at Mayfield after his father died. He was a keen member of the Teviotdale Cycling Club and the Hawick Golf Club (where he was Captain for 2 years and Treasurer for 10 years). He was a founder member of the Border Club, and the last surviving original member. He was also Chairman of the Hawick Constitutional Club. He served as a Lay Elector, Church Warden and Treasurer (for over 50 years) for St. Cuthbert’s Kirk. During WWI he was a Special Constable and became Sheriff-Substitute of Roxburghshire in 1930. He retired at the age of 82, owing to failing eyesight. In 1894 he married Robina Pennycook Scott and their children were Edith Agnes Scott (‘Nancy’, who married Harry Usher of Courthill), Thomasina (who married Victor Henry Wells-Cole), James Scott (also W.S.) and Tommy Scott. He is buried at St. Cuthbert’s. James Scott, W.S. (20th C.) son of James John, he was also a partner in Geo. & Jas. Oliver. James Kenneth Murray, O.B.E., ‘Ken’ (1914–99) auctioneer and successful horse-trainer who lived at Hassendeanbank. He was the son of Douglas and great-grandson of Andrew. As an amateur jockey he won many races, including the Scottish Grand National of 1950 on ‘Sanvina’. As a trainer he had nearly 1,000 winners, including 5 Scottish Grand National winners, and in 3 separate seasons he had 56 winners. He is also the only trainer to have had a horse come second 3 times in the Grand National, ‘Wynburgh’. He was founding Chairman of the National Trainers Federation and was largely responsible for the renaissance of the Doncaster Bloodstock Horse Sales. He was also sometimes known as the ‘Beneign Bishop’ after one of his horses (or perhaps the other way around). He gave a speech at the Friday Hut in 1992. He married Joan Innes and they had children Susan (who married William Forster) and Douglas Stuart. He secondly married Rhona Wilkinson. A biography ‘The Benign Bishop’ (1994) was written by Dan Buglass. Jane (16th C.) recorded as tenant in Southdean Mill in a rental roll of 1541, along with Patrick and Marion. Janet (16th C.) tenant in Lustruther in 1541, along with Robert. Together they were tenants of lands valued at 8s 4d. Her name is given first, suggesting she was mother or older sister of Robert. Several other Olivers were tenants of 3 other parts of Lustruther. Janet (17th C.) recorded as ‘in Wool’ on a list of people who refused to take the Oath of Allegiance in 1684 and were declared rebels. It is unclear whether ‘Wool’ was Woll, or Wells or somewhere else around Jedforest. Jean ‘Jeanie Ma Lord’ (d.1819) said to be a descendant of ‘Hab o’ Hawick’ and cousin of ‘Clinty’. Although married, it is said that she retained her maiden name through strength of character and that her married name was Riddell or Turnbull. She was also known as ‘Jane’. She was well educated and her kitchen on Silver Street was a meeting place for the local literati. She wrote an account of the flood of 1767. In the 1837 election a Tory-supporter named Robert Paterson took refuge under the bed of her house (or former house) and was dragged out by the mob. She was known as a strong-willed eccentric, and her nickname came from her word being law among her circle of acquaintances. Stories are also told about how she was ‘fond of Dress and used to give considerable orders to the Drapers of the town’. She had a son called ‘Daft Robbie’, Dr. Oliver of the Navy. Desprie the story that her maiden name was Oliver, her death record records her as ‘Jeany Scott spouse to deceased Robert Oliver – Jeany my Lord’; hence she may have been the Jean Scott who married Shoemaker Robert Oliver in 1756. Her nickname may therefore be related to the ‘Lord’ nickname that some of the Olivers had. Jeremiah (b.1735) son of Thomas and Janet Middlemas. He was born in Southdean Parish, but lived most of his life in Crailing. He married Margaret Leadhouse and their children were: Stephen (1782–58), tailor; Robert (b.1784); Robert (again, b.1785); Andrew (b.1787); Richard (b.1788); and Agnes (b.1795). Some of his descendants emigrated to New Zealand. John (13th C.) merchant in Berwick, recorded in 1260. He is one of the earliest known Olivers in the Borders. John (15th C.) recorded as master of works for a bridge in Dumfries in 1460 and again in 1465. It is unclear how he was related to other Olivers. John (15th/16th C.) son of Robert in Strange and brother of Ingram. In 1494/5 he was listed among 8 Olivers and a Shiel when they had remission for communing with the English. He was also described in 1502 as brother of Ingram when he was allowed to pay a fine, along with Robert and David, ‘in Stryndis’, for being involved with several raids around Jedburgh, Ruecastle, Lanton and Bedrule. He and Robert (perhaps the same Robert who was his father) specifically stole 6 oxen and cows from Philip Ormiston at Maxton; Mark Ker of Dolphinston was surety for him. Additionally in 1502, along with his brother Ingram and David ‘Nae Guid Preist’, he had remission for stealing oxen from Ancrum, as well as sheep, a cow and other items from Maxton; Mark Ker of Dolphinston served as his surety. He was probably ‘Long John Oliver’ (‘longus’ in Latin), who, along with ‘Little John Oliver’ and David in Strynds was also allowed to pay a fine for stealing a list (long and detailed) of goods from Martin Wood in Whitfield in 1502, with Mark Ker of Dolphinston as his surety. Furthermore, in 1502 he was also charged with: stealing 2 oxen from Adam Moscrop in Jedburgh, along with his brother Ingram; stealing a horse and 4 oxen from Thomas Pringle in Smailholm; stealing a horse from John Cranston in Crailing; stealing 2 horses and some sheep from George Davidson in Raperlaw; and stealing a horse and goods from Bongate in Jedburgh. Once again Mark Ker was his surety. Finally in 1502, along with another John and John’s brother David, all from Strange, he was allowed to compone for stealing a horse from Ednam. Also in 1502 he Martin and Matthew componed for stealing 2 cows and more than 100 sheep from the Laird of Bedrule at Bedrule and Fulton; again Mark Ker was his surety. John (15th/16th C.) son of Gilbert in ‘stryndis’. In 1502 he and his brother James had remission for a series of crimes: stealing an ox from Ancrum; stealing 2 cows from Jedburgh; and treason. His surety was Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst. Also in 1502 he is recorded as son of Gilbert in ‘stryndis’ when he had remission for stealing a horse and a sword from Smailholm; his surety was again Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst. Additionally, along with his brother David and another John, all from Strange, he was allowed to compone in 1502 for stealing a horse from Ednam. Furthermore, in 1502, he was recorded as son of Gilbert ‘in kilclewis’ when he was allowed to compone, along with David for stealing 19 sheep and a cow from Maxton and six sheep from Muirhouselaw; Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst was his surety. He was also recorded in 1502 as son of Gilbert when, along with Martin in Strange, he was allowed to compone for stealing a cow from Bedrule; Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst was again the surety. He was also recorded as son of Gilbert in 1502 when he was allowed to compone, along with his brother David, for stealing a horse and a pot from Ednam. He was recorded further in 1502 being ‘in le stryndis’ when, along with David, he was allowed to compone for crimes committed against Gilbert Lamb at Jedburgh, including seriously wounding him; Andrew Kerr was surety. He is probably the same man as ‘Little John’ (‘parva’ in Latin) who had remissin in 1502, along with ‘Long John’ and David, for stealing goods from Martin Wood in Whitfield; Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst was his surety, suggesting he was the same John. John ‘Cadger’ (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1505 when ‘Rob with the Dog’ had remission for intercommuning with him and David ‘Nae Guid Priest’. He is there said to be ‘called Cageare’. John (16th C.) tenant at ‘Rontrehil’ (probably Rowantreehill) in 1541 along with Robert, paying 11 shillings. Several other Olivers (John, Margaret, Adam and Robert ‘the schireff’) were tenants in the other parts of the farm and may be related. John (16th C.) listed as tenant at ‘Rowntrehil’ along with Marion and Adam, paying 22 shillings yearly. This is separate from the John who was in ‘Rontrehil’ with Robert. John ‘Blackheid’ (16th C.) tenant in Lustruther in 1541, listed separately from another John and several other Olivers. He was tenant of part of Lustruther valued at 8s 4d. John (16th C.) tenant in Lustruther in 1541, along with Katherine and Marion, who were probably his daughters or sisters. Together they were tenants of lands valued at 25s, while several other Olivers were tenants of 3 smaller parts of Lustruther. John (16th C.) tenant at Whiteside in 1541 in Jedforest, along with Patrick, Gilbert and Andrew. Probably the same man was recorded as ‘Jake Ollyver of Whitside’ in a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII in 1544. George and ‘Patte’ Oliver were also listed as being at Whiteside, and hence probably related. John (16th C.) tenant in Harelawcleuch in 1541 along with Richard Oliver and Patrick Laidlaw. John (16th C.) tenant in Falside in 1541. His part of the lands was valued at 25s. Other tenants there included Ninian, Walter, ‘Little’ Roger, ‘Lang’ Roger and Robert, called ‘Laird’. John ‘Jock’ (16th C.) recorded as ‘Joke Ollyver of Lustrodder younger’ in 1544, when he was among Olivers and others who gave assurance to the English Crown. William, Hob and Ringan were also listed at Lustruther and so were probably related. John (16th C.) tenant at Slacks in 1541, along with Thomas, who was probably his father or brother. They paid 22 shillings yearly, with Charles renting the other part of Slacks. He was also recorded as being ‘of Slakis’ in a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII in 1544. John (16th C.) tenant at Nether Dykeraw in 1541, along with James, Michael, Adam and Robert. John ‘Jock’ (16th C.) listed among Scotsmen who pledged loyalty to the English Crown in 1544. He is recorded as ‘Joke Ollyver of Cresters’, which is probably a transcription error for Chesters. John ‘Jock’ (16th C.) recorded at ‘Fowden’ (probably ‘Sowden’, i.e. Southdean) in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. John (16th C.) recorded being from Bedrule when he was cited to appear before the Privy Council in 1566. He is probably the priest from Bedrule listed among several Borders clerics ordered to appear before the Lords of Secret Council in 1569; he was there recorded as ‘Maister Johnne Oliver in Bedroule’. He was presumably a pre-Reformation priest who was cited for not giving up the old ways. John (16th/17th C.) recorded as ‘John Oliphe in Tempilhall’ when he witnessed a sasine for the lands of Templehall and Brewlands in Rulewater in 1604. He was also one of the people who were directed by a court action to leave Templehall and Brewlands in 1605, this being brought by George Turnbull, acting as ‘tutor’ to Jean and Beatrix Turnbull. John (16th/17th C.) recorded as tenant in Lethem along with Simon Robson in 1623. 2 men were acquitted of stealing sheep from them. John (17th C.) tenant in the farm of Bank according to a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. He is probably John in Bank whose wife’s will, Grizel Hall, was recorded in 1685. John (17th C.) recorded as smith near Chesters (Southdean) in a list of tenants of Jedforest in 1669. He is probably related to the Thomas who was recorded as smith at Chesters at 1694 and could be one of the 2 men called John who were also listed as residents at Chesters in 1694. John (17th C.) recorded as tenant of ‘Rodes’ in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. It is unclear where this was exactly, but it is listed right after Whiteside. John (17th C.) recorded as tenant in Highlee in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. John (17th C.) tenant in ‘Slacks’, listed on the 1669 rental roll of Jedburgh Forest. George and William were also tenants at the same time. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Margaret Fowler and their children included: Agnes (b.1678); and Bessie (b.1680). The witnesses in 1680 were Adam and William Brown. John (d.1679) from Hobkirk Parish. He is recorded as one of the men banished to America in 1679 for being a Covenanter, and dying at Moul Head of Deerness, in Orkney, when their ship wrecked and they were ordered shut up beneath the hatches. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick who married ‘Janet Bo’ (presumably Janet Boa). Their son William was born in Hawick in 1674. John (17th C.) tenant in Falside. In 1679 he served as surety for his brother Thomas, ‘servitor of the Marquis of Douglas’, who was a Covenanter supporter. Perhaps the same John was recorded as tenant on the 1694 Horse Tax Rolls along with Steven. John (17th C.) listed ‘in Wadiespindles’ among people declared rebels in 1684 for refusing to take the Oath of Allegiance. John (d.c.1685) tenant in Blackleemouth when his will was recorded in 1685. John (17th C.) resident at Greena in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. John (17th C.) weaver in Hawick, on the 1693/4 subscribers’ list for the new Kirk bell. He was listed in 1694 among those on the west-side of Hawick who paid the Hearth Tax. He is probably the weaver who witnessed a baptism for Andrew Jar- who paid the Hearth Tax. He is probably the John (17th C.) resident of Southdean and neighbour- of some sort. John (17th C.) recorded as tenant in Strange in 1689, when he headed a list of Southdean parishioners who complained that their minister had failed to pray for William and Mary, resident of Strange in Southdean Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. He was surely related to George who was also recorded there. John (17th C.) resident of ‘hoa cleugh- fit’ according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. This entry comes just before Waterside, and so was presumably in the Jedforest area. John of Dinlabyre (17th/18th C.) 1st Oliver Laird, he was descended from the Olivers of Lustruther. He may be the tenant recorded at Lustruther and Hyndlee in 1694, when he paid tax on 6 hearths (so he was an important farmer in the area at that time). He probably purchased the Dinlabyre estate from the Elliots in about 1698. He is described as ‘elder’ of Dinlabyre in 1719 when he purchased the lands of Larriston from Robert Elliot. His eldest son was William, who succeeded to Dinlabyre, and married Mary, daughter of William Chisholme of that Ilk. His 2nd daughter Mary married John, son of William Chisholme of that Ilk (and therefore he had a son-in-law and a brother-in-law who were brother and sister!). It is unclear how he was related to the Olivers of Southdean and neighbouring areas. John (d.1739) last of the Olivers of Ashtrees. The lands passed to his only child Helen, and her husband, John Scott. John (1684/5–1750) tenant farmer at Stonedge. He married Helen ‘Andrum’, who died in 1762, aged 71 (or possibly 76). Along with their daughter Euphen, they were recorded on a memorial stone at old Abbotrule Kirk. John of Dinlabyre (d.bef. 1775) only son of William and Mary Chisholme. He may have been Sheriff of Roxburghshire, as well as Procurator-Fiscal. He also owned the lands of Over and Nether Larriston and others in Liddesdale. In 1748, along with his father, he gifted sacramental cups to Castleton Kirk. He is probably the ‘Jo. Olipher’ who paid the window tax in Castleton Parish for both Haggiehaugh and Dinlabyre House. In 1734 he married Violet, eldest daughter of Thomas Douglas, who was brother of Archibald Douglas of Cavers. He was succeeded by his eldest son William (b.1738); he may have had other sons, but their names are not known. His daughter Jean married Samuel Mitchelson, W.S., in 1753. His wife may be the ‘Lady Dinlabyre’ recorded in a hire of the Hawick Parish mortcloth in 1758. John (18th C.) referred to as ‘senior’ in an account of the 1767 flood. He and shoemaker Thomas Waugh ‘got to the top of the kiln’, but then needed people to throw ropes to save them. He may be one of the 3 shoemakers of that name who had children in the 1760s, perhaps the one who lived at ‘Bridge end’; however, he could be a John from an earlier generation. Rev. John (1707–1755) youngest son of Thomas, tenant in Southdean Mill. He was licensed by Jedburgh Presbytery in 1733, and became assistant minister at Southdean in 1736. In 1743 he took over as minister of Southdean on the death of his predecessor John Inglis. He paid the window tax at ‘the mance’ in Southdean Parish in 1748. His wife, Isobel Hall (daughter of Edward of Whitelee in Redesdale) died in London in 1774. Their children were Elizabeth, Thomas, Janet and Edward. John (18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. He married Susan Hope and their children included: George (b.1756); Margaret (b.1757); Susan (b.1760); and William (b.1761). The witnesses in 1757 were smith Robert Telfer and George (who was probably a relative), in 1761 were Bailie James Scott and gardener Thomas Miller. It is unclear how he was related to other shoemaking Olivers, however the other shoemaker John was witness to a baptism for him in 1760, along with blacksmith Robert Telfer. Given the names, he may have been the son of shoemaker George, born in 1724, with the other John being his cousin. He is probably the shoemaker John who witnessed baptisms (along with merchant Andrew Scott) for merchant William Veitch in 1757, 1759 and 1765 and for merchant Andrew Scott (along with William Veitch) in 1758 and 1762. John (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living at Cavers Knowes in 1745 when his daughter Isabel was baptised. John (18th C.) shoemaker of Hawick. He may be the son of Robert and Bessie Blackhall who was born in Hawick in 1734. He married Isabel Scott in 1756. Their children included: Agnes; Robert (b.1762), tailor in Hawick, probably ‘Clinty’; Elizabeth ‘Betty’ (1764–1838), who died in Peebles; Agnes (again, b.1766); Alison (b.1768); Andrew (b.1770); and William (b.1775). His son William was named as a second cousin in the 1808 will of William, ‘Auld Cash’; William’s brother was stated to be tailor Robert, who may have been ‘Clinty’. In fact he was probably a full cousin of ‘Auld Cash’. In 1760 he was witness to a baptism for another shoemaker of the same name, who may have been his cousin. Either he or one of the other shoemakers called John was witness for shoemaker James Brown in 1766. He is probably the shoemaker at ‘Bridge end’ whose death is recorded in Hawick in 1787. He may also be the John ‘senior’ who narrowly escaped from his house during the flood of 1767. John (b.1735) son of Walter and Margaret Turnbull, he was born in Hawick and was a shoemaker. He married Helen Currer in Hawick in 1763; she was living in Hawick Parish, but born in Bedrule Parish, daughter of James. Their children included: Helen (b.1764); Margaret (b.1766); Jane (b.1768), who married James, son of George and Agnes Douglas (who were related to the Timpendean Douglasses); and Agnes (b.1772). The witnesses in 1766 were James Currer (probably his father-in-law) and Robert Oliver (presumably a relative, but there were several contemporary men of this name) and in 1772 were James Elliot of Ormiston and surgeon Robert Erskine. James Haining suggests that he secondly married Agnes Ekron, but that is probably confusion with a different John (b.1740). John (b.1740) son of James, farmer at Earlside and Margaret Douglas, who came from the Trows family. He was a merchant in Hawick. He is probably the merchant who witnessed a baptism for Alexander Lockie in 1772. In 1766 he married Agnes (1748–80), daughter of merchant James Ekron and Isobel Richardson. Their children included: Isabel (b.1767), who died young; Elizabeth (‘Betty’, 1771–1844), who married linen merchant Charles Scott, and not George Hall from Duns, as some Hall of Philadelphia

(b.1791), who emigrated with his brother Robert; and Margaret (b.1789). John (18th/19th C.) mason listed at Stobs Castle in 1821 when he subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’. John (18th/19th C.) tenant at Denholm Mill. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He may have been father of Archibald, who was also at Denholm Mill in 1825. John (1770–1849) 2nd son of James, ironmonger and Cornet, he was grandfather of J.J. Oliver of Mayfield. He became a lawyer and set up in partnership with John Elliot about 1791. He is recorded in documents in Selkirk, perserved in the Walter Mason Collection, in 1807, 1810, 1813, 1814 and 1815. Oliver & Elliot were appointed agents for the Commercial Bank in 1820 (or shortly afterwards), and were listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory on Buccleuch Street. His house at 5 Buccleuch Street is marked on Wood’s 1824 map. He is probably also the ‘John Oliver Esq.’ who is shown on Wood’s map as owner of land around where Mayfield Park was built. He served as Hawick’s Town Clerk 1810–41, being originally appointed jointly with James Inglis (he was recorded as already Town Clerk in 1808 when his son James died). He was recorded as a freeholder in the Michaelmas Head-Court of Jedburgh in 1811. He arranged for the first Burgh Seal in 1817 (and in fact paid for the small version of the seal himself), which led to the design for the Town’s Coat of Arms. He was also one of the founding members of the Hawick Curling Club. In 1825 he subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’. In 1827 Oliver & Elliot were involved with a case in Selkirk regarding ‘Dowager Lady’s Elliot’s 4 wheel carriage’. For a while he was in partnership with his sons (at least William and Thomas) as woolen manufacturers; together with William Wilson & Sons they purchased Weensland Corn Mill in about 1836 and had Weendland Mill built there. In Pigot’s 1837 directory he is listed as agent of the Commercial Bank and also for North British Insurance, along with his son George; he is also listed as a writer on Buccleuch Street, with ‘John & George’ being listed separately as writers and ‘justice of peace clerks’. He was living on Buccleuch Street (at about No. 11) in 1841, with his children William, James, Thomas and Mary. On his retiral he was presented with a silver punch bowl by the Burgh. He married Jean (or Jane), daughter of George Fairley, merchant of Greenlaw. Their children were: James (1802–08), who died young; George (b.1803), also a lawyer; John (b.1805), farmer at Cærenrig and Whitropefoot; Jane (b.1807), who married William Aitcheson of Linhope; Christopher (b.1809), who married Liverpool merchant William Watson; Margaret (b.1810), who married Dr. Harrison of the East India Company; Mary (b.1812); William (b.1813), farmer at Hallrule and Barnes; James (b.1814) also a lawyer, who had Mayfield House built; and Thomas Fairley (b.1816), farmer at West Fortune, Haddington. He is buried at St. Mary’s. A portrait of him exists. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Anne Neil in Ashkirk Parish in 1800 (with his wife’s name given as ‘Agnes’). Their children included: Isabel (b.1801), who married John White of Midshielis; Janet (b.1802), who married Francis Napier Scott; Alexander (b.1804), miller and later keeper of Ashkirk Tollbar; Jane (b.1806); and James (b.1809). His widow could be the 80 year old pauper of the same name (born in Minto Parish) living with Barbara Scott in Denholm in 1851 (and who had a son Alexander in Minto in 1800). John (18th/19th C.) farmer at Whitfield in 1797, according to the Horse Tax Rolls. He owned 5 horses at that time. John (c.1786–1847) from the Hawick area. He emigrated to Canada. He married Agnes Ruthertford and their children were: Janet (c.1817–47); George (c.1820–1900), who died in Carberry, Manitoba; and Andrew (c.1827–50), who died in New Orleans. He and his wife died in Galt, Ontario. John (18th/19th C.) Hawick man known locally as a musician, probably on the fiddle (noted as such by W.N. Kennedy in 1863, with no additional information given). John (1781–1857) born in Bedrule Parish, son of James. He was miller of Hawick Mill. He is recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories and was farmer and miller on the Crescent in the 1841 census. He was also recorded as a nail-maker at Hawick Mill in the 1837 directory and a nail-maker on the Crescent in Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1851 he was at Hawick Mill House and recorded as farmer of 50 acres and nail-maker, employing 6 men. He was living with his sister-in-law Margaret Scott and nephew Robert Renwick. He was still listed as miller at Hawick Mill in Slater’s 1852 directory. John (b.c.1785) shoemaker at 4 Cross Wynd, recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories. In 1841 he was recorded on the Cross Wynd with his wife Margaret. It is unclear how he might have been related to other shoemaking Olivers. John (1789/90–bef. 1861) tailor in Newcastleton, listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories and Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1851 he was at about 15 North Hermitage Street. His daughter Anne was still living there in 1861. He could be the John who was recorded as subscription librarian in Newcastle in 1852. John (18th/19th C.) nailer at Teviothaugh. He was recorded in 1815 among Denholm men accused of ‘mobbing and defacing water bailifs’, but acquitted. John (b.c.1790) miller at Haughhead in Hawick Parish. He is listed there in 1841, along with his wife Alison; this could be Alison Turnbull, who married a John in Kirkton Parish in 1809. John (c.1800–bef. 51) framework knitter. He came from the same family as Mary, who married Walter Grieve. He was recorded on the Loan (around No. 6) in 1841. He married Margaret Purves, who was from Bedrule. Their children were: Margaret (b.c.1826); John (b.1828), who moved to Vancouver; Robert (1831–1906), who emigrated to South Australia; Helen (b.1834); Martha (b.1836); Isabella or Elizabeth (b.1838); and Janet (b.1840). By 1851 his wife was a widow at No. 6 Loan, and she was still there in 1861, working as a ‘Mangle Keeper’. John (b.1805) 2nd surviving son of Hawick Town Clerk John. He farmed at Caerlenrig and Whiteropefoot. He was named in 1837 along with his brother George, and Robert Anderson (also a lawyer in Hawick) among Tories who had jointly purchased land in Selkirkshire for the purposes of voting there. He was recorded at Caerlenrig in 1861, farming 80 arables acres and 600 acres of pasture and employing 5 people. He was recorded as farmer at ‘Rigg’ in 1868. He married Helen Sibbald and they had 4 sons and 2 daughters, John (b.1843), James (b.1845), George (b.1847), Jane (b.1849), Agnes (b.1852) and John. John (1809/10–70) cattle dealer in Lilliesleaf. He married Jane Young, who died at Dryden in 1893, aged 74. They are buried in Lilliesleaf Kirkyard. John (b.1843) son of farmer John and grandson of the Hawick Town Clerk of the same name who founded the family law firm. He resided at Lynnwood House. He became the senior partner in Geo. & Jas. Oliver. He married Euphemia, daughter of John Johnstone of Crailing Hall. Their daughters were Helen Sibbald, Mary Beatrice Simson and Elizabeth Rutherford. He was a prominent agriculturalist, being tenant of Whiterope and President of the Teviotdale Farmers’ Club. He was also Vice-President of the Sacred Harmonic Society in the 1880s. John (b.1850) eldest son of lawyer George. He succeeded his father as partner in the firm of ‘writers and bank agents’, ‘Geo. & Jas. Oliver’. He also became tenant in Borthaugh after his father’s death. In about 1874 he was recorded as owner of Burnflat, which had previously belonged to George. He represented Wilton Parish on the County Council for 9 years. He was an enthusiastic promoter of the Border Club. He is probably the John of Borthaugh who composed ‘March Militaire: The Border Mounted Volunteers’. He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1880. He married Edith Mary, daughter of Thomas Cobb of Kent (a family that can trace its ancestry back to the time of Edward II). Their children were: Mary Lindsay, a musician, who moved to Moline, Illinois; George Lindsay, a Captain in the West India Regiment; John Lindsay, who served in the Boer War and moved to Salisbury, Rhodesia; Thomas Lindsay, an engineer with the Chicago and Rock Island Railway Company, who died of typhoid in Moline in 1905; James Lindsay, who followed his brother to the U.S.A. as an engineer; Faulconer Lindsay, who became a farmer in New Zealand; Gordon Lindsay, who also went to Chicago to work for the railway; and Edith Margaret Lindsay. The entire family had the middle name ‘Lindsay’, in memory of his mother and to distinguish this branch of the family. John (19th/20th C.) eldest son of hosiery manager Robert. He trained as an architect, working for Alex Inglis. In WWI he was with the R.A.M.C. and received the Military Medal. He was later an architect in South Africa. John A.L. partner in the firm of Geo. & Jas. Oliver, the 5th generation of Hawick lawyers. He started practising in about 1977. Katherine (16th C.) tenant in Lustruther in 1541, along with John and Marion. Together they were tenants of lands valued at 25s, while several other Olivers were tenants of 3 smaller parts of Lustruther. Ken see James Kenneth Murray. Leo (13th C.) recorded as ‘Lyonas Oliver de Thorndon’ in the 1279 assize roll of Northumberland. He was also listed in Coquetdale as a fugitive. His lands were in England, but, nevertheless, he is an early example of this surname. Richard, son of Thomas, is also listed in 1279 and possibly related. Lyle (16th C.) tenant in Roughlee in 1544, when he was among Olivers who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He is listed as ‘Lyonell Ollyver of Rowghleis’. Lyle (17th C.) tenant in Rouchnairst according to a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. He is listed along with Thomas ‘minor’, who may have been related. Margaret (16th C.) recorded as tenant in Mervinslaw in a rental roll of 1541, along with her son William. Their steading was valued at 12s 6d. Other tenants at Mervinslaw included James and William alias ‘Merchant’. Margaret (16th C.) tenant at Hindhaughhead in 1541 along with her son Gilbert. They paid 25 shillings yearly. Margaret (16th C.) joint tenant in Wylie’s Hill in 1541, along with Margaret Wylie, paying 25s yearly. Another part of the farm was tenanted by (presumably a different) Margaret, paying 12s 6d yearly. Margaret (16th C.) joint tenant in the larger part of Westerhouses in 1541, along with Nicholas. Alexander was tenant of 1/3 of the farm. Margaret (17th C.) recorded in 1658 when she was fined by the Magistrates for calling Isabell Scott ‘witchesgait’, and saying that she devored her awine child. Margaret (17th C.) recorded being ‘in Slack’ in 1684 on a list of people who refused to take the Oath of Allegiance and were declared rebels. She was among a relatively small number of women who were prosecuted for being Covenanters. Margaret (18th C.) servant at Borthwickbrae in 1791, when she was working for John Elliot. Margaret (18th/19th C.) recorded along with Mary in Pigot’s 1837 directory as milliners and dressmakers on the High Street. Margaret (b.1778/9) grocer at Chesters in 1841 and 1851. She was born in Crailing Parish and was widow, probably of one of the local Olivers. Marion (16th C.) recorded as tenant in Southdean Mill in a rental roll of 1541 along with Patrick and Janet. Her name is listed as ‘Mariote Olivere’ (which is probably ‘Marion’, but could also be ‘Mary’). Marion (16th C.) listed as tenant at ‘Rowntrehil’ in 1541 along with John and Adam, paying 11 shillings. Several other Olivers (John, Robert and Robert ‘the schireff’) were tenants in the other parts of the farm and may be related. Marion (16th C.) tenant in Lustruther in 1541, along with her son William (‘the Lawyer’). Other tenants were 2 Johns (one called ‘Blackhead’), Janet Katherine and another Marion. Marion (16th C.) tenant in Lustruther in 1541, along with John and Katherine. Together they were tenants of lands valued at 25s, while several other Olivers were tenants of 3 smaller parts of Lustruther. She is separate from the mother of ‘the Lawyer’. Martin (15th C.) brother of Robert. He is recorded in 1493 when he was fined at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh for non-appearance. Other Olivers who were fined at the same time were Robert and James son of Gilbert, Matthew son of Geoffrey and Robert brother of Matthew. It is unclear how he might have been related to these other Olivers, or who his brother Robert was. However, probably the same Martin was recorded in 1494/5 as brother of Matthew (although it is possible that what is meant is brother of Robert in Strange), when a group of 8 Olivers and a Shiel had remission for communing with the English. In 1502, along with his brother Martin and James son of Gilbert, he was allowed to compone for stealing 200 sheep from the tenants of Jedburgh, Ruecastle, Lanton and Bedrule; his surety was Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst. Probably the same Martin in Strange was allowed to compone in 1502, along with John son of Gilbert, for stealing a cow from Bedrule; Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst was again the surety. Further in 1502 he was allowed to compone, along with Matthew (both in Strange) for stealing 4 lambs and an ox from George Russell in Fulton. Also in 1502 he Matthew and John componed for stealing 2 cows and more than 100 sheep from the Laird of Bedrule at Bedrule and Fulton; Andrew Kerr was again his surety. He is probably the Martin who was one of the 4 Olivers in Strynds who were sentenced to execution in 1502 for their ‘diverse reiffis, hereschippis, slauchtaris, and stouthis’; the others were Robert, David and Matthew. Martin (16th C.) recorded among Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII in 1544. His name was given as ‘Matyn Ollyver of Fawside’, with Ringan and Dandy Oliver also listed there. Martin (17th C.) resident of Slacks in Southdean Parish according to the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. His name appears to be written ‘Marin’. Matthew (15th C.) son of Geoffrey. He is recorded in 1493 when he was fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. His brother Robert was also fined at the same time, as well as James and Robert sons of Gilbert, and Martin brother of Robert. Probably the same Matthew is also recorded in 1493 when his brother Robert’s charges of common theft and delivery of stolen goods were suspended. Probably the same Matthew was recorded as brother of Martin (although the text is ambiguous) in 1494/5 among 8 Olivers and a Shiel who had remission for communing with the English. In 1502, along with his brother Martin and James son of Gilbert, he was allowed to compone for stealing 200 sheep from the tenants of Jedburgh, Ruecastle, Lanton and Bedrule; his surety was Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst. He is likely the same Matthew in ‘le stryndis’ who was allowed to compone in 1502 for bringing in 11 Nixons to steal a black horse from Corbet (in the company of Robert Oliver), 2 horses from Dolphinston and 10 sheep from the Laird of Bedrule; his surety was Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst. Further in 1502 he was allowed to compone, along with Martin (both in Strange) for stealing 4 lambs and an ox from George Russell in Fulton. Also in 1502 he Martin and John compone for stealing 2 cows and more than 100 sheep from the Laird of Bedrule at Bedrule and Fulton; Andrew Kerr was again his surety. He is likely to be the Matthew recorded in 1502 who was sentence to hanging in Jedburgh, along with Robert, David and Martin, all residing at Strynds (near Abbotrule); the judgement was on account of failure to find sureties. A note in the records of the Justice-aire adds that the men were delivered to the Sheriff, so presumably the sentence was carried out. Michael (16th C.) tenant at Nether Dykeraw in 1541, along with James, John, Adam and Robert. Michael (b.1820s) farmer at the Flex in 1841. His wife was Helen and they had a daughter Helen. Michael (b.1816/7) born at Whitlaw, he was Constable in Teviothead Parish. He lived at Teindside Slope in 1851, but by 1861 he had moved to Melrose. His wife was Mina and they had children Williamina and William. Michael ‘the Toff’, full back for Hawick Royal Albert. His nickname came from how he conducted himself on the pitch. He first played for the Legion and was signed by the Albert at the age of 18, remaining for 12 seasons. He was part of the team that won the East of Scotland League Championship in 1973/4. He later played for Kelso United and Hawick Waverley. Mrs. James Rutherford (1839–1914), born Jane Rutherford, she was the second wife of James and step-mother of Andrew R. The couple had 7 children together. She had a strong interest in local history, writing ‘Upper Teviotdale and the Scotts of Buccleuch’ (1887) and ‘Border Sketches’ (1904), as well as articles for the Transactions. She was usually referred to as simply ‘Mrs. Oliver of Thornwood’. She also had short stories published in Chambers Journal. She was involved in Conservative politics, being active member of the Primrose League. She ceremoniously laid the foundation stone for the new Post Office with a silver trowel in 1892; her husband owned all of the neighbouring land, and she was involved in establishing the Post Office there. She gave a speech at the unveiling of the Hornshole Monument in 1901. She was Guest at the Common Riding of 1902. In 1903 she unveiled the plaque on the Sclaterford Bridge. She was an active member of the Primrose League. Her portrait is in the Museum, by an unknown artist. Murray (19th C.) elder of Newcastleton U.P. Kirk in the latter part of the 19th century. Nellie ‘Nell o the Bar’ (19th C.) wife of Kit Paterson (descendant of ‘Pawkie’). The ‘bar’ presumably refers to the Loan Toll-bar, near where they lived. Nicholas (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502. He was the representative of John Rutherford of Hundalee to ‘give suit’ for Rutherford’s lands of Grubet at the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh. Nicholas (16th C.) joint tenant in the larger part of Westerhouses in 1541, along with Margaret. Alexander was tenant of 1/3 of the farm. Ninian (16th C.) tenant in Fulsid in 1541, with his part of the lands valued at 25s. Tenants of the other parts included John, Walter, ‘Little’ Roger, ‘Lang’ Roger and Robert, called ‘Laird’. Ninian ‘Rignan’ (16th C.) recorded as ‘Ranyon Ollyver’ in the same place as William of ‘Myrleslawe’ in 1544, when he was among a list of Scotsmen swearing allegiance to the English King. They may have been based at Mervinslaw. Ninian ‘Rignan’ (16th C.) listed at Falside among Scotsmen who pledged loyalty to the English Crown in 1544. His name is listed as ‘Ranyon Ollyver of Fawsid’, ‘Dandy Ollyver of the same’ is also listed and hence surely related. Ninian ‘Ringan’ (16th C.) recorded at Lustrether among Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII in 1544. Other men at the same place were William, Hob and Jock, younger. Ninian (17th C.) resident of Woodhouse according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. Ninian ‘Ringan’ (d.1736) farmer at Smailcleughfoot in Jedwater, near to Ferniehirst Mill. His name is also written ‘Ringam’. He was famed as one the most important of the local Olivers in his day, holding a position of trust by the Baron of Ferniehirst and being known for his great strength. Many stories of his feats were current in Jedforest into the 19th century. One tale involves the liberation for 2 friends from Newcastle Jail. Another involves him shooting the dogs of some hunters who rode through his corn (this being amplified in James Telfer’s poem ‘Auld Ringan’); they were said to have reported him to the King, leading to his arrest by royal warrant. A different version says that he was a Covenant, who fought at Bothwell Bridge, then supposedly slew a Highlander champion in single combat and later came to blows in a dispute with the young Marquess of Lothian, ending up imprisoned in Edinburgh Tolbooth. After the Revolution he is said to have returned to his farm and attended the Cameronian Chapel at Denholm. His tale is described by Sir Walter Scott, in Lang’s ‘Stories of the Border Marches’ and in the ballad by James Telfer (published in 1824 and revised for the 1852
The extent to which any of the details are true is completely unclear, although Abraham Oliver is recorded as resident at Smaisecleughfoot in the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls, and could have been a close relative – ‘Auld Ringan sat i’ the Smaisecleugh Tower, Even at his ain hearth-stane; And his mind did roam on youthful deeds, Of days that now were gone’ [JTe]. He is also said to have died in jail in Edinburgh and to be buried in Greyfriars Churchyard. His ‘Andrea Ferrara’ sword was kept by the inventor James Veitch, whose great-grandmother was his sister; it was later owned by the Veitches of Inchbonny. He had a son, Robert. Ninian ‘Ringan’ (d.1736) tailor in Falside. In 1698 his twin sons Stephen and Andrew were baptised in Southdean Parish, Patrick (16th C.) recorded in 1538 being made ‘chamberlain’ responsible by the Crown for collecting the rentals in Jedforest. He was ‘Sir’ (or ‘domino’), probably meaning that he was a priest rather than a knight. He was allowed rents from 40 shillings worth of land. It is unclear how he was related to other Oliv- ers. Patrick (16th C.) tenant at ‘Rouchchesteris’ in Jedforest according to a rental roll of 1541. It is unclear where this farm was, but probably not near Strange and Southdean Mill, where he may have been related to other Oliv- ers. Patrick (16th C.) tenant in Southdean Mill in 1541, along with Janet and Marion. Patrick ‘Pate’ (16th C.) tenant at Whiteside in Jedforest in 1541, along with Gilbert, Andrew and John. His name was listed first and so he may have been the senior family member. He is also recorded as ‘Patte Ollyver of Whiteside’ in a list of Scots- men who swore allegiance to Henry VIII in 1544. ‘Jake’ and ‘Gorge’ Oliver were also listed as being at Whiteside in 1544, and hence probably related. Patrick ‘Pate’ (16th C.) first man listed among the Oliv- ers who swore allegiance to Henry VIII in 1544. He was listed as ‘Patte Ollyver of the Bushe’, his lands probably being Bush near Bonchester. Patrick (17th C.) resident at Has- sendean recorded in 1684 among the men declared as rebels for refusing to conform to Episcopalian- ism. He may be the Partick who married Bessie Scott and whose children, baptised in Roberton Parish, included Isobel (b.1681), with witnesses William Scott and John Armstrong. Patrick (17th C.) recorded as one of the tenants in Falside in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. 2 men with this same name were listed along with other Oliv- ers, and a Common and a Laidlaw. Patrick (1720/1– 79) died at Bridgehouse in Castleton Parish. His wife Margaret Beattie died in 1793, aged 60. He is probably an ancestor of James and Peter, who were merchants in Newcastle. Patrick (18th/19th C.) recorded on the 1794 and 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as farmer at Westshiels in Southdean Parish. He had 4 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. He also paid the dog tax in the same year. He may also have been known as Peter. His children included: Patrick (b.1783); and James (b.1785). Other children may have been Mary (b.c.1779), Margaret (b.1785), Andrew (b.1786), Thomas (b.1786) and Isabel (b.1788). Peter (16th C.) described as ‘sontymes receipt with’ (i.e. reset with) George Ker of Primside Mill when he was accused by the English Warden of stealing sheep from him in 1589. Peter (18th C.) resident of Southdean Parish. He lived for a while at Hyndlee and was shepherd to ‘Brooklaw’ (i.e. on nearby Brockie Law). A story is told by his son Robert, recounted in ‘The local historian’s table book’ (1844) of how he encountered one of the fairy folk. Peter (1783–1861) son of Patrick, tenant at Westshiels in Southdean Parish. He married Mary Fowler and their children John (1826–1917) and Robert (b.1827) were born in Edinburgh. He died at Cannomills, Edinburgh. Peter (1789/90–1845) son of James and Jane Armstrong, he was born at Burnmouth in Castleton Parish. He was a mer- chant in Newcastle, but was declared bankrupt in 1817, with Walter Armstrong of Burnmouth appointed as trustee. He is ‘P. Oliver’, merchant in Castleton, in the subscriber list for William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821 (ordering 2 copies). He married Elizabeth Murray, who died in 1864, aged 75; she was probably daughter of Thomas Murray and Janet Inglis. Their children included: James (1812/3– 31); Jeanie (1813/4–35); David (1817–18); Janet (1819–28); Thomas (1820/1–41); David (again, b.1823); John (1825/6–33); Alexander (1830– 31); Janet (again, 1833–34); and James (b.1837). Most of their children died young, in either Edin- burgh or at Whisgills. Philip (16th C.) recorded among a list of the occupiers of Newton in Bedrule in 1531. Richard (13th C.) listed in the 1279 as- size roll for Northumberland. He appears there as ‘Ricardo filio Thomae Oliver’, and so his fa- ther was Thomas. He seems to have been re- connected with the lands of St. Paul, probably in Coquetdale. He may be related to the Leo who also appears in the same roll. Probably the same ‘Ricardum Oliver’ is listed on a panel deciding on the lands held by the Earl of Dunbar in Northumber- land in 1290. Richard (16th C.) tenant in Harelawcleuch in 1541 along with John Oliver and Patrick Laidlaw. Richard (17th C.) listed as resident of Bairnkine along with Andrew and Robert in 1684 when they were declared fugitives for refusing to take the Oath of Allegiance. They were surely all related. If he managed to escape persecution then he may be the Richard who was given the rank of Lieutenant in the Roxburghshire Fencibles after the Revolution. Richard (17th C.) cottar at Foderlee in Abbotrule Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Robert (13th C.) listed in a 1288 receipt for the fee of Alexander, son of the Earl of Dunbar, made at Berwick. He was recorded as ‘Robertus Oliuer’ Burgess of Berwick in 1291 as part of the Ragman Rolls. Also in 1291/2 he had 2 letters of safe-conduct, and was there described as a merchant of Berwick. In a court case in 1293 (where a man stole money from Newcastle) he is referred to as Constable of Berwick Castle. Robert (14th C.) recorded as ‘Olyver’ in 1387 when he witnessed a document for Sir Thomas Strother in Newcastle. He is one of the earliest known Olivers who may have a local connection. Robert (15th/16th C.) tenant in ‘le stryndis’ (i.e. Strange) recorded at the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh. His name headed a list of 8 Olivers and a Shiel who had remission in 1494/5 for the crime of commuting with the English. The others listed were his sons Ingram and John, as well as Matthew, Martin (‘his brother’, although it is unclear if this means Martin’s brother or his), Robert son of Gilbert (who was therefore clearly a different man), James and William (‘his brothers’, probably meaning Robert’s brothers, i.e. other sons of Gilbert) and Gilbert Shiel in Bedrule. It is possible he is the same Robert as the son of Geoffrey. He was also recorded as ‘in Stryndis’ in 1502 when, along with David, he had a remission for stealing 101 sheep from William Ker at ‘Dernewik-mure’; Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst served as surety. Additionally he is probably the Robert who was mentioned as a colluder with Matthew in bringing in a gang of Nixons who stole a horse from Andrew Ker in Corbet. He is probably the Robert who was sentenced to be hanged later in 1502 (along with David, Martin and Matthew) for failure to ‘fynde sufficient sonerties for satisfactioun of partis’. These 4 were either brothers or a mixture of 2 generations (more likely if this was the same David). Robert (15th C.) son of Gilbert. He is recorded in 1493 when he was fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. His brother James was also fined at the same time, as well as Matthew son of Geoffrey, Robert brother of Matthew and Martin brother of Robert; William, son of Gilbert, was also fined, and was probably his brother too. In 1494/5 he was listed (again as son of Gilbert) among 8 Olivers (including Robert in ‘Stryndis’) and a Shiel who had remission for the crime of commuting with the English. Robert (15th C.) brother of Matthew. He is recorded in 1493 when he was fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. Matthew son of Geoffrey (who may be the same Matthew who was his brother) was also fined at the same time, as well as James and Robert sons of Gilbert, and Martin brother of Robert. The same Robert, brother of Matthew, was also recorded in 1493 when his charges of common theft and delivery of stolen goods (after the date of his previous remission) were suspended. Robert (d.bef. 1502) murdered by a large group of Turnbells and others. The perpetrators were all fined in 1502 for failure to appear to answer to the charge. The 23 named men were (in the order they appear in the records) George Turnbull in Weens, John Turnbull in Gatehousecote, Andrew Turnbull in Gatehousecote, William Turnbull in Gatehousecote, Lawrence son of William Turnbull in Bonchester, David and Andrew Shiel, Hugh Shiel, Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule, Andrew Turnbull in Bedrule, William Turnbull brother of the Laird of Bedrule, John Turnbull ‘Blew John’, Andrew Turnbull, Alan Davidson ‘Taburner’, John Turnbull in Ruecastle, John Turnbull in Jedburgh, John Turnbull in Wells, Adam Turnbull in Wells, Ninian Turnbull, David Turnbull in Bonchester, Patrick Turnbull, Philip Turnbull and William Turnbull in Bonchester. There is no information given about the circumstances of his death, e.g. why so many people could be held responsible for his murder (and it seems that many of them must have been pardoned later). It seems likely he was closely related to the Olivers of Strynds. Robert (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 as ‘brother’s son of David’ (although which brother is unclear), along with Robert in Lustruther, James ‘Burgess’ and Robert Waugh. They had remission for stealing cattle and goods from ‘kelshop’ and for killing Robert Brig and Adam Bairnsfather; Ralph Ker of Primside Loch was surety. It is unclear if he was the same as one of the other Roberts. Robert (15th/16th C.) tenant in Lustruther. He was listed in 1502 along with Robert ‘brother’s son of David’, James Oliver ‘burgess’ and Robert Waugh in Mervinslaw, when they had a remission for their crimes. This included stealing 200 sheep, 29 cows, 4 horses and other goods from John and Adam ‘Barnisfader’ at ‘Kelshop’, as well as killing Robert Brig and Adam ‘Barnisfader’; his surety was Ralph Ker of Primside Loch. Robert (15th/16th C.) recorded in Swinnie in 1502. George Douglas, Master of Angus, was fined for failing to enter him at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. Robert ‘Rob wi the Dog’ (15th/16th C.) recorded receiving remission in 1505 for intercommuning with rebels David ‘Na-gude Preist’ and John ‘Cageare’. His nickname was given as ‘Rob with ye dog’. He may be the same as one of the other contemporary Roberts. Robert (16th C.) tenant at ‘Rontrehil’ (probably Rowantreehill) in 1541 along with John Oliver. Another Robert, nicknamed ‘the Sheriff’, was tenant in another part of the same lands. Robert ‘the Sheriff’ (16th C.) tenant at ‘Rontrehil’ in Jedforest in 1541, paying 11 shillings. His is recorded as ‘alias the schireff’. Other Olivers (Richard, John, another John, Marion and Adam) rented the other parts of the farm of Rowantreehill. Robert (16th C.) tenant in Lustruther in 1541, along with Janet. Together they were tenants of lands valued at 8s 4d. Several other Olivers were tenants of 3 other parts of Lustruther. Robert (16th C.) tenant in Lustruther in 1541, along with William (‘the Lawyer’) along with Marion (his mother). Their part of the lands were valued at 8s 6d. Other tenants there were 3 Johns (one called ‘Blackhead’), Katherine and another Marion. Robert ‘Laird’ (16th C.) tenant in Falside in 1541. His lands were valued at 12s 6d. Other tenants there included Ninian, Walter, ‘Little’ Roger, Robert, Alexander, John and ‘Lang’ Roger. His name is given as ‘Roberto Oliver, alias Larde’. He may have been an ancestor of the Olivers in Hawick called ‘Lord’ in later generations. Robert (16th C.) tenant at Nether Dykeraw in 1541, along with James, Michael, John and Adam. Robert (16th C.) tenant in part of Wylie’s Hill in Jedforest in 1541. The other tenants were 2 Margaret Olivers and Margaret Wylie. Robert ‘Hob’ (16th C.) recorded as ‘Hobe Ollyver of Lustrodder’ in 1544, when he was among Olivers and others who gave assurance to the English Crown. William, Jock, younger and Ringan, were also listed at Lustruther, and so were probably related. They were probably all descended from the earlier Robert in Lustruther. Robert ‘Hob’ (16th C.) recorded among Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII in 1544. He was listed as ‘Hobr Ollyver of Eshetres’. Robert (16th C.) recorded in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was listed as being at the same place as ‘William Ollyver of Myrensawle’, which was probably Mervinslaw. Robert ‘Hab o Hawick’ (15th/16th C.) supposed ancestor of Hawick’s Olivers, who lived at ‘the Garrison’. First mentioned in print in Wilson’s 1825 ‘History of Hawick’, his story was dramatised in 1829 by Sir David Erskine as ‘James V; or, the Warlike Days of Hab o Hawick’. Apparently ‘Hab’ refused to walk from his house at the corner of the Howegate and Silver Street to Drumlanrig Tower when invited by the visiting King, stating ‘Tell your master that here sits Hab o Hawick at his ain fireside, and a fig for King James and a’ his kin!’. This led to him being summoned to Edinburgh so the King could reciprocate at Holyrood. He was stated to be an old veteran at the time of the incident, which happened shortly before the death of James V. It is also said that he would visit ‘Auld Hawick’ (Hardie’s Hill) every Sunday. How much of this story is true is uncertain, but there seems no reason to doubt that he existed and had some interaction with the King. Robert ‘Hob’ (16th C.) recorded in a Warden Court of 1559, involving representatives from the Scottish and English sides. He produced a ‘bill of y° Rotrohill’ (presumably a list of items that had been stolen from him) for livestock and goods with Englishman William Hall. Robert ‘Hob’ (16th/17th C.) recorded in a court case of 1605 as a tenant in Wauchope in Rulewater. Robert ‘Hob’ (16th/17th C.) listed as ‘called of Blanche’ in 1605 when he was declared as a fugitive at a court in Jedburgh. Robert (16th/17th C.) tenant in Longnewton Mill. Along with George, stabler in Edinburgh, they complained to the Privy Council in 1612 that John Scott in Edinburgh had wounded them. Robert ‘Lord Olifer’ (17th C.) cordiner who was another of the Silver Street

Olivers. He was probably son of the Walter who was mentioned in 1666. In 1651/2 he was fined £5 by the Bailies for refusing to act as guide for leading Cromwell's troopers to Langholm. He may be the same Robert ('shoemaker, elder') who contributed to the town bell in 1693/4. He and his son Robert were probably the 2 men of that name listed on the west-side of Hawick on the 1694 Hearth Tax records. His children probably included: Margaret (1667/8–1719), who married Bailie Robert Hardie; Robert, shoemaker who married Agnes Aitkin in about 1696; and William (b.1676), who married Christian Hart. Robert (17th C.) tenant farmer at Dykeraw and ancestor of the Hawick lawyers. He may have been born in Hawick Parish in 1643 (son of Walter and Agnes Paisley), but there are several contemporary men of the same name. He was recorded on a list of rents for the Jedforest area in 1669. Gilbert, also listed at Dykeraw, was probably his son. In 1670 he married Isabel Hair (b.1646 in Melrose) in Jedburgh. Their son Robert was also farmer at Dykeraw. Robert (17th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Helen Elliot and their children included: Walter (b.1672); and Bessie (b.1675). Robert (d.c.1685) tenant in Mervinslaw when his will was recorded in 1685. Robert (17th C.) tenant in Bank. In 1684 he and Bessie (probably his wife, but perhaps his sister) refused to take the Oath of Allegiance and were declared rebels. Robert (17th C.) listed as resident of Bairnkine along with Andrew and Richard in 1684 when they were declared fugitives for refusing to take the Oath of Allegiance. They were surely all related. Robert (17th C.) resident of Slacks in Southdean Parish according to the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. Robert (17th C.) recorded as resident at Stonedge on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Robert (17th C.) resident at Swinnie according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Robert (17th C.) recorded at Bank on the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. Robert ‘Lord Oliver’ (17th/18th C.) probably son of shoemaker Robert, he is listed as ‘cordiner’ on the 1693/4 list of contributors to the town bell. He and his father are probably the 2 Roberts, residents of the west-side of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. He may be the shoemaker Robert, who (along with shoemaker George, presumably a relative) witnessed a baptism in 1699 for cooper John Turnbull. He is probably the ‘Robert Olifer called Lord’ whose son John was baptised in 1704 and whose daughter Isobel was baptised in 1708. He may also be the Robert who, along with his wife, purchased a tenement in Hawick in 1713. He is probably the shoemaker Robert who witnessed a baptism in 1718 for fellow shoemaker Walter Scott. He married Agnes Atkins (or Aitkin) about 1696. Their children included: William (b.1701); John (b.1704); and Isobel (b.1708). Other probable children of his were: Robert (b.c.1699), who was also a shoemaker and married Bessie Blackhall; and George, also a shoemaker. A baptismal witness in 1701 was carrier William Aitken, who was probably related to his wife and a witness in 1704 was carrier John Aitkin (presumably also related to his wife); the other 1704 witness was gardener John Gardner. The 1706 witnesses were Bailie George Martin and gardener John Gardner and in 1708 were Bailies George Martin and Robert Hardie. In 1723 there is mention in the Town Book of the Burgess money for ‘William Olifer, brother to Lord Olifer’, and this may have referred to his sons Robert and William. Robert (17th/18th C.) from Jedburgh Parish. In 1713 he married Agnes Bennet (probably from the Ben- nets of Chesters) in Ancrum Parish. Robert (c.1699–1764) shoemaker in Hawick, probably son of Robert and Agnes Atkins. It seems likely that he was the ‘Lord Olifer’ who in 1723 gave in the Burgess money for his brother William; if so then he was also nicknamed ‘Lord’ and his brother was merchant William, father of ‘Auld Cash’. He may be the Robert who (along with George) witnessed a baptism in 1726 for another George. He is probably the Hawick shoemaker who had bonds with the Bailies, officers and Burgesses of Selkirk in 1729, 1731, 1739 and 1744, with his son William giving a discharge in 1768. He may also be the Robert who had a discharge with the Burgh of Selkirk in 1759. He was involved with the 1740 bond for the construction of the Teviot Bridge. He was feued the western part of Howlands by George Langlands in 1742. He is probably the Hawick shoemaker Robert who had another discharge from the Burgh of Selkirk in 1743 (at the same time as John Blackhall, probably his father-in-law) and further discharges in 1759 and on 2 bonds with Selkirk in 1761. He is probably also the Robert recorded as ‘factor to children of deceased William Olifer late merchant in Hawick’ recorded in discharges in Selkirk in 1744, 1745, 1749 and 1752; this seems likely to have been his brother William. He is probably the shoemaker of that name who (along with William, junior, merchant, probably his brother) witnessed a baptism for baker John Kedie in 1743. He is probably the shoemaker Robert who in 1746 witnessed baptisms in Hawick for merchant Andrew Ekron and for labourer William Graham. He married Bessie (or ‘Betty’) Blackhall in Hawick in 1728; she was daughter of John Blackhall (shoemaker in Selkirk) and Catherine Currer, born in Selkirk in 1703 and died in Hawick in 1776. Assuming he is the same man who married Bessie Blackhall, their children included: John (b.1730); Catherine (b.1732), who married Walter Wilson, ‘Haumess Wat’; John (again, b.1734), shoemaker; William (b.1738); Agnes (b.1740), who married Bailie Walter Purdom; Thomas (b.1742); and twins George and Bessie (b.1744). The witnesses in 1730 were John Blackhall (his father-in-law) and George Oliver (surely a relative), in 1742 were merchant James Douglas and gardener Robert Turnbull and in 1744 were John Blackhall again and George again. His son Robert carried on the family shoe-making business, and was probably born before the other children. He was related to merchant William, ‘Auld Cash’, perhaps his uncle, and therefore brother of William, father of ‘Auld Cash’. In 1743 he witnessed a baptism for James Oliver, tenant in Earlside and another for William ‘junior merchant’ (probably his brother). He is probably the Robert ‘Senior’ who (along with merchant William) witnessed a baptism for Walter Wilson and Catherine Oliver (his daughter). Robert (18th C.) recorded being paid in 1751, along with Robert Easton and their workmen, for work on the new Teviot Brig. This was explicitly for ‘helping the far pillar of the bridgem and 12 drains’. He was presumably a mason or similar tradesman. Robert (1732/3–89) son of Thomas, tenant farmer at Chesters. He was farmer at Langburnshiels. He was one of the founding group of seceders, who met in Hawick in 1763, leading to the establishment of the Green Kirk. He was recorded at Langburnshiels on the Horse Tax Rolls in 1786–90, being succeeded by his son Thomas. In 1763 in Hobkirk Parish he married Margaret (1737/8–1823), daughter of Andrew Curror (or perhaps ‘Currie’). Their children included: Isabella (1774/5–81); Agnes (1777/8–83); and Thomas, tenant in Lilliesleaf. Robert of Burnflat (18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. He was owner of the lands of Burnflat in 1767 when the Duke of Buccleuch brought the first case proposing division of the Common. He was also listed as one of the neighbouring land-owners who gained from the Division of Hawick Common in 1777. He received a little over 10 Scots acres of what had previously been the Town’s land. He also appears to have held the land near Myreslawgreen called Birsleton. He is probably the Robert of Burnflat who (along with baker James, his son) witnessed a baptism for James Farquhar and Margaret (perhaps his daughter). He married Isabel Kenmure and their children included: William (b.1757); Robert (b.1759); Peter (b.1762); Agnes (b.1763); James (b.1765), baker in Hawick, who was also ‘of Burnflat’; and Isabel (b.1767). The witnesses in 1757 were shoemaker George and tobacconist Francis Scott, in 1759 were baxter Walter Ruecastle and weaver George Turnbull and in 1765 were George Oliver and George Deans, junior. His son James was listed as a ‘second cousin’ in the 1808 will of William, ‘Auld Cash’; he may have himself been a full cousin of ‘Auld Cash’. It is unclear who his parents were, but one possibility is George and Margaret Aitkin; shoemaker George was a witness to the 1757 baptism (along with tobacconist Francis Scott), supporting this idea. Robert (c.1730–1803) shoemaker of the Cross Wynd, son of Robert and Bessie Blackhall. He is easily confused with at least one other contemporary shoemaker of the same name. He married Jean (or Jane) Scott in 1756. Their children included: Robert (b.1757); William (b.1760); Agnes (b.1764); and Elizabeth (b.1766). The 1757 baptism was witnessed by shoemakers Robert Oliver (presumably his father) and William Scott (perhaps his father-in-law). William Scott also witnessed the 1766 baptism, along with John Oliver (perhaps his brother). His wife may have later been known as ‘Jeanie My Lord’. His son William may be the surgeon in Middleton, Teesdale, England who died in 1816, aged 56. He is probably the Robert who witnessed a baptism for shoemaker John in 1766. Robert (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. In 1770 he is recorded at Brieryyards. He married Isabel ‘Brookie’ or ‘Brackie’ in 1760 and their children included: John (b.1762); Isabel (b.1764); Barbara (b.1766); Thomas (b.1768); Isabel (again, b.1770); Samuel (b.1772); Agnes (b.1774); and Margaret (b.1779). The witnesses in 1770 were Robert Easton and Walter Oliver. Dr. Robert (1743–1823) son of James and Margaret Douglas. He was a surgeon in North Berwick. He married a Miss Russell and they had a family of 3 daughters (Margaret, Mary and Isabella) and 1 son (who was in the Navy and received a grant of land in Canada). Robert (18th/19th C.) shoemaker in Hawick, probably related to other shoemaking Oliviers. In 1776 he married Helen Scott in Hawick (the parish record stating ‘Almost forgot that Robert Oliver and Helen Scott both of this Parish . . .’). Their children included: Margaret (b.1779, probably); Mary (b.1782); John (b.1783); William (b.1785), hind at Langraw, who emigrated to the U.S.: Helen (b.1785); Janet (b.1786); and Jane (b.1787). The witnesses in 1779 were tanner John Elliot and merchant James (probably a relative), and in 1786 were ex-Bailie John Elliot and shoemaker Thomas Wallace. Robert (18th/19th C.) another of the shoe-making family. In 1788 (and still listed in 1811) he is recorded owning part of Roughheugh (acquired from Langlands of that Ilk), valued at £16 11s 8d, as well as part of the ‘particale lands’ in Hawick; his Hawick lands were later divided between Alex Graham of Berwick, the heirs of William Elliot and the West U.P. Congregation. He could be the Robert ‘junior, shoemaker’ who witnessed a baptism in 1790 for James Rae and (along with James Rae) witnessed a baptism in 1791 for bookbinder Walter Elder. He could be the Robert who is marked on Wood’s 1824 map as owner of land off Damside, and also to the north of Roadhead. His daughter Jean married James Edgar. Robert (18th/19th C.) farmer at Knowesouth, recorded as owner of 2 horses on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Robert (18th/19th C.) farmer at Bridgehouse in Castleton Parish, listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as owner of 2 horses. He was also taxed for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797. Robert (18th/19th C.) recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as farmer at Milsingtonhaugh. Robert ‘Clinty’ or ‘Robbie Clinty’ (1772–1847) tailor and town councillor, getting this nickname from his old family house, Clinthead, which stood on a rock at the Auld Brig. He was a descendant of ‘Hab o Hawick’, several generations of Olivers having lived in that area. He was apprenticed to William Sanderson, tailor, later became the quartermaster of the tailors on the Council and was elected a Town Councillor in 1804. He was known to be emphatic in expressing his opinions. He is listed as a tailor on Silver Street in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory, but must have retired before the 1837 directory. In his old age he moved from Clinthead. He is listed living on the Kirkwynd (in the same house as the Hardie family) in the 1841 census. He was immortalised in the words of the song by J.E.D. Murray. He may be the tailor Robert, who is mentioned as a second cousin in the 1808 will of William ‘Auld Cash’; if so he was son of shoemaker John. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of London who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He must have had a local connection. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Southdean. In ‘The local historian’s table book’ (1844) he is said to have lived at ‘Southdean in Jedburgh, and died about a dozen years ago’. He recounted a story of his father Peter encountering a fairy at Hyndlee. Dr. Robert ‘Daft Robbie’ (d.1828) of the Navy, son of Robert and ‘Jeanie My Lord’. He may have been the Robert born in 1757. He was said to have been educated in Edinburgh. He was ‘sun-struck’ in India and returned to Hawick to lead a retired life. It is said that he spent much of his time among the rocks of the Slitrig below their Silver Street home, playing with the children there – ‘The pebble stanes – Daft Robbie’s joy Was aye to aid them in sick ploy, And by the hand, stay feet sae sma’, ‘Amang the rocks when like to fa’’ (AD). Robert (b.1787–1871) son of John and Margaret Douglas. He lived for a while with his father at Essenside, where his son John was baptised. He married Elizabeth, daughter of James Hardie and Elizabeth Hunter. Their children included: Isabel (b.1812), who must have died young; John (b.1813); Isabel (b.1814), who settled in California and married a man from Vermont; Margaret (b.1816); George Hardy (b.1818); James Douglas (b.1820), who also went to California, but returned to Westville; Agnes (b.1822); Helen (b.1824), who married John Archibald Hamilton in California; William (1826–61), who went out to Cailfornia, was one of the first men to drive cattle through the Sierra Nevada and was killed by Indians at Shelter Cove; and Mary (b.1830). In 1813 he, his wife and infant child emigrated to Canada, along with his brother Henry. They settled in Pictou County, Nova Scotia. Robert (b.c.1790) farmer at Heap, recorded in 1841. He was born in Kirkton Parish. In 1851 he was a shepherd living on Wilton Place. His wife was Betty. Robert William (b.1822) son of James and Elizabeth Purdon, he became a baker on the High Street. He was one of the first Trustees of the Congregational (then Evangelical Union) Kirk, from 1848. He was listed as a High Street baker in Slater’s 1852 directory and in 1851 was at 6 High Street. His wife was Margaret and their children included Eliza, William and Margaret. Robert (b.1822/3) mason in Denholm. He may be the young apprentice who was recorded at the quarry at Bedrule in 1841. In 1851 he was probably living on Canongate and in 1861 probably on Sunnyside. He married Mary Mack and their children included: Mary (b.1847); Betsy (b.1849); Janet (b.1851); Robert (b.1854); John (b.1857); Margaret (b.1859); James (b.1862); and George (b.1865). \textbf{Robert} (1826/7–61) born at Bridgehouse, son of John, he was a shepherd in Castleton, Kirkton Parishes and Ashkirk Parishes. In 1851 he was an agricultural labourer at Dinlabyre, living with his parents and described as a widower. In 1861 he was a shepherd at Whitehillbrae. In 1856 in Castleton Parish, he secondly married Violet Rodger, who was born at Delorainburn. Their children included; John Rodger (b.1855), born at Boghall; Andrew (b.1856), born at Dinlabyre, who was blacksmith at Allanton; Jane (b.1858), born at ‘Howkshall’, Teviothead; Margaret (b.1860), born at Whitehillbrae; Robert Elliot (b.1864), born in Ashkirk; Violet (b.1866), born in Ashkirk; and Ann (b.1870). \textbf{Robert} (1827/8–1902) son of John and Ann Aitken. He worked with Lyle & Scott for about 38 years, being secretary and becoming a Director. He married Lizzie, daughter of James Davidson, and she died in 1942. Their children were John (architect in South Africa), Capt. Charles, James, George, William and Robert. He lived at Wellogate Villa and is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. \textbf{Robert} (1831–1906) son of John and Margaret. He grew up in Hawick, where he worked as a skinner in 1851. He married Jane Hobkirk in Hawick in 1853 and the following year they sailed for Australia with their infant daughter Margaret. They settled in Wasleys in South Australia and had many other children. His grandson Harry Gordon Oliver was an engineer in charge of several projects on the River Murray. \textbf{Robert} (1857/8–1910) grocer in Newcastle-on-Tyne. He married Elizabeth Jane Gordon, who died in 1935, aged 72. Their children included; Emily (1896/7–1910); and James (1893/4–1914). They are buried at Ettrick. He was probably son of David and born in Hobkirk Parish. \textbf{Robert Don} (1895–1980) son of Col. William James of Lochside, his ancestors came from Hownam. He served in the Royal Navy, retiring as Vice-Admiral. Afterwards he was appointed Deputy Lieutenant for Roxburghshire. \textbf{Roger} ‘Little Roger’ (16th C.) tenant in Falside in Southdean Parish in 1541. His part of the lands was valued at 8s 4d. Other tenants there included Robert (alias ‘Laird’), Ninian, John, Walter and another Roger (called ‘Lang Roger’). \textbf{Roger} ‘Lang Roger’ (16th C.) tenant in Falside in 1541, listed separately from ‘Little Roger’. His lands were valued at 25s. \textbf{Samuel} ‘Sam’ (b.1702) son of James, who was schoolmaster in Cavers, he was baptised in Cavers Parish. He became schoolmaster of Hobkirk Parish in 1726. He also served as Clerk for the Parish. In 1745 he was at Forkins smiddy watching the passage of the Jacobite army when they pressed him into service as their guide up the Rule valley and through Liddesdale. It is said that at their main camp he ran into the Laird of Gorrenberry who escorted him past the Prince and they doffed their hats at each other; this tale was told in the Rule valley long afterwards. He resigned as schoolmaster in 1750. In 1729 he married Betsy, daughter of John Scott of Weens. \textbf{Samuel} (18th C.) born in Wilton Parish. He was a resident of Minto Parish in 1774 when he married Isabel Miller. His children included: Helen (b.1780), baptised in Wilton Parish; and Samuel (b.1789), who was a mason in Yarrow in 1841 and in Selkirk in 1851. He could also be the Samuel whose children baptised in Hobkirk Parish included James (b.1775) and John (b.1778). He could be the Samuel, son of James, born in Hobkirk Parish in 1749 and may have been related to the Hobkirk schoolmaster. \textbf{Samuel} (18th/19th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish. He married Isobel Moscrop in 1805. Their children included: Agnes (b.1807); Robert (b.1807); and Isobel (b.1812). \textbf{Samuel} (b.1789) son of Samuel. He was a mason in Selkirkshire. In 1841 he was at Curcarwood in Yarrow and in 1851 was in Selkirk. He married Isabel Miller in Ettrick in 1814 (she seems to have had the same name as his mother). He is probably the Samuel recorded in a letter about work done at Ettrick Church in 1825. His children included: Samuel (b.1816), who was a mason like his father, married Margaret Rutherford in Melrose, emigrated to the U.S.A. and had 2 sons who fought in the American Civil War; William (b.1818); James (b.1820); Helen (b.1822); John (b.1824); Isabel (b.1826); Janet (b.1828); Robert (b.1830); and David (b.1833). \textbf{Samuel} (18th/19th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. In 1829 he married Betty, daughter of John Scott. \textbf{Samuel} (18th/19th C.) younger son of William of Dinlabyre. He spent most of his life as a farmer, at Whitehill and elsewhere. He was described as ‘a clever, witty, well-read man, who could converse on most subjects’. He joined the Jedforest Club in 1830. He may be the Samuel who was at Mertoun near Dryburgh in 1841. \textbf{Simon} ‘Sym’ (16th C.) recorded in 1566 when the Lords of Secret Council made John Rutherford of Hunthill act as surety for him. He probably held lands in Jedforest. \textbf{Steven} (17th C.) recorded in 1676 when his daughter was among a number of local people fined for using weights that were lighter than the standards. Specifically her ‘quarter of ane pound wanted twa drop, and her twa ounce wanted ane drop’. His daughter must have been a trader at the market in Hawick, but it is unclear where they were from. Steven (17th C.) recorded as tenant in Falside in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. There were several other Olivers there, David, Thomas and 2 Patricks, to whom he may have been related, with his name appearing first. Probably he was the same as one of the 2 Stevens who were listed as tenants at Falside on the 1694 Horse Tax Rolls, one of them along with Dand; there was also a John and Thomas and his sons recorded there at the same time. Thomas (15th C.) witness in 1436 to a sasine for the lands of Wolfleece and Wolfhopelee. He is recorded as ‘Thome Olyver de Swayne’, which is probably Swinnie. Thomas (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502. George Douglas, Master of Angus, was fined for failure to prove his arrest (as well as that of Ingram and James). He was ‘sandis sone’ (presumably ‘Sandy’s son’) and called ‘Waitschod’ (although it is unclear what this nickname meant, it may have been ‘Wet-shoed’ for example). Thomas (16th C.) stated to have been killed around 1540 at Abbotrule, along with ‘Will Kowman’. This was the result of a raid led by James Routledge of Todhills in Cumbria, which was complained about by the Laird of Ferniehirst and his tenants. Thomas (16th C.) tenant at Slacks in 1541, along with John, who was probably his brother or son. They paid 22 shillings yearly, with Charles renting the other part of Slacks. Thomas (16th C.) recorded being of Lustruther in 1583/4 when William Fenwick of Wallington (near Otterburn) complained that he and around 200 others raided his farm, taking cattle, horses and 16 prisoners. This appears to have been a raid into England to recover cattle and other goods stolen from them earlier. It is clear that he was one of the main Oliver leaders at that time. Thomas (17th C.) recorded as ‘Thomas Olipher’ resident of Harwood when he was one of the witnesses to a Rulewater sasine of 1631. Thomas (17th C.) described as ‘Thomas Olipher, cordiner’ when he was fined in 1642 for using irreverent language to the Bailies. Probably a different Thomas, ‘traveller’ was in 1642 sentenced to 8 days in the stocks for drawing his sword at one of the Bailies. But he was possibly the Thomas who was recorded in 1642 being ordered to pay James Scott for the oats his livestock had eaten. He may also be the same Thomas who promised not to carry a ‘whinger’ in 1639 and the Thomas fined in 1649 for keeping his cattle on the ‘infield’ and for cattle eating his neighbour’s corn and hay. This may be the Thomas, married to Margaret Chisholme, who had these children in Hawick: Walter (b.1641); Margaret (b.1642); Sara (b.1645); John (b.1649); Beatrix (b.1652); and Helen (b.1655). The witnesses to the 1641 baptism were Andrew Liddersdale and William Liddell. He could have been son of Walter (who is mentioned in 1666, and brother of Robert. Thomas (17th C.) described as ‘traveller’ in 1642 when he was accused of drawing his sword at one of the Bailies and refusing to go to the Town prison. He was fined and sentenced to 8 days in the stocks. It seems likely he was a different man from Thomas, ‘cordiner’, who was also recorded in the Town Book in 1642. He was also ‘traveller’ in 1652 when he was found to be not liable for the claim made against him by merchant John Scott, for tobacco pipes, ‘hott waters’, powder, sugar and other goods that he ‘brak, drownet, and lossit’ on the way from Edinburgh to Hawick. Thomas (17th C.) tenant in the farm of Hill (probably near Rouchhirst) according to a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. Thomas (17th C.) tenant at Mervinslaw, recorded in a rental roll of 1669. There were several other tenants there at the same time. Thomas (17th C.) recorded as tenant of Whiteside in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. William was also there and so presumably closely related. Perhaps the same Thomas was listed on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls as tenant in Whiteside. Thomas (17th C.) recorded as one of the tenants in Falside in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. He was listed as ‘handie’, presumably meaning that he was a tradesman of some sort. There were several other Olivers there at the same time. He may be the Thomas, ‘servitor of the Marquis of Douglas’ who was a Covenanter supporter, with his brother John, tenant in Falside, standing as surety for him in 1679, that he would return to prison if so ordered. He could be the Thomas ‘in Jedforest’ who is on a list of men refusing to take the Oath of Allegiance in 1684. He could be the Thomas who was recorded at Falside with his sons in 1694, when he paid tax on 2 hearths. Thomas (17th C.) recorded as tenant in Braeach in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. Thomas (17th C.) listed as a tenant in ‘Pouhach’ in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest (i.e., Southdean Parish). Thomas (17th C.) recorded as one of the tenants in Dykeraw in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. Both Thomases ‘elder’ and ‘younger’ are listed there, as well as several other Olivers. Thomas (17th C.) recorded as one of the tenants in Southdean in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. James and David were also listed there, and so probably close relatives. He could be the Thomas ‘called Burne, in Fuddon’ (assuming this is an error for ‘Suddon’) whose will is recorded in 1687. Thomas (17th C.) recorded as tenant in ‘Dyk’ in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Jedforest who was imprisoned in 1679 for being a Covenanter. He may have been taken prisoner after the Battle of Bothwell Brig. He gave a bond that he would not rise up in arms again and was released. It is possible that he was the Thomas of Southdean who complained that the Parish Minister had not read out the Articles of Estate or prayed for William and Mary in 1689. It is also possible that this was the Thomas, tenant at Southdean Mill, whose son John became minister at Southdean. Thomas (17th C.) described in 1679 as ‘servitor to the Marquis of Douglas’ when he was one of the Covenanter prisoners. His brother John, tenant in Falside, served as surety for him, that he would return to prison if so ordered. Thomas (17th C.) son of James in ‘Ash-trees’, i.e. the farm in the Jed valley. He was listed in 1684 among many people who were declared fugitives for refusing to conform to Episcopalianism. However, he appears to have escaped persecution, since Thomas of Ashtrees was given the rank of Ensign in the Roxburghshire Fencibles after the Revolution. His brother George is recorded in 1691. Thomas (d.c.1685) tenant in Swinnie when his will was recorded in 1685. He is surely related to George, who was at Swinnie at the same time. Perhaps the same Thomas was listed at Swinnie among the poor of Southdean Parish in the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. Thomas (17th C.) recorded in 1688 when he complained of being assaulted in Hawick High Street when ‘bringing in heather for use of the said town’. This was presumably for fuel. He could have been one of the contemporary Olivers of Southdean. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Southdean Parish who was listed on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. He may be the same as one of the earlier Thomases. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Wadeshill in Southdean Parish according to the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. Thomas (17th C.) name of 2 men who were resident at Swinnie according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. One was described as ‘kill’ (perhaps suggesting a kiln) and the other was ‘knou’. Thomas (17th C.) blacksmith at Chesters according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. He is probably related to John who was smith there in 1669. Perhaps he is the related to Thomas the smith in Hawick. Thomas (17th C.) resident at Chesters according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. He is listed separately from the smith. Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. He married Janet Cessford in 1696, the marriage being recorded in Cavers. Thomas (1688/9–1754) tenant at Chesters. He is probably related to some of the Olivers who were recorded at Chesters on the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. He married Jane Gillrie (1691/2–1768) and their children included Robert (1732/3–89), tenant at Langburnshiel. His family were buried in Oxnam. Thomas (17th/18th C.) smith in Hawick. He witnessed a baptism for Hawick Town Herd William Palmer in 1707. In 1712 he was ‘smith att ye westport of Hawick’. He married Margaret Douglas and their children included: Isabel (b.1701); Margaret (b.1703); John (b.1709); and Janet (b.1712). The witnesses in 1712 were Bailie Robert Brown and carrier Andrew Clerk. Thomas (18th C.) tenant at Falside in Southdean Parish around 1740, along with ‘Dand’ and William. Thomas (b.c.1715) born in Southdean Parish. In 1732 he moved to Crailing. He married Janet Middlemas in Crailing in 1739. Their children included: Jeremiah (b.1735), born in Southdean; Isabel (b.1740), baptised in Nisbet; Robert (b.1743), also born in Nisbet. Thomas (18th C.) workman in Hawick. He married Margaret Weir and they had a daughter, Anne (b.1743). Helen (b.1740) may also have been his child. The witnesses in 1743 were weaver William Turnbull and cooper James Scott. Thomas (18th C.) tenant at ‘Glestains’ (i.e. Gledstains). In 1758 he was among parishioners in Hobkirk Parish who were asked to provide broom for thatching the roof of the kirk. Thomas (18th C.) recorded at Weensmoor in 1774. He may be the Thomas whose daughter Helen was baptised in Hobkirk Parish in 1774. Other children may have been Barbara (b.1771), Nelly (b.1772) and Alison (b.1775). Thomas (18th C.) footman and gardener at Orchard in 1785, when he was working for William Dickson. Probably the same Thomas was coachman at Cavers in 1794. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1795 he married Margaret Stewart, who was also from Hawick. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident at Chesters (Southdean) according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Gilbert was listed after him and so possibly related. Thomas (18th/19th C.) farmer at Turnpikeside in Southdean Parish, according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. It is possible he was the Southdean rymer of this name who penned these lines on the death of Rev. William Scott – ‘I saw him from the kirk descent, And in five hours his life did end’. Thomas (18th/19th C.) farmer at Birneyknowe, on the 1794–97 Horse Tax Rolls. He was recorded as owner of 7 farm horses and 1 saddle horse in 1797. Thomas (18th/19th C.) recorded as tenant at Shankend on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when he owned 4 horses. Additionally he was taxed for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797. Thomas (18th/19th C.) farmer at Castleton, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of Byreholm. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. He is listed as a carter at Byreholm among heads of households in 1836 and 1838. He could be the same Thomas as the farmer at Castleton. Thomas (18th/19th C.) recorded as farmer at Kirkton, on the Horse Tax Rolls of 1797. James is listed after him and so possibly related. He was also listed at Kirkton on the 1797 Dog Tax Rolls. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of Southdean Parish. He married Jean, daughter of John Whillans and Mary Swan. Their children included: Mary (b.1806); and William (b.1815). Lieut. Thomas (18th/19th C.) of the Royal Navy, was made an Honorary Burgess in 1803. He is probably the ‘Captain Thomas Oliver of the Royal Navy my second cousin’ mentioned in the 1808 will of William, ‘Auld Cash’. He could be the Royal Navy Lieut. of that name who distinguished himself at Havana in 1805 during the Napoleonic Wars. He was probably grandson of shoemaker Robert, and perhaps son of Thomas (b.1742) or one of his brothers. Thomas (18th/19th C.) tenant in Lilliesleaf, son of Robert, who was farmer at Langburnshielis. He was recorded in the Horse Tax Rolls of 1791–94 at Langburnshielis. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. Thomas (18th/19th C.) ironmonger on the High Street, recorded on Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. Thomas (b.1812/3) gamekeeper at Lariston Rigg in 1841. His wife was Jenny and their children included Turnbull, Bella and Francis. He may be the same Thomas as the gamekeeper in Bedrule Parish. Thomas S. (b.1812/3) gamekeeper at Woodend Cottage in Bedrule, and then stocking-maker in Denholm, probably on Sunnyside. His wife was Janet and they had children Ebenezer, Joseph, Isabella, William, Francis and Thomas. Thomas (b.1817/8) younger son of lawyer John. In the 1841 census he is listed as a woollen manufacturer, along with his brother William. He was probably part of the short-lived firm of John Oliver & Sons. He was later a farmer at West Fortune, Haddington. Thomas ‘Tom’ (b.c.1870) born in Hawick, he worked as a shepherd with his father, later entering William Watson’s, where he learned about tweed manufacture and design. He became a teacher of power-loom weaving in Galashiels, Hawick and Selkirk. He received a D.Sc. from Edinburgh and was Principal and Professor of Textile Technology in the Scottish Woollen Technical College in Galashiels. Just before the War he toured Australia and New Zealand. He published at least 3 books on textiles: ‘Weaving problems’ (1909); ‘Phase in the rise of Scotch tweed technique’ (1911); and ‘Wool technology and regional geography’ (1931). He was also an enthusiastic lay preacher in the Brethren, publishing and contributing to ‘Scripture Quarterly’ during WWII. Walter (d.1242) son of David ‘Olfiard’, or perhaps an earlier Walter. He is probably the ‘Walt’o olifard’ who witnessed a charter between Gervase Avenel and Melrose Abbey in 1214. He was Justiciar of Lothian under Alexander II from 1220 until his death. He granted the church of Smallhollom to Coldingham Abbey. In 1221 he was witness to the dowry charter for Joan of England, who married Alexander, King of Scotland (lands that included Hassendean). He was Justiciar in 1230 when he witnessed a charter for Margaret, the King’s sister and also in 1237 in a document from the English King. He was mentioned (as ‘Walterum Olfard iusticiarium Laudonie’) in a charter of lands to Soutra Hospital in about 1230. He also witnessed another charter relating to Inverness in the reign of King William. He married Christian, daughter of the Earl of Strathearn and inherited lands in Perthshire. He had a son David. The pair are mentioned in a charter of Soutra Hospital, granted by Walter Murray (‘de Moravia’) in 1273. He was succeeded by his grand-daughter Joanna, who married Walter of Moravia (or Murray). In this way the Barony of Bothwell came into possession of the Murrays, who would later also hold the Barony of Hawick. Walter (16th C.) tenant in Falside in Southdean Parish in 1541. His small piece of the farm was valued at 4s 2d. Other tenant there included with Robert (alias ‘Laird’), Ninian, Roger (called ‘Little Roger’), John and Roger (called ‘Lang Roger’). Walter (17th C.) another of the shoemaking family. He was involved in a church dispute in 1666 and was the father of Robert. This may be the same Walter who married Agnes Paisley (or ‘Paslay’) and whose children (born in Hawick Parish) included: James (b.1640); Robert (b.1643); Janet (b.1645); John (b.1649); and Helen (b.1652). However, if he was father of Robert ‘Lord Olifer’, then his children must have been born earlier. The witnesses to the 1640 baptism were Robert Oliver and James Paisley (probably fathers or brothers of the parents). Walter (17th C.) merchant in Hawick. He is recorded in 1673 on the list of men named in the trial for the so-called riot at St. Jude’s Fair. In 1685 he was fined for refusing to ride with a prisoner to Jedburgh when asked by the Bailie to do so, and also ‘for his contumacious language given to the sd baylyea att yt time’. He was listed among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He is probably the Walter listed ‘eist the water’ among those paying the Hearth Tax in Hawick in 1694. He may be the Walter who gave evidence against Turnbull of Standhill in a trial of Covenanters in 1680. He is recorded as a merchant when he witnessed baptisms for tailor Alexander Hislop in 1700, for John Scott, smith in Hawick, in 1704, for shoemaker Robert Gardner in 1703, for merchant William Douglas in 1706, for John Nichol (servant in Newmill) in 1709, for skinner Robert Deans in 1710 and for cooper Alexander Weens in 1711. Walter (17th C.) resident of Hawick who married Janet Simson. Their children included: James (b.1673); and William (b.1676). The witnesses in 1676 were John Deans and James Deans. He could be the same as the merchant of Hawick mentioned in the next couple of decades. It is possible that his sons James and William were the ‘students’ who acted as witnesses for the baptism of an illegitimate child of Thomas Henderson and Margaret Douglas in Hawick in 1689. Walter (b.1706) born in Hawick, son of Robert and Agnes Aitkin. His brothers included shoemaker Robert and merchant William. He married Margaret Turnbull in 1730. Their children included: Robert (b.1731); Margaret (b.1733); John (b.1735), shoemaker, who married Helen Currier; and Helen (b.1738). Walter (18th C.) recorded in 1712 being asked to ‘perlustrate the town to see who were drinking in ale houses after 8 at night’. Walter (b.c.1809) cooper in Newcastleton, listed among heads of households in 1835–41 and in Pigot’s 1837 directory. In 1841 he was at about 27 Montague Street. His wife was Mary and their children included Walter, Janet, Jean and Betty. William (15th C.) son of Gilbert. At the 1493 Justice-aire he was fined for non-appearance. If his father was the same Gilbert, then he also had brothers James and Robert (also mentioned in 1493). He was also recorded in 1494/5 among 8 Olivers and a Shiel (connected with Strange) who had remission for commuting with the English; he was there stated to be brother of Robert, who was son of Gilbert, and also brother of John. William ‘Will’ (16th C.) listed in 1540 among Scottish rebels who had fled to England and were being sought by the English Wardens. He is recorded as being called ‘Fargus’, and his son ‘Jok’ is also listed. William (16th C.) recorded as tenant in Mervinslaw in a rental roll of 1541, along his mother Margaret. Their steading was valued at 12s 6d. Other tenants at Mervinslaw included James and another William, nicknamed ‘Merchant’. William ‘Merchant’ (16th C.) tenant in Mervinslaw in 1541, whose steading was valued at 12s 6d. Other tenants at Mervinslaw included William, Margaret and James. William (16th C.) tenant in Bank, recorded in a rental roll of Jedforest in 1541. He held half of the farm. William ‘the Lawyer’ (16th C.) tenant in Lustruther in 1541, along with his mother Marion, 2 Johns (one called ‘Blackhead’), Janet, Katherine and another Marion. His name is written as ‘Willelmo Olivere, alias the procurator’. Probably the same man was recorded as ‘William Ollyver of Lustrodder’ in 1544, when he was among Olivers and others who gave assurance to the English Crown. Hob, Jock, younger and Ringan were also listed at Lustruther and so were probably related. He may be the same as the William recorded as tenant there in 1562. And either he or perhaps his son was in Lustruther in 1571 when he was one of the 3 main leaders of the Olivers for whom Sir Thomas Turnbull, John Turnbull of Minto, Richard Rutherford of Edgerston and John Rutherford, younger of Hunthill, served as pledges. Additionally he gave his pledge at a court in Leith, for the Olivers in Dykeraw, Falside, Westerhouses, ‘the Burne’, Slacks, Mervinslaw and the Bank, as well as for other men of Southdean; his cautioners were William Douglas of Bonjedward and Richard Rutherford, Provost of Jedburgh. William (16th C.) recorded as ‘William Ollyver of Myrleslawe’ in 1544, when he was among a list of Scotsmen swearing allegiance to the English King. ‘Ranyon Ollyver of the same’ is also listed, and so presumably a brother or son. Their lands may have been Mervinslaw. William (16th C.) recorded on a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was listed as ‘William Ollyver of Myrenslawe’, which is probably ‘Mervinslaw’. This could be a repeated entry for William of ‘Myrleslawe’. ‘Robert Ollyver of the same’ is also listed. William ‘Will’ (16th C.) tenant farmer at Lustruther, who along with Gavin, tenant at West Houses (probably a Southdean relative) had a bond of 1562 to enter Robert Robson ‘Foul Mouth’ to John Kerr of Ferniehirst. He is also recorded in 1571 giving bonds for Olivers and others in Dykeraw, Westerhouses, Falside, the Burn and Slacks. He is probably the William whose farmed was transcribed ‘Anstruder’ in 1572/3, when he was listed along with other Olivers and William Kirkton of Stewartfield, with Sir Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule and Richard Rutherford of Edgerston as their custodians; this appears to have been in relation to Kerr of Ferniehirst being declared a fugitive and all his former supporters swearing allegiance to the Crown. He is probably the William in Lustruther who Thomas Laidlaw in Haugh was accused of resetting in 1589. Probably the same ‘Will in Lustruther’ is recorded in Monipennie’s List of Border Clans of about 1594. He was indicted for a raid in 1589. William (16th C.) recorded in 1583/4 being of Slacks when William Fenwick of Wallington (near Otterburn) complained that he and about 200 others raided his farm, taking cattle, horses and 16 prisoners. This appears to have been a raid into England to recover cattle and other goods stolen from them earlier. He was probably an important leader among the Olivers at that time. William of Bairnkine (d.1605) sentenced to execution in Jedburgh in 1605. Nothing else is known about him. William (17th C.) tenant at Lustruther (in Southdean Parish) in 1669. William (17th C.) recorded as tenant of Whiteside in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. He is listed after Thomas, to whom he was surely related. William (17th C.) recorded as a tenant in Chesters in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. There were 2 men of the same name listed there. William (17th C.) recorded as tenants in Slacks along with George and John in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. Probably one of them is the William listed as tenant in ‘Soudon’ and ‘Suden’ (i.e. Southdean farm) in the 1694 Hearth Tax records. He may be the William ‘in Shaks’ (if this is an error for ‘Slaks’) whose will is recorded in 1688. William (17th C.) tenant in Nether Whisgills in Castleton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. William (b.1674) born in Hawick, son of John and ‘Jenet Bo’. William (b.1676) son of Walter and ‘Jenet Symson’, he was born in Hawick. He could be the merchant recorded in the early years of the 18th century. William (17th/18th C.) merchant of Hawick, mentioned from 1702. His sister Margaret was married to Bailie Robert Hardie. In 1702 he married Christian Hart (both from Hawick Parish), with Hardie and his wife being rebuked for creating a disturbance; his father-in-law, John Hart was also rebuked by the session for their ‘penny-bridal’. It is possible he is the William born in Hawick in 1676, son of Robert. It seems likely he was related to Walter, who was a merchant in Hawick at the same time. He witnessed baptisms for Anthony Haig in 1706, for Bailie Robert Hardie and Margaret Oliver (his sister) in 1709, for shoemaker Robert Allan in 1714, for tailor Robert Chisholme in 1718, for smith James Beattie in 1719 and for weaver James Roger in 1725. He is probably the William Oliver who was among men ordered to walk around the Town in 1712 to see who were drinking in ale-houses after 8 o’clock. Probably the same merchant William was rebuked by the Session in 1716 for being involved in late night drunkenness and a fight with Thomas Huggan. He acknowledged that ‘he was att the brawl and was sensible of his fault, and that he could not give an accomp who first began it’. He may have been grandfather of ‘Auld Cash’, and if so, then his son was also William; however, it seems more likely that shoemaker Robert was the grandfather of ‘Auld Cash’, and probably closely related to him, perhaps his brother. His children with Christian Hart included Janet (b.1705), with baptismal witnesses Bailie George Martin and gardener James Falsyde. It is unclear if he had any other surviving children. It is possible that he lived to an old age and that is why his nephew William was ‘younger merchant’ into the 1740s. William (17th/18th C.) tenant in Slaidhills. He was married to Elspeth Hislop. Their son Andrew was born in 1701, with Andrew Waugh in Slaidhills being one of the witnesses. William (17th/18th C.) ‘servitor’ in Todshawhill. In 1705 his daughter Janet was baptised with witnesses Robert Cook and Alexander Ogilvie in Braxholme. William of Dinlabryre (17th/18th C.) eldest son of John. He succeeded his father in the lands of ‘Dunliebyre, Easterflight, Hiashes, and Burnfoot; also Over and Nether Larriston, Heartsgarth, and Langhaugh’. He and his son John donated silver communion cups to Castleton Kirk in 1748. In 1708 he married Mary, daughter of William Chisholme of that Ilk (while his sister Mary married his wife’s brother John!). His children were: John, who succeeded; and Mary, who married John Scott of Synton. William (18th C.) tailor in Over Southfield. He is probably the tailor who witnessed a baptism in 1738 for John Scott, tenant in Hawick Shiel, and Bessie Goodfellow. In 1741 he married Margaret Cook, who was widow of John Goodfellow. Their children born in Hawick included: Bessie (b.1722); and Margaret (b.1724). William (b.1701) merchant in Hawick, son of shoemaker Robert and Agnes Atkins. It seems likely he was father of ‘Auld Cash’. He was probably the William, whose brother ‘Lord Olifer’ gave in his Burgess money in 1723. In about 1740 he was given part of the responsibility for collecting subscriptions ‘east the water’ to help pay for the Teviot Bridge. He is probably the merchant who witnessed a baptism for Alexander Purdom in 1741 and the ‘junior merchant’ who witnessed other baptisms in 1741, 1742 and 1743, including for flesher George Deans and for Schoolmaster Walter Turnbull. He may be the William ‘younger merchant’ recorded in receipts in Selkirk in 1741 and 1742 (at the same time as shoemaker Robert, who was probably related to Selkirk shoemaker John Blackhall). He was also ‘junior merchant’ in 1743, when his son Walter was baptised, the sole witness being shoemaker Robert (probably his brother). He and shoemaker Robert also witnessed another baptism in 1743 for baker John Kedie. It seems likely that he is the ‘William Olifer late merchant in Hawick’ for whose children Hawick shoemaker Robert (probably his older brother) acted as factor in transactions in Selkirk in 1744, 1745, 1749 and 1752; this suggests that he died in 1743 or 1744 and his brother Robert acted as guardian for his large family. Confusingly there is a merchant William who witnessed baptisms in 1744 for shoemaker George Gardner, in 1746 for skinner William Scott and for carrier Gilbert and in 1758 (along with Robert Senior, perhaps his brother) for Walter Wilson and Catherine Oliver (perhaps his niece) in 1758; either there was another merchant of the same name in Hawick or the records from Selkirk are being misinterpreted. He married Margaret Coltherd (or ‘Coul tart’), with their children being: Agnes (b.1731); Robert (b.1733); Margaret (b.1734); James (b.1739); John (b.1741); and Walter (b.1743). It seems likely that the William born in 1737, with mother Margaret ‘Corser’ was also his son; in that baptismal record (and another, when he was witness for Robert Miles) he is listed as ‘Merchant Junior’, perhaps the William senior being his uncle. The witnesses to the 1731 baptism were George (perhaps his brother or uncle) and Robert (probably his father). The idea that he was father of ‘Auld Cash’ is supported by the 1808 death record, where it is stated that the father of ‘Auld Cash’ was also William, and probably a merchant. It is possible that he was also called ‘Auld Cash’. William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Cauldmill in 1747. He married Janet Wilson and their children included: John (b.1747); and James (b.1749). William (b.1732/3) workman, one of the 6 representative Burgess appointed to perambulate and define the boundaries of the Burgh’s land in 1767, during court proceedings for the division of the Common. In 1782 his daughter Isabel died, and he is listed as ‘workman’; this could be the Isabel born to William and Barbara ‘Binnie’ in 1761. He may be the same William who married Barbara Burnet (whose name is also written ‘Birnie’) and whose children included: Isabel (b.1761); William (b.1765); Robert (b.1767); Thomas (b.1770); John (b.1772); and Thomas (again, b.1778). The witnesses in 1761 were and William and Thomas Birnie (perhaps his father-in-law and brother-in-law), in 1767 were the whole congregation and in 1772 were Thomas Burnet and William Laidlaw. He is probably the workman whose daughter Isabel died in Hawick in 1782. William ‘Auld Soorhope’ (18th C.) one of the last people to be buried in the old churchyard at South dean. It is said that his funeral was very well attended. William of Langraw (1731/2–1812) from the family who had farmed at Falside in South dean Parish. He may be the son of William who was a tenant at Falside in the 1740s, along with ‘Dand’ and Thomas (possibly his uncles). He and Andrew farmed at Alton from 1762 and then Adderstoneshiel from 1765. He then had several short leases elsewhere, including Burgrange in Northumberland. In 1801 he purchased the farm of Langraw and settled down there, retaining several other leases. In 1803 he contributed to a local subscription for the defence of the country (from the French). He was listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805, and in 1819 (when he may have already been deceased) both he and his son Andrew were listed. He was a heritor of Hobkirk Parish. He is said to have been quite wealthy, but lost much of his fortune backing ‘bills for needy and unscrupulous persons’. In 1811 he was recorded as owner of Langraw and part of Shiel’s

Lands and Kirknowe. In 1764 he married Margaret Stavert, said to be a descendant of the man who carried the Douglas banner at Otterburn; she died in 1820, aged 80. He was buried along with his wife in Southdean Kirkyard. He was succeeded by his eldest son, Andrew, while a younger son, William, rented Otterstonelee in North Tyne (unless this is confusion with Adderstonelee). He could have been father of some of these children baptised in Southdean Parish: William (b.1761); Andrew (b.1762); Andrew (again, b.1763); John (b.1764); Nelly (b.1766); Thomas (b.1768); and William (again, b.1770). William (18th C.) resident of Southdean Parish. In 1761 he married Janet Oliver, who was from Wilton. Children baptised in Southdean who could be his include: Andrew (b.1762); Andrew (b.1763); John (b.1764); Nelly (b.1766); and Thomas (b.1768).

William ‘Auld Cash’ (c.1738-1808) one of the foremost merchants in Hawick, and Cornet in 1758. He may be the William born in Hawick in 1737 to William and Margaret Croser. He traded in many different things in the district around Hawick, and was said to be the third William in a family line of merchants (although his precise relationship to earlier Olivers is unclear). He also acted as a private banker throughout the Borders, hence his nickname. In 1782, 1785, 1787, 1788 and 1790 he witnessed the baptisms of the children of Dr. Robert Douglas and Margaret Aitchison (who was his niece). He subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784) as well as John Learmont’s book of poetry in 1791. He paid the Shop Tax in Hawick in 1785. He is probably the merchant William whose housekeeper Betty Nichol died in Hawick in 1787. He paid the Horse Tax in Hawick in 1785-94. In 1787-91 he paid tax for having a female servant and was probably the merchant recorded on the Dog Tax Rolls in 1797. From 1791 he acted as Hawick’s first bank agent, for the Bank of Scotland. His main premises were at the Tower Knowe, where the Office Bar is now located, and his warehouses were in Silver Street, where his family had owned property for generations. He also owned buildings on the High Street and in Wilton Parish. Additionally he owned land at Dovemount, Silverbuthall and Galalaw. He was known to be generous in local affairs, e.g. in helping fund the addition to Old Wilton Church. It has also been suggested that Silver Street got its name because he stayed there. He also had a wine cellar under the road by Drumlanrig Bridge. He is probably the William of Galalaw listed as a Commissioner of Roxburghshire in 1819 (many years after his death). He remained unmarried all his life, and his will lists his nearest relatives as: his niece Margaret Aitchison and her children Robert (surgeon), John (also surgeon), Agnes and Mary Douglas; his nephews Robert (or the Royal Navy) and Andrew (saddler) Aitchison; and his second cousins Thomas Oliver (of the Navy), William Oliver (surgeon in Middleton), James Oliver (baker), William Oliver (location unknown), Robert Oliver (tailor, possibly ‘Clinty’) and Walter Wilson (wright). When he died, it is said that everyone was surprised to find that his estate did not appear to meet his debts, even although the sale of his property raised over £19,000 (with £5,000 coming from goods, furniture and stock, without including property); suspicion fell upon his young assistant ‘Franky’ Ballantyne, and there was even a poem published about how his ghost haunted Ballantyne, called ‘The Twa Frien’s or the Ghost of Coffer-Ha’. In his will he is described being ‘of Galalaw’ (suggesting he was living there, rather than at Silverbuthall in his later years). His will was witnessed by his ‘servants’ James Miller and Walter Scott (who are probably the men of those names who were later grocers in Hawick). The trustees named in his will were Adam Ogilvie of Hartwoodmyres, James Grieve in Braxholme Park, James Grieve in Braxholme Braes and Thomas Usher. His home at Silverbuthall was sold to James Scott, retired teacher of Yarrow. His nieces Agnes and Catherine married Bailie Walter Purdom and ‘Haunless Wat’, respectively. His death is recorded in Hawick, where it was stated that his father was also William – ‘Wi’ banker Cash, a daintie carl, Wha was owre guid for sic a warl’ [RDW]. William (18th C.) Cornet in 1768, listed as being at the Kirkwynd. He may be the son of shoemaker Robert born in 1738. He may be the son of shoemaker Robert who gave a discharge in 1768 for his father’s bonds with people in Selkirk (his father being deceased by then). William of Dinlabyre (1738-1830) son of John, he became Sheriff of Roxburghshire. It is said that he needed to live closer to the court in Jedburgh, and hence swapped some of his Lidsdale lands for ones in Rulewater. He was recorded as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1761. In 1773 he sold Hartsgarth and Langhaugh to William Sharp. At the same time he bought the lands of Weems from William Sharp and built the new house there in 1775. He also bought Nether Bonchester from Thomas Scott in 1779. In 1777 he had a ‘decreet arbitral’ between Henry Elliot of Harwood and George Rutherford. He was listed among the voters of Roxburghshire in 1780 and Selkirkshire in 1788. He sold Over and Nether Larriston and Blackhope to Col. William Elliot in 1786; it was said that in fact his wife made the sale when he was absent and he ‘expressed much surprise and no little displeasure at what had taken place’. Nevertheless he added the sale of Larriston Rig (or Haggiehaugh) to Elliot in 1790. He was apparently a good friend of the Hobkirk schoolmaster William Armstrong. In 1788 he was listed among the voters in Roxburghshire (and a supporter of the interests of the Duke of Buccleuch). In the county valuation of 1788 he was recorded as owner of Weens and Nether Bonchester, valued at £380, as well as Dinlabyre, Greena and Blackhope (although he had probably sold them by then) in Castleton Parish, valued at £1020. He subscribed to John Learmont’s book of poetry in 1791. He paid tax in Hobkirk Parish for having 3 male servants in the period 1778–92 and 2 in 1793, as well as for 1 female servant in 1785–87, 4 in 1788 and 1 in 1789–91. He was taxed for having 3–5 carriage horses in Hobkirk Parish (being recorded as ‘of Dinlabyre at Weens’) in 1785–92. He is probably the William listed paying tax at Wolfelee in the Horse Tax Rolls of 1789–94. He was ‘of Dinlabyre at Larriston’ on the 1794 Horse Tax Rolls for Castleton Parish. In 1794 he was taxed for 2 male servants at ‘Laurstoun’ in Castleton Parish and in 1797 was at Liddel Bank with 3 servants, 4 work horses and 4 carriage horses. He was also taxed for having a carriage in the period 1785–95, being ‘of Dinlabyre’ until the year 1791/2, when he was ‘of Weens’, and then being at ‘Lawston’ in 1794/5 and Liddel Bank 1797/8. He was at Dawston in 1797 when taxed for having 2 non-working dogs. He made a report on the state of the roads in Castleton Parish for the Duke of Buccleuch in 1793. He was also said to have been responsible for most of the road improvements in Rulewater and Liddesdale in his time, including building Bonchester Bridge and laying out the new route to Newcastle via the that bridge. In 1793 he sold Weens (and Nether Bonchester) to Robert Nutter Campbell of Kailzie and bought Liddel Bank, where he lived for a while. He is listed there on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when he owned 10 horses. He was listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805 (and also in 1819, when he may have already deceased). He was owner of Dinlabyre and Greena according to the Land Tax Rolls of 1811. He is probably the William who was recorded as a freeholder in the Michaelmas Head-Court of Jedburgh in 1811. He is also the William, ‘esq. of Dinlabyre’ listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. In his later years he was fond of writing doggerel verses, e.g. about his sheriff-substitute Robert Shortreed. He was said to have ‘spent a good estate foolishly, and died a poor man’. He married Jane, daughter of John Rutherford of Edgerston and Ellenor Elliot of Minto. Their children included: William (b.1781), eldest, who inherited Edgerston and took the name William Oliver Rutherford; Archibald, became a surgeon-apothecary’s apprentice in Edinburgh in 1799, but later joined the East India Company; Samuel, farmer at Whitehill; John, married Margaret, daughter of Charles Kerr of Abbotrule, and succeeded to Overton Bush; Eleanor, eldest daughter, married Edinburgh surgeon James Russell; Violet, married David Richardson of the East India Company and drowned with her husband on the way to India; Elizabeth, married Dr. Henry Young; Jean, married Maj. Malcolm of the Royal Marines; and Agnes, who married Archibald Little of London (on the same day as her sister Jean). The deaths of is sons John and William are both recorded in 1782. William (18th C.) shepherd in Castleton Parish. His children were baptised at Blinkbonny and Castleton Mains. He married Jean Nichol. Their children included: George (b.1771), who probably died young; Jean (b.1774); and George (1781–1837), who emigrated to America, and whose son became a well-known plough manufacturer. William (18th C.) farmer in Over Cassock and then Howpasley. He is recorded in 1769 in correspondence with John Scott in ‘Hopesrigg’. In 1772 he was at Howpasley when his son Robert was baptised in Roberton Parish. He was probably the William who married Janet Scott in 1771 and who also had a son William (b.1776). William (18th/19th C.) farmer at Westerhouses in Southdean Parish, recorded on the 1794 and 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He was owner of 5 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. He also paid the dog tax in the same year. William (d.1808) from Hawick, he was a baker in London. He returned to Hawick in his later years and lived at Kirkwymfoot. He coincidentally died within a couple of months of ‘Auld Cash’, who was probably a distant cousin. It is possible he was the William born in Hawick in 1738, son of Robert and Bessie Blackhall. He is probably the baker William whose will was proved at the Prerogative Court of Canterbury in 1809, with his address given as ‘Hawick, Northumberland’ (probably in error). William (1760–1818) surgeon in Middleton. He is mentioned in the 1808 will of William, ‘Auld Cash’ as his second cousin. It seems likely that he was actually son of one of the full cousins of ‘Auld Cash’. He could be the William born to Robert of Burnflat in 1757, but seems more likely to be the William son of shoemaker Robert born in 1760. He married Mary Hodgson in 1796 in Gainford, Durham and died in Middleton in 1816, aged 56. His children were Robert Hodgson, George (also a surgeon), William, Ralph and Jean. William (b.c.1770) son of shoemaker John and brother of tailor Robert. He was mentioned in the 1808 will of William, ‘Auld Cash’, as a second cousin; however, although he was left a small share of the estate, it was stated that it was not known if he was alive or dead, or whether he had any issue. William ‘Little Cash’ (1772/3–1840) merchant in Hawick. He may also have been an innkeeper. It is unclear how he was related to ‘Auld Cash’ (who died unmarried), but perhaps he was a nephew, or may not have been directly related at all (with the nickname given humourously perhaps). He was recorded as a merchant at his daughter’s baptism in 1797. It is possible he was the William ‘Junr. Mercht.’ who paid the Horse Tax in Hawick in 1797; she died in 1809. In 1796 he married Catherine, daughter of draper George Turnbull and Betty Wilson. Their children included: Betty or Bess (1797–1848), who died in Eyemouth; Robert (1798/9–1825); and George ‘Pies’, baker in Hawick. Witnesses in 1797 were Thomas and Andrew Oliver, who were probably relatives. He is buried in Wilton Old Churchyard, along with his wife Margaret (who died at the age of 72), a daughter who died in infancy, and his son Robert. He could be the William of Hawick who subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. He is described as ‘little cash’ in 1806 when the death of his daughter Margaret is recorded. William (b.1785) son of Robert and Helen Scott, he was born in Hawick Parish. He was hind at Langraw in Hobkirk Parish and some of his family emigrated to the U.S. In 1841 he was agricultural labourer at Scaur Nook and in 1851 was farm steward at Langraw Scaur (the same place). His wife was Helen and she was already dead by 1851. Their children included: Henry (b.1806), who married Isabella Renwick; and Mary (b.1814); Margaret (b.c.1819), who married James Smail, farm steward at Timpendean; Agnes (or Nancy, b.c.1822), who married Oliver Lough; Andrew (b.c.1825); and Violet (b.c.1830). He could be the William, married to Helen Mason, who had children William (b.1815), Thomas (b.1817) and Agnes (b.1820) baptised in Cavers Parish. Later in life his sons William and Andrew, and son-in-law Oliver Lough, convinced him to accompany them to America. William (18th/19th C.) shep- herd in Southdean Parish. He married Margaret Turnbull. Their daughter Jean (1812–3/55) mar- ried butcher John Wallace. William (18th/19th C.) mason at Bellshiel, probably in Castleton Parish. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. William ‘Will o the Bents’ (b.1800/1) son of ‘Tammy Clarilee’. In 1841 he was recorded as a mason at Bents near Chesters and in 1851 was a ‘Stone-Dyke-Builder’ there. His wife was Mary and their children included: Isobel, who married Peter Smith of the Rule valley Smiths; Thomas (b.c.1833); Elizabeth (b.c.1835); James (b.c.1837); Helen (b.c.1840); and George (b.c.1842). He emigrated to Australia along with his daughter and son-in-law, perhaps around the early 1850s. He had ‘Poems’ pub- lished in 1824. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Mary Govenlock and their children included: John (b.1823); Beatrice (b.1824); William (b.1827); Walter (b.1828); Mary (b.1830); and Janet (b.1832). Since there is no trace of the family in the 1841 census, he is probably the William who emigrated to Galt, Ontario, buying a farm in Beverley in about 1834 (family history says that he came from Innerleithen, but perhaps that was incorrect or just a temporary stay). He may also have had a son Robert. William of Langraw (1804–78) eldest son of Andrew of Langraw in the Rule valley. His mother Jane Scott was a cousin of Sir Walter Scott. He was born in Huddersfield, but moved to Langraw as an infant, being educated in Jedburgh and Edinburgh University. After graduating, he worked in the office of the Hawick Town Clerk (John Oliver) for a while. It is said that he inherited a musical ear from his mother (Jean Scott, cousin of the writer Sir Walter) and to have a delicate constitution and retiring nature. He made a collection of Border tunes, working them out on a miniature violin as he travelled around the country (many coming from a shepherd called Hutton at Peel in Liddesdale). Some of this collection found its way into Wood’s ‘Songs of Scotland’, and the materials were deposited in the Antiquarian Museum in Newcastle. In 1837 he travelled to America, returning over a year later. He became a great authority on local geology, history and folklore. Friend of Sir Walter Elliot, he acted as factor to Wolfelee from 1855, when Sir Walter succeeded to the estate. He was also a keen hunter with the rifle, and took an active part in parish affairs. He served as a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire. He passed on the local tradition that the cheviot sheep breed owed its origin to the ‘Thirteen Drifty Days’. In 1861 he is recorded at Langraw as landed proprietor and farmer of 150 acres, employing 5 labourers. He wrote ‘Eight Months in Illinois’ (1843), but was reticent to publish his poetic works, although the poems ‘The Lost Fairy’, ‘Angel Stairs’, ‘The Tushielaw Thorn’ and ‘The Capon Tree’ were all published anonymously. Tancred reports his story of meeting a ‘spunky’ (i.e. ‘will-o’-the-wisp’) and also how he gave some information regarding the Sclaterford. He was involved with the Hawick Archaeological Society. Late in life he married Mary Jane Mills from Ponteland in Northumberland. When his health began to fail he sold Langraw and moved into Edinburgh with his family of 2 sons and 2 daughters (including William A. and Dora M.). He is buried in the Grange Cemetery there. William (b.c.1790) farmer at North Berryfell in 1841. His wife was Helen and their children included: Helen (b.c.1820); Mary (b.c.1823); Francis (b.c.1825); and George (b.c.1830). He could be the William who married Helen Kedie in Wilton Parish in 1814, whose daughter Francis was born in 1815. William (b.1803) hind to the Laird of Langraw. He lived in one of the cottages at Langraw Scaur. His children included: Henry (b.1806), who was Steward at West Fodderlee; William, who went to America; Andrew, also went to America; Agnes, who married Oliver Lough; Mary (b.1814); Violet, who married John Dalgleish from Swanshiel and went to Australia; Margaret, married James Smail, Steward at Timpendean. He emigrated to America along with his sons William and Andrew and his daughter Agnes and son-in-law Oliver Lough. William (b.1811/2) born in Yetholm Parish, he was a tailor in Denholm and was Treasurer of the Denholm Horticultural Society. He married Margaret Bell and their children included Jane, Janet, Thomas, William, Adam and Andrew. William (b.1812/3) from Jedburgh, he was shepherd at ‘Harwoodskefoot’ in 1851. His wife was Mary (from Hawick Parish) and their children included James, Robert, Jane and Janet. His widow was still living in the same place in 1861. William (b.1814) son of Town Clerk John, brother of lawyers George and James. He was recorded on the 1841 census as a woollen manufacturer along with his brother Thomas. The pair are probably the William and Thomas recorded as proprietors of Dean Mill in Pigot’s 1837 directory, manufacturing both woollens and hosiery. In about 1836 the firm of John Oliver & Sons, along with William Wilson & Sons, purchased Weensland Corn Mill, and erected the new Weensland Mill. He was tenant farmer at Hallrule and later at Barnes (where he is recorded in the 1860s). In 1847 John Halliday published ‘Verses to William Oliver, Esq., Hallrule House’ about his friendship. In 1857 his wife gave 6 silver coins and a Roman coin to the Museum collection. In 1861 he was farmer of 750 acres at barnes, employing 5 people. He married Margaret Phillips. Their children were John and Henrietta. William (b.1816/7) joiner at Cauldmill. He was Janet, and their children included Barbara, William, Helen, Betsy and Agnes. In 1851 his mother Helen, from Ashkirk Parish, was living with him. William ‘Blinnd Wull’ (1818–71) noted local fiddler, born at Tandlaw, son of Adam and Agnes Anderson. He lost his sight to a game cock at the age of 5, and also lost his father early. He learned the violin from Johnnie Oliver, and played regularly at weddings and social functions. Tales were also told of his prowess as an angler and poacher and as a maker of nets. On one occasion he was caught poaching, but gave his captors the slip, escaping to Edinburgh, where he worked for a while. He also ran a dance class at the Fleece Inn ballroom. In 1841 he is recorded as an itinerant musician, residing at Damside with his mother Agnes and sisters May and Agnes, in 1851 he was a visitor on the Fore Row (with Mary Grieve, his sister) and in 1861 was ‘Musician; Blind’ at 11 Fore Raw. He firstly married Agnes Henderson in 1845 and shortly before his death secondly married Catherine Ballantyne. He died at 11 Fore Raw. He is sometimes regarded as the last of Hawick’s blind celebrities. William Elliot (b.1819) born in Roberton Parish, son of James, farmer at Borthwickbrae Burnfoot. He emigrated to Australia, settling at Nanango Station (which covered 195 square miles) in Queensland in about 1842. In fact he probably named the area Nanango, after the aboriginal word for the nearby waterhole. Fellow Borderer John Borthwick settled at the adjacent Tarong, and together the district became known as South Burnett. He probably stayed in Australia for less than a decade, but returned to Oliver Castle

Scotland. In 1851 he was at Borthwickbrae Burnfoot living with his brother James, and listed as ‘Lately from Australia’. He later lived on Mull. He married Christina C. Campbell and their children were Mary Salmons, Helen Elliot, Donald C., Jane B. and William. William (19th C.) listed as a High Street baker in Slater’s 1852 directory. William ‘Will’ (b.1827) son of Castleton shepherd George, he was brother of David and Barton. He was farm steward at Gatehousecote and later at Hyndlee farm. He was listed as farm steward at Langraw Scaur in 1851 and Gatehousecote Cottages in 1861. He married Margaret Rutherford in 1853 and their children included: Margaret J. (b.c.1852); James (b.1855); Janet (1856-1923), who married James Crobie and emigrated to New Zealand; Euphemia (b.1861) and George (b.1864). He died in Hawick, aged 88. William (b.1828/9) smith at Bedrule. He was married to Margaret and their children included Walter, Thomas and William. William Moffat (1846-91) eldest surviving son of James and Dorothea Moffat. He succeeded as tenant of Howpasley on the death of his father. He was one of the original members of the Border Rifles and having held the rank of sergeant for 10 years, was permitted to formally retain that rank when the troop disbanded. He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1873. He was also President of the Teviotdale Farmers’ Club in the 1880s. After retiring he moved to Langraw House. Later he and his sister (probably Jane, both unmarried) stayed at Whitriggs House. William (1869-1919) son of James and Jane Rutherford. He was a solicitor and lived at Woodburgh near Cauldmill. He died in a freak accident, falling out of the door of the express train from London, near Nuneaton. He married Jessie, daughter of Luke Greenwood, but the couple had no children (formerly spelled ‘Olifer’, e.g. the usual spelling given for the 1717 Cornet, and ‘Olipher’, as well as ‘Olever’, ‘Olifer’, ‘Oliferd’, ‘Oliner’, ‘Olinere’, ‘Oliver’, ‘Oliffer’, ‘Olilver’, ‘Olypher’, ‘Olyyer’, ‘Olyfard’, ‘Olyphier’, ‘Olypher’, ‘Olyver’, etc.; ‘Olyphant’ may have broken down as a separate name in early times).

Oliver Castle (o-lee-vur-kaw-sul) n. former castle near Tweedsmuir in Peeblesshire, which gave its name to the surrounding barony. The name of the castle has no connection with the Oliver family of the Jedforest area, although it may be related to the name ‘Olifur’d and has been suggested to come from a corruption of ‘Holy ford’. The lands were owned by the Frasers since Norman times, passing to the Hays by marriage in the early 14th century. The Hays of Yester also came to be owners of the lands of Todrig in Ashkirk Parish and, somewhat confusingly, these lands were annexed to the Barony of Oliver Castle, probably in the early 16th century, with the Hays holding the superiority.

Oliver Crescent (o-lee-vur-kre-sin’) n. street built on the most easterly portion of the lands originally granted by Douglas, built in 1875 and named after James Oliver. The area was at one time known as ‘Lawrie’s Den’. St. John’s Church was once here, converted to Arthur Armstrong’s Department Store in 1962. The composer Francis George Scott was born at No. 6. J.P. Alison designed the tenements at Nos. 20 and 22 in 1898.

Oliver Park (o-lee-vur-pawrk) n. council housing scheme developed off Weensland Road in 1922, the first of its kind in the town. It was named after Andrew Rutherford Oliver of Thornwood.

Oliver Place (o-lee-vur-plis) n. opposite side of the street from Bridge Street and Bourtree Place and off Oliver Crescent, the first part being a continuation of the High Street. In fact 83 and 85 High Street may have originally have been built as 1 and 2 Oliver Place. It was built around 1875-8 and named after James Oliver, who funded the construction. This area marked the eastern limit of the town lands granted in the Charter. No. 3 has a particularly ornate design, with the carved stone head above the entrance perhaps being the likeness of James Oliver, and his monogram being on 2 of the dormers, which also feature animal forms. Nos. 3, 4, 12 and 13 are grade C listed.

Oliver-Rutherford (o-lee-vur-ru-thur-fard) n. Archibald John of Dinlabyre (b.1821) 2nd surviving son of William Oliver of Edgerston and Dinlabyre. He joined the 93rd Highlanders, transferred to the 70th Regiment and retired as a Major. He succeeded to his father’s lands of Dinlabyre. He was a member of the Jedforest Club. He was succeeded by his son Archibald Rawlinson. Archibald Rawlinson (b.1866) succeeded his father to Dinlabyre. He was a mariner, who was retired by 1897. In that year he married Ellen Scott Elliot, daughter Walter Elliot, farmer at Hermitage. William see William Oliver Rutherford. William Alexander of Edgerston (1818-88) eldest surviving son of William Oliver of Dinlabyre and Agnes Chatto, he was born at Knowesouth. His father had inherited Edgerston...

from his grandmother and took the addition of Rutherford to his surname. He served for a few years in the Militia, reaching the rank of Major. He was a keen hunter, starting his own pack of harrriers in 1845, but giving up after an accident meant he could not mount a horse. He served as a Justice of the Peace in Roxburghshire. He did not succeed his father to Edgerston until 1879, when he was 61. In 1862 he married his cousin Margaret Jane, daughter of Edward Young (whose father married a sister of William Oliver Rutherford, Sheriff of Roxburghshire) and Elizabeth, who was daughter of J. Browne Roberts: Elizabeth’s sisters Katherine Jane and Margaret Amelia married brothers Thomas Macmillan-Scott of Wanchope and Charles Scott of Langlee. His children were: William Edward (b.1863), who succeeded; Archibald Aymer (b.1867); and Neta Isabella. He secondly married Mary Anne, daughter of W.H. Brakespear from Oxfordshire. They had 2 children: Malcolm; and Agnes. William Edward of Edgerston (1863–1931) eldest son of William Alexander. He also served in the Militia for several years. He succeeded his father to Edgerston in 1888, but sold the estate in 1915 (to Frederick Scott Oliver, who was not related) and emigrated to Kenya. In 1891 he married Nancy, youngest daughter of Gideon Pott of Dod. At the same time Mr. Pott’s eldest daughter was also married in the same church (to Isaac Bayley).

the Olivers (thu-o-lee-vurz) n. local family, for centuries concentrated in a triangle formed by Hawick, Jedburgh and the Carter Bar. Tradition asserts that they were once connected closely with the Frasers, or alternatively that they were descended from a West Country family or came from Spain (there is no evidence for the reality of any of these stories however). The early history is also confused by the existence of the surname Oliphant in Scotland. It is unclear exactly when the surname appeared in the Borders and of being part of many different raids around the Borders and 4 of them (either brothers, or from 2 generations) were sentenced to be hung at Jedburgh for failure to answer for their ‘diverse reifiss, herschhipps, slauchtaris, and stouthis’. The clan sometimes fought on the English side, e.g. during Ancrum Moor, when they switched allegiance to the Scots mid-battle; a letter of assurance to the English King in 1544 is valuable as a list of 24 of the most prominent Olivers at that time. Many of the clan were executed following the pacification of the Borders after the 1603 Union. Nevertheless, they continued to farm throughout the upper Rule valley and Southdean, 36 male tenants of that name being recorded in the Jedforest in 1669. In Hawick there were shoemakers of this name from early times, perhaps going back as far as ‘Hab o Hawick’ in the early 16th century. There have been at least 13 Cornets called Oliver – ‘For the Olivers stout, of Jed-forest, Lang counted him their stay, But now, he bow’d upon his staff, And his auld thin locks were gray’ [JTe].

Oman (ō-min) n. George (b.1838/9–94) born in Wick, he trained as a photographer in Edinburgh, and came to Hawick in 1867 following his marriage. In 1868 he started to work with photographer William Scott. Their business, Scott & Oman, took over William Beattie’s photography business at 4 Mill Port (although Beattie had previously been at 11 Back Row). From 1875 he also ran a tobacconist’s shop at 3 High Street. However, he left Hawick soon afterwards and is listed on the 1881 and 1891 censuses as a photographer on Caledonian Crescent in Edinburgh. He married Mary Ann Rutherford, who had been a domestic servant in Rose Street, Edinburgh. Their children were: Agnes McMorran (b.c.1868), who died of burns, aged 2½; Isabella (b.c.1871), born in Hawick; Jemima (b.c.1873), also born in Hawick; Mary Ann (b.c.1875), also born in Hawick; Nathaniel (b.1877), who died in infancy; Margaret Miller (b.1879); Hannah Turner (b.1881); Georgina Francis (b.1884); Kate Andrewina Gibson (b.1887).

Oor Ain Auld Toon  (oor-ahn-awld-toon)  n.  song written by Thomas Caldwell, with music by Adam Grant. It was first sung at the 1903 Colour Bussing by John Bell, and dedicated to all Hawick Callants in exile. Because of this, as well as the evocative words and rousing chorus, it is almost always sung at the Overseas Night.

oor ain yins  (oor-ahn-yinz)  n.  close members of one’s family – ‘Oor ain yins is sometimes used to distinguish one’s immediate family or one’s immediate household from those of one’s kindred less nearly related’ [ECS].
Oor Bonnie Border Toon

Oor Bonnie Border Toon (oor-bo-nee-bor-dur-toon) n. song written by Robert Hunter with music by Francis George Scott. Scott was responding to a request of the Hawick News for a tune to fit the words that it published in 1897. However, it was not published until 1902, and first sung at the Colour Bussing of that year by James Sutherland. It was then not sung again at the Colour Bussing until after WWII, although it is now much more popular. Some people have noticed a resemblance of the tune to ‘The Maple Leaf Forever’, but any similarity is only passing. Certainly Scott’s music is original, and indeed the accompaniment is fairly challenging for the pianist. For the 1957 song book Scott agreed to drop the original 4-bar interlude between the verses and a coda at the end (but would allow no other changes). The introduction is now played between each verse, although the Saxhorn Band version still includes the original interlude.

Oo’re (oor) contr. we’re, we are – ‘oo’re off then’, ‘Oo’re aa gaun ti Denum’ [T], ‘An’ show oo’re rale Hawick Callants tae the end o’ oor days’ [JEDM], ‘Oo’re gaan ti leh a pickl rain, A unk’ [ECS], ‘How typical o the great place oo’re privileged ti come frae that oors is the only toon to hie sic a memorial’ [IWL].

Oo’re aa gaun ti Denum (oor-aw-gawn-ti-de-num) n. children’s song, often sung while bouncing a child on the knees, with the knees being opened to let the child fall on the last word – ‘Oo’re aa gaun ti Denum, ti Denum, ti Denum, oo’re aa gaun ti Denum, on Sandy Fussy’s cairt’ [T]. The tune is the same as ‘Keel Row’ (also known as ‘The cat’s got the measles’). Some children in Denholm used to sing ‘Oo’re aa gaun ti Denum schuil in Jimmy Welch’s bus’ (with the addition of ‘The wheel came off, the axle broke, oh what an awfu joke!’) so there may once have been several variants. The song is mentioned in ‘Mang what an awfu joke!’ [ECS], ‘Guid gie us mense when ocht against us tells, To hae a herty lauch whiles at oors!’ [IHS].

Oors (oors) pron. ours – ‘The land here is oors forever, We'll defend it aye in their name’ [??], ‘... Unite to mak’ oors a better auld toon’ [TC], ‘... oo hev ti take eet ti thaim, speakin their language so they sing aboot oors!’ [HNe1914].

Oorsel (oor-sel) pron. ourselves – ‘in the end oo jist hid ti dae eet oorsel’, ‘...We auld folks smile, for a’ these pranks We did oorsel’ [WFC] (occasional variation of oorsels).

Oorsels (oor-sels) pron. ourselves – ‘oo’ve juist got oorsels ti blame’, ‘Oo can land yonder in time for the Common Riding and disguise oorsels’ [JEDM], ‘The street was a wee fairground A’ tae oorsels’ [??], ‘...An’ though we were oorsels alane She showed nae fear’ [WP], ‘Guid gie us mense when ocht against us tells, To hae a herty lauch whiles at oorsels!’ [WL], ‘... employed to indicate the plural of particular persons or things, e.g., Yin o oorsels’ [ECS] (also oorsel).

the Operatives (thu-ō-pe-ra-tivz) n. one of a number of races at the Common Riding in the 19th century, perhaps the predecessors of the Tradesmen’s Handicap. It is probably the same as the ‘Trades’ Purse’ recorded being run on the Friday in at least the years 1834 and 1835. In 1836 there were ‘Operatives Trades’ Purse’ races run at the Moor on the Friday morning, at the Haugh on the Friday evening and on the Saturday. In 1840 there were ‘Operative Trades’ Purse’ races at the Moor and then the Haugh on the Friday and also on Saturday. The ‘Operatives’ 3 Sovereigns’ race was run in 1843, with the ‘Operatives’ Purse’, ‘Operatives’ Trades Purse’, ‘Operatives’ Plate’ and ‘Operatives’ Stewpastes’ in the 1850s. In 1861 there was the ‘Operatives’ Plate’ on the Saturday (this is ‘operative’ in the sense of ‘workman’; see the Tradesmen’s).

Orchard (or-u-chuld) n. Orchard farm and mansion house, situated at the end of the Braid Road, just outside Hawick. The mansion is Georgian, dating from around 1800. It contains a sunken entrance and stepped entrance porch and the interior has much of the original plasterwork, although there were extensive alterations in the 19th century. The old stables bear an armorial panel with the symbols of the Scotts and the Douglases. Nearby ‘Old Orchard’ are restored early 19th century cottages. The earliest reference to the modern name of these lands is when ‘John Scot in Orchart, elder and younger’ witnessed a document for the nearby lands of Crook in 1529/30. In 1541 it was burned by the English along with Ormiston, with the cattle taken and 3 men killed. The land was also known as ‘Gyislandis’ in 1511 and ‘Gayslands’ in 1675, so it must have once belonged to someone called Guy, perhaps Guy of Denholm. The land was part of the ‘Cocklaw’ estate, held by the Gledstains of that Ilk through the 16th and 17th centuries. In the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls there were 8 householders listed there. John Smith and James Gledstains were living there in 1715, Adam Henderson in 1717, Robert Black and Walter Scott in 1720, William Black in 1723–33. Walter Scott (perhaps the same one) was herd there in 1728, Walter Taylor and James Cairns were there in 1733–44 and William Kinnaird and Walter Scott and James Laidlaw in 1737. It is said that in about 1734 it passed to a Mr. Dickson, but that seems to be an error. In fact it went to Archibald Crombie, Sheriff Depute of Roxburghshire, who was a relative of the Gledstains of some sort. In 1744 he sold it to Robert Howison, Bailie in Hawick, and on his death it passed to his grandson, William Dickson. Robert Cairns was there in 1749, Robert Biggar in 1782, George Cairns in 1786, James Scott was labourer there in 1789 and Andrew Pringle was there in 1796. After William Dickson’s death in 1788 it was probably inherited by his uncle, Robert Scott; he was recorded there in 1811, when it was valued at £310. Sometime after Scott died in 1813 it was purchased by the Douglases of Cavers. John Elliot of Borthwickbrae was living there in 1792. In 1797 the farmers there were Andrew Pringle, plus George and Walter Stavert, with the owner Robert Scott living at Orchard Cottage. In the 1860s it was owned by Douglas of Cavers, and occupied by manufacturer Walter Wilson. By the late 19th century it was possessed by William Scott, with the last connection with the Douglases of Cavers severed in about 1925 (also sometimes ‘the Orchard’; once spelled and pronounced ‘Worchart’ and variants, and still ‘Orchard’ in the mid-19th century; the name changed from ‘Gyislandis’, i.e. ‘the lands belonging to Guy’, possibly of Denum, to its present name in the 17th century; it is ‘Orchart’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map and ‘Orchyard’ on Stobie’s 1770 map).
Orchard Road

Orchard Road (or-churd-rød) n. name sometimes used for the back road from the Miller’s Knowes passing Orchard farm, a popular walking spot – ‘...There’s peace alang the Orchard way, An’ doon in Denholm’s bower’ [WFC].

Orchard Street (or-churd-stree) n. short street off Orchard Terrace, named in 1899, previously being part of Glebe Place (from 1888) and then of Glebe View (from 1892).

Orchard Terrace (or-churd-te-ris) n. street at the back of the Terraces, opened as a public road around 1895, although the first house (No. 2) was erected in 1882. There are many villa-type residences on the higher side. The name derives from its proximity to the road to Orchard.

Orchard (or-chur, -hurt) n. an orchard (also worchart).

Ordain (or-dän) v., arch. to appoint to an office, nominate for duty – ‘[They did] ordain John Hardie ... and John Tudhope ... two ordinary sworn burlymen’ [BR1688].

Ordainit (or-dän-ee, -i) pp., arch. ordained, nominated, appointed – ‘...it was ordainit at the command of the General and company that three baggage horses were to go to the armie out of the town’ [BR1644].

Orderly (or-der-lee) arch., arch. duly, properly, according to normal procedure – ‘...which day was orderlie keeped by virtue of a proclamation emitted by ye General Assembly’ [PR1722].

Ordinance (or-di-nius) n., arch. a prescribed religious observance, attendance at church – ‘John Armstrong and John Crozier subsequently appeared to answer a charge of ‘travelling upon the Lord’s day, and absenting themselves from ordinances’’ [JaT].

Ordinar (or-di-nur) adj., arch. ordinary – ‘...are altogether frustrated and disappointed of the ordinar free and gratuitous contributions of their Christian and charitable neighbours ...’ [BT1699], ‘...was not proclaimed at the kirke of Hawick which is not only knowne to be his ordinar residence ...’ [BR1712], ‘...an’ then for the Law – his ordinar’ hunting grund’ [BCM1881], ‘Yeh gowsty nicht (wui a wund ti blaw doors oot at wundils) a turbulent woare as the ordinar dang doon the first Peinelheuch Moniment’ [ECS], adv. ordinarily (often with ‘for’) – ‘At length a doubt wi’ some prevail’d, The ordinar’ ready payment fail’d’ [RDW], ‘The auld folk for ordinar’ guide to bed by ten, but on this nicht there was a coe like to calve ...’ [BCM1880] (also written ‘ordinar’).

Ordinary (or-di-mu-re) adj., arch. custom, usual practice, particularly in the phrase ‘for ordinary’, meaning habitually, according to custom – ‘...the Magistrates and Inhabitants of Hawick rode the marches of the Common yearly for ordinary on the last Friday of May, old stile’ [C&L1767].

Ord (örd) n. Alexander (15th C.) resident of Minto, whose surname is recorded as ‘Urde’. In 1493 Walter and Adam Turnbull in Hornshole were able to ‘compone’ for several crimes, including the theft of 2 cows and 13 sheep from him. He was probably related to Maragret, who is recorded in Minto in 1502. John (18th/19th C.) plasterer in Hawick, listed on Teviot Crescent in Pigot’s 1837 directory. Margaret (15th/16th C.) tenant at Minto Craigend, recorded in 1502, when David Scott (called ‘Lady’) in Stirkshaws had permission for leading a raid on the farms there. She had 2 cows stolen from her farm. Her surname is recorded as ‘Urd’.

Ord the Equestrian (örd-thu-ee-kwe-stree-in) n. popular performer at local Common Ridings and fairs in the mid-19th century. He was also known as ‘Ord the Circusman’, putting on open-air performances in the Haugh. He was born in Longformacus Parish, where his father was minister, and although destined for the ministry himself, he instead became a showman. His speciality was tricks involving horses, including jumping over up to 16 of them, and riding half a dozen at once. He used to ride standing on a bare-backed steed and impersonate characters, financed by the sale of lottery tickets for prizes. He is buried in Biggar old churchyard.

Orderin the Curds an Cream (or-de-rin-thu-kurdz-an-kreem) n. another name for the Thursday night Chase, when the Cornet formally orders curds and cream from a neighbouring farm (now St. Leonard’s) for the Friday morning of Common Riding week. This takes place on the Thursday preceding Common Riding week and is the first official ride of the ceremonies. It has happened since at least the 1840s, but only became officially part of the Common Riding ceremonies (i.e. under the aegis of the Ceremonial Committee) in 1888. Jed Murray performed the official ordering duties for almost 30 years, often with an original poem. The evening begins at 6 p.m. when the drums and fifes lead the Cornet and supporters around the Tower Knowe and up the Loan, finishing at the site of the Auld Brig. The riders proceed up to the Nipknowes, with the married men going first, headed by the Acting Father. This evening also has the first ‘Hut’, with the Cornet and Acting Father both giving speeches, and the Acting Father being presented with his badge. After the publican has agreed to supply the curds and cream the Hut winds up and there is the singing of all 14 verses of ‘Teribus’ at the farmhouse.

the Ordnance Airms (thu-ord-nyis-ärmsz) n. former hostelry at 12 (and perhaps also later 31) High Street. It was also popularly known as ‘the Cannon Inn’. For a long time the landlord was James Kennedy, a local veteran of Waterloo (and so presumably he named it); this was in the first half of the 19th century. The Harrow Inn was adjacent, both buildings being demolished to make way for the Royal Bank about 1857.

the Ordnance Survey (thu-ord-nyis-sur-vä) n. national mapping agency, which grew out of efforts to map Scotland in the 18th century. The first 25 inch maps of Hawick were published in 1863, with the survey being carried out in 1858. The ‘name book’ from this survey carries additional useful information about place names, including descriptions, spelling variations and the local authorities who were consulted.

oringer (o-rin-jur) n., arch. an orange, orange tree – ‘Orange and limons [costing £1/6/0. the 2 dozen in February 1681, and the former in May £1/10/0. a dozen’ [HAST1905].

Orm (örmn) n. (12th C.) son of Eilaf. He was named after Orm, son of Ketel, husband of Gunild, his father’s aunt. He was probably the man who gave his name to Ormiston at the confluence of the Kale and Teviot. In about 1145 he witnessed the charter of David I to Melrose Abbey. Sometime before 1152 he was witness to a charter concerning a gift of the church of Molle to Kelso Abbey. In the 1150s he witnessed a transaction between Robert Avenel and Melrose Abbey. In about 1155 he and his son John (of Hownam) witnessed a charter granting the church of Old Roxburgh to the Diocese of Glasgow. In about 1158 he witnessed a gift of Sawtry (in Huntingdonshire) to Warden Abbey by King Malcolm. In 1159/60 he witnessed a confirmation of the rights of Kelso Abbey by King Malcolm. Sometime before 1165 he granted land in ‘the other Crailing’ to Jedburgh Abbey. He also probably possessed the lands of Hownam, which were later owned by his son. He was succeeded by his son John, who was Sheriff of Roxburgh. His great-grandson William was the first to be styled ‘of Ormiston’.

Ormiston (or-nee-stin) n. farm and former estate about 2 miles east of Hawick, in the Parish of Cavers. This was the site of Cocklaw Castle, where the ‘Siege of Cocklaw’ took place in 1403.
However, the name occurs separately from ‘Cocklaw’ even as early as the 16th century, and so it is unclear if the names were precisely synonymous. In 1541 it was burned by the English along with Orchard, with the cattle taken and 3 men killed. John Scott in Ormiston is recorded in 1589 and Adam Scott in 1592. There were other Scotts there in the 17th century. It was owned by the Gledstains of that Ilk in 1643. In the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls there were 8 separate householders listed there, while ‘Bailyea Scott ormstown’ paid tax on 2 hearths in Hawick. James Rutherford was tenant there in the early 18th century. John Leithead was there in 1702, Thomas Miller in 1709, James Scott, James Simpson and Adam Huntly in at least 1715–23, John Leithead in 1716, Thomas Scott in 1718, William Turnbull in 1720, James Stoddart in 1726–27, Thomas Reid in 1726–37, Robert Henderson and John ‘Tait’ in 1727, Robert Elliot in 1727–29, William Laidlaw in 1727–37, Walter Hogg and John Main in 1728, Thomas Hobkirk in 1730, George Scott in 1733, Walter Reid in 1735–42, James Shiel in 1737–41 and James Douglas and Adam Hart in 1737. The ruins of the tower were obliterated by the present farmhouse, which was built around 1747 by carpet manufacturer Walter Elliot. William Lundie was a tailor there in 1753. James Rathie was there in 1781, James Hutton in 1784 and William Allan in 1788–90. The Elliots lived here in the 18th century, but Thomas Currer ‘of Ormstone’ inherited it through marriage to Helen Elliot. Currer was owner in 1788, when it was valued at £675 15s 4d. He is recorded as farmer there in 1797 and in the Land Tax Rolls of about 1811. William Allan lived there in 1788. The Wilson family owned it in the 19th century. Hawick’s first Provost, George Wilson was born there, as well as Victoria Cross awardee Walter Daykins. James Black was miller there in 1841. William Gray and Andrew Black were farmers in the 1860s. Charles Wilson is recorded in the house in 1868. ‘Mrs. Margaret F. McDonald or Muir’ was listed as owner in about 1874. Until about 1880 the main route from Hawick to the Newcastle area used to pass here on the way to Birneyknowe. In 1878 an old jug (now in the Museum) was found in a garden there, containing some 15th century silver coins. A 3-legged bronze cauldron, possibly 14th century, was also found there and is in the Museum (formerly spelled and pronounced ‘Wormston’ and variants; the origin is probably ‘Orm’s farm’, from the Old Scandinavian personal name Ormr, but may have been transplanted from another place of the same name; the name first occurs as ‘Ormistoun’ in 1509/10, ‘Ormistoune’ in 1535, ‘Ormostoun’ in 1592, ‘Ormston’ in 1680, ‘Ormestowne’ in 1683, ‘Ormstone’ in 1694, ‘Ormistoun’ in 1702, 1708, 1726 and 1737 and ‘Ormstone’ in 1761; it is ‘Ormristoun’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map; note there are several other places in Scotland of the same name, e.g. the place on Kale Water, in Berwickshire and in East Lothian).

Ormiston (or-mee-stin) n. farm and house in Eckford Parish, on the north bank of the Teviot, opposite where the Kale joins. The lands were probably those of ‘Creling villae Orme filii Gilasp’ mentioned in the c.1147 charter to Jedburgh Abbey. The lairdship was held by Orm’s descendants, who took ‘Ormiston’ as their designation and held the lands, which became a barony, until the late 16th century when James, ‘Black Ormiston’, was executed. It then passed to the Kers of Cessford and then the Earls of Roxburgh. In 1654 it was sold by William, Earl of Roxburgh to John Scott of Langshaw, who sold it in 1658 to Kerr of Chatto. Some time before 1678 it was purchased from Kerr of Chatto by Elliot of Wells. In 1718 it was acquired by William Elliot of Wells and was still held by an Elliot in 1788. It then passed to William Mein and later the Marquess of Lothian. A tower and village here were burned by Hertford’s men in 1545 (the origin is probably ‘Orm’s farm’, from the Old Norse personal name ‘Ormr’ and the Old English ‘tun’; the name first appears as ‘Hormiston’ in the early 13th century and it is ‘Ormistoun’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

Ormiston (or-mee-stin) n. Adam (b.1738) son of Robert and Helen Leyden. He was probably the Adam who witnessed a baptism for James Black at Packhouses in 1776. He was recorded at Drinkstone in a baptism of 1780. He was probably the Adam, farmer at Drinkstone, recorded in 1787–97 on the Horse Tax Rolls as owner of 4 horses, and on the Dog Tax Rolls in 1797. He is probably the Adam listed in 1788 as former owner of part of Weensland, valued at £41, and at that time belonging to William Dickson of Orchard. In 1766 he firstly married Agnes Turnbull, but she died shortly afterwards. In 1767 he secondly married Esther Douglas. Their children were: Robert (b.1769), tenant farmer at Drinkstone; Isabel (b.1770); Helen (b.1770), twin of Isabel, who died young; Janet (b.1773), William (b.1774) and George (b.1776), who all died in infancy; William (again, 1778–1859), a farm servant, who died unmarried, possibly the William living at Dykeneuk in 1841; and Adam (b.1780), who also died young. He also appears to have thirdly married Nelly Scott in 1787 and fourthly Isabel Scott in 1796. With his 4th wife he had 5 further children, including George (b.1799) and Janet (1803–76). It is possible that his widow was the Isabella who was listed as ‘Ind.’ in the 1841 census, and living at Greensidehall Cottage, aged about 55. The 1780 baptism was carried out by Rev. Williamson (meaning that he was a member of the East Bank Kirk), with witnesses James Ekron and William Robertson. Adam (1820–65) 2nd son of Robert, farmer at Drinkstone, and Helen Hall. He worked as an agricultural labourer and then as a mason’s labourer. In 1843 he married Elizabeth Storrie (1823–84) and they had sons: Robert (1846–1919), who married Isabella Clyde; and Thomas (b.1850/1). He secondly married Betsy Douglas and they had a daughter, Betsy (b.1859). He was living with his mother and other extended family members in 1851 and was at 3 Round Close in 1861. He ended his life by hanging himself. Adam (1827–96) eldest son of George and Anne Lockie and grandson of Adam, tenant in Drinkstone. In 1861 he was miller and farmer at Rutherford Mill in Maxton Parish. In 1853 he married Margaret Henderson (1828–1915). They had 5 daughters (including Betsy and Anne) and 3 sons, George, Adam and William. Sir Alan (d.c.1289) probably descendant (and perhaps son) of William. He witnessed many charters in about the 1270s and 80s. For example he witnessed a resignation of lands to Melrose Abbey by Richard of Rule for lands in How-nam, where he is ‘Alano de Hormiston’. He held lands in Pencatland in East Lothian, mentioned in the 1260s and 70s. His wife was Alice, who signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296. It is unclear who succeeded him, but there were several others of the same name at a similar time, e.g. Henry and John, who also swore fealty in 1296. It seems likely he was a direct ancestor of most of today’s Ormistons. Andrew of that Ilk (d.1495) eldest son of George. He gained the Baronies of Ormiston in 1464, as well as the lands of ‘Symonston’ and ‘Grymslaw’. He was a member of the panel of 1464/5 ruling on the inheritance of the Baronies of Cavers and Sheriffdom of Cavers, where he is ‘Andrew Ormestoune of that ilk’. Also in 1464/5 he was on the panel to decide on the disputed lands of Kirkton Mains and the Flex. He was witness to a sasine of the Cranstons for Denholm Mains in 1465/6, where he is described as ‘of Ormistoun’. He also witnessed several other charters in the 1460s to 1480s. In 1472 he resigned his lands of Ormiston so that they could be granted to his son Robert. In 1476 an action was brought against him and several others by John, Lord Somerville, relating to the lands of Blacklaw in Linton Parish, with the inquest including Ainslies, Kerrs, Douglaston, Pringles, Mathers, Gorlays, Turnbuls and Dalgleishes. In 1481 his brother Nicholas had a charter for lands in the Barony of Broxfield. In 1483/4 he was mentioned in a law-suit involving Thomas Oliphant and William of Abernethy, 2nd Lord Saltoun. In 1485/6 he witnessed a charter for Robert Ramsay of Cockpen. In 1486 he is recorded as a crown tenant in ‘Hairtherne’ in Yarrow. In 1490 he had to pay Thomas Stewart of Minto for the rental of Sunlaws. In 1492 he is mentioned as a creditor in the will of Sir David Scott of Buccleuch. He is probably the Laird of Ormiston fined for non-presence at the Justice-ai re in Jedburgh in 1493. He was mentioned again in a decree relating to Sunlaws in 1494. He married Joneta de Cranston and had children: Robert, who succeeded; George, who served as a gunner, and was tutor to his nephew George; and Margaret, who married John Falow of that Ilk. Andrew (b.1731) eldest son of Robert, grandson of Andrew, blacksmith at Bon-jedward, and direct descendant of James of that Ilk, ‘Black Ormiston’. He married Jean Turnbull in Kelso in 1760. Their children, all but the first born in Hobkirk Parish, included: John (b.1769), who died young. He also appears to have married Sarah Wilson in Hobkirk Parish in 1816. Their children included Janet, Sarah, Agnes and Adam. Andrew (1820–96) youngest son of John and Elizabeth Oliver. In 1861 he was a labourer living at Bedrule Lodge. In 1848 he married Mary Hymers (perhaps Aimers). They had 2 daughters and 4 sons, including: John (d.1919), who died at Inveresk; Edward (d.1890), who moved to West Derby; Andrew; George (b.1860), who lived at Bedrule. Archibald (1746–1805) born in Wilton Parish, eldest son of John and Isobel Scott. He became a gardener and later moved to Melrose. He is probably the Archibald listed as owner of ‘Howlands Inclosure’ in 1788, and still recorded that way in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls (when he was already deceased), with the same lands later being owned by Mrs. Elizabeth Graham and Mrs. Agnes Bowie. In Hawick in 1774 he married Betty Scott, who was from Goldielands. Their children included: John (b.1776); Betty (b.1778); John (again, b.1781), Sergeant in the Royal Marines; Walter (b.c.1785); Betty (again, b.1787); Archibald (b.1793), emigrated to America. Archibald (b.1793) youngest son of Archibald and Betty Scott. He was born in Wilton Parish. He married Isabel Hart from Eckford Parish, and they had one child, Archibald, who was a shoemaker. He emigrated to America, and it is unclear what happened to him. Archibald (b.1813–94) born in Melrose Parish, only son of Archibald and Isabel Hart. He was a shoemaker in Lilliesleaf, listed in Pigot’s directory in 1837 and Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1851 he was on the south side of Main Street. He married Agnes (or Nancy) Turnbull in Lilliesleaf in 1836, and she died in 1882. Their children included: Agnes (b.1837); William (b.1838); John (b.1840), who married Mary Baptie; Isabella (b.1842); Robert (b.1846); Helen (b.1851); James Russell (b.1854); Archibald (b.1856); and Mary (b.1858). He died in Ancrum. Archibald (1861–1909) eldest son of John and Mary Baptie. He became a violin teacher in Edinburgh. David (b.1776) son of John and Betty Laidlaw, he was born in Wilton Parish. He was a draper on the Howegate, recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. ‘David & Son’ was listed as a Howegate draper in 1837, as well as a manufacturer of hosiery and tailor; the same firm was still listed on the Howegate in 1852. In 1841 he was at about No. 21 Howegate. He married Joan (or ‘Johanna’) Halliburton, who died in 1854. Their children were: an unnamed child (d.1808); John (b.1809), draper in Hawick; Elizabeth (b.1816); Joan (b.1820); and another child who died in infancy. George of that Ilk (15th C.) son of James. In 1439 he was a witness to the return of Douglas of Bonjedward and in 1437 he was on an inquest along with his father for the Kers of Altonburn. He purchased lands at Makerstoun in 1451 and was granted his father’s Barony of Ormiston in 1452. His recorded sons were: Andrew, who succeeded; James; Nicholas; and Bartholomew. George (15th/16th C.) younger son of Andrew of that Ilk and brother of Robert. He appears to have been in charge of the estate of Ormiston in 1497 when there was a legal case about ejecting tenants from Ormiston Mill. He served as tutor to his brother’s son George, who would succeed to Ormiston. He served as one of Patrick, Earl of Bothwell’s bailies appointed for giving Walter Scott of Branxholme the lands of Grahamslaw in 1500. Both he and his nephew George appeared on the panel for deciding on the inheritance of the Barony of Cavers by James Douglas in 1509. He appears as a ‘gunner’ on H.M.S. Margaret in 1513 (the year of Flodden) and received payments as a gunner until 1544. In 1546 he was recorded receiving a pension. It is unclear if he had any family. George of that Ilk (15th/16th C.) son of Robert and Elizabeth Rutherford. His uncle George served as his tutor. He inherited Ormiston and Samielton in 1509, presumably meaning that he reached majority then. He was a member of the panel for deciding on the inheritance of the Barony of Cavers by James Douglas in 1509. He obtained lands in Maxton Parish in 1510. In 1530 he was among Border Lairds who gave security for their behaviour. He and his son George were involved with the lands of Fairnington, through a deal with Partick Hepburn of Bolton in 1538. He was at the Battle of Solway Moss in 1542, where he was captured and died soon afterwards. He married Elizabeth Rutherford, who was related to his mother, also Elizabeth Rutherford. As a result his son and heir James had to go through a process of legitimisation in 1515. His children included: Sir James, ‘the Black Laird’, who succeeded; George, who served as a quartermaster in the Scottish Court; and Andrew (d.1574), who was a Colonel of the Scots army in Holland and was killed in a duel. George (17th C.) probably younger son of Walter and grandson of James ‘the Black Laird’. He may have been referred as ‘in Heidschaw’. He witnessed events in Jedburgh Parish in 1644 and 1648 and a baptism in Ashkirk in 1650. In 1637 in Ashkirk Parish he married ‘Jonet Tennent’. They had 3 known children: a daughter (b.1639); Robert, tenant at Boonraw; and George, who married Isobel Brown. The family also lived in Roberton Parish. George (17th C.) younger son of George and Janet Ten- nant. His brother Robert was tenant in Boonraw. He was recorded living at Boonraw in 1688. He married ‘Issobell Broune’ in 1686 and their children (baptised in Roberton Parish, but actually the old Hassendean Parish) included: Bessie (b.1686); and twins Margaret and Janet (b.1688). The witnesses in 1688 were Robert (probably his brother) and Robert Storie. He is probably the George who (along with Robert) witnessed baptisms for Robert Storie in Roberton Parish in 1684, for George Hill in 1687 and for Dand Gray and Isobel Ormiston (perhaps their sister) in 1688. George (1748–1815) born in Wilton Parish, son of Robert, tenant at Boonraw, with his mother being Bessie Scott. He became a miller in the parish of Stow. In 1774 in Hawick he married Agnes Fairbairn, but they had no children and she died in 1816. In 1779 in Stow he married Margaret Boyd and they had 4 sons and 6 daughters, including James (b.1794), who was a carter in Stow and then moved to Dalkeith. George (d.1815) baker in Hawick. He could be the local man who contributed £2 2s to the subscription to support the war with France around 1799. Probably the same George was recorded as owner of a horse on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls for Hawick. It is possible he was the same as George who was miller in Stow, if he moved back to Hawick and became a baker. George (b.1799) youngest son of Adam, who was tenant in Drinkstone, his mother being Isabel Scott. In 1826 he married Anne Lockie in Robertson Parish. Their children (all baptised in Wilton) were: Adam (1827–96), a miller and farmer; William (b.1828), who died young; Margaret (1830–92), who married Alexander Logan; and Robert (1832–74), farm manager. Both he and his wife were probably deceased by 1841, when the 3 surviving children were living at Groundistone, with mole-catcher Robert Taylor and his wife. George (1801–74) eldest son of John and Elizabeth Oliver. He was born in Bedrule Parish (although the census claims Southdean or Chesters), and lived for a while in the Parish. He became a farm steward. In 1851 he was a labourer living at Dykesmuir in Cavers and in 1861 he was steward at Hallburn farm in Morebattle Parish. In 1823 he married Jessie King. Their children included: John (b.1825); Margaret (1827–78), who married Andrew McDougal; Elizabeth (b.1829); Agnes (1831–92), who married Robert Robertson; James (b.1833); Janet or Jessie (1835–1908), who married Andrew Fox; Isabella (b.1837), died in infancy; William (b.1839), also died in infancy; George (b.1841), also died young; and Robert. Their children were baptised in the Jedburgh Free Kirk. He died in Melrose. George ‘Dod’ (20th C.) son of Walter and Mary Begbie. He was a butcher in Hawick. He was the first post-war Acting Father in 1946. He married Catherine Whetlake and had children Helen, Mary, Walter and Kay. Hugh (b.1773) 2nd son of Robert, farmer at Boonraw, and Jean Buckham. He was born in Wilton Parish. Like his 2 brothers, he emigrated to America, eventually settling in Canada. He married Sarah Carter in England. Hugh (1816–79) 4th son of James and Mary Walker. He was born at Drinkstone. At about 2 years old he went with his family to ‘Scotch Settlement’ in New York state. After working on the family farm near Ox Bow, he became a blacksmith. He fought in the Civil War, participating in several battles in 1864 and 1865. He married Manie Barnes and they had 9 children. James of that Ilk (15th C.) probably succeeded Robert de Ormiston. He was likely to be descended from the first Orm. He may be the James who took part in the demolition of Jedburgh Castle in 1409. He was on an assize in 1425 for Bemersyde and an inquest for Caverton in 1429/30, when he was James ‘of Ormystoun’. In 1432 he was witness to a charter involving Andrew Rule, Lord of Primside. Along with his son George he was on a ‘retour’ panel for Ker of Altonburn. He was described as ‘Bailie in that part’ in a document of 1448 where Stephen Scott of Castlelaw gained the ‘Burrellands’ in Eckford Parish; this is the first noted instance of the name ‘Ormiston of that Ilk’. In 1452 he resigned his lands to be created into the Barony of Ormiston and re-granted to his son George. James of that Ilk ‘the Black Laird’ (c.1522–73) son of George and grandson of Robert. He was referred to as ‘Black Ormiston’ on account of his dark complexion and to distinguish him from his contemporary, John Cockburn of Ormiston (in East Lothian). He held the Barony of Ormiston on Kale Water, as well as Govansland in Maxton. In 1547, after the Battle of Pinkie, he was among men who swore allegiance to the King of England, but renounced this in 1549. He is listed in 1549 among the associates of Walter Ker of Cessford that Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme complained had helped the English in raiding and burning his farms in the lower Borthwick valley. He was on an assize in 1550 for lands granted to William Rutherford of Langnewton. In 1551 he signed the ‘Auld Band of Roxburgh’. In 1553/4 he was listed among the Rutherfords and others in an assurance not to harm the Kers; he signed with his hand led by the notary and the pledge for him was his brother Andrew. Also in 1553/4 he was on the panel for Sir Walter Scott inheriting his grandfather’s lands of Branxholme and Buccleuch. In 1554 he was surety for Rutherfords not to molest Walter Ker of Cessford; this was the first mention of what became a feud between him and the Kers. Also in 1554 he was on the inquest for Walter Scott of Branxholme succeeding as heir to his grandfather. He is listed in 1557 as part of the group of 200 local Scotts and others who rode to the Kirk of the Lowes to try to kill Sir Peter Cranston, as part of some feud. In 1559 he acted as a Bailie to Lord Bothwell. In 1560 he was involved in communications between Scotland, England and France, on behalf of the Regent, Earl of Arran. Also in 1560 he and John Rutherford of the Knowe were warded for a disturbance during the court held at Jedburgh. In 1561 he was accused of resetting some English cattle. In 1561 he and Scott of Headshaw communicated a letter assurance between Scotts and Kers. Also in 1561 he was among Border Lairds who appeared before the Queen to give names of those guilty of theft; and he later incurred a penalty for failing to deliver thieves to the Privy Council. In 1562 he was ordered to vacate the Earl of Bothwell’s lands at Anerum. In 1564 he was listed among Border lairds who were ordered to support the warden, Ker of Cessford. In 1564/5 he is recorded among the supporters of Scott of Buccleuch in the contract between the Scotts and the Kerrs. The same contract also mentions a ‘perticulare deidlie feid’ with Sir Walter Ker of Cessford, for which James Langlands of that Ilk and Nicholas Rutherford of Hundalee acted as his special ‘umpires’; this was over the lands of Nether Anerum and the murder of a servant of Cessford’s. Also in 1564 he was among 35 local men who were ordered to assist the Warden of the West Marches, who was Ker of Cessford. He and his uncle Robert of Old Melrose entered into an obligation with the Spottiswoods in 1565. In 1567 he was one of the men (along with his uncle ‘Hob’ Ormiston) accused of treason for helping James Hepburn, Earl of Bothwell and was said to be involved in the murder of Darnley. He was knighted in 1567, around the time that Bothwell married Mary, Queen of Scots. However, later that year he was among supporters of Bothwell who were declared fugitives. He was ordered to vacate Ormiston and Nether Anerum, as well as his wife’s lands of Herdminstoun. He was said to be in a group of Liddesdale thieves who raided Alnwick and was present at the Battle of Langside. In 1568 he and his uncle Robert were said to be hiding with Elliot of Whithaugh in Liddesdale. In 1569 he gave refuge to the Earls of Northumberland and Westmorland after they fled to Liddesdale following an unsuccessful rebellion in the north of England; he was said to have been met by Martin Elliot of Braidlie in Liddesdale and forced to stop shielding the English rebels. In 1571/2 he was listed as having been declared as a rebel, along with Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst and Thomas Ker of Cavers Carre. He seems to have been hiding out for the next 3 years and was finally captured by Sir John Carmichael at Halkwood, when the Earl of Morton was holding a Justice Court at Jedburgh. He was executed for treason in Edinburgh in 1573, and afterwards the Barony of Ormiston passed to the Kers of Cessford. He is recorded as ‘Blak Ormestoune’ in 1573 when 2 of his former servants were hanged for stealing livestock and burning Andrew Kerr’s corn. His first wife may have been the eldest daughter of Walter Scott of Synton and Whitslade. His second wife was Margaret, widow of John Sinclair of ‘Hirdmestoun’ (or Herdmanston). His son and heir was Walter, who married ‘Geizel’ (probably Grizel) Rutherford and Janet Turnbull. He also had a son, Andrew, with his 1st wife, and had no further children with his 2nd wife. Some of his descendants were tenants at Boonraw. He is already dead by 1576 when Andrew Commendator of Jedburgh was tried for associating with him after he was denounced as a rebel. James (1684-1746) son of Robert and Margaret Hill, and brother of John. He was born in Robertson Parish and his family were tenants at Boonraw. He was tenant farmer in Easter Burnfoot, Stirches and Boonraw. In 1721 he was living at Borthaugh and in 1724 at Boonraw. He is probably the James who in 1733 witnessed a baptism for Robert (probably his brother), also resident at Boonraw. He married Barbara (or ‘Baby’) Scott in Wilton in 1713; she was from Tandlaw. Their children were: Jean (b.1714), who died unmarried, aged 21; Robert (b.1716), who moved to Yorkshire; John (b.1717); James (b.1719), who married Jean Dunlop and stayed in Wilton; George (b.1721); John (again, b.1724), also moved to Yorkshire; Walter (b.1727); and Samuel (b.1731), also went to Yorkshire. The witnesses in 1721 were John Scott and William Graham, in 1724 were John Huntly and Gideon Turnbull and in 1727 were John (probably his brother) and Robert Scott. Along with Robert he witnessed a baptism for Robert Scott in Boonraw in 1729. James (1719–54) 3rd son of James and Barbara Scott. He was born in Wilton, where he lived and died. In Ashkirk Parish in 1724 he married Jean Dunlap. Their children included: Jean (b.1743); Barbara (b.1746); Robert (b.1748); Barbara (again, b.1750); and Walter (b.1752). James (1775–1840) youngest child of Robert and Jean Buckham. He lived for a while at the Rink, later at Drinkstone and then at Galashiels. He married Mary Walker in 1800. The family moved to America in 1819, settling in Rossie, New York. He and his wife were among the first members of the Presbyterian Church at Ox Bow. Their children were: Mary (1802–47), who married William Markwick; Robert (1803–54), farmer in Wilna; James (1805–65), lived in Gouverneur; Adam (1807–88), pioneer in Wilna; William (1809–72), blacksmith and soldier in the Civil War, who died at Carthage; George (b.1814), who died in infancy; Hugh (1816–79), blacksmith; Jennett (1819–55), who married Thomas MacRobie; George (1821–96), died at Ox Bow; and Thomas (1823–90), who went to California. James (b.1778) elder son of Walter and Betty Irwin, he was born in Wilton Parish. He farmed at Boonraw. In 1799 he married Janet Reid. Their children included: Walter (b.1800); Robert (b.1803), who was a mason in Bedrule and later a builder in Dalkeith; Janet (1805–76), who married John Fox; William (b.1807), who married Jessie Burton; and Betty (b.1810). He emigrated to the U.S.A. with his eldest son Walter and his daughters. Janet (b.1802/3) recorded in 1861 as a ‘Land Proprietor’ at Dykeneuk Cottage. She was unmarried. She could be the daughter of James and Janet Reid. John (15th C.) recorded as ‘Johannem Ormstuoue’ in 1482 when he was on the panel for Elizabeth Cunningham inheriting the lands of Appletreehall and the eastern part of Hasseendean. John (17th C.) tenant in Ormiston Mains (although it is unclear if this is the one near Hawick). He is recorded in 1684 when his son George was among those declared as fugitives for being a Covenanter. John (1682–1729) farmer at Boonraw, son of Robert and Margaret Hill. He is probably the John who witnessed a baptism for James in Boonraw (his brother) in 1727. In 1712 in Wilton Parish he married Margaret Aitkin, who died in 1726. Their children included: Robert (b.1715), also tenant in Boonraw; John (b.1717); John (again, b.1719), who lived at Wester Howlands and Damside; James (b.1722); (b.1724); Margaret (b.1726); and another daughter. John (1719–75) 3rd son of John, tenant in Boonraw and Margaret Aitkin. He was described as being of Wester Howlands and Damside. He first married ‘Jean Edaem’ and they had a son John (b.1742), who died in infancy. In 1745 he secondly married Isobel Scott, who was from Ewes. Their children included: Archibald (b.1746), a gardener, who moved to Melrose; John (b.1748), tailor in Hawick; Walter (b.1750); Jean (b.1754); Walter (b.1756); and Margaret (b.1761). John (b.1748) 2nd surviving son of John and Isobel Scott. He was born in Wilton Parish and became a tailor in Hawick. In 1767 he married Betty Laidlaw, from Cavers Parish, the marriage being proclaimed in Hawick. Their children were: Catherine (b.1774); David (b.1776), who was a tailor and merchant; and Betty (b.1779). John (1754–89) born in Wilton Parish, 2nd son of Robert, tenant in Boonraw, and Bessie Scott. In 1777 in Edinburgh he married Helen Russell and they had a son, Robert. He worked as a wright in Stow and died in Hawick. John (18th C.) wright in Hawick. He subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). It is possible he was the same as the son of Robert, who was a wright in Stow or the wright in Cauldmill. John (b.1769) son of Andrew, he was born and lived in Hobkirk Parish. He had sons: Andrew (b.1797), who emigrated; and James (b.1798), who was a farmer in Surrey. John (b.1781) eldest surviving son of gardener Archibald. He was born in Wilton Parish. He became a Sergeant in the Royal Marines, serving in the 75th Foot Regiment and being discharged at age 30. He was served heir to his father in 1813. John (b.c.1770) eldest son of George and Margaret Yule or Laing. He was descended from the Gattonside branch and hence from William of Westerhouses. He lived in Bedrule. In 1841 he was a labourer at Billerwell Lodge, and in 1851 his widow and one of his daughters (Isabel, stated to be ‘Pauper (Imbecile)’ were still there. He married Elizabeth Oliver, who died in Bedrule in 1860, aged 81. Their children included: George (1801–74); Isabel (1805–1870); Margaret (1811–85), who married John Brunton; Elizabeth (1812–91), who married Thomas Cranston; Robert (1815–99); and Andrew (1820–96), labourer in Bedrule. John (b.1809) eldest son of tailor David and Joanna Haliburton. He was a draper in Hawick, taking over the business from his father at 21 Howegate. He is recorded there in 1851. His wife was Janet from Newington. John (b.1836/7) born in Cavers Parish. He was Station Master at Belses. He is recorded there in 1861, with his aunt, Agnes Ormiston. John (b.1840) son of Archibald, shoemaker in Lilliesleaf. He married Mary Baptie in Cavers Parish. In 1861 he was listed as a shoemaker, living with his mother-in-law and family at Spittal-on-Rule. He later moved to Ancrum.

They had children: Archibald (b.1861), music teacher in Edinburgh; Robert Baptie (b.1863); John (b.1865); Agnes (b.1870); Mary Thomasina (b.1872); and Thomas (b.1874). Robert of that Ilk (d.bef. 1505) elder son of Andrew and Janet Cranstoun. He succeeded to the estate according to a grant made by his father in 1471/2. He married Elizabeth Rutherford and had 3 sons: George, who succeeded; William of Westerhouses; and Robert of Old Melrose. His widow secondly married Alexander Hailie of Muirdean. Robert of Old Melrose (d.c.1570) 3rd son of Robert of that Ilk and Elizabeth Rutherford. He served as a quartermaster for James V. He was described as ‘of New Hall’ in 1551 when he served as surety for his nephew James (‘Black Ormiston’) with Walter Scott of Sinton. He is said to have shown a 2-headed calf to the Queen Mother, Mary of Guise. In 1564 he resigned Old Melrose to his son John, reserving linterent for himself. He also held lands at Sauchtonhall and Blainslie. In 1567 he was convicted of complicity in the murder of Darnley, although it was unclear that he was really involved. He died soon afterwards and was succeeded by John. Robert (d.1719) tenant farmer at Boonraw, son of George and great-grandson of ‘the Black Laird’. He married Marion (or Margaret) Hill in about 1681. Their children (baptised in Roberton Parish, when it contained Hassedean) included: John (b.1682), who was tenant in Boonraw after him; James (b.1684), who married Barbara Scott; and Helen (b.1687). Additionally their son Robert was baptised in Wilton in 1696. The witnesses in 1684 were Robert Storie and William Hill (who may have been his wife’s father). The witnesses in 1696 were William and John Lamb. He is probably the Robert who (along with Robert Storie) witnessed a baptism for George (likely his brother) in 1688. Additionally, he is probably the Robert who (along with George) witnessed a baptism for Robert Storie in Roberton Parish in 1684, one for William Pott in 1687 and another for Dand Gray and Isabel Ormiston (perhaps their sister) in 1688. In 1696 he witnessed a baptism (along with Robert Storie) for William Nichol in Boonraw. In 1706 he paid for the use of the Wilton mortcloth (meaning that a family member died). Robert (1696–1740) 3rd son of Robert and Marion Hill. He was a farmer in Wilton Parish (although it is unclear where exactly), living at Boonraw in 1733. In 1732 he married Helen (or Ellen) Leyden and she died in 1743. Their children included: Helen (b.1733); John (b.1736), who died young; and Adam (b.1738). The witnesses in 1733 and 1738 were James (who was probably his brother) and John Lamb. He may be the Robert who (along with James) witnessed a baptism for Robert Scott in Boonraw in 1729. Robert (1714–76) son of John and Margaret Aitkin. He also farmed at Boonraw. In 1758 he witnessed a baptism for John Scott, resident of Boonraw and in 1764 (with Walter) for a different John Scott in Boonraw, as well as for William Lockie. In 1744 he married Bessie Scott, who died in 1757. Their children were: James (b.1746); George (b.1748), who lived in Edinburgh and died a bachelor, with his estate divided among his siblings; Elizabeth (b.1752), probably died young; John (b.1754); Anne (b.1756); and Elizabeth (b.1760). He appears (unless this is another Robert) to have secondly married Jean Buckham and had children: Janet (b.1765), who married Walter Scott and emigrated to America; Robert (b.1767), who emigrated to America; Elizabeth (b.1770), who married a Hobkirk and emigrated to Rossie, New York; Hugh (b.1773); and James (b.1775). The witnesses in 1746 were George and James Scott (perhaps related to his wife) and in 1770 were Archibald Elliot and Adam Ormiston (perhaps his brother). In 1770 he witnessed a baptism in Wilton for Robert Cowan and another for James Turnbull. He may be the Robert still recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as farmer at Boonraw; Walter was listed after him and so presumably his brother or son. Robert (b.1716) eldest son of James and Barbara Scott. He was born in Ashkirk Parish. He moved to Yorkshire, where he married and had a son, whose surname was written ‘Ormston’. Robert (b.1767) son of Robert and Jean Buckham, he was born in Wilton Parish. He lived at Mount Hooly, near Abbotsford and had children baptised in Minto and Jedburgh parishes. In 1793 he married Isabella Bell from Ancrum. Their children included: Margaret (b.1794); Jean (b.1796); Robert (b.1807); Thomas (b.1814); and Hugh (b.1814). At the age of about 50 he moved with his family to America, settling in the ‘Scotch Settlement’ in St. Lawrence County, New York. Robert (1769–bef. 1841) eldest son of Adam and Esther Douglas. He was tenant farmer at Drinkstone, probably taking over from his father. In 1817 he was part of a law-suit brought by John Allan over a bill that his father had been caution for in 1802. In 1819 he married Helen Hall in Wilton Parish. They had 4 sons: William (b.1818), a warehouseman; Adam (1820–65); Robert (b.1821); and

Thomas (b.1823). In 1841 his widow was living at Dovemount along with their 4 sons and in 1851 on Wilton Place with Adam and Thomas. Robert (1803–91) born in Wilton Parish, son of James and Janet Reid. He was a mason at Bedrule Manse Cottage in 1841. He had moved to Edinburgh by 1851 and later became a builder in Dalkeith. He married Janet Forsythe from Coldingham, and their children were: Ebenezer Forsyth (1828–1926); Margaret (1830–1911); James (b.1832); unnamed child (b.c.1834); Robert (1837–1909); George (1838–77); Elizabeth (1841–58); Jessie (1843–1916); John (1848–1916); and Andrew (1850–1911). His children were born in Coldingham, Wilton, Bedrule and Hob Kirk. Robert (1815–99) 2nd son of John and Elizabeth Oliver. He was probably born in Southdean. He became a hedger in Hob Kirk Parish. In 1851 and 1861 he was at Billerwell Lodge. His married Elspeth or Euphemia Wood (1823–90). Their children included: Ann (1843–1924), who married William Wylie; John (1845–1911), who died at Hawick; George (1847–1910), who moved to Rothbury, Northumberland; James (1849–98); Elizabeth (b.1851), who married Andrew Weddell; William Andrew (b.1853), who died young; Janet Wood or Jessie (1855–1933); Thomas Shiel (1858–1931), who married Janet Weatherston and moved to Coldstream; Robert (1860–84), who married Betty H. Davidson and Isabella Dalgleish; and Helen Wood (1864–1934), who died in Hawick. Robert (b.1818/9) coal clerk at Under Damside in 1841. He was living with his wife Margaret (who was from Lilliesleaf), daughter Ann J. and cousin David Scott (from Traquair). Robert (1832–74) 3rd son of George and Anne Lockie. He was born at Drinkstone, where his family were tenants. In 1861 he is listed as groom at graden in Linton Parish and was later a farm manager. In 1860 he married Margaret Wood (1834–1903) and they had 4 sons: George (1838–1938), who emigrated to Vancouver; William (1863–1904), who married Margaret Pringle; Adam (b.1865), who worked for the South African Post Office in Transvaal; and John (1866–1948), who married Marion Laing Frazer and worked for the Buccleeuch Estates. Samuel (b.1731) youngest son of James and Barbara Scott, he was born in Wilton Parish. Along with his brothers Robert and John, he moved to Yorkshire. In 1755 at Great Ayton he married Elizabeth Hoof. They had 4 sons and 2 daughters. The family name became spelled Ormston. Walter (16th/17th C.) son of James ‘the Black Laird’, with his mother probably being a Scott. His father was his tutor in 1564 when he was sued by the former tenants in Ancrum Mill. In 1603 he and his wife had a charter of the Templelands of Grahamslaw. He was still alive in 1628 and living then at Grahamslaw in Eckfor Parish. He married Grizel, daughter of John Rutherford, ‘Cock o Hunthill’, and secondly married Janet Turnbull. His children included: William, who mortgaged the Templelands and had at least 4 sons; Andrew, who is recorded in Jedburgh in the mid-17th century, with 4 sons; George, who married Janet Tennant and was ancestor of the tenants at Boonraw; and Robert, who was apprenticed in Edinburgh in 1628. Walter (1752–1818) son of James and Jean Dunlop. He farmed in Wilton Parish. He was listed as farmer at Boonraw in 1797, along with Robert, and also Walter Scott. He married Betty Irvine (or Irwin) in Wilton Parish in 1776. Their children included: James (b.1778); and William (b.1779), who emigrated to the U.S.A. Walter (b.1783/4) 4th son (and 2nd surviving) of Archibald, gardener in Wilton and then Melrose, his mother being Betty Scott from Goldielands. In about 1804 he founded the firm of Ormiston and Rennie, seedsmen in Melrose. In 1814 he married Agnes Brown, who died in 1846. They had 3 sons and a daughter, with the eldest son, Archibald (b.1815) carrying on the seed business. A grandson, Charles Walter, died in Melrose, bequeathing money to found the Ormiston Institute and a public park. William (13th C.) younger son of William of Hownam and Landles and brother of John of Landles. He was great-grandson of the firstOrm, after whom Ormston on Kale Water was named. In about 1240 he witnessed a gift of the Church of Dalmeny from Roger de Moubray to Jedburgh Abbey and another undated charter for the same Roger de Moubray. He served as a juror in 1245. He was probably under the command of Patrick, 5th Earl of Dunbar, and was listed under his name in the pledge made around 1244. He was probably succeeded by Alan. William (15th/16th C.) recorded being in Makerston in 1502. Along with Thomas McDougall, in the same place, he was absent from 2 indictments given at Jedburgh, although the crimes are not recorded. William (16th C.) 2nd son of Robert of that Ilk and Elizabeth Rutherford. He was the first of the Ormistons of Westhouses near Melrose, and the Gattonside branch of the family. He was brother of Robert of Old Melrose and uncle of James of that Ilk, ‘Black Ormiston’. He appears in many records from 1539 and is sometimes referred to as ‘William with the heid’. He was implicated in the machinations following the murder of Darnley and banishment of the Earl of Bothwell, but was ultimately pardoned. William Douglas of Bonjedward was security for him in 1569. He married Katherine Nesbit and their sons Robert and James had to be legitimised because of the parents were related. William (17th C.) recorded in the 1663 Land Tax Rolls in Lilliesleaf. He paid tax on £104 for his part of Cringles. William (1779–1864) son of Walter and Betty Irwin and great-grandson of Robert. His elder brother James farmed at Boonraw. He married Jane Graham in 1801 and emigrated to America a year later, settling near Bovina, Delaware County, New York. He had 2 sons and 5 daughters. William (b.1807) 3rd son of James and Janet Reid. He may have been born in Southdean Parish. He was listed among heads of households in Wilton Kirk in 1835, being then at Lawrie’s Den, and gardener at Hawick in 1840. In the 1841 census he was at Harwood as an agricultural labourer. In 1851 he was listed as a gardener at West Nisbet farm in Crailing Parish. He married Jessie Burton. Their children included: John (b.1834); Walter (b.c.1836); Elizabeth (b.c.1838); Helen (b.c.1840); George Henry (b.1842); Isabella (b.1843); James (b.1845); Mary; and Jessie. His children were born in Wilton, Hawick, Hobkirk, Southdean, Ancrum and Crailing Parishes. William (1818–64) eldest son of Robert, farmer at Drinkstone, and Helen Hall. He worked as a warehouseman. He married Jane Watson (from Annan), and they appear to have had no children. They are listed and on Walter’s Wynd in 1851 and Melgund Place in 1861 (formerly written ‘Ormeston’, ‘Ormestoun’, ‘Ormiston’, ‘Ormistoun’, ‘Ormistoun’, ‘Ormstone’, and variants).

Ormiston Lochend see Lochend

Ormiston Mains (or-mee-stin-mānz) n. former name for a farm to the east of Ormiston, on the old Hawick to Newcastle road, now called Sunnyside. John Ferguson was there in at least 1779–88. The farmer there in 1797 was Robert Murray (it is marked on Stobie’s 1770 map and is ‘Ormstownmains’ in 1797).

Ormiston Parkheid (or-mee-stin-pawrk-hed) n. former farm a little to the north-west of the main Ormiston farm. Francis Aitkin was there in 1779. There were Turnbulls there in the 1850s and Walter Scott was farmer in 1861. It is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map, and still appears on modern maps.

orpie-leaf (or-pee-leaf) n., arch. orpine, live-forever, a flowering plant of the genus Sedum, having fleshy leaves and often growing on old walls (also wurpie).

orpit (or-pee’,-pi’) pp., poet. discontented, peevish – ‘What ails the orpit dyoterd stycke’, ‘The kerlyn loudly said’ [JTe].

Orr (öör, or) n. Dr. James (1844–1913) born in Glasgow, son of engineer Robert and Montgomery Hunter. He became an apprentice bookbinder before training for the ministry, earning an M.A. from Glasgow University in 1870 and a B.D. in 1872. He was a probationer in Irvine before becoming minister of East Bank Church in 1874. Known as a Liberal, he campaigned for reducing liquor licences. In 1879 he helped draft the United Presbyterian declaration statement against total endorsement of Calvinism. He obtained a Doctorate of Divinity (by examination) from Glasgow in 1885. He was particularly outspoken in opposition to the Common Riding in the 1880s and 1890s. He was Chairman of Hawick School Board. In 1891 he was then elected Chair of Church History in the United Presbyterian College, Edinburgh and later Chair of Systematic Theology and Apologetics in the United Free College, Glasgow. He lectured in America in 1895 and 1897. He was a joint convenor of the United Presbyterian union (with the Free Church) committee in 1896. In 1874 he married Hannah Fraser, daughter of James Gibb. He published many theological works, including ‘The Christian View of God and the World’ (1893), ‘The Ritschlian Theology and Evangelical Faith’ (1897), ‘Neglected Factors in the Study of the Early Progress of Christianity’ (1899), ‘The Progress of Dogma’ (1901), ‘The Problem of the Old Testament’ (1905) and ‘Revelation and Inspiration’ (1910). In his last years he was general editor of the ‘International Standard Bible Encyclopaedia’ (1915). He was a regular contributor to the London Quarterly Review and other magazines, and helped edit several magazines of the United Church. He died in Glasgow and is buried in Cathcart cemetery there.

James (19th C.) became postmaster in Hawick in 1879. He married Euphemia Hamilton. His adopted daughter Ethel married Robert Richardson. Thomas (b.1827/8) from Airdrie, he was farmer at West Riddell. He was there in 1861, farming 230 acres and employing 2 people. He was still there in 1868. His wife was Mary.

Orrock

Orrock (o-ruk, o-reek) n. Rev. Alexander (1652–1711) first minister of Hawick Parish after the Revolution of 1688, serving from 1691 until his death. He was the son of Alexander of Fife, and Elizabeth, sister of Sir John Wemyss of Bogie. He studied at St. Salvator’s College and St. Andrews University, where he graduated in 1668. How he spent the next 19 years is unknown, but he was licensed by St. Andrews Presbytery in 1687. In 1688, while he was minister in Dundee, he was removed for some statements (perhaps misinterpreted) he had made about the King, and imprisoned for a while. During that time he was known as a staunch opponent of Episcopacy, and along with his friend Alexander Hamilton of Kinkel, was imprisoned on more than one occasion. He was called to St. Andrews after the Revolution, in 1690, but rejected by the Synod there and so came to Hawick the following year. He was a member of the Assembly in 1692. In 1694 he was also called to Peebles, but after much discussion this was overruled by the Assembly. He also declined calls to Kelso (in 1701/2) and Muthill. In 1705, along with 2 local colleagues (Robert Cunningham of Wilton and Robert Bell of Cavers), he protested Acts passed by certain Synods, but not being a member of the Assembly they were removed, causing a major scene, with a reconciliation only affected after the King’s advisors intervened. He is said to have been both rigid in discipline and extensive in charity. An example of his strict discipline occurred when he made the Town Magistrates wait until they had asked pardon of the Kirk Session on their uncovered knees, for some perceived offence against decency. He called a meeting of the Parish heritors in 1710 to stent themselves to pay the salary of the schoolmaster, this being essentially the founding of the Grammar school. The ‘Orrock Bequest’ was signed by him shortly before his death in 1711. He left 9,000 merks for the school (paying the salary for the schoolmaster and to teach poor children for free), as well as 1600 merks for the needy poor, and his extensive library for the parishioners. Some of the volumes from this library were deposited with the National Library of Scotland in 1980. From his funds, the Orrock Bursary was competed for by local schoolchildren every 3 years until well into the 20th century. As a result of this benevolence the area around the Grammar School was named after him. He died unmarried. A memorial tablet was erected outside the church after his death, with a marble copy in the vestibule of the Old Parish Church (which incorrectly says he was a minister for 22 years and gives the date of his death 8 days late); it bears the likeness of his head, which is a very rare example of statuary from this period of Hawick’s history. The heritors of the Parish gave money for his tombstone to be replaced in 1766. He also gave 4 inscribed silver communion cups to the Church in the 1790s and a silver baptismal basin made from melting down his silver spoons after his death, all of which are inscribed ‘Ecclesiae Havicensi’ and the relevant date. In addition, a commemorative tablet was placed at the High School in 1932 by the Callants’ Club. His only published work is ‘Address to the General Assembly, 1705, against the Tyrannical Imposition of the Synod of Merse and Teviotdale’. Hector Heatley (d.1862) 2nd son of Edinburgh surgeon-dentist James, he trained as an architect. He designed the Leyden Monument, which was built in Denholm in 1861. His only other known structures are railway stations at Lartington, Appleby East and Kirkby East. He married Janet Reid and they had 1 son and 1 daughter. He died at the age of 31, before being able to establish himself. Henry (17th/18th C.) tailor in Hawick, presumably a relative of Rev. Alexander, perhaps his nephew (since he was said to have died unmarried). He was recorded in 1694 owing 8 pounds for his Burgess fee. He witnessed baptisms for William Swan and John Aitkin in 1698, for smith James Scott, for weaver John Jolly, for Walter Wilson, younger in Castlehill, for tailor Alexander Hislop, for Walter Riddell in Allanhaugh Mill and for Walter Purdom in 1700, for James Laidlaw in Branholme Town in 1702 (along with tailor Alexander Hislop), for merchant Walter Weens in 1704, for shoemaker George Oliver, carrier Robert Scott (in Branxholme), tailor James Cowan in 1705, for gardener James Dunn in 1707, for Alexander Ogilvie in 1708, for tailor Walter Riddell in 1709, for herd John Turnbull in 1710, for Thomas Anderson in Branxholme Town and for carrier Walter Deans in 1713, for shoemaker Walter Scott in 1714, for gardener Walter Paterson in 1715 and for several people in 1726. He seems to have served as a kind of general-purpose baptismal witness for baptisms. He was recorded as a tailor in 1702 and 1709. He was ‘servitor to our late minister’ recorded in the Kirk Session records of 1711. He was also Treasurer for Hawick Parish Session in the 1720s and was made an elder of the Kirk in 1723. In 1725 he witnessed baptisms for maltman John Moss and for Thomas Wilkie. In 1727
the Orrock Bequest

He was recorded as possessor of the weigh-house, which was on the ground floor of the Tolbooth. He married Helen Scott in Hawick in 1706 and their children included Henry (b.1707); and Janet (b.1709). The witnesses in 1709 were Bailies Walter Elliot and Robert Ruecastle. Janet nee Ogilvie (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick, mentioned in a court case of 1815, when Henry Stockwell (servant to a Hawick butcher) was found not guilty of assaulting her ‘with intent to ravish’. Her name is given as ‘Janet Ogilvie, or Orrock’. She was probably daughter of George Ogilvie and Margaret Learmond, born in Hawick in 1780. She was married Adam and had a daughter Jean in Kelso in 1811 (also sometimes spelled ‘Orrok’).

Orrock House (o-ruk-hoos) n. house on the left of Stitches Road, formerly a church manse??.

Orrock Kirk (o-ruk-kirk, o-reek-kirk) n. church built in Orrock Place in 1874 as the new premises for the ‘Green Kirk’ First Secession Church congregation. It was built right down to the riverside, which is unusual in Hawick. The masons were the local firm of George Tait. The site had formerly held a public wash-house. The church united with St. Mary’s in 1951. The building became renamed ‘Orrock Halls’ after the church closed, and continued to be used for church functions. However, from around 1990 it has been used as a knitwear factory showroom and adjacent tea-room.

Orrock Kirk Mutual Improvement Society (o-ruk-kirk-mew-choo-ul-im-proov-min’su-sl-i’ee) n. former organisation associated with Orrock Church, operating around 1900.

Orrock Place (o-ruk-plis, o-reek-plis) n. street between the Sandbed and the Albert Bridge, known by that name since the end of the 17th century, after Rev. Alexander Orrock. It was the site of the old Grammar School, a carpet factory and later the Orrock Church. The street is essentially the western part of the Sandbed and was named around 1840. Originally the name was used for the western side, which was separated from the other side of the Sandbed by the central block of houses (later removed). The name ‘Teviot Brig Road’ was also used. This general area was a detached portion of Wilton Parish until moved by the Boundary Commission in 1890. A gap site was built up by the council in 1960 between the Ewe and Lamb and the old Grammar School.

Orrock Place Kirk (o-ruk-plis-kirk) n. another name for Orrock Kirk.

Osbert (oz-bur’) n. (d.1174) Prior of Jedburgh who became the first Abbot when it was rasied to an Abbey in 1147. He was Abbot when he witnessed the renewal of the grant of Ringwood to Melrose Abbey in the late 1160s and the confirmation afterwards.

Osborne (oz-born) n. Rev. James (d.1711) educated at Glasgow University, he was said to have been an ousted minister of Cavers Parish who held secret sermons during the Covenanting days. However, he was actually a private chaplain to the Douglas family, working as tutor to the children of Sir William Douglas. He was said to have given conventicles locally in the 1670s. Douglas was summoned in 1676 to answer the charge of illegally having a chaplain without a licence from the Bishop, and both men were ‘put to the horn as outlaws’. He survived until the Revolution and was ordained as minister at Kilmarnoch in 1688. In 1697 he was appointed minister at Greyfriars in Aberdeen and also Professor of Divinity at Marischal College. His children included: William, also a minister; James; and Oswald.

Osburn (oz-burn) n. John (18th C.) baker in Hawick. In 1755 he married Isabel Turnbull. Their children included: John (b.1757); Elizabeth (b.1759); Christian (b.1760); Martha (b.1762); Elizabeth (again, b.1764); Joanna (b.1766); Martha (again, b.1771); and John (again, b.1772). The witnesses in 1757 were the whole congregation, in 1764 were Bailie Turnbull ‘older and younger’, in 1766 were Bailie Turnbull Senior and Bailie Turnbull Junior, in 1771 were Bailie Turnbull of [probably Fenwick] and another Bailie and in 1772 were Bailie Turnbull of Fenwick and James Turnbull. In 1762 and 1766 he himself witnessed baptisms for wright Walter Scott (this is presumably a variant of Osborne).

Osna (oz-na) n. poetic name for the Oxnam Witter – ‘Sweet Osn’a stream, by thin-leav’d birch o’erhung, No more should roll her modest waves unsung’ [JL].

Ossian (o-shee-in) n. legendary bard who lived in either Scotland or Ireland around the 3rd century, supposedly blind and the son of Fingal – ‘Give me the hills where Ossian lies And Coila’s Minstrel sang’ [HSR].

ostler (ost-lur) n., arch. an innkeeper – ‘Summoned Isobel Cranston, the ostler, for selling all after sunset …’ [Ash1642].

Oswald (oz-wald) n. (604-642) King of Bernicia from about 635, when he defeated Cadwalla, until he was killed at the battle of Maserfrith. He was son of Æthelfrith of Bernicia and Acha of Deira and would have been Hawick’s King. He was the first Bernician ruler to accept Christianity and is also known as ‘St. Oswald’. The Hawick area probably made the main conversion to Christianity during his reign. St. Cuthbert’s Church contains a statue of the Saint holding the head of Oswald in his left hand. His head is supposed to have been buried along with St. Cuthbert at Lindisfarne for safety, and thereafter it became a symbol of the Saint.

Oswulf (oz-wulf) n. (12th C.) son of Uchtred, he was listed as a witness to the grant of King David to Melrose Abbey in about 1145. He granted the lands of Ringwood to Melrose Abbey in the reign of King Malcolm. This was probably sometime between 1153 and 1165. The grant was with the consent of his son, also Uchtred, and also Uchtred’s son Uchtred, with a confirmation in the period 1165-68. It is unclear to what family these men belonged or why they previously held these Teviothead lands; however, the family names are similar to relatives of Gospatric, Earl of Northumbria and also of Dunbar; a later Gospatric also witnessed the confirming charter in about 1166. He was mentioned in a charter of the 1360s confirming Ringwoodfield to Melrose Abbey, with his name there being ‘Osulfo de Rengwude’.

o’t (öt, ò) contr. of it – ‘ee made a guid job o’t, ‘There was an auld wife had a wee picke tow, An’ she wad gae try the spinnin’ o’t [T], ‘…Withoot the least fear o’ reflection, I’d wad my heid o’t – ‘The maire ye glow’r ye find attraction, Aye raise the greed o’[JoHa], ‘…A grassy pule to kep the lap o’[JBS], ‘…May hearken to a fool’s advice, And even o’t get guid’ [JoHa], ‘…I wull ta’ haud o’ the bouchs o’[HSR], ‘…Ika ane for the frute o’[HSR], ‘…Iwa at taking o’t’ [JBS], ‘There’s nai peace for me; I’ll try the plan o’ quitting o’t, And tak’ a cup o’ tea’ [DA], ‘…The waiting o’ he scarce could thole’ [WFC], ‘In times o’ war, an’ times o’ peace, He ever makes the best o’t, He leaves the auld loquacious geese Ti gabble at the rest o’[WP], ‘…And sniff the ingan heavy steam that rase – I sometimes get a waft o’[JBS], ‘…therefore he is outlawed in other twenty pounds in respect others (u-thurz) pron., pl., arch. each other, one another (often paired with ‘aither’) – ‘…Robert Deans, late bailie, and Robert Scott …being accused …for bluiding aither of them uthers …’ [BR1640] (also written ‘uthers’; cf. ither and other).

otter (o‘ur) n., arch. the barb of a fish-hook.

Otterburn (o‘ur-burn) n. village in Redesdale, where the Otter Burn meets the River Rede, site of the 1388 Battle of Otterburn, the details of which were recorded in a 14th century Latin poem and later romanticised in a ballad. A group of Scots (specifically James Douglas, the Earl of Moray and the Earl of Buchan) met at Southdean Kirk to plan an unofficial invasion of England. They taunted Percy at Newcastle, taking his standard down the Teviot as far as Spittal-on-Rule, where he was killed. The practice achieved its height of popularity in the early 20th century, and was declared illegal in the 1970s, when otters became long preserved at Cavers House. Tradition says that the Douglas banner was carried by a Stavert – ‘The deed was done at the Otterbourne About the breaking of the day; Earl Douglas was buried at the braken bush, And the Percy led captive away’ [T], ‘In vain! – his standard’s sink! – his squads yield! – His bowmen fly: – a dead man gains the field’ [JL].

Otterhole Sike (o‘ur-höl-sik) n. stream in the upper Borthwick valley, to the north-east of Craik village. It flows southwards to join the Dirthope Burn, which then flows into the Borthwick Water. On the west side are the remains of an ancient earthwork, about 64 m by 43 m, formed by an earthen bank with an outer ditch. It has been mutilated by forestry trenches.

otterhoond (o‘ur-hoond) n. otterhound, a large hound with a shaggy coat, bred for otter hunting in the early 19th century. The practice was justified to protect fishing, and involved men following the hounds on foot and horseback. The most famous local proponent of the sport was Ha- wick’s Dr. John Grant, who lived at the top of Walter’s Wynd. The Border Magazine of 1904 describes a particular hunt which he led in 1863, in which his dogs tracked an otter from Burnfoot down the Teviot as far as Spittal-on-Rule, where it was killed. The practice achieved its height of popularity in the early 20th century, and was declared illegal in the 1970s, when otters became protected.

ought (owght) pp., poet. ought, should – ‘Oucht else they wunna tolerate, Nae matter if it’s richt or wrang …’ [FL], ‘…And ye micht coont hman affection cheap, But ye ought to ken there’s a hairist to reap’ [WL] (cf. the more common ocht).

ouk (ook) n., poet. week – ‘But since that time, he’s never anes been here, An’ it’s sax ouks:– nae wonder than I fear’ [CPM], ‘…That ere I tak’ the ‘Leister’ prices A single ouk, I’ll gang an’ girn, an’ mak’ grimaces, Wi’ Jamie Cook’ [WiD].

the road after Hoscote. These may be the lands of ‘Ughtredshaghe’ which were granted by Margaret, mother of Henry Lovel, to Jedburgh Abbey at its foundation around 1140 (as confirmed in about 1170). It was probably the ‘Ochturhyud’ recorded as granted to Marion Comyn, widow of John de Langlands in 1363. The lands of ‘Uchterseatmylne’ are listed among those granted to Sir William Wardlaw of Wilton in about 1400; this suggests that there was once a mill there. These were probably the lands of ‘Jacobo de Wchtersyde’ who witnessed a sasine at Milsington in 1453. The lands were owned by Walter Scott of Synton in the early 16th century and Sir Walter of Howpasley in the later 16th century. A bond of 1569, signed in Hawick, lists all of the tenants there, namely ‘Thomas Broum, Jokke Howatsone, Hobbe Broum, Dand Hunter, Alexander Armestrong, Will Pairman, Cristie Pairman, Hob Jaksoun, Watt Litill, Jok Hall, Watt Runseman, Jak Reid, Jokke Scot, Eling Dun, Will Greif, Thome Greif, Johe Gledstanis, George Stevinsone, Paït Stevinsone, Paït Reid, Johnne Gledstane, Robert Nichol, Margaret ‘Randie’, Rebecca Hislop, Johnne Glen- donyng, Alexander Mylne, Will Turnbull’. Walter Scott of Synton redeemed 500 merks on these lands with William Elliot of Fahnash in 1605. George Scott of Synton inherited the lands from his father Walter Scott of Synton in 1610. ‘Rowie’ Scott ‘in Vttersyde’ is recorded in 1616. Liferent was granted to Margaret Maxwell when she married William Elliot, younger of Fahnash, in 1635. Margaret Haswell (perhaps the same Margaret), liferenter there, was one of the landowners in Wilton Parish in 1643, her lands being valued at £360. There were 15 ‘communicants’ recorded there in 1650, namely Robert Nichol, Janet Clerk, Francis Nichol, William Pott, margaret Nichol, Margaret ‘Randie’, Rebecca Hislop, John Renwick, Walter Scott, Bessie Hislop, William Scott, Margaret Hislop, Mungo Dalgleish and Isobel Armstrong. Gavin Elliot of Outsiderig paid land tax in Wilton Parish on lands valued at £360. Gideon Scott of Outsiderig witnessed a baptism in Hawick in 1687. In 1689 Gideon of Outsiderig gained other lands, and became known thereafter as Gideon of Fahnash. 10 separate households were listed there in 1694. It was part of Wilton Parish before Roberton was formed in 1689/90. The lands were leased by James Scott of Shielwood in 1692. In 1701 the Laird’s seats in Roberton Kirk are recorded being the 3 feet to the east of the little door. James Dalgleish was recorded there in 1710, William Armstrong and Robert Scott in 1711, Robert Nichol in 1712, Thomas Helm in 1713, John Murray in 1715–17, James Grieve in 1718, John Scott and James Scott in 1720 and Adam Dalgleish in 1725–27. Adam Pott (probably the same as Adam of Hoscote) was recorded as Laird there among Commissioners of Roxburghshire in 1761. James Nichol was there in 1762–65 and James Dalgleish in 1763–66. It belonged to George Stavert (incorrectly transcribed ‘Stewart’ in one record) in the valuation of Roberton Parish of 1788, when it is listed as ‘Outerside, or Outsiderig, formerly in Wilton’, with a value of £360. John Henderson was living there in 1788 and James Thomson in 1793. In the 1811 Land Tax Rolls, ‘Outerside, or Outsiderig’ had the same value and was owned by Adam Stavert of Hoscote. Farm labourer Alexander Armstrong and his family were there in 1841. By about 1874 it was listed as owned by Archibald Stavert. Outsider Rig is the hill above, reaching 264 m and containing a fort and cairn (formerly spelled ‘Utterside’ etc.), it is probably ‘Ughtredshaghe’ or ‘Ughtreddesxaghe’ in c.1140 and 1170, ‘Ochturhyud’ in 1363, ‘Uchterseatmylne’ in c.1400, ‘Wchtersyde’ in 1453, ‘Vttersyde’ in 1616, ‘outersyde rige’ in 1678, ‘Uttersyde’ in 1688, ‘Outersyde’ in 1692 and 1694, ‘utside’ in 1710, ‘utterside’ in 1712, ‘Outsidersigerige’ in 1718, ‘Outersyde’ in 1721 and ‘Utterside’ in 1762 and 1788; it is marked on a 1650 parish map as ‘Utterside’, on Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Outerside’; based on the earliest spellings the origin seems likely to be ‘Uchtred’s haugh’.

Outerside (oo-tur-sid) n. James (15th C.) witness in 1453 to a sasine exchanging the lands of Milsington with those of Wester Heap, between the Langlands and Scott families. He is recorded as ‘Jacobo de Wchtersyde’, and it seems likely his father Walter of Howpasley in the later 16th century and Sir Walter of Howpasley in the later 16th century. A bond of 1569, signed in Hawick, lists all of the tenants there, namely ‘Thomas Broum, Jokke Howatsone, Hobbe Broum, Dand Hunter, Alexander Armestrong, Will Pairman, Cristie Pairman, Hob Jaksoun, Watt Litill, Jok Hall, Watt Runseman, Jak Reid, Jokke Scot, Eling Dun, Will Greif, Thome Greif, Johe Gledstanis, George Stevinsone, Paït Stevinsone, Paït Reid, Johnne Gledstane, Robert Nichol, Margaret ‘Randie’, Rebecca Hislop, Johnne Glen- donyng, Alexander Mylne, Will Turnbull’. Outerside (oo-tur-sid) n. James (15th C.) witness in 1453 to a sasine exchanging the lands of Milsington with those of Wester Heap, between the Langlands and Scott families. He is recorded as ‘Jacobo de Wchtersyde’, and it seems likely his lands were those of Outsider, just up the Borthwick from Milsington.

Outerside Rig (ow-tur-sid-rig) n. elongated hill above Outerside, reaching a height of 264 m and containing a fort. The name was also formerly used for the farm at Outerside. The hill contains the remains of a hill-fort at the east of the ridge, possibly dating from the early Iron Age. Much obliterated by cultivation, it consists of inner and outer ramparts and a ditch. In the inside may be signs of a hut circle, while just outside is a possible enclosure (spelled ‘Uttersydrigg’ and variants in early documents; it is ‘Outersidrige’ in 1528/9, ‘Outarsyderige’ in 1610, ‘Uttersyderig’ in 1643 and ‘Outersiderige’ in 1718).
Outersideshiel

Outersideshiel (ow-tur-sid-sheel) n. former steading high above Outerside. On Ainslie’s 1773 map it is marked on the south side of the Hoscote Burn near Girnwood Linn. David Scott was there in 1737. Thomas Glendinning was there in 1763–66, James Glendinning in 1775, Thomas Broad in 1781 and Thomas Glendinning in 1797 (it is ‘Utterside shiel’ in 1763 and ‘Uttersideshiel’ in 1775, 1780 and 1797).

the Outlaw Murray (thu-ow’-law-mu-ri, -oo’) n. fanciful story about a leader of the Murays in Ettrick Forest, popularised in the ballad of the same name, and having some basis in historical fact. Murray refused to pay homage to the King, but eventually gave in after being appointed Sheriff of Ettrick Forest. This probably referred to John Murray of Falahill (nephew of the Rector of Hawick), in the latter part of the 15th century.

ouwn (own) v., arch. to own, confess, admit – ‘...for A’ll ouwn A was dry again ...’ [ECS] (cf. own).

oux (owks) n., poet. an ox – ‘Thus thay change their glorie intil the lykeness o’ ane oux that eets gersse’ [HSR].

Övens (o-vinz) n. James (17th C.) recorded as ‘James Owen in Birk hill’ in 1684 when, along with many others, he was declared a rebel for refusing to conform to Episcopalianism. He may be an ancestor of the Hawick blacksmith. James (b.1818) from Selkirk, son of Thomas and Isabella Murdock. He was a blacksmith in Hawick in the 1800s, with an appropriate name. He lived at the Round Close in 1841, the Backdamgate in 1851 and 3 Silver Street in 1861. In 1840 he married Helen Pow, a daughter of William, blacksmith at Borthaugh Woodfoot. Their children included: Mary (b.c.1841); Elizabeth (b.c.1844); Helen (b.c.1847); John (b.1855), also a blacksmith; William Pow (b.1858) and James (b.1861). He was an elder with the Relief Kirk. John (b.1855) son of James and Helen Pow. He was a blacksmith in Hawick, like his father. He was at 5 Howegate in 1881, 3 Buccleuch Street in 1891 and 11 Sandbed in 1901. He married Helen Wright, from Lockerbie, and they had a daughter Jane A.

Thomas (17th C.) resident at Side in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records.

Övenshank (o-vin-shawngk) n. small farm in Liddesdale, just north of the Liddel, to the west of the site of Liddel Castle. It is probably the place recorded as ‘Vnsthank’ in the 1541 rental roll, listed between ‘Coklaik’ and ‘Powis’; it was vacant at that time. Robert Nichol was there in 1821. James Wilson lived there in 1841, with his son Andrew there in 1861 and there were also 3 huts there housing railway workers on the 1861 census (it is marked on Stobie’s c.1770 map; it has been suggested that the name has a similar origin to ‘Unthank’).

Overchester (o-vur-ches-tur) n. lands that were tenanted by Turnbulls in 1516 when several members of that family were identified as being there when they had remission for assisting Alexander, Lord Home. It appears that Mark Turnbull was the main tenant, along with his brother Archibald, and son Mark younger, as well as Richard, David, William, John, Andrew, Andrew’s son Thomas, and Ninian. It is unclear where this place was, perhaps part of Chesters in Southdean.

overgave (o-vur-gav) pp., arch. gave up, relinquished – ‘Compeared the haill Council, and voluntarily of their awin free will remunct and overgave their quarterings of the soldiers to the town’s use ...’ [BR1644].

Overhaa (o-vur-haw) n. Overhall, farm just behind Wilton Dean. The name dates back to at least the 16th century. In 1569 the superiority of the lands (along with Wilton Green and Wiltonburn) was inherited by Grizel Borthwick from her father Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch. In 1586 the lands are among those given in ‘liferent’ to Margaret Ker as part of the marriage contract with Walter Scott of Buccleuch. In 1601 they were inherited by Walter Cairncross from his uncle Walter, brother of Robert of Colmslie. The farm was among the Wilton Parish possessions of the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1653, 1661 and 1663. There were 10 ‘communicants’ recorded there in 1650, namely Robert Scott, William Scott, Margaret Turnbull, Marion Martin, Margaret Langlands, Isobel Swan, Janet Scott, Walter Scott, Adam Scott and Marion Henderson. James and Adam Scott each leased half the farm in 1690 and 1692 and were recorded as householders there in around 1694. In at least the period 1694–98 the farm was leased half by Walter Scott, ‘Chief’, and half by Adam Scott. The farm was surveyed in 1718 along with other properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch; it extended to 120 acres and was bounded by Langlands, the River Teviot, Borthaugh and Brieryhill. The farmhouse is shown near the foot of the Wilton Burn on the western side. William Scott was a servant there in 1723. Adam Easton was there in 1723–25, Robert Ballantyne in 1724 and John Clerk in 1752. Andrew and Thomas Easton were farmers there in 1797, with 2 work horses each. Joiner Adam Riddell lived there around 1840. Adam Easton was farmer in 1841 and in 1851, when the farm covered 62 acres. A doll’s house, originating here in about 1880, is in the Museum. A hill there was used as a track for motor-cycle events in the first half of the 20th century (also referred to as ‘Everhaa’; it is written ‘Vuerhall’ in 1569, ‘Ovirhall’ in 1586 and ‘Over hahall’ in 1690; it is marked on Gordon’s c. 1650 map as ‘Ovirhall’ and Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘O. Hall’).

Overhaa Crescent (ō-vur-haw-sin’) n. cul-de-sac in Wilton Dean, built in 1971 and named after the nearby farm.

Overhaa Road (ō-vur-haw-rōd) n. main road west through Wilton Dean, named after the nearby farm. New housing was built there in 1970. The wooded hill above this road contains an oval earthwork, about 90 m by 50 m, consisting of a single rampart. Its situation does not appear very defensive, so it has not been classified as a fort. The interior and parts of the rampart have been destroyed by quarrying. There are also remains of a probable homestead on a shelf below the summit. This measures 33 m by 27 m, with no internal features and an entrance in the north-east.

overplus (ō-vur-plus) n., adj., arch. surplus, excess – ‘Substraction is to draw a small sume from a great. The overplus or quhat remains just underneath you set’ [HAST1917].

the Overseas Night (thu-ō-vur-seez-ā’) n. properly called the Civic Reception for Returned Terries, an evening of entertainment for exiled Terries, taking place in the Town Hall on the Wednesday of Common Riding week. It was inaugurated in 1936. It is an event reserved for distant visitors and their guests. The Cornet, Cornet’s Lass, Acting Mother and Acting Father greet the visitors and the Honorary Provost gives a speech summarising the highlights of the year for the Town. There then follows a schedule of songs and recitations. The names of the ‘Exiles’ are read and each of them stand to be recognised. The Maids of Honour serve refreshments and the evening ends with ‘Teribus’ and ‘Cornet’s Up’ (also sometimes called ‘the Exile’s Night’).

Over Tofts (ō-vur-tofts) n. used for Upper Tofts in the 18th and 19th centuries.

Overton (ō-vur-tin) n. late 16th century ruined tower near Camptown, about 5 miles south of Jedburgh, burnt by Hertford’s men in 1545. There were Ellots there in the 18th century. John Rutherford of Edgerston owned the lands in the late 18th century. The farm of ‘Overton Bush’ is recorded since at least the late 18th century and is still marked on the Ordnance Survey maps (the origin of the name is probably simply ‘the upper farm’ in Old English and first occurs in the late 16th century).

Ovid (ō-vid) n. Adam (11th/12th C.) priest of the Diocese of Glasgow. He was brother of Laurence of Thornton, who was Archdeacon of St. Andrews, and his name occurs as a witness in St. Andrews documents from about 1203. His surname may be derived from his taste in reading. He was ‘Master’, meaning he held a Masters degree. He was recorded as the parson of Hobkirk in 1220. His name is also given as ‘Ada Onidius’.

ow (ow) contr. of us – ‘the baith o’w’, ‘that’ll be the end o’w’ (note sometimes pronounced as the two syllable u-oo or o-o, but other times shortened to ow).

Ower Ancrum (ow-ur-awng-krum) n. Over Ancrum, name of the former settlement on the north side of the Ale Water. It is distinguished from Nether Ancrum, on the south side, which became the modern village of Ancrum. The ‘Over’ part was burned around the time of the battle of Ancrum Moor, which took place nearby, and never really recovered (it is ‘Over Ancrum’ in 1548/9; it is ‘O: Ancrum’ on Pont’s map of c.1590 and is still recorded as ‘Upper Ancrum’ on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Ower Bunchester (ow-ur-bon-ches-tur) n. Over Bunchester, former farm near Bunchester, also referred to as ‘Upper Bunchester’. In 1569 it was one of a set of lands acquired by Adam French from the monks of Jedburgh Abbey and in 1587 still part of the Lordship of Jedburgh when Alexander Lord Home inherited the superiority. In 1588 it is listed as being ‘with woods’. It is possible that it corresponds to the remains of the farmstead on the north-west side of Bunchester Hill, near the head of Rob’s Cleuch, some of the stones from which are built into nearby dykes (it is ‘over Bunchester’ in 1569 and ‘Over Bunchester’ in 1588).

Ower Boonraw (ow-ur-boon-raw) n. Over Boonraw, former name for a farmstead near the main Boonraw. It may correspond to the location of West Boonraw, which lies a little uphill from East Boonraw. Robert Storie was there in 1688.

Ower Hallrule  (ow-ur-haw-rool) n. Over Hallrule, former name for part of the farm of Hallrule, also called Outer Hallrule, in distinction to Inner Hallrule. It may also have been another name for Toon-o-Rule. In 1779 ‘Over-Hallrule’ was valued at £832 12s 5d. On the 1811 Land Tax Rolls ‘part of Town-o-Rule, or Over or Outer Hallrule’ is described.
Ower Harwud  (ow-ur-har-wud) n. Over Harwood, former name for lands at Harwood on Teviot. It is unclear if the name referred to the whole of the later estate of Harwood, or just part of it. It was among the lands exchanged in 1446 with Lanarkshire lands between Inglis of Manor and Scott of Buccleuch; one quarter of the lands were included in this swap, with the owner of the other 3 quarters being unknown. In 1462 it was given as part of security for a loan, along with Dryden and Commonsbye, by Stephen Scott of Muirhouse to Robert Muir of Rowallan. The loan was fully paid by Robert Scott of ‘Dogchauch’ in 1477. It is listed among the lands held ‘in tenancy’ by the Baron of Hawick in 1511, 1572, 1594 and 1615, along with ‘Nether Harwood’ (it is ‘Ouerharwode’ in 1446, ‘Vuer Harwod’ in 1462, ‘Vuer Herwod’ in 1508/9, ‘Vuir Harewod’ and ‘Uivre-Harwood’ in 1511, ‘Ovir Harwod’ and ‘Ouir Harwold’ in 1572, ‘Owir Harwoid’ in 1594 and just ‘Over Harwood’ in 1615).
Ower Hassendean  (ow-ur-haw-sin-deen) n. Over Hassendean, former farm in Hassendean, also once called ‘Hassendean Lady Lands’. It is among the farms burned by the Earl of Hertford’s men in 1545. Robert Scott owned the lands in 1574. Adam Turnbull, ‘Reid Adie’ was tenant there in 1576, when there was a promise that he would abstain from theft. 6 acres of land here were inherited by Sir William Douglas of Cavers in 1687 and by his brother Archibald in 1698. In 1692 Adam Scott had a new feu agreement with the Duchess of Buccleuch for the lands there, east and west syde thereof with the milne and maynes of the same’. In 1738 it consisted of 6 acres when it was purchased by Francis, Duke of Buccleuch, from Archibald Douglas of Cavers (see also Oor Lady Land; it is ‘Over-hessington’ in 1545, ‘Over Hassindane’ in 1574, ‘Ovir Hassindane’ in 1576 and transcribed ‘Overbassenden’).

Ower Holm  (ow-ur-hōm) n. name for former lands in Liddesdale, recorded in 1541 as ‘Avirholme’. It was valued at 40 shillings and tenanted by Andrew and Lancelot Forester. From its position in the list it must have been in the southernmost part of Liddesdale, and possibly associated with Millholm, Demainholm, and ‘the Holm’.
owerins  (ow-ur-ins) n., pl., arch. wages paid above the norm, overtime (also written ‘owrin’s’).
the Ower Kirk  (thu-ow-ur-kirk) n. former church in the Ewes valley, near the farm of Un-thank, and distinguished from the ‘Nether Kirk of the Ewes’ further down the valley. It was dedicated to St. Mark and originally attached to Melrose Abbey. It appears to have been older than the Nether Kirk, dating back to at least the reign of Alexander III. Patronage was held by the Earl of Home, although there were no priests recorded there in the 16th century. The rights of the church are still listed in 1663 among the possessions of the Scotts of Buccleuch. It was abandoned at the Reformation and merged with the Nether Kirk, although the graveyard continued in use long afterward. The church bell (made in 1654 by John Monteith of Edinburgh) has also continued to be used, hung from the cleft in a nearby tree. Foundations of the church can be seen in the old churchyard. The churchyard contains an 18th century burial enclosure for the Aitchisons, and several other gravestones of a similar epoch, including an ornately carved grave slab for William Hutton and Jean Scott. An early chapel also stood near Ewes Doors, and this may also have been referred to as the ‘Over Kirk of Ewes’ (it is ‘over kirk of Ewiss’ in 1663; it is marked ‘O. Kirk of Euss’ on Blaen’s c.1654 map).

Ower Kirkhope (ow-ur-kir-kup) n. Over Kirkhope, site of older church in the Ettrick valley, abandoned in favour of the new site probably in the mid-15th century. An early Christian grave marker was found near the ruins of the chapel.

Packhooses

Packhooses (pawk-hoo-seez) n. Packhouses, former farmstead between Burnhead and Apple-treehall, near the modern Burnhead Cottages. It is marked on the 1861 Ordnance Survey map as ‘Parkhouses’ to the east of the Boonraw Burn, and hence appears to have been separate from Burnhead Cottages (also known as ‘Peatiehouses’), which were between the road and burn. Thomas Liddell was living there in 1751 and James Black in the 1770s and 1780s. Tailors Thomas Miller and William Turnbull lived there in 1841, and there were 9 other households (it is ‘Park houses’ in 1751 and ‘Parkhouses’ in 1841 and 1851; it is marked on Stobie’s 1770 map).

the Packies (thu-paw-keez) n. nickname in use around the early 19th century.

packit (paw-kee’, paw-ki’) adj., pp. packed – ‘Settday morning eight o’clock The station’s packeet oot . . . ’ [AY] (also spelled ‘packet’).

packman (pawk-mun) n., arch. a peddler, someone who carries their wares in a pack – ‘The said day William Sutter, packeman traveller, confess he came into the house of Richard Leythen upon ane Sunday . . . ’ [BR1707]. ‘Packmen, dealers from Newcastel in quest of bacon, geese, or turkeys, and even beggars without visible occupation, were made welcome’ [JaT].

Paddington Sike (paw-din’in-sik) n. stream in Liddesdale, rising on the south-western slopes of Arnton Fell and running roughly south-west to join the Hermitage Water opposite Netherraw Cottages. Near this confluence is an earthwork enclosing an area of over 200 m² and containing some wall foundations; it is of unknown age, but could be the tower-house of ‘Puddinburn’ which was a stronghold of the Armstrongs (see also Puddinburn).

paddi-stuil (paw-di, -du-stuil) n., arch. a toad-stool, particularly ‘Agaricus’ (also ‘paddi-stail’; E.C. Smith writes it ‘paddih-stuil’).

the Paddlin Pool (thu-pawd-lin-pool) n. shallow pool for children’s play in the summer. In Hawick this referred to either the one where the former Bandstand was located in the centre of the park, in the late 1960s to early 1970s, or the one built at the southern end of the Spetch in the early 1970s, neither of which lasted very many years.

the Paddock (thu-pawd-duk) n. fenced area at the Moor where the horses are gathered and paraded before each race. There are existing paddock tickets dating back to at least 1877. In 1889 it was extended and had iron railings erected, and the offices for the Stewards and other officials was built in 1894. Turnstiles were rented in 1910 from Melrose R.F.C., and 4 new turnstiles purchased in 1911. A well was discovered there in 1915 and the Paddock was extended in 1923. The main buildings were gutted by fire in 1957 and renovated afterwards. For much of the 20th century there was a separate charge for gaining entry to the Paddock. Within the Paddock the Cornet displays the Flag from the Committee Room roof during his time at the Mair.

the Paddock Slack (thu-pawd-slak) n. hill-pass on the B709 road linking the Yarrow and Quair valleys, reaching a height of 357 m (1,170 ft).

Paddy Barratt (paw-dee-baw-ri’) n. Hawick resident of the mid-1900s. This may have been labourer Patrick Barret (b.c.1799), who came to Hawick from Ireland and lived on the Back Row (in 1851) and on the Mill Path (in 1861) – ‘Poodge and Peedlum gang doon the toon, Sly Tammy and Kittlin’ Soup gang up; There’s Paddy Barratt

paddy-whack (paw-dee-whawk) n., arch. a stroke, blow, whacking (noted by E.C. Smith; derived from an expression for an Irishman).

Pagton Burn (pawg-tin-burn) n. stream that runs in a westerly direction to join the Slitrig Water between New Mill and Wudfit Brig. To the south of the stream is an enclosure, measuring about 40 m by 30 m, with an entrance on the north-east side, and the interior being heart-shaped. Its age and purpose are not known.

paddle see paidle

paddle (pá-dul) n. a paddle, hoe, long-handled tool of various sorts – ‘The lad that howes the Lum-Back neeps Richt cheerily he plies his paiddle’[DH], ‘Hardie came oot wi’ a shairny paik, Knocked the Cornet off his paik’[T], ‘. . . tied a piece of cord to a paik shank and gave chase’[RM], v. to use a hoe or paddle – ‘. . . until a circle six feet in diameter was ‘paikled’ quite bare round the place where they lay’[RB].

paidle (pá-dul) n. a dabble in water, wade – ‘oor gaun for a paikled up the witter’, v. to paddle, dabble about in water – ‘the bairns er in paidlin in the pool’, ‘The glesome bairns gae oot to look For nests alang the hedge; They paikled barefit in the burn Beside the yellow sedge’[FL].

Painsioners o Buccleuch (páin-shi-nurz-ðò-bu-kloo) n. list of ‘four-and-twenty gentlemen’ who were kept at the call of Scott of Buccleuch, according to Sir Walter Scott of Satchells, roughly. Each of these men received ‘rooms’ (i.e. small estates) for their service, some in earlier times, although the list probably relates to roughly the period 1580–1620. Some details may be incorrect, and some of the men are not otherwise recorded, but since they would have been known by Satchells’ father, then it is almost a first-hand account. The list is: Walter Scott of Northhouse; Robert Scott of Allanhaugh; David Scott of Stobicote; David Scott of Raesknow; Robert Scott of Glack; William Scott in Hawick, called ‘William in the Mott’; John Scott of Monk’s Tower; Robert Scott of Easter Groundstone; James Scott of Alton Croft; Thomas Scott in Wester Groundstone; John Scott in Drinkstone; William Scott in Lees, ‘alias Wilma’, called ‘of Catslack-know’; Robert Scott in Clarillaw; William Scott of Todshawhaugh; Andrew Scott of Todshawhill; John Scott of Stoupie; Scott of Whames; Scott of Castlehill; Walter Scott of Chapelhill; Robert Scott of Howford; Robert Scott of Satchells; Robert Scott of Langhope; William Scott, ‘called Cut-at-theblack’; and Walter Gledstains of Whitlaw (the only one not of the surname ‘Scott’).

paintit (pān-tec’, -ti’) pp. painted – ‘What! Luck, here too! thou paintit twa-faced Randy, Squiring thy humbug i’ my vera lug?’ [JoHa],

pair (pār, per) adj. poor, pitiable – ‘pur wee lamh’, ‘Syne rich and puri maun seek the Muir’[RH], ‘I may be auld, I may be puri …’ [DH], ‘You puri wee thing! To think that high abune us a’ You sit your lane …’ [WFC], ‘Clubs an pubs for puri chiel That need the noise and bustle’[WL] (also written puir, q.v., although this is no longer the local pronunciation).

the pair (thu-pār, -per) n. poor people. The Parish was responsible for its own poor people, but attitudes varied about providing assistance for beggars from elsewhere. The destitute tended to be naturally cared for during times of plenty, but struggled through leaner periods. Charges for hiring the ‘mort-cloth’ were used to help the poor, as well as fines imposed on transgressors in the Parish. An Act of the Justices of the Peace of Roxburghshire of 1725 required the poor to be listed, and those able to beg were issued with a special badge (which had to be returned when the needful period was deemed to be over). In the 18th century it was the custom in Hawick for the destitute to go begging on Saturdays. An ‘account of the poor’s account’ is mentioned in the Town Treasurer’s book for 1746. The first mention of ‘the poor’s stent’ on the inhabitants of Hawick was in 1749 (perhaps amounting to 1/4 of the total, the rest presumably raised by the Kirk Session). A list of the poor was drawn up in 1771. In 1784 it was resolved not to levy the poor rate according to means, but just according rental values. This arrangement lasted for 60 years, with these burghal fees latterly corresponding to 1/3 of the assessment for the whole Parish. In 1789 the assessment was 11 pence for each pound of rental value, increasing to 1s. 6d. in 1798, 2s. 4d. in 1801 (a year of famine) and then 21 d. by 1814. Before about 1790 (perhaps around 1770) all the poor of Hawick Parish were buried in the same coffin, which had a false bottom. The Hawick Parochial Board was set up to administer support for the poor in 1845. The Combination Poorhouse (covering 11 parishes) was built off what would become Drumlanrig Square in 1856 – ‘...But, oh! the rich can never ken The hardships o’ the poor’[TCh].

pairest (pā-rist) adj. poorest – ‘hei was the poorest o the pair’.

the Pairhoose (thu-pā-reesh) n. the Combination Poorhouse, which became Drumlanrig Hospital. The old name was still used long after it had ceased to be a poor-house. Governors include: William Drysdale (1850s); John Sneaton (1860s); Adam Grierson (1870s and 80s); James Scott (late 19th C.); Richard Telford (until 1892); and James Fleming Boyd (early 20th C.).

pairish (pā-reesh) n. a parish. Parishes were originally developed as part of the feudal system, with nobles and knights who received grants of land in the 10th and 11th centuries setting up churches and tithing themselves and their tenants to support a minister. The boundaries were thus determined by the extent of these collective lands, explaining why they often had detached portions. The parish churches were deprived of much of their income during the age of the great monasteries. Parish boundaries were altered over the centuries, often in response to population changes, but they typically retain some vestige of their origins – ‘Rob Tinlin whae was the toon’s officer an the pairish beadle’[HEx1965], ‘...Hawick hed lost naething be allowin the pairish o Wultin teh provide a Cornet for the first time!’[BW1974], ‘Weel, the pairish yird’s my kind Thegither, gey plain ...’[DH] (cf. the older parishin).

Pairish (pā-reesh) n. James (18th C.) gardener at Knowe in Minto Parish, when he was working for Thomas Turnbull.

the Pairish (thu-pā-reesh) n., arch. euphemism for the Poorhouse – ‘...it meant Jethart Jail for themselves and ‘the parish’ for their dependents’[JTt].

the Pairish (thu-pā-reesh) n. popular name for Hawick Old Parish Church (when it wasn’t ‘old’).

the Pairish Council (thu-pā-reesh-koon-sul) n. former organisation dealing with health and social matters. It replaced the Parochial Board in Pairish Halls (pairk) n. The halls of the Old Parish Church, on the corner of Buccleuch Street and Buccleuch Place. Built in 1885, the land was previously used as a garden. It is a grade C listed building.

the Pairish Kirk (thu-pairk) n. Another name for the Auld Pairish Kirk or formerly for St. Mary’s – ‘The Parish Church of Hawick stands on a considerable eminence … but alas! the fabric, with the old spire attached to it, is more like a farmer’s granary or barn, with a huge steam chimney stuck upon it, then a temple of devotion …’ [RW], ‘…Pairish Kirk is hooses now Folk irni the same somehow’ [IWL].

pairk (pairk) n. A park, enclosed field – ‘…teld the coorse o’ bonnie Teviot, wumplin byke pastan an pairk an bussy dean’ [ECS], ‘Yince upon a lang time ago, when wast end pairk was flatter …’ [MB] (see park and cf. perk).

the Pairk (thu-pairk) n. Popular name for Wilton Lodge Park – ‘…but for sic a monument as th’ committee hae decided on, aw’m thinkin’ th’ Pairk wad bei th’ place for it’ [BW].

Pairky-Aathing’s (pairkee-aw-thingz) n. Shop, which was also known as ‘J. Lynch’, or ‘Miss Lynch’s’, at 19 High Street, near the Round Close. It closed in 1989.

pairliment (pairli-min’) n. Parliament.

pairlt (pairl) adj., arch. Affected by palsy, paralysed, having uncontrolled tremors – ‘Ther chafts war ditherin an bevverin leike as thay war pairlt’ [ECS] (also written ‘pairlt’; cf. perit).

pairly (pairnee) adv. Poorly, not well – ‘she’s been awfi pairly, ee ken’, adv. in poverty, wretchedly, poet. feebly, softly – ‘Young Braxholm turn’d him, and oft looked back, And aye he passed from tree to tree; Young Braxholm peeped, and pairly spake, O sic a death is no for me!’ [JL].

Pairman (pair-mun) n. William ‘Will’ (16th C.) tenant of Sir Walter Scott of Howpasley in the lands of Outersideig in 1569. Sir Walter acted as cautioner for his tenants at a meeting in Hawick, assuring that they would obey the laws of the Lord Regent. He was surely related to Christie, who was also listed. Christopher ‘Christie’ (16th C.) tenant in Outersideig, for whom Sir Walter Scott of Howpasley stood as cautioner in 1569. He was listed as ‘Cristie’ right after Will.

pairpul (pair-pul) n., arch. A thin wooden partition, especially to divide the back shop from the front – ‘…his maxim with every opponent being, after the fashion of the archer, his namesake, to ‘nail him to de pairpul’ [JW] (also written ‘pairple’; cf. perpall).

the Pair Roll (thu-pair-rol) n. List of people in a parish who are eligible for poor relief. The first mention of ‘the poor’s stent’ on the inhabitants of Hawick was in 1749. In 1772 the assessment for the poor amounted to £224 – ‘The said Willaim Paterson … depones he …has been on the Poor Roll for several years past and gets a weekly supply of tuppence’ [BR1767] (see also the pair).

Pair’s Hooses (pair-z-hoo-seez) n. Poor’s Houses, former cottages in Ewesdale, near to the Kirk and to Brieryshaw. They seem to be the same houses listed as ‘Kirkestyle’ on the 1841 and 1861 censuses. They are listed on the 1851 census, with 5 households living there.

pairt (pairt) n. A part – ‘what pairt o’ nut’ did ee no understand?’, ‘The rowmes that follows are for ye most pairt far distant fra the kirk, some 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 mylles, the most pairt has either no corn, or very litill …’ [PR1627], ‘…the possessors of the lands of Flex bath hitherto reaped the greatest pairt of the profit of the said peice of ground’ [BR1692], ‘Behald, thou desyrist trouth in the inwaird pairts …’ [HRS], ‘…sall gang intil the lower pairts o’ the yirth’ [HRS], ‘In the fore pairt of June, when the heather’s in bloom, They wad like to be back in their ain Border toon’ [WR], ‘In things o’ domestic she aye takes her pairt’ [WAP], ‘…In loyal herts oor lad o’ pairts Will lang be honoured yet’ [WL], a parting in hair – ‘Nor can I thole their snack-bar wit, Their bowlers lang be honoured yet’ [WL], ‘In things o’ domestic she aye takes her pairt’ [WAP], ‘…In loyal herts oor lad o’ pairts Will lang be honoured yet’ [WL], a parting in hair – ‘Nor can I thole their snack-bar wit, Their bowlers lang be honoured yet’ [WL].

poor’s stent (poor’s stent) n. A house or cottage paid for by the poor, in which the inmates have a weekly allowance from the parish. The first mention of ‘the poor’s stent’ on the inhabitants of Hawick was in 1749. In 1772 the assessment for the poor amounted to £224 – ‘The said Willaim Paterson … depones he …has been on the Poor Roll for several years past and gets a weekly supply of tuppence’ [BR1767] (see also the pair).

pairtly (pär'-lee) adv. partly – ‘His impish mischief pairtly done, Wi’ gloomy grudge he maun resist . . .' [WP].

pairtner (pär'-nur) n. a partner – ‘where’s the pairtnner for this sock?’. ‘Aye it’d still be ‘ee’re man’, bit nowadays they yaise the word ‘pairtnner’ [DaS].

pairt-oot (pär'-oo) v., arch. to share out (noted by E.C. Smith).

pairt-taker (pär'-tā-kur) n., arch. a parttaker, supporter, taker of sides – ‘...the said Walter Scot, knycht, and his freyndis, seruandis, and part takaris ...' [SB1527], ‘...accompanied by his mother Tibbie Donaldson, Turnbull was immediately surrounded by a company of ‘paert-takers’ of one with whom he had formerly been at feud' [WaD].

pairty (pär'-ee) n. a party, social gathering – ‘daein Mick Jagger was aye his paerty-piece’, ‘The Queen’s gaun ti hand a pairty And the wife and yow’s tae gaun’ [AY], ‘Cos it’s his pairty ana. An no just his. The hale building’s pairty. The hale toon’s pairty. Aabody’s pairty’ [JuH], ‘...she was a main cog in the Tory Paerty machine’ [IW], ‘’I’ve seen politicians come and gaun frae aw pairties . . .’’ [IHS], a group of people on a trip – ‘His enjoyment was tempered somewhat what is the fact that Mrs. Fair and Miss Lookup were among the walkin pairty’ [IW], a person – ‘...sal pay for ilk hors or meir 40 shillings ...by the skaithie to the pairtice lesed’ [BR1640].

Paisley (pāz-lee) n. Agnes (17th C.) recorded in the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694 among those ‘Payed but not listed in Hauick Toun’. Alexander (16th C.) holder of a particulate of land on the north side of the public street according to Hawick’s 1537 Charter. He may have been related to William, who is also listed. He is mentioned in 1532 when the tenement to the east of his on the north side of the High Street was sold by William Walker to John Morlaw; this tenement bordered on the Slitrig, and hence was at the Tower Knowe. Charles (1794–1838) wright of Hawick, listed at Roadhead in Pigot’s 1837 directory. He was a Trustee of the Relief Kirk. He was probably the joiner in Wilton, who married Helen Michie; his widow Helen was living at Wilton Roadhead in 1841, along with children William, Jessie, Robert, Charles, John and James. Elizabeth ‘Bessie’ (17th/18th C.) wife of John Scott, ‘Wyndheid’. In 1712, when she was a widow, she was rebuked by the Kirk Session for harassing her neighbours, and threatened with imprisonment if her behaviour continued. Francis (18th C.) wright in Hawick Parish. He witnessed a baptism for Andrew Scott and Ann ‘Doeg’ in 1758 and another for Robert Rutherford in 1767. In 1772 he and wright Robert (who was surely related) witnessed a baptism for George Balmer. He is probably the Francis whose wife Jean Purcel died in Hawick in 1787. He may also be the Francis who hired the Hawick Parish mortcloth in 1759. Francis (b.1790/1) joiner and cabinet-maker of the High Street, recorded on Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories and Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1841 he was at about 23 High Street, on the Crown Close in 1851 and at 16 High Street (probably the same address) in 1861. His wife was Margaret and their children included Isabella, John, Francis, Margaret, Thomas and Alexander. Hector (17th C.) listed among the ‘Deficients in Hawick Parich’ in 1694. He appears to be at ‘The Tour of Hauick’. He may be the Hector, married to Isobel Turnbull, who had an unnamed son baptised in Hawick in 1687. He is probably the Hector who witnessed a baptism for Robert Fowler in 1652. Helen (17th C.) probably the daughter of John and Helen Elsion born in Hawick in 1650. In 1687 she had a sasine for the lower part of a house in the west end of Hawick. Her husband was Robert Turnbull, who was a weaver. Helen nee Michie (b.c.1790) widow of a joiner in Wilton. She married Charles in Wilton in 1818. In 1841 she is listed as running the joiners business at Roadhead (i.e. Langlands Road). Her children included Joan (b.1821), William (b.1823), Janet or Jessie (b.1825), Robert (b.1826), Charles (b.1830), John (b.1832) and James (b.1833). James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish, married to Agnes Deans. Their children included William (b.1638). He may be the James who in 1640 witnessed a baptism for Agnes Paisley and Walter Oliver (suggesting then that Agnes was his sister) and another for Robert Gillespie and Marion Stoddart. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish, married to Janet Scott. Their children included: Alexander (b.1644); and John (b.1646). James (18th/19th C.) joiner and cabinet-maker on Damside, recorded in Pigot’s 1837 directory. He was probably related to Francis, who was a joiner on the High Street at the same time. Janet (b.c.1790) listed as a school-mistress on the 1841 census. She was living on the Round Close with Agnes, probably her daughter, a milliner. By 1851 she was listed as a woollen seamer, still on the Round Close. It is possible she was the Janet who in 1808, 1810 and 1812 witnessed baptisms for Andrew Turnbull and Margaret Hislop (probably in one of the secession churches). John (16th C.) resident of Hawick. He was listed in 1579 among those owed money by James Liddersdale, Burgess of Selkirk. The item records that ‘£30 quhairof thair is alsmekill of barkit [i.e. tanned] ledder unwrocht as extendis to £15’. This suggests he was a tanner or leather associated with leather. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish, married to Janet Routledge. Their children included: Bessie (b.1642); John (b.1644); Robert (b.1646); Walter (b.1647); and Janet (b.1650). He is probably the John recorded in 1665 when Bessie Douglas was accused of insulting the Bailie and saying that his yard ‘was not truelie marched’. Patrick (17th C.) listed at Mervinslaw among the poor of Southdean Parish in the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. Robert (17th C.) recorded in 1676 when he was imprisoned in the Hawick Tolbooth ‘for abusing of the market and keeping of the honest men from selling of their shoes’. He was presumably a shoemaker and may be the same man as the cordiner who contributed to the Hawick bell in 1693/4. Robert (17th/18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. He was recorded as a cordiner among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He is probably the Robert, resident of the west-side of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. He is probably the Robert listed among people (presumably living near St. Mary’s) who were disturbed at night by a group who were involved in drunken revelry. They asked for him to bring out the cripple who lodged at his house, pretending to be ‘faire spiritts’. He married Grizel Johnston and their children included: Anna (b.1700); and Robert (b.1703). The witnesses in 1700 were weaver Robert Turnbull and ‘officer’ James Lethem. Robert (18th C.) wright of Hawick. In 1734 he was tasked with rebuilding the Bailies’ seat in the balcony of St. Mary’s after it had been removed on the orders of the Chamberlain of Buccleuch. Perhaps the same wright Robert along with wright James (who was surely related) witnessed a baptism for George Balmer. Thomas (18th C.) wright in Hawick. He subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). He may be the Thomas who witnessed a baptism for George Balmer in 1776. Thomas (19th C.) joiner in the Hawick area. In 1863 he presented some coins to the Museum. Walter (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Agnes Renwick and their son Walter was baptised in 1679. He was probably miller at Weensland Mill who along with his son Walter witnessed a baptism in 1705. He may be the Walter who witnessed baptisms in 1680 (along with Dand Gray) for Alexander Muir, in 1685 for William Taylor and in 1704 for James Thomson in Weensland. He and his son are probably the 2 Walters in Weensland who witnessed a baptism for weaver Walter White in 1710. It seems likely he is also the Walter who (along with John Muir) witnessed the baptism in Roberton Parish of a ‘bastard child’ of Adam Scott of Burnfoot in 1686. He is probably the Walter who witnessed a baptism for James Gray in 1684. Walter (17th/18th C.) tenant in Weensland Mill, probably son of Walter. He was recorded as ‘younger at Weensland milne’ in 1704. He and his father Walter were the ‘milners at Weensland milne’ who witnessed a baptism for Walter Armstrong in Weensland in 1705. He and his father are probably the 2 Walters in Weensland who witnessed a baptism for weaver Walter White in 1710. He was ‘milner’ in 1712 when he witnessed a baptism for weaver Walter White. He married Jean Swan (who was also from Hawick Parish) in 1703 and their children included: Agnes (b.1704); Walter (b.1705); Jean (b.1707); Francis (b.1710); and Elizabeth (b.1712). The witnesses in 1704 were weavers William and John Swan. Walter (b.c.1700) from Langholm, he lived in Castleton Parish. In 1722 he married Margaret Davison Dalgleish. Their children (born mainly in Langholm) included: Robert (b.1731); John (b.1733); Christian (b.1736); Christian (again, b.1737); Elizabeth Alexandra (b.1741), who married John Grieve; and Euphan (b.1744). Walter (18th/19th C.) weaver in Hawick. His wife Margaret Scott died in Hawick in 1795. Walter (b.1825/6) ironmonger on the High Street. In 1861 he was living at No. 21, employing 1 man and 2 boys. He had the house at 43 High Street rebuilt (formerly occupied by ‘Robbie the Cow’). A ‘stone pig’ from his company is in the Museum, labelled ‘W. Paisley & Son, Ironmongers, Hawick’. His wife was Elizabeth and their children included Jane Josephine and Mary Elizabeth (who married Robert Elliot, farmer in Hermitage). Wilhelmina (19th C.) listed as librarian of the Hawick Trades’ Library in Slater’s 1852 directory. William (16th C.) owner of quarter of a particate of land on the south side of the public street according to Hawick’s 1537 Charter. He was one of the owners who was obliged to pay annual rents to James Blair. William Paisley’s (d.c.1689) cordiner and Burgess of Hawick. He was recorded as Procurator-Fiscal of the Regality Court (i.e. public prosecutor for the Burgh) in 1668 and 1669. He is probably the William who witnessed a baptism for William Thomson and Agnes Cook in 1680. He is probably the William recorded in 1683 when flesher John Briggs was fined of insulting him and Michael Turnbull, ‘calling of them two drunken elders’. He was probably the William mentioned in the Burgh Records in 1686 when 2 new marchers of the boundaries within the town were appointed. He was stated to have been a former marcher, along with John Hardie and William Purdom. He was probably the shoemaker of Hawick whose will is recorded in 1689. William (18th C.) paid the cart tax in Lilliesleaf Parish in 1791. William (b.c.1795) from Innerleithen. He was a dyer who lived on the Fore Raw in 1841 and 1851. He was listed as a member of Allars Kirk in 1829. His wife was Isabella and their children included James, Joan, John, Helen and Charles. William (b.1822/3) son of Charles. He was listed as a joiner at Roadhead in Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1851 he was living at Roadhead with his mother Helen and siblings Charles, John, James and Isabella. (also formerly written ‘Paislaw’, ‘Pasla’, ‘Paslau’, ‘Paslaw’, ‘Paslay’, ‘Pasley’, ‘Payslay’, ‘Paysley’, etc.).

Paiterson (pi’, pā’, paw’-ur-sin) n. (Pater-sön) Adam (16th C.) holder of 2/2 particates of land on the north side of the public street according to Hawick’s 1537 Charter. Rev. Adam McCaul (19th/20th C.) licentiate at Saughtree Kirk from 1903. He retired to Edinburgh in 1910. Alexander (17th C.) tenant farmer at Castlehill and ‘Holme’ in 1671, leasing from the Scotts of Buccleuch. Rev. Alexander (19th C.) from Glasgow, he graduated M.A. from the University there in 1869. He was nephew of Rev. Dr. Paterson of Kirkwall. He was ordained as minister of Lilliesleaf Burgher Kirk in 1875 and remained until 1896. His time saw a new church opened in 1891. He left for Edinburgh for family reasons, residing at Portobello. Andrew (17th C.) tenant in Fulton in Bedrule Parish. In 1623 he was accused of stealing an ox and a cow from a woman in Newton, Glendale (Northumberland). He was recorded as ‘Andro Patersonne in Foul-toume’ and found not guilty by the court at Jedburgh. Andrew (18th C.) gardener at Minto in 1786, when he was working for Sir Gilbert Elliot. Archibald (17th C.) recorded as a communicant at Borthwickshiel in 1650. He was there along with Helen ‘Haire’ (probably Hair, his wife), as well as Margaret (listed right after him and his wife), William and Robert, who were probably also related. He had 2 children with Helen Hair, baptised in Hawick Parish: Margaret (b.1652); and Robert (b.1654). He also had another child with Helen Allan (with the witnesses suggesting she was the same woman as Helen Hair), Walter (b.1656). The witnesses in 1652 were Robert Scott and James Allan, in 1654 were Robert and William (surely close relatives and perhaps the men who were also recorded at Borthwickshiel in 1650) and in 1656 were Robert (again) and Adam Govenlock. Archibald (17th C.) Hawick resident who married Helen Allan. Their son Walter was baptised in 1656, with witnesses Robert (perhaps his father or brother) and Adam Govenlock. Archibald (17th/18th C.) road-maker in Hawick. He was probably related to Walter of Burnflat. He is a ‘casser in Hawick’ in 1707 in an agreement to ‘lay the Cassa in Selkirk’ in 1707. In 1708 he was paid in Selkirk ‘for setting the town’s part of the causey between Robert Scott of Scott’s Bank and Elisabeth Elliott relict of deceased John Turnbull’. He is recorded as a ‘Casier’ in 1708 when he witnessed a baptism for James Hobkirck, who had the same job at Burnflat. In 1709 he was ‘Casier’ when he witnessed (along with John Gledstains of Whitalaw) a baptism for William Henderson in the Flex, suggesting that he lived in that area. He was ‘casaer’ in 1714 when he witnessed a baptism for Henry (tenant in Hawick) and in 1715 when he witnessed a baptism for gardener Walter. He is recorded as a ‘casier’ when he married Helen Paterson, also from Hawick, in 1706. Their children included: William (b.1707); Francis (b.1710); Isobell (b.1712); Agnes (b.1714); John (b.1716); and Helen (b.1723). Archibald (17th/18th C.) tenant in the Flex. He was recorded as a 'widow, tenant in Flex' in 1716 when he married Mary, daughter of James Rutherford, tenant in Ormiston. Their children included: Francis (b.1717); James (b.1719); John (b.1720); Isobell (b.1722); Robert (b.1725); and Mary (b.1728). Based on the names, he may have been a son of Francis (also tenant in the Flex) and Isabel Renwick. The witnesses in 1719 were John Gledstains of Whitlaw and miller Robert Elliot. Given the family forenames, it is possible that he was an ancestor of the 'Pawkie' Patersons. He may have earlier (in 1714) married Bessie Davidson. It is tempting to think that he could be the same man as the 'cassayer' who lived near the Flex, except that Archibald had children with Helen Paterson in 1707–1716 and again in 1723 (unless this was an error). Archibald (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish who married Jean Shiel. Their son William was baptised in 1731. Archibald (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish who married Betty Irvine in 1735. Their son Thomas was baptised in Hawick Parish in 1738. Archibald (18th C.) married Janet Scott in Hawick in 1767. It is unclear how he might have been related to other Patersons. Archibald (d.1799) recorded in the death register in Hawick as 'Auld Archie Paterson Uncle to William Paterson'. It is unclear which Archibald (and William) this refers to. Archibald 'Pawkie' (d.1815) Hawick man who farmed at Silverbuthall and lived at West Port. He was father of Robert 'Pawkie Paterson' (of the song), and was probably the son of James 'Ilka Thursdi' baptised in 1744. In 1781 he was recorded as a merchant; however, it seems likely he was the 'cadger' of that name who was Cornet to his father. In 1841 he was listed as a carrier at about No. 47 in 1851 and 1861 at 9 Loan again. He married Helen Oliver. His children included: Margaret (b.1839); James (b.1842); John (b.c.1847); Robert (b.c.1850); Betsy (b.c.1853); Archibald (b.c.1855); and Christopher (b.c.1858). He died at Weensland Cottages. David (b.c.1800) from Sanquhar, he was a flesher on the High Street, listed in Pigot’s 1837 directory and Slater’s 1852 directory. He was at about No. 47 in 1841 and at No. 37 in 1851 and 1861. His wife was Mary and their children included John, David, Elizabeth and James. David ‘Davie’ (19th/20th C.) captain of the Hawick team that won the 1895–96 Scottish championship. He played at quarter (wing) and also represented Scotland. David ‘Davie’ (1953/4 – ) amateur boxing champion and long-time local Councillor. He won the Scottish Flyweight title in 1972. Edward (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton. He married Christian, daughter of John and Jane Douglas. Their children included: Jean (b.1821); and Joseph (b.1822), who died in infancy. He could be E. Paterson’, the merchant of Castleton who subscribed to 2 copies of William Scott’s ‘ Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. Elizabeth (1785–1879) daughter of William of Baltimore, and possibly grand-daughter of Robert (‘Old Mortality’), she married Jerome Bonaparte (1784–1860). By a strange coincidence, one of the last works of Sir Walter Scott (who immortalised ‘Old Mortality’) was a monumental biography of Jerome’s brother Napoleon. However, it seems more likely that he father was originally from Donegal, Ireland, and hence any connection with ‘Old Mortality’ seems unlikely. Francis (17th/18th C.) tenant in the Flex. In 1705 (along with William Henderson) he witnessed a baptism for Walter Martin, tenant in the Flex. In 1707 he witnessed a baptism for William Henderson, younger in the Flex, and in 1708 he witnessed baptisms for Thomas Boyd, gardener at the Flex (along with Francis Henderson, who was also in the Flex) and for William Henderson, ‘younger in Flex’. Also in 1708 he was ‘in flex’ when he (along with Walter of Burnflatt and Archibald, ‘Casier’) witnessed a baptism for James Hobkirk, who was ‘easier coater’ for Walter of Burnflatt. His wife was Isobell Renwick and their children included: Isobell (b.1685); Janet (b.1687); Margaret (b.1691); and Anna (b.1695). Walter in Burnflatt witnessed one of the baptisms and was probably his father or brother. Archibald, also recorded as tenant in the Flex, may have been another child (based on the names of Archibald’s children). He is probably the Francis in Flex whose daughter Isobell married Adam Brown ‘Young Headhouse’ in 1719. Francis (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1758 he hired the Hawick mortcloth. George (18th C.) weaver in Hawick. In both 1762 and 1766 he witnessed baptisms for wright Walter Scott. He could be the George who married Isobel Tuthope and whose children included: Henry (b.1759); George (b.1761); Robert (b.1763); and John (b.1767). George (b.1794/5) from Fogo in Berwickshire, he was farmer at Greenbank. In the 1841 census his wife (recorded being born in Nova Scotia) and children were there, but he was visiting Borthwickbrae House at the time. He was at Greenbank in 1851 as farmer of 600 acres, employing 3 people. His children included: Eliza (b.c.1828); George (b.c.1830); and John (b.c.1840). George (1801–73) native of Stichill, near Kelso, son of John and Isabel Tait. He was a shoemaker to trade. He learned to play the fife in the Berwickshire Militia. He played in the Drums and Fifes at 46 Common Ridings. He is recorded as a shoemaker journeyman at the Sandbed in 1841, a shoemaker on the Mid Row in 1851 and at 3 Back Row in 1861. He married Margaret Scott and they had children: Isabel (b.c.1830); John (b.c.1833); Jane (or Jeanie, b.1834); Margaret (b.1837); George (b.1839); Andrew (b.1841); Barbara (b.1841); Eliza (b.1848); and Thomas (b.1849). George (b.c.1815) baker of 53 (or perhaps 55) High Street, son of baker William. He was listed as a baker and confectioner of the High Street in Slater’s 1852 directory. He married both Elizabeth and Isabella, daughters of grocer Thomas Liddell. His daughter Margaret Davidson carried on the baker’s business until she married Andrew Graham (tweed traveller). Her cousin Thomas L. Brydon then took over, later succeeded by Thomas Scott. Helen (b.1775) daughter of Archibald and sister of Robert ‘Pawkie’. She married labourer Tam Harkness. It is unclear if she was ‘Nellie Harkness’ or if that was her daughter. Henry (17th/18th C.) servant to the Laird of Falnash when he married Bessie Scott in Hawick in 1700. He was probably related to Walter, who was a gardener for Gideon Scott of Falnash. He was listed as a carrier in Hawick in 1700 when he witnessed a baptism for Walter Purdom, in 1702 when his son John was baptised, in 1707 when his daughter was baptised and he witnessed a baptism for fellow-carrier William Aitken, younger, in 1708 when he witnessed a baptism for weaver Robert Rodger and in a 1709 baptism for his own child. In 1711 and 1713 he was recorded as a carrier when he witnessed baptisms for Walter of Burnflatt, who was probably also a relative. In 1714 he was recorded as ‘tenant in Hawick’. In 1700 he married Bessie Scott and their children included: John (b.1702); John (again, b.1704); Agnes (b.1707); George (b.1709); Henry (b.1711); Mary (b.1716); George (again, b.1718); and Robert (b.1722). Walter (b.1714), with mother’s name give as ‘Helen Scott’ was probably also their child. The witnesses in 1707 were carrier William Aitken, younger, and John Scott ‘Souldier’, younger, in 1709 were cooper John Turnbull and gardener William Scott, in 1711 were carrier William Aitken, younger, and cooper Walter Scott and in 1714 were Walter of Burnflatt and Archibald ‘Casier’. He may have been related to William, whose father was gardener and shepherd for Scott of Falnash around the second decade of the 18th century. Henry (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was in Girnwood in 1742. He married Agnes ‘Bal lainy’ in Roberton in 1740. His children included: Mary (b.1742); Jean (b.1745); Walter (b.1748);
James (b.1702). The witnesses in 1689 were Bailie James Scott and John Scott. James ‘Duke’ (17th/18th C.) recorded in 1719 when he witnessed a baptism for Robert Manuel in Hawick. He may be the same as one of the other Jameses. James (d.1782) resident of Hawick Parish. His death record is labelled ‘ilka Thursday’, which was presumably his nickname (suggesting he may have been a carrier, and hence related to the later carrier of the same name). It is possible he was the James, son of Archibald, born in Hawick in 1719. He may be the James, married to Helen Ruecastle (probably the same as Helen Paterson in some baptismal records), who was probably daughter of Bailie John Ruecastle. Their children included: Archibald (b.1744), probably ‘Pawkie’: John (b.1747); Mary (b.1757); Christian (b.1759); William (b.1761), possibly the resident of Silverbuthall; and James (b.1766). The witnesses in 1744 were merchant John Ruecastle and William Scoon, servant to Rev. William Somerville; fellow carrier John Tudhope had a child baptised on the same day. He is probably the James who witnessed a baptism for baker Walter Ruecastle in 1758. James (18th C.) resident of Ewes Parish. He married Isobel Ross (probably in 1756) and their children included: Marion (b.1759); Betty (b.1761); Henry (b.1767); and Janet (b.1769). James (d.1778) carpet weaver who died in Hawick. He may be the James who married Ann Scott in 1774, the marriage recorded in both Hawick and Southdean Parishes. Alternatively he may be the James who married Ann Coats, with children Andrew (b.1772) and Janet (b.1775) baptised in Hawick. James ‘Pawkie’ (1780–1858) son of Archibald and Isabella Turnbull. He was brother of Robert, the subject of the song. In his younger days he was an agricultural servant, being at Adderstonelee in 1799 (when he got married). Later he was a carrier and small-scale farmer in Hawick. He is listed as ‘Paucky’ in the 1808 and 1810 death records of his infant sons, both called William. In 1837 he was running a cart service to Dumfries, Annan and Langholm every Monday. He may also be the grocer on the Loan listed in Pigot’s 1837 directory. In 1841 he was living at about 9 Loan with his wife and young joiner John Inglis (who was probably his grandson), with his son Christopher living at the same address. In 1851 he was listed on the Loan as farmer of 9 acres. In 1799 in Kirkton Parish he married Margaret (1777–1855), daughter of Archibald Tait and sister of carrier William Tait. Their children were: Archibald (1799–1840); Isabella (1800/1–52), who married John Ingles; Jean (1802/3–63), who married Thomas Sanderson in Melrose; William (d.1808) and William (again, d.1810), who died in infancy; James (b.1809/10); Robert (b.1811/2); and Christopher (b.1814/5). He died at 11 Loan. James (b.c.1785) shepherd at Cawfauls in Wilton Parish. He was listed among heads of households in 1840, with his address changed from Alton to ‘Calf-folds’. His wife was Violet and their children included Margaret and Elizabeth. He may be the widower living at Easter Lilliesleaf in 1851. James (b.c.1790) farmer at Terrona in the Ewes valley. His wife was Margaret and their children included Agnes, James, William, John and Alexander. James (1805/6–54) son of William. He was a farm labourer who lived at Raesknowe. He married Mary Glendinning and their son William was baptised in Hawick Parish in 1836. He was at Raesknowe in 1851, with his son and his mother and was still there in 1851, described as a widower. James (19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Mary Hall and their son John was baptised in 1842. James (b.1820/1) from Ewes, he was farmer at Chapelhill in the 1860s. In 1861 he was farming 950 acres and employing 7 people. He also had a governor and 5 domestic servants. His wife was Jessie and their children included Violet, George, John T., James, William and Margaret B. James (19th C.) cattle salesman in Hawick. He had a villa erected for him on Wilton Hill in about 1880. John (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1640 he was accused by the Kirk Session of setting up stouks of corn on the Sabbath. He is probably the John whose children, baptised in Ashkirk, included Thomas (b.1633) and Mungo (b.1636). John (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Margaret Dunlop, with their daughter Janet baptised in 1650. Probably the same John was later married to Helen Morrison, with further children (baptised in Ashkirk): Thomas (b.1656); John (b.1660); and Frances (b.1662). The witnesses in 1656 were Walter and William Dunlop. His wife’s name was recorded as ‘Issbell’ in 1660. John (d.c.1683) tenant in Parkhill when his will was recorded in 1683. It is unclear if this was the local Parkhill or another one in the counties of Peebles, Roxburgh and Selkirk. John (1632–1708) youngest son of John, Bishop of Ross, he studied in Aberdeen and St. Andrews and then taught at St. Leonard’s College. He succeeded his father at Ellon in 1660, then became minister at the Tron Kirk and later the High Kirk, before becoming Bishop of Galloway in 1674, and then Bishop of Edinburgh in 1679. In 1687 he was appointed as Archbishop of Glasgow, as successor to Alexander Cairncross. He was thus the last Archbishop of Glasgow, with Bishops being continued later by the Episcopal and Roman Catholic Churches. He was disliked by many for his hard line on religious intolerance. At the Revolution he sided with James II and was deprived when episcopacy was abolished in 1691. Afterwards the spent several years in England, but returned to Edinburgh by 1702 and petitioned for allowances to be made for relief of poor clergyman (including apparently himself). He died in Edinburgh and was buried at Holyrood. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish who married Marion Craw, Their unnamed son was baptised in 1673. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. In 1709 he married Margaret Goodfellow in Kirkton Parish. John (18th C.) tenant in Langhope in 1785 when his servant was involved in a legal case in Selkirk. John (b.c.1800) shoemaker who lived on the Kirkwyn. His wife was Isabel and their children included Walter and William. The death of his infant son is recorded in 1822. Bailie John (1803–1873) born where the Store was later located, son of a country weaver, he started in that trade himself, then became a warper with William Watson’s. He was apparently the first man in Hawick to warp tartans and shawls, and the first to send pieces of woven cloth to London in about 1830. He was a trustee of the firm, and managed it until his sons Robert F. and Thomas L. were old enough to take over in 1864. He was also on the Town Council and was a Magistrate during the 1850s. In the 1850s he was on the Borders Union Railway Committee for Hawick District. In Slater’s 1852 directory he is listed as manager of W. Watson & Sons. He had the honour of presenting the harp to Henry Scott Riddell on behalf of the Town in 1859 and also chaired the dinner in the Tower Hotel at the centenary Burns night. He owned the building at 72 High Street, where he lived, later moving to Galashiels as a manufacturer. He is at 72 High Street on the 1841, 1851 and 1861 censuses. Probably his father was the Paiterson shown at about 72 High Street on Wood’s 1824 map. His wife was Mary, and children included: Mary; Henry; Alison, who married Andrew Turnbull; Robert; John; Agnes; Adam and Jemima. John (b.1820s) son of manufacturer John. He had an ironmonger’s shop at 60 High Street (which was later Sharp the tobacconist), and lived at 57 High Street. In 1863 he donated to the Museum the cast of a bronze spear-head he made himself. He married Mary Telfer, who died in 1862. Their children were: Agnes, who died age 23; Robert, moved to Melbourne; John, shopkeeper; and Henry, auctioneer. He is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. John (19th/20th C.) son of auctioneer Henry. He had an ironmonger’s shop at 21 High Street, taking over from a Mr. Buckham. He married Alison Waldie. It is possible that his family’s premises were those labelled ‘Paterson’ at 25 (not 21) High Street on Wood’s 1824 map. John (19th/20th C.) resident of Edinburgh. James Sinton, in his Hawick-related bibliography of 1908, thanks him for the use of ‘some of the rarer volumes in his library, which contains one of the finest collections of Hawick-printed books extant’. He may be the same as one of the contemporary Johns. John (20th C.) actuary with the Hawick Savings Bank, he also acted as Treasurer for St. George’s Kirk from 1935. Margaret (17th C.) resident at Blackleemouth according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Michael (16th/17th C.) said to have owned the lands at ‘Haggishaa’ in the distant past (as recounted by Robert Wilson). If real, he was presumably an ancestor of Robert ‘Old Mortality’. He is said to have been a generous host and a great benefactor of St. Mary’s. On one occasion he apparently entertained those associated with Hawick Kirk, serving a 3 foot diameter haggis, the pin of which was used as a spoke to mend Hawick Mill and the skin used for the Town drum. This is connected with the name ‘Haggishaa’, and there is probably no truth to the story other than the family connection with the land there. It is suggested that a version of the story was told to Robert Burns by his friend Gavin Turnbull (whose family was from Hawick), inspiring the lines ‘Your pin wad help to mend a mill In time o’ need’. Mungo (17th C.) listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick ‘eist the water’ in 1694. Robert (15th/16th C.) resident of ‘lang-cluch’ recorded in 1502. This may have been the farm of similar name on the Allan Water. Along with John Winthorpe and James ‘aronyk’, he had 60 sheep stolen by Patrick Scott in Harwoodhill. His surname was written ‘patonesone’. Robert (17th C.) witnessed a baptism in Ashkirk in 1651 for John Stewart. Robert (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He witnessed a baptism in 1656 for Archibald, who was surely a close relative. Also in 1656 he and William (probably another relative) witnessed a baptism for George Heatley and Janet Allan. Probably along with the same William he witnessed a baptism in 1654 for Archibald and Helen Heatley. It seems likely that he, William and Archibald are all recorded as ‘communicants’ at Borthwickshieis in 1650. Robert (17th C.) tenant in Birkhill when the will of his wife Margaret Turnbull was recorded in 1685. It is unclear if this was the Birkhill in Hobbirk Parish on another one. Robert (17th C.) recorded as ‘indweller in Falahill at Reaperlaw’ in 1689 when he had a discharge with the treasurer of Selkirk. He presumably lived at Reaperlaw. It is possible he is the Robert whose widow Isobel Wright had a discharge with the Burgh of Selkirk in 1792 (dealt with by Stephen Turnbull in Minto Cleuch). Robert (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Helen Clerk and their son William was baptised in 1691. The witnesses were James Neil and John Robson. Robert (17th C.) resident at Northhouse according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Robert ‘Old Mortality’ (1715/6–1801) born at Burnflat (although there are other claims that he was born at Closeburn, but his family were from Hawick and he was certainly christened and grew up there), son of Walter and Margaret Scott (also known as Helen). The year of his birth is uncertain, although his christening record is clear (and there was also a brother of the same name born in 1713, who presumably died in infancy). The baptismal witnesses were Walter Scott (Beadle in Hawick, who may have been related to his mother) and gardener Walter (who may have been cousin or other relative of his father). He moved to Dumfriesshire at age 13, where he was apprenticed as a stonemason, joining his brother Francis at Corncockle Quarry, near Templand. In 1743 or 1744 he married Elizabeth, daughter of Robert Gray, gardener to Sir John Jardine; she was cook-maid to the owner of the quarry, Sir Thomas Kirkpatrick. He then leased a quarry at Gatelawbrigg from the Duke of Queensberry, and become a stone-mason and quarryier. His house was plundered by retreating Jacobites in 1745, and he was taken prisoner. Already a pronounced Cameronian, he became obsessed with placing tombstones over the graves of Covenantant martyrs, and was thus given his nickname. He often travelled for work and in 1758 he left his wife and children for the next 10 years, although when his son Walter went off to find him in 1759, he joined his father as a stone-cutter. Walter was the 2nd son, and his own eldest son, Nathaniel (hence grandson of ‘Old Mortality’), was minister at Galashiels. His other children were John (who became a sailor and emigrated to America), Robert junior, Margaret and Janet. He returned to his family at Gatelawbrig in 1768, and they moved to Balmaclellan in Kirkcudbright. His wife worked there as a teacher to support the family, while he travelled the country on his pony, erecting and cleaning stones. She died in 1785 (aged 59), and a plaque in Balmaccllan marks where they lived. He met Walter Scott in 1793 in a graveyard in north-east Scotland. This meeting was fictionalised in the opening chapter of Scott’s ‘The Tale of Old Mortality’ (1816), and helped inspire the novel. He died on the high road near Lockerbie, collapsing next to his pony at Bankend in Caerlavock, and not recovering. The precise date of his death and place of his burial are uncertain. A memorial tombstone was erected by Scott’s publisher in 1869 at Bankend of Caerlavock Churchyard. There are 3 copies of a statue of him by John Currie (two of which also include his pony), which are in Balmaccllan, at Dumfries Observatory Museum and at Newton Stewart Museum. There is another statue of him in Laurel Hill Cemetery in Philadelphia. A plaque marked his birthplace in Hawick, erected in 1897, but the dilapidated cottage at ‘Hagishaaw’ was demolished following a fire in 1991 (the plaques are now in storage). In addition the Museum holds a pair of his spectacles. Robert (18th C.) tailor in Hawick. In 1760 he witnessed a baptism for carrier Robert Miller. Robert (18th C.) cooper in Hawick Parish. In 1760 he witnessed a baptism for Walter Scott, with Walter Scott from Newbigging as the other witness. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isobel Fairnbairn in Hawick in 1775 and their children included: Walter (b.1776); Robert (b.1777); William (b.1779); George (b.1780); Archibald (b.1783); Robert (again, b.1788); and James (b.1791), who appears to have died in 1820. George and Archibald were baptised in Kirkton Parish and the rest in Hawick. Note that according to the baptismal records there were 7 sons and no daughters. Robert ‘Pawkie’ (1781–1858) local man, immortalised in the words of the humorous song by ‘Soapy’ Ballantyne. His father Archibald had farmed land at ‘Sillerbithaa’ (and also ‘Pawky’), with his mother being Isabel Turnbull. He lived at 9 Loan and his descendants farmed fields near there. He had 4 sisters: Nellie, who married Tam Harkness, and whose daughter Hannah married Charles Gray Laidlaw; Jane, who had a child to a prisoner called Cabourne, this daughter marrying toy merchant and grocer David S. Park, and secondly married George Miligan and was the mother of Provost Milligan; and another who married a French prisoner of war, who is traditionally said to have been a Bonaparte (although this is hardly credible), returning to France where he obtained a divorce and remarried. He was recorded on the 1841 and 1851 censuses at about 9 Loan and farmed 16 acres. He was unmarried in 1851, but in 1855 married Helen Leithead (b.c.1825) in Hawick and they had children John (b.1853) and Archibald (b.1855). In 1861 his widow and 2 sons were still living at 9 Loan. He was buried in Wilton Kirkyard. Robert (b.1781/2) born in Wilton Parish, he was a soldier and agricultural labourer. In 1841 he was an Army Pensioner at Wauchope and in 1851 was listed as both Chelsea Pensioner and labourer. He married Mary Turnbull in Hobkirk Parish in 1821. His widow was still living at Wauchope Cottages in 1861. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was listed in 1835 as a gardener living at Roadside. Robert (19th C.) described being ‘in Broadlee’ in Castleton Parish in 1832 when he was charged with ‘the sin of fornication’ with Helen Thomson. Robert (19th C.) Hawick resident who lived at West Port. He was one of the Tory supporters who was stripped almost naked and beaten up by the Radical mob near the Tower Knowe at the 1837 election. He escaped into the house of Walter Turnbull, but was found hiding under the bed. It was said that his unpopularity arose from his having switched his political allegiance. On his way down to the inquiry in London, he is supposed to have said on the ship ‘there’s naethin but a fr deal atween us an eternity’, and asked the Captain to sail close to the edge – ‘He’s been away this month an’ mair, At Lon’on Town, a witness there, Wi’ Tully, Paterson, and Kennedy. An scores of itheris that are ready . . . ’[RDW]. It is possible he is the same man as ‘Pawkie’. Robert (b.1823/4) born in Wilton Parish, he was an agricultural labourer. He was living at Hassendeankbank in 1851. His wife was Helen and their children included Elizabeth, Christina, James and John. Robert Telfer ‘Moose’ (1866–1907) son of Henry and Ann Armstrong. He was a ‘turf commission agent’ (i.e. bookie) who moved to Leeds. His nickname came from a discoloured patch on his cheek. He was a member of St. Cuthbert’s choir while in Pai'terson, was a well known singer, at Colour Bussings and other events. He was the first singer of the songs 'Up wi' the Banner', 'Hawick' and 'I Like Auld Hawick the Best'. He was in fact the first singer of 'Up wi' the Banner' at the Colour Bussing of 1887, when it was sung to the tune of 'Hail to the Chief', and he also debuted the new tune at the 1888 Colour Bussing. He is buried in the Welloagate. Rev. Stuart Maxwell 'Max' (1937–2015) born in Mansfield, Nottinghamshire, he was educated at Kelham College and Lichfield Theological College and was ordained in 1960. He was with churches in Derbyshire before coming to Hawick as Priest-in-Charge of St. Cuthbert's in 1992. He was Rector from 1995. He also spent some time working for the Guardian and Observer newspapers. His wife was Margaret. He retired to Inverurie. Thomas (15th C.) listed as 'Thomas Patonson' among the Roxburghshire men given remission in 1488/9 for their support of the deceased James III. Most of the men appear to have been associated with Douglas of Cavers. Probably the same 'Thome Patonson' is listed among many Rutherfords and others who had their fines compounded in 1501. by Walter Ker of Cessford and Henry Haultie of Mellerstain. Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. His wife was a Kedie and their children included: Janet (b.1723); and William (b.1726). Rev. Thomas W., (19th/20th C.) minister at Robertson Free Kirk ('the Snoot Kirk') 1889–1900. Walter of Burnflat (17th/18th C.) recorded in 1689 when his daughter was baptised in Hawick Parish. His wife was Margaret Elliot and the witnesses were Patricke Briggs and James Elliot (perhaps related to his wife). He was presumably either father of Walter (and hence grandfather of 'Old Mortality') or this was the same man as Walter, and he had an earlier marriage. Walter (17th/18th C.) gardener in Hawick Parish. He was gardener for Gideon Scott of Falnash for 18 years, living at Fenwick and also farming Fenwick, Alton Croft and part of Godielands. In 1704 he was recorded as 'Gardner in fennick' and in 1707 as 'gardener in Fennick'. In 1715 he was 'gardener to Mr Robert Cunningham our Minister'. In 1716 he witnessed the baptism of Robert 'Old Mortality', son of Walter of Burnflat (who may thus have been his cousin or other relative). His children (perhaps from a first marriage) included: William (b.1694/5), who married Isobel Sliman in 1727. He married Helen Marshall and their children included: Walter (b.1701), who married Isabell Glendinning in 1726; Gideon (b.1704), presumably named after his employer; John (b.1707); and Archibald (b.1715). The witnesses in 1704 were Gideon Scott of Falnash and Francis Gledstains of Whitlaw, in 1707 were Gideon Scott of Falnash (again) and Bailie James Deans and in 1715 were Archibald 'casaer in Flexs' and Henry Orrock. Note that he was having children in Hawick Parish at the same time as Walter of Burnflat (to whom he was probably related), making it easy to confuse them. Walter of Burnflat (17th/18th C.) father of Robert, 'Old Mortality'. He acquired Burnflat from his own father in 1688. He could be the Walter in Burnflat who witnessed a baptism for Francis in 1687. He is recorded being 'of Burnflat' in baptismal records of 1700, 1706, 1708 and 1711. His lands in the Parish of Hawick were valued at £40 Scots in 1710. He was recorded as a heritor of Hawick Parish in 1711. In 1713 he made a request to the Bailies and Council that the boundary between his land at Burnflat and the Common be marked out; it is stated that there were 'seventeen march stones set along the march'. He is probably the Walter, Laird of Burnflat, who is mentioned in 1767 among those giving evidence regarding the former use of the Common; he held a quarter of land in Hawick' and kept more than 100 sheep, supported by pasturing them on the Common. He married Margaret (also sometimes known as Helen) Scott and they had at least 6 children, with perhaps only Bessie, Francis and Robert surviving to adulthood. Their children included: Bessie (b.c.1698), who married John Ruecastle; Helen (b.1700); John (b.1703); Francis (b.1706); Walter (b.1708); John (again, b.1711); Robert (b.1713); and Robert (again, b.1716). There is no baptismal record for Bessie, but in her 1719 marriage record her father is clearly Walter of Burnflat. The baptismal witnesses in 1700 were John Elliot in Nether Southfield and William Henderson in Flex, in 1706 were William Henderon in Flex and Bailie George Martin, in 1711 were carrier Henry (probably a relative) and merchant John Graham, in 1713 were John Scott ('souldier', possibly related to his wife) and Henry Paterson, and in 1716 were Walter Scott 'beddel in Hawick' (possibly related to his wife) and gardener Walter Paterson (perhaps a cousin or similar relative). He is probably the Walter 'of Burnflat' who witnessed a baptism in 1725 (for William Stoddart), along with 'Robert Paterson there' (who may have been a brother, since his son Robert would have been too young to be a witness). Walter (17th/18th it was decided by the Town Council that he ‘may have the better and mair free passage with packs of wool, and leading out of his mucke’ [BR1692]. He could be the William who witnessed a baptism for James Hamilton in Hawick in 1673 and another for John Scott in 1699. William (17th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He married Janet ‘Heutsone’ and their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1687. William (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish. His daughter Elizabeth was baptised in 1693. William (17th C.) listed at Highchesters in the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. His daughter Janet was baptised in 1705. William (b.1694/5) son of Walter, he was a gardener and Burgess of Hawick. His father was gardener to Gideon Scott of Falnash for 18 years, living at Fenwick, and also acting as shepherd for the farms of Fenwick and half of Goldielands and Alton Croft. He gave evidence in the court case regarding the Common in 1767, having himself acted as cattle herd for Scott of Falnash’s animals for 10 years; he was at that time described as married and on the poor roll of Hawick. In 1727 in Hawick he married Isabel, daughter of John Sliman. Their children included: Walter (b.1728); John (b.1739); and Archibald (b.1743). He could be the William who witnessed a baptism in Hawick for Robert Scott in 1763. The witnesses in 1743 were saddler Francis Ruecastle and merchant John Cavers. William (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Chisholme in 1731 when his son William was baptised. William (18th C.) said by James Wilson to have been nephew of Robert ‘Old Mortality’ and to have sold the family property of Burnflat in 1753. William (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen Hogg and their children included: William (b.1769); and Janet (b.1771). William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. In 1777 he was living at Orchard. His children included Adam (b.1767) and Agnes (b.1777). William (18th C.) resident of Southdean Parish. His daughter Margaret was baptised in 1781. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Silverbuthall. His son William died in 1829. He was probably related to Archibald, who farmed at Silverbuthall (possibly his brother, and hence the William, son of James, born in 1761). William (1769/70–1837) resident of Robertson Parish. He married Helen Armstrong in Hawick in 1798; she died in Hawick in 1856, aged 85. In 1841 and 1851 his widow was living with their son James at Raesknowe. His children included James (1805/6–54) and Margaret (1803/4–18). He died at Braxholme Braes and is buried in Borthwick Waas. William (1799/1800–1875), who is noticed on the reverse of the same gravestone, was probably also his son. William (b.c.1780) baker and Bailie in the 1820s and 30s. His shop was on the High Street, around No. 62, and he was also a tenant farmer of Winnington Rig. He was one of the 18 founders of the Relief (Allars) Kirk in Hawick, and one of the first elders. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He presided at the 1832 Reform Bill celebrations and made the often quoted statement 'It was huz and Maincheater that carried the Reform Bill' [T]. He was listed as a High Street baker on Pigot's 1837 directory and was there on the 1841 and 1851 censuses. He married Agnes Rutherford and their children included: Robert (b.1803); William (b.1804); Walter (b.1806); Helen (b.1808); Isabella (b.1811); Agnes (b.1813); George (b.1815), also a baker; Susan (b.1817); and John (b.1821). An unnamed child of his died in 1811. William (1799/1800–1875) labouring at Newmill Damfoot. He was probably son of William and Helen Armstrong. He married Ann Elliot, who died in 1855, aged 56. Their children included: Elizabeth; John (b.1830); Adam; and Simon. He and his wife are buried in Borthwick Waas. William (b.1804/5) farm steward at Stouslie. In 1835 he was listed as a labourer at Leaheads, with the entry changed to be farm servant at Stouslie in 1840, and he was farm steward at Stouslie by 1841. He married Isabella Deans and their children included: Isabella (b.1827), baptised in Kirkton; Agnes (b.1830), baptised in Wilton, who married Daniel Fisher; and Margaret (b.1840), also baptised in Wilton. William (19th C.) member of Hawick Free Kirk. He married Elizabeth Howison and their son William was baptised in 1836. Rev. William (1846–1932) born in Glasgow, he was educated at Glasgow University and Glasgow Evangelical Union Hall. He became evangelical preacher at Hindpool Road, Barrow-in-Furness 1874–78. He was then at Adelphi Chapel, Hackney Road, Middlesex. In 1888 he moved to Newcastle Congregational Church, where he remained for about 2 years. He was then at Forfar. Rev. William (1840–1906) from Torthorwald in Dumfriesshire, he was educated at the University of Edinburgh. He became licentiate at Saughtree Kirk 1866–70. He was the first person to minister to the congregation there. He is record residing at Ovenshank in 1868. He was minister at Ancrum and Longnewton 1870–1906. He married Susan Crow Noble and their children were William, Margaret Crow, Dr. Norman and James (formerly spelled 'Patersone', 'Patersonne', 'Patersoun', 'Patterson', 'Petersoun', etc., as well as sometimes 'Patonsone').

Paiterson-Broon

Dr. June, C.B.E., nee Garden (1932–2009) born and bred in Edinburgh, her father was Wing Cdr. Thomas Garden. She studied medicine at Edinburgh University, graduating in 1955. In 1957 she married Peter and the couple moved to Hawick. She worked as a medical officer in the Hawick Family Planning and Well Woman Clinics and did much to promote family planning in the Borders, at a time when the topic was an extremely sensitive one. She was long involved with the Girl Guide movement, becoming Hawick District Commissioner, Roxburghshire County Commissioner, Scottish Chief Commissioner and finally Chief Commissioner for the U.K. and Commonwealth. In 1989 she was given the highest award in Guiding, the Silver Fish, in recognition of her 30 years of service. She also chaired or served on many committees involving children, youth and education. She was made Lord-Lieutenant of Roxburgh, Ettrick and Lauderdale in 1988, the first woman appointed to such a position in Scotland. She was named as the Tweeddale Press Group's 'Man of the Year' in the 1980s and in 1991 was awarded the C.B.E. Dr. Peter N. Palace Waas (paw-lis-wawz) n. popular name for an area in Ashkirk Glebe, about 250 yards south of Ashkirk Kirk, now within the golf course. This was the site of ruins, which were still visible in the late 18th century and may have been the ancient palace of the Bishops of Glasgow. Alexander Scott ‘called of Palais’ is recorded in Selkirk documents in the period 1532–35; he was son of David Scott, Vicar of Ashkirk, who may have previously held these lands. Robert Scott ‘of Palais’ was deceased in 1579 when his widow Isabel Donald’s inventory was recorded. Walter Scott was there in 1580. An agreement was witnessed for the Scotts of Blindhaugh there in 1581. ‘Johnne Scott of the Palice’, servitor of George Scott of Synton is recorded in 1587, suggesting the place name (but presumably no longer the palace) existed at that time. There is now no evidence of any structure in this location (it is ‘Paley Wallis’ in 1580).

the Palais (thin-paw-lin) n. popular name for the ‘Palais de Danse’, part of the Odeon theatre complex, off the arcade. It was a popular dance venue in the 1940s and 50s – ‘Ee’d Stan Reid’s and the Palais anaw … ’ [AY].

Palmer (pawm-nur) n. John (17th/18th C.) servant at Branhole. In 1719 in Hawick he married Helen Cavers. Their daughter Janet was baptised in Hawick in 1720. Walter (16th C.) listed among people that were owed money by William Scott, younger of Branhole, when he died in 1552. He is recorded as ‘Waltero Palmer in Hawik’ and he was owed the large sum of 7 pounds and 6 pence. William (16th C.) listed in 1579 among people who were debtors to Isabel Donald, widow of Robert of Palace. He owed 2 bolls of oats and was probably from the Ashkirk area. William (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Catherine (or Janet) Douglas and their children included: Margaret (b.1649); and John (b.1651). William (17th C.) resident of the Haskendean area. He witnessed a baptism for George Scott in Easter Groundistone in 1688. He married Janet Aitchison in Robertson Parish in 1688. He is probably the William ‘Balmer’ whose wife had the same name and whose daughter Elizabeth was baptised in Ashkirk in 1689. In 1694 he was ‘pamer’ when his son William was baptised in Ashkirk, with witnesses Andrew Fletcher and Thomas Wallace. He had a further child,
Palmer-Douglas

Janet (b.1697), also baptised in Ashkirk. William (17th/18th C.) recorded in 1707 as Town Herd when his daughter Bessie was baptised in Hawick. The witnesses were smith Thomas Oliver and weaver Mungo Swan.

Palmer-Douglas (paw-mur-dug-lis) n. Archibald (1880–1947) elder son of Mary and Edward. He was the heir of Cavers, but pre-deceased his mother. He unveiled the Deanbrae War Memorial in 1920. During his time the Cavers estate was reduced by about half, with farms at Denholm and Spittal being sold off. He lived at Lidgard. He served as a Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. In 1920 he married Mary Kuehn. His children were: James Malcolm, who succeeded; John Aidan (b.1929); and Angela Mary (b.1924). Capt. Edward, J.P., D.L. (1836–1933) originally from Sussex, he was youngest son of Rev. George Palmer of Sullington in Sussex. He served with the Rifle Brigade. In 1879 he married Mary Malcolm who became heiress of Cavers and so he changed his surname. He devoted efforts to improving the Cavers estate, which had been neglected for several generations. This included partly rebuilding the mansion house. He joined the Jedforest Club in 1883, formed the Jedforest Hounds in 1884 and was involved with the Upper Teviotdale Fisheries Association. He served as Master of the Jedforest Hounds until 1885. He rode in the 1891 Common Riding. He also gave the small piece of ground for the Hornshole Monument. He served as J.P. for Roxburghshire, as well as being Deputy Lieutenant and a County Councillor. He had a son, Archibald (b.1880) who pre-deceased his mother and another son, Malcolm (b.1882). James Malcolm (1922–2013) son of Archibald and grandson of Mary and Edward, the first Palmer-Douglasses. When he inherited the Cavers estate it consisted of about 5,000 acres. Not a good estate manager, the family moved into Midgard and removed the roof from Cavers House to save tax in the 1950s. The family then moved to the Eskdalemuir area. He sold off the last 90 acres of the Cavers estate in 1975. He then moved to Caithness, but later took up the cause to preserve Cavers Kirk. He has had 3 wives, having children Helen and Nigel to his first wife, Dorothy Margaret Campbell. He also had children Stephen and Frances to the second Dorothy Smith. He was buried in the family lair at Cavers Old Kirk. Mary Douglas nee Malcom (1858/9–1949) daughter of Mary Douglas and William Elphinstone Malcolm of Burnfoot in Eskdale. She succeeded as Laird of Cavers when her uncle James died without male issue in 1878. In 1879 she married Capt. Edward Palmer from Sussex and they adopted the double-barrelled name. The Cavers Lairdship was inherited by James Malcolm, who was son of her son Archibald. She had another son Malcolm, who died aged 19 in 1902. She had liferent of properties that had been owned by her father, after his death in 1907. Many documents relating to her financial and legal matters are in the archives of the National Library of Scotland. Stephen son of James, he still lives locally, and helped organise the first Hawick Chess Congress in 1992 (also written ‘Palmer Douglas’).

pan-loaf (pawn-lof) adj. having a posh accent, so called because ‘pan loafs’ were traditionally more expensive than ‘plain loafs’ – ‘Is ei gaun ti cram full, pack, stuff pano (pan) n., arch. a pip, dried fruit stone, particularly from a cherry, formerly used in children’s games – ‘…the dyed yins was worth mair is the ordinary papes’ [BA], ‘One game, much in favour in autumn with sporting blades, was races with ‘papes’ [HAST1908], ‘As in the boyish days when he [J.E.D. Murray] carved the monogram of the hero of the occasion on the ‘dyed papes’ (cherry stones) …’ [HAd], ‘Black shoogir-waeter, a paep a sook’ [ECS], pl. a game formerly played by boys using dried cherry stones (also written ‘paip’ and ‘paep’).

Pape (pāp) n., arch. Pope – ‘…the said yeir, month, day, hour, and place that is, Indiction and Pape before specifyit’ [JW1558] (obviously more common in Hawick before the Reformation, as in this 1558 sasine; the last such Pope was Paul IV, 1555–59).

pape-a-go (pā-pu-gō) n., arch. a summer and autumn children’s game in which cherry stones were used as tokens in paying for turns at various funfair-type games – ‘oo’re playin pape-a-go’, ‘An’ the fee for a keek Was, of course, pape-a-go’ [??], ‘Pape a Go, as I remember it, was a seasonal amusement like tops or bools … The standard unit was one pip (pronounced ‘pape’) … and the customary chant of all stall-holders and promoters of side-shows was ‘A pape a go! A pape a go! Every time you do it, a pape and another go!’ [Scotsman, 1955].

the paper train (thu-pā-pur-trān) n. popular name for the express train from Edinburgh Waverley, carrying the evening sports editions of the Saturday newspapers (the ‘pink’ and ‘green’ papers). It typically left at 5.54 p.m. and reached Hawick around 7.20 p.m. – ‘At easter time oor eggs oo’d dye Oo heard the paper train gaun bye …’ [IWL].

Panton (pawn-tin) n. Patrick (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1742 he was ‘Officer of Excise’ and in 1745 was recorded as ‘Officer’. He witnessed a baptism for mason David Laing in 1742. He married Agnes Chatto and their children included: Agnes (b.1737); Patrick (b.1740); Thomas (b.1742); George (b.1743); twins George and Anne (b.1745); and Agnes (b.1747). The witnesses in 1742 were ex-Bailie Robert Howison and present Bailie Robert Boyd and in 1745 Robert Howison was witness to the baptism.

the Pant Well (thu-pawn-wel) n., arch. former water supply at the bakers’ shop (No. 25) corner of the south side of the Howegate, by the old entrance to St. Mary’s Church. It was constructed by piping spring water from further outside Town (perhaps the Sclidder Springs), at the instigation of the Council in 1783. It was a free-stone construction with a covering. It is probably the ‘West Pant-Well of Hawick’ mentioned in a court case of 1829 (‘pant’ suggests a roof or covering, as in the later ‘Pant Well’ of Selkirk’s Market Square).

pap (pawn) n., imp. female breast, sometimes used for a roughly conical hill – ‘Those petted playthings of an empty mind, Those paps whence flows the milk of primping scorn’ [JoHa].

papa (paw-pui) n. grandfather – ‘A bet ma papa’saulder is yours’, ‘ma ded’s ded’s ma papa, an so’s ma mam’s ded’.

Pant (pawn, pant) n., arch. a well, trough, public fountain (the ornamental well in Selkirk Market Place is still called the ‘Pant Well’).

Panter (pawn-tur) n. George (15th/16th C.) appears to have been appointed Rector of Minto in 1512. He was probably related to Alexander Panter, Vicar of Carstairs at about the same time.

paraphrases (paw-ru-frä-zeez) n., pl., arch. collection of metrical versions of passages from the Bible adopted in 1781, intended to be sung, and usually printed at the end of the Scottish Bible – ‘A still stronger dislike was felt in some districts of the country to the introduction of the paraphrases in public worship’ [RJR].

Paris (paw-ris) n. Lawrence (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Ann Tudhope in 1757. Perhaps the same Lawrence in 1775 had an account with the Burgh of Selkirk for lighting and cleaning lamps; there are men of the same name recorded in Selkirk having children with Jean Angus in the period 1778–81 and with Janet Riddell 1768–74. He is probably the ‘Laurence’, husband of ‘Peggy Cheap’, whose son of the same name died in Hawick in 1811.

parishin (paw-ri-shin) n., arch. a parish, body of parishioners – ‘Ane tryell and valuatione maid of the lands within the parochine of Hawik … ’[PR1627], ‘…ye have payid for burning of the witches our parochin thinkis our high sett and in respect ye have payid the same’[SPB1629], ‘…and then to come down before the parochine and ask for her forgiveness for that slander’[Ash1635], ‘The whilk day being appointed for the admission of Mr Henry Elliot to the function of the ministrie, at the parochin kirke of Bedroule … ’[Bed1640], ‘The upper end of the parishine of Hassendean’[BR1658], ‘The particular valuationenes of the particular rownmes of ye said parochine’[BR] (there are many spelling variants, e.g. ‘parochin’; cf. the older paroche and the more recent paraishe).

Paris press (paw-ris-pres) n. a machine in the knitwear industry used to steam-blast and vacuum-dry garments on an adjustable metal body, replacing the use of the ‘boardin-hoose’ – ‘A work on the Paris press’, ‘How interesting, do you commute weekly?’

Park (pawrk) n. local name occasionally used for Brauxholme Park, e.g. in baptismal records of 1708 and 1712.
An’ wha daur meddle wi’ me?’ [T] (also called ‘the Park’, it is ‘Park’ in 1541 and ‘Parke’ in 1583; it is recorded on Stobie’s 1770 map; see also Copshaw and Copshaw Park).

Park (pawrk) n. Andrew (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at ‘Oulviecleugh head’ in 1737 and Wolfleuchhead in 1741. He is probably related to William, who was at Wolfleuchhead later. He is probably the Andrew who married Janet Scott in Robertson in 1736. His children included: Helen (b.1737); James (b.1738); Janet (b.1740); Ann (b.1741); and John (b.1745).

Andrew (b.1815) son of shepherd William, he was born in Inverness-shire, one of 13 children, and grew up in the Hawick area. In 1851 he was a ‘Wool Carder’, living at ‘Upper Lynnwood’ (probably Lynnwood Cottages). He was also said to have worked as a foreman in a large woollen mill, was a great reader, naturalist and inventor. In 1857 he presented to the Museum some buckles worn by Mungo Park on his first journey to Africa (suggesting he was a relative). The Archaeological Society also purchased from him a stuffed golden eagle. He became a factory superintendent in Hawick before emigrating to Andes, Delaware County, New York in 1857 with his wife and eight of their children. In 1849 he married Sophia Milligan (1819–79) and they had 11 children, 9 born in Hawick: George (b.1839); William R. (b.1841); Jane (b.1843), who married Charles Mallock; Rev. Thomas (b.1845), minister at Allegheny City, Pennsylvania; Janet (b.1847), who married Charles Wheeler; David Henry (b.1850); Andrew (1852–1910); Isabella (b.1854), who married Dr. Stroud of Ontario; Sophia Ann (b.1856), who married J.R. Gordon; Ellen (b.1859), who married James Page; and Margaret Ann (b.1866), who married R. Darr. David (18th C.) tenant farmer at East Buccleuch until about 1800. He could be the tenant in ‘Dum Fedlain’ who in 1793 was in dispute with William Pringle, formerly shepherd at ‘Dum Fedlain at Howpasley’ regarding the loss of 10 sheep. It is unclear what ‘Dum Fedlain’ may refer to. David Scott (b.1806/7) brother of Andrew and son of shepherd William and Janet Main from Inverness. He was born at Abertarff, near Inverness, but grew up in Hawick. The family were probably related to Mungo the explorer. He was a grocer and spirit dealer, as well as draper and toy merchant at 19 High Street. He was listed on the High Street in Pigot’s 1837 directory. In Slater’s 1852 directory he was listed as a grocer, flint glass dealer, toy dealer and draper on the High Street. He was one of the first deacons at Hawick Free Kirk from 1844. His wife Isabella was a daughter of a French prisoner of war called Cabourne, and a sister of ‘Pawkie’ Paterson; she died in 1866. His children included: Helen (b.1831), who married Walter Scott; William (1833–97), who was unmarried and a draper’s assistant; Janet Georgina (1835–1905), who married Thomas Morton; John Scott Douglas (1837–1906) also a draper; Jane Maria Paterson Blake (1839–1904), who died in Hawick; Isabella (b.1842), probably died young; David Scott (1844–1924), who died in Devon; Agnes Isabella Jardine (b.1848), who married Draper John Forbes; and Robert Andrew Scott (1851–1903), who died in Sunderland. David Henry (1850–1910) born in Hawick, son of Andrew and Sophia Milligan (sister of Robert Milligan). The family emigrated to America in 1857, where he ran a farm implements business with his brother and then moved into real estate, finally becoming a prominent citizen in the community of Carroll in Iowa. He helped build the town there, and was instrumental in erecting the town’s Masonic temple. He married Edith C. Vette and had 3 daughters. Hercules (16th/17th C.) one of a number of men fined in 1609 for harassing and threatening Sir Robert Scott of Thirlestane. He is referred to as ‘alias callit Will the Bastart’, and some of his accomplices included Armstrongs of Kilmont. James (b.1813/4) from Morebattle, he was a shoemaker in Denholm. His business was on Main Street. His wife was Margaret, from Bowden Parish. Their children included Agnes, Thomas, James and Mary. John E. (18th/19th C.) grocer and spirit dealer on the High Street, recorded on Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. He was Cornet in 1825. Also in 1825 he was listed as a grocer on the subscription list for Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’. John (19th/20th C.) worker at Pesco’s and rugby player with Hawick R.F.C. He played as a forward for the Greens in 1904/5 and was Club President 1935-38. Joseph (b.1808/9) born at Clintmains in Berwickshire, he was a shoemaker in Lilliesleaf. In 1851 he was on the south side of Main Street and employed 2 men. He was listed in Slater’s 1852 directory. His wife was Elizabeth and their children included Thomas, Walter, Robert, James, Adam, David, Elizabeth and John. Mary (18th/19th C.) recorded along with Thomas Brydon as owner of 2 horses at Hoscoteshiel on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Mungo (1771–1806) famous African explorer, born at Foulshiels, near Selkirk, the 7th child of a tenant farmer, also Mungo. At one time he tried to set up as a medical practitioner in Hawick, but apparently found it more taxing than darkest Africa. He apprenticed to a surgeon in Selkirk, then went to Africa in 1795, returning again in 1805, when he drowned at Boussa on an ill-fated expedition to find the source of the Niger. There is a statue of him in Selkirk, and the ruins of his cottage still exist. An ornament from the grate out of the house where he was born is in the Museum. And buckles worn by him on his first African journey were donated to the Museum in 1857. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. In 1728 he was at Craikhope. His sons Andrew and Archibald were baptised in 1728. Thomas (19th C.) farmer at Little Cote, Cavers Parish. He was one of the Tory supporters victimised at the ‘Tully’s Mill’ election riot of 1837. Thomas (b.1845) son of Andrew, he was born in Hawick, moved to America at age 13 and worked on a farm, before becoming a minister at Walton, New York. Walter (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Howcleuch in 1728, ‘M...’ in 1732 and Redfordgreen in 1734. His children included: William (b.1728); Agnes (b.1730); Margaret (b.1732); and Janet (b.1734). Walter (18th/19th C.) spinner in Hawick. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. William (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Howpawesley in 1725, Craik in 1726 and Wolfechulehead in 1734 and 1737. His children included: an unnamed child (b.1725); Margaret (b.1726); Mary (b.1734); Elizabeth (b.1735); an unnamed child (b.1737); and Jean (b.1739). William (d.1809) resident of Wolfechulehead. He is probably related to Andrew, who was at Wolfechulehead earlier. He was recorded there in 1763, 1764, 1765 and 1767. He married Ann Harkness in Roberton in 1762 and their children included Isobel (b.1763), Helen (b.1764), Isobel (again, b.1766), William (b.1767), John (b.1769), Helen (b.1764), Janet (b.1771), John (b.1773), Mary (b.1775) and James (b.1779). In 1763 and 1767 he is recorded as ‘younger’, suggesting he was son of another William. His wife is probably the ‘Isobel’ Harkness whose death is recorded in Hawick in 1781. He could be the William who witnessed a baptism in Hawick for James Rae in 1790. His death is recorded in Hawick Parish, where he was ‘from olfechule head’. William (c.1780–1844) shepherd, born in Inverness, he came to Hawick in the early 19th century. In 1798 he married Janet Main. Their children included: John (b.c.1801); James (b.c.1803); David Scott (b.c.1805), merchant in Hawick; Andrew (b.1806), who must have died young; Thomas (b.1808); Robert (b.1811); Andrew (b.1815), who married Sophia Milligan and emigrated to the U.S.; William (b.c.1820); Jane or Janet (b.c.1826); and several other daughters. Most of the family returned to the Highlands, but David and Andrew remained. William (b.1788) born at Crooks in Westerkirk Parish, son of William, who was killed in Grenada. He worked from an early age as a cow-herd, later becoming ‘minister’s man’ to Rev. Dr. Brown of Eskdalemuir. He later rented the farm of Holmains in Dalton Parish, and spent more time contributing poetry to newspapers. He became editor of the Dumfries and Galloway Standard, but died shortly afterwards. He published ‘The Vale of the Esk and Other Poems’ (1833). William (19th C.) hairdresser who was one of the founding members of the Common Riding Ceremonial Committee in 1887. He was also a Bailie, and acted as judge for the Cornet’s Races. He was first appointed to the Race Committee in 1879 and later became its Chairman. His father was toy merchant David S. William (1833–97) son of David S. and Isabella Cabourne. He was a draper who succeeded Anthony Dodds as Registrar for Hawick in the 1880s. His office was at 19 High Street. William (b.c.1837) son of James and Ann and brother of frame-worker Thomas. He is listed as ‘Disability: Imbecil’ at 26 Loan in the 1861 census, and is probably the ‘Wullie Pairk’ mentioned in ‘Hawick Immortals’. William (19th/20th C.) bank manager. He married Agnes, daughter of farmer James Henderson. William (1909–82) O.B.E., son of John, who was a director at Peter Scott’s. He was educated at Hawick High School, before... going to university and then joining the staff of the National Library of Scotland. He eventually became Keeper of Manuscripts there. He remained a keen Common Riding supporter, being a member of the Mosstroopers’ Club as well as serving as President of the Callants’ Club in 1956. In 1954 he wrote the book ‘The First Fifty Years of the Hawick Callants’ Club, A Short History’. He married May, 2nd daughter of Robert Wilson from Braemar Knitwear. He was once described as ‘the amiably eccentric William Park, who for all his broad literary cultivation and scholarly insight was the least productive of curators’.

park (pawrk) n. a field, agricultural enclosure, ‘inby’ land on a hill farm, a hunting enclosure – ‘If Simon wishes to use the wester part or hill for a sheep park he must enclose the same with a stone fence and the park thereafter not to be ploughed’ [SPB1773], ‘The parks are ribbed wi’ meltin’ snaw And the hills are derk wi’ rain’ [DH] (see also pairk and perk: the word is used in one of these older meanings in several local place names, e.g. Brauxholme Park, Hermitage Park, Park, Cottage Park and specific fields).

the Park (thu-pawrk) n. Wilton Lodge Park, consisting of 107 acres (43 hectares) around the banks of the Teviot at the southern end of Hawick. The house and estate were caslled Langlands until 1790. The grounds contain walks, the Museum, the Walled Gardens, sports fields, and recreational facilities. The land was purchased for £14,000 by the Town Council in 1889, and was fortunately left as a park, to be enjoyed by generations of Teriess. A map of the estate was drawn up in 1890. Several structures in the Park, including the gate lodge and war memorials are grade C listed buildings. A major regeneration project in 2015–18 (paid for by the Heritage Lottery Fund) saw a new bandstand erected, the Laurie and henderson Shelters renovated, the Walled Gardens renewed, a new gallery in the Museum opened, an additional footbridge and new cafe constructed, the playground modernised, the fountain restored and the gates replaced – ‘A love ti walk be Teviotside And sei its ripplin witters glide Doon throw the Park at eventide In Hawick ma Border hame’ [IWL].

Parkhill (pawrk-, perk-hil) n. farm between Chisholme and the Snoot. It is reached either via Chisholme House or by a grassy track leading up from near the Snoot Kirk. It was valued in 1627, paying '100 lb., vicarage 20 lb.', listed along with Chisholme and Lairhope. It was valued at £200 in 1643, when owned by Walter Chisholme. There were 16 ‘communicants’ recorded there in 1650, namely James Chisholme, Margaret Scott, Walter Chisholme, Thomas Dodds, Marion Scott, Janet ‘Birrone’, Patrick Murray, Margaret Harper, Margaret Murray, Bessie Wilson ‘Ed.’, Bessie Wilson ‘Younger’, Robert Chisholme, Jean Chisholme, William Chisholme, Steven Rule and Janet Shiel. James Noble was living there in 1687. Along with much of neighbouring area it was transferred from Hawick Parish to Roberton in 1689/90. Around this time it was separately East and West Parkhill. The lands were held by the Chisholmes from at least the early 15th century until the 19th; presumably younger sons of the Laird of Chisholme were at one time given the lands, followed by their descendants. In 1649 Robert Chisholme in Chisholme Mill inherited the eastern lands from his father William, who is described as ‘portioner of Parkhill’. John Hume and John Allan were recorded there in 1711, Walter Hume in 1713, John Nichol and Robert Cosser in 1717, Adam Hobkirk in 1721, Walter Turnbull in 1721–34, Robert Scott in 1723, John Watson in 1725, John Turnbull in 1725–28, John Gowans and John Nichol in 1727, Robert Govenlock in 1734–42 and James Laidlaw in 1736. John Miller was here in 1741, Walter Turnbull, John Turnbull and Walter Miller were living there in 1743. John Kidd and George White were there in 1753, William Scott in 1762, George White in 1763–67, William Scott in 1764–75 and William Riddell in 1766. Robert Elliot and Robert Scott were at ‘Parkhill wester’ in 1774. Walter Thomson was there in 1780–85, James Rodger in 1782–84, Thomas Elliot in 1784, James Miller in 1785, Robert Riddell in 1786 and Thomas Thomson and John Anderson in 1787. William Scott (who died about 1820) was also tenant there. The hill there reaches 233 m, with Wester Park Hill (actually to the south-east) reaching 303 m (it is on a parish map of 1650, and is marked 'Parchhill' on Blaeus's 1654 map and 'Parkhills' on Ainslie's 1773 map).

Park Hill (pawrk-hil) n. hill to the west of Newcastleton, reaching a height of 258 m, and connecting with Bedda Hill to the north. The area is rich in archaeological evidence, with 4 groups of buildings within enclosures on the eastern side, an enclosure near the summit and boundary banks all around. However, some of this has been obliterated by the golf course landscaping.

Parkhillhaugh (pawrk-hil-hawf) n. flat land around the Borthwick north of Parkhill farm. William Gledstains was living there with his family in the 1820s. John Elliot and his family were living there in 1841 and 1851. The Snoot Kirk was built there in the 1840s.

the Parkhill Loft (thu-pawrk-hil-loft) n. former loft in the old St. Mary's Kirk, erected by Chisholme of Parkhill when that estate was within Hawick Parish, i.e. before 1689. It is possible that this became known by a different name after Roberton Parish was created. This gallery was replaced in the new church, built around 1763.

parrock (paw-rok) n., arch. a paddock, enclosed field, an enclosure used for trying to get a ewe to take another’s lamb, v. to enclose, confine, particularly said of a ewe and lamb (from Middle English).

parrockit (paw-ro-kee’, -ki’) adj., pp., arch. enclosed, confined, especially said of a ewe placed with a lamb – ‘... parrockit in ov a ceetic, mang reekin lum an chowkin smuists’ [ECS].

parsonage (par-so-nee-tiînd) n., arch. a major tithe, originally payable to the parson (rather than local vicar), also referred to as the ‘parsonage teind’. In the 14th and 15th centuries it would have been common for ‘alien rectors’ to take this major part of the ‘benefice’ as a special favour, while the actual ecclesiastical and pastoral duties were carried out by someone receiving only the ‘vicarage teind’ – ‘Item, the Flex, estimate to 100 merks in stok, parsonage 2 bolls, vicarage 5 lbs.’ [PR1627].

Parson’s Hole (pawr-sinz-höl) n. area to the east of Ashkirk village, where the track to Synton Mains crosses the Tathyhole Sike. It is said that a minister was once thrown into a pit here by the congregation.

dartaker (pawr-tä-kur) n., arch. a supporter, someone who takes one’s side ‘...Robert Scot off Alanehauth, William Scott in Alanehauth, now duelland in Hawik, Syme Scot in Oversouthfield, Watt Scot thair, Syme Scot thair, Jok Scot, duelland in Hawik, callit Wattis Jok, thair haill kin, freindis, assisters, and partakers ...’ [SB1581].

paricate (par-ti-ki’) n., arch. a parcel of land, specifically a lot in a burgh. The area was typically equal to ¼ acre or a Scots rood, corresponding to 13,690 square feet. However, in a town the lands were sometimes divided into lots that were around 20 feet across at the main street and extended back considerably; this was approximately the case in Hawick. According to the 1537 charter, holders of land in Hawick had to annually give 5 pennies to the Baron, in 2 installments at Whitsunday and Martinmas, for each particate. It was traditionally said that the owners had to perform this duty in person until the Baron grew tired of being bothered and so at some point relieved them of the need to make future payments. The Land Tax Rolls of 1663 list ‘The Particats of Hawick” being valued at £97 16s 8d (and just £97 in 1678). It was stated (in a legal opinion regarding tenure in Hawick) that there were approximately 124 particates in 1667. The ‘particat men’ were explicitly excused from attending the Baron’s Michaelmas Head Court in 1670 because of the bad state of the crops. In a 1710 land valuation of Hawick Parish it is recorded that apart from the major landowners, the Proprietors of Particats in Hawick’ had land valued at £97. At the time of the Division of the Common, there were approximately 170 proprietors of particates in the Town. Parts of the ‘Particat Lands of Hawick’ are still referred to in the 1788 county valuation and in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls
- "The said Pew was allocat to Robert Deanes, particat man of the lands of Hawick" [PR1715]. "If the particate men, mentioned in the Charter, had a right of property in the Common, and, as the suspenders allege, the whole property, it would have been most unjust to have authorised a lease of any part of it, without allowing them at least a share in the rents" [JW] (the word corresponds to the Latin 'particata', related to 'pertica', meaning a measuring rod, a 'perch', or the area of land measured with it; the word appears to have been used more commonly in the Hawick area than elsewhere).

particuler (par-ti-ku-lur) adj. particular - "Aw ken the wee bit acknowledgment was meant for mei in particular caise ..." [BW1978] (note that the 3rd syllable has a u sound, rather than the English yoo).

Pasche (pawsh) n., arch. Easter, Passion. This was one of the 3 times a year that the head courts would meet around the 16th century, specifically the 2nd Tuesday after Easter (recorded in the Circuit Court of 1622).

Pasley see Paisley
pasneip (pas-neep) n., arch. parsnip - "The spelling is, in most cases phonetic, and shows that the local pronunciation has been then, as now, distinctive, ... hearbs, turneep seed, persell seid, cress seid, pasneys seed, ..." [DMW] (spelling variants exist).

Pass (pas) n. William (18th C.) groom at Minto House in 1788, when he was working for Sir Gilbert Elliot. His surname may be a transcription error for something else.

Passchendaele (pa-shen-däl) n. ridge near Ypres in Belgium, scene of an atrocious battle ordered by Douglas Haig in the Autumn of 1917. Perhaps as many as 250,000 Allied men were lost, including around 70 locals, who have no known graves - "On the road to Passchendaele On the road to Passchendaele Where the brave will live forever On the road to Passchendaele" [AIB].

Passelew (pas-lō) n. Abbot (16th C.) commander of a group of soldiers, armed with 'hag-buts', which were quartered in Hawick in 1549, while Buccleuch had horsemen garrisoned at Peebles and Selkirk. This is mentioned in a letter of Sir Thomas Holcroft to Somerset (also spelled 'Passelew', 'Pashley', etc.; it is uncertain who this was, and what effect the garrisoned troops had on the Town).

passenger (paw-sin-jur) n., arch. a passerby, wayfarer - "Robt. Hod, passenger, was fyned, onlawed, and ammertiatt ... for his disorderly mairage with Margitt Armstrong ..." [BR1689].

pass fri (paws-fri) v., arch. to set aside, dispense with, renounce, give up - "Upon which report the Session resolved to pass from their summonds and intended process against her" [PR1724]. "Walter Turnbull, English Schoolmaster in Hawick, was sworn and admitted heritable burgess of this Burgh in common form, and his composition past from, for his service in the place" [BR1737].

passin bell (paw-sin-bel) n., arch. tolling of church bells formerly carried out during the passing of a funeral procession to the grave. In Hawick this was done at St. Mary's, usually by the town bellman. Burgess and some others had the right to request this service for a certain fee. In 1694 it was stipulated that only those who had contributed to the cost of the new bell were entitled to use it for funerals. In 1717 the cost was 2 shillings for non-Burgesses in Hawick and 6 shillings for those who lived outside the Burgh.

pastit (paw-see', -si') pp., arch. passed - "For in thy wrath a' our days ar passit awa ..." [HSR].

the Pastoral Society of Selkirkshire (thu-pas-tu-rul-sl-i'-ee-ov-sel-kirk-shIr) n. agricultural organisation, founded in 1819 by Lord Napier to promote the improvement of livestock in the county. After 1906 it became the Yarrow and Ettrick Pastoral Society. A list of members survives from 1819.

pastur (paw-stur) n., arch. pasture - "Thaye drap apon the pasters o' the wuldirniss ..." [HSR]. "Bonnie Teviot, wumplin bye pastur an pairk" [ECS], "Ther's a moppie gaen skiddelin owre that pastur the now, duist" [ECS] (also written 'paster').

pasturage (pas-tew-rij) n. right to graze cattle, particularly on someone else's land or on common land.

pat (paw', pawt) pp., arch. past tense of put, sometimes meaning made, sent, etc. - "... aganis the said Robert Elliot ...", denunciit him rebell, and pat him to the horne" [SB1624], "'It was him who pat me mad' [HSR], "... he pat thame til ane perpetuall reprochi' [HSR], "... hey juist paat up a monument fer better an brawer be what the auld yin was" [ECS] (also written 'paat'; see also pit, the alternative last tense putt and the past participle putten).

pat (paw', pawt) n., poet. a pot - "Afore your pats can feel the thourns, he sull tak' thame awa ..." [HSR]. "Moab is my wasch-pat ..." [HSR].

Pate (pā', pāt) n., arch. short form for either Peter or Patrick - "Robin an' Coli's come, an'
Piper Pate, An’ Bell an’ a’s in aunty’s o’er the gate’ [CPM].

patent (pā-tin’) adj., arch. wide, unobstructed, particularly in the phrase ‘the most patent door’, meaning the main door where proclamations were read – ‘The Beddall, with ane audible voice, called thrice att the most patent kirk door and desired yt anie who had anething to object . . .’ [PR1715].

Patson see Patsim.

Pate’s Plum (pāts-plum) n. another name for the Plum – ‘And so at last they landed her In the far-famed Pate’s Plum, And the folk o’ Hawick were made aware By the tuck o’ Tufty’s drum’ [JCG].

Path see peth.

Path Head School (path-hed-skool) n. former school in the town of MacGregor, on the Trans-Canada Highway, just west of Winnipeg, Manitoba. The school was named after the Pethhead in Wilton, which was the birthplace of Robert Lamb, the farmer from Hawick who gave the land for the school. The school ran from 1892 until 1965 and a memorial cairn was erected on the site in 1987.

Pethheid see Pethhead.

Pethheid (pawth-heed) n. former farmstead in Castleton Parish, a little to the north of the modern Newcastleton. It is marked on Stobie’s 1770 map, just south of Blackburnfoot. Thomas Mathieson was there in the early 1800s.

Pathhead (pawth-heed) n. former farmstead in Ewesdale, near Sorbie. John Graham and family were there in 1841.

patience (pā-shins) n., pl. patience, treated as a plural – ‘Hei has mony patience’ [GW], ‘Owre few patience’ [GW].

Paton (pā-in) n. Charles (1752/3–1818) teacher of a school in Callander, who was licensed to preach by Deer Presbytery in 1779. The following year he became preacher at Teviothead ‘chapel-of-ease’ and stayed until about 1785 (when James Sanson took over). He became minister at Ettrick in 1791 and remained there until he died (of a stroke). His native tongue was Gaelic, and it is said that he was never a very popular preacher, since he still had to translate his thoughts into English. Maj. James of Crailing (b.1831) son of John, his mother being an Elliot. He was educated in Edinburgh and rode on the last journey of the coach ‘Chevy Chase’ back to the Borders. He joined the Kings Own regiment in 1850 and retired from the army in 1871, having been decorated for service in the Crimean War and India. Back home he was a Major in the Border Rifle volunteers and later commander. He was a member of the Jedforest Club. He succeeded his father to the Crailing estate in 1889. He was a J.P. for Roxburghshire, served on the county council and was also Deputy Lieutenant. In 1863 he married the eldest daughter of J.C. Lamb of Ryton and his eldest son was John. Maj. John William Joseph, M.B.E. (1924–2020) born in Hawick to Archibald and Isabella Graham, he was one of 7 children, growing up in Drumlanrig Square. The family moved to Glasgow when he was still a child and he lied about his age to join the army in 1940. He had a distinguished career in the military, extending over 30 years, starring as one of the first members of the Royal Electrical and Mechanical Engineers. He took part in the D-Day landings and was on a ship bound for the far east when the war ended. Afterwards he worked briefly in Selkirk, but then re-enlisted, serving in several places overseas. He became a Sergeant-Major at the age of 26, was commissioned in 1963, became a Captain in 1964 and retired in 1975 with the rank of Major. After retiring he worked as a volunteer at Fyvie Castle in Aberdeenshire. In 2009 he received the M.B.E. for services to heritage in Scotland. Walter (b.1817/8) from Crailing, he was a baker at 23 High Street. He was listed in Slater’s 1852 directory. His wife was Ann and they had a daughter Beatrix. He was probably deceased by 1861, when his wife and children were living with his wife’s cousin Jane Grieve at the Crown Inn. Walter (19th C.) innkeeper at 78 High Street in 1875.

Patonhaugh (pā’-in-hawch) n. former farm in Southdean Parish, just over on the south side of the Jed Water to the south of Edgerston Rig (marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Patrick (pa’-reek) n. Alexander Bonthorn (1858/9–1937) manager at tweed manufacturers Robert Noble & Co. He married Margaret, daughter of commission agent James Hunter, and she died in 1933, aged 75. Their children were Alexander (minister), James (of New York), and Lieut. John Bonthorn (of the K.O.S.B., killed at Gallipoli). His wife was one of those from Hawick who travelled to visit Gallipoli in 1926. Alexander (1887/8–1941) eldest son of Alexander Bonthorn. He was educated at Durham University and spent almost 20 years as Chaplain to H.M. Forces in India. He was then Episcopalian minister at Newton Ferrers, Plymouth, where he died.

Patrick Cunningham’s Lands (pa’-reek ku-ning-humz-lawndz) n. former name for lands within Hawick Parish. They were formerly held. by the Parish Minister, but must have been given heritably, since they were later held by his descendants. The lands may have originally been given to Rev. Robert Cunningham by Scott of Buccleuch, and then passed to his son Patrick (1636–c.1706), who was a Burgess of Hawick, becoming minister at Kirkton; he was often referred to as ‘Mr.’, a designation which was also applied to the lands. Rev. Robert Cunningham (c.1668–1722) was probably a son of Patrick, and held the positions of minister in Wilton and then in Hawick. Another Patrick, recorded onwning some of the same lands in Hawick, may have been his son. It was stated in 1767 that part of the lands were then partly in the hands of Bailie Turnbull. They were still referred to as ‘Mr. Patrick Cunningham’s Lands in Hawick’ in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls, when several parts were valued at more than £75, including one piece called ‘Allers Garden’ (which was presumably near Allars Bank). The lands may not have been contiguous pieces, and at least some of them lay within the East Mains of Hawick. Based on who owned some of the lands later, it included part of what was developed as Buccleuch Street.

Patrick of Albania (pa’-reek-awl-ba-nee-a) n. Parson of Kirkton, recorded as witness to Hawick’s first known sasine in 1453. ‘Albania’ may be Albany perhaps. A ‘Patrick McNawany, parson of Kirkton’ was witness to a charter of Archibald Earl Douglas in 1438; it is possible this was the same man, although there are other Kirktowns in Scotland.

the Patriotic Memorial (thu-pa’-ree-o’-reek-mu-nee-a) n. another name for the Boer War Memorial.

the Patriots (thu-pa’-ree-its) n. name used by a group of townspeople, led by Walter Freeman, who objected to the way that the Common was managed by the Council and Bailies, and in particular the agreement made to give away one third of the land. The supporters of Freeman were 205 in number, mostly Burgesses without property. They organised themselves to oppose all actions regarding the Common in the late 1770s, including letting a small part (to clear the Town’s legal debts); they appointed their own Town Herd, to pasture all of the Common, including the part recently let. At an organisational meeting Freeman declared himself to be Chief Magistrate, whereupon he was imprisoned. The group also threatened the Bailies and Councillors, as well as the party who came to actually divide the Common in 1777. In 1778 they took the Council and Bailies to court, claiming they had failed to properly manage affairs on behalf of the Burgesses, leading to the Division of the Common. They particularly complained about how the Bailies were elected and about the actions of the present Bailies, who, they claimed, managed the business of the Town for their own ends. The Council led a counter action, and it was ultimately found in 1781 that they had the right to let the Common. The decision of the Court of Session also fixed the number of members of the Council at 31.

patten (paw’-in, pa-ten) n., arch. a wooden clog worn to raise the feet out of mud, particularly a wooden sole with an iron frame, which tied on to a shoe—‘The ladies had in wet weather to walk with pattens, there being neither cabs nor carriages . . .’ [RM]. The Museum has a pair from around 1800, which belonged to Mrs. Johnstone Reid of Wilton Lodge.

patter-merchant (paw’-ur-mer-chin’) n. a person who speaks rapidly and at length in an attempt to impress others—‘that Baron Munchhausen’s a right patter-merchant’.

Pattison (pa-tee-sin) n. George Handayside (1806–85) son of William Pattison and Agnes Handayside, he was born at Wooler and educated in Edinburgh, where he trained as a lawyer. He was a Conservative in politics. In 1849 he argued in favour of continuing the Jethart Baa at the High Court in Edinburgh. In 1868 he took over from William Oliver Rutherford as Sheriff of Roxburghshire. He became a member of the Jedforest Club in 1869. Joseph (b.1779/80) from Carlisle, he was inn-keeper of the Cross Keys in Newcastle-on (on South Hermitage Street), recorded in 1841 and 1852. His wife was Helen and they had a daughter Jane. Robert (b.1812/3) ploughman at Sorbieetrees in the 1860s. His wife was Janet and their children included Helen, Scott, Andrew, Margaret and Robert. William (1729/30–1803) resident of Castleton. He married Margaret Little, who died in 1788, aged 51. Their children included: James (1758/9–1834), engineer, who died in Bolton; Mary (1779/80–98); William (1780/1–1868); and one who died in infancy. They are buried at Ettleton. William (1780/1–1868) resident of Castleton, son of William. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘ Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. He was listed as a labourer in Newcastleon.

among heads of households in 1835. His wife was Margaret Cowan, who died at Newcastle in 1848, aged 65. Their son John died at Redheugh in 1903, aged 81. He died at Oxnam Row and is buried at Etterton (this may just be a variant of Paiterson).

pauchle (paw-chul) v. to struggle on, shuffle, make one’s way with difficulty – ‘When winter brings his gruesome train, Ye pauchle on, an’ ne’er complain’ [JJ], ‘Pauchlin’ on i’ the heat o’ the day’ [GW].

pawkie (paw-kee) adj., arch. having a down-to-earth humorous outlook, rogush, waggish, wily, sly, crafty, resourceful, shrewd, knowing – ‘Many a pawkie trick he played upon the men of the law by field and river’ [RM], ‘Syne wi’ cootlin’ and coaxin’, sae pauky and see …’ [JT], ‘Willie was shy, and Willie was pawky, Willie was tall, and Willie was gawky’ [WFC] (also spelled ‘pawky’ and ‘pauky’).

Pawkie Paiterson (paw-kee-pā-tur-sin, pi’-ur-sin) n. song with words generally attributed to John Ballantyne (although it has also been suggested that it was written by Dr. John Douglas).

He basically adapted a traditional Northumberland song, ‘Robin Spraggon’s Old Grey Mare’, into Hawick dialect and with local characters. The original words related to the district of Felton in Northumberland, and in 1888 were said to have been written more than a century before. The antiquity of the tune is unknown, but it has much in common with Border (or Northumbrian) pipe music; although the words of the song clearly derive from ‘Robin Spraggon’s Old Grey Mare’, the tune bears little resemblance (and simiarly for its antecedent ‘Hey! boys, up go we!’ published in 1646). This makes the Hawick song quite unique compared with its Northumbrian inspiration. It was recorded being sung at the first ceremonial Colour Bussing of 1887 (by William Wilson), but is certainly much older. The characters mentioned in the song place it around the 1830s or 1840s. The words were not formally written down until long after it had become a favourite, and so there are versions that differ in minor details. An early version appears in Frank Hogg’s Transactions article in 1873, somewhat different words for some verses appear in the Border Magazine in 1896 and another version is in the collection ‘Vagabond Songs’ (1904); these differences suggest that the song was often sung extemporaneously. The tune is one of those played by the Drums and Fifes during the Common Riding and is one of the few Hawick songs in compound time. The song has been a staple of Colour Bussings since the end of the 19th century.

Pawkie Paiterson (paw-kee-pi’-ur-sin) n. general nickname for male members of local Paiterson families. The name probably predates the song. There was certainly a real ‘Pawkie Paiterson’, Robert Paiterson, who lived in the late 18th and early 19th centuries about whom the words of the song were written. His descendants lived near the foot of the Loan and farmed at the Loanhead. It is unclear whether Nellie Harkness was his sister or his niece. However, Hawick parish records show that Robert’s father Archibald and his brother James, were both also called ‘Pawkie’. It may be that earlier generations also had this same nickname. Another thing that is unclear is which shade of meaning of ‘pawkie’ was attributed to an early member of this family.

pawn (pawn) n., arch. a pledge, sum deposited with the kirk session as a guarantee that a marriage would be forthcoming and without scandal – ‘...what was termed ‘laying down the pawsns’, that is, the making of a small consignment in guarantee that the marriage would be solemnized’ [JJV], ‘...the pawn...remain in the clerk’s hands for the space of three quarters of a year after the marriage’ [PR1711], ‘The pands consigned before Mr. Alexander Orrok’s death, which were not forfeited for immoralitie, were restoted’ [PR1711]; in Hawick in the 18th century the fee was usually 14 shillings and the marriage was to take place within 40 days, with the money being held for ¾ year, v., arch to pledge a sum to guarantee marriage and propriety – ‘His consignation money panned in Mr. Orrok’s time...twenty shilling Scots piece panned by Jo. p-Celtic (pee-kel-tik) n. ancient language spoken throughout Britain before Anglo-Saxon took over. It is distinguished from ‘q-Celtic’, which includes Scots Gaelic, which was never spoken in the Borders. There were probably 4 main dialects, Cornish, Welsh, Cumbric and Pictish, with Cumbric (also sometimes called Northumbrian) being the version spoken around Hawick and in the whole kingdom of Bernicia. Several local place names have probable p-Celtic roots, including names containing ‘pen’ or ‘caer’. Many river names may also be from this era, if not even earlier. There is a possibility that the Hawick slogan ‘Teribus’ comes from a Cumbric phrase.

peaceful (pees-fi) adj. peaceful – ‘A peaceful' an contented mind – The greatest gift that puir mankind ...’ [WP].

the Peace Medal (thu-pees-me-dul) n. medalion presented by the Burgh to all Hawick school children in January 1920. It was bronze, with a peace sign on one side, the Burgh arms on the other and with a tri-colour ribbon attached.

Peacock (pee-kok) n. James (18th/19th C.) hatter in London. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He must have had a local connection of some sort. James T. local businessman who was Callants’ Club President. It is partly thanks to him that the script for Jed Murray’s ‘The Gutterbludes’ survived. John (16th C.) servant of the Laird of Cowdenknowes. He was one of the men indicted in 1552 for the murder of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch. He was said to have been on Edinburgh High Street with Robert Kirkton and Lance Ainslie, when they stabbed the wounded Scott several times and took his cloak and bonnets. His name is written ‘Johanne Pekok’. John (b.1801/2) weaver from England. In 1841 he was living on Underdamside in Wilton, with his wife Nancy and children Thomas, Walter and William. In 1851 he was still on Underdamside with his 3 sons, as well as his niece Jane McLaughlan, mother-in-law Betty Thomline and brother-in-law William Thomline. He was still living at Underdamside in 1861, with his son Walter and 3 boarders. He is probably the ‘Bill Peacock’ listed among men who came to Hawick in about 1836, following John Wilson going to the Rochdale area to learn about weaving flannel. Joseph (18th/19th C.) painter in Hawick. He was a member of Hawick Curling Club in 1812. He is listed as a painter on the Cross Wynd in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. He married Jane (or Jean) Miller in 1798; she was also from Hawick, daughter of James Miller and Christian Wintrop, and died in 1815. Their children included: William (b.1799); Christian (b.1801); Joseph (b.1803); James (b.1805); Alexander (b.1806); Walter (b.1808); Margaret (b.1809); Thomas (b.1812); and Jane (b.1815). The baptisms were entered together into the Hawick Parish records together, suggesting the family were part of one of the secession churches. The witnesses in 1799, 1801, 1805, 1806 and 1808 were writer Thomas Miller (his wife’s brother) and merchant James Elliot. The 1803 baptism was before the ‘Congregation at Paisley’. Peter Labour politician, educated at Hawick High School. He was a Councillor in the Highlands from 1982, has been M.S.P. for Highlands and is Deputy Minister for Finance and Public Services. W.T. former Archaeological Society President. William (15th C.) tenant in Buccleuch, recorded at the Justice-aire held in Selkirk in 1494/5. He was allowed to ‘compone’ for the crime of stealing 60 sheep from Glensax, with his surety being Adam Scott in Anneshope. Peden (pee-din) n. Rev. Alexander (1626–86) born in Ayrshire, he became an outlawed Covenanter, preaching in secret for 10 years before being captured, imprisoned on the Bass Rock for 4 years, then sentenced to banishment. He was probably on a ship, bound for the plantations of Virginia in 1678, from which many escaped when berthed in London; there were several local men on the same ship. He then lived for a while in Ireland, but returned to Scotland in his final year. There are ‘Peden’s Pulpits’ all over the Scottish moorland, including on Ruberslaw. In addition Denholm Dean once had a ‘Peden’s Thorn’ and a ‘Peden’s Vale’ and there is a ‘Peden’s Cleuch’ south of Southdean and an old outhouse there was called ‘Peden’s Barn’. On the slopes of Ruberslaw during a conventicle he is supposed to have said ‘O Lord, lap the skirts of thy cloak ower puir auld Sandy’, bringing down a mist that allowed escape from the dragoons — ‘Still on her hillsides round the guarded word Cower noble Peden’s persecuted band: E’en ye, discerning eyes by Melrose see, Becowled, a faithful brother, sombre stand’ [WL], ‘[WL]. John ‘Jock’ (1913–84) son of Walter A. His recorded rendition of his father’s song ‘The Lassie That Works In the Mill’ saved it for posterity. Thomas (19th C.) President of the Hawick Co-operative Society in the 1870s. Thomas (19th C.) from Hawick, he was a missionary within Britain, being stationed in Cardiff. His son Michael was a member of the Hawick Home Mission. Walter Armstrong (1863–1954) born in Galashiels, but from a Hawick family, he worked as a butcher in Hawick. He was a keen horseman and cyclist. He was a member of Lodge St. James 424 and Buccleuch Bowling Club, as well as an elder of East Bank Church. He wrote ‘The Lassie That Works In the Mill’ and would sing it regularly. Exactly when it was written, and whether it was influenced by any other songs, remains unknown. He had sons George and Jock, both of whom also sang his song at local events.

Peden’s Barn (pee-dinz-bawrn) n. former name for a barn in Southdean Parish. It is said that the Covenantant Alexander Peden came there in disguise, asking about work, and being set to threshing in the barn, only for the farmer to discover the same man preaching at a nearby conventicle on the Sunday.

Peden’s Pulpit (pee-dinz-pool-pi’) n. natural rocky chasm near the summit of Ruberslaw, used for clandestine sevices of the Covenanters, possibly including Peden. It is said that you can still see where he laid his bible, and a large flat boulder there was used as the communion table. It is a narrow cleft in the rocks, on the south-west side of the summit. A carved hollow in a nearby rock, of unknown original purpose, is said to have been used by the Covenanters for baptisms – ‘...Plewed rigs an planteens ...an Peden’s Poo-pit buin maist’ [ECS], ‘Look back on majestic Ruberslaw The ghost o’ covenantin’ men Lookin’ doon frae Peden’s Pulpit That’s high above the fen’ [AY].

Peden’s Stane (pee-dinz-stän) n. large stone in an area of moorland between the Hermitage Water and Roan Fell, near the head of one of the streams that makes up Ralton Burn. It is on land belonging to Foulshiels farm. The rock is about 2½ feet high and inscribed with ‘For Auld Lang Syne AD 1824’ to commemorate a place where it is said that Alexander Peden preached.

Peden’s Vale (pee-dinz-väl) n. former name for a deep glen in Denholm Dean Burn, said to be flower-clad in summer. It is about 400 yards below the ruined cottage. It was used for secret Covenanters’ sermons, and according to tradition Peden himself once hid there.

the Pedlar’s Field (the-ped-lurz-feeld) n. cornfield situated where Ladylaw Place was built in the 1840s (in the middle of the north side of what is now Princes Street). The entrance gate was called ‘the Pether’s Yett’.

Peebles (pee-bulz) n. town built in the Tweed valley on the Eddleston Water. It is one of Scotland’s royal and ancient burghs, becoming a Royal Burgh in 1367. It was formerly the county town of Peeblesshire, and headquarters for Tweeddale District Council. There has been a bridge across the Tweed there since at least 1470. The town was destroyed by Hertford’s men in 1545 and again in 1547. It once had a defensive wall around the old town, on the right bank of the Eddleston. It was a major centre for brewing and wool production, but now focuses on tourism. St. Mungo’s Well there is supposed to be connected with a 6th century visit. Peebles Castle, built by David I, was long a royal residence, but a ruin by the end of the 17th century, and nothing of it now remains. However, the visible ruins of the Cross Kirk include part of a 13th century friary; this was the burial place of the chiefs of the Scots until the end of the 15th century. Peebles Hotel Hydro, built 1878–81, and rebuilt 1905–07 after a fire, is a dominating feature. The Mercat Cross contains part of the 17th century original. The Town House dates from 1753, and Chambers’ Institution, built mainly in 1859, has long served as a cultural centre. Peebles Beltane Week at the end of June (focussed on the Saturday closest to Midsummer) was begun in 1897, reinstating the Riding of the Marches and linking it with the ancient Beltane Fair. It includes a ceremony at Neidpath Castle (with ceremonial Wardens of the Cross Kirk and of Neidpath Castle) and the dancing of the Cornet’s Reel in the High Street. The Cornet and Beltane Queen use accoutrements dating from the 1920s Population (1991) 7,056 (the origin of the name is probably Old Welsh for ‘temporary huts’).

Peebles (pee-bulz) n. James of that Ilk (15th C.) recorded as ‘Jacobum de Paiblis’ in 1437 when he was one of 2 ‘procurators’ for Alexander of Weens when he resigned his lands of Weens (probably Weensland) into the hands of the Baron of Hawick.
Peedlum (peed-lum) n. nickname in use in Havick in the late 19th century – ‘Poodge and Peedlum gang doon the toon, Sly Tammy and Kittlin’ Soup gang up; There’s Paddy Barratt and Jamie Broom, And there’s Dick Newall and Johnny Whup’ [HI].

peel (peel) n. a keep, small fortified tower, particularly one constructed near the Scotland/England Border around the 16th century – ‘Invidious rust corrodes the bloody steel; Dark and dismantled lies each ancient peel’ [JL], ‘The ruined Tower and Border peel, Beneath the moon’s cold rays Seem once again astir with life As in the bygone days’ [JCG] (from Old French; also written ‘pele’; the word is used in several place names, e.g. Peel, Peelbrae, Peel Burn, Peel Fell and Peel Knowe).

peel (peel) v., poet. to skin, injure the skin – ‘He’ll fight the field though heads are peeled’ [MG] (see also peelin their wands).

Peel (peel) n. popular name for Peel Hospital. The house there is a Scottish baronial mansion built in 1909 for a Leith seed merchant. There are several other places around the Borders with the same (or similar) names, including a former seat of the Elliots in upper Liddesdale. Essentially the same lands were called ‘Hairtherne’ in 1533 when first acquired by Walter Scott of Branholme and it is ‘Peil and Hatherne’ in 1718 when surveyed along with other Buccleuch properties.

Peel (peel) n. former tower on the Peel Burn in the upper Liddel valley, close to the Border, just to the west of Peel Fell. It was once a site of some importance, being next to the Wheel Causeway, formerly the only toad in the neighbourhood. It is now marked only as ‘Peel House’ on the Ordnance Survey maps, but also gave its name to the stream and nearby hill. Also referred to as Baxtonlees, the lands were owned by several branches of the Elliot family in the 17th and 18th centuries. ‘Peil’ was listed among the lands in upper Liddesdale that were once held by Jedburgh Abbey. In 1659 it was sold by Sir Gilbert Elliott of Stobs to William Elliot of Binks and Swinside. John Elliot was there according to the 1678 Land Tax Roll. The tenant there in 1694 was Francis Beattie. In 1710 it was passed to John Elliot’s only son John, but since he failed to survive his father it then passed 1/5 each to John’s daughters Elizabeth, Christian, Jean and Margaret, and the last 1/5th to his 3 grandchildren! In the 1730s they all sold it to Henry Elliot, a cousin, son of Henry of Harwood. Henry Elliot paid tax on 10 windows there in 1748. His son Henry sold it again later in the 18th century. Thomas Scott bought it from Lord Douglas in 1807. It later passed to William Scott-Elliot and then his brother John Scott-Elliot. In the 19th century there was a shepherd there called Hutton (probably Robert), from whom William Oliver of Langraw collected many Border ballads. John Riddell was farmer there in 1868 (it was ‘Peall’ in 1694, ‘Pill’ on the 1718 Buccleuch survey and also ‘Pill’ in the 1748 Window Tax Roll).

peel-an-eat (peel-an-ee’) n., arch. a potato boiled in its jacket – ‘When supper comes, instead of better meat, He feeds on potatoes, peel and eat’ [JR], adj. said of potatoes boiled in their jackets, also applied to a delicate or sickly person (noted by E.C. Smith).

Peel-an-Eat (peel-an-e’e) n. nickname in use in the early 19th century.

Peelbrae (peel-brá) n. former farm, presumably lying below Peelbraehope and near to the ‘Peel Brae’, which is south-east of Priesthaugh, and on the slopes of ‘Muckle Knowe’. The remains of a peel tower there explains the name. Before 1498 the lands were owned by the Elliots of Redheugh and referred to as ‘Tillielee’ or ‘Tilloly’. They were probably owned (or leased) by Gavin Elliot of Horsleyhill in the mid-16th century. Robert Elliot of Redheugh served as cau- tioner for the residents of the lands there in 1574. There were Wigholms there in the early 17th century. It formed part of the extensive Buccleuch lands of Ringwoodfield in a 1660 document, where it is also said to be called ‘Tillieleehope’. William Scott, John Dalgleish and John Teller were listed there in 1694. The farm was joined to that of Priesthaugh in 1707 and was rented from the Buccleuch Estates by Robert Elliot of Midlem Mill in 1741. The farm was surveyed in 1718 and a plan exists. At that time it consisted of 175 acres and was bounded by Dodburn, Priesthaugh and Brough. William Elliot was recorded there in 1727 (it is ‘Peilbra’ and ‘Peilbray’ in 1574, ‘Peilbrae’ in 1612 and 1660, ‘Peilbraea’ in 1694 and 1727 and ‘Peilbrae’ in 1741; the element ‘peil’ could refer to a ditch, namely the Catrail).

Peel Brae (peel-brá) n. slope on the west side of Muckle Knowe, lying on the east side of the Priesthaugh Burn. The name is surely related to the former lands of Peelbrae, and perhaps to the pele-house, which is to the north-east. There is a cairn there.
Peelbraehope

Peelbraehope (peel-brā-hōp) n. former farmstead up in the hills east of Priesthaugh, in the headwaters of the Penchrise Burn. There is now nothing left of the house, but a cairn marks the spot, with a plaque commemorating its long habitation by the Elliots, and stating that it was once an important meeting point on the drove road from Teviotdale to Liddesdale. Thomas Nichol was tenant in ‘Peelbraephoad’ in 1694. There was a dispute between Sir Gilbert Elliott of Stobs and Ann, Duches of Buccleuch, resulting in the boundary with Penchrise being fixed in 1718. This is described in the survey of Buccleuch estates carried out in that year, when it consisted of 965 acres and was bounded by Priesthaugh and Dod on the west and lands owned by Elliott of Stobs to the south, east and north. Sir Gilbert leased the lands from the Buccleuch Estates in 1744. The Nichol family were there in the 19th century and J. Armstrong was recorded there in 1868. In the late 19th century it was home of a family of Elliots, with 22 children born to 2 mothers; about 200 descendants recently gathered in New Zealand. The farmstead was evacuated in 1943 when it became part of the firing range for Stobs Camp. The Tinlee Stone is just to the south and a section of the Catrail (the part nearest to Hawick) passes to the north – ‘The soft breeze blawn owre Peelbraehope Seems murmuring Amen!’ [WL] (also written ‘Peelbrae Hope’, it is ‘Peilbraehope’ in 1718).

Peel Burn (peel-burn) n. stream in Southdean Parish, running roughly east, past the ruins of Mervinslaw Tower, to meet the Jed Water. There is an area of rig lines to the south.

Peel Fell (peel-fel) n. hill on the Border, southeast of Singdean, reaching a height of 602 m, the highest peak for many miles around.

Penchrise Peel (peel-hos-pi-ul) n. hospital near Galashiels, serving the Borders for several decades, and being the main hospital for the Hawick area from after WWII to the 1980s. The estate was purchased by Lord Craigmile in 1939 to build a hospital on, but it became a military one first, consisting of several Nissen huts. Always inadequate, and awkward to get to, eventually a new hospital (the B.G.H.) was constructed at Huntlyburn in the late 1980s.

Peelie-wallie (pee-lee-waw-lee) adj. sickly, pale – ‘hei looks gei peelie-wallie the day, div ee no hink?’, lacking in strength, lacklustre – ‘that was a peelie-wallie performance on the pitch the day’ (also written ‘peely-wally’).

peggie (pe-gee) n., arch. a game played with a pocket knife, in which each player tries to stick the blade in the ground by sliding it from the back of the hand, the palm or the sleeve.

Peggie Duncan *(pe-gee-dung-kin) n. cock-eyed character in John Ballantyne’s song ‘Fawkie Paiterson’ – ‘And as for Peggie Duncan, She is a bonnie lass ...’ [JSB].

Pei (pi, pl) n. nickname for Ian Reid, ?? Douglas, and possibly others??.

peifer see pyfer

peiu-huil (pi-hiul) n., arch. a pea-shell.

peir (peer) n. a pear – ‘A’ll hev a per o yer ripest peirs please’, ‘For apills and peers to the kichen ...’ [Buc1631] (also spelled ‘peer’).

peirs (peerrz) n., pl. pears, once grown in the area, particularly in Jedburgh, probably a remnant of the orchards of the Abbey. The oldest varieties that were grown included the Longueville, the Bon Chretien, the Ludd, the Bergamot, the Bon Chretien, the Ludd, the Bergamot, the Bon Chretien, the Ludd, the Bergamot, the Bon Chretien, the Ludd, the Bergamot, the Bon Chretien, the Ludd, the Bergamot, the Bon Chretien, the Ludd, the Bergamot, the Bon Chretien, the Ludd, the Bergamot, the Bon Chretien, the Ludd, the Bergamot.

Other varieties grown were the Gray Auchan, the Red Auchan, the Worry Carl, the Buchanan, the Drummond, the Golden Knap, the Lamias and the Pitfirran. Jedburgh had 40 acres of orchards at one point, and the trade spread to neighbouring villages and towns. The peak in production and fame was probably around the early 19th century, but by the 20th century the trade collapsed.

peise (piis) n., arch. the pea, pease – ‘...and no person, young or old, be found gathering or pulling of their neighbour’s peise ...’ [BR1695], adj. relating to the pea – ‘Item, that no person burn any peise sheaves or inbring into house, harryards, or sets any sort of come or grain ...’ [BR1696] (see also pease).

peise (piis) n., arch. to raise or lever up a stone etc. (see also pease; perhaps from the Old French).

peise-wusp (piis-wusps) n., arch. a bundle of pea-straw, something very tangled or confused – ‘A heid like a peise-wusp’ [GW].

peislet (piis-lit) pp., arch. in snug circumstances, comfortable – ‘Robin Tod’s a bien, fou, weel-peiselt bodie’ [JoJ] (also written ‘pyslit’, ‘peisled’, etc.).

Pei-stick (pi-stik) n. a stick used to support pea plants – ‘And, it’s a kinda shame to use them for pei-sticks, after a’ eer work’ [DH].

peisew (pi-swee) n., arch. a pea-pod.

peisweep (pi-sweep) n., arch. the lapwing or peewit (also peesweep).

peisweep blast (pi-sweep-blawst) n., arch. a whistling gust of wind, accompanied by rain or sleet.

peisweap gress (pi-sweep-gres) n., arch. a kind of woodrush, Luzula pilosa or Luzula campestris.

peisy (pi-see) adj., arch. made of pea-meal – ‘A peisy banna’ [GW] (also easy).

peitrei (pi-tri) n., arch. the laburnum tree.

pellet (pe-li) n., arch. a sheepskin, usually shorn of its wool, a pelt (noted by J. Jamieson and G. Watson; see also pett).

pen (pen) n., arch. a hill, particularly a pointed conical one – ‘He lورد it wide o’er the Pen o’ Skelfhill’ [HSR] (from the early Cumbric word, being the p-Celtic version of ‘ben’: it occurs in place names, e.g. Penchrise Pen and Ettrick Pen, as well as sometimes Skelfhill Pen, the lost placename Penangushope and probably also in Penielheugh).

Penago see Pennago

Penangushope (pen-awng-gis-hop) n. narrow valley through which the Mosspaul Burn flows, a surviving variant of the lost area name Penango. The lands (along with Cauldcleuch) were granted by William, 1st Earl of Douglas, to the monks of Melrose Abbey about 1358, for masses to be said for Sir William Douglas of Lothian. Sir Alexander de Penangushope was witness to a charter of the lands of Lag, Dumfries in the period 1405-12. The lands of ‘Penangushope’ were included in some leased by Walter Scott of Brauxholm from Melrose Abbey in 1500, lying within the extensive Lairdship of Ringwoodfield. Robert Elliot (‘Young Robin’) probably held the lands in the mid-16th century. Robert Elliot of Redheugh rented them from Melrose Abbey around 1557; at that time they were valued at £5. They are still recorded as part of Ringwoodfield in 1621, 1634, 1653, 1660 and 1661, although referred to as ‘also called Skelfhill (presumably ‘Skelfhill’ is meant)’ in 1660. It was recorded as still part of the Lordship of Melrose in 1663. The name may not have occurred after the end of the 17th century (it is ‘penangushop’ and ‘penangushope’.

Penangushope (pen-awng-gis-hop) n. Sir Alexander (14th/15th C.) witness to a charter of the lands of Lag, Dumfries in the period 1405–12. William (14th C.) collector of contributions of the constabulary of Edinburgh according to the Exchequer Rolls of 1360 and 1369. His name is written ‘de Penangishop’. He may be related to the William ‘de Penago’ recorded in 1332 (this surname surely comes from the region in southern Roxburghshire; see also Pennango).

pencell (pen-sul) n., arch. a small flag, pennon, alternative spelling of ‘pensil’. This is the first recorded word for the Flag in the Burgh Records of 17th May 1703 – ‘The said day the Common ry-deing was ordained to be upon Fryday, the twenty eight of May, iiM, viijC. and thrie yeares, James Scott, called Laird, was voted to cary the pencell’[BR1703], ‘…the person or persons that was statut and ordainit to cary the towne pencill or Colour the day befor being Fryday, the last of May …’[BR1706], ‘…and George Deanes, merchand, was the first that caried the new pencell, standard or colour …’[BR1707] (also spelled ‘pencill’, etc.).

Penchrise Burn (pen-kris-burn) n. stream rising near the Pike and running to the east of Penchrise Pen to join the Slitrig. There is an earth and stone banked enclosure and other banks on a sloping shelf above the Burn, on the eastern side, near Burnt Craig Wood; this could be related to military operations at Stobs Camp. To the west, on the eastern slopes of Penchrise Pen are the remains of a settlement. Further south, also on the west side of the stream are the remains of a homestead, about 25 m in diameter, with a probably hut platform inside, with an entrance on the west and probable old trackway leading to it. Graptolites have been found in the rocks here.

Penchrise Peel (pen-kris-peel) n. small farm standing on the opposite side of the Slitrig from Shankend. A Scots baronial type house was built there to J.P. Alison’s design in 1908. The wood around the farm is called Peel Wood.

Penchrise Pen (pen-kris-pen) n. hill near Penchrise farm, reaching a height of 439 m (1,439 ft). It contains a triangulation pillar and former military observation post (which blew over in a storm in the 1970s), as well as the remains of several earthworks and the ramparts of a hillfort. Like several other major peaks in the area, the hill is formed from igneous rocks. The bare cone of rock at the summit is enclosed within 3 ramparts, with entrances to the north-west and north-east. Within the roughly 105 m by 80 m enclosure are banks and possible hut circles. There is a roughly triangular annex immediately to the west, containing 3 hut circles and another enclosure to the north-east. On the eastern slopes is another earthwork, probably a settlement, measuring about 50 m by 40 m; it has been partly erased by cultivation, as well as quarrying and has a sheepfold partly on top. On the southern slopes of the hill lie the remains of a settlement, about 50 m by 45 m, as well as a small homestead. The Catrail also crosses to the south of the Pen. The conical shape of the hill makes it easily recognizable over a wide area of the Borders. The training grounds for Stobs Camp stretched all the way to here at one point, with WWI practice trenches being dug on the north-west slopes – ‘... And o’er high hill, and hollow glen, Round Liddle-head, and Penchrise-pen’ [AD]. ‘Like a breeze upon the High Street singing down from Penchrise Pen, They waft our weariest worries clean beyond the haunts of men’ [JYH], ‘I’ve felt on top o’ Penchrise The warm sun beekin doun’ [WL] (a curious double use of the ancient p-Celtic root ‘pen’; it appears on Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Penill hill’ and is ‘Pencrest pen’ on Stobie’s 1770 map; the spelling varies, e.g. it is ‘Pencrestpenn’ in 1839).

pend (pend) n. a vaulted or arched passageway, especially one leading from a street to a courtyard, an arched walkway – ‘oo bade in a pend off the Howegate’, ‘oo’ve got a lot o’ pendit bit nane o thum er actually caed that officially’ [IWL], ‘A’m shair ilka corner and gairden and pend ...’[??], ‘... A toff cam in wi’ bulging pack And dumped it in the pend’ [WL], ‘... oo’ve quite a lot o’ pendit hoose in Hawick, really’ [ME], an arched roof, the arch of a bridge – ‘... the bonnie Teviot, dooce an purpose-leike ... gleidin neth the pends [ECS] (from Latin; see also pendit hoose).

pendit (pen-dee’, -di) adj., arch. vaulted, arched – ‘... Aneath the pendit arches O’ the auld Mid Raw’ [JT].

pendit hoose (pen-dee’-hoos) n., arch. a 2 storey house with a vaulted lower floor. In former times ‘pended buildings’ were the common mode of defensive construction, with the upper floors being reached using a ladder via a hole in the ceiling of the arch below. This construction was partly for protection and partly so the animals could be housed on the bottom floor. The walls were originally several feet thick. Outside stairs projecting into the street were added to most of them in the 17th and 18th centuries. The back of 51 High Street is the last example of such a fortified house in Hawick, with No. 53 being the last one on the front of the street (rebuilt at the end of the 19th century). There were formerly a great number in Hawick, situated all along the High Street and Howegate, but most were replaced during the 18th and 19th centuries.

pen-fauld (pen-fawld) n., arch. the yard near a farmer’s house used for holding his cattle (noted by J. Jamieson).

Penicuik (pe-nee-kook) n. town between Peebles and Edinburgh. It has a ‘Hunter and Lass’ celebration in late May, which began in 1936 and is modelled on the traditional Border Common Ridings. Population about 18,000.

Peniel Heugh (pi-nul-hew) n. officially called the Waterloo Monument, it is a striking local landmark, being the tallest man-made feature in the Borders. It is perched on 237 m (791 ft) Peniel Heugh Hill, north of Jedburgh, which also hosts an ancient British fort. It was built for the Marquess of Lothian to celebrate Wellington’s victory. It is a circular tower, 48 m (150 ft) high, which can be reached via a side road near Monteviot House, although there is currently no public access to the interior. The first architect was William Burn, but the original construction collapsed in 1816 when it was about 3/4 completed (this is sometimes ascribed to a small earthquake). The new design was by Archibald Elliot (also responsible for Jethart Castle Jail) and was completed 1793 (the origin of the name is unknown, but could relate to an early resident called Penman).

Penmanshaa Burn (pen-munz-haw-burn) n. stream rising north of Borthwickshiel and running into Harden Burn. The farm of Penmanshaa was located there in the 18th century.

Pennango (pen-awng-gō) n. former name for lands around Moss paul, surviving as ‘Penangushope’ for the valley through which the Moss paul Burn flows. The name is included in a description of the boundaries of Ringwood when it was granted to Melrose Abbey in the 1160s. The land was gifted to the monks of Melrose by William Earl of Douglas in the 14th century. The name also appears as an occasional surname, e.g. in 1552 ‘Sym Pennango’ was paid by the Court to deliver letters to the Laird of Buccleuch, and in the 1577 Edinburgh Burgess roll ‘Andro Pennango’ became a Burgess by right of being servant to the Lord Provost (also spelled ‘Penango’ etc. and cf. Penangushope; another example of the ancient p-Celtic root ‘pen’, this perhaps meaning ‘marshy hill’ or ‘uninhabited hill’; the name is mentioned around 1200, and a small valley ‘Penangushope’ occurs in many 14th–17th century documents; it was stated as being pronounced by shepherds as ‘Glinpineagle’ or ‘Glenpenanga’ in notes for the Ordnance Survey in the 1850s; it has recently been fancifully connected with ‘Agned’, the site of a purported battle involving King Arthur, but there is no evidence for this).

Pennango (pen-awng-gō) n. David ‘Davie’ (16th C.) recorded in 1541 when he was accused of having led about 10 Scotsmen on a raid on ‘Brome’ in Gilsland, where the wife of Andrew Routledge was killed. Gryie (d.bef. 1536) recorded in an account of events in Scotland in 1536. There was ‘ane singular fechting betuix the Johnstounis on the ane pairt, twa Moffettis and Gryie Panago on the vther pairt’ in the presence of James V; this was perhaps a late case of judicial ordeal by battle. He was killed, along with a Moffat and a Johnstone. It is unclear if ‘Gryie’ is short for something. Hugh (16th/17th C.) recorded in about 1600 in documents relating to a feud between the Earl of Cassilis and the Laird of Bargany. His name is recorded as ‘Hew Penangushope’. Hugh (17th C.) witnessed a bond by Lord Mauchline in 1655. His name is written ‘Huch Peyngganno’. In an inventory for John Muir of Park in Ayrshire (dated 1685, but probably referring to about 1652) he was ‘Huch Pennango in Broadlay’. Perhaps the same Hugh was recorded.

in a case involving the Duchess of Lauderdale in 1685. James (16th C.) recorded in 1532 when he had the gift of all the goods of James Symontoun in ‘Lekclyyk’. James (17th C.) son of Robert, who was tenant in Cockburnspath. In 1674 he became an apprentice, to Saddler Robert Childers in Edinburgh. He may be one of the last of this surname on record. Robert (17th C.) recorded as ‘femourer’ in Cockburnspath in 1674 when his son James became a saddler’s apprentice in Edinburgh. He was presumably tenant of the mill at Cockburnspath. Simon (16th C.) servant of the Earl of Angus and vassal of the Barony of Douglas. He was servant to the Earl of Angus when he defended Tantallon Castle when it was besieged by James V in 1528. In 1531 he was a member of the royal household and in 1533 received the gift of the ward and marriage of John Carmichael. He was given livery from the King in 1535 and had a gift of the non-entries of part of the lands of ‘Auchincroes and Corsycon’ in Ayrshire in 1535/6. In 1537 he was in ward and his goods were poind by royal officers, so he had clearly fallen out of favour. In 1538 he was sent from Edinburgh Castle to Tantallon, and in 1540 was back in Edinburgh Castle. He returned to favour with the King later in 1540 and was granted lands in the Barony of Douglas. He may also be the ‘Symiune Pennango’ who was recorded as Captain of Coldingham in 1543. William (14th C.) recorded in 1332 as licenciate in arts and illegitimate son of a married man. He was given dispensation to be ordained and to hold a benefice; however, it is unclear if that happened. William (16th C.) tenant in Easter Whitfield. He witnessed as precept by the Commendator of Coldingham in 1557. He may be the same William who was granted the lands of Middle Blantagart (in the Barony of Douglas) in 1539, and was surely related to Simon, who held these lands earlier (this surname is surely related to the place in Roxburghshire and was prevalent in Ayrshire, although now extinct; see also Penangushope).

the Pennant (thu-pe-nil) n. another name for the Flag – ‘Nor will their prowess be forgot while Pennant is on high. For Callants still are ready yet To serve it well – or die’ [WFC].

the Pennon (nux) n., arch. a pennon – ‘…carried the same along the haill common, and through the haill town, deriding, mocking, scoffing and laughing at the old pennil and bearers and carriers thereof’ [BR1706]. ‘The new pennil, standard or colour …’ [BR1707] (also written ‘pensil’; an alternative to pensil).

the Pennon Way (thu-pe-nil-wa) n. public footpath stretching 270 miles from Kirk Yetholm in the Borders to Edale in the Peak District (or the other way round). Although called after the Pennines, it also traverses about half of the Cheviots. It is regarded as one of the most challenging long-distance walks in Britain. The closest part to Hawick is the stretch (on the wrong side of the Border) between Windy Gyle and Byrness.

pennil (pe-nil) n., arch. a pennon – ‘…carried the same along the haill common, and through the haill town, deriding, mocking, scoffing and laughing at the old pennil and bearers and carriers thereof’ [BR1706]. ‘The new pennil, standard or colour …’ [BR1707] (also written ‘pensil’; an alternative to pensil).

penny-bridal (pe-nee-br-dul) n., arch. a wedding ceremony in which the guests contribute a small amount of money towards the entertainment, with any surplus going to the bride and groom – ‘John Hart being cited to compear before the session for making a pennybryddall at his daughter Christian’s marriage …’ [BR1703].

Pennycook (pe-nee-kook) n. Alexander (b.c.1835) son of John and Jane, who were from Lanark. He was a stockingmaker in Hawick. In 1861 he was responsible for the murder of William Ainslie in Free Church Lane, with young William Moore also involved. Peter (b.c.1811) farmer at Highchers Mill in 1841. He was living there with his siblings Barbara and Robert. He was probably from Dundee and in 1851 was living in Peebles with his sister Barbara, who had married Selkirk innkeeper Walter Brydon. Peter (b.1832) born at Rawflat. He farmed at Newhall in Bowden Parish. He is probably the Peter of Bewlie who served as a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire. In the 1860s he resided at Hallrule House. In about 1874 he is recorded being ‘of Bewlie Hill’ when he was owner of lands in Bewlie that had formerly been owned by William Ridell of Camieston. He also held lands in Bowden Parish, including Midlem Mill. In 1855 he married Robina, daughter of Henry Elliot, farmer at Greenriver (i.e. Hobsburn). They had one daughter, Agnes Ellen, who married James Lindsay, son of George Oliver, solicitor in Hawick. William,
the penny end

J.P. (19th/20th C.) one of the main people involved with the time capsule inserted into the Horse Monument in 1914 and uncovered in 2003. He was probably the same W.M. who was in the first pair to win the Pow Cup in 1905. He lived at 10 Beaconsfield Terrace.

the penny end (thu-pe-nee-end) n. popular name for primary 1 at some schools, or the part of the school where they were taught (such as Buccleuch School and Wilton School, where the first three years were separated).

Pennymuir (pe-nee-mewr) n. site of Roman marching camps on Dere Street, just a few miles from the Border, near the head of the Kale Water, about 15 miles east of Hawick. Dere Street can be followed from there to Whitton Edge (the origin of the name is probably Old Welsh ‘pen y muir’, meaning ‘the hill of the wall’; the name occurs at least as early as 1637, and is often written ‘Pennymoor’).

penny-stane (pe-nee-stān) n., arch. a game, similar to quoits, played with a flat, round ‘penny-stone’ – ‘[One profanes the Lord’s day by] gaming at the bob and penny stane’ [HAST1904] (recorded about 1695).

Pen Sike (pen-sik) n. small stream that rises between Penchrise Pen and White Hill, running to the south to join the Penchrise Burn. At its head there is a linear earthwork crossing White Hill, which is probably an agricultural boundary. There are also the remains of a settlement in its headwaters, on the south-west slope of Penchrise Pen. It appears that it corresponds to the stream formerly known as Langleuch.

Pen Sike (pen-sik) n. small stream that rises just to the north of Skelfhill Pen and runs in an easterly direction to join the Skelfhill Burn.

pensil (pen-sil) n., arch. a pennon, banner, standard, especially used for the flag carried in the Hawick Common Riding in the 1700s – ‘The person elected cornet having declined to carry the pennil [sic], or colour, caused ane great disturbance, confusion, and mutiny amongst the otherwise civil inhabitants’ [BR], ‘See their pensil o’er them! See them drive the kye before them’ [RSC] (from Old French, diminutive of ‘penon’).

Penstemon Alice Hindley (pen-sti-min-aw-lis-hind-lee) n. large-leaved, perennial variety of penstemon, introduced by Forbes’ Nurseries in 1931, and one of the oldest hybrids in cultivation today. It is a popular plant and was given the Royal Horticultural Society Award of Garden Merit.

pent (pent) v., poet. to paint – ‘The picture-pentin man’s despair . . .’ [JBS] (not particularly Hawick pronunciation).

Pentecost (pen-tu-kost) n. festival celebrating the descent of the Holy Spirit after the Ascension, seven weeks after Easter. It was formerly used as one of the days for paying rents and legal fees, and was later referred to as Whitsunday.

the Pentecostal (thu-pen-tu-koz-tul) n. popular name for a Pentecostal congregation (whose members seek to be filled with the Holy Spirit, like the Apostles at Pentecost). They originally met in a Mission Hall on Beaconsfield Terrace before WWI, and in a wooden hut at the bottom of Laidlaw Terrace in the mid-20th century. It was also referred to as ‘the Apostolic’, and held big meetings for children during the War years. The site was where the Evergreen Hall was later built.

penter (pen-tur) n., poet. a painter – ‘Ay, pen-ter lad, throw to the wund . . .’ [JBS] (not particularly Hawick pronunciation).

Penton (pen-tōn) n. station on the Waverley Line just south of the Border. The nearby ‘Penton Linns’ are a picturesque series of waterfalls on the Liddel Water (which marks the Border here), and is also an area of special geological interest. The bridge there was built in 1812, with one of the contractors drowning when removing the wooden supports from the arch – ‘Go with me to Penton Grove, bonnie lassie O, Through its mazie walks we’ll rove, bonnie lassie O, Where the Liddel waters rin, With their wild resounding din, As they flow out o’er the Linn, bonnie lassie O’ [DA].

penult (pen-ult) adj., arch. penultimate, last but one – ‘. . . writtin at Hawik the penult day of Januar’ [RBA1561].

Penwen (pen-win) n. Robert (15th C.) received the Rectory of ‘Sowdon’, i.e. Southdean Parish in 1424, having been given Holy Trinity in Berwick upon Tweed, but obtaining Southdean ‘by collation’ first. He is recorded as Rector in 1443 when he was assigned the canony and prebend of ‘Capyt alias Balderen’ in Dunkeld. He also held the perpetual vicarage of Closeburn and some tithes from Morton. He was further recorded in as Rector in 1444 when he witnessed a charter for the Kers of Altonburn. He could be the same Robert ‘Pennwen’, Clerk of the Diocese of Glasgow, who, in 1447, was granted a canony of Glasgow, which was the gift of Thomas ‘Perawen’ (presumably a close relative); however, this was blocked when he was found to be the illegitimate son of a priest, a fact that was dismissed by the new Pope in 1461. This Robert at that time already held the perpetual vicarage of Calder. In 1455

he was master ‘Roberto pendven’ Rector of ‘sowdon’ as adjudicator for a dispute over teinds in Morebattle; ‘Master Thomas Pendven’, Rector of ‘Kerkmachequilo’ (probably Kirkmaho) was mentioned in the same document and hence possibly his brother (and ‘John Pendwen’, Vicar of Sprouston recorded in 1475 was surely another relative). He was Robert ‘Rendven’ when recorded as still Rector of ‘Sowdon’ in 1455 (also spelled ‘Pendven’, ‘Penven’ and variants).

peppercorns (pe-pur-kurnz) n., arch. a small device for grinding pepper – ‘Peppercorns. A simple machine for grinding pepper, Teviotdale’[JoJ].

peppoch (pe-poch) n., arch. a collection of cherry stones – ‘Peppoch, The store of cherry-stones from which the castles of peeps are supplied; called also Feedow, Roxb.’[JoJ] (also ‘paipoch’).

per (per) n. a pair – ‘...wui a face aa coalmoom, an a perr o reed-ribbon een glintin leike sлаsі’[ECs], ‘Dunion ... is buirdly billie ti Ruberslaw, an there the perr stand, shooder ti shooder’[ECs], ‘...and in this class is the common usage perr o horse (= pair of horses)”[ECs], ‘When the Royal per arrived Aw ge’id a wee bit wave teh the Duike’[BW1978], ‘...the biggest per o feet in the band is size 11½ ... ’[CT], ‘...the per’s honeymoon destination wasni near si exotici’[IW], ‘...An a per o’ glaury breeks’[RM], ‘And afore lang, the per o them were tirlin away ... ’[DH] (sometimes written ‘perr’; see also the pair).

perceeeze (per-seez) adj., arch. precise (in [HNe1954]; also percise).

Percehay (pers-hа) n. Walter (d.1289) described as ‘Walter Pershay’ in a charter of around 1283–85. This involved inspection of the earlier charter of 1260 in which Tarvit was granted by William Avenel (to whom John of Wilton was feudator) to Thomas Wallace. He was the son and heir of Joanna of Wilton, who was probably the heiress of Sir John de Wilton. According to Scottish accounts, he had a role in the murder of the young Earl Duncan of Fife, and was executed by Andrew of Moray of Petty. The Percehay family were from the area of Ryton in North Yorkshire, and after his death is only heard of in Yorkshire. However, in family histories his parents are given as Robert de Percehay and Joan de Vesey. That this is the same name as the Baroness of Wilton recorded in the early years of the 14th century is surely not a coincidence. Perhaps Joan de Wilton was the same woman as Joan de Vesey (if she married twice), or perhaps there were 2 generations here. English records suggest Walter died in 1346, married Agnes and was succeeded by William; but that seems likely to be a son or even grandson, given the dates.

percise (per-sіs) adj., arch. precise – ‘...He’d look perceise, and smile and play as suited best: But Death has laid him in the clay, – Well may he rest’[CPM] (perceeeze).

Percy (per-see) n. Henry (1300–52) 2nd Baron Percy, son of Henry de Percy, the 1st Baron Percy of Alnwick. In 1327 he was created Lord Warden General of the English Marches. From 1334 he was joint Warden with Ralph, 4th Lord Neville. That year he was given lands by Edward III which had formerly belonged to Douglas. This included the town and castle of Jedburgh, Jed-forest and Hassendean; this may have led to the rivalry between Percy and Douglas generations later. These lands were recovered by Sir William Douglas about 1338, but retaken by the English in 1346 and his Jedburgh lands were confirmed to him in 1352. He married Idonia Clifford, daughter of Robert de Clifford, Earl of Surrey, who had been the previous Warden. He was succeeded by his son Henry, 3rd Lord of Alnwick. Henry (1320–68) 3rd Baron Percy, eldest son of Henry the 2nd Lord. He served as Lord Warden General of the English Marches from 1352. In 1354 he, along with Ralph Neville, was appointed as a commissioner to deal with Elizabeth, widow of Sir William Douglas, former Keeper of Hermitage. In 1356 he had the town and forest of Jedburgh conferred on him by Edward III, the grant included the town of Hassendean. He married Mary Plantagenet, and was succeeded by his son Henry. Henry (1342–1408) 4th Baron Percy and 1st Earl of Northumberland, son of Henry, the 3rd Lord of Alnwick. Like his father and grandfather he served as Lord Warden General of the English Marches, from about 1366/7, serving until at least 1375. He fought in the Hundred Years War and was Warden of the Marches. The entire territory of Teviotdale was bestowed upon him in 1403. He had been a supporter of Henry of Lancaster (later Henry IV), but revolted against him in 1403. These machinations included the siege of Cocklaw Tower (Ormiston) along with his son ‘Hotspur’ and their men in May of that year. After Hotspur’s death and his own capture at Shrewsbury he continued plotting against the English King, leading an attack from the North, which led to his death at Bramham Moor. He married Margaret, daughter of Ralph, Lord Neville of Raby. Sir Henry ‘Hotspur’ (1364–1403) son of Henry, 1st Earl of Northumberland. The Percys were a powerful family based at Alnwick, who laid claim to the throne of England in the early 15th century. He was English Warden of the West and East Marches along with his father, and then solely from 1384. His nickname is said to have been given to him by the Scots as a tribute to his readiness to attack. He was captured by the Scots at the Battle of Otterburn in 1388, but later ransomed. In 1403 he besieged Cocklaw Tower, which has been identified with Ormiston. Henry IV refused to give help, and this was the excuse for the Percy’s to launch their direct attack on the English throne, leading to the death of Hotspur at the Battle of Shrewsbury. He features in Shakespeare’s ‘Henry IV’. He married Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Edmund Mortimer, 3rd Earl of March. They had 2 children: Henry, who became Earl of Northumberland; and Elizabeth, who married John, Lord Clifford, and secondly Ralph Neville. – ‘Sir Harry Percy came to the walls The Scottish host for to see, Sayd, ‘An thou hast brent Northumberland, Full sore it rueth me’ [T]. Henry (1421–61) 3rd Earl of Northumberland, son of the 2nd Earl, who was Constable of England and Warden of the East March. He was first cousin of Edward IV. He was made Lord Warden General of the Marches in 1439. He was killed leading the Lancastrian side at the Battle of Towton. He married Eleanor, daughter of Lord Poyning and was succeeded by his son Henry. Henry (1449–89) 4th Earl of Northumberland, son of the 3rd Earl. He was one of the few Percy’s to take the Yorkist side in the Wars of the Roses. John Neville was given the Northumberland title for a while, and it was only restored in 1473. He was later suspected of treason in the death of Richard III. In 1485 he was made Warden of the English Middle and East Marches. He was killed by rioters protesting high taxation. He married Maud Herbert, daughter of the Earl of Pembroke and was succeeded by his son Henry. Henry Algeron (1478–1527) 5th Earl of Northumberland. He was Warden of the East Marches from 1503, but apparently preferred the life of the court to that of Border warfare. He was in France during Flodden, although his two brothers fought there. In 1522 he was made a member of the Council of the North, and served as Lord Warden General of the Marches 1523–25. He married Catherine Spencer and was succeeded by yet another Henry. Henry Algeron (1502–37) 6th Earl of Northumberland, son of Henry Algeron and Catherine Spencer. He was a suitor of Anne Boleyn in their youth, but sat on the jury that convicted her of adultery in 1536. He served as Warden of the English East and Middle Marches 1527–37. In 1533 he led a force through the Borders that burned Branxholme, as well as Whitchesters, ‘Whitchesterholme’, Whitlaw and Newbigging, among other places. He was apparently quite profligate and eventually had to sell much of the family estates. He was forced to marry an older woman, Mary Talbot, who left him no direct heirs. Henry (1532–85) 8th Earl of Northumberland, brother of the 7th Earl. He was also engaged for many years in Border warfare. After being imprisoned for the third time he was found shot in the Tower of London. Thomas Earl of Worcester (c.1344–1403) younger brother of Henry, 1st Earl of Northumberland. He fought with distinction in France. He was granted Jedburgh town, castle and forest by his brother, Earl of Northumberland in 1397. He assisted his nephew Henry ‘Hotspur’ in the rebellion against Henry IV and was beheaded after the Battle of Shrewsbury. Sir Thomas (c.1504–37) 2nd son of Henry, 5th Earl and brother of the 6th Earl. In 1536 he was made Warden of the English Middle March, possibly along with his father. He was executed for his role in the ‘Pilgrimage of Grace’ (a Catholic uprising in the North of England). He married Eleanor Harbottle and their son Thomas was the 7th Earl of Northumberland. Thomas (1528–72) 7th Earl of Northumberland, nephew of the 6th Earl, he was Lord of Alnwick Castle. In 1557 he was appointed Warden of the English East and Middle Marches, and engaged in Scottish expeditions for many years, resigning in 1560. He was involved in a rising of Northern England in support of Mary Queen of Scots, and had to hide out in Liddesdale in 1569. He was said to have been betrayed by Hector Graham of Harlaw (a Border outlaw), captured by Martin Elliot’s men and handed over to the Regent Moray, spending the night in Hawick on their way north. He was sold back to Elizabeth I, handed over to Hunsdon at Berwick and later beheaded at York. He married Anne, daughter of Henry Somerset, 2nd Earl of Worcester. She was said to have been robbed by Liddesdale men while passing through the area to visit her husband in Scotland; a ring found at ‘Blakeburn’ (at least 2 centuries ago) was suggested to have been hers. She later went into exile in Europe, but maintained contact with other English Catholic exiles.
Percy’s Gauntlets

Percy’s Gauntlets (per-seez-gawnt-litz) n. trophy long held at Cavers House, captured from Percy Hotspur a few days before the battle of Otterburn. These are small gloves, richly embroidered with pearls and silver, and bearing a lion device. Clearly too small for Percy himself, they must have been a lady’s favour, presented to him before going to battle, and Percy’s desire to recover them may have contributed to the severity of the battle. These relics were previously sometimes referred to as ‘Percy’s Pennon’, under the mistaken belief that this was a banner, rather than gauntlets.

Pesco’s (pes-köz) n. Peter Scott’s, founded in 1878, with their main factory on Buccleuch Street, originally the partnership Adamson & Scott, between Peter Scott and his uncle Peter Adamson. The company started in part of Peter Laidlaw’s old factory at Wilton Grove, was based in the Tabernacle from 1881–93, and moved to Buccleuch Street in 1893, acquiring the former premises of the Commercial Bank. Scott split from Adamson in 1884, when the firm’s title was changed to Peter Scott & Co. The now familiar factory on Buccleuch Street was built in stages and largely completed by 1913, with the classical-style block to the west added in 1923 (designed by J.P. Alison). Behind the front section there are several other buildings, including knitting sheds and a boiler house. The factory retains its octagonal chimney (the only one in the Borders with its original top cornice). There was also another mill on Wilton Path (adjacent to the entrance to the ‘hunder steps’, specialising in sports coats) and one on Commercial Road (specialising in hosiery, opened in 1916) in the early 20th century. They were the first firm to guarantee against shrinkage of underwear at the turn of the 20th century. The Hawick factory was devoted to production for the troops during WWI, and supplied the ill-fated Shackleton expedition of 1914. In 1914 it was described as the biggest firm of its kind in Scotland, employing 800 people. Later it moved from hosiery into knitwear and sportswear. The Commercial Road buildings were used as a billet in 1939 and in 1945 the canteen was opened in the main factory. The Wilton Path factory closed in 1954. A nursery for employees ran until 1958. 16–18 Howegate was sold in 1956. A factory was built in Kelso in 1961 and another at Chirnside in 1974 (sold in 1981). The Queen and Prince Philip visit during the company’s centenary year in 1978. The ‘Peter Scott’ signature is the main company logo, along with the deer image. The official trademark was ‘Pesco’ from 1931 until relatively recently, and that has always been the popular name in Hawick. The firm went into arbitration in 2010, but was temporarily saved by English firm Gloverall. In 2016 the factory ceased production for good. The ‘Pesco Quotation Book’ (1916) was sold to raise money for the war effort, and after WWI ‘A Souvenir of Peace’ was published. The company has given several notable gifts to the town, including an early motor ambulance and fire-fighting equipment.

the Pesh (thu-pesh) n. headmaster at the High School – ‘Mr. Low was the Pesh it that time’ (derived from the nickname ‘le Pêche’ of Rector Watters, so-called because of his complexion; see also Rectors).

pet (pe’) n. a huff, fit of pique, bout of petulance, particularly in the phrase ‘ti take the pet’ – ‘hei taen the pet when hei wusni picked first’, ‘she’s in the pet the day’.

Peter Scott’s (pee’-ur-skots) n. Peter Scott & Co., better known as Pesco’s, which was its official trademark until relatively recently.

peth (peth) n., arch. a path, a steep road – ‘. . . an’ whatsaevir passes throwe the peths o’ the seis’ [HSR], ‘Haud up my gaings in thay peths, that my fitsteps skyldena’ [HSR] (the usual local meaning has no implication of being a narrow footpath, as in the English word).

the Peth (thu-peth) n. Wilton Path, the road leading up the hill, continuing on from Albert Road as part of the old road to Edinburgh. It was also known as ‘Roughheugh Path’ until the late 19th century. It was once very built-up, with a row of houses at the top known as the ‘Pathhead’, and a factory block next to the entrance... to the ‘hunder steps’. In the mid-20th century it contained a chip shop, the Store bakers, a wine shop and ‘Foosty Broon’s’. Houses, shops and a knitwear factory were demolished in 1972/73, leaving essentially no houses on the street itself. The Manse for St. George’s Church is at the top on the left.

pether (pe-thur) adj. a peddler, packman, travelling merchant – ‘Assoilizes George Makwetie fra the claim persewit be John Scott, pether, for a half dozen of butes, mae or fewer, al-legit taken awa fra his crame in Hawick’ [BR1655], ‘The Muse cry’d, ‘Jamie, mind the pether, That bears the pack . . . ’ [JR], ‘There’s pethers and potters, and gingerread stan’s, Peep-shows, puff-and-darts, and great caravans . . . ’ [DA] (also written ‘pethar’ and ‘pethir’; cf. pedder). pett (pet, pe’) adj., arch. petulant, peevish (also written ‘petteet’; noted by E.C. Smith; see also petted lip).

the Pether (thu-pe-thur) n. nickname for anyone who worked as a packman or peddler, particularly in the 18th century, e.g. William Scott from Deanburnhaugh.

Pether Hill (pe-thur-hil) n. nickname for a Hawick character of the 19th century, presumably a peddler called Hill – ‘Wullie the Paidle, Gleid Rob, Knacketts, Balmer the Bugler, Bobby Trott, Pies Oliver, and Jamie Tackets, Don Pedro, Pether Hill, Waulk Scott’ [HI].

the Pether’s Yett (thu-pe-thurz-ye’) n. former name for a gate which gave entry to ‘the Pedlar’s Field’, a field in which corn grew in the summer, being the first of the open fields on the land north of what is now Princes Street, where Ladylaw Place was built in the 1840s (from ‘the Pedlars’ Gate’).

Pethheid (peth-heed) n. Pathhead, a former name for the area at the top of Wilton Path, particularly the row of houses that stood on the north side of what became Princes Street (near where the Balmoral Bar is located), as marked on the 1858 Ordnance Survey map. This block of houses is already marked on the 1810 sketch of Wilton. In 1841 the name appears also to have been used to the houses to the west, on Langlands Road. Note that the place gave its name to ‘Path Head School’, near Winnipeg, Manitoba (also sometimes ‘Pathhead’).

pett (pet, pe’) n., arch. a sheepskin with the wool removed (noted by J. Jamieson; see also pellet).

petted lip (pe’-eed-, pe’-ee’, pe-teed-lip) n. a bottom lip stuck out in a sulk, particularly by a child – ‘she put on a right petted lip when she heard she couldn’ gaun’, ‘deh trip ower yer petted lip’, ‘ee could hing monkeys off that petted lip’ (cf. pettit).

Pettie (pe-tee’) n. Rev. Robert Douglas He was ordained as minister of Saughtree Kirk in 1927, but stayed for only a year before moving to Creish.

pettie-point (pe-tee-poin’) n., arch. a type of stitch, perhaps similar to what was used in tapestry work – ‘Pettie-point, A particular sort of sewing stitch, Roxb.’ [JoJ].

Petttigrew (pe-ee-groo) n. John, M.B.E. (b.1882) born in Wellington Street, he became Joint Managing Director of Peter Scott’s. He was a member of the Angling Club and the Masons, and also wrote some works on the woollen trade. He married Esther Scott (b.1874), who was niece of Walter Scott, co-founder of Lyle & Scott’s. Robert (15th C.) bequeathed a sheep in the 1491/2 will of Sir David Scott of Bruxholme. He is listed as ‘domino Roberto Pettigrew’, suggesting he was associated with a church. It is unclear if he was local, like most people in the will.

pettit (pe’-ee’, pe-tee’) adj. petulant, peevish (also written ‘petteet’; noted by E.C. Smith; see also petted lip).

pett-taes (pe-tee-t=az) n., pl., arch. the feet of pigs (noted by J. Jamieson).

peuchle (pe-chul) v., arch. to work ineffectively – ‘That peuchlin’ body never wuns off the bit’ [GW], to cough feebly, splutter wheezily (in [HNe1954]), n., arch. a short cough (also written ‘peughle’).

Phantasy (fawn-tu-see) n. dog boarding kennels and associated property situated just after Hawthornside on the way to Bonchester.

Phaup (fawp) n. former steading on the Phaup Burn above Castleweary, east of the A7. The Read Roads pass near here and the Moss paul ride-out route usually comes near here also. It was listed along with Linhope and Frosty lee as a 20-shilling land among the possessions of the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1653, 1661 and 1663; ; these were united with lands in Wilton and others into ‘the tenement of Blackgraine’. However, it appears to have been in the Barony of Cavers when that superiority was inherited by Sir William Douglas in 1687 and by his brother Archibald in 1698. In 1718 it was surveyed along with other Buccleuch properties, at that point covering 654 acres and bounded by Skelfhill, Linhope, Binks, Southdean- rig and Northhouse. John Renwick was living there in 1749 and William Grieve was shepherd there in 1797. The place name has many spellings and can also be confused with an area of the same name near the head of the Ettrick. This could be the ‘Fallhope’ which was owned by the Glendinnings of that ilk from at least 1325. One of these 2 places probably gave rise to the somewhat rare surname Phaup, with ‘Adam de Fawhope’ being recorded as a juror in 1304, ‘Archibald Fawp’ being Chaplain at Linlithgow in the early 16th century and several people of the name recorded in the Melrose area in the 17th century (spelled ‘Phawhope’, ‘Fawhope’ and other variants; the origin might be from the Old English ‘fah hop’, meaning ‘variegated valley’; it occurs at least as early as 1604 as ‘Fawhop’, is ‘Falhope’ in 1653 and 1660, ‘Fawhope’ in 1661, ‘Fahope’ in 1663, ‘Phallhope’ in 1687 and 1698, ‘Phaip’ in 1694 and ‘Fau’ in 1749; it is ‘Faehope’ on the 1718 Buccleuch survey maps; there are other places of similar name elsewhere, e.g. at the head of the Kale).

Phaup (fawp) n. area near the head of the Ettrick Water, also written ‘Phawhope’. Nether and Over Phaup are separate farmsteads, the latter being a ‘bothy’ on the Southern Upland Way. Earlier the lands were split into Easter and Wester ‘Fawlishope’. These were the lands of Sir John Turnbull ‘of Falshope’, whose daughter married George Scott of Synton about the early 15th century. Sir Thomas Turnbull held lands here in the latter part of the 15th century. They were Crown lands, assigned to John, son of Thomas Turnbull in 1483-87, then George Home of Ayton in 1488 and his son John in 1490, and then with John’s consent assigned to John Turnbull. In 1494/5 the farm is mentioned as a place that was pillaged for sheep and in turn the residents there were charged with rieving. In 1501 they were half let to Ralph Ker and the other half to the wife of Sir Thomas Turnbull and Ralph Ker still held half the lease in 1502. James Gray was resident there in 1502 when he had remission for stealing livestock. This is probably where William and George Scott are recorded in 1526. In 1541 half the lands were occupied by Andrew Ker of Greenhead and the other half by William Stewart. Will Scott of Midgehope paid rental for these lands to Melrose Abbey in 1557 and Robert Scott of Tushielaw in about 1620. John Wilson was in the Wester part in 1580. It is said that the farm was without a tenant or any stock for 20 years after the terrible winter storm of 1674. Francis Scott ‘of fauhope’ paid the land tax in Selkirkshire in 1678. James Scott ‘of Phaupe’ is recorded in records of Melrose in 1682. Will Laidlaw ‘of Phawhope’ gave the version of ‘Auld Maitland’ published in Sir Walter Scott’s ‘Minstrelsy’. The Ballantynes were Lairds in the late 18th and early 19th centuries. It is easily confused with the farm between Castleweary and Moss paul of the same name, as well as Faulds hope further down the Ettrick near Aikwood (spelled ‘Phawhope’ and variants; ‘Fauhopscle et Faulhopgrans’ are recorded in 1456; it is ‘Faulshop’ in 1468, ‘Fawlishope’ in 1471, ‘Faulshop’ in 1478 and 1488, ‘Fawlishoip’ in 1487, ‘Faulship’ in 1490, ‘Fawlishop’ in 1494, ‘Faulship’ and ‘Fawlishop’ in 1501, ‘Fawlishope’ in 1502, ‘Fawlishope’ in 1526, ‘Faldishope’ in Phenzhopehaugh (Phawhopehaugh, Phawhope) n. Adam (13th/14th C.) recorded as ‘Adam de Fawhope’ when he was on a jury in 1304 to decide on the privileges of Robert the Bruce (when he was still just Earl of Carrick). The jurors were all from Dunfrieshire and Roxburghshire and hence it seems likely his lands were one of the local places of that name. Andrew (17th C.) notary in Melrose. He is recorded in many documents relating to the Regality of Melrose in the 1650s and 60s. His name presumably derives from the lands in Roxburghshire or Selkirkshire. Andrew (17th C.) listed among the ‘Cottars in Hassandene’ on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. His name was written ‘Faup’. Elizabeth ‘Bessie’ (17th C.) listed among the poor living at Hassandene on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Her name is written ‘Faup’. She could be the ‘Bessie Phaup’, married to William Wright, whose daughter Bessie was baptised in Roberton Parish in 1685. Elizabeth (b.1815/6) from Gordon in Berwickshire, she was a toll-keeper in Hawick. In 1851 she was a widow, living at West-Toll Bar (on Buccleuch Road), with her children James, Isabel T. and William T., her nephew James Brown and her cousin Adam Bell. Thomas (15th/16th C.) resident of Bedrule. In 1502 Robert Shiel had remission for stealing 8 sheep from him. William (d.c.1688) tenant in ‘Langtoun’ (probably Lanton). His will is recorded in 1688 and that of his wife Margaret Mather in 1686 (also written ‘Fawhope’ and ‘Phawp’).

Phaup Burn (fawp-burn) n. stream that joins the Frostlie Burn, roughly from the east, near Castleweary. The farmstead of Phaup is along its banks (marked ‘Fuapp B.’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

Phawhope pheesant (fee-zin’) n. a pheasant – ‘... There is a walk near pleasant Now oor on the Whitehaugh Road And in front o’ ee a pheasant’ [AY], ‘The feel o mushrooms; broilin a gumpit troot; Pheesane ploys in black wuds, wi gameys near’ [DH].

Phenzhopehaugh (fee-nup-hawf, -hawch) n. isolated farmstead situated about 2 km up the Ranks Burn from the farms of Buccleuch. This was probably the site of the original manor for the Barony of Rankilburn. Phenzhopehaugh Burn meets the Ranks Burn from the west there, and above to the south-west is Phenzhopehaugh Hill, which reaches 382 m. There is a motte on an area of level ground to the north of the confluence; it is about 40 m by 25 m and about 2.5 m high, surrounded by a ditch, which has a causeway across it on the south-west side. This may have been the first residence of the Scotts of Rankilburn (with Sir Richard Scott of Rankilburn, who swore fealty to Edward II in 1296, probably holding these lands), before they moved their headquarters to Buccleuch. About 60 m south of the motte is a large circular enclosure, probably much more recent in age (it is not marked on Blaeu’s c.1654 map; the stream is ‘Finhopelake’ on Ainslie’s 1773 map and incorrectly a lake is labelled ‘Findhopelake’ near there on Mitchell’s 1851 map).

the Philadelphia Stakes (θu-bi-lu-del-kee-a-stäks) n. race run as part of the Cornet’s Races on the Saturday of the Common Riding in the later 19th century. The prize-money was presumably raised by exiles from the Philadelphia area.

Philhope (fi-lup) n. farm along the Borthwick valley, and the name for the area around it, particularly the flat region by the river, which has long been a popular picnic spot. In 1530 Christian Inglis, with the consent of her husband Thomas, sold part of the lands to William Brydon, Vicar of Auld Roxburgh for £16. John Hope and John Hall were recorded as the King’s shepherd’s here and in Broadlee, being paid for grain in the Exchequer Rolls of 1540. William Davidson and Patrick Nichole were recorded there (probably as tenants) in 1579. There were Elliot’s there from at least the 16th century, Martin Elliot of Braidlie winning lands from John Turnbull in 1579 and having a charter of 1591, at which time it lay within the Barony of Hawick and was annexed to Selkirkshire. This was afterwards to go to his son Simon and was ratified by Act of Parliament in 1592. In the early 1600s Simon’s only child Grizel inherited and married John, son of Robert Elliot of Falnash. The lands were listed (along with Eilrig) as a ‘pendicle’ of Broadlee among lands inherited by the Baron of Hawick in 1615. The lands were estimated to pay ‘200 merks, vicarage 20 lb.’ in the 1627 valuation of Hawick Parish. In 1631 John Turnbull of Howden was served as heir to his father Mark’s lands there. However, the main farm was in the hands of the Crown for 37 years, until granted to Robert Elliot of Falnash in 1628; Robert’s son John would marry the heiress, Grizell Elliot. It remained with the Elliots through most of the 17th century. Adam Elliot of Philhope was made an Honorary Burgess of Selkirk in 1643. There were 12 ‘communicants’ recorded there in 1650, namely Archibald Elliot, Maly Nichol, Helen Elliot, Maly Elliot, Elizabeth.
Philhope Brig

Hislop, Maly Scott, Janet ‘Cheislye’, Grisel Pearson, John Hamilton, William Glen, Robert Scott and William Baptie. It was owned by William Elliot of Philhope in 1678 when valued at £216. William and Robert Chisholme (of Stichres) purchased it in 1684. In 1694 tax was paid on 6 hearths for ‘Phillipp & milne’. Thos also listed there were William Elliot (probably the Laird), John Renwick, Robert Chisholme, Robert Riddell and Adam ‘Junct’. Robert Veitch was living there in at least 1715–17 and Walter Haliburton in 1721. William Pringle was living there in 1737, Thomas Graham in 1762 and John Cavers in 1774. The teinds were valued at £33 6s 8d in 1785 when owned by the Duke of Buccleuch, and the stock was valued at £400, with the land tax paid by William Chisholme of Chisholme. In the 1788 county valuation (and still in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls) it is listed among the possessions of William Chisholme of Chisholme, and valued along with Broadlee at £216. It became part of the Buccleuch estates around the early 19th century and in the latter part of the 19th century was purchased by Richardson-Dickson. The farmer recorded there on the 1789–97 Horse Tax Rolls was Robert Nichol. James Turnbull was tenant in 1799. In 1811 William Chisholme paid the land tax on £400 there, while the teinds were valued at £60 in 1802 and held by the Duke of Buccleuch. George Nichol was farmer there in 1841. John Nichol was there in the 1860s. It was part of Hawick Parish until Roberton was formed in 1689/90, and in earlier times was part of Selkirkshire. An area roughly opposite Meadshaw was the site of a skirmish in December 1653, between (Scottish) Royalist forces and (English) Commonwealth forces. About 80–100 mean under Sir Arthur Forbes, and with Maj. Irvine as second-in-command, had captured Andrew Kerr of Sunlaws and Chatto. Coming down from the north, they stopped at Borthwickbrae, and intended to head towards Eskdalemuir. An English force, part of Twisleton’s Regiment under Capt. Hart, were in pursuit. The Scots were easy to follow in the snow and made a stand at Philhope, where 4 Royalists were slain and 16 taken prisoner, with only 1 Englishman slain and 17 wounded. The prisoner Kerr was freed, but wounded through the thigh by an English trooper. The English concentrated on rounding up the horses, allowing most of the Scots to escape, including Forbes. This was probably the last battle to take place near Hawick. There are remains of some enclosures near the farm, age uncertain (also formerly spelled ‘Philip’ and variants; it is ‘Philhop’ in 1530, ‘Filop’ in 1540, ‘Philhop’ in 1592, ‘Philop’ in 1627 and 1631, ‘Fillip’ in 1643, ‘Philip’ in 1646, ‘Philop’ in 1649, ‘Philip’ in 1651, ‘Philip’ in 1678 and 1686, ‘Philop’ in 1715 and 1717 and ‘Philip’ in 1785, 1788 and 1797; it is ‘Philhope’ on a parish map of 1650, ‘Philippe’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map and ‘Philop’ on Stobie’s 1770 map; the origin is possibly Old English ‘ful hop’, meaning ‘the dirty valley’).

Phihope Brig (fi-lup-brig) n. bridge across the Borthwick near Philhope farm, leading to the former farm of Outerside. This site has often in recent times been chosen for Common Riding Ride-outs. The haugh there has been a favourite place for Hawick folk to come for picnics. The area was popularized in the Scocha song ‘Dusty Road frae Philhope Brig ti Hame’, released in 2017 with an accompanying video.

Phihope Burn (fi-lup-burn) n. stream that joins the Borthwick from the south-east near Philhope farm.

Phihope Loch (fi-lup-loch) n. man-made loch in the headwaters of the Philhope Burn. On the Roughhope Burn (rather than the Philhope Burn), the name was attached to it much later. It was constructed in 1844 following a drought which brought Hawick’s woollen mills to a standstill. The work was arranged by the 3 main manufacturers at the time, William Wilson & Sons, William Watson & Sons and Dicksons & Laings. Construction was completed by 1846 on the dam here, as well as at the nearby Broadlee Loch. It is said that the sluice gate used to be opened in order to raise to Borthwick and then the Teviot, to help with the water-powered mills in Hawick. There was a suggestion around 1880 of using the Loch as a water supply for Hawick, but the decision was taken to develop the Allan Water works instead. Eventually the reservoir ceased to be used for its original purpose, and for a while it was used for fishing. When the embankment began to leak in the 1970s it was drained and abandoned.

Phihope Mill (fi-lup-mill) n. former farmstead near Philhope, presumably by the side of the Borthwick. It was part of Hawick Parish until 1690. Walter Miller was there in 1709 (also written ‘Philip Mill’, it is ‘Philip milne’ in 1709; it is shown on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

Phihopeshiel (fi-lup-sheel) n. former steading on the Philhopeshiel Burn, about half-way between Eilrig and Lairhope. John Laidlaw and William Pringle were there in 1726, John Welch in Philhopeshiel Burn (fi-lup-sheel-burn) n. stream that rises on the eastern slopes of Rashy Hill, and runs in a roughly northerly direction to join the Eildrig Burn and hence the Borthwick Water.

Philhopeshiel Burn

1727, James Armstrong in 1732–35, Thomas Graham in 1743, John Jackson in 1763, Robert Scott in 1765, John Graham in 1774, William Nichol in 1781 and Adam Pringle and Andrew Geddes in 1789. It was still marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map, but has now disappeared, although there is still an adjacent sheepfold (it is ‘Philopsheil’ in 1726 and 1732, ‘Philopsheils’ in 1727 and ‘Philipshiel’ in 1774).

Philhopeshiel Burn (fi-lup-sheel-burn) n. stream that rises on the eastern slopes of Rashy Hill, and runs in a roughly northerly direction to join the Eildrig Burn and hence the Borthwick Water.

Philip see Philhope

Philip (fi-lip) n. Andrew (1782–1822) son of William and Mary Scott. He was a mason, like his father. He owned property on Slitrig Crescent, around No. 5, marked on Wood’s 1824 map. His surname was listed as ‘Phillips’ in 1821 when he subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’. He is probably the Andrew ‘Philips’ who married Henrietta Nichol, and whose children, baptised in Hawick, included: Isabel (b.1810); Mary (b.1811); William (b.1812); George (b.1815); William (again, b.1816); and Margaret (b.1817). He died in Hawick. George (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Janet Walker and their children included: William (b.1746); Elizabeth (b.1748); Janet (b.1750); Jane (b.1753); John (b.1755); Isabel (b.1759); and Robert (b.1760). Perhaps the same George was previously married to Janet Lockie and had a son Patrick baptised in Ashkirk in 1744. Robert (18th C.) mason in Hawick. He was probably the son of George, baptised in Ashkirk in 1760. In 1784 he (along with William) witnessed a baptism for labourer William Scott and Betty (perhaps his sister). William (d.bef. 1822) mason in Hawick. He was probably son of George and Janet Walker, born in Ashkirk. He subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). In 1784 he (along with mason Robert) witnessed a baptism for labourer William Scott and Betty (perhaps his sister). In 1786 he witnessed a baptism for Adam Smail and Jane (who was probably his sister). He married Mary Scott, who was probably daughter of ‘Black Andrew’. They had children: Alice (b.1770); George (b.1772); Walter (b.1776); Janet (b.1779); Andrew (b.1781); Christian (b.1782); Andrew (again, b.1782), also a mason; William (b.1785); Peter (b.1792); and Peter (again, b.1793). The witnesses in 1772 were merchant Andrew and Walter Scott (probably related to his wife), in 1777 were merchant Andrew Scott and Andrew Turnbull and in 1792 were Dr. William Scott and plasterer William Sibbald. His unnamed child died in 1798 (also written ‘Phillip’).

Philhoup (fi-lip-hawf, -hawch) n. riverside plain just west of Selkirk, now the location for the town’s rugby and cricket fields. It was the site of the Battle of 1645 which ended the Earl of Montrose’s attempts to secure political control of Scotland, thereby ensuring the defeat of Charles I’s cause. Montrose’s men were surprised under cover of fog by the superior Covenant forces under David Leslie, to which the locals were sympathetic at the time; troops from Teviotdale must surely have fought in Leslie’s army. Montrose fled, but most of his troops and the 300 accompanying women and children were massacred by Covenanting zealots. Lands there were granted to William Turnbull in 1313 and there were still Turnbolls on part of the land until the early 17th century. However, the surrounding estate belonged to the Murrays from the 15th century. It was valued at almost £4000 in 1678. A Jacobean mansion stood here, remodelled in the 1870s and demolished to make way for a 1964 house. The Covenanters’ Monument is a stone pyramid on the grounds. A song about the battle was recorded by Scocha in 2004 – ‘On Philhoupah the fray began, At Harehead wood it ended; The Scots out o’er the Graemes they ran; Sae merrily they bended’ [T] (it is ‘Fullhopehalche’ in 1317, ‘Phillophauch’ and ‘Phillopahauch’ in 1504, ‘Phillophauch’ in 1509 and ‘Phillophauch’ in 1558; the origin of the name is probably the same as for Philhope).

Philip’s Jok (fi-lipz-jok) n. nickname of Johnnie Scott in the 16th century (written ‘Philpis’ in the court documents).

Philogar (fi-lö-gur) n. hill and former lands in the Hownam Parish. The lands were connected with the Douglases of Cavers in the 16th and 17th centuries. The Covenanters’ Monument is a stone pyramid on the grounds. A song about the battle was recorded by Scocha in 2004 – ‘On Philhoupah the fray began, At Harehead wood it ended; The Scots out o’er the Graemes they ran; Sae merrily they bended’ [T] (it is ‘Fullhopehalche’ in 1317, ‘Phillophauch’ and ‘Phillopahauch’ in 1504, ‘Phillophauch’ in 1509 and ‘Phillophauch’ in 1558; the origin of the name is probably the same as for Philhope).

pibroch (pee-broch) n., poet. traditional theme and variations played on the bagpipes – ‘The battle march borne from afar is a summons, The pibroch a plaint to the lost days awa’ [WL].

pick (pik) v., arch. to peck, ‘to pick at a thing’ means to understand it – ‘Ti pick up a thing is to apprehend it, to notice or understand it’ [ECS], n., arch. a peck, e.g. from a bird, a fit of spleen, offence, grudge, disliking – ‘She took a pick at ’im’ [GW] (see also take a pick at).

pick (pik) n., poet. pitch, bitumen – ‘Tho’ dark the night as pick and tar, I’ll lead ye o’er yon hills fu’ hie; And bring ye a’ in safety back, If you’ll be true, and follow me. Fala, &c.’ [CPM].

pick at (pik-aw’) v., arch. to understand something, form a dislike of someone or something – ‘Ti taik a pick at a person (or thing) = to form a dislike, to take resentment at’ [ECS].

picket (pi-ki’) n. occupation in the knitwear industry, someone who picks out ‘bobbles’ and foreign matter in garments (usually with tweezers), this being often carried out by older women. Formerly the word was used for someone whose job was to cut loose threads from the web.

the Pickin (thu-pik-in) n. official selection of the new Cornet, taking place on the Wednesday night after the first Tuesday in May (since Town Council meetings always used to be on Tuesdays). The ceremony used to take place on the Tuesday night immediately after the Council meeting to elect the Cornet, but at some point was shifted to the following night. The Provost’s Council, with recommendation of the two previous standard bearers, choose a young man to be the new Cornet. The Burgh Officer, accompanied by the Drums and Fifes, carries the official letter to the Cornet-Elect’s house, setting off at 7 p.m. When the band walk north they play ‘Dumbarton Drums’ and when they turn to the south they play ‘Rumblin Brig’, then they play ‘Teribus’ as the letter is handed over. In the house are gathered the Cornet’s family and friends. The new Cornet goes outside to greet the crowd and there is a strive. The Halberdier is then given the acknowledgement and rewarded with a new shilling. The Officer and band return to the Town Hall, where ‘Teribus’ is again played as the reply is handed in. There is meanwhile a procession on foot by the Cornet’s party through the older parts of town, specifically visiting the site of the Toll farthest from the Cornet’s house, and ending at the Town Hall, with a short sing-song. After the Procession there is the congratulatory Smoker and the Lasses Association dinner. Formerly the parade would have stopped at the houses of the Minister, the Senior Bailie and several inns. The new Cornet’s Tie is only revealed in a shop window after the Pickin. The practice of the Drums and Fifes escorting the Burgh Officer on Picking Night stopped for many years, but was revived in 1887.

Pickin Night (pi-kin-ii) n. name used to refer to the night of the Pickin, being the first Wednesday after the first Tuesday in May.

pickle (pi-kul) n. a small amount, bit, portion – ‘juist gie’s a wee pickle’, ‘it’s a pickle ower hot’, ‘A made a faisable mael oot o peisoo (a pickle grand thing, at war they!)’ [ECS], adj. a few, small amount of – ‘there’s a pickle ings left in the cupboard’, ‘…the spinning wheel, adorned with blue ribbon, and with a ‘pickle tow’ on the rock or distaff … ’ [JAHM], ‘Sae ilka bodie’s pickle gear Was lodg’d wi’ him without a fear’ [RDW], ‘The Ushers o’ Courtthill, They’re a’ sae kind to me, Whiles they send me tatties And whiles a pickle tea’ [RM], ‘…a pickle blewe rethk the hoose-lums o Denum draiggelt in a swutherin clud’ [ECS], ‘Oo’er gaan ti hel a pickl rain, A unk’ [ECS], ‘…Or ocht ti girn aboot But a pickle rain!’ [DH], ‘A scrimped and saved for years, Till a hed a pickle money, Ti buy ma Duke Street hame, That always was si bright and sunny’ [IWl] (sometimes used ironically to mean a large amount or a lot; also written ‘pickel’).
pickle (pi-kul) v., arch. to nibble, particularly used in the phrase ‘ti pickle oot o yin’s ain poch niuk’ or ‘ti pickle in yin’s ain poch niuk’, meaning to depend on one’s own resources.

picklt (pi-kult) adj. pickled – ‘A made a faiasable mael oot o pie-soop, . . . caakd flesh, picklt ingans, an nae skrimp o laif’ [ECS].

pick-maw (pi-k-maw) n., arch. the black-headed gull, Larus ridibundus – ‘. . . ti gar yin that’s duist a peike at eis meat turn that ei can heck leike a pick-maw’ [ECS] (also ‘pick-sea-maw’ and variants; cf. maw; the name survives in ‘the Picmaw Moss’).

Pick Maw Hill (pi-k-maw-hil) n. former name for a field in Lilliesleaf Parish, probably to the south of the village. It is described (in the ‘New’ Statistical Account of Scotland) in about 1834 as an area formerly frequented by gulls, whose eggs ‘were then much sought after by the villagers’.

the Pickmaw Moss see the Picmaw Moss

the Pickmaw Moss (thu-pik-maw-mos) n. boggy area near Kirkton Hill, formerly known as Buckstruther, and being essentially the same as the area now also called Adderstonelee Moss (also spelled ‘Pickmaw’).

picter see pictur

the Picts (thu-pikts) n., pl. people of northern Scotland, of uncertain origin, who remained unconquered by the Romans. The chronicler Gildas says that in the 5th century they penetrated southwards as far as Hadrian’s wall. If so, they may have had some influence on the Hawick area, and may have spoken a Brythonic (‘p-Celtic’) language, in common with early Teries. However, there is no evidence to support connections that were once believed to exist with the Borthwick Mains stone, the Catrail and the Mote. In 685 the Bernician (including the Hawick area) King Egfrith was defeated at ‘Nech tansmere’ in Fife when attacking into Pictland. Exactly who the Picts were is unclear, but by about 900 they had disappeared as a separate people and become part of the ‘Scots’. It was said by Boece that they made a liquor from heather flowers, the process being lost with them. Leyden tells of a version of this story popular in Teviotdale, with the last Pictish warrior refusing to divulge the secret – ‘. . . And frequent wake the wild inspired lay, On Teviot’s hills, beneath the Pictish sway’ [JL] (probably from the Latin for ‘painted’).

the Picts-work Ditch see the Pict’s Work Dyke

the Pict’s Work Dyke (thu-pikts-wurk-dik) n. an older popular name for the Catrail. It is also specifically used to refer to a section of linear earthwork stretching between Linglie (near Selkirk) to Mosilee (near Galashiels), first mentioned as early as 1723, but probably not directly connected to the Catrail (also ‘the Picts-work Ditch’ and similar).

pictur (pi-tur) n. a picture – ‘go’an hing that pictur up for is’, ‘. . . That pictier’s deed, and this is leevin’’ [JBS]. ‘A maircht eend ti the ‘Gazette’ Office, an bocht a wheen picter-postcairds’ [ECS], ‘. . . bye auld Hornshole, – a pictier o gray an green . . .’ [ECS], v. to picture – ‘. . . O’ giff they could feel like us, When we pictur’d the getherin’ frons . . . ’ [WL], ‘. . . in an effort tae pictier tae theirel’s the toon in the hollow o’ the hills’ [BW1939] (also spelled ‘pictier’).

pictur-hoose (pi-tur-hoos) n. a picture-house, cinema, especially the ‘Kings’, ‘Piv’ or ‘Wee Thea’ in the hey-day of the cinema in Hawick – ‘The attendances at the pictur-hooses hev proved that . . . ’ [BW1939].

pictures (pi-turz) n., pl. pictures. There are no images of Hawick from before about 1800. ‘Hawick from Wilton Lodge, 1800’ is probably the first picture, a water-colour by an unknown artist.

the pictures (thu-pik-turz) n. the pictures, cinema – ‘oo aye went ti the pictures on Seturdi mornins’, ‘Skinny Malinky long legs, umbrella feet, Went to the picturs and couldni fand a seat’, ‘Maist folk ken when the word ‘picters’ is mentioned that it refers tae the cinema’ [BW1938].

piddle (p-dul) v., arch. to walk with quick short steps (noted by J. Jamieson).

pie (pi) n. a pie, almost exclusively referring to a meat pie, often with minced mutton – ‘Ee got pies and tei at the muckle tent And eer chin was packed lunch { ‘mind an bring pieces for yer den-ner’, ‘Mother, gie’s a peece, ir ee?’ [ECS], ‘How we used to set off in the morning with a ‘piece’ in our pocket.’ [BM1905], ‘Mairch eend ti the ‘Gazette’ Ditch’ and similar). ‘A herbour for auld muillins O’ lang-jelly piece, The schule forgot, he stole oot-bye auld Hornshole, { a picter o gray an piece (pees) n. a sandwich, often plural, and usually referring to something eaten as part of a packed lunch – ‘mind an bring pieces for yer den-ner’, ‘Mother, gie’s a peece, ir ee?’ [ECS], ‘How we used to set off in the morning with a ‘piece’ in our pocket.’ [BM1905], ‘Mairch eend ti the ‘Gazette’ Ditch’ and similar). ‘A herbour for auld muillins O’ lang-forgotten pieces . . . ’ [WFC], ‘A herbour for auld muillins O’ lang-forgotten pieces . . . ’ [DH].

to join the ‘cardings’ by feeding them onto the ‘creeping cloth’ of the ‘slubbing’ frame. They usually joined the ‘rovings’ at the back of the ‘billy frame’, and the required repeated action would often make their fingers bleed. More recently the term meant someone who made their pay by piece work rather than by the hour – ‘...unconscious of his identity, he remarked to the foreman: ‘That’s the kind of piece to keep’’ [JHH], ‘...as her son Rob and I were piecers together’ [JT].

piecin machine (pee-sin-nu-sheet) n. a machine that replaced the work of ‘piecers’ and the ‘slubbing billy’, joining together the pieces coming off the carding machines. It was introduced in Hawick by Melrose’s about 1844, and probably invented by James Melrose.

Piehill (pl-hil) n. former name for a farm, perhaps in Cavers Parish. John Douglas, tenant in Cavers, but called ‘of Piehill’ is recorded in a ‘letter of reduction’ of 1630, brought by William Bennet. Alexander Chisholme of Piehill is referred to in a ‘respite’ for the slaughter of Lord Maxwell in 1593 (but this could have been an error for ‘Parkhill’).

piel see peel (pill)

Pie Oliver (pl-o-lee-vur) n. nickname for members of a particular branch of the Oliver family. This could be the same as the ‘Pies Oliver’ recorded in the ‘Hawick Immortals’ poem – ‘Wullie the Paidele, Gleid Rob, Knacketts, Balmer the Bugler, Bobby Trot, Pies Oliver, and Jamie Tackets, Don Pedro, Pether Hill, Waulk Scott’ [HI].

piet see pyet

the Pietsnest (thu-piits-, pl-its-nest) n. former shepherd’s cottage on Hyndlee farm. William Turnbull lived there in the early-to-mid 19th century (referring to the magpie, ‘piet’ or ‘pyet’).

pig (pig) n., arch. an earthenware vessel, a hot water bottle – ‘For aa A pat a warm pig i the bed, it was midnight or A cam a-heat’ [ECS], ‘...their honey run into ‘pigs’ bought for the purpose, and covered with leather’ [AOC].

piggie-bank (pi-gee-bawngk) n. an earthenware vessel in which coins are saved – ‘The boy admitted entering a house in Beaconsfield Terrace in March and stealing 13s from a piggy-bank’ [HEX1965] (cf. pig).

Pigot’s (pi-gits) n. J. Pigot & Co., publishing company that produced useful directories in the early 19th century. The 1826/7 ‘New Commercial Directory of Scotland’ (compiled about a year earlier) and 1837 ‘National Commercial Directory of Scotland’ are particularly useful for tracking down people, businesses etc. in Hawick and neighbouring areas before the censuses began. These directories were continued by Slater’s Royal National Commercial Directory, which came out with local content in 1852, 1860, 1878, 1882 and 1893.

pike (pik) n., arch. a pick, spike, prong – ‘...Till a reid hette pyke the master gatte, And gave his loone a prodde’ [JTe] (also written ‘pyke’).

pike (pik) n., arch. a peaked stack of hay, erected temporarily in a field, a haystack, a sharp pointed hill v., arch. to make a haystack (from Mediæval English; essentially the same word is used locally in the names of some peaked hills).

pikethaw Hill

Pike Fell (pik-fel) n. hill on the eastern side of the upper Slitrig valley, near Shankend. It reaches 463 m. The Catrail crosses near the summit. Alexander Gordon refers to it as ‘Carriage Hill’ (the same name is used for a feature on the western side of Pike Fell in the Slitrig valley and for a hill on the south side of the Tima valley).

the Pike (thu-pik) n. hill that is essentially the western side of Pike Fell in the Slitrig valley (note the confusion with the hill a couple of miles to the west).

Pike Fell (pik-fel) n. hill on the border of Roxburghshire and Dumfrieshire, at the head of the Routing Burn, and hence effectively the start of the Hermitage valley. It reaches a height of 499 m.

Pike Hill (pik-hiel) n. hill between the upper Borthwick and Teviot valleys, east of Howpasley Hope, reaching a height of 419 m.

Pikensteed (pik-kin-steed) n. possible name for former lands in Liddesdale, transcribed as ‘Pikensteid’ on the 1541 rental roll, when it was valued at 14 shillings, and with no tenant. The location is uncertain. It is possible that it is the same as ‘Piperstedde’ recorded in c.1376.

Pike Sike (p=ik-sik) n. stream in upper Liddesdale, rising on Thorleshope Height and running roughly north-west to the Thorleshope Burn.

Pikethaw Hill (pik-thaw-hil) n. high hill on the boundary between Roxburghshire and Dumfrieshire, just to the south of the pass at Ewes Doors. It reaches a height of 564 m and has a substantial cairn on its summit. It is essentially where the Lymiecleuch Burn rises. It has been pillae see pilli

the pillar (thu-pi-lur) n., arch. raised platform in a church on which penitents had to appear at prescribed times, equivalent in function to the repentance stool. In St. Mary’s this was probably located along the same wall as the pulpit, surrounded by a rail and reached by a small ladder. The one in Wilton also required a ladder – ‘...they had to appear on a small raised platform, sometimes termed ‘the pillar’, and at other times ‘the stool of repentance’, which occupied a conspicuous place in the church’ [JJV].

Pilmuir (pil-mur) n. farm near Wulliestruther and Hawick Moor, also known as the Muir Farm. It is part of the Common feuded to the farmer, being set up as a 250 acre farm and leased to John Wilson in 1787, with rent going to the Common Good. Part of the farm was used for Common Riding races before 1854. George Hart was farm steward there in 1861 and James Stein recorded as farmer there in 1868. ‘Mrs. Reid, with Betsy the Cow, Pilmuir’ was painted by J.E.D. Murray in 1889. The riding of the marches at Pilmuir resumed as part of the Thursday morning events from 1900, with the entire Common being encircled in the ride. It was also the location of the partaking of Curds and Cream (and hence ‘the Hut’) at the Chases in the years 1882 and 1901-11. A piece of worked flint found there is in the Museum (the origin is possibly from Old Welsh for ‘bog or pond’ plus ‘muir’ or Old English ‘peel’ for a stockade, thus meaning an enclosed moor).

Pilmuir Rig (pil-mur-rig) n. hill above Pilmuir farm, also used as the name of the small farm to the south of the main farm of Pilmuir. This farm was first let to Thomas Scott in 1778, after the Division of the Common. The name is also applied to the surrounding part of Hawick Common. On maps it specifically applies to the high ground to the south-east of Pilmuir farm. The area was used for the morning race meetings of the Common Riding from 1822–53 – ‘...And round Pilmuir-rig we’ll canter, Down the Bailie-hill we’ll scamper’ [AB]; ‘Pilmuir Rig and Everha’, Scawmill and Stiches Mains; Drinkstone, Tandlaw and Bonraw Wi’ a’ their burns and lanes’ [WL].

the Pilmuir Stakes (thu-pil-mur-stäks) n. race during the Common Riding, at one time for the Cornet’s Father and his supporters. It was started at least as early as the 1880s.

Pilmuir Syke (pil-mur-sik) n. former ditch near the Flex, lying on the boundary of the old Common. It is not clear exactly where it was, even based on the 1767 description of the Common, and the map drawn up by J.P. Alison. James Wilson describes it as lying ‘at the head of Flex inclosures’.

Pilstown (pils-town) n. said to have been the commander of some English persecuting regiment that passed through Hawick in 1716; however, it is unclear who he was. The Council charged the Burgesses to help transport their baggage to Lauder, and townspeople were also meant to provide billets for the soldiers. Some citizens of Hawick refused to provide for the men or to help carry their baggage, being then fined or imprisoned – ‘A party is fined for disobeying the bailies anent the quartering and billets given for the said Pilstown’s Regiment last week’ [JW], ‘Or wi’ the serfs o’ Pilstown rin, For Hawick has had ma Habs than ane’ [AD].

Pimpo Anderson (pim-pō-an-dur-sin) n. nickname in the mid-to-late 20th century.

pingle (ping-ul) n., arch. a small pan – ‘...twa-three eggs ... Were boiling in the pingle’ [HSR].

pingle (ping-ul) v., arch. to toil, struggle, work in a trifling way or work industriously and with difficulty – ‘...many an industrious housewife was able, by hard ‘pingling’ to augment a husband’s scanty wage’ [JTU], ‘Ti pingle = to labour with assiduity (cf. Wilson’s ‘Tales’) ; to strive; work hard (cf. Ransay’s). Often applied to the toiling of a seamstress, pinglein an sheww-in’ [ECS], applied specifically to snow whirling about, as if struggling to reach the ground, to tingle – ‘Far better had I em’d an’ miss’d. I only hurt my pinglin’ fist ... ’ [WP].

Pinglehole (ping-ul-höl) n. former farm just south of Saughtree off the B6357 by the Liddel Water, now being just a couple of cottages. It was surveyed in 1718, along with other Scott of Buccleuch properties, when it extended to 339 acres, bounded by Saughtree, Burnmouth, Riccarton and ‘Leys’. It also shared a small strip of common land with Saughtree and the farmhouse was in roughly the location of the modern cottages. William Elliot was there in 1694. Pinglehole Sike joins the Liddel Water near there. Robert Armstrong was shepherd there in 1797. There were Hislops and Grievess there in 1841 (shown on Pont’s 1609 map as a tower-house, ‘Pingillholls’, on Blaue’s 1654 map as ‘Pingillholls’, on de Wit’s c. 1680 map as ‘Pingilhlols’ and is ‘Piegleholes’ on the 1718 Buccleuch survey; it is probably the place marked ‘Hole’ on Stobie’s 1770 map; it was ‘Pinglehollis’ in 1662, ‘Pingelholls’ in 1694 and appears to be ‘Pinglehool’ in 1797; the origin may be either ‘enclosure in the hollow’ or ‘valley of toil’).

Pinglehole Sike (ping-ul-höl-sik) n. stream in upper Liddesdale, rising on Shiel Knowe and running roughly southwards to join the Liddel Water downstream from Saughtree.

the ‘Pendickle’ on Pont’s 1590s manuscript and ‘Pendickill’ marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map.

Pinnacle (pi-in-kul) n. former name for lands near Clarilaw, to the north of Hawick. The 1811 Land Tax Rolls describe it as ‘Penick-hill or Pinnacle’, partly owned (along with Wester Clarilaw) by the trustees of Thomas Turnbull of Knowe, with the other part owned by William Scott of Burnhead. It may be the same place as Pinnacle near Belses.

pinner (pi-nur) n., arch. a woman’s close-fitting cap with 2 long flaps – ‘[A person is convicted of stealing] ane laced pinner from the spouse of Richard Myles, piriwig maker’ [BR1697].

Pipe Hill (pīp-hil) n. hill above Pipewellheugh, the steep banking off Buccleuch Road on the way out of Hawick.

Pipeloch (pīp-loch) n. fanciful name for the source of the Pipewell spring – ‘It minds me of those youthful days When we went hand in hand, To sport upon the Pipeloch braes, A blythesome little band’ [VW], ‘And a’ my heart’s thirst slocken in the Pipeloch clear and cool’ [JYH].

piper (pi-pur) n. a person who plays the pipes, usually meaning the bagpipes, although possibly other instruments. In 1627, 2 of those were listed by the Bailies of Hawick as ‘idle and masterless’ men fit for military service were named as ‘pypers’, John Tait and John Laing. In 1632 the Lord of Buccleuch made a payment ‘to three English pypers at Branxholm’. In 1672 the Bailies requested that the Baron of Regality only use the Town’s own drummer and piper to ‘set the fair’. William Turnbull was elected as Town Piper in 1674 ‘and directed at even and morn and other solemn occasions, to go through the town with the drum’. James Turnbull (d.1686) was piper to Abbotrule Parish. The ‘town’s officer, piper, and drummer’ were each allowed money for new coats in 1702, suggesting that at this time the piper was a separate position. William Turnbull was recorded as a piper in Hawick in 1702 and 1706. In 1704 it is recorded that funds were needed for ‘pypers shoes’. In 1747 (because of the debt over Teviot Brig) the Council ordain that the Town would not give an allowance to the piper, but ‘what people shall give him out of their own pockets’ (see also Toon Piper).

Piper Burn (pi-pur-bur) n. small stream in Liddesdale, rising in Harden Moss and flowing roughly westwards to join the Liddel approximately opposite Powisholm farm.

piper-faced (pī-pur-fasd) adj., arch. pale-faced (from the former belief that playing pipes was harmful for the lungs).

Piper’s Knowe (pi-purz-now) n. northeastern spur of Greenbank Hill in the Borthwick valley.

Pipersteed (pi-pur-steed) n. former lands in Liddesdale, recorded as ‘Piperstede’ in a rental roll of c.1376, and valued at 4 shillings. It was part of the area known as ‘Ludne’, which made up part of the western side of the Liddel valley, so it was probably situated somewhere to the northwest of the present-day Newcastleton (it is possibly the same as ‘Piknested’ recorded in 1541).

the pipes (thu-pips) n. the bagpipes or Border pipes. In Hawick it seems that the traditional instrument was the bagpipes in the 18th century, with the Town Piper being hired until about the turn of the 19th century, when he was effectively replaced with fifers. However, it is uncertain if there were fifers earlier than this, and it is also unclear when the town started to have a piper – ‘she yaised ti play jist the chanter, bit now she’s moved on ti the pipes’ (see also Toon Piper).

pipe-stapple (pip-staw-pul) n., arch. a clay pipe stem, pipe shank – ‘I’ll go to such a place, though it should rain auld wives and pipe-stapples’ [JoJ], ‘We got dirty blethers at the place, though it should rain auld wives and pipe-stapples’ [HAST1958], hence any small thing (also pipe-stopple and ‘pipe-stopplit’ or ‘peip-stoppliet’; J. Jamieson notes that ‘stapplick’ was a synonym in Roxburghshire, see stapple).

Pipewellheugh

Pipewellheugh (pi-pul-, pip-wel-hew, hewch) n. steep wooded bank on the other side of the main road from Langlands Bridge, in the middle of which a stream supplied the Pipe Well. The name has also been used to describe the area around the well. Before the main highway was directed that way in 1815, it presumably just had a smaller-scale track. A dry-stone wall was built along the New Road there in the late 19th century, using stones from the Mid Row. The wall was entirely rebuilt in the mid-1990s. A strong garlic smell in the area is due to the abundance of Ramsons Allium ursinum, i.e. wild garlic. There were also lands in Jedburgh called by the same name in the 17th century. From a verse written around the time of the disputed 1809 Common Riding it seems clear that a senior member of the Town Council lived near here at that time – ‘Trace the source of all your troubles Where the Pipe’l’heugh fountain bubbles; There a groggy club are lolling, While the Sabbath bells are tolling’ [JH]. ‘It is exceedingly abundant in woods and shady banks such as Pipe-well-heugh’ [JAHM].

Pipey-dottle see pipe-an-dottle

Pippleheugh (pi-pul-hew, -hewch) n. shortened form of Pipewellheugh, also being a name used in the 19th century to refer to a piece of land west of Balcary, and somewhat distant from Pipewellheugh. More confusingly its name was used in the 19th century to refer to a piece of land west of Balcary, and somewhat distant from Pipewellheugh. More confusingly its name was later changed to Pipewellhaugh, and now corresponds roughly to Langheugh Road.

Pippleheughfit (pi-pul-hew-fi’) n. name used for the foot of the Pipewellhaugh area. It is referred to in a boundary dispute of the 1780s, between Elliot of Langlands and Scott of Buccleuch.

the Pippleheugh Well (thu-pi-pul-hew-wel) n. iron trough on the south side of Buccleuch Road near Langlands Bridge. Once a source of drinking water for horses or cattle entering the town from the south. A series of land slips in the 1980s resulted in the demise of the spring which fed the trough. The supporting wall along the roadside was rebuilt in the 1990s.

Pipplehough (pi-pul-hew) n. sometimes version of Pipewellheugh, referring to the well.

Pirie (pee-ree) n. Miss ran a seminary in Back-damgate for reading, writing and sewing, in the early 19th century, recorded in Pigot’s 1825 directory. William (15th/16th C.) witness to a 1508 sasine for the Erskines lands at Synton. He may have been local like several of the other witnesses.

Pirnie (pir-nie) n. Alexander ‘Alex’ (1825–79) local stone-mason. He was born in Edinburgh, son of stone mason Alexander and Agnes. Apprentice to his father in Kikliston, he then moved back to Edinburgh, where he worked for the architects firm Peddie & Kinnear in Edinburgh, and for James Harkness, builders in Hawick in 1859. His workmanship can be seen at 4 Tower Knowe in the ornamental cornices on what was the Commercial Bank and at the former Royal Bank of Scotland at 12 High Street. He also carved the bust of Burns that is at the Burns Club, as well as a head of Garibaldi and the lions on the Monteath Mausoleum. By 1861 he is living in Winton, where he appears to have stayed for the rest of his life. He died intestate, and was then described as a ‘stone-hewer’. He married Isabella Dawson, and had at least 2 children, Janet and Alex. He is buried in Wellogate Cemetery.

the Playin Fields (thu-plā-in-feeldz) n. name sometimes given to the part of the Park on the south side of the river, off Buccleuch Road, used for playing various sports. Roughly the same area has also been known as Corseflat and the Gardener’s Haughs. It was at one time a nursery, then known as Wester Nurseries, and then was allotments. A petition of 1859 asked the Duke of Buccleuch to keep this trip of land for recreational use. It was gifted to the town in 1931 by later Duke, after he had passed through Hawick during the Vertish Hill children’s procession. It was hence also known as ‘the Buchleuch Playing Fields’, is about 5 acres, and effectively forms an addition to the Park. An all-weather sports ground was built there in 2005, adjacent to the Volunteer pitch, and also referred to as Volunteer Park.

the Playlaw (thu-plā-law) n. name for the area around the Mid Raw (now Drumlanrig Square), in use in the 16th–18th centuries – ‘Bailie Graham and Thomas Bridges [were ordered to collect] westward from the bridge to the foot of the play la’ [PR1717] (origin possibly a form of ‘plea-law’ indicating a judicial use in the past; also spelled ‘Plalaw’, ‘Play-la’ and other variants).

the pledges (thu-ple-jez) n., arch. a game popular with youths up until the latter part of the 18th century (as described by Robert Wilson). It involved 2 teams of roughly 12–20 a-side, and was played on open ground with a line drawn and with coats, hats etc. acting as the ‘pledges’, placed 20 or 30 yards from the line. The object of the game was to capture the ‘pledges’ of the opposing team without being caught. Captures occurred through either being touched in ‘enemy territory’ or dragged over the line. Such players then became ‘prisoners’ who could be freed by being touched by a member of their own team. The game often started with a mock taunt such as ‘Set your foot on Scotch ground, ye English, if ye dare!’! The teams often formed themselves into 2 lines, with the stronger boys in front and the faster ones behind. Wilson’s description sounds astonishingly like rugby, which would only be played in Hawick from 1872 – ‘…to enjoy on the Haugh … a game at ‘the pledges’, which sport was greatly in vogue among youths in those days …’ [RM].

In 1711 he was one of the founders of the ‘Honest Country Club’. His son Gavin became a Burgess of Edinburgh, and his grandson Andrew became one of the first Professors of Medicine at Edinburgh University in 1726, while a later Andrew of Middlestead was another enthusiast of the Border ballad whose death allowed Sir Walter Scott to become Sheriff-depute of Selkirkshire. He was succeeded by his son William, who married Jane, daughter of William Kerr of Sunderland Hall. Dr. Andrew of Sunderland Hall (1697–1756) son of Gavin, he was born in Edinburgh. He married his cousin Marjorie, who was daughter of William of Middlestead and Jean, daughter of William of Sunderland Hall. He studied in Edinburgh and Leyden, graduating M.D. in 1722 and becoming one of the founders of the medical school at Edinburgh University. He was Professor of Chemistry 1726–55. He was known for his thesis called ‘de Phthisi Pulmonalia Cattarrhe erta’, as well as for ‘Plummer’s pills’, a preparation of calomel, anti-monyp sulphide and guaiacum, which was widely used to treat syphilis. He inherited Sunderland Hall through his mother. He was recorded in the Town Treasurer of Selkirk in 1743 and others with the Burgh in 1746 and 1774. Andrew of Middlestead (1748–99) Sheriff of Selkirkshire, preceding Sir Walter Scott in this office. He was also known as an antiquarian. He owned Sunderland and Sunderlandhall as well as Middlestead. He paid the land tax in Selkirk Parish in 1785. In 1788 he is listed among the voters of Selkirkshire. He had four horses according to the 1785–97 Horse Tax Rolls. He married Jane, sister of Gavin Elliot of Midlem. Their children were: William, who succeeded; Gavin, a merchant in Edinburgh; and Margaret, who married Andrew Waugh and whose grand-daughter married Charles Scott of Woll. He appears to have also married Mary, daughter of Pringle of Torwoodlee, and she died in 1839. Gavin (17th/18th C.) son of Andrew of Middlestead. He was a merchant in Edinburgh, also serving as Treasurer to the Town Council there. Perhaps the same Gavin had a discharge with the Burgh of Selkirk in 1709. Along with Adam Scott of Burnfoot he sold the lands of Burnfoot to the Duchesses of Buccleuch in 1712. He married Elizabeth Clerk. Their son Andrew was elected one of the first Professors of Medicine in Edinburgh in 1726. William of Middlestead and Sunderland Hall (17th/18th C.) son of Andrew. He married Jean, daughter of William Ker of Sunderland Hall. Their children included: William (b.1701); Gavin (b.1703); Marjorie (b.1707), who married Dr. Andrew Plummer, her cousin; Andrew (b.1708); and Gilbert (b.1709). poachin (pō-chiin) n. the act of taking fish or game illegally. This has a long history locally. ‘Kinly Stick’ (George Hunter) and ‘Heather Jock’ (John Mitchell) were well-known local poachers in the mid-19th century. A large gang of poachers operated in the Borthwick valley in the early 19th century, with a reputation for even roast- ing whole sheep on their days-long forays; the local lairds and authorities formed a ‘posse’ which rounded up 20 of these men in 1832. The appointment of a constable in Hawick in about 1832 led to a domination of the practice. Views on the legality of taking salmon from local rivers have historically differed between various segments of the population. Skills with the ‘cleek’ and ‘geg’ have been carefully passed on for generations in some families.

pock (pok) n., arch., poet. a sack, poke, bag, wallet – ‘...She then the cat loos’d frae the pock, An’ Johny was contented’ [JR], ‘And straight they went to the tything pocke, ’Twas heapit to the heade ...’ [JTe], ‘Although the pock ’twas ta’en froe, I could learn, Was an’ul’ hippin, sew’d wi’ darin yarn’[JoHa], ‘Riven breeks an’ barkint face, As black as a coal pock; Ye’ll ken thereater

The Poetical Museum (θu-pō-e’-ee-kul-new-zeem-un) n. book published in Hawick in 1784 by George Caw, with full title ‘The Poetical Museum, Containing Songs and Poems on almost every subject, Mostly from Periodical Publications’. It was the first significant publication from Hawick. It contains a miscellany of pieces, including the first appearance in print of some of the Border ballads (‘Dick o the Cow’, ‘Jock o the Side’ and ‘Hobbie Noble’), as well as other ballads that had already appeared elsewhere (‘Child Maurice’, ‘Adam o’ Gordon’, ‘The Battle of Red-swire’, ‘Johnnie Armstrong’, ‘Hardyknute’ and ‘The Wee Wee Man’). There is a piece of verse from Thomas Telford, and a few poems that appear to be genuinely of local production, such as ‘The Braes of Branhholm’ and ‘Lines on the Death of Robert Scott, Esq., of Whitslade’. There are also many anonymous poems that may be by local writers. However, most of the selections are pastoral verse, such as by Ramsay, and other well known writers of the day included Fergusson, Smollet and Thomson. Several variants appear to have been published, including some substituting the poem ‘Modern Chastity’ for ‘Acrostic by a young girl in Hawick’. The subscription list is also interesting, since out of 158 names listed (including 9 women), most are from Hawick and district, and so it gives insight into the supporters of literature and local traditions in the 1780s.

poffle (po-ful) n., arch. a small farm, croft (noted by J. Jamieson; it survives in Roxburghshire in the placename ‘Maxpoffle’).

poin (poin, pind) v. to impound, seize, distress, explicitly a term in Scots Law relating to the seizure of a debtor’s property for sale – ‘Mr Patrick Cunningham is fined for reproachful language against the bailies, in saying that in spite of them, and they were hanged, they should not poin him upon their decreet . . . ’[BR1676], ‘. . . outlawed in ane deفورnement of yr. officer when he come to poyn for his fyne . . . ’[BR1693], ‘. . . otherwise the cattle so found will be poined for trespass toties quoties’[BR1777] (also spelled ‘poyn’d’).

Polesman (pozl-mun) n. nickname for Walter Scott, Hawick Burgess in the mid-17th century.

the Police Act (θu-po-lees-awkt) n. usually referring to the Police and Improvement Act of 1861, which revised Hawick’s Town Council, did away with the Burgesses, and altered the boundaries of Hawick to include Wilton. It is also sometimes known as the Burgh Improvement Act.
This was a Special Act brought to Parliament, following the general Police of Towns (Scotland) Act of 1850 and an 1857 Act of Parliament ordering all remaining Burgh and County areas in Scotland to establish proper police forces, as well as elected councils responsible for paving, lighting, cleansing, etc. The Police force itself was set up following a separate Act of 1846. The bounds of the Town for the purposes of policing were stated in about 1850 to be within 1000 yards of the Cross (see also the polis).

the Police Court (θu-po-leez-kör) n. former term for the Magistrate’s court held in Hawick – ‘it is the Police Court To which I say ye should resort. There go and mark each separate case, There go and watch the Bailie’s face ...’ [JCG] (also Bailie Court).

the Police Station (θu-po-leez-stā-shin) n. the station was originally situated in the old Town House, with the Burgh police force occupying a space below the Council Chambers. It later moved to the Cross Wynd, and was then into the new Town Hall building. This had 4 cells and an exercise yard. The separate station for the county police force was once on the Mill Path, built (or perhaps renovated) in the 1890s to designs by J.P. Alison. A new Station was built in 1964 at Wilton Hill as a large, unremarkable, flat-roofed block. The Roxburgh, Berwick and Selkirkshire force being amalgamated into the Lothian and Borders Police in 1976. The Police Station in Denholm was formerly located on the south side of Eastgate, and there was also once a station at ‘the Coppers’ outside Robertson (see also the polis).

the Policeman’s Brae (θu-po-leez-munz-brā) n. old name still sometimes used for the Cross Wynd, from the Police Station that was there until about 1964.

policy (po-lee-see) n. an improvement or development of a town, park of an estate, ornamental ground – ‘Bye the policies o Ancrum Hoose ...’ [ECS], ‘Sent for by Col. Vassall desiring me to find out if possible who did the damage to Polacy Dyke’ [RG].

the polis (θu-po-leez, pō-lees) n. police, referring to the police force, or one or more policemen or policewomen – ‘if ee deh stop that racket A’ll get the polis on ee’. ‘At the Polis Coort on Monday They will stand before the bar ...’ [WE], ‘The Polis brings his previous bell. He’s now like any rock ...’ [WP], ‘...They never cared a resh for bailies, polis, or kirk-bell’ [DH]. A properly organised force took a long time to organise, with each Burgh left to make its own arrangements. In 1805 the Privy Council recommended that Roxburghshire should have a force of 39 men, but the county force was not established until much later. The Town Council resolved to improve the system of policing in 1806 (probably meaning that they employed a constable for the first time). In the early 19th century the Hawick Burgh force consisted only of the Sheriff Officer (or constable), plus the 2 Burgh Officers, and this for a population of about 7,000. A proper town force was established in 1846. A constable’s baton from the 19th century is in the Museum. There were also rural police stations, the one in Newcastleton being at 15 Douglas Square (see also the Police Station).

politeecian (po-li-tee-shin) n. a politician – ‘O’a’body he hez suspiscians, Parteecl’arly the politeecians’ [I].

poll (pōl) v. to steal, especially to obtain apples or other fruits from a tree belonging to someone else – ‘let’s gaun polin for yer neebur’s aipples’, ‘oo aye went polin up Rosalee Brae’, ‘Whae raigularly taen on the Bankie Rangers frea Langlands Bank at a’ kinds o sportin contests frea cockerossie ti pollin aipples’ [IWL] (also written ‘pole’; presumably related to the word for hair-cut and related to ‘pollard’, and nothing to do with the use of a pole).

Pollach (po-lach) n. former lands in Liddesdale, on the opposite side of the river from Mangerston. In a c.1376 rental roll ‘Pollok’ is valued at 2 shillings. In 1541 it is recorded as ‘Pollok’, valued at 5 shillings and leased to Christopher Armstrong (possibly of Langholm). ‘Pollok’ was listed among Liddesdale lands possessed by Thomas Kerr of Ancrum in 1632. It is not marked on older maps, but Pollach Plantation appears on the modern Ordnance Survey map.

Pollock (po-lōk) n. Rev. John minister of Minto Parish 1936–56. During his time the old Manse became uninhabitable and he rented Deansey. Robert F. (?–??) Hawick’s first full-time Town Clerk, 1937–38, he was formerly Depute Town Clerk of Kilmaurstick. After only a year he resigned and moved to Rutherglen.

the Ponderosa (θu-pon-de-ro-sa) n. popular name for a walking route up the Nipkowes, along the side of ‘the Mair’ and back along the shores of Wulliestruther Loch. The loop has been frequently walked by many Westenders, after being popularised by a group of men about the 1960s, who would meet nightly at Thorterdykes to start the loop. It was named after the ranch in the TV show ‘Bonanza’. The name is also applied jocularly to the housing scheme at Marmion Road.

Ponderosa Cottage (pon-de-ró-sa-kó’-euj) n. name sometimes used for the cottage once lived in by the Jolly family by the old curling pond at St. Leonards.

Pont (pont) n. Timothy (c.1560–c.1614) son of a Fife minister, the exact years of his birth and death are unknown. He was given church lands by his father, and was appointed minister of Dunnet in Caithness. However, his fame is as an early Scottish cartographer, his manuscript maps of the 1590s being used as the basis of the atlas of Scotland published by Joan Blaeu (of Amsterdam) in 1654. Only a fraction of the original maps survive, amounting to 77 maps on 38 separate sheets. His manuscript map, usually referred to as ‘Pont 35(2)’, shows Hawick, along with part of the Teviot, Ale and Rule valleys. This is drawn (upside-down) on the bottom of a sheet depicting Nithsdale and surrounding area.

pooch (poochi) n., arch. a pocket, particularly one containing money, a purse – ‘A was vext A hedna socht a piece i ma pooch for ti mottle i the road’ [ECS], ‘An empty pooch, an’ a bashed-in hat . . . ’ [RM], ‘Ee’ve enew o’ pooches if ee’d eneuch të fill thum’ [JAHM], ‘. . . and the van-man hotched And hotched at his leather pooch’ [DH], ‘. . . than bi slippin’ a little saw and a trowel into eer pooch and off to the wuds . . . ’ [DH], ‘The caird-shairper, hed ta’en the maist wide-awake be their pooches an made guid profeet’ [BW1974] (also spelled ‘poochit’; cf. pouch and poock).

Porteous (pör-shis) n. Agnes (17th C.) cottar at Appletreehall according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Her forename is written ‘Agneus’. Andrew (17th C.) recorded in 1643 being in Rule. His lands in Abbotrule Parish were valued at £10. Andrew (17th/18th C.) shoemaker listed among those contributing to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He was probably the Andrew listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick ‘eis the water’ in 1694. He was reported to the Session in 1725 when he required assistance ‘in regard of his numerous years and want of sight’. It was said that his elder son George was in a good financial position to support him, while his other son was not. His wife was Helen Scott and their children included: Helen (b.1680), baptised in Robertson Parish; Thomas (b.1684); George (b.1688), who married Janet Harkness; and probably Marion (b.1693). His sons were probably the Hawick carriers of the early 18th century. The witnesses in 1680 were George and William Scott (who were probably related to his wife), in 1684 and 1688 were Thomas Bridges and Michael Turnbull. He witnessed a baptism in 1689 for James Lethem. Andrew (18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick, probably related to the earlier shoemaker of the same name. In 1724 he married Helen Simpson, who was also from Hawick. Andrew (d.1794) flesher in Hawick. In 1745 he witnessed a baptism for tobaccoist William Sadler. Probably the same man is recorded with surname ‘Pertos’ in 1751 when he paid the Hawick Town Council for renting the ‘leach [probably ‘low’] prison’ (perhaps for the purposes of selling meat, but this is unclear). He died in Hawick Parish. Andrew (18th/19th C.) butcher in Hawick. In the 1811 Land Tax Rolls he was listed as owner of part of Weensland, which had been purchased from Robert Scott. Francis (17th C.) listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick ‘eis the water’ in 1694. George (d.c.1684) tenant in Abbotrule. His will is recorded in 1684. George (b.1688) youngest son of shoemaker Andrew and Helen Scott, he was a carrier in Hawick. He was probably brother of Thomas, who was a carrier in Hawick at the same time. In 1716 he married Janet, daughter of William Harkness, tenant in Borthaugh. Their children included: Mary (b.1720); Andrew (b.1721); Ann (b.1727); Bessie (b.1725); and James (b.1732). The 1720 baptism was witnessed by the 2 merchants Robert Robson, the 1725 baptism by Andrew and William Ogilvie and the 1727 one by Bailie Martin and Francis Ruecastle. George (1836–91) born in Greenlaw, he was a hatter and manufacturer of Waverley Mills. He was a member of the Archaeological Society from 1869. He had the house Viewforth built for him in 1878. He married Sarah Matilda Ward Dowdy (1844–1922) and their children included: William Roland (b.1868); George (b.1870); and Robert Williamson (b.1881). George Shields (1870–1961) son of a hatter and manufacturer. His hatter’s and hosier’s shop was at 57 High Street. He was an early prominent member of the Hawick Cycling Club. He married Annie Rachel Humphries. He died in Dunoon. Isobel (17th/18th C.) wife of William Taylor. She was recorded in the Hawick Session records of 1721 being rebuked for her drunken behaviour in the Kirk. James (d.c.1681) tenant in ‘Mintohill’ when his will was recorded in 1681. Perhaps the same James was owner of a piece of land in Lanton, according to the 1678 valuation roll. James (17th C.) tenant in Abbotrule according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. James (18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. In 1758 he married Margaret Brown (who is also referred to as being ‘Or Scott’, suggesting she was married earlier). Their children included: Margaret (b.1759); George (b.1760); and Janet (b.1762). The witnesses to the 1760 baptism were shoemaker George Gardiner and Church Officer Alexander Bunyan. He may be the James recorded in 1800 (along with his brother John) when his aunt Agnes Scott died. John (15th/16th C.) listed among the Borderers (led by the Homes and Walter Scott of Branc-holme) pardoned in 1526 for an attack on the Earl of Arran. His surname is recorded as ‘Por-tuis’. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1656 his son Robert with Margaret Scott was baptised. The child was born illegitimately and the witnesses were Adam Scott and Walter Rob-son. John (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. He farmed on one of the farms of the Knowesouth estate. Perhaps the same John was recorded in Lanton in 1663. John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Elizabeth ‘Shiftie’ and their children included John (b.1731), with wit-nesses John Turnbull and John Scott. Lawrence (18th C.) overseer of the Turnpike roads in Ha-wick, he was made an Honorary Burgess in 1767. Margaret (d.c.1687) tenant in Ruecastle when her will was recorded in 1687. Patrick of Hawk-shaw (d.bef. 1738) eldest son of John and Mary Ramsay, and descendant of the riever of the same name. In 1678 he became a Burgess of Peebles. He contributed £1100 to the Darien Scheme in 1695. He held a bond with Henry and William Elliot of Harwood in 1696, and raised an action against them for non-payment in the following year. In 1681 he married Mary, daughter of William Scott of Headshaw. She became an heiress on the death of her brother John, and so he gained lands of the Headshaw family in 1691 (making her husband confusingly ‘of Headshaw’ as well as Hawkshaw). He was involved in several ‘wadsets’ and in 1707 transferred all his remaining lands to his daughter Henrietta and her husband Michael Anderson of Tushielaw. He had another daughter Elizabeth, who married Alexander Williamson of Chapelhill. He died without a male heir. Robert (17th/18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. He witnessed a baptism for merchant Michael Scott in 1712. In 1715 he was fined ‘for swearing by the name of God extra-judicially in ane lawful fenced court, when not required thereto. He could be the Robert who married Anna Porteous in Hawick in 1705, with child Isobel (b.1706). Probably the same Robert secondly married Esther Turnbull in 1708, and had children: Anna (b.1709); Isobel (b.1711); Helen (b.1713); James (b.1716); Janet (b.1718), who married weaver Charles Scott; Esther (b.1720); and Robert (b.1722). The witnesses in 1709 were Walter Gledstains of Hilliesland and merchant John Graham, in 1711 were Bailie Robert Rucastle and baker William Hodge, and in 1713 were weaver Robert Turnbull and Bailie Robert Hardie. Robert Williamson (1881–1976) born in Wilton, son of manufacturer George. He was a missionary in China before WWII, along with his wife, Bessie Lucille Huntamer. She later wrote the book ‘Uncle: The Story of Robert W. Porteous’ about their time in China. He died in Olympia, Washington, U.S.A. Roland (17th C.) resident at Sorbietrees in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Thomas (17th C.) Edinburgh ‘writer’ who leased the lands of Minto Craigend in 1686. Thomas (17th/18th C.) carrier in Hawick. He was recorded in 1718 being rebuked for having a horse race with John Turnbull on the Common Haugh on a Sunday. He could have been the Thomas, son of Andrew and Helen Scott, who was born in Hawick in 1684. He married Agnes Gibson in Hawick in 1714. Their children included: Andrew (b.1717); Robert (b.1720); George (b.1722); Thomas (b.1724); Agnes (b.1725). He may have been brother of carrier George, who lived in Hawick at the same time. William (16th C.) recorded as ‘in Borthuikbra’ in 1573 when he was presented for trial in Edinburgh by ‘Wat Scott in Hartwoodmyres’, son of William Scott of Tushielaw. He was probably tenant of Borthwickbrae. William (d.c.1682) tenant in ‘Stennilodge, Abbotroul’ when his will was recorded in 1682. He was presumably farmer at Stonedge (formerly spelled ‘Partis’, ‘Porteous’, ‘Portice’, ‘Portous’, ‘Portows’, ‘Portuis’, ‘Portus’ and variants).

Porteous Croft (pör-shis-kroft) n. former name for lands in Lilliesleaf Parish. In 1580 the 6 acres in the town of Lilliesleaf that were leased for £24 a year by John Donaldson from William Middlemas are referred to as ‘Portus Croft Heid’. In 1643 the lands was rated at £78. In 1788 they were part of the lands owned by Edgar Hunter of Linthill. In 1811 they were was among lands owned by William Riddell of Canmeston, later passing to William Currie of Linthill.

Porteous’ Well (pör-shi-seez-wel) n. former public water supply above the Mid Row, also known as ‘Michie’s Well’.

porter (pör-ur) n., arch. a part of the weave, consisting of 20 spaces through which the warp threads are passed, the number of these per unit length determining the density of the weave – ‘In order to find the number of slips to warp any length of web, multiply the number of porters in width by the ells in length, and divide by 72’ [BCM1881].

porter (pör-ur) n., arch. someone in charge of a gate, particularly applied in former times to the resident of Ewes Doors, perhaps a sobriquet for the keeper of a changehouse at the pass there, with Ninian the Porter recorded as tenant of Ewes Doors in 1567 – ‘Item, to the porter of Ewisleysy for the rest of a price of ane horse, xij £ x s.’ [SB1574].

Porter (pör-ur) n. Alexander (19th C.) Superintendent of Police and Chief Constable in Hawick from about 1863. He was later Chief Constable for the county, based in Jedburgh.

Porterfield (pör-ur-feeeld) n. John (d.1604) briefly served as Archbishop of Glasgow during troubled times. Son of John, 1st Laird of Duchal, he was minister of Dumbarton, then Kilmarnock and Ardrossan. He was nominated somewhat mysteriously in 1571, after the position was forfeited by James Beaton. He was the first post-Reformation appointee, who was Archbishop in name only. However, a commission immediately investigated his appropriateness and it is unclear that he was ever consecrated. He later served as minister at several parishes, settling in Ayr in 1580.

Portheid (pör'-heid) n. name for former lands on the Stobs estate. It is listed in 1657, between Winningtonhall and Horselee, although the location is unknown.

the Ports (thu-pärts) n. gates to Hawick, which could be closed to defend the Town. Hawick once consisted of basically a single street (the High Street, continued by Silver Street and the Howe-gate) and no bridge access across the Teviot. There were 4 roads leading out of town in different directions, with gates that would be locked at night. These were the North Port (on Walters Wynd, which led to the river ford), East Port (roughly opposite Baker Street), South Port (at the Cross Wynd), and West Port (at the foot of the Loan). Plaques to mark their former positions were placed by the Callants’ Club in 1964. As well as these major ports, there were also at least 3 minor gates, located at the Mill Port, the Round Close and the Howe-gate/Silver Street junction. It is unclear when these ports were first constructed, but possibly shortly after Hawick became a Burgh in the 15th century. The ports were removed following the Turnpike Road Act of 1750, which allowed for the improvement of roads using income from tolls.

Porty (pör'-ee) n., arch. short form for Portobello, once a popular seaside resort for Hawick folk to visit by train, with its promenade pier, artifical wave pool and other attractions – ‘Aw wis juist a lad at Wulton skuil Juist a wee bit fella when ma mother broke the news “Oor gaun tae Portabella”’ [AY].

poseetion (pō-zee-shin) n., v. position – ‘…an’ was enlighten on the poseetion as regards the Common-Ridin’’ [BW1939], ‘…the famous G.L. McDonald hed held the poseetion in the year Wullie was born’ [IWL].

poss (pos) v., arch. to press, squeeze down, pound clothes in a tub – ‘They were weel-possed wi Carbolic saip, and weel syndit And hung-oott for a caller blaw …’ [DH].

possess (po-zes) v., arch. to enter into legal possession of, to take possession of – ‘…and as he possesst himself in the landis trevlie dispo nit, sua als he possesst himself in the saidis landis quhillis he falslie vitiat in the foirsaid chaitour …’ [SB1624].

posset pig (po-si'-pig) n., arch. a large earthenware vessel used for posset (a spiced drink made of hot milk curdled with ale or wine) – ‘…baskets and creels, posset pig, pair of raxes and ane speit …’ [DMW1681].

post (pöst) n., arch. a courier, message carrier, person employed by a town (or other body) to carry letters and packages – ‘Given to William Broun Post in Hawick two …for a session book …& 4 shill Scots, for Carriage’ [WII1706].

the Post (thu-pöst) n., arch. name used in the late 18th century for the local carrier assigned the duty of collecting (from Edinburgh) and distributing the mail.

postcaird (pöst-kārd) n. a postcard – ‘A maircht eend ti the ‘Gazette’ Office, an bocht a wheen picter-postcairds’ [ECS], ‘A expecket a letter, bit an hei wrait iz was a bare postcaird’ [ECS], ‘Whae reads a’ the cotton-gress postcairds there, Sae fer frae the haunts o’ men?’ [DH].

postie (pös-tee) n. a postman or postwoman.

Postie’s Pool (pōz-teez-pool) n. popular name for a pool in the Ale Water to the west of Lil-liesleaf village, near the sports field. The name is said to refer to a local postman who drowned here.

postmaister (pōs-mās-tur) n. postmaster, someone in charge of a post office. In 1747 Andrew Turnbull is recorded as ‘Town Post’, although it is unclear what responsibilities he had. Hawick’s first actual postmaster was John Elliot, a tanner, who gave his services freely in 1767. He was followed by Mr. Turnbull, the schoolmaster, appointed by the Chamberlain to the Duke of Buccleuch, but he was found unsuitable. Then Elliot was re-appointed against his will! He stated that he was often away from home as one excuse, but was told that he was the only suitable person and so the public would just have to wait if he was away. James Inglis (schoolmaster and later Town Clerk) was postmaster in 1772, and at some later point the office was taken by Miss Inglis (probably James’ sister), who must have been one of the country’s first post-mistresses. Robert Armstrong took over in 1809 and held the position till his death in 1852. The position was then held by Francis Deans, George Deans, James Orr, H. Little and James M. Sampson, taking us up to the early 20th century – ‘But …whae’s postmaister on Post Office Knowe, Sae fer frae the haunts o’ men?’ [DH].

the Post Office (thu-pöst-o-fees) n. Hawick General Post Office was for a century on North Bridge Street, at the corner of Croft Road. It was built in 1892 on ground that had been J.E.D. Murray’s studio, and allotments before that. The Post Office Knowe

The earliest mention of local mail is from about 1760 when letters would come once a month from Jedburgh and be laid out in an open stall for collection. In 1766 the Council records show them paying a man explicitly to take a letter to Edinburgh. The origin of the organised mail service lies with Sir Gilbert Elliot of Minto, who in 1767 started an experimental post thrice a week to and from Berwick and Edinburgh, with John Elliot the first part-time postmaster (note that Walter Scott of Harden had also pushed for twice weekly service from Edinburgh to Peebles, Selkirk and Hawick in the 1750s). A post office was established shortly afterwards through the efforts of the Duke of Buccleuch’s Chamberlain Robert Scott. James Inglis was recorded as post-master in 1772 when he and Bailie Hardie were paid by the Council ‘for post letters, &c’; postage from Edinburgh at that time appears to have been 2d. Before the establishment of a post office the letters were exposed at a stall on market days, or on the flat tombstones of the kirkyard after Sunday services. The route from London was to Edinburgh via Coldstream, and then via Dunbar and Berwick, and then by pony to Kelso and on to Hawick. There was a theft of mail bags near Kelso in 1800. Miss Inglis (Joanna) was postmistress until 1809, when Robert Armstrong took over. The first mail-coach (on the Carlisle-Hawick-Edinburgh route) started in 1807, so that not all mail had to come from Berwick and Kelso. The situation changed utterly with the coming of the penny post in 1840. The location marked on Wood’s 1824 map was the corner of Silver Street and the Howegate. The Post Office moved from the foot of the Howegate to the High Street in about 1860 and then to North Bridge Street in 1892. By the late 19th century there were also receiving stations on Wilton Path and Dovemount. Several sub-post offices later existed throughout the town, including at 7 Sandbed, Dovemount Place, Wilton Dean and Burnfoot, and at Safeway (closed 2004). Now only the Burnfoot and Sandbed branches survive – ‘But they’ve ta’en oor Post Office away, That hez been there for mony a day, They didn care what Hawick folk felt, Doon the river oo’ve been sellt’ [IWL].

The Post Office moved to Safeway, which itself closed in 2004, leaving the Sandbed branch as the main one in the town. Post Office Knowe (pöst-o-fees-now) n. hill on the Border between Roxburghshire and Dumfriesshire, just to the north of Craik Cross Hill. The name is mysterious – ‘Whae named yon hill-top ‘Post Office Knowe’, Fer frae the haunts o’ men, Ootbye Craik Cross abune Borthwick-heid? I’d fairly like tae ken’ [DH].

The Postrel (thu-pos-trul) n. name sometimes given to the doggerel verse ‘A True History of the Right Honourable name of Scot’, written by Capt. Walter Scott of Satchells and first published in 1688.

Post-seek (pöst-seek) a., arch. bedridden – ‘Post-sick, Expl. ‘bedrid’, Roxb. Often used; but whether the meaning be the same with that of the phrase, Postit with sickness, is doubtful’ [JoJ].

Pot barley (po’-bawr-lee) n., arch. barley that has been milled to remove the husks, for use in soups etc. – ‘...sending him to Sandy Neil’s for washing soda and pot barley’ [JTu].

Potburn (po’-burn) n. former farm adjacent to the Southern Upland Way, between Ettrick Pen and Pot Law. It was purchased by James Pott, W.S., in 1831. He was son of Gideon Pott of Dod (also written ‘Pottburn’).

Potch (poch) v., arch. to trample soft ground into mud – ‘...when the Magistrates and other persons at the Common-Riding potched the ground he had plowed’ [C&L1767].

Pot-hole (po’-höl) n., arch. a deep hole or pool in a river.

Pot-shakins (po’-shä-kinz) n. pot scrapings, the last to come out, last of a litter – ‘The pot-shakins o a big West End family Jock came after his thre brothers and six sisters’ [IWL].

The Pot Syke (thu-po’-sik) n. small stream in the upper part of the farm of Milston. It flows roughly southwards to join the Dean Burn. There is a local tradition that there may be buried treasure there, and hence a suggestion that this may have been where the bronze Roman leg was found in 1820 (also written ‘Pot Sike’; it is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Pott (po’, pot) n. Adam (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Malie Dickson and their children included Bessie (b.1645). Adam (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Riddell and their children included John (b.1669). Probably the same Adam, with wife Janet Riddell, was father of Janet (b.1679). Adam (17th/18th C.) recorded in Kirkton Parish where he was married in 1714 (with no wife’s name given). Probably the same Adam married Helen ‘Kinarie’ in Kirkton Parish in 1717. His children baptised there included Adam (b.1717). It seems that he was separate from his contemporary who farmed at Wolfelee and Shankend. Adam of Hoscote (1690/1–1770) probably eldest son of George. He was tenant farmer at Wolfelee around 1715, moving to Shankend, where he was recorded in 1725 and 1727. He purchased the lands of Hoscote from the Homes in about 1723, starting his family’s association with that estate. He was recorded at Shankend in 1729. He seems likely to be the Adam of ‘Outterside’ listed among the Commissioners for Roxburghshire in 1761 and was ‘of Hoscatt’ listed along with his son George among the Commissioners of Selkirkshire. He married Betty Elliot (1686/7–1752). His children included: George (1712–70), who succeeded; a daughter (1716/7–1774) who is only marked on the gravestone as ‘Mrs. Elliot”); Elizabeth (d.1783), who married Thomas Stavert, tenant at Coliforthill; William (b.1725); Jean (or Janet, 1727–77), who married Walter Grieve, farmer at Airdwood, and whose son John Grieve co-inherited Hoscote with George Stavert; William (again, 1729–75), baptised in Cavers; and Janet (1730/1–57). The marriages of his daughters Elizabeth and Jean were at the same time in 1744 in Roberton Parish. The family are buried at Borthwick Waas. Adam (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Isabel Learnmonth in Roberton Parish in 1754 (and recorded as ‘Helen Learnmond’ in Kirkton Parish). Their children included James (b.1765) and Adam (b.1768). He is probably also the father of John (b.1757), baptised in Roberton Parish. He may be the Adam who witnessed a baptism for John Pott and Margaret Shiel in Wilton in 1747. Alexander of Borthwickshielis (d.1796), probably related to the Potts of Todrig, he was a surgeon in the West Indies. In 1788 he and Robert (possibly his son) are recorded as owners of Borthwickshielis, valued at £600. They were also recorded in 1788 as owners of land valued at £156, which had earlier been owned by William Scott of Galalaw (and was presumably Galalaw itself). His connection with Galalaw suggests that he was related to George of Todrig (possibly his father), who had married Elizabeth Scott of Galalaw earlier in the 18th century. He is recorded on the Horse Tax Rolls for Roberton Parish in 1789–92. Although he died one year earlier, he is still recorded as owner of 2 farm horses and 2 carriage or saddle horses on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He also paid tax for having 3 non-working dogs at Borthwickshielis in 1797. He was still listed as owner of Borthwickshielis on the 1811 Land Tax Rolls (with George of Todrig listed as owner later in the 19th century). His will was proved at the Prerogatory Court of Canterbury in 1796, when he was recorded as a bachelor of Robertson, Selkirkshire. Alexander ‘Sandy’ (1793/4–1859) younger son of Gideon of Dod, born in Cavers Parish. He was farmer at Burnfoot in the Ewes valley. He was one of the founder members of the Wisp Club. He was at Burnfoot in 1841 and in 1851 was farmer of 2600 acres, employing 10 people. In 1823 he married Appalina Hogarth (who was born in 1796 in Chancelkirk). Their children included: Mary; Elizabeth; Apalina Christina Hogarth, who married Robert Laidlaw Turnbull, one of the Turnbulls of Merrylaw; and probably Gideon (d.1913), who emigrated to Queensland. Andrew (17th C.) weaver living at ‘Todscleughysde’ in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Andrew (1759/60–1844) son of Robert and Margaret. He was a resident of Castleton Parish and is probably the shepherd at Tweedenhead recorded on the 1797 Dog Tax Rolls. He married Betty Armstrong (1758/9–1820) and they had a son Robert (1801–75). The family are buried in Castleton. Arthur David Ripley (1862–1901) eldest son of Gen. David of Todrig and Borthwickshielis. He served with the K.O.S.B., being appointed Lieutenant in 1886 and Captain in 1894. He volunteered for active service along with his battalion in 1900 and was Staff Officer to the Commandant of Schweizer Reneke. He died of an abscess of the liver and is buried at Kimberley, South Africa. A memorial stone was erected in Robertson Cemetery. Gen. David of Todrig (1812–81) son of George and Katherine Reid and younger brother of George. He served in India during a rebellion in 1833 and during the Sutlej campaign, where he commanded the 47th Bengal Native Infantry. He received commendation for his command in Pegu Burnah in 1854 and for commanding the 47th Regiment during the rebellion in China in 1858–59. He became a General in 1877 and was awarded the Companion of the Bath. He owned the lands of Whitslade and Borthwickshielis, among other local holdings. He married Mary Anne, daughter of Col. Ripley, and she died in 1870. Their children were: Capt. Arthur David Ripley, who died in the Boer War in 1901; Emily Louisa, who married Capt. Sydenham J. Lambert; Anne Sophia, who married Lieut. Reginald C. Hadrow; Lucy Ada; Eliza Davidson; and Constantine (d.1875). In 1876 he secondly married Anna Frances, daughter of A. Boyle from Dublin, and she died in 1878. They had a son, Henry Percy, as well as daughters. He himself died at Borthwickshiel. Edward Helme (1880–1968) son of Col. William of Knowesouth, he achieved the rank of Lt. Col. He married Louise Medora Hermione Vanneck and had a daughter, Hermione. George (1650/1–1720) perhaps the oldest local Pott with known connections to the Todrig and Hosocate family. He has one of the earliest tombstones in Borthwick Waas, which appears to say that he was ‘of Whilhill brae’ (probably Whitehillbrae on the Dod Burn). He is said to have married an Elliot and had 14 children, probably including: Adam (1690/1–1770) of Hosocate; possibly John of Caerlenrig (1692/3–1772), but this could have been his nephew; Robert (c.1696–1711); George of Todrig (1699/1700–81); and James of Dod (1701/2–65). He was therefore the progenitor of the Potts of Caerlenrig, Dod, Hosocate and Todrig. He is surely the same man as the tenant in Whitehillbrae and Newton, whose children baptised in Kirkton Parish included: Mungo (b.1708); John (b.1708); Janet (b.1710); and Thomas (b.1712). The name of his wife is not recorded. George of Todrig (1699/1700–81) son of George who died in 1720. He is recorded in 1762 when Christian, widow of Charles Scott of Crumhaugh, was involved with him in a court case to recover money owed to her husband. He was listed along with his son George among the Commissioners for Selkirkshire in 1761. He married Elizabeth Scott of Galalaw about 1754 (although possibly the George and Elizabeth Scott who were married in Roberton Parish in 1738); she died in 1755, aged 42. He purchased the lands of Caerlenrig from Robert Elliot of Caerlenrig and secondly married Robert’s daughter Margaret (however, this could be confusion with other Potts). Altogether he had 2 daughters and 6 sons. His eldest son George (1739/40–81) succeeded to Todrig, while his son John (by his first marriage) succeeded to Caerlenrig (but again this could be confusion with other family branches). It is also possible that Alexander of Borthwickshiel was another son. He is probably the George of Todrig recorded as liferenter of lands in Headshaw in about 1788 (although deceased by then). George of Hosocate (1712–c.80) son of Adam of Hosocate. He inherited the Hosocate estate on the death of his father (perhaps in 1770). He was a witness to the will of Robert Grieve in Deanburnhaugh. He was ‘younger of Hoscott’ among the Commissioners for Selkirkshire in 1761. He died unmarried, probably around 1780, and bequeathed the estate to his nephews George Stavert (son of his sister Elizabeth) and John Grieve (son of his sister Jean). In 1783 there was a sasine in favour of his sisters, the only surviving children of Adam: Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Stavert in Coliforthill; and Jean, wife of Walter Grieve in airswood. George (18th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. His children included Adam (b.1743), Betty (b.1750) and George (b.1775). He is probably related to George of Whitehillbrae, who had children baptised in Kirkton. George (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His children included: Isabel (b.1765); John (b.1766); Jane (b.1767); Mary (b.1768); and Betty (b.1770). He may be the same man as the George whose children were baptised in Kirkton Parish at about the same time. George (18th C.) married Betty Stavert in Roberton Parish in 1766. George (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Agnes Tait in 1782. George of Todrig (1739/40–81) son of George and Elizabeth Scott of Galalaw. He was listed as ‘younger of Todrige’ among the Commissioners for Selkirkshire in 1761. He was still ‘younger’ in 1779 when Sir Gilbert Elliot of Minto gave him liferent of much of Headshaw; this was part of Elliot’s plan to stack the Roxburghshire voters’ roll with his supporters. He is recorded paying the land tax on Todrig in 1785 and 1802 (even although he may have been deceased by then). He was also recorded as owner of the lands in Firth in 1788. Note that he is easily confused with his contemporary George of ‘Rig’ (meaning Caerlenrig). In 1778 he married Barbara, daughter of Walter Turnbull of Firth and Dorothea Chisholme; she later married Thomas Knox, was mother of the poet William Knox and died in 1821, aged 68. Their children (baptised in Lilliesleaf Parish) were: George (b.1779), who probably died young; George (b.1780), who succeeded; and Barbara (b.1782), who married Charles Erskine of Shielfield. The family gravestone at Borthwick Waas states that he died in 1781, just a month or so after his father; he was certainly deceased in 1806 when his daughter Barbara got married. The Mary who married William Aitchison (who later owned Brieryhill) may also have been his daughter. He may have been the same as the heir of Borthwickshiel who was killed by a fall from his horse near Howdenburn. George of Caerlenrig (1722/3–1815) son of John of Caerlenrig and Mary Scott. He is probably the ‘Pott of Ridge’ (no forename given) listed among the Commissioners for Roxburghshire in 1761. He was George ‘of Ridge’ when listed along with John (probably his father) witnessing a baptism for Robert Laidlaw in Falmash in 1764. He owned the farm of Caerlenrig in 1788, valued at £366. He is recorded being ‘of Ridge’ on the 1785–86 Horse Tax Rolls for Cavers Parish, listed along with his son in 1787 and then alone again in 1788–92. He is ‘George Pott Esqr. Rigg’ on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He was also ‘Esqr. Rig’ in 1797 when he was taxed for having a dog. He may be the George ‘of Clenduchrig’ (perhaps intended to be Caerlenrig) listed in 1788 among the voters of Roxburghshire associated with Sir Francis Elliott of Stobs. He is probably the ‘Mr’ George who in 1800 witnessed a baptism for Thomas Glendinning, shepherd at Blackcleugh. He was listed as owner of Caerlenrig in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls. Note that he is easy to confuse with his contemporary George of Todrig. According to the family gravestone in Borthwick Waas Cemetery he married three times: firstly Isabella Currie (1753/4–72), who had the same name as his step-mother, and hence was a niece of his step-mother; secondly Jane Little (1736/7–1775); and thirdly Margaret Elliot (1737/8–1821). He was listed as ‘in Colindrigrig’ when his wife and another family member were buried in Hawick in 1772. He was succeeded in Caerlenrig by his son John (1765/6–1830) and also had a son Robert who died in childhood. He appears to have lived to the age of 92. George (18th/19th C.) married Agnes White in Hawick in 1796. They were described as both of Hawick Parish. George of Todrig (1780–1862) son of George and Barbara Turnbull. He was Convenor of Selkirkshire, as well as Justice of the Peace and Deputy Lieutenant in that county. He also served as a Commissioner of Supply, Justice of the Peace and Tax Commissioner for Roxburghshire. He was probably the George of Todrig (separately listed from George of ‘Rig’) among the Commissioners for Roxburghshire in 1805 and 1819. In 1811 he was listed as owner of land at Firth in Lilliesleaf Parish, as well as Brieryhill in Wilton Parish. He was listed as owner of Borthwickshields in about 1874 (after he was deceased). A carved panel on a farm building at Todrig probably relates to him; it has the initials ‘G P’ at the top, a lozenge in the centre, and the inscription ‘REBUILT 1833’ at the bottom. He was listed with another George (probably of Caerlenrig) his father, even as Commissioners of both Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire in 1819. He was listed among the local gentry in Pigot’s 1837 directory. In 1851 he was ‘Landed Proprietor’ at Borthwickshields. In 1807 he married Katherine, daughter of David Reid, commissioner of customs she died in 1833. Their children were: Jane Stephen (1808–88); Barbara (b.1810), who married James Erskine of Shieldfield, probably her cousin; Eliza Davidson (1815–64); George (b.1811), Major in the Bengal Army; David (b.1812), General in the Bengal Army; and Stephen (b.1813), with the Bengal Engineers. His adult daughters Jane, Barbara and Eliza were living at Borthwickshields House in 1841. He died at Borthwickshields and is buried in Robertson Cemetery. George of Dod (1790–1862) born at Penchrise, son of Gideon and Elizabeth Pott. He was the 3rd Pott Laird of Dod. He was educated at Jedburgh, Yarrow and Edinburgh University (probably the George recorded in medicine there in 1809). He was Lieutenant in the Roxburghshire Militia from about 1811 and became a Captain of the Roxburgh yeomanry cavalry in 1817. He went through a protracted legal battle with Sir William Francis Elliott of Stobs (also junior captain in his regiment) over the deal their fathers had made over the lease of Penchrise. He eventually lost the case in the House of Lords. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. About 1828 he rented Crawhill farm (now Bucklands) and lived there until he bought Knowesouth (from William Oliver Rutherford) in 1838. He was listed as resident of Crawhill in Pigot’s 1837 directory. He was ‘Proprietor’ at Knowesouth and in 1851 was ‘Landed Proprietor, Justice of the Peace’ at Knowesouth, farming 112 acres and employing 5 labourers. He also ran the farm of Ruecasttle. About 1854 he sold the farm of Riskenhope (by St. Mary’s Loch) to John Scott, W.S. From cousins at Skelfhill he obtained an old copper pot, 19 1/2 inches deep, said by tradition to be the cauldron in which Lord Souils was boiled at the Nine Stane Rig! He gifted this relic to the Duke of Buccleuch. He joined the Jedforest Club in 1813. He often told the story about meeting an old man, James Bunyan, herding his cow, and on asking him who was the worst farmer in the county was told ‘Weel, sir I think it is just yersel’. Along with Mr. Selby (factor to the Earl of Minto) he had the idea to build a bridge and roads to connect Hasedean station with Denholm (this being later implemented). In 1823 he married Jean (or Jane), of James Gideon. He succeeded to Potburn, but George and had a family, probably being succeeded by James of Potburn and Jane Brown, and brother of Gen. David. He served with the Bengal Army, reaching at least the rank of Major (and was listed as Colonel on his memorial stone). He was recorded as ‘George Pott, Esq. of Borthwickshiels’ among landowners in Roberton Parish in 1841. He gave the land for the new Kirk at Roberton in 1862. In 1840 he married Julia, youngest daughter of Rev. Robert-Sparke Hutchings and she died in 1872. Their children included: George (1843–46); Constantine; George (again, 1847–54); Katherine (1850–55); and Robert Constantine (1851–75), his only surviving son, who was a Lieutenant in the 76th Regiment. He is buried at Roberton, along with other members of his family. George (18th/9th C.) name of 2 men listed among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1835. One was at Wilton Lodge and the other at Crawhill. Neither of them are listed by 1840. George (19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. In 1852 he married Jane Bell. George (19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1855 he married Isabella Foster. George (19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isabella Murray and their children included George (b.1859), Jane (b.1866), William (b.1867), William (again, b.1868) and James (b.1870). George (1842–98) younger son of James of Potburn and Jane Brown, and brother of George. He was born in Edinburgh. He succeeded his brother to the lands of Potburn and for some years lived at Lintalee. He joined the Jedforest Club in 1870. He moved to 55 Albany Street Edinburgh, and died. He married and had a family, probably being succeeded by James Gideon. George (19th/20th C.) brother of James Gideon. He succeeded to Potburn, but lived in New Zealand. Gideon of Dod (1757–1812) son of James and Jean Scott. He was a successful tenant sheep-farmer at Penchris. He was brother of Isabella (who married Thomas Usher of Courthill). A document of 1784 shows him clearing the debts of William Elliot (son of Capt. Robert) before he succeeded to Harwood. He also bought the farm of Risken-hope (formerly part of Rodono) from Hay of Duns Castle. He was granted a 77 year lease of Penchris and Langside in 1794 (this being challenged when the son of the granter brought a court case against his son George). He is probably the Pott of Penchris who subscribed to John Learmont’s book of poetry in 1791. He is recorded at Penchris on the 1785–94 Horse Tax Rolls and in 1797, when he owned 4 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. He was additionally taxed for having 3 non-working dogs in 1797. He paid the land tax at Dod in 1811. In 1783 he married Elizabeth Pott of Todrig, and she died at ‘Warebank’ (probably Weirbank in Melrose) in 1840, aged 84. Their children (at least 4 of whom were baptised in Cavers Parish) included: James (1784–85), eldest son; Elizabeth (‘Betty’, 1785–1855), eldest daughter, who died at ‘Warebank’; Jean (1787–88); George (b.1790), who farmed Penchris. He is buried along with other family members at Borthwick Waas. Gideon and Knowesouth (1823/4–1905) eldest son of George and Jane Elliot, born at Penchris. He was educated at Canonbie, the Grange School in Sunderland and Edinburgh University. He acquired parts of Ruecastle from Thomas Rutherford and William Oliver Rutherford of Edgerston. He joined the Jedforest Club in 1847. He served as a Commissioner of Supply and Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. He also acted as collector of county rates in 1848 and for several years afterwards (still being so recorded in 1866). He turned down an offer to be agent of the British Linen Company in Jedburgh. Along with Edward Heron Maxwell he implemented the building of a bridge and road (by public subscription) to connect Hassendean station with Denholm. He also arranged a collection to give a gift to the Duke of Buccleuch for appreciation of locally keeping fox hounds at his own expense (this being 2 candelabra). He entered the new volunteer cavalry as a private and later became a Lieutenant. He was an expert shot, winning the officers’ challenge cup of the Border battalion outright after 3 victories in a row, and placing well in several national competitions. He was a successful sheep-farmer and took pupils at Knowesouth for agricultural training. He was recorded at Knowesouth in a directory of 1868 and paid the land tax there in 1874. His sister Thomasina married James Oliver, lawyer of Mayfield House. He married Janet Hunter (also known as Janet Lean Hunter Hunter, 1826/7–1912), from Crawford, Lanarkshire, who died in Jedburgh. Their children included: Gideon (1862–1904), an engineer, who predeceased him, dying in Glasgow; Grace Murray (b.1863); William (b.1865), the only surviving son; and Agnes (‘Nancy’, b.1871). In 1891 his younger daughter Agnes married William Edward Oliver-Rutherford, and at the same time his elder daughter Grace Jane married Isaac Fenton Bayley (of Halls, Dunbar). Henry Percy (19th/20th C.) son of Gen. David of Tordrig. He served in the military, being with the Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers and in 1904 became a Lieutenant with the 5th Light Infantry, advancing to Captain in 1908 and temporary Major in 1915. His daughter Ruth Barbara (1910–61) married Ernest Keatting and is buried in Roberton Cemetery. James (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 as owner of Caverton when he was fined for failing to appear at the Justice-aire. He later presented Nicholas Brown to give suit for his lands in Caverton. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish, living at Cauldmill in 1709. His children included Walter (b.1696), Marion (b.1705), Jane (b.1707) and Margaret (b.1709). James (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Margaret Scott and their son John was baptised in 1716. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was at Borthaugh in 1721. He married Isobel Scott and their children included: Andrew (b.1721), with witnesses George Bell and William Turnbull. Probably the same James, also at Borthaugh, married to ‘Agnes’ Scott was father of Agnes (b.1724). The witnesses in 1724 were ‘G.B.’ and William Turnbull. James (18th C.) farmer who, along with 2 brothers, rented much of Harwood from William Elliot about 1730. He may have been the son of William born in Cavers Parish in 1702 or could have been the same man as James of Dod. James (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Skelfhill in 1738 and 1748. His children probably included: Margaret (b.1738), Thomas (b.1741), Elizabeth (b.1744) and Mary (b.1748). It is possible he is the same as James of Dod. James of Dod (1701/2–65) farmer at Penchrise and Langside. He was one of 14 children and possibly youngest son of George (who died in 1720). He married Jean, daughter of Gideon Scott of Woll, and she died in 1767, aged 48. Their children included: Elizabeth; Isabell, who married Thomas Usher of Courthill; George (b.1744), their eldest son, who died aged 4; Elizabeth (1756/7–83), 3rd daughter; and Gideon (1757–1802), 2nd son, who succeeded to Dod and farmed at Penchrise. He may be the James who had unnamed sons baptised in Cavers Parish in 1744, 1750 and 1757. He died at Penchrise and was buried at Borthwick Waas. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, living at Borthaugh in 1751. He is probably related to the James who was at Borthaugh a generation earlier. In 1744 he married Bessie Palmer, the marriage proclaimed in Robertson and Wilton Parishes. Their children, baptised in Wilton Parish, included James (b.1746), William (b.1748) and Isabel (b.1751). Probably the same James is recorded marrying another Agnes Scott in 1767 (that marriage also being recorded in Hawick). James (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Jane Scott and their children included Betty (b.1762). It is possible he is the same man as James of Dod. James (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Helen Nichol and their daughter Mary was baptised in 1761. James (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Helen Paterson and their children included: Janet (b.1761); Agnes (b.1761), who married Robert Young; and James (b.1764). James of Potburn (1792–1852) from the Penchrise family, son of Gideon and Elizabeth Pott, he was born in Cavers Parish. He trained as a lawyer, becoming W.S. in 1818. He was one of the trustees for the late Adam Stavert of Hoscote in 1828, along with one of the Georges. He bought the lands of Potburn, Selkirkshire in 1831. He may be the James recorded in a letter of 1836 preserved in the Walter Mason Collection. In 1838 he was listed as a writer in Edinburgh when he witnessed a document in Hawick (relating to the Dicksons) and a letter from the same year is preserved in the Walter Mason collection. He married Jane, 2nd daughter of Peter Brown of Rawflat in 1839. His children included James Gideon and George. His firm could be the ‘Messrs. Pott & Macmillan’ recorded in documents of 1814 in the Walter Mason Collection. James (b.1839/40) son of Martin. He married Agnes Lamb in 1860 and their children (baptised in Hawick or Wilton) included Mary (b.1860), Martin (b.1863), Walter (b.1865), Jane (b.1867), Martin (again, b.1867), Margaret (b.1869), and William (b.1874). In 1861 he was living with his father at Upper Hope Park. James Gideon of Potburn (1840-65) eldest son of James of Potburn and brother of George. He was born in Edinburgh. In 1859 he obtained a commission as Cornet in the 11th Hussars. He was described as a ‘delicate, handsome-looking man’, but of poor health. He had to retire from the army and died at the age of 25. His brother George succeeded to Potburn. James Gideon (d.1915) from the local family, probably son of George of Potburn. He died in Saloniaka on active service with the Lothian and Borders Light Horse. His brother George succeeded. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Malie Wilson and their children included William (b.1639). John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Marion Huggan and their children included Bessie (b.1646). John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Johnston and their children included William (b.1655). John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His son William was baptised in 1674. Perhaps the same John was father of Agnes (b.1692). John (17th C.) resident of Bowanhill on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. John (17th C.) resident of ‘Dodburne in Kirkton Parich’ according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. His surname is written ‘Poott’. Perhaps the same John in Winningtonrig had a child John baptised in 1708. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Janet Miller in 1712. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Janet Scott and his children included Margaret (b.1713) and Isobell (b.1716). John (18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His children included: Marion (b.1726); and James (b.1728). John (18th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. His children included George (b.1724), Robert (b.1725) and Margaret (b.1726). He may be the John who got married in Kirkton Parish in 1721 (wife’s name not given). John (1692/3-1772) succeeded to the lands of Caerlenrig from his father George (however, it is also possible he was a nephew of George). He and George ‘of Ridge’ (probably his son) witnessed a baptism for Robert Laidlaw in Fahnash in 1764. He was listed on the Horse Tax Rolls ‘in Rigg’ in 1789-91 (even although deceased by then). He married Mary Scott, who died in 1790, aged 34. He secondly married Isabella Currie, and she died in 1763, aged 50. His children included: Elizabeth (‘Betty’, 1721/2-43), his oldest daughter; and George (1722/3-1815), who succeeded to Caerlenrig. He could be the John whose children baptised in Cavers Parish included Marion (b.1758) and Margaret (b.1759). It is also possible that he is the same man as John from Kirkton Parish, whose son George was baptised in 1724. He is buried at Borthwick Waas along with several family members. John (18th C.) recorded as ‘Workman’, probably in the Teviothead area. He married Margaret (or Marion) Craw in 1730, both of them being from Cavers Parish. Their son James was baptised in Hawick Parish in 1738, with Walter Scott at Commonside one of the witnesses. He could be the John in Colterscleuch whose daughter Mary (b.1732) was baptised in Cavers Parish. John (b.1734), also baptised in Cavers, was probably his son. John (18th C.) tailor who lived in Wilton Parish. He was living at Langlands in 1747 and 1751. He married Margaret Shiel in 1739 and their children included: James (b.1740); Robert (b.1741); Janet (b.1744); Ann (b.1747); and Isabel (b.1751). The witnesses in 1747 were Walter Scott and Adam Shiel (who was probably related to his wife) and in 1751 were Robert and Walter Scott. His wife’s death is recorded in Hawick in 1787. John (18th C.) carrier in Hawick Parish. He married Margaret ‘Batety’ and their children included Helen (b.1743). The witnesses in 1743 were merchant John Ruecastle and shoemaker John Scott. He is probably also the carrier whose son John was baptised in Hawick in 1745, with witnesses shoemakers John and Thomas Scott. John (18th C.) married in Kirkton Parish in 1754, with no wife’s name recorded. John (18th C.) schoolmaster at Caerlenrig 1762-63. He may be the same as one of the other Johns. John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Clerk in 1760 and their children included John (b.1761), Betty (b.1766), Betty (again, b.1773) and William (b.1776). The witnesses in 1766 were merchants John Hardie and Adam Leyden and in 1776 were the whole congregation. Note that at about the same time John Clerk was married to Margaret Pott, and so the couples may have been related. John (18th C.) married Janet Ogilvie in Castleton Parish in 1769. John (18th C.) mason from Hawick, who carried out much of the repair work after the 1767 flood, rebuilding the small arch of the Auld Brig and the wall of the Manse. He died a few years later, following an accident that occurred on the completion of the Hornshole

Pott

Bridge. He was maternal grandfather of Alexander and Robert Michie, and hence probably father of Betty, who married Alexander Michie in Hawick Parish in 1797. His son John died in Hawick in 1778. John (18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His son John was baptised in 1754. John (18th C.) erected possibly the first stocking-shop in Hawick, in the back of the house adjoining Oliver Place (sold to the Oliviers around 1875 and demolished). His father owned the property and the house at the front, bearing the date 1769. He is probably the John whose wife Peggy Turnbull died in 1795, the couple being married (declared in Wilton and Hawick Parishes) in 1786. He is probably also the stockingmaker in Hawick who subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784).

John (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Mabel Nichol and their children included Robert (b.1792), Mabel (b.1794), James (b.1796), John (b.1798), Betty (b.1800) and Jean (b.1802). John (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Betty Robson. Their children included Helen (b.1794), Isobel (b.1796) and Elliot (b.1811). John of Rig (1765/6–1830) son of George and Isabella Currie, he held the lands of Caelenrig. He is probably the ‘& Son of Rigg’ recorded along with George on the 1787 Horse Tax Rolls. He is probably the ‘Mr Pott, junior, Caelenrig’ on the subscription list for John Learmont’s book of poetry in 1791. He is recorded being from ‘Rigg’ in a letter to a Selkirk lawyer in 1791 regarding a lost almanac. He is probably the John ‘Potts’, ‘Esq. Carlenrigg’ who subscribed to William Scott’s ‘ Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. He became a member of the Wisp Club in about 1827. He married Christian Aitchison, who died at Macksdie in 1842, aged 82. He is buried along with his father, grandfather and other family members in Borthwick Waas. There are documents relating to his family, covering the period 1743–1845, in the Borders Archive. Martin (18th C.) groom at Stirches in 1778, when he was working for Gilbert Chisholme. He was surely related to Robert, who was a stable-boy at the nearby Burnhead. He is probably the Martin who married Betty Gray and whose children, baptised in Wilton Parish, included Martin (b.1779). Martin (18th/19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Margaret Scott and their daughter Marion was baptised in 1804. He is probably the son of Martin and Betty Gray born in Wilton in 1779. Martin (b.1803) son of Martin, he was born in Wilton Parish, where he worked as a wool spinner. He was living at Malt Steep when listed among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1840 and 1841. He was living at the Malt Steep in Wilton on the 1841 census and on Wilton Kirkstyle in 1851. In 1861 he was a widower at Upper Hope Park. He married Mary Little, who was from Langholm. Their children included: Mary (b.1828); William (b.1830); Martin (b.1832), who became power loom manager of the Cumledge Mill; Ann (b.1834), who married Alexander Baillie, and was grandmother of Isabella Baillie; Margaret (b.1837); James (b.1839); David; and Alexander. Martin (b.1832) son of Martin and Mary Little, he was born in Hawick. In 1858 he married Martha Oliver and moved to Duns, where he was power loom manager of the Cumledge Mill. They had 8 children: Margaret (b.1859), born in Wilton; Mary (b.1861), baptised in Hawick; Agnes Wilson (b.1874), baptised in Wilton; and 5 others. Martin (19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Margaret Simpson in 1864. Robert (d.c.1684) tenant in Langhaugh whose will is recorded in 1684. It is unclear which ‘Langhaugh’ this was, although probably in Roxburghshire. Robert (1705/6–81) tenant in Hudshouse. In 1758 he had his children Helen and Jean, with Helen Murray baptised in Hawick: the record is labelled as fornication. He died at Turn and is buried in Borthwick Waas (with no other family members listed). He is surely the Robert ‘Potts’ who is listed as joint possessor (with William Elliot) of the farm of Turn in 1779. Robert (18th C.) married Margaret Cavers in Kirkton Parish in 1755. Their children, baptised in Castleton Parish, included Andrew (b.1762), William (b.1765) and Walter (b.1765). John (b.1756), baptised in Castleton Parish, may also have been his son. It is possible he was the Robert who owned Demainholm (along with Matthew Little) according to the Land Tax Rolls of 1811. Robert (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Betty Scott, and their children included Jane (b.1760) and John (b.1761). Robert (18th C.) house and stable boy at Burnhead in 1778 and 1779, when he was working for William Scott. He could be the Robert who married Margaret ‘Robison’ in Hawick Parish in 1787. Capt. Robert of Galalaw (d.1803) recorded in Roberton Parish on the Land Tax Rolls for Selkirkshire in 1802. Probably the same Robert is recorded in 1788 along with Alexander, as joint owner of land valued at £156, which was presumably Galalaw, as well as Borthwickshiel, valued at £600. He was also recorded as owner of Galalaw on the county valuation and on the Land Tax Rolls of 1811 (although already deceased by then). It seems likely that he was son of Alexander of Borthwickshiels and grandson of George of Todrig. He died at Borthwickshiels. Robert (d.1816) recorded as ‘old Tailor and Packman Midraw’ when his death was registered in Hawick. He could be the pedlar Robert who was recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls for Hawick. Robert (19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He was recorded as a carter among male heads of households in the Parish in 1835-41. He was an agricultural labourer and carter on the 1841 and 1851 censuses, living on North Hermitage Street. He was listed as a farmer in 1861. He married Mary Armstrong (b.1811), who was from Canonbie. Their children included: Betty (b.1832); Margaret (b.1833), who married David Oliver; Andrew (b.1836); John (b.1838); Christopher (b.1840); Jane (b.1842); William (b.1845); Walter (b.1847), who moved to Glasgow; James (b.1849); Euphemia (b.1852); and Robert (b.1855). The couple were rebuked in 1842. His children included: James (b.1849); Euphemia (b.1852); William (b.1845); Walter (b.1847), who moved to Glasgow; James (b.1849); Euphemia (b.1852); and Robert (b.1855). The couple were rebuked for ‘antenuptial Fornication’ in 1832. The 1841 record says ‘to America and dead’, but that must be an error. Col. Stephen (1813-85) son of George. He served with the Royal Bengal Engineers and retired in 1862 with the honorary rank of Major General. There is a pink granite memorial to him in Robertson Cemetery. Thomas (17th C.) tenant in Howpasley. Along with William Telfer (also in Howpasley) and several other men from the upper Borthwick, he was charged in 1685 with being a Covenanter. However, all the men took the ‘Test’ and promised not to frequent conventicles. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His children included William (b.1699) and Margaret (b.1708). Thomas (1723-1829) son of William, he was farmer at Tothholm in Castleton Parish. He was recorded there on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when he owned 3 horses, and on the Dog Tax Rolls, when he owned 2 dogs. He married in 1763, but his wife’s name is unrecorded. He was probably father of Mary, who married Adam Robson, and perhaps John who married Betty Robson. He probably also had a son Thomas who was ‘Mr. T. jun.’ in 1821. Thomas (b.c.1779) inn-keeper of the Buccleuch Arms in Newcastleton, recorded in Pigot’s 1837 directory. He is listed as a carter among heads of households in Newcastleton in 1835-37 and then as an innkeeper. He was surely related to Robert, who was a carter at about the same time. In 1841 he was at about 48 North Hermitage Street, with his wife Betty and children Helen and Betty. He married Elizabeth Hogg and their children included: Helen (b.1806); Anne (b.1808); Helen (again, b.1808); Thomas (b.1810); William (b.1812); and Robert (b.1814). He could be the ‘Mr. T. jun. Tothholm’ listed in 1821 when he subscribed to William Scott’s ‘ Beauties of the Border’ in 1821; he was presumably son of the older Thomas. Thomas (19th C.) married Anne Scott in Cavers Parish in 1828. Walter (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Mary Young and their children included James (b.1799). William (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Nichol and their children included Helen (b.1655). William (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish, when it contained Hassendean. He married ‘Issobell Heutsone’ in 1685 and their children included John (b.1687). The witnesses were Robert Scott and Robert Ormiston (probably farmer at Boonraw). William (18th C.) resident of Toshawhills. His children included John (b.1702). William (18th C.) resident of Cavers and Hawick Parishes. He was living at Langside in 1702 and at Slaidhills in 1704. He married Janet Buckham in 1699 and their children included James (b.1702) and Anna (b.1704). The witnesses in 1704 were John Foster and William Scott. William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish who married Isabel Brydon in 1709. He was recorded being in Skelfhill in 1709. William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was herd at Lymiecleuch in 1727 and probably the same William was at Shankend in 1738. Possibly the same William was father of Thomas (b.1724), John (b.1727), George (b.1738), John (again, b.1740) and Margaret (b.1743). William (18th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. He married Janet Hislop in 1734. William (18th C.) tenant at Hoscote, recorded in a court case of 1754 with John Armstrong, tenant of Fingland, Dumfriesshire. William (19th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Isabella Mather and their children included: Janet (b.1825); Jane (b.1827); and an unnamed son (b.1829). William (19th C.) married Ann Henderson in Wilton Parish in 1842. His children included Agnes (b.1842), baptised in Ashkirk Parish. William (19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen Currie in 1859 and their children included Margaret (b.1858) and Mary (b.1863). William (b.1834) 2nd son of George of Dod. He was an officer in the 89th Regiment. He married a daughter of Thomas Helme of Surrey. Col. William (20th C.) probably son of Gideon. He served with the 27th Inniskilling Fusiliers. He lived at Knowesouth. His

potted meat (po-'eed-mee', -ee') n. dish made from boiled meat and bones, which sets into a jelly when cooled – ‘We aa killed pigs aboot that time an made the potted meat. An you got the potted meat potted heid’ [TH] (also spelled ‘pot-tit’ etc.).

Potterlamport (po-tur-lam-pör') n. name of a former tower, recorded on Sandison’s c.1590 map, roughly near where the Hermitage Water joins the Liddel. It was recorded in a rental list in the charters of the Douglases of Morton in about 1376, being worth 34 shillings. It could be the ‘Porter-landes’ among lands in upper Liddesdale that belonged to Jedburgh Abbey, as listed in the early 17th century. It was listed in 1632 among the Liddesdale lands of Sandy Armstrong. Robert Scott was tenant there in 1694. In the 1718 Buccleuch survey it is shown as a farm of 550 acres, bounded by Nether Harden, lands of the Laird of Whithaugh and Hillhouse. It also shared a common of 37 acres with the farm of Hillhouse and another of 24 acres with the Laird of Whithaugh’s tenant. It could potentially be the same place as Puddinburn, or else was merely a smaller house nearby. A small stream on the east side of the Liddel Water, between Castleton and Whithaugh is called Pouterlampert Sike and a farmstead is marked there on the 1862–3 Ordnance Survey map. A section of bike trail in the area has also been named ‘Pouter Lampert’ (it is ‘Pouterlampert’ in about 1376, ‘Powterlamppert’ in 1583, ‘Porterlampet’ in 1632, ‘Poterlampet’ in 1694 and ‘Porterlamp’ and ‘Porterlampit’ in 1718; the origin could be Celtic ‘polter’ meaning an upland stream, ‘lann’ meaning open land and ‘pert’, meaning ‘bush’).

pottinger (po-ting-ur) n., arch. a porringer, large bowl-shaped utensil, usually for soups etc., an apothecary, druggist – ‘Given to the Pottingar, 12s’ [PR].

Pott Loch (po-'loch) n. body of water marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map to the south of Clearburn Loch, and perhaps confused with what is now called Kingside Loch. ‘Pot Loch’, which is little more than a pond, sits to the west of Shaw’s Upper Loch, between the Ale and Ettrick valleys.

Potts (pots) n. Adam (19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Agnes Nichol and their children included Elliot (b.1872). Andrew (18th C.) resident of Lillieleaf. His daughter Agnes was baptised in 1732. Andrew Petrie (b.1822) born in Eckford Parish, son of William Hunter and grandson of Thomas. He was a stationer in Edinburgh. George (1793–1851) born in Oxnam Parish, son of Thomas and Andrea Petrie. He was a ‘writer’ (i.e. lawyer) when he subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. Several letters to him from the 1820s are preserved in the Walter Mason Collection. He is also recorded as a ‘writer’ on Buccleuch Street in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory and also writer in Hawick in the 1828 Edinburgh Almanack. He lived on Buccleuch Street, and was also listed there on Pigot’s 1837 directory. He served as solicitor with the Sheriff Court in Hawick, being sometimes described as Procurator Fiscal. He is listed as a joint proprietor on the 1833 electoral roll of Hawick, acquiring a house in Hawick from Robert Heckford of Kelso; Thomas (writer in Edinburgh) and Andrew Petrie (stationer in Edinburgh) are also mentioned, possibly his brother and brother-in-law. In Pigot’s 1837 directory he is listed as agent for Scottish Union insurance. He was recorded as a writer in Hawick in 1838 (relating to the Dicksons), with James Pott, W.S. also a witness (even although he was presumably not related). In 1851 he is a solicitor of the Roxburghshire Sheriff Court, living on Buccleuch Street. In Slater’s 1852 directory (published just after his death) the firm of Potts & Carmichael is listed as writers and notaries on Buccleuch Street; he must have briefly been in partnership with the much younger James Carmichael. He married Janet Anderson in 1837, and she died in 1898, aged 84. Their children included: George, who died in infancy; and Andrew (1838–95), who took over the farm of his uncle John Henderson at Lewenshope, in the Yarrow valley, and married Jessie Mitchell. There is an obelisk to his memory in Jedburgh Abbey cemetery. James (1737/8–1817) Sheriff Clerk for Roxburghshire. He is so recorded in 1780 and in 1799 was recorded as Clerk to the Lieutenancy of Roxburghshire. He may have been son of Thomas. He lived in Jedburgh. He paid tax on a male servant in Jedburgh from 1778 through the 1780s. In 1785–91 he was a writer in Jedburgh when he paid tax for having a female servant. He was writer in Jedburgh in 1785–89 and Sheriff Clerk from 1790 when he paid the Horse Tax. He may have been the James recorded in Kelso in 1786. In 1813 he paid the land tax in Jedburgh. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Betty Campbell and their daughter Isobel was baptised.
in 1817. John (19th C.) from England, he was a resident of Castleton Parish for a while. He married Elizabeth Murray and their daughter Esther was baptised in 1857. In 1861 he was a railway mason living at Wormscleuch. Joseph (19th C.) resident of Lawston in Castleton Parish. In 1832 he acknowledged that he fathered a child with Janet Ogilvie, from Greens. Thomas (18th C.) Sheriff Clerk of Roxburghshire. He is probably the Thomas who paid the window tax in Jedburgh in 1748. He was made an Honorary Burgess of Hawick in 1751. He is probably the Thomas, writer living in Kelso, who taxed for having male and female servants and horses in the period 1785–94 (and Jedburgh in 1788). He is probably the Thomas, married to Agnes Hoghart, whose son James was born in Lilliesleaf Parish in 1795 (with the baptism in Makerstoun). He may also have had a daughter Mary who married Thomas Ainslie and brother of Hawick lawyer George. Thomas (18th/19th C.) member of Hawick Curling Club in 1812. He may be the Thomas, resident of Hawick, who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He may also be the Thomas from Lurgiescleuch who subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. Thomas (19th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish. His children included Nancy (b.1824), Thomas (b.1829), Andrina Petrie (b.1831) and Isabel (b.1834). He was probably son of Thomas And Andrea Petrie. Thomas (19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Janet Scott in 1837; she was daughter of Robert Scott and Agnes Scott, born in Wilton in 1818. Their children include William (b.1838), Robert (b.1840), George (b.1843) and Agnes (b.1845). He was living at Newhouses in 1841 and his widow was there in 1851 and 1861. William Hunter (b.1784) born in Oxnam Parish, son of Thomas. He was probably brother of George, solicitor in Hawick. He lived in Ashkirk Parish, where several of his children were baptised. In 1841 he was a farm worker living at Newhouses in Wilton Parish, and in 1851 he was farmer of 100 acres at Cawfaulds, near Horsleyhill. He married Isabella Mather and their daughter included: Andrew Petrie (b.1822), baptised in Eckford; Thomas; Janet (b.1825); Jane (b.1827); an unnamed son (b.1829); James (b.c.1830); David (b.1833); and Walter (b.1836). William (b.1817/8) originally from Jedburgh, he was farmer at Groundistone. He was listed as steward at Groundistone among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1835. In 1851 he was farmer at Groundiston. His wife was Ann and their children included Agnes, William, John, Isabella, Janet and George. William (19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His wife was Isabella Hermiston and their children included Isabella (b.1863), Thomas (b.1865), George Hamilton (b.1866), William (b.1870) and John Webster (b.1872) (see also Pott, with which it was sometimes synonymous).

Presto’s (pres-töz) n. supermarket built on the site of the former Mactaggart’s skinworks at the corner of Albert Road and Victoria Road in 1977. It was the first large supermarket to be opened in Hawick, was a part of the Allied Suppliers business and was converted to a Safeway in the late 1980s – ‘Throwe time incomers came, Like Fazal Din and Gusto, And then ow’re at the Haugh, There came a bit ca’d Presto’ [IWL].

Preston (pres-tün) n. Rev. David (b.1875) born at Caldercruix in Lanarkshire, son of George and Janet Shanks. He graduated from Glasgow University and was licensed by Hamilton Presbytery in 1899. He became assistant minister at Greyfriars, Dumfries and then was ordained at Ewes in 1901. In 1903 he married Ella Margaret, daughter of James McKillop from Stirlingshire. Their children included: Douglas George (b.1904); Jessie Eleanor Doris (b.1907); and Kathleen Angus (b.1910). Dr. ?? (16th C.) listed as ‘Doctour Prestoun’, when he was the forst man listed as witnes to the final ‘latterwill’ of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1574. This was witnessed in Hawick, so he may have been a local man. George (18th/19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Violet Laidlaw and their children included Margaret (b.1795).

John (15th C.) Parson in Hawick in 1481, ‘John Prestoune of Hawyc … bachelor in decrees and perpetual vicar of Dunlop’. Nothing else seems to be known about him. John (b.1814/5) born in Ashkirk Parish, he was farmer at Wester Middle in Lilliesleaf Parish. In 1861 he was farming 198 acres and employing 5 labourers. He was a widower by then, living with his mother Ann and son Robert. Rev. Thomas minister at Denholm, Minto and Bedrule 1899–1902. Rev. William (17th C.) possible minister at Hassendean in 1638 when the National Convenant was signed in Hawick. The name was apparently hard to transcribe, and the minister at that time was Alexander Forrest, so this may be an error.

pretensic (pree-ten-seek) adj., poet. pretentious – ‘Aye, there ye’ll find ane o’ yer clan, A social, decent, honest man, Wha, void o’ a’ pretensic by, Snirkin’ at sic a din …’ [DH].

Pretoria Day (pre-tō-ree-a-dā) n. commemoration of the taking of Pretoria from the Boers on 5th June 1900. That day coincided with the Tuesday of the Common Riding, and there was a huge parade in the evening in Hawick.

prices (prē-seez) n., pl., arch. the average price, in phrases such as ‘tawe, three or mony prices’ – ‘A’ things is twae prices or dooble dear in thae times’ [GW], ‘The kye brought mony prices at the fair’ [JL] (see also monie prices).

pricker (pri-kur) n., arch., poet. a fast rider, one who spurs on a horse – ‘Jock Ridley ance gaily rode doon To lift my ain horse frae the lea – A riever o’ Tynedale renoun, A Ker-handied pricker was he’ [T], ‘The hunters scoured again the field, prickie an jockie (pri-kee-in-jo-kee) n., arch. a children’s game played with pins, described as ‘similar to Odds or Evens, Teviot. Prickie denotes the point, and Jockie the head of the pin’ (noted by J. Jamieson).

Prickinghaugh (pri-kin-hawch) n. former fortified house in Liddesdale, on the opposite side of the Liddel from Larriston. It may have once been home of Martin Elliot of Braidlie, and is mentioned in a version of the ballad ‘Jamie Telfer o’ the Fair Dodheid’. Martin Elliot (probably grandson of Martin of Braidlie) was recorded there in 1590. In 1632 it was listed among the possessions of Hab Henderson. It was among the farms occupied by Walter Scott of Goldielands in the period 1634–47 A later name used for it was ‘Breaken Tower’. It was said to have been demolished in 1792 to provide building material for a wall (marked on Gordon’s c. 1650 map, on Sandison’s c.1590 map as ‘Pickeringhaw’, on Mercator’s 1670 map as ‘Prickenhauch’; it is ‘Prickenhauch’ in 1613, ‘Prickinhauche’ in 1632 and ‘Prinkinghauch’ in 1655).

pridefu (prird-fi) adj., arch. proud, prideful – ‘...But dinna be pridefu’, but gratefu’ To ken ye’ve been keepit frae wrang’ [FL], ‘...wan A’m seek-staaed o the ...preidh bluistereen that a body offen hes ti thole’ [ECS] (also spelled ‘pridefu’).

priest (preest) n., arch. an urge to defecate without effect – ‘A great priest, a strong but ineffectual inclination to go to stool, a tenesmus, Roxb.; in other counties a ‘praisiss’’ [JoJ].

Priestcrown (preest-croon) n. Priestcrown, former name for Greenbraehead. The origin of the name is obscure, although James Wilson has suggested a link with the chapel dedicated to St. Cuthbert in the Slitrig valley – ‘...While Greenbraehead (in older times Priestcrown) To meet Crowbyres send the signal down’ [WNK] (e.g. on Stobie’s 1770 map and the 1897 Ordnance Survey map).

Priesthaugh (prees-tuf) n. farm in the upper Allan valley, at the southernmost point of the loop in the road from Southfield through to Northhouse. There was once a school here, and a ford was long an alternative to the bridge across the Allan Water nearby. This was the location for the charter signed by James V giving Armstrong’s lands to Maxwell after the hanging of Johnnie Armstrong at Caerlenrig (although it is possible this was another place of the same name, the proximity to Caerlenrig and the King’s recorded itinerary makes this likely). The lands here were formerly part of the Laidship of Ringwood field and in 1501 Robert Elliot of Redheugh inherited them from his grandfather, with Melrose Abbey holding the superiority. ‘Gret Johnnie Elliot’ was there in about 1510. Robert Elliot of Redheugh rented the lands from Melrose Abbey around 1557; at that time it was valued at £5. In 1569 it was part of the lands of Gavin Elliot in Skelfhill, with the tenant then being ‘Jokke Elliot’. In 1574 the tenants ‘Law’s Jock’ Elliot, Alexander ‘Mill’ Elliot and ‘Law’s Tom’ Elliot were among men who Robert Elliot of Redheugh had been ordered by the Privy Council to remove from his lands. Simon Wilson is recorded there in 1623. It was recorded as still part of the Lordship of Melrose in 1634, 1653, 1661 and 1663. Thomas Lauder, as well as shepherds James Grieve and William Grieve were recorded there in 1694. John Wilson was shepherd there in 1716. Gideon Scott was there in at least 1753–57 and William Grieve in 1761. It is described in the 1718 survey carried out for the Duchess of Buccleuch, when it consisted of 1864 acres and was bounded by Peilbrae, Dod, Peelbraehope, Braeide, Langside and Skelfhill. Robert Hall was living there in 1724 and John Scott and John Nichol in 1726–28. Robert Elliot of Mildem Mill leased it from the Buccleuch Estates in 1741. Gideon Scott was farmer there in the latter part of the 18th century. Walter Scott was farmer there in 1785–97 and there were Scotts there in 1821 and around 1860. There were also Hardies in the mid-19th century. About 15 acres of corn there was silted up in the flood of 1846. A spring that lay to the south was once supposed to have healing powers (according to a Presbytery record of 1614). There has been a suggestion that there was once a chapel here (marked in a field to the north of the farm on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map), but there is no evidence for this. Between the farmhouse and Priesthaugh Cottages is an earthwork, on the east side of the burn, measuring about 70 m by 45 m, but washed away on the western side. A cache of gold coins was found on the farm in the late 1700s, later in the possession of Mr. Elliot of Redheugh, and a few years before that a box containing about 120 silver coins were found on the farm. lamb in the Museum was from here. In nearby remote glens there are several plantations, called Scar Plantation, Pyat Sike Plantation, Brae Plantation, Garden Plantation, Heather Wood and Craw Wood. There have been Ride-outs to this farm – ‘...Until I turn’d at Priesthaugh Scrogg, And shot their horses in the bog’ [SWS] (the origin is likely to be simply the Old English ‘pre-ost halh’, meaning ‘the priest’s haugh’, although there is no obvious connection with church lands; the name first appears in 1500 as ‘Prysthauch’, is ‘Preistishauch’e in 1530, ‘Priestishauch’ in 1533, ‘Priesthauch’ in 1557, 1564, 1569, 1621, 1623, 1660, 1663 and 1693, ‘Preistishauch’e in 1634, ‘Priesthaugh’ in 1661 and ‘Priesthaugh’ in 1694; it is ‘Priesthauch’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map as well as de Wit’s c. 1680 map of Scotland.

Priesthaugh (prees-tuf) n. Archibald ‘Aircie’ (16th C.) tenant of Gavin Elliot in Skelfhill who is listed in a bond of 1569 signed in Hawick. He is recorded as ‘Arche Preisthauch’, and ‘Jok’ is also listed. The tenant of Priesthaugh (‘Jokke Elliot’) is separately listed, but presumably the surname derived from that farm in earlier generations. John ‘Jock’ (16th C.) listed as a tenant of the lands of Gavin Elliot in Skelfhill in 1569, along with Archibald, who was surely a close relative. His name is given as ‘Jok Priesthauch’.

Priesthaugh Burn (prees-tuf-burn) n. stream that meets the Skelfhill Burn near Priesthaugh farm, to form the Allan Water. The boggy region at the head of the burn is the Queen’s Mire.

Priesthaugh Cottages (prees-tuf-ko’-ee-jeez) n. cottages just south of Priesthaugh farm.

Priesthaugh-hill (prees-tuf-hil) n. steading where the Cauld Cleuch meets the main part of the Priesthaugh Burn, far to the south of Priesthaugh farm. It appears to be in a different position from Priesthaughshiel, which is marked on Stobie’s 1770 map further up the burn; however, this may just be an inaccuracy in the map. It is listed in the Ordnance Survey Name Book c.1858, with one of the authorities being William Armstrong, who was shepherd there at that time.

Priesthaughshiel (prees-tuf-sheed) n. former steading in the upper part of the Priesthaugh Burn, possibly the same as Priesthaugh-hill. Henry Noble was living there in 1781. Shepherd William Scott died here in the ‘Gonial Blast’ of 1794. Shepherd Adam Scott and his family were there in at least 1820–29. Andrew Rodger and his extensive family was there in 1841 (it is marked on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Priesthaugh Swire (prees-tuf-swIr) n. flat land at the head of the Priesthaugh Burn, probably similar to the Queen’s Mire – ‘Ride by the gate at Priesthaughswire. And warn the Currors o’ the Lee; As ye cum down the Hermitage Slack, Warn doughty Willie o’ Gorrinberry’’ [T].

Priesthaugh Well (prees-tuf-wel) n. spring near Priesthaugh farm. It probably lay to the south of the present farmhouse, but its exact position cannot now be ascertained because the 2 springs on the western side of Gray Coat have been piped to provide water to Priesthaugh farm and Priesthaugh Cottages. It was said that this well possessed healing properties and a 1614 record of Jedburgh Presbytery said that people went there for relief ‘by charm of priest and miracle’. The name is surely connected with the ridge to the south of Priesthaugh, which is called ‘Holy-well Rig’.

Priesthill (preest-hil) n. former farmstead in Castleton Parish, to the east of Newcastleton and further up the Whithaugh Burn from Whithaugh. It is marked on Stobie’s 1770 map near the feature labelled ‘Priesthill Know’ on modern maps. James Riddell was there in 1777.

Priest Hill (preest-hil) n. hill in Liddesdale, north-east of Newcastleton, on the southern side of the valley. It reaches a height of 205 m and is topped with a triangulation pillar. On the north-east slopes is an ancient earthwork consisting of an enclosure about 240 ft by 170 ft, with a double bank and significant ditch. It is similar to the structure on nearby Kirk Hill.

Priesthill Burn (preest-hil-burn) n. stream in Liddesdale that rises on the northern slopes of Stell Knowe, running roughly westwards to become part of Whithaugh Burn.

Priesthill Knowe (preest-hil-burn) n. small hill in Liddesdale, just to the east of Little Whithaugh, to the east of Newcastleton.

Prieston (prees-tin) n. farm just north of Midlem in Bowden Parish, the land having once been the property of Kelso Abbey. Andrew Douglas was there in 1628. In 1678 the South part was owned by William Douglas and the North part by Robert Kerr. It later became property of the Scotts of Harden, sold in about 1912 (the origin of the name is the Old English ‘preost tun’, meaning ‘priest’s farm’; it first occurs as ‘Prestowne’ in 1567 and ‘Prestoune’ in 1586).

Priestrig (preest-rig) n. farmstead between Stouslie and Stintyknowe. This land was apparently set aside for the use of the minister of Wilton after Wilton Common was divided in 1764. John Scott was living there in 1790. The farmstead was also sometimes known as Wilton Common (e.g. in the 1861 census). Thomas Scott was farmer there in 1841, 1851 and 1861. The outlying parish school situated at Stouslie was also sometimes known as ‘Priestrig Schuil’ – ‘There’s Lockie o’ the Stinty Knowes, There’s Nicol o’ Dick-neuk, And Bryson o’ the Prieirst, And Hall into the Heap’ [DJG] (sometimes spelled ‘Priestrigg’ or ‘Priest Rigg’; the ‘rig’ presumably refers to a strip of ploughland).

*the popular name for an extremely old gravestone in Cavers Auld Kirkyard. It was peculiar for being arranged in a direction perpendicular to the others, had a flat top, and contained the date (believed to be spurious) 1517 in the bottom corner. Pringle

Pringle (prîn-ul) n. Adam (18th/19th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He married Mary Hislop and their unnamed son was baptised in Roberton in 1780. He was at Howpasley in 1781 when his daughter Margaret was baptised. Perhaps the same Adam secondly married Margaret Henderson in Roberton in 1789 and was recorded at Philhopehill in that year. This couple’s children included William (b.1789), John (b.1792), Andrew (b.1793), Jeany (b.1795), Elizabeth (b.1797), Robert (b.1799), Margaret (b.1801) and Isabel (b.1805). He could be the Adam, son of William, baptised in Roberton in 1759. Adam (1799–1886) son of Robert and Janet Burnet. He was a shepherd at Howpasley and in the Ettrick valley. He was recorded at Old Howpasley in 1841. He died in 1851 and was at Over Dalglish in 1861. In 1827 in Roberton he married Janet (1805–65), daughter of Adam Scott and Elizabeth Nichol. Their children included: Janet B. (b.1828/9); Elizabeth (b.1830, or ‘Betty’), who married John Nicholson; Robert (b.1833); Adam Scott (b.1834); Margaret (b.1836); William (b.1838); Helen (b.1840); John (b.1843); Thomas (b.1844); and Gideon Scott (1846–1922), shepherd. He died at Over Dalglish.

Principals (prîn-sî-pulz) n. the main participants during the Common Riding, usually referring to the Cornet and Right- and Left-Hand Men, with sometimes also the Acting Father included. The first known photograph of the Principals was taken in 1857. The stabilising of their horses was first undertaken by the Council in 1929. More recently stables have been provided at the top of the Mill Path. Latterly the term has been used to include the main female principals.

Princess Christian’s Brig (prîn-sî-kris-tyinz-brig) n. name once used for the Hummelknowes Bridge over the Slitrig.

Princess Street (prîn-sî-stree’, -seez-) n. main street through Wilton. Originally it referred only to the row of houses on the south side of the eastern end, which was built in 1871. The street was significantly altered and renumbered in the early 1970s, with the incorporation of Wilton Place, Albion Place, Ladylaw Place and part of Wilton Crescent – ‘Somebody tells Willie there wuz a big Hogmanay pairing in the garldins at Princes St.’ [JCo] (named after members of the Royal family).

Princess Anne (prîn-sî-awn) n. (1950– ) the Princess Royal, as President of the British Knitting and Clothing Export Council she has visited Hawick several times. She was at Glebe Mills in 1988. In 1993 she officially opened the modernisations carried out at the High School.

Princess Christian (prîn-sî-kris-tyin) n. (1846–1923) Helena, third daughter of Queen Victoria, who married Prince Christian of Schleswig Holstein Sonderburg Augustenburg in 1866. She came to Hawick to open the Hummelknowes Bridge in 1869.

Princess Royal, as President of the British Knitting and Clothing Export Council she has visited Hawick several times. She was at Glebe Mills in 1988. In 1993 she officially opened the modernisations carried out at the High School.

the Prince’s Knowe (thu-prîn-seez-now) n. former name for a rising piece of ground near Bonchester Hill, where Prince Charlie is said to have encamped when his force marched through the area.

Princesses’ (prîn-sîz-) n. main female principals. In 1929 they were used to include the main female principals.

Pringle (prîng-ul) n. Adam (1850–1906) toll-keeper at the Townfoot Toll-bar in Newcastleton in 1861. In 1851 he was a shepherd at Shankfoot, and he also worked as a labourer. In 1844 he married Mary, daughter of Newcastleton joiner John Cavers. Alexander ‘Sandy’ (15th C.) son of Robert of Smallholm. He served as a squire of the Douglasses, along with his brother George, e.g. the pair witnessed a charter for Archibald, Earl of Douglas in 1433/4. Along with George he was on an assize for lands in Bemersyde in 1425. In 1456 he was on the panel made by George Douglas, Earl of Angus, which acquitted Andrew Ker of Altonburn, who had been accused of assisting the English. He may be the Alexander ‘Pringill’ who witnessed a document between Henry Wardlaw and the Kers of Cessford in 1468. Alexander of Torsonse (d.bef. 1530) early member of the family from the lands near Stow. In 1526 he was ‘Alexander Hoppringill, in Torsonse’ when he was cited for involvement in the ‘Battle of Skirmish Field’ and the death of Ker of Cessford. His sons John, James, George and Adam and his ‘sister-son’ James are also mentioned, along with George Chisholme of that Ilk and 8 others, who were probably all on the side of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch. It seems that he was not convicted of any wrongdoing. He could be the Alexander ‘Hoppringill’ who served as attorney for the Homes of Wedderburn in sasines of 1506 and 1510. Alexander of Whytbank (1632/3–89) only lawful son of James of Whytbank. He was served heir to his father in 1667. He and his wife were supporters of the Covenant. He was a Commissioner for raising money for Cromwell in Scotland in 1655 and became a J.P. for the counties of Edinburgh and Selkirk. In 1662 he was still ‘younger’ when he was fined £3,000 and given a pardon by the King. In 1683 he was listed among the heritors of the Regality of Melrose. He married Anna, daughter of James of Torwoodlee, and she died in 1680. He secondly married Anne, sister of James Murray of Philiphaugh; after his death she married Robert Rutherford of Bowland. He had no children, and succession went to John, grandson of his uncle George of Balmungo. Alexander of Whytbank (1701–73) only son of John. In 1744 he was granted the teinds of lands in Stow (including Hoppringle) following the abolition of Episcopacy. However, he was forced to sell Yair. In 1761 he was recorded as a Commissioner for Selkirkshire. In 1739 he married Susanna, daughter of Sir John Rutherford of that Ilk and Edgerston. His children were: John, who succeeded; Alexander, who succeeded his brother; Patrick, surgeon with the East India Company; William, who was in the navy; Elizabeth, Eleanor, Susanna and Cairncross-Mary, all who died unmarried; Christian, who married Robert Pasley; Joanna, who married Alexander Hay; and Charlotte, who married Thomas Payne. Alexander of Whytbank and Yair (1747–1827) born at Yair, 2nd son of Alexander and Susanna Rutherford of Edgerston. He entered the service of the East India Company in 1766, but retired before 1790, having succeeded his brother John and making his fortune. He paid the land tax for Whytbank and other lands in 1785. He bought back the Yair estate from the Duke of Buccleuch and built a new mansion there. He was listed among the voters of Selkirkshire in 1788. He was taxed for owning a carriage and horses in the 1780s and 90s, for having dogs in 1797, and for having a female servant in 1788, 2 in 1789, 1 in 1790 and 3 in 1791, as well as a male servant in 1788, 2 in 1790, 3 in 1791–94 and 4 in 1797. He was Captain of the Selkirkshire Yeomanry Cavalry (volunteers) for several years until they were disbanded in 1802 and was also Vice-Lieutenant of Selkirkshire. He was apparently visiting the Lord Lieutenant of Selkirkshire (Lord Napier) at Wilton Lodge on the day of the False Alarm, the 2 riding off together to Selkirk after the butler coolly announced ‘My lord, supper is on the table, and the beacon’s blazing’. In the Land Tax Rolls of 1802 he was recorded paying tax at ‘Whitebank, Bashawmill and Thornhole’, as well as Yair and Mill. He was a Commissioner of Supply for Selkirkshire from at least 1802. He was recorded as a freeholder in the Michaelmas Head-Court of Jedburgh in 1811. In 1812 he became Chamberlain of Ettrick Forest. He was suspected of being involved in getting the Galashiel men to switch sides at the Carterhaugh Baa in 1815. He and his son Alexander were listed as Commissioners of Selkirkshire in 1819. He was recorded at Yair in 1825 in relation to a ballot for men to serve in the militia. He was listed as proprietor of Yair in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. He was recorded in letters of 1826 requesting records for the Selkirkshire Yeomanry. In 1789 he married Mary, daughter of Sir Alexander Dick of Prestonfield. Their children were: Alexander (b.1791), who succeeded and was a friend of Sir Walter Scott; John Alexander (b.1792), lawyer with the Bengal Civil Service, whose poetic contributions were printed privately as ‘Remains of John Alexander Pringle, Esq.’ (1841); William Alexander (b.1793), also with the Bengal Civil Service; Mary Agnes (b.1794), unmarried; Susanna (b.1795), who married R.S. Moncrieff, younger of Fossaway; Jane (b.1797), unmarried; Elizabeth (b.1798), who married C.M. Christie of Durie; and Charlotte (b.1799); Margaret Janet (b.1801), who married barrister William Elmsley; Robert Keith (b.1802), with the East India Company; and David (b.1806), also with the Bengal Civil Service, who later purchased Wilton Lodge. He and his sons were well known to Sir Walter Scott, and are referred to in the introduction to Canto II of ‘Marmion’. Alexander ‘Sandy’ of Whytbank (1791–1857), J.P., eldest son of Alexander of Whytbank. He was present at the Carterhaugh Baa in 1815. He was Vice-Lieutenant for Selkirkshire and also Lord of the Treasury for Scotland. He was probably also Captain of the Selkirkshire Yeomanry, like his father before him (with letters related to this in the Walter Mason Collection). He was a Conservative in politics. He was M.P. for Selkirkshire 1830–32 and 1835–46, being defeated by Pringle of Clifton in 1832. He became a member of the Jedforest Club in 1835. He attended the 1839 banquet held at Branxholme to honour the Duke of Buccleuch. He was a friend of Sir Water Scott, accompanying him and Scott of Gala to the field of Waterloo not long after the battle. He married his cousin, Agnes Joanna, 2nd daughter of Sir William Dick of Prestonfield. He had one son, Alexander (b.1837), who succeeded to Whytbank and Yair. Rev. Alexander David (1828–1908) only son of David of Wilton Lodge. He was minister at Blakeney, Gloucestershire. He married Mary Louisa, daughter of Rev. Charles Mackenzie. Their children were: Charles David; Henry Arthur; John Archibald; Fanny Christina; Henrietta Louisa; Isabella Margaret; Amy Cecilia; and Katherine Helen. Alexander of Whytbank (1837–1898) only son of Alexander. In 1870 he married his cousin Mary-Arbuthnot, daughter of Robert Keith Pringle. He had no children, and the estates of Whytbank and Yair went to his widow's brother William, who sold Yair. Alexander ‘Sandy’ (1876–1962) Burns Club Treasurer for 37 years. He also held all other offices at the club and the Pringle Hall was named in his honour. Andrew ‘Dandy’ of Galashiels and Smailholm (d.1585/6) son of John, he was 8th Laird of Smailholm. In 1566 he had a grant of the lands of Galashiels and Mossieleee. He signed the General Band against thieves in 1571. In 1574 he was on the retours for Walter Scott of Branxholme as heir to his great-uncle David Scott, as well as his great-grandfather Sir Walter Scott. In 1575 he was the first of the Hoppringles listed to appear to answer the feu with the Elliots. In 1581 he and his wife entered William Ker, minister of Lindean, in a tenement in Galashiels. In 1582 he was on a list of 37 Border Lairds summoned to appear before the Privy Council. And in 1583/4 he was ‘Andro Hoppringle of Gallowscheillis’ when summoned to appear before the Council with other Border Lairds. He married Mariota (or Marion), daughter of John, 5th Lord Borthwick. His children included: Sir James, who succeeded; Robert of Howlatstown; and Isabella, who married George Pringle of Blindlee. There is a life-size effigy of him over his tomb at Melrose Abbey. After his death his widow married Robert Pringle, tutor of Blindlee and thirdly married John Home. Rev. Andrew (1616/7–89) graduating from Edinburgh University in 1635, he was ‘on the exercise’ (i.e. assistant) at Kirkcaldy in 1639, became Chaplain to the Earl of Angus, and may also have been an assistant in the Presbytery of Selkirk. He became minister at Kirkton in 1646. There was some dispute with the parishioners though, since the heritors had to be order to pay him his teinds soon afterwards. Then in 1649 he was presented to Castleton, being admitted there the following year. In 1662 he witnessed the testament of William Elliot of Harwood. He was one of the few conformist local ministers who were not ousted in the early 1660s. He married Janet Scott in 1648. Their children included Jean, who married John Buchanan of that Ilk, and Elizabeth, who married Colin Campbell of Carwhin. Andrew (17th/18th C.) described as ‘in Haining’. In 1685 he married Janet, daughter of John Rutherford of Edgerston and sister of Thomas Rutherford of Wells. In 1711 he was one of the founder members of the ‘Honest Country Club’ along with John of Haining, who was probably his brother. He is probably the Andrew who was Chamberlain for the Scotts of Bucleuch for the Ettrick Forest parishes 1715–17. He may also be the Andrew to whom Andrew Riddell sold the Haining in 1701. Andrew Lord Alemoor (d.1776) son of John of the Haining. He became an advocate in 1740, 10 years later becoming Sheriff of Wigtosnshire and then Selkirkshire. He became Senator of the College of Justice, Solicitor-General for Scotland and Judge of the Court of Session. He was recorded as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire in 1761. He was raised to the bench as Lord Alemoor, since he had acquired that property. His lands in Roxburghshire were valued at £466 18s 4d. He died at his home of Hawkhill near Edinburgh. Unmarried, his lands went to his brother John of Haining. Andrew (18th/19th C.) farmer at Orchard in Cavers Parish. He was recorded there in 1796 when one of his children was baptised. He was also recorded there as owner of 5 horses on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Additionally he was taxed for having a non-working dog in 1797. He may have married Alexander Gow. His children included: Anthony (b.1796); Margaret Ann (b.1798); James Hall (b.1801); Cicely (b.1803); and Isabella (b.1805). Angelique Lucille (1846–1920) born in Hawick, daughter of Thomas Kedie and Lucille Kennedy. At age 17 she went to India as a hostess to her uncle, who was governor of Calcutta. She also apparently crossed the Sahara desert by camel. She was a nurse at St. Thomas's, London, starting in 1868, moving to the Edinburgh Royal Infirmary in 1872 (where she became Matron) and returning to St. Thomas's in 1887 as Matron. However, she resigned in 1890, when she converted to Catholicism. Afterwards she travelled the world advising on nursing issues. She was the founder of the Training School for Nurses at the Royal Infirmary, and sometimes credited with establishing the modern method of hospital nursing. She was a personal friend and devotee of Florence Nightingale, who called her ‘Pearl’ and ‘Little Sister’. Her letters are in the British Museum. There is a memorial brass tablet in the chapel of the Royal Infirmary. Ann (18th/19th C.) grocer and draper on the High Street, listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. She could be the same shopkeeper listed at West Port on the 1841 census, probably married to Robert and with daughter Margaret. Archibald of Whytbank (17th/18th C.) became a Burgess of Hawick in 1724, presumably this being Honorary. This may be an error for Alexander. David of Smailholm and Pilnuir (d.1480) son of Robert, he succeeded his brother Robert in the 1470s. However, he is recorded as being of Smailholm or of Pilmuir several times through the 1440s, 50s and 60s. Along with his brothers George and Alexander he accompanied William, Earl of Douglas to the Papal Jubilee in Rome in 1450. In 1457 he attached his seal to an indenture by George, Earl of Angus, appointing Andrew Ker of Cessford as Baillie of the Lordship of Jedforest, since Ker did not have a seal of his own. He served as Ranger of the Ward of Tweed in the 1460s. In 1464/5 he was one of the witnesses to the sasine granting Kirkton Mains and the Flex to William Douglas of Drumlanrig. In 1468 he had a charter for the lands of Pilmuir. In 1471 he was a witness at Borthwickshiels of the infeftment of Walter, son and heir of Andrew Ker of Cessford. In 1474 he was summoned to Edinburgh by the King, probably relating to keeping peace on the Border. In 1479 he gave his seal to an obligation involving the Kers of Cessford. He may be the David ‘junior’ who in 1478 had his fine remitted for killing deer at his dwelling. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir William Dishington of Ardross. In their old house in Galashiels there was said to be this inscription – ‘Elspeth Dishington Builded me. In synlye: The things thou canst not get, Desyre not’. His children included: James, who succeeded; Adam of St. John’s Chapel; and Thomas of Wrangholm (recorded as a witness in about 1490). David of Tinnis (d.1512) natural son of James of Smailholm, and brother of David of Smailholm, being sometimes called ‘senior’ in distinction. He was tenant of the lands of Tinnis or Tynnes in the Yarrow valley. He was Ranger of the Ward and later made Receiver of the whole Forest. He was witness in 1484/5 to a sasine for lands at Mangerton to Walter Scott of Brancholme: James Pringle was also a witness, along with several other local men. He leased the lands of Torwoodlee and Toftness in 1486, along with his wife Mariota. He may be the David who is recorded along with William on a document relating to Ruecastle in 1491. He may be the same ‘David Hoppingill in Tynnes’ who was one of the ‘Sheriffs of Roxburgh in that part’ in a charter of 1494 for lands in Hassendean and the same ‘in le Tynnes’ who was one of 4 men who held lands in Boonraw, which which passed to Robert Scott of Stirches in 1504/5. In 1494/5 he served as surety for men called Mark from Tinnis. He was also recorded in 1494/5 as Coroner for Tweeddale at the Justice-aire held in Selkirk; he was fined for not producing Archibald Ormiston. He was recorded several times around 1500 in the Exchequer Rolls in regard to lands in Yarrow and as ranger of the Ward of Tweed. In 1502 he leased the lands of Galashiels, Blindlee and Mossilee. Also in 1502 he was fined at the Justice-aire for failing to enter Richard Davidson in Primside. In 1508 ‘David Hoppringill in Tenneis’ was on the panel for Adam Hepburn inheriting the Lordship of Liddesdale, and is probably the same David who witnessed the associated sasine. He was re-assigned Tinnis in 1509. In 1509 he was on the panel for Adam Hepburn inheriting Alemoor, witnessed charters for Colville of Ochiltree and was mentioned in a charter for William, son of James of Smailholm. And in 1510 David ‘of Tynnes’ is recorded having 5 horses stolen from him by Thomas Dalgleish in Braidhaugh. He also had oxen stolen from him at ‘Bochill’ (possibly ‘Bowhill’). In 1512 he gave his consent to a charter for lands in Ettrick Forest being granted to the Commendator of Kelso. He may have married Mariota Murray of Philiphaugh. David of Galashiels and Smailholm (d.c.1535) eldest son of James and brother of William of Torwoodlee. He was sometimes called ‘junior’, to distinguish him from David of Tinnis. In 1507–10 he leased the crown lands of Galashiels, Mossilee and Blindlee. In 1510 he had a charter for lands in Ettrick Forest as well as for rentals in Lauderdale. Also in 1510 he was among Pringles and others convicted of cutting down part of Ettrick Forest. He lost brothers, a son and a brother-in-law at Flodden. In 1519 he was among the large group of Borderers who rode against the Earl of Arran and in 1526 in the group that tried to free the boy King from the Douglases near Melrose (at Pringle’s Bridge). He signed a bond in 1525 to support the Earl of Angus as Warden of the Marches. Also in 1525 he was on the panel of retourn for Gordon of Stichill, along with James and George. He is recorded in documents in the ‘Selkirk Protocol Books’ in 1527, mentioning John as his heir. In 1532 he resigned his lands of Caverhill into the hands of their superior. He is probably the David who witnessed a document for Melrose Abbey in 1534. Through marriage he gained Woodhouse in Peeblesshire and Whytbank and Redhead in Selkirkshire. He was married twice, his first wife being Marion and his second Margaret, daughter of Sir Thomas Lundie. His children were: David, who died at Flodden; John, who succeeded; James of Woodhouse and Whytbank; William; Agnes; Christian, who married John Rutherford of Hunthill; Janet, who married George Brown of Coalston; and Margaret. In 1529 he appointed his wife, Margaret, and first-born son with her, James, as executors, with his moveable goods to go to his 4 daughters. In 1541 his widow Margaret Clunie and son James claimed tenancy of Reidhead farm in Tweeddale. David of Smailholm (d.1513) eldest son of David of Galashiels and Smailholm. His brothers included John of Galashiels and James of Whytbank. He was killed at Flodden. David (16th C.) listed in the 1574 last testament of Sir Walter of Braxholme. He was probably a factor or chamberlain or held some similar position. David of Torquhan (19th C.) owner of lands on Gala Water that had traditionally belonged to the Pringles. He was tenant farmer at Hyndlee for about 17 years in the later 1800s. One of his children was Col. Hall-Grant (b.1876). Maj. David of Carriber (1790–1876) eldest son of John of Carriber and Mary Walker. He was born at Cranston, Midlothian. He served with the 7th Regiment of Bengal Native Infantry and retired with the rank of Major in 1835. He was probably the Maj. Potts who was at Hawick in 1837 for the election (at which there was so much trouble from the crowd). He had one brother who died in India, and another who was Robert, farmer at Bairnkine, Southdean. He became a member of the Jedforest Club in 1830. He left Carriber to his nephew, John. David (1806–89) of Wilton Lodge, which he inherited through marrying James Anderson’s daughter, Mary. He was son of Alexander of Whytbank and Mary Dick, and younger brother of Alexander of Yair. He was born at Yair, youngest of 11 children, and educated in Selkirk and then in England, at Durham Grammar School and Haileyburgh College. He trained as a lawyer and in 1824 started service with the East India Company, surviving the fire on his ship ‘The Kent’, on which about 100 people perished. He worked as a magistrate in several locations. Returning to Britain for 3 years in 1839, he stayed at Friarshaugh near Melrose. He was then judge at Purneah and left India for the last time in 1851 with a pension and the rank of Lieutenant Colonel in the Bengal Infantry. He settled in Hawick after marrying the heiress of Wilton Lodge estate. He was responsible for the extensive remodelling of Wilton Lodge in 1859, including the monogrammed letters ‘DMP’ and biblical quotations; he was quite religious, being filled, it is said, with ‘the love of country, the love of letters, the love of God’. He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1863. He was recorded at Wilton Lodge in a directory of 1868. A keen horseman, he can be seen on horseback at the stables of Wilton Lodge in a photo, probably in the 1880s. He became known locally as a philanthropist. He was Chairman or Governor of at least three Hawick savings banks, including Hawick Working Men’s Building and Investment Co., Ltd. (1864–89), Hawick Savings Bank (1865–89) and Hawick Heritable Investment Bank, Ltd. (1876–89). He was also Chairman of Wilton Parochial Board and of Hawick Combination Poorhouse. He was a member of the Jedforest Club and served as a Commissioner of Supply and Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire, as well as being on the county Prison Board. He was a Vice-President of the local division of the Evangelical Alliance. After his death the Town purchased Wilton Lodge from his trustees, and the present house is much as it was when he lived there. In 1827 he married Frances, daughter of Alexander Tod of Alderston, and she died in 1856 at Pau. In 1858 he secondly married Mary, heiress of James Anderson of Wilton Lodge. His children were: Rev. Alexander David; Amy Elizabeth, who married Rev. H.C. Ripley; and Frances Jane, who married James Christie and secondly Theobold von Fischer. His boot jack is in the Museum. David (b.1839) younger son of James Hall and Jane Hogarth. He farmed at Cleithaugh in Southdean Parish. His wife was Jane and their children included: Hall G.; Frances E. and Dorothy M. Douglas see John Douglas Francis (18th C.) Sheriff-Deputye for Roxburghshire. He was a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire in 1685. George (d.c.1459) son of Robert of Pilmuir and Smailholm. In 1427 he was part of the inquest for William being served heir to his father Sir William Douglas of Drumlanrig in the Barony of Hawick; there he is ‘Jeorgeum de Hoppryngile’. Along with his brother Alexander he was a squire for the Earl of Douglas. He is recorded as ‘George Hoppryngile’, attorney to Archibald, Earl of Douglas (or possibly Alexander Murray, since the transcription is ambiguous) in 1428/9. The document was the ‘instrument of sasine’ for the Barony of Hawick being served to William, son of Sir William Douglas of Drumlanrig. In 1429/30 he is probably the George ‘Hoppryngile’ who was on the ‘retour’ panel for the lands of Caerton. He witnessed (along with his brother Alexander) a charter for the Earl of Douglas in 1433/4. In 1437 he was one of 2 ‘procurotrators’ for Alexander of Weens when he resigned his lands of Weens into the hands of the Baron.

representatives of the Pringles and Elliots in 1575. Many injuries and the Privy Council summoned law to decide the matter ended in a fight with hating English to burn lands around Jedburgh. Either he or an earlier George was ‘scutiferus’ in a document for Melrose Abbey in 1415. George (15th C.) witness to the sasine for the Barony of Hawick given to James Douglas of Drumlanrig in 1484 at the Mote. His name is recorded as ‘Georgio de Pryngyle’. It is unclear which branch of the family he belonged to. Possibly the same ‘Georgio Pringyll’ witnessed another document for the Douglasses of Drumlanrig in 1501, relating to the lands of Lairs. George of Torwoodlee (1505–68) son of William, the first Laird, who was killed at Flodden. In 1526 he was among the large number of Borderers pardoned for their march (along with the Homes and Walter Scott of Branxholme) against the Earl of Arran. In 1534 he brought a case against a woman in Selkirk for theft. In 1535 he was involved in a dispute with the Burgh of Selkirk and in 1540 had a dispute over sheep on his lands. In 1541 he was tenant of Caddonlee in Tweed, as well as claiming Torwoodlee. He is probably the ‘George Hoppringill’ who signed a bond of assurance with Somerset at Kelso in 1547, along with many other Border lairds. Also in 1547 he witnessed a document with other Pringles (in the Selkirk Protocol Books). In 1548 he was ‘found surety’ for the crime of helping ‘our ancient enemies of England’. He was implicated in the murder of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch in Edinburgh in 1552, accused of providing 2 horses to aid the escape of the Laird of Cessford. He was himself murdered by Elliots and others, perhaps led by Martin Elliot of Braidlie. In 1564 he was ‘Guidman of Torwoodlie’ when listed among Border lairds who were ordered to support the warden, Ker of Cessford. He is recorded in 1607 as ‘George Hoppringill of Torwoodlie’ at the trial for his murder. The action was brought by his grandsons George, James and David, against John Elliot of Copshaw; it is unclear why there was such a lengthy delay, but in 1570 a ‘day of law’ to decide the matter ended in a fight with many injuries and the Privy Council summoned representatives of the Pringles and Elliots in 1575 to settle the feud. The other men named, ‘Martin’s Hob’ and ‘the Laird’s Jock’, were presumably already dead by the time of the 1607 trial. The claim was that he was killed in a raid on Torwoodlee by about 300 men ‘of the haill Clannis of the Airmestranigs, Ellotes, Batiesones, Grahames and remanent Clannis’, who grabbed him out of his bed and took him to ‘Skaldeneise’ where they killed him, after ransacking his estate. He married Margaret Crichton of Cranston Riddell and had 10 children, including William, who succeeded. George of Torwoodlee (d.1637) 4th Laird, son of William. In 1607 he and his brothers James and David brought an action against John Elliot of Copshaw and others for the murder of his grandfather. He inherited a quarter of the lands of Clifton in 1610. He was appointed keeper of the rolls for the Justices of the Peace in Selkirkshire in 1610. He was an M.P. for Selkirkshire in 1617 and 1621 and became Sheriff of Selkirkshire in 1624. He is recorded in records of the Regality of Melrose in the 1620s. He married Margaret, daughter of James Pringle of Whytbank and secondly married Elizabeth Richardson of Smeaton. He was succeeded by his son James, who was also M.P. George of Torwoodlee (d.1689) 6th Laird, son of James. In 1654 he had sasine of lands in Lilliesleaf. In 1662 he was fined and pardoned by the King. He was an active Royalist and resister of Episcopalianism. He owned lands in Maxton Parish in 1678. He helped the Earl of Argyll escape from Scotland in 1681; the Earl was accompanied from Edinburgh to Torwoodlee by Rev. John Scott, minister of Hawick. He then lived in concealment and in 1684 fled to Holland to escape capture (along with Sir Patrick Home of Polwarth), whereupon his 16 year old son was imprisoned and threatened with torture unless he divulged who had given the warning to him. He was involved in a disastrous uprising in 1685, but again managed to flee. His estates were then confiscated, but they were restored at the Revolution. He was made M.P. for Selkirkshire in 1689, but died a few months later (probably before receiving full reward for his efforts in the previous decade). In 1654 he married Janet Brodie of Lethen. His children were: James, who succeeded; Janet; Anna, who married Alexander Don of Rutherford; Sophia, who married her cousin James Pringle of Greenknowe; and Jean. George Turnbull (b.1810) youngest son of Robert and Ann Buckham. He was a gardener (and perhaps butler with a local family), but later became a licensed grocer at 12 Back Row (later Francis Henderson’s). In the 1834 electoral roll...
he was listed along with his brothers Robert and James, as joint proprietors in a house. He was listed as a grocer on the Back Row in Slater's 1852 directory. He married Janet Wallace, from St. Boswells. Their children (baptised in Minto Parish) included: Robert (b.1836); Hannah Dickson (b.1837); Annabella Buckham (b.1839); Euphemia (b.1841); and George (b.1843). One of his daughters carried on his business, until she married Thomas Charters, after which the business was taken over by John Henderson. George (b.1829/30) handloom weaver in Hawick. In 1851 he married Margaret, daughter of Andrew Ekron. George (1843/4–81) son of Hawick merchant George Turnbull. He was apprenticed to a Selkirk engineer and in 1866 left to work for an oil merchant’s in Bradford. Later setting up business with a Mr. Cunningham, he settled in Manchester in 1874. However, he died after contracting diphtheria from one of his children, at the age of 37. He wrote some poetry and was a friend of J.C. Goodfellow, who wrote a verse on his death. His wife was Lydia Mary, who died in Middlesborough in 1930, aged 85. He was buried in the Wellogate. Gideon (1846–1922) son of Adam and Janet Scott, he was born in Robertson Parish. He was a shepherd. In 1827 he married Agnes, daughter of William Walker in Rowantree Toll Bar. Their children included: Robert (b.1836/7); James Dunn; John (b.1838); William; and James (of Pilmuir). In 1838 he married Sibella Carnichael. He was succeeded by his son James, and also had a daughter, Margaret. Lundie. He succeeded to Whytbank house and Whytbank (d.1563) son of David and Sibilla Carnichael. Like his father he acted as Ranger of the Ward of Tweed. He held this office from at least 1447, with the lease of ‘Redehede’ and Blindlee as his fee. He was on the panel in 1484 where James Douglas was served heir to his father in the Barony of Hawick. He was also the first listed witness to a sasine of 1484/5 relating to Walter Scott of Branchholme and the lands of Mangerton. In 1488 he had a 19 year lease from the King for the lands of Blindlee, Galashiels and Mosslee. In 1493 George Turnbull of Bedrule, David Waugh from Bedrule and weaver William White had remission for stealing cattle from his farm at Pilmuir. He is probably the James of Smallholm who acted as surety for Patrick Gledstains in Hummelknowes in 1494/5. David Waugh in Bedrule and Hawick had remission for stealing from his farm of Pilmuir in 1494/5. He married Elisabeth (also known as Isobel), daughter of Patrick Murray of Philiphaugh. His children were: David, who succeeded; William, 1st Laird of Torwoodlee, who died at Flodden; Alexander, 1st Laird of Trinylvknowe, who also died at Flodden; John, 1st Laird of Blindlee, also died at Flodden; Isabella, who married David Home of Wedderburn, who died at Flodden; and an illegitimate son, David of ‘Tynnes’ (or Tinnis). James of Tinnis (d.1546) son of Alexander of that Ilk. He was probably the James who was among the men pardoned in 1527 for their role in the Battle of Skirmish Field. He is probably also the James who witnessed an agreement between James Murray of Falahill and Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme in 1528. He may be the James who held a tenement in Selkirk according to a document in 1528. In 1529 King James V granted him (and his wife, Sibilla Carmichael) the lands of ‘Tynnis’ and in 1529/30 Gilbert Chisholm granted sasine to him and his wife. He witnessed a document for David of Galashiels and Smallholm in 1529 (and was there stated to be his brother). In 1530 he was recorded as a witness in Selkirk to proceedings taken against Patrick Murray, Sheriff of Selkirk. He was probably the James who in 1532 acted as an arbitrator for Isabel Murray in a dispute with her son Walter Scott in Headshaw. In 1535 his ‘first born son’ James gave notice of ejection of his father’s tenants from Buckholm. In 1541 he was recorded holding the lands of ‘Tynnes’ in feu, as well as being tenant in ‘Dricheuchschele’ in Ettrick. He was captured at the Battle of Solway Moss in 1542, and not released for 3 years. He was mentioned in 1542 in reference to tenants in a dispute with Alexander of Craigleith. In 1546 he was part of the bond of peace signed between the Scotts, Turnbulls, Cranstons, Kers, etc. He married Sibella Carnichael. He was succeeded by his son James, and also had a daughter, Margaret. David ‘second son of James Hoppringill’ recorded in 1543 could also be his son. James of Woodhouse and Whytbank (d.1563) son of David and Margaret. Lundie. He succeeded to Whytbank in 1510, and the family’s Peeblesshire estates on the death of his father. He is said to have accompanied James V to Solway Moss in 1542 and was taken prisoner, but this may have been a different James (of Buckham). In 1547 he witnessed a document with other Pringles (in the Selkirk Protocol Books). He married Margaret Ker of Linton; she later married Sir David Home of Wedderburn, died in 1580 and was buried at Melrose Abbey. Their children were: Robert, who predeceased him; James, who succeeded to Whytbank; George, tenant of Netherton; Alexander; William; John; David, possibly the ‘pothecar’ who witnessed a discharge in 1580; Marion, who married...
George of Blindlee and secondly married William Home of Bassendean. James of Torsonce (16th C.) probably son of Thomas. In 1581/2 he and his wife Elizabeth Edmondson had sasine for an annual rent in ‘Bowschank’. James of Whytbank (d.c.1625) son of James and Margaret Kerr. He was a strong Royalist supporter, as a result of which he lost his Peeblesshire estates. In 1571/2 he signed a bond to act against Borders thieves. In 1574 he was on the retours for Walter Scott of Branxholme as heir to his great-uncle David Scott, as well as his great-grandfather Sir Walter Scott. He could also be the ‘James Hoppringill’ listed in the 1574 last testament of Sir Walter, being owed ‘for his fie’. In 1575 he was ordered to appear in reference to the feud between the Pringles and the Elliots. He was one of the Border Lairds summoned in 1583/4 to give assurances for keeping peace on the Border and in 1591 was one of the Lairds who had to promise to serve the Wardens and pursue the Earl of Bothwell. He was on the 1601 jury following the Kerr and Turnbull feud in Jedburgh. He married Marion, daughter of Andrew Murray of Blackbarony and secondly Juliane, daughter of Sir David Home of Wedderburn. His children included: James, who predeceased him (c.1616), but whose son James succeeded; Robert, who was probably the ‘Robert Hoppringle, son to the gude-man of Quhytebank’ who was imprisoned in Edinburgh Tolbooth for being part of the ‘Royal High School Riot’ of 1595; and Margaret, who married John Pringle of that Ilk. His son James succeeded to his lands of ‘Reidheid’ in 1607. Sir James of Galashiels (d.1635) son of James, who was the only son of Andrew Hoppringle of Smailholm and Galashiels (although some accounts have only one James). During his minority his ‘tutors’ were Walter Riddell of that Ilk and his son Andrew, Robert Pringle of Langshaw and John Pringle of Buckholm. He was imprisoned following firing of pistols in a feud with George of Blindlee in 1598. He became a Commissioner for Peace in Selkirkshire in 1610. He had a charter of ‘Sellarhauchie’ from the Commendator of Melrose in about 1620. He was M.P. for Selkirkshire in 1621 and 1630 and became Sheriff-Principal in 1622. In 1628 he was given a commission to hold a trial for 2 women accused of witchcraft. He may have married a daughter of Kerr of Linton (possibly William). His children were: David, who married Margaret, daughter of Walter Scott of Harden, and died before him; James, who married Jean, daughter of Sir John Scott of Scotstarvet; John, last of Smailholm, who died without issue; George, Sheriff-Depute of Selkirkshire, who also died before his father; Jean, who became heir and married Hugh Scott of Deuchar, son of ‘Auld Wat’, and who thereby became the first Scott of Gala; Isobel, who married Sir John Murray of Philiphaugh; and 2 other daughters who married ministers. James of Whytbank (1593/4–1667) son of James and Christian, daughter of William Lundin of that Ilk. He succeeded his grandfather in 1622, his father having already died. He was M.P. for Selkirkshire 1628–33 and was a Commissioner of Defence for the county in 1643 and Commissioner of War in 1648. He was appointed a Commissioner of Supply in 1661 and a Justice of the peace for Selkirkshire in 1663. He was known as a great loyalist and was fined by Parliament in 1646. He added Yair to the family estates and also became the male representative of the Pringles of Galashiels and Smailholm (on the extinction of the male line of Pringle of Gala). He married Sophia Schoneir, who was a maid of honour to Anne of Denmark. His only son was Alexander, and he also had an illegitimate son, William. James of Torwoodlee (d.1657) son of George. He was M.P. for Selkirkshire in 1641 and 1645 and was appointed Sheriff of Selkirkshire in 1646. In 1654 he was served heir to his father’s lands of Corslie within Ettrick Forest and ‘Cockslandis’ in the village of Lilliesleaf. In 1620 he married Jean, daughter of Sir Richard Cockburn of Clerkington. In 1628 he secondly married Janet, daughter of Sir Lewis Craig of Riccarton. His son George was also an M.P. James (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when he was listed among the ‘Cottars’ on the Hearth Tax roll there. He could be the James who witnessed baptisms in 1689 for John Veitch and in 1691 for Robert Veitch and for James Scott. In 1694, along with William Brown, he witnessed a baptism for William Tait. James of Torwoodlee (1665–1735) son of George. He was imprisoned in 1684 and threatened with torture if he did not tell them who helped his father flee to Holland. In 1689 after the Revolution he was made an officer in the cavalry corps of Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire. His father died in 1689, in 1690 all of the family estates were restored to him and in 1694 he was served heir to hi father. He was M.P. for Selkirkshire 1693–1702. He contributed the large sum of £1300 to the Darien Scheme in 1695. In 1714 he was appointed Captain of a company of cavalry raised to organise defence against the forces of ‘the Pretender’. In 1690 he married Isabel, eldest daughter of Sir John Hall of

Dunglas. His children were: George, who succeeded, but died unmarried; John, who died at sea; James of Bowland, who was a principal Clerk of Session, and whose son James succeeded his uncle; Katherine, who married Sir Robert Pringle of Stichill; Janet; Sophia, who married Adam Fairmont of Greenhill; Marion, who married John S. Ker of LittleDean; Isabel; Margaret; and Ann. Sir James of Stichill (1726–1809) son of Sir Robert and Katherine Pringle. He was ‘junior’ when listed among the Commissioners for Roxburghshire in 1761. He was M.P. for Berwickshire 1761–79 and succeeded as Baronet in 1779. In 1780 he was added to the voters’ roll for Roxburghshire. He was Commander of the Roxburghshire Yeomanry Cavalry. He was listed among the voters of both Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire in 1788, but it was said that ‘it is likely he will be averse to vote, as he will not like the oath’. He was taxed for owning carriages and horses, and for having several male and female servants in the 1780s and 1790s. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Norman MacLeod of that Ilk. His children included: Mary, who married George Baillie of Jerviswood; Robert, who married his cousin and pre-deceased his father; Eliza, who married Archibald Todd of Drygrange; Sir John, who also married a cousin, and succeeded to Stichill; and Sir Norman, who succeeded his brother. James of Bowland and Torwoodlee (1758/9–1840) only son of James and grandson of James of Torwoodlee, who was M.P. for Selkirkshire. He was educated in Cambridge and Leyden, and studied for the bar, but never practised. He succeeded to his uncle’s lands of Torwoodlee, sold his father’s lands of Bowland and also acquired Buckholm and Williamlaw from other Pringles. He was listed as a voter in Roxburghshire in 1788; he was described at that time as being ‘rich’ and probably siding with Rutherford of Edgerston in the election. He owned Buckham, Williamlaw and Ladhopemuir. He was also listed as a voter in Selkirkshire and brother-in-law of the Sheriff of Selkirkshire, Andrew Plummer. He was a Commissioner of Supply for Selkirkshire from at least 1802. He was additionally listed along with his son (James junior) as Commissioners of Roxburghshire in 1819. He paid tax for having male and female servants in the period 1785–97, for owning a carriage in the period 1785–98 and for horses and dogs in 1797. He raised the Selkirkshire Corps of Border Yeomanry in 1797 and was their Captain at the time of the False Alarm in 1804. He was also present at the Carterhaugh Baa in 1815. He was Convener of Selkirkshire for more than 50 years and was proposed as Vice-Lieutenant of the county in 1827. In 1782 he married Elizabeth, daughter and co-heiress of Charles Tod of Drygrange. Their children were: James, Vice-Admiral and successor; Charles, who died young; George, who married Ann Stewart; Alexander, who was lost in a wreck; and Frances, only daughter, who died in Edinburgh. James of Torwoodlee (1783–1859) son of James. He joined the Navy in 1797 and retired as a Rear-Admiral in 1846. He was listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805. He became Deputy Lieutenant of Roxburghshire in 1820 and served as a Commissioner of Supply and Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. He succeeded his father in 1840 and also succeeded to his brother’s lands of Trinlyknowe. He was succeeded by his son Commander James Thomas. His other children were: Capt. Charles; George; Elizabeth Mason; Frances; Mary; and Jane. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1822 he married Ann Murray, who was from Robertson. Their children included: Walter (b.1834); and John (b.1835). James (b.1796) son of Robert and Ann Buckham. He was cousin to the founder of Robert Pringle & Sons, and had a brother who was also Robert. He was a stockingmaker and warehouseman in Hawick. In 1841 the family were living at ‘Greenwind foot’, in 1851 at 12 O’Connell Street (probably the modern No. 4) and in 1861 at 7 O’Connell Street. He married Beatrice Scott, who was from Deanburnhaugh, daughter of old Peggy Anderson; she was said to be ‘great for simples (herbs)’. Their children included: Margaret, who must have died young; Helen (b.1836); Elizabeth Miller (b.1838), who married mill furnisher George Scott; Robert (b.1839); Isabella (b.1841); Thomas (b.1843); John (b.1845); and Margaret (again, b.1848). James Hall (1801–74) born in Hawick Parish. He was tenant farmer at Hyndlee, recorded in the 1860s. He was also recorded as farmer as Cleithaugh in 1868. He married Jane Mary Hogarth (1803–50). Their children were: George Hogarth (1830–72), a surgeon in Sydney, Australia, who died at sea; Andrew: David, who farmed at Cleithaugh; Mary Miller; Margaret Preston; and Elizabeth Jane. James Thomas of Torwoodlee (1832–1902) son of Vice-Adm. James. He retired from the Royal Navy with the rank of Commander. He was Deputy Lieutenant for Selkirkshire and J.P. for Selkirkshire and Roxburghshire. He also founded Torwoodlee Golf Club. He was a member of the Jedforest Club. In 1862 he married Annie-Parminter, only daughter of Col. James Lewis Black, who was wounded at Waterloo. He was succeeded by James-Lewis. James butcher at 56 High Street, continuing the business started by his great-grandfather in 1902. He has received multiple Scottish Craft Butcher awards and other prizes for his speciality sausages, black puddings and Scotch pies. Janet (b.c.1790) grocer and spirit dealer on the High Street. She was at about No. 39 on the 1841 census, living with her sons Thomas and Robert. She is probably Janet Kedie, who married John, who was proprietor of a public house on the Sandbed in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. Janet (b.c.1800) grocer on the High Street in Pigot’s 1837 directory. She was located at about 7 High Street in 1841. She could be the Janet who was an unmarried seamstress at about 25 High Street in 1851. J.B. see John Balfour Jean (18th/19th C.) member of the local family, perhaps a daughter of the Robert recorded in the family bible. Before 1798 she owned the bottom part of 8 Fore Row (now 22 Drumlanrig Square). John of that Ilk and Torsance (d.c.1555) son of Alexander of that Ilk. He may be the ‘Jok a Pringill’ accused by the English in 1543 of leading raids, along with the Laird of Mow. He is listed in 1549 among the associates of Walter Ker of Cessford who were accused of helping the English in raids upon the farms of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme, including Goldielands and elsewhere. His children included: Thomas, who succeeded; Michael; James ‘in the Bow’; Archibald of Torquhan; Elizabeth, Prioress of Coldstream; and Margaret, who married Clement Mauchan of Pitlon, Cramond. John of Galashiels and Smailholm (d.c.1566) son of David. He succeeded his father about 1535, his older brother David having died at Flodden. He may be the John ‘in Reidheid’ (essentially the same as Whytbank) who was one of the large number of Borderers listed along with Walter Scott of Branxholme for rising up against the Earl of Arran, for which they had remission in 1526; his brother Robert was also listed, along with 7 other Pringles. In 1541 he was recorded occupying the lands of ‘Galloschelis’. The rentals from his farms in Lauder are listed in 1542 and he was involved in a dispute involving the teinds in Lauder in 1545. In 1547 he witnessed a document with other Pringles (in the Selkirk Protocol Books). He was among the men accused in 1549 of helping the Kers and English attack the farms of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme; the other Pringles on the list were John of Torsance and Robert of Overcleuch. He is probably the ‘Guidman of Galloschelis’ listed in 1564 among Border lairds who were ordered to support the warden, Ker of Cessford. He married Margaret, daughter of Sir James Gordon of Stichell and Lochinvar; after his death she remarried to John Hoppringle of Wrangholm. His children were: Andrew, who succeeded; David of Bardar- roch; James; Isabella, who married William Gordon of Crauchlaw; Margaret, who married Andrew Rutherford of Hundalee; and other daugh- ters who married Andrew Haliburton of Muirhouselaw, a Borthwick and an Inglis. John of Galashiels and Smailholm (d.1650) 3rd son of Sir James. He was the last in the male line of the Pringles of Smailholm, being served heir to his father’s lands in 1641. In 1643 he was recorded as owner of ‘Smailholm-craigs’ In 1645 the lands of Smailholm were granted to Sir William Scott of Harden, these lands having been in Pringle hands since at least 1459. In 1645 he was probably the John ‘sometime of Smailholme’ who was part of an armed gang of about 100 men who attacked farms and harassed tenants in the Parish of Stow, belonging to Robert of Blindlee and John Haliburton, younger of Muirhouselaw. After his death the representative of that family became James Pringle of Whytbank. John (17th C.) eldest son of Robert of Stichill. He married Margaret, daughter of Walter, 1st Earl of Buc- cleuch. Their children included: Sir Robert, who succeeded his grandfather to Stichill; Walter of Graycrook; Katherine; Francis of Rowiston; John; James; William; and Elizabeth. It is possible he was father of Jean, who married Thomas Scott of Todrig. Sir John of Stichill (1662–1721) son of Sir Robert. He contributed £500 to the Darien Scheme in 1695. In 1688 he married Magdelen, daughter of Sir Gilbert Elliott of Stobs. Their children included: Gilbert, in the Dragoons; Wal- ter, who was an advocate and Sheriff of Rox- burghshire; Margaret, who married Sir James Hall of Dunglass; Katherine, who married William Hamilton of Bangour; Sir Robert, who suc- ceeded; and Sir John, who succeeded his brother, and was President of the Royal Society. His wife died in 1739 and is buried at Stichill. John of Whytbank (1678–1702) son of John, minister of Fogo, and grandson of George of Balmungo. In 1689 (while still a minor) he succeeded Alexander of Whytbank, who was his father’s cousin; he was further served as heir in 1695. He was appointed a Commissioner of Supply for Selkirk- shire in 1698. In 1699 he married Margaret, eldest daughter of Sir Patrick Scott of Ancrum, and she died in 1770, aged 89, outliving him by 68 years. Their children were: Alexander, who succeeded; Margaret, who died young; and Joanna, who died unmarried. He died at Yair, aged just 24. John of Haining (1673/4–1754) 2nd son of Andrew of Clifton and Violet Rutherford. He became an advocate in 1698 and purchased the Haining in 1702. In 1704 he was a Commissioner of Supply for Selkirkshire, i.e. an M.P. in the last Scottish Parliament. He then served that county as M.P. until 1729. In 1711 he was one of the founding members of the ‘Honest Country Club’. He was a Keeper of the Signet for Scotland in 1711. He was a member of the Committee of Supply for Selkirkshire in 1704. In 1711 he was one of the founding members of the ‘Honest Country Club’. He was a Keeper of the Signet for Scotland in 1711. He became Lord of Session in 1729, taking the title Lord Haining. He married Ann, eldest daughter of William Douglas of Cavers. He had 3 children: William, who succeeded; Margaret, who married Thomas, 5th son of Robert, who became a doctor. He may have been Alemoor; John, who inherited the Haining; and of Sir James Murray of Philiphaugh. He had 3 children: William, who succeeded; Margaret, who married Thomas, 5th son of Robert, who became a doctor. He may have been father of Jean, who married Thomas, 5th son of Sir William Douglas of Cavers. John (17th/18th C.) wright who became a Hawick Burgess in 1704. He was described as 'in the Haugh of the Galawater' and was stated in the marriage record as being from Stow Parish. He was probably the same wright who was selected by the minister and heritors in 1713 to report to the Presbytery on the state of the Manse in Hawick. And also the John who was one of the men who valued Andrew Rodger's house for the Kirk Session in the early 1700s. He witnessed baptisms for Jasper Richardson in 1713 and for weaver John Stevenson in 1719. In 1716 he was 'wright in Hawick'. In 1721 his servant Robert Robison married Isobel Rae in Branxholmtown. Also in 1721 he was witness for baptisms for weaver Robert Wight and 'Tenant in Hawick' David Wilson. Either he or his son was paid in 1732 for fixing the hands of St. Mary's clock. In 1704 he married Janet Thomson, who was from Hawick Parish. Their children included: Margaret (b.1707), who married tobacconist James Scott; Janet (b.1709), who must have died young; John (1709), gardener; William (b.1711); Walter (b.1714); Janet (b.1716); George (b.1718); Janet (again, 1721); Mary, who married William Scott of Langholm; Betty, 2nd wife of baker John Kedie; and Jean. The witnesses in 1707 were Gideon Scott of Falnash and Bailie Walter Elliot, in 1709 were wright Walter Hardie and carrier David Minto, in 1711 were James Scott 'Doctor' and shoemaker John Scott, and in 1716 were merchant Francis Elliot and carrier David Minto. John (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. His children included: Janet (b.1732); and Jean (b.1730). In 1733 he was at Howcleuch. John (b.1709) son of wright John and Janet Thomson. He became a Burgess in 1733, when he was described as 'gardener in Borthwick, now in Hawick'. He was a witness for a baptism in 1746, along with Thomas Kedie. He may be the gardener John whose daughter Betty was the 2nd wife of baker John Kedie. John (18th C.) resident at Howpasley when his children were baptised in Roberton Parish in 1761 and 1763. Probably the same John was resident at Gair in 1775 when another child was baptised. He was probably father of John (b.1761), Mary (b.1763), Margaret (b.1769), Agnes (b.1775) and an unnamed daughter (b.1778). John of Haining and Clifton (d.1792) 2nd son of John of Haining. He was M.P. for Selkirkshire 1765–84. He was a merchant in Madeira and succeeded to Haining on the death of his brother Lord Alemoor and to Clifton on the death of his cousin Robert Pringle. He was listed among the Commissioners for both Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire in 1761. He was also listed among the voters of Selkirkshire in 1788. Sometime before 1779 he had furloughs to lands in Beulie and in the Barony of Harden from Walter Scott of Harden. He was listed on the roll of electors for Roxburghshire in 1780. He was taxed for having 2 or 3 male servants from 1778, increasing to 5 or 6 in 1787–92, and 3 or 4 female servants in 1785–91. He paid the land tax at Easter Alemoor in 1785. He was also taxed for owning a carriage and up to 6 horses in the period 1785–92. He was listed as owner of North Synton (including Birkwood) in 1788 (and still recorded this way in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls), valued at £600. He also owned Clifton and other lands in Morebattle Parish and most of the lands in Linton Parish. He died unmarried and was succeeded by his grand-nephew Mark. John of Whytbank (1744–90) eldest son of Alexander. He is said to have been a Lieutenant in the 36th Regiment of Foot and served on the staff of Gen. Murray in Canada, where he died. Actually he was a Lieutenant in the 84th Regiment, serving under Gen. Haldimand as Governor of Canada. He served through until the termination of the American War in 1783. He was succeeded by his brother Alexander around 1790. John (c.1770–c.1810) local fiddler and composer of music. James Wilson (writing in 1858) suggests that he was grandson and pupil of John Howison, while W.N. Kennedy (writing in 1863) says he was half-brother of Howison. He became a more accomplished violin player than his older relative, whose abilities were famed throughout the Border. He was selected by Lord Minto to lead his band when he was Governor General of India (which must have been in the period 1807–14), and died in Calcutta, probably unmarried. He also collected and published some local reels, strathspeys and jigs in the early 1800s, some of which he wrote himself. These are collected in 2 volumes, and include parts suitable for violin with piano accompaniment. Those published in 1801 are dedicated to ‘Miss Elliot’ (presumably of Minto) and the second volume (probably 1802) dedicated to Lady Scott of Ancrum and available from his lodgings at 16 Rose Street, Edinburgh. He probably lived in the capital as a dancing master. Tunes attributed to him include ‘Lady Ann Hope’, ‘The Miller of Drone’ and ‘Miss Walker’s Strathspey’. There are well over 100 tunes in these 2 volumes, including ‘Fertish Hill’, ‘Hawick Lasses, a Reel’, ‘Hawick, a Strathspey’, ‘Ruberslaw’, ‘Minto House’, several named after members of the Minto Elliots or local Scotts, ‘The Ettrick Shepherd’, ‘Betty Howison’s Favourite’, ‘Teviot Banks’, ‘Wilton Lodge, a Strathspey’ and the nursery air ‘Dance to your Daddy, my bonny Babby’. He may be the same John ‘musician in Hawick’ who was selected by ballot in 1799 to serve on the local Militia, but was declared unfit to serve. John (d.1805) tailor in Hawick. He was son of Thomas, who was a carter. He could be the John, son of Thomas and Betty Douglas born in Hawick in 1773. John of Carrriber (d.1836) from Midlothian. About 1810 he arranged the tenancy of Bairnkine farm in Southdean parish. When he died the lease of the farm passed to his younger son Robert Baillie. He married Mary Walker, and their children were: Maj. David; Robert Baillie; another son, who died in India; Mary, who married Lieut. David Sheriff; Isabella, who married Dr. James Richmond, brother of the minister of Southdean; and 3 daughters who never married, Agnes, Janet and Ellen. John (b.1778) son of Walter and half-brother of Robert. He was the first member of the family known to be involved with the hosiery trade, being apprenticed to William Beck in 1794. He later became a merchant. He was recorded as a hosier in 1825 when he subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’. He may be the same John recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory as proprietor of a public house in the Sandbed. He may also be the grocer and spirit dealer listed on the High Street in Pigot’s 1837 directory. He may also be the meal dealer also listed on the High Street in 1837. He firstly married an Oliver and secondly Janet (d.1843), daughter of Thomas Kedie, baker. They had 6 children, including: Elizabeth (b.1820); Thomas Kedie (b.1822); Walter Oliver (b.1824); and Robert (b.1827). He is probably the John, married to Mary Oliver, whose son Walter Oliver was born in Hawick in 1813. He is also probably the hosier John whose twin’s deaths are recorded in Hawick in 1816. John (1795/6–1843) sheepherd at Milsington. In 1841 he was living at Milingshield. He married Sarah Johnstone and their children (mostly baptised in Ettrick Parish) included William (b.c.1825); James (who died in 1841, aged 14); Francis (b.1829); Adam (b.1831); Margaret (b.1833); Jean (b.1835); John (b.1837); and Mary. His wife died at Broadlee in 1866, aged 74. The family are buried at Borthwick Waas. John Balfour (1815–85) Dumfries man who travelled around painting portraits, signing them ‘J.B. Pringle’. He probably married Grace Ballantrae in Edinburgh in 1846. His wife was Grace Haswell when their son John Haswell (b.1848) and daughter Julia Mary (b.1853) were born in Hawick. He was the painter of ‘Hawick from Wilton Lodge 1850’, now in the Museum, painted from around the Violet Woods. He also painted a view of the Auld Brig from near the foot of the Mill Port in 1847, as well as a view of Hawick and Wilton from the Mote in about the same year. He later gained some fame as a painter of maritime portraits. John (b.1825/6) grocer at about 6 Doncaster Street in Newcastle upon the Tyne in about 1860s. He is listed as a shepherd there in 1861. His wife was Grace and their children included daughter Eliot and son Robert. John Douglas (1877–1939) born in Hawick, son of manufacturer Walter Pringle and Mary Douglas. He joined the family firm at an early age, becoming a partner in 1897 (along with his half-brother Robert). He retired from Pringle’s in 1918 (or 1919), moving to the South of England for his health. He married Muriel Martin in 1907 and their children were Elizabeth Douglas (who married Dr. F.Y.
Henderson of London and John Martin Douglas (who married Celia Carroll and became a successful journalist). John Martin Douglas (1912–99) son of John Douglas and Muriel Martin, he was born in Hawick. He graduated from Lincoln College, Oxford in 1934 and started a career in journalism. He was sub-editor of the Guardian, served in WWII with the K.O.S.B., was Director of Foreign Affairs at the Times (1948–52), then became editor of the Sydney Morning Herald (1952–57), Deputy Editor of the Observer (1957–62), Editor of the Canberra Times (1964–65) and editor of the Sydney Morning Herald again (1965–70). He wrote the controversial bestselling book ‘Australian Accent’ (1958), as well as ‘Australian Painting Today’ (1963) and ‘On Second Thoughts’ (1971). He married Celia Carroll in 1936 and she died in 1997. Margaret Graham ‘Peggy’ nee Irvine (1908–2008) born in Carlisle and raised near Langholm. She married master butcher Robert and they had 4 children: Gladys; Margaret; Jean; and Robert. Long connected with the Hawick Common Riding, she was Acting-Mother in 1947, and had a son and grandson who were Cornet. She lived to see her telegram from the Queen and had 27 great-grandchildren. Mark of Fairnilee and Clifton (1753/4–1812) son of John of Crichton and Anne, eldest daughter of Robert Rutherford of Fairnilee. He paid the Land Tax for Fairnilee and Rink in 1785. He succeeded to Haining and Clifton on the death of his grand-uncle John in 1792 and paid the carriage and horse taxes in the years 1794 and 1797, and the dog tax in 1797, as well as being taxed for 4–6 male servants in Selkirk Parish 1793–97. He served as M.P. for Selkirkshire 1786–1802. He was also listed among the voters of both Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire in 1788. He was appointed Chamberlain of Ettrick Forest for life. In 1802 he paid the land tax on Easter Alemoor, as well as Haining, Hartwoodburn and Howden. He was ‘of Clifton’ when listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805 and 1819 (when already deceased). He was ‘of Haining’ when writing about the poor laws in Selkirk in 1806. In 1795 he married Anne Elizabeth, daughter of Robert Chalmers. Among his children were: Robert, M.P. for Selkirkshire; John, also M.P., and last Pringle of Haining; and Margaret Violet, who married Archibald Douglas of Adderstone. His wife may be the ‘Mrs. Anne Elizabeth Pringle or Pattison’ who paid the land tax on Adderstone and North Synton in about 1874. His will was proved at the Prerogative Court of Canterbury in 1812. Mistress (17th C.) resident of the west-side of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. She may be the widow of some local Pringle. Paul Henry (1922–84) born in Hawick of Presbyterian parents, he approached Father Gordon Gray just before WWII, and was accepted into the Roman Catholic church while a prisoner of war in Italy. He returned to Hawick after the War, worked on the railways and entered Nunraw as a monk in 1954. Robert of Hoppringill (13th C.) earliest known ancestor of this family. He is recorded as a witness to a Soutra charter in the reign of Alexander III, probably around 1270. His name was written ‘de Hoppryngil’. Another man, ‘Elys de Obrinkel’ signed the Ragman Rolls of 1296 and could easily have been his son. Robert of Whit-sun and Pilmuir (d.1424) one of the earliest local Pringles. He acted as armour-bearr for James, Earl of Douglas at Otterburn in 1388. He then served the next 2 Earls of Douglas and was killed at the Battle of Verneuil in France. In 1408 he had a charter of Pilmuir in Lauderdale. About the same time he was also probably granted the lands of Smailholm and had a tower built there at Sandyknowe. About 1413 he witnessed a charter for the Homes of Wedderburn. He is probably the ‘Robt of hoppringyll’ who witnessed an indenture for Melrose Abbey in 1418. He may be the Robert ‘de Pringle’ who witnessed charters during the regency of the Duke of Albany. His children included: Robert, who succeeded; George, Squire of Douglas; Alexander, also Squire of Douglas; and David, who succeeded his brother Robert. Robert of Smailholm and Pilmuir (d.bef. 1480) son of Robert. He is probably responsible for the bridge across the Teviot near Melrose (described by Sir Walter Scott in ‘The Monastery’) with the inscription ‘I, Robert Pringleill of Pilmore steed, Gave a hundred nobles of goud sae reid, To big my brigg upon the Tweed’. He appears to have succeeded his brother George as Master Ranger of the Ward of Tweed from about 1460, and was succeeded in that post by William Douglas de Chyny of Traquair in 1470. In 1459 he had a sasine for the lands of ‘Wrangham’ and Smailholm. He witnessed an instrument in 1474 (for the Homes of Wedderburn), but was succeeded by his brother David shortly afterwards. Robert (16th/17th C.) Bailie to the Earl of Bucceuch. In 1622 Simon Armstrong, called of Tweeden, appeared at the Justiciary Court as caution for him. It is unclear what his crimes were or how he was related to other Pringles. Robert of Stichill (b.c.1581–1649) descendant of William of Whitton and son of George of Craigleith. He was 2nd son of George of Newhall and was progenitor of the Stichill branch and Laird of Bartingbush. He trained as a lawyer, becoming Writer to the Signet. He acquire Stichill in 1628. He was Commissioner of War for Roxburghshire and Berwickshire. He also served as Clerk to Gideon Murray of Elibank and Chamberlain to the Earl of Buccleuch (for the Debataleable Land in the 1630s). A letter exists from him to Earl Walter Scott, describing the flight and capture of several Armstrongs. He was appointed one of the 2 Parliamentary Commission for Roxburghshire in 1638, serving as effectivley one of the Roxburghshire M.Ps. until 1641. In 1642 he was named to a commission to try a large number of Borderers who had been declared fugitives. He could have been the servitor to Sir Gideon Murray of Elibank who had a bond in 1619 with Thomas Turnbull ‘in Rowllspittle’. He purchased Stichill in 1628, and also bought Dinlabyre, Larriston and Howden in Liddesdale in 1632, as well as Templehall in Berwickshire. He was recorded as possessor of the lands of Larris-ton, Howden and Stripshielden in the early 17th century. His lands in Castleton Parish (probably part of Dinlabyre) were valued at £60 in 1643 (but the same lands were owned by Scott of Buccleuch by 1678). He was also recorded as owner of lands in Stitchill Parish in 1643. In 1643 he was on the Commission of Supply for Roxburghshire and in 1643, 1644 and 1646 and was on the Committee of War for Roxburghshire, still in 1649. He married Katherine Hamilton, who came from the Silverton family. Their children included: John, who married Margaret, illegitimate daughter of the 1st Earl of Buccleuch, but predeceased his father; Walter of Greenknowe; an unnamed daughter, who married a Ker of Graden; Anna, who married Sir James Home of Eccles; and Christina, who married Hugh Wallace of Craige. He was succeeded by John’s son Sir Robert. Sir Robert of Stichill (17th C.) son of John, he succeeded his grandfather Robert in 1651. He is listed owing money to the deceased Countess of Buccleuch in 1661. He was appointed Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire in 1663 and as one of the 2 Parliamentary Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1678 and 1681, thus serving as M.P. for the county. He was also on the Commission of Supply for Roxburghshire in 1685 and 1690. He was created a Baronet of Nova Scotia in 1683. He married Margaret, daughter of Sir John Hope, Lord Craighall. They had 19 children, including: Sir John, 2nd Baronet; Sir Walter, Lord Newhall; Robert Pringle, Secretary-at-War; and Thomas, W.S., Clerk of the Privy Council and Deputy-Keeper of the Signet, father of Lord Edge-field. Robert (17th C.) resident of ‘Crackuooll’ in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll. He may be the Robert who witnessed baptisms in Ashkirk in 1691 for William Scott and Agnes Scott and for James Rutherord. Robert (17th/18th C.) recorded in Caverton in 1712 when he witnessed a baptism in Hawick for William Sanderson, tenant in Falnash. Robert (18th C.) Hawick resident. He married Margaret Baldy and their children included Betty (b.1737). Robert (18th C.) possibly half-brother of Thomas. He is also recorded in the ancient Hawick family bible. He may be the Robert who married Janet Porteous, and whose children born in Hawick included Thomas (b.1743), Helen (b.1746) and Ann (b.1756). He could be the dyer in Hawick who witnessed a baptism for gardener Alexander Bunyan in 1743, along with his servant (showing that he was a man of means) George Campbell. Robert (18th C.) wright in Hawick. He witnessed baptisms in 1742 for mason David Laing, and in 1745 for carrier Walter Scott (with Scott reciprocating on the same day). He married Margaret Wilson and their children included John (b.1745) and John (again, b.1747). The witnesses in 1747 were shoemaker Thomas Scott and Beadle John Telfer. Robert (d.1793) served as Captain of the Royal Engineers and Lieutenant Colonel in the Army. In 1788 he was listed under ‘Votes of John Pringle of Clifton’ among the voters of Roxburghshire (suggesting that he was given freehold of some land in order to vote in the county). He supervised the construction of new defences around St. John’s, Newfoundland in the 1770s and instigated the Newfoundland Volunteers in about 1778 and the Newfoundland Regiment in 1780. He returned to Europe in 1783 and was chief engineer at Gibraltar 1785–88. He was promoted to Lieutenant Colonel in 1792 and died in Grenada. He married Miss Balneavis. His will is in the National Archives. Robert (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen Thomson and their children included John (b.1778). In 1778 he is described as a Superintendent of Excise and the witnesses were Robert Pringle (perhaps his father) and writer William Wilson. He could be the ‘Mr. Pringle’ who was schoolmaster at the east-end of the Kirkyard and also master of excise in Hawick. Robert (1750/1–1820) possibly son of Robert (recorded in the family bible). He was a nursery gardener in Hawick, probably with Dickson’s. He married Ann Buch- ham (1771–1820) and their children were: William (b.1794), framesmith; James (b.1796), stockingmaker; Jean (or Jane, b.1799), married Francis Bell; Robert (b.1801), framework knitter, who married Elizabeth Foyer; and George Turnbull (b.1810), gardener and then licensed grocer at 12 Back Row. In the 1834 electoral roll his sons George T., Robert and James were listed as joint proprietors of the house he had left them. This is marked ‘Ro. Pringle’ on Wood’s 1824 map.

Robert (1765–1835) son of William and Jean Robson. He was a shepherd at Bellendean in 1788 and was recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as shepherd at Wolfcleuchhead. In Robertson in 1788 he married Janet (b.1765–1804), daughter of Thomas Burnet; she died at Wolfcleuchhead. Their children included: William (b.1788); Margaret (b.1790); James (b.1793); John (b.1795); Jane (b.1797); Adam (1799–1886), who was a shepherd at Over Dalgleish; and an unnamed son (b.1801). He died at Milsington. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Helen Lunn and their children included: John (b.1801). He died at Milsington.

Robert (d.bef. 1809) resident of Hawick. He was already deceased in 1809 when the death of his son Thomas is recorded. His nickname appears to be ‘old Washman’, but it is unclear what this meant. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Ha- wick Parish. He married Janet Buchan and their children included: Thomas (b.1803); and James (b.1805). He could be the John whose stockingmaker son James is recorded dying in 1824. Robert of Clifton (d.1842) younger son of Mark. He served in the 7th Hussars. He suc-ceeded his brother John to the Clifton titles in 1831 after John died in a carriage accident when returning from Headshaw Loch. He resided as the Haining (in Selkirk), where he died 11 years later, and was the last Pringle of Clifton. His lands included North Synton in Ashkirk Parish. He was also listed among the landowners in Rober- ton Parish in 1841. In 1826 he was recorded com- plaining about a poacher. He was a Liberal in politics and reputedly well-liked in the local community. He defeated Alexander Pringle of Whyt- bank in the Selkirkshire election of 1832, by 9 votes. He served as M.P. for Selkirkshire 1832–34 and was defeated again by Pringle of Whytbank in the 1835 election. Since he died unmarried, his distant cousin Robert Kerr Elliot of Harwood succeeded to the Clifton estates, while Haining passed to his sister Margaret Violet, who had married Archibald Douglas of Adderstone and Midshiels. Robert (1795–1859) founder of the manufacturers, born in Hawick, son of Walter. He joined Dicksons & Laings in 1810 as an appren- tice stockingmaker. He entered into a part- nership with John Waldie and Peter Wilson in 1815, which later separated, his part eventually becoming Pringle’s of Scotland. The firm was based at the Whisky House Mill on Slitrig Cres- cent 1815–19. In 1819 he carried on the business on his own in new premises on the Cross Wynd, where the company remained for about 50 years. It was listed as a manufacturer of hosiery there in Pigot’s 1837 directory and Slater’s 1852 direc- tory. It was known as Robert Pringle & Son for many years, later becoming Pringle of Scotland and being run by the family until his grandson Robert retired in 1940. He was said to be a man of strong individuality and great energy in de- veloping his business. He was on the old Town Council, as well as being a Police Commissioner and on the Parochial Board. He was a member of Hawick Kirk Session and was a Liberal in pol- itics. He was living at 61 High Street in 1841 and had moved to Bridge Street by 1851, when he is listed as employer of 82 men and 8 women. In 1823 he married Charlotte Paterson, and she died in 1873, aged 69. They had 11 children including Walter, who carried on the business. Their other children were: Charlotte (b.1824), who became Mrs. Dykes; Walter (b.1826); Ann (b.1827), who married Peter Williamson; William (b.1829), who became a grocer; Catherine Elizabeth ‘Kate’ (b.1831), who married Mr. Hoy; Beatrice (b.1833), who became Mrs. Peters; Margaret (‘Etta’, b.1834), who married Dr. Robert Munro; Robert (b.1836), who became a doctor; Jessie (b.1839); Henry Turnbull (b.1840); Ann; and Es- ther Scott (b.1844). A portrait exists of him with his wife. He died at 18 Buccleuch Street and is buried in Wellogate Cemetery. Robert (b.1801) son of Robert and Ann Buchan. He was a frame- maker in Hawick. In 1841 he was living on the Back Row and by 1861 was listed at No. 13. He married Elizabeth Foyer and their children included: Anne, who married a Gad and then a Kerr; Elizabeth; James; Robert; and George. Robert Bailie (1806–78) son of John and Mary Walker, he was born at Cranston, Midlothian. He was farmer at Bairnkine in Southdean Parish. His brother was Maj. David of Carriber. In 1838 he married Margaret, youngest daughter of Peter.
Brown of Rawflat; she died in 1886. Their children included: Margaret; John, farmer at Nisbet, who succeeded to his uncle’s lands at Carriber; Robert Brown; David; Mary; and Elizabeth. He is buried in Southdean kirkyard. Robert (1837–1903) son of manufacturer Robert, he became a doctor. He is buried in Wellowate Cemetery. Robert (1862–1953) grandson of manufacturer Robert and son of Walter. In 1878 he became an apprentice in the firm his grandfather had founded. He had the villa Woodnorton (originally Craigmor) built for him in Sunnyhill. By 1885 he was a partner, and after the death of his father in 1895. He refocussed the family knitwear business on retail as well as wholesale and ran it until he retired in 1940. In 1887 he married Edith Villiers Price (1866–1944), daughter of Joseph, a successful railway engineer (although also said to have been a soap and candlemaker from Clapham Common), and younger sister of Mrs. Patrick Anderson Laing of Balcary. Their children were: Francis Mary Edith, who married James Chrystal Muir, son of a Glasgow minister; Walter Gerald, who died in WWI. In memory of his only son he incorporated the firm as Robert Pringle & Son Ltd. in 1922. In his old age he moved to live with his grand-daughter Geraldine Simpson at Fetteresso Castle near Stonehaven.

John Henderson had a child baptised in Kirkton (17th/18th C.) recorded in 1716 when his servant Thomas is buried in Southdean kirkyard. Robert Brown; David; Mary; and Elizabeth. He who succeeded to his uncle’s lands at Carriber; children included: Margaret; John, farmer at Nisbet, Brown of Raw at; she died in 1886. Their children included: Margaret; John, farmer at Nisbet, who succeeded to his uncle’s lands at Carriber; Robert Brown; David; Mary; and Elizabeth. Pringle published his first poetry collection in 1817, with poems such as ‘The Scenes of Teviotdale’ popular locally. He was also the first editor of the ‘Edinburgh Monthly Magazine’, which would become Blackwood’s Magazine. He also edited ‘The Liberal Star’ and ‘Constable’s Monthly Magazine’ and worked at Register House. He befriended Sir Walter Scott, who helped him secure free passage in a resettlement programme to South Africa. In 1820 he emigrated to Grahamstown, moving to Cape Town, where he founded a school and a newspaper, but was forced to leave in 1826 because of his fight against slavery and his promotion of free speech. His sister Jessie married Hawick man William Ainslie, and he visited family in Hawick several times, after one occasion writing the poem ‘The Emigrant’s Farewell’. The Museum has (or at least had) an original letter of his. Back in London, he worked for the Committee of the Anti-Slavery Society for his last 7 years. He encouraged former slave Mary Prince to write her autobiography. He published ‘African Sketches’ and books of verse, such as ‘Ephemeredies’. He died from tuberculosis at the age of 45. He was buried in Bunhill Fields, but in 1970 his remains were re-interred in South Africa. Thomas Kedie (b.1822) son of merchant John and Ann Kedie. He was listed as a grocer on Market Place in Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1844 he married Lucille Kennedy, sister of William Norman Kennedy and half-sister of bookseller J.D. Kennedy. Their children were: Angelique Lucille (b.1846), who became a nurse; Janet Kedie (b.1848); Elizabeth Hamer (b.1850); John Douglas (b.1852); James Robert (b.1854); Douglas; Jessie, who married James Lindsay; Maggie; and Robert. Walter (17th/18th C.) proprietor of the Roughheugh Waulk Mill in the early 1700s. In 1713 the Bailies heard a case of assault brought against his servant John Kerr. He is referred to in the Hawick Session records of 1723 as ‘Walker, Roughheugh’, when he was employer of William Hood, and paid his fine for adultery. Given the name, occupation and location, it is not inconceivable that he was an ancestor of the manufacturing Pringles. He is probably the Walter, who married Helen ‘Ourd’, and whose children baptised in Wilton Parish included: Elspeth (b.1714); William (b.1715); Margaret (b.1717); Robert (b.1719); and Henry (b.1720). Walter (b.1748) son of Thomas and father of manufacturer Robert. He was a merchant in the Sandbed. He subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). He is probably the tailor who was one of the witnesses to a baptism for Thomas Miller in 1781. He is probably the Walter who witnessed baptisms for merchant John Renwick in 1797 and 1799. In 1773 he married Betty Heiton (or Hutton), who came from an old Darnick family. Their wedding proclamation is recorded in Melrose, with Andrew Riddell as cautioner. They had 7 children, including: Betty (b.1775); Robert (b.1776), who must have died young; John (b.1778), a merchant; Robert (1780–82); James (b.1783); Thomas (b.1785); and Walter (b.1787). In 1793 he secondly married Anny Scott (related to the Brieryyards Scotts) and had at least 5 more children: Beatrice (b.1794), who died in infancy; Robert (b.1795), who founded Pringle of Scotland; Jennie or Janet (1797–1858); Andrew (b.1799); and James. Walter (1826–1895) eldest son of Robert. He began as an apprentice in his father’s Cross Wynd factory in 1842, and when he was finished in 1846, the firm was renamed ‘Robert Pringle & Son’. He eventually ran the family hosiery business, further developing it after the death of his father, the founder. In the 1850s he developed the ‘intarsia’ of producing Argyle-style sock patterns. In 1868 he moved the main premises to Walter’s Wynd. He was a Town Councillor for many years and also served as a Magistrate. In politics he was a staunch Liberal. In the 1850s he was on the Railway Committee for Hawick District. He gifted communion silverware to the Parish Church. In 1860 he married Mary Sutton and she died in 1870, aged 35. They had 3 children: John Clement, who died in infancy; Robert, who succeeded to the family business; and Mary Charlotte (b.1864), who married William Charles Johnston. He later married Mary, daughter of Dr. John Douglas, and she died in 1915, aged 72. The children by his second marriage were: Jane Aitchison, who married T.J. Finlay; Catherine Ann (‘Cathy’), who married George Crosfield Glenny; and John Douglas, who married Marie Anne Martin, and became a partner in the family firm. He lived at Langlands in Sunnyhill, which he had built for him, starting a trend for other manufacturers to build villas nearby. In about 1874 he was recorded owning part of the ‘particulate lands’ of Hawick, which had earlier been owned by William Scott ‘at Flex’. He is said to not have been of very strong constitution. Along with several other members of the family, he is buried in Wilton Old Cemetery. Walter Gerald (1893–1917) only son of Robert Pringle, the last member of the family to run the famous knitwear company. He was home-schooled by a tutor and started his apprenticeship in 1910, being groomed to eventually take over the firm when war broke out. In his youth he was a member of the Boy Scouts. Before WWI he was Captain of the Hawick Motor Cycling Club (riding with Jimmie Guthrie, his cousin Joe Laing and others). He enlisted into the Lothian and Border Horse in 1915 and served as a motorcycle dispatch rider. After returning to Britain to obtain his commission, he became 2nd Lieutenant in the K.O.S.B. and was killed at Passchendaele. There is a plaque to his memory in Wilton Church, with a representation of him by sculptor Newbury Abbot Trent. William (15th C.) probably son of David. He was Constable of Cessford Castle and appointed the 1st Range of the Ward of Tweed. He could have been the ‘Wil Pringill’ who was on the 1464/5 panel for ruling on the dispute over the lands of Kirkton Mains and the Flex. He was Constable of Cessford Castle when he witnessed a sasine for Cessford in 1467. He is probably the William who witnessed a document between Henry Wardlaw and the Kers of Cessford in 1468 and another for Sir Alexander Home of that Ilk in 1468. It seems likely he is the William mentioned in an action brought by John, Lord Somerville in 1476. He was probably succeeded by his son Andrew. He may be the William who was recorded along with David on a document relating to Ruecastle in 1491. Also in 1491 he was ‘Wil. Hoppringle de Cesfurd’ when he had a charter for lands in Peeblesshire. William (d.1513) younger son of James of Smailholm. His mother was Isabella Murray of Falahill. He had a tack for Caddonlee in 1488 and another along with his son George for Torwoodlee in 1509. In 1509 he also held one quarter of Clifton. He was a witness to the sasine of Queen Margaret of England for lands in Ettrick Forest. He had sons: George, who succeeded; and David, whose son George was a tutor of Torwoodlee in 1581. He was killed at Flodden. William ‘Will’ (16th C.) one of the men indicted in 1552 for involvement in the murder of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme and Buccleuch. It is unclear where he was from, although he is listed along with men from the Jedburgh area and Berwickshire. His name is recorded as ‘Ville Hoppringill’. William of Torwoodlee (d.1581) son of George. In 1571 he subscribed to the General Band to rise against Kerr of Ferniehirst and the thieves of Liddesdale and Eskdale. In 1575 he was directed to appear in reference to the feud between the Pringles and the Elliots. He married Agnes (or Alison), daughter of James Heriot of Trabrown in 1571 and was succeeded by his son George. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. In 1720 he married Mary Hutchison, the marriage being proclaimed in Roberton, but taking place at Eskdalemuir. He is probably the William who was at Howpsley in 1721 and 1723, Philhopehil in 1726 and Philhope in 1732 and 1737. His children included: Jean (b.1721); Helen (b.1723); Margaret (b.1726); an unnamed child (b.1728); William (b.1730); an unnamed son (b.1732); John (b.1734); and Janet (b.1737). William (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Howpsley in 1761, 1765 and 1767. He may have been brother to John, who was also living at Howpsley. He is probably the William who married Jean Robson in Roberton in 1758. His children probably included Adam (b.1759), William (b.1761), Robert (b.1765) and John (b.1767). He could be the William ‘in Shaws formerly herd of Dum Fedlain in Howpsley’ who was accused by David Park in 1793 of ‘losing ten sheep without explanation’: it is unclear what ‘Dum Fedlain’ may refer to. William (d.1811) tenant farmer at Hislop. He had 2 sons by his first marriage, Adam and Robert. His second wife was Elizabeth Wilson, this perhaps being the marriage with ‘B. Wilson’ (probably Betty) taking place in Roberton in 1789. After his death, there was a court case involving a pre-nuptial contract, the argument hinging on whether it was legal for her to have had her hand led to sign something when she could neither write her name nor read the contents. William (18th/19th C.) tenant farmer at Bedrule and Fulton until 1826, being succeeded by Mr. Haliburton and then shortly afterwards by Robert Brodie. He is recorded at Bedrule in 1797, when he owned 8 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. He was additionally taxed for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797. He opened a quarry on his farm at Bedrule, and started a lineworks, from which he also supplied some neighbouring farms. He could be the William, married to Hannah, whose son Robert was baptised in 1801 in Byrness. William (b.1790/1) born in Roberton Parish, he was an agricultural labourer at Phaup in Cavers Parish in 1841. In 1851 and 1861 he was listed as shepherd at Phaup. His wife was Jean (from Dumfriesshire) and their children included Janet, Adam, David, Andrew, James and Margaret. William (b.1791/2) shepherd at Woolhope in Castelton Parish. He is recorded there in 1841 and 1851. By 1861 he was shepherd at ‘Stinchelburnfoot’. He married Janet Crozier and their children included Isabella, William, James and Adam. William (b.c.1793) frame-smith of the Back Row, listed there in 1841. His son was Alexander. He is listed along with labourer Robert as a joint-tenant in the 1837 electoral roll. Another household on the Back Row in 1841, consisting of Robert, William (also a frame-smith) and James, could be his father, son and grandson. William (b.1805/6) originally from Lilliesleaf, he was farmer at Newstead in Wilton Parish. In 1861 he was farmer of 20 acres, employing 1 girl. In 1836 he married Janet, daughter of Thomas Cranston and Agnes Smail. Their children included Jessie. William (b.c.1810) mason at Billingburn near Chesters in the 1841 census. In 1851 he was still living in his father's house on Bridge Stree. His wife was Mary and their children included Robert, George, Margaret and Jane. William (b.1829) son of Robert and Charlotte Paterson. He set up a grocery business in Hawick. William Elliot (b.1833) son of William and Janet Crozier, he was born in Castleton Parish. His father was shepherd at Woolhope. He was a shepherd, being listed at Toftsholm in 1861. He married Christina Douglas Elliot (daughter of James Elliot and Helen Douglas), and she is listed as ‘Christopher’ on one census transcript. Their children were: William (b.1858), who moved to the Durham area; James Elliot (b.1859), also moved to Durham; Walter Douglas Elliot (b.1864), who died young; and Helen Douglas (b.1869), who married Thomas Hall and lived in Northumberland (formerly spelled ‘Pringil’, ‘Pringle’, ‘Pringyll’, ‘Pringyle’, ‘Pringyll’, ‘Pringill’, ‘Pringgill’ and variants, and synonymously as ‘Hoppringill’, ‘Hoppringill’, etc. in earlier centuries).

Pringle

Pringle's

the Pringle Bible (thu-pring-ul-bi-lul) n. old family bible of the local Pringle family. It was apparently found on the banks of the Tweed near Kelso following the Hawick flood of 1767! The book was later returned to the family. It bears the inscription: ‘Who ought this book if ye would knowe I will show you by letters 2, the first is T, a letter bright, the 2 is P in all men’s sight, and if you chance should to read amiss look underneath and there it is – Thomas Pringle’.

the Pringle Hall (thu-pring-ul-hal) n. extension added to the Burns Club in 1963, named after Alexander Pringle, club treasurer for 37 years.

Pringle’s (pring-ulz) n. Pringle of Scotland, founded as a hosiery firm by Robert Pringle in 1815, in partnership with John Waldey and Peter Wilson, at the Whisky House Mill on Slitrig Crescent. Pringle went on his own from 1819, moving to the Cross Wynd (opposite Allars Kirk) and manufacturing underwear from 1827, with the introduction of the ‘broad frame’. The name was changed to ‘Robert Pringle & Son’, when Walter completed his apprenticeship in 1846. The ‘Intarsia’ method of producing Argyle-patterned socks was introduced in the 1850s. The firm purchased John Nixon & Sons mill on Walter’s Wynd in 1868 (or 1869), renaming it ‘Rodono’. Robert Pringle (grandson of the founder) was made a partner in 1885. The company then started to focus on retail as well as wholesale. The firm first made spun silk underwear (and in colour) in 1892, and introduced seamless gorse for ladies underwear in 1895. About 1905 it became one of the first firms to introduce knitted outerwear. Douglas Pringle joined his brother Robert as a partner in 1897, and J. Boyd Sime became another partner in 1906. The knitted coat department was started in 1910. Herbert Benyon Johnstone joined in 1919. In 1922 it became incorporated as a private company, Robert Pringle & Son Ltd. Pure silk stockings (‘Prinetta’) were started in 1927. Sime resigned in 1929, with John Turnbull becoming Managing Director. ‘Rodono splashproof’ silk stockings and ‘Slimfit’ underwear were being made from 1931. Arthur Oddy and Wullie Mactaggart became joint Directors in 1932 and became Managing Directors following Turnbull’s resignation a year later. In 1933 cashmere was added, and designer Otto Weisz joined in 1934, becoming a Director in 1937. He was responsible for the name ‘twinset’ and for making the style the company’s own from the mid-1940s. A.G. Chaston was also made a Director in 1934 and George Mitchell in 1937. The lion rampant first appeared on garment labels in 1934. In 1940 the ladies’ blouse department started in Hawick, ‘Pringle Johnston Imports’ was formed to handle the U.S. market, and Robert Pringle retired that same year. The firm manufactured utility outerwear for the forces in WWII, and stopped making underwear in 1965. A 5 year lease was taken on Weensland Mill in 1946 and the Kelso factory opened, with the Berwick factory following 2 years later. The blouse department closed in 1950, but the Burnfoot factory opened and Rodono Mill was extended 3 times in the 1950s. Automatic rob transfer was introduced in 1955, with intarsia and men’s outerwear starting about the same time. It received the Royal Warrant from the Queen Mother in 1948, was appointed to the Queen in 1956 and received the Queen’s Award to Industry for Export Achievement in 1965 (further awards followed in 1970, 1979 and 1983). The name was changed to ‘Pringle of Scotland Ltd.’ in 1958 and became a public company in 1960. The underwear department finally closed in 1961. The company purchased Glebe Mills in 1962 and started making men’s knitwear there a year later. They sponsored a professional golf tournament in 1964 and signed a deal with golfer Nick Faldo in 1981 (ending in 2001), with the Faldo Collection of leisurewear launch in 1989. The company was acquired by Dawson International in 1967 for £5.8 million. There were further extensions to Rodono and Glebe Mills in 1968 and new factories were opened in Earlston, Cumbernauld and Livingston. In 1970 Alan Smith of Dawson succeeded Willie Mactaggart as Chairman. Rodono was closed in 1976 and demolished in 1980/1, but a new factory was opened in Arbuthnoth in 1985. Princess Anne visited Glebe Mills in 1988 and a Gold Award for Outstanding Export Achievement was awarded in 1993. However, the stores were converted into franchises in 1995, and the workforce was substantially reduced 1997–98. It was and purchased by the Fang Brothers in 2000, with Kim Winser as the new C.E.O., and the Diffusion line being introduced. Princess Anne opened a flagship shop on Bond Street in 2002. Women’s fashions were shown in London in 2002 and men’s fashions in Milan in 2003. Teries meanwhile complained that the company had lost its focus. Records relating to the firm, covering the period 1922–76 are listed on the National Register of Archives and a book ‘Pringle of Scotland and the Hawick Knitwear Story’ (2006) was written by Hugh Barty-King – ‘He’s a Pringle-ite since hei left schill an plenty o support he’ll get frae the mill’ [GM].

Pringle’s Temperance Hotel (pring-ülz-tëm-prins-hō-tel) n. one of the last temperance hotels in Hawick, situated on Union Street in the early 20th century. This may be the same as the house on the corner at 32 North Bridge Street, later Gladstone’s factory.

Pringle Street (pring-ul-stree’) n. lost street name, originally given to the west part of Wellington Road, built around 1877 and named after David Pringle, but discarded in 1892.

prinkle (pring-kul) v., arch., poet. to prickle, tingle, have goosebumps – ‘... An’ mony bats flew silent roon’ My prinklin’ heid’ [WP], n., arch. a tingling sensation, prickles (usually plural).

prinkly (pring-ku-lee) adj., arch. prickly, tingly – ‘A prinkly feeling’ [GW].

Printer’s Close (prin’-urz-klöś) n. close off Silver Street, near the foot of the Howegate. It is unclear who the printer was.

the Printer’s Well (thu-prin’-urz-wel) n. former public water supply at the corner of the Howegate and Silver Street. It was originally on the opposite side of the street beside John Waldy’s House, and hence also sometimes known as ‘Waldy’s Well’. It was part of the town’s water supply, and tended to be used when the wells further up went dry (also written as ‘Printers’’).

prising (pri-zin) n., arch. an appraisal, assigning of a value – ‘... that passit upon the prising of the saidis landis’ [SB1500].

prisoners o war (pri-zi-nurz-ō-wawr) n., pl. prisoners of various wars have been a common sight in and around Hawick. During the Napoleonic wars, 1812–14, about 120 French, German and Polish officers were sent to Hawick and allowed to move about freely with certain restrictions (the privates were largely kept in Penicuik, and there were also officers in Selkirk). William Nixon acted as paymaster for them and their headquarters was at Slitrig Bank, but they were boarded in private houses throughout Hawick. There was also a base across the river on Slitrig Crescent, in what was once the Red Cross building. Several officers stayed in the old house at 44 High Street, as seen in a painting of the time. They were allowed to walk within 1 mile of the Tower Knowe in any direction, and met every morning at the Spetch for roll call. Some of them (including M. Prefort) painted local landscapes, which still exist, and some created other items that are now in the Museum, such as a carved ivory guillotine, a carved snuff-box and a home-made pair of men’s body stays. In late 1813 Francois Senebien wrote (in French) to the Duke of Buccleuch, asking for help in beeing freed on compassionate and health grounds. In any case, all of these prisoners were released in June 1814 after the allied troops took Paris, with the men boarding ship at Leith. It is said that the presence of all the well-dressed French officers changed the sense of fashion in the Town. One of ‘Pawkie’ Paterson’s sisters married a prisoner (traditionally said to be a Bonaparte!), while another sister (Jane) had a child to one, named Cabourne. Additionally, Ann Ekron lived with an ensign called Adam Bellom, having a daughter Adelina, and Lieut. Frederick Diener had a son Frederick William Diener with Hawick woman Wilhelmina Paisley. In 1816 the deaths of ‘Nelly Jardine and Frenchmans Bastard Child’ are recorded in Hawick. A century later there were as many as 6,000 German prisoners of war based at Stobs in WWI, living in 200 wooden huts below Winnington Rig farm. They were mainly civilian detainees in the first few months of the War, and it became purely a military camp at the end. Prisoners included the crews of the battleships ‘Gneisenau’, ‘Leipzig’, ‘Torpedo’ and ‘Blücher’. Conditions in the camp seem to have been among the best in Britain. Prisoners worked on local farms and built a sewage works for the Camp. The last prisoners were released in early 1919. The Museum has a model ship and a ship in a bottle from this period, and also copies of the newspaper produced by the Germans, ‘Stobsiade’. 45 prisoners were buried in the Camp cemetery, with their remains transferred to Cannock Chase Cemetery in 1962. During WWII there were a small number of Polish and German prisoners located at Stobs. There were about 30 prisoners there towards the end of the War, staying until January 1947, although with minimum security in the last months. German and Italian prisoners were also located in Nissen huts where the Police Station and Katharine Elliot Centre were later built.

the Probus Club (thu-prō-bis-kluh) n. local club for retired professional businessmen, which meets every second Thursday morning for a talk and refreshments. Local clubs are connected with the international Probus organisation (founded 1966), but run autonomously, while being supported by the local Rotary club. The Hawick Club was formed in 1976.

the Procession (thu-pro-se-shin) n. any of the parades associated with the Common Riding, particularly the parade of bands, officials and horses along the High Street on the Friday morning. At the end of the 19th century the route was from the Tower to the Sandbed, then up Wilton Path, Princes Street, Bridge Street, Union Street, then a pause while the Cornet and followers went to the Bogliebarns, after which it proceeded along the High Street and up the Howegate and Loan to the Chase. The Procession is preceded by the walk from the Town Hall after the Cornet has picked up the Flag, with the other Principals, Provost, Bailies and guests walking in procession to the Tower for the singing of the Auld Sang. The Procession includes cars (carriages in former times) containing Councillors and Committee Members, plus the Cornet and mounted supporters and the bands. The modern event starts at 8.45 a.m., with the Halberdiers leading the Provost’s motorcade, with the Lasses’ car in the rear. Then comes the Drums and Fifes leading the Cornet and Principals (who emerge from the Tower pend), with the mounted supporters falling in behind, in the order of ex-Cornets, then ex-Acting Fathers, then visiting principals, then the rest. The route goes via the Sandbed, up Wilton Path, along Princes Street to Dovemount, then back along Bridge Street. At the Horse the Saxhorn Band join, and lead the Procession up the Loan.

the Proclamation (thu-pro-kla-mā-shin) n. the official announcement made on the Thursday by the Burgh Officer charging the Burgesses to ride the marches. Once this would have been made at the Mercat Cross, and later from the ‘Oyes door’ in the old Town House, but now it is done from the Town Hall Balcony immediately after the Colour Bussing. The Saxhorn Band provide the fanfare for the Big Fower and the Halberdier appearing outside the Town Hall, this being the first time the townsfolk have seen the bussed Flag. The text of the announcement is: ‘These are to give advertisements to all burgesses within the Burgh and Town of Hawick, and burgesses outwith the same, that the Provost, Bailies and Council are to ride the marches of the Comonnty of Hawick upon Friday the ... day of June instant as hath ever been usual. Therefore warning all the said burgesses to attend that day in their best apparel to the end aforesaid’. The text is essentially unchanged since being recorded in 1733. Afterwards the Cornet waves the Flag and it is left on display. The Lasses and Maids of Honour then usually appear from the balconies and the bands and halberdiers lead the Cornet and his followers in the Cornet’s Walk. A second Proclamation is made at the Mill Path on the Friday afternoon, stating that the marches have been duly ridden: ‘For as much as the Provost, Bailies and Council of the burgh of Hawick, with the burgesses of the said burgh, have this day ridden the marches of the Comonnty of Hawick, as has been in use yearly since time immemorial, without interruption or molestation of any sort; therefore, if any nobleman, gentleman, or others, having lands lying contiguous or adjacent to the said Commonty, shall find themselves leizd or prejudiced in any sort by this day’s marching, they are hereby required to state their objections thereto to the Provost, Bailies and Council of the said burgh within forty days from this date otherwise they shall be held to have acquiesced in the said marching’. The Proclamations were properly incorporated into the Common Riding ceremonies in 1900. In the early 2000s they were replaced with versions using the Hawick vernacular. Before the Division of the Common a proclamation was made at the Mercat Cross on Common Riding Friday, stating which parts of the Common were to be used for cutting turf etc. in the coming year.

Proctor (prok-tur) n. Rev. James (1826–60) probably born at Dalkeith. He started as an apprentice tailor, then switched to carpentry. He also became a strong advocate for Teetotalism, joining the British League of Junior Abstainers. He attended Edinburgh University and became a missionary under Rev. William Reid of Edinburgh. His health prevented him from completing the arduous course with the United Presbyterians, so he entered the Congregational Church. He became minister at Hamilton Congregational Kirk in 1857, but resigned in the following year due to ill-health (and perhaps partly because of disputes among the congregation about remaining out of the Congregational Union, with which he had been involved). He became minister at Hamilton Congregational Church, but again his health cut this appointment short. He married Janet Chisholm and they had 1 child, but she died giving birth to a second. He wrote ‘A Crack about the Drink; or, a Poetical Dialogue between a Total Abstainer and a Moderate Drinker’ (1949). He also wrote poetry and hymns.

provost (pro-vist) n. Scottish version of mayor, being chief magistrate, chairman of the town council and civic head (from Old English).

the Provost (thu-pro-vist) n. Hawick’s first Provost was George Wilson in 1861 after the council was reconstituted following the Police and Improvement Act of that year. The normal term of office is 3 years. After Reorganisation in 1975, it was decided to continue to appoint a local Councillor to perform the ceremonial role. The title used was Ex-Provost, while the old Provost (Atkinson) continued, then the new incumbent was named Honorary Provost. The duties of the current Honorary Provost include chairing the Provost’s Council, acting as civic head during the Common Riding, selecting the Common Riding Chief Guest and representing Hawick as civic head at Common Ridings and similar ceremonies in neighbouring towns. The following is the full list: George Wilson 1861–68; George Hardie Fraser 1868–71; John Nichol 1871–74; Edward Wilson 1874–75; Robert Ewen 1875–78; Robert Fraser Watson 1878–87; Robert Milligan 1887–90; George Hogg 1890–93; Walter Scott Barrie 1893–96; Robert Mitchell 1896–1902; John Melrose 1902–19; George Heron Wilson 1919–22; James Renwick 1922–28; William Scott Nichol 1928–31; David Fraser 1931–38; J.A.C. Landles 1938–40; Thomas McLagan 1940–45; George Fraser 1945–58; David Atkinson 1958–62; James Henderson 1962–68; David Atkinson 1968–77; Frank T. Scott 1977–82; Jake Irvine 1982–88; Myra Turnbull 1988–96; Tom Hogg 1996–99; John R. Scott 1999–2002; John Robertson 2002–03; Zandra Elliot 2003–05; Kenny McCartney 2005–07; Zandra Elliot 2007–11; Ron Smith 2011–13; Stuart Marshall 2013–17; Watson McAteer 2017–. ‘Here’s to our Provost, that gallant auld Teri, Nane better than he likes to hear the auld sang’ [JEDM] (see also Honorary Provost).

the Provost’s Breakfast (thu-pro-vists-brek-fist) n. ceremonial breakfast taking place traditionally in the Town Hall on the Friday morning of the Common Riding, and including the Magistrates, Councillors and other invited guests. The event was inaugurated by Provost Watson in 1885 at his home at Wilton Bank, and held in the Council Chambers from 1888. Unlike most other events, speeches are prohibited. The Cornet and his guests breakfast separately, formerly in the Tower Inn.

the Provost’s Chain (thu-pro-vists-chain) n. chain of office of the Hawick Provost, first worn by Provost Melrose in 1906 along with the ceremonial robe. It was purchased through public subscription, initiated by the Callants’ Club. The design is in the ‘renaissance’ style, in 15 carat gold, weighing about 30 ounces. It consists of 30 parts linked together, 14 of which are shields for the names of Provosts, 8 are thistles with the motto ‘Nemo me impune laceret’ and the last 8 are circular wreaths of oak leaves bearing an ornamental ‘H’ and mural coronets with the sword and scales of justice. The monogram of the Provost forms the back link of the collar, while the badge of the Callant’s Club in enamel forms the front link. The badge that hangs from the chain measures 4½ by 3 inches and is an enamel version of the Burgh Arms. The design and manufacture were by Brock & Son, goldsmiths of Edinburgh. The Chain was in regular use until 1974, when it disappeared during the Common Riding Ball. Worth an estimated £7,000 at the time, its disappearance was a great mystery. The Callants’ Club presented a replacement chain in 1979. However, the original was sent anonymously to the Provost in 2002.

the Provost’s Council (thu-pro-vists-koon-sul) n. Hawick Honorary Provost’s Council, a group consisting of a number of local councillors with sepcific duties during the Common Riding. This body officially invite a young man to be Cornet each year, and its main objective is to fulfil Hawick’s civic functions and ceremonies. It was formerly a sub-committee of the Town Council, but after Reorganisation became an honorary body, consisting of the regional (8 members) and community councillors (4 members) from the Hawick wards, who elect the Honorary Provost and 4 Honorary Bailies from among themselves.

the Provost’s Lamp (thu-pro-vists-lawmp) n. an ornamental lamp which used to be mounted outside the Provost’s house during his term of office, and at one time would be alight as a sign that he was at home. The first Provost who had the lamp was Robert Fraser Watson in 1882. Since Reorganisation it has been kept inside the Town Hall. Flags were also flown outside the Provost’s house since at least 1888.

the Provost’s Room (thu-pro-vists-room) n. an upstairs chamber in the Town Hall, formerly used by the Provost and containing a complete set of photographs of Hawick’s Provosts.

the Provost’s Tent (thu-pro-vists-ten) n. refreshment tent in the centre of the racecourse at the Mair, where the Provost and councillors entertain their guests, a tradition started by Provost Reunwick in the 1920s.

Prowett (prow-i) n. William (b.c.1790) from England, he was a framesmith in Hawick. He who was involved in 1830 with an improvement whereby old frames could be made wider for producing shirts and undergarments rather than just hosiery. He was listed as a framesmith on O’Connell Street in Pigot’s 1837 directory and Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1841 he was living on O’Connell Street (labelled ‘Prowat’s backhouse’) with his wife Mary and children Mary, John and Ann. By 1851 his wife was a widow, listed as a lodging house keeper. William (b.1821/2) born in Traqueer, Kirkcudbright, he was son of William and continued his father’s framesmith business. In 1851 he was at 2 O’Connell Street (perhaps the modern No. 11). His wife was Sarah Anne and their children included Mary Jane, William Henry and John Dodd.

prowsie (prow-see) adj., arch. particular in dress or in work (also ‘prossie’; noted by J. Jamieson).

the Pru (þu-proo) n. popular short form for the Prudential Life Assurance Company, in Hawick referring to the building by the ‘coffin end’ at the Horse. Although the insurance company moved out in the 1970s, the balcony still contains the word ‘Prudential’ carved in stone.

the P.S.A. (þu-pee-es-ã) n. organisation formed locally in 1910 to provide activities for the male youth of Hawick. The idea started in the Midlands of England in 1875, to provide non-denominational Sunday afternoon meetings to encourage young men away from public houses, the ‘Pleasant Sunday afternoon’ brotherhood. A P.S.A. club started in Hawick in the 1890s, but that floundered and it was more firmly established in 1910. This was partly instigated by Hawick’s Rev. William Ainslie, making inquiries about the Birmingham-based movement. Originally the Hawick club had a connection with the Congregational Kirk, but soon became an autonomous organisation. The club organised indoor games and other activities for young men. In particular it has a ‘semi-junior’ rugby team, for 16 to 18 year olds, founded in 1919 by D. Paterson, D. Stavert and Bailie A.J. Hislop. This makes them the oldest semi-junior rugby team in Scotland. The male voice choir was formed in 1932, with first conductor being William Elliot and first accompanist Robert Little. The clubrooms were on Teviot Crescent, providing indoor games facilities for boys from the age of 12. It was run by volunteers, basically providing a boys ‘youth club’, before local authorities thought about such things. The clubrooms had 7 billiard tables, carpet bowls and table tennis. The club also had a cricket team, a drama group and an orchestra at one time, and held an annual New Year’s bowling tournament. When the clubrooms closed in 1961 the building was acquired by Barrie’s knitwear and later demolished to make way for a supermarket. The rugby team and choir survive to this day (the choir being the only remaining P.S.A. choir in Britain). They were the first local junior rugby team to have their own pitch, acquiring some waste ground at Burnfoot in 1958, and building facilities there in 1960. The team is nicknamed ‘the Peeskees’, and plays in navy blue shirts with a gold hoop and navy socks with gold tops. Highlights include winning the Scottish Youth Championship in 1986/87 and again in 2003/04. In 2016 the rugby team effectively merged with the Wanderers, with the teams training together and swapping roles as ‘A’ and ‘B’ teams in alternating years. Minute books and team photographs exist from 1919, and a booklet ‘Memories of a Great Club’ was printed for the 75th anniversary in 1994.

the P.S.A. Choir (þu-pee-es-ã-kwIr) n. male-voice choir associated with the ‘Pleasant Sunday Afternoon’ club. The choir was set up in 1932. The first conductor was William Elliot and the first accompanist was Robert Little (both men being organists in the Congregational Kirk). Later conductors included Bert Hutchison, Albert Budge, Eric Whitehead, W.R. Smith, Jeff Panes, John Leishman, Basil Deane, Ian Seeley, Susan Booth, Isaac MacRae and Ann Witherington. Accompanists have included Robert Little, Adam Ingles, A. Whitelaw, Agnes Young, Peggy Hunter, Nan Ellis, Brian Bonson, Betty Scott, George Duthie and Linden Warburton. The choir has performed over the years with the Hawick Drama Club, Hawick Orchestral Society and the Saxhorn Band. During the war they performed concerts to raise money for the Red Cross. They have sung with many special guests, including Dame Isobel Baillie. They hold an annual dinner in November.

pu (poo) v., arch. to pull – ‘Pu’ me, we wull rin efter thee …’ [HSR], ‘When flowers o’ life ye fain wad pu’ …’ [WP], ‘And pu’ed the sprigs o’ heather bloom Frae aff her bracs sae green’ [JSE], n., arch. a pull (sometimes written ‘pu’); pul is more common locally.

puds (pubs) n., pl. public houses, establishments where alcoholic beverages are served. Hawick has had (at least) its fair share of these over the years, and they have formed a central part of the social and political life of the town. In earlier times there were many licensed establishments in some back room, known only by the name of the proprietor. In the year 1838/9 the number of licenses granted to inn-keepers, grocers and others in Hawick Parish was 53, with the vast majority undoubtedly in the Town itself. An incomplete list, including some popular names as well as official names, but excluding hotels and private clubs, is: the Albion Bar; the Athole Bar; the Balmoral; Barclay’s; the Black Bull; Blondette’s; the Blue Anchor; the Blue Bell; Bogart’s; the Bridge Bar; the Britannia Airms; the British Public House; the Buck Inn; the Bull & Butcher; Burnfitt Roadhouse; the Burns Inn; Callaghan’s; the Cannon Inn; Clinty’s; the Coach an Horses; the Commercial Inn; the Cross Keys; Dalton’s; Diesel’s; the Douglas Airms; the Drop Inn; the Drumlanrig Bar; the Ewe an Lamb; the Exchange; the Ex-Pat; the Fiddle Inn; the Fleece Inn; Frankie’s; Gentle’s; the Glencairn Bar; the Golden Fleece; the Grapes; the Gretel; the Half-Moon Hotel; the Hare an Hoons; the Harrow Inn; the High Level; Holland House; the Imperial; the Inn Place; the Irish Harp; Jock Reid’s; the Kazba, the King’s Head; the Mansfield Bar; the Mayfield Bar; the Melgund; the Monkeys; the Nag’s Head; the No. 10; the Oak Trei; the Office; the Ordnance Airms; the Pick Inn; the Plough Inn; the Punch Bowl; the Queen’s Head; the Railway Hotel; Robbie’s; the Royal; the Royal Oak; the Salmon Inn; Scrumz; the Somewhere Else; the Stag’s Head; Stampers; the Station; St. Leonard’s Vaults; the Swan Inn; the Teribus Airms; Thordykes; the Trinity Bar; the Trough Inn; the Union Inn; the Waverley; the West End Bar; the White Hart; the White Swan; the Wultan Bar – ‘The pubs are bad – but clubs are worse, the people all did cry, Suppress the clubs, they’re worse than pubs, they sell drink on the sly’ [JCG].

Pud (pud) n. common male nickname, e.g. in the Miller and Arnott families.

puddin (pu-din, pu-dn, poo-din) n. sausage meat pudding, e.g. ‘white puddin’ – ‘They’ll hae oor puddens oot by turns, We’ll get oor paiks! A’ owre-the-heid o’ Rabbie Burns, Yon king o’ raiks!’ [DH].

Puddinburn (pu-din-burn) n. Puddingburn, a former tower and settlement off the Hermitage Water in Castleton Parish, perhaps close to the modern Paddington Sike. It could be the earthwork near the confluence of Paddington Sike with the Hermitage Water. It may be the ‘Pantodene’ listed on the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale, valued at 8 shillings and with tenant William Elliot. An English letter of 1584 mentions ‘the Armstronges of Times alias Puddyborne’; this makes it clear that at that time the Armstrongs of Tinnis and of Puddingburn were one and the same; this may suggest that Puddingburn was close to (or another name for) the Tinnis Burn, and not near Paddington Sike at all, or else simply that the Armstrongs of Tinnis also had a seat at Paddingburn. ‘Sim of Puddinge burne’ is mentioned in an English letter of 1600. It is probably the place transcribed as ‘Podotum’ among the possessions of Francis Beattie in 1632. In the 1718 survey of lands of the Scotts of Buccleuch the former farmstead was combined with Nether and Over Steele, along with other small farmsteads. This was once a stronghold of the Armstrongs and mentioned in the ballad ‘Dick o the Cow’. A note in Cow’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784) records that the farm was then on the lands of Reidmoss (even though that lies far to the south), with the old farmhouse converted into a sheepfold – ‘Then Dickie’s come on for Pudding-burn, Fala, &c. E’en as fast as he might drie – Now Dickie’s come on for Puddingburn, Where there were thirty Armstrongs and three. Fala, &c.’ [CPM]. The poem also contains a reference to a habit of the Armstrongs that you would get no dinner if you failed to come when first summoned – ‘Then it was the use of Puddingburn, Fala, &c. And the house of Mangerton, all haill, These that came na at the first ca’ They got nae mair meat t’ the neist meal’ [CPM] (labelled ‘Paddowedmi’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map, it is possible it is the ‘Potterlamport’ on Sandison’s c.1590 map and it is ‘Paddiden’ on the 1718 Buccleuch survey; see also Paddington Sike).

Purcell (pur-sel) n. Isobel (17th C.) recorded in 1643 being in Rule. Her lands in Abbotrule Parish were valued at £15. James (17th/18th C.) Wright in Hawick. He witnessed baptisms in 1707 for weaver James Jolly, in 1708 for Andrew Richardson and Isobel Purcell (who was probably related to him), in 1711 and 1718 for weaver David Reid, and in 1715 for weaver Jasper Richardson. He could be the James born in 1678 to John and Catherine Scott. He was on the short-list for candidates to be Cornet in 1712 and was Cornet in 1713. In 1713 he was described as a wright who was one of the tradesmen chosen by the minister and heritors of Hawick to report to the Presbytery on the state of the Manse. He is probably the James who witnessed a baptism for weaver Robert Riddell in 1720. He may have witnessed a baptism for William Rodger in 1731. In 1747 he witnessed a baptism for George Richardson (probably his nephew). He may be the same James who was born in 1678 to John and Catherine Scott. He gave a house to James Richardson, son of his nephew George, who gave evidence regarding the Common in 1767. John (17th C.) Wright in Hawick. He was a resident of the west-side of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. He was listed as a wright among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He is probably the John, married to Catherine Scott, whose children born in Hawick included John (b.1670), Elspeth (b.1672) and James (b.1678). He witnessed baptisms for Thomas Stavert in 1684 and for weaver Andrew Dodds in 1689. Patrick recorded in 1567, along with Hector Turnbull ‘in Turnbull’ (which seems likely to be a transcription error), brother to George, as well as other Turnbells and Olivers from the same place. David Home of Wedderburn was instructed to enter them to answer charges of raiding into England. His name is given as ‘Part Pursell’ (spelled ‘Purseil’, ‘Purseil’ and ‘Pursil’).

Purdie (pur-dee) n. Richard (1805–70) originally from England, he was baker in Hawick who was an elder in the Relief Kirk. In 1841 he was living at Wilton Pathhead and working as a weaver. But by 1851 he was a baker at No. 3 Loan. He was listed as a baker on the Loan in Slater’s 1852 directory. He married Sarah, daughter of weaver Walter Scott, and sister of William Scott, who became a successful businessman in New York. They appear to have had no surviving children. William (18th C.) resident at Todshaw. His children, baptised in Robertson Parish, included James (b.1763), Walter (b.1765) and Mary (b.1767).

Purdom (pur-dum) n. Alexander (d.c.1788) son of Bailie Walter. He subscribed to Cow’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). He married Meiron (or Marion) Scott of Boghall in 1725; her father was Richard Scott. Their children included: Christian (b.1726); Walter (b.1728); Richard (b.1731), probably the merchant in Hawick; John (b.1734); Margaret; and William (b.1741). The witnesses in 1741 were ‘late Bailie’ Walter (his father) and merchant William Oliver. Alexander (18th/19th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. He is probably the Alexander, son of William, who was on the short-list for Cornet in 1794 and who was elected cornet in 1797. He is recorded as Bailie in 1824. He is probably the son of shoemaker William who was born in 1771. He was recorded as a shoemaker on the High Street in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. Probably the same man was the shoemaker who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He is probably the ‘A. Purdom’ who owned property at about 48 High Street (and next to Robert’s property at 46) on Wood’s 1824 map. On of his children was buried in 1829. Alexander (19th C.) son of joiner Richard, he married Margaret (or Marion) Hunter in Hawick in 1850 and they emigrated to Canada. Their sons Thomas and Alexander established a legal firm of Purdom & Purdom in London, Ontario, and they had 2 other sons, Richard and John. Archibald (1762/3–1849) mason in Newcastle. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘ Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. He is also listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories (as ‘ Purdon’, which must be an error). He was recorded as a head of household in Newcastle in 1835. In the 1841 census he was living in the village with his children Isobel (or Isobel, 1804/5–83) and Gideon. He married Margaret Miller, who died in 1820, aged 44. His son Gideon erected a memorial to him and his wife in Ettleton Cemetery. Arthur (1819/20–63) son of Robert, labourer in Castleston. He was a Sergeant in the 9th Lancers, serving in the Punjab and through the Indian Mutiny. He retired in the position of Quartermaster-sergeant. In 1861 he was living with his parents at Longhaugh Cottage and listed as a Chelsea Pensioner. Charles McLaren, J.P. (1864–1928) son of Thomas. He became a joint agent of the National Bank of Scotland. Chrystal (15th/16th C.) recorded as ‘Cristale Purdoun’ along with ‘Joh Purdoun’ in a ‘respite’ of 1516 to William Elliot of Larriston and several other Liddesdale Elliots, together with a large number of other men bound to them. David (15th C.) land-owner in the Liddesdale area, who held the lands of ‘Dalman’, ‘Bluntwood’ and ‘the Crouke’. In 1476 these lands were granted to Robert Elliot of Redheugh. He may have been ancestor of the local Purdoms. Findlay (19th/20th C.) son of Thomas. He farmed at Tushielaw and at Borthaugh. He died in Vancouver. George (16th C.) English fugitive recorded in 1541. He was reset by Alexander Armstrong in Monkbhirst, along with Jamie, as well as 2 Waughs. He may have been related to the Hawick Purdoms. Henry Leman ‘Harry’ (b.1879) son of Town Clerk Robert. He attended classes at St. Andrews University in 1896/7. He became a traveller with William Watson & Sons. He served with the K.O.S.B. during WWI. James ‘Jamie’ (16th C.) English fugitive recorded in 1541. He was reset by Alexander Armstrong in Monkbhirst, along with George, as well as 2 Waughs. His name was given as ‘Jamy Purdome’. He may have been related to the Hawick Purdoms. James (17th C.) proprietor of Milsington recorded in the 1650 list of ‘communicants’ of the Borthwick valley. He may have been married to Margaret Nichol and had sons Robert (b.1640) and James (b.1643). The baptism in 1640 was witnessed by Robert Scoon and Adam Laidlaw. In 1652 there is an account with the Buccleuch papers of the losses and damages he had sustained ‘by the English army since Martimas 1650’; this was probably Cromwell’s army. John (15th/16th C.) recorded as ‘John Purdoum’ in a ‘respite’ in the Register of the Privy Seal given to Robert of Larristons.
and a large number of his kin and associates. ‘Cristale Purdoun’ is also listed. John (17th C.) recorded as an appraiser for a Hawick Magistrates Court case of 1642 involving livestock eating someone’s grain. He may well have been the father or grandfather of the schoolmaster. John (1642/3–c.1725) schoolmaster in Hawick in the latter part of the 17th century and early 18th. He took over in 1669, following Mr. Chisholme, who briefly held the position after Walter Martin; he was thus perhaps the third of Hawick’s Parish Schoolmasters. He remained in the position for 54 years and finally retired in 1723 at the age of 80. For most of this time he taught in St. Mary’s Kirk itself, with the graveyard as the school playground. He also served as reader in the kirk, as well as Session Clerk (writing the entries in the parish records in a beautiful hand). He was already referred to as ‘Mr’ in 1673, 1675, 1676 and 1680 when he witnessed baptisms for James Newbie, John Elliot of Brugh, William Moscrop and William Laing. He was apparently injured during the siege of Drumlanrig Tower by the Covenanting army in 1679. He witnessed a baptism for George Young and Janet Purdom (perhaps his sister) in 1680. He was ‘Mr John Purdom’ in 1682 when he witnessed a couple of baptisms (one along with Walter) and in 1685 when he witnessed a baptism for mason David Rutherford and in 1689 when he witnessed a baptism for merchant Robert Hardie. Also in 1689 he and Walter witnessed a baptism for Thomas (who was therefore presumably a close relative). In 1694 he was listed as ‘Mr John Purdim’ on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick ‘eist the water’ in 1694. He witnessed a baptism for weaver John Jolly in 1700. It is possible that he had an influence (in the pro-Covenanter direction) on the young Robert Paterson (‘Old Mortality’). For about the last 12 years he taught in the Parish School at the same time as the Grammar School existed, although he had a diminished salary, and complained that he was ‘deprived both of learning humanity (i.e. Latin) and of ye ordinary salarie (having no salarie allocat to him for reading the Scriptures upon the Lord’s day, forenoon and afternoon, and being clerk to ye session)’. A further complaint was that even apart from the Grammar School, there were others teaching privately in the Town; this came to a head in 1713, when he had the Session proclaim that no one else ‘should in ye future teach farther than ye Psalm-Book’. There were regular entries in the Session Records of small payments to him for teaching poor children. In 1719 he witnessed a baptism for carrier Simon Mark. In 1722 he was given 40 merks by the Council for renting a school-house for 4 years ‘when he had not the liberty to teach in the kirk’. In 1723 he witnessed a baptism for surgeon Walter Scott. He is probably the person referred to as ‘Jo Purdom’ in the 1723 Session records. In 1724 he was allowed £6 Scots for the rent of a house for the rest of his life (which proved not to be very long); the entry’s tone suggests that he was still serving as Session Clerk at that time. It may be that the last entry in the 1711–25 book marks the end of his time; certainly the entries in 1726 are in a different hand. He is likely the John (recorded in the baptismal register as ‘Mr’, suggesting a position of importance in the Town) who married Margaret Scott and had children: Walter (b.1678); Janet (b.1680); Margaret (b.1680), who probably died young; James (b.1683); Margaret (again, b.1685), who married tailor Thomas Wilkie in 1720; and Elizabeth (b.1687), who may have married merchant William Chisholm. The 1680 baptism was witnessed by Walter (probably the Bailie), suggesting he was a brother or other close relative and the 1685 baptism by Bailie William Laing and ‘Mr’ Walter Gledstains (presumably the Town Clerk). He appears to have married a second time, with children (to ‘Mr’ John, making it clear this was him) including Walter (b.1700), Marion (b.1705) and Anna (b.1709), with no mother named. The witnesses in 1700 were ‘late Bailie’ William Laing and James Falsyde and in 1709 were Town Clerk Walter Gledstains and Walter Elliot, Bailie Depute of the Regality of Hawick. John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Ann Little and their children included John (b.1760). John (18th/19th C.) hosier at Wilton Damside along with William (possibly his brother). He was listed as manufacturer at Damside among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1835 (but not listed in 1840). The manufacturing business lasted until about 1837. He was listed along with William as a joint proprietor on the 1837 electoral roll. He may be the John who was married to Joan (or Jean) Douglas and had children Elizabeth, Euphemia, William, John, Agnes, Mary and Joan in the period 1816–32; Joan lived with her children at Damside in 1841. John (b.1821/2) son of John and Joan Douglas. He was a grocer and spirit dealer on Wilton Path, helped by his mother and his sister Euphemia. He was listed as a grocer in Slater’s 1852 directory. He is listed on Wilton Path in 1851 and 1861, probably near the south end of the east side. In 1857 he donated to the Museum the skull of an ancient ox, found in Wulliestruther Moss.

John Ritchie, O.B.E., J.P. (1862–1935) 4th son of Thomas, he was Depute Town Clerk in 1888, joint Town Clerk with his brother Robert from 1912, and then on his own 1924–36. He was honorary recruiting officer in WWI, Secretary of the War Memorial Committee, as well a Chairman of the War Pensions Committee, for which service he received the O.B.E. in 1920. He was also Honorary Sheriff-Substitute for Roxburghshire. In his younger days he was a keen member of the Volunteers and interested in sports, particularly golf and hiking. He married Annie Hume Turnbull (1865–1916), daughter of dyer Alexander Turnbull and Janet Armstrong Hume. Their only son was Capt. Thomas Laurence. Margaret (18th C.) recorded in Hawick in 1684 when her unnamed child was baptised. No father’s name was given, and it is unclear if this was an error or the father was deceased or the child born illegitimately. The witnesses were William (probably a close relative) and George Young. Richard (b.1731) tailor and merchant in Hawick, son of Alexander and Marion Scott. In 1762 he witnessed a baptism for shoemaker James Chisholme. In 1779 he and Walter witnessed a baptism for William (who may have been a relative). He married Jane Scott and their children included: Agnes (b.1761); Alexander (b.1762); Marion (b.1764); John (b.1766); Margaret (b.1767); an unnamed child (b.1768); Marion (again, b.1772); Thomas (b.1773); Marion (again, b.1774); and Richard (b.1775). The witnesses in 1761 were the whole congregation, in 1762 were John Scott (presumably related to his wife, perhaps his father-in-law) and Thomas Wilkie, in 1764 were John Scott (again) and William (probably his brother), in 1766 were John Scott and Walter (probably another relative), in 1772 were James Scott (perhaps related to his wife) and Alexander (probably his father) and in 1773 were John Scott (again) and Thomas Wilkie (again). He was deceased in 1805 when the deaths of his daughters Marion and Agnes are recorded.

Richard (1776–1841) joiner of Kirkstile. He was son of Bailie Walter and Agnes Oliver. He was listed on Silver Street in Pigot’s 1837 directory. In 1841 his address was given as ‘Kirk Syttefoot’. His wife was Isobella Elliot (c.1790–1845). His children were: Richard, joiner and lay preacher; John, shoemaker; Alexander, who emigrated to Canada; Jane; and Agnes. One of his children was buried in Hawick in 1829. Richard (1817/8–77) joiner on Kirkstyle, like his father. He was also known as a lay preacher. He was listed as a joiner on Silver Street in Slater’s 1852 directory. He was an early member of the Hawick Total Abstinence Society, who gave many teetotalism speeches around the area. He played an active part in the local Good Templar movement in the mid-19th century. He was one of the first Deacons in the Evangelical Union (later Congregational) Kirk from 1848, was one of the first Trustees and the 2nd Secretary and 2nd Treasurer, and was the leading elder in the 1860s. He married Margaret Elliot in 1848 and their children included: Isabella, who married George Winstrup; Richard; Elizabeth; and Mary. Some of his correspondence and diaries are in the Borders Archive. Robert (d.c.1686) tenant at ‘Cartarburnfoot’ when his will was recorded in 1686. Robert (17th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Janet Griev and their children were: Margaret (b.1670); and Janet (b.1674). Bailie Robert (1777–1862) son of Walter and Agnes Oliver, he was a farmer and resident at 46 High Street. He appears to have been selected by ballot to serve on the Roxburghshire Militia in 1799. He was Cornet in 1803, and later became a Magistrate. His father and paternal grandfather had both been Bailie Walter, innkeepers in Hawick and ‘Hilliesland Lairds’, keeping cows in fields up past the Wellogate and selling milk in the town (and a pond beyond Hilliesland was popularly called ‘Purdom’s Pond’ until fairly recent times). When Cornet, he was said to have been thrown from his horse near Hagishaa and taken into a house there to recover. As a result the route out to the Moor was changed to go along the now familiar Nipknewed road. He was the last of the family to hold the orchards and lands near the foot of what became Croft Road. He is shown on Wood’s 1824 map as owner of fields and trees around Mart Street and North Bridge Street, as well as the property at 46 High Street. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He is listed as a High Street farmer in Slater’s 1852 directory. By 1851 he was listed as a retired farmer. In 1817 in Hobkirk Parish he married Mary, daughter of Thomas Smith and Mary Scott (‘the Flower of Rankleburn’). Their children included: Walter, farmer; Thomas, Town Clerk; Mary, who married Robert Scott, farmer of Kinninghall and later Falnash; Agnes; Alexander; Robert; and several children who did not long survive. A daughter of his died in Hawick in 1840. A portrait of him exists. At the time of his death was the oldest living...
Purdom, Burgess and Magistrate. Robert (1792–1861) agricultural labourer in Castleton Parish. He was at Bygate in 1841 and Longhaugh in 1851 and 1861. He married Agnes (1792–1880), daughter of William Beattie; she died at Hillside, Hawick. Their children included: Robert, who died in infancy; John (b.1817); Arthur (1818/9–63), who was Quartermaster-sergeant in the 9th Lancers; Laidlaw; William (1821/2–99), who died at St. Leonard’s Cottage; Isabella (1823/4–36); Robert (again, b.1831); Agnes (b.1834), who married William Laidlaw; and perhaps a second Isabella. The family are mostly buried in Ettrickton Kirkyard. Robert (1846–1924) eldest son of Thomas, he attended Wilton School and went on to become a local solicitor and banker. He was Depute Town Clerk in 1868 and served as Town Clerk 1886–1924. He turned down the chance of carrying the Flag at the Nipknowes in 1891, stating that he felt the official connection between the Town Clerk and the Common Riding had ceased about 50 years earlier. He gave a speech at the first public Colour-Bussing concert of 1894, thus being a predecessor of the Chief Guest. He was instrumental in founding the Golf Club in 1877, placing the notice asking for interested parties to meet in his office. He was the first Secretary and Treasurer of the club and also became Club Captain. In addition he was Secretary of the School of Art and of the Cottage Hospital. He was the main trustee for the estate of James Farrar Blenkhorn. In 1873 he married Helen Emma ‘Nellie’ Leman, daughter of a doctor in Ballarat, Victoria (and she died in 1924). Their children were: Thomas (b.c.1874), who moved to New Zealand; Henry Leman (b.1879), who was a traveller with William Watson & Sons; Robert Leman (1884/5–1917), also known as ‘Robin’, who died in WWI; Angus, who worked as a tea planter; Emma Mabel, who married Capt. Walter Francis Cochrane, Gala manufacturer, was mother of the epepidemiologist Archibald (‘Archie’) Leman Cochrane, and secondly married John Locke, Royal Navy engineer; and Elizabeth Neish, who married Rear-Adm. G. Pirie Thomson. He lived at Westwood, which was built for him about 1880. His portrait hangs in the Town Hall. Robert Leman ‘Robin’ (1883/4–1917) son of Robert. He served in WWI with the 11th Battalion Royal Scots and was killed at Kemmel Hill. He is buried at Faubourg d’Amiens Cemetery, Arras. Thomas (16th/17th C.) recorded as ‘Thome Purdoun in Brumeshillbrig’. He was listed among men of Eskdale, Evesdale, etc. who were declared as fugitives for non-appearance at a court in Peebles in 1605. Thomas (17th C.) ‘litster’ who is listed among those who subscribed to the fund for the new Kirk bell in Hawick in 1693/4. He was probably the Thomas listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick ‘eist the water’ in 1694. He married Margaret Bell and their son Walter was born in 1689, with another John (with no mother given) born in 1693. The witnesses in 1689 were Walter and schoolmaster John (who were both surely related). Thomas (1820–86) 2nd son of Robert, he was an accountant and agent for the National Bank of Scotland, and head of a legal business. He was a Councillor from 1854. He served as the last Junior Magistrate of Hawick in 1861 on the old ‘eternal’ council, and was heavily involved in putting the ‘Police Act’ into operation. He was elected to the new council for South High Street Ward that same year and became Senior Magistrate. He was then Town Clerk from 1862 (succeeding from James Wilson) until his death in 1886. He was an Assessor for the county of Roxburghshire. He also acted as secretary for the Border Union Railway committee in their contest with the Caledonian Company for the Hawick to Carlisle line. He was known as a powerful public speaker and was also an occasional lay preacher. He served as one of the first Deacons and first Trustees of the Evangelical Union (later Congregational Kirk, from 1848. In 1845 he married Elizabeth Wilson Neish (daughter of a Dundee manufacturer), and she died in 1859, aged 38. Their children included: Robert, of Westwood, who succeeded as Town Clerk; Hannah (or Anna) Maria, who died in 1887; William Neish, who died aged 23; Thomas Edie; and Mary Smith (d.1932), who married Algernon Fielden Ramsden of Worksop. He secondly married Hannah (1827–98), daughter of Peter Findlay and brother of John Ritchie Findlay, proprietor of the Scotsman newspaper. Their children were: John Ritchie, also Town Clerk; Charles McLaren, banker; Walter Alexander, electrical engineer of Australia, who married his cousin Mary Smith Purdom; Edward, who died young; Findlay, farmer of Borthaugh, who died in Vancouver; Elizabeth Findlay, who married Dr. George Wade of Melrose and moved to Tasmania; and Arthur Muirhouse, who died in infancy. He died at Croydon and his portrait hangs in the Town Hall, painted by Frank Watson Wood. Thomas Edie (1853–1942) 3rd son of Town Clerk Thomas. He became a doctor and died in Croydon. His children were Robert Ramsden, Ethel Mary, Lillian Frances, William...

Percy, Elizabeth Winnifred, Arthur, Constance Hannah, Harold Neish, Elsie, Reginalds, Gwendoline Mary and Irene Margaret. Capt. Thomas Laurence (1892–1927) only son of Town Clerk John Ritchie. He was a squadron leader in the Royal Air Force during WWI and was awarded the Military Cross for having ‘shown the most exceptional gallantry and daring in engaging enemy aircraft’. His only daughter Dorothy Hume married Percival Charles Edward Wilkinson of the Royal Scots Fusiliers. Walter (17th C.) Hawick resident, married to Janet Marr. Their children included: John (b.1648); William (b.1651); and Thomas (b.1654). He may be the Walter who was elected to the Council in 1648. He may be the Walter who witnessed baptism in 1654 for Robert Turnbull and for John Scott. He could also be the Walter who was one of Hawick’s Commissioners in Kelso who were insulted in 1657 by Robert Hardie (who was fined by the Magistrates). Bailie Walter (dbef. 1708) recorded as Magistrate in 1668, 1674 and probably later. He was described as a ‘late bailie’ when he was part of the Commission to discuss the division of the Common with agents of the Earl of Queensberry in 1672. In 1674 he was Bailie when William Hall drew his sword at him and threatened to shoot him. Also in 1674 someone was fined for disobedience to the Magistrates for not giving him his horse to ride to Jedburgh to deal with the Town’s affairs. He was probably the ‘Bayleya Purdome’ (and likely an ex-Bailie at that point) recorded in 1675 among the men named to go to check on the boundary wall being built by Walter Scott of Goldielands, to ensure that the right to sit there was held by the current Bailies; along with Robert Scott (son of another deceased Bailie) he spent 24 hours in the jail. In 1714 he witnessed a baptism for Robert Laidlaw, herd in Commonside and was probably the Walter who witnessed baptisms in 1720 for weaver Walter Douglas and for candlemaker John Scott. He was probably the Bailie Purdom who witnessed baptisms in 1725 for Thomas Hardie and in 1726 for merchant William Chisholme and Elizabeth Purdom (surely related to him). He was also a Bailie himself, mentioned in the period 1722 to 1737. He may be the Walter who witnessed baptism for Adam Kersel and for Adam Scott in 1731. In 1715 he was given custody of one of the keys to the Charter Chest (and so was presumably on the Council). In 1717 he was already an elder, recorded as one of the people to collect money from the East part of the Town. In 1718 he was one of those appointed to resolve the dispute between Bailies Ruecastle and Graham, and also in that year was appointed to try to collect money for a new Kirk clock. In 1721 he witnessed a baptism for Andrew Gray, tenant in Weensland. In 1722 he was a senior elder involved in appointing the new minister. And in 1722 he was elected as Session Treasurer. In 1727 he was a witness to the baptism of a child of William Ekron and in 1728 witnessed a baptism for tailor Walter Scott. He may be the Mr. Purdom of Hawick who married Margaret, 4th daughter of Walter Scott of Todrig. His children included: Walter, who probably died unmarried; and Alexander, who married Meiron Scott of Boghall in 1725. He may also have been the Walter listed as a ‘Dragoon’ in 1700 when his daughter Mary was baptised in Hawick, with witnesses carrier Henry Paterson, Henry Orrock and flesher Robert Smith. James (b.1719), born in Hawick with no mother’s name given may also be his child. In 1728 he was ‘late Bailie’ and husband of Janet Scott, when their daughter Jean was baptised; the witnesses were William Oliver and Alexander ‘…’ (possibly Purdom, i.e. his son). Walter (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Janet McVittie and their daughter Janet was baptised in 1704. Walter (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Isobel Scott in 1716 and their son William was born in 1724. Walter (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Janet Elliot and their children included Walter (b.1724). Walter (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick. In 1722 he married Janet, daughter of Walter Scott. Their children included Jean (b.1728). Bailie Walter (1728-1807) eldest son of Alexander. He was a Bailie several times in the period 1780-1800. In 1764, along with Robert Oliver (probably his father-in-law), he was witness for a baptism for Walter Wilson and Catherine Oliver (his sister-in-law). He is probably the carrier of that name who witnessed a baptism for Richard Scott in 1757, with the other witness being Walter Scott of Boghall (related to his mother), and another for Richard (his brother) in 1766. In 1779 he and Richard witnessed a baptism for William (their brother). He is probably the ‘Bailie Purdom’ recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, listed right after shoemaker William. He may be the Walter listed among local men who contributed generously to the war effort (with France) around 1799. In 1763 he married Agnes, daughter of Robert Oliver and Bessie Blackhall; she was sister of ‘Haunless Wat’s wife, and niece of ‘Auld Cash’ (this probably being the father of the more familiar ‘Auld Cash’). Their children were: Elizabeth (b.1763); Marion (b.1765); Alexander (b.1767); Robert (b.1770), who died young; Richard (b.1773), joiner; Elizabeth (or ‘Betty’, again, b.1774), who married Andrew Oliver; Robert (b.1777), farmer; and Walter (b.1779), tobacconist. The witnesses in 1765 were the whole congregation and in 1774 were merchant Walter Wison and William …. He may be the Walter whose daughter Mary died in Hawick in 1782. Walter (18th C.) known as ‘The Muckle Laird’. In the baptismal record of 1765 he is ‘Senior’. He may be the Walter who witnessed baptisms for miller John Scott in 1776 and 1778. In 1758 he married Robina (or ‘Robina’) Scott, who was related to the local family of millers, probably the daughter of miller James Scott born in 1735. Their children included: Janet (b.1759); Walter (b.1760); James (b.1761); Thomas (b.1763); James (again, b.1765); Robert (b.1765, twin of James); Margaret (b.1767); Jane (b.1769); and Elizabeth (b.1771). The witnesses to the 1759 and 1760 baptisms were miller James Scott (probably his wife’s father) and merchant Thomas Wilkie (whose wife was a Purdom). The witnesses in 1765 were merchant Thomas Wilkie and wright James Scott. It is possible that he was the son of Walter and Janet Elliot born in Hawick in 1724. Walter (b.1779) younger son of Bailie Walter and Agnes Oliver. He was a tobacconist at 1 High Street and also became a Bailie himself. He is listed as a tobacconist on the High Street in Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories, and Slater’s 1852 directory. He was living at 46 High Street in 1841 (with his brother Robert’s family). He died unmarried. Walter (b.1818) eldest son of Robert. He was a farmer at Easter Wooden, Eckford. In 1844 he married Agnes, daughter of Walter John Grieve; she died in 1847. In 1850 he secondly married Isabella Turnbull (b.1830) from Jedburgh. Their children were: Robert (b.1852), spectacle-maker of Sutton Coldfield; James; Agnes; Mary Smith, who married her cousin Walter Alexander; Walter; and Elizabeth Turnbull (b.1860). One of his daughters became Mrs. Dunn. Walter (19th C.) farmer at Ormiston. He was one of the first Trustees of St. George’s Kirk. William (17th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Jean Stewart and their children included: Janet (b.1653); and John (b.1655). He is probably the William who witnessed a baptism for William Ruecastle in 1671 and for Margaret (perhaps his daughter) in 1684. He could be the William who was charged in 1685 with ‘breach of waird and severall abuses committ aggt. the bayleyes’. He might also be the William mentioned in the Burgh Records in 1686 when 2 new marchers of the boundaries within the town were appointed; he was stated to have been a former marcher, along with John Hardie and William Paisley. He witnessed a baptism for Alexander Young and Marion Stewart (probably a relative of his wife) in 1682; the other witness was George Young (married to Janet Purdom, who may thus have been his son-in-law), and probably another for Andrew Cook. In 1680 he witnessed a baptism for John Stewart (perhaps related to his wife) and another for a Mr. Reid. In 1684 he witnessed baptisms for Thomas Stavert and John Tinlin. William (1741-1818) son of Alexander and Marion Scott. He was a shoemaker recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls for Hawick. He is probably the William who in

once the most famous clown and showman in the Borders. He regularly toured around the south of Scotland and north of England, putting on all kinds of shows, including conjuring, ventriloquism, freak-shows, small circuses and plays. He acted, sang local ballads, played the bagpipes, danced and told jokes. In Hawick he stayed at the Fleece Inn, where he performed in the ballroom for 3 nights and moved into the larger Town Hall for another 3 nights; the landlord of the Fleece Inn, George Hunter, waived his bill, and Purves purchased a silver-mounted snuff-box for him. On another occasion he performed in a theatre in Hawick where Albert Mills was later built. He was buried in Hartlepool. Dr. William Brown (1799–1852) from Edinburgh, he married Margaret (1798–1855), daughter of John Laidlaw, who was from Weens. He contracted a disease related to his work, which killed both him and his wife. Their children were: John, who died young; Alexander, W.S., who was a lawyer in Edinburgh and purchased an estate in Peebleshire; and Dr. William Laidlaw (1842–1917), who was an ear surgeon and golfing pioneer. After his death, his 2 sons were raised by their maiden aunts Jane and Euphemia Laidlaw. William (1814/5–1902) born in Melrose, he was a whip-maker on the High Street. He was listed among heads of households of Wilton Kirk in 1835, when he was at Damside; by 1840 he was listed living in Hawick. He was listed on the High Street in Pigot’s 1837 directory and in Slater’s 1852 directory. He was recorded on the High Street in 1841 (perhaps near No. 5), and around 12–14 in 1851, when he was employing 4 men. In 1861 he was at 1 High Street, listed as a whip-maker, grocer and fruiterer. He was described as ‘of a simple, happy disposition naturally’. He is said to have given up most of his activities to pursue a spiritual calling, including singing religious songs. He married Christian Douglas, who died in 1875, aged 62. Their children included Isabella Scott, who married James Gowans and an unnamed son who died in 1840. Sir William, C.B.E., D.S.O. (1931– ) son of a tenant farmer, he was born in Kelso, but from 1932–42 the family lived in Bedrule, where his mother was a teacher. He worked as a banker, working largely in the far east, becoming Chairman and C.E.O. of The Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation. On returning to the U.K. he was involved in overseeing the transition of Hong Kong to Chinese control. He was on the committee of the Scottish Rugby Union, became a Trustee of the National Museums of Scotland and was Vice President of the National Trust for Scotland. He (also ‘Purvis’).

Purvinen (pur-vi-nin) n. former name for lands in southern Liddesdale, perhaps where Heugh Head is marked on modern maps, on the south side of the Tinnis Burn. In the rental roll of 1541 it is ‘Purvenen’, when leased, along with Whisgills and ‘Vtnomound’, to Bartholomew and Ninian Armstrong. In 1634 the 40-shilling lands of ‘Purvenen’ were inherited by Margaret from her father Archibald Douglas of Greena. In 1642 John of Gervald (2nd son of Sir William of Cavers) was granted lands of Burnmouth, ‘Greina’ (Greena) and ‘Purvinen’ in Liddesdale ‘in fee’, with his father having the ‘liferent’. John Forester of Stanegarthside inherited the lands of ‘Greina, Purviven and Burnemouth’ from his uncle Nicholas in 1693 (it is ‘Purvieun’ on Blaee’s c.1654 map; the origin or meaning of the name are obscure).

Pyatknowe Sike

Pyatknowe Sike (pl-i'-now) n. hill to the south-east of Dod, with the Pyatknowe Sike rising on it. There was formerly a farmstead here, where John Henderson was living in 1787. A shelf on the north side contains the remains of a fairly well-defined settlement, about 75 m by 45 m. The interior contains 2 courts, as well as 2 circular depressions, although these are probably quarry pits. There is also a second probable settlement nearer to the summit, this being oval in shape, about 65 m by 40 m, with an entrance at the west side. The Catrail crosses to the south of the hill, connecting to Barry Sike (it is ‘Pyetknow’ in 1787).

Pyatknowe Sike

Pyatknowe Sike (pl-i’-now-sik) n. small stream that joins the Dod Burn near the Pyat Sike Plantation, south-east of the farmstead of Dod. There are several linear earthworks in the area, crossing part of White Hill to the northeast. Although it has been suggested that some of these may be connected with the Catrail, or with the nearby fort and settlement, there is no evidence for these claims. The fort lies to the north of where the Sike meets the Dod Burn. It measures about 60 m by 45 m and is almost entirely covered by a later settlement. To the south of the Sike, on Pyat Knowe are the remains of 2 more settlements.

the Pyat’s Nest (thu-pl-its-nest) n. former name for Pyat Knowe, the hill south-west of Penchrise Pen, crossed by the Catrail, and containing the remains of a settlement (it is the Pyat’s Nest’ in 1880).

Quakers (kwā-kurz) n. religious group, more properly known as the Society of Friends, which reached its peak of membership in the late 17th century. It was influential in Britain in the 18th and 19th centuries through the adherence of many manufacturing families. In Hawick interest began when William Wilson visited a meeting in Glasgow in August 1797, leading to his membership in 1802, followed by many in the Wilson and Watson families. There were also significant visits by prominent Friends, such as prison reformer Elizabeth Fry, with at least 20 Public Meetings being held in Hawick. The group met in William Wilson’s house from 1802 until a Meeting house was built on Buccleuch Street from 1821, with the first Meeting there in 1823. This was a plain building (a sketch of which exists), set back from the street, to the west of the Roman Catholic Chapel. Its location is shown on Wood’s 1824 map, and it is listed among places of worship in Pigot’s 1837 directory. In 1839 the meeting house was described as being attended by only 2 families. The building ceased to be used for this purpose in 1844, after which it was used as a temporary hospital for the 1849 cholera epidemic and as James Murray’s ‘Hawick Academy’. It was demolished in 1866. In an ecclesiastical survey of Scotland in 1815 there were only 5 meeting places in the country, Glasgow, Hawick, Edinburgh, Aberdeen and Kinmuck – ‘...Frae a man that is nae Quaker’ [AB].

Quaker’s Close (kwā-kurz-kloos) n. mid-19th century popular name for the close at 13 High Street, once the residence of manufacturer William Wilson, who was a Quaker. Also known as quarrel (kwa-rul) v., arch. to dispute, challenge, complain, rebuke − ‘... and whereas ye sd Mr John of his own lenity, ... never quarrelled several persons in ye toun to educat children further than ye sd book ...’ [PR1713], ‘William Gladston came and quarrelled him for the badness of the shoes’ [BR] (this form omits the usual English ‘with’).

Quarrelhaa (kwa-rul-haw) n. name for 2 former cottages on the edge of the Harwood-on-Teviot lands, near the stream separating the farm from Chapelhill. They had already disappeared by the mid-19th century, although tailor John Elliot and family is still recorded there in 1841 and 1851. It is said that they were built to check on encroachments of livestock between the farms, and hence the name (although there is also a disused quarry nearby).

Quarry (kwa-ree) n. Andrew (18th C.) from Bowden Parish, in 1787 he married Agnes Hood, who was from Hawick Parish. They had at least 3 children in Bowden.

Quarry Rig (kwa-ree-rig) n. ridge just to the south of the upper part of the Ale Water, being the north-east spur of Deep Slack. A linear earthwork here extended for about 400 m, joining the head of the Hoscote Burn with the Ale Water. Although suggested (by Lynn) to be part of the Cattrail, it is probably of more recent and less significant origin. It has now been obliterated by forestry.

quarter (kwar'-ur) n., arch. fourth part of a unit of volume or weight − ‘For five quarters of cheese £3, 16s.’ [BR1638], ‘Th’ breid in Glesca bein’ reduced a ha’penny th’ quarter laif’ [HEx1921], fourth part of land, perhaps referring locally to a quarter of a ‘particata’ − ‘... one Walter Paterson, laird of Burnflat, and tenant of a quarter land in Hawick ...’ [C&L1767].

quarter days (kwar'-ur-dāz) n. four days formerly regarded as ending a quarter of the year. This was when rents and other payments became due. In Scotland they were traditionally Candlemas, Whitsunday, Lammas and Martinmas.

quarter-maister (kwar'-ur-mās-tur) n. a quarter-master, an official in an incorporated trade, responsible for collecting dues and looking after business affairs. In Hawick this was specifically the name given to the 2 representatives of the 5 (later 7) incorporated trades. They were added to the Town Council in 1739 and remained on it until the council was reorganised in 1861. In 1749 the Council decreed that they should be elected annually before Michaelmas. In 1781 it was formalised that they should be elected on the day before (i.e. Thursday) the election of the Bailies in October. They were also known as ‘deacons of trade’ or just ‘deacons’ – ‘The quarter-masters of the weaver trade complain upon two of their craft, that, ... appealed against a fine, for disobedience to the trade, of four groats to the bailies, and eight pence to the quarter-masters ...’ [JW1676], ‘Complaines John Swan and Robert Tinline the two quartermasters of the trade of weivers within the toune for themselves and in name and behalf of the corporation thereof’ [PR1716].

Quartersides (kwar'-ur-sīdз) n. former name for a small piece of land in Lilliesleaf Parish. In 1788 it was valued at £50, along with Ryechester, when owned by Edgar Hunter of Linthill. It was recorded in the county valuation of 1788 being owned by Charles Riddell of Muselee and in the Land Tax Rolls of about 1811 having been purchased by Sir John Buchanan Riddell.

quarter wage (kwar'-ur-wāj) n., arch. wages or allowance for a quarter year – ‘Walter Bryson addressed the Session desiring that supplie may be given to him for helping to pay the quarter wage for one of his twins latele brought forth ...’ [PR1725].

Quartus (kwawr-tis, kwawr'-is) n. pen-name of William Landles for his weekly notes of a religious flavour published in the Hawick News in the 1970s and 80s. They were collected into three books, ‘I to the Hills’ (1979), ‘All Good Gifts Around Us’ (1982) and ‘Roving Commission’ (1992).

queen (kween) n., arch. school-girl who gave the master the largest sum of money on Candlemas Day, gaining certain privileges. The custom was said to have been abolished in about 1887.

Queen (kween) n. Manasses (b.c.1790) from Ireland, he was a blacksmith in Hawick. He lived on the Round Close in 1841 and had moved to Wilton Kirkstyle by 1851. Living on Langlands Bank in 1861, he was a former framesmith. His wife was Mary, and their children included John, Ann, George, Christian, William, James and Alexander.

the Queen (thu-kween) n. nickname for one of 2 people (the other being ‘the King’) who lived on Sunnyside in Denholm in the late 19th century.

Queen Caroline (kween-kaw-ru-lin) n. Caroline Amelia of Brunswick-Wolfenbuttel, wife of King George IV. The marriage was not happy, and their relationships were a great scandal of the time, the couple being separated for 25 years. In 1820, with the death of George III, she was effectively put on trial, claiming her right to be Queen, against the wishes of the new King. There was great commotion in Hawick, as elsewhere, with the Liberals supporting the Queen and the Tories favouring the King. A message of support was sent by the town to the Queen, which was apparently the first she had received. Supporters illuminated their windows the night the trial result was announced, and some non-supporters had their windows smashed.

Queen Mary see Mary Queen o Scots

Queen Mary’s Burn (kween-mah-reez-burn) n. stream joining the Hermitage Water west of the Castle, presumably named by an association with Mary Queen of Scots visit to Hermitage.

Queen Mary’s Well (kween-mah-reez-wel) n. spring on Hawthrondside farm, where it is traditionally claimed that Mary Queen of Scots stopped to drink on her ride between Jedburgh and Hermitage Castle. The location is the second field from the farmhouse on the right-hand side of the road when going from Hawick to Boscobel. The field was also known as ‘Queen Mary’s Field’. The spring was widely used in the mid-19th century, and still existed in the early part of the 20th century, although the effects of drainage had moved its location somewhat (also known as ‘Mary’s Well’).

Queen o’ Fairies’ Hole (kween-o-fa-reez-hol) n. natural hole in the hillside in Liddesdale, on the south-west of Hunter’s Hill, to the east of Castleton.

The Queen o’ the Auld Scottish Border (thu-kween-o-thu-awld-skoi-ceesh-bor-dur) n. song with words and music by Ian Seeley, written in 1995 and dedicated to Ian Landles. It was first performed by Elliot Goldie at the 1514 dinner of 1995 and included on the 2006 CD ‘Hawick and Teviotdale in Song and Poetry’, sung by Michael Aitken. It is the 3rd of the 5 Hawick songs written by Seeley, and probably the one that has been performed the most.

Queen o the Borders (kween-o-thu-bor-durz) n. local epithet for Hawick – ‘The Queen

the Queen o the Dean (thu-kween-ô-thudeen) n. local name once used (e.g. referred to by James ‘Dictionary’ Murray) for a large pine tree in Denholm Dean.

Queensberry (kweenz-bu-ree) n. title in the peerage of Scotland, associated with descendants of the Douglases of Drumlanrig, derived from a hill in Closeburn Parish, Dumfriesshire. It is unusual because the Dukedom (created in 1684 and inherited by the Duke of Buccleuch in 1810) is now separate from the Marquisesate (created in 1682). Subsidiary titles held by the Marquess of Queensberry include Earl of Queensberry (created 1633), Viscount Drumlanrig (1628) and Lord Douglas of Hawick and Tibbers (also 1628).

Queensberry Place (kweenz-bu-ree-plis) n. original street name for the upper houses in Waverley Terrace, named after the Dukedom of Buccleuch and Queensberry, but discarded in 1882.

Queen’s Drive (kweenz-driv) n. long U-shaped road, part of Burnfoot, built in 1953 and named after the visit by King George VI and Queen Elizabeth in 1947. It was apparently originally to be called ‘Elizabeth Drive’.

the Queen’s Heid (thu-kweenz-heed) n. the Queen’s Head, a pub at the corner of the High Street and the Cross Wynd, address 32 High Street. The original building exists on a photograph from 1868. The building was rebuilt in 1886, when the proprietor was Robert Young and a projecting bowed corner was added later. It can also be seen in a photograph of 1903. Rugby trophies won by the Wanderers are on display here.

the Queen’s Mire (thu-kweenz-muir) n. a boggy area between the Priesthaugh and Braudlie Burns, so called because of Mary Queen of Scots 40 mile ride via there from Jedburgh to Hermitage to visit Bothwell. For many generations afterwards people could point out the spot where her horse was said to have become stuck. She is also supposed to have lost her pocket watch on the ride, this being found about 250 years later by a shepherd. Based on Blaeu’s map of 1654 (itself based on decades earlier manuscripts) it may have formerly been called ‘Mosspatrick’.

Quin (kwin) n. Roger (1850–1925) Border poet and wanderer, described as ‘the homeless poet’. His grandfather was described as a travelling tinker from Ireland, who married an aunt of Esther Faa-Blyths, Queen of the Gypsies. It is said that as a boy he was allowed to hold the skull of Robert Burns when he was reintered along with his eldest son. He wrote ‘Borderland and Other Poems’ (1910, 1933) and ‘Midnight in Yarrow and Other Poems’ (1918). A plaque near Galashiels reads ‘Here Roger Quin author of the Borderland gazed on Scotland’s Eden’, and there is a street in that town named after him.

Quinn (kwɪn) n. Edward ‘Eddie’ (1898–1982) well-known local accordion player, born in Berwickshire, he worked as a farm labourer at Carterhaugh for much of his life and retired to Eckford. He made two 78 r.p.m. recordings, released in 1929 and 1930. ‘Quinn’s Band’ was popular at dance venues throughout the Borders in the 1930s and 1940s.

the Quins (thu-kwɪnz, -kwɪnz) n. Hawick Harlequins, a ‘junior’ rugby team, playing in the Borders District League. Their clubrooms are at 6 Baker Street and their matches are played at Wilton Lodge Park. Their strip consists of a black, blue and gold hooped shirt and black socks. The name originally derived from the motley collection of shirts that they wore. They were the first local rugby team to play in Wales, in 1950. One of their highlight was playing in the Scottish Bowl final at Murrayfield in 2002. The unofficial club theme song is ‘The Mighty Quin(s)’. ‘The first 50 years: Hawick Harlequins R.F.C.’ was written by G.W. Fraser.

the Quintinshill Rail Disaster (thu-kwɪn’-ɪn-hil-rəl-dee-zaw-stur) n. tragedy of May 1915 on the Caledonian line, just north of Gretna Green. A packed troop train ran into a stationary local train, and an express ran into the wreckage. A total of 227 people were killed, making it Britain’s worst ever rail disaster. At least 3 men with a Hawick connection died.

quoad sacra (kwó-ad-sak-ru) n. ecclesiastical term for a church which is not the main parish church, but used for the convenience of some of the parishioners. This was the term applied to St. Mary’s after the Old Parish was built.

the Quoitin Club (thu-kwɔi’in-klub) n. the Buccleuch Quoitin Club, a sporting organisation, with the game consisting of metal hoops or horseshoes being thrown at a metal stake. It was popular in the late 19th century, with pitches on Buccleuch Street, adjacent to the Buccleuch Bowling Club green. The club fell apart around WWII through lack of support, and the pitches were converted into the Henderson Garden. There was also another Club in the Mansfield area for a while, and in addition the game was played in Denholm.

the Quoitin Haugh (thu-kwɔi’in-haʊf) n. popular name for the grassy banks of the Teviot between the Teviot Bridge and old suspension bridge in Denholm. Quoits were played here during the latter part of the 19th century until WWI. The field was also used for other sporting events, and also for church services in the summer. At the Denholm Ride-out the horses are usually held there.

quoits (kwɔïts) n., pl. game in which curved iron projectile are thrown at a stake in the ground in order to try to encircle it, also known as ‘horseshoes’. The game was popular in Hawick from the late 19th century until the 1930s, with a pitch on Buccleuch Street. There was also another area in Denholm for the same purpose and a field next to Roberton Kirk used in the early 20th century.

quot (kwɒt) n., arch. the portion of a dead person’s estate payable for confirmation of the testament – ‘To be deuidit in thrie pairtis the deidis pairt is, iiijs. Quharof the quot is, xxiij £ vs.’ [SB1574].

the Race Ball (räs-bal) n. former name for the Ball, used until the 1880s, with the earlier name being the ‘Cornet’s Dance’.

the Race Committee (thu-räs-ko-mi’ee) n. Committee responsible for organising the Common Riding race meetings, formed probably in the early 19th century, and originally having more influence than the Ceremonial Committee (which was only formally established in 1887). In 1865 they took over from the Cornet the task of collecting race funds, which in 1883 was replaced by an entrance charge for the Muir. The Provost usually served as the President, with the Secretary also being Clerk of the Course. In 1908 it became a sub-committee of the main Common Riding Committee.

Race Course Park (räs-körs-pawrk) n. name for a field to the north of St. Leonard’s Park racecourse, between the enclosures known as ‘Bailie’s Hill’ and ‘Nipknowes Field’.

the Racerigg (thu-räs-ri-g) n. former name, used in the 18th century, for part of the Common. The precise location is unknown, but it may have been where races were once held near Pilmuir Rig. It was stated in 1767 that it marked the southern end of the region of the Common where the Town Herd would typically use for the Hawick livestock (also written ‘Racerig’).

the Races (thu-räs-seez) n. a race meeting has long been associated with the Common Riding, now being an intrinsic part of the Friday and Saturday festivities. The first explicit record of the races is in 1723, but they were probably happening much earlier. There were prizes from early times, some provided by the Town, e.g. in 1723 a ‘saddle exposed to be run for in May last’ is described, in 1725 the Council gave £2 ‘for this year’s plate’ and in 1727 ‘the cup for the race’ is recorded. Early races may have been held at the Deidhaugh, but the first known location was at the Vertish, ending in 1819. For the next two years they were on a field behind the Vertish Hill, then moved to Pilmuir Rig in 1822 and remained there until 1853. These were the Friday morning races, which had no accompanying family entertainments. In the early 19th century they started at 11 a.m., with the crowds returning to Hawick for dinner (early in those days), before the afternoon races at the Haugh, which started at 5 p.m. They took place, along with the afternoon races and games, on the Common Haugh itself in 1854. The afternoon’s events at the Haugh started with a 3-lap race by the Cornet and his Right- and Left-Hand Men. Sports and other amusements also used to continue on the Haugh on the Saturday. Both the Upper and Under Haughs were used, with movable fences between them. In 1854 the Haugh was used for the last time (in the afternoon only), and the new race-course at St. Leonard’s used for the first time (in the morning only). From 1855 all the races have been held at St. Leonard’s, with Saturday races started in 1868. In 1856 there was a steeplechase for the first time. There were also foot races held at the Moor until 1863. In the latter part of the 19th century the Saturday was considered to be ‘ladies day’ (after the Ascot tradition), with the women of the town dressing up in their finery. Until 1865 most of the funds for the races and the games were collected by the Cornet and the Right-Hand man. Thereafter official collectors were appointed, with admission to the Moor introduced in 1883, and racecards first issued in 1889. The Races were last held under Jockey Club rules in 1876, and with the disbanding of the British Racing Club in 1895, the Races were then held under local rules. The Races were first filmed in 1900.

rack (rawk) n., arch. a stretch, a shallow wide ford, especially where the person crossing has to take a slanting course – ‘They led him thro’ the Liddel-rack, And also thro’ the Carlisle sands’ [T], ‘Rack. A very shallow ford, of considerable breadth, Teviotdale’ [JoJ], a cart-wheel rut, capacity for expansion, elasticity, v., arch. to wrench, sprain, overstrain – ‘Hae mercy, Sirs, your wit – don’t rack it, To thresh a poor unlearned jacket’ [JR], ‘...the skirts an the dirls, the rameen an the raackeen an the cammelleen, the daads an the dunts an the skraucheen an the skreeven’ [ECS], ‘A’va gan an rackeet masul wui raxin owre fer owre’ [ECS], to stretch – ‘...He’ll shew the curse that Job invokit, When raucking patience, clean outraukit, Brak through her brand’ [JoHa], ‘rackin’ the rowins’ means to stretch the loosely carded wool so as to make the

Rackesse (ra-kes) n. Adam (16th/17th C.) recorded as ‘Adame Rackis in Thorlieshope’ in 1611 when he was also part of the assize at the Justice Court on Jedburgh. He may have been related to the Armstrongs nicknamed ‘Rakkes’ (and spelling variants) at about the same time.

George ‘Geordie of the Hillhouse’ (17th C.) thief from Liddesdale who is recorded in the 17th century. In about 1645 he, along with Lancie Armstrong of Catheigh and others, stole about 80 cows and oxen from England, and on the way back to Liddesdale returned the few animals belonging to a poor English minister, after he agreed to take snuff with them. It is unclear if his surname is a mis-transcription of a more familiar name.

Robert ‘Hobby’ (17th C.) recorded in 1633 as ‘Hobby Rackes’. His shepherd Archie Armstrong ‘called Hollas, who duelltt in the Mearburnheid’ was captured for having a stolen cow in his possession (it is unclear if this corresponds to a more familiar surname).

rackit (raw-kee’, -ki’) pp., adj., arch. wrenched, sprained, twisted – ‘Or ease their bosoms rackit sair, Wi’ disappointment ill to bear’ [RDW], ‘A’ve gaen an racketet masul wui raxin owre fer owre’ [ECS].

Rad (rawd) n., arch. popular term for a Radical in the early-to-mid 19th century – ‘One of the ’Rads’ told the writer that once a tail came off in his hands ...’ [RM].

Radcliffe (rawd-kliﬀ) n. Sir Cuthbert of Dilston (d.1545) son of Sir Edward. He was Sheriff of Cumberland, like his father. He also served as Deputy Warden of the English Middle Marches 1540–3 and Captain of Berwick 1544–5. He was captured by the Scots at the Battle of Haddon Rig in 1542. He was described as ‘a wise man well learned and well minded to justice but no adventurer to the field’. He married Margaret, daughter of Lord Clifford and was succeeded by his son Sir George. Sir John (c.1480–1527) from Crosthwaite in Cumbria. He was an English commander of part of the force that raided the Borders under Lord Dacre in 1513. His detachment of 500 men burned ‘the town of Dyker’, which was probably Dykeraw in Southdean Parish, explicitly ‘thei layed corne and straw to the dore and burnit it both rofe and flore and so smoked them out’. They then burned Southdean and Lustruther towns, taking prisoners and goods.

Thomas 3rd Earl of Sussex (c.1525–1583) also Viscount Fitzwalter and Lord of Egremont and Burnell. He was Lord Deputy of Ireland and became Lord Chamberlain under Elizabeth. His mother was Elizabeth Howard, sister of the Surrey who fought at Flodden. He was President of the ‘Council in the North’ 1568–72, suppressing a revolt of northern English earls. He then led part of the English force that invaded across the Border in 1570, along with Lord Hunsdon. They were responsible for the razing of many towns and buildings, including Hawick on April 18th and Branxholme the following day, this requiring gunpowder. Apparently (according to Stowe’s Chronicle) the Hawick people unzached their houses, burned it in the streets and fled, leaving nothing for the English army. There is a tradition (recounted by Robert Wilson) that the townspeople attacked enemy patrols into the night, but there is no evidence to support this. His force also destroyed the Kerr strongholds of Ferniehirst and Crailing, while simultaneously Scrope’s men laid waste to the Scottish West March. As many as 300 villages and about 50 towers were destroyed.

rada (råd) pp., arch. rode – ‘They rade the proper place about: But the laid he was the wiser man, For he had lef nae gear without’ [CPM], ‘An’ after prigging doon its price, A bargain forthwith made; Bestrode its back, an’ homeward bound Wi’ conscious pride he rade’ [FL], ‘...an moustrooper an reever rade bye ti foray an fecht an reipin raid’ [ECS], ‘We rade a’ nicht i’ the dark, And swam the Eden in nude’ [WL], ‘The day they rade the mairches The wather was its best ...’ [TK], ‘The day they rade the mairches The wather was its best ...’ [WL] (also written ‘raed’ and ‘raid’; the past participle is ‘bidden’ as in English).

rade (råd) adj., poet. afraid, frightened – ‘Bena thou rade whan ane is maede riche, whan the gorie o’ his hous is inkresset’ [HSR], ‘...I wullna be rade for what man can do til me’ [HSR].

Radolphus (raw-dol-fis) n. (11th/12th C.) first Abbot of the abbey in Selkirk, established about 1113. He resigned in 1117 and returned to Tiron in France. (13th C.) Rector of Hawick church who witnessed a charter of Laurence Avenel in the period 1260–68 (may be spelled ‘Rodolphus’ or written ‘Radulph’; the modern version is ‘Ralph’).

rae (rä) n., poet. a roe deer — ‘My beloefet is like ane rae or ane yung hart . . .’ [HSR].

Rae (rä) n. Agnes (17th C.) listed as resident at Mabonlaw on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Her surname is recorded as ‘Ree’. Agnes (d.1795) recorded as a midwife in the Hawick register of deaths. She could also be the person recorded when ‘Agness Rea’s Mother’ died in 1781. Andrew (16th C.) rented part of Standhill to John Turnbull of Knowe in 1659. This name is possibly an error for ‘Ker’. Andrew (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Rigg (i.e. Caerlenrig) in 1730 when his son William was baptised. Andrew (18th C.) recorded as ‘Servitor to Harwood’ when his daughter Jean was baptised in Hobkirk Parish in 1738. Other children baptised there who might be his included ‘Nanse’ (b.1741), Thomas (b.1744) and Helen (b.1746). Davie (1792/3–) professional sprinter. He moved to Hawick at about the age of 8 and became involved with the Teviotdale Harriers, but switched to sprinting, becoming part of the Billie Edgar school and later training with Alan Scott. He won the British Youth Sprint Championships in 1989 and 1990 and in 1999 won the British 90 m, 100 m, 110 m and 200 m championships. He also won 3 Hawick Games sprints. He took up coaching in 2008.

Gilbert (18th/19th C.) carter at Denholmhill, listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Rev. Hector (c.1683–1639) received his degree from Edinburgh University in 1603 and became minister at Nisbet in 1608. He was translated to Hownam in 1609 and signed the National Covenant in 1638, probably in Hawick. Hugh (14th C.) cleric connected with Cavers Parish in 1387 (and written ‘Raa’). In 1389 Henry Wardlaw was given the vicarage of Cavers, void after he obtained the church of Stractaven. He was also referred to as subdean of Glasgow. James (15th/16th C.) witness to a document relating to Whitchesters for the Scotts of Branxholme, signed in Edinburgh in 1500. His name was recorded as ‘Jacobo Raa’. James (16th C.) listed among people who were owed money by William Scott, younger of Branxholme, when he died in 1552. He is listed as ‘Jacobo Ra eius servio’, presumably meaning he was a servant of William. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Minto Parish. His children included: Bessie (b.1716); Maddie (b.1719); James (b.1721); and Helen (b.1725). James (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Agnes Scott and their children included: Walter (b.1764); Isabel (b.1766); and James (b.1777), baptised in Jedburgh Parish. He could be the James, son of Walter and Margaret Gardener, baptised in Hawick in 1743. It is also possible that his children (with no mother’s name given): Robert (b.1768), baptised in Cavers; Elizabeth (b.1769), baptised in Bedrule; John (b.1771), baptised in Bedrule; Jean (b.1772) and Thomas (b.1772), baptised in Cavers; Walter (b.1774), baptised in Bedrule; and Jean (again, b.1779), baptised in Cavers. The witnesses in 1764 were Robert Scott (probably a relative of his wife) and Walter Rae (perhaps his father). James (18th/19th C.) resident at Chesters (Southdean) according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. James (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Redheugh. He was taxed for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797. James (18th/19th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. He subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). He could be the James, son of William and Rachel Scott who was born in Hawick in 1764. His son William (a stockingmaker) died in 1838. James (18th/19th
Rae

C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Jane Crozier in 1790 and their children included: Janet (b.1790); Rachel (b.1795); Margaret (b.1797); John (b.1800); and William (b.1802). The witnesses in 1790 were shoemaker Robert Oliver, junior, and William Park. He could be the James who (along with Robert Oliver) in 1791 witnessed a baptism for Walter Elder. James (20th C.) plumber in Hawick. He was Cornet in 1923. This year is often referred to as the ‘Plumber’s Year’ because of the torrential rain, which blew away the shelter at St. Leonard’s. Janet ‘Jenny Saut Haa’ (d.1758) elderly wife of the owner of the Salt Hall, who cut her throat in the eastern attic of the Salt Hall in 1758 (or perhaps 68), causing uproar when she was buried in Wilton Old Churchyard. With the minister away, the authorities allowed the burial there, against some popular feeling. On the following morning the coffin fell upon her husband when he opened the Saut Haa door, the coffin was reburied, but appeared again the next day. It was then temporarily buried at the most northerly point of Wilton Common, until the minister returned and insisted on burial back in the churchyard. Her final burial place was in the area reserved for unchristened babies in the churchyard. There are similarities with the story of Tibbie Tanson in Selkirk. Jean (1731/2–1838) resident of Deloraine, who reached the age of 106. During ‘the forty-five’ she helped at Branxholme to hide cattle and household goods from the Highlanders. She was a great-grandmother, and there were five generations alive at once. John (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Margaret and their son Walter was baptised in 1654. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1708 he was described as ‘creepie in ye toun’ in a baptismal record. He was also described in 1723 as ‘creepie in this toun’ when money was given for a coffin for his child. He married Helen ‘Furgrie’ and their children included: Elizabeth (b.1708); Helen (b.1711); and Jean (b.1714). The witnesses in 1708 were Ballie George Martin and James Falsyde and in 1714 were ‘customer’ Andrew Scott and ‘officer’ Alexander Young. John (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was recorded at Lymiecleuch in 1731 when his son Thomas was baptised. John (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was in Borthwickbrae Parkhead in 1780. His children included Anna (b.1776) and William (b.1780). He was surely related to Thomas, who lived in the same place. John ‘Jock’ (18th/19th C.) resident of the Hawick area.

A story is told of Rev. Charters of Wilton finding him up his fruit tree – ‘What are you doing there, John?’ ‘Naething ava’, sir’. ‘Strange man, John, all that trouble for nothing’ [BP]. He is probably the same as one of the contemporary Johns. John (b.c.1780) carter in Hawick. He was at the Kirkwynd in 1841, with his wife Margaret and children William, James, Douglas, John, Walter and Isabella. He probably lived at 6 Kirk Wynd. Walter, a shoemaker who lived next door, was probably his brother. John (18th/19th C.) listed as a poulterer on the Sandbed in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. Probably the same John is a ‘salt and egg dealer’ at the Kirkgate in 1837. John (b.1803/4) born in Cavers Parish, he was a stocking needle maker in Hawick. He was listed on the High Street in Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories and on the Howegate in Slater’s 1852 directory. He lived on the Kirkwynd in 1841, with his wife Catherine, on the Mid Raw in 1851 and was boarding on O’Connell Street in 1861. His wife was daughter of Arthur Balbirnie, writer of ‘The Auld Sang’. He had a daughter who died in 1838. John (b.1805/6) carpenter and cabinet-maker in Hawick. He was on the Crescent in 1841, in the Village in 1851 and on Drumlanrig Place in 1861. He married Elizabeth Miller in Wilton in 1832 and their children included Thomas, John, Mary N., William N. and Walter. John (19th C.) listed in Slater’s 1852 directory as an earthenware dealer on the High Street. There is a separate listing for a High Street greengrocer of the same name. He could be the same as one of the other contemporary Johns. John (19th C.) one of 5 men tried for rioting and assault at the 1837 election in Hawick. He was found guilty and ‘put to the horn’. John (b.1825/6) wool spinner in Hawick, born in Wilton. In 1861 he was living at 11 Back Row. He married Elizabeth Ann Ekron in 1847 and their children included: John (b.c.1847); Margaret (b.c.1848); Jemima (b.c.1854); Mary (b.1856); Helen (b.1858); James (b.1860); and Janet (b.1865). John (1897/8–1975) born in Hawick, he was Cornet in 1923 and later lived at Towerburn. He married his Cornet’s Lass Isabella ‘Bella’ Neish Elder (who died in 1989, aged 87). John ‘Jock’ (20th C.) pipe major of the Scout Band in the years 1960–62. He once had the honour of being Solo Piper at the Edinburgh Tattoo. Margaret (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when she was listed on the Hearth Tax roll among ‘ye poor’. Mr. ?? (18th C.) owner of a large tract of land stretching between where Have-lock Street and Dovecote Street now are. The land was ultimately divided, part becoming Dovemount, and being the site of the well that supplied much of Wilton for more than a century. Robert (18th/19th C.) grocer on the Loan, listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. Robert (b.c.1790) gardener at Dovemount. He was listed at Dovemount among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1835–41. He was also there on the 1841 census. His wife was Mary and their children included James, John and Isabella. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isobel Wilson and their children included Thomas (b.1639). Thomas (17th/18th C.) shepherd at Slaidhills. His son Alexander was baptised in Hawick Parish in 1707. He could be the Thomas whose daughter Margaret married James, son of Walter Scott in Hawick in 1717. Thomas (18th C.) resident at Milsingtonshiel in the 1760s and 1770s when his children were baptised in Robertson Parish. He is probably the Thomas at Borthwickbrae Parkhead in 1774 when his son Thomas was baptised. It seems likely that these were all his children (baptised in Robertson Parish, with no mother’s name given): John (b.1762); Margaret (b.1763); James (b.1765); Betty (b.1767); Jean (b.1771); and Thomas (b.1774). Thomas (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He is probably the Thomas who witnessed a baptism in 1780 for James Knox. He married Janet Murray in 1775 and their children included Thomas (b.1775) and James (b.1779). Thomas (18th C.) workman in Hawick. He married Mary Scott in 1775 and their children included: Andrew (b.1778); and John (b.1779). The witnesses in 1778 were Joseph Goven and Mungo Armstrong. Thomas (18th C.) recorded in Denholm in 1772, 1775 and 1778. His children, baptised in Cavers Parish, included: Jean (b.1772); Janet (b.1773); Agnes (b.1775); and Gilbert (b.1778). Thomas (18th/19th C.) paid the cart tax in Hawick in 1785, when his name is recorded as ‘Rhea’. He also paid in 1787 and 1791. He was a carter in Hawick according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He may be the Thomas who married Janet Gledstains in Hawick in 1799. He is probably the Thomas who witnessed a baptism for William Aitchison in Hawick Parish in 1797. He may be the Thomas who witnessed a baptism for shoemaker John Scott in 1792. Thomas (18th/19th C.) charged with sheep-stealing from Phaup in 1818. He was caught because of selling the skins in Hawick and jailed in Jedburgh. He was probably hanged. Thomas Ian (1926–89) educated partly at Hawick High School, he studied history at St. Andrews University and eventually became keeper of manuscripts at the National Library of Scotland. He wrote ‘The Administration of the Scottish Frontier 1513–1603’ (1966), ‘Scotland at the time of Shakespeare’ (1965), edited ‘The union of 1707 its impact on Scotland’ (1974), co-edited ‘The Burgh Court book of Selkirk, 1503–45’ (1960). He also wrote several other articles, including some for the Transactions and was a member of the Archaeological Society. Walter (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Margaret Harvey and their children included: Robert (b.1689). Walter (18th C.) tailor in Hawick. He married Margaret Gardner and their children included James (b.1740), William (b.1741), James (again, b.1743), an unnamed child (b.1745), George (b.1758) and Agnes (b.1762). The 1743 baptism was witnessed by shoemaker John Scott and merchant William Ridgell, and the 1758 one by shoemaker George Gardner and William Veitch. Walter (18th C.) resident in Hawick. He was fined and imprisoned in Dumfries in 1760 for attacking Leonard Fleming, an excise officer. When his sentence was done he was to be set on the pillory at Dumfries with a label on his breast reading ‘I stand here for having been guilty of committing a most atrocious battery upon the person of an excise-officer when in the exercise of his duty’. He could be the same man as the Hawick tailor. Walter (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, recorded at Whitfield in 1772. He married Ann Walker in Ashkirk in 1770 and their children included: Gilbert (b.1770), baptised in Ashkirk; William (b.1773), baptised in Wilton; James (b.1775), baptised in Selkirk; Adam (b.1777), baptised in Selkirk; Anne (b.1780), baptised in Selkirk; John (b.1786), baptised in Yarrow; and Jane (b.1789), baptised in Yarrow. The witnesses in 1772 were Walter Scott and James Robson. He witnessed a baptism for Walter Scott at Whitfield in Wilton Parish in 1772. Walter (b.c.1785) shoemaker on the Kirk Wynd. In 1841 he is recorded at about No. 6 and in 1851 is on Slitrig Crescent. His wife was Mary and children included Thomas, Robert, Andrew and Margaret. He was surely related to John, the carter who lived next door. Walter town street sweeper, who came 2nd in the 2004 Citizen of the Year vote and joint 3rd in 2005. William (d.1367) Precentor of the Diocese of Glasgow, he was elected as Bishop of Glasgow in 1338, following the death of John Wishart. He was consecrated in 1339 and remained Bishop until his death. He thus had authority over Teviotdale. William (15th C.) recorded in 1494/5 when he had a cow belonging to him stolen from the house of Robert Aitkin in Minto. His name is given as ‘Willelmo raix’; however, it is possible he is the same man recorded as William ‘rany’ in 1493. William (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Stoddart and their children included John (b.1648) William (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when he was listed among the ‘Cottars’ on the Hearth Tax roll there. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Scott in 1703, who was also from Hawick. William (17th/18th C.) carrier of Hawick Parish. He married Agnes Hasswell in 1707 and their children included: James (b.1707); Marion (b.1708); William (b.1711); John (b.1713); Margaret (b.1714); Walter (b.1716); William (b.1719); and Isobel (b.1722). The witnesses in 1711 were Francis Gledstains and smith John Scott and in 1713 were merchants Robert Robson and William Craig. William (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Rachel Scott and their children included Jane (b.1757), Marion (b.1759) and James (b.1764). William (19th C.) married Mary Ann Dryden in Wilton Parish in 1826. Their children born in Roxburghshire were: Jean (b.1831); Janet (b.1832); and John (b.1834). In 1835 they emigrated to the Montreal area, following the Dryden family a year earlier. They then moved to North Dumfries Township, near Galt in Ontario. 7 other children were born in Canada. William (b.1812/3) painter on the High Street, listed in Pigot’s 1837 directory and Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1841 and 1851 he was at about 48 High Street, with his wife Mary. They had a daughter Isabella S. The death of his aunt Agnes Rae is recorded in Hawick in 1838. William (b.1814/5) born in Hawick Parish, he was shepherd at Ruecastle in 1851. His wife was Helen (from Oxnam) and their children included Isabella, Jane, George, Walter and John (formerly spelled ‘Ray’, ‘Re’, ‘Rea’, etc.).

Raeburnfit (rā-burn-fit) n. site of a small Roman fort in Dumfries & Galloway, where the Rae Burn joins the White Esk, a few miles north of Eskdalemuir. It marks the end of the Roman road from the upper Borthwick valley via Craik Cross. There may have been an extension of this road over Groundistone Height to Harelaw and towards Newstead.

Raegill Bogs (rā-gil-bogz) n., pl. marshy area to the south of Hermitage Castle, just by Toftsholm Sike. There is an example of a ‘burnt mound’ there, as well as the remains of 4 shieling-huts and an area of enclosed rig.

Rae-knowe (rā-now) n. rising ground on which the farmhouse of Nether Bunchester stood, near the present-day Bunchester farmhouse.

Raesknowe (rās-now) n. farm on the Allan Water, behind Newmill, on the opposite (east) side of the Allan Water from Allanhaugh tower. It was a home of the Scotts in the 16th century, and afterwards a tenanted farm owned by the Duke of Buccleuch, and being contained within the Lordship of Whitchesters. In 1579 Robert Scott of Allanhaugh sold the annual rent of the land for £100 from Walter Scott of Todrig. In a 1627 valuation it is described as paying ‘presentlie in stok and teynd 26 bolls; estimat in stok to 14, and 3 in parsonage, 4 lbs. in vicarage’. David Scott of Raesknowe, related to the Scotts of Allanhaugh, is listed as one of the ‘pensioners of Buccleuch’ by Scott of Satchells. It is shown in the 1718 survey of properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch, when it consisted of 231 acres, bounded by Whitchesters, Newbigging, the Allan Water and the Teviot, and with Reasknowe Mill being a separate farm at its south end. The former small tower there was already in ruins by 1663. In the period 1690–96 the farm was jointly leased by Walter Bell, John Armstrong, Walter Riddell and David Graham. In 1698 it was leased by John Armstrong, Walter Riddell and David Graham. In 1694 the householders listed there were Walter Bell, David Graham, John Armstrong and George Wilson (shepherd). Robert Gledstains was also recorded there in 1700. John Armstrong was still there in 1706. Robert Graham was there in 1708. John Graham was tenant there in about 1710 and William Reid in 1719. In the 18th century the area was a small thriving hamlet, which had a schoolmaster appointed in 1723 to teach the poor children of the neighbourhood. William Anderson was there in 1742. Archibald Douglas was farmer there in 1797. A bronze jug was dug up there around 1835, having 3 feet, a handle and a spout, probably mediaeval (also called ‘Raesknowes’; it is ‘Raisknowis’ in an undated 16th century document, ‘Reahousknow’ in 1579 and 1582, ‘Raisknow’ in 1627, ‘Raesknow’ in 1640, ‘Rae know’ in 1641, ‘Raeknowes’ in 1690, ‘Rae know’ in 1692, ‘Reasknow’ in 1694, ‘Raes Knoll’ in 1704, ‘Raes-knowes’ in 1717, ‘Raesknows’ in 1718, ‘Roseknow’ in 1797 and ‘Raes Knowe’ in 1841; it is marked ‘Reesknow’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map, but incorrectly placed in the middle of Hawick Moor; the name may related to roe deer).

Raesknowe Mill (rās-now-mil) n. former corn mill on the Allan Water, north of the farm of Raesknowe, an alternative name for Allanhaugh Mill. It is shown in 1718 as a separate farm to Raesknowe, consisting of 14 acres on the haugh opposite to where the Rampy Sike meets the Allan, with the mill itself at the east side, near where the foot of the North Burn. The mill lade appears on the map, starting near Lochburnfoot and running along the east side of the Allan, to join again after the mill (it is Raesknowes milne in 1718).

Raeson Park (rā-sin-pawrk) n. street off the right of Stiches Road, built in 1928 and named after builders John Rae & Son, Victoria Road.

Raff (rawf) n. Rev. Eric Maitland Kirk (1892–1927) son of William Watson of Melbourne and Victoria Black, and grandson of William of Woodlee, Forres. He was educated in Melbourne, graduating in 1915 and being ordained there the following year. He was then at Efate Island, New Hebrides Mission until 1923 and came to Scotland the following year, becoming assistant at St. Michael’s, Dumfries and then was appointed to Rosyth. He became minister at St. Mary’s in March 1926, but died at Bournemouth only a year later. He married Ruth, daughter of John Baird.

Raffle (raw-ful) n., arch. a lottery, in the 19th century specifically an event organised to raise money for people in ill-health or who were emigrating etc., prizes being won by dice throws.

Ragabuss (raw-ga-bash) n., arch. a ragamuffin, good-for-nothing – ‘He was nothing but a liar and a reprobate, and a Jacobite villain and knave, and . . . a ragabast [sic]’ [Ash1712], adj. very poor, destitute – ‘Rag-a-buss, A designation given to those who are very poor, Roxb.’ [JoJ] (also written ‘rag-a-buss’, ‘ragabash’, etc.).

Ragabuss (raw-ga-bus) n. nickname of an itinerant around the early years of the 19th century. He engaged Wull Slush in a steeplechase on foot at the Common Riding one year (when held at the Vertish), the race degenerating into a fight.

Ragarth (ra-garth) n. former lands in Liddesdale, located on the Kershope burn and attached to the estates of Mangerton. They are recorded as being worth 7 shillings and 6 pence in a rental list c.1376 in the charters of the Douglasses of Morton. In 1541 ‘Ragarth, Sorbe, Sorbetrees’ was part of the property of the Laird of Meriantoun, valued at 10 merks, and separately ‘half of Regarth’ was also listed, with a value of 5 merks. It is ‘Raegirth’ on Blaeu’s c.1654 map, on the north side of the Kershope Burn, east of Kershope (it is possible it is related to Raegill Knowes, close to Kershope Bridge).

Ragarthshaw (ra-garth-shaw) n. former farm in Liddesdale, in the ‘Quarterium de Ludne’ according to a c.1376 rental roll, with a value of 6 shillings. It was presumably near the main farm of Ragarth (recorded as ‘Ragarschtshaw’).

ruggit (*raw-gi’, -gee) adj. ragged – ‘A ruggit cout a race has won, And sae might little Jock’ [JT].

the Raggit Schuil (thu-raw-gi’-skil, -gee’-skil) n. former name for Drumlanrig School applied by those from elsewhere in the town. The name was also used for the Mission School of Allars Kirk, which was on Allars Crescent in the 1870s, with Mr. Robert Grieve sometimes acting as teacher.

Raggle (raw-gul) n. a groove cut in wood or stone to enable another piece to fit into it.

the Ragman Rolls (thu-rawg-min-rolz) n., pl. list of names of those Scots swearing allegiance to Edward I of England. The smaller roll was signed at Norham in 1291, and the larger one at Berwick in 1296, after Edward was victorious at the Battle of Dunbar. There were more than 1,500 names of Scottish landowners, clergymen and Burgesses, making this a valuable historical record. The attachment of seals also gives a unique insight into the heraldry of the time. The communities of Jedburgh and Roxburgh were among burgs that paid homage. The roll includes the following local men, (a sub-set of those described as ‘of Roxburgh County’ unless otherwise stated): Adam, Parson of Fouldone or Souldeone (probably ‘Soudon’); Emme de Almere (Alemoor in Selkirkshire); Roger de Almere (Alemoor in Selkirkshire); Alsaundre de Bailliol (or ‘Bailliol’ or ‘Bailiol’ of Cavers); William de Bradeleye (possibly Brididle on Hermitage); Thomas de Chartres; William de Chartres; John de Chesolm (from Berwickshire); Richard de Cheselm; John Comyn de Backnach (senior and junior, Barons of Bedrule); Johan de Conve thethe (Parson of Ancrum); James de Crak (in Selkirkshire, possibly Craik); Simon de Cressuette (possibly Cresswell in Hassendean Parish); Robert de Dene (Parson of Wilton); Gwy de Denum (Denholm); Randulf de Derum (possibly an error for ‘Denum’); Philip de Dryden; Johan de Ethereston (possible Adderstone); William de Fausyde (possibly in Southdean Parish); Richard de Flex; Herbert de Gledeslan (of Lanarkshire, direct ancestor of the local family); Adam de Gourlay; Robert Grundi de Neuton (who possibly gave his name to Grundistone); Aley Gurnay (possibly ‘Gourlay’); Johan de Harden; Robert de Hawyk (or ‘Hanewyk’); Adam de Hep (probably ‘Heap’, but perhaps ‘Hepburn’); Alisandre de Hirdemaneston (probably ‘Hermiston’ near Lilliesleaf); Adam de Hodolm (of Dumfriesshire, probably holder of Kirk Borthwick); Wautier de Holcote (Hoscote perhaps?); Henry de Hommes (possibly Whames on Borthwick Water); Robert de Huntelegh (presumably Huntly); Johan de Lillesclif (Lilliesleaf); Johan de Lillesclyne (in Peeblesshire, possibly the same man); Agneys Louel (‘que fu la femme Henry’, i.e. widow of Henry Lovel); Morice Louel (Parson of Little Cavers); Thomas de Rillewod (possibly ‘Rulewood’); Robert fiz Rauf (Parson of the Church of St. Cuthbert of Ewesdale); William de Rotherford (Parson of ‘Lillesclyne’, i.e. Lilliesleaf); Adam de Roule; Aley de Roule (Parson of Roule); Thomas de Roule; William de Rouley (possibly an error for ‘Rule’); William de Rucastel; Adam de Rukelton (probably Riccalton, but also could be Riccarton); Adam de Rykeldon (probably the same man); Sir Hugo Rydel (probably related to the Riddells of that Ilk); Richard Le Scot de Murthoxtoum (later of Rankleburn); William Scot; Sire Johan de Seint Michel; Johan de Seint Michel (separately); Sire Wautier de Sherwynclawe (possibly Mervinslaw); Sir Nicholaus de Soules; Thomas de Soules; John de Stonesleghe (probably Stonedge); Marie de Synton; Ingram de Toftes (possibly near Kirkton); Robert de Toftes; William de Toftes; Robert Waugh (or ‘Walgh’ or ‘Walugh’) de Hep (probably Heap); Richard de Witton (Parson of Hawick); and possibly others who are harder to identify with the Hawick area (the origin of the name may be from the ribbons attached to some of the seals).

raid (rād) n., arch. a foray on horseback, mounted attack – ‘Now Liddesdale has ridden a raid, But I wat they had better staid at hame …’ [CPM], ‘But yet for a his cracking crouse, He rew’d the raid of the Red-Swire’ [CPM] (note that this word was revived by Sir Walter Scott and became standard English for a sudden attack in general).

the Raid o the Redeswire (thu-rād-o-thureed-swir, reedz-wir) n. sometimes referred to as the last battle between Scotland and England, taking place near the Carter Bar in 1575. The event was apparently an accidental skirmish, taking place at a Warden Court, held at the Carter Fell, when hostilities suddenly broke out between the two sides. Sir John Carmichael led the Scots who beat Sir John Forster’s men, with the timely arrival of the Jedburgh contingent with their cry ‘Jethart’s here’, turning the battle. The Hawick men there were led by Little Gladstain ‘good at need’, with the ‘Laird’s Wat’ of Goldielands also present, along with many Elliots, Armstrongs, etc. Sir John Heron, one of the English leaders, was slain, and the Warden taken prisoner. It is said that 5 Scotsmen and 6 Englishmen were killed. The battle site, near the Carter Bar, is commemorated by the Redeswire Stone and is the destination for the most arduous ride as part of the Jethart Callant’s festival. It is recorded months later that proclamations were posted at the Mercat Cross of Hawick and other towns, instructing anyone who had taken goods from the Englishmen during the skirmish to return them and prohibiting anyone from raiding into England or to threaten the peace. A romanticised version of the tale is told in a ballad of the same name. This exists in part of the ‘Bannatyne Manuscript’. It was first printed as ‘The Ballad of the Reid-Squair’ in Ramsay’s ‘Ever Green’ (1724), and appears with the same verses, but slightly altered words, in Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784) and later in Scott’s ‘Minstrelsy’. The manuscript appears to have been written about the late 17th century, but almost certainly was transcribed from a version passed through oral tradition. It contains a much larger number of names than most ballads (although some of them are somewhat garbled), and hence must have been written by someone in remembrance of the events of 1575 – ‘Then Tividale came to wi’ speed, The Sheriffe brought the Douglas down, Wi’ Cranstane, Gledstain, good at need, Baith Rewle Water and Hawick town’ [T] (there are many spelling variants, the manuscript of the ballad reading ‘Rid Square’).

raigular (rā-gew-lur) adj. regular – ‘hei was a raigular it the Queen’s Heid’, adv. regularly – ‘…hei walks roond Heysike raigular’ [IWL], ‘…Jinglin’ raig’lar ilk a week Owre-bye the Copsshaw airt’ [DH].

Ralph’s Acre (rawlfs-ā-kur) n. lands adjacent to Trinitylands, mentioned in the rental returns for the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1692. This could be the same place referred to as ‘Blaikie’s Acre’ in the 16th century.

Ralph Tree Grain (rawlft-tree-grāin) n. small stream in Liddesdale which rises on Tinnis Hill and flows into Todhunter Grain and then the Tinnis Burn. An old sheepfold shows that shepherds worked in even as remote a place.

Ralston (rawl-stin) n. John (19th C.) resident of Riccarton Station in 1868.

Ralton (rawl-tin) n. former lands in Liddesdale, to the south-west of Redheugh. Modern maps show the farm of Raltonside on the Ralton Burn. Ingram Armstrong is recorded there in 1535, along with Robert and Archibald Armstrong. In 1541 they were valued at 3 pounds and 7 shillings, with tenants Robert, Ninian and Thomas Armstrong. Ingram Armstrong there is recorded in a 1585 remission for men of Dumfriesshire and related areas, along with John alias Ralton. This is probably the ‘Rouraltonholme’ possessed by John Scott in 1632 and also the ‘Ratouholme’ listed among the lands of Kerr of Ancrum on the same document. Rig lines have been seen to the north-west of Raltonside, and there is also an old boundary bank there (it is ‘Raltoun’ in 1535, ‘Raltoun’ in 1541 and ‘Raltoun’ and ‘Rlton’ in 1585).

Ralton Burn (rawl-tin-burn) n. stream that rises near Roan Fell and Millstone Edge, on the border of Roxburgshire with Dumfriesshire and gather’s several other streams before passing Raltonside farm, joining the Ryedale Burn and running into the Liddel Water between Sandholm and Newcastleton. The area has the remains of several farmsteads, as well as boundary banks, enclosures, huts and sheep-folds. Near the head of the westernmost feeder stream are a couple of shepherd’s cairns (it is marked on the 1718 Buccleuch survey).

Rampsligill see Ramsiegill

Rampy Sike (rawm-pee-si) n. small stream that runs roughly north-east to joint the Allan Water near Allanhaugh Bank. There is a small, roughly oval-shaped enclosure there, of indistinct enough form that it is hard to guess its age. On the haugh opposite where the sike joins the Allan Water was formally the site of Raesknowe Mill.

ram-race (ram-räs) n., arch. a short burst of speed, like a ram uses in charging, a headlong rush – ‘He took a ram-race and smashed open the door’ [HAST1868], an impetuous progression, anything done at unreasonable speed – ‘Howt! Thay sang that chorus fer owre quick. Thay made a perfect raam-race o’d’ [ECS], ‘It was a Day’s Dander A wanteet, an no a raam-race duist’ [ECS], ‘The band [=choir] made a perfec’ ram-race o’ the chorus’ [GW].

Ramsay (rawm-zee) n. Sir Alexander of Dalhousie (d.c.1342). He fought at Borough Muir, was involved with the capture of Leuchars castle and relieved the siege of Dunbar Castle. He harassed the English in the Borders, often with a relatively small force, and was made Warden of the East March in 1340. He was known as a paragon of chivalry, being a champion on the jousting field. At Easter 1342 he captured Roxburgh Castle from the English and was rewarded by David II with the Keepership of Roxburgh Castle, and the Sheriffsdom of Teviotdale that usually went along with it. Sir William Douglas, who was already Sheriff of Teviotdale, was outraged at this and had Ramsay captured while holding court at St. Mary’s Kirk in Hawick a few months later (there is some uncertainty about whether it was 20th or 21st June). Several of his followers were slain and he himself was wounded and imprisoned in the dungeons of Hermitage Castle, where he starved to death. He is said to have survived for 17 days by eating grain that fell through from the granary above. In the 1790s a local mason apparently broke into Hermitage vaults, finding human bones, as well as a bridle, saddle and sword; it was said that these were the remains of Ramsay. The bit that was found was presented by Sir Walter Scott to the Earl of Dalhousie, Ramsay’s direct descendant. Ramsay Road in Hawick was named after him in 1933. Allan see James Dalgleish. Andrew (17th/18th C.) tenant in Bedrule. His wife Margaret Scott died in 1723, aged 65, and is buried in Bedrule kirkyard. Rev. Andrew Mitchell (1809–69) from Tollcross in Glasgow, he became the 4th minister of the Relief (Allars) Church in 1833. He was the first President of the Hawick Total Abstinence Society, leading to some dispute over the use of Allars Kirk for meetings. He also allowed his church to be used for Revival meetings, against the wishes of many in his congregation. In Pigot’s 1837 directory he is listed on the Crescent. In 1841 he was living on Buccleuch Street. He resigned in 1846, and left Hawick, with a large crowd seeing him off at the Tower Knowe. He moved to Australia to became Minister of Collins Street Church in Melbourne. In about 1850, along with 3 others, he formed the United Presbyterian Church of Victoria. He married Isabella Milne and their son Robert was a politician and lawyer in Australia. An early photograph of him exists. Sir George of Dalhousie (d.c.1629) son of James of Cockpen, he was 2nd Lord Ramsay of Melrose. He gained the lands and title in 1618 from his relative John, Viscount Haddington and Lord Ramsay of Barns. He is recorded in 1613 collecting the vicarage teinds from Thomas of Turnbull of Knowe. This suggests that he already had patronage of Hassendean Kirk at that time. He became Earl of Holderness and sold the lands of Melrose to Sir Thomas Hamilton. He married Margaret, daughter of Sir George Douglas, and was succeeded by his son William, who became Earl of Dalhousie. James (18th C.) recorded being in Lilliesleaf Parish in 1806 when his marriage to Barbara Morton announced in Melrose Parish. John (c.1580–1618) Viscount of Haddington, Earl of Holderness. He was son Robert of Wyliecleuch. In 1609 he was granted the lands and income from Melrose Abbey, becoming Lord Melrose. This included the Kirks of Cavers and Hassendean. The grant was at least partly because of the help he had given the King in the Gowrie Conspiracy of 1600. In 1618 he resigned his lands and titles in favour of his relative Sir George of Dalhousie. John (18th C.) Hawick resident who was among the location for the third scene in ‘The Gutterbludes’ – ‘...Nannie, an auld freend, will be roond the Ramparts at the chap o’ six, he has guid news tae tell you ...’ [JEDM] (also ‘The Ramparts’ and ‘Rampart Place’).

the many men listed as fugitives in 1684 for refusing to conform to Episcopalianism. John (18th C.) surveyor of coals, who was made an Honorary Burgess in 1755. He was probably not from Hawick, but it is unclear where he was from or what his connection with Hawick was. In 1757 there is a record of 5 shillings ‘Spent with Mr Ramsay the coalman (coal-viewer)’, this being related to ‘the petition for the coals’ that the Town Clerk had sent. It is unclear exactly what this was about, but he is also recorded being paid 10 shillings and 5 pence in the same year. John M. (b.1885) uncle of Jessie MacDonald, he grew up in Denholm, served in WWI, was a postman for the Stobs area and lived at Orchard Terrace in later life. He wrote an account of Denholm in the years around 1900 for the Transactions. Robert (1842–82) son of Rev. Andrew Mitchell, who was minister of Allars Kirk. He was born in Hawick, but the family emigrated to Australia when he was about 5 (one of his siblings dying on the voyage). He studied law at Melbourne University, became a solicitor and became involved in politics as secretary for a committee trying to abolish state funding of religion. He served as a member of the legislative assembly of Victoria from 1870, being heavily involved in education and the separation of church and state. He was also partially responsible for the police actions that led to the capture of the Ned Kelly gang. He married Isabella Catherine, daughter of Robert Urquhart. They had 2 sons and 2 daughters. He was buried in Melbourne general cemetery. William (d.c.1695) tenant in Bedrule Mill. He married Margaret Turnbull. In 1695 he and his wife left 500 merks for the poor of the Baron of Bedrule, with the family of Cavers Carre as trustees. He is probably the William recorded in Bedrule Parish on the Hearth Tax records of 1694. William ‘Wull Slush’ (d.c.1830) known as a vagrant and drunkard. Although not born in Hawick, he travelled around upper Teviotdale for the period roughly 1790–1830. He was said to have been from either Carluke in Clydesdale or brought up at Heriot’s Hospital in Edinburgh. Not known for his beauty, he was described as being ‘as unprepossessing in his looks as it is possible to conceive, and his raiment was in classic keeping with his countenance’. He claimed to have a sister who was far uglier than himself. He had a squint, with one eyelid almost covering his eye, and a lower lip that drooped noticeably. He also lost the use of his legs through frostbite, and afterwards went about on a donkey. A story is told of how he once stood in for the driver of the cart between Edinburgh and Hawick, but was so drunk from stopping at every inn that by the time he reached Dovemount he mistook the gable of Wilton Kirk for another possible watering hole. He spent much of his time in the Black Bull, or sleeping it off in Hawick Mill. One year, when the Common Riding races were at the Vertish, he came across another beggar, called Ragabuss, and the pair race for tuppence in a steeplechase on foot, which degenerated into a fight. He once insulted Blind Wullie Craw (as recounted by William Norman Kennedy), who immediately threw off the lines ‘O! Hush, hush, Wull Slush, Wull Slush, The Ostler o’ Black Bull, As lazy a loon as what’s i’ the toon, And his head’s like a weel picked skull’. There is an Adam Brown portrait of him in the Museum, and an article by William Norman Kennedy in the first Archaeological Society Transactions.

William (b.1802/3) born in Sprouston Parish. In 1851 he was a proprietor of 94 acres at Calaburn in Wilton Parish. His wife was Isabella and their children included Elizabeth (who married brickmaker William Taylor) and Christian. William (b.1851) born at Armadale, West Lothian, he was the last preacher at the Cameronian Chapel in Denholm, which closed in the 1920s. He also served as an elder in the United Free Church there. He was ‘colporteur’ for the Religious Tract Society as well as School Attendance Officer. He married Christian Wilson in 1872. Their children were Peter (who married Helen Stoddart in Hawick), Christina, George Wilson, James, Jane, John, William and Jessie (who married Thomas Ramage in Hawick).

Ramsaycleuch (rawm-zee-klooch) n. farmstead above Merrylaw, reached by the side road from Teviothead, and lying just north of Rashiegrain and the source of the Teviot. The areas of Ramsaygrain West and Ramsaygrain East lie to either side. In the 1511 charter for the Baron of Hawick the lands were listed among those held by the Baron ‘in property’. The lands were included in the list of property of the Baron of Hawick (Sir James Douglas of Drumlanrig) in 1572 and 1594. Douglas of Drumlanrig has a ‘horning’ in 1607 against William Scott of Gledstains to remove from these and other lands, followed by a further action in 1610 for Scott and James Gledstains of that Ilk owing him taxes. Robert Grieve was tenant in 1699. Half of the lands there were owned by the Scotts of Crumhaugh in the 17th century. John Bell was recorded ‘in Ramsiecleughburn’ in 1678. The... lands were among those inherited by Sir Francis Scott of Thirlestane from his brother Walter in 1695. James Anderson was tenant in at least 1699–1720 and William Anderson in 1704. By 1707 it was valued along with Hislop at £549 4s. The lands were owned by Michael Anderson of Tushielaw and Hislop in the early 18th century. Mrs. Anderson of Tushielaw was owner in 1788. John Armstrong is recorded as farmer at ‘Ramseycleuchburn’ in 1797. William Riddell (brother of Henry Scott Riddell) was tenant there in the mid-19th century. In 1811 the lands of ‘Ramsaycleuchburn’ were valued along with Hislop at £549 4s, when owned by the Andersons of Tushielaw. This area was part of the western extremity of Hawick Parish until Teviothead was formed in 1850. The 1863 Ordnance Survey map shows a ruined building at Ramsaycleuchburn (the origin of the name is possibly Old English ‘hramsa cloh’, meaning ‘the ravine of the wild garlic’, although the terran does not seem very suitable; it is easily confused with Ramsaycleugh in the Ettrick valley; it appears in 1511 as ‘Ramsy Clewis’ and ‘Ramsyclewis’, ‘Ramsiclewis’ in 1514, ‘Ramsay Clewis’ in 1572, ‘Ramsay Clewis’ in 1594, ‘Ramsay clewch’ and ‘Ramsycleuch’ in 1609, ‘Ramsyclewis’ in 1610, ‘Ramsayclewichis’ in 1615, ‘Ramsaycleuch’ in 1621, ‘Ramsaycleuche’ in 1674, ‘Ramsycleuch’ in 1675, ‘Ramsicycleuch’ in 1695, ‘Ramsicilthghburn’ in 1704, ‘Ramsaycleughburn’ in 1714 and ‘Ramsaycleuchburn’ in 1720; it is marked ‘Rapsycleuch’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

Ramsay Road (rawm-zee-röd) n. street behind Moat Park, built in 1933 and extended in 1969. The housing overlooking the ‘Scer’ is sometimes known as the ‘Haggis Haa’ scheme. Named after Sir Alexander Ramsay (since it is beside the old highway where he made his last fateful journey).

Ramsaycleuch (rawm-zee-klooč) n. farmstead in the Ettrick valley, near the village of Ettrick. It was formerly owned by the Scotts of Thirlestane. John Scott of Thirlestane had a ‘tack’ from Melrose Abbey for these lands in 1535 and Robert Scott of ‘Schaistane’ in 1557. Sir Robert Scott of Thirlestane had a charter in about 1620, and granted them to William Scott of Harden in about 1622. A ‘pendicle’ called ‘Timahauclus’ is also mentioned at that time. Adam Scott was there in the 1780s and George Grieve in the 1860s (it probably has the same origin as Ramsaycleuch, with which it is easily confused; it is ‘Ramseclewis’ in 1535, ‘Ramsacleuch’ in 1557, ‘Ramsacleuch’ in 1564, ‘Ramsycleuch’ in 1568, ‘Ramseclewis’ in 1573, ‘Rampicleuch’ in 1577, ‘Ramsicleuch’ in about 1622 and ‘Ramsiclewis’ in 1641: ‘Rampshycleuch’ is marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

Ramsiegill (rawm-zee-gil) n. former lands in Liddesdale, once a seat of a branch of the Elliots. The precise location is uncertain, but it was in the hills somewhere to the west of Riccarton. It is listed as ‘Rampsgill’ in about 1376 on a rental roll of Liddesdale, in the section called ‘Ermyldoun’, and with a value of 13 shillings and 4 pence. ‘William Elwald in Ramsigill’ is recorded in the Register of the Privy Seal for 1510 and on a rental roll of 1541. ‘Hobbe Elwald of Ramsigill’ is among men the King ordered to be apprehended in 1532. Robert in Ramsiegill and ‘Old’ Robert of Ramsiegill are both also recorded in 1541. In 1541 the farm was leased by John Elliot and valued at 6 shillings and 8 pence. ‘Gavin o Ramsiegill’ was one of the Liddesdale thieves captured in Hawick by the Regent Moray in 1567. ‘Gavin’s Jock’ from there was recorded in 1574 and 1582/3. ‘Ill Rob of Ramsigill’ was convicted for theft in 1580/1. Jock Elliot of Ramsigill is listed in 1583 as one of the Elliots of Burnhead. Hob and Rowie Elliot ‘of Ramsiegel’ signed a bond for the behaviour of all the Elliots of Ramsiegill in 1584, along with Airchie of the Hill and Will’s Hob. And a number of Elliots from there were named in a bond of 1587. Hob and Gavin separately accused the English of raids on their lands there in the 1580s. The man who hanged himself when imprisoned in Hawick steeple in 1612 may also have been from this family branch (it is marked ‘Rampigill’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map in the hills to the east of Roughley Burn, between ‘Eremiton’ and ‘Lires’; it is ‘Ramsigill’ in 1510, ‘Ramsigill’ in 1541, ‘Rampsegill’ and ‘Ramsygell’ in 1563, ‘Ramsigill’ in 1569, ‘Ramsigill’ in 1580/1, ‘Ramsygill’ in 1581 and ‘Ramsigill’ in 1583; the origin may be similar to that of ‘Ramsaycleuch’, i.e. related to the Old English for ‘wild garlic’; there is also a ‘Ramsigill’ in North Yorkshire).
a dram’ [WL], n., poet. haphazardness, chaos – ‘And roun and roun the warld may spin Wi’ its ram-stam and steer . . . ’ [WL].

ramstougar (rawn-stoo-gar) adj., arch. rough (in various senses), coarse (of cloth), characterising a particularly masculine woman, vulgar, heedless, harebrained, rowdy, quarrelsome (all of these meanings noted by J. Jamieson).

rand (rawnd) n., arch. a narrow strip, a streak of a different colour in cloth, a streak of discoloration in anything imperfectly cleaned or dried (noted by J. Jamieson).

randan (rawn-dan) n., arch. spree, particularly in the phrase ‘on the randan’, meaning being involved in a wild celebration (noted by E.C. Smith).

randit (ran-dee’, -di’) adj., arch. streaked, striped, dyed a variegated colour – ‘Randit, ill-wuished claes’ [GW], ‘Randit tweeds, bread, butter’ [GW], ‘Ma froak hesna dyed weel at aa; it’s awfullies randeen’ [ECS], ‘That wumman’s claes ir no haaf seindeet; they’re hinging oot i the gairdien aa randeet’ [ECS].

Randolph (ran-dolf) n. (d.c.1185) son of Dunegal (of Stranith, or Nithsdale), and brother of Duvenald (or Donald), Duncan and Gillespie (or Gillepatic), he was Lord of Stranith or Nithsdale. He married Bethoc, who was probably connected with the Barony of Bedrule, and he may have gained lands there through marrying her. His wife may have been a daughter of Fergus, Earl of Galloway and Princess Joan of England. However, both their histories seem sometimes mixed up with others. Not long after the founding of Jedburgh Abbey (perhaps around 1150) the couple granted a carrucate of land (60 acres) in Ruecastie to Jedburgh Abbey, confirmed later by William the Lion. He also granted lands in Dumfries to Kelso Abbey and is recorded in transactions related to other lands in Dumfriesshire. His name appears as witness to several charters in the early 1160s. His son and heir was Thomas and he may also have had a daughter (perhaps Fiona) who married Reginald, Lord of the Isles. His immediate descendants took the surname ‘Randolph‘ and were ancestors of the Earls of Moray or Murray.

Randolph (ran-dolf) n. Thomas (d.1262) son or perhaps grandson of Randolph, whose name is sometimes given as his surname. He was a Clerk in the court of Alexander II. He held the Barony of Nithsdale, but also had lands in Norfolk and Lincoln. He probably had a connection with Roxburghshire and perhaps Bedrule, like his parents before him. He also appears to have served as Sheriff of Dunfriesshire. His name appears in several charters in the 1220s to 40s. His wife was Juliana, but nothing else is known about her. Their children included: Sir Thomas, who succeeded; and Sir Nicholas, who was taken prisoner at Dunbar in 1296 and probably died in the Tower of London. Both he and his wife were buried on the same day at Melrose Abbey. Sir Thomas (d.bef. 1306) son of Thomas and descendant of Randolph, Lord of Stranith. The family held lands in Bedrule, although there is no record of a direct connection in his time. He was Sheriff of Roxburgh, recorded as such when witness to a document for Kelso Abbey in 1266 and served until at least 1269. He was Chamberlain of Scotland about 1269–78. He was present at the Convention of Brigham in 1289/90 and when John Baliol paid homage to Edward I in 1292 and in 1294 he accompanied the English King to France. He married Isabel, who was probably half-sister of King Robert the Bruce. His son Sir Thomas became 1st Earl of Moray. He also had a daughter Isabel, who married William Murray, ancestors of the Earls of Annandale.

randy (rawn-dee) adj., arch., poet. wild, disorderly, displeasurable, aggressively rude – ‘. . . strictly discharging all her Majesty’s leidges within ye shyre to resett Gipsies, Vagabonds, Randie beggars, and idle persons . . . ’ [PR1711], ‘Now randie Tibbie takes the road, Wi’ a’ her neebour wretches’ [JoHa], ‘Cam’ ye straight alang the toon, Or doon the randy raw? Ha’e ye seen a truant loon Playin’ at the ba’’ [JT], ‘The inn was thrang wi’ singin, The randy clash rang high . . . ’ [WL], n., arch. a scolding woman, a mischievous girl – ‘. . . That, faith, the randie’s grown a scolding woman, a mischievous girl, Sae careless, fearless, haughty, proud . . . ’ [JoHa], ‘What! Luck, here too! thou paintit twa-faced randy, Squirting thy humbug i’ my vera lug?’ [JoHa] (also written ‘randie’).

range (rân) v., arch. to search, probe, rummage – ‘A’ll mebbies finnd cet if A range the kist’ [ECS], ‘Weel, A ranged the haaf o the toon, or A turnt staaed’ [ECS], ‘A’ve ranged a’ the drawers, an’ canna find it’ [GW], to agitate water, especially to scare fish from hiding places, to poke the ashes from between the bars of a grate so that the air can circulate – ‘Taik the poker an range the bars o the feier’ [ECS].

Rankilburn

Rankilburn (rawng-kul-burn) n. older spelling for the valley of the Rankle Burn, also known as Buccleuch. The precise boundaries of the lands are not known, but certainly larger than the lands later known as Buccleuch. This was once a separate parish, which was merged with Yarrow in 1621, but then disjoined from Yarrow and annexed to Ettrick in 1650. It appears that in 1236 the lands belonged to Nigel de Heris, the King’s forester. The land probably passed to the Scotts some time shortly after 1249, perhaps as part of the appointment as Keeper of Ettrick Forest. Sir Richard Scott was the first Laird of Rankilburn in the late 13th century. The first residence was probably on the motte at Phenzhopehaugh, later moving to ‘Buccleuch Castle’. There was also a chapel on the Rankle Burn, the cemetery of which was the final resting place for many early generations of the Scotts of Buccleuch. When the lands were inherited in 1492 they were said to be then waste, but normally valued at £20. They were still listed separately from Buccleuch in the family lands inherited in 1517 and 1553/4 and the lands were included in the main Barony of Branczholme according to the services of heirs in 1634, 1653 and 1661, and the 1663 marriage contract of Anne, Countess of Buccleuch. – ‘Of Ettrick’s-hue he took a view, Than to the left hand did turn, Where he did see that Forrest hie, Which then was called Rankilburn’ [CWS] (it is ‘Rankilburne’ in 1415, 1463, 1484 and about 1580, ‘Rankyburne’ in 1415 and 1491/2, ‘Rankilburn’ in 1491/2, ‘Rankilburn’ and ‘Rankylburne’ in 1517 and ‘Rankilburne’ in 1528, 1537, 1574 and 1634; it is marked ‘Rankilburn’ and ‘Bourn of Rankilburn’ on Blaeu’s 1654 maps and mis-transcribed as ‘Ranksiburn’ on Moll’s 1745 map).

Rankilburn Chaipel (rawng-kul-burn-chā-pul) n. former chapel near the old seat of the Scotts of Rankilburn. It was also known as ‘Buccleuch Kirk’. The chapel was situated at the confluence of the Rankle Burn and the Kirk Burn, about 5 miles up from the Ettrick, with Kirk Hill and Priest Sike to the east. When it was established is unclear, but possibly around the 13th century when the motte was established at Rankilburn (later called Phenzhopehaugh); it was certainly already in existence by 1415, since in that year the tithes for Bellendean were transferred to it (when the Scotts of Rankilburn swapped Bellendean for the lands of Glenkerry with the monks of Melrose Abbey). It is marked ‘Rankilburn K.’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map, and ‘Ruins of Buccleugh Kirk’ on Ainslie’s 1773 map; today there is a semi-circular sheepfold enclosing much of the site, which is in the forest. The walls of the former chapel can still just be made out, these being modest in size, about 12 m by 8 m, 2 sides being partly marked by the sheepfold walls and by earthen banks. Another bank may mark the wall of the kirkyard. There are 2 other rectangular enclosures just to the west of the sheepfold, presumably the remains of other buildings (or these have also been suggested to be the walls of the church itself). Scott of Satchells says that 9 Lairds of Buccleuch were buried there, perhaps starting after David and ending with the permanent move to Branxholme. There is a tradition that the last Scott burial was within 3 yards of the east door of the church. It is stated that the chapel was already ruined by 1566. There was a legend of a blue marble font (in which generations of Scotts had been baptised) being buried among the ruins, but no such relic has been found. Satchells says that around 1585 a young Walter Scott of Buccleuch and Robert Scott of Thirlestane found ancient tombstones buried there, bearing the arms of Buccleuch, along with some other sculpted stones. In 1801 the site was visited by a party including Sir Walter Scott and the Ettrick Shepherd, but they found nothing of any significance. William Scott (from Burnmouth) stated in 1821 that ‘frequently human bones are washed away by the encroaching of the stream’. There was an excavation around 1877, but little was discovered. The rector in 1453 was James Spottiswood, and the reader in 1491/2 was John Scott. David Scott of Buccleuch left money for the church when he died in 1491/2. Following the ruin of their nearby manor, the Scotts abandoned the area for their new seat at Branxholme, and the church probably fell into disuse at that time. In 1537 Simon Shortreed, Vicar of Ashkirk invested Simon Scott in the benefices of Rector ‘by touching the kirk door, the font, the altar, the chalice, the books and ornaments’ of the kirk there. In 1574 John Scott, minister of Ashkirk had oversight there. After the Reformation the parish was united with Yarrow and then Ettrick and was not considered large enough to require a reader (it was ‘ecclesiae de Rankilburn’ in 1453 and ‘Rankilburn’ in a Church of Scotland document of 1586).

Rankilburn Pairish (rawng-kul-burn-pā-reesh) n. former small parish, sometimes referred to as Buccleuch, consisting of the land between the Rankle Burn and the Tima Water. Its establishment is unclear, but it certainly existed before 1415. In the early 17th century it was united with Yarrow, but in 1650 it was annexed instead to Ettrick. At that point it consisted essentially of the lands of Deephope, Mount Common, Gamescleuch, Ettrickside, Annelshope, East Buccleuch, West Buccleuch, Tushielaw, Cacrabank and Crosslee.

Raperlaw (rä-pur-law) n. Robert (d.c.1814) from Minto in Roxburghshire, recorded when his will was proved at the Prerogative Court of Canterbury in 1815. Given that the name is otherwise unknown, this may be a transcription error, but otherwise he may have been a servant of Lord Minto.

Raperlaw (rä-pur-law) n. farm roughly between Minto and Lilliesleaf villages. The lands there were a possession of Jedburgh Abbey from its founding in the 12th century until the Reformation. Humphrey of Raperlaw is recorded as a witness in about 1201. Reginald of Durham, in his collection of miracles of St. Cuthbert, recounts a tale of a woman from here, crippled from birth, who was cured after spending the night at Cuthbert’s chapel on the Slitrig (probably at Cogsmill). Matthew Lamb was recorded as tenant there in 1494/5, as well as George and James Davidson. George Davidson had 2 horses and 14 sheep stolen from him there before 1502. In 1564 George Turnbull’s quarter was leased to William Gray and William Redford, Henry [...] son’s quarter together with John Middlemas’ half to Andrew Gray, George Gray and Thomas Allan. The ‘lands and town of Rapperlaw’ were part of the lands sold to Adam French in 1567 and still part of the Lordship of Jedburgh in 1587. Hob Turnbull was there in 1579. The lands there were inherited by William Middlemas of Chapel from his father, also William, in 1622; it appears that at that time it was part of the Barony of Raperlaw. The farm was feuded by Thomas Hamilton, Lord Binning to Turnbul and Davidsouns in 1632. William Wood was tenant there in 1634. In the 1643 county valuation, the owners of lands recorded there were James Middlemas of Raperlaw (valued at £416), Walter Turnbull (valued at £100 10s), Adam Turnbull (valued at £104), Andrew Davidson (valued at £65), William Turnbull (valued at £104) and David Davidson (valued at £195). Lands there (or perhaps the superiority) were owned by the Kers of Cavers Kerr in the later 17th century. It was among lands whose superiority was inherited by daughters of George Scott (brother of Sir Walter of Whitslade) in 1670. Walter Scott of Alton owned lands there valued at £416 in 1678, as well as James Middlemas (£134 18s 6d), Ralph Davidson of Greenhouse (£104), Andrew Davidson (£65), Robert Elliot in ‘Wyliespee’ (£104) and John Douglas (£195). Some of these parts were later known as Greenhouse and Catshawhill. Thomas Turnbull was a tenant there in 1684 when he was declared as a fugitive for being a Covenanter, along with George Young, a servant to George Gray, who was also a tenant there. Robert Paterson was there in 1689. James Runciman was blacksmith there in 1694, with other householders at that time being William Chisholme, Walter Middlemas, James Middlemas, John Gray, John Riddell, John Robson and James Scott (and John Turnbull among the 'deficients'). It may have been sold by the Scotts of Alton to The Horsburghs of that Ilk about 1710. 'Scott of Alton's Lands in Raperlaw' are referred to in 1788 (and in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls), valued at £416 and listed under Lord Minto (the origin is probably Old English 'raper hlaw', meaning 'rope-maker's hill'; it first appears as 'Raperlaw' in about 1150, then 'Raperslaw' or 'Rapeslawe' in about the 1170s, 'Raperell' and 'Rapereslaw' in about 1200, and has its modern spelling from 1315; it is transcribed as 'Raparlaw' in 1502, 'Ryperlawe' in 1548/9, 'Raperlau' in about 1150, then 'Raparslaw' in about 1170s, 'Raperlaw' in 1689, 'Reaperhall' and 'Roperlaw' in 1684, 'reper law' and 'Reaperlaw' in 1678, 1684, 'Repertslaw' in 1669, 'Repertslaw' in 1684 and 'Roperlaw' in 1797; it is marked on Blaeu's 1654 map as 'Reperlaw'.

Raperlaw (ra-pur-law) n. Humphrey (12th/13th C.) listed in the period 1200–02 as witness to the grant of lands near Maxton to Melrose Abbey. His name is listed as 'Umfr de Rapereell'. Also in about 1200 he was granted lands at Coldingham, when he is listed 'Vnfrido de Rapereell'.

rashie (raw-shee) adj., arch. full of rushes (also written 'rashey'; it occurs in place names, e.g. Rashiegrain and Rashy Hill).

Rashiegrain (raw-shee-grain) n. farmstead near the head of the Teviot, beyond Merrylaw. The lands there formed part of the estate of the Scotts of Crumhaugh in the 17th century. In a Hawick Parish valuation of 1627 it is listed along with Wormsleuch and Commonbrae, valued jointly 'in stok 120 lb., in teynd 20 lb'. It could be the 'Rashlie' listed among lands around Teviothead that were part of the Barony of Cavers in 1687 and 1698. The lands were among those inherited by Sir Francis Scott of Thirlestane from his brother Walter in 1695. John Scott was there in 1702. By 1707 it was valued along with Commonbrae at £261 19s 4d. Andrew Anderson was Laird at 1708 when he served as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire. Thomas Little was tenant there in 1740. An unspecified matter of discipline occurring there came to the Hawick Session's notice in 1752. William Anderson was owner in 1761. The farm was purchased in 1771 by Bailie Thomas Turnbull, along with other neighbouring properties. In 1788 it was owned by William Turnbull of Rashiegrain. In 1811 it was still valued (with Commonbrae) at about £262. The Hope family were living there in 1841. A receipt relating to the Rattlin Roarin Willie (raw’-lin-ro-rin-wi-lee) n. song popularised by Burns, which is supposedly local, being about events that happened to William Henderson of Priesthaugh in 1627. Willie, a local ballad-maker and brawler, slew ‘Robert Rule’ somewhere near Allanhaugh. Burns heavily edited it and added a third stanza in praise of his friend William Dunbar, which has disguised its origin. But Sir Walter Scott added 4 further verses about Willie’s capture by Gilbert Eliott of Stobs and ‘young Falhash’ (probably Archibald Elliot). The Presbytery records show that William Elliot was wanted for the murder of William Henderson in 1627, surely the basis for the song. The tune also has various versions, existing as the air of the song, as well as for both the pipes and the fiddle. Whether the origin was with Willie himself or someone else is unknown – ‘Rob Roole he handled rude And Willie left Newmill’s banks Red-wat wi’ Robin’s blude’ [T].

rauchle (raw-kul) adj., poet. bold, impetuous – ‘...He’ll find her [Britain] yet the same in war – A rauchle, ready-haundit kimmer’ [JoHa], ‘Rauchle gulls daily re-anoint Enthroned King Edward ...’ [DH] (also written ‘raucle’).

raucht (rowcht) pp., arch. reached (particularly the past tense of reach; also written ‘raught’).

Ravenburn (rä-vin-burn) n. former shepherd’s cottage on the farm of Hyndlee, situated to the east of the Note o’ the Gate, now deep within Wauchope Forest. It appears to be ‘Reavinburne’ in 1694, when there was a hearth listed there, among the farms of the Laird of Harwood. The shepherd there in the mid-1800s was Walter Cavers. The stream there is the Raven or ‘Reaven’ Burn, which forms part of the headwaters of the Jed.

Ravenswud Junction (rä-vinz-wud-jungk-shin) n. Ravenswood Junction, a junction of the Waverley Line with the Berwickshire Railway, between Newtown St. Boswells and Melrose, near the Leaderfoot Viaduct. The line connected Hawick with Greenlaw, Duns and Chirnside and ran from 1856 until part was washed away in a flood in 1948. The name came from the nearby house, built in the 1820s on the estate formerly known as Old Melrose.

Rawflat (raw-fla) n. farm between Old Belses and Bloomfield in the southern part of Ancrum Parish. In 1502 Bartholomew Turnbull was tenant and Thomas Turnbull in 1540. It was recorded being in the Barony of Primside in 1579 when Walter Turnbull yielded some of the crops and income from his half of the lands in order to repay a debt to Allan Deans from Hawick. Walter Turnbull was Laird there when ordered to vacate the lands in 1581. However, later in 1581 he was murdered by a band of other Turnbuls, and then his wife ‘and hir puir bairnes’ were harassed by Turnbuls firing their weapons at the farm. ‘Jaquie Laidlaw’ was a tenant in 1601 and Walter Turnbull was ‘younger of Raflat’ in 1603. It is also recorded in a criminal case relating to 1612, when it was owned by the Davidsons and farmed by William Rutherford. The lands were sold by Walter Turnbull to Ragwell Bennet of Chesters in 1623, and at that point were still in the Barony of Belses. Some time after that they were included in Ancrum Parish. It was inherited by Robert Bennett from his father Ragwell in 1670. It was owned by the Kers of Cavers Kerr in the later 17th century. John Wilkie, younger, was there in 1685. They were given to Rev. Joseph Leck of Yetholm in 1739 and passed from John Edmund Elliot to the Marquess of Lothian in 1872. In 1788 the lands were valued at £500 and owned by ‘Miss Ainslie’. It may once have been referred to as ‘Milton’ (it is ‘Rowflat’ in 1502, ‘Rawflat’ in 1538, ‘Raffat’ in 1603, ‘Raffett’ in 1612 and 1632 and transcribed ‘Reffat’ in 1678 and ‘Ranfett’ in 1684; this is probably the fortified house marked on Blaen’s 1654 map as ‘Raflett’, although a little too far south).

reader (ree-dur) n. a lay preacher who assists the Minister in Church. In earlier centuries the term referred to someone appointed to read the scriptures instead of the ordained priest or minister. In many post-Reformation churches there was a minister in charge of several parishes and a separate reader for each parish, often having been Catholic priests, and allowed to continue to preach, but barred from administering the sacraments; such appointments ceased following an Act of the General Assembly of 1581. The office of reader was officially abolished after the adoption of the Westminster Directory in 1645, but nevertheless continued in practice. The term later came to be used to refer to the Precentor. In Hawick in the 18th and 19th centuries the Reader (who was usually the schoolmaster and Session Clerk) would read the scripture aloud for the congregation for up to an hour before the regular services began, and also during the interval in the lengthy services.

the Read Roads (thu-reed-rodz) n. name sometimes given to the former road passing from upper Teviotdale into Ewesdale. The road is mentioned in a travel account of 1629. It was the principal road from Carlisle to Hawick before about 1765 when the turnpike was opened. All traffic would have been on foot or horseback. Many miles of the old hollowed out tracks can be seen on the hillsides around Linhope and Mosspaul. A good stretch is visible looking back from Linhope as the track stretches over part of Lightning Hill towards Phau, close to the route that the Mosspaul Ride-out usually takes. There is also a suggestion that it may have partly followed the course of a road built by the Romans, connecting the Lower Esk with Teviotdale, via Ewesleys, Eves Doors and Caerlenrig. Another (or related) road has been traced over the pass from Ewes Doors, via Haggis Side and Corbie Shank.

In 1690 in Ashkirk Parish he witnessed baptisms for William Scott and for John Murray and Margaret Redford. He is probably the Francis who married Bessie ‘Allion’ in 1699 and whose son William (b.1699) was baptised in Ashkirk Parish. He may also be the Francis who earlier married Isobel Chisholme in 1688 and whose children included Jean (b.1689), baptised in Ashkirk, with witnesses William Scott and John (surely a relative). George (b.1817) cattle dealer in Lilliesleaf, son of Andrew and Isabella Scott. He was living on the north side of Main Street in 1861 and was unmarried. James (16th C.) recorded being in Hassendeanburn in 1579 when he and his daughter Margaret sold a half husbandland of land in Lilliesleaf to John. The price was 20 merks, a cow and a stone of wool. John was surely a relative, but the relationship is not recorded in the transaction (which took place in Selkirk). He may be the Redford recorded as witness to a sasine transaction (which took place in Selkirk). He may be the Redford recorded as witness to a sasine transaction (which took place in Selkirk). James (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. His children included: Robert (b.1637) and Bessie (b.1638). His name is listed as ‘Reidfur’ and ‘Readfurt’. James (17th C.) married Bessie Paterson in Ashkirk Parish in 1645. Perhaps Margaret (b.1646) was his daughter. James (17th C.) married Margaret Dodds in Robertson Parish in 1686. His wife was from Bedrule Parish. Their son William was born in 1688. In 1686 (along with William) he witnessed a baptism for John Hope in Robertson Parish. In 1688 he witnessed a baptism for William Turnbull. James (17th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. His name is written ‘Reedfoord’. He is probably the James, married to Margaret Neil, whose daughter Isobel was baptised in 1818. James (b.1809) farmer in Lilliesleaf, son of Andrew and probably a descendant of the earlier James. In 1851 he was living on Main Street, farming 100 acres and employing 4 people and was still there in 1861. His wife was Isabella, daughter of Rev. William Lauder of Earlston. Their children were Helen (b.1853) and Andrew (b.1855). James (1821–1908) born in Lilliesleaf Parish, son of James and Margaret Wilson. In the 1841 census he was living in Wilton Damhead and working as a ‘Writer’s Cl.’, presumably in the office of one of the Hawick lawyers of the time. He emigrated to Canada along with his parents and siblings in 1842. In 1851 he married Elizabeth, daughter of Alexander Gouray. He worked as a teacher, lumber merchant, manufacturer, land speculator and banker. He was involved in local affairs in Perth, Stratford and Downie and became M.P. for North Perth 1867–72. He moved to Austin, Texas in 1876, where he died. James (b.1830) tailor in Lilliesleaf, son of Andrew. He took over the business from his father, on the north side of Main Street. His wife was Janet Haldane from Ancrum. Their children included Helen (b.1852), Janet (or Jessie, b.1854), Andrew (b.1856), Elizabeth (b.1860), Euphemia (b.1862), James (b.1864), William (b.1866), Jane (b.1869) and John (b.1871). Janet (16th C.) recorded on the list of tenants of the lands of Newton in Bedrule in 1531. John (16th C.) rented an acre of land called ‘Coit acre’ and another rig of land from William Middlemas, farmer at Friarshaw in 1563 for 11 years. He may be the John who in 1579 purchased half a husbandland in Lilliesleaf from James (who was probably related) in Hassendeanburn. He is probably the John in Lilliesleaf whose daughter Janet had a marriage contract in 1582 with John, son of Thomas Smail, also in Lilliesleaf; he promised to pay £60 as part of the arrangement. He could be the same John who was granted a half husbandland of land in the town of Lilliesleaf in 1595/6. John (17th C.) married ‘Heilling Jonkesone’ in Ashkirk Parish in 1634. His wife’s name may have been Helen Jenkins or Johnson. John (17th/18th C.) elder of Ashkirk Parish, written up in the 1718 Presbytery records for a dispute with Adam Scott (tenant of Woll). He accused Scott of insulting remarks directed to the elders, while he himself was accused of drunkenness and disparaging remarks made towards Scott. In 1724 he was sent to the synod with money ‘for helping to Build Meeting Houses at Babingtoun and Brandon In Inglan’d’. He is recording collecting money for the Parish in 1727. He may be the John who witnessed a baptism for Francis in 1689. Presumably the same John married Agnes Veitch in 1693 and had children: Francis (b.1699); Margaret (b.1701); Isobel (b.1704); John (b.1706); James (b.1708); and an unnamed son (b.1714). John (18th C.) tenant in Synton Mill. In 1755 he had a bond with the officials of Selkirk, with the discharge being in 1760. He had further discharges with Selkirk in 1761 and 1765. He may be the resident of Ashkirk Parish who married Mary Scott and whose children included: Francis (b.1739); Janet (b.1744); Agnes (b.1748); and Margaret (b.1751). Patrick (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Janet Mark in 1655 and their children included Janet (b.1656), Thomas (b.1658) and Isabel (b.1661). The witnesses in 1656 were Thomas Maben and James Wallace and in 1661 were Adam Ogilvie and James Miller. Patrick (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Isobel Walker and their children included Bessie (b.1654). Robert (d.bef. 1494) recorded in a case at the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh in 1494/5. Nicholas and John, sons of Matthew Turnbull in Hassendean, had remission for his murder. It is not recorded where he was from. William (15th C.) witness to a sasine given by William Douglas, Laird of Cavers, in 1483, relating to lands in Hassendean. William ‘Will’ (16th/17th C.) leased part of the lands of Raperlaw in 1564, along with William Gray. This was specifically the quarter belonging to George Turnbull. William (16th/17th C.) witness in 1607 to a sasine whereby John Scott gained possession of the lands of Hobsburn and Weens. His surname is recorded as ‘Reidfur’. William (16th/17th C.) resident of Wester Lilliesleaf. He gave evidence at the 1628 trial for witchcraft of Isobel Howison, stating that in the previous year, he had a sick cow and his mother sent for Howison, who cured the cow with a charm, but Howison herself fell ill. William (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Isobel ‘How’ ‘Houie’ or ‘Hoy’ in 1652. Their children included James (b.1657) and John (b.1661). William (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Jean Dunlop and their children included Robert (b.1661). William (d.c.1688) tenant in Hassendeanbank when his will was recorded in 1688. His name is written as ‘Reidfoord’. He could be the William ‘Reedfoord’ recorded as a witness to baptisms in Roberton in 1680 (although crossed out) and 1681. In 1686 (along with James) he witnessed a baptism for John Hope in Roberton Parish. William (17th C.) resident of Hassendean Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. He probably lived near Hassendean Mains. He could be the same as the tenant of Hassendeanbank. William (17th C.) married Bessie ‘Vogan’ in Ashkirk Parish in 1689. William (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Janet Thomson and their children included Bessie (b.1688). He may be the William who witnessed a baptism in Ashkirk in 1689. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He was at Essenside in 1702 and was tenant in Easter Essenside in 1709 and 1717. He married Helen Gray and their children included: James (b.1702); Elizabeth and Margaret (b.1707); Helen (b.1709); John (b.1713); Magdalen (b.1714); and Elizabeth (again, b.1717). It seems likely he and his wife were related to Margaret Redford and Robert Gray, respectively, who had children a little later in Ashkirk Parish. He may be the William who, along with John, collected money for Ashkirk Parish in 1727. William (b.1699) resident of Ashkirk Parish, son of Francis. He married Janet Tait in 1726. Possibly the same William is...

Redfordgreen

Redfordgreen (red-furd-green) n. area off the B711 between Alemoor and Buccleuch. The farms of East and West Redfordgreen are here, and it was also once the site of a country school. The farms formerly belonged to the Parish of Yetholm. The area was once owned by the Crown and split into the 3 steadings of Redford, feued by Alexander, Lord Home in 1510. In 1541 it was ‘occupyit be the kingis gudis’, paying rental of £15 13s 4d. In 1621 it was valued at £15 13s 4d. It was inherited by Thomas Scott of Whitslade from his brother Sir Walter in 1655. The superiority was still held by the Homes when inherited by 3 heirs portioners in 1693. Robert Laidlaw was there in at least 1711–24, John Anderson and Robert Inglis in 1723 and Walter Park in 1734. Adam Scott was tenant at East Redfordgreen and Drycleuchshiel in 1716. The teinds were valued at £28 13s 4d in 1785 and 1802. It was valued, along with Drycleuchshiel at £169 6s 8d in 1785 when held by James Lander of Carbisdale and in 1802 when held by Capt. Venner. Henry Thomas Rutherford was owner in the early 19th century and David Scott was tenant at about that time. The term ‘the forty thieves of Redfordgreen’ was used around the 1830s to refer to ‘faggot’ (i.e. artificial) voters after it was purchased by the Buccleuch estates – ‘By Borthwick Wa’s and Redfordgreen and on to wild Buccleuch … ’ [WHO], ‘Hear the melody begin At the door of Cleikiminn, East a mile or so of Timpdepende. Drown the echo of your grief In the joy of Lilliesleaf. Or the merriment of Redfordgreen’ [WL] (it is ‘Reedefurdegre’ in 1510, ‘Reidfurdegre’ in 1541, ‘Reidfurdegre’ in 1621, ‘Reidfurdegrein’ in 1633, ‘Readfurdegrein’ in 1655, ‘Redfurdegrein’ in 1693, ‘Reidfourdegrein’ in 1711, ‘Redefourdegrein’ in 1723 and ‘Reidfourdegrein’ in 1724; it is marked on Ainslie’s 1773 map; see also Redford).

Redfordgreen Schuil (red-furd-green-skil) n. former country school on the moors at Redfordgreen. The building was in Selkirkshire, but also served some of the remote parts of Roberton Parish. The school operated from 1885–1955. A grassy mound is still visible in the field, and a small cairn was placed there in recent years. A book ‘Redfordgreen School, 1885–1955’ (1995) was written by Kathleen W. Stewart. The Borders Archive holds the school admission book for 1885–1935 and log books for 1885–1955.

Redpath (red-, reed-path) n. village between St. Boswells and Earlston, still having its planned form around a single south-facing main street.

Redpath (red-, reed-path, -peth) n. Adam (1776–1823) hedger at Weens estate. He started there in 1805. He had a sister Margaret. He married Jane Cook, who died in 1841, aged 67 (who was said to be insane in later life). Their children included: William (b.c.1804), forester at Weens; John (b.c.1805), who lived for a while at Bonchester Bridgend; Betty (b.1809), spend most of her life as a servant at Weens; George (b.1811); Helen (b.1813), married Robert Smith and lived at the Sclenty, Blacklee and Denholm; Adam (b.1817), who died in infancy; and Margaret, a housemaid at Weens, who married a Yorkshireman and moved to Aldborough. He died at Sclenty Hall. After his early death his 2 sons William and John together took over his job for a while, with William eventually taking over himself. Many of the family are buried in Hobkirk kirkyard. Adam (b.1838) son of William and Mary Smith. He worked for a while as a servant at Weens. Later he was in Noble’s factory in Hawick. Anne, R.S.A., O.B.E. (1895–1965) born in Galashiels, 2nd daughter of Thomas Brown, a textile designer, and Agnes Milne. Her family moved to Hawick when she was 6 years old, after her father was offered the job of head of design at Glebe Mills. She attended Hawick High School in the period 1901–13 and then studied at the Edinburgh College of Art (concurrently with teacher training at Moray House). Graduating in 1918, she won a scholarship to visit Europe. She returned to France in 1920 with her husband (an architect who worked with the Imperial War Graves Commission), and they lived there until 1934. Her first exhibition was in 1921, and she also decorated family furniture with flowers and birds, which would later feature in her still life paintings. In 1934 her husband’s millionaire employer lost his fortune and the family returned to Britain, she and her sons to Hawick and her husband to a job in London. She lived at 52 Orchard Terrace and on Beaconsfield Terrace. She was also President of Hawick Art Club. In this period she painted many landscapes around Hawick, and exhibited in the Royal Scottish Academy. She became best known for her vividly colourful still lifes, replete with familiar household objects, often in disconcerting combinations, with ‘The Indian Rug’ and ‘Still Life with Orange Chair’ perhaps best exemplifying her unique style. She soon became one of Scotland’s best known artists. She was President of the Scottish Society of Women Artists 1944–47 and in 1952 was the first female painter to be elected to the Royal Scottish Academy. Further trips to the continent inspired a change in style and she produced distinctive Mediterranean landscapes. She became an O.B.E. in 1955 and was also granted an honorary degree from Edinburgh University. In public she was known for her extravagant hats and designer clothes. Her self-portraits are in the Scottish National Portrait Gallery and the Glasgow Art Gallery and Museum. She later moved to Edinburgh. She suffered several heart attacks in later life, but continued to develop her artistic output, her last phase focusing on paintings of church interiors in Lisbon and Venice. In 1929 she married James Beattie Michie at Teviotdale Kirk. She died following a fall at her home, 7 London Street, Edinburgh and was cremated. Books on her include ‘Anne Redpath 1895–1965, her life and work’ (1996) by Patrick Bourne, ‘Anne Redpath’ (1974) by George Bruce and ‘Anne Redpath, 1895–1965’ (1996) by Philip Long. David (b.1814/5) from Eccles, was farm steward at Galalaw in 1851. His wife was Margaret and their children included Mary, Janet, George and Robert. James (18th C.) gardener at Stobs. His surname is recorded as ‘Rippeth’ in the baptismal records for his children in Cavers Parish. His children included: James (b.1725); Helen (b.1727); Janet (b.1729); and an unnamed child (b.1734). James L., O.B.E., served as President of the Callants’ Club in 1981, ??, John (b.c.1805) son of Adam and younger brother of William. He worked as a labourer in the Bonchester Bridge area, living for a while at Bridgend. He was one of the first Trustees of Hawick Congregational (then Evangelical Union) Kirk, from about 1848. Margaret (b.c.1785) sister of hedger Adam. In 1841 she was living at Sclenty Hall and listed as ‘Independent’. Also there were Jane (perhaps her mother) and the younger Elizaboth and Margaret. Neil (d.1988) from Hawick, he served in the Gordon Highlanders during WWI and was one of the last surviving holders of the 14–15 Star. He later became a strong pacifist and leading member of the local Labour Party. However, during WWII he served as a Lieutenant in the Home Guard. He worked as a foreman at Braemar. An enthusiastic supporter of athletics, he became Secretary of the Scottish Games Association. He served as a Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. Robert (19th C.) land steward of Bonchester Bridge who was an elder in the Hawick Relief Kirk. Thomas Kinmont ‘Kim’ (1925–2018) born in Aberdeen, son of William, he was nephew of artist Anne. He was educated at Hawick High School and partly raised by his aunt Anne, particularly after the death of his mother when he was 14. He graduated from Edinburgh College of Art in 1948. He served with the Royal Corps of Signals in WWII and trained as a teacher at Moray House. He was a secondary school art teacher for 35 years, starting in Galashields. Several exhibitions were held of his work, which was strongly influenced by his aunt. His work can be viewed in several galleries, including the Scottish National Portrait Gallery. He was a member of the New Scottish Group and the Scottish Society of Artists. He married 3 times and had sons Tom and Adam. William (18th C.) married Agnes Hobkirk in Bedrule Parish in 1771. William (c.1805–86) born in Earlston, son of hedger Adam, he was forester at Weens. When his father died young in 1823, he and his brother John took over the job on one man’s wages, but after a couple of years he took over entirely. In 1841 and 1851 he was listed as a hedger at Weens, and in 1861 was a forrester there. He continued to work for the Cleghorns and Tuncreds of Weens for his whole working life. He was made an Elder of the Kirk in 1838. He was said to have a dour temper and not to be liked by everyone. He spent some time in an asylum, later living with his daughter Mary in Denholm. He married Mary Smith, who died in 1869, aged 57; her brother was William Smith who married Mary Laidlaw from Weensmoor. Their children included: Ann (b.1833), who worked for a while as laundry maid at Weens, later living in Denholm, died unmarried; Jane (1835–74); Adam (b.1838), servant at Weens and worked for Noble’s in Hawick; Mary, in service at Weens, married Mr. Dodds; Thomas,

the Reel (thu-reel) n. another name for the Bull Reel, particularly as danced by the Cornet, Principals and ex-Cornets shortly before midnight during the Ball. It is not danced by the other participants, who just watch the proceedings. It is started with the Cornet presenting his sash for his Lass to wear, and the men putting on white gloves. The Principles start the Reel, with the ex-Cornets joining in order of their year of office. The dance is also repeated in front of the Tower on the return from the Moat after dawn, but this time only by the Cornet and the Right- and Left-Hand Men. It is also danced in front of the Tower after the Handing-Back on the Saturday. Before 1855, when there were Races held at the Haugh, the Cornet and his followers would dance the Reel at the Haugh after the Dinner on the Friday, and this was repeated after the Dinner was re-submitted in 1886. They would dance in the middle of the gymnastic track and this would signal the start of the Games. The Reel was first danced at the Ball (by the ex-Cornets) only in 1891. The origin of the Reel is uncertain.

the Reformation (\textit{thu-re-for-ni\textasciitilde-shin}) \textit{n.} name usually given to a movement of religious reform that swept across Europe in the late 16th century, leading to the Church of Rome being replaced with the Protestant Church. One of the major reasons was a perceived abuse of clerical power, but mixed up with power struggles among the nobility. Lutheran doctrines from the continent led to early martyrs, with Archbishop David Beaton consequently killed by rebels in 1545. John Knox, with his Calvinist ideals became leader from 1555, and the Church was completely reformed by an Act of 1560, although not fully established as ‘the true and only Kirk of Christ within this realm’ until 1567. St. Mary’s, like other churches, must then have been transformed into a much plainer and more severe church, suitable for Presbyterian worship. After the Reformation there was a shortage of suitable ministers, so there was an arrangement whereby several parishes were combined under one minister, assisted by a number of readers (most of whom had been pre-Reformation Roman Catholic priests). It is thus hard to distinguish who acted as preacher for the local parishes at the end of the 16th century. The use of the terms ‘pastor’, ‘reader’ and ‘vicar’ in that period, as well as ‘minister’, add to the ambiguities.

the Reform Bill (\textit{thu-re-for-bil}) \textit{n.} parliamentary bill introduced by Prime Minister Earl Grey in April 1831, being possibly the first voluntary scheme of government reform. After much political wrangling it finally passed in June 1832 and became the Reform Act. In 1812 the entire county of Roxburghshire had only 143 voters (up from 105 in 1788), of which a mere 2 or 3 were in Hawick. Hawick people were much involved in the political discussion, with several pro-Reform resolutions being made at public meetings, some of which were passed on to Parliament or the King. A holiday was declared when news reached Hawick of the Bill’s initial passing by the Commons composed of townsmen campaigning in support of its electoral roll. However, a Commons Select Committee investigated abuses of the Bill through ‘fictitious voters’ being added, specifically joint proprietors of property arranged between Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire. At the election of 1835 there was a procession of voters and supporters from Hobbirk, Kirkton and Cavers marching into Hawick, accompanied by bands and banners. When it became clear that Lord Scott (the Tory candidate) was going to win, the crowds became quite unruly and the Riot Act was read, with a troop of the Scots Greys being called. The Reform Act of 1868 gave the vote to all male householders, and at that time the Hawick Burghs constituency was formed – ‘Huz and Mainchester carried the Reform Bill’ [T].

the Reform Committee (\textit{thu-re-for-kum-ee}) \textit{n.} body in the late 1820s and early 1830s composed of townsmen campaigning in support of the Reform Bill.

refit (\textit{reft}) \textit{pp., poct.} torn, rent, pulled assunder – ‘The blasts o’ the winter, sae bitter and keen, Had refit the sward o’ the brightest green’ [JT], ‘…I sadly mourn for my ain true love That was refit away frae me’ [JCG].

refugee (\textit{re-few-jee}) \textit{n.} a young person sent to a rural area from a city to protect them from air raids etc., particularly during World War II, also sometimes referred to as an ‘evacuee’. In Hawick they were usually children from the Edinburgh area. There were also Belgian refugees at Silver-buthall during WWI; they arrived about 1915, and most of them returned to Belgium in 1919.

regaird (ree-gärd) v., n. regard – ‘...and outlawed, conforme to the acts of the town, in regard of their own confessions ...’ [BR1679], ‘No sermon, in regard Mr Douglass who was appointed by ye Persbyterie was labouring under a fever’ [PR1712], ‘...who was most sharplie rebuked in regaird both that he is a magistrate in this town and one of ye number of ye Elders’ [PR1716], ‘Daurin the whhummlin flude without regaird For ocht, bar rinnin fish, this side o Hell’ [DH], ‘Wi sma regaird For Hawick toon And even less For Maggie Broon ...’ [DH], ‘...an’ was enlightened on the possession as regards the Common-Ridin’” [BW1939].

Regal Bailie (ree-gul-bâ-lee) n. also called a Bailie of Regality, title sometimes used for the representative of the Lord whose lands included a burgh, with certain administrative and legal powers in that burgh, including collection of rents, taxes at fairs, etc. The Douglases of Drumlanrig appointed a local man to hold this position up until they relinquished the Barony in about 1670. In Hawick this was for a long time the Chamberlain of the Scotts of Buccleuch. The office was held by the Duchess of Buccleuch until she failed to take the test legislated by Parliament for Charles II. So in 1686 the office was granted to Walter Scott of Alton. Hawick’s Regal Bailie remained a powerful local figure until the abolishing of regalities by Heritable Jurisdictions (Scotland) Act of 1747 – ‘Gedeon Scott of Falnash, regal bailie to the Duchess of Buccleuch ...’ [BR1699] (see also Bailie o Regality and Baron Depute).

regality (ree-ga-li’-ee) n. an administrative and legal area, typically larger than a barony, and usually given by the Crown. The jurisdiction of a regality superceded that of the Sheriff of the County. The Lord of the Regality had a distinct court, with its own clerk and officers, overseen by a Bailie of Regality. There were formerly 7 such jurisdictions in Roxburghshire, namely Glasgow (the former lands of that Bishopric), Hawick, Jedburgh, Kelso, Liddesdale, Melrose and Sprouston. Hawick was formerly referred to as a Regality, presumably because it was administered as the equivalent of a Royal Burgh, even although it is unclear whether it was created as such by the Crown. The first such mention appears to be in 1358 (although this is along with Sprouston, and it may be that only Sprouston was a regality at that time, with Hawick being just a ‘free barony’) is unclear if they were both distinct regalities). Hawick was reerected into a free barony and regality in 1686, since it has fallen to the Crown after the death of the Duke of Monmouth; this new charter granted the barony and regality to Anne, Duchess of Buccleuch. It ceased to be a regality when heritable jurisdictions were abolished by Parliament in 1747, with the Duke of Buccleuch being compensated £400 as a result – ‘Ammant the egregious and insolent abuse committ by Walter Rowcastell upon William Scott, regall bawylea of the regallity of Hawicke ...’ [BR1693].

Reggs (regz) n. former name for a farm in the hills above Newmill. It is described in the survey of Scott of Buccleuch properties in 1718, where it is also listed as ‘Riggs’. At that time it extended to 84 acres, was bounded by Castlehill, How Meadow and Branxholme Muir and contained no farmhouse. It probably corresponded to the place marked ‘Waes’ just below Chapelhill on Blaeu’s 1654 map (the origin of the name is uncertain, but perhaps just ‘rigs’).

Reginald (re-ji-nuld) n. of Durham or Coldingham (d.c.1190) mediaval hagiographer, who gave one of the first mentions of Hawick in his account of the miracles of St. Cuthbert, written in the 1160s and 1170s. Reginald’s work is partly a recounting of stories told by Aelfric (or Aelred) of Rievaulx, a monk from Durham who travelled around the 1040s; but other parts of Reginald’s book are contemporary (he was certainly alive in the 1150s), and hence the date of the local tales is hard to pin down. In fact the last 6 chapters cover stories relevant to Teviotdale, the chapel in the Slitrig, Dolphinus (Rector of Cavers), etc. The story with the most specific Hawick connection concerns Seigiva and Rosfritha, said to be from Hawick (and thus, probably the first known residents) who witness the mysterious appearance of a candle at a chapel dedicated to St. Cuthbert in the Slitrig valley (identified with a site at Cosgmill). He also wrote histories of St. Godric (with whom he spent time personally), St. Oswald (King of Northumbria), and possibly St. Ebba.

region (ree-ji-nul-koon-sul) n. one of nine units into which Scottish local government was split following Reorganisation in 1974. Each region was divided into separate ‘districts’, Hawick being in the Borders Region until further reorganisation in 1995. Regional Council (ree-ji-nul-koon-sul) n. the higher level of local council between May 1975 and April 1996, Hawick’s council being that of the Borders Region with headquarters in Newtown St. Boswells. Regional councils were responsible for education, social services, roads and transport. Both District and Regional Councils were replaced by unitary authorities in 1996. Hawick lying within the jurisdiction of the Scottish Borders Council.

the Registrar’s (thu-re-jee-strawrz) n. Registrar’s office, where civil weddings took place. From 1974–97 it was located at 12 High Street, which is now a grade B listed building. Latterly the office has been within the Town Hall. The first Registrar in Hawick was schoolmaster Anthony Dodds 1854–87, following the Registration Act of 1854. James Shiel was appointed as the first Registrar of Wilton about the same time. Both of these men would operate out of their own homes, on Allars Crescent and Laing Terrace, respectively.

registrat (re-jis-trat) pp., arch. registered – ‘...and consentis that thris presentis be insert and registrat in the buiks of Counsale ...’ [SB1599], ‘...be insert and registrat in the Books of Council and Session ...’ [BR1672].

regrat (ree-grat) n., arch. regret – ‘...so farre sympathies with yow ... as to afford yow, att least, some regrate’ [SB1670].

regrait (ree-grat) v., arch. to regret – ‘Being acerteneit is my seruand of the slauchter of your frind, quhilk I regrait from my verry hart ...’ [SB1584].

regratin (ree-gra-tin) n., arch. the act of re-selling, buying a commodity in order to profit from reselling it – ‘Various persons are fined ‘for breach of the proclamation of His Majesty’s Privy Council, against regrating of victuals and forestallers’ [JW1699].

reid (reed) adj. red – ‘hei hed a right reid nose on um’, ‘The sun was reid as a furnace mouth, As he sank on the Ettrick hyll; And gloamyne gatherit from the easte, The dowye world to fill’ [JTe], ‘For in the han’ o’ the Lord ther is ane cup, an’ the wine is reid ...’[HSR], ‘The reid hairist moon climbs steep and slow a far September sky ...’[JYH], ‘...till the brae-face was traisselt an the gress ran reed wui bluid’[ECS], ‘Hei girmed at the reid, an’ grat at the blue ...’ [DH], ‘Frae reid to creamy-white ... Daft berries for daft days ...’ [DH], ‘The reid rose dwines and her petals lie ...’ [WL], ‘...To catch a glimpse yont the grey reek O’ the distant ruifs o’ reid’ [WL] (also spelled ‘reed’).

Reid (reed) n. Agnes ‘Nanny’ (18th C.) cook and chambermaid at Stirches in 1785 and 1786, when she was working for Gilbert Chisholme. Rev. Alan minister of the combined Parish of Newcastleton and Canonbie from 1889. In 2008 he moved to Kinross. Rev. Alexander (d.1640s) became minister of Ashkirk in 1619. He donated £11 merks towards the building of Glasgow University Library in 1636. His is probably the name transcribed ‘M. Reid, Ashkirik’ (probably ‘Mr.’ is meant) on the ‘Confessions’ of Faith, signed in Hawick in 1638. Robert Cuthbertson signed beside him as Reader, suggesting he had an assistant at that time. He married Janet Shaw and their children included John and William (who became a merchant’s apprentice in Edinburgh in 1648).

He was present during the admission of Harry Elliot as minister of Bedrule in 1640. He witnessed a baptism for Rev. Robert Cunningham of Hawick in 1640 (who also married a Shaw, and so possibly their wives were related). He died sometime between 1645 and 1649. He married Janet Shaw and their children included John and William (who became a merchant’s apprentice in Edinburgh in 1648). Andrew (17th C.) listed as undermiller at Borthaugh among the ‘deficient’ on the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. Andrew (18th/19th C.) farmer at Hassendean Knowe, recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as owner of 2 horses. He could be the lawyer who paid the horse tax in Jedburgh in the 1780s. David (17th/18th C.) weaver in Hawick. He married Helen Blyth and their children included: Jean (b.1708); John (b.1711); Janet (b.1713); Helen (b.1715); and Bessie (b.1718). The witnesses in 1708 were weavers John Stevenson and John Richardson, in 1711 were Andrew Jardine (‘older’) and wright James Purcell, in 1713 were Robert Turnbull and Robert Rodger, and in 1718 were wright James Purcell and weaver Michael Jolly. Derek Robert Headteacher of Burnfoot New Community School, appointed in 1996. He was awarded a C.B.E. in 2002 for sevices to education and was Hawick Citizen of the Year in 2006. Rev. Edward Thomas Scott (1871–1938) Rector of St. Cuthbert’s Kirk 1903–1910. He came from a well-known Glasgow family, with 3 of his brothers being Deputy Lieutenants of that city. He had previously been assistant at St. Paul’s and then St. Mary’s Cathedral, both in Edinburgh. For most of his incumbency in Hawick he was assissted by Rev. A.L. Ross. His time as Rector was marked by acclaimed Evensong services, which attracted people from other local churches. There were several improvements to the church during his time, including chairs to replace the pews, and his gift of an oak chancel screen. He also became Chaplain to Episcopalians at Stobs Camp. He left to become Rector of St. Bride’s in Glasgow, later becoming Dean and Bishop of that Diocese and later Bishop of St. Andrews. Esther (d.1888) worked at Wester Nurseries from the age of 8, but then took over as servant to Peter Wilson’s family from Jean Renwick about 1830. The pair completed a continuous service of 106 years. She can be seen in a portrait with the family. George (d.1923) local businessman. He was Secretary of the Hawick Baptist Kirk for 10 years and Sunday School Superintendent for 6 years. Gordon (1943– ) born in Hawick, educated at Hawick and Gala, then at Edinburgh and Oxford Universities, continuing to train as an Episcopalian minister. He became Curate of St. Salvador’s Church in Edinburgh in 1967, then served as Chaplain of Salisbury Theological College and Rector of St. Michael’s & All Saints Church, Edinburgh from 1972. He also served as a member of Lothian Regional Council and Convenor of Lothian & Borders Police Board. He was Provost of Inverness Cathedral 1984–87 and joined the Diocese of Gibraltar in Europe (the Church of England Diocese that covers continental Europe) in 1988. He lived in Gibraltar and Milan, and looked after chaplaincies all over Italy and Malta. He then became Rector of St. Clement’s in Philadelphia. Helen (d.1800) Hawick resident whose death is recorded. She is listed as ‘Called Helen and the Cudy’, presumably meaning that she had a donkey. J. (19th C.) listed in Slater’s 1852 directory as an ‘eating house keeper’ on the Cross Wynd. James (17th C.) resident at Horselee in Cavers Parish in 1694 according to the Hearth Tax rolls. James (17th/18th C.) resident at Penchrise. His son James was baptised in Kirkton Parish in 1788. James S. (19th/20th C.) farmer at Penchrise. His brother John farmed at Barnes, which he took over after his brother’s death. He won several sheep prizes around the 1910s. Jessie Crawford describes him as ‘dour as ditchwater and as hard as nails’. John (16th C.) presented as Rector of Ashkirk in 1552. Nothing else appears to be known about him. John ‘Jock’ (16th C.) tenant of Sir Walter Scott of Howpasley in the lands of Outersideig in 1569. Sir Walter acted as cautioner for his tenants at a meeting in Hawick, assuring that they would obey the laws of the Lord Regent. His name is recorded as ‘Jak Reid’ and he was probably related to ‘Pait’, who was also listed. John (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish, with his name recorded as ‘Rid’. He married Isobel Mathieson and their son James was baptised in 1656. The witnesses were Thomas (surely a relative) and James Scott. John (17th C.) resident of Adderstonelee on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. His surname was written ‘Rid’. John (17th C.) resident at Hawthornside according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He paid tax on 2 hearths and was surely related to Thomas, who was also listed there. John (17th C.) recorded as resident at Borthwickshiel in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. It is listed under the farms of the Earl of Tarras in Hassendean Parish. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Chisholme. His children, baptised in Roberton Parish, included: Thomas (b.1701); Helen (b.1703); John (b.1704); James (b.1706); and Thomas (again, b.1706). John (17th/18th C.) tenant farmer at Raesknowe. He married Isobel Beatie (or ‘Bettie’), who was a schoolmistress. In 1721 the Hawick Session requested that he produce a testimonial from his previous parish, since his wife had asked for money for teaching poor children. In 1723 he was described as ‘a well aged man, capable to teach at ye said town’, when the session agreed to encourage him to teach the poor children in Raesknowe. John (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. In 1742 he was at ‘Harden ...’ when his son Charles was baptised. He is probably the John who married Margaret Donaldson in Robertson in 1740. Margaret (b.1741), baptised in Roberton, was likely also his child. John (18th C.) resident of Hawick and then Cavers Parishes. In 1745 he was living at Lochburnfoot, where James was also living, perhaps his brother. He married Agnes Elliot and their children included: John (b.1735); John (again, b.1739); Helen (b.1740); Margaret (b.1745); John (again, b.1747); and Janet (b.1750). John (18th C. resident of Cavers Parish. He married Agnes Elliot and their children included John (b.1756). John (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. In 1761 he married Janet Anderson, from Hawick Parish. John (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish, recorded at Berryfell in 1776 when his son Robert was baptised. John (18th/19th C.) coachman at Cavers in 1797, when he was working for George Douglas. His name was written ‘Read’. John (18th/19th C.) farmer at ‘New Appletreehall’, recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when he had 4 horses. He could be the John Reid, who was bankrupt by 1817 when there was a court case over an 1802 bill he had with John Allan, involving Adam Ormiston, and John and Thomas (his brother-in-law) Ainslie. Rev. John (19th C.) minister recorded at Castleton in Slater’s 1852 directory. It is unclear which church he may have been minister of, but it is possible he was one of the supply ministers for the Congregational Kirk. John (19th/20th C.) farmer at Barnes near Stobs. He remained a bachelor. When in Hawick he stabled his horse at the Tower Hotel; on day he ignored the advice of the hostlers to take a carriage home and mounted his horse while quite drunk, which subsequently reared and he died in the pend. After his death the farm was taken over by his brother James S. John (19th/20th C.) butcher on the High Street. His brother James died in the South African War in 1901. Katherine (18th C.) housemaid at Minto in 1785 and 1786, when she was working for Sir Gilbert Elliot. Kentigern (16th C.) recorded as resident at Hassendean Kirk in 1539. He may have been the actual minister there at that time, with Sir John Duncan and Sir George Scott squabbling over the main benefice. Margaret (17th/18th C.) recorded receiving money from Ashkirk Parish in 1727. Peter ‘Pate’ (16th C.) tenant in Outtersierig, for whom Sir Walter Scott of Howpäsley stood as cautioner in 1569. He was listed as ‘Pait Reid’ and probably related to ‘Jak’, who was also listed. R. (18th/19th C.) mason in Wilton. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘ Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. R.E. (19th/20th C.) President of the Toronto Hawick Common Riding in at least 1926 and 1927. He was presumably originally from the Hawick area. Robert (17th/18th C.) from Langholm, he was rebuked by the Castleton Kirk Session in 1709 for having an irregular marriage. Robert (1734/5–1822) labourer at Boghall. His death is recorded in Hawick. Robert (18th C.) recorded as house servant and groom at Stiches in 1788, when he was working for Gilbert Chisholme. Perhaps the same Robert was a servant at Silverbuthall, who married Christopher Anderson and had children John (b.1810) and Richard (b.1812) baptised in Wilton Parish. Robert (18th/19th C.) served as overseer for collecting marl from Groundistone and Blackcleuch for the Buccleuch estates, in the period 1799–1807. He may be the same Robert recorded as farmer at Chester (Southdean) in 1797. Robert ‘Rob’ (b.1791) son of William and Jean, he was born in Wilton Parish. He was a stockingmaker who lived at Roadhead and was known as ‘General Reid’ of Roadhead. He led the Hawick contingent to the Carterhaugh Baa game of 1815, gaining his nickname there. The death of his dog Flora inspired one of the few surviving poems of James Hogg: apparently he had the family bible bound in the dog’s hide after she died. He is listed as a stocking-maker at Roadhead among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1835 and 1840. He is recorded at Roadhead in 1841, 1851 (by which time he was a widower) and 1861 (when he is listed as ‘Wool Frame Work Knitter’). He married Esther Cairns in Wilton in 1818. Their children included William, George, Thomas, Alexander and Jane. He is probably the stockingmaker whose child’s death is recorded in 1838. Stan (20th C.) organiser of dances in the Drill Hall, popular on Saturday nights in the 1930s – ‘Ee got intae Stan Reid’s for a tanner And a pass oot on the back o’ eer hand’ [AY]. Thomas (17th C.) tenant in Adderstonesthiel. The will of his wife Margaret Turnbull is recorded in 1682. Thomas (17th C.) recorded as resident at Hawthornside on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He is surely related to John, who was also listed there. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Robertson and Hawick Parishes. In 1733 he was recorded at ‘Eal…’ (either Eilrig or Alemoor). In 1746 he was at Harwood (in Hawick Parish). He married Agnes Borthwick in Roberton in 1733 and their children included: Mary (b.1733), baptised in Robertson; Janet (b.1738), baptised in Hawick; and James (b.1746), also baptised in Hawick. The witnesses in 1746 were Francis and Thomas Elliot at Harwood. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish, recorded at Ormiston in 1726, 1727, 1729 and 1737. He is probably the Thomas who married Jane Elliot in Cavers in 1725. His children, baptised in Cavers, included: Bessie (b.1726); Jane (b.1727); Agnes (b.1729); James (b.1731); Bessie (b.1733); Janet (b.1734); and Thomas (b.1737). He is surely related to Walter, who was at Ormiston at the same time. Thomas (18th C.) along with Thomas Blyth he rented Appletreehall, Knowetownhead and part of Clarilaw from Thomas Turnbull of Knowe in 1763. He is probably the Thomas who witnessed a baptism for John Scott (in Lees) in 1764 and several other baptisms in Wilton Parish in 1769 and 1770 (suggesting that he may have been an Elder in the Kirk). Thomas (19th C.) tenant of St. Leonards farm in the late 19th century, when the ordering of the Curds and Cream became a more formal event. It was probably his wife who was painted with Betsy the cow by J.E.D. Murray in 1889 – ‘And hearken ye, hearken ye, friend Tam Reid, Speakin’ loud’s a wee thing risky; Some like when here, A drap o’ good cheer, So dinna forget the whisky!’ [JEDM]. Walter (18th C.) resident of Ormiston, where his is recorded in 1735, 1737 and 1742. His children, baptised in Cavers Parish, included: Thomas (b.1731); John (b.1735); Agnes (b.1737); Isabel (b.1739); and Agnes (again, b.1742). He is surely related to Thomas, who was at Ormiston at the same time. Walter (d.bef. 1808) roadman in Hawick. He was already deceased when his daughter Margaret died in 1808. Walter (b.c.1805) mason in Wilton, listed in Pigot’s 1837 directory. In 1841 he was living at Kirkstyle (probably the north side of Princes Street, near Dickson Street). He married Elizabeth Ballantyne and their children included John, Walter B., Elizabeth, Robert and Robert Ann. In 1851 his widow was ‘proprietor of houses’ at the same address. Walter (19th C.) farmer at Acreknowe. He was there in 1841, with 4 female servants in his household. His widow was still at Acreknowe in 1851. He married Margaret Aitkin and their children (baptised in Kirkton Parish) included: Elizabeth Frances (b.1824); William (b.1825); Gilbert Aitkin (b.1827); Walter (b.1833); Margaret (b.1836); James (b.1838); and Elizabeth Frances (b.1842). William ‘Willie’ (16th C.) listed in 1544 as ‘Wille Redde servaunte to John Crosser’, among many local Scotsmen who gave their assurances of support to the English. Many of the relevant Croziers were connected with the Slitrig valley at that time. It is possible his name was ‘Reddy’ or some other variant. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Hummelknowes. In 1709 he married Isobel Leyden, the marriage being recorded in Cavers Parish. William (17th/18th C.) tenant in Raesknowe. In 1719 he witnessed a baptism for William Hislop, servant in Allanhaugh Mill. He is probably the William who witnessed a baptism for William Helm in 1731. He married Helen Armstrong and their children included: William (b.1713); Janet (b.1715); Bessie (b.1719); and Thomas (b.1721). The witnesses in 1719 were Beadle John Scott and William Hislop. William (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Whithope in 1757, 1763 and 1773 and 1775. His children, baptised in Robertson, included Margaret (b.1755), Isobel (b.1757), Agnes (b.1759), John (b.1761), Robert (b.1763), Thomas (b.1773) and an unnamed daughter (b.1775). William (18th C.) recorded at Acreknowe in 1788 when his son James was baptised in Kirkton Parish and in 1790 when his son Walter was baptised. He is probably the William who married ‘Angus’ Cavers in Kirkton in 1787. William (18th/19th C.) recorded as farmer at Dodburn, on the Horse Tax Rolls of 1797, when he owned 2 horses. He also paid the dog tax at Dodburn in 1797. William ‘Wull’ (c.1769–1846) sexton and Beadle at Wilton for about 50 years and great-grandfather of James Turnbull. In 1835 he was Church Officer at Dovemount, and in 1840 and 1841 was at Roadside. In the 1841 census he was listed at Gibsnose, with his wife Jane. He was one of the people chosen in 1842 to point out the old marches of Wilton. One of his responsibilities was ringing the church bell, and he is said to have complained about how infrequently he got to ring the bell, just before his own funeral. He was known as a great wit, and was unkindly rumoured to be in league with grave-robbers – ‘Wull Reid, heil lifts th’ deid; Collins does the same; Jimmie Riddle is a sweep And resurrection man’ [T]. His wife was Jane and their children included Janet (b.1795), who married their neighbour Thomas Dryden. William (b.1794/5) farmer at Winningtonrig. He was there in 1841 and 1851 with his son William; in 1851 he was farmer of 600 acres and employer of 7 people. William (b.1803/4) mason in Wilton. He was listed at Damside in 1840, with the address changed to Roadside, where he was in 1841. In 1851 he was a journeyman mason on Wilton Kirkstyle. His wife was Mary and their children included Helen, William, John, Jane and Walter. Rev. William (b.1824) from Forfar, he was a ‘probationer’ of the Free Church in Newcastle in 1851. Since that church was only established in 1850, he was probably the first person to minister to the new congregation. He is recorded giving a temperance talk in Newcastle in 1852.
and in a directory of that year is incorrectly listed as 'John'. William (b.1825/6) son of Walter, he took over as farmer at Acreknowe. In 1851 he was farmer of 1200 acres at Acreknowe, and employing 6 farm labourers. William J.S. (19th/20th C.) wrote the article 'Drumlanrig and the Charter' for the 1938 Transactions (formerly written 'Red', 'Reed', 'Rid', etc.).

the Reid Book (thu-reed-book) n. name sometimes given to the handbook-sized set of words for the most popular Hawick songs, published in 1957 along with 'The Hawick Songs – A Complete Collection'. Carried around and dog-eared over 3 decades it was replaced by the 'Blue Book' in 1978 and then the 'Green Book' in 2001.

reid-cap *(reed-kawp) n., arch. a cruel, mischievous spirit with long teeth, said to inhabit old towers – 'Redcap' is a popular appellation of that class of spirits which haunts old castles. Every ruined tower in the south of Scotland is supposed to have an inhabitant of this species' [JL] (cf. Robin Redcap).

Reidcleuch Edge (reed-klooch-ej) n. Reidcleuch Edge, small hill about 2 km north of Craik village, reaching a height of 392 m. A stream to the east of there is the Red Cleuch, which runs into Shiel Sike, while a stream to the south is Redde Sike. Local children used to pick it up and throw it in the air singing 'reed-coat, reed-coat, fly away, An' make the morn a sunny day!' [GW].

reid-hand *(reed-hawnd) adj., arch. a legal term from the 15th and 16th centuries, meaning caught in the act of a crime, used throughout Scotland. This led to the present use of the phrase 'caught red-handed', which was adapted into English, especially after being popularised in Sir Walter Scott's novels.

Reidheugh (reed-, red-hewch) n. Reidheugh, ancient seat of the Elliot family, between Hermitage and Newcastleton. Scott of Satchells suggests that the Elliots received Reidheugh from Robert the Bruce in about 1320. The name first occurs in a rental roll of Liddesdale in about 1376 (worth 15 shillings, 'per forincecum seruicium reddendo x s'). An Elliot of Reidheugh is referred to around 1400. There is also a story, apparently from a manuscript of the Blackadder family, of an Elliot of Reidheugh called 'Chieftan of the South', who was killed in battle along with his 3 sons, but had a daughter Mary who married Cuthbert Blackadder of that Ilk and had a son who was alive in 1447. However, the first definitive record of this being the family seat is when 'Robert elwald of ye Redheuch' is mentioned in 1476. A precept for the lands is recorded in 1489, although the date of the original charter is unknown. Robert, the 17th chief lived mainly at the new Larriston house, so Reidheugh became less prominent. That Robert failed to have a male heir and the lands went to his daughter Margaret, who married a son of Elliott of Stobs, whose descendants were the Elliots of Larriston. Thomas Armstrong is recorded as possessor of the lands in 1632. The farm itself was valued at £96 11s in 1678, when disjoined from the former estate of Elliot of Larriston. Robert of Larriston went bankrupt and sold the lands to Christopher Irving of Binks in 1688, but they were repurchased by William Elliot (descendant of the Falnash branch) in about 1730 for his 2nd son, Robert. Around this time the present house and barn were built, with the north and east sides of the farmhouse perhaps incorporating earlier walls. The farm was still valued at £96 11s in the 1788 county valuation and 1811 Land Tax Rolls. The farm suffered greatly in the flood of 1846. Robert's grandson Robert died in 1915 and in 1918 his sister Anna Mary sold the farm to the tenants, James and Thomas Scott. Thomas Scott sold it to Sir Gilbert Elliott, 10th Baronet of Stobs in 1946. The farm has been modernised, with a small loch created by damming the Rede Burn. A clan museum is also situated there. The precise location of the original tower is uncertain, with locals pointing out one site in the 19th century (recorded in the Ordnance Survey Name Book of 1858) to the south near the railway viaduct, another just to the east of there, where there are some foundations and a third to the west of the farmhouse, where there is an enclosure where a plaque has been placed marking this as the 'Site of Reidheugh Tower' (although there is no real evidence for this). On the opposite side of the Hermitage Water there is another site claimed to be home of 'Jock of the Park'. And north-west of the farmhouse there is an area of rig lines and field systems (also spelled 'Redheuch') and sometimes erroneously 'Redhaugh'; the origin of the name is probably just ‘red height’, i.e. the height above the Rede Burn; it is ‘Redehugh’ about 1376 and is recorded regularly from at least 1476; it was ‘Redehuch’ in 1489, ‘redheuch’ in 1502, ‘Redheuch’ in 1508, ‘Redeheuche’ in 1510 and 1515/6, ‘Reidheuch’ in 1526, ‘the Redhwych’ in 1546, ‘the Reidhewcht’ in 1547 and 1548, ‘Reidheuch’ in 1550, ‘Reidhuch’ in 1557, ‘Reideuch’ in 1561, ‘Riedheucht’ in 1563, ‘Ridheucht’ in the 1570s, ‘Reidhewch’ in 1573, ‘Reidheuch’ in 1574 and 1591, ‘Ridheucht’ in about 1580, ‘Reidheuch’ and ‘Readheuch’ in 1584, ‘Reidheuch’ in 1581, 1583/4 and 1584/5, ‘Reidheuche’ in 1607, ‘Reideuch’ in 1608, ‘Reidheuch’ in 1613, ‘Reidheuch’ in 1619, ‘Ridheuch’ in 1624, ‘Reidheuch’ in 1632 and ‘Reedheuch’ in 1694; it appears on Gordon’s c. 1650 map as ‘Reedheuch’, on Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Ridheuch’ and is ‘Redheugh’ by the time of Stobie’s 1770 map).

the Reid Lion (\(\text{tu-reed-Il-in}\)) \n. the Red Lion Inn, at the Sandbed in the early 19th century, with proprietor Robert Scott. Also a nickname in use for someone in the early 19th century.

Reidmoss (\(\text{reed-mos}\)) \n. Redmoss, farmstead in Liddesdale, just north of Whisgills, on the Tinnis Burn. It was at one time part of the farm of Platt. It is probably the ‘Redemoss’ listed in about 1376 (in the charters of Douglas of Morton) as a 12-shilling land. In 1541 it was leased to Simon Armstrong (probably of Tinnisburn) and valued at 30 pence. Other lands of the same name are also listed in 1541 as being vacant. It is stated (in a note in Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ in 1784) that the former farm of Puddingburn was on its lands. Thomas Wilson possessed these lands, along with Over and Nether Whisgills, in 1632. It is described in 1718 in a survey carried out for Anne, Duchess of Buccleuch, when along with Over Whisgills, Tinnis, Bankhead and Side it consisted of 2390 acres. William Anderson died there in 1781. Thomas Telfer was shepherd there in 1797. There were Turnbulls there in the mid-19th century and Adam Scott was farmer in 1868. David Anderson wrote a song about the old tree his grandfather had planted there. There are remains of other buildings on the Tinnis Burn to the north-west, as well as old rig lines and boundary banks in the area (it is ‘Reidmoss’ and ‘Reidmos’ in 1541 and ‘Ridmos’ in 1632; it marked ‘Redmoss’ on Stobie’s 1770 map).

reid-ribbon \(\text{reed-ri-bin}\) adj., arch. bloodshot (of the eyes), having heavily inflamed eye-lids – ‘Reed-ribbon-een = bloodshot eyes, especially when the lids are inflamed’ [ECS].

the Reid Rose (\(\text{tu-reed-rőz}\)) \n. the Red Rose, Hawick’s first Chinese restaurant, on Baker Street in the 1960s and 70s.

Reid Rowan (\(\text{reed-row-in}\)) \n. burly riever mentioned in ‘The Ballad of Kinmont Willie’. Whether he represents a real person is unclear – ‘Then Red Rowan has hente him up, The starkest man in Teviotdale – ‘Abide, abide now, Red Rowan, Till of my Lord Scroope I take farewell’’, [T], ‘But ere they had won where the wandering moon Lit Essenside Loch with her diamond shoon Red Rowan was galloping free on the heath With his neck outstretched and the bit in his teeth’ [WHO].

Reidscar Sike (\(\text{reed-skawr-sik}\)) \n. Redscar Sike, small stream in upper Liddisdale, rising on Lamb Hill and flowing into Cliffhope Burn.

Reid’s Close (\(\text{reedz-klös}\)) \n. former passageway on the High Street, probably at No. 77. It is recorded on the 1861 census.

Reidsmuir Plantation (\(\text{reedz-mewr-plawn’-in}\)) \n. Redsmuir Plantation, small wood between Tythehouse and Harwood, on the south side of the Harwood Burn.

Reid’s Relay (\(\text{reedz-rec-lə}\)) \n. radio and television cable company, which helped provide Teries with decent signals in the middle of the 20th century. This included some council houses that were refused permission to erect aerials in the 1960s. In the 1930s the firm of George Reid Radio received the BBC signal on a 75 ft aerial, off Croft Road, behind their North Bridge Street premises, and relayed the signal around town by means of cables. The sets to receive the signals required no electrical power, and gave much better reception than a radio set. When TV arrived in the 1950s Reid’s installed a TV receiving mast above the Wellogate, and most Hawick households rented their sets and cable connections from Reid’s, although another local firm (Lawrence’s) competed. The end for the company came with the erection of new masts at Ashkirk, and the booster on the Miller’s Knowes.

Reid Swire (\(\text{reed-swIr}\)) \n. former name for the hill on the Border, essentially synonymous with the Carter Bar. This is where the River Rede rises, and was the location of the fray of the Relief Kirk (thu-ree-lief-kirk) n. another name for Allars Kirk. The Relief movement, the third Secession from the Church of Scotland, was founded by Thomas Gillespie of Carnock in 1752, with patronage being the main cause of dissent. The cause was boosted by Thomas Boston joining with a large congregation from Jedburgh in 1757. A branch of the Relief Kirk was founded in Hawick in 1810, largely because of the lack of space in the existing town churches. It met for a few months in a tent on the Common Haugh, then in the Tabernacle and the Town Hall, before the new church was built on the Cross Wynd in 1811. The Church Officers originally me in a room in the Fleece Inn (which was run by one of the founders). The church was original referred to as the Relief Chapel, changed to Relief Church in 1844. Rennaldburn (re-uld-burn) n. former lands to the east of Eskdalemuir. It was once a seat of a branch of the Scotts. The later farmouse there is said to have been the first house built by Thomas Telford when he was an apprentice – ‘Warn Davington, and Rennelburn, with Tandhill bold and free, To meet me in full armour, the morn at Woodhouselee’ [WSB] (spelled variously ‘Renaldburn’, ‘Renalburn’, etc.; there are lands with a similar name in Jedburgh Parish).

Rennie (re-nee) n. John (19th C.) member of the committee for Hawick Baptist Church around 1880 and Treasurer of the Chapel Building Fund. He was still Treasurer in the 1890s. William (15th C.) mentioned at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1493. His name is recorded as ‘Willemlo rany’. An ox was stolen from him, from the house of Robert Aitkin in Minto. He could be the same man recorded as 1494/5 as ‘raix’ for what seems like the same crime.

Rennison (re-nil-sin) n. Richard (b.1803/4) born in Bedrule Parish. He was listed as a member of Allars Kirk in 1829, either as Liddesdale carrier or candlemaker (the other surely being his father). In 1851 he was a ‘Pensioner’ on the Back Row. In 1851 he was ‘Chelsea Pensioner; Blind’ and a lodger on O’Connel Street. In 1826 he married Isobel Annison. His wife was Isabel, and his children included Margaret, Isabel, Richard, Barbara, Elspeth and William. Richard (b.1763/4) listed as a member of Allars Kirk in 1829. 2 men of the same name were recorded, one a Liddesdale carrier, the other a candlemaker; they were surely Renwick (re-neck) n. Alexander (1780–1800) son of shoemaker Robert. His death is recorded in Hawick. Alexander (18th/19th C.) draper and stocking manufacturer on the Howegate, recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. Allan (19th C.) hosiery manufacturer of the early 1800s, operating on the High Street. Andrew (17th C.) cottar at Gatehousecote according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Benjamin ‘Benjie’ (b.1800) son of James, he was born at Appotside. He was a molecated in Hobkirk Parish and apparently very popular in the district. He helped with shooting parties, and was also said to be a poacher. Charles (b.c.1802) son of Francis and Mary Jerdon and probably grandson of Francis and Margaret Rae. He may have been related to the Renwicks of Blackleemouth. He lived in Hobkirk Parish and married Margaret Hislop. Their children were Mary (who married Alexander Davie), Isabella (married Adam Rutherford) and Robert (married Isabella Scott). David (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at Lees in 1725. He is probably the Renwick who witnessed a baptism for William Telfer, resident of Borthaugh, in 1729. He married Jean Turnbull in 1719 and their children included John (b.1720), Helen (b.1723), Thomas (b.1725) and Adam (b.1728). The witnesses in 1725 were Adam Scott and John Renwick. Francis (18th/19th C.) farmer at Nether Bouchester, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as owner of 3 horses. He could be the Francis whose son James was baptised in Hobkirk Parish in 1778. George (17th/18th C.) Hawick man who kept an inn (or ‘ane change’). In 1702 he was fined for selling ale Henry Hardie on Sunday. He was probably the George, resident of the westside of Hawick, who is recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. He may be the same man as the flesher who is listed among those contributing to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He could be the George, married to Margaret Wright, whose children included: Robert (b.1670); Margaret (b.1674); Janet (b.1676); and Isobel (b.1678). He may be the George who witnessed a baptism for Robert Wright in 1671. George (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living on the Sandbed in 1697 when his daughter Margaret was baptised. The witnesses were Robert Renwick (who was probably related) and James Shortreed. George (17th/18th C.) flesher in Hawick. He may have been descended from the earlier George. He was probably the flesher who was among the young men fined for their part in the disturbances of the Common Riding of 1706. He was on the short-list for candidates for Cornet in 1710 and 1712 and was elected in 1712. In 1712 he and Robert (also a flesher) witnessed a baptism for shoemaker Robert Hardie and in 1714 another for smith Thomas Hunity. He witnessed baptisms for John Ekron in 1718 and 1721. Also in 1721 he witnessed a baptism for William Wright and Christian Renwick (perhaps his daughter), along with flesher Robert. In 1720 (along with Robert, also a flesher), he witnessed a baptism for fellow flesher John Little. He married Janet Purdom in Hawick in 1714 and their children included John (b.1715), Margaret (b.1716), Michael (b.1718), Helen (b.1719), George (b.1720), Margaret (again, b.1721) and Janet (b.1723). The witnesses in 1716 were John Watson (Clerk of the Regality) and merchant John Little and in 1718 were John Gardiner and ‘maltman’ John Hardie. George (18th C.) weaver in Denholm, recorded in 1726 and 1731. His children included: Helen (b.1719); Margaret (b.1721); Janet (b.1723); Janet (again, b.1726); Adam (b.1728); and Margaret (again, b.1731). George (1747/8–1854) resident of Branxholmtown. He is recorded there in 1841, with his wife and daughter Elizabeth. His wife was Agnes Ewart (1867/8–1843). He is buried at Teviothead. Gideon (18th C.) butcher in Hawick. He is probably the Gideon, son of William and Margaret Boyd, who married Katherine Miller in 1771, and whose children included: Jane (b.1771); an unnamed child (b.1772); Janet (b.1775); William (b.1778); Gideon (b.1781); and Catherine (b.c.1785), who married William Richardson and emigrated to Canada. In 1784, along with shoemaker William, he witnessed a baptism for James Mossman an Janet Renwick (who may have been his sister). His daughter Janet married John Gibson, and was murdered by him in 1813. Gilbert (15th C.) listed as ‘Gilbert Ranwyk’ in the 1491/2 will of Sir David Scott of Branxholme. His progeny were bequeathed 20 shillings. He could be the Gilbert listed as a rebel in 1502, along with Thomas Graham and Thomas Scott, rebels involved in the murder of Patrick Hepburn. Humphrey (15th C.) recorded as ‘Wmfras de Ranwyk’ in 1453 when he witnessed a sasine at Milsington. Robert is recorded as ‘Wmfrao de Ranwyk’ in the 1491/2 will of Sir David Scott of Branxholme. His progeny were bequeathed 20 shillings. He could be the Gilbert listed as a rebel in 1502, along with Thomas Graham and Thomas Scott, rebels involved in the murder of Patrick Hepburn. Humphrey (15th C.) recorded as ‘Wmfras de Ranwyk’ in 1453 when he witnessed a sasine at Milsington. Robert is listed after him, so presumably his son or brother. Most of the other witnesses were local men, but it is unclear where their lands were. Isabella (b.1826/7) from Inveresk, she was a milliner and dressmaker in Hawick. She was listed on Buccleuch Street in Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1851 she was at about 7 Buccleuch Street with her younger sister Elizabeth. James (16th/17th C.) tenant in Galalaw in 1628 when he was on a list of men accused by the Earl of Buccleuch of chopping down his trees at Todshawhaugh or Trinitylands. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Jackson and their children included: John (b.1674). James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret White and their children included: Walter (b.1681); an unnamed child (b.1683); and another unnamed child (b.1685). The witnesses in 1685 were Charles and Robert Scott. James (17th/18th C.) undermiller at Newmill. He married Isobel Johnstone and their children, baptised in Hawick included: Christian (b.1704); and John (b.1707). The witnesses in 1707 were Robert Thomson and his son Gideon Thomson. James (1700/1–89) tenant farmer in Mangerton. He married Elizabeth Bell, who died in 1786, aged 88. Their daughter Betty (1742/3–1829) married teacher Robert Dickson. James (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isobel Knox and their son Walter was baptised in 1744. James (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Scott and their son Robert was baptised in 1786. James (18th C.) Town Drummer, recorded in Selkirk in 1758. James (18th C.) skinner in Hawick. He married Mary Renwick and their children included: Robert (b.1790); and James (b.1792). The witnesses in 1790 were weaver Robert Renwick and James Mossman. James (18th/19th C.) mole-catcher who lived at Howashiels. His children William (b.1789) and Janet (b.1792) both died young, but he moved to Appotside where another William (b.1794) and Janet (b.1796, mother of tailor James Grieve) were born, as well as Benjamin (b.1800, also a mole-catcher). He is probably the James living at Midburn in 1790 when his son George was baptised. James (18th/19th C.) merchant in Hawick in the early 1800s. James (1843–1910) born in Roberton, son of William and Jane Nichol. He was a hosiery manufacturer in Hawick. He conducted business in Dumfries for a while, returning to Hawick in 1888 to found James Renwick & Co., Ltd, hosiery manufacturers of Commercial Road. He may also have had Mansfield Mills built (or extended) on Mansfield Road. He was associated with the temperance movement and East Bank Church. In 1869 he married Jeanie Laing (1843–1927), who was grand-daughter of James Hogg, writer of ‘Teribus’. He had 4 surviving sons, 2 of whom (James and Robert Hogg) continued in the hosiery business. His 7 sons were: William (1870–c.82); Adam (1872–c.84); James (b.1874), who died in infancy; James (b.1875), who followed him into hosiery manufacturing; Robert Hogg (1877–1949), also a hosiery manufacturer; George; and William (b.1833). He died at Wilton Hill. James (b.1875) son of James and Jane Laing. He was a great-great-grandson of James Hogg, writer of ‘Teribus’. He was educated in Dumfries and at Teviot Grove, then worked in the family hosiery firm, becoming a partner. He represented Teviot Ward on the Town Council for 22 years from 1906, was elected Magistrate and was Provost 1922–28. His Provostship saw the High Street paved with sets, completion of the expansion of the sewage works, and the building of Moat Crescent and Renwick Terrace, the latter being named after him. He was also Chairman of the committee that built the first council houses at Oliver Park. A keen Common Riding supporter, his son James junior was Cornet while he was Provost, and he started the tradition of the Provost’s Tent. He opened ‘the Hut’ in the year that his son was Cornet. He was Chairman of the Unionist Association for many years, as well as a Callants’ Club President and was an elder of the East Bank Church. He was a Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. He was on the committee that formed Hawick’s first Scout troop on 1909 and was one of the first 2 scoutmasters in Hawick. He can be seen in a film clip of Baden-Powell’s visit to Hawick in 1910. He married Miss Lefevre of Canterbury in 1902. They lived at Fernbank on Wilton Hill. James (20th C.) son of Provost James. He worked for the family knitwear business and moved to London to represent the firm there. His son Geoffrey was a Lieutenant in the Royal Engineers, who was murdered by a fellow soldier while serving in Germany. James ‘Jim’ (1953–) Hawick rugby player, at Centre, a born West Ender and electricity linesman by trade. Educated at Drumlanrig and the High School, he played rugby for the P.S.A. and the Harlequins. He first played for Hawick R.F.C. at age 17, and for Scotland at 19, where he went on to gain 52 caps. He was also represented the British Lions. He was Common Riding Chief Guest in 2018. Janet (18th C.) cook and chambermaid at Ormiston in 1785, when she was working for Thomas Currer. Jean (d.c.1834) servant with Peter Wilson’s family for 52 years, staying until her mistress died. She is seen in a portrait with the family in about 1830, along with her successor Esther Reid. John (17th C.) recorded in 1650 as ‘John Renneck’ when he was tenant of Todshawhill along with ‘Pail’ Murray. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isobel Kedie in 1650 and their children included Agnes (b.1650). John (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. His children included William (b.1651). The witnesses were William Govenlock and John Wilson. John (1645/6–96) buried in Teviothead cemetery. His is one of the earliest legible stones. The reverse of the stone records another John. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Cubertson and their children included Robert (b.1670), Bessie (b.1672), Helen (b.1674) and Margaret (b.1677). John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Bessie Hislop and their children included James (b.1674), John (b.1681) and Helen (b.1684). In 1684 the witnesses were Robert (probably a relative) and William Davidson. Elspeth (b.1676) and James (b.1679) may also be his children. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Euphan Hastie and their children included David (b.1689), Agnes (b.1691), John (b.1693), Janet (b.1694) and Gilbert (b.1697). The witnesses in 1691 were William (probably a relative) and John Brown and in 1694 were James …and William …. Perhaps the same John was resident of Headshaw in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 on the Hearth Tax roll there. He is probably the John who witnessed baptisms in 1690 for Robert Wilson and for William (likely a relative). John (17th C.) resident of the Hassean area of Roberton Parish. He was living at Horsleyhill in 1688. He married Janet Little and their children included: John (b.1681); Bessie (b.1685); and Margaret (b.1688). The witnesses in 1688 were John Noble and Robert Turnbull. David (b.1684), baptised in Roberton, may also be his child. Probably the same John was listed among the poor living at Hassedean on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He married Jean Henderson and their children included Jean (b.1760), Jean (again, b.1762), Helen (b.1764), Thomas (b.1766), James (b.1769) and Jean (b.1771). John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1762 he married Isobel Elliot from Roberton Parish in 1762. Their children included: Michael (b.1763); Betty (b.1765); and Agnes (b.1775). John (18th/19th C.) merchant in Hawick. He paid the cart tax in 1797. He married Euphan Matthewson in Ashkirk Parish in 1795. Their children (baptised in Hawick Parish) included: Thomas (b.1797); James (b.1799); Alexander Walter (b.1802); Janet Elizabeth (b.1805) and Ann Scott (b.1812). The witnesses in 1797 and 1799 were Bailie Andrew Scott and Walter Pringle. John (b.1816) son of Matthew, he was a dyker in Hobkirk Parish. He married Janet Hall, sister of James Grieve’s widow. He had a daughter and emigrated to Canada, along with his brother George. John Elliot ‘Elliot’ (1936–2006) son of Jock and Maimie, he was educated in Hawick and apprenticed as a printer with the Hawick Express. He was one of the founders of Buccleuch Printers. He was long associated with the Salvation Army, being bandmaster there for 37 years. He also played in the Saxhorn Band and in the band of the Royal Tank Corps during his National Service. He was also a member of the Rotary Club, achieving a ‘Paul Harris Fellowship’, the highest honour given to Rotarians. He married Margaret in 1956 and they had a daughter, Linda. Joseph (b.c.1807) fuller in Wilton. He was listed among heads of households in Wilton Parish, being a fuller at Damside in 1835, and a cloth dresser at Doeventum in 1840 and 1841. His wife was Elizabeth and they had a daughter, also Elizabeth. Margaret (17th C.) recorded among the poor of Hassendean Parish in 1694, when she was at Hassendeanbank. Margaret D. (b.1828/9) daughter of William and Janet. She was born in Jedburgh and lived in Minto. There she ran a school around the 1860s, separate from the Parish school, and probably for girls. Martin (15th C.) witness to the document of 1488 in which Greenwood (i.e. Girnwood) and the Lynes were leased by Sir Thomas Turnbull to Robert Scott of Allanhaugh. It was signed at St. Mary’s Church in Ettrick Forest and his name appears as ‘Martino Ranwik’. Matthew (18th/19th C.) lived at Bonchester and Drythrop. He married secondly Helen Robson. They had twins John and Mary and also a son George, both sons becoming dykers. Michael (18th C.) another early Renwick of Hobkirk. He lived at Kirknowe and later at Howahill and Unthank. His children included John (b.1753), Margaret (b.1757) and Robert (b.1771). He was probably related to Andrew, who live at Howahill and then Stonedge, and had children Helen and Thomas. Miss ?? (19th C.) daughter of Thomas. She took over the post office at Bonchester Bridge, probably in the 1860s. The letter carrier appointed was James Watson. Due to some irregularity with the deliveries they were both relieved of their positions. Moses (1771–1851) son of Robert. He was a thatcher by trade. He married Violet Temple and they had a dozen children: Robert, shepherd at Dryhope; James, emigrated to America; John, who married Janet Henderson...

Renwick married Robert Rutherford. Richard, all of whom emigrated; and Charlotte, who Cely, who worked in Denholm. His children baptised in Hawick included George (b.1700) and William (b.1702). The witnesses in 1700 were glover John Scott, merchant William Scott and cooper John Turnbull. Robert (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at the Sandbed in 1724, 1728, 1733 and 1736. He married Elizabeth (or ‘Elizabeth’) Little, probably in Wilton in 1718 (with no wife’s name given). Their children included: Robert (b.1720); Margaret (b.1721); Janet (b.1724); William (b.1726); Elizabeth (b.1728); Robert (again, b.1733); and Thomas (b.1736). The witnesses in 1724 were George and William Renwick (who were surely related), in 1728 were William Wright and John Simpson, in 1733 were James Gardner and William Wright and in 1736 were John and James Gardner. Robert (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Craikhope in 1753 and 1757. His children included: Helen (b.1753); and Margaret (b.1757). Robert (b.1740) born in Hobkirk Parish, son of John, claimed to be a descendant of James, one of the last Covenanter martyrs. He lived in a cottage at Blackleemouth in Hobkirk Parish. He may have married Janet Parker. His sons were Richard and Moses and he also had at least 1 daughter. Robert (18th C.) travelling merchant of Hawick, mentioned in an Edinburgh marriage record of 1789 when his daughter Mary married James Rannie. The same Robert was probably married to Elizabeth Roger, and their children were: Elizabeth (b.1760); Margaret (b.1761); Mary (b.1768); Margaret (again, b.1770); Jane (b.1772); and Agnes (b.1774). The witnesses in 1772 were shoemaker William and another Robert (both of whom were probably related to him) and in 1774 were Robert and William Roger (surely related to his wife). Perhaps his wife was the ‘Lizzie’ Roger who died in Hawwick in 1808, with her husband Robert Renwick described as ‘Pigman’ (or maybe ‘Pegman’). He witnessed a baptism for weaver William Rodger (perhaps his brother-in-law) in 1764. He may also have been the merchant Robert who married Elizabeth Scott and had children Helen (b.1777) and Robert (b.1781). He may also be the weaver recorded in 1781 when his son Robert died in Hawick. Robert (18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick Parish. In 1784 he witnessed a baptism for Robert Johnston. He married Agnes (also recorded as Janet) Bunyan and their children included Elizabeth (b.1773); William (b.1774); Ann (b.1779); Alexander (b.1780); and Janet (b.1784). The death of his son Alexander was recorded in 1800.
Robert (18th C.) recorded at Lairhope in 1786.
He married Janet Scott and their son Robert was baptised in 1786, with witnesses ‘Congregation of the Chapel’ (probably meaning those who attended the chapel at Caeerlenrig). Robert (18th C.) weaver in Hawick Parish. In 1790 and 1792 he witnessed baptisms for James Renwick and Mary Renwick (one of whom he was surely related to). He could be the Robert who witnessed a baptism for James Scott in Hawick in 1793. Robert (18th C.) listed as farmer at Broomiebranches in 1792, when they were leasing from the Scotts of Buccleuch. Robert (18th/19th C.) Hawick resident who owned a horse according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He is probably the same as one of the other Roberts. Robert (d.1809) Hawick resident who was father of David, John and Thomas, according to his death record. He is probably the Thomas who married Janet Laurie in Ashkirk in 1761 and had children: David (b.1762); Thomas (b.1765); John (b.1767); John (again, b.1769); Elizabeth (b.1771); and Thomas (again, b.1774). Robert (d.bef. 1790) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Tudhope in Hawick Parish in 1766 and she died in 1790. Their children included William (b.1767) and Helen (b.1771). He may be the same man as one of the other Roberts. Robert (19th C.) born in West Linton, he worked at Hawick Mill. He was there in 1841 and 1851, when his uncle John Oliver was the miller. He wrote a letter about the flood of 1846, which survives as a useful eyewitness account. Robert (b.1839) born at Town-o-Rule, son of Charles and Margaret Hislop. He married Isabella Scott and their children included Robert. Robert (b.c.1865) son of Robert and Isabella Scott. He lived at Langraw Scaur in Hobbirk Parish and was tenant at Weens Nurser. Robert Hogg (1877–1949) son of James and Jane Laing, born on Allars Crescent. He was brother of Provost Renwick and a great-great-grandson of James Hogg, author of ‘Teribus’. He was educated in Dumfries and then Hawick. He worked with Aitken the drapers and then joined his father’s hosiery firm, later becoming Director. He was keen on golf, gardening and music. He was organist at St. Andrew’s Kirk for more than 25 years (until an injury to his hands prevented him from playing). He was instrumental in organising the Border Music Festival, being President, Chairman and Secretary, and reviving it after WWII. He was President of the Callants’ Club, President of the Rotary Club, a member of Lodge 111 and member of the Hawick Hosiery Manufacturers’ Association. He was a Special Constable during both World Wars. In 1919 he married Mary Lillico Tully, daughter of tailor William Lillico Tully. Their children were: Doris (b.1920); Sheila (b.1921); Robert Stanley (b.1924), who continued in the family firm; and William Cecil (b.1926), who farmed at Wester Essenside. He lived at Wellogate Bank. Thomas (16th/17th C.) servant of Simon Armstrong of Calfeild. He is listed as ‘Thom Rannik his man’ in a 1601 list of Armstrongs and others who were said by the English to be outlaws under the Laird of Buccleuch. Thomas (18th C.) tailor at Ashkirk Mill. He could be the Thomas listed as ‘Ind.’ at Bedrule Mill in 1841. Thomas (b.c.1775) tailor on the Sandbed, listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories. In 1841 he was recorded at about 8 Sandbed, with his wife Mary (who was a midwife) and son William. His son Thomas died in 1808. Thomas (1817/8–1906) one of the Forkins Renwicks, he was son of Richard. In 1861 he was a labourer living at Birneyknowe. He is recorded in charge of the post office at Bonchester Bridge in the early 1860s. He married Margaret Telfer, daughter of a Teviothead shepherd. His daughter took over the post office at Bonchester Bridge and his son Richard worked for the railway. He died at the age of 88 and is recorded on the family headstone in Denholm cemetery. He is probably the ‘deaf man named Thomas Renwick’ who was among the last residents of the old hamlet of Unthank. Walter (17th C.) resident of Minto Craigend who appears in the Hearth Tax records of 1694. Walter (17th C.) resident at Easter Essenside on the Hearth Tax roll in 1694. Walter (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Lethem in Southdean Parish according to the 1797 Dog Tax Rolls. William (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Margaret Martin and their children included John (b.1671). The baptismal witnesses were Robert (surely a relative) and Adam Martin (probably related to his wife). William (17th C.) tenant at Kirkhouses in Ashkirk Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. He witnessed baptisms in 1689 (along with William Donald) for William Allan and in 1691 for John (probably a relative). Probably the same William married Janet Scott, and their children, baptised in Ashkirk, included Isobel (b.1690), Agnes (b.1693) and David (b.1696). The witnesses in 1690 were Robert Scott and John Renwick (probably related to his wife and him). William (18th C.) Hawick resident who married Janet Boyd. Their children included: Walter (b.1735); Janet (b.1737); Robert (b.1740); William (b.1742); and Gideon (b.1744), probably the butcher. The witnesses in 1742 were merchant John Ruecastle and shoemaker John Scott. He could be the William who witnessed a baptism in 1740 (along with fellow flesher Thomas Waugh) for cooper William Richardson. He may also be the shoemaker William who (along with Robert) witnessed a baptism for another Robert in 1772. William (18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. In 1784, along with flesher Gideon (probably his brother) he witnessed a baptism for James Mossman and Janet (possibly his sister). William (18th/19th C.) gamekeeper at Greenriver in 1797, when he was working for James Chisholm. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1798 he married Betty Ferguson, who was also from Hawick. William (b.1808/9) from Jedburgh, he was a mason in Minto. His wife was Janet and their daughter Margaret D. was a teacher (formerly spelled ‘Ranick’, ‘Renick’, ‘Rennick’, ‘Rennicke’, etc.).

Renwick’s (re-neeks) n. hosiery manufacturers of James Renwick & Co. Their main premises were on the west side of Commercial Road from 1914, this being built in 1888 for William Gal-loway & Sons. They later moved to a factory near the top of Mansfield Road, called Mansfield Mills. This later became Jaeger, and was more recently converted into flats.

Renwick Terrace (re-neck-te-ris) n. street off Rosebank Road at the top of the Loan, built in 1928 and named after Provost James Renwick.

Reorganisation (ree-or-gI-I-z a-shin) n. name usually given to the major shake-up of local government in 1974, following the Local Government (Scotland) Act of 1973. This abolished town and county councils, replacing them with ‘districts’ and ‘regions’. It was sometimes jokingly referred to as ‘Disorganisation’. This system in turn was overhauled in 1995/6 in favour of a single-tier system, which lumps Hawick governance in with other Border towns in the Scottish Borders Council.

repentance (re-peon’-ins) n., arch. the act of penitence, public atonement for transgressions before a congregation. For centuries, until into the 1800s public atonement was a major part of community life in Hawick. Infringements liable to this punishment included adultery, ‘irregular’ marriages and other crimes. In the early 1700s the penitent would stand at the Kirk door in sackcloth for an hour before the third bell was rung, then after the congregation and minister had entered, they would be led into the Kirk to the ‘stool of repentance’ or ‘pillar’, standing bare-headed through the sermon and thereafter berated publicly. Sometimes the Session required this process to be repeated for many Sundays in a row – ‘...and was ordered to appear hereafter on the usual place of repentance in sackcloth two other days ...’[PR1715].

repine (ree-pin’ v., arch., poet. to complain, show discontent – ‘...ye must beare it patientlie and without repyneing’[SB1670], ‘When Soulis thought on his merry men now, A woeful wight was he; Says – ‘Vengeance is mine, and I will not repine But Branxholms’s heir shall die’[JL] (also written ‘repyne’).

restert (ree-stet’r) v. to restart – ‘...restertin the hosiery side o the business under the name Drummond and Laing in the mill at the top o the Hundred Stairs’ [IWL].

the Restoration (thu-res-to-räh-shin) n. popular name for the period in Scottish history when Charles II was restored onto the British throne after the defeat of the Cromwells. This marked the revival of the Scottish Parliament, but also an escalation of persecution of the Covenanters in the ‘Killing Times’. The term applies both to the event of 1660 itself, as well as to the entire period between then and the ‘Glorious Revolution’ of 1688.

resurrectionist (ree-zu-rek-shin-ist) n., arch. a grave-robber or body-snatcher, particularly in the early 19th century. There was a scare throughout Scotland in the 1820s, following the celebrated cases of Burke and Hare and others. Two Berwickshire doctors were arrested in 1820. In Hawick an association of householders was formed for watching the cemeteries. Small houses were built at the entrances of both Hawick and Wilton churchyards, with 3 men on watch each night, patrolling every 15 minutes. No graves in the town were desecrated, although there were plenty of ru-mours and practical jokes.

retain (ree-tä) n. to keep on in service, particularly referring to a fireman – ??.
retcht (recht) adj., pp., arch. scratched – ‘Ye’er sides are retcht an’ I’m gey ill, Come let us hae a Hawick gill . . . ’ [WNK] (cf. ratcht).
retiral (ree-tI-rul) n. retirement from a job or position (‘retirement’ is more common in standard English).
retour (ree-toor) n., arch. an extract of the service of an heir sent to chancery, or the jury’s decision as to who is rightful heir.
the Return (thee-ree-turn) n. ‘the Return from Hornshole’, a statue unveiled at the south end of the High Street in 2014, as part of the ‘Big Return’ celebrations. It was sculpted by Ruaraig McIver of Beltane Studios, taking 18 months to complete, using about a ton of bronze and was paid for by the Common Riding Ceremonial Committee. It consists of a group of 5 figures: a youth carrying the Flag: an elderly woman and man: and 2 children. The seniors were modelled on Hawick’s Helen Ford and Jimmy McEwan, the youth on the rider of Beattie’s Horse monument, and the children on children in Peebles.
Return from Hornshole see Return to Hawick
Return from Hornshole (ree-turn-from-hörnz-hol) n. song written by Alan Brydon. It was first performed at the 1514 Club’s ‘Hawick Sings’ concert in 2011 by his daughter Cheryl. Ian Seeley provided a piano accompaniment, which is somewhat complicated and even he describes as ‘a specialist, or art, song’.
Return to Hawick (ree-turn-too-hlk) n. painting by Tom Scott, full title ‘Return to Hawick from Hornshole, 1514’, completed in 1898. It is also sometimes referred to as ‘Return from Hornshole’. The painting was commissioned by the Town and 260 high quality lithographic copies were made, along with other copies later. The original is in the Museum, held by the Hawick Common Good Fund. It was formally presented at the 1898 Colour Bussing by Thomas Shaw M.P. People from Bowden acted as models, with Mr. Cockburn of Kippilaw carrying the flag. Other identified people are Harry Putillo as the old man with the pack, Madge Dalgleish as the fair-haired girl beside the youth, ‘Pa’ Hume as the bearded man and Bettie Jamieson as the pretty maid in the rear.
Reuben Watts (roo-bin-wats) n. pseudonym used by Daniel Marriot – ‘Scottie Dottle and Reuben Watt, Dickie Lyon and Jethart Jim, Sam’l Lawrence and Wat the Cat, And Heather Jock baith gray and grim’[HI] (also sometimes written ‘Watt’).

the Revolution (theu-re-voo-loo-shin) n. religious and political change in Britain in 1688 and 1689, leading to the removal of James II, a Catholic, and his replacement by William I (of Orange) and his wife Mary II, both Protestants. It is sometimes known as ‘the Glorious Revolution’ or ‘the Bloodless Revolution’. It also led to the throwing out of the episcopalian system and the setting up of the Reformed, Established, Presbyterian Church of Scotland in 1690. As a result of these changes there was a dearth of Presbyterian ministers, which left Hawick Parish vacant for about 2 years, while Wilton, Cavers and Hobkirk were vacant for 5 years. Formerly Episcopalian ministers who refused to ‘pray for William and Mary’ were denied their livings. In the 33 parishes in the Presbytery of Jedburgh, Selkirk and Kelso, only 3 ministers (at Kirkton, Abbotrule and Ancrum) obeyed the order, the others being ejected. This included John Langlands of Wilton, Thomas Somerville of Cavers and John Liddle of Hobkirk. The Scottish Episcopal Church took a long time to re-establish itself. These events also affected Scottish history for the next several decades, with Stuart sympathisers, Jacobites, staging uprisings in the Highlands.

Rewaird (re-wär’d) n., arch. a reward – ‘... an’ in keepin’ o’ thame ther is grit rewaird’ [HSR], ‘...Trewlie ther is an rewaird for the rich- teous’ [HSR], v. to reward – ‘... happie wull he be that rewairds ye as ye hae servet us’ [HSR], ‘The Lord rewairdet me akordin’ til my righteousniss ... ’ [HSR].

Rewcastle see Ruccaste

Rewe (roo) v., arch. to regret, repent – ‘Turn agayne, O Lord, howe lang? an’ let it rew thee anent thy servents’ [HSR], ‘The Lord leth swurn, an’ wullna rew an’ wullna rew anent thy servents’ [HSR], ‘The Lord heth swurn, agayne, O Lord, howe lang? an’ let it rew thee properlies, an’ becumna vaine in rere ... ’ [HSR].

Rewel (roo-ul) v., arch. to become entangled, to entangle, ravel (noted by J. Jamieson; also written ‘rewel’; cf. revel).

Reyflake (rā-flāk) n., poet. robbery – ‘Trustna in oppressione, an’ becumma vaine in reyflake ... ’ [HSR].

Rexive (reks-iv) adj., contr., arch. respective – ‘Rentall of the Dutches of Buccleugh ... made by the Chamberlaines in ther rexive charges as follows ... ’ [Buc1696] (used in legal documents as an abbreviation).

Rhone see rone

The Rhymer (ru-nū-mur) n. another name for Thomas the Rhymner.

Rhymer’s Croft (ru-nūz-kroft) n. former lands in Ashkirk. It was part of the estate of Archibald Cprehane of Ashkirk in the early 1800s. It is unclear exactly where it was situated.

Rhymer’s Glen (ru-nūz-glen) n. supposedly the place where Thomas the Rhymer was transported to the land of the fairies for 7 years, being a small burn that flows towards the Tweed south of Melrose – ‘The Huntly burn singes low and sweet, The Rhymner’s glen is green, And on its bank this night I’ll meet My winsome Fairy Queen’ [JT].

Rial (ri-ul) n., poet. a member of a royal family or the nobility – ‘Mak’ thair rialyse like Oreb, an’ like Zeeb ... ’ [HSR], ‘Til bin’ thair kings wi’ cheeks, an’ thair rialyse wi’ fettirs o’ ern’ [HSR].

Rib (rib) n. a raised ridge in knitted fabric. Formerly these were knitted on separate machine from the main items, and the workers were paid higher wages than those working the standard frames.

Ribbin (ri-bin) n. ribbing, a set of raised ridges in knitwear, common on cuffs and other specific parts of a garment, often described as ‘1/1’, ‘2/2’, etc., depending on the stitches used.

Rib dragger see dragger

Rib (rib) n., arch. a colewort with a tall stem, a cabbage plant that has failed to grow a useful head – ‘Ribe, Rybe, A colewort that frows tall with little or no leaf. Cabbages, that do not stock properly, are also called ribes, Roxb.’ [JoJ].

Rib tops (rib-tops) n., pl., arch. ribbed part at the top of a sock or other item of hosiery (noted by E.C. Smith).

Riccalton (ri-kul-tin) n. farm high up on the Oxnam Water. This is probably the place referred to in a charter to the Riddells of that Ilk in the mid-12th century. 2 men from here (Adam ‘de Rukelton’ and Adam ‘de Rykeldon’, possibly the same name twice) signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296. The farm belonged to Lord Jedburgh in the 17th century and the Marquis of Lothian in the 18th century (not to be confused with ‘Riccarton’, although the origin of the name may be similar, here probably being ‘Ricela’s hill’ from the Old English personal name plus ‘tun’ for ‘hill’; the name is first recorded as ‘Richeldown’ in 1150).

Riccartoun see Riccarton

Riccarton (ri-kar’-in, -kar-tin) n. town around the station on the Waverley Line, about half way to Newcastle, being a junction with the line linking to Hexham. Before the railway it had no settlement, but it developed into a small village with as many as 120 residents. The main housing consisted of 2 terraces of housing and 4 semi-detached cottages. It had its own school and a branch of the Hawick Co-op. The farm of the same name is about 1½ miles down the Riccarton Burn on the main road, and has the remains of the old peel tower located further up the burn. The tower measures about 13 m by 9 m, now partly covered with a sheepfold, and with 2 rectangular platforms to the north, which were probably other buildings. A stone disc, probably found near here, is in Hawick Museum. The present farm was formerly marked as ‘Nether Riccartoun’, with ‘Over Riccartoun’ at the ruined tower (but still about a mile from the railway village). The lands here are recorded as being worth 7 shillings in a rental list of about 1376 among the charters of the Douglases of Morton. In 1541 they were valued at 40 shillings and tenanted by Elliots and Croziers. Will Crozier was there in 1590. Adam Beattie was tenant in 1694. The farm was surveyed along with other Scott of Buccleuch properties in 1718, covering 852 acres, bounded by Pinglehole, the Liddel Water, Taylorcleuchhead, Roughlee and Laws. The farmhouse at that time is shown fairly close the modern farm buildings. James Wardlaw was there in 1748 and Ninian Elliot in 1778. The Grieves of Branxholme Park farmed there in the late 18th century and in 1800 it was leased to surgeon Charles Maxwell (son-in-law of Jardine of Tholishope). After that Jardines were the tenants. Walter Jackson was there in 1821 and Charles Jardine in at least the 1850s and 60s. There were 5 huts there housing railway workers on the 1861 census. The Riccarton-Hexham line closed in 1956, and the village was abandoned after the Waverley Line closed in 1969. Very little remains to suggest the former size of the community. Synonymous with ‘the middle of nowhere’, no road served the area until 1963 when a forest track was opened. A book ‘Riccarton Junction: memories of my life in this railway village’ was written by Kit Milligan in 1994. Graptolites and other fossils have been found in the rocks of the area – ‘Now Riccarton, to some folk, is just a godless plot o railway lines, a limbo for locomotives, clappit doon without regard for the comfort o man nor beast on the top o a bare hill’ [DH] (there are other Riccartons near Kilmarnock, Linlithgow and Hamilton and a Riccalton in Oxnam Parish; the name probably derives from Old English ‘Richard’s farm’, with perhaps a Scandinavian influence on the personal name; it first appears in 1296 as ‘Ricardeston’, is ‘Ricarden’ around 1376, ‘Ricardtoun’ in 1541, ‘Rikkitoun’ in 1611 ‘Rickerton’ in 1694, 1797 and 1821, and ‘Rickertown’ in 1778; Blaeu’s 1654 atlas shows ‘N. Riccarton’ and ‘O. Riccarton’, the latter probably being the location of the peel tower, while ‘Rickerton’ and ‘Rickertone’ appears on the 1718 Buccleuch survey, and ‘Rickertown’ on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Riccarton Burn is a stream that rises near Riccarton Junction and flows southwards to join the Liddel Water near Riccarton farm.

Riccarton Cleuch is the former name for lands near Riccarton. In the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale they are valued at 40 shillings, as Croziers as tenants. ‘Richardton-cleuch’ was the nickname of Andrew (‘Dandy’) Crozier, who was one of the 10 thieves apprehended in Hawick in October 1567 and taken to Edinburgh tolbooth. In 1586 it was referred to as a ‘fourtie schilling land’ when partly occupied by Simon Elliot and released to the Elliots by Francis, Earl of Bothwell (it is ‘Ricardtoun Cleuch’ in 1541 and ‘Ricartoun Cleuch’ in 1586).

Riccarton Cottages are cottages near the farm of Riccarton in Liddesdale. They are situated on the east side of the B6357. Road contractor Adam Moor and his family lived there in 1861.

Riccarton Schuil is the former name for lands near Riccarton, recorded in 1541 as ‘Riccartoun Schuil’ with a value of 5 shillings, and at that time vacant.

Riccarton Mill is a farmstead on the Liddel Water, to the east of the B6357 near Riccarton Farm. There was presumably once a corn mill there. James Armstrong was tenant there in 1797 and his son James was listed there on Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories (incorrectly as ‘Bickerton Mill’). Another James Armstrong was there in 1852. It was said that at least one person had drowned in the mill lade. It was a public house up until around the 1870s. It is the spot to which Dandy Dimmont directs Harry Bertram in Sir Walter Scott’s ‘Guy Mannering’ – ‘But ye can come over the night as far as Riccarton, where there is a public; or if ye like to stop at Jockey Grievse’s at the Heuch’ [SWS] (it is ‘Riccartownmill’ on Stobie’s 1770 map and ‘Ricketown Mill’ in 1821).

Riccarton Hope is a small stream that runs roughly eastwards to the south of Bell Hill to join the Riccarton Burn.

Riccarton Junction is a station on the Waverley Line (Border Union Railway) at the junction with the Hexham line (Border Counties Railway), also known as Ricarton, although that name had formerly applied to the peel tower and farm more than a mile further down the Riccarton Burn. The station building (now demolished) included the Cooperative store and village pub. As well as the station there were also 2 signal-boxes (also demolished), an engine shed, turntable and several nearby footbridges, as well as major culverts along the line. It was opened in 1862 as simply ‘Riccarton Station’, with the ‘Junction’ being added by the North British Railway in 1905. It closed in 1969. Only the remains of the platforms and footings of the stationmaster’s house survive.

Riccartonlee is the former name for lands near Riccarton, recorded in 1541 as ‘Ricardtounlie’, with a value of 5 shillings, and at that time vacant.

Riccartonfit is a small farm in the Riccarton area. In 1624 Adam Usher and his son Will were convicted of stealing sheep from there, among other crimes; the tenants were Archie Henderson and John Robison. It was among the farms occupied by Walter Scott of Goldielands in the period 1634–47. Walter Lorraine was tenant there in 1670 (it is ‘Riccartonfoot’ in 1655 and ‘Rickartonfoot’ in 1670).

The Spirit and Tendency of on Theron and Aspasio …’ (published anonymously, 1762), ‘Dis-} dertation on the Conduct of the Sanhedrim, and Advice offered by Gamaliel’ (1769) and his collected works, which were published in 3 volumes in 1771/2. He married Ann (or Anne), daughter of Henry Scott, farmer at Palachill, and she died in 1764. Their children included: Jean (b.1726), Robert (b.1727), who must have died young; Margaret (b.1731), who married William Armstrong, schoolmaster in Hobkirk (and was mother of Hawick’s postmaster Robert Armstrong and Maj.-Gen. Adam Armstrong); John, who succeeded as minister of the Parish; Anne; Helen, who married James Murray, minister of Hallstone in Northumberland; and Elizabeth, who married Samuel Irvine, schoolmaster in Wilton. Some biographical notes on him were written by Rev. Thomas Somerville of Jedburgh. He was described as having ‘a large fund of originality rather than a highly cultivated understanding’. Thomas (15th C.) recorded as being ‘of Rykylon’ in 1454 when he attached his seal to a bond for Andrew Ker of Altonburn. He is also the last listed member of the ‘retour of service’ to rule on the inheritance of the Barony of Cavers by Archibale Douglas in 1464/5; his name is given there as ‘Thomas of Riklintoune’. He was also on the panel to decide the disputed lands of Kirkton Mains and the remains of the platforms and footings of the stationmaster’s house survive.

Riccarton Mill is a farmstead on the Liddel Water, to the east of the B6357 near Riccarton Farm. There was presumably once a corn mill there. James Armstrong was tenant there in 1797 and his son James was listed there on Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories (incorrectly as ‘Bickerton Mill’). Another James Armstrong was there in 1852. It was said that at least one person had drowned in the mill lade. It was a public house up until around the 1870s. It is the spot to which Dandy Dimmont directs Harry Bertram in Sir Walter Scott’s ‘Guy Mannering’ – ‘But ye can come over the night as far as Riccarton, where there is a public; or if ye like to stop at Jockey Grievse’s at the Heuch’ [SWS] (it is ‘Rickertownmill’ on Stobie’s 1770 map and ‘Rickerton Mill’ in 1821).

house survive at the south-east corner of the village. The Borders Archive has registers and log books for 1878–1962.

Riccarton Sike (ri-'kar'-in-sik) n. stream in upper Liddesdale, south of Saughtree. It rises on Yarrow Knowe and runs roughly north-west to join the Liddel Water. Note that it is on the south side of the valley, while Riccarton itself is on the north.

Riccarton Toll (ri-'kar''-in-tol) n. former toll house on the B6357 near Riccarton Farm. Christian Armstrong was toll-keeper there in 1851. It is marked ‘Riccarton Bar’ on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map. The house still exists.

rice (ris) n., arch. a branch, stick – ‘He travelled with two long sticks – ‘rices’ they were called’ [RM], twigs collectively, brushwood – ‘The calculation of the stake and rice stands thus: Rice at 1s. per cart, 3d. per rood; stakes, eight to the rood, 6d. … ’ [RJE], ‘… a cart filled with the small branches of the ash-tree, with the leaves on, – ‘ash rice’, as he described the material to me’ [RB] (also spelled ‘rise’ or ‘ryce’, and sometimes plural).

Richard see Richard Hassendean

Richard (ri-churd) n. Dean of Esksdale, in the Diocese of Glasgow, listed as a witness 1195/6. He is the only named person who held this office. However, his surname is unknown.

Richard (ri-churd) n. recorded as Vicar of Ashkirk and chaplain to the Bishop of Glasgow in 1258 when he witnessed a charter. He is recorded as ‘Ricardo vicario de ecclesia de Askirke’.

Richard (ri-churd) n. recorded as Parson of ‘Sowdone’ (i.e. Southdean) in 1526/7. At that time he witnessed a document relating to Walter Scott of Branxholme, recorded in the Selkirk Protocol Books. No surname is given.

Richard III (ri-churd-thu-third) n. Richard Plantagenet (1452–85) he was the 4th surviving son of Richard, 3rd Duke of York and Cecily Neville. He had a withered arm and crooked spine, hence his nickname ‘Crookback’. He was Duke of Gloucester and King of England 1483–85, his role in the ‘Princes in the Tower’ incident being a matter of debate. From 1470–83 he was Warden of the English West March, and in 1482 led an invasion into Scotland that took Berwick and Edinburgh. He was the last King of the House of York, and well known as the subject of a Shakespeare play.

Richardson (ri-churd-sin) n. Adam (17th/18th C.) baker in Hawick. He was recorded as an innkeeper in 1718. He married Isobel Leyden in Cavers Parish in 1699 and their children included: Christian (b.1709); James (b.1711); Adam (b.1716); and Adam (again, b.1718). The witnesses in 1709 were Bailie George Martin and flesher James Halliday, in 1716 were the same witnesses as for other baptisms that day, and in 1718 were John Gardner in the Sandbed and flesher Robert Renwick ‘there’ (suggesting they all lived at the Sandbed). Adam (18th C.) recorded in the Town Treasurer’s book in 1775 for the ‘libel’ against him ‘for going by the Court with the bailies, before and after the court, 2s. – of which he paid 16d.’; it is unclear which court this was or what the trial was about. The same amount is also recorded in 1756 for the same purpose. He could be the merchant Adam who married Elizabeth Scott in Hawick in 1755 and whose children included Elizabeth (b.1756), Joan (b.1759) and Isobel (b.1761). The witnesses in 1759 were William and Walter Scott. Adam (18th/19th C.) draper at the Sandbed, recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. Allan (1942–) member of the Hawick Cycling Club. He won a national title and became the first member of the Hawick club to compete for Scotland on both the road and the track. Andrew (17th/18th C.) weaver in Hawick. He is probably the Andrew who in 1703 and 1713 witnessed baptisms for weaver Jasper, who was surely related; the other witness in 1703 was weaver Thomas, who was surely also related. He married Isobel Purcell and their children included: George (b.1703); Bessie (b.1706); Catharine (b.1708); and James (b.1711). The witnesses in 1706 were Michael Briggs and Jasper Richardson (surely a relative) and in 1708 were Wright James Purcell (probably related to his wife), and weavers Jasper and John (who were surely related to him). Andrew (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. His got married in 1722 (with no wife’s name recorded). Andrew (c.1790–1869) born in Roxburghshire, son of farmer James and Isabel Scott. He served with the Dumfries Militia, and was at Edinburgh Castle in 1814 when he married Margaret Pollock. He was later a stockmaking, needlemaker and woollen framework knitter in Hawick. He may be the Andrew who was listed among people who recovered from cholera in 1832. He was living on Green Wynd in 1841. His children included: James (1816–74), who married Janet Kyle; Andrew (b.1824), married Mary Paterson; John (1826–95), china merchant, married Harriot Miller; David (b.1830); Alexander (1833–72).
married Christina Burns; Isabella (b.1835); Margaret (b.1837); and George (b.1841). Andrew (1799–1876) said to be from Edinburgh. He was painter of 'Hawick' from about 1835, which was engraved as the frontispiece to Wilson’s ‘Annals of Hawick’ (by J. Bower). It is a view from Easter Martin’s Hill, to the north of Crumhaugh Hill farmhouse and is also known as ‘Hawick from Crumhaughhill’. It was presented to the Museum by W.E. Wilson. Probably the same Andrew was also active in the England and in the New York area, painting landscapes and coastal views, such as ‘View from Froster Hill, Gloucestershire’, ‘The Bergen Homestead’ and ‘View near Bridgeport, Connecticut’. Andrew (19th C.) foreman at Robert Ewen’s hosiery factory on the Mill Path, recorded in 1866. Ann (18th C.) recorded in 1758 when she hired the Hawick Parish mortcloth. Bruce Cornet in 2000, hence sometimes referred to as the Millennium Cornet. He also marked the boundaries again the following year, when the full-scale Common Riding was cancelled because of foot and mouth. Catherine nee Scott (1777–1853) daughter of Capt. James, descendant of the Scotts of Thirlestane. She went to India to stay with her uncle Lord Harris, and there married her cousin Capt. Gilbert Richardson of the East India Company Marine. She returned to Scotland after the death of her husband and lived at Forge, near Canonbie. She was locally known as a writer, and was a friend of the Carlyles. She wrote ‘Adonia: A Desultory Story’ (1801) and ‘Poems’ (1828). Frazer (19th C.) acted as Halberdier in the latter part of the 19th century, for many years along with Thomas Cook. There is an early photograph of him with his halberd. In 1875 it is reported that he appeared in the ‘much disputed new suit!’ (also spelled ‘Fraser’). Gavin Gala man who wrote ‘For King and Country and the Scottish Borderers’ (1887), an account of the 1/4th Battalion K.O.S.B. at Gallipoli, and ‘After Gallipoli’ (1992), an account of their activities in the rest of WWI. He has been a regular speaker at the Archæological Society. George ‘the Blue Laird’ (b.1705/6) of the West End. He is probably the George, Burgess and ‘Indweller in Hawick’ who gave evidence at the court case in 1767 regarding the former use of the Common. He was at that time stated to be a widower and staying in part of a house rent free from his son James, given by his uncle James Purcell. He lived in Hawick all his life, except when he was in service as a boy and ‘has been at the Common-Riding of Hawick every year since he could ride a horse’. His daughter Christian died in 1803, by which time he was already deceased. James, who was also called ‘the Blue Laird’ was perhaps his son. He may be the George, son of Andrew, born in Hawick in 1703. He could be the carrier (also recorded as a ‘workman’) George who married Betty Shiel and whose children baptised in Hawick included: Helen (b.1734); John (b.1741); James (b.1743); and James (again, b.1747). The witnesses in 1741 were late Bailie Walter Graham and servant John Nichol and in 1747 were mason Andrew Napier and wright James Purcell (his uncle). George (b.c.1785) recorded as ‘independent’ on the 1841 census. His land behind the Back Row is marked on Wood’s 1824 map. He was perhaps son of James and grandson of George (both of whom were called ‘the Blue Laird’). George (1793–1871) son of William and Margaret Laing, he was born in Minto or Yarrow Parish. He is recorded as an agricultural labourer at Wester Parkhill in 1841 and 1851, and in 1861 he was at Deanburnhaugh with his son-in-law. Minto Parish and lived at Hummelknowe Mill when young and later at Parkhill. He married Elizabeth Burton, who died at Wester Parkhill in 1824, aged 30. Their children included: Margaret (1816/7–1894), who married roadman William Robson and died at 13 Dakers Place; William (1817/8–1825); and Helen (1820/1–42). In 1825 (recorded in Wilton and Roberton Parishes) he secondly married Elizabeth Henry, who died at Wester Parkhill in 1846, aged 64. He died at Deanburnhaugh and was buried at Borthwick Waas Cemetery. George (18th/19th C.) resident of London, who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He must have had some local connection. Henry (b.1801) son of James, who was Cornet in 1777, and Jane Scott, from the Milsington Scotts. He was a farmer, living at 37 Loan, recorded as farmer of 15 acres in 1861. He rented several fields from the Duke of Buccleuch. He married Beatrix (or Beatrice) Miller, and their children included: William, who emigrated to Australia in the 1850s; Margaret; Henry (b.1830), who also emigrated to Australia; Robert, who also went to Australia; James (b.1836/7), who was Cornet in 1862; and Walter. James (17th C.) farmer at Branzholme Town. He is recorded holding part of the lease there in 1675 and 1677; in 1677 he was renting along with his mother (whose name is not given). He is surely related to the John senior and John younger, who were tenants in 1671 (perhaps his father and brother). He could be the James, married to Catherine Turnbull (or Rule) whose daughter Bessie was baptised in Hawick Parish in 1671. James (17th C.) resident at Howcleuch in Robertson Parish. He is recorded there in 1683 when his daughter Janet was baptised. He was ‘weadua’, i.e. widower, so his wife must have died in childbirth. The witnesses were James and Robert Nichol. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His daughter Agnes was baptised in 1696. James (17th/18th C.) merchant in Hawick. In 1712 he was on the short-list of candidates for Cornet. He is listed as ‘Tenent’ in 1725 when he (along with mason Andrew Turnbull, whose wife was also an Aitken) witnessed a baptism for John Hardie and Isobel Aitken. He is probably the James who married Bessie, daughter of William Aitkin in 1715 and whose children baptised in Hawick Parish include: Bessie (b.1716); Agnes (b.1717); Mary (b.1719); Isobel (b.1721), who probably married merchant James Ekron; Helen (b.1723); Patrick (b.1726); and Elizabeth (b.1731). His daughter is probably the Isobel who married merchant James Ekron. He is probably the carrier James who witnessed a baptism for cooper Alexander Weens in 1713 and recorded as ‘tenent’ when he witnessed another baptism for Alexander Weens in 1721. James (b.c.1753) son of William, manufacturer at Whisky Houses. He had a brother John and sister Elizabeth, who married William Wilson. He was Cornet in 1777 and known as ‘Auld Jamie’ in later life. He waved the Flag over the new bridge when it was opened in his year as Cornet. Along with William (either his father or brother), he ran the firm of wool merchants and manufacturers based at ‘Whusky Hooses’. The firm manufactured carpets for a while, and also dealt in salt, tar and whisky; it went into bankruptcy around 1812–21. In 1796 he witnessed a baptism for merchant George Gray, and could also be the James who witnessed a baptism for William Young. He was listed as a merchant in Hawick in 1791–97 when he paid the Horse Tax. In 1796 he was recorded as ‘Wool Staper’ (i.e. trader in wool). He contributed, with William, to the subscription to support the war with France around 1799. He first married a Brydon, but they had no issue. Secondly, in Robertson Parish in 1790, he married Jane (b.1762), daughter of William Scott, tenant of Milstoning. Their children (baptised in Hawick) were: William (b.1791); John; Walter (b.1792), stocking-maker; Betty (b.1794), who probably died young; James (b.1796), of Salthall; Isabella, who married baker Walter Wilson; Henry (b.1801), farmer on the Loan; Thomas (b.1806), carrier and coal agent; and James’ (again, b.1808). The witnesses in 1792 were William and Walter Richardson (probably his father and brother) and in 1796 were William (presumably his father) and hosier William Wilson. He could be the James of Walter’s Wynd whose wife died in 1822, aged 59. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Hassendeanbank. He subscribed to Andrew Scott’s book of poetry, published in Kelso in 1811. James ‘the Blue Laird’ (d.1824) probably son of George, who also had the same nickname. He was probably a minor land-owner, like the ‘Hilliesland Lairds’. He is probably the James, son of George, who received a house (with a yard behind it) from George’s uncle James Purcell. This is probably the land belonging to George marked behind the Back Row on Wood’s 1824 map, adjacent to George Richardson’s land (who may have been his son). He married Elizabeth (‘Lizzy’) Nimmo (or ‘Nimo’) and she died in 1782. Their children included Helen (b.1768). He may be the James whose son George died in 1776 and whose unnamed child died in 1795. James (b.1767) farmer in Hawick, son of John and Isobel Scott. He married Isabella Scott in Hawick in 1787 and she died in 1818. Their children included Andrew (b.c.1791), who was also a farmer. James ‘Lang Jaymie’ or ‘Jaymie o Sauthaa’ (b.1796) presumably a tall individual, who lived with his family at Salt Hall. He was son of James, Cornet in 1777, and a nephew of Elizabeth Richardson, who married manufacturer William Wilson. He worked as a warehouseman in a wool factory. He is recorded at Salt Hall in the censuses of 1841, 1851 and 1861. He married Helen Ballantyne, sister of ‘Wat the Drummer’. Their children included: James; Jane; Margaret; Isabella, who married John Edgar; Helen; Walter; John; William; Thomas; and Elizabeth. James (b.1800/1–32) from Hawick, brother of spinner John. He served with the 78 Regiment, the Ross-shire Buffs from the age of 17. He died in Colombo, Sri Lanka. James (b.1808/9) from Smallholm, he was a shuttlemaker in Hawick. In 1851 he was living on Slitrig Crescent and employing 2 men. In Slater’s 1852 directory he is described as a cooper and shuttle-maker on the ‘Front row’, as well as being listed as a ‘turner’. His wife was Isabella (from England) and their children included Betsy, Peter, Thomas, Isabella, Helen, David and Margaret. James (b.1813/4) grocer and tea-dealer at 73 High Street in 1851. He was listed as a grocer in Slater’s 1852 directory. His wife was Janet and their children included Andrew, James, George, Margaret, Francis, Janet and William. James (b.1836/7) son of farmer Henry, he was a stone mason, and also farmed fields up the Loan, succeeding his father. He was Cornet in 1862. He can be seen in what is the second earliest known Common Riding photograph, standing with a group of his supporters, with a top hat and full beard. He had daughters Wilhelmina B. and Beatrice Miller. James (b.1851) son of Walter and Mary Murray. He worked as a wool-sorter and served as Beadle for Hawick Parish Church. He had a son Robert, who married Ethel, adopted daughter of postmaster Hawick Parish Church. He had daughters Wilhelmina B. and Beatrice Miller.

Jamie son of Murray and grandson of Jimmy. He was Cornet in 2009. Janet (17th C.) resident of the west-side of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. She probably ran an inn or shop of some kind. Jasper (17th/18th C.) weaver of Hawick. In 1703 he witnessed a baptism for weaver Andrew Jardine. In 1703, 1706 and 1708 he witnessed baptisms for weaver Andrew (surely a relative); in 1703 the other witness was Thomas (also a weaver). In 1709 he and John (surely also a relative) witnessed a baptism for weaver Andrew Jardine. In 1706 he married Margaret Briggs (probably from the weaving family) and their children included: Bessie (b.1707); Thomas (b.1709); Michael (b.1710); George (b.1713); Frederick (b.1713); and John (b.1715). The witnesses in 1709 were Michael Briggs and merchant Francis Elliot, in 1713 were Andrew (surely a relative) and John Pringle, and in 1715 were James Scott ‘Doctor’ and wright James Purcell. John (16th C.) saddler mentioned in the last testament of Sir Walter Scott in 1574, when he was still owed money from the Laird of Buccleuch. It is unclear if he was local or from Edinburgh. John (17th C.) ‘maltman’ who was listed as a Chamberlain for the Scotts of Buccleuch in the period 1628–33, responsible for part of the rents of Bransholme and Wilton. In the last testament of the Earl of Buccleuch in 1633 he is ‘John Ritchiesone, maltman to my Lord Bukcleuche’ and owed the Earl some rental money.

John (17th C.) writer (i.e. lawyer) who served as Town Clerk in 1638, and probably for a few years before. He is recorded as a notary public in Hawick in 1637. He is recorded as ‘John Ritchartsonne, clerk’ in one of the first entries in the earliest existing Town Book in 1638. He is also there listed as a notary, along with Gilbert Watt, on the short-list for next Town Clerk (with Watt being selected). He was listed as ‘notar publick’ at the signing of the ‘Confessions of Faith and Bond of Union’ (Covenant) in 1638. He was ‘notar’ when elected to the Council in 1648. He could be the same as ‘John Ritchisone, officiar and clerk in the defunctes baroune courtes’ who was owed his yearly fee in the inventory of the deceased Earl of Buccleuch in 1633. John (17th C.) listed as ‘John Ritchiesone elder’ in 1671, when, along with his son John, he leased part of the farm of Bransholme Town. It seems likely that James, who was farming at Bransholme Town in 1675 and 1677, was another son. It is possible he was the John, married to Helen Routledge, whose daughter Bessie was born in Hawick Parish in 1654. He is probably the John who in 1673 witnessed (along with Patrick Scoon) a baptism for James Martin (who could have been his son-in-law). John (17th C.) son of John, he was listed as ‘younger’ in 1671 when he was tenant of part of Bransholme Town. He is probably the John who was married to Bessie Hope, and whose children, baptised in Hawick Parish, included Bessie (b.1670) and John (b.1673). The Hopes were also tenants at Bransholme Town. John (17th/18th C.) married Agnes Oliver in Cavers Parish in 1703. John (17th/18th C.) married Mary Bell in Bedrule Parish in 1708. John (17th/18th C.) weaver in Hawick. He witnessed baptisms in 1708 for Andrew (who was surely related to him) and for weaver David Reid and in 1709 for merchant Walter Bryson. He is probably the John who along with Jasper (surely a relative) witnessed a baptism for weavers Andrew Jardine in 1709. John (17th/18th C.) married Isobel Turnbull in Wilton Parish in 1721. John (18th C.) resident of Hawick. In 1723 he and Agnes Waddel had a son John baptised in Hawick. They were labelled ‘Fornicators’ and the witnesses were Glover James Waddel (surely related to Agnes) and Beatrice Miller. John (17th C.) carrier in Hawick. He married Isobel Scott (also from Hawick Parish) in 1761. Their children included: William (b.1762), who must have died young; Margaret (b.1764); James (b.1767); an unnamed child (b.1769); and William (again, b.1772). The witnesses in 1764 were James Scott and James Glendinning and in 1772 were David Laing and James Glendinning. He may be the John who in 1761 witnessed a baptism for Charles Rutherford and Janet Richardson (perhaps his sister). He may also be the John who witnessed a baptism for wright James Glendinning in Hawick in

1766. His wife died in Hawick in 1790. John (18th C.) tailor in Lilliesleaf Parish. His daughter Isabel was baptised in 1790. John (b.1756) son of William of the Whisky Houses mill. His brother James was Cornet in 1777 and his sister Elizabeth married manufacturer William Wilson. He is described in a Wilson history as ‘John Richardson, father of John the elder’. He may be the Hawick resident John recorded as John (1788/9–1874) spinner in Hawick. In 1841 he was living on the Back Row. He married Esther Robson, who died in 1830, aged 44. Their children included: William (1808/9–71), tailor and clothier, who died at Blackburn, Lancashire; Isabella (1814/5–54), who died at Doon in Canada; Andrew (b.c.1815); John (b.1817), who died in infancy; John (again, c.1821–88); Esther (b.c.1826); Agnes (1825/6–1906); and Robert (1828–77). His family are buried at St. Mary’s. John (1799–1869) son of Walter, manufacturer at Whisky Houses. His mother was Christian Gledstains, daughter of the proprietor of the Maxwell House. His partner in Noble & Richardson in 1877, then became partner in Messrs. Blenkhorn, Richardson & Co. in Galashiels in 1880, originally operating at Abbots Mill in Galashiels and opening Eastfield Mills in Hawick in 1883. His partner John Farrar Blenkhorn was married to his sister, while their first manager was his cousin George Hunter. He was also Lieutenant in the local Border Rifles (volunteers). He married Lizzie Maxwell (daughter of the proprietor of the Maxwell Hotel in Gala), and none of their children survived to adulthood. The family lived at 19 Buc cleuch Street (Welch’s). Suffering from ill health, he travelled to warmer climates (Australia, New Zealand and South Africa) for his last 4 years, dying of influenza at Berbeton, Transvaal. Margaret (18th/19th C.) dressmaker at the Sandbed, recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. Mark (1666/7– 1) brought up in Hawick, he attended Burnfoot, Trinity and the High School. He was an apprentice butcher at Miller’s, then worked as a nursing assistant at Dingleton Hospital, later moving into property development. In 2016 he co-founded Group S.R.S., which provides home care and support services throughout Scotland. Murray local printer of Dovemount Place. He was one of the founders of the Border Horse Racing Association in 1972 and a keen ‘flapping’ rider and organiser. Patrick (16th C.) recorded in 1580 as ‘quid broder’ (i.e. brother-in-law) of Hector Turnbull in Belses. The pair, along with Hector’s son Dand, were accused by Jean Hepburn, Lady Wedderburn, of murdering her husband John Hamilton. They were denounced as rebels. Presumably he was married to a sister of Hector Turnbull, tenant in Belses. Bailie Patrick (d.bef. 1707) Hawick Magistrate recorded in 1694 and 1703. He owned a tenement to the south of where the Grammar School was built at the Sandbed. He was ‘present bayleyea’ on the list of subscribers for the Kirk bell (although it is unclear if this was 1693 or 1694). In 1694 it is recorded that he settled his account ‘for all that he has paid for the town’s use, for great bell, little bell, steeple, and tolbuith, and all other things, being £38 : 19 : 6 Scots’. He is probably the ‘Patrick Ritchisons’ who is listed ‘eist the water’ among those paying the Hearth Tax in Hawick in 1694. In 1699 he and Robert Hardie petitioned for Hawick to be relieved from the ‘freedom of trade’ tax. He witnessed baptisms for weaver David Miller in 1700, for Bailie George Martin in 1702, for flesher John Tudhope in 1702, for workman Robert Henderson in 1703, for Burgh Officer Alexander Scott, for merchant William Dickson, for Bailie Robert Ruecastle and for ‘Walter Scott herd’ in 1704 and for Bailie George Martin and for Anthony Haig in 1706. He also witnessed several baptisms in 1705, and could be the Patrick who witnessed a baptism in 1687. His wife was Bessie Turnbull and their children included: James (b.1686); John (b.1688), who became a printer’s apprentice in Edinburgh in 1706; and Elizabeth (b.1692), who married tai-

sen (whose memorial stone can still be seen at St. Mary’s). He became a clerk with Andrew Oliver, auctioneer’s, and was also assistant to Robert Armstrong in the Post Office. He then became head cashier with a firm in London (Scott, Bell & Co.), moved to Liverpool for a few years (working for Leech, Harrison Forwood), and was then sent abroad for business. In 1870, after about a year in India, he returned to Hawick because of failing health. He then went into partnership with Robert Noble, forming Richardson, Noble and Co., at Stonefield Mills, moving to Glebe Mills in 1873. The partnership was suggested by his brother-in-law John Hunter; they met for the second time in Hunter’s house, trying to conclude their business agreement quickly because both had another engagement that night, only to discover that they were both being admitted as members of Masonic Lodge 111. However, he died after only a few years in business in Hawick. He married Margaret, daughter of William Lawrie and half sister of William Fredrick Diener. He secondly married Jessica, daughter of Andrew Irvine of the Savings Bank. His children were: Minnie, who married John Farrar Blenk-norn; John, partner in Blenkhorn, Richardson & Co.; Ettie Isabella; William Fredrick; and Margaret Lawrie. The family were living at Wilton Hill when he died at only 48. He is buried in the Wellogate. Thomas (17th/18th C.) weaver in Hawick. In 1703 he (along with Jasper, also a weaver) witnessed a baptism for weaver Andrew. The 3 men were presumably all related.

Thomas (b.1806) younger son of James, who was Cornet in 1777. He was a carrier and coal agent in Hawick. He was listed as a ‘Carrier’s Porter’ on the Mid Raw in the 1841 census. He may be the grocer on the Howegate listed in Pigot’s 1837 directory. He was a carter at 14 Howegate in 1861. He later stayed at Fiddle Inn (7 Loan). He married Agnes Park and their children included:

Robert (16th C.) recorded as Dean of Ammandale, in the Diocese of Glasgow, in 1548. He received some of the ben-efices of the Archdeaconry of Teviotdale from 1552. How-

Walter (17th C.) weaver in Hawick. He subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Muowegate. Walter (16th C.) weaver in Teviotdale from 1552. However, this overlapped with John Hepburn, so it is unclear who was really in the office. He resigned in 1565. He was also referred to as Dean of Teviotdale in 1552. Robert (17th C.)

leased one fifth of the farm of Branxholme Town in 1690, with Thomas Briggs as cautioner. He was listed at Branxholme Town among ‘The poor in Hauick Paroch’ on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls.

the manufacturer who paid the horse tax in the same year. In 1794 he married Christian, daughter of Town Clerk John Gladstains, and she died in 1816. Their children included: Ann (b.1794); Isabel (b.1796); William (b.1797), who went to London and became a merchant in Glasgow; John (1799–1869); James (b.1801), a hatter in Liverpool; and Elizabeth (b.1802). The witnesses in 1794 were William (his father) and Walter Laidlaw. After his death, in 1815, the mill was sold to Waldie, Pringle, Wilson & Co. Walter (1824–88) son of John, he was a hosiery warehouseman. He lived at Waverley Cottages. In 1847 he firstly married Mary Murray, and their children were: John (b.1848), father of James of the Salvation Army; James (b.1851), wool-sorter and Beadle at Hawick Parish Church; Mary (b.1855); Walter (b.1857); and Walter (b.1859). He secondly married Janet, daughter of Robert Henderson, dairyman. William (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was recorded at Howcleuch in 1734 when his daughter Agnes was baptised. William (18th C.) workman in Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Scott and their children included: Janet (b.1738); and Betty (b.1741). The witnesses in 1741 were ex-Bailie Robert Howison and merchant John Cavers. William (18th C.) cooper in Hawick Parish. He married Mary Anderson and their children included George (b.1738) and William (b.1740). Adam (b.1736) was probably also his child. The witnesses in 1740 were fleshers William Renwick and Thomas Waugh. William (18th C.) wool merchant and manufacturer at Whisky Houses, said to he Hawick’s first woollen manufacturer. His brother James was his partner, as well as being Cornet. He was recorded as a carrier in 1761. He may be the William who witnessed a baptism for smith Robert Young in 1762. In 1787 he was granted land and a waterfall at the top of Slitrig Crescent by the Duke of Buccleuch. He then had the Whisky House Mill built for him in 1788 for the manufacture of cloth. This factory represented one of the important early steps in Hawick’s tweed industry. He made a kind of blue cloth, and travelled to Leeds to learn the techniques for finishing his cloth. He later manufactured ‘duffle’ for women’s petticoats, as well as carpets. He paid the Horse Tax in Hawick in 1785–97. He witnessed a baptism for his son Walter in 1794. He is probably the William listed as ‘Merchant’ on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, with 5 work horses and 1 saddle horse, as well as on the 1797 Dog Tax Rolls. He witnessed a baptism for his son James in 1796 (when recorded as ‘Wool Stapler’ (i.e. a trader in wool). He may be the member of Hawick Curling Club listed in 1812. He is sometimes confused with his son Walter. In 1752 he married Isabel Henderson (from the farming family at 53 High Street, probably daughter of Robert), and she died in 1778. Their children were: James (b.c.1753), who was Cornet in 1777; John (b.1756); Peter Patrick (b.1759), who had no issue; Elizabeth (b.1761), who probably died young; Walter (b.1766), who took over as manufacturer at Whisky Houses; Betty (1772–1815), the eldest surviving daughter, who married manufacturer William Wilson; Robert (1776–1871); and William (d.1808), merchant in Hawick. The witnesses in 1761 were carrier James Scott and blacksmith Robert Young (who had also married a Henderson), in 1766 were James Henderson (probably his brother-in-law) and Robert Young (again) and in 1772 were John Aitkin and Robert Chisholme. William (d.1808) Hawick merchant, son of manufacturer William. He married Isabella (1771–1807), daughter of James Dickson of Alton. Their son William inherited Alton after the death of his uncle Andrew Dickson, and took the additional name of Dickson. He may be the Richardson whose property is marked around 51 and 55 High Street. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was living at Whithope in 1808. He married Margaret Laing and their children included: Robert (b.1804); Elizabeth (b.1808); and James (b.1811). William (1774/5–1840) resident of Hummelknowe Mill. In Minto Parish in 1793 he married Margaret Laing and she died in 1831, aged 65. In 1833 he emigrated to Canada, where died. A commemorative stone was erected in Borthwick Waas Cemetery by their son Robert of Oxford County, Canada West. Their children included: George (b.1793); John (b.1795); Alexander (b.1797); Robert (b.1804); Elizabeth (b.1808); and James (b.1811). William (18th/19th C.) resident of Hill Place Edinburgh when he subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He must have had some local connection. William (1797–1877) son of Walter and Christian Gledstains, he was born in Hawick. He is said to have gone to London, but became a merchant in Glasgow, variously listed in the census reports as a ‘Drysalter’, ‘General Merchant’, ‘Wine Merchant’ and ‘Iron Merchant’. He may be the ‘William Richardson, Jun.’ who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He married Eliza Muirhead in 1823 and had children Walter, George,
Richardson-Dickson

Jane, William and Christina Gladstone. William (b.c.1805) from the Morebattle area, he was a joiner in Hawick. He was living on the Round Close in 1841 and at 4 Backdamgate by 1851. He was listed as a joiner and a cartwright, employing 2 men. His wife was Margaret from Kelso. In 1846 all of the wood from his yard at the foot of the Crescent was carried away in the flood. Their children included Euphemia, James (also a joiner), Elizabeth, Margaret and Euphemia (again). William (1827–90) Son of John. He was hosier manager at Walter Wilson & Sons on Allars Crescent. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Ebenezer Robison (whip and thong maker), and she died in 1905, aged 79. They had a son, John (who died in South Africa) and a daughter, Elizabeth (who died in infancy). His grave in Wellogate Cemetery is marked with an obilisk (formerly spelled ‘Richardsone’, ‘Richardsone’, ‘Richartson’, ‘Richartsonne’, ‘Richartsonn’, ‘Richiesone’, ‘Richison’, ‘Ritchardsone’, ‘Ritchartsonne’, ‘Ritchesion’ and ‘Ritchiesone’).

Richardtoncleucht (ri-churd-tin-klooch) n. nickname of Andrew (‘Dandy’) Crozier, one of the 10 thieves apprehended in Hawick in October 1567 and taken to Edinburgh tolbooth. His name presumably came from Riccarton Cleuch in Liddesdale, or perhaps Richard’s Cleuch near Overton Bush in the Jed valley (see Riccarton Cleuch).

Richmond (rich-mind) n. James (1834–1923) son of Rev. John, he was born in Southdean. He studied at St. Andrews University 1849–51. In 1851 he emigrated to Australia, becoming a leading sheep breeder in New South Wales. He died in Kincairney, Perthshire. Rev. John (1784–1854) son of Rev. Dr. James of Irvine. He graduated from Glasgow University in 1804, was licensed by Irvine Presbytery in 1809 and was ordained as minister of Southdean in 1810 (being presented by Archibald, Lord Douglas, for whose family he had been tutor). In 1847 he retired to St. Andrews because of poor health and died in Edinburgh. He married Catherine Mitchell (who died in 1887, aged 89) in 1825. Their children were: Isabella Georgine; Margaret Cunningham; James, who became a sheep-farmer near Dunblane and in Australia; John, died young; George Mitchell, army Lieutenant in India, killed in action near Peshawar; and Catherine, died an infant. He published ‘Ode to the Memory of Thomson, in the Temple of the Muses at Drye Castle’ (1818), ‘A Sermon on Regular Attendance on Divine Worship, in Connexion with the Spirit of the Times’ (1820). He also wrote a description of Southdean Parish for the New Statistical Account in 1834 and he left many poems in manuscript form. Sir Thomas (d.1317) English leader from Yorkshire. He took part in the siege of Carlaverock Castle in 1300. In 1317 he led a part of the English force under the Earl of Arundel, which totalled perhaps 10,000 men. Sir James Douglas organised an ambush near Lintalee, with escape prevented by twisting together the branches of young birch trees. He himself was killed, it is said by Douglas. William (b.1828/9) from Mauchline in Ayrshire. He was a grocer and spirit dealer on the Sandbed, along with Thomas Masterton. The pair are listed in the 1851 census and as ‘Richmond & Masterton’ in Slater’s 1852 directory (also written ‘Richmont’).

Rickerby (ri-ker-bee) n. Jane (b.1825/6) from Langholm, she was a dressmaker on the Howegate in 1851. She lived with her sister Mary Ann, who was a milliner. They were listed in Slater’s 1852 directory.

rickety-rackety-roo (ri-ki’-ee-ra-ki’-ee-roo) adv., arch. unsteady on the feet, particularly said of furniture.

rickle (ri-kul) n., arch. a pile, loose heap (of stones or peats), loose collection of things in general, v. to heap, form into a stack – ‘When are ye gaun to rickle your peats’ [JoJ], poet. to rattle bones – ‘...Ricklin’ an’ rattlin’, cauld an’ dry Wi’ cricklin’ riot’ [WP], ‘The Mune is but a rickle o’ stane – I maun gang oot, I maun gang oot, Her wunds they nidder till the bane ...’ [DH].

rickle o banes (ri-kul-o-bänz) n. someone who is unhealthily thin, an emaciated person, a skeleton (the word ‘rickle’ mostly survives in this phrase).

ricmatic (rik-mu-teek) n., arch. group of people or things, sum total, entirety, caboodle – ‘But the bonniest lass o’ the hale ricmatic Is the lassie that works in the mill’ [WAP] (corruption of ‘arithmetic’; note the stress on the first syllable).

riddance (ri-dins) n., arch. intervention in a quarrel – ‘...but when he heard ane crying murther he straight way went up to make riddance and to allay tumult’ [PR1716].

Riddell (ri-dul) n. hamlet about 8 miles north of Hawick, between Ashkirk and Lilliesleaf, on the Ale Water, off the B6400. The surrounding area is the old estate of Riddell, formerly a barony, which is now well wooded, and contains the ruins of the main mansion (incorporating the older peel tower) as well as a more modern tower, built nearby on the site of a mediaeval motte and bailey. It was the home of the Riddells of Riddell from probably the reign of David I (the mid-12th century, when it was referred to as ‘Wester-Lilliesleaf’) until they were effectively ruined following the death of Sir John in 1819, and it was sold to the Sprots in 1823. The short version of the story of the loss of the family home is that in the late 18th century Sir John changed the course of the river in order to improve the view, and became bankrupt in the process. In the early 13th century part of the ‘demesne’ lands were stated to be below ‘Harekamb’. The farm was burned in a raid by Turnbulls in about 1502, in which perhaps 480 sheep were stolen, along with 2 cows and goods, and a horse killed. The main lands were referred to as ‘Riddell Mains’ in 1643 and valued at £910, part of an estate of £1654. By 1678 the estate’s value was £1765. Tax was paid on 11 hearths on the estate in 1694, with John Winthrope, William Archibald and Alexander Kennedy being recorded there. Robert Arres was recorded as tenant there in 1789. Riddell House was an extensive mansion, destroyed by fire in 1943, although the remains can still be seen. It was one of the places where dragoons were posted in about 1676, so that they could scour the local countryside for people attending illegal field conventicles. There are 2 lodge houses for the estate, called ‘East Lodge’ and ‘West Lodge’. The estate also contains stables, a deer larder, two 18th century bridges and other old buildings. There was formerly a chapel on the estate. The mausoleum of the Sprot family lies within woodlands on the estate. The current farmhouse was built by Mark Sprot in 1826 as an estate office and extended in 1898; it contains a Sprot armorial panel, as well as some stones in the garden from the earlier mansion. A ridge about 700 m east of the present farm contains a roughly oval fort. A stone cist was unearthed near Willowbog Plantation on the estate around 1920 and reconstructed in the kitchen garden, although it has now disappeared. Court rolls for the barony court for 1698–1712 are in the National Archives (the origin is probably Old English ‘rydde dæl’, meaning ‘valley cleared of trees’, the name being transplanted by the ‘de Rydale’ family, who held extensive lands in England; it is ‘Redoll’ in 1435, ‘Redale’ in 1436/7, ‘Reddail’ in 1479/80 and ‘Riddale’ in 1502 and 1534; it appears on Frederik de Wit’s map of c. 1680 and is labelled ‘Riddell or W. Lilsly’ on Blaeti’s 1654 map).
Riddell (ri-dul) n. (see also Riddle) Adam (13th C.) recorded as ‘Adam de Ridal’ in an English document of 1279 involving an inquest into lands in Ireland. Adam (16th C.) brother of John of that Ilk. He was part of an inquest into ownership of the lands of Longnewton held in Jedburgh in 1533 (in which his nephew George also took part). Adam (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Roberton Burnfoot in 1781. He married Isobel Learmonth in Roberton in 1774. His children included Jane (b.1776), Elspeth (b.1684) and Nelly (b.1781). Adam (b.1782) born in Kirkton Parish, son of George, he was a joiner at Overhall Cottages in 1841, 1851 and 1861. He was listed there at Overhall among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1840 and 1841. His wife was Isabella and their children included George, Robert, Janet, Georgina and Jessy, as well as an adopted daughter Isabella Aitchison. Agnes (17th C.) widow of Hawick merchant James Brydon, who is listed on the 1693/4 subscribers’ list for the new Kirk bell. She is also listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick ‘eist the water’ in 1694. She may have been a shopkeeper of some sort on the High Street. Her children with George, Robert, Janet, Georgina and Jessy, as well as an adopted daughter Isabella Aitchison. Agnes (17th C.) widow of Hawick merchant James Brydon, who is listed on the 1693/4 subscribers’ list for the new Kirk bell. She is also listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick ‘eist the water’ in 1694. She may have been a shopkeeper of some sort on the High Street. Her children with James Brydon included John (b.1670), Robert (b.1676), John (again, b.1683), Elspeth (b.1684) and James (b.1688). Agnes (d.bef. 1741) daughter of Henry and brother of William, portioner in Bewlie. She inherited the lands of Bewlie from her brother in 1695, specifically the 5-pound land of Bewlie and half of one of the cottage-lands in Lilliesleaf. She is described as ‘portioner’ of Bewley’ in 1699. She married John Nisbet, W.S. of Nisbetfield and their daughter Agnes married Walter Scott of Whitfield (later Harden). In 1723 her heir is recorded as her cousin, Francis Riddell, brewer in Prestonpans. Christian and Jean Riddell (and their husbands) are recorded as her heirs in 1741. Agnes (b.1810/1) wife of Lilliesleaf joiner William. She was listed as a midwife in the 1851 census. She was a widow living at about 61 High Street, with her children Janet, Rachel and James. She may be the dressmaker of the same name listed on the Howegate in Slater’s 1852 directory. Alan (13th C.) recorded in about 1240 as witness to a charter for lands of Prendergust, among the documents of Coldingham Priory. He witnessed another gift of land in Coldingham in 1248–60. It is unclear how he was related to other Riddells. Alexander (17th C.) miller at Newmill (on Teviot) according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He is probably the Alexander who witnessed a baptism for John Dryden in 1675. He may be the Alexander, married to Isobel Little, whose daughter Christian was baptised in Hawick Parish in 1672. Alexander (17th/18th C.) recorded in Hawick in 1698 as ‘Mr’ when he witnessed a baptism for John Scott of Gorrenberry. Andrew (16th C.) witness to a sasine in 1559 for land in Wilton. This was attached to a sasine with Robert Riddell mentioned, so it is likely he was related to the Riddells of that Ilk. Possibly the same Andrew is described as ‘Andrew Riddill of that ilk’ when he witnessed a sasine for lands in Rule Water in 1568. Perhaps the same Andrew was brother to Walter of that Ilk in 1579 when he was loaned £50 to Walter Scott of Todrig, receiving the annual rent of the lands in the form of meal and malt. His brother Robert was also mentioned about the same time. Probably the same Andrew, brother of Walter of that Ilk witnessed a transaction for Walter Scott of Todrig in 1581/2. Andrew (16th C.) servant to Robert, son of James Langlands of that Ilk. He was recorded in 1581 as witness to the sasine for half the Barony of Wilton being transferred from James Langlands of that Ilk to his son Robert. Andrew of that Ilk (1549/50–1632) son of Walter, with his mother probably being Agnes Ramsay. He was heir apparent of Andrew Walter in 1581 when he received sasine (in the same name of his sister Janet) for the lands of Wester Horsburgh in Peeblesshire from Alexander Horsburgh of that Ilk; William in Lilliesleaf was one of the witnesses. In 1581 he witnessed a bond of caution for Eliots, when he was listed as son and heir of Walter of that Ilk. In the 1580s he was a ‘tutor’ for the young James Pringle of Galashiels and Smallholm, to whom he was related through his paternal grandmother. He also served as caution for Pringles in 1598. He was served heir to his father in 1592 and obtained a charter in 1595/6 from the Commendator of Glasgow, as heir to his father Walter (making it unclear if Walter was still alive at that time). He was the first to acquire the Haining estate from the Scotts (perhaps about 1627). He is recorded in a bond of 1600 for lands in Lilliesleaf and also in 1600 was on the ‘retour’ for the Kers of Cessford. In 1610 he was appointed keeper of the rolls for the Justices of the Peace for Roxburghshire and was also named as a Commissioner for keeping peace in Roxburghshire. In 1610 he was recorded along with other Riddells, swearing not to harm Walter Scott in Hawick (called of Todshaw) and other Scotts. His cautioner was James, merchant in Edinburgh, who was probably a relative. He himself... acted as cautioner cautioner for his son John in the same case. In 1611 he was commended by King James VI for his industry as convenor of the Justices of Roxburghshire. In about 1620 he had a charter for half the lands of ‘Cringillis’ from the Commendator of Melrose, and another charter for Allanshaws, ‘Woplaw’ and the west part of ‘Langlie’ from James Cairncross of Colmeslie. In 1620 he acted as bailie for Walter Scott, Earl of Buccleuch, in a charter he granted to Sir Walter Scott of Goldielands; at the same time his daughter Jean was contracted in marriage to Walter, son of Sir Walter of Goldielands. He was probably the Laird of Riddell who represented Roxburghshire in the convention of 1617 and in Parliament in 1621. In 1623 a man was found guilty of stealing 4 cows and an ox from his lands, and sheep from his lands of Whitton. In 1628 he was given a commission to hold a trial for 2 women accused of witchcraft; for the case of one of them, Isobel ‘Howetsone’, several letters exist from him to officials in Selkirk. Also in 1628 he is listed among the major landowners who met to elect M.P.s. for Roxburghshire, his son John also being listed there as ‘fiar’. Also in 1628 he wrote to the Bailies of Selkirk about casting divot’s on their common. He purchased half a husbandland in Lilliesleaf from William, son of Martin Elliot and Agnes Lorraine (as confirmed in a service to Walter of that Ilk in 1702). He was ‘of Haining’ in documents from the early 1600s relating to transactions with Andrew Scott of Wemyss. He was referred to as Baron of Riddell, and apparently refused to accept a baronetcy. He may be the Andrew of that Ilk recorded in a dispute with the Burgh of Selkirk over casting divots, in an undated document. He married a Pringle of Galashiels, who was either his first or second cousin. He was succeeded by his son Sir John (for whom there is a marriage contract in 1600 with the daughter of Sir John Murray of Eddleston). He later married Violet, daughter of William Douglas of Pumpherston. His other children were: William of Mueselee, who started that branch of the family in the Borthwick valley; James of Maybole (possible ancestor of Rev. Henry Scott Riddell); Walter (or perhaps Robert) of Hartside; Andrew of Haining, who inherited that estate; Margaret, who married Robert Rutherford of Edgerston and/or Archibald Porteous, minister of Oxnam; Isabel, who married Robert Kerr, brother of Thomas of Cavers Carre; and Jean (1600–60), who remained unmarried, and is buried at Jedburgh Abbey. Other daughters may have married Walter Scott of Goldielands (although this may be an error for the marriage contract between his daughter Jean and Scott of Goldielands, which perhaps was never fulfilled) and John Bailie (ancestor of the Bailies of Mellerstain). In 1642 his widow Violet Douglas complained to the Privy Council about an attack on her tenants at Hartside. He is buried in the family aisle in Lilliesleaf kirkyard (where until fairly recently the inscription was quite legible), alongside his 2nd wife Violet. Andrew of Haining (1605/6–41) son of Andrew of that Ilk and his 2nd wife Violet Douglas. He is recorded as Andrew of Haining (along with David of Haining) in 1634 in a document preserved in Selkirk. He was served heir to his father in 1636. He was said to be a ‘favourite son’ of his father. Along with his father and mother, he has one of the earliest legible panels in the Riddell aisle in Lilliesleaf kirkyard. The initials ‘I.S.’ accompany his, probably those of his wife, who was Jean Stewart of Traquair (after his death his widow married Sir William Douglas of Kelhead). He was probably the ‘Andro Riddell’ who signed the ‘Confessions of Faith’ in Hawick in 1638. In 1638 he was appointed Sheriff of Selkirkshire. He was appointed Commissioner to Parliament (i.e. M.P.) for Selkirkshire (or ‘the forest’) 1639–41. He married Agnes of Fawside. His daughter Violet was the 3rd wife of Sir Robert Dalzell of Glenae. He was succeeded by his son John of Haining. He is buried in the Riddell Aisle at Lilliesleaf, with the inscription ‘whose life was short and good’. Andrew (17th C.) described as ‘now indweller in Over Quitton’ in 1652 when he married Elizabeth (‘Bessie’), daughter of Thomas Turnbull of Knowe. He was probably related to the Riddells of Riddell and Whitton. Andrew (17th C.) recorded in the 1663 Land Tax Rolls when he paid for the ‘feway of Lilslie’ in Lilliesleaf Parish. Probably the same Andrew was portioner of Lilliesleaf in 1678 when he served as tutor to John, son of the deceased William Gray in Lilliesleaf; in 1683 and 1684 he is described as uncle to this same John Gray (perhaps meaning that his wife was a Gray) in other discharges with the treasurer of Selkirk, and then had the discharge in his own right (presumably meaning he had inherited the lands). It is unclear how he was related to the Riddells of that Ilk. He may be the Andrew who died in 1701 and whose headstone is in Lilliesleaf Kirkyard. Andrew (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isobel Turnbull and their children included:
Margaret (b.1670); and Robert (b.1671). Andrew (17th C.) listed as being ‘in Little-Cavers’ among men declared as fugitives in 1684 for refusing to conform to Episcopalianism. Andrew (17th C.) resident of Dryden in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll. He is listed right after John, to whom he was presumably related. He is probably the Andrew who witnessed a baptism for Walter Miller in 1690 and another (along with John) in 1691 for Walter Murray (also in Dryden). He and John witnessed another baptism for Daniel Kedie in 1694. He could be the Andrew who married Bessie Dodds and had children in Ashkirk, including: Marion (b.1687); John (b.1690); Thomas (b.1693); and Andrew (b.1699). The witnesses in 1690 were John (probably a relative) and Thomas Kedie (who was also at Dryden). Andrew (17th C.) listed as resident at Mabonlaw on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Robert and Walter were also listed there and so surely related. Andrew (d.c.1698) recorded being ‘of Newhous’ in 1698 in a list of wills registered with the Commissariot of Peebles. This was probably the Newhouse in Lilliesleaf Parish. He could be the Andrew, who was resident in Lilliesleaf according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Andrew of Haining (17th/18th C.) son of John. He was served heir to his father in 1696, this including 2 cottage-lands at Lilliesleaf Mill as well as the Haining and other lands in Selkirkshire. In 1701 he (or perhaps his sister Madgalene) sold Haining to Andrew Pringle of Clifton. Andrew (17th/18th C.) tenant farmer at Goldielands. In 1702 he was recorded as ‘Subtenant in Goldilands’ when he witnessed a baptism for Walter Martin, tenant in Alton Croft. He also witnessed baptisms in 1703 for William Wilson in Fenwick, in 1704 for Robert Stoddart (tenant in the Flex) and for John Rutherford, in 1705 for Walter Wilson, for William Douglas of Bonjedward and for James Stevenson in Harwood, in 1706 for William Scott in Branxholme and for Robert Rutherford, in 1708 and William Scott (tenant in Whitchesters), for Robert Tudhope (herd in Over Southfield) in 1709 and for John Scott ‘Wyndhead’ and merchant William Black in 1711. He could be the Andrew who is recorded as an elder of Hawick Parish in 1711 and in 1718. Andrew (18th C.) merchant in Hawick. He witnessed a baptism in 1738. He married Marion Watson and their children included: William (b.1735); James (b.1737); Anne (b.1738); Agnes (b.1740); Helen (b.1743); and Andrew (b.1745). The witnesses in 1738 were William Ogilvie in Hoscote and John Scott ‘late Bailie’ and in 1743 were ex-Bailie John Scott and writer Thomas Winthrope. Andrew (18th C.) signatory of the document signed by 56 people at Raperlaw in 1732, protesting against acts of the General Assembly and being connected with the Secession. He was probably a resident of Liliesleaf. Some children who could be his are Magdalene (b.1738), George (b.1741), Janet (b.1744), Andrew (b.1748), Magdalene (b.1754), Robert (b.1756), George (b.1760) and Janet (b.1766). Andrew (18th C.) resident of Liliesleaf. He married Jean Telfer and their son Walter was baptised in 1770. Andrew (18th C.) resident of Liliesleaf. He married Margaret Riddell and their children included: Thomas (b.1771); and Margaret (b.1772). Andrew (18th/19th C.) tailor in Liliesleaf. His son George was baptised in 1789. Other children who may be his include Andrew (b.1784), Andrew (b.1785), James (b.1787), Jean (b.1794) and Magdalene (b.1799). Probably the same Andrew is recorded in Liliesleaf in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. An account of his to Thomas Inglis from 1794–96 is preserved in the Walter Ma- son Collection. Andrew (b.1796/7) from Selkirk, he was farmer at North Synton. He is recorded there in 1851 farming 450 acres, employing 10 labourers and in 1861, as farmer of 400 acres, employing 9 men. He was still recorded there in a directory of 1868. His wife was Elizabeth and their children included Mary, Agnes, John (who took over the farm), Jane, George and Janet. Rev. Archibald (1635–1708) 3rd son of Sir Walter, 2nd Baronet of Riddell, and brother of Sir John, 3rd Baronet. He graduated from Edinburgh University in 1656 and became minister at Kippen by about 1670. However, these were turbulent times and he came to be persecuted as a preacher of field conventicles. In 1677 he was one of 5 ministers who preached for 3 days in a field at East Nisbet for 3000 people. He was said to have taken part in conventicles locally and like his brother William, he was imprisoned for his Covenanting principles. In 1680 he was captured by Col. Henry Ker of Graden, a prominent Jacobite, while returning from Moffat Well. He was imprisoned in Jedburgh, after his watch, sword and money were taken from him. He was then taken to Edinburgh Tolbooth, and examined 3 separate times, although nothing could be found to connect him with the Battle of Bothwell Brig. Nevertheless, he refused to take the oath, and so after 9 months was moved to the Bass Rock, spending 3 years there. In 1681 he was allowed to visit his dying mother at Riddell House and was only finally released on condition of sailing to the plantations in America, his wife dying on the journey. He served as minister at Woodbridge in New Jersey (for fellows slaves) for about 3 years, returning to Scotland after the Revolution. However, the ship he was on, bound for Scotland, was seized by the French, and he was held prisoner (along with his 6 year old son) in deplorable conditions in a French dungeon for 2½ years before being exchanged for 2 Catholic priests. He was then minister of Wemyss, Kirkcaldy and Trinity College (Edinburgh). His first wife was Helen, daughter of Rev. Henry Aitkenhead of North Berwick and his 2nd wife was Jean Ker. His children included: Capt. Walter (d.1738), who retook his ship ‘the Phoebe’ from the French, acquired the Barony of Granton and was probably the son who was captive in France with his father; Dr. John (d.1740), an Edinburgh physician; Janet, who married James, son of Sir James Dundas; and Sarah, who married Rev. John Currie of Oldhamstocks. His sister Alison, married Gabriel Semple, who was another well known field preacher. He was buried at Old Greyfriars Churchyard in Edinburgh. Archibald (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Malie Nichol and their children included James (b.1684). Archibald (17th/18th C.) resident of Borthaugh. His daughter Isobel was baptised in Wilton Parish and known as ‘Riddell the Piper’. He is probably the same Archibald listed as resident of Castleside (near Branxholme) on the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Archibald (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish who married Margaret Lamb. Their daughter Beatrīx was baptised in 1703. Robert (b.1706) was probably also his child. Sir Auskittel of Riddell (d.c.1180) 2nd Laird. He was probably son of Gospatrik of Brawby and brother of Walter and Robert. However, other accounts suggest he was son of Philip and brother of Gervase, Walter and Ralph. A bull of Pope Adrian IV in 1156 records him as brother and heir to Walter of Riddell in the lands of ‘Wituness, Lilisclive, Braehebe, et cetera’ (Whitton in Hownam Parish, Lilliesleaf and Brawby in Yorkshire). A papal bull from the next Pope also confirmed these lands, and refers to his son and heir as Walter. Hence he was also either brother or nephew of Gervase. In 1159 he witnessed a charter of confirmation granted to the monks of Kelso by Malcolm IV. There was also an agreement between him and Uchtred, priest of Lilliesleaf, confirmed by Pope Alexander III in about 1160. In about 1208 Robert of Barnoldby confirmed his grant of Whitton (in Hownam Parish) to Melrose Abbey; these lands were granted for his soul, as well as those of Patrick and his son Walter. He married either Ascernia de Stonegrave or Elean, daughter of Robert de Morville (or perhaps both). His name is written ‘Askitil’, ‘Anskettel’, ‘Ansketill’, ‘Ansketin’, ‘Octiel’, etc. The next generation appears to be confused, with different charters stating that Patrick and William were both sons. It seems likely that his children included Walter, William, Patrick, Eda and Maud. Another son may have been Ralph, but this is less clear. He may also have had a daughter who married ‘Henricus de Haga’, one of the early Haigs of Bemersyde. Borthwick (b.1800/1) 2nd son of Robert and brother of Henry Scott, he was born in Teviotdale. He was farmer at Dryden in Ashkirk Parish. He was a player of the bagpipes, and known as ‘Riddell the Piper’. He was said to be the best player of the small pipes in the Borders. He played at the wedding of a son of the Duke of Buccleuch and when a daughter of the Earl of Minto married Lord John Russell. There is a record of him being at a celebration (for the return of a Teri from America) in the Fleece Inn in the late 1840s at which he sang ‘Clean pease strae’. He published at least one poem and there is a tune called ‘Borthwick Riddell’s Hornpipe’. He was at Dryden in 1841 and in 1851 he was farming 60 arable acres and 300 acres of hill land.
He was already a widower by 1851. Maj. Charles of Muselie (1759–1849) eldest surviving son of Patrick and Margaret Balfour. He was listed on the roll of electors for Roxburghshire in 1780. He is probably the ‘Charles Riddell in Sinton a Batchelor’ who was taxed for having a female servant in 1786 and ‘Charles Riddal in Sinton’ taxed for both male and female servants in 1787–93; he thus must have lived at Sinton for a while. He was also at Sinton on the 1785–92 Horse Tax Rolls. He was owner of Muselee in 1788 (when it was in Roberton Parish, valued at £100), as well as part of Bewlie (valued at £330), lands that had formerly been owned by the feuars of Lilliesleaf (valued at £106 13s 4d), Ryechester and Quartersides (purchased from Hunter of Linthill, valued at £50) and teinds in Lilliesleaf (valued at £95 1s 2d). He was listed as a voter in Roxburghshire in 1788, and was then described as being ‘Once in Buccleugh’s Fencibles. A brother a Writer. Moderate estate. A batchelor’. In 1793 he received some lands in Dryburgh from Henry Erskine of Sheffield. He was Major (or perhaps Colonel) in the local militia. He was listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805 and 1819. He was recorded as a freeholder in the Michaelmas Head-Court of Jedburgh in 1811 and was listed as owner of Muselee on the 1811 Land Tax Rolls. Sometime before 1813 he sold some lands in Lilliesleaf Parish (including Ryechester and Quartersides) to Sir John Buchanan Riddell of that Ilk, but still held onto the main lands of Bewlie there. He served as Chamberlain to the Duke of Buccleuch, dealing with rents in Roxburghshire, Selkirkshire, Peeblesshire and Eskdale, in the period 1808–36; he was then replaced by William Ogilvie. During some of that period he lived at Branxholme, and was present at the banquet held in the Duke of Buccleuch’s honour in 1839. He was a member of the Forest Club. He was made an Honorary Burgess of Hawick in 1823 and in 1825 subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’. In 1830 he chaired the meeting of the freeholders of Roxburghshire at which Henry Francis Scott, younger of Harden was re-elected as M.P. He was listed among the landowners in Roberton Parish in 1841. He lived to be about 90 (although there is some uncertainty over his birth date) and died unmarried. Muselee was inherited by his niece. David (16th C.) recorded in 1562 as a tenant in Clerklands. Robert Hastie acting as factor in Lilliesleaf acknowledged receipt of the teinds from him and other tenants of Greatlaws and ‘Clerklandes’. Elizabeth ‘Bessie’ (16th/17th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf. In 1628 she gave evidence regarding the trial of Isobel Howison for witchcraft. She stated that she fetched Howison to see the child of Andrew Riddell, but she ‘wold not come but bade looke weill to the bairne and thairafter the bairne dyed schortlie’. Elizabeth ‘Bessie’ (16th/17th C.) married to George Robinson, from the Lilliesleaf area. She is probably distinct from the other Bessie in Lilliesleaf, since both of them gave separate evidence in the 1628 trial for witchcraft of Isobel Howison. She said that when Howison had been giving a charm to the son of William Middledemas, she then came into her house looking for her child, ‘and att that tyme the bairne tooke suddenlie seeknes after this Issobell Howetsone reproved hir for saying sho had done some evill to hir bairne and within halfe a year hir bairne tooke seeknes and dyed’. Francis (18th C.) resident of Kirkton and Cavers Parishes. He was living at Crook in 1737. He married Martha Oliver in Kirkton Parish in 1733 and their children included: Agnes (b.1734), baptised in Kirkton; William (b.1737), baptised in Cavers; Helen (b.1741), also baptised in Cavers; and Margaret (b.1744), baptised in Hawick. He could be the son of William baptised in Hawick in 1710. Francis ‘Frank’ (b.1724) born in Hawick, and said to be descended from the Riddells of that Ilk. He worked as a gardener. The details of his family were recorded in a bible belonging to the Fairgrieve family in Bridgeton, Maine. In 1746 he married Annie Neal. Their children included: John (b.1758), who was a gardener and sexton; and Walter (b.1760), who moved to Carlisle. He may be the same man as Francis in Ashkirk Parish. Francis (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He is recorded at Whitslade in 1753 when his son William was baptised in Roberton Parish. Probably the same Francis married Janet Miller and had children, baptised in Ashkirk, including Helen (b.1755). Walter (b.1749), Janet (b.1751) and William (b.1753), baptised in Roberton, were probably also his children. Geoffrey (12th/13th C.) had a charter giving a pasture in Primside to Kelso Abbey during the reign of William I, probably between 1185 and 1204. He also witnessed a charter to Melrose Abbey by Anselm de Mow in the period 1170–90. He was probably related to other Riddells, and appears to have been from Roxburghshire. He may be the same as one of the other contemporary Geoffreys, although a direct connection with the Lilliesleaf branch seems likely. Geoffrey (12th/13th C.) probably descended from Hugh, Lord of Blaye in England, with his mother also being an English Riddell. He appears to have united the lands of Wittering and Cranston. Through his wife Havissa, daughter of William Peverel, he gained further lands in Essex. He was succeeded by another Geoffrey (or Galfridus). Geoffrey (12th/13th C.) referred to as ‘Gaufred de Riddell’, he was a younger son of Sir Patrick. He received some of his father’s lands during the reign of Alexander II. Geoffrey (12th/13th C.) from Berwickshire. Some time before 1233 he was witness to a document for Coldingham Priory. In about 1232 the Priory of Durham granted the marriage of his heir and custody of the lands of Flemington (in Lanarshire) to Sir William of Bondington. It is unclear how he was related to other Riddells. Geoffrey (13th C.) son and heir of John, with his mother being ‘Hauwysia’, according to a plea of 1235, relating to lands in Buckinghamshire. His wife was ‘Mabilia’ who has sasine of the lands of ‘Belyn’ and ‘Olerun’. He may be the same as one of the other Geoffreys. Geoffrey (d.1261) head of the main line of Riddells in England, son of Geoffrey. He held the Lordships of Wittering and Blaye, as well as Cranston in Scotland. He is recorded in connection to the peace settlements between England and France. He is recorded in a document at Dunwich in 1258. He was succeeded by his son Geoffrey. Geoffrey (d.c.1288) eldest son of Galfridus and head of the main English family branch. He is mentioned with reference to the conflicts between England and France, and probably still had connections with Scotland. He is recorded in a document relating to lands in Norfolk and Suffolk in 1262. His sons probably included Geoffrey, Sir Hugh and Sir Nicholas. Geoffrey (d.1319) eldest son of Galfridus, whom he succeeded in 1288 to the Barony of Blaye in England. He also possessed Wittering, as well as Cranston in Scotland, and probably other lands. He is listed as ‘Galfridus Ridel’ in a 1297 mandate to restore lands to Scotsmen who had sworn fealty to King Edward. He had a daughter, Alicia, but the family estates went to his brother Sir Hugh. Geoffrey of Riddell (d.c.1325) possibly son of Sir William and brother of William, whom he succeeded as 8th of that Ilk, although these generations are uncertain. He was also known as ‘Galfridus’, a family name that connects him with his Norman ancestors. He was probably succeeded by his son William, while Sir Robert and Richard may also have been his sons. He may have had a daughter who married John Ainslie of Dophinston. He may be the same ‘Geoffry Ridel’ recorded in 1297 when his lands in both England and Scotland were restored by Edward I because he was in that King’s service abroad; in 1298 the same man was recorded as valet of Simon Fraser, when they were both with Edward in Flanders. He made gifts to Kelso and Melrose Abbeys during the reign of Alexander III. Sir Geoffrey (d.1346) son of Sir Hugh, head of the main English line. He was Baron of Montclaire and Lord of Wittering and Cranston. He fought against Robert the Bruce, and lost his Scottish possessions afterwards. He was succeeded by his son, Sir Hugh, who petitioned to have his Scottish lands returned, but this was unsuccessful. George (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1514 receiving the Clerkship of Lilliesleaf Kirk from the Bishop of Glasgow, succeeding the deceased Thomas Riddell. Note that the Clerk at that time was like the assistant priest. He was listed as a scholar and was no doubt a younger son of the Laird of Riddell. In 1522 he was succeeded by John, son of John Riddell of that Ilk. George of that Ilk (16th C.) son of John, he was succeeded by Walter, who was either his son or his nephew. It may be that he was acting as Laird during the dotage of his father, but this is unclear. He could be the George who witnessed a document for the dispute between Scotts and Veitches over Synton in 1531. He was part of an inquest held in Jedburgh in 1533 when he was heir apparent to his father. In 1535 he was son and heor of John of that Ilk when he presented a precept of sasine for lands in Purveshill; his wife was there stated to be Elizabeth Ker. He may have been the George who was ‘Bailie in that part’, along with William, according to a document of 1535 relating to Harden (into which family at least one of his aunts had married). It is possible he pre-deceased his father, but in any case the next in succession was Walter (but it is unclear if he was his son or other male relative). George (16th C.) recorded in 1539 as a subtenant of Margaret Falside and Walter Scott in their lands in either Ashkirk or Falside. George (16th C.) recorded in 1579 being in ‘wester Eschiside’ (presumably Essenside) when he witnessed a transaction in Selkirk. This was for the sale of a piece of land in Lilliesleaf by James Redford in Hassendeanburn. George (16th C.) recorded being ‘in Riddale in Lillisle’ in 1580 in a marriage contract for his daughter Isabel. She was to marry George Rutherford in Bewlie, with the agreement that if no heirs were produced and George died first, then she was to have half of his possessions and get the ‘toquer-gud’ back (consisting of 3 draught oxen, 3 cows with calves, 20 sheep and 20 merks). The witnesses were his son John, Robert in Clerklands, John in Lilliesleaf Mill and James Henderson in Lilliesleaf. George (17th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He married Janet Phau in 1679 and their son William was baptised in 1681. The witnesses were James Shiel and James Sanderson. He is probably the George who witnessed a baptism for William Todshaw in 1686. George (d.c.1688) tenant in Lustruther when his will was recorded in 1688. George (18th C.) recorded at Newton in Kirkton Parish when his daughter Peggy was baptised in 1787. He was surely related to John, who was farmer there at the same time. George (d.bef. 1809) resident of Howahill. His son Robert (a wright) died in Hawick parish in 1809. He may be the George who married Margaret Hobkirk in Hobkirk Parish in 1769. George William Hutton (1807–71) son of George Hutton of Carlton-on-Trent and Frances Mitford. He was a banker of Newmarket-on-Trent and Magistrate for Notts, Carlton-on-Trent. In 1835 he married Mary, who was heiress of Muselee, being daughter of Walter and niece of Maj. Charles. He assumed the additional surname of ‘Riddell’ in order to inherit the lands through his wife. These lands included Whitfield in Wilton Parish. After Mary died, he secondly married Hannah-Elizabeth, widow of J.O. Lambert, and theridly married Janetta-Gonville Bromhead, Barones. He was succeeded by his son, also George William, and had another son, Edward Mitford. The surname in these couple of generations is often hyphenated as ‘Hutton-Riddell’. Capt. George William Hutton (1836–1915) son of George William Hutton, who had married Mary Riddell, the niece and heiress of Charles of Muselee. He thus inherited the Muselee lands and may later have lived there. He was educated at Rugby and was a Captain in the 16th Lancers. He sold the Dryburgh estate, as well as Bewlie and Bewlie Moor. He served as a Commissioner of Supply and Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. In about 1874 he is listed as owner of Todshaw and Muselee in Roberton Parish, as well as Whitfield in Wilton Parish. In 1877 he married Evelyn Mary Craven, daughter of the Earl of Craven. Their children included Capt. George Hutton and William Hutton, who was an artist. His name is sometimes hyphenated ‘Hutton-Riddell’. Gervase (11th/12th C.) one of the earliest Scottish family members, likely moving north along with other supporters of King David I. His name was recorded as ‘Gervasius’ or ‘Geraisus’. He was probably son of Philip, and surely from the Norman ‘de Rydale’ family who held lands in England. He witnessed a charter of David I in 1116. He was made High Sheriff of Roxburgh about the same time, the earliest known in that office. He is recorded as Sheriff in a charter of 1138/9 and witnessed several other charters for King David in the early 1140s. He may have married Christian de Souls, who was a donor to Jedburgh Abbey, giving a third part of the village of ‘Hernwingslawe’ (possibly Mervinslaw). He and his brother Radulf (or Ralph) gave the church of Abbotrule to Jedburgh Abbey (although it is also suggested that this was Abbotsley in Huntingdonshire). A son Hugh is said to have been the progenitor of the Riddells of Cranston Riddell (although the origin of that branch is a matter of debate). His son (or possibly brother) Walter was granted a charter of the lands of Lilliesleaf. He may have had other children, including ‘Jordanus’ and Adeliza (who married Henry ‘de Haga’, 3rd Laird of Bemersye). He died at Jedburgh Abbey, probably following the custom in those days of the rich and secular bestowing gifts on ecclesiastical institutions in return for atonement. It is also suggested that he may have been unrelated to Walter ‘de Riddale’, and was instead ancestor of the Riddells of Cranston Riddell, who did not use the ‘de’ prefix in their name. Henry ‘Harry’ (d.bef. 1670) eldest son of Walter. He was ‘portioner’ of Bewlie from 1663. He witnessed a contract for lands in Hobkirk Parish along (for Lorraine of Appotside) with his father in 1654 and others in 1656 and 1659. He also witnessed the last testament of William Elliot of Harwood in 1662. The Archbishop of Glasgow ratified his lands at Bewlie in 1665 and in the same year there was an agreement between his tenants James Wright, Walter and George Davidson with the tenant of John Riddell of Muselee over boundaries between them. He was deceased by 1670 when his son and heir William inflected his widow in the five-pound land of Bewlie. He married Janet, daughter of William Scott of Horsleyhill in 1562. His children were William, Marion and Agnes (whose ‘tutor’ was Walter Riddell, younger of Riccalton). In 1686 Agnes married John Nisbet, lawyer in Edinburgh; she was later heir to her brother William. Rev. Henry Scott (1789–1862) son of Henry, merchant in Glasgow. He was a contemporary of the author of ‘Scotland Yet’ and so sometimes confused with him. He originally trained as a lawyer, being apprenticed to James Thomson and becoming Writer to the Signet in 1811. He resigned his Commission in 1825 and retrained as a minister, being licensed by the Presbytery of Selkirk in 1829, ordained at Longformacus in 1830 and translated to Duns in 1843. In 1818 he married Agnes, daughter of Archibald Gilchrist of Edinburgh. In 1831 he secondly married Elizabeth, youngest daughter of John Home of Stirkoke in Caithness. Rev. Henry Scott (1798–1870) minister and song-writer. He was born at Sorbie in Ettrick (there is some confusion over the year of his birth), his parents Robert Riddell and Agnes Scott, being from Teviotdale. His father was a shepherd, who moved from Sorbie to Langshawburn in East Lothian (when he was a child), later moving to Capplefoot (Hoddam Parish) then Deloraine in Selkirkshire. He had brothers who later lived at Dryden, near Selkirk, and Brookie in East Lothian (this elder brother moving to Ramsaycleuchburn). He was educated in short stints at Davington, Roberton and Newmill and heard James Hogg, the ‘Ettrick Shepherd’ singing in his house when he was a child. At about age 15 he became shepherd at Deloraine, 2 years later moving to Todrig, where he got to know William Knox. After his father died, when he was 18, he resolved to study for the ministry, and so attended Biggar School and later Edinburgh University (and St. Andrews for a year), eventually being licensed by Biggar Presbytery in 1830. It was at Biggar that he became to be known as a poet, publishing ‘The Crook and Plaid’, and several articles for ‘The Clydesdale Magazine’. Before finishing with university he published ‘The Songs of the Ark’, which represents his longest poetic work on a single theme. He moved to live with his brother at Ramsaycleuchburn (near Teviothead) in 1831. After the local minister died, he was appointed as preacher at Caerlenrig Chapel of Ease (i.e. Teviothead Church) in 1832 (or perhaps 1833). He stayed at the Flex in his early years, walking 9 miles to church, and writing several songs there, including ‘The Hames of Our Ain Folk’. The Duke of Buccleuch later built him a cottage at Teviothead, where he remained for the rest of his life (and where he died). He was listed at Caerlenrig in Pigot’s 1837 directory. In 1839 he helped with the description of Cavers Parish, written by Rev. Strachan for the New Statistical Account. In 1841 he suffered what would now be called a nervous breakdown, and spent more than 3 years in the Crichton Royal Institution at Dumfries (he was missing for the 1841 census). He then returned to Teviothead, but did not resume his full ministerial duties, with other preachers taking over some of his duties until the first minister of the newly created Teviothead Parish was appointed in 1850. In 1844 he published a doctrinal volume, and in 1847 he published a volume of collected verse, as well as an extensive essay on the Ettrick Shepherd (with a later article for the Archaeological Transactions. Many of his poems, written at Teviothead, were first published in the Hawick Advertiser. In later years he became involved with the Border Counties Association, became interested in local archaeological excavations and wrote about Cavers Parish for the Sinclair’s ‘Statistical Account of Scotland’. He took part in several events in Hawick, including the Burns Centenary, laying the foundation stone of the Old Parish Church, giving lectures, and awarding the prizes for the Auld Brig poetry competition. He was also Bard for the St. John’s Masonic Lodge of Hawick, and his masonic brethren visit Teviothead annually to remember him. He was presented with a harp (inspired by the lines of ‘Scotland Yet’) by Bailie Paterson in 1859 (and this is now in the Museum). William Scott also presented Mrs. Riddell with an oil painting of her husband (perhaps the portrait by John A. Horsburgh, which is in the Museum). Another portrait (by Lancelot Watson in 1889) hangs in the Museum, which also has his home-made compass and caliper set, as well as his shepherd’s crook. He was still recorded at Teviothead Cottage in a directory of 1868. His attempts at biblical translation into Lowland Scots (printed privately for Prince Louis Lucien Bonaparte) were an early philological influence on James Murray. He was writer of the words for ‘Scotland Yet’, probably Scotland’s most popular song of the latter half of the 19th century, and considered by many as the national anthem of its day (and recorded by Scocha in 2004). His publications include ‘Stanzas on the Death of Lord Byron’ (1825), ‘Songs of the Ark; with other poems’ (1832), ‘The Christian Politician; or the Right Way of Thinking’ (1844), ‘Poems, Songs and Miscellaneous Pieces’ (1847), ‘St. Matthew translated into Lowland Scotch’ (1856), ‘Book of Psalms in Lowland Scotch’ (1857), ‘The Song of Solomon in Lowland Scotch’ (1858), ‘The Poetical Works of Henry Scott Riddell’ (2 volumes, 1871) and ‘Scotland Yet and Other Verses’ (1898). His translations of biblical passages into ‘Lowland Scotch’ are interesting for the wealth of dialect words that they contain; however, with little precedent to build on, the translations are a strange mixture of genuine Borders vernacular, words taken from... earlier Scots works and oddly spelled English. In all, he composed over 200 songs, with manuscripts unpublished at his death including ‘Malcolm of Wharden’, ‘Melvina of Eller’ and ‘The Dutiful Daughter’, this last being a play in 5 acts. In addition he published an article on ‘Store-Farming in the South of Scotland’ and another on ‘Footrot in Sheep’. In 1833 he married Eliza (1796–1875), daughter of William Clark, merchant in Biggar. Their children were: Walter Francis Montagu Douglas (1834–77), obviously named after his patron, who worked for the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank; William Brown Clark (1836–56), who was a poet of some promise, but died at the age of 20; and Robert H. (c.1840–87), who was a sheep-farmer in Australia; Richard, who was a poet of some promise, but died at the age of 20; and Robert H. (c.1840–87), who was a poet of some promise, but died at the age of 20.

Sir Hugh (13th C.) signatory of the Ragman Rolls of 1296, where he is listed as ‘Domimus Hugo Rydel, miles’. He is probably the 2nd son of Geoffrey, who succeeded to the estates of the main branch of the English Riddells on the death of his brother, also Geoffrey. He also held the lands of Cranston in Scotland. It appears that for staying too long in Scotland, King Edward II took away his lands of Wittering and gave them to his son Geoffrey. However, he had other lands in Northumberland, obtained from his kinsman Sir William. He is probably the ‘Master Hugh de Rydale’ who is recorded in a Northumberland document of 1270. He is recorded in the Ragman Rolls of 1296. From Edinburgh, his entry is separate from ‘Dominus Hugo’. But he could be the same man as the entry for ‘Hughe Rydel, tenant le Roi, du Comte de Edeneburgh’. His seal consists of ‘a pile in base and a chief’ with the name ‘S’HVGONIS RYEDEL’. Hugh (13th/14th C.) holder of the manor of ‘Wytering’ (i.e. Wittering) in Northamptonshire. He granted it to his son and heir Geoffrey in 1296, but was dispossessed in 1296 as a supported of John Baliol, when he was ‘in Scotland’. He could be the Hugh who was recorded in Berwick in 1296. In 1315 he was ‘Rydel, sometime lord of Wytering’ when his grant to his son was confirmed by Edward II. He is surely the same as one of the Hughes who signed the Ragman Rolls. He was probably the Hugh son of Richard recorded at Newcastle in a plea for lands in Cumberland in 1269. He may have been grandson of the Hugh, whose widow Sibilla was recorded in document relating to ‘Wyterine’ in Northamptonshire in 1233 and 1254. Hugh (13th/14th C.) recorded as ‘Hughe de Rydal’ when he was involved in a raid on a house in Berwick in 1296. Probably the same Hugh was recorded in 1310/1 when his wife Mary Conyn asked for support for her and her family at Berwick.
others in Northamptonshire. He petitioned to recover the Scottish lands of Cranston lost by his father. He died without issue, whereupon his lands were inherited by Sir Nicholas, whose grandfather Sir Nicholas was his grandfather's brother. After that the representative of this main family line was Sir John, who did briefly recover Cranston, but must have sold or list it shortly afterwards. At this point the senior branch of the family in Scotland became the Riddells of that Ilk, based in Lilliesleaf. Hugh (16th C.) recorded in Selkirk in 1534 as 'sir Hugh Riddail'. He was presumably a cleric of some sort. Isobel (17th C.) daughter of James, portioner of Lilliesleaf and wife of Adam Haig in Belses. In 1656 she was served heir to her father in his 16-shilling land within Lilliesleaf. Isobel (17th/18th C.) recorded receiving money from Ashkirk Parish in 1727. James of that Ilk (d.c.1510) probably grandson of Quentin or perhaps Mungo, or perhaps son of Mungo and grandson of Quentin. He also had a brother, Thomas. His ancestry can be traced back to 'Geraisus de Rydale', who married Christiana de Soulis in the early 12th century; but from this point on the genealogy is much more secure. He was one of the first of the family to be referred to as 'of that Ilk', although the lands near Lilliesleaf were in the family for many previous generations. In 1471 he inherited the lands of 'Quhittounis' (i.e. 'Whitton' near Morebattle) and 'Westerlillisclef' (i.e. Wester Lilliesleaf). He is probably the 'James Riddale' who was witness to a Cranston sasine for Denholm Mains in 1465/6 and the 'James Riddale' who witnessed the 're-tour' for the Kers and the lands of Borthwicksheils in 1471. In 1477/8 he made an arrangement with John Waugh, over the lands of 'Unirquhitone', clearing debts with William Pringle; James kept Under Whitton, while John received lease of a 'husbandland' of land in 'Esterleleselef'. In 1478/9 Margaret Murray resigned her lands of 'Unirquhitone' to him. And in 1478 he is referred to as 'of that Ilk' when he leased 'Plewolande' in 'Ovrquyttoun' to John Davidson in return for borrowing money. He also witnessed a charter to David, son of David Scott of Buccleuch for lands in Selkirk in 1478. In 1479 he witnessed a document for the Kers of Cessford. In 1483 he is recorded as 'Riddale of Quhittonwe' when witness to a document dealing with Denholm Mains. An instrument of resignation of 1485 is recorded for the lands of 'Unirquhitone' with the Davids sons. He also witnessed a sasine in 1487 for the lands of Boonraw. In 1489, along with Walter Ker of Cessford, he had a decree against him for not paying the teinds to Lilliesleaf Kirk. He was recorded as Laird of Riddell and Whitton in 1493 and in that same year was the Laird fined for non-presence at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh, with Gilbert 'Hoigsone' acting as his suitor. In 1494 he was 'Jacobum Riddale de Quhittoun' on the panel for the inheritance of Synton. He may have married Margaret, daughter of Sir James Lindsay. His children were: John, who succeeded; Margaret (d.1585), who married Walter Scott of Synton or perhaps Walter of Harden; and Christian, who also appears to have married Walter Scott of Harden. It also seems that there was a slightly earlier marriage between a widow of Riddell (said to have been a Kerr of Ferniehirst, probably Elizabeth) and a Scott of Harden; these marriages between Riddells and Scotts of Harden could be conflated. James (16th C.) younger son of John of that Ilk. A document in the Selkirk Protocol Books records how in 1545 he gave 30 shillings of land and half the houses of 'e ester place' (perhaps Easter Lilliesleaf) in liferent to his wife Janet Ker. The witnesses included George Ker of Gateshaw (probably related to his wife) and Walter (heir apparent to John of that Ilk). James (16th C.) recorded in Clerklands in 1563 when his son Robert witnessed a marriage agreement in Lilliesleaf in 1563. This was for William Davidson and made by Walter of that Ilk, who was probably a relative. James (16th C.) tenant in Maxton. In 1580 it is recorded that he had borrowed money from John in Newton Mill, but was unable to repay it, so with the consent of his wife Janet Ormiston and son Patrick, he gave sasine of half of St. Boswell's Mill to John. The instrument was signed at Riddell, before Robert, brother to Walter of that Ilk, and so it seems likely they were all related. On the same day in 1580 he also delivered £40 in redemption money to Robert, brother of Walter of that Ilk. The sasine was witnessed before David in St. Boswell's and William in Maxton. James of Maybole (17th C.) 3rd son of Andrew of that Ilk. It is unclear if his lands were at Maybole in Dumfriesshire or somewhere else. It has been suggested that he might have been ancestor of Robert, father of Rev. Henry Scott Riddell. James (d.bef. 1656) portioner of Lilliesleaf. In 1656 his daughter and heir Isobel, wife of Adam Haig in Belses, inherited his 16-shilling land within Lilliesleaf. James (17th C.) probably son of Walter, portioner of Bewlie, who resided at Appotside in the Rule valley. He was witness to discharges of Hobkirk teinds in 1659 and in 1660, when he was described as ‘of Harrit’ (presumably ‘Harwood’). In another document he signed as ‘son lawfull to Elispethe Haistie in Harwood’.

James (17th C.) resident of Hawick who married Janet Miller. Their children included Margaret (b.1646) and Bessie (b.1648). In 1648 he witnessed a baptism for Walter Douglas. James (17th C.) merchant listed among those contributing to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. James (17th C.) shepherd at ‘Bosathill’ (i.e. Bowset Hill) in Abbotrule Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He was ‘deficient’ in paying the tax, and his entry reads ‘to Inland’. James (17th C.) rented quarter of the farm of Wiltonburn from the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1690. He is also listed as resident at Wiltonburn on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. In 1694 his widow Bessie Scott was leasing a third of the farm of Wiltonburn; she may have been closely related to Robert Scott and John Scott, who were also farmers at Wiltonburn in 1694. In 1734 there is a record of the funeral of Bessie, who may have been his daughter (or wife). James (17th C.) recorded near Larriston on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He paid tax on 2 hearths, since he was recorded having a kiln. James (17th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was recorded at Wiltonburn when he got married in 1718 (with no wife’s name listed). James (18th C.) wright at Braxholme Park. He was there according to a Roberton baptism in 1737. In 1740 he was at ‘Park’ when he witnessed a Hawick baptism for William Brown and Helen Riddell (who may have been related to him). His children included Walter (b.1737), baptised in Roberton. His unnamed child was baptised in Hawick in 1740, with witnesses herd James Armstrong and John Brown. It is possible that he was the James who married Isobel Dryden in Roberton in 1732. James (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Deanburnhaugh in 1727 and 1729 and Borthwickbrae in 1734. In 1726 he married Isobel Williamson, who was from Stow. His children, baptised in Roberton Parish, probably included some of (with the rest likely being children of the wright at Braxholme Park): Thomas (b.1727); William (b.1729); Robert (b.1731); Helen (b.1733); Nelie (b.1734), although this baptismal entry appears to be crossed out; Margaret (b.1734); James (b.1735). James (18th C.) recorded at Menslaws in 1746 when his son William was baptised in Hawick Parish. His wife was Agnes Laidlaw. The witnesses were mason Andrew Wilson and merchant Francis Gledstains. James (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Janet Elliot and was at Priesthill in 1777 when his daughter Margaret was baptised. Col. James (d.1804) son of Sir Walter. He served in the army in Holland. He entered onto the Roxburghshire voters’ roll in 1780, when listed as a Lieutenant-Colonel. In 1788 he was listed with the same rank and ‘in the service of Holland’ among the voters of Roxburghshire associated with Sir John Scott of Ancrum (suggesting that he was given freehold of some land in order to vote in the county). He was later factor of the Riddell estates. He could be the James who is recorded owning half of Kirknowe in Hobkirk Parish in 1788. James (18th/19th C.) shepherd in Liddesdale. It is said that the family lived on the banks of the Liddel for many generations, and were related to the other Roxburghshire branches. His children were: James (b.1781), who emigrated to Canada; Henry; William; and Thomas. If the birthdate of the elder son is confused, then he could be the James who married Janet Elliot and whose children James (b.1791) and Henry (b.1794) are recorded in Castleton. Sir James Buchanan (1765–84) 8th Baronet of Riddell. He succeeded from his brother Sir Walter. He was a Lieutenant in the 1st Regiment of Foot Guards, but drowned while swimming in the River Brunswick at age 19 after being Baronet for only a few months. He was succeeded by his brother Sir John Buchanan. James (18th/19th C.) farmer at Leaheads in Wilton, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when he owned 3 horses. James (b.1781) son of Liddesdale shepherd James. If his birth date was really 1791, then he could be the son of James and Janet Elliot recorded in Castleton Parish. He joined the army and lived in Berwickshire. He married Isabella, daughter of George Hogg (and army officer) and Margaret Van Buren (from Hackensack, New Jersey). He was living at Ednam in 1835 when he emigrated to Canada with his family. His children included: James Van Buren, who died young; George Hogg, who also died young; and Dr. Alexander Dow (b.1824), who became a doctor in Compton, Quebec. James Scott (1780/1–1835) resident of Castleton Parish. He died at Larriston Rigg and was buried in Castleton. His children Isabella (1809/10–37) and John (d.1837) died of smallpox on board the Cornubria on the coast of New Brunswick. James (19th C.) married Isabelle Lillico in Hobkirk Parish in 1826. James (b.1807/8–bef. 61) born in Castleton, he was an agricultural labourer at Lochburnfoot in 1851. He married Jane (or Jean, b.1809), daughter of Castleton shepherd James Elliot. Their children included: Janet (b.1831); Eliza (1833-81), who married Andrew Stark; Christian (b.1835); William (b.1839); Mary (b.1842); James (b.1845), who married Jessie Scott; and Jane (b.1855). His wife was a widow living at Calabarun in 1861. James (b.1836) son of John Lamb and Agnes Riddell, was born at Timpendean. He was a grocer, butcher and farmer in the Morebattle area and later moved to Newcastle on Tees. In 1867 he married Elizabeth, daughter of Henry Cavers, carter in Newcastle. Their children were Adam, Violet Turnbull, Agnes Isabella, Elizabeth Jane, Margaret and Robina Cavers. James (b.1845) son of James and Jean Elliot, he was baptised in Kirkton Parish. He was a ploughman in Lilliesleaf and later a carter in Edinburgh. In Cavers Parish in 1866 he married Jessie (1844-99), daughter of James Scott and Agnes Bell. Their children were Agnes Giles (b.1867), James (b.1869), Jane (b.1871), Robert (b.1874), Janet (b.1874), Elizabeth (b.1880) and William (b.1886). Janet (17th C.) listed as resident at Wiltonburn among the ‘deficient’ on the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. Jean ‘Jeannie Ma Lord’ (18th/19th C.) married name Jean Oliver. Jean (1600–60) daughter of Andrew of that Ilk. She died unmarried and was buried in Jedburgh Abbey, with the inscription ‘Ere lies a religious and virtuous gentlewoman, Jean Riddell, daughter of Sir Andrew Riddell of that ilk, …’. Jean (b.c.1655) eldest daughter of Walter of Minto. She married Sir Robert Laurie, 1st Baronet of Maxwellton. They had 3 sons and 4 daughters, one of whom, Annie, was famed for her beauty. William Douglas of Fingland composed the verses ‘Annie Laurie’ in her honour in about 1700 (but failed to woo her, since she married Ferguson of Craigdarroch). John (d.of 1235) recorded in a plea of 1235, relating to lands in Buckinghamshire, involving his wife’s dower lands in ‘Hadecote’. His wife was ‘Hauwsia’ and his son and heir was Geoffrey. John (13th C.) recorded as ‘Johannem de Ridel’ in the assize roll of Northumberland in 1256. This was regarding a piece of land in Denton on the Tyne, which had also belonged to his father John. ‘Ela, uxor Johannis de Rydale’ is also recorded separately, and so either his wife or wife of another John. In the same records ‘Walterus de Chendal’ is accused of striking his servant, who was also called ‘Johannem de Ridal’. About the same time there was also a court case involving his mother ‘Hauysia de Newenham’ and her lands in ‘Rodewood’. John of Ayton (13th C.) recorded as witness to several charters involving the lands of Renton and Ayton in Berwickshire in about 1280. It is unclear how he was related to other early Riddells. John (15th C.) resident of lands in Lauder, recorded in 2 charters of 1501. John of that Ilk (d.c.1545) son of James. In 1502 he was ‘junior of that Ilk’ when listed along with Douglases and others from the Jedburgh area as people guilty of (and with remission for) attacking Sir William Colvile of Ochiltree. In 1503 he had sasine for the lands of Whitton and Wester Lilliesleaf. In 1507/8 he was a witness to the document for Scott of Whitchester relating to the tower ‘between the bridges’ in Hawick. In 1508 he was on the panel for Adam Hepburn inheriting the Lordship of Liddesdale. He may be the ‘Larde of Riddale’ who was on an assize in 1508/9 for convicting Andrew Ker and others at the Judiciary Court in Selkirk. He was a witness in 1529 to the indenture to reconcile the feuding Scotts and Kerrs. He may also be the John who in 1529/30 witnessed a pledge relating to crimes done against George of Linton by Robert Elliot ‘alias Flaskvod’. In 1531 he was an arbitrator for a feud between the Scotts and Vietches of Synton. He was listed in the Selkirk Protocol Books in 1532 as one of 2 arbiters for Walter Scott in Headshaw’s dispute with Isabel Murray. He granted part of the land at Lilliesleaf to Patrick Earl Bothwell in 1534. Also in 1534 he witnessed a transaction in Selkirk for John Waugh of Heap. In 1535 he was witness to a charter of George, Lord Hume, confirming the lands of Harden to William Scott of Harden, and was also witness to Simon Scott of Fenwick resigning Nether Harden to William Scott of Harden in 1540. In 1539 he witnessed a bond between Scotts regarding the illegitimacy of Thomas son of Adam Scott. He may be the Riddell of that Ilk who married Elizabeth Ker of Fairnilee (who later married William Scott of Harden and Todrig). He was possibly succeeded by his son George or his grandson Walter, but these generations are unclear. Documents of 1533 and 1535 list George as his heir apparent, while in 1545 (according to the Selkirk Protocol Book) his heir was then Walter (who must have been either his younger son, or son of George, and hence his grandson). His younger son James (who married Janet Ker) is also recorded in 1545. In 1551 the lands of Bewsie went to William, brother of his heir Walter; it is unclear whether he was already deceased at this time. Other possible children included John and William. In 1579 at Riddell his son Walter witnessed a transaction between Robert Scott of Allanhaugh and Walter Scott of Todrig, with his son Robert also a witness; the same day another son of his, Andrew, made an arrangement with Walter Scott of Todrig, with Andrew’s wife Margaret Ker, and her mother Elizabeth Ker, also mentioned. John (16th C.) son of John of that Ilk. In 1522 he succeeded George Riddell (probably his uncle or other near relative) as Clerk of Lilliesleaf Parish. This means he was acting as assistant Priest, or at least held a small benefice for this position. John (16th C.) recorded in 1580 being formerly in Ashkirk Mill when he witnessed a transaction in Selkirk. John (16th C.) tenant in Newton Mill. In 1580 it is recorded James in Maxton had borrowed money from him, but was unable to repay it, so with the consent of his wife and son, James gave him sasine of half of St. Boswell’s Mill. The instrument was signed at Riddell, before Robert, brother to Walter of that Ilk, and so it seems likely they were all related. He was in Newton when he witnessed a transaction in Selkirk in 1581. He may be the John in Dryburgh Mill recorded in Selkirk in 1581. In 1581 there was a marriage contract between his daughter Elizabeth and Thomas Cochrane, who was also in Newton. In 1581/2 he witnessed a transaction in Selkirk. John (16th C.) recorded in Lilliesleaf Mill in 1580 when he witnessed a marriage contract between Isabel, daughter of George in Lilliesleaf and George Rutherford in Bewlie. John (16th C.) son of George in Lilliesleaf. In 1580 he witnessed the marriage contract for his sister Isabel. Sir John 1st Baronet of Riddell (d.1636) eldest son of Andrew of that Ilk. In 1602 his father resigned lands in Lilliesleaf to him. In 1611 he was cautioner for Robert Davidson in ‘Fallawis’ and for Andrew Turnbull of Stanedge. In 1610 he and his father had a bond not to harm Walter Scott in Hawick (called of Todshaw) and other Scotts. In 1616 he had an inhibition from the Lords of Council regarding lands in Hownam. He was a juror at the 1623 Commissioners’ Court when he was still ‘appeirand of yat ilk’, and was voted as ‘chanceller’ of the assize. In 1623–24 he was involved in a court case over teinds for the lands of Over Whitton. In 1624 he was foreman of a jury in Edinburgh for a Liddesdale cattle-stealing case. In 1628 he was ‘apparent of that Ilk’ when charged to be part of a local Commission to hold courts. He was created a Baronet of Nova Scotia in 1628, with his lands erected into a barony and regality of New Riddell (comprising 16,000 acres on the Island of Anticosti in the Gulf of St. Lawrence). Also in 1628 he was one of the major landowners of Roxburghshire who convened to elect M.P.s., his name recorded as ‘Jhone Riddell feare of that Ilk’, his father still being the Laird of Riddell. These proceedings were quite protracted, and he even refused to serve when selected. In 1600 he married Agnes, daughter of Sir John Murray of Eddleston and Blackbarony; the husbands of her sisters included the Earl of Ancrum, Patrick Murray of Phgiliphaugh and Sir Patrick Scott of Thirlestane. Their children were: Sir Walter, who succeeded; Capt. John, an officer in the army in Holland; Sir William, who became Governor of Desborough or Doesburgh in Holland; Thomas; and Ann, who married Sir Thomas Ker of Cavers Carre. He secondly married Jane, daughter of Sir James Anstruther, widow of James Douglas, Commendator of Melrose Abbey; they had one daughter, who married David Barclay of Colernie. One of his daughters may have married John Scott of Gorrenberry. John of Muselee (17th C.) local landowner in the mid-to-late 1600s, also holding the lands of Bewlie. He was son of William and Bessie Ainslie and grandson of Andrew of that Ilk, and was served heir to his father in 1653. He was recorded paying £100 in land tax in Hawick Parish in 1663; he may also be the John who paid tax on £52 in Lilliesleaf Parish for part of Cringles. In 1665 his tenant John Dodds made an agreement with the tenants of Harry Riddell (portioner of Bewlie) over the boundaries between them. He had discharges with the Burgh of Selkirk in 1653 and 1662. In 1678 he was one of the Commissioners for Selkirkshire for raising money for the King. Also in 1678 he paid the land tax on Muselee in Hawick Parish and on part of Bewlie (formerly owned by the Turnbulls) in Lilliesleaf Parish. He appears to have married Elizabeth Haliburton in 1639 and only a few years later married Grezil, daughter of Rev. P. Schew. His children included William (who probably died young) and Patrick (who succeeded). He also had 3 daughters. John (17th C.) resident of Dryden in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll. He is listed along with Andrew, to whom he was presumably related. In 1691 he and Andrew witnessed a baptism for Walter Murray, who also lived at Dryden. He and Andrew witnessed another baptism for Daniel Kedie in 1694. In 1698 he is recorded as ‘Elder in Dryden’. He married Janet Matheson and their children included Jean (b.1698). John (17th C.) resident of Headshaw Mill in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll among the ‘deficient’ who can not be found out’. He may be the same John in Headshaw Mill who was also listed among ‘ye poor’. He may be the John who (along with James Kennedy, who lived at Ashkirk Mill) witnessed a baptism for William Donald in 1690. John (17th C.) recorded at Raperlaw in Lilliesleaf Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Sir John 3rd Baronet of Riddell (d.1700) son of Sir Walter. He was sometimes referred to as ‘Blue-beard’ because he had 4 wives. He was served heir to his father (and grandfather Sir John) in 1669, including several lands in Lilliesleaf Parish and elsewhere. In 1678 he paid the land tax in Morebattle and Hownam Parishes, as well as tax on land valued at £1765 in Lilliesleaf Parish (having sold Riddell Mill, but purchased lands from the feuars of Lilliesleaf). In 1682 he was listed among the heritors of the Regality of Melrose. He was apparently a zealous Covenanter, being imprisoned (in the Tolbooth of Haddington) for his principles, and probably also for supporting his brother, Rev. Archibald. In 1684 he was fined the most of any Roxburghshire heritor, the huge sum of £52,000. However, he received a remission from the King in 1687. He was on the Commission of Supply for Roxburghshire in 1690. He was also appointed as an additional Parliamentary Commissioner (i.e. an M.P.) for Roxburghshire in 1690 and served until his death. He married Agnes, daughter of Gideon Scott of Highchester and Harden in 1659. She received lands in Whiton ‘in liferent’ from his father in 1659. She must not have survived long, since in 1661 he secondly married Helen, daughter of Sir Alexander Morrison of Preston Grange; they had a son and a daughter together. He thirdly married Margaret Swinton of that Ilk, with whom he had another son and daughter. And lastly the widow of Watt of Roschill, formerly Miss Hepburn (this only about a year before his death). His children were: Sir Walter, who succeeded; Christian, who married Henry, eldest son of Sir Patrick Nisbet of Dean; William (d.1700), who died without children; and Margaret. He may also have had a daughter Helen, who married Robert Kerr of Cavers Carre, and another son, Alexander. John (17th C.) resident of Minto Kames who appears in the Hearth Tax records of 1694. John (17th C.) listed as cottar at Mervinslaw among the ‘deficient’ on the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. John (17th C.) listed ‘eist the water’ among those paying the Hearth Tax in Hawick in 1694. He may be the John who witnessed a baptism for wright Francis Gledstains in 1682, and another for Walter Lorraine and Bessie Riddell (who was probably related to him). He could be the John who married Anna Agnes Dickson, and whose children, baptised in Hawick, included William (b.1679), Robert (b.1681), Helen (b.1684) and Walter (b.1686). John of Haining (d.bef. 1696) son of Andrew of Haining and grandson of the first Riddell (of Riddell) to hold the Haining estate. He was served heir to his father in 1643. He was recorded in the county valuation in 1643, his part of Bewlie being valued at £60. In 1659 there was a dispute with Selkirk over ‘whether corn and wood cut on the Common was for the use of English soldiers’. In 1660 there was a complaint about a servant of his taking divots from Selkirk Common. He was appointed Justice of the Peace in 1663 and Parliamentary Commissioner (i.e. M.P.) for Selkirkshire in 1665. He is probably the Laird of Haining recorded in the 1663 Land Tax Rolls, along with his mother, when they paid tax on £390 in Lilliesleaf Parish. He was Sheriff Principal and also Provost of Selkirk. In 1667 he was involved in a dispute over rights on Selkirk Common and there was a ‘bond of inhibition’ with the Burgh. In 1671 he made an agreement for setting up a stud of horses for the King’s use. He was on the Commission of Supply for Selkirkshire in 1678, 1685 and 1690. His grand-daughter Magdalene married David Erskine of Dun and sold the estate to the Pringles. He was succeeded by his son Andrew, who was served as his heir in 1696. John (17th C.) resident at Whithope according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He was taxed for three hearths, since he was ‘wt tuo kilns’. This suggests he was a miller or some other kind of tradesman. He was probably related to Walter, who was at Whithope Mill in at least 1714–29. John of Muselee (17th/18th C.) eldest son of Patrick and Maria Elliot. He is recorded in a document of 1710 involving an exchange of the lands of Bewlie in Lilliesleaf Parish with John Nisbet. In 1707 he and John Nisbet were assigned a new loft in Lilliesleaf Kirk. In 1715 and 1716 he witnessed baptisms for Alexander Scott of Synton. In 1706 in Ashkirk Parish he married Margaret, eldest daughter of Walter Riddell from Lilliesleaf, who was tenant farmer at North Synton. Their children were: Patrick (b.1707), who succeeded; Walter (b.1709); Andrew: William (b.1713), who moved to Berwick, where he became a successful merchant; Barbara (b.1715); John (b.1717); Alexander (b.1719), baptised at North Synton; James (b.1721); Mary (b.1723); Thomas (b.1724), who was also a merchant in Berwick; and an unnamed daughter. He is probably the John ‘of Mewslie’ recorded as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1761. John (17th/18th C.) farmer at Minto Mill, probably related to the local Lairds. He is recorded in 1710 when his son Patrick became a barber’s apprentice in Edinburgh. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Salenside in 1710 when his son James was baptised in Roberton Parish in 1710. Perhaps the same James was at Borthaugh in 1712 when his daughter Isobel was baptised in Roberton Parish. Anna (b.1701), baptised in Roberton, may also have been his child. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He was recorded as a servant in Commonside in 1708. He married Janet Young and their children included: Robert (b.1708); an unnamed child (b.1719); Walter (b.1722); Janet (b.1726). The witnesses in 1708 were James Grieve and Walter Purdom in Commonside. John (17th/18th C.) recorded living in Branxholme Town in 1713. He married Janet Turnbull and their daughter Jean was baptised in 1713, with witnesses Robert Thomson and Henry Orrock. John (17th/18th C.) miller, probably at Newmill. In 1724 he was witness to a Hawick Parish baptism there. He may be the John who married Mary Scott and whose children, baptised in Hawick, included James (b.1724) and Walter (b.1726). The witnesses in 1726 were William and Robert Thomson (perhaps the tenants at Newmill). John (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Woodburn in 1731 and Harden in 1733 and 1736. His children included Agnes (b.1731), Henry (b.1733) and Margaret (b.1736). John (18th C.) tenant in Whithope Mill. He witnessed a document for the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1765. He was surely related to Walter, who was there in the 1710s and Walter who was there in the 1770s. John (d.bef. 1747) eldest son of Sir Walter, 4th Baronet of Riddell. He was an advocate and said to be highly accomplished. He died before his father, so that his younger brother (also Sir Walter) succeeded to Riddell. He is probably the John, younger of Riddell, who in 1727 was listed among the people owing money to the deceased William Nisbet of Dirlton. Sir John (d.1768) 6th Baronet of Riddell, succeeding from his father Walter, his elder brother Walter having died first. He was a merchant in Curacao, returning on his father Walter’s death. He was ‘of that Ilk junior’ in 1761 when recorded as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire. In 1762 he married Jane Buchanan, daughter and heiress of James Buchanan from Sundon, Bedfordshire; he granted her a bond of provision for lands in Riddell in 1768, and she died in 1798. In 1772 he succeeded to the Buchanan estates on the death of his wife’s brother. He died at Hamstead in Middlesex, after being Baronet for only about 3 years, leaving a young family. His children were: Sir Walter, who succeeded; Sir James Buchanan, who succeeded his brother; and Sir John Buchanan, born posthumously, who also succeeded to Riddell. His will was proved at the Prerogative Court of Canterbury in 1768. After his death his wife, referred to as Dame Jane Riddell, still held rights over part of the estate. She must have been he Lady Riddell who was recorded in 1794 paying the tax for having 4 male servants at Riddell. John (18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. His wife was Jean Scott and their children included: Robert (b.1743); Agnes (b.1745); Janet (b.1755); William (b.1757); and Walter (b.1765). The witnesses in 1745 were mason David Laing and merchant George Scott. John (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. He married Mary Winthrope and their children included John (b.1771), Mary (b.1774), George (b.1776), Margaret (b.1780) and William (b.1783). John (18th C.) workman in Hawick Parish. He married Helen Stoddart, who died in 1782. Their children included Helen (b.1772) and Margaret (b.1774). John (18th C.) farmer at Newton in Kirkton Parish according to the Horse Tax Rolls of 1787–89. His daughter Maragret was born in 1786 and son John in 1787. John (18th C.) resident in Catslack in 1794 when he was recorded in Selkirk in a dispute over non-payment of a bill. John (b.1758) son of Frank, he was born in Hawick. He was a gardener and also sexton (but it is not clear for which church). In 1780 he married Peggy Parris and they had 12 children: Ann (b.1784), who died young; Isabella (b.1786), who also died young; Janet (b.1788), who married Michael Dryden; Francis (b.1792), who married Euphemia Scott, drove a mail coach for about 19 years, and died in Northumberland; Isabella (b.1795), died young; James (b.1797), who married Janet Rae and worked as a coachman; Adam (b.1798), who married Martha Leatherhead and moved to Edinburgh; John (b.1801), who was killed in a threshing mill at the age of 19; Jean (b.1804), who married John Watson from Selkirk; Katherine (b.1806), who married weaver John Fairgreaves and emigrated to Bridgeton, Maine; John (again, b.1809), who worked as a coachman... and married Barbara Hall; Mary (b.1810), who died young. He may be the John recorded in Hawick in 1791 in a letter preserved in the Walter Mason Collection. John (18th C.) recorded at Fastcastle in 1791 when his son William was baptised in Cavers Parish. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. His children included Jean (b.1793), Agnes (b.1795), Margaret (b.1797) and Anne (b.1800). Sir John Buchanan (1768–1819) 9th Baronet of Riddell, youngest son of John the 6th Baronet, being born posthumously. He succeeded from his 2 elder brothers. In 1788 he was recorded as owner of the Riddell estate, as well as Cringles and Greatlaws in Lilliesleaf Parish and Whitton in Howman Parish. He was said to be a man of elegant, but stiff manners, and who was a benefactor of the working classes. He was known as a keen agriculturalist with ambitious ideas, some of which led to the ruin rather than improvement of the Riddell estate. Both he and Lady Riddell (presumably his mother) were listed in the Carriage Tax Roll of 1792/3 and 1797/8 and paid tax for male servants and horses in 1794 and 1797. In the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls he is listed as owner of no fewer than 39 farm horses, as well as 5 carriage or saddle horses (with Lady Riddell listed separately in 1794, with 4 carriage horses). He also paid tax for having 9 non-working dogs at Riddell in 1797. In 1808 he was on the subscription list for Jamieson’s Scots dictionary. He was M.P. for Linlithgow Burghs 1812–19 and also stood as a candidate for Selkirkshire. He was Colonel of the 2nd Regiment of Roxburghshire local militia, based at Kelso. He was recorded as a freeholder in the Michaelmas Head-Court of Jedburgh in 1811. He still owned the lands of Over Whittone and others in Hownam Parish according to the Land Tax Rolls of 1811; he also owned the lands of Bank, Riddell Mains, Clerklands, Greatlaws, Cringles, Hoglawburn and parts of other lands in Lilliesleaf Parish. He was a major heritor of Ashkirk Parish, as recorded in a complaint of 1814 about payment for work done on the Manse. He was listed as a Commissioner of Roxburghshire in 1819. In 1805 he married Frances, daughter of Charles Marshall, Earl of Romney, and she died in 1808, aged 90. Their children were: Frances Jane (b.1806), born in Edinburgh; Harriet (b.1807), born at Riddell House; Emily (1808–81), who married John Adams; Walter Buchanan (1810–92), who succeeded; Jane (b.1812); Rev. John Charles Buchanan (1814–79), Rector of Harrietsham in Kent, whose son John Walter succeeded later; Charlotte Mary (1816–69); Gen. Charles James (b.1817), who served with the Royal Artillery; and Henry Philip (b.1819), who was born posthumously, like his father, worked with the Indian Service, and was awarded the Star of India. John (1766–1840) 5th surviving son of Patrick of Muselee and Margaret Balfour. He was an original member of the Jedforest Club and was involved with the founding of the Border Union Agricultural Society. He farmed at Timpendean, later moved to Grahamslaw and then became collector of taxes. He subscribed to Andrew Scott’s book of poetry, published in Kelso in 1811; he was listed as ‘J. Riddell, Esq. Timpendean. He died unmarried in Jedburgh. John (c.1780–1851) son of Walter, who was shepherd at Wauchope. He spent 37 years as shepherd at Clarilaw (in Bowden Parish) and then rented the farm of Berryhall next to Abbotsford. In 1841 he was at Clarilaw with his wife and daughter Betty. His wife was Margaret Turnbull (1777–1862) from Hawick, and they must have married when he was quite young (although not in 1791, as sometimes suggested). Their children included: Walter (1800–81), who married Margaret Baxter, and was a farm labourer in Bowden and later at Philiphaugh; Margaret (1802–94), who married stone mason Walter Ballantyne of St. Boswells; James (1804–1902), shepherd at Girrick, near Kelso; Robert (1807–67), who married Elizabeth Dickson and emigrated to Canada; William (1809–c.77), shepherd at Muselee, who emigrated to Australia; John (1812–76), who married Margaret Grieve and died at Faldonside; Elizabeth (b.1814), who died at about the age of 30; Jane (b.1817), who married Andrew Scott and died in Hawick; and Turnbull (c.1823–91), who married Helen Clarkson. Many member of the family are buried at Bowden. John (1785–1862) son of Henry of Little Govan and Anne Glassford, he was descended from the Riddells of that Ilk. He was a lawyer in Edinburgh, where he specialised in peerage cases and was known as an antiquarian and genealogist. He died unmarried in Edinburgh. John (18th/19th C.) married Nelly Whillans in Cavers Parish in 1789. John (b.1790/1) born in Hobkirk Parish, he was farmer at Eastfield in Bowden Parish. In 1851 he was farming 180 acres and employing 2 labourers. His wife was Agnes and their children included Archibald, Isabella, John and Thomas. John (d.1843) joiner in Lilliesleaf, eldest son of William. He married Elizabeth (or ‘Betsy’) Turnbull. His children included: William (b.1816), who was also a joiner; Jean (b.1819); and Mary, who had a baby the same day that her father died. Rev. John Charles Buchanan (b.1814) 2nd son of Sir John Buchanan, 9th Baronet. He was educated at Eton and Cambridge and was a Fellow of All Souls’ College. He became Rector of Harrietsham in Kent and was Honorary Canon of Canterbury. He was heir presumptive to the Barony, since his elder brother Walter Buchanan had no children. He had 8 children of his own, and his son John Walter succeeded. John (b.1832/3) son of Andrew. He took over as tenant farmer at North Synton. He is recorded there in the 1860s, and was also a non-resident voter in Cavers Parish. John (19th C.) farmer at Peel in Liddesdale in 1868. John (19th C.) farmer at Ormstown Mains, in Cavers Parish, in the 1860s. Sir John Walter Buchanan (1849–1924) 11th Baronet of Riddell, son of Rev. John Charles, he succeeded his uncle, Sir Walter. He was educated at Eton and Oxford and became a barrister. He served as High Sheriff of Northumberland. In 1874 he married Sarah Isabel, youngest daughter of Robert Wharton. He was succeeded by his son Capt. Sir Walter Robert Buchanan, who married Rachel Beatrice Lyttelton. Sir John Charles Buchanan (1934–2010) 13th Baronet of Riddell, succeeding his father when only 5 months old. He was educated at Eton and Oxford, being 2nd Lieutenant in the King’s Royal Rifle Corps and then qualifying as a chartered accountant. He served as Private Secretary to the Prince of Wales and Lord Lieutenant of Northumberland. He was also on many other boards and committees and was a Fellow of the Royal Society of Arts. In 1969 he married Sarah, daughter of Baron Richardson of Duntisbourne and they had 3 sons, including Walter John Buchanan, who succeeded. Sir Jordan (12th C.) probably a son of Sir Auskittel. Although he appears to be directly descended from the Riddells of Riddell, it is unclear how he was related to other Riddells in the north of England. He was most likely named after Jordanus de Fleming, who could have been his uncle. He witnessed a grant to Jedburgh Abbey in about 1160, and another grant of lands in Berwickshire and Roxburghshire to Walter, son of Alan the Steward in 1161/2. He witnessed a confirmation of donations to Dunfermline Abbey in about 1166 and another charter of lands in the Lothians and Fife at about the same time. He was also witness in 1173/4 for lands in Angus. Probably the same man was Sheriff in Northumberland, with estates at Tilmouth in Durham. His wife’s name is not recorded, but he was succeeded by his son Walter. Margaret (d.c.1631) sister of William of Greatlaws. She married Andrew Duncanson, minister at St. Boswell’s. In 1630 she was served heir to her brother’s lands of Greatlaws in Lilliesleaf Parish, but died soon afterwards. Margaret (17th C.) resident at Hassendean Mains according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. She was probably related to Walter, who was also listed there. Margaret (17th/18th C.) recorded in connection with money Sir Gilbert Elliott gave to the Hawick Kirk Session for keeping her in Wilton, suggesting she was supposed to be resident in Hawick Parish. Another record refers to he as ‘being mad’. Mary (17th/18th C.) also known as Margaret, she married John Scoon, who farmed at Branxholme Town. In 1705 she was renting part of Branxholme Town, with her cautioner being Walter (probably her brother or other close relative). She was still renting part in 1708 and is recorded along with her son (whose name is not given), leasing part of the farm of Branxholme Town in 1711 and 1712. By 1714 she was renting part of the farm with Robert Scoon, making it clear that this was her son. The pair were in arrears until at least 1718 and in 1719 she was replaced as tenant by Walter Scoon. Mary (1809–52) only daughter of Walter, who was 3rd son of Patrick of Muselee. Her mother was a daughter of Dr. Somerville of Jedburgh. In 1835 she married George William Hutton, who was a banker at Newark (son of George Hutton of Chorlton-Trent and Frances Mitford of Mitford Castle). Their son was Capt. George William Hutton Riddell, who succeeded to the Muselee estates on the death of her uncle Charles in about 1849. They had another son, Edward Mitford Hutton Riddell. Matthew (13th C.) recorded as ‘Matheo Rydel’ when he witnessed a document relating to lands in Aytoun. This was sometime in the period 1247–60. A Matthew from the previous century was Abbot of Peterburgh. Michael (14th C.) witness to a charter of Adam de Roule for the lands of Altonburn in about 1354. He is recorded as ‘Michael de Rydale’, and was probably part of the Riddels of that ilk. Mungo (d.1471) recorded as ‘Mungo de Redale’ in 1436/7, when Richard ‘de Lyllischeule’ resigned the lands of Lilliesleaf to him as his superior. In 1435 he is ‘Mungo de Redoll’ when he gained lands in the Regality of Sprouston from ‘Marioun Wedale’, widow of John; he held his court at ‘Wester Lilliesleaf’ (i.e. ‘Wester Lilliesleaf’). He may have been succeeded by his grandson (or son) James. However, his relationship with the nearly contemporary Quentin is unclear. One possibility is that he was Quentin’s son (and therefore James’ father), and that they were both referred to as ‘of Riddell’ for several years; another possibility is that they were brothers, and shared the lands of Riddell and Whiton in some way. If he was James’ father, then he also had a son called Thomas, who was James’ brother. Mungo (16th C.) described as ‘Sir Mungo Riddell’ when he was witness to a document in 1556 relating to the lands of Nether Harden. Given that all the other witnesses were fairly local it is reasonable to assume he was attached to one of the nearby churches, say Wilton or Ashkirk. His name occurs after that of Walter of that Ilk, who may therefore have been his father or brother. Mungo (16th C.) recorded in Lessenden in 1581/2 when he witnessed 2 transactions in Selkirk. Perhaps the same Mungo was recorded in the same year in a marriage contract for his sister Marion with his step-sister Janet Kyle. Sir Patrick of Riddell (12th/13th C.) 4th Laird, son of Ausketill (although some sources suggest he was son of Walter). He made donations to Melrose Abbey, including lands at Liliesleaf and Whiton. In 1208/9 he confirmed the granting of lands at Whiton to Melrose Abbey, which had originally been granted by Auskittel (probably his father). In 1454 James II confirmed his grant of lands in Whiton to Melrose Abbey, his name being given as ‘Patricius de Ridale’ and the land being ‘ywittuna’. He married Christiana de Vesci (or ‘Vesey’) of Alnwick, one of whose relatives (possibly her father) married Margaret, an illegitimate daughter of William the Lion. He was succeeded by his son Walter. It is sometimes claimed that another son was William, who married Matilda Corbet, but he actually seems to have been a brother. Another son may have been Gaufred. His seal bore a lion ‘passant’, not on a shield, and the words ‘SIGILLUM PATRICII DE RIDALA’. Patrick of Riddell (15th C.) recorded in 1438 when he was on the ‘retour of inquest’ for Ker of Altonburn. It is unclear how he might be related to other Riddells of that Ilk, particularly Mungo and Quentin, who were Lairds at about the same time. Patrick (d.bef. 1581) recorded as already deceased in 1581 when George Haliburton in Dryburgh entered his son William into his lands in Merton. It seems likely he was related to the Riddells of that Ilk. Patrick of Muselee (d.1698) son of John of Muselee and Grizel Schew, he was probably the 3rd Riddell of Muselee. He was the 2nd son, but succeeded to Muselee and Bewlie, since his older brother William had died first. He leased Roberton from Walter Scott, Earl of Tarras in 1682 for 9 years. He was on the Commission of Supply for both Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire in 1690. He was probably the ‘muslie Elder’ who was listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick ‘eist the water’ in 1694. He contributed £200 to the Darien Scheme in 1695. In 1681 in Roberton Parish he married Maria (or Mary) Elliot; she was from Beechwood, daughter of Thomas of Bewlie and Margaret Scott of Chamberlain Newton, and hence related to the Elliots of Borthwickbrae. Their children, baptised in Roberton Parish, included: Helen (b.1682); John (b.1683); Margaret (b.1684); Thomas (b.1685); and Elizabeth (b.1686). The witnesses in 1682 were Thomas and William Elliot (perhaps his father-in-law and brother-in-law) and in 1686 were William Elliot and Robert Scott. He was succeeded by his son John, while his grandson William was ancestor of the Riddells of Berwick. In 1697 a child of his was buried in Greyfriars Cemetery, and he himself was buried there in 1698. His name appears on a list of Commissioners for Supply for Roxburghshire in 1708, although he was deceased by then and so his son John is probably meant. Patrick of Muselee (1707–72) son of John of Muselee. He was probably the Patrick ‘of Newsle’ listed among the Commissioners for Roxburghshire in 1761. He is probably the Patrick who paid the window tax on Headshaw in 1748 and on ‘Adzhall’ in Ashkirk Parish in 1753. In 1752 in Ashkirk Parish he married Margaret, daughter of Charles Balfour of Broadmeadows. Their children included: John (b.1754), who died young; Charles (b.1756), also died young; Walter (1758–1809), who was a lawyer; William (b.1759); Charles (b.1759), who succeeded; Thomas (1761–1849), with the East India Company; John (1766–1840), who farmed at Timpendean; and one daughter. It is unclear if he was born in 1707 or 1709. Peter (13th C.) recorded as valet of Sir Henry de Pinkeny in a 1298 roll of war horses used on Edward I’s expedition into Scotland. He is recorded as ‘Peter de Rydale’. Possibly the same ‘Petrum de Rydalle’ is recorded along with his brothers Thomas and Robert in the 1269 assize roll of Northumberland. Philip (11th/12th C.) possibly ancestor of the local Riddells. He was probably son of Galfridus (otherwise known as Geoffrey), who accompanied William the Conqueror, gaining large English estates. He was probably brother of Hugh, who gained extensive lands in Northamptonshire, as well as Cranston in Midlothian. It is likely he was father of Gervasius, who received lands in Roxburghshire from David I. Other sons were probably Walter, Auskittel and Ralph. Philip (13th C.) Burgess of Berwick. He witnessed a charter for Soutra Hospital, which is undated, but probably shortly before 1270. He was recorded as a merchant in Berwick in 1276 and burgess there in 1277, 1281 and 1283. He was Mayor of Berwick in 1291, as recorded in one of the Ragman Rolls. It is unclear whether he was the family chief at the time, but he is referred to as ‘Philippe de Redale’. He was also recorded in a Newcastle court case in 1292, and in 1293 had a letter of safe passage for trading into England. Probably the same man donated all his lands in Berwick, Chirnside, Wederburn and Whitsome in Scotland, as well as his lands in England, to the hospital of ‘Domus Dei’ in Berwick. He is recorded as burgess of Berwick again in 1300 in confirmation of a grant to the hospital there. He was also on a jury in Berwick in 1302 and may be the ‘Philipppum de Rydale’ on the 1276 assize roll of Northumberland. Quentin of Riddell (15th C.) first of the family to be designated ‘of that Ilk’. His name is also written ‘Quintin’, and this was a new forename for the Riddell family. He may have been son of Sir William, but this is unclear; most family histories leave room for at least one other generation around this time. In 1418 he was ‘quentino de redale’ when witnessing a document for Melrose Abbey. He was in possession of Riddell in 1421 when an inquisition was held. He was also recorded as ‘Quintin Liddale of that ilk’ as part of panel to decide on Archibald Douglas inheriting the Barony of Cavers in 1464/5. Also in 1464/5 he was on the panel to decide on the disputed lands of Kirkton Mains and the Flex. He was succeeded by his son, whose name is unknown, and then by his grandson James. His relationship with Mungo is unclear (and confusing, since he appears to be almost contemporary). He probably had a daughter who married John Scott of Synton. Ralph (12th C.) witness to several documents in about the last couple of decades of the 12th century, particularly lands in Lilliesleaf and Whiton involving Melrose Abbey. The earliest of these is probably the settlement between the Abbey and Uhtred of Grubet in 1181–86 and the latest was a confirmation of lands resigned to Patrick of Riddell, which was after 1214. His name is usually recorded as ‘de Ridale’ or variants, and in a 1454 confirmation of the 12th century grant of Whitton to Melrose Abbey he is listed as ‘Radulfo de Ridale’. He was also witness to a charter between Ranulphe de Soulis and Jedburgh Abbey in the late 1100s. Probably the same Ralph was the perambulator of lands on the Kale Water granted by Uhtred of Grubet to Melrose Abbey in the period 1181–86. He appears to have been brother of Gervase, and hence a son of Philip. Richard of Wittering (13th C.) possibly a younger son of Geoffrey of Riddell, and hence brother of Sir William and Sir Robert. However, precisely how he was related to earlier and later Riddels of that Ilk is unknown. There is no record of a wife or family. He witnessed 2 charters to Ker of Altonburn in 1357/8 and 1358. Note that an earlier Richard was recorded about the 1230s, associated with Preston in East Lothian. Robert (13th C.) witness in about 1250, along with William, for a charter of Lempitlaw to Soutra Hospital. His name is recorded as ‘Roberto Redale’. Also in 1254/5 he was recorded in a charter for the lands of Mow and in about the 1250s witnessed a gift of lands in Berwick. Probably the same Robert was recorded in Cumberland in 1271/2. Perhaps the same Robert was witness in 1279–86 to a grant of lands in Mow to Melrose Abbey by William de Soulis. The phrase ‘Curia de Sprouston’ comes after his name, although it is unclear if he was the ‘curate’ of Sprouston, or some unnamed person. He was probably brother or son of William. Sir Robert of Riddell (14th C.) probably related to the nearly contemporary Richard of Riddell, but the succession in these generations is very uncertain. It is possible that he was a younger son of Geoffrey, succeeding after his brother Sir William. However, it may be that he was never Laird himself. He witnessed a charter of lands in Mow granted to Kelso Abbey. He also acted as a cautioner of the Laird of Mowe who was a hostage in England. Robert (16th C.) brother of Walter of that Ilk, in 1559 he was witness to a confirming charter for the lands of Harden. He was Bailie of the Barony of Wilton. He may also be the Robert who received part of his father’s lands at Minto. It is possible he was the ‘Berte’ who witnessed a transaction between...
Thomas Gray and Thomas Smail regarding a tenement in Lilliesleaf in 1563. Also in 1563 he is recorded as brother of Walter of that Ilk when he witnessed a marriage agreement between James in Maxton and John in Newton Mill. Robert (16th C.) son of James in Clerklands. In 1563 he witnessed a marriage agreement in Lilliesleaf, for William Davidson, made by Walter of that Ilk. He may be the Robert in Clerklands who in 1580 witnessed a marriage contract between Isabel, daughter of George in Lilliesleaf and George Rutherford in Bewlie. Robert (17th C.) recorded at the Fanns in Ashkirk Parish in 1661. He married Janet Bell and their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1661, with witnesses James Bell (probably related to his wife) and William (probably his own relative). Robert (d.c.1685) tenant in Newbigging when his will was recorded. It is unclear which Newbigging this was. He may be the Robert who witnessed a baptism for John Armstrong (probably tenant in Raesknowe) in Hawick Parish in 1676, with James Davidson (probably also Newbigging) as the other witness. He may be the Robert who (along with William) witnessed a baptism for Walter in Hawick in 1684, and another for William Bell and Marion Riddell. Robert (17th C.) married Janet Sanderson in Roberton Parish in 1683. Robert (17th C.) listed as resident at Mabonlaw on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Andrew and Walter were also listed there and so surely related. He could be the Robert who married Janet Sanderson and whose children included: Janet (b.1684); and Robert (b.1686). Robert (17th C.) resident at Wester Heap according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. Robert (17th C.) resident at Hawick Shiel in 1694, according to the Hearth Tax rolls. Robert (17th C.) recorded in the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694 at Phillhope, among those ‘not Listed yet payd yr’. Robert (17th C.) resident at Appletreehall according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Robert (17th/18th C.) married Margaret ‘S.’ in Minto Parish in 1705. Robert (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He was recorded at Newmill in 1702 when he witnessed a baptism for William Thomson (servant to Gideon Scott of Falnash) and at Allanhaugh Mill in 1704 when he witnessed a baptism for Robert Tudhope in Raesknowe. It is possible that the same Robert was miller at Falnash in 1703 when he witnessed a baptism for James Stewart, smith at Falnash. Robert (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Highchesters in 1716, 1718 and 1722. He is probably the Robert who married Bessie Sinton in Roberton in 1707. His children probably included Christian (b.1708), John (b.1709), Isobel (b.1716), Agnes (b.1718), Walter (b.1720) Robert (b.1722) and James (b.1724). Robert (17th/18th C.) married Margaret Hislop in 1717, the marriage being recorded in Hawick and Kirkton Parishes. Robert (17th/18th C.) weaver in Hawick Parish. He was recorded living at the Sandbed in 1718 and 1736. He married Margaret Oliver in 1718, the marriage being recorded in Hawick (and perhaps also Wilton, but with no wife’s name given). Their children included: Andrew (b.1719); Bettie (b.1720); Margaret (b.1723); Robert (b.1733); and John (b.1736). The witnesses in 1719 were Robert Scott ‘Crawship’ and John Turnbull ‘cuper older’, in 1720 were James Purcell and Robert Roger, and in 1736 were William Riddell (surely a relative) and Thomas ‘Gillas’. Robert (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was at East Burnfoot in 1721 and 1729. He married Isobel Riddell (probably in 1718, although no wife’s name is recorded) and their children included: Helen (b.1719); Robert (b.1721); John (b.1723); Walter (b.1729); and George and William (b.1732). The witnesses in 1721 were another Robert Riddell and Alexander Moore, and in 1729 were George Stewart and James Scott. In 1729 he witnessed a baptism for George Stewart in Groundistone. He was probably related to Walter, who was at East Burnfoot at the same time. Robert (18th C.) married Margaret Lang in Minto Parish in 1731. Robert (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish recorded ‘at Park’ in 1744. He married Bessy Lawson and their children included: Jean (b.1733); John (b.1735); William (b.1737); Bessy (b.1744); and Walter (b.1747). The witnesses in 1733 were John Telfer and James Beattie and in 1744 were shoemakers John and Thomas Scott. Robert (18th C.) tenant of Whitehaugh Mill. He took out a one year lease on Highchesters Mill in 1743. He may be related to the Robert who was later at...
Robert (18th/19th C.) married Jean Turnbull in 1808 and his wife Mary Gledstains in 1810. His death is recorded in Hawick Parish in 1771. He married Mary Gledstains in Hawick in 1793.

Robert (b.1806), Betty (again, b.1807) and Mary (b.1801). He was shepherd for a long time at Langshawburn, where he was visited by Walter Scott, Pul teney Malcolm and James Hogg. He was shepherd at Sorbie (in Ewesdale) when his famous son was born. While there it is said that he planted some saplings on a hillside above Wrae, saying that he wished to live long enough for his coffin to be made from the wood of the mature trees. He then moved to Capplefoot, on the Water of Milk. While there he hired a teacher to instruct his children. Later he returned to the Ettrick to work for Scott of Deloraine, who he had been with in his younger days. He married Agnes Scott, who was also from Teviotdale. They had 6 sons and a daughter: William; Borthwick (b.1794), who farmed at Dryden, Ashkirk, and was reknowned as a piper; Henry Scott (1798–1870), minister at Teviothead and song-writer; Robert (1800–67), who emigrated to America and died in Rockton, Canada; Alexander Hay, who farmed in Cumberland; Walter (d.1834), who died unmarried; and Mary, who married a Jones. Robert (1800–67) born in Teviotdale, he was 4th son of shepherd Robert and brother of Rev. Henry Scott. He farmed in Cumberland for a while and then emigrated to America. He married Margaret Johnston in 1819, the marriage being recorded in Roberton Parish. They had 10 children, including Nancy, Euphemia, Benjamin, Thomas, Robert, Ann and Walter. He died in Rockton, Ontario. Robert (b.1839/40) son of farm labourer Walter, and descended from Hobkirk shepherds. He apprenticed as a blacksmith with Thomas Kedzie in Selkirk, but also worked in Hawick. He then worked in Edinburgh, Stirling and Glasgow before emigrating to America in 1864. He spent time in Michigan, Canada and Minnesota, returned to Scotland and then went back to Canada in 1870. In 1872 he started his own wrought-iron fencing business in Chatham, Ontario. He married a Miss Tocher and had 5 children. Rev. Simon (1677–1743) probably descended from a branch of the Riddells of that Ilk. He graduated from Edinburgh University in 1695, licensed by Jedburgh Presbytery in 1699 and ordained at Tynron Church in 1701. In 1715 he marched to Stirling with some of his parishioners in defence of the King and the Protestant cause and in 1740 he was one of the 15 ministers who dissented against the resolution to depose the 8 Seceeding ministers. He married Annie Riddell, who was heiress of the lands of Newhouse near Lilliesleaf. Their only son Walter married Annie Riddell, heiress of Glenriddell. Steven (16th C.) recorded in the Register of the Privy Council in 1569. He was listed along with James Langlands as heralds in
Riddell Riddell

Roxburghshire, ‘Ane of the Wardane Officiaris to be maid Messinger’. It seems likely he was from the Riddells of that Ilk. Thomas (12th/13th C.) recorded as brother of Geoffrey in the period 1165–1204. He witnessed his brother’s charter for 2 oxgangs of lands in Primside. Thomas (14th C.) recorded as being ‘de Rydell’ in the 1330s when he was witness to a charter relating to the town of Roxburgh and preserved in the chartulary of Dryburgh. It is unclear how he may have been related to other Riddells. He could be the Thomas who forfeited the lands of ‘Fynlawys’ in the Barony of Oxnam, which were granted to William Stewart of Jedward during the reign of Robert II. Thomas (15th/16th C.) brother of James of that Ilk. At the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh in 1493 he had remission for being with the Duke of Albany during the time of revolt, as well as for stealing sheep. His surety was his brother, the Laird of Riddell. Thomas (d.c.1514) listed as deceased in 1514, when he was succeeded in the position of Clerk of Lilliesleaf by George Riddell. He was probably a member of the family of Riddell of that Ilk, holding the benefice of assistant priest in the Parish. Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Chisholme in 1710. His children included: Isobel (b.1705); and twins Robert and Alexander (b.1710). Thomas (17th/18th C.) sometime tenant in Bewlie. In 1716 he had a tack (jointly with George Cumming) for lands in Bewlie from John Nisbet of Nisbetfield; after a year he was to assume the lease fully for another 8 years. This was specifically for ‘a dwelling house, barn and stack yard and half a cottage in the town of Bewlie, half the said Mr. John’s lands in Bewlie, half the meadow and half the muir of Lilliesleaf with the teinds’. In 1721 the last 3 years were cancelled. Thomas (1696–1750) 3rd son of Walter, 4th Baronet of Riddell. The lands of Camieston near Newtown St. Boswells were acquired for him and he became the first Riddell Laird there. It is possible that he was the ‘Mr. Riddell of Camieston’ who purchased the Kirkland of Bewlie from the Duke of Roxburgh. He may be the Thomas who paid the window tax at ‘Fernigton’ in Roxburgh Parish in 1748. In 1740 he married Margaret, youngest daughter of Rev. William Hunter, minister of Lilliesleaf. His children were: Walter (b.1742), who died young; Margaret (1744–71), who died unmarried; Eleanor (1745–1815), also unmarried; William (b.1746), who succeeded to Camieston and married Elizabeth, daughter of John Kerr of Cavers Carre; Thomas (1748–56); and Robert (1750–93), who served with the East India Company and perished on the ‘Duchess of Athole’, being in temporary command when fire broke out, and refusing to abandon his ship.

Capt. Thomas (18th C.) son of Walter of that Ilk. He was with the Honorable East India Company, being Captain of the Adm. Pocock 1762–71. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Janet Scott and their children included Thomas (b.1818). Thomas (1761–1802) 4th surviving son of Patrick of Muselee and Margaret Balfour. He joined the East India Company, rose to the rank of Major and died in India. Thomas (18th/19th C.) from Cavers Parish. In 1797 he married Jane Govenlock, who was from Hawick Parish. Thomas of Camieston (1777–1826) eldest son of William of Camieston. He qualified as Writer to the Signet in 1805, but never followed this profession. He was listed as a Commissioner of Roxburghshire in 1819 (along with his father) when still younger of Camieston. In 1805 he married Jane, daughter of William Ferrier, and she died in 1833. Their children were: Gen. William (1805–75); Walter of Cavers Carre (1807–74); John Carre (1809–80), who emigrated to Australia, where he was a member of the Parliament of Victoria; Capt. Thomas (1810–54) of the Bengal Infantry; Lillias Wallace (b.1812), married Ross Watt and emigrated to Victoria; Robert (1813–39), who died in India; Elizabeth Carre (1816–44), who died unmarried; Georgina Vereker (b.1818), who married Malcolm McNeil Rind; and Jane Ann (d.1859), who married Elijah Imprey. Thomas (d.1843) 2nd son of Lilliesleaf joiner William. He was a thatcher. He married Rachel Stirling and their children included William (b.1803), who was a joiner. Thomas (1815–62) born in Lilliesleaf, son of Isabella, with the father’s name unknown. He emigrated to the U.S.A., settling in Lawrence, Massachusetts, working in the mills. He married Sarah S. Henderson and their children were James, Walter and David. He drowned after falling overboard from a steamer between Fall River and New York. Thomas (b.1818/9) stocking-maker in Denholm. In 1861 he was listed on Main Street. In the 1860s he is in a trade directory as a stocking-maker, suggesting he ran his own business. He married Janet Dow and their children included Thomas, John, Robert S., James and George. Walter (d.1150s) described as ‘de Riddale, of Whitunes’ (i.e. ‘Escetho’, probably the same as Lintobank) and ‘Lillislive’ (Lilliesleaf) from David I sometime in the period 1124–53. This is recorded in a ‘transumpt’ of 1506 (i.e. a legal copy of the frail document was made in Jedburgh at that time). He may thus have been the first Baron of Riddell and Whitton. He was probably a close relative of Gervase, who witnessed some charters along with him; he may have been brother of Gervase (or perhaps his son), and hence a son of Philip. He is further recorded as ‘Waltero de ridalis’ and similar in several surviving charters he witnessed in the reign of David for St. Andrews Priory and other religious houses. A bull from Pope Adrian IV in 1156 confirms his brother and heir Auskittel in several lands. This suggests he died without any sons. However, he is known to have married Ethride de Percy, sister of the Lord of Oxenham. Walter of Riddell (12th/13th C.) son of Sir Jordan, perhaps the first generation of the Riddells of the Newcastle area. He succeeded his father in the lands of Tilmouth in Durham and the Lordship of Whickham. He was Sheriff of Northumberland and was succeeded by Sir William. Walter of Riddell (13th C.) 5th Laird, son of Sir Patrick and Margaret de Vesci (or ‘Vesey’). He confirmed his father’s donations to Melrose Abbey, and gave other benefactions to both Melrose and Kelso. The gift to Melrose Abbey was part of Lilliesleaf and made some time before 1253; this charter also mentions land he had previously granted to Alexander, brother of Henry of Ashkirk. He married a daughter of Hugh de Gifford. He had 2 sons, Sir William (who succeeded) and Patrick. His seal bore an eagle with wings elevated, not on a shield, and the words ‘SIG[ILL. WA]LTERI RIDDEL’. Walter (16th C.) younger of Riddell, son of John. He died before his father, and the title was inherited by his son Walter. However, these generations are confused, and it is also possible that his brother George inherited, or was at least the effective Laird during the minority of his son Walter. His wife’s name is said to have been Jane. If he was father of Walter of that Ilk who was recorded in transactions in Selkirk in 1579, then he also had sons Andrew and Robert. Walter of that Ilk (d.c.1580) probably son of Walter, he succeeded to the Lairdship from his grandfather John. George, who also appears to have been acting as Laird before him, was either his father or uncle. He may the ‘lard of Ryddell’ who signed a bond of assurance with Somerset at Kelso in 1547, along with many other Border lairds. He was witness to a charter dealing with the lands of Nether Harden in 1556 and is also mentioned in 1559 when his brother Robert was witness to a confirming charter for the lands of Harden (although it is possible this is 1550). In 1561 he was among Border Lairds who appeared before the Queen to give names of those guilty of theft. In 1563 he was ‘wadset’ lands at ‘Hungrie Hills’ and near the Kirk of Lilliesleaf by William Midlemas. Also in 1563 he offered 2 potential wives to William Davidson, who held lands of his in ward and relief; witnesses included his brother Robert, as well as Robert, son of James in Clerklands. He is probably the ‘Lard of Riddell’ listed in 1564 among Border lairds who were ordered to support the Warden, Ker of Cessford. In 1569 he was on the panel of inquest for Grizel Borthwick inheriting superiority of her father’s lands in Wilton. He served as surety for the Elliots in 1573. In 1575 he was one of the arbitrators for the Pringles in their feud with the Elliots. He was on an assize in 1577. He is probably the Walter of that Ilk whose brothers Andrew and Robert are recorded in transactions in Selkirk in 1579. In 1543 he married Mariotta (or Marion), daughter of Sir James Pringle of Galashiels and Smallholm. He was probably succeeded by another Walter, and also had sons Robert and William (who witnessed a bond for the Elliots in 1581, by which time his son was Laird). His seal bore a chevron between 3 ears of rye and the words ‘S’ VALTERI RIDDEL’, while his wife’s had 3 shells on a ‘bend sinister’ and the words ‘S’ MARION HOP-PRINGIL’. Walter of that Ilk (d.bef. 1592) son of Walter. He is probably the Walter who in 1581 witnessed an agreement in Selkirk where James Langlands of that Ilk resigned his lands to his son Robert Langlands. Also in 1581 his heir apparent Andrew received sasine (in the name of his daughter Janet, Andrew’s sister) for the lands of Wester Horsburgh in Peeblesshire from Alexander Horsburgh of that Ilk. He was listed among the Border Lairds summoned to appear before the Privy Council in 1583/4. However, these generations of Walters are quite confused. He married Agnes, daughter of George Ramsay of Dalhousie, and was... succeeded by his son Andrew. He probably also had 2 daughters, one of whom married Thomas Ker of Cavers Carre and Nether Howden. His wife may have been the Lady Riddell whose conduct was singled out when the Presbyterians complained to the King about continuing supporters of Catholicism. He and his son Andrew were ‘tutors’ for the young James Pringle of Galashiels and Smalholm. His son Andrew and brother William both witnessed a bond for the Elliots in 1581, while he was Laird. In 1595/6 (suggesting he was alive then, but perhaps just confirming an earlier grant) there is a charter for the Barony of Lilliesleaf in which he is granted the 3 1/2 husbandlands of Lilliesleaf, called ‘West-Maynis alias Dunstane or Myris’ and 6 husbandlands and 2 cottage lands in the town of Lilliesleaf, with Lilliesleaf Mill; his son Andrew and brother William are also listed. \textbf{Walter} (d.bef. 1642) referred to in 1600 as ‘f iar of that Ilk’, along with his wife Agnes, when they received the lands of Bewlie. He was probably son of the Laird of Riddell, or else descended from the earlier Riddells who had farmed at Bewlie. He is probably the Walter referred to in 1642 when his son William gave Bewlie to his brother Walter. \textbf{Walter} (16th/17th C.) resident of the Lilliesleaf area. He was mentioned in the 1628 witchcraft trial of Isobel Howison. It was stated that Sandy ‘Hines’ wife said that Howison had given medicine to his wife and received nothing for it. \textbf{Walter} of Woodhouse (16th/17th C.) member of the assize at the Commissioners’ Court in 1623. He was voted as Chancellor of the panel. He may be the same as one of the other Walters. \textbf{Sir Walter} 2nd Baronet of Riddell (d.c.1669) son of Sir John. He was knighted by Charles I during his father’s lifetime. In 1632 there is a discharge to him from Violet Douglas, widow of Andrew of that Ilk and their 1st and 2nd sons Andrew of Haining and Robert of Hartside. He was served heir to his father in 1636; this included Lintobank, Boosmill, Easter Clerklands, Greatlaws and West Lilliesleaf (called ‘Murieknow’), as well as Over and Nether Whitton. He was one of the 2 Parliamentary Commissioners for Roxburghshire in 1628–1633, and he also represented Roxburghshire 1646–47 and 1650. In 1640 he had a contract with Walter Scott of Burnside concerning Chapel and other lands in Lilliesleaf. He was a supporter of the Covenant. He was on the Commission of Supply for Roxburghshire in 1643 and the Committee of War for Roxburghshire in 1643, 1644, 1646, 1648 and 1649. In 1643 his estate of Riddell (consisting of Mains of Riddell, Bank, Clerklands, Riddell Mill and Lilliesleaf Mill), valued at £1654; he was also owner of part of Bewlie in Lilliesleaf Parish (valued at £273), as well as of Whittan in Morebattle Parish (valued at £1600). In 1648 he was one of the prominent men named on a Commission to suppress the thieves in the counties of Roxburgh, Selkirk, Dumfries and Annandale. In 1654 he probably the ‘W. Riddell’ among local men who signed an attestation about the ‘carriage and deportment of the deceased Francis Earl of Buccleuch’; this was part of efforts to have the fines reduced on the Buccleuch estate that had been imposed by Cromwell for the Earl supporting King Charles. In 1662, after the Restoration, he was fined £6,600 (the second largest amount in Roxburghshire). He is recorded in a charter of 1659 involving his daughter-in-law Agnes Scott and lands in Whittan. He paid tax for his rentals in Hownam (£3382) and Lilliesleaf (£1629) in about 1663. He married Jane (or Janet), daughter of William Rigg of Aithernie in Fife, said to be a very pious woman and niece of Katherine Rigg, ‘the Good Lady Cavers’; this may have been in 1630. Their children were: Sir John, who succeeded; William of Friarshe, who married Elizabeth, daughter of Francis Wauchope and was the progenitor of the Riddells of Glenriddell; Archibald, Covenanting preacher, who married an Aitkenhead and was progenitor of the Riddells of Granton; Thomas, who may have married Agnes Scott and died childless; Andrew; Agnes, who married James Scott, brother of Sir William of Harden in 1659; Sarah, who married Patrick Hepburn of Smeaton in 1656; and Alison, who married Rev. Gabriel Semple of Jedburgh (once a preacher of field conventicles). Note there are conflicting accounts of his children, particularly the daughters. His son Sir John was served as his heir in 1669. His wife’s will is recorded at the Commissarriot of Peebles in 1682. \textbf{Walter} of Belses (17th C.) recorded in 1649 when his son William became a merchant’s apprentice in Edinburgh. He must have been related to the Riddells of Riddell and of Minto. He may have been the same Walter who was given the lands of Belses by his brother William (son of Walter) in 1642; if so he was described as ‘in Longhauche’. He was also possibly the ‘portioner of Bewlie’ who was on the Commission of Supply for Roxburghshire in 1643 and the Committee of War for Roxburghshire in 1648 and 1649. He may be the same Walter as the ‘portioner of Lilliesleaf’ who in 1643 held ‘20 soums’ valued at £60 and 4 acres at £26. He was also involved in a ‘wadset’ over lands at Fernielees and Templehall (in the Rule valley) with William Earl of Lothian in 1649; Sir Walter of that Ilk is also mentioned, and so was clearly distinct. He extended the loan to the Earl in 1652, when he was described as ‘now indweller in Appotsyde’. In the 1652 marriage contract of Margaret Riddell and Robert Elliot, he is described as uncle of Margaret and brother of William, deceased portioner of Bewlie. He also witnessed a contract of ‘wadset’ for the Lorraines of Appotside in 1654, also signed by his eldest son ‘Harie’ (i.e. Henry), as well as further contracts in 1656. He was mentioned in discharges of 1655 for uplifting the teinds of Harwood and Tythehouse and in further discharges of 1657 and 1658; he acted as ‘bailie in that part’ for Elliot of Harwood and was tenant at Appotside. In 1656 he witnessed the ratification of William Elliot of Harwood in his Rulewater lands and another sasine relating to Harwood was witnessed by his sons Henry and Walter. His sons William and Henry witnessed separate documents 1659, and all 3 sons witnessed a document relating to Appotside in 1656. He is probably also the Walter who rented land from John Turnbull of Firth in 1645. He may be the Walter recorded as portioner in 1678 when he ownedlands in Bewlie and also for the ‘heritors’ of Raperlaw, amounting to £273, as well as Lilliesleaf Mill (valued at £407 15s); however, that seems more likely to be the next generation. Walter (17th C.) son of Walter, portioner of Bewlie, and younger brother of William. He is recorded as ‘in Langhauche’ and ‘bailie in that part to the said William Elliot’ when he was witness in 1637 for Elliot of the Binks purchasing Harwood. The Langhaugh may have been the one in Liddesdale or in Hobkirk (probably the latter). In one of the 1637 documents he is transcribed as ‘Liddell’. He also witnessed other agreements relating to vicarage teinds of Hobkirk Parish in 1638 and 1648, and a discharge to him and others for the teinds in 1649. In 1642 he was ‘in Longhaughe’ when his brother disposed to him his five-pounf land in Bewlie and half a cotland in the Barony of Lilliesleaf. In 1646 he was on the Committee of War for Roxburghshire. Walter (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish who married Mary Murray. Their son Robert was baptised in 1650. Walter (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish who married Margaret Chisholm. Their son Robert was baptised in 1656, with witnesses Robert and Andrew Chisholme (who were surely related to his wife). Walter of Minto (c.1620–c.84) writer (i.e. solictor) in Edinburgh. He was probably 2nd son of son of William of Newhouse and grandson of William of Muselee (although these generations are confused). He purchased part of the Minto estate from John Turnbull of Minto in 1676 (confirmed in 1681). He leased the lands of ‘Kaimes and the Hills’ to William Mather of Lilliesleaf Mill in 1683. Also in 1683 has a disposition for Minto to his son-in-law Thomas Rutherford. There was a dispute among his children over the inheritance, but eventually Minto passed to Walter Scott, Earl of Tarras in 1687 and not long afterwards sold to the Elliots. He married Catharine Nisbet in 1652 in Edinburgh, and secondly married Isabel Riddell. His children were: James (d.1687), who died young; Jean, who married Robert Laurie in Edinburgh, and was the mother of the Annie Laurie who inspired the song; Susanna, who married Thomas, brother of John Rutherford of Edgerston; Catharine, who probably died young; Grizel (b.1687), who was to have succeeded if she married a Riddell; John, who may also have died young; Elizabeth, who married James Dallas in Edinburgh; and Agnes. His daughters cleared all their interests in Minto in the 1690s. Walter (17th C.) resident of Rober- ton Parish. In 1686 he married Margaret Ker in Wilton. He may be the Walter who witnessed a baptism for Thomas Gray and Alison Riddell (probably a relative) in 1688. Walter (17th C.) eldest son of John ‘in Beirhope’. He is probably the Walter, ‘portioner of Beulie’ who witnessed the testament of William Elliot of Harwood in 1662. He was ‘portioner’ of Bewlie in Lilliesleaf Parish according to the 1678 Land Tax Rolls, with land valued at £273. He (or a descendant) received part of the lands of Bewlie in 1687. Walter (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Scoon and their children included: Robert (b.1674); an unnamed child (b.1677); another unnamed child (b.1679); Bessie (b.1681); and Helen (b.1684). The witnesses in 1684 were Robert and William, who were surely related to him. Walter of Newhouse (17th C.). In 1689 he was named among the officers of the local Militia, charged with defending the kingdom. He is probably the same Laird of Newhouse who (along with Turnbull of Sharplaw) was taken prisoner by a group of Covenanters in 1679 (commanded by Turnbull of Standhill perhaps). He is probably the Walter of Newhouse who married Christian Stoddart in Edinburgh in 1684. In 1693 his uncle John Reid granted him a tenement in Selkirk. He was ‘Walter ridell of Neou- hous’ in 1694 when he paid tax on 4 hearths in 1693.
Riddell Riddell

Lilliesleaf Parish. It is unclear if he is the same man as Walter (b.c.1620) of Newhouse who appears to have died in the 1680s. His daughter may have been Annie, who married Rev. Simon. Walter (17th C.) tenant in Hartsbaugh in 1694 according to the Hearth Tax rolls. Walter ‘Dusty Fit’ (d.bef. 1723) miller of Allanhaugh Mill in the years around 1700. He may have been related to the later tenant at Southdean Mill. He was listed at Allanhaugh Mill on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls; he was taxed for 3 hearths because he was ‘wt tuo kilns’, suggesting that he was the miller there at that time. Probably the same Walter rented part of the farm of Raesknowe from the Duchess of Buccleuch in the period 1690–98. He was at Allanhaugh Mill in 1702 when he witnessed a baptism for Walter Martin in Alton Croft. He may be the Walter who acted as cautioner for Margaret in 1705, when she leased part of Branholme Town farm. He is probably the miller at Allanhaugh Mill called ‘Dustyfit’ who was there around 1710, as attested in evidence given regarding the state of Hawick’s Common in 1767. In 1708 he and James Paterson were ‘undermillers’ when they witnessed a baptism for Andrew Scott knight at Millport. He is probably the ‘undermiller in Hawick’ when his daughter Bessie was baptised in 1709, with witnesses Walter Elliot, ‘tacksman of ye mill’ and James Paterson, ‘undermiller in ye sd town’. In 1711 he was still undermiller in Hawick when he witnessed a baptism for Archibald Aitkin, other undermiller at Hawick (with miller Walter Elliot as the other witness). His children included Anna (b.1700), with baptismal witnesses Henry Orrock and William Riddell (who was surely related). Bessie who married another Walter Miller (at Philhope Mill) in 1709 was his daughter. He was recorded as deceased and ‘sometimes in Allan-haugh mill’ when his daughter Mary married William Helm in 1723. William, who was tenant at Allanhaugh Mill and became a Burgess in 1729, was probably his son. Margaret, who married John Scoon, may have been a daughter of his (since his name appears as a witness to one of their children’s baptisms). It is possible that 2 different generations of miller are compounded here. Walter (17th C.) resident at Hassendean Mains according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. He was probably related to Margaret, who was also listed there. Walter (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Graham and their daughter Anna was baptised in 1700. Walter (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Mary Wright and their son Walter was baptised in 1709. Walter (17th/18th C.) miller at Philhope Mill, as recorded in 1709. He married Bessie Riddell, daughter to Walter, miller at Allanhaugh Mill in Hawick in 1709. He may be the Walter who witnessed a baptism for John Scott in Allanhaugh Mill in 1725. Walter (17th C.) miller in Hawick. He married Margaret Ker and their children included: Isobel (b.1707); Bessie (b.1709); and Robert (b.1713). The witnesses in 1707 were Bailie Walter Elliot and miller James Paterson. He may be related to other millers of the same surname. Walter (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Mary Murray and their daughter Alison was baptised in 1711. Walter of Newhouse (d.1742) apprenticed to John Willkie, he became Writer to the Signet in 1742. He married Jean Pringle. It is unclear how he was related to the other Riddells of Newhouse. Walter (17th/18th C.) tailor in Hawick who is listed among those who subscribed to the fund for the new Kirk bell in Hawick in 1693/4. He is probably the same Walter listed ‘vist the water’ among those paying the Hearth Tax in Hawick in 1694. He married Marion Liddell and their children included James (b.1687), Jean (b.1699), William (b.1702) and Helen (b.1703). The witnesses in both 1699 and 1702 were baker John Whillans and merchant John Forman and in 1709 were baker John Whillans and Henry Orrock. Probably the same tailor Walter secondly married Margaret Riddell in Hawick in 1704. Walter of Friarshaw (17th/18th C.) recorded in 1695 when he contributed £100 to the Darien Scheme. It is unclear how he was related to other Riddells. Walter (17th/18th C.) from the Lilliesleaf branch of the family. He was tenant farmer at North Synton. In 1706 his eldest daughter Margaret married John of Muselee. Sir Walter of that Ilk (d.1747) 4th Baronet of Riddell, succeeding his father Sir John in 1700. In 1695 he would have been the ‘younger’ of Riddell who was appointed as a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire. He was also ‘younger of that Ilk’ in 1695 when he contributed £400 to the Darien Scheme. He was one of the Roxburghshire heritors who petitioned Parliament in 1700 and is listed as a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire in 1704. In 1700 he was recorded in a tax document for the Lordship of Melrose. In 1706 he gave a bond of 1,000 merks to Alexander Orrock, which formed part of the Orrock Bequest; this presumably means he was a heritor of Hawick Parish. In 1727–28 he was involved with the Scotts of Davington in a land dispute. In 1692 he married Margaret, daughter of Watt of Rosehill; she was a daughter of his step-mother. His children were: John, an advocate who pre-deceased him; Sir Walter, who did succeed; Thomas of Camieston, whose son William married Elizabeth, daughter of John Kerr of Cavers Carre; William, who moved to Bermuda; Robert, minister of Lilliesleaf; Ann (or perhaps Jane or Eleanor), who married John Carre of Cavers; Sarah, who married John Forest; and Christian, who died young. He is said to have been very pious and somewhat eccentric, for example on occasion interrupting his son Robert’s sermons, saying ‘Robert, that won’t do!’, and he refused to stop people coming onto his land, saying ‘The Earth is the Lord’s!’ James may have been another son, who moved to Ireland, was knighted, and wrote his name ‘Riddell’. Walter (17th/18th C.) resident in Whithope Mill in at least the period 1714–29. His children, baptised in Roberton Parish, included: Helen (b.1714); Marion (b.1717); Anna (b.1722); Walter (b.1725); and Walter (again, b.1729). He is easy to confuse with another Walter, who lived at Mabonlaw at the same time; he is probably the one who married Helen Scott in Roberton in 1712. Walter (17th/18th C.) resident in Mabonlaw. His daughter Marion was baptised at the end of 1717 in Roberton Parish; this was 9 months after another Marion was baptised, daughter of Walter in Whithope Mill (so it is fairly clear that this was a different man). He could be the Walter recorded at Mabonlaw on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls, along with Robert and Andrew. Other children, baptised in Roberton Parish, who may have been his, included: Margaret (b.1712); Walter (b.1720); and Walter (again, b.1725). He is probably the Walter who married Margaret Simpson in Roberton in 1709. Walter (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at Borthaugh in 1723 and 1724. In 1729 he witnessed a baptism for William Lorraine in Borthaugh. In 1719 he married Mary Storie. Their children included: Robert and William (b.1720); twins Gideon and Andrew (b.1723); Walter (b.1724); Isobel (b.1727); Margaret (b.1729); and Robert (again, b.1731). The witnesses in 1723 were George Bell and Tom (or similar) Turnbull, in 1724 were Walter and John Scott and in 1729 were James Scott and Robert Cowan. Walter (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at East Burnfoot in 1725. He is probably the William who in 1735 witnessed a baptism for William Lamb, resident of Wester Burnfoot. He married Margaret Waugh in 1724 and their children included Robert (b.1725), Janet (b.1727), James (b.1730) and Bessie (b.1732). The witnesses in 1725 were John and Walter Scott. He was probably related to Robert, who was at East Burnfoot at the same time. The funeral of Janet in Burnfoot Mill was recorded in 1750 and may have been his daughter. Walter (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, recorded at Hornshole in 1737. He married Margaret Riddell and their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1737, with witnesses Robert Scott and John Sinton. Sir Walter of that Ilk (1695–1765) 5th Baronet of Riddell. He succeeded from his father Sir Walter, since his elder brother John had died first. He became a Burgess and Guild-brother of Edinburgh in 1713 and was later a merchant at Eyemouth, probably dealing in fish and spirits. He was recorded as a merchant in Eyemouth in 1727 when listed (along with his brother John) among the people owing money to the deceased William Nisbet of Dirleton. He paid the window tax for Riddell House in 1748. He was recorded as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1761. He married Jane, daughter of John Turnbull of Houndwood near Eyemouth, the marriage being an elopement. His sons were: Walter, his eldest, who pre-deceased him by about 10 years; Sir John, who succeeded; James, who served in the Army, being a Lieutenant-Colonel in the Dutch service; Thomas of Besborough, who served in the Navy, and was father of Gen. Henry James Riddell, Commander of the forces in Scotland; and Andrew. Walter (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, recorded at Alton in 1738. In 1737 he married Agnes Wilson and their children included: John (b.1738); and Janet (b.1740). The witnesses in 1738 were Andrew … and John Kersel. Walter of Newhouse and Glenriddell (d.1788) son of Rev. Simon. He was recorded as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1761. He married Annie, daughter and heiress of Robert Riddell of Glenriddell, a very distant cousin. He thereby became Laird of Glenriddell in Dumfriesshire. He was listed on the roll of electors for Roxburghshire in 1780. He may be the Riddell of Newhouse who sold lands in Lilliesleaf Parish to Rev. William Campbell. His children were: Robert, who succeeded, was a great friend of Robert Burns, married Miss Kennedy, and died without children; Walter, who succeeded after his brother and married Maria Woodley, daughter of the Governor of St. Kitts, Leeward Islands; Sophia; and Alexander. Walter (18th C.) resident at Whithope Mill in 1767 and 1774 when his children were baptised in Roberton Parish. His children included Walter (b.1767) and Jean (b.1774). He is surely related to the earlier Walter and John in Whithope Mill. Walter of Friar's Glen (1758–1809) 3rd surviving son of Patrick of Muselee and Margaret Balfour. He worked as a lawyer in Jedburgh. He married Christian, eldest daughter of Dr. Somerville of Jedburgh. Their children were: Patrick, who died unmarried; and Mary (b.1809), who married George Hutton, and whose son Capt. Hutton Riddell inherited Muselee. He died the same year as his second child. Walter (b.1760) 2nd son of Frank, he was born in Hawick. He married Janet Hamilton and moved to Carlisle. Their children were: James (b.1784), who had 3 daughters, including Jennie, who married John Hislop; Frank (b.1786), who was a store clerk in Leith and died unmarried; Willie (b.1789), who settled in Carlisle; Isabella (b.1791); Margaret (b.1793); and Walter, who was born in Hawick, was training for the ministry, but died young. Sir Walter Buchanan (c.1764–84) 7th Baronet of Riddell. He succeeded from his father Sir John, who died when he was quite young. Said to be of delicate health, he died just about when he reached majority. He was succeeded by his brother Sir James. His tutors, who dealt with rentals of his properties etc., were James Riddell and Archibald Buchanan. Walter (18th C.) recorded as ‘of Muselee’ in a marriage bond of 1769 for his daughter Agnes with John, son of Thomas Turnbull of Knowe. He may have been a younger son of John of Muselee. Walter (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish, recorded at Commonside in 1785 and 1788. He married Betty Glendinning and their children included: Janet (b.1775); John (b.1778); Betty (b.1780); Rachel (b.1783); Janet (again, b.1785); Mary (b.1788); and James (b.1791). The witnesses in 1785 and 1788 were the whole congregation and in 1791 were Archibald Elliot from Bowanhill and John (probably a close relative). Walter (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Wauchope for about 50 years. He was shepherd there according to both the 1797 Horse Tax and Dog Tax Rolls. His son John was shepherd at Clarilaw. He could be the Walter of Hobkirk Parish whose children (with no mother’s name given) included: Robert (b.1779); Elizabeth (b.1781); Jean (b.1783); John (b.1784); William (b.1788); and James (b.1796). Walter (18th/19th C.) tenant at Southdean Mill, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as owner of 3 horses. Walter (18th/19th C.) resident of London, who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He must have had some local connection. Walter (b.c.1785) 3rd son of William, he was a joiner in Lilliesleaf like his father. He was recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories. In 1841 he was living with Elizabeth, probably his daughter. His sons included: William, who married Margaret Lambert and emigrated to Philadelphia; and Walter, who also emigrated to the U.S.A. Walter (1798–1863) son of Hawick shoemaker William and Jean Goodfellow. He worked as a spinner in Wilton. In 1835 he was listed at Dovemount amount heads of households in Wilton Kirk, and in 1840 and 1841 was listed as living in Hawick. On the 1841 census he was on O’Connell Street and in 1851 was on Ladylaw Place. His wife was Mary and their children included William, Andrew, Thomas, Jean, Janet and John. Walter (1800–81) eldest son of John, he was born in Hobkirk Parish. He was a farm labourer near Hawick and then at Philiphaugh. In 1841 he was living at Eastfield in Bowden, in 1851 at Philiphaugh Cottages and in 1861 at Old Broadmeadows. He married Margaret Baxter and their children included John, Mary, James, Margaret, Robert and Elizabeth. Walter (19th C.) tailor in Hawick. He was a member of Allars Kirk in about the 1830s. Walter see Walter Riddell Carre. Sir Walter Buchanan (1810–92) eldest son of Sir John Buchanan, who died when he was young. He was born at Riddell House, and educated at Eton and Oxford. Although he became the 10th Baronet in 1819, the family sold the Riddell estate in 1823. However, he did succeed to the smaller estate of Hepple in Northumberland. He was called to the bar at Lincoln’s Inn in 1834. He was Magistrate and Chief Steward in Northumberland and Judge in North Staffordshire, as well as serving as an M.P. He gave a lot of help to Rev. G.T. Ridlon, in his compilation of a family history, published in 1884. He married Alicia Ann, youngest daughter of William Ripley in 1850, but they had no children. He was succeeded by his nephew Sir John Walter Buchanan, son of Rev. John Charles. Walter Francis Montagu Douglas Scott (1834–77) eldest son of Henry Scott, minister of Teviothead. He worked with the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank. He married Agnes, daughter of David Arnott, minister of St. Giles. He was obviously named after his father’s patron. He died in Edinburgh. Sir Walter Robert Buchanan (1879–1934) son of John Walter Buchanan, he was 12th Baronet of Riddell. He was educated at Sir William (13th C.) listed in the period 1279–86 when he was witness to a grant of lands in Mow to Melrose Abbey by William de Soulis. He also witnessed the previous grant of the same lands by John de Vescy and its confirmation. It is unclear how he was related to other Riddells. William (13th C.) recorded in the Ragman Rolls of 1296 as ‘William de Rydale’, a Burgess of Inverkeithing. There are 3 other entries for men of the same surname, all called Hugh. Sir William (13th/14th C.) recorded in 1301 when there was an arrangement to swap him (as an English supporter of Edward I) for 2 Scottish prisoners. In 1305 there was a warrant of Edward I to pay him for assisting Robert Hastings at Roxburgh Castle. And in 1306 there was a letter asking for his protection (as well as others) from the Chancellor of England, since he was helping keep down Edward’s enemies in Scotland. He may be the same man as Sir William of Tillmouth and Twizel (son of Walter), who was appointed Sheriff of Northumberland in 1314 and was one of the custodians of Norham Castle; his children included William (who succeeded) and Hugh. William (d.1328) son of Sir William of Tillmouth, who held lands in the Durham area. He was Constable of Norham Castle and High Sheriff of Northumberland, and played a role in the managing of the Marches for King Edward II. Part of his lands was held by his brother Hugh, whose descendants were later Sheriffs and Mayors of Newcastle. His lands were eventually inherited by his 3 daughters, Isabel, Constantine and Joan. This branch of family usually spelled their name ‘Ridell’. William (13th/14th C.) possibly son of William and hence 7th Riddell of that Ilk. However, this period in the genealogy is difficult to follow, and there may well be additional generations, since some accounts suggest impossibly long lifespans. He probably died unmarried and was succeeded by his brother Geoffrey. Sir William (14th C.) possibly eldest son of Geoffrey and brother of Sir Robert and Richard. However, these generations are quite confused. He may have been knighted by David II and died in the reign of Robert II. He was probably father of Quentin or Mungo (or both). William (15th C.) recorded as ‘Wil. Riddle’ in 1498/9 when he witnessed a charter in Edinburgh. Perhaps the same ‘Willelmi Riddale’ had an escheat in Lanark recorded in 1501. William (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1527 as a witness in Selkirk for the Ragman Rolls of 1296 as ‘Willelmo de Ridal’. This was probably around the 1170s. He may be the younger son of Galfridus/Geoffrey who was Lord of Farringdon in Northamptonshire and Primside and Glengarnock in Scotland, who served in the court of William I and died in 1214. William (12th/13th C.) son of Ausketill and brother of Patrick. In some genealogies he is stated to be a son of Patrick, but this appears to be incorrect. He married Matilda Corbet, to whom he granted several pieces of land in dowry. He received part of the lands of Whitton, although he had no heirs, so all these lands reverted to the head of the family later. His wife is recorded yielding up lands to her Lord, Patrick of Riddell in the early 1200s; her son seems to have been Alexander Seton, and so presumably she secondly married a Seton. He may be the same as the son of Ausketill (recorded as Walter) who had a papal letter of protection in about 1170. This mentions that the same family still held lands at Brawby in Yorkshire. Sir William of Riddell (12th/13th C.) 6th Laird, son of Walter and grandson of Patrick. He is said to have been knighted at a young age by Alexander II. He married Isabella, daughter of William, Parson of Hownam. In the early years of the 13th century his wife Isabella gave a piece of land in Whitton to Melrose Abbey. This charter mentions several family members, proving 4 successive descents. However, the heir of Sir William is uncertain, as are the next few generations. He may have been succeeded by another William. He is probably the ‘domino Willelmo de Redale’ who witnessed a charter of lands in Lempitlaw to Soutra around 1250; ‘domino Roberto Redale’ was also listed, so presumably his son or brother. William (13th C.) listed among the jurors at Corbridge in Northumberland in 1256 as ‘Willelms de Ridal’. He may be the same as one of the contemporary Williams. He could be the same as the ‘Willielmo Redale’ who witnessed a charter for the lands of Lempitlaw in about 1250. Sir William (13th C.) a transaction involving land in Lilliesleaf. William (16th C.) described in a sasine of 1535 (relating to Harden) as ‘Bailie in that part’ along with George. He was probably a son of the Laird of Riddell (although which one is unclear). William (16th C.) probably a younger son of John of that Ilk. He is described in a document of 1551 receiving the lands of Bewlie from John of that Ilk and his heir Walter, who was his brother. He may be the brother of the Laird of Riddell who witnessed a transaction in Lilliesleaf Kirk in 1564. William of Bewlie (16th C.) brother of Walter of that Ilk, and probably son of the previous Walter. However, it seems hard to separate different Williams and Walters around this time. He may be the William who warranted the lands in Lilliesleaf that William Middlemas leased to John Donaldson in 1580. He witnessed a bond for the Ellists in 1581. He was in ‘Lyllisle’ in 1581 when he witnessed a sasine for Andrew, heir apparent of Walter of that Ilk (in the name of his sister Janet) for the lands of Wester Horsburgh in Peeblesshire from Alexander Horsburgh of that Ilk. He may be the same William ‘in Lillsie’ who was involved in an action with William Middlemas in 1551 receiving the lands of Bewlie from John of that Ilk and the half cottage lands of that Ilk. He may be the same William ‘in Lillsie’ who was accused of rieving crimes along with Martin’s Archkie Elliot and Hob of Bowholm Elliot. He may also be the ‘William Rydlie of Hawcuppe’ accused of rieving in 1590, along with Will Elliot of Heuchhouse, Nixons, Shielis and others; it is unclear where ‘Hawcuppe’ may have been. William (d.c.1630) recorded being granted the lands of Greatlaws in Lilliesleaf in 1595/6. He was described as son of the deceased George and his lands were ‘6 husbandlands’. He may have been son of George of that Ilk who is recorded several decades earlier. His sister Margaret, wife of Rev. Andrew Duncanson, was served heir to his lands in 1630. William of Muselee (16th/17th C.) probably son of Andrew of that Ilk, with his mother being a Pringle. He received the lands of Newhouse (in Lilliesleaf) as his inheritance. He also had a charter of Muselee in 1618. He married Bessie Ainslie. Their sons may have been John of Muselee and William of Newhouse (although these generations are confused). Helen, a direct descendant, married William Crawford, minister of Wilton, in 1716. William (d.bef. 1652) son of Walter. He is probably the William ‘portioner of Bewlie’ who signed the ‘Confessions of Faith’ in Hawick in 1638. In 1642 he gave his five-pound land of Bewlie and half a cotland to his brother Walter in Langhaugh. He married Helen Scott. In 1652 there is a marriage contract of his eldest daughter Margaret with Robert, 2nd son of Simon Elliot of the Binks. William of Newhouse (17th C.) probably younger son of William of Muselee. His 2nd son was Walter, who purchased the Minto estate. William of Bewlie (d.c.1695) son and heir of Henry. He was confirmed in the lands of Bewlie in 1669 and in 1670 gave part of the lands to his mother, Janet Scott. His sister Agnes succeeded to his lands in 1695 and married John Nisbet of Nisbetfield. He is probably the resident in Bewlie in Lilliesleaf Parish recorded on the 1604 Hearth Tax rolls. Sir William (17th C.) 3rd son of Sir John, 1st Baronet of Riddell and brother of Walter, 2nd Baronet. He was knighted by Charles I and served in the army in the Netherlands, being appointed Governor of ‘Desborough’ (probably Doesburgh). He married Wendelina de Bercham (or perhaps Buchan) in 1654. He had sons Walter and William, who moved to New Jersey, and other sons, Richard and John Frederick. His daughter Anne Catherine married Nicholas, son of Francis Bowyer and became heiress to her brother John Frederick (in 1677) and sister Margaret. William of Friarshaw (d.c.1693) 2nd son of Sir Walter, 2nd Baronet of Riddell. He acquired the lands of Friarshaw in Dumfriesshire and was the progenitor of the Riddells of Glenriddell. He was an advocate, perhaps being the William, writer in Edinburgh, who was deputed by others to subscribe to the Darien Scheme in 1696. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Francis Wauchope. Their son Walter was the first of the Riddells of Glenriddell (formerly Gilmerston) in Dumfriesshire. Walter was served as his heir in 1693. William (17th/18th C.) workman in Wilton and Hawick Parishes. He married Bessie Telfer and their children included: Thomas (b.1694) and William (b.1697), baptised in Wilton; and John (b.1706), baptised in Hawick. The witnesses in 1697 were William Scott and John Turnbull and in 1706 were John Scott ‘whitegates’ and John Scott ‘younger Soger’. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, son of George. He may have been the William, son of George and Janet Phaup who was baptised in Robertson in 1681. He was living at Appletreehall in 1722. He witnessed a baptism for John Thomson (in Drinkstone) in 1722. He married Isobel Morris in 1707 and their children included: Janet

(b.1716); William (b.1717); John (b.1720); and Mary (b.1722). The witnesses in 1722 were John Thomson and John Scott. William (17th/18th C.) living at Borthaugh in 1707 according to the Robertson Parish records. His wife Isobel had acted as midwife for the wife of William Elliot of Borthwickbrae. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Margaret Scott and their children included Walter (b.1700), baptised in Hawick. The witnesses were smith Robert Miller and Thomas Scott in Brieryhill. William (17th/18th C.) gardener in Hawick. In 1713 and 1719 he witnessed baptisms for gardener James Dunn. He married Agnes Nichol in 1704. Their children included: Margaret (b.1705); John (b.1708); Agnes (b.1717); William (b.1719); and Helen (b.1721). The witnesses in 1708 were gardeners James Dunn and James Falsyde. Walter (b.1700), John (b.1706), Francis (b.1710), Janet (b.1712), Andrew (b.1713), Janet (b.1715), Robert (b.1715) and Janet (b.1717), baptised in Hawick Parish, could also be his children (although there may be 2 families here). William (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Armstrong in 1704. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1714 he married Margaret, daughter of David Minto and their children included: David (b.1714); Margaret (b.1719); and an unnamed son (b.1721). William (17th/18th C.) recorded as ‘fornicator’ in 1725 when his son James was baptised in Hawick. The witnesses were another William (perhaps a cousin or other relative) and John Graham. William (17th/18th C.) shoemaker of Hawick. He witnessed a baptism for Thomas Greenshields in 1714 (along with shoemaker John Scott). In 1717 he was abused in the street by ‘Jafra the Piper’. He married Magdalene Deans and their children included: Elizabeth (b.1738); Henry (b.1739); and Isobel (b.1741). The witnesses in 1738 were shoemaker Robert Minto and Kirk Officer John Telfer. William (17th/18th C.) tenant in Allanhaugh Mill. He was probably son or brother of Walter, ‘Dusty-fit’. In 1729 he was admitted as a Burgess of Hawick and referred to as ‘late in Allanhaugh-milne’. He could be the William who witnessed a baptism for Walter in 1700. He is one of 2 Williams in Allanhaugh who witnessed a baptism in 1725 for John Scott, millwright in Allanhaugh Mill. William (18th C.) merchant in Hawick. He witnessed a baptism in 1743 for tailor Walter Rae and another in 1745 for wright James Roger. He is listed among the subscribers to the reprinted Buchanan’s ‘History of Scotland’ (1752); this was along with Charles Tudhope, who also witnessed the same baptism in 1745. He may be the shoemaker in Hawick who witnessed a baptism in 1761 for William Gledstains and Katherine Riddell (perhaps a relative). It is possible he was the William who in 1772 witnessed a baptism for William Turnbull. William (18th C.) resident of Woodfoot in Wilton Parish. He married Helen (or ‘Nelly’) Elliot and their children included Mary (b.1756) and James (b.1759). The witnesses in 1759 were Patrick Scott and George Hart. William (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Parkhill in 1766 when his son John was baptised. He may be the William who married Mary Thomson in Robertson in 1753. His children were probably Robert (b.1753) and John (b.1766). He may be the William who in 1771 witnessed a baptism for Thomas Elliot in Newmill. He could be the William from ‘Newmills’ recorded in a letter to a Selkirk lawyer in 1791. William (d.1788) described in ‘Dodsley’s Annual Register’ as dying at Selkirk at the incredible age of 116. He was said to have been a smuggler in his early life, and a great lover of brandy. He was also meant to have been a heavy drinker, who went through binges lasting several days. He married 3 times, the last being when he was 95. It is unclear how he was related to other local Riddles. William (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. He married Anne Affleck and their children included Margaret (b.1769), John (b.1772), Barbara (b.1775) and Anne (b.1780). William (18th C.) 4th son of Walter, 4th Baronet of Riddell. He emigrated to the West Indies, settling in Bermuda, where he was a merchant. He married Dinah Darrel and their children included John, Margaret, Robert, William, Sarah and Elizabeth. One of his descendants wrote a medical thesis. It is thought that this branch died out after only another couple of generations. William, W.S. of Camieston (1746–1829) 2nd son of Thomas, he succeeded since his older brother had died young. He was educated in Edinburgh and trained as a lawyer, being apprenticed to Thomas Cockburn and becoming Writer to the Signet in 1770. He was listed on the roll of electors for Roxburghshire in 1780. He was listed in 1788 as owner of 5 acres in ‘Annay’ in Melrose and Camieston in Lessuden Parish, as well as £390 of Bewlie in Lilliesleaf Parish. He may be the William of George Square, Edinburgh, recorded in a letter to a Selkirk lawyer in 1791. He acquired the farm of Union Hall (also known as Linthill) in Lilliesleaf Parish, from his mother’s family, the Hunters; however, in 1822 he sold it to William Currie, along with lands in Chapel, ‘Mr. Scott’s Acres in Lilliesleaf’ and Porteous Croft’ (according to the 1811 Land Tax Rolls). He also sold parts of Bewlie, which were later owned by Thomas A. Riddell Carre. He was listed among the voters in Roxburghshire in 1788 and was further listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805 and 1819. In 1776 he married Elizabeth, daughter and heiress of John Kerr of Cavers Carre. Their children were: Thomas (1778–1826), who succeeded; John (1779–1814), who served with the East India Company and died on the way home; Jane (1781–1849), who died unmarried; Adm. Robert (1782–1860), a decorated naval officer, who succeeded to the estate of Cavers Carre and took the additional surname ‘Carre’; Elizabeth (1785–1846), also unmarried; and Margaret (1787–1843), also died unmarried. William (18th C.) wright of Hawick, recorded in 1792 when his daughter Helen married Robert Boa in Edinburgh. He could be the same as the William described as a deceased labourer of Hawick in 1794 when his daughter Isobel married David Simpson in Edinburgh. William (18th C.) joiner in Lilliesleaf. He was said to be a descendant of the Riddells of Riddell. He married Margaret Hervey and their children were: John, who was a joiner; Thomas, a thatcher; Walter, who married Batsy Young; Mary, who married Glasgow merchant Thomas Cochran; and Margaret, who married tailor James Walker. William (d.1800) recorded in the Hawick register of deaths. He was listed as father of Martha and Mary, so the rest of his family were presumably deceased by then. William (18th/19th C.) resident at Hermitage, born in Roxburghshire, and said to be a direct descendant of the Riddells of that Ilk. He married Catherine Brydon and they had 9 children: William (b.1801), who married Jessie Watson and emigrated to Canada; John; James; Thomas, who emigrated to Ontario, Canada and married twice; Janet; Willhelmina; Mary, also moved to Canada; Anne, emigrated to Canada and married Hugh Smith; married Robert Craig and emigrated to Canada. William (d.1827) shoemaker of Hawick, perhaps related to the earlier William. He married Jean Goodfellow in 1796, and she died in 1838. Their children included wool-spinner Walter (1798–1863). William (1789–1867) eldest son of Robert and brother of Henry Scott. He was shepherd at Bellendean at the time of the Carterhaugh Baa, when he played for the Yarrow side, being known as one of the best runners in the district; he would have hailed a ball had he not been pursued by a farmer on horseback. He and Henry Scott farmed together at Ramsaycleuch. He married Elizabeth Milne (1799/1800–53) in 1831. His wife is recorded at Ramsaycleuchburn in 1841 with 5 children. He was still recorded in a directory of 1868 as farmer at Ramsaycleuchburn. Their children (all of who were born at Ramsaycleuchburn except the first) included: Margaret (b.1831); Robert Borthwick (1833–62), who died unmarried; William Milne (1835–1913), who farmed at Ramsaycleuchburn after his father and died at Bucklands Cottage; James Scott (b.1837), who moved to Cumberland; Jessie (b.1839), who married William Easton; Agnes Scott (b.1842), who married Thomas Irving of Langholm, and secondly married James Lunn, also from Langholm; and Eliza (1844–52). Most of the family are buried at Teviothead. William (18th/19th C.) tenant at Harwood, listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as owner of 2 horses. William (18th/19th C.) sheriff officer in Castleton Parish. He was listed among heads of households for the first (and perhaps only) time in 1838. Maj.-Gen. William of Camieston (1805–75) eldest son of Thomas of Camieston and descendant of the 4th Baronet of Riddell. His brother was Walter of Cavers Carre. He entered the East India Company’s military service in 1823, joining the 2nd Battalion of the 30th Native Infantry, rising through the ranks until achieving command of the regiment. He commanded the 30th Regiment of European Infantry during the Indian Mutiny, and was involved in many other important campaigns. He received several medals and retired from service in 1861, returning to live at Camieston. Afterwards he played an active role in the activities of the 3rd Roxburghshire Rifle Volunter Corps. He was also Commissioner of Supply and Justice of the Peace in Roxburghshire. His father Thomas had a sister of Col. Edgar Hunter of Linthill; after Col. Hunter’s death his father succeeded to the estate of Linthill in Lilliesleaf Parish, but it was sold before he succeeded. He married Margaret, daughter of Capt. John Wilkie, and she died in 1905, aged 85. They had 9 children, and he was succeeded by his only surviving son, William. He was buried at Bowden. William (1801–83) son of William and Catherine Brydon, he was born at Hermitage. He married Jessie, daughter of John and Euphemia Watson, from Oxnam Parish. He emigrated to Canada in 1831 and was a farmer in Beverley, Ontario. His children were William, John, Euphemia and James. William (b.1803) son of Thomas and Rachel Stirling. He was a joiner in Lilliesleaf, recorded in Pigot’s 1837 directory. In 1841 he was on the north side of Main Street. In Slater’s 1852 directory he was listed as a wright. He married Agnes Deans in 1832 and their children included: Thomas, a carpenter who emigrated to America; James, also a carpenter; Janet; Walter, a baker; and Rachel. He was deceased by 1851, when his wife and 3 children were living in Hawick. William (b.1816) carpenter in Lilliesleaf, son of John and Elizabeth Turnbull and grandson of joiner William. In 1841 he was a journeyman, living with Elizabeth, who was probably his mother. In 1851 he is listed on the south side of Main Street. He married Esther Thomson in 1843 and their children were: Jane (b.1844), who married James Hogg; John (b.1846); Betsy (b.1849); Andrew (b.1852); George (b.1854); Walter (b.1856); and Ellen (b.1858). William Brown Clark (1835–56) youngest son of Henry Scott, minister of Teviothead. He was born at the Flex. He attended John Watson's Institution in Edinburgh, and then went to the University there. He was described as a student and poet of some promise, but died at the age of 20. His poem ‘The Lament to Wallace’ appeared in some collections of Scottish verse (formerly spelled ‘Reddail’, ‘Reddall’, ‘Reddare’, ‘Redell’, ‘Reddall’, ‘Ridale’, ‘Riddaile’, ‘Riddall’, ‘Riddale’, ‘Riddele’, ‘Ridel’, ‘ Rydal’, ‘Rydal’, ‘ Ryddel’, ‘ Ryddel’, ‘ Rydel’, ‘Rydell’, ‘ Ryedale’, etc.).

Riddell-Buchanan (ri-dul-bew-ka-nin) n. compound surname adopted by some generations of the Riddells of that Ilk, after they inherited Buchanan estates through marriage in 1772. Its use was abandoned by more recent generations, who reverted to the use of ‘Riddell’, with ‘Buchanan’ as an additional middle name (see Riddell).

Riddell Carre (ri-dul-ker, -kar) n. Adm. Robert (1782–1860) 3rd son of William Riddell of Camieston and Elizabeth Kerr, daughter of John of Cavers Carre. He was a Captain in the Royal Navy, entering in 1796 and being present at several battles, including Copenhagen and Algiers. He eventually had the rank of Admiral. He succeeded to the Cavers Carre estate following the death of his uncle Alexander in 1817, and his mother in 1828. He died unmarried and was succeeded by his nephew Walter. Thomas Alexander (1831–1905) son of Walter. He succeeded to Cavers Carre on the death of his father in 1874. In the Land Tax Rolls of about 1874 he was listed as owner of lands of Bewlie in Lilliesleaf Parish. He was Colonel in the 4th Battalion Royal Scots Fusiliers and served with the East India Company. He was also a Captain in the Ayshire and Wightonshire Militia. He was a Justice of the Peace, was on the county council for Lilliesleaf and was Chairman of Bowden Parish Council. He was a member of the Jedforest Club. In 1865 he married Elizabeth, daughter of Alfred T. Fellows from near Nottingham; her brother was the archaeologist Sir Charles Fellows. He was succeeded by his son Ralph Gervase, and also had daughters Elizabeth Olive Geva and Grizel Geva.

Walter (1807–74) 2nd son of Thomas Riddell of Camieston, and descended from the Riddells of that Ilk. He was born in Edinburgh and educated there. He worked as a merchant at East India House in London for 20 years. In 1848 he retired to Hertfordshire and in 1860 he succeeded to the estate of Cavers Carre after the death of his uncle Robert. He then took the additional surname ‘Carre’. He moved back to Scotland in 1869. He was a Justice of the Peace and Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire. He devoted much of his time to researching the families and characters of the Borders. He contributed to local newspapers, as well as ‘Notes and Queries’, and was in demand as a popular lecturer. A collection of his writings was published after his death, ‘Border Memories; or, Sketches of Prominent Men and Women of the Border’ (1876), edited by James Tait of the Kelso Chronicle. In 1830 he married Elizabeth Riddell MacLauchlan, only surviving child of Lieut.-Col. Lauchlan MacLauchlan. He secondly married Mary Falconer, daughter of William Currie of Linthill. His son Capt. Thomas Alexander succeeded to the Cavers Carre estate. He was buried at Bowden.

Riddell Chaipel (ri-dul-chä-pul) n. former chapel said to have stood on the lands of Wester Lilliesleaf, later called Riddell. The location was supposed to be near the old ash tree not far from the gate leading from the Easter Lodge to the mansion house, a little south of the site of the old tower. The field in which the ruins were located was known as ‘Chapel Park’. There is a report of 2 stone coffins being unearthed from the foundations around 1850, one containing a pot with ashes and pieces of armour, and the other containing bones of gigantic size.

Riddell House (ri-dul-hoes) n. former mansion house on the Riddell estate in Lilliesleaf Parish, it replaced an earlier house, which in turn replaced the castle, which probably dates to Norman times. The original tower-house was probably constructed around the 14th century, enlarged in the 16th century and again in the 17th, making a long southerly front of 2 storeys. A third Storey was added in the 18th century, along with a north-west wing, with a north-east wing added in the 19th century. Tax was paid on 47 windows there in 1748. It was largely destroyed by fire in 1943, although it exists in photographs and drawings (see also Riddell Toor).

Riddell Mains (ri-dul-manz) n. former name for the main lands in Lilliesleaf Parish held by the Riddells of that Ilk. In 1643 it was valued at £910, being the bulk of the property of the Laird at that time. It was still listed in the same way in 1788, when owned by Sir John Riddell. It was probably equivalent to what was later just called ‘Riddell’.

Riddell Mill (ri-dul-mil) n. former corn mill on the Riddell estate, on the opposite side of the main farm. It was water powered and fed by a small lade that is now covered. The mill building survives, although all fittings have been removed and it is now in use as a barn. Situated in a bend in the Ale Water, at the foot of Dunstone Height, it was formerly also known as Dunstone Mill. In 1643 the ‘Town Mill and Mill thereof’ was valued at £247, among the properties of the Riddells of that Ilk. However, it was sold before 1678, with value of £167. Thomas Lawrie was there in 1785. It was recorded as ‘Lands of Townmill, and mill thereof’ as part of the Riddell estate in Lilliesleaf Parish in 1788. John Haldane was miller there in 1841, James Haldane in the 1850s and Alexander Lauder in the 1860s. The name was also used for a water-powered saw-mill, built on the Riddell estate in the early 19th century.

the Riddells (þú-ri-dulz) n. family of Riddell of that Ilk, who gained lands at Riddell, in Lilliesleaf parish around the middle of the 12th century and were granted a baronetcy in 1628. About 1823 the estate was sold to the Sprots. For several centuries the family were buried at Lilliesleaf. The family has a Norman origin and received the lands of Rydedale in Yorskshire, being given the designation ‘de Ridel’ for several generations. Tradition (encouraged by Sir Walter Scott) told of stone coffins at Riddell bearing the dates 797 and 937. However, there is no reason to believe that the family’s origins can be traced back quite so far. The early history of the family is confused by the contemporary use of the same name by different men, with early Christian names including William, Geoffrey (or Galfridus) and Hugh. The history is further complicated by the family’s habit of calling their lands after themselves (rather than the other way around), and it seems clear that the Riddell in Lilliesleaf Parish was not the original family home. The name occurs in England at the time of William the Conqueror, when lands were granted in Northumbria, following the Battle of Hastings. Another branch of the family appears to have remained on the continent, settling in Italy in the 11th century. Meanwhile the English family moved to Scotland along with David I, Gervase being the first Scotsman. The lands they were granted near Lilliesleaf appear to have been named after their former designation. The arms of Riddell of that Ilk shows 3 ears of corn (or rye) and a red chevron. The family motto is ‘I hope to share’ and the crest shows a greyhound – ‘…To ancient Riddel’s fair domain, Where Aill, from mountains freed, Down from lakes did raving come; Each wave was creased with tawny foam, Like the mane of a chestnut steed’ [SWS] (formerly spelled ‘Ridel’, etc., and interchangeable with ‘Riddle’).

Riddellshiel (ri-dul-sheel) n. farmstead in Lilliesleaf Parish, just to the north of Clerklands. The woods to the north are called Riddellshiel Plantation, and a small lake to the west is Riddellshiel Moss.

Riddellsteed (ri-dul-steed) n. Riddelstead, former lands in Liddesdale, recorded as ‘Riddale Steid’ on the 1541 rental roll. It is there said to be hereditary property of the Laird of Glendinning, held of the Lord of Liddesdale.

Riddell Toor (ri-dul-toor, -tow-ur) n. former peel tower on the Riddell estate. The name is also used for the more modern tower built nearby, referred to as the General’s Toor. The first fortified house on these lands was probably built shortly after the Riddell family acquired the lands in the 12th century. But the existing structure is probably from the 14th century, and was only revealed after the mansion burned down in 1943. The surviving walls are in the south-west corner. There is also evidence of 16th century stonework. The tower was probably converted into a mansion house in the 17th century, making a long southern front of 2 storeys, with a 3rd floor added in the 18th century, along with further wings in the 18th and 19th centuries. The ruins are now among mature woodland to the north-east of the main farmhouse.

Riddington (ri-din-tin) n. Anthony (1911–98) from Countesthorpe, Leicestershire. He was a professional cricketer, who played for Hawick & Wilton in the 1930s.

Riddle (ri-dul) n. (see also Riddell) George John (1830–1920) son of John and Isabella Richardson. He was a tailor and clothier and cousin of John, also a tailor in Hawick. His sister Helen married John Graham of ‘Graham’s Hotel’. He married Margaret, daughter of William Clark and Jane Murray, and she died in 1921, aged 91; she was a cousin of the father of Sir James A.H. Murray. The couple celebrated their golden wedding in 1900, when they had 5 sons, 2 daughters and 19 grandchildren, and they lived to see their 70th wedding anniversary. Their children were: John, fishmonger, who married Helen Elliot; William, joiner in Birkenhead, who married Jean Roberts; Andrew C., engineer on the Aberdeen steamships, who emigrated to Australia and married Georgina Johnstone; James, stockmaker, who married Mary Elliot; Thomas, a tailor, who married Margaret Dalgleish; George, Co-op store manager in Newcastleton; Jane, who married hosier manager Robert Hamilton; Robert, bank clerk in South Africa; Anne, hosier worker; George J., Secretary of the Universities Club, Edinburgh, who married Lily Mackenzie; Isabel, ‘Bella’; William, chemist, who married Hilda Evans; Elliot, with the Bank of Nova Scotia in Toronto; Jean, who married accountant Percy Howard of Langholm; and Alexander Westwater, a chemist. Helen ‘Ellen’ (b.c.1813) born in Hawick, daughter of tailor Walter. She was proprietor of a grocer’s shop at 24 High Street, who also kept boarders. She started by selling 2d mutton pies at weekends, the business being carried on by her niece (of the same name) as a confectioner’s, and later by other family members. It was popularly known as ‘Ellen Riddle’s’ for about a century. She is recorded as a High Street grocer on the 1851 census, living with her brothers Francis and Walter, and nieces Helen and Isabella. Probably the same Helen is recorded in Slater’s 1852 directory as an earthenware and glass dealer on the High Street, as well as a grocer. In 1861 she was recorded as a ‘wool framework trimmer’ at 24 High Street, living with her niece Ellen and 3 boarders. Helen (b.1845/6–1914) daughter of tailor John and Margaret Armstrong. She was niece of the earlier Helen, from whom she took over the grocer’s and pie shop at 24 High Street. Already in 1851 she was living with her aunt Helen (and uncles Francis and Walter), as well as her younger sister Isabella, at 24 High Street (a few houses along from her parents and siblings). She was still living with her aunt in 1861 and in 1871 she was ‘Pie-Baker’ and head of household, living with her sister Mary Ann and brother Frank. James Haining describes her in the 1930s as maker of ‘celebrated pies still remembered’. In the latter part of the 19th century the back of the shop was also used as a meeting place for debating societies and other groups. J. (18th/19th C.) clogger in Castleton. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. James (18th/19th C.) chaise-driver in Hawick. The death of his infant daughter is recorded in 1822. John (b.1800) born in Selkirk, probably son of William and Agnes Hutton. It is said that the family came from Carterhaugh in Yarrow. He was a tailor in Hawick at 12 Howegate. He is listed as a tailor on the Mid Row in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory and on the Howegate in 1837. He is also listed as a Howegate tailor in Slater’s 1852 directory, with his son John listed as a tailor on the High Street. He was still on the Howegate on the 1861 census, and was listed as a tailor and grocer. He married Isabella Richardson. Their children included: John (b.1819), also a tailor; William (b.1821); James (b.1822); Isabella (b.1824), who married wool merchant James Melrose; Thomas (b.1826); Agnes (b.1828; George John (b.1830); Helen (b.1831); and Catherine (b.1839), who married wool-spinner Walter Scott. John (b.1811/2) born in Cavers Parish, he was a tailor on Walter’s Wynd in the 1851 census. He was thus one of 3 contemporary Hawick tailor’s with the same name! His wife was Ellen and their children included Isabella and John. John (b.1819) son of Howegate tailor John, he was a tailor on the High Street. He is listed in Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1851 he was at about 28 High Street, a master tailor employing 3 men; in 1861 he was listed as a tailor and clothier at 24 High Street. He married Margaret (perhaps also called ‘Mary’) Armstrong in 1843; she was sister of ironmonger John Armstrong and died in 1888, aged 66. Their children included: Helen (b.c.1846), who grew up with her aunt Helen and took over the pie-making business; Isabella (b.c.1848); Walter (b.c.1850); Mary Ann (b.c.1853), who married William C. Simpson and continued pie-making; Francis (b.1855); Margaret (1857–96), who married joiner George Gall; Lancelot Armstrong (b.1859); Agnes (b.1862); and John Armstrong (b.1865). John (b.c.1820) shoemaker at 5 Howegate. His wife was Maria, and their children included: Thomas; Frederick; and Cecilia. He could be the John who donated a model of Hermitage Castle to the Museum in 1863. John Turnbull (19th C.) Hawick character of the mid-1800s, nicknamed ‘Tip-madaisy’. Mary Ann (1852/3–1931) daughter of tailor John. She married William C. Simpson. She continued the confectionary side of the business run by her sister and aunt (both called Ellen Riddle) at 24 High Street. Walter (1789–1849) son of William, he was born in Selkirk. He became a tailor of Hawick and was a trustee of the Relief Kirk. He is listed as a tailor on the High Street in Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories. He may have been related to John, who was also a Hawick tailor at about the same time. In 1841 he is listed at about 23 High Street. He married Isobel Kedzie, whose family came from Slaidhills, and she died in 1838, aged 51. Their children were: Helen, who was a grocer (of pie fame); William (b.1822/3), a tailor, who emigrated to London, Ontario; Francis, joiner; Walter, blacksmith; and Isabel. William (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Agnes Tait and their children included: John (b.1728); and John (again, b.1730). The witnesses in 1728 appear to be John Scott and John Paterson. William (b.1822/3) son of tailor Walter. He married Wilson Stuart in Hawick in 1846. He emigrated to Canada, and settled in London, Ontario. William (19th/20th C.) joiner, with business where the Burgh yard was later located. He was a Councillor and J.P., and was for a long time Session Clerk and elder of Allars Kirk. He was probably descended from tailor Walter.

ride (rid) v., arch. to fix boundaries, especially by perambulation, pp., arch. be ridden – ‘The said day the Baylyeaes and Counsell appoynted the Commone to ryd upon Fryday nixt, the first day of June ...’ [BR1705], ‘...did appoynt and ordaine the Common to ryd upon Fryday come eight days, being the twenty-sixth of May instanct and current’ [BR1710] (also written ‘ryd’ and ‘ryde’, the word was used to describe the circuit of the itinerant High Court of the Judiciary in the 15th century, and was used in the context of boundary marking in Selkirk in the early 16th century; from Middle English; note the confusion with the word ‘ride’ meaning to go on horseback, which may have been confounded with this word in references to the ‘common riding’; note that the past participle use transposes the usual object into a subject, cf. belong).

ride (rid) v., arch. to ford a river on horseback, be fordable – ‘But when the land-sergeant the water saw, It winna ride my lads, quo’ he ...’ [CPM].

ride oot see Ride-oot

Ride-oot (rid-oo’) n. Ride-out, an organised visit to one of a number of local villages or farms on Tuesdays and Saturdays in the weeks between the Picking of the Cornet and the start of the Common Riding. They are essentially practices for the big weekend, and are not part of the official Common Riding, being organised by the Cornet. The first Ride-out seems to have been held in 1891 (with Andrew Haddon as Cornet and J.E.D. Murray as Right-Hand Man) and was an outing to Lilliesleaf by 5 consecutive Cornets, followed 2 weeks later by another ride-out via Branxholme, Northhouse, Skelfhill and Priesthaugh to St. Leonard’s. The first Ride-out to Mosspaul was in 1901, James Sutherland’s year. The Tuesday Ride-outs were originally held so that shop-workers and others could attend on half-day closing, with the mill-workers being able to attend on Saturdays. Women have been officially allowed on most Ride-outs since 1997. They extend over either 5 or 6 weeks, depending on when the Picking is. The venues are chosen each year by the Cornet (with advice from the Right- and Left-Hand Men and Acting Futher). The first Ride-out has been to Bonchester since about the last war. The premier event is the ride to Mosspaul, which is 2 weeks before the Common Riding. After the last Saturday Ride-out, the Principals stop off at Hornshole. There are sometimes special one-off rides because of the place of residence of the new Cornet. Locations have included Bonchester, Cavers, Cogsmill, Denholm, Ettrickbridge, Harden House, Hermitage, Lilliesleaf, Mosspaul, Newmill, Philhope Bridge, Robertson, Skelfhill, Southfield, Teindside, Teviothead Lodge, Teviothead, West Bucleuch and Wolfelee. Each ride-out starts with a muster in Allars Crescent, leaving from Backdamgate. The Right-Hand Man acts as front marshal and the Left-Hand Man as back marshal. There are usually lots of cars packed with picnics which go to meet the riders at the appointed location. There is usually a sing-song in the village hall or similar, and before leaving the ‘Big Fower’ sing 5 verses of ‘Teribus’ while mounted. On returning to town, the Principals dismount at the Backdamgate and usually carry children on their shoulders round to the steps of the Tower where there is a strive and more song singing. A junior ride-out (for primary school pupils) was started in 2010 – ‘oo yaise the sorta ‘no the ful shillin’ kinda general English . . . ‘twae horses short o a rideoot’, that wud be a Hawick yin’ [IWL] (the usualy plural is ‘Ride-oots’, although ‘Rides-oot’ might be more correct English).

ride the fair (r̂i-d̄-θu-f̄ar) v., arhc. to open a fair by riding in procession. Magistrates from Jedburgh rode the market at the Winter Fair in the early 18th century and had to be rescued from the crowd by the Hawick Magistrates! Similarly the Commissioners of the Duke of Buccleuch tried to ride the fair one year and had to be rescued from the Bailies, with some resulting injuries – “[The Burgh Magistrates proceeded to] rylene the fair’ [BR1672] (also ride the fair: note that this meaning of ‘ride’ always referred to being on horseback, unlike in common riding).

ridin (r̂i-d̄in) n. the Riding of the Marches, or Common Riding, the annual marking of a town’s boundaries, traditionally on horse-back – ‘The said day, Allane Deanes, travellour, being accusit for not being at the ryding and merching of the Commoune . . . ’[BR1645] (note that the original meaning may have had nothing to do with horses, see ride).

the Ridin o the Mairches (θu-r̂i-d̄in-θu-mār-cheez) n. the central part of Hawick Common Riding, performed by the Cornet and his followers on the Friday of Common Riding week. The riders mount at St. Leonard’s (after the Chase) and proceed to the furthest point of the Common, via Wulliestruther and Acreknoe (the Cornet passes along the Hawick side, the others free to choose), for the ceremonial ‘Cutting of the Sod’. The cavalcade proceeds to the Moor for the Races, then rides via Crumhaughhill to Myrselawgreen. The Principals next perform the Dipping of the Flag at the Coble Pool. Afterwards the whole party goes to the Millpath for the proclamation that the marches have been ridden and the Song-singing. Before the Division of the Common in 1777 the entire Common boundary would be marched, and many marker turfs or stones positioned, as well as neighbouring sheep and cattle driven off. Sometimes this would be done on foot over the few days before the ceremonial riding. The ceremony is believed to have taken place since at least the 16th century, but could be even older. The Council used to appoint 12 Burleymen to assist the Bailies in riding the marches, the appointment being a courtesy one after the Division, and the last appointments being made in 1854. Footmen as well as horsemen are recorded as part of the procession in 1725. The practice of riding armed with pistols was officially discontinued in 1784. In the years 1900–04 and 1921 it was switched to the Thursday morning and in 1910–13 it was moved to the Saturday. J.E.D. Murray carried it on himself during WWI and Chap Landles led the unofficial rides during WWII, while in 2001 there was an organised walk round the marches in November (see also the Common Ridin).

ridin the fair (r̂i-d̄in-thu-f̄ar) n. right of announcing a fair on horseback and collecting the duties (see also ride the fair).

ridin the mairches (r̂i-d̄in-thu-mār-cheez) n. ceremonial marking of the boundaries of a town Common. Scottish towns with this tradition include, Annan, Dalkeith, Lanark, Linlithgow, Rutherglen (discontinued in the 19th century) and Sanquhar, as well as the towns of the Borders.

Ridley (rid-lee) n. John (b.1794/5) civil engineer from England. He was living at Thorlieshope in 1861, but probably only there temporarily for hunting. His wife was Mary. Nicholas ‘Nick’ (1929–1993) Baron of Liddesdale, born in Northumberland, he was educated at Eton and Oxford University. He became an M.P. in 1959, held several appointments under Edward Heath and then became a great supporter of Margaret Thatcher. He was Minister of State at the Foreign & Commonwealth Office (in the years before the Falklands War), Financial Secretary to the Treasury, Secretary of State for Transport (authoring the Ridley Report on how the Conservatives would deal with the Unions), Secretary of State for the Environment (where he popularised the phrase ‘NIMBY’, but reduced public funding for environmental protection) and Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (which he was forced to resign after likening Helmut Kohl to Adolf Hitler). He was also responsible for introducing the ‘Poll Tax’. In 1992 he was created a life peer, choosing the title ‘Baron Ridley of Liddesdale’, despite objections from Scottish politicians. His puppet image on ‘Spitting Image’ always had a cigarette in its mouth, and he died of lung cancer shortly after being elevated to the Lords.

rieve (reev) v., arch. to plunder, rob, raid, rustle – ‘God send the land deliverance Frae every reaving, riding Scot: We’ll sune hae neither cow nor ewe, We’ll sune hae neither staig nor stot’ [LHTB], ‘…On their reiving raids through the glens and glades’ [TK] (also written ‘rieve’ and ‘rieve’).

Rieve (reev) n. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Meadshawshiel in 1794. He married Mary Balmer in Robertson in 1789 and their children included: Agnes (b.1791); Margaret (b.1794); Joan (b.1801); and James (b.1805). John (18th C.) workman in Hawick. His wife was Margaret Douglas and their son John was baptised in 1743. John (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Howpsaley in 1735 when his daughter Mary was baptised. He is probably the John who married Margaret Dalgleish in Robertson in 1734. John (18th C.) tenant in Howcleuch. He married Esther Glendinning in Hawick in 1761; she died in 1807, aged 66, and is buried in Borthwick Waas. Their children (baptised in Hawick Parish) included: Margaret (b.1763); Betty (b.1765); James (b.1772); and Esther (b.1779). Witnesses in 1765 and 1772 were the whole congregation. Additional children who might have been his (baptised in Southdean and Robertson) included: John (b.1767); and Nelly (b.1777). He may be the John who in 1767 witnessed a baptism for herd John Scott. William (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Craik in 1742. He is probably the William who married Bessie Murray in Robertson in 1736. His children included: Helen (b.1740); and Andrew (b.1742) (also written ‘Reive’ and ‘Rive’).

riever (ree-vur) n. a plunderer, robber, marauder, freebooter – ‘They deem you the children of rievers, Unkempt, as of old, and rude; Still bound to vie with friend or foe, In keen and narrow feud’ [FH], ‘When thou sawist ane reyfthan, than thou becamist airt an’ pairt wi’ him …’ [HSR], ‘…an mosstrooper an reever rade bye ti foray an fecht an reipin raid’ [ECS], ‘…The nag.”

Rigby (rig-bee) n. Hugh J. (19th/20th C.) worked as postman in Denholm. He also had a small photography business on the Poplars for a while. He married Jessie, daughter of Bedrule schoolmaster William MacNeill.
Rigend

Rigend (rig-end) n. former farmstead in Wilton Parish. John Cavers was there in 1771. It is recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when James Nichol was farmer. It was probably near Coldhouse (it is ‘Rigg End’ in 1771).

Rigfit (rig-fi) n. Rigfoot, farm in Ewesdale, on the Meikledale Burn to the west of Meikledale. William Graham was there in 1821. Henry Anderson was shepherd there in 1841 and 1851 (also written ‘Riggfoot’).

Rigg see Rig

Rigg (rig) n. James (17th C.) distant cousin of the Riggs of Atherne. He signed the ‘Confessions of Faith’ in Hawick in 1638. His lands of Carberry are near Musselburgh. It is unclear what his local connection was. Katherine see Lady Katherine Douglas.

Riggin (ri-gin) n. ridge of a roof or the roof itself, roofing, rafters – ‘…except for the screws and riggings of houses within the Burgh belonging to Burgessess’ [BR], ‘…to help and mend the channels and caussays from their respective foordoors upon each syd of the street to the tope rigging of the cassay …’ [BR1715], ‘…puss had ‘hirpled thrice withershins’ round house, and then suddenly made a spring to the riggin …’ [EM1820], ‘May poortith lean, wi’ viage mean, Ne’er come thy biggin; I hope that ye will never see It rest upon your riggin’’ [DA], ‘An on A snogged ma leilh-lane, till the riggens an ruiffs o Denum …cam in sicht’ [ECS], ‘And then, I tow, we’re proud to see Upon the riggin’s resting …’ [TCh], ‘…And Back-Brae craws on the riggin’’ [DH], arch. the spine – ‘And oure the auld man’s rigging back She laid her rannel-tree shanke’ [JTe], ‘And she lap sae yald, and spanged sae hich, Her rigging banes did rattle’ [JTe].

Riggin-stane (ri-gin-stān) n., pl. ridge stone of a roof – ‘Mending the slate roof and pointing the rigging-stone and scues of the said Kirk’ [1735/HAST1926].

Right-Haund Man (ri’-hawnd-mawn) n. Right-Hand Man during the Common Riding, being the previous year’s Cornet. He gives recommendations for the next Cornet, and provides assistance to the new Cornet. He rides with the Cornet during many of the ceremonial events, wearing the same green coat etc. He acts as front marshal during the Ride-outs. Occasionally someone has served twice as Right-Hand Man, such as William Stoddart in 1875, and W. Lockie Thorburn after WWII. Mr. Lunn stood in as Left-Hand man in 1875, even although he had not previously been Cornet, and Robert Anderson stood in as Right-Hand Man in 1897, the year before he was Cornet! It is unclear at what point the positions of Right- and Left-Hand Man became ‘official’ during the Common Riding. ‘The Cornet and his two men’ are referred to in 1809, there is a photographic portrait of the 1857 Cornet and his 2 supporters, and a painting of 1846 showing the ‘Big Threi’ crossing the Teviot.

Ringwood

Ringan Red (ring-un-red) n. fictional character in John Leyden’s ‘Lord Soulis’, who is the champion of the Lord of Hermitage – ‘Syne he’s ca’d on him Ringan Red: A sturdi kemp was he, From friend or foe in border field Who never a foor would flee’[JL] (also ‘Red Ringan’).

ring an wheel (ring-an-wheel) n., arch. a military manoeuvre for resisting cavalry – ‘And charging past, with rapid stride, They formed the ring-and-wheel, And cheered with lusty Border pride From out their fort of steel’[JL].

the Ring i the Haugh (thu-ring-i-thu-hawch) n. former popular name for the area at the Common Haugh where men used to gather to play ‘pitch and toss’ during the 19th century – ‘The Duke o’ the Dean comes staggerin’ doon; O’ the ring i’ the Haugh auld Broughton’s boss, And Michael Wintrip gangs roond the toon, Cryin’ siller that’s squandered at Pitch and Toss’[HI].

ringle-eied (ring-ul-id) adj., arch. having a wall eye, with an eye squinting outwards – ‘Ring-eied = having an eye asquint, so as to display much white’[ECS].

Ringlees Knowe (ring-lleez-now) n. area on the eastern slopes of Berryfell Hill, between the Slitrig and Rule valleys, just north of Fernielees Sike. There are the remains of a small settlement here, about 50 m by 35 m, partly destroyed by quarrying. To the south is a 0.8 m-high stone, which has been set up, probably as a marker.

ring-tails (ring-talz) n., pl., arch. arrears in rent, odd pieces of business left when a firm is wound up, left-overs, remnants – ‘Ring-tails, Small remnants of an thing; as, in relation to drink, it is said, ‘Tak aff your ring-tails, and brew again’, Roxb.’[JoJ].

Ringwood (ring-wood) n. parish and market town in Hampshire, with the same name as lands to the south of Hawick. Ringwood is recorded as early as the 10th century, with a grant by King Edgar to the Church of Abingdon. Just before the Norman Conquest it was held by Tostig, who was Earl of Northumbria, and brother of King Harold. Given Tostig’s connection to Northumbria, and the fact that he held extensive lands elsewhere, there is a possibility that the Teviotdale Ringwood was named after the English one by either him or some other common landowner. The origin of the name is suggested to be ‘rina wuda’, meaning ‘border wood’.
Ringwud

Ringwudfield (ring-wud-field) n. Ringwoodfield, area on the southern side of the upper Teviot valley, formerly in Cavers Parish. It was long a property of Melrose Abbey, described as lying upon the ‘Alwent (Allan) and ‘Teviot’ and given to the monks by Oswulf during the reign of Malcolm IV (mid-12th century). The boundaries of the lands are briefly described, but most of the names are now unfamiliar – ‘Blachaple’, ‘Bolli-nesburn’, ‘Crombirche’, ‘Pennango’, ‘Brunemore’ and ‘Blackaburne’. The grant was remade by Philip de Valognes, Chamberlain of Scotland just a few years later. It was confirmed by Uchtred, son of Oswulf (and his son Uchtred) in about 1166. In about 1358 the specific lands of Penangushope and Caldcleuch, within this barony, were granted to Melrose Abbey. There were further confirmations in the reigns of Alexander II and David II. It is recorded as ‘Ryngwood’ in 1360 when Sir William, Earl of Douglas, charged Sir William of Gledstains, his Baillie of the Barony of Cavers, to defend the Abbot and Convent of Melrose as lords of the lands there. The Abbey presumably held the lands throughout the 15th century, and David Scott of Branxholme and his son Robert were made bailies in 1484. In a document of 1500 it is referred to as ‘the lordship of Ryngwoodfield’. It contained (at least) the lands and steadings of ‘Ryngwoodechat, Stobycot, the Burghe, Prysthaugh, Caldcleuch, Standholm, Penangushope, Sowdinryg and the Bowenyl’ (now mostly familiar places), which were leased by Walter Scott of Branxholme from Melrose Abbey in 1500. His son, Sir Walter, was appointed Baillie of lands belonging to Melrose Abbey, including Ringwoodfield, in 1519 and reappointed in 1524. In the Exchequer Rolls of 1538 there is a note about the Comptroller’s expenses in visiting here (along with other Royal properties, including Hawick and Rodono); it seems likely that this was because Scott of Buccleuch had temporarily forfeited the lands to the Crown. In 1540 the ‘fermes’ were paid to the Abbot of Melrose, amounting to £52 6s 8d; in addition the King’s shepherds were paid for various amounts of grain in the lands of ‘Northous, Stobbe-Tait, et Cokburn’, ‘lie Burgh’ and ‘Vestcotrig et Southcotrig et Bolburg’ (with transcription errors). The ‘lands of Ringwoodfield and the office of bailiery of Melroseland’ are recorded in the Scott retour of 1553/4; the lands were then valued at £52 Scots. In 1558 the Prior of Melrose complained about Walter Scott of Branxholme possessing the lands ‘in Ryngwoodfield’ and the bailiary of other lands of the Abbey. In about 1564 the lands were valued at £3 6s 8d, and included Brugh, Stobcote, Ringwoodhaugh, Bowanhill, Grange, Priesthaugh, Penangushope, ‘Woisterrie’ [probably Westcoterig], Northhouse, Southdeanrig and Cauldecleuch; Sir Walter Scott inherited them from his grandfather at this time. Sir Walter Scott (the ‘Bold Buccleuch’) inherited the lands from his father in 1574. In 1621 Walter, Earl of Buccleuch resigned the lands to Thomas Hamilton, Earl of Melrose, when it is listed as Cauldecleuch, Northhouse, ‘Crawshope’, Stobicote, Brugh, Southdeanrig, ‘Coliburn’, Westcoterig, ‘Rowanhill’ [probably Bowan-hill], Priesthaugh and Penangushope’. In 1660 the lands are recorded being put in ‘wadset’ to pay the fine imposed by Cromwell on Scott of Buccleuch; it was still technically in the Lordship of Melrose and consisted of Cauldecleuch, Priesthaugh, Northhouse, ‘Coliburne’, Stobicote, Doecleuch, Southdeanrig, Brugh, Fairny-side, Peelbrae, Penangushope, Langleuchside, Phaup, Linhope and Frostylee. In the 1663 marriage contract of Anne, Countess of Buccleuch it appears to no longer be a Lordship, but it heads a list of farms that were mostly formerly contained within it and now referred to as lying within the Lordship of Melrose, namely ‘Ringwoodfield, Caldecleuch, Northous, Thirllestane, Braidhauch, Crowishoipe, Stobit-coat-burgh, Suddinrig, Coatsburne, Westcotrige, Bowanhill, Presithaugh, and Pannangoishope’; essentially the same list occurs in the 1653 service of heirs for Mary Scott of Buccleuch. It is recorded again in the charter to James Scott, Earl of Dalkeith in 1693 (transcribed ‘Kingwoodfield’); it is then within the Lordship of Melrose. The name does not occur after the 17th century, but is crudely the same as ‘Teviotdalehead’, as used by the Buccleuch estates. It seems likely that if there was a tower house it was on the land of ‘Ryngwoodchat’, which may be an error for ‘Ringwoodhaugh’. This probably corresponded with the modern Broadhaugh, a name that only appears from the end of the 16th century. The lands may also have been connected with the Scotts of Allanhaugh. It has been suggested that the associated Grange of the monks of Melrose lay somewhere between Bowan Hill and Priesthaugh. Note that local historian Walter Deans seems to have mistaken ‘Ringwoode fell’ for the farms of Berryfell, and ‘Ringwood Hatt’ for a field there called the Hates (the name of the area survives in the nearby Ringwood Hill; it is Ringwudhaugh

‘ringwude’ in the 1160s, ‘Ringwde’ in about 1170, ‘Ryngwodfeld’ in c.1358, ‘Rengwude’ and ‘Rengwodfeld’ in c.1360s, ‘Ringwodfeld’ in 1484, ‘Ryngwodfeld’ in 1500, ‘Ringwodfeld’ in 1519, ‘Ryngwodfield’ and ‘Ringwodfield’ in 1524, ‘Ringwodfeld’in 1538, ‘Ringwodfeld’ and ‘Rinvodfeld’ in 1553/4, ‘Ringwodfield’ in 1557, ‘Ringvoldfield’ in 1564, ‘Ringwedfeld’ in 1574, ‘Ringwedfeld’ in 1634 and ‘Ringwedfeld’ in 1660 and 1663; note that there is a town and parish of Ringwood in Hampshire, which is presumably unconnected.

Ringwudhaugh (ring-wud-hawch) n. Ringwoodhaugh, probable name for a steading near Ringwood Hill, recorded as ‘Ryngwodchat’ in 1500. In 1557 it was ‘Ringwoodhaht’ when Adam Scott of Allanhaugh paid rental for it to Melrose Abbey; it was valued at £5 at that time. In a rental roll of about 1564 it is ‘Ringwoodhauch’. It may correspond to the modern farm of Broadhaugh.

Ringwud Hill (ring-wud-hil) n. Ringwood Hill, hill which lies directly south of Newmill and above Broadhaugh farm, reaching a height of 247 m. Its name is surely connected with the ancient lands of ‘Ringwood’ or ‘Ryngwoodfield’ in upper Teviotdale, once owned by Melrose Abbey.

rin-im-ower (rin-im-ow-ur) n., arch. A children’s game resembling ‘King’s Covenanter’, involving trying to capture opponents as they cross a street, with the captive replacing the captor (noted by J. Jamieson; elsewhere called ‘Willie Wastle’, ‘Tom Tiddler’s Ground’, etc.).

Rink Ferm (ringk-ferm) n. Rink farm, near the confluence of the Tweed and the Ettrick. It is the site of a pre-historic settlement, sometimes called ‘Rink Camp’. This was also where the Hawick Farmers’ Club instigated an annual sheep show in October 1779, which became one of the biggest in the South of Scotland. The land here belonged to the Laird of Edgerston.

Rinkvale Cottages (ringk-väl-ko’ee-jeez) n. Group of houses between Wellogate Place and Dalkeith Place in the Terraces, built by Hawick Working Men’s Building and Investment Company. It was named in 1889 from the fact that curling was once played on the neighbouring pond at Loch Park.

rinnal (ri-nal) n., poet. A runnel, stream – ‘Grit rinnals o’ water rin doun mine eyne . . .’ [HSR].

rinner (ri-nur) n. A runner – ‘Hei was a keen rinner when hei was young’, ‘when hei saw the polis conin, hei din a rinner’, arch., poet. A streamlet – ‘On the other side of the runner of the bog along the march’ [C&L], ‘His eyne ar als the eyne o’ dows bie the rinners o’ waters . . .’ [HSR], ‘Ther is ane rivir whose rinners sell mak’ gladsum the citie o’ God . . . ’ [HSR].

the rinnin o the braes (thu-ri-nin-o-thu-brăız) n., arch. Former tradition in Denholm (and possibly elsewhere) in which a short race was held on a wedding day for the guests, with prizes given to the winners.

rin oot (rin-oo) v., arch. To overrun with a plough, plough into adjoining land – ‘. . . and beande thairwitht riple aw-isit come in agan befor me, and deliuerit that the saids landsis of Quhithop . . . ’ [SB1500].

riplin-kaim (rip-lin-käm) n., arch. A comb formerly used for separating flax seeds from the stalk – ‘This was done by means of a ‘rippling comb’ – a piece of board generally about 3 feet long, fixed to the ground, in which a number of iron teeth were thickly and perpendicularly fastened: through these the lint was drawn by handfuls till the seed was all separated’ [JAHM].

Rispylaw (ris-pie-law) n. Former fortified house and farm on the Hermitage Water, roughly where the modern Braidlie farm is located, and near to an old drove road. The hill just above Braidlie is ‘Rispy-Law’. In the 1718 survey of properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch it is described as ‘A farm than no man doth know ye mrches of’ (marked on Gordon’s c. 1650 map as ‘Rispilaw’, on Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Rispylaw’ and on the 1718 Buccleuch survey as ‘Rispelaw’; probably from ‘rispie’, meaning ‘long, coarse grass’).

rit (ri) v., arch. To mark ground with a spade as a guide to ploughing or cutting turf, to cut turfs with a spade.

Ritchie (ri-chee) n. Rev. John (1669/90–1744) graduating from Edinburgh University in 1697, he was licensed by Jedburgh Presbytery in 1701 and became minister of Minto Parish in 1703. He remained as minister until his death, although he had 2 separate assistants in the 1740s. He was one of the men appointed to examine Hawick’s new candidate for Schoolmaster in 1718, and preached at least once in Hawick, in 1721. He married Barbara Ainslie (daughter of Rev. James and cousin of Rev. Walter), who died in 1715, aged 45 (also written ‘Richie’).

rither (ri-thur) adv. rather – ‘where wud ee rither gaun yer holidays, Spittal or Whitley Bay?’, ‘what’s gaun on, or rither, what’s no gaun on?’, ‘There’s naewhere A wad rither be …’ [IWL], other – ‘rither is Hawick, where wud ee like ti hide?’ (cf. the locally less common rather).

Ritson (rit-sin) n. William (1811–95) born in County Durham to a Methodist family, he became a railway contractor and was one of the main men behind the construction of the Border Union Railway. He is particularly remembered for being in charge of the construction of the Shankend Viaduct and Whitrope Tunnel. He lived at Woodley Field near Hexham.

rive (riv) v., arch. to tear, tug firmly, pull asunder – ‘Agnes Scott is convicted of … thrusting her hand in his mouth and ryveing out of his cheiks’ [BR1695], ‘… and ryveing of the locke of the tolbuith doore, and ryveing up the dailis of the loft of the sd. tolbuith … ’ [BR1706], ‘… Then frightful shrieks the welkin rive – As I, with rapture, wake alive’ [JL], ‘The gurly wind wi’ ragin’ thuds Was like to rive my claes in tatters’ [JT], ‘… Mirk memories rive and smert’ [WL], ‘… As callants and candidates rive divots frae opposite banks And daub them dourly at yin another … !’ [DH] (formerly spelled ‘ryve’ and sometimes ‘rive’; the past tense can be ‘rived’ or rave, while the past participle forms are reen and ‘riven’).

Riversdale Mills (ri-vurzd-milz) n. 19th century hosiery factory on Mansfield Square, between Eastfield Mills and the railway. It was constructed around 1888 for William Kedie & Co., which was then essentially an offshoot of Blenkhorn, Richardson & Co. It was sold to Innes, Chambers & Co. around 1909. It was later the main site for Lockie’s, and more recently Monk Cotton (also sometimes erroneously referred to as Riverside Mills, perhaps because of similarly named mills in Selkirk and Jedburgh).

Riverside (ri-vurzd) n. street in Denholm, off the Minto Road, also called ‘Riverside Drive’, with construction beginning in the 1930s and being completed after WWII. The land here was originally the North Crofts, given by Douglas of Cavers in 1862 for allotments.

Riverside Caravan Park (ri-vur-síd-ka-ruvwn-pawrk, –ku-ra-) n. caravan park between Hawick and Denholm, adjacent to Hornshole, established in the 1960s and much expanded in recent years. There is a footbridge across the Teviot near there (note the older pronunciation of ‘caravan’ with accent on the 2nd syllable).

rizzer (ri-zu) v., arch. to dry in the sun or in front of a fire (also written ‘rizzar’).

rizzert (ri-zurt’) pp., adj., arch. dried in the sun, parched – ‘… while the bruizzin, frizzlin heat turns frush things tewd an rizzert’ [ECS], (said of burnt skin) so drawn together as to be split.

Roach Villa (röz-vi-la) n. former name for a large house in Hawick. Robert Greenwood, commission agent, lived there in the early part of the 20th century.

road (rôd) n. way, direction, course – ‘ee’re in the road munn’, ‘git oot o ma road, for God’s sake’, ‘…rather than be forced the mairry the Miser she wad take lag bail and find her road to Canada’ [JEDM], ‘…the daft berries That ripen the wrang road roond in colour frae ocht else’ [DH], ‘… the trains huff and puff a’ the road up to Riccarton throu Copshaw Holm’ [DH], ‘It wasni till half road throwe the first hymn … ’ [IWL].

road (rôd) v., arch. to run along in front of the gun-dogs and hunters instead of taking flight, to follow game running in this way (noted by J. Jamieson).

stamin at the road-end’ [ECS] (synonymous with gate end).

Road End (rōd-end) n. former placename near Newcastleton, possible the same as Steeleroad-end. William Elliot was recorded there in a directory of 1868.

Roadheid (rōd-heed) n. Roadhead, road leading up from the Cauld, previously known as ‘Blakie’s Brae’. The name was formerly applied to the top of that road, e.g. to the houses at Norwood that are above Roadheid, and on some old maps (e.g. the 1859 and 1890 Ordnance Survey maps) is marked at Langlands Road. Hence there is some confusion about whether the name applies to the whole of that road, or just the top part. It was adopted as a street name around 1890. There was once a draw well (possibly Hawick’s only one) situated there. The road is shown in a photograph dating from about 1885. William Dalgleish is recorded there in 1791 (the name derives from being at the head of what was previously described as ‘the kirk road from Wilton to Langlands’).

Roadheid Brae (rōd-heed-brā) n. Roadhead Brae, another name for Roadheid.

Roadheid Cottage (rōd-heed-kō’-eej) n. former small cottage at Roadhead, which bore the date 1765 on a door lintel and survived until at least the late 19th century.

the Roadhouse (θu-rōd-hoos) n. popular name for one of a number of pubs, in recent times referring to Burnfoot Roadhouse or to Thorterdykes.

road-injin (rōd-in-jin) n., arch. a steam engine used on the road – ‘A duist hyit jairgin things, an that menseless road-injin fair garrd mei girqrl!’ [ECS].

Roadside (rōd-sid) n. place name used in Wilton in the 19th century, apparently referring to part of the modern Princes Street, perhaps corresponding to Ladylaw Road. It may at some times have been used as an alternative name for Roadhead; however, in the 1790s both names were used at the same time and hence they were different. Walter Scott and William Nichol were recorded there in 1791 and Hector Blaikie in 1797.

the Road Trustees (θu-rōd-trus-teez) n., pl. body set up following the Turnpike Acts of the late 18th century. They were responsible for raising money through tolls and spending it to improve roads, bridges etc. (as well as to pay off any subscribers). This led to a huge improvement in the quality of local roads. The also contributed to the construction of many new local bridges from the 1770s onwards.

Roan (rōn) n. farm to the west of the confluence of the Liddel and Hermitage Waters, on the Ryedale Burn. There was formerly a tower here, possibly on a mound in front of the modern farmhouse. The tower still existed in the early 18th century, although there is now no sign of it. ‘Sym Armstrong of the Rone’ is recorded in 1601. James Scott of Bowhill is recorded there on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls, paying tax for 3 hearths. William Mitchelson, Patrick Nichol and James Turnbull were also recorded there in 1694. It was surveyed in 1718, along with other Scott of Buccleuch properties, when it consisted of 2695 acres, bounded by the Liddel Water, Blackburn, Tarras and Foulshields. It was at that time the farm was combined with Woolock and the main farmhouse was in the same place as the modern one. John Laing paid tax on 25 windows there in 1748. James Grieve was farmer here in at least 1788–97 and Robert Elliot was shepherd in 1797. Thomas Thomson was there in 1821. A different Robert Elliot was farmer there in the first half of the 19th century and James Douglas was tenant in the 1860s. It could be the ‘Ran…’ recorded in that area on a rental roll of c.1376 – ‘The Thieves Road, and a route owre the hags o’ The Roan Scartit in wi’ a pencil’ [DH] (also ‘the Roan’: marked ‘Renn’ on Blaue’s c.1654 map and is on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Roan Fell (rōn-fel) n. high ground near the head of the Hermitage Water, between Millstone Edge and Hartsgarth Fell. It lies on the boundary between Roxburghshire and Dumfriesshire and reaches a height of 568 m – ‘See! they have gained the Roanfell’s heathery crest, Not in a line, but hound to hound abreast’ [HNo] (it is marked on the 1718 Buccleuch survey and on Stobie’s 1770 map).

roar (rōr) v. to cry loudly, bawl – ‘hei wasni juist greetin when they got bate, hei was roarin’, ‘But she …roared and grat, an’ grap ma airms’ [HAST1868], ‘What’s she roarin and greetin at?’ [ECS], ‘When they sortit the muddle ma airms’ [HAST1868], ‘When they sortit the muddle ma airms’ [HAST1868].

the roarin game (θu-rōr-in-gām) n. soubriquet for curling, played on various ponds around Hawick from the earliest years of the 19th century and dying out in the early 20th.

Roarin Willie (rōr-in-wi-lee) n. nickname for William Campbell.
roast (röst) n., poet. a roost, particularly in the phrase ‘rule the roast’ – ‘... as this House of Representatives must evidently continue to ‘rule the roast’’ [RW].

roast (röst) n., arch. rust – ‘Layna up for yousels thesauers upon yirth, whare maethe an’ ruost deth corrup’ [HSR], v., arch. to rust.

roastit (rös-tee, rõst-i) pp., adj. roasted, uncomfortably hot – ‘A’m roastit in this muckle jersey’.

roasty (rös-tée) adj., arch. rusty.

Rob (rob) n. Christian name, usually a pet form of Robert.

Robb (rōb, rob) n. William Cuthbert (20th C.) High School English teacher (nicknamed ‘Fongo Robb’), author of several educational books in the 1930s to 50s. He also wrote the ‘Touchstone’ column in the Hawick Express, years??.

Robbie Barrell (ro-bee-baw-rul) n. nickname for Robert Scott, one of the many of the same name in the mid-1800s.

Robbie Dye (ro-bee-di) n. nickname for a supporter of Hawick Rugby Football Club – ‘And though players come and players go, Wi my last braith I’ll prophesy – They may fade away, when they’ve had their day, But there’ll aye be a Robbie Dye!’ [DH] (the name is recorded at least as early as the 1950s, and based on some early supporter, although popularised in the mythic poem by Davod Hill).

Robbie Dye (ro-bee-di) n. poem by David Hill, first published in the Hawick Express in 1957 under the pseudonym ‘HAB’. It is included on ‘Hairst published in the Hawick Express in 1957 un-the Robbie Dyes (thi-ro-bee-di) n. nickname for Hawick R.F.C., derived from the popular name of an early fanatical supporter of the Club.

Robbie Hunter’s Well (ro-bee-hun’-urz-wel) n. popular name for a former public pump well, situated against the side of a house at the foot of the Back Raw.

Robbie’s (ro-beez) n. modern bar and diner at 8 High Street, run by Robbie Watt. In 2004 it became the Tower Inn.

Robbie Scare a Hair (ro-bee-skär-a-här) n. nickname for auctioneer Robert Scott (presumably because of his lack of hair).

Robbie Scott (ro-bee-skö’) n. name occurring in a version of a song by Jock Gray, probably from the early 19th century – ‘And the laddie he’s but young, And the laddie he’s but young, And Robbie Scott ca’s up the rear, And Caleb beats the drum’ [DJG] (note that in another version the name is ‘Rob Rodger’, so this may be simply an error).

Robbie the Cow (ro-bee-thu-kow) n. nickname for Robert Scott in the mid-19th century – ‘Here’s Tib the Virgin and Virgin Kate, Here’s baith Robbie and Babbie the Cow; Auld Chairlie Hardie gangs east o’ the gate, While Dunnerum danders over the knowe’ [HI].

Robert (ro-bur’) n. name of 3 Kings of Scotland. Robert I (1274–1329) known as ‘Robert the Bruce’, he was great-grandson of David I, he was King of Scotland 1306–1329. He refused to meet the English on even ground, and achieved immortal fame for leading the 1314 defeat of the English at Bannockburn, which made Scotland a sovereign nation. He granted part of Braxholme to Walter Comyn and the rest to Henry Baliol in 1307, and split the Barony of Wilton between Gilbert Maxwell and Henry Wardlaw at about the same time. He also granted part of Kirkborthwick to William Barbour, and moved it from Roxburghshire to Selkirkshire. He visited Jedburgh at least once late in his life, granting a charter there in 1329. His heart was supposedly returned from the Crusades by Sir James Douglas and reputedly buried under the chancel’s east window at Melrose Abbey. Bruce Court is named after him – ‘... Repeats the tales of old heroic times, While Bruce and Wallace consenserate the rhymes’ [JL].

Robert II (1316–90) called ‘the Steward’, he was the only son of Walter, the 5th High Steward of Scotland and Marjorie daughter of Robert I. He played a strong role in the government of Scotland under his younger uncle David II, being Regent along with John Randolph, 3rd Earl of Moray. He was one of the Scots leaders at Halidon Hill, and escaped from the Battle of Neville’s Cross. Imprisoned for rebellion against David, he eventually succeeded to the throne in 1371 after David’s death. Confusion over the legality of his marriage with Elizabeth Mure later led to disputes among his descendants. Robert III (c.1340–1406) King from 1390. He was the son of Robert II by his mistress Elizabeth Mure, later legitimised by marriage. He was disabled by being kicked by a horse.
Robert

Born John, he changed his name on assuming the throne. The kingdom was effectively ruled by his brother Robert, Earl of Fife and later Duke of Albany. He married Annabella Drummond. His son David, Duke of Rothesay became lieutenant of the kingdom, but died mysteriously at Falkland Palace in 1402. He was succeeded by his only surviving son, James I.

Robert (ro-bur̩) n. (12th C.) son of Guy, he witnessed a document as Sheriff of Roxburgh in 1147. This was confirmation of a gift to Coldingham Priory that Gospatrick, brother of Dolphin, had given to Edrom and Nisbet; his name is given as ‘Roberto filio Widonis’. The same Robert also witnessed other documents relating to lands in Scotland, the last being in about 1170. This included renewal of the grant of Ringwood to Melrose Abbey in the period 1165–68 and a papal document referring to his gift to Newbattle Abbey in the 1160s. It is unclear if he was part of some well known family.

Robert (ro-bur̩) n. (10th/11th C.) carpenter of Hassendean, who witnessed a charter in about the 1220s. He is recorded as ‘Roberto carpentario’.

Robert (ro-bur̩) n. (13th C.) listed on the Ragman Rolls of 1296 as ‘Robert fisc Rauf persone del Eglise de Seint Cuthbert de Ewytesdale’. He was thus presumably son of Ralph and served as Parson of the Nether Kirk of Ewes.

Robert Hill (ro-bur̩-hil) n. hill shown being near the source of the Slitrig and Rule Waters on Gordon’s map c. 1650, between the ‘Maidens papes Hills’ and ‘Wriggs Hill’ (probably Wigg Knowe). It is unclear which hill this would be, since there is no similar modern name of any significant nearby hills. Perhaps Wyndburgh Hill (the highest in the area) is meant, or its southern ridge, being composed of Outer Knowe Head, Crow Knowe and Kiln Knowe, suggesting a connection with ‘Robert’s Linn’ below. This is probably the ‘Robertis hill’ mentioned in the 1562 document describing disputed lands in the Barony of Feu-Rule; this was adjacent to the lands of Windburgh Hope. It may be the ‘Roberthill’ that was among lands sold in 1607 by Hector Turnbull of Stanedge to Gilbert Elliott of Stobs. It is also probably the place mentioned by Scott of Satchells in relationship to the Scotts of Thirlestane – ‘John’s son, Robert, was a warden in his time, The fight of Robert’s hill he did gain; He for his king and country did maintain the truth; He married Scot, daughter to the laird of Buccleugh’ [CWS].

Robert of Heap (ro-bur̩-o-heep) n. holder of the lands of Heap (or ‘Hepe’) before about 1431, as mentioned in a grant transferring the lands from Langlands to Scott. He was probably either a Langlands or a Scott himself.

Roberton (ro-bur̩-in) n. village about 6 miles west of Hawick along the Borthwick, centre for the surrounding parish. As a place name it has existed since at least the 14th century. The lands there were owned by Robert Scott in the 14th century (as recorded in 1410), and it is possible they were named after him. Sir William Gledstains acquired the lands in the last years of the 14th century and the Gledstains of that Ilk retained the lands through the 15th century. John Scott of ‘Weltoun’ and ‘Valis’ acquired the lands in 1502 and later in the 16th century there was a celebrated faster called John Scott who came from the area (and possibly the same family). James Scott, last of Roberton sold the lands to Sir William Scott of Harden in 1627. There were 9 ‘communicants’ recorded living there in 1650, namely John Hume, Margaret Walker, Patrick Hume, Robert Hume, Walter Telfer, Margaret Wilson, Malie Brown and Bessie Scott. The Parish was formed in 1689 out of parts of the surrounding parishes and after much dispute. In 1694 there were 7 hearths recorded there. The lands were part of a legal dispute between Gideon Scott of Highchester and Walter Scott of Woll in the early years of the 18th century. Robert Scott was recorded as a resident in 1743. The teinds of Roberton, Howcleuch and Hoscote were valued at £33 6s 8d in 1785 and 1802 and owned by the Duke of Buccleuch, while Adam Scott of Galalaw (in 1785) and Robert Pott of Galalaw (in 1802) paid the Land Tax of £100. The present church, built in 1863/4, replaces a 17th century building, which stood behind the present Manse. This church was built in a time of religious and political upheaval in Scotland, before the new parish of Roberton was created. The church is built on what appears to be a former settlement, which may have been the ‘Robert’s Town’ from which the village takes its name. The farm there was part of the detached section of Hassendean Parish until 1690. The present village contains the Forman Hall, designed by J.P. Alison about 1922, and used for community events, as well as a stone pillar War Memorial. The police station there closed in 1931, but the small primary school remains. ‘Borthwick Water: two centuries of life in the parish of Roberton’ was written by Kathleen W. Stewart in 1991.
Roberton

and ‘Roberton: the making of a parish’ by George O. Wood in 1992 – ‘Tell Ashkirk, and Satchels, Burnfoot, and the Kirkhouse, Howpsaley, and Roberton, with Harden bold and crouse’ [WSB] (the name first appears in a charter of Robert III, probably in the late 1390s, it is ‘Robertistoun’ in 1430 and is usually spelled ‘Robertoun’ or ‘Robertoune’ until the late 17th century, with Scott of Satchell’s writing ‘Robert-toun’ in 1688, ‘Robertoun’ in 1710 and ‘Robertown’ still recorded in 1743; it is marked ‘Roberston’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map and ‘Roberton’ on Adair’s c. 1688 map, as well as Gordon’s manuscript map c.1650, where it is wrongly placed to the east of Hawick; the origin is simply ‘Robert’s farm’, possibly referring to Robert Scott, mentioned in 1410 as a former owner).

Roberton (ro-bur’in) n. Alexander (b.1779/80) from Linton, he was a cooper in Wilton Parish. He was listed among heads of households in 1835, being at Howdenburn in 1835, and Appletreehall in 1840. He was at Appletreehall on the 1841 census, with his surname given as ‘Roberton’. In 1851 he was a former cooper living at Craigirg in Roxburgh Parish with his son-in-law John Forsythe. His wife was Mary and their children included Jane, Alexander, Duncan, William and George. Jamie local character of unknown age whose portrait is in the Museum.

Roberton Burnfit (ro-bur’in-burn-fi’) n. former farm just near Roberton, which was part of Hassendean Parish until 1689. It was mentioned in the 1694 Hearth Tax recods. It was distinct from Borthwick Brae Burnfoot, a mile or so up the valley. John Gowans was there in 1720, John Taylor in at least 1725–26. William Lawson and John Gowans were there in 1743, Thomas Govenlock in 1752, Walter Scott in 1763–65, David Scott in 1767–74, Adam Robson in 1775 and Adam Riddell in 1781 (it is ‘Roberton burnfoot’ in 1772).

Roberton Cleuch (ro-bur’in-klooch) n. name given to the deep wooded part of the Glen Burn, just to the north of the B711 through the village.

Roberton Cleuchfit (ro-bur’in-klooch-fi’) n. former piece of land near Roberton. It is possibly the same as ‘Roberton Burnfit’ or could be the land on which the house known as ‘Cleuchfoot’ was built. It is described (perhaps in the 17th century) as a ‘pendicle of Robertoun’, once owned by Walter Scott of Woll and then by Alexander Scott of Galalaw.

Roberton Free Kirk (ro-bur’in-free-kirk) n. original official name for the Snoot Kirk.
Roberton Moss

1930. Roberton church was linked with Teviothead 1966–72, then linked with St. Margaret’s and Wilton South 1972–83. It became formally united with St. George’s West in 1984, which was renamed Teviot Parish in 1996. A roll of the ministry is: John Colt, from c.1663; Thomas Shiels 1689–c.93; John Ferguson 1696–99; Robert Scott 1700–1727; Henry Erskine 1728–73; James Erskine 1774–86; James Hay 1786–1825; William Berry Shaw, assistant 1801–12; Alexander Nivison 1826–44; Charles Kinnear Greenhill 1845–86; Mercer Hall 1887–1927; Æneas E. McInness 1894–1929; Cyrus M. Mortimer 1930–54; James B. Primrose 1955–60; Samuel Weir 1960–65; Robert McConnell 1966–83; Neil R. Combe 1984–.

Roberton Moss (ro-bur'-in-mos) n. boggy area to north of Roberton village. The filter works for Alemoor were built there.

Roberton Parish (ro-bur'-in-pa-reeshi) n. parish around Roberton village and the Borthwick valley, created in 1689 from parts of the neighbouring parishes, including Hawick, Wilton and disjoint parts of Hassendean, including the area immediately around the village itself. Todshaw and neighbouring farms came from Hawick Parish, with Milsington, Girmaun and other farms coming from Hassendean, and Harden, Highchesters formerly being in Wilton. This followed about 3 decades of dispute, with Roberton Kirk being built in 1659, during confusion over the secession of Scott of Buccleuch (who owned much of Hassendean), but then material from the new Kirk being removed to repair Hassendean, following a decision in favour of Hassendean in 1666. The Revolution of 1688/9 and the restoration of Presbyterianism saw a successful petition to create Roberton as a Parish. The moving of the old church roof from Hassendean to Roberton in 1690 incited violence from the parishioners of the suppressed parish of Hassendean. The Parish was about 13 miles long and 5 miles wide, bounded by Ettrick, Yarrow, Ashkirk, Selkirk, Wilton, Hawick, Cavers and Eskdalemuir. The Parish long had part (about half) within Selkirkshire, but it was moved entirely into Roxburghshire in 1891. Parish registers go back to 1680, but the early ones are fairly incomplete, and the first part is really for Hassendean. An early Parish records is of £38 being stolen from the poor box in the unoccupied Manse in 1700. The first meeting to assess the Parish poor was in 1740. The records have significant gaps in the 1740s, 1750s and 1760s. Note that there is a separate parish of the same name in Lanarkshire, which sometimes causes confusion.

Roberton Place (ro-bur'-in-plis) n. private housing built in 1970 at the top of the West End, off Longbaulk Road, and named after the village of Roberton.

Roberton Schuil (ro-bur'-in-skil) n. school in Roberton village. It was noted at the General Assembly in 1724 that all parishes in the Presbytery had schools except for Roberton and Ettrick. The first record of a teacher being appointed was in 1765, and a new schoolhouse was built in 1790. In 1834 it was reported that ‘one-third of the parish is so situated that the children cannot attend’, since they are ‘at a distance of five and eight miles’. This situation was probably the reason for the establishment of small schools at Howpasley and Redfordgreen. A new schoolhouse was finished in about 1835. In 1836 it is recorded that there were 60 pupils in attendance. The present school building was erected in 1875 and long served as the local primary school, with several attempts to close it, and closure finally coming in 2010. The Borders Archive has School Board minutes for 1873–1919. The schoolmaster’s house in the 1830s contained 5 rooms, including kitchen. Robert Miller was schoolmaster in at least the period 1798–1800 and Robert Miller until 1822. Andrew Hogg was master there in the 1820s, until about the mid-1830s, and Thomas Anderson from 1833 until the 1860s.

Robert Paterson Place (ro-bur'-pi'-ur-sin-plis) n. Robert Paterson Place, housing development at Burnflat, built in 2006 and named after the inspiration for Sir Walter Scott’s ‘Old Mortality’, who was born there.

Roberts (ro-burts) n. Rev. John minister of Southdean Kirk 1951–65. His time as minister included the period when Southdean first became linked with Edgerston.

Robert’s Hill see Robert Hill

Robert’s Linn see Robert Hill

Robert’s Linn (ro-burts-lin) n. waterfalls off the Slitrig, where the Newcastleton road crosses a deep ravine. This area is famous for jasper, which was used to make the first Burgh Seal for example, and also for fossils. Further up the stream can be seen signs of the former lime-workings that gave their name to the Limekilnedge. The Catrail ends near here, leading to speculation that the falls had some special significance for our early ancestors. The area is also sometimes known as ‘the Linnns’. The high bridge there was rebuilt in 1903 using girders salvaged from the Tay Bridge disaster. A story circulated that it was bombed by a Zeppelin during WWI, but this was unsubstantiated.
Robertson

The bridge collapsed and was rebuilt as an embankment in 1982. There was once a farmstead in the area, where Robert Elliott and family were living in 1794 – ‘Ca’in his pownies throwe fair and foul By the clints o’ Robert’s Linn . . .’ [DH] (also written ‘Robertslinn’); the stream there may be the one marked ‘The Ryillyn B.’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map, suggesting either an error or a different origin for the name; it is ‘Robertsline’ on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Robertson (ro-burt-sin) n. Alastair S., M.B.E., elder son of Nichol. He served as an apprentice designer with Blenkhorn, Richardson & Co., then worked with Munrosun in Galashiels, before joining Walker, Caledon, tweed manufacturers of Belfast, where he became Managing Director. He was a keen rugby player for Hawick junior teams, and also in Northern Ireland and served in the Royal Navy during WWII. He married Mairi Charlton from Ireland. Alexander (b.c.1779) cooper in Appletreehall. His wife was Mary and their children included Alexander, Duncan, William and George. Alexander (b.1779/80) from Linton, he was a cooper in Wilton Parish. He was listed among heads of households in 1835, being at Howdenburn in 1835, and Appletreehall in 1840. He was at Appletreehall on the 1841 census, with his surname given as ‘Roberton’. In 1851 he was a former cooper living at Craigirig in Roxburgh Parish with his son-in-law John Forsythe. His wife was Mary and their children included Jane, Alexander, Duncan, William and George. Alexander (b.1795/6) born at Makerstoun, he was blacksmith at Minto. He was recorded there in the electoral roll of 1837 and was still there in 1851. His wife was Isabella and their children included Jane T., Thomas, Margaret, Alexander and James. Alexander (b.1801/2) gamekeeper at Commonside in 1851 and 1861. He was living at Commonside Cottage since at least 1841. In 1834 he married Elizabeth, daughter of Robert Govenlock, innkeeper at Mauersaul. Their children included James, Robert, Alexander, John, Margaret and William. Andrew (d.bef. 1808) resident of Hawick. He married Janet Jackson, who died in 1808. Their children included: Andrew (b.1763); Barbara (b.1765); Mary (b.1767); Elisabeth (b.1769); Margaret (b.1771); and Andrew (again, b.1773) Derek (1965 –) born in Hawick, grandson of Wullie ‘the Voo’. He is an ambulance paramedic, working in Hawick but living in Newcastleton. He wrote The Men Who Marched Away – Liddesdale and the Great War’ (1992) and ‘All These Fine Fellows: Hawick and District and the Great War 1914–1918’ (1999). Rev. Edward Macallan (b.1928) educated at Aberdeen and Oxford Universities, he became an Episcopalian minister. He was at Bristol and Swindon before coming to Hawick, where he was Rector at St. Cuthbert’s Kirk 1960–69. He left to take up a Scholarship at Queen’s College, Birmingham, moving to Alloa, where he worked as a teacher, before taking charge of Bathgate 1978–82, moving to Strathclyde in 1982, Auchterarder in 1990 and retiring in 1993. Eric ‘Pinner’ (?– ) son of Wullie ‘the Voo’. He has been Captain of Hawick Golf Club and British one-armed golf champion (having lost an arm in an accident at Hawick Station). He is father of Margaret and Dawn. George (17th/18th C.) resident of Deanbrae in 1722 when his daughter Christian was baptised in Cavers Parish. Jessie (19th C.) from Kelso, she came to Hawick to assist in the shop of George Turnbull the draper at 14 High Street. John (18th/19th C.) weaver in Hawick. His wife Janet Riddle died in 1810. John ‘Jackie’, ‘the Voo’ (1921–2019) son of John Proctor, he was known locally as a singer and Common-Riding stalwart. His brother Wullie also had the same nickname (which was not there in the previous generation). He was brought up in Drumlanrig Square and attended Drumlanrig School. He was an apprentice Slater, served in the R.A.F. during WWII and in the 1950s opened an electrical shop near where he grew up. A great Common Riding supporter, he followed on horseback until he was 86. He may have been the last person to remember meeting J.E.D. Murray. He was Acting Father in 1968 to Elliot Hutton. He was member of the Common Riding Committee from 1966, was President of the Mosstroopers’ Club in 1973 and Callants’ Club President in 1986. He became known as the most knowledgeable person about details of the Common Riding. The avenue at the Nipknoves that the followers take was informally named after him. He married Margaret Hibbert and their children were: Jim, who was Cornet in 1977; John, who was Honorary Provost in 2002; and Margaret, who became a teacher. He had the rare honour of becoming Jubilee Acting Father in 2018. John (??– ) son of Jackie. He was a local Councillor and became Honorary Provost in 2002. Nichol (20th C.) apprenticed to Forbes Nursery, he served in WWII with the 1/4th KOSB. He was wounded on that fateful day of 12th July 1915 and invalided home. One of the last local survivors of the Gallipoli campaign, he wrote about his experiences afterwards. Peter H. (19th/20th C.) grocer who was Cornet in 1899, with his uncle James A. Henderson as his Acting Father. He was Cornet the year of the earliest film clips of the Common Riding, this being a hot and sunny weekend. He served as Acting Father to Francis A. Henderson in 1922. Robert (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Flight in Castleton Parish, recorded on both the 1797 Horse Tax and Dog Tax Rolls. Robert (1830–97) son of the shepherd at Branxholme, he was assistant teacher in a school run on Episcopal principles, taught by Rev. Campbell in Hawick High Street around 1850. He went to South Africa as a missionary, being transferred to Zululand (once a separate country) in 1860, where he founded the first mission of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts. This was at Kwa Magwaza, the mission being later destroyed in the civil disturbances. He lived and worked with the Zulu people for many years, gaining the native name ‘Unzimela’. He also (anonymously) compiled and published ‘Zulu Izaga, that is proverbs, or out-of-the-way sayings of the Zulus; collected, translated, and interpreted, by a Zulu missionary’ in Durban in 1880. Around 1891 he moved to Tahlwati where he founded a mission using his wagon, and where a church was later built in his memory. Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His children probably included: Thomas (b.1700); Ann (b.1702); Margaret (b.1704); and Alexander (b.1718). William (17th C.) servant of Robert Grierson from Clarilaw. In 1684 he was listed among local men listed as being fugitives because of attending field conventicles. It is unclear whether this is the Clarilaw near Hassendean or the one in Bowden Parish. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His children included: Ann (b.1716); Margaret (b.1718); Archibald (b.1720); Thomas (b.1722); William (b.1724); and Hugh (b.1725). Perhaps the same William married Margaret Taylor in Cavers Parish in 1726. William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish, recorded in Binks in 1755. Perhaps the same William was a wright in Cavers in 1757. He married Jane Beattie and their children included: William (b.1755); Elizabeth (b.1757); William (again, b.1758); and John (b.1763). William (1720–97) from Dunfermline, he was brought to Hawick by local interests in 1752 to start carpet manufacturing and was entered as a Burgess in 1756. In 1769 he formed a partnership with others, renewing the partnership ten years later. The Hawick Carpet Company lasted until 1806. In 1763 he was rewarded with £40 from the Board of Trustees for Manufactures for mechanical inventions (a new kind of ‘throw mills’ and a machine for tearing wool) improving carpet manufacturing. He could be the William who witnessed a baptism for James Gray in Hawick in 1765. In 1770 he was the first feuour, from the Langlands Estate, of the lands of Roughheugh, where Rosaline Brae now is; he is still listed as owner of part of Roughheugh (valued at £10 18s 6d) in 1788 and still recorded that way on the 1811 Land Tax Rolls (even although he was deceased by then). In a description of Hawick’s trade in about 1777 it is stated that his company had 14 looms weaving carpets. He purchased part of the lands of Silverbuthall from James Scott. He is probably the William who witnessed a baptism for Christopher Atkinson in 1777. He may be the William who witnessed a baptisms in Wilton for Adam Ormiston (at Drinkstone) in 1780, performed by Rev. Williamson (of the East Bank Kirk). In 1789 and 1790 he paid tax in Hawick for having a female servant. He is listed as a carpet manufacturer on the 1787–90 and 1794 Horse Tax Rolls. He is probably the ‘Mr Robertson’ who paid the Horse Tax in Hawick in 1795 and probably the manufacturer William who paid the Horse Tax in Hawick in 1797. He was a trustee of the East Bank Meeting House, and at one point complained about the meagre allowance allowed for boarding visiting preachers. He appears to have had a son, also William, with whom he is probably sometimes confused. He may be the weaver William (some of the birth entries being written ‘Robson’) married to Jane (or ‘Jean’) French, whose children included Isabel (b.1756), William (b.1760), John (b.1761) and Ann (b.1763); Jean French died in Hawick in 1782. William (18th C.) merchant of Newcastle, who was made an Honorary Burgess in 1750. William (18th C.) quartermaster of the Scots Greys, who was made an Honorary Burgess in 1776. William (18th/19th C.) son of William, the instigator of carpet manufacturing in Hawick. He may be the William, son of William and Jean French born in Hawick in 1760. It is possible that he was the ‘W. Robertson, carpet manufacturer’ recorded as Cornet in 1778. He is ‘Mr William Robertson, jun. Hawick’ in 1784 when he subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’. In 1789 he married Janet, daughter of William Grieve, farmer at Southfield. Their children included: Mary (b.1790); Jane (b.1794); and William (b.1795). He may also have been the William whose son John died in Hawick in 1797. He is probably the deceased William ‘Robison’, ‘Carpetweaver’, whose son William’s death is recorded in Hawick in 1806. Perhaps a relative was the William in Edinburgh who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. William (19th C.) carrier in Hawick. In 1837 he was listed as leaving from the Grapes on alternate Tuesdays, bound for Glasgow, and on alternate Thursdays for Langholm, as well as going to Selkirk every other Tuesday and Thursday. Rev. William (20th C.) minister of Kirkton from 1931 until about 1940. William G. (?-??) ‘Bill’ or ‘Wullie’, High school teacher and columnist for the Hawick News, writing the ‘G.R.’ column as well as covering rugby. He was also heavily involved with the Common Riding, being Secretary of the Committee in the 1950s. William S. ‘Willie’ (1904/05–91) owner of W.S. Robertson (Outfitters) Ltd. at 13–15 High Street from the 1930s until his retirement in 1973. He was an enthusiastic viola player with the local opera and retired to Dunbar. William ‘Wullie’, the Voo’ (1912–2000) well known Westender, brother of Jackie. The origin of his nickname is unknown, and it was also later applied to his brother. As a boy he witnessed the terrible charabanc disaster at the Veritsh in 1919. He was a dispatch rider for the R.A.F. during WWII and later worked with the Gas Board. He was known for performing the ‘Canoe Song’ from ‘Sanders of the River’. He also scratched ‘Voo’ into many trees up the Westend, several marked after his death with small brass plaques. His wife’s name was Cathy and his son was ‘Billy Voo’. Rev. W.M. (19th/20th C.) minister of Hawick Baptist Kirk 1916–19. He was said to be a fervent evangelical preacher, who sometimes packed the Theatre or the Town Hall. He served in France with the Soldiers’ Christian Association for several months in 1918. He left Hawick for Toxteth Tabernacle, Liverpool. He may be the minister of the same name who was at Mount Pleasant in Vancouver from 1927.

Robert the Bruce

Robert the Bruce (ro-bur’-tha-broos) n. Scottish hero, otherwise known as Robert I.

Robin Reiccap (ro-bin-reed-kap) n. legendary servant of Lord Soulis, supposedly dwarfen and with vampire-like fangs, whose ghost is said to inhabit Hermitage Castle today – ‘Lord Soulis he sat in Hermitage Castle, And beside him Old Redcap sly – ‘Now, tell me, thou sprite who art mickle of might, The death that I must die!’ [JL], ‘For doon i the dungeons Gleg Reid-cap still lurks, In plain disregaird For the Office o Works!’ [DH] (cf. reid-cap).

Robin Reidbreest (ro-bin-reed-breest) n. nickname in use in the early 19th century.

Robison (ro-bin-sin) n. G. Allen (19th/20th C.) photographer in Hawick in the late 1800s and early 1900s. He trained as a photographer with Russell & Sons of London. At various times he was based at Burnlington House on North Bridge Street, as well as at East Bank House and on the Exchange Arcade.

Robison (ro-bee-sin) n. Andrew (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He married Marion Cowan in Robertson in 1729 and their daughter Agnes was baptised in 1731. Andrew (19th C.) grocer, tea, wine and spirit merchant at 23 High Street in the 1850s and 60s. He was listed as a High Street grocer in Slater’s 1852 directory. Ebenezer (b.1795) whip and thong maker, son of Elizabeth. He was listed in Wilton on Pigot’s 1837 directory and at Wilton Path in Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1841 he was living on Wilton Damside and on Wilton Path in 1851 and 1861 (although these are probably the same address). He served as a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire. He married Elizabeth Park from Lilliesleaf in 1821. Their children included: Ebenezer; Andrew; Elizabeth, who married William Richardson; twins Barbara and Margaret; Mary; Agnes; and Janet. George (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Isobel Chisholme and their children included Agnes (b.1687) and Margaret (b.1691), with witnesses Andrew Fletcher and Thomas Wallace. George (17th C.) recorded at Raperlaw in Lilliesleaf Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Perhaps the same John was previously married to a Paisley and had a daughter Anna baptised in 1691. James (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Isobel Paisley and their children included Jean (b.1689) and Anna (b.1691). James (17th C.) resident at Greencastle in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Janet (17th C.) resident of Headshaw in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when she was listed on the Hearth Tax roll among ‘ye poor’. John (16th/17th C.) tenant at Riccartonfoot in 1623 along with Archie Henderson when they had 2 sheep stolen by Adie and Will Usher.
(17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Janet Scott and their children included: Margaret (b.1694); James (b.1696); and Beatrice (b.1699). In 1694 the witnesses were James Grieve and Andrew Scott. Probably the same John witnessed a baptism for Robert Paterson in 1691.

John (17th C.) recorded as tenant at Byreholm in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. John (17th C.) tenant at Braidlie in Castleton Parish on the Hearth Tax records of 1694. John (18th C.) married Bess Nichol in Roberton in 1727. Their children included: Janet (b.1729), baptised in Roberton; and James (b.1733), baptised in Ashkirk. Matthew (17th C.) resident of Liddesdale who was mentioned in about 1645. According to the Buccleuch records ‘One Matthew Robison and his brother had just returned from an excursion into the Debateable Land after some cattle of their own, and had a sleuth-hound with them’. The hound was sent off to search out some thieves who had been challenged ‘at Catheugh and Cringleford, until they came to Carshop, from whence they stole threecore sheep’. Ralph (18th/19th C.) overseer for George Douglas of Cavers. He was ‘Mr Ralph Robieson in Cavers’ when his daughter Margaret was baptised in Cavers Parish in 1794. George (b.1791) was also his son. In 1806 he was residing at Berwick when he was found guilty of theft, fraud and breach of trust. Robert (17th/18th C.) wright in Hawick. In 1722 he is recorded refusing to pay a penalty and so being summoned to appear before the Session. It is possible he was the Robert ‘servant to John Pringle wright in Hawick’, who married Isobel Rae from Branhohlowntown in 1721. Thomas (16th C.) recorded as ‘Thomas Robisoune’ in 1631 on a list of tenants of the lands of Newton in Bedrule. Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident of Yethouse in Castleton Parish. He was recorded as tenant there on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. In 1696 he was rebuked before the congregation for ‘Sabbath-breaking’ and in 1697 he was chastised for ‘travelling with a load on the Lord’s day’ (also spelled ‘Robisone’; it was probably once interchangeable with Robson).

Rob’s Cleuch (robz-kloooch) n. small stream in the Rule valley, which rises on the north-west side of Bonchester Hill. On the south side is evidence of a former settlement, largely obliterated by cultivation, but still observable as a roughly circular hollow. Near the head of the cleuch are the remains of a farmstead, which Walter Deans suggested may be the original site of Bonchester farm (also written ‘Rob’s Cleugh’).

Robson (rob-sin) n. Adam (1720–1805) son of Adam and Jean Beattie. He was a farm worker who lived at Boghall in Castleton Parish. He married Helen Hume and their children included Janet (b.1761) and Mary (b.1767), who married different John Ellists. He also had a son Adam (1765–c.1844), who married Mary Pott and emigrated with his family to settle in Lanark County, Ontario. Adam (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Roberton Burnfoot in 1775 and Borthwickshiels in 1875. He married Helen Geddes in Roberton in 1769. His children, baptised in Roberton Parish, included: Janet (b.1770); James (b.1772); John (b.1775); Adam (b.1779); Robert (b.1777); George (b.1782); and Patrick (b.1785). Adam (18th C.) wright in Hawick. He subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). He could be the Adam who married Janet Murray in Hawick in 1778 His unnamed son died in 1787. Adam (18th C.) gardener and ‘Chaise Drive’ for Adam Scott of Galalaw in 1785 and 1786. This was in Roberton Parish, so he was probably working at Borthwickshiels.

Adam (1765–1885) born in Castleton Parish, son of Adam and Helen Hume, who lived at Boghall in Castleton Parish. He worked for a while as a shepherd for his brother-in-law John Elliot (2 of his sisters had married John Elliots!). He married Mary, probably daughter of Thomas Pott. They had 11 children, with 6 emigrating with them to Canada in 1817, and settling in Lanark County, Ontario. Their sons John and James had already travelled to Canada a year or so earlier. Their children included Adam (b.1790), Mary (b.1791), Isabell (b.1793), Thomas (b.1795), John (b.1797), Mary (again, b.1799), Janet (b.1801), Margaret (b.1804), Peter (b.1806), Jean (b.1808) and Robert (b.1813). He died in Drummond, Quebec. Adam (b.1786/7) born in Castleton Parish, he was a carter. He was listed among heads of households in Newcastle in 1835–41. He was also listed as a carter in Newcastle in 1861, when he was living at about 17 South Hermitage Street. His wife was Jessie and their children included John, Jean, Robert, Alexander, James and Bessy. He may be the Adam of Castleton who subscribed to William Scott's ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. Adam (1861–aft. 1901) youngest son of William and Margaret Douglas, he was born in Castleton Parish. He became a solicitor in Galashiels. His wife was Phillis and they had a daughter Margaret Douglas. Adam (19th/20th C.) joiner of the firm A. & J. Robson. His brother was John, partner in the firm, and their sister Mary married Robert Edgar (cousin of the Hawick Express editor). He married Janet Laidlaw Wilson, who died in 1940, aged 87. Adam (1928/9–2007) born and educated in Hawick, and then at Edinburgh College of Art, where he played rugby. He then switched to the Linden, before becoming a famous wing forward for Hawick R.F.C. from 1952 to 1961. He also gained 22 Scottish caps and went on to be President of the Scottish Rugby Union. He was also President of the Scottish Schools Rugby Union. He was Art Master at Dollar Academy for 32 years, also widely exhibiting his paintings, with one prominent in the Health Centre, and his tribute to Tom Scott (1997) on display in Drumlanrig’s Tower. He was Callants’ Club President in 2002. He married Netta Renwick and their children were Shona and Judith. He wrote 3 books, one being a history of the Edinburgh Borderers rugby club. Robson Court is named after him. Alexander (18th C.) labourer in Lilliesleaf Parish. His children included: Mary (b.1788); Jean (b.1790); and James (b.1793). Alexander ‘Alec’ (b.1846) 2nd son of blacksmith Thomas. He was a stone mason, known as a great athlete and authority on coins. In 1873 in Wilton he married Helen Brodie (b.1852) and their children included Mary Gowenlock Newton (b.1874). He died in Australia. Allan Watt (d.1981) son of William S., he was born and brought up in Hawick. His studies at the Art College in Edinburgh were interrupted by War Service, but he continued after the War to train in art and teaching. From 1949 he was Head of the Art Department at Perth High School. He developed a strong interest in nature and botany in particular. He joined the Perthshire Society of Natural Science in 1954 and for many years was Chairman of the Botanical Section. He was also an area recorder for the Botanical Society of the British Isles and helped preserve many valuable plants in and around Perthshire. He illustrated his father’s books: ‘The Story of Hawick’, with about 17 pen and ink sketches; and ‘Hawick Place Names’, with ‘Auld Hawick. A Series of Pictorial Reconstructions’, showing how the town may have looked in the 9th, 12th, 15th and 18th centuries, as well as a detailed view of Hawick at the time of the 1537 Charter. His original ‘scraperboard’ images of ‘Auld Hawick’ are in the Museum collection. He married Jessie and had a son Alan. Andrew (17th C.) listed along with James Small in the 1663 Land Tax Rolls. Together they paid tax on £390 for the lands of the Laird of Haining (probably John Pringle). Andrew (19th C.) coal merchant in Hawick in the late 1800s. Andrew (c.1889–1949) born in Hawick, he was an engineering apprentice with his father, who was a foreman with James Melrose & Sons. He then worked for a steel manufacturing firm in Middlesborough before studying engineering at Edinburgh University. He spent 12 years as Principal of West Hartlepool Technical College and in 1933 became Principal of Handsworth Technical College in Birmingham. He was an active member of the Institution of Production Engineers. He returned regularly for Hawick Common Riding and spent many holidays in Rulewater. He was married twice and had a daughter. Charles of Samieston (1770–1830) son of James, who was tenant of Belford and Chatto. He was one of the founding members of the Jedforest Club. He was a Captain in the 2nd Regiment of Roxburghshire militia. He also served as Collector of Supply for the county and was listed as a Commissioner of Roxburghshire in 1819. He married Martha, eldest daughter of Maj. John Rutherford of Mossburnford. A small portrait was painted of him around 1800. Rev. Charles (b.1861) from Hawick, son of James and Jessie Inglis. His family attended the East Bank Kirk. He graduated from Glasgow University in 1885 and was ordained as minister of Clune Park Port–Glasgow in 1889. In 1893 he moved to Pollok Street Church in Glasgow and in 1899 to Inverness Antiburgher church. Cuthbert (17th C.) recorded as tenant of ‘Oldsteson’ in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. It is unclear where this farm is. He is recorded along with William, who was presumably his son or brother. James was also there, as well as David Hall. Euan (1954–) born in Corbridge, Northumberland, he has been M.S.P. for Roxburgh & Berwickshire from 1999, and has also been Scottish Liberal Democrat Chief Whip. Francis (17th C.) possessor of the lands of Flatt and ‘Schortbus’ in southern Liddesdale in 1632. Gavin (18th/19th C.) writer (i.e. lawyer) in Hawick who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He could be the Gavin born in Lilliesleaf Parish in 1781 to Robert and Elizabeth Grieve. George (16th C.) recorded in 1538 along with John, plus Walter Veitch, David Do[wne?] and Walter Scott, when Andrew Lough forced them off his lands at Synton. George (18th/19th C.) grocer in Lilliesleaf, listed in Pigot’s 1837 directory. He could be the ‘Cadger’ listed on Main Street in the 1841 census. George (b.c.1808) stockmaker in Hawick. He married Agnes Donaldson, who had previously been married to the oldest son of James ‘Pawkie’ Paterson. George (b.1831/2) quarry worker in Denholm. He lived in an old house by the school gates. When that was demolished he lived in the White Swan. His wife Matilda came from Cupar in Fife and they had a son, James. George ‘the Prince’ (19th C.) resident of the Canongate in Denholm. He worked on the railway. Isabella ‘Bella’ (19th/20th C.) resident of a house on the Kirkwyard, near where the Drums and Fifes start on the Thursday night of the Common Riding. She would regularly come out to offer a tray of rum and milks to the band.

Her son Dod was a founder member of the 1514 Club. James (16th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf. In 1595/6 his son William was granted lands in the village. James (17th C.) recorded as tenant of ‘Oldsteson’ in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. He is listed after Cuthbert and William, and so probably closely related. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Riddell and their children included: Jane (b.1670); and James (b.1678). James (17th/18th C.) listed at Highchests in the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. Probably the same James was in Highchests in 1711 when his son James was baptised in Robertson. James (17th/18th C.) tailor in Robertson Parish. In 1713 he witnessed a baptism in Hawick for John Scott in Drydenburn, but was ‘in ye parish of Roberton’. He could be the same as the James who lived at Highchests. James (17th/18th C.) from Hawick Parish. In 1702 he was recorded being ‘nou in Flanders’ when his son James was baptised in Hawick; the child was ‘begotten in fornica[tio]n’ with Margaret Scott and Margaret’s brother Robert made ‘faith for the education of the child’. The witnesses were gardener James Falsyde and glover John Hart. James (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. His children included: James (b.1737); Adam (b.1738); Thomas (b.1740); and William (b.1743). James (b.1710/1) son of a shepherd. He moved to Newbigging near Hawick when his father became shepherd in 1726, staying 6 years, then being shepherd for 2 years at Raeknowe and 2 years at Acerknowe and Winnington Rig. In 1767 he gave evidence regarding the earlier use of Hawick Common; he was described as married at that time and living at Templehall. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, perhaps at Wiltonburn. He married Isabel Pringle in Robertson Parish in 1761. Their children included: John (b.1761); Agnes (b.1768); and Jean (b.1770). The witnesses in 1770 were Thomas Easton and Thomas Hoy. He witnessed a baptism for Walter Rae at Whitfield in 1773. James (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Betty Cook and their son Adam was baptised in 1779. James (d.1781) recorded as servant of ‘Mr. Dickson’ when he died in Hawick. This was presumably the minister of Bedrule, who had died in 1787. James (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Borthwick Burnfoot in 1780. His children included James (b.1776), Thomas (b.1778) and Charles (b.1780). James (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He was recorded at Dykeraw in 1778. He married Janet Watson and their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1778. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Linthill. He subscribed to Andrew Scott’s book of poetry, published in Kelso in 1811. James (b.c.1808) barber on the High Street in Hawick, probably at No. 32 on the 1841 census. James (b.1788/9) from Elsdon in Northumberland, he owned the farm of Waterside near Letham. In 1851 he was living there with his wife Janet and daughter Matilda. He married Janet Lachlan (from Dalkeith) and their children included: William (b.1808), 1st son; Robert (b.1810), 2nd son; and Mary (b.1812). James (18th/19th C.) recorded at ‘Newroad’ in 1826 when the death of his wife is recorded in Hawick. James (b.c.1800) originally from Yarrow, son of Robert. In 1841 he was a farm worker living at Branxholme and he was shepherd at Branxholme ‘Gate’ (probably the Lodge) in 1851. He married Isabella Oliver in Acrum, and their children included: Robert (b.1830); Elizabeth (‘Betty’, b.1832); Joan (b.1835); Williamina (b.1838), who probably died young; and Jeany. James (19th C.) second official singer of Hogg’s ‘Teribus’ at the Common Riding. He could be the same James who is recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory as a cart and plough wright on Bucleuch Street, or the James living on Green Wynd on the 1841 census, or even the blacksmith, father of the composer William Inglis. James (b.1816) blacksmith in Wilton, he was son of Hawick blacksmith Thomas and Elizabeth Bookless.
Robson

He was on Wilton Place in 1851 and Dickson Street in 1861. He married Jessie Inglis in 1841 and their children included: Margaret; Thomas; Eliza; William Inglis (b.1853), who became a professor of music; James Alexander (b.1855); Jessie (b.1857); and Charles (b.1861), who became a minister. James (19th C.) grocer in Cavers or Minto Parish, recorded in 1852. James (b.1852/3) son of Denholm blacksmith John. He was known as an authority on local antiquities, particularly arrow-heads. He was also noted as a prize-winner at flower shows. He married Janet Oliver, from Denholm, and she died in 1932, aged 80. Their eldest daughter was Mary. They are buried in Denholm. James (b.1855) youngest son of William ‘Billy Buttons’ and related to the Denholm blacksmiths. He had brothers John (Hawick Town Councillor) and William and a sister Beatrice. Like his father and brothers, he started off as a stocking-maker. He later became a teacher and private tutor. He was an expert on local history and wrote extensively about the Scottish Borders, producing several books including ‘Border Sketches’ (1891), ‘Churches and churchyards of Teviotdale’ (1893) and ‘Border Battles and Battlefields’ (1897). He also wrote ‘Teviotside legends & stories’ (1895) under the pseudonym Bernard Ainsworth. He was elected Cornet in 1711. In 1718 he witnessed a baptism for glover John Scott. He could be the John, son of Robert and Helen, born in Hawick in 1689 or the John, son of William and Helen Muir born in 1685. He is probably the John who married Isobel Huntly and whose daughter Anne was baptised in Hawick in 1718. John (1773–1834) 2nd son of James of Samieston. He was tenant farmer at Belford. He was a founding member of the Jedforest Club and served with the western troop of Roxburghshire Yeomanry Cavalry. He married Esther, younger daughter of Thomas Scott of Peel. Their elder son was Dr. James Robson-Scott of Ashtrees and their younger son was Thomas Robson-Scott of Newton. He died at Belford. John (b.1780s) son of a blacksmith in Denholm, probably Thomas. His brother Thomas was also a blacksmith there. He was an apprentice stocking-maker in Denholm, but was apparently noticed on the Green by Lord Minto, who suggested he joined the Royal Navy. He rose through the ranks, but was demoted when he allowed a deserter to escape. He spent some time at Portsmouth, where he got married to Mary Buchanan and had a son, William. He then spent 6 years serving in India, took part in the capture of Algiers in 1812 and was on the ship that took Napoleon to St. Helens. He returned to Denholm with his wife and son, ‘Billy Buttons’. John (b.1803/4) born in St. Boswells, he was innkeeper at the Plough Inn in Lilliesleaf, recorded in 1837. He was listed as a joiner in 1841 and innkeeper in 1851. In Slater’s 1852 directory he was innkeeper at the Cross Keys. His wife was Jessie, and their children included William and Helen. In 1861 his wife was running the inn, and so he was presumably deceased (or travelling). John (1826–99) son of Thomas and Isabella Hardie. His father and brother Thomas were blacksmiths at Teviothead and elsewhere. He was blacksmith at several places, but mostly (and for the longest period) in Denholm. He was originally based on Main Street, but in 1864 moved to the Quarry...
Road, where he built a new smiddy, house and stable. At the age of 17 he married Mary Newton, from Gordon in Berwickshire, and she died in 1883, aged 60. He had many sons with her (8 of whom survived), including: George, who died young; Thomas (b.1844/5), blacksmith at 46 High Street; Alexander (b.1846, ‘Alec’), who died in Australia; John (b.1848/9), also a blacksmith, died in Penicuik; Robert (b.1851), mason in Hawick; Robert Newton, monumental sculptor; James (b.1853/4); William Hardie (1856–1927), who died in Canada; George (b.1858); and Mark Newton (b.1861), who became a minister. The average height of his sons was 6 ft 1½ in. He also remarried and had more children. John (b.1845/6) born at Wilton Dean, he was eldest son of William, and grandson of John, who was in the Navy. His brothers were William, Precentor at Bedrule, and James, local historian. He worked as a stocking-maker and stone hewer. He was Precentor in the Denholm Free Kirk for 13 years. He moved to Hawick, where he was a Town Councillor for Slitrig Ward and was heavily involved in religious and temperance movements in the town. He was associated with West Port Church, Hawick Home Mission, the Sabbath School Union, the Poorhouse Committee and the Parish Council. He married Janet Oliver from Cavers. John (b.c.1850) son of Denholm blacksmith John. He was also a blacksmith and known as an athlete. He died in the prime of life in Penicuik. Mark Newton (1861–1939) youngest son of John, who was blacksmith at Denholm, and Mary Newton. He was born and attended school in Denholm, then moved to Hawick at 16. He was a teacher there for over 8 years. He wrote poetry and also produced an article on ‘Lower Rulewater and its Associations’ for the Archaeological Society. From 1886 he resolved to do ‘home’ missionary work and was stationed at Fisherton, Musselburgh. Afterwards he was Presbyterian Minister in County Durham and Congregational Minister at Sanquhar and Cumnock. He was a member of Allars Kirk in Hawick in the early 1900s. As well as publishing many poems in the local press, he also contributed some articles on Border life and scenes. He privately published ‘Some Denholm Families’. His first wife and child died about 2 years after he was married. Like his brothers, he was tall, being about 6 feet 3 inches. Mary nee Waugh (b.1864) daughter of Andrew Waugh and Agnes Purdom. She was assistant nurse at Weens for several years. She married Will Robson and their children included John, Agnes Purdom and Janet Oliver. Dr. Michael J.H. (1933–2017) Hawick Museum curator and contributor to the Archaeological Society Transactions. He was also a founding member of the Borders Family History Society. He retired to the Isle of Lewis. He wrote several short books, including: ‘Tibbie Shiel’ (1986); ‘Ride with the moonlight: the Mosstroopers of the Border’ (1987); ‘Sheep of the Borders’ (1988); ‘No road this way after dark: George Harkness’s reminiscences of Liddesdale’ (1989); ‘Break with the past: changed days on two Border sheep farms (Langburnshiels and Riccarton) with The record book of the Riccarton Mill Club’ (1991), ‘Surnames and clansmen: Border family history in earlier days’ (1998); ‘Dykes, ditches and disputers: a history of boundary and field enclosures in the Borders’ (2004); and others relating to the Highlands and Islands. He was involved in the founding of the Turnbull Clan Association, was the clan newsletter’s first editor and was working on a history of the Turnbulls when he died. Miss S. singer at Colour Bussings and other functions in the early 20th century. Mungo (16th C.) recorded as resident at Essenside when acting as a caunter for William Scott in Burnfoot on Ale in 1581. Patrick (15th C.) witness in 1436 to a sasine for the lands of Wolfelee and Wolfehopelee. The other men listed were all from relatively nearby. Peter (b.1801/2) from England, he was a shepherd at Boghall and then Hermitage Bridge. He was also an elder at Castleton Kirk. He was listed as male head of his family at Boghall in 1835–41. His wife was Agnes, from Heiton. Their children included Peter, John, James, Agnes and Helen. Robert ‘Rob’ (16th C.) called ‘Fwll Mowth’ in a bond of 1562, where William Oliver in Lustruther and Gavin Oliver in West Houses have to present him to John Kerr of Ferniehirst. Robert (17th/18th C.) carter and merchant in Hawick. He was listed among those contributing to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He is also listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick ‘eist the water’ in 1694. He was a Burgess of Hawick. Probably the same Robert was a merchant in 1699 when he witnessed a baptism for smith James Scott. He witnessed a baptism for fellow carrier James Wilson in 1701 (where he is recorded both as a carter and as a merchant). He is probably the merchant Robert who witnessed baptisms for smith James Scott in 1704, for piper William Turnbull in 1706, for workman Robert Gledstains in 1708, for carrier James Wilson in 1712 and for carrier...

William Rae in 1713. John Scott was his servant in 1711 (when he witnessed a baptism for him) and Thomas Huntly (who gave evidence relating to the use of the Common in 1767) was his servant in 1715. He is probably the Robert listed as a merchant who witnessed baptisms in 1719 for Andrew Waugh, tenant in Hawick, and in 1720 for carrier James Henderson and for smith Thomas Huntly. He and another Robert (presumably his son) were the 2 merchants who witnessed a baptism for carrier George Porteous in 1720. He is probably the Robert, married to Helen Robson, whose children baptised in Hawick included: Marion or Margaret (b.1686); Walter (b.1687); John (b.1689); Isobel (b.1691); and Helen (b.1693). The witnesses in 1689 were Robert Douglas and Robert Wilson. Robert (17th/18th C.) merchant in Hawick, probably son of Robert. In 1720 the pair of Roberts witnessed a baptism for carrier George Porteous. In 1718 he witnessed a baptism for tailor Robert Chisholme. Robert Newton (b.1851) born in Eccles, he was 4th son of Denholm blacksmith John. He trained as a stone-hewer at Denholm Hill Quarry and became a monumental sculptor in Hawick. He was an active member of Allars Kirk and the Archological Society, being particularly involved in cleaning up and preserving the remains of Southdean Kirk. He carved the WWI alabaster and bronze WWI memorial tablet for Allars Kirk. He also worked on the Johnnie Armstrong memorial at Teviothead. He married Janet Oliver, from Appletreehall. In later life he had a long, flowing beard (it is said, to protect him from stone dust), making him look patriarchal. Simon ‘Syme’ (16th/17th C.) recorded as tenant in Lethem along with John Oliver in 1623. 2 men were acquitted of stealing sheep from them. Thomas (16th C.) leased ‘ane quarter and half quarter of Todrik’ (i.e. Todrig) from Thomas Scott in 1538. described as ‘in Langnewton’ in a 1612 document Thomas (16th/17th C.) described as ‘in Langnewton’ in a 1612 document listing people convicted of charging too much interest on loans. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Robertson Parish (or the part corresponding to Hassendean). He married Isobel Turnbull in 1682 and their children included: Margaret (b.1684); Dand (b.1686); and Bessie (b.1689). The witnesses in 1684 were William Turnbull (probably related to his wife) and John Noble. In 1682 he witnessed a baptism for William Collin in Horsleyhill, in 1683 others for William Turnbull and for Adam Craig and in 1687 for Walter Runciman. He also witnessed a baptism in 1686 for John Turnbull (perhaps related to his wife) and Margaret Dodds. Thomas (17th/18th C.) described as occasional tenant in Bewlie in 1716 when he leased lands in Bewlie from John Nisbet of Nisbetfield. Thomas ‘Tam o the Yett’ (18th C.) former resident of Liddesdale, said to be an ancestor of the blacksmiths of Denholm. A story is told of how a Liddesdale minister examining children asked who the strongest man was, and was given his name as the reply. He may have been a descendant of Thomas ‘Robison’, farmer at Yethouse. Thomas (d.1805) son of Thomas, he was probably farmer at Calaburn. He witnessed a baptism for Richard Young (perhaps his brother-in-law) in 1774. He married Isobel Young in Hawick Parish in 1764. Their children included: Margaret (b.1765); Isobel (b.1767); James (b.1770); William (b.1771); William (again, b.1772); Alexander (b.1776). He died at Calaburn, with his wife following a few days later. Thomas (18th C.) married Janet Anderson in Ewes Parish in 1783. Their children, baptised in Langholm, included Christian (b.1788), Mary (b.1790), James (b.1792), Thomas (b.1799) and William (b.1801). Thomas (18th/19th C.) blacksmith at Denholm, listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when he owned 3 horses. His shop was in a thatched cottage at the foot of the Loaning. He was probably father of the later blacksmith of the same name, as well as John, who was in the Navy. Thomas (b.c.1790) master blacksmith at Denholm, probably the same man named on Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories. His brother John was in the Navy. In 1815, he married Isabella (‘Bell’) Hardie, from Dargues in Redewater. They had 6 daughters and 4 sons: Thomas (b.1816), blacksmith at Teviothead and in Hawick; James, possibly blacksmith in Middlesburgh; Ann (b.1818); William (b.1824), also a blacksmith in Denholm; John (b.1826), blacksmith in several places, but longest at Denholm; Mary; Isabella, who married William Easton from Yetholm; Betty; Catherine; and Helen, the youngest. He may be the smith of that name who was listed as a member of Allars Kirk in 1829. He could be the same Thomas who donated a stone ball, found in Denholm, to the Museum in 1863. Thomas (1777/8–1844) Hawick blacksmith, listed on Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories. In 1837 he was on the High Street and is recorded at about 9 Brougham Place on the 1841 census. He married Elizabeth Bookless, who died in 1858, aged 77. Their children... included: Helen (b.1809); Mary (b.1811); Elizabeth (1814–28), who probably died young; Isabel; James (b.1816); and William. He is buried at St. Mary’s. He was probably related to the other Robson blacksmiths. He may be the ‘Tam Robson’ who supervised the roasting of an ox at the Tower Knowe for the celebration of the coming of age of Walter Francis, Duke of Buccleuch in 1827. Thomas (18th C.) spinner in Hawick. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He could be the ‘Woollen Shubber’ living on the Howegate in 1841, with his wife Margaret and children Thomas and Walter. Thomas ‘Tam’ (19th C.) carrier of the mail between Langholm and Hawick. He was a keen fisherman (described in John Hyslop’s ‘Echoes from the Border Hills’), and it was said that if the trout were biting then the letters to Hawick would be late! Thomas (b.c.1815) from outside Roxburghshire, he was an excise officer living on the Howegate in 1841. The other residents were probably wife Jane, mother Barbara, sister Jane and daughter Isabella. Thomas (1816–81) son of Thomas and Isabella Hardie. He was blacksmith at Teviothead and then at 54 High Street. He is listed as a High Street blacksmith in Slater’s 1852 directory. He later moved to 5 Teviot Road and became a retailer. He married Catherine Waugh, from Southdean Parish, who died in 1906, aged 88. Their children were: Elizabeth (b.c.1843), who married William Wilson, Hawick rag and waste merchant; Thomas (b.1839), who died young; Robert (b.1840), who died aged 15; another Thomas (who also died young, like his following 4 siblings); William; Catherine; Robert; John; and Isabella (b.1850, died aged 26). Thomas (1819–94) born at Cappuck, he later farmed at Menslaws. He was recorded at Menslaws in a directory of 1868. He married Eliza Wilson Cockburn (who died in 1906) and their children were Agnes Cockburn (who died young), Catherine Home (who died in 1958), Janetta (who died in 1969) and Thomas Cockburn (who died in 1931). They are buried in Bedrule churchyard. Thomas (b.1817/8) carrier, son of carter Richard. He lived in Jedburgh and is recorded in 1852 operating a weekly service to Hawick, leaving from the Horse Market. In the 1860s he was operating a twice weekly service between Hawick and Jedburgh. Thomas (c.1845–c.1925) eldest son of John, blacksmith at Denholm. He carried on a blacksmith’s business at 46 High Street. Later he worked at Weensland Mills. He had some musical talent and was Precentor at East bank Kirk. He was also a noted angler and authority on local natural history. He died in Hawick at more than 80 years old. Thomas Cockburn (1869–1931) born at Menslaws, son of Thomas and Eliza Cockburn. He was Manager of the National Bank of Scotland in London and is buried in Bedrule churchyard. Thomas (19th/20th C.) of Weensland, responsible for stuffing a large fraction of the Museum’s bird collection. He could be the same as the Thomas (d.c.1925) who worked at Weensland Mills. Walter (15th C.) described as ‘in Harden’ in 1493 when he was accused at a Jedburgh court of conspiring with Archibald Armstrong (who was already ‘at the horn’) in the murder of the Laird of Alemoor. Walter Ker served as surety for him. It is unclear if this is Harden on Borthwick Water or another one. Walter (17th C.) described as a merchant in a Magistrates Court case of 1642 when Andrew Deans was ordered to pay debts and expenses to him. Perhaps the same Walter witnessed a baptism in Hawick in 1656 for John Porteous. Walter (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Cleughhead in Castleton Parish. He was listed among male heads of households in 1835–41. Walter ‘Wattie’ (20th C.) fiddler from Denholm. He often played along with Tom Hughes in the 1970s. William (16th C.) probably in Hawick in 1561 when he made an agreement with David Todrig over lands in Selkirk. He is recorded as ‘William Robesone in Hauyk’. William (16th C.) tenant in Langnewton. In 1581 there was a marriage contract for his first-born son William and Elizabeth. He gave to the couple ‘half a cotland with onsets, tofts and crofts’ in Langnewton, with the liferent reserved for him and his wife Katherine King. Probably the same William is recorded in 1581/2 when his lands in Langnewton were mentioned in a marriage contract involving George Brig and John Melrose; ‘Jock the Laird’ is also mentioned, and probably a relative. William (16th C.) eldest son of William in Langnewton. In 1581 he was contracted to be married to Elizabeth Brydon, daughter of the deceased John John Brydon in Rutherford and Margaret Ker. William (16th/17th C.) granted a half husbandland of land in Lilliesleaf in 1595/6. He was described as ‘son of James there’. William (16th C.) charged with the murder of William Hall ‘of Wollic’ (probably Wolfelee). He was recorded being ‘in Rochthewchmylne’ (probably Roughheugh Mill) and James Langlands of that Ilk acted as surety for him, and so he was probably a local man. Langlands had to pay 20 merks to Hall’s only daughter when Robson failed to appear. William (18th/19th C.) farmer at Gowanbrae in Wilton Parish, recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. William (18th/19th C.) from Falstone in North Tyne, he lived at Waterside in Southdean Parish. He married Barbara Baptie from Bucham. Their children (baptised in Byrness) included: Isabel (b.1809); and Janet (b.1811). William Hutchison 'Billy Buttons' (b.1811/2) son of John of the Navy and grandson of the Denholm blacksmith. He was born in England, while his father was stationed there. His nickname came from the coat, festooned with military buttons, which his mother made for him when he was a child. He lived up the Doctor's Pend in Denholm and later had the house called Rosebank built. In part of that house he ran a small stocking-maker's with his 3 sons. He later moved to Westgate Hall and finally to Hawick. He would carry his wares throughout the Borders and into England, where he was known as 'Stocking Willie'. In Wilton in 1845 he married Janet Cairns, from Hawick Muir. Their children were: John (b.c.1846), who was a stocking-maker and hewer and married Janet Oliver; William (b.c.1850), also a stocking-maker; Beatrix (b.c.1853), who married Bailie Kennedy; and James (b.1855), stocking-maker, teacher and local historian. William (b.1813/4) farm labourer in the Teviotdale area. In 1841 he was living at Commonside Lynn, moved to Hayknowe and by 1861 was farm steward at Broadhaugh. He firstly married Ann, and secondly Margaret Wylie. His children included John, Walter, Archibald, Elizabeth, Margaret, Mary, William, James and Andrew (1859–1930), who emigrated to Illinois. William (1814–81) born at Falstone in Northumberland, he was a shepherd in Castleton Parish. In 1861 he was shepherd at Woolhope. He married Margaret (1819–97), daughter of Newcastle joiner John Douglas. Their children were: William (b.1844); Elizabeth (b.1846); John (b.1848), Janet (b.1850) and John (b.1852), who all died young; Robert (1853–1930); James (1856–89), law clerk in Edinburgh; Hector (1857–1901), ironmonger in Wigtown and Stirling; Walter (1859–1932), bank clerk in Lanarkshire; and Adam (b.1861), solicitor in Galashiels. William (b.1824) son of Thomas and Isabella Hardie, he was also blacksmith in Denholm, on Main Street. He married Agnes Miller (sister of John Miller) in Cavers Parish in 1854. Their children included: Robert (b.1849); Thomas (b.1852); James (b.1854); William (b.1856); John Hardie (b.1859); George (b.1862); Isabella (b.1866); and Agnes (b.1868). William Cairns ‘Billy’ (b.1849/50) 2nd son of William, ‘Billy Buttons’, and grandson of sailor John. He was born in Kirkton Parish. He had brothers John, who was a Councillor in Hawick, and James, who wrote local history books. He worked as a stocking-maker. He was Precentor at the Old Chapel in Denholm and at Bedrule Kirk. In 1872 he married Helen, daughter of William MacNeil, teacher at Bedrule. His son John was born in Eccles in 1882, and he had a grandson, also Billy, who was a teacher in Cumnock. He lived to about 80, settling in Leitholm and becoming a noted antiquary. William Inglis (1853–1891) son of blacksmith James. He composed music for 'Up wi' the Banner' and 'Hawick Among the Hills'. Born in Hawick he apprenticed as a blacksmith, and later worked as a frame-smith, but his career eventually turned to music. By 1881 he was advertising himself as an instructor for the 'Tonic Sol-fa College' at 1 Laing Terrace. He also led St. Mary's choir. In 1882 he won a Curwen Scholarship of the Tonic Sol-fa College in London. There he became a member of the London Musical Composition Club, graduated from the Tonic Sol-fa College and was appointed by the U.P. Church as a music teacher. In 1883 he became leader of psalmody at Queen Anne Street U.P. Church in Dunfermline, and later taught in Glasgow and Govan. For his last 7 years he was choirmaster at Free St. George's Church in Glasgow. He was appointed as Professor of School of Music for Scotland at the Glasgow Athenæum (later the Royal Scottish Academy of Music). He adopted his mother's maiden name as a middle name, presumably to distinguish himself from other Williams. He married Nancy Scott and their son, William Scott wrote 2 books on Hawick in the mid-20th century. He died in Cambuslang and is buried in Wilton Cemetery. William Hardie (1856–1927) younger son of Denholm blacksmith John. He emigrated to Canada in 1881. He was known as an expert on Canadian fossils, with his collection given to the Ottawa Museum. He died in British Columbia. William (19th C.) Hawick cyclist, who lived at Havelock Street. He can be seen in a photograph of 1899 with his trophies. He may be the same as the engineer and sawmill owner. William (19th C.) engineer of Hawick, and member of Allars Kirk. He may be the William whose sawmill is listed on Havelock Street in a 1900 directory. William B. (b.c.1900) one of the survivors of the Gallipoli Campaign, who visited the region in a
Robson Court

The land was owned by the Scott family and named after Adam Robson, a rugby player. The name Robson Court was also used to refer to the group of Hawick veterans in 1965. He was just 15 when he enlisted. William Scott (19th/20th C.) son of William Inglis and Nancy Scott. He worked as an advertising manager. He wrote ‘Hawick Place Names’ (1947) and ‘The Story of Hawick’ (1937, revised 1945 and 1947). He was a Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland. He married Elizabeth Hannah Watt and their son James Scott was Professor of Medicine at Edinburgh University (formerly spelled ‘Robeson’, ‘Robesonn’, ‘Robsone’, ‘Robsonne’ etc.; see also Robison and Robertson, which were formerly not distinguished).

Robson Court (rob-sin-kör) n. part of the Meadows, refurbished in 1986 and named after rugby player Adam Robson.

Robson’s (rob-sinz) n. former sawmill on Weensland Road. Its traction engine can be seen in a photograph of 1913. This is probably the same company whose sawmill was on Havelock Street in 1900.

Robson-Scott (rob-sin-sko’) n. Dr. James of Ashtrees (1814–83) eldest son of John Robson (son of James of Samieston) and Esther Scott (daughter of Thomas Scott of Peel). Educated in medicine, he joined the East India Company and went to Madras about 1836, later being appointed surgeon with the 4th Madras Infantry, and retired in 1858. On his return to Britain he took the additional surname of Scott, having inherited the lands of Ashtrees from his uncle John Scott of Riccalton. He lived at Belford, Mormebattle, where he had been born. He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1863. He joined the Berwickshire Naturalists’ Club, becoming President. He was also a member of the Jedforest Club. He served as a Justice of the Peace and Commissioner of Supply for the county. He was listed as owner of Ashtrees in the Land Tax Rolls of about 1874. He married Marianne, daughter of James Grant of Correemony, Inverness-shire. His children were: Maj. James S., who succeeded to Ashtrees; and 2 daughters, one of whom married John Corse Scott of Synton. He died following an illness contracted while visiting his brother at Newton, and is buried in Hownam kirkyard. John Alexander of Newton and Menslaws (1858–1940) eldest son of Thomas. He was educated at Fettes College and Edinburgh University. He travelled extensively, and had a collection of stuffed birds, which he shot himself. He also bred horses, including ‘Gold’, who won the Ascot Gold Cup in 1890. In 1887 he married Margaret Suter, 2nd daughter of William Lang, and she died in 1940.

Robson-Scott

Their children included: Theresa Dorothy (1888–1967); and Marjorie (1891–1967); and Thomas Selby (1894–1914), who was killed in WWI. His children are recorded as followers of the Jedforest Hunt. His sister-in-law Florence Lang married his brother Thomas of Lethem. Marjorie (1891–1967) daughter of John. On the death of her father she took over running the farm of Newton (where she lived with her sister Dorothy) and also the family stud. When she died Newton was inherited by her cousin John Lang. She is buried in Bedrule Kirkyard. Thomas of Newton, Bedrule (1815–93) 2nd son of John Robson and Esther Scott and brother of Dr. James. He inherited Newton from his uncle Thomas Scott, taking the additional Scott surname. He leased the farm at Lethem (which had long been in the Scott family), as well as several other sheep farms, and was an authority on sheep-farming. He served as a Commissioner of Supply and Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. He found a hammer of felsite on his farm in the mid-19th century. In 1861 he was farming 8500 acres at Lethem and employing 28 people. He was recorded at both Lethem and Newton in a directory of 1868. He was listed as owner of the lands of Newton on the Land Tax Rolls of about 1874. In 1857 he married Mary Anne Leslie, daughter of Rev. T. Wight, and she died in 1897. Their children were: John Alexander of Newton; Esther Anne; Thomas William of Lethem; Sarah; Charles George; and Lilias. The family have an enclosure in Bedrule churchyard.

Thomas William Tom (b.1866) younger son of Thomas of Newton. He was educated at the Edinburgh Academy. He was Whip of the Jedforest Hunt 1894–97 and Master of Hunt 1903–32. He joined the Jedforest Club in 1898. He lived at Lethem and also at Lanton Tower, which he purchased. He farmed at Lethem, Southdean and Peel. In 1892 he married Florence Jane, daughter of William Lang, who was a cousin of Andrew Lang’s; his sister-in-law Margaret married his brother John of Newton. He secondly married Violet Cunningham. His children included John (killed following illness in WWI), Tom, Esther and William Douglas. His children Esther, John and Tom were all followers of the Jedforest Hunt when young. There is a signed portrait of him in the Horse & Hounds Inn at Bonchester.

Thomas Selby (1894–1914) son of John, he attended Rugby School and was killed in WWI. He was a Lieutenant in the Royal Scots and was recorded missing at Wytschaete, Flanders. There is a memorial plaque to him inside Bedrule Kirk.

William Douglas (1901–81) youngest son of Tom, born in Southdean Parish, he became Professor of German at Birkbeck College and Honorary Director of the Institute of Germanic Studies at the University of London 1968–73. He wrote several works on Goethe and translated Sigmund Freud into English, his wife Elaine helping him in some of this work.

Robsteed (rob-steed) n. former lands in Liddesdale, recorded in the 1541 rental roll as ‘Robsteid’, and listed along with the other lands of ‘Cleirlandis, Thomscotsteid, Cranswat, Gusbank, Hurklebuss’, with tenants William Elliot, David Elliot, Bartholomew Nixon and Ninian Elliot, valued at 5 merks. They were presumably a set of adjacent small steadings, but their location is uncertain.

Rob the Clocker (rob-thu-klo-kur) n. nickname of Robert Wulson of the mid-1800s.

Rob the Heckler (rob-thu-hek-lur) n. resident of Denholm in the 19th century. A story is recounted (in the Border Counties’ Magazine) of his youthful love for his native village. His father sent him to start service somewhere near Lilliesleaf, and when he got to Hassendean he looked back and said ‘O ma bonny Denholm! aw’ll never see ye mair!’ His father left him at his new place of employment, but was suprised to find him already back in Denholm when he returned home. His nickname presumably comes from the former manufacturing of lint.

Rob the Laird (rob-thu-lärd) n. nickname for Robert Scott, descendant of the Scotts of Thirlestane, who farmed at Binks.

Rob the Laird (rob-thu-lärd) n. nickname for Robert Scott, a man of gypsy descent who was said (in an account by Mr. Simson) to be ‘keeper for the counties of Peebles, Selkirk and Roxburgh’ about the time of the war with France. It is unclear what position he may have held and how he may have been related to other Scotts.

Rob the Laird (rob-thu-lärd) n. nickname used locally in the 19th century. This may be the same man as Robert Scott, farmer at Binks – ‘Wagga Wagga and Jocky Sling, Rumpie Laidlaw and Rob the Laird, Jocky Tencocks and Wullie the King, Henry Mullens and Hope the Laird’[HI] (note that one version of the poem has ‘Jock the Laird’).

Rob wi the Dog (rob-wi-thu-dög) n. nickname of Robert Oliver.

Rob Young (rob-yung) n. blacksmith Robert Young, mentioned in the song ‘Pawkie Paiterson’ – ‘Auld Rob Young o’ the Back Raw’s there, Biddy the Hawker’s sellin’ preens; Wat Inglis is at his tricks yince mair, And there’s baith Jock and Sandy Weens’[III].

Rochead (roch-heed) n. John Thomas (1814–78) Edinburgh-born architect, who trained with David Bryce before established his own practice in Glasgow. Here he designed many of the grandest buildings of the latter part of the 19th century, e.g. St. John’s Free Church. In Hawick he was responsible for designing the Corn Exchange, St. Andrew’s Free Church and several mansions, including Silverbuthall House, Hillhead House, Langlands Park, Heronhill, Mansfield and Thornwood. He was also responsible for the design for the Wallace Monument in Stirling.

rock (rok) n., arch. distaff in spinning, the staff holding the unspun flax or wool – ‘But she lootit down and her rock tuik a lowe, An’ that was a bad beginnin’ o’r [T], ‘...by striking her with ane rug, and breaking of her mistress rocks when she was spinning there...’[BR1693] ‘...And thus she sung, and twined her rock, When at the door a feeble knock’[JTe] (from Old Danish).

the Rock (thu-rok) n. feature indicated on Wood’s plan of 1824, marking the northern end of the Little Haugh. It was situated somewhere between the current Little Haugh and the Drill Hall area, on the land once occupied by Teviot Crescent Mills, and was presumably a rock of some sort.

rock bool (rok-bool) n., arch. a hard boiled confection. Miss Lamb’s, from Needle Street, were famous in the early 19th century – ‘Bet Revel’s ‘rock bools’ were the best sweets he ever tasted’[JTu], ‘The ‘bit’ of old Needle Street will appeal to all lovers of ‘rock bools’[V&K], ‘Rock bools – Hawick’s distinctive sweetmeat’[ECS], ‘Ee’d better heide thae rock-bools, or the bairns ’ll kinsh thum’[ECS] (see also Hawick Balls).

rockety-rowe (ro-ki’ee-row) n., arch. an amusement among children involving a rocking motion, also known as ‘wey the butter, wey the cheese’ – ‘And the old bairns’ game of ‘rockety-rowe’, when two would stand back-to-back with their arms linked and by stooping alternately, raise each other from the ground, chanting: ‘Wei butter, wei cheese, Wei a pund o’ cannle-grease, Yowe up, mei doon, This is the way to London tooni’'[DH] , a rolling gait – ‘Thom sailor has a rockety-rowe o’ a walk’[GW], a vehicle with a rocking motion, v. to rock, sway, adj. rocky, rickety, wobbly.
rocklay (rok-lā) n., poet. a kind of short cloak with a long cape, a mantle – ‘...violence kivers thame as ane rocklay’ [HSR], ‘... an’ let thame kiver thame’s wi’ thair ain confuushon as wi’ ane rocklay’ [HSR].

Rocksteid (rok-steed) n. former lands in 1632, listed among the possessions of Francis Beat-tie in Liddesdale. It is recorded as ‘Twa steids Over and Neather, with the pertinents’ thairof called Roksteid’, along with ‘Neirland’ (probably Netherraw) and ‘Podotoun’ (probably Padding-ton).

Rockvale (rok-vāl) n. name for group of houses on Liddesdale Road (previously Lynnwood Road), being Nos. 1–6. The first house (No. 4) was built sometime before 1857 and took the name in the 1880s, the others being built in 1926. They were originally reached from the main road via a foot bridge over the mill lade. They were demolished in the 1980s (the origin is presumably from the rocky protuberance, now a disused quarry, overlooking the valley).

Rockview (rok-vew) n. house in Denholm, off Minto Road, which was a blacksmith’s in the early 20th century.

roddin (ro-diin) n., poet. a track, path – ‘... gae they wavies furth bie the fit-roddins o’ the flok’ [HSR].

Rodds (rodz) n. lands in Liddesdale, recorded in the 1541 rental roll as ‘Roddis’. At that time the tenants were John and James Elliot and the lands were valued at one merk. It is unclear where this is, but it was listed between Ramsiegill and Roughley, so it is possibly the same place as ‘Reddamenn’.

Rodes (rōdz) n. former farm near Southdean, although the precise location and name are uncertain. John Oliver was tenant there in 1669 and John Storie in 1694 (it was ‘Roods’ and ‘rods’ in 1694).

Rodger (ro-jur) n. Andrew (17th C.) tenant in Clarilaw on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. In 1696 he witnessed a baptism for Walter Turnbull in Clarilaw. It is possible he is the Andrew, married to Bessie Turnbull, whose children, baptised in Roberton (but probably Hassendean), included Isobel (b.1683) and Margaret (b.1686). The witnesses in 1683 were Thomas Henderson and John Armstrong. He is probably the Andrew who (along with James) witnessed a baptism for William in 1684 and witnessed another for John Turnbull in 1688. Andrew (18th C.) farmer on the Cavers estate who, before about 1737, made early winnowing machines or corn fanners, inspired by descriptions of a Dutch model (perhaps communicated to him by Douglas of Cavers). These may have been the first mechanical means of separating grain from the chaff in the whole of Britain. Another version tells how in 1733 he found a machine discarded in Leith by James Meikle (brought back from Holland) and made one of his own in 1737, supplying them for £3 each by 1740, having given up his farm. He thereafter sold them in the area, although there were religious objections that they were supplanting the Lord’s creations. In 1723 he obtained a property in the Sandbed from his uncle James Rodger, which had previously belonged to Lang-lands. On either this property or elsewhere at the Sandbed he established a shop. His descendants traded in fanning machines there for about the next 100 years. Some dispute with the Ha-wick Parish Session (which is unclear) resulted in him giving up the title for another Sandbed property about 1724 (perhaps part of the same property) where the Grammar School would then be built. Andrew Turnbull and John Pringle were charged with valuing his house for the Kirk Ses-sion. A portrait of him exists (he is also referred to as ‘Rogers’ and sometimes called ‘William’). He was recorded living at Cavers itself in 1723 when one of his children was baptised. He is probably the Andrew, whose children, baptised in Cavers Parish, included Marion (b.1711), William (b.1713), James (b.1715), Margaret (b.1717), Betty (b.1720), Robert (b.1723), an unnamed child (b.1725), Hugh (b.1727) and Ann (b.1729). He was at Eastcote in 1727 when his son was baptised. Andrew (d.1819) flesher in Hawick, who had sons Robert and John. He is probably the Andrew, married to Betty Grieve, whose children included: Jean (b.1769); an unnamed child (b.1769); Elizabeth (b.1771); William (b.1773); and Robert John (b.1775). The first child was baptised in Wilton Parish and the rest in Ha-wick. The witnesses in 1771 were the whole con-gregation. He is probably the Andrew whose uncle Andrew Scott died in Hawick in 1778. Andrew (b.1785) son of John and Catherine Cairns, he was born at Whitemuir Hall. In 1816 he mar-ried Margaret Smail in Selkirk. Their children in-cluded: John (b.1822), born at Hyndlee in South-dean; and Jessie (b.1831), born in Southdean. It seems likely that Andrew (b.c.1829), born in Southdean Parish, was also his son. Andrew (b.1801/2) born in Traquair Parish, he was a shepherd at Sundhope and also toll-keeper at Fiddleton around the 1860s. In 1841 he was an agricultural labourer at Priesthaughshiel. In 1851 he was at Sundhope and in 1861 he was listed as shepherd at Fiddleton, with his son James as the toll-keeper, and his daughter Joan also there. His wife was Violet Rae and their first 6 children were baptised in Yarrow Parish, then 4 in Ewes Parish and the rest in Castleton and Cavers. They included Margaret (b.1824), James (b.1826), William (b.1828), Andrew (b.1829), Violet (b.1830), John (b.1832), Walter (b.1834), Elliot (b.1835), Isabella (b.1837). Robert (also known as Rutherford, b.1839), Isaac (b.1842), Adam (b.1844), Euphemia (b.1846) and Joan (b.1847). Andrew (b.1816/7) resident of Hawick and Wilton Parishes. In 1841 he was a handloom weaver living on the Back Row, in 1851 was a stockmaker on Burn Road in the Dean and in 1861 was a frame-worker living on Dean Road. He married Elizabeth (or ‘Betsy’) Scott in Wilton in 1839 and their children included: Elizabeth (b.1840); Helen; Robert; Isabella; Gideon; Mary; John; and James. Andrew (b.c.1825) flesher on the Howegate. He may have been related to the earlier flesher of the same name. In 1841 he was listed along with his siblings Walter, Nancy, Helen and Elizabeth. He was at about 23–25 Howegate in 1851, along with his sister Helen. He was listed in Slater’s 1852 directory (as ‘Rodgers’) on the Howegate. Andrew (b.c.1829) born in Southdean Parish. In 1851 he was a farm labourer at Greenhead Cottages, Selkirk and in 1851 was a shepherd at Sunderland farm. His wife was Margaret from Ashkirk and their children included Philadelphia (b.c.1850), Margaret and Mary. Andrew (b.c.1830) born in Kirkhope Parish, he was a game watcher. In 1851 he was living with his in-laws at Netheraw in Castleton Parish. He married Frances Rodger and their children included Andrew and Matthew. Andrew (b.c.1835) born in Edinburgh, son of Andrew from Earlston. He was a frame-worker in Hawick. In 1861 he was living on Havelock Street. His wife was Euphemia (from Langholm) and their children included Andrew. James (17th C.) resident at Appletreehall according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He could be the the James who (along with Andrew) witnessed a baptism for William in 1684 in Roberton Parish (but actually the Hassendean part). James (17th/18th C.) married Isobel Dryden in Kirkton Parish in 1721. Perhaps the same James was recorded in Cavers in 1722 when his daughter Margaret was baptised. James (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at ‘Utter Parkhill’ in 1782 and Parkhill in 1784. His children included: James (b.1779); Jane (b.1782); and Helen (b.1784). James (b.1826/7) son of Andrew, he was born in Selkirk Parish. In 1861 he was recorded as toll-keeper at Fiddleton, living there with his father as well as his sister Joan. James (19th C.) flesher in Hawick. He went bankrupt in 1873, with the Commissioners for his estate being John Nicol and Walter Forsyth. Maj. James (1864/5–1930) worked in the woollen industry. He married Bella, only child of A.K. Innes. He was probably son of John and Margaret MacRaw. Janet (d.1787) servant of Dr. William Scott, who lived at Brierlyhill. She died in Hawick. John (b.c.1750) resident of Whitmuir Hall when his 2 sons were baptised in Selkirk Parish. In 1778 he married Catherine (1752–1816), daughter of James Cairns; she was born at Dodhead and died at Oakwood Mill. Their children included: Andrew (b.1785), who lived in Southdean Parish; and John (b.1787). John (1787–1869) son of John, he was born at Whitmuir Hall. In 1809 he married Margaret (or ‘Peggy’) Brunton at the East Bank Kirk in Hawick. Most of their 10 children were born at Howpasley and baptised at the East Bank Kirk: Christina (b.1810); Henry (b.1813); Nelly (b.1814); Helen (b.1817); Mary (b.c.1820); John (b.1822); Peter (b.1824); Elizabeth (‘Betty’, b.1826); Dickson (b.c.1828); and James (b.c.1830). He emigrated to Canada and died in Blenheim Township, Ontario. John (18th/19th C.) butcher of the Back Row, recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. In 1837 he was listed on the Howegate. Matthew ‘Mat’ (d.1968) joiner in Dearnburnhaugh. He took over from Adam Elliot. Robert (17th/18th C.) weaver in Hawick. He is recorded as a weaver in Whitchesters in 1704. In 1704 he also witnessed a baptism for John Glendinning in Whitchesters. He gave evidence in 1710 relating to a fight in St. Mary’s between 2 other weavers. In 1713 he witnessed a baptism for weaver David Reid. He married Janet Glendinning in 1701 and their other children were Janet (b.1701), John (b.1703), William (b.1704), Janet (again, b.1706) and Robert (b.1708). The witnesses in 1704 were William Bell in Whitchesters and James Grieve in Commonside and in 1708 were gardener William Scott and carrier Henry Paterson. Robert ‘Duke’ (19th C.) possibly the same Robert recorded as butcher at the Back Row in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. He took over as town drummer from Caleb Rutherford, about 1830 – ‘Rob Rodger, he ca’s up the rear, And Caleb beats the drum’ [RM]. Walter (b.c.1820) fleshed on the Howegate. He was living at about No. 17 in 1841, along with his siblings Nancy, Andrew, Helen and Elizabeth. William (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Dryden and their children included: Robert (b.1670); William (b.1672); Bessie (b.1674); and John (b.1684). William (17th C.) resident of Roberton Parish (but probably the part that was Hassendean). He married Margaret Scott and their children included James (b.1684) and Elizabeth (b.1687). The witnesses in 1684 were James and Andrew, who were surely related to him. The 1687 witnesses were 2 William Turnbulls. In 1687 he witnessed a baptism for William Turnbull and Margaret Scott. William (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen ‘Murie’ and their children born in Hawick Parish included: Bessie (b.1687); and an unnamed son (b.1688). William ‘pedder’ (i.e. peddler) listed among those who subscribed to the fund for the new Kirk bell in Hawick in 1693/4. He may be the William married to Helen ‘Murie’ or the one married to Janet Dryden. William (17th C.) shepherd at Hawick Shiel in 1694, according to the Hearth Tax rolls. William (17th/18th C.) listed in 1724 and 1727 among those collecting money for Ashkirk Parish. This suggests he was probably a Kirk elder. He is probably the William who married Margaret, daughter of William Scott, in Wilton Parish in 1711. Their children, baptised in Ashkirk Parish, included: William (b.1717); and Bettie (b.1719). William (18th/19th C.) farmer at Wester Parkhill, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as owner of 2 horses. He could be the William whose wife Mary Stavert died in 1795. William (d.1805) described as ‘weaver and shopkeeper to Mr. Oliver’. It is unclear which Oliver this was. Perhaps the same weaver married Helen Scott in 1763 and had children: Margaret (b.1764); Elizabeth (b.1768); and William (b.1770). The witnesses in 1764 were Walter Scott and Robert Renwick (who married Elizabeth, perhaps his sister). William (d.1837) wright of Hawick, probably a descendant of Andrew. It is possible he is the ‘Roger’ whose premises near the top of Walter’s Wynd are shown on Wood’s 1824 map (also written ‘Rodgar’; see also Roger).

Rodgers (ro-jurz) n. Catherine (19th C.) milliner and dressmaker on the Kirk Wynd in Slater’s 1852 directory. Mary (18th/19th C.) dressmaker on the High Street, recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories.

Rodgie (ro-je) n. Rev. Andrew (1777–1861) from Abernethy, son of Thomas and Margaret Wright. He was minister of the Green (or West End) Church for 53 years, ordained in 1807, following the death of Rev. Dr. Young. He may have been in Hawick since late the previous year, having also been called to Jedburgh. He was well known for receiving the Cornet and his supporters every year at Myreslaw Green, sending his servant round with the bottle, giving them ‘A guid, cauld cauker, Frae a man that was nac Quaker’, in a verse that may have been added to Balbirnie’s ‘Auld Song’. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He was listed at Myreslawgreen in Pigot’s 1837 directory. Often referred to as Rodgie o the Green, he was known for insisting on strict observance of the Sabbath (which included no fiddling, secular singing, cooking or walking). In 1856 he was presented with a purse containing 90 sovereigns on the occasion of his jubilee. He married Isabella Summers in Hawick in 1825 and they appear to have had 4 children: Isabella (b.1826); Margaret (b.1828), still living in Hawick in 1861; Thomas (b.1831), who died young; and Mary (b.1837), also died young. A portrait of him exists. His mother-in-law died in Hawick in 1840 (on the same day as 9 others, and hence possibly in the cholera outbreak). His wife is recorded in about 1874 (along with Janet Brown, perhaps a relative) as owner of part of the former lands of Patrick Cunningham in Hawick. William (1836/7–73) said to be from Hawick, he may have been related to Rev. Andrew. He worked as a banker in Bombay. In 1863 in Hawick he married Mary Elisabeth, daughter of Dr. Walter Graham. He is recorded being present at the famous otter hunt organised at Hawick in 1863. He died of dysentery in Jerusalem on his way back from Bombay. A cross was erected in the cemetery at Jerusalem in his memory (also written ‘Rogie’).

Rodman (rod-mun) n. Patrick (15th C.) listed at the 1493 Justice-aire in Jedburgh when he had remission for crimes. He was listed as being from Rulewater and his crimes included theft of sheep and cattle from 4 separate farms. His surety was Thomas Rutherford, brother of the Laird of Huntdalee. He was separately listed in 1494/5 when he had remission for stealing sheep from 2 other farms, with his surety being Thomas Rutherford in the Grange of Abbotrule. This surname seems to be otherwise unknown in the area.
Rodono (ro-dó-nó) n. house on the western bank of St. Mary's Loch. The estate was an ancient barony dating to at least 1236, and was long held by the monks of Melrose. There was a nearby chapel (at Chapelhope, at the head of the Loch o the Lowes). In 1442 it was listed among lands whose fees were held by Melrose Abbey. In 1484 it was contained in a list of lands to which the monks appointed David Scott of Bruxholme and his son Robert as Bailies, with Sir Walter Scott appointed to the same office in 1519. In the Exchequer Rolls of 1538 there is a note about the Comptroller’s expenses in visiting here (along with other Royal properties, including Hawick and Ringwoodfield) and in 1540 the ‘fermes’ were paid to the Abbot of Melrose, amounting to £82 12s 8d. In 1557 Robert Scott of Bowhill paid rental to Melrose Abbey for lands here, namely ‘Langbank’, ‘Quhithoup’, ‘Litillhoup’ and ‘Mekillehoup’. The lands were valued at £25 in about 1564. In 1566 Queen Mary and her husband Darnley held a council here, when they mentioned the scarcity of deer seen on the royal hunting trip and emphasised the penalties for others shooting the animals. When it was bought by John Scott of Teviotbank in the mid-19th century he revived the old name. The mansion was built in 1866 for this John Scott (also called ‘of Rodono’), but he died before it was completed. It was then owned by Thomas and William Turnbull of Fenwick and sold in 1890. The Earl of Wemyss rented it out as a hunting lodge. For a while it was leased by Robert Pringle, of Pringle of Scotland, who used the name for his factory in Hawick, as well as for the unshrinkable process Pringles applied to underwear. It later became a hotel, known for wild society functions, with stories of a Model-T Ford being driven out onto a frozen St. Mary’s in 1934 to later sink, and with stories of a Model-T Ford being driven out onto a frozen St. Mary’s in 1934 to later sink, and also said to be where Mandy Rice-Davies of the Profumo affair is alleged to have hidden out in 1960s. It was sold by Lady Elizabeth Benson in 1994 and renovated in about 2000 (the name probably comes from the old Scots for the rowan tree; it was ‘Rodanoch’ in 1235/6, ‘rodono’ in 1442, ‘Rodonow’ in 1484, ‘Rowdounov’ in 1519, ‘Rodonoland’ in 1524, ‘Rodonoland’ in 1525 and 1553/4, ‘Rodonald’ in 1538, ‘Rowdonald’ in 1540, ‘Rowdono’ in 1557, ‘Rodonaldland’ in 1574 and ‘Rodddono’ in 1670).

Roger (ro-jur) n. Parson of Rule. He may be the earliest known priest of Hobkirk Parish. Sometimes in the period 1165–78 he witnessed a charter for Richard Comyn, relating to Holyrood Abbey and land in West Lothian. His name is given as ‘Rogero’ and he was ‘persona’ of Rule. In 1214 possibly the same Roger, Parson of Rule, witnessed a charter for William Comyn, who granted a stone of wax annually to the church of St. Cuthbert in Durham.

Roger (ro-jur) n. grief of Hassendean who witnessed a charter around the 1220s for the family ‘of Hassendean’. His name is given as ‘Rogero’. It is possible that his ancestors became Grieves.

Roger (ro-jur) n. Douglas (18th/19th C.) wright in Hawick. In 1781, 1785, 1787 and 1789 he witnessed baptisms for wright William and in 1793 he (along with Robert) witnessed a baptism for the same William, who was surely related (probably his cousin). He married Elizabeth Harkness and their daughter Elizabeth was baptised in 1806. James (18th C.) weaver in Hawick. In 1725 he witnessed a baptism for merchant Thomas Thomson. In 1724 he married Janet, daughter of merchant James Simpson. Their children included: Janet (b.1725); and Margaret (b.1727). The witnesses in 1725 were merchant William Oliver and carrier John Simpson. James (18th C.) wright in Hawick. In 1741 he witnessed a baptism for weaver David Haig and in 1745 another for weaver Andrew Jardine. In 1769 he was appointed to the commission to discuss the Common with representatives of the Duke of Buccleuch. In 1772 he witnessed a baptism for James Stoddart. He may also be the James who in 1774 witnessed a baptism for James Easton from Branxholme. He married Janet Dickson. Their son Andrew was born in 1745, with the witnesses being merchants Charles Tudhope and William Riddel. James (18th C.) was a weaver in Hawick. In 1743 he witnessed a baptism for carrier John Simpson. He married Jean Haig and their children included: Mary (b.1745); and Jean (b.1747). The witnesses in 1745 were shoemaker Thomas Scott and weaver Robert Douglas. John (17th C.) of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Craw and their son John was baptised in 1674. Robert (16th/17th C.) of Burnfoot Mill. He is mentioned in the 1612 complaint of the Baron of Hawick to the Privy Council, regarding taxation in Hawick and the imprisoning of the Baron’s officer, Alexander ‘Wischart’ in St. Mary’s steeple. The Magistrates were let off this latter charge, since Wischart was guilty of striking Roger, presumably at the market while trying to collect customs. Robert (17th/18th C.) gardener in Hawick. He may be the Robert who witnessed a baptism for weaver Robert Riddell in 1720. He married Helen Duncan and their children included Janet (b.1701), as well as probably John (b.1703), William (b.1704) and Janet (again, b.1706). The witnesses in 1701 were weaver John Swan and Robert Langlands. Robert (d.1808) wheelwright in Hawick, son of Andrew. His father could have been Andrew ‘Rodger’, manufacturer of agricultural implements from the early part of the 18th century or he could be the Andrew, married to Betty Grieve (whose son Robert was born in Hawick in 1775). He may be the Robert who married Elizabeth Wallace and had Ann (b.1770) or the Robert who married Margaret Davidson and had William (b.1773). He is probably the Robert, who, along with Douglas, witnessed a baptism for weaver William in 1793; he may have been brother of Douglas and cousin of William. His death is recorded in Hawick. Thomas (15th/16th C.) recorded among the many Borders men who had remission in 1526 for their earlier attack on the Earl of Arran. William (d.1482) court musician of James III. He was kinglyted and appointed to the Privy Council. The King gave him the estate of Traquair in 1469. In 1470/1 he was one of the witnesses to the decision to acquit Andrew Ker of Cessford of the charges of assisting the King’s enemies. In 1478 he disposed of Traquair for only 70 merks to James Stewart, Earl of Buchan, uncle to the King. However, a few years later, when the King was on an expedition against the English, he was one of the royal favourites who were captured by a group including the Earl of Buchan, and hanged at Lauder bridge. William (15th C.) leased the lands of Winterburgh in 1488, along with Robert Scott, with Sir David Scott as pledge. The lease continued in 1490 and 1492. Probably the same William was bequeathed 30 sheep in the will of Sir David Scott of Branxholme in 1491/2. William (15th/16th C.) recorded as ‘Wilzem Roger’ in 1500 when he was one of the witnesses for a letter of appraising for the lands of Whitlope. Probably the same man was witness in 1501 to a notorial instrument relating to the Kerrs of Ferniehirst for their lands of Feu-rule in the Barony of Cavers. William (17th C.) resident at Midshiels according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. William (18th C.) weaver in Hawick. He is probably the William who witnessed a baptism for carrier Walter Scott in 1747. He married Elizabeth Scott and their children included: Janet (b.1730); Isabel (b.1731); Isabel (again, b.1732); William (b.1739); Robert (b.1741); Andrew (b.1745); and Janet (again, b.1746). The witnesses in 1731 were James Purcell and Thomas Scott, in 1739 were merchant John Cavers and Bailie Robert Boyd, and in 1745 were merchants Francis and John Ruecastle. William (18th C.) resident of Hawick. In 1763 he married Helen Scott, who was also from Hawick. Their children included Margaret (b.1764), Elizabeth (b.1768) and William (b.1770). William (18th/19th C.) wright in Hawick. In 1792 he witnessed a baptism for John Laing. He married Marjory, daughter of Alexander Donald (or Donaldson) in 1776 and their children included: Agnes (b.1778); Margaret (b.1780); Mary (b.1781); Janet (b.1785); Ann (b.1787); Willemina (b.1789); and Marjory (b.1793). The witnesses in 1781, 1785, 1787 and 1789 were Bailie Walter Hardie and Douglas (who was surely related) and in 1793 were wrights Robert and Douglas Roger (perhaps his cousins). He is mentioned as a wright in Hawick in a Selkirk court case of 1809. He may have been son of James. William (18th/19th C.) describer of a version of how Hawick men accounted for themselves at Flodden, as recounted in Wilson’s ‘Annals of Hawick’ (1850). He may be the same William who married Marjory Donaldson (sister of Agnes, Isabella, Elizabeth and Jane), and had 7 children, including Janet, who was the 2nd wife of manufacturer Alexander Laing. He may also be the William who is shown as owner of property on Slitrig Crescent on Wood’s 1824 map (see also Rodger; formerly sometimes ‘Rocher’).
Rogers

Rogers (ro-jurz) n. Ann (b.c.1790) milliner at 26 High Street, along with Mina. They are recorded on the 1841 census. Rev. Douglas Malcolm (1916–95) born in Leeds, he was trained at Yorkshire United Independent College and became minister of Providence Chapel, Cleckheaton in 1948. Thereafter he served as minister in Halifax and Sunderland, before becoming minister at Hawick Congregational Kirk 1969–71. After Hawick he was minister at Girlington, Yorkshire. He married Edith Doreen Speck.

Rogie see Rodgie

rogues-money (rögz-mu-nee) n. a tax raised on counties for the expense of arresting and imprisonment of criminals. The local use and administration of these funds appears to have been a matter of some debate – ‘Paid Mr Weir, to carry his expenses to Jedburgh for the rogue-money relating to the brig’ [BR1740].

the Rogues’ Cairn (tu-rauz-kärn) n. springcart that used to be sent round to the neighbouring parishes for transporting prisoners to Jedburgh Jail. This started around the 1840s.

the Rogues’ Hole (tu-rauz-höl) n. occasional name used for the Town prison (e.g. in 1782), being under the former Town House (also called the Thiefs’ Hole; see Hawick Jail).

Roll-aboot (röl-u-boö) n. local nickname, probably from the 19th century – ‘Then Meg the Mantua sails along, Auld Nancy leads her cuddy aboot, And Gleska Jamie lits a sang Tae Shauchles, Chinnie and Roll-aboot’ [HI], the Roll o Honour (tu-rauz-Ô-o-nur) n. record of local men who fell in the 2 World Wars, held in the Museum. The original was executed by Graham Johnston, W.R. Lawson and William Wallace MacGregor. It consists of 8 pages of illuminated vellum in a stand of oak, containing the names of 693 who were killed in WWI. The names are arranged alphabetically by Regiment. James Haig executed a similar design for the WWII roll.

the Roll o the Clans (tu-rauz-Ô-tu-klawnz) n. list of prominent and landed men in the Borders and Highlands in the records of the Privy Council for 1590, with an abbreviated version in the records of the Scottish Parliament for 1587. Its full title is ‘The Roll of the Clannis that hes Capitanis, Cheiffis, Chiftenis, quhomeon they depond, oftmis againis the willis of their Landis-lordis, alswell on the Bordouris as Hielandis, and of sum special personis of branches of the saidis Clannis’. Like other records of the time, it shows that Border families were considered to be clans as much as their Highland cousins. It also forms an invaluable record of local lairds at the time, listing about 100 Lairdships in Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire, naming many men explicitly.

Romanno (rō-maw-nō) n. Matthew (15th C.) notary responsible for the sasine for the Counsellands, sold by Margaret Cousin to Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1447. The ‘precept’ was witnessed in Hawick, and the sasine itself signed at Branholme. He was described as a presbyter of Glasgow diocese, and so was probably a local church official. He wrote his name as ‘Matheus de Romannox’. He also wrote the sasine for Simon of Routledge selling the Birkwood and Burnflat to Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1448.

Romanno Bridge (rō-maw-nō-brij) n. village in Peebleshire, in the northern part of the Scottish Borders, south of West Linton. The ‘bridge’ is over the Lynne Water. The Romannos of that Ilk came from here. John Scott in Whitehaugh was the site of a fight between 2 gypsy families, the Faas and the Shaws (it is ‘Rommanos’ in 1502 and ‘Ralmanno’ in 1526).

the Romans (tu-ru-munz) n., pl. empire builders based in Italy, who conquered England, and made in-roads into Scotland. They occupied parts of Britain from the middle of the 1st century to the beginning of the 5th. Agricola’s conquest of the North started in 78 C.E., as part of which he built the forts at Raeburnfoot and Newsteads, driving a wedge between the Selgovae and Novantae tribes. Although there was no major Roman settlement in the immediate neighbourhood of Hawick, there are many signs of nearby Roman habitation, including at Ruberslaw, Craik Cross and Aikwood. There is a Roman road running from Raeburnfoot to the Borthwick valley via Craik Cross, although it is unclear where it continued on the near side of Craik. However, in 1948 the remains of a stone-built culvert (used to divert the stream under the road) was discovered on the left bank of the Borthwick after flooding, midway between Craik and Northope Haugh; Romish (rō-mish) adj. relating to the Church of Rome, usually used disparagingly by Protestants – ‘... at this time we are threatened with an invasion from Spain, the greatest enemies in ye Romish church and bloody Irish combined’ [PR1719].

rone (rön) n. a gutter on a roof for carrying away rainwater – ‘... Wi sparras cheepin gleg on the rones, the cocks crawin, And the blackies whusslin owre a’ the braes and gairdens!’ [DH] (also spelled ‘rhone’).

rood (rood) n., arch. an old unit of land area, equal to one quarter of a Scots acre – ‘... and ye factor could not get workmen to undertake such a fence under tenpence a rood’ [GT], ‘On Allen water, about ninety roods of new dyke were run away ...’ [BM1897].

roods (roodz) n., pl., arch. the grounds associated with a burgh – ‘John Ainslie, a Burgess of Hawick, but residing at Allers, beyond the burgh roods, petitions the council ...’ [JW1783].

room (room) n., arch. space, place, especially in the phrase ‘in room of’ – ‘... and also have turned out most part of ye Protestant magistrates and put in Papists in their room’ [PR1718].

the room (thu-room) n., arch. the parlour or sitting-room, the better room in a house (noted by E.C. Smith).

roon (roon) adv., prep. round – ‘... frae my mortal foes wha ar roon aboot me’ [HSR], ‘Thaye cam’ daylie roon’ aboot me like water; thaye cam’ roon’ an’ roon’ thegither’ [HSR], ‘This life is but a shiftin’ scene The world gaes circlin’ roon’ ‘[JT], ‘Where are pleasures bright and gay In a care forgettin’ roon’ ‘[TK], ‘We’ll follow oor Cornet, follow oor Cornet, follow oor Cornet roon’ ‘[DJ], ‘As roon it ran wi stertan een, A wasome squeal the craiter gien’ [DH], ‘A’ roon’ aboot stude the muckle black birds ...’ [DH], ‘... That huddle roon’ Winnington Rig’ [WL] (also spelled ‘roon’; cf. roond).

roond (roond) adj. round – ‘it’s a roond circle if ever A saw yin’, n. a round – ‘the next roond’s on yow’, adv. round, around – ‘A came roond ti your bit, bit ee wereni in’, ‘...An’ bids thy followers roond thy banner rally’ [JoHa], ‘...To be a laddie racing roond The auld Mid Raw’ [AY], ‘When Spring cam’ roond, it was my dread ...’ [IJ], ‘Aw’d like tae tell o’ the beauties aw’ve seen That’s aw roond dear auld Hawick’[AY], v. to round – ‘can ee roond that off ti the nearest shillin’?’, ‘He roonded on me shairply ‘Aye, but Bosells Fair was waur!’’ [WL], prep. round, around – ‘...The burn that roond it rins’ [JEDM] (sometimes written ‘‘roond’).

roondaboot

adj. roundabout, indirect – ‘she hed sic a roundaboot way o pittin things, A never kent what she was on about’.

roondaboot *(roon-du-boot’) n., pl. a circular earthwork – ‘There are a great many roundabouts in the parish, commonly called Picts Works’ [RAB].

Roondaboos *(roon-du-boots) n. Roundaboos, former name for a house in Chesters in Southdean Parish. It is listed on the census for 1841 and 1861 and on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map. It may be the place also known as Turnpikehead.

the Roond Close *(thu-roond-klos) n. probably the oldest of the High Street closes, at No. 17, named after the rounded archway for which it was once notable. It also once held one of the minor gates giving access to the town. Staples for the iron gate were visible until about 1840. The building to the east bears a triangular stone with the inscription ‘J.S.M.D. Fear Gode. 1600’, taken from the front of the house when it was rebuilt in 1871; this pended house probably partly defended the close. It was also known as the Wide Close in the early 1800s, and around this time contained a public house (called the Royal Oak or Blue Bell). In the mid-19th century it contained Brunton’s contractors and joiners. Many of the houses were demolished in the 1930s, followed by the lower cobbled area, including the I.O.G.T. hall and further buildings after the War, to make way for the Rodono Mill factory. Steps were built to retain the right of way, and Rodono itself was demolished in 1980, and the Health Centre built in its place.

Roond Croft *(roon-drook) n. former name for a piece of land near Hawick, referred to by James Wilson in 1850 and J.J. Vernon in 1900. The location is uncertain, but it is possibly related to an earlier form of the Roond Close.

roonders *(roon-durz) n. rounders, a children’s bat and ball game – ‘Hei taught oo rugby, cricket, roonders, Country dancin, softba’, gym And A dinni mind tellin ee A was gliffed stiff for him’ [IWL].

Roondhaugh *(roon-droog) n. former name for lands in Ashkirk Parish, owned by the Scotts of Woll in 1609 when it is ‘Roundhauch’ and part of the lands purchased by the Cochranes in 1795.

the Roond Room *(thu-roond-room) n. room within the Tower Hotel formerly used for functions, e.g. the reception on Picking Night in the late 19th century.
Ropelawshiel (röp-lu-sheel) n. cottage in Craik Forest, recorded from at least the early 18th century. It is located where the Ropelaw Sike joins the Runkle Burn, and within the boundaries of the former farm is the source of the Runkle Burn. It was used for several years as a cottage by Chay Blyth and is now a holiday home (the origin of the name may be from roplaw, a young fox; it is marked on Ainslie’s 1773 map).

Roper (rō-pur) n. William (19th C.) Hawick man who emigrated to Highlandville, Massachusetts. He returned for the Common Ridings of 1887 and 1888, and sang a Hawick song (to the tune of ‘Bonnie Dundee’) at the 1888 Dinner. He is probably the son of Joseph recorded aged 7 on the Mid Raw in 1841. He may be the William listed among Hawick men who met with Robert Ewen in Guelph on his Canadian tour of 1878; he is recorded singing ‘Teribus’ along with fellow Teri George Murray.

Rope Sike (rōp-sēk) n. stream that rises between Windburgh Hill and Brown’s Hill and flows roughly to the south to meet the Floss Burn near Langburnshiels.

roplaw (rop-lu) n., arch. a young fox (said to be only a Teviotdale word, noted by J. Jamieson; it is possibly the origin for ‘Ropelawshiel’).

ropple (ro-pul) v., arch. to run or grow up rapidly (of vegetation) – ‘Roppled up, grown up with rapidity, large, but not strong in appearance, Teviotd.’ [JoJ].

Rosalee (rō-za-lee) n. house built in the mid-19th century on the slopes above Langlands Road near Ladylaw. It was the home of the Rev. John Thomson and his family – ‘Sae ilka true Teri three cheers let us gie, For the Mr. and Mrs. o’ fair Rosalee’ [VW] (sometimes written ‘Rosalea’).

Rosalee Brae (rō-za-lee-brā) n. road above Langlands Road leading to Rosalee, Ladylaw and some other large houses. The ‘Dog House’ used to stand on the left side of this road and ‘Saut Haa’ on the right.

Roscins (ros-kīnz) n. Thomas (13th C.) granted the lands of ‘Bethrull’ in Roxburghshire in 1357 by William, Earl of Douglas. This seems likely to be the same as Bedrule. However, there is no other record of a surname like ‘Roscins’ connected with this area.

Rose (rōz) n. Arthur (1634–1704) son of the minister of Birse, his name is also written ‘Ross’. He graduated from Marischal College in 1652 and became minister of Kinearney in 1656. He then became minister of Old Deer, then Rector of Marischal College, minister of St. Mungo’s, Bishop of Argyll and Bishop of Galloway. In 1679 he succeed Andrew Burnet as Archbishop of Glasgow. And in 1684, after Burnet’s death, he succeeded him as Archbishop of St. Andrews and Primate of Scotland. After Parliament abolished episcopalianism in 1689 he continued to preach secretly as an Episcopalian and died in the Canongate. He is buried at Restalrig.

Rosebank (rōz-bawngk) n. given in 1865 to the houses built at Thorterdykes in the years 1861–64 on part of the old Tryst ground, and also on the land known as Haggishaa. The houses were built by Thomas Reid, mason and farmer at St. Leonard’s. The name may derive from thickets of wild roses previously growing there.

Rosebank (rōz-bawngk) n. house in Denholm. It was built for William Robson, who was a stocking manufacturer in the village. It was later home of John W. Turnbull, clothier.

Rosebank Road (rōz-bawngk-rōd) n. name given in the early 20th century to the road between the Loan and Burnflat Brae, after the houses called Rosebank, which already stood there. The north side was built up in 1927 and the south in 1929. The street is where the riders divide for the Chases, married men to the front and single men to the rear.

Rosecroft (rōz-kroft) n. house on the Dean Road just outside Denholm, which was formerly called Rosebank. It once housed a stocking-shop.

Rosedale (rōz-dāl) n. Turgis (d.bef. 1131) referred to in a charter of about 1125. He was Lord of Liddel, holding lands in what would later be called Liddesdale, and was probably a descendant of the earlier Baron, Turgis Brundis. He founded the house of Augustinian canons of Liddel (an offshoot of Jedburgh Abbey) in a place that came to be known as Canonbie. He gave the religious house of Liddel (as well as the church of ‘Kirchanders’, i.e. Kirkandrews) to Jedburgh Abbey when it was founded in about 1138. He was succeeded by his son William. William (12th C.) son of Turgis, who was Lord of Liddel, he was a baron from Yorkshire. He is recorded as being ‘de Rosedale’ in a grant of about 1160 in which he gave his lands of Kershope to the hospital of St. Peter in York. The grant is confirmed in a copy made in the early 14th century, which describes the boundaries of the lands, giving some interesting historical details. The grant is confirmed by Malcolm IV, and there are referred to as ‘Greshoppa’ (but surely the same place). In the 1150s he founded the Cistercian priory usually called Rosedale Middleton. Along with his wife he also granted lands of ‘Greshoppa’ in Yorkshire to the same religious house, as confirmed by King Malcolm. He may be the ‘Guido’ who, with the consent of his son Radulf, gave 42 acres (where the Esk and Liddel join) to Jedburgh Abbey, along with free fishing from the ditch of Liddel to the church of Liddel. His wife was Godehild and he had a son, Turgis, who is the last known member of the family.

Rosenberg (rö-zen-berg) n. one time pseudonym of Adam Grant. Sometimes also ‘M. Rosenberg’, it was used by him in for example, 1898 and 1900, for attribution as composer for ‘Hawick’ and ‘I Like Auld Hawick the Best’. Presumably Grant believed that a Germanic name added musical gravitas. The name continued to appear up until about WWI, even although Grant was using his own name on other publications from the early years of the 20th century. It is probably a coincidence that Mrs. Roseburgh, who lived near Galashiels, signed her poetry ‘M. Roseburgh’ in the mid-to-late 19th century (or else the name is a coincidence).

Rosenberger (rö-zen-bur-gur) n. Frederica ‘Mrs. R.’ (20th C.) from Budapest in Hungary, she left because of Nazi persecution. She worked with Walter Marcus in Vienna and followed him to London in 1939. She became manageress of the Marcus factory in Hawick, which was set up in 1940. Her husband failed to secure a work permit for Britain and her 2 children, Vera and Bob were sent over using church groups and the Red Cross. She was known as a strict disciplinarian, but a brilliant dressmaker. The family lived in the West End. She moved to London after retiring, but regularly returned to visit Hawick. Robert ‘Bob’ son of Mrs. Frederica, the Hungarian manageress at Marcus’s dress-making factory. He was taught at the High School and Edinburgh University, becoming a Professor of Bacteriology.

Rosevale Street (röz-väl-stree’) n. short street between Mansfield Road and Mansfield Square, named in 1888, either for thickets of wild roses that grew there or just invented. The housing here was built by Blenkhorn, Richardson & Co. to provide convenient housing for workers at Eastfield Mills.

Rosfritha (röz-frî-tha) n. one of two women worshippers (the other being Sagita) at the Chapel of St. Cuthbert (identified with a site near Cogsmill) mentioned by a contemporary historian as coming from ‘Hawich’. This was written around the 1170s, and referred to an earlier time, possibly much earlier. Hence the pair are (assuming they existed) the first named residents of Hawick. The story was that they went to the old chapel on the feast day of the saint, to join others in celebration, after the previous fast day. However, in the evening their candle went out, and after some remonstration, they prayed to Cuthbert, at which a new lighted candle appeared. Sir James Murray called his 4th daughter ‘Rosfrith’, inspired by this story (also transcribed as ‘Rosfrith’).

rosity (ro-zi’-ee) adj., arch. of the nature of resin or ‘rosit’ – ‘...the space within and around these was built up with whins and rositty faggots’ [JAHM].

Ross (ros) n. Rev. Alexander L. (19th/20th C.) assistant minister of St. Cuthbert’s 1904–09. He was on the committee that formed Hawick’s first Scout troop in 1909. His time as Curate in Hawick ended when he became Rector at Rosyth.

Andrew (19th/20th C.) of Edinburgh, the ‘Ross Herald’, i.e. one of the officers of the Court of the Lord Lyon. Around 1903 he was charged by the Town Council with researching into the historical basis for the Hawick Flag. His report endorsed the views of Craig & Laing and others, resulting in the square blue and red flag being replaced with a more accurate duplicate of the 1707 flag – ‘a pennon, azure, a saltire or’.

Rev. Donald G. (d.c.1940) assistant minister at St. George’s Kirk from 1911, taking over as senior minister on the death of Rev. Johnman in 1923, and remaining until 1935. He came to Hawick from Pollok Street Church in Glasgow. Although he was formerly the assistant, due to the declining health of the senior minister, he in fact took on most of the ministerial duties. He ‘kirked’ the Cornet in 1912 and 1914, and oversaw the construction of the new church 1913–16. He was the first minister of the church to reside at the new Manse at Broomieknowe. He was apparently a great elocutionist and gave very powerful sermons. He celebrated his silver wedding anniversary in 1925, but his wife (Williamina Martin) died in 1934. Due to declining health he resigned in late 1935 and retired to Edinburgh. There is a memorial window to him in the church and another to his wife. Hugh (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Jean Rae in 1793, but her death is recorded in 1795. Sgt. James (18th/19th C.) professional soldier with the Royal North British Fusiliers. He was brought to Hawick in 1798 to work with the new Hawick Military Association of volunteers. James (19th C.) precentor at Hawick Free Kirk, coming from Free St. David’s in Edinburgh in 1856 and serving until 1879. Rev. John Wallace (1886–1974) born at Turakina, New Zealand, son of Rev. John, he studied at the University of Wellington and was ordained in 1913. He became Chaplain-Captain in the New Zealand Expeditionary Force. Apparently unpopular with the men on a troop ship sailing to Suez, the captain threatened to throw him overboard. He served as Chaplain with the 5th Royal Scots at Gallipoli. He returned to New Zealand in 1919, but later attended classes at New College, Edinburgh and was inducted minister at Burnmouth, Berwickshire in 1922. He became minister of Denholm Kirk from the time of the reunion (1929, when it became part of the Church of Scotland) until 1953. In 1957 he moved to London to live with his daughter. He married Ruth Marjorie McGlashan in 1922. He died at Lewisham, London. Margaret ‘callit Nuris’ (17th C.) local woman who was attacked by Bailie James Burn in April 1641, having her forehead cut in the process. Burn accused her of being a witch, for being responsible for the death of a child and for bewitching his wife. He was fined and put in the stocks, which must have been unheard of for a sitting Bailie. Her nickname was presumably ‘Nurse’.

the Rotary Club (thu-ró‘-i-ree-klüb) n. international social and charitable organisation of businessmen and professionals, began in the U.S.A. in 1905, typically restricted to men in their 40s or above. Hawick is in District 1020, and the local club regularly meets in the Buccleuch Hotel founded??.

Rotten Moss (ró‘-in-mos) n. area to the west of Whitfield and east of Pisgah Hill.

Rottenraw (ró‘-in-raw) n. former name for land near Hundalee, once a home of the Rutherfords. In 1638 it was given by John Rutherford of Rottenrow to Robert Scott (‘in Burnfutt near Tievot’) who was marrying his daughter Anne (spelled ‘Rattinraw’ etc.).

Rotten Sike (ró‘-in-sik) n. stream in southern Liddesdale, rising near the boundary with Dumfriesshire and running north-east past the farm of Whisgills to join Tinnis Burn.

Rotten Sike (ró‘-in-sik) n. small stream in Liddesdale, rising on Steil Knowe and joining the Tweeden Burn north of Tweedhead farm.

rouch (rowch) adj., arch. rough – ‘...ane peck of insufficient humilcorn meill, out of which there was dight ane choppin dish full of rouch seids’[BR1675], ‘Ay whow, bairns, it’s a rouch nicht. How the wund’s souchin’ i’ the chumla heid!’ [JAHM], ‘...And it’s dreich, gey dreich on this rouch hill heid Whaur the caul air gars ane nither’ [WL] (also spelled ‘dreich’).

Rouchchesters (row-ch-ches-turz) n. former name for lands in Jedforest. The precise location is unknown, but it was listed between Strange and Southdean Mill in a rental roll of 1541. The tenants was Patrick Oliver and the lands were valued at 12s 6d (it is ‘Rouchchesteris’ in 1541).

Rouchhirst (row-ch-hurst) n. former farmstead on the Jed Water, just to the south of Auld Jedburgh. In 1541 the tenant was John Laidlaw and the lands were valued at 12s 6d. The tenants there in 1669 were Thomas, Martin, Lyle and Thomas (junior) Laidlaw and in 1694 were Thomas and John Laidlaw. This may be the ‘Rouchchestre’ which was burned by the English in 1544 (it is ‘Ruchhirst’ in 1669; it appears on Blau’s 1654 map as ‘Ruchchirst’).

Rouchope (row-ch-chup) n. former place name in Hobkirk Parish, near to Hyndlee. These were the lands of ‘Rughope’ granted to William of Wauchope in the early 14th century. As part of Jedforest, the farm passed from Archibald Douglas, Earl of Angus, to the Crown in about 1537, with Walter Scott of Buccleuch being accused of occupying the lands, which had been in waste for the previous 20 years. In 1541 the tenant was David Turnbull, paying 25s yearly. The lands were owned by the Turnbuls in the mid-16th century. The lands were purchased by William and Robert Chisholme (of Stiches) in 1684. The ridge to the west of the Note o’ the Gate road just south of Wigg is still ‘Rough-hope Rig’ on the Ordnance Survey map (it is ‘Rouchope’ in 1538 and 1541, and ‘Ruchhoip’ in 1539; Pont’s sketch c.1590 and Blau’s 1654 map appears to label either Wigg Burn or Hyndlee Burn as ‘Rucchoop B.’ and ‘Ruchhoope B.’ and somewhere even higher up is labelled ‘Ruchswyre’).

Rouch-heuch see Roughheugh roudes (row-dis) n., arch. a strong masculine woman, an old, ill-natured woman – ‘O never vex ane roudes auld, Although she rax your faiithe, For, late and air, revenge she’ll seek. When least you dare the skaiith’ [JTe], adj. applied to an old woman with masculine characteristics – ‘A gey roudes boody’ [GW].

Roughcleuch Rig (ruf-klewch-rig) n. ridge to the east of Linhope farm, lying between Lightning Hill and Wether Law.

Rough Gill (ruf-, rowch-gil) n. small stream in western Liddesdale, rising on Cooms Fell and running roughly south-eastwards to eventually join the Black Burn (it is marked on the 1718 Buccleuch survey).

Rough Grain (ruf-, rowch-grän) n. small stream in upper Liddesdale, rising on Mid Hill and flowing into Clifffhope Burn. It is marked on the 1718 Buccleuch survey and on the large scale 1899 Ordnance Survey map.

Rough Grain (ruf-, rowch-grän) n. small stream in the headwaters of the Hermitage Water. It rises on Hartsgarth Fell and runs roughly to the north-west to join Chapel Grain and then the Twislehope Burn (it is marked on the 1718 Buccleuch survey).

rough-heid (ruf-, rowch-heed) n., arch. a turf or divot, especially a piece of peat cut from the surface and with the grass still attached – ‘These are to give notice to all Burgesses within the Burgh of Hawick that they are discharged from casting dry land soads of any part of the Commonwealth or roughheads (except roughheads in the Mosses), and from casting turfs or diviots on the Common . . . ’ [BR1816]. ‘An’ divots an’ roughheads gotten where the modern’s now ca’ Teviot Square’ [WNK].

Roughheugh (ruf-hew, rowch-hewch) n. former name referring to the area in Wilton between Howlands and Easter Howlands, and from Ladylaw to Lockieshedge, lying ‘contiguous to the Kirk road from Langlands to Wilton’, and bounded on the south by Wilton dam. So it extended roughly from Wilton Path to Old Wilton Churchyard, on both sides of Princes Street. The name was also used for the corn mill there, and the later hosiery mill. The name dates at least to the mid-17th century and is preserved in a house on Greensidehall Road. In 1650 there are 14 ‘communicants’ recorded on a map of local parishes, when it is ‘rouch-heuch’; they are Robert Cavers, Bessie Laing, Isobel Hardie, Walter Shortreed, Janet ‘Symonton’, John Redford, Thomas Clerk, Mary Armstrong, John Clerk, Isobel ‘Howatson’, Robert Riddell, Margaret Shortreed, Janet Elloie and Janet Redford. John Miller was recorded there in 1724 and George Wallace in 1737. The 1767 description of the boundaries of the Common talks about the Common Haugh lying ‘between Dangerfield and the rough heand as described by hillocks’. The lands were part of the estate of Langlands of that Ilk, until sold off in parts around 1780: the Waulk Mill to John and William Thomline; the Corn Mill to Robert Scott; and other parts to James Knox, Hector Blaikie, Robert Oliver, James Hart, Adam and George Easton, Walter Scott and William Robertson. John Clerk was living there in 1780. In 1788 (and repeated in the Land Tax Rolls of 1811) the lands are listed as consisting of the Waulk Mill and Corn Mill and 7 other parts, owned by John Thomline (plus William by 1811), Robert Scott, James Knox, Hector Blaikie, Robert Oliver, James Hart, Adam and George Easton, Walter Scott and William Robertson; together they were valued at around £140. The Laird of Langlands held some enclosures in the area, which were sold off to Rev. John Thomson in the mid-19th century. By the early 20th century the name was no longer in use (the origin is presumably from the roughness of the land around the steep bank).

Roughheugh Haugh (ruf-hewch-hawc, rowch-hewch-hawch) n. former name for part of the Under Haugh – ‘There’s teuch sauchs growin’ i’ the Reuch Heuch Hauch’ [JAHM] (this also inspired the Hugh MacDiarmid poem ‘The Sauchs in the Reuch Heuch Hauch’).

Roughheugh Mill (ruf-hewch-mil, rowch-hewch-mil) n. former corn mill, near the south end of Commercial Road. It was formerly a possession of the Baron of Wilton, specifically Langlands of that Ilk. It was recorded in an agreement involving Langlands in 1581. It is shown... in a crude sketch of 1810, with the miller’s cottage alongside (and a water wheel, with the adjacent waulk mill also having a water wheel). It is labelled ‘Rough Heugh Mill’ on Wood’s 1824 map. The building that held the water wheel was once on the Burgh boundary with Wilton; in the early 1700s the Flag used to be unfurled and given 3 cheers there after the visit to the Coble Pool on Common Riding Friday. William Cavers was miller there in 1694, with Simon Wright the under-miller, and Thomas Rutherford also listed there. Alexander Scott (probably descended from the Scotts of Bunchester) was tenant in the mid-18th century and then his son Robert Scott was tenants after him. Robert is recorded there on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. In 1811 it was valued at £26 9s. It was still an active mill in the 1820s, when Pigot’s directory lists the millers as Walter Chisholm and David Fiddes. Thomas Goodfellow and David Fiddes were millers there in 1837 and 1841, with John Fiddes there in 1851. Soon after it (or a building on an adjacent site) became a waulk mill, carried on by John Wilson after William Wilson & Sons was dissolved in 1851. Langlands Mill was constructed on the site in about 1860. John Wilson was listed as owner of the land there in about 1874 (also spelled ‘Rouch-heuch’, etc.; it is ‘Reuchouchtmiln’ in 1581, ‘Roughheugh-miln’ in 1797 and incorrectly written ‘Roughhead mill’ in 1837).

Roughheugh Path (ruf-hew-peth) n. Roughheugh Path, an old name for Wilton Path or the Peth. It is so marked on Wood’s 1824 map.

Roughhope (ruf-hop, rowch-up) n. former farm in the upper Borthwick valley, lying on the Roughhope Burn, to the south of Eldrig. These are the lands of ‘Reuhop or Philop’ sold by John Turnbull to Martin Elliot in 1579. James Oliver was there in 1785 and James Lunn and family in 1796 (it is ‘Roughshope’ in 1795).

Roughhope Burn (ruf-hop-burn) n. stream that rises on Philhope Fell, running roughly north-west to join the Eldrig Burn, and hence the Borthwick Water. There are some old field boundaries about half-way up the stream. The stream fed the reservoir, later known as Philhope Loch, which was used to boost the level of the Borthwick Water and the Teviot.

Roughhope Rig (rowch-up-rig) n. ridge just to the west of the B6357, shortly before coming to the Note o’ the Gate pass. There is a picnic spot near there. On the ridge is a linear earthwork, about 400 m long, running from the Wigg burn north-east to the main road.

Rough Joke (rowch-jök) n. nickname for John Oliver in the late 1700s.

Rough Knowe (rowch-, ruf-now) n. hill between the Ettrick and Yarrow valleys, to the east of Ladhope. It reaches a height of 481 m and contains a block that acts as a triangulation point.

Roughlaw Sike (rowch-law-sik) n. small stream in Hobkirk Parish. It is mentioned in a charter of 1606, defining the west side of the lands of Hobbsburn and Weens. It is unclear where this is exactly, but perhaps the small tributary of the Hallrule Burn that runs past Heathfield cottage (it is ‘Rowchelaweslyke’ in 1606).

Roughlee (ruf-lee, rowch-lee) n. farm in the upper Jed valley, between Falside and Edgerston. It was formerly split into Easter and Wester Roughlee. Simon Young from there had remission for plundering neighbouring farms in 1493 and John Young for similar crimes in 1494/5. The lands of ‘Wester Roughlie’ were valued at 20 shillings in 1538, with ‘Mydrouchleis’ at 30 shillings and ‘Rowchlenwke’ at 40 shillings. The 20 shilling land of ‘Rouchlie vocatarum Westir Rouchlie’ is recorded in 1539, as well as the 30 shilling land of Midroughlee and the 40 shilling land of Roughleeneuk. William Douglas was allowed the ‘fermes’ from there for 1538 and in 1539 claimed £10 pertaining to his inheritance. ‘Lyonell Ollyver’ is recorded there in 1544. Michael and John Young were there in 1571/2. David Laidlaw was there in 1588. Robert Douglas of Brieryard was forfeited in the lands in 1588 and was served heir to his father John in 1606. The cottage there was once part of Falside farm. This is probably the ‘Ruchlie’ recorded in 1609 when the tenants were Robert and John Storie and Adam Bell. Robert Laidlaw and Andrew Oliver were tenants there in 1694. The ancient settlement on the eastern slope of the hill to the east of the current farmstead may be the former Easter Roughlee; it consists of a roughly oval enclosure, with 2 possible hut sites inside, but has been largely destroyed by forestry plantation. A little to the west is Roughlee Strip, where there are 2 enclosures visible in aerial photographs. To the north there was a plantation bank, now covered with forest. Further south, on a shelf overlooking the Jed Water, are the remains of another farmstead – ‘And her eye was fixt on the Klesly brae ’Till the red sun glinted fair; – On the Roughlee height, where now in sight, A knight did onward bear’ [JTe], (also written ‘Roughliea’, it is ‘rrouchlie’ in 1493, ‘rouchlee’ in 1494/5, ‘Rouchleis’ in 1538, ‘Rowghleis’ in 1544, ‘Rowchleis’ in 1571/2 and ‘Roughlie’ in Roughlee Strip n. consists of a roughly oval enclosure, with 2 possible hut sites inside, but has been largely destroyed by forestry plantation. A little to the west is Roughlee Strip, where there are 2 enclosures visible in aerial photographs. To the north there was a plantation bank, now covered with forest. Further south, on a shelf overlooking the Jed Water, are the remains of another farmstead – ‘And her eye was fixt on the Klesly brae ’Till the red sun glinted fair; – On the Roughlee height, where now in sight, A knight did onward bear’ [JTe], (also written ‘Roughliea’, it is ‘rrouchlie’ in 1493, ‘rouchlee’ in 1494/5, ‘Rouchleis’ in 1538, ‘Rowghleis’ in 1544, ‘Rowchleis’ in 1571/2 and ‘Roughlie’ in

Roughleeneuk

Roughleenuk Hill (rovch-lee-newk) n. former farm in the upper Jed valley, to the east of Roughlee. It was valued at 40 shillings in the Exchequer Rolls of 1538 and 1539. It was burned by an English raiding party in 1544. It was among lands inherited by Robert Douglas of Brieryyards from his father John in 1606. Ninian, John and Lyle Young were tenants of ‘Rouchleenuk’ in 1669 and Andrew Young was tenant in 1694. Andrew Ker of ‘Roughlienuk’ was recorded as deceased in 1731. George Davidson was farmer there in at least 1790–91. James Davidson (‘Dandie Dinnont’) lived there in the late 1700s and William Scott was farmer there in at least 1794–97. The farmstead was still marked on maps in 1863, and is still visible in aerial photographs, with a plantation bank 150 m to the south (it is ‘Rowchlienuk’ in 1538, ‘Rouchleenuke’ in 1539, ‘Rowle Newk’ in 1544, ‘Rowchleenuk’ in 1606, ‘Roughlinock’ and ‘ruchlinuck’ in 1694 and ‘Roughlawnoock’ in 1797; probably the place marked ‘Nuik’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map, it is ‘Roughleenuk’ on Stobie’s 1770 map; ‘neuk’ could just refer to a remote place).

Roughleenuk (rovch-lee-newk) n. former farm, the cist found inside being acquired by Sir Walter Scott – ‘When three long years were come and gone, Two shepherds sat on Roughly hill; And ay they sigh’d, and made their moan, O’er present times that look’d so ill’ [ES] (the name probably comes from the Old English ‘ruh leah’, meaning ‘uncultivated clearing’; it appears as ‘Rougie’ in 1541, ‘Rouchlie’ in 1622, ‘Ruchlie’ in 1632, ‘Roughlaw’ in 1694, ‘Rouchlie’ in 1778 and ‘Rouglee’ in 1797; it is ‘Ruchcly’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map, ‘Roughlee’ on the 1718 Buccleuch survey and ‘Roughly’ on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Roughley Burn (ruf-lee-burn) n. major stream in upper Liddesdale, rising in the hills to the east of Whitrope and running south, fed by many smaller ‘sikes’ and ‘gills’ to join the Hermitage Water at Shaws.

rough runch (rovch-runch) n., arch. wild radish, Raphanus raphanistrum.

Roughside Hill (ruf-sid-hil) n. hill just to the south-west of Synton Mossend. It reaches to more than 270 m.

Rough Slack (rovch-slawk) n. small stream in Liddesdale, rising on Birny Fell and running south to join Ratton Burn.

the Rough Woon (thu-ruf-woo-in) n. soubriquet for the rampage of English armies in 1544 and 1545 throughout the Scottish Border country. This was an attempt to force the Scots to allow the wedding of King Henry VIII’s young son Edward to the infant Mary Queen of Scots. Among other places, the abbeys of Dryburgh, Jedburgh and Melrose were left in ruins, and in Hawick Drumlanrig’s Tower was about all that survived the conflagration. The attacks were led by the Earl of Hertford, Sir Ralph Evers and others. In the Autumn of 1544 Edinburgh was burnt and looted, along with 192 towers and villages in the Borders, with around 400 Borderers being killed. The devastation was even worse in 1545, when Teviotdale was laid waste, including Cavers, Minto, Denholm, Hassendean and Brieryyards among other villages.

rouk (rovk) n., arch., poet. mist, fog, smog, drizzle, vapours – ‘He gars the rouks ascen’ frae the en’s o the yirth … ’ [HSR], ‘Fire an’ hail; snaw an’ rouk; stormie wund fu’ fillin’ his wurd’ [HSR], ‘… where yin kanna sei bye yin’s neb for skomfeeshin rowks an drowes’ [ECS], ‘Whan the smuiky rowk fyles a’thing’ [GW], ‘… to re-pay us for a’ the derk and weet, the glaur and rouk, o wunter’ [DH], … Herd them cannily, stot

rouip (rowp, roop) n., arch. an auction – ‘his goods an effects wull be selt be public roup’, ‘. . . and after ye roup, the money then gotten should be given in’ [PR1722], ‘Received roup of the seats in the kirk for 1755 . . . 0 10 6’ [BR1755], ‘. . . While high-bred dame – bereft o’ hope – Is doomed to stand a public roup – The highest bidder gets her’ [JR], ‘A sale o’ furniter, a roup O’ spuds at Black’s Hotel. I’ll tell ye a’ aboot it if Somebody brings my bell’ [WP], v. to sell by auction. Up until the early 19th century ‘Roups’ in Hawick were announced after Sunday services at the Wester kirkstyle by the town bellman, standing on the ‘loupin-on stane’. By the mid-19th century this practice had been replaced by a printed notice attached to the church door – ‘. . . that anie person who hath received charitie out of ye Box when they die, their household plenishing should be rouped . . . ’ [PR1722], v., arch. to cry hoarsely (from Old Norse; also spelled ‘rowp’).

roupit (row-pee, -pi) adj., pp., arch. hoarse – ‘A rowpit cough’ [GW] (also written ‘rowpit’; cf. crowpit).

Routin Burn (row’-in-burn) n. Routing Burn, stream that rises on Roan Fell on the border between Roxburghshire and Dumfriesshire, and flows into Hartsghart Burn. Along the stream lie 2 shepherd’s bothies, 2 sheep-folds, 6 shieling huts, a pen and a ‘knocking stone’.

Routin Burn (row’-in-burn) n. Routing Burn, small stream in the headwaters of the Twislehope Burn. It rises near Pike Fell on the border with Dumfriesshire, only a couple of miles west of the other stream of the same name.

Routledge (row’-, rowt-, roo’-lij) n. Adam (16th C.) recorded in the 1580s as ‘Jamie’s Adam Routledge’. He was one of a group of Englishmen complained of by Thomas Armstrong of Tinnisburn for stealing livestock from him. He could be the ‘Addame Routledge of the Neteclughe’ listed among Routledges of the English Border in 1583. Andrew (17th C.) witnessed a baptism in Ashkirk in 1650, for Alexander Turnbull and Isabel Scott. Archibald (15th/16th C.) recorded among the many Borders men who had remission in 1526 for their earlier attack on the Earl of Arran. His name appears as ‘Routlage’ right after John, who was presumably related. Cuthbert (15th C.) recorded along with John in 1473 as a deputy of the Constable of Bewcastle. How he was related to the Hawick members of the family is not known, but these appear to be the first recorded members of the family near Bewcastle (possibly the eponymous home). Around 1478 they were let the lands and castle of Bewcastle by Richard, Duke of Gloucester, with instructions that they maintain the Border there. During a land dispute of 1538 an old witness in Bewcastle stated that ‘. . . 60 years bipast when Liddisdale men came into England and were sworn to King Richard at Carlisle’ that ‘let all the lands of Bewcastle to Cuthib and John Routlege, Robt Elwald, and Gerard Nyxon, and before that’ . . . ‘as well the said castle as all the lands belonging to the same of long time lay waste’. David (15th/16th C.) from Liddesdale. He was witness to Adam Hepburn being served as heir to his father Patrick, Earl of Bothwell in 1508. He is recorded as ‘David Routlech, sergeando’, suggesting he was a local official of the area. Probably the same David was also witness to William Douglas of Drumlanrig selling Broadlee in 1512/3. He may be the same man as the Bailie for Douglas of Cavers. David (15th/16th C.) bailiff and later factor for James Douglas of Cavers. Possibly the same David ‘Rucclarch’ or ‘Rutlethe’ held 8 particates of land in Hawick according to the 1537 Charter; these were on the south side of the public street, and represent one of the largest amounts of any single owner. He may be the David ‘Routleshe’ who in 1512 he was directed to be one of James Douglas of Cavers Bailies to give sasine of Denholm to William Cranston. He may be the same David who was listed on a pardon by James V in 1526, along with a great many Scotts, Kerrs, Pringles, Turnbulls and Elliot, as well as John, Archibald and Simon ‘Routlage’. Probably the same David was listed among tenants and other associates of Sir James Douglas of Cavers in a court case of 1541. Probably the same David was witness to a sasine for Douglas of Cavers in 1550 (for the lands of Colifort). Isobel (16th C.) widow on the English side, recorded in 1581. Her house was apparently raided by 30 Elliots, who stole 4 oxen, 6 cows, her only horse and all her possessions. James (15th/16th C.) son of Simon. He failed to appear when called by William Douglas, Sheriff of Roxburghshire, at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1493; John, Simon (presumably his father) and Simon son of Simon (hence his brother), were also called and failed to appear. Probably the same James was also called in the Justice-aire held in 1494/5. James (16th C.) holder of half of the lands of Crook. In an instrument of resignation of 1529/30 (not a century earlier as apparently written), William ‘Routlech’, son of the deceased John resigned all rights to these lands, the ‘kyndness’ of which was held of this James. He was surely related to John and William, as well as to other nearly contemporary local Routledges. He may be the ‘Jacobi Routlich’ who is recorded in the Exchequer Rolls of Scotland for 1501, along with Matthew, John and Simon, as well as many Rutherfords, who had their fines compounded. He could be the James (‘on trows’) who, along with John (in the same place), served as surety for Simon in the Trows in 1502, and was fined for his non-appearance. James of Todhills (16th C.) from Cumbria. In 1540 the Laird of Ferniehirst and his tenants complained about a raid he led into Rulewater, where ‘Thome Oliver’ and ‘Will Kowman’ were slain at Abbotrule. John (15th C.) recorded in 1471, along with David Armstrong and Archibald Armstrong, when they gave pledges for Walter to appear at court in Selkirk. He was probably related to Walter in some way. John (15th C.) recorded in 1473, along with Cuthbert as deputies to the Constable of Bewcastle. John (15th C.) recorded at the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh in 1493. He was called by the Sheriff, William of Douglas, but failed to appear. At the same time Simon, James son of Simon and Simon son of Simon were also called. He could be the John ‘in trows’ who, along with James (in the same place), served as surety for Simon in the Trows in 1502, and was fined for his non-appearance; he seems to be distinct from John, son of Simon in the Trows, who is recorded separately in 1502 (and may have been his nephew or similar). John (15th C.) recorded among many men from Liddesdale who did not appear at the Justice-aire in 1494/5. The Lord of Liddesdale and Captain of Hermitage were fined as a result. John ‘Black John’ (15th/16th C.) Englishman who along with John Dalgleish and others was brought with his accomplices to burn Branxholme some time prior to 1510. In that year Dalgleish was convicted of this and other crimes and sentenced to hanging if he could not find sureties. He is recorded as ‘Black John Routlesche’ (which in Pitcairn’s ‘Criminal Trials’ is suggested to be ‘Roughcliffe, or Rowecliff’, but seems clearly to be a transcription error for ‘Routlesche’) and was a ‘traitor of Levin’. He was probably related to the Simon and Matthew who burned the Scott’s seat at Buccleuch about 20 years earlier. John (d.bef. 1530) ‘kyndlie’ tenant of half of the land of Crook in Cavers Parish. He may have been son of Simon in the Trows. He was succeeded in this tenancy by his son William, who resigned his rights to his superior (Douglas of Cavers) in 1529/30. They had the ‘kyndness from James, who must surely have been a relative; his surname is recorded as ‘Routlech’. Probably the same John ‘rouclisch’ failed to appear when called by William Douglas, Sheriff of Roxburghshire, at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1493; Simon, James son of Simon and Simon son of Simon, were also called and failed to appear, and were surely related. Probably the same John is recorded as son of Simon (who was ‘in le trows’) in 1494/5 when he failed to appear again, with Douglas of Cavers being fined; his father Simon, as well as James and Simon (perhaps his brothers) were also called at the same Justice-aire. He may be the ‘Johannis Rutlich’ who is recorded in the Exchequer Rolls of Scotland in 1501, along with Matthew, John and Simon, as well as many Rutherfords, who had their fines compounded. In 1502 he is recorded as son of Simon in the Trows ‘nunc in le cruk’ (i.e. now in the Crook) when he was surety for himself at the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh, and was fined for not appearing. John (15th/16th C.) listed among the Borderers who had remission in 1526 for supporting the Homes in an attack on the Earl of Arran. Archibald is listed after him and so probably related. He may be the same as one of the other contemporary Johns. John (16th C.) son of Mungo, an Englishman. He was entered as a prisoner to Sir John Kerr of Ferniehirst in 1562, by Archibald Elliot of Falknash and his son. John (16th C.) listed in 1585 as ‘Ijonn Rowclege’ among a list of men under their superior Lord Maxwell who had respite for all their crimes. He is listed along with Armstrongs from around Eskdale. John (16th/17th C.) servant to John Elliot of Copshaw, recorded in 1605. John (b.c.1780) born in England, he was a grocer and spirit merchant of the High Street recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories. He was living at about No. 50 with his wife Margaret in 1841. His widow Margaret was still living there in 1851. He may be the same John who was one of the 6 elders of Hawick Parish who left, along with Rev. Wallace, in 1843 to form Hawick Free Kirk. His wife was Peggy, daughter of stockingmaker William Beck; she secondly married M. Thompson. They had no children.

John (19th C.) farmer at Greenholm in Liddesdale in 1868. Mals (17th C.) resident of Dryden in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when she was listed on the Hearth Tax roll among ‘ye poor’. It is unclear if her first name was short for something more familiar. Margaret (b.1786/7) married John, who was a grocer and spirit merchant. By 1851 she was a widow living on the High Street. She was listed as a grocer in Slater’s 1852 directory. Margaret (16th/17th C.) resident of Hawick or the later Simon from Trows. It may be the same man who was ‘Simone Routlich’ when William Douglas of Drumlanrig and Hawick feued the lands of ‘Byrkwode called the oxgang’ (near the present day Duke’s Wood) and the lands of Burnflat to him. He is also mentioned in a deed of 1447 as a Burgess, when he conveyed part of the land of the Bruanxholme estate to Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch. The land was known as ‘Cusingland’ and was the dowry of his wife Margaret (or ‘Mergrete’) Cousin (or ‘Cusyne’). In 1447 he also feued Birkwood (incorrectly transcribed in one record as ‘Birdwood’) to Sir Walter, and is again referred to as a Burgess of Hawick, and as a Bailie in the 1448 sasine. In 1453 he was one of the 2 Bailies who witnessed the first known sasine for a ‘tenement’ in Hawick. In 1455 he is one of the Burgesses of Hawick listed on the notarised document attesting that John of St. Michael had inherited his father’s lands of Whitchester; he is there referred to as ‘burgensis ac sergendus’ of the Barony of Hawick, this second title presumably equivalent to Bailie or Baron’s Bailie. He is mentioned again in 1456, this probably referring to him witnessing an earlier retour for Whitchesters; there he is ‘Symon de Routluge de Hawik’. He is one of the earliest recorded people with this surname, and also the earliest known Burgess of Hawick. He may be closely related to the Simon Simon (15th C.) witness to the sasine giving the Barony of Cavers and Sheriffdom of Roxburghshire to Archibald Douglas in 1464/5. He is recorded as ‘Simone de Routlague’ and one of the ‘scutiferis’ (i.e. ‘esquires’). Since the sasine was made at Cavers, he was surely a nearby landowner, but it is unclear whether he is the same as the earlier Burgess and Bailie of Hawick or the later Simon from Trows. It may be the same man who was ‘Simone Routlych’ when he witnessed the sasine for the lands of Kirktoun Mains and Flex in 1464/5. Simon (15th C.) possibly related to the earlier Simon. He is recorded in 1484 on the panel of inquest for James Douglas as heir to his father Sir William of Drumlanrig in the Barony of Hawick. He may also be the ‘Symone Routligh’ recorded in 1492/3 when he witnessed the confirmation of Rutherford and Wells to James Rutherford. He is probably the Simon ‘rouclisch’ who William Douglas, Sheriff of Roxburghshire, was called to enter at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1493, and not appearing, Douglas was fined (similarly John, James son of Simon, and Simon son of Simon, were all failed to be entered, and were surely closely related to him, Simon and James probably being his sons). He may be the same Simon ‘in the trows’ who was subject to being charged with plundering Buccleuch in 1494 along with his son Matthew (with their sureties the Douglases). He is recorded as ‘Symonis rouclisch in le trowis’ at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1494/5 when William Douglas of Cavers was fined for his non-appearance; his sons John and Simon also failed to appear at the same Justice-aire, as well as James (probably also his son). Simon (15th C.) recorded as ‘Symon routlage i the trows’ (and probably not ‘prows’ as stated by William Fraser) in 1494 when Walter Scott, grandson of Sir David of Buccleuch, obtained a decree from the Lords of Council against him for the theft and plunder (‘spuilzeit’) of the manor and farm of Buccleuch. His son Matthew is also mentioned. Presumably this happened before David Scott died 2 or 3 years earlier. They stole 5 horses, 40 cows, 40 sheep, 2 oxen, large quantities of food etc., including 80 stones of cheese and butter, and ruined the manor, leaving ‘noch on bed or baulks’. Given the similarity of the names (Simon and Matthew), it seems likely this family was closely related to that of the Hawick Burgesses, possibly the same. Their residence appears to have been the Trows (and not ‘Prows’, known to be connected with the Bewcastle branch of the family), since Douglas of Hornshole acted as surety for the 1494 decree. He may be the ‘Symonis Routlich’ who is recorded in the Exchequer Rolls of Scotland in 1501, along with Matthew, James and Simon and many Rutherfords, who had their fines compounded. His son Matthew is recorded in 1494/5 and 1502. His son John, ‘now in le cruk’ (although it is unclear whether this refers to the father or the son) is recorded in 1502, when he was fined for failing to appear in court. Additionally, he is in ‘in le trows’ in 1502 when John and James in Trows served as surety for him at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh and were fined for his non-appearance. It seems likely that Simon in Trows and Simon in Crook were the same person. Simon (15th/16th C.) son of Simon. He failed to appear when called by William Douglas, Sheriff of Roxburghshire, at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1493: John, Simon (presumably his father) and James son of Simon (hence his brother), were also called and failed to appear. In 1494/5 he failed to appear again (as well as his father Simon and James and John, who were probably his brothers). Simon (16th C.) tenant in Crook in 1592. He is recorded as a witness to the instrument of sasine in which Martin Douglas inherited Crook from his father. He was surely related to John, who was associated with Crook about 60 years earlier, and probably also a descendant of Simon, tenant in the Trows. It is possible he is the same man as Simon in the Trows. Thomas (16th C.) subject of a bond for him to be entered as a prisoner in 1561/2. The bond was between several Elliots (Archibald of Falnash, Archie’s son Gavin, John of Copshaw and Elder Will) Sir John Kerr and Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst, the Elliots promising to deliver him to ‘the irn yettis of the Fairniehirst’, and was signed at Hawick. A few months later Elliot of Falnash in another bond entered John, ‘son to Mungo Routlache, Englishman’ as a prisoner, so this seems likely to have been a relative. The same man (or a son perhaps) could have been recorded in 1581; in a raid by the Elliots of Liddesdale, a Thomas of ‘Todholes’ (i.e. Todhills in Cumbria) was taken prisoner and his horses and oxen stolen. This same Thomas of Todhills complained in 1582 of having livestock and goods stolen by ‘Kinmont Jock, Eckie of Strubholm and Jock Armstrong of Calffhill’. The same Thomas of Todhills was injured in another raid by the Armstrongs of Mangerton, Whitehaugh etc., in 1583; several other Routledges were targeted, including George of ‘Greinhilesh’ and Anthony of ‘Nutticleugh’, with Alan being killed and William, John and another Thomas being injured ‘in peril of death whereof one hath his legge cut of’. Walter (15th ) recorded in 1471 when John, as well as David Armstrong and Archibald Armstrong gave pledges that he would appear at court in Selkirk. Walter (17th C.) recorded in Hawick in the 1640s and 50s. He may have been related to the contemporary Robert, and possibly was a descendant of the earlier local Routledges. He married Isobel Ruecastle. Their children included 2 Michaels, Janet, Isobel and Margaret (there are many older spellings, including ‘Routledge’, ‘Rouchligis’, ‘Rouclesche’, ‘Rouclisch’, ‘Routelych’, ‘Routhtlethe’, ‘Routlage’, ‘Routlagh’, ‘Routlaige’, ‘Routlach’, ‘Routlage’, ‘Routleche’, ‘Routlege’, ‘Routlesche’, ‘Routlich’, the Routledges

_the Routledges_ (‘Èthu-rowt-Il-jeezj) _n._ prominent family in the Debatable land, near Newcastel, which spread to much of the Borders. The only remnant of the early seats of the family is the name of the Routledge Burn, a couple of miles east of Kershoppefoot. Nearby is the hamlet of Routledgeburn, Routledge Burn Bridge and Routledge Rigg. The earliest known member of the family is ‘Simon de Routledge’, a Burgess and Bailie of Hawick, recorded in several documents of the 1440s and 1450s. Simon and his son Matthew lived at the Trows, and were charged in 1494 with plundering the manor and lands of Buccleuch. There is a record of a payment made from the Treasurer of Scotland to ‘men of Levin callit Rowlitche’ in 1491. Another early member of the family is John ‘Routlech’, who was already deceased in 1529/30 when his son William resigned his ‘kyndlie’ tenancy of half of the lands of Crook in Cavers Parish, which they held of James (surely another relative). There were other people with this surname, probably closely related to the earlier Simon, holding prominent positions in Hawick over the next century. David held 8 ‘particates’ of land in Hawick’s 1537 Charter, probably the largest of any single landowner.

Sir Christopher Dacre, with a band of 500 men, set upon them in 1528, and although he failed to dislodge them from the lands of Tarras, the families appear to have dispersed afterwards. (row) _n._, arch. a roll, register – ‘... And at the brae aboon the heugh The clerk sat down to ca’ the rows’ [CPM].

He grew up in Slitrig Crescent, served an apprenticeship at Woodcock’s, and served with the 4th Royal Tank Regiment. He ran the Hawick Motorcycle Centre, worked as an engineer with Pringle’s and later opened The Photo Shop on the High Street. He often contributed letters to the local press. He married Irene Gentleman. He moved to the Leicester area to be near his son Mark and died there.

Rowanhill (row-in-hil) n. Former lands in the upper Teviotdale, listed as part of the extensive Lairdship of Ringwoodfield in 1621 and in 1693. It seems likely this is a scribe’s or transcriber’s error for Bowanhill. However, it is not impossible that it could be associated with Rowantee hill, although this is probably on the wrong side of the Teviot valley or Rowantee Knowe on the right side (it is ‘Rowandhill’ in 1693).

Rowantreihill (row-in-trí-hil) n. Rowantreehill, probable name for a farm in Jedforest. In 1538 and 1539 it was described as 2 steadings and valued at 44 shillings. In 1541 John, Marion and Adam were tenants of part of the lands paying 22s, John and Robert Oliver were tenants in another part paying 11s and Robert ‘the Sheriff’ Oliver was tenants in the last part paying 11s (it is ‘Rowntrehill’ in 1538 and 1539 and ‘Rowntreihill’ and ‘Rontrehil’ in 1541).

Rowantree Sike (row-in-trí-sik) n. Rowantree Sike, small stream in Liddesdale, rising on Stell Know and flowing westwards to become part of Whithaugh Burn.

row a nievefi (row-a-neeve-fi) v., arch. To turn round every cut of corn (during harvest) so all the stalks can be intermingled in order that many can be held in one hand before laying in the band (see row).

Rowbank (rō-bawnk) n. House on Drumlanrig Square that has the back on the Square and the front overlooking the mill behind.

Rowcastle see Ruecastle

row-chow-the-bacca-wheel (row-chow-thu-ba-ki-wheel) n., arch. A children’s game in which a chain of children surround a large child, called the ‘pin’, then sway around until everyone falls in a heap (noted by J. Jamieson, who states that it is derived from ‘imitation of the process of a tobacconist in winding up his roll round a pin’).

rowener (row-in-ur) n., arch. A fish capable of spawning, specifically applied to salmon – ‘She’s a guid rowener’ [GW].

Roxburgh (roks-bu-ru) n. small village that is all that remains of an important historic site. It was created a Royal Burgh in the early 12th century, with its castle used as a royal residence, and was one of the four Royal Burghs in the 13th century, being then probably the fourth most popu-los town in Scotland. It was a walled town with 3 churches, schools and at one time the Royal Mint. James II was famously killed here in 1460, and after the Scots captured it they had it demolished. The village went into decline after that, but there was still a Franciscan convent there in the early 1500s. The area was devastated by Hert-ford’s men in 1545. The village itself is built on the site of the overflow of the old town, and was thatched until the 1950s. The graveyard contains the burial vault of the Kers of Chatto. A nearby railway viaduct was constructed from 1847, but 9 men lost their lives when part of it collapsed in 1849. A short history was written by Brian Wain in 1983 – ‘For soon, where scenes of seeter beauty smile Around the mounds of Roxburgh’s ruin’d pile, No more the mistress of each lovely field, Her name, her honours Teviot soon must yield’[JL], ‘Where you slip sullenly under the shadows Skirting the feet of old Roxburgh’s tower: Where you take, lower-like, close to your bosom, Kale, and the music of coppice and bower’[WL] (the origin of the name is probably Old English ‘Hroc burgh’, meaning ‘the fortified dwelling belonging to Hroc’; the name is recorded from the early 12th century, in the earliest records being ‘Rokesburgh’ and variants; it occurs on Blaeu’s 1654
map as ‘Rosburgh’; an example of ‘Hroc’ occurs in the Domensday book for Suffolck and in compound form in other parts of England).

Roxburgh (roks-bu-ru) n. small town in Central Otago on the South Island of New Zealand. It lies on the Teviot River (now called the Chatha), and was also once called Teviot itself, with Et-trick and Mount Benger nearby. It was named by some of the early settlers and was an important centre during the local gold rush of 1862.
Streets in the town include one named after Hawick, as well as Abbotsford, Ancreun, Berwick, Branxholm, Cheviot, Edinburgh, Ednam, Hermitage, Jedburgh, Kelso, Liddle, Melrose, Scottland and Tweed.

Roxburgh (roks-bu-ru) n. John (d.1196)
Canon of Glasgow, who witnessed several charters from the 1160s. It is possible he was the Master John associated with either Lessuden or Longnewton. He was appointed Treasurer of Glasgow Diocese in 1195/6, but only held the appointment for a few months before dying at Melrose Abbey. William (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. He farmed on one of the farms of the Knowesouth estate. William (18th/19th C.)
Roxburgh Castle

farmer at Ruecastle, recorded on the Horse Tax Rolls for 1794 and 1797. He was recorded as owner of 8 farm horses and 1 saddle horse in 1797.

William (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Stitchelhill. He is listed as male head of household there 1835–41. He emigrated to America in 1842.

Roxburgh Castle (roks-bu-ru-skul) n. also called Marchmount, built above the confluence of the Teviot and the Tweed. It passed back and forth between Scotland and England several times, with the English holding it about as often as the Scots. Alexander II was married in the Castle in 1239. A large number of Scottish charters and other records were removed there on the orders of Edward I in 1292, before subsequently disappearing forever. Robert the Bruce’s sister Mary was hung there in a cage from 1306–10 on orders of Edward I. Sir James Douglas captured it in 1313, but the English held it from 1334 until 1460. A bridge connecting the area with Kelso was destroyed in 1398 and its successor destroyed by Sir William Douglas of Drumlanrig in 1411. During the 1460 siege James II died when one of his cannons exploded; a yew tree in the grounds of Floors Castle marks the spot. Queen Mary of Gueldres dismantled it, but it was rebuilt by the English in 1547. When the Scots regained it for the last time they razed it themselves, around 1550 – ‘Roxburgh! how fallen, since first in Gothic pride Thy frowning battlements the war defied, Call’d the bold chief to grace thy blazon’d halls, And bade the rivers gird thy solid walls!’ [JL].

Roxburghhe Drive (roks-bu-ru-driv) n. one of the bigger roads through Stiches, being he continuation of Hazelwood Road. It was built in 1976 and named after the 9th Duke of Roxburghe, George Victor Robert John Innes-Ker, who was Convenor of Roxburgh District Council (often erroneously written ‘Roxburgh’).

Roxburghshire (roks-bu-ru-shir, roks-bu-ru-shir) n. former county which included Hawick, Jedburgh and Kelso. It was the southernmost county of Scotland and was bounded by Berwickshire, Dumfriesshire, Selkirkshire and the English Border. It contained what was formerly Teviotdale and part of Liddesdale and was divided into over 30 parishes. Jedburgh was the county town, although there was a proposal around 1891 to change this to Hawick. The area was 669 square miles, although changes to the boundaries means this number does not apply to all times. The county is full of archaeological remains, including Bronze Age burial cairns, British forts, Roman camps and roads, vestiges of settlements and peel towers. The county is named after the formerly important town and Castle of Roxburgh.

Roxburghshire Gentlemen and Yeomanry Cavalry (roks-bu-ru-shir-jen-ül-min-in-yö-min-ree-kaw-vul-ree) n. local volunteer regiment that existed 1797–1828, also known as the Roxburghshire Yeomanry or the Roxburghshire Light Dragoons Yeomanry Cavalry. Hawick was the main rallying point for the upper troop. In 1798 the Burgh gave them £25 to purchase drums and fifes. The western Captain-commandant was William Elliot of Harwood, while William Elliot (later Elliot-Lockhart) of Borthwickbrae served as Colonel. Their uniforms consisted of scarlet jackets laced with white cord, blue collars and cuffs, black leather helmets with a bearskin crest and a red and white heckle feather, white breeches and black boots.

the Roxburghshire Militia (thu-roks-bu-ru-shir-mi-lish-a) n. volunteer regiments of the early 19th century, formed in 1809 after the Light Company of the Roxburgh Volunteers had been disbanded. The 1st Regiment was headquartered at Jedburgh, and contained many local men, while the 2nd Regiment was based at Kelso. The 1st Regiment had Gilbert Elliot (later Earl of Minto) as Lieut.-Col., with James Elliot (younger of Wolfelee) as Major and the first Captain was Walter Scott of Wauchope. They were disbanded in 1828 (note that several different names were used for these units).

Roxburghshire Nursin Association (roks-bu-ru-shir-nur-sin-aw-sö-see-ä-shin) n. nursing association formed in 1900 to provide for nursing needs in local country areas. Fees were paid to join the association and only members could benefit from its services. It operated until the National Health Service was set up in 1948.

the Roxburghshire Rifle Volunteers (thu-roks-bu-ru-shir-ri-fúl-vo-lun-teezr) n. formal name for the Border Rifles, a volunteer outfit founded in 1861.

the Roxburghshire Word-Book (thu-roks-bu-ru-shir-wurd-book) n. the most useful resource for words that are peculiar to various parts of the county, written by George Watson and published in 1923. Words that are local to the Hawick area are denoted ‘[W]’, for Western Roxburghshire Yeomanry

Roxburghshire. As well as the word list itself, the introductory sections compile a huge amount of information about pronunciation and other facets of Roxburghshire vernacular. The book was compiled by Watson from the help of many communicants (most of whose names are unknown) from various parts of Roxburghshire, this following articles and lists of words that he published in the local press to encourage people to help him. Earlier books of poetry are much used to provide examples, and phrases from Elliot Cowan Smith are often included (sometimes without attribution). Watson was from Jedburgh and worked for the Oxford University dictionary project, effectively following in the footsteps of James Murray.

Roxburgh Viaduct (roks-bu-ru-vi-a-dukt) n. disused railway viaduct across the Teviot, by the village of Roxburgh. Built in 1847, it has an interesting iron footbridge built into it at the level of the river bank.

Roxburgh Volunteers (roks-bu-ru-vo-len-teez) n. name given to several distinct (but inter-related) volunteer military units. The Roxburghshire Yeomanry Cavalry was first set up in 1794 and disbanded in 1802, to be re-formed as the Roxburghshire Corps of Gentlemen and Yeomanry Cavalry, lasting until 1828. The Light Company of the Roxburgh Volunteers was formed in 1803 during the perceived threat of French invasion. It was initiated by Walter Scott of Wauchope, who became their captain. They were mobilised during the False Alarm of 1804. The unit disbanded in 1809, but was essentially replaced by the Roxburghshire Militia the same year. Another volunteer unit, called the 1st Roxburgh and Selkirk Volunteer Rifle Corps was set up in 1859, with Hawick units, the 4th and 5th being set up in 1860 and 1861. The 4th absorbed the Denholm Company in 1863 and the 5th was disbanded in 1867. The 4th Roxburgh Corps became D and E Companies of the 1st Roxburgh and Selkirk (The Border) Rifle Volunteer Corps in 1880. They become part of the K.O.S.B. from 1887, with K Company formed in Hawick in 1892, and the whole set of Companies renamed the 4th Battalion, the K.O.S.B. in 1908.

Roxbury (roks-bu-ree) n. suburb of Boston, Massachusetts, which was apparently named for the many rocks there (although a connection with our county is not impossible). The town of West Roxbury (annexed to Boston in 1874) was the site of the Boston area Common Ridings of the late 19th and early 20th centuries. This was organised by Hawick exiles under the auspices of the Scottish Border Club. It consisted of sports (races, baseball throwing etc.) and other events on Common Riding Saturday, with the location Caledonian Grove, West Roxbury. There is a photograph of the 1886 celebration. Ex-Cornet Walter Irvine attended in 1888. There are American Cornets recorded from 1877 until at least 1926.

the Royal (thu-roi-ul) n. pub at 22 Howegate in the latter 19th and early 20th centuries. It was also known as ‘the Royal Bar’. The proprietor for many years was John Barclay.

the Royal Bank (thu-roi-ul-bawngk) n. the Royal Bank of Scotland erected an impressive building at 12 High Street in 1857/8, designed by Peddie & Kinnear, constructed by James Harkness, with ornamental work by Alex Pirnie. On the top corners of the building can be seen the monogram ‘P K’ and the year ‘1857’. It is a Category B listed building. The location had previously contained 2 adjacent hostleries, the Ordnance Arms and the Harrow Inn. The first agent was James Carmichael, solicitor, and later Haddon & Turnbull took over. The building was turned into the Registry Office and now is education service offices. Meanwhile the Royal Bank had another office at 4 Tower Knowe. After it merged with the Commercial group in 1969 it obtained its current branch at 31 High Street (built as the National Bank about 1870). It stretches over 31, 33 and 35 High Street, and is a grade C listed building.

royal burgh (roi-ul-bu-ru) n. a town granted its charter by the Crown rather than the local landowner. There were 65 royal burghs in Scotland. Nearby ones include Jedburgh, Selkirk, Roxburgh and Peebles.

the Royal George (thu-roi-ul-jorj) n. former popular name for the ‘Whusky Hooses Mill’ which stood opposite St. Cuthbert’s Church, also known as ‘the George’. It was presumably named after the famous Royal Navy vessel of the same name, which was the largest warship in the world when it was launched in 1756. The ship fought in the Seven Years War and became infamous when it sank in 1782 during routine maintenance with the loss of more than 800 lives.
Ruberslaw

Royal Highlanders (roi-ul-hi-lin-durz) n. three officers of the 42nd Royal Highland Regiment, Lt.-Col. William Dickson, Capt. Archibald Campbell and Capt. McQuarrie, were made Honorary Burgesses in 1802. This was when they passed through Hawick on their way back from Egypt after having ‘immortalised themselves in defeating the French Invincibles’.

the Royal Mail (thu roi-ul-mål) n. name of a stagecoach operating out of Hawick in the early 19th century. In 1837 it was listed leaving for Edinburgh from the Tower Inn every day at 9.30 a.m., going via Selkirk and Galashiels, and leaving for London at 12.30 p.m., via Langholm and Carlisle. The other coach operating at the same time was ‘the Standard’.

Royal Nurseries see Buccleuch Nurseries

the Royal Oak (thu roi-ul-ok) n. former hostelry near the top of the Round Close in the 19th century, also known for a while as the Blue Bell Inn. It can be seen in a sketch by T.H. Laidlaw. James Elliot, proprietor, was considered to have provided the finest spread of the local innkeepers at the Reform Bill open air dinner of 1832. Elliot was listed as vintner on the Round Close in Pigot’s 1837 directory. It could have been where Mary Hunter was publican on the Round Close in 1841. Also the name of a separate local pub on Wilton Path at roughly the same time, and another small licensed house on the north side of Buccleuch Street in the mid-19th century (the name is shared with hundreds of other pubs in Britain and refers to the tree in which Charles II hid from Cromwell’s army).

rubbers (ru-burz) n., arch. scrapie, a disease of sheep, marked by constant scratching (cf. scratchie).

rubbin-oot-indie (ru-bin-oo-in-dee) n., arch. an India-rubber, eraser.

Ruberslaw (roo-burz-law) n. hill about 4 miles due east of Hawick, lying on the boundary of Cavers and Hobkirk parishes. It reaches a height of 424 m (1392 ft), and is the most prominent landmark in Roxburghshire. It was long considered to be an extinct volcano, but the reality is that the geology is much more complex (although the rocks are predominantly basaltic, the shape probably came from erosion). It is topped by an Iron Age fort, and was also used as a Roman signal station. The fortifications on the hill-top were first described by A.O. Curle in 1905. There was an extensive stone citadel on top (about 72 m by 32 m), defended by a wall, with an entrance on the north-east side. There is also an annex on the south side, including the plateau below the summit. These were probably rebuilt from the stones of the Roman signal station, as a Dark Age ‘nuclear’ fortification, with Roman stone. A less well-defined outer wall is probably part of an earlier Iron Age structure. A cairn on the east side was removed in the late 19th century. The summit also has a modern triangulation pillar. A horde of bronze vessels was unearthed there in 1863 (including a jug handle, decorated with grotesque figures of 2 dwarfs and a bird) and are in the Museum, as well as 2 stones with diamond-shaped carvings. Several flints found there are in the Hawick Museum. Other flints and an arrowhead are in the National Museum of Antiquities of Scotland, as well as an unfinished stone axe. The hill was used for Covenanters’ meetings of the mid-17th century, at Peden’s Pulpit (a rocky cleft at the south-west side of the summit) and elsewhere on its slopes. In a wood near the head of the Hawk Burn is a ‘burnt mound’. Pine trees on the north side are said to be remnants of the ancient Caledonian forest. Part of the slopes were used as Common land in Denholm and in the 18th century each feuar’s allotment was marked out with stones – ‘Oft have I wandered in my vernal years Where Ruberlaw his misty summit rears’ [JL], ‘Dark Ruberslaw, – that lifts his head sublime, Rugged and hoary with the wrecks of time! On his broad misty front the giant wears The horrid furrows of ten thousand years’ [JL], `Did you see the shadow’s speeding On the slopes of Ruberslaw?’ [RSC], ‘...Waiting helpless the beak and claw Of the carrion birds of Ruberslaw!’ [WHO], ‘...where Ruberslaw’s summit stands out and looks doon on the wild lovely Border and Denholm’s wee toon’ [GM], ‘Rest on the heights an’ look ayont Where Ruberslaw shows green, An’ a’ the countryside displayed Aroon the Border Queen’ [WFC], ‘When Rubers Law has on his cap, The Dunion on her hood, A’ the auld wives on Teviotside Are sure ti hae a flood’ [T], ‘If you can see Ruberslaw it’s going to rain and if you can’t see Ruberslaw it’s already raining’ [IWL] (sometimes written ‘Rubers Law’; it is marked ‘Rubburlaw hill’ on Pont’s manuscript map of the 1590s, and on a manuscript map of Gordon in c.1650, but is absent from Blaeu’s 1654 map; the

Ruberslaw Drive (roo-burz-law-driv) n. street in Denholm, running parallel to the Loaning and connected with Ruberslaw Road.

Ruberslaw House (roo-burz-law-hoos) n. house in Crieff near Perth. It was built in the late 18th century, being a branch of the Commercial Bank from 1811, and then was a home of Sir William Elliott of Stobs from at least 1878, when his first wife died there. It was unclear who named the house (but the connection to the Eliotts of Stobs seems unlikely to be a coincidence).

Ruberslaw Pairish (roo-burz-law-pa-ree-sh) n. combined parish consisting of Denholm, Minto and Bedrule, set up in 2003, and extended to include Hobkirk and Southdean in 2004.

rubiator (roo-bee-a-tur) n., arch. a bully, a violent, swearing person – ‘He comes out on me roaring like a rubiator’ [JoJ], ‘He cam in leike a roostick, swearing person { `He comes out on me roaring like a rubiator’ [CPM].

Rubestic (rub-stik) n. race-horse, trained locally by John Leadbetter. It won the Grand National in 1979, being the first Scottish horse to do so.

ruck (ruk) n., arch. a rick, stack of hay – ‘O! as we ran about the rucks o’ hay! I hinna seen sinesyne a blyther day’ [CPM].

the Rude Day (thin-rood-da) n. mediaval festival of the Exultation of the Cross, celebrated on 14th September (3rd May in England), supposedly the date of the discovery of the ‘true cross’. It was important locally before the Reformation and is recorded in the mid-16th century as a day sometimes chosen for signing documents etc. It was the occasion of a Fair in Jedburgh, the day in 1601 being marked by a skirmish, when a group of about 30 Turnbuls from the Minto area came to town seeking Thomas Ker (brother of the Provost). At the end of the fight Ker and his servant were dead, along with 2 of the Turnbuls, and several men were left seriously wounded (still referred to in the 1622 Circuit Court records; also spelled ‘Rood’).

Rudd (rud) n. Charles Clifford (b.1811/2) from Yorskshire, he was Superintendent of the Hawick Burgh Police in 1851. He was living at about 3 Tower Knowe. He was also listed as Superintendent in Slater’s 1852 directory. His wife was Elizabeth, and they had a son Thomas Frederick. By 1861 he was a widower working as Police Constable in Jedburgh.

Ruecastle (roo-, row-kaw-sul) n. hamlet a mile or so north-east of the Dunion, formerly in the Barony of Bedrule. A piece of land there was granted by Lady Bethoc and her husband Rudolph to the monks of Jedburgh when that abbey was founded (as confirmed in several later charters). There is a suggestion that an area of elevated land to the east of the farm may have been the site of a tower. There is also a tradition that the local courts of justice were held there until moved to Jedburgh. William ‘de Ruecastel’ is recorded in the Ragman Rolls of 1296. The Fletcher family held part of the lands from before 1464 until they sold them to Sir John Kerr of Ferniehirst in 1558/9. In 1491 there was a ‘procuratory of resignation’ by Thomas Dickson of Ormiston, to resign (presumably a different part of) these lands into the hands of the Abbot of Jedburgh; they appear to have been gained by John Rutherford of Hundalee. John Turnbull was recorded there in 1493. John Turnbull is recorded there in 1502. The village there was burned by an English party led by Philip Dacre in 1513, including 2 towers, burned by Sir Thomas Wharton’s men in 1543 and burned again by Hertford’s men in 1545. In 1569 it was among the lands purchased by Adam French from the Abbot of Jedburgh. It was among lands granted to Thomas Ker of Cavers-Carre in 1623. Land there were held by Lord Jedburgh in 1629. Thomas Hamilton (1st Earl of Haddington) owned lands there, which he feued in 1632. In 1643 the lands there were valued at a total of £459, owned by Thomas Rutherford, Andre Turnbull, Laird Storie, Alexander Miller, George Fletcher and the Earl of Traquair. In 1665 Thomas, son of John Rutherford was served heir to his father’s 7-pound-10-shilling lands there, with ‘lie Maynes de Harden et forresta de Rowcastle’ as well as 3 husbandlands in the town of Ruecastle. In 1788 the main part was owned by John Rutherford of Knowesouth and valued at £396 13s 10d (with teinds of £70 6s), part owned by Thomas Rutherford valued at £41 3s 10d, a small part owned by Thomas Ogilvie of Chesters (that had been acquired by Bennet of Chesters) valued at £37 2s 4d and a another part owned by Thomas Storie valued at £18. William Roxburgh was there 1794–97 and William Young was also farmer there in 1797. The farm was part of the estate of Knowesouth, until sold by the heirs of Capt. Rutherford to George Pott of Dod. Part of the lands were acquired by Bennet of Chesters before 1811 and combined with his estate, with the rest being owned by Rutherford of Knowesouth; together the parts were valued at about £510. Gideon Pott acquired further parts from William Oliver Rutherford and from Thomas Storie. The area may be the origin of the similar surname. A cist was found a few hundred yards to the south, containing an urn that was said in 1949 to be preserved in Monteviot House. A stone axe found nearby is in the National Museum of Antiquities. In a field about 500 m to the north are the possible remains of a settlement. A former resident, perhaps fictional, is mentioned in the ballad ‘The Grey Peel’ (as recited by ‘Matthew Gotterson’) – ‘An’ gallopin’ up comes Ruecastle Hew, On his Bewcastle naig o’ the guid steel grey. An’ ferroo-, row-kaw-sul Ruecastle (ruo-, row-kaw-sul) n. Adam (17th C.) recorded as ‘merchant of Hawick’ when he was entered as a Burgess and Guild brother of Edinburgh in 1692. He may be related to the Adam who was born to William and Marion Scott in Hawick in 1650 and may be the Adam who was father in Hawick of an unnamed child in 1690 and James in 1693. He was listed as a merchant among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He is probably the Adam who is listed on the Hearth Tax rolls for Hawick ‘eist the water’ in 1694. In 1688 he witnessed a baptism for merchant John Scott. Elizabeth nee Kelly (18th C.) wife of Bailie Walter, whom she married in the early 1750s. She was apparently the first Hawick citizen to travel out to America and return safely! She was at that time 72 years old and visiting her son John, who was a Captain in the Revolutionary Army. Francis (18th C.) probably closely related to Robert. He could have been the Francis born to William and Janet Richardson in Hawick in 1678. He is probably the Francis who (along with Robert) witnessed baptisms for merchant David Young in 1705, for merchant William Dickson in 1718 and for candlemaker John Scott in 1720. In 1723 he was entered as a new elder of Hawick Kirk and was a candidate for Session Treasurer in 1725. He witnessed baptisms in 1725 for workman William Henderson, in 1726 for flesher Robert Wilson and probably (the record is hard to read) along with Robert, for wigmaker Francis Miles, in 1727 for carrier George Porteous, and in 1730 for ‘junior surgeon’ Walter Scott. He is also mentioned in reference to the building of the Teviot Bridge in 1738. He may be the Francis, saddler in Hawick, who witnessed the notorial instrument of 1734 in which the Town complained about encroachment on the Common by tenants of Sir Gilbert Elliott of Stobs. He witnessed a further baptism for gardener William Paterson in 1743, in which he was also listed as a saddler. He is recorded as a merchant in 1745 when he witnessed a baptism for weaver William Roger, along with merchant John. He is probably also the saddler Francis who witnessed a baptism for Gideon in 1745; Gideon thus seems likely to have been closely related. In 1747 he was recorded as a saddler who (along with carrier John) witnessed a baptism for wright Henry Haliburton. He may have been the Francis who died around 1750 and gave his estate to Francis, young son of Bailie Gideon (perhaps therefore his brother). George (17th C.) Councillor who signed the 1640 ‘Act of Bailies and Council’. He may be the George who was married to Isobel ‘Merlay’ and had a son Hector in Hawick in 1636. George (17th C.) married to Janet Gilbertson, they had daughter Janet in Hawick in 1653. He may be the George who witnessed a baptism in 1648. Bailie Gideon (b.1713) son of Robert, he was a Magistrate in Hawick roughly in the 1730s and in 1740. He may have been the Gideon who was Cornet in 1730. He was probably the (ex-)Bailie Ruecastle involved with overseeing work to rebuild the Bailies’ seat in St. Mary’s in 1734 and building a new Parish School in 1739. He was ‘present Baillie’ in 1741 and in 1743 when he witnessed baptisms for writer James Weir and Burgh Officer Francis Turnbull, and also ‘late Bailie’ in 1745 when he witnessed another baptism for James Weir, and also when his own child’s baptism was recorded. He appears to have died shortly before 1751, when the Hawick Session agreed to act as trustees for his minor son Francis, who had been left the estate of another Francis (perhaps his brother). He married Jean Watson, who may be the daughter of John Watson (Clerk to the Regality) baptised in 1710. Their children included: Robert (b.1731); John (b.1733); Francis (b.1734); Thomas (b.1735); John (again, b.1738); Anne (b.1740); Francis (again, b.1741); Anne (again, b.1743); Jean (b.1745); and Gideon (b.1747). The witnesses in 1741 were writer Thomas Watson (surely related to his wife) and merchant Charles Tudhope, in 1743 were wright Walter Scott and writer James Weir, and in 1745 were former Bailie John Scott and saddler Francis (who was surely closely related to him). He may be the ‘Bailie Gideon’ who hired the Hawick Parish mortcloth in 1758 (although he appears to have been deceased before then).

Gideon (18th/19th C.) recorded in Hawick when he paid the Horse Tax in 1790–92. He also paid the dog tax in Hawick in 1797. He contributed £1 to the subscription to support the war with France around 1799. He is probably the son of Gideon, born in 1747.

Hector (17th C.) married to Isobel Minto, their daughter Grizel was born in 1645. Hector (17th C.) Hawick resident. He married Marion Brown and their children included Bessie, Hector, and probably Andrew in the period 1687–92. He may have been son or grandson of George. He may be the ‘Hector Ruecastell younger’ listed on the west-side of Hawick on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694.

John (16th C.) recorded in Hawick’s 1537 charter as ‘Rowcastell’. He owned a ‘particte’ of land on the north side of the High Street. He may have been the ancestor of the later Ruecastles of the Town.

John (17th C.) one of a list of 16 ‘idle and masterless men’ suggested by the Hawick Bailie to the Privy Council in 1627 as suitable for sending to the wars in Germany. While in Edinburgh Tolbooth he is among 7 of them who complained that they were not in fact the sorts of men who should be pressed into military service, but nevertheless were transported to the wars in Germany.

John (b.1657) son of Robert and Janet Tweedie, born in Hawick. Probably the same John became a cooper’s apprentice in Edinburgh in 1674. It is not impossible that he is the same as Bailie John. John (17th/18th C.) described as ‘servitor’ to carrier Walter Ruecastle in 1716, when he and William Douglas had complaints made against them for sitting in seats in St. Mary’s that were reserved for the incorporated trades. The 2 of them even broke open the door to the balcony when it was locked by Robert Jolly. He was presumably the same John who was involved in a scuffle with Robert Jolly in 1716 in the Wester Loft of St. Mary’s during the Sunday service, when ‘Jollie did thrust him hard by his feet upon his belly’.

Bailie John (17th/18th C.) Chief Magistrate of Hawick in the early 1700s, recorded as such during the swearing of the oath of allegiance to King George by the Council and Burgessess in 1714. It is unclear how he is related to the other Ruecastles (but based on his marriage record he was ‘nephew to Walter Ruecastle att ye Kirkstyle of Hawick’). He is probably the merchant John who in 1719 married Bessie (or Betsy), daughter of Walter Paterson of Burnflatt, and had children: Margaret (b.1721), who probably married Walter Henderson; Bessie (b.1727); Walter (b.1729), baker and magistrate; John (b.1731); Jean (b.1735); Isobel (b.1739); Bessie (again, b.1740); Beatrix (b.1742), who probably married clothier and dyer Thomas Turnbull; and Janet (b.1744). The witnesses in 1742 were Francis Gledstains and Robert Boyd (both ‘present Bailies’). Given the birth years it seems likely he is also the John whose children recorded with Bessie Scott (perhaps an error, or indicating his wife had previously been married) were: Anna (b.1723); and Helen (b.1725), who may have married James Paterson, ‘Ilka Thursdi’. The witnesses in 1725 were Walter (perhaps his uncle) and John Scott (possibly related to his wife). He is probably the merchant John who witnessed baptisms for workman Gilbert Oliver in 1741, for flesher George Deans, for merchant Robert Scott, for flesher Walter Sheen, for gardener Robert Balmer and for flesher William Renwick in 1742, for carrier John Pott and for Schoolmaster Walter Turnbull in 1743, and for Alexander Bunyan and John Kedle in 1745. In 1744 he witnessed baptisms for carriers John Tudhope and James Paterson (who married Helen, probably his daughter), as well as for weaver John Gray and for shoemaker Thomas Scott. In 1745 he also witnessed a baptism for weaver William Roger, along with fellow merchant Francis. He could be the carrier who witnessed a baptism for William Leithead in 1741 and another for wright Henry Haliburton in 1747. John (18th C.) elder of Hawick Session, recorded in 1751. He was in care of a horse belonging to the Session, with instructions to sell it, and also appointed as a trustee for the affairs of the deceased Bailie Francis Ruecastle. Since he was not referred to as a late Bailie, then he may not have been the same as the earlier Bailie John. He could be the John who witnessed a baptism for baker Walter in 1758. John (1755/6–1808) son of Walter. He went to America, serving in the U.S. Army during the American War of Independence, becoming a Captain. He married Phoebe Thomas of Elizabeth Town, New Jersey. When his mother went out to visit him she was apparently the first Teri to take a trip out to America and return safely. Mrs. ?? (17th/18th C.) Hawick innkeeper of the early 1700s. She is recorded several times in the Parish Records in connection with payment for drinks associated with Kirk Session events, such as funerals and the ‘rop’ of seats in the gallery. She may have been related to the John who was Bailie. Robert (17th C.) described as ‘viatore’, i.e. ‘traveller’ when he was witness to a 1622 sasine for land in Hawick owned by Allan Deans. Robert (17th C.) listed in 1627 as one of 9 men charged with making a valuation of the lands in the Parish of Hawick. He may be the same as one of the other Roberts. Robert (17th C.) married to Margaret Scott and had son James in Hawick in 1636. Robert (17th C.) married to Janet Gledstains and had daughter Isobel in Hawick in 1646. Robert (17th C.) selected as one of 2 people in Hawick to collect the ‘stent’ on the west side of the water in 1649. Probably the same Robert was ordered in 1655 to pay Walter Stavert money borrowed when he when he went from Glasgow to Edinburgh and for a leg of mutton. He is described as a traveller in 1655 when someone was ordered to pay him for carrying wool to Edinburgh, ‘for horsing of him from Edinburgh to Hawick’ and ‘for ane dry killit fisch’. Robert (17th C.) Hawick resident, married to Janet Scott. Their children included George (b.1648), Bessie, an unnamed child (b.1653) and Walter (b.1655), in the period 1648–55. Robert (17th C.) married to Janet ‘Twiddie’, they had son John in Hawick in 1657. Robert (17th C.) Hawick resident married to Isobel Scott. Their children included William (b.1654) and Robert (b.1656). The witnesses in 1654 were Thomas Scott and John Scott (perhaps related to his wife). Robert (17th C.) Hawick resident married to Margaret Wintrop. Their children included Robert (b.1670) and Margaret (b.1674). Robert (17th C.) married to Agnes Mow, their son William was born in Hawick in 1673. Robert (d.c.1688) tailor in Hawick. His will was recorded in the Commissariot of Peebles in 1688. He is probably the same as one of the contemporary Roberts. He could be the Robert recorded in 1673 on the list of men named in the trial for the so-called riot at St. Jude’s Fair. Bailie Robert (17th/18th C.) merchant in Hawick. He served as Magistrate between about 1690 and 1710, certainly recorded in 1697, 1707 and again around 1709. He is probably the Robert who (along with Francis) witnessed a baptism for merchant David Young in 1705. He was Bailie in 1707 when along with the other Bailie, Robert Brown, he was fined by the Council for ‘the publicke undeniable and unaccountable abuse . . . att the ry-deing of the Commone’, with the pair ‘strikeing att others’ horses with their whips and staves’; the nature of the incident is not described, but it seems likely it was related to the near riots that happened at the previous year’s Common Riding over carrying the Flag. He witnessed baptisms for Thomas Gledstains, John Scott ‘Whitegates’ and tailor William Donald (along with Bailie Robert Brown) in 1707, for Walter Gledstains (junior of Hilliesland) in 1708, for Walter Gledstains, ‘Walter Alison’, for Henry Orrock and for merchant William Dickson in 1709, for shoemaker Walter Lethem in 1711, for Bailie James Burn in 1712 and for Bailie George Martin in 1714. He was ‘late bailie’ in 1713 when he witnessed a baptism for carrier David Minto. In 1710 he was stated to be one of the Councillors given a key to the Charter Chest. He was an ex-Bailie when the bond was granted by the Council (dated 1710, but recorded in the Town Book in 1711) to provide money for the Master of the new Grammar School. In 1715 he was given custody of ‘the charter little chest’, with 2 other ex-Bailies holding the keys. He witnessed a baptism for weaver Robert Turnbull in 1716. He was probably the Bailie Ruecastle charged in 1717 with collecting money from the area between the Cross to the bridge. And in 1718, when he was a Magistrate, there was a serious dispute with ex-Bailie Graham, who accused him (apparently at a Council meeting) of being a thief and worse; the exact nature of the argument is not recorded, but it was resolved after the Minister intervened. He witnessed a baptism for shoemaker Walter Lethem in 1721. Another dispute of 1722 led to him having all the elders publicly questioned about whether they had ‘heard him speak opprobriously and disparageingly of Mr Robert Cunningham our minister’. He continued as Magistrate in the 1720s and was also Parish Treasurer in the 1720s. He may be the Robert who witnessed a baptism for David Johnston in 1731. He may have been the Robert, son of Robert and Margaret Wintrop, who was born in Hawick in 1670 (although there are other Roberts recorded being born in 1648 and 1656). He may be the Robert recorded in the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694 among those ‘Payed but not listed in Hanick Toun’ and probably from the west side. It is possible that he was the Robert, who, along with Walter, leased part of the Kirklands of Hawick in 1692. He married Anna Elliot and their children included: Mary (b.1700); Anna (b.1704); Beatrix (b.1705); William (b.1709); and Gideon (b.1713). The witnesses in 1700 were Walter Graham and George Martin, in 1704 were Bailies Patrick Richardson and George Martin, in 1705 were Gideon Scott of Fahnash and Baillie Walter Elliot (who may have been related to his wife) and in 1709 Bailies Walter Elliot, James Burn and Walter Graham. He may be the Robert whose daughter Jean married Robert Ogilvie in 1720.

Walter (17th C.) recorded in 1693 when he was fined for insulting and assaulting the Bailie of Regality, William Scott. It seems that Scott was in the ‘hous’ (i.e. probably pub) of William Elliot, sorting out some financial business between him (Walter) and John Hardie, when he came in, calling the Bailie ‘ane fals judge’, and when there was an attempt to remove him he ‘instantly, insolentlie, and most violentlie fell upon the sd. baylyea, rugged and rave the hair of his head’. As well as being fined, he was ordered to go to the stocks. The financial dealings also involved his father, who was presumably alive at the time. He could be the same man as the carter. Walter (17th/18th C.) carter in Hawick, on the 1693/4 subscribers’ list for the new Kirk bell. He is probably the Walter listed on the west-side of Hawick on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. He was recorded as a carrier of Hawick when he married Abigail Lamb in Edinburgh in 1694. He could be the Walter who was born to William and Janet Richardson in Hawick in 1674 (although there are other possibilities). He may be the Walter who witnessed a baptism for cook James Wright in 1712. In 1713 he was a ‘carier’ when he witnessed baptisms for ‘drummer’ Thomas Boyd (who was also gardener at the Flex) and for weaver John Bridges (who lived at the Easter Kirkstyle). In 1716 his ‘servitor’ John ‘Roucastle’ was one of the people who the weavers complained were using their assigned seats in St. Mary’s; this John could have been a close relative. He could be the Walter who witnessed a baptism for Richard Miles in 1705. It is possible that he was the Walter, who, along with Robert, leased part of the Kirklands of Hawick in 1692. He is probably the Walter ‘att ye Kirkstyle of Hawick’ whose nephew John married Bessie Paterson in 1719. Bailie Walter (1729–c.1795) son of John and Bessie Paterson. He was a baker of Hawick who was a Magistrate during the dispute over the Division of the Common, and served through the 1750s and 1760s. He witnessed a baptism for carrier Walter Henderson and Margaret Ruecastle (probably his sister) in 1757, for clockmaker Walter Freeman in 1758 and for shoemaker Robert Oliver in 1759. In 1769 he was appointed to the commission to discuss the Common with representatives of the Duke of Buccleuch. He witnessed a baptism for Thomas Turnbull (probably his brother-in-law) in 1768. He was witness for baptisms for Archibald Paterson in 1775, 1777, 1780 and 1781 and for James Dickson in 1777. He married Elizabeth Kelly (or ‘Bettie Kellie’) and had 13 children, including: Robert (b.1756); James (b.1758); Walter (b.1759); Charles and William (twins, b.1761); Barbara (b.1762), who married Robert Howieson; Walter (again, b.1766); Elizabeth (b.1768); Christian, who married Andrew Haddon (from Selkirk); and John, who was a Captain during the American Revolutionary War. The baptismal entry for the twins reads ‘Gemini’. The 1758 baptism was witnessed by John (probably his father or brother) and James Paterson (perhaps his uncle), the 1759 and 1766 ones by John (again) and Walter Henderson. William (13th/14th C.) recorded as ‘de Rucastel’ when he swore allegiance to Edward I of England in the Ragman Rolls of 1296. His seal was oval, showing a figure with a branch in the right hand, a scroll in the left, and a kneeling figure on the left, with the name ‘S’WILL ’I D’RUCASTELE’. He is also recorded receiving a pension from King Robert the Bruce in the early 1300s. Whether he had a direct connection with the Hawick family of 3 centuries later is unknown. William (17th C.) Councillor who signed the 1640 ‘Act of Bailies and Council’. He is also mentioned in a Magistrates court case of 1642 when Thomas Oliver is accused of using irreverent language towards him, particularly calling him ‘man-sworn’. He is probably the William who was elected to the Council in 1648. He is probably the William who was Bailie in the 1650s. He is probably the William who witnessed a baptism for Robert Scott in 1652. He is probably also the William recorded as one of the owners of West Mains in 1663. He could be the William who was married to Marion Scott and had several children in Hawick, including William (b.1639), Margaret (b.1643), Marion (b.1643), Walter (b.1646), Robert (b.1648), Adam (b.1650) and James (b.1652). The witnesses in 1648 were Robert Deans and James Scott (who may have been related to his wife). William (b.1650) born in Hawick, he married Janet (or ‘Jenet’) Richardson in 1674. Their children included Marion (b.1669), Janet (b.1671), Walter (b.1674), Isobel (b.1675), William (b.1677) and Francis (b.1678). The witnesses in 1671 were Robert Dickson and William Purdom. William (b.1761) son of Walter and Elizabeth Kelly and twin of Charles. He is probably the William from Hawick recorded in a legal matter in Selkirk in 1791 (also spelled ‘Reucastle’, ‘Rewcassell’, ‘Rewcastel’, ‘Rowcastle’, ‘Rewcastell’, ‘Rowcastill’, ‘Rowcastle’, ‘Rucastle’, ‘Rucastle’ and other variants in earlier documents).

Ruecastle Burn (roo-kaw-sul-burn) n. stream that rises on the western side of the Dumon and flows in a roughly north-western direction, passing the hamlet of Ruecastle to join the Knowesouth Burn and eventually the Teviot. At Worm Rig there are remains of ancient earthworks. Near Knowesouth is Ladies’ Well.

the Ruecastles (thu-roo-kaw-sulz) n. family that was prominent in Hawick in the 17th and 18th centuries, but then entirely disappeared. The surname surely derives from the area of Ruecastle in Bedrule Parish. William ‘de Rucastel’ is listed in the Ragman Rolls of 1296 and had a pension from Robert the Bruce. The eponymous lands were in other hands by the mid-15th century, but there are no instances of the name until ‘Rawcastill’ appears as a landowner on Hawick’s 1537 Charter. Then Thomas, Margaret, Agnes and Nicholas Ruecastle were married in Hexham in 1581, 1586, 1590 and 1596, respectively. The Hawick branch is recorded continuously from the 1630s, and furnished many Magistrates, Councillors and Elders. They were probably all from a single local male ancestor. It seems likely that the Northumbrian branch was also related, however some of the occurrences further afield may have an entirely different origin. There is a vast range of spellings in early records of the name. Modern variants include ‘Rowcastle’, ‘Rewcassell’ and ‘Reucastle’.

the Ruecastle Tenement (thu-roo-kaw-sul-te-ne-min’) n. former popular name for the building at 7 High Street, before the British Linen Bank purchased the land in 1862 and rebuilt on it. It was built around 1690, and was a 3 storey construction. The Ruecastle family, which provided several Hawick Bailies, had lived there for 3 generations. It can be seen in an 1860 photograph, showing the shops of W. Douglas, saddler, J. Kemp, cooper and Wm. Rutherford on the ground floor. It was demolished in 1861.

ruefi (roo-fi) adj., poet. rueful – ‘He sees that sae will be the case, An’ wi’ a lang-drawn ruefu’ face’ [RDW], ‘. . . an’ saufes sic as be o’ ane rewfu’ speerit’ [HSR], ‘. . . I wull be rewfu’ for my sin’ [HSR] (there are spelling variants).

ruffin (ru-fin) n., arch. an encore, ovation – ‘Ruff um in! Gie (or gae) um a ruff-in!’ [ECS] (also written ‘ruff-in’).

the Rufus Trophy (thu-roo-fis-trö-fe) n. trophy competed for at the Common Riding race meeting. It was first raced for in 1934, replacing the Medway Cup, which had been won outright (after 3 victories) by ex-Cornet Ian Macaggart on Rufus. The first winner was the same rider on his horse Rufus! It was won outright and replaced by the Horneshole Stakes in 1950.

Rufy (ru-fe) n. John (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 as ‘Johannem ruffy’ at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. Alexander Weens of that Ilk failed to produce him to answer to the murders of John and James Jackson. He was declared as a fugitive and his goods escheated to the King. Patrick (15th/16th C.) tenant in Rutherford. He was recorded as a fugitive in 1502, this being for the murder of John and James Jackson. William Douglas of Cavers dealt with his escheated goods. He was presumably related to Thomas who was also put to the horn for the same crime. Thomas (15th C.) member of the ‘retour of inquest’ in 1438 for Ker of Altonburn. He must have been a prominent Roxburghshire Laird of the time. However, it is unknown where exactly he was from.
or whether his surname was a variant of something else. Thomas (15th/16th C.) recorded at the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh in 1502. Adam, brother of William Douglas of Cavers, failed to enter him into his part in the murder of John and James Jackson. He was declared as a fugitive and his goods forfeited.

rug (rug) v., arch. to tug, pull roughly, plunder, spoil – ‘When frae temptation bolted snug, Wi’ M’Givelry [JoHa], `Swearin’ an’ tearin’, they rug an’ they rive, Wha to be foremost wi’ Meggie M’Givelry’ [JoHa], ‘...And boulevards o’ blankets ruggin’ and ravin’’ [DH].

rug an rive (rug-in-riv) v., arch. to tug, tear, pull at with great force or persistence – ‘...fell upon the sd. bayleya, rugged and raved the hair of his head ...’ [BR], ‘Swearin’ an’ tearin’, they rug an’ they rive, Wha to be foremost wi’ Meggie M’Givelry’ [JoHa], ‘...And boulevards o’ blankets ruggin’ and ravin’’ [DH].

rugby (rug-bee) n. a religion practised by many people in Hawick, with its main church at the foot of Mansfield Road. It was first introduced only in 1872, so for hundreds of years before that Teries must have had little to cheer about! The game was introduced locally when the Cricket Club decided to purchase a ball for the younger players to exercise with in the winter months. The club itself was formed in December 1873, with Robert Michie as Captain. The first organised game was against Langholm in 1874. George Wilson was a mainstay of the early committee, which was reorganised in 1885. At that time ‘Hawick’ (playing at the Volunteer) and ‘Hawick and Wilton’ (playing at the cricket field) were formed separately. They played matches against each other and the St. Cuthbert’s team for a few years, but by 1892 only ‘Hawick Football Club’ survived. Although the official game started only in the late 19th century, the local tradition of ‘Baa’ games goes back probably several centuries, and there is a description of a game (‘the pledges’) played by youths in the 18th century, which bears some striking similarities, although without the ball (often ‘the rugby’).

ruggit (ru-gi’, -gee’) pp., arch. tugged, pulled roughly – ‘...saying that he maliciously and unreverently rackt and ruggit her from her said seat’ [Ash1639], ‘How the jockies in their fury Rave an’ ruggit’ [RH].

ruggy (ru-gi) adj., arch. tangled, knotted, difficult to comb – ‘...wui a toozy, taaty heed that wad he richt an ruggy ti redd’ [ECS].

Ruickbie (rik-, rook-bee) n. James ‘Jamie’ or ‘Reubie’ (c.1757-1829) born in Innerleithen, he lived much of his life in and around Hawick. The identity of his parents is unknown, but either his father or uncle was an earlier James of whom a story is told of how he used to go to the Pirn plantation to preach loudly to himself, with the Laird there overhearing him one day and saying ‘Man, Jamie, ...ye should mind that the Lord’s no deef’. He was a miller to trade, being the assistant at Nisbet Mill and then working at Newmill. After this he became a toll-keeper, at Haremoss (for a year), then Colterscleuch (for 12 years), then at Langholm and finally at the West-End toll-bar in Hawick. Entirely self-taught, he wrote a good deal of poetry, and also played the fiddle. He settled in Hawick as landlord of the Harrow Inn (at 12 High Street), where he enjoyed the friendship of other more distinguished writers. He belonged to the Burgher (East End) congregation in Hawick and started a Sunday School at Newmill. He was also listed as a volunteer in 1803. He would recount a tale of a girl from Innerleithen who was carried away by the fairies and later turned up in Plora Wood after prayers offered by 7 ministers; he claims to have known this girl personally when she was an old lady and he was a boy. He was one of the earliest local poets to publish his work, some of it in dialect. An 8-page pamphlet of his, ‘An Elegy on the death of Whisky’ was printed in Hawick by Robert Armstrong in 1801. His 3 published collections are ‘Way-side Cottager, consisting of pieces in prose and verse’ (1807, while he was still at Colterscleuch), ‘Poems, chiefly in the Scottish dialect’ (1815, while he was at the Harrow Inn), and ‘Poems’ (1826). This last volume contained tributes from some of his contemporaries. A few of his poems were quite popular locally, particularly ‘The Bottomless Pit, or the Lawyer Outwitted’ and ‘The Vulture and Raven or the Dinner Ar rested’. He also wrote some lines about his contemporary, James Hogg (of ‘Teribus’). He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘ Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. His prose pieces include attacks on cruelty to animals and on the slave trade, complaints about drunkenness and a tribute to peace. He described himself as ‘diminutive, thin-visaged, sawlow-complexioned’ and ‘clothed in a ragged great coat, a snuffy-breasted doublet, and a sea-green cap’ with a cheek bone ‘best adapted to whet razors on!’ He married Margaret Govenlock in 1578 and their daughter Margaret married Robert Govenlock of Mosspaul Hotel. The first Mrs. Ruickbie may have died in 1797. He probably later married Jean (or Jane) Wilson, who died in 1836 and their children included Alexander. There seems to be uncertainty about whether he died in 1828 or 1829. He is buried at St. Mary’s, although the grave appears to have been unmarked. A portrait of him exists, painted when he was about 50, and the Museum has at least one of his original manuscripts. Robert Murray wrote an account of his life in 1864 – ‘Farewell, then, Old Bard! I have learned by the fate That goodness and genius conjoined cannot save From neglect the possessor, but often await On Him scorn and contempt, till shut out by the grave’ [WiSp] (also written ‘Rucbie’ and variants; it is uncertain how his name would have been pronounced by his contemporaries, rû-bee also being possible).

ruif (rif) n. a roof – ‘what were ee daein up on yon ruif?’, ‘as long as ee bide under ma ruif, ee’ll dae is a say’, ‘... on ti bowkin lums an platchin cloots an ruifs an waas baith snitteect an rachtch ...’ [ECS], ‘The sklater cam ti sort the ruif’ [ECS], ‘... Rule (rool) n. Adam (12th/13th C.) recorded as ‘Adam Ruell of Stawelle’ in 1225. He was brother and heir of Richard and resigned the lands of Balmerino in Fife in favour of Queen Ermengarde (widow of William the Lion and mother of Alexander II). In the period 1211–33 he witnessed charters for St. Andrews Priory, where he is ‘ade de Rule clericis’. Adam ‘de Roule’ (13th/14th C.) signatory of the Ragman Rolls in 1296, along with ‘Allyn’, parson of the church of ‘Roule’ in Roxburghshire. Thomas of Rule was another signatory, so perhaps related. He gained lands at Molle (south of Morebattle) through marriage. About 1300 he granted some of these lands to the monks of Kelso Abbey, with witnesses including both Hugh and William ‘de Roule’. Probably the same Adam ‘de Rule’ was recorded (along with William) in a charter of Sprouston in 1320/1, and also witnessed a charter for lands in Lussenden at about the same time. He married Johanna, daughter and heiress of Sir Henry of Halyburton, and widow of Ralph Wyschard. Adam (14th C.) granted his lands of Altonburn to John ‘of Coupland’ in about 1354, with his name given as...
‘Adam de Roule’. 3 years later these lands passed to John Ker (who thus became the first Ker of Altonburn); witnesses to this deed included William of Gledstanes and William ‘de Roule’. He may have been the same as Adam of Yetholm, son of Alan of Rule. Adam (16th/17th C.) recorded as ‘Adam Roull in Abbotroul’ in the Currit Court of 1622 when Walter Kerr of Linton was found guilty of stealing 6 sheep from his land at Cossershell. Alan (13th C.) recorded in charters of the early 1200s, during the reign of Alexander II. He witnessed a charter for the nuns of Coldstream and also for a gift of half of the lands of ‘Eschirche’ (Ashkirk) to the Bishopric of Glasgow. In the period 1195–1205 he witnessed a marriage contract for Philip de Valognes, with other Roxburghshire men also listed. He appears to have at this time been an English subject. He also witnessed an agreement between Henry of Ashkirk and Henry’s brother Alexander some time before 1249. Alan ‘of Roule’ (13th/14th C.) possibly the same man as the parson of the church at Rule who signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296. In 1296 his wife Alicia was forced to give up her dower lands in ‘Dovanby’ in England; this was part of a long list of followers of John Baliol who were thus ordered by Edward I. In 1317 he granted his ‘manor of Roule with Neyfs’ to the Kers. Ellen (15th/16th C.) recorded in charters of the period 1195–1205 he witnessed a marriage contract for Philip de Valognes, with other Roxburghshire men also listed. He appears to have at this time been an English subject. He also witnessed an agreement between Henry of Ashkirk and Henry’s brother Alexander some time before 1249. Alan ‘of Roulc’ (13th/14th C.) possibly the same man as the parson of the church at Rule who signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296. In 1296 his wife Alicia was forced to give up her dower lands in ‘Dovanby’ in England; this was part of a long list of followers of John Baliol who were thus ordered by Edward I. In 1317 he granted his ‘manor of Roule with Neyfs and their sequals’ to Adam of Yetham. This may have been his son Adam of Rule, who granted the lands of Altonburn (near Yetholm) to the Kers. Alison (15th/16th C.) wife of Sir William Ogilvie of Strathearn, who was Lord High Treasurer of Scotland. In 1507 they were granted the Barony of Strathearn, it is said because she was the first to inform the King of the birth of a son by his wife Margaret Tudor. She was also named along with her husband in several other charters in the period 1508–13. She appears to have been a member of the court and friend of the Queen. She died before her husband, and they had only one child, John. It is unclear how she was related to other Rules. Andrew of Primsiede (d.bef. 1439) owner of significant lands in the Barony of Plenderleith. It is unclear how he was related to other Rules, but it seems likely he was a descendant of Alan of Rule. He borrowed £100 from Andrew Ker of ‘Aldtonburne’ (Attonburn, near Yetholm, which had been acquired from the Rules in the previous century) in 1430 and let lands in Primsiede to him in the meantime, the money to be repaid at St. Mary’s in Hawick (there is a suggestion that the original date of this lease may have been 1413). In 1430 he sold ‘ten husbandlands of the Maynis’ in Primsiede to Andrew Ker, with the permission of his son George, this being confirmed in 1432 by Archibald, Earl of Douglas. He resigned his lands to George, his son and heir, in 1432. George, married Margaret, daughter of Andrew Ker of Altonburn and Cessford. However, George must have died before him, and he had no other surviving sons, because his 4 daughters became co-heiresses of his lands of Hownam, Plenderleith and Hyndhope. In 1439/40 Andrew Ker acquired some of his lands from his daughters Marjorie, Isabella, Janet and Ellen. In 1443 the Mains of Hownam, and lands of Plenderleith and Hyndhope, which had belonged to the 4 co-heiresses, passed to Andrew Ker. Andrew ‘Dan’, (d.1918) 3rd son of Robert and Jane, grandson of John, Inspector of Poor, and nephew of Private Harry. He was born in Hawick and joined the 1/4th Battalion K.O.S.B. He was awarded the Military Medal, General Service Medal and Victory Medal and was killed in action near the end of WWI. His name is recorded on the Vis-en-Artois Memorial. Bernard (14th C.) recorded as ‘de Roule’ in 1364 when he resigned his lands of ‘Foucroul’ (now ‘Folla Rule’) in Aberdeenshire. Brian (15th/16th C.) listed as ‘Fiftelar’, i.e. probably a fife player, at the Scottish court in 1506. His name is recorded as ‘Bryane Roule’. Elizabeth ‘Bessie’ (17th C.) cottar at Appletreehall according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Ellen (15th C.) daughter of Andrew. She was one of 4 co-heiresses of the lands of Hownam Mains, Plenderleith and hyndhope, along with Marjory, Isabella and Janet. In 1439 she is ‘Elena Roule of Prymside’ when she appointed her husband Thomas Young, along with Stephen Scot, Thomas Gledstains and other as procurators when she resigned her part of Primsiede into the hands of the superior, Archibald, Earl of Douglas. The sisters’ lands of Primsiede were granted to Andrew Ker of Altonburn in 1439, and the other charters transferring their lands to the Kers followed in 1443 and 1454/5. George (d.bef. 1440) son of Andrew of Primsiede. His father resigned his lands of Primsiede to him in 1432. He married Margaret, daughter of Andrew Ker of Altonburn (and Cessford). Ker gained the lands of Primsiede from Andrew Rule’s daughters in 1439/40, suggesting that both father and son were deceased by then. George (15th C.) recorded as witness to charter by Alexander, Duke of Albany in the period 1470–78. John ‘Roule’ was also a witness, suggesting they were related. He is probably the same man as George of Edmondsfeld. Perhaps the same George was Bailie in that part for David Ranton of Billy (in Haddingtonshire) in 1478, with his brothers Patrick and John as witnesses. George ‘of Edmondisdfield’ (15th C.) recorded in 1489–90 when he was involved in a court case with Archbald, Earl of Angus, relating to the lands of Bonkle. He was probably related to Andrew of Primside. He was appointed by the 5th Earl of Angus as Bailie of the Barony of Bonkle, but later ejected from this office. There was an inquest for his son George inheriting Edmondisdfield in 1505. George (16th C.) minstrel appointed by the Burgh of Selkirk in 1537. Perhaps the same George witnessed a transaction in Selkirk in 1539. George (16th C.) witness to a document of the Riddells of that Ilk in 1551. George (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1798 he married Elizabeth Nichol, who was also from Hawick. Their children included: John (b.1799); Margaret (b.1801); Walter (b.1803), carter in Hawick; Thomas (b.1806); Elizabeth (b.1810), who married Alexander Pringle Scott; George (b.1815): Jane (b.1818); and Isabel (b.1821). George (b.1815) son of George and Elizabeth Nichol. He was partner in Rule & Leyden, dyers of Teviotdale. He died at sea when the S.S. Ivernia was torpedoed and sunk off the coast of Greece. His name is recorded on the Mikra Memorial. Henry (12th/13th C.) recorded as ‘de Reuel’ in 1188 when he was witness to several benefactions of William the Lion to the monastery of Arbroath. He was granted the lands of ‘Cultrach’, which included Balmerino, in Fife. He was present at a court in Kinghorn in 1204. He must have been directly related to Richard (possibly his son) who is also recorded as witness in a similar period. He may have married Margaret, daughter of Orm of Abernethy. Hugh (13th C.) recorded as ‘Hugo Rouel’ in 1260 when he was listed as a master of the hospital of St. John of Jerusalem. Hugh (13th/14th C.) recorded as ‘Hugonis de Roule’ in 1320/1 when his seal was attached to a charter of Sprouston. Adam and William are also mentioned in the charter, and so they were surely all related. Humphrey (16th C.) recorded as ‘Umphra Rewll’ in a long remission for any past crimes for men under the superiority of Lord Maxwell. Given the others with whom he is listed, he probably lived near Langholm. Isabella (15th C.) daughter of Andrew. She was one of 4 co-heiresses of the lands of Hownam Mains, Plenderleith and Hyndhope, along with Marjorie, Janet and Ellen. They resigned their lands to the superiors, and they were then granted to Andrew Ker of Altonburn in 1443 and 1454/5. She was not named as a co-heiress in 1439, suggesting she was deceased by then. James (15th/16th C.) recorded as ‘Jacobo Rowle’ in 1526 when he was a witness for a document for Trinity Collegiate Church in Edinburgh. He was ‘James Rowill’ in another in 1530, and also for others in 1531. He may be the ‘Jacobo Roul’ when he witnessed a sasine for the baronies of Lugton and Langnewton in 1522. James (16th C.) recorded as ‘Roull’ when he was a tenant of Kelso Abbey in 1567. James (17th/18th C.) herd in Whitslade. In 1698 in Ashkirk Parish he married Janet, daughter of James Jackson, cottar in Dimpleknowe. Their daughter Bessie was baptised in 1699. Janet (15th C.) daughter of Andrew. She was one of 4 co-heiresses of the lands of Hownam Mains, Plenderleith and Hyndhope, along with Marjory, Isabella and Ellen. Their are documents transferring their lands to Andrew Ker of Altonburn in 1439, 1443 and 1454/5. Her name is given as ‘Janet of Roule’. John (14th C.) recorded as witness to a ‘quitclaim by Robert de Colleyll’ to Roger of Alton, regarding revenue of lands for Kelso Abbey, in 1328. His name appears as ‘Johne de Roule’. He could be the John whose son William was recorded in 1369. John (15th C.) recorded as a priest in the King’s household in 1468. He was also recorded as a Prebyter in the Exchequer Rolls of 1468. Probably the same John (along with George) was witness to charters by Alexander, Duke of Albany in the period 1470–78, and was Steward of Alexander, Duke of Albany in 1479. He may be the same ‘John Laird of Rule’ listed among a set of Scottish ecclesiastics appointed as ambassadors for appeasing the truce on the Border. And in 1476 there is a summons for ‘John of Roule’ and others for stealing horses from Sir John of Swinton; there is a confirmation of this in 1477. He may also be the ‘John Roule’ who witnessed a document relating to Home of Crailing in 1479. John (16th C.) witness in 1523/4 to a charter of his sister Margaret for lands in Linlithgowshire. Another witness was James Ramsay, Prebendary of Corstorphine. This establishes a connection with Corstorphine, where the poet ‘Gentill Roull of Corstorphine’ had his praises sung by William Dunbar a generation earlier. Perhaps the same John was witness to a document of Kirkintilloch Church in 1523. Sir John (16th C.) Prior of Pittenweem before 1526. He was an ally of Cardinal Beaton. He had at least 4 sons, John, James, William and Ninian. John (16th C.) tenant of Newtown in Roxburghshire, recorded in 1531. John (16th C.) signatory of the band of Dunfries in 1570. John (17th C.) resident of Roberton Parish, when it contained Hassendean. He married Elspeth Nichol and their children included: Agnes (b.1671), an unnamed son (b.1671) and Stephen (b.1675), all baptised in Hawick Parish; and Bessie (b.1684) and John (b.1686), baptised in Roberton Parish. The witnesses in 1686 were James Turnbull and James Veitch. John (17th C.) listed as resident at Todshaw in Wilton Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He could be the John who was shepherd at Mervinslaw in 1709. Alexander, son of a shepherd at Mervinslaw (with the father’s name blank) was baptised in Wilton Parish in 1706. John (17th C.) listed at Chesters among the poor of Southdean Parish in the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. John (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Earlside in 1742 when his daughter Janet was baptised. His children included: John (b.1731); James (b.1739); and Janet (b.1742). John (18th C.) wright in Nether Boshie. His son John was baptised in 1788. John (19th C.) Inspector of Poor, Collector of Poor Rates and Clerk to the Burial Ground for Hawick Parish towards the end of the 1800s. He wrote the poem ‘Song by a Callant Abroad’. He was also President of the Hawick Co-op in 1868, and probably wrote the history published in 1889. It seems likely that the same John Rule was also editor and part owner of the Hawick Express in the late 19th century and who was recorded as ‘Editor’ at 72 High Street in 1875. His children included Harry (killed at sea in 1917) and Robert. Margaret (b.1801/2) grocer on the Backdamgate. In the 1851 census she was living with her sister Isabella, and was unmarried. She was listed as a shopkeeper on ‘Back Damgate’ in Slater’s 1852 directory. Marjory (15th C.) daughter of Andrew (possibly the oldest). She was one of 4 co-heiresses of the lands of Primside, Hownam Mains, Plenderleith and Hyndhope, along with Isabella, Janet and Ellen. They resigned their lands to the superiors, and they were then granted to Andrew Ker of Altonburn in 1439, 1443 and 1454/5. Martin (16th C.) recorded as ‘Roule’ when he was owner of a tenement in the ‘Walkargait’ in Jedburgh in 1574. Patrick (15th/16th C.) recorded as Provost of the Collegiate Church of St. Nicholas of Dalkeith in 1499. He was also Provost of Dalkeith in 1478 when he witnessed a declaration by his brother George, Bailie for David Ranton of Billy. Another brother, John, was also witness. Patrick (15th/16th C.) recorded as serving in the King’s spicery in 1499 and 1500. He was paid his fee according to the Exchequer Rolls, with his surname written ‘Roule’. Probably the same ‘Pait Roule’ was recorded in 1497 when money was sent from the King’s Treasury to him, lying sick in Ayr. Patrick (15th/16th C.) recorded in a list of owners of crofts and rigs in Selkirk in about 1529. His name appears as ‘Pait of Roull’. James and ‘Philes’ were also listed. Richard (12th/13th C.) probably son of Henry and Margaret Abernethy. He is recorded being present at the court of King William at Alyth in 1180, where his name is ‘Reuel’. He witnessed an Athole charter in the late 1190s. In 1205 he was witness to a charter of William the Lion at Forfar. He also witnessed several gifts of the King to the monastery of Arbroath in the period 1188–1214. Henry, who is a witness at about the same time may have been his son or other close relative. Perhaps the same Richard is recorded in charters during the reign of Alexander II, i.e. 1214–49. This was at the same time as Alan and Thomas of Rule. Adam, brother and heir of Richard, is recorded in 1225. Richard (13th C.) recorded in connection with the lands of Bunkle, Berwickshire, in 1247. Richard (13th C.) witness to a renewal of lands in Mow granted to Melrose Abbey by Richard of Heiton in the period 1269–89; he is listed as ‘Ricardo de Rule’. In the period 1270–90 he confirmed a grant of a 20-shilling land in Hownam to Melrose Abbey. It is unclear how he was related to other Rules. Richard (15th/16th C.) recorded as ‘Roull’ when he had remission for wheat ‘fermes’ in 1496 for the lands of ‘Osanisden’. Robert (13th C.) recorded as ‘de Ryhull’ in about 1240 when along with his wife Christiana, he held half of the lands of North Middleton in Northumberland. Robert (14th C.) recorded in an English document of 1391 as ‘a rebel and traitor’ when his lands of ‘Promset in Tevydale’ (Primside) were forfeited to Thomas ‘Sparrowe, late prisoner with the Scots’. Robert (15th C.) Chaplain of the church of St. Nicholas in Aberdeen in 1444. He is recorded as Chaplain there in 1468. Robert (15th C.) recorded in a Berwickshire inquest in 1464. Robert (15th/16th C.) tenant in Newcastle. In 1502 in Jedburgh he was surety for Andrew Storie, who was also a resident of Newcastle, when they were fined for non-appearance. Robert (17th C.) Border minstrel who was supposedly slain by William Henderson of Priesthaugh near Allanhaugh in 1627, as immortalised in the ballad ‘Rattlin Roarin Willie’. It is possible he was connected with George, who is recorded as a minstrel hired by the Burgh of Selkirk in 1537. Thomas (13th C.) recorded in charters between 1214 and 1249. For example he was witness to Petronella, daughter of Adam Herring of Minto, when she granted land in the Borthwick to Melrose Abbey. He may be the same Thomas of Rule recorded on a jury in Northumberland in 1231 and as a witness of a grant to the canons of Kirkham in Northumberland in 1256. Thomas (13th C.) paid homage to Edward I by signing the Ragman Rolls of 1296. Another signatory was Adam of Rule, as well as William ‘de Roule’. Thomas (14th C.) recorded as Rector of Cambuslang (Lanarkshire) in 1329. Thomas (14th C.) recorded as ‘Rouk’ (possibly just a transcription error) during the reign of David II, 1329–71. He resigned his lands of Butland or Buteland in the Sheriffdom of Edinburgh to James Douglas of Strathbok. He may also have resigned his lands of ‘Littl-Rulwod’. Possibly the same Thomas ‘of Roulwode’ forfeited certain lands in the Barony of Cavers in 1335/6. Perhaps the same Thomas witnessed the grant of the Forest of Ettrick to John Ker in 1358 and was juror at Roxburgh in 1361. And he may be the Thomas who was on an English jury in 1367 deciding which lands had been taken from English subjects by Scotsmen. Thomas (14th C.) witness to a court case in Dundee in 1348. He is recorded as ‘Ruwell’. Thomas (14th/15th C.) recorded as a Burgess of Aberdeen in 1390, and as a Bailie in the period 1406–35. He was Provost of Aberdeen in 1417. In 1424 he was still recorded as ‘of Rowle’ when witness to a charter in Aberdeenshire. Thomas (15th C.) eminent ecclesiastic, contemporary with the Provost of Aberdeen of the same name. In 1429 he became a Canon of Glasgow Diocese. In the period 1426–32 he was annually the ambassador to England, designated Chaplain to the King of Scots. In 1429 he was also one of the sub-commissioners appointed to settle conditions for keeping order on the Border. In 1438 he was recorded as Chancellor of Glasgow Diocese. Thomas (16th C.) mentioned in a Northumberland record of 1523. Thomas (16th C.) listed among tenants of Newton in Bedrule in 1531. Thomas (18th C.) resident in Town-o-Rule in 1788 when his daughter Helen was baptised in Hobkirk Parish. Waldeve (12th C.) witness to a charter of Ramulph de Soulis to Jedburgh Abbey in the late 1100s, recorded as ‘Waldevo de Rula’. His name is also translated as ‘Waltheof’. Walter (14th C.) Precentor of Glasgow Diocese mentioned in the period 1321–33. For example he witnessed the document of 1329 where the Bishop of Glasgow confirmed the founding of a chantry at Roxburgh Church by Roger of Alton. He was surely directly related to other early ‘de Rules’. Walter (14th C.) recorded as ‘de Roull’ in 1387 when he was granted a Canony of Glasgow by Pope Clement VII. He already held a position at the church of Tarbolton. Walter (b.1803) carter in Hawick, son of George. In 1861 he was living at 2 Allars Crescent with his mother Elizabeth, brother John and sister Elizabeth (widow of Alexander Pringle Scott). William (13th/14th C.) witness to a grant by Adam ‘de Roule’ of lands of Molle to Kelso Abbey about 1300. Another witness was Hugh ‘de Roule’, hence all 3 are likely to have been closely related. He may also be the William ‘de Roule’ who signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296. In 1302 ‘William de Rue’ was King’s Clerk to Edward I at Roxburgh. About 1304 he is mentioned in a charter of donation granted by Robert ‘Wischart’, Bishop of Glasgow. This refers to land ‘of Bromilaw’ bordering his lands. He is probably the William ‘de Rule’ who is recorded (along with Adam) in a charter of Sprouston in 1320/1. It has been suggested by some that he may be the same as the William who became the first Turnbull. William (14th C.) recorded as ‘de Roule’ in 1357/8 when he was witness for the lands of Altonburn passing to John Ker, with William of Gledstones, James of Lorraine and Alexander of Flex being other witnesses. The lands had passed from Adam of Rule in 1354, so this may have been a relative. He also witnessed a further charter of related lands in 1358, passing from William of ‘Blakdene’. In 1369 he was ‘Willelmi de Roweile’, son of John, when he resigned lands in ‘Hunedoun’ to Melrose Abbey. William (15th C.) recorded as witness to charters in Edinburgh in 1463 and 1471. William (b.c.1805) born in Westerkirk, he was a shoemaker living at 5 Round Close in 1841, 1851 and 1861 and still there in 1875. By 1861 he was employing 2 men. His wife was Margaret from Langholm. Their children included Alexander, Hendry, William, John, twins Thomas and Walter, and Mary (spelled ‘Reule’, ‘Reull’, ‘Roul’, ‘Roule’, ‘Roull’, ‘Ruile’, ‘Rowle’, etc. in early records).

the Rule (thu-rool, -rowf) n. popular name for Rule Witter – ‘Between ezlar banks, that frightful scowl, Fring’d with gray hazel, roars the mining Roull ... ’ [JL], ‘On these sweet scenes I love to ponder, And each fair spot in memory see; So dear must be, where’er I wander, The valley of the Rule to me’ [FMC], ‘... As he crossed the Rule, girth deep at the ford, A rider rose dark from the haugh and roared With a voice that shivered the still night air And startled the wild fowl, ‘Who goes there?’’ [WHO].

Rule Hervey (rool-her-vee) n. earliest known name for the lands of Abbotrule Parish, first recorded in about 1165 in a charter to Jedburgh Abbey by William the Lion. These lands were granted to the monks of Jedburgh Abbey in exchange for a ‘ten pound’ land in ‘Hardinghestorn’ (Northamptonshire). The name was changed sometime after the parish was granted to Jedburgh Abbey. The origin of the earlier name is unknown, but presumably distinguished it from ‘Rule Bethoc’, i.e. Bedrule (it occurs as ‘Rulam Herevei’ in about 1165).

Rulehaugh (rool-hawch) n. area of flat land near the mouth of the Rule Water, possibly lower down in former times before the course of the rivers altered. In 1279 Alexander III confirmed a grant by John Comyn of Bedrule of the lands of ‘Rulehalch’ to the Diocese of Glasgow. In 1395 there was a duel there when Sir William Inglis (then of Branxholme) was challenged by Thomas Struthers (an Englishman), with Archibald Douglas and Sir Henry Percy as judges. Struthers was killed in single combat. It is possible this was the same as the Deadhaugh, where Turnballs supplanted to James IV in 1510. About 80 sheep from here were swept away during the flood of 1846 (it is ‘Rulehalch’ on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

the Rules (thu-roolz) n. once important family whose name was connected with the area of Rulewater. Adam and Thomas ‘de Roulle’ from Roxburghshire signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296. They held the lands of Altonburn, Primside, Plenderleith and Hyndhope, all of which were disposed of by 4 co-heiresses around 1440. There were also Rules in Aberdeenshire from early times. It is unclear what fraction of the world’s Rules are descended from this local family.

Rule’s Land (roolz-lawud) n. former name for lands in Rucastle in the Parish of Bedrule. They were feued by Rev. Joseph Tennant of Bedrule from Thomas Hamilton in 1632 (called ‘Roullis land’).

Ruletoon (rool-til, -toon) n. Ruletoon, former name for farms and lands in Hobkirk Parish, at Town-o-Rule. Both Ruletownhead and Ruletownfoot were recorded in the 17th century. In 1694 James Grieve paid tax for 4 hearths there ‘for himself & cottars’, with William Turnbull also a cottar there.

Ruletoonfit (rool-til-fi’, -toon-) n. Ruletownfoot, former which was once part of the Abbotrule estate. Adam Turnbull and Beatrix Lorraine were there in 1643, each with lands valued at £10. On the 1694 Hearth Tax records, John Lorraine was listed there, with Andrew Mathew and William Blaikie as cottars. Separately Thomas Turnbull and Thomas Scott are listed as tenants there in the Hearth Tax rolls, with James Oliver, James Wilkie and James Turnbull being cottars there, and Adam Sharp ‘deficient’ in not paying the tax (it is ‘Routonfitt’ in 1643, ‘Routonfute’ in 1662 and ‘Routounfooth’ in 1694).

Ruletoonheid (rool-til-heed, -toon-) n. Rule-townhead, former farm in Hobkirk Parish, once part of the Abbotrule estate. Adam and Walter Turnbull were tenants there in 1643, when it was valued at £140. It had the same value in 1678. It later became part of the Parish of Hobkirk. In the late 17th century part of it was owned by Helen Turnbull, along with West Fodderlee. In earlier times the farm seems to have been incorporated into West Fodderlee, the Grange and Bowatsyde. In 1788 it was owned by the trustees of George Dickson and valued at £96 11s. George Elliot was there in 1794 and John Walker in 1797, with James Dalgleish being shepherd in the same year. In 1811 it was listed (in 2 parts, split between Hobkirk and Southdean Parishes) along with ‘Bossithill’ and Burnkinford, among the possessions of Charles Kerr of Abbotrule, having a combined value of about £224 and previously being owned by George Dickson and George Elliot. By about 1874 it was owned by David Henderson, including a part formerly belonging to Walter Turnbull (valued at £96 11s). The tenant was Tom Brown in the mid-to-late 19th century, then passing to the Douglas family. Tom Douglas was owner in the early 20th century, when it was valued at about £300. It seems there was once also a corn mill here (also formerly written ‘Ruletoonhead’ and ‘Rule-town-head’, it was ‘Roull tunen-head’ and ‘Roultonhead’ in 1678).

Rulewater and its People (rool-wa-tur-and-its-pee-pul) n. book written by George Tancred of Weens, published in 1907. It contains a truly extraordinary number of anecdotes from the general area of the Rule valley, as Tancred systematically described the histories of all the major families of Hobkirk Parish, in addition to much of Bedrule and Southdean. Importantly, the book does not just focus on the histories of the ‘gentry’, but includes all social strata. A facsimile edition was published by Borders Regional Library in 1992.

Rule Witter (rool-wi'-ur) n. the Rule Water, a tributary of the Teviot, joining it from the south near Spittal-on-Rule. It is formed by the Wauchope, Harwood and Catlee Burns. The region gave rise to a surname, along with William Turnbull in 1296, may have been owner of these lands. Thomas ‘of Roulwode’ is recorded resigning some lands in the Barony of Cavers in 1335/6. It was later home to a local branch of the Gourlay family. Henry Gourlay granted the lands to his son John in 1380, confirmed in 1390.

Rum an milk (rum-in-milk) n. traditional Common Riding drink. The Drums and Fifes are given this as a reward after marching round the former tolls on the Friday morning. The origin and history are unclear, but it is said that one of the members of the Drums and Fifes was given (or asked for) milk with his rum to settle his stomach, since he was not feeling well; the drink caught on with the rest of the band, and then with Common Riding supporters in general. Runciman Runciman (run-see-nun) n. James (17th C.) smith in Raperlaw recorded at on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He paid tax for 2 hearths there. His name is written ‘Runicman’. He is probably the James who owned a ‘quarter of land’ in Nether Ancrum, valued at £13 6s 8d, listed as a former owner in 1788. Thomas (16th C.) recorded as witness to a document for the Routledges of Crook, witnessed in 1529/30 at Cavers Kirk. He must have been a local landowner, tenant or church official. He is an early example of this surname, which is recorded as ‘Runeman’. He may have been related to the earlier Patrick.

Patrick (15th C.) listed among the 24 Roxburghshire men, mostly associated of William Douglas of Cavers, who had remission in 1488/9 for supporting James III. His surname is recorded as ‘Rumsyman’. Walter ‘Wat’ (16th C.) tenant of Sir Walter Scott of Howpasy in the lands of Outersideig in 1569. Sir Walter acted as cautioner for his tenants at a meeting in Hawick, assuring that they would obey the laws of the Lord Regent. His name is recorded as ‘Watt Runeman’. Walter (18th C.) recorded as ‘Runchiman’ in 1686 when he married Janet ‘Reedford’ in Roberton Parish. Their son Thomas was born in 1687, with witnesses Thomas Robson and Thomas Hardie. Helen (who married John Douglas in Roberton in 1687) and Bessie (who married Thomas Hardie in the same year) were probably his sisters. He was probably a descendant of the earlier Wat (formerly ‘Runchiman’, ‘Runcia-man’, ‘Runeman’, ‘Rumsyman’, etc.).

rung (rung) n., arch. a staff, strong stick, cudgel, wheel-spoke – ‘...more much more primitive...than the sword...such as...ane rung’[BR], ‘...by striking her with ane rung, and breaking of her mistresses rocke when she was spinning there...’[BR1693], ‘I took my rung that I had flung Ayont the auld jambstane...’[WaD].

Russell (ru-sul) n. Alexander (1808/9–bef. 1851) from Ancrum, he was a gardener in Wilton. In 1851 he is listed as a gardener on Upper Damside, employing 2 men. His wife was Elizabeth and their children included Mary, Alexander, Robert and Jane. By 1861 his wife was a widow, living on Wellington Street. Rev. David (1783/4–1868) from Tollcross, he was a schoolteacher, and then was ordained at Colinsburgh Relief Church in Fife in 1811. He moved to Hawick in late 1812 to become the first minister of the new Relief (later Allars) Kirk. His son was the engineer, naval architect and mathematician John Scott Russell. In Hawick he re-married and had more children, and introduced one of the earliest Sunday Schools. Following ongoing dispute over his stipend he resigned in 1819 and later moved to Errol near Perth. He was unable to carry on his duties following some kind of ‘mental ailment’ in 1847. He seemed able to carry on in about 1849, but the same affliction returned by 1854, and he was ‘dead to the world’ for many years before his death. A photograph of him exists. Ella (d.2004) Hawick dressmaker. She worked for dressmakers W. & O. Marcus. It is said that Walter Marcus referred to her as ‘Alice’, since there were already too many Ellas working in the factory! After Marcus’ closed in 1964, she set up her own business at Loch Park, operating as ‘Alison Russell’, this running for about 20 years. In 1986 she married Heinz Melchert, whom she had met in his early days in Hawick, having settled after being a German prisoner of war. Frances, Countess Russell, see Frances Elliot. Francis (1814–95) son of Dr. James (Professor of Clinical Surgery at Edinburgh University) and Eleanor Oliver (daughter of William Oliver of Dinlabyre). He trained as a lawyer, was called to the bar in 1836 and in 1860 became Sheriff-Substitute of Roxburghshire, serving until 1885. He was a member of the Jedforest Club and lived at Jedbank until retiring back to Edinburgh. He married twice. George (15th/16th C.) resident of Fulton. In 1502 Matthew and Martin Oliver in Strange were allowed to compone for stealing 4 lambs and an ox from him. Rev. James (b.1808) son of Robert and Agnes Turnbull, who was from Hawick. He attended school at Yarrow, under the instruction of James Scott. He was minister at Yarrow and wrote ‘Reminiscences of Yarrow’ (1886), which contains anecdotes about many local people of the late 18th and early 19th centuries. He had a cousin, Robert Laidlaw from Philiphaugh. He married Janet Margaret Shand. His children included Robert and John Harvey Shand (1861–84). James ‘Jimmy’ (1867–1956) son of artist James, he is a social scientist born in Denholm and Rulewater until 1960, later splitting his time between Rulewater and Ireland. He graduated M.A. from St. Andrews and Ph.D. from Strathclyde and worked at the University of Ulster, specialising in issues related to children. He carried out survey research for several government agencies and other organisations, particularly in Northern Ireland. After retirement he carried out personalised funerals for people without church connections in the Edinburgh area. He wrote the words and music for the song ‘The Burn 'at Rins Throu' Binster’. He also wrote an article on ‘The Rulewater Foothunters’ for the Scots Magazine in 1987. In 1960 he married Heather Begg and had children Fiona Jane, Roisin Anne and Kevin. John (16th C.) farmer at Over Billerwell. His barn is mentioned in 1562 as part of the dispute over lands in the Barony of feu-Rule. John (18th C.) married Isabel Lillico in Kirktoun in 1748. John (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was recorded at Heap in 1772. In 1760 in Ashkirk Parish he married Elizabeth (or ‘Betty’) daughter of George Thorburn; she was sister of Jean Thorburn, who married John Anderson, farmer at Newton. Their children included: Helen (b.1761); Elizabeth (b.1764); John (b.1766); Thomas (b.1768); George (b.1771); Betty (b.1772); and possibly Isabella. The witnesses in 1772 were James Dryden and James Scott. Lord John (1792–1878) M.P. from 1813, he was a supporter of extending the franchise and granting religious equality, being one of the drafters of the Reform Bill. He served as Home Secretary, Secretary for War and the Colonies, and Leader of the House of Commons, before becoming Prime Minister in 1846–52 and again briefly in 1865–66. He was also made an Honorary Burgess of Hawick during a stay at Minto House in 1840. In 1841 he married the 2nd Earl of Minto’s daughter, Lady Francis Anna Maria. John Scott (1808–82) born in Parkhead, son of Rev. David, his mother (a Scott) dying at an early age. His father became minister of the Hawick Relief Kirk in 1812, where he remarried, and remained until 1819; thus the family must have spent more than 6 years in Hawick. The young John went on to become a naval engineer and architect. He is remembered as the discoverer of the ‘solitary wave’, the full significance of which was not explained and generalised until the 1960s; it gave rise to the mathematical concept of the ‘soliton’, which has diverse applications, such as in optics. Rev. Robert (1766–1847) born in Fife, one of a family of 11, he attended Edinburgh and St. Andrews Universities. He taught at a school briefly and was a private tutor for the Napiers at Merchiston Hall, near Falkirk. He was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of Linlithgow in 1788 and ordained as minister of Ettrick in early 1790. He was a regular visitor at Wilton Lodge, which his patron Lord Napier purchased; the room he used there was known as ‘the prophet’s chamber’. He moved to Yarrow in 1791, succeeding Dr. Cramond and remained there until he died. In 1805 he became Chaplain to the Lord High Commissioner of the General Assembly and obtained a D.D. from Edinburgh University in 1811. Rev. Campbell of Lilliesleaf referred to him (somewhat facetiously) as ‘the beauty of holiness’. He married Agnes Turnbull, who was from Hawick; she died in 1843. His son James succeeded him as minister of Yarrow and wrote ‘Reminiscences of Yarrow’ (1886). He also had another son Walter and a daughter who predeceased him. He was rarely ill, never spending a whole day in bed in his life, and not requiring a doctor until 3 days before his death. When he died he was ‘father of the Synod’. Robert (19th C.) tinsmith at 4 Bourtree Bank. He married Janet, daughter of jailor Michael Anderson. Their children were James A. (a plumber), Robert (an ironmonger) and George (a plumber, who emigrated to America). Rev. Thomas (1830/31–80) from Buckyvie, son of John, who was the minister there. He became the 6th minister of Allars Kirk in 1857. He moved to Albion Chapel, London in 1863, then to Forest Hill, Sydenham in 1870, although he was only there 2 years. In 1872 he ceased to be recognised as a minister of the U.P. Church. Rev. William Cuthbertson (1839–90) born in Coupar, Angus, son of schoolmaster John. He was educated in Edinburgh New College 1864–68, where he trained for the Free Church ministry. He was based at Lauder before being ordained as 3rd minister of Wolfelee Free Kirk in 1872. In 1878 he married Janet Calvert, daughter of George Scott (who was visiting her aunt and uncle in Lauder), postmaster at Mimico, Canada. They had 2 children: William Cuthbertson (1880–1941), born in Hobkirk, who trained as an engineer, joined the K.O.S.B. and died in Lasswade; and Janet (b.1881), born in Hobkirk. He came down with Bright’s disease and moved to Musselburgh for a change, but died after a few months there. Rev. Winning (19th/20th C.) appointed as assistant to Rev. David Hislop at Hawick Evangelical Union Kirk in 1894. Soon afterwards the church united with the Congregational Union. It is unclear exactly how long he remained in Hawick (formerly ‘Russel’).
Rutherford

Rutherford (ru-thur-furd, -ford) n. Adam of that Ilk (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1501 in relation to lands of 'Glenisland' in Roxburghshire for which he had a sasine. His name is given in the Exchequer Rolls as 'Afe Rutherford de eisdem', but it is unclear how he was related to other Rutherfords of that Ilk. Adam (15th/16th C.) son of George of Longnewton. In 1498 he was listed (along with his brother Gilbert, a cousin George and his 'brother's son' David) among Rutherfords and others who were declared rebels for the murder of Patrick Hepburn. He was also mentioned in 1502 when Alexander Laidlaw was convicted of associating with him, Thomas Rutherford and Thomas Grahamslaw. In 1510 he had letters of rehabilitation for his crimes after spending months in Edinburgh Castle. Adam (15th/16th C.) farmer of the lands of 'Hirdmanstoum', probably the same as 'Hermiston' in Littleasleaf Parish. In 1502 David Scott, called 'Lady', 'in Stirkshawis', had a remission for leading the 'Robsonis, Doddis, and Charlis, Englishmen' in a raid on his lands. This included stealing 5 horses and burning corn and houses there. He may be the Adam whose son James was killed at the Kirk of Hawick around 1502. Adam (16th C.) Burgess of Jedburgh who was appointed one of the temporary Sheriffs of Roxburgh in 1545 in order to officiate over the inheritance of James, son of Sir James Douglas of Cavers. Adam (17th C.) tenant in Bonchesterside. In 1684 he was among those proclaimed as fugitives for being Covenanters. Adam of Kidheugh (16th/17th C.) grandson of William and Kidheugh and probably son of Robert. In 1621 and his son John had a charter of Nether Crailing. In 1656 he gave a charter of lands in Bedrule to Thomas Rutherford of Whiteford. Andrew Ker of Altonburn of helping the English. In 1479 he had a sasine for Makerstoun and Grubet. He married Janet Rutherford of that Ilk. Their children included: John, who succeeded; Thomas of the Grange; and Andrew of Swinside, who died at Flodden, and whose daughter Margaret married her cousin (once removed) Sir Nicholas of Hundalee. There may be confusion between Andrew of Hunthill and Andrew of Hundalee. Andrew of Chatto and Hunthill (d.1529) son of George of Hunthill. He was the 3rd husband of Helen Rutherford, heiress of Rutherford, Wells and Edgerston. From her he inherited several lands, including the 'half merk land of Bethrourl' (i.e. Bedrule), which they sold to Andrew Ker of Ferniehirst. He may be the Andrew who had sasine for the lands of Swinside in 1506. In 1529 he had a charter for Capehope and other lands, along with his wife Helen. He died without issue and his brother John succeeded to Hunthill in late 1529. Andrew 'Dand' of Grange (16th C.) tenant in the Grange, in Abbotrule Parish. He may have been related to the slightly later George of the Grange. In 1541 he is recorded as tenant of half the lands of Hyndlee in Jedforest; his name appears there as 'Andree Ruthirfurde in Grange'. In 1581/2 his daughter Joanna received sasine of half of the lands of Todrig 'in full settlement of her terce, conjunct fee or liferent' from Walter Scott of Todrig. William of Abbotrule was a witness and hence probably related. Andrew (17th C.) recorded in 1652 when he witnessed a baptism in Hawick for John Brown. Andrew of Hundalee (c.1530–96) son of Sir Nicholas. His older brother George died a rebel. He signed the 'Band of Roxburgh' in 1573. He signed an agreement with other Rutherfords and Turnbuls in about 1578 (perhaps earlier), amnulling all former bonds and swearing allegiance to the Crown. Also in about 1578 he was involved in a bond between the Kers and Rutherfords. In 1578/9 there is mention of a feud between him (along with other Rutherfords, Douglas of Bonjedward and Turnbull of Bedrule) and the Kers of Cessford. In 1581 he was among Border Lairds who denounced their bonds with Archibald Douglas, Earl of Angus. He was among the Border Lairds summoned to appear before the Privy Council in 1583/4. He married Margaret, daughter of John Pringle of Smalhill in 1561. Their children included: John; Nicholas, who succeeded; and Andrew. However, it is stated in some family histories that he had no sons, and was succeeded by his brother Nicholas. Andrew of Hundalee (16th C.) son of Nicholas, whom he succeeded. He was ‘youngar of Hundoley’ in 1567 when ordered to remain in ward in Edinburgh; at the same time he and Robert Fraser of Overton were sureties for entering a servant of Fraser’s. He was also surety for Dand Davidson of Birnyrig. Along with his father and many other prominent Borderers, he signed a bond in 1571/2 to act against thieves. He was ‘youngar of Hundoley’ in 1572/3 when he swore allegiance to the Crown, with Richard of Edgerston as his surety (and apparently vice versa); he himself was surety for George of the Grange, as well as ‘Jock of the Knowe’. He married Christian, daughter of Thomas McDougall of Makerstoun. However, he had no issue, and Hundalee was eventually inherited by his sister Marie, who married Sir James Ker of Crailing, who became Lord Jedburgh. Andrew of Townhead (d.1674) stabbed James Douglas (brother of Sir William of Cavers) on their way to Jedburgh after dining together at Swanside. He subsequently tried to flee abroad, but was caught, tried and beheaded at Edinburgh Cross. He must have been related to other Rutherfords of Townhead and of the Hall. Andrew (17th C.) Hawick Town Clerk from 1670 until about 1673. Nothing else seems to be known about him. He was notary for the document drawn up (probably in 1672) for the Commission by the Town Council to discuss an equal division of the Common with the Earl of Queensberry. He was also listed as notary when he witnessed a baptism for John Chalmers in Harewood. He contributed a legacy to ‘poor lame soldiers’ and another to the University of Edinburgh. Andrew (17th/18th C.) recorded ‘in Rule’ in 1690 when listed among people owing money to the deceased Mark Turnbull (portioner in Fodderlee) and Bessie Kerr. Andrew (17th C.) listed at Swinnie among the poor of Southdean Parish in the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. Andrew (18th/19th C.) resident at Newcastleton, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Andrew (19th C.) farmer at Barnhills in the 1860s. Ann (18th C.) chambermaid at Midshiels in 1791, when she was working for Archibald Douglas. Archibald (15th C.) recorded in 1493 when George Turnbull of Hall-rule had remission for several crimes, including his slaughter. Perhaps the same Archibald is also mentioned when John Davidson in Minto was allowed to ‘compone’ for stealing 10 ewes from him. It is unclear how he might have been related to other Rutherfords. Archibald (d.1685) 4th son of John of Huntill. In 1670 he succeeded his brother Thomas in the lands and barony of Scraesburgh, otherwise known as Huntill, as well as Newlands and Linton in Peebleshire. He was recorded as owner of Huntill, Scraesburgh and Groundhousenook in 1678, valued at £1200. In 1680 he succeeded his brother Thomas as the 3rd Lord Rutherford and sat in Parliament as a peer. He died abroad, without issue, and was succeeded by his brother Robert. He was the basis for the Master of Ravenswood in Sir Walter Scott’s ‘Bride of Lammermuir’, the bride being based on his betrothed, Janet Dalrymple. His testament was registered with the Commissariot of France. He was created the 1st Lord Rutherford in 1661 and served as Governor of Dunkirk. In 1663 he was created the 1st and only Earl of Teviot. In that year there was an inventory made of his possessions (amounting to almost £200,000 Scots, as well as a will. He was mentioned several times in the diaries of Samuel Pepys. He died in Tangiers after being sent there to be Governor by Charles II. Having no issue, he had named Sir Thomas of Hunthill as his heir. Andrew of Edgerston (1646/7–1718) 2nd son of John. He succeeded to Edgerston in 1686, his elder brother John having already died. He was probably the Laird in 1694 when tax was paid on 7 hearths at his house at Edgerston. He contributed £200 to the Darien Scheme in 1695. He is probably the Laird of Edgerston who appears on a list of Commissioners of Supply for Roxburghshire in 1708. He died unmarried and the estates were inherited by his younger brother Thomas. He contributed a legacy to ‘poor lame soldiers’ and another to the University of Edinburgh. He was associated with the French service, where he became a Lieutenant General. He had 4 brothers, one of whom was a treasurer to the King of Spain. Coming to England after the restoration of Charles II, he was recommended by the King.
of Peebles in 1691. Bertie (17th C.) recording being ‘of the Wood’ in 1643 when his lands in Abbotrule Parish were valued at £20. It is unclear where this was. Caleb (1765–c.1831) son of Robert and Mary Simpson. He was apprenticed as a shoemaker, but gave up the trade to become Burgh Officer. He worked as the town crier and drummer as well as sheriff’s officer. He would also call public auctions etc. in the time before there were newspapers in Hawick. He roused the town with his drum during the False Alarm of 1804. He also acted as crier of races and games at the Common Riding, and was one of the Halberdiers. In addition he was annually the toastmaster at the King’s Ranting, and was paid extra for singing. He was well known as a trickster and wag, and for avoiding steady work at all costs. He used to repeat things like the Burgess Roll, adding amusing comments of his own. Due to such idiosyncrasies, he frequently came to grief for breach of Bailie’s orders. His wife was referred to as ‘Jean Caleb’, and with her and ‘the Noted Beattie’ they used to perform shows around the south of Scotland and northern England. One incident is related of him claiming to exhibit ‘a horse’s head where it’s tail should have been’ at Kelso Fair. After being dismissed for being drunk one Common Riding he is supposed to have said ‘There’s ye’re drum; ye’ll carrie’t hame for me. Ye’ll sune get another drummer, but ye’ll never get another Caleb.’ He is surely the ‘Calib Rutherford, shoemaker’ on the subscription list for Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ in 1784 (even although he would have been quite young at the time). He lived to a ripe old age, and his drum is in the Museum. He appears in a cameo role in ‘The Gutterbludes’ – ‘Rob Rodger, he ca’s up the rear, And Caleb beats the drum’ [RM], ‘… Or Caleb rise to beat the drum, And I cry out ‘They come, they come!’ ’ [AD]. Charles (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He witnessed a baptism for wright James Glendinning in 1766. He married Janet Richardson in 1760 and their children included John (b.1761) and Thomas (b.1772). The witnesses in 1761 were also acting as crier of races and games at the Common Riding, and was one of the Halberdiers. from 1869. He was probably son of watchmaker William. Sir George of Chatto (c.1380–c.1428) probably son of Robert of Rutherford and nephew of James of that Ilk. He was squire of Archibald, 4th Earl of Douglas. He was probably a survivor of the Battle of Vernueil in 1424. He married Janet Rutherford, possibly of Edgerston; she was related to the Lorraines who held the lands of Hummelknowes near Hawick and in 1428/9 was described as his ‘wyfe quhylem’ (probably former wife). He is probably the ‘Georgio de Rutherfurde’ as witness to a charter for Home of Wedderburn about 1413 and witness to a charter for Michael Ramsay at Lochmaben in 1414. He had a charter of confirmation for Chatto in 1429, but appears to have died shortly afterwards. He was succeeded by his son Robert. Other children were: Adam, Prior of the Anchorites in Ancrum; George of Langnewton; Walter of Redheugh; Katherine, who married William Cockburn of Henderland; and Helen, who married Sir Thomas Borthwick of Colylaw and Bourhouse. George of Ettles Cleuch (15th C.) son of Robert of Chatto. He was a member of the panel for the inheritance of Branxholme and Buccleuch in 1492, when he is listed as ‘Georgium Ruthirfurde de Edillischuch’. 1495 there was a ‘retour or inquest’ at Jedburgh, finding that he was heir to his father in the lands of Nether Chatto, Sharplaw, ‘Eddillischuch’ and Hangingshaw, as well as the west half of Scraesburgh and the lands of Hunthill. He also had a sasine for the same lands. George of Hunthill (d.c.1496) son of Robert and Margaret Glendinning. He could not have been Laird for very long. His wife’s name may have been Mariotta. He was succeeded by his son William. George of Longnewton (d.c.1499) 3rd son of George of Chatto. He was witness to a document dealing with Denholm Mains in 1483 and left his seal on a document relating to Synton in 1494. In 1493 he was surety for Henry Rauch in Longnewton (who had remission for the murder of Thomas Gibbonson), as well as for Patrick and Arthur Crawford in Longnewton Mill. He was Sheriff of Selkirk in 1494 when Alexander, Lord Erskine succeeded to his father’s lands of Synton and hereditary Sheriffship of Selkirkshire. In 1494/5 he was surety for Henry Ruth in Longnewton. Also in 1494/5 James Davidson in Raperlaw was allowed to compone for several crimes, including stealing 40 cows and 100 sheep from him at ‘Camys’, as well as 40 sheep from him at Sandystanes. In 1497 he gave a charter ‘from his place of Sandystanys’ to his grandson Walter. In the same year he was mentioned in an inquest relating to the boundaries of Melrose Abbey lands. He married Catherine Lyle. His sons Adam and Gilbert were recorded in 1498. He may already have been dead when the ‘Dominus de langnewton’ (no forename given) was fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh in 1502. A case at the 1502 Justice-aire at Jedburgh related how 120 of his sheep had been stolen from ‘Sandystanis’ by the Laird of Minto and ‘resett’ by Adam Scott ‘in Hawchesteris’ (probably Highcheseters). Another case in 1502 involved Peter Turnbull in Bunchester, who was in a group who burned 120 bolls of barley and 60 bolls of wheat belonging to him, as well as stealing 25 oxen, 44 cows and 60 sheep from him, and burning 11 horses, and other goods of his at Barnhills. Peter Turnbull was also involved in burning 26 bolls of barley and 40 bolls of oats at ‘Sandystanis’, with the help of John Turnbull of Minto and others. One more case in 1502 recorded how Adam Graham-slaw had stolen 41 sheep and 8 theaves of barley from him. In 1510 his son Adam had letters of rehabilitation for his crimes after spending months in Edinburgh Castle. George of Hunthill (15th/16th C.) son of William. In 1500 there was a dispensation from the Archbishop of Glasgow, allowing him to marry Elizabeth Turnbull, although they were related in the third and fourth degrees of consanguinity. In 1507 there was a ‘re-tour of inquest’, finding that he was heir of his father William of Hunthill, in the lands of Nether Chatto, Sharplaw, Ettles Cleuch and Hangingshaw. In 1508 he was on the retour panel for Adam Hepburn inheriting the Lordship of Liddesdale. In 1510 he confirmed a charter of Scraesburgh for Ninnian Glendinning. In 1520/1 he had a charter for a 4 merkland in Scraesburgh. His children included: Andrew, who succeeded, and married Helen, daughter of Philip Rutherford, younger of that Ilk; John of Hunthill, who married Christine Pringle; William, who married Christian Armstrong; and Archibald, who was Canon of Jedburgh and married a Douglas of Bonjedward. George of Hundalee (c.1470–c.1545) son of John, whom he succeeded. He was ‘junior Laird of Hundalee’ in 1502 when serving as surety for Lawrence in ‘quhitmeir’. He was a Bailie for Sir William Colville of Ochiltree in 1504. In 1508 he was part (along with his father) of the panel of retour for Adam Hepburn. He was one of the major Border Barons who signed a bond in 1525 to help the Earl of Angus, the Warden. In 1526 he was listed among the many Borderers in a remission for attacking the Earl of Arran; his sons Nicholas and Andrew were also listed. He had a charter for Hundalee in 1528. In 1538 he was charged with assisting ‘George Ruthirfurde, called Cokburne, John Ruthirfurde, called Jock of ye Green, and other rebels at the Kingis horn’. In 1539 he had a charter for Ashtrees. In 1542 he resigned his lands into the hands of James V, in favour of his son Nicholas; this included Hundalee, Ashtrees, Grubet, Kirk Yetholm, Town Yetholm, Cherrytrees, Makerstoun, Ruecastle and Lanton. In 1544 he signed a bond to serve Henry VIII during the ‘Rough Wooing’, but in the following year the English burned Hundalee anyway. He was succeeded by Sir Nicholas, his son. George ‘Cockbank’ (16th C.) said to be a ‘great riever, thief and manslayer’. He was on a 1540 list of Scottish rebels ‘reset’ within England who the Wardens wanted captured. He is there ‘Geo. Rutherford called Cok Bankes’ and listed along with his brother ‘Hobbe’ and a son with unknown first name, as well as other Rutherfords. He is probably the ‘George Ruthirfurde, called Cokburne’ listed along with John ‘called Jock of ye Green’ and other rebels who Ker of Cessford, Douglas of Cavers, Rutherford of Hundalee and Ker of Dolfinhstone were accused of assisting in 1538. About the same time he was captured and held in Carlisle Castle with his son Thomas and Tom Bell, probably so they could be exchanged for the Englishman Dr. Hillyard. In 1540 James V refused to exchange him for the churchman, but offered to swap him for any English lawbreaker; his fate is not recorded. He was probably related to ‘Robin’ and ‘Gawen’, who are also listed in 1540. He is also recorded in 1541, when he was accused of having been on a raid into England with 100 other Scotsmen in which John Routburn of Bedrule was killed. George of Longnewton (16th C.) listed in 1553/4 among the Rutherfords in an assurance not to harm the Kers. He is also recorded in 1560 on the bond to settle the feud between the Kers and the Rutherfords. In 1569 he was ‘George Ruthirfurde in the Grange’ when a set of Homes, Rutherfords and Kers were caution for him to remain in ward in Forfar. In 1572/3 he swore allegiance to the Crown, allowed with several other Borderers, with Andrew, younger of Hundalee, as surety. In 1575 he was one of the arbitrators appointed for the Elliots in their feud with the Pringles. George of Fairnington (16th C.) probably son of William of Longnewton. He is listed as ‘George Ruthirfurde of Pharnyngtoune’ when he witnessed the 1568/9 bond between the Scotts and the Kers, signed in Melrose. In 1580/1 he witnessed a list of the feuars of Newton (near Melrose), made at Selkirk. George (16th C.) recorded in Bewlie in 1580 when he had a marriage contract with Isabel, daughter of George Riddell in Lilliesleaf. The contract included conditions that if he died before there were offspring, then his wife was to inherit half of his possessions and get her dowry back. George of the Grange (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1618 as ‘younger in Abbotreull’ when he had a bond with Walter Turnbull of Bedrule. This was on behalf of William Shiel of Fodderlee. He could be the George ‘of Rule’ whose ‘Airs’ were recorded as owning land in Abbotrule Parish in 1643, valued at £20. He is probably related to ‘Dand’ of the Grange, who is recorded in 1581/2. George of Fairnington (16th/17th C.) probably son or grandson of the earlier George of Fairnington. He was signatory of the ‘Confessions of Faith’ in Hawick in 1638. His name was written ‘G. Rutherforde of fairingtoun’. In 1643 he is recorded as owner of teinds in Roxburgh Parish. He was closely related to the Rutherfords of Nisbet, Knowesouth and Ruecastle. He is probably the George ‘of Fairningtoun’ who acted as bailie for a sasine for the Haliburtons at Friarshaw in 1606. He was fined in 1611 for the non-appearance of several other Rutherfords. He may be the George of Langnewton whose younger sons were Thomas, Adam and Patrick, from whom sprang the Rutherfords of Nisbet, Knowesouth and Ruecastle. The owner of lands in Cavers later in the 17th century sometimes transcribed as ‘Lady Farnington’ is possibly in fact Lady ‘Symington’, and unrelated to him. George (d.1651) said to be brother of John in East Nisbet. After the Union he received lands on Rede Water through marriage. He apparently had 21 sons, most of whom served the King during the Civil War. He died in the Battle of Worcester, along with 14 of his sons. George of Fairnington (17th/18th C.) son of George. He was served heir to his father in the lands of Fairnington in 1674. He could be the same as one of the other Georges, although this seems like a separate generation. He is probably the Laird who paid the land tax in Roxburgh Parish in 1678. He may be the George of Fairnington who married Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas (and Elizabeth Turnbull), who was son of Robert of Edgerston. George of Fairnington (17th/18th C.) son of George and Elizabeth Rutherford of Edgerston. He succeeded his father in 1692. He contributed £200 to the Darien Scheme in 1695. In 1686 he married Barbara, daughter of John Haliburton of Newmains and Margaret Rutherford of Edgerston; she died in 1750. Their children were: George, who succeeded, and killed his brother-in-law; David; Margaret, who married Robert Pringle of Clifton; and Elizabeth, who married Thomas Haliburton of Muirhouselaw, and secondly George Haliburton of Muirhouselaw, Lord Provost of Edinburgh. George of Fairnington (b.1691) son of George and Barbara Haliburton of Newmains. He may be the younger Laird of Fairnington whose name appears on a list of Commissioners of Supply for Roxburghshire in 1708. In 1716 he slew Thomas Haliburton of Muirhouselaw in a drunken fight over the rights to a spring bordering their properties; the spring was afterwards known as the ‘bloody well’. He kept in hiding until it was clear that he would not be prosecuted. He was listed on a memorial of 1738, claiming the right of the Lordship of Rutherford to John Scott of Belford. His wife could have been the ‘Lady Fernington’ who paid the window tax at Timpendean in 1748. His son George, W.S., married Mary, daughter of Strother Ker of Littledean. George (18th/19th C.) farmer at West Lees in Hobkirk Parish, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as owner of 2 horses. Lieut. George of Knowesouth (d.1806) 2nd son of Thomas of Knowesouth. He succeeded his brother John, who died without an heir, only a few years after inheriting Knowesouth. He was listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805. He was a Lieutenant in the Royal Navy, and while serving on the Trident had been responsible for sentencing some men to illegal punishments, which had led to their deaths. He was taken into custody in Plymouth, but escaped from ship the night before the trial, and was believed to have drowned. Doubts over the circumstances of his death (and rumours that he had effected an escape) led to delays in legal proceedings to decide on the inheritance of the estate. He was ultimately succeeded by his aunt, who had married Thomas Scott, and their son Charles Scott. George (18th/19th C.) watch and clockmaker on the High Street, listed in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. He may have been related to Francis, who was listed separately as a clockmaker at the same time. One of them was probably the Rutherford marked at about 39 High Street on Wood’s 1824 map. George (b.c.1800) from Jedburgh, he was farm steward on the Minto estate. He married Mary (or ‘Mina’) Easton, probably in St. Boswells. In 1841 he was living at Minto Lillielaw Lodge with his wife and 4 children. Their children included: James (b.1825); Agnes (b.1827); Helen (b.1830); John (b.1833), partner in Turner & Rutherford’s in Hawick; and Isabel (b.1839). George (b.1806) joiner at Blacklee and Kirkstyle in Hobkirk Parish. His father was James, joiner at Bonchester Bridge, while several other brothers were also joiners. In 1841 he was listed as a labourer at ‘Killinknowe’, and was a joiner at ‘Blackley’ in 1851. He married Agnes Inglis and their children included: James (b.1830); William (b.1832); Helen (b.1834); Isabella (b.1836); Thomas (b.1838); Janet (b.1839); Betty (b.1843), George (b.1845); and Margaret (b.1847). George (d.c.1895) son of James. He carried on his father’s tailor’s business at 60 High Street, later becoming a tobaccoist. He married Mary Ann, daughter of James Stewart. They had a son, Thomas. After his death his wife carried on the business for a few years, before it was taken over by William Sharp. She later married Mr. Irving. Gilbert (15th C.) recorded as ‘Gilberti de Ruthurfurde’ in 1437 when Walter Scott of Buccleuch was granted lands in Eckford for capturing him. It is unclear how he was related to other Rutherfords. One suggestion is that he is the same man as William, 3rd son of Sir Richard and Jean Douglas. Gilbert (1832/3–99) Hawick resident. In 1852 he married Agnes Park, and she died in 1907, aged 75. Their children included: Maggie, who died young; William (1851–98), who died at West Meridan, Connecticut, U.S.A.; Mary (1854–1925); Margaret (1856–61); Frank (1865/6–1928); Betsy (1870–1931); John (d.1936); and Gilbert, tweed merchant. He died in Howlands Terrace and is buried in Wellowgate Cemetery. Gilbert (b.1863) son of Gilbert. He became a tweed merchant in Hawick and lived at 3 Douglas Road. He married Nellie, daughter of farm steward George Moffat. He secondly married Esther Aitken, sister of Bailie George
Rutherford

Rutherford

Aitken. His children included: George, cashier with Blakie’s coal merchants; and Gilbert, who died in WWI. Gregory (13th C.) one of the earliest of the family on record. He was witness to a document relating to Fairnington in the Melrose Abbey charters in about 1214. He witnessed another document (relating to Elliston) for Melrose Abbey in about 1220 to 1243; he is listed there as ‘Gregor de Ruthrfurd’. He witnessed 5 other documents in about the same period. Helen (d.1544) daughter of Philip, who was eldest son of James of that Ilk and Wells. She was also known as ‘Ellen’. She managed to gain the estates of Rutherford and Wells after the death of her brother Richard, the other lands being inherited by her uncle Thomas. She was served heir in 1502/3, but the male heirs objected, and it took until 1505 to go through the courts. She also later gained Edgerston. She delivered the lands of Rutherford, Wells and Edgerston into the hands of the King, so they could be infefted to her and her husband in 1505 and 1506. Also in 1506 her husband received a pardon for the murder of Thomas Rutherford within Jedburgh Abbey. About the same time the King confirmed to her the ‘half merk land of Bethiroull’ near the parish church, ‘held in tack by Herbut Turnbull’. In 1511 James Douglas of Cavers resigned his suzerainty of Rutherford and Wells to her and her husband. In 1534/5 she appears to have been in debt when some of her lands in Rutherford were granted to William Jackson. In 1537 her lands of ‘Hurdhouse and Theifknowis’ were attacked by a large band led by the Kers of Auld Roxburgh and ‘Stokstruther’. She married 4 times, her husbands being: Sir John Forman of Davine (who had been one of her tutors); Sir Thomas Ker of Mersington, who was killed by the Rutherfords, apparently as the newly wedd left the church: Andrew Rutherford of Hunthill; and Patrick Home of Broomhouse. She gallantly defended the tower of Broomhouse from the English force led by Sir Ralph Evers, eventually being burned to death there, along with her children. The cruelty of this act was used as a rallying cry by the Scots at the Battle of Ancrum Moor. Since she never had a surviving son to succeed her, despite her desperation to do so, her lands passed to other family members. Henry Thomas (18th/19th C.) recorded at Redfordgreen as Commissioner of Selkirkshire in 1819. He may only have been given the lands in order to be a voter, since there is no evidence he ever lived in the area. James of that Ilk (c.1395–1454) son of Sir Richard. Along with his brother Nichol he was appointed guarantor of a treaty with the English in 1449. He is probably the ‘Jamys of Rothifulrd’ who witnessed a document between Haig of Bemersyde and Melrose Abbey in 1425. In 1427 he was ‘Jacobo de Rothifulrd’ when he witnessed the charter granting the Barony of Hawick to William Douglas of Drumlanrig. In 1429/30 he was an the ‘retour’ panel for the lands of Caverton. In 1430 he witnessed a contract between Andrew Rule of Primside and Andrew Ker of Altonburn. He witnessed a charter of 1435 transferring lands of Branxholme etc. in the Barony of Hawick from John Inglis to his son Thomas. He may be the James who witnessed the sasine for Wolfelee and Wolfehopelee in 1436. He also witnessed a sasine for the lands of Graham-slaw in 1436/7, and was a bailie of Sir William Crichton of that Ilk when he infefted the same lands in 1439. In 1439 he was on a retour for Douglas of Bonjedward and in 1446/7 he was on a ‘retour’ panel for Ker of Altonburn. In 1447 he was witness to a feu charter between Simon de Routledge and Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch for Burndifat and part of Birkwood, near the present day Duke’s Wood. He held the lands of Edgerston at least by 1448 when he had a sasine. In that year he was ‘Jacobo de Rudderfurde de eodem’ when he witnessed a charter for Stephen Scott of Castelaw. In 1449 he and his brother Nicholas acted as guarantors for a treaty with the English. In 1451 and 1452 he had charters for the lands of ‘Leithbert’, ‘Leithbertshiels’, etc. He married Christian a grand-daughter of Sir Robert Lauder and was succeeded by his son James. James of that Ilk and Wells (c.1420–93/4) son of James. He was the first Laird of Wells in Rulewater. Note there is some debate over these generations, one genealogy suggestion being that there are 2 separate Jameses covering this entry. In 1455 he had remission for certain rents because of the damage he endured on the death of his father in defence of the realm. He was the ‘lorde of Rutherfurde’ on the panel of 1456 which acquitted Andrew Ker of Altonburn of helping the English burn lands around Jedburgh. In 1457 he received the patronage of the Kirk of Rutherford (previously belonging to the Earl of Douglas), was a Conservator of a truce with the English and was appointed a Warden of the Marches. In 1464 he had a sasine for Hownam. In 1464/5 he was on the panel for the inheritance of the Barony of Cavers and Sheriffship of Roxburgh to Archibald Douglas and on the panel for deciding on the disputed lands of Kirkton Mains and Flex. In 1468 he was part of an agreement with the Homes and Kers over lands of Crailing. In 1471 he received a charter of the lands of Hownam, Capehope and Swinset, confirmed along with his wife in 1483. He is probably the James who had a debt relating to Crown lands in 1471, with Thomas Turnbull and Robert Rutherford as pledges. In 1482 he had a charter for the patronage of Bedrule Kirk. In 1483 he was also witness to a document dealing with Denholm Mains and another for Smailholm. He was appointed a commissioner for settling the Border marches in 1487, under the designation of Lord Rutherford. In 1488 he was mentioned in a charter of James III re-granting the regality of Cavers to William Douglas; there he is stated 'for the favour which he bears to the said William Douglas' to perform his service to the King. He gained the barony of Edgerston in 1492/3 and is recorded in that year when his superior James Douglas confirmed the lands of Rutherford and Wells (or 'Walls', in the Barony of Cavers) to him and his heirs. His possessions described in 1492/3 included the patronage of Bedrule Kirk. He is last recorded in early 1494 when he was on the panel for Alexander Erskine inheriting Synton. He married Margaret, daughter of Thomas, Lord Erskine. Their children included: Philip, whose son Richard succeeded, and whose widow married Sir Walter Scott of Bruxholme and Buccleuch; John, recorded as son of the Laird of Rutherford in 1493; Thomas of Edgerston, who succeeded his nephew as Rutherford of that Ilk; Andrew; Robert; Christian, who married Sir Robert Ker of Caverton; and Janet, who married John Rutherford of Hundalee. He was succeeded by his grandson Richard, who was the last Rutherford of Rutherford. James (d.c.1500) son of Adam, he was murdered at the Kirk of Hawick. In 1502 Peter Turnbull in Bonchester had remission for his murder, as well as a long list of other crimes. Some other Turnbuls (accomplices of Peter) were 'at the horn' for being involved in his murder. Probably the same James was mentioned in 1494/5 when Patrick Turnbull at Wauchope Tower 'componed' for associating with the Turnbuls who were responsible for his murder. James (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 when he was part of a letter of 'respite and protection' for the friends and family of William Douglas of Cavers (Sheriff of Teviotdale), while he was away in Denmark. Other men named were William Douglas (heir of the Sheriff) and William, Robert and Thomas Rutherford. It seems likely that they were members of the family of Rutherford and Wells. He could be the same as the James listed among the Borderers pardoned in 1526 for an attack on the Earl of Arran, recorded between the Rutherfords of Hundalee and of Grange. James (17th C.) tenant at Kirkhouses in Ashkirk Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694, when he paid for 8 hearths. Probably the same James married Margaret Hastie and had children, baptised in Ashkirk: Beatrice (b.1691); James (b.1692); John (b.1694); unnamed (b.1695); Margaret (b.1696); and George (b.1697). The witnesses in 1691 were Robert Pringle and John Cuthbertson and in 1694 were John Stewart and Andrew Fletcher. James (17th C.) tenant in Ormiston. He was resident of Ormiston on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. In 1716 in Hawick his daughter Mary married Archibald Paterson, tenant in the Flex. James (b.1697/8) shepherd in Hawick Parish. He worked as shepherd for 20 years at Alton Croft, 14 years at Nether Southfield and later at Langflat. In 1761 he was 3 men selected to perambulate the boundary between Fenwick and Alton Croft to regularise it. He was a widower in 1767 when he gave evidence in the court case regarding the division of the Common. James of Bowland (d.1747) only son of Robert of Bowland and Anne Murray. He was M.P. for Selkirkshire 1730-34, succeeding his cousin John Pringle. He also served as Commissary for Peebles in 1733. He was a ruling elder at the 1737 General Assembly of the Church of Scotland. He was listed on a memorial of 1738, claiming the right of the Lordship of Rutherford to John Scott of Belford. He is supposed to have owed a large sum in arrears of teinds, but was unable to find evidence that his father had purchased the right of these teinds; however, in a dream his dead father told him about the old writer who had the documents, which he was able to retrieve the next day. He married Isabella, daughter of John Sharplaw (or perhaps Simpson). His daughters Anna and Barbara emigrated to North Carolina. James (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. In 1727 and 1728 he was living at Elrig. In 1726 he married Helen Haliburton, also from Roberton. His children included: Janet (b.1727); Maly (b.1728); and Isobel (b.1730). James (18th C.) farmer at Fulahill in Lilliesleaf Parish on the 1789–92 Horse Tax Rolls. James (18th C.) listed as gardener at Midshiels in 1791 and 1794, when he was working for Archibald Douglas. He may be the James in Wilton who married Agnes Hogg in Melrose in 1790. James (18th/19th C.) farmer at Sandystones in Ancrum Parish. He owned a horse according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He was additionally taxed for having a non-working dog in 1797. James (b.1768/9) born in Crailing Parish, he was farmer at Barnhills. In 1851 he was farmer there of 360 acres, employing 12 labourers. His children included Elizabeth, Agnes and Andrew. James (b.1777/8) joiner at Bonchester Bridge, probably son of John, who was shepherd at Shiplaw Cross. He first set up as a joiner at Hobkirkstyle, then moved to Langraw and finally to Bonchester Bridge by about 1813. His joiner’s shop was next to the blacksmith’s there. He married Isabella Thomson (1779/80–1847) and their children were: Agnes (b.1804), who must have died young; John (b.1805), joiner at Old Gatehousecote; George (b.1806), joiner at Kirkstyle; James (1808–41), whose son Tom was blacksmith at Bonchester Bridge; Elizabeth (b.1810), who probably died young; Thomas (b.1811), who was a soldier and then policeman in Hawick; William (b.1812), who emigrated to Australia; Robert Scott (b.1814), also a joiner, married Isabella Hall; Agnes (again, b.1816), who married a Hawick shoemaker called Elder; Douglas (b.1818), who worked in a sawmill in Leith; and Alexander (b.1820), who followed his father as a joiner. He could be the James who was listed as a Steward at the Common Riding Races of 1836. It is possible he was the James, son of John and Janet Noteman, born in Wilton Parish in 1778. James (d.bef. 1840) Slater in Hawick. His daughter Jemima died in 1840. James (1808–41) 3rd son of Bonchester joiner James. He married Betty Beattie, who was daughter of Betty Stevenson and grand-daughter of John Stevenson, Laird of Kirkstyle. Their son Thomas (b.1832) eventually took over as blacksmith from his grand-uncle Andrew Stevenson. James (1818/9–1900) tailor of 60 High Street. He is listed in Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1861 he was listed at 21 High Street. He married Mary Wilson, who died in 1892, aged 73. Their children included Betsy Waldie, William, Isabella and Elizabeth, who all died in infancy, Robert, James, George (tailor and tobacconist), Alison and Mary (who married Andrew Wight). James (b.1825/6) born in New York state, he was a hosier warehouseman in Hawick. In 1861 he was living at 1 Teviot Place (which may be the same as 4 Teviot Road). He married Isabella Elliot and their children included: George (b.1856); and Thomas Elliot (b.1861). James (b.1842/3) born in Roberston Parish. In 1901 he was shepherd at Dodburn. His wife was Janet and they had a daughter who was also Janet. James (b.1843) son of William, farmer at Ferniehirst Mill. He was farm steward at Kershaugh and in 1877 or 1878 moved to Gatehousecote, where he was also farm steward. By 1891 he had moved to Chesters Grange in Ancrum Parish. He married Isabella Hood and their children were William Rae (b.1877), John Hood (b.1878), Cecilia Richardson (b.1880), Henry James (b.1883), Charles (b.1885/6) and Robert (b.1887/8). James (b.1876) son of Tom, blacksmith at Bonchester Bridge. He was educated in Hobkirk and served his apprenticeship with his father. He worked in Kelso and Hawick, returned to Bonchester, worked with a ship-builders in Belfast and then in Edinburgh, before taking over as blacksmith at Bonheister in 1899. In about 1904 he became tenant of the inn at Bonchester and gave up the blacksmith’s business. He married Margaret Sparks, who was sister of his brother Thomas’ wife. James (20th C.) Managing Director of Turner & Rutherford’s at Mansfield Mills. He was in this position at the time of the 1955 fire, which was not long before the firm foelded. Jane see Mrs. James Rutherford Oliver. Janet (17th C.) landowner in Abbotrule Parish in 1663. She paid £70 on the Land Tax Rolls. Perhaps she was widow of a man who formerly owned lands in Abbotrule, for example ‘Bertie Rutherford of the Wood’ or George of the Grange. Mrs. Janet (18th/19th C.) closest relative of William Turnbull, last Laird of Langraw. She inherited the property sometime in the 1790s. She married a Mr. Easton, who settled in America, and sold Langraw in 1801. Jean (18th/19th C.) wife of Caleb, she was known as ‘Jean Caleb’, and her surname is uncertain. Together with ‘the Noted Beattie’ they locally performed ‘Wild Man of Bengal’ shows. Her snuff box is in the Museum, with the date February 22 1803. John of Hundalee (15th C.) probably son of Nicholas of Hundalee. In 1434 he was ordered to leave Jedburgh Abbey and to allow the Abbot, Thomas Cranston, to take possession (probably a dispute over burial rights in the choir between the 2 families). He was witness to the sasine for the lands of Wolfelee and Wolfehopelee in 1436. John, son of Nicholas of Yetholm and Grubet was also a witness, showing that they are different men; he is there recorded as ‘Johannis de Rutherfurde de Hundwelle’. In 1464/5 he was ‘Johne of Ruthirforde of Hundwelwe’ when he was on the panel to rule on the dispute over Kirkton Mains and the

Rutherford

Flex. In 1467 he is recorded as ‘Johannis Ruthirfurde, dominus de Hundwalyey’ when he was appointed by Parliament (along with John Ainslie of Dophlinston) to make an evaluation of Roxburghshire. He appears to have married Margaret Charteris (daughter of Thomas of Cagnore) and then a daughter of Sir Thomas Cranston. The contemporary John appears easy to confuse with him, while the later John of Hundalee was possibly his son, but more likely to have been son of Andrew of Hundalee. John (d.c.1470) son of Nicholas of Yetholm and Grubet. Along with his father he witnessed the sasine of Woollee and Wolfhopelee to David Home in 1436. This was also witnessed by John of Hundalee, showing they are 2 separate people, even although he may be the later John of Hundalee; this is clearly confusing, and family histories may be muddled. In 1450 he was on the panel for the ‘retour’ of the Barony of Hawick to William Douglas of Drumlanrig. In 1453 he had a lease of the Crown lands of ‘Kyncavil’. In 1457 he had a sasine for lands at Fahnash, Hassendean, Grubet and Kirk Yetholm. In the Exchequer Rolls of 1458 he is probably the John, heir of the deceased Nicholas who had previously dealt with the accounts for Jedburgh. He firstly married Elizabeth, sister of John Rutherford of Yetholm. His second wife was Margaret Turnbull. He was succeeded by his son Andrew of Hundalee and had another son George. John of Edgerston (d.bef. 1501). In 1494 he was fined 10 pounds at the Judiciary Court for failing to produce Walter (probably a relative). He was one of the sureties (with Sir Robert Ker) for the appearance of Robert Langlands to answer to his murder of chaplain George Fairneylaw in 1494/5; they had to pay £20 when Langlands failed to show up. In the same year he was also surety for Thomas, son of Nicholas Rutherford, who had killed Duthac Rutherford, for James Davidson in Raperlaw, George Davidson in Raperlaw and for the Grahamslaws of Newton. He also served as surety for others in 1494/5 and was fined for the non-appearance of some of them. He was possibly second son of James Rutherford of that Ilk and elder brother of Thomas of Edgerston. He is probably the John, son of the Laird of Rutherford, who witnessed a sasine for lands in Denholm and Cavers in 1491/2, and also the John, son of the Laird of Rutherford, who was surety for a resident of Edgerston in 1493. John (15th/16th C.) brother of Ninian in Ancrum. At the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh in 1494/5, he was surety for himself, as well as his brother acting for him. He failed to appear and was to be fined at the next court. At the 1502 Justice-aire he was surety for his brother Ninian in Ancrum, as well as for himself and for Andrew Laidlaw in Edgerston; failing to appear, he was denounced as a rebel and his goods seized. John of Hundalee (c.1450–c.1524) son of Andrew of Hundalee. In 1491/2 he was recorded as ‘Johanni Ruthirfurde de Hundole’ when he had a charter for the lands of Ruecastle (resigned by Thomas Dickson), as well as Samieston (resigned by Thomas Ker of Cessford). In 1492 he obtained a decree from the Privy Council against William and Archibald Douglas of Cavers, as well as John Gledstains of that Ilk for 100 merks due to his grandfather, Nicholas. He was a member of the panel of ‘retour’ for the lands of Synton in 1494, where he is ‘Johannem Ruthirfurde de Hundole’. At the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1494/5 his ‘suitor’ was Adam Sluthman, who was present at the court for his lands of Ruecastle. In 1499 he witnessed a document for Walter Ker of Cessford. In 1502 he presented Nicholas Oliver at the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh, to ‘give suit’ for his lands of Grubet. In 1502 he and his brother Thomas were sureties for Nicholas, and also had remission ‘for intercommunicating with ye Ruthirfurdes, ye Kingis rebels’. Also in 1502 he served as surety for Richard in Littledean, for James in Nisbet and for John ‘Fiffe’, and he was fined for the non-appearance in court of William Turnbull in Bonchester. In 1504 he acted as a specially appointed ‘bailie in that part’ for the sasine of Maxton Craig granted to William Turnbull. In 1508 he was on the retour panel for Adam Hepburn inheriting the Lordship of Liddesdale. He was appointed as temporary Sheriff of Roxburghshire in 1509 to give the inheritance of Cavers Barony to James, son and heir of Sir William Douglas; he is recorded as ‘John Ruthirfurde of Hundole’ and George is also listed (possibly related). The house at Hundalee was destroyed by the English while he was Laird. He married Christian Boyd. Their children included: George, who succeeded; Lucia, who married Adam, son of Philip Nisbet of that Ilk; Janet, who married Adam Grimslaw; Margaret, who married Ralph Ker of Primsdie Loch; and Alison, who had a marriage contract with George, eldest son of William Ker in Lintalee, but appears to have died before the wedding, since her parents were ordered to pay 90 merks to Ker in 1500. John (15th/16th C.) recorded at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1502 when the Coroner, William Cranston, was fined for failing to arrest him. His name is given as ‘Johanne ruthirfurd’ called ‘fiife’ in ‘le grange’. In a separate court entry he was found to be infirm, with his surety being John of Hundalee. It is unclear how he might be related to other Rutherfords of Grange. John ‘the Cock o Hunthill’ (c.1510–77) son of George, he succeeded his older brother Andrew. There was a ‘retour of inquest’ in 1529, finding that he was heir of his brother Andrew in the lands of Nether Chatto and others. He is recorded in the Selkirk Protocol Books in 1535, with David (possibly related) as his attorney and in that year the Sheriff of Selkirkshire confirmed that he was to be restored to the Lordship by royal letters, dismissing the dispute with Alison Douglas, widow of David Home of Wedderburn. A further ‘retour of inquest’ in 1558 established that he was heir to his brother in the lands of Capehope. In 1530 he resigned lands in Scraesburgh in favour of himself and his wife Christian Hoppringle. He had charters for several lands and baronies in the 1530s. In 1535 he was represented in Selkirk by ‘the venerable sir William’, who may have been a relative. He was convicted in 1538 of assisting several men who were ‘at the horn’; also convicted were James Douglas of Cavers, other Rutherfords and also Kers. In 1541 he was tenant of Blackhaugh in Tweed. He was probably the Laird of Hunthill who was accused of resetting English fugitives in 1541, specifically 9 Hunters of Tynedale. In 1545 he was among lairds in Teviotdale who signed a bond to settle feuds. He was probably the ‘lard of Hunthill’ who signed a bond of assurance with Somerset at Kelso in 1547, along with many other Border lairds. In 1549 he was listed among the associates of Walter Ker of Cessford who were accused of helping the English in raids upon the farms of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme. In 1553/4 he was listed among the Rutherfords in an assurance not to harm the Kers; he signed with his hand led by the notary and the pledge for his sons was John of the Knowe. Also in 1553/4 he was on the panel for Sir Walter Scott inheriting his grandfather’s lands of Branxholme and Buccleuch. In 1558 he granted the lands of Scraesburgh (occupied by Thomas Rutherford and others) to his son and heir John. In 1560 he was named on the bond to settle the feud between the Kers and the Rutherfords; he and his son John was said to be responsible for the murder of Andrew Ker of Corbethouse and as part of the restitution his 2nd son William was to marry a daughter of James Ker of Corbethouse, while his son and heir John was to offer his sword to ask forgiveness from James Ker. He signed the bond ‘at the pen led by the notar’, meaning that he could not write himself. In 1561 he was listed among Border lairds who appeared before the Queen to promise to present the names of those who were guilty of theft. In 1564 he was listed among Border lairds who were ordered to support the warden, Ker of Cessford. In 1565 he is listed among men complained about by the Warden of the Middle Marches for not presenting accused men from their lands. In 1565 he was explicitly instructed (along with Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst) to enter one of his servants at the next truce day, to answer accusations from Englishmen; later this was increased to 2 servants to relieve the Warden, and then he himself was warded in Edinburgh Castle to redress the charges against his servants, then was ordered to pay the expenses to Ker of Cessford. Also in 1565 he signed the ‘Band of Teviotdale’ (but helped by the notary). Additionally, he was among landowners summoned before the Privy Council in 1565 to try to resolve the feud between Sir Nicholas Rutherford of Hundalee and the people of Jedburgh. In 1566 he was ordered to enter ‘Sym Oliver, Cuddy Hendirson, and Mathow Dowglas’ to the Warden. He was among men re-ordered to appear before the Privy Council in 1567 regarding order in the Middle Marches. He signed the bond of peace for the Borders in 1569. Also in 1569 he was on the panel of inquest for Grizel Borthwick inheriting superiority of her father’s lands in Wilton. Additionally in 1569 he was a surety for Robert Ker of Lochtour, as well as for Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule and was directed to relieve Sir Walter Ker of Cessford of a debt. In 1571/2 he signed the bond to act against Borders thieves and was surety for David Oliver in Whiteside. He served as surety before the Privy Council in 1571 and 1577. In 1576 he was surety for Sir Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule. In 1572/3 he gave his assurances that he would not help Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst, with Richard of Edgerston as surety. He signed the ‘Band of Roxburgh’ in 1573, ‘with my hand at the pen’. In 1529 he firstly married Christine ‘Hoppringle’, daughter of David Pringle of Smailholm, this requiring special permission because of consanguinity. He secondly married Isobel, daughter of Sir Walter Ker of Cessford. His children included: John, who succeeded; Mariotta, who married William Rutherford of Leith; Mary, who married David Ainslie of Fala; Betty, who married Richard Rutherford of Edgerston; Steven; and Thomas of ‘Grundisnuke’. He may have secondly married a daughter of Ker of Greenhead.
Rutherford

He could be the ‘vmquhile Maister Johne Rutherfurd’ named in the last testament of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1574 in connection with the lands of Lanton. John (d.bef. 1560) probably son of Thomas and brother of Richard and Philip. He was said to have ‘dwelt in the tofts’, ‘had six fingers on each hand and six toes on each foot’ and to have been ‘of memorable strength and courage’. He is listed being ‘in Edzarstoun’ (i.e. Edgerston) in 1560 on the document attempting to settle the feud between the Rutherfords and the Kers. He was killed by Sir Andrew Ker of Littledean and his friends. Also ‘Johne Ruthirfurd thair’ (hence probably related) was mutilated in the same attack. As part of the attempt to resolve the feud, the daughter of Philip in Edgerston was to marry Andrew, son of Robert Ker of Newhall. John of the Knowe (16th C.) recorded in 1553/4 as a pledge for the sons of the Laird of Hunthill, that they would keep order. He described as being ‘in Know’ in the bond of 1560 to settle the feud between the Kers and the Rutherfords. He was one of the signatories of the bond, and hence must have been a fairly important family representative at that time. In 1572/3 he was ‘Jok of the Know’ when he swore allegiance to the Crown, with Andrew of Hundalee and Richard of Edgerston as sureties. In 1573 he was among men from the Jedburgh area accused by Robert Kerr of Woodhead of raiding his house and farm; however, the group claimed they did it because Kerr had reset the fugitive Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst and were acquitted. He is probably the John of Hunthill who signed a bond with other Rutherfords and Turnbulls in about 1578 and another between the Kers and the Rutherfords. He is listed among the Border Lairds summoned to appear before the Privy Council in 1583/4 and on a bond of support for the Warden, Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst, at about the same time. He is recorded in 1590 among men of Teviotdale accused of breaking their bond with Englishman Edmund Crawster. He married his cousin Grizel Home and also married Agnes Kirkton (perhaps in 1558, when the couple were granted lands in Scraesburgh). His children included: William, who may have been the eldest son (and if so, predeceased his father), recorded in 1592 when he was denounced as a rebel; Thomas, who succeeded and who married a Cranston of that Ilk; John, ancestor of the Rutherfords of Bankend, who married Barbara, daughter of James Gledstains of Cocklaw and that Ilk; Grizel, who married Walter Ormiston of that Ilk; Jean, who married Adam Rutherford of Chatto; George; Andrew; Percie; Steven; Robert; and 5 other daughters. Richard of Littleleigh may also have been his son. John ‘Jock’ of Tofts (16th C.) probably son of Richard of Edgerston. He was said to be a man of pridigious strength, who had 6 digits on each hand and foot. He was named in several accusations of raids on English farms in 1590. His son Andrew is also listed in some of them. John (16th/17th C.) 2nd surviving son of John ‘the Cock’ of Hunthill. In 1619 he was referred to as ‘Master John Ruthirfurd, sheriff-depute of County Roxburgh’. In 1623 he had the lands of Hyndhousefield, Howdenbraes and Maison-Dieu confirmed to him, his wife and eldest son. He married Barbara, daughter of James Gledstains of Cocklaw. His eldest son was John of Bankend, who served as Provost of Jedburgh. John of Hunthill (17th C.) son of Thomas of Hunthill and Jean Cranston. He was served heir to his father and grandfather in 1610. In 1615 the lands of Nether Chatto, ‘Eidleslecuch’, ‘Hanganshaw’ and Gateshawfield were conveyed to him and his wife.
by James Ker of Chatto. He represented Roxburghshire in Parliament in 1630. His lands of Hunthill, Scraesburgh, etc. were valued at £1200 in 1643. He was still alive in 1666 when he was among the Rutherford who made an agreement concerning the family burial place at Jedburgh Abbey. He married Alison, daughter of Andrew Kerr, 1st Lord Jedburgh. His children included: Andrew, who succeeded, but had no male heirs; John, who succeeded his elder brother, but died unmarried; Sir Thomas, who succeeded his 2 older brothers and became the 2nd Lord Rutherford; Archibald, 3rd Lord Rutherford; Robert, 4th Lord Rutherford; Lilias, who married Henry Ker of Graden; Isobel, who married Alexander Burnet of Carlips; Helena, who married Thomas Lewin of Amble; Anna, who married Rev. Thomas Abernethy of Hownam; and Margaret, who married William Elliot of Dinlabyre. John (d.1679) 2nd son of Richard of Littleheugh. His elder brother Walter died without issue and he succeeded his father in 1626. His lands included ‘Capehope vocatis Phillip-hope, Hardroddis, Maksydbank, Priestschawis, &c.’, to which he was served heir in 1643, with confirmation in 1666. He married Euphiam, daughter of Walter Gledstains of Dod. He was succeeded by his sons Walter and John. John (17th C.) recorded in Abbotrule Parish in 1643. He owned lands valued at £140, but the name of the property is not listed. John of Knowesouth (d.c.1665) transcribed ‘de Cowsnothe’ in the 1666 services of heirs. In that year his son Thomas (referred to as ‘junior’, presumably meaning he was a minor) was served heir to his lands of Ruecastle, including Harden Mains and Newtonhaugh. He was described as already deceased in 1672 when his son Andrew became a merchant’s apprentice in 1672. He was succeeded by his son Thomas, and another son Robert became an apothecary’s apprentice in Edinburgh in 1673. John of Edgerston (c.1622–86) eldest son of Robert and Margaret Riddell. In 1643, 1646 and 1649 he was on the Committee of War for Roxburghshire. In 1648 he was one of the prominent men named on a Commission to suppress the thieves in the counties of Roxburgh, Selkirk, Dumfries and Amandale. He raised a troop in the 1640s and fought for King Charles; it is said that at the Battle of Dunbar he was severely wounded and all but 5 of his men were killed, and he lost a leg while defending the bridge at Worcester. In 1654 he was one of the local men who signed an attestation about the ‘carriage and deportment of the deceased Francis Earl of Buccleuch’; this was part of efforts to have the fines reduced on the Buccleuch estate that had been imposed by Cromwell for the Earl supporting King Charles. In 1654/5 he and Robert (Town Clerk of Jedburgh) were acquitted of liability for a sum of £300, which was taken from the tax-collector by ‘a strong party of mosstroopers’. In 1658 he was one of 2 commissioners sent by 20 ‘gentlemen and heritors’ of Roxburghshire to oppose payment requested from the county. In 1666 he was among the Rutherfords who made an agreement concerning the family burial place at Jedburgh Abbey. After the Restoration he commanded a troop of dragoons who kept order in the Borders. He paid the land tax in 1678 for £2700 in Jedburgh Parish. Also in 1678 he was a Commissioner for Roxburghshire for raising money for the King. He married Barbara Abernethy, daughter of the Bishop of Caithness (and related to the family that had earlier possessed lands at Teinside and Harwood south of Hawick, with his mother being a Murray of Philiphaugh). He had 4 sons and 12 daughters, including: John, who died before him; Andrew, who succeeded, but died without issue; Thomas, who succeeded Andrew; and Robert of Bowland, who married Ann, daughter of Sir John Murray of Philiphaugh. His testament was recorded in 1682. John (1641–1710) born in Yarrow, son of John and Isabella Ker. He was the great-grandfather of Sir Walter Scott the author. He was licensed by the Presbytery of Selkirk and was master of Selkirk Grammar School; he was recorded there in at least the period 1676–85, and probably served until 1691, when he was ordained in 1691 as minister of Yarrow. In 1685 he was described being ‘in Philiphaugh’ and in 1692 was ‘late schoolmaster of the burgh of Selkirk and now present minister’. He was minister at Yarrow until his death. He still had dealings with the Burgh of Selkirk in 1707. He married Christian, grand-daughter of John Shaw, minister of Selkirk. His children included: Robert, who died young; John (1695–1779), Professor of the Practice of Medicine at Edinburgh University; Jean (b.1693), who died unmarried; and Anne, who married William Scott of Whitehaugh. John (17th/18th C.) married Margaret Turnbull in Bedrule Parish in 1691. John (17th/18th C.) from Hawick Parish. In 1704 he was ‘in Dernicktoum’ (presumably Darnick in Melrose Parish) and Margaret ‘ivson’ was ‘his wife in Goldilands’ when their daughter Agnes was baptised in Hawick. The witnesses were Andrew Riddell in Goldielands and gardener James Falsyde. John of Knowesouth (17th/18th

C.) son of Thomas and Cecilia Douglas. He married Isabella, daughter of William Scott of Raeburn in 1711. He may have been a doctor, and succeeded his father before 1715. His sister Ann married William Chisholme, son of Robert and grandson of Walter of Stirches. His children included: John, who succeeded; William (b.1711); and Ann. John of Ladfield (17th/18th C.) descendant of John of Ladfield (d.c.1686), who was Provost of Jedburgh. His father may have been Adam. He was ‘younger’ in 1712 when he married Margaret, daughter of the deceased William Rutherford of Falla, this taking place at Hummelknowes. John (17th/18th C.) married Helen Turnbull in Bedrule Parish in 1702. John (17th/18th C.) married Isabel Storie in 1705, the marriage being proclaimed in both Bedrule and Jedburgh Parishes. Sir John of Edgerston (1687–1747/8) son of Thomas. He was knighted in 1706 and succeeded to Edgerston in 1720. He was mentioned in 1735 in the deposition where the widow of Robert Scott of Falnash (his sister Violet) sold her property on the Howegate to Patrick Hardie. He is probably the Sir John who paid the window tax in Jedburgh in 1748. He married Elizabeth, daughter of William Cairncross of Langlee in 1710. They had a large family, including: John (b.1712), who succeeded; William (b.1714) of Nether Ancrum; Thomas (b.1715), who married Martha Town from York and whose sons Richard and John were in the Navy; Susannah (d.1791), who married Alexander Pringle of Whytbank; Robert of Fairnington (b.1723), who became a Russian Baron; James (d.1742), who was unmarried; Walter (1723–1804), who married Mary, daughter of Gen. Alexander, and whose son John was an American politician; Mary, who married Sir Alexander Nisbet of Dean; Elizabeth, who married John Horsburgh of that Ilk; Jean, who married Charles Inglis of Manorhead; Hugh, who had 4 daughters; Archibald; Jean; and Agnes. He secondly married Sarah, daughter of Sir John Nisbet of Dean (sister of his son-in-law). Their children were: Henry of Hunthill, who married Agnes Lauder; and Christian, who married Rev. Dr. Davidson of Muirhouse. John (1695–1779) born in Yarrow, son of John, minister there, he was descended from the Rutherfords of Hunthill. He was educated in Selkirk and at Edinburgh University. He became a partner in a medical practice in Edinburgh in 1721 and they petitioned the University to start teaching Medicine, the 4 partners becoming the first Professors of Medicine there. He delivered clinical lectures in the Royal Infirmary, beginning the relationship between the university and the hospital. He firstly married Jean Swinton and they had a daughter Anne, who was mother of Sir Walter Scott. He secondly married Anne Mackay (daughter of the Jedburgh minister) and their children included: Daniel, who was a physician and botanist; Jean, who married Col. William Russell of Ashiestiel; and several children who died young. John (17th/18th C.) married Helen Tudhope in Bedrule Parish in 1721. John of Edgerston (1712–58) son of Sir John of that Ilk and Elizabeth Cairncross. He trained as an advocate and was elected M.P. for Roxburghshire in 1734, being re-elected in 1741. However, later that year his younger brother Walter convinced him to go to America, where he joined the Independent Regiment of Foot in New York. In 1756 he became a Major in the Royal American Regiment. In 1737 he married Eleanor, daughter of Sir Gilbert Elliot of Minto; she died in 1797 at her house in George Square, Edinburgh. They had 11 children, most of whom were born in America, and 7 of whom survived to adulthood: John, who succeeded; Jean (or Jane) married William Oliver of Dinlabyre; Robert (d.1780), who served with the East India Company; Archibald (d.1790) who was an army Captain; Eleanor (d.1822), unmarried; Elizabeth, married Andrew Sinclair of Hermandston and was mother of Lord Sinclair; and Agnes (1758–1840), who died unmarried. He died at Ticonderago and his family then relocated back to Scotland. John of Knowesouth (d.1788) son of John and Isabella Scott. He was served heir to Knowesouth in 1728 and in 1739 married Mary, daughter of William Kerr of Abbotswin and Agnes (1758–1840), who died unmarried. He died at Ticonderago and his family then relocated back to Scotland. John of Knowesouth (d.1788) son of John and Isabella Scott. He was served heir to Knowesouth in 1728 and in 1739 married Mary, daughter of William Kerr of Abbotswin, this marriage ending in divorce. It appears that he was mentally ill, and the records describe years of abuse before she finally left him in 1749. He paid the window tax in Bedrule Parish in 1748 and 1753. He was recorded as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1761. By 1763 he was an inmate of the ‘Bedlam’ in Edinburgh. He is recorded as Laird in 1764 when his eldest son Thomas married Margaret Elliot of Kirklands in Ancrum. He was on the role of electors in Roxburghshire in 1761. However, later that year his younger brother Walter convinced him to go to America, where he joined the Independent Regiment of Foot in New York. In 1756 he became a Major in the Royal American Regiment. In 1737 he married Eleanor, daughter of Sir Gilbert Elliot of Minto; she died in 1797 at her house in George Square, Edinburgh. They had 11 children, most of whom were born in America, and 7 of whom survived to adulthood: John, who succeeded; Jean (or Jane) married William Oliver of Dinlabyre; Robert (d.1780), who served with the East India Company; Archibald (d.1790) who was an army Captain; Eleanor (d.1822), unmarried; Elizabeth, married Andrew Sinclair of Hermandston and was mother of Lord Sinclair; and Agnes (1758–1840), who died unmarried. He died at Ticonderago and his family then relocated back to Scotland. John of Knowesouth (d.1788) son of John and Isabella Scott. He was served heir to Knowesouth in 1728 and in 1739 married Mary, daughter of William Kerr of Abbotswin, this marriage ending in divorce. It appears that he was mentally ill, and the records describe years of abuse before she finally left him in 1749. He paid the window tax in Bedrule Parish in 1748 and 1753. He was recorded as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1761. By 1763 he was an inmate of the ‘Bedlam’ in Edinburgh. He is recorded as Laird in 1764 when his eldest son Thomas married Margaret Elliot of Kirklands in Ancrum. He was on the role of electors in Roxburghshire in 1780. In 1747 he was in a dispute with William Henry, Marquess of Lothian over his alleged wrongful possession of the lands of Ruescastle. It appears that an infeftment of Ruescastle was made obtained by his (young) eldest son Thomas in 1748 (or perhaps 1758). In 1770 this son Thomas was in dispute with his wife, younger children and creditors. These other children were: Jean, who married Thomas Scott and whose son

Charles later succeeded to the estate; Capt. John of the Royal Navy; and another daughter, who married Jedburgh lawyer John Thomson. In 1788 he is recorded owning lands valued at £466 19s 10d, with his son Thomas also holding lands valued at £48 10s. He died in Edinburgh. John ‘the Little Major’ of Mossburnford (1746–1830) son of Thomas and grandson of the Laird of Edgerston. His father died in the Barbados when he was an infant, and he was sent back to the care of his grandfather at Edgerston. After going to America to seek his fortune he was apparently captured by Indians, but escaped after several years. He joined the 42nd Highland Regiment and was promoted to Captain in 1778. After retiring and returning to Scotland he purchased the estate of Mossburnford. He was later a Major in one of the local volunteer regiments (probably the 2nd Regiment of Dumfries militia). His nickname derived from his short stature. He paid tax on 2 male servants in Jedburgh Parish in 1778 and 1779. He was probably also Collector of Supply for about 35 years. He paid the Land Tax for Glenkerry in Ettrick Parish in 1785. He was one of the Borders men who entertained Burns on his tour of 1787. He was on the Land Tax Rolls in 1811. He was listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805 and 1819, along with his son John. In 1810 he was one of the founder members of the Jedforest Club. He was recorded as a freeholder in the Michaelmas Head-Court of Jedburgh in 1811. In 1819 he was appointed as Collector of Assessed Taxes. He married Eleanor Chalk of Artane, Dublin and secondly Agnes, daughter of Rev. Andrew Chatto, minister of Morebattle. His children included: John, W. S. (b. 1777), who was the Edinburgh agent for Jedburgh; Charles (1780–1846), who inherited the lands of Fairnington, but died unmarried; Thomas (b. 1784), who succeeded his brother; Martha, married Charles Robson of Samiester; Helen (or Eleanor) married William Elliot, Laird of Harwood; Walter (1801–56) who served with the East India Company in Bengal; and at least 5 who died young. Capt. John (b. 1744) younger son of John of Knowesouth and Mary Kerr of Abbotrule. His elder brother Thomas inherited the estate and then it passed to his sister Jean (who married Thomas Scott), since he was unmarried. He was a member of the Jedforest Club. He died in the early 1800s. He could be the John who was recorded at Knowesouth in 1797, where he owned 4 farm horses and 1 saddle horse, as well as 2 non-working dogs. He may be the Rutherford of Knowesouth who was eldest son of Maj. John of Mossburnford, and was an agent for Jedburgh in Edinburgh, dying in 1801. On the other hand, he could be the Capt. John who died in 1833 and was considered as the last of his line. John (18th/19th C.) served with the Shiplaw Cross in 1780. This was the highest cottage in Cavers Parish. He had a son James, who was a joiner at Bonchester Bridge and his great-grandson was blacksmith at Bonchester Bridge. Note that Tancred lists him as James rather than John. John of Edgerston (1748–1834) son of John of Edgerston and that Ilk. He was born in America, while his father was in the army there. He succeeded to Edgerston following his father’s death in 1758 (his father having been overseas since succeeding Sir John in about 1749). He owned land at ‘Rink’ in Hawick, which was used for the October market from 1779. He was a Vice-Lieutenant for Roxburghshire and was already on the roll of electors for Roxburghshire in 1780. In 1780 he was appointed Major and Captain in the Southern Regiment of Fenciblesmen and by 1797 was in command of the Roxburghshire Yeomanry (Militia). In 1788 he was described as a ‘popular man’ in a private list of voters in Roxburghshire, and was also said to be connected with the interests of the Duke of Buccleuch. He was additionally listed among the voters of Selkirkshire in 1788. His estate in Jedburgh Parish was valued at more than £2000 in 1788, and he also owned other lands in Oxnam Parish. He paid tax on 2 male servants in 1778, and was taxed for having male and female servants through the 1780s into the 1790s as well as for owning a carriage in the period 1788–98 and for having horses and dogs in the period 1785–97, including 8 carriage or saddle horses and 4 non-working dogs. In 1797 he was knocked off his horse in Jedburgh and struck in the head, but fully recovered. In 1803 he became Colonel-Commandant of both battalions of Roxburghshire volunteers. He was listed as ‘Major’ on the 1808 subscription list for Jamieson’s Scots dictionary. He paid the land tax on his estate in 1811, and also owned Overton. He was listed as a Commissioner for both Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire in 1805 and 1819. He served as M.P. for Selkirkshire 1802–06 and Roxburghshire 1806–12. He was one of the founder members of the Jedforest Club in 1810. He was recorded as a freeholder in the Michaelmas Head-Court of Jedburgh in 1811. In 1787 he married Mary Ann, daughter of Maj.-Gen. Alexander Leslie-Melville and died without issue. He left the lands of Edgerston to William...

Oliver of Dinlabyre, son of his sister Jane, and Fairnington to Charles, son of John Rutherford of Mossburnford. There is a watercolour sketch of him by Lord Sinclair. John (18th C.) resident of Alton in Wilton Parish. In 1777 he married Janet Notman. Their children included: Thomas (b.1783); and Robert (b.1785). The witnesses in 1779 were George Scott and James Lorraine. John (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. In 1876 he was living at Howpasley. His children included Henry (b.1783) and John (b.1786). John (18th C.) gamekeeper at Knowesouth in 1794, when he was working for Thomas Rutherford. John (d.c.1805) eldest son of Thomas of Knowesouth. He apprenticed as a lawyer to William Riddell and became Writer to the Signet in 1798. He died after succeeding his father. He died without issue and the Knowesouth estate was inherited by his brother George, who also died without issue. John (18th/19th C.) from Cavers Parish. In 1789 he paid a fine for his ‘irregular marriage’ with Betty Hogg. Their children included: Charles (b.1790), baptised in Wilton; Walter (b.1792), baptised in Minto; Isabel (b.1795), baptised in Minto; William (b.1802), baptised in Lilliesleaf; and Thomas (b.1805), baptised in Minto. John (18th/19th C.) recorded as owner of a horse at Synton Mill in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He was also recorded at Synton Mill in 1797 when his son Francis died in Hawick. John (18th/19th C.) farmer at Newbigging in Hawick Parish in 1797. He was taxed for having 2 non-working dogs. Capt. John of Knowesouth (d.c.1830). He died unmarried and so the family estate passed to Charles, eldest son of his oldest sister, who sold it. He is probably the Capt. John who is listed as owner on Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. He must be different from the Capt. John recorded earlier. John (b.1805) son of James, joiner at Bonchester Bridge. He was a joiner at Old Gatehousecote in Hobkirk Parish. By 1851 he was a joiner at Old Belses. He married Helen Curran Murray in 1831. Their children included Robert, James, Walter, Isabella, John, Helen and George. In 1855 the family emigrated to Australia, settling in Tasmania, where several sons worked as carpenters. Rev. John Hunter (19th C.) evangelical minister from Kelso from the early 1840s. The Congregational Church in Kelso started in 1841 and met in the Friends’ Meeting house there. He led the first communion service of what would become the Hawick Congregational Kirk in May of 1848. This was in the Suscription Rooms, with an audience of about 45 people. He had been invited to Hawick in 1847 by William Munro, minister of the faltering Congregational group in Hawick, and took up the invitation in the Spring of the following year. The ‘mission’ of intense prayer meetings lasted for 7 weeks and had to be moved twice to larger premises. Rev. John Kirk of Edinburgh joined after the first week, and they preached together for the next 6 weeks, the direct result of which was the founding of the Evangelical Union Kirk (which became today’s Congregational Kirk). He preached himself every other week until Alexander Duff arrived in late 1848. John (b.1811/2) from Middlebie, he was a shepherd in Castleton Parish. In 1861 he was at Old Larriston. His wife was Agnes Scott and their children included Helen, David, Thomas, Janet, John, William, James and Andrew. John (c.1835–1906) son of Joseph, he was born in Hawick. By 1851 the family were living at Swinburn in Northumberland. He worked for the Newcastle City Police for 8 years and was then prison officer and warder at the Newcastle Borough Gaol and Correction House. From 1871 he was Chief Warder and in 1875 was Master of the Berwick Union Workhouse. There were disputes with the authorities and by 1888 he had moved to North Shields where he was innkeeper. In 1855 he married Hannah Gray (1825–c.90). It appears the couple adopted his niece Sarah. In 1894 he married his housekeeper Elizabeth ‘Isabella’ Rutter and the couple became tenants of the Britannic Inn and then the tiny Beehive Inn in South Shields. In 1898 he was found guilty of manslaughter after his wife was found dead (and beaten) in their upstairs room. He served 3 years in Newcastle Gaol. John (1838–1914) composer of the music for ‘The Border Queen’, written specifically for Thomson’s words. Born in the West End, he was (probably) son of Thomas. However, his early years are unclear. He is probably the John who was 3 years old when listed with his sister Mary living with Ann Andison on the High Street, in 1851 was a ‘pauper scholar’ lodging on the Kirkwynd and in 1861 was a boarder at 4 Melgund Place working as a shoemaker. He worked for 30 years as a shoemaker, with Robert & William Burnet of the Howegate. He apparently had a fine baritone voice and was prominent in the choir of the Catholic Church in Hawick. In 1884 he emigrated to Australia as a hotel keeper, to help out his widowed sister. There is a report of a ‘Hawick Night’ at the Middlesburgh Hotel there in 1885. He is recorded as a subscriber to the 1888 and 1889 Common Ridings, where his address is Royal Hotel, Rockdale, Sydney, N.S.W. He was a member of the Sydney Scottish Borderers Association. He returned to Hawick in 1892 and 1901, and was apparently preparing to return for the quater-centenary when he took ill. It is not known whether he wrote any other music. In 1860 he married Margaret Gallagher. Their children included: Mary (b.1861); Ann (b.1863); Edward (b.1866); William (b.1866); John (b.1870); His daughter Margaret married Bailie John Gilroy. He is buried at Rockwood Necropolis, Sydney. John (19th C.) iron merchant who was one of the early elders of St. Andrew's Free Church. Katherine (15th/16th C.) younger daughter of Philip, who was the only son of James of that Ilk and Wells. After the death of her brother Richard of that Ilk, there was dispute over succession to the lands and titles, Rutherford and Wells going to her sister Helen, with the rest going to their uncle Thomas. She lost out on her portion due to her fornication with a relative. James Stewart of Traquair, who she married when quite young. He died at Flodden and she claimed ‘that in tender age she had been reft away by the said James Stewart, held in subjection and compelled to marry him’. She was probably the Katherine who supported Patrick Murray of Falahill in 1530, against an objection to his being Sheriff, with John Scott, Vicar of Hawick as procurator. In 1536 she was ‘Lady of Trakquare’ when she had a court order not to communicate with the rebel Douglases who were in England. Her son and heir to Traquair was William Stewart. Lawrence (15th C.) recorded as tenant in Oakwood in 1494/5. He had remission for a number of crimes: stealing cattle from several different people, including an ox from the Vicar of Ancrum; resetting Robert Young and William Scoon; stealing sheep from Yair and Kershope; stealing and resetting horses; burning the farm of Hartwood; and stealing from the widow of William Dickson. His surety was John Rutherford of Edgerston. Lawrence (15th/16th C.) recorded at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1502. He had remission for stealing sheep from Ninian Murray out of Kershope, with George, junior Laird of Hundeale as his surety. He was ‘in quhitmeir’, which was probably Whitmir. Lawrence (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 when he had remission for stealing cows from a servant of Margaret Murray out of Traquair. He was recorded being ‘now in ‘hartwod’ (probably the lands between Ashkirk and Selkirk). His surety was Ralp Ker of Primside Loch. Mary (17th C.) recorded in 1643 when she owned £20 in Hobkirk Parish. She is listed being ‘of Rydvell’ and Marie Turnbull was also there, but it is unclear where it was. Mungo (16th C.) tenant of Nisbet. He was on the 1553/4 panel for Sir Walter Scott inheriting his grandfather’s lands of Branzholme and Buccleuch. He is recorded as ‘Kentigernum Rutherfurd in Nesbet’ and may also have been known as Quentin. One of his descendants was John (brother of Gavin), who married Grizel Ramsay, and died at East Nisbet in 1630. Sir Nicholas (13th/14th C.) early member of the family. He witnessed a document in the Melrose charters in the period 1269–89. He signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296. He held the Manor of Doddington in Northumberland, which was forfeited by Edward I; in 1306 his grand-daughters and heiresses, Eva and Marjorie, petitioned the English King to restore their lands of ‘Doddingstone’. ‘Blind Harry’, in his history of 1460, states that he met Sir William Wallace in Ettrick Forest with 60 warriors. He may have been related by marriage to Marion Braidfute, heiress of Lamington. He was succeeded by his son Sir Robert. Nicholas of Yetholm (d.c. 1457) probably son of Sir Richard of that Ilk. He may be the Nicholas who received charters for Kirk Yetholm, Grubet, Makerston, Corbet and other lands in the years 1421, 1426 and 1430. However, these generations are quite confused. Probably the same Nicholas was part of a ‘retour of inquest’ in Hawick in 1424 for lands of Hownam. He served as Bailie in Liddesdale for William Douglas, 2nd Earl of Angus, recorded in 1428/9. He witnessed a charter for the Earl of Douglas in 1433/4. He was also Bailie for the Earl of Angus in 1436 for the granting of the lands of Wolfelee and Wolfehopelee to David Home of Wedderburn; he is there ‘Nicol laud de Rutherfurde de Zhetam’. He is probably the Rutherford who was Bailie for the Earl of Angus in 1439 for a charter for Douglas of Bonjedward. In 1449, along with his brother James of that Ilk, he was appointed as a guarantor of a treaty with the English. He may be the ‘Nechole of Rutherfurde’ who was on the panel that acquitted Andrew Ker of Altonburn in 1456 of helping the English burn lands around Jedburgh. In 1458 his heir John was mentioned in the Exchequer Rolls in relation to his having previous handled the accounts of Jedburgh. He may be the ‘Nocol’ who was a younger son of Sir Richard of that Ilk, and ancestor of the Henderlee (or Hundeale) branch. His son John also witnessed the sasine for Wolfelee in 1436, and separately also John of Hundalee (showing that they are separate people).

His son John married Elizabeth Rutherford of Yetholm. He had a grandson, John, who became Provost of Aberdeen, with that office also being filled by 3 later generations of the same family.

Nicholas (15th/16th C.) resident of Hundalee. He is recorded at the Justice-ai,ere in Jedburgh in 1502 when he had remission for several crimes, specifically stealing horses from Haddington Priory, a ‘aldron’ from the wife of Richard Rutherford, a cow from Lawrence Pile, 5 cows from the Earl of Huntly and a horse from Thomas Hall; John of Hundalee and his brother Thomas were his sureties. Also in 1502, along with Thomas in the Grange, he had remission for supplying and intercommunicating with other Rutherfords, who stole 5 horses from the King’s army at Norham. And he was explicitly referred to as ‘in hundole’ when he had remission for his own part in the theft of the 5 horses at Norham; John of Hundalee was his surety and was surely related. Sir Nicholas of Hundalee (d.1572/3) probably son of George, whom he succeeded in about 1545. He married his distant cousin Margaret and secondly married Margaret McDowell. He was listed (along with his father George and brother Andrew) among the Borderers pardoned in 1526 for an attack on the Earl of Arran. He may be the Nicholas said to have been one of 3 attendants who accompanied the Earl of Bothwell to a secret meeting with the Earl of Northumberland in 1531. In 1544 he was among local Lairds who gave their pledges to England. In 1545 he was among lairds in Teviotdale who signed a bond to settle feuds. He was listed in 1549 among the associates of Walter Ker of Cessford, accused of raiding the lands of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme in collusion with the English. In 1551 he signed the ‘Auld Band of Roxburgh’. He is probably the Laird of Hundalee who was appointed as a deputy march warden in 1553. In 1553/4 he was first listed among the Rutherfords in an assurance not to harm the Kers and the pledge for him was Batholomew of the Grange. He and other Rutherfords also appeared to promise that Adam and Charles, their pledges, would remain in ward in Edinburgh. Also in 1553/4 he was on the panel for Sir Walter Scott inheriting his grandfather’s lands of Branxholme and Buccleuch. In 1560 he was named on the bond to settle the feud between the Kers and the Rutherfords. In 1561 he was among a list of men charged to appear before Queen Mary regarding the state of the Borders. Also in 1561 was (along with Walter Scott of Synton and Thomas Scott of Haining) cited by the Privy Council for non-appearance. In 1564 he and James Langlands of that Ilk were listed as sureties for Ormiston of that Ilk in the bond between the Scotts and Kers and their supporters. Also in 1564 he was listed among Border lairds who were ordered to support the warden, Ker of Cessford. In 1565 he is listed among men complained about by the Warden of the Middle Marches for not presenting accused men from their lands. Also in 1565 he was engaged in a serious dispute with the people of Jedburgh, and tried to insist that they should chose him as their Provost, because of family tradition; a number of Burgesses and local landowners were summoned before the Privy Council to resolve the ‘allegeit bluid and inymitie’. He was among men re-ordered to appear before the Privy Council in 1567 regarding order in the Middle Marches. In 1569 he was on the panel of inquest for Grizel Borthwick inheriting the superiority of her father’s lands in Wilton. Also in 1569 he and his sons Andrew and Nichol were sureties for George in the Grange. In 1596 and again in 1571/2 he signed the bond to act against Borders thieves. He is said to have been at the Raid of the Reidswire in 1575, although it seems more likely that was his son. He signed a bond with other Rutherfords and Turnbulls in 1578 (although perhaps this was 1569). His children included: George, who died as a rebel by 1526; Andrew, who succeeded; Nichol, listed along with his father and brother Andrew in 1569; Marion, who married Andrew Ker of Graden; Mary, who married David Ainslie of Fala; and probably Martin, vicar of Makertoun. Nichol may have been another son. Nicholas (16th C.) recorded as Dean of Teviotdale, in the Diocese of Glasgow, in 1548. It is unclear how he was related to other Rutherfords. He may be the ‘Nycholl Ruderfur’ who signed the bond between the Rutherfords and Kers in 1560. Nicholas of Hundalee (c.1565–c.1628) son of Andrew of Hundalee and Margaret Hoppringle of Smailholm. However, in some genealogies he is stated to be brother of Andrew and younger son of Sir Nichol. In 1591 he is listed along with Rutherfords, Kers and Turnbulls in a bond of allegiance to King. In 1608 he was appointed by Parliament, along with Douglas of Bonjedward, to meet with the Bailies of Jedburgh to fix the price of leather. In 1606 he renewed his charter of Grubet and in 1620 gave a charter of Belses to his son-in-law, Sir James Ker of Crailing. He was listed as a land-owner in the Barony of Belses in the tax roll of the Abbacy of Jedburgh in 1626. He married Martha, daughter of Andrew Stewart, Master of Ochiltree. His children included: Andrew, who succeeded in 1633; John; James; Marie, who eventually became heiress and married Sir James Ker, 2nd Lord Jedburgh; Margaret; and Anna. Ninian ‘Ringan’ (15th C.) recorded in 1494/5 as ‘Rinzeane of Rutherfurde’. Along with ‘Hew of Douglace’ he appears to have captured George Young, who Walter Scott of Buccleuch pledged to bring before the next Justice Aire in Jedburgh. He could be the Ninian in Ancrum who was surety for his brother John at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1494/5; John did not appear. This same Ninian in Ancrum was allowed to ‘compone’ for many crimes in 1494/5, in particular stealing livestock and grain from several tenants in Fairings, as well as thefts along with his brother John, with the Laird of Rutherford as surety. In 1502 his surety was his brother John (who was also surety for himself and for Andrew Laidlaw in Edgerston), who failed to appear and hence was denounced as a rebel and his goods seized. Presumably he was the same Ninian in ‘uvir ancrum’ who was surety for himself in 1502 and was fined and deprived of his lands until he found surety. Philip (d.bef. 1492) eldest son of James of that Illk and Wells. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Walter Ker of Cessford. His widow later married Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme and Buccleuch. He had an only son, Richard (who succeeded his grandfather), and 2 daughters: Helen, who married Sir John Foreman of Davine, secondly Andrew of Hunthill and may also have married 2 other times; and Katherine (or perhaps Christian), who married James Stewart of Traquair and later became heir of the Rutherfords of that Illk. He pre-deceased his father. In 1495 his widow (now wife of Scott of Branxholme) brought a case to the Lords of Council demanding payment of promised rentals. Philip (15th/16th C.) witness of a sasine for the Erskines in the lands of Synton in 1508. He could not have been the son of James of that Illk (and Margaret Erskine), since that Philip died before his father, several years earlier. Perhaps the same Philip, son of Alan, was included among Rutherfords and others who were declared rebels in 1498 for the murder of Patrick Hepburn; his brother John was also listed. Philip (16th C.) probably younger son of Richard and son of Thomas of Edgerston. He is recorded as being ‘in Edzarstoun’ (i.e. Edgerston) in the 1560 bond to settle the feud between the Rutherfords and the Kers. As part of the agreement, Andrew, son and heir of Robert Ker of Newhall was to marry his daughter; he signed the bond ‘at the pen led by the notar’, meaning that he was unable to write. He may have been son of John in Edgerston, whose earlier murder was part of the feud. John Rutherford, also in Edgerston, who signed the 1560 bond, was probably his brother. In 1573 he and John ‘breder in Edgarstoun’ were among men from the Jedburgh area accused by Robert Kerr of Woodhead of raiding his house and farm, although they were acquitted because Kerr had reset the fugitive Kerr of Ferniehirst. He was a tutor to his brother Richard’s son Thomas, ‘the Black Laird’. Sir Richard (c.1345–1424/5) probably son of William (or possibly a younger brother). He was said to be a favourite of King Robert III. In 1390 he was ‘of that Ilk’ when he witnessed the charter by John Turnbull of Minto, granting Minto to Sir William Stewart of Jedburgh. He was one of the ambassadors to the Court of England in 1398 and was also Warden of the Marches from about this time. About 1399 he was captured by the English, according to the story along with his 5 sons (although he may in fact have had no more than 3 sons) and John Turnbull (‘out with the sword’). In 1424 (apparently not long before his death) he made a ‘retour dequest’ for lands of Hownam, witnessed at Hawick. He married Jean Douglas and their sons were: Sir James; John of Chatto, ancestor of the Hunthill branch; and Nichol, ancestor of the Hundalee branch. He was succeeded by James, although there is some suggestion that he was predeceased by his son and succeeded by his grandson James. He may also have had sons William (or Gilbert) of Eckford and Sir John, who was killed at Cravant in France along with Sir John Turnbull. Richard of that Illk (d.c.1502) grandson and heir of James of Rutherford, only son of Philip. He was the last Rutherford of that Illk. He was served heir to his ‘goodfather’ (presumably grandfather) according to an inquest in 1499. A document of 1500 shows lands of his going to several Kerrs because of ‘non-entry’. He is probably the Richard whose name led a 1501 list of Rutherfords and others whose fines were compounded by Walter Ker of Cessford and Henry Haitle of Mellerstain. He died without children, leading to a dispute over who should succeed to the estates and titles, these mainly going to his uncle Thomas, although his sister Helen inherited the estates of Rutherford and Wells. However, in 1502 the gift of ward of the lands of Rutherford was granted. by James IV to Andrew, Bishop of Moray and his brother John Forman. Also in 1502, Nicholas had remission for stealing a ‘cavobi le caldron’ from his wife (whose name is unfortunately not given).

Richard (15th/16th C.) tenant in Littledean. In 1502 he had remission for wounding George Young in Minto Craig, as well as stealing several items from Young. His surety was John Rutherford of Hundalee. Richard of Edgerston (16th C.) son of Thomas (or perhaps Robert). He is probably the ‘Richart Rutherfurd of Edyarstoun’ listed in 1553/4 among the Rutherfords in an assurance not to harm the Kers; his pledges were Charles and John ‘sone of the Grene’. He may have succeeded about 1558 and in 1559 he finally settled the dispute over succession to Rutherford lands and titles with his cousin, Sir John Stuart of Traquair (who received the estates of Rutherford and Wells). In 1560 he was named on the bond to settle the feud between the Kers and the Rutherfords; he was to shake hands with John Haitlie of Mellerstain in order to settle the feud between those particular families and he signed ‘at the pen led by the notar’ (meaning that he could not write himself). In 1561 he was among a list of men charged to appear before Queen Mary regarding the state of the Borders. In 1564 he was ‘Lard of Edyarstoun’ when listed among Border lairds who were ordered to support the warden, Ker of Cessford. He was among men re-ordered to appear before the Privy Council in 1567 regarding order in the Middle Marches. In 1567 he was among men ordered to present themselves to be warded in Blackness Castle. Also in 1567 he was surety for entering several men with the Warden. In 1569 he was a surety for Robert Ker of Lochtour. He also signed a bond to suppress the Border thieves in 1569 and another recognising Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst as Warden of the Middle Marches in the 1570s. In 1571 he was one of the sureties for the leaders of the Olivers, along with John, younger of Hunthill, and 2 Turnbulls. In 1571/2 he signed the bond to act against Borders thieves. In 1572/3 he was cautioner (along with Sir Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule) for several men from Southdean, as well as for John of Hunthill. He himself swore allegiance to the Crown in 1572/3, with Andrew, younger of Hundalee, as surety. He signed the ‘Band of Roxburgh’ in 1573. He signed a ‘bond of manrent’ to Archibald, Earl of Angus in 1574. He was at the Raid of the Redeswire in 1575. In 1575 he was one of the arbitrators for the Elliots in their feud with the Pringles. Also in 1575 he was among men asked to decide whether Robert Fraser was responsible for stealing some English horses. He signed an agreement with other Rutherfords and Turnbulls in 1578, annulling all former bonds and swearing allegiance to the Crown. Also in about 1578 he was involved in a bond between the Kers and Rutherfords. In 1578/9 there is mention of a feud between him (along with other Rutherfords, Douglas of Bon Jedward and Turnbull of Bedrule) and the Kers of Cessford. In 1581 he was among Border Lairds who denounced their bonds with Archibald Douglas, Earl of Angus. In 1583/4 he (or his son) was among the Border Lairds who were summoned to appear before the Privy Council. He married Elizabeth (‘Bittie’), sister of John Rutherford, the ‘Cock o Hunthill’. He was probably succeeded by his son Richard. Other sons may have been: John of the Tofts, a man of pridigious strength, who had 6 digits on each hand and foot; Philip, tutor of Edgerston; and Gilbert of ‘the Aicks’. Richard (16th C.) Provost of Jedburgh. In 1569 he was on the panel of inquest for Grizel Borthwick inheriting superiority of her father’s lands in Wilton. In 1569 he was among the signatories of a bond to suppress thieves on the Border. He served as surety before the Privy Council in 1571. In 1571/2 he signed the bond to act against Borders thieves and also acted as surety for Hob Young in Waterside. In 1573 he was among men from the Jedburgh area accused by Robert Kerr of Woodhead of raiding his house and farm, although they were acquitted because Kerr had reset the fugitive Kerr of Ferniehirst. In about 1578 he was involved in a bond between the Kers and Rutherfords. Richard of Edgerston (d.bef. 1605) probably son of Richard (although not all sources agree there was another generation here). He was witness to the 1595 bond between the Scotts and the Kerrs. He married Jean, daughter of William Elliot in Hartsgarth. They had a son Thomas (the ‘Black Laird’), and a daughter Margaret, who married Thomas Haliburton of Newmains. He may also have had 8 other sons who helped him in his exploits on the Border; however, this could be confusion among generations, since it is separately claimed that he was helped by his 6 brothers. His daughter Jean was served as his heir in 1611. Richard of Edgerston (d.bef. 1615) eldest son of Thomas ‘the Black Laird’. He succeeded his father, but died unmarried and was succeeded by his brother Robert. Richard of Littleheugh ‘Dickon Draw-the-Sword’ (d.c.1634) son of John ‘the Cock o Hunthill’ or possibly William of Littleheugh. He led the Jedburgh men at the Raid of the Reidswire in 1575. He is probably the Richard, son of William of Littleheugh who was accused in 1590 of raiding into England. He was fined in 1611 for the non-appearance of several other Rutherfords. He was on the inquest for the Justice Court in Jedburgh in 1622 and 1623. He also served as Provost of Jedburgh, an office later held by his nephew, John of Bankend. He appears to have been unable to write, since his signature had to be led when he supported a bond with the Earl of Bothwell. He married Lilias, daughter of James Gledstains of Cocklaw and that Ilk (with John Rutherford, probably his brother, marrying Lilias’ sister Barbara). His children included Walter (who died without an heir) and John of Capelope. John of Capehope’s grandson, Capt. John, became 5th Lord Rutherford in 1737. Richard (b.1822/3) tailor in Hawick. In 1851 he was a Master Tailor at Market Place (i.e. the Tower Knowe), employing 1 man and 1 apprentice). His wife was Agnes. Robert (12th C.) perhaps the earliest known member of the family. Sometime in the reign of David I he witnessed a charter to Gervase de Rydal. He is there recorded as ‘Robertus dominus de Rodyrforde’. There is no clear genealogy connecting him with later generations. However, it seems likely he was an ancestor of Hugh, who is recorded in about 1200 and Gregor, who is recorded in about the 1210s to 1230s. Sir Robert (d.1330) son of Sir Nicholas. He was said to be a friend of Robert the Bruce, accompanying him on the trip to Palestine with the heart of James Douglas. He died in Spain. Robert of Chatto (c.1410–bef. 95) son of Sir George of Chatto and Janet. However, these generations are confused, and it may be that there are two men here, one being a son of John of Chatto. In 1429 there was a confirmation by Archibald, Earl of Douglas, of the gift made formerly to his father George, of the lands of Nether Chatto, Sharplaw, ‘Eddylliscluch’ and Hangingshaw; this was confirmed in 1439/40. In 1437 he was one of those who was on the ‘retour’ at Jedburgh for Sir William Douglas of Drumlanrig inheriting the East Mains of Hawick, and was also on the 1450 retour for William Douglas to inherit his father’s Barony of Hawick. In 1464 there is a grant of lains in the choir of Jedburgh Abbey to him and his wife Margaret (a highly unusual example of the granting of the right of sepulture). In 1464/5 he was on the panel to decide on the inheritance of the Barony of Cavers by Archibald Douglas and also on the panel to rule on the disputed lands of Kirkton Mains and the Flex. In 1465 he had a charter from Simon of Glendinning for the west half of Scraesburgh and the lands of Hunthill (which he is said to have acquired by marriage). He is recorded in 1468 in a document relating to lands of Crailing for the Homes of that Ilk. In 1471 he witnessed a document for Ker of Cessford. He married Margaret, daughter of Sir Simon Glendonwyn. He had a charter of the lands of Hunthill and half of Scraesburgh from his father-in-law in 1465/6. He witnessed a charter for James Rutherford of that Ilk in 1468, another for William, Lord Abernethy in 1471. He is probably the Robert who was pledge for James of that Ilk in 1471 and whose fine for absence from the Beltane Court was remitted in 1478. In 1482 he was on the panel for Elizabeth Cunningham inheriting Appletreehall and the eastern part of Hassendean. In 1486 he is mentioned along with George and Richard, probably his sons. He was succeeded by his son George of Hunthill, while Robert of Chatto was probably another son. Robert (15th C.) assigned the lease of Ailkwood in 1484, along with his grandson and heir, Ninian. He leased it with his son Lawrence in 1485. Robert (15th C.) son of Lawrence. In 1490 he was assigned the Crown lands of the Middestead of Hartwood. It is unclear how he was related to other Rutherfords. Robert (16th C.) listed as ‘Roben’ among ‘Scottesmen rebels resete within England’ in 1540. He was said by the English Wardens to be hiding in Redesdale. He may be related to George ‘Cockbank’. Robert (16th C.) recorded being ‘in Edzarstoun’ (i.e. Edgerston) in the 1560 bond to settle the feud between the Rutherfords and the Kers. He and his friends were said to be responsible for killing William Haitlie ‘in Fawnis’, while his own son John was killed by the Haitlies. It is unclear if he was Laird of Edgerston, or just tenant there, but it seems likely he was father of Richard, who was Laird in the 1560s. He may have been the ‘lard of Egerston’ who signed a bond of assurance with Somerset at Kelso in 1547, along with many other Border lairds. Robert of Edgerston (c.1590–1659) younger son of Thomas, ‘the Black Laird’. He succeeded his brother Richard in 1615. He acted as a cautioner for an Ainslie in 1623. He is probably the Rutherford of Edgerston who signed the ‘Confessions of Faith’ in Hawick in 1638 (even although it appears to say ‘W.’). Around 1640 he purchased the Mill of Edgerston and other lands, which had been inherited by Francis Elliot of Hartshaugh through marriage. He firstly married Marion (or Margaret) Riddell, and secondly Elizabeth, daughter of Turnbull of Minto. He was succeeded by his son John. He may have been father of ‘Lady Gaudielands, Edgerstons Aunt’, who is recorded in a document of 1666 describing the division of the choir of Jedburgh Abbey into burial lairs for various Rutherfords. Robert (17th C.) notary public recorded in 1640 at the admission of Henry Elliot as minister of Bedrule. Robert (d.1724) younger son of John of Hunthill. In 1685 he succeeded his brother Archibald as 4th Lord Rutherford, also inheriting the family lands comprising the Barony of Hunthill, including the 10 merk lands called Gledstane’s Lands. In 1691 he sold Nether Chatto and the Barony of Scraesburg to Sir John Scott of Ancrum. He sat as a peer in Parliament until the Union. He married Dame Sara Ollens and they had 2 children: Margaret, who married Charles Scott of Palace Hill; and John, who died young. Like his elder brothers, he died without male issue and the honours were later claimed by Capt. John, descendant of Richard of Littleheugh. Robert of Bowland (d.bef. 1728) son of John of Edgerston. He purchased Bowland (on Gala Water) in 1697. In 1712 he purchased Hollinglee and Thornilee in Ettrick. He married Ann, daughter of Sir John Murray of Philiphaugh; she was widow of Alexander Pringle of Whytbank. In 1728 his widow resigned her annuity to her only son James, who succeeded and was M.P. for Selkirkshire. They also had a daughter, Barbara. Robert of Fairnilee (17th/18th C.) solicitor in Edinburgh, he was referred to in the family as ‘the Nottar’. He was said to be descended from Richard, son of Robert, 3rd brother of Richard of Edgerston. He served as Deputy Receiver General for Scotland. He inherited some lands from his father, acquired parts of Capehope from Sir John Scott of Ancrum in 1701 and bought lands in Scraesburgh in 1702. In 1719, 1727 and probably 1734 he had discharges with the Burgh of Selkirk, and a bond in 1731. He firstly married Bethia Lidderdale and they had 2 sons, David and Capt. William, neither of whom produced a male heir. In 1699 he secondly married Alison, only surviving daughter of John Ker of Shaw. Their numerous family included: Robert, who married Anne, daughter of John Pringle of Haining, and their daughter Anne became heiress of Fairnilee, marrying John Pringle of Crichton; and Alison, who wrote a version of ‘Flowers of the Forest’. He was the last of his family to be buried in the Bell-house at Jedburgh Abbey. Robert (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish, recorded as a ‘walker’ (presumably a ‘waulker’). His wife was a Cavers (first name not listed) and their children included Robert (b.1706). Other children, baptised in Hawick, who are probably his include: John and William (b.1713); and John (again, b.1716). The witnesses in 1706 were Bailie George Martin and Andrew Riddell in Goldielands. Robert (17th/18th C.) son of James, surgeon in Jedburgh. He married Esther, daughter of Robert Gledstains of that Ilk. In 1738 he was one of the 3 ‘heirs-portioners’ (along with his wife Esther and John Gledstains of Whitlaw) for Janet, last of the Gledstains of that Ilk. The lands of Dod were divided among them. Rev. Robert (1719/20–90) son of Gideon of Kidheugh, he graduated from Edinburgh University in 1743, was licensed by the Presbytery of Earlston in 1746 and became preacher at Teviothead (or Caerlennig) from 1750 until probably 1756. He moved to Longframlington in Northumberland in that year and became minister at Castleton in 1763, where he was presented by Henry, Duke of Buccleuch. He was recorded on the Horse Tax Rolls of 1785–89. In 1767 he married Elizabeth Widgird of Huxley in Northumberland, and she died in 1768, aged 26. He wrote ‘A Scripture Catechism’ (1794). Robert of Fairnilee (17th/18th C.) son of Robert, who was a solicitor in Edinburgh, said to be descended from Richard, son of Robert, 3rd brother of Richard of Edgerston. He inherited his father’s lands in Ancrum and Scraesburgh. He is probably the Robert of Fairnilee recorded in a discharge in Selkirk in 1743. He was listed on the roll of electors for Roxburghshire in 1780. He married Anne, daughter of John Pringle of Haining, and their daughter Anne became heiress of Fairnilee, marrying John Pringle of Crichton. Robert of Fairnington (1723–c.94) 4th son of Sir John of Edgerston and Elizabeth Cairncross. He was created a Baron of the Russian Empire following the assistance he gave during Russia’s war with Turkey in 1770. He repurchased the lands of Fairnington in 1779, planting trees and naming fields after some of his Russian friends. He also built a summer house on top of Down’s Law in the 1780s; this was known ever after as the ‘Baron’s Folly’. He was listed among the voters of Roxburghshire in 1788 and was described at that time as being ‘very independent’. Also in 1788 (and still in 1811) he was listed as owner of Fairnington and neighbouring lands in Roxburgh Parish; he was listed in the county valuation as ‘Baron of the Russian Empire’. He was taxed for having 3 female servants in the period 1785–91, as well as 3 male servants 1785–91 and 4 in 1792, 1793 and 1794 (when he was deceased). He is recorded in the Carriage Tax Rolls in the 1780s and 1790s, but was deceased in the year 1794/5, when the duty was paid on his behalf by John of Edgerston. He left Fairnington to his nephew, John of Edgerston. There is a portrait of him by Benjamin West. His will was proved at the Prerogative Court of Canterbury in 1794. Robert (18th C.) resident of Lillesleaf Parish. His children included Margaret (b.1751). Robert (d.1787) mason in Hawick. He married Mary Simpson in 1761; she was daughter of Andrew Simpson and Agnes Turnbull. Their children were probably: Thomas (b.1762); Caleb (b.1765); Helen (b.1767); unnamed (b.1773); Susan (b.1775); and Robert (b.1777), known as a fiddler. The witnesses in 1767 were wright Francis Paisley and cooper John Miller. He died in Hawick. He was probably born in 1738 in Cavers, son of Thomas, although it has been suggested he is the son of Walter and Isabella Turnbull born in Wilton in 1724. Robert (b.1768/9) born in Kirkton Parish, he was a shepherd at Branholme Town. He was recorded there as an agricultural labourer in 1841 and was also stated to have been a farm grieve. He married Jane (1784–1859), daughter of James Crawford and Janet Elliot; she was from Wilton, also known as Jenny and Janet and was buried in Wilton Kirkyard. Their children included: Walter (b.1814), who succeeded as shepherd and emigrated to Canada; and Charles Dickson (b.1825), a grocer living in Hawick. Robert (1776/7–1843) probably son of mason Robert. He was in the Militia in his youth, and noted for refusing to fog a fellow soldier. Afterwards he was not himself given corporal punishment (perhaps because he was a balloted soldier), but had his wages reduced by twopence a day as a result; it was said he submitted to this cheerfully for the man ‘had dune him nae ill’. He was well known locally as a fiddler, being described by James Wilson as ‘long remembered by the present generation as a charming performer on the violin’ and ‘without any of the dashing execution of the race of youngsters who strive to dazzle rather than delight, his object was to please’. He paid a yearly visit to Tyneside and performed often at Minto House. A portrait of him exists in the Museum, painted by Adam Brown, and donated in 1897 by his grand-daughter, Mrs. Joseph Wilson. He is probably the Robert, recorded as ‘musician’ on Walter’s Wynd in 1841, living with wife Mary and children Robert, William, Thomas, Mary, Martha and Robert (possibly a grandson). Robert (1789–1838) son of Thomas and Mayde-line Dryden. He was probably nephew of Caleb. He was a builder at Millbank, i.e. the Mill Path. He probably owned the building on the south side of the top of the Mill Path, labelled ‘Mr. Ruther- ford’ on Wood’s 1824 map. He is recorded as a builder at ‘Townhead’ on Pigot’s 1825/6 directory and at ‘Mill bank’ in 1837. He married Jane, daughter of William Waldie; she married William Laidlaw after she was widowed and died in 1871. His children included: Mary (1815–80), or ‘May’, who married William Rutherford, watchmaker; Thomas (1816–69), who married Mary Hutton, and died in Newcastle, New South Wales; William (b.1818), who married Beatrix Brydon and emigrated to Ontario, where he may have named the village of Millbank; Robert (1821–43); Elizabeth (1822–93), who married George Hogg; John (1826–75), who married Elizabeth Hackins; Jane (1828–55), first wife of auctioneer James Oliver; Agnes (b.1830), who married James Johnston and William Laidlaw; George (1831–58), who died in Hong Kong; and James (1833–8). Most of his family were still living at Millbank on the 1841 census. Robert (1814–bef. 61) son of Jane, who was a joiner at Boucher Bridge. In 1851 he is listed as a joiner at 4 Boucher Bridge, employing 1 man. He married Isabella, daughter of shepherd Andrew Hall. Their children were: Helen (1850–60); James (b.1852), who was a joiner with Douglas Taylor; and Isabella (b.1855, although it is unclear if he was the father). He went to America, leaving his family behind, and died there. By 1861 his wife was a widow, living at Hallrule Cottages. Robert (c.1846–98) son of shepherd Walter. He became a shepherd. In 1870 he married Ellen Nichols. His children included Helen or Nellie (b.1870); Walter (b.1871), Ann (b.1875), Robert (b.1877), Janet (b.1879), Mary (b.1880), Aggie, born in Canada; and John, also born in Canada. In 1882 the family emigrated to Huron County, Ontario and he was farmer at East Wawamash. He was killed by a bull on his won farm in the Camille district of Manitoba. Samuel (17th C.) described as servitori to Sir William Douglas of Cavers in 1642 when he accused a large group of his drinking companions of stealing his wallet and its £11 contents. He was also accused by John ‘Lethane’ of trying to retrieve his wallet through violence. Susannah (b.c.1795) from England, she was publican in Newcastleton, recorded at the King’s Arms.

in Pigot’s 1837 directory. This was probably the same place that became the Liddesdale Hotel at about 17 Douglas Square. In 1841 she was living with Thomasina (probably her mother). Thomas (15th C.) recorded in 1493 when George Turnbull of Hallrule had remission for premeditated felonies carried out against him at Bonjedward. The nature of the crimes is not given, but were presumably plundering of his farm. He could be the same as one of the other Thomases. Thomas (d.bef. 1504) killed in Jedburgh Abbey. In 1504 there was a long list of tenants, factors and servants of the Archbishop of Glasgow, Robert Blackadder, who had remission for involvement in his murder. In 1506 there was remission to John Forman and several Rutherfords for involvement in his murder. It is unclear which branch of the Rutherfords he belonged to, and what the circumstances were that led to his death. It is possible he was the Thomas, son of Nicholas, who was denounced as a rebel in 1494/5 for the murder of ‘Duthac Rutherfurde’ and who was also ‘at the horn’ in 1498 for his part in the murder of Patrick Hepburn. The Thomas who was connected with the death of Patrick Hepburn was also mentioned in 1502 when Alexander Laidlaw was convicted of associating with him, Adam Rutherford and Thomas Grahamslaw. Thomas of Edgerston (15th/16th C.) 3rd son of James of that Ilk and Wells. His brothers Philip and John died before him, and he succeeded his nephew Richard. However, his niece Helen gained Rutherford and Wells, and he kept Edgerston. He was thus the progenitor of the Lairds of Edgerston. He was probably the son of James of that Ilk who was included among Rutherfords and others who were declared rebels in 1498 for the murder of Patrick Hepburn. He was succeeded by his son Richard (or possibly Robert). Other sons may have been: Philip, who lived at Edgerston and was tutor to his nephew Thomas, the Black Laird; John, who is said to have had 6 digits on each hand and foot, and to have had ‘memorable strength and courage’, and whose descendants occupied ‘the Tofts’; and Archibald of the Townhead, ancestor of the Rutherfords of Townhead and of ‘the Hall’. It is possible he was the Thomas who was on the panel in 1482 for Elizabeth Cunningham inheriting the lands of Appletreehall and the eastern part of Hassendean. He may have been the Thomas who as on the panel of retour for Gordon of Stichill in 1525, and who was listed among the Borderers who had remission in 1526 for supporting the Homes in an attack on the Earl of Arran. Thomas of the Grange (15th/16th C.) 2nd son of Andrew of Hundalee. He seems likely to be the brother of the Laird of Hundalee who in 1493 acted as surety for Patrick Rodman from Rulewater. He was described being in the Grange of Abbotrule at the 1494/5 Justiceaire held in Jedburgh when he acted as surety for Patrick Rodman. Also in 1494/5 he was recorded as brother of the Laird of Hundalee when he was surety for Jedburgh men. In 1502 he was recorded as brother of John of Hundalee when the pair of them served as sureties for Nicholas (who may have been related). Also in 1502 he had remission for resetting Gilbert Oliver, a man called ‘Wobstar’ and James Rutherford, who had stolen animals; John of Hundalee was his surety. Additionally he had remission in 1502 for stealing livestock and for resetting other thieves, including Nixons, who raided Raperlaw and elsewhere, and Englishmen from Redesdale: again John of Hundalee was his surety. He is listed as being ‘in the Grange’ among the Borderers (led by the Homes and Walter Scott of Brauxholme) pardoned in 1526 for an attack on the Earl of Arran. His sons Andrew, George and ‘Dougal Stible’ are also listed (the last presumably being a son-in-law). He was probably succeeded by George. Thomas (16th C.) first man listed as a witness to the instrument of resignation for the Routledges of Crook in 1529/30, witnessed at Cavers Kirk. It is unclear whether he was a church official or local landowner, or how he was related to other Rutherfords. Sir Thomas ‘the Black Laird of Edgerston’ (c.1550–1615) son of Richard and grandson (or perhaps great-grandson) of the first Robert of Edgerston. His nickname came from his complexion and dark hair (‘being of a swarthy complexion and black haired’), but he was also known as a local leader to be reckoned with, along with his 9 sons (or perhaps this is his 8 brothers). He supposedly turned the tide of battle at the Raid of the Redeswire in 1575 when he arrived with the Jedburgh contingent; however, he only succeeded as Laird in 1605 and hence it was likely to have been his father or grandfather Richard who was at the Raid. He is also said to have led the Rutherfords at the Battle of the Hencleugh. He married Jean, daughter of Gavin Eliott of Stobs, who may have been his cousin (although there is much confusion over this). He is said to have had 9 sons (but this is not documented, and may also have referred to his brothers). He was succeeded by his sons Richard and Robert in turn. A daughter, Jean, inherited Stobs, along with her aunts Dorothy and Esther.
He is also said to have had a daughter Joan, who married William, called ‘Neck of Steel’, son of Robert Elliot of Larriston (but this may be confusion). Thomas of Tofts (16th/17th C.) recorded as ‘Thomas Rutherfurde of Toftis’ in 1610 when he was on an inquest relating to lands in Roxwater. His son Robert was accused of stealing horses in 1623. Thomas of Hunthill (16th/17th C.) son of John of Hunthill. In 1583 he and his father were summoned to appear at Jedburgh to answer charges and in 1593 he was summoned for charges of treason for being an accomplice of the Earl of Bothwell. In 1611 he was fined for the non-appearance of a man he wasUTION for. In 1612 he had a charter for the lands of Hunthill and others. He married Jean, daughter of John Cranston of that Ilk. He was succeeded by his son John of Hunthill. His daughter Grizel married Adam Kirkton of Stewartfield, the contract being signed at Wolfelee in 1612. Thomas of Ruecastle (16th/17th C.) probably a younger son of George of Longnewton, he was served heir to his brother Andrew ‘called of Quhytehouse in Nesbit’. He had a charter of ‘Rouchcastell’ in 1642, along with the attached forest and the mains of Harden. In 1643 he was ‘in Whitehouse’ when his lands in Ruecastle were valued at £240. In 1656 he was referred to as ‘Thomas of Rowcastell, called of Quhytehouse, in Nesbit’. He is probably the Thomas ‘of whythouse’ who paid tax on £340 in Bedrule Parish in 1663, as well as £144 worth of land he had purchased from the Earl of Traquair. He married Elizabeth Mader. It is unclear how he was related to the Thomas of Ruecastle who was served heir to his father Andrew ‘called of Quhytehouse in Nesbit’. He had a charter of ‘Rouchcastell’ in 1642, along with the attached forest and the mains of Harden. In 1643 he was ‘in Whitehouse’ when his lands in Ruecastle were valued at £240. In 1656 he was referred to as ‘Thomas of Rowcastell, called of Quhytehouse, in Nesbit’. Rev. Thomas (17th/18th C.) graduating from Edinburgh University in 1683, he became minister of Southdean Parish in 1689. However, he was deprived later that year for ‘not reading the Proclamation of the Estates, and not praying for their majesties William and Mary’ (i.e. refusing to give up Episcopacy), and was said to have instead prayed for the late King James. The case was brought to the Privy Council by a group of Southdean Parishioners. He was declared a fugitive, but what happened to him afterwards is not known. Thomas of Edgerston, Hunthill and Wells (c.1650–1720) 3rd son of John. He succeeded after his brother Andrew’s death in 1718, but only held the lands for a couple of years before his own death. They had become ‘of that Ilk’ in 1703 when Robert Earl of Rutherford resigned his lands. He was also Laird of Wells, purchasing it (with his wife’s money) from Charles Stewart, 4th Earl of Traquair in 1687. He was listed as Laird of Wells in 1694 when he paid for 19 hearths in several parishes. He was also ‘of Wells’ when he contributed £800 to the Darien Scheme in 1695. In 1690 and 1704 he was listed as Laird of Wells on the Commission of Supply for Roxburghshire. However, in 1707 he sold Wells it to William Elliot, and was thus the last Rutherford Laird of Wells. He also acquired Bonjedward, Mounthooly and Scraesburgh, before 1707, when he was recorded as owner of more than £2200 worth of land in Bonjedward. He married Susanna, daughter and heiress of Walter Riddell of Minto and Catherine Nisbet of Dirlton. He was succeeded by his eldest son Sir John. His other children were: Barbara; Catherine Jean, who secondly married William Douglas of Tempendean in 1718; Agnes; Isabella; Susanna; and Violet, who married Robert Scott of Falnash. A stone preserved in the new Wells House built in the early 20th century, bore 18 coats of arms, showing the descent of both him and his wife.

Thomas of Knowesouth (1742–96) son of John and Mary Ker, he held a charter of Knowesouth in 1758 (his father being declared insane). He was descended from the Rutherfords of Ruecastle. In 1788 he was ‘younger of Knowesouth’ when his lands of Westfield (and others) in Lanton were listed in the valuation roll. He was listed among the voters of Roxburghshire in 1788; he was described at that time as having a small estate, being ‘once Sheriff-Substitute of the County under Oliver of Dinlabyre’ and probably being a supporter of Sir Gilbert Elliot. He was recorded on the Horse Tax Rolls in 1785–94. He paid tax for having a male servant in 1778, 1779 and 1794. In the 1788 county valuation he is recorded as owner of ‘Lands in Rewcastle acquired from his father’, valued at £48 10s (including teinds). He is still recorded as owner on the 1811 Land Tax Rolls of lands in Lanton, including ‘Lady Lands, formerly in Cavers Parish’. He married Margaret Elliot (perhaps also known as Christine), and their Thomas (b.1772), who probably died young; John (b.1774), who briefly succeeded; George (b.1775), in the Royal Navy; who succeeded for a very short period; Nelly (b.1777), who probably died young; Anne (b.1778), who married Dr. William Somerville; and Cicely (1778–1804), also known as Cecilia, who died at Knowesouth. None of these children produced heirs. He later married Ann, daughter of William Falla. Their children were: Thomas; Charles; Hugh, who emigrated to Ontario; and William, who lived in Ancrum and married Janet Angus. He is also recorded in Hawick in 1789 when his son Walter with Helen Scott (who appears to have ‘N.’ after her name) was baptised, with witnesses Andrew Elliot (servant to Rev. William Sharp) and Kirk Officer Thomas Miller. After his death the order of inheritance was complicated and disputed, but the estate eventually went to his sister Jean, who married Thomas Scott, uncle of Sir Walter of Abbotsford. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen Rieve and their children included: James (b.1769); John (b.1771); Margaret (b.1773); and Walter (b.1776). The witnesses in 1773 and 1776 were William Mitchellhill and Robert Riddell. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish. He married Margaret Elliot and their children included: Thomas (b.1772); John (b.1774); George (b.1775); Nelly (b.1777); and Anne and Cicely (b.1778). Thomas (18th/19th C.) clockmaker in Hawick. His unnamed child died in 1808. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825, where he is listed as ‘watchmaker’. He could be the son of clockmaker William who was born in Hawick in 1784. Thomas (b.1762) son of mason Robert and Mary Simpson. He was elder brother of Caleb. He married Magdalen Dryden and their children included: Margaret (b.1786); and Robert (1789–1838). He may have secondly married Jane Elliot and their children included Francis (b.1794). It seems likely he was a mason, like his father.

Thomas (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1791 he married Jane Elliot, also from Hawick. Their son Francis was baptised in 1794. He could be the Thomas who witnessed a baptism for James Laidlaw in 1773. Thomas (1784/5–1855) son of shepherd Thomas and Helen Reeve. He was a farm worker at Haysike, and is recorded there in 1841. He married Jane, daughter of agricultural worker George Michie, and she died in 1859, aged 75. Their children were: Thomas, gamekeeper at Blackcockhaa; John, shoemaker; and Maggie, who married James Winstrup. Thomas (b.1807/8) born in Ancrum Parish, he was farmer at Sandystanes in the 1860s. In 1861 he is recorded there along with his brothers John (retired accountant), George (retired farmer), William (also a farmer) and sister Isabella. He is listed as farmer at Sandystones in 1868. Thomas (b.1811) son of Bonchester joiner James. He served for 21 years in the army. After his discharge he became a policeman in Hawick. In 1861 he is listed as a 'Police Office, Chelsea Pensioner', living at 10 O'Connell Street. He married Elizabeth Young in Hawick in 1859 and their children included: James (b.1859), who worked with Turnbull the Dyers; and Richard (b.1861), who probably died young. Thomas Elliot (1816–1900) son of Thomas, he was born at Branxholme Park. He was gamekeeper at Blackcockhaa (also known as Byreleehaugh) near the head of the Ale and also lived at Bellendean Cottage. He married Christina Scott (grand-daughter of 'The Pether') at Haysike and she died at Wellogate Place in 1877, aged 54. Their children were: Jane Scott (d.1844), only daughter, who died in infancy at Toddshawhill; Thomas, who became a coal merchant; David; George; and Walter R. He and some of his family are buried at Borthwick Waas. Thomas (b.1816) mason in Hawick, son of Robert. In 1841 he was listed as head of the family at Mill Bank, living with his widowed mother and his siblings William, Robert, John, Jane, Agnes and George. Thomas ‘Tom’ (1832–1906) son of James and Betty Beattie, who was daughter of Betty Stevenson. His father died when he was young, and in 1841 he is listed with his mother in the home of his grand-uncle Andrew Stevenson, blacksmith at Bonchester Bridge. He was educated by George Tancred’s mother and then at Hobkirk School. He was assistant blacksmith at Bonchester Bridgend in the mid-1800s, and effectively took over as blacksmith by the 1860s and formally after his great-uncle Andrew Stevenson’s death in 1871. He helped carry letters to Chesters for a while. His great-grandfather John was shepherd at Shiplaw Cross. James Elliot took over from him as blacksmith in about 1902. In 1853 he married Agnes Burns (d.1901), who came from Ancrum. Their children were: Janet (b.c.1853); Andrew Stevenson (b.1854), blacksmith in Newcastle; Elisabeth (b.1856), who lived in New York; Christina (b.1858), a professional cook in New York, who married James Rennie; Margaret (b.1860), who married blacksmith Gideon Scott and lived in Hawick; Agnes (b.1862); John Burns (b.1863), blacksmith in Belfast, who married Jean Waugh, daughter of the tenant at Hartshaugh Mill; Agnes (again, b.1865), who married Ecclefechan blacksmith Andrew Calvert; Thomas (b.1867), a tailor and clothier with businesses in Belfast and Bangor, he married Isabella Sparks, sister of his sister-in-law; Alexander Burns (b.1870); Alexander Burns (again, b.1871), wine and spirit merchant in Crook, County Durham; and James (b.1876), blacksmith for a while and later proprietor of the Fox & Hounds. Said to posses a wonderful memory, he helped George Tancred with information for his book on Rulewater. He died in Hawick. Thomas (1846–1909) son of gamekeeper Thomas and Christina Scott. He became a coal and hay merchant of Wellogate Place. He was active in the Total Abstinence Society, the Congregational Church and the P.S.A. He married Catherine, daughter of William Whillans (from Chesters), and she died in 1935, aged 88. Their children were Thomas, Isabella Christina (who married James H. Haining) and Catherine Jane. He is buried in the Wellogate. Walter (15th C.) recorded in 1494 when John of Edgerston failed to produce him to stand trial before the High Court of the Judiciary in Jedburgh. Perhaps the same Walter ‘in falishop’ (i.e. Phaup) componed in 1494/5 for stealing sheep from Hartwood and Haining, a cow from Minto, oats from Fairnington and other crimes. Walter, son of Walter in Phaup, failed to appear at the court in 1494/5 and his surety, John of Edgerston, was fined. Walter (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 as ‘lustus’ (probably a nickname meaning ‘lusty’) in Edgerston. He was surety for John ‘Cowar’, also in Edgerston. Walter of Fairnington (16th C.) recorded in 1580/1 when he claimed right to lands in Lessuden. It is unclear how he was related to other Rutherfords. Walter (17th/18th C.) workman in Hawick. He married Isobel Turnbull in Wilton Parish. Their children may have included Robert (b.1724), a mason. Walter (17th/18th C.) described in 1694 as ‘portioner of Caiphope’ (i.e. Capehope) when he was involved in the discharge of a bond with Henry Elliot of Harwood. He may have been son of John of Capehope, being the Walter of Capehope who paid the land tax in Hownam Parish. Walter (1723–1804) younger son of Sir John of

Edgerston. He served with the army in America, being a Captain in the 60th Regiment. He persuaded his brother John to join him in America, and there John died at Ticonderoga (where he was probably also present) in 1758. He was later a hostage of the Americans and eventually settled there. He married Mary, daughter of Gen. Alexander. Their son John (1760–1840) was a land surveyor and politician, who spelled his name ‘Rutherfurd’, served on the U.S. Senate, laid out part of Manhattan and settled New Jersey’s boundaries; he named his house Edgerston', at what is now called Rutherford, New Jersey. Walter (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘ Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. Walter (1814–97) son of Robert and Jane Crawford. He worked as a shepherd in the Borthwick area. Mabonlaw. He won a silver medal for speed in shearing sheep. In 1851 he was shepherd at Branhomilton and was at Mabonlaw in 1861. In 1844 he married Ann Clark (1825–55), who may have been from Dyke, Morayshire. Their children included: Mary (b.1845), who married Andrew Huggan; Robert (b.c.1846), who emigrated to Canada; Janet (b.1847), returned to Scotland; John (b.1849), became an undertaker in Glasgow; Charles (b.1851), partner in Rutherford & Kay, wine merchants; Isabella (b.1851), who went to Frankford, New York; and Alexander (b.1854). In 1861 he secondly married Helen Scott Beattie, daughter of John Beattie, shepherd at Combe; her mother was Isobel Scott, said to be related to Sir Walter Scott. Their children were: Isabella (b.1862); Walter (b.1865); Adam (b.1866); Helen (b.1869); James (b.1870); William (b.c.1873); and Ann (b.1875). In 1881 they emigrated to a farm at Turnberry in Western Ontario, and he died in Bluevale, Huron County. Walter (19th C.) farmer of Crailing Tofts. He was well known as a local golfer, being first President of the Border Golfers’ Association. His paternal grandmother was Elizabeth Bunyan from Spittal-on-Rule and his uncle was William Rutherford, Professor of Physiology at Edinburgh University. He served as a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire. William (13th C.) recorded on the Ragman Rolls of 1296 as ‘William de Rotherford’ parson of ‘Lillesclyue’ (i.e. Lilliesleaf). ‘Johan de Lillescliff’ was also recorded there, as well as ‘Aymer de Rotherford’ (of Roxburghshire) although whether they were related is unknown. His seal bore a bull’s head with a human head between the horns, and with the name ‘SWIL’MI lands of Branxholme and Buccleuch. He was succeeded by his son Robert. William of Longnewton (16th C.) possibly son of the earlier William. In 1578 he signed a bond of allegiance with other Rutherfords, Turnbills and Douglas of Cavers. He may have died before 1583 when the other barons of the bond were declared rebels. William of Abbotrule (16th C.) recorded in 1581/2 when he witnessed a transaction between Walter Scott of Todrig and Joanna, daughter of ‘Dand’ of Grange. William seems likely to have been related to the Rutherfords of Grange. William of Littleheugh (16th C.) recorded in 1590 when accused by the English Warden of being part of a raid into England 3 years earlier. John Scott ‘the Tinkler’ led the group of what was claimed to be 500 men on a day-long foray. His son Andrew was accused of being on another raid at the same time, with his sons Andrew and Richard being recorded in 2 additional accusations. His designation was transcribed ‘Lyttelewghge’. He was also recorded in 1590 among men of Teviotdale accused of breaking their bond with Englishman Edmund Crawster. William (d.c.1619) local man described as ‘in Rafflat’ probably Rawflat, Ancrum Parish) in a 1612 list of men convicted of charging too much interest on loans. He appeared to answer the charges. His son William was served as his heir in 1619. William (16th/17th C.) schoolmaster at Hobkirk. He was recorded as master there in a deed of 1616. He was also witness to a ‘wadset’ for lands in the Kirkhaugh of Hobkirk in 1618; Robert, ‘servitor to William Rutherford, notary public’ was another witness, and so possibly his servant. James Arbuthnott was recorded as master in 1619. He may be the William who was reader at Hownam in 1609. William (17th C.) served as heir to his father William in Rawflat in 1619. William of Bankend (d.bef. 1714) eldest son of John of Bankend, who was Provost of Jedburgh. He was descended from the Rutherfords of Hunthill. In 1676 he sold Bankend (with the consent of James Gledstains of Cocklaw, his wife’s trustee). He was later referred to as being ‘of Lochend’. He married Esther Langlands, who was grand-daughter of George Langlands of that Ilk. His widow is recorded in a bond of 1714. They had 4 daughters, who were served as co-heirs to their father: Margaret; Isobel; Lillias; and Esther. William (17th C.) weaver who was listed among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. William (17th C.) served as interim Town Clerk in 1696. He was a Bailie of Jedburgh and recorded as a writer in Hawick in 1690 when his son Thomas became a baxter’s apprentice in Edinburgh. He may be the same as William of Bankend. Dr. William of Barnhills (d.bef. 1731). He bought the lands of Barnhills from Sir William Bennet of Grubet in 1703, with sasine in 1705. He married Agnes, daughter of Sir Gideon Scott of Highchester. He had 2 daughters: Margaret, who married Rev. Alexander Mackenzie of Edinburgh; Helen; and Jean, who married John Mowbray from Edinburgh. Each of his daughters inherited a third of Barnhills. William (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, living at Northcroft in 1751. He married Margaret Hall and their children included: Agnes (b.1746), baptised in Ashkirk; and Thomas (b.1751), baptised in Wilton. The witnesses in 1751 were James Dryden and Walter Scott. William (d.1797) clockmaker of Hawick. He married Helen Scott and their children included Thomas (b.1784). The record of his death states that he was ‘killed by a fall over a stair’. The death of his wife Nelly Scott is recorded in 1805. William (18th/19th C.) Sheriff Clerk in Jedburgh, recorded in 1814. William (1797/8–1871) probably born in Northumberland, he was teacher at Woodburn 1822–25. He then came to Hawick, where he was teacher of Mathematics and other subjects at the Grammar School. About 1832 he moved to be master at Corporation Academy, Berwick, in 1838 moved to the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich, and retired about 1864. He was a member of the council of the Royal Astronomical Society 1844–47 and Honorary Secretary in 1845 and 1846. He contributed mathematical problems to publications such as the ‘Ladies’ Diary’ and co-edited the first volume of ‘The Mathematician’ in 1845. He also edited many other mathematical books, including ‘Simson’s Euclid’ and Hutton’s ‘Course of Mathematics’. He published about 15 papers, including a solution of spherical triangles, and the calculation of π to 440 decimal places. His wife was Elizabeth, and they had a daughter, Mary Fenwick. He died at his home in London. William Oliver (1781–1879) of Edgerston, son of Jane Rutherford and William Oliver of Dinlabyre. He was born at Weens, with a celebratory larch planted on the side of the walk to the garden. He succeeded to Dinlabyre on the death of his father in 1830. He was ‘younger of Dinlabyre’ when he served as a Lieutenant in the Roxburgh Volunteer cavalry that responded to the False Alarm of 1804. He was listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805, when still ‘junior of Dinlabyre’. He was also a founder of Edinburgh 1812 list of men convicted of charging too much interest on loans. He appeared to answer the charges. His son William was served as his heir in 1619. William (16th/17th C.) schoolmaster at Hobkirk. He was recorded as master there in a deed of 1616. He was also witness to a ‘wadset’ for lands in the Kirkhaugh of Hobkirk in 1618; Robert, ‘servitor to William Rutherford, notary public’ was another witness, and so possibly his servant. James Arbuthnott was recorded as master in 1619. He may be the William who was reader at Hownam in 1609. William (17th C.) served as heir to his father William in Rawflat in 1619. William of Bankend (d.bef. 1714) eldest son of John of Bankend, who was Provost of Jedburgh. He was descended from the Rutherfords of Hunthill. In 1676 he sold Bankend (with the consent of James Gledstains of Cocklaw, his wife’s trustee). He was later referred to as being ‘of Lochend’. He married Esther Langlands, who was grand-daughter of George Langlands of that Ilk. His widow is recorded in a bond of 1714. They had 4 daughters, who were served as co-heirs to their father: Margaret; Isobel; Lillias; and Esther. William (17th C.) weaver who was listed among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. William (17th C.) served as interim Town Clerk in 1696. He was a Bailie of Jedburgh and recorded as a writer in Hawick member of the Jedforest Club in 1810. He succeeded his father as Sheriff of Roxburghshire in 1807. He was listed as a Commissioner of Roxburghshire in 1819 (along with his father), when still younger of Dinlabyre. He was probably the William listed as ‘sheriff clerk, Jedburgh’ in 1825 when he subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’. He was Sheriff during some of the local election troubles of the 1830s, requesting that a troop of dragoons be sent to Hawick in 1835, and reading the Riot Act twice on that occasion. He purchased the estate of Knowesouth from Charles Scott, and had the mansion there built, but sold it not long afterwards to George Pott in 1838 (although may have held on to part of these lands). He also acquired part of the lands of Ruecastle from the heirs of Thomas Rutherford of Knowesouth. After his uncle John of Edgerston died in 1834, he passed the lands of Edgerston and changed his surname. He was recorded at Edgerston in Pigot’s 1837 directory and at Dinlabyre in 1852. In 1839 he was present at the banquet at Branxholme for the Duke of Buccleuch. He was also Deputy-Lieutenant (from 1848), Justice of the Peace and Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire. He also served as Chairman of the Lunacy Board for Roxburghshire, Selkirkshire and Berwickshire, and Chairman of the Police and Prison Boards for Roxburghshire. He retired from his duties as Sheriff in 1868. In 1804 he married Agnes, 2nd daughter of Alexander Chatto of Mainhouse, and she died in 1859. His children included: William, who died young in 1818; a second son who died the same year; Elizabeth, who married Rev. James Denniston in Malta; William Alexander Oliver (b.1818), who succeeded and whose son William Edward Oliver sold Edgerston; Jane, who married McDuff Rhind, Sheriff-Substitute for Wigtonshire; and Archibald John, who succeeded to Dinlabyre. His name was sometimes written ‘Oliver-Rutherford’. William (b.1804/5) watchmaker of Hawick, son of Francis and Alison Henderson. He was recorded on the High Street in Pigot’s 1837 directory. In the 1841–61 censuses he was living at 7 High Street. His mother was living in the adjacent house in 1851. He married May Rutherford, daughter of builder Robert. His children included: Jane (b.c.1839); Alice (b.1841); Francis (‘Frank’) E. (b.c. 1844); Robert (b.c.1845); Matilda (b.c.1848), who married Thomas Davidson; Andrew S. (b.1850); Agnes; and Elizabeth A. (b.c.1853) A portrait exists of him. William (b.1812) son of Bonchester joiner James. He emigrated to Australia and is said to have done well. When he heard of the death of his brother Alexander (who had suffered paralysis), he sent money back to Hobkirk Parish to cover the expenses for maintaining him. William (b.1813/4) born in Hawick, he was a shepherd. In 1841 he was living at Mabonlaw and in 1851 his family were there (but he was presumably absent during the census). By 1861 he was at Glenkerry. His wife was Janet (from Kirkton Parish) and their children included Helen, Robert, James, Janet, William and Thomas. William (1818–80) son of Hawick builder Robert and Jane Waldie. He married Beatrice, daughter of William Brydon and Margaret Hogg. Their children were Margaret, Jean, Matilda, Robert William, Catherine Anne, Elizabeth H., Georgina, Alice May, William Thomas and Agnes, at least the first of which was born in Hawick. They emigrated to Ontario in about 1850. It may be that he was responsible for naming the area ‘Millbank’, near Waterloo and Stratford in Ontario. William ‘Willie’ (1849/50–1937) resident of the small house in Cogsmill that used to be the school. His wife ran the post office and shop there. He married Margaret Turnbull, who died in 1925, aged 74. Their son William John was born in Hawick in 1891. They are buried in Denholm (formerly written ‘Rourtherfurd’, ‘Ruderfurde’, ‘Rudirfurde’, ‘Rutherfurd’, ‘Rutherfurd’, ‘Ruthirfurd’, ‘Ruthirfurde’, etc.).

the Rutherfords (thu-ru-thur-furdz) n. prominent family around the Kelso and Jedburgh areas. The family name is believed to have originated in their lands near Maxton, various versions of the traditional story involving a fording of the Tweed that led to Scots victory. They had land in Roxburghshire since at least the 12th century. Aymer and Sir Nicholas ‘de Rotherford’ swore fealty to Edward I in 1296, as well as William, who was Parson of Lilliesleaf. Sir Richard Rutherford, Warden of the Marches, and his 5 sons helped repel English incursions in the years around 1400. He is the direct ancestor of the Rutherfords of Chatto, Edgerston, Huntill, Hundlee, Fairnington and Fairnilee. Robert Rutherford of Chatto gained renown in helping with the victory at Otterburn. In 1544 some of the Rutherfords were among the families that ‘did set on red crosses on their cotes’ and support the English army in the burning of Jedburgh etc. Thomas Rutherford, the Black Laird of Edgerston, was famous for his daring attacks on the English in the 16th century, particularly at the Raid of the Redeswire. The Edgerston branch tended to spell their name ‘Rutherford’. A feud with the Turnbuls in Teviotdale was recorded in Parliament in 1479. General Andrew Rutherford became Lord Rutherford in 1661 and was made Earl of Teviot (a title that became extinct) in 1663. The Rutherfords also held the lands of Wells in Rulewater. The various branches of the family are intimately connected with the other local landed families through marriage. A family of that name in Hawick were known for their abilities on the fiddle for several generations around the 18th century. The family motto is ‘Nec Sorte Nec Fato’ (‘Neither by strategy nor by chance’) and the shield is silver with a red border and three blackbirds at the top—‘...The Ruthfoords, with grit renown, Convoy’d the town of Jedburgh out’ [T].

Rutherford’s Directory (ru-thur-furdz-DI-rek-ru-ree) n. directory of businesses and prominent individuals in the south of Scotland, as well as listing statistical information for each of the 3 Borders counties. It was officially known as ‘Rutherford’s Southern Counties Register’ and was published in 1867 by J. and J.H. Rutherford of Kelso. It is an invaluable source of local information in this decade, and contains considerably more detail than the more general directories of Scotland. It was reprinted in facsimile form in 1990.

Ruthven (ruth-vin) n. William 4th Lord Ruthven (c.1541–84). Along with his father Patrick, he was involved with the murder of Mary Queen of Scots’ secretary Rizzio. In 1572 he captured a force under Ferniehirst and Buccleuch, which had unsuccessfully tried to surprise Jedburgh (which was loyal to the infant James VI) and then retreated to Hawick. In 1578/9 he was the King’s Lieutenant in the West Marches when he brought an action against 22 Border Lairds for the deeds of the men for whom they served as cautioners. He was later involved in a plot to seize James VI and was executed.

In September 1939 about 900 evacuees (mothers, children and teachers) arrived in Hawick, along with 600 others for the Denholm, Minto, Roberton and other country areas. Like other communities Hawick had its own Home Guard, and women helped on farms through the Land Army. The ration book office was at 21 High Street. Stobs Camp became an extremely active place during the War years. St. Mary’s Kirk was requisitioned and Allars Kirk Hall was set up as the reserve headquarters for Civil Defence. Many iron railings around the town were requisitioned for the War effort in 1942. The Common Riding was cancelled for the years 1940–45, but the marches were ridden by Chap Landles (on his own in 1940), accompanied by some supporters (14 in 1941). Hawick soldiers stationed ‘somewhere in England’ appointed W. Slorance as Cornet in 1940, and ‘somewhere in Scotland’ they appointed E. Moffat as Cornet in 1941. The 4th Battalion, the K.O.S.B. appointed Jim Reid as their Cornet in 1945, using a flag made by the women at Pringle’s, which was dipped in the Elbe; this was returned with the names embroidered on it of places where they had lost comrades. There were celebrations in Hawick on both V.E. and V.J. Days.

the Salvation Airmy (thu-saw-l, sel-vä-shin-är-mee) n. evangelical and charitable movement with a quasi-military style, founded in London in the 1860s and re-named in 1878. Jokingly referred to as the ‘Sally Airmy’, the Hawick branch started in 1887, with the founder Gen. Booth visiting the town in 1905. A band was started in 1919. The first meetings were in the Temperance Hall on Croft Road, with location shifting to Silver Street, Drumlanrig Square, Tannage Close and then the foot of the Mill Path in the early 1920s. A drama group was started in 1954. This Home Mission Building was converted from use as the drill hall of the Teviotdale Rifle Corps, serving as the organisation’s Citadel until 1961 (and being demolished in 1968). In 1961 the property on Croft Road was purchased and rebuilt into the new Citadel, occupied in 1962 (also spelled and pronounced ‘Selvation’).

Salvation Airmy Citadel (sawl-vä-shin-är-mee-si-u-del) n. Salvation Army meeting house, on Croft Road, opened in 1962, with previous citadels being located in other parts of the town since 1878.

Sametoun (saw-mee-tin) n. lands said to be in the Barony of Wilton and listed along with Outersidemill and Todshaw when granted to Sir William Wardlaw of Wilton in about 1400. It is unclear what lands the name could refer to, and hence it is possibly an error for the lands of similar name in Oxnam or Jedburgh Parishes.

Sam Marsden’s (sawm-nawrz-dinz) n. High Street fishmonger’s shop on the north side of the High Street in the mid-20th century.

samen (sä-min) adj., arch. same, aforementioned – ‘...and beis nocht tennandis til hym of the samyn’ [SB1470], ‘...and service of frie tenentis of the samen, with the pertinentis, liand within the baronie of Branxhlemne ...’ [SB1569], ‘...desyreing the samen to be ratified, confirmed and approvin by them ...’ [BR], ‘...and obleist him not to wrong the meiths and marches of the samen’ [BR1675], ‘By reason of y manse being remote from other houses and none at present inhabiteing ye samen ...’ [PR1711] (also spelled ‘samin’, ‘samyn’, etc.).

sampil (sawm-pul) n., arch. an example, specimen, especially of stolen goods – ‘The said John Hardie ...to be brought to the mercatt croce of Hawick ...and to stand thereupon with the sampell of the stouth upoun his shouldeurs or ells ane paper upoun his breist or foirhead to declare the fact’ [BR].

the Sanmey Ling Centre (thu-saw-mee-ling-see-u) n. Tibetan-style Buddhist monastery and community near Eskdalemuir, about 20 miles from Hawick, formerly the estate of Johnstone House. It is named after a Tibetan monastery, and was started by 2 American Buddhists who had started a small temple and gifted the house and grounds to 2 visiting abbots in 1967. It became Scotland’s first Buddhist monastery, and the first phase was largely completed by 1988.
with the full courtyard still being worked on, and plans to make it the most extensive temple outside Tibet. It was inaugurated by the Dalai Lama in 1993.

the Sandbed ( thu-sawnd-bed) _n._ name for the relatively low-lying area near the confluence of the Slitrig with the Teviot, now an official name for the street from the roundabout to Albert Road. The name derives from the alluvial, sandy deposits that were there before the area was built up (interestingly, Kilmarnock also had a Sandbed from early times, and there is also an area in Dumfries that had that name). The name goes back at least to the late 17th century and the area was formerly part of the Common. In 1712 it is recorded that someone was fined ‘for breaking the ground in that part of the common called the Haugh and Sandbed, at the foot of the Church-wynd, by digging, delving, and bigging of ane dyke there’. It eventually became an enclosed space, which was well used on market and fair days (e.g. in 1701). There were houses across what is now Buccleuch Street and an archway gave access to the gardens there. It stopped being used for public gatherings with the building of the Teviot Bridge in 1741. The land around the area was feued for building in 1782, split into lots for houses (with a 99 year lease) and 2 building areas in the centre were sold in 1791. When the New Road was opened in 1815 the market was moved to the Tower Knowe. At the same time the houses between the Howegate and Orrock Place were demolished to provide access to Buccleuch Street. The name was officially changed to Teviot Square by the Town Council from the late 1840s, but it was never popular and was abandoned after about 10 years. There was a public weighing machine for use by carriers near the Ewe & Lamb from before the days of the railway until the latter part of the 19th century. J.P. Alison designed renovations to Nos. 11 and 12 in 1895. The area also saw traffic lights introduced in 1939. The traffic pattern was altered with a more substantial roundabout and demolition of the island site of 3 and 4 Sandbed in 1987. The street contains a post office, a launderette and the Angling Club offices. Note that the building on the corner is unusually 5 stories high. Nos. 1, 2 and 3 are grade C listed buildings – ‘Then through the Sandbed the pair did go . . .’ [WE].

Sandbed (sawnd-bed) _n._ also called ‘Sandbed English’, a humorous term for an attempt to speak English by someone who normally speaks only broad Hawick, an affected, comical mixture of proper English and broad Hawick, e.g. ‘pussy get down off that ruif’ – ‘hei was speakin in his best Sandbed’.

Sandbed English ( sawnd-bed-ing-gleeesh) _n._ affected English spoken by someone who normally only speaks in dialect – ‘San’bed English, ‘fine’ English as attempted to be spoken by a Borderer, in which Scotch words are unfittingly introduced’ [GW] (see Sandbed).

Sanderson (sawn-duisin) _n._ Adam (17th C.) resident of Roberton Parish, probably the part corresponding to Hassendean. He married Margaret Porteous and their children included: Janet (b.1681); and Margaret (b.1684). Walter Scott was witness in 1681, James Scott and Walter Gledstains in 1684 and Walter Sanderson (presumably a relative) and Robert Wright in 1686. He may be the tenant in ‘Hoap’ (perhaps Heap) whose will was recorded in 1686. Probably the same Adam was recorded as witness to baptisms in Roberton Parish for James Scott in 1680 and for John Hope and John Martin in 1681. Adam (17th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He married Margaret Rutherford in Roberton in 1685. Their children included: Andrew (b.1686); Helen (b.1687); and Robert (b.1689). The 1687 witnesses were John Hope and Robert Scott. He could be the same Adam who was previously married to Margaret Porteous. Adam (17th C.) workman in the Hawick area. He married Margaret Hogg and their children included Robert (b.1711), baptised in Hawick. Thomas (b.1704), baptised in Minto, may also have been their child. The witnesses in 1711 were merchant Thomas Hardie and carrier James Aitkin. Elizabeth ‘Bessie’ (17th C.) cottar at Appletreehall according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Elizabeth ‘Bessie’ (d.1750) resident of ‘Greenside’ in Wilton Parish whose funeral is recorded. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He married Isobel Robson and their children included John (b.1681). The witnesses were James Deans and Walter Sanderson (who was surely related to him). He witnessed a baptism for George Rid dell in 1681. James (17th/18th C.) merchant of Newcastle who left £60 to the poor of Hawick Parish in 1748 (and so was presumably a native). Probably the same merchant James witnessed a baptism in Hawick in 1737 and others in 1740 for gardener Walter (who was probably related) and for smith Robert Young. James (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He is recorded in Newbigging in 1713. He took over part of the farm of Brauxholme Town in 1726, after the death of Robert Scott. Probably the same James married Beatrix, daughter of James Davidson, in Hawick Parish in 1711 and had children: James (b.1713); Margaret (b.1714); and Janet (b.1717). The witnesses in 1713 were James Davidson and Walter Scott in Newbigging. In 1717 his wife’s surname is given as ‘Scott’. James (d. bef. 1815) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Marion (or Mary) Henderson, whose death is recorded in 1815. Their children included James (b.1783). James (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isabel Scott and their son James was baptised in 1811, with witnesses Robert Tinlin and Agnes Scott (perhaps a relative of his wife). The baptism is recorded right after that for a child of George Nicholson and Isabel Scott in 1804, suggesting that his wife may have been the mother in both cases, and have married twice. Jean (c.1730-c.1810) wife of Henry Scott ‘the Hero of Quebec’ She received a widow’s pension of £40 and lived in a cottage called ‘the Saaverin’ a little below Stobs Castle, on the opposite side of the Slitrig. She became known for her dirty habits and wild appearance and was evicted by Sir William Elliot, who had her house demolished, apparently because her appearance and behaviour frightened his horses. Thereafter she lived in Hawick. She was said to have turned down a suitor later in life, when she discovered she would lose her pension if she remarried. She survived her husband by about 50 years. John (17th C.) resident of Robertson Parish, when it contained Hassendean. He married Margaret ‘Bleakie’ in 1680 and their children included: James (b.1680); Margaret (b.1683); Jean (b.1686); and Adam (b.1689). The witnesses in 1680 were James Scott and James Blakie and in 1686 were James Blakie (perhaps related to his wife) and John Armstrong. John (17th C.) listed among the ‘Cottars in Hassendean’ on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Mary (17th C.) recorded in 1676 when she was among a group of Hawick people found guilty of using faulty measures. She was specifically found to have a ‘half-pecke ane mutchkin short’. She may be the ‘Marie’ recorded in the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694 among those ‘Payed but not listed in Hauick Toune’. She could be the Marie, wife of John Nasmith, whose son William Nasmith was born in Hawick in 1652. Robert (18th C.) living in Robertson Parish in 1734 when his unnamed daughter was baptised in 1734, with no residence given. Simon ‘Sym’ (16th C.) tenant of one of the local farms of Alexander Lord Home in 1562/3. Home (as superior of Midshiels, Appletree hall, Broadlee, ‘Cotlaw’, Burnside and mill) tried to have his ‘pretended tenants’ removed. Perhaps the same Simon was recorded in 1579 as owner of a tenement on the north side of the High Street in Hawick, ‘quhilk sumtyme pertenit to Thomas Logane’, adjacent to the tenement of David, brother to Walter Scott in Chamberlain Newton. Thomas (17th C.) resident at ‘milmannae’ on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls for Hassendean Parish. He was probably a farmer at Moormaw. He is probably the Thomas who witnessed a baptism along with Walter in 1688 for James Shiel in east Burnfoot. He married Helen Shiel in Robertson in 1683 and their children included: Bessie (b.1685); and Helen (b.1687). The witnesses in 1687 were Robert Scott (probably of Lees) and James Shiel (who was probably related to his wife). Walter (17th C.) resident of Hassendean in the 1680s, when it was part of Robertson Parish. He married Elspeth Riddell and their children included: Margaret (b.1680); Helen (b.1683); and Simon (b.1687). The witnesses in 1683 were Andrew Deans and James Shiel. He could also be the Walter, married to Isabel Shiel, whose had a daughter Jean (b.1694) baptised in Wilton Parish. He may be the Walter who witnessed baptisms in Robertson Parish in 1681 for James, in 1682 for William Nichol, herd in Boonraw, in 1688 for Adam (who was probably a relative) and in 1688 (along with Thomas) for James Shiel in East Burnfoot. Walter (17th C.) recorded among the poor of Hassendean Parish in 1694, when he was at Appletree hall. He is probably the Walter ‘in Apelttreehall’ whose wife Janet Brown’s will is recorded in 1682. William (17th/18th C.) tenant farmer in Hawick. He is recorded as ‘tenant in Hawick’ in 1719 when his son William was born posthumously. He married Margaret Turnbull and their children included: Janet (b.1712); Margaret (b.1714); Anna (b.1716); and William (b.1719). The witnesses in 1712 were smith John Scott and wright Francis Gledstains and in 1719 were merchant William Chisholme and cooper John Aitkin. William (18th C.) resident at Heap in Wilton Parish. He married Helen Aitken in 1725 and their daughter Janet was baptised in 1726. The witnesses were William and James Aitken (probably related to his wife). He is probably the William who in 1735 witnessed a baptism for William Lamb, resident of Wester Burnfoot. William (18th C.) recorded at West Cote in 1730 when he married Bessie Wilson in Cavers Parish. William (18th/19th C.) tailor in Hawick. He is probably the William who married Betty Little in 1779 and had children: James (b.1780); William (b.1781); Isabel (b.1784); James (again, b.1787); and Margaret, who died in 1809. William ‘Wullie’ (1853–1945) journalist, editor of the ‘Border Magazine’, poet and museum curator from Peebles. He gave us the words and music for ‘The Soft Lowland Tongue’, which is also sung in many other Border towns. He sometimes wrote under the name ‘Tweedside Laddie’ (formerly ‘Sandersone’).

Sandholm (sawnd-hömi) n. hamlet at the junction of the Liddel and Hermitage Waters and where the B6399 (Hawick to Newcastleton road) meets the B5357 (from the Note o the Gate), about 1 1/2 miles north-east of Newcastleton. Cuthbert Little and William Armstrong were there there in 1694. John Elliot was tenant there in the mid-to-late 19th century. There were 15 huts there housing railway workers on the 1861 census. Walter Turnbull and Walter Thomson were there there in 1868. It was the location of Bankend Kirk, recently converted to a house. There was also a schoolhouse and smithy there. In the mid-19th century the school was run by Christian Telfer, daughter of the ‘poetic schoolmaster’ of Saughtree. To the north and northwest there were 3 curling ponds (also sometimes ‘Sandyholm’; it is ‘Sandiholme’ in 1694).

Sandhope see Sundhope

Sandie (san-dee) n. George (18th C.) dyker in Hawick Parish. He married Isabel Stevenson and their children included: Janet (b.1756); Agnes (b.1759); and Jane (b.1761). The witnesses in 1759 were Kirk Officer Alexander Bunyan and midwife Mary Simpson.

Sandilands (san-dee-lindz) n. Sir James of Calder (d.1554) son of Sir James and Jean Stewart, daughter of King Robert II. He was thus brother-in-law of King Robert III. He held the right to inherit several lands and titles following the death of Isabella, Countess of Mar (sister of the King’s son-in-law, George Douglas, Earl of Angus). This included the Barony of Cavers, Sheriffship of Roxburghshire, Lordship of Jedburgh, Lordship of Liddesdale, lands of Bonjedward and town of Selkirk, as well as lands further afield. In 1397 he passed them on to George Douglas, Earl of Angus, but they reverted to him after the Earl’s death, as confirmed in a charter of Robert III in 1404/5. Confusion over the Barony of Cavers grew out of the earlier grant to Archibald Douglas (1st of Cavers) not being confirmed by Robert III. Sometime around 1390 he and John Haliburton of that Ilk granted the lands of Falnash and others in Tranent to Thomas Cranston of that Ilk. In 1425 he is mentioned in a charter for Patrick Lindsay and in 1426 he had a charter for lands in Stirlingshire. He married Jonet and was succeeded by his son Sir John. James of that Ilk (15th/16th C.) listed among the Borders men who were pardoned in 1526 for attacking the Earl of Arran. His sons John and William are also listed. He was Captain of Hermitage Castle for a short period in 1532/3. He was probably succeeded by his son John of that Ilk. James (d.1579) 1st Lord Torphichen, brother of John of Calder. He was son of a first cousin of the Parson of Hawick with the same surname. He held lands in Rule valley, with the lands of Templehall and Brewlands (part of Harwood) being feu’d to Andrew Turnbull in 1567. He married Janet Murray and died without an heir. John (d.1583) second son of James of Cruvie (and descendant of the daughter of Sir Archibald Douglas of Liddesdale and Cavers, as well as being descended from a daughter of Robert II). He was Parson of Hawick, although he may simply have held the living and not actually preached in the Parish, since William Auchmowtie served as Reader of Hawick, Wilton, Hassendean, Cavers and Kirkton at the same time. He held the ‘prebend’ of Hawick before the Reformation. He is recorded as witness to a charter relating to John Sandilands of Calder in 1554, where he is described as ‘Rector of Hawik’. He is also recorded with this title in 1557. Thus he was probably associated with Hawick Parish both before and after the Reformation. In 1558 both he and John Spottiswood are described as Rectors of Hawick in a charter for James, Lord Torpichen. In 1569/70 the Bailies of Edinburgh ordered that town to pay him the ‘maillis’ he was owed for the grammar school there; he was said to be ‘persoun de Hawik’, but clearly was based in Edinburgh. He was still ‘parson and vicar’ in 1581 according to a document relating to teinds with Walter Scott of Buccleuch. It is unclear whether he held the position until his death. He married Janet Craig and had 1 child, Margaret. He died in Edinburgh, where his last will and testament is recorded (also spelled ‘Sandelandis’).
the Sands (thu-sawndz) n. alternative name used for the Sandbed before about 1700.

Sandy Burnett’s (sawn-dee-bur-nits) n. popular name for the hill below Greensidehall, presumably named after a former owner of the nearby farm.

Sandy Fussy (sawn-dee-fu-see) n. name given to at least one rag and bone man of the early 20th century, who would give balloons to children in exchange for scrap items. The original ‘Sandy Fussy’ probably predated this, although whether he was fictional is unclear.

Sandy Fussy’s Cairt (sawn-dee-fu-seez-kär’) n. name sometimes used for the local children’s rhyme, sung to the tune of ‘the Keel Row’ and similar to ‘Charlie is my darling’), see Oo’re aa gaun ti Denum.

Sandystone (sawn-deehawch) n. former name for lands in Ashkirk Parish, owned by Scott of Woll in 1609, when it is ‘Sandiehauch’. It is ‘Sandy Hall’ on Ainslie’s 1773 map, marked to the east of New Woll, near where the Woll Burn meets the Ale Water. John Scott was recorded there in 1788 and Andrew Scott was farmer there in 1797. Andrew Cleghorn was farmer in the 1840s to 60s.

Sandystone (sawn-deehawch) n. former cottage in the Ewes valley, on the other side of the main road from the farm of Bush. There were Welshes there in 1841 and Welshes, Jacksons and others there in 1861. Poet Matthew Welsh lived here.

Sandystanes (sawn-deestānz) n. Sandystones, farm by the Ale Water, east of Belses. This may be the ‘Standesanerg’ (in West Lilliesleaf) which was sold by Adam, son of Adam of Durham to Melrose Abbey in the early 1200s. In 1502 it is recorded that 120 of George Rutherford’s sheep had been stolen from there by William Turnbull of Minto and reset by Adam Scott in Highchesters. Robert Taylor was also recorded there in 1502. It was owned by George Rutherford of Langnewton in 1506 when the Turnbulls of Minto attacked the farm, burning barley and oats there. It is mentioned in 1508, with lands of 120 or 140 acres here between the Sandstones and ‘Vuiralan-crum’ (or ‘Vuiran-crum’), commonly called the Sandystanes, being attached to the Lordship of Liddesdale. John ‘Ritchison’ was there in 1694, James Rutherford in 1797 and Thomas Rutherford in 1868 (the name derives from its situation between two fords, which are paved with stones; it is ‘sandy stanis’ and ‘sandestanis’ in 1502 and ‘Sandestanis’ in 1508).

the Sang Singin (thu-sawng-sing-in) n. ceremony that takes place at the Mill Path on a specially constructed platform as part of the Common Riding. This is near to the site of ‘Tibbie the Fiddler’s Cottage’, on the thatched roof of which the ceremony took place until 1859, and at the old boundary of the Burgh with the lands of the Duke of Buccleuch. In 1860 the ceremony took place amid the ruins of the old cottage, and thereafter it has been held near the site, except in 1919 when it was temporarily moved to the Horse monument.
Before the current permanent platform was built at the corner of the Mill Path and Allars Crescent (when ??) a temporary one used to be erected on the other side of the road. The ceremony is held on the Friday afternoon, immediately after the Principals have been to the Dipping of the Flag. It involves the singing of ‘Teribus’, following the official announcement that the marches have been duly ridden. There ceremony of 1889 may be the earliest recorded in a photograph. Since 1905 the Drums and Fifes have played the party back to the Town Hall to return the Flag.

Sangster (sawng-stur) n. Evelyn along with husband Gilbert, organiser of the Hawick Summer Festival for its first 20 years. Also organiser of the Christmas Parade. Hence the Prov., ‘Ye are as stiff as a stappit saster’, i.e. a crammed pudding’ [JoJ].

Satchells (saw-chulz) n. former estate east of Synton, about 5 miles north of Hawick, in Liliesleaf Parish. It was home of the Scotts of Satchells, since at least 1607, according to a charter to Robert Scott. Robert was said to be one of the 24 ‘pensioners’ of Buccleuch, holding the lands of ‘Soutthinrig’ (i.e. Southdeanrig) for his service. Robert’s son was Capt. Walter, who wrote ‘A True History’ of the Scott family in rhyming couplets, published in 1688 (and reissued in Hawick in 1894). In 1615 Jean and William Scott of Satchells (possibly the widow and her son) helped Lady Scott of Howpasley organise a group in Hawick to slaughter 60 of Sir James Douglas’s sheep. Walter Scott (the same man as the poet Capt. Walter) was owner in 1663, when it was valued at £200 and in 1678, when it was valued at £256. John Scott was owner in 1788, when the value was £200. John Corse Scott of Synton owned it in 1811, when it was valued at £256. There is still a farm there. It is probably the ‘Schotteschales’ in Lilliesleaf Parish that was granted to Alexander of Huntington sometime in the period 1202–7 – ‘Tell Ashkirk, and Satchels, Burnfoot, and the Kirkhouse, Howpasley, and Roberton, with Harden bold and crouse’ [WSB] (the origin of the name is probably from Old and Middle English ‘scet schele’, meaning ‘the huts in a corner’; it is ‘Satscheillis’ possibly the ‘Schotteschales’ in Lilliesleaf Parish as the poet Capt. Walter) was owner in 1663, when it was valued at £200 and in 1678, when it was valued at £256. John Scott was owner in 1788, when the value was £200. John Corse Scott of Synton owned it in 1811, when it was valued at £256. There is still a farm there. It is probably the ‘Schotteschales’ in Lilliesleaf Parish that was granted to Alexander of Huntington sometime in the period 1202–7 – ‘Tell Ashkirk, and Satchels, Burnfoot, and the Kirkhouse, Howpasley, and Roberton, with Harden bold and crouse’ [WSB] (the origin of the name is probably from Old and Middle English ‘scet schele’, meaning ‘the huts in a corner’; it is ‘Satscheillis’ in 1609, ‘Satchells’, ‘Satscheillis’ and ‘Satchells’ in 1616 and ‘Satschelles’ in 1633; it is marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map and is ‘Saultsheaillis’ in the 1620s).

Satchells Burn (saw-chulz-burn) n. stream that runs past Satchells in a roughly northerly direction, to meet the Ale Water near Dimpleknowe.

Saughtree (saw-ch-tree) n. village and farm in Liddesdale, as well as a former station on the Border Counties Railway east of Riccarton. A track here branches east towards the Border, only 3 1/2 miles away. The area contains a tiny church and a small school at Burnmouth, with which it can be confused (although this is the Burnmouth in southern Liddesdale, and not the one near Saughtree). There was an annual ‘blanket preaching’ held nearby in the 19th century, in a natural amphitheatre. The lands there were valued at 14 shillings on the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale, when they were tenanted by Robert and John Henrison. John Cranston was there in 1685 and John Elliot was tenant there in 1694. The farm was surveyed in 1718, along with other Scott of Buccleuch properties, when it extended to 481 acres, bounded by Dawstonburn, Hudhouse, Burnmouth, Pinglehole and ‘Leys’; it also shared a small strip of common land with Pinglehole and the farmhouse was on the opposite side of the Dawston Burn from the modern houses, near the location of the church. Robert Stavert was farmer there in 1785. In 1797 the farmer was Thomas Stavert, and Archibald Stavert in the 1850s and 60s. Andrew Douglas was farmer there in the 1930s. Near the shepherd’s cottage of Saughtree Grain is the site of a standing stone known as ‘the Knocking Stone’ and others called ‘the White Stones’. Saughtree Fell, to the west, reaches a height of 434 m and contains a triangulation pillar. Some flints found near there are in Hawick Museum — ‘O Willie, ’tis light, and the moon shines bright, Will ye go and watch the deer wi’ me?’ ‘Ay, be my sooth, this very night.’ — And away they went to Saughtentree [ES] (it is ‘Saughtentre’ in the Ettrick Shepherd’s ‘The Laird of Lairistan’ and is occasionally ‘Sauchtree’; the origin of the name is probably the Old English ‘sealh treow’, meaning ‘willow tree’; it first occurs as ‘Sauchtree’ in 1541, ‘Sauchetrie’ in 1652, ‘Sauchtrie’ in 1685 and ‘Saughtrees’ in 1694; it appears on Blaeu’s c.1654 map, but without a label, is ‘Saughtrees’ on the 1718 Buccleuch survey and is shown on Stobie’s 1770 map).

the Saughtree Cross (thu-sawch-tree-kros) n. name sometimes given to one of 2 stone crosses found near the Abbey Sike in the vicinity of Saughtree in about 1850 and 1880. The first consists of a round piece of stone, carved with a cross, which may have formed the capital of a wayside marker. The second is a somewhat larger rough-hewn stone cross, with part of a sword pommel carved on it; this may have been a grave marker, for example. They were deposited in the Museum.

Saughtree Fell (sawch-tree-fel) n. hill to the north of Saughtree farm. It reaches a height of over 450 m and contains a triangulation pillar on the secondary summit. It appears to be labelled ‘Daston Fell’ on the 1718 Buccleuch survey, suggesting that Dawston Fell may have been an alternative name.

Saughtree Grain (sawch-tree-grän) n. former shepherd’s cottage near where Alison Sike and Cliffhope Burn unite in the upper headwaters of Liddesdale. Alternative names were Cliffhope (on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map), Dawstoneburn Grain (on the 1841 census) and just ‘Grain’ (on the 1851 and 1861 censuses). The original cottage was a little further up than the more modern one. It was said that the steep sides of the valley here meant that the residents would not see the Sun for about 6 months. William Armstrong was shepherd there in 1841 and 1851, and Arthur Armstrong in 1861.

Saughtree Kirk (sawch-tree-kirk) n. small church in Saughtree village, built in 1872, when there was discussion of making this a separate parish from Castleton. It began as a Home Mission station in 1865. The Manse was built right next door. It was made a ‘quoad sacra’ parish in 1910. The men who ministered there to start with were officially ‘Licentiates’, with a permanent minister only appointed in the years 1910–60. A framed parchment records the names of 9 local men who died in WWI. A roll of the ministry is: James Patterson 1866–70; William Smith 1870–77; Thomas Gordon 1877–86; Alexander Wilson 1886–89; David Ness 1889–92; Robert Galbraith 1892; James Ronald MacDonald 1892–90; Joseph William McLean 1902–03; Adam McCaul Paterson 1903–10; William Napier Bell 1910–20; David Smith 1921–22; John Scott 1922–25; John Whyte McGill 1925–27; Robert Douglas Pettie 1927–28; Robert Forsyth McGarrity 1929–

Saughtree Schuil (sawch-tree-skil) n. former school at Saughtree, situated on the main road south of the hamlet. It opened in 1809. There were 20 pupils there in the 1830s. James Telfer, referred to as ‘the poetic schoolmaster’ ran the school 1834–62. Alexander MacGregor succeeded him. Edward J. Wilson was master there in the late 1880s. The school and house were rebuilt on the old site, perhaps around 1880. The Borders Archive have registers for the period 1938–63 and log books for 1904–63.

Saughtree Station (sawch-tree-stā-shin) n. small station on the Waverley line just north of Saughtree. The station buildings have been renovated and about 400 yards of track have been laid there, with a diesel locomotive kept in a shed, constructed from 2 railway cottages.

saxhorn (saks-hörn) n. a brass musical instrument invented by Adolphe Sax, resembling a bugle, but with valves instead of keys. There were many ‘Saxhorn Bands’ set up in the mid-1800s, but Hawick’s band is the only remaining one in Scotland that uses the old word.

Hawick’s brass band, which acts as a marching band, a concert band and a competitive band. Founded by Samuel Stainton in 1855, following a petition to the Magistrates to support the setting up of a brass band for the town. There have been many ups and downs since then, but it is still going strong after more than a century and a half. The Band briefly dissolved in 1878. In 1945 the Council decided to help financially with the Band, but this discontinued with the end of the District Council. There were originally 14 members, which has grown to around 25 at full strength. Stainton acted as leader for the first few months, with Stephen Teal then becoming the first appointed Bandmaster. Walter Atkinson was a prominent Bandmaster 40 years later, with James Amos leading in the successful post-WWII period. In 1961 they became Scottish Championship Band and later competed in the national finals, also playing in the televised evening concert in the Albert Hall. The band have practised in a huge number of locations over the years, in part of the former Dickson & Laings mill in the later years of the 20th century, before moving to O’Connell Street. They have been prominent at ceremonial parades in Hawick over the last 150 years, for example during the Wars, and in the unveiling of the Horse monument. At the Common Riding they have many specific duties, including meeting the Cornet after the Picking, meeting... the cavalcade at the Volunteer after the Moss-paul Ride-out, playing the Cornet from the Town Hall to the Horse on Colour Bussing night, and leading the Provost’s procession from the Horse on the Friday morning. They also play ‘Invocation’ at the Handing-Back. They were heard on the 1937 BBC radio broadcast of the Common Riding, and are on the ‘Hawick Sings’ records. In addition they usually lead the children’s procession to the Vertish Hill Sports. They have also played a New Year’s concert at the Tower Knowe for a great many years. A history ‘Seven Score Years’ was written by Owen Connelly in 1995 and Gillian French wrote a Ph.D. thesis entitled ‘Follow the Band: Community Brass Bands in the Scottish Borders’ in 2014 – ‘…And then the Saxhorn Band, with fervid glee, Sends forth brave notes that please the listening ear’ [JCG], ‘The Saxhorn Band is hard tae bate Thenks tae Teviotd.’ [JoJ].

Scarlet (skawr-li’) n. Andrew (15th/16th C.) witness to the 1511/2 sasine for the Barony of Hawick. His name is recorded as ‘Andrea Scarlittie’. He was probably a prominent man in Hawick at the time, and likely to be a descendant of the earlier Robert. Robert (15th C.) recorded as ‘Roberto Skarlattie’ when he was witness to the 1452 sasine for William Douglas of Drumlanrig being regranted the Barony of Hawick. This was signed in Hawick by a number of local men.

scarletina (skawr-li-tee-nu) n., disease caused by a bacterial toxin, most commonly affecting toddlers, with symptoms being sore throat, fever, bright red tongue and a characteristic rash. It was formerly a great killer of children. The disease arrived in Hawick in 1831, Dr. John Douglas remarking that this was the first major disease to appear in the Town. It claimed the lives of many (probably tens of) children and a few adults that year. The disease was almost entirely wiped out by the use of antibiotics in the 20th century.

Scatterpenny (skawr’-ur-pe-nee) n. cottage on the A7 past Braxholme. The bend in the road near here, sometimes called ‘Scatterpenny Corner’, has been a frequent site of accidents. A pool in the Teviot there was formerly a popular swimming haunt. The site of the present cottage was once the location for a small hamlet, where an inn was kept by Jean Scott, also known as ‘Jean the Ranter’, mother of ‘The Bonnie Lass o’ Braxholm’. The inn there was said to be very popular among drovers in the early 19th century (the origin of the name is uncertain, but there are places of the same name elsewhere, perhaps suggesting that the alehouse was where travellers would misspend their money).

Scaw’d Law  (skawd-law) n. hill in Cavers Parish, just south of the Maidens, reaching a height of 503 m. James Turnbull was recorded as resident there in 1770. There are the remains of a linear earthwork on the eastern side of the hill, perhaps connected with features noted near Leap Hill and near King’s Sike, and presumably once boundary markers (the origin is probably ‘hill with a shieling’, from Old Norse, or old Scots ‘scald’, i.e. a hill with bare patches; there are several other hills called ‘Scaw’d’ or ‘Scawd’ elsewhere in Scotland; it is ‘Seamin’ in 1770).

Scawmhill  (skaw-nil) n. cottage on the Cala (or Dean) Burn, reached from the Dean via the old track along the burnside, having a very picturesque setting among the woods. It may also once have been known as ‘Timbersidemill’, but it is unclear if they were the same place or neighbouring farmsteads (both names appear in contemporary 18th century baptismal records).
There was presumably once a corn-mill there, perhaps even the same one later known as Dean Mill. James Scott was there in 1724, William Brown in 1733, John Scott in 1791 and William Scott in 1797. It was still active when Walter Smith was recorded as miller in Pigot’s 1825/6 and 1837 directories – ‘Just leave the Dean by Scawmill farm, And o’er the well-worn stile, Up by the low and thick set hedge The very briars smile’ [WFC] (also ‘Scaw Mill’; it was ‘Scadmiln’ in 1724, ‘Scalmiln’ in 1733 and ‘Skawmill’ in 1791).

Scaw Mill see Scawmill

Scenes of Infancy (seenz-ov-in-fin-see) n. longest poem written by John Leyden. It is mainly constructed in praise of the countryside of Teviotdale, where he spent his youth, weaving in a large number of local myths and legends, but also covering wider historical ideas, international issues of his day, and religious and social topics (including a denunciation of the slave trade). Although nominally looking back to his childhood, and lamenting the changes caused by the agricultural revolution during his lifetime, it at the same time looks forward towards his future in the wider world. It was published in 1803, shortly after he sailed for India (never to return). In fact it is a collection of pieces written over several years, with connecting sections added in the months before his departure – ‘Beside the Ettrick Minstrel stood a name, The Bard who sung the Scenes of Infancy! As also stood the darling Cunningham, Who sung old faery Chuden, Nith, and Dee’ [JTe].

Schetky (shet-kay) n. John Christian (1778–1874) born in Edinburgh, from an old Transylvanian family, he settled in Oxford, and became professor of drawing at the naval college, Portsmouth, where he was well-known as a marine painter. He was commissioned by Sir Walter Scott to paint 12 views along Border rivers to illustrate ‘Lay of the Last Minstrel’ in 1810. The painting of Hawick, from 1808, is one of the first images of the town, the view being from roughly near Wilton Grove. There is also a view of Harden Glen from when he visited the area in September 1807, and a view of Goldielands showing its already ruined state around that time.

Scheves (sheevz) n. John (14th/15th C.) cleric of Glasgow Diocese. He had possession of the Archdeaconry of Teviotdale in 1418, but in the following year resigned in favour of William Croyser. Probably the same John ‘de Scheves’ was Clerk of the Rolls and Register of Brechin in 1426 and associated with St. Andrews Diocese in the 1430s.
Schielhion (shee-haw-lee-in) n. local folk group, consisting of the Lammies from Hawick and another couple from St. Boswells, performing since about 1980 and having released about 4 tapes (note there are other groups from elsewhere with the same name).

schuil (skil) n. school – ‘what schuil did ee gaun ti?’, ‘The bairns new oot o the skuil for leave …’[ECS], ‘He’s never out o’ some mischief, He’ll no’ gang to the schule, He tore his carritch leaf frae leaf To mak’ a dragon’s tail’[JT], ‘… Wad tempt o’o for tae jouk the schule and seek the flooery braes’[VW], ‘The gress grew lang and leish ahint In oor wee village schule, But, ah, it was a bonnie spot, Doon by the skelf’ring hill’[WFC], ‘And noo, in the schule o’ the world, A hantle o’ heidstrong loons …’[WL], ‘Nowadays schule lassies can dae better than that!’[BW1974], v. to school – ‘…where hei schuiled yin o his maist famous pupils, Christopher Murray Grieve’[IHS], ‘She’d ne’er been schuled i’ the artfu’ wiles That jauds betray wi’ their hauntin’ smiles’[WL], ‘I canna schule mysel’ to fit Wi touristsmen, drawn sae keen the bricht Upon each other’s avarice’[DH] (spelled ‘schule’ and other variants).

the Schuil Board (thu-skil-börd) n. the School Board, which was formed in Hawick in 1873, following the Education Scotland Act of 1872. It took over the responsibility of running the schools from the Parish heritors, and put the control in the hands of a locally elected Board. Minute books for 1873–1947 are in the Borders Archive.

schuilhouse (skil-hoos) n. schoolhouse, a building in which pupils are taught, sometimes also serving as the residence of the schoolmaster. The need for a separate school building (rather than using St. Mary’s Kirk) was agreed upon at least as early as 1683. Rent paid for the schoolhouse by the Kirk Session of Hawick is recorded in 1712, although this was some temporary accommodation. Some time after 1722 the first purpose-built Hawick Parish schoolhouse was erected (at Slitrig Bank), but it was carried away by the 1767 flood.
